Cairo Responding To Sadat Trip Critics

By SAMI RIZKALLAH
Associated Press Writer

CAIRO (AP) — The Egyptian government is mounting a propaganda campaign in support of President Anwar Sadat's visit to Israel as his Arab foes step up their attacks on him.

The charges of treason to the Arab cause from Syria, Iraq, Libya and the Palestinians prompted Sudanese President Jaafar Numairi, bound to Egypt by a defense treaty, to announce he was coming to Cairo today to "congratulate" the Egyptian leader.

An Egyptian government spokesman said Sadat's visit to Jerusalem was the most successful trip he had ever taken because "hostilities of the past 30 years have been ended in 30 hours."

He told the official Middle East News Agency the first public visit by an Arab leader to the Jewish nation succeeded "100 percent" in laying the groundwork for a new Arab-Israeli peace conference in Geneva.

In an apparent attempt to counter the charges that Sadat betrayed the other Arab nations, the spokesman said the president rejected attempts by Israeli leaders to convince him he should sign a separate peace treaty. Sadat told them the only purpose of his visit was to prepare carefully for another Geneva conference, the spokesman said.

"Israeli leaders showed understanding and genuine interest in peace," the spokesman added.

Western observers said the spokesman also was trying to boost the morale of the Egyptian public, which expected Sadat's visit to result in immediate Israeli concessions.

Egypt's three leading newspapers defended the president against his foreign Arab foes.

They emphasized his insistence on full Israeli withdrawal from all lands occupied in the 1967 war, including East Jerusalem.

An estimated 300,000 Egyptians cheered their president at the airport and along the route into Cairo as he returned Monday. But officials had predicted 3 million would turn out.

The Palestinian guerrilla movements and radical Arab governments called Sadat as great an enemy as Israel and continued to urge his overthrow or assassination.

They objected particularly to his declaration in Jerusalem that the 1973 war was Egypt's last with Israel.

Dr. George Habash's Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine vowed to sabotage Sadat's no-war agreement with Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin.

"We shall escalate our operations to prove to the world that no peace can be worked out in the Middle East as long as the Palestinian nation remains oppressed," a spokesman said.

In Washington, about 350 young anti-Sadat Arabs clashed briefly with police on a march to the White House from the Embassy Row section. No injuries were reported.

Concordes Begin Flights Between U.S. And Europe

NEW YORK (AP) — Twin drop-nosed Concorde SST's swoop into John F. Kennedy International Airport within minutes of each other today, beginning regular service on the Europe-New York air corridor.

The 3½-hour flights at a speed of 1,200 mph from London and Paris will mark the effective end of a 20-month court battle to keep the Concorde from using Kennedy, whose neighbors claim noise from the supersonic jet is louder than that from regular jets.

Although demonstrators clogged the airport several times during the ban by snarling traffic with slow-moving cars, today's scheduled protest was to be only several dozen pickets stationed near the airport entrance.

In a finely timed operation worked out for the 3,500-mile route over the Atlantic, the British Concorde will land about 90 seconds after the French aircraft touches down.

Air France and British Airways are exuberant about the inaugural flights. "Morning, New York!" reads a breezy greeting from British Airways in full-page newspaper advertisements today in London.

Air France ads in the British press announce "Concorde aujourd'hui" — Concorde today — and show the SST flying over the New York skyline and the Statue of Liberty.

Both airlines ran full-page ads in today's New York Times.

Both the French and British flagships carried a mixture of paying passengers and guests, people who wanted to be on the first faster-than-sound passenger run into Kennedy.

The inaugural French Concorde flight took off from Charles de Gaulle Airport near Paris 13 minutes late today with a full load of 100 passengers.

Sixteen minutes later, British Airways sent one of its supersonic jetliners up — also with 100 passengers — from London's Heathrow Airport to launch its share of the long-deferred commercial service between New York and the British capital.

The French Concorde took off at 5:13 a.m. EST, the British at 5:29 a.m. Their pilots were to adjust their speeds over the Atlantic so that the French plane would land at Kennedy International Airport at 8:30 a.m. EST and the British plane would touch down almost immediately afterward.

Among the paying customers on the French plane was fashion designer Pierre Cardin, who said it was his third Concorde flight.

"To me, Concorde represents tomorrow's travel today," said Cardin. "It's fast, it's quiet and it's comfortable."

The fare to fly aboard Concorde is $793 one way. To cross the Atlantic via conventional 650 mph jets costs $656 first class, $313 tourist and $146 on no-frills standby.

Air France will fly into Kennedy every day. British Airways initially will land twice a week, gradually increasing the schedule to daily flights in January.

The issue of Concorde landings has been both a financial factor for the two airlines, which repeatedly said the plane needed access to New York to turn a profit, and an incalculable prestige factor for the governments of France and Britain.

The ban against Concorde landings almost turned into a foreign political problem for President Carter when French officials grumbled that continued prohibition of the plane could put a damper on relations with the United States.

Today's landing was cleared by the courts after the Port Authority of New York and New Jersey — operators of Kennedy — repeatedly failed to issue new noise standards for the airport. The authority could not find a level that would bar Concorde but not the jets that already use the runways.

Last week, the authority said it will adopt noise standards, effective in 1985, which basically will parallel the federal regulations designed to reduce airport noise by the mid-1980s.

McGrath Named To New Board

Mildred T. McGrath, a member of the City Council here, has been appointed by Gov. Jim Hunt to serve on the statewide Interagency Council on Community Schools.

Mrs. McGrath, who will represent municipal governments throughout the state on the board, was sworn in Monday by Mayor Percy Cox.

The 20-member council will be evaluating proposals that are sent in by various school boards to receive funding under the Community School Act passed by the last General Assembly.

Some $2.6 million was allocated, according to Mrs. McGrath, with the program aimed at encouraging greater community and parent involvement with the public schools and to extend the use of school facilities throughout the communities.

The program concept, it was explained, means that the schools would become activity centers for the community rather than just meeting the normal school day requirements.

Mrs. McGrath said that the new board is hoping that parents will consider the school buildings as part of their community assets and will become involved in the utilization of the facilities.

According to Mrs. McGrath, the Pitt Board of Education has submitted a proposal to assist in the development of a countywide recreational program.

Mental Health Sums Received

Additional State funds in the amount of $1,800 have been received by the Eastern Area Residential Treatment Home (EARTH) and it has been recommended that these funds be used to increase the respite program at EARTH from every other to every weekend.

This report was given recently to the Pitt County Mental Health Area Board by Reginald Gray, Pitt County Manager and chairman of the finance and personnel committees.

Gray also reported that a research grant of $1,865, titled "The Derivation of a Mental Health Clinic Evaluation Score Card," has been approved by the Division of Mental Health and Mental Retardation Service. Dr. Stephen Creech, Area Director of the Pitt County Mental Health Center, said that Dr. Clinton Prewett of East Carolina University submitted the research proposal on behalf of the center.

Gray reported, too, that the finance and personnel committees have approved a drug abuse project for $15,276, which requires matching local funds of $5,092. This local money has been located, he said.

Dr. Creech reported that the partial hospitalization program is working out fine at the Pitt County Memorial Hospital Rehabilitation Center. He said all parties seem pleased, including the two staffs which complement each other and share the space in the rehab center.

School Board Sets Name For New Middle School

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Editor

The new school under construction in Greenville now has an official name — Greenville Middle School. Action to name the school was taken at the monthly meeting of the Greenville City Schools Board of Education Monday night. It was specifically noted the name is without the prefix "the."

Board members turned aside suggestions the school be named for an outstanding person. The concept of not giving the names of persons to schools but instead to give schools a locality name or some other designation was adopted as policy in 1969. The last school named for a person was the Sadie Sauter Elementary School in 1967 — the first school to be given a general name was Eastern Elementary in 1969.

Reporting on the status of progress at Greenville Middle School, architect George Shoe told board members "the contractors have all responded in a very positive manner and in a spirit of real cooperation to catch up on the schedule. They have had men working nine and ten hours a day, on Saturdays, and even some work on Sunday.

"With continued extra work by the contractors, it now appears that the work will be completed on schedule."

At last month's meeting, board members had directed Shoe to urge contractors to close the gap in a 30 day delay in the construction schedule that existed at that time.

Completion of construction stipulated in the general contract is December 19. If construction is completed by that date, the school staff will be in a position to make the physical move into the school and be in readiness for students to report there following the Christmas holiday.

In an executive session, action was taken to place the school owned property at Lynndale up for auction again. The auction is set for January 6, with a minimum bid of $86,400 for the approximately 12 acres of land.

Two budget amendments to the Current Expense Budget and one amendment to the Capital Outlay Budget were approved. An amendment to the Food Service Budget was not acted on pending additional information.

The first of two amendments to the Current Expense Budget adds $39,989 to the budget. This represents an increase in anticipated revenue for the vocational education section of the budget. The second Current Expense Budget amendment adds $60,278 to the budget, with the extra funds coming from an increase in CETA Primary Reading Program funds; from ECU for salary supplements; and an increase in professional teachers expenses.

Together, the amendments up the total appropriation in Current Expense Budget money to $2,287,272.26.

The amendment for Capital Outlay funds was for a $9,000 decrease in the Occupational Equipment category, and reflects transfer from Capital Outlay to Current Expense due to the new statewide reporting format. This amendment will have to have the further approval of county commissioners as it is a transfer of funds between the two major categories of funds.

The School Food Service amendment not acted on is one of a reduction amounting to $22,198.16, which changes the total budget from $683,470 to $661,271.84.

Within the reduced figure are estimated losses of $14,538.57 from the regular USDA grant; a decrease of $22,852.37 from paid lunch sales; and a decrease of $1,803 in adult lunches. At the same time, the amendment reflects a called-for increase of $31,987.91 in salaries of food service employees; and an increase of $20,734.98 in salaries of cashiers.

Board members asked that another look be taken at the figures to determine more detailed information on the differences in originally projected figures and those shown in the amendment.

Field trips by Rose High students to Spain and to England in the spring of 1978 were approved.

The Spanish trip will cover the period March 17 to March 26, at a total cost of about $800 for each student. The English trip is scheduled for March 24 to April 1 and will also cost in the vicinity of $800 for each individual concerned.

Annual Thanksgiving Feast To Host About 2,500 Needy People

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — It's Thanksgiving dinner for the poor, the elderly and the lonely. But there's no mistaking this for a typical charity affair, what with turkeys basted in burgundy and candles glowing on linen tablecloths.

The eighth annual Thanksgiving Day Community Feast, organized by Refer Switchboard, a telephone hot-line service, is being held in the First Presbyterian Church hall here on Thursday.

The guest list, expected to number about 2,500, includes just about anyone who wants to come, the needy and the not-so-needy.

"Everything we do is done the long way, the way your grandmother would have done it. We baste the turkeys with butter, honey and burgundy wine. We start with fresh cran-

A proposed policy on the selection of substitute teachers was presented and discussed. Under standard procedures, the policy proposal will be studied by board members with action due at the next regular meeting. Also being considered as a policy matter is the possible use of student teachers from East Carolina University as substitute teachers in the city schools.

Bids for carpet and for casework at Greenville Middle School were approved. The low base bid of $44,989 submitted by Eatman's, Inc.

of Raleigh was the winning carpet bid.

The casework bid entailed bids in two categories. That of metalwork went to Flythe School Equipment Company at $32,120.90; and for dining room chairs to seat 240, the firm of Institutional Interiors, Inc. was successful bidder at $7,785.

For the casework, there was only one bid in each category. Since this was a re-bid situation, the board could legally accept the single bids on these two items.

Superintendent Glenn Cox reported that staff members at Rose High were being assigned on a rotating basis to escort the city police person on duty there during the lunch hour.

This assignment, Cox noted, has been requested by Police Chief Glenn Cannon as a prerequisite for continuing to provide police service at the school.

Following expressions of dissatisfaction by several board members of the use of personnel assigned to the maintenance division as bus drivers for school activities, a motion was approved to hold a workshop meeting at an early date to look into the composition of maintenance assignments and budget requests for maintenance.

Radio Career For John Dean

LOS ANGELES (AP) — John Dean, the onetime counsel to former President Richard Nixon whose revelations of the Watergate coverup led to Nixon's resignation, says he's starting a new career as a reporter on a syndicated radio program.

"I really look upon this as not dissimilar to the public responsibility that I once had in government," said the 39-year-old Dean.

"I think it's something I can do well. I'm sure I'll always wear the Scarlet Letter of Watergate, but how visible that will be in people's minds over time, I don't know."

"The last time out I blew it," said Dean. "I don't want to do it this time."

Dean was among those serving a prison term for his role in the Watergate coverup that led to Nixon's ouster.

His new radio series, "Right to Know," will consist of five three-minute programs a week in which Dean will cover topics such as women in the military, the future of the Republican Party, Washington social life, lobbyists, God in government, public opinion polls, the politician's wife and air safety.

Bella's Proposal Loses In Women's Conference

By PEGGY SIMPSON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Delegates to the National Women's Conference said "yes" to 25 sometimes controversial recommendations on how to achieve equality of the sexes but "no" to a 26th proposal that could have helped implement them — a Cabinet-level women's department.

Instead of a Cabinet-level department to argue for their rights, the delegates called for a follow-up conference and asked President Carter to name a national commission to carry out the meeting's recommendations.

Once those recommendations are forwarded to the president, he will have 120 days to report on them to Congress.

The proposed Cabinet-level department was defeated partly due to fears by some delegates that it would do women more harm than good.

The proposed department had not been considered by the 140,000 delegates who attended the 56 state and territorial meetings. It was added by the National Commission on the Observance of International Women's Year, headed by former Rep. Bella Abzug, who chaired the three-day meeting.

For some delegates, the very fact that Ms. Abzug had made the department her special priority prompted their suspicions that she wanted to head it.

She became the principal target of conservatives at the session, with leader Phyllis Schlafly repeatedly referring to the conference delegates as "Bella's bunch."

The 2,000 delegates ranged in age from 16 to 85. Sponsors said it was the most diverse delegation of American women ever assembled, with minorities, poor women and the young and the old represented in large numbers. The conference, the first government-sponsored women's meeting, was financed through a $5 million grant.

The only proposal debated heatedly and at length was a plank advocating equality for lesbians.

Other recommendations back the proposed Equal Rights Amendment, enforcement of anti-bias laws, new shelters for battered wives, centers for displaced homemakers and more aid to help minorities and the handicapped fight discrimination.

About four-fifths of the delegates backed the ERA, lesbian rights and the right of poor women to federally financed abortions.

The other 20 per cent aligned themselves with a coalition of conservative, religious, anti-abortion and traditional women's groups that sponsored a counter-convention.

Several specific actions are expected to follow the conference:

—Dr. Ethel Allen, a surgeon and city councilwoman from Philadelphia, has set up a regional network of minority women to monitor the plank they worked on.

—Presidential assistant Midge Costanza said she will call together the more than 40 presidential appointees who attended the conference to discuss their impressions.

—Delegates are expected to organize around the Plan of Action in their own cities.

—Conservatives will mount their own lobbying campaigns against the movement, capitalizing on the contacts they made and the literature they picked up, especially on abortion and homosexual rights.

Series Of Accidents Investigated By Police

Over $3,600 in property damage resulted from a series of accidents investigated Monday by Greenville Police.

A three-car collision on Dickinson Avenue near the Hooker Road intersection resulted in the driver of one of the vehicles being charged with a safe movement violation.

Officers said that James Michael Branch of Rt. 1, Box 371, Winterville, was cited following the mishap involving his vehicle and cars driven by Thomas Bond Jr. of 104 Weldon Drive, and Raymond Joyner of 1616 S. Green Street.

