Greenville Attorney Named To Judgeship

Governor Hunt announced late Wednesday afternoon the appointment of Greenville attorney David E. Reid Jr., as 3rd District Superior Court Judge.

"I am honored and extremely gratified by Governor Hunt's appreciation and confidence in me, " said Reid. I will do everything in my power to justify that confidence and do justice to the Superior Court bench.

"I have expressed to the Governor my commitment to the efficient administration of justice through the court system, and to making it responsive to the public."

A partner of Mattox and Reid law firm, Reid is a native of Asheville. He attended UNC-Chapel Hill and received his law degree from UNC Law School in 1959.

Reid began practicing law in Greenville in 1960, after serving as law clerk for N. C. Supreme Court Justice J. Wallace Winborne for about a year.

A former member of the N. C. House of Represtatives and Greenville City Attorney for 11 years, Reid, 45, will serve Carteret, Pamlico, Craven, and Pitt counties.

Reid will fill one of the new benches created by the 1977 session of the N. C. General Assembly.

Married to the former Beverley Rippard, they have three children, Rebekah and Jackie, twins, 11, and David, 6.

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Gov. Jim Hunt has named eight new judges, including the first black state Superior Court judge.

Clifton E. Johnson of Charlotte, chief judge of the 26th District Court since 1971, will become the state's first black Superior Court judge, remaining in District 26, which covers Mecklenburg County.

Johnson, 36, has been a District Court judge since 1969.

Also named to Superior Court judgeships were state Rep. Peter W. Hairston, D-Davie; District Court Judge Coy E. Brewer Jr. of Fayetteville; David E. Reid Jr. of Greenville; Henry L. Stevens III of Warsaw; James R. Strickland of Jacksonville; and state Rep. Robert L. Farmer, D-Wake.

Those appointments filled the last of 13 Superior Court vacancies that have been awaiting action by Hunt.

Hunt also appointed Walter H. Bennett Jr. of Charlotte to the District Court bench.

Hairston, 64, has served as state representative since 1975, in addition to a term in the House in 1955-56. He was appointed to the Superior Court bench in District 22, which includes Alexander, Davidson, Davie and Iredell counties.

Brewer, 30, of Fayetteville, has been a District Court judge since 1976 after serving 1½ years as assistant district attorney. He will serve in District 12, which covers Cumberland and Hoke counties.

Stevens and Strickland will serve in District 4, including Duplin, Jones, Sampson and Onslow counties. Stevens, 54, is a special tax attorney for Duplin County and attorney for the Duplin Airport Commission. Strickland, 49, has been Onslow County attorney for civil matters since 1961.

Farmer, 44, will be seated in District 10, covering Wake County. The Raleigh legislator is chairman of the House Finance Committee and the Wake County legislative delegation and serves on the State Advisory Budget Commission.

Bennett, 34, a Charlotte lawyer in private practice, will assume a District Court judgeship in District 26.

Israel And Egypt Affirm Preparations For Geneva

By The Associated Press

Israel and Egypt say they will continue direct contacts to prepare for a reconvened Geneva conference on the Middle East amid hopeful signs that resumption of the peace talks may be close at hand.

Israeli Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan, apparently preparing public opinion for possible policy shifts, said the Jewish state must re-examine its negotiating position before heading to Geneva and must analyze terms for peace it previously found unacceptable.

"This is the hour of decision," Dayan told diplomatic reporters in Jerusalem Wednesday.

Dayan insisted Egypt is not prepared to reconvene a Geneva conference until the groundwork has been laid on issues of substance now dividing Israel and the Arabs. But he made it clear that further Israeli-Egyptian bilateral talks are being planned.

"The meetings we had in Israel and those that will follow are not a substitute for Geneva but preparation for Geneva," Dayan said.

Egyptian Foreign Minister Butros B. Ghali told the Associated Press in Cairo that Syria also will attend a reconvened Geneva conference despite its outrage over Anwar Sadat's historic visit to Israel. Ghali predicted Arab bitterness stemming from the trip would subside.

Ghali also confirmed that direct contacts between Israeli and Egyptian diplomats will continue "for the preparation of a Geneva conference." The acting foreign minister declined to discuss the timing and location of such meetings, but conceded the contact "could be in Egypt."

Ghali, who accompanied Sadat on his weekend trip to Jerusalem, played down the Arab outcry over Sadat's decision to "go it alone" with Israel in a dramatic diplomatic gamble that stunned the world.

"Which countries are protesting? Libya, Syria, Iraq and in a certain way Algeria. But you see the protestation is related to the method more than the aims," Ghali said in the AP interview.

Syria, Egypt's ally through three decades of Arab-Israeli war, has been Sadat's harshest critic. Damascus officials have denounced Sadat as a "traitor" to Arab solidarity and called for his overthrow.

But Ghali remained confident. "There will be a Geneva with Syria. Syria will come," he said.

In related developments:

—President Carter urged Americans to remember in their Thanksgiving Day prayers "the hopes we harbor for a peaceful settlement in the Middle East." He called Sadat's trip to Israel "a good omen."

—The U.S. State Department said American ambassadors are meeting with Sadat and Israeli Prime Minister Menahem Begin this week to get first-hand assessments of the two leaders' weekend meeting in Jerusalem.

Jobless Rate Is Better

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina unemployment continued to run well below the national average last month, falling below the five percent mark for the third month in a row, the Employment Security Commission says.

The rate for October was 4.5 percent, following jobless rates of 4.7 percent in August and 4.6 percent in September.

The commission said that last month, 116,700 North Carolinians were without work, a decline of 3,100 from September totals and 35,200 from October, 1976, when statewide joblessness was recorded at 5.9 percent.

The national unadjusted unemployment rate for October was 6.3 percent.

The commission said more than 2,482,000 persons were employed in the state in October, some 13,300 less than theprior month. Seasonal losses in agriculture were responsible for the drop, officials said.

All major North Carolina industries scored employment gains last month except chemicals and mining. Government and retail trade led the advance with 6,100 and 2,300 new workers.

The average hourly wage held steady at $4.18 per hour, but the average work week declined from 40 to 39.9 hours and the average weekly wage fell to $166.78 from $167.20 in September.

The Employment Security Commission paid $8.7 million in unemployment insurance benefits in October, down from September payments of $9.1 million.

Argentina Town Left In Rubble By Earthquake

By ALFONSO CHARDY
Associated Press Writer

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — Soldiers and residents of a little rural town in western Argentina dug out today from the rubble caused by a powerful earthquake that left at least 70 dead and 254 injured.

Although the quake shook a wide area in South America Wednesday, the worst damage and the victims occurred in Caucete, a town of 30,000 in the wine-growing area of San Juan, 700 miles west of Buenos Aires at the foot of the Andes Mountains.

Scores of army troops were pressed into rescue service helping survivors dig through the debris for more possible victims. The government said at least 80 percent of the buildings in Caucete, mostly made of adobe, a clay-like material, collapsed.

Authorities ordered a 9 p.m. to dawn curfew in Caucete and armed troops patrolled the area to prevent looting.

The Argentine military government organized emergency airlifts of doctors, medical supplies, food and blankets into Caucete, located in the outskirts of San Juan.

But supply aircraft had to land in small rural airfields because the main airport in San Juan was shut down when its main runway was cracked by the shockwaves.

Other rural towns in San Juan also were reported heavily damaged. But the state capital, itself named San Juan, was not seriously affected.

Buildings there were designed to resist quakes following Argentina's worst quake, in January 1944, which destroyed the state capital of San Juan, leaving about 40,000 dead.

Wednesday's quake measured seven on the Richter Scale. It was also felt in Buenos Aares, Santiago, Chile; Montevideo, Uruguay; Sao Paulo, Brazil, and as far north as Lima, Peru. But no victims and no major damage were reported in those cities.

The shockwaves in Buenos Aires caused panic in the city of 8 million because the capital is considered to be in an earthquake-free area.

Hundreds of thousands of capital dwellers ran out into the streets in nightclothes when buildings swayed and windows rattled.

A similar scene occurred in Montevideo, the Uruguayan capital, where no earthquakes had been reported since 1948.

In the city of Bragado, 45 miles north of Buenos Aires, a giant water storage tank perched on a tower holding one million gallons of water, crashed to the ground, cracking open and flooding a vast area.

The tank also smashed several vehicles parked below, but no victims were reported.

The Richter Scale is a measurement of ground motion as recorded on seismographs. Every increase of one number means a tenfold increase in magnitute. Thus, a reading of 7.5 reflects an earthquake 10 times stronger than one of 6.5.

County Fair Move Begun

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Construction of facilities to serve the Pitt County Agricultural Fair at its new location at the intersection of the Eastern By-pass and the Ramshorn Road is expected to begin in mid-February, fair manager S. C. Winchester said.

The fair, owned by the American Legion Posts in Pitt County has operated at its 11 acre site at the intersection of Airport Road and Memorial Drive for the past 25 years. The fair purchased a new 34 acre site at the Northwest corner of the Ramshorn-Bypass intersection 15 months ago, and the fair will operate at that site in 1978, Winchester noted.

The fair executive committee, including Winchester, president Les Turnage Jr., vice-president Larry Averette, and secretary Connor Eagles, recently visited five county agricultural fairs in central North Carolina "to observe...their fairgrounds and their facilities" in an effort to gain ideas for a "top-notch facility for Pitt County," Winchester said.

Charles Campbell, in charge of county fairs for the N.C. Department of Agriculture accompanied the Pitt executive committee to the Hickory Agriculture Fair, the Caldwell County Fair at Lenoir, the Cabarrus County Fair at Concord, the Stanley County Fair at Albemarle and the Montgomery County Fair at Troy.

"The next step," according to Winchester, "in trying to develop our county fair will be to sit down and talk with David Warren, a buildings engineer with the N.C. Department of Agriculture who will take our suggestions and draw plans for a building." He added that fair officials will "call together all of the people involved in our county fair — educational groups, the Cooperative Extension Service, high schools, 4-H and youth organizations, county fire departments and others — to get their input into what they think we ought to build.

"Then we will start construction," Winchester said, "hopefully by mid-to-latter February."

Pitt Receives $628,695 Share

Pitt County received $628,695 in net distributal tax proceeds for the quarter ending Sept. 30, according to figures reported by Mark Lynch, Secretary of the N.C. Department of Revenue.

On a per capita distribution basis figured relative to population, Greenville received $163,170 of the total amount. Population here was listed in the report as 33,740.

Royal Tomb

SALONICA, Greece (AP) — A Greek archeologist said today that a tomb found in northern Greece contains the remains of King Philip II of Macedon, father of Alexander the Great.

The tomb was discovered earlier this month, buried 19 feet under a narrow street in the village of Virgina, 7.5 miles from the town of Veroia.

Archeologist Manolis Andronikos of Salonica University said articles within the tomb and five-carved ivory busts of King Philip, his wife Olympiada, his son Alexander and Philip's parents prove "without a doubt that this is King Philip's tomb."

Andronikos, in a press conference at Salonica University, said the remains of King Philip II were found in an 24 pound gold box in a marble sarcophagus in the main chamber of the tomb.

Other conclusive evidence it was King Philip's tomb, he said, were the remains of a royal panoply of blue cloth decorated with feathers, which stood over the marble sarcophagus.

There were also other royal articles, including the King's body armor trimmed with gold, a shield with the emblem of Macedonian kings on it, and the remains of his royal spear.

Other evidence was that all the finds within the tomb date between 350 and 320 B.C. Philip was assassinated in 336 B.C. while preparing for war in Persia, and was succeeded by his 20-year old son, Alexander.

BLUES SEASON?

I'd like to know about how much longer the bluefish are likely to run off the North Carolina coast. I want to get down there before it ends. H. T.

Hotline called the Carteret County fishing information toll-free number, 800-682-3934, and posed your question. We were told that the bluefish season is likely to last until mid-December, with some variance either way, depending upon the weather. If it turns consistently cold earlier, it could end earlier. If it stays warm past the middle of next month, the bluefish probably will be around a little longer.

New Bern Attorney Is Entering Senate Race

NEW BERN, N.C. (AP) — The crowded race for the Democratic U.S. Senate nomination now has a black contender who says he'll "stand out like a fly in a bowl of buttermilk" in the campaign.

New Bern attorney Reginald Frazier says he intends to make a formal announcement sometime after Thanksgiving. Five candidates are now campaigning for the nomination in next May's primary race for the seat now held by Republican Jesse Helms.

Frazier predicted that his race would bring him at least 15 percent of the Democratic vote.

"I'll stand out like a fly in a bowl of buttermilk," he said. "I think I would get 15 percent of the vote if I just filed and didn't say anything."

Frazier, 42, unsuccessfully sought Democratic nominations to the state Supreme Court in 1974 and lieutenant governor in 1972. He said he does not expect to win the Senate nomination outright, but hopes to earn 25 to 27 percent of the vote.

He said that may be enough to finish third and be a power broker for a run-off.

"I forsee moving into the position Beverly Lake was in (in the gubernatorial race) in 1964 when he won a seat for himself on the state Supreme Court," Frazier said. "The name of the game is political power."

Frazier said he would not solicit contributions to the campaign after he has raised the $600 filing fee.

"I think a candidate who can make himself visible and known to the voting population of North Carolina doesn't need a million dollars," he said.

Frazier also said he thought Helms would be vulnerable next year. "He is one of the most despised and hated senators in this country," he said.

Diploma Opens Career Doors

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Comedian George Burns, 81, says he'll be able to go out and make something of himself, now that he's finally received his elementary school diploma.

Burns was presented with an honorary diploma Wednesday, 75 years after he left P.S. 22 in New York at the fourth-grade level.

"I'll have to get someone to read it for me," quipped the cigar-smoking entertainer as Mayor Tom Bradley handed him the certificate.

Bradley was acting on behalf of New York Mayor Abraham Beame and the New York Board of Education, who discovered that Nathan Birnbaum had never graduated. The board decided after several decades that the man who later called himself George Burns had earned enough laugh-making credits for a diploma.

"I had to sell newspapers to help support the family ...There were 12 kids," Burns explained, "When we got real hungry we ate the newspapers. My mother made a great sauce."

Burns was mostly unemployed until the age of 27. "But I didn't mind because I was in show business. I didn't care if I was laid off," he said.

"I don't think the students of today should leave school," Burns advised. "They should get their education first.

"It's not good to be stupid," he said. "I was stupid until I was 10."

But the entertainer said he educated himself, read a lot and got to travel around the world, so he didn't miss much by leaving school.

Extension Homemakers Annual Meeting Planned

The annual meeting of the Pitt County Extension Homemakers will be held Wednesday, Nov. 30, at the American Legion Building.

Dr. Eloise S. Cofer will be the guest speaker for the luncheon meeting.

She is an assistant director of the Agricultural Extension Service at N. C. State University. In this position she is a member of the extension administrative staff and participates in major decisions affecting the statewide organization.

Dr. Cofer is also directly responsible for extension family living programs, which are conducted by home economics agents in all 100 counties and specialists located at N. C. State and A & T State University.

Dr. Cofer, who also is professor of food science at NCSU, was food economist with the U. S. Department of Agriculture in Washington prior to coming to North Carolina as assistant extension director in 1963.

She attended public schools in West Virginia and graduated from Marshall University at Huntington with a degree in home economics. She earned a masters degree in nutrition from Columbia University and her doctorate from the University of Chicago.

A past president of the N. C. Council of Women's Organizations, Dr. Cofer is chairman of the N. C. Task Force on Rural Health. She is a member of the American Home Economics Association and the association representative on the International Committee.

Mrs. Bill Goin will preside at the meeting. Special displays will depict the program of work carried on by the Extension Homemakers during 1977.

Of special interest during the afternoon will be a tour of the renovated home of Mr. and Mrs. Wiley Ray Hardee Jr., which will be open to the public.

The house will be open from 2-5 p.m. and from 7-8 p.m. The Hardee home is located on rural road 1110 between Ayden and Grifton.

So Many Reasons To Be Thankful

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1977 by The Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR READERS: Can you believe it's Thanksgiving again...so soon?

A few years ago I wrote a column especially for Thanksgiving, and it was so well received that I was asked to repeat it. Now it's become a tradition. So, here it is again, with a few minor changes:

On this Thanksgiving Day, take a few minutes to think about what you have to be thankful for.

How's your health? Not so good? Well, thank God you've lived this long. A lot of people haven't. You're hurting? Thousands—maybe millions—are hurting more. (Have you ever visited a veterans' hospital? Or a rehabilitation clinic for crippled children?)

If you awakened this morning and were able to hear the birds sing, use your vocal chords to utter human sounds, walk to the breakfast table on two good legs and read the newspaper with two good eyes, praise the Lord! A lot of people couldn't.

How's your pocketbook? Thin? Well, most of the world is a lot poorer. No pensions. No welfare. No food stamps. No Social Security. In fact, one-third of the people in the world will go to bed hungry tonight.

Are you lonely? The way to have a friend is to BE one. If nobody calls you, call them. Go out of your way to do something nice for somebody. It's a sure cure for the blues.

Are you concerned about your country's future? Hooray! Our system has been saved by such concern—concern for honesty in government, concern for peace and concern for fair play under the law. Your country may not be a rose garden, but it also is not a patch of weeds.

Freedom rings! Look and listen. You can still worship at the church of your choice, cast a secret ballot and even criticize your government without fearing a knock on the head or a knock on the door at midnight! And if you want to live under a different system, you are free to go. There are no walls or fences—nothing to keep you here.

As a final thought, if you've never said grace at your table, do it today.

And if you ARE accustomed to saying grace, this time, instead of having an adult recite it, let a child lead the rest.

Here is my Thanksgiving Prayer, which I offer not only once a year, but on every occasion when grace is recited at my table. You are welcome to use it:

"O, heavenly Father: We thank thee for food and remember the hungry.
We thank Thee for health and remember the sick.
We thank thee for friends and remember the friendless.
We thank Thee for freedom and remember the enslaved.
May these remembrances stir us to service
That Thy gifts to us may be used for others. Amen."

Have a wonderful Thanksgiving and may God bless you and yours.

Love, ABBY

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

I told you about my son.

He was the only one who always stood around like he had a lip full of novacaine. Never talked. Never communicated. Always cool and aloof.

In fact, the only time I can ever remember his saying anything to me was when I was baking a cake one afternoon and broke an egg on the side of the bowl. The shells crumbled into the batter and the yoke slid down the entire length of the cupboard and onto the floor.

He watched the entire scene mesmerized. Finally, he looked me squarely in the eye and said, "Way to go, Mom."

Okay, so four words in 18 years isn't a soliloquy, but at least he knew my name. I worried about our ever being able to communicate. I should have known better.

Teenagers don't really begin to communicate with their parents until they leave home to go to school and it costs 80 cents a minute. (Minimum: $2.40 for three minutes.)

Since he left for college last September, "Chatty Kathy" has called every 15 minutes. To date, I have kept a diary of our electronic exchanges:

$3.10 — To inquire if there's any mail for him. (He entered a Reader's Digest Sweepstakes and was anxious.)

$4.70 — To find out if it was raining where we are.

$5.10 — To inquire if the dog missed him.

$5.63 — To find out if it … cold enough for us.

$2.40 — To ask what you do… get rid of roaches.

$2.40 — To say he stopp… feeding the roaches and they a… still there.

$2.40 — To report he's movi… because of a "No Pets" rule.

It wasn't much of a relatio… ship, but we had something g… ing for us until he came home fo… the holidays. He hit his room tw… days ago without so much as … hello. Today I yelled under th… door, "Are you in there?" H… coughed.

You get what you pay for.

MARINATED VEGETABLES

½ cup olive oil
¼ cup white wine vinegar
Small clove garlic, crushed
1½ teaspoons salt
Freshly ground pepper
6 red-ripe tomatoes (about 2¼ pounds), skinned and sliced
1 medium cucumber, pared and sliced thin
1 small sweet onion, sliced thin and separated into rings

Shake or beat together the oil, vinegar, garlic, salt and pepper. Alternate layers of the tomatoes, cucumber and onion — sprinkling each layer with some of the dressing. Cover tightly and chill for 6 to 8 hours to allow flavors to blend. Garnish with parsley or fresh basil. Makes 8 servings.

A Uniquely American Holiday

Thanksgiving Day is a unique American holiday which has its beginnings in our earliest history.

The holiday originated in the fall of 1621. William Bradford, Massachusetts Bay governor, invited the indians to join with the Pilgrims in thanks for the bountiful harvest. The first Thanksgiving was a three-day festival of feasting and recreation.

Thanksgiving Day became a part of the New England heritage and was officially proclaimed as a national holiday by President Lincoln in 1863.

Only Canada has a simliar day with its Thanksgiving being observed the second Monday in October.

Thanksgiving is generally a peaceful day in the United States with perhaps less commercialism than some other holidays — that is, if we discount the football games and Christmas parades.

It is a time for feasts, though, and families throughout the nation gather for the traditional meal of turkey, dressing, cranberry sauce and pumpkin pie.

Today families in our area are gathering for the traditional Thanksgiving meal, just as they are across the nation.

We do, indeed, have much to be thankful for, and we hope it is a pleasant day for everyone.

Cold Weather Layoffs Are Less Likely

Last year some industries laid off workers due to the natural gas shortage; others ran without heat to avoid laying off employees.

Things may be better this year, however.

Transcontinental Gas Pipe Line Corp. says it will ship as much gas to North Carolina as it did last year; and this for the first time since 1972.

In addition Transco has 20 percent more gas in storage than it did last year helping it avoid the purchase of expensive emergency gas.

How To Do The Job Right?

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — The idea of a "performance contract" for state governmental agencies—laying out exactly what the bureaucracies are supposed to do, and how they intend to do it—is under consideration by a legislative group.

Such an approach to measuring performance has become essential in a time when government has gotten so big and complex there's little hope of keeping on top of everything that is going on.

The technique would join other approaches to governmental accountability already being tested either in North Carolina or elsewhere: sunset legislation, zero-based budgeting, and written administrative procedures.

Each adds a new dimension to legislative oversight of the evergrowing bureaucracy. Sunset, basically, calls for a given program to terminate unless justification can be given for keeping it alive. Zero-based budgets call for justification of the dollars sought for a program; not just for expansion, but for continuing it. Administrative procedures establish written ways of doing business, taking away some of the operation of government by whim or personality.

Accountability

While each fills a need, they do nothing to correct the practice of legislative allocation of dollars to the multitude of governmental programs with no real way to know whether the program is needed, where it is starting, and where the dollars are expected to take it in a given time.

A performance contract, on the other hand, would set down for the record what the agency promises to do, would establish a beginning point and the measurements for keeping tabs on doing the job, and would require a report on whether or not the promises were kept.

In short, the legislative intent in funding a specific program would be written down. The practice of bureaucrats of "promising them anything just to get the money, then do whatever you please" would be effectively short-circuited.

Members of the Joint Legislative Commission on Governmental Operations, chaired by Lt. Gov. James C. Green, is the impetus behind consideration of the performance contract idea now being debated among legislative leaders and research staff.

That watchdog commission in trying to cut wasteful governmental spending long ago learned that there is no way to get information on what activity was supposed to be performed with the dollars approved by the General Assembly. People forget, misunderstand, correct the record, or in some cases deliberately misrepresent to gain a particular budget item.

The line agencies have resisted one approach considered by legislators: a law restricting spending only to the amounts and purposes spelled out by the law. Such a method would hamstring daily administrative operations; money allocated for paper couldn't be used for staples even though paper was in oversupply and staples were needed, say the bureaucrats.

The Dollars

The legislative Appropriations Committee would be the action center for a performance promise. Presently, that process establishes no legislative intent, sets forth no specific program objectives or goals, requires no measurements of progress, and has no machinery for followup to see if the program was operated properly, the dollars spent correctly, or the goal achieved.

In brief, the bureaucrats can literally promise anything with no fear of ever being caught.

A performance contract negotiated between lawmakers and executive in state agencies would set specific goals, measurements, and a regular system for evaluation. Besides assuring agency performance, the system builds in legislative responsibility for setting policy and goals. The system would be applied first to all new program proposals, then to expanded ones, and finally in some future year to all state agency activities.

A sample of how the system might work: rather than getting a million dollars to help the blind, an agency would have to spell out how many people need the help, the specific kind of help, many people could be helped by the requested amount, a timetable for doing the job, and a date for a report on progress.

