Some Fear India's Death Toll Could Mount To 20,000

By GENE KRAMER
Associated Press Writer

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — The stench of rotting corpses and a pall of smoke from funeral pyres blanket stretches of India's southeast coast where a cyclone and tidal waves killed at least 10,000 persons last weekend.

The Times of India said the death toll could reach 20,000, and tens of thousands of survivors were homeless.

The stricken state of Andhra Pradesh was "hell on earth," one newspaper report said.

Officials said as many as 100 villages were washed away by the towering waves generated by the storm. Countless bloated human corpses and animal carcasses were seen floating in flood waters.

"Overnight, villages have been turned into burial grounds," said the state education minister, Khrishna Rac, after a tour.

He reported roads blocked by masses of uprooted trees and debris in which bodies of cattle and humans were tangled.

Bodies that could not be identified immediately were being burned on huge funeral pyres in an attempt to prevent the outbreak of disease. A reporter for the Samachar new agency said he saw thousands of corpses and carcasses in the worst-hit district of Divi Taluk.

"In some villages, the living were struggling for survival and have no time to attend to the dead," he reported. "They are so shocked they have ceased to cry."

The toll in Divi Taluk was estimated at 8,000 dead and the damage at $230 million. The state government estimated a total of at least 1.5 million acres of crops were destroyed, including banana and rice plantations, and floods covered more than 200 square miles of land.

Air force and navy planes and helicopters dr than 10 tons of food to isolated areas, but many stranded hungry survivors still had not been located, officials said.

CARE and United Nations organizations provided relief clothing, tarpaulins and cooking utensils.

It was the country's worst storm disaster since 1971, when a cyclone, the name used for hurricanes from the Indian Ocean, killed an estimated 10,000 persons in Orissa state, 750 miles to the north.

Retaliation: Palestinian Officials Being Expelled

CAIRO (AP) — Egypt is cracking down on Palestinians in Cairo in retaliation for the radical Arabs' war on President Anwar Sadat.

A Palestinian spokesman said three top Palestinian officials were arrested Tuesday night and would be expelled from the country. It appeared likely that the government would close the Palestine Liberation Organization's office in the Egyptian capital.

The officials were Gamal Sourani, the PLO's permanent representative; Ribhi Awad, representative of Al Fatah, the largest guerrilla group in the PLO, and Ahmed Sakhr Basaso, head of the Palestinian Student Union.

Last week the government closed down the Palestinians' Cairo radio station after it broadcast a PLO statement denouncing Sadat's visit to Israel.

The PLO speaks today in the U.N. General Assembly debate on the Middle East and was certain to condemn Sadat. It was not known whether Egypt's ambassador to the United Nations, A. Esmat Abdel Meguid, would boycott the session or would walk out when the attack started.

Meguid on Tuesday left the assembly hall when Syrian Ambassador Mowaffak Allaf accused the Egyptian president of "surrendering to the Zionist butchers" and "stabbing the Arab peoples in the backs" by visiting Israel.

It was the first time an Arab delegate had walked out on another Arab delegate's speech at the United Nations.

Sadat has said repeatedly he would not make a separate peace with Israel, and during his visit to Jerusalem he reiterated the Arab demands for Israel's withdrawal from all territory occupied in the 1967 war and for a Palestinian state. But the Syrians and the Palestinians fear he will come to terms with Israel without getting satisfaction for their demands, as he did in the Sinai disengagement agreement of 1975, and Syria was reported preparing to introduce a U.N. resolution demonstrating this fear.

An informed diplomat said the resolution, after expressing satisfaction with last month's U.S.-Soviet statement in favor of a Geneva conference and Palestinian rights, "urges the parties to the conflict and all other parties to avoid any partial agreement or arrangement which ignores the core of the problem."

The "core of the problem" to the Palestinians is their demand for their own state on the West Bank of the Jordan River, while to the Syrians it is the return of the Golan Heights.

Syria and the PLO, in a statement issued in Damascus Tuesday, called on all the Arabs and the rest of the world to join in condemnation of Sadat's visit to Jerusalem.

The leftist Arab governments in Iraq, Libya, Algeria and South Yemen also have denounced Sadat as a traitor to Arab unity, while Sudan, Tunisia, Morocco and Oman have supported him. Other Arab governments have been silent.

CONFISCATED MARIJUANA — Greenville Police yesterday arrested three men on marijuana possession charges and confiscated 12 pounds of the illegal weed following a search of a West Fifth Street dwelling shortly before noon.

Arthritis Is Stopping Noted Heart Surgeon

By MAUREEN JOHNSON
Associated Press Writer

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Ten years after he performed the world's first successful heart transplant, Dr. Christiaan Barnard is getting ready to put away his scalpel because of arthritis in his hands.

"I operated yesterday ... it was absolute agony," the 55-year surgeon said in an interview a few days ago.

"Every stitch that I put in and tie is such an agony. I felt so bad I started using cortisone again, the last thing I want to use.

"It is difficult to say just how long I've got. But I think I probably will — maybe — last until the end of next year, and that will probably be the end."

Barnard has traveled a long road since Dec. 2, 1967, when with suit crumpled and hair untidy, he told a news conference in a rolling Afrikaans accent that he had cut out the ailing heart of a businessman and replaced it with the heart of a 25-year-old girl killed that day in a road accident.

A decade later the clothes are immaculate. A heavy gold watch gleams as he excitedly describes his latest surgical activity, criticizes the press, declares he would fight to prevent black rule in his racially divided country and concedes defeat in his latest attempts to save two cardiac victims by transplanting baboon and chimpanzee hearts into them.

The doctor says he has changed little in the past 10 years, except to become suspicious of people. This he blames on the mass media, which he accuses of exploiting him personally, causing heart donors to shun him and of misrepresenting South Africa generally.

There are other changes. He is no longer a little-known surgeon living in a modest suburban home with a wife his own age and two teen-age children.

Now he is a jet-setter who has mixed with heads of state and film stars and who has a rich wife half his age. He is in constant demand as a guest speaker or sponsor of causes.

His take-home pay as a surgeon at Cape Town's Groote Schuur Hospital and as a medical professor is $1,300 a month. He gave the proceeds of his most successful book, "One Life," to a medical research fund named after him, but he estimates he has earned $230,000 from his other books.

His 27-year-old second wife, Barbara, is the daughter of a wealthy Johannesburg industrialist and has been described as the most beautiful woman in South Africa. They have two small sons.

Barnard's reaction to the approaching end of active surgery reflects his personal life to a degree.

"It worries you as much as divorcing a woman to whom you have been married for 30 years," he says. "Although you find life with her has become intolerable, it's still sad to leave her.

"Although life with surgery has become very painful and very distressing, still there is sadness in leaving it because I have been with it so long."

Arrest 3 Men, Seize 12 Lbs. Of Marijuana

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Greenville Police yesterday arrested three men on marijuana possession charges and confiscated 12 pounds of "grass" following a search of a house at 1728 West Fifth St.

Chief Glenn Cannon identified the men as 21-year-old Fentress Hughes Chappell Jr. of 1728 West Fifth St., Stephen Francis Fasano, 25 of Morehead City, and 20-year-old Robert Carl Ball of Route 2, Newport. Cannon said the Carteret County men are currently under indictment on drug-law violation charges stemming from undercover investigations by the State Bureau of Investigation in the Morehead City-Atlantic Beach area earlier this year.

The chief noted the 11:40 a.m. search uncovered 12 pounds of marijuana, pipes, scales, stems, bags and wrappers and an ounce of methathetamine.

Chappell, Fasano and Ball were charged with possession with intent to sell and manufacturing marijuana and possession with intent to sell methathetamine. They were placed under $20,000 bond each pending a first appearance hearing in District Court here today.

The illegal drugs, Cannon said, were found in a rear room and in a bathroom of the dwelling.

Street value of the marijuana, Cannon said, was estimated at $12,000. He noted that the illegal "grass" cost about $360 per pound, thus yielding a profit of more than $7,600 when sold on the street.

Seize Cargo Of Pot

WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP) — Nine persons were arrested here Tuesday night and charged with conspiring to import "tons" of marijuana aboard a Bahamian vessel seized by the U.S. Coast Guard about 230 miles southeast of Cape Fear, N.C.

Officials said the 130-foot coastal freighter Seacrust was boarded Tuesday soon after the Coast Guard cutter Galatin noticed the freighter was maneuvering "erratically."

The boarding was authorized by the Bahamian government, officials said.

The ship and its eight crew members were being escorted to Wilmington, N.C., where the Seacrust was to be turned over to customs authorities and the crew questioned.

Customs officials in Wilmington said the nine arrested here would spend Tuesday night in the New Hanover County Jail and appear before a magistrate Wednesday.

Holiday Time

All Pitt County offices will be closed Thursday and Friday for Thanksgiving, county manager Reginald Gray said today.

Gray noted that county offices will re-open for business on their regular schedule Monday.

State offices will also observe the holidays on Thursday and Friday, while government agencies will be closed for Thursday only and re-open as usual on Friday.

Dean Jim Mallory, dean of men at East Carolina University, said students and staff will be off Thursday and Friday, and classes will return to schedule on Monday.

Pitt Technical Institute students will have a somewhat longer vacation, as classes end this afternoon and students return Wednesday for registration. Thursday classes will be on the regular schedule. Pitt Tech staff will be off Thursday and Friday but return on Monday.

According to Ed Walker of the Greenville Area Chamber of Commerce, the majority of local stores will be closed Thursday and re-open Friday.

City offices will also be closed for the holidays on Thursday and Friday.

The Daily Reflector will publish as usual.

Customs Agents Train To Block Smugglers

NILAND, Calif. (AP) — The United States is dulling the thrust of smugglers by sharpening the skills of its customs agents in a mandatory guerrilla warfare course in the Southern California desert.

After three weeks of rigorous training, even normally chairbound supervisors learn to run, crawl, fight and shoot back.

The desert games, played out just south of the Chocolate Mountains where Gen. George S. Patton trained his tank and armored cavalry units for World War II, are a reaction to the growing threat from smugglers and their sophisticated tactics in recent years.

"Smugglers are finding ways to get around us," said Bob Lasher, assistant patrol director for the San Diego district. "The stuff continues to be brought in by aircraft and ships."

In 1973, when the U.S. Customs Service started patrolling the Mexican border with Southern California, it seized 27,289 pounds of marijuana in six months.

Smugglers in one recent case delivered a load of marijuana into Canada by freighter and then smuggled it into the United States.

But authorities say the desert training is paying off with more smuggling captures and seizures.

Danger from smugglers has always been acute. Two customs officers were captured by a band of smugglers near Nogales, Ariz., in 1974. They were slain across the border in Mexico.

Prison Rampage

HUNTERSVILLE, N.C. (AP) — About 15 inmates at the Huntersville medium security prison unit went on a rampage early this morning, tearing up a section of a dormitory, prison officials said.

Correction Department supervisor W.V. Richey said he thought the inmates were under the influence of either drugs or alcohol when they began breaking light fixtures in the prison dormitory around 1 a.m.

Mecklenburg County police officers were called in and the outburst was quelled without injury, officials said.

Richey said there were 176 inmates being housed at the Huntersville unit, and the 14 involved in the disruption were being transferred to other units.

Correction officials said they were trying to determine the cause of the incident. The Huntersville unit is located just north of Charlotte.

Breakdown In Phone Service

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Nearly half of Durham went without long distance telephone service for seven hours Tuesday.

General Telephone Co. said a computerized exchange system broke down and had to be reprogrammed. The breakdown left 30,000 of the city's 68,000 customers with disrupted service from 9:05 a.m. to about 4 p.m.

ASCS Transfer Restraint Eased

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A federal court judge has dissolved a restraining preventing the transfer of seven Republican agricultural officials who claim they were being moved for political reasons to force their resignations.

Judge John D. Larkins Jr. said the U.S. Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service had assured the officials the transfers would not be made final until an administrative review of their grievances was made.

Jones Would Vote Congress Run Postal System

First District Congressman Walter Jones, speaking here last night to members of the American Postal Workers Union and the local auxiliary, said if given the opportunity, he would vote for Congress to, "once again...exercise a major amount of control over the postal system."

Jones made the comment as he reviewed legislation now pending before Congress that would affect the postal system.

According to Jones, the Congress in 1970 "agreed to give up the responsibility for operating the postal system," because of a" promise at that time of a more economical and efficient operation.

"In spite of the promise...of a balanced financial operation," he continued, "last year the Congress had to appropriate $1 billion in addition to the annual $920 million appropriation in order to keep the postal system solvent."

He noted that "H.R.7700, the Postal Service Act of 1977" now pending, would again establish Congressional oversight of postal rate decisions, increase Congressional authority over the Postal Service, and abolish the Board of Governors of the Postal Service."

He emphasized, "I intend to look closely at H.R.7700 ... for I believe it to be a step in the right direction in solving some of the problems, which obviously the semi-autonomous Postal Service has not been able to do."

Jones explained that the bill would subject the Postal Rate Commission's decisions in rate, fee and classification cases to Congressional veto and would establish "a more precise methodology for the setting of postal rates.

He said, too, that the legislation provides for six-day a week delivery, the operation of rural post offices, and a modern research and development program as well as a provision that the Postal Service must hold a public hearing in any community where it is considering closing a post office.

