Invitation To Israel Is Sent Sadat; He's Ready

JERUSALEM (AP) — Prime Minister Menahem Begin today officially invited Egyptian President Anwar Sadat to visit Israel. Begin sent his written invitation through U.S. Ambassador to Israel Samuel Lewis.

In Cairo, Sadat said he is ready to go as soon as he receives the invitation. He called the trip, that he proposed last week, his "sacred duty."

Begin declined to show the content of the message to reporters, saying it would be discourteous to divulge it before it reached Sadat.

Asked how long it would take to transmit the message to Cairo, Lewis replied: "A few minutes."

Israel Radio said the invitation would probably be made public later in the day.

"I consider this trip as a sacred duty and that this vicious circle we are turning around in ... has to be broken," Sadat told reporters after a meeting with a U.S. congressional delegation at his Barrages rest house outside of Cairo.

"If I can break it and don't break it, I will be questioned about it. By whom? By God, and that is why it is sacred."

Sadat's proposed trip brought muted reaction in the Arab world and even the most militant Arab opponents of Israel were relatively subdued.

In Cairo, some citizens expressed support for their president's effort and saw it as a chance for peace and a better life. A bartender commented:

"What have our children seen of life except war? Let's try to give them a good life for a change."

In Israel the proposed visit stirred excitement and a general feeling that it was an earnest approach, but some continued to express skepticism.

It was the third time in a week that Sadat expressed his desire to go to the Israeli parliament. However, some congressmen said afterwards they were still doubtful whether he would actually go.

Same Suggestions To Be Given City Council

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer
The Redevelopment Commission is making several recommendations to the City Council for consideration in implementing the proposed South Evans Redevelopment Plan.

The commission agreed Monday night to forward a letter to the Council containing the same recommendations that were made to the Planning and Zoning Commission last month regarding the plan.

In the letter, the board will recommend that the city reconsider the acquisition of right of way along 14th Street to provide for purchases on the south side of the street or both sides rather than on the north side as proposed.

A recommendation will also be made that the city carefully review the proposed zoning changes on 14th and Evans Streets in order to provide the best land utilization for future growth and development.

In addition, the Council will be asked to consider the widening of Evans Street through the entire project. The street will be widened from Evans Mall to Tenth Street as part of the CBD program and the section from Tenth to 14th would tie in under the plan.

In view of the fact that the widening of Evans is an addition to the plan and the widening of 14th Street from Charles Street to Seaboard Coast Line Railroad was added since the original budget was developed for the plan, the commission is recommending that careful analysis of the budget be made.

The city is in the last year of (full funding under the Community Development program and next year, fiscal 1978, the funds allocated to Greenville will be reduced to some $1.27 million. In 1979, the funding is expected to total $636,000 in the final year of the program.

The commission earlier conducted a public hearing on the South Evans Plan, which involves an area bounded on the south by Norfolk & Southern Railway, on the west by Seaboard Coastline Railroad, generally by Tenth and 11th Streets on the north and by Charles Street on the east. Following the hearing,

Reveal Large Corn Sale To Soviet Union

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Soviet Union has bought 601,600 metric tons of U.S. corn, the second large reported grain sale to the Soviets within 24 hours, the Agriculture Department said today.

Officials said the corn was sold by private U.S. exporters for delivery by next Sept. 30, the end of the second year of a long-term agreement in which the Soviets are committed to annually buy a minimum of six million tons of wheat and corn combined.

The department announced Monday the sale of 100,000 tons of wheat to the Soviets, the first officially confirmed purchase of U.S. grain since a previous round of sales ended Sept. 19.

Counting today's corn purchase, the Soviets now have bought more than three million tons of grain for delivery in 1977-78, half of the minimum called for in the pact. The Soviet Union bought the minimum amount in the first year of the agreement which ended Sept. 30.

The United States has given the Soviets permission to buy up to 15 million tons of wheat and corn in 1977-78, and department officials say the full amount probably will be bought.

A metric ton is 2,205 pounds and is equal to 36.7 bushels of wheat or 39.4 bushels of corn.

Soviet grain purchases are expected to be much larger this year to help offset a reduced harvest, estimated at 194 million tons or 10 percent less than U.S. officials had forecast.

As is customary, the department did not identify the firms making the corn sale nor the prices involved.

Huge harvests of wheat and corn have built the U.S. grain stockpile to its highest level since the early 1960s. The export sales are welcome news to farmers, who have seen grain prices tumble the past couple of years.

U.S. grain surpluses are expected to rise by the time new crops are ready next year, even if the Soviets buy the full 15 million tons permitted by the agreement.

Officials said the corn sale announced today was previously included in exports to "unknown destinations" in department records. The switch from the unknown category to the Soviet Union was reported late Monday to the department, a spokesman said.

Residents Fleeing California Fires

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Residents fled their expensive, rustic canyon homes — or stayed behind to try to protect them — as a wind-whipped brush fire swirled through a suburban canyon.

"I told him (my husband) to grab some booze and our tennis rackets and get out of there," said Glenda Rosen, one of hundreds who fled Monday from the blaze which destroyed six houses, damaged three other dwellings and charred up to 600 acres of trees and brush.

Early today, Los Angeles County firemen told residents that cool moist breezes had replaced the hot Santa Ana winds and that the threat to their dwellings had subsided.

Sheriff's Sgt. Jack Innes said up to 30 persons had sought temporary refuge in an evacuation center set up at Palisades High School.

The fire was nestled today in the Santa Monica Mountains just above the Pacific Ocean, some 20 miles west of downtown Los Angeles. Before dawn the fire was concentrated in a largely unoccupied area of Topanga State Park, about two miles from the threatened residential areas.

Fire officials said it apparently was triggered by embers which blew over a mountain from an 80-acre brush fire Monday morning.

More than 700 firefighters and 130 fire engines from Los Angeles city and county and neighboring Ventura County fought the fire.

The gutted homes were located in a neighborhood called Sylvia Park Northern Topanga Canyon. Many of the evacuees came from the more heavily populated Palisades Highlands district within Los Angeles where the fire later spread Monday afternoon.

In both neighborhoods houses were worth as much as $500,000, fire officials said, and several of the residents were famous Hollywood personalities.

Actress Sissy Spacek, known for her roles in the films "Carrie" and "Three Women," was among those who decided to stay.

"We've been through this before," she said. "For years I've had all my hangers hanging in the same direction, in case of a fire in which I have to grab them in a hurry. You plan for these kinds of things."

Clash Over Visitor

WASHINGTON (AP) — Police and competing forces of demonstrators clashed violently as the Shah and Empress of Iran arrived at the White House today and tear gas wafted onto the lawn of the executive mansion during welcoming ceremonies by President Carter.

At least four police officers and 8 other persons were hurt as pro and anti-shah forces rushed one another just as the shah was arriving for his two-day state visit.

Mounted police charged into the crowds, on the Ellipse just south of the White House, and forced them back toward the Washington monument, using sticks and tear gas.

At least 10 arrests were reported, including two at a companion demonstration on the north side of the White House.

Fighting between hooded protesters, mostly Iranian students, and supporters of the shah continued in some areas of the monument grounds even after the ellipse was cleared. There also were incidents of shoving between the two forces on the north side, at Lafayette Park.

Though the disturbance was audible during the official welcoming on the White House grounds, Carter proceeded with the ceremonies on schedule.

Both he and the shah dabbed their eyes, apparently irritated by the tear gas that drifted even into White House offices and those of the Treasury Department, two blocks away.

The President formally apologized to the shah, a prime seller of oil and buyer of U.S. weapons, for the disturbances.

Exhibitors Set For Opening Big Tobacco Farmer Show

By DEBBIE JACKSON

The Farmers Tobacco Warehouse buzzed with excitement this morning as 193 exhibitors finished setting up their displays for the Second Tobacco Farmer Show.

The show which opened at 10 a.m. today will feature various tobacco equipment, fertilizers, and other farm related machinery.

According to Jim Swindell, show manager and a representative of Specialized Agricultural Publications, Inc., the farm show will cover approximately 210,000 square feet of the warehouse.

He added that exhibitors began setting up in the warehouse last Thursday.

"I'm looking forward to an extremely successful day," said Swindell.

Looking over the warehouse floor, he added, "You are looking at about $10 million worth of equipment."

Swindell said that in spite of the large number of exhibitors, several people were "disgruntled" about being turned out.

"Overall, I'm extremely pleased," he added.

Jeannette Perry, business manager for Specialized Agricultural Publications, Inc., said that the show has "just about any kind of farm equipment you can imagine, including tractors, bulk barns, and the latest model of tractors."

"Of special interest, is the crop duster that is on display," she added.

"The major manufacturers of bulk curing equipment are represented," said Stephen Denny, Specialized Agricultural Publications editor.

"The major tractor companies are represented and nearly all the chemical and fertilizer companies are here that have an interest in tobacco," said Denny.

He added that several farm-related organizations are represented at the show. Among these are the Flue-Cured Tobacco Cooperative Stabilization Corporation, the Future Farmers of America, and local 4-H groups.

Entertainment will be provided today by Grand Ole Opry star Kitty Wells, along with Johnny Wright, and the Tennessee Mountain Boys at 1 p.m.

Jerry Clower will return for his second year at the show tomorrow at 2:30 p.m. and again on Thursday at 10:45 p.m.

Refreshments will be available during the week from the Winterville Jaycees.

Swindell said that he expects approximately 100,000 people to attend the three-day show.

Doors open Wednesday and Thursday at 9 a.m. at the Farmer's Warehouse located on Greene Street, off Airport Road.

Voter Turnout

Last Tuesday's municipal voting here resulted in a turnout of 43 per cent of the total city registration, according to Margaret Register, supervisor of the Pitt Board of Elections.

Miss Register said that 4,716 citizens out of 10,923 registered who live inside the city limits voted in the City Council runoff election.

She reported that some 42 per cent of the total registration in the overall Greenville precinct, which extends beyond the city limits in several instances, voted last Tuesday. The total vote amounted to 5,184 out of a precinct registration of 12,367, she said.

In Pitt County, the various municipal elections attracted a total vote of 8,462 out of a registration of 17,845 or 47.4 per cent, the election official added.

The overall county vote on the state issues was 39.4 per cent, Miss Register noted, as 10,451 county residents voted out of a registration of 26,515.

FREE FIRE WOOD?

I remember in Hotline last year, there was an item about free fire wood being available at the Pitt County fairground. Is there going to be any program like that this year?

Yes, the Pitt County Commissioners have let it be known that anyone who will "cut his own" is welcome to get firewood from the county landfill site on the Allen Road between Highway 264 west of Greenville and the Stantonsburg Road. All one must do is check in at the gate any time between 8 a. m. and 4 p. m. Monday through Saturday. The county emphasizes that it is not liable for any personal injury or damage to equipment or vehicles sustained cutting wood or on the landfill site. The wood is free of cost.

Hotline has had at least one request already from a family which has no one physically able to cut wood and no money to buy any other form of fuel. We would like to know of groups or individuals who might be willing to cut wood for others in need.

Ayden Board Confirms Paving Assessments

By DEBBIE JACKSON
Reflector Staff Writer

AYDEN — The Ayden Town Board passed a resolution at last night's meeting confirming levies for paving assessments on several streets.

A public hearing was held prior to the vote on the resolution. Residents on Edgewood Street, Seventh Street, and Montague Street complained that the paving and curbing of these streets was inadequate in some places.

Homeowners noted cracked curbs, uneven grading of streets which caused poor drainage in last week's rain, and sunken pavement.

"It's about the poorest job I've ever seen," said Mayor Ross Persinger.

He stated that the town has a one-year guarantee with the Barris Company of Kinston, and that if residents are not satisfied after that time, the company will be called back to make repairs.

A public hearing was also held concerning the rezoning of two lots on West Avenue from R-8 to B-1. The resolution changing the lots to a business zone was passed.

The Board also received a petition from residents on Fenner College Street for street improvements. Town clerk Ralph Ford said that the petition contained 100 percent approval of the residents on that street. The Board passed a preliminary assessment resolution and scheduled a public hearing for Dec. 12.

In other business, the Board recommended the reappointment of Odell McLawhorn and the appointment of Marjorie Hart to a three-year term as members of the Planning Board. The Pitt County Commissioners must make such appointments.

Two bids were taken on a Nova Police vehicle. A bid from M&W Chevrolet was accepted at $5,435.44. Venter's Motor Company had also placed a bid of $5,727.

In further business, the Board tabled a resolution prepared by Pilot Life Insurance Company regarding the town's retirement system. The resolution was drawn up in order that the retirement plan meet the requirements of the Internal Revenue Service.

The Board adopted a resolution condemning a dwelling at 105 W. College St., saying that it did not meet the specifications of the Housing Code. Residents have been given previous notice of the code and no action had been taken to repair the building.

Town officials also adopted the audit report for the 1976-77 fiscal year of a $334,000 surplus.

At the recommendation of the Planning Board, the Town Board approved a conditional use permit to be given to Hennie Jackson to place a mobile home on her property on Joyner Street. A public hearing was set for Dec. 12.

The Board also approved a recommendation to submit preliminary application for improvements.

The Board also accepted the election results as approved by the Pitt County Board of Elections. The official count was Mayor Ross Persinger, 437 votes; Commissioner Speight, 364 votes; Commissioner Harris, 376 votes; Commissioner Dixon, 373 votes; Commissioner Brown, 429 votes; and Commissioner Mumford, 391 votes.

