Sadat Apparently Having County's Planned Three-Nation Conference Waste Ordinance Shelved By Board

By SAMI RIZKALLAH
Associated Press Writer
CAIRO (AP) — President Anwar Sadat apparently is going to have a three-nation Cairo conference attended by Israel, Egypt and the United States.

Israel formally agreed Monday to attend the meeting called by the Egyptian president to make preparations for an Arab-Israeli peace conference in Geneva. Officials in Washington said the United States also will participate.

Of the others invited, the Palestine Liberation Organization, Syria and Jordan said they would not attend, and the Soviet Union, Lebanon and U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim have not responded. But the Russians and the Lebanese are expected to stay away because of Syria's stand.

Sadat had said the meeting could start as early as this Saturday. Other Egyptian officials said it probably would be delayed until next week.

Officials of the Carter administration said the United States would participate in the conference but was delaying an announcement. The officials said the administration detected signs that the opposition to the meeting by Sadat's militant Arab foes might wane and believed an announcement of U.S. participation would solidify the opposition.

U.S. officials also said the level of U.S. representation had not been decided, but Secretary of State Cyrus Vance would not attend.

Israel also downgraded its delegation, naming as its representatives Eliahu Ben-Elissar, the director-general of Prime Minister Menahem Begin's office, and Meir Roseene, legal adviser to the Foreign Ministry who helped draft Israel's disengagement agreements with Egypt and Syria after the 1973 Arab-Israeli war.

Despite Washington's talk of waning opposition to Sadat, only one slight conciliatory note came from among his opponents.

Syrian President Hafez Assad told a news conference in Damascus "there can be no dialogue" between Syria and Egypt. "there only are divergencies in methods and priorities end procedures." But he said he would attend the anti-Sadat Arab summit meeting in Tripoli Thursday.

King Hussein in a televised speech defended Sadat's trip to Israel. He said it resulted from his "reading of the disunity, uncertainty and indecision" in the Arab world and reflected "painful Arab realities."

Hussein pleaded with "Arab brethren for courageous joint action to reunite ranks and rebuild a unified position in order to face the future, whatever the difficulties." But the Jordanian government said it would not send representatives to either the Cairo or Tripoli meetings unless all "concerned countries" attended.

Base Raids 'Crippling'

Base Raids 'Crippling'

SALISBURY, Rhodesia (AP) — Moderate black nationalists say the guerrilla armies fighting the white Rhodesian government suffered a crippling blow if the government's claim to have killed at least 1,200 guerrillas in Mozambique is correct.

Rhodesian air and ground attack deep inside Mozambique last week. "It would be a lie to suggest we are happy with what happened over there," said an official of Bishop Abel Muzorewa's African National Council. "It is a tragedy that this continuing war has forced the government into action and that our people have died. But it has taught us some lessons."

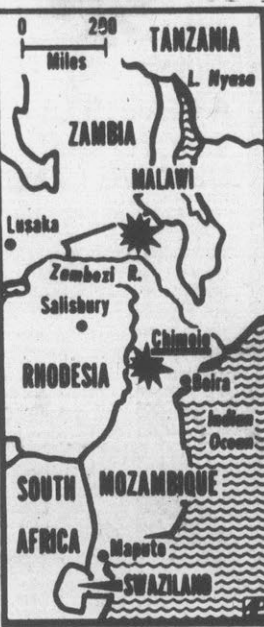

Intelligence sources say the raids by air and ground forces on two major guerrilla bases set the black war effort back by months.

Some blacks cited the apparent impotence of the 10,000-man Mozambique army, which began as a guerrilla force that fought Portuguese colonial troops for a decade. It put up no opposition to the invaders, the Rhodesian government said.

Both black and white politicians now believe the Rhodesian government's racially-mixed security forces must be retained to keep future black governments in power as well as guarantee the safeguards for the whites demanded by Smith. But spokesmen for Muzorewa and the Rev. Ndabaningi Sithole, another moderate leader who will negotiate with Smith, say specialist units that have been accused of harassing civilians will have to be disbanded.

An official report from Maputo, the capital of Mozambique, accused Rhodesia of a "slaughter" but said few guerrillas were slain. The Marxist government said most of the victims were women and children, families of the guerrillas.

It also reported "five soldiers of the Rhodesian racist army were killed." The Rhodesian government reported one of its soldiers killed and eight wounded.

RHODESIA RAIDS — The Rhodesian military command said Monday that its ground and air forces had smashed two black nationalist camps inside Mozambique, killing at least 1,200 guerrillas. One raid was at Chimolo, 54 miles from Rhodesia's eastern border, and another at an unnamed camp in northwestern Mozambique. (AP Laser-photo Map)

VEPCO Boosts Wholesale Rates

Virginia Electric and Power Co., which supplies power to the Greenville Utilities Commission, raised its wholesale rates yesterday for municipalities by 14.8 per cent. However, GUC director Charles Horne said today that retail rates to the commission's customers will not be increased in the near future.

Horne indicated that GUC anticipated the rate increase at the beginning of its fiscal year and made allowances for it in the rate schedule adopted at that time.

Officials in Ayden and Winterville, which purchase power from GUC at the wholesale level for distribution to their customers, were uncertain this morning how the wholesale price hike would affect their retail customers.

Winterville officials noted that any increase to their customers would not be made before the Town Board meeting December 4, if at all.

In Ayden, officials said no decision has been reached there as far as any retail rate hike is concerned.

Officials of the Edgecombe-Martin Electric Membership cooperative which serves about 850 customers in Pitt County, said the cooperative will "make an effort not to" pass along their wholesale rate increase to their customers.

The VEPCO wholesale rate for cooperatives was increased 11.4 per cent yesterday. The rate increase for municipal systems will mean about $5.6 million more per year in income for VEPCO, while the increased rate for co-ops will amount to about $6.7 million a year.

The rate hike was approved by the Federal Energy Administration Friday. Towns affected by the VEPCO hike in addition to Greenville, are: Belhaven, Edenton, Elizabeth City, Enfield, Hamilton, Hertford, Hobgood, Robersonville, Scotland Neck, Tarboro, Washington and Windsor.

Council Acted On Delayed Rezoning

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer
Final action on a rezoning request that had been before the city for several months was taken Monday by the City Council during a special call session.

Meeting at 3:30 p.m., the Council voted to approve part of a request by H. G. Stocks for rezoning property located on the north side of 264 Bypass West and deny a second part of the rezoning proposal.

Stocks had sought rezoning from RA-20 and Highway Commercial to Highway Commercial and R-15 of some 33 acres, including the extension of 400 feet of current Highway Commercial zoning on the road frontage back to a total of 800 feet. The RA-20 property is located on the rear segment of the tract.

Council members voted to extend the commercial zone back to 800 feet as requested but decided to deny the request to rezone the rear portion of the property from RA-20 to R-15.

The matter was considered by the Planning and Zoning Commission for months and the original rezoning request was altered by developers as a compromise. The board finally voted, by a five to four margin, to recommend that the Council disapprove the rezoning.

In other business yesterday, the Council authorized Mayor Percy Cox to sign a letter of agreement with Seaboard Coast Line Railroad covering the use of a modular-type road crossing for Arlington Boulevard rather than the conventional crossing that had been authorized previously.

City Manager Jim Caldwell explained that the modular-type crossing, the same as installed at the Greenville Boulevard crossing, will involve a local cost of some $8,000 with the city purchasing the materials and the railroad handling the installation and furnishing new cross-ties.

The city manager said that the $8,000 figure involves the material costs for 80 feet of roadway.

Council members agreed that the modular type provided a better crossing and Mrs. Mildred McGrath contended that a crossing that will handle as much traffic as Arlington should have the best consideration.

Action on a request from the Eastern Carolina Sheltered Workshop and Vocational Rehabilitation Center for an appropriation to match Mid-East funds to provide transportation for senior citizens was tabled until Thursday night's regular meeting.

The newly elected Council, including two freshmen members, will be installed at the meeting.

Median Income Rose $4,000 In Five Years

WASHINGTON (AP) — The median income of American families was $14,094 in 1975, more than $4,000 higher than five years earlier, new government figures show.

The extensive new Census Bureau report, released Monday, gives income and poverty statistics for all 50 states and the District of Columbia for the first time since the 1970 census.

It shows that Alaska had the highest median family income in the nation, $22,432.

It was followed by Hawaii with median family income of $17,770; Maryland, $17,556; New Jersey, $16,432; Connecticut, $16,244; and Illinois, $16,062.

Mississippi had the lowest median family income of $9,999, the report shows.

Comparative figures show that the median family income in 1970 was $9,876, the census bureau said. "Median family income" means that half of all families in the state or nation earn more than that and half earn less.

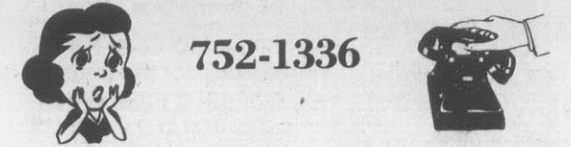

The new report, titled Household Money Income in 1975, is based on a new one-time poll commissioned by Congress.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The following is an alphabetical state-by-state breakdown of each state's poverty figures for 1975 and the percentage of the state's population living in poverty. It also includes the District of Columbia.

The first figure represents the total number of persons living in poverty in 1975, and the second represents the percentage of the state's population living in poverty.

Table with 2 columns: State and Median Income. Includes Georgia, Hawaii, Idaho, Illinois, Indiana, Kansas, Kentucky, Louisiana, Maine, Maryland, Massachusetts, Michigan, Minnesota, Mississippi, Missouri, Montana, Nebraska, Nevada, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New Mexico, New York, North Carolina, North Dakota, Ohio, Oklahoma, Oregon, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, South Carolina, South Dakota, Tennessee, Texas, Utah, Vermont, Virginia, Washington, West Virginia, Wisconsin, Wyoming.

Those dates and hours, again, are from yesterday through this Friday and from next Monday through the following Friday, Dec. 9. Hours each of these days are from 1 to 4 p. m. The place is the Salvation Army Citadel, 2337 W. Dickinson Avenue, Greenville.

Just Strangers In Strange Land

AUBURN, Ala. (AP) — An Auburn University geography professor says most of the students in one of his classes don't know where to find Washington, D.C., or New York City on a map.

Professor Gregory Jeane also said 20 of the 25 students had no idea where to find London. The same number couldn't locate the nation's capital, and 21 of them weren't able to find New York City.

UN Debate On UFOs Is Honor Five North Carolinians Opened By Premier

By CHARLES HANLEY
Associated Press Writer
UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Prime Minister Eric Gairy of Grenada opened the first U.N. debate on UFOs, then led the diplomats to the movies Monday night to see "Close Encounters of the Third Kind."

"This is the fulfillment of my very high expectation...The world is looking on," the leader of the 12-by 21-mile island in the Caribbean told the General Assembly's special political committee made up of delegates from all 149 U.N. members.

Gairy told a reporter of his own close encounter "2½ years ago, when I was driving home at 2 or 3 in the morning."

"It was a big object, a brilliant light, golden bright, moving at tremendous speed," he continued. "It was off at a distance. I couldn't tell how far. It lasted perhaps three minutes. I'm not the only one. Other people on Grenada have seen them."

