Token Sanctions By Pres. Sadat's Foes

By EDWARD CODY
Associated Press Writer
TRIPOLI, Libya (AP) — Five Arab opponents of Egyptian peace overtures to Israel formed a "confrontation front" against President Anwar Sadat today and announced diplomatic and token economic sanctions against him.

Iraq walked out of the Tripoli summit meeting, undermining the united front Sadat's foes hoped to achieve and demonstrating once again the chronic dissension in the Arab world.

Sadat said the Arab campaign against him caused him no concern. He also told two interviewers in Cairo Sunday that the Soviet Union was behind the "rubbish" at the Tripoli meeting.

The leaders of Syria, Libya, Algeria, South Yemen and the Palestinian guerrilla movement agreed in a final communique to "freeze" diplomatic relations with Egypt.

They also called for a boycott of Egyptian companies trading with Israel, of which there are none; demanded that the headquarters of the 21-member Arab League be removed from Cairo, and appealed for support for Syria, the chief remaining military threat to Israel. The meeting also resulted in a reconciliation among Palestinian guerrilla groups and a hardening of Palestinian opposition to peace negotiations with Israel.

Iraq delegates left the Libyan Peoples' Palace Sunday after four days of wrangling behind closed doors. The walkout underlined a long-standing rift between Iraq and Syria, ruled by rival wings of the Baath Socialist party that are split over tactics toward Israel, Syria's intervention in Lebanon and its diversion of the waters of the Euphrates River.

The Iraqis have sent out invitations to an anti-Sadat meeting of their own in Baghdad next week, and it was believed they refused to join the Tripoli front because it is likely to be led by Syrian President Hafez Assad.

"The Iraqis came to make sabotage," said a spokesman for the Saiga Palestinian guerrillas, who are controlled by Syria. He accused the Iraqis of being "pro-Sadat."

A Palestinian official said Iraq first demanded that the meeting reject U.N. Security Council resolutions 242 and 338, the basis of most Arab-Israeli peace efforts since the 1967 war.

Syrian opposition blocked this. The Iraqis then demanded that the group declare its intention of creating an anti-Sadat front but leave the actual formation to the proposed Baghdad meeting.

In what Palestinian officials said was a slap at Iraq, the Palestine Liberation Organization issued a statement proclaiming its "total condemnation of any party to the Tripoli Summit that rejects formation of the front."

The PLO declaration also ruled out Palestinian attendance at the Geneva peace conference Sadat and President Carter want to convene. It said the new Arab alliance should "confront all surrender solutions and imperialism and Zionism, as well as their tools in the Arab world," the latter an apparent reference to Sadat.

Coal Strike Anticipated

By DAVID ESPO
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — United Mine Workers president Arnold Miller said today there is no chance of avoiding a nationwide coal strike set to begin at midnight tonight.

Asked what the chances were for a strike, Miller said, "There'll be one." Miller said the status of the union's talks with the Bituminous Coal Operators Association were "not too good."

More than 2,200 miners were reported off their jobs late last week in Ohio and West Virginia in apparent anticipation of a national walkout, which would be the 10th for the UMW in 40 years.

Miller was interviewed as he arrived for today's bargaining session. Today is the final work day of the expiring contract.

At the end of Sunday's bargaining session, Wayne L. Horvitz, the chief federal mediator said: "We've got some hard problems. We're working on them. That's the nature of this process."

Four Die In Fire Strike

LONDON (AP) — Fire killed a mother and her three children today in Cambridgeshire in the worst single tragedy since Britain's firemen went on strike three weeks ago to support demands for better pay. Fifty-nine persons have died in fires throughout the country since 33,000 full-time firefighters walked off the job Nov. 14 demanding a 30 percent increase in pay. The government has rejected the demand, saying it would breach its anti-inflation pay policy calling for maximum raises of 10 percent.

However, fears that the number of fire deaths would increase during the strike have not materialized. Home Office figures indicate the number of fire-related deaths has not risen above the pre-strike average of 2.8 per day.

The fire in Wisbech, Cambridgeshire, north of London, was fought by soldiers and part-time firemen who are not on strike.

The job of fighting fires in Britain has been mainly in the hands of inexperienced troops using obsolete firefighting equipment hastily brought out of mothballs.

Fourth Ship Is Indicated

ROME (AP) — An Italian ambassador's letter written in 1493 indicates that Christopher Columbus made his first voyage to America with four ships rather than three as history records, Prof. Marinella Bonvini Mazzanti of Urbino University says.

Mrs. Bonvini Mazzanti says the letter was written from Barcelona on March 9, 1493, by Annibale de Gennaro, the ambassador of the king of Naples. It went to de Gennaro's brother, the ambassador to the duchy of Milan, and the scholar said she found it in the archives of the Este family, which ruled in Modena then.

According to history, Columbus' first expedition consisted of three caravels, the Nina, the Pinta and the Santa Maria. But Mrs. Bonvini Mazzanti says de Gennaro, in telling his brother about the explorer's departure from Spain, wrote:

"For the entreaties of one called Columbus, it pleased the king that he should rig four caravels because he said he wanted to go across the Grand Sea and sail straight westward long enough as to reach the Orient since the world being round he could but make a turn and find the eastern part."

"Columbus returned aboard the Nina, followed by the Pinta," said Mrs. Bonvini Mazzanti, a 36-year-old history professor, in a telephone interview from her home in Senigaglia, near Urbino.

"The Santa Maria was wrecked on Christmas Day of 1492 when Columbus left 40 men in a fort called 'Navidad' on the island of Hispaniola. The fourth ship remained behind with those in the fort."

She said there are references to this fourth ship being left behind in Columbus' diary, although the diary is never precise about the number of ships, and in the report he sent to King Ferdinand's treasurer from Lisbon on March 14, 1493, 10 days after he docked there on his return journey. But she said they were never interpreted as meaning he had departed with a fourth ship.

"When Columbus returned to the fort on the next journey, he reported the men had been killed and everything had been destroyed. Obviously, the caravel also had been destroyed by the infuriated natives," the professor said.

She said the ambassador's letter was based on Columbus' report from Lisbon to the Spanish monarch and Queen Isabella, and the envoy told his brother four times he had read it.

Gardner Chairman Of County Board

B. Alton Gardner, a veteran member of the Pitt County Board of Commissioners, was elected chairman for the coming year this morning as the board held its annual reorganization.

Gardner replaces Charles Gaskins who served as chairman during 1977. Bob Martin was elected vice-chairman, replacing Gardner in that post.

ALTON GARDNER

Following the election of the new officers, the board reappointed W. W. Speight at county attorney, Reginald Gray as county manager and auditor, and Mrs. Margaret Roberts as clerk to the board.

Commissioners received a report from Greenville City Schools superintendent Glenn Cox on the condition of the city schools. Cox told the board, "to my knowledge right now, we're up to date," as far as maintenance is concerned. He noted that an on-going inspection program has been instituted in an effort to insure that the city's school facilities meet health and safety standards.

Pitt Memorial Hospital director Jack Richardson told commissioners that the neo-natal center now under construction at the hospital should open in April or May.

Some 25 nurses will be needed to staff the facility, Richardson said, adding that "we still don't have enough nurses in Pitt County to meet the needs of our hospital."

Ralph Hall, director of the hospital's physical plant indicated that contracts for the hospital and rehabilitation center should be closed out following a federal inspection set for December 15 and 16. He noted that contracts for the first three phases of additions for the East Carolina University School of Medicine should be closed out shortly, also.

Hall, saying, "we have a $24 million building," noted that a landscape architect has been hired to do a master plan for landscaping the facility. He said it is hoped that clubs, civic organizations and individuals will contribute the plants needed to carry out the landscaping plan when it is completed.

Ball also said the hospital's parking committee has agreed to proceed with a paid parking plan — charging visitors to the medical center a fee for parking. Funds received from the parking charge will be used to help maintain the parking areas and provide security in the parking lots.

In other business, commissioners approved a grant to establish a drug program at the Mental Health Center.

Steve Creech, director of the center told the board that last year, law enforcement officers in the county made 271 drug arrests and convicted 199 individuals on drug-law violation charges. He noted that seven break-ins during the year were drug related, while four deaths, resulted from drug abuse. Some 78 drug overdose cases were reported.

The board also adopted an ordinance regulating the installation of insulation — energy conservation materials — in structures in the county.

The ordinance, required by action of the 1977 General Assembly, provides for the licensing of contractors installing insulation as well as inspection by county inspectors.

More Than They Bargained For

BALTIMORE (AP) — Two bandits got $33 and more than they bargained for when they invaded a West Baltimore home.

The bandits handcuffed Richard English, 24, and his brother Leroy, 25, together after breaking into the house.

When the robbers demanded money, the two brothers suggested that one of them search the house with 13-year-old Denise Powell, the English brothers' half-sister. While Denise was upstairs with one robber, the handcuffed pair charged the other robber, and shoved him through a first floor window.

At the same time, Denise pushed the surprised second robber off a second story porch.

The bandits fled as a neighbor appeared on the scene, and police have not found them.

At 81, Hunting A Third Wife

LAKEMORE, Ohio (AP) — William "Grandpa" Goddard, who, at age 81, has outlived two wives, is looking for another. And this time he's going south of the border.

"I guess I'll advertise in some Mexican papers for a wife. That way I'll get a better choice," said Goddard of Lakemore.

His daughter, Elinor McCardle, and a waitress at a restaurant he frequents are going to teach him enough Spanish to get along in Mexico.

What's the age limit for a potential bride?

"Well, let's say 18 to 80," he said. "... you better make that 21 instead of 18. I don't want people to think I'd rob the cradle. I don't want to leave anybody out."

Pitt School Board Will Convene Here Tuesday

The Pitt County Board of Education will hold its regular monthly meeting Tuesday at 2:30 p.m. in the Pitt County Courthouse.

The following items are slated for consideration by the Board: Superintendent Ott Alford will report on the Community School Project Proposal submitted earlier and funded by the State Board of Education Dec. 1, effective Jan. 1, 1978.

Associate Superintendent Tom Craft will present: a proposed 1978-79 school budget timetable, a report of bids received for projects at Bethel, Pactolus, and W.H. Robinson, a request in behalf of the developers of a new mall to be located immediately adjacent to the school garage site, and a discussion of efforts on the part of Beverly Conleton to secure a timed blinking caution light at the intersection at Wellcome School.

Information concerning a recent CETA Project approved through a local Employment Security Commission's Office.

Assistant Superintendent Keeter will request permission to enter into an agreement with the Division of School Health Crippled Childrens Program, Pitt County Health Department and the Pitt County Schools to conduct a sixth grade scoliosis screening program.

The Department of Public Instruction is currently negotiating with CETA officials for a project which is designed to improve the achievement level of high school students (ages 16-21) who are having academic difficulties in Reading and Mathematics.

Display Zeal In Hunting Qualified Students

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina universities, anxious to increase their minority enrollment, are showing the same kind of recruiting zeal for qualified blacks that they formerly reserved for promising athletes.

The state's 16-campus university system is under orders from the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare to increase minority admissions by 150 percent over the next five years.

System officials have told HEW that goal is impossible, but nobody doubts that large increases will have to be made.

The problem, officials contend, is that there aren't enough blacks who can meet admission requirements and would be willing to choose a predominantly white campus over a black one.

The race is already on to increase the number of qualified black applicants.

"There is no way under the sun (HEW's) 150 percent goal can be reached without having a large increase in the number of black students applying," said Collin E. Rustin Jr., assistant director of undergraduate admissions at UNC-Chapel Hill.

Nearly all of the predominantly white campuses have taken one or more of the following steps.

—Hiring minority recruiters to visit high schools.

—Bringing promising black high school students to campus for weekend programs.

—Urging black students to contact high schoolers in their home towns.

—Special remedial programs for first-year black students to help them catch up with their better-prepared classmates.

—Recruiting programs in churches and community centers in predominantly black neighborhoods.

UNC-Chapel Hill and N.C. State are most aggressive, partly because their admission standards are most strict.

Both schools obtain lists of black high school students who do well on college board exams and target them for special attention.

North Carolina tries to get at least 200 minority students with each freshman class of about 3,000. N.C. State also has recruiting goals, but declined to make them public.

SANTA SUIT SOURCE?

I have to be a stand-in for Santa Claus at a gathering before long and would like to know where I can get a suit for the occasion. M. B.

U-Ren-Co at 423 Greenville Boulevard here has three Santa Claus suits which rent for $16 a day, with a $10 deposit (refundable, of course). Health Department regulations require that the beard and wig that go with the suit be sold rather than rented, a spokesman for the store said, so these may be kept as souvenirs or whatever and account for the relatively high price that must be charged.

There probably are other sources in this area and Hotline will be glad to pass along any other information received.

Dear Abby

Age Not Always Bar To Having Children

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1977 by The Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: FACING FACTS, a newly wed couple, asked if you thought it would be fair to have children at their ages. (She was 30 and he was 50.)

Well, believe it or not, when we married, my husband was a 68-year-old college professor, and I was 20!

We've been happily married for 10 years and are the parents of two beautiful, healthy, intelligent daughters, now 5 and 9.

Maybe we belong in the Guinness Book of World Records, but we still feel very much blessed in spite of the 48-year age difference between us.

HAPPY IN MASON CITY, IA.

DEAR HAPPY: Congratulations. Read on for another case that may also belong in the Guinness Book of World Records:

DEAR ABBY: I'm glad you told that couple who hesitated to have children because of their ages to go ahead.

When I was 18 I married a wonderful woman who was then 36 but looked like sweet 16. She had had six children by two previous husbands.

We've been married for eight years, and are now the proud parents of one dozen children—all healthy, thank God.

No names, please. The people in our little town call us "the crazy couple with all the kids."

P.S. We've never been on welfare, and I'd like to add that our family is complete now because, after our 12th, I had a vasectomy.

LOVES CHILDREN

DEAR ABBY: I must disagree with the advice you gave that newly married couple who asked if they should have any children. (He was 50 and in good health, and she was 30.)

True they may have everything it takes to be wonderful parents, but no matter how physically fit the man is, there's little chance that he'll be alive and spry at 70.

