Sadat Seeks Endorsement Of Peace Trip

Advise Annexing Of 85-Acre Tract

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer
The City-County Planning and Zoning Commission will recommend to the City Council that an 85-acre tract west of the hospital be brought into the city under the satellite annexation program.

Following a lengthy discussion Tuesday night on the annexation petition for University Medical Park, the board voted to endorse the proposal with the condition that agreements for water and sewer for the area be worked out with Greenville Utilities prior to annexation.

In addition, the planning board also voted to request that the Council indicate whether it is interested in further annexations in the western segment.

Staff planner Ben Shivar discussed a report prepared on the annexation avenues available and pointed out that annexation by petition or forced annexation possibilities exist. Contiguous property is involved in both cases.

City Planner John Schofield said that the disadvantages of satellite annexation would have to be weighed with the disadvantages of annexing land just to make property contiguous.

He noted that within 12 months after annexation, all services would have to be provided to the annexed property.

Commissioners had expressed concern at the October meeting about the satellite provisions and board member, Mrs. Ruth Trevathan, said that the satellite annexation would create a hodgepodge of zoning.

The property involved in the petition is located in the southeast quadrant of the intersection of Stantonsburg Road and Allen Road and lies some 4,000 feet west of the hospital. Annexation would involve satellite provisions since the property is not contiguous to the city limits. Shivar said the property is 700 feet from the city.

Commissioner E. E. Howell contended that the landowner "has faith in the city" in requesting that the property be annexed. Howell said that he feels the city will be making a mistake if "we don't give him an opportunity to become a part of the city."

Charles Horne, director of Greenville Utilities, explained that GUC's intent is to serve the areas that the city feels will be developed in the future, not property that may remain undeveloped.

Adjacent property owners may be interested in having their land annexed, it was pointed out.

The commission voted to recommend to the Council that the ordinance regulating vegetation parking islands be amended to stipulate that an internal layout will be presented to the board on all parking lots of 100,000 square feet or more.

The action followed the defeat of a motion by Mrs. Trevathan not to amend the ordinance. Chairman Lyman Ormond Jr. cast the tie-breaking vote against the motion after the commissioners had deadlocked at five and five.

DAMASCUS, Syria (AP) — Egyptian President Anwar Sadat flew to Damascus today to seek endorsement from skeptical Syrian allies for his dramatic offer to visit Jerusalem on a peace mission.

President Hafez Assad, a persistent critic of unilateral moves in Arab-Israeli relations, embraced the Egyptian president on the tarmac of Damascus international airport as hundreds of armed security guards stood watch.

Sadat's first official visit to the Syrian capital since May 1975 involved unusually tight security because his proposal to go to Israel could increase the risk of attack from extremists, sources said. Damascus has also recently been the target of random bombings, which the official press has blamed on the arch-rival regime in neighboring Iraq.

Before leaving Cairo, Sadat confirmed Israeli President Menachem Begin's formal invitation had arrived but said he had not yet fixed a date for the visit. Asked if he might go next week, he replied, "Let us hope so."

The scheduling of a visit is complicated by Begin's plans to visit Britain Nov. 20-22 and the Moslem holiday of Kurban Bairam on Nov. 20-22.

The Egyptian president talked earnestly with Assad as they walked up the red carpet to the reviewing stand.

Syrian officials and the state-controlled press have been restrained in their reaction to Sadat's surprise announcement in Cairo last week that he was willing to go to the Israeli Knesset to talk peace.

Privately Syrians have shown undisguised anger.

They claim they were not consulted in advance on the proposal.

More significantly, Syria sees the one-man initiative as a threat to the united Arab front's efforts to win concessions from the Jewish state to withdraw from all occupied Arab territories. They also want Israel to recognize a Palestinian state on the Israeli-controlled West Bank of the Jordan River.

With guarded language, the press today condemned "bilateral solutions" and warned that "attempts to split Syria and Egypt will meet with total failure."

Informed sources believe that Syria probably will not reveal the results of the Assad-Sadat summit, even if some convergence of views is reached. The Syrians have been the strongest supporters of the Palestinians and their quest for statehood and are unlikely to publicly endorse a Sadat initiative which is so far viewed as by-passing Palestinian interests.

On the other hand, the sources say, Assad will not want publicly to air any disagreements with Sadat.

Another main topic expected to be on the summit agenda is the U.S.-Israeli working paper on reconvening the Geneva conference. The Syrians are more critical of the plan than Egypt, primarily because it avoids mention of the Palestine Liberation Organization which Assad says must be represented at Geneva. Syria also objects to geographical groupings in Geneva talks, fearing they could lead to individual agreements weakening the overall Arab cause.

Many Air Objections To Franchised Hauler Plan

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Pitt County Commissioners last night held a public hearing on a proposed solid waste ordinance and franchise plan which would assign private contractors to districts and assure pick-up service for trash and garbage for homeowners in rural areas who are willing to pay for the service.

More than 60 people attended the session and practically all who voiced their opinion of the proposed ordinance and franchise plan opposed the measure, saying they liked their independent hauler and favored the free enterprise system.

Under the plan, the county would be divided into ten districts with an independent franchised hauler assigned to each district. The districts are roughly the same size, containing approximately the same number of housing units and the same number of road miles.

Nine of the private haulers have indicated their satisfaction with the proposed district assignments. Only one, Jessie Stator, has voiced dissatisfaction with his district assignment.

"I have not accepted 'a franchise plan,'" Stator said at the hearing. The main reason why, he said, is because "it took seven years to build up a business. Now I'm going to have trouble with someone coming in saying I'm going to have to give some of my business to John Doe."

Stator contended, "I think my rights have been taken away from me as a solid waste hauler."

Currently about 30 per cent of the residents outside municipalities in the county contract for home pickup of solid waste. Others, among the 70 per cent who do not contract for collection service, live in areas too sparsely settled to be economically served by contract haulers under the present system.

Under the franchise program, the haulers would be required to serve any household paying the monthly fee. Commissioners, prior to the hearing, tentatively set the monthly fee at $6 for once-a-week pickup service. The fee would be paid directly to the hauler who would be responsible for collecting the fee and soliciting new business.

Opposition to the proposed ordinance and franchise plan last night came primarily from residents of River Hills, Lake Glenwood, and Sherwood Greens subdivisions now served by Stator, who said Stator now provides good service. Most of those who spoke also indicated they favored the free enterprise system where collectors could solicit business wherever they wished.

Stator and the free enterprise system was praised to such an extent at the hearing that Charles Gaskins, chairman of the Board of Commissioners said the meeting appeared to be, "a testimonial meeting on Jessie Stator," rather than a hearing on the proposed ordinance and franchise plan.

Milton Altschuler, a Lake Glenwood resident, said he resented government intervention in the private sector, while Bill Jones of 102 South Elm St. said in his opinion the plan

"deprives us of our freedom of choice" to choose who will pick up solid waste.

Jones noted that the "free enterprise system is what has made America great."

David White told the board, "the thing that concerned me is this ordinance is not going to stop the irresponsible citizen from throwing garbage out by the roadside."

Henry Andrews, who lives near Cherry Oaks, said, "as independent businessmen, the 'contractors should have a chance to compete against each other,' indicating that under the proposed plan contractors would be required to operate only in the districts to which they are assigned."

Kenneth Hammond of Route 7, Greenville said the franchise plan means, "I can't shop around for the best price," after Mike Beckert of Brook Valley said he was paying less than the $6 proposed fee for waste pickup twice each week. Beckert noted that the franchise plan seemed to be "subsidizing others."

Carol Fearrington told the board the residents of River Hills "want to keep Jessie Stator as our collector," while Danny Shive of Lake Glenwood said in his opinion governmental interference would make waste collection more expensive while "competition makes the bill

James M. Roberts said the "plan guarantees a monopoly," and added, "I think the plan itself is bad as a practical solution to a problem."

A lawyer and a Cherry Oaks resident, Roberts noted that the monthly rate would prevent many people from taking advantage of the weekly service.

Barbara Walker of Sherwood Greens noted, "Jessie (Stator) is the only one that's going to get hurt," if the ordinance is finally adopted.

Frank Freuler, a Brook Valley resident urged commissioners to take a hard look at the economics of the proposal before adopting the plan.

The only speaker endorsing the proposed ordinance and franchise plan was Brook Valley resident George Alvin.

Alvin said the Brook Valley Homeowners Association has endorsed the proposal. "We have to look beyond our own subdivision and think what is best for the entire county," Alvin emphasized.

Gaskins, who declined to answer a number of questions posed to the board last night for the sake of expediency at the hearing, said this morning that county officials would attempt to respond to the questions through a press release in the next few days.

WASHINGTON (AP) — With almost a hundred demonstrators already injured, police mobilized for a second day of raucous street protests by supporters and opponents of the Shah of Iran as he wound up his violence-scarred state visit.

Demonstrations were planned at more than a dozen widely scattered sites around the city.

After a final round of talks with President Carter at the White House today, the shah was scheduled to attend an Embassy Row luncheon hosted by Vice President Walter F. Mondale and a later meeting on Capitol Hill with the House International Relations Committee.

Thousands of slogan-shouting, placard-carrying demonstrators from both sides were expected to await the shah as he traveled to his appointments. He and his wife, the Empress Farah, are due to leave tonight from Andrews Air Force Base outside Washington for a trip to Paris.

Police revoked permits for today's protests closest to the executive mansion, deciding to forbid anti-shah forces from massing on the sidewalk north of the White House and proshah groups from using the Ellipse south of the mansion. Other permits near the White House remained in effect, but with greater separation of the two factions.

This has been the most tumultuous of the shah's 12 visits here during his 36-year reign.

There were 12 arrests and 124 people reported injured, 25 of them police officers, as repeated clashes broke out between the contending factions.

George Washington University Hospital officials said at least 45 demonstrators were treated in the emergency room.

Three were admitted, including a 66-year-old proshah demonstrator from California. He was listed in serious condition late Tuesday night after undergoing two hours of surgery for a fractured skull.

A 21-year-old demonstrator was in satisfactory condition with a spinal injury. The third, a 20-year-old anti-shah student, was in fair condition with facial cuts.

National Park Service police estimated that about 8,000 people took part in Tuesday's protests.

The shah's supporters see him as a hero for bringing prosperity and stability to Iran.

Kitty Wells says she has performed in tobacco warehouses in North Carolina before, but not in Greenville.

"This is really wonderful and the people seemed to enjoy it," the Grand Ole Opry star said after yesterday's performance at the Second Tobacco Farmer Show.

She added that she and her husband Johnny Wright were happy to be at the event.

"People are wonderful here in North Carolina," the Nashville native said.

According to Stephen Denny, editor of Specialized Agricultural Publications, Inc., which is sponsoring the show, both the Kitty Wells Show and Jerry Clower were chosen to perform because "they are crowd drawers." Clower performs today at 2:30 p.m.

"Both have an affinity for agriculture and Kitty has a North Carolina heritage," said Denny.

According to Denny, today's high points include Commissioner's Day and Farm City Night.

North Carolina Commissioner of Agriculture James Graham attended the show, along with Commissioners of Agriculture from Virginia, South Carolina, Georgia, and Florida will also be present.

"They will be discussing current issues on tobacco specifically, and agriculture in general," said Denny.

"Here, they will be available for questions from farmers. The Commissioners were to be on stage here at the show between 2-4 p.m.," he added.

Farm City Night will begin after work hours today. Denny noted that the purpose is "to allow, not only city dwellers to visit the show, but also farm workers who have been tied up during the day

"City dwellers should recognize that with the elaborate machinery available and with improved technology, farmers are facing a rise in production of food costs."

Denny added that one of the reasons for organizing Farm City Night was to help town people to appreciate the farmers' predicament.

"Some city dwellers will probably be goggle-eyed to see the prices of farm equipment over $50,000. The average 100 horsepower tractor is now somewhere between $20,000-$25,000," he noted.

The show will remain open until nine tonight.

At the close of yesterday's show, Denny said that the exhibits were more than he could take in.

"The crowds were good and the crowd interest has been very high.

"We are happy with the turnout, so far."

Projects may be left and picked up at the home of her mother, Mrs. Julian Whichard, at 1607 Chestnut Street, Greenville, 758-1419. The price varies according to the difficulty of the project, but averages about 75 cents a letter, her mother said.

Over 200 Have Applied For ECU Position

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

"The response to our efforts has been overwhelming," Troy Pate of Goldsboro, Chairman of the ECU Board of Trustees commented today in reference to several applications received for the position of chancellor. "Over 200 individuals have submitted formal application for the chancellorship."

"A significant number of these applicants," Pate pointed out, "presently hold high-level positions in education, industry and government. Many of them are esteemed scholars and persons with noteworthy achievements to their credit."

The Chancellor Selection Committee, formed last June for the purpose of selecting a person to succeed retiring Chancellor Dr. Leo Jenkins, is composed of university trustees, faculty and students, as well as alumni of the university.

The committee has met several times. In addition, the office of the Executive Secretary, under Dr. Clinton Prewett, has been open continuously to committee members, and a number of subcommittee meetings have been held.

With this large number of highly qualified applications to work from, the next step planned is to have a travel team report to several central locations in the U.S. to meet and talk to candidates who are considered to have the highest qualifications.

"This will take place sometime in December," Dr. Prewett remarked. "The travel team will consist of several representatives of the selection committee who will be interviewing these applicants."

After that phase is completed, candidates determined as the top applicants will be invited to visit Greenville and the East Carolina University campus. That stage, according to Dr. Prewett, will be in early 1978.

Pate said that the process of selecting the top applicants will involve "an intensive, in-depth analysis. As we proceed, we will involve parties and persons outside the Selection Committee."

Pate praised the work of those involved in the selection process. "I appreciate the cooperation and the understanding shown by members of the Selection Committee," Pate said. "This is a delicate enterprise, and the posture of strict confidentiality that has been maintained has enabled us to negotiate with a number of superbly qualified individuals who otherwise would have been unavailable for discussion."

"There is every reason to believe," Pate said, "that we shall secure a chancellor who will serve East Carolina University well in the future."

Christmas Crafts Workshops Set

The East Carolina University Division of Continuing Education, in conjunction with the ECU School of Art and the ECU School of Home Economics, is offering a series of eight Holiday Workshops — six in art, and two in food.

He Says Cut Out Sans Souci Club Has Anniversary Business Trips

DEAR ABBY: I've been married less than a month and my husband has already given me an ultimatum. If I go on any overnight business trips with the professional group I belong to, we are finished! Abby, this is my third marriage, and I want it to be my last.

I am a professional woman and I've gone to these meetings for years. I am not going to give them up just because my husband feels threatened.

I made the mistake of telling him about a couple of flings I had on these trips, but that was long before I knew him. I swear I have no interest in any other man!

He won't believe me. He is an absolute nut on the subject! I'm 38, and don't need any extracurricular flings.

How can I convince this nut I'm married to that he can trust me out of town?

NOT GIVING IN

DEAR NOT: You should have settled this with your "nut" before you tied the knot. If you invite him to go along on the trips, he may feel less threatened. If that doesn't work, you will have to choose between your nut and your business trips.

DEAR ABBY: My husband's boss wants to transfer us to a bigger city about 500 miles from here. It has more advantages for our children and would mean a big promotion for my husband, but every time I think of moving, I burst into tears. I've even put off going there to look for a place to live because I hate the thought of leaving this town.

I've lived here all my life. My family lives here. Our children's friends are here. And we have just built a lovely home. I know I sound selfish, but I can't help it. My husband wants to move. If I need a good lecture, let me have it.

HATES TO MOVE

DEAR HATES: You rattled the right cage. If a man is to succeed in business, his greatest asset is a wife who is always in his corner. Let him accept the promotion. You and your children will make new friends. Help your husband climb the ladder of success by being supportive, and you will have another lovely home that his "Jack" built.

DEAR ABBY: I've just had the biggest slapdown in my life. My insurance company has disallowed the prosthesis I bought for the mastectomy I had four years ago.

It's not a case of vanity or replacing a piece of female equipment. It's a case of restoring equilibrium. Without proper balance, a woman cannot walk straight. Also, her neck and shoulders ache from the lopsidedness.

Those little pads and "falsies" from the department store don't work. At my son's wedding, I was dancing and having a marvelous time, when my sister caught my eye and whispered urgently in my ear, "Please go to the ladies' room and check your falsie!" It had worked its way up to my shoulder!

After that, I phoned my local American Cancer Society to find out where to get a properly fitting prosthesis. Just two days after I had it, my neck and shoulder pain disappeared. And it feels so good and looks so natural.

Abby, if you print this, maybe some bright insurance executive will see it and realize that such a prosthesis is not simply cosmetic. It's vital to the health of a woman who has had a mastectomy.

ST. LOUIS WOMAN

DEAR WOMAN: Here's your letter. Insurance executives?

"Sans Souci Book Club, this is your life. You were born on a March day in 1902 when 12 young girls, with hair piled high on their heads, wearing floor length skirts and numerous petticoats which style and convention of that day demanded, met at the home of Pattie Skinner, the old Hotel Macon on Contanche Street to organize a book club.

"They were meeting at the request of Bruce Forbes (Mrs. G. B. W. Hadley) and Miss Winnie Skinner (who later joined an order of Catholic nuns) to form a club to advance literary efforts and promote social activity," said Mrs. J. B. Kittrell.

The occasion was the diamond anniversary of the club which was celebrated yesterday at a luncheon held at the Greenville Golf and Country Club.

"The name Sans Souci, which translated from the French means without care, was suggested by Mrs. Thomas Jarvis, wife of North Carolina Governor Jarvis. Only single girls could join the club in its early years and these girls promoted social activities so successfully that in a few years, all but four were married," added Mrs. Kittrell.

Dr. Ralph Rives, associate professor of English at East Carolina University, was guest speaker. His topic was the Silver Jubilee of Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth II.

Dr. Rives, who has spent several summers in England, described little known details of the private life of Queen Elizabeth and shared personal experiences during his visits there.

"Some of the impressions that the English people have given to me about Americans are that husbands are henpecked, there are a lot of loud women tourist and women wear a lot of beads with any type of fashion and sometimes they are not coordinated," said Dr. Rives.

Mrs. F. L. Blount Sr. introduced the speaker.

The 75th anniversary cake, which was decorated in the club colors of purple and gold was served cut by Mrs. Hadley, the club's charter member.

Entering New Era In Govm't

North Carolina is entering a new era of state government.

Voters last week approved the "succession" amendment to the state constitution which allows governors and lieutenant governors to seek a second consecutive term.

Passage of the amendment will change government in that governors will be carefully monitoring public opinion during their first terms if the wish to try for a second four years — and most of them will.

At the same time a first term governor will know that there is the probability of more time to carry out the programs he proposes when he first takes office.

Development of long range highway plans has been difficult through the years because every governor virtually junks the plans of his predecessor and institutes new ones.

Succession will apply first to Jim Hunt, North Carolina's present governor serving his first term. Gov. Hunt will be eligible in 1981 to run for re-election. He will, of course, be aware that the amendment didn't pass by a large majority and the closeness of the vote probably was due to the fact that it applied to the present governor. The amendment was approved, however, and we doubt that the closeness was a true indication of any dropoff in Hunt's personal popularity.

Passage of the succession amendment should be beneficial to North Carolina and we think the majority of the voters took the long range view in favoring it.

Land Deals Raise Queries

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — Political connections and the lure of cash are reflected in some of the shady land deals detailed in a report prepared by the North Carolina Center for Public Policy Research.

The study of just a few of the hundreds of land deals handled annually by the state property office produced enough information to create public concern: in five specific cases the state lost money — a lot of it; and in three others state property was used in violation of the law.

In two instances the state bought or swapped for land the sellers didn't even own; in two others, property was loaned to private organizations for use as security for loans. In others property was sold or swapped for a fraction of its real value.

"These transactions should not be considered a condemnation of all — or even a majority of — land transactions by the state," the introduction to "This Land Is Your Land" states.

Not Rare

"Neither should they be considered rare or extreme," North Carolina is in the land business in a big way: more than 400,000 acres (not counting highway rights-of-way or property rented) are owned for various uses such as colleges, hospitals, prisons, offices, parks, forestry projects, experimental or work farms, hunting preserves, wildlife refuges, etc.

Only in recent months have property officers been able to complete a full inventory. Still missing are thousands of acres of unmapped swamps and marshes belonging to the public.

The Center for Public Policy Research is an independent operation funded by public contributions and grants from the Mary Reynolds Babcock Foundation of Winston-Salem and the Carnegie Corporation of New York. Staff is made up of two journalists, an attorney, an accountant, and a budget analyst. The land study is the first in a planned series of studies.

Produced in a scholarly, low-key manner with emphasis on constructive criticism and recommendations for change, the report nonetheless will doubtless stir considerable controversy about certain land transactions which are explored.

BILL NOBLITT

And since the study admittedly only scratches the surface, it raises questions about other deals. "Many of the mistakes, intended and unintended, could have been avoided if the state's laws and written procedures had provided reasonable safeguards," the study comments. Barring reform, such ripoffs could happen again.

Recounting of the specifics of certain land deals in the report spotlights the lack of concern and ineptness of some governmental bureaucrats; the haphazard regard of some decision-makers for the taxpayers' dollars; and the rewards of political connections.

One Example

In what is the most complicated and glaring example detailed, the Wildlife Resources Commission agreed to pay $750,000 for about 6,000 acres of swamp and timber land in Currituck County — portions of which the owners had no right to sell, parts of which had been claimed as unmapped, most of which was not surveyed prior to sale, and is still embroiled in boundary disputes.

A Virginia surveyor who worked for the commission chairman turned a $600 option on the property into a $300,000 profit — and the state rushed in to buy when only shortly before the owners had been unable to get an acceptable bid at public auction. In the process, the state also lost $223,000 in federal money because of the foulups.

Today, the swamp is largely unused because access is limited, the terrain is not suited for use, and a state official says its only value is "to keep hell from showing through."

A lawyer now trying to unsnarl the mess calls it "the sloppiest transaction I've ever seen."

The report details other deals in Morganton, Chapel Hill, Morehead City and Wilmington.

Anti-Imports Lobbyist

WASHINGTON—Randolph Habermeyer, chief lobbyist for the American Hot and Cold Steel Company, was awakened by his Swiss-made Computer Alarm Clock. He got up and turned on his Sony television set to hear the news.

Then he showered and shaved with the new electric razor his wife had bought which said Made in Germany.

He then started dressing. Since he was going to testify in front of a congressional committee he selected his suit carefully, deciding on an imported Pierre Cardin pin stripe. He also chose a conservative silk tie that came from Thailand. Finally he put on his Italian-made Gucci shoes. He filled his Paris-made Hermes briefcase with all the papers he would need for his testimony.

It was raining out so he grabbed his trench coat. It was his favorite coat, and he was amazed that the Spanish, of all people, could manufacture trench coats at a third the price of the American ones.

Habermeyer kissed his wife goodby and got into his Mercedes-Benz to drive from Potomac to the Capitol. In the Mercedes he had a phone, which had been made in Taiwan, and he called his office to dictate several messages to his secretary on a German-made Grundig machine.

He also had a pocket-size Dutch-made Philips, recorder in the car to remind him of things he wanted to do the next day.