May Ask Campus Decline Grant

By MONTE PLOTT
Associated Press Writer
CHARLOTTE (AP) — Along with deciding how much money to spend next year and where to spend it, the Baptist State Convention meeting here will consider a proposal that Wake Forest University be asked to decline a large chunk of a $300,000 federal grant.

Some 6,000 Baptists from throughout the state were expected to attend the three-day meeting which began Monday. The Baptist State Convention represents about 1.1 million North Carolina Baptists.

A convention committee on Monday approved the controversial recommendation concerning the Wake Forest grant and sent the matter before the full convention for a hearing today.

The recommendation asks that Wake Forest not use part of a National Science Foundation grant to the biology department to build an $85,000 greenhouse.

Convention leaders who support the recommendation say that using federal money for construction of a building violates the convention's "services rendered" doctrine.

The doctrine holds that Baptist schools can accept government grants only if the money is used for projects which produce something that can be offered to the government in return for the money.

The Rev. John M. Lewis of

Raleigh, chairman of the Services Rendered Committee, said Monday that the recommendation was based solely on the convention's philosophy and there was no attempt to influence academic affairs.

University officials have said the school is entitled to the money.

The convention recommendation would have Wake Forest either return the $85,000 designated for the greenhouse or try to restructure the grant to use that money in other areas. The board of trustees would make the final decision.

Other decisions the convention must make include: —Whether to try to double baptisms by 1982 — from 26,000 a year to 52,000.

—Whether to double contributions for local, state and national missions and educational efforts by 1982 — from $12 million to $24 million.

—Whether to approve a $13.5-million budget for 1978, up $1.5 million from this year.

The Rev. Coy Privette of Kannapolis, president of the convention, examined the baptism issue and the Wake Forest situation in a speech to the convention Monday night.

The North Carolina convention has the poorest baptismal rate of any major state convention, he said, and "task forces" of lay people working in churches and on revivals may provide a solution.

As for Wake Forest, one of six colleges affiliated with the convention, Privette urged members to "just stay cool" while a committee studies the sometimes shaky relationship between the university and the convention.

But Privette said the convention should not lose sight of using its schools as tools in the ministry.

"If our schools are not to be an extension of the church," he said, "why have them?"

Elizabeth II Announces Arrival Of A Grandson

LONDON (AP) — Princess Anne gave birth to a 7 pound 9 ounce boy this morning, a day after her fourth wedding anniversary, and the baby's grandmother Queen Elizabeth II made the first announcement of his birth.

Arriving 10 minutes late for an investiture at Buckingham Palace, the queen told the crowd awaiting her:

"I apologize for being late but I have just had a message from the hospital. My daughter has just given birth to a son."

Both the 27-year-old princess and the baby were reported "fine."

The queen's gynecologist, George Pinker, had been called to the palace at 4 a.m. when Anne went into labor. After a quick examination, Anne's husband, Capt. Mark Phillips, drove her in their Rover sedan to St. Mary's Hospital in West London.

The baby was born at 10:46 a.m. Phillips, who had been present during the delivery, telephoned the queen, who talked to her daughter and then went to the investiture.

The baby is the queen's first grandchild and is fifth in the line of succession to the throne, after the queen's three sons and his mother. But since any sons born to his three uncles will take precedence ahead of his mother, his chances of occupying the throne are remote.

The baby is also the first grandchild of a ruling British sovereign to be born without a title. The palace made clear that his commoner father would not be given the courtesy title that in the past has been traditional on the birth of such royal babies, and Anne's title of princess confers no titles on her children.

The palace gave no reason for the break with tradition, but it was another step by the queen away from the pomp and circumstance of the past.

The queen was the only member of Anne's immediate family in London for the birth.

Her father, Prince Philip, was visiting relatives in Germany and the news was telephoned to him there.

Her older brother, Prince Charles, was visiting friends in the north of England, and her two younger brothers, Prince Andrew and Prince Edward, were away at school.

N.C. Mental Health Officers Elected

Officers of the N. C. Mental Health Centers Association were elected in Raleigh recently.

Re-elected president was E. J. Rankin, area director of the Cleveland County Mental Health Center, Shelby. Dr. E. J. Raman, area director of the Duplin County MHC, Kenansville, is vice president.

Mrs. Elizabeth Johnson, systems analyst, Information System, Division of Mental Health-Mental Retardation, Raleigh, is secretary-treasurer.

The group heard Ben W. Aiken, Director of the N. C. Division of Mental Health and Mental Retardation, tell that the state psychiatric hospitals now have fewer than 4,000 patients, whereas they had 10,000 15 years ago. He said a comparable decrease has been realized in mental retardation facilities. He credited improved community-based programs for the turnaround.

Five Collisions Here Yesterday

An estimated $6,230 property damage resulted from a series of five collisions investigated yesterday by Greenville Police.

Officers reported heaviest damage resulted from a 4:35 p.m. mishap on Memorial Drive at the Sylvan Drive intersection involving cars driven by Emily Patricia Lee of 1807 St. Andrews St., Mary Ann Dixon of Bethel and Lillian Etheridge Thomas of Route 1, Greenville.

Police estimated damage from the mishap at $4,000 to the Lee car, $400 to the Dixon auto and $200 to the Thomas car.

A 4:15 p.m. mishap on Wyatt Street, 50 feet East of the McClellan St. intersection involved cars driven by Sherrel Lee Clemons of 417 Wyatt St. and Jeffrey Carl Evans of Kinston. Damage was estimated at $50 to the Clemons car and $300 to the Evans vehicle.

Police charged Lee Norris Parker of 617 Hudson St. with careless and reckless driving and failing to stop for a blue light and siren following investigation of a 10:30 p.m. mishap at the intersection of Tenth Street and Grande Avenue.

Investigators reported the Parker car was fleeing a pursuing East Carolina University police vehicle at the time of the mishap. Officers said the Parker car failed to make a curve and collided with railroad tracks at the intersection resulting in an estimated $500 damage to the vehicle.

Cars driven by Michael Jordan Woolard of Route 5, Washington and Penny Sue Hartman of 201 Harvey Dr. collided about 3:45 p.m. on Memorial Drive, 300 feet South of the Dickinson Avenue intersection causing an estimated $100 damage to the Woolard car and $300 damage to the Hartman auto.

A 7:30 a.m. mishap on Cotanche Street, 25 feet South of the Ninth Street intersection involved vehicles driven by Janice Elizabeth Wedel of Charlotte and Cathy Lee Critchfield of 407 South Summit St.

Damage from the mishap was estimated at $375 to the Wedel car and $5 to the Critchfield vehicle.

Claims Adequate Fire Protection Lacking

ATLANTA (AP) — Adequate fire protection systems and evacuation training of employees might have saved most of the 164 people who died in a supper club fire in Southgate, Ky., in May, an investigator of the fire says.

Richard Best, a fire analysis specialist, told the nonprofit National Fire Protection Association's fall meeting here Monday that an electrical fire broke out in an unoccupied service room at the Beverly Hills Supper Club between 8:45 and 8:50 p.m. on May 28, but patrons in the Cabaret Room, where most of the victims died, weren't warned of the blaze by employees until 9 p.m.

Minutes later, when volunteer firefighters arrived, the Cabaret Room was blanketed with "tremendous smoke," he said, preventing many occupants from escaping.

"If there had been evacuation training for employees and a fire escape plan, that might have provided the extra minutes that would have allowed people to be evacuated," he said. "Not all who died there were originally in the Cabaret Room, but mistakenly entered in an attempt to escape from the fire," he said, adding that firefighters could not get into the room "because people were stacked in the doorway."

"The exits were not clearly indicated and beyond the double doors leading out (of the Cabaret Room) there was no indication of the direction to go," he said.

By 10:30 p.m., the club was in flames, and all firemen who were searching for victims were ordered evacuated, he said.

The club, which had between 2,400 and 2,800 patrons that night, did not meet the standards of the NFPA's Life Safety Code, Best said.

The number of people in the Cabaret Room — where singer John Davidson was scheduled to appear — was triple the number of occupants the room could safely accommodate, he said. Tables were packed together, chairs were located in the aisles and the number of exits was not adequate, he added.

"Fire protection consisted of fire extinguishers, no sprinklers and no smoke detectors" in the building, which was decorated with flammable hardboard paneling, carpets, drapes and chandeliers, he said.

Best said a building which is classified safe for more than 1,000 people must have passageways with flame spread factors of 0-20. The flame spread factor of the paneled main hallway of the supper club was 150-200, he said.

Flame spread factor is based on the flammability of the materials used in the structure, with zero being the least flammable.

The major causes of death from the fire were smoke inhalation and acute carbon monoxide poisoning, Best said, explaining that "some escaped the building, but then collapsed and died."

Joint Effort Works As Children Help Run Home

By JOY STILLEY
AP Newsfeatures Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Eleanor Berman admits that if it hadn't been a matter of absolute necessity, she'd still be doing the cooking and housekeeping and her children "wouldn't have been asked to do a thing."

But after her divorce she had to get a better-paying job than the part-time work she had been doing. That meant commuting to New York City from her Stamford, Conn., home. And commuting meant she'd get home late, as well as tired.

"The kids (daughter, then 10, sons 13 and 15) said they didn't want a 'baby sitter' and offered to take care of things and do the cooking," their mother related in an interview. "So we decided to give it a try."

That was four years ago, and the experiment worked out so well that Ms. Berman has written a book about it, "The Cooperating Family."

"It had never occurred to me that anybody could manage without me," she said ruefully. "But I discovered I had some very competent children. The boys really got into it; they looked through cookbooks and their menus were more interesting than mine, since I had gotten into a routine."

The whole family sat down after Saturday breakfast and planned the week's menus. At first Ms. Berman did the shopping but the kids, finding they didn't have the ingredients to make their sometimes exotic dishes, soon took that task over.

It was the older son, Tom, who cooked the first meal she remembers: veal parmigiana.

"The kitchen looked like a disaster area. Pots I hadn't seen for six months were strewn all over. But Tom was delighted. His brother, Eric, who had to do the dishes that night, was not so delighted."

Eventually it worked out that Eric was turning into a good cook and enjoyed it. Tom, who didn't like it, volunteered to do the dishes and let his brother do his share of the cooking.

"One reason it worked is because the kids had a say in the planning," says Ms. Berman, who thinks her setup can work in any family, whether it has a single or working mother or single father. She interviewed a number of people who were following similar plans with varying degrees of success.

"Some single fathers had involved their kids without thinking," she said. "Their typical comment was 'We all eat, don't we?' But many women found it hard to give up their burden. I think we are all programmed to believe that whether we're working or not, it's a mother who takes care of everything in the house: cooking, cleaning, laundry. Very few families ask the children to do anything."

Many women, she added, said it was too much trouble to get the youngsters to do the job right, or said that they felt guilty about asking them to help.

"You have to be a little more relaxed about what you want the house to look like," Ms. Berman advises. "Praise is the whole key. Kids basically want to please and if you let them know what they do matters, they feel good about themselves."

When setting up a program, she cautions, be specific and have a written routine, at least until it's established, to avoid fights over whose turn it is to do what. Rotate the bad jobs so nobody gets stuck all the time with something he hates.

If she were going to start over in raising a family, she'd do it differently, says Ms. Berman, who believes mothers who hope to have both family and career should train their children early to help.

"As soon as they're old enough to manage something, let them take over, even if they don't dust as efficiently as you. Gradually as they get older let them take over more responsibility," she urges. "We underestimate our kids."

Her son Tom, now 19, is in college, and Eric, 17, and Terry, 14, are sharing the work, but all three have learned from the experience, says their mother, a publicist and freelance writer who is working on a book on changing family life in America.

"They feel good about themselves participating almost on an adult level. They're so much more independent. Their position in the home has changed. My treatment of them has changed. Instead of being someone to take care of and do for, they're more like my partners."

SWEET LIP GLOSS
NEW YORK (UPI) — Hang the mistletoe, folks. A cosmetics manufacturer is adding two holiday flavors — candy cane and gingersnap — to its line of flavored roll-on lip glosses. The clear glosses add shine and flavor without color. They contain a sunscreen and moisturizers, the manufacturer said.

On The Local Scene

In the October issue of "PMG News," Mrs. Shelby Brannon was named Employee of the Month.

The article states, "Our October Employee of the Month comes to us in a rather unusual manner. A letter was sent by the entire nursing staff of Greenville Villa recommending the director of nursing, Mrs. Shelby Brannon, for this honor."

"They wrote: We, the nursing personnel of Greenville Villa, would like to nominate Mrs. Brannon, director of nursing, as the employee of the month for PMG.

"We feel she should be declared employee of the month because most of us have never worked under a person who backs up her staff all the way. She gives everyone the moral support they need plus more. She believes in helping the underdog."

"There has not been a time that one of us has been to her and asked for a favor, that she did not try her best to do it for us or gave a good reason for not being able to do it."

"She takes time out of her busy schedule to listen to our personal problems. When she listens, she listens as a friend not as a supervisor. Mrs. Brannon helps everyone with their schedule when they are trying to further their education."

"There is a lot more that could be said for Mrs. Brannon, but all of us think she's tops!"

