

N.C. Approves Amendments And Bonds

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) - Gov. Jim Hunt became the most powerful North Carolina governor in the state's history Tuesday when the voters gave him and succeeding governors a chance to seek second, consecutive four-year terms.

With all but a handful of precincts counted, the succession amendment held a 52.48 percent edge with 304,362 favorable votes, compared to 275,514 against. Four other constitutional amendments and two bond issues passed by substantial margins.

"I think the issue is whether or not the people wanted to make this change in their constitution. The majority said they do," Hunt said, adding that recent polls still gave him high approval marks.

John Ed Davenport, who headed Carolinians Opposed to Succession, said the vote fell short of a mandate for the administration. Weary after a frenzied three-week campaign against succession, Davenport said the opposition showed "there was no great groundswell out there that 'we want succession.'"

Another opponent viewed the vote as a loss for Hunt. "I've said all along that every percentage point below 60 percent meant Hunt was in trouble," said Gene Anderson, top aide to former Gov. Jim Holshouser. "Jim Hunt is a lame duck governor just 10 months into his first year in office," he said.

When Hunt spoke to a gathering of supporters in a Raleigh hotel Tuesday night, he characterized the passage of the seven proposals as a "day the people of the state made a very crucial decision to go forward."

But the governor refused, as he has since the succession issue surfaced, to discuss his own plans for another term.

"I have no idea about that," he said.

But, state Democratic Party Chairman Betty McCain, a close friend of Hunt, said she hoped he would seek a second term in 1980. "We'll all help him," she said.

So far the longest term served by a North Carolina governor was the tenure of Luther Hodges, who became governor Nov. 7, 1954, on the death of Gov. William Umstead and then ran successfully on his own three years later.

Hodges and every governor since then has advocated succession.

Gray, Greene Howard, McGrath Are Elected Greenville Council Members

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer
Incumbent City Councilman John Howard, who failed to make the top six in last month's balloting, topped the slate in Tuesday's spirited runoff that saw another incumbent lose his seat on the board.

With voting activity generally heavier in Greenville than in the initial October elections, Howard gained a seat on the Council, along with incumbents Mildred McGrath and Clarence Gray, and political newcomer Judy Greene.

Councilman William Hadden, the sixth place finisher in October in his reelection bid, placed fifth yesterday behind Gray in the race for the four open Council seats.

Trailing the ousted incumbent in the eight-candidate runoff field were Harry Hagerty, Della Dayson and John Bizzell. With the exception of Bizzell, all candidates unofficially tallied more votes yesterday than last month.

Based on unofficial tabulations compiled by The Daily Reflector Tuesday evening, Howard garnered 2,156 votes while Mrs. McGrath received 2,138, Mrs. Greene 2,037, and Gray 2,026 to nail down the four available spots.

Hadden, according to the unofficial totals, received 1,936 votes, Hagerty had 1,850, Mrs. Dayson received 1,516, and Bizzell received 1,410.

Unless the official canvass by the Pitt County Board of Elections reveals any discrepancies from the unofficial totals, the four top candidates will join incumbent Councilman Joe Taft Jr. and attorney Charles Vincent on the city governing body. Taft and Vincent were elected with clear majorities in October.

Howard, who attracted only 1,451 votes in placing seventh last month, made a strong showing in his runoff bid, carrying three of the large precincts and finishing well in several others.

Mrs. McGrath, the city's mayor pro-tem for the past two years, also ran strong throughout the evening and piled up heavy totals in several of the areas with high registration figures.

The third place finisher, Mrs. Greene, maintained her surprising strength from the October balloting and made another impressive showing in her first attempt at an elected office. Mrs. Greene ran fifth last month.

Gray, local educator and the only black on the Council, ran strong throughout the evening and carried three of the nine precincts by substantial margins.

With seven of the nine polling sites reporting last night, Hadden maintained a narrow edge over Mrs. Greene, however, for the fourth spot. Voting totals at Precincts Five (American Legion Building) and Ten (Aycock Junior High) regained the lead for Mrs. Greene and in fact moved her up to third in the overall standings.

The apparent make-up of the Council, pending verification by the Board of Elections, now has two women on the board for the first time, at least in modern history.

Incumbent Mayor Percy Cox ran unopposed in October.

The new Council, which will be sworn in at the December meeting, will be missing a familiar face as veteran board member Dr. Frank Fuller failed in his reelection bid in October. Fuller finished 11th in the field and did not qualify to enter Tuesday's runoff.

Utilities Told CP&L Has Denied Service To Ayden

By KEITH MILLS
Reflector Staff Writer
Carolina Power and Light Co. has denied a request for electrical service to the Town of Ayden, according to Charles Horne, director of the Greenville Utilities Commission (GUC).

The announcement was made during Tuesday night's meeting of the GUC in conjunction with a request last month from Ayden officials expressing a wish to negotiate the termination of an existing 20-year contract with GUC for wholesale electrical service in order to seek service from CP&L.

At that time, Ayden Mayor Ross Persinger reminded GUC of the "financial problems created for municipal electric systems as a result of large rate increases and fossil fuel cost increases by VEPCO, within the past several years."

In the meantime, Horne said a meeting between engineers and GUC's attorney to analyze the effects of losing the Ayden load on the system had uncovered no specific data to report at this time.

However, the director of utilities said the study would continue since he assumes Ayden will eventually tie-in to the CP&L system.

Horne reported also that he has received a letter from CP&L denying partial service to GUC for 10-20 megawatts in two areas of the county, the southern portion near Gardnersville and the western section where development seems apparent.

In other action, the board agreed to pay a total of $2,905 to Superior Court for a condemnation judgement on a 60 square-foot cemetery located on the future wastewater treatment plant site. Once the fee is paid, GUC will be reimbursed $360 for the removal of each gravesite.

The Commission also authorized the director to advise the heirs of Mrs. Novella Higgs Moyer that a proposed $40,000 sewer extension just south of Stantonburg Road will be installed at no cost when development plans for that area have been submitted to the Greenville Planning Board.

Bids approved by the Commission include: Hastings Ford for one one-half ton pickup truck, $4,451; Phelps Chevrolet for two three-quarter ton pickup trucks, $10,679.92; Hesco, Inc. for 50-50 KVA CSP transformers, $26,200; Hesco for 10-50 KVA conventional transformers, $4,560; Carolina Transformer Co. for 10-75 KVA conventional transformers, $8,640; Westinghouse Electric Supply Co. for 5,000 feet of two-inch plastic duct, $703; General Electric Supply Co.

FRESH TURKEY?

I would like to know someone who raises turkeys so I can get a fresh one for Christmas. Mrs. N. N.

Collins Grocery at 209 W. Ninth Street here has a long-standing practice of keeping fresh chickens. The owners buy them right off the farm and slaughter and dress them themselves. Called this morning, Mrs. J. E. Collins said she has just talked to "the turkey man" and will be having fresh turkeys just before Thanksgiving and just before Christmas. The first of the turkeys will be picked up Thursday, Nov. 17, and be available for sale Friday, Nov. 18, she said. She said she is not sure of the price per pound yet, since her supplier has not quoted her a definite price at this time.

Special Exhibit Surveys Avant-Garde Art Trends

By C.G. McDANIEL
Associated Press Writer
CHICAGO (AP) — The frequently mystifying, often irritating, but almost always exciting art of the past decade is surveyed by the Museum of Contemporary Art in celebration of its own 10th anniversary.

This lively little museum has been dedicated to the avant-garde since its inception, and until recently had no permanent collection, devoting itself exclusively to changing exhibitions.

This survey includes the work of 80 artists and encompasses the most notable of the varied trends of the period — minimalism, conceptualism, ecological art, earthworks, bodyworks, funk-fantasy, video art, imagism, photorealism.

What has been most striking is the absence of any dominant national or international style during the decade.

The earlier decades of the century have usually had an identifiable style which captured the fancy of artists and the public. The post-World War II decades have been dominated by op, pop and abstract expressionist styles.

But this decade, including the war in Vietnam, has been marked by protest and rebellion, a tearing-down of old icons, a turning-inward. This has resulted in anti-art and intensely private expressions of artistic vision.

The work of most of the artists represented in the exhibition has been shown previously at the museum. Different examples of their work, however, have been selected for the anniversary show.

Public outrage has greeted the work of the minimalists and conceptualists, as it frequently has that of the earthworks and the ecological artists.

As a curator at another museum was overheard to remark about an exhibition, "There is less there than meets the eye."

This, unfortunately, is too often true of the work of the artists in these controversial styles, and the Contemporary's exhibition does little to elucidate these styles.

Some of the most interesting work is that of the photorealists, who paint in great detail and realistically. Catherine Murphy's "View of World Trade Center from Rose Garden" is an exquisite example of this style. And Ralph Goings' "One Eleven Diner," with its Age of Plastic anomie, is another.

Thomas Kovachevich is represented by a beautifully done canvas depicting a fantasy world reminiscent of childhood books and postcards in which animals are dressed as humans doing human things. This picture features a gorilla dressed in a long black satin dress drinking a soft drink.

Ed Paschke's "Blue Flamingo" is another of his brightly colored side-show creatures and is an example of the Chicago imagist style.

Among other artists represented in this landmark exhibition are: Lucas Samaras, Kenneth Noland, Frank Stella, Christo, Donald Judd, Alan Sonfist, Judd Fine, Keith Sonnier, Chris Burden, Vito Acconci, Philip Pearlstein, Larry Poons, Jules Olitski, Chuck Close and Robert Irwin.

Papers Presented At Workshop

Evelyn Perry, dean of the ECU School of Nursing, and Phyllis Nichols, associate professor of nursing at ECU, presented papers at a Primary Nursing Care Workshop, Atlanta, Ga., Thursday and Friday. The workshop entitled "Roles, Risks and Research in Primary Nursing" was sponsored by the Southern Region of the National League for Nursing.

Dean Perry spoke on "Educational Preparation for Primary Nursing: Are Changes Needed?" Ms. Nichols spoke on "Primary Care Nursing in an Ambulatory Health Care Setting."

About 125 participants from throughout the United States were present.

Mrs. Sumrell Is Speaker

Lucille Sumrell of the Greenville Recreation Department spoke to the Alpha Nu Chapter of Alpha Delta Kappa Sorority Thursday.

Mrs. Sumrell displayed and explained many arts and crafts created by local citizens. She emphasized three main points — that everyone has some creative talent that can be developed; that something can be made from nothing or from the most unlikely castoffs; and that everyone can do something.

Letters of thanks and commendation from Ann Byrd, District V Vice President, and Faye Roberts, Past State President, were read concerning the District V Workshop held here recently.

Alpha Nu Chapter By-laws were updated to bring them into accord with State and International Bylaws.

The Chapter is nominating Ann Byrd for State President and Faye Dempsey for State Corresponding Secretary.

The next meeting will be held Dec. 1 at the Ramada Inn. The annual Christmas auction will be held then.

Daughter's Husband Is Also Unfaithful

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1977 by The Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: Many years ago I wrote to you when my heart was heavy, thinking I had nothing to lose by asking for your help. In one short paragraph you gave me the solution and replaced my anguish with peace. (I am enclosing the correspondence.)

Now my married daughter is facing the same problem I faced. Will you please run my letter and your response? She desperately needs to hear it—but not from me.

HER MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: Yes, I will. And here it is:

DEAR ABBY: I have been married for 40 years, and all the years of my married life my husband has had other women. He never had the same one for very long, but it has been one after the other.

He has always been a loving and generous husband and a wonderful father to our children, and I know he loves me. He has never embarrassed me by going out in public with another woman, but as discreet as he was, somehow I always found out. I have asked him several times why he needs other women, because I am by nature a very affectionate person. He gets defensive and has no answer.

I love him dearly and would never consider leaving him, but the older I get, the more it hurts. I am 60 and he is 63. Can you advise me?

TROUBLED AT 60

DEAR TROUBLED: You say you love him, and I believe you do. To "love" a person is to accept him with all his faults, weaknesses and imperfections.

Don't dwell on his infidelity. (Who can know the most intimate needs of another?) No one has everything.

DEAR ABBY: I've noticed that over the years, your readers, and even you, yourself, have suggested that you "print" a letter.

As a printer, may I suggest that you are in error. What you do is "publish"—not print.

This may seem trivial to you, but printing is a time-honored skill, requiring years to perfect. And a printer is an artist and craftsman.

So, Dear Abby, I'll leave the publishing to you, if you will leave the printing to me.

INK IN MY BLOOD IN MEDINA, O.

DEAR INK: All right—you print and I'll publish, but my Webster's International Dictionary (second edition, unabridged) lists "publish" as a synonym for "print," and "print" as a synonym for "publish."

DEAR ABBY: It's not necessary to put up with a blaring TV when only one person wants to listen to it. The simple solution that brought peace in our house: a headset, or "earphones." A technician can wire any set easily.

While my husband listens to his ball games, I can read, sleep and even think straight.

AT PEACE

DEAR AT: An obvious solution. Now why didn't I think of that?

Tell your troubles to Abby. For a personal reply, write to Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069. Please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Col. Blake Is International Dinner Speaker

Communication on the international scene is more important than ever before, requiring understanding between peoples which government leaders alone cannot achieve, says an East Carolina University official.

The international picture can be "greatly enhanced" by local and community programs such as that in Greenville and at East Carolina University involving ECU's international students and faculty and the local community, according to Col. C. R. Blake, ECU assistant to the chancellor.

Col. Blake, addressing the annual International Affairs students dinner of the Greenville Woman's Club, praised the program.

"The kindness and warmth that you show touches many lives in this neighborhood," he said.

"Your activities prove that you know we as individuals are not solitary in our existence," Blake said. "This lesson is perhaps the greatest gift you give because when people and neighborhoods learn that they cannot exist separately, their lives become happier."

Blake called attention to student exchanges, tourism and international areas in which increased interaction between people "would provide the framework for public opinion to act as a major deterrent to aggression and oppression throughout the world." Mrs. J. Lindsay Savage, first vice president, gave the invocation. She welcomed the faculty and students of ECU.

Foreign students present were from Hong Kong, Costa Rica, Nigeria, France, Vietnam, Micronesia, Taiwan, Iran, Malaysia, Canada, Venezuela, Finland, Korea, Japan, Thailand, Brazil, Bangladesh and India.

Load Management Service Policy

By KEITH MILLS
Reflector Staff Writer

The Greenville Utilities Commission Tuesday night approved a proposed policy statement regarding the installation of load management service to its customers and revised its current capital outlay budget in the amount of $326,000 to cover the cost of implementing the program.

The plan, which could save customers as much as $7.50 per billing date between June and September, involves the installation of switching devices on water heaters and central air conditioners owned by participating customers to control the operation of each unit during peak demand periods.

According to the policy statement, presented by Director of Utilities Charles Horne, customers must be residential service users and must have an electric water heater and/or a central air conditioning unit. Heat pump units would meet the air conditioning requirements.

Horne said load management participants must own the dwelling where switches would be installed, or must have the permission of the owner or manager. Blanket permission from an owner or manager of multi-family dwellings must be obtained and be applicable to all residents who request switch installation.

"Switches in mobile homes are not recommended and will not be performed unless the owner of the mobile residence is the owner of the real property on which the residence is situated; the residence has both central air conditioning and a 240-volt electric water heater having a capacity of 30 gallons or more; and the residence has been secured to a permanent foundation," he said.

"The full cost of equipment installation and maintenance will be paid by the Commission," he added. "All installations will be performed by licensed electrical contractors.

"Owners of residences at which radio-controlled switches are in operation may request that the switches be disconnected and removed. But owners who have exercised the disconnection privilege may have switches reinstalled only upon payment of a $30-per-switch reconnection fee.

"Installation of radio-controlled switches in residences will be made in the order in which customer volunteer subscription forms are received," he said. "However, priority will be given to customers with both water heaters and air conditioning units."

Participating customers who allow the installation of one or more switching devices on air conditioning units would save a flat rate of $3.75 per month on their June, July, August and September bills, he said. The same holds true for electric water heater devices, which means the customer could save a maximum of $7.50 per billing during the four months.

"In order to be eligible to receive a credit in any of the four months for which utility bill credits are available, the customer must have applied for and received switch installation on or before the last day of the prior month," Horne said. "For example, a customer who makes application on June 5th and for whom installation is completed on June 30th is eligible to receive the July credit but not the June credit.

"When a tenant occupies a rental dwelling less than a full month or billing period, the applicable credit will be prorated on the basis of the number of days in the billing period that electrical service was provided," he said.

Operation of the system will involve radio-controlled switches to effectively manage the electric system during peak loads or emergency situations.

"Peak demand periods are estimated to occur only 10 to 15 days per year and last for approximately four to six hours," he said. "Load management will be accomplished by interrupting the flow of electrical current to central air conditioning units and to water heaters for a limited time during periods of peak demand.

"During these peak times, electrical circuits to central air conditioning compressors will be interrupted for about seven and one-half minutes out of every 30 minutes, and circuits to water heaters will be interrupted for about 30 minutes out of every hour," he said.

"The Load Management Program will be conducted in a manner which results in minimum discomfort to participating customers," he noted.

Snow Hill Vote

SNOW HILL — Approximately 30 percent of Snow Hill's registered voters turned out yesterday for the municipal and statewide election.

In the municipal election, Incumbent Mayor Melvin Oliver ran unopposed and received 174 votes.

In the race for commissioner, there were three vacancies. A. J. Harrell was the highest vote-getter with 191 votes. William J. Hughes Sr. and Incumbent John L. Taylor received 178 votes and 164 votes respectively.

Snow Hill residents also voted in favor of both the Highway and the Clean Water bond issues. They also favored all of the Constitutional Amendments, except for Amendment Three. The succession issue failed by two votes, with a count of 622 in favor and 624 against.

Bethel Re-Elects Mayor Dupree

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

Mayor James H. Dupree was returned to office in the Tuesday elections, but only by a margin of 36 votes against a last minute write-in, Ebern Allen.

The vote was 311 for Dupree and 275 for Allen.

Allen, a native of Greenville who has lived in Bethel for the last six years, is married to Kay Rogerson of Bethel. He is associated with Slim Short in Productive Communications.

Allen's active campaign was short, less than one day's duration.

"I really hadn't planned on running," Allen said this morning. "But so many people in Bethel kept asking me, urging me to give it a try that I decided to go ahead.

Allen said it was 1:30 Monday afternoon that "we started seriously on a last minute campaign for write-in votes.

"I'm really pleased with the result," he added. Allen said this was his first stab at running for any public office, "I feel pretty sure I'm going to give it another try," he remarked, "and will certainly start in earlier."