Suddenly he looked at his gas gauge and realized he was short of gas.

He stopped at a BP (British Petroleum) station and filled up the tank.

Habermeyer was listening to his radio as he drove along. They were advertising a new "Star Wars" rocket ship from Hong Kong. He made a note to buy one for his son for Christmas.

The next commercial had to do with a French Cuisinart blender. Habermeyer decided to get one for his wife because she had said they were still the best on the market.

As he was driving along he realized he had time to buy some cigars. Since Cuban ones were still not on the market, he favored the ones made in the Canary Islands.

The clerk was pushing a new cigar that had been manufactured in the Philippines, but Habermeyer said he'd stick with his Flamencos.

He also bought a throwaway lighter Made in South Korea.

Then he got back into his Mercedes and drove up to The Hill.

Before going to the committee room to testify, he dropped off to see a congressman friend and gave him a box of Swiss chocolates that one of the people from the company had brought back on a recent trip. The lobbyist knew the congressman had a sweet tooth, and he couldn't think of a better gift to give him.

Finally Habermeyer went to the committee room to testify. He was the second witness. He sat at the table, took out his prepared statement and began to read.

"On behalf of the American Hot and Cold Steel Company, as well as all American steel companies, I am raising my voice in angry protest over the flagrant dumping of foreign steel in this country. Mr. Chairman, this committee must decide whether we will permit the importation of foreign steel at the price of sacrificing American jobs and doing mortal damage to the American economy.

"The time has come for us to say, 'Enough is enough.' We cannot survive when we have to compete with the labor costs of other nations. It is your patriotic duty to see that the United States is protected from the flooding of foreign imports which I, as an American citizen, find despicable..."

Habermeyer took 30 minutes to read his statement and then looked at his Japanese Seiko watch and realized his time was up.

Violent Driving Sites

By DAVID TOMLIN
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A once-obscure pair of Winston-Salem intersections have been rocketed to stardom as the state's two most violent places to drive an automobile.

That really isn't such a great honor for an intersection, but it's no cause for undue alarm either, says Glenn Grigg, assistant accident studies director for the state Highway Division.

"It's not anything that should make them want to go out and put up flashers and signs," laughs Grigg. All the same, he adds, the intersections may need some attention.

Grigg and traffic engineering manager H.C. Rhudy put their computer to work once a year analyzing accident statistics for the state in search of areas where street design, signs or other physical factors may be helping people get together when they don't want to.

In selecting the most dangerous intersections, they first consider the number of accidents that occur at each spot. Then they mix in the number of

THE INSIDE REPORT

A Threshold Of Panic

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

PARIS — The European mood now approaching a threshold of panic over President Carter's proposed strategic arms agreement with Moscow is beginning to infect even this stronghold of Gaullist arrogance, with damaging implications for Western unity.

President Giscard d'Estaing, long a stranger to the abysmal science of modern weapons technology, is now on a self-imposed crash study program with top aides. The purpose: to prepare the French case against the new American policy described to us by one of the highest officials here as "de-coupling U.S. security from European security."

That France, so long the aloof stranger to NATO military cooperation, is entertaining such fears might seem perverse poetic justice. In fact, however, France has always been afraid that when the game of hardball started, the U.S. would choose strategic "security" with the Soviet Union over its European alliance.

The fact that Jimmy Carter now seems determined to make the French nightmare come true by denying Western Europe access to medium-range cruise missiles simply proves to the French how right they were.

"It is not just the limits that we understand are being imposed on the ground-launched cruise missile," one top-rank policymaker told us. "Previously, negotiations between Washington and Moscow were aimed at a balance, with protection also for Western Europe. The new negotiations are acquiring a dynamic that tends toward apparent parity for the two superpowers while ignoring Europe."

Should this assessment prove correct, he said, "a turning point in postwar history will soon be reached because the Soviets would draw the conclusion that Western Europe is open to them." He did not necessarily mean military invasion but rather the political and economic impact of overwhelming Soviet military superiority in central Europe.

American diplomats are skeptical of French sincerity in privately expounding this line. They also claim that West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt, in his recent warning delivered in a speech to the Institute of Strategic Studies, was uninformed.

Correct or not, there is solid reason to believe that Mr. Carter dangerously underestimates European alarm about his pending strategic arms deal with Moscow. The brutal truth is that Mr. Carter's top SALT planners are regarded both here and in Bonn and London with skepticism or something much worse.

That skepticism goes far beyond SALT and the dilemma it is creating for European acquisition of new weapons to defend against the awesome Soviet buildup of non-strategic fighter aircraft, nuclear missiles, dense anti-aircraft systems, tanks — and now the Backfire bomber. ("The Backfire is terrible, you say, so let it only be able to strike Europe," one middle-level planner told us in a revealing sarcasm.)

The problem as seen here, however, goes deeper, starting with heightened Soviet penetration into Africa. When the French sounded out Washington on the Soviet-backed Angolan incursion into Zaire, the answer was nonchalant: Zaire's President Mobutu was not worthy of U.S. help.

Only then did France and Morocco decide to team up in a successful rescue operation later applauded in Washington. But U.S. reluctance to block the extraordinary Soviet absorption of Ethiopia is worse, as seen here. A French sounding for taking Moscow's intervention to the United Nations fell flat in Mr. Carter's State Department: Western intervention (Continued on page 6)

Other Editors Say The Chile Lesson

(Greensboro Daily News)

Georgie Anne Geyer, a syndicated columnist who once covered foreign capitals for the Chicago Daily News, made an interesting point the other day about the recent conviction of former CIA Director Richard Helms.

Helms, you'll recall, pled guilty this month to a charge of lying to a Senate committee about convert CIA involvement in the internal affairs of Chile in the early 1970s.

Geyer, it happens, was based on Chile not long before elected Socialist President Salvador Allende was overthrown by a right-wing military junta.

"Those of us who were in Chile those days," she writes, "those of us who knew Salvador Allende personally (and liked him), those of us who nevertheless observed how Allende's people themselves were leading the apocalyptic, suicidal process of revolution know that American intervention, while there, played virtually no role in Allende's downfall."

This is the cruelest irony of all. The CIA was involved, no doubt about it—and with the President's tacit approval. In his recent interviews with David Frost, Richard Nixon repeated his administration's fear that all of Latin America was circumscribed by the "red sandwich" of socialism consisting of Castro's Cuba to the north and Allende's Chile to the south.

But, if Geyer's observations are accurate, that intervention purchased the worst of all worlds. It had little or no effect on events in Chile. Yet the CIA now gets the blame for "overthrowing" Allende and inadvertently sweeping in the Pinochet military junta.

"Richard Helms should be called to account," Geyer writes, "—but not for lying to Congress. He should be called to account for the utter and incongruous stupidity of involving us and our national integrity in a situation like Allende's Chile, which was already self-destructing, and thus placing the blame on the United States for a historic process that was proceeding inexorably toward Armageddon all by itself."

As the United States begins to re-assert itself in the post-Vietnam era, the Chile lesson is one, above all, that should be prominently tacked on every national security bulletin board in Washington.

40 Years Ago Today

November 16, 1937

Sitdown strikers who had occupied the Fisher Body Company plant at Pontiac, Michigan, for nearly 12 hours left at 8:25 a.m. and the management took possession of the factory.

Door Mitchell, president of the local UAWA, said union officials ordered the men to evacuate the plant because the strike was "unauthorized". He said a conference had been arranged for 1 p.m. between union and company officials on grievances which caused the sit-down at 8:30 the night before.

The main grievance, he said, was the laying off of 503 employees.

The Chinese government decided to move to Hankow on the Yangtze, nearly 300 miles to the west, because of the threat to the capital by Japanese armies advancing from Shanghai.

The Ministry of Communications took the lead by evacuating staff and record to a Hankow-bound steamer and League of Nations technical experts were to leave the next day.

Strength For Today

ON WHICH SIDE?

Every Bible reader recalls the description of how Peter, after declaring Jesus to be the divine son of God, immediately called forth the Lord's displeasure by denying that this same Jesus would have to suffer to fulfill his ministry. As one modern translation has it, Jesus said to Peter, "Get out of my sight, you Satan! You are not on God's side, but men's side."

Just where, as a matter of fact, do we stand in our daily living? If the sum total of our words, attitudes, actions, and influence were to be laid on the counter and then measured in some sort of supernatural balance, the accuracy of which could not be doubted, would our lives as a whole be on God's side or on men's side?

The demand of the kingdom of God is that people's lives should be lived wholly to God's glory. The ways of the world have but one object — the glory of mankind. We cannot avoid making a choice.

Spendthrift Christmas Seen

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — Hold onto your wallet. 'Tis the season to be merry in the stores and all the ingenuity of the merchandising fraternity is designed to make you and your dollar welcome.

Late reports suggest that this may be an exceedingly spendthrift Christmas. Retail sales for the year are going to top $700 billion, and something like $75 billion of that is likely to be added up in December alone.

Indicating the trend, October sales leaped 1.8 per cent over the previous month, one of the strongest showings of the year. Unlike in some years, merchants don't have to set a spending mood, but merely prolong it.

Consumers seem to be in an ebullient mood. Credit is the mixer for the holiday cocktail, and consumers have been adding to their installment borrowing at a rate of $2.5 billion a month, bringing the total to about $200 billion.

Does that figure frighten you? It frightens more than a few retailers, and some bankers too, but the truth is it amounts to just 17 percent of disposable personal income, or 1 percent below the record set in 1973.

Should a sharp economic downturn occur it seems likely that some of those bills might be late in being repaid, but few economists expect such an event to take place. Meanwhile, repayments are said to be satisfactory.

Despite the complications, retailers generally are pleased to assist in the accumulation of consumer credit because, as they are ever aware, they have in the Christmas selling season about 30 of the best sales days of the year.

The consumer, on the other hand, has six times that number of days during the next year in which to work toward repaying the bills. To retailers, this adds up to a good deal, especially since many of them sell the receivable account.

Again using last year as a measure, almost all types of retail outlets except automotive dealers, who have their own special selling season, and building materials and hardware stores will share in the spending spree.

Sales of home furnishings and household appliance stores soared last Christmas season, so did sales in apparel and accessory stores, toy stores, jewelry stores, book stores, grocery stores, variety stores and liquor stores.

For some merchants the month of December is a make or break period during which they either earn profit for the year or suffer for another 11 months, during which they must dispose of their stock at vast price cuts.

This is especially true of stores specializing in toys and dolls, which to some extent have developed the concept of a fresh model every year, forcing the merchant to restock no matter how large his inventory.

N.C. Southern Baptist Convention Elects Corts

By MONTE FLOTT
Associated Press Writer
CHARLOTTE (AP) — A 39-year-old minister who took the membership of his church from about 300 to 2,100 in 12 years was elected president of the Baptist State Convention Tuesday night, at a meeting where much of the talk has been on lagging church membership.

Tomlin Col...

cars that use the intersection daily and the severity of the accidents in terms of death, injury and property damage.

The computer mixes up all these considerations and spits out for each intersection a number which Rhudy and Grigg call the "equivalent property damage-only accidents per million entry vehicles (EPDOAPMEV for short)."

This year's winner was the intersection of Cleveland Avenue and 9th Street in Winston Salem, where the EPDOAPMEV was 113.5. Not far away, the intersection of Shore Fair Drive and 30th Street ran a close second with 104.89.

You have to remember, Rhudy warns, that these intersections and most of the others in the top 20 or so have relatively few cars per day passing through — only a few thousand.

The really busy urban intersections with much lower EPDOAPMEVs because of the lower number of accidents per cars that pass through may actually be doing much more damage to life and limb.

Rhudy and Grigg will take the information their computer has given them about problem intersections and send it out to field inspectors. The inspectors will investigate the intersections and recommend changes in signals, signs or street design aimed at reducing the number of accidents.

If the intersection is really a problem and the solution is cheap, state funds will be spent right away to do the job. If it is a costly job, it will be added to the state-federal Highway Improvement Program schedule and done later.

In the case of the Winston-Salem intersections, the state's computer information will be sent to that city's own traffic engineers.

Sometimes, the same intersections keep reappearing on the accident list, no matter what is done to help them.

"I like to compare it to a doctor who keeps trying treatments that don't work," Grigg says.

The Rev. Mark Corts of Calvary Baptist Church in Winston-Salem defeated Ray Benfield and Sarah Parker, both of Greensboro and both vice presidents of the convention, in balloting among the 7,000 Baptist "messengers" at the convention.

Corts said he did not come to the 147th state convention to seek the presidency but he said friends supported him and convinced him to run.

Corts, who will succeed Coy Privette as president of an organization which represents 1.1 million Baptists and 3,400 churches in the state, said his election "gives you an idea of the feeling here toward growth."

The theme of the three-day convention, which closed today, was "Sharing Christ through bold missions." Speakers, including Privette, gently chided the Baptist to work harder to bring in new members, with Privette saying "perhaps (we) have grown soft and lazy."

The convention faced several strongly worded resolutions on social issues before adjourning today, but the resolutions appeared to have strong backing on the floor.

The resolutions included a call for support for Anita Bryant in her crusade against homosexuality, a "reaffirmation" of the convention's stand against liquor-by-the-drink, a call for state government to clamp down on pornography and a statement opposing decriminalization or legalization of marijuana and cocaine.

In addition to the election of Corts, the convention Tuesday night selected the Rev. Dell Parkerson of Wilmington as first vice president.

Other offices were to be elected today.

Earlier Tuesday, the convention voted to recommend that Wake Forest University not use part of a federal grant to build a science building. The grant issue had been widely publicized, with supporters of the school lining up on one side and convention leaders on the other, but it passed with almost no dissent.

The issue centered on the university's allocation of $85,000 from a $300,000 federal grant for a building in the biology department.

Some Baptist leaders said using federal money for buildings was a violation of the convention's "services rendered" doctrine which limits acceptance of government money to projects wherein the results can be offered to the government in return for the money.

W.W. Finlator of Raleigh was the only speaker against the recommendation, which will go before the university's board of trustees and that group will make the final decision.

"If a building is built with $85,000, it will render service just as surely as the other parts of the appropriation," he said.

The recommendation was that Wake Forest try to re-allocate the grant to use the money in other areas.

Baptist leaders have said if

Wake Forest cannot restructure the grant, the money allocated for the building should be returned to the government.

The relationship between Wake Forest and the convention came up again Tuesday night, when a committee appointed to study that relationship made its report. The committee, with a life of three years, was born last spring after students invited "Hustler" magazine publisher Larry Flynt to speak on campus.

The invitation stirred up many Baptist leaders, who felt that the appearance of a convicted pornographer on campus was not in keeping with the school's religious affiliation.

In its report, the committee said it had just recently begun its work but would study all areas of the Wake Forest-Baptist Convention relationship and may come up with recommendations in the future.

The resolutions before the convention today did not waste words in dealing with social issues.

Entertainer Anita Bryant, one resolution said, "has taken a courageous — and somewhat lonely — stand for what we believe to be right and proper."

Homosexuality is "physically harmful to the body and degeneratively harmful to the personality," the resolution said. But it added that Baptists should "earnestly seek these people in Christian love and compassion, helping them to realize that while we do not condone their conduct, we are sensitive to their needs and desirous of their healings."

Another resolution described pornography as "a criminal, cultural and sociological problem that is destroying morality and decency in our society."

That resolution called upon Gov. Jim Hunt and the state attorney general to encourage local district attorneys to enforce pornography law.

As for liquor-by-the-drink, a resolution says "there has been no substantial change in...public sentiment" since a mixed drink bill was defeated in a statewide vote in 1973. The statement urged Baptists to oppose any liquor-by-the-drink measures.

would be an affront to African states (despite dispatch of an estimated 2,000 Soviet tanks as part of $800 million in military aid to Addis Ababa).

Senior French officials view Ethiopia as the most significant Soviet move yet to secure a Red Sea base as a strategic pivot on Persian Gulf oil. Supine U.S. reaction has but one answer here: desperate urgency for SALT II.

These were to have been the central topics President Giscard would take up with Mr. Carter here this month.

With the French election in March, no Carter visit is possible after the first week in January. Thus, gnawing French grievance over U.S.-Soviet limits on European cruise missiles and the declining state of Mr. Carter's credibility will worsen, perhaps to a point of agony for both Paris and Washington.

No Doubt About Risks In Dye

By MIKE PUTZEL
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The Food and Drug Administration says it appears there is no longer any doubt that a chemical used in permanent hair dyes causes cancer.

An FDA spokesman said Tuesday the National Cancer Institute has informed FDA Commissioner Donald Kennedy that the chemical, 4-methoxy-m-phenylenediamine, has been identified as a cancer-causing agent in NCI animal studies.

"We're looking at the regulatory questions on the assumption that the institute's final data will be positive," the spokesman said. "We have every assurance from NCI that that is the case."

An industry spokeswoman said the chemical has no substitute and is necessary to facilitate the dyeing process, which involves bleaching out the natural hair color and substituting an artificial one.

Permanent hair dyes can't be washed out by semipermanent dyes or color rinses. A person's hair remains the dyed color until it grows out or is replaced by another permanent dye.

A month ago, Kennedy told reporters he had asked the institute to expedite its testing of the suspect hair dyes. But he said he would wait for the institute's final report before taking regulatory action as demanded by the Environmental Defense Fund.

While some analysis remains to be done, the FDA spokesman said Tuesday, the commissioner has been told that the cancer-causing property of the long-used coal tar dye is no longer in doubt.

The spokesman said FDA is now considering two fundamental questions:

—Is the study, which involved feeding high doses of the chemical to laboratory rats and mice, a reliable indicator that humans who apply it to their hair and scalp run the risk of contracting cancer?

—And if it is determined that a cancer danger does exist for the millions of people who use the dyes, what action can the agency take against products that have enjoyed a special form of congressional immunity for 40 years?

The FDA spokesman said the agency has determined that 3 to 6 percent of the chemical is absorbed by the body through the scalp during normal use of a permanent hair dye, the type generally used to change, rather than enhance, one's natural hair color.

The cosmetics industry, however, rejects the test on 4-methoxy-m-phenylenediamine as irrelevant and cites numerous other studies, including a 13-year survey of 5,000 beauticians that have failed to produce statistically significant evidence that the dyes cause cancer in humans.

Even if the FDA concludes the dyes pose a hazard to consumers, it can't ban them as it attempted to do with saccharin before Congress intervened earlier this year.

Under a 1938 law, coal tar hair dyes, as those containing suspect chemical are called, are specifically exempt from FDA's usual regulatory powers, except that the agency retains authority over their labeling.

Book Week Marked At Saulter School

During National Book Week and American Education Week, Nov. 14-20, teachers and pupils at Sadie Saulter Elementary School were involved in many activities.

Two East Carolina University professors, Dr. Norman Pendered and Dr. Jimmie Grimsley conducted programs. Dr. Pendered, who is chairman of the Department of Industrial and Technical Education, gave a slide and talk discussion of his book, Blackbeard — The Fiercest Pirate of All, to the sixth grade classes. Dr. Grimsley of the Physical Education Department, told stories to some of the kindergarten and first grades.

Joe Stines, Children's Librarian at Sheppard Memorial Library, conducted a "Folklore Story Festival" for the third, fourth and fifth grades.

A fairy tale film program was presented to all kindergarten, first and second grades by Mrs. Lillian Scott, Librarian. She showed slides of North Carolina to the kindergarten children. The kindergarten children visited the principal, Mrs. Margaret White, for a story hour. Games, contests and exhibits were held in each classroom.

In honor of American Education Week, the PTA remembered each teacher with a small potted plant. A bulb planting was held in the courtyard of the school.

On 'Today Show'

WASHINGTON — The Beaufort County capital of Washington will be featured in scenes for the entire two hours of Today Show from 7 to 9 a.m. Thursday, Nov. 17, over WTTN-TV, Channel 7.

For many months the early morning NBC program has been using scenes of various cities across the country as backgrounds for the program opening and closing each half hour. Thursday is Washington's day.

Viewers throughout the country will see shots of Stewart Parkway, Main Street, Haven Gardens, the Washington Yacht and Country Club and the old Courthouse.

Temperatures were expected to climb into the 60s over much of North Carolina today but along with this seasonal range increasing cloudiness also was moving across the state.

A southwest wind flow also is bringing in moist air and there will be a chance for showers prevailing through the afternoon and night, reaching the coast by Thursday.

High cloudiness moved into the state Tuesday but temperatures reached the low to mid 60s. One of the day's highest readings was 67 at Wilmington.

Temperatures will be about the same Thursday.

State Limits Buses Weight

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina cities that need federal help with purchases of new city buses have run afoul of a state law that sets limits on the weight of buses on city streets.

Charlotte, Fayetteville and Winston-Salem are all in the market for new buses, but they will have to get the General Assembly to change the state law first when it meets next May.

The state law says that buses cannot weigh more than 22,500 pounds. But the federal regulations under which bus purchase grants are made available requires that the buses weigh at least 25,000 pounds.

The heavier buses, federal officials say, are safer, more comfortable and more durable than lighter ones and therefore a better investment of federal dollars.

State House Transportation Committee chairman David Bumgardner of Belmont said he believed the law would be changed without much trouble to allow the heavier buses.

C.R. Edgerton, a state highway engineer, said he didn't think lifting the limit would hurt city streets.

Charlotte officials must make an important decision soon. They have until Christmas to award bids on 34 new buses being financed with federal money.

City officials must decide whether to go ahead and order the buses in expectations the law will be changed by delivery or delay the purchase and face a long wait for another turn to buy buses which many cities need.

FSA Chapter To Hold Meet

The Future Secretaries Association of Pitt Technical Institute will hold a Candlelight Service in the students' lounge Thursday at 7 p.m.

Guest speaker will be Ms. Archie Raimondi of the United Cerebral Palsy Association of North Carolina.

John J. McCloy Firmly Declines Write Memoirs

By PETER ARNETT
AP Special Correspondent
STAMFORD, Conn. (AP) — In a memoir-addicted society, he adamantly refuses to write his.

Rather than ruminate on the days when he strode across the world's stage with the giants of his time, John J. McCloy, 82, would prefer to discuss his Manhattan law practice or tell of the antlered buck he encountered recently in the Connecticut woods.

But determinedly modest McCloy — once described by Lyndon Johnson as the "greatest pro-consul in American history" for his work in postwar Germany — is laboring over the writing of a speech, in which he will accept the Statesman-Humanist award from the Aspen Institute for Humanistic Studies in New York tonight.

The two previous winners of the Aspen award were Jean Monnet, first deputy secretary general of the League of Nations, in 1971, and Willy Brandt, former mayor of West Berlin and former chancellor of West Germany, in 1973.

In an interview at his rural hideaway, McCloy said he knew both Monnet and Brandt well.

"My career is marked not by its height but its length," he insisted, recalling that as a captain in World War I he served with officers who had fought Indians on the American plains. Today he commutes to Manhattan with their grandchildren.

"My life span represents 40 percent of the life of this country, which says less about how old I am than about how young America is," McCloy said.

Historians are less modest than McCloy, and they trace his imprint on some of the major events of mid-20th century America. As assistant secretary of war to Henry Stimson throughout World War II he helped tap a relatively unknown officer named Dwight D. Eisenhower for command of American forces in Europe.