The letter was signed by Janette Moody, Merle Hood, Emily M. Johnston, Beth Harrington, Fay Hill, Katie Cogdell, Nannie Mae Young, Rubelle Long, Carolyn Belch, Betty Cherry, Nan Pitt, Edna Whitworth, Ann Harris, Kathy Anderson and Carrie Gaskins.

The Celebral Palsy Center here will benefit from the Christmas bazaar being sponsored by the Eta Delta Chapter of Beta Sigma Phi.

The bazaar is being scheduled for Saturday from 10 a.m. until 1:30 p.m. and will be held at the Elm Street Recreation Center.

Ways and Means Criperson Pam Whitehurst said all items are handmade and include decorated brooms, stockings, Christmas tree skirts, placemats, puppets, decorated garbage cans, afghans, straw and stuffed wreaths, felt ornaments, aprons, pillows and other items. Baked goods will also be sold.

Even in residential sections of Mexico City, it's not uncommon to see four or five turkeys running about a household.

The birds are eaten year-round in Mexico, but they are becoming increasingly popular here at Christmas time. Prices rise to about a dollar a pound, or double that of the rest of the year, because of increased demand.

Strangely enough, when Americans sit down to their Thanksgiving turkey dinners this year, some Mexicans will follow suit. They have become such fans of American football that they even eat turkey while watching the live holiday telecasts of U.S. games.

The most typical way to serve turkey in Mexico is with mole, a spicy chocolate and chile sauce. But family banquets at Christmas and New Year's often feature roast turkey with piquant meat stuffing such as this:

Heat 2 tablespoons of lard in a large skillet. Fry 1 chopped onion and 1 clove of chopped garlic until onion is transparent. Add 2 pounds of ground pork and fry until brown, stirring constantly. Add 1 large unripe banana (use a plantain if you can find one), peeled and sliced. 1 tart green apple, peeled, cored and chopped, one-fourth cup each of raisins and pinenuts or toasted, slivered almonds, and 1 or 2 jalapeno chiles, seeded, rinsed and chopped. Drain and discard

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

In the olden days B.C. (Before Canapes), this column would never have been written, but since hors d'oeuvres, appetizers, and those little before-dinner snacks have become so chic, it's an absolute necessity.

There are some foods that do not diminish when you chew them . . . they grow, and I suspect multiply. One of them is the anchovy.

I have inadvertently found myself with an anchovy in my mouth which I have chewed on vigorously for three days and swallowed 137 times only to wake up in the middle of the night and realize I was still chewing it.

Anchovies are sneaky little devils and often disguise themselves as edible. They never look the same. Once in your mouth, however, they wrap themselves around your front tooth and refuse to let go.

The late naturalist, Euell Gibbons, once wrote about eating a seaweed called Dulse. He said when this reddish weed was fresh from the tide pool it was tough and tasteless, giving the sensation of chewing on a salted rubber band. However, one rainy day when he craved some, he put a little in an open work onion bag, dried it an hour in the automatic clothes dryer and it tasted wonderful.

There is nothing you can do for an anchovy.

You can salt it down, dry it out, pickle it, can it, sautee it, and make a paste out of it. It still tastes like you're eating bait.

It's baffling to me, but there are some people who do not find anchovies disgusting at all and I try to be tolerant. I have one friend, old Fish Breath, who invariably orders them on her pizza when she is in my presence. It's all I can do to remember she is kind to her mother, tithes to the church and doesn't litter our highways.

As I circled a table full of appetizers the other night, it occurred to me that one of life's greatest mysteries is, "What's in all those little globs and

Dear Abby

Why Shouldn't Girl Ask Men For Date?

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1977 by The Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: You told a 16-year-old girl who wanted to invite a certain boy to a sorority dance to ask someone who had already asked her out. Why? That's the first step in giving control of the relationship over to the man. He calls her if he feels like it, while she's sitting home waiting to be called.

If a girl thinks a man has an interest in her, what's wrong with calling him? I'm single, 29, and have been dating since I was 16. If I meet a man who appeals to me and I think it's mutual, I'll call him and invite him over. He might think I'm pushy, and he may even reject me, but that's the chance I take. And it beats sitting home alone waiting to be called.

Also, I never give my phone number to a man who won't give me his. If he refuses, or gives me his office number, I know he's probably married or living with someone.

Times have changed, Abby. Women no longer must wait to be chosen. They can do some choosing on their own. This doesn't mean chasing after someone who has no interest in them. My motto is: "It never hurts to ask."

BONNIE IN ALLENTOWN
DEAR BONNIE: Your attitude makes sense, and will probably find more winners among women than men. Men have been risking rejection for years. If a woman takes the initiative and is rejected, it's not the end of the world. Let's declare 1978 the year of the open season on all eligibles—regardless of sex.

DEAR ABBY: A niece of mine was married recently. I wasn't able to attend the wedding and didn't know what to get her for a wedding gift, so I sent her a check for $100. (It's not easy for me to shop as I am somewhat handicapped.)

I just received a thank-you note from the bride which both annoyed and shocked me. She wrote, "Your generous gift has already been put to good use in buying gifts for the girls in my wedding party."

I was under the impression that a cash wedding gift should be used to buy something for the newlyweds.

Am I wrong to feel perturbed? It was my intention to give her a "gift," not to help with the wedding expenses.
DISAPPOINTED

DEAR DIS: Your niece probably put the money where it would do the most good. Overlook it. At least she was honest.

CONFIDENTIAL TO F.J.R.: Instead of yearning for some kind of immortality, remember the words of Benjamin Franklin:
"If you would not be forgotten,
As soon as you are dead and rotten,
Either write things worth reading
Or do things worth the writing."

If you feel left out and lonely, or wish you know how to get people to like you, my new booklet, "How Too Be Popular: You're Never Too Young or Too Old," is for you. Send $1 along with a long, self-addressed, stamped (24 cents) envelope to Abby, 132 Lasky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.

Talking Turkey? Speak Spanish

By JOHN VIRTUE
MEXICO CITY (UPI) — The Thanksgiving turkey, considered by most people to be as American as apple pie, is really as Mexican as a shot of tequila.

When Hernan Cortes and his band of Spanish conquistadores reached Tenochtitlan, now Mexico City, in 1519, they found turkeys for sale in the Aztec markets.

Returning ships took turkeys back to Spain. By 1541 they were found in England.

Early British emigrants then returned the Mexican turkey to the New World, where it found its greatest fame at the Thanksgiving table.

That domesticated, or common turkey, is now found all the way from Canada to Mexico.

Although Mexicans have been eating turkey longer than anyone else, they don't save it for special occasions, as do Americans and Canadians. It's a staple food in the interior. Birds there are scavengers that cost little to raise.

British colonists also found wild turkeys when they arrived in the New World. They did not domesticate the birds, but hunters and encroaching civilization soon decimated their abundant numbers.

Another type of wild turkey, called ocellated, is found today in Mexico and parts of Central America. It is smaller than the common turkey and has tail feathers with coppery margins and eyelike, greenish blue spots.

Bell Peppers Are Bred for Stuffing

NEW YORK (UPI) — Ever wonder why green peppers look blocky?

John F. Kelly told a fresh produce news conference here that pepper breeders are told the vegetables must have four or five lobes each so the peppers will stand up when stuffed.

Kelly also said breeders avoid beans with dark-colored seeds because they cause dark liquid in cans.

Drops Tilting With Windmills

U. S. Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare Joseph A. Califano has backed off from an extremely poor approach to his antismoking campaign.

Califano announced that he is ending efforts to abolish the federal tobacco price support program. He noted that the program has the support of President Carter and U. S. Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland.

"It is clear to me there is nothing I can do to eliminate the tobacco subsidy," the HEW secretary said.

Elimination of the price support program was among the lists of possible actions which an HEW task force prepared.

Following release of the list Bergland pointed out that Carter had promised that tobacco price supports wouldn't be bothered. In backing down, Califano was quoted as saying, "I'm not going to tilt at that windmill."

Tobacco producers and, indeed, our entire state can be happy that the pressure is off the price support program, at least for the time being.

Elimination of the program was easily the worst approach that HEW could have taken in its battle with the nation's smoking habits. That rash action would have thrown a large segment of the nation's farm economy into turmoil. It, in itself, would have had little effect on smoking since tobacco can be obtained elsewhere.

We owe a debt of gratitude to President Carter and Agriculture Secretary Bergland for standing firm on this matter.

N.C. Ports Our Keys To World Trade

Adm. William Green' executive director of the State Ports Authority says that world trade is foremost in the minds of the Authority's board of directors.

"We intend to make the ports of Wilmington and Morehead City competitive in the context of serving the hinterland of this magnificent state," he told the Coastal Plains World Trade Association meeting here.

We believe the ports are our state's key to world trade . . . and building world trade can have an unbelievable effect on North Carolina's economy.

THIS AFTERNOON

Human Beings Are Ignored

By JAMES J. KILPATRICK

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — A visit to the eastern part of North Carolina is in order for federal officials and Congressmen intent upon diminishing or destroying tobacco, Gov. James B. Hunt, Jr. feels.

For in all the debate over tobacco—tax impacts, price supports, medical implications—the anti-cigarette forces are "overlooking the human element. . . the people living on the land who are struggling to make a living year in and year out against such odds. . . struggling to raise a family, build their communities, send their children to college," says Gov. Hunt.

"I would like to have Secretary (Joseph) Califano (HEW) and the others to come down here and visit these people and get to know them."

Tobacco, in North Carolina, is a billion-dollar crop annually; making up one-third of the state's total agricultural output.

Further, the warehousing, transporting, and making of tobacco products spreads far beyond the sandy fields of the east, providing economic foundations for several major Piedmont cities.

On The Farm
But on the farms is where the big hut would come. Dropped price supports, for example, would probably lead to an upsurge of imported tobacco for the cigarette-makers.

There are 68,000 North Carolina families who depend upon growing tobacco for a living. . . that's 340,000 individuals and the biggest group in the state dependent on a single commodity for their livelihood.

Some suggest diversification of the farms—put in grains or soybeans or livestock. Nothing can touch tobacco for a cash crop. Yielding an average $2,500 per acre, tobacco is a money crop. Nothing comes close except highly specialized items such as strawberries

. . . and the market demand wouldn't stand conversion of east North Carolina to a strawberry patch. Hunt, best known as a lawyer-politician, is indeed an expert on tobacco. He grew up on a farm, graduated from North Carolina State University majoring in agriculture, and got a master's degree in agricultural economics—writing his thesis on tobacco.

"There isn't any other crop we can raise in North Carolina and produce half of the income we get from tobacco," he says.

The governor strenuously opposes a higher tax on tobacco as well. Would that hurt the farmer? Yes, it would likely reduce sales—especially if the idea of a nationwide tax of 31-cents to combat bootlegging were imposed.

Beyond that, however, high taxes punish the low-income smoking man: why should government decree that for some social or health reason it will determine to keep people from smoking, Hunt feels.

Hurt Poor
He does not smoke himself ("I never had a desire. . . I have dipped some, and chewed some. . .") but doesn't think those who do should be punished. There are in North Carolina, Hunt says, people so poor they still buy a bottled drink and a moonpie for lunch. That was a reason he fought a special tax on soft drinks; and why he fights tobacco taxes.

Does all of this mean much to the people in Piedmont or western North Carolina? Yes, the governor insists. If tobacco goes under, the rest of the state will have to pay to rescue the schools and hospitals and services and people of the East who go down with it.

BILL NOBLITT

Diversification of the coastal plains and coast to more industrial development and tourism is helping the region overall, but is not sufficient to replace tobacco, nor reaching the same people necessarily.

There is widespread concern. "A lot of our farmers are discouraged. . . they think we won't be able to work our way out of this situation."

"But I think we can do something to save our economy and do a lot for our people," the governor says.

Honors Not Easily Won

WASHINGTON — A couple of months ago, the White House sponsored a tough competition. Richard A. Pettigrew, a presidential assistant, polled members of the House and Senate with a truly demanding series of questions. This was the first question:

"Which federal programs do your constituents think are administered least efficiently?"

That is the kind of question that Davey Crockett, a former member of the House, once described as a sockdolager. You want to think before responding. The least efficient federal program? Such a title cannot be lightly conferred. It is an honor not easily won.

In the course of time, responses trickled back to the White House. A week or so ago, Pettigrew called off the competition. He refused to tabulate the votes, but he made this clear: Dozens of federal agencies could qualify for the titles of "least efficient" or "most confusing." And what troubles the taxpayers, more than anything else, is plain, old-fashioned delay.

Wisconsin's Senator William Proxmire emphasized this complaint in a long and detailed reply to the Pettigrew questionnaire. The Farmers Home Administration, he said, is "notoriously slow" in processing loan applications, and the delays result in serious hardships; the farmer who has to wait six or eight months for a disaster loan may miss the next planting season.

Proxmire had other nominations. The Civil Service Commission is so slow that a retiring federal employee may have to wait six months for his first retirement check. The Immigration and Naturalization Service is "probably the slowest of all agencies." It often takes more than

Other Editors Say An Unusual Group

(Washington Daily News)

The Southeastern Times of Clarkton, N. C. poses a most unusual situation pertaining to a most unusual group.

It says "imagine a university the size of N. C. State with more than 18,000 students enrolled — all of them 65 years of age or older."

Now if we had some university with 18,000 students, all 65 years of age or older, of course university life would be changed considerably from what we normally think of today. And we would have no football of course, no basketball, no baseball, and in fact intercollegiate sports would be out. We might have some horseshoe pitching, checkers, chess, and bridge. Maybe we might even have a little debating.