In the town commissioner choices, voters returned three of four incumbents seeking office, and elected two newcomers.

Reelected were Cleve M. Burton, Jr., 369 votes; Don C. Carson, Jr., 330 votes; and H. Linwood Briley, 312. Incumbent J. Paul Cullifer, who received 243 votes, failed in his reelection bid. One previous commissioner, Frank Hemingway, did not seek reelection.

The two new candidates elected as town commissioners are Delton E. Perry with 335 votes and William Morgan (Bill) Whitehurst, 297 votes.

Utilities Need A Lot Of Funds

Virginia Electric and Power Co. president T. Justin Moore, Jr. has told a finance conference in Belgium that U. S. utilities will likely spend over a half trillion dollars for new construction by 1990.

Moore sees electric utilities companies spending around $25 billion annually until 1981.

The VEPCO president said his company must spend around $600 million a year on new construction.

Where will all that money come from?

Moore outlined various ways that VEPCO finances the huge electrical generating plants which it must build to meet future energy needs.

He doesn't believe, however, that there is a real shortage of capital.

"There is plenty of capital around in savings accounts, petrodollars, tax shelters and a number of other places — the wrong places," he emphasized. "The real need is to break the capital strike against the common stock market."

Moore thinks that elimination of double taxation of corporate dividends would help.

He feels that a proposal in the president's tax reform package to do away with the tax treatment of long-term capital gains when common stocks are sold, would be "a monumental step backward."

"We don't feel qualified to provide the solutions to the complex problems involved. Nevertheless it is clear that huge amounts of capital are going to be needed to finance the needed energy facilities. A good place to get the capital is in the area of common stocks, but capital has not been abundant from this traditional area for the past several years.

Off To A Sanitarium

WASHINGTON — The Soviets have started their own SST passenger service between Moscow and Alma Ata, and citizens living around Platinsk are pretty damn mad about it. They have organized the "People's Committee to Ban the TU 144."

Aleksei Gregorivitch, whose house is in the flight pattern of TU 144, is one of the leaders of the "Ban the TU 144 Movement." He went to see an Assistant Secretary of the Soviet Aviation Bureau to complain.

"Comrade Secretary," Aleksei said. "On behalf of all the people who live in Platinsk I am protesting the landing and taking off of the TU 144. The noise is deafening."

The secretary replied, "You are crazy, Aleksei."

"Because I am complaining about the noise?"

"No, because you came to see me to complain about the noise. I shall have to put you in a sanitarium until you get well."

"But Comrade Secretary, why should we on the ground suffer because a few Soviet bureaucrats want to get from Moscow to Alma Ata in two hours?"

"Enough of this counter-revolutionary talk! We have tested the TU 144 and it doesn't make any more noise than a regular Tupolev Jet."

"I beg to differ with you. The TU 144 rattles the windows of our apartments and keeps our children awake. If you lived in Platinsk you would know what I'm talking about."

"Would you prefer to live in Siberia? The TU 144 does not fly over any houses there."

"Threats will get you nowhere, Comrade Secretary. The people of Platinsk intend to take action if you continue landing the Soviet SST at Alma Ata."

"What action do you intend to take?"

"We will block all the roads to the Alma Ata airport with our automobiles."

"But you have no automobiles in Platinsk."

"That is what I came to see you about. We wish to buy automobiles to block the highways."

"Platinsk is not scheduled to have automobiles until 1987."

"I was afraid of that. Then we shall throw our bodies across the runways so the TU 144 cannot take off."

"That will not stop us. We have a big investment in the TU 144 and if we have to take a few people from Platinsk with us under the fuselage every time we take off, we will do it."

"Doesn't life mean more to you than a supersonic plane?"

"If you have to ask that kind of question you really do belong in a sanitarium. Comrade Aleksei, would you agree that the United States is a freer country than the nation of Soviet Socialist Republics?"

"I suppose so."

"Did you know the people on Long Island in New York protested the landing of the Concorde for over a year?"

"I read something in Pravda about it."

While only one person, I speak just for me. Until an issue concerning my family comes up, then I speak for three; My wife and my daughter seem happy as they are. But can't understand why someone would move a school! I guess that's par. Since Pitt County Board of Education will do what they please. In trying to bring the citizens to their knees. It makes one wonder where their time has been spent. And what happened to the oath they took to represent. Board members sat quietly in meetings with the towns. Making the people feel misguided, or purposely out-of-bounds. Can we as citizens speak out to keep our schools Without making the Board members feel nauseated or possibly fools. I express my concern now against misrepresentation. The issue at hand, is in a bad situation. Nine elected officials, with only one willing to express our view. Trying to give to the people exactly what they are due. In years to come I'm sure we'll see. What representation should really be. For elections are getting close and I know it's Suspected. That there are a few members that Will not be re-elected.

Time Is For Work

By SANDRA BALMER
Associated Press Writer
CHICAGO (AP) — When it came time to retire at 77, Judge Harry Hershenson rented a downtown office and went into high gear.

Hershenson is a workaholic, a full-time volunteer.

"This community has been good to me," said the 78-year-old former Circuit Court judge from behind his cluttered desk. "It just seems right that I pay it back."

Upon retirement last year, Hershenson kicked in his own money and set up an office. Now it's business as usual, every workday of the week, trying to ease the way for the blind, for struggling law students, for the aged and for seemingly endless others.

Hershenson had to retire a few months ago because of his age.

"At that time I had offers from three or four major firms dealing in civil litigation and personal injury work," he said. "But I turned them down. I don't need to accumulate money. With my pension we've got enough to live on," he said.

Instead, he's a director of about 15 service groups and is a member of twice that number.

Hershenson enjoys talking about his favorites. "We just finished coordinating the Chicago appearance of the Israeli Ballet to benefit the state of Israel," he said, proudly displaying a thank you note from a satisfied theater-goer.

As president of the 50-year-old Blind Service Organization, he oversees the part-time efforts of some 200 volunteers who tape-record texts for blind students.

Besides that, he's a trustee of the Chicago Kent College of Law and is an active member of five legal societies.

He seems to resent implications that he may be missing some of the traditional benefits of retired life. What about just sitting around relaxing or going fishing?

"Fishing!" he snorts. "My wife and I just got back from"

Regular, Thorough Checkups Needed

One has to wonder what has to be done to prevent such tragedies as occurred when an earthen dam broke sending a deluge over Toccoa, Ga. Sunday.

At least 37 persons were dead from the flood which virtually destroyed the campus of Toccoa Falls Bible College.

The dam had been there for 40 years and there are other such dams in Georgia and elsewhere.

Such dams should undergo a careful inspection program.

Blacks Enter Policy Jobs

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — While the raw figures themselves are impressive as to numbers of blacks being employed in State government, the more important side of the picture is the numbers getting jobs at policy-making levels, says John R. Larkins, special assistant to the governor for minority affairs.

A number of "firsts" which once upon a time captured considerable public attention now go almost unnoticed — that in itself is a sign of change in racial matters in North Carolina.

The state now has its first cabinet secretary, first director of state personnel, assistant director of state personnel, director of the economic opportunity office, several assistant secretaries or directors of major agency divisions who are black, and a record 181 blacks from 66 counties named to various state boards and commissions, Larkins noted.

Policy Slots

Further, there are four blacks in senior advisory positions in policy development and planning activities, a chairman of the Board of Social Services, a member of the Utilities Commission, a member of the Ethics Board, minorities... the real needs are good jobs and more money which will lead to freedom of choices producing better living conditions, education, health, and security for all citizens regardless of race.

It is just such viewpoints which from time to time bring Larkins eye-ball-to-eyeball with more aggressive, militant young blacks who view his position of influence in the Hunt administration as a less than powerful voice for their race. There are those who would prefer the confrontations of the 60s rather than the quieter persuasion and cooperation of the present.

Why Policy?

To Larkins, however, this approach has proven successful from many years of endeavor. As a youngster waiting tables at banquets he heard high government officials talk about programs and philosophy and policy.

"I made a conscious decision to go into government work. For there is where influence could mean something. If I said something, nobody would listen. But if the governor says it... people listen."

In 1943 he became one of 26 blacks on the state payroll. Today there are more than 9,000. But the important thing is not "just jobs... but jobs in responsible places," says Larkins.

Today blacks are influencing policy decisions, writing job classifications and specifications, designing tests which will be used in hiring, feeding research data into decisions affecting education, housing welfare — the gamut of government — "to a greater degree than ever in the history of North Carolina," Larkins said.

He foresees in the next 10 years unprecedented opportunities for blacks in all fields of life and "tremendous acceleration" in economic growth for minorities.

Does Larkins fear a white backlash demanding that doors be shut? "No, even though there may be some growing white resistance beneath the surface. Still, we have world opinion, new Civil Rights laws, and changed public attitudes at work... an entirely different climate."

The Russian Underbelly

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
BELGRADE — Yuli Vorontsov, the Soviet delegate at the European Security Conference, threatened last week to "break up" the conference after Western countries pointedly attacked the Prague trial of Charter 77 dissidents. But despite rising Soviet embarrassment a Soviet walkout is highly improbable.

The reason is that the Belgrade conference, permeated with political surrealism and irony, is "Brezhnev's baby" — the fruit of Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev's crowning achievement. That achievement, now producing very bitter fruit indeed for the Russians, was the European Security and Cooperation Agreement signed at Helsinki in 1975. The follow-up meeting here of European states, plus the U.S. and Canada, is supposed to be examining how well or badly the Helsinki agreements are being carried out — including the human rights guarantees.

Although held under Brezhnev's imprimatur, the follow-up conference has become a unique and, for the West, rewarding demonstration of Soviet self-torture. Unable to walk out when the West politely touches the exposed nerve of Soviet human rights (the diplomacy here is vintage Congress of Vienna), Vorontsov mumbles feeble threats of a break-up. The real threats are coming from Moscow when a new trial may be cooking for Anatoli Shcharansky.

Strong hints of a Shcharansky trial, following the Prague trial of Charter 77 dissidents, seem to be calculated for their blackmail effect on this conference.

Thus, the Kremlin is saying that either the West (mainly the U.S.) shuts up about human rights or Shcharansky is doomed in a spy-trial linking him to American journalists. Shcharansky's sin, like the sins of the Charter 77 dissidents and of jailed Soviet citizens Yuri Orlov and Alexander Ginzburg, was to use a provision of the Helsinki agreement to try to monitor Soviet performance on the human rights pledges it made at Helsinki.

These pledges, signed by Brezhnev himself, "confirm the right of the individual to know and act upon his rights" — which is exactly what the dissidents tried to do when they established their Helsinki "monitoring" groups.

In the teeth of that Helsinki guarantee, Vorontsov has become a ridiculous figure crying "intervention" in Soviet internal affairs whenever Arthur Goldberg, the loquacious U.S. delegate, or another Westerner tries to get down to the work of the conference: review the "implementation" of the Helsinki pact, including human rights.

"Day after day Vorontsov has to sit there before all Europe and look ridiculous," one Western delegate told us cheerily. Indeed, the spectacle of the Soviet Union hanging on its own rope is not entirely unpleasant even to such Eastern European states as Hungary, Poland and Romania.

After Goldberg (derisively called "The Judge" by Soviet diplomats here) castigated the Soviet claim of "intervention" as "a complete distortion of the letter and spirit" of the Helsinki agreements, Romanian delegate Valentin Lipatti conspicuously strode over to shake hands and congratulate him. There are other examples of restrained

Strength For Today

BLAMING IT ON OTHERS

A high school student made a rather perceptive observation. "If you listen in class and do your homework you think the school is swell, but if you don't do your work you think the teacher is rotten."

Adolescents and adults are the same in this regard. If things do not go right, we want to put the blame on other people. When high school students begin to fail because of neglecting their work, they blame the teachers. We adults blame our bosses or the members of our families or our friends.

To embellish the matter and make a stronger case for ourselves, we sometimes declare that some people are just plain lucky, and we bemoan the fact that we are just not in that class.

When Aaron, during the absence of his brother Moses, allowed the Israelites to make a golden calf for purposes of worship, he later vigorously disclaimed all responsibility. "All I did," he protested, "was to cast a little gold into the furnace, and there came forth this calf." Aaron's spirit is alive and healthy and living among us today.

Free Time An Idolatrous God?

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — Many of us tenaciously believe the road to greater happiness is paved with leisure time, but a man who claims to know says the view is full of potholes.

John Robinson measured the minute how people use their 24 hours. He convinced 1,244 urban and suburban individuals to keep diaries, and then he dissected and analyzed and correlated the results and asked for more.

The pattern is unmistakable: "Too much free time is a greater burden than to little free time." Robinson found that people least satisfied with life were those with the most time to exercise options or choices.

Further conclusions may be drawn from the evidence, but one that particularly intrigues Robinson, whose research was financed by National Science Foundation grants, is that free time might be an idolatrous god.

No, the work ethic isn't dead, but for many the goal of work is leisure — on evenings, weekends, vacations, retirement. It is the target of unions. Sociologists sometimes advocate it, advertising almost always. Leisure may in fact be the national ambition.

Robinson, a Ph. D., communications professor and director of communications research at Cleveland State University, maintains we ought to reflect more about what we do with our time. Perhaps keep a 24 hour diary.

His cross-section of Americans did that and then turned the sheets over to him. After years of computer analysis he recently produced "How Americans Use Time" (Praeger Publishers, New York).

While the individual respondents might have been surprised at their own revelations, Robinson probably wasn't any less so. Maybe you won't be either.

—The dominant difference in the way time-usage breaks down is along lines of sex. Only minimal differences result from age, income, region, education and the like. But 80 per cent of time given to housework-child rearing is by women.

The men simply do not contribute what seems to be a fair share around the house. Even when the woman works outside the home, the man is unlikely to make a major contribution. And many women say they don't want his help.

With more women entering the labor force, there could be immediate consequences of this division of labor. If, for instance, women have less time for child rearing, and the men don't help, how will children be brought up?

—Americans are more likely than Europeans to spend time visiting, in sports activities and in watching television. About two to 2½ hours a day are spent before the TV set — strike that and make it read: With the TV set on.

There is a reason for the choice of phrasing. Robinson is an inquisitive and wary person, who once attached cameras to home television sets. Monitoring them, he often found the set on and the room empty.

People also divide their TV time, as they do other activities, with knitting, eating Eastern European glee at Soviet discomfiture.

Unmistakable Soviet pressure tactics, a trademark of the Kremlin's workaday diplomacy, go beyond hints of a brutal public trial for Shcharansky. When the West German delegate raised polite questions about Soviet Helsinki obligations to repatriate tens of thousands of Volga Germans, Vorontsov replied that if the German "thinks that by intervening into Soviet internal affairs he will in any way improve the solution of bilateral matters, he is badly mistaken." Translation: watch it, buddy.

Unable to deal with human rights, Vorontsov is falling back on subtleties to "clog up the machinery," as one American puts it. Adroitly dealt with so far by Goldberg, these include Soviet proposals barring new members of military pacts (aimed at Spain joining NATO), bringing the long-stalled question of mutual arms reduction under the Helsinki blanket, reducing the size of forces permitted in troop maneuvers, another anti-NATO gambit, inviting the Palestine Liberation Organization to address this conference.

"They are reduced to a damage-limiting defensive game here," one Western diplomat told us. "The Soviets have seldom been caught in such a public bind."

There is another Soviet game being played here: to break Western unity by splitting off the more reserved Western Europeans from the United States - the subject of another report.

CLARIFICATION: A recent column referred to Sen. Nunn criticizing Secretary of State Vance for not knowing about an alleged U.S. offer to renounce the neutron bomb. Nunn was talking about Vance's lack of knowledge of the latest U.S. proposed offer on European force reductions, which Defense sources say includes non-use of the neutron bomb in Europe. However, Nunn did not mention the neutron bomb in his question.

and, contradictory though it seems to be, reading newspapers, books or magazines. Their eyeballs, he says, are not always aimed where you think they are.

One-half hour of that TV time, fact, is secondary viewing. Only the French measure higher in this category, and that's because TV has become part of the French dinner hour, or two or three.

American men spend 40 minutes with newspapers, which makes them more avid newspaper readers than men in other nations, Robinson finds. But 14 of those minutes are secondary. For housewives the numbers are 21 and 10.

There is no limit to John Robinson's computer facts. This is only a fragment. But an observation rising out of the statistical mass is that most of everyone's day is structured - by work, sleep and travel.

Free men and women we call ourselves, but employed men have about 3.8 hours of free time, employed women 3.2 and housewives 5.2 hours.

What's free time? Socializing and recreation, including visiting, conversations, sports, hobbies, relaxation; time spent with newspapers, TV, movies and other mass media; organizational activities such as church, PTA, adult education.

Free? What's free about all that? Perhaps therein is a clue to why those with the most free time, so-called, say their lives are the least satisfactory.

Raleigh Major Coggins Upset By 73-Year-Old

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Seventy-three-year-old Isabella W. Cannon, given little chance when she began a quixotic campaign with a pair of tennis shoes draped around her neck, scored a stunning upset over incumbent mayor Jyles J. Coggins Tuesday.

A retired librarian and political novice, Mrs. Cannon was backed by groups seeking to preserve established neighborhoods against intrusion from developers, and rode into office with the support of a coalition of young people, professionals and academics.

Coggins, a wealthy contractor who was seeking a second term, had the backing of the city's business establishment.

"I don't think age has anything to do with it, any more than sex does," she said at a victory celebration Tuesday night. "I'm active and have a fair degree of intelligence. There were questions about my age earlier in the campaign, but those were dispelled as people got to know me."

Mrs. Cannon, a widow who has been active in civic and political affairs but was making her first bid for public office, said she used her tennis shoes as a gag at her first campaign appearance after being called "a little old lady in tennis shoes."

"Everybody just laughed," she said. "It's another one of those cliches about old people. I don't think most people who wear tennis shoes are little old ladies."

In unofficial but complete returns, Mrs. Cannon received 52.1 per cent of the vote in the city of 150,000, North Carolina's capital.

Coggins, 56, who was limited in his campaigning because of gall stone surgery, was bitter after the defeat but wished her luck. Coggins said she was put up as a candidate "by two or three organizations who wanted to take control of city government."

"They didn't want to run against me because they didn't want to debate me, so they ran this lady," he said. "How can you debate or argue with someone who is old enough to be your mother, and with no record whatsoever?"

Coggins failed to mount much of a campaign until just before the election, but made public references to Mrs. Cannon's age and called her "a nice little retired lady."

She replied in interviews that Benjamin Franklin was 81 when he helped write the Declaration of Independence and Winston Churchill was 77 when he was re-elected prime minister.

"I haven't had gall stones or anything like that," she said tartly.