Another piece of legislation that would affect postal workers, Jones said, "is the recent effort to combine the Civil Service retirement system with Social Security.

"Let me assure you that I do not intend to vote for this until I am absolutely assured that it would in no way reduce the benefits of those of you now covered under the Civil Service Retirement Act," he said. "The only possibility of my support would be to let it apply to only new employees coming into the Service at a later date...and I believe that this is the prevailing sentiment of the present Congress."

In addition to outlining the proposed changes in the Postal Service and in the retirement program, Jones reviewed the way a bill becomes law — following a typical piece of legislation from introduction in the House and its passage through various House committees, to passage by the House and its trip to the Senate and through the Senate committees on its way to the Senate floor for a vote.

City School Curiculum Saw Lengthy Discussion

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

Curriculum was a big topic at the lengthy November meeting of the Greenville City School Board of Education Monday night.

Heading off the presenters of curriculum guides and plans were Charles Ross, Director of Elementary Education, and Ms. Betsy Warren, Coordinator, ESEA Title I Reading Program.

Ross and Warren explained that funds in the amount of $9,000 provided from Title IV-C monies had made possible the initiation of RILT (Reading Improvement Leadership Team).

The funds were approved in 1976, and the RILT project criteria was developed during the past school year and the early part of the present school year.

The primary objective of the program is to help each child achieve reading skills necessary for success in contemporary society.

In this initial phase of a planned long-range program for reading skill development, teams were set up in each of the five elementary schools.

There were five members named to the leadership team from each of the schools, one teacher each from kindergarten through grade three, plus one resource teacher. Principals in each of these schools were also part of the leadership team.

These members met approximately one full day a month, as well as on special occasions, such as the visit of a reading specialist.

From suggestions and recommendations made at these regular meetings, primary goals emerged, and concrete steps were taken to begin to map out ways of achieving these reading goals.

Following the consolidation of ideas, suggestions, recommendations and guidance provided by specialists, a handbook has been published, under the acronym STAR (Steps To Attaining Reading).

The draft handbook contains extensive information outlining basic objectives, processes to be used, specific guidelines on matters such as minimum sight words, phonetics, and structural analysis skills.

The book is published looseleaf, so that corrections and additions can be made simply by replacing pages. Because of printing expenses, the draft of STAR has been printed in limited numbers and will be distributed only to persons or groups directly involved in the reading program.

"This program is indicative of the tremendous emphasis on early childhood training," Ross stated. "We feel now we need more emphasis on the upper level grades."

Ross and Kay Whitehurst, Director of Secondary Education, reported jointly on the next step involved in the total reading program.

"This too is an ESEA Title IV funded probject," project," Mrs. Whitehurst said. "We have been allotted $14,000 for this segment of the program."

This second segment will entail a study and eventual publication of a guide for reading improvement in grades four through seven.

"The objectives," Ross noted, "are the same as for RILT I."

"After that," Mrs. Whitehurst commented, "we will go into the final phase, RILT 3. I suppose we shall have to call the publication SUPER STAR."

Another report dealt with a Cumulative Record Card devised for the mathematics program for grades K through six.

This is a single form card that reflects a student's progress in math, and is designed to give teachers a coordinated record of achievements in math.

Fraegar Sanders reported on the use of teachers aides funded from ESEA Title I funds. The total is 22 professional aides and 20 and one-half para-professional people in the school system. This figure includes two each at the elementary schools, three in the language development area, two each at Aycock and Agnes Fullilove, one at Rose High, and one in the Central Office, plus a coordinator.

Together, the professional and para-professional aides make possible a one to one assistance in reading to 200 students, with periodic assistance provided to a total of 1,100 students.

Another curriculum related program is the tutoring program, which Ms. Warren reported on.

Persons working in this program, Ms. Warren emphasized, are trained in this work and follow the instruction manual verbatim.

A slide and narrative presentation of the work being carried out in the Rose High Media Center was presented by Ms. Leigh Ledbetter and Ms. Brenda Lewis. The slide show has been requested by the the State Department of Public Instruction to be shown at a national meeting to be held soon in Washington, D. C.

On the progress of work in preparation for re-accreditation of Rose High within the Southern Accreditation Association, chairman Mrs. Jean Creech reported that work has been completed on 14 different curriculum guides.

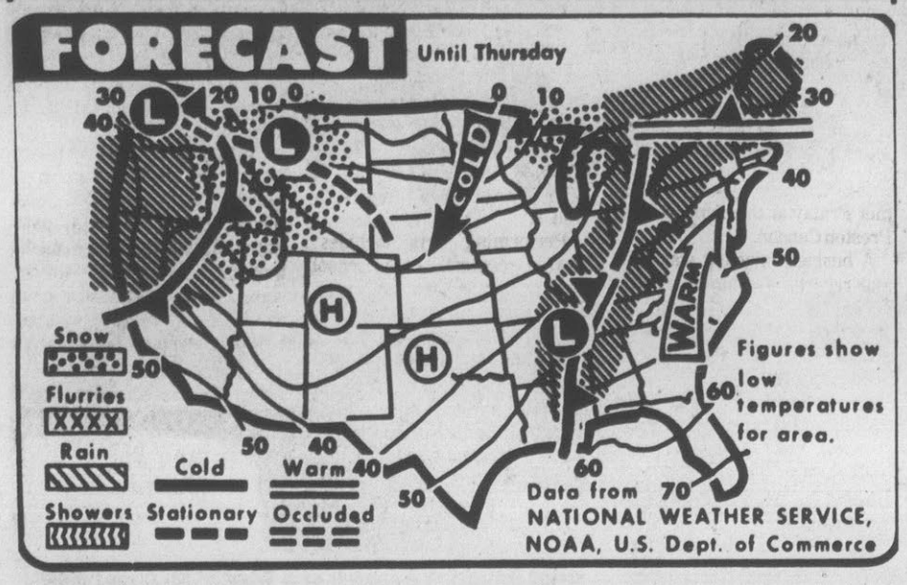

She noted that in addition to work done by the faculty, students have contributed materially to preparing the material, particularly in art work and in assembling and binding the documents.

How's The Weather?

WEATHER FORECAST — Rain and snow are forecast today for the Northwest. Rain is due from the Mississippi Valley into the Northeast. Seasonably warm weather is expected in the East but cold weather is due for most areas. (AP Laserphoto Map)

By The Associated Press

Rain and showers are expected to continue into the Thanksgiving holiday weekend across North Carolina.

A cold front has nudged a little east and south through the eastern part of the state, but is not expected to move much further. It will, however, weaken as another cold front nears.

The high now over the Northeast will continue to move east, making winds of North Carolina become southerly. This will bring some warmer temperatures back into the state for a day.

Thursday night a cold front will bring cooler temperatures to the state.

Tuesday it was cloudy with some spotty rain in the West during the daylight hours. Last evening an overnight rain and drizzle broke out over most of the state. Tuesdays highs ranged from the highest of 77 at New Bern to the low 60s in the western Piedmont and a 58 at Asheville.

By early this morning rain, drizzle and fog were spread over the state. Temperatures were variable with cold air already into the northern counties. Temperatures ranged from near 40 to the mid 60s.

The recreational weather outlook calls for generally scattered showers and rain for the next five days. Temperatures will vary a bit each day but the overall trend is to turn colder.

The showers and rain will generally be light except for some isolated thunderstorms thursday.

Kathleen Woodiwiss Likes Happy Ending Novels

PRINCETON, Minn. (AP) — Savage passion, blazing kisses and tender caresses are part of everyday life, sandwiched between washing clothes and cleaning house, for a rural Princeton woman.

Kathleen Woodiwiss, author of three can't-put-'em-down historical romances which have earned her more than $1 million, is currently working on her fourth novel.

"I think I fill a need for a romantic novel with a happy ending," Mrs. Woodiwiss said. "A lot of books don't leave you with that feeling. They leave you depressed. I don't like to feel depressed. I try to give a little bit of joy."

A common thread — faithfulness — runs through her novels, Mrs. Woodiwiss said.

The main characters in "The Flame and the Flower," "The Wolf and the Dove," and "Shanna" may be passionate or passive, domineering or headstrong. But they're always faithful to each other.

"I feel part of love is making a commitment," Mrs. Woodiwiss said. "A lot of other people think like that too. It's no different today than it was way back when.

"If there isn't a basic love story in a book, one that has faithfulness, I just don't enjoy it as well."

The attractive 38-year-old brunette, who speaks with a slight Southern accent, says she does not like stories that rely on sex to keep up a reader's interest.

"I try to treat it as part of the love story, since it's natural between two people who are in love. It's not just for sensation's sake," she said.

The historical settings vary, but the hero is always incredibly handsome, the heroine ravishingly beautiful, they're always true to each other and the scenes between them never get really explicit.

Mrs. Woodiwiss, who lives on a 55-acre spread with her husband, Ross, and their three sons, says it takes her about a year and a half to complete a novel, including time spent on historical research, but she doesn't work at it constantly.

"I still get up early in the morning to get the boys off to school. Then I rush around and clean up the house. I usually have two women who come once a week, but they haven't been here for a while. I even cut the grass," she said.

Once her chores are done, she sits down at her large roll-top desk, cranks some paper into her electric typewriter and heads back into another period of time.

The novels all have happy endings, with all the questions answered.

"I cannot see the need in making somebody miserable with what I write," she said. "I've read books with endings I can't stand and I'm really low afterwards.

"These books are to lose yourself in while you are reading, just for enjoyment."

Mrs. Woodiwiss says her novels aren't autobiographical, and her meeting with her husband doesn't read like a chapter from one of her novels.

"He was stationed in my home town of Alexandria, La., when I was in high school and he came to one of our dances — a sock hop," she said. "I remember he had a long gash in his head because he'd been in a car accident."

They were married a year later, and Mrs. Woodiwiss didn't begin writing until they moved to Minnesota about three years ago, when Woodiwiss retired from active duty.

"I had the desire to write, but I didn't think I could do it," she said. "It was only when I sat down and started writing and began to have so much fun at it that I wondered what had taken me so long."

The N. C. Chapter of the Embroiderers' Guild of America sponsored a workshop for its members Saturday at Planters Bank, Greenville.

Mrs. Shay Pendray of Dearborn, Mich., conducted the daylong session. She is a certified teacher of the EGA. She instructed in the technique of using silk and metal threads on needlepoint canvas. The technique originated centuries ago in China and is much favored in the Orient.

The EGA encourages increased knowledge and skill and continuing learning in the needle arts. Several meetings and workshops are held yearly and new members are welcome.

Seller Of Shoes Sings The Blues

By Abigail Van Buren

©1977 by The Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: I am writing on behalf of the salespeople who sell men's shoes.

When a man goes to a doctor for an examination, he at least unbuttons his own shirt. So why do some men come into a shoe department, sit down, and expect the salesperson to undress their feet?

The salesperson is supposed to try the NEW shoes on the customer, not take off the old ones; but when I ask a man politely to slip off his old shoes, he looks at me like I'm crazy.

And while I'm on the subject of men's shoes, when a man comes in to try on shoes and I ask him what size he wears, nine out of 10 say they don't know!

Can you believe that a 50-year-old man has no idea what size shoe he wears? So we have to look in his old shoe or measure his foot. This takes time and most of us work on commission. It would sure help a lot of us who sell men's shoes if you'd ask your male readers to please be a little more cooperative. Thank you.

OLD SHOE DOG

DEAR DOG: Okay, here's your letter. Now, all you men out there, if the shoe fits—wear it. (But first, take your old shoe off, and remember your size.)

DEAR ABBY: We've been married for 16 years and have four children. After our last child was born, complications arose, so I had a hysterectomy.

It was a big relief not having to worry about getting pregnant again.

Well, a few months ago my husband came home and, out of the blue, announced that he'd had a vasectomy! I couldn't have been more shocked. The more I thought about it, the more suspicious I became. (Wouldn't you be?)

Tell me, Abby, why would a man want a vasectomy when his wife has had a hysterectomy?

SUSPICIOUS IN OELWEIN, LA.

DEAR SUSPICIOUS: He has obviously decided that he wants no more children with you—or anyone else.

DEAR ABBY: I am getting tired of reading about the atrocious things wives discover about their husbands after marrying them. For instance that they are unclean, that they have a temper or that they're stingy. All the clues are there during courtship. Why don't women see them and heed the warning?

It seems to me that if a woman chooses to overlook a fault in her husband BEFORE marriage, she should continue to overlook it AFTER marriage, and forever hold her peace.

Why should she expect a man to change overnight just because he put a wedding band on her finger?

REALIST

DEAR REALIST: If you'll excuse a cliche, "Love is blind." Some women do not see faults before marriage. Other women (the predatory kind) marry a man knowing his deficiencies but hoping to "reform" him. They rarely do, and their failure eventually leads to frustration and bitterness.

CONFIDENTIAL TO D. D. L.: If you are too busy to answer your child's questions, you are too busy.

If you feel left out and lonely, or wish you knew how to get people to like you, my new booklet, "How To Be Popular; You're Never Too Young or Too Old," is for you. Send $1 along with a long, self-addressed, stamped (24 cents) envelope to Abby, 132 Lasky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.

DINNER FOR SIX

Chicken with Bulgur
Succotash — Tomato Salad
Lemon Pie — Beverage

BULGUR STUFFING

The fine bulgur makes a compact stuffing.