Well, before we throw the imagination out the window as impossible, let us take a look across North Carolina today. There are 18,091 persons enrolled today in this state in our community college system including our technical institutes of course — all 65 years of age or older. The fact that they are not concentrated on any one campus is very understandable. They live all over our state.

Now we are told that when any N. C. citizen reaches 65 years of age, tuition in the community college system is free. It is true that most of them are retired. But the age brings out another very dramatic fact. There are a lot of people in North Carolina who are 65 years of age who are not about to retire. Many of them are right now looking for new challenges and new opportunities. And they are finding both in the community college programs.

Most of the 18,091 persons are enrolled in continuing education programs. The females far outnumber the males, 12,987 to 4,150 in this program being used by 17,137 enrollees. Of this latter number, by race there are 12,119 White and 5,018 non-White.

It is very understandable that day classes are favorable by this group. But surprisingly 6,592 today are enrolled in night classes.

This entire picture brings on another very interesting question. Why would persons 65 years of age or more want to go back to school when they could just enjoy life, sit in the shade in Summer and move as the shade moves, and by the fireplace in Winter?

Is this not a picture of humanity's real desire for better things? People today are just not ready to hang up their aprons on their golfes at 65 years of age and call it quits.

And that is a fine lesson for our teenagers to learn. And it is a finer example for them to follow.

Tours Need Guides

By DAVID TOMLIN
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — This year more than 80,000 school kids will swarm through the halls of the old State Capitol and other buildings of note, searching for their heritage and experiencing firsthand the glories of democracy, North Carolina style.

Somebody has to be there to see that everyone knows where to go to the bathroom.

It's Samuel P. Townshend, whose job as chief of the State Capitol-Visitor Services Section actually encompasses a great deal more than providing directions to the little boys room.

Townshend has presided over the expansion of visitor services in the capital city from a one-man enterprise into a staff of eight, three of them running a new Visitors Center which coordinates tours of the Governor's Mansion.

And Townshend hopes eventually to be doing much more.

"We're looking forward in future years to a visitors center which can provide overall services for the entire city," he says. "We'd like to see groups like the Raleigh Chamber of Commerce, the Raleigh civic center and city and county governments get in on the visitors center so it serves the entire Raleigh area."

He is also trying to plan for revival of the defunct self-conducted driving tour of Raleigh and design a new walking tour as well.

But for now, Townshend and his staff have all they can handle making arrangements for visitors who want to see the Capitol, the Legislative Building, the Mansion and the state museums of art, history and natural history.

"The kids call the Museum of Natural History the snake museum," Townshend says. "The people down there don't like it."

The legislative staff handles tours of its own building, but for the others Townshend's staff coordinates activities of more than 100 volunteer tour guides.

Townshend's section is part of the Division of Archives and History and has responsibility for overseeing restoration and furnishing of the Capitol in cooperation with the private State Capitol Foundation.

But it's hard sometimes not to become totally preoccupied with the business of shepherding the armies of school children through without incident.

"Once or twice a week one of them gets lost," he says. "One time they called me about a lost child and while they were talking I saw him coming out a door right in view of my office window. That was an easy one. And we're always having kids get sick. So you keep some smelling salts handy and a couch."

THE INSIDE REPORT

Future In Jackson Hands

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
WASHINGTON — Cheered on by the White House, brass and beefy Sen. John Culver of Iowa charged into a Senate Armed Services subcommittee hearing Nov. 7 to lead a SALT counter-offensive aimed to against the biggest threat to Senate approval of a new U.S.-Soviet arms control agreement: subcommittee chairman Henry M. Jackson.

Culver delivered a tirade charging that leaks from the subcommittee were undermining the strategic arms limitation talks (SALT), strongly implying the leaks came from Jackson and his staff. Jackson, bending perceptibly under Culver's verbal barrage, expressed regret about the disclosures. That heightened concern by Republicans that Jackson ultimately will prove more Democrat than hawk and put party over principle.

If so, the SALT II treaty nearing agreement will win the two-thirds Senate approval needed for ratification. If Jackson opposes it, however, chances are poor. Thus, at age 65, Scoop Jackson holds the course of history in his hands.

There is no doubt about Jackson's expertise on arms control or his conviction that the new treaty dangerously widens the Soviet strategic advantage. The doubt has been whether he would treat Cyrus Vance as harshly as he did Henry Kissinger, risking the end of invitations to the Jacksons for family dinners at the White House with the Carters.

Those doubts faded recently when Jackson conducted tough hearings with an uncomfortable, ill-prepared Secretary of State Vance as witness. To counteract these hearings, all 100 Senators were invited to top secret SALT briefings from some eight administration officials on Nov. 3; only seven Senators showed up.

With Senate prospects fading, the counter-offensive began. The theme: SALT critics are undermining U.S.-Soviet negotiations. Former Deputy Defense Secretary Paul Nitze came under special attack for his scholarly analysis of the adverse impact on U.S. Security of the SALT II agreements.

Actually, tentative SALT II agreements have been leaked mainly by administration officials. But this did not stop Sen. George McGovern from taking the Senate floor Nov. 2 to accuse Nitze of "inexcusable conduct." On the same day, arms control activist Jeremy Stone (secretary of the Federation of American Scientists) wrote a letter suggesting Nitze's analysis is "subversive" and constitutes "sabotage" of SALT.

The counter-offensive accelerated Nov. 4 when our column reported Vance's inability to defend the SALT II agreements to the Jackson subcommittee. The normally placid Vance was incensed. Backing down as he never had against Kissinger, Jackson apologized and agreed to long-standing State Department requests to inspect transcripts of Vance's testimony.

When Vance reappeared before the Jackson subcommittee in closed session Nov. 7, Culver — a member of the full committee but not the subcommittee — made his presence felt. Finishing his third year in the Senate, Culver has become a force to contend with and the most-effective instrument of the arms control lobby. A former Harvard football player, his bulk and stentorian voice prove physically intimidating to some colleagues.

Glaring at Jackson aide Richard Perle, Culver shouted about a "hemorrhage" of secrets in our columns (though they actually contain no classified information). Jackson replied quietly that most SALT II details were being dribbled out by the administration, but

Strength For Today

PREVENTION BETTER THAN CURE

There is a story about a community which was diligent to maintain an ambulance at the foot of a high cliff in order to take care of people who fell over. When someone suggested putting a fence around the top of the cliff, the proposal was met with derision and scorn. The argument the townspeople presented, in verse, was:

Why should people of sense Stop to put up a fence, With an ambulance down in the valley?

Prudence always urges us to avoid troublesome situations by giving them our attention before they become troublesome. The place to stop an evil is at its source. The time to handle it is right now, before it gets any worse. Screens on the windows are better than insect spray in the house. The fence around the precipice makes more sense than the ambulance in the valley.

Burns-Carter Dispute Impact

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — If you judge by the stock market, investors are much more interested in peace between President Carter and the Federal Reserve System than in the dubious fate of the two-martini lunch.

Seeking to erase publicly recorded admissions of disagreements with Arthur Burns, Fed chairman, the President told Americans they had it all wrong and that he and Burns really saw eye to eye.

That news didn't even have to be digested by Wall Street — and perhaps it is just as well, because the chairman and the President do have very obvious differences — before prices shot up. So did volume.

To attribute the big increase — 27.46 points on the Dow Jones industrial average on just Thursday and Friday of last week — might seem to overstate the importance of good relations between Burns and Carter. But maybe not.

Arthur Burns has become a symbol to the business community. He is trusted as the man who can speak conservatism without embarrassment. He can be trusted to raise the red flag over inflation and waste and deficit spending.

From their point of view he is a realist. He believes that we cannot emerge from economic malaise without making it advantageous to invest in American industry. He knows investors abhor confusion, disunity and indecision.

He has power. His influence over the money supply and interest rates is greater than the president's. He can therefore quite literally challenge the president's economic policies if he feels they are ill-advised.

He does not flaunt that power but he doesn't shrink from using it either. He isn't afraid to speak out, and in recent weeks he has done so forcefully, about his disbelief in Carter's ability to lower inflation and unemployment, for example.

He has also criticized Carter's energy policy and the administration's consideration of an end to the capital gains tax advantages. The latter, he said, would be "most unfortunate."

Business people appreciate another of Burns' criticisms, that the administration might be trying to do too much too soon, and that is many legislative moves are creating anxiety and confusion in the business world.

If there is any doubt that the words the chairman speaks are not also the words of business, one has only to read the messages of bank letters, stock market advisories, economic newsletters and the like.

With Bert Lance gone from Washington, many people in the business community have rallied behind Burns. He has become their hope, but an almost forlorn one until last week.

Burns, you see, was due to go, they felt. His term as chairman was up, and while he could continue after Jan. 31 as a board member, he hardly would have the clout he used to have. He would be a hero without power.

But, if there is genuine peace between Burns and Carter, there might even be a new term for the chairman. And that in itself, some business people believe, might remove a good deal of the fog that confuses the future.

a year for the INS to take final action in a particular case. The Internal Revenue Service, in Proxmire's view, is "probably the least responsive to the needs of the taxpayer." Moreover, if there were a "most maddening" classification, the IRS would win in a walkway. One of his constituents spent 23 days trying to get IRS to answer its toll-free telephone line.

"The IRS," said Proxmire, "also refuses to make amends for its own errors. If a businessman's bank account is attached in error by the IRS, the agency will not advise his creditors that the agency was responsible for any bad checks which may have been written on that account. If the creditor will agree to write the IRS, the IRS will then acknowledge its error. Since most creditors do not have the time or interest to contact the IRS, the businessman's credit may well be destroyed through no fault of his own."

Proxmire hit the Veterans Administration, the Social Security folks and the Environmental Protection Agency for slowpoke service. AM-TERAK, he remarked, "rarely bothers to answer at all."

Virginia's Congressman G. William Whitehurst, in his response to the Pettigrew survey, singled out the Office of Workers'

Compensation Programs within the Department of Labor. He seconded the nominations of Social Security and the Environmental Protection Agency, but he regarded the OWCP in a class by itself. No other program "equals the unresponsiveness, the incompetence, and the General disarray of the OWCP." The federal worker who seeks compensation for an industrial accident encounters "months and even years of delay in settling the claim." It is not at all uncommon, Whitehurst charged, for the agency to "misplace case files for months at a time, and even lose the files entirely."

In the Catalog of complaints, delay appeared to rank first, rudeness second, and incompetence third, with sheer confusion running fourth. Federal requirements, notably in purchasing and procurement, were widely denounced as excessively complex. Federal forms and statistical reports are seen everywhere as needlessly burdensome.

Pettigrew's survey was not designed, of course, to award prizes, plaques or trophies. It was designed to assist the president in the reorganization program that Mr. Carter has been promising for months. To judge from the voluminous and disturbing complaints, the situation may be even worse than the president had believed.

Gamblers In N.C. Scene

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Professional gamblers with links to organized crime are running betting operations in Randolph and Davidson counties, Attorney General Rufus Edmisten says.

Edmisten made his statement in an interview with WFMY-TV in Greensboro, which reported this week it had uncovered five gambling operations in the two counties.

The station said its newsmen had visited the gambling establishments in small buildings and trailers on heavily-traveled roads. Most of the betting was on sports — professional, college and even high school.

The station said the operations appeared to involve large sums of money and attracted gamblers from Greensboro and High Point as well as from the rural areas closer by.

The station's newsmen said most of the bets they saw were of $5 or less, but some were much larger. One gambler estimated that the five operations the station saw took in more than $1 million a year.

The station placed some bets, although its report said it had no intention of collecting any winnings.

Edmisten said he was aware of the gambling activity and had told authorities in the two counties to crack down.

Culver brushed that aside. He demanded an investigation of Jackson subcommittee leakage. The aim is obvious: get Sen. John Stennis, 76, chairman of the full Armed Services Committee who lives in horror of leaks, to shut down Jackson.

Culver's line that leaks threaten SALT not only duplicates McGovern's and Jeremy Stone's but echoes what is said inside the Carter administration. Culver issued a statement to us denying his move was inspired by the administration, but that may be academic. "Thank goodness for John Culver," a senior White House aide told us. "It's about time somebody stopped Jackson from running wild."

Jackson's reaction was not reassuring to his Republican allies on the committee. Although neither he nor his staff had given us the information about Vance's appearance, he felt he must express "regret" about our column. At a joint press conference with Vance, he felt constrained to call our report "inaccurate and misleading" though he knew its accuracy had caused all the furor.

To some old hands, this recalled 1963 when Jackson first criticized the U.S.-Soviet test ban treaty, then backed it following pressure from the Kennedy White House. But far more is at stake for U.S. security 13 years later, and Jackson is an older man with few political ambitions. How he reacts to the counterattack, clearly blessed by the White House, will probably determine the fate of SALT II.

Installs Cabins On Reed Raft

QURNA, Iraq (AP) — Norwegian explorer Thor Heyerdahl has installed two square reed cabins aboard his raft, the Tigris, in preparation for sailing on a "voyage to the unknown" later this week.

He still must set up masts, oars and steering devices before taking to sea with the sand-colored, oval-shaped boat. Heyerdahl says the boat is being built to a 5,000-year-old Sumerian pattern and is the "oldest type of boat known to man."

The 63-year-old explorer declined to commit himself to a definite date of departure. Monday the raft will set sail within four days.