I'm 24 and when I was born my mother was 37. At all the school functions (especially in grade school) people would ask me why my "grandmother" was there instead of my mother.

I was chided all through school, and you know how cruel children can be without meaning to be.

REMEMBERS WELL

DEAR REMEMBERS: The average life expectancy of a man today is about 70, and I repeat, the number of years a man has lived isn't as important as the condition of his health.

Some men in their 50s and 60s are better qualified for fatherhood than other men who are 30 years younger.

DEAR ABBY: Here's a little tip for DOG TIRED, whose neighbor's dog barks at night and disturbs the whole neighborhood. Place the dog owner's telephone number in large letters beside your telephone. Every time the dog barks at night (and the later the better) ring up the owner. It works wonders.

NO LONGER DOG TIRED

DEAR NO: What if the dog owner has an unlisted number? Or takes the telephone off the hook after the first ring?

DEAR ABBY: I met this great-looking man when I was hunting for a house to buy. (He's a real estate agent.) I liked everything about him. He's not married and neither am I. I finally bought a house through him.

My question: How do I let him know I would like to go out with him?

The escrow just closed and there is no reason for him to come around anymore.

IN THE MARKET

DEAR IN: You may be "in the market," but I think you're out of luck—unless the real estate agent has a real interest in you.

If you feel left out and lonely, or wish you knew how to get people to like you, my new booklet, "How To Be Popular; You're Never Too Young or Too Old," is for you. Send $1 along with a long, self-addressed, stamped (24 cents) envelope to Abby, 132 Lasky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.

PROPELLER-LY DONE, FELLAS! — Workmen gather round the gigantic propeller of the Queen Elizabeth 2 as she sits in a dry dock at the Bethlehem Steel shipyards in Bayonne, N.J. Sunday. The queen of the seas is expected to remain dry for 17 days during which she will receive her annual facelifting and overhaul — all for a cool $5 million. (Laserphoto)

Recalls Mencken At Stokes Trial

By ERIC NEWHOUSE
Associated Press Writer
CHATTANOOGA, Tenn. (AP)

The young telegrapher who transmitted reporter H.L. Mencken's words from the Scopes trial half a century ago in Dayton had a difficult job.

"He was very difficult to deal with," Howard Hale, 74, said of Mencken in an interview. "Whether you were sending stories for the New York Times or the Manchester Guardian, he demanded that his words be sent out first."

"And he woke me up at 2 or 3 o'clock in the morning several times when he had an idea he wanted to send out."

In 1925, Mencken was a Baltimore Sun reporter and Hale was a Western Union telegrapher. Together they witnessed the clash between Clarence Darrow and William Jennings Bryan over a Tennessee law which forbade teaching in public schools any theory of creation except that found in the Bible. "He was merciless with the jury and judge," Hale says. "William Jennings Bryan Jr. came over one morning and told Darrow that his party had all brought their legal dictionaries. And Mencken asked if they'd brought one for the judge."

Dayton was awash with reporters for the trial, and a pool of 30 telegraphers transmitted 150,000 to 200,000 words a day through 60 circuits on a line north to Cincinnati and south to Chattanooga.

Hale had equipment which allowed him to send from the press pit in the main courtroom of the Rhea County Courthouse, and he says he believes Mencken selected him as his telegrapher for that reason.

During the 11-day trial, he developed great respect for Mencken.

"I never heard him ask another newsman anything," Hale says. "He was just too proud to

Investigators Seek To Learn If Hijackers Caused A Crash

JOHORE BHARU, Malaysia (AP) — Investigators are trying to determine whether the hijackers of a Malaysian airliner caused the crash in which all 100 persons aboard died and whether the hijackers were Japanese terrorists.

One witness to the crash Sunday night said the twin-jet Boeing 737 wobbled unsteadily, rose slightly, then started down and exploded. Wreckage, dismembered bodies, clothing and debris were scattered over a square mile of swamp north of the Johore Strait and Singapore.

The Malay Mail newspaper said the eyewitness reports "indicated some kind of tussle between the hijackers and the crew."

"The explosion may have been caused by explosives carried on board by the hijackers, considering the wide area over which the wreckage was strewn," the paper said.

Among the dead were the Cuban ambassador to Malaysia, Mario Garcia, and his wife; two World Bank officials from Washington, O.D. Hoerr and S.S. Naime, and Malaysia's agriculture minister, Ali Haji Ahmad.

Malaysian Airways said about 20 of the 93 passengers were foreigners.

Sources at the Kuala Lumpur airport said the pilot radioed that members of the Japanese Red Army took over the plane. But the airline said it could not confirm this and did not know how many hijackers there were.

They took over the plane about 10 minutes after it left Penang island, off the northwest coast of Malaysia, on a flight to Kuala Lumpur, the Malaysian capital, and Singapore with 93 passengers and a crew of seven, an airline spokesman said.

The plane stopped at Kuala Lumpur, but the hijackers forced the pilot to take off almost immediately for Singapore, the spokesman reported. The explosion occurred shortly after.

Police said they were investigating to determine how the hijackers got on the plane undetected. Communications Minister V. Manickavasagam said security at all Malaysian airports would be tightened.

The Japanese Red Army is a small organization of extreme left-wingers who have been responsible for a number of a major terrorist incidents since 1970.

Its most recent exploit was the hijacking of a Japan Airlines jet over India in September. The Japanese government paid $6 million in ransom and released six terrorists from prison, and the hijackers and the freed terrorists took refuge in Algeria.

Arrest Man In Shooting Case

Walter Taft Jr. of Greenville has been arrested on assault with a deadly weapon with intent to kill charges in connection with a 12:15 a.m. Sunday shooting in which Jasper Langley was wounded, according to Chief Glenn Cannon.

Cannon said Langley was allegedly shot with a .22 caliber pistol at 905 West 15th St., following an argument with Taft.

Langley was found by police in a car parked at the end of Clerk Street shortly after the incident and taken to Pitt Memorial Hospital for treatment.

accept information he hadn't dug out personally."

Mencken went on to edit "The American Mercury" and write enough reviews and essays to fill six volumes titled "Prejudices." When he died in 1956, he was a leading authority on language, having written "The American Language."

Hale was with Western Union until the mid-1930s when he became a salesman.

Adequate Parking Is The Key

The City Council last Thursday rejected bids for construction of a parking deck on the corner of Fourth and Cotanche Streets.

The fact that bids were $50,000 over the budgeted amount was cited as the reason for rejection of the bids. City officials said bidders were asked to extend their bids for a period of time while efforts were made find ways of going on with the project that effort was unsuccessful, however.

Rejection of bids for double decking the Fourth and Cotanche Street lot leaves the possibility of carrying out that project very much in doubt. The lot lent itself to double decking, which would have doubled its capacity, because it has a downward slope. That would have allowed for entrance to the upper deck from Fourth Street and entrance to the lower deck from Cotanche.

It seems to us that this would have been an ideal project, but if the money wasn't there, it just wasn't.

The City Council, however, has an even greater responsibility now to see that more parking is obtained in the downtown area.

The council should study all aspects of the parking situation, including the possibility of readvertising for bids on the parking deck and obtaining other parking sites.

Adequate parking is the key to continued downtown vitality — and that continued vitality is essential to our city's well being.

An Area Asset In Enlarged Stadium

After considerable negotiation contracts have been awarded for expansion of Ficklen Stadium to 35,000 seats and work is underway.

University officials expect the project to be completed in time for ECU's football season in the fall of 1978.

The project will mean that for the first time ever Eastern North Carolina will have a major outdoor stadium. It can attract events other than football, where large seating capacity is needed.

The enlarged Ficklen Stadium should be an asset to Eastern North Carolina.

THIS AFTERNOON

Republican Sees Rebirth

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH—Back to Basics is not only the current vogue in education; leaders of the North Carolina Republican Party see a need for doing their homework in politics as well.

Winning elections is the bottom line of a political party's existence, and the defeat of President Gerald Ford "May have been a blessing in disguise," says Philip J. Kirk, Jr.

That defeat at the top national level could end the tendency of Republicans to concentrate too much on the Presidency, while "we let our local organizations and local candidates suffer."

Kirk, who was a top aide to former Gov. James E. Holshouser, Jr. and for a short time was secretary of the State Department of Human Resources, talked about the future of the Republican Party at Pfeiffer College recently. In off-the-cuff remarks, Kirk mentioned Arnold Palmer, professional golfer and Charlotte auto dealer, as a possible challenger to Gov. James B. Hunt, Jr. in 1980. That remark drew considerable public attention.

Can Win

If such an observation can create as much interest as that, then Kirk may have a point when he notes that election of a Republican mayor in Charlotte and another in Mocksville demonstrate that "we can win. . . Republicans can be successful if they offer good candidates with some pure hard work at the precinct level."

In Charlotte, Kirk noted, the national party unit provided organizational help which "certainly paid off." The national party "has recognized its failure (emphasis on local candidates and organization) and is giving primary attention to organizing and re-vitalizing local and state parties."

Kirk was co-chairman of the statewide promotion campaign for gubernatorial succession, an idea vigorously pushed by Gov. Hunt. Some Republicans criticized Kirk's role, but he defends it as a demonstration of a new image for Republicans: "We were for modernizing state government and bringing North Carolina into step with the rest of the nation. The next step should be the veto power. . . " which he thinks Republicans should try to sell to the people "in common, down to earth language. . . and the Republican Party has not been doing that."

NOBLITT

Constant criticism of Democrats is not the answer, Kirk said, and explained that he will vote for a Democrat when that candidate offers the best potential, and praises Gov. Hunt as an example of admitting "when a good job has been done by a Democrat. . . as is the case with emphasis on reading and testing in schools."

Philosophy and principle are important, Kirk said, "but I think it's time for the Republican Party to turn its primary attention to grass roots organization and the nuts and bolts of politics if we want to win elections. . ."

United

A Republican has a good chance to win the Governor's race in 1980 if the party is united and provides the money, Kirk believes, and a strong GOP is essential to preserving the two-party system and providing competition and a watchdog function over the party in power.

Above all, Kirk said, Republicans must put forth solutions to problems. "We need to tell the people that government cannot solve all the problems of the world. We need to quit misleading them about easy solutions. That's why so many of our citizens fail to vote or even to register. . ."

"We believe in the dignity of the individual, peace and progress without war, a balanced budget, a reduced federal bureaucracy, less government interference in our daily lives, a strong defense. . ."

But the image of a party dominated by wealth, run by country clubbers, responsible for the Depression, and embroiled in Watergate creates the job of "improving the image of our party" Kirk said.

Howard In Jerusalem

WASHINGTON — The role that Walter Cronkite, Barbara Walters and John Chancellor played in the Sadat-Begin talks in Jerusalem cannot be underestimated. By bypassing the State Department and going directly to the three anchorpersons of American television, Sadat and Begin agreed to meet, which was the breakthrough that everyone had been hoping for.

It might have been different, though, if Roone Arledge, the president of ABC News, had chosen to have Howard Cosell conduct the interview between the two men instead of Barbara Walters.

This is what I mean. "Good evening, ladies and gentlemen. This is Howard Cosell bringing you an exclusive ABC Sports spectacular live and in color from the ringside here in Jerusalem. Tonight we are presenting another star-studded fight with the incomparable Egyptian heavyweight, Anwar Sadat, who is risking his title as champion of the Arab world, to meet with one of the toughest little sluggers in the Middle East, Prime Minister Menachem Begin, a comparatively unknown backbencher until he knocked out the formidable Yitzhak Rabin in the last Israeli elections.

"I spoke to Anwar in the locker room in Cairo a few days ago, and he told me that he would go anywhere, any time, to meet with Menachem. I then passed this message on to Menachem, who revealed he was ready to take on Anwar even if it meant fighting his whole Israeli cabinet.

"And so the two gladiators are here tonight, which I will have to admit, in all candor, I must take full credit for.

"Anwar, forgive me for asking this question, but I feel it incumbent on my part to do so for the benefit of the TV audience. Why did you decide to fight Begin at this time?"

"I decided to come to Jerusalem to show I was interested in peace."

"But surely, Anwar, Egypt, with its Russian-made tanks, missiles and MIG airplanes,

Pettigrew said in a telephone interview that the administration is trying to develop a consensus position so whatever plan eventually is submitted will sail through Congress without serious opposition.

Under reorganization powers granted Carter last April, any administration plan for reorganization is killed if disapproved by either the Senate or House within 60 working days.

Because of this veto threat, the reorganizers give every evidence of trying hard to work closely with Congress in advance so their plans, once submitted, face promising odds.

Thus Carter's Reorganization Plan No. 1, involving the Executive Office of the President, took effect automatically in October with minimal congressional opposition. And Plan No. 2, to replace the U.S. Information Agency with a new International Communication Agency, seems assured of early approval.

Among other things, the Executive Office plan abolished the Office of Drug Abuse Policy, which did give the reorganizers some uncomfortable moments. As Harrison Wellford, OMB's executive associate director, told a reporter:

"One of our unpleasant duties is to have to go up to Capitol Hill and explain to a committee whose only justification (for existence) is the oversight of a unit that we are abolishing. (On the drug agency) we really had three hours of unmitigated hell."

Echoing Pettigrew, Wellford said, "We have really made a tremendous effort to go out to the congressional committees at early stages to get their advice about options that we are developing."

The ultimate objective, said Wellford, is "being sure we have a good sense of what needs to be done, and what's politically feasible."

Yes, you could call it making haste slowly.

Making Haste Slowly

By FRANK CORMIER

Associated Press Writer WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter's campaign to reorganize the federal government has slipped behind schedule. But from Carter's standpoint, that's not all bad.

As administration officials tell it, the delays add up to making haste slowly. Postponed timetables, they argue, are likely to avoid more lengthy delays later.

Take the case of a planned reorganization of the agencies that handle federal paperwork for the do-it-yourself pension programs known as Keogh Plans and Individual Retirement Accounts.

Carter's reorganizers, working out of the Office of Management and Budget, had hoped two months ago to have a detailed pension reorganization plan ready for submission to Congress on Oct. 17. Now they may wait until next year.