- 1 cup fine bulgur (cracked wheat)
- 2 chicken bouillon cubes dissolved in 2 cups boiling water
- ¼ cup olive oil
- 1 small onion, finely chopped (¼ to 1-3rd cup)
- 2 ribs celery, finely chopped (¾ cup)
- ¼ cup dried currants
- ½ teaspoon salt
- ⅛ teaspoon pepper

Gently boil the bulgur in the bouillon, covered, until it is soft and the water absorbed — about 10 minutes. In the oil, gently cook the onion and celery until the onion is golden; mix with the bulgur, currants, salt and pepper. Use as a stuffing for a 4-pound roasting chicken. Roast stuffed chicken in an oiled shallow pan (minus rack) in a 425-degree oven, shaking pan often to keep chicken from sticking, for about 1½ hours. Makes 6 servings.

Momentous Gamble By Sadat

Egyptian President Anwar Sadat has completed his historic peace mission to Israel.

Sadat surprised the world by accepting a call from Israel Prime Minister Menahem Begin that he visit the Jewish nation.

It was a bold gamble by Sadat — and one that may cast him as one of the great peace makers of the century.

Sadat made the trip at considerable peril. The move was highly unpopular in the Arab world and while it was more accepted in his homeland it was unpopular enough to bring about the resignation of some high government officials.

Then there was the physical danger of an Egyptian president visiting the Israeli nation, given the thousands of years of bad feelings between the two peoples.

Security was tight as can be, but most world leaders will admit that there is no way to prevent an assassination if the perpetrators are fanatical enough to die in the process.

There was no violence as Sadat traveled in Israel, and of course there were no dramatic breakthroughs in the talks between the two leaders.

The initial dramatic impact of the president of Egypt visiting Israel was enough, however, to make this the most important peace mission the world has seen in many years.

The Middle East has long been the hot spot of the world. If the feelings are not contained the situation there could lead to the next — and perhaps final — world war.

That is why the Sadat visit to Israel was so momentous. Judged so soon it must be declared a big success, although it will be years before we can conclude that the visit set into motion a series of events which would lead to permanent Middle East peace.

Another Ancient Scourge May End

Another of mankind's ancient scourges may be ending.

The Food and Drug administration has approved a vaccine which reportedly can prevent pneumococcal pneumonia.

The disease kills thousands of Americans each year and the vaccine can help prevent these deaths.

The vaccine will be used selectively for people who are susceptible to the disease, and it offers hope to those in this category.

Mull Health Care Group

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — Spiraling health care costs are forcing a hard look at some new ways of providing that service for governmental employees.

Hafty increases in health and hospitalization insurance in recent years have caused legislators to grumble; but till now, they've simply met the bills.

Several circumstances coming together now, however, seem sure to force the General Assembly to come to grips with the overall situation.

And while several alternatives are available, sentiment now runs toward a governmental Health Maintenance Organization (HMO) operating in the Raleigh-Chapel Hill-Durham area.

What does any of this mean to the average taxpayer? For one thing, it is tax dollars which pay the shopping bills for the insurance for state employees teachers, and local governmental workers.

For another, while each of us is fully aware of what rising health care costs mean to our own pocketbooks, there is a hidden taking of dollars in taxes to finance governmental health care activities.

Going Up

The current contract between the state and Blue Cross-Blue Shield is for $81 million. About half that is paid by the state for full-cost health and hospital coverage for all state employees. That coverage is for 100 per cent of the usual charges. The other half is paid for by employees who get insurance coverage for their dependents.

Officials of the insurance firm expect the premium to go up at least as much as the inflation of health care costs—an estimated 11 per cent in next year's budget. That would be $4.4 million more for the state to pay as it's share.

NOBLITT

Next, representatives of the association of retired state employees have been talking to Gov. James B. Hunt, Jr., wondering what, if anything, he plans to do for them. Retirees are covered in the state group, but pay their own premiums. Hunt has promised that the state will pick up the tab.

Blue Cross people say they can't figure precisely what that will cost. Older people require more health care, and it isn't known precisely how many would be covered. Figuring on 30,000 new enrollees and based on present use figures, the experts say cost would shoot up between $6 and $7 million per year.

Combined, these developments mean nearly $12 million increase in the state budget next year. Add that to two other developing increases and it is plain why legislators are getting nervous: Medicaid costs are out of control; the state's share may go up another $8 million. Federal Social Security change requiring heftier employer participation could produce increased spending of up to $200 million.

Some Options

Key legislators close to the situation see several alternatives.

The state could self-insure employees for health-hospitalization, running the program itself. That approach, however, would still be vulnerable to the annual increase in health care costs and probably would not improve over the present insurance plan.

Changes in the insurance coverage could be made to discourage use and to capture back some of the costs. Possible approaches would be a dollar limit on hospital room rates, a percentage share rather than full coverage, limits on uses of the insurance, or establishment of a sizeable deductible ($300) to be paid by the individual before insurance takes over. A sliding scale to keep such a change from hitting low-income workers would be built in.

The most revolutionary alternative—and one getting serious scrutiny — would be a Health Maintenance Organization in the Capitol area for all local and state government employees, university people, and teachers.

Such a program involves operating clinics, providing doctor's services, and—in sum—meeting all health care needs of members through either hiring or contracting for the services of the various providers; from nurses to hospitals.

Where The Money Is

WASHINGTON — Neiman-Marcus, the Texas-based department store which has a reputation of catering to oil and cattle millionaires, has just opened in Washington, D.C.

This is no accident according to Feinbaum, a friend of many years.

"Mr. Neiman and Mr. Marcus know where the money is these days."

"But the people who work for the government in Washington just don't appear to be the types that Neiman-Marcus would cater to."

"Neiman and Marcus weren't thinking about government employees when they decided to open here. They were thinking about all the people who work around the government. Washington dispenses $450 billion a year. There are a lot of guys in this town who work for a piece of that pie."

"Such as?"

"Lawyers, for one. There are enough lawyers in Washington to support 10 Neiman-Marcuses—or I should say lawyers' wives.

"Then there are lobbyists. They're always looking for something different to buy a friend in the House or the Senate. I read somewhere that Neiman and Marcus are pushing a jogging suit lined with ermine for 10 grand. You give somebody an ermine jogging suit and he'll never forget you."

"I'd love one for myself," I admitted.

"Then you have all the foreign embassies in this town. I hear South Korea opened up 100 charge accounts before the store was even built.

"And don't forget the wives of doctors. They'll go to Neiman-Marcus at the drop of a fur hat."

"I forgot the doctors' wives," I said.

"This town is also loaded with real-estate moguls who construct the buildings the government keeps ordering to house all the new departments that keep cropping up.

"These real-estate moguls work long hours and their wives get very unhappy sitting around doing nothing. Some of them are mad at their husbands for spending so much time away from home. But now the wives can get even by going to Neiman-Marcus and buying out the place."

"Only Neiman and Marcus would have thought of the wives of real-estate moguls," I said.

ART BUCHWALD

"And let's not forget the girlfriends in this town. As you know political power is one of the greatest aphrodisiacs. But no one can live by sex alone. A nice piece of jewelry can really keep a Washington romance from going stale."

"Neiman-Marcus should use that in their ads."

"And finally, you have to remember that every head of state eventually comes to Washington. They can't go back to their countries empty-handed. One visit to the Washington Neiman-Marcus by the King of Saudi Arabia is equal to an entire Christmas season in Dallas."

"You forgot the wives of the military-industrial complex," I said.

"Now you're talking about mega-bucks," Feinbaum said. "They make Texas oil money look like rotten potatoes."

"Well, I guess Neiman and Marcus knew what they were doing when they opened a branch in the nation's capital."

"You can bet your sweet life on that. When you have a city responsible for $450 billion, some of it has to rub off on the lingerie department of a fancy specialty store."

Super Loan Record

By DAVID TOMLIN
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Students haven't shown themselves lately to be particularly good credit risks, but North Carolina has a student loan program with a repayment record many banks would envy.

The program provides loans ranging up to $4,000 a year to young people who want to enter health care fields, from laboratory technician to doctor.

Since 1945, when the program was started, nearly $10 million has been loaned to 3,521 students. Officials have had to write off only $300 of that amount as uncollectible.

"That's an exceptional rate," says program chief Jan Proctor. "It's a very personalized program. We interview each applicant, and these students feel like they have an obligation to the state of North Carolina."

WASHINGTON TODAY

The U.S. Was 'Involved'

By FRANK CORMIER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter may have seemed just an interested onlooker during the Egyptian-Israeli dialogue in Jerusalem, but appearances in this case were deceiving, according to Israel's ambasador to Washington.

As the envoy, Simcha Dinitz, emerged from the White House on the eve of Egyptian President Anwar Sadat's arrival in Israel, a reporter asked, "Are the Americans pretty well cut out of all this?" Dinitz responded:

"The fact that I have been in the White House three times in the last two days doesn't indicate that the Americans are cut out of it."

Indeed, Carter was in telephone contact with both Sadat and Israeli Prime Minister Menahem Begin prior to their meeting. He is known to have urged Sadat to be of good cheer in the face of widespread Arab opposition to the precedentshattering event. And he suggested to Begin that Sadat should not be sent home emptyhanded.

White House spokesman Rex Granum says it is too early to assess whether Sadat took something home to Cairo.

For Carter, who has made the reconvening of a Geneva peace conference on the Middle East a priority goal, a successful Jerusalem summit was essential to show that the Egyptians and Israelis could sit down and talk.

As an exercise in symbolism, the weekend events could hardly have been more pleasing to the U.S. president, who has said he was moved by their emotional impact. Whether they prove to be the prelude to more substantive negotiations remains to be seen.

But whatever happens in the days and weeks just ahead, Carter can take considerable satisfaction in the mere fact that Sadat and Begin met and embarked on a personal dialogue.

Although the administration's Middle East policy has been under heavy fire at home, and not only from Jews, there seems little doubt that Sadat never would have launched his dramatic initiative had it not been for Carter's year-long efforts to prod all parties toward Geneva and, equally important, to encourage such Arab moderates as the Egyptian leader.

Carter certainly will not attempt to claim credit for the Begin-Sadat exchanges. In fact, however, they gave at least momentary fresh impetus to his peace-seeking efforts and could serve to quiet domestic discontent over his Middle East interventions.

If the president gains ground on this score, it will coincide with other foreign policy advances overshadowed by the jockeying in the Middle East.

Last week, for example, the Shah of Iran ended his state visit here by announcing that Carter had persuaded him to work actively to hold the line in 1978 on per-barrel prices dictated by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries.

That must be listed as a significant accomplishment because the shah had earned a reputation as a leading advocate of higher oil prices.

Carter's negotiators also are reported making progress toward fashioning a

Public Forum

Letters submitted for Public Forum must be limited to 300 words.

To the editor:

Concerning the Pitt Commissioners' 10-year study of garbage collection, one can only wonder how long it takes to analyze the situation. While we studied, our neighboring counties have long since strategically located dumpsters, and citizens of Beaufort, Edgecombe, etc. have had convenient dumpster disposal or, where economically feasible, contract collection door-to-door.

This may not have given "equal rights" to every remote farm house, but is is a vast improvement over no garbage collection at all. Pitt County's problem seems to be a desire to over-govern and over-regulate garbage collection. We have had elaborate schemes proposed by so-called planning experts involving buying bags and piling them on the roadside, bidding, franchising, etc. We even had one "planner" get mad and quit because nobody liked his plan.

Now the proposal is to create another bureaucratic mumbo jumbo with franchises, forms, audit, and more county employees to try to make government rules apply to a group of small businessmen. They might make it if we let them work under ordinary free enterprise rules, but are guaranteed to sink by the time the accountants, government employees, and forms designers get through with them.

Is there any wonder the cost of government increases faster than any other, even medical care? The reason is over-government. When we recognize that the least government possible is the best, we will solve the problem of where our society is going 20 to 50 years from now. If we don't do it by choice, we are going to have it forced upon us.

The garbage collection solution seems simple. Why not locate waste collection containers at strategic locations to be dumped by contractors, so all citizens will have access? Let free enterprise handle the door-to-door pickup. The rules of free enterprise still work, in spite of government efforts.

40 Years Ago Today

November 23, 1937

The French government is on the verge of "important discoveries" in its drive to crush an armed secret revolutionary society, Marx Dormay, Minister of the Interior, told the Cabinet.

Numerous documents of great importance were seized in a raid during the night, Dormay said. Details were kept secret. The raid was "somewhere in Paris".

The final report on the Red Cross Roll Call was issued by J. Nat Harrison, general chairman, showing that 2,380 members were enrolled in the recent campaign.

A telegram received from National Headquarters congratulated Chairman Harrison on the success of the Roll Call and declared "this represents the greatest percentage gain of any chapter the size of Pitt County or larger during the last five years. Your chapter's percentage of membership based on population is now more than double North Carolina's average".

PERIPHERAL RELIGION

When is religion an "extra," and for whom? It is an "extra" when men and women put it some place else than first, and it is an "extra" for those who want it only as an adjunct of respectability or as a convenience. They go to church when they have nothing else to do on the weekend. Of course they go at Christmas and Easter. Furthermore, they want to be sure, by membership in the church, that they will have someone who will baptize, marry, and bury when the need arises in the family.