Heyerdahl, mastermind of the famous 5,000-mile, 101-day Kon-Tiki expedition of 1947, said his impending voyage is meant to assess how far the ancient Sumerians could have transported their civilization.

Grandmother Used Her Gun

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — A 70-year-old grandmother who spotted a boy she believed had stolen money from her lured him into her home with the promise of "something pretty" and held him at gunpoint for police.

"That doggone police department didn't take care of things, so I did," said Mrs. R.M. Long.

Mrs. Long said she had seen the 13-year-old boy hanging around her house about two weeks ago just before somebody walked into her home while she was outside, rummaged in her purse and took $200.

"I saw him hanging around," she said, "and when I found out that money was gone, I knew it had to have been him that took it."

Monday morning, she saw the boy outside again.

"I ran over and unlocked the door and then I invited him in very kindly," she said. "I said 'come on in. I've got something pretty to show you.'"

The boy came inside. "I picked up my .22 and I said 'come on, sonny boy, we're going into the kitchen,'" Mrs. Long said. "I took him over and I said you sit down in front of that piano. And then after that I called the police."

While they waited, Mrs. Long said she talked to the boy "just like a mother ought to talk to her son." She said it wasn't long before he had told her where he hid the money.

Police took the boy into custody. The case was still under investigation today.

"I wouldn't have hurt him," crooned Mrs. Long. "Unless he'd had've tried to run. Then I'd have let his legs have it."

mounds of shredded food?" It's one of the few places where I throw pride to the wind and wear my glasses. As I bent over a crust of bread, shaped like a diamond and covered with bits of bacon, shredded shrimp, a glob of blue cheese and a toothpick holding an olive with an almond center, I looked at my husband. He looked weird. His teeth weren't meeting. He gasped only two words before he took leave: "It's liver!"

Unlike an anchovy, liver doesn't grow or multiply. Liver is like malaria. Once you think it's gone, the taste comes back . . . maybe not today or tomorrow . . . but someday . . .

HER CABBAGE PATCH — Mrs. Ethelyn Morse makes sauerkraut from cabbages like these on her farm in Maine. The Morse family has been making sauerkraut for over 60 years. (AP Laserphoto)

Famed Sauerkraut Has A Sixty-Year Tradition

By JON HALVORSEN
Associated Press Writer
WALDOBORO, Maine (AP) — "Kraut's ready." Around here, that terse notice printed in a couple of newspapers can mean only one thing. The famous Morse sauerkraut, sold throughout the country, is in production yet another year.

buy buckets of the stuff from the small, cinder-block building where the sauerkraut has been "working" for seven to 10 days in big barrels. For more than 60 years, the Morse family has been making sauerkraut in the Waldoboro area, which was settled by German immigrants. Virgil Morse Sr. started the business in the early 1900s, making kraut only for his own family until he was asked to "cut in a barrel" for a local store.

When he died in 1963, he was succeeded as head of the business by his son Virgil Jr., and when Virgil Jr. died in 1969, his widow Ethelyn took over.

The Morse operation has always been a family business on a modest scale — only three full-time workers assist Mrs. Morse — but it's a legend among sauerkraut lovers.

Mrs. Morse, 62, a warm, outgoing woman, sells her kraut to several Maine supermarkets and ships it to customers in nearly every state. "Her product is the real product," says Joe Ricci, general manager of Jacob Wirth's, the oldest German restaurant in Boston, which has ordered tons of Morse kraut for many years. "It has taste, texture and everything else," he adds, and unlike canned sauerkraut, "it doesn't mush up."

Sauerkraut is simply chopped cabbage allowed to ferment, or "work," in a brine of its own juice with salt added. The Morse recipe includes sugar, but the exact mixture of salt and sugar and any other ingredients has remained a family secret.

Mrs. Morse says she plants Penn State or Danish Baldhead cabbage in the spring — "a hard, firm, white winter cabbage." They're planted far apart so they grow big — 15 to 20 pounds each — and after "an awful lot of tender, loving care," the cabbages are harvested in the fall and stored in cellars. From about eight acres of cabbage planted this year, Mrs. Morse expects to produce about 60 tons of kraut.

A fresh batch is turned out each week from late September through March. The shredded cabbage is compressed into oak barrels, the secret mixture is added and the lids are weighted down with stones. After seven to 10 days, foam has worked its way out of the holes of the lids and the kraut is ready.

Mrs. Morse delivers the kraut to stores in her pickup truck and ships it in wooden buckets or plastic pails to out-of-state customers. The minimum order is 15 pounds at 40 cents a pound plus the cost of the container and shipping.

"You can keep it in your refrigerator in glass jars. Or it can be frozen," she says.

"We make a few more tons each year," she says. "But you know, you can just be so good, make so much. I'd rather make a little good kraut than a lot of poor kraut."

The main town of the Greek island of Santorini is called Thira, which means "the place."

Ordinance Supporters

The Brook Valley Homeowners' Association has passed a resolution favoring the solid waste disposal ordinance for Pitt County.

The action was taken during the 10th annual meeting of the Association last night.

Details of the plan were presented by Larry Hurlocker, County Planner; Willie Pate, Chief of the Environmental Health Division of Pitt County, and Reginald Gray, County Manager.

Others matters discussed included operation and cost of the street lighting system, excessive charges for water by Greenville Utilities, lack of fire hydrants in Brook Valley, and merger of the county and city school systems.

Elected to the Board of Directors for a three-year term were Marie Davis, Neal Hahn, and Bill Sneed. Retiring directors are George Alvan, Paul Kelly and Louise Snowden.

Cites Dividend In Idea Sources

AYDEN - Ideas for progress spring from the people and education "is a product of the total community," Dr. Leo Jenkins told an American Education Week Audience today at Ayden-Gritton High School. Jenkins, chancellor of East Carolina University, said "it is not possible to be effective in education unless we maintain a two-way street of communication. Our school units cannot exist separately from the neighborhood," he said.

At ECU, Jenkins said, "we operate under the premise that citizens and communities have a perfect right to come to us with problems and suggestions." And such ideas, he said, have paid "great dividends" in advancing such programs as ECU's Schools of Nursing, Allied Health and Social Professions, the Correctional Sciences program and the ECU School of Medicine.

Suggestions ...

The plan was presented to the Planning and Zoning board with comments and recommendations. The City Council received the plan at the November meeting and scheduled the matter for a public hearing on Dec. 1.

In other business last night, real estate officer Kirby Boyd reported that one parcel was acquired in Southside since the last meeting and six acquisitions were closed in Meadowbrook.

According to Boyd, one structure was removed in the CBD area and two were removed in Meadowbrook. One demolition took place in Southside.

Faye Brewington, project manager for Southside, said that one family was relocated from the project area since November and a homeowner and tenant were moved from the West Meadowbrook section.

The commission's rehabilitation officer, Ed Cobb, noted that the rehabilitation of two properties were completed since last month, both involving 312 loans.

According to Cobb, a total of $90,150 in 312 low interest loans were secured during the year.

During the commission's annual election of officers prior to the regular meeting, Billy Laughinghouse was reelected chairman for the coming year and Jack Whichard was reelected to his post as vice chairman. The board members also selected Joe Laney as secretary-treasurer for another term. Laney serves as executive director.

Will Honor Jim Graham

The Agri-Business Committee of the Greenville Area Chamber of Commerce has planned a special luncheon to honor North Carolina Commissioner of Agriculture Jim Graham at the Ramada Inn Banquet Room Wednesday at 1 p.m.

JIM GRAHAM

Graham and commissioners of Agriculture from Virginia, South Carolina, Georgia, and Florida will speak at this occasion. The luncheon is being held in conjunction with the Second Annual Tobacco Farmers Show, Wednesday, Nov. 16, has been proclaimed as "Commissioner's Day."

Represented At 3 Recent Meets

The Department of Foreign Languages and Literatures at East Carolina University was represented at three recent professional meetings for language educators.

Department Chairman Marguerite Perry and Dr. Thomas A. Williams attended the annual meeting of the South Atlantic Modern Language Association in Washington, D.C. Dr. Williams chaired the meeting's French III section.

Luis Acevez attended meetings of the N.C. Classical Association at Salem College, Winston-Salem, and the Foreign Language Association of North Carolina in Charlotte. He was named to the FLANC Honorary Membership Committee.

Citizen Group Plans Meeting

Citizens For Total Positive Government will meet Wednesday at 7:30 p.m. at the Bachelor Benedict Building on Wyatt Street in Greenville.

The purpose of the meeting is to honor Clarence Gray for his re-election to the Greenville City Council, to assess certain campaign issues that surfaced during the campaign, and to begin planning for the 1978 spring primaries. All members and interested persons are invited to attend.

Before you sign up for an IRA, find out about ours.

Many financial institutions offer Individual Retirement Accounts (IRA) for people without a qualified retirement plan. Any IRA is good business, but they're complicated, so it's hard to figure out whose is best.

At NCNB, we think that you'll be hard-pressed to find one with all the advantages of ours.

In the first place, the NCNB IRA, with a four or ten-year maturity, currently pays 7 3/4% annual interest, compounded daily and credited quarterly for an annual yield of 8.173%, the highest rate the law allows on IRA's.

Secondly, with each deposit, we guarantee the rate being offered for your choice of four or ten years. (Many IRA's offer 3 years or less.)

And, right now, we're charging no administrative fees or service charges. (Many IRA's do.)

McGee: No Plans Of Resignation Despite Flood Of Current Rumors

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Mike McGee is alive and well and coaching football in Durham, despite the crowd of newsmen who showed up at Duke Monday to cover his professional funeral.

"Boy, this is quite a turnout," McGee quipped as he strolled into his press luncheon. "Looks like everybody here is waiting for something dramatic to happen. And they're gonna be in for a disappointment."

McGee has been plagued all season by speculation that his team was playing to keep his job. There was even one spurious report over the weekend that he had resigned, and the current speculation is that his option will be dropped at the end of the season if the Blue Devils don't whip North Carolina Saturday.

But McGee steadfastly declined comment on the rumors and speculation.

"We have a game this week, and that's where my plans are at this time," he said. "I have no plans for resignation."

Duke Athletic Director Tom Butters was not present at the luncheon.

Players have said from time to time during the season that they backed their coach and didn't like hearing the speculation.

"To a man, we're solidly behind coach McGee," said senior defensive end Jeff Green. "Heck, we've still got a shot at a winning record, and that with a team that has had every defensive starter except one out with injuries sometime this year."

Green said the team's morale and performance had improved in the past four years.

"I think some people want us to have a football factory here," he said. "If that's the case, I can tell you that coach McGee is not the type of coach that'll want any part of it. At football factories, people are interested only in how well you play football and few care how many players get their degrees."

"Well, coach McGee cares. And of the seniors we have on the team, only one or two won't get their degrees. That should tell you something about him."

Moose May Be Clemson Center

By THOMAS C. COTHRAIN
Associated Press Writer

The Clemson basketball team, picked to finish fifth in the Atlantic Coast Conference this season, still is looking for a replacement for All-American center Wayne "Tree" Rollins, who graduated last year.

But they may have found one, says Tiger Coach Bill Foster, in John "Moose" Campbell, a 6-foot-9 transfer from nearby Anderson Junior College.

"We'll have to bring him along slowly," says Foster. "We don't want to put the monkey on his back."

"But we can't go all year with 6-foot-6 and 6-7 players up front. Physically, that would be very tough," says the affable Foster.

The Tigers, who had a 22-6 record last season, open their basketball season Nov. 25 against Texas Christian in the IPTAY Invitational Tournament at Clemson. IPTAY, which stands for I Pay Thirty a Year, is the Clemson booster club. The Tigers' first conference game is Jan. 4 against North Carolina at Clemson.

The Tigers were chosen at the ACC's Operation Basketball to wind up behind North Carolina, Duke, Maryland and Virginia in the final league standings. The picks by sportswriters came during an all-day session with coaches and players Sunday at Greensboro.

Wake Forest was tabbed to follow Clemson and North Carolina State was picked to finish last.

Foster says the uncertainty about who will replace Rollins means the Tigers will continue to play a running game. Last year the team scored more than 100 points seven times and averaged 86.6 points, 11th highest among the nation's college teams.

Foster says the team's strength is depth and he expects competition for starting assignments at almost every position.

Returning at forward, and occasionally at guard, is 6-5 Stan Rome, who led the team last year with a 15.3 average. He also led the Tigers in steals, taking the ball away from opponents 52 times.

The other forward probably will be 6-5 Colon Abraham, who scored 12.8 points per game. Both he and Rome are seniors.

At guard, Foster has sophomore Bobby Conrad and seniors Greg Coles and Derrick Johnson back for another season. The coach also expects help from forwards Marvin Dickerson 6-6; Jim Wells, also 6-6; and Jim Howell, 6-7.

Cardinals Hand Dallas Its First Loss Of Year, 24-17

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

DALLAS (AP) — The St. Louis Cardinals, back to their old cardiac finishes, unearthed 15-year veteran Jackie Smith for his first touchdown pass since 1975 Monday night to share heroics with Jim Hart and bury previously unbeaten Dallas 24-17 in high fourth-quarter drama.

"I think it's obvious we've turned our season around," said Hart, who rifled a 49-yard touchdown pass to Mel Gray and lobbed a 37-yard scoring pass to the 37-year-old Smith with 3:10 to play for the game winner.