His speech to the political committee was brief, and then he and his party went off to dinner and an evening with Hollywood's latest foray into the world of unidentified flying objects.

The film's distributors provided 300 free tickets for U.N. diplomats in advance of the debate. The tickets were distributed through the Grenada delegation. The Grenadians also handed out 300 free copies of a paperback book on UFOs.

The solidly built, bespectacled Gairy, who intersperses religious thoughts in his UFO speeches, began his campaign two years ago. In an address to the General Assembly then, he called for a U.N. investigation of psychic phenomena. Last year, in another assembly speech, he proposed that UFOs be studied also.

Gairy is not the only head of government to have reported a UFO sighting. President Carter says he saw one in Georgia in 1973. But Gairy is the only national leader who has made UFOs a key concern of his country's foreign policy.

Gairy has accused some nations — which he does not identify publicly — of stifling information they have collected about UFO sightings.

He has submitted a resolution to the assembly calling for creation of a U.N. agency to conduct UFO research and to coordinate the findings of individual nations. The United States, for one, opposes the idea, and Gairy says he is willing to settle for a temporary study committee.

The Grenadan also proposes that the United Nations declare 1978 the International Year of Unidentified Flying Objects and that the United States and Grenada jointly issue postage stamps commemorating great moments in UFO research.

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Five outstanding North Carolinians have been honored for their achievements at the 14th annual North Carolina awards ceremonies.

Gov. Jim Hunt presented awards Monday night to Elizabeth Duncan Koontz of Salisbury for public service; Reginald Glennis Mitchiner of Greensboro for science; Reynolds Price of Durham for literature; Joseph Curtis Sloan of Chapel Hill for art and Jonathan Williams of Highlands and Cumbria, England, for fine arts.

The awards ceremony began the state's 64th annual Culture Week.

Dr. Koontz has held national educational posts and has been active in women's affairs. She presently is state assistant superintendent of public instruction.

She headed the International Women's Year Coordinating Committee for North Carolina in June.

In October, 1976, Dr. Koontz was honored by the College Entrance Examination Board in New York where she was presented the Board's Medal for Distinguished Service to Education. The award is presented only once every 25 years.

Mitchiner is a registered professional engineer and is associate professor and chairman of the mechanical engineering department at North Carolina

A&T University. His speciality is in the field of kinematics, the science of machine design.

Before coming to North Carolina A&T, he taught at Virginia Tech and served as senior associate engineer for IBM's Research Triangle Park facility and a senior project engineer for General Motors.

Price is James B. Duke professor of English at Duke University, where he has taught since 1959. His first novel, "A Long and Happy Life," published in 1962, won him the William Faulkner Award for a notable first novel.

He has worked as a writer in residence at the University of North Carolina and the University of Kansas. Among his numerous awards was a 1971 award in literature from the American Academy and the National Institute of Arts and Letters.

Sloane is director of the Ackland Art Center on the University of North Carolina campus in Chapel Hill. He has been with the museum almost 20 years, and annual museum attendance has grown from 12,500 in 1960-61 to 40,000 in 1974-75.

Sloane is a specialist in French 19th century paintings and sculpture. He has written numerous articles for major art journals and other publications. He has been president of the American Council for the Arts in Education, the College Art Association of America and the Southeastern College Arts Conference.

Williams receives the award in fine arts for a North Carolinian who resides outside the state. He divides his time between Highlands and Cumbria, England. He is a poet, publisher, essayist, editor, designer and lecturer. He has written over 45 published books and pamphlets, including "An Ear in Bartram's Tree," "Bartram's Tree" and "Mahler."

He has served as poet-in-residence at the University of Kansas, Wake Forest University, Maryland Institute College of Art and Salem College.

McClellan Was Investigator

PARADE PLANS
FARMVILLE — Floats, a calliope, bands and other marching units, and even Old St. Nick are to be here Wednesday at 4 p. m. for Farmville's annual Christmas parade. The route is from Home Avenue south on Main to Cotton, west on Cotton to George, north on George to Wilson, east on Wilson to Wilentz, north to Grimmersburg, west to Main, and north to Home and the assembly grounds (the athletic field).

People from neighboring towns are invited to this Chamber of Commerce-sponsored event, according to Chamber Secretary Louis Williams.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — Sen. John L. McClellan, the last of a trio of Arkansas Democrats who wielded enormous power in Congress because of their seniority, is dead at 81.

McClellan, who died at home in his bed early Monday, built his reputation leading Senate investigations of organized crime and labor racketeering in the 1950s and 1960s, and for the last five years was chairman of the powerful Senate Appropriations Committee.

An archetype of the influential Southern Democrat, he built his power on longevity. He represented Arkansas for 35 years in the Senate, and had become that body's second most senior member, after Sen. James O. Eastland, D-Miss.

In the 1960s and early 1970s, when Rep. Wilbur D. Mills headed the House Ways and Means Committee and Sen. J.W. Fulbright presided over the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, McClellan was one of three powerful figures helping Arkansas, which is 32nd in population among the states, to exercise disproportionate clout in Congress.

Among the three, they had a century of seniority, the pivotal criterion for committee chairmanships.

McClellan was an advocate of "law and order" measures and military appropriations, and he fought against civil rights legislation.

His name was linked to much of the nation's recent anti-crime legislation, and he steered to passage the Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act of 1968 and the Organized Crime Control Act of 1970.

But he was perhaps best known for his earlier investigations of corruption in and out of government, as chairman of the Senate permanent investigations subcommittee.

In 1953, he had come to national attention by leading a Democratic boycott of the subcommittee, a unit of the Government Operations Committee, to protest what he called the one-man rule of its then-chairman, Republican Sen. Joseph R. McCarthy of Wisconsin.

Then, in the Democrat-controlled Senate of 1955, McClellan became chairman of the subcommittee and began a series of investigations that, over the years, would look into labor racketeering, organized crime, illicit operations in overseas military clubs and the riots that erupted in big cities and on college campuses in the late 1960s.

In 1972, McClellan became chairman of the Appropriations Committee, which wields control over government spending.

On Monday, President Carter said that McClellan's death "deprives the Senate of a resolute and gifted lawyer" who advocated a strong national defense and "upheld integrity in the operations of government."

McClellan's first marriage ended in divorce and his second wife died of spinal meningitis. He had three sons but they died — one during World War II, a second in a traffic accident and a third in a plane crash. His third wife, Norma, found him dead at about 6:30 a.m. Monday in their Little Rock apartment. She and two daughters survive.

His body will lie in state for three hours Wednesday morning in the rotunda of the state Capitol. The funeral will be here Wednesday.

Two Collisions Here Monday
Cars driven by Dwayne Keith Briley of 205C Eastbrook Apts. and Paul Martin Taylor of 112 Holliday Ct. collided about 9:18 p.m. yesterday on Greenville Boulevard West of Hooker Road.

Investigators estimated damage from the collision at $500 to the Taylor car and $100 to the Briley vehicle.

Officers reported three vehicles were involved in an 8 a.m. mishap on Memorial Drive, 250 feet South of the Chestnut Street intersection.

An estimated $400 damage resulted to one of the cars, driven by Jack Eugene Weathersby of Winterville.

Police, who reported no damage to the other two autos, identified their drivers as Harvey Hill of Kinston and Danny Richard McLawhorn of Route 2, Ayden.

Snow Over Large Part Of Central U.S. Today

By The Associated Press
Snow covered a large area of the central United States this morning, from the central Rockies through portions of the Mississippi Valley and into the lower Ohio Valley.

Occasional freezing rain was spotted from the middle Mississippi Valley into portions of the lower Ohio Valley, and travelers' advisories were issued for snow and freezing rain — with some sleet in places — over parts of an area extending from the eastern central Plains into the lower Ohio Valley, and also for parts of northern Virginia.

No large additional accumulation of snow was expected in those areas, but where snow combined with sleet and freezing rain, driving conditions were expected to be hazardous. Isolated snow flurries were also reported in the Pacific Northwest, and some very light snow was reported in New England. Southern California had other problems — the hot, dry Santa Ana winds, howling out of the desert since last weekend at about 30 miles an hour and sending temperatures up to the 90s as they cut down power lines over a wide area of Southern California and capsized sailboats.

Small-craft warnings remained in effect for Tuesday, and the forecast was for more winds and temperatures in the 90s.

Elsewhere, a frontal system across the southern and southeastern part of the country was causing thunderstorms and heavy rains from east Texas through the lower Mississippi Valley into Alabama and Tennessee. Northern Alabama was under a flash flood watch and flash flood warnings were issued for sections of eastern Texas.

The National Weather Service forecast snow from the eastern portions of the central Plains into northern portions of the mid Mississippi Valley today, changing to rain across the remainder of the mid and lower Mississippi Valley through the Ohio Valley and the Appalachians into the Carolinas and the mid Atlantic states. Rain, with snow at the higher elevations, was expected to extend from northern California and the Pacific Northwest across Idaho into western Montana. Snow was forecast over western New York. From the Great Plains to the Atlantic, temperatures were expected to be cool or cold except for most of the Gulf Coast region and the south Atlantic Coast states, which were expected to be mostly mild. Arizona and the Great Basin were expected to be cool, and the northern Plateau and northern Rockies mild.

Early morning temperatures ranged from two degrees at Massena, N.Y. to 77 degrees at Miami and Ft. Lauderdale, Fla.

Regain Fortune In Documents

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Raleigh police have recovered $1.25 million worth of documents, including letters written by George Washington, believed stolen from a New York state museum near West Point.

William H. Gelnow, 23, was charged with possession of stolen property, police said.

The documents were apparently taken last Aug. 15, museum officials said, although they added they weren't sure all the documents recovered belonged to them.

Accident-Free Driving Award

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — "Luck, credit to the good Lord and a certain degree of good driving skills helped me to get to this point," said Walter C. Garner of Burlington as Gov. Jim Hunt handed him the Governor's Cup for being North Carolina Driver of the Year.

Garner, a driver for Burlington Industries, has driven more than 3 million miles without an accident.

Clarified

In an education article in yesterday's Daily Reflector, Superintendent of the County Schools Ott Alford was quoted as saying that approximately 35-40 percent of the county students who take the upcoming competency test will not pass.

Alford clarified this statement, saying that those students might not pass if the test was graded on an eighth grade level.

Before you sign up for an IRA, find out about ours.

Many financial institutions offer Individual Retirement Accounts (IRA) for people without a qualified retirement plan. Any IRA is good business, but, they're complicated, so it's hard to figure out whose is best.

At NCNB, we think that you'll be hard-pressed to find one with all the advantages of ours.

In the first place, the NCNB IRA, with a four or ten-year maturity, currently pays 7-3/4% annual interest.

And that's not all. At NCNB, that 7-3/4% interest is compounded daily and credited quarterly.

Secondly, with each deposit, we guarantee the rate being offered for your choice of four or ten years. (Many IRAs offer 3 years or less.)

And, right now, we charge no administrative fees or service charges. (Many IRAs do.)

For the details, mail us the coupon or call 1-800-822-8855. Or better yet, stop in at any NCNB office. Because the sooner you get all the facts, the better IRA you can get.

Barely Missed

NEW YORK (AP) — A prisoner taken to Bellevue Hospital after complaining of stomach cramps walked naked through the halls, down the stairs and out of the institution after taking a shower.

He passed a guard during his walkout Monday, but the guard's head was turned because he was opening the door for a woman in a wheelchair.