Under these circumstances it is plain that people are getting nothing vital which religion has to offer. They are simply going through the motions of a routine which perhaps gives them the satisfaction of knowing that they are participants in an organized group. These people miss the great gifts of religion — the forgiveness of our sins and the release within our hearts of those powers from on high which make triumphant living possible.

Turnover In Executive Suites

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — The revolving door of the executive suits are spinning more frustrated and angry chairmen and presidents out into the streets than at any time in recent history, says a professional counter.

"In one-third of the largest industrial corporations the teams at the top were not there five years ago," according to Eugene Jennings, who is a confidential adviser to some of them.

And they're not going willingly. More chairmen and presidents of Fortune 500 companies have departed under fire in the past three years than in any similar period since World War II, states Jennings, who has studied corporate mobility for nearly 30 years.

A professor of management at Michigan State University, and author of many books on corporate personnel strategy, Jennings monitors the movements of top managers in the very large companies. The power struggle has seldom been so intense, he reports.

For the first time since he began his statistical studies in 1948, said Jennings in an interview, the firing rate has exceeded the retirement rate for chairmen and presidents.

Add in the quit rate — 2 of every 3 who quit would be fired if they didn't do so, he says — and the early departures now amount to 1.5 times the retirement rate.

Jennings believes the implications are as serious for industry as for the individuals involved. "It reflects on the ability of corporations to nominate and develop top flight people," he said.

While this was once an area where America companies excelled, it clearly is one that will demand more attention in the future, he feels.

Jennings believes the accelerated turnover rate also reflects the uncertain, changing times that have put pressure on all institutions. He lists these reasons for firings:

Making the job more difficult for the top executive is the fact that in many companies facing new social and economic challenges, the standards of performance are not explicitly stated or even known.

The big issues in the highest corporate offices today involve more consideration of government, ethics, politics, society and other factors not immediately or directly connected with profits.

"It is very hard to find two or more people at the top who will agree on a corporate position regarding new ethical standards, government regulation...and social-economic interest groups," he said.

While resignations for "personal reasons" often masks office politics, some presidents and chairmen do quit for genuinely personal reasons. Jennings has found that a relative few really decide they've had enough pressure and uncertainty and too little of sensible living.

Rather than being hurried into the revolving door they nudge it themselves, and walk out with their heads high and the feeling they have just begun to live.

Arrest Youths For Break-In At School

The investigation of a recent break-in and larceny incident at Wellcome Middle School north of Greenville on NC 11 has led to the arrest of three persons by the Pitt Sheriff's Department.

Sheriff Ralph Tyson reported that deputies arrested Floyd Timothy Hamilton, 17, of 1508 Mills Street, Gilbert Alonzo Harris, 17 of Lot 10, Homestead Estates, and Edward Earl Bunting, whose address was given as Greenville, on the break-in charges.

The sheriff said that the Pitt County Board of Education reported that five cassette tape players were stolen from the school in the Nov. 10 incident, in addition to $40 from an office.

The county reported that the school's visual aid room door was broken and filing cabinets in the room forced open. Windows were broken in the school workshop area and a claw hammer stolen, it was noted, and windows were also broken in the lunchroom.

Bond for each person on the breaking, entering and larceny charges was set at $500 with court dates scheduled for Nov. 30, the sheriff said.

Two of the cassette units were recovered, he added.

new strategic arms limitation agreement with the Soviet Union, another priority objective.

Although there are a number of SALT skeptics in the Senate, which would have to ratify a new treaty, news of negotiating progress was coupled last week with reports of Soviet concessions that presumably would make a final accord more acceptable here.

The president, in addition, has been picking up a few additional Senate supporters for the embattled Panama Canal treaty. Although Carter still faces an uphill battle for ratification, he can claim new momentum for his cause.

All things considered, the past week has produced a series of foreign policy plusses for an activist administration assailed by critics who have contended that, both at home and abroad, Carter has produced much sound and fury signifying very little.

been so good is that the students don't have to repay in cash. In fact, officials would prefer they didn't.

"The goal of the program is to provide health services in areas that need them," says Ms. Proctor. For each year the student spends upon graduation practicing in a medically-deprived area, one year of loan payments is cancelled.

But if a student is unable to finish his or her studies for any reason, or to complete the prescribed service in a deprived area, the loan becomes collectible in cash.

About 16 per cent of the money loaned through the program is repayed in cash rather than in service time, Ms. Proctor says, which means that even cash collections seem to go smoothly.

"We studied banking principles and got advice from the Department of Justice, and we just followed good business procedures when it was set up," Ms. Proctor said.

Those procedures include requiring two co-signers for each loan who live and own property in North Carolina.

In most cases the precautions don't seem to be necessary. The state has had to go to court only twice to obtain payment from co-signers because of defaults by students.

Ms. Proctor said that despite the strict application procedures and requirements for co-signers with property, the program has made it possible for many students from minorities to get medical training.

Of the 375 students in the program now at medical schools or in their post-graduate residencies, she said, one third are non-white.

Intervention, Prevention Of Drug Abuse Is Griffith Goal

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

Earl Griffith began work Sept. 19 as North Carolina's Assistant Secretary for Alcohol and Drug Abuse Control. He was in Pitt County yesterday, sharing his ideas and finding out what's happening in his field in Eastern North Carolina.

Griffith came to North Carolina from South Carolina, where, for 16 years, he was involved with the development of an alcoholism and drug abuse program. He was coordinator of education and prevention for the State Commission on Alcoholism and Drug Abuse at the time he left South Carolina.

Griffith said he is impressed with the programs already underway in North Carolina for dealing with alcoholism and drug abuse, but he said he believes the emphasis has been put on the chronic abuser. He says he wants to emphasize prevention and intervention. "I want to get to people earlier, before they've lost everything — their homes, their families, their jobs, their self-respect," he said.

He said a meeting was being held yesterday at the ECU Regional Development Institute here to talk about employees assistance programs. Lee Walton, he said, is the occupational program consultant for Pitt and 31 other counties in Eastern North Carolina. He is based at the Regional Human Resources Office at 404 St. Andrews Street here (phone, 756-2295). His job is to help employers set up programs to identify employees with emotional, alcoholism, or other personal problems that seem to be affecting work performance. Persons in supervisory positions in business and industry can thus help their companies retain valuable employees and at the same time help the employees themselves to work through their problems, perhaps with the help of local mental health centers and other outpatient services. "The benefits are mutual," he said.

Griffith said he will probably be presenting proposed legislation during the next convening of the N. C. General Assembly to make dealing with the drunk driver consistent throughout the state. "Some of our counties have very good programs," he said, "but we need consistency. We hope to make it so chances will be very, very good that anyone driving under the influence of alcohol or other drugs will be caught. Once caught, we'll require that first offenders either give up their driver's licenses for six months or attend a 10-hour school dealing with alcohol abuse. Second offenders will be required by the courts to enter some kind of alcohol treatment program.

"Last year there were more than 62,000 d. u. i. arrests in North Carolina," he said. "One in every 25 cars you meet is likely to have a driver who is under the influence of one or more drugs (alcohol being a drug). "We have to protect our citizens from this horrible situation."

Griffith says he will be spending just as much time as he possibly can "out in the communities." I want to find out what's going on and what needs to be going on," he said. "We are planning to do everything we can on the state level to make sure that we're getting our money's worth for the money spent on treatment and prevention of alcohol and drug abuse."

Three Arrests For Break-In

Three arrests were made Monday following investigation of a break-in incident involving coin operated machines at a store near Stokes.

According to Pitt Sheriff Ralph Tyson, officers arrested Ronnie Earl Bunn and James Bunn, both of Rt. 1, Box 192, Greenville, and Sammy Earl Howard of Rt. 6, Box 89, Greenville following the break-in report yesterday.

Sheriff Tyson said that all three were charged with breaking into coin operated machines at a store operated by Bud Clemmons at Whichard's Station south of Stokes.

Bond was set at $200 for each person with trial dates scheduled for Nov. 30 in District Court here.

State Officials Talk Implementing Of Grant

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

Three state education officials from the State Department of Public Instruction recently visited the Media Center at Rose High School to discuss the implementation of an ESEA Title II Special Purpose Grant.

Greenville is one of eight schools in North Carolina to have been awarded a $10,000 Special Purpose Grant in an effort to establish an exemplary school media program. The eight were selected on a competitive basis from 88 North Carolina schools submitting project proposals for the grant.

Rose has also been designated as the exemplary media center for Education District I which encompasses 17 northeastern North Carolina counties. Two of the three state visitors — Ms. Sue Scott and Ms. Doris Brown, are media specialists with the Department of Public Instruction. The third visitor, Carroll Calhoun, is the N.C. Coordinator of Title IV-B funds.

Ms. Leigh Ledbetter and Ms. Brenda Lewis, media coordinators at Rose, showed the visitors books and audiovisual materials of a high interest/low vocabulary type purchased with the special funds.

These materials, according to the Rose media people, are to support an elective program for students needing reenforcement in the areas of English, biology, and Western cultures.

In addition to these services, another phase of the services provided by the media center is a voluntary program of crafts people who donate time on a one-day a week basis to show students skills in a variety of arts. Volunteers, men and women, come from the Recreation Department, from East Carolina University, and the community at large.

The project proposal for the Rose Media Center was written by Ledbetter and Lewis, and the continuing work involved in implementation of the program with the funds are under their jurisdiction.

Tobacco Day For Growers

RALEIGH — Extension-Research-On-Wheels Review is scheduled for Tuesday, Nov. 29, beginning at 8:30 a.m. at the McKimmon Extension Education Center, located on the campus of North Carolina State University in Raleigh.

It will be Tobacco Day for North Carolina growers, according to Gaylon Ambrose, assistant agricultural extension agent.

A full day of Tobacco Talk is scheduled, including recent attacks on tobacco, the disease control program, mistakes made in the production of the 1977 crop and how to correct them in 1978, and other topics.

A luncheon will provide an opportunity for Tobacco Talk and fellowship. Commercial representatives will pay a small registration fee, but growers, dealers, warehousemen, members of the farm credit groups, and members of the R-6-P committees and their wives are invited guests.

Contact the local county extension agent for further information.

PASTOR AIDES MEET

All members of the Pastor Aide Club of Mt. Calvary F.W.B. Church are asked to meet at 7 p.m. tonight in the Education Department.

Cigar And Pipe Smoking Banned On Airliners

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government is banning cigar and pipe smoking on U.S. commercial airliners, and cigarettes may be next.

The Civil Aeronautics Board told its staff Tuesday to write a final order prohibiting pipe and cigar smoking. The directive will be issued in a week and take effect in either 30 or 60 days.

The same order will ban all smoking on aircraft when the ventilation system is not working.

Board members also proposed applying the pipe and cigar order to cigarettes, but that extension faces months of public hearings before final adoption.

The pipe and cigar order was proposed Oct. 26, 1976, and already has been discussed at open board meetings.

Accident Results In Boat Regulation

As an outgrowth of a boat accident that resulted in the loss of 16 lives, the Coast Guard has issued a Consumer Advisory on a proposed regulation that would require certain types of commercial passenger vessels to show the expiration date of the vessel's certificate of inspection on a prominent decal or sticker.

James Hecker, Flotilla Commander of Greenville Flotilla (16-5) of the Coast Guard Auxiliary, explains the proposed regulation.

"The types of vessel includes many party fishing boats," he notes, "as well as excursion boats and sightseeing boats.

"A certificate of inspection is issued by the Coast Guard only after it has been determined that the vessel meets all applicable regulations.

"The proposed regulation," Hecker states, "would require that the sticker — showing the expiration date — be posted where it can readily be seen by boarding passengers."

Copies of the proposed regulation can be obtained by writing to the U.S. Coast Guard (G-CMC&81) Washington, D. C., 20590. In addition, interested persons may submit comments on the proposed regulation to the address above, by referring to Docket Number CGD 76-162.

New Successes In Long Struggle Against Germs

By ALTON BLAKESLEE
AP Science Editor

NEW YORK (AP) — There are new successes in the continuing human struggle against bacteria and viruses.

Some examples, from a recent scientific conference:

—A new antibiotic is overcoming gonorrhea infections that have become resistant to the old standby, penicillin.

—An antibiotic is proving effective in preventing most episodes of "travelers' diarrhea," sometimes called "Montezuma's Revenge" by visitors to Mexico.

—Children with leukemia are living longer now because of drugs which, along with beneficial effects, also lower resistance to infections. So ordinarily mild chickenpox becomes deadly in about seven percent of such infected children. But a "memory protein" from human white blood cells promises to protect them.

—A limited human study indicates a new anti-viral drug may help control nasty effects from flu, such as fever, headache and runny nose.

These were among some 500 reports or papers presented to the Seventeenth Interscience Conference on Antimicrobial Agents and Chemotherapy in New York, attended by nearly 3,000 persons. It brought together microbiologists, chemists, biochemists, pharmacologists, clinicians and pathologists, including foreign specialists.

To amplify:

"One shot" penicillin once knocked out gonorrhea. But some strains became able to secrete an enzyme that destroys that antibiotic, hence they resist it.

Dr. William Fowler of Birmingham, England, told of cure rates of 98 percent in 320 men and 97 percent in 182 women with a new antibiotic, Cefuroxime, all given a single intramuscular injection. He calls the drug very effective agains gonorrhea, one of the world's most common infections.