The reason for the delay, according to Richard Pettigrew, the president's top reorganization aide: the House committee that will handle the plan favors the creation of a single agency to administer the pension programs. But its Senate counterpart wants the chore divided, as it is now, between the Labor Department and the Internal Revenue Service, supporting only limited changes to better define jurisdictional boundaries.

Pettigrew said in a telephone interview that the administration is trying to develop a consensus position so whatever plan eventually is submitted will sail through Congress without serious opposition.

THE INSIDE REPORT

Bureaucratic Take-Over

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — While the public is not fully aware of it, federal bureaucrats are confounding President Carter's campaign promise of close-to-the-people government by transferring authority from the field back to Washington in a major new centralization of power.

That unannounced process is far advanced in the Departments of Housing and Urban Development (HUD), Health, Education and Welfare (HEW) and, less clearly, Labor. Judging from his campaign emphasizing his non-Washington base and extolling government closer to the people, voters expected that one distinctive Carter label on the federal Leviathan would be less, not more, centralization.

This represents neither broken promises nor changed principles by the President. Rather, ensnared in the details of office, Mr. Carter simply has not come to grips with what his administration should stand for. While nobody doubted, for better or for worse, the direction of Richard M. Nixon's presidency after ten months, the Carter presidency has neither set nor sought a theme.

The Washington bureaucrats have leaped to fill this void with a vengeance, tightening federal regulation and devising new plans for federal direction of the nation's affairs. But their successful drive to concentrate all power in Washington is most significant, considering the lingering belief of long-time Carterites that regionalizing power still ought to be a dominant Carter theme. A glance at what is happening at Labor, HUD, and HEW:

Labor: All regional directors have been eliminated, bringing field offices directly under Washington supervision. Department officials say the regional directors never had much power in the first place so the change does not mean much, but White House staffers say centralization is undeniable.

HUD: There is no argument about more centralization here. Not only have the number of field offices been reduced but their authority has been sharply cut back. "The feeling is we had to return the full decision-making to Washington," one high official in HUD told us. HEW: A reorganization in July removed program responsibilities from regional directors, returning them to Washington. Like Labor, HEW's field offices will be directly supervised by Washington instead of regional offices. Office of Education employees in the field are being brought back to Washington. HEW spokesmen say Secretary Joseph Califano wants "central responsibility." Joe Califano leads the vanguard of bureaucrats triumphant in the first year of the Carter administration. Reluctantly selected for his post by Mr. Carter at the urging of Washington insiders (headed by Vice President Mondale), Washington insider Califano has emerged as a cabinet star in the President's opinion (but not in the opinion of his White House staff). That is remarkable in view of Califano's personification of more spending, more regulation and more centralization. It is explained by other administration officials not as a conversion in Mr. Carter's philosophy but as his turning in relief to one member of a generally undistinguished cabinet who has his work completed on time and his department under control. Califano's triumph as a master bureaucrat is not isolated. Officials who believe in more, not less, government dominate the administration. Many are graduates of the Ralph Nader school of consumer protection, but more reflect the archetypal bureaucrat predating Ralph Nader by centuries. In the words of one relatively conservative cabinet member: "This administration is filled with people who like to regulate other people."

For example, HUD is proposing a plan (devised largely by Assistant Secretary Robert Embry, former Baltimore city housing commissioner) that would require suburbs to put in public housing cluster programs or lose federal money. Such social engineering can stir up political dogs that Mr. Carter might prefer to keep sleeping.

To the editor:

There has been declining support of the public school systems throughout the United States. I submit that the cause is not hard to find and that it is clearly shown by a news item in the Nov. 30 issue of The Reflector, top left of Page 5, to which I urge reference. Briefly, a parent withdrew her daughter from school, charging that the child had not been taught anything during a period of 56 school days during which 13 different teachers had substituted for the absent regular teacher. After withdrawal and placement in a non-approved educational program, the condition of the child improved notably. School Superintendent Haywood Bellamy brought charges against the mother for non-attendance of school by the daughter. Supt. Bellamy argued in court in trial of the mother that it was immaterial whether the child learned anything in school; rather the law requires that the child be in school. Implied also, but not stated by Mr. Bellamy, it is immaterial whether the child is frustrated and psychologically warped, the law says that she must be in school. It is immaterial whether the child learn more and develop more normally in a new educational program, the law says that the child must be in school.

Judge John Webb agreed that the law did so state. He appears to have also agreed that the law is just, inasmuch as he imposed both fine and suspended jail sentence, whereas law did not require both.

What can be done to reestablish public confidence and support of our public school system when the attitude of officials and courts declare that the education of children is not the reason for having children in school?

It is regrettable that the Bellamy-Webb attitude is not unique.

GM Exhibits Optimistic View

By JOHN CUNNIFF AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — If you want some relief from the handwriting that seems to be inherent in most economic forecasts, you should read these days the reports coming out of General Motors.

GM means generally magnificent when applied to the economic outlook. "There is no doubt that the U.S. economy and the automobile industry are in a dynamic period," one official report states.

Dynamic? But isn't the automotive industry harassed by all sorts of seemingly insurmountable problems? Isn't the economic expansion a shakey old creature trembling along on arthritic joints?

Just a few days ago, Thomas A. Murphy, the GM chairman, issued a year-end statement that stated flatly:

"General Motors, as well as the automobile industry in the United States, in calendar year 1978, will set records that surpass the marks now being posted in 1977."

Murphy is making a tradition of such statements. He is in effect saying that we must remain aware of the problems but not overlook what is right with the economy. He said the same things last year, and before, too.

To illustrate, in Murphy's words: "We continue to be deeply concerned about the unemployment rate. . . but we should also note that the 'percent of the working age population that holds jobs also approximates the highest level in peacetime history.'"

And to demonstrate further: "We are aware that many uncertainties about national economic policy currently cloud the outlook for 1978 and have the potential for impairing business and consumer confidence. We remain confident, however, that these uncertainties will be resolved by soundly based programs in the national interest."

There is a good chance that Murphy and GM will say the same things next year too. At any rate, the prospect is there. An official GM report states "General Motors is confident about 1978 and the years beyond."

Propaganda in the pursuit of self-interest, say the cynics. What choice has a company of GM's size but to promote good news about the economy? Bad news undermines buyer confidence; good news sells cars.

But GM is also putting its money up, and that you must respect.

Said Murphy: "General Motors again will make major capital expenditures next year. In 1977, GM's capital spending, including special tools, will aggregate $3.5 billion, more than 50 per cent above last year's near record."

Match that against the hesitancy of some other concerns. Industry's capital spending levels have been a major disappointment for two years. Uncertainty is the explanation given. It can always be used: the future is always uncertain.

Even so, you'd never guess it from the tone of the chairman's remarks.

In summary: "The balanced economic expansion during 1977 provides a good foundation for sustainable growth in the years ahead."

HOMES AND HOUSES

Many people live not in homes but in houses. Many individuals living under the same roof and related to each other are not families in the moral and emotional sense of the word but are enemies in all but name. The place many people call home is only a hotel where those who bear the same name come to eat and sleep and go their separate ways.

Men and women who are indifferent to each other have not established a home but a residence. Children who use a home for all it's worth and give nothing in return are not members of a household; they are boarders alarmingly in arrears in their rent payments.

What does it take to make a home? The answer is simple — it takes love. We pay our way in the home and through life not by writing checks or handing over the pay envelope, but by thinking first of the people around us and putting ourselves aside that they may be happy.

Bermuda's Riots Wane; Troops Are On The Scene

Former Greenville Policeman Shot To Death In Fayetteville

FAYETTEVILLE — Robert Elijah Washington, 27, surrendered to police here about 4 a.m. Sunday, after allegedly shooting a Fayetteville police officer to death Saturday night.

The slain officer was identified as James Joseph McConkey, 25, McConkey, a Richmond Hills, N.Y. native, joined the Greenville Police Department in February 1976 as a cadet and became a sworn officer on April 7, 1976. He joined the Fayetteville Police Department after leaving Greenville, April 15, 1977.

Washington was charged with first degree murder in the death. Witnesses said the shooting occurred Saturday night in a downtown parking lot as the officer tried to make an arrest.

Fayetteville chief Danny Dixon said the man allegedly resisted and McConkey was killed with his own service revolver in the struggle that followed. Dixon said the officer had radioed for assistance, but was shot before help arrived.

Investigators reported that McConkey had been shot in the right eye at close range with his .357-caliber magnum pistol. McConkey was wearing a bullet-proof vest at the time of the shooting.

Police quoted witnesses as saying the suspect's face appeared badly beaten when he fled the scene on foot. McConkey's blackjack was found on the pavement next to his body. McConkey was married but had no children.

Students Direct ECU Seminar

(ECU News Bureau) George Laroussini of Lafayette, Louisiana, and Clifton Carey of Laurinburg, graduate students in the East Carolina University Department of Biology, recently presented results of their research at departmental seminars.

Laroussini's topic was "A Research Design: The Pineal Gland and Hibernation in the Golden Hamster," and Carey's was "DNA Induced Transformation in Drosophila melanogaster. Both projects were carried out in partial fulfillment of the requirements for the master's degree in biology.

Attending the seminars were student and faculty biologists.

By GEORGE ESPER Associated Press Writer HAMILTON, Bermuda (AP) — British troops armed with rifles and machine guns deployed in Bermuda today for the first time in nearly 10 years, but rioting to protest the execution of two blacks for political murders already had ended.

British commanders said 260 troops had been brought in from bases in Belize, in Central America, and England to back up the 900 men of the local police force and the Bermuda Regiment.

The British island colony was calm all day Sunday, and only three fire bombs exploded Sunday night, in a truck and a vacant house in Hamilton and at a reform school 12 miles outside the city. No casualties were reported.

"I think the steam has gone out of it," said Police Inspector Allan Lister.

A dusk-to-dawn curfew remained in effect. Black youths rioted and hurled fire bombs Thursday, Friday and Saturday nights to protest the hanging Friday of two black terrorists convicted of murdering the British governor and his aide, the British police chief and two white supermarket owners in 1972-73. It was Bermuda's first executions in 31 years.

The rioters were estimated to have done $5 million worth of damage, but no serious injuries have been reported. Three persons, including two Americans, died in a fire at the Southampton Princess Hotel Thursday night during the first riot; but the rioting and the hotel were seven miles apart, and officials said they had been unable to determine yet whether there was any connection.

Lois Brown Evans, leader of the predominantly black opposition Labor party, charged at a news conference that Prime Minister David Gibbons and Governor Sir Peter Ramsbotham over-reacted by calling in the British troops and that their presence would create more tension.

There also was resentment among some black soldiers of the Bermuda Regiment.

Hamilton's downtown streets were virtually deserted Sunday although some tourists were out with cameras and tennis rackets. Many of the 3,000 tourists were cutting their holidays short because of the inconvenience of being confined to their hotels at dusk. Many restaurants and shops were closing hours before the curfew.

The government still refused to identify the two Americans killed in the hotel fire. But Peter Baur of Philadelphia, Pa., said officials had notified his family that one of them was his granduncle, George B. Gandy, 61, of Ambler, Pa., and the other was believed to be his grandmother, Dorothy Jean Joyce, 71.

That is why friends of the President, motivated only by his political welfare, wish that Mr. Carter would consider at greater length whether he should not fulfill his promises, explicit and implicit, of decentralization, deregulation and a less intrusive role for government.

But most of the bureaucrats are pushing for still more government in 1978, to satisfy the left as well as themselves. Moreover, even if the President belatedly puts his mind to it, it is too late in the day to unscramble the eggs of greater centralization and regulation. The cost may be not only the loss of a distinctive Carter theme but a big-government thrust that is beginning to run strongly against mass opinion.

ON OLDER HOMES

Every year, twice as many American families buy older (or previously-occupied homes) than they do new homes. Depending upon the age of the home, naturally, there may be some unknown risks in the area of construction, plumbing, or wiring. However, these can be obviated by a professional inspection.

But there are also some major advantages to buying an older home. It normally contains far more space than a new home in the same price range, and there are a great many more older homes than new homes for sale which gives you a wider opportunity to make a good buy. Also, many older homes have a charm, location, and graciousness that can't be found in a new home.

Thus, a new home will give you fewer maintenance problems and more modern built-in appliances, however, there is much to be said for the older home too. The best approach is to look at both and weigh the merits. We'll be happy to show you a fine selection of both older and new homes to choose from.

If there is anything we can do to help you in the field of real estate, please phone or drop in at BLOUNT & BALL REALTY CO., 201 E. Arlington Blvd., Greenville, Phone: 756-3000. We're here to help!

Would Drop Nitpicking Rules

By HARRY F. ROSENTHAL
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The Labor Department made good today on its promise to rid employers and workers of nitpicking, outdated and just plain silly job safety rules by proposing to dump more than 1,100 regulations.

No longer must toilet seats in businesses be of the open-front type. No more must fire extinguishers be no higher off the floor than 3½ feet in some cases, 5 feet in others. Labor Secretary Ray Marshall noted that thousands of injuries and illnesses are suffered by workers each year, but "to the best of our knowledge none has been caused by the shape of a toilet seat or because a fire extinguisher was two inches too low." The proposed new rules were made public with no little pride by the department's Occupational Safety and Health Administration, a much-maligned agency in the past. "Today's announcement marks one of the few times in history a government regulatory agency has decreased its rules rather than adding more," said Eula Bingham, head of OSHA. Dr. Bingham had vowed last May to cut "the Mickey Mouse" out of OSHA's much-criticized rules. Her office estimates that 62 million workers and 5 million employers are covered by the regulations.

The new version will eliminate a prohibition against putting ice in drinking water — a rule that goes back to 1930, when ice often came from ponds with unpotable water. It will also do away with specifying the gauge of sheet metal in ductwork required for ventilation purposes.

Many of the rules being eliminated are duplicated by those of other agencies. Others are obsolete through technological change. And others simply insult intelligence.

"Tanks may be of any shape or type consistent with sound engineering design," says one provision that will be out.

One requirement dealing with areas containing hazardous chemicals forced employers to keep a daily roster of employees entering regulated areas and to hold on to the lists for 20 years. The rule won't be in the new version.