Police said the escapee, Harvey Adolphos, 25, of Manhattan, left a trail of wet footprints as he marched down the 10th floor corridor and vanished into a stairwell.

Police said they had arrested him earlier in the day on grand larceny and disorderly conduct charges.

The guard did not realize there had been an escape until a doctor came to do tests on Adolphos and saw the wet footprints in the hall.

The escape took place in mid-afternoon in a section of midtown Manhattan near the East River.

Nobody on the street reported anything unusual, and Adolphos was still at large today.

Designer Of Jewelry Likes Working With Metals

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures Writer

Big business has been giving crafts people some of their biggest breaks. Manufacturers have been willing to take risks and they have been reaping rewards from consumers.

So says Mary Ann Scherr, artist and craftsman, who is an industrial designer, goldsmith and illustrator. Her design scope has included interiors of cars and body-monitoring electronic jewelry. One of her pieces is in the permanent collection of the Smithsonian Institution.

An associate professor of Kent State University School of Art, she teaches metals and jewelry crafting to about 70 students a day and has just designed some unique silver and electroplated gold jewelry.

"Gold and silver are gorgeous metals but so are others like stainless steel. Even copper and brass are becoming important in crafts work," said Mrs. Scherr, who was in New York from Ohio on a house-shopping tour.

It isn't her first collection in metals. She has designed a line of mythological sculptures in aluminum for Alcoa and in 1962 she pioneered and created 27 pieces of stainless steel jewelry for U.S. Steel that became a three-year touring exhibition.

"My new collection is an especially satisfying assignment because I did not have to accommodate the company's metal facilities, a great break in maintaining creativity."

The company, Reed and Barton, was able to adapt to her needs in executing the jewelry because they had already been into such design as silver hollowware.

The jewelry is part of a special signature collection by five craftsmen. Mrs. Scherr's contribution includes an agate and silver sculptured piece that reflects her interest in body-contouring jewelry; a nubia piece that is done by an industrial printer's technique — photo chemical etching; an elegant intricately designed "lace" bracelet and an electroplated gold on silver breastplate necklace with matching bracelet.

"I began working with metals the day my son was born 28 years ago," she said. "I took a course at night and within a week after that I had a studio going in my house. At that time few people were doing anything in metals."

In 1969, when she made a body jewelry costume for Miss Ohio, it occurred to her that jewelry could actually monitor bodily functions. Four years later she had engineered such a heartbeat mechanism in a necklace. There is also a cuff bracelet with tiny sensors that keeps track of the wearer's heartbeat. She has also designed an oxygen mask pendant and a tracheotomy necklace that provides a cap to cover the surgical incision, the piece in the Smithsonian Institution.

Mrs. Scherr attended the Cleveland Institute of Art. Her husband, an industrial designer, has just been appointed president of the American Crafts Council. Two of her three children are already headed into artistic fields, she said.

Special Care Needed For Silk Fabrics

JOLIET, Ill. (AP) — Take care ... this is the year of the silkworm.

Silk is the fashion fabric of the year, its use going beyond scarves and ties to dresses, blouses and suits — men's as well as women's.

But the thread of the silkworm, first cultivated by the ancient Chinese and long admired for its special look and feel, needs special cleaning and handling care.

"On the plus side, silk is very elastic and wrinkle resistant, and doesn't soil easily," advises Patricia Andersen of the International Fabricare Institute (IFI), the association of professional launderers and drycleaners. "On the minus side, the weaves can be prone to chafing or even splitting, especially when wet."

Even perspiration, Ms. Andersen says, can weaken the fabric enough to damage the surface fibers and give the material a dull, worn look.

"This will happen anywhere the fabric has been flexed repeatedly," she added.

Moisture also can cause bleeding of some silk dyes and can disrupt fabric finishes enough to cause wrinkles or water spots, she noted.

"Professional drycleaners have equipment and techniques to restore silk fabric, but there's only so much they can do," said Charles R. Riggott, IFI executive vice president.

Most silks aren't washed because of silk's aversion to water, and even drycleaning techniques have to be adapted to suit the fragile fabric.

Care at home is needed as well. Spills must be blotted from the fabric with a towel, because rubbing the fabric when wet will damage the silk fibers.

The IFI offers other hints to extend the good looks of the new silk fashions:

—Strong light weakens and yellows the fabric and can fade many dyes and brighteners silk is treated with. So keep things stored in the dark.

—Age and frequent ironing also yellow the fabric, and a too-hot iron can be damaging. Silk velvet shouldn't be ironed at all, since ironing flattens the pile.

—Strong chemicals found in many household cleaning solutions will weaken or even dissolve silk. Watch out for strong acids, such as in liquid drain openers, and alkalies such as ammonia or caustic soda.

—Chloride salts — contained in deodorants, perspiration and salt water — will damage silk fibers. Chlorine bleach will, too, and can't be used in whitening a yellowed white silk.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

I'm always intrigued with those picture stories they do on the President of the United States that compare how he looked when he entered office and how, within a few short months, it has aged him.

There was one in the paper last week of President Carter. The article was quick to point out that within just 11 months in office, there were "new furrows in his brow, deeper creases in his cheeks, fresh lines around his eyes and more flesh beneath his chin, suggesting an aging process unrelated to time."

Big deal!

Beside Delores Finrock who just taught her teenage son how to drive, he looks like Donnie Osmond at a Prune Festival. Delores was a beautiful girl... taut skin, smiled easily, with deepset eyes that looked right at you when you talked.

I dropped in on her yesterday. "Dorian Gray lives!" I shouted. She shoved a stick of gum into her mouth without taking off the wrapper. "Don't kid around," she snapped.

"I'm not kidding, Delores. You look terrible. What happened to your hairline? It couldn't be receding?"

"Of course it's not receding," she said irritably. "I may have pulled out a few strands when Roger pulled over and parked just to change the knobs on the car radio."

"What's the matter with that? Sounds like he used good judgment."

"On the median of the expressway?"

"You look like you could use a good night's sleep."

"I haven't slept since he parallel-parked. I put two garbage cans in front of the house and told him to park between them."

"What happened?"

"He sideswiped our mailbox, ran down a 200-year-old blue spruce, and sunk the rear wheels over the septic tank."

"You can't go on like this. You're looking more like Abraham Lincoln every day. President Carter looks better than you."

"Why shouldn't he?" she snarled. "All he's got is the energy program, Lance, the Panama Canal and Andrew Young."

We heard the wheels spin, the brakes screeched and a garbage can rolled into the street. "Wait'll Amy gets her temps. You'll never see those straight, white, smiling teeth again."

Dear Abby

These Tall Stories Might Be Helpful

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: The letter from the 14-year-old girl who was so large for her age that she didn't care if she ever saw her 15th birthday reminded me of myself.

When I was 14, I stood 5 feet 10 and weighed 205. And as if that wasn't bad enough, I had bright red hair!

I was the butt of many cruel jokes, and I cried myself to sleep more nights than I could count. I didn't have one date in high school.

The summer after graduation I decided that God gave me my body, and it was up to me to make the best of it. I went on a diet, trimmed myself down, and took dancing lessons to develop grace and poise.

Today I'm 32, stand 5 feet 10, weigh 135 and am married to a wonderful man who's 6 feet 4. We have three beautiful daughters who will probably be Amazons, but we plan to teach them early to make the most of what they have.

QUEEN-SIZED AND HAPPY

DEAR HAPPY: Yours was one of many letters I received with essentially the same encouraging message. Read on for another inspiring beaut:

DEAR ABBY: May I add a few words to your advice to TOO TALL because I was there many years ago.

TOO TALL is the stuff the models, outstanding athletes and many executives are made of. Being tall means you will never be lost in a crowd. Being too tall is difficult at 14, but if you play it smart, you can be a standout the rest of your life.

The secret? Train yourself to sit and stand erect. Practice a graceful walk. Study dancing. Read a lot and fill your mind with interesting and useful information. Develop any talents you have in crafts, music, drama, writing. Participate in athletics. Find a way to help others. Teach a Sunday school class, work in a summer recreation program, volunteer as a candy striper at a hospital, visit a nursing home regularly. Train your ears to listen, and your heart to understand.

Stop crawling to your plate for comfort. Hold your head high and quit trying to fold yourself up so you'll look smaller.

If you take my advice, you will soon find yourself surrounded by friends who appreciate your concern for others and admire your friendly outgoing attitude.

Then one day you'll realize that you're dancing with someone shorter than you, and you will both know that it doesn't really matter which one of you is taller.

AND GROWING

DEAR ABBY: I know exactly how TOO TALL felt because I was also too tall in my girlhood. My problem was further complicated because I was also too thin. You may not believe this, but being too thin can be just as painful as being too fat!

At 15, I was 6 feet tall and weighed 125! I used to force myself to drink chocolate malteds until I was sick, hoping to gain a few pounds. My parents took me to one doctor after another trying to put some weight on me. They thought I had TB.

The worst part of being so tall and skinny was the cruel remarks I was subjected to.

Abby, please tell your readers that it's just as unkind to remind a person that he's tall and thin (or fat) as it is to remind a person that he's crippled or blind.

I wish I had a dollar for everyone who's ever asked me how the weather was "up there."

And you would not believe the number of people (strangers, too) who have asked, "Say, how tall are you?" What difference does it make if I'm 5 feet 11 1/2 or 6 feet 2?" I hope you print this. It just might make someone stop and think before he hurts the feelings of someone who's hurting enough as it is.

Surprising Move In Rhodesia

Ian Smith, prime minister of Rhodesia last week offered an approach to one-man one-vote rule in that African nation.

The outnumbered whites would see an end to their rule in that nation under the plan since they are heavily outnumbered by blacks.

In return Smith asked for protection of white interests in Rhodesia.

The move was surprising but moderate black leaders in Rhodesia expressed some support for the offer.

One black leader called the move a decisive one "which paves the way for black and white Rhodesians to sit down together and work out a blueprint for Zimbabwe which will bring peace and prosperity to our land."

Smith hopes his offer will end guerilla warfare in his nation.

"It is time we got on in Rhodesia and came to some finalities so that we can bring an end to the kind of madness which exists today where Rhodesians are killing Rhodesians at a pretty fair pace," Smith said.

If the Smith plan succeeds an effort was made for whites and blacks to coexist in the Rhodesian nation, although the whites would be outvoted in any elections.

It is a bold move by Smith to end the turmoil in his nation and at the same time provide for a future for the white minority. Hopefully the plan will succeed.

HIS EXPANSION TEAM IS MOVING AGAIN!

Skilled In The Taking

By DONALD M. ROTHEBERG
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — When it comes to the art of legislative give-and-take, Sen. Russell Long is envied by colleagues in Congress for his ability to end up taking a lot more than he gives.

One of those who admires the Louisiana Democrat's technique is Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan., a member of the Senate-House conference committee working on the energy tax bill.

Long is chairman of the Senate conferees. Before it broke for a Thanksgiving week recess, the panel met six times, making little visible progress toward resolving the differences between the House and Senate tax bills.

While attending a Republican meeting in Orlando, Fla., Dole told reporters that he and other members of the committee couldn't predict what might emerge from the conference. All they could do, said the Kansas senator, was watch Long, wait for him to work out a back room compromise and then spring it on the other conferees.

