U-2 Crash Killed Five

SPY PLANE CRASHES — An American U-2 crashed today as it was taking off from the British Akrotiri air base in southern Cyprus, killing five persons and injuring seven, a British military spokesman reported. The plane crashed on top of the base's operation control center, exploded and set the building complex on fire. U-2s have been stationed at Akrotiri since the 1973 Arab-Israeli war and make daily reconnaissance flights over the Arab-Israeli front lines to check on compliance with restrictions on troop deployments and other cease-fire agreements between Israel and its Arab foes. Eqypt Shuts Down Russian Consulates

By SAMI RIZKALLAH
Associated Press Writer

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Egypt ordered Soviet consulates and cultural centers outside Cairo closed today and took similar action against four East European nations on grounds they sabotaged Egypt's peace initiative with Israel.

Prime Minister Mamdouh Salem told the People's Assembly the decision was made at a meeting of the cabinet.

The move followed a warning from President Anwar Sadat over the weekend that the Soviets "can be punished" for instigating radical Arab states to hold an anti-Sadat summit in Tripoli, Libya.

The prime minister said the Soviet Union, Czechoslovakia, Poland and East Germany had, through their cultural centers and their consulates, "contacted their agents in Egypt to foment opposition against Sadat's initiative."

Meanwhile, King Hussein of Jordan flew unexpectedly to Damascus, Syria, launching an attempt to heal the split between Syrian President Hafez Assad and Sadat. Diplomats in the Syrian capital said Hussein was expected to fly on to Cairo for talks with Sadat.

Officials in Amman said Hussein would also visit Saudi Arabia, the oil rich kingdom which was reported also trying to mend the split in Arab ranks.

Salem said the cabinet decided to close the cultural centers of the Soviet Union, East Germany, Hungary and Czechoslovakia and the consulates of the Soviet Union in Alexandria, Port Said and Aswan. The consulates of Czechoslovakia, East Germany and Poland in Alexandria, Egypt's second city, would also be shut down, he said.

On Monday Egypt broke diplomatic relations with five Arab countries opposed to Sadat's peace moves and expelled their diplomats.

Sadat told New York Times correspondent Flora Lewis in an interview Tuesday he would carry peace negotiations with Israel "through to the end" alone if Israel's other Arab foes refuse to take part in a Geneva peace conference.

He denied he was seeking a separate Egyptian-Israeli peace treaty but did not make clear how he thought he might get to "the end" of the road to peace, Miss Lewis reported.

The Soviet Union reacted angrily to Egypt's break in relations Monday with Syria, Libya, Algeria, Iraq and South Yemen, saying Egypt may be trying to form an "Israeli-Egyptian alliance."

Soviet criticism of the Egyptian leader roused U.S. Secretary of State Cyrus Vance, who said, "Some of their statements in recent days have not been helpful."

The semi-official newspaper Al Ahram said Egypt, despite the break in diplomatic relations, was willing to maintain consular relations with the five countries that attended the anti-Sadat summit meeting in Tripoli.

Al Ahram said Egypt may ask Saudi Arabia to represent Egyptian interests in Syria, Iraq and South Yemen, while Tunisia would look after Egyptian interests in Libya and Algeria.

Federal Projects Okayed By Pitt Education Board

By DEBBIE JACKSON
Reflector Staff Writer

The Pitt Board of Education yesterday approved several federal education projects.

Assistant Superintendent J.L. Keeter informed the Board of a Comprehensive Employment Training Act project already approved locally through the Employment Security Commission.

The project will provide half salary for five teacher assistants and one Energy Control Officer during the training period. The teacher assistants and Energy Officer will train for approximately 30 days.

Keeter said that the project is the first that he knows of where the Board of Education will work with the Employment Security Commission.

The state will pay the remaining half of the training salaries.

The Energy Control Officer's duties will include studying the use of energy in the school system in an effort to reduce fuel bills and increase the work capacity of the present heating systems. The Board approved the project.

The Board also approved a CETA project under which two programs in two local schools would receive one teacher, one teacher assistant, and one clerical assistant for the purpose of "improving the achievement level of high school students, ages 16-21, who are having academic difficulties in Reading and Mathematics."

The project has already been approved by the State Board of Education and becomes effective Jan. 15, 1978.

The 12-month project was undertaken to aid potential failures of the upcoming competency test for high school students. Students who fail the competency test will not receive their diplomas.

In other business, the Board entered into an agreement with the Division of School Health Crippled Children's Program and the Pitt County Health Department to conduct a sixth grade scoliosis screening program.

According to Keeter, this will be the second year for the screening.

"Last year we discovered several problems in the sixth grade and followed up on them," he said.

Scoliosis, or curvature of the spine, can be easily detected at this age, and according to doctors, this is the best age at which corrective measures can be taken.

In further business, the Board heard a report on the Community School Project proposal which had already been approved.

The project which will be funded by the State Board of Education becomes effective Jan. 1, 1978.

Under the project, a coordinator will be hired to implement the utilization of school facilities for municipal activities.