On Being An American

SCRABBLE, Va. — On a Sunday morning a few weeks ago, my grandson Douglas took me for a walk. He had turned four in September, and four is an advanced and serious age. He wanted to "'spect the fences", and he wanted to "see 'bout the apples."

So we set out for the high meadow that overlooks the Sealock property, with the two collies frisking along the fencerows and a fine autumn wind asking the trees to dance. It was a glorious morning for a walk. This has been the most brilliant autumn in years in the Blue Ridge, with the maples and black gums and hickories arrayed like so many massed flags at a pageant. We marched along with a color guard around us.

It was a morning of discovery for Douglas, and a morning of reverent thought for me. At four, a young gentleman can discover all kinds of things. We discovered an immense groundhog hole; we discovered a tuft of rabbit fur, a bird's nest, another bird's nest quite different from the first nest, and we found a place where deer had been bedding. There were still a few wild flowers — tiny asters and never-say-die daisies — and these had to be picked to form a bouquet to take back to Honey.

We checked the fences and we picked a couple of hard red apples, and with his small hand in mine we finally made it to the highest elevation on the farm. At the bottom of the hill was White Walnut Run, a pale gold ribbon between scarlet sentinels. Off to the southwest, we could see Old Rag Mountain, white-haired this morning from a preseason snow. To the north and west, the land rolled and lifted and pulled the eye to the tapestries of autumn.

"Take care of your land", John Randolph's mother used to tell the young Virginia planter, "and your land will take care of you." This morning, her homespun thought struck home. Not only in rural America but in the cities also, this is about all that is asked of us: to take care of our land.

And what a land it is! I watched Douglas clearing rocks. He put down his bouquet and his apple, and kicked at a rock until it came loose. Then he lugged it to the fencerow and came back for another. I motioned for him to come along. "Grandfavver", he said, with the air of a man who does not want to be disturbed at his work, "I am very busy." Three rocks later he gave up and we walked down to the bridge.

I wanted to say some things to this sturdy, tow-headed boy, but the opportunity passed in a gust of autumn wind. Douglas is an inheritor — he and the other 3,137,999 children born in the United States in 1973. They will inherit our land, not in the literal sense, of course, of these few mountain acres, but in the larger sense. They inherit traditions and values and obligations. And for all of these, I wanted to say to Douglas, let us be profoundly grateful.

Douglas was throwing his apple core at a fencepost. Listen, I would have said to him, you and your sister Heather and your cousin Alina and all the other children, black and white and brown, are inheriting a land that is a good land. Yes, America has its faults; none of the seven sins has passed us by. We still have millions of persons who know hunger and poverty and despair. But you are inheriting freedom; you are inheriting a role of law that dates from Magna Carta; you are inheriting all the cultural legacy that is embraced in the Judeo-Christian tradition.

I might have added a defen-

Work System Lauded

By DAVID TOMLIN
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina's prison system, castigated as backward and inhumane by its critics, is actually one of the nation's most progressive, says Dr. Richard Urbanik.

"In some respects," he hastens to add.

Urbanik is familiar with those respects of which he speaks. He is chief of the state Corrections Department's program services section, and his responsibilities include the system's work release program.

North Carolina, he says proudly, was the first state to set up a work release program nine years ago, pioneering a field which has become a standard fixture in most prison systems.

"The General Accounting Office even came down here to look at our setup when they were evaluating the federal prison system," Urbanik says.

Urbanik agrees that the state's prison facilities are inadequate, but he says that critics of the system have blasted it without taking proper notice of the good things.

"I've felt it was unfair to me personally, being lumped in with something I'm working hard to correct," he says.

North Carolina now has about 1,900 of the state's 14,500 prisoners leaving their cells each working day for jobs outside. Urbanik says he's not sure, but he thinks that may be more than any other state.

What is more, he says, the prisoners are scattered across the state in the system's 79 units, so the inmates on work release frequently are able to keep their jobs after they leave prison, since they are often imprisoned in units close to their homes and families.

The program has innumerable benefits, Urbanik says. It keeps the inmate occupied, provides him with some income, makes it possible for him to help support his family and lets him contribute something toward the cost of feeding and housing him.

The big question, of course, is the impact on recidivism — whether the program rehabilitates him or makes it less likely that he will commit another

THE INSIDE REPORT

Pres. Sadat's High Noon

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — Midest experts believe odds are better than even that President Anwar Sadat's bold but unplanned excursion into the stronghold of the Jewish enemy in Jerusalem will split the Arab world and possibly result in an overthrow of Sadat's own government, raising ominous implications for the West.

An anti-Western government in Cairo allied with radical movements throughout the Arab world threatens the twin disasters of war and another oil embargo. These apprehensions among hard-headed experts on the Mideast follow the euphoria that first spread through Washington with news of Sadat's visit.

The realists see only one escape hatch: along with diplomatic words of praise for Sadat uttered in the Israeli parliament, Prime Minister Menahem Begin must give the Egyptian leader tangible political gifts not for Egypt alone but for what the Arabs call "the Arab Nation."

The political gifts to be picked from are easy to list but hard to extract, and Israel appears as fearful of its security today as it was just before the 1967 Six-Day War. The gifts are: an admission that the Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO) exists as a serious representative of the Palestinian people; acknowledgement that some Palestine entity must be permitted on the Israeli-occupied West Bank of the Jordan; real territorial concessions on the Golan Heights of Syria.

The most possible of these is a concession on the PLO, perhaps a change in Israel's monolithic refusal to permit any known members of the PLO to attend the Geneva conference. That would be the minimum Israeli offer that conceivably might get Sadat home free.

A serious move toward the other two long-standing Arab demands is less likely. But Israeli concessions on at least one of the three courses are essential to make Sadat's journey a triumph. Otherwise, his days are numbered.

The reasons began appearing the instant it was clear that Sadat was serious in his offer to go to Jerusalem. First came the resignation of Foreign Minister Ismail Fahmy, who has feuded bitterly with Sadat ever since early 1974. That was when Sadat accepted Henry Kissinger's step-by-step diplomacy instead of Fahmy's policy of an overall settlement. Fahmy saw the handwriting on the wall of Sadat's Kubba Palace when Jerusalem was put on his itinerary. Fahmy wants no part of Sadat's downfall.

More important was the response when Mohammed Riad, an important pro-American in the foreign ministry, was asked to take Fahmy's job. Serving the unpredictable Sadat, who plays his own high-noon hand without seeking advice from others, was not for Riad. He took the easy way out and said no.

Gearing into the Fahmy-Riad vetoes are the Syrian and Soviet reactions, clearly predictable from the moment Sadat announced his plan. Syrian President Hafez Assad is far more suspicious than Sadat of Israel's real intentions about the Mideast, particularly Israel's ten-year campaign to split the Arab world by separating Egypt and Syria.

The Russians blasted Sadat as "playing into Begin's hand" and "playing the imperialists' game." Propelled back into the Mideast by the U.S.-Soviet joint statement of Oct. 1 advocating a Geneva conference, the Kremlin now has more raw materials for trouble-making in the region. The Soviets can argue throughout the Arab world that Washington's hand is behind its Egyptian clients who are selling out to Israel.

Only Saudi Arabia has not yet been publicly heard from as we write this. The Saudis, supplier of oil for the industrial West, have most to lose if the Sadat mission to Jerusalem generates a desert storm of Arab radicalism. Starting in Cairo itself, that

Welfare Rip-Off

(Greensboro Daily News)

There's been a lot of talk lately, both in our Public Pulse letters section and elsewhere, about the phenomenon of "double dippers" government workers who draw from their own federal pension plan while also earning Social Security benefits.

Well, HEW Secretary Joseph Califano recently added a bizarre new twist to the "double dip" concept by revealing that some 13,300 current government employes — including some earning more than $10,000 a year — are on welfare in 20 states and the District of Columbia.

Califano properly attaches a few caveats to his findings. First, this number constitutes only 1.4 per cent of the country's 1.3 million federal employes. Some, perhaps a majority, may be entitled to welfare benefits because they have large families and work in low-paying jobs. Fraud among government workers, Califano notes, is no greater than in the population at large.

Still, it's shocking to see that a smaller, in-depth sampling of 216 HEW employes on the list indicated that 41 per cent were either ineligible or receiving too much in benefits; 20 per cent of the total earned salaries of $10,000 a year or more.

Taxpayers will appreciate the fact that Califano is dead serious about cleaning up the welfare rolls, and isn't afraid to begin in his own back yard. But the shame of it is that our welfare system remains so cumbersome in invites blatant cheating of the government even by those who work for it.

President Carter's welfare reform plan, which has been bottled up in Congress with no sign of emerging anytime soon, at least offers the virtue of simplifying the welfare system — rendering it more likely that more welfare checks will find their way to the truly needy, not the truly greedy. Perhaps news of fraud under government's own nose will shake Congress out of its somnolence on this issue. But don't count on it.

Strength For Today

A SMALL OR LARGE GOD?

Some people worship a God who is too small for them.

They do not regard this God first and foremost as the creator and sustainer of the universe. They consider the universe as governed by an impersonal natural law whose origins are too hazy to merit much examination.

These people also worship a God who is too small to handle the intricate social relations of life. He is the God of Sunday, of sanctuary — a deity locked up in a book. His demands are adherence to a few pious customs. But these people never consider that God and His principles have to be carried into business, into politics, and into community life. Their God is a God of little, inconsequential matters. The God of the Bible, on the other hand, is Lord and Master of all.

All of us should ask ourselves from time to time what size God we really worship. If He is too small, let us raise our eyes to a God of larger dimensions.

Home Prices Raise A Question

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — It looked perfectly logical at first glance, this defense by the nation's home mortgage lenders against complaints that rising new home prices were excluding many Americans from home-ownership.

New homes usually aren't meant for first-time buyers, explained economists of the U.S. League of Savings Associations, which make most of the home mortgage loans throughout the country.

"Most new homes are built for the second-or third-time buyers," they said.

An "overwhelming" 65 per cent of all new homes are bought by families "who are using the accumulated equity and appreciated value of their present homes to purchase new housing," they explained.

So what do we offer the first-time buyer who hasn't had the chance to build up much of a down payment? We offer him the used or existing home. It's "a great opportunity," they said.

More than 80 per cent of all homes sold last year were existing homes, they said. It's true. The National Association of Realtors recorded 3,002,000 such sales, a record. The number will be even higher this year.

Those existing homes are a great buy, said the U.S. League economists. The median price of a newly built home last year was $44,200, but an existing home sold for 13.6 per cent less at $38,100.

Watch those figures! Didn't we hear earlier that the people who sold the existing homes benefited not only from accumulated equity but from "appreciated value?" In other words, existing prices seem to be rising too.

How true. That median figure of $38,100 is a good one for certain purposes, but it does after all include some homes that are in very poor condition and ready to be phased out rather than lived in.

This doesn't mean there aren't bargains in existing homes. Many young couples have found, renovated, and upgraded such houses and now have accommodations superior to those who live in brand new houses.

But existing home prices aren't standing still. That $38,100 median figure has already been bumped up to about $44,000, or just about the price of last year's brand new home.

Quite understandable too. Don't forget, it's just that kind of appreciation, the U.S. League economists point out, that provides first-time owners with the equity to apply to a brand new house.

In 1976, the year in which the median price of an existing home was $38,100, more than 39 per cent of all existing home sales were at minimum prices of $50,000.

That percentage is much higher this year, as it has been every year this decade. In September, 1973, about 13.5 per cent of existing home sales were for $50,000 or more; in September 1975 the percentage was 23.1; last year, 29.1.

Existing home prices clearly are soaring, especially in the quality home category. But, yes, there are bargains. Nearly 14 per cent of existing sales this year were for $25,000 or less.

The question to be asked about the low-priced homes, however, is how many of them represent genuine bargains and how many are accommodations barely fit for habitation and not likely to appreciate?

GI Bill Recipients To Be Getting An Increase

By JERRY T. BAULCH
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The one million veterans going to school under the GI Bill will get a 6.6 percent increase in their monthiy checks under legislation signed into law by President Carter.

The bill signed Wednesday covers benefits from Oct. 1. Changes will be reflected in checks issued Dec. 1.

Veterans also will get more help to pay climbing tuition costs with an increase in the Veterans Administration loan program ceiling, from $1,500 a year to $2,500.

Where the tuition and fees are over $700 a year, the new law allows the veteran to write off part of the debt under the loan program, providing the state where the school is located helps pay part of the cost.

The bill also allows the Pentagon to certify 800 surviving members of the Women Airforce Service Pilots as veterans entitled to benefits they have sought since they flew military planes in World War II.

The women, known as WASPs, ferried planes, towed targets and filled other noncombat roles. Many were decorated; 38 were killed.

The new law makes service benefits available for those who served as civilians if the Pentagon will certify them as veterans and issue them honorable military discharges. The Pentagon has indicated it will so recognize the WASPs.

"Nearly $25 billion that we have spent under the current GI bill has been an excellent investment in our nation's future," Carter said in signing the bill. He said the new law should improve this program.

The 6.6 percent increase will raise the monthly payment for a single veteran going to school full time from $292 to $311. With one dependent, the increase will be from $347 to $370. With two dependents, the benefit goes from $396 to $422.

Under the loan program, the veteran can write off part of his debt if he stays in school long enough to graduate and his tuition and fees are $700 or more a year.

He must pay the $700 plus one-third of the remainder, provided the state also pays one-third of the remainder. The Veterans Administration will finance the other third.

crime after his sentence ends. The evidence on that, Urbanik says, is not clear.

"In-depth studies by the University of North Carolina have found that the program doesn't cut heavily into recidivism," Urbanik says. "But what happens is that the type of crime differs considerably.

"People who committed felonies before were committing misdemeanors, and people who were committing violent crimes changed to non-violent ones.

"My personal impression," he says, "is that if an inmate is in work release along with other programs, his chances of becoming a recidivist are lessened. It contributes, like any other program."

storm could swing eastward to engulf Jordan and the Persian Gulf oil states.

Such radicalism is never far from the surface of Egypt, the Arab world's most populous and poorest country. Sadat has kept a tight lid on political activists, but recent food price increases are known to be creating turbulence in the one place that really counts: the Egyptian army.

That is why the odds are against success for Sadat's spectacular move, no matter what the immediate aftermath of his historic speech to the people of Israel. No wonder that experts here over the weekend felt like spectators watching a drama unfold, powerless to influence the outcome despite incalculable stakes: peace in the Middle East and the economic survival of the West.

sive thought. Don't ever be ashamed, I would have urged Douglas, don't ever be ashamed of the material wealth of your country. Americans have worked for that wealth, for the products of our factories, the harvests of our farms, and we have shared that wealth more generously than any nation in the history of the world. We ought never to apologize for this bounty; we ought rather to give thanks for good fortune.

We walked back home, Douglas a little tired and sleepy, the wildflowers drooping, the collies still going strong. And I thought that come Thanksgiving Day, I would write about this morning, and I would recall a line from Richard Nixon. The former president used to end his speeches by saying that if he could choose from the whole history of mankind a particular place and a time to be born in, he would choose to be born an American in the twentieth century. For my grandson, Lord, I thank you.

Wants Item Off Shelves

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Charles H. Percy, R-Ill., wants liquid protein off store shelves until tests show it's safe, even though the laboratory work would take several years.

A spokesman for the Food and Drug Administration, which has jurisdiction, said the agency has not ruled out such a move.

The FDA announced two weeks ago it would require a warning label on liquid protein products, which are used by dieters.

The agency said then at least 10 women died because of the popular modified fast that substitutes small amounts of liquid protein for food.

Percy, the ranking Republican on the Senate Select Committee on Nutrition and Human Needs, wrote the FDA, "I urge you, at an absolute minimum, to immediately reclassify liquid protein a prescription drug, not to be available over the counter.".

An FDA spokesman said Percy's letter provided "no new information."

Witnesses Say Mid-East Peace Chances Better

By DAVID ESPO
Associated Peress Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Members of Congress who were accidental witnesses at a Middle East summit say the chances for peace are better than ever as a result of Egyptian President Anwar Sadat's weekend trip to Jerusalem.

House Majority Leader James Wright, speaking for a delegation of congressmen that spent 12 days abroad, said Wednesday both Sadat and Israeli Prime Minister Menahem Begin grasp the need for compromises if peace is to be achieved.

Wright said he could see emerging the first "faint outlines" of movement by two bitter enemies toward each other as a result of the Sadat trip, which he labeled a "turning point" for peace.

Rep. Paul Simon, D-Ill., who visited the Middle East on a separate congressional trip, said reconvening a Geneva peace conference "is not that difficult now."

And Rep. James J. Howard, D-N.J., who visited the Middle East with Wright and 13 other members of Congress, said, "If something urgent came up, Begin or Sadat could pick up the telephone and talk to one another. That couldn't have happened a month ago."

The upbeat pronouncements coincide with the view of the Carter administration. Warren Christopher, deputy secretary of state, said earlier that the administration feels the chances for Middle East peace are the best they've been in nearly 30 years.

The State Department announced that U.S. ambassadors in Israel and Egypt were meeting with Sadat and Begin this week to get first-hand assessments of the meetings the two leaders held in Jerusalem.

State Department spokesman Tom Reston said, "We will want to see what they have to say after those meetings so we can take their account into account in our considerations." He said the department is not yet in a position to make a substantive assessment of the talks.

Reston reaffirmed that the goal of the Carter administration remains a reconvened Geneva conference.

Wright told a news conference it is "rather optimistic" to assume that talks can resume this year, however.

The Texas Democrat was the ranking member of the delegation that visited Spain and Portugal before moving on to Egypt and Israel. The trip was planned before Sadat's visit was announced and the delegation originally was scheduled to return to the United States last weekend. But the group stayed at Begin's request.

He said Sadat was asked whether he would be amenable to giving the Palestinians representation at Geneva without specific mention of the Palestine Liberation Organization.

The Egyptian leader responded, "Marvelous, marvelous, I think that's a wonderful idea," Wright reported.

Israel refuses to deal with the PLO, saying the organization is committed to the destruction of the Jewish state.

On a second major stumbling block, Wright said Sadat suggested the possibility of a Palestinian "entity in federation or confederation with Jordan."

He said that while no Israeli official has publicly endorsed such a step, he believes it would be "quite substantially less offensive to the Israelis" than the independent Palestinian state the PLO is demanding.

Paddling Case Is Dismissed

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — "The word of God on corporal punishment was at stake," the principal of a private Christian school said after he was cleared of charges of assault and child abuse in the paddling of a 6-year-old student.

District Court Judge Samuel F. Gantt dismissed misdemeanor charges Wednesday against James Woodring, principal of Fellowship Christian School here, who had been accused of child abuse and assault on a child under the age of 12.

Ted and Sandra Johnson of Durham brought the charges after a Nov. 8 incident in which their son, Michael, was spanked by Woodring.

Members of the Fellowship Christian Church, which runs the school, attended the trial to support Woodring. Classes at the school were dismissed Wednesday and students were bused to the courtroom to watch the proceedings.

At least six other congregations from as far as 40 miles away were also represented.

Before the trial began, spectators in the courtroom sang hymns, prayed, gave personal religious testimonies and voiced support for the principal.

Among the biblical verses they quoted was one from the Book of Proverbs: "Folly is bound up in the heart of a child, but the rod of discipline drives it far from him." The same verse appears on the school's admission application.

During the five hours of testimony, the Johnson boy and the principal both said that the child had been in a fight with two other children and that Woodring had spanked him with a paddle.

The child said he was made to count each stroke of the punishment and then pray on his knees for forgiveness. Police photographs introduced as evidence showed bruises on the child's buttocks.

But immediately after the prosecution rested its case, Gantt approved a defense motion for dismissal, saying there was no evidence Woodring acted outside the law.

Just One More 'Cheap Thrill'

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Miskel Julia Spillman, a spirited 80 years old, says she wants to be a guest host for NBC-TV's "Saturday Night Live" because she wants "one more cheap thrill before I go."

Saturday Night Live picked Mrs. Spillman of New Orleans as one of five finalists from among 15,000 applicants who sent postcards saying they wanted to be on the show.

"I'm 80 years old and my physician told me I only had 25 more years to live," said Mrs. Spillman. "I'd like to have one more cheap thrill before I go."

A retired son, Otis Spillman, said he hoped his mother wouldn't be the ultimate choice as host. "I think it would be too much for her," Otis said.

But a daughter, Mary Jane Baker, is pulling for her mother. "She's in good health and good spirits. And she has more nerve than I have."

Acid Burns From Gift

EAST LONDON, South Africa (AP) — Mary Woods, 5-year-old daughter of banned newspaper editor Donald Woods, received medical treatment for acid burns late Wednesday after putting on a chemically-impregnated Steve Biko T-shirt sent in an anonymous gift package.

Police said they were investigating.

Mary, the youngest of five children, pulled the smallest of the shirts over her head to try it on and immediately began screaming that something was burning her eyes.

Her father and sisters tried rinsing her eyes with water, but she continued screaming until a doctor was summoned and treated her eyes with a solution.

She suffered no permanent damage, the doctor said.

Woods, editor of the East London Daily Dispatch, was restricted by government order Oct. 19 along with six other outspoken anti-government whites as part of a massive security crackdown.

He was a personal friend of Biko, 30, who died Sept. 12 in security police detention.

Police Investigated 5 Accidents Yesterday

Police officers investigated five accidents, including a hit and run, which occurred Wednesday on the streets of Greenville.

Sharon Sharpe told officers at 5:30 p.m. yesterday that she was traveling north on Memorial Drive when an unidentified vehicle tried to change lanes and collided with her car.

Investigating officers estimated damages to the Sharpe car at $700.

At 5:19 p.m., an accident occurred at the intersection of Tenth and Heath Streets involving cars operated by Lorraine Tripp McGowan of Greenville Rt. 9 and Loretta May Jarvis of Greenville Rt. 7. Ms. Jarvis was charged with a safe movement violation.

Damages were estimated at $150 to the McGowan car and $250 to the Jarvis vehicle.

Melody Sherrill Cannon of 1100 N. Charles St. was charged with a stop sign violation at 9:10 a.m. yesterday on Forbes St. after her car collided with a vehicle operated by Richard Carr Mooring.

Another mishap occurred at 1:55 p.m. in the North Carolina National Bank parking lot involving vehicles driven by Hazel Beatrice Nobles of Greenville Rt. 1 and Sue Dietz Johnson of 10 Scott St. Ms. Johnson was charged with a safe movement violation.

Damages were estimated at $250 to the Nobles car and $45 to the Johnson vehicle.

Also, Otis Lee Langley of 401 Church St. was charged with a stop sign violation at the intersection of N. Greene St. and Church St. after his car collided with a vehicle operated by Oscar Calvin Haddock of 2808 Crocket Drive.

Damages were estimated at $500 to the Haddock car and $350 to the Langley vehicle.

Fire Hazards

COLLEGE STATION, Tex. (UPI) — People who plan to cut their own Christmas trees or firewood with lightweight chain saws should be aware of hazards involved.

Dr. Gary S. Nelson, a safety engineer with the Texas Agricultrual Extension Services, says it's important to determine wind direction before cutting a tree, and then guard against fires.

Nelson said leaves, grass and gasoline can be ignited by a hot muffler on the saw.

Newsmen Deny Being 'Used' In Anti-Klan Stories

CHARLOTTE (AP) — FBI agents in North Carolina claimed during the 1960s that they planted newspaper stories unfavorable to the Ku Klux Klan. But reporters and editors involved deny they were used by the FBI and one editor says the Klan stories served "a useful public purpose."

FBI memos released to newsmen in Washington earlier this week detailed a campaign by the FBI to disrupt the Klan in North Carolina during the 1960s because, as one agency official wrote, the agency felt the nationwide Klan organization would collapse if "a death dealing blow can be dealt to the United Klans of America in North Carolina."

Some FBI agents claimed in memos that they used "friendly" contacts at the Charlotte Observer and the Salisbury Post to plant stories unfavorable to the Klan.

The Charlotte Observer said Wednesday that FBI agents took credit for stories on the Klan which the paper ran in 1968, with agents saying the stories came from "the furnishing of desirable information."

Howard Covington, who wrote the series for the Observer and now works for a research group in Raleigh, said he remembered that the FBI "showed us some stuff, but that wasn't the sole source."

"I don't think you can say the FBI planted the story...or even the idea of the story," he said.

The Observer said FBI memos identified the "friendly contact" at the Salisbury Post as reporter Ned Cline, who now works in the Observer's Raleigh bureau.