Dallas' record dropped to 8-1 and St. Louis put some suspense back in the National Conference Eastern Division race with its fifth consecutive victory for a 6-3 ledger.

"I never thought something like this would happen to me again," said Smith, who was catching only his third pass of the season. "It's great to be part of it."

Hart said "We usually throw that pass to the halfback and I think it surprised them."

Dallas, off to its best start in the 17-year history of the club, appeared to have the Cardinals well caged, building a 14-3 half-time lead on Tony Dorsett's 1-yard touchdown run and a 2-yard scoring pass from Roger Staubach to tight end Billy Joe DuPre.

All St. Louis had to show for the first half of the nationally televised match was Jim Bakken's 26-yard field goal.

But Dallas muffed a chance to blow the game wide open when Randy Hughes intercepted a Hart pass at the St. Louis 17 only to see DuPre return the favor with a fumble on an end around.

St. Louis' Wayne Morris scored on a 1-yard touchdown run after Benny Barnes was flagged on a 43-yard interference call and the Cardinals trailed only 14-10. Efrén Herrera's 21-yard field goal set the stage for Hart's fourth-quarter heroics.

He found Gray wide open behind Aaron Kyle and Cliff Harris for the game-tying touchdown, then burned the jittery Cowboy defense with the pass to Smith.

"We had the best feeling coming in here that we've ever had," said Hart. "The Cowboys were riding high and we had never won here so we turned the negative points into positive points for us."

Cowboy Coach Tom Landry agreed.

"We haven't played good for the last three or four weeks and a loss was inevitable," said Landry. "The Cardinals have made things interesting again in the division, particularly with us going to Pittsburgh next week."

Landry sounded like there might be some changes in store for the sputtering Cowboy offense — like rookie Tony Dorsett moving into a starting position.

"We have to use Tony more because he is running good," said Landry.

St. Louis Coach Don Coryell, who had seen his team lose a 30-24 heartbreaker to Dallas on Oct. 9, was euphoric.

"I've never been as happy about a win like I was tonight," said Coryell. "This was a great victory. We wanted it bad."

St. Louis intercepted Staubach twice, and the Cowboy quarterback said, "I can't blame my injured hip or thumb. I threw well in practice. We just missed some big third-down plays and when we got up 14-3, I guess we really got too conservative."

The game was a rough-and-tumble affair, with both Barnes of the Cowboys and St. Louis' Lee Nelson being ejected for fighting.

"I just lost my cool and I shouldn't have let my temper run away from me," said Barnes.

Cardinal offensive tackle Conrad Dobler said, "We're moving now. Dallas has some tough ones coming up ... If they happen to give us the championship we'll take it."

St. Louis halfback Terry Metcalf said "The rest of the season looks good. We were just higher than Dallas. You know they were 8-0 and they weren't up like the first game."

"Beating them down here was great since it was the first time since I've been here that we've done it. We thought we got robbed in the first game."

Landry admitted St. Louis was hungrier. "We were asking for it because we hadn't been playing well," said Landry. And the Cardinals gave "it" to the last of the National Football League's unbeaten teams.

Scrimmage Scheduled

East Carolina University's basketball teams have set scrimmages for this week and next.

The men's basketball team, under Coach Larry Gillman, will hold a public scrimmage tonight at 7:30 p.m. at Washington High School.

The Pirates then will conclude their pre-season scrimmages with the annual Purple-Gold game Monday night at 7:30 p.m. in Minges Coliseum.

At that game, season ticket holders will be admitted free upon showing their ticket books, while students will be admitted on their IDs. The general public will be charged $2, while students will be charged $1.

The East Carolina women's basketball team, coached by Catherine Bolton, will hold their Purple-Gold game on Thursday at 6:30 p.m. in Minges Coliseum.

There will be no admission for that game.

Contest Winners

Two women outdid the men this past week in the final Daily Reflector Football Contest of the year.

Karen Smith of 7-1 E. Fourth St., Greenville took first place this week by correctly picking 27 of the 32 games correctly.

She took first on the basis of her point total guess with an estimate of 74. A total of 78 points were actually scored, in the 52-26 win by Pittsburgh over Army.

Second place went to Barbara Walston of 207 S. Pitt St., Farmville, who also picked 27 games correctly. She took second place by being further off in her point guess with 70.

The tie game between Colorado State and West Texas State was counted wrong on all ballots since it is possible to pick a tie.

Two Named All-Conference

Two members of the Rose High School tennis team have been named to the All-Conference team by Division I tennis coaches.

Margaret McGlohan and Karen Jeffreys were two of the 11 girls selected to the team. McGlohan played the number one singles and Jeffreys' the number two spot, for the Ramettes this year. They also combined to play the number one doubles for the team.

James Unhappy With Devine

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Atlantic Coast Conference Commissioner Robert James says he'll make sure the ethics committee of the American Football Coaches' Association examines remarks made by Dan Devine after Notre Dame's game with Clemson last Saturday.

"If we don't have assurances that it is before them, we'll take steps to make sure it gets there," James told a meeting of ACC regional members of Associated Press Sports Editors.

The Notre Dame coach, in post-game remarks Saturday, said an ACC official was incompetent and a "disgrace to college football."

"I can't believe this will escape Vince Dooley's attention, and he's chairman of the ethics committee," James told the sports editors Monday.

Dooley is head coach at Georgia.

The commissioner said Devine replays of calls Devine objected to "certainly minimized his evaluation of competency."

Devine was penalized 15

Minnesota To Take Punishment

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Two violations of NCAA rules when the two 6-foot-10 players were freshmen, three years ago. Thompson ran afoul of regulations by selling two season basketball tickets at more than their face value. Winey accepted free lodging at a lake cabin owned by a university booster.

In announcing the subcommittee's decision, a spokesman said university President C. Peter Magrath had not ruled out the possibility of appealing the ruling to the NCAA Council. He also said the university had made no decision on whether to withdraw a separate appeal pending before the U.S. Supreme Court.

But Thompson and Winey both said they considered the battle over.

"I'm tired of all the legal hassles," said Thompson. "When I come back, I'll play like I never played before."

"I feel pretty bad about it," Winey added. "I'm really tired of it. I just want to get back to playing basketball."

Top Four Teams Cling To Spots

By The Associated Press
 Texas remains firmly planted at the top of the heap in The Associated Press college football poll, with Alabama, Oklahoma and Ohio State refusing to budge from the other top spots.

Michigan traded places with Notre Dame for the No. 5 position in the nationwide poll of sports writers and broadcasters released Monday.

Texas, after an easy 44-14 win over Texas Christian, received 58 of 61 first-place votes and 1,214 of a possible 1,220 points.

Alabama, which defeated Miami of Florida 36-0, received one first-place ballot and 983 points while Oklahoma also received one first-place vote and 962 points following a 52-14 rout of Colorado. Ohio State, a 35-7 victor over Indiana, received 819 points.

Michigan, sixth a week ago, crushed Purdue 40-7 and polled 655 points while Notre Dame had to rally in the final period for a 21-17 triumph over Clemson and slipped from fifth to sixth with 639 points.

Seven-ranked Kentucky took the remaining first-place ballot after downing Florida 14-7 and totaled 548 points. The Wildcats were seventh last week, too.

Arkansas got 529 points for beating Texas A&M 26-20, Penn State whipped Temple 44-7 and received 458 points and Pitt piled up 377 points for a 52-26 rout of Army, rounding out the Top Ten.

Nebraska, Arizona State, Florida State, Texas A&M, Clemson, Texas Tech, Brigham Young, North Carolina, Washington and UCLA make up the Second Ten.

Last week, it was Texas A&M, Nebraska, BYU, Southern California, Clemson, Florida State, Arizona State, Texas Tech, North Carolina and Colgate.

Southern Cal fell from grace with a 28-10 loss to Washington. The victory thrust the Huskies into the Top Twenty for the first time this season. UCLA returned to the ratings after a 48-18 decision over Oregon State.

Colgate made the rankings last week for the first time in its history but fell out despite a 48-39 triumph over Northeastern, a Division II club.

Pirate Freshman Is Star Of Tournament

NORFOLK, Va. — Despite a disappointing fourth-place team finish for East Carolina in the Civitan-Monarch Wrestling Classic here this past weekend, there was some respite for the Pirates in the fact that freshman grappler Solomon "Butch" Revis was named the tourney's Most Valuable Wrestler.

William and Mary, one of the team favorites, won its second consecutive title in the event, while West Chester State took second and North Carolina third.

Revis, a freshman from Norfolk, beat four seeded wrestlers in the tourney to gain the 177-pound title and MVP honors. A 1977 graduate of Norview High School, which is close to the Old Dominion University campus where the tournament was held, Revis beat Tennessee's Glenn Hill, defending Southeastern Conference champ, in the first round and Carolina's fifth-seeded Rick Walker in the quarterfinals.

In the semifinals, Revis was leading N. C. State's top-seeded Rick Rodriguez in overtime when an injury forced Rodriguez, who was 29-0 last year, to retire. Revis beat UNC's Carl Hoffman in the finals, 1-0, in overtime.

The Pirates had seven other wrestlers to place in the top five of the event. Frank Schaeede lost an 11-4 decision to Miller of West Chester State in the finals to gain a second-place finish and Paul Osman, who lost in the quarterfinals, took third at 134.

Jay Dever, who lost to Hoffman in the semifinals of the 177-pound class, took third at that weight, while Barry Pursner was fourth at 190. Bob Passino, another freshman, was fourth at 118.

Vic Northrup, wrestling at 167, placed fifth, as did Ronnie Goodall at 190.

First-year coach Bill Hill was not especially pleased with the team's performance as a whole, but praised Revis. "Butch beat some of the best wrestlers around in that weight class.

Area Players Among Ranked

Four Greenville people attended the annual meetings of the North Carolina Tennis Association and the North Carolina Tennis Foundation held this weekend in Greensboro.

Anne Sayetta, president of the Greenville Tennis Club; Don Ball, tennis director for the Greenville Recreation and Parks Department; Tom Sayetta, president of the Eastern Carolina Tennis Association; and West Hanks, past-president of the ECTA attended the meetings.

The NCTF has announced plans to begin construction of a building to serve as headquarters for the NCTA and the NCTF, and to house the North Carolina Tennis Hall of Fame. It will adjoin a new tennis complex to be built by the city of Greensboro.

Three Greenville people were ranked by the state. Fred Matney was listed in the Boys' 16 and under singles; Cynthia Averett, East Carolina women's tennis coach, was ranked in the open women's singles and doubles; and Mrs. Sayetta was listed in the women's 40 singles.

Hanks was elected to the board of directors of the NCTA, and Tom Sayetta was reelected to the board of directors of the NCTF.

Women's Golfing

Several Brook Valley women were among winners in two golf events last week.

In the Eastern Carolina League held at Falling Creek, Mary Bruton won second low gross in C flight, and Ginny Hill won low putts in the same flight.

In the Pitt County League, held at Ayden, Maxine Hawley won low gross and Jane Worsley won low putts in the first flight. Ellen Fleming won low gross, and Miriam Martin took low net in the second flight.

The Denver Nuggets waived the man they'd acquired to bolster their front line, free-agent forward Jacky Dorsey. He appeared in seven games to average three rebounds and shot only 27.3 percent.

Veteran reserve Kevin Restani was cut from the Milwaukee Bucks after averaging 5.7 points and 4.7 rebounds in the three previous seasons. Golden State cut free agent forward Larry McNeill, a five-year veteran picked up from the New York Nets last season.

The Houston Rockets waived rookie guard Phil Bond and the Chicago Bulls released guard Glen Hansen, who had a total of two minutes playing time this season. Indiana did not announce whom they released.

Washington Braces For Anti-Shah Demonstrators

GREETING THE SHAH — Iranians greet the Shah of Iran Monday as he arrives in Williamsburg. The Shah will meet with President Carter today in Washington. (AP Laserphoto)

WASHINGTON (AP) — As the Shah of Iran was opening a two-day state visit here today, security forces braced for demonstrations seen as the biggest display of political agitation since the Vietnam war era.

City police and federal authorities prepared to cope with competing groups of placard-carrying, slogan-shouting demonstrators split between supporters and opponents of the monarch.

Permits for the demonstrations indicated 10,000 to 15,000 people might take part in protests around the city.

By dawn today, about 200 opponents of the shah had gathered in Lafayette Park across Pennsylvania Avenue from the White House, police reported.

Meanwhile, three sticks of dynamite, two blasting caps and a timing device were found overnight in a money bag in front of the midtown Manhattan offices of Iran Air. No group claimed responsibility immediately, but New York City police speculated that the explosives were connected with the shah's visit to this country.

Permits indicated that as many as 9,000 pro-shah demonstrators were expected, including 422 Iranian military personnel training in Texas and a number of Assyrian and Armenian organizations from around the country.

The anti-shah demonstrators were organized by a coalition of Iranian student groups. Police predicted as many as 6,000 people would protest the shah's policies and ties with the United States.

Blair House, the temporary residence for the shah and his wife, Farah, was subjected to unusually tight security, as was the White House across Pennsylvania Avenue.

The Carter administration's relations with Iran reflect several of the difficulties it has had in pursuing some of the foreign policy goals it has set.

The administration's tendency toward a strong emphasis on human rights and reducing overseas arms sales has been blunted, in the case of Iran, by what officials describe as hard political realities. These realities include Iran's role as a 500,000 barrel-a-day oil supplier and its strategic location amid other oil-producing states and along the southern border of the Soviet Union.