In regard to the project, the Board heard several complaints from county residents who maintained that school facilities such as gymnasiums are not open to public use, and also, that various schools that allow the public to use their facilities are charging different prices for the use of gyms.

The Board passed a motion to make a study of the varying availability of facilities in lieu of the Community School Project.

In further action, Associate Superintendent Tom Craft presented the proposed 1978-79 school budget timetable which the Board approved.

According to the timetable, the proposed budget would undergo final approval by the Board on April 4, 1978; would go to the county manager on May 1, 1978; and to the State Board of Education on Oct. 16, 1978.

The Board also rejected bids for construction at

Carter Reiterates His Support For Tobacco

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter reiterated his support today for continued federal assistance for tobacco growers despite government concern over the health hazards associated with cigarette smoking, Sen. Walter Huddleston, D-Ky., reported.

After meeting with the president and Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland to discuss continuation of the price support program, Huddleston said the assistance program has Carter's "full support."

The senator and Bergland said Carter told them he believed the assistance program and health dangers should be considered separately.

Asked whether he saw any inconsistency in the government's maintaining the support program while attempting to alert smokers to the dangers of tobacco use, Huddleston said: "It doesn't seem inconsistent to me, being from a tobacco state."

"If tobacco is a legal product, there is some legitimacy to a program that helps the grower," the senator told reporters in the White House driveway.

Joseph A. Califano Jr., secretary of health, education and welfare, a former smoker, has become a leading critic within the government of tobacco use. Both Bergland, who chews tobacco, and Huddleston, who smokes cigars and pipe tobacco, said they had no problem with Califano criticizing use of tobacco while they supported the assistance program.

Under the tobacco price support program, the government guarantees a basic, or "floor," price for tobacco. If a grower is unable to sell his crop at the floor price, the government buys it at that level.

Bergland said that in the 40 years the program has been in operation it has cost the government less than $100 million.

By contrast, he said, the use of tobacco generated $6 billion in tax collections annually.

James Webster, a spokesman for Bergland, said the issues of price supports and health hazards were considered unrelated because "whether we have the support program or not, people are going to smoke."

He said the program was primarily beneficial to approximately 600,000 families, most of whom grow small tobacco crops worth no more than $3,000. Without the assistance, he said, all tobacco growing would be monopolized by a few large-scale growers.

TRAVELER HOOK

I like to knit circular things like toboggans and have a frame I use. I have a hook with a handle that is very helpful, but it has broken. I've taken it everywhere I can think of trying to find another one. Several of my knitting friends would also like to have one. Mrs. R. H.

You gave us the name, A. B. Carter Inc., which you read off the handle. From Sheppard Library, we learned that this is a mill devices company located in Gastonia. We called the company and talked to a very helpful woman who said you could order any number of the hooks, which she called "traveler hooks," that you wish. Those with plastic handles cost 30 cents; those with wooden handles, 35 cents, and refillable metal-handled ones, 65 cents (and 25 cents for each refill). She suggested that you send your order to A. Ehrlichman To Be Freed

WASHINGTON (AP) — John D. Ehrlichman, the Watergate cover-up conspirator who admitted surrendering his "ethical and moral judgment" to Richard M. Nixon, will be freed next April 27 after having served 1½ years in an Arizona federal prison.

The U.S. Parole Commission set the date today and informed the 52-year-old Ehrlichman at the Swift Trail Prison near Safford, Ariz.

His lawyer, Stuart Stiller, said the former White House domestic counselor would have no comment.

Ehrlichman was convicted, along with John N. Mitchell and H.R. Haldeman, of conspiring to hide White House involvement in the Watergate burglary and then lying about it.

Mitchell and Haldeman, respectively attorney general and chief of staff in the first Nixon administration, will become the last Watergate figures in prison.

The three men were convicted on New Year's Day 1975 of conspiring to hide White House involvement in the Watergate burglary and then lying about it under oath.

U.S. District Judge John J. Sirica sentenced each to 2½ to eight years in prison, but cut the terms to one to four years last October.