One 1967 memo said Cline was "furnished information which is believed would be most damaging to (name censored by the FBI) if published. Cline advised that he would write articles concerning the Klan based on the information furnished together with information which he could obtain independently. He agreed to treat this information with confidence in order that the FBI would not be revealed as the source."

Cline was quoted by the paper Wednesday as saying he had used the FBI as a source but always used other sources to check FBI information.

"In retrospect, some of my sources may have been paid informants of the FBI," he said.

The Winston-Salem Journal said Wednesday that "derogatory information" on the Klan was provided by the FBI to the Journal and other newspapers in the state. The Journal published stories in 1967 describing rivalries among North Carolina klansmen.

George Raynor, editor of the Salsibury Post and managing editor at the time of the Klan stories, said the paper had "no apologies to make" about the articles.

"Violence was threatening to break out — and in fact, there had already been a number of violent incidents — and we went for the story since it was obvious the Klan was involved," he said.

"The Klan naturally wouldn't publicly admit its role, so as any reporter would, Cline looked for a source of information...I think part of the problem centers on whether the FBI 'planted' information with us or we sought out and obtained information we needed from the FBI. In any case, publication of the underground Klan activities served a useful public purpose."

MAY BE SHIFTED — Lt. Gen. Howard Fish, the Pentagon's arms sales chief, probably will be shifted to another job earlier in the year, Dept. of Defense sources say. Fish reportedly has ruffled some members of Carter's National Security Council staff. (AP Laserphoto)

LA SCALA'S 200th

MILAN, Italy (UPI) — Milan's La Soala opera house will mark its 200th birthday with an extra long season lasting from Dec. 7, 1977 until Dec. 31, 1978, and featuring mostly Giuseppe Verdi operas.

Pet Turkey Is A Dinner Guest

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Margaret and Claude Mooneyhan turn the tables every year on a Thanksgiving tradition.

Mrs. Mooneyhan's 30-pound pet turkey, Tom, comes to the dinner table every Thanksgiving, not in the center, but as a guest.

"Come on, Tom, talk to us like you always do," Mrs. Mooneyhan said Wednesday as Tom rehearsed his table manners for the big meal. "Don't you remember doing this last year?"

"He ought to," Mooneyhan said. "He broke one of our best plates with his stupid beak."

Perched at the table and sporting a flowered bib, Tom gobbled his holiday dinner of bread bits.

Exam Failure Is Laid To Snake

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Ava Jones claims she got a failing grade on her bar exam because Louisiana Bar Association officials don't want to share their profession with a snake dancer.

Miss Jones, who worked her way through Loyola University Law School by dancing with Iansan, a 6-foot boa constrictor, has filed a $250,000 suit in federal court here.

The suit claims she was "arbitrarily and capriciously failed."

Miss Jones wants the bar admissions committee to explain why she should not be admitted to the practice of law.

Critics Seek Halt Malaysia Logging

By HARI S. MANIAM

KUALA LUMPUR, Malaysia (AP) — At any cocktail party, social gathering or private chat the "rape of Endau-Rompin" is becoming increasingly a major topic for discussion here.

The usually tame Malaysian press has come out with editorial after editorial urging the governments to stop the Endau-Rompin and other similar "rapes."

The cause of the uproar is the logging of a 1,400-year-old forest area, which is endangering rare wildlife, including the Sumatran rhinoceros.

It is also threatening the livelihood of thousands of people in the area, but the Pahang state government is going ahead with the logging, defying the press, political parties, world wildlife organizations and innumerable public organizations that have called for a halt.

The state government says the Endau-Rompin National Forest and Park area — about 100 miles southeast of here — covers about a half-million acres. Of this only about one-third is in Pahang and the rest in Johore. Logging 30,000 acres in Pahang will not affect the ecology.

But the protesters fear if it is not stopped at the beginning it will continue. Seeing the Pahang government doing it, the Johore government will also go ahead with logging in some portions, they say.

Federal officials said the Pahang state government dared not stop the logging as the concession license for the 30,000 acres had been given to the Pahang state royal family members, who are powerful in their state.

They also pointed out the federal government could only appeal and perhaps put on the pressure by threatening to cut down federal grants. It cannot act directly to stop the logging or concession license because all land matters in Malaysia come under state jurisdiction and the constitution gives the federal government no rights over these issues.

The concession was issued a few months ago and the protests began. But despite the protests the state government issued licenses to log 10,000 acres. More licenses to log more acreage are to be issued soon.

"The loggers are so scared the logging will be stopped that they are logging day and night. About 1,000 acres is being cleared every week," said one editor of a newspaper here.

The contractors logging the area have paid the concession holders about $2 million.

Based on a return of 15 tons of timber per acre and the current average price of $60 a ton, the contractor will gross about $9 million from the 10,000 acres.

Gross receipts will be about $27 million when the entire area is logged. The Pahang state government will get about $2.8 million in royalties and other dues.

Forest department officials said Endau-Rompin is only one example. The whole country is losing its forest resources.

In Canada and other countries loggers are compelled to plant a tree for each tree they cut. Here there is no such law and reforestation is almost nil, they said.

Deputy Prime Minister Mahathir Mohamed, reflecting some of the concern, said recently that the forest resources would be depleted at the current rate of exploitation. From being a net exporter of timber to the United States, Japan, South Korea and the European economic community, Malaysia will not be able to meet even local demands by 1990.

He said forests should be cleared at the rate of 140,000 acres a year instead of the current 680,000 acres. This would ensure that current resources will last for more than 35 years and meanwhile reforestation and other projects could be undertaken.

Timber is Malaysia's fourth largest export.

Trained In 'Ultrasound'

An Ultrasound Training Workshop, co-sponsored by Picker Medical Corp. and Eastern Area Health Education Center, in cooperation with the Department of Radiology at Pitt Memorial Hospital and Eastern Radiologists Inc., was held here Nov. 14-18.

Faculty for the workshop were John P. Caire, R.D.M.S., ultrasound application specialist with Picker Corp., and Betty Sue Dickerson, R.D.M.S., ultrasonographer at Duke Medical Center in Durham.

The five-day training sessions were centered around teaching the operation and instrumentation of Picker ultrasound equipment and was attended by technologists from across the state.

Workshop On 'Depressed'

ECU News Bureau

"Depression: How the Family Copes" was the subject of a workshop conference attended by more than 100 lay persons and professionals conducted at East Carolina University.

Emphasis was given to theories of depression and to various treatments. Those attending included teachers, nurses, social workers and psychologists and the purpose of the conference, according to Dr. John R. Ball, was to increase knowledge and understanding about the effect of depression on the individual, significant others, and also the family unit.

Conducting the workshop were Ms. Doe Farrell and Ed Mackie, both private practitioners. The department of Social Work and Correction Services, School of Allied Health and Social Professions, ECU, cooperated with the Coast Unit, N.C. Association of Social Workers in sponsoring the workshop, Ball said.

Ball is chairman of the department of Social Work and Correctional Services at ECU.

Expand Baltimore Dock Strike

NEW YORK (AP) — Striking longshoremen have expanded their walkout in Baltimore, but the president of the union says a new, nationwide contract could be ratified next Monday.

There had been hope for an earlier agreement, but International Longshoremen's Association president Thomas W. "Teddy" Gleason says local disputes are holding up an overall settlement, covering 50,000 dockworkers on the Gulf and Atlantic coasts.

To force settlements, Gleason has suggested that local units expand their strikes, which previously were limited to container ships, which move general cargo in sealed, van-size boxes. The union says mechanization hurts its members.

The 4,000 Baltimore longshoremen took Gleason up on that offer Wednesday, declaring a general strike against all cargo shipping except coal exports, which are completely mechanized. Still, observers say a settlement is possible there by the weekend.

Elsewhere, the 3,000 dockworkers in Philadelphia and the 4,000 in New Orleans did not call general strikes, instead launching intensive negotiations.

In New Orleans, negotiators for the union and the New Orleans Steamship Association agreed to meet Friday to clean up odds and ends. The largest roadblock to a local agreement was removed Wednesday night when they reached a tentative settlement on a guaranteed annual income plan.

Similar plans are being negotiated in all 34 ports this year. The New Orleans plan provides for a sliding income scale based on seniority. The ILA had sought a flat rate of 1,800 hours pay for any longshoreman who worked at least 700 hours in a year.

Meanwhile, progress was reported in efforts to pass a new master contract. Rank-and-file members in Brooklyn approved the pact unanimously, and the contract was endorsed by west Gulf Coast dockworkers in Galveston.

At the same time, tentative agreement on a master contract — which would raise hourly pay from the current $8 to $10.40 in its third and final year — was announced on the west Gulf Coast. And unanimous endorsement of the proposed over-all settlement was voted by rank-and-file ILA members in Brooklyn.

That move was significant, because the ILA membership in Brooklyn represents almost half of the 12,000 dockworkers in the Port of New York, the nation's biggest seaport.

The Maritime Administration counted 78 "automated" ships strikebound prior to the Baltimore general walkout. Included were four container ships in Baltimore and six U.S. flag vessels lying idle in European ports.

Odds One In 12

HARRISONBURG, Va. (AP) — The odds are roughly 1 in 12 the turkey drumstick you're having for Thanksgiving dinner once trod Virginia soil, probably in Rockingham County.

For the nitpickers who'll remark that turkeys have two legs, make the odds 2-24.

Chaplains A 'Victim' Of The System

By HAROLD H. MARTIN

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — A former Army chaplain and Vietnam veteran says hundreds of his colleagues are becoming victims of the "up or out" promotion system despite a critical shortage of ministers in the Armed Forces.

Under the military review systems, officers who are passed over twice for promotion are discharged within 90 days. This also applies to chaplains.

"The up and out system has become more sacred than the spirital needs of the population," says the Rev. Joseph Turner, an Army Roman Catholic chaplain for 12 years before his discharge.

Nonetheless, he said in an interview, the military is constantly appealing for ministers, rabbis and priests to fill shortages in the 1,465 positions open to chaplains. Of 420 Catholic priests required, there are only 250 serving, while there are 24 rabbis against the 30 authorized.

Since 1973, the Rev. Turner said, the military has discharged 115 chaplains, some of them only months before they became eligible for retirement benefits.

In a letter to a group founded by the Rev. Turner to study the promotion and dismissal of chaplains, Maj. Gen. Orris Kelly, the Army chief of chaplains, said:

"If chaplains were to be retained on active duty after failure to be selected for promotion, the Chaplain Management System would be adversely affected; chaplain leadership would steadily age; new chaplain input would have to be reduced, and grade imbalances would occur.

"The net result would be a Chaplaincy less able to serve the Army in time of war."

Similar replies have been received by senators to whom the Rev. Turner went for help.

The lean, balding priest, who turned in his uniform last March, formed the Chaplains' Promotion Research Committee in nearby Havertown, Pa., to fight the military system. It has 50 members, both in and out of the service.

"We're hired as ministers, rabbis or priests and fired as soldiers," said The Rev. Turner, known as "Father Joe" during his Vietnam service.

Turner has filed three lawsuits against the Army, seeking reinstatement.

In August, he noted, the Army announced a new policy permitting doctors passed over for promotion to remain in the service because of a critical shortage in their ranks.

He also pointed to a comment by Deputy Chief of Chaplains Thaddeus Malanowski: "No valid judgment as to the quality of a chaplain's ministry can be drawn from his failure to be promoted."

The Rev. Turner's question to the Army is: "On what else should a chaplain be judged if not the quality of his ministry?"

Physiologist At Conference

ECU News Bureau

Dr. David L. Beckman of the East Carolina University School of Medicine recently participated in an international conference sponsored by the National Institute of Neurological and Communicative Disorders and Stroke (NINCDS).

Dr. Beckman, a physiologist, led a discussion on somatic-autonomic reflexes, describing how acute stress affects the body and how injury to one part of the body causes injury to another part. For example, a muscle injury may create tension which in turn may result in high blood pressure.

Practicing physicians and basic scientists attended the four day conference held at Michigan State Univesity.

NINCDS is a branch of the National Institute of Health.

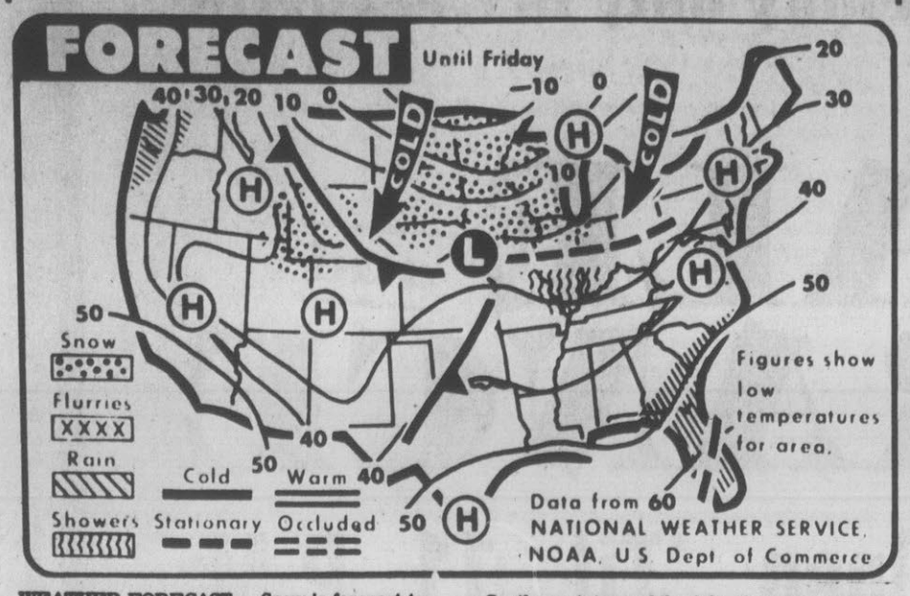
How's The Weather?



WEATHER FORECAST — Snow is forecast today from the northern Rockies to the Great Lakes. Rain is expected for the northern Pacific coast and for Florida, Georgia and the Carolinas. Southern states and the Atlantic coast are due to see mild temperatures but most of the country will be cold. (AP Laserphoto Map)

By The Associated Press

Rain and drizzle today over the state with some clearing late in the west this afternoon or tonight.

A shallow layer of cold air covered the state yesterday with a warm moist layer above. This condition will remain until the next cold front clears the area. The cold front will begin to clear the western parts of the state this afternoon.

Yesterday was cloudy with occasional rain and drizzle across the state. The rain was light and caused no problems. With overcast skies and occasional precipitation, the temperatures changed very little during the daylight hours.

The warmest was a 68 at Cape Hatteras followed by a 67 at Wilmington. Many areas in the north and northeast Piedmont never got out of the 40s.

Overnight conditions remained much the same, with the addition of some dense fog. As the fog increased the precipitation decreased. Towards sunrise some temperatures began to rise, as the cold high over the state began to break down. Temperatures ranged from the mid 40s to the mid 50s.

The cold front will become stationary off the coast tonight or early Friday. By Friday morning a low will develop on the cold front and be off the southeast coast of our state. This will keep the rain in the coastal areas Friday. As the cold front passes there will be little change in temperature.

Gambler Must Buy Federal Tax Stamp

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — If you're going to break state gambling laws, the U.S. Internal Revenue Service warns, don't make matters worse by breaking federal tax laws too.

If you're running an illegal gambling operation, the IRS urges you to buy the appropriate $500 gambling tax stamp.

IRS public relations officer Glenn Jones said the stamp is required for bookmakers, numbers and policy operators, sports bet collectors, and operators of betting pools and lotteries conducted for profit. Also slot machines.

Most of those activities are violations of state or local law, but Jones says the IRS isn't concerned with the actual violations — just the tax.

"We wouldn't be concerned with whether or not they're breaking other laws. We're concerned that they get their stamp," he said.

Failure to buy the stamp can result in criminal prosecution, civil penalties, fines and imprisonment, the release said.

Although some might be reluctant to buy the stamps for fear of tipping their hand, Jones says people do buy them. Sixty-two stamps have been sold so far this year in North Carolina, he said.

And Jones said buying a stamp isn't inviting an investigation by authorities.

"If they do buy a stamp, of course we're going to check their returns to make sure they've filed their income," he said. "But it doesn't mean they're under investigation."

The IRS release said wagering tax information would be disclosed outside the U.S. Treasury Department "only in connection with civil or criminal matters arising under any provision of the IRS code."

Still, it carried this disclaimer: "Compliance with the federal wagering laws does not excuse persons from not complying with other federal, state or local laws."

TVA Is Counting Heavily On Power Conservation

By MATT YANCEY
Associated Press Writer

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — The Tennessee Valley Authority has put aside another rate increase this year, hoping its pleas to conserve electricity will put its power system in better financial condition.

The conservation pitch is now centered in TVA's home insulation program, which was expanded Wednesday by the government utility's board of directors to include 300,000 more homes.

Officials hope the five-year program of no-interest loans to insulate 800,000 electrically heated or cooled homes will eventually save its power system about $25 million a year in fuel costs.

To meet peak heating and air conditioning demands this year, TVA had to operate its expensive oil turbine generators and purchase power from neighboring utilties at costs above its own rates to consumers.

The drain of TVA revenues to other power systems has added to the utility's troubles in finding money from its revenues to build new power plants. As a result, TVA is having to finance about 90 percent of its nuclear plant construction with borrowed money.

"Someday, somebody's going to have to bite the bullet and take the bull by the horns," TVA Director Bill Jenkins said. "Times have been so bad in the past few years that it's just been too difficult to maintain the revenue margin we need in terms of public acceptance."

Director David Freeman asked the agency's staff to explore the possibility of distributors, instead of TVA, building future power plants. He said this would be one way of keeping TVA's debt down.

"We've got a number of distributors that have 100 percent equity in their capitalization while we're moving towards 100 percent debt," Freeman said. "Muncipal distributors can borrow money for new plants at 6 percent while we have to pay 8 percent."

Freeman said the Allen plant near Memphis is one example of how distributors could play a larger role in expanding TVA's system. The 990,000-kilowatt plant was built by the Memphis Light, Gas & Water Divsion but is leased to and operated by TVA.

The three-member board also approved a $5.5 million project to build a 24-mile transmission line from West Point, Miss., to the Mississippi-Alabama border. The 500,000 volt line will enable TVA and Alabama Power Co. to borrow and buy electricity from each other when they need it.

Godwin Williams, manager of TVA's power system, announced Wednesday he will retire on Dec. 31. Williams, 64, joined TVA in 1939 as a load dispatcher. TVA Chairman Aubrey Wagner said Williams' successor in the $48,000-a-year job has not been chosen.

Fear In-Flight Plane Breakup

WICHITA, Kan. (AP) — The chief investigator into last week's airplane crash in North Carolina that led to the grounding of all Cessna Conquests said Wednesday the plane broke up in flight.

"It was an in-flight breakup," said Frank Roth, veteran investigator for the National Transportation Safety Board. "It has to be with the pieces spread over 212 miles."

Seven persons were killed Nov. 15 in the crash about nine miles northwest of Greensboro, N.C. The Federal Aviation Administration grounded the 15 Conquests which had been produced and ordered Cessna to stop delivering the model to purchasers.

The wreckage was moved to a Cessna hanger in Wichita from the accident scene to be closer to company records and personnel involved in designing the new twin-engine turboprop, Roth said.

A nine-man team of federal officials, Cessna represenatatives and suppliers of the plane's engines and propellers is seeking the cause of the accident.

Roth said all initial information pointed to structural breakup.

"We're still looking into that," Roth said.

The initial phase of the investigation is expected to be completed about Dec. 10. After that, a formal report will be sent to NTSB headquarters and later released.

A separate "blue ribbon" team of Federal Aviation Administration officials will arrive in Wichita Monday to review all aspects of the aircraft's flight testing and certification for production by the local FAA.

Cessna had recently told stock analysts it had advance orders for about 150 Conquests.

Bergland For Farmer Strike

By DON KENDALL
AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland says he supports a farmers' strike set to begin next month, but that the effort appears doomed.

An organization calling itself American Agriculture wants farmers, beginning Dec. 14, to stop producing and selling wheat and other commodities. The strike aims to force up prices and boost farmers' sagging incomes.

"I endorse the strike. I say go at it, " Bergland said Wednesday. "I mean, it's not unlike a consumer boycott or unlike persons going to conventions and waving banners or demonstrating in the streets."

Bergland told a meeting of the American Association of Agricultural College Editors that the strike movement "is a legitimate and proper" way of protest by farmers who are unhappy with depressed prices for wheat, cattle and other commodities.

"I don't think it's going to work because I've seen this tried before," Bergland said. "I wish them well but I don't think it's going to be effective."

A spokeswoman for American Agriculture in Denver said Bergland's dismissal of the strike's effectiveness is not justified and earlier attempts by farmers "have never had this kind of enthusiasm" apparent now.

Several thousand farmers paraded tractors and other machines in Pueblo, Colo., two months ago during a visit by Bergland as strike fever picked up steam. Farmers said in addition to halting production, they plan to stop buying tractors and other supplies.

Dozens of protests and meetings have been held across the country since then. Organizers say that about 200 strike offices have been opened in approximately 30 states.

Protesting farmers want 100 percent of parity for crops and livestock. Parity is an indicator which, at 100 percent, theoretically gives farmers the same buying power they had in 1910-1914, when prices and costs were considered in balance.

Farm prices for most commodities are far below that. Wheat, for example, averaged $2.26 a bushel nationally at the farm in mid-October, 45 percent of the full parity price of $5.02 a bushel.

Obituaries

Avery

AYDEN—Herbert Avery, 84, died this morning in the Pitt Memorial Hospital. Funeral services will be held Saturday at 2 p.m. at Farmer Funeral Chapel. Officiating will be Rev. Ray Allman of Durham, and Rev. Rex Edwards of Saratoga. Burial will follow in the Snow Hill Cemetery.

Mr. Avery was a member of Little Creek Free Will Baptist Church and the Improved Order of the Red Men. A life-long resident of Pitt county, Mr. Avery was a retired farmer.

He is survived by three sons, James (Buck) Avery of Winterville, John T. Avery of Snow Hill, and Robert Avery of Trenton; eight daughters, Mrs. Mavis Ownes of Greenville, Mrs. Nettie Mae Smith of Greenville, Mrs. Tina Croom of Trenton, Mrs. Ellen Johnson of Kinston, Mrs. Elizabeth Harper of Milford, Delaware, Mrs. Myrtle Bloom of Catonsville, Maryland, Mrs. Geraldine Letchworth of Saratoga, and Mrs. Joyce Hill of Statonsburg; two brothers, Walter Avery of Farmville, and Chester Avery of Winterville; two sisters, Mrs. Ellen Pillgreen of Winterville, and Mrs. Etta Pillgreen of Newport News, Virginia; 20 grandchildren and 14 great-grandchildren.

The family will receive freinds at Farmer Funeral Chapel Friday night from 7-9. They will also be at the home of Buck Avery in Winterville.

Seven towns in the county shared in the balance, including: Washington, $50,470; Belhaven, $12,825; Aurora, $3,997; Chocowinity, $3,331; Washington Park, $2,998; Bath, $1,277; and Pantego, $1,221.

Postponing Ban On Saccharin

WASHINGTON (AP) — A new law requires cancer warnings on saccharin products, but postpones for 18 months a proposed ban on saccharin as an artificial sweetener.

The legislation, signed Wednesday by President Carter, would require the warning on saccharin products shipped in interstate commerce. It would read:

"Use of this product may be hazardous to your health. This product contains saccharin which has been determined to cause cancer in laboratory animals."

The message will appear at least 90 days after the Food and Drug Administration issues final rules carrying out the legislation.

The FDA wanted to prohibit use of saccharin as an additive to foods and beverages, but allow its sale as a nonprescription drug.

The legislation was a compromise that requires the warning and a study of saccharin and other food additives.

Yellow-Footed Pigeons Tracked

SAN LUIS OBISPO, Calif. (AP) — Police are tracking yellow-footed pigeons to try to find out who crammed 30 of the birds into a patrol car.

Investigators painted the surviving pigeons' feet yellow and were tracked them back to their pigeonholes, hoping it would lead to pranksters who stashed the birds in a squad car parked in the police lot Tuesday night.

A passing janitor spotted two of the birds peering out a rear window at 6 a.m. He found 30 of the birds inside. Eleven were already dead, and the inside of the car was covered with pigeon droppings.