"Qualifications are much more important than age. This is one of the myths and cliches that are being laid to rest," she said. "Many people much older than I am have held important positions in the history of our country."

Her election is the latest in a series of hotly-contested Raleigh elections. Four years ago Clarence Lightner was elected, becoming the first black to be elected mayor of a large, predominantly white southern city.

Coggins defeated Lightner two years ago, after Lightner's wife was tried and acquitted on charges of conspiracy to receive stolen goods in an alleged shoplifting ring. Despite the innocent verdict, many observers said the adverse publicity contributed to Coggins' victory.

Municipal elections were also held in a number of other North Carolina cities:

—Charlotte: Republican Ken Harris scored an upset over Democrat Jim Whittington in the Charlotte mayor's race. Unofficial but complete results showed Harris with 30,766 votes to 19,489 for Whittington. Incumbent John Belk, who has served since 1969, did not seek re-election. Whittington had been considered the front-runner until the closing weeks of the campaign, when polls showed the race to be even.

—Durham: Mayor Wake L. Cavin won 89 percent of the vote in his bid for a second term over token opposition.

—Winston-Salem: Election officials were slowed in their counting because of write-in candidates. Democrat Wayne A. Corpening held a 1,000-vote edge over Republican Henry Lauerman in complete tabulations, but election officials said they were re-counting some ballots.

—Greensboro: Jim Melvin, mayor since 1971, was overwhelmingly re-elected over Labor Party leader Marion Porter.

—Fayetteville: Mayor Beth Finch won a second term by a 3-to-1 margin.

—Hickory: Julian Whitener, mayor for 19 years, was turned out of office by political newcomer George Murphy. Final unofficial results showed Murphy receiving a 2-to-1 margin.

"And did you know that their protests were to no avail? The Concorde was permitted to fly over their houses."

"So?"

"If the people in a democracy can't stop the landing of an SST, what makes you think the people in a police state can?"

"I never thought of that. I guess Platinsk should be happy the Soviet Union has developed its own SST and be grateful we can see it every day. The next time I hear a sonic boom I shall rejoice in the progress of Soviet technology."

"I'm still sending you to a sanitarium."

"For what reason, Comrade?"

"Catch 144. Anyone who would want an SST to fly over his house must surely be crazy."

Should Not Be In Gutter

Greenville Crime Prevention Officer Doug Jackson said prunings from trees and shrubs and leaves piled in streets are potential accident causers. He appealed to Greenville citizens to refrain from this action.

"Section 16.7 of Greenville City Codes states that 'tree limbs, cuttings, shrubbery, etc. will be hauled at such times as trucks are available. Lawn trimmings and leaves should not be placed in the gutter,'" he said. "It further states that 'such limbs, cuttings, shrubbery, etc. shall be placed on the front corner of the owner's or tenant's property nearest the street or alley.'"

Pickup dates for particular sections of the city can be learned by calling Public Works, 752-4137, he said. Violation of the City Code on this matter can result in being cited to court and, if found guilty, a person can be given a fine of $50 or a 30-day jail sentence.

fishing in Canada. And we're going again next year. —twice!"

Hershenson also promises to keep up his blistering work pace as long as he is able.

He maintains he's even willing to take on responsibilities of more charities and causes. "If anything comes up, I'll just do what I can."

Public service was a hallmark of his earlier career. During World War II, he served as military governor of Naples and Milan in Italy.

During that time he helped restore order to the war-torn country. In thanks for his service, Pope Pius XII awarded Hershenson the Cross of the Lateran Knights, making him possibly the only Jew to be so honored.

Credibility Damaged By 'Nitpicking'

By FRANK CORMIER
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — A man who campaigns successfully for the presidency with a promise that "I will never lie to you" must expect to have his words scrutinized with care, even nitpicking care.

It should come as no surprise to President Carter, therefore, that a six-week-old statement he made about Richard Helms, the former director of the Central Intelligence Agency, has been put under reportorial microscopes.

The aim of the exercise has been to determine whether Carter is developing the kind of credibility gap that plagued some of his predecessors.

On Sept. 29, Carter told a broadcast news conference that Attorney General Griffin Bell "has not consulted with me" about bringing possible criminal charges against Helms, whose testimony before a Senate committee about CIA intervention in Chile's internal affairs had become a subject of official inquiry.

Of the several million Americans who heard, saw or read Carter's statement, perhaps a thousand had a deep interest in the case at the time.

Now, it is fair to assume, more thousands have at least some interest in the Helms matter, which became a front page news item last week when he pleaded no contest in federal court here to two criminal misdemeanor charges that he had failed to testify fully and accurately to the committee.

Part of the fresh interest has been prompted by a seeming contradiction between Carter's Sept. 29 statement and one made by Bell on Nov. 1.

To explore the matter chronologically, here is what happened:

At his September meeting with reporters, Carter was told that Bell had promised to consult with the president about Helms. Asked for his own views, Carter replied: "He (Bell) has not consulted with me, nor given me any advice on the Helms question. I am familiar with it through reading the press. ..."

Last week, in an effort to defend the administration's decision to plea bargain with Helms and avoid a trial that might lead to disclosure of CIA secrets, Bell told reporters he indeed had consulted with Carter on July 25, more than two months before the president's news conference.

By Bell's account, accepted by the White House, he and Carter were joined at the July meeting by Vice President Walter F. Mondale, presidential foreign policy adviser Zbigniew Brzezinski, Assistant Attorney General Benjamin R. Civiletti and one or two others.

On that occasion, Bell reported, "the president authorized us to determine the feasibility and possibility" of initiating plea bargaining with Helms — a statement that also is accepted as truth by White House spokesmen.

Bell's account is, on its face, difficult to square with Carter's September pronouncement that he knew about the Helms case "through reading in the press," not to mention Carter's claim that the attorney general "has not consulted with me."

For two days last week, at regular White House press briefings, Carter's deputy press secretary Rex Granum and the top spokesman, Jody Powell, labored at reconciling what might appear irreconcilable.

Granum first reported that Carter, at the time of the news conference, understood that the July 25 meeting had been disclosed publicly by Powell.

Therefore, Granum argued, the president assumed the question addressed to him dealt with possible consultations with Bell subsequent to July 25.

"There's no way I can prove to you beyond all reasonable question ... our good intentions in the matter." True enough — which is why Jimmy Carter may find himself with a credibility fissure, if hardly a chasm.

Cost Comes First In Choosing Recipe

ROSEMONT, Ill. (UPI) — A recent survey indicates cost is the first consideration of readers when they clip recipes from newspapers. Calories and nutrient content run a poor fifth.

Both groups object to unclear directions and difficult preparation.

Both groups like menus or suggestions of complementary foods to accompany recipes.

Many homemakers questioned don't trust yield phrases that state only the number of servings. They prefer volume measurements or a more meaningful term, such as "six servings of one-half cup each."

The study found editors tend to think a recipe makes more servings than a reader would select for the same dish.

Among other homemaker preferences were:

Help in organizing meals; Photographed dishes that can be made at home;

And more time-saving freezer recipes.

Readers told the survey takers they prefer boxed potatoes and cake mixes among convenience foods, although one-third said they still make cakes from scratch.

The study by Dairy Research, Inc., for the United Dairy Industry Association, queried 1,400 readers and 300 newspaper food editors nationwide.

Both readers and food editors agreed that ingredients were a common reason for rejecting recipes. Readers do so when ingredients do not appeal to their families; they consider seven a magic number for ingredients. Some said a really good recipe could be made from three or four.

Food editors consider availability of ingredients. Twenty-three percent said they disliked ingredients carrying a brand name, but only 10 percent were bothered by too many ingredients.

Like Father,

Like Daughter

NEW YORK (AP) — A survey of young people between the ages of 14 and 25 found that "women whose fathers were college graduates or had some college education were more likely to choose an executive-professional life as their ambition than men whose fathers had similar educational background."

The study by the American Council of Life Insurance also found that "among women whose fathers had a high school education or less, only 30 percent preferred the executive life style."

It said that among the young men surveyed, those who had fathers with a college background, "were no more likely to be attracted to the executive-professional style than those whose fathers had less schooling."

Imbalance Of Trade Has Raised Problems In U.S.

By R. GREGORY NOKES
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — It looked like a good deal, when Mayor G. William Gross and the City Council decided to save the residents of Sioux City, Iowa, $289 by buying two escalators made in Japan rather than American-built models.

The saving was out of a total purchase price of about $79,000. But Mayor Gross had second thoughts two weeks later after an announcement that the local Zenith television plant was closing and laying off 800 workers because of alleged unfair competition from lower-priced television imports, primarily from Japan.

Zenith was one of Sioux City's largest employers. "It brought home the possibility that other people might be losing their jobs" because of the city's decision to buy Japanese escalators, Gross said in a telephone interview. "We have since then passed a resolution locally that would give preference to American-made products," he said, although it was too late to cancel the escalator deal.

The 800 Sioux City television jobs were part of a nationwide layoff of 5,600 workers by Zenith, one-quarter of its U.S. labor force. The jobs will go to workers in Mexico and Taiwan where hourly wages are at least $5 less than the $6.32 that Zenith was paying American workers.

Americans still will be able to buy Zenith color television sets but they will be produced in foreign-based plants. An irony of the situation is that since Zenith was unable to compete with lower-priced imports, it now will make lower-priced imports itself, which will add to the nation's already staggering foreign trade deficit.

The United States probably will import as much as $30 billion more in goods this year than it will export, producing a trade deficit four times the largest one on record. Moreover, Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal says next year's deficit may be just as bad.

The nation's trade problem has developed into a major headache and challenge for the Carter administration, since the deficit translates into a substantial loss of jobs and production in this country at a time when unemployment already is high and production and profits are sluggish.

The trade deficit has contributed to a substantial decline in the value of the U.S. dollar on world money markets in recent months. It was at an all-time low last week against the Japanese yen, the German mark and the Swiss franc.

The United States cannot escape a trade deficit of some size, U.S. officials believe, because it imports so much oil. Yet, a lot more than the $45 billion in oil imports contributes to the deficit. For example, the United States imported a record 605,000 color television sets in the first three months of this year, a 42 percent jump over a year earlier.

The nation is importing about 18 percent of its steel, more than half of its shoes and 20 percent of its automobiles. The United Steelworkers estimates that imports have cost 60,000 steel industry jobs just in the past month or so.

Sioux City is just one of many communities which has lost major payrolls recently because of import competition. Youngstown, Ohio, lost 5,000 jobs with the closing of the Youngstown Sheet and Tube Co.

The problem has forced the Carter administration into a delicate balancing act to placate American industry and workers whose livelihoods are at stake, yet also fulfill the U.S. commitment to help maintain the free trade considered essential for the economies of the industrialized world.

The need for free trade has been emphasized repeatedly in recent speeches by Robert S. Strauss, President Carter's special trade ambassador and trouble-shooter.

"While we are not in the position of Japan, the Netherlands or Taiwan, where they must have trade to live, I think it may be fairly said that we must have trade to live in the manner to which we have become accustomed," he said recently.

Americans, he said on another occasion, are poorly informed about "what fair and free trade means to their pocketbook." Even with the current trade imbalance, about one in six manufacturing workers in this country depends on exports for his or her job, he said.

Ideally, the jobs created in export-producing industries will offset jobs lost because of imports.

The Carter administration also makes the point that people usually buy foreign goods because they are cheaper — although sometimes it's because they are better, too — and if restrictions against imports are imposed, then prices rise.

In a recent report on steel industry problems, the administration's Council on Wage and Price Stability said quotas to restrict steel imports wouldn't do much to increase jobs or production in this country, because the reduction in imports would not be large enough.

But if said the quotas could clear the way for U.S. steel producers to raise prices, and that could have "serious inflationary consequences." Steel prices already have been raised nearly 10 percent in the past year, and those increases have tended to push up prices of just about everything made with steel.

It's that kind of pocketbook issue Strauss refers to. But Gross raised the other side of the issue when he wondered whether Americans would be so quick to buy foreign-made bargains if they realized they might be putting their neighbors out of work.

The Labor Department has declared about 255,000 workers eligible for government cash aid and other assistance because they lost their jobs due to competition from foreign imports.

The nation's huge trade deficit this year is the result of several complex factors, no one of which can easily be resolved. There is the high price of world oil, the lower wages paid to foreign workers, unfair trade competition in some instances and, importantly, an imbalance in growth and economic policies among major nations.

Because the U.S. economy has been growing more rapidly than others, it has acted like a huge magnet, drawing goods from abroad and helping to stimulate employment and production in other nations. Blumenthal and other officials say this is a proper role for the U.S. economy to play when other nations are still in recession.

But they have been openly critical that two other nations with strong economies, Japan and Germany, aren't following the same policy and are continuing to enjoy trade surpluses. Japan, for example, has a surplus in its trade with the United States of more than $5 billion so far this year.

Blumenthal argues that nations with strong economies need to help offset the huge trade surpluses of oil-exporting nations, estimated at more than $40 billion this year. Otherwise, the burden would fall entirely on those nations with the weakest economies.

It's not just the economic problems of other nations that worry the U.S. government. It's what those economic problems could do, such as bringing to power governments that are hostile to the United States, that is of greater concern.

For example, economic troubles in France and Italy are believed behind the growing influence of Communists and the political left in both countries. As long as there are significant wage differentials among nations, some goods, such as cheap shoes and clothing, logically will be made abroad and imported into this country.

But the United States can and does produce some goods more cheaply and efficiently than other nations. Agricultural products are the prime example. There also are aircraft, computers, industrial equipment and technology of all kinds.

Although there are steps the administration could take in the short-run to reduce the trade deficit and protect individual industries and jobs from foreign competition, it is reluctant to resort to them for several reasons.

Not the least of these is that U.S. trading partners would suffer, and it could set off a chain reaction that would bring on a new world recession, or even a depression. Another is that if doors are shut on cheaper foreign goods, it means higher prices to U.S. consumers. Thirdly, protection from imports may prop up uneconomic or outmoded U.S. industries that should be forced to modernize or shut down.

Carter Apparently Swayed Few Votes

By TOM RAUM
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter probably swayed few votes in Congress with his bid for public support for his energy plan, administration supporters and critics agree. Key lawmakers of both parties said the problems of reconciling the vastly different energy bills passed by the House and Senate remain, despite Carter's statement Tuesday night that he would not sign a final compromise bill failing his tests for fairness and energy conservation. Carter has threatened before to veto an unacceptable energy bill, and a White House spokesman confirmed after Carter's speech that the president was standing by those threats. Democratic congressional leaders praised Carter for his address to the nation, but generally doubted his speech would make the battle, now raging in House-Senate conference committees, any easier.

And Republicans accused Carter of trying to turn the nation's energy crisis into a partisan issue. They said his talk could even hurt his position in Congress.

"He didn't have a program to begin with," complained House Republican Leader John Rhodes of Arizona. "He still doesn't have one, and he's trying to convince the American people he does."

"He's trying to solve the problem on a partisan basis," added Assistant Senate Republican Leader Ted Stevens of Alaska. "That's a strange way to approach a difficult problem." In an essentially low-key defense of his energy plan, Carter urged congress to "resist pressures from a few for special favors at the expense of the rest of us."

And he invited Americans to help persuade Congress to pass his energy plan — one which he said promotes energy conservation while being fair to both consumers and producers and protecting the federal budget.

Carter said he would use those standards to judge the final legislation produced by Congress. "I will sign the energy bills only if they meet these tests," he declared.

That statement apparently surprised few members of Congress. "I would not expect him to sign a bill he thought was unfair and didn't conserve energy," said Sen. Bennett Johnston, D-La. "I don't think Congress would pass a bill that failed to meet those standards."

Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., chairman of the Senate Energy Committee, said the president "is telling it like it is. There are no easy choices in energy policy."

But Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, an administration ally, said it is "very doubtful in my mind" whether the talk would have the effect Carter intended.

And Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, said it would take "an extraordinary feat in gymnastics" to bring the conferees to agreement.

A second conference unit was to begin work today on tax aspects of the energy package. Meanwhile, the first conference panel, which has been meeting now for three weeks, continued work on non-tax parts of the plan.

WEATHER FORECAST — Rain is forecast today from the central Gulf to the Great Lakes. Rain is also expected for the northern Rockies and adjacent Plains. Snow flurries are forecast from northern Missouri into Minnesota. Warmer air is expected for both coasts, but most of the country is due to be cold. (AP Laserphoto Map)

By The Associated Press
Increasing cloudiness was expected to spread across North Carolina today, with showers spreading slowly across the state tonight and Thursday.

A cold front in the Mississippi Valley continued its easterly movement today and ahead of the front were showers and some isolated thunderstorms. The front was expected to enter the western part of the state late today and continue its eastward movement tonight and Thursday.

Tuesday was mostly sunny and mild, with high temperatures mostly in the 70s, with some 60s in the mountains. Wilmington was one of the warmest spots with a high of 78. Fog was widespread this morning but it burned away with the sunrise and another mild day was in prospect with temperatures about the same as Tuesday.

City Counts 4 Accidents

An estimated $4,075 property damage resulted from a series of four collisions investigated yesterday by Greenville Police. Officers reported cars driven by Jerri Lynn Tripp of 2611 South Wright Rd. and Hugh Murrill Larkins Loftin of Hillsborough collided at noon on Tenth Street just west of the Verdant Street intersection injuring both drivers and causing an estimated $800 damage to the Tripp car and $700 damage to the Loftin vehicle.

An 8:25 a.m. collision at the intersection of Greenville Boulevard and Tenth Street involved cars driven by Linda Morgan Roll of Ayden and Roy Alton Peaden of Route 4, Tarboro.

Damage was set by police at $1,000 to the Roll car and $500 to the Peaden auto.

Vehicles driven by Martha Cartwright Jackson of 301 Alledale Dr. and Kelvin Earl Conner of Route 1, Grifton collided about 8 a.m. at the intersection of Dickinson Avenue and Truman Street causing $600 damage to the Jackson auto and $200 damage to the Conner car.

A 12:10 p.m. mishap on Greene Street, 75 feet South of the Moore Street intersection caused an estimated $200 damage to a car driven by Alonza Teel Jr. and about $75 damage to an auto driven by Clifton Gus Phillips.

Winterville, Ayden And Grifton Pick Officials

Winterville, Ayden, and Grifton held municipal elections yesterday, along with the statewide vote on the bond issues and the Constitutional Amendments.

In Winterville, Incumbent Mayor Walter A. Dall kept his position with 24-vote margin over the next highest contender Burney (Leland) Tucker Jr., according to unofficial results compiled by The Daily Reflector.

Dall received 218 votes and Tucker 194 votes.