He was also instrumental in promoting the construction of an edifice later known as "McCloy's folly" — the Pentagon. "But we were right about the Pentagon, it still functions well," he said.

McCloy's most memorable job, he said, was as U.S. military governor and high commissioner for postwar Germany from 1949 to 1952 "where I tasted the heady wine of total power, a proconsul's power."

He remains proud of America's role. "The rebuilding of democratic Europe after the war was a Periclean age of international cooperation. The foundations have held," he said, "despite constant pressure from the east."

He added, "I am just back from Europe and I was amazed to see the degree our vigor and our policies are depended upon. They look to us as the defender of the faith, and despite Vietnam and Watergate our prestige is largely unimpaired."

The JROTC Cadets of D.H. Conley High School were honored at the Pitt County JROTC Drill Competition held Nov. 12, at the U.S. Army Reserve Center in Greenville.

The Cadets won four of the five first-place trophies, including LD-1 and LD-2 (Leadership Development). They also first place in Girls' Fancy Drill Competition and Boys' Precision Drill Competition.

LD-1 platoon, commanded by Linda Payton, scored 180 points better than the nearest competitor, according to Col. Paul Lasker, director of army instruction at D.H. Conley.

"The LD-2 platoon, under the leadership of Dan Wojcik, also far outdistanced its closest competitor," he added.

"Both the boys and the girls gave sterling performances in winning their first-place trophies."

The Pitt County Drill Competition included JROTC units from all county high schools.

Set Dedicating Fellowship Hall

FARMVILLE — The fellowship hall of the Macedonia Missionary Baptist Church in Farmville will be dedicated Sunday, Nov. 20, at 3 p.m.

The church is also observing its 80th anniversary.

The Rev. O'Kelley Lawson, his choir, and congregation from Cornerstone Missionary Baptist Church, Greenville, will conduct the service.

Livingstone Lodge No. 102 will conclude the afternoon service with the placing of the cornerstone.

The pastor and congregation invite the public to attend.

Firm Plans To Expand Production In Walstonburg

SNOW HILL — Officials of March One Inc. — with plants in Freemont, Walstonburg, and Grantham — announced at a Noon conference here today plans to expand production in Walstonburg.

March One is a North Carolina corporation with executive offices in Greensboro. William C. Hawkins, its president, moved production facilities to Eastern North Carolina with the acquisition of a plant in Freemont in June 1976. Since then, March One has acquired additional plants in Walstonburg in late 1976, and in Grantham in June of this year.

A new plant building was completed in Freemont in August of this year, and the company plans to begin production in the new Walstonburg plant in late December or early January. The additional Walstonburg site is known as the Lane Building and is located on Main Street. An additional 50 workers will be employed at the new Greene County location.

The expansion project will be directed by Sloan Becker, company industrial engineer, and Mrs. Linda Sasser, manager of the present Walstonburg facility.

Becker, who said March One now employs 60 people in its 5,500 square foot plant at Walstonburg, reported that an additional 50 persons will be hired to staff the new 5,500 square foot facility. He said the payroll when the expansion is completed would total about $300,000 annually.

March One officials said half of the renovation project should be completed by mid-December and employment will begin at that time. Persons interested in employment should make application at the present plant during normal working hours.

Company officials indicated that March One has had a most pleasant experience in Walstonburg and Greene County, saying that from the outset, leaders of the area were most helpful in the company's efforts to secure space and start production. Spokesmen said community leaders have continued to show interest and cooperation, the result being the creation of the type environment March One is seeking.

In addition to the good community cooperation, March One executives said present employees can take a large share of the credit for the expansion because of their excellent skills and willingness to work making the Greene County plant a success.

The present March One plant at Walstonburg produces a line of jeans. The new production facility will begin making a line of athletic trunks, Becker said, and later adding a line of children's style jeans. Becker, a native of Tennessee and graduate of Georgia Tech, has lived in Eastern North Carolina for several years and joined March One as industrial engineer on March 1. Mrs. Sasser is a native of Wayne County and directed activities at the Walstonburg plant at its start in December 1976 and was subsequently named manager.

Farmville Native Sets Power-Lifting Record

IN BENCH PRESS POSITION — Braxton demonstrates the bench press lift, holding 505 pounds aloft. Two spotters, Mike Orcutt (back to camera) and Don Wheatley stand by.

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

Farmville native Charles (Chuck) Braxton, who just recently move back to his home town from Georgia, last Saturday set a new national record for power lifting in the over 40 category of competitors.

Braxton, a burly 315 pounder now employed at Tar Heel Toyota in Greenville, explained "the total weight of my lifts was 1,665 pounds in three main events."

The meet in which Braxton scored his dramatic record was the AAU approved Super Heavyweight Master Class of Power Lifting for competitors 40 years old or older. "This is a new class," the 41-year-old Braxton remarked, "adopted two years ago."

The competition was held at the Central YMCA in Durham, and drew a big field of contestants from southern states as well as from Ohio.

"In the first event," Braxton said, "I lifted 580 pounds in the squat category. For the bench press, my lift was 410 pounds, and the last of the three, the dead lift, I made 675 pounds."

Braxton mentioned with pride that his record was "higher than any of the 110 competitors taking part in other class events. They were primarily men 35 and younger," he added.

Power lifting is an art that Braxton first got into "when I was only 14. Then I had a 17 year gap before I got back into it early this year, eight months ago."

Once back in training, he soon began entering competition. "I busted the Georgia state record for super heavyweights last May," he said.

Since coming back to Farmville, Braxton has been working out at the Nautilus Club in Greenville. He's now looking forward to the next open competition, to be held in Lynchburg, Virginia. "I'm going to bust my own record at that meeting on January 28," Braxton prophesied. "After that I'll be competing at a meeting to be held in Raleigh in February."

Braxton is married to the former Sonya Clark, and they have one daughter, Michelle. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Braxton, former residents of Farmville.

Edmisten Is Not Running

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Attorney General Rufus L. Edmisten won't run for the Democratic U.S. Senate nomination next year.

Edmisten said in a letter to supporters to be released today that "to run for the Senate would mean calling on you for three elections in only four years. This is a great deal to ask."

Edmisten, 36, is still young enough to await a more opportune time for a shot at either the U.S. Senate or the Governor's Mansion.

Sources close to the attorney general said he was disturbed by polls showing President Carter's popularity dropping and by opinion from some quarters that the state Democratic party is divided this year.

Both factors could have hurt Edmisten's chances, his advisors reportedly reasoned. Many of them, including former U.S. Sen. Sam J. Ervin, for whom the attorney general once worked, and Edmisten's wife, Martha Jane, advised him not to run.

The attorney general said he would not get involved in the already-crowded primary battle. State Sens. McNeill Smith and E. Lawrence Davis, Charlotte banker Luther Hodges Jr., former newspaperman David P. McKnight and Joe Felmet are already running.

State Insurance Commissioner John Ingram is expected to enter the fray early next year.

The Pitt-Greenville Media Society met at Sheppard Memorial Library in Greenville last night, with Sheppard Children's Librarian Joe Stines as host.

Stines reported the highlights of the N. C. Library Association annual meeting in Winston Salem. Members shared their experiences during the recent Book Week. A tour of Sheppard facilities ended the meeting.

The next meeting will be held Jan. 9 in the Rose High School Media Center.

Permits For 4 Solicitations

Four requests for solicitation permits have been approved by City Manager Jim Caldwell.

Caldwell said that the requests were submitted by: the Kiwanis Club of Greenville-Progressive City to conduct a sale at Aycock Junior High School on Nov. 19 to raise funds for charitable activities;

Ebenezer Seventh Day Adventist Church of Greenville to conduct a door-to-door and sidewalk solicitation during November, December and January to raise funds for worldwide education, medical facilities, and medical care;

Pitt County Wildlife Club to conduct a yard sale on Nov. 19 from 12 noon to 7 p.m. in the Cox Armature Works parking lot; and the Dail Family Gospel Singers to sell candy door-to-door during November and December to raise funds for a gospel radio station on WBCQ.

Presnell Says N.C. Schools Leaders In Mergers

By DEBBIE JACKSON
Reflector Staff Writer

The North Carolina school systems are way ahead of most other states in the field of administrative unit mergers, according to Dr. Lacy M. Presnell Jr., director of the Division of School Planning for the North Carolina Department of Public Instruction.

"In 1960, there were 174 school administrative units. Now there are 145," he told the Leagues of Women Voters at last night's meeting.

Presnell said that his personal feelings about merging city and county schools are good, but that in each case, the local boards of education must make the decision with the approval of the town commissioners.

"If you've come here tonight to find out whether it is best to merge Greenville City Schools and Pitt County Schools, then I can tell you now that you won't get the answer," he said.

Since 1960, 21 city and county systems have merged. There have been eight mergers since Presnell joined the Division of School Planning in 1969.

Presnell said that there are three ways that merger can be handled. One is by legislative enactment by the General Assembly. Another is for the Boards of Education to develop a plan, approved by the Commissioners, without the vote of the people. The third method is through a plan developed by the Boards and approved by the Commissioners with the vote of local residents.

According to North Carolina General Statute 115-74.1, the provisions of the plan written up by the Boards of Education "shall be consistent with the General Statutes and shall contain, but not be limited to, the following:

1— The name by which the merged school administrative unit shall be identified and known

2— The effective date of the merger

3— The establishment and maintenance of a board of education which shall administer all the public schools of the newly created unit, including...termination of any terms of office...the method of constituting and continuing the board...the length of the members' terms of office, the dates of induction into office, the organization of the board, the procedure for filling vacancies, and the compensation to be paid members of the board for expenses incurred in performance of their duties.

4— The authority...of the board of education with respect to the employment of personnel...and preparation of budgets

5— The transfer of all facilities, properties, structures, funds, contracts, deeds, titles, and other obligations, assets, and liabilities to the board of education of the merged unit

6— Whether or not there shall be continued in force any supplemental school tax...

7— A public hearing, which shall have been announced 10 days prior to the hearing, on the proposed plan of merger

8— A statement as to whether the question of merger, in accordance with the projected plan, is to be contingent upon approval of the voters in the affected area

9— Any other condition...

According to Presnell, No. 8 of the Statute is probably of the most interest to local residents because it allows the Boards to decide whether to allow a public board to decide whether or not to allow a public vote.

He added that in his opinion, the best size for a high school system is 15,000 to 45,000 students. Presnell noted he believed merger would facilitate direction for various programs, improve the quality of leadership, and provide more guidance teachers, including trained psychologists.

He said that among the advantages of merging are easier means with which to provide programs for students when planning for one system, and the commissioners find it simpler to allocate money to one system. Presnell noted that problems arise when the number of students in the newly merged school system is too great.

He added that merging school systems does not save money, as many people believe.

"If it isn't done to expand and improve, then stick with the two school (systems) that you've got"

Presnell added that the Pupil Population Projection for Pitt County within the next five years shows a decrease of 670 students in the city and 130 in the county.

The decision to merge lies at the local level, though. He said that the Division of School Planning would conduct a "feasibility study" at the request of the Boards of Education, but that the study would follow the guidelines set up by the boards, not by the Division.

Court Insists It Must Know How 2 Students Cast Voters

By CYNTHIA KYLE
Associated Press Writer

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — Unless an appeal is filed with the state Supreme Court before Nov. 23, two University of Michigan students may be back in court to tell how they voted in an Ann Arbor election.

In an order issued Tuesday, Judge James Kelley of Monroe rescheduled the hearing for that date. Kelley is presiding over the case in Washtenaw County Circuit Court.

Lawyers for the students said they would file their appeals briefs by then, however.

Kelley earlier indicated he would suspend proceedings in the suit until appeals were exhausted.

Lawyers for the two women earlier said they would appeal within the week a Nov. 7 state Court of Appeals decision that required improperly cast votes to be disclosed. The appeal has not been filed.

The appellate court said that although votes should be kept secret, the two women could be forced to say if they voted for Democratic incumbent Mayor Albert Wheeler or Republican challenger Lewis Belcher.

The votes must be known in order to determine the election's outcome, the court ruled, even though the voting error was not the women's fault. The blame was on city officials who failed to notice that their addresses were not within city limits, the court said.

Belcher, who lost the April 4 election by one vote, filed the suit challenging Wheeler's right to hold office and alleging voter fraud. He contended that 20 of the ballots were cast by voters who didn't live in the city.

However, the women argued their right to a secret ballot and said they did not deliberately seek to vote illegally. One of them, Diane Van Hattum, a 21-year-old pre-law student, was held in contempt for her refusal to say how she voted.

Kelley threatened also to cite Diane Lazinski, a graduate student who also refused to tell her mayoral choice.

The contempt citation has been stayed during appeals. Under the law, the civil contempt citations can be lifted if the women comply with the judge's order.

Kelley said "although those appellants indicated they would speedily make application to the Michigan Supreme Court for leave to appeal from the decision of the Court of Appeals, yet a week has elapsed and no such application has been filed."

No Legs, But She Survived

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Doctors and relatives didn't think Josephine Shirley would ever leave Wake Medical Center where she had been hospitalized since May for 16 operations, including removal of her legs.

Mrs. Shirley had been suffering from poor circulation because of a blocked artery in her waist.

Both her legs were amputated at the knees. When that failed to restore sufficient circulation, there were more operations. Finally, to save her life, both legs were amputated to the hips last week.

Not counting a minor operation in several weeks to remove a bed sore from her back, doctors say Mrs. Shirley will not need additional surgery. She probably will not be able to use artificial legs and will have to rely on a wheel chair to get around. A metal bar has been placed over her bed to help her pull herself up.

"The doctors didn't think she'd ever make it back," said her husband, Herbert, who is himself disabled due to a diseased gall bladder, diabetes and hypertension. He said that after her last operation Nov. 3, three doctors worked to keep her alive. "She was on oxygen and couldn't breathe on her own for an hour."

Mrs. Shirley said it has been hard to adjust. "I still can't believe it," she said. "It doesn't seem like there's much left when you have no legs. One day you're running around and doing things, and the next day..."

But Mrs. Shirley said that well-wishers, love for her family and God kept her going.

"I had lost track of God, but now I am going to do all I can to testify and witness to others. My living and my body as it is are my testimony," she said.

Friends and well-wishers have contributed large amounts toward the more than $10,000 in medical bills the Shirleys must pay.

Surgery On Foot After Accident

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — A Guilford County high school student had his foot caught under a school bus Tuesday when it rolled over on a curve.

Robert Stevens, 17, had to have surgery on the foot Tuesday night. He was inside the bus and was thrown toward the door when it overturned, catching his foot outside the door.

Two other students received less serious injuries.

Told No One Supposed To Be Hurt In Bombing

By GARRY MITCHELL
Associated Press Writer
BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — Robert Edward Chambliss' niece took the stand as a surprise witness to testify that her uncle told her a week after four black girls were killed in a church bombing that no one was supposed to have been hurt.

Chambliss, 73, is on trial in the death of 11-year-old Carol Denise McNair. He also has been charged in the deaths of the three other girls, all of whom were 14 when the bomb exploded Sept. 15, 1963, a Sunday.

His niece, the Rev. Elizabeth Cobbs, a Methodist minister, testified Tuesday that the day before the explosion ripped through the Sixteenth Street Baptist Church, her uncle told her that had the "boys" backed him up, blacks would have been put in their place.

"(Gov.) George Wallace was a coward or he could have stopped all this," Mrs. Cobbs said her uncle told her. She said: "He told me he had enough stuff put away to flatten half of Birmingham. He told me the FBI and the police could pick him up any time and they would never find it."

The 37-year-old minister said her uncle then bragged, "You just wait till after Sunday morning and they (blacks) will beg us to let them segregate."

Draw Prison In Drug Case

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Three men and a woman have been sentenced to prison in a drug case which one federal agent described as the largest seizure of cocaine ever made in North Carolina.

The four defendants pleaded guilty in the case and were sentenced by U.S. District Court Judge Eugene A. Gordon.

Jack Lee Tart, 24, of Ashboro, received a seven-year prison sentence; Steve Eugene Morrison, 24, and Danny Fred Garner, 21, both of Carthage, were given sentences of indefinite length under the Youth Correction Act; and Garner's wife, Deborah Ann Garner, 19, was sentenced to 36 months in prison, with all but six months suspended.

During plea bargaining, each defendant pleaded guilty to one count of a four-count indictment charging them with possessing cocaine with intent to sell.

Gordon, as he levied sentences, said the business of illegal drugs "is the biggest curse that's come on to people in my time...I don't think the public is ready, and I don't think they should accept, leniency in drug cases."

Court testimony indicated the amount of cocaine seized — a little more than a pound — had a street value of more than $198,000. The case involved a sale to undercover police agents.

Seek Emergency Flood Grants

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Western North Carolina flood victims may soon be eligible for grants of up to $5,000 to tide them over until they can get their homes and jobs back together.

Gov. Jim Hunt said he had ordered state officials to apply for $6 million in federal funds to match $2 million in state money Hunt has already set aside for the grants.

The governor's office noted this was the only direct grant assistance available for disaster relief. It's the first time North Carolina has applied for it. A three-member panel would interview applicants for the money.

To get a grant, flood victims would have to have exhausted all personal resources and other federal programs.

Deliberating Fate Of Five

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Jury deliberations begin today in the trial of a migrant crew chief and four other men charged with keeping migrant workers at a Johnston County farm camp against their will.

The five face up to five years in prison and fines of $5,000 if they are convicted.

She said, "I asked him what he meant and he said, 'Just wait.'"

A week after the bombing, Mrs. Cobbs, whose mother is a sister of Chambliss' wife, said she returned to her uncle's home where he was watching a television newscast about the explosion.

"It wasn't meant to hurt anybody," she quoted her uncle as saying. "It didn't go off when it was supposed to."

Chambliss, clearly shaken by his niece's testimony, shook his head from side to side.

William Jackson, a Birmingham barber, later told the jury he was referred to Chambliss in 1963 when he wanted to join the Ku Klux Klan.

Attorney General Bill Baxley then called a Detroit woman, Kirthus Glenn, to the stand.

Mrs. Glenn, a retired laundry worker, said that the night before the explosion, she was visiting a friend who lived across the alley from the church.

"We returned home about 2 a.m. that Sunday morning and saw a car parked with the dome light on," Mrs. Glenn said.

She said a man sitting on the passenger side of the front seat was clearly visible.

Baxley showed her a photograph of Chambliss. He said it was the same photo she had identified in an FBI mug book in 1963. Baxley said she also identified an FBI photograph of the car she saw.

The Pitt District of the Boy Scouts of America held its Annual District Recognition Banquet last night at the Moose Lodge in Greenville.

According to Dr. F. Milam Johnson, district chairman, the purpose of the banquet was "to recognize those scout masters and people who have done outstanding work in the field of scouting."

Approximately 550 people attended the banquet.

Horton Roundtree, and Betty Speir, Pitt County Democratic Executive Committee Chairman.

The following scouts were recognized for their accomplishments during the past year:

Principal Faces Kidnap Charge

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — The former elementary school principal who held his faculty and the school superintendent at gunpoint for four hours Nov. 3 has been indicted on kidnapping charges.

Clarence C. Blanton was indicted by a Durham County grand jury Tuesday on seven counts of non-aggravated kidnapping, four counts of assault with a deadly weapon, two charges of assault with a deadly weapon with intent to kill and two counts of communicating threats.

Blanton, 58, will face a mental competency hearing next month.

Carew (Who Else?) Is MVP

NEW YORK (AP) — Sweet-swinging Rod Carew of the Minnesota Twins, whose .388 batting average was the best in the major leagues in 20 years, today was named the American League's Most Valuable Player for the 1977 season.

The 32-year-old Carew, winner of his sixth AL batting championship and his fifth in six years, received 12 first-place votes and a total of 273 points in balloting by a 28-man committee of the Baseball Writers Association of America. Ten other players collected first-place votes in the most diversified voting in the 47-year history of the award. First place was worth 14 points, second place 9 points, third place 8, etc.

Outfielder Al Cowens of the Kansas City Royals was named No. 1 on four ballots and finished a distant second with 217 points. Another outfielder, Ken Singleton of the Baltimore Orioles, garnered three first-place votes and was third with 200 points.

Designated hitter Jim Rice of the Boston Red Sox finished fourth and was followed by four members of the world champion New York Yankees — third baseman Graig Nettles, relief ace and Cy Young Award winner Sparky Lyle, catcher Thurman Munson, last year's MVP, and outfielder Reggie Jackson. Nettles received two first-place votes, while Rice, Lyle, Munson and Jackson had one apiece, along with catcher Carlton Fisk of Boston, and outfielders Larry Hise of Minnesota and Carl Yastrzemski of the Red Sox.

Never in the history of the award had so many players received first-place votes.

"I'm thrilled, it's just great," the usually low-key Carew said by telephone from his Minnesota home, where his wife, Marilyn, is expecting their third child Friday. "I'm just happy to have gotten it."

"I didn't have myself geared to winning it, because so many other players had such good years and I didn't want to be too disappointed if I lost," added the 32-year-old first baseman.

Although Carew's average was the highest in the majors since Boston's Ted Williams batted .388 in 1957 and he led the big leagues with 239 hits and 128 runs scored, one voter — Doug Bradford of the Detroit News — ignored him in the MVP balloting.

Carew is the 16th player from a non-pennant winning team to capture the league's MVP Award. The Twins finished fourth in the AL West, 17½ games behind champion Kansas City.

The left-handed hitting Carew is the third Minnesota player to win the league's most prestigious award. Shortstop Zoilo Versalles was the first, in 1965, and slugger Harmon Killebrew won it in 1969.

Carew's six batting titles put him in a tie with Williams for fifth place on the all-time list, behind Ty Cobb (12), Honus Wagner (8), Rogers Hornsby (7) and Stan Musial (7).

"He is just amazing," said Minnesota Manager Gene Mauch. "He has a long swing, yet hits the ball all the time. His hand-eye coordination is simply fantastic."

"I believe he would hit .400 if he played in the National League with all its artificial turfs. Heck, he may even hit .400 in this league."

Carew agreed with his manager. "I think .400 is possible," said the soft-spoken Carew. "I think if we (the American League) had artificial surfaces, I think I could do it. It would take another great year like I had this year, though."

"That's not to take anything away from National League pitchers," he added. "But I think I would get more hits in the National League."

No major leaguer has hit .400 since Williams batted .406 in 1941.

"You can't set your sights on hitting .400," Carew said. "I don't set any goals. I just go out and do my best."

Carew's best last season also included 38 doubles, 16 triples, 14 home runs and 100 runs batted in — all career highs. In addition, he stole 23 bases while playing in 155 games.

Carew won his first batting title in 1969 with a .332 average, then strung together four in a row starting in 1972 with averages of .318, .350, .364 and .359.

His amazing average and his season-long challenge at the rarely achieved .400 mark apparently swung the MVP voting in his favor this year.

But it took the quick-witted Mauch, a former major league infielder, to put Carew's performance in proper perspective.

"I hit .400, but it took me two years to do it," Mauch quipped during the 1977 season. "If this guy can't do it, then nobody can."