The car, a radar traffic-control unit, had apparently been burglarized by vandals using a wire to pop the lock. "I guess somebody didn't like the ticket they got," a police lieutenant said.

Zoo's Seal Had Diet Of Coins

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — A seal that died at the Washington Park Zoo apparently had strange culinary habits.

A postmortem this week revealed the seal had swallowed 50 coins, along with some sharp-edged slugs, wadded tinfoil and an acorn.

Weekend Of Classic Contest

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

This is the weekend of The Game.

Not one in particular — but a bowlful of the nation's most enduring college football rivalries.

After Orange Bowl-bound Arkansas and Tangerine Bowl-bound Texas Tech met in their nationally televised battle today, the rest of the holiday fare will include such classic matchups as UCLA-Southern California, Nebraska-Oklahoma, Arizona State-Arizona, Army-Navy, Penn State-Pitt, Alabama-Auburn, Texas-Texas A&M and Grambling-Southern.

Not only will be pride at stake, but in a few cases, positions in bowl games.

For instance, if UCLA beats Southern Cal in their 47th meeting Friday night, the Bruins will earn a bid to the Rose Bowl as the Pacific-8 Conference representative. If Southern Cal wins, the Trojans will gain a spot in the Bluebonnet Bowl. The loser goes nowhere.

"The key for us is to not make errors in the clutch like we have all year," said Southern Cal Coach John Robinson, whose team has been inconsistent this season after winning the Rose Bowl last year with virtually the same players.

UCLA Coach Terry Donahue, whose team is ranked No. 17 in the country, says the game will come down to basics — as it usually does. "Whichever team goes out there and makes the fewest mistakes, can control the ball and executes will probably win," said Donahue.

The winner of the Oklahoma-Nebraska game Friday will go to the Orange Bowl as the Big Eight Conference champion, and the loser will meet Atlantic Coast Conference champion North Carolina in the Liberty Bowl. Oklahoma is ranked No. 3 and Nebraska No. 11.

A victory for No. 19 Arizona State over Arizona would send the Sun Devils to a Fiesta Bowl meeting with No. 9 Penn State. It's the 51st meeting between the arch-rivals and an annual blood battle.

The Army-Navy game features a pair of bowl-less teams — but as usual will be the highlight of the season for both teams and as good for the service academies as any bowl could be. The usual crowd of about 100,000 will be on hand at JFK Stadium in Philadelphia, including insignias of the highest rank from the Armed Services.

The Penn State-Pitt game, scheduled for Saturday on national television, has developed into one of the fiercest rivalries in the country. Called the "Battle of Route 22" because of the road that links the close intrastate rivals, the winner usually is as proud to claim the championship of Pennsylvania as any national accolade.

Alabama is ranked No. 2 in the country and bound for the Sugar Bowl, but still is wary of an always-high intrastate rival in Auburn. The teams meet Saturday. Top-ranked Texas and No. 12 Texas A&M will play Saturday for bowl designations — the winner goes to the Cotton Bowl and the loser to the Bluebonnet. Grambling and Southern clash Saturday in their annual game in the New Orleans Superdome that is generally referred to as a "happening."

Experienced Bear Grass Girls Seek Good Year

By JIM KYLE
Reflector Sports Writer

With his top three players from last year returning to the frontcourt, Bear Grass girls' basketball coach Churchill Briley is predicting better things than last season's "so-so" record.

"We should see improvement on our ballclub over last year. We have our top three players returning, especially Patricia Taylor. We should have a pretty solid ballclub."

Experience and balance are the strong points of the Lady Bears. The team will start five seniors, with some of them having played for four years. Bear Grass was dependent upon Taylor for much of the scoring load last year, according to Briley, but that won't be the case this season.

But, the 5-6 senior is definitely the leading returnee. She was all-conference and all-area last season. She is an exceptional shooter and an outstanding defensive player, Briley said. As a forward, Taylor is "a top all-around ballplayer."

Joining her will be 5-8 Debra Jo Peaks at the other forward. She is also a returnee who has shown much improvement this year.

At center will be Jandra Crawford. The 5-9 returnee showed a lot of agressiveness in the Lady Bears' first game last week.

In the backcourt will be two newcomers, 5-5 Lydia Howell and 5-4 Vickie Holliday. Howell is the team's playmaker and not a big scorer, while Holliday is an improved performer. Both girls saw some action last season.

In backup roles will be two key players, Joette Rogers and Stephanie Andrews. Rogers is a guard and a good playmaker. Briley termed her "a very smart ballplayer." Andrews is a strong, physical player and one of the best rebounders on the team. Angela Coltrain, a forward, should also see some playing time.

Briley gives Belhaven the edge in the Beaufort-Hyde-Martin race this year, but he adds that it should be a real close contest with possibly four teams battling it out for the top spot. Bear Grass should be one of those four teams.

"The girls are real enthusiastic," he said. "They know it's their senior year and they're going to give it all they've got."

Getting The Money Has Several Factors

NEW YORK (AP) — Not every free agent has joined baseball's millionaire club, but a pitcher with three major league victories and a utility infielder still have done very well for themselves.

Tom Hausman, a 24-year-old right-hander who pitched for Spokane of the Pacific Coast League last season, and Jerry Terrell, who batted .224 in 214 at-bats with Minnesota this year, have climbed into new tax brackets.

The Associated Press has learned the terms of the contracts signed by Hausman and Terrell, along with a couple of star free agents, Richie Zisk and Larry Hisle. The obvious conclusion from the figures is that any free agent who can fill a hole, has potential or is a star player will do well financially.

Hausman, the first free agent signed by the New York Mets, was given a $50,000 bonus and a three-year contract through 1980 that escalates from $40,000 to $65,000 to $85,000. The total package is valued at $240,000 and could be worth $20,000 more if Hausman pitches in 30 games or in 120 innings next season.

The Mets need pitching and see the unproven Hausman — 3-6 with Milwaukee in 1975 — as a good gamble.

Terrell, who was at Minnesota for five seasons, signed with Kansas City, a team that needs backup infield help. With 33-year-old Freddie Patek at shortstop and young players George Brett and Frank White cemented at third and second, respectively, Terrell wasn't signed as a starter.

Terrell, 31, signed a five-year contract which will pay $65,000 in 1978 and 1979; $75,000 in 1980; $85,000 in 1981, and $90,000 in 1982. That adds up to $380,000 for a player whose lifetime batting average is about .260 and whose career home run total is three.

Zisk and Hisle, on the other hand, are proven star sluggers, who provoked some spirited bidding and became millionaires with one swing of the pen.

So far, in this second free-agent season, Zisk's contract with Texas over 10 years is the highest total money figure — $3.21 million — while Hisle's pay per years-of-service with Milwaukee is the highest — $526,000 per year.

Zisk was given a signing bonus of $510,000; $290,000 a year from 1978 to 1982, and $250,000 a year from 1983 to 1987.

Hisle signed a contract worth $3.155 million, which consisted of a signing bonus of $615,000; $250,000 a year from 1978 to 1983 and deferred payments of $80,000 a year from 1984 to 1986.

Oscar Gamble, a left-handed power hitter who slugged 31 homers with the Chicago White Sox in 1977, joined baseball's million dollar team Wednesday, signing with San Diego for more than $2.5 million for six years.

The other members of the 1977 millionaire's club are Rich Gossage, who signed with the New York Yankees Tuesday for $2.7 million over six years, Lyman Bostock, who signed with California for $2.4 million over five years, and Mike Torrez, who signed with Boston for $2.5 million over seven years.

Bears Claim Revenge Win

EDENTON — Bear Grass gained revenge for its opening night loss with a 45-43 victory over Chowan last night in a rematch of the two teams.

The Bear Grass girls also won, capturing their second straight win, but it took a double overtime. The score and other information was not available, however.

Bear Grass and Chowan battled through the first period with neither team able to gain any great advantage, as the Bears finished the frame with a 14-13 lead.

Chowan came back in the second period, a slow frame, to push into a 19-18 lead at halftime. During the third frame, Chowan was able to extend its lead by four more points, and took a 33-28 lead into the final quarter.

But in that, the Bears rallied and outscored Chowan, 17-10, to capture the victory.

Jackie Harrison led Bear Grass with ten points, while Terry Holley had 11 and Donald Holley had 10 for Chowan.

By DON KENDALL
AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland says he supports a farmers' strike set to begin next month, but that the effort appears doomed.

An organization calling itself American Agriculture wants farmers, beginning Dec. 14, to stop producing and selling wheat and other commodities. The strike aims to force up prices and boost farmers' sagging incomes.

"I endorse the strike. I say go at it, " Bergland said Wednesday. "I mean, it's not unlike a consumer boycott or unlike persons going to conventions and waving banners or demonstrating in the streets."

Bergland told a meeting of the American Association of Agricultural College Editors that the strike movement "is a legitimate and proper" way of protest by farmers who are unhappy with depressed prices for wheat, cattle and other commodities.

"I don't think it's going to work because I've seen this tried before," Bergland said. "I wish them well but I don't think it's going to be effective."

A spokeswoman for American Agriculture in Denver said Bergland's dismissal of the strike's effectiveness is not justified and earlier attempts by farmers "have never had this kind of enthusiasm" apparent now.

Several thousand farmers paraded tractors and other machines in Pueblo, Colo., two months ago during a visit by Bergland as strike fever picked up steam. Farmers said in addition to halting production, they plan to stop buying tractors and other supplies.

Dozens of protests and meetings have been held across the country since then. Organizers say that about 200 strike offices have been opened in approximately 30 states.

Protesting farmers want 100 percent of parity for crops and livestock. Parity is an indicator which, at 100 percent, theoretically gives farmers the same buying power they had in 1910-1914, when prices and costs were considered in balance.

Farm prices for most commodities are far below that. Wheat, for example, averaged $2.26 a bushel nationally at the farm in mid-October, 45 percent of the full parity price of $5.02 a bushel.

Obituaries

Avery

AYDEN—Herbert Avery, 84, died this morning in the Pitt Memorial Hospital. Funeral services will be held Saturday at 2 p.m. at Farmer Funeral Chapel. Officiating will be Rev. Ray Allman of Durham, and Rev. Rex Edwards of Saratoga. Burial will follow in the Snow Hill Cemetery.

Mr. Avery was a member of Little Creek Free Will Baptist Church and the Improved Order of the Red Men. A life-long resident of Pitt county, Mr. Avery was a retired farmer.

He is survived by three sons, James (Buck) Avery of Winterville, John T. Avery of Snow Hill, and Robert Avery of Trenton; eight daughters, Mrs. Mavis Ownes of Greenville, Mrs. Nettie Mae Smith of Greenville, Mrs. Tina Croom of Trenton, Mrs. Ellen Johnson of Kinston, Mrs. Elizabeth Harper of Milford, Delaware, Mrs. Myrtle Bloom of Catonsville, Maryland, Mrs. Geraldine Letchworth of Saratoga, and Mrs. Joyce Hill of Statonsburg; two brothers, Walter Avery of Farmville, and Chester Avery of Winterville; two sisters, Mrs. Ellen Pillgreen of Winterville, and Mrs. Etta Pillgreen of Newport News, Virginia; 20 grandchildren and 14 great-grandchildren.

The family will receive freinds at Farmer Funeral Chapel Friday night from 7-9. They will also be at the home of Buck Avery in Winterville.

Seven towns in the county shared in the balance, including: Washington, $50,470; Belhaven, $12,825; Aurora, $3,997; Chocowinity, $3,331; Washington Park, $2,998; Bath, $1,277; and Pantego, $1,221.

Postponing Ban On Saccharin

WASHINGTON (AP) — A new law requires cancer warnings on saccharin products, but postpones for 18 months a proposed ban on saccharin as an artificial sweetener.

The legislation, signed Wednesday by President Carter, would require the warning on saccharin products shipped in interstate commerce. It would read:

"Use of this product may be hazardous to your health. This product contains saccharin which has been determined to cause cancer in laboratory animals."

The message will appear at least 90 days after the Food and Drug Administration issues final rules carrying out the legislation.

The FDA wanted to prohibit use of saccharin as an additive to foods and beverages, but allow its sale as a nonprescription drug.

The legislation was a compromise that requires the warning and a study of saccharin and other food additives.

Yellow-Footed Pigeons Tracked

SAN LUIS OBISPO, Calif. (AP) — Police are tracking yellow-footed pigeons to try to find out who crammed 30 of the birds into a patrol car.

Investigators painted the surviving pigeons' feet yellow and were tracked them back to their pigeonholes, hoping it would lead to pranksters who stashed the birds in a squad car parked in the police lot Tuesday night.

A passing janitor spotted two of the birds peering out a rear window at 6 a.m. He found 30 of the birds inside. Eleven were already dead, and the inside of the car was covered with pigeon droppings.

The car, a radar traffic-control unit, had apparently been burglarized by vandals using a wire to pop the lock. "I guess somebody didn't like the ticket they got," a police lieutenant said.

Zoo's Seal Had Diet Of Coins

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — A seal that died at the Washington Park Zoo apparently had strange culinary habits.

A postmortem this week revealed the seal had swallowed 50 coins, along with some sharp-edged slugs, wadded tinfoil and an acorn.

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

This is the weekend of The Game.

Not one in particular — but a bowlful of the nation's most enduring college football rivalries.

After Orange Bowl-bound Arkansas and Tangerine Bowl-bound Texas Tech met in their nationally televised battle today, the rest of the holiday fare will include such classic matchups as UCLA-Southern California, Nebraska-Oklahoma, Arizona State-Arizona, Army-Navy, Penn State-Pitt, Alabama-Auburn, Texas-Texas A&M and Grambling-Southern.

Not only will be pride at stake, but in a few cases, positions in bowl games.

For instance, if UCLA beats Southern Cal in their 47th meeting Friday night, the Bruins will earn a bid to the Rose Bowl as the Pacific-8 Conference representative. If Southern Cal wins, the Trojans will gain a spot in the Bluebonnet Bowl. The loser goes nowhere.

"The key for us is to not make errors in the clutch like we have all year," said Southern Cal Coach John Robinson, whose team has been inconsistent this season after winning the Rose Bowl last year with virtually the same players.

UCLA Coach Terry Donahue, whose team is ranked No. 17 in the country, says the game will come down to basics — as it usually does. "Whichever team goes out there and makes the fewest mistakes, can control the ball and executes will probably win," said Donahue.

The winner of the Oklahoma-Nebraska game Friday will go to the Orange Bowl as the Big Eight Conference champion, and the loser will meet Atlantic Coast Conference champion North Carolina in the Liberty Bowl. Oklahoma is ranked No. 3 and Nebraska No. 11.

A victory for No. 19 Arizona State over Arizona would send the Sun Devils to a Fiesta Bowl meeting with No. 9 Penn State. It's the 51st meeting between the arch-rivals and an annual blood battle.

The Army-Navy game features a pair of bowl-less teams — but as usual will be the highlight of the season for both teams and as good for the service academies as any bowl could be. The usual crowd of about 100,000 will be on hand at JFK Stadium in Philadelphia, including insignias of the highest rank from the Armed Services.

The Penn State-Pitt game, scheduled for Saturday on national television, has developed into one of the fiercest rivalries in the country. Called the "Battle of Route 22" because of the road that links the close intrastate rivals, the winner usually is as proud to claim the championship of Pennsylvania as any national accolade.

Alabama is ranked No. 2 in the country and bound for the Sugar Bowl, but still is wary of an always-high intrastate rival in Auburn. The teams meet Saturday. Top-ranked Texas and No. 12 Texas A&M will play Saturday for bowl designations — the winner goes to the Cotton Bowl and the loser to the Bluebonnet. Grambling and Southern clash Saturday in their annual game in the New Orleans Superdome that is generally referred to as a "happening."

Experienced Bear Grass Girls Seek Good Year

By JIM KYLE
Reflector Sports Writer

With his top three players from last year returning to the frontcourt, Bear Grass girls' basketball coach Churchill Briley is predicting better things than last season's "so-so" record.

"We should see improvement on our ballclub over last year. We have our top three players returning, especially Patricia Taylor. We should have a pretty solid ballclub."

Experience and balance are the strong points of the Lady Bears. The team will start five seniors, with some of them having played for four years. Bear Grass was dependent upon Taylor for much of the scoring load last year, according to Briley, but that won't be the case this season.

But, the 5-6 senior is definitely the leading returnee. She was all-conference and all-area last season. She is an exceptional shooter and an outstanding defensive player, Briley said. As a forward, Taylor is "a top all-around ballplayer."

Joining her will be 5-8 Debra Jo Peaks at the other forward. She is also a returnee who has shown much improvement this year.

At center will be Jandra Crawford. The 5-9 returnee showed a lot of agressiveness in the Lady Bears' first game last week.

In the backcourt will be two newcomers, 5-5 Lydia Howell and 5-4 Vickie Holliday. Howell is the team's playmaker and not a big scorer, while Holliday is an improved performer. Both girls saw some action last season.

In backup roles will be two key players, Joette Rogers and Stephanie Andrews. Rogers is a guard and a good playmaker. Briley termed her "a very smart ballplayer." Andrews is a strong, physical player and one of the best rebounders on the team. Angela Coltrain, a forward, should also see some playing time.

Briley gives Belhaven the edge in the Beaufort-Hyde-Martin race this year, but he adds that it should be a real close contest with possibly four teams battling it out for the top spot. Bear Grass should be one of those four teams.

"The girls are real enthusiastic," he said. "They know it's their senior year and they're going to give it all they've got."

Getting The Money Has Several Factors

NEW YORK (AP) — Not every free agent has joined baseball's millionaire club, but a pitcher with three major league victories and a utility infielder still have done very well for themselves.

Tom Hausman, a 24-year-old right-hander who pitched for Spokane of the Pacific Coast League last season, and Jerry Terrell, who batted .224 in 214 at-bats with Minnesota this year, have climbed into new tax brackets.

The Associated Press has learned the terms of the contracts signed by Hausman and Terrell, along with a couple of star free agents, Richie Zisk and Larry Hisle. The obvious conclusion from the figures is that any free agent who can fill a hole, has potential or is a star player will do well financially.

Hausman, the first free agent signed by the New York Mets,, was given a $50,000 bonus and a three-year contract through 1980 that escalates from $40,000 to $65,000 to $85,000. The total package is valued at $240,000 and could be worth $20,000 more if Hausman pitches in 30 games or in 120 innings next season.

The Mets need pitching and see the unproven Hausman — 3-6 with Milwaukee in 1975 — as a good gamble.

Terrell, who was at Minnesota for five seasons, signed with Kansas City, a team that needs backup infield help. With 33-year-old Freddie Patek at shortstop and young players George Brett and Frank White cemented at third and second, respectively, Terrell wasn't signed as a starter.

Terrell, 31, signed a five-year contract which will pay $65,000 in 1978 and 1979; $75,000 in 1980; $85,000 in 1981, and $90,000 in 1982. That adds up to $380,000 for a player whose lifetime batting average is about .260 and whose career home run total is three.

Zisk and Hisle, on the other hand, are proven star sluggers, who provoked some spirited bidding and became millionaires with one swing of the pen.

So far, in this second free-agent season, Zisk's contract with Texas over 10 years is the highest total money figure — $3.21 million — while Hisle's pay per years-of-service with Milwaukee is the highest — $526,000 per year.

Zisk was given a signing bonus of $510,000; $290,000 a year from 1978 to 1982, and $250,000 a year from 1983 to 1987.

Hisle signed a contract worth $3.155 million, which consisted of a signing bonus of $615,000; $250,000 a year from 1978 to 1983 and deferred payments of $80,000 a year from 1984 to 1986.

Oscar Gamble, a left-handed power hitter who slugged 31 homers with the Chicago White Sox in 1977, joined baseball's million dollar team Wednesday, signing with San Diego for more than $2.5 million for six years.

The other members of the 1977 millionaire's club are Rich Gossage, who signed with the New York Yankees Tuesday for $2.7 million over six years, Lyman Bostock, who signed with California for $2.4 million over five years, and Mike Torrez, who signed with Boston for $2.5 million over seven years.

Bears Claim Revenge Win

EDENTON — Bear Grass gained revenge for its opening night loss with a 45-43 victory over Chowan last night in a rematch of the two teams.

The Bear Grass girls also won, capturing their second straight win, but it took a double overtime. The score and other information was not available, however.

Bear Grass and Chowan battled through the first period with neither team able to gain any great advantage, as the Bears finished the frame with a 14-13 lead.

Chowan came back in the second period, a slow frame, to push into a 19-18 lead at halftime. During the third frame, Chowan was able to extend its lead by four more points, and took a 33-28 lead into the final quarter.

But in that, the Bears rallied and outscored Chowan, 17-10, to capture the victory.

Jackie Harrison led Bear Grass with ten points, while Terry Holley had 11 and Donald Holley had 10 for Chowan.

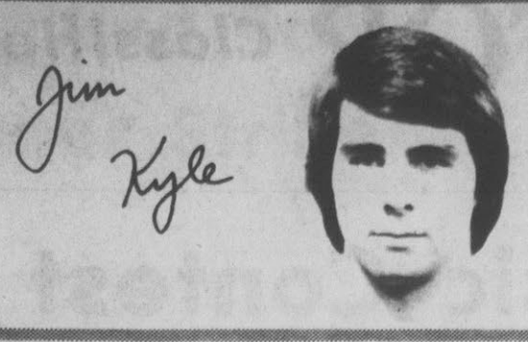
OFFICIAL NORTH CAROLINA STATE INSPECTION STATION



Best Of Friends; Worst Of Enemies

THE NATURE of Clinton's victory over Farmville Central in the quarter-finals of the state 3-A playoffs last Friday night came as a shock to many Jaguar observers, including Farmville coach Gene Brewer.

Quite simply, the Dark Horse running backs ran right over Farmville's defense, which was thought to be the strongest part of the team. Clinton penetrated for 319 yards rushing in romping to a 41-21 victory.

The Dark Horses pulled no surprises in the contest, according to Brewer, they just outblocked and outran their opponents. "We knew we would have to stop about four plays — the trap, sweep, quick pitch — and we didn't stop any of them," Brewer said after the loss. "They blocked the hell out of us."

Not only did the Clinton line move off of the ball well enough to get the running backs through Farmville's defensive front the powerful ballcarriers, Gary Whitted, Tim Newman and Smoky Norris, broke tackle after tackle in the secondary. The Jaguars were hitting, but not tackling. Whitted ended up with 204 yards and four touchdowns.

The yardage came both inside and outside. A quick trap play was usually good for 8-10 yards, while a quick pitch or sweep would net even more than that. Not only did the Jags have trouble up the middle, their lateral pursuit was much poorer than their previous 11 games.

"I thought we had a pretty good defense until we went up against them," Brewer said. "I thought we would be able to contain them." But the Jaguar defense, which had been the cornerstone of the team all year, appeared to be shell-shocked by two early Clinton touchdowns, and never recovered.

The Farmville offense, completely shut down in the first half, came back in the second half to score all of the team's 21 points. After being held to just 14 rushing yards before intermission, the team picked up 94 yards after halftime.

The Jaguars nearly got back into the ballgame on a couple of occasions in the second half, but each time Clinton would break a big play to score another touchdown and quell the rally.

Overall, it was a disappointingly poor showing for the team, which played better in most of its regular season games. But, this is a team with a future, losing very few players to graduation, and it will have another shot next year.

Tar Heels Come Through

One defense which did have a good showing over the weekend was North Carolina's. The Tar Heel defensive unit shut off the high-powered Duke offensive attack almost completely to lead the Heels to a 16-3 victory and the Atlantic Coast Conference championship.

Though the UNC offense has been lacking at times this year, the defense has usually come through and is largely responsible for the team's 8-2-1 regular season record, 5-0-1 ACC mark and Liberty Bowl invitation.

Although the final statistics were nearly even, 292 yards in total offense for the Tar Heels to 278 for Duke, the UNC defense was able to stop the Blue Devils deep in Carolina territory on numerous occasions and that was the key to the victory.

On different drives, Duke got to the Tar Heel 37, 30, 26, 20 and 2 without scoring. The six turnovers forced by the UNC defenders during the day was one key to the defensive success. Quarterback Mike Dunn, who had thrown 195 consecutive passes this season without an interception, was burned with three thefts by the Carolina defenders.

The Tar Heel defense will face its stiffest test in the Liberty Bowl on Dec. 19 when Carolina will face either Nebraska or Oklahoma, whichever team loses tomorrow's game.