No injuries were reported in the 6:15 p.m. wreck and damages were set at $2,000 to the Branch vehicle, and $200 to the Bond and Joyner vehicles.

Nancy Elaine Crosby of Lot 6, Lawson Trailer Park, was charged with a safe movement violation following investigation of a 6:05 p.m. wreck at the intersection of Greenville Boulevard and Evans Street.

Officers reported that the wreck involved cars driven by Crosby and Janice Roberson White of 1306 N. Overlook Drive. Damage was estimated at $400 to the Crosby car and $10 to the White vehicle. No injuries were reported.

Grey Heath Price of 1310 Evergreen Drive was cited for a safe movement violation following a wreck at 4:35 p.m. at the Greenville Boulevard-Memorial Drive intersection.

Officers, who identified the driver of the second vehicle as Melvin Hudson Boyd Jr. of 104 Nichols Drive, reported no injuries and estimated damage to the Boyd car at $300. No estimate was available for the Price vehicle.

A vehicle driven by William Earl Tyndall of P.O. Box 36, Maury received damages estimated at $200 when struck by another vehicle at the Dickinson Avenue-Memorial Drive intersection at 5:37 p.m.

Tyndall told officers he was stopped at a traffic light when another vehicle hit his car in the rear. The second car did not stop at the scene of the mishap, it was reported.

No charges were preferred and no injuries were reported following investigation of a 4:25 p.m. mishap on Evans Street near W. Sixth Street.

Officers reported the wreck involved vehicles driven by Betsy Barnes Wood of 722 E. Ninth Street, Washington, and Cecile Falkenstine McKnight of 107 Hillcrest Drive.

Damages were set at $150 to each car.

Burley Prices Are Up By $5

ASHEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — The Burley Tobacco Market opened in western North Carolina Monday with prices averaging $116 per hundredweight — up $5 from last year.

Supplies were good and market officials said late rains added considerable growth to crops which were stunted by drought earlier in the growing season. Some top grade leaf brought $130 per hundred pounds. Last season, the market averaged $111.16 per hundred.

Sales run four weeks.

Rabbitnapper Chickened Out

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — "You've got to give me $10," the husky voice on the phone said, "or you'll never see your bunny alive again."

That was last Thursday. The rabbit, whose name is Feather, is home safe and sound after the rabbitnapper apparently chickened out.

The Robert Owens family noticed that Feather was missing last Thursday from its pen. Shortly afterward, 8-year-old Dena Owens took the phone call from the abductor, who said he would call later with instructions for the ransom.

The Owens ignored the threats on Feather's life and called police, but nothing happened.

"We'd lost all hope when we didn't hear from the kidnapper again," said Mrs. Owens.

But on Sunday, while the family was in church, a boy brought the rabbit home, telling neighbors he had found it at a nearby swimming club.

Contest In Book Week

The continuing of the Bertha the Bookworm contest was the highlight of the National Children's Book Week observance at South Greenville School.

The contest started Oct. 24 and will end Nov. 23, with more than 100 students having read 25 or more books each. All the children in the school are involved. Those who read 25 or more books will be presented a book and a bookmark. Those reading 15 or more will receive a bookworm bookmark. The purpose of the contest is to motivate students to seek and read good books.

Each class made a book of creative writings during Book Week, also. These were presented to the library of the school for student use. Classroom doors were decorated with book characters and stories. Bert and Bertha Bookworm adorn the hall walls with their ever-growing length.

Joe Stines, Children's Librarian of Sheppard Public Library, presented Story Time to the second and third graders.

The estranged wife of Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau is cast in a lead role with Patrick McGoochan.

The $1.2 million film is about a group of terrorists who lay siege to a radio station and broadcast a mock trial to condemn the social system from which they sprang.

Tungsten miners at the Pine Creek Mine in the mountains overlooking Owens Valley, Calif., go up to work, not down.

Mrs. Trudeau Is Signed For Film

MONTREAL (AP) — Margaret Trudeau has "enormous dignity and poise and amazing potential as an actress," says a film producer who has signed her for a leading role in "Kings and Desperate Men."

Alexis Kanner of Kineversal Inc. said Monday he has been working closely with Mrs. Trudeau and is confident her debut as a screen actress will be successful.

"She shows great promise," said Kanner, who will produce and direct the feature-length film.

'Dr. Zhivago' Character Remembers

By DOUGLAS STANGLIN
MOSCOW (UPI) — Boris Pasternak's dark, piercing eyes stare down from a photograph in Olga Ivinskaya's cramped, two-room apartment.

It has been 17 years since the author-poet's death, but his presence is everywhere.

Snapshots and clippings are piled on her desk or stuck to the bookcase.

Now — as during their 14 turbulent years together — their lives remain entwined.

Olga Ivinskaya, 62, was Pasternak's companion and mistress — the woman after whom he patterned the memorable character Lara in his internationally acclaimed novel, "Dr. Zhivago."

"It's not only that I slept with Boris Leonidovich, I was his right hand," she said, in the first interview she has granted a Western correspondent since Pasternak's death. "I knew his thoughts, his deeds, his plans."

She also shared his agony in the international furor created by the publication abroad in 1958 of "Dr. Zhivago," which was denounced by the Soviet Union's official Union of Writers.

After he won the Nobel Prize for literature, Pasternak was forced to choose between accepting the award in Stockholm and never returning home or renouncing it. Under immense pressure, he chose the latter.

Olga said the venomous attacks on Pasternak scarred his memory and forced her to write her memoirs.

"I had no other way out. I did what I had to do."

She said she did not intend for her manuscript to be published abroad, but that, through friends who had read copies of the book, it turned up in the West. It will be published in February.

She said she did not want to stir up "noise" — she just wanted to tell the truth.

Asked if she fears repercussions, Olga said quietly, "Everything is possible."

Sipping Bulgarian wine, Olga swept the air with her hands as she talked, saying editors at the Soviet magazine Novy Mir held Pasternak's controversial Zhivago manuscript for seven months without acting on it.

"They were saying to me that they won't be able to publish all of it, but parts of it in segments," she said.

The Soviet Communist party Central Committee seemed to favor the book, she said, but the Union of Writers wanted to ban it.

Olga said there was a "struggle for priority" and that Zhivago came very close to being published.

"They even made arrangements for a contract to the State Publishing House, but then they demanded to delete something."

Olga said months passed and nothing happened. Then Pasternak took a gamble.

"I recall him meeting me at the railway station," said Olga, staring out her apartment window. "Very guiltily, he said he had given the novel to an Italian (publisher) and I knew already what it smelled of."

"I rushed to get it back, but I couldn't," she said.

Olga said the publisher told Pasternak he would "stay in the shadow" for a year and give Soviet authorities a chance to publish it.

But when it became known the novel was in the hands of a foreign publisher, the editors of Novy Mir hastily wrote a letter rejecting the manuscript, Olga said.

In that letter, written in 1958, the magazine editors attacked Pasternak for political comments expressed by several characters in the book. They referred to the central character — Yuri Zhivago — as having "egocentric views."

The letter criticized the novel at one point because "neither (the character) Alexandr Alex-androvich, nor Zhivago have the least trace of a sense of duty to the revolution or to the people."

Olga said the reaction "had nothing to do with the very gist of the novel."

She said the thoughts of secondary characters could have been held by anyone during the upheaval of the 1917 revolution "but all of them were ascribed to the author and they were saying this was his political credo."

"He didn't plan (the book) as a challenge and was very reluctant to take part in any political life. He kept saying it, but you know that people who keep saying that they don't want to get involved in politics — do it all around themselves."

"Willy-nilly, we became the heroes of a certain political situation," Olga said.

But the uproar scared her and, in turn, Pasternak.

"It was I who got frightened," she said. "Let my faults be my faults. In the situation which Pasternak would have behaved better and in a nicer way here, I interfered."

She said she pressured him to try to get the book back.

"Then followed the line of those people who wanted to force Boris to reject his novel. And, being afraid for his life, I did what they wanted me to."

In the harsh critique from

Novy Mir, the editors said the Pasternak who wrote "Dr. Zhivago" was a different man from the beloved poet of earlier years.

Olga agrees. The years had changed him.

"It was the hard time of Stalinism," she said. "Many of his friends suffered."

"Life made him face such things and made him reconsider, and think it over."

Olga, speaking loudly in Russian, said that's why the characters in the book hold a vast array of political viewpoints.

Yuri Zhivago "was not trying to pose as a hero," she said.

"That was the very essence of the book — that he is not a hero."

Olga said that since Pasternak's death, authorities have hinted they planned to publish a collection of his works, including "Dr. Zhivago." But she called the talk "political smiles" and said nothing has ever come of it.

Pasternak's final years were spent in the village of Peredelkino, a farming and weekend resort community of rolling hills and onion-domed churches 20 miles south of Moscow. Olga and Irina, her daughter by an earlier marriage, also lived there.

Pasternak, who also was still living with his wife, maintained two households.

The feeling of isolation around Peredelkino is not unlike Varykino, the secluded, snow-covered summer home in the Urals where Zhivago and Lara spent their final winter together.

Pasternak's grave is in Peredelkino and Olga says she often visits the hilly churchyard where he was buried in 1960.

At home, her memories are at her fingertips. Two albums chronicle their lives together. One shows Pasternak sitting in a window at his Peredelkino dacha, with patches of snow melting in the backyard.

Although she has never seen the film based on "Dr. Zhivago," Olga has pictures of actor Omar Sharif, as Zhivago, and Julie Christie, as Lara.

She smiles when asked if there is any doubt Pasternak patterned Lara after her.

Carrot Fudge For Thanksgiving Dessert

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

America's popular carrot cake — you probably have a recipe for it — may just slip into the ranks as a traditional Thanksgiving dessert. For the holiday we like to garland the cake with mini-carrots made from carrot fudge. The candy is creamy, the color is appropriate and the carrot flavor comes through. The fudge recipe:

CARROT FUDGE
(For Mini-carrots)
1-pound bag carrots, trimmed and pared
3½ cups sugar
¼ cup light corn syrup
1 and 1-3rd cups light cream
¼ cup butter or margarine
½ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon nutmeg
Butter an 8 by 8 by 2-inch cake pan. Using a grater with ¼-inch slots, grate enough carrot (1 large or about ¼ pound) to make about 1 cup loosely packed; reserve. Slice the remaining carrots and steam (in a pan with a solid bottom) or boil until tender; drain well; puree and measure about 1 cup. (It's a good idea to have someone on hand to help with the long stirring that the next step requires.) In a heavy 3-quart saucepan, over medium heat and stirring constantly, bring the grated carrot, the 1 cup carrot puree and the remaining ingredients to a boil. Still stirring constantly over medium heat, continue boiling until mixture reaches 234 degrees on a candy thermometer (soft ball stage) — about 1 hour. Cool without stirring until temperature drops to 110 degrees (mixture will feel warm to the touch) on the candy thermometer. With a wooden spoon beat until mixture begins to stiffen — about 2 minutes. Turn into the prepared pan. Let stand until firm; cut into squares. Shape some of the fudge into mini-carrots by rolling small amounts of it into carrot shapes; press a parsley sprig into the top of each; use as a garnish for a frosted carrot cake. Store tightly covered in the refrigerator. Makes about 2 pounds.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

I just read some statistics that sent a chill up and down my spine.

It said that teenagers know considerably less about sex than most adults think they know. A national survey revealed most teenagers knew little if anything about birth control, pregnancy, or communicable diseases.

I don't mind telling you I haven't been so shook up since Butterfly McQueen threw up her hands and screamed, "I don't know nothin' bout birthin' babies, Miss Scarlett."

Now where are parents supposed to go for all their information?

As I told my teenager the other day, "I'm 50 years old and I think it's time we had a talk about why I cry so much. Maybe it's men."

She clapped her hand over my mouth. "Where did you hear gutter language like that?"

"The girls at the bowling alley. They said there's a reason why I cry when they pick up the garbage and why I fall apart when I find the date on my yeast has expired. What's happening to me?"

"Did you read the books I left in your room?"

"I couldn't understand them. Look, if this is uncomfortable for you, I could discuss it with Mayva's children."

"No, no," she said clearing her throat, "it's just that I don't know how much you know already."

"Only what you told me last year that someday soon, I would look into the mirror and my grandmother's face would look back."

"That is essentially true. It has to do with getting O-L-D."

"Don't spell in front of me!" I snapped. "I'm not a child."

"I'm sorry. You have to understand how difficult it is for teenagers to explain sex to their parents. We don't want to tell you too much or too little. Did I tell you sex is a natural and beautiful thing?"

"You told me that just before I went into 18 hours of labor with your brother."

"What's labor?" she asked suddenly.

I stood up in disbelief. "I'm going to the bowling alley. At my age, I can't afford hearsay."

Brussels sprouts are delicious when served in a cream sauce. Before serving, sprinkle with a sieved hard-cooked egg or a little paprika.

Get them together now.
Now is family portrait time.

Annual Thanksgiving Feast To Host About 2,500 Needy People

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — It's Thanksgiving dinner for the poor, the elderly and the lonely. But there's no mistaking this for a typical charity affair, what with turkeys basted in burgundy and candles glowing on linen tablecloths.

The eighth annual Thanksgiving Day Community Feast, organized by Refer Switchboard, a telephone hot-line service, is being held in the First Presbyterian Church hall here on Thursday.

The guest list, expected to number about 2,500, includes just about anyone who wants to come, the needy and the not-so-needy.

"Everything we do is done the long way, the way your grandmother would have done it. We baste the turkeys with butter, honey and burgundy wine. We start with fresh cranberries for our cranberry sauce," said Ronald Alheim, who serves as head chef.

Alheim's recipe for his turkey dressing emphasizes his point. The ingredients are 60 pounds of onions, a case of celery, apples, 100 pounds of mushrooms, turkey giblets, Alheim's home-made crotons, fresh parsley, lots of sweet butter and the giblet juices.

For several weeks, volunteers have been on the phone daily, cajoling businesses and individuals into donating food or money or time.

A church trustee gave 1,350 pounds of food, including 500 pounds of butternut squash. Local supermarkets have given vegetables at cost or reduced rates. One baker donated $200; others gave pies and cakes.

The pace of preparation stepped up this week. At the church hall Monday, as one group helped unload food from trucks, others organized the cooking schedule and plans to take meals to about 850 persons, mostly elderly, unable to attend the dinner.

Cooking preparations begin today with squash peeling. On Wednesday, a small army of cooks goes into a round-the-clock session. Alheim, alternating between two church kitchens, will direct the slicing, dicing, peeling, mixing, stirring and basting.

The turkeys will be cooked in volunteers' homes until they are within 90 minutes of being done. They're taken to the church ovens for final basting and browning.

On Thursday morning, at about 7 a.m., volunteers will start warming the food that will be sent out to people across the city in vans lent by the Red Cross and other service organizations. Besides the turkey, dressing and cranberry sauce, those dinners will include stuffed celery, butternut squash, ham, a pint of milk and fruit.

At noon, the church hall will open for dinner and serve until everyone who arrives has been fed.

In the past, according to Alheim, the dinner has drawn people from all sectors of the community — "street kids, students, people alone, people whose kids have moved away and some people who just want to have a good community time."

Community Thanksgiving

BETHEL — A community Thanksgiving service will be held at the Bethel United Methodist Church Wednesday evening at 7:30.

Bella's Proposal Loses In Women's Conference

By PEGGY SIMPSON
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Delegates to the National Women's Conference said "yes" to 25 sometimes controversial recommendations on how to achieve equality of the sexes but "no" to a 26th proposal that could have helped implement them — a Cabinet-level women's department.