Yankee Scout Clyde King Talks To Club

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Clyde King, former major league pitcher, manager, and now considered the "Super-scout" of the New York Yankees entertained the Greenville Sports Club yesterday with baseball stories.

King, who spent 32 years in the National League as a player, coach and manager, has been a member of the New York Yankees for the past two years, and was credited by manager Billy Martin as being one of the keys to the team's success this year in the World Series.

The scout called Martin a "fantastic manager," saying he did a great job considering the circumstances. "Things were not as bad as they were said to be in the dressing room," King said. "And Reggie Jackson is not a bad guy."

King told how Jackson questioned him about how he would be pitched to in the series, and King told him that he would be pitched inside. Sure enough, Jackson was jammed the entire series, and only in the final game did he get things straightened out.

The former manager of the Braves and Giants also said that he felt Catfish Hunter would be back. "He still has a lot of baseball left, and I have a lot of confidence in him."

King also related stories about himself as a pitcher and Sandy Koufax. "I won't go on record as saying Koufax was the best I ever saw, but he was probably right close to it."

In one game, King, after studying Koufax, found that he made two different motions when he threw a fast ball and a curve ball. "I told the team that I would whistle every time a curve was coming, and I only missed two pitches the entire day."

"But Koufax was so good," he added. "He only pitched a three-hit shutout and struck out 12 that day."

King added that once he and Roy Campanella worked out a "bubble-gum" pitch, during spring practice. "I didn't use it all season until right at the end. We had a one-run lead and a runner on in scoring position and Whitey Lockman at the bat. I got two strikes on him, and Campy came out and said, 'Let's use the bubble-gum pitch on him.'"

"I told him to get that ball and get to the dugout quick. Then, as he went back behind the plate, I turned and went to the rosen bag, and just let my bubble-gum fall out of my mouth into the glove. I put the ball on top of it, and with that wad of gum on the ball, I threw to Lockman. He missed it a mile as the ball took a sudden dip, and when he turned to complain, Campy was already headed to the dugout, and so was I. Inside, Campy told me I could have the ball back, if I could get it out of his glove."

The Sports Club elected its new officers for the 1978 term. They include Joe Hallow, president; Donnie Jones, secretary-treasurer; and Rob Powell, program chairman.

The speaker for the next meeting of the Sports Club, on December 6, will be former Yankee great Bobby Richardson.

Clemson Fans Look To Gator

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Clemson fans are so certain the Tigers will be invited to the Gator Bowl that the ticket office is being flooded with reservations requests from South Carolina.

Enthusiasm has not abated despite the fact that the Tigers have yet to win the bowl bid.

"Clemson is still wide open," George Olsen, executive vice president of the Gator Bowl Association, said late Tuesday. "If Clemson loses Saturday to South Carolina, it depends if there is someone better available."

But Dottie Olsen, George's wife and part-time secretary, said there was no discouraging the many callers.

"We're selling tickets like you wouldn't believe," she said.

Bowl Considering Bucs

NEW YORK (AP) — College football bowl invitations can't be formally extended until Saturday, but The Associated Press has learned that Notre Dame will go to the Cotton Bowl, Penn State to the Orange Bowl and either Ohio State or Michigan to the Sugar Bowl.

Of course, many of the bowl pairings will depend on key games this weekend, but, as usual, the major post-season classics will attract the nation's top teams.

The opponent for sixth-ranked Notre Dame, 8-1, in the Jan. 2 Cotton Bowl game at Dallas could be top-ranked Texas, 9-0. The Longhorns, leading the Southwest Conference, still have to face two league opponents, unranked Baylor, 4-5, and No. 14 Texas A&M, 6-2. The SWC champion automatically is the host team for the Cotton Bowl.

No. 9 Penn State, 9-1, will face the Big Eight conference champion, either third-ranked Oklahoma, 9-1, or 11th-rated Nebraska, 8-2, in the Orange Bowl at night Jan. 2. Oklahoma and Nebraska will decide the league title when they meet Nov. 25. The Big Eight loser will go to the Sun Bowl at El Paso, Texas, Dec. 31 against unranked Louisiana State, 6-3.

Fourth-ranked Ohio State and No. 5 Michigan, each 9-1, clash Saturday for the Big Ten Conference title and a berth in the Rose Bowl Jan. 2 at Pasadena, Calif., against the Pacific-8 Conference representative, either No. 19 Washington, 6-4; 20th-ranked UCLA, 7-3, or unranked Stanford, 7-3.

The Ohio State-Michigan loser will meet No. 2 Alabama, 9-1, in the Sugar Bowl at New Orleans Jan. 2. If it's Ohio State, that would set up an interesting confrontation between the Buckeyes' Woody Hayes and Alabama's Bear Bryant, two of the game's master coaches.

Other major bowl games are shaping up this way:

Gator Bowl, Dec. 30, at Jacksonville, Fla. — No. 35 Clemson, 7-2-1, against an undetermined opponent.

Liberty Bowl, Dec. 19, at Memphis, Tenn. — No. 18 North Carolina, 7-2-1, against an undetermined opponent.

Fiesta Bowl, Dec. 25, at Tempe, Ariz. — The Western Athletic Conference champion, most likely No. 12 Arizona State, 8-1, against eighth-ranked Arkansas, 8-1.

Astro-Bluebonnet Bowl, Dec. 31, at Houston — The Texas A&M loser against possibly unranked Iowa State, 7-3; UCLA, unranked Southern California, 6-4, or Washington.

Tangerine Bowl, Dec. 23, at Orlando, Fla. — No. 16 Texas

Heels Counting On 'Famous Amos'

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina coach Bill Dooley started freshman tailback Amos Lawrence out slowly this year, and thinks that is paying off now.

Lawrence, the Associated Press national back of the week, rushed for 286-yards and two touchdowns in whipping Virginia last Saturday, breaking a host of records that include Tony Dorsett's 265-yard single game record for a freshman.

Though Lawrence didn't play in North Carolina's first game against Kentucky and didn't get the starting job until the sixth game against North Carolina State, he'll be counted on heavily Saturday. The Tar Heels travel to Durham where a win or tie with Duke will clinch sole claim to the Atlantic Coast Conference championship and, they hope, nail down a post-season bowl bid.

"We wanted to bring him along slowly and make sure he had confidence before throwing him into the fire," Dooley said of his young back. "He's gotten more familiar with our system now and has he has, he's gotten better."

Weighing just 180 pounds, Lawrence got a heavy workout at Virginia, carrying the ball 35 times. "I usually carried about 25 times in high school," the Virginia Beach, Va., native said. "I got tired but I tried not to show it."

Lawrence set an ACC record for single-game rushing, breaking the mark of 279-yards set by UNC's Don McCauley in 1970, and made him the fifth college freshman to go over 1,000-yards in his first season. "That's a great honor and one I'd like to share with my teammates," he said of the AP award. "I especially want to give our offensive line a lot of credit. They just did a great job of blocking."

This Saturday's game is an old rivalry between the two schools just 10 miles apart, and is not lessened by Duke's 5-5 record. The Tar Heels are 7-2-1.

"Anytime Duke and Carolina get together, regardless of the records, it's always a tremendous football game," Dooley said at his weekly news conference. "It's always a close and highly emotional game, and this one's going to be no different."

As a season finale for both schools, the game looks even bigger. Added to that is the unsettled coaching situation at Duke, where Mike McGee needs a victory to finish with a winning season. His contract runs out this year, and even a victory may not ensure he'll be back in the spring.

Tech, 7-2, against 13th-ranked Florida State, 8-1.
Peach Bowl, Dec. 31, at Atlanta — Unranked North Carolina State, 7-4, against an undetermined opponent.
Independence Bowl, Dec. 17, at Shreveport, La. — Unranked Louisiana Tech, 6-0-2, the Southland Conference champion, against one of three unranked independent teams — Colgate, 10-0, East Carolina, 8-3, or Louisville, 6-3.
Hall of Fame Classic, Dec. 22, at Birmingham, Ala. — Undetermined.
Among the leading candidates to fill the bowl vacancies are: No. 10 Pitt, 8-1-1; Iowa State; unranked California, 7-3; Stanford; Southern Cal; UCLA; unranked Florida, 4-3-1; unranked North Texas State, 8-2, and unranked Maryland, 6-4.

Texas, Carolina Picked To Be Upset

day. Though admittedly "a little nervous" last week, Ansley successfully guided the top-ranked Texas Longhorns to a 44-14 victory over Texas Christian and won the honor of being the Associated Press offensive player-of-the-week in the Southwest Conference. (AP Laserphoto)

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Baylor over Texas ... Air Force over Notre Dame ... Southern Methodist over Arkansas ... Colorado State over Arizona State ... San Diego State over Florida State ... Texas Christian over Texas A&M ... South Carolina over Clemson ... Houston over Texas Tech ... Duke over North Carolina ... and Washington State over Washington.

Had enough upsets for one week? Well, this corner has decided that all those stunners will actually come about this weekend as well-deserved punishment for the bowl committees, which have been playing a little hanky-panky in advance of Saturday's official invitation date.

More about that later. First, let's turn to the Ohio State-Michigan shootout. The only upset here would be if any other team won the Big Ten title.

These bitter rivals have wound up the regular season against each other every year since 1935 and their annual showdown has decided the Big Ten crown in nine of the past 10 years.

"It's pretty close to the elbow," says Ohio State's Woody Hayes. "Both teams usually have good defenses. This year is no exception. It could be a very tight game, whether or not it's low-scoring."

Michigan 21, Ohio State 17. Last week's record was 53 right, 16 wrong and two ties for a .768 percentage, including the Upset Special, Washington over Southern California, and the exact score of Ohio State's 35-7 triumph over Indiana. For the season, it's 507-201-15 — .716.

Now for the upsets: Baylor at Texas: The Cotton Bowl is counting on getting Notre Dame to face No. 1-ranked Texas, but what happens if the Longhorns get bumped off? Wait and see ... Baylor 20-16.

Air Force at Notre Dame: Notre Dame wanted the Cotton and Sugar Bowls to wait until Nov. 26. They wouldn't. The Sugar told Notre Dame it had to have an answer by Tuesday. Notre Dame said no thanks. So we say ... Air Force 27-24.

Southern Methodist at Arkansas: Arkansas wanted the Orange Bowl. The Orange Bowl wanted Penn State. The Fiesta Bowl jumped at Arkansas. Southern Methodist jumps ON Arkansas ... SMU 26-20.

Illinois at Northwestern: It would be a shame for John Pont to end his Northwestern coaching career with an 0-11 record ... Northwestern 28-24.

In other games, Colorado State over Arizona State 28-20; San Diego State over Florida State 34-28; Texas Christian over Texas A&M 22-17; South Carolina over Clemson 19-12; Houston over Texas Tech 30-24; Duke over North Carolina 33-24; Washington State over Washington 35-31; Kentucky over Tennessee 27-13; Colgate over Delaware 35-24.

ECU White Team Romps

WASHINGTON — The White team rolled to a 137-120 victory over the Purple last night as East Carolina University's basketball team put on its second public scrimmage.

Herb Gray paced the White team with 38 points, hitting 15 of 21 shots from the floor and grabbing off 10 rebounds.

Greg Cornelius came through with his best night of the drills, hitting 16 of 22 from the floor for 32 points. He led the White in rebounding with 13.

Jim Ramsey also had his best night, hitting 12 of 19 from the floor and getting ten rebounds. He finished with 24 points. Ramsey had 11 assists.

Kyle Powers finished with 16 points on eight of 14 field goals, while Walter Moseley had 14 on seven of 14 shots. He had 14 assists, with Powers adding 10.

Dean Hartley rounded out the White scoring with 13 points on six of ten field goals.

The White hit on 64 of 100 points for an ever 64 per cent from the floor.

The Purple was paced by All-America candidate Oliver Mack, who hit on 20 of 33 from the floor for 42 points.

Roger Carr pushed through nine of 18 and grabbed off ten rebounds to finish with 22 points.

Herb Krusen had 16, Bernard Hill had 14, Don Whitaker, 12; Ron Stumpo, 10, and Garry Kerr, four.

The Purple hit 54 of 101 shots for 53.5 per cent.

Coach Larry Gillman said he was not pleased with the foul shooting, which saw the White hit nine of 13, and the Purple, 12 of 19, and overall 65.6 per cent.

"It was obvious that Ramsey and Moseley played well," Gillman said, "and Cornelius had a super game. Mack's been feeling a little sick this week, and he played only 26 minutes."

The Pirates will return to public display on Monday, when it holds the annual Purple-Gold game in Minges Coliseum at 7:30 p.m.

Season ticket holders will be admitted by showing their ticket book, and East Carolina students by ID cards.

Other adults will be charged $2, and students $1.

The Pirates open the 1977-78 season on Saturday, Nov. 26, at the University of Indiana. Their first home game is December 1, against UNC-Wilmington.

Walton Shoots In Win

By ALEX SACHARE
AP Sports Writer

Bill Walton stopped passing and started shooting and Portland won. Pete Maravich kept on passing and New Orleans lost.

"I made a lot of stupid plays passing the ball," said Walton. "At one stretch I made four straight passes to the other team."

So Walton decided he'd better start taking his shots and wound up scoring 32 points as the Trail Blazers beat the Milwaukee Bucks 109-106 Tuesday night to become the first National Basketball Association team with 10 victories. The defending champions lead the Pacific Division with a 10-2 mark.

Walton, who scored his season high, hit from the top of the key to give the defending National Basketball Association champions a 107-104 lead with 1:07 to go. After Dave Meyers cut the lead to a basket with a tip-in, Walton responded with a hook shot with 36 seconds left for the final margin.

Maravich, meanwhile, was guarded extra closely by New York's Jim Cleamons all night long and went 4-for-20, scoring just 11 points as the Jazz was beaten by the Knicks 108-105. Maravich, the NBA's reigning scoring king, had only 2 points in the second half and did not attempt a shot in the fourth quarter, when the game was up for grabs.

In other NBA games, the Indiana Pacers edged the Buffalo Braves 100-94, the Philadelphia 76ers beat the Atlanta Hawks 114-93, the Washington Bullets trimmed the Seattle SuperSonics 111-109, the San Antonio Spurs defeated the Kansas City Kings 113-107, the Denver Nuggets beat the Detroit Pistons 123-113 and the Cleveland Cavaliers topped the Los Angeles Lakers 102-95 in overtime.

7ers 114, Hawks 93
Atlanta disappointed a sellout crowd at the Omni by suffering its third loss in a row after jumping off to an 8-1 start. "We can't cancel the next 70 games," reasoned Hawks Coach Hubie Brown, "so we have to regroup."

Pacers 100, Braves 94
Ricky Sobers scored 23 points, including a key three-point play in the last two minutes, as Indiana snapped a six-game losing streak with its first road victory of the season.

Spurs 113, Kings 107
Larry Kenon scored 11 of his game-high 23 points in a 32-point third period that enabled San Antonio to pull away to its fourth straight victory. George Gervin, the NBA's third leading scorer, added 19 for the Spurs, eight below his average.

Bullets 111, Sonics 109
Elvin Hayes scored 22 points and reserve guard Kevin Grevey added 20 for Washington, which handed Seattle its 11th loss in 15 games.

Cavaliers 102, Lakers 95, OT
Cleveland erased an eight-point deficit and sent the game into overtime on John Lambert's basket with 33 seconds left, then Campy Russell snapped an 89-89 tie as the Cavs went on to raise their record to 9-3.

Nuggets 123, Pistons 113
Denver raised its home-court record to 7-0 behind David Thompson's 33 points and Dan Issel's 24, including 10 in the final period.

Banks Stirs Up Duke

By BILL WELCH
Associated Press Writer

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Duke basketball fans have more to be excited about this year than just about any year since they last won the Atlantic Coast Conference championship in 1966. And much of that enthusiasm is due to a player who has never scored a point wearing Duke blue.

He is, of course, Eugene Banks, a West Philadelphia phenomenon whose arrival, along with some seasoned returnees, has boosted Duke expectations. The Blue Devils finished 14-13 overall and just 2-10 in the ACC last season.

But this year area basketball writers have predicted a second place conference finish. Duke has sold out its renovated Cameron Indoor Stadium, chopped up the old court and is selling the pieces as souvenir paperweights.

"Gene Banks is certainly everything that's been written about him," Duke coach Bill Foster says of his freshman, who averaged better than 23 points and 20 rebounds while leading his high school to a 79-2 record.

But as Foster well knows, one freshman can't do it all, and there will be tremendous pressures on the youngster. "Gene knows it'll take a lot more than Gene Banks to make us a good team," he said.

So far the 6-foot-7, 205-pound forward has been impressive in practice. "Gene brings a lot of recognition with him," offered junior Jim Spanarkel, the conference's third-leading scorer last year with a 19.2 average.

"He knows how to handle the pressure; he's as easy-going as anybody. But he's not going to be dominate — I don't think anybody in the league can."

Spanarkel is no small part of the new Duke enthusiasm. A 6-foot-5 guard, he also led the team in assists and is a team leader, elected captain this year.

"The confidence this year is much more than ever before," he said. "The fans are enthusiastic. Now, we really have the potential to actually win the title. We have the confidence to produce, and we have the depth and the attitude."

Also back this year is Mike Gminski, a 6-foot-11 middle man who shared rookie of the year honors last year while averaging 15.3 points a game. He returns as the league's leading rebounder, with a 10.7 average.

Foster says he expects to start those three, with junior Steve Gray at the other guard and Kenny Dennard, a freshman from South Stokes, N.C., at the other forward.

Adding depth will be lettermen Harold Morrison, Scott Goetsch and Cameron Hall at forward. Guard Bob Bender will be eligible to play in January after transferring from a reserve spot on Indiana's 1976 national championship team.

The entire squad is a young one, with guard Bruce Bell the only senior, who started some last year in place of injured Tate Armstrong, now graduated.

Lawrence Named Week's Top Back

By The Associated Press
BACK — Amos Lawrence, running back, University of North Carolina, carried 35 times for 286 yards and two touchdowns as the Tar Heels beat Virginia 35-14. In the process, Lawrence set an Atlantic Coast Conference single-game rushing mark, as well as a national record for a freshman, breaking the mark of 265 yards by Pitt's Tony Dorsett in 1973. "The thing about Amos is that he has such quick feet," said North Carolina Coach Bill Dooly. "He's here, there ... and suddenly he's gone." Lawrence's scoring runs covered 6 and 21 yards.

outstanding. He's the best offensive guard I've ever been around."

Button Gave Birth To 'Superstars'

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent
Who is the world's best athlete?

That is a question that never can be answered satisfactorily, but the intriguing impoderability of it was enough to launch a mid-winter television extravaganza and make a millionaire producer of former Olympic skating king Dick Button.

The now firmly established

and successful Superstars competition is not a product of Boone Arledge or the ABC-TV network.

It all came out of the balding head of Button, the Englewood, N.J., ice whiz, winner of five world men's figure skating crowns and Olympic gold medalist in 1948 and 1952.

"You might say Phoenix rose out of the ashes," the 47-year-old entrepreneur said in relating the birth of the show that matches stars of various sports in a rigorous test of assorted skills for rich money awards.

"I was in a private boys school in Englewood when I won my first Olympic gold medal at age 17. As a result, I was named 1949 winner of the Sullivan Award as America's best amateur athlete.

"It seemed a little ludicrous to me at the time. There were nine other kids in my class, all of them better athletes than I. One was Roy Boe, who owns the Nets basketball team. He was a five-letter man, good in basketball, baseball, golf, tennis, track and field.

"Yet here I was acclaimed the best athlete in the country just because I could do exciting things on skates."

Button was smitten with an idea. Why not a competition among all the great athletes to find out who was best? He recruited a well-known television producer, Paul Feigay ("Omibus," "On The Town," etc.) and together in 1965 they worked out a format for what they considered a sure-fire TV show called "America's Best All-Around Athlete."

They took it to the networks. CBS, ABC and NBC all turned it down. These were the psychedelic 60s. TV was conservative. The time wasn't right.

Button bided his time. In 1972 he sold the idea to Barry Frank, then an aide to Arledge at ABC. A real estate developer offered a site in Rotonda, Fla., an oil filter firm put up sponsoring money. Trans-World International got the stars.

Superstars was born.

Under Candid Productions, which Button headed as president, the first show was presented in 1973. A bevy of stars competed. Heavyweight champion Joe Frazier almost drowned in the swimming pool. An Olympic pole vaulter, Bob Seagren, was the first winner.

Kyle Rote Jr., a $10,000 a year soccer player, won three of the next four. O.J. Simpson won another. Rote's winnings approached $200,000. Seagren made it a career. The event was moved this year to the Princess Hotel in Freeport, The Bahamas.

The idea went international. There were spinoffs. Communities held their own events. Button broadened his base to include ice shows and other productions.

"Only two superstars have turned us down, Muhammad Ali and Joe Namath," he said. "We still don't know who is best, but we keep trying to find out."

Bostock Seeking $3 Million

NEW YORK (AP) — What price glory?

Would you believe more than $3 million?

That's what outfielder Lyman Bostock is seeking for a multi-year contract.

Should Bostock achieve his lofty goal, he would surpass the highest baseball free agent contract signed last year — $2.9 by outfielder Reggie Jackson of the New York Yankees.

Bostock, the most popular player in the recent re-entry free agent draft, is basing a great deal of his argument for the huge contract on his strong 1977 season — a .336 batting average, second best in the American League behind Minnesota teammate Rod Carew's .388; 14 home runs and 90 runs batted in.

Bostock, picked by the maximum 13 teams in the draft, is expected to narrow the bidding to six clubs later this week, according to his agent, Abdul Jalil.

Jalil said Tuesday that Pittsburgh and Kansas City already have been eliminated from the Bostock sweepstakes because their financial offers were not comparable to those of other clubs.

"You can't ask a player to consider signing for $1 million less with one club than he can get from another," said Jalil. "Right now, we have five offers of over $2 million and three offers that are better than what Reggie Jackson signed for."

Surprisingly, the Yankees and California Angels, two of the biggest winners in last year's free agent market, opened their offers for Bostock with low bids, Jalil said. However, since then, both teams apparently have raised their antes and still are in the financial battle for the popular outfielder, the agent indicated.

Other clubs which could be among the finalists for Bostock are Toronto, San Diego and Milwaukee.

Among the other teams who drafted Bostock — the New York Mets, Oakland, Chicago White Sox, San Francisco, Baltimore and his old club, Minnesota — all have sidestepped the big money stakes that the bidding has reached.

And the Texas Rangers already have spent more than $3 million in signing two free agents, outfielder Richie Zisk and pitcher Doc Medich.

"A lot of clubs eliminated themselves by not being competitive," said Jalil. "There's no sense negotiating with someone who's not really interested."

One interested party could be Milwaukee.

Outfielder Larry Hisle, another free agent who played for Minnesota last season, said he was leaning toward signing with the Brewers and would like Bostock to join him.

"I can't see anything but great things happening in Milwaukee if the Brewers get both of us," said Hisle, the American League RBI leader in 1977.

Hisle said only "a few small details" remained to be ironed out with his agent and the Brewers.

One free agent came to terms Tuesday, relief pitcher Oscar Zamora signing with the Houston Astros.

Two members of the Rose High School cross-country team have been named to the All-Conference Division I selections.