Three West London Hospital researchers, J.D. Price, F.D. Fluker and Miranda M.C. Rees, reported similar good results in treating 79 women with Cefuroxime. About half the women had symptoms of gonorrhea, the rest — like so many women — had the infection but no apparent signs.

Doxycycline, derived from tetracycline, showed high effectiveness in protecting Peace Corps volunteers from travelers' diarrhea when they went to Kenya last November, said Dr. David A. Sack of The Johns Hopkins University in Baltimore.

The antibiotic seems to prevent formation in the intestines of colonies of the main type of bacteria, from the Escherichia coli family, that causes the diarrhea, he said.

Only one of 18 volunteers given the drug daily in the first three weeks of their visit came down with diarrhea, compared with 13 of 21 given a look-alike sugar pill, or placebo.

To protect leukemic children from chickenpox, Dr. Russell W. Steele of the University of Arkansas, Little Rock, used human transfer factor, the "memory protein" as he calls it, that prevents people from getting diseases like chickenpox or measles more than once. Purified from human white blood cells, it has been used to treat numerous infectious diseases.

In his tests, with transfer factor from adults who had recently had chickenpox, Dr. Steele found that "memory for this virus was transferred to children, thereby theoretically offering them protection" against chickenpox. Later, three children were accidentally exposed to chickenpox from brothers or sisters or playmates but none developed the disease. A larger study of the expected protective effect is under way.

The trial of the anti-viral drug, inosiplex, (trade name Isoprinosine), was conducted with 41 healthy volunteers given either inosiplex or placebo tablets, with the experimenters not knowing who received which until the trial was over.

One strain of Type A flu virus was introduced through the nose to infect the volunteers. Results indicate that inosiplex given both as treatment and as a preventive and treatment "is effective against symptoms of influenza," said a research team from West Virginia University, Morgantown.

Next they suggest a field trial or studies of humans if and when they are exposed to, or come down with, flu naturally. That might tell how useful the drug could be after you catch flu.

Kelp Diet Can Be Dangerous

My daughter falls for every diet she reads about or hears about. She's now on a kelp kick. I know nothing about it. Is there anything to be concerned about? — Mrs. E.L., W. Va.

Dear Mrs. L.:

Kelp has captured the interest of many health enthusiasts. Kelp is a seaweed which is high in mineral value and very low in calories. It plays an important part in the diet of many Far Eastern countries.

When kelp is used in addition to any well-balanced low-calorie diet, weight loss can be obtained. However, it is the low-calorie diet that is the key to weight loss.

This weed contains a rather large amount of potassium iodide. It therefore could be a potential health hazard for the small percentage of people who have an unusual sensitivity to iodine.

Whenever I get a cold I notice that my hearing becomes less acute. Can this permanently affect my hearing when I get older? — Miss A.T., Minn.

Dear Miss T.:

A tiny tube runs from the back of the nose to the middle ear. Through it, air normally passes and helps to maintain the mobility of the eardrum.

This tube can become blocked by an allergy, by a cold, by a sinus infection, during a descent in an airplane or while scuba diving. Large adenoids in a child can also obstruct this tube.

Blockage of this Eustachian tube affects the movement of the eardrum, especially when a small amount of fluid accumulates in the middle ear. When the fluid is absorbed the hearing almost always returns to normal.

The only time any complication arises is when this middle ear fluid becomes infected. Repeated infections may cause some adhesions to form in the middle ear and compromise the hearing.

It is for this reason that every acute infection of the ear, in children or adults, should be actively treated. This is the best way to prevent permanent hearing loss.

I dislike "low-fat" cottage cheese, but really love creamed cottage cheese. Since I watch my weight I wonder if I am consuming too many calories or worse, cholesterol. — Mrs. F.S., N.J.

Dear Mrs. S.:

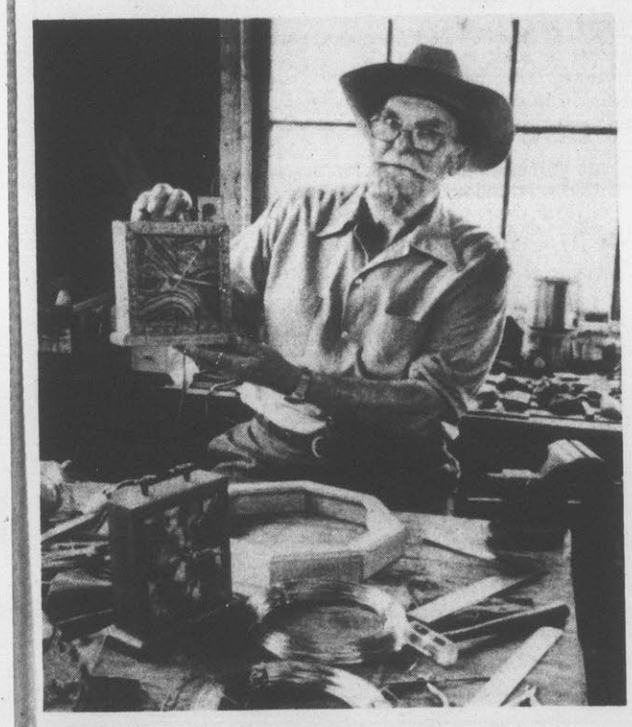

Dr. Jean Mayer, one of our country's great food experts says in his book, "A Diet for Living": "Low-fat and uncreamed cottage cheese are lower in fat and cholesterol than the creamed variety. But even creamed cottage cheese rates extremely well when viewed within the grand scheme of cheeses." The uncreamed variety, he says, contains only about 2 milligrams of cholesterol per ounce and negligible amounts of fat. The creamed variety contains about 4 mg. of cholesterol and about a gram of fat (about a fifth of a teaspoon of butter). Dr. Mayer compares this with an ounce of cheddar cheese which contains over 30 mg. of cholesterol and 9 grams of fat.

He says, "Cottage cheese in any form is a good low-fat choice."

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market pushed ahead today, getting more mileage out of Tuesday's favorable inflation news.

Advances took a 2-1 lead over declines in the early tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials was off .78 at 841.74 after the first half hour.

But the average would have shown a gain of better than a point had it not been for ex-dividends, or dividend-payment adjustments, in the prices of two of its components—Du Pont and American Telephone & Telegraph.

The market began a solid advance Tuesday after the government reported a smaller-than-expected 0.3 per cent rise in the consumer price index last month.

Delmarva Power & Light was the early volume leader among NYSE issues, unchanged at 13⅞. A 133,000-share block traded at that price.

On Tuesday the Dow Jones industrial average climbed 6.41 to 842.52.

Advances outnumbered losers by a 9-4 margin on the NYSE.

Big Board volume totaled 28.30 million shares against 20.11 million in the previous session.

The NYSE's composite index gained .45 to 52.94.

At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index rose 1.01 to 120.58.

Elite Prison Is Crowded

SANFORD, N.C. (AP) — Administrators of the Sanford Advancement Center here are trying to preserve the elite prison unit's character in the face of problems caused by overcrowding.

The prison opened 10 years ago for honor grade prisoners only. There were 42 of them.

"But we've got them from all levels now, which is why our escape rate is up so much," says assistant superintendent J.C. Simpson.

There were only two escapes per year at the facility until last year.

"We've already had a dozen escapes this year, but that's to be expected when you've got all levels of prisoners," Simpson said.

The 42 prisoners at the unit grew to 60 in 1975 when some prisoners began doing roadwork again. Then a year ago it was expanded again to 75 inmates.

"When they bumped it up to 60, we stacked bunks double on one side of the dormitory, and when they pushed it up to 75 we doubled up the other side," Simpson said.

Now the unit is being expanded to 107 inmates and a modular building for 32 of them is being installed.

Simpson said the staff has also expanded and the prison facility hasn't lowered its standards for work release and study release programs.

Hunter Says Never Again

ROANOKE, Va. (AP) — "Never again" says Patrick Brunson of rural Roanoke County when asked if he plans future hunting trips.

Brunson, 22, said he got off two shots from his old 8mm bolt action Mauser. One hit a deer and one hit him in the left arm, shattering a bone.

But it wasn't so much the wound as the reaction of a single-minded hunter that changed Brunson's mind about hunting.

Brunson said Tuesday he was chasing a wounded deer in southwest Virginia when he slipped down a ravine. The accident occurred Monday on the first day of deer-hunting season.

"I had just pumped another round into the chamber when I fell...My arm got tangled up in the strap and the muzzle was sticking into my arm when the butt hit the ground," and the rifle fired, he said.

Another hunter, attracted by the shot, approached Brunson.

"I asked him for directions to the road and he asked me for directions to the deer," Brunson said.

With his sleeve in tatters and his arm numb and bleeding heavily, Brunson again asked for help.

"He told me the road was right behind me and took off to track the deer," he said.

Brunson walked more than a mile to his car and was struggling with the keys when a ranger happened by and called an ambulance.

Brunson said the incident changed his outlook on hunting. "This was my last big game hunt," he said.

Wilson County Naming School For Physician

WILSON — The Wilson County Board of Education voted unanimously Monday night to rename a junior high school previously called Southeast, the Edgar T. Beddingfield Junior High School.

The naming is in honor of Dr. Ed Beddingfield, a Wilson County physician and longtime supporter of East Carolina University's medical school efforts. A Stantonsburg resident, he died of an apparent heart attack during a medical convention in Chicago this past summer. He was the brother of Brooks Beddingfield, a Greenville druggist, and the husband of Mrs. Lorraine Moore Beddingfield, a Pitt County native.

In action taken at the same meeting Monday, Wilson County's Southwest High School was renamed the James Baxter Hunt Jr. High School in honor of the Wilson Countian who is now governor of North Carolina.

DR. ED BEDDINGFIELD

According to a Wilson Daily Times report, a standing room only crowd filled the board room during the proceedings and applause broke out after both names were adopted.

Board member Dr. R. D. Richards made the motion that Southeast School, located close to Stantonsburg, be named for Dr. Beddingfield. He said, "I know of nobody who has ever contributed any more to humanity than Ed Beddingfield, in Wilson County, North Carolina or the United States of America, and for this reason, I feel it would be appropriate to name it for this man."

Schools Superintendent W. O. Fields presented a list of signatures supporting the Beddingfield name and Board Chairman Milton Adams said he had received a number of calls in support of the moves, also.

Unhappy Over Sharing Suit

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Officials of the evangelical PTL Club say they're not happy at all about sharing their lawsuit against the state with the Unification Church of the Rev. Sun Myung Moon.

The Moon church has joined the PTL lawsuit challenging the constitutionality of the state law requiring organizations which get more than half of their income from non-member donations to apply for a fund-raising license.

Both organizations are affected by the law. But PTL president Jim Bakker says the entry of the Moon church into the proceedings "only muddies the waters and causes questions as to the credibility of the action taken."

PTL vice president Bob Manzano said the PTL Club doesn't share beliefs and practices with the Unification Church and doesn't want to share the lawsuit either.

The PTL Club is a Charlotte-based organization that produces and syndicates a daily Christian television talk show with Bakker as host. PTL recently released an audit of its finances showing it received $1.8 million a month.

"Our only motive in the legal action against this obviously unconstitutional bill is to protect the religious freedoms guaranteed in the first amendment," said Manzano. "This was made obvious by our voluntarily making public our finances."

No Lack Of Cage Talent This Year

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

Phil Ford's high-flying style often makes news and always makes courtsiders nervous.

Once at a North Carolina game, he sailed after basketballs with his customary elan and twice landed on top of the press table. After the second trip, one observer quipped: "One more time back here and they'll make him pay for a ticket."

North Carolina's magnificent flying machine will be giving it another whirl this season, along with a splendid crop of players touted as one of the best in college basketball history.

Along with the ubiquitous Ford, such fine guards as Marquette's Butch Lee, Portland State's Freeman Williams and Holy Cross' Ron Perry will flash their shining talents.

There is no scarcity of excellent big men, either, with such centers as Minnesota's Mike Thompson, San Francisco's Bill Cartwright and Kentucky's Mike Phillips. The forwards show some tall talent, too, in players like UCLA's David Greenwood, Indiana State's Larry Bird and Wake Forest's Rod Griffin.

Ford is lauded as the best guard in the nation by North Carolina Coach Dean Smith, who rarely deals in absolutes. While others may argue that point, Ford is exceptionally good.

The 6-foot-2 senior runs Smith's well-known four-corner offense with such efficacy that it has been given his personal appellation: the "Ford Corners." Orchestrating Smith's complex offensive manuever with his gifted ball-handling ability, Ford led the Tar Heels into the NCAA final against Marquette last season.

Lee, director of Marquette's 67-59 championship victory over the Tar Heels at Atlanta, also is without question one of the country's premier guards. The 6-1 Lee is one of the great penetrators in the college game, and like Ford, dominates from the backcourt as few can.

Williams, the nation's leading scorer last season, passed up the National Basketball Association hardship draft and will be shooting for more extraordinary figures this season. Williams averaged nearly 39 points per game in the 1976-77 season, including a 71-point burst against Southern Oregon.

Perry was the country's most exciting freshman guard last season. The leading freshman scorer with a 23-point average, the Crusaders' backcourt star won honors as rookie of the year in the East Coast Athletic Conference.