Instead of a Cabinet-level department to argue for their rights, the delegates called for a follow-up conference and asked President Carter to name a national commission to carry out the meeting's recommendations.

Once those recommendations are forwarded to the president, he will have 120 days to report on them to Congress.

The proposed Cabinet-level department was defeated partly due to fears by some delegates that it would do women more harm than good.

The proposed department had not been considered by the 140,000 delegates who attended the 56 state and territorial meetings. It was added by the National Commission on the Observance of International Women's Year, headed by former Rep. Bella Abzug, who chaired the three-day meeting.

For some delegates, the very fact that Ms. Abzug had made the department her special priority prompted their suspicions that she wanted to head it.

She became the principal target of conservatives at the session, with leader Phyllis Schlafly repeatedly referring to the conference delegates as "Bella's bunch."

The 2,000 delegates ranged in age from 16 to 85. Sponsors said it was the most diverse delegation of American women ever assembled, with minorities, poor women and the young and the old represented in large numbers. The conference, the first government-sponsored women's meeting, was financed through a $5 million grant.

The only proposal debated heatedly and at length was a plank advocating equality for lesbians.

Other recommendations back the proposed Equal Rights Amendment, enforcement of anti-bias laws, new shelters for battered wives, centers for displaced homemakers and more aid to help minorities and the handicapped fight discrimination.

About four-fifths of the delegates backed the ERA, lesbian rights and the right of poor women to federally financed abortions.

The other 20 per cent aligned themselves with a coalition of conservative, religious, anti-abortion and traditional women's groups that sponsored a counter-convention.

Several specific actions are expected to follow the conference:

—Dr. Ethel Allen, a surgeon and city councilwoman from Philadelphia, has set up a regional network of minority women to monitor the plank they worked on.

—Presidential assistant Midge Costanza said she will call together the more than 40 presidential appointees who attended the conference to discuss their impressions.

—Delegates are expected to organize around the Plan of Action in their own cities.

—Conservatives will mount their own lobbying campaigns against the movement, capitalizing on the contacts they made and the literature they picked up, especially on abortion and homosexual rights.

Series Of Accidents Investigated By Police

Over $3,600 in property damage resulted from a series of accidents investigated Monday by Greenville Police.

A three-car collision on Dickinson Avenue near the Hooker Road intersection resulted in the driver of one of the vehicles being charged with a safe movement violation.

Officers said that James Michael Branch of Rt. 1, Box 371, Winterville, was cited following the mishap involving his vehicle and cars driven by Thomas Bond Jr. of 104 Weldon Drive, and Raymond Joyner of 1616 S. Green Street.

No injuries were reported in the 6:15 p.m. wreck and damages were set at $2,000 to the Branch vehicle, and $200 to the Bond and Joyner vehicles.

Nancy Elaine Crosby of Lot 6, Lawson Trailer Park, was charged with a safe movement violation following investigation of a 6:05 p.m. wreck at the intersection of Greenville Boulevard and Evans Street.

Officers reported that the wreck involved cars driven by Crosby and Janice Roberson White of 1306 N. Overlook Drive. Damage was estimated at $400 to the Crosby car and $10 to the White vehicle. No injuries were reported.

Grey Heath Price of 1310 Evergreen Drive was cited for a safe movement violation following a wreck at 4:35 p.m. at the Greenville Boulevard-Memorial Drive intersection.

Officers, who identified the driver of the second vehicle as Melvin Hudson Boyd Jr. of 104 Nichols Drive, reported no injuries and estimated damage to the Boyd car at $300. No estimate was available for the Price vehicle.

A vehicle driven by William Earl Tyndall of P.O. Box 36, Maury received damages estimated at $200 when struck by another vehicle at the Dickinson Avenue-Memorial Drive intersection at 5:37 p.m.

Tyndall told officers he was stopped at a traffic light when another vehicle hit his car in the rear. The second car did not stop at the scene of the mishap, it was reported.

No charges were preferred and no injuries were reported following investigation of a 4:25 p.m. mishap on Evans Street near W. Sixth Street.

Officers reported the wreck involved vehicles driven by Betsy Barnes Wood of 722 E. Ninth Street, Washington, and Cecile Falkenstein McKnight of 107 Hillcrest Drive.

Damages were set at $150 to each car.

Burley Prices Are Up By $5

ASHEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — The Burley Tobacco Market opened in western North Carolina Monday with prices averaging $116 per hundredweight — up $5 from last year.

Supplies were good and market officials said late rains added considerable growth to crops which were stunted by drought earlier in the growing season. Some top grade leaf brought $130 per hundred pounds. Last season, the market averaged $111.16 per hundred.

Sales run four weeks.

Rabbitnapper Chickened Out

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — "You've got to give me $10," the husky voice on the phone said, "or you'll never see your bunny alive again."

That was last Thursday. The rabbit, whose name is Feather, is home safe and sound after the rabbitnapper apparently chickened out.

The Robert Owens family noticed that Feather was missing last Thursday from its pen. Shortly afterward, 8-year-old Dena Owens took the phone call from the abductor, who said he would call later with instructions for the ransom.

The Owens ignored the threats on Feather's life and called police, but nothing happened.

"We'd lost all hope when we didn't hear from the kidnapper again," said Mrs. Owens.

But on Sunday, while the family was in church, a boy brought the rabbit home, telling neighbors he had found it at a nearby swimming club.

Contest In Book Week

The continuing of the Bertha the Bookworm contest was the highlight of the National Children's Book Week observance at South Greenville School.

The contest started Oct. 24 and will end Nov. 23, with more than 100 students having read 25 or more books each. All the children in the school are involved. Those who read 25 or more books will be presented a book and a bookmark. Those reading 15 or more will receive a bookworm bookmark. The purpose of the contest is to motivate students to seek and read good books.

Each class made a book of creative writings during Book Week, also. These were presented to the library of the school for student use. Classroom doors were decorated with book characters and stories. Bert and Bertha Bookworm adorn the hall walls with their ever-growing length.

Joe Stines, Children's Librarian of Sheppard Public Library, presented Story Time to the second and third graders.

Tungsten miners at the Pine Creek Mine in the mountains overlooking Owens Valley, Calif., go up to work, not down.

School Board...

A proposed policy on the selection of substitute teachers was presented and discussed. Under standard procedures, the policy proposal will be studied by board members with action due at the next regular meeting. Also being considered as a policy matter is the possible use of student teachers from East Carolina University as substitute teachers in the city schools.

Bids for carpet and for casework at Greenville Middle School were approved. The low base bid of $44,989 submitted by Eatman's, Inc.

of Raleigh was the winning carpet bid.

The casework bid entailed bids in two categories. That of metalwork went to Flythe School Equipment Company at $32,120.90; and for dining room chairs to seat 240, the firm of Institutional Interiors, Inc. was successful bidder at $7,785.

For the casework, there was only one bid in each category. Since this was a re-bid situation, the board could legally accept the single bids on these two items.

Superintendent Glenn Cox reported that staff members at Rose High were being assigned on a rotating basis to escort the city police person on duty there during the lunch hour.

This assignment, Cox noted, has been requested by Police Chief Glenn Cannon as a prerequisite for continuing to provide police service at the school.

Following expressions of dissatisfaction by several board members of the use of personnel assigned to the maintenance division as bus drivers for school activities, a motion was approved to hold a workshop meeting at an early date to look into the composition of maintenance assignments and budget requests for maintenance.

Radio Career For John Dean

LOS ANGELES (AP) — John Dean, the onetime counsel to former President Richard Nixon whose revelations of the Watergate coverup led to Nixon's resignation, says he's starting a new career as a reporter on a syndicated radio program.

"I really look upon this as not dissimilar to the public responsibility that I once had in government," said the 39-year-old Dean.

"I think it's something I can do well. I'm sure I'll always wear the Scarlet Letter of Watergate, but how visible that will be in people's minds over time, I don't know."

"The last time out I blew it," said Dean. "I don't want to do it this time."

Dean was among those serving a prison term for his role in the Watergate coverup that led to Nixon's ouster.

His new radio series, "Right to Know," will consist of five three-minute programs a week in which Dean will cover topics such as women in the military, the future of the Republican Party, Washington social life, lobbyists, God in government, public opinion polls, the politician's wife and air safety.

'Dr. Zhivago' Character Remembers

By DOUGLAS STANGLIN

MOSCOW (UPI) — Boris Pasternak's dark, piercing eyes stare down from a photograph in Olga Ivinskaya's cramped, two-room apartment.

It has been 17 years since the author-poet's death, but his presence is everywhere.

Snapshots and clippings are piled on her desk or stuck to the bookcase.

Now — as during their 14 turbulent years together — their lives remain entwined.

Olga Ivinskaya, 62, was Pasternak's companion and mistress — the woman after whom he patterned the memorable character Lara in his internationally acclaimed novel, "Dr. Zhivago."

"It's not only that I slept with Boris Leonidovich, I was his right hand," she said, in the first interview she has granted a Western correspondent since Pasternak's death. "I knew his thoughts, his deeds, his plans."

She also shared his agony in the international furor created by the publication abroad in 1958 of "Dr. Zhivago," which was denounced by the Soviet Union's official Union of Writers.

After he won the Nobel Prize for literature, Pasternak was forced to choose between accepting the award in Stockholm and never returning home or renouncing it. Under immense pressure, he chose the latter.

Olga said the venomous attacks on Pasternak scarred his memory and forced her to write her memoirs.

"I had no other way out. I did what I had to do."

She said she did not intend for her manuscript to be published abroad, but that, through friends who had read copies of the book, it turned up in the West. It will be published in February.

She said she did not want to stir up "noise" — she just wanted to tell the truth.

Asked if she fears repercussions, Olga said quietly, "Everything is possible."

Sipping Bulgarian wine, Olga swept the air with her hands as she talked, saying editors at the Soviet magazine Novy Mir held Pasternak's controversial Zhivago manuscript for seven months without acting on it.

"They were saying to me that they won't be able to publish all of it, but parts of it in segments," she said.

The Soviet Communist party Central Committee seemed to favor the book, she said, but the Union of Writers wanted to ban it.

Olga said there was a "struggle for priority" and that Zhivago came very close to being published.

"They even made arrangements for a contract to the State Publishing House, but then they demanded to delete something."

Olga said months passed and nothing happened. Then Pasternak took a gamble.

"I recall him meeting me at the railway station," said Olga, staring out her apartment window. "Very guiltily, he said he had given the novel to an Italian (publisher) and I knew already what it smelled of."

"I rushed to get it back, but I couldn't," she said.

Olga said the publisher told Pasternak he would "stay in the shadow" for a year and give Soviet authorities a chance to publish it.

But when it became known the novel was in the hands of a foreign publisher, the editors of Novy Mir hastily wrote a letter rejecting the manuscript, Olga said.

In that letter, written in 1958, the magazine editors attacked Pasternak for political comments expressed by several characters in the book. They referred to the central character — Yuri Zhivago — as having "egocentric views."

The letter criticized the novel at one point because "neither (the character) Alexandr Alex-

androvich, nor Zhivago have the least trace of a sense of duty to the revolution or to the people."

Olga said the reaction "had nothing to do with the very gist of the novel."

She said the thoughts of secondary characters could have been held by anyone during the upheaval of the 1917 revolution "but all of them were ascribed to the author and they were saying this was his political credo."

"He didn't plan (the book) as a challenge and was very reluctant to take part in any political life. He kept saying it, but you know that people who keep saying that they don't want to get involved in politics — do it all around themselves."

"Willy-nilly, we became the heroes of a certain political situation," Olga said.

But the uproar scared her and, in turn, Pasternak.

"It was I who got frightened," she said. "Let my faults be my faults. In the situation which Pasternak would have behaved better and in a nicer way here, I interfered."

She said she pressured him to try to get the book back.

"Then followed the line of those people who wanted to force Boris to reject his novel. And, being afraid for his life, I did what they wanted me to."

In the harsh critique from

Novy Mir, the editors said the Pasternak who wrote "Dr. Zhivago" was a different man from the beloved poet of earlier years.

Olga agrees. The years had changed him.

"It was the hard time of Stalinism," she said. "Many of his friends suffered."

"Life made him face such things and made him reconsider, and think it over."

Olga, speaking loudly in Russian, said that's why the characters in the book hold a vast array of political viewpoints.

Yuri Zhivago "was not trying to pose as a hero," she said.

"That was the very essence of the book — that he is not a hero."

Olga said that since Pasternak's death, authorities have hinted they planned to publish a collection of his works, including "Dr. Zhivago." But she called the talk "political smiles" and said nothing has ever come of it.

Pasternak's final years were spent in the village of Peredelkino, a farming and weekend resort community of rolling hills and onion-domed churches 20 miles south of Moscow. Olga and Irina, her daughter by an earlier marriage, also lived there.

Pasternak, who also was still living with his wife, maintained two households.

The feeling of isolation around Peredelkino is not unlike Varykino, the secluded, snow-covered summer home in the Urals where Zhivago and Lara spent their final winter together.

Pasternak's grave is in Peredelkino and Olga says she often visits the hilly churchyard where he was buried in 1960.

At home, her memories are at her fingertips. Two albums chronicle their lives together. One shows Pasternak sitting in a window at his Peredelkino dacha, with patches of snow melting in the backyard.

Although she has never seen the film based on "Dr. Zhivago," Olga has pictures of actor Omar Sharif, as Zhivago, and Julie Christie, as Lara.

She smiles when asked if there is any doubt Pasternak patterned Lara after her.

"Lara and I are not identical persons, naturally. But I think that some of the statements she makes are mine, and, of course, there's the lyrical situation."

She said Pasternak once inscribed a book for her: "To Lara, from Yuri."

Indeed, their lives, like those in the novel, were filled with frantic, fleeting moments together and painful departures.

Olga was twice imprisoned because of her ties to Pasternak — the second time after his death.

Perhaps such uncertainties in their life together found a voice in the words spoken by Zhivago as he and Lara made their last trek to Varykino.

"Our days are really numbered," he told her. "So at least let us take advantage of them in our own way."

Share Recipe With Friend

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1977 by The Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: A friend called me and asked for a recipe she'd heard I had. A mutual friend had told her it was the most delicious casserole she'd ever tasted. Well, it was just a can of this and a package of that. A child could throw it together in five minutes. I was ashamed to tell her it was so simple, so I said it had been in my family for years and I promised my grandmother I wouldn't give it out.

This has been on my mind for days, Abby, and I feel terrible about it. I don't usually lie. I'd really like to square things with her, but I'm in so deep now I don't know how to, without making a liar out of myself.

TROUBLED CONSCIENCE

DEAR TROUBLED: Don't worry about "making a liar out of yourself." You already have. Now you must 'fess up. (She'll understand.) Give her the recipe, and if it's as easy as you say it is, and as delicious as she heard it was, it will leave only a good taste in her mouth.

DEAR ABBY: Like so many others, I never thought I'd be writing you, but my whole life is so messed up I need your help.

I'm an 18-year-old girl and I feel like 35. My reputation is totally gone because I've slept with just about every guy I know. I made it through high school by the skin of my teeth. I've attempted suicide twice. I've seen a psychiatrist, but I can't get it together. All my friends have given up on me.

My family keeps wracking their brains to find out where they failed me. They really tried their best, but it was a game I played to see how much I could get away with. I can't remember what it's like to feel respected or to respect myself. I am ready to say to hell with life because I'll never regain the love and respect of those I love.

There is nothing left to save. I can't even turn to God because I've let him down so often. Please help me.

HUNG-UP HARLOT

DEAR HUNG UP: You still value life and want to regain your self-respect, or you wouldn't have written.

Start by getting back into therapy. Put all your failures and mistakes behind you. God forgives. Accept Him into your life and let Him work His wonders. But first, get your head together by forgiving yourself. You can do it if you try. Write again and tell me how you are. I care.