The two are Tim Jolly and Steve Blackwell.

Holland: This Is Year We Are Waiting For

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. (AP) — Terry Holland, who's spent three seasons making Virginia's Cavaliers competitive in Atlantic Coast Conference basketball circles, says 1977-78 "is the year we've been pointing for."

Ballard High in Louisville.

Last year's front line of 6-foot-9 senior Marc Iavaroni, 6-foot-9 junior Steve Sastellan and 6-foot-6 sophomore Mike Owens returns, along with David Koesters, a 6-foot-1 senior, both of whom saw action in the back court with Langloh.

Along with Lamp and Raker, Holland has another top incoming freshman in 6-foot-5 Jeff Klein of Stow, Ohio, and a top transfer, 6-foot-2 guard Tommy Hicks from Tulane.

Holland says positive areas include more quickness, more "areas where we were weak a year ago."

A possible weakness "is the lack of depth on the front line, particularly in light of the injury factor," says Holland.

Pres. Withdraws McGuire Proposal

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — University of South Carolina President James B. Holderman has withdrawn a proposal that head basketball coach Frank McGuire take an athletic position with USC's regional campuses.

In a letter Tuesday to McGuire, Holderman said, "I presume you are no longer interested" in the post of special assistant to the president for intercollegiate athletics and director of athletics at Coastal Carolina College at Conway.

"At this point, let's consider the matter closed," he said.

Earlier reports indicated that university officials were trying to remove the veteran coach, who also serves as athletic director for basketball, against his wishes. But, Holderman said in a Nov. 1 statement that he began talks with McGuire after the coach expressed interest in taking the regional campus position.

Holderman said in his letter, "I much regret your apparent decision and the misunderstanding on the part of some regarding our discussions. Now I must proceed to identify someone else who can actively coordinate the intercollegiate activities of the university's two and four year campuses, the job we discussed."

Marshall Loses Mascot

HUNTINGTON, W.Va. (AP) — Things are getting worse for football fans of Marshall University's Thundering Herd. Their team has a 2-8 record, has lost seven straight, and now has lost its mascot.

Marco, a 9-year-old bison which has served as the Herd's symbol for seven years, was taken away by Camden Park, where Marco stays, after a letter appeared in the student newspaper charging that Marco was being neglected.

Some Evidence Farmers Listening To Strike Call

By MARGY McCAY
Associated Press Writer
A call to unite and strike has gone out to the traditionally independent American farmer — and there is evidence he is listening.
The appeal comes from American Agriculture, a group of disgruntled farmers in Colorado who say they are tired of selling their milk, wheat and corn for less than it costs to produce.

"We're working for one common goal — 100 percent of parity for all products that we produce," said Dale Schroder, a spokesman for the fledgling group.

"We ask for no subsidies; we're willing to take our chances with the elements. But we want a contract from the government as to how much any individual farmer is expected to produce," he said.
The movement to unite farmers appears to be spreading. Farmers in Washington, Nebraska, Kansas and Georgia have staged marches and "tractorades" to call attention to their plight.

"We're getting really strong in about 30 states," said Schroder. "And I think we'll have a really good turnout on this thing. I feel we're going to come out of this with support like you wouldn't believe."
American Agriculture has named Dec. 14 as strike day. Farmers have been asked to withhold all produce from the market and to boycott all but essential goods after that date.

"We're not going to buy a damned thing," Schroder said. "We consume 40 percent of the steel made in the United States. If it goes to the 14th, this thing is going to shake this nation to the core."

Parity, the issue on which the strikers have focused, is a term to describe a "fair" price for farm products in relation to the farmer's cost of living. Farm prices in mid-October were just under 65 percent of parity for most products.

"We want a reasonable profit," said Tommy Carter of Alma, Ga. "How many common workers and laborers would be willing to get 64 percent of the salary they should be receiving? Well, that's what we get for our crops."
Georgia is a stronghold for strike supporters. Larry Lee, spokesman for the National Pork Producers Council and a former Georgian, said everything bad that can happen in farming happened in Georgia this year.

"From drought to army worms to aflatoxin (a fungus which attacks corn and soybeans) — all but about 30 counties have been declared disaster areas," said Lee.
Few observers give the strike much chance of success.
Lee said the most that farmers can do is call attention to their problems.

"I personally think that they will focus a lot of attention on the situation — and that's all they can hope to do. To excite the consumer is all for naught. They need to convince the Congressional people; they are the ones with the power," Lee said.
"What possible impact could it have on a market that has 1.3 billion bushels of wheat and two 6-billion-bushel corn crops back-to-back?" asked Tony Dechant, president of the National Farmers Union.

Wilson said he "had never heard anything like" Byrd's singing of "Go Tell It on the Mountain." He said, "It impressed me so."
Byrd said Wilson told him the song "touched him very much and that I sang it with my heart."

Wilson made the offer after school officials told him Byrd didn't have money for college. "He's too good to be lost," Wilson said in an interview. "I had never seen him before, didn't know anything about him."
He said if Byrd does well, "I'll send him on for his master's and doctor's degrees. I've made my first move; now it's up to him."

Wilson, president of Barbeque King Inc. of Simpsonville, a food processing equipment manufacturer, said he has financed college educations for 30 to 40 youngsters. "That's what makes me happy," he said.
Byrd said he would like to major in voice and minor in music at the University of Tennessee. He said he hopes to eventually become "a stage performer of operatic style."

He said he has not had any theatrical experience, and hopes to get some before going to college.
He said his family is "dazed and stunned" by his good fortune. "Everybody is happy, especially me."

HEARING ON DAM
TOCCOA, Ga. (AP) — A public hearing has been scheduled for Thursday to enable residents to tell a federal investigating board what they know about the earthen dam that collapsed Nov. 6, killing 38 persons associated with Toccoa Falls College.

Liked His Singing, And Gave Him College Costs

GREENVILLE, S.C. (AP) — Before Tuesday, 17-year-old Marsaisa Byrd had "never seen nor heard" of Greenville County businessman R.G. Wilson.

But, Byrd said Tuesday night Wilson has made "a dream come true."

Wilson, impressed with Byrd's singing at a luncheon Tuesday, surprised the Greenville High School junior by telling him he'd pay the youth's full expenses to college.

"It was like a dream, but it was real," Byrd said.

The student said he wanted to go to college to study voice, but his family could not afford to send him. Byrd's father works at a Greenville bakery and he has two brothers and a sister.

Before Wilson's offer, Byrd had planned to go into the Army when he finished high school or to work his way through college.

But, that won't be necessary now — all because of Byrd's solo performance of "Go Tell It on the Mountain."

Byrd sang the religious number Tuesday during a luncheon held in honor of Wilson, who had given the county's schools a check for $144,000 for a 1,500-seat multi-purpose amphitheater.

The student had appeared at the luncheon along with other members of a Greenville County choral group.

Byrd said Tuesday night, "As soon as I was finished singing I was supposed to go back to school." But, he said, he was told to stay on.

Wilson then called Byrd to the front of the room and told him he'd pay his way to college — a cost he estimated at be-

Four Collisions In Greenville Tuesday

An estimated $2,765 property damage resulted from four traffic collisions investigated by Greenville Police yesterday.

Officers reported heaviest damage resulted from a 4:05 p.m. mishap at the intersection of Greene Street and Airport Road involving cars driven by Faye Williams Waters of 400 Hillcrest Dr. and Lyndell Jerome Eaton of 1503B Halifax St.

Police, who charged Eaton with failing to stop for a red light, estimated damage at $900 to the Waters car and $800 to the Eaton vehicle.

Cars driven by Gail Taylor of Route 2, Greenville, and Nancy Head Dixon of 523 Westchester Dr. collided about 3:33 p.m. at the intersection of Fifth and Maple Streets, resulting in an estimated $150 damage to the Taylor car and $300 damage to the Dixon vehicle.

A truck driven by Ronald Lee Gay of Route 2, Farmville, caused an estimated $25 damage to a yard at 112 Wade St. when the vehicle ran into the yard while attempting to turn off of Broad Street, about 10:42 a.m.

Damage to the truck was estimated at $290.

A 7:45 p.m. mishap on Greenville Boulevard, 40 feet West of the 14th Street intersection involved a car driven by Lacy Jennings Lancaster Jr. of 1221 Evans St. and a truck driven by Chester Fred Gower of 1408 Polk St.

Damage from the collision was set at $250 to the Lancaster car and $50 to the Gower truck.

Co., developers of the proposed enclosed mall at the intersection of 264 and NC 11, to reconsider a revision in the ordinance.

Bill Jackson, representing the company, said that Hahn requested that the ordinance be amended to call for curbed and elevated wheel stops to be provided every fourth parking bay in the lot or every eighth parking stall.

The existing ordinance requires that every other parking bay have a vegetation island, according to Charlie Holliday, city engineer.

Jackson said that the maintenance involved in the larger number of vegetation islands is more of a factor in seeking the amendment than economics.

A spokesman for Hahn's engineering consulting firm explained the parking plan proposed for the mall and contended that the local facility would "be one of the safest shopping centers around."

The spokesman said that he felt that on any parking lot, four bays of parking between vegetation islands would be adequate.

An amendment to the ordinance as proposed would give developers the opportunity to present a plan of the internal development of their parking facilities rather than face a blanket stipulation regarding vegetation islands.

In a third item before the joint board, approval was given to the final plat of Section II of Pinewood Forrest, located east of the television station.

Holliday noted that the section lies just east of Section I which is just beyond the station. At the last meeting, he noted, the recreational area for the section had not been designated but that matter has been taken care of.

Commissioners voted to schedule the December meeting for the 14th with the closing date for agenda items set for Tuesday, Dec. 6.

The request of Bernice C. Branch for rezoning 21.4 acres north of E. Third Street west of the city landfill from RA-20 to R-6 was automatically tabled for 30 days. The anticipated development for the area, it was indicated, would be multi-family units.

All of the property is located in the 100-year flood plain, according to Schofield, and part of it is in the designated floodway. The flood plain can be developed under certain provisions involving elevation of structures and building permits can be issued by the city.

Approval was given to the revised final plats of both Section II and Section III of Windy Ridge Condominiums located on 14th Street extension. Linwood Stroud, agent for the developers, explained that the revisions only involved an increase being made in the size of the private ownership areas by taking part of the common area.

The final plat of Medical Shopping Center located at the intersection of Memorial Drive and Stantonsburg Road was approved. The preliminary plat of the development had been approved earlier contingent upon the N.C. Department of Transportation approving the proposed highway cuts. DOT approval has been received, Holliday said.

Commissioners also approved the preliminary plat of Cedar Village located at the northwest intersection of 14th Street and Red Banks Road.

Jim Bullock, representing the developer, said that eight lots of 13,500 square feet are proposed for the property, which faces Red Banks Road. Ann Worthington was welcomed last night as a new member of the joint commission.

We've got your pickle.

Every crunchy, delicious pickle that goes inside a Heinz jar has a reputation to live up to. A reputation that's been in the making for over 100 years. That's why, at Heinz, we season our Kosher Dills with real peppercorns. And why we use fresh, chopped garlic — for longer lasting flavor.
Of course, we're every bit as fussy with the 56 other varieties of pickles we make too.
That's because we want every pickle to be a credit to the name Heinz.

You've got our coupon.

Consider Marijuana Therapy Testing

By CHRIS CONNELL
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — A government advisory panel is considering whether doctors should be allowed to prescribe marijuana for persons undergoing chemotherapy or suffering from glaucoma or asthma.

The Food and Drug Administration's Controlled Substances Advisory Committee was meeting today to hear arguments on whether federal restrictions on marijuana should be eased.

Marijuana is now treated like heroin and LSD under federal drug abuse laws. Doctors cannot prescribe it except in federally controlled experiments.

Among the witnesses arguing for medical use of marijuana was Robert Randall, a 29-year-old glaucoma sufferer who gets a weekly supply of pot from the government in a test of its effect on eye pressure.

Also testifying was a representative of the National Organization for the Reform of Marijuana Laws, which first petitioned the government five years ago to allow medical use of marijuana.

NORML also favors decriminalization of marijuana for social use, but the FDA panel has no jurisdiction over that issue.

"This is our shot. This is the ball game for us," said NORML lawyer Peter Meyers, who won a federal court battle last spring to force the government to consider reclassifying marijuana.

The Justice Department's Drug Enforcement Administration opposed any change in the law, but an appeals court said the secretary of health, education and welfare must decide whether marijuana has medical value.

The panel, composed of experts from outside the government, will make a recommendation for HEW Secretary Joseph A. Califano Jr.

THE CAROLS STAY
AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Atheist Madalyn Murray O'Hair has failed in her effort to get Texas Gov. Dolph Briscoe to stop the singing of religious Christmas carols in the capitol rotunda. "There will be some difficulty at Christmas here," she says. "I'll be back."

Federal officials say they doubt the panel will recommend a change now because the scientific evidence on marijuana is inconclusive, despite the personal testimony of advocates like Randall.

Robert C. Petersen, associate director for research in the National Institute on Drug Abuse, said marijuana is no panacea for glaucoma, but has shown promise in helping cancer patients avoid nausea during chemotherapy.

If that pans out, the law might be changed to allow prescription of marijuana to cancer patients "in as short a period as a year, maybe," Petersen said.

President Carter's top health adviser, Dr. Peter G. Bourne, recently told HEW that he wants federal experts to scrutinize objectively the potential therapeutic uses of heroin and other abused drugs, including marijuana.

La Leche Meet On Thursday

The evening La Leche League group will begin its series of four monthly meetings for the nursing mother on Thursday, November 17, at 7:15 p.m. at the home of Judy Beckert.

The topic will be "Advantages of Breastfeeding to Mother and Baby". All mothers and expectant mothers interested in breastfeeding and the art of mothering are invited to attend. For information call 756-4197.

Pitt Churches Gave $11,072

The Free Will Baptist Churches of Pitt County contributed $11,072 to the development fund of Mount Olive College at their annual dinner, according to J. C. Boyd, chairman of the dinner.

This year's contributions brought the total given by Pitt County churches since the program began in 1963 to $141,309.

Shriners Go To Manteo Nov. 19

MANTEO — About 4,000 Shriners are expected to gather in this Roanoke Island town for the Fall Ceremonial for Sudan Temple Ancient Arabic Order, Nobles of the Mystic Shrine on Saturday, November 19.

To be headquartered at the Nags Head Ramada Inn, the convention is the largest ever to be held in this resort area. Shriners from the Sudan Temple in New Bern and member candidates will be joined by representatives from Khedive Temple in Norfolk, the nearest temple to the Outer Banks area.

The Dare County Shrine Club is hosting the Fall Ceremonial. Dwight H. Wheelless of Manteo is the general chairman of the Ceremonial Committee.

"All Shriners are invited to attend the Ceremonial," Wheelless says, "and one of the primary functions of the event is induction of new members into the temple."

The program gets underway Friday night, November 18 with a 9 p.m. dance at the Dare County Shrine Club north of Manteo.

On Saturday, registration begins at 9 p.m., followed by a 9:30 a.m. business meeting for election of candidates: The first section of the Ceremonial will begin at 10 a.m.

A parade at 11 a.m. will form at the Manteo Elementary School and will go through downtown Manteo beginning at noon. More than 50 units are scheduled to be part of the parade, and will include floats, chanters, bands, clowns, and the official uniformed patrol from Khedive Temple. A Moslem Feast will be served at 12:30 at the Manteo High School cafeteria, followed by the second section of the Ceremonial at 2:30 p.m.

The closing activity will be a dance from 8:30 p.m. til 12:30 a.m. to be held at Nepenthe, formerly the casino across from Jockey's Ridge State Park in Nags Head. The Dare County Shrine Club will also be open for entertainment.

Entertainment for the wives of Nobles on Saturday includes a coffee hour at 10:30 a.m. in the Masonic Lodge, and sight-seeing tours to include sites on Roanoke Island and in the Nags Head area.

Enrollment Said Higher

SNOW HILL — Mike Taylor, Director of the Lenoir Community College Unit in Snow Hill reports that senior citizen enrollment in extension classes at the Green County Unit of Lenoir Community College is up considerably for the fall quarter.

"About 25 per cent of the students in the extension program are senior citizens over 65," Taylor reports. "The total fall extension enrollment is 845, with 210 of that total being over 65."

A variety of vocational, skill, and cultural courses are offered to the older people of the community. Many of the courses, Taylor notes, are made possible "by working closely with other Greene County organizations to reach senior citizens."

An example of the variety offered is that of a new course, one in choral music which is being taught at Walstonburg and Snow Hill. Taylor hopes soon to start a banking and finance course in Walstonburg and Snow Hill.

"Classes are designed to be informative and therapeutic," Taylor says. "The classes help people to express themselves, expand their interest, and help them in everyday living."

A Model's Career: One Of Most Slippery Heaps

By JANE SEE WHITE
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — To Carla LaMonte, de la Renta is "Oscar" and Blass is "Bill." She has climbed to the top of one of the most slippery heaps in the world to earn $100 an hour as a fashion model.

But all is not soft swirling fabrics, gentle background music, wealth and fame — for this long-limbed daughter of a Holyoke, Mass., factory worker is realistic: it could all end tomorrow, she says.

"At first I just wanted to make a living. Then I wanted to be one of the top 10 models. Then I wanted to be one of the top five. But once you're on top, what's next?

"Down. So I can't turn down a job — I always think it might be the last."

She works virtually 365 days a year, often for as long as 16 hours a day. No matter what havoc it will wreak on her personal plans, Carla almost never turns down a job.

"If I find out I've been left out of a show I call my agents and ask why. They say, 'because you're too busy,' and I say, 'But did they want me?'"

So most of the time Carla LaMonte runs from job to job — dashing for subways, flagging taxicabs. Her thick brunette hair askew, she clutches bulky tote bags filled with the paraphernalia of her trade — spare stockings and shoes, makeup and bobby pins, and an enormous, hour-by-hour appointment calendar.

Carla has been modeling for 10 years, but her age is a mystery. She won't tell because, she says, each designer has a different notion of who Carla LaMonte is: Blass sees her as a sophisticated woman in her 30s; Clovis thinks of her as 25-ish. Carla LaMonte intends to keep working for both.

The work is no picnic. One recent Monday, Carla rose at 6:30 a.m. to set her hair before embarking on a series of seven fashion shows scattered around the city that began at 8 a.m. and ended after 10 p.m. Sunday's schedule was much the same, and Tuesday's.

Carla changed clothes at least 40 times, zipped at least 40 zippers, changed hairstyles nearly as often in not many more minutes.

She whipped herself into elegant, glowing beauty in tiny overheated dressing rooms where, as many as 16 other models zipped and pinned and brushed and, now and then, bruised one another with bony elbows in the frenzy of changing.

Of course, the money is fabulous.

"That's not true," Carla objects. "It sounds great, but I don't get paid until they send the money to my agent. I must lose $3,000 a year from designers who go out of business without paying me."

You can't get a secure grip at the top of modeling's slippery heap, Carla says. Turn down a Sunday show, and the designer may not call you when he has a Wednesday show; dare to settle into a "look," and when fashions change, you no longer complement them. Get too heavy, or stay too thin — you've got trouble.

"And now, in the United States, blondes are in," Carla says. "Of course, if there's one brunette in a show, it's likely to be me."

"But that doesn't mean it'll always be that way."

The Lid Is Off Secrets Of The Reggie Candy Bar

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN
AP Special Correspondent
CHICAGO (AP) — Double double, boil and trouble: the secret ingredients of the "Reggie, Reggie, Reggie" candy bar have leaked out of the pressure-tight cauldrons of the high security kitchens here at Standard Brands.

The lid was on for competitive reasons in the cavity industry because no ballplayer has been memorialized on a candy wrapper since the Baby Ruth bar came on the market decades ago in tribute to Ruth Cleveland, winsome daughter of President Grover Cleveland, who batted .286 (about the same as Reggie) in the old Potomac Little League.

It's no secret that the little ole lozenge makers put in many a bittersweet month over their Bunsen burners and steaming saucepans trying to boil up a candy confection that would suggest at first bite the essential Reggie Jackson.

They knew from consumer studies done in the Yankee dug-out that, tastebudwise, Reggie never could be confused with Mr. Goodbar or Chuckles or Candy Kisses. Suggestions came from the vicinity of the water cooler that something on the order of a Snicker might be more appropriate, but that was before the titular bon bon hit those three home runs in the final World Series game.

Now it can be revealed, thanks to the treachery of an embittered ladle stirrer in the syrup shed, that the Reggie, Reggie, Reggie bar is encased in rich mocha chocolate whipped up into peaks and mounds and hillocks. These represent the ethnic barriers, the mountains of bias that the Philadelphia tailor's son has had to cross on his way to greatness. Next comes a layer of taffy and fudge, symbolic of the give and take at contract time with George Steinbrenner and the Yankee front office.

There are no peanuts in the Reggie, Reggie, Reggie bar. No presidential slight is intended here, but Reggie Jackson just doesn't work for peanuts.

Near the center of this toothsome masterpiece are bite-sized bits of licorice, emblematic of the dark double knits on the plate umpires, which Reggie chews up when questioning a strike call.

Thin stripe of molasses suggests the dignified manner in which the great man approaches a fly ball, a few cordial cherries in sour syrup evokes his relationship with manager Billy Martin and a streak of rum butter, lightly whipped, provides the tangy flavor of lazy winter afternoons in the off-season Puerto Rican league.

But down deep at the core of the Reggie, Reggie, Reggie bar is a soft and gooey center of rich marshmallow, capturing the quintessential Jackson, the man who gives away Thunderbird cars to sweet charity, the way John D. Rockefeller used to hand out dimes.

The whole is topped off with a sprinkling of crushed nuts, a rueful reminder of the brand of bleacherites generic to Yankee Stadium, especially the oafs who toss the beer bottles and firecrackers and the one who hung from the scoreboard with his breeches at half mast in the second Series game.

Confectured at great expense and wrapped in the pencil striped regimentals of the New York Yankees, the Reggie, Reggie, Reggie bar is a chocolate coated crispy chewy candy colossus that can't be beat when it comes to the crunch. Kids should get a kick out of it, jurisprudence notwithstanding. Remember, a Reggie, Reggie, Reggie can be bought but never traded; at least that was sweet talk among the candy butchers last week up at the house that Ruth built, (Babe not Baby, that is.)

Get one today for just under three million dollars. Like chameleons, some snakes have a limited ability to change their coloration during the day.

Group Invites A 'Throwing Everything At Brush Fire' Day Of Fasting

The Greenville Hunger Coalition invites the public to observe Thursday, Nov. 17, as a day to "Fast For A World Harvest."

The community group is concerned with raising the consciences of local citizens about world hunger problems. The Thursday observance is being carried out in cooperation with

The Oxford Committee for Famine Relief and it has become an annual event in Greenville.

OXFAM, they say, has no religious or political ties. It receives no government funds, but depends entirely on free will contributions to support long range self-help programs in this country and abroad.

OXFAM estimates that 800 million people go to bed hungry each day — four times the population of the U. S. It suggests that the money saved by not eating Thursday be given to OXFAM or other world hunger alleviation causes. They also suggest that individuals reduce their intake of meat and alcoholic products, which are responsible for the indirect irresponsible use of grain.