By The Associated Press

When Marques Johnson and Richard Washington played at UCLA in their glamorous college basketball days, they were the best of friends.

They still are today — except when they meet on a professional basketball court. Then they're the worst of enemies.

"We've got a job to do and if that means making each other look bad, that's the way it is," says Johnson.

The rookie Milwaukee star did just that to his former college teammate Wednesday night, blocking one of Washington's shots in a key play that helped the Bucks beat the Kansas City Kings 122-116.

In other NBA action, the Boston Celtics beat the Houston Rockets 109-100; the Indiana Pacers turned back the Golden State Warriors 126-116; the Philadelphia 76ers edged the Detroit Pistons 106-105; the San Antonio Spurs outscored the New Jersey Nets 132-119; the Portland Trail Blazers trimmed the Chicago Bulls 116-111 and the Seattle SuerSonics whipped the Los Angeles Lakers 113-89.

Trailing 108-105 with 3:03 to play, Milwaukee outscored Kansas City 17-8 to pull out the victory. Johnson had four points and three rebounds along with his crucial blocked shot in the rally. Johnson led Milwaukee with 23 points and 17 rebounds.

Celtics 109, Rockets 100

Dave Cowens scored 24 points and dominated the boards with 22 rebounds, leading Boston over Houston. Cowens, playing virtually the entire game, put on an awesome display of power as the Celtics posted only their fifth victory in 15 games while handing Houston its fourth consecutive defeat.

Pacers 126, Warriors 116

John Williamson scored a career-high 43 points as Indiana, scoring 14 straight in the fourth quarter, beat Golden State. The Warriors, whose biggest lead was eight points in the first quarter, led 94-93 to start the final period.

76ers 106, Pistons 105

Two free throws by Steve Mix with one second remaining climaxed a wild final minute of play, enabling Philadelphia to squeeze past Detroit. The Pistons, who dropped their fifth in a row, appeared to have the game wrapped up with a 105-100 lead and 52 seconds remaining before Philadelphia's dramatic comeback.

Hawks 105, Nuggets 104

Charlie Criss scored 18 points in the fourth quarter to spark Atlanta to a one-point victory over Denver. A jump shot by Denver's Dan Issel wedged between the hoop and the backboard as the final buzzer sounded.

Spurs 132, Nets 119

George Gervin and Larry Kenon combined for 66 points as San Antonio beat New Jersey. Gervin scored 35 points and Kenon added 31 as the Spurs handed the Nets their seventh road loss of the season without a victory.

Trail Blazers 116, Bulls 111

Dave Twardzik scored five points in the final 33 seconds to help Portland preserve its victory over Chicago. Chicago had roared back from a 17-point, third-quarter deficit to pull within three at 105-102 with 2:26 remaining.

Sonics 113, Lakers 89

Dennis Johnson scored 16 points and ignited a late second-quarter rally that helped Seattle beat Los Angeles.

Pistons Trade Barnes For Braves' Shumate

DETROIT (AP) — The Detroit Pistons have given up on forward Marvin Barnes, trading him and two draft choices to the Buffalo Braves for forward John Shumate and a future No. 1 National Basketball Association draft pick.

Detroit also will receive a player to be named later, the Pistons said Wednesday, reportedly 6-foot-8 forward Gus Gerard.

Shumate, a former All-American from Notre Dame, is in his third season in the NBA. The 6-9, 235-pounder started all 18 Braves games so far this season, averaging 12.4 points and 7.1 rebounds.

Pistons' General Manager Bob Kauffman denied reports that Barnes left the team after a game in Los Angeles Friday. But he said neither he nor Coach Herb Brown had seen Barnes since the player returned to Detroit, allegedly because of a sore ankle.

Barnes, who is averaging 10 points and 7.6 rebounds a game, missed practices Tuesday and Wednesday.

Kauffman, in announcing the trade, said it was "important that we have players who get along well together on and off the court." He added, "What could have been a happy marriage never materialized."

Brown agreed. "I'm at a loss to tell you why it didn't work out," he said. "A lot of people, including the other players on this team, went out of their way to make him feel comfortable and I'm terribly disappointed that he didn't perform up to our — or his — expectations."

Barnes brought problems when he joined the Pistons in the American Basketball Association disperal draft in the summer of 1976. Detroit paid him a half million dollar bonus plus his yearly salary, estimated at about $300,000.

The 6-foot-9, 225-pound former All-American from Providence College was released from prison in Rhode Island in October, just before the NBA season started. He had served five months for violation of probation from a previous assault conviction.

Buffalo officials, meanwhile, were enthusiastic about getting the forward who carried the nickname "Bad News Barnes" in Detroit.

"This is an incredible trade for the Buffalo Braves," said the team's president, Norm Sonju. "This really is a good move for us, even though we're losing a friend and a good player."

Missouri Fires Coach Onofrio

COLUMBIA, Mo. (AP) — Al Onofrio and his Missouri Tigers humbled Alabama, Southern Cal and Ohio State, but the lowly Kansas Jayhawks had his number and it cost him his job.

University officials announced Wednesday night that Onofrio was out as coach, but may stay on in some capacity. He was 4-7 this year, the first year of a three-year contract extension.

During the 1976 season, Onofrio's team beat the winners of the Rose, Orange and Sun Bowls. He opened the 1976 season with a victory over Southern Cal and went on to beat Ohio State. The previous year, he beat highly ranked Alabama in a televised season opener. He beat Nebraska twice during his career.

Dolphins Put Pride On The Line In Contest Against St. Louis

By The Associated Press

According to Larry Little, the Miami Dolphins would find out today what they were made of.

"You're not going to see a letup in this team, I know that — if nothing else but for professional pride," the Dolphins' star guard said as Miami prepared for its pressure game against the red-hot Cardinals in St. Louis.

The Dolphins were fighting for a playoff berth. A loss threatened to destroy their chances for the American Football Conference wild card spot. Before the kickoff, they trailed East Division leader Baltimore by two games with four to go and, at 7-3, were one game behind the AFC's best runner-up team, the Oakland Raiders. The Cards took a 7-3 mark and a six-game winning streak into the game.

On Sunday, it will be Dallas at Washington, Baltimore at Denver, Los Angeles at Cleveland, Atlanta at Tampa Bay, the New York Giants at Cincinnati, Philadelphia at New England, Pittsburgh at the New York Jets, Kansas City at Houston, Minnesota at Green Bay, New Orleans at San Francisco and San Diego at Seattle. Buffalo visits Oakland Monday night.

"We're not mathematically out. We have a chance," Little said of the Dolphins' playoff hopes. "We've got to go into the game in St. Louis not feeling sorry for ourselves" because of last Sunday's 23-17 loss in Cincinnati. The Bengals scored the winning touchdown with 2½ minutes to play on Ken Anderson's 29-yard pass at the end of a razzle-dazzle triple reverse.

In Detroit, meanwhile, the Lions were girding for another assault on their pride.

Just a year ago, Buffalo's O.J. Simpson celebrated Thanksgiving Day by rolling up 273 yards rushing ... but the Bills lost 27-14. Everyone figured it would be a long time before that National Foootball League single-game record fell.

Last week against Minnesota it came crashing down as Payton amassed 275 yards in the Bears' 10-7 victory. That, and Detroit's 16-7 triumph over Tampa Bay, gave Chicago and the Lions 5-5 records and put them within one game of first-place Minnesota in the National Football Conference Central.

Found Ancient Treasure, Or Hunk Of Junk

By RICHARD E. BLOOM
Zanesville Times Recorder

ZANESVILLE, Ohio (AP) — Fred Wayble of New Concord, Ohio, has a mystery on his hands — a 10½-pound piece of metal shaped like an ancient face.

Although he has questioned both the Ohio Historical Society and the Smithsonian Institution, its identity remains unestablished.

Was it forged by the hands of prehistoric inhabitants of the lands now within Guernsey County? Is it a discarded calling card of some advanced race from beyond the stars, or simply a hoax? No one knows.

Wayble walked into the newsroom of the Zanesville Times Recorder lugging what appeared to be a cast iron artifact and asked for help in identifying the "face."

Newsroom personnel turned it over in their hands, running fingers over its rough, pocked surface; tapped it with pencils, weighed it and speculated on its age and origin. But skepticism veiled each examination.

Wayble's oval-shaped "mystery" is approximately 9 inches long and 5 inches wide at the eyes. It bears a prominent nose and the faint outline of a mouth, almost as if it had been poured from a death mask.

And while the artifact has been in Wayble's possession for at least 30 years, he says, its age and origin remain the largest gaps in the puzzle.

"One day back in '43 or '44, I think, my dad and I were tearing down this old log house over in Londonderry Township in Guernsey County," Wayble said.

"I happened to be walking under this little tree near the house when I stepped onto something that felt like a stone. I bent down to pick it up and that stone turned out to be the nose," he said, running his finger along its ridge.

Wayble said the metal object was not embedded in the ground, "just covered with some leaves and dirt." He brushed the debris away but that's all he did.

"I left it just like it is, never tried to clean it. I knew if I rubbed it with steel wool or something I might scratch the face."

Although it was an unusual find, neither Wayble nor his father gave it much thought. He said they took it home and used it as a doorstop. There it lay until some three years ago when Wayble's curiosity nudged him into his first identity search.

"When I finally became interested in it, I took it to the Historical Society in Columbus. But after looking at it they said I'd probably have to take it to a larger facility. They had checked every reference book on hand and couldn't come up with anything close to it," he said.

Officials of the society doubted that Ohio Indians forged the piece since they were unfamiliar with metals. But they did speculate it could possibly have been deposited by Michigan Indians, more familiar with the craft.

Still determined to seek out an identification, Wayble took his "mystery" to Marietta College. There "a woman said she couldn't begin to tell me what it was or how much it might be worth. But she did say it was priceless."

Disappointed, Wayble returned home, shoved the iron back into the paper sack and placed it on a shelf in the closet. It lay there undisturbed until a friend, Omie Mohler, came across it recently.

So Wayble and Mohler embarked on a second identity search which took them to the Times Recorder newsroom, where Wayble turned it over to one of the employees planning a weekend trip to Washington.

She stopped by the Smithsonian and, unable to meet personally with anyone there, left photographs of the face and requested any help authorities might be able to offer.

A few days later, she received a reply from Robert Elder, Museum specialist in the Department of Anthropology, which read, in part:

"After careful examination by our several curators, we find no adequate basis for identifying it. However it certainly is not of Indian workmanship and therefore must be something done by local white people.

"Our best suggestion is that it may be a death mask. Though originals are made in plaster, from which a sculptor may work, occasionally metal castings have been made from the original molds when a person ... wanted to be so memorialized."

Today's Cryptoquip clue: S equals T

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

The bidding:

West	North	East	South
Pass	1 ♠	Pass	2 NT
Pass	3 NT	Pass	Pass
Pass

Opening lead: Nine of ♠.

Bridge is a counting game. You count your tricks, your points, the distribution. It seems that South, declarer at three no trump, never learned that.

South had a perfect two no trump response—13-15 points and a balanced hand. Despite his five-card major, North assessed that nine tricks would be easier to make than ten because his hand was balanced, and he correctly raised to three no trump.

West was reluctant to lead a heart, so he opted for an unusual lead—the top of a doubleton. Declarer played low and East won the king. It was obvious that declarer had the missing high clubs, so East decided that that suit had no future. Since neither spades nor diamonds offered much promise, East shifted to the eight of hearts.

South covered, West won the king and shrewdly led back the seven of hearts.

Declarer won the jack of hearts and started on the spades. Unfortunately for his cause, East won the ace and played another heart, and West took two heart tricks to defeat the contract one trick.

This was a pretty piece of defensive cooperation—even more cooperation than one would imagine, for it required declarer to pitch in as well. Had declarer been able to count up to nine, he would not have needed to rail at the fates for dealing West both missing heart honors.

All declarer had to do to make his contract was to win the ace of clubs at trick one and then go about driving out the ace of spades. Once that card was forced out, declarer had available four spade tricks, four diamonds, the ace of clubs and any other trick the defenders had to give him in trying to get one of their suits going.

Rubber bridge clubs throughout the country use the four-deal bridge format. Do they know something you don't? Charles Goren's "Four-Deal Bridge" will teach you the strategies and tactics of this fast-paced action game that provides the cure for unending rubbers. Gives Study On Fluorine

ECU News Bureau

A report on an aspect of chemical research on flourine compounds conducted by an ECU scientist for more than 10 years was presented at the 29th Southeast Regional Meeting of the American Chemical Society.

Dr. Edgar Heckel, ECU professor of chemistry, presented a paper on "Negative Iron Formation from hexafloorobenzene in Collisions with Potassium Atoms" at one of eight technical paper sessions at the meeting in Tampa, Fla.

The research report resulted from a collaboration with Klause Lacmann of the Hahn-Meiture-Institute in Berlin where the experimental work was done. This investigation has been part of Dr. Heckel's research on flourine compounds for more than a decade.

'Thermos' Home Saves Energy

MISSION VIEJO, Calif. (UPI) — Two "thermos bottle" homes here use about one-half the energy consumed by conventional houses nearby. Their secret: extra-thick insulation and "enthalpy" — a Honeywell system that draws in outside air for heating or cooling when sensors determine this would be efficient.

Pets Prove To Be Help In Hospital

By ROSEMARY ARMAO

LIMA, Ohio (UPI) — One day a wounded sparrow stumbled into the turn-of-the century fortress of Lima State Hospital for the Criminally Insane, and founded a new therapy program.

Patients in one ward adopted the sick bird. They sneaked it into a closet when attendants decreed it had to go. Social worker Dave Lee joined the conspiracy.

Lee noticed that men who had been bored and despondent were now busy catching insects and tending to the sparrow. The patients worked together, and began talking to him, a fellow-conspirator, openly.

That was the start of the pet program three years ago.

Today, 130 canaries, cockateels, macaws, hamsters, gerbils, fish and rabbits are teaching the hospital's 400 patients about responsibility, affection and interaction.

"It's worked out just great," said Lee. He sees the hospital as an especially important model. He said it is among the few institutions of any kind to use pets this way.

"We have all the rapists from what used to be death row here, the baddest actors in the state. See, if it works here, it's got to work other places."

Few problems have occurred.

"Not one animal has ever been hurt," Lee said. "At first we were more worried about the animals than the patients because it would only take one episode of abuse, and we'd be out."

He said larger animals, cats and dogs, have been ruled out because of the number of sex offenders at Lima and the risk of bestiality.

One open or privileged ward is also kept pet-free for allergic patients.

Some inmates are psychopaths. Many have a history of animal abuse. But they have become intensely protective of the pets.

"We had a guy blow up a while back," Lee said, "really blow up. He overpowered two attendants, ripped a phone out of the wall. He turned over a pool table. The other patients all gathered around the ward aquarium and the ward bird cage. When they finally stopped the guy, only two things were left in the ward. The aquarium and the bird cage."

One pet has been killed, Lee said. A patient scheduled to return to prison after treatment was told he could not take his parakeet. He packed it, and the bird suffocated.

Usually, pets are turned over to a buddy or a relative when patients leave the hospital. "If a guy loses it and has to go to a strong ward, a buddy will watch his pet 'til he comes back," Lee said.

He said Columbus State and Tiffin State Hospitals have begun easing their no pet rules because of the protest of Lima transfers.

Lee said only once has he had to take away a bird from an inmate who did not clean its cage enough. He said a lot of jealously about the pets has developed among Lima's 25 women inmates, all murderers.

To qualify for a pet, each patient must prove himself or herself through work in the prison greenhouse or ward gardens or with ward-owned animals. Inmates start out with one state-provided pet, but may buy others later.

Tom Holloway builds cages and sells them to a local pet store for canaries. One delicate lemon creature is sitting on a egg in his room. The patient across the hall is trying to breed cockateels, the most popular bird in the program. He lost two babies a week ago and still feels bad. Jerry Vaugh has read every book written by the Birdman of Alcatraz. He is Lima's unofficial vet.

Patients have been so successful breeding their pets, they've set up a barter system with Lima's two pet stores.

"We sold every rabbit sold in Lima this Easter," Lee said, "The stores can get gerbils and hamsters from us cheaper."

By EARNI YOUNG
Associated Press Writer

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — The lights dim, the tinkle of a piano begins, the credits flicker, and Rudolph Valentino again gallops across the desert sands.

For those old enough to remember, it is a nostalgic return to the early 1900s, the golden era of silent films.

For those too young to remember how Valentino thrilled movie audiences with his portrayal of the Sheik, or Buster Keaton's antics in "The General," it is a lesson on movies in their infancy.

Sending the old, the not-so-old and the young back to these beginnings is how Bob Verbeck makes his living.

Verbeck, a piano and organ player for silent-screen stars as a teen-ager in Neenah, Wis., now shows old silent films around the country. His career has taken him to the White House, Carnegie Hall and to thousands of theaters and campuses.

Interest in early-day movies has been phenomenal in the last 20 years, he said. He has competition but says, "I believe myself to be the only original, silent-movie piano player on the circuit."

"I think the interest — nostalgia — shows a conscious feeling on the part of the public that they're missing something — that life is not as good, not as romantic, not as much fun and not as exciting as it was then," he said. "Today's casual social attitude is not as much fun as they first thought. We've all got to have a dreamland in our lives — romance, idealism."

Verbeck shows the old films at the original speed — about one-third slower than the speed adopted after 1925 for sound pictures. This eliminates the jerkiness, mistakenly associated with silent movies shown on TV and elsewhere, he said.

"For as long as I can remember — I must have been 6 or 7 years old — I've been interested in show business," said Verbeck, who began to play the piano at age 10.

"I've never had a lesson in my life and I can't read music," he said.

His break came when a piano player at the Neenah Theater allowed him to play during his lunch break. From then on, Verbeck said, he played often. "But just when I was getting into it, we moved and the talkies came in," he added.

His family moved to Columbus, where he attended Ohio State University, got a master's degree and stayed on as a sociology professor. But the lure of show business drew him back and 25 years ago he left the university to show the old films he had collected.

During the early 1900s, Verbeck said, about 200,000 silent films were made in this country. He believes fewer than 100,000 still exist.

Initially, "the old silent movies could be picked up for a song — $2 or $3 each — because they were considered worthless, a storage problem and a fire hazard," Verbeck said.

Because they were printed on highly flammable nitrate, which disintegrated quickly, many films self-destructed, rotted in their cans.

"Today, the films cost hundreds of dollars when collectors are lucky enough to find them," he said. He values most of his at $250 or more apiece. Others are priceless, either because of their rarity or their sentimental value as gifts from actors who starred in them.

One film he treasures as a gift is "Elegy," starring Tyrone Power Sr., and Ethel Wales. Miss Wales, also from Neenah, gave it to him. Another gift is a piece of film featuring the classic love scene from Valentino's "Blood and Sand" (1922), from Nita Naldi, Valentino's co-star.

Two treasures in his collection are Edison's 1894 film recording of a sneeze and an 1895 film called "Washday Trouble," which was the first ever shown to the public. Each lasts just one-half minute.

Probability Discussed

ECU News Bureau

What do gamblers, duelists, IT&T and Mendel have in Common?

Answer: applications of the probability theory. These applications, according to Dr. J. W. Bisher, N. C. State University professor of mathematics, may be used in solving problems in genetics (Mendel), on production lines (IT&T) and in games of chance (gamblers). Also, probability might play a part in the outcome of a duel.

Dr. Bisher spoke at the Mathematics Colloquium of the Department of Mathematics at East Carolina University last week.

He is a specialist in the theory of probability and is currently working in the area of genetics of pine cones for the U. S. Forest Service.

Special Version By Farm Wives

MANHATTAN, Kan. (UPI) — The United Farm Wives of America, Inc., has its own version of equal rights in a state which already has ratified the Equal Rights Amendment.

The organization, representing wives in Kansas and Missouri, issued a set of resolutions for 1977 designed to protect the farm wife as well as preserve the family farm.

One resolution reads: "Be it further resolved that families be recognized as the business unit in operating farms, i.e., that husband and wife are engaged in farming as equal partners, that their efforts in accumulating the marital estate are equal."

Missouri has not ratified the ERA.

Chinook Spawn In The Heart Of Salem, Oregon

By JOSEPH R. SAND

SALEM, Ore. (UPI) — For thousands of years, salmon have left fresh water streams, struggled to unknown places in the Atlantic or Pacific, then returned inland, reproduced and died.

Not many persons other than fishermen ever see the salmon running; fewer still see them spawning.

But in Salem, in a creek winding through town, it is commonplace today to see at least the beginning and the end of the fall chinook salmon's life cycle.

A major fall chinook run comes into Mill Creek from the Willamette River each fall to spawn, usually in late September or early October, for everyone to see. Fishing in the creek, limited to juveniles most of the year, is closed in September and October.

The creek and two streams connected to it, Shelton Ditch and Pringle Creek, meander through the city, providing an easy view from bridges and banks of the gravel beds where the massive fish lay their eggs.

The eggs hatch and the small salmon leave for the ocean when they are about three inches long. They come back to spawn — and die — three or four years later. The 4-year-olds weigh as much as 25 to 30 pounds in their prime.

The salmon leave the Pacific Ocean, travel up the Columbia River to Portland, turn into the Willamette River, up the Willamette to Salem and then into tiny Mill Creek.

Joe Wetherbee, district biologist for the state Fish and Wildlife Department, said during a recent walk along the spawning grounds, "It amazes me that they can find their way up that creek. There's not much water there as it goes out into the Willamette."

It wasn't the creek, however, that prevented major salmon runs. The creek has been blessed with abundant fresh water from the Santiam River since a canal was dug from the river to the creek in the mid-1800s. The problem was the Willamette itself.

Wetherbee said that for years the river was "in pretty bad shape." A combination of cleaning up the pollution and having stored water in reservoirs upstream to release in the low water summer months helped bring back the salmon runs.

Once the river was in good shape, the state reared salmon and released them to reestablish the runs. Salmon were released in Mill Creek in 1968.

Chinook are still planted in the creek each year but Wetherbee said the department plans to stop planting and see how many fish come back naturally.

This year's run, Wetherbee estimates, wasn't as large as last year's, when some 11,000 chinook returned to Salem and Mill Creek. It probably totaled about 10,000.

After spawning, the fish die. For a while, a few thin, scarred fish work along the current. Eventually their carcasses are wedged against rocks and debris.

Wetherbee points these out to some pre-school children.

"A lot of salmon go up the Santiam and spawn but few people see them," he said, "but they can see them in Mill Creek. It's kind of a unique situation where you have a run of 10,000 salmon through town. It's a real spectator sport."

Wooly Worm Myth Seriously Studied

BOONE, N.C. (AP) — The director of Appalachian University's Center for Wooly Worm Studies says the worms are predicting a warmer winter this year.

Folk lore says the width of black bands on the little red and black caterpillars indicates how cold the coming winter will be. Broad bands of black, fore and aft, mean a harsh winter. Narrow bands indicate a mild winter.

"This started as a tongue-in-cheek project to encourage the biology students to collect the worm and study the myth," said Dr. Sandra Glover, 38, the associate professor of biology who founded the center in 1975.

The Woolly Worm Center is a 50-gallon aquarium in a biology lab. Weeds grow in three inches of soil in its bottom. Snuggled in the weeds are about 350 worms.

The National Weather Service is also predicting this winter won't be as severe as last, but on a different basis.

"The law of averages will tell you that," said a weather service spokesman in Asheville.

Counselors At Session

Counselors from three counties — Pitt, Beaufort, and Martin, members of the Mid-East Chapter of the North Carolina Personnel and Guidance Association, met in Washington on Tuesday.

The counselors renewed counseling skills by taking part in a program entitled Inservice Practicum: A Method of Counselor Skill Renewal. The program was presented by Dr. Tom Elmore, Professor of Counseling Psychology and Director of Counselor Education at Wake Forest University.

Pupil personnel workers from schools in Martin, Pitt and Beaufort Counties, from Greenville and Washington City Schools and from social services, mental health agencies, and technical institutes, attended.

Food Drive At Schools

On Wednesday, Nov. 23, the Pitt County Schools' staff members held their first annual Food Drive for needy families.

The staff members were asked to contribute at least three food items to be collected and given to the Department of Social Services who provided the name of a large family.

Approximately 100 items were collected, including a 14-pound turkey.

John Moore and Tom Craft presented the basket to the family on Wednesday afternoon and said the family expressed appreciation.