Patrick DeCuzzi and Donald L. Avery gained 21 and 17 votes respectively.

In the race for Alderman, Incumbent Bobby Crawford beat out Hoyt Hammond, with 236 votes to 157 votes.

Winterville residents voted in favor of the Highway and Clean Water bond issues and all of the Constitutional Amendments, except Amendment Three. The succession issue was defeated 304 to 356 votes against.

Ayden Incumbent Mayor Ross Persinger won the mayoral election with 437 votes over D. Glenn Bowen who gained 150 votes.

Ayden's five commissioners were unopposed. They are: Carl L. Speight in the First Ward, Robert G. Harris in the Second Ward, J. Elliott Dixon in the Third Ward, J.J. Brown in the Fourth Ward, and Harry G.

Grifton Joining Safety Program

GRIFTON — The Grifton Town Board last night adopted a resolution to enter into agreement with Gov. Hunt's Highway Safety Program.

The program which is 70 percent state funded and 30 percent locally funded provides for assistance to municipalities in maintaining and improving their street signs.

In related business, the board approved a motion to install a stop sign on the corner of Brassie Drive and North Fairlane Drive. Stop signs would also be placed on North Fairlane Drive and Country Club Drive.

The Board also adopted a preliminary assessment, resolution "with the intent to pave Railroad Street, South Dupont Avenue, and Canal Street," according to Grifton Town Clerk Nan Smith.

Michael Wayne Travia was also hired to work for the Grifton Utilities Department, said Smith.

In other business, the Board voted to accept bids on a diesel tractor.

Also, commissioners voted to participate in the Mid-East project to hire a town administrator for three local municipalities. Fountain has already been chosen as one of the towns, but the other town is still undecided.

Grifton will pay 25 percent of the cost of the Mid-East project.

Overeaters Will Meet Thursday

Harold J. will conduct this week's meeting of Overeaters Anonymous Thursday at 7:30 p.m. at Arlington Street Baptist Church.

Those attending last week's meeting brought 15 pounds of food to give away. This was a representation of the number of pounds lost during the previous week.

Any person who wishes to conquer compulsive eating is invited to visit or join the group, which patterns itself after Alcoholics Anonymous.

Mumford in the Fifth Ward.

Residents of Ayden also voted in favor of both bond issues and all five Constitutional Amendments.

In Grifton, Incumbent Mayor David E. Bosley was reinstated by defeating his opponent Ardath Vandford Spikes 313 votes to 199 votes.

Two commissioner positions were open in the Grifton election. Incumbent Alton B. Clements was the highest vote-getter with 231 votes. William C. (Bill) Smith placed second with 199 votes.

Fred Don (Don) Lister, Johnny Len Craft, Robert D. (Don) Watson, George Preston Davis, and William Anthony (Bill) Bollinger Sr. received 179, 147, 111, 73, and 66 votes respectively.

Grifton voters with a 55 percent turnout also favored the bond issues and the Constitutional Amendments.

Elect Four

New To Bd. Martin County For Succession

GRIMESLAND — Lee P. Perry, the only incumbent alderman seeking re-election to the Board of Aldermen here in yesterday's election was re-elected, while Thurman L. Clark, Leslie Elks, Zelda Galloway and George W. (Bill) Huntley were named to the board, according to the unofficial returns.

Mrs. Galloway received the highest number of votes — 85 — in the 12-way race for the five seats, followed by Huntley who took 77 ballots. Perry ran third in the race, taking 68 votes, while Clark was fourth with 64 ballots.

Elks, the fifth-place runner who received 58 votes, barely won over Dixon who ran sixth with 56 votes.

The other candidates and their votes included: Leion A. Moore, 34; Thomas J. Dixon, 27; V. L. Harrison, 24; John Thomas Farr, 19; and Kathleen Mobley and Estelle Morrison who took 18 votes each.

Cowan Again Led Ticket

WILLIAMSTON — Incumbent Mayor Robert Cowan, despite the fact he was running unopposed, led the Williamston municipal ticket in the number of votes cast during Tuesday's elections.

Cowan received a total of 959 votes, 116 more than any individual candidate for councilman polled.

In the race for the five town council seats, three of the five incumbents seeking reelection were returned to office, with two losing out to the two newcomer candidates.

Incumbents successful in reelection bids were William H. Honeyblue, 843 votes; John R. Haden, 739 votes; and Thurman Perry, 736 votes. The two losing incumbents, John M. Rogers and WILLIAMSTON — Contrary to pre-election predictions by local observers in Martin County, the gubernatorial succession amendment was approved by voters in that county.

The tally was 1,425 for succession, and 1,036 against.

For the other four constitutional amendments and the road and water bond issues facing voters, passage was by a much larger margin than for the succession amendment.

An unofficial tally of the returns show: (For figures are given first, followed by against figures).

- Amendment 1 — 2,339 and 302.
- Amendment 2 — 2,148 and 272.
- Amendment 4 — 1,490 and 642.
- Amendment 5 — 1,756 and 434.

— Road Bonds — 1,803 and 737.

— Clean Water — 1,932 and 691.

Turnout of voters, as predicted, was on the light side. A total of 3,011 voters went to the polls out of some 11,000 registered voters.

Two Newcomers Win Seats In Simpson Vote

SIMPSON — Incumbent mayor John T. McDonald and two political newcomers won seats on the Village of Simpson town council in yesterday's election.

McDonald received 102 votes, while Oscar Lee (Jim) Telfair polled 78 ballots and Galloway Thompson received 81 votes.

The three were the only ones listed on the ballot for the three council seats. Incumbent council members Junior Lee Dall and Leonard Hardee did not seek reelection.

In addition to the votes for the three listed on the ballot, Hugh Mills, David Daniels Jr., Roscoe Heath and L. H. Mizzell received one write-in vote each.

You Could Be An 'Ephemerist', And Not Know It

EDITOR'S NOTE — For years, parents have saved kids' recital programs and report cards and paper dolly Valentines. Vacationers save travel brochures, diners collect matchbooks. Saving paper pasts has a name, and if you're serious enough about what you save, you might qualify for membership in a recently-formed society for savers.

By GEORGE ESPER
Associated Press Writer
BENNINGTON, Vt. (AP) — Uh, hold it. Don't throw this away. Save it. This is ephemera. You could be an ephemerist but don't know it.

At the recent "This is Ephemera" exhibition at the Bennington Museum, people came out of curiosity then commented:

"I thought it was a disease."
"I throw that junk out."
"That's trash."
That's right.

Ephemera is wastebasket archeology, the collecting of printed or hand written material meant to be thrown away.

"The whole field," says Calvin P. Otto, "is intended to be those things which man normally does not keep."

Product labels, bills, greeting cards, ticket stubs, menus, newspapers, posters, parking tickets, tour guides, honorary certificates, promotional material, to name a few.

Why would anyone keep them?

"Why does man keep anything in the sense of a historic nature," Otto responds. "What we're really trying to preserve and what in fact has been preserved are historic records in print. It's a copy of that part of society."

Otto became an ephemerist when he quit being a philatelist — stamps are in a class by themselves. Now he is one of eight founding fathers of the two-year old Ephemera Society and chairman of its North American office headquartered in Bennington.

"If you're a collector, you're probably an ephemerist but don't know it by its name," he says.

Otto, 47, is the president of the Wood Fong Corp., of nearby Hoosick Falls, N.Y. His company, which makes wood fiber board used by newspapers in making the curved, one-piece plates necessary in letter press printing, also has a plant in England.

A few years back, Otto was ephemerizing in a market in London. A friend introduced him to Maurice Rickards, an Englishman who has written 23 books on ephemera, including the interpretation of World War I through posters, which were a strong propaganda medium.

"It just happened to be a circumstance that we met one another and one thing led to another. We realized each other's interests and the next thing you know a society is born," Otto said.

Of the eight founders, Otto is the only American. The others are Englishmen, all professionals in graphic arts or design. The society's president is Sir John Betjeman, poet laureate of England.

"We didn't know whether we were the only eight humans in the world who cared or not, but we now have well over 350 members and are growing very rapidly," Otto said.

"The society's basic purpose is to get together people who do collect to help preserve material, to help others to interpret it ... To the majority of the people, if they run into grandma's old trunk or the company archives, it's trash. It heads for the fireplace. That's what we're trying to stop."

Otto says he uses ephemera "as an escape mechanism to allow your mind to do something different than your normal work."

"The collecting of ephemera is a great deal in my mind like prospecting for gold. The fun is in the search. Searching and then putting together a collection of things regardless of what they are that you can then enjoy both visually and historically."

Otto has between 3,000 and 4,000 items in his collection of ephemera, including advertising cards, receipts from steamship companies, posters and old newspapers. His personal collection ends about 1920. His two most prized possessions are the Oxford Gazette of 1665, the first English language newspaper that was produced as a regular newspaper, and a poster from Italy dating back to 1630 that warned of plague in an Italian town. They probably could command a pretty penny, but Otto says most of what he buys, at least in the last 20 years, has come from flea markets. "And flea market prices are very reasonable. The average ephemerist like myself buys and collects things that cost 50 cents and $1 and $5. Maybe $10. I doubt you'll find much above $10 to $20 for an individual item."

Report Gain In Export Trade

BUENOS AIRES (AP) — With exports totaling $2.35 billion for the first five months of 1977, or 75 percent more than for the same period last year, Argentina showed a favorable trade balance of $930 million, reported the Secretariat for Foreign Trade. While all export sectors registered gains, the Secretariat noted that manufactured goods were up 40.6 percent over the same five-month period of 1976.

Big Losses Spur Farm Strike Talk

SPRINGFIELD, Colo. (UPI) - For the past 19 years, farmers have gone to see banker Travis Waller to talk about the crops they planned for the next season and borrow money for machinery or seed. Waller helped them out, if he could.

Now farmers who owe him money want to strike Dec. 14 and not sell their crops because market prices do not pay the costs of growing food. Waller, who holds their notes, sympathizes with them. He will help if he can.

The farmers think this way: It is cheaper to borrow $8,000 to $10,000 for living expenses, using land, machinery and crops as collateral, than borrow $50,000 to grow a wheat crop because market prices will not pay production costs.

Waller says many farmers with wheat, corn and other food in storage also will qualify for federal loans to help tide them through a prolonged strike. These loans could help growers who have reached their credit limit with banks.

"What has happened is this," said Waller. "Back a few years ago when the (bushel) price of wheat went to $5, the price of equipment went up. Wheat came down but equipment didn't."

Waller has urged farmers around Springfield, a town of about 4,000 persons in southeast Colorado, to take advantage of the loan program because "it provides a certain price to put it (the crop) in government storage. The farmer has the option of taking it out of storage and selling or storing it."

"They can get almost as much in government loan programs as they can selling it," he said.

American Agriculture, the Springfield-based organization responsible for the threatened strike, said a nine-state survey showed more than 25 percent of growers in the Midwest will have to refinance loans or sell out because of bank mortgages unless market prices improve.

"The current prices that farmers and ranchers receive for their produce, compared to parity, are at a 44-year low, the lowest since the depth of the Great Depression," said American Agriculture's Keith Thomas.

American Agriculture says it will call off its strike only if Congress grants full parity, guaranteeing that production costs are covered by market prices. The farmers also say parity should include a little profit.

As of Sept. 15, farmers claimed they lost $2.17 on each bushel of wheat sold, $1.86 for each bushel of corn, $2.26 for each 100 pounds of potatoes and $2.79 for each bushel of soybeans. The average per-acre wheat yield outside Springfield is 20 bushels of wheat.

"The prices I received came up $50,000 short of production," said Eugene Schroeder, who raises milo and wheat near Campo, Colo., on the Oklahoma border. "This doesn't include the cost of my labor, anything. This is just the dollars I'm short."

"If anyone asks will I strike next year, you bet I will," he said. "That's the cheapest way to go."

Many Suspect Friday 'Unlucky'

CHICAGO (UPI) - Most people feel Friday the 13th is unlucky. Some people think any Friday is bad luck.

The bias against Friday comes from the fact that on that day Christ was crucified. Friday was also known as "hangman's day" when, according to The World Book Encyclopedia, criminals were executed.

Not all people, however, believe Fridays to be bad luck.

The day was named for Frigg, a Norse goddess who knew all things. She symbolized love and fertility and was worshipped in Scandinavia as well as in Germany and England.

Friday is also a religious day. Sunset on Fridays marks the beginning of the Jewish Sabbath, and for Muslims, it is a holy day celebrating the creation of Adam.

"Celsius" is named for Anders Celsius, a Swedish astronomer who died in 1744 and who invented a thermometer scale based on zero degrees for the freezing point of water and 100 for the boiling point.

Separated By A Fence And World

By ROBERT H. REID
ECKERTAL, West Germany (AP) — To Juergen Pieskar, the German-speaking people over his back fence might as well live in another world. Pieskar lives in West Germany. His neighbors are in Communist East Germany.

A ghoulish collection of electrified fences, guard towers, and a heavily mined "death strip" erected by the East Germans separate Pieskar's village from Stapelburg, a farming community a few hundred yards into Communist territory. A December 1971 transit agreement between the two Germanys permits West Germans and other foreigners to cross into the East at a handful of locations. Eckertal, on the northern rim of the Harz Mountains, is not among them.

East Germany normally forbids travel to the West by the majority of its citizens.

To visit their "neighbors," residents of Eckertal must travel 50 miles northeast to Helmstedt or 70 miles southeast to Duderstadt, cross into East Germany, then drive back to Stapelburg.

Residents say few make the trip.

"There isn't much contact any more," said Ursula Sehnin, a waitress at a restaurant some 150 yards from the border. "An elderly couple has a son and daughter in the village over there but most people came here after the partitioning. It's like another world."

Pieskar, who has lived here for about 20 years, claims "life is not bad" along the border but "the children have to be careful. They can't roam and play all over the place."

About 50 yards behind Pieskar's new brick home flows a tiny brook. A sign warns that the middle of the stream is the border with East Germany.

A few yards behind the creek, flanked by white birches and evergreens, lies the complex of fortifications that makes the inner German border one of the most heavily fortified in the world.

East Germany claims the fortifications, which extend some 856 miles from the Baltic Sea to Czechoslovakia, are designed to keep fascists and neo-Nazis from the West out.

West Germany, citing the millions who fled East Germany before erection of the Berlin Wall in 1961, says the fortifications are to keep would-be East German defectors in.

Pieskar, who like many West Germans has relatives in the East, claims some residents of the border area are still apprehensive, although detente has eased fears of invasion.

Many were attracted here by cheap land and rural charm. Most of the several hundred residents of Eckertal moved here after creation in 1949 of East Germany, officially the German Democratic Republic, from the Soviet occupation zone.

West Germany was formed in the same year from the American, British and French zones.

East Germans must obtain special permission to live within three miles of the border, and residents of the district carry special identity cards. West Germans need no such special permission.

The border, a potential flashpoint of East-West conflict a generation ago, has become a tourist attraction, where thousands come each year to the Western side to peer through binoculars at a slice of life on the other side.

Youthful East German border guards and civilians across the divide go about their business seemingly oblivious to the attention.

At this West German border station, tourists can mount a platform to view a guard tower and cluster of red-roofed houses and farm buildings that appear no different from those on the Western side.

An occasional bicycle rider glides down the road beyond the fences, and during the summer tourists can watch East German farmers tend their crops.

The highway that once linked Eckertal and Stapelburg runs to the border, then resumes beyond a trench and fortifications.

FOOTBALL ANYONE?
CHICAGO (AP) — Football-like games date back over 2,000 years, according to Encyclopedia Britannica.

In the Middle Ages, it says, whole towns in Europe "turned out to play each other in rough and dangerous contests with more than a hundred participants on each side and the goals perhaps half a mile apart."

New Mayor Is Elected

ROBERSONVILLE — For the first time in 15 years, L. Wilson Wynne will not be a member of the Robersonville town government.

First elected as a town council member in 1962, Wynne had served ten years as mayor and was seeking reelection for another two year term in Tuesday's election, but lost the bid to J. R. Crandell, a council member who opted to run for mayor.

The vote was close — Crandell received 241 to Wynne's 231. A third mayoral candidate, J. D. Knox, polled 56 votes.

In the town council members elections, all four incumbents were elected. The four are Claude Wilson, 415 votes; R. B. Nelson, 358 votes; William A. Cherry, 296; and James D. (Jimmy) Rogers, 294.

The successful vote getter from among four newcomer candidates was Gerald Lee Hardee, who polled 274 votes. The other three — Guy Forbes, Mike Kilpatrick and Gordon Knox, received 266, 230 and 246 votes respectively.

Arrested On Drug Charge

Greenville Police last night arrested John Edward Baker III, 19 of 485 Jones Dorm, on charges of possession of marijuana.

Chief Glenn Cannon said officers arrested the East Carolina University student from Chevy Chase, Md., after finding marijuana in his dormitory room following a search about 11:40 p.m.

Baker was placed under a $200 bond pending hearing of the case by the court.

By DEBBIE JACKSON Reflector Staff Writer
 The staff of the Pitt County Health Department and the Pitt County and Greenville City School systems are cooperatively taking measures to control the current head lice (Pediculosis) outbreak within seven schools in the county.

According to Roger J. Barnaby, director of the Pitt County Health Department, the outbreak is small and, at this time, only 85 students have been confirmed as having Pediculosis.

"Screening of students began this week in order to identify those students with lice infestation," said Barnaby.

"Treatment is specific and simple. It is the parent's responsibility to make sure that if their child is infested, he is treated," he added.

Barnaby said that effective treatment and elimination of the infestation will be required before the child is readmitted into school. School personnel will screen the child before he may re-enter.

"The outbreak is under control, but continuous surveillance by school personnel and health department staff is essential."

Barnaby added that there is no need for a child to miss school once he has been treated, although a parent may wish to keep him out for one day in order to wash the clothing and linens, etc.

"Both the city and county school systems, and the health department are doing everything in their power to prevent continuing exposure of children."

Ott Alford, superintendent of the Pitt County School System, said that six schools in the county with fewer than a total of 100 students have been infested.

He added that parents of the infested youngsters have been sent letters giving specific instructions on how to stop the problem.

According to Alford, there are not enough nurses in the county health department to check all the county school children, so teachers are helping with the screening.

He noted that in the case that a child is infested, the whole family should be treated to prevent spreading.

Glenn Cox of the Greenville City Schools said that only one school has reported Pediculosis, and there were four or five cases of the infestation at that school.

According to Cox, teachers, students, and parents have been notified of the problem and told how to deal with it.