DEAR ABBY: A very dear friend of mine recently died of a terminal illness after fighting a valiant battle for two years.

Her sister, Mary (made-up name), cried the loudest at the funeral. Yet Mary saw very little of her ailing sister. She could have been a great help to her because she had time and lived nearby.

After the funeral, Mary said, "I know I didn't see much of my sister when she was sick, but I just couldn't bear to see her in that condition. It would hurt me too much."

What is your opinion of such an excuse?

A FRIEND

DEAR FRIEND: It's a poor rationalization, but when a person doesn't want to do something, one excuse is as good as another.

Carrot Fudge For Thanksgiving Dessert

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

America's popular carrot cake — you probably have a recipe for it — may just slip into the ranks as a traditional Thanksgiving dessert. For the holiday we like to garland the cake with mini-carrots made from carrot fudge. The candy is creamy, the color is appropriate and the carrot flavor comes through. The fudge recipe:

CARROT FUDGE

(For Mini-carrots)

1-pound bag carrots, trimmed and pared
3½ cups sugar
¼ cup light corn syrup
1 and 1-3rd cups light cream
¼ cup butter or margarine
½ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon nutmeg

Butter an 8 by 8 by 2-inch cake pan. Using a grater with ¼-inch slots, grate enough carrot (1 large or about ¼ pound) to make about 1 cup loosely packed; reserve. Slice the remaining carrots and steam (in a pan with a solid bottom) or boil until tender; drain well; puree and measure about 1 cup. (It's a good idea to have someone on hand to help with the long stirring that the next step requires.) In a heavy 3-quart saucepan, over medium heat and stirring constantly, bring the grated carrot, the 1 cup carrot puree and the remaining ingredients to a boil. Still stirring constantly over medium heat, continue boiling until mixture reaches 234 degrees on a candy thermometer (soft ball stage) — about 1 hour. Cool without stirring until temperature drops to 110 degrees (mixture will feel warm to the touch) on the candy thermometer. With a wooden spoon beat until mixture begins to stiffen — about 2 minutes. Turn into the prepared pan. Let stand until firm; cut into squares. Shape some of the fudge into mini-carrots by rolling small amounts of it into carrot shapes; press a parsley sprig into the top of each; use as a garnish for a frosted carrot cake. Store tightly covered in the refrigerator. Makes about 2 pounds.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

I just read some statistics that sent a chill up and down my spine.

It said that teenagers know considerably less about sex than most adults think they know. A national survey revealed most teenagers knew little if anything about birth control, pregnancy, or communicable diseases.

I don't mind telling you I haven't been so shook up since Butterfly McQueen threw up her hands and screamed, "I don't know nothin' bout birthin' babies, Miss Scarlett."

Now where are parents supposed to go for all their information?

As I told my teenager the other day, "I'm 50 years old and I think it's time we had a talk about why I cry so much. Maybe it's men."

She clapped her hand over my mouth. "Where did you hear gutter language like that?"

"The girls at the bowling alley. They said there's a reason why I cry when they pick up the garbage and why I fall apart when I find the date on my yeast has expired. What's happening to me?"

"Did you read the books I left in your room?"

"I couldn't understand them. Look, if this is uncomfortable for you, I could discuss it with Mayva's children."

"No, no," she said clearing her throat, "it's just that I don't know how much you know already."

"Only what you told me last year that someday soon, I would look into the mirror and my grandmother's face would look back."

"That is essentially true. It has to do with getting O.L.D."

"Don't spell in front of me!" I snapped. "I'm not a child."

"I'm sorry. You have to understand how difficult it is for teenagers to explain sex to their parents. We don't want to tell you too much or too little. Did I tell you sex is a natural and beautiful thing?"

"You told me that just before I went into 18 hours of labor with your brother."

"What's labor?" she asked suddenly.

I stood up in disbelief. "I'm going to the bowling alley. At my age, I can't afford hearsay."

Brussels sprouts are delicious when served in a cream sauce. Before serving, sprinkle with a sieved hard-cooked egg or a little paprika.

Get them together now. NOW IS family portrait time.

Area Awards Are Gratifying

Procter & Gamble's Greenville plant was among northeastern N. C. businesses winning industrial relations awards given by the Coastal Plain Development Association last week.

Simpson was one of the winners in the town or village category of Community Awards. Grifton was a third place winner.

P&G was cited for its support of the Chamber of Commerce, intern program with Rose High, cooperation with Pitt Tech, support of the ECU Pirate Club and work with the handicapped.

It was pointed out the plant has donated $18,000 to Pitt Memorial Hospital and $40,300 to United Fund.

Simpson was cited for its work to improve the beauty, safety, services and community life of the town.

Pitt County received an Home Economics Award for exceptional publicity given to home making programs.

Various other awards went to communities, counties and businesses in the northeast. Each can be proud of its accomplishments. We are particularly pleased that Procter & Gamble, Simpson, Grifton and Pitt County were cited by the CPDA for their accomplishments during the year.

Their Theory Would Change Thinking

Two astronomers say that life on earth could have come from outer space by way of meteors crashing on earth.

If that is correct it would invalidate the theory that life originated on earth through chemical means, the accepted theory.

The scientists also say that epidemics of influenza the plague and other illnesses could have been brought to earth the same way.

If the theory is correct it would vastly change our thinking about the way earth life originated and it would also increase the possibility of life on other planets.

Conflicting Views Aired

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — "As is always the case, salary is the Number One concern of North Carolina's educators," said A. C. Dawson, head of the North Carolina Association of Educators (NCAE) as he presented that group's 1978-79 legislative program to a committee of the General Assembly recently.

Minutes later, a local superintendent told the same committee: "The needs in education go far beyond salaries. That fact is that for whatever reasons it is impossible for an umbrella organization such as the NCAE to represent all sides."

"That organization has allowed too much clout for the classroom teachers. The majority of the NCAE, its directors, and its legislative committee are classroom teachers," said Durham County Supt. J. Frank Yeager.

"These legislative proposals are influenced disproportionately by that fact."

Adopted by the legislative commission earlier this month, the organization will push in the 1978 General Assembly for:

10 Percent

—An across-the-board 10 percent pay hike; added salary steps and increased longevity; and adjusted percentage steps for all increases to produce comparable increases regardless of position held;

—reduced class size for junior high schools, and teacher allotments based on best three of first four months of school;

—increased retirement benefits; continued full state funding of health-hospitalization insurance; and annual leave at the rate of two days per year, accumulating to five days.

Dawson characterized the proposals as "designed specifically to reward the career employee," and said the tilt in favor of experience is justified by that goal.

Yeager, on the other hand, rejected such strong emphasis on salary matters as being fruitful for education: "A 10 percent raise? It would be nice. But I am a pragmatist and a realist. I only ask that you do the best you can.

"Our biggest need is additional manpower at the junior high school level." The state has an "archaic way" of distributing middle school personnel based on the same formula used in elementary school. But since middle school classes are not self-contained, but shift about; and since teachers must have one free period daily to achieve accreditation, the schools are short of teachers. Also suffering are specialty areas such as counseling, librarians, clerical help.

"The adolescent years are the most difficult of all... it is the time when we need our greatest resources, but we do not have them because the state formula doesn't even recognize the existence of junior high schools as different from elementary," Yeager said.

Merit Pay

Turning again to salary, Yeager lamented the absence of a technique for paying the outstanding teachers more money. "We simply don't have the ability to objectively measure performance. Techniques are not sophisticated enough to measure performance and output in education."

But a technique is near at hand in the statewide testing programs being launched this year, Yeager noted. He chaired one of the commissions developing those programs.

"I've got great faith in the tests... If we do it right, and get the right attitude (they) will give us that hard data we need to know."

"We can get parents involved... and we can bring the heat to bear on those who are not cutting the mustard."

"It will be hard to do. But the big part of the job is in having the strength to do it."

The legislative committee, chaired by State Rep. James H. Edwards, D-Caldwell, is looking into matters of salaries for school personnel.

Results Due Leadership

HARRISBURG, PA. — I met a happy man the other day. He had a story to tell, and a moral goes with it. You get the moral first: Good leadership brings good results.

The gentleman's name is Frank Dick. He is 51, a big, broad-shouldered guy, blue eyes, white hair; he was born a country boy, and still looks as if he could load hay all day without getting tired. For the past 13 years, he has been superintendent of schools in Toledo, Ohio. I met him the other night when we happened to fly together from Harrisburg to Pittsburgh, and he fell to talking of the November 8 referendum on a property tax increase in Toledo.

This was the happy occasion. In common with cities all over the country, Toledo has been experiencing steady increases in the cost of public education. Much of the increase is attributed to rising salaries for teachers, but other factors also have

Public Forum

Letters submitted for Public Forum must be limited to 300 words.

Editor's note:

The letter about the U. S. Senatorial race published in yesterday's Daily Reflector had the signature inadvertently omitted. The letter was written by Lyle Barlow of Greenville.

To the editor:

Dr. Leo Jenkins, the wise and effective educator, stated at Ayden-Grifton High School last Tuesday, "Schools belong to the taxpayers... Schools should be controlled by taxpayers... No school can operate without community support."

Gov. Hunt has said, "The public schools belong to the public." Dr. Craig Phillips advocates local control of schools.

In direct opposition to that thinking is the attitude of the Pitt County Board of Education which seems to be: Give us your children; you pay the bills, but you stay out of school business.

The Pitt County Board of Education fails to heed the warning of officials and leading American educators that unless the public school have the support of the public, they are doomed. Some of its members fail to recognize the present need to respond to the will of the majority of Ayden and Grifton citizens who have made known through petitions, letters and impassioned speeches in many meetings the overwhelming desire and determination of Southern Pitt County parents and/or taxpayers to keep Ayden middle grades in Ayden and Grifton middle grades in Grifton.

Five members of the Pitt County Board of Education, none of whom will have a child affected by his actions, voted to ignore the expressed will of the people they were elected to represent.

Whatever happened to democracy? To local control?

Ayden's and Grifton's representatives on that Board lament publicly the present lack of community support of the one consolidated school in our area, Ayden-Grifton High. Do they not realize that it was consolidation that alienated the support Ayden and Grifton high schools enjoyed prior to their removal from the towns of Grifton and Ayden? Cannot they see that further consolidation will result in further destruction of school support in our communities?

The issue: Who controls Pitt County Schools?

At stake, here and elsewhere, is the survival of public schools.

Mrs. Jean H. Williams

played a significant part. Among these other factors is the high cost of vandalism.

More than two years ago, Dick and his Toledo school board saw the necessity for substantial new funding. Under Ohio law, the voters themselves have to approve any such tax increase by their own direct vote. In November of 1975, Dick asked for the voters' approval. The voters said no. They said no again in June of 1976, again in November of 1976, yet again in June of 1977.

After the fourth defeat, a less determined man might have given up. Dick takes no particular credit for himself. He was able to look ahead and to see that soon after Toledo's schools opened in the fall of 1977, the schools would run out of money. By law, they would have to shut down. He saw that prospect as a civic disaster, and he communicated that urgency to others.

What followed was a textbook exercise in civic leadership. The politics of Toledo dictate that in any successful effort, four elements have to be brought together. These are business, labor, the Catholic voters, and the Toledo Blade. For the school

WASHINGTON TODAY

Intrigue Over Dr. Burns

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — Flagging hopes of business that President Carter might yet avert another self-inflicted wound to the economy were heightened a little Nov. 14 when Rosalynn Carter lunched privately with Dr. Arthur Burns, chairman of the Federal Reserve Board.

Although her viewpoint is wrapped in mystery, nobody denies the First Lady's status as a serious adviser to the President. Thus, advocates of Burns took hope that the Monday luncheon covered more than its announced subject of "voluntarism." If she reported favorably to the President on Burns, it would break the present pattern which points to more Carter trouble with the economy.

That pattern: blanket opposition to reappointment of Burns as chairman of the Fed from the President's own advisers (except for Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal, who is ambiguous); blanket insistence from outsiders in the business world that forcing Burns out Jan. 31 is one piece of bad news not yet discounted by money markets.

Such news will be interpreted as proof that the administration is eyeing the inflationary course and does not want Arthur Burns around to blow his whistle. Reverberations at home and abroad are why even frequent critics of Burns — economist Eliot Janeway, economist Pierre Rinfret, economic pollster Albert Sindlinger — publicly urged that he be retained.

This position has surprising support among congressional Democrats — such as Rep. Thomas Ludlow Ashley of Ohio, a rising figure in the House thanks to his gritty performance as chairman of the ad hoc Energy Committee. Ashley, highly regarded in the White House, this week privately urged the President to reappoint Burns.

A flickering possibility that Ashley's advice might be taken exists because the President has neither made up his mind nor discussed the subject in formal meetings. Still, unless Mrs. Carter was so charmed over lunch that she becomes a Burns booster, the President is far more likely to hear a negative message on Burns wherever he turns today.

There has never been doubt that chief domestic aide Stuart Eizenstat and chief economic adviser Charles Schultz well Burns out. Less well known is how deeply anti-Burns feeling is rooted in the President's inner circle. Contending that the 73-year-old central banker now is the product of old press clippings, one senior adviser told us: "Burns can't fill his own shoes." A key political aide, with no pretensions to economic expertise, tells the President that Burns must be replaced or Jimmy Carter will face the wrath of organized labor and Democratic politicians.

The influential Jody Powell fits this category. After the President praised Burns at his last press conference, press secretary Powell toned it down at the next day's press briefing. When the President lunched with Burns and Treasury Secretary Blumenthal that day, Mr. Carter informed the Fed chairman: Jody said I was too nice to you.

But being "too nice," say White House insiders, is just part of a White House tactic of pacifying business and the money markets with pro-Burns rhetoric until the time comes to dump him — a tactic with unfortunate time limitations. Whether Blumenthal's panegyric on Burns before the Senate Banking Committee is part of the same tactic is less certain.

During a recent trip abroad, Blumenthal became less cavalier about the declining state of the dollar and might be connecting the dollar's health and Burns' future. Overriding Schultz's objections, Blumenthal insisted that Burns review the Humphrey-Hawkins jobs proposal.

But Blumenthal, still blamed at the White House for pushing Bert Lance, might not want to swim upstream on this issue. Behind his public praise, Blumenthal over dinner the other night expounded privately on how many sound conservatives could replace Burns (a discussion described as "disquieting" by a Burns man present).

ORIENTATION

A professor was speaking with a group of colleagues at the opening of college in the fall. "We begin our orientation course this evening," he said. And then he added with a smile — "For the freshmen, not for us."

One might well question the professor's easy assumption that just because people have reached middle age in an educational environment they no longer need orientation. To "orient" means to set right with reference to facts or principles — in other words, to make sure that in the realm of principles and procedure, people should know where they stand.

If the world did not change as the years passed, perhaps a one-shot orientation course taken at an early age would suffice for our needs. But obviously the world is constantly changing. We must constantly reorient ourselves so that we can help solve some of the overpowering problems of the modern world. We never get so old that we can afford to stop learning.

Cheered By Their Statement

By JOHN CUNIFF

AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — Apparently it doesn't take much to lift the spirits of Americans, who the opinion research people say have been depressed and shaken by the condition of their national economy.

When in that mood, it has been argued, people don't take chances, they don't spend money, they don't make plans. And because they don't the economy drops deeper and they become more depressed.

It is then that the federal government tries to play doctor, devising intricate plans that finally get under way 12 months later, by which time the poor consumer might already have managed to drag himself to an upright position.

But a drama has unfolded in recent days, and the moral of it seems to be that if Washington got its house in order there would be released a burst of confidence and energy of the kind that built the country.