"You're not saying you don't know what's going on in the conference committee?" asked one startled reporter.

Dole smiled, paused a moment, and then replied, "I think that's exactly what I was saying."

Life Not The Same In Plains, Georgia

Poor Plains, Ga. Folks in that small town have been minding their own business for many years. Now one of their own is in the White House and life is not the same.

Most recently farmers descended on Plains with reportedly thousands of tractors to protest low farm prices.

No doubt the people of Plains are in sympathy with the farmers but watching all those tractors roll through town is not the usual small southern town weekend.

The farmers were welcomed to town, however, even though the president himself was not there to greet them.

Inventory Tax Questions

By BILL NOBLITT
(First of Two Articles)
RALEIGH—Any changes in the law regarding taxes invariably lead government into a maze of confusion.

Such is proving the case as the North Carolina General Assembly mulls repeal of the local property tax levied against the inventories held by manufacturing firms.

State senators were convinced that ending that tax would boost chances of wooing new industry to the state. Repeal sailed through the Senate virtually unopposed, with a provision that the state would make up the loss suffered by local governments as a result.

But a longer look is producing other thoughts among lawmakers. The measure, earlier this year, was slowed by failure of the House of Representatives to act; putting it on the agenda for consideration at the 1978 assembly session.

Meanwhile, a special study commission is at work to thoroughly explore the situation and offer guidance toward the future decision.

An Unknown
"Any change in the revenue law goes to an unknown area.

It's a dangerous place to travel... we simply don't have the answers," says State Senator Robert S. Swain, D-Buncombe, co-chairman of that study commission.

"If we knew the amount of revenue involved and if we knew the exact loss, and the effects of the change on everybody, then there would be no need for a study. But there are no answers," Swain commented. A public hearing early next year involving all of those likely to be affected may produce some of the answers, but those close to the situation don't really expect that.

As the subject is probed more deeply, it becomes a maze of contradictions and unknowns.

Sponsors of repeal at first said it would cost the state about $50 million per year to replace the revenue lost to local governments. Now experts admit they don't even know how much repeal would cost the state Revenue Secretary Mark Lynch says there is no way to get accurate figures; and that repeal will sharply affect whatever figures are complied. The reason for that is simple: manufacturers presently "manage" their inventories through various techniques to make certain they pay the least tax possible. If no tax were imposed, inventories would likely skyrocket in value.

NOBLITT

Some estimate the true value of the tax at more nearly $140 million than $50 million. Legislative budget advisor Frank Justice views the situation this way: Everybody wins except the state government which would be committed to make up the loss—local governments get that money; manufacturers escape the tax; and the federal government which has allowed payment of the inventory tax as a business deduction gets increased tax payments.

The Impact
Would repeal aid existing industries or help attract new ones?
There's no agreement on that. Some say most firms such as those producing consumer goods (textiles, apparel, furniture, tobacco which dominate in this state) have such rapid turnover they can come up with little inventory on hand on tax day. Besides, the tax is a deductible business expense and has little impact on the total business operation.

A study by the Institute of Government, for example, found that in the total tax picture, the inventory tax becomes negligible. Those who argue that this state loses prospects to South Carolina because of the tax overlook the fact that South Carolina's total property tax take is even higher than North Carolina's with the inventory tax counted in, that study demonstrates.

County commissioners and city officials are opposed to outright repeal without the money being replaced from state coffers. Simple repeal would result in raising all local property tax rates to cover the loss, they argue.

Still, the central argument has to do with future economic growth. What effect will the tax have on industrial development?

Heading For Disaster

House and Senate leaders have resumed their search this week for a satisfactory solution to the Social Security problem. They might as well have stayed home in recess. There is no satisfactory solution to the Social Security problem. The best that can be said of the various proposals is that some are less distasteful than others.

The general nature of the problem is well known. The Social Security system is now paying out more than it takes in. The fund went $12 billion in the hole in 1975 and $3.2 billion in the hole in 1976. This year's deficit is estimated at $5.6 billion. The long-term deficit, assuming present tax schedules go unchanged, is projected at $17 trillion over the next 75 years. In brief, the system is headed for disaster. Mr. Carter and the congressional leaders are on sound ground in seeking to do something now.

But what? Political realities have to be faced. The Congress cannot break faith with the 33 million men and women now receiving Social Security benefits. Most of them have arranged their lives in terms of dependency, in some degree, upon the monthly check. This is an obligation that has to be met.

The problem, looking to the future, is so to arrange revenues and disbursements that the program takes on some semblance of actuarial soundness.

On the revenue side, none of the alternatives is attractive. Mr. Carter has proposed to dip into the general fund in times of high unemployment, but neither the House nor the Senate has warmed to the prospect. Both Chambers are thinking instead of massive payroll tax increases on both employers and employees.

The Senate would get away from the system of equal taxes that has obtained for 40 years. By 1985, under this proposal, employers would be paying full Social Security taxes on an employee's salary up to $75,000 a year; the employee would pay on the first $33,900. In the House version, the principle of equal taxes would be retained, with significant increases in both the tax rate and the taxable wage base. One way or another, working people will get clobbered.

The House already has refused to take one step that should be taken to increase revenues. Federal, state and local employees — seven million of them — ought to be dragged into the Social Security system. Under the present system, virtually all of these public employees qualify for public pensions; vast numbers of them, by taking moonlight jobs, manage to pay minimal Social Security taxes and still reap maximum benefits also. Bringing them into Social Security would produce $12.5 billion in annual revenues.

On the disbursement side, proposed remedies are as painful. Privately, some influence members will concede that they know that ought to be done. The problem lies in screwing up the political courage to do it.

For example, it is generally acknowledged that the retirement age under Social Security should be raised from 65 to 67 or 68. Commerce Secretary Juanita Kreps advanced the thought some months ago, but such howls arose on the Hill that the thought was hastily shelved. If a new age limit were phased into the system over the next ten years, workers now in the 40s and 50s would have abundant time to adjust to the change.

For a second necessary step, Congress ought to decouple the regrettable combination of future increases now written into the law. Recipients may be entitled to automatic adjustment of benefits according to the cost of living, but they are not entitled to a second upward adjustment by reason of higher wage levels.

Let's hear it for Alf Landon. Dole was one of several presidential hopefuls at the Southern Republican Conference. Former Govs. Ronald Reagan of California and John B. Connally of Texas and Sen. Howard H. Baker of Tennessee also were there.

Dole was asked about the growing list of Republicans showing an interest in challenging President Carter in 1980.

"Alf Landon is looking at it and there may be others," he said.

40 Years Ago Today

November 20, 1937
President Roosevelt embarked on the yacht Potomac for a week of fishing around the Florida keys.

A warm sun broke through the mists as he was piped over the side of the 165-foot former Navy patrol boat, its sails manned by sailors in service whites.

Biscayne Bay fishermen said the coastal water was rough but about right for sail fishing.

Judge J. H. Clements of Winston-Salem opened a special criminal session of Pitt Superior court here, called primarily for the purpose of trying defendants caught in the recent campaign against illicit liquor and vice.

The round-up of alleged bootleggers and the persons engaged in or aiding and abetting in prostitution was conducted by agents of the National Bureau of Investigation of Wilmington. The ABC board contracted with the private agency to run down bootleggers in the county and the county commissions entered into a contract with the bureau to break-up other vice.

THE INSIDE REPORT

Carter Proves Flexible

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
WASHINGTON — The safety route taken by Jimmy Carter to rescue his presidency became clear Oct. 20 when he refused the advice of visiting liberal Democratic Senators on how to save his energy bill. The way to pass the bill, these kindly Senators advised President Carter, was to stop all further dealings with the impossible Sen. Russell B. Long of Louisiana. Sen. Howard Metzenbaum of Ohio deplored reported presidential agreements with Long on energy. Instead, the liberals said they should be the President's partner: stick with us who believe in your program instead of negotiating with the enemy even if he is chairman of the Senate Finance Committee.

Mr. Carter listened politely, denied any agreements with Long and suggested intimate after-dinner meetings with the liberal Senators. Those meetings never have taken place, but the President has conferred more than ever with Long and reached agreements. Indeed, he brought in trade negotiator Robert Strauss as a master maneuverer to help deal with Long. The result: the President has quietly faded from the energy battlefield and can expect passage of a bill that, if scarcely monumental, can be labeled a moderate success.

Similar withdrawals from hard positions have characterized the President's response to his crisis of competence that peaked in early October when a "one-term President" became the catchphrase of Washington. Besides avoiding confrontation with Russell Long, the President has pulled back from tax reform and his round-the-world trip and markedly softened his rhetoric.

That displays the flexibility of Jimmy Carter. Whereas Lyndon Johnson and Richard Nixon pushed doggedly through the quagmires of Vietnam and Watergate to inevitable destruction, Mr. Carter can tack with the winds. Consequently, even though the Carter presidency has hardly begun to solve internal problems of purpose and organization, the one-term label (now spread to the nation's grassroots) is grossly premature.

The President is an avid reader of polls, as were LBJ and Nixon. But unlike them, he acts on their results. So, at the time of his mounting problems in early October, pollster Pat Caddell was in the Oval Office for long sessions. Soon afterward, Mr. Carter began scaling down programs and broadening contacts.

It was then that Strauss, at the threshold of the Carter inner circle for months, was led inside. Even Carter aides who have minimized this relationship were impressed when on Sunday evening, Nov. 6, the President dined at the Strauss apartment in the Watergate. Insider Strauss, more and more a Gray Eminence for Jimmy Carter, had joined the President's youthful outsiders.

While Strauss was first put in charge of a dubious scheme to sell the energy plan to the nation, he has predictably evolved into a backroom negotiator with Congress. That is accompanied by softened presidential rhetoric in baiting big oil. The denunciation of his Oct. 13 ("biggest ripoff in history") press conference was transformed to the benign generalities in his Oct. 27 press conference.

Conduct followed rhetoric. The President is working closely not only with Sen. Long but with the oil industry's Washington lobbyists in drafting an energy compromise.

Other Editors Say Something Wrong

Henderson Dispatch
Senator Morgan believes there is unfairness in some aspects of Social Security and he wants something done about it. He and Senator Barry Goldwater are sponsoring a measure, for example, which removes penalties on the retired person if in retirement he finds other employment.

For every two dollars earned above $3,000 benefits, one dollar is deducted from benefits. That does not make sense, and the senators would have the penalty removed. However much merit there is in the proposal, it will have a long rocky road to travel in getting through Congress. The honorables may favor it, but it's just that House and Senate move painfully slowly on most measures which eventually come up for debate and voting.

Another thing wrong with the system is that taxes for its support are raised every year or so to support increased benefits. What is needed is to call a halt to that procedure and then pay out what is available and stop there. Social Security, in its inception, was never intended to provide complete living costs for beneficiaries, but only to supplement them.

The fly in the ointment is that the system has come to be a political football as a means of corraling votes from beneficiaries. It is recalled that President Roosevelt said when the system was imposed in 1937, forty years ago, that no one would ever pay more than $30 a year in taxes. Since then, however, benefits have been increased time after time so far above the original intent that amount of tax is insufficient.

In the early days, payments were met without difficulty. If it were returned to within reason the problem could be met and there would be no need for what Senator Morgan and Senator Goldwater are proposing. Congress is of no mind to that end, and there seems to be no stopping point as to how far it will go in the search for votes at election time. But don't hold your breath until that happens.