Minnesota basketball this season starts and ends with Thompson, who holds or will hold every Gophers' offensive record by the time the season ends. The 6-10 center was a 61 per cent shooter last season while scoring 22 points and averaging nine rebounds per game — figures that got him elected to some Player of the Year selections.

The 6-11 Cartwright shoots as well as any big man in basketball — college or pro. He figures to keep on doing what comes naturally, as he did last season with nearly 20 points and nine rebounds per game.

Phillips anchors one of the best front lines in college basketball at Kentucky. The rugged 6-10 center led the Wildcats to the National Invitation Tournament title two years ago and into the NCAA playoffs last season. He figures to do more leading this year — perhaps all the way to the top.

Greenwood, a 6-10 junior forward, is one of UCLA's slam-dunk specialists who not only can score but rebound with the country's best big men. The leading man in the Bruins' cast this season, the graceful Greenwood should improve on his 1976-77 figures of 10 rebounds and 17 points per game.

Byrd was among the most proficient and least recognized players last season, with averages of 33 points and more than 13 rebounds per game. The Sycamores' star might make more of a name for himself this season, now that Indiana State has shedded its small town image and joined a "name" conference — the Missouri Valley.

Griffin is a strong specimen at 6-6 and 225 pounds who throws his weight around under the basket. He hit a sizzling 62 per cent from the floor last season, averaging almost 21 points and nine rebounds, and was named Atlantic Coast Conference Player of the Year over many other standouts.

Other star quality forwards to watch this season are Jack Givens and Rick Robey of Kentucky; Utah's Jeff Judkins; Gary Winton of Army; Marvin Delph of Arkansas; Greg Sanders of St. Bonaventure; Lew Massey of North Carolina-Charlotte; Calvin Natt of Northeast Louisiana; Purdue's Walter Jordan; North Carolina's Mike O'Koren, and Archie Aldridge of Miami, Ohio.

Along with the previously mentioned players, the top-flight guards are: John Douglas of Kansas; Bradley's Roger Phegley; Mike Evans of Kansas State; Clemson's Stan Rome; Louisville's Darrell Griffith; Sidney Moncreif of Arkansas, and Lionel Harvey of Cincinnati.

Among other top centers are: Jerome Whitehead, Marquette; Roosevelt Bouie, Syracuse; George Johnson, St. John's; Dave Corzine, DePaul; Mike Gminski, Duke, and Mike Santos, Utah State.

Recruiting efforts during the off-season turned up some diamonds in the rough everywhere in the country, with nearly every conference and top independent team claiming "best-ever" years in that department.

Among the outstanding freshmen this season are: forwards Albert King of Maryland and Earvin Johnson of Michigan State; guards Eugene Banks of Duke and Wes Matthews of Wisconsin, and center Gilbert Salinas at Notre Dame.

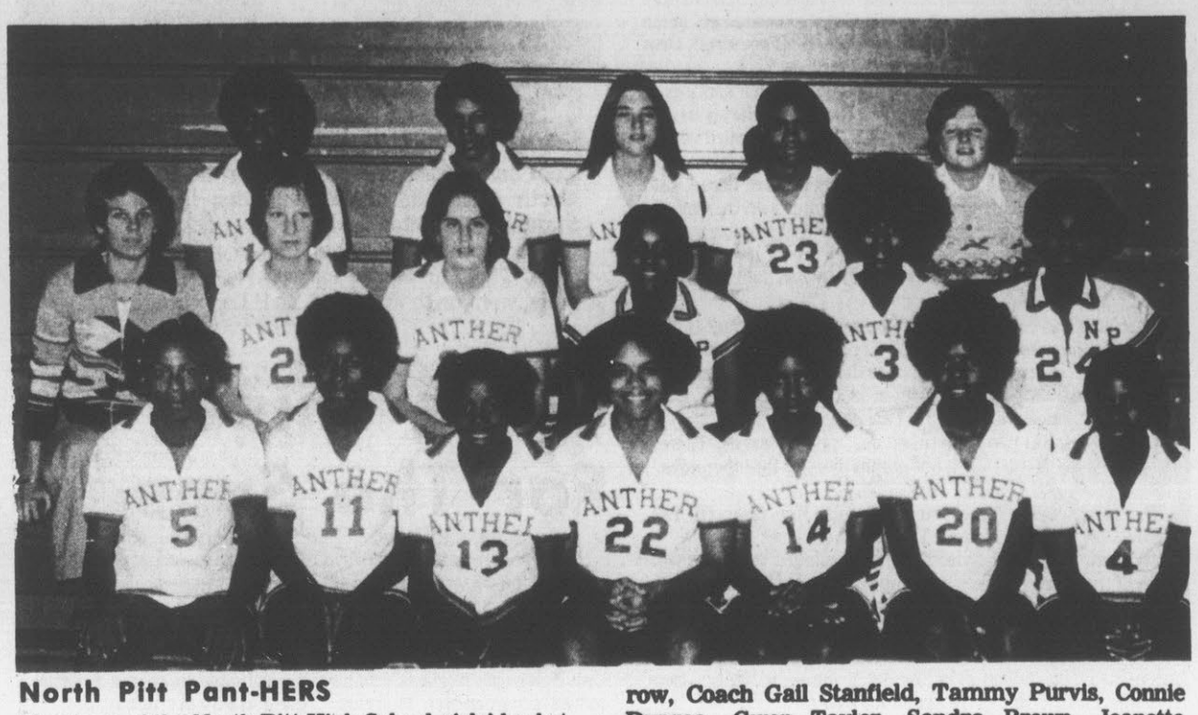

This widespread array of talent will provide more balance than has been seen in recent years in college basketball. As many as two dozen or more teams have a realistic shot at winning the national championship.

Most of the conferences have fierce top-to-bottom energy and there are few clear-cut favorites anywhere, including North Carolina's defending ACC champions.

Besides the Ford-led Tar Heels, the ACC boasts several attractive teams — including Wake Forest, Clemson, Duke, North Carolina State and Maryland, with its omnipresent King. The ACC, intermittently touted as the strongest league in the country, might live up to that lofty billing this season, but will get plenty of competition from the Big Ten.

Like the ACC, the Big Ten recruited some of the nation's top high school talent this season and the consensus is that the league might be the best balanced in its history. Defending champion Michigan, Michigan State, Ohio State and Wisconsin appear to have scored the high-

North Pitt Girls, With Number Returning, Look To Challenge

By JIM KYLE
Reflector Sports Writer

Though first-year coach Gail Stanfield admittedly is unfamiliar with the competition in the Eastern Carolina Conference, but from looking at her North Pitt girls' team in practice she predicts a pretty good season for the Pant-HERS.

"I think we'll have a good season. We've got a pretty strong team with a lot of people back and a lot of depth. I'm pretty hopeful."

The Pant-HERS finished third in the ECC last season. They return all but two players off of that team and the experience provided by that fact will be a plus this season.

Cynthia Barnes, a 5-10 junior, is "probably going to be the leader" of the team, according to Stanfield. "Cynthia is the backbone of the club now and a real strong player."

At the other forward will be Michelle Brown (5-10, senior). "She's a very strong rebounder," Stanfield said, although her shooting is inconsistent at this point.

At the post will be Jackie Clemmons (5-9, senior). "She's not very aggressive and has still got a lot to learn, but I think she'll come through for us," according to Stanfield.

In the backcourt, Sue Grimes (5-4, senior) and Geraldine Dixon (5-4, sophomore) are expected to be the starters. Both are good ballhandlers, Stanfield said and Grimes is very quick.

A pair of forwards, Barbara Morning and Kay Hines, are expected to help out in a reserve capacity. They are both good shooters and rebounders, according to their coach.

At guard, the back-ups will be ninth-grader Linda Manning and Rosa Murchinson. Manning is "not quite aggressive enough now, but she will be," Stanfield said, while Murchinson "could start into the season; I see a very good year for Rosa."

Kim Sharpe "is going to be very good at center" as a back-up, according to Stanfield, and she could also play some forward.

Stanfield was unable to make any predictions about the conference race, but said, "I hope to think that we have a good possibility and I think we do if we cut down on our mistakes. But, as for the rest of the teams, I really don't know."

Expos' Dawson Is Top Rookie

By FRANK BROWN
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Centerfielder Andre Dawson today became the second player in the nine-year history of the Montreal Expos to win the National League's Rookie of the Year Award, beating Steve Henderson of the New York Mets by one vote.

"I'm very happy, regardless of how many votes I won by," Dawson said by telephone from his Florida home.

The 23-year-old Dawson, who hit .282 with 19 home runs, 65 runs batted in and 21 stolen bases, received 10 votes in balloting by a 24-man committee of the Baseball Writers Association of America.

Henderson, a leftfielder, got nine votes, while first baseman-outfielder Gene Richards of the San Diego Padres received four votes and pitcher Floyd Bannister of the Houston Astros got the other vote.

Pitcher Carl Morton, who won in 1970, was the other Montreal player to take the prize.

"I was a bit surprised that it was as close as it was," said Dawson. "I'm not taking anything away from Steve Henderson. He's a fine ballplayer and had a super year considering the time he spent with the Mets."

Henderson joined the Mets from Cincinnati in the celebrated Tom Seaver deal last June 15. He didn't begin playing regularly until late that month, but finished the season with a .297 batting average, 12 home runs, 65 RBI and six stolen bases.

"Steve's a super player. I see him also as one day being a superstar," said Dawson, who combined with Warren Cromartie and Ellis Valentine to give the Expos one of the best young outfields in baseball.

Henderson became the second Mets player to finish second by one point in the rookie voting, pitcher Jerry Koosman losing the 1968 election to catcher Johnny Bench of the Cincinnati Reds by that margin.

Richards had a .290 average and 56 stolen bases, while Bannister compiled an 8-9 record for the Astros.

Jimmy Brown To Be Honored

JAMESVILLE — Jimmy Brown, former big league baseball player with the St. Louis Cardinals, and a native of Jamesville, will be honored December 3 by a banquet in him home town.

The program and banquet is being sponsored by the Jamesville Ruritan Club and the Jaycees. It will be held in the Jamesville School cafeteria, and will feature a number of baseball stars of yesterday and today.

Among those expected to appear on the program are current players Jim "Catfish" Hunter of the New York Yankees, and Gaylord Perry, of the Texas Rangers, both natives of the area.

Several former teammates including Enos "Country" Slaughter, are expected to be present or to send messages to Brown for the ceremonies.

Brown played professionally with the Cardinals from 1937 to 1943. He ended his career with the Pittsburgh Pirates in 1946, after a tour of duty with the Army Air Crops during World War II. He also served as a manager for several minor league teams following the end of his active career as a player.

Brown served as the captain of the 1942 Cardinal team that gained a four games to one triumph over the Yankees in the World Series.

Tickets for the banquet are $5 each, and may be obtained from any member of the Jamesville Ruritans or Jaycees.

Tickets can also be ordered by calling 792-7683 or 792-7337.

Aggies Given Upset Edge Over Texas

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — What's so tough about picking college football winners?

Last week, in a fit of pique at all the skullduggery by the various bowl committees, this corner picked every upset where a Top Twenty team was concerned, 10 in all.

And guess what? Three of them actually came about, giving several bowls plently of consternation — Colorado State over Arizona State, San Diego State over Flordia State and Houston over Texas Tech. In addition, Clemson needed a last-minute touchdown to beat South Carolina.

Even with all the crazy selections, last week's score was 39 right and 19 wrong for a .672 percentage. Imagine if we were really bearing down. For the season — and these will be the last picks before the bowl games — it's 546-220-15 — .713.

This is the week that will settle the final lineup for the Cotton, Bluebonnet, Orange, Liberty, Rose and Fiesta bowls.

Texas at Texas A&M: These bitter rivals have played six common opponents. Texas has the edge five times and the sixth is only a one-point difference in A&M's favor. Texas is the nation's only unbeaten team so leave it to the good old Aggies to foul that up. Upset Special of the Week ... Texas A&M 24-17.

Nebraska at Oklahoma: The Cornhuskers have a different offense and, according to Oklahoma's Barry Switzer, I.M. Hipp "gives them a dimension they haven't had since Johnny Rodgers — a back who can score from anywhere on the field." Overall team speed will decide this one ... Oklahoma 35-21.

Penn State at Pitt: The way things have been going lately in Western Pennsylvania, all the traditional rivalries may pale in comparison to this one before too long. Besides, the Panthers think Joe Paterno cost them a shot at the Orange Bowl ... Pitt 30-24.

UCLA vs. Southern California: A victory sends UCLA to the Rose Bowl. USC hasn't done much right lately, losing four of its last six games, which means the Trojans probably will louse things up for their crosstown enemies ... Southern Cal 24-14.

Arizona at Arizona State: A funny thing happened to the Sun Devils on their trek to the Fiesta Bowl — they got bumped off by Colorado State in the snow when a victory would have clinched the WAC berth. When was the last time it snowed in Tempe? ... Arizona State 38-17.

Army vs. Navy at Philadelphia: The wolves say Army Coach Homer Smith's job is riding on this one despite the Cadets' first winning season in five years. Smith has brought Army back to respectability, but the Middies seem to have his number ... Navy 24-17.