According to Moore, plans are being made to do this again next year, "since we are so happy with the results."

"We would like to express our sincere thanks to all members of our staff who helped to make this drive a successful one," said Moore.

The average air freight shipment weighs 319 pounds and is flown 1,925 miles, according to the Air Transport Association.

At 60, Buddy Rich Is His Own Competitor

By WILLIAM GILLEN
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Buddy Rich bounded in the door, wearing a New York Yankees baseball cap and a silver racing-driver's jacket. He looked like a trim high school coach.

Rich was taking the field. Not to play a game but to record an album with his 14-member band, which occasionally calls itself the "Killer Force."

Meanwhile, the band members began drifting into the studio, kibitzing with each other and Rich and getting their instruments set up. Eventually — at one point Rich sat on a stool in the middle of the studio and read a favorable newspaper review — the band settled down to concentrate on the music.

After cutting the first side, Rich and the band members went to the control room to listen to what the longtime jazz drummer calls the "best big band I've ever worked with."

The informally dressed jury — foreman Rich was wearing jeans, a short-sleeved black shirt with a Ferrari logo and jogging shoes — reviewed its own work and pronounced itself satisfied. After the break, the band went back into the studio to finish the session.

"Was that as great as I thought it was?" Rich, wiping the perspiration off his face with a white towel, asked at the end.

The scene in the control room, with Rich in the middle concentrating on the performance, was repeated. The result — a swinging, cohesive sound — met the coach's approval. With a "Good night, folks," he dismissed his team.

At 60, Buddy Rich, whom some critics have called the "world's greatest drummer," radiates energy. He is his own greatest competition.

"Buddy demands the best. He demands a high level of concentration. That's why I like this band," said Greg Smith, a baritone saxophone player from Scituate, R.I.

Rich's attitude toward his players is simple. "I'm their coach. I'm their friend. I try to instill pride in them," said Rich, with a hint in his voice of the U.S. Marine Corps he served in during World War II.

"If I can do it at 60, so can they ... I sure don't want to hear any bad notes. I don't care what they do until 8 at night, but from 8 p.m. until whenever we finish they belong to me."

Typically, the band members have played with other bands before joining up with Rich. They're young — the average age is 24 — and on the road a lot; 80 percent of their engagements are before high school and college audiences.

"It's not what they are when they come, it's what they become after playing with us," Rich said.

"We're like the Dodgers or the Red Sox or the Yankees," Rich said, explaining the band's outlook. "When we go out there, we go out to win."

Back To Last In Factory Wages

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina has sunk back to last place in the nation in average factory earnings.

While the average factory wage rose in September to $4.18, Mississippi, which had been in last place, rose from $4.16 to $4.21, according to the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics.

The average for the Southeast is $4.61 and for the nation it is $5.73.

New Executive Named By L&M

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Kinsley van R. Dey Jr. has been named president and chief executive officer of Liggett & Myers Tobacco Co., the cigarette manufacturing company.

Dey was chief operating officer of Liggett's domestic cigarette division. He replaces Alfred E. Sloat, who resigned last April.

COMPLAINT DROPPED

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A battery complaint against television sportscaster Howard Cosell, who allegedly struck a newspaper sports reporter, has been dismissed for lack of evidence.

Last Of Normandy Invaders Retired

FAYETTEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Command Sgt. Maj. Kenneth J. Merritt, the Army's last active duty soldier who parachuted into Europe during the Normandy invasion in 1945, retired Wednesday in a ceremony organized entirely by his fellow noncommissioned officers.

Merritt, whose exploits in World War II and later in Korea and Vietnam earned him the nickname "Rock," served for 35 years. His last post was as top noncommissioned officer in the 18th Airborne Corps, with units at Fort Bragg here and at Fort Campbell, Ky.

Fellow noncoms filled the reviewing stand along with special friends, Army buddies and Merritt's family.

Gen. Bernard W. Rogers, Army Chief of Staff, sent a telegram from Washington, which said, "I want you to know how much I appreciate your many contributions to our Army and our nation."

Lt. Gen. Volney F. Warner, commander of the 18th Airborne and Fort Bragg, gave Merritt the Legion of Merit. Merritt already had the Silver Star, three Bronze Star Medals, a Meritorious Service Medal and other awards.

Merritt said Army life had been good to him.

"I would choose to live it all again in the exact same way if I could," he said.

Sets Up Farm Protest In Plains, Ga.

ATLANTA (AP) — Oliver Odom has waited a long time to tell the American people about the plight he and other Georgia farmers face. And he picked President Carter's hometown of Plains, Ga., to do it in.

"I've waited a long time for this," Odom, 62, who has been farming all of his adult life, said Wednesday in a telephone interview from the Metter, Ga., strike office of the American Agricultural Movement.

"I've waited a long time to tell the American people what a ripoff the farmers are getting," he said.

His son, Bobby Odom, 25, said he and his father and many of their friends face bankruptcy if Congress doesn't guarantee them a profit above expenses.

Farmers in many major farm states have staged tractorcades and rallies protesting low farm prices and some say they plan a nationwide strike Dec. 14 if they don't receive some help.

But Friday's tractorcade in the tiny community of Plains, at which organizers expect 10,000 tractors, is the Georgia farmers' way of getting the message to Washington in a big way.

"We tried to get the president to come home, but we couldn't get his attention," said the younger Odom. "Congressman Bo Ginn says he's in favor of 100 percent parity, but he says the only way the farm states can get legislation past Congress is to go along with the states that don't have any farming at all."

The elder Odom — who raises cotton, corn, peanuts, soybeans and vegetables on his 200-acre farm — says he lost an estimated $105,000 this year because of the drought, the cold winter and pestilence.

Tommy Kersey, a farmer from Unadilla, Ga., who has helped organize the farm strike movement in the Southeast, said, "If Plains never had a traffic jam, they're going to have one Friday."

He said tractors already are gathering at Vienna, Cordele, Smithfield, Dublin, Bainbridge, Metter, Sylvania and other Georgia communities for the final big push on Plains, which has a population of only about 600.

"We'll drive through the town, and you know it's only on one side of the street. We'll park on the opposite side, and we plan a rally, with some singing, some music and a lot of speeches," Kersey said.

"It looks like it's going to rain," he said, "so they can't work in the fields and it'll be a good way to spend the day."

Gospel Chorus Giving Program

The Community Gospel Chorus of Greenville will present a Pre-Christmas program of a Hundred Voices Sunday at Cornerstone Missionary Baptist Church.

The public is invited to attend. The Rev. O'Kelly Lawson will be the speaker.

Naming School After Jim Hunt

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Gov. Jim Hunt will have a high school named after him in his home town of Rock Ridge.

James Baxter Hunt Jr. High School is now under construction in southwestern Wilson County. It will replace Rock Ridge High School, Hunt's alma mater.

Your Daily HOROSCOPE

from the CARROLL RIGHTER INSTITUTE

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Today brings increased activity and if you have changes you wish to make this is a good time to make them. You can also solve a confusing condition. Do so as quickly as possible for best results.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Know what is expected of you by associates and then do your best to please them. Sidestep one who wants to waste your time.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Don't neglect to handle important monetary matter early in the day. Think along more abundant lines for the future. Be happy.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Study your surroundings and make plans for improvement. Entertain friends you like and gain their loyalty. Be poised.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) An important plan you have should be kept secret for best results. Have a happy time with loved one in the evening.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Meet with allies and come to a better understanding. Go after personal aims in a more positive fashion and get good results.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Talk over your ambitions with experts and gain their good advice. Take no chances with your fine reputation tonight.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Study new projects that can bring you added income and advancement in the future. Be more understanding of others.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) You are highly intuitive now and can handle your obligations very well. Show increased devotion for the one you love.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Meet with associates and put new plans in the proper perspective. The evening can be a most happy one.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) You are thinking wisely now and can make much progress in career matters. Cement better relations with co-workers.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) You can now engage in appealing recreations after your work is done and have a delightful time. Be sure you think logically.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Come to a better meeting of the minds with associates and clear up any misunderstanding that may be present. Express happiness.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will possess a logical mind, so be sure to give as fine a comprehensive education as you can so that the most can be made of the fine talent here. Don't neglect religious training and be careful of the diet in early years.

Suspect Riot Due Drug Or Alcohol

HUNTERSVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Prison administrators said three of the inmates involved in a small riot at the prison unit here were either drunk or had taken some kind of drug before the incident started.

About 13 inmates in a 50-man dormitory smashed windows, ripped out plumbing fixtures and wrecked two television sets Wednesday before guards restored order. Damage was estimated at $4,400. Nobody was hurt.

In addition to guards at the minimum security unit, Mecklenburg County police and about 25 members of the Prison Emergency Response Team in riot gear were called in.

Superintendent Dick Kimrey said inmates told him the riot began when a prison officer refused to give a prisoner medical attention about 1:30 a.m.

Instead, the officer asked another inmate to check on the sick man, Kimrey said, and the officer then decided the prisoner, who had seen a nurse Tuesday, should wait until later Wednesday to see a doctor.

W.V. Ritchie, administrator of the South Piedmont area of the state Division of Prisons, said three of the inmates involved "were heavily under the influence of some type of drug or alcohol."

The prison unit is located eight miles north of Charlotte and visitors apparently smuggle in large quantities of dope and alcohol, Ritchie said.

VISION DEFECTS

NEW YORK (UPI) — There are now 112 million Americans who wear corrective lenses for some vision defect, and 94 per cent of people over 65 years of age require vision correction.

Utopian Haven Might Soon Bring In Crowds

By CARL MANNING
Associated Press Writer

RUGBY, Tenn. (AP) — At a visitor's touch, the front door of Thomas Hughes' vacant, well-kept home swings open on the center of utopia.

In the drawing room, a chess set on the center table awaits the return of the last founder of an English colony in North America.

Except for a paved highway before the green board-and-batten house and 97 intervening years, it's much as it was when the author of "Tom Brown's School Days" sat beneath the trees in his back yard listening to the whispers of the summer's breeze.

Hughes' dream of a community where everyone shared equally, died four years after it began in 1880. But a contemporary dream lives: the Rugby Restoration Association hopes to make the Morgan County town an attraction for historians and tourists. The U.S. Interior Department recently approved a $109,945 grant for a park.

But like Hughes' dream, the association's plans have had frustrations. Arsonists this past summer torched one of the first buildings erected, the renovated Board of Aid to Land Ownership office.

Irreplaceable photographs were lost in the flames, pictures of Hughes and his followers. Another building, to be used as a library, also burned.

Only the eldest son inherited his father's title and the family's fortune. The younger sons had to earn their way in the already crowded professions of law, medicine and the clergy.

Hughes envisioned a colony of eager young men developing model farms and gardens, operating a cannery, vineyard and mill — occupations custom forbade them in England.

They knew little of agriculture and were more interested in tennis, afternoon tea and daily baths — something unheard of in 19th-century East Tennessee.

At its zenith, the community had about 50 buildings and 450 residents — scientists, doctors, lawyers and assorted members of the landed gentry. Seventeen buildings remain.

Their American neighbors noted the area was settled with flintlock and broadaxes, while the newcomers were outfitted mainly with the coin of the realm.

The community's first winter was one of the coldest on record. There was a summer drought, and an outbreak of typhoid that killed several community leaders followed. Then the Southern Railway broke its promise to lay a seven-mile spur to the community.

By 1884, the town was bankrupt. An enthusiastic group stayed another decade before scattering in search of another utopia.

"79 Years Of Continuous Service To Eastern North Carolina"

Another Bad Year For Apple Growers

By JOHN W. FRECE

HARRISONBURG, Va. (UPI) — Since Ira Boyers stood as high as a wooden apple crate, the Shenandoah Valley native has played his role in the All-American combination of baseball, ice cream and apple pie.

He's never hit a major league home run and his only experience with ice cream has ben as a consumer, but he's made his mark in the apple business, helping to supply apples for munching and cooking for most of the past 34 years.

Boyers and his brothers own Tip Top Fruit Farm, a relatively small apple and peach orchard located just northeast of here. Over the years, the Boyers and other apple growers have combined to make Virginia the nation's sixth biggest apple producer and third largest grower of Red Delicious.

The Boyers have seen good times and bad. The past two years, though, have been among the toughest they and other Virginia apple growers have faced.

A late spring freeze nearly killed the entire apple crop a year ago and a pair of freezes following an unusually warm early spring this year almost had the same effect. Then came the crop-reducing drought.

Boyers says if he has one more year like this one he'll be forced out of the business he's been in all his life.

Although he is reluctant to put a firm figure on his losses, Boyers concedes they are well over $100,000 this year and says last year was worse.

This year will be better, about 25,000 to 30,000 bushels. But the dry weather has left this year's apples smaller and paler in color than normal.

Total cash receipts for Virginia apples dropped from $31.5 million in 1974 to $20.4 million in 1975 and $16.2 million last year, according to Earl A. Finch, a state Department of Agriculture statistician.

In 1975 — the last normal crop — Virginia fruit growers produced about 430 million pounds of apples, or about 10 million bushels. A year later, after the disastrous spring freeze, production plummeted to 212 million pounds, or just over five million bushels.

The latest estimate for 1977 predicts a harvest of some 330 million pounds, or 7,857,000 bushels. That would be a 56 per cent improvement over the actual 1976 crop, but still only three-quarters of a normal production year.

At the Byrd & Frederickson orchards in Timberville in Rockingham County, manager John Crumpacker said his company just hopes to recoup the losses from last year and break even this year.

"If we can do that, we'll feel like we've accomplished all we can," he said.

But stacked outside Crumpacker's office are several thousand empty wooden bins which normally are full at this time of year with Red and Golden Delicious, Stayman, York, Winesap, Jonathan, Rome and other varieties of apples.

But Byrd & Frederickson was a little luckier than Tip Top this summer. Because of their location along the mountains, the B&F orchards received a little more rain than Tip Top's orchards in the valley.

As a result, B&F apples are generally larger and have a better color than Tip Top's, and consequently bring a higher price on the market.

But Boyers is accustomed to the up and down years and says, "When you have a year when everything goes backwards, something usually comes along to help out."

The demand for apples is up. Shortages in 1976 and 1977 have resulted in higher prices, both for the fresh market and for processors who make vinegar, applesauce, cider, juice and other apple products.

Three years ago, when the statewide harvest was around 10 million bushels, Boyers received about $1 for every 100 pounds of apples used for making juice. This year he's getting $4.

Apples which are sent to canners during a normal year fetch about $3 or $4 per 100 pounds, but are costing processors as much as $7 this year.

Boyers sells his fancy apples — the best of his crop — to local stores for about $7 to $9 a bushel.

It takes a little over two bushels to make up 100 pounds of apples — 42 pounds per bushel is the government standard — and Boyers says that anytime an apple farmer doesn't average $3 a bushel, he's losing money.

Boyers tugs on his work cap and walks through his warehouse, past bins of shiny red and yellow apples, and out back to the orchard.

He's deeply in debt and may be at the end of his career as an apple grower, but this season isn't over yet and, who knows?, next year may be better.

Singapore Tries Break Tardiness

By KENNETH L. WHITING

SINGAPORE (AP) — Better late than never? Perhaps, but chronically tardy Singaporeans are being urged to be punctual.

The Chinese language newspaper Sin Chew Jit Poh says that failing to be on time in this day and age amounts to inefficiency.

The paper has launched a punctuality campaign aimed specifically at the Chinese, who make up about 75 percent of the 2.2 million people here.

Arriving late at a Chinese dinner is a snobbery sustained even by the humble, who may be forgiven for assuming that others will be late, so there is little point in being on time, Sin Chew Jit Poh said.

The habit is so widespread that even non-Chinese newcomers are often cautioned to be late. A booklet on local etiquette, subtitled "What Not To Do in Singapore and How Not To Do It," sponsored by the American School warns:

"If invited to a wedding dinner, it is not considered polite to arrive on time as this may be taken as a sign of greed. It is best to arrive about 20 to 30 minutes late."

C.M. Wong, vice president of the China Society of Singapore, says the practice is outmoded.

"This is because, unlike prewar days or for some time after the war, Singaporeans are now more progressive in their outlook. Although unpunctuality is still being practiced among some Chinese, at least 70 to 80 percent of them have already kicked this bad habit."

Punctuality was observed in ancient China by officials and those in high society, he said.

"Unpunctuality was never a tradition. It is just a bad habit."

Yap Kwei Hock, executive secretary of the Chinese Chamber of Commerce and Industry, said his organization had long encouraged punctuality.

"This is important in a modern and industrialized society. We cannot afford to waste time waiting for latecomers since many things which have to be done would be held up."

Yap said it would be some time before ritual tardiness could be eliminated, however.

"The hosts of some private Chinese dinner parties still make allowances of up to two hours before dinner is actually served. And the invited guests are fully aware of such allowance and therefore take their own time to turn up."

Promoters Say Home Computers On The Way

By JOHN F. SIMS
UPI Business Writer

NEW YORK (UPI) — Industry promoters would have us believe that in five years nine out of every 10 homes in America will have their own minicomputers.

The electronics industry sees the idea of the home computer — the latest in a long line of spinoffs from America's space exploration program — as one whose time has come.

But once you've linked a small computer to your tv set and you've played Star Trek or Pong and you've calculated your income tax — what then?

According to the industry, an awful lot.

Changes in your lifestyle through the use of computers in the home could be as revolutionary as you want them to be, or can afford.

On the other hand, you could just ignore the whole trend and probably save yourself a lot of technological anguish.

Ryal R. Poppa, chairman of Pertec Computer Corp., recently told an electronics industry seminar: "To many people, electronics already seems pervasive. But we've only scratched the surface.

"In offices, homes and industry: in cars, planes and trains: in schools, universities and churches: even in leisure time activities, electronics will improve our lives with an almost insignificant increase in cost...

"Only a few months ago I projected that sales of microcomputers, the new generation of tiny computers, would reach $100 million by 1980. With the enormous interest and acceptance of our MITS Altair microcomputer, the first to reach the market, and what I now see being accomplished by others in the field, today I'd have to raise that projection substantially. We're now looking for industry sales of microcomputers to hit $150 million in 1980."

The first store specializing in small computers opened in Los Angeles in 1975. Now there are more than 500 such stores scattered across the country.

Personal computing expositions, each one displaying a larger range of available hardware and software, have been held in several major cities.

Carl T. Helmers, editor of the specialist magazine Byte (a byte is a unit of memory in a computer), said: "Personal computing is in its adolescence now, but growth within the next few years should be rapid and exciting."

Some 50,000 minicomputers have already been sold. Most were nominally for use in the home, but in fact many have wound up being pressed into service in small businesses.

Industry experts predict 1978 will be a boom year in which 150,000 or more minicomputers will be sold.

Do-it-yourself minicomputer kits costing as little as $300 are now available. Very sophisticated devices sell for less than $3,000 and for $5,000 you can buy a computer, not much bigger than a filing cabinet, which is as capable as machines that cost $1 million only 10 years ago.

What are the attractions of small computers?

The industry's promoters offer a wide range of applications, including the following:

— all kinds of games, from ping pong up to and including a machine that plays master-level chess.

— a program that allows a small computer to compose quartets and quintets.

Computer buffs say it may not be long before the average homeowner goes to his local electronics store to buy a tape or disc specially designed to program his home computer to keep an inventory of family possessions, balance the checkbook, or tell the microwave oven when to start and stop.

But a major problem for the manufacturers of small computers is overcoming popular suspicion of computers in general and the glazed look that most people adopt when confronted with computer jargon.

According to Poppa, the day is coming when new homes will have computers built in.

"With appropriate software (jargon for the programs that make computers work) such a computer could tell you how much the family spent for groceries last month and compare it with the amount spent in the same month last year," he said.

"More importantly, it would permit more efficient regulation of the heating, air conditioning, lights, pool temperature and even the sprinklers, based on the amount of moisture in the soil," he said. "That will lower utility bills and help preserve precious natural resources at the same time — well worth the relatively low cost of the microcomputer."

The technology is available now, Poppa said, but America is not quite ready.

"The present school-age generation is being trained with computers and by the time these people are ready for their own houses, the built-in computer will be widely accepted," he said.

Children brought up to regard computers as mere tools will not experience that "future shock" that leaves many people baffled by the mystique that has grown around computers.

Erik Sandberg-Diment, editor and publisher of another computer magazine called ROM, said he had problems breaking that language barrier.

"Computerland seemed to be walled in completely by gibberish," he wrote in an editorial. "I knew it wasn't really gibberish: it all meant something. But even those who tried to explain the jargon to me used the same language to describe terms as the terms themselves did."

How will people survive if they don't computerize their lives?

Obviously not too badly. Household accounts and taxes can be worked out on a hand-held calculator, or even just with pencil and paper.

COMPUTERS COMING — Industry promoters would have us believe that in five years nine out of every 10 homes in America will have their own minicomputers. (UPI)

Psychologist Avers Eyes The Key To 'Inner Mind'

DETROIT (UPI) — Your eyes reveal all sorts of things about you. Knowing how to read eyes, says Frank Augusta, can be invaluable in social settings and the business world.

"In relaxed conversation, sooner or later your eyes will give you away," said Augusta in an Eye Language Dynamics lecture series in the Detroit area.

"Eyes are the key to the inner mind.

"Just think of how it would help you, man or woman, walking into a room and wondering who's available.

"Sure you can tell something by the way the people sit. You know, body language signals. But the best thing to do is look into their eyes and find their comfort zone."

Augusta and psychologist Les Zalewski, who developed the series, are businessmen.

Zalewski developed his theory on eye language, the basic positions and what they mean, by observing couples who came to him for marital and individual counseling, and by a year-long study of research on subconscious reactions and facial positions.

Augusta is a sales consultant and personal friend. Both believe more can be learned from a person's eyes than from conversation.

The first four lectures at Detroit area colleges were primarily for salesmen, marriage counselors and psychiatrists. Now, Augusta said, they are ready to let the public in on it.

Tentatively, they plan to hold a one-day, six-hour session, "crammed with information." The class would cost between $100 and $125.

Ultimately, Augusta said, they intend to spread the lecture out over two or three days, and possibly hold evening sessions.

"We want to show people how to recognize patterns of eye movement, and to adjust their conversation to compensate for the eye action response," Augusta said.

You must watch for basic positions, such as upper right or lower left, he said. Those used most often are the ones individuals are most comfortable with, their "comfort zones."

Finding a person's comfort zone is similar to meeting a person in his own home, Augusta said, "except we meet them at a mental level verbally in terms they naturally relate to.

"We communicate in the English language, but meaning interpretation is often obscure. Have you ever wondered why some people work with figures easily and others are superior in spelling?

"Their comfort zones are in visualization."

He said comfort zones are not necessarily related to intelligence, but to how the thought process functions.

"We teach people to use their basic senses by listening and watching for verbal clues and sub-conscious eye dynamics," he said. "In so doing, they can influence people to their own way of thinking.

Unearth Old Dugout Canoe

By JENNIFER KIRKLAND
Clay Today Staff Writer

ORANGE PARK, Fla. (AP) — The skeletal remains of an Indian dugout canoe, believed to be from 200 to 300 years old, were unearthed recently from the bottom of Hall Lake near Keystone Heights.

The canoe, which predates the Seminoles and is believed to have been used by Timuquana Indians, was pulled from its watery resting place amid shouts of surprise and delight by curious bystanders.

Tom Ryan, former president of the Clay County Historical Society, headed the excavation effort in which Clay County Public Works Director John Bowles, County Commissioner Thad Crossley and other county employees took part.

Years of erosion had etched away the sides of the 19-foot canoe. Only the bottom of the pecky cypress dugout, scarred by burning, remained.

A pump was used to dislodge the sand surrounding the canoe. The workers lifted it onto a ladder and carried it to the beach.

The canoe was first discovered by Pat McGraw, of Jacksonville, while she was pulling out weeds from three feet of water in the lake in front of her weekend cottage.

"At first I thought it was a concrete block, and then a piece of wood," she recalled.

But after Mrs. McGraw and her son started scooping up the sand which covered the object they discovered it had sloping sides.

"I thought it might be an Indian dugout and told my husband, but he didn't think so," she said.

Mrs. McGraw, who says she is part Cherokee Indian herself and has been interested in Indian artifacts all her life, decided to call Ryan, who she knew was a history buff.

The canoe was scheduled to be taken to the county barn where it will be buried in the sand for six months to cure the wood. Experts will then try various tests to date the canoe.