It begins with reports from the people who claim to measure consumer confidence. People aren't very happy about current conditions or future prospects, they have been saying. People are apprehensive. One of the surveys, released Nov. 17 by Citicorp, declared that "faith in the future of the economy has hit the lowest point of the year." Forty-six percent of respondents, it said, felt business would worsen.

Checking further, one sees that the random sampling of 1,404 adults took place in September. To say, therefore, that people feel the same in mid-November as they did in September is to make an undocumented assumption.

But one company, Sindlinger & Co., conducts its surveys on a daily basis, by telephone, seven days a week out. It could provide more recent data, and it did. It confirmed the depressing news.

In fact, said Albert Sindlinger, chairman of the research firm, data to November 9 indicated so depressing a situation that he felt a recession would begin by the end of the year, and that stocks would fall in 1978.

And then the news out of Washington hit the consumers and the consumers' attitudes hit the computers.

President Carter and Arthur Burns, the Federal Reserve Board chairman, announced to the nation that they really were in agreement, despite having been caught fighting both publicly and privately.

On November 10 and 11 the stock market responded with a rousing cheer, running up nearly 28 points on the Dow Jones industrial average. If the news was true, the market seemed to say, then we'll have economic stability.

The public seemed to agree. In the period November 10 through 13, Sindlinger & Co. measured the sharpest four-day rise of consumer confidence in its 22 years of daily surveys. Nothing like it had ever happened.

Why the turnaround? That's a bit more difficult to measure, but there is one explanation that is widely believed on Wall Street and on its namesakes around the country.

There has been a horror of

What They're Doing

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG

WASHINGTON (AP) — If your Latin is a little rusty and you're wondering what Congress is up to in the pro forma sessions it's been holding lately, here is an unexpurgated account from the Congressional Record of the Senate session of Nov. 11:

"The Senate met at 10 a.m. on the expiration of the recess and was called to order by the acting President Pro Tempore, Mr. Metcalf (Sen. Lee Metcalf, D-Mont.).

"The Acting President Pro Tempore: 'Under the previous order, the Senate will stand in recess until Tuesday, Nov. 15, 1977, at 10 a.m.'

"Thereupon, at 10 o'clock and 6 seconds a.m., the Senate recessed until Tuesday, Nov. 15, 1977, at 10 a.m."

And that's the way it was on Friday, Nov. 11, 1977.

Members of Congress get a lot of mail, and Rep. Otis G. Pike, D-N.Y., says the most annoying letters often are the ones he gets from other congressmen.

The letters Pike refers to start out "Dear Colleague."

"Colleague," says Pike "is what one congressman calls another congressman whom he doesn't know well enough to call Eddie or Shirley."

According to Pike, Dear Colleague letters usually start off something like:

"Dear Colleague, are you against sin?"

"Dear Colleague, are you for America and apple pie?"

"Dear Colleague, would you like to be re-elected?"

Pike added that during a recent two-week period he received 127 Dear Colleague letters.

November 22, 1937

A tobacco control provision identical to the plans drafted by tobacco states representatives in Congress went before the senate as a part of its agricultural committee's new farm bill.

Incorporated in the bill by Senator Ellender (D-La.) it proposed regulation through marketing quotas in years the agriculture secretary determined a surplus exists. It would be applicable to flue cured, air cured, burley, Maryland, cigar filler, and cigar binder types of tobacco.

Control would be compulsory in the event two-thirds of the growers approved quotas in a referendum. A fifty per cent penalty would be imposed on tobacco sold in excess of quotas.

Of much interest to Washington and Greenville Army circles was the announcement in Washington, D. C. of the election of J. B. Kittrell of Greenville as president of the exclusive Seventh District Officers Association.

The Greenville officers election as president of the Association was announced at a dinner given at the Raleigh hotel.

campaign, Dick added a fifth: the students themselves.

A committee was formed under the chairmanship of Chester Deverow, a top executive of the Sheller-Globe Company. The United Auto Workers and the Teamsters Union threw their weight into the effort. Catholic leaders plunged into the campaign. The Blade provided editorial support climaxed by a page one appeal on the Sunday before the referendum.

The element that may have meant the most, says Dick, was provided by the students themselves. The schools ran out of money and closed their doors on the afternoon of Friday, October 28. Student bands marked the occasion by marching with muffled drums. During the following week, hundreds of students poured their youthful energies into the fight to carry the levy. On election day, they manned every one of the 384 precincts from 6:30 a.m. to 7:30 p.m.

"They worked their hearts out," says Dick. "That night when the returns rolled in, we knew by 9:30 that we had won. One of the student leaders telephoned me at campaign headquarters. All he said was, 'Holy Toledo!' but that said it all."

The referendum carried by a solid 56 percent of the vote. The increase of 6.1 mills is a temporary increase, effective for five years only, but in that time it will generate $10 million a year in added funds for the schools. Dick is keenly aware of his obligation to produce top-quality education, with even greater emphasis upon basic subjects. He has a reconstituted school board to work with, and he has the tangible evidence of community support.

Other Ohio cities were not so fortunate on election day. Referendums lost in Cincinnati, Dayton, Canton and Columbus. The public schools of Cleveland remain open under court mandate. Are the people of Ohio simply anti-education? Don't they care about the schooling of their own children?

Dick denies that such attitudes predominate. The repeated "no" votes are manifestations, he believes, of an inchoate resentment against the burdens of government generally. In the backlash against federal rules and regulations, taxes and paperwork, local schools get caught. The happy word from Toledo is that, given good leadership, this mindless, untargeted rebellion can be turned aside.

ters, almost all of which were thrown in the wastebasket.

Several members of the House and Senate are serving as congressional advisers to the United States delegation at the Strategic Arms Limitation Talks between the U.S. and the Soviet Union.

Periodically, one or two of the congressional advisers flies to Geneva, where the talks are underway. Their expenses are picked up by the State Department, whose expenses are picked up by the taxpayers.

Reps. Tom Downey, D-N.Y., and Bob Carr, D-Mich., made the trip recently and discovered the airline tickets sent them by the State Department were for first-class flights at a cost of about $1,100 each.

Downey and Carr exchanged them for coach seats costing about $650 each.

Who says Georgian Jimmy Carter doesn't get along well with Congress? He's been manning one of the doors to the House chamber for 11 years and getting along just fine.

During the 1976 presidential campaign, Carter the doorman met Carter the candidate and said, "I'm Jimmy Carter, too." They shook hands and parted ways and now they work at opposite ends of Pennsylvania Avenue.

Those remarks by Blumenthal exposed the administration's desire to name somebody who would cushion Burns' departure. But two names prominently mentioned, ex-Treasury Secretary Henry H. (Joe) Fowler, 69, and Republican Bruce MacLaury, 45, head of the Brookings Institution (and former president of the Federal Reserve Bank of Minneapolis), provide little cushion. MacLaury means nothing to business and Fowler is viewed as somebody who might take orders from Charley Schultz.

Republican consultant-lobbyist Charles Walker will urge Burns, if dumped as chairman, to stick around as a board member. He might do it if he considers his successor a weakling. Since the head of the table then would be where Burns sits, the administration would have managed the worst of all worlds: economic trauma resulting from sacking the old man without actually getting rid of him.

Benefits In Pitt

Pitt County residents are receiving $1,805,137 in Social Security benefits, according to recent data released by the Social Security Administration.

A total of 11,906 Pitt Countians are Social Security beneficiaries. Of these, 5,175 are retired workers and 1,200 are disabled workers. Some 1,093 are receiving benefits as the wives or husbands of retired or disabled workers, and 4,438 widows, widowers and dependent parents get Social Security.

Some 5,521 are under age 65 and 6,385 are 65 or older. According to Greenville District Manager Mary Cain, the average monthly benefit payable to a retired worker in Pitt County is $178.90, compared with $199.20 statewide.

Vance Saw Little Progress In Argentina Human Rights Talk

By WILLIAM F. NICHOLSON
Associated Press Writer
BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance flew to Brazil today after reporting "good progress" with the Argentine government on nuclear issues but without achieving major success in the field of human rights.

"I think we made good progress in nuclear matters," Vance said in a departure statement. "In the field of human rights, we had a far-reaching exchange of views. We were pleased to see that Argentina agreed to endorse the declaration of human rights."

Argentina was the first stop on the secretary's first visit to South America. After conferring with Brazilian leaders in Brasilia today, he winds up his four-day tour Wednesday with a visit to Venezuela.

Vance told reporters human rights occupied "two-thirds of our time" during his meetings with President Jorge Videla and other top officials. A joint communiqué pledged both governments would protect human rights, and the Argentine gov-

Burley Tobacco Prices Rose, But Farmers Hope For More

By DIANA TAYLOR
Associated Press Writer
LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — The prices were noticeably higher than opening day sales of a year ago, but burley farmers offering their crops for sale at a warehouse here are hoping for a better market.

"I'm just gonna quit if things don't get better," commented one 57 year-old farmer who said he had been working with burley since childhood. "The farmer doesn't get much out of it anyway. Cigarettes cost 65 cents a pack and you can just about make a pack out of one leaf (of tobacco)."

Some of the farmers said they felt the buyers may have been bidding low and believed the market would improve in the next few weeks.

Wayne Lynch, a young Fayette County farmer, didn't sell any of his burley Monday, but he went to the auction to find out what prices he might expect in the sales ahead.

By CHRIS CONNELL
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Researchers who have developed a vaccine against several strains of pneumonia that kill thousands yearly are now trying to protect young children from a serious ear infection often caused by the same bacteria.

The inflammation of the middle ear, known as otitis media, is the most frequently diagnosed childhood disease after the common cold. It strikes 2 percent of all children by age 2 and 75 percent by age 6.

The new vaccine, licensed Monday by the Food and Drug Administration, could save many of the 25,000 lives lost to pneumonia each year in the United States, its manufacturer says. Its development also may be crucial in fighting the children's ear disease.

Dr. Maurice Hillman, who directed the work on the vaccine, Pneumovax, at Merck Sharp & Dohme's West Point, Pa., laboratories, said researchers may know within a year to 18 months whether a vaccine can be used to safeguard babies against the ear infection.

The government is sponsoring trials in Massachusetts and Alabama hospitals on a vaccine against eight strains associated with otitis media.

Pneumovax protects against 14 strains of the pneumococcus bacteria that account for more than 80 percent of the pneumococcal pneumonia cases.

The "pneumococcus, which lives in the nose and throat of healthy people, also causes ear infections in youngsters. The bacteria can spread to the lungs or to the ears when the body's defense mechanisms fail.

The FDA authorized the company to recommend the pneumonia vaccine for everyone age 2.

50 or over, the chronically ill, people convalescing from a serious disease and anyone living in a nursing home or other facility where pneumonia could easily spread.

Pneumovax is not recommended for children under age 2.

help victims of sickle cell anemia and others with defective or missing spleens who run a high risk of severe pneumonia infections.

Pneumovax is not effective against viral pneumonia, which drugs still cannot prevent or cure but is usually less severe than pneumococcal pneumonia.

Meet Again Today On Dockworkers' Contract

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Dock workers and local shipping officials meet again today to discuss the shippers' latest contract proposal described by International Longshoremen's Association, President Thomas W. Gleason as their "best offer yet."

Gleason arrived Monday from New York to deal with the New Orleans Steamship Association, and flew back after the negotiating session because of a commitment. He said he may return today.

The ILA boss remained optimistic that a settlement was impending which could hasten the end of the ILA's selective strike in Gulf and Atlantic coast ports.

"I am optimistic," he said. "There has been a lot of improvement in the offer."

A shipping representative indicated he also was encouraged by the Monday meeting, and said the offer was "different in some respects" from previous industry proposals.

The spokesman said major points remaining unsettled were mostly local issues, but they include some form of guaranteed income for long-shoremen.

Gleason said he wanted to wind things up in the Gulf so a membership vote can be taken on both coasts in time for dock workers to go back to work on Thanksgiving day — a holiday on which work would be at overtime pay.

A three-year "master contract" setting the pattern of agreement was tentatively approved last week for New York and Atlantic ports. Among other things, it includes annual pay increase that would push the present $8-an-hour scale to $10.40 after two years.

Gleason said a New Orleans agreement would soon bring settlement by other shipping associations in the Gulf, including The Mobile (Ala.) Steamship Association and the West Gulf at Galveston, Texas.

The strike which started Oct. 1 was limited to container and barge-carrying ships, whose automated system of loading cargo has reduced the dock labor and thus eliminated many longshoremen's jobs.

On the Atlantic coast, ports have been hard hit by the strike because container shipping amounts to up to 85 percent of all cargo. Gulf ports handle less in container or barge shipping.

At New Orleans, container ships handle about 25 percent of the freight — less than that at some other Gulf ports.

Containers are about the size of trailer truck bodies. They arrive at the dock prepacked and are simply lifted aboard ship by cranes.

Counselors At Session

Three local school counselors participated in the Fall Conference of the North Carolina School Counselor Association held Nov. 10-11 at the Hilton Inn, Burlington.

Ann Bennett, Counselor at E.B. Aycock; Pat Kelly, Counselor at Elmhurst Elementary; and Elaine King, Counselor at Ayden Middle School, attended.

The conference was designed to give counselors across the state the opportunity to attend workshops related to current practices and update their information and skills on such topics as: Public Relations, Competency Based Testing, Licensure, Career Development, Child Abuse, and others.

Awards were given for outstanding Counselors in Elementary, Middle, Junior High, and Senior High settings along with an Administrator and Legislator of the year. The Awards Banquet was held at Elon College and hosted by the college.

Ann Bennett serves as president of the Mid-East Chapter of the North Carolina Personnel and Guidance Association.

The conference is one of the services provided by the North Carolina School Counselor Association, a division of the American School Counselor Association and the American Personnel and Guidance Association.

The public is invited.

Firm No To Water Loss

ROANOKE RAPIDS, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina will go to court if it has to in order to block use of North Carolina river water to serve Hampton Roads, Va., Gov. Jim Hunt said Monday.

Hunt's statement was read at a public hearing in Roanoke Rapids on a U.S. Army Corp of Engineers plan to take water from rivers near here for use in Virginia.

"We will oppose the construction of any intake on any North Carolina streams or any other stream that may adversely affect stream flows or water quality in North Carolina, or that is in violation of the riparian rights doctrine," Hunt's statement said.

The governor also urged landowners along the Roanoke and Chowan rivers to join in legal efforts to keep the water.

The corps has been considering taking water from the Roanoke River below Roanoke Rapids, from the Chowan River near Winton or from the Blackwater River, a tributary of the Chowan in Virginia.

Hunt said none of those alternatives was any good and all violated rights of North Carolinians downstream.

"Such withdrawals would increase wastewater treatment costs for our citizens, damage commercial and recreational fishing and disrupt ecological systems already in delicate balance," Hunt said.

The governor acknowledged in his statement, however, that the water dispute represented "a class of issues which North Carolina and Virginia must deal with in the future."

Will Celebrate Anniversary

Burned Home, And Got Rid Of Snakes

PRINCETON, N.C. (AP) — Edna Baker decided she'd rather destroy her home than share it with the snakes that had infested it, so she called in the fire department and had the century-old structure burned to the ground.

Mrs. Baker, a widow in her 60s, said the snakes began moving in with her last May, apparently slithering in from a swamp nearby.

She said she could hear them squirming around at night, dropping down the chimney or moving around under the house where she raised her children. She said she was losing her sleep.

Mrs. Baker was told there was only one way to kill the snakes and that was to burn the house. So she rented another house, cancelled her insurance policy and called in the firemen Monday.

"We threw some fuel in there, put some straw to make it catch and lit a match," said James Ray Johnson, chief of the Little River Volunteer Fire Department.