A special edition of the Federal Register will completely reprint all 250 pages of closely spaced, small type that detail OSHA's general industry standards. Provisions to be revoked will be in black brackets.

Dr. Bingham said that because of the high interest expected, the usual 30-day period for public comment will be expanded to 90 days.

Meanwhile, OSHA's 1,400 inspectors have been told to wink at most, but not all, violations of the rules that are slated to be discarded. The government term for this is "de minimis" enforcement.

"Revocation is a lengthy process," said Dr. Bingham. "We are concerned with taking action now to implement our common sense approach."

Comatose And Pregnant, Little Hope By Doctors

NEW YORK (AP) — A comatose pregnant woman has developed pneumonia and internal bleeding, and doctors held little hope that she could be kept alive to give her 5-month-old fetus a chance to be born.

Dr. Thomas LaBarbera, director of the critical care unit at Victory Memorial Hospital, described the condition of Rosemarie Maniscalco, 27, on Sunday as "poor, very poor."

"According to statistics, it has been practically impossible to sustain life in a person in her degree of coma," LaBarbera said.

Mrs. Maniscalco collapsed into a coma Nov. 23 after suffering severe bleeding in her brain, the pressure of which choked off blood flow to the interior of the brain.

At her family's request, she is being kept on several life support systems. Doctors said they needed to keep her alive at least six weeks to give the fetus a chance at survival.

Meanwhile, authorities were investigating reports from various sources that Mrs. Maniscalco was repeatedly beaten by her husband.

Her husband, John, denied any violence against his wife except for a fight last July in which he said he and his wife blackened each other's eyes.

Assistant Brooklyn District Attorney Ronald Aiello asked Maniscalco and his wife's mother and stepfather to come to the district attorney's office today for questioning.

One of the reports about the alleged beatings came from La-

Barbera, who said the matter was referred to the district attorney after "rumors around the emergency room."

He did, however, that he did not believe the woman's condition resulted from a beating, but that it was caused by a spontaneous internal hemorrhage. The Maniscalco family physician, Dr. W.P. Tyschenko, agreed, and the doctors reported their opinions to the district attorney.

Other reports of alleged beatings came from relatives and neighbors of the young couple.

The couple was separated, and he was visiting her when she collapsed. Maniscalco's brother, Anthony, said Sunday that the pair separated only so she could go on welfare and ease their financial straits.

Cite Border Drug Traffic

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Mexican border has become a "revolving door" that allows vast amounts of narcotics and thousands of illegal aliens to pour into the United States, the General Accounting Office said Saturday.

The GAO, an investigative arm of Congress, blamed lack of cooperation between federal agencies responsible for law enforcement along the border for the failure to slow the illegal traffic.

In a report to Congress, the GAO said the Customs Service and the Immigration and Naturalization Service seize only about 2 percent of the heroin, less than 1 percent of the cocaine and 10 percent of the marijuana estimated to be flowing into the United States from Mexico.

The GAO said the Drug Enforcement Administration does little better.

Seizures by all three agencies, according to the GAO, amount to 6 percent of the heroin, 3 percent of the cocaine and 13 percent of the marijuana flowing across the border.

The GAO said there are no reliable estimates of the number of illegal aliens in the United States, but that a Immigration Service contractor had estimated about 5.2 million of the some 8 million aliens believed to be in the country are Mexicans.

The report said the number of illegal Mexican aliens apprehended had increased Raising Sum For Shaw U.

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — The General Baptist State Convention, which is predominantly black, plans to raise money this month to help bail Shaw University out of some financial trouble.

Dr. George C. Debnam, a Raleigh physician and chairman of the executive committee of the Shaw trustee board, says Shaw needs $750,000 above its $5.8 million budget between now and July 1, 1978, to meet current expenses and pay debts.

The university is independent but affiliated with the Baptist from 29,700 in 1960 to more than 680,000 in 1975.

But for each alien caught, GAO said, at least two others are believed to get through.

"The border is a revolving door," the report said.

The GAO recommended that Congress hold oversight hearings on the problem and that there be more cooperation between the agencies.

church. Most of its support comes from student fees, federal and religious organizations and grants.

The Rev. Jerry Drayton of Winston-Salem, the chairman of the executive committee of the convention's general board, said Friday special offerings will be taken Dec. 11, 18, 25 and Jan. 1 for Shaw.

Convention and university officials met in Raleigh last week to review the school's financial condition.

Split Among Mayors Underscores Carter Problem

N.C. Weekend Traffic Has Claimed 10 Lives

By The Associated Press
Weekend traffic accidents in North Carolina claimed 10 lives, including a high school girl on her way to compete in a beauty contest.

The fatalities brought the state's highway death toll for the year to 1,322. Last year at this time the toll stood at 1,374. Kelley Beatrice Morgan, 17, of Gastonia, was on her way to compete in the "Miss Ashbrook High" beauty pageant Saturday night when she lost control of her car while rounding a curve on a Gastonia street and struck a van head-on. She died five hours later in a Charlotte hospital.

Two of the victims were pedestrians. George Shaw, 31, of Salem, died Friday night when he walked into the path of a car on N.C. 242 in Sampson County near Salem. And Ruth Wester Dorsey, 53, was struck and killed Saturday as she walked along a rural Franklin County road nine miles east of Louisburg. Lonnie Austin Summey, 54, and his wife, Mary Elma Summey, 50, both of Thomasville, were killed Sunday on U.S. 64 in Randolph County when the car in which they were riding struck a backhoe that had dropped from a trailer being towed by another vehicle.

Also killed Sunday was Thomas W. Garner, 21, of Greensboro when his car ran off a road and hit a bridge railing in Greensboro.

A Davidson County man died early Saturday in an accident on a rural road five miles south of Lexington. James Otis Oliver, 48, of Rt. 7, Lexington, was killed when the car he was driving ran off the right shoulder of the road, came back onto the highway, struck another car, and then ran off the roadway and into a tree.

A Rural Hall youth died early Saturday when the car in which he was a passenger went out of control at high speed and hit an embankment. He was identified as Victor William Barnes, 14. The accident occurred on a Stokes County rural road about seven miles north of Rural Hall. Two persons were killed in an accident which occurred at 12:10 p.m. Saturday on U.S. 64 just outside Ramseur in Randolph County. They were identified as Artis Franklin Briggs, 27, of Mebane, and Lloyd Guy Phillips, 46, of Matthews. Authorities said Briggs' car rear-ended another car, then crossed the center line and struck the car driven by Phillips head-on.

By JONATHAN WOLMAN
AP Urban Affairs Writer
SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A lively exchange between newly elected mayors at the Congress of Cities reveals a deep division of opinion that could haunt President Carter in his effort to mold a national urban policy. Carter's still-evolving urban program is based partly on his belief that because federal dollars are scarce, they must be given to the worst-off cities to have maximum impact. If mayors do not offer widespread support of this approach, it will be difficult for Carter to persuade Congress to channel most urban aid to distressed cities. Most mayors attending the annual meeting of the National League of Cities apparently favor the approach.

But leaders of healthy cities, many of them in the South and the West, say they need federal dollars to help pay for the costs of growth — new sewers, better streets, more fire hydrants and the like.

The differing viewpoints among the 4,500 delegates were dramatized in a luncheon exchange Sunday between Houston Mayor-elect James McConn and his counterparts from Cleveland, Seattle and New Orleans.

McConn asked rhetorically, "Why should we share our goodness when maybe we earned it?" A distressed cities policy would reward communities "who have had trouble in the past with fiscal planning," he said.

Dennis Kucinich of Cleveland, who at the age of 31 took office last month as the youngest mayor of a major American city, told McConn, "I have a great admiration for your city, but you can't tell the American people you're going to help Houston" and Cleveland both.

Dennis Kucinich of Cleveland, who at the age of 31 took office last month as one of the youngest mayors of a major American city, told McConn, "I have a great admiration for your city, but you can't tell the American people you're going to help Houston" and Cleveland both.

Ernest Morial, mayor-elect of New Orleans, said he considers New Orleans, like Houston, to be a Sun Belt community. Even so, he noted, "We're still an older city and we're still in distress."

One big difference between New Orleans and Houston, he said, is the Texas law that allows cities to annex developed suburban areas. It means Houston has one of the broadest tax bases in the nation.

Charles Royer, mayor-elect of Seattle, said he is afraid the Carter administration or Congress will waver in its commitment to targeting aid, thus diluting the concentration of funds so that no community gets enough to reverse its decline.

In defending the distressed cities approach, he said, "Model Cities was watered down till everybody got a little of it," and no one got enough to do the job. This time around, he counseled, "Let's put the medicine where the hurt is."

Carter is expected to announce the urban aid plan during his State of the Union address in January. A draft of the ban program, prepared by the Cabinet-level Urban and Regional Policy Group, is now being revised at the White House.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market pulled back slightly today, replaying Friday's uninspired showing.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, off 1.73 on Friday, was down another .44 at 823.54 by noon today.

Losers held a 6-5 advantage over gainers among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Analysts said it was difficult to get a clear picture of market sentiment in the midst of year-end tax maneuvering by investors.

They noted that tax selling has been particularly evident lately in the blue chip issues which make up the Dow average, and which have ranked among the market's poorest performers this year.

Citicorp, the early volume leader among NYSE issues, was down 1/8 at 23 1/4.

All sides said bargainners began serious discussions over the weekend on "substantial issues."

These include the union's demand for a right to strike at individual mines and for refinancing of the depleted health and pension funds. Coal companies, hit in recent years by wildcat strikes, are proposing penalties for miners who join in illegal walkouts and incentives for increased production.

Miller also has said the union is seeking an increase in the miners' wages of more than $60 a day. But pay has not surfaced as a public issue in the talks.

Big Maker Of Balloons

LOVE VALLEY, N.C. (AP) — An Iredell County company has turned an old chicken house into one of the world's five most important manufacturers of hot-air balloons.

The Balloon Works is the second largest maker of the colorful floating aircraft in the nation, its 45 employees turning out about three custom-made balloons each week, selling them for between $5,000 and $20,000 each.

The balloons are purchased by factory workers, professional people, clubs and businesses who use them to promote their products.

"The latest thing is to design the balloon to look like the product...a giant spark plug...two big legs like Levis...even Colonel Sanders has one," says Sue Meddock, whose husband is president of the company.

"We get a lot of young people who group together to be able to buy one," she said.

One customer asked that his balloon be painted to resemble a giant gumball machine. A Texan wanted a yellow rose on his. A woman attorney asked for the scales of justice on her balloon so she could quietly protest a Louisiana law forbidding attorney advertising.

Unicorns, gods of the winds, giant butterflies and the Great Pumpkin have all waited aloft from the Balloon Works, which has been here since 1973.

Before the firm moved into the chicken house, Mrs. Meddock said, it was in a former women's prison, complete with dungeon, behind the UNC-Charlotte campus.

"When we took it over," Mrs. Meddock said, "the chickens were gone, but the nests were still here. From women's prison to chicken house. That's progress."

Broncos Clinch Playoff

By ALEX SACHARE
AP Sports Writer

Making the National Football League playoffs is old hat for the Dallas Cowboys and Los Angeles Rams, but not for comeback hero Craig Morton and the surprising Denver Broncos.

"It's been a long time for the Denver Broncos, but it's been even longer for Craig Morton," said the 34-year-old quarterback, who threw two touchdown passes to help Denver subdue the Houston Oilers 24-14 Sunday and clinch the American Conference's Western Division title and the Broncos' first playoff berth in their 18-year history.

"It was very satisfying for me," said Morton, who suffered years of frustration as a backup in Dallas and then as a starter on a weak New York Giants club. "This team is really together. I'm very proud of it."

Proud is not the word for Denver's first-year coach, Red Miller.

"I want to talk about the playoffs, I want to talk about the playoffs, I want to talk about the playoffs," Miller screamed in the lockerroom after Sunday's win. "We are in the playoffs and for the first time this season I'm ready to talk about them."

Dallas and Los Angeles are also ready to talk of the playoffs after filling two of the four National Conference spots.

Dallas clinched the Eastern Division title with a 24-14 victory over the Philadelphia Eagles behind Tony Dorsett, who rushed for 206 yards and two touchdowns. Los Angeles assured itself of the NFC West crown with a 20-14 decision over the defending Super Bowl champion Oakland Raiders on a 43-yard scoring pass from Pat Haden to Harold Jackson with 2:10 to play.

That fills three of the eight playoff berths. The Baltimore Colts could make it four with a victory over the Miami Dolphins tonight. That would clinch the AFC East title for the Colts, although the Dolphins would still be in the running for a wild-card berth.

Here's the way the playoff picture looks:

AFC

Denver, 11-1, is in the playoffs as the West winner.

Baltimore, 9-2, can clinch the East title tonight.

Pittsburgh, 8-4, leads the Central by one game over Cincinnati, 7-5. The two teams meet Saturday at Cincinnati.

Oakland, 9-3, is still alive in the wild card race, along with New England, 8-4, and the loser of tonight's game between Baltimore, 9-2, and Miami, 8-3.

NFC

Dallas, 10-2, is in as the East winner.

Minnesota, 8-4, leads Chicago by one game in the Central.

Los Angeles, 9-3, is in as the West champion.

St. Louis, Washington and Chicago, each 7-5, are the frontrunners for the wild card, as well as Minnesota if it fails to win the Central Division. St. Louis is at Washington Saturday in a key game.

In other NFL games Sunday, the Chicago Bears shut out the Tampa Bay Buccaneers 10-0, the Minnesota Vikings rallied to edge the San Francisco 49ers 28-27, the New England Patriots beat the Atlanta Falcons 16-10, the New York Giants upset the St. Louis Cardinals 27-7, the Pittsburgh Steelers defeated the Seattle Seahawks 30-20, the Washington Redskins downed the Buffalo Bills 10-0, the Cincinnati Bengals defeated the Kansas City Chiefs 27-7, the Green Bay Packers trimmed the Detroit Lions 10-9, the San Diego Chargers whipped the Cleveland Browns 37-14 and the New York Jets edged the New Orleans Saints 16-13.