Piano Recital Planned Friday

Pianist Jessica Ruthanne Scarangella of Norfolk, Va., a senior in the ECU School of Music, will perform in recital at 8:15 p.m. Friday, Nov. 18, in the A.J. Fletcher Music Center Recital Hall on campus.

For her program, she has chosen two Scarlatti sonatas; Chopin's Polonaise, Opus 40, No. 2 and works by Schubert and Debussy.

There is no admission charge and the public is invited.

Ex-Soldier's $5 Million Claim Kept Alive By Supreme Court

WASHINGTON (AP) — Allen Aaron Jackson was a 21-year-old Army recruit in 1974 when a tank cut him in half, severing both legs and leaving the kidneys and bladder as the only organs intact below his navel.

Jackson survived and now wants $5 million. He says the Army should be forced to pay him because he never should have been near that tank.

The Supreme Court kept alive Jackson's hopes of winning his lawsuit when it sent his case back to the U.S. Court of Claims on Monday. That court previously had dismissed the suit after apparently making a factual error in its deliberations.

"We were both surprised and delighted to hear about the court's action," said one of Jackson's lawyers. The ex-soldier is being represented by the prestigious San Francisco law firm headed by Melvin Belli.

Jackson, now 24 and a Chicago resident, signed up with the Army intent on learning a trade. He signed a contract in which the Army pledged to give him at least 16 months of mechanical training so he could go into the service station or car repair business after a three-year hitch.

Jackson's suit claims he was promised that his specialized training would begin as soon as he finished basic training, but his first assignment was to a tank division.

Disgruntled by what he considered a breach of contract, Jackson requested and had scheduled a May 20, 1974, meeting with superior officers to discuss the matter. The meeting was never held.

The tank division's commander ordered that Jackson postpone the meeting to go out on maneuvers. It was during those exercises that the tank ran over him.

The Supreme Court told the claims court Monday that its finding that Jackson had not completed basic training when the accident occurred was apparently wrong and that the lower court should study again whether he is entitled to damages from the Army.

In other matters, the court: —Agreed to decide whether concern for the existence of a tiny endangered fish, the snail darter, should block completion of a $116 million dam in Tennessee.

A federal appeals court ruled last January that the snail darter, a 3-inch long member of the perch family found only along a 17-mile stretch of the Little Tennessee River, has to be protected. The lower court ordered the Tennessee Valley Authority to halt construction of the nearly completed Tellico Dam.

—Agreed to review the validity of Iowa's system of assessing corporate income taxes on out-of-state companies doing business in Iowa.

Iowa's corporate tax assessments generally are higher than those imposed by 44 other states and the District of Columbia. If the Supreme Court upholds Iowa's system, other states are likely to consider adopting it to increase revenues.

—Let stand a lower court's ruling in a case from Illinois that state prison officials must supply a reason when refusing to let a prisoner call witnesses at a disciplinary hearing.

Has Doubts On Hunger Strike

AMERICUS, Ga. (AP) — Buddy Cochran, the man convicted of ramming his car into a Ku Klux Klan rally, is rumored to be on a hunger strike, but if so, Sheriff Randy Howard wants to know where the food is going.

"He hasn't turned down any trays," Howard said Monday in response to news reports that Cochran was refusing "We send in trays with food on them and they are coming out empty."

He will be sentenced Thursday at the Sumter County Courthouse in Americus, Judge W.F. Blanks said Monday.

To Require Housing Aid

ASHEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — About 150 families forced from their homes by flooding in western North Carolina will need government help finding a temporary place to live, federal officials said Monday.

The U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development said it would have to provide about 100 mobile homes and locate apartments or rental homes for another 50 families.

An additional 440 families had their homes severely damaged, HUD officials said, but would be able to continue living in them while government-financed repairs are under way.

Those figures, officials noted, do not include families in the four counties added Monday to the 12 already declared eligible for federal disaster assistance.

Those counties — Haywood, Catawba, Henderson and Rutherford — were added after surveys of flood damage indicated their need for help justified the move, which makes their residents eligible for the special relief and assistance programs already available in the other 12 disaster areas counties.

Federal disaster aid coordinators said they were planning to leave the seven disaster centers open at least through Saturday as flood victims continued to apply for help.

Two of the centers, however, are to be moved. The Morganton center was being moved to Spear in Avery County and the Hot Springs center was to be moved across the French Broad River to Marshall in Madison County.

Officials said they thought most victims had applied for aid in Morganton and Hot Springs and there were more in the new locations who hadn't been able to reach centers yet.

The Spear center will be in the Riverside Elementary School gymnasium. In Marshall it will be in the Opportunity Corp. of Madison County. Both will open at 10 a.m. Wednesday.

DOUBLE TROUBLE — Even after an accident, it's difficult to tell identical twins apart. Cindy, top, and Wendy Cic fell from a pony and they were riding double, and each suffered a broken left arm. Doctors said X-rays show that even the breaks are nearly identical. The five-year-olds are daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Cic of Clinton, Ohio. (AP Laserphoto)

Colds and Allergies

The cycle of colds, sinusitis and allergies is with us again. With two adults and three teenagers in the household it would be very helpful if we knew how to distinguish a cold from an allergy. — Mrs. G.J., Mich. Dear Mrs. J.:

A sinus infection can follow either a cold or allergy. Bacteria find their way from the nose into the sinuses, set up housekeeping and get to work.

Allergic people seem to be more susceptible to sinus infections than others because the germs that infect the sinuses grow more profusely in the warm moist area of the nose. The nose is virtually an incubator that makes these bacteria flourish.

In general, colds, infections and sinusitis are associated with achiness, headaches, a feeling of debility and, sometimes, fever.

On the other hand, allergic attacks usually confine themselves to sneezing, running of the nose and itching of the eyes. The patient may feel miserable, but does not have the general body discomfort that accompanies severe colds.

When allergies and sinus infections are present at the same time, treatment is directed at both. The use of simple antihistamines and decongestants is effective and brings moderate relief. The decision as to the use of antibiotics must, of course, be made by the doctor.

There is a tendency to use leftover antibiotics before consulting the doctor. This is unwise because not only may the shelf life of the drug have expired, but the nature of the infection may not have required the antibiotic in the first place.

Many early colds are viral infections rather than bacterial infections. Viral infections do not respond to the antibiotics. Yet doctors will sometimes prescribe an antibiotic even though an infection seems to be of viral origin. The purpose is to prevent the secondary invasion of the nose, throat and sinuses by bacteria.

When people are living in close contact with each other, it is important that they separate themselves from the others at the onset of a cold. Cross-contamination is always a problem.

One of the most effective treatments for acute sinus infections is the use of steam. Concentrated steam is almost always available in the bathroom. Well-balanced steam inhalators and facial saunas are very effective. Tiny inhalators are tippable and one should be very careful when using them.

Warm, moist compresses to the face bring welcome relief to sufferers of acute sinus infections. Aspirin, unless forbidden in certain cases, can add to this relief.

Nose drops and nose sprays should be used only sparingly. Allergic people, particularly, have a tendency to become dependent on these "vasoconstricting" medicines. Almost before they recognize it, these drops are used with such great frequency and in such great quantities that there is a rebound swelling of the nose which makes the misery last longer.

FIGHT AFTERMATH — Chicago Nazi leader Frank Collin leans against another group member as they are detained by a campus policeman after a fight broke out Monday outside a community college in a western Chicago suburb. Fighting erupted between the Nazis and an opposing group outside a hall where anti-Nazi manhunter Simon Wiesenthal was to speak. Collin and one other supporter were taken into custody according to a college police spokesman. (AP Laserphoto)

Bill Harrah, 66, Is Weighing Expansion—Not Retirement

By GARY PEDERSEN
Associated Press Writer
RENO (AP) — Expansion, not retirement, is foremost in Bill Harrah's mind these days, as the possibility of gaming in Australia increases.

Forty years after he opened a dimly lit bingo parlor in downtown Reno, William Fisk Harrah runs what the experts say is the best gaming operation in Nevada. And while his $100 million-plus operation is centered here, he says his thoughts are across the ocean.

"They already have slot machines in Australia and it looks like in a couple of years casino gaming will be legalized. They are looking at what gaming can do for their country. It would be a challenge for us," he said.

The Nevada Gaming Commission has some reservations about allowing Nevada gaming operators permission to expand to out-of-state or in foreign countries, but many feel if any could win that permission it would be Harrah, who already is laying the groundwork.

Harrah, 66, a man who reveres privacy, allowed interviews recently as his 40th anniversary in gambling approached.

Over the years he has steadfastly built a reputation for management excellence, and along the way built two of Nevada's busiest hotel casinos, here and at Stateline on Lake Tahoe.

Harrah's is a public corporation with an impressive financial foundation. The latest annual report shows $14.6 million net earnings, up 25 percent on a 14 percent increase in net revenue of $161 million in 1976. Figures for the current year appear to be on their way to being better.

"Any successful business should always be thinking about expansion. We are. Our Harrah's World is on the front burner, we have an expansion planned downtown here, and the Australia possibility remains.

"And we aren't anti-Las Vegas, either. If we could find a super deal on a hotel down there ... we'll be there. We don't want to go down and buy some land and build a new one, but as I said, if the right deal comes along, we'll take it."

How about expansion to Atlantic City, where voters have approved casino gambling?

"That's a possibility and we are looking at it. But we are going to sit back a while and watch what happens. We want to see if they are going to be able to control it, or see whether the bad guys will be taking over," Harrah said.

Over the years, Harrah has let action — not words — speak for him. His friends call him reserved, quiet, private and insistent on quality. But above all they say he is a good businessman.

"I've built all this on solid business principals. I've been fortunate to have some excellent management people I'm not an expert on gaming, but I have some people who are," he said.

He's attracted many new customers with top-name entertainment. He calls many of those performers friends and has them to dinner at his opulent Ranchharrah south of town.

Reports Heard At NAACP Meeting

The Pitt County Chapter of the NAACP met at Live Oak FWB Church Sunday night and regional vice presidents' reports were given.

Willie Mae Carney reported that the adult tutoring program at North Pitt High School will get underway Nov. 28.

It was reported that a Pitt County teacher has been fired without notice. The community will be looking into the matter, NAACP President D. D. Garrett said.

Henry Hooks reported that the proposed consolidation of the Ayden and Grifton middle schools is causing "dissatisfaction and concern" in the community.

Purvis Choen was appointed vice president of Region 2, replacing Donovan Phillips, who has resigned.

Lucille Sharp gave out 30,000 Christmas seals to be sold between now and the Christmas holidays.

It was announced that the president, D. D. Garrett, will appear on "The Virginia Foye Show" on Channel 12, New Bern Nov. 20.

D. D. Burge reported that the Committee on New Horizons has decided that Feb. 11 and 12 will be the days to expound on the theme, "A New Day Begun." A program will be held at the Holiday Inn here, with two of the speakers being Dudley Flood, formerly of Pitt County, who is now in the N.C. Department of Public Instruction, and Dr. Grady Davis, a Shaw University professor. All churches in the county are asked to participate in this New Horizons program during January or February.

Doris S. Lee reported that the Queen Contest will be held Dec. 16. Interested youth may contact her by Nov. 28 at her home (752-5882), she said.

Producer Faces New Charges

NEW YORK (AP) — Broadway producer Adela Holzer is faced with new allegations similar to those in a state indictment that accuses her of $2.3 million in grand larceny and stock violations.

The Securities and Exchange Commission said in a civil complaint filed Monday that Mrs. Holzer, a major investor in the original production of "Hair," violated securities laws in selling investment contracts for various commodities, land in Spain, vehicles and stock.

The bankrupt Broadway entrepreneur has been free on a $50,000 surety bond pending trial on a 248-count indictment alleging that she defrauded investors in various deals, issued false financial statements and violated securities laws.

Some Striking Firemen Helped In Hospital Fire

By ED BLANCHE
Associated Press Writer
LONDON (AP) — Dozens of London firemen abandoned their day-old national strike for an hour early today to help inexperienced army firefighters put out a blaze in a hospital and rescue scores of helpless patients from smoke-filled wards.

"The soldiers were doing their best, but they were out of their depth," said Jim Rogers, a leader of the striking firemen in the East End. "People would have died if we hadn't come in. Our boys would have lynched me if I'd tried to stop them fighting the fire."

One squad of strikers donned breathing apparatus and made their way through the choking smoke to put out the fire in the basement of the 400-bed St. Andrew's Hospital.

Others took over hoses from the 40 army troops manning obsolete civil defense fire trucks taken out of mothballs by the government to meet the emergency.

There were no casualties, and the firemen went back to the picket lines after the fire was under control.

The hospital fire was the most serious blaze reported during the first 24 hours of the strike for higher pay by most of Britain's 33,000 fulltime firemen. It is Britain's first national firemen's strike, and the government mobilized 10,000 hastily-trained soldiers plus thousands of part-time reserve firemen and civilian volunteers.

A government spokesman said the number of emergency calls Monday was well below the normal 2,000 although there was an increase in false alarms.

"People are definitely being more careful about fire precautions," said the spokesman. However, he reported an increase in hoax calls.

Two fire deaths were reported, but police said the strike was not to blame. "Even if the firemen had been operational, they could not have got to the fires in time," an official said.