Roanoke Had Slow Start

By JIM KYLE
Reflector Sports Writer

The fact that his team was 0-4 at one point in the season, but made it into the state 2-A playoffs, is nothing unusual, according to Roanoke coach Nolan Respass.

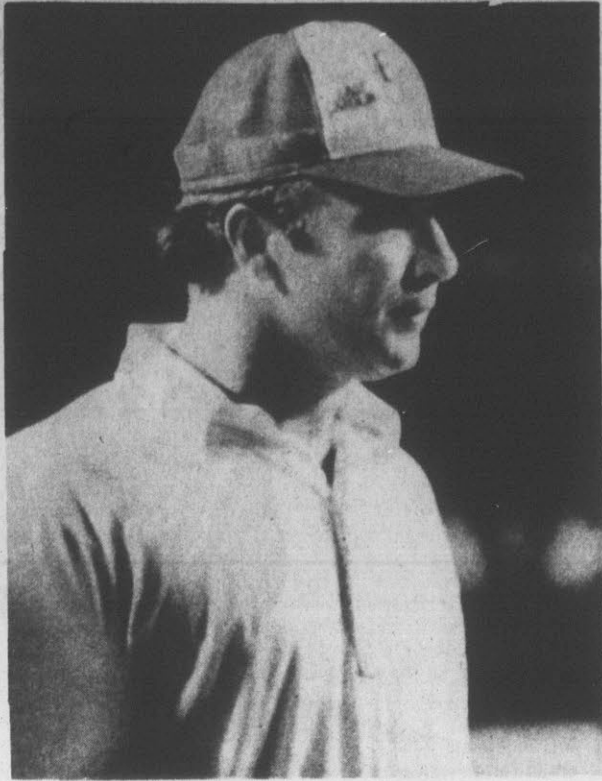

playoffs Friday night. "I don't think that's anything that hasn't happened to us before," Respass said.

the Redskins. The offense averaged over 27 points per game in the final six encounters, while the defense had two shutouts and two other games in which it gave up just one touchdown.

has "come around real well lately." Most of the offensive players also work on defense, Respass said, since one of the weak points of the team is its depth.

In the backfield are Hines, Williams, Daniels and Linwood Knight alternating at the corner-back spots, Charlie Smith as strong safety and Cargile and Ernest Lee at free safety.

Camp Lejeune, which the Redskins will be hosting Friday night, is an explosive offensive ballclub, Respass said.

ECU Coach Pat Dye Eyes Bowl?

ECU Under Consideration

From Staff and Wire Reports

Officials of five bowl games are interested in the Tar Heels of North Carolina and East Carolina, N.C. State and Duke are also contenders for post-season competition.

East Carolina, now at 8-2, is being considered for the Dec. 17 Independence Bowl in Shreveport, La. They would oppose undefeated Louisiana Tech.

Harvey Robertson of the Peach Bowl committee said Tuesday that a scout may watch the Pirates' final game Saturday against William & Mary in Norfolk, Va.

Robertson said the bowl committee became interested in the Pirates when one member likened them to the 1970 Arizona State team that defeated North Carolina in the Peach Bowl.

"When we took Arizona State that year they didn't have a lot of national attention but we knew they had a fine, exciting team with a strong following," Robertson said.

Under NCAA rules, bowl invitations cannot officially be extended until 6 p.m., Nov. 19. Louisiana Tech is assured of an Independence Bowl berth because it has clinched the Southland Conference title.

"It doesn't surprise me," Coach Pat Dye of East Carolina said when asked about the possibility of the Peach, Independence and Tangerine Bowls.

"I've said all along that we are capable of playing in a bowl game. We have every ingredient that the bowls are looking for.

"If the bowl people are looking for a show, then we have the team that they're looking for: we have the people worth watching. And I know that our fans will buy the tickets to the game.

"When we go to a bowl game, at this point in our program, it's something big. When LSU or Florida or someone like that gets a bowl bid, it's old hat."

Dye added that if the Pirates are able to win this Saturday and post a 9-2 record, they should certainly be more acceptable to a bowl that someone who is 7-4 "and already griping and moaning about their record."

"And we're not afraid of anyone," Dye added.

Rangers Sign Slugger Zisk

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — It was an elegant setting replete with champagne, diamonds, and soft piano music among Fort Worth's high society Tuesday night, making Richie Zisk feel at home at Shady Oaks Country Club with his freshly signed 10-year, $2.5 million contract.

Zisk, the first of baseball's new crop of free agents to come to terms, officially became a Texas Ranger and bubbly Rangers majority owner Brad Corbett plopped a 10-gallon hat on the head of the former Chicago White Sox outfielder.

Then came the boots for the slugging Zisk, who is never a threat on the basepaths.

"Maybe Richie can steal 30 bases in these," wisecracked Corbett.

A bit dazzled by Corbett's show, Zisk dutifully thanked everyone, then told writers later, "I think I can give them that little extra they had missing last year."

Zisk, who has averaged .299 over his last five seasons with Chicago and Pittsburgh in the National League, hit 30 home runs last season with the White Sox.

"Richie was the power we needed so badly last year," said Corbett. "He would have been the difference in 10 to 12 games and that would have meant the division for us."

Texas finished nine games behind Kansas City in the American League West.

Zisk, 28, said, "From what I could see last year, there was a great nucleus of young hungry players on this team. I think I can provide the long ball they needed. I can hit the ball out of any park and I like Arlington Stadium."

Gillman Likes Progress

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

East Carolina University's 1977-78 basketball team will get its first public airing Thursday night in a scrimmage at D. H. Conley High School.

It will be the first of two and possibly three public showings of the First team under new head coach Larry Gillman. A second has been set for next Tuesday in Washington. Both will get underway at 7:30 p.m.

A third activity scheduled for Minges Coliseum on November 21, but Gillman says that this session still isn't certain.

"We've been slowed a little by the usual sprains and pulls," Gillman said, "but you have to pretty well expect those. That is really the only negative thing, we've run into. I don't know if we're on schedule or not. I do know that we haven't peaked as a unit, and I'm in no real rush for us to get to that point. We may not reach it by the time we play Indiana. But these guys feel that they are going to win that game."

The Pirates open the season with the Hoosiers on Saturday, November 26, in Bloomington.

Gillman added that he had no specific starting lineup for the team yet. "We may never have one. It will probably change from game to game, depending on who we play and what our special needs are."

"I can promise you one thing, Oliver Mack will start every game as long as he's healthy."

Another who may draw a starting nod most of the time is sophomore forward Herb Gray.

"Herb's really come to the front. He's a real good bet to be a starter. And (Greg) Cornelius is doing a real good job in the center spot, which I believe is his true position."

Freshman Walter Moseley and sophomore Jim Ramsey have both shown brilliance, according to Gillman, but have also looked less than brilliant at other times. "The same thing is true for Bernard Hill, Roger Carr and Herb Krusen."

During the scrimmage sessions so far, Mack, the first Pirate All-America candidate, has been outstanding. In the most recent workout, he hit on 24 of 32 shots from the floor and ended up with 56 points in a 36-minute drill. Gray hit on 12 of 14, while Hill had 27 points. Cornelius made good on six of eight and pulled off 15 rebounds.

"We have the ability to score a lot of points," the coach said.

Turning to the defense, he said he was quite happy with the way the team is shaping up. "We're developing good, aggressive habits."

In addition, a number of players are hitting the boards well. "Our guards are even rebound conscious, and the most surprising player has been (Don) Whitaker. He really didn't figure in our pre-season plans, but he has played surprisingly well."

Leadership is one area where Gillman is not fully pleased. "Mack, of course, leads by example. But we have no 'mouth' man as yet. I hope one will come along, and it could be anyone from a freshman on up." In field goal shooting, Gillman is quite pleased. "We hit 54 of 79, which is real good, in one scrimmage with the teams fairly well divided. The other unit hit only 48 per cent, but I'm not too worried about it."

In free throw shooting, that same drill saw a 55 of 70 evening.

From now until the first game, the main work will now be polishing off the team. "We will continue to work on conditioning. I want us to be in shape to play two hard games a night. Right now, we're at the spot where could play between one and one and a half."

Gillman said that the Pirates haven't begun full concentration on Indiana yet. That will come late next week.

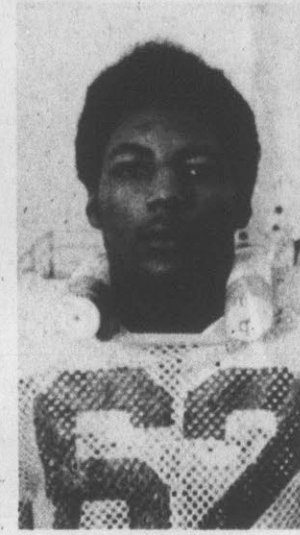

In the meanwhile, the Pirates will put on their public shows. But they'll be aiming for that first game at Indiana.

The team's rushing offense is led by fullback Larry Williams, who is the big-play man on the squad. Behind him in the backfield are running backs Charles Hines and Tony Whitfield. They are both young, Respass said, but have done a "credible" job this season.

The Redskins boast "several outstanding people" in the offensive line, guards Larry Daniels and Allison Lynch, along with tackle David Wallace. They are small, but quick, and love to hit and just play football, Respass said.

The other tackle is Street Lee, while Des Andrews is the team's center.

Foster Named National League MVP

CINCINNATI (AP) — A visit to a hypnotist, a sink-or-swim managerial move, and the power of positive thinking have put Cincinnati Reds slugger George

Foster at baseball's pinnacle. "This is the apex," said the 28-year-old outfielder Tuesday, after being named Most Valuable Player of the National League, an honor that narrowly eluded him a year ago. Collecting 15 of a possible 24 first place votes, Foster out-poled Philadelphia's Greg Luzinski by 26 votes. It was the sixth time in eight years that the award by the Baseball Writers Association of America went to a Cincinnati player.

Foster overcame fear of failure to develop into one of the most awesome power hitters of the decade. His 52 home runs, 149 runs batted in and 387 total bases destroyed club records held by a trio of Cincinnati's greatest hitters: Ted Kluszewski, Johnny Bench and Frank Robinson. For topping, he added a career-high .320 average.

Only four other National League players have hit 50 or more homers. The last time it was accomplished was 12 years ago, by San Francisco's Willie Mays, Foster's childhood idol. "Going back to high school, Willie was my hero. The big reason is, as a kid, you relate to someone — a black — who does something well. That's where it started for me," said Foster.

Years later, his dream culminated when he played in the same outfield with Mays and Bobby Bonds. But his raw skills were overlooked by the Giants, who dispatched him to the minor leagues.

The talent-sharp eye of Bob Howsam, then general manager of the Reds, produced a coup in 1971 that sent Foster to Riverfront Stadium, with the Reds giving up infielder Frank Duffy and pitcher Vern Geisbert.

Foster would prefer to forget his first day in Cincinnati. He requested uniform No. 14, unaware that it belonged to homegrown hero Pete Rose. "It was my number at San Francisco. I didn't know it was Pete's," he said sheepishly. "Then I asked for No. 24," a homage to Mays. One problem: Tony Perez was wearing it. He quickly settled for No. 15.

Seldom used and struggling at the plate, he was sent to the minors two years later at age 24, a crushing blow. His baseball career at rock bottom, he considered returning to college to take up accounting.

But a trip to an Indianapolis hypnotist restored his shattered confidence. "That was the turning point. I learned to block out the negative." He was back in the big leagues by the end of the year.

But it took a bold move by Manager Sparky Anderson in May 1975 to reveal Foster's full talents. Worried by a slow start and lack of power, Anderson asked Pete Rose to move from left field to third base, allowing Foster a trial at full-time duty. He responded with 23 homers and a .300 batting average — and the Reds were invincible, winning two straight world championships.

His sensational 1977 season was summarized by Anderson. "I don't think I'll ever see a better year from one man."

Foster finished four homers shy of the all-time NL mark set in 1930 by Chicago's Hack Wilson while breaking Bench's club RBI mark.

Yet, Foster worried. "I'd be lying if I said I wasn't surprised," he said Tuesday at a press conference. Foster had 291 votes to Luzinski's 255. Dave Parker of Pittsburgh was third with 156 and Reggie Smith of the NL champion Los Angeles Dodgers had 112.

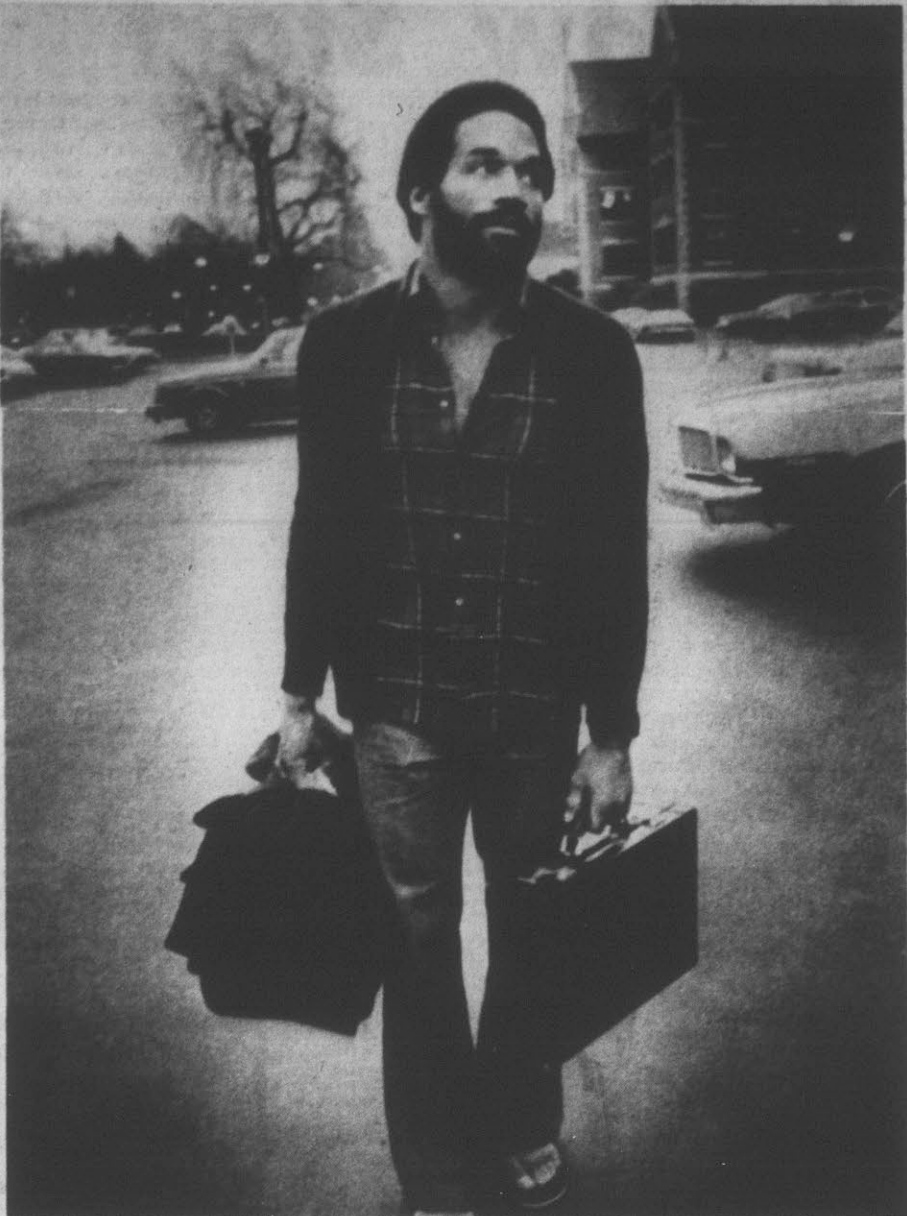

Purple Gold

Swim Meet

The newly-independent East Carolina University swim team will hold its first meet of the year, the annual Purple-Gold meet, this Thursday night at 7 p.m.

The Pirate swim team own its final Southern Conference championship last year and will compete as an independent in the Eastern League this season. Coach Ray Scharf has several of the team members returning from last year to try to improve themselves on the national scale. Ted Nieman, John McCauley, Billy Thorne, John Tudor and others who qualified for the nationals last year will be back to try their luck again this season.

The Purple-Gold meet will be held in the Minges pool and is open to the public at no charge.

Murphy-Less Rockets Defeated By Chicago

By The Associated Press
For Houston Coach Tom Nissalke, it was like knowing in advance how the bad dream would turn out and not being able to change its course. "We knew exactly what they were going to run, but couldn't stop it without Murphy," Nissalke said after the Chicago Bulls rolled over his Rockets 117-104 Tuesday night.

Shelton each had 10 points in the third for a 100-86 lead.

New York established its biggest margin, 108-89, on a basket by rookie Ray Williams with 9:28 to play, just before a 4½ minute splurge in which the Spurs narrowed the difference to five points, outscoring the Knicks 22-4.

All-Star guard George Gervin led the Spurs attack with a game-high 35 points — 12 of them in that fourth-quarter comeback.

Denver 111, Milwaukee 101

David Thompson had 20 points and Bobby Jones 18 as the Nuggets opened a 14-point lead early in the second half and held on.

Two free throws by Brian Taylor and a jumper by Bobby Wilkerson put the Nuggets ahead 59-47 at halftime. Brian Winters then got 11 of his 23 points as the Bucks closed a 63-49 deficit to 71-70.

But the Nuggets stretched their lead to 83-74 in the fourth quarter with jump shots by Anthony Roberts and Jim Price and a layup by Tom LaGarde.

Portland 130, Kansas City 104

The Trail Blazers fell behind 44-43 but with four minutes remaining in the half made a high-powered comeback to 60-48. They pulled away in the second half on 20 points by Maurice Lucas and 16 from Bob Gross.

NBA Roundup

The Rockets, playing without the outside shooting of injured Calvin Murphy, committed 24 turnovers in their fruitless efforts at Chicago's defense, negating a 25-point performance by Moses Malone.

In other National Basketball Association games, the New York Knicks beat the San Antonio Spurs 123-117, the Denver Nuggets downed the Milwaukee Bucks 111-101 and the Portland Trail Blazers defeated the Kansas City Kings 103-104.

New York 123, San Antonio 117
Bob McAdoo scored 33 points and Lonnie Shelton added 22 to help the Knicks to their third consecutive victory.

The Knicks outscored the Spurs 19-2 during five minutes of the second period. McAdoo and

Tar Heels Are Wary

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — If ever there was a time for overconfidence at the University of North Carolina it is this week as the Tar Heels prepare for their clash Saturday with lowly Virginia. But Coach Bill Dooley isn't indulging himself.