The Consensus: No Recession

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — There is a consensus among economic forecasters for 1978, and raised in bold relief above all other components are the words: No recession.

"The excesses and imbalances which in the past have signaled the approach of a cumulating downward adjustment are simply not present," is the way it was put by J. Robert Ferrari, Prudential Insurance chief economist.

The details:
—Expansion, inflation omitted, is expected to average between 4 percent and 5 percent, falling off late in the year. The latest rate is about 4.8 percent.
—Inflation may average a little higher than this year, somewhere between 6 percent and 7 percent, compared to about 6.5 percent for 1977. The chances seem to be high that 1978 will be a mirror image of 1977 in regard to prices. This year the trend of increases was down as the year matured; next year, prices might rise as the year progresses.

—Unemployment might decline, but only slightly, to about 6.5 percent, compared with a current rate of about 6.7 percent or 6.8 percent.

—Consumer spending should continue to be fairly strong, but no stronger than this year.

—Personal income, after taxes, seems likely to grow fairly strongly, as it did in 1977.

There are warnings in the forecast consensus, but there always are. Sometimes there are spots on the telescope; and images become blurred as the forecaster peers deeper and deeper into economic space.

—Because of the latter, there is a tendency by some forecasters to give tentative warnings about a possible recession to begin very late in 1978 or in 1979. Not a severe one; instead, one seen mainly as a consequence of the expansion's age.

—Capital spending by industry is expected to pick up sometime during the year, but not quite to the level of 1977, which itself was a poor year. Uncertainty hurt it this year; that uncertainty should be gradually dispelled in 1978.

—Inflationary pressures are built into the 1978 economy. Energy legislation, a higher minimum wage and almost certainly higher food prices are expected to keep pressure on household and corporate budgets.

The uncertainties about which the forecasters complain this year are not so much in the economic as the legislative area. What will be the shape of the energy bill? Will there be a tax cut? Not only are the forecasters unable to answer these questions, but they are not certain about the resulting impact.

Still, almost to a man, they foresee no unexpected turns to the economy in 1978. The other side of the coin is that they do not expect any sudden good news to add any great strength to the expansion.

Most decline to use the word recession when speaking about the weakening they expect late in 1978, but for the reason that they are limiting their views to 1978 alone.

After that? Well, that's next year's forecast.

Strength For Today

CONSERVATIVES AND LIBERALS
Most people do not like to be called conservatives. Many feel that this designation means that they are behind the times. "Liberal," on the other hand, seems to carry the connotation of active, creative, innovative thinking.

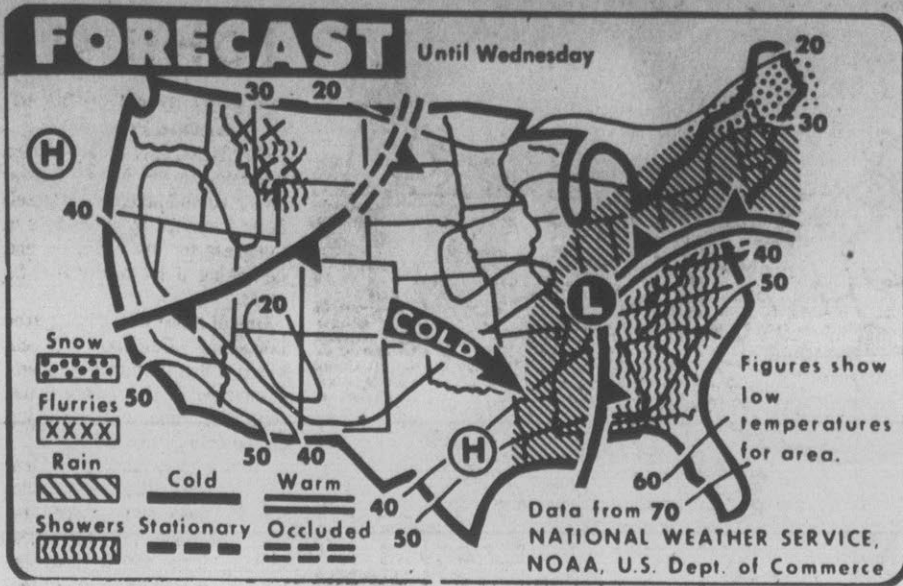

Yet in the long run societies usually come back to the conservative position. History seems to demonstrate that liberalism usually serves as a corrective to conservatism. In this connection liberalism has a very important role to play in society.

Usually conservatives dominate governments. Sometimes this leads to outdated and archaic administration, but in many cases it gives a rational continuity to government by providing links with the past. Drawing on past experience provides a conservative element to the thinking of all of us, regardless of what ideological label we attach to ourselves.

How's The Weather?

WEATHER FORECAST — Rain and showers are forecast today for the East. Snow is expected in northern New England. Snow flurries and showers are due for the northern Rockies and adjacent Plains. Most of the country is expected to be cold. (AP Laserphoto Map)

By The Associated Press
An area of rain that stretched from Texas to Ohio bore down on North Carolina today while a front was stationary just to the south of the state, setting the stage for cooler temperatures and rain.
Rain already had begun in the mountains by early today and by tonight it is expected to become heavy. As a result, mountain residents were advised to stay alert to weather statements.

The rain is expected to spread eastward over the entire state tonight and Wednesday and the mountains, still reeling from recent floods, can look for continued heavy rains Wednesday.
High temperatures today were expected to hold to the 50s. Warmer readings are predicted for Wednesday with 70s in the southeast and 60s elsewhere.

Claims Golf, Bowling Not Strenuous Enough

By ALTON BLAKESLEE
AP Science Editor
MIAMI (AP) — Really strenuous exercise is good medicine for your heart, but sports like golf and bowling aren't enough, a new study finds.
The study also indicates that a high amount of energy spent each week in physical activity, including walking, could provide some insurance against premature heart attacks.
Spending a high total amount of energy and calories is significant, especially in exercises that demand bursts of energy output, says Dr. Ralph S. Paffenbarger Jr. of the University of California at Berkeley.

But the risk of heart attacks was lower for men engaging in "strenuous sports," while "casual" sports seemed to have no influence, Paffenbarger said.
Among strenuous sports, he listed swimming and running, basketball, handball and squash. "Casual" sports included golf, bowling, baseball, softball and volleyball.
As for tennis, he said it depends on how it is played.

Next came postponement and drastic pruning of the madcap world tour and, more important, the decision to hold back tax reform. Still infatuated with his campaign rhetoric, the President was the last holdout on tax reform. But he too now is swayed by arguments on the necessity for quick tax reduction which would be impeded by major tax reform.
Such decisions do not go to the inner causes of the Carter crisis of competence. His White House staff remains weak and disorganized, in need of a chief of staff. One result was the dreadfully organized coast-to-coast trip in October, just when he did not need such ludicrous exposure, and what one administration official called "that ridiculous trip" around the world.
More telling is the lack of theme in his administration reflected in public confusion and poor internal morale. Carter men wistfully note that former aides of John F. Kennedy 14 years later still wear PT-109 tieclaps and talk about "our administration." Such camaraderie is sadly absent in the Carter administration — partly the lack of personal relationships with the President, partly the lack of any common goal. Here is the source of future difficulties.
This failure may stem from President Carter's flexibility, but the same flexibility is his saving virtue. Disorganized and rudderless though his administration may be, he will not follow disastrous policies to ruin. He has emerged from his competence crisis as a President who can abandon tax reform, soften oil-baiting rhetoric and certainly deal with Russell Long.

HAVE YOU WRITTEN A BOOK?
Mr. Herbert Gilbert, the executive editor of a well-known New York subsidy publishing firm will be interviewing local authors in a quest for finished manuscripts suitable for book publication. All subjects will be considered, including fiction and non-fiction, poetry, juveniles, religion, philosophy, etc.
He will be in Greenville in late January.
If you have completed a book-length manuscript (or nearly so) on any subject, and would like a professional appraisal (without cost or obligation), please write immediately and describe your work. State whether you would prefer a morning, afternoon, or evening appointment, and kindly mention your phone number. You will receive a confirmation by mail for a definite time and place.
Authors with completed manuscripts unable to appear may send them directly to us for a free reading and evaluation. We will also be glad to hear from those whose literary works are still in progress.

For weeks, the energy conferences have been the only show on Capitol Hill. While many lawmakers were pursuing congressional business in the far corners of the earth, the conferences sought vainly to resolve differences between House and Senate versions of energy legislation.
As if their task wasn't frustrating enough, Sen. Wendell Ford, D-Ky., complained one day that he was unable to find a parking space in the vicinity of the Rayburn House Office Building.
"Those representing the administration had all their black limousines out there with chauffeurs," said Ford. "Those of us driving our own cars had no place to park."

At another session of one of the conference committees, Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich., sought to delay action on an item. "That's an interesting proposal. I would like to reflect soberly on it," said Dingell.
"Not me," shot back Rep. Thomas L. Ashley, D-Ohio.
Rep. Robert Bauman, R-Md., says he supports the idea of televising House sessions. But his colleagues who heard Bauman relate his conversation with a London cab driver might wonder about the Maryland congressman's motives.
Bauman said that on a recent trip to London he asked a cab driver what he thought of Parliament.
"I never knew what a bunch of bloody baboons ran this country until they put the show on the radio recently," replied the cabbie.

ACC Claims 3 More Wins

By The Associated Press
The Atlantic Coast Conference remained undefeated Monday night, as three ACC teams bested non-conference opponents.

The stakes may have been highest for 14th ranked Maryland, which had to move quickly in the closing minutes to beat Georgetown, 91-87, for the Tip Off Tournament championship.

Freshman Greg Manning sank two free throws with four seconds remaining to keep the victory safe. It had been Manning's offensive foul and a traveling violation which gave the Hoyas a chance to rally in the closing minutes, narrowing the gap to 89-87 with 37 seconds remaining.

The Terps are now 3-0. Bill Bryant led scoring with 26 points. Highly-touted freshman Albert King added 22. Craig Shelton led Georgetown with 25.

Wake Forest didn't have to work quite as hard for its 94-74 victory over Oregon State in Winston-Salem, but Deacon Coach Carl Tacy still wasn't entirely pleased with his team's performance.

"The whole setting was wrong," he said. "Oregon State's losing to UNC (last Saturday) by so many points set up a feeling that was uncontrollable. We just didn't feel like they'd give us that much trouble and we really didn't take it seriously enough."

But Tacy was pleased with the playing of center Larry Harrison, who ended the game with 21 points.

"That's the kind of play that you'll be seeing from Harrison all year," Tacy said. "I expect him to perform just as well the rest of the season as he has in his first two outings."

Forward Leroy McDonald led scoring for the 17th-ranked Deacons with 35 points.

One of the most interested observers of Wake's performance wasn't on hand in Winston-Salem. Norm Sloan was busy coaching his North Carolina State Wolfpack to a 98-80 victory over Georgia Southern.

But Sloan had his mind on Wake Forest and this weekend's Big Four tournament. "I'm anxious to see us against Wake, a nationally-ranked team," Sloan said.

The Wolfpack had to struggle against the Eagles for most of the first half, but Tony Warren, Tiny Pinder and Hawkeye Whitney broke things open in the second period, which began with the Pack ahead 45-38.