Patrick O'Neill of the Greenville Hunger Coalition said that information booths will be set up Nov. 16 and 17 on Evans Mall and at the ECU Book Store and the Allied Health Building of ECU. Those who wish may sign up to fast.

The group supplies speakers for groups interested in learning more about world hunger and how individuals can help arrest it. Information may be obtained by calling 752-4216 or contacting any of the East Carolina University chaplains.

LOS ANGELES (AP) —

Moist sea breezes replaced hot, dry desert winds early today as firefighters plotted tactics to beat a raging brush fire stalemated in a canyon only three miles from expensive beachfront homes.

A spokesman for the Los Angeles County Fire Department said that the firefighters would "throw everything we have at it" today.

More than 300 firemen used hand tools Tuesday night to hack a 20-mile fire line out of the dense, tinder-dry brush in the rugged Santa Monica Mountains just 30 miles west of downtown Los Angeles.

But county fire Inspector Dennis Miller cautioned: "The fire's still out of control. There is no estimate of containment."

Six firefighters were injured. Mike Eubanks, 25, of the Los Angeles County Fire Department, was reported in critical condition in Westlake Hospital after a tractor rolled over him.

Four men received minor injuries when they were singed by a wall of fire that swept over their truck. A sixth man collapsed, apparently from exhaustion and smoke inhalation.

The blaze — the second major fire in two days in the same drought-parched hills — began at mid-day Tuesday when searing winds from the desert fanned a fire in an illegal dump, fire officials said. The blowing sparks ignited brush around the dump.

Miller originally said the dump fire had been smoldering for several weeks. But early today, fire information officer Roy Talbot said witnesses saw a man start a fire in the dump Tuesday and that the area was not burning earlier.

The leap-frogging flames, which for a time Tuesday were burning 200 acres an hour, had blackened more than 2,000 acres — about 3½ square miles — of brush by early today, Miller said.

Dense black smoke billowing out of the canyons was visible for more than 20 miles throughout the day, and a heavy pall hung over downtown Los Angeles.

About 200 homes scattered in the sparsely populated, rural canyons above the beaches were evacuated. Several structures had been reported destroyed, but Miller said the fire department had no confirmation of whether these were homes or other buildings.

Firefighters got the best of the fire shortly after sunset, when winds tapered off from the 20-40 mph gusts that had prevailed through the day.

Miller said humidity was 18 percent Tuesday and was expected to drop to that again today, after reaching 40 percent overnight.

"Anything below 30 percent is an extreme fire danger," Miller said.

Buses took 150 boys from Camps Kilpatrick and Miller and 150 men from Camp 13, all county detention homes in the hills near the fire, to a Red Cross evacuation center set up at an elementary school near the ocean.

At one point during the day, worried fire officials predicted, "It's definitely going to the ocean. With the wind behind it, the fire is not only out of control ... it's running wild."

The latest blaze broke out as firefighters encircled a 1,200-acre fire which sprang up Monday in the Topanga Canyon, about 20 miles west of downtown. That fire was declared contained shortly after noon Tuesday, and men and machines were quickly shifted to the new fire.

Buying Real Estate To Block Public Housing

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Residents of a well-to-do subdivision here have gone into the real estate development business in an effort to head off plans for a public housing project in their neighborhood.

The 500 residents have contributed amounts ranging from $1 to $2,000 to buy a prospective public housing site and begin building single-family homes on it instead.

The Raleigh Housing Authority, however, has not abandoned plans for its 60 low-income apartment units at the site.

"The owner of the land is not really the determining factor," said RHA Executive Director Floyd T. Carter. "The housing authority does have the right to acquire land through procedures other than amicable negotiation."

The housing authority planned an 8:30 a.m. meeting today to discuss the situation. Sources close to the agency said a purchase offer would probably be made, the first step toward condemnation of the property for public purchase.

The land in question is a 30-acre tract northeast of downtown Raleigh and near the Starmount subdivision, a predominantly white neighborhood where homes sell for between $45,000 and $70,000.

About 60 per cent of Raleigh's public housing is occupied by blacks, but Starmount residents say racial considerations are not behind their effort to keep the project out of their area.

Robert M. Clay, an attorney for the real estate corporation the residents formed to purchase and develop the land, said the area already has apartment houses and does not have enough public transportation, recreation or commercial facilities to support more people. Area schools are already overcrowded, he added.

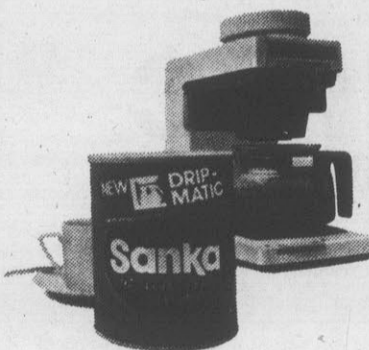

Construction on some of the first group of 15 to 19 homes could begin within three weeks, a spokesman said.

Here's a chance to test your declarer skill. Cover the East-West hands with your thumbs and see if you can find the winning line at a diamond slam.

South's decision to contract for slam was somewhat aggressive. Because of his concentration of strength in diamonds, his hand was riddled with losers despite its high point count. Having reversed, he might have been content to bid five diamonds rather than Blackwood, leaving it up to partner to go on.

West led his top club and declarer correctly won in hand. He drew two rounds of trumps, crossed to the ace of clubs and took the heart finesse. When this succeeded, declarer continued with the ace and another heart. Had the suit split 3-3, declarer would have been home. But East won the third heart and returned a trump, and declarer still had to lose another heart.

Declarer's timing of the hand was all awry. The only chance for the contract was to find East with the king of hearts. Based on that assumption, declarer could have given himself an extra shot at the contract.

Since he must lose a heart anyway, it is our contention that declarer should lead a low heart from his hand at trick two! As the cards lie, he can no longer be defeated. Assume East wins the heart and shifts to a trump. Declarer wins and draws a second trump. Now he crosses to the ace of clubs and takes the heart finesse.

Next comes the ace of hearts, and when West has to discard on this trick, declarer is home. He can now ruff his fourth heart in dummy while East follows helplessly, then get back to his hand with a club ruff to draw the last trump and claim his contract. Note that this line would also succeed if hearts divided 3-3.

Your play to the first trick could decide the fate of the contract! A writer once remarked: "There's no such thing as a blind opening lead, only dead opening leads!" Photo Show At Jewish Museum

PHOTO SHOW
NEW YORK (AP) — Seventy-four color photographs depicting "the full spectrum of Israeli life" will be on display at the Jewish Museum here through Dec. 18.
The show is called "Israel Kaleidoscope: Color Photographs by Morris and Edith Jaffe" and the museum says it "captures the essence of an ancient land, while reflecting the influence of contemporary life."
The Jaffes took the photos in Israel in 1974.

FARE GUARANTEED
WASHINGTON, D.C. (UPI) — Passengers are guaranteed the price of domestic air fares when tickets were purchased, even if fares are raised before tickets are used, according to a ruling by the Civil Aeronautics Board.

Gate Theater, he seemed a happy choice to write the show and act the part of the good mayor.
Alas, O'Connor seems to have been writing with the governor on. His script has little of the Irish sense of fun, little of what the Irish call "good crack," or lively banter.
While everything's done in good taste, there's a minimum of toora toora tomfoolery. A pity. The show emerges with scarcely more zip than an Englishman defending the virtues of kidney pie.

The only grade-A banter occurs at a wake, as two of Skeffington's city hall acolytes inspect the remains of an ex-pal and partner of the mayor. One says the deceased, a bad drunk, looks swell now.

"Yeah," the other murmurs, "the mean look is gone."

O'Connor, who plays the mayor as an unusually subdued, low-key politico with little of the original's dry wit, also has taken certain liberties with the plot of the book.

No longer is Skeffington a confirmed widower. He now has been conducting a long, illicit love affair with a writer lady of noble birth. She drifts in and out of scenes, scolding or supporting him.

And there's the problem of the mayor's son. In the book, he was a handsome, amiable dolt of a lawyer, a bachelor playboy about whom the mayor once sighed: "I've sired a featherhead."

Here, the son is married, idealistic, smart and alienated from his father because Pop was unfaithful to Mom, spent more time on politics than the family, and was no good for the city, to boot.

In time, all this is resolved and the son (Patrick Wayne) goes campaigning with his father. But not before some tiresome prelims that include a not-in-the-book murder that could cause scandal.

Things perk up occasionally, as during Skeffington's showdown with a banker (Patrick O'Neal) leading to a GOP charge against him, and a Catholic cardinal (Burgess Meredith) opposing him on moral grounds.
But such moments are few. The movie, directed by Vincent Sherman, seems oddly listless, with the human juices of old-style, big-city politics slowed to a trickle.

More Singles Buying Homes
NEW YORK (AP) — Sales of homes to singles is on the rise, reports House & Home magazine.
The decision on the part of singles, the publication notes, is both economic and emotional. Economic in the sense that buyers want a tax break and a chance to build equity, and emotional in the sense of acquiring one's own piece of turf.
Today's singles are unlike the young hedonists who in the early 1970s flocked to the swinging-singles apartment complexes, the magazine states. They are also a more mature group, although not necessarily older, possess a stronger sense of individuality, and are in no hurry to marry, it reports.
FOUNDED IN 1538
SUCRE, Bolivia (UPI) — One of the oldest churches in South America is San Miguel, founded in 1538 when Sucre was the leading city of colonial Bolivia.

The story of the power, romance and intrigue engulfing a big city mayor and his political machine.

Pirate Mary Read's Short Life Ended In Prison

By Dr. H. G. JONES, Curator North Carolina Collection CHAPEL HILL, N. C. (AP) — Like her shipmate Anne Bonney, Mary Read had an unusual childhood, spent part of her life disguised as a male pirate, and eventually was sentenced to be hanged.

Mary's mother was the wife of an English sailor who had been at sea more than a year before the girl was born. Her illegitimate birth, therefore, was hidden from the sailor's relatives.

However, when a legitimate son, just a year older than Mary, died, the mother decided to dress Mary as a boy and pass her off as the legal male heir.

Thus it was that Mary Read became disguised as Mark Read who, at the age of 13, was hired out as a servant. Not liking this work and "growing bold and strong, and having also a roving mind," Mark went aboard a ship, ended up in Flanders, and joined an infantry regiment.

Soon Mark quit the infantry and joined the cavalry, earning praise from the officers.

But Mark was really a Mary, and she fell in love with another member of the regiment. When Mary revealed her sex, the fellow was elated over the prospect of having a mistress in his tent.

But Mary had another idea. She withheld her favors until the soldier promised to marry her. The marriage of the two troopers "made a great noise," and their comrades raised funds to enable the couple to leave the service.

They opened a tavern near Breda and for a time prospered. The husband died, however, and Mary resumed her male disguise and boarded a Dutch man-of-war for America.

The ship was captured by English pirates who, recognizing "Mr. Read" as English but not as female, took her to the West Indies.

There the English were organizing privateers to attack Spanish shipping, so Mark Read joined up.

When the ship got to sea, however, some members of the crew, led by Captain John "Calico Jack" Rackman, deposed the officers and ran up the flag of piracy. It was aboard this vessel that Anne Bonney and Mark Read discovered that the other was a woman, a secret shared for a while only with Rackman.

But again love won out. Read became attracted to a shipmate, a "forced man" — that is, one who had been captured and forced to serve as a member of the crew.

To the great surprise and delight of the young man, Mark confessed to being Mary, and they agreed to be married when they returned to port.

In the meantime, Mary's lover became involved in a quarrel with another shipmate and was challenged to a duel. Mary realized that her suitor was the weaker of the two, yet she could not allow him to be branded as a coward.

To save her fiancé from almost sure death, the disguised Mary intervened in the quarrel and issued her own challenge to the adversary. Not suspecting Read's motive, the antagonist accepted the challenge.

They chose sword and pistol and Read killed the opponent on the spot. This courageous act confirmed the crew's respect for the toughness of "Mr." Read, who fought shipmates and enemies alike.

Not long afterward, a ship representing the governor of Jamaica overtook Rackman's vessel and demanded its surrender. Bonney, Read and one other member of the crew remained on deck to fight the boarding party, but they were no match for the well armed attackers.

Taken to Jamaica, the women revealed their sex and were given a separate trial for piracy. Both were sentenced to be hanged, but both, being pregnant, appealed to English common law which forbade the taking of the life of an unborn baby.

Consequently, their sentences were stayed. Mary died in prison, perhaps in connection with the birth of her child. Anne eventually returned to Charleston and faded from public view.

gregation of Little Creek F.W.B. Church will render services Thursday at 8 p.m.

Friday at 8 p.m., Elder A.L. Miller and the congregation of Warren's Chapel F.W.B. Church will be in charge of services.

Bishop J.H. Vines and the congregation of St. Luke F.W.B. Church will preach Sunday at 3 p.m.

At 7:30 p.m. Sunday, Bishop W.L. Jones and the congregation of Mount Calvary F.W.B. Church will render services.

The public is invited to attend.

Americans who favored beer as a beverage, says Philip C. Katz, senior vice president of research services, United States Brewers Association.

Thomas Jefferson, another beer fancier, went on record as saying, "I wish to see this beverage become common," he adds.

Katz illustrated how common it has since become by pointing out that in 1975 the United States ranked first among countries of the world in beer production with 160,600,000 barrels. The brewing industry annually contributes over $2 billion in federal and state excise taxes.

The White Shark has a unique distensible stomach which allows it to swallow anything from a license plate to a horse, as the stomach lining expands with the load.

South Bronx, A No-Man's Land In The 'Big Apple'

By DAVID L. LANGFORD
UPI Senior Editor

NEW YORK (UPI) — The hefty black man in the blue cap rose from the pile of rubble where the others were sitting and stepped toward the curb. There was the crack of wood breaking and he was swallowed to the waist, stuck in a manhole covered only by rotten boards.

Ivan Martinez, 23, ex-leader of the Turbans street gang, helped pull the man out. He stuffed the open sewer hole with timbers and old tires, "so a kid won't fall in."

Like just about everything else worth a dime in this section of the South Bronx, the steel manhole cover had been ripped off and sold for junk.

"The other night we blocked off the street with the garbage the city's been dumping in these lots here and set fire to it," Martinez said. "That's the only way we can get any attention."

Just minutes before the men had been talking about how President Carter had come to their neighborhood and looked around and left, later promising to pump massive aid into this tortured community where more than 1,200 buildings stand empty, gutted, torched and abandoned.

"Carter say he gone do it, but I don't know," said James Pickney, 72, who has lived all his life here or across the river in Harlem. "He got a whole lot of doing to do."

This is the South Bronx. Once a happy enclave of mostly Jews and Italians who had escaped the tenements of Manhattan's Lower East Side, today it is a scorched monument to social planning gone awry.

It is an urban ruin that has been compared to Dresden or Berlin in late 1945 or Atlanta after Sherman's march through Georgia.

And the battle still rages. When darkness comes the torches go to work. In the past two years firemen have fought 7,000 fires in the South Bronx, an average of 10 a night. In 1975 alone, more than $20 million in insurance losses were reported.

Baseball fans across the country got a glimpse of life in the South Bronx during the World Series when the television cameras strayed from Yankee Stadium to watch a building burning down.

A man can stand at the corner of Boston Road and Charlotte Street, where Carter left his limousine last month, and look across several empty blocks where piles of brickbats and rubbish are the only clues buildings once stood there.

There are few signs of life in this no-man's land. Two old men pick through a rubble heap. A rat drinks from a leaking fire hydrant. An occasional pedestrian hurries through.

On all sides stand the wrecked shells of apartment buildings, many charred by fire, all eerily quiet.

A small Hispanic church occupies one of the closest inhabited buildings. Over the door is a quotation from the Book of Matthew:

"For the son of man is come to save which was lost."

Back in Washington after his tour, Carter signed a bill authorizing $14.7 billion in grants for cities over a three-year period.

"There are some devastated areas where American citizens live that are a disgrace to our great country," the President said in signing the bill. "There is no immediate solution that can be offered."

"I visited the South Bronx which is enough to shake our confidence in the structure that we've evolved. I know that in many other places in the country there are similar areas."

More than 2,000 square blocks in the area from the Harlem River to the Bruckner Expressway are devastated and that number is growing at the rate of four a week. More than 250,000 people have been dislocated.

A new report from New York's Department of City Planning blames the decay of the South Bronx on "sweeping social changes" beginning in the 1960s.

While the total population of the entire borough of the Bronx has remained relatively stable at 1.5 million, the proportion of blacks and Puerto Ricans climbed from 24 per cent in 1960 to 54 per cent in 1975.

As the middle-class whites fled to the suburbs to be replaced by the poorer blacks and Hispanics, the number of Bronx residents receiving welfare assistance climbed to a staggering $35,200 this year.

In the South Bronx, the median family income had reached only $5,480 by 1970.

In a now-familiar pattern in America's inner cities, there came a downside from disinvestment or "redlining" to deterioration to abandonment.

Disinvestment is the complex process involving property owners and bankers who decide that the return on a particular building or area is no longer worth investing more money. This leads to a reduction in services and the physical deterioration of the building and often to total abandonment and eventual seizure by the city for tax delinquency.

Arson often is a quicker solution.

And, according to the superintendent of one building which once stood on Charlotte Street where Carter strolled, it sometimes is not just the work of landlords trying to collect insurance money.

"It's the junkies and teen gangs," said Arnold Sudiero, 56, a resident of the area for 10 years. "They set them on fire at the top, knowing the water will go down and ruin everything and the people will move out."

"Then they come in and rip out everything they can tote off, like radiators and things. They get 60 or 70 cents a pound for a radiator from a junk dealer."

"They come into my building while people were still living there and started ripping the plumbing out of the basement. Those junkies will steal anything."

"I seen exterminators dump poison in these buildings to get shed of the rats and the junkies come long right behind with shopping bags and pick it up and sell it."

In the past 12 years 80,000 apartments in the South Bronx have been demolished while 8,380 residential parcels were delinquent in taxes totaling more than $35 million.

One in three of the borough's walk-up apartments and one in five of its elevator buildings have defaulted on taxes.

From 1970 to 1975, 3,605 buildings with more than 57,600 units were certified unsafe by New York's Buildings Department, while local officials readily admit the inspection program is inadequate because of the city's financial crunch.

"Ten years this was as fine a street as you would want," said James Pinkney, watching a cat rubbing itself in a shattered doorway. "Now all we got is rats."

"We got rats big as that cat. I ain't lying. They come right out here in the street."

Ivan Martinez, having rescued his friend from the manhole, walked up a deserted street to point out a brick-strewn lot where the Turbans once had their headquarters.

"We were are all just hanging out," he said. "In this neighborhood we had the Turbans, the Scorpions and the Junior Turbans. They were just for Puerto Rican and blacks. Your mother couldn't walk this street without being taken off. One of my friends got blown away right on that corner there."

Martinez once spent three months in jail for possession of a dangerous weapon.

"They said I had an M-14 but they never could find it so they had to let me go," Martinez said.

Now married and the father of a son and daughter, ages 3 and 2, Martinez works with a group called the Neighborhood Community Renewal Corporation, a tenants' organization.

"I got the job through The Man," he said. "They rehabilitated me." Bronx Borough President Robert Abrams thinks the South Bronx can be saved. But it will require massive reconstruction and rehabilitation with federal assistance, specifically the construction of 10,000 new housing units a year over the next 10 years.

In addition, Abrams says, financial institutions and insurance companies must end the practice of redlining.

"Any overall solution of the Bronx's overall housing problem has to include a renewed flow of private funds," Abrams said in his introduction to a 38-page report called "A Bronx Housing Strategy." "We must reverse the process of all institutions refuse to extend mortgage and home improvement loans, property owners cease to invest further in buildings, and property insurance becomes increasingly difficult to get at any price."

Under the federal housing building bill, New York could get $725 million over the next three years, beginning Sept. 1, but none of the money can be used for new construction.

Instead, the bill encourages rehabilitation of current structures, providing rent subsidies for landlords who improve their property. It also provides for low-interest loans for home owners.

"With subsidies and mortgage financing we ought to be able to get some things together," said William White of the Department of Housing and Urban Development, who was named coordinator of all federal services for the South Bronx.

The New York Department of City Planning is urging that new housing in the South Bronx be limited to about three stories, instead of the high-rise low rent projects that have proven disastrous in years past.

Aureo Cordona, instrumental in the South Bronx plan, put it this way:

"You spend a million bucks, you stick a 80 million people in it, and then what happens? ... There's going to be physical deterioration."

More than a decent place to live, the people of the South Bronx need jobs.

John Pope, 37, migrated here from Greensboro, Ala., eight years ago with his wife and four children, ages 9-17. He recently lost his job at a small shop making cabinets and doors.

"They're tearing houses down, not building them," he said. "I don't know what I'm going to do now. I ain't on welfare and I can't get unemployment yet. I ain't got nothing and my rent is $190 a month."

"A lot of folks ask me why I left Alabama to come to a place like this. I'm beginning to wonder myself."

Nursing a hurt knee after he was pulled from the manhole, the man in the blue cap was too embarrassed to give his name. But he doesn't care what the politicians are planning for the Bronx. He's getting out.

"Every time you smell smoke you got to jump up and see if your house is on fire," said the man, who came here 28 years ago from Wilson, N.C.

"Maybe my son can tell you what it's like here in a few years, but I'm not going to be around. I'm heading back to North Carolina."

"Sure, it's the Big Apple. But what's inside? It's a shell."

Seattle Air Museum To Feature Early Aircraft

By JIM TRUETT
Associated Press Writer
SEATTLE (AP) — Carl Gustafson worked on some of the first airplanes that rolled out of the Boeing Co.'s "Red Barn" almost 50 years ago. Now, he's helping restore the Red Barn as part of a $10-million aircraft museum.

The bespectacled, fair-haired Gustafson still dons his work clothes to create an airplane display or build a model control tower for the museum. He helped dismantle portions of the Red Barn for moving.

The Pacific Northwest Aviation Historical Foundation is planning the Red Barn Air Park for the southwest corner of Boeing Field, site of the first powered flight in the Puget Sound area by Charles Hamilton in 1910. Opening is set for early 1979.

Howard Lovering, project manager for the foundation, said King County was negotiating to buy the Boeing Field parcel for $700,000. The 5½ acres are occupied by a topless bar and a manufacturing firm.

"For the aviation buff, we hope to have just about everything," Lovering said.

Museum plans include a 70,000-square-foot modular building attached to the 20,000-square-foot Red Barn. It would include an observation deck and restaurant.

King County is supporting the project as part of an airport improvement program. The museum is being funded by private donations and public money.

The foundation now operates the Museum of Flight at Seattle Center. The group has been collecting aviation artifacts for the museum and now maintains a collection of about 20 aircraft in various stages of restoration.

One plane was retrieved from a garbage dump in 1960 at Anchorage, Alaska. The 1928 Boeing 80-A Trimotor biplane led to the birth of the foundation. Earl Brackin, director of the Seattle Center Museum of Flight, said the group was formed as a non-profit organization to raise funds for the project, begun by two Alaskans.

Brackin said the 80-A, with engines in the nose and on each wing, introduced stewardess service to commercial air travel.