"Any time North Carolina plays the University of Virginia, you can be sure Virginia will be ready to play," Dooley said Tuesday. "The last two trips we made to Charlottesville, we won 31-28 in the last minute and lost 44-40."

Dooley did not go so far as to predict a Cavalier victory. That would have strained credulity. On the contrary, he conceded the Tar Heels should win "if we play the way we're capable of playing. If we don't, we could lose."

Virginia and Duke are the two hurdles remaining between Carolina and the Atlantic Coast Conference football crown, and the Cavaliers at the moment look like a pretty low hurdle with their 1-7-1 record.

But Dooley won't count them out.

"The strong thing about the team is their defense," he explained. "It's a good, experienced defense. But the best thing they've done was to put Chip Mark in at quarterback. Since they did that, they've played better football."

The Cavs were 0-5 before Mark appeared. All five games were shutouts. Mark, at least, has managed a score in every game, plus the single victory over Wake Forest and the Virginia Tech tie.

Irish Picked Over Tigs; Bucs Get Nod

NEW YORK (AP) — Most teams that face Notre Dame also have to face the legends and tradition that accompany the Fighting Irish. Fifteenth-ranked Clemson plans a different tack come Saturday.

"Instead of talking about Notre Dame's tradition, which we respect, we're gonna talk more about Clemson's tradition and what we stand for," says Dwight Adams, who coaches the Tigers' defensive ends.

And just what does Clemson stand for?

"Clemson is just a little this side of heaven — one stop before heaven, you might say." Those are the words of Joe Sherman, who retired as director of alumni relations in June after giving 34½ years of service to his alma mater, which is nestled in the foothills of the Blue Ridge Mountains in the northwest corner of South Carolina.

"There's something in these hills," Sherman once wrote, "that brings together and binds together and holds together men and women of all persuasions, of all heights, sizes, weights and cultural backgrounds — something that cuts across every difference, spans every gap, penetrates every wall — something that makes a man or a woman stand taller, feel better and say to all within earshot, 'I went to Clemson!'"

There'll be some 54,000 in Memorial Stadium, also known as "Death Valley," when Notre Dame goes to Clemson ... and comes home a 24-10 winner.

Last week's record was 52 right, 20 wrong and 1 tie for a .722 percentage, including, for some unknown reason, the exact score of Nevada-Las Vegas' 35-21 triumph over Idaho. There are, however, better things to hit in Vegas. For the season, it's 454-181-13 — 710.

Arkansas at Texas A&M: It'll be standing room only in the press box with scouts from the Cotton, Orange, Sugar, Gator, Liberty, Fiesta, Bluebonnet and Sun Bowls expected for this battle between two high-powered offenses ... Texas A&M 31-24.

Brigham Young at Arizona State: The suspicion lurks that ASU Coach Frank Kush will find a way to outscore Marc Wilson, BYU's passing fancy ... Arizona State 35-28.

Texas Christian at Texas: The Longhorns have attained the No. 1 ranking despite the loss of quarterbacks Mark McBeth, Jon Aune and now Randy McEachern, the nation's most famous third-stringer. Saturday's hero will be untested freshman Sam Ansley, who has carried the ball all of 4 times for 4 yards and completed his only pass for 15.

"Somebody's got to play," says Coach Fred Akers. Play it again, Sam ... Texas 37-6.

Miami, Fla. at Alabama: You'd think 'Bama would let up now that it's clinched the Southeastern Conference crown, but Bear Bryant has his sights set on the national championship, too ... Alabama 42-7.

Colorado at Oklahoma: The Sooners broke their Wishbone quite often in swamping Oklahoma State 61-28 and Coach Barry Switzer says: "We've always had all the formations — the I, the Pro-Set, the Wishbone. We use whichever one we think will work the best." They should all work against crippled Colorado ... Oklahoma 34-20.

Indiana at Ohio State: Before the season, Indiana's Lee Corso quipped that he had Michigan "right where we want them — off the schedule." Unfortunately, the same doesn't hold true with ... Ohio State 35-7.

Michigan at Purdue: Will lightning strike twice? Purdue upset the Wolverines 16-14 last season and knocked them out of the No. 1 ranking. "There's no getting around it, we've got revenge on our minds," warns Coach Bo Schembechler. But freshman quarterback Mark Herrmann could make it closer than expected ... Michigan 31-21.

Kentucky at Florida: Kentucky's Fran Curci remembers a 1971 game when he was at Miami and Florida deliberately yielded a touchdown in the final moments so they could get the ball back for John Reeves to set a national career pass yardage mark. Reeves' 33 completions in that 45-16 rout is a school record and Curci finally gets even ... Kentucky 35-14.

Temple at Penn State: State has won the last two meetings 26-25 and 31-30. Enough is enough ... Penn State 37-6.

Pitt vs. Army at East Rutherford, N.J.: This is the best Army team in at least five years, but the Panthers may be even better than last year's national championship club ... Pitt 42-14.

Kansas at Nebraska: "I would think if we beat Kansas we would be assured of going to a bowl somewhere," says 'Husker Coach Tom Osborne. Right you are, coach ... Nebraska 40-14.

Southern California at Washington: With an unaccustomed three setbacks, this just hasn't been USC's year. But there they are tied for the Pac-8 lead with Washington and UCLA and favored to make it back to the Rose Bowl. When a favorite loses, that's an upset. And this is the Upset Special of the Week ... Washington 30-28.

Memphis State at Florida State: FSU is a bowl contender, but has three tough games left with Memphis, San Diego State and Florida ... Florida State 24-14.

Harvard at Yale: Harvard Coach Joe Restic says it's "the only time in Ivy League history" that such rivals as Brown and Dartmouth are rooting for the Crimson. That's because if Harvard beats Yale and Brown beats Columbia and Dartmouth beats Penn, the Ivy race will wind up in a four-way tie. Sorry, folks ... Yale 21-13.

Conley Tops Panthers

Later in the period, Jeff Allen tossed nine yards to Tim McClanahan for a second tally. Phillips again kicked for a 14-0 lead at intermission.

North Pitt came back in the third period to score its only touchdown. That came on a 48-yard pass from John Hunt to William Knight.

The Vikings got it right back when Bernard Hawkins raced 70 yards with the kickoff to rush back to a 22-6 lead after McClanahan picked up a two-point conversion.

McClanahan finished off the scoring in the fourth period with a 10-yard pass from Allen.

The game closed out the season for both teams. Conley finished 4-6 overall and 3-4 in the league, while North Pitt was 2-8 overall and 1-6 in Eastern Carolina Conference play.

How Tar Heel Representatives, Senators Voted

By Roll Call Report
WASHINGTON—Here's how area Members of Congress were recorded on major roll call votes October 27 through November 2.

HOUSE
PANAMA CANAL—Rejected, 188 for and 215 against, an amendment seeking to impede U. S. financial assistance to Panama. It sought to require congressional approval of the Overseas Private Investment Corp. (OPIC) guaranteeing $20 million in loans to Panama's national development bank.

The proposed loan guarantee is not part of the new canal treaties but has been agreed upon by treaty negotiators as one of the financial inducements the U. S. has offered the Panamanians. This was the first House vote on the Panama Canal issue since the new treaties were signed. It was proposed to HR 9179, a bill extending the life of OPIC until Sept. 30, 1981. OPIC is a government corporation that insures certain foreign investments by U. S. companies and guarantees loans by U. S. banks to developing countries. HR 9179 was later passed and sent to conference with the Senate.

Rep. Philip Crane (R-Ill.), the sponsor, said his amendment was "appropriate inasmuch as the American people have a tremendous investment in the Panama Canal and they ought to be party to any arrangement that would so drastically affect the future of that investment."

Rep. Clement Zablocki (D-Wisc.), an opponent, said adoption of the amendment "would prejudice the outcome of the debate on the Panama Canal before the Senate, and, indeed, before the American people have had an opportunity to explore all of the ramifications of the provisions of the respective treaties."

Members voting "yea" were expressing their dislike of the Panama Canal treaties.

Reps. Walter Jones (D-1), L. H. Fountain (d-2), Charles Whitley (D-3), Stephen Neal (D-5), Charles Rose (D-7), James Brodyhill (R-10) and Lamar Gudger (D-11) voted "yea."

Reps. Ike Andrews (D-4), Richardson Preyer (d-6), W. G. Hefner (D-8) and James Martin (R-9) voted "nay."

HOUSE TV Adopted, 342 for and 44 against, a resolution (H Res 866) in favor of moving ahead with the plan for live, nationwide broadcast coverage of floor proceedings. This vote directed in part that closed-circuit TV coverage of the floor be viewed in all committees and members' offices and at selected other outlets, as a prelude to coverage that eventually will be watched daily by the population at large.

The resolution stopped short of finally approving full-fledged broadcast coverage, deferring that decision until completion of a Rules Committee study to answer questions such as whether the networks or the government should control the cameras. The study is due Feb. 15, 1978.

Rep. B. F. Sisk (D-Calif.), a supporter, said that broadcasting floor proceedings would "allow the people of this country to be better informed about the actions of their elected representatives... Our democratic system... is predicated on an informed electorate."

None of the opponents spoke up during debate. Among objections they have cited in recent months is fear that the television cameras would induce grandstanding by members.

Members voting "yea" generally favored live broadcast coverage of the House floor.

Jones, Fountain, Whitley, Andrews, Neal, Preyer, Rose, Hefner, Martin, Brodyhill and Gudger voted "yea."

SOCIAL SECURITY Passed, 275 for and 146 against, a bill (HR 9346) to strengthen the shaky financial condition of the Social Security trust fund and make other improvements in the government-run retirement system. It was sent to the Senate. In order to raise an additional $214 billion for the trust fund over the next 10 years, the wage base upon which payroll taxes are levied was raised by the bill; also raised were the rates at which employers and employees are taxed. Under another major provision, for the first time in its 42-year life, the Social Security system may turn to general Treasury funds if trust fund reserves run perilously low.

Rep. Louis Stokes (D-Ohio), a supporter, called the bill "a giant step in addressing the financial problems of the Social Security system."

Rep. John Rhodes (R-Ariz.), the GOP leader in the House, called it "a bill supported by the Democratic majority which will result in a tripling of the Social Security taxes paid by American wage earners and employers" and place "an onerous tax burden on the people of this country."

Members voting "yea" favored passage of the bill.

Jones, Fountain, Whitley, Andrews, Neal, Preyer, Rose, Hefner, Martin, Brodyhill and Gudger voted "yea."

SENATE
ENERGY Adopted, 51 for and 37 against, an amendment to levy a user's tax on oil and natural gas to encourage industries and utilities to convert to coal. The amendment was attached to HR 5263, the taxation segment of the Administration legislation to establish a national energy policy. The bill was later passed and sent to conference with the House. The tax approved by this vote would apply, with exceptions, to existing boilers capable of being converted to coal, as well as to virtually all new boilers built by industries and utilities. The tax would begin at 60 cents per gallon and rise gradually to $6.00 per gallon.

Sen. Howard Metzenbaum (D-Ohio), the sponsor, said his amendment would provide "a gas and oil users' tax that is realistic... It says that those who can do it (convert) should have to pay a tax if they do not do it."

Sen. Russell Long (D-La.), an opponent, termed it "a prohibitive tax" which, among other problems, would dislocate some industries by forcing them to move to dirty-air zones that could legally tolerate coal-burning.

Senators voting "yea" favored the oil and gas users' tax.

Sen. Robert Morgan (D) voted "yea" and Sen. Jesse Helms (R) did voted "nay."

THE OTHER BUSING Eliminated, 43 for and 42 against, a proposed tax credit for the inter-city bus industry. The energy taxation bill (HR 5263, see above vote) had called for $200 million annually in tax credits to the industry, in hopes of making bus travel more attractive and thus saving the nation energy. This vote killed that language. The two conglomerates of which Greyhound and Trailways are a part account for 75 to 80 per cent of all inter-city passenger miles and revenues, it was stated in floor debate.

Sen. John Heinz (R-Pa.), sponsor of the amendment, said it was "taking from the poor and giving to the rich" to "take from the taxpayers of this country $1 billion over the next five years and give to two of the largest conglomerates in the United States."

Sen. Russell Long (D-La.), an opponent, said he feels the industry needs a tax credit to attract riders because his wife "tells me today she would not be caught in one of those terminals, she would not feel safe, she would not feel clean, she would not be caught on one of those buses, even though she rode them most of her life."

Senators voting "yea" were opposed to the tax credit for inter-city buses.

Morgan voted "yea" and Helms voted "nay."

SOCIAL SECURITY Tabled, 74 for and 16 against, an attempt to shore up the Social Security trust fund general Treasury revenues. The vote came during consideration of the Social Security Amendments of 1977 (HR 9346), a measure headed for final passage and conference with the House. The bill would, in part, increase payroll taxes on employers and employees in order to raise revenue necessary for the trust fund to meet its obligations. This vote in effect killed a proposal that at least four per cent of the additional money to be raised by HR 9346 come from general revenue rather than higher payroll taxes.

However, the House has voted to allow general revenues to bolster the trust fund, and the issue will be decided in conference.

Sen. Russell Long (D-La.), a supporter of tabling, said "there is no general revenue to pay for ... the general revenue funds this year are minus $60 billion... After a while you will find that you cannot run the printing presses as fast as the value your money declines, and you will meet yourself coming back."

Sen. Thomas Eagleton (D-

Mo.), an opponent of tabling, said that with the proposed major increases in payroll taxes the Senate and the House "have raised Social Security taxes beyond the breaking point for the average American worker and employer. We are simply asking too much from these people."

Senators voting "yea" were opposed to letting general revenues bolster the Social Security trust fund.

Morgan and Helms voted "yea."

A Fisher Wood Stove Could Be Your Second Most Important Fixture!

Wood is a renewable source of energy. When used in a Fisher Stove it reduces your fuel costs dramatically — and conserves other resources. Wood is friendly too. It communicates in lively tones when burning and gives off a sweet aroma. Wood is challenging. Cutting and stacking it is good exercise. And using it teaches you pioneer skills. The Fisher Stove people learned these skills in order to create a new type of stove and fireplace that would let you make a safe and enjoyable transition to wood heat.

Fisher Products have:

- Welded steel plate construction for a strong, airtight firebox
- Brick-lined firechamber for durability and for holding and dissipating heat efficiently
- Threaded draft controls for slow, steady, economical burning
- Heavy cast-iron door with triple seal to eliminate fire hazards
- Two surfaces with different temperatures for cooking.

'Status Quo' Prevails In U.S. Election Picture

By DON McLEOD
AP Political Writer

The big winner in Tuesday's elections was the status quo, frustrating for another year Republican hopes for a comeback from 1976's low-water mark.

The two parties split the only two gubernatorial races and Democrats swept most city hall contests as usual.

Brendan Byrne, the Democratic governor of New Jersey who was so far behind a few months ago he almost gave up, scored a surprisingly easy victory over Republican Raymond H. Bateman.

In Virginia, the Republicans kept the governor's chair for a third straight term with equally unexpected ease as Lt. Gov. John Dalton swamped liberal Democrat Henry Howell.

And in New York City, Democrat Edward Koch led a national trend for his party as he ran away with the mayor's race.

Liberal party nominee Mario Cuomo, who lost to Koch in the Democratic primaries, ran a respectable second, but Republican Roy Goodman and Conservative Barry Farber were far out of it.

"We're keeping what we had," said Kenneth Curtis, the Democratic party's national chairman, "and given the substantial numbers we had already, that's good."

"Given the circumstances under which Brendan Byrne had to win, his victory bodes particularly well for the 1980 elections," Curtis said.

Byrne, 53, was so far behind in the polls six months ago that he almost decided not to seek re-election. But he weathered a serious challenge in the Democratic primary and then closed steadily on Bateman.

The state's income tax, enacted under Byrne's prodding, became the leading issue of the campaign, with Byrne standing by it and Bateman saying he would veto any effort to extend the tax beyond its

June 30 expiration.

As the Republicans were taking the Virginia governorship, the Democrats were developing a young star in Charles Robb. The son-in-law of the late President Lyndon B. Johnson was elected lieutenant governor on a large number of split ballots.

Dalton's chief thrust was the oft-repeated charge that Howell, a populist who pitched his campaign as much against the state's largest electric utility as against the Republicans, was too liberal for Virginia.

It was the third unsuccessful gubernatorial bid by Howell, a former lieutenant governor, but an especially sweet victory for Dalton, 46, whose father had failed in two bids for the governorship.

Democrats retained control of the legislatures in New Jersey and Virginia.

The elections left the Democrats with 37 governors and the GOP with 12, the record low for the modern era to which it slipped last year. There is one independent governor.

The New York election reaffirmed the Democrats' secure position in the nation's largest city. They had ousted their own incumbent in the primary, largely because of the city's financial problems under Mayor Abraham Beame.

Koch, 52, beat Cuomo twice to gain the nomination and built up a massive lead in the public opinion polls after Cuomo decided to continue the contest under the Liberal banner.

In other important races Tuesday:

—Coleman Young, Detroit's first black mayor, easily won a second four-year term over challenger Ernest Browne Jr. It was the only major election Tuesday in which both candidates were black.

—In Houston, Frank Briscoe, a former district attorney, and former councilman Jim McConn captured spots in the Nov. 22 mayoral runoff.

—Maverick Democrat Dennis Kucinich claimed victory in Cleveland over party regular Edward F. Feighan. Republican Mayor Ralph Perk had lost his re-election hopes in an earlier round.

—Democrat-Conservative James D. Griffin was elected mayor of Buffalo, quenching the hopes of Democratic nominee Arthur O. Eve to become the city's first black mayor.

—Albert Hofstede, choice of the Democratic-Farmer-Labor party, ousted independent Charles Stenvig as mayor of Minneapolis.

—Maurice Ferre easily won re-election as mayor of Miami.

—J. Phillip Richley returned the Democrats to power in Youngstown, Ohio, for the first time in eight years.

—Erastus Corning II, the longest serving mayor in the nation, easily won a 10th term in Albany, N.Y.

—Lee Alexander, Democrat and president of the U.S. Conference of Mayors, won a third four-year term in Syracuse, N.Y.

—Isabella Cannon, a 73-year-old retired librarian, became the first woman mayor of Raleigh, N.C.

—Independent Richard Caligiuri won election as mayor of Pittsburgh, beating Democrat Tom Foeser and Republican Joseph Cosetti.

—In Seattle, a one-time television commentator, Charles Royer, defeated former city official Paul Schell in the race for mayor.

—Democratic mayors were re-elected in Bridgeport, Hartford, New Haven and Waterbury, Conn., while the Republican mayor of Stamford, Conn., narrowly won a second term.