Warren led scoring with 26 points. Pinder had 20 and Whitney added 19. Freshman Kenny Matthews had 14.

"I thought Glenn Sudhop showed some flashes of really good play and Kenny Matthews has done a fine job as a freshman," said Sloan, whose team is now 2-0.

Only one ACC team sees action tonight. Duke will be hosting Washington College.

Pirate Wrestlers See Good Season Ahead

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

The East Carolina University wrestling team has gotten off to a good start, and although it is a young unit, its new coach, Bill Hill, has high hopes for another successful year.

Hill, who wrestled at East Carolina as an undergraduate, has taken over the program from John Welborn, who gave up his coaching duties to work as assistant athletic director. And he inherits a good group, but has also brought in some fine freshmen.

"I think we'll have a pretty good group, but it's a young team," Hill said. "We have only one senior."

"We have a tough schedule, and not being in a conference this year is going to make it harder to qualify for the nationals," he added.

The Pirates do have the opportunity to get into the national NCAA tournament, but will have to go through the Eastern Regionals this time. In the past, while part of the Southern Conference, the Pirates qualified individual members of the team by winning weight titles in the league.

"This will make it tougher, because the competition will be a lot tougher," Hill added.

The new coach said he felt recruiting had not been made tougher by the upsurge in wrestling among other schools in the area, but competition is better now. "This really works to our advantage. We can recruit people now just because of the good competition they know that they'll be facing." Among that competition this year are the improved teams at North Carolina and N.C. State, both of whom will face the Pirates twice each this winter, both in Greenville and on their own campuses.

Hill's charges have already had some competition against these teams, in the Carolina Invitational last week. "We got six to the finals, and I think we did very well. We might have done a little better, but Paul Osman, one of our top people, was out. Still, I'm happy with the outcome. State, Carolina and our team are all about equal. Both should give us a good match."

"We've really got a tough one this weekend, though," Hill added. The Pirates travel to Bethlehem, Pa., to face Lehigh, ranked eighth in pre-season; Oregon State, ranked fourth, and tough East Stroudsburg in a four-way meet. "This will be the best competition we'll face all year. I think we have the toughest schedule we've ever had."

But despite the schedule, Hill feels the Pirates will do well. A rundown of the weights and the top people in each class was given by Hill.

Freshman Bob Passino will handle the 118-pound class, with either Teddy Caudle, a sophomore, or John Koenigs, a sophomore, at 126. "We're still kinda undecided here," Hill said.

Osman, the lone senior on the team, returns to handle the 134-pound class.

A junior, James Kirby, wrestles the 142 level, with sophomore Frank Schaefer at 150. Steve Goode, a sophomore, returns at 158, with Vic Northrop, a junior, at 167.

"We have two real good wrestlers at 177 in Jay Dever (sophomore) and Butch Revils (freshman)," Hill said.

Ronnie Goodall, a sophomore, and Barry Purser, a junior, are the top people at 190, while junior D.T. Joyner returns at heavyweight.

"This basically will be it," Hill said. "Injuries could hurt us a lot. We don't have a lot of depth except for some young guys who are coming along, but not quite ready yet."

Without a conference title to shoot for, the team is setting its sights on getting as many people qualified for the nationals through the Easterns as possible. "A conference title does give you a little more to shoot for, but I guess all of our teams are having the same problems this year in not having that."

Jaguars Pace All-Conference

Farmville Central's Eastern Carolina Conference champions dominated the All-Conference selections announced yesterday.

Farmville landed six players on the 25-man squad, and Gene Brewer, the Jaguar coach, was selected as Coach of the Year.

Brewer, whose team had a 10-2 record this year, has guided the Jaguars to two consecutive Eastern Carolina Conference titles, and is the only ECC coach to record victories in post-season play. He has won three league titles in the past four years, and currently has a 15-game winning streak in league play.

Players named to the team from Farmville include seniors Scott Evans, Woody Edwards and Rufus Mayo; junior Donald Freeman; and sophomores Donald and Ronald Reid.

Ayden-Grifton placed five men on the team. They are juniors David Smith and Jolly Dail, and seniors Ricky Harris, Terry Morris, and Mike Teachey.

Four Greene Central players were named. They are seniors Jay Carraway and Shea McLawhorn, and juniors James Best and Charles Lewis.

Two each were named from D.H. Conley and North Pitt. Vikings picked were Tim McClanahan and Nuggie Worthington, both seniors, while Sam Mayo, a senior, and William Knight, a junior, were picked from the Panther squad.

Others named were seniors Levrone Davis and Roosevelt Joseph and junior Wayne Jackson of North Lenoir; seniors Shelton Robinson and Rex Pennington of C.B. Aycock, and junior Andre Crawley of Southern Nash.

Honorable mention went to Willie Perkins and Paul Settiff of Ayden-Grifton; Don Jones, Randy Jones and Charles Whitley of C.B. Aycock; Randy Edens, Kenny Phillips and Mike Phillips of D.H. Conley; Walter Blow, Len Hunt, Phillip Gordon of Farmville; Russell Brann, Dwight Butler and Donald Shaw of Greene Central; Dennis Turnage, Amos Pearce and Dexter Waters of North Lenoir; Calvin Carmack of North Pitt; and Donnie Alston, Thomas Daniels and Daniel Harris of Southern Nash.

Georgia Tech Rallies By UNCW

ATLANTA (AP) — "They didn't surprise us," said Coach Dwane Morrison of Georgia Tech. "We knew they were good."

Morrison had just steered his Yellow Jackets to their second straight victory of the college basketball season, a 76-67 triumph over North Carolina-Wilmington in which Tech had to overcome a three-point half-time deficit.

Sam Drummer took care of the problem, however, hitting 20 of his game-high 28 points in the second half, and Tico Brown chipped in with 21 for the night.

Denny Field led the Seahawks with 20 points and the Martin brothers, Bobby and Billy, finished with 13 and 12, respectively.

"Wake Forest said they've got one fine team, and you'd better be ready when you play them," Morrison said.

Jags Take Mat Win

KINSTON — Farmville Central's wrestling team came up with six pins to win its first match of the season, a 48-21 victory over Kinston last night.

The Jags won the first four weight classes by pins with Lonnie Graham at 98, Charlie Moore at 105, Joe Ebron at 112 and Jeff Ebron at 119. Morris Williams added a pin victory at 138 and Chris Sutton won by pin for the Jaguars at 155.

Summary:
98—Lonnie Graham (FC) pinned Richard Albritton, 2:45
105—Charlie Moore (FC) pinned Ronnie Cherry, 5:00
112—Joe Ebron (FC) pinned Mike Hamilton, 0:18

Virginia Tech Fires Sharpe

BLACKSBURG, Va. (AP) — Jimmy Sharpe, who compiled a 21-22-1 record in four years as football coach at Virginia Tech, has been fired with four years left on his contract in what is reportedly the first step in a wholesale shakeup of the school's athletic department.

There were unconfirmed reports the school would announce the retirement today of Frank Moseley, athletic director the last 27 years and the man who brought Sharpe to Tech in 1974.

The Monday announcement of the firing of the 38-year-old Sharpe, whose contract had been extended just last year, was made by Virginia Tech President William E. Lavery. It immediately touched off a storm of criticism from the football team, 18 of whose 22 starters are scheduled to return next year.

"The majority of the players want to take a hike away from here," said Mickey Fitzgerald, a 250-pound sophomore who gained 513 yards and scored seven touchdowns after being converted from tight end to fullback for Tech's last four games.

Sharpe, whose final season resulted in a 3-7-1 record with victories in the last two games, was the subject of controversy even before the campaign began.

Some alumni complained he was intoxicated at an Aug. 4 dinner meeting in the Roanoke area. When news of the affair leaked out, he met with Lavery and was given a mild vote of confidence.

But Lavery said Monday that despite Sharpe's "energy and enthusiasm and his drive to build a successful program, ... in the best interest of the university and its intercollegiate athletic program, I do not believe we have a viable alternative."

Sharpe, who had denied he was intoxicated at the Roanoke meeting, told the Bristol Herald-Courier early today he was told by Lavery that "I didn't fit the image of the university."

"He told me that he had decided to make a change and asked me to resign, which I refused to do. I didn't teach my players to quit and I won't quit, so he fired me."

Lavery was not available to expand on the prepared statement he issued, but there were reports he offered to pay Sharpe's assistants until June 1, 1978, if Sharpe resigned. If he didn't, they would be terminated Jan. 1, 1978.

Reportedly, the assistants told Sharpe not to resign, so he was fired. Lavery said the school would honor the remainder of the coach's contract.

Members of the Tech squad met Monday night with Lavery, and the seniors later issued a statement saying the president had promised them before the Kentucky game that Sharpe would return next season.

All the players said they felt the alumni were behind Lavery's decision.

"The heavy bucks (big contributors to the athletic program) talked, and he listened," said Fitzgerald.

After playing football under Bear Bryant at Alabama, Sharpe remained there 11 years as an assistant before succeeding Charlie Coffey at Tech. After a 4-7 record his first year, he went 8-3 and 6-5 and got a four-year extension on his contract.

SAYS SOCCER TOPS

NEW YORK (AP) — All of a sudden soccer is drawing big league crowds. Phil Woosnam, the commissioner of the North American Soccer League, was moved to an extravagant claim by the size of the turnouts, especially to see the Cosmos, the league champions, play at Giants Stadium in the Meadowlands complex in New Jersey.

Hurting Stabler Leads Oakland Past Buffalo

By ERIC PREWITT
AP Sports Writer

OAKLAND (AP) — Thanks to Oakland quarterback Ken Stabler, there was more drama than anyone could expect from a late-season game between the Super Bowl champion Raiders and lowly Buffalo Bills.

"He's a tough guy," Coach John Madden said in a terse appraisal of the left-hander who operated on one sore knee but didn't show it, passing for three touchdowns in Monday night's 34-13 Oakland victory.

"The knee hurt the whole game, but I expected that. It was like a headache, it just throbbled all the time," said Stabler.

It wasn't certain until just before gametime that Stabler, injured eight days earlier in a 12-7 loss to the San Diego Chargers, would be starting.

"It was up in the air all week," said Madden, who watched Stabler closely in pregame warmups before settling on him as the starter.

At the same time last season, when the Raiders already had clinched a division title, Stabler no doubt would have taken a night off. But they're running second to Denver in the AFC West now and, despite making their record 9-2 Monday night, it's very likely the Raiders will be going into the playoffs as the most respected wild card team in National Football League history.

When Stabler trotted onto the field for the first time, the Oakland fans greeted him with the kind of cheer George Blanda used to hear when he was coming on to win games a few years back.

A few minutes later, Stabler was on his back. He took a punishing, head-on shot from Bills defensive tackle Mike Kadish an instant after releasing the ball on a 38-yard completion to running back Clarence Davis.

"There was a mixup in the blocking on that play. It didn't happen again," said Raiders defensive tackle Art Shell.

"We didn't have to pass too often in the game. That helped," said guard George Buehler.

"The Raiders beat us with the big play," said defensive end Sherman White, who worked across from Shell and guard Gene Upshaw and said, "they both played great games."