Arkansas at Texas Tech: We've picked Texas A&M to deal the Cotton Bowl a staggering blow by knocking off Texas. Why shouldn't the Orange Bowl suffer, too? Second Upset Special ... Texas Tech 21-20.

Other games:

East — Boston College 49, Holy Cross 7.

South — Alabama 35, Auburn 7; Jackson State 28, Alcorn State 0; Louisiana Tech 25, Northeast Louisiana 14; Southwestern Louisiana 27, McNeese State 8; Georgia 20, Georgia Tech 17; Lousisana State 28, Wyoming 14; Florida 34, Miami, Fla. 17; Grambling State 42, Southern U. 21; Tennessee 24, Vanderbilt 14; Virginia Tech 27, VMI 17.

Midwest — Miami, O. 17, Cincinnati 13.

Southwest — Baylor 29, Texas Christian 15; Houston 33, Rice 13; West Texas State 34, Southern Illinois 14.

Far West — San Diego State 28, San Jose State 24; Brigham Young 56, Texas-El Paso 20; Colorado State 30, Utah State 10; South Carolina 23, Hawaii 16; Boise State 34, Idaho 24; Long Beach State 38, Bowling Green 28; New Mexico 24, Utah 17.

Cox Is Named

ATLANTA (AP) — Bobby Cox, a light-hitting infielder who became "a tough son of a gun" as a minor league manager, is the man Atlanta Braves owner Ted Turner chose to lead his cellar-dwelling National League team to baseball's "promised land."

The 36-year-old Cox is the youngest manager in the major leagues. He succeeded Dave Bristol, fired last month after two consecutive last-place finishes with the Braves.

Yankees Sign Rich Gossage

By FRANK BROWN
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — On the day he signed a six-year, multimillion dollar contract with the New York Yankees, relief pitcher Rich Gossage thought back to the days in the rookie leagues when he, Bucky Dent and Terry Forster slept on the floor of their one-bedroom apartment in Appleton, Wis.

"We slept in front of the air conditioner, catching our death of cold," he recalled.

Those were the days in the rookie leagues, "Way down at rock bottom," according to Dent, when the trio only had one mattress to share and an "old green '55 Chevy we used to drive around in."

Now Dent is the Yankees' shortstop and making considerably more than the $500 per month he and Gossage used to get in the rookie leagues. And for the next six years, if all goes well, Dent will be watching Gossage pitch in relief for New York.

That's because the righthanded Gossage sold his services to the Yankees, who also own a certain left-handed reliever named Sparky Lyle — the American League's Cy Young Award winner for the 1977 season.

"I told Rich I thought he'd really enjoy playing here," said Dent, who was his teammate at Appleton, later with the Chicago White Sox, and now with the defending World Champions.

Gossage feels the same way. "I'm very proud. It's a very big privilege for me. My family and I have followed the Yankees for a long time," he said.

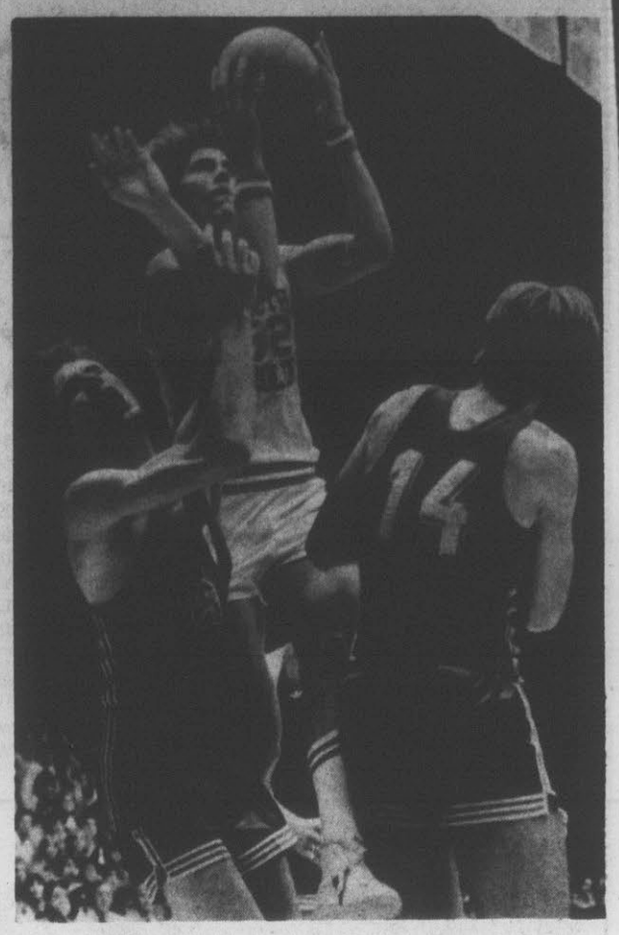

Now, courtesy of the free agent sweepstakes, he brings to New York a brilliant season with an 11-9 record, 26 saves and a 1.62 earned run average in 72 appearances for the Pittsburgh Pirates. Add that to Lyle's figures of 13-5 record, 26 saves, a 2.17 ERA and 72 appearances for the Yankees.

"We got into 144 games between us," said Gossage. "There's 162 in a season, so that left a few games over for the other guys."

The other guys will be youngsters like Ken Clay, Gil Patterson, Jim Beattie and Steve Taylor.

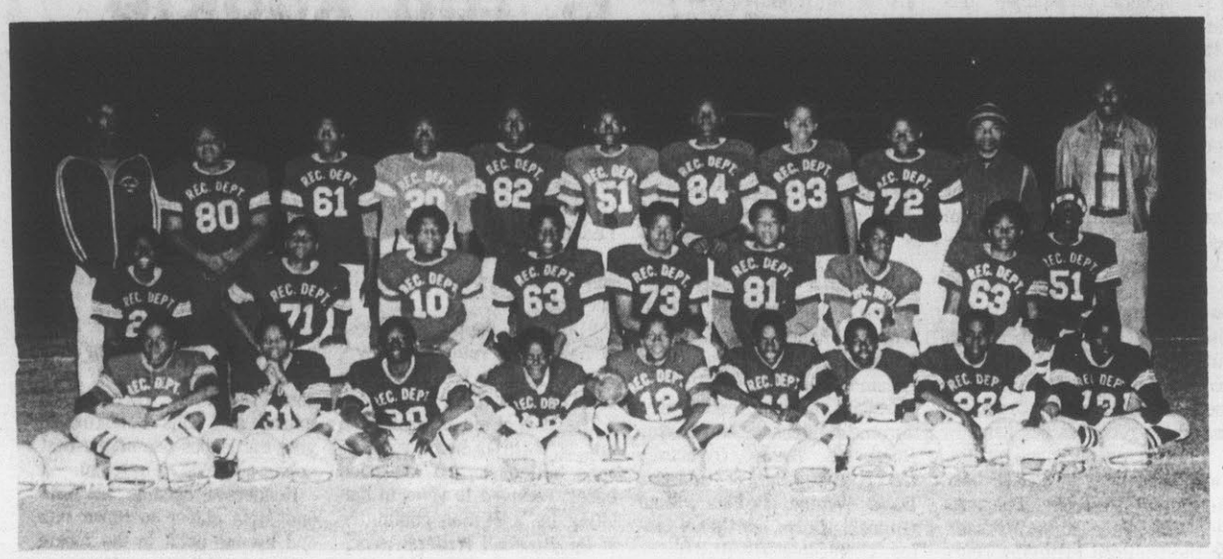

"With Gossage and Lyle, there is a margin for error with some of the young pitchers," explained Yankees President Gabe Paul. "We haven't had much of an opportunity to get them in, but with this kind of a bullpen, that will be different."

Team owner George Steinbrenner's investment, some say, is more than $2.5 million over the six years — a far cry from Gossage's sandwich days in Appleton, Wis.

Coming In Hard

Tom Zaliagiris, senior starter for the University of North Carolina, drives hard for the basket as Stanislav Kropilak and Zdenek Dousa (14) of the Czechoslovakia National Men's team blocks his path. The Tar Heels, ranked No. 1 in pre-season polls, went on to win, 99-65. (AP Laserphoto)

Tackle League Champs

The Redskins captured the Recreation and Parks Department's tackle football championship this year. Members of the team are, first row, left to right: Harry Williams, Tony Jenkins, Trenton Floyd, Tony Clemmons, Tony Teel, Jimmy Holloway, Tony Bardley, LaMont Duffie, Frankie Carr; second row, Billie Best, James Peterson, Keith Phillips, Michael Spells, Steve Staton, Frank Norris, Ronnie Worsley, Dallas Staton, Willie Jones; third row, Coach Alonza Price, Kent Best, Donnell Spellman, Donald Nobles, William Battle, Freddie Cherry, Marty Tyson, Larry Batts, Nathaniel Brown, Coach Redbone Williams, Coach Howard Pearce. est in the recruiting war.

UCLA, the perennial Pacific-8 Conference champion, faces possibly its toughest league battle in more then a decade. The defending champions, who have won the Pac-8 title 15 times in the last 16 years, face a stiff challenge this year from Oregon, Oregon State, Washington and Washington State.

San Francisco's Dons, defending champions of the West Coast Athletic Conference, are the preseason favorites in their league, but like UCLA, won't have as easy a time as in previous seasons.

The Metro-Seven appears to have as many sardines as its number proclaims, with perhaps Cincinnati the biggest fish in the pool and Louisville one of its closest challengers. The Missouri Valley Conference has expanded to nine teams this season with the addition of Creighton and Indiana State, and more than half of them will be in the race.

A Penn spokesman calls the Ivy League race "the closest league situation in years" and the Quakers and Princeton will be among the crowded field. The Big Eight features a bunch of heavyweight contenders, including defending champion Kansas State, Kansas, Missouri, Oklahoma and Colorado.

At least four teams are capable of winning the Mid-American Conference, including Miami of Ohio. At least the same number will be contending for the Big Sky crown, with defending champion Idaho State coming back to the pack after losing three players to graduation. The Western Athletic Conference shapes up as a two-team race — Utah and New Mexico.

In the East Coast Conference, Hofstra lost its entire starting five through graduation and will have to regroup in a wide-open field. The Ohio Valley Conference, as well, will have a wide-open race, one that could be one of the most balanced in the league's half-century of competition.

Long Beach State is one of the favorites in the tough Pacific Coast Athletic Conference. Furman and VMI head the Southern Conference, and Rutgers and Villanova are rated tops in the Eastern Eight. Only the Southeastern Conference, with Kentucky, and the Southwest Conference, with Arkansas, appear to have teams considerably stronger than the rest.

Among the top independents are: Marquette; North Carolina-Charlotte; Notre Dame, Syracuse; St. John's; St. Bonaventure; Holy Cross; Nevada-Las Vegas; Detroit, and Dayton.

Davis Shines For The Suns

By ALEX SACHARE
AP Sports Writer

Rookie forward Walter Davis is the Phoenix Suns' newest bright spot.

The 6-foot-6 forward from the University of North Carolina scored a career-high 34 points, nine in the last 3½ minutes, helping the Suns to a 118-107 National Basketball Association triumph over the Los Angeles Lakers Tuesday night. It was Phoenix' fifth straight victory at home.

"He's a heckuva player," said Lakers Coach Jerry West. "I saw him play a lot at the collegiate level and he's just a great player, and unselfish. He's as good a rookie as I've seen play this year."

That's exactly what the Suns were hoping for when they went into the college draft in June. Both their forwards, Curtis Perry and Gar Heard, had missed much of last season because of injuries and Coach John MacLeod was seeking insurance in case one of them couldn't come back. He also wanted a player who could add some quickness to a relatively slow frontcourt.

He got his man in Davis.

"He does a lot of things very well," said MacLeod. "He brings the ball down like a guard, has the ability to play defense and is the best shooting forward we've had since I came to Phoenix. And he's got just a super attitude."

In other NBA games Tuesday night, the Buffalo Braves edged the New York Knicks 102-101, the Denver Nuggets trimmed the Washington Bullets 119-114, the Philadelphia 76ers beat the Houston Rockets 105-99, the Milwaukee Bucks defeated the Golden State Warriors 109-88 and the New Orleans Jazz stopped the Indiana Pacers 123-118.

Phoenix led by as many as 17 points before Lakers rookie James Edwards scored 11 points in the third quarter. Los Angeles pulled within 105-102, but Davis' three-point play with 3½ minutes to go put Phoenix comfortably in front again.

Braves 102, Knicks 101

Randy Smith's 17-foot jumper with three seconds to play was the winning basket for Buffalo, which got 34 points from Billy Knight, 26 points from Smith and 19 rebounds from Swen Nater.

Nuggets 119, Bullets 114

Denver continued to buck the trend around the league by posting its fourth victory in the last five starts on the road, beating the Bullets at Landover, Md. as Bob Wilkerson scored eight points in the last 1:06.

76ers 105, Rockets 99

Philadelphia raised its record to 11-5, including 9-1 under Coach Billy Cunningham, as Doug Collins scored 27 points and George McGinnis 24.

Bucks 109, Warriors 88

Golden State shot just 29 per cent from the field in the first period against Milwaukee, fell behind 35-22 and never recovered. Brian Winters led a balanced Bucks' attack with 22 points.