Tobacco Land May Need Added Lime

Tobacco growers need to take a closer look at liming of tobacco soils, according to L. Gaylon Ambrose, assistant agricultural extension agent.

"Lime has not been a high priority item for tobacco growers in the past. The crop can tolerate a relatively low pH, and tobacco diseases such as black shank and black root rot can be made worse by too much lime," said Ambrose.

Soil analysis conducted by N.C. Department of Agriculture in 1976-77 showed 44.8 percent of tobacco fields sampled in Pitt County needed lime, said Ambrose.

He added that within recent years, skepticism has developed regarding the traditional belief that a pH of 5.0 to 5.5 is optional for producing best quality tobacco.

According to Ambrose, there is a greater need for supplying calcium through a liming program.

"The use of dolomitic lime to keep the soil pH of tobacco fields in the desirable range of 5.5 to 6.0 has many advantages," said Ambrose.

He added that lime reduces the risk of aluminum toxicity "which reduces root growth, increased absorption of certain nutrients, and increases the quantity of available calcium and magnesium.

According to Ambrose, if pH is kept within the desirable range by using dolomitic lime, additional magnesium in the fertilizer will more than likely not be needed.

"Lime application should be based on soil analysis. A good liming program will improve the alternate crops being grown in rotation with tobacco and will improve the general fertility and productivity of the soil."

LCC Plans New Quarter

SNOW HILL — A large variety of courses are to be offered at the Greene County Unit of Lenoir Community College, with pre-registration now underway for the quarter to begin November 28.

Formal registration will be held from November 28 through December 9.

No Tears In Suicide Case

MOCKSVILLE, N.C. (AP) — There were no tears for Daniel R. Webster, a convicted murderer who committed suicide, from the parents of the woman Webster admitted killing.

"He's a mean thing. He killed my child and he deserved to die," Ethel Beauchamp said of Webster, who died late Sunday after slashing his throat and an arm while he was in a death row cell in Central Prison.

Webster, 51, admitted killing his wife, who was the Beauchamps' daughter, and at his trial last month he pleaded for a death sentence.

"She was all we had and he took her in our old age," Mrs. Beauchamp, 76, said of her daughter, Gladys.

Major Beauchamp, 81, sitting in the parlor of his two-story frame farmhouse, said Webster's death was "a relief to me."

"I know that if he'd ever got off (from the death sentence) and he run, he'd of come here to get us. That's what he aimed to do when he killed our daughter."

The Beauchamps said they had tried to accept the man their only child had chosen to marry after she became a widow. But Webster never became part of the close-knit family and dominated his wife, the Beauchamps said.

"Once I walked up to her in the kitchen, put my arms around her and said, 'You're mama's baby,'" Mrs. Beauchamp said. Webster retorted, "She ain't no baby, she's a woman and she's mine," according to Mrs. Beauchamp.

But Webster's court-appointed lawyer, Gilbert Davis of Mocksville, said he did not think Webster was "as mean a man as he led the court and reporters to believe."

Davis said he was shocked by Webster's death.

"I just didn't think Daniel would do this. It disappoints me," he said.

Gaylord Portrait

A portrait of Louis Woodson Gaylord, Esq., former Greenville attorney, was presented to the Pitt County Board of Commissioners in ceremonies Monday noon in the Pitt County Superior Courthouse.

Marvin K. Blount Jr. made the presentation and the Honorable Charles Gaskins accepted it in behalf of the commissioners who were present.

Jill Lynn Painter and Richard Warren Gaylord III unveiled the portrait of their grandfather.

The Honorable J.W.H. Roberts, retired district judge, made a short speech on Gaylord's service to the community and his successful career as an attorney.

The portrait will hang in Superior Court.

Schools Fail Bridge Gap

By ROBERT MUSEL
LONDON (UPI) — In the bright new world that was supposed to follow World War II, British educators, taking equality as their banner, marched behind a succession of worthy ideas intended to narrow the gap between the working classes and the middle class.

More than 30 years later a study in the sociology magazine New Society finds their ideas littering the field of battle along with all the other casualties since R.H. Tawney proclaimed in a book published in 1931 that "the hereditary curse upon English education is its organization along lines of social class."

The magazine says that financial barriers to access to higher education have been removed and the chances of able youngsters proceeding to university are greater today than in 1945. But, it went on:

"At the end of it all, the proportion of university students who come from working-class backgrounds is scarcely higher than it was 50 years ago."

This failure of egalitarian policies, it says, is the greatest single postwar defeat for the liberal approach to social problems.

"The educational gods that failed" is the New Society headline. And the dissatisfaction with British education as it stands spilled over into the lay press with a stinging editorial in the Sunday Times headlined, with some justice, "What schools next?"

The Sunday Times critique was directed at the comprehensive schools, the backbone of the governing Labor party's educational program. These were intended to be classless schools large enough to teach all subjects to all pupils. Once installed everywhere, they would signal the end of the more elite grammar schools and the famous public (actually private) schools, which would have to change or lose preferential tax status and other advantages.

"Vast and chaotic, the worst of them have achieved the opposite effect from what their creators intended," the newspaper said. "Far from giving every individual child a new and fair chance, these have depersonalized education, lowered teaching standards and made school an unhappy place to be."

Some public schools succumbed to the government threats, but many others raised their fees to make up for the loss of official grants and stayed in business as parents, unhappy about the comprehensives, applied for places in record numbers. They were supported by the opposition Conservative party, whose own plan for education was a mixture of schools with greater opportunity for parental choice.

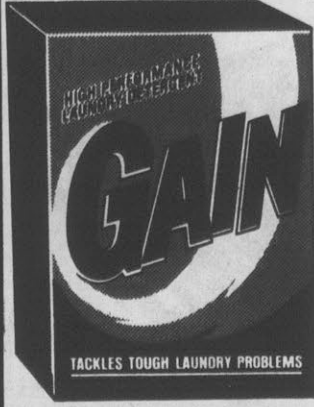

"Small is beautiful and is being acknowledged as such," said the Sunday Times, pointing out that even Education Minister Shirley Williams is now in favor of a more varied setup. What caused some dismay among educators and parents was the latest version of the comprehensive which would abandon the practice of "streaming" — taking note of the different abilities of students in arranging learning plans. In these schools, no student would "fall" but would simply receive a lower grade certificate.

This idea enthused New Society no more than others which have been and gone. Nursery education, it said, is now known to make no difference to the school attainments of working-class children. Ditto the "look and say" method of teaching reading to preschool children. And the early teaching of foreign languages to 8 year olds.

"The British still shout at foreigners in English," said New Society.

Sees Increased Electricity Use

READING, Pa. (UPI) — Homeowners facing growing oil and gas shortages are turning to electricity to heat their homes and water, and to cook their meals.

This trend emerges in a General Public Utilities survey of some 60,000 householders in New Jersey and Pennsylvania. The number of those surveyed using natural gas and oil to heat their homes declined, while the number using electricity increased two percent, compared with a year earlier study, explains Robert W. Smith, GPU's consumer affairs manager. He said the same pattern emerges for water heating and cooking.

Insider's View Of 3 Murders Is A Big Seller

By SUSAN LINNIE
 Associated Press Writer
 PHILADELPHIA, Miss. (AP) — The best selling book these days at Harold Richardson's store is an "insider's" view of the civil rights murders that heaped infamy on this little town.

"I'll bet I've mailed copies to people's relatives all over the country," Richardson said, estimating he has sold at least 400 copies in all. "A lot of folks want to see what Florence has to say about people in town."

The book, published in August, is Florence Mars' "Witness in Philadelphia." Unlike other accounts of the 1964 deaths of Michael Schwerner, James Chaney and Andrew Goodman, it is the work of a prominent white resident whose family can be traced back four generations in Neshoba County.

It is as much a description of the author's dismay at disquieting aspects of her own well-bred society as it is the account of a drama that touched the life of everyone in town.

The three civil rights workers came to Neshoba County from Meridian to investigate a fire at a black church. They were arrested for speeding in Philadelphia, paid a fine and were released. They headed south out of town and were never heard from again.

Whites who were teen-agers at the time of the murders said they knew very little about what had happened until they read the book. And blacks are openly enthusiastic about it.

In general, whites are still defensive about what most refer to as "the incident" or "the case." They are quick to point out that only two men from Neshoba County were among the seven convicted in 1967 on federal charges of conspiring to deprive the dead men of their civil rights. The state of Mississippi never brought charges against any of the 18 defendants.

"I don't think people in the rest of the country realize what a tremendous change both Mississippi and Neshoba County have gone through in the past 10 years," said Stanley Dearman, the white editor of the weekly Neshoba Democrat.

"There has always been a strong sense of community here, but the energy was channeled into other than constructive ways. The leaders didn't lead."

As an example, he noted that the town of 6,800 voted for the first time to legalize the sale of beer, although hard liquor is still illegal. There is general agreement that the vote of blacks, who make up about 30 per cent of the population, was decisive.

Lillie Jones and Beatriz Cole — two elderly black women who were active in the struggle for their own civil rights — are unreserved in their praise.

Both women helped Ms. Mars decide to write down what she had experienced when the town and the county, in the words of then assistant U.S. Attorney John Doar, "closed ranks behind the defendants."

Mrs. Cole — whose husband, Bud, was beaten and crippled by Klansmen the night they burned the church that brought the three young men to Philadelphia — said she felt relations between the black and white communities seemed "to be going backwards."

"I can't really explain why," she said, "but it seems there is little communication between us."

Neshoba County is a social mix with its black, white and Choctaw Indian communities living in separate spheres that converge on Saturday mornings around the square in Philadelphia or at the county fair in August.

But many people say there is virtually no social interaction between races. A young white man who ran unsuccessfully for mayor earlier in the year spoke of his apprehension when he carried his campaign to the black part of town.

Betty DeWeese, a white woman who was 13 when the murders occurred, and her husband Fenton, son of a former mayor, agreed that for some reason they are in the age group most affected by or most curious about "the incident."

A school friend is working on a film that details the reactions of his contemporaries to the murders.

Mrs. DeWeese says there is great frustration over the lack of channels of communication. She said she feels she can "never get a straight answer about anything — at least not if it's controversial."

"And that's what the book brought out," she said. "In many ways that's why it happened. There was no place anyone could go to find out what was really going on. My mother says, 'Why bring it all up again?' I say you have to bring it out — open up lines of communication — so that something doesn't happen again."

In her epilogue Ms. Mars writes that Neshoba County whites are still hostile to any reference made to the murders, and resentful that the press always brings them up in writing about the community.

"They make no connection, apparently, as do the blacks, between these three deaths and the changes that have taken place in the community," she writes.

And DeWeese — whose family's car bearing Neshoba County tags was heckled in New York City in 1964 — shakes his head.

"That's the puzzling thing," he said. "Why do we feel this way? Why aren't more people affected?"

GENERAL TENDENCIES: You could have an urge now to act in an unpredictable manner which would be most unwise, so when these impulses arise, sit back, watch what is happening and go along with the situations.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) A new plan has you stymied, but proper analysis proves you will benefit in the long run. Be wiser where money is concerned.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Try to understand a co-worker better and increase harmony in your line of endeavor. Improve your position with mate.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) This is an excellent day to make rapid strides in career matters. Put new ideas in operation and gain the rewards in the days ahead.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) If you accept a sudden invitation now, you will gain many benefits. Avoid a tendency to spend money foolishly.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Use reason at home and increase harmony, since a display of temper would only do harm. Try to please family members.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Contact the right person early in the day and obtain the data you need. Don't take risks with your reputation at this time.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Don't be disturbed if your financial affairs are not going quite right now. Conditions will change in your favor in the days ahead.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Use modern methods to gain success with new interests. Make long-range plans to have a more satisfying social life.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Concentrate on a course of action that will provide you with greater abundance in the future. Think constructively.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) A good friend may act in a dramatic way but can be helpful with ideas, so listen carefully. Take good care of your health.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Forget about an erratic impulse that could lead you astray. Show others that you are an excellent citizen. Be logical.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Look into new interest that fascinates you but don't rush into anything without due thought. Concentrate on getting ahead.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will have many unusual abilities but should be given an education that stresses orthodox methods before putting unique ideas into operation. Don't neglect good religious training early in life. There is musical talent in this chart.

'Charlie' The Swinger Is Very Domesticated

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — In every "Charlie's Angels," Charlie, the wealthy, hedonistic boss of the Angels, does out work by phone whilst dallying with well-built dolls. But his face is never shown.

ABC's press kit on the show doesn't even identify the actor who plays Charlie. This is called a gimmick in some circles.

The thespian, of course, is John Forsythe, 59, the urbane Broadway and film star from Carney's Point, N.J., who began his career a few decades back as a public address announcer for the old Brooklyn Dodgers.

Forsythe says his cover-up commenced two seasons ago when Aaron Spelling, a friend and producer of "Angels," asked him to read a script for the two-hour pilot of the show. As a favor.

"I read it and was not overly impressed," the actor admitted. "But I agreed to do it. They paid me a modest fee and I thought it would be shelved and pushed into oblivion."

So much for prescience. The series seems to be doing okay in the ratings, but Forsythe remains the show's best-known unknown.

This is because, he says, Spelling from the start felt an element of mystery was needed, "and he said, 'Let's not have your name on it, let them wonder who the voice of Charlie is.'"

"And I said, 'Well, that sounds terrific to me," said Forsythe, the on-camera host of the syndicated "World of Survival" series and the off-camera voice of commercials touting Michelob beer.

"Well, it proved as big a secret as Pearl Harbor. But we've kept up whatever ruse there is, even though I'm not at all sure the whole world doesn't know Charlie is me."

"I'm constantly amazed at the show's ratings, all those people tuning in to listen to me," he mused, fully aware no one tunes in to see Kate Jackson, Jaclyn Smith or Cheryl Ladd romp about.

Oddly enough, the man who plays Charlie the swinger considers himself one of Hollywood's most domesticated citizens.

The father of three kids, he's been married to the same woman for about 30 years, he says, and still lives in the same house he bought in 1957 when he moved here to star in the "Bachelor Father" series.

His idea of Hollywood whoopee consists of tennis, waging a few bucks on horse racing, "and modest dinners with good booze, good wine and good talk."

Another oddity: he's met Farrah Fawcett-Majors, now the best-known ex-star of "Angels," but never the three current main events of the series.

Still Cut Off Due To Floods

By The Associated Press
Hundreds of flood victims were still cut off by damaged roads and bridges today and hundreds more remained homeless three days after flash flooding devastated western North Carolina.

Damage estimates in the millions of dollars began coming in Tuesday as the sun shined for the first day since the flooding and state-paid workers helped flooded communities scrape away the mud.

The flooding, spawned by violent thunderstorms Saturday and Sunday, has claimed 11 lives. The latest victim was Conley Blakenship, 71, found Tuesday in Madison County's Laurel Creek, where he landed after apparently missing a curve in Saturday's rain.

Red Cross officials said floods destroyed as many as a dozen homes and 38 mobile homes, not counting hundreds more damaged and temporarily abandoned.

Deputies in Yancey County were trying without success Tuesday to reach hundreds of people they said were still stranded.

"We have families we haven't even heard from," said deputy R.B. Edwards. "We have no roads in two sections of the county. We can't even get through to estimate what damage we do have."

Edwards said four-wheel-drive vehicles had been unable to penetrate the isolated regions, and the only contact had been through a National Guard helicopter which was surveying the damage and had removed some heart attack victims.

Edwards added that between 300 and 400 were still unable Tuesday to return home and were being housed in homes and schools. The deputy complained that neither the Red Cross nor any state agency had provided help.

Much of Yancey County remained without phone or power service Tuesday and Burnsville's water supply was severely curtailed.

Red Cross officials said they were still sheltering 25 or 30 families in Buncombe County, where damage was estimated at $12 million, not counting more millions in damage at the textile plant in flood-ravaged Enka.

Thirteen primary and hundreds of secondary roads were still closed Tuesday and many more had only one lane open to traffic, the state Transportation Department said.

The auction provided the only clue South needed to land a close no trump game on this hand from the Philip Morris European Cup competition.

North-South were employing weak no trump opening bids, so South elected to open one club. West introduced a shapely double and North stretched a mite to re-double. East, fearing that his side might end in a 4-2 fit, bid his diamond suit. Now South could show that he held the equivalent of a strong no trump opening by rebidding one no trump, and the auction proceeded to game.

West led his fourth best spade, and declarer captured the queen with the ace. The jack of hearts was taken by the king, ten and another spade, won by dummy's nine.

Declarer could now count eight tricks, and it seemed that the obvious way to try for nine was via a diamond finesse. However, West surely held the king of diamonds for his takeout double, and if he was allowed to score that card he would be able to defeat the contract by cashing his long spade. Therefore, declarer had to strive for an endplay. When East showed out on the third heart, the hand became crystal clear. This was the position:

Your play to the first trick could decide the fate of the contract! A writer once remarked: "There's no such thing as a blind opening lead, only deal opening leaders!" Patty Reported Sinatra Guest

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Patricia Hearst, reportedly a guest of Frank Sinatra in Las Vegas last weekend, registered with police as a convicted felon as is required, police records show.

Miss Hearst is free on $1.2 million bond pending her appeal to the U.S. Supreme Court of her conviction on bank robbery charges.

All felons planning to stay in the city for more than 48 hours are required to register, according to a local ordinance.

Miss Hearst attended one of Sinatra's shows at Caesars Palace and was said to have been at ringside for last Saturday night's heavyweight boxing match between Ken Norton and Jimmy Young.

Held Party At Center

A Halloween party was held at the Pitt County Mental Health Center recently for children who receive professional services there.

Children are referred to the Center by parents, physicians, schools and other agencies. A full range of professional services are available for them and their families. Outpatient services include psychiatric and psychological evaluations, individual and group therapy, medication when necessary, partial hospitalization, and a variety of ways of working with families.

Inpatient services are available through the Center, when needed. Emergency services are available day and night. Children's Services consult with other professionals or agencies and endeavors to assist in the coordination of activities in the community. This component of the center is staffed by highly trained professional persons. Currently, all of the Children's Service professional staff have masters or doctoral degrees. In addition, two child psychiatrists work with the staff on a part-time basis.

Thieves Tricked By Nashville 'String'

By RICHARD LOWE
Associated Press Writer
NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) —

Swarms of police swept through Nashville this morning arresting thieves tricked into fencing stolen goods through a storefront clearinghouse run by undercover agents. Authorities hoped to bag more than 300 criminals.

"It looks good so far," U.S. Attorney Hal Hardin told reporters after the sweep began. "I think that at some time next week we'll still be looking."