"The number 80 played a magic tune with this plane," Brackin said. "It was called the 80; it cost $80,000; and the wingspan is 80 feet." Cost for restoring the plane to airworthiness is $800,000.

The 80-A is a major restoration job, Brackin says. "We'll pretty much have to start from scratch. It was in good shape with fabric still on the wings, but moving and time have caused deterioration."

The foundation still flies its 1933 Boeing 247D. That plane introduced multi-engine, all-metal airplanes to air travel.

Not all of the museum's planes are antiques. The Northrop YF-5A Freedom Fighter is still in use by the United States Air Force and NATO forces. The foundation has the prototype.

A missile and several sailplanes, including one that traveled both ways across the Atlantic, are now museum exhibits. Boeing's space shuttle mock-up is a sit-in exhibit for children at the Seattle Center Museum.

Brackin said most of the exhibits would be moved to the Red Barn museum.

The two-story, red-and-white building, listed on the National Register of Historic Places, was barged two miles up the Duwamish River to Boeing Field in 1975, after it was threatened by the expansion at its original location.

Company, brought back memories for Gustafson, who worked 41 years for Boeing.

"Over there used to be the production room. There used to be a wall here," he remembered. The building interior changed with new projects.

Pointing to a picture on the wall, Gustafson said, "A bunch of women used to sit around a wing and sew on the fabric."

At right, Orville Tosch, aircraft mechanic and former Alaska bush pilot, works on Boeing Model 100, oldest Boeing aircraft in flightworthy condition. The 1928 biplane is being refurbished for display in the museum.

Finders Keep Park Diamonds

MURFREESBORO, Ark. (AP) — Finders are keepers at Crater of Diamonds State Park here.

As North America's only producing diamond mine, more than 60,000 diamonds have been taken from the 78-acre field since the first stone was found in 1906 by John Huddleston, who then owned the property.

Findings include the 40.42-carat Uncle Sam, the 34.25-carat Star of Murfreesboro, the 15.24-carat Star of Arkansas and the 16.73-carat Amarillo Starlight.

The mine has changed hands several times over the years and several unsuccessful attempts have been made at commercial mining. It was purchased by the state for development as a state park in 1972.

Israel Early Pioneer In Solar Power

By MATHIS CHAZANOV
TEL AVIV, Israel (UPI) —
The Israeli skyline puzzles visitors.

Tanks and black glass panels roost among rooftop television antennas like lunar exploration modules.

They are actually water heaters that work on sunlight. There are 200,000 of them serving 20 per cent all households in the country — by far the highest percentage in the world.

Israeli experts say they can do anything with solar energy. But so far the hot water tank is the only product that runs more cheaply on sunshine than on conventional fuel.

"All the technical problems have been solved," said Shmuel Ofri, coordinator of energy research and development for the Ministry of Industry and Commerce.

He said researchers have figured out how to generate electricity, desalinate water and heat and cool homes by solar energy, besides "millions of industrial uses."

Among these are commercial laundering, recycling bottles, drying grain and tobacco leaves, evaporation in the chemical industry and dyeing.

"There's a fantastic quantity of energy," he said. "Every day 5,000 times the amount of energy the world uses in a year, and it's not subject to embargoes and you don't have to drill holes to look for it, most of them empty."

"It's seemingly free, but it isn't. Because of the technology it's too expensive for anything except heating water, so far."

The government is devoting 10 per cent of its industrial research budget to developing profitable uses for solar energy.

But for the next five years, it is not likely to take up more than 3 per cent of the current demand for energy.

"We're not ignoring the potential, but solar energy is not a radical solution," said Arye Lavi, the ministry's chief scientist.

Despite that, more than 100 researchers are working on 70 programs at a cost of $6 million and a substantial investment by local standards.

"We've got two basic factors here," Lavi said. "A stock of researchers and ideas and conditions that allow exploitation."

In short — sunlight. Government statistics show that there were only 45 rainy days in Tel Aviv in 1976.

Roof heaters need only a few hours of sunlight a day to work, and they can use diffused light on cloudy days.

Israeli scientists were among the first to work on practical ways of putting solar energy to use. They are credited with two key concepts — selective surface coating for energy collectors and the so-called solar pond.

The coating keeps the heat of the sun inside the glass panels, where it heats water from the rooftop tank before it is to be used for dishwashing and laundry. Without the coating most of the heat would dissipate.

The solar pond is a more advanced concept, developed by Prof. Rudi Bloch.

He noticed the bottoms of pools in his native Hungary were slightly warmer than the water above them. This is because solar energy hitting a pond is reflected back off the bottom. But in a normal pond the heat gets lost through evaporation and cooling at the surface.

The solar pond traps solar energy by arranging for a layer of high-density liquid at the bottom, with layers of less and less density up to the surface. Omri said the bottom layer heats up to just over boiling.

This hot water can then be drawn off and put to use. The Israelis hope to market a system within a few years that will be competitive with electricity in remote locations.

They are also working toward hotter results with ball-shaped or conical collectors that use tracking mechanisms to follow the path of the sun and focus its beams.

"By the year 2,000 the percentage of solar energy use will be much greater," Lavi said. "With the price of fuel expected to go up, more and more uses will become economical and the elements will be cheaper."

Hollywood Fighting To Keep Films

By NORMAN GOLDSTEIN
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — States from Georgia to Montana, Texas to Virginia have discovered the treasure of the Hollywood Hills and set out to produce movie and television producers to their backyards.

The picture-poaching has reached the point where California, long the undisputed center, has set up a commission to beat back the raiders, as have several cities in the state.

"We realized we were losing $100 million in annual revenue going from our state to theirs," says Liz Brady, executive director of California's Film Development Council. And that figure, she says, is conservative, involving only direct revenue.

Considering the money spent by film companies for car rentals, hotels, restaurants, lumber, services and the like, the loss to the state's economy could be as high as $375 million a year, quite a kick in the coffer to the state where movies grew up.

The California film council started work 1½ years ago to counter the activities of some 30 film commissions in other states that are busily luring film business away from the Hollywood precincts.

Miss Brady says her agency has managed to wrest some of the business back through devices ranging from issuing permits for filmmakers to shoot in state parks to frequent soul sessions with film executives.

California has set aside $120,000 this year for its bring 'em back alive project.

Other states have already been spending millions of dollars collectively to lure film budgets from Hollywood's backlots.

The Motion Picture Association of America says that more than 20 states have full-fledged film commissions. Most of the others have at least one official, usually within the department of commerce or tourism, to handle film development within their borders.

The Navajo Reservation of Arizona-New Mexico boasts a film commission. "They're all trying to get our business," says Lou Rachmil, vice president and production manager at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. "They come out here. Sometimes the governor comes out with them, and they do a very good sell. They turn loose their best people. They open doors. It's a very helpful situation."

The scramble began in the late 1960s, when the industry began to look for sites outside Hollywood because of audience demand for greater realism, high overhead at the studios and other reasons, says Bill McCallum of the Arizona Motion Picture Development Office.

Arizona grossed $5 million business in fiscal 1976-77. Its film office has a budget of $109,000 this year.

In terms of revenue, the Texas Film Commission, a division of the governor's office, is a giant. Director Pat Wolfe says it's drawn $60 million in film production in the past two years.

Eighteen major films were shot, partly or wholly, in Texas last year and 13 more through the summer of 1977. They include "Semi-Tough" and "The Bad News Bears Breaking Training." Both made use of Texas sports stadiums.

The states compete briskly among themselves. New Jersey hired the public relations firm of Rogers and Cowan, which specializes in entertainment industry accounts, to tout its wares.

Primarily, says Henry Rogers, they try to persuade producers that it can be done cheaper in Jersey.

New York is working hard to accommodate filmmakers and recently allowed a company to burn down a derelict building in Brooklyn for the movie "Nunzio." It meant money for a far from affluent neighborhood and jobs for kids as extras. In addition, the company shelled out part of the replacement costs of the building.

Ohio made $1 million last year from filmmakers attracted by the state film bureau's promotion. That includes use of a northeastern Ohio community, Chagrin Falls, for a New England setting sought by a television film crew.

Ed Spivia of the Georgia Film Office, one of the more active in the country, says the Peach State has drawn more than 100 television and feature films in the past five years. It's meant about $100 million.

Georgia made a maximum security prison available for a television film.

EASY RULES FOR PLAYING $1000 CASH BONANZA SERIES 125

1. Whenever you visit one of our participating stores you will receive a free concealed $1000 Cash Bonanza Number Ticket. Tickets are available at checkout counters or special desks. You can also receive $1000 Cash Bonanza game pieces by hearing reports in $1000 CASH BONANZA P.O. Box 5981, Richmond, Virginia 23230. One Master Card and concealed number ticket per receipt. Please do not lose your tickets. Receipts must be kept with each receipt.
2. No purchase necessary to participate. Only one concealed number ticket per store visit. Adults only eligible to play.
3. Simply push out circular portion of each concealed number ticket to separate and reveal Four Round Number Discs. Each concealed number disc will match a number on the Master Card you are playing. Insert each matching number into space on the Master Card. For example, Number 428 disc should be inserted into disc covering number 4, 2, 8 on the Master Card. To help you win, five squares are the same as covered numbers.
4. When you have marked a straight row of four numbers vertically, horizontally or diagonally on any one of the 6 games on the Master Card, you have won the cash prize shown at the top of that game. Only one cash prize per game, or game card.
5. If a disc shows the words "you win $1," you may immediately turn it in to our store manager and receive the cash amount shown.
6. Verification: Winning card should be taken to store manager only. The Master Card and the matching concealed number discs must be signed by the customer in the presence of the store manager. You will be given a receipt for your winning card and after it is verified you will immediately receive your cash prize from the store manager. Prizes $25 and over will be cashed by check. When you turn in your winning card, you will be given a new Master Card so that you can keep playing and winning $1000 Cash Bonanza. There is no limit to the number of times you can win. Winners consent to the publication of his or her name and photo at discretion of The Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co.
7. IMPORTANT: Any Master Card or individual concealed number discs will be judged void and will not be accepted if altered, defaced, mutilated, torn or tampered with in any way.
8. Employees and their relatives are excluded from participating in this promotion. Employees of participating stores are not eligible to play. Game is void where taxed or prohibited by law. We reserve the right to report any $1000 Cash Bonanza game mechanical error or errors in any $1000 Cash Bonanza game material and to report any alleged winning material containing such errors.
9. All prizes must be claimed within 5 days after termination of this promotion as announced in our advertisement.
10. The $1000 Cash Bonanza game is available at 214 Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co. stores located in Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, James City, Georgia, Florida, West Virginia. This promotion is scheduled to end on February 10, 1978. $1000 Cash Bonanza will officially end, however, when all game tickets are distributed.

FORECAST FOR THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 17, 1977

Your Daily HOROSCOPE

from the CARROLL RIGHTER INSTITUTE

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Follow conservative and proven modes of expression for if you do get involved in anything that is dramatic or drastic you lose out where it counts the most. Don't give in to temptation to make sudden changes. Consider all angles first.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Don't contact allies whose ideas are radical since they could not help you at all. Group affairs could also be unfruitful. Keep busy at whatever is of a practical and constructive nature.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Study plans you have concerning civic or career matters with utmost care before putting them in motion. Credit affairs are important, so be accurate.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Making new arrangements is fine, but don't put them in operation just yet. Any new contacts you make must be screened well. Don't get caught in any hair-brained schemes. Be practical.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Get into the obligations that are yours and handle them efficiently and quickly. Don't argue with mate, loved one and spoil the harmony now enjoyed.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Take it easy where trying to come to a better understanding with others is concerned. Don't lose temper. Study the situation well first.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Use orthodox methods in handling responsibilities and get right results. Forget about using impractical gadgets. Avoid that co-worker who is in poor humor, and don't let this person bother you.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Although having fun is on your mind, be sure you stick to important duties instead and don't incur further expense.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Handle home affairs wisely and improving conditions there. Remove tensions wherever you can. Take no chances with credit.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Doublecheck data you get that is important to your interests, or you could get into trouble. Drive with utmost care.

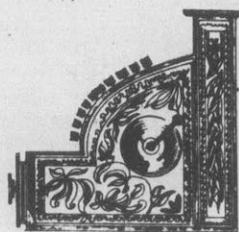

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) You think you can buy your way out of some difficulty now, but use more orthodox methods for best results. Be sure you get right prices if planning to improve property.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Take care of personal affairs but don't lose your temper or you lose out. Forget that social affair that could prove to be a big fizzle. Concentrate on something more worthwhile.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Don't permit tensions to floor you and be more objective for best results. Get rid of whatever brings you trouble.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will have much ability at solving problems, no matter how difficult, that will be a challenge. Give as fine an education as you can and slant it toward troubleshooting vocations for best results. Fine chart for combining standard systems with the modern which leads to big success.

RHINO CROSSING? — If this rhinoceros was parked overtime on a Seattle street, nobody complained and no metermaid issued a ticket. The creature turned heads of passing motorists, but it actually was a plastic reproduction of a rhino by Klineburger Brothers Outdoor World. Opines Times Affect Music

VERMILLION, S.D. (UPI) — When young Arne Larson was supposed to be sleeping, he would sneak to the chimney grating of the farmhouse where he was born to hear his father and others play music until late in the night.

By age 5, Larson got his first musical instrument in the farmhouse at New Ulm, Minn. It was a clarinet his father, Adolph, bought for $2 from a returning band member of the Spanish-American War.

Larson, now 73, has collected musical instruments ever since. He is founder of a collection which musicologists say is one of the world's largest.

It is shown, in part, at the Shrine to Music on the University of South Dakota campus in Vermillion where Larson is professor emeritus of music. The Missouri River town near the Nebraska-South Dakota border is more likely a home for a rodeo than for Larson's collection.

The display at the W.H. Over Museum ranges from a Viking bullhorn to a pipe organ. There are strange-looking instruments, like a one-string pitch fork and a musical saw, and exotic ones, such as organ chimes of the South Sea Islands and ornate Indian sitar.

Larson can play each instrument in the collection.

He became interested in the history of music as a teen-ager. He traded tea and canned goods during World War II for British collectors' items. Later, he supplied willing missionaries with staples in exchange for more exotic instruments.

His collection has grown so large, Larson said, "it would take 30 or 40 rooms to provide enough space."

With a trace of Norwegian accent, he quoted from Plato: "Show me a country with good music, and I'll show you a country with good government; show me a country with bad government, and I'll show you a country with bad music."

Larson said rock 'n' roll grew out of social problems and "the turmoil in people's minds." "Who did we sing about in the middle 60s?" he asked. "Ourselves. Come and love me ... Give me ... I must have. Those were the messages. Before, we sang about love and sentiment."

But the musical scene is changing, he said. The emotion of country western songs will meld with present-day rock for more mellow, sentimental music.

If the world stays at peace, Larson said, the tones of popular music in the 1980s will soften and become more melodic.

But, if war breaks out in the Middle East or Africa, he said, prepare for more electronic music, brass and lots of drums.

Larson said music also is linked to economic trends. He cited the music of the Great Depression, like "Show Me the Way to Go Home," reflected the loneliness in men's hearts.

Other economic trends, like the energy crisis, could spark a resurgence of municipal bands, he said.

"There won't be this hysteria of driving 20 miles for a 25-cent hamburger," he said. "People will have to stay in one place."

And music, of course, will be everywhere.

Noise Pollution A Constant Fight For John Tyler

By JULES LOH
AP Special Correspondent
GLASTONBURY, Conn. (AP) — John Tyler's doorbell emits a single muffled ding.

Recognition And Awards

AYDEN — The South Ayden Community Service Center, Inc., will hold its first recognition and awards program on Friday in Ayden Middle School Auditorium at 7:30 p.m. The community service center has been established for one year, and it will be recognizing citizens in the Ayden community which have supported the service center. Dale Price, Deputy Director of Action's Region IV, will be the guest speaker.

One ding is sufficient. As a noisemaker, it competes only with the whistle of doves' wings and the scolding of jays at the feeder. When the birds are silent, the prevailing sound is of leaves dropping.

"As background noise goes up, the noise to attract attention has to get louder," John Tyler said, softly.

"That's the fix our society has got itself in. The background noise keeps going up. As one result, look what has happened to police and ambulance sirens. They can't get much louder."

If there is one thing that will cause John Tyler to raise his voice, it is noise. He doesn't like it. As an industrial engineer he accumulated a string of patents for devices to keep down noise, and since his retirement in 1970 he has been working fulltime battling aircraft noise.

"The technology is available now to reduce aircraft noise by half and at the same time make airplanes more fuel efficient," he said.

"But even if the first new airplane was ordered today it would still be the year 2000 before the full impact would be felt, before the last of the noisy ones is gone. I'm afraid it's going to be noisy for quite some time."

Meanwhile, John Tyler heads a volunteer organization called the Center for the Study of Noise in Society. Its aim is to push legislation through Congress and hasten the arrival of those new airplanes.

The organization operates out of his home in the woods, a home he designed himself with peace and quiet in mind. "If someone wants to watch television, or run the dishwasher, it won't disturb the ones who don't care to listen. It's in the placement of the walls and doors."

Sure enough, a conversation with John Tyler in his living room is undisturbed. Well, almost.

"Do you hear that?" he said, interrupting himself. The distant drone of a single-engine airplane cuts through the solitude. "If you're on the flight path here, there's no escaping the noise. As things stand now, there's also very little the victim can do about it."

Tyler knows that frustration.

"Just after I was married, in 1935, we lived in a rural area near Williamsport, Pa. Very isolated, very quiet."

"We bought a gas refrigerator and the thing gurgled. I sent it back and they sent me a new one. It gurgled. I sent it back, and the next one gurgled, and the next. Finally I threw up my hands and submitted."

However unpleasant, some victims feel noise is inevitable in today's society and, like John Tyler and his refrigerator, submit.

"They had already reached the point where they figured there was nothing to be done about the noise. That's a sad situation."

Indeed, to you in your struggle, John Tyler, let it be shouted from the housetops, above the din, loud and clear: Good luck.

Austria Cites Few Jobless

VIENNA (AP) — The annual unemployment rate in Austria in 1976 never exceeded two percent, according to the Austrian Press and Information Service.

The service quoted International Monetary Fund figures in a report that also said the country's inflation rate was 7.3 percent, down from 9.5 percent in 1974.

Heights, an unincorporated area west of Chicago. According to Diana, "What we get out of it is the satisfaction of helping other people." (AP Laserphoto)

How Tar Heel Representatives, Senators Voted

By ROLL CALL REPORT
WASHINGTON — Here's how area Members of Congress were recorded on major roll call votes November 3-8.

HOUSE
OPIC — Adopted, 285 for and 111 against, an amendment requiring that at least 50 per cent of financial backing provided by the Overseas Private Investment Corp. (OPIC) go to what the Small Business Administration defines as "small businesses." OPIC is a government corporation whose mission, in part, is to insure investments made overseas by U.S. companies. This amendment was attached to a bill (HR 9179) that already had recommended but not required strong backing of small businesses. The bill, later passed and sent to conference with the Senate, extends the life of OPIC until Sept. 30, 1981.

Rep. Clarence Long (D-Md.), sponsor of the amendment, said that historically OPIC has "provided the overwhelming proportion of its insurance to large multinational corporations, not to U.S. small businessmen."

Rep. Johnathan Bingham (D-N.Y.), an opponent, asked: "How in the world is a company of (less than $10 million in assets) going to engage in putting up a factory in some overseas country, with all of the risks, expenses, the lawyers, and the travel involved? Would anyone advise a small business to go into that kind of operation?"

Members voting "yea" favored the requirement that 50 per cent of OPIC financial backing be earmarked to small businesses.

Reps. Walter Jones (D-1), L.H. Fountain (D-2), Charles Whitley (D-3), Ike Andrews (D-4), Stephen Neal (D-5), W.G. Hefner (D-8), James Martin (R-9), James Broyhill (R-10) and Lamar Gudger (D-11) voted "yea."

Rep. Richardson Preyer (D-6) voted "nay."

Rep. Charles Rose (D-7) did not vote.

ABORTION — Refused, 172 for and 193 against, to agree to Senate language allowing federal funding of abortions (primarily through Medicaid) when at least one of the following conditions is present: 1) The mother's life is endangered. 2) The mother would suffer longterm and severe physical damage. 3) The pregnancy resulted from rape or incest. With this vote the House refused to budget from its more restrictive abortion language, which allows federal funding only when the mother's life is endangered. The vote came during consideration of the conference report on the fiscal 1978 funding bill for the departments of Labor and Health, Education and Welfare. The House's refusal to go along with the Senate perpetuated the four-months-old dispute between the chambers on abortion.

Rep. George Mahon (D-Tex.), an advocate of agreeing with the Senate, said: "If we are intelligent enough to be spokesmen for the people of the U.S., we have got to deal in some degree of compromise in order to make our American system work."

Rep. Henry Hyde (R-Ill.), an opponent of the compromise, said: "I will not sell out, for my own convenience or my political advantage or to be comfortable or to avoid being vilified further simply because the Senate will not move."

Members voting "yea" favored accepting the less-restrictive Senate language on abortions.

Jones, Fountain, Whitley, Andrews, Preyer, Rose, Hefner, Martin, Broyhill and Gudger voted "yea."

SENATE
SOCIAL SECURITY — Passed, 42 for and 25 against, a bill (HR 9346) to financially strengthen Social Security, primarily by means of large increases over the next several years in employer and employee taxation rates and in the wage base upon which Social Security taxes are levied. It was sent to conference with the House. A worker earning $10,000 annually would see his Social Security tax increased from its present $585 to $710 by 1986, while workers in higher wage brackets and employers would have their Social Security taxes increased at a greater rate.

Sen. Gaylord Nelson (D-Wisc.), a supporter, said the bill would restore confidence on the part of Social Security's 33 million beneficiaries and the 104 million persons who pay into it.

Sen. Pete Domenici (R-N.M.), an opponent, called the bill "probably the biggest tax increase to come before the Senate in the five years I have served here," and added that he will vote not against Social Security but "against a bad bill, the enactment of which we may all come to regret."

Senators voting "yea" favored passage of the Social Security bill.

Sens. Robert Morgan (D) and Jesse Helms (R) did not vote.

SOCIAL SECURITY —

Adopted, 59 for and 28 against, an amendment setting 70 years as the age at which a Social Security pensioner could be freed of an "earnings limitation" on outside income he or she takes in to bolster the Social Security check. Currently there is a $3,000 earnings limitation no matter the pensioner's age. This language was adopted in place of a more liberal proposal that the earnings limitation be lifted at 65 years. It was attached to HR 9346, the Social Security reform bill (see above vote). The bill was sent to conference with the House where final versions of the earnings-limitation language and other provisions will be worked out.

Sen. Frank Church (D-Idaho), the sponsor, said the earnings limitation should be kept in force as long as is reasonably possible. To drop it at 65 years, he said, would mostly benefit high-income people such as doctors and lawyers and "transform, in a single stroke, a retirement program into an annuity."

Sen. Robert Dole (R-Kans.), an opponent, said the 65-year threshold would benefit "the teachers, the barbers, the small farmers" as well as upper income individuals. He said that to vote for Church's amendment would be to penalize "eight million senior citizens who have no right to work anymore."