Stabler completed seven of 12 passes for 166 yards, with his touchdown passes going 28 and 12 yards to Cliff Branch and 44 to Fred Biletnikoff. Mark van Eeghen's 143 yards rushing, giving him 1,011 for the season, led the ground attack, which rolled up 307 yards, and Pete Banaszak punched into the end zone for his 50th and 51st career touchdowns.

The Bills, who have lost O.J. Simpson to a knee injury and nine of their 11 games this year, stayed in the game for a while with a one-dimensional offense. Quarterback Joe Ferguson threw 43 passes, completing 18 including a 29-yard, second period touchdown toss to John Kimbrough, but gained only 65 yards rushing.

Bob Chandler caught nine of Ferguson's passes for 120 yards.

Kentucky Bumps Heels Off Top In Cage Poll

By The Associated Press
North Carolina, the No. 1 team in The Associated Press pre-season college basketball poll, won and lost Saturday.

The Tar Heels whipped Oregon State 94-63 but dropped to No. 2 behind Kentucky, the second-ranked pre-season team, which trounced Southern Methodist 110-86.

Results of the first regular-season voting by a nationwide panel of sports writers and sportscasters today gave Kentucky 29 first-place votes and 988 points to 20 first-place ballots and 969 points for North Carolina.

Notre Dame and Marquette, Nos. 3 and 4, respectively, each got two first-place votes. Notre Dame, a 111-62 winner over Mississippi, got 756 points while defending NCAA champion Marquette, which did not play, got 675. The voting reversed the rankings of the two teams in the pre-season poll.

San Francisco, which beat San Francisco State 100-67, remained fifth, and UCLA, which beat Brigham Young 75-73 and Seattle 107-73 over the weekend, held onto sixth place. UCLA received the only other first-place vote.

Arkansas was ranked seventh after beating Southwest Missouri State 65-47. Cincinnati beat Akron 91-81 and moved from ninth to eighth. Louisville advanced to No. 9 although it did not play, while Nevada-Las Vegas fell from No. 8 to 10th after edging Northwest Louisiana 85-80.

The second 10, in order, were: Purdue, Syracuse, Michigan, Maryland, Alabama, St. John's of New York, Holy Cross, Wake Forest, Detroit and Utah.

Utah was a newcomer to the poll. The only team to drop out was Minnesota, which was No. 16 before losing 62-55 to South Carolina.

Texas Holds To First On Poll

By JACK KEEVER
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Texas celebrated its final regular season No. 1 ranking in The Associated Press poll Monday by eating Texas Aggie cake while Coach Fred Akers fumed over a Dallas motel bumping the unbeaten Longhorns a notch below their Jan. 2 opponent — Notre Dame's Fighting Irish.

The Longhorns garnered 49 first-place votes and 1,124 points. Second-place Oklahoma, which lost to Texas 13-6 earlier this season, received five first-place ballots and 940 points.

Notre Dame was fifth and received one first-place vote, as did third-place Alabama and No. 7 Kentucky. Michigan finished fourth in the balloting.

About the national ranking, Akers said, "It's nice but the one that counts is the one after the Cotton Bowl."

jack and West won cheaply with the queen. He cashed the ace of spades, but now he was forced to lead a diamond. Declarer ruffed in dummy and discarded his remaining spade. Now he led the nine of spades for a ruffing finesse, intending to discard his club loser if East did not play the king.

East covered with the king and declarer ruffed. He was able to get back to dummy with a trump and discard his club loser on the eight of spades, so the contract rolled home.

A good case can be made for East to rise with the king of spades when that suit was first led from dummy. He could then cash a club, and the defenders would still have to get a second spade trick for the setting trick.

However, we can advance a stronger argument that West should have avoided the endplay by winning the ace of spades first and exiting with the queen. In view of such an unusual play, it should be clear to East that he must overtake his partner's queen and cash his winning club to defeat the contract.

We have a tendency to hoard our valuables. That can prove expensive at the bridge table.

South should take some balancing action after West's three diamond preempt gets passed round to him, but we have some doubts about whether the hand is quite good enough to double. We slightly prefer three hearts. However, the final contract would probably have been the same.

West led the ten of clubs, and declarer made the technically correct play of holding up the ace. Declarer won the club continuation and successfully finessed the queen of diamonds. After drawing two rounds of trumps, declarer cashed the king and ace of trumps and ace of diamonds, then led a spade. When East played low, declarer inserted the

Gorshin Left California's Clime For Slush And Rain And Change

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — In recent years, this town has filled up with expatriate New Yorkers who work in TV and constantly gripe you can't get good corn beef on rye anywhere in Beverly Hills.

But Frank Gorshin, the impressionist, actor, comic and singer, isn't one of them. In fact, after living here 22 years, he packed up his family last August and moved to Greenwich, Conn.

Greenwich isn't far from Fun City. It's mainly known as the place to which New York advertising executives take the 5:40 train each evening. If the train is running.

Why did Gorshin, 43, move out East?
"I don't know," said he, here recently to tape an NBC "Just For Laughs" special, act in a "Wonder Woman" chapter and appear in a CBS salute — to air Dec. 1 — to Elizabeth Taylor.

"I guess I just got tired of the sun day after day. I wanted slush and rain and stuff." He commenced laughing about this odd desire.

"There's a lot of truth to it, because I'm on the road a lot and see different parts of the country at different times of the year. But when I come back here, the weather's always the same.

"It gets boring. I don't want to put the place down, but after 22 years here I miss all those seasons."

Another factor in his East Coast move: He likes to act. Living here close to the film industry may sound ideal, "but I wasn't getting to do as much of it (acting) as I'd like to," he said.

"And it's kind of frustrating. So I thought maybe if I get away from it, it might give me a healthier state of mind."

Gorshin, a Pittsburgh native who began his career at age 17, is well-known for his night club impressions of big stars. At least 50 are in his mimic's portfolio, from James Cagney to Lee Marvin.

Alas, the fame is a mixed blessing. He says producers and directors, unless they're fans and know he can act, sometimes are hesitant to offer him roles not involving impressions.

"They may be afraid that if they had me on a show, I'm going to do Kirk Douglas or Burt Lancaster," he mused.

Gorshin, who recently began a new role as a non-impressionistic spokesman on TV for RCA's new line of home video recorders, was asked about one of his most memorable acting parts in television.

That, of course, was as "The Riddler," the cackling loony of ABC's famed "Batman" series of the '60s. Has his enduring identification with the character hindered his career?
"No. I don't think so," he opined. "I've certainly done enough different things as an actor. And I actually think it's helped me because it's still in reruns around the country."

"I do a pretty clean (night club) show. I don't do any blue material. And families aren't afraid to bring their kids. So I'm always reaching new kids because of the reruns."

"And they all want to come and see the Riddler."

City Engineer

LOCK HAVEN, Pa. (AP) — City Engineer Richard Marcinkevage found himself in charge of this city of 11,500 because the city manager, police chief and other officials just couldn't pass the buck.

City Manager Frank Taggart, Public Works Director Richard Ardner, Police Chief Joseph Sanders and Street Commissioner William Burk all left town Monday to try their luck at bagging a buck on the opening of Pennsylvania's deer season.

The officials said they planned to return to their jobs later in the week.

Cheered Over Coal Stockpile

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Spokesmen for Carolina Power & Light Co. and Duke Power Co. said Monday they are cautiously optimistic about having adequate coal supplies to weather a predicted coal miners strike.

Virginia Electric and Power Co. officials said they had a 75 to 90-day supply of coal at each coal-fired plant.

The two other companies reported having stockpiled 90-day supplies of coal.

The United Mine Workers contract expires Dec. 6, and both sides have predicted a strike.

Pitt County sheriff's deputy Jack Moore testified at an earlier hearing that Barber told him he had been dealing in drugs and killed the two men after they refused to pay him for 15 pounds of drugs and tried to take 10 pounds more by force.

Barber was arrested in Abilene, Kan., after being wounded in a shootout with police at a motel.

Judge Herbert Small of Elizabeth City, presiding over the Carteret County Superior Court session, sentenced Barber to life imprisonment on one of the charges and 10 years on the other.

The sentence had been agreed upon in a plea-bargain session before the sentencing. The judge did not specify which sentence went with which charge.

Today's Cryptoquip clue: M equals A

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Bluebird Ranks Are Increasing

WASHINGTON (AP) — Bluebirds, once in danger of extinction, are increasing their numbers thanks to the efforts of Dr. Lawrence Zeleny's program of conservation, according to the National Geographic Society.

Zeleny has sponsored the placement of nesting boxes along trails in the United States and Canada since 1966, when he retired. There are now hundreds of the boxes, including those on a 2,000-mile trail in Canada.

Eastern bluebirds have declined in population as much as 90 percent over the past four decades because of threats from rival birds like starlings and house sparrows and because humans have destroyed their natural nesting places — wooden posts and dead trees, Geographic reports.

The FARM SCENE

By Michael E. Regans
One thing you notice at this time of year when you walk into a hog building or pasture is hogs rubbing against fence posts, walls or feeders. It's because of an increase in lice and mange infestations. Cooler temperatures provide more favorable breeding conditions for lice and mange mites. The cooler temperatures, also, make transfer from animal to animal easier as they crowd together for warmth.

Hog producers need to develop the habit of making careful checks, at least once a month, to detect early signs of external parasite infestation. Lice are most easily noticed around the head and neck. Mange mites are harder to detect because they burrow into the skin.

A control program for lice and mange should be used in order that hogs spend his time at the feeder rather than at the fence post. External parasites also transmit disease.

The most effective control program includes: (1) chemical treatment of infested animals and facilities; (2) prevention of reinfestation; and (3) good sanitation practices.

Lice and mange mites can be controlled at the same time if a chemical effective against both is used. Lindane and malathion are such chemicals. Formulations recommended are as follows: Lindane—.5 pt. 20 percent emulsifiable concentrate to 25 gal. of water; Malathion 1 qt. 57 percent c.c. to 25 gal. of water. These chemicals are most effective when applied with a high pressure sprayer at a rate of at least 2 quarts of finished spray per animal. A non-foaming detergent (.25 lb. to 25 gal. of spray) may be added to the spray to help maintain coverage. Be sure the entire animal is covered paying special attention to insides of ears and scabby areas. The high pressure is necessary because as mentioned earlier, the mange mites burrow into the skin tissue. Treatment should be repeated in 7 to 10 days. Pigs less than 3 months old should not be treated with lindane and pigs less than 1 month old should not be treated with malathion. To prevent small pigs from becoming infested, spray the sows about 30 days before farrowing. It should be noted that lindane should not be used within 30 days of slaughter.

The prevention phase of the control program involves treating boars and other animals to be introduced into the herd before putting them in contact with the herd. Treating every animal in your herd, except for the young pigs, on a regular basis is the best prevention measure.

Large populations of lice and mange mites develop on poorly fed animals that are kept in unsanitary pens and houses. Thorough cleaning and disinfecting is a must for lice and mange control.

Let's get the jump on the lice and mange and start your control program today.

IN A COMA

CHICAGO (AP) — Actor Cyril Ritchard's condition has stabilized after he slipped into a coma. A hospital spokesman said Ritchard's condition had been unstable until he lost consciousness. The 78-year-old actor is reported still in critical condition in the coronary unit.

Spending For Gadgets, Needs

By The Associated Press
Christmas shoppers are splitting their spending this year between electronic gadgets like video games and cold-weather necessities like warm clothes, according to retailers who say they expect a good selling season.