"It may be the biggest operation in the country as far as the number of defendants," Hardin said earlier. "It's the old storefront operation — a typewriter repair shop. Thieves walk in and we've got cameras inside and out."

A "Sting Operation" patterned on an idea born in Washington two years ago, the storefront was equipped with two-way mirrors, videotape cameras and federal agents posing as Mafia fences. Hardin said it netted around $2.7 million worth of stolen merchandise.

About 300 police and 50 federal agents assembled at the Metropolitan Police Department's training center for pre-dawn briefings and moved out just before 4:30 a.m. (CST) to serve arrest warrants on indictments secretly issued Oct. 24. The first arrest, that of an unidentified young woman, was reported at 4:53 a.m. By 7 a.m. about 80 persons were in custody.

Chuck Lowe, a federal Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms agent, did much of the phony fencing in the storefront. "He's a fantastic actor — he's fabulous," Hardin said.

Business was so good the agents ran out of money and were forced to close in September. Lowe told the thieves his wife had died of cancer and hung a wreath on the front door.

ATF agents purchased stolen goods from customers filmed through the two-way mirror. "And we gave some of them a glass of whisky to get their fingerprints," Hardin said.

Financed by a $300,000 grant from the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration to Nashville police, the federal fences opened for business May 4. About $250,000 was spent on buys.

Some of the money went for business cards bearing the legend, "C.T. & T. Co. We buy and sell." The initials stand for "Catch Thieves and Thugs."

"We sent federal agents out on the streets and into bars and the word just spread," Hardin said. "The first customers got a better price for their stuff to keep them coming back."

Hardin said agents bought a variety of firearms, including 84 handguns, 301 long guns, 39 three-stick tubes of dynamite, 159 2½-foot tubes of eight-inch sticks of dynamite, nine boxes of blasting caps, two blasting machines and various rolls of detonating cords.

Other items bought ranged from pints of plasma to diamonds, stoves, televisions and stereo equipment, he said. Efforts will be made to trace the weapons and merchandise and to return them, with untraced weapons to be destroyed.

Nashville police, the U.S. Postal Service, the Secret Service, the FBI and the ATF participated.

"Eighty to 90 percent of the cases are state and Metro cases," Hardin said. "Ninety percent of the defendants have prior convictions, mostly felonies."

He said recovered firearms, checks and bonds fell under federal jurisdiction, while state cases involved vehicles, household appliances, credit cards and jewels.

"We're mostly concerned about the guns — convicted felons carrying guns," the prosecutor said. "The standard price for selling stolen goods is 10 percent of retail value, but we go higher with a weapon to get it off the street from a convicted felon. We don't want those guns going back on the streets."

"Once they opened for business, they had one or two customers almost immediately," Joe Brown, assistant U.S. attorney said. "They just turn in their item and get their money. But agents encouraged customers to call ahead for an appointment. There were about five people in the store operating during daylight hours. The ATF did all the buying with the thieves."

Brown said the major difficulty in the operation was identifying the customers once they were captured by film. "They come in and say they're Smoky, Red Carolina or Big Joe — something like that — and it's hard to identify them through fingerprints on glass unless we've got a set of ten prints."

Hardin said a real fence, a major one, sold guns and a trailer load of household appliances to agents.

"A lot of owners don't know the stuff has been stolen or recovered," he said. "If someone breaks into your home, you know about it and the things missing. But if you steal 10 cars from General Motors, they probably won't know about it for awhile."

The attorney said agents

Bodies Believed To Be From Lost Boat

OREGON INLET, N.C. (AP) — Coast Guard officials said efforts would be made today to positively identify the bodies of two men found in waters near here. The men were believed to have been aboard a 42-foot boat that left Crisfield, Md., last week.

A piece of debris matching the description of the cabin of the missing Mischievous II was found Tuesday, in addition to the bodies, the Coast Guard added.

The Coast Guard tentatively identified one body as 34-year-old Roland Thome of Annapolis, but the decomposition of the second body made a tentative ID impossible.

The North Carolina medical examiner is scheduled to conduct the autopsy in Chapel Hill, N.C.

Last Thursday, the body of L. Robert Riggle, 47, of Easton, was found on a sandbar in three feet of water near Avon, N.C., on the Cape Hatteras National Seashore.

Riggle and Thome along with Bert Wyles Jr., 23, of Satellite Beach, Fla.; and Thomas V. DiNatale, 35, of Reisterstown, Md., were on a trip to Florida to go deep sea fishing.

According to a Coast Guard spokesman, the debris made it appear that the boat was interested in a marine accident but said so far investigators "just don't know."

Arthur R. Thome of Annapolis, father of one of the men on board, has contended the boat was hijacked by drug runners. However, the Coast Guard refused to speculate on that theory.

Bert Wyles Sr., father of the boat owner and a navigation teacher at the Naval Academy, questioned that, noting the waters around Cape Hatteras are the "worst in the world."

According to Coast Guard records, the younger Wyles bought the boat last March from a Crisfield man for $35,000.

Tempting Items For A Portfolio

INTERSTATE SECURITIES CORP.

With investment interests these days centered around high yield or sheltering of income from taxes, it is little wonder that securities offering both of these characteristics are thriving. Unit trusts and tax-exempt mutual funds are doing just that.

Unit trusts have been around for many years and they now account for about $10 billion in assets (compared to $50 billion for stock mutual funds). A unit investment trust is a fixed portfolio of municipal bonds in which individuals can participate in units as low as $1,000. The tax-exempt interest from the portfolio is passed through to unit holders. Once the initial offering is completed, the portfolio does not change unless a bond is for some reason sold. If that occurs, proceeds are distributed to unit holders. The shares are not continually offered as in mutual funds. As bonds in the portfolio mature or are redeemed, the proceeds are distributed to unit holders. Secondary markets exist for the better unit trusts. If there is no secondary market in which to sell your participation, the units are redeemed by the sponsor at the bid price (not the offering price at which they are sold). If the most easily liquidated bonds are sold to pay off the withdrawing unit holders, others may be left with a less liquid, lower quality portfolio. As long as the portfolio remains fixed, the yield is also constant. Fees on the initial investment vary from one sponsor to another, and a small annual custodial fee may be charged.

Tax-exempt mutual funds, made possible by the Tax Reform Act of 1976, now total nearly $2 billion in assets. The biggest difference between these and unit trusts is that these funds have a managed portfolio. Units are continually offered and redeemed at net asset value, the same as for stock mutual funds. Minimum participation varies widely from $100 to $10,000 and fees on initial investments are comparable to the unit trusts. Managed bond fund portfolios can change substantially since bonds can be traded to take advantage of higher yields or changes in the overall bond market. For this, there is an annual management fee which will reduce the portfolio yield to the investor.

There are advantages and disadvantages for each type of security. The major advantage is a high tax-exempt yield. Unit trusts being issued today yield 5.5-6 percent yields on the managed mutuals are somewhat lower because of the management fee. Since this income is exempt from federal taxation, a tax free 5 percent yield is equivalent to a 7.34 percent yield on taxable securities if you are in the 32 percent tax bracket. In the 50 percent bracket, 5 percent tax free is equivalent to a taxable 10 percent. Both types of investments can be purchased in smaller denominations than individual municipal bonds, and a diversified portfolio can reduce risks. As in all other investments, there are also risks. Major among these are the lack of an aftermarket for some unit trusts and the risk of defaulted bonds.

Before you buy, find out just what you are buying. Look at the municipal bond portfolio to see what quality bonds are owned, and consider the fund's investment strategy. Don't chase the highest yield — it could mean lower quality bonds in the portfolio. The managers of a fund should be experienced in municipals and have the staff capable of the credit analyses required. Sales charges and management fees should not be ignored, since they will reduce the portfolio yield to you.

For a high yield portfolio from federal income taxation, unit trusts or tax-exempt mutual funds may be the answer, but investigate before you invest.

They Pay To Hear About Apocalypse

By HARRY ATKINS
Associated Press Writer
DETROIT (AP) — Hal Blay doesn't necessarily think "The End Is Near," but he has some idea what it's going to be like when it comes.

What's more, people are paying good money to hear his views.

Every Tuesday at a little past noon, Blay's classroom begins to fill with students taking his Humanities course through Wayne State University's College of Lifelong Learning. The title of the course is "Apocalypse: The End of the World."

Blay got the idea while doing research for other adult education courses he has taught, which studied the Bible as literature or probed Van Daniken's "Chariot of the Gods."

All of the courses have been filled to capacity, said Blay, a cherubic, 43-year-old, ordained Lutheran minister who recently became pastor of a congregation, relegating his teaching to part-time.

"I think mankind has always been interested in the unknown," he said. "He has always been a little afraid of it because of the fact that it is unknown."

He said he also thought recent occult movies like "The Exorcist" and sci-fi hits like "Star Wars" and "Logan's Run" have heightened the general interest in the unknown.

"I think the majority of mankind is rather insecure," Blay said. "And I think this (studying) might give mankind a sense of security in that these may not be actualities, in terms of the future, but they're definite 'maybes.'"

Blay does not approach his students as a prophet or guru. Rather, he introduces what has been written and lets the students make up their own minds.

"My idea is not to influence people, but to present the different concepts," he said.

Privately, however, Blay said he felt that in the next 150 years the world was "going to be altered almost beyond recognition or else plunged back in time, so that it's still going to be altered, because man in his stupidity decided to destroy himself."

"It could occur any time," he insisted. "It could happen tomorrow."

Blay defines apocalypse as a "gigantic change in the world — at least civilization as we know it."

He said he was certain the end would be violent and that many would not survive it.

"It could be overnight or an ongoing thing that could take decades, perhaps even centuries — which I should rather doubt," he explained. "If it is an ongoing thing, we could be witnessing our own apocalypse now."

He insists, however, that some will survive and mankind will prevail.

"Modern man is looking for whatever certainties he can find in a very uncertain world," Blay said. "And there are such things in terms of apocalypse — regardless of what that turns out to be. Nobody can tell me, for example, that a Third World War would not be apocalyptic. Anybody who said it could be 'limited' is insane."

Buildings Set

Ablaze By Cat

TOKYO (AP) — A man in the southwest Japanese town of Hagi got so angry at the stray cats around his house that he drenched one of them in kerosene and set it afire, police reported today.

The cat dashed into a pile of newspapers and started them burning. The man put out the fire, but the burning cat meanwhile crawled under a historic, 209-year-old wooden building next door which the government had designated a cultural treasure.

The building, a lodging for traveling merchants in the feudal era and a museum in recent years, burned down. The firemen found the body of the cat in the ashes, and an investigation led them to the man next door.

He was arrested on charges of arson.

GIANT FLOCK
JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (UPI) — The statewide giant Canada goose flock is estimated at somewhere between 7,000 and 10,000 birds, according to the Missouri Conservation Commission.

New Stereotype For Redheads

ALLIANCE, Ohio (AP) — Redheads, who have long been labeled fiery-tempered, now may have a new stereotype to live down.

According to a survey of 200 Utah college students, red-haired women are regarded as powerful while their male counterparts are seen as timid.

"The red-haired female is perceived as the executive or professional type, not very feminine and slightly aggressive," said Dennis Clayton, an assistant professor of psychology at Mount Union College, who surveyed students from Brigham Young University and Utah Technical College.

However, he added: "The red-haired male is seen as a timid, feminine, Bozo-the-clown type character."

The same sex differential didn't apply to findings on persons with other hair colors.

Now Computers, Ad Men, Brokers And Soil Techs

By RICHARD CHARNOCK
BOISE, Idaho (UPI) — Potato farming has come a long way since a Presbyterian missionary planted Idaho's first spuds back in 1836.

Henry Harmon Spalding recognized the great buffalo herds were dwindling so he planted potatoes at Lapwai to give the Nez Perce Indians an alternate source of food. Later, early-day settlers planted tubers and sold them to miners.

Today, the potato industry is big business in Idaho — farming and processing contributing a half billion dollars a year to the state's economy. As a cash crop it contributes more than $225 million even before processors take 60 to 75 per cent of the harvest to make french fries, potato chips and other potato products.

Those who grow the state's spuds are more than just dirt farmers. They are businessmen, agronomists, soil scientists. Many are college-trained. They use computers and need a stockbroker to be successful.

That dumb, old potato farmer irrigating in the rain, for instance, may not be so dumb — not if he is farming by computer. The crop's nutritional needs and its water needs already are programmed into the computer and the computer will allow for rain.

This year, the nation's potato farmers are producing a near-record crop of 350.5 million hundredweight. Idaho leads the way with a record crop estimated at 90.3 million hundredweight and the state has produced it during a drought.

Changes in potato farming have helped make Idaho — outproduced by a single county in Maine in the late 1940's — the top producer. Washington is second, Oregon third, California fourth. Maine is now number five.

During the past two decades Idaho has put more and more land into production. Through research conducted by the University of Idaho, it has improved the seed and the farming methods for better potatoes and higher yield.

Farmers use a computer to tell them when to plant, when to dig, when and how much to water. Technicians call on the farms once or twice a week to make soil tests, then feed basic data into the computer. A print-out is mailed to the farmer.

The farmers rotate their crops, potatoes one year, grain the next. They can store their harvests up to two years in a controlled atmosphere and spray the potatoes to inhibit sprouting.

An average size potato operation will take $250,000 in operating capital. In a good year, it can return as much as $90,000 on that investment. In a bad year, the farmer can lose as much.

Traditionally, most farmers will gamble half their crop on the open market and contract half. Some, and this is a point hotly in dispute in Idaho, play the futures market where potatoes are contracted for sale at a specific price at a later date.

"A successful potato farmer now almost has to have a broker to conduct his business," said G.H. Chambers, field editor of the Idaho Farmer-Stockman magazine.

Simple plot of Boise, is a farmer turned industrialist whose personal wealth is estimated at $500 million to $600 million. Under a government subsidy he developed a dehydration process during World War II.

Kids gave the industry a big push when they fell in love with french fries. But it keeps looking for new products. One of the newest was invented by an Idaho Falls man — a potato ring snack called "Crunchi-o's."

Farmers and handlers tax themselves to promote their products. They support a national potato promotion board with a one cent per hundred-weight tax and state commissions with taxes of two to three cents a hundredweight.

The national board tackles the institutional advertising and tries to persuade doctors to stop bad-mouthing the noble tuber.

"It stresses the nutrition value of potatoes, pointing out they are low in calories and they talk to people like the medical profession," Gordon

Randall of the Idaho Potato Commission said. "They've found physicians are not as nutritionally conscious as they should be. Potatoes aren't fattening, you know, it's what you put on them."

State commissions promote their own products — both in advertising and marketing. Interior Secretary Cecil D. Andrus used to go into the fields to make a televised pitch for the state's famous product when he was governor of Idaho.

Maine Gov. James Longley also has made out of state television commercials.

Idaho farmers have made their trademarked potato so well known they recently had to sue neighboring Washington to stop advertising the "Idaho" name. Idaho has put the slogan "famous potatoes" on its automobile license plates and advertises its equally famous skiing with posters advocating "ski the big potato."

Speaking of Your Health...

Lester L. Coleman, M.D.

'Looking' Into the Body

A fantastic bit of gall bladder surgery has just been reported from Japan. Dr. Masatsugu Nakajima, of the Kyoto School of Medicine, working with a team of colleagues, has been able to pass a tube through the mouth into the stomach and then, through a very tiny opening in the upper intestine (duodenum), can look directly into the gall bladder.

If this isn't dramatic enough, it is even possible to look through the opening into the pancreas with this procedure. It is also possible, in some instances, to see and actually remove a stone from the gall bladder.

All of this is made possible by fibre-optic instruments through which one can see anatomical structures that were previously visible only during surgery.

These same fibre-optic "scopes" have already allowed surgeons to look deeply within the brain, for diagnostic study. Through these miniature fibre-optic instruments, photographs of the stomach, the gall bladder and the intestines can be made. Small pieces of tissue can also be removed for biopsy study.

And all this is just the beginning of the endless possibilities for these fibre-optics. Virtually, every hidden recess of the lungs now can be studied.

Undoubtedly, these techniques will soon be available to doctors everywhere.

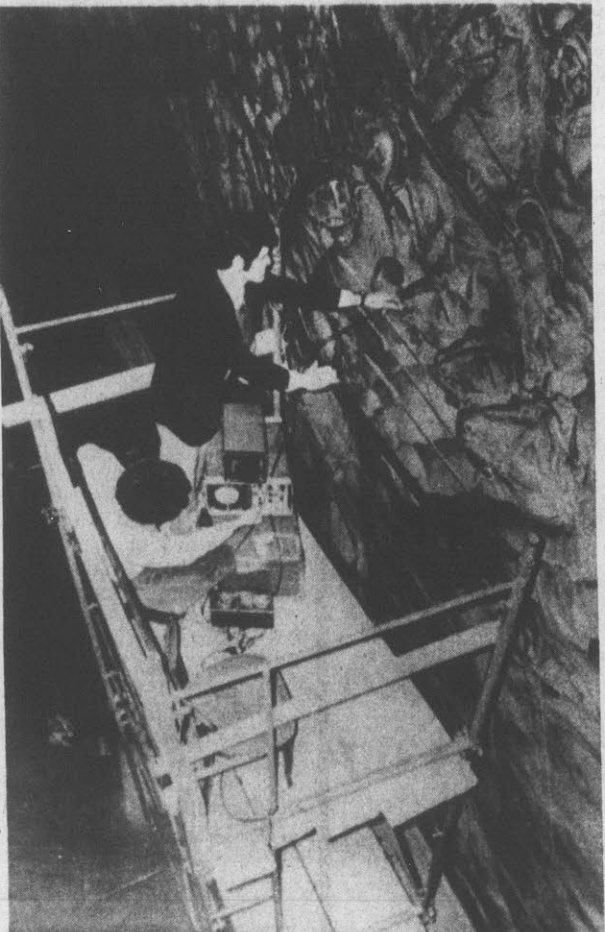

Diabetics who have difficulty in giving themselves shots of insulin can now use one of a number of automatic instruments to give themselves the injections.

They are simple and inexpensive. One is manufactured by the Support Systems Corp. The other is produced by the George Wright Industries. Diabetics can be directed for their purchase through their own doctors. For only after consultation with them, should the diabetic begin its use.

Dr. Max Ellenberg, of New York City, former president of the American Diabetes Association, says, "The automatic injection devices can be invaluable. The conventional method is best, of course. But if patients lack manual dexterity then they have no choice but to use these devices if they want to remain independent. In many cases they work quite well."

Some diabetics who may not easily manipulate needles for injections may tend to become careless about the regularity of their injections. For these people, the automatic instruments will probably be of enormous value.