Senators voting "nay" generally favored lifting the limitation on outside income once a person turns 65 years old.

Morgan and Helms voted "nay."

SOCIAL SECURITY — Favored, 42 for and 41 against, a proposal that, for the first time, would require employers to pay a greater share of the Social Security payroll tax than certain of their employees pay. That would be achieved by taxing employers on a larger wage base than employees are taxed on.

This vote tabled an amendment to maintain the 50-50 split that has prevailed throughout the history of Social Security. It came during debate on HR 9346, the Social Security reform bill, later passed and sent to conference with the House. The House favors keeping the 50-50 arrangement.

Sen. Gaylord Nelson (D-Wisc.), a supporter, said that the taxation formula endorsed by this vote would "take care of (Social Security's) short-term financing problem without placing too heavy a burden on the contributing employees."

Sen. John Stennis (D-Miss.), an opponent, said "it would be a serious mistake for the Congress to depart from the historic concept that the burden of financing Social Security benefits should be shared equally by the employer and the employee."

Senators voting "yea" endorsed the concept of shifting a majority of the taxation burden to employers.

Center Obtains Ancient Chalice
MADISON, Wis. (AP) — The Elvehjem Art Center recently acquired a Greek red-figured kylix painted by the Penthesilea Painter about 455 B.C. The tondo design of the chalice is of Herakles and the Bull. A missing fragment from the tondo is in the Louvre. A similar kylix by the same painter, depicting Achilles slaying the Amazon Queen, Penthesilea, is in Munich. The chalice is a gift of the Stiemke Foundation in Milwaukee as a memorial to the late Walter H. Stiemke.

Poorly Informed On Nutrition
NUTLEY, N.J. (AP) — Two recent national surveys — one by a government agency, and another by a drug manufacturer — show that Americans are ill-informed about food and nutrition, including vitamins.

The FDA Consumer Nutrition Survey (of 1975) shows that 51 percent of Americans are "not well-informed" about food and nutrition.

A second survey, by Hoffman-La Roche Inc., taken in the latter part of 1976, shows that while people understand nutrition is important, they lack specific nutrition information about food and vitamins, necessary for selecting a balanced diet.

Rep. George Mahon (D-Tex.), an advocate of agreeing with the Senate, said: "If we are intelligent enough to be spokesmen for the people of the U.S., we have got to deal in some degree of compromise in order to make our American system work."

Rep. Henry Hyde (R-Ill.), an opponent of the compromise, said: "I will not sell out, for my own convenience or my political advantage or to be comfortable or to avoid being vilified further simply because the Senate will not move."

Members voting "yea" favored accepting the less-restrictive Senate language on abortions.

Invested $19,000 In His Own Book
ANACORTES, Wash. (AP) — How could 23 publishers turn down a do-it-yourself guide to totem pole carving, written by an Italian immigrant grocer?

Undaunted, the author, 79-year-old Paul Luvera, published his book himself.

He and his wife of 51 years, Mary, invested $19,000 to have 5,000 paperback copies printed. Mrs. Luvera, who paints totem poles, wrote a portion of the book.

"It's the one and only book in the United States and Canada on how to carve a totem pole," says Luvera. "It should be in great demand."

"We invested all the money we saved and we knew we could get stuck," said the former miner, grocer and state senator. "We knew we might have to eat a lot of spaghetti."

Rennie Davis: Same Message But A New Medium

By DEBORAH FRAZIER
DENVER (UPI) — Photographs of the 1960s show activist Rennie Davis at the founding of Students of a Democratic Society and during the Chicago Seven trial glaring angrily from behind rimless glasses.

Davis wanted to change the world.

Contact lenses have replaced the spectacles. Davis, now an insurance broker and still a member of Guru Maharaj Ji's Divine Light Mission, holds the world in a different focus, but still works for change.

"Peace for me now is a way of life, not a far-off goal. The 60's were a painful, beautiful and necessary journey for me to reach this place," said Davis, 37. "I believe we have the tools to end all wars and bring peace."

"The strand that has run through my life is why people are suffering. There was a time when everything I saw could be explained through politics. But I didn't really have any idea what caused anything. I was just as ignorant as Richard Nixon in that sense."

Davis' existence in 1977 is far from his 1960s dreams and the farm in Virginia's Blue Ridge Mountains where he grew up.

A patch of grey hair corners his face. His office is located a few blocks from his single-story brick home. He often walks home at mid-afternoon to babysit his 18-month-old daughter while his wife, Luanne, works at her part-time job.

Insurance, viewed as the ultimate sell-out by activists of Davis' vintage, is his livelihood. An 18-year-old Indian guru, scoffed at a decade ago, is Davis' spiritual mentor.

"I still care about suffering. And part of me wants to pour cold water over my head at the idea I am selling insurance. But my message is the same, my medium has changed."

Later, he said, "When I see pain it still wells up tears for me. But I see the process of cleaning up the world as the process of cleaning up your own act first."

The solution Davis now espouses is not so much the teachings of Maharaj as an understanding of life a person obtains from receiving "knowledge."

"And the truly wonderful thing about this experience is it can be taken off the mystical level and understood by factory workers, waitresses, anyone. And it can be verified by human senses."

The child of a comfortable, middle class America, Davis said the most radical thing he did in high school was join the 4-H and judge a poultry contest.

In college, he began "getting angry at a lot of things I saw." A picture of Davis, arm raised in defiance, exhorting his fellow students to change the world, is an emblem of the era.

A co-founder of SDS in 1962, Davis and six other activists were tried in Chicago seven years later for conspiring to disrupt the 1968 Democratic National Convention.

The court conviction, following renowned courtroom antics, was overturned on appeal. But his conviction the war must be ended was renewed.

In Paris to meet with the North Vietnamese in 1973, Davis had a chance encounter with Maharaj Ji. A year later, activists moaned in unison as Davis kissed the young guru's ring at a worldwide gathering.

"The radical decade ended for me then. I lost every friend I had. But I find I am talking to some of those people again and I find a vague understanding of what happened to me and an acceptance."

Davis moved into a Divine Light Mission ashram in Denver and lived a monastic life. He traded his rimless glasses for contact lenses, exchanged his political rhetoric for proselytizing.

He served as a teacher of new converts and head of the Mission's World Welfare Association.

After three years of working for the mission full time, Davis moved out and married Luanne, who he met in the ashram. He had $3 in his pocket, a new bride, and had not held a "straight" job in 16 years.

"It wasn't a matter of working up a resume. I had to get a job that paid that day," he said. He took the first job he found in the want ads — selling firewood. Unfortunately, it was July. He made $11.43 in two weeks.

A political science major in college, Davis founded a company with several other guru devotees and began marketing wood cut, from diseased pine trees.

The company folded after what Davis calls a crash course in American business. Another firm, Birth of a New Nation, was formed to market many products, including Maharaj Ji's philosophy.

"We want to create a business where people can be happy every day. We want to communicate that we have a better way of life and we have struck out with the form of expression called business."

But to prevent the capitalistic system from taking a toll on this venture, Davis enrolled in a John Hancock training seminar and works full time counseling clients on long term investments.

"For a while people didn't realize who I was. It was nice while it lasted, but it's okay. They don't get impressed, really."

"When you are helping a guy manage his money, all he wants to know is if you know your stuff," said Davis.

CB Theft Wave Seeing Decline

WASHINGTON (AP) — Thieves appear to be caught in the middle of declining CB prices and rising public awareness of the theft potential of their rigs. The result: fewer stolen radios.

For the second time this year, the FBI has reported the over-all theft rate has declined, this time by 9 per cent during the first half of the year compared with the same period of 1976.

The FBI reported a 5 per cent increase in theft last year and a spokesman said that, while FBI statistics did not specify types of theft, indications were that CBs stolen from vehicles made up a substantial portion of that category.

two-thirds. Some 23-channel sets that sold for $150 two years ago now can be bought for $50.

The Electronic Industries Association, a trade group representing CB manufacturers, agrees that the continuing theft decline is due in large part to the drop in CB prices, according to Mark V. Rosenker, public relations director for its communications division.

"There have been fewer CB thefts because the lower prices provide less incentive," Rosenker said in an interview.

But he also said that recent developments permitting disguised antennas and hidden radios often make thefts more difficult.

"We don't know which has contributed most to the drop in thefts, but we think it's because of the lower prices," he said.

Rosenker said the EIA also attributes the theft decline to the fact that CB owners have become more aware of CB thefts and are taking more precautions now.

His assessment was echoed by Sgt. Fred Cipriani of the Indianapolis Police Department's public information office.

Cipriani said his department, noting a 193 per cent increase in thefts in 1976 due in part to stolen CBs, instituted a program to make CB owners more aware that their rigs were targets for thieves.

It involved, he said in a telephone interview, television ads and police officers visiting shopping centers where they engraved identification numbers on radios and provided owners with antitheft tips and decals saying their radios had been registered with the police.

Since then, the FBI reported the theft rate down 11 per cent during the first three months of the year and some auto insurance representatives said then that they believed a decline in CB thefts had contributed to the drop.

During that period, CB radio prices declined by as much as Speaking of Your Health...

Lester L. Coleman, M.D.

Who Needs Flu Shots?

Soon the flu season will be upon us. The conflict and confusion of last year's attempt at mass inoculations have left many people in a state of bewilderment. Fortunately, the swine flu epidemic that had been anticipated never did occur. Yet the memory lingers on of the occasional serious consequences that were attributed, rightly or wrongly, to the swine flu inoculations.

The Advisory Panel on Influenza of the Health, Education and Welfare Department believes that there is only a remote possibility of a swine flu outbreak this winter. No recommendation is being made, therefore, to inaugurate any extensive program of inoculation of the swine flu.

The chances of an outbreak of Hong Kong flu and A-Victoria flu are considered to be only "low to moderate."

Nevertheless, the recommendation of the HEW is that all persons over 65 and all those with chronic conditions should be inoculated with the Hong Kong and A-Victoria strains of influenza.

Patients with chronic bronchitis, emphysema, heart conditions and those who are feeble and undernourished cannot withstand the strain of influenza. Certainly, all of these people should be protected. The decision about young children and young adults should depend on the individual judgment of the doctor.

For many years, these vaccines have been safe and of enormous value. I hope that last year's experience with the swine flu strain will not dissuade the public from taking advantage of inoculations with the Hong Kong and A-Victoria strains that have been recommended for this year.

A rather extensive study indicates that women who smoke tend to develop menopause symptoms at a younger age than do non-smokers. More than 3,500 middle-aged women in seven different countries were studied and evaluated in this scientific survey.

The striking relationship between smoking and the onset of menopause was discovered accidentally as part of the Boston Collaborative Drug Surveillance Program. The research workers who are studying these interesting statistics believe that "the effect of smoking on the onset of menopause might also account for the previously found relationship between menopause and heart disease."

Statistics such as these should leave an impression on middle-aged women who are still smoking, despite the well-established fact that tobacco is a threat to health and longevity.

SPEAKING OF YOUR HEALTH... Many patients fail to give a thorough and detailed history of their present or past illnesses to their dental surgeons. It's surprising how often the medical history of a patient is involved in the diagnosis and treatment of dental problems.

Births Data Sees Change

By ANN BLACKMAN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The birth rate in America increased during the first eight months of this year compared with the rate a year ago, but scientists say the change does not necessarily indicate a trend.

Robert Heuser of the National Center for Health Statistics said there was an average of 15.3 births per 1,000 population for the first eight months of 1977 compared with 14.5 per 1,000 for the same time period in 1976.

But Heuser said the reason for the change is unknown. And, other statisticians cautioned against drawing sweeping conclusions.

Meanwhile, the latest Vital Statistics Report published by the center showed there were 3 percent more marriages during the first seven months of the year than during the same period a year ago, while divorces increased only 1 percent.

The report said there were 1.23 million marriages in the United States from January through July 1977. At the same time, the report shows there were 633,000 divorces granted through July, only 2,000 more than there were for the same time period in 1976.

On the baby scene, the report showed there were 1.9 million live babies born between January and July of this year. Heuser, chief of the center's natality branch, said the unpublished figures for August are similar.

"During each of the first eight months of 1977, both the number of births and the birth rate were higher than in the corresponding months in 1976," he said. "It's hard to know what's causing it."

"There's a big difference between statistically significant and socially significant," added Dr. Paul C. Glick, who heads the Census Bureau's population division. "It's possible that it may be the forerunner of a trend, but I suspect it's last year's conceptions being made up."

Glick was referring to the fact that many women born during the post-World War II baby boom have postponed marriage and childbirth. Those women, who are now hitting their late 20s and early 30s, may be deciding that it's time to settle down and have kids.

If each of the nearly 50 million women now in the child-bearing years of 15 to 44 has the two children today's average woman says she wants, the result could be a baby boom as big as the one that peaked in the late 1950s, when there were 4.3 million births per year.

But social values have changed. Improved birth control methods allow a woman to decide how many children she wants. The high cost of living has made it necessary for more married women to work. And the woman's movement has made it more acceptable.

While some of the country's demographers are predicting another baby boom, most say it is highly unlikely.

"One thing that mitigates against another baby boom is the increasing use of sterilization for those who have as many children as they want," Glick said. "You can't reverse this. You used to be able to change your mind."

Furnace Check Is Money-Saver

YORK, Pa. (UPI) — A heating and air-conditioning expert here says as many as one out of every four American homeowners paid higher heating bills than necessary last winter.

George Buchanan based his comment on furnace efficiency inspections service contractors. He said some found 25 percent of residential furnaces studied operated inefficiently. Buchanan is general service manager for York Heating and Air Conditioning.

To cut heating bills, Buchanan suggested: Checking furnace air filters at the start of the season and monthly thereafter, and replacing dirty ones.

Oiling fan motors in forced air, oil-fired and electric furnaces at the start of the season. But don't overdo it. Too much lubrication can damage the motor.

Motor belts also need regular inspection and replacement if they show signs of wear or cracking.

Buchanan said a gas-fired furnace should be inspected every two or three years by a qualified service technician.

Women's Boot Production Up

NEW YORK (UPI) — Boot-makers apparently expect a long, cold winter.

The Sole Leather Council says women's boot production for the first seven months this year is up 63 percent over the same period last year. The council also said boots now represent six per cent of the total shoe production in the United States.

The trade organization, which represents leather sole manufacturers in the U.S., has these tips for consumers:

Shop at the end of the day when legs and feet are a little bigger. Avoid boots with tops that fit so snugly they cut off circulation.

Be sure boots allow toe room. The foot is pushed forward with greater force when walking in boots than in shoes.

The council also said leather boots can be waterproofed with several applications of saddle soap.

French Sudan became the Republic of Mali in 1960.

QUICK WITH HIS BEAK — With California still suffering from a shortage of water due to the prolonged drought, this quick thinking pigeon managed to slip his beak into a vacant faucet in Los Angeles' Echo Park. Draft Dodger's Look At Life

By JILL LAWRENCE
 CHARLESTON, W. Va. (UPI)

— As an entertainer barred from contact with a huge potential audience, singer-songwriter Jesse Winchester used to be, in some sense, a casualty of the Vietnam war.

The pale, bony Tennessean moved to Canada 10 years ago rather than report to his draft board. He became a Canadian citizen and now lives in Montreal with his wife and two children.

Earlier this month in Charleston, Winchester completed his first American concert tour since President Carter's amnesty plan enabled him to visit the land of his birth.

"I haven't had any negative political reactions — at least not overt, not to me," he said of the six-month tour.

"The people who've heard of me and know the story of that part of my life are generally favorably inclined, and others don't know who I am and couldn't care less."

The 33-year-old pianist-guitarist, who is directly descended from one of the founders of Memphis, Tenn., is frank about his reasons for leaving the United States.

"My own life and limb were involved," he said. "It's easy to get worked up on that subject."

If he had stayed home in Memphis, Winchester said, he might not have chosen to evade the draft, but moving north to attend Williams College changed his perspective.

"I never intended to come back," he said, adding two years of study in Germany convinced him he would have no trouble fitting into a different culture.

The title song of Winchester's current album, "Nothing But a Breeze," affords some insight into the changes wrought by the passing of 10 years.

Asked to interpret the line, "I'm the type of guy who likes to ride in the middle," Winchester replied, "I suppose with age, the pendulum stops swinging with such broad strokes."

Referring to "riding in the middle," he said, "I would like to be the type of person who comes up with proper responses to the situation. Some allow for compromise and others don't."

"The bible says 'Woe to you who are neither hot nor cold but lukewarm; I'll spew thee from my mouth,' so apparently there are some pitfalls involved in riding the middle," he added wryly.

Winchester, who recorded his first album ("Yankee Lady") three years after he moved to Canada, is uncertain whether his musical career would have progressed more quickly had he stayed in the United States, or whether he would have gone into music at all.

"The Canadian music business isn't blessed, or cursed, depending on your point of view, with nearly as much money as the American music business. But there is pretty much the same proportion of talented and untalented people and the same spectrum of motives driving them," he said.

The roots of Canadian music are more directly European, he said, deriving from the reels and jigs of Scotland and England, while the French music scene in Quebec Province is entirely different, "a self-contained world."

Population Control Still Reds' Goal

EDITOR'S NOTE — Hanoi's goal of total population control has yet to be met, but the people are restricted nonetheless. What follows is a first-hand account of how 50 million Vietnamese are ruled and controlled by the Communist government.

By HORST FAAS
Associated Press Writer
HUE, Vietnam (AP) — At a street corner in Hanoi a man with a red armband held his hand in front of my camera. I was photographing an old woman lighting incense before a small home altar in memory of dead relatives. Religion is not encouraged in Vietnam.

A bicyclist with a red armband followed me around the walls of Hue's old Imperial City, occasionally calling in Vietnamese to people who smiled for my cameras. They quickly turned away.

In former Saigon a man in rubber sandals and a dirty shirt sat alone at a table in a cafe while I had a beer and made visual contact with an old acquaintance. We dared not talk. The man in the dirty shirt also had a red armband.

Thousands of Communist cadres, identified by red armbands and trained or born in the north, have become the eyes and ears of the Communist state in the south.

In the north, the system of Communist wardens on every block, shop, office and factory long has proved an effective method to control the movements and contacts of each citizen.

The smallest administrative unit in Vietnam is a phuong, which is made up of 10 families. Sources say the Hanoi government plans to have at least one northern trained, reliable warden for each phuong. But they add that Hanoi's goal of total people control is falling short because there aren't enough trusted political cadres.

The wardens almost all look alike: middle-aged men in rubber sandals, loose pants, shirts hanging over the belt. The shirt may hide a weapon, sometimes only a truncheon or a knife. Most have whistles, some carry loud hollers. All have bicycles to pursue suspects. All wear a slightly arrogant, bored expression.

Most have ruddy complexions from standing too long in the sun, and their communication with each other is only a nod or small gesture.

The average citizen of Vietnam has no freedom of movement. Inhabitants of former Saigon or Hanoi have to report to authorities if they leave their townships overnight.

Bicycles have license plates, not so much to trace theft as to identify the rider.

Vacation trips are organized by Communist party organizations, the unions, the chairmen of cooperatives of state enterprises.

At the Hanoi railway station, daily trips to Ho Chi Minh City — formerly Saigon — and almost all towns in the north are posted — but permits are needed to go. For an excursion to the south across the invisible border north of Danang a currency exchange permit also is required.

There are no night curfews but city streets are deserted well before midnight.

"Cooperation" and "The Right Marxist-Leninist Revolutionary Attitude" and "Love of Labor" are key propaganda phrases.

The Eyebrows Offer Insight

MADISON, N.J. (AP) — What's in a name? Or an eyebrow, for that matter? It's serious business for Drew University sociologist Sidney Greenblatt.

The 39-year-old professor spent the summer studying the effects of 2,000 years of Chinese lore on such activities as palmistry and face-reading. "I want to discover how stereotypes of Communist political ideology leave their mark on every life," Greenblatt explained.

He visited Hong Kong fortune tellers, who, among other techniques, place a lot of stock in the position of a person's eyebrows. Each of 42 eyebrow positions are said to give a fortune teller insight into his subject.

"The first position looks like the Chinese character for the numeral one," Greenblatt said Monday in an interview. "It indicates the subject should be a statesman. It's also the shape of eyebrow Chou En-lai had."

Interest In AM Stereo Runs High

By MICHAEL J. CONLON WASHINGTON (UPI) — AM stereo is coming.

But you may have to wait a year or two before it comes to market.

The Federal Communications Commission took the first step this past summer toward clearing the way when it published a notice seeking information about the topic.

If approved by the FCC, AM stereo channels would broadcast popular FM stereo programs.

Behind the move is pressure from AM broadcasters who want to compete with successful FM stations.

An FCC official said the broadcast industry is showing a lot of interest.

The official also said manufacturers of car radios are interested. They think AM stereo will be less susceptible than FM to fading out.

Another factor: some communities that have AM broadcast outlets don't have FM stations because there aren't enough channels to go around.

One expert at the Electronic Industries Association said the technology has always been available, or at least within reach, but little demand has existed.

"The time has come," he said. "Somebody is interested in it. You have integrated circuits now which allow you to do things without adding cost. And AM stereo also offers an opportunity for 'upgrading' of both AM broadcasting and receiving.

"There's really no good merchandise available for the public right now as far as AM goes. Stereo will be an incentive for manufacturers to offer equipment that's comparable in quality to FM."

"The quality (of reception) could approach that of FM."

He also said he doubts it will be practical to retrofit existing AM sets to pick up stereo broadcasts, although one of several competing systems vying for the FCC's attention claims that may be possible.

Once the FCC collects the information it needs late this year, it would begin a rule-making process that could take several months. AM stereo might not be a reality until late 1978.

Will AM stereo be able to offer anything that FM stereo can't?

The ideal would be what broadcasters call "full compatibility," the ability to send signals as far as regular AM signals now go, with no distortion to listeners to regular monaural AM radios. Whether that can be accomplished is yet to be determined.

If it can be, AM could have an edge over FM because of the longer distances.

An FCC official said he knows of about five different systems being tested for both transmission and reception of AM stereo.

On the FM front, the FCC has asked for information on quadraphonics, or four channels of sound to accommodate music now being recorded that way.

One possibility would be a system that can transmit four distinct channels. Another would involve two channels that could be split into four, once the signal reaches the set.

His $70,000 In Paper Bag

SEATTLE (AP) — It's not every day someone walks in an auto showroom with $70,000 in a paper bag to buy a car.

But then it's not every day someone buys a custom-built Stutz Blackhawk VI.

Craig Cole, 29, a former newspaper carrier, explained that he carried the money in a bag because "I couldn't get it all in my pockets."

Aside from his real estate investment business, Cole now owns five exotic and modern dance studios.

"It's almost impossible to tell how it feels to drive a car like that," Cole said of the Stutz, which has interior trim finished in 24-karat gold.

It also has 18 coats of paint, brass bumpers overlaid with chrome, lamb's wool carpeting and seats upholstered in bark-tanned English leather.

The body steel is 2½ times thicker than ordinary body steel and the hood is so heavy it's best to have two persons around to lift it when you want to check the oil — with the 24-karat gold-plated dipstick.