Mrs. McGraw says the canoe will be loaned to the Clay County Museum in Green Cove Springs, where it will be on display "until I can figure out what to do with it."

School Help To Migrants

LITTLE ROCK (UPI) — A nationwide network to improve the education and health care of migrant children helps thousands finish high school. Some even attend college.

The computer-based network is operated by the Arkansas Department of Education here. Until the Migrant Student Record Transfer System was established, children of migrant workers used to leave school by the sixth grade.

More than 150 communications terminals throughout the United States now transfer their educational and medical records to their new schools soon after the students themselves arrive.

The system covers more than 15,000 school districts in the 46 states and Puerto Rico where migrant labor is used.

Its success led officials to add programs for children of migrant fishermen and children who live in the United States's island possessions in the Caribbean and the Pacific Ocean.

A Broken Heart, Loneliness Could Well Be Fatal

By PETER VANDEVANTER

BALTIMORE (UPI) — Loneliness can kill.

The bachelor who hops from one singles bar to another, the middle-aged divorced man who spends his nights watching television, the elderly widow who seeks companionship from her poodle — all are likely to die from illnesses aggravated by the same disease: their feelings of isolation.

Lynch argues in his best-selling book, "The Broken Heart," that loneliness is a cruel "king without clothes" in America which often leads to heart disease and premature death for the single, widowed and divorced.

He believes that human "dialogue" — both physical and emotional — is the single most disregarded factor in modern medicine.

"We live in a society in which King Loneliness has no clothing, yet, because everyone believes he is the only one who feels lonely, we tell ourselves that loneliness must be a mirage," said Lynch.

In his book Lynch cites a wealth of statistics to demonstrate the unhealthy aspect of being lonely and then gives clinical data to corroborate the magical power of human contact, especially in a family setting.

— Of white females per 100,000 population, 44 married women died of heart disease and 67 widows.

— Of nonwhite females per 100,000 population, 83 married women and 165 widows died of heart disease.

Lynch says that for every listed cause of death — cancer, suicide, cirrhosis of the liver, rheumatic fever, pneumonia, diabetes, turberculosis, syphilis — the single, widowed and divorced had significantly higher death rates than did married people, both white and nonwhite and both sexes.

"How in the world did we become a society of bad relationships blind to the health implications of loneliness?" Lynch asks.

Lynch said that historically American doctors and laymen consider disease to be an assault by nature, such as the infectious diseases polio and tuberculosis, that have been effectively controlled by scientific medicine.

"The return to a medicine — and a society — that once again recognizes the healing power of human contact will meet resistance from many sources within the medical community," he said.

But he maintains it is absolutely necessary.

Lynch said that persons who are critically ill are helped toward death in many hospitals by being denied human contact, especially with spouses and family.

He said in the case of heart disease, statistically the leading killer in the United States today, the primary case study of the causes of the "silent killer" disregards the factor of loneliness and emotional instability.

"The scientists chose to study over several decades the people in Framingham, Mass., which is a small city of socially stable people most of them married with families. The group has a lower index of coronary trouble than the rest of the country," he said.

Nevada, which has the highest divorce rate in the country, also has the highest rate of premature heart disease.

But Utah, which has one of the lowest divorce rates in the nation, has the lowest rate of premature heart disease.

"But this is not to say that someone can't be happy and healthy who is unmarried," said Lynch. "There are definitely ways for single people to have strong, meaningful relationships with others."

He said his book only lends meaning and significance to the statistical reality that single, widowed and divorced persons more often die before they reach the age of 64 — well below average life expectancy for American men and women.

"I don't limit myself to some kind of treatise on the family in America," he said. "You can't have a healthy family in a society in chaos. What each of us has to do is learn to live within a community of people."

Lynch, who has become a sought-after lecturer since publication of his book, said he was inspired to begin writing when he witnessed his 75-year-old father die with his wife of 48 years at his bedside holding his hand.

He said he has seen death come for so many people that same way — in silence.

"The essence of those encounters is dialogue, nonverbal dialogue (and) communication between those who are alive and love.

"This dialogue is the elixir of life. If that elixir somehow dries up, people begin to whither and die."

Despite his criticism of American science — which he says disregards natural human caring — Lynch said the reaction from the professional medical community to his book has been positive.

"We must evolve a medicine that moves beyond science," he said. "We have to treat humans as more than man-machines that can be fixed up with pills and technology. We must realize that feelings cause disease."

But Lynch said the mass-audience reaction to his book has been most surprising to him.

"So many people keep telling me 'Whew, I'm glad somebody's finally written what I believed all along'," said Lynch, who himself is married and has three children aged 8, 10 and 12.

Lynch said he has been interested in the "mind-body" problem since college.

"Maybe I blushed at an early age," quipped Lynch, 38, who graduated from Boston College in Boston, Mass., and went to graduate school at Catholic University in Washington, D.C.

He has taught at the University of Pennsylvania in Philadelphia and Johns Hopkins University in Baltimore.

In his book, Lynch moves beyond statistics to show the affect of human caring upon one's health by describing observations and experiments he made as a staff doctor at the Maryland Center for Emergency Services.

"Individual human interactions produce cardiovascular changes that can be rather easily monitored," he said. "Both the presence and absence of human contact can be critical forces leading to disease and premature death."

Lynch cites the example of a 31-year-old woman critically injured in an automobile accident who had been in a coma for two days. The woman's heart rate improved sharply when a nurse quietly took her pulse.

Lynch said the breakup of the family causes premature deaths in another way — it affects children's health.

A study of undergraduates at Harvard and the University of Pennsylvania showed that students who later died of coronary heart disease were most likely to have been an only child or to have lost one or both parents before entering college.

One of the more dramatic examples of cardiac change as a result of family-associated emotions occurred in 1952, according to Lynch. A 27-year-old woman died of heart failure after telling her doctor of her brother's attempts to rape her.

"The causes of disease are complex. Survival from disease is complex. The experience of human companionship, love, loneliness and life and death are all complex," Lynch said, adding that his book barely scratches the surface of the subject.

Seattle On Modern Dance Map

By DAVID LAWSKY

SEATTLE (UPI) — Modern dance guru Merce Cunningham, returned this summmer for a residency at the school where he studied dance, found a way of gauging just how far the arts have come in Seattle since he and composer John Cage were students.

The measure he used was an experience Cunningham had in the late 1930s at the Cornish Institute here.

"Now, you see, if he'd just spent a little longer on that," the teacher told her students. "And just a little bit more time on this one."

The anecdote draws a laugh when Cunningham tells it, but it does make a point. Seattle now prides itself on being home to artist Mark Tobey, for its opera company's yearly Wagner Ring cycle and for other cultural offerings.

So several Seattle businesses offered to underwrite the return of Cunningham, who grew up in nearby Centralia and now works out of New York, and the company he formed in 1952.

Cunningham was in Seattle for a three-week residency which included a master class and a variety of performances, including the premiere of a new work, "Inlets."

"Inlets" is a collaborative effort with Cage — with whom he has often worked — and artist Morris Graves.

The result was a stunning set by Graves, which seemed to represent a winter day in the Pacific Northwest. A thin scrim made it appear the dancers were in a mist. Behind them a 10-foot sun moved slowly across the stage, beginning at stage left when the dance started and finishing at stage right as the dance ended.

Cunningham danced apart from the others, in smaller motions, a recognition that with his age — 58 — he is less agile than the dancers in his company.

Cage's music came from different sized shells filled with water and moved to creating gurgling. The gurgles were amplified to be heard through the theater.

Cunningham explained he likes working with Cage because the composer's music is without meter and thus does not interfere with the meter of the dances.

Cunningham gets along with his collaborators by allowing them complete freedom — and then ignoring what they do.

Tight schedules make dress rehearsals impossible and so Cunningham simply trusts that all the elements will come together. It seems to work at least as well as tight planning, which, he said, has sometimes itself been a disaster.

The music's indepedence from the dance does not diminish its importance, in Cunningham's view. He says he needs music in his dance because there is sound in the world around us.

"Cage has so often said that you could go out and listen to the world you lived in, rather than try and shut it out," said Cunningham. "It's the same thing for my dances.

"It's one of the reasons I have put in simple, almost pedestrian movements in my dances, things you might see people do on the street. I do it simply because it's part of our lives."

Cunningham's interest in using elements that are part of our lives is a key to his art and explains more than his attitude to music and dance. It also explains the way he uses film and videotape and his view of other artists.

"I think it's much more lively to think of art as something not from the past but what the art is around you, what is the contemporary art, whether now or a hundred years from now or a hundred years ago," he said.

And for that reason, Cunningham resists having movies and videotapes made to record his work. Cunningham does use videotape, but primarily to record movements for a dance as a writer might use a pencil and pad to jot down ideas.

"It's not so much that I like television, but that it's a part of everyone's life," he said.

Cunningham's program last year on the Public Broadcasting System's "Dance in America" series allowed viewers who otherwise would not have had a chance to see modern dance. The program drew letters from all over the country.

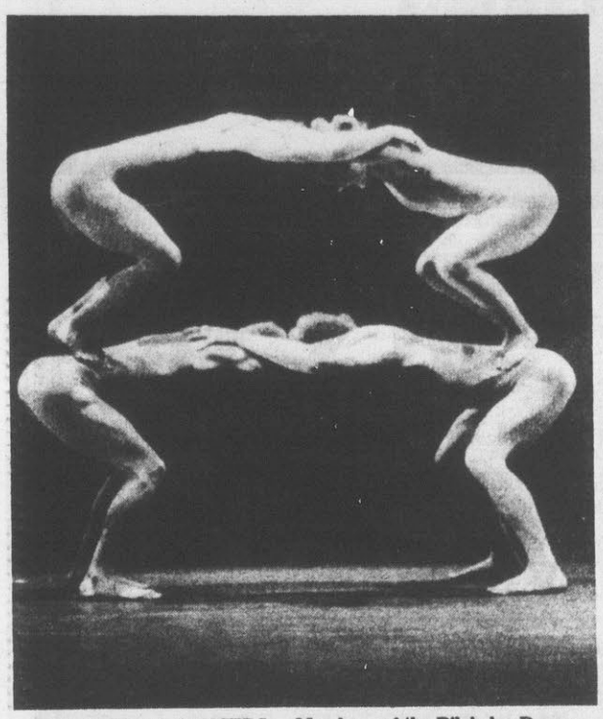
Cunningham's favorite was from a woman who merely sent a card:

"Dear Mr. Cunningham," she wrote. "You are the only human my cat watches on the television. Other animals she will watch, but when you came on my cat was glued."

Gas Cost No Bar To Drivers

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — No matter how high the price of gasoline goes, some drivers never would let it stop them from driving to work, according to a survey by the Vestaur Corp.

The survey, taken among business and financial leaders, showed that 20 percent said the cost of gasoline never would make them change over to other transportation to get to work. Most of those surveyed said they'd be willing to pay more than $2 a gallon before they'd consider switching to other transportation.



SCULPTURAL DANCERS — Members of the Pilobolus Dance Theatre rehearse at New York's St. James Theater this week. The innovative company, whose name is derived from a fungus, makes its Broadway debut tonight in a show produced by French designer Pierre Cardin. The dancers draw upon their athletic experience and combine ballet and acrobatics for a unique performance ranging from strict formalism to broad theatrics. (AP Laserphoto)

Kmart CORNER OF GREENVILLE AND ARLINGTON BOULEVARDS

Exhibitions Coexisting

By JENNIFER KERR
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Halfway through its 18-day run, which once threatened to become a political embarrassment, the Soviet National Exhibition is coexisting easily with a counter-exhibit on Soviet Jewry.

Soviet cultural and commerce officials are delighted that almost 200,000 Americans have come to gawk at the array of scientific hardware and crafts here at the Convention Center.

And the Jewish Federation-Council is astonished that some 40,000 persons have stood in lines upstairs to view photographs of Jews persecuted by the Soviet government.

Demonstrations prompted airport-type security, complete with metal detectors for both exhibits, but have been mostly peaceful. The only serious incident occurred on opening day, Nov. 12, when a woman threw a balloon filled with red dye at Soviet official Fedor Nekhaev.

Muriel Moorehead, 27, of Santa Monica was charged with assaulting an official guest of the United States. Nekhaev has filed a $300 claim against the city for his damaged suit.

"It's going very well actually," said Bob Bussjaeger of Burson-Marsteller, the public relations firm for the Soviet exhibit. "Some young Jewish people in prison garb have gone through the exhibit, but they've gone through peacefully."

"We weren't expecting such a lot of visitors, but they keep coming, coming, coming," said Rem Gorbunov of the Soviet Foreign Trade Ministry. "We hope that they can visually see that we are also the same human beings, we have families, children and the same problems."

Gorbunov said the demonstrations have not been a problem. He did note that there were no such protests when the U.S. Bicentennial exhibit visited Moscow last year.

Upstairs, in a small crowded room, Burton Levinson of the Jewish Federation-Council's Commission on Soviet Jewry recalled that he had estimated in advance that perhaps 25,000 people might visit the counter-exhibit, "Soviet Jewry: Six Decades of Oppression."

"Downstairs they see a thing show, not a human show, and we've become a response," he said. "I think they feel that what they see downstairs is too slick, something is missing."

The Federation-Council had to get a city attorney's ruling to obtain permission for the counter-exhibit. Levinson estimates that only about 5 percent of the viewers are Jewish.

Dedicated To Giant Telescope

BIRR, Ireland (UPI) — A new museum has been opened at Birr Castle to commemorate the "Leviathan" telescope erected there in 1845 by the third Earl of Rosse.

The 72-inch Birr Castle reflector was for 75 years the largest telescope in the world until a 100-inch mirror was built at Mt. Wilson, Calif., in 1916.

Among the objects on display at the new museum is a model of the telescope as it was at the time when Birr was at the center of world astronomical science. There is a special audiophone history of the telescope as well as a collection of eye pieces and lenses and photographs of drawings of some of the more important sightings.

In addition to the new museum, Birr Castle offers visitors a beautifully laid out park, formal gardens and what is claimed to be the highest box hedge in the world.

Pace-Setter In Building

Building permits totaling $20,699,965 were issued in Greenville during the first nine months of 1977, according to a report issued by N.C. Commissioner of Labor John C. Brooks.

The commissioner said that permits valued at $1,549,582 were issued in the city in September.

Statewide, permits totaled $52,268,186 during the month in 38 Tar Heel cities of more than 10,000 population, increasing 21.1 per cent over the $43,179,083 recorded for last September.

Permits for the first nine months of the year totaled $516,229,500, he said, 24.7 per cent higher than the $413,901,039 recorded for the comparable period in 1976.

Neighboring city totals for September and the first nine months included: Elizabeth City, $479,900, $5,217,987; Goldsboro, $2,100,500, $10,264,662; Jacksonville, $901,658, $4,815,003;

Kinston, $2,686,300, $6,921,974; New Bern, $408,850, $2,963,019; Roanoke Rapids, $323,092, $3'355,470; Rocky Mount, $2,504,764, $18,006,714; and Wilson, $10,574,556.

Set All-Alabama Art Exhibition

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — Organization of the first All-Alabama Invitational Art Exhibition has been announced by the Birmingham Museum of Art and the Birmingham Art Association.

Artists throughout the state have been invited to submit slides of 10 or more works for consideration.

The exhibit is scheduled to open in Birmingham Feb. 19, 1978. It will later be shown in Mobile, Montgomery and Huntsville.

Old Station Revitalized

By WILLIAM P. MOORE

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — Renovation is nearly complete on the Pittsburgh and Lake Erie Railroad Station, a sprawling example of early classical architecture destined to become one of the city's major commercial centers.

The Station Square complex, adjacent to the Monongahela River, is 40 acres of prime commercial land and three elaborate buildings dating from 1901.

The Grand Concourse, with mahogany ticket windows and an enormous vaulted ceiling inlaid with stained glass panels, will open in December as a gourmet restaurant seating 500 persons. An adjacent warehouse will open in early 1978 as a specialty shopping center in the style of San Francisco's Ghiradelli Square. A third six-story structure will be leased for office space.

Future plans include a hotel, more restaurants, and apartment buildings, all in keeping with the railway motif.

The project is a brainchild of the Pittsburgh History & Landmarks Foundation; one of many foundation projects aimed at preserving Western Pennsylvania areas of historic and architectural significance.

Many of the specialty shops will be using historic artifacts rescued by the PH&LF from city buildings slated for demolition.

"This is one of the most spectacular pieces of urban area in the country; 40 acres, alongside a river, directly across from center city, one owner, no debts, and no environmental or displacement problems," said PH&LF president Arthur P. Ziegler.

Initial funding came in the form of a $5 million grant from the Richard Mellon Scaife family's Allegheny Foundation. The entire renovation is expected to cost $30 million.

Once Station Square is completed, estimated profits of more than $400,000 a year will go to the PH&LF. "We hope to use the money primarily in inner city neighborhoods," Ziegler said.

"Never before has anyone taken such a huge piece of real estate and made it commercially viable so it could support the surrounding neighborhood. It is public ownership without public ownership, or private ownership for the public good.

"It is probably the only major renewal project in the history of the city that has enjoyed such citizen support."

The idea for a commercial restoration project of such magnitude first came to Ziegler four years ago.

"I simply called the railroad and asked if anything was going on with the property. After looking around over there, it seemed like a great opportunity."

Ziegler said the major legal obstacle was negotiating an 80-page lease with the Pittsburgh and Lake Erie Railroad, which will continue to occupy upper floors of the Concourse building.

The other problem, he said, was "a lack of faith, on the part of many people, in the city itself, and in an unexpected development proposal."

But support eventually came, and Station Square will soon open both its own doors and, Ziegler hopes, the door leading to other historic restoration and preservation projects.

Transferral Impact Felt

NEW YORK (AP) — Americans are continuing to move to the Sunbelt states of the South and West, and away from urban centers to smaller cities and towns, according to a nationwide survey by Merrill Lynch Relocation Management Inc.

"The movement of people in large part accompanies the moves of industry," said Weston E. Edwards, board chairman of the relocation firm, "and businesses are increasingly willing to locate in communities on the remote fringes of urban areas, and throughout the lower-cost base areas of the South and West."

Edwards cited Seattle and Portland as two metropolitan areas where residential home demand is particularly strong.

"The business generated by the building of the Alaska pipeline is bringing a steady influx of people into these areas, which were depressed only a few years ago. A similar phenomenon is taking place in coal mining areas with the shift of emphasis in energy," he says.

Taste Overruns Good Nutrition

COLUMBIA, S.C. (UPI) — Consumers put taste and price ahead of nutritonal value in choosing food, according to a recent survey.

The National Broiler Council says an A.C. Nielsen Co. survey on consumer attitudes about nutrition and food showed the most widespread reason for serving any food was people's liking it. Grocery shoppers told the poll-takers they buy and serve the most nutritious foods they can, but always within the framework of their family's preferences.

MOVIE ON CHRISTOPHE

PORT AU PRINCE, Haiti (UPI) — The rise and reign of Haiti's black King Henri Christophe, who in the early 1800s built an incredible mountaintop fortress against a French invasion which never came, will be the subject of a movie soon to be shot by a Haitian-American film combine.

Old 'Depression Theater' Is Being Re-Activated

By MIKE FEINSILBER

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Many millions were unemployed during the Depression, but few were more hopelessly out of work than actors, stagehands and vaudeville performers. For a nation on its knees, theater was a luxury beyond reach.

For a time, the New Deal came to the rescue.

The Works Progress Administration (WPA) formed a Federal Theater Project to create work for theater people and entertainment for the masses.

A Yiddish "King Lear" ran a year and a half. A black jazz "Swing Mikado" was based on the Gilbert and Sullivan operetta. A black "Macbeth" company went on tour. Units performed in German, French, Italian and Spanish.

The project gave work to 14,010 people at its peak (at $23.86 a week), produced 924 productions (for admissions from five cents to $1), broadcast more than 6,000 radio plays and played to 30 million people — most of whom, it was said, had never before seen a live dramatic production.

But after three years, Congress, seeing a pinkish tint in the enterprise, closed it down and called its director, Hallie Flanagan, before the House Committee Investigating Un-American Activities.

Now — with government subsidies for the arts still an issue — Washington is getting another chance to sample a few of those Depression-era scripts.

Director-producer Mark Mason, 43, whose career reaches back to when he was a 14-year-old actor-technician in Ithaca, N.Y., is trying to revive theater of the depression.

After one-night runs on a stage at the Library of Congress, the four productions are to move downtown to the National Heritage Theater to see if they can attract enough nostalgia buffs to become a commercial success.

Last summer, Mason's New Federal Theater company, under a government grant, acted out historical "informances" for tourists at Ford's Theater. The same company is putting on adaptations from the federal project's "Living Newspaper" series, black theater, women's drama and radio plays.

"The tendency in the social plays was to paint issues too black and white," he said. "They are so naive that today's audiences have to laugh at them."

But he says, as part of America's theatrical heritage, they deserve to be remembered.

The "Living Newspaper" series dealt with issues of the day. It was a forerunner to "The March of Time" and to television documentary, Mason says.

If these revivals find an audience, he hopes to take them out on tour. "They're naturals for college audiences."

Historian Daniel Boorstin, the Librarian of Congress, says the project was "as grass-rooty, as experimental a dramatic enterprise as there's ever been in this country."

Congress complained it created jobs chiefly in big cities, competed with private enterprise and preached socialism. They said taxpayers should not have to subsidize views they might not accept.

A touring production of "Pinocchio" was among the most popular. When word came that Congress had voted to kill the Federal Theater, the audience participated in a funeral for Pinocchio.

The "Living Newspaper" scripts (researched by unemployed newspapermen) offered commentary on the era's news.

One show, "Power," advocated public ownership of utilities. It was allowed to be staged only after WPA boss Harry Hopkins personally reviewed the script.

"One-Third of a Nation" condemned slumlords. "Triple A Plowed Under" reflected on New Deal agriculture policies.

The project gave work to Orson Welles, Joseph Cotten, Abe Feder, Howard Bay and Norman Lloyd and used the writing talents of Maxwell Anderson and Elmer Rice.

The files were given to the Library of Congress. In 1974, the 40,000 scripts, posters, costume and set designs, photographs and production notebooks were deposited at George Mason University in Fairfax, Va., where a research center for the theater project has been established.

At the end, recalling the theater's success in Florida, project director Hallie Flanagan wrote a poem, which begins:

They came in with lanterns to see 'Twelfth Night.'
Said, 'They may be pretty young to understand it
'But I want they should be able to say
'They've seen Shakespeare
'I did once when I was a kid.'

Grant Presented To Microbiologist

ECU News Bureau

Dr. James E. Akers, a microbiologist with the East Carolina University School of Medicine, has received a $5,000 research grant from the North Carolina Heart Association for studies on heart disease caused by virus infection.

Dr. Akers' research will focus on myocaritis caused by Coxsackie B viruses and the infectious process produced by these viruses in cultured heart cells.

The Coxsackie viruses are closely related to polio virus and produce mild respiratory illness with symptoms similar to influenza.

Over 40 percent of individuals infected with group B Cosackie viruses develop serious heart disease, and no therapy is currently available for treatment. The highly infectious viruses are also a major cause of congential heart disease.

The research may help determine how the Coxsackie virus destroys heart cells and how drugs may be used to reduce or prevent damage.

Dr. Byron T. Burlingham, chairman of the Department of Microbiology, will collaborate on the research.

Today, Good To Be Alive

By CYNTHIA KYLE

JACKSON, Mich. (AP) — Francine Hughes feels an enormous sense of freedom, a freedom to stand outside and watch stars and cars and her breath "puff up in the air."

Life is different now, says the mother of four, who was catapulted to national attention by her trial for slaying the ex-husband who beat her for 14 years.

"I just enjoy it. I just take it in. I don't have to worry about what's at home," she said.

It is now almost four weeks since she was acquitted of first-degree murder by reason of insanity.

"The other night I went out on the porch. It was dark. I watched the stars, watched the cars go by, my breath puff up in the air," she said.

The 30-year-old Mrs. Hughes said she is giddy and overwhelmed by requests for television appearances and newspaper interviews — and perplexed by the attention to her plight as a "battered woman."

"Before all this happened, I was like in a small world and it sort of overwhelms me. I don't understand still what's going on," she told The Associated Press Tuesday.

"I know that there are certain things that I really do want. I want to be successful at a job. I was headed for a business career," she said.