Morton threw 13-yard touchdown passes to Riley Odoms and Rick Upchurch to help the Broncos to a 14-7 halftime lead. He suffered a strained shoulder on the final play of the first half but came back in the fourth quarter to guide the Broncos to their decisive score, his 33-yard pass to Odoms setting up Norris Weese's 5-yard run.

Cowboys 24, Eagles 14

Tony Dorsett, who earlier scored on a 1-yard run, broke loose on an 84-yard scoring jaunt in the fourth quarter as Dallas wrapped up its seventh NFC East title and 11th playoff berth in the last 12 years.

Dorsett, who carried 23 times, is only the third NFL rookie to gain 200 yards in one game, joining Jim Brown and Tom Wilson.

Rams 20, Raiders 14

Haden completed 13 of 22 passes for 186 yards, was not intercepted and was sacked just twice as Los Angeles clinched its fifth straight NFC West title. Oakland's Ken Stabler, by contrast, was 16 for 37 for 194 yards but was intercepted four times and sacked four times.

Bears 10, Bucs 0

In six home games, Tampa Bay has been shut out five times and gotten one field goal in the other contest. The Bucs held Chicago scoreless for three periods, but then Bob Thomas booted a 32-yard field goal and Walter Payton scored on a 3-yard run.

Vikings 28, 49ers 27

Minnesota trailed 24-0 midway through the third period, but rookie quarterback Tommy Kramer came in and threw three touchdown passes in the fourth quarter, including a 69-yard bomb to Sammy White with 1:38 to play, for the victory to remain one game ahead of Chicago.

Patriots 16, Falcons 10

Steve Grogan connected with Stanley Morgan for a 33-yard TD with 4:40 to go for the touchdown that kept the Patriots' playoff hopes alive. That pass capped an 89-yard drive.

Giants 27, Cardinals 7

"They took the ball and stuck it down our throats," said a dejected Coach Don Coryell after his St. Louis Cardinals were upset by the Giants. Cornerback Bill Bryant's 54-yard touchdown with an interception broke open the game in the third period.

Steelers 30, Seahawks 20

Terry Bradshaw ran for two Pittsburgh touchdowns and passed for a third and Franco Harris gained 103 yards to raise his season total to 1,052 and place him 10th on the career list with 6,185.

Redskins 10, Bills 0

Joe Theismann's 12-yard pass to Jean Fugett in the second period provided the only touchdown Washington needed in a game played before nearly 60,000 empty seats. Only 22,975 showed up at 80,020-seat Rich Stadium, the smallest crowd in Buffalo since 1963.

Bengals 27, Chiefs 7

Ken Anderson threw two touchdown passes as Cincinnati handed Kansas City its 10th loss in 12 games, the most losses in the history of the franchise. "Mistakes, turnovers and breakdowns," bemoaned Chiefs Coach Tom Bettis.

Packers 10, Lions 9

Green Bay took a 10-0 halftime lead but needed a goal line stand in the final five minutes to turn back the Lions. Steve Luke, Johnny Gray and Willie Buchanon made the game-saving tackle on Rick Kane, who was stopped cold on a fourth-and-goal try from the 2.

Chargers 37, Browns 14

Dan Fouts completed 14 of 20 passes for 237 yards and three TDs as San Diego whipped Cleveland. "This was a dead and buried football team," said Browns Coach Forrest Gregg. "They didn't seem to care."

Jets 16, Saints 13

Field goals of 42, 29 and 27 yards by Pat Leahy, the latter two in the fourth quarter, helped the Jets past New Orleans. Clark Gaines rushed for 103 yards for New York, while Chuck Muncie gained 107 for the Saints.

The Longest Run

Dallas Cowboy Tony Dorsett (33) threads his way through the Philadelphia defense on his way to an

84-yard touchdown. The run was the longest of the NFL season and the Cowboys beat the Eagles, 24-14, enabling them to become the host team in the playoffs. (AP Laserphoto)

ECU Swimmers Host Tar Heels

Ray Scharf, head swimming coach at East Carolina, has had many honors come his way and has coached ten consecutive Southern Conference championship teams before the Pirates dropped out of the league last year.

But, there is one thing he has not done—defeated a team from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. He will get another shot at the Tar Heels tomorrow night when the Bucs open their dual meet season at Minges Natatorium.

"I'll have to say that it has been more than a little frustrating," Scharf said of the series with UNC. "They always have very fine teams and the meets are usually competitive. But somehow, we always manage to come out on the short end.

"We are certainly going to try and change things this year," the ECU coach said. "Carolina has a fine team. They won the Penn State (Relays). I just hope that being at home, with a good crowd, will make a difference."

One of the features of the meet is a possible match-up of brothers. John Tudor, a junior middle distance swimmer for the Pirates, and brother Louis, a senior at the Chapel Hill school, did not face each other last year when UNC downed the Bucs, 65-48, but it could happen this year. Both Tudors swim on their respective 400 yard freestyle relay teams, which is normally the last event in a meet. If the meet is as close as it looks to be, the decision may rest with the Tudors.

The meet is scheduled to begin at 7:30 p.m.

Smuggled Handwarmer

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (AP)—Part of Bud Grant's reputation as a coach who forbids his players to use artificial warming devices has evaporated.

National Football League teams visiting Metropolitan Stadium in December generally use gas heaters along the sidelines, such as the San Francisco 49ers did Sunday.

The Vikings shiver in their warmup jackets and parkas.

But 35-year-old linebacker Wally Hilgenberg, who has shivered through 10 Minnesota winters, may have short-circuited the no-warming rule.

Hilgenberg reportedly heated a 10-to 15-pound rock in a sauna prior to Sunday's game, wrapped it in a towel because it was so hot and smuggled it onto the field.

Pate, Stacy Take Mixed

LARGO, Fla. (AP)—A bitterly disappointed Curtis Strange and Nancy Lopez could do nothing but watch in mounting concern and dismay as that first pro-golf victory, the one they say is the hardest to achieve, slipped from their grasp.

After trailing all week, by margins ranging up to eight strokes, they finally tied it on the 71st hole, finished with a par and then could only watch as Jerry Pate and U.S. Women's Open champ Hollis Stacy carefully engineered a winning birdie on the final hole.

"They had both balls in the fairway, so I thought they'd birdie," Strange said. They did. Stacy hit an 8-iron third shot about 10 feet from the flag on the final hole and Pate, who'd had trouble putting all week, broke the tie with a rap into the back of the cup for a birdie 4.

"That's why he's where he is," Stacy said of her partner, who won twice this year despite missing most of the season with an injury. "He makes the putts he has to make."

Pate and Stacy, who had led since a fantastic 61 in the first round on the North course at the Bardmoor Country Club, finished with a 70 and a 270 total. Both collected $20,000 from the total purse of $200,000.

Strange, 22, and Lopez, 20, a pair of rookies who joined their respective tours only in mid-season, salvaged their disappointment with $12,944 each. Trailing by three shots going into the final day, they finished with a 68 and a 271 total.

It was the fourth runner-up finish this year for Nancy, who started her pro career with three seconds in a row, and marked the second time Strange had finished in the No. 2 spot. Both have yet to win.

"It's tough," the pretty Nancy said. "I'm tired of being second."

"I really hoped we could pull this off. We haven't reached the top yet. They don't know who we are. All week long I've seen pictures of other players in the paper, but not ours."

She added, "It'd be nice to be known, to hear someone saying, 'Come on, Nancy' or 'Come on, Curtis'."

Under the unique format for this tournament, both members of each man-woman team hit off the tee. Each plays the other's ball on the next shot. They then select the one they want and play alternate shots on the same ball for the remainder of the hole.

Smith Still Dislikes Big Four Tourney

By The Associated Press
You can't accuse North Carolina Coach Dean Smith of sour grapes when he says he doesn't like the Big Four basketball tournament.

Smith's Tar Heels were the winners of the hotly-contested four-way melee among Duke, Carolina, N.C. State and Wake Forest. The Heels won the championship with a come-from-behind victory Saturday, 87-82, over State.

So Smith is entitled to a small fit of pique if he wants one. "I've been against the tournament from the beginning," Smith said. "I think we play each other enough during the season. But it's for the players, so I guess I should enjoy it too."

Smith must certainly have enjoyed it as much as anybody, but Coach Norm Sloan of N.C. State was not unhappy over the performance of his Wolfpack, picked by Atlantic Coast Conference sportswriters to finish last in the conference.

"I'm not happy about losing, but it's not that we lost and the season's over," Sloan said. "The games that we want are the ones that count up in the win-loss records." The tournament doesn't count in conference standings.

"There is a lot of pressure playing here, even though the games don't count in the ACC race," Sloan added. "But I like it. It's good experience."

Elsewhere Saturday, Clemson defeated The Citadel, 99-65, and Virginia beat Old Dominion, 86-67. Fourteenth-ranked Maryland fell to Athletics in Action in an exhibition game, 98-94. One innovation in this year's Big Four Tournament was the three-referee officiating, which made for what many observers considered an excessive number of foul calls. But the coaches weren't complaining.

"I've been trying to get three officials for 10 years," Smith said. "And using them this year will be a good experiment. The number of fouls had no bearing on the number of officials. There would have been no more whistles blown with two officials — or three — or ten."

The tournament was a blow to Wake Forest, which was ranked 18th last week and won the last three tournaments in a row. The Deacons lost to both North Carolina State and Duke.

"We've had a lack of practice time because Rod Griffin has been out," said Coach Carl Tacy. "But you look at what he did against Duke and you can't ask him to do any more."

Griffin had 31 points against Duke and 32 against the Wolfpack, but he was unconsolated by his performance.

"The only thing that was important was to win," he said. "As far as my own performance was concerned, it is irrelevant because we didn't win."

Clemson wouldn't let The Citadel slow down the game Saturday and won easily, with four Tigers scoring in double figures.

"We knew that we would see some deliberate offense this season, and the thing I liked was the way our team kept its poise," said Clemson coach Bill Foster. "Everybody played well."

Virginia's hot shooting led the way to the Cavs' easy victory over Old Dominion. The Cavaliers broke away in the second half, shooting 63 percent from the floor.

"We played very well, probably about as well as we could," said Virginia coach Terry Holland.

The coming week is going to be a busy one for the East Carolina University basketball Pirates.

Tonight at 8:30 p.m., the Bucs will entertain Alderson-Broadus College in Minges Coliseum. It is the final home game this month, and the Pirates are not back in Minges until January 10, when they entertain St. Peter's College.

Last Thursday night, the Bucs drew what was probably the third largest crowd in Minges history. And this time, the fans came to see East Carolina rather than the team they were playing.

Most of the fans were disappointed in the showing against UNC-Wilmington, but the Seahawks are a strong team, much stronger than any UNCW team the Pirates have faced before.

Larry Gillman, coach of the Pirates, was just as disappointed in the performance of the team as anyone. And he hated for it to happen before such a crowd as the Pirates had.

"I just hope the fans won't give up on us," he said afterwards. "We are still young and so anxious to please. It would be nice to see another crowd like the one we had Thursday."

We would hope that the fans don't give up quickly on the Pirates either.

East Carolina badly needs a victory tonight to start their difficult week, and a helpful, large crowd would be a real morale booster to the players.

So come on out and give 'em another chance.

Tough Tasks Ahead
Following tonight's game, the Pirates will travel to Maryland tomorrow for their Wednesday night meeting with the Terrapins.

That contest will probably be the toughest test so far for the Pirates. Last year, East Carolina was in the game until late and was in position to pull off the upset. Naturally, the Pirates would like to fulfill that upset this time around.

Then, on Friday, the Pirates open play in the First Union Invitational Tournament in Charlotte. The Bucs once more face a strong team, LaSalle. Then, on Saturday, depending on the outcome, they will play either at 7 or 9 p.m. in the consolation or championships against either Boston College or the hosting UNC Charlotte five.

Being in the finals of that event would be a real boost for the Bucs.

Even then, the hard work is not over. The following Saturday, the Pirates go up to Raleigh to face N.C. State, closing out their pre-holiday schedule.

They return to action January 4 at South Carolina, then face William & Mary in Williamsburg before finally coming home to open up a five-game stand.

Rockets Dump Lakers

Skyhook Returns
Los Angeles Laker center Kareem Abdul-Jabbar shoots one of his patented skyhooks Sunday night in the Lakers game against Denver. The game was the first for Jabbar since breaking his right hand in the first game of the season.

By The Associated Press
Even with Kareem Abdul-Jabbar back in the lineup, the Los Angeles Lakers didn't have enough punch.

The National Basketball Association All-Star center scored 21 points and grabbed 14 rebounds Sunday night in his first game since he suffered a broken right hand in a fight with Milwaukee's Kent Benson on opening day Oct. 18.

But despite the presence of the five-time Most Valuable Player, the Lakers dropped a 111-109 decision to the Denver Rockets and plunged lower in the Pacific Division with an 814 record.

NBA Roundup

Jabbar's return was offset by fine performances from Denver's David Thompson and Dan Issel. They scored 27 and 23 points respectively and Thompson assisted on Jimmy Price's game-winning basket with three seconds left.

In the other NBA games, the Washington Bullets whipped the Cleveland Cavaliers 100-94; the Milwaukee Bucks ripped the New Jersey Nets 134-118 in overtime and the Atlanta Hawks turned back the Phoenix Suns 96-89.

Before Price hit his winning shot from the top of the key, the Lakers had tied the game 12 seconds earlier on a jumper by Norm Nixon.

Of his return to action, Jabbar said: "It's hard to say what kind of shape I'm in. It's been so long since I've played, I've only had two practice sessions prior to tonight. But I really wasn't as tired as I thought I would be at the end of the game."

Bullets 100, Indians 94
Phil Chenier and Kevin Grevey combined for 53 points at one guard position to carry Washington over Cleveland. The victory, the Bullets' ninth in their last 10 games, moved them past the Cavaliers into first place in the Central Division.

Bucks 134, Nets 118
Brian Winters scored six of his 36 points and Quinn Buckner seven of his 21 in overtime as Milwaukee surged past New Jersey.

Hawks 96, Suns 89
Charles Criss scored a career-high 30 points as Atlanta came from behind in the last quarter to defeat Phoenix. Criss, who had been hospitalized a few days ago with stomach trouble, scored 20 points in the final period to tie a Phoenix Coliseum record.