Johnson said 30 to 40 men and five trucks from the Little River and Nahant volunteer departments were on hand to supervise the burning, which took about two hours.

He said Mrs. Baker was not charged for the operation. "It was done as a service," Johnson said, adding, "If there were any snakes in that house, they're gone now. It was pretty hot in there."

Mrs. Baker hopes to rebuild on the property later.

Road Gangs On The Job

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Partly in response to citizens who missed them, prison road gangs have been restored to the North Carolina rural scene.

The road gang program was stopped in 1973 by the General Assembly, but there has been public pressure since then to reinstate it, according to Rep. Aaron Plyler, D-Monroe, chairman of the House Corrections Committee.

"We heard a great deal of comment from people on this," Plyler said. "A large number of citizens were in favor of this and constantly asked when prisoners would be back at work on the roads again."

"These men would rather be out working than sitting around the unit 24 hours a day doing nothing," he added. "This is good for the inmate, physically and mentally, and is also a benefit to the taxpayer, who is paying $13 or so a day to keep a man in prison."

It will cost considerably more to keep the same man on the road gang. The inmates will be paid 70 cents an hour, and extra guards will have to be hired to watch the medium custody prisoners at their jobs.

There will also be extra transport and work equipment. Altogether, Corrections officials estimate the program will cost about $4.4 million a year, or about $2,500 per prisoner.

The inmates will pick up trash, clean ditches and trim hedges. Officials said they would do nothing that would displace private citizens from their jobs.

Revival Series Is Underway

GRIMESLAND — Revival service is being held at St. Monica M.B. Church in Grimesland throughout this week.

There will be different choirs singing at each service. Services will be held at 7:30 p.m. The public is invited.

'77 COLDEST IN 37

Carolina In Deep Freeze

Shivering residents of North Carolina bundled up against the coldest weather in 37 years yesterday as temperatures dropped below zero in the early morning and never got above 17° all day. The National Weather Service station at the airport reported -2° at 6 a.m. The lowest reported at Kerr Scott Dam was -8° at 4 a.m., while many points in the mountains unofficially reported temperatures as low as -16°.

Nowhere in the state, not even along the coast, did temperatures rise above freezing. As the chill deepened state wide, weather service spokesmen offered no hope for relief in the near future, blaming the deep freeze on an arctic air mass moving slowly down from Canada.

Meanwhile counties across the state reported numerous school closings due to the cold weather, as pipes burst and school buses refused to start.

Homeowners Hit with High Fuel Bills

There were reports, too, of complaints about heating bills as frigid Carolinians turned up thermostats to Announce Planning Of 'New Horizons'

"New Horizons" plans occupied most of the NAACP executive committee meeting at the NAACP office at 403 Hudson Street last night.

New Horizons is to be carried out Feb. 11 and 12, the chairman of the special two days' event, D. D. Burge, said.

Annie M. Brown was appointed ticket distribution chairman; Rev. O'Kelly Lawson and D. D. Garrett, facilities chairman; Purvis Cohen, Willie Carney and the Rev. J. R. Person, program planners; and the Rev. John Taylor and Lemuel Clemons, publicity planners.

The speakers, Dudley Flood of the N. C. Department of Public Instruction, and Dr. Grady Davis of Shaw University, were confirmed. Flood will speak at the Youth and Adult Workshop planned for Saturday, Feb. 11 from 9 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. and Dr. Davis will speak at the mass meeting Sunday at 7 p.m.

Doris Lee, chairman of the Queen Contest, asked that youth and youth directors of the various churches contact her and/or attend a meeting to be held at the NAACP office Monday, Nov. 28, at 7 p.m. Her phone number is 752-4538.

York Memorial A. M. E. Church was accorded a $500 life membership.

Males Pick 'Anything'

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Anthropologist Margaret Mead summed it up this way: "Throughout history, females have picked providers for mates. Males pick anything."

"I had three very successful marriages," she added. "Good work came of each of them and I am on good terms with all three husbands to this day."

The good work was book writing. Miss Mead and her former husbands, all anthropologists, collaborated on most of her writing projects.

Miss Mead, curator emerita of ethnology at the American Museum of Natural History in New York, was in St. Louis to receive an award from the Religious Education Association.

The subject of her lecture Monday was "The Roots of Marital Disillusionment: the Changing Sex Roles."

"Nobody knows how to be married anymore," she said. "We have this antiquated notion of what marriage was. It used to be when we said, 'Til death do us part,' death parted us pretty soon. That's why marriages used to last forever. Everybody was dead."

Court Test On Porn Law

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The state's new anti-pornography law faces its first major test here next week when the case against the Camera's Eye goes into Superior Court.

Attorneys for the adult bookstore say they plan to ask for dismissal of the civil suit aimed at proving that the store is a public nuisance which should be shut down by the court.

Assistant Wake District Attorney Russell G. Sherrill III said that the court could forbid the owner of the store to sell obscene material anywhere else in the state as well.

But Sherrill said that provision of the law would be a main arguing point in the case.

If the court order barring the store owner from selling obscenity is not specific about the materials the judge means, it might interfere with the owner's constitutional rights, Sherrill said.

"The question is whether the court can draft an order specific enough to avoid problems of prior restraint," Sherrill said.

That same point is one reason that the North Carolina chapter of the American Civil Liberties Union to oppose the law.

"This law provides for the padlocking of a whole business if one article is found to be obscene," said ACLU executive director George Gardner. "This is a threat to everybody who operates a bookstore, a drugstore or a sundries store. And of course our basic objection is that it interferes with the individual's right of choice."

Adult bookstore owners in Fayetteville and Charlotte have asked federal courts to review the state law on constitutional grounds.

Death Ruled By Natural Causes

Pitt Medical Examiner Dr. Richard S. Vaughn has ruled that a 68-year-old Greenville man died of natural causes Monday afternoon on a farm some three miles from Greenville on the Old Creek Road.

Dr. Vaughn made his ruling in the death of Linwood S. Worthington of 303 Lewis Street.

Worthington had apparently been operating a tractor prior to his death but Vaughn said there was no evidence to indicate that the tractor overturned on the man.

Worthington, rescue reports noted, was dead on arrival at Pitt Memorial Hospital.

The accident was reported yesterday at 5:33 p.m.

Furman's Whitehurst Nearly Pulls Upset

By TOM SEPPY
AP Sports Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Washington Redskins still have hopes of making the National League Football playoffs as the wild card team, even if they almost were beaten by a spunky young club from Green Bay with the league's greenest quarterback.

It all came down to three plays in Monday night's television special. Scrambling Joe Theismann, under a heavy rush by the Packers defense, searched out running back Mike Thomas for a 7-yard touchdown pass to give the Redskins a 10-9 victory over the Packers.

The fourth-quarter score was set up by a 30-yard rifle shot from Theismann to Danny Buggs and a 12-yard scramble by the Redskins quarterback that put the ball at the 7.

"It was a tough one to lose," said Green Bay Coach Bart Starr. "The big play was the third down pass to Buggs and the scramble by Theismann was the back-breaker."

Theismann, who had a sporadic night in hitting only 10 of 21 for 124 yards and one interception, did not get into the groove until near the end. "I didn't throw well," he said. "I wasn't getting set. I saw the dogs (blitzers) coming and I hurried myself."

With previously untied quarterback David Whitehurst replacing the injured Lynn Dickey for Green Bay, Washington Coach George Allen tried to confuse the rookie by "using every dog in our play book, including a couple of new ones." But Whitehurst, an eighth-round draft choice from Furman, wasn't rattled, completing 12 of 24 for 144 yards though he suffered three interceptions in the second half — none of which the Skins managed to convert into scores. Whitehurst was sacked six times for 33 yards.

Whitehurst said the turnovers did hurt the team while the defensive unit "really played a hell of a game."

The rookie said he thought Washington would not score again after Chester Marcol broke a 3-3 tie with a 42-yard field goal in the third period. Marcol earlier had a 40-yard placement and Washington's Mark Moseley hit one from 35 yards.

After the Redskins scored the touchdown, Green Bay got another 44-yard field goal from Marcol with 4:16 remaining in the game, electing not to try for a first down on fourth-and-four.

The Redskins now stand at 6-4 and in third place in the NFC East behind Dallas 8-2 and St. Louis 7-3. They have a slim chance to make the playoffs as a wild card entry. They still have games remaining with both the Cardinals and Cowboys, including a contest with Dallas Sunday.

Yarborough Tops NASCAR Again

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Cale Yarborough was running at the finish of all 30 NASCAR events this year, the first time that's been done by anyone since such record-keeping started, circuit officials say.

Yarborough did it while en route to his second straight Grand National championship and while breaking his own 1976 money-winning record.

Total-finish records go back only until 1973, when the 30-race season format began. But a spokesman for the National Association for Stock Car Auto Racing said it is unlikely any champion before then completed every race.

It is definite none did since 1973 until Yarborough accomplished it — with some help of some speedy mid-race repairs a couple of times.

His third-place in the Times 500 at Ontario, Calif., Sunday ran his point total to an even 5,000 and his money winnings to $400,576. Still to be added are $10,000 for winning the third leg of the points-race season, $21,- 000 for overall winner and other bonuses.

He set a money record of $387,173 last year. Ricky Rudd, 21, of Chesapeake, Va., finished eighth at Ontario and won the rookie-of-the-year award, which includes $10,000 and a guaranteed $1,000 for each Grand National race he starts next year.

In the final point standings, six-times champion Richard Petty was second with 4,614, followed by Benny Parsons 4,570; Darrell Waltrip 4,498; Buddy Baker 3,961; Richard Brooks 3,742; James Hylton 3,476; Bobby Allison 3,467; Richard Childress 3,463 and Cecil Gordon 3,294.

In money winning, Petty was second with $318,425. Then came Parsons $268,806; Waltrip $254,243; Baker $188,081; David Pearson $175,561; Brooks $126,595; Donnie Allison $124,785; Neil Bonnett $107,180, and Hylton $89,330.

The 1978 season opens with the Western 500 at Riverside, Calif., Jan. 22.

Wide-Open Race If Texas Falls

By HERSCHEL NISSENSEN
AP Sports Writer

Texas, Alabama and Oklahoma held onto the top three spots in The Associated Press college football poll today while Rose Bowl-bound Michigan replaced arch-rival Ohio State in the No. 4 position.

However, should Texas stumble in either of its last two games, starting with No. 12 Texas A&M next weekend, a wide-open race is in prospect for the national championship, with only eighth-ranked Ohio State among the Top Ten showing as many as two defeats.

Texas, a 29-7 winner over Baylor last Saturday and the nation's only unbeaten-untied team, received 60 of 64 first-place votes and 1,272 of a possible 1,280 points from a nationwide panel of sports writers and broadcasters in the next-to-last poll of the regular season.

The final regular-season poll will be released at 6:30 p.m. EST next Monday, with the national championship poll following the bowl games.

Alabama and Oklahoma were idle last weekend. Bama received one first-place vote and 1,044 points while Oklahoma also earned one nomination as the No. 1 team and 998 points.

Michigan, which turned back Ohio State 14-6, climbed from fifth to fourth with 912 points while Notre Dame, which crushed Air Force 49-0, moved up from sixth to fifth with one first-place ballot and 732 points.

Arkansas, No. 8 a week ago, jumped to sixth with 606 points for a 47-7 rout of Southern Methodist. The other first-place vote went to Kentucky, which defeated Tennessee 21-17 and held onto seventh place with 600 points.

Ohio State barely made eighth place with 486 points over Penn State, idle last weekend. The Nittany Lions received 483 points while Pitt, also idle, remained No. 10 with 398 points.

The Second Ten consists of Nebraska, Texas A&M, Clemson, Washington, North Carolina, San Diego State, UCLA, Brigham Young, Arizona State and Florida State.

Last week it was Nebraska, Arizona State, Florida State, Texas A&M, Clemson, Texas Tech., BYU, North Carolina, Washington and UCLA.

Texas Tech was the only member of last week's Top Twenty to drop out. The Red Raiders suffered an embarrassing 45-7 walloping by Houston shortly after accepting a bid to the Tangerine Bowl.

Replacing Texas Tech in the rankings was San Diego State, which boosted its record to 9-1 by trouncing Florida State, Tech's Tangerine Bowl opponent, 41-16. San Diego appeared in the rankings for the first time this season.

The Top Twenty teams in The Associated Press college football poll, with first-place votes in parentheses, season records and total points. Points based on 20-18-16-14-12-10-9-8-7-6-5-4-3-2-1:

1. Texas (60) 10-0-0, 272
2. Alabama (1) 9-1-0, 044
3. Oklahoma (1) 9-1-0, 998
4. Michigan 10-1-0, 912
5. Notre Dame (1) 9-1-0, 732

6. Arkansas 9-1-0, 066
7. Kentucky (1) 10-1-0, 000
8. Ohio St. 9-2-0, 486
9. Penn St. 9-1-0, 483
10. Pittsburgh 8-1-1, 398
11. Nebraska 8-2-0, 324
12. Texas A&M 7-2-0, 238
13. Clemson 8-2-1, 164
14. Washington 7-4-0, 080
15. North Carolina 8-2-1, 76
16. San Diego St. 9-1-0, 49
17. UCLA 7-3-0, 45

Gold Captures Final Victory

The East Carolina University basketball team went through its final public scrimmage last night before an enthusiastic crowd made up mostly of ECU students last night in Minges Coliseum.

The Gold team gained a 112-98 win over the Purple, as the units put on a display of shooting ability.

All-America candidate Oliver Mack proved that he was human in the contest, as the units put on the display he usually does. The transfer junior collected only 26 points during the night as he made good on 13 of 24 field goals.

"He even does well when he has a bad night," Coach Larry Gillman said afterwards, referring to his 50-per cent plus shooting.

"Both he and Walter Moseley are coming off bouts with the flu," Gillman added.

Herb Gray of the Purple matched teammate Mack with 26 points, hitting 13 of 23 from the floor. He also led the team in rebounding with 12. Greg Cornelius added 20 points on nine of 14 field goals and two of four free throws. He collected seven rebounds.

Other Purple scorers included Kyle Powers with ten, Moseley with nine, Bernard Hill with seven, and Ron Stumpo and Don Whitaker with no points.

Whitaker and Hill played the first half with the Gold team, then switched to the Purple at halftime, as Powers and Moseley changed over to the Gold.

Whitaker had two points on the Gold, giving him two for the evening, while Powers had 12 points more, giving him a total of 22, including 10 for 14 from the floor and two for two from the line.

Moseley picked up ten more points on the Gold team, and was nine for 12 from the floor to finish with a total of 19. Hill added 12 more as a Gold team member to end up with 19 points also, and a total of 11 rebounds.

Herb Krusen led the Gold scoring with 28 points, hitting on 13 of 25 field goals and two of two free throws. Roger Carr had 25 points, with nine of 15 and seven for eight from the line. He led the team rebounding with nine.

Jim Ramsey hit on 10 of 20 shots from the floor and one of two from the line for 21 points. Other Gold scoring included Dean Hartley, two, while Gerry Kerr did not score.

Overall, the two teams hit 56.9 percent of their shots from the floor. The Purple hit 57.5 percent and the Gold, 56.3. From the line, they combined for 76.9 percent. The Gold hit on 14 of 17 for 82.4 per cent, while the Purple made six of nine for 66.7 per cent.

The Pirates will travel to the University of Indiana Saturday for their 1977-78 season opener. The game will be carried locally on WNCT-TV and WOOW radio.

Basketball Meetings

The Greenville Recreation and Parks Department will hold organizational meetings for basketball next Monday.