First Thanksgiving Feast Priced Out Of Sight

REAL THANKSGIVING FOOD — Troy Creane prepares a stuffed haddock, which experts at Plimoth Plantation in Plymouth, Mass., say was probably the food of the Pilgrims at this time of year. They say turkey was eaten earlier in the season. (AP Laserphoto)

By HUGH R. MULLIGAN
AP Special Correspondent

The town fathers of Plymouth, Mass., should be thankful this Thanksgiving that the first Thanksgiving was held 356 years ago instead of here and now.

At today's food prices, they never could afford it.

It will be recalled from Governor Bradford's Journal that the Mayflower settlers early on established good vibes with the Wampanoag, the resident tribe, when colonist Edward Winslow cured Big Chief Massasoit of his chronic constipation by administering the favorite physic of Dr. Samuel Fuller, the Pilgrim physician who apparently didn't make wigwam calls.

If George Armstrong Custer had had the hindsight to treat Sitting Bull in this humane manner a couple of centuries later, he might have avoided the unpleasantness at the Little Big Horn and the Sioux chief might have stuck to his old name of Jumping Badger.

Anyhow, the relieved sagamore of the Wampanoag was so grateful at rejoining the regular fellows he warned the Pilgrims of a conspiracy to wipe out Plymouth by the rival Massachusetts Indians and with alacrity, considering his condition, accepted an invite to the First Thanksgiving Dinner.

But, as it turned out, the chief's heart was bigger than the menu. On the appointed day in 1621, he turned up with 90 of his braves, instead of just a few assistant sachems to grace the head table, and thereby created history's first Thanksgiving panic in the kitchen.

From the chronicles we know that of the 102 passengers who arrived on the Mayflower, including the two born at sea, only 55 survived that first winter and only five of the 18 wives, who by now probably wished they hadn't either. Here they were slaving over an open fire for an unexpected guest list of 146 and only enough food for a third that many, subtracting the five little ones.

Miles Standish dispatched four of his militiamen with fowling pieces to bag a gaggle of geese, a gobble of wild turkeys and a brace of mallards in the surrounding woods. Nymphet Priscilla Mullins stopped holding hands with John Alden long enough to pluck some lobsters, clams, oysters, cod and eel from the town brook. And the embarassed Indians untucked their napkins, unquivered their arrows and came back with five deer.

Somehow they got it all together and came up with an eight-course menu that even now would tantalize the cost accountants in the catering department of an elite bar mitzvah palace. There were no pies or fruit cakes that first Thanksgiving, because the colonists had run out of sugar, but the bogs were full of cranberries and, after a fine harvest, the common house larder was piled high with corn, barley, peas and dried fruit.

The Indians had yet to show them how to use pumpkins, but they had learned the fireside secrets of Indian pudding and ash cakes and how to pop corn and douse it in maple sap, a favorite with the children. The sober Pilgrim Fathers, who didn't trust the local water, brought over enough Scotch whiskey, Holland gin and beer, and other "strong spirits" to last more than a year after the Mayflower departed, and Massasoit's medicine man had taught them how to make red and white wine from the wild grapes that abounded on Cape Cod.

Thomas Hogan, director of catering at the New York Hilton, figures the original Thanksgiving dinner from soup to nuts, from the lobster bisque and oyster stew down through the haunch of venison, the roast wild turkey, the braised mallard and the stuffed goose, "would cost $50 a person today at any first-class hotel or restaurant."

And this, he points out, does not include the high cost of Scotch or the Holland gin at $22 a jug and the Dutch beer at $1.75 a bottle.

"Some of the items like the wild turkey would be a bit difficult to come by today," says Hogan, "but we could duplicate the original menu if given advance warning. The other night someone ordered mallard duck and we had to get it from the 21 Club, about the only place you can find it."

Let's see now, 146 people at $50 a head and figuring 28 to 30 shots to the bottle of booze, that's another $6 per... All told, something on the order of $8,176 not counting tips, and a little something extra to keep those five colonial dames in the kitchen from going on strike.

Have a happy.

Stained Glass Craft Is A Thriving Enterprise

By EARNI YOUNG
Associated Press Writer

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Jim Helf is riding the crest of the antique and craft craze.

As head of Franklin Art Glass Studios, Inc., Helf is enjoying something many manufacturing companies aren't these days — growth plus profit.

"In the last 10 years our sales have tripled," Helf said of his Columbus firm, founded in 1924.

In that period, Helf said the studio's annual sales have risen to an estimated $1 million.

"I would say that $200 million is spent on stained glass in this country in a year ... I would say that is a conservative estimate," Helf said.

"A lot of our projects are church windows, but there's a trend towards secular work ... restaurants and homes ... which has grown to about 50 percent of our business in the last five years," he said.

Helf, 56, who took the firm over from his father in the early 1950s, anticipated the trend and relocated the studios in the city's German Village during that area's restoration boom in the mid-1960s. Here lived the craftsmen, the artists, with a strong heritage of stained glass. Many homes and restaurants in the community used stained glass to reflect the architecture of the turn of the century.

"I suppose 50 homes in German Village have some of our work and so does every restaurant," Helf said. "There is a definite trend today for the use of stained glass other than churches."

Helf ranks his firm, with its 35 to 40 employees, as the second largest stained glass studio in the country listed with the Stained Glass Association of America. He indicated the ranking is based on business volume.

All of the glass work — cutting, glazing, waterproofing, piecing together and final installation — is done by hand. Helf points out that even a small project may contain several thousand pieces of glass and take four months to a year to complete.

Stained glass windows can range in cost from $15 to $100 per square foot, depending on the intricacy of the work, Helf said.

He says the firm is finding it increasingly hard to find enough glass to keep up with orders.

Helf is a past president of the Stained Glass Association, which he said had 73 active studio members — an increase of 50 percent over the last five years — and five glass factories to supply them.

Helf has also noticed changes in design trends of glass work.

"Design trends are going backward ... leaning toward the traditional ... more so in secular work than religious work which is 70 percent to 80 percent in the modern style," he said.

As the demand for stained glass as an architectural and decorative accent increases so does its popularity with hobbyists and artists.

Materials for hobby and craft work represent close to 15 percent of the firm's annual gross, said Gary Helf, 30, who assists his father as vice president.

Leading Indicators Are Sometimes Misleading

INTERSTATE SECURITIES CORP.

A great deal of noise was generated in August with the announcement that the preliminary Index of Leading Indicators declined 0.2 percent in July. This supposedly marked the third consecutive monthly decline in the index. Because this is a composite of 12 indicators which usually turn in advance of the rest of the economy, the Index of Leading Indicators is believed capable of calling peak turning points in the economy in advance.

Unfortunately, the Leading Indicators are often misleading as well. Only ten of the indicators are available for preliminary reporting, and the subsequent addition of the other two often results in substantial revisions in the preliminary figures. Thus, with the addition of the remaining two, the July decline of 0.2 percent was revised to a gain of 0.1 percent. The August increase of 0.8 percent was later revised to a solid gain of 1.4 percent, and the September Leading Indicators produced a preliminary gain of 0.3 percent. Thus it would appear our economy is headed up, rather than down.

In addition to being misleading, the Leading Indicators are sometimes inaccurate. In the post-war period, the Leading Indicators have declined for three consecutive months 17 times. They correctly called peak turning points in the economy in advance six of 11 times. On one occasion, the composite declined for seven consecutive months and was not followed by a recession. In 1966, the Leading Indicators declined for nine consecutive months with no following recession. Additionally, lead time varies substantially from cycle to cycle.

It might also be useful to compare the present level of the Leading Indicators with their levels in previous recoveries. The originally reported three month decline (May-June-July, 1977) was a cumulative 0.7 percent. The average three month drop in post war history is 2.7 percent. And, despite those months of decline, the Indicators are still more than 20 percent ahead of the trough reached in March 1975. The average post-war gain in the composite is 15 percent.

The composite of leading indicators was up 0.3 percent in September (preliminary), with six of the indicators negative and four positive. Negative components included the average workweek and layoff rate, the number of companies reporting lower deliveries, new factory orders, building permits, and stock prices. Rising were sensitive prices, new orders for plant and equipment, liquid assets, and the money supply.

The May- June-July weakness, and some of the current softness, can be traded to several factors. The previous declines in new factory changeovers at auto companies, and the previously very strong commercial aircraft business. Sensitive materials prices have recovered somewhat from their earlier low levels. The average workweek and layoff rate indexes reflect the slower pace of current business and a reduced rate of inventory building. Building permits reflect a slower rate of growth in the housing area, following an earlier boom.

While the leading indicators can be useful in predicting trends, little importance should be attached to monthly figures. Later revisions in the preliminary results are often substantial and can change the direction of the composite index. Three consecutive months of decline are not always followed by recession. When they are, the lead time can vary from a few months to nearly a year.

Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Old Master At Work On 'Tube'

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — CBS has this special tonight. It stars an elderly, cigar-smoking gent who started in show biz at age seven, singing with the Peewee Quartet on New York's East Side.

You should see the show, "The George Burns One-Man Show," even though he shares the bill with Bob Hope, Ann-Margret, the Captain and Tennille and Gladys Knight and the Pips.

True, too much is made of the fact Burns now is 81. Indeed, the announcer jokingly says the guests are "standing by just in case" he requires help with this one-man show of his.

They help, but the truth is, Burns doesn't need it. His comedy timing remains razor-sharp and he exudes a sense of fun, an enjoyment of work, rarely seen on specials starring far younger tads.

Burns begins by noting he got Hope as a guest merely by calling him and coughing, causing Hope to be alarmed and summon backup acts, leut the hour prove too rigorous for a man of Burns' age.

This proves a running gag for the show, in which Hope and the rest kid the star, do their respective thing on the stage, then exit to let Burns solo with ancient songs and assorted drolleries.

Among other things, Burns notes he found a small hole in the wall between his dressing room and that of Toni Tennille. He pondered plugging the hole, he says, but "I figured why bother? Let her enjoy herself..."

Hope, in his stint, observes that Burns has been an entertainer so long "he once told Noah he doesn't play cruises."

Because of Burns' advanced years, there's a pretty nurse on hand. She complains she can't find his pulse. He explains: "I live in Beverly Hills and have a unlisted pulse."

Good jokes and good times abound in this show. But the best moment is a shaggy vaudeville story he tells about the time he was 19 and lodged in an actors' hotel in Philadelphia.

The yarn concerns coffee, a maid named Trixie, the hotel owner, a tramp actor named Jack Milo and amour. And boy, is it complicated.

But it is mighty funny and delivered with such precision ... well, watch the show tonight and see the master at work for yourself. ——

This has been a busy specials week and it's not letting up. Tonight's Burns show is preceded by a CBS musical, "Once Upon a Brothers Grimm." NBC has a TV version of "Last of the Mohicans."

Thanksgiving night, NBC has a Hanna-Barbera cartoon special featuring such as Yogi Bear, then a Beatles tribute.

On Friday, CBS has a circus show and a two-hour salute by "Rolling Stone," the establishment counter-culture paper, to itself. NBC has a Winnie the Pooh repeat and a teenage beauty pageant.

ABC on that night goes on a nostalgia binge, reuniting "The Patridge Family" and "My Three Sons" in one show.

Investigating Two Incidents

The Pitt County Sheriff's Department is investigating two break-in and larceny incidents that occurred on successive nights at a rural store.

Sheriff Ralph Tyson said that Ashley Jones reported that his store on Rt. 1, Greenville was entered on Sunday and Monday nights.

On Sunday night, Jones reported the theft of two .22 caliber rifles and a 16 gauge shotgun, with a total value of $95, while Monday night's entry resulted in the theft of $30 from a cigarette machine and merchandise valued at $49, the sheriff said.

Entrance to the store, it was pointed out, was gained after a rear window was broken. Damage to the business was set at $50.

The author of the Declaration of Independence was Thomas Jefferson, but few Americans knew this until the fact appeared in a newspaper in 1784, according to the National Geographic Society.

Opening lead: Two of ♠.

It is all very well to produce the card nearest your thumb. That will always permit you to find the card you want to play, but it robs you of an important means of communication with partner.

East-West took advantage of the vulnerability to push North-South to an uncomfortable level. Note that at five diamonds doubled West would not be set more than two tricks—indeed, he would go down only one if he engineered a strip and endplay. And the preemptive tactics would have paid off handsomely had the defense been accurate.

West led the two of clubs, and everyone at the table knew it was a singleton. Declarer won in dummy as East followed with the three, and immediately led a trump in an attempt to eliminate a club ruff. West took his ace and now had to decide how to reach his partner. After staring at the ceiling for divine guidance, he eventually decided that his partner was more likely to hold the ace of diamonds than the ace of spades. Unfortunately, he was proved wrong, and declarer romped home with his contract after drawing the remaining trump and setting up dummy's clubs with a ruff.

A querulous West demanded of his partner: "Why didn't you signal where your entry was?"

"How could I?" retorted East. "I never had the opportunity to discard."

Signalling via discards is only one way to get a message to your partner. There are other means available, and one would have worked here. East should have followed with the jack of clubs to the first trick! Since he could not be encouraging the lead of that suit, he would be saying that his unnecessarily high card indicated an entry in the higher-ranking side suit—in this case, spades.

Your play to the first trick could decide the fate of the contract! A writer once remarked: "There's no such thing as a blind opening lead, only deaf opening leaders!"