Freshman Pair Already Helping Pirate Gymnasts

By WOODY PEELE

The fortunes of the East Carolina University women's gymnastics team took a turn upward this fall when two freshmen enrolled at the school.

The two young gymnasts, one of them from Greenville, have already made their mark on the Lady Pirate team, winning events in the Georgia State Invitational last month.

"We should be competitive for the first time," Coach Stevie Chepko said. "It's due to the addition of our two freshmen stars, Mary Hubbard (Morristown, N.J.), and Susan McKnight (Greenville)."

"Susan has a whole lot of talent, but she's only been in competition for about a year. Mary has eight years experience, and she's been to the United States Gymnastic Association's nation tournament, and that doesn't hurt at all."

There are a number of other freshmen on the team, which Miss Chepko says is working harder than ever before. "We have two from the Statesville area, Joan Hardy and Ruth Kearns, both of whom are in their first year of competition but will be a help to us."

The only upperclassman expected to provide a lot of help in meets is sophomore Donna Pendley, also from Statesville. "She's real good on the balance beam," the coach said.

But it will be McKnight and Hubbard, both on scholarship, who will carry the heavy load for the time. Miss Chepko expects them to score about half of the team's total this winter.

"We are hopeful that they will score 30 points each in five different meets so that they can qualify for the regionals."

The coach expects the uneven bars to be the strongest event for the Lady Pirates. "McKnight has an excellent routine. She won the Georgia meet and Mary was right behind her."

Next in strength comes the beam, with Kearns adding extra strength here. The floor exercises ranks third, with Hubbard having a strong routine here.

"Right now, the vaulting is our weakest area. It will be stronger than last year, but still weak by standards, Chepko said.

To qualify for the nationals, the Pirates will have four members competing in every event, with the rest of the 12-woman roster competing in specialized events. "McKnight,

The Valkyries were led by Annie Wooten's 17 points. Glenda Green scored 12 points and Vergenell Person 10. Cornelia Howard was the only West Edgcombe player in double figures with 11.

West Edgcombe will play again Tuesday at Greene Central, while the Vikings' next game is Friday night when they host Roanoke.

San Francisco Turned Into 'Gay Capital' Of U.S.

By ROBERT STRAND
SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — On New Year's Day, 1965, a costume ball changed San Francisco as much as the earthquake and fire of 1906.

A group of Protestant ministers and their wives turned up at a homosexual dance in the hope their presence would discourage mass arrests.

The police, who failed to persuade the operator of California Hall to cancel the rental agreement, lined up squad cars outside, flooded the door and photographed each of the 600 guests as they entered. They made six arrests.

The next day the clergy called a news conference to denounce the police for their actions, and San Francisco has not been the same since.

The nation's most concentrated homosexual community came out of the closet and developed political and financial clout that is enormous.

Under pressure from its San Francisco members, the California legislature abolished criminal penalties for all sexual acts between consenting adults.

Now the police chief wants homosexual officers on his force. In this year's annual softball game between the police all-stars and the Badlands Baddies, the gays won, 14-8.

Homosexuals combined with anti-war activists in 1971 to elect Richard Hongisto, an advocate of gay rights, as sheriff. Their campaign sign was a peace symbol inside a badge on a lavender background.

Mayor George Moscone appoints homosexuals to city commissions, and voters in the heavily gay Castro district recently elected a homosexual, Harvey Milk, to the city's board of supervisors, representing the biggest gay political gain to date.

No serious candidate fails to explain his views at public homosexual meetings, and the mayor attends the annual Beaux Arts costume ball, now held in Civic Auditorium. Both Republicans and Democrats have gay caucuses.

Chip Carter campaigned for his father by riding in the annual tricycle race between gay bars, a charity event.

Anita Bryant portrays San Francisco as Sodom and Gomorrah, but Mayor Moscone says it presents an instructive lesson for other cities.

"Bring the gays into the political process," he says. "They can contribute, they are compatible with a successful city. They're involved in business, as corporate managers, in creating jobs for others. They're citizens. Everyone loses if they are left out."

By the best estimates, one out of six or seven adult San Franciscans is homosexual: from 70,000 to 150,000.

With the appearance of this vast sub-culture some curious social strains resulted.

Commonly young heterosexual women complain that so many young men are gay they don't have anybody to go out with, much less marry. At the opera, there are more couples of young men than of men and women.

An increasing number of families are breaking up because a marriage partner is or turns homosexual. Lesbian social events routinely include care facilities for children from their past. The city is full of male homosexuals with children they rarely talk about.

In depressed black and Hispanic areas, meetings of citizens debate how to keep gays out of their neighborhoods — not for fears about children but because gay purchases of property push other people out. "Gays and the Orientals are buying up everything that isn't nailed down," says Bob Ross, editor of the Bay Area Reporter, a gay newspaper.

Unencumbered by the cost of raising families, homosexuals acquire property on a mass scale. The real urban rehabilitation program has been the renovation of the city's ornate, Victorian structures into two-tone architectural jewels, much of it the work of homosexual owners.

"It's my belief that gay businessmen are more successful than straights," says John Schmidt, a wealthy insurance broker and head of a gay businessman's association. "Gays can take risks because they have little to lose. My own brothers and sisters are married and they are still struggling."

Wayne Friday, a former stock analyst, says, "I go to a lesbian barber, do my laundry at a gay-owned laundromat, and have a lesbian auto mechanic. I eat mostly at gay restaurants and drink mostly at gay bars."

Thus, gays buy from gays, gays socialize with gays and gays create a self-segregated world complete with churches and a synagogue. The sub-culture includes 10 bathhouses featuring private cubicles and "orgy rooms" for sexual encounters.

San Francisco counts 80 male homosexual bars and six women's bars, and Friday, vice president of the gay Tavern Guild, says business is fantastic. Liquor distributors hire gay salesmen.

The city has a caucus of 60 homosexual doctors, many of whose practices are exclusively gay. There are gay dentists, cabbies, psychiatrists, plumbers, carpenters and contractors.

But while a couple of new bank branch managers are homosexual, one bank recently fired an executive after 14 years on the job when his gayness became known.

The city Human Rights Commission receives 10 job discrimination complaints a month, some from gays about gay employers. Jo Daley, its homosexual specialist, says "many people go to work each day with fear they will be fired."

An ordinance forbidding the city from doing business with firms that discriminate on the basis of sexual practice was invoked recently to force Pacific Telephone to declare a new non-discrimination policy.

Discrimination in housing exists — the huge Golden Gateway Center will not rent one-bedroom apartments to unrelated, same-sex couples — but homosexuals have no great trouble finding rentals.

Marjorie Martin, an anti-gay apartment owner, blames the homosexual takeover of her once family-oriented neighborhood on people like herself. She says, "It's our fault because we refused to rent to people with children."

Organized anti-gay sentiment is practically absent from this city where the San Francisco Chronicle publishes stories and pictures about gay fashions and runs a fictional series in which major characters spend a lot of time glorifying their homosexual love lives.

The threat to gays comes from California voters elsewhere. Hundreds of thousands of dollars are being collected to fight an anti-gay statewide initiative. Because of a technicality, State Sen. John V. Briggs, R-Fullerton, failed to qualify the measure for the June ballot but he promises he will qualify it for the November ballot.

If adopted, the initiative would forbid employment of teachers who have engaged in "public homosexual acts" or who advocate or encourage homosexuality.

Gay leaders predict the initiative will inspire a brouhaha more spirited than the Miami election in which voters balloted 2 to 1 to repeal a gay civil rights ordinance.

Briggs, a gubernatorial hopeful, came to San Francisco June 14 to announce his initiative from the steps of City Hall. While jeered by a crowd of 75, he said the city was "a captured nation waiting to be liberated."

Howard Wallace, a homosexual teamster who was elected a shop steward three days after he "came out" on television, says the initiative will be opposed by teachers generally as an infringement on free speech. He says, "If they try to fire teachers, we will organize faculty and students in every case and go on strike. All hell will break loose."

In San Francisco this is no idle threat. Tom Ammiano, a gay teacher, claims one third of teachers and administrators are homosexual. Last May the school board voted 7 to 0 to revise the family life curriculum to eliminate "negative references to gays."

Wallace is building a potent alliance with unions — which historically have been hostile to homosexuals — by providing gay support for such labor activities as the boycott of Coors beer.

Last year, gay activists passed out 20,000 leaflets to support local ballot measures of organized labor, which happened to be in deep political trouble at the time.

In return, the gays want anti-discrimination clauses in labor contracts. They have been successful with the culinary workers, retail clerks, some teamsters locals and communications workers. Wallace thinks half the culinary workers in town are gay.

Sen. Briggs gets his support in fundamentalist churches where the petitions for his initiative are circulated — an activity which gay lawsuits attack as a violation of the churches' tax exemptions.

For the fundamentalists, homosexuality is sternly forbidden by the Bible, although many liberal clergy deny this interpretation.

Briggs also appeals to widespread beliefs that gays are potential child molesters. In fact, child molestation by homosexuals is rare.

The real issue arises from demands for equal rights for gays. What they really seek, critics say, is society's Good Housekeeping seal of approval for their sexual practice.

A common attitude in the statewide electorate is that homosexuality should be tolerated but also discouraged — the same way that society currently treats adultery, smoking, gambling and drinking.

Giving apparent approval, the reasoning goes, implies telling school children that there are two ways of doing things, try one, and if you don't like it, try the other.

Homosexuals retort that what children are told makes no difference because psychiatrists now mostly believe sexual preferences are fixed by age 5.

The old stereotype of the homosexual as closeted, frustrated, guilt-ridden, persecuted and suicidal is out-of-date, at least in San Francisco.

The gays' new developing image pictures a personality who, having confronted his own sexuality, is spontaneous, self-sufficient and free of responsibilities burdening straights.

West, the newspaper editor, says many homosexuals are beginning to envy gays "because they seem to be able to do anything, when and where they want, and effortlessly."

Phyllis Lyon, a sex expert and a longtime lesbian leader, comments on "the lack of faith heterosexuals have in heterosexuality. They fear half the population will turn gay. If so, what is so grand and glorious about heterosexuality?"

Yet all is not joy in the gay community. Job problems persist, and the alcoholism rate towers above the San Francisco rate, which is the nation's highest. Perhaps this is because, as Supervisor Milk puts it, for "gays shoved out of the straight community, bars provide our meeting place, our church, our school and our family."

Enough gays have trouble for David Kuhlman to run a "matchmaker" service. He says more and more San Francisco gays, satiated with free and easy sex, now are seeking "rewarding relationships."

Not infrequent violent harassment of gays by roving young toughs is another problem. To protect themselves, gays formed "a butterfly brigade" of volunteers to patrol the Castro district.

Young lesbian militants feel doubly discriminated against, both as lesbians and as women.

BUSINESS IS 'FANTASTIC' at the 90 male homosexual bars and six women's bars in San Francisco says an official of the Gay Tavern Guild. Here is a dance floor scene at the Andromeda Bar. (UPI Photo)

Although the city has numerous wealthy, successful lesbians, the young ones feel cut out of the money and power possible for men.

And the lesbians are preoccupied with the divorce problem of keeping custody of their children.

Twenty years ago, Ms. Lyon says, women first encountering lesbian writings reacted, "I thought I was the only one." Now the reaction is, "I know who I am, but how do I find others like myself?"

"It is still very difficult for some lesbian women to reach out for other women," Ms. Lyon said. "And so many women lack sex education that would help them understand their feelings. They get married without understanding what they are."

Priscilla Alexander, a lesbian militant, believes the number of homosexual women is growing because "women are becoming more sexual. Now women are encouraged to be sexual in the same degree as men."

In the general gay community enough guilt remains that Frank Worthen, 48, who turned celibate after 25 years of homosexuality, runs a Bible-oriented group, called Love in Action, for 100 ex-homosexuals. Mostly they are persons with early church backgrounds who see their own sex preference as sinful.

Whatever the difficulties, the local gay community is booming. Gay leaders see their population steadily expanding and Ross speculates that the city could turn into a gay complex.

In San Francisco the attitude has evolved from "gay is okay" to "gay is good" and now, in some cases, to "gay is better." But most homosexual leaders say all they want is equality.

Their long-range political objectives include a national gay rights act, non-discrimination in the military and immigration, the legal benefits that would flow from gay marriages, federal grants to gay social services and the right to adopt children.

Schmidt, the insurance broker, thinks "the homosexual deserves the equal time in school that black people ask. Students should be told about gay cowboys on the frontier, about Michelangelo and Leonardo Da Vinci."

His Concern Is To Help Seek Producer Of Anita's Song

BOONE, N. C. (AP) — Donation by one person of more than nine gallons of blood over the years should be some kind of record, but this donor — George Miles — doesn't look at it that way. His concern, he says, is helping others.

Miles, a Tennessee native who is a professor of chemistry at Appalachian State University, is working on his ninth gallon of Red Cross blood donation, which figures to be 72 pints, or the equivalent of the blood supply of six people. He looks at giving blood as simply something he enjoys doing for the sake of helping others. "I think we all have to try harder to help each other," he says.

For a full-time professor, Miles also shares a lot of his time with others in the community. Over the past five years, he says, "I've tried to do something about a situation that I think is critical — the older citizen. I visit five households about once week."

Miles recalls that last winter, with its record breaking cold, was a rough one for the elderly. Old folks, he found, stayed indoors much of the time during the frigid weather.

Recalling his visits, he said, "I generally did more errands for them than — got to be quite a banker last year."

He says he has read much about the problems of aging to the effect that the older citizen is basically happy. As he sees it, "They're happy to be living, if only you can take the loneliness out. I think graceful people grow old gracefully and unhappy people grow old unhappy. But they all need to know that someone cares."

The chemistry professor doesn't just visit empty handed, either. He knows the chemistry of a cake, and he can make one from scratch. So he bestows a cake on many of those he visits, averaging about four cakes a week.

Rounding out his week, Miles teaches a Sunday School class at Boone's First Baptist Church.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Anti-gay rights activist Anita Bryant has been unable to find a producer for her song, "There's Nothing Like the Love Between a Woman and a Man," despite favorable reactions by Nashville's music industry.