The troops put out fires in a cardboard factory in Glasgow, in a furniture store in Leicester and in a Birmingham scrapyard.

The firemen are demanding a 30 percent pay increase, three times the 10 percent anti-inflation ceiling which Prime Minister James Callaghan's Labor government is trying to maintain for the third year. It is the most serious challenge so far to the government's wage-restraint policy.

Richard Foggie, assistant general secretary of the Fire Brigades Union, claimed about 97.5 percent of the regular firemen were on strike.

"It's solid," he told reporters.

How's The Weather?

FORECAST Until Wednesday

Figures show low temperatures for area.

Data from 60 NATIONAL WEATHER SERVICE, NOAA, U.S. Dept. of Commerce

WEATHER FORECAST — Warmer weather is forecast for today from the California coast to the Southeast. Cooler weather is due in the North. Showers are expected in the Northwest and from the Ohio Valley to the Great Lakes. (AP Laserphoto Map)

By The Associated Press
A few days of milder temperatures are in store for North Carolina after the chill of the last several days. A high pressure system has drifted off the coast and southwest winds will moderate temperatures through Wednesday.

However, by late Wednesday a weak cold front will be pushing through the mountains. This will be accompanied by scattered showers through Thursday morning. Meanwhile, temperatures will change little for the rest of the week.

Cool temperatures prevailed under generally sunny skies around the state Monday with most high readings in the low to mid 50s. The highest readings were in the mountains which received the warmer air first.

Asheville's high was 56 while Cape Hatteras was 49 and Raleigh 51.

Low readings this morning were mostly in the 30s, a little warmer than the lows of Monday morning.

High temperatures today were expected to range in the upper 50s to middle 60s and the lows tonight are expected to be in the 30s west to the middle 40s in the east.

Highs Wednesday may climb to the low 70s along the southeast coast and range downward to the 50s in the mountains.

Lyricist Cahn, 64 Keeps Busy

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — It's the custom for elderly songwriters to grouse that today's tunes aren't as good as in the old days. We now turn the floor over to Sammy Cahn, 64.

"Aw, I don't hold with that much," the four-time Academy Award winner said by phone from New York. "I think every generation has the right to put its own stamp on its own culture."
Lyricist Cahn, a songwriter since age 17, has 18 new tunes in one show arriving next Nov. 23. It's a CBS music special called "Once Upon a Brothers Grimm."

A peppery man of sunny disposition and a favorite composer for such singers as Frank Sinatra, Cahn counts the tunes he's written in the thousands, not hundreds.
The better-known ones range from "Three Coins in the Fountain" to "Bei Mir Bist Du Schon." In addition to his Oscars, he also got an Emmy in 1955 for "Love and Marriage," later a Sinatra hit.

A resident of Beverly Hills for 37 years, Cahn still maintains an apartment in his native New York, where he and a pal, Saul Chaplin, broke into the song business as a team.
It was there they first scurried about the hallowed halls of tunesmithing, the Brill Building in mid-Manhattan, knocking on publishers' doors, offering their wares and learning of rejection.
"We got turned down every day, but that's how we learned to write," laughed Cahn, who recently ended a stint at New York's Rainbow Room in a show that featured both his anecdotes and his music.

When he began his career, publishers ran things. Cahn was asked where he'd try today if he, at his current age, was starting fresh, had no reputation and never had a song recorded or published before.
"I'd try to find a recording artist who doesn't write his own material, which would be very difficult," he said, noting that most of today's pop singers prefer to write their own songs.
Why the change?
"I wish I could explain it, but I can't," he said. But he suggested that today a singer needn't be all that good to succeed, which helps composers with not-so-hot voices make it as singers.
The suggestion wasn't sarcastic, just realistic.
Cahn, now in the process of writing special material for a coming 50th anniversary salute of CBS by CBS, was asked the inevitable question: Which comes first, the words or the music?
"The phone call," he said, meaning the songwriting assignment.

Today's Cryptoquip clue: W equals M

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Sentence For Former Curator

ASHEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — The former curator of the Pack Memorial Library's Thomas Wolfe Collection has been fined $1,000 and placed on probation after pleading guilty to stealing four letters written by the deceased novelist from the collection.
Thomas Meehan, 43, was originally charged with embezzlement, but he pleaded guilty to a lesser charge of theft of property from a public property, a misdemeanor. The sentencing marked the end of a case which began more than three years ago when five original Wolfe letters were stolen from the Wolfe collection at the library here.
All five letters have been recovered and returned, Library Director Kenneth Brown said Monday.
Suncombe County Superior Court Judge John R. Friday sentenced Meehan to two years in prison, but the sentence was suspended. Meehan was placed on probation and fined $1,000, which he paid immediately after his trial.
The library staff didn't discover that the letters were missing until September 1976. Police and city officials didn't know who had taken them until Meehan admitted it in a telephone interview with a reporter last April.
Four letters were traced to their various new owners. A fifth letter, described as "insignificant and almost valueless," had not at first been reported missing by the library. Meehan returned it to the city last May.

Meehan worked at the library from 1971 until 1974, serving as head of the North Carolina Room and curator of the Thomas Wolfe Collection.

FORECAST FOR WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 16, 1977

Your Daily HOROSCOPE

from the CARROLL RIGHTER INSTITUTE

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Charm interests and entertainments will not work out as you wish right now. But you will be able to gain the good will of others and achieve much of a constructive and basic nature.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Look to clever friends who are serious for assistance today, since fun pals could only get you in trouble. Be organized and you accomplish a great deal.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Contact important persons you know and gain their good will, support. Get involved in civic matters that can be helpful to you.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Study a new plan you have in mind well and bring it to the attention of bigwigs who can help you with it. Don't be flippant with higherups or you gain their ill will.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Be very practical in dealing with debtors and creditors and get right results. Pay more attention to the views of a loved one and you keep out of trouble.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Understand what is expected of you by a clever partner and you have more success. Keep promises or you could lose out where it counts most.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Consider the purchase of new appliances to get work done more efficiently. Avoid high-strung, nervous types who could disappoint you.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) A good time to get into creative work but not a good time for frivolity. Show more affection for a loved one, and get a fine response.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Gather all the facts and figures you will need in order to better your financial affairs. Be loyal to the ones you love.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Go after information you need from right sources and use a direct method in dealing with others. Don't let your emotions run away with you. Show that you have self-control and are confident.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) You have new ideas through which you can add appreciably to your present income. Don't argue with those close to you because you may be wrong.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Contact good friends who are able to help you in some way. Listen to their suggestions. Forget that frivolity you have in mind and show you are a stable person.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Rely on your experiences in the past in order to set up a better arrangement for the future. A new contact offers a scheme that's not for you.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will be quite unusual and will get ahead in life because the thinking is radically different from that of others. The field of science is especially fine here.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to YOU!

On Monday night, November 21, the American Contract Bridge League Charity Foundation will hand over to the Arthritis Foundation a check for $125,000. The ceremony will take place at the Continental Charity Game in Atlanta during the Fall North American Championships. Those same hands played at the national site will be played that evening throughout North America. You can join in organized bridge's efforts to help its fellow man by contacting your local bridge club for details of the game nearest you.

The Foundation is careful to see that its charities are not among those that squander the sums raised. On this hand, West was guilty of the reverse—hoarding his assets.
North's jump to four spades was rather aggressive. He certainly had the right trump holding, but we would prefer to see a singleton somewhere to add distributional strength to the hand.
West led the king of clubs, and as soon as dummy came down declarer realized that he had problems. East had to have both missing diamond honors for his double, so South rated to lose a heart, two diamonds and a club. Declarer could set up a club

John Houston

Still in Hospital

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actor-director John Houston, who has had two operations this fall, has improved from fair to good condition.
But it's too early to tell when the 71-year-old double Oscar winner will go home, said a spokesman for Cedars-Sinai Medical Center in Hollywood.
Houston, who won the Academy Awards in 1948 for writing and directing "The Treasure of Sierra Madre," underwent elective heart surgery on Sept. 25 for an aortic aneurism. He was operated on Oct. 28 to relieve abdominal blockage, a complication of the earlier surgery.

Some Vets See A Job To Do Aiding Rhodesia

By JACQUES CLAFIN
SALISBURY, Rhodesia (UPI)
— With a drink in one hand and a cigarette in the other, American Keith Nelson sat smiling in a wheelchair surrounded by a group of young women at a garden party.

A friend slapped a hand on the stump that once was Nelson's left knee and asked: "How ya doin', ol' buddy?" Nelson's smile widened and he replied, "Just fine."

As he told it, Nelson's biggest problem was waiting for the stumps to lose their swelling so he could be fitted with replacements for the legs he lost to a black nationalist guerrilla mine in June while serving as a Rhodesian infantry medic.

Once this is done, Nelson goes back to active duty, this time as a medic instructor.

Nelson, 26, from Sycamore, Ill., a veteran of Vietnam, is one of scores of Americans who have come to help fight insurgents intent on transforming white-run Rhodesia into black-ruled Zimbabwe.

Foreign reports put the number of foreigners fighting in Rhodesia at about 1,000, most of them Britons with kith and kin ties to Rhodesia's white settler community. Military sources say between 200 and 300 are Americans.

Two have been killed in the past five years. At least a dozen have deserted.

Because of a supreme court ruling that an American fighting for Israel need not be stripped of his U.S. citizenship, Americans serving in Rhodesia — which is not deemed an enemy of the United States — do not run the risk of losing theirs unless they lie about their military activities when applying for new passports.

Most Americans here share five common factors: a conservative bent, disenchantment with current U.S. foreign policy, previous service in the U.S. armed forces, a craving for adventure and the notion that by fighting here they're picking up where U.S. forces left off in Vietnam.

Like Nelson, a one-time special forces medic who came in February in search of an alternative to college biology classes, most are Vietnam veterans.

Are they mercenaries? "I hate to hear that word," says Nelson. The dictionary defines it as a person fighting under a foreign flag. Well, by that definition, yes.

"But if the definition you use is the current one where you think of a mercenary as some bloodthirsty killer out getting paid 2,000 bucks a week to walk around the bush and slaughter people, then obviously no."

Nelson and others like him say they get paid the same as Rhodesians — about the equivalent of $534 a month for a noncom and approximately $680 for an officer, all remitted in non-transferable local currency. The only benefit foreigners receive for signing up is that, if accepted, they are reimbursed for plane fare to Rhodesia.

Americans are made aware of Rhodesia in advertisements in publications such as "Soldier of Fortune," the mercenary magazine. In countries where such advertising is illegal, the Rhodesians rely on word of mouth.

An army public relations officer, who asked that his name not be used, said applications are "checked as thoroughly as possible," partly to make sure foreign volunteers are not foreign agents.

"There's no point in hiding the fact that Rhodesia needs manpower in its struggle," he said. "So obviously the more suitable volunteers we are able to recruit, the more able we are to prosecute the war."

Foreigners generally take one rank lower than the one they held in the armed forces of their home countries.

Americans, the army spokesman said, "fit in very well and do a great job. Their experience in Vietnam, in many cases, is a good foundation, although they do have a training course to adjust to the terrorist war we are fighting." Once re-trained, foreigners can attain senior operational ranks, even if they were phased out of the service back home.

A case in point is Maj. Mike Williams, 52, a one-time special forces captain who now commands a squadron of the Grey Scouts, Rhodesia's unique horse-mounted infantry. He served 12 years in the U.S. army, but in 1960-61 "got caught in a reduction in forces" and was returned to reserve status.

Williams, of San Antonio, Texas, ran a scuba school boat service in Florida. In February, 1976, he traveled to Zambia to join Jonas Savimbi's guerrillas but he failed to make contact and opted for Rhodesia.

"This is the only country now that is actually fighting communism in Africa," he said.

Travis Tucker, 29, of Arlington, Va., served four years in Vietnam as a marine, had a "disastrous marriage," left it for a "white-ruled English-speaking country" where he could raise a son and now serves in the Selous Scouts — an elite unit of bush trackers.

In many ways, Tucker is typical of many Americans fighting here. Well educated and conservative, he sees the war, not as a black struggle for equality, but as a communist plot because the guerrillas are equipped and trained by Communist countries.

On the U.S. withdrawal from Vietnam, he says: "They just sold out every boy who died over there."

Like other Americans interviewed, Tucker says he would not object to majority rule here, providing it was stable, democratic and kept the capitalist system on which whites here thrive.

If such a regime should come about, it is doubtful many Americans will see it close up.

A condition of the terms of the Anglo-American peace proposals is that foreigners in the armed forces be discharged during an interim premajority rule period.

Certification For Facility

Jack E. Woods, administrator at Greenville Villa nursing home here, announced that word was received Monday that the facility has been given certification in the Skill Care program.

Woods said that the certification means that Greenville Villa can now accept Medicare and Skill Medicaid patients at the nursing facility.

SINGERS' ANNIVERSARY

The Supreme Gospel Singers will celebrate their second anniversary on Nov. 20 at Burning Bush Holiness Church at 2 p.m. The public is invited.

CANINE CARRIER — It would seem that Tony, an Airedale belonging to Pleas C. Fagle of Augusta, Ga., would appear to be a very smart dog. After all, any dog that can fetch the evening newspaper from the delivery box across the street from his home is not dumb. Even smarter would be his master who taught him to retrieve the paper, saving time and energy. Now to teach him to answer the doorbell. (AP Laserphoto)