Only one store manager contacted in an Associated Press spot check mentioned the selective strike by East and Gulf coast longshoremen and he said it had caused no serious problems. The buying generally started the day after Thanksgiving.

Herb Glaser, executive vice president of J.L. Hudson Co. department store in Detroit, said about 3,500 to 4,000 children went through the line to see Santa Claus on Friday. The number was 1,000 to 1,500 higher than the same day in 1976.

Glaser said the memory of last winter's cold, combined with snow on Friday and over the weekend, helped sales of heavy outer clothing. He reported a big rush for knit goods like scarves and gloves. For the home, the best early sellers were video games and food-processing items, Glaser said.

Chuck Huskinson, operations manager at J.C. Penney's in Salt Lake City, said sales were "much better than last year, quite a bit better." The most popular items? Luxury goods like stereos, video games and cameras — "especially cameras."

In Schaumburg, a Chicago suburb, Sears store manager John P. Maloney said: "Sales are going very well for us. Crowds were much larger than we expected." He said customers alternated between luxury goods — "Video games are very big again this year" — and practical things — light-weight irons, women's boots and garage door openers.

For some shoppers, money apparently is no object. "It's amazing the number of gold rings, diamonds and watches we're selling. Cameras and stereos also are doing very well," said Bernie Gordon, general manager for four JAFCO department stores in the Seattle area.

A spokesman for Lazarus, Columbus' biggest department store, said expensive items like furs and video tape recording systems at around $1,000 each were going well.

This year's gimmick gift, according to the Lazarus spokesman, may be toilet tissue printed with crossword puzzles. "It seems like an item that could catch on," he said, but added, "There's no single (gimmick) item that stands out like the pet rock of a couple years ago."

A cold weekend in Atlanta — temperatures in the 20s — boosted sales of outerwear and sweaters. "The weather was most cooperative," said a spokesman for Davison's, describing Thanksgiving weekend sales as record breaking. In addition to the warm clothing, the spokesman said people were buying "luxury goods, from fine jewelry and furs to TV recorders."

More Land Considered For A Wilderness Area

ASHEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — More than 200,000 acres of western North Carolina is being considered by the U.S. Forestry Service for inclusion in 19 new "wilderness areas," and local officials and businessmen are unhappy about it.

Timber cutting, mining, galax leaf harvesting and other mountain industries has been halted in the areas and the ban will be made permanent if the Forestry Service decides to keep them in their natural state.

Congress ordered the creation of wilderness areas in 1964 to provide natural retreats for city dwellers who need to get away from it all. But affected industries say that setting aside timber lands would be a costly decision.

"On 207,000 acres of forest land you have 30 million board feet of lumber produced each year," said Tom Thrash, president of Western North Carolina Pallet Co. at Candler.

"Taking that out of production, you'd cut out four milling companies the size of mine. We employ 200 persons in our plant and in the woods, and our payroll is about $600,000 a year," he added. "Multiply that by four and you can see some of the impact."

"Multiply that by four and you can see some of the impact."

Bill Davis of Bryson City, a forestry consultant, says that curtailing production of hardwoods in the region could seriously hamper the North Carolina furniture industry, costing still more jobs.

"I don't go with the wilderness concept at all," he said. "I think we should go the other way."

N.C. National Forests Supervisor George Olsen said all timber cutting, road building, firewood cutting or other activities in any of these areas is now stopped until a final decision is made on whether they will become wilderness or not.

This has disturbed people in Clay County.

"We've always been against making any part of Clay County a wilderness," said Tom Day, chairman of the Clay County Rural Development Authority. "Traditionally this has been a county which gets much of its income from timber and pulpwood."

Around 49 per cent of Clay County is owned by the U.S. Forestry Service, he said. If this area were locked out from normal forest usage, Clay would be hurt financially, he predicted.

Davis agrees. Swain, Macon and Clay would all be hurt, he said.

Cites Symbols Of Heritage

Bishop Alfred G. Dunston of the Fourth Episcopal District, A.M.E. Zion Church, said Saturday that the hope of the world lies with black Americans recognizing the essence of nationhood and passing it on to leaders of the Christian religion.

Dunston spoke at the 114th annual conference of the North Carolina Conference which met at St. Augustus Church, Nov. 22-27.

Bishop Dunston discussed the quadrennial district motto, "But ye are a chosen generation, a Royal Priesthood, a Holy Nation, a peculiar people..." The theme was taken from 1 Peter 2:9.

Dunston said that blacks in America "embraced the tenets of the Christian religion, because they had a yearning in their hearts, motivated by a desire to enjoy the fruits of life."

He added that American blacks are "symbols of a rich heritage, imbued by a burning desire to improve mankind, through dedication to the rights of all people."

FORECAST FOR WEDNESDAY, NOV. 30, 1977

Your Daily HOROSCOPE

from the CARROLL RIGHTER INSTITUTE

GENERAL TENDENCIES: This is a good time to think about building a better foundation for your creative ideas and what to do with your spare time. A man of influence can aid you with your projects.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19): Do whatever will raise your level of consciousness. Do not be fooled by the flattery of others.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20): Improve home conditions so they reflect more of your own good taste. Study new projects that present themselves and choose the best of these.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): Be more thoughtful of friends you truly enjoy and gain their added favors. Take a short trip that can be beneficial to you.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): Get into the monetary side of your affairs and make better arrangements for the future. If in doubt about anything, get the advice you need from experts.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21): Solve personal problems in a most intelligent way. Out to the social affairs you like and add worthwhile persons to your roster of friends.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22): You have annoying situations in your life but are able to get rid of them now. Accomplish much now.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22): Talk over with allies how to have more abundance and pleasure in the future. Attend group meetings that can bring you fine results.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): Analyze your position at work and at home and do whatever will improve it considerably. Put creative ideas to work and become more successful.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21): You have new ideas that should be put in operation quickly before others steal them from you. Avoid one who has an eye on your assets.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20): Plan time to carry through with promises you have made to others. Show you are conscientious. Show more devotion to loved ones, mate.

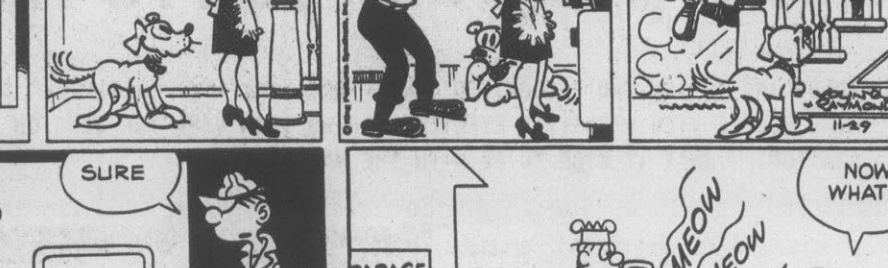

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19): Discuss with all allies how to make your relationships more worthwhile, successful. A public affair may be puzzling now, but picture clears.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20): Get into the work ahead of you and handle it efficiently. A co-worker is irritable now but later is most cooperative.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will have much ability and can think big in order to get big. Be sure to provide for a fine academic education so your progeny can be most successful, even famous. Married life can also be successful because of the devotion in this nature. Sports are a must to work off excessive energy. Some musical talent here, also.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to YOU!

Seek Disciplinary Guidelines

By DAVID TOMLIN
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A legislative committee, alarmed by school discipline problems and concerned about their impact on the quality of education, is working on a new law setting uniform guidelines for spanking and other punishment.

The committee is the Special Commission for Revision and Recodification of Public School laws, a 10-member panel with members from both the House and the Senate.

Co-chairman Sen. Edward Renfrow, D-Johnston, said the commission was concerned with a number of technical problems with existing school laws, but discipline was probably the most controversial matter before the panel.

"I think this is something that everyone is concerned about," said Renfrow in a telephone interview from his home in Smithfield. "I think parents are a little shaky about their kids' safety when they're in school. And a lot of people think this is one thing that's having an effect on our academic standing."

Current state law, Renfrow pointed out, permits teachers to use reasonable corporal punishment with problem students. But local school board policies differ widely, he said, over what is "reasonable" and when it should be used.

"I think we've got to have some kind of statewide disciplinary procedure," Renfrow said. "It seems a bit un-uniform from one district to another."

The senator said the commission's staff was collecting information now on discipline regulations in other states.

The commission will review them in February when it meets to go over the entire public school law revision package and incorporate its discipline recommendations in the bill it submits to the 1979 General Assembly.

"You know, we had eight public hearings around the state, and discipline came up at all of them," Renfrow said. "There were some teachers who wanted us to lower the mandatory age for school attendance to 14. They figured these kids would just drop out and solve the problem. We didn't buy that."

"But I think we've got to do something," he added. "Teachers ought to be able to know and understand exactly where they stand. They're on the front line of the battlefield, so to speak, and sometimes you have to take action right now."

Renfrow conceded it would be hard to balance the need for orderly classrooms with some parents' ideas about appropriate punishment.

"When I was a student, if I got a whipping at school, I could be pretty sure I'd get another one at home," he said. "But people don't all feel that way now."

Sees Evidence Of Drug Role

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — State Attorney General Rufus Edmisten says the state's largest heroin seizure in history proves North Carolina is "a major distribution point for heroin in the United States" and asked for more agents to control the drug traffic.

Edmisten's remarks followed the arrest Sunday of two men in connection with the seizure last May of more than 13 pounds of pure heroin. He said the drug would have been worth more than $76 million on the street.

Federal Drug Enforcement officials, however, estimated the value of that much heroin at about $9.7 million.

"The scale of this heroin seizure proves that North Carolina is one of the major distribution points for heroin in the United States," Edmisten said. "Also our philosophy in the SBI of organizing specialized units for different types of investigations has been reaffirmed. The SBI seriously needs more agents to work on the very severe problem of heroin."

James M. Harper, 37, of Goldsboro, and Lawrence J. Fuller, 38, of Pikeville, were arrested in Wayne County. Harper was charged with three felony counts for sale, conspiracy to sell and possession with intent to sell heroin. Fuller was charged with two felony counts of conspiracy to sell and sale of heroin.

Edmisten said that in addition to the SBI, the arrests were the result of work by New York City police, the federal DEA and authorities in Essex County, N.J., along with officers in Wayne, Lenoir and Johnston counties and in Goldsboro and Kinston.

He said further arrests were possible in the case.

SBI director Haywood Starling said the two men were charged in sealed indictments which were not served immediately for fear of endangering the continuing investigation.

PWP Meeting Slated Tonight

Greenville Chapter No. 1058 of Parents Without Partners (PWP) will meet tonight at Tippy's Taco House at 6:30 for dinner.

Children are invited to accompany members and courtesy card holders.

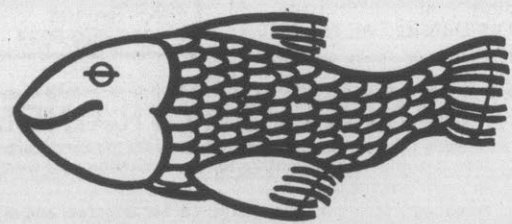

To be eligible for PWP, one must be the parent of a living child and be single by reason of divorce, death, or never having been married. Custody of children is not a factor in determining eligibility.

For more information, call 752-1674 or 758-9954 during evening hours.