"To the best of my knowledge, it was not turned down in Nashville," Bob Greene, Miss Bryant's husband-manager, said Saturday.

Greene made his comments in a telephone interview from Cleveland, Tenn., where Miss Bryant appeared in a Christmas concert sponsored by the YMCA and Church of God of Prophecy.

"They said it would be a hit but their hierarchy in New York had second thoughts about it. They said an Anita Bryant record would spoil their punk rock image. It's ridiculous that we have come to the age where Anita Bryant can spoil the image of punk rock."

Greene, who refused to identify producers he contacted, said he and his wife may produce the record themselves or give a small label a shot at it.

"I think a small label could take something like this and really make a cause out of it," he said. "Then maybe what we'll see is a small label being able to take a chance on a record, while the biggies chickened out. The record has nothing to do with the homosexual issue. It's just a good country song about a normal relationship between a man and a woman, the child on the knee and all that stuff."

Miss Bryant has been an outspoken opponent of gay rights and led the fight to repeal a Dade County, Fla., ordinance calling for equal opportunity in housing and employment.

Greene said he does not believe that his wife has been blacklisted by record companies.

"I just think the major labels are running scared," he said. "The gay disco sound is big business, and I think there are those with the major labels that are against anything Anita will do. It seems she no longer has the right in the country to disagree and, because she does, she's being punished."

Greene said he and his wife are awaiting word from NBC television concerning her appearance in the Orange Bowl Parade at Miami.

"Anita has done nine years of the Orange Bowl Parade on NBC," he said. "We normally hear in October but we haven't heard this year. I know that the producers and the people who have worked with Anita know in their hearts that she's the only gal that could do it — she's synonymous with the parade."

"NBC's producing a live wholesome parade for the family, but I'm sympathetic with them because maybe they think something would happen on live television. But I just wonder when the large corporations and big networks will stand up to these minorities that seem to be running the country through terrorism."

How's The Weather?

WEATHER FORECAST — Cold weather is forecast today for northern states with snow expected in northern Rockies, northern and central Plains and Great Lakes and the Northeast. Mild weather is due from the central and southern Pacific coasts across the country to the Atlantic coast. (AP Laserphoto Map)

By The Associated Press
The threat of tornadoes, severe thunderstorms and large hail loomed in the forecast for North Carolina early today as a winter storm churned eastward from Kentucky pushing gusty winds ahead of it.

A tornado watch issued by the national weather service warned that conditions existed early in the day for tornadoes and severe thunderstorms over portions of several southeastern states, including extreme western North Carolina.

The North Carolina counties of Cherokee, Clay, Graham, Jackson, Macon and Swain were included in the tornado watch.

Dense fog and drizzle which blanketed the northern portion of the state at sunrise today was expected to dissipate during the morning, but showers and a few thunderstorms were expected to move across the state from the west.

Temperatures today will warm into the 50s across the northwest mountains, the 60s across the remainder of the mountains and northern sections and the 70s across southern sections.

With the passing cold front, clearing skies and colder temperatures will return tonight and early Tuesday. Lows tonight will range from the teens in the northwest mountains to the 40s along the coast.

The forecast for Tuesday calls for windy and colder weather, with a good chance for snow flurries in the mountains. Temperatures will range from the 30s in the mountains to the 50s along the coast.

On Sunday, afternoon temperatures ranged from the 50s in the mountains and northern sections to the low and mid 70s along the south coast. The warmest reporting location in the state was Wilmington with 74. Overnight temperatures ranged from the mid 40s to the mid 50s.

TVA Will Buy West Va. Coal

Dogs Require Winter Care

DURHAM, N. C. (AP) — A dog may be a man's best friend, but that doesn't mean he's the dog's best friend, especially in frigid weather.

That's the opinion of Dr. Joseph L. Wagner, a veterinarian who oversees the daily care and well-being of some 40,000 animals as director of the Division of Laboratory Animal Resources at Duke University Medical Center.

Wagner says it's not that dogs can't stand low temperatures. On the contrary, most healthy, mature dogs adapt well to winter weather because nature provides them with an insulating layer of fat and a heavier coat of hair.

But when man manipulates an animal's environment artificially, it sets the stage for problems, Wagner says.

"If you happen to be an irresponsible dog owner and permit your dog to roam free, as long as he can find food and water, he's smart enough to find shelter and a place where he can sleep," says Wagner. "A dog that's tied up outside in wind and sleet or put in a pen without shelter, however, can get frostbitten or freeze to death."

He says that how well dogs can stand harsh winters depends on their age, health, breed and acclimation to the environment. A dog that has been kept inside, he explains, will be in greater danger from the cold than a husky bred to live in temperatures below zero.

Wagner recommends that all animals, including livestock, have clean, dry shelters insulated against the weather and containing water supplies protected from freezing. Such shelters, he says, are essential for maintaining the health of animals kept out of doors.

"This may seem elementary to people who have had experience with animals, but it's disturbing how many owners neglect animals through ignorance or laziness," he says.

The veterinarian, who has a dog, two cats and three chickens at home and 20,000 mice at work, said he and his staff share the concern of humane societies over the abuse of animals in this country.

Quoting humane society statistics of 17 million dogs and cats ending up this year in animal shelters, with 13.5 million being put to death because they can't find homes, Wagner notes, "Many others will simply be dumped along the highway to contend with starvation and disease. This abuse will end only when pet owners recognize and accept their responsibilities."

CHARLESTON, W.Va. (AP) — The Tennessee Valley Authority has signed a contract for its first purchase of West Virginia coal, and TVA officials indicate it may be the start of a continuing relationship.

A legislative committee, which has been working toward that goal for the last two years, was told Sunday by three TVA officials that the pact signed last week calls for the West Virginia firm to supply the TVA with a one-time shipment of 30,000 tons.

TVA board member David Freeman was optimistic in predicting there would be future such purchases. He noted the TVA, up until now, has purchased mostly medium and high-sulfur coal, but said the authority now needs low-sulfur coal like that produced in West Virginia to meet air quality standards.

He also emphasized there are no plans to purchase coal from the West.

"The TVA should be purchasing Eastern coal ... we do not have any plans for purchasing any coal supplies from the West. On the contrary, we are looking to the region we serve," he said. Freeman did not disclose the name of the company involved in the contract or the price per ton, but added, "We hope this opens a new era of trade between the TVA and West Virginia."

He said that ordinarily the TVA negotiates long-term coal contracts, but that in periods of emergency it can negotiate for the spot purchase of coal. He said with the prospect of a coal strike, the TVA has declared such an emergency exists and is currently buying up to 300,000 tons of coal a week, including the West Virginia purchase.

"It's not a question of buying heat anymore. We're buying cleanliness, which makes it a completely different ball game," said James Williams, who is director of purchases for the TVA.

"I think the policy of the TVA board ... is to try our level best to buy the coal from this part of the country. The idea of using oil to haul coal halfway across the country offends me. I'm concerned about the energy crisis ... and it also offends me to think that we're going to create such a demand for coal in the West that they have to build boom towns out there, while we still have less than full employment," said Freeman, who also told the lawmakers:

—He believes the TVA would be willing to aid in the financial development of coal facilities in the Mountain State if such agreements could be worked out between coal operators and the TVA.

—There may be a need for a seminar involving the TVA, West Virginia coal operators, and railroad officials to discuss the TVA's needs and the possibility of negotiating unit train shipping rates to make hauling the coal from West Virginia to TVA plants more economical.

Freeman said the TVA buys an estimated 35 to 40 million tons of coal annually and that he saw no appreciable change in that demand despite proposed nuclear power plants coming on line in the TVA system between now and 1985.

Pedestrian Hit By Truck

One pedestrian was injured and an estimated $600 damage caused in two collisions investigated yesterday by Greenville Police.

Officers reported Mrs. Annie May Moore of 1406A Washington St. received minor injuries when struck by a truck driven by Leon McKinley Harding of 605 Vance St. about 4:40 p.m. on Washington Street, 100 feet North of the Gum Road intersection.

Harding, police reported, was charged with driving under the influence and driving after his license had been revoked.

Lula Coward Clark of Route 1, Winterville, was charged with failing to see her intended movement could be made in safety following investigation of an 8:35 p.m. collision on Memorial Drive, 180 feet North of the Trade Street intersection.

Investigators, who identified the driver of the second vehicle involved as William Harvey Whitehurst of Stokes, estimated damage at $300 to each of the two cars.

Textile Officials Aver Industry Still Healthy

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Scattered layoffs and plant shutdowns don't mean the textile industry isn't healthy, North Carolina textile officials say.

Profits of a number of major clothing manufacturers are lower this year than in 1976, but some firms — notably those that specialize in household furnishings like curtains and sheets — are enjoying dramatic improvements in business.

Approximately 266,000 North Carolinians depend on the textile industry for their livelihoods, making it the state's largest industry. Despite recent layoffs, that number remains 7,000 ahead of last year at this time.

"There are always parts of the textile industry that aren't going to boom 100 percent of the time," said Edwin B. Borden Jr. of Goldsboro, past president of the N.C. Textile Manufacturers Association. "It's too diverse. Generally, the industry is healthy."

But Borden repeated two familiar complaints — that foreign imports are cutting heavily into the domestic textile market, and that federal regulations on noise and cotton dust may force textile companies to spend billions of dollars for new safety equipment.

The issue of imports is of immediate concern because the 4-year-old international multi-fibers trade agreement expires Dec. 31. Negotiations on renewing the pact, which limits textile and apparel imports, are

Solicitation Requests OK'd

City Manager Jim Caldwell announced that three requests for solicitation permits were approved.

The requests were submitted by: Cliffside 4-H Club to conduct a bake sale at Pitt Plaza on Dec. 3 to raise funds for a community project;

Future Business Leaders of America of J. H. Rose High School to conduct a bake sale on Evans Mall on Dec. 3 to raise money for the club; and by the Executives of Rose High School to sell candy canes from Dec. 3-10 at Pitt Plaza, Greenville Square, and Evans Mall to raise funds for UNICEF.

being held in Geneva.

"Imports are a tremendous pall over the textile industry," Borden said. "If we fail in our effort to renegotiate the multi-fibers agreement, it will cause massive unemployment in the industry because we can't compete with low-wage industries overseas."

Textile companies and labor unions blame imports for 271,000 lost jobs between 1969 and 1975 and say imports now equal the output of 400,000 U.S. workers. Automation is also blamed for a decline in the textile labor market.

Although North Carolina textile output and employment are the same now as 10 years ago, the state lost 18 percent of its textile jobs in the 1974-75 recession and has never regained its pre-recession peak of 291,000 in 1973.

Charged With Check Forgery

Michael Lynn Ervin, 26 of 107 DuPont Cir. has been charged with 11 counts of check forgery and uttering, Chief Glenn Cannon said today.

According to the chief, Ervin, district controller for Servomation Corp. at 104 Trade St., allegedly forged the checks on the firm to pay personal bills.

The amount of the checks, covering a period from July, totaled more than $1,900.

Woman Reports Attack Incident

Greenville police are continuing their investigation today into an assault at the Ramada Inn, reported at 6:05 p.m. Sunday.

Chief Glenn Cannon said a woman in room 117 reported that she had left the room for some ice and when she returned, she was attacked by a man wearing a ski mask.

The chief noted that the victim said the man fled when she kicked him.

Cannon said the woman was taken to Pitt Memorial Hospital for treatment of minor injuries she received in the incident.

Flynt Plans For Another Arrest

CINCINNATI (AP) — Hustler magazine publisher Larry Flynt says he plans to return to Cincinnati this week "to sell my magazine on the streets and force them to arrest me again."

Flynt is appealing his conviction in Cincinnati for pandering obscenity and conspiracy. He was sentenced to 7 to 25 years in prison. His magazine also has been banned from sale in Hamilton County under obscenity laws.

Flynt told a Washington, D.C., convention of the Speech Communication Association on Saturday that another Hamilton County trial would be different because a Cleveland judge earlier this fall struck down Ohio's organized crime statute under which he was convicted.

Effective December 1, 1977, the fuel adjustment charge will be decreased by $0.00237 per KWH, from $0.00450 to $0.00213 per KWH, and the base cost of energy in each retail electric rate schedule will be increased by $0.00237 per KWH. This change will result in no increase in the cost of electric energy.

This change is necessary because our supplier, VEPCO, has recently changed the fuel cost allowance in our base cost of electric energy.

Wants Prayers In The Schools

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Anita Bryant, professing love for homosexuals, says she is now more interested in getting Bible reading and prayer back into American schools.

"There is so much emphasis on that (homosexuality) when there are so many things to be concerned about — abortion, pornography, drug use, things that desperately need our attention," Miss Bryant told a news conference Sunday before appearing at the Revive America Crusade here.

"I have love in my heart for all homosexuals," she said. Miss Bryant became controversial when she led the movement that repealed a homosexual civil rights ordinance in Dade County, Fla.

She said she planned to formally announce a program encouraging school prayer.

Sugarman Idea To Hit Screens

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Burt Sugarman is an executive producer. His bag is cooking up ideas for TV. On Dec. 11, NBC will air an idea of his, the first "Billboard Number 1 Music Awards" show.

There are 12 categories of honors in this effort, hosted by the Bee Gees and Kris Kristofferson, and involving the pop music charts of Billboard, a major publication of news about the music business.

It seems hardly a week goes by without all entertainers donning formal duds, going to the TV studio and getting an award. Another awards show is but a trophy version of coals to Newcastle, is it not?

The query was put to Sugarman, a tanned, casually dressed man of 38 who sat in a swivel chair in his large 14th-story office overlooking Hollywood. He pondered a fraction of a second.

"TV only has one other award show in the music field, and that's the Grammy awards," he said, meaning the

Ky Urges Carter Admit Refugees

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Former South Vietnamese premier Nguyen Cao Ky says he urged President Carter to extend his human rights campaign to Vietnamese refugees.

Ky, who now runs a liquor store in Orange County, told Los Angeles radio station KNX Sunday that he sent telegrams Saturday to Carter, Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., and the United Nations urging the president to admit into the United States refugees who flee Vietnam in small boats.