The women's meeting will be held at 7:30 p.m., with the men's at 8:30 p.m.

Both meetings will be held at the Elm Street Gym. All managers or team captains are urged to attend.

TIGERBELLE TUTOR

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Ed Temple, the celebrated coach of women's track and field teams, has a list of accomplishments that stretches farther out than his arm.

He has been the U.S. women's Olympic track and field coach twice, 1960 and 1964, two Pan-Am squads, teams touring Europe and the People's Republic of China. He created the Tigerbelles, women athletes who have won 20 Olympic medals, 26 Pan-Am medals and a host of national and international athletes.

HELP FOR KAREEM

LOS ANGELES (AP) — When the Los Angeles Lakers of the NBA signed Jamaal Wilkes, a 6-6 forward who had played out his option with the Golden State Warriors, they did so with an eye to helping their great center, Kareem Abdul-Jabbar.

"Having a shooter like Jamaal around is going to stop a lot of the double coverage other teams have been throwing at Kareem," Laker Coach Jerry West said.

Lopez In Title Loss

Greenville's Toney Lopez lost his World Super-light Karate title during a match in Japan last week.

The new champion is Kuwaki Nagae, who won the title on a split decision.

One judge gave the match to Lopez, while another gave it to Nagae. The third judge ruled the match a tie. The decision was then made by total points, and the judge who awarded the match to Nagae had given him more points than the judge who picked Lopez.

Nagae is expected to fight again this year, and will give Lopez a rematch in Las Vegas early in 1978.

"When you fight in another country and your opponent is from that country, you have to win decisively," Bill McDonald, trainer for Lopez, said. "We knew this before the fight, but took our chances and lost."

Rebuilding Year For Redskins

By JIM KYLE

Reflector Sports Writer— Though he terms this season a "rebuilding year," Roanoke coach Henry Land said he has hopes that his Redskins will have a better season than they did last year.

The Redskins lost four starters off last year's squad, along with most of the team's size, according to Land. This year's team is young and small, but a bit quicker and should do as well, if not better, than last year's 10-10 record.

"It's very hard to say" how Roanoke will fare, according to Land. "I'm thinking in terms of our inexperience. We have one starter back, forward-center Tim Highsmith. I hope we come along fairly well. I don't think we will be any worse than we were and I'm hoping to be much stronger within the conference."

The Redskins will utilize a "free-style" offense this year, according to Land. The team's only legitimate center, Tim's brother, Ronnie Highsmith, is in his first year of basketball and Land plans to bring him along slowly. For that reason, Roanoke will operate with three forwards much of the time.

Tim Highsmith, a 6-3 senior, will be one of the starters in the front court. He is an aggressive rebounder and good shooter from short range. Todd Bennett (6-2, senior) and Robert Cofield (6-0, senior) will probably be the other starters.

In addition, Land is hoping to get help at forward from Christopher Morning (6-3, junior) and Edward Ward (6-3, junior).

At the guard spots, Land has not chosen his starters yet. Three players are listed as "roughly" the strongest candidates for starting spots, he said, Jasper Martin (5-9, junior), Sutton Edmondson (5-11, junior) and Larry Williams (5-10, senior). Martin has looked the best in practice and Williams is also a good player, although he may be slow coming around due to football.

Ronnie Highsmith (6-5, junior) at center may not help the team much early in the year, Land said, but "we are sort of looking ahead on him." He should come around this year or next year, according to the coach.

The Redskins this season "have more spirit within the core of the team" than in recent years, Land said. The practice sessions so far have been enthusiastic, although the team has only had time to work on defense.

The Eastern Plains conference race should see Elm City at the top again, although North Johnston has more experience returning. "We could be up there to the top," according to Land, if the Redskins' youthful players develop well.

Free Agents Sign Pacts; Coach, Executive Likely To Move, Too

Baseball's free agents are on the move again. But this time, they'll have to share some of the spotlight with a coach and two of baseball's most successful executives.

Free agents Lyman Bostock, Mike Torrez and Dick Drago signed multi-year contracts Monday, but they weren't the only members of baseball's family who packed their bags and were heading elsewhere.

Harry Dalton was named as the Milwaukee Brewers' new general manager while New York Yankees' General Manager Gabe Paul and Coach Bobby Cox appear ready to take over as chief executive in Cleveland and manager of the Atlanta Braves respectively.

Bostock became, in his own words, the highest paid player in the history of baseball when he signed a reported five-year contract with the California Angels for $3 million.

"As far as I know, I'm the highest paid ballplayer," Bostock said.

The 27-year-old outfielder, who played out his option with the Minnesota Twins, batted .336 this season, second in the American League to teammate Rod Carew. Bostock hit 14 home runs, 12 triples, three doubles, and drove in 90 runs. He had 199 hits and scored 104 runs.

The Boston Red Sox, who always seem to have plenty of hitters in the lineup, moved to bolster their pitching staff and dug deep into the cash till to sign veteran pitchers Torrez and Drago.

Torrez, who won two games for the Yankees in the World Series, reportedly agreed to a seven-year $2 million contract after a 17-13 season.

"We think Torrez will be a big help to us," Red Sox General Manager Haywood Sullivan said. "In fact, when I called our manager, Don Zimmer, this morning to tell him the news, he laughed and said 'Oh, the pressure really on us to win now.'"

Drago, who had a previous stint with Boston, had a 6-4 record while pitching mostly in relief for the California Angels and Baltimore Orioles this season.

Dalton, who helped build two world champions at Baltimore in the 60s and early 70s, stressed that hiring a manager wasn't his top priority as he took over in Milwaukee.

"Unlike some of you, I don't think there's a great urgency to name a manager. I have no self-imposed deadlines. I'd rather wait 45 or 50 days and pick the right man."

Dalton said he has three immediate projects with the Brewers.

First, he wants to upgrade the farm system by signing more players and adding a farm club. Second, he will try to sign a few free agents and, finally, he'll be trying to make a few trades.

Paul, who is on vacation in Puerto Rico, is mulling over a return to Cleveland, where he was general manager from 1961 to 1972.

Cox, who played two years with the Yankees and compiled a .224 lifetime batting average, is expected to be named the seventh Atlanta manager since the team moved from Milwaukee in 1966 at a news conference at 3 p.m. EST today.

Cox, 36, would become the youngest manager in major league baseball.

Pirates Fare Well In Event

CHAPEL HILL — After a somewhat disappointing showing at the Monarch Wrestling Classic two weeks ago, the East Carolina wrestling team came back to have their best showing of the young season this past weekend at the Carolina Invitational.

The Pirates were able to win two weight classes, take four seconds, two third and two fourths at Chapel Hill.

D. T. Joyner and Jay Dever came through with the victories for the Pirates. Joyner at heavyweight and Dever at 177.

Joyner was devastating beating Payne of Old Dominion, 9-0, pinning Misner of Appalachian, and defeated Kehs of Duke in the finals by a 7-0 count.

Dever won over Watkins of North Carolina in the quarterfinals, 12-4, bested the Tar Heel's Walker in the semis, 7-6, and beat the Pirates Solomon "Butch" Revils in the finals, 3-1.

Revils took the 177 pound title in the Monarch tourney.

Vic Northrup took second in the 167 pound weight class, bowing to Carolina's Barnard in the finals 4-1. Northrup beat Stewart of Virginia, 9-4, Benfield of ASU, 4-2, and Mitchell of UNC, 6-4, to make it to the finals.

Bob Passino, wrestling at 118, took second place when State's Jim Zenz defeated him, 10-2, in the finals. Passino pinned ODU's Derricott, Appalachian's Ross and Carolina's Wing to make a strong showing coming into the final.

Barry Purser placed second in the 190 pound weight class, losing the finals to State's Joe Lidowski by a 7-2 count. Purser beat Duke's Theilman and the Heels' Quail to make the finals.

Three of the Pirate placers in the finals were freshmen—Passino, Northrup and Revils—while Dever is a sophomore and Joyner and Purser are juniors.

Steve Goode placed third in the 158-pound weight class, while James Kirby did the same at 142. Fourth place finishers for the Bucs were Frank Schaefer at 150 and Ronnie Goodall at 190.

Pirate standout Paul Osman, a 134 pound performer was unable to wrestle due to an injury sustained at Old Dominion.

The Pirates will return to action when they travel to Bethlehem, Pa., December 9-10, to wrestle in a quad meet with Oregon State, Lehigh and East Stroudsburg State. Oregon State finished fifth in the NCAA championships last year, while Lehigh was seventh. East Stroudsburg also finished in the top twenty.

Fuller-Butler Duo No Fluke

By BILL WELCH
Associated Press Writer

When Clemson's 24-point lead turned into a 3-point deficit with just seconds left against their biggest rival, the Steve Fuller-Jerry Butler duo displayed why the Tigers' remarkable season has been no fluke.

It would have been hard to top for drama and pressure. Playing arch-rival South Carolina in Columbia on television in the final game with a Gator Bowl berth at stake, both were as cool as if the game was in a sand lot.

With less than two minutes on the clock, Fuller ran and threw the 15th ranked Tigers from his own 33 to the Gamecock 20. And with 49 seconds to go, Butler changed his pass route and got open at the goal line, made a leaping catch between defenders and fell into the end zone.

That finished the scoring 31-27. It's the final Associated Press Play of the Week in the Atlantic Coast Conference this season.

"It's impossible to coach something like that," Tiger coach Charley Pell said Monday. "Because with a receiver like Jerry Butler, it's not coaching and it's not the play, it's the player that makes the difference."

Clemson had a first down and two time outs left. The play was a simple sprint pass with an option designed to allow a short reception or an out of bounds throw to stop the clock.

"It's a very basic play. It's as basic a play as there is in football," Pell said. "It just so happens there were very great players on both ends of the football and a very great line."

Instead of cutting to the sidelines after about five yards, Butler saw South Carolina's cornerback come in. He made a fake to the sidelines, then headed to an open spot at the goal line, turning back to face Fuller for the leaping catch.

"The ball was a little high, but I can't fault Steve," Butler said. "It wasn't something I couldn't catch and it wasn't something we haven't worked on. I kept my eyes on the ball and tried to hang on."

Pell called the catch "fantastic," and said the throw was "intelligent," because it kept the ball out of the linebackers' reach.

"The play was designed to stop the clock. But Steve has the option to go to another receiver and Jerry has the option to change his route," Pell said. "That's what happened. Jerry was getting a lot of pressure to the outside and he just turned upfield and made a great catch."

The game-saving play ended Clemson's season with an 8-2-1 mark and second place in the ACC, their best record since 1959. The Tigers, who finished in the conference cellar last year, will face Pitt in the Gator Bowl, their first bowl trip since that same year when they won the Bluebonnet Bowl.

McGee Given Pact Extension

By BILL WELCH
Associated Press Writer

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Duke University athletic officials have awarded head football coach Mike McGee a new contract, despite his team's disappointing 5-6 record this season.

"I am indeed grateful to the university for their affirmation of our team, our staff and our work," McGee, obviously pleased, said at a press conference where Athletic Director Tom Butters made the announcement.

Butters refused to give the length of McGee's new contract, but said he was restating the school's determination to have a winning football program.

McGee, 38, a former lineman and winner of the Outland Trophy as a senior at Duke in 1959, has been head coach for seven years, during which time his teams have posted a 33-40-4 record. He has not won six games in one season since 1974.

The announcement ended weeks of speculation that McGee, whose contract expired this year, would be replaced.

That speculation peaked after Duke's 16-3 loss to rival North Carolina last Saturday, which was followed by McGee's vow not to resign.

"I am totally committed to a winning football program. Any other decision would have, at this time, been inconsistent with the principle by which I believe excellence should be attained," said Butters. "Our objective is not only to attain success, but to sustain it and that requires principles, values and dignity."

Butters said Duke will try to improve its program, but will not relax its admissions policy, which has limited Duke from going after some players that can be admitted at some other schools in the area.

"That which has restrained his opportunity to be totally successful in the win column has been carefully examined, and insofar as it is consistent with university guidelines, those problems will be resolved," Butters said.

"You can have good football in the same setting with great excellence of academics," McGee said.

How's The Weather?

WEATHER FORECAST Snow flurries are forecast today from the northern Rockies through most of the northern Plains. Rain is due from central Texas to the central Plains and throughout much of the East. Warm weather is expected in the Southeast but most of the country will be cold. (AP Laserphoto Map)

By The Associated Press
A cold front has become stationary over western North Carolina, meaning more mild weather with some scattered rain or showers.

The front will not bring cold air but will weaken in its present position, leaving warmer air over most of the state. It will be cloudy over most of North Carolina today, while the sun will break through the clouds along the coast.

As the front neared the mountains Monday, clouds increased and thickened over the mountains and through the Piedmont. Later in the day some light rain fell in the mountains, but the National Weather Service offices at Asheville, Charlotte and Greensboro reported only traces.

Temperatures ranged from the mid-70s in the East to the 50s in the mountains. The highest recorded were 74 at Fayetteville, Goldsboro and Wilmington.

Overnight conditions remained about the same with it cloudy in the West and mostly clear along the coast. By early morning the temperatures were down to the upper 40s to mid 50s.

The recreational weather outlook calls for little change through Wednesday, while cloudy in the West with light occasional rain. Central areas of the state will be partly cloudy with some scattered showers while coastal areas will have some sunshine. There is a chance for isolated showers along the coast. Thursday through Saturday will be the same with a chance of scattered showers each day.

FBI Tells Disruptive Tactics

By MARGARET GENTRY
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Wildly imaginative tactics, some of doubtful legality, marked a 15-year FBI campaign to disrupt dissident groups. But many of the operations were failures even by the bureau's own standards.

The operations were detailed in 52,648 pages of counter-intelligence files the FBI released Monday under terms of the Freedom of Information Act.

The heavily censored files, covering activities from 1956 to 1971, describe the FBI's attempts to harass and disrupt groups ranging from the Southern Christian Leadership Conference and the Ku Klux Klan to the Black Panthers and the Students for a Democratic Society.

The bureau already has released much material on the programs, dubbed Cointelpro by the bureau. Both the Justice Department and the Senate Intelligence Committee have said many of the activities were illegal, but department officials concluded that criminal prosecutions were unwarranted.

What the latest files made clear was that the bureau launched Cointelpro with little apparent thought to its effectiveness, much less its legality. A favorite Cointelpro tactic was anonymous letters and leaflets. Parents of student protesters received mysterious missives, often signed "Concerned Friend," warning of drug use whether it was true or not. Black Muslims in New York received comic books ridiculing Muslim leaders. Communist Party members received unsigned leaflets designed to foment dissension within the party.

But the FBI had no way of judging what impact such activities were having. Field offices frequently reported to headquarters that "no tangible results" were produced.

FBI agents in several offices told of efforts to pit one protest group against another. But often they reported that rivalry and internal dissension already were rampant and that no help from the bureau was needed.

San Francisco agents, however, claimed success in 1971 for an effort to split the Black Panther Party into warring factions supporting Eldridge Cleaver, in exile in Algeria at that time, and Huey P. Newton.

The Cleaver-Newton split was widely reported at the time. Although the FBI took credit for it in internal memos, the reports listed no factual evidence to back the claim.

Other memos show that Washington officials often rejected field office proposals with a strong potential for disruption, not because of qualms about the propriety of such acts but because of fear that the FBI involvement would be publicized and would "embarrass the bureau."

Other ideas were rejected because headquarters officials considered them unnecessary, such as a proposal to install an FBI man as imperial wizard of the Ku Klux Klan. That idea was shelved in 1967 on grounds that the FBI already had enough informers in the Klan.

Various protest groups became Cointelpro targets after Director J. Edgar Hoover and his chief aides concluded that they were threats to domestic security. The protests had erupted in numerous violent incidents, and the bureau was under pressure to stop the disorders.