Mrs. Hughes, who in almost nine months in jail crocheted a bedspread for her mother and three afghans for her children, said she now spends time baking bread and cookies, getting ready for the holidays and rediscovering her children, who are aged 6 to 12.

She and the children have settled temporarily in a modest two-story frame home with her mother in Jackson. It was here that she left high school at the age of 16 to marry Hughes, her sweetheart. She said he began to beat her shortly after they were married in 1963, and continued the abuse even after their divorce in 1971.

Shortly after the divorce, Hughes, a 31-year-old former construction worker, was badly injured in an auto accident. He moved into his ex-wife's Dansville home so she could care for him. The beatings worsened.

In tears during the nearly two-week trial in Ingham County Circuit Court, she relived her life with Hughes. She told of repeated incidents in which Hughes choked her, threatened her with a knife, teased their children to tears and allowed a family pet to freeze to death.

In the argument that precipitated the killing last March 9, she said, Hughes ripped up her books from classes at a nearby business school, then made her burn them. He pushed TV dinners onto the floor and made her pick up the food, then rubbed it into her hair.

Claiming self-defense and temporary insanity, Mrs. Hughes testified that she splashed gasoline around Hughes' bed, then set the fuel alight. Hughes suffocated in the blaze.

The verdict required a psychiatric examination for Mrs. Hughes. She could have been held 60 days but was released after two psychiatrists spent one hour with her and judged her sane.

Tech House Life Tested

TECH HOUSE RESIDENTS — Charles and Elaine Swain stand in front of their Tech House, a National Aerionautics and Space Administration experiment in saving energy and water. (AP Laserphoto)

HAMPTON, Va. (AP) — Charles and Elaine Swain live the way many of us may be living years from now.

What's different about the way they live may not immediately grab your attention: a strange, occasional hum from beneath the floor, a habit they have of closing their shutters in the daytime, an unusual tint to some of their household water.

But scientists hope that in a year's time, the Swains will have used as little as half the water and a third the energy that an ordinary American household now consumes.

The Swains and their two children, 17-year-old Carol and 12-year-old Charles, are the family in Tech House, a National Aeronautics and Space Administration experiment in saving energy and water.

All the equipment in the Tech House at NASA's Research Center here is commercially available, or will be within five years. By then, given mass production of the equipment, the house probably could be built for about $50,000, the agency said.

The idea behind the experiment, which is costing $150,000, is "to tinker a bit to learn how we can save the most ... to find out what the most efficient way is to run the systems," said NASA technician Ira Abbott.

The Swains have lived in the Tech House since Aug. 15 and will be there a year. So far, they say, their life with advanced conservation equipment seems quite normal.

"The only thing I'm aware of to any great extent is the shutters on the windows," said Mrs. Swain. The vented shutters are manipulated from inside and can completely seal the windows to save on air conditioning in summer and heating in winter.

The Tech House is a one-story, gray-green wooden structure. It's remarkable at first sight only because of the odd angles to the roof, like two obtuse triangles atop the house. On the south side of each triangle is a flat black plate that gathers solar energy for heat.

A computer regulates temperatures in the rooms individually, according to the Swains, weekday and weekend schedules, to avoid heating or cooling rooms that aren't in use.

Not All Shoplifters Found In Ranks Of Customers

By JAMES J. DOYLE

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — As holiday sales push profits up in the retail industry businesses also will be counting the cost of the fastest growing crime in the nation — shoplifting.

Experts estimate the loss this year, and the cost of trying to contain it, will total about $26 billion nationwide.

Included in the overall estimates of shoplifting costs are employee thefts. Studies by private security firms here indicate that for every dollar's worth of merchandise a shoplifter grabs, a store employee will take $3.

Loss figure reports have varied but not widely over the last several years. Industry Week Magazine, in 1975, assuming only a percentage of losses reported, estimated shoplifting costs at more than $25 billion. It turned out to be very close to home. U.S. News and World Report placed the 1974 figure at $20.3 billion, or 30 per cent higher than losses in 1971.

In the greater Los Angeles area alone shoplifters and larcenous employees will get away with about $190 million worth of goods this year. The estimated loss to stores in Southern California will be about $250 million.

Shoplifting and employee thefts take quantum leaps annually, about 10 per cent, police statistics show, despite increased efforts to combat the problem.

Gerry Lauritzen, director of Stores Protective Association, a retail security company owned by a group of the largest department stores in Southern California, said between 35 and 45 per cent of the year's total loss will occur during the final quarter due to increased traffic in stores during the holidays.

From Thanksgiving to Christmas, when stores are jammed with shoppers and salespeople are busy, thieves of all ages and both sexes will just about steal the merchants blind.

Most of the thefts will occur in receiving, shipping, delivery and mail-order departments by employes, security experts said.

Security officers said the rule of thumb is one in every 10 customers in a store is a shoplifter. The National Retail Merchants Association said that 42 of 500 shoppers kept under surveillance in a large metropolitan area store had shoplifted by day's end — one in 12. Either is a dismal statistic for business.

The association gave a rounded figure of $100 million a year as total sales of some large department stores in major cities. The shrinkage is five per cent, or $5 million. And that is the tip of the iceberg.

June-Elizabeth Thorsen, editor of Security World Magazine, noted that much more than the retail value of the item is lost in a theft. For every $10 theft enough additional merchandise must be sold to pay the $10 out of profits before the normal gain cycle can be resumed.

Thus, the store that realizes a five per cent profit must sell $200 worth of merchandise over the counter to pay for the theft of a single $10 item.

An even more disturbing viewpoint, the 14th annual computerized study of shoplifting by Commercial Service Systems of Van Nuys looked at 16,100 apprehensions during 1976 in 727 supermarkets from 14 companies.

Based on that percentage of apprehensions and recovery, Griffin reached a figure of 322,900 actual thefts in his survey of the 16,100 supermarket shoplifting incidents. The average cost of the items recovered was $5.90.

He drew a logical sequence that means more bad news for merchants — and the honest consumers who eventually have to pay for the loss.

It goes like this:

— Multiply the estimated thefts by the dollar amount and there is an estimated total loss of $1,899,000.

— Consider that supermarkets operate on a one per cent profit margin and multiply the nearly $1.9 million by 100 and you have the amount the supermarkets must register just to make up for shoplifting losses.

— That means a store doing $100,000 in sales per week would have to operate for more than two and one-half weeks just to pay for thefts.

Lauritzen said, however, that departments stores get hit even harder. The average cost per item stolen is about $50.

In Griffin's analysis of the 16,100 cases, 31.7 per cent of the shoplifters were actually charged and 68.3 per cent were released. The release figures rose significantly when juveniles were involved.

In the total cases, 51.4 per cent were men and 48.6 per cent were women.

There is no profile of a shoplifter. Kids do it, parents, men and women in slightly varying numbers.

The Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce, in a new booklet published for merchants and security personnel, listed five categories.

They are amateur, juvenile, professional, kleptomaniac, and the vagrant-alcoholic. But true kleptomaniacs, the chamber noted, are rare.

There are some known motivations. The amateur steals because he or she gives in to sudden temptation and seldom from necessity. Juveniles frequently do it for status with a peer group and often work in gangs.

Pros are the real danger to the merchandiser in that they can take valuable items in quantity. Lauritzen said a good pro can rip-off $2,000 worth of merchandise a day and can walk off with a 25-pound ham or eight cartons of cigarettes locked between the thighs.

In Griffin's study of supermarkets, drug stores and discount stores, no more than four-tenths of one per cent of the apprehensions were professionals. Lauritzen said, however, that about 20 per cent of department store thefts are committed by pros.

Less than half of those caught are ever prosecuted, Griffin said. Historically, prosecution is not just to recover property and punish the offender, but also to deter others from the crime. However, there are many problems in prosecution and costs above the already estimated loss.

The expense includes time in surveillance and apprehension, and administrative processing of each case — from the taxpayers' pocket.

That cost rises for the businessman and taxpayer alike when additional time is spent in appearing to sign the criminal complaint and in making one, or several, appearances in the trial court.

The standard of proof is high. The fact that a suspect took merchandise without paying for it may be very clear. But it is very difficult to prove "intent to steal."

The final rub for the merchant: If he detains a suspect and there is an arrest but no conviction, Griffin said, he most probably will be sued.

Vested Suits On The Rise

NEW YORK (AP) — The three-piece vested suit is riding high in the men's wear field, providing the business with a big boost, industry sources report.

Sales of suits with vests are up 25 percent over this time last year, according to Marvin Blumenfeld, president of April-Marcus Inc., a New York-based merchandising consultant to 135 retail establishments around the country.

Stores in campus areas are also doing a big business in three-piece suits, Blumenfeld notes. The hot item on the college campus this year is the vested corduroy suit.

"The move toward corduroy is part of a trend back to natural fabrics such as cotton, and the choice of three-piece suits is part of a new, more dressed-up look on campus," says Blumenfeld.

Overloaded By Pensions

By ROBIN STAFFORD

ROME (UPI) — The social security problems of the United States are nothing compared to Italy's.

With a labor force of some 12 million and the same number of pensioners, every worker is now supporting a pensioner. And the situation is getting worse, with unemployment now around the 1.6 million mark.

Officially there are more invalids (about 5,119,300) than old age pensioners (roughly 3,872,650).

In the most extreme case — in the Sicilian province of Enna — more than 13 Italians are being paid invalid pensions for every one old age pensioner. The the island home of the Mafia would appear to be packed with one-armed bandits of the human kind nursing wounds from underworld clashes.

But how sick are all those more than five million Italians?

In recent cases doctors have been accused of scattering around disability certificates like confetti, people drawing blind pensions have passed driving license tests, and the former Rome municipal police chief and two doctors were accused of cheating the state out of $17,600 for exaggerating injuries in a motorcycle accident and getting the policeman an invalid's pension.

Three years ago Rome Assistant District Attorney Franco Marrone accused seven government ministers of illegally applying early retirement terms to their personnel. One official who retired at 47 received a pension based on a nominal 49 year seniority.

Pension funds are paying out $12 billion yearly, nearly half to invalids, real or imaginary. The largest fund, INPS, is in the red to the tune of $10 billion and expects the deficit to reach $13.5 billion by 1980.

The system of contributions is a nightmare. Nearly 24 per cent of every industrial employee's earnings are deducted for social security — 7 per cent from the employee and the balance from the employer.

But farmers and peasants only pay a lump sum every year of $65 and self-employed tradesmen $105.

The result is that the farmers are taking more than $26 in pensions for every $10 they contribute every year — a drain of $900 million a year, made up partially by the factory workers.

INPS President Giuseppe Reggio says, "The non-industrial workers will have to increase their contributions three or four times. And we have to cut down invalid pensions to fake invalids."

Easier said than done. Although some doctors have been accused of taking kickbacks for easy invalid certificates, others are socially motivated.

The law governing invalid pensions stipulates they may be granted if the worker is "unable to carry out previous duties" or "if his living conditions are precarious."

The ratio of "invalids" to old age pensioners in poorer regions is often around 6-1. At the lower echelons the pensions are derisory and many invalids and old age pensioners find other menial jobs in Italy's growing "black work" army where they are underpaid and employers do not register them.

At the moment there is no mechanism for withdrawing a pension once it is granted.

This September, the Christian Democratic government of Premier Giulio Andreotti tried to do something about the chaotic pensions scheme and announced a grand plan including a ruling that would reduce the pensions of people who keep on working.

The result was uproar — although there are no statistics to show how many pensioners are moonlighting. The unions complained that Labor Minister Tina Anselmi, Italy's first woman minister, had failed to consult them.

Miss Anselmi said the scheme was not her idea but Treasury Minister Gaetano Stammati's. INPS President Reggio said, "We have no staff to check out the government plan, which is unworkable anyway as it would only encourage 'black' labor."

As pensioners staged protest demonstrations throughout the nation the government realized it was on a collision course with 12 million voters and Andreotti announced lamely that "nothing has been finally decided, the whole matter must be re-examined and other ways found to block the deficits."

Which still leaves Italy, on paper, with five million invalids.

SWEET NEWS

VAN NUYS, Calif. (UPI) — California and Arizona navel oranges are in plentiful supply for the winter holidays, says Gordon Henderson, marketing vice president for a growers' cooperative here. Henderson said western growers also are shipping lemons, grapefruit, tangerines and limes for the same season.

Families On Farms Dip

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The number of U. S. farm families feeding America and helping feed the rest of the world is declining steadily.

The U. S. Department of Agriculture's latest fitures, for 1976, show the number of farms at 2,778,000, compared with 3,257,000 in 1966.

The farm population in 1966 was 11,595,000 and by 1976 had declined to 8,253,000, the department said.

In 1966, 5.9 per cent of the population farmed. By 1975, it had dropped to 4.2 per cent, by 1976 to 3.8 per cent.

Richard Edwards, research economist with the USDA, said the largest single factor in the decline in numbers was that smaller farms, when they came on the market, were being purchased by neighboring farmers to increase their own business. The developments in mechanization aided the large operation.

POISON WARNING

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (UPI) — Model airplane builders should use epoxy compounds outdoors or in a spray booth only and wear a face mask, says the Illinois Division of Aeronautics. Vapor from resins and hardeners in epoxy can inflame lung and heart tissues, causing coronary problems. The effects of epoxy poisoning multiply with repeated exposures, the division said.

World Observes Christmas In Variety Of Ways

By JEANNE LESEM
UPI Family Editor

Christmas makes the whole world kin.

Both the religious and secular aspects of the holiday are widely observed, even in Asia where The Philippines is the only Christian nation.

By mid-October, the business districts are decorated and jammed with shoppers, although non-Christian Chinese make up about 90 percent of the population.

The fun-and feast-loving Chinese find it a good excuse for huge family meals. Mongolian hotpot is a favorite dish, meat and vegetables cooked in steaming broth in a special utensil. So is any dish containing mutton. The Chinese believe it keeps the blood warm through the "frigid" Hong Kong winters when temperatures drop to 50 degrees.

Houses are decorated with tinsel dragons. Gift giving is popular among both Christian and non-Christian Chinese, among families, friends, business associates and civil servants.

In recent years, Hong Kong's powerful Independent Committee Against Corruption has dampened the fervor of some gift exchanges. No official wants Santa to be suspiciously generous to him.

The colony has 440,000 Christians. Most missionary-founded Chinese churches show their orthodoxy by carefully follow western rituals. But midnight masses, nativity plays and caroling are in Chinese.

Children visit department stores to confide in a chubby white-bearded man in a red suit. Not Santa, but Sing Tan Lo Yan, the old man of the holy feast. Just like Santa, he holds children on his lap and hands out presents.

Commercialism is just as widespread in Singapore, and not just at Christmas, said UPI correspondent Koh Han Thuan. Merchants there take advantage of all festivals of all faiths: Buddhist, Moslem, Christian and Hindu. Christians make up only 13 percent of the 2.3 million population.

More than two months before Christmas, a big white sign proclaiming "Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year" was hung over the entrance to a leading department store. Paintings depicting Santa Clauses and the birth of Christ were in the background.

Christians call on each other, exchange greetings and gifts, and invite non-Christian neighbors home for food and drink if they happen to live in the same high-rise apartment houses.

The Japanese also start their Christmas shopping season well before Thanksgiving, reports UPI correspondent Robert Crabbe in Tokyo.

Yet, only about 850,000 persons among the nation's 113 million population are regular church-going Christians, after more than a century of intense missionary activity.

"The Japanese in general have embraced two aspects of Christmas," said a veteran American missionary with a sly smile. "Those are the Christmas sale and the office party."

Santa as a man is a western idea, said one department store executive. "Actually, we find women are better at winning the confidence of children, especially the little ones."

Christmas is not a legal holiday in Japan. It comes just before New Year's, the nation's big winter holiday when the whole country shuts down for about a week.

Most companies have one big party for their help. Since World War II ended, many parties have been held on Christmas Eve.

The tree raiser is a comic figure on family television shows around Christmas. He usually is a devout Buddhist from the countryside who covers himself by muttering Buddhist prayers as he delivers trees to city people for what his conscience tells him is a heathen ritual.

Japan also has adopted the idea of fancy French and German Christmas cakes. They are displayed at bakeries through late December.

Christmas is also among the biggest holidays in South Korea, for non-believers as well as the more than five million Christians who make up about 14 percent of the total population.

UPI correspondent Jim Kim reports from Seoul:

The holiday has been popular since Korea's liberation from Japanese colonial rule in 1945, partly because the Japanese had suppressed the Christian faith, and partly because U.S. GIs occupying the country set examples for celebrations.

Also, Syngman Rhee, independent Korea's first president, was Christian.

Overnight orgies by non-believers marred celebrations in the late 1950s and early 1960s. Downtown Seoul was jammed with half a million persons, drinking and going to nightclubs and cabarets. Juvenile delinquents went wild. Hotels were filled to capacity with lovers.

A public campaign for a quiet holiday began in the mid-1960s. The celebration is orderly now, but nightspots still are filled on Christmas Eve. Family parties have become more prevalent, Christians attend prayers and masses at church and then make carolling rounds of Christians' homes.

From Bangkok, UPI correspondent Paul D. Vogle says indications are that Christmas this year in Ho Chi Minh City, the Communist name for Saigon, will be the grimmest since the so-called "liberation" by the Communists in 1975.

He said it is expected to be similar to Christmases in the Vietnamese capital since 1954.

Last year, travelers from the northern Vietnamese capital told of attending Christmas mass in the cathedral that appeared to be only half full. They said security guards lined the approaches, frightening off all but the most hardy among the devout.

Archbishop Nguyen Van Binh of Saigon, spiritual leader of the estimated one million Catholics in the South, has tried to reach an accommodation between the church and Communism. He voiced his first reservations earlier this fall in Rome. Meeting with his Hanoi counterpart, Archbishop Trinh Nhu Khue, he asked the veteran of 23 years under Communist Rule: "How do we reconcile Marx and Christ?"

He obviously does not expect the streets of Ho Chi Minh City to be thronged with worshippers this Christmas Eve.

One of the world's longest Christmas holiday seasons is celebrated in The Philippines, Asia's only Christian nation, said UPI correspondent Victor Maliwanag in Manila.

It begins traditionally on Dec. 16 with pre-dawn masses in Roman Catholic churches throughout the country. It culminates in a high mass at midnight on Christmas Eve signaling the birth of Jesus Christ.

Christmas Day itself is mainly for children. Alone or escorted by their parents, they visit the homes of relatives and godparents to receive gifts.

PICK UP YOUR GAME CARD TODAY!

1. Everytime you visit one of our participating stores you will receive a free concealed $1000 Cash Bonanza number ticket. Tickets are available at checkout counters or service desk. You can also receive $1000 Cash Bonanza game pieces by mailing request to $1000 CASH BONANZA P O Box 6981 Richmond Virginia 23230. One Master Card and concealed number ticket per request please. A self addressed stamped envelope must be sent with each request.
2. No purchase necessary to participate. Only one concealed number ticket per store visit. Adults only eligible to play.
3. Simply push out die cut portion of each concealed number ticket to separate and reveal Four Round Number Discs. Each of non-dated number discs will match a number on the Master Card you are playing. Insert each matching number into space or die cuts on the Master Card. For example: Number 424 disc should be inserted into die cut covering number 424 on the Master Card to help you win. Free squares are the same as covered numbers.
4. When you have matched a straight row of four numbers vertically, horizontally or diagonally on any one of the 6 games on the Master Card, you have won the cash prize shown at the top of that game. Only one cash prize per game, or game card.
5. If a disc shows the words "you win $1" you may immediately turn it in to our store manager and receive the cash amount shown.
6. Verification. Winning card should be taken to store manager only. The Master Card and the matching concealed number discs only must be signed by the customer in the presence of the store manager. You will be given a receipt for your winning game card and after it is verified you will immediately receive your cash prize from the store manager. Prizes $25 and over will be paid by check. When you turn in your winning card, you will be given a new Master Card so that you can keep playing and winning $1000 Cash Bonanza. There is no limit to the number of times you can win. Winners consent to the publication of his or her name and photo at discretion of The Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co.
IMPORTANT: Any Master Card or individual concealed number discs will be judged void and will not be accepted if altered, defaced, mutilated, torn or tampered with in any way.
7. Employees and their I M S (noted dependents) of The Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co. and Sterling Traffic Programs, Inc. are ineligible to play. Game is void where taxed or prohibited by law. We reserve the right to reject any $1,000 Cash Bonanza game material not obtained legitimately through authorized personnel. We also reserve the right to reject as unpaid any typographical or mechanical error or errors in any $1000 Cash Bonanza game material and to reject any alleged winning material containing such errors.
8. All prizes must be claimed within 5 days after termination of this promotion as announced in our advertisement.
9. The $1000 Cash Bonanza game is available at 214 Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co. stores located in Virginia, North Carolina & South Carolina. Fannie City, Georgia, Princeton, West Virginia. This promotion is scheduled to end on February 18, 1978. $1000 Cash Bonanza will officially end, however, when all game tickets are distributed.

ADVERTISED ITEM POLICY: Each of these advertised items is required to be readily available for sale at or below the advertised price in each A&P Store, except as specifically noted in this ad.

Complications In Severe Burns

RICHMOND, Va. (UPI) — Although burn victims are carried through their first day by the latest advances in medical treatment, they later become subject to insidious lung complications, according to a report by radiologists at the Medical College of Virginia Hospitals.

In the past decade, the radiologists said, a more vigorious approach to antibiotic therapy and fluid replacement has resulted in effective control of wound infection and circulatory shock, a major cause of early death in patients with thermal injury.

However, the physicians pointed out, the increase in the survival rate of these patients has been accompanied by an apparent increase in the incidence of lung complications.

Drs. Hushang Kangarloo, Michael C. Beachley and Gary G. Ghahremani studied 66 patients during a 12-month period. In 28 of the patients, chest X-ray studies revealed various lung problems.

PROGRAM ATTACKS SEX BIAS

ITHACA, N.Y. (AP) — A program aimed at reducing sex stereotyping in junior and senior high schools in New York State has begun at the N.Y. State College of Human Ecology, Cornell University.

The teams, working under the direction of Charlotte J. Farris, professor of community service education, will teach the teachers to be alert to their own biases and to examine stereotyping in books, films and other classroom materials.

K mart AUTOMOTIVE SERVICE POLICY

K mart's policy is to perform only needed services. For your benefit, K mart auto services are necessarily conditioned on K mart's right to decline any service, whether advertised or not, where a car has related deteriorated or worn parts which create or continue an unsatisfactory or unsafe driving condition, unless the customer gives K mart a written waiver of replacement of such needed parts. Needed brake system parts may not be waived by customer; K mart may in its judgment refuse to perform any partial brake job where your safety is at stake.

Limited 24,000-Mile or 24-Months Warranty

LIMITED WARRANTY
K mart FIVE WAY
NEW TIRE REGULAR HIGHWAY TYPE

1. TREAD WEAR – If the tread wears out (2/32 inch or less remaining) before the warranted number of months or miles of service,* the tire will be replaced at a 35% allowance off the new list price of the tire, plus applicable Federal Excise, State and Local Taxes.
   Tread Wear Mileage Warranty does not apply to:
   Snow tires
   Passenger tires used on trucks
   Cars used to pull trailers
   Cars in a deteriorated mechanical condition
   Commercial vehicles for hire
2. COMPLETE 90 DAY REPLACEMENT – If the new tire is rendered non-serviceable for any defect or road-caused reason during the first 90 days from the date of purchase, it will be replaced at NO CHARGE
3. WORKMANSHIP AND MATERIAL – Every new tire sold by K mart is warranteed against all failures due to defects in workmanship and material for the life of the original tread.
   If the tire fails from such defects, K mart will replace it with a new tire and a price adjustment prorated using current list prices, charging only for the months or mileage used* plus proportionate Federal Excise, State and Local Taxes.
4. ROAD HAZARD – Any regular passenger tire that fails due to road hazard during the designated number of warranteed months or miles* will be repaired or replaced at K mart's option. The replacement adjustment will be prorated using current list prices, charging only for the months or mileage used* plus a proportionate amount of Federal Excise, State and Local Taxes.
5. ADJUSTING – All adjustments will be based on the full list price (not sale price) in effect at time of adjustment prorated for the months or mileage used* plus proportionate Federal Excise, State and Local Taxes. All adjustments must be accompanied by proof of purchase at K mart. This warranty applicable only to original owner.

EXCLUSION