"President Carter is speaking about human rights and so forth," Ky said. "So I think the case of the refugees is a good case for him to show that he really cares about human rights."

1 ♠ Pass Pass 1 ♠

What action do you take?
A.—Pass. It is possible that you have a better contract somewhere, but you can't probe for it safely. It is more likely that partner passed originally because much of his strength was in the opponent's suit. In that case, his values might be wasted in a suit contract.

Q.2—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠J83 ♥K7 ♦A1095 ♠J1074
Partner opens the bidding with one club. What do you respond?
A.—Our choice is one no trump. That describes both the strength and shape of our hand in one bid. Any other response could cause complications later in the auction.

Q.3—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:

The bidding has proceeded:

1 ♠ Pass 1 ♠ Pass
2 ♠ Pass 2 NT Pass ?
What action do you take?
A.—Since partner's spade response improved your hand, it would be pusillanimous to pass now, even though partner's rebid was not forcing. You must tell partner about your spade support, so any bid other than three spades earns a demerit.

What action do you take?
A.—There is considerable merit to the argument that you don't have the values for a free bid at the three-level—at least not in terms of high cards. Nevertheless, your hand has fine trick-taking potential, and if you don't act now your side could get frozen out of the auction. We recommend a bid of three diamonds.

Bar Release Of Defector's Wife

LENINGRAD, U.S.S.R. (AP) — The wife of chess grandmaster Viktor Korchnoi, who defected to the West 17 months ago, says Soviet authorities have refused permission for her and her son to emigrate.

Mrs. Korchnoi said in an interview here that she now fears their 19-year-old son will be drafted into the armed forces, which would delay any possible emigration by at least seven years.

Korchnoi, who defected in July 1976 while on a chess tour in the Netherlands, now leads 3½ to 1½ in the world chess semi-finals in Belgrade against Boris Spassky, another Soviet grandmaster.

Mrs. Korchnoi said she still hoped to emigrate and join her husband, who now lives in the Netherlands.

SMITHFIELD, N.C. (AP) —

A black family spent the weekend in a motel after a gunman peppered the side of their home near Smithfield in a previously all-white neighborhood.

Nobody was hurt in the attack early Saturday, which left about 20 holes in the wall of the home.

Cornell Cook, 24, his wife, Geraldine, and their nine-month-old son were trying to decide whether to move back into their rented home or look for a new one elsewhere.

James L. White, a real estate agent and owner of the house, said he put the Cooks up in the motel at his expense.

"They would like to stay in the neighborhood but they are going to be apprehensive about moving back in until they find out who did it," White said.

The FBI was helping Johnston County sheriff's deputies in the investigation.

It was not the first incident with racial overtones involving the Cooks, the first black family to move into the Shady Lane community two months ago.

White said a cross was stuck in a watermelon and burned about two weeks after they moved in. The Cooks were away at the time, he added, and neighbors cleaned it up without telling them about it.

Authorities said that incident was definitely the work of "teenage pranksters," not the Ku Klux Klan.

"Right now I'm just kind of surprised," Cook said, adding that the family had not been

Pensions To Civil War Widows Not Begrudged

ATLANTA (AP) — Georgia's last Civil War veteran died in 1956, but seven widows of Confederate soldiers still survive, still receiving monthly grants of $110 a month from the state. Some also receive an additional $70 monthly in federal benefits.

Pete Wheeler, the state's director of veterans services, hardly begrudges the widows the $9,200 a year their grants cost the state.

But he says the long-lived program shows clearly the lingering effects of war.

"Considering all the medical advances we've seen, it's apparent that we'll be paying benefits to Vietnam veterans and their dependents for another 120 years," he said.

The government provides some money, but the Civil War widows provide their own memories.

Bertha Roberts, Georgia's youngest Civil War widow at 82, married "Mr. Roberts" in 1918, when he was 73 and she was 23, she said.

George M. Roberts went off to war when he was a teenager to take the place of his ill father, a common practice in those days.

"He never talked much about it after we were married," said Mrs. Roberts, a Villa Rica resident. "He always said he was so young at the time and really didn't understand the sadness of war."

Mrs. J.J. "Miss Willie" Lavender, at 101, is the oldest of the widows. Lillian Duncan, assistant administrator of Glennmore Nursing Home in Thomasville, says Mrs. Lavender is confined to a wheelchair.

She is sunny, alert and cheerful, except when someone "bothers her things," particularly a special pocketknife, Mrs. Duncan said.

"She told me her husband gave her that knife and it's her most prized possession," Mrs. Duncan said. Mrs. Lavender has been at the nursing home since 1972.

Ninety-year-old Ella B. Greeson of Bethlehem, Ga., was 21 in 1909 when she married Willis G. Brown, a veteran of Graham's Battalion, Georgia Militia.

"Mr. Brown was 64 when we got married and we lived together 21 years until he died. They were 21 good years. We had two children," she said, adding that her husband never talked much about the war.

Margie Hancock, 90, says she and William S. Hancock married when she was in her early 20s and he was in his 50s.

Mrs. Hancock, a resident of the Valley View Rest Home in Rome, says, "He was 17 when he went off to war and he said he got a horse shot out from under him. We met and married in Rome after the war."

STILL OPENINGS

KINSTON, N.C. — Winter quarter registration for Lenox Community College closes Wednesday, and there are openings in most classes in the 41 career programs and college transfer programs. Registrar Theron Jones says. The total has increased above the 1,600 mark and could climb another 100 or more before the deadline, Jones indicates.

Charities Deciding How Far To Lift The Curtain

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

Representatives of the nation's top evangelical associations are meeting in Chicago later this week to talk about money and to try to decide how much they should tell the public about the way contributions are spent.

The religious charities traditionally have been the strongest opponents of efforts to force non-profit organizations to disclose information about their financial operations. Some spokesmen contend that legislation on financial disclosure would be a violation of the principle of separation of church and state.

The arguments and the fears remain. But a growing number of religious leaders say they must set up a voluntary system for financial disclosure to avoid a mandatory one.

In a recent meeting in Washington, D.C., Roman Catholic bishops approved strict new standards governing fund raising in the church. The standards, intended for use by all Catholic dioceses and religious orders in the United States, require full accountability to contributors, with regular, audited reports setting forth the amounts collected, the costs of the fund raising and the purposes and uses of the money.

The evangelical leaders — about three dozen of them — were invited to Chicago by W. Stanley Mooneyham, president of World Vision, which a spokesman describes as "a non-profit, interdenominational outreach of Christians concerned with the physical and spiritual needs of people around the world."

World Vision has been one of the few religious groups which has always been willing to provide financial information to donors who asked.

In July, officials of World Vision and about half a dozen other religious charities met in the office of U.S. Sen. Mark O. Hatfield, R-Ore., who is a member of the World Vision board.

Among the subjects under discussion was a bill proposed by U.S. Rep. Charles H. Wilson, D-Calif., which would require most major charities to provide a breakdown of where and how their money is spent.

Speaking in support of his bill, Wilson said it represented "a golden opportunity to take a positive step that will insure that the vital work done by legitimate charitable organizations can be continued in the future in an environment that is not tainted by frequent scandal."

At about the same time as Wilson was speaking, Hatfield was talking to the religious leaders. Richard L. Watson, director of communications for World Vision, said Hatfield told them: "If Christian agencies don't take the bull by the horns and come up with some kind of organization of their own that voluntarily provides information, then Congress is going to do it..."

"We agreed with Sen. Hatfield... We felt Christian agencies ought to do something voluntarily."

Watson said World Vision supports the idea of financial disclosure, but is opposed to making it mandatory.

There had been pressure for financial disclosure from other sources as well. Published reports said that the Billy Graham Evangelistic Association was not in compliance with a Minnesota law requiring registration and annual reports on annuity plans sold in the state. The problem — which Graham blamed on postal and other errors — was cleared up, and the association subsequently provided, for the first time, a full, public breakdown of its spending.

The issue of financial disclosure is not a new one. Religious organizations in particular have come under attack ever since the scandal within the Pallottine Fathers of Baltimore, a Roman Catholic order, which raised $20 million in a two-year period, but spent less than 5 percent of the funds on charitable purposes.

Some states already limit the amount charities can spend on fund raising. Others require charities to include a financial statement along with appeals.

Advertisements for the Save the Children Foundation of Westport, Conn., include a section which asks potential donors: "Do you wish verification of Save the Children credentials?" The section says that 78.1 percent of the organization's money is used for direct aid and support of the charity itself. An annual report and audit statement are available on request.

World Vision tells contributors: "Over the past three years, World Vision invested more than $43.9 million on its ministries while total overhead has averaged 17.1 percent." A complete financial report is sent to anyone who requests it.

Like other charities, religious organizations are covered by a portion of the Internal Revenue Service code which provides tax-exempt status to "corporations or any community chest fund or foundation organized and operated exclusively for religious, charitable, scientific, testing for public safety, literary or educational purposes or for the prevention of cruelty to children or animals."

Under the code, none of the net earnings of the group can go to any private shareholder or individual. Tax-exempt groups also are prohibited from "carrying on propaganda or otherwise attempting to influence legislation."

There are some 250,000 tax-exempt organizations in the United States. Most of them are required to file financial reports with the IRS. Because of constitutional guarantees of separation of church and state, however, any religious group which qualifies under IRS rules as an "integrated auxiliary of a church" does not have to file such a report.

(Note: some religious charities may provide financial reports on individual arms of their operations which do not meet IRS requirements for the exemption from filing.)

It is these religious groups, however, which raise the most money. The American Association of Fund-Raising Council Inc. says Americans gave a record $29.42 billion to charity in 1976, up 9.4 percent from 1975. Religious groups got 43.6 percent or $12.84 billion, up 9.9 percent from the previous year.

The Treasury Department estimates that deductions taken by individual taxpayers for charitable contributions in 1976 cost the federal government about $4 billion in lost taxes.

Billy Graham has noted in the past that churches and church-related groups are not required to provide financial information. "But the mood of the country is moving in that direction," he added, and "we will gladly conform to it."

Graham also said: "When people give to our association they trust that it's being handled properly and wisely and invested for the advancement of the Kingdom of God, which all of it is."

Helen O'Rourke, director of the Philanthropic Advisory Service of the Council of Better Business Bureaus, agreed that many contributors accept, on faith, that their money will be spent wisely.

Mrs. O'Rourke said the organization got several critical letters after it was disclosed that the BBB listed the Graham association as failing to comply with council standards.

The council keeps files on about 10,000 charities. It regularly publishes a brochure called "Give, But Give Wisely," listing about 500 charities which are broken down into two groups — those which comply with BBB standards and those which don't. Among the standards is a requirement that the organization provide an independent financial audit and that it spend at least 50 percent of its money on program purposes.

Most of the organizations which are not in compliance are religious in nature. As of late last year, Mrs. O'Rourke said less than 10 percent of the religious-based organizations had provided an independent financial statement. (World Vision is in compliance; the Billy Graham Evangelistic Association is not, although officials have said they will provide the financial information required to change the group's status.)

Why are they so uncooperative? "It's not a matter of being uncooperative," said Mrs. O'Rourke. "They seem to think that we have no right to ask them the question." She said some religious-backed organizations "feel like they only have to answer to God."

World Vision's Watson said he expects a specific course of action to come out of the Chicago meeting. He also said that financial disclosure has helped rather than hurt the charity. "The more we tell people, the more confidence they are having in World Vision," he said.

Antarctic Drill Seeks Old Life

By AL ROSSITER JR.
UPI Science Editor

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A bold new attempt is under way to drill through the quarter-mile thick Ross Ice Shelf in Antarctica to explore a "lost sea world" believed undisturbed for hundreds of thousands of years.

An international team of scientists hopes to trap any specialized form of life existing in the frigid sunless waters beneath the ice. A television camera is to be lowered into the hole followed by nets, traps and baited lines in the search for life.

"The discovery of any form of life underneath the thick ice shelf should be of great scientific interest as it would shed considerable light on the life processes taking place in complete and perpetual darkness," said Dr. John Clough, the scientific director, in a report last year.

The first effort to penetrate the ancient ice sheet failed last December when a 12-inch drill hole was squeezed shut by the tremendous pressure of ice 1,070 feet deep. Scientists were forced to abandon the project for the year.

"They were thwarted by the fact that temperatures were a little higher at depth than they had expected and the ice showed a greater plasticity than calculations had led them to believe was possible, and so they were defeated," said Dr. Duwayne Anderson.

Anderson, chief scientist for polar programs for the National Science Foundation, said it was decided to drill through the ice shelf at any cost this year.

Drillers returned to the frozen camp 470 miles southeast of the main McMurdo Sound base early last month to begin drilling preparations. It is now approaching summer in Antarctica, the only time such activities can be carried out.

Messages reporting the status of the operation have been coming into the National Science Foundation headquarters here every couple of days and a report Thursday said drilling operations were about to begin, using a new flame jet drill that operates like a high velocity blow torch.

Use of the flame jet drill to penetrate this ice will contaminate the melted ice water with hydrocarbon compounds since the jet burns diesel fuel. But once through the ice sheet, Anderson said sea water pushing into the hole should block pollution of the underlying sea.

If all goes well, Anderson said drillers should be through the ice in about a week.

The Ross Ice Shelf, about the size of Spain, is believed to have formed hundreds of thousands of years ago during the Pleistocene ice ages.

Would Keep Black Role

WASHINGTON (UPI) —

Black colleges should retain their racial identity until other schools admit and graduate more blacks, Howard University President James E. Cheek said Saturday.

"When other institutions admit and graduate what I would consider the numbers of blacks who should be entering higher education and graduating, then we will not have to be concerned about the composition of our student body, race-wise," Cheek said.

Cheek, interviewed on the syndicated television show, "America's Black Forum," said without black educational institutions such as Howard, black communities "would be woefully deficient — culturally, economically, and in a variety of other ways."

He said "there is a movement afoot to eliminate some of the predominantly black institutions," partly due to the "erroneous" argument there is no need for black schools because of many opportunities for blacks at other colleges.

Howard has been prohibited from granting sufficient financial aid and thus competing for the best students because of a lack of financial support from the federal government, philanthropic groups and the school's alumni, he said.