Will Train Counselors

More than 300 professional counselors who advise, aid and train the unemployed will attend training workshops developed at the Division of Continuing Education at North Carolina State University.

The workshops, which are sponsored by the Division of Community Employment of the N.C. Department of Human Resources, will meet in Boone, Dec. 12-15; Greensboro, Jan. 30; Feb. 2; Greenville, Feb. 7-10; and Raleigh, March 6-9.

Funded under the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act (CETA) of the U.S. Department of Labor, the training workshops will draw on the expertise of NCSU, UNC-Chapel Hill, East Carolina University, UNC-Greensboro, and Appalachian State University.

The objective of the workshops is to have the CETA counselors develop effective counseling skills through instruction, demonstration, and practice.

Few Asked For Flood Coverage

ASHEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Insurance damage claims in flood-devastated western North Carolina will total less than $600,000, even though damage estimates are running in the millions of dollars. The reason: hardly anyone was insured.

Bill Harris of the Federal Insurance Administration said only 287 flood policies were in effect when the waters hit. Residents of 37 western communities are eligible for such insurance.

"Private insurance companies lost interest long ago in selling flood insurance," Harris said. "It's a money-losing proposition because floods are difficult to project. But the federal government recognizes the need and began this program to provide insurance for communities who have a high risk of flood."

Harris said people living in a designated flood-hazard area have a one-in-four chance of being flooded if they have a 30-year mortgage.

Local insurance agents reported an increase in requests for flood insurance immediately after the Nov. 4-6 floods, but apparently the interest has waned.

"My telephone rang off the wall the day after the flood," said Al Pfirrmann, a claims adjuster for the Kemper Insurance Group here. "It has calmed down a lot now."

Jeanette Rollins, an agent for the Hyde Insurance Company here, said "apparently, people are not buying flood insurance," but said her company has trained its agents in flood coverage and are trying to interest local residents.

"We are particularly worried about flooding next spring," she said.

Harris said flood-insurance premiums, because of the federal support, are relatively low, ranging between 25 and 40 cents per $100 of coverage.

Yankees Like To Think Of Them As Just Yams

By DAVID TOMLIN
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — If yams figure at all in your Thanksgiving Day plans, you've been taken in by the cheerful hype with which North Carolina has become the nation's top yam producer — without producing a single yam.

What they grow here are sweet potatoes. But Dixie marketing wizards have found that Yankees like to think of them as yams and will buy more of them if they go by that name.

So it's official. There's even an outfit here called the North Carolina Yam Commission, which isn't really a commission but a grower cooperative whose principal job is to sell North Carolina sweet potatoes.

Under the leadership of executive secretary Robert Jenkins, the commission has had stunning success. In the past 10 years North Carolina sweet potato production has increased 400 per cent and now stands at about 9 million bushels, tops in the nation and 35 per cent of the U.S. crop.

Jenkins says the confusion between yams and sweet potatoes probably began with African slaves who ate yams in their homeland and thought the sweet potatoes they found here were the same thing.

"The Senegalese word for yam is 'yah-mah' or something like that," Jenkins asserts.

However it happened, the damage was done, and the name of the sweet potato became interchangeable with that of its botanical relative the yam, which isn't even grown on a commercial scale in this country.

Jenkins says in many places now yam is the preferred term and it's just plain easier to sell the sweet potatoes that way.

"We're not trying to justify it," he says. "I'd like to call it a sweet potato. But some of our brethren up north just like to call them yams. It's impossible to convince them they're two different things. So we use the terms interchangeably now."

Jenkins masterminded a national advertising and public relations campaign 10 years ago on behalf of the sweet potato. At the same time, state-supported research at North Carolina State University developed the "jewel" variety of sweet potato, a more toothsome strain than had been produced before.

Those two developments, he says, are responsible for North Carolina's surge past Louisiana into the number one position in yam production — worth $33 million to the state last year.

"My goal is $100 million by 1982," says Jenkins. "We've just scratched the surface."

Bikini Contest Raised Money

WINTERVILLE — The Winterville Jaycees held a Bikini Contest to raise money for the North Carolina "Ten Million Penny Project" Saturday at the Elbo Room in Greenville.

Money from the project will go towards building a swimming pool at Camp Sertoma near Winston-Salem.

The Winterville Jaycees raised $651.32 which was given to the Easter Seal Society for the construction of the pool.

Edgar Wall, chairman, expressed his appreciation to all those who contributed to the success of the contest.

The victims in seven out of every 10 fatalities from falls are elderly persons. Most of these accidents occur in the home.

'COPTER COMPLEX

There could be as many as 120 'copters on or buzzing about the huge facility on the Military Reservation at Indiantown Gap, Pa. It's the country's largest Army National Guard helicopter support facility, opened in March 1975. It cost $5 million and has 72 acres of landing pads, taxiways, tie down pads and fuel storage areas. Then there's a hangar big enough to house three football fields; classrooms are already in use and a "synthetic flight trainer" with three mockups is due to open in September. Fulltime pilots, mechanics and crew chiefs number about 100—attached to the facility, also, are some 500 Guardsmen: an aviation battalion, an aviation company and an air assault group.

The bidding:

1 ♠ Pass 2 ♠ 2 ♥
2 ♠ Pass 3 ♠ Pass
4 ♠ Pass Pass Pass
Opening lead: Two of ♥.

What do you lead from three worthless cards in a suit partner has bid? The usual choice is "top of nothing," but a convincing argument can be made for selecting the lowest. Consider this hand, where South became declarer at four spades after a routine auction.

West led his lowest heart, won by the ace in dummy. Declarer drew trumps in three rounds, then ran the queen of clubs. In with the king of clubs, East surveyed the defensive prospects. It was reasonable to assume that both high diamonds would cash, and that would give the defenders their book. However, since it was obvious that West held a near yarrowborough, where was the setting trick coming from?

Had the opening lead been the "top of nothing," East would have had an insoluble problem. He would have had no way of knowing whether West had started with two or three hearts, so he might have tried to cash the king of hearts—with devastating results.

The actual opening lead of the two of hearts meant that West had to have either one or three hearts. Since East could see that declarer held a minimum in high cards, it was more than likely that declarer held some distributional values for his decision to go on to four spades. What could be more probable than that he, rather than West, held the singleton heart?

Obviously, therefore, the defenders had to rely on the diamond suit to produce three tricks in order to beat the game. If West held the queen, the contract was always down. But there was the possibility, that West held the jack.

To cater to this, East shifted to a low diamond. Declarer decided that the king-jack of hearts, ace-jack of diamonds, king of clubs and a singleton spade were enough for an overcall, so he opted to finesse the nine. West was surprised to win the jack, but he recovered sufficiently to continue the suit and defeat the contract.

Cousteau Special Goes Into Story Of Britannic

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Another season of Jacques Cousteau's underwater specials always is good news. The good news, a series called "The Cousteau Odyssey," starts on public TV tonight in most cities.

His one-hour premiere show — there'll be three more this season — concerns a World War I controversy: the sinking in 1916 of a British hospital ship, the Britannic, in the Aegean Sea near Greece.

No wounded were aboard at the time, although the Britannic, sister ship of the Titanic, carried 1,136 persons — nurses, doctors and the crew. Fortunately, all but 30 survived the sinking.

Cousteau & Co. set out in this well-photographed show to explore the ship and such questions as:

— Was the Britannic sunk by a German torpedo or a mine?

— Was it, in violation of the rules of war, carrying either war material or fresh troops headed for combat?

— Why did the huge ship, supposedly made sturdier after the Titanic's fatal pause to take on ice, sink so quickly?

The show opens with Cousteau chatting about the sinking with eight elderly survivors, all but one convinced the ship was torpedoed.

Then the deep-dive research gets under way. As with many Cousteau specials, there's an almost-obligatory moment of mild tension.

Seems the crew of his ship, the Calypso, even though aided by sonar, has trouble finding the sunken hulk of the Britannic.

But all ends well, of course, and a three-man team of divers is dispatched 370 cold, dangerous feet beneath the Aegean to study the barnacle and coral-encrusted remains of the ship.

Wearing tanks of oxygen, nitrogen and helium, they only can stay down 15 minutes because of the extreme pressure. Then they must spend nearly three hours in a decompression chamber.

It's hard, physically difficult work for young men. But even Cousteau, at 67, makes the dive — which says something not only about his curiosity but also of a wonderful spirit undamaged by age.

An equally moving moment comes when Sheila Mitchell, 86, a volunteer nurse aboard the Britannic when it sank, eagerly climbs in a special diving saucer for a close-up look at the ship.

An animated, lively woman who now lives in Edinburgh,

Scotland, she obviously is having the time of her life as she takes her first look at the colors of Cousteau's underwater world.

As for the answers Cousteau sought to the sinking, well, suffice it to say they'll disappoint those who thought the Britannic carried war goods or was done in by a heartless German U-boat captain.

The show was made for KCET as part of a three-season series the Atlantic Richfield Co. has bankrolled for nearly $4 million. If the premiere is typical, the bankroll is being well-spent.

Deadline On FHA Loans

The deadline for applying for a low interest emergency loan made by Farmers Home Administration (FmHA) as a result of summer drought conditions in some N. C. counties is December 2, 1977, according to James T. Johnson, FmHA State Director. The deadline was designated by the federal interagency Drought Emergency Coordinating Committee.

Farm emergency loans covering losses from drought and providing additional credit needed to restore production are available to farmers who lack other sources of credit.

The drought loan program is not to be confused with the recent presidential designation of a major disaster area as a result of floods in western N. C. counties, Johnson said.

Further information may be obtained at local FmHA offices in most counties, listed under U. S. Government, Department of Agriculture. Loans are made without discrimination as to race, sex, religion, national origin, or marital status.

Big Snow As Blizzard Hit Northern Plains

By The Associated Press
Bitter cold gripped the northern Plains today and a storm dumped up to eight inches of new snow on southern Idaho and southwestern Wyoming.

where as much as 18 inches of snow fell in a record-breaking autumn blizzard over the weekend.

The latest storm battered Utah on Monday with winds gusting to 100 mph, damaging houses and closing roads with blowing snow. Little new snow was reported in that state.

As well as continued heavy snow warnings for parts of Idaho and Wyoming, travelers' advisories were posted for portions of Oregon, the northern California mountains, northern Nevada and northwestern Utah. Temperatures dipped as low as 13 degrees below zero early today in Montana.

The storm also brought some relief to drought-stricken northern California, dumping up to 6½ inches of rain in Marin County. However, officials said the area would need nine more such storms to end the drought.

The weekend storm was evident only in a gale over Lake Superior, northern Lake Michigan and Lake Huron. Eight-foot waves were expected along the eastern side of Lake Michigan, which braced for lowland flooding and beach erosion.

Early morning showers continued in a band from eastern New England across Virginia and the southern Appalachians, over the central Gulf Coast into the northwestern Gulf of Mexico as well as over southern Florida.

Early morning temperatures around the nation ranged from 13 degrees below zero at Havre, Mont., to 76 at Key West and West Palm Beach, Fla.

The national forecast called for widespread snow over the central and northern plateau region through the northern Rockies. Rain was predicted for the central and northern Pacific Coast with snow in higher elevations. A few snow showers will dot the northern Plains and upper Mississippi Valley.

Rain showers were forecast to scatter over the middle and southern Atlantic Coast states, the Gulf states and the Tennessee and Ohio valleys. Showers and occasional thunderstorms were expected over the central Gulf Coast.

Mostly sunny skies were predicted for New England and the Southwest.

The central and northwestern portions of the nation expected continued cold, while cool temperatures were forecast for the Southwest and Northeast. Mild readings were predicted for the southern Atlantic and Gulf coasts.

Snow depths ranged from 3 to 20 inches, and in open areas blizzard conditions prevailed. (AP Laserphoto)

Holiday Schedule

Thursday and Friday are normal Thanksgiving holidays for city employees and the Sanitation Division of the Public Works Department will observe the two days, according to Mayo Allen, department director.

Allen said that the containerized trucks will return to work Saturday at 4 a.m. to service all containers located downtown and all business establishments and apartments.

In residential sections, all backyard garbage cans will be emptied on regular routes on Monday and Tuesday, the director reported.

The city landfill will be closed Thanksgiving day only and any Greenville citizen wishing to take trash or garbage to the landfill may do so Friday and Saturday, Allen said.

The Greenville Transit System (GREAT) will also be closed on Thanksgiving with normal operations resuming Friday morning.

"We at Public Works appreciate your cooperation in working with us so that we may enjoy Thanksgiving with our families," Allen added. "If any citizens should suffer hardships because of lack of service during these holidays, please call the Public Works Department at 752-4137 before 3 p.m. on Wednesday."

Hotel Building Has New Name

The Proctor Hotel building at the northeast corner of Evans Mall, more recently known as the Cherry Building, has had a name change reflecting the identity of its new owner, Mrs. John F. Minges.

According to records on file with the Pitt County Register of Deeds, Mrs. Minges purchased the property from Cherry Oaks Inc. in August for $214,000. The new Minges Building sign went up recently.

The building, formerly a hotel now houses a First State Bank office; Crego's Shoe Store; Coffman's 10-20 Shop; Milady Beauty Shop; the Pipeline Restaurant; Liberty Loan Corporation; The Shaklee Shoppe; Howard, Vincent and Duffus Attorneys; Stroud Engineering; James Bullock, Attorney; Charles "Sonny" McLawhorn, Attorney; The Iron Horse; Equitable Life Insurance; and Gary Gasperini Insurance Agency.

Productive Communications; Eastern Health Services and a Jesse Helms for the U. S. Senate campaign office are three of the firms which will occupy the portion of the third floor and the fourth floor now being completed, according to Butch Grubbs of Clark and Grubbs Realty Company, the leasing agent for the building.

According to records at the Pitt County Tax Supervisor's office, the building, which includes some 6,994 square feet of space, is valued at $163,545, while the 87 by 132 lot is valued at $38,980, for a total value of $202,525.

Cherry Oaks Inc. acquired the building in December, 1974 and converted it into an office-shop facility.

FORECAST FOR WEDNESDAY, NOV. 23, 1977

Your Daily HOROSCOPE

from the CARROLL RIGTER INSTITUTE

GENERAL TENDENCIES: You are tempted now to spend money in a manner that is not wise, so think in terms of being more frugal. Handle a business matter in a precise and conscientious manner.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Make sure you use your energies wisely now instead of putting forth wasted effort. Take no chances with your reputation.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Taking the right health and beauty treatments now will improve your appearance considerably. Keep your emotions under control.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) A private affair needs your undivided attention so be sure to give it and not try to run away from it. Avoid a troublemaker.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) You think a friend has not been loyal and you want to berate this person, but remain silent for best results.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Make sure you take no risks where your reputation is concerned. Don't neglect an important business appointment. Be cheerful.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) You may want to engage in a new venture but it's more important to finish business at hand first. Forget the social for now.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Make sure you keep promises you have made to others. Help your mate to reach worthwhile aims. Be wise.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Be sure you don't renege on promises to associates. A civic matter could be trying but be patient and conditions will improve.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) You can easily solve a problematical affair if you apply yourself in the right manner. Show that you have poise.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) A time to make long-range plans to have greater abundance. Try not to lose your temper with a co-worker.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Study practical affairs well at home and handle them wisely. Not a good day to engage in a new project. Relax tonight.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Listen carefully to whatever associates say now instead of being so concerned with your work exclusively. Use care in motion.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will be capable of solving personal problems wisely, but teach to be more objective for best results. Give as fine an education as you can afford. A good ethical, moral and spiritual training is needed here.