Kunstler To Fight Extradition Moves

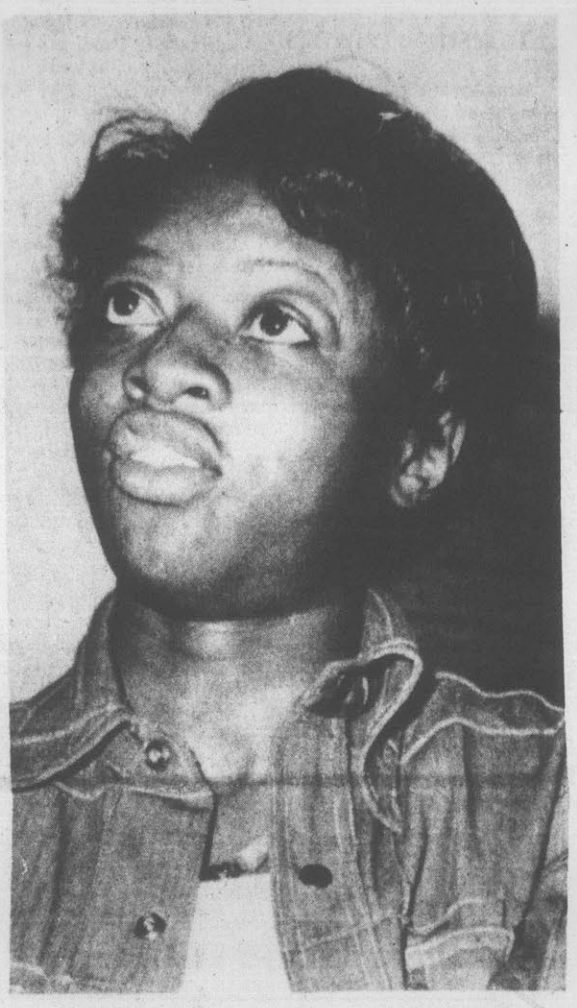

NEW YORK (AP) — Lawyer William Kunstler said today he would fight any attempt to extradite Joan Little to North Carolina, where she is wanted as an escaped fugitive.

Kunstler said Miss Little's lawyer, Jerry Paul, telephoned him from North Carolina this morning and asked him to represent Miss Little at any proceedings here. Kunstler said Paul could not come here himself because of another court date.

Paul, reached at his home in Chapel Hill this morning, commented, "I had hoped she would turn herself in. She called two or three weeks ago and indicated that she would . .. She said she was on the move when she called me and just wanted to touch base."

Paul recently served two weeks in jail in connection with a contempt citation stemming from Miss Little's 1975 murder trial. He is still her attorney of record in an appeal of the breaking-and-entering conviction, and said he is willing to represent her again.

Joan Little Recaptured

ARRESTED IN BROOKLYN — Fugitive Joan Little, who escaped from a prison in Raleigh in October, was arrested in Brooklyn early today. (AP Laserphoto)

By RUTH LANDA
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Fugitive Joan Little, who escaped from prison in Raleigh, N.C., in October, was arrested here this morning following a high-speed chase through Brooklyn, a Police Department spokesman said.

Police initially had said the woman who was arrested about 2 a.m. today had claimed to be Miss Little. Five hours later, an officer said police had confirmed the woman was the North Carolina fugitive.

Miss Little's 1975 trial on charges of killing her jailer made international headlines. She was acquitted of that charge following a trial in which she claimed she stabbed the jailer in 1974 in self defense after he tried to force her to have sexual relations with him.

However, Miss Little, 23, was returned to the North Carolina Correction Center for Women to complete a sentence for breaking and entering. She escaped from that facility Oct. 15, only one month before she would have been eligible for parole.

The woman being held here told police she was Joan Little after she and a male companion were arrested at following a 1½ mile auto chase through the streets of Brooklyn, the police spokesman said. He said police had attempted to stop the vehicle after a man at Kennedy International Airport said the pair had pulled a gun on him.

Police Officers Michael Ballasky and Robert Fleming, assigned to the Tompkins Avenue stationhouse, were on patrol in the Bedford-Stuyvesant section of Brooklyn when they spotted the couple's car about 2 a.m., police said.

Police said the officers' car collided with the couple's 1970 Buick at one point during the chase, which ended about 1½ miles away in front of 626 Whyte Place, in the Williamsburg section near the Brooklyn waterfront.

New Farmville Mayor Outlines Two-Year Goals

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

FARMVILLE — New Farmville Mayor Sara Albritton last night made a statement of goals for her two-year administration, after having been sworn in along with new commissioners, David Stowe and Leroy Redden by Magistrate Joney Taylor.

Mrs. Albritton said energy conservation will be stressed and she urged town offices and those buildings to which the town supplies free electric service to be the first to set their thermostats low in the winter and high in the summer. She said she hopes the Downtown Improvement Project will be completed during her administration and that a fire department facility will be completed on the South side of Farmville. She urged a study and a setting aside of funds for drainage throughout the town.

She made committee appointments: Public Safety — Jack Farrior, chairman, and David Stowe; Utilities — Wilton Duke, chairman, and John T. Walston; Public Works — J. T. Walston, chairman, and LeRoy Redden; Recreation and Human Services — LeRoy Redden, chairman, and Jack Farrior; Finance, Code Enforcement and Planning — David Stowe, chairman, and Wilton Duke.

Commissioner Duke was elected Mayor Pro Tempore.

An application to rezone an R-20A zone to M-1, light - industrial, was approved, as there was no public protest during a public hearing.

Town Administrator Patrick A. Thomas reported that 33 percent of taxes for this year has been collected. Commissioner Duke expressed hope that some kind of discount incentive for early payment can be worked out for the next fiscal year.

The Commissioners decided to try to arrive at an electric use billing system that would allow those persons who have businesses in their homes to continue to have one meter, yet have their billing more equitable with other business people who have separate homes and businesses. A surcharge, or other means, is being considered.

A 4.45 percent increase to residential customers is to go into effect with the January billing, the commissioners decided. They are having to pass on an increase in the wholesale rate. The CP&L increase is seven and a half percent.

There was a lengthy discussion of free services provided by the town and which should be continued and which discontinued. It was decided that any services provided private citizens should be billed on a cost basis and that the same services should not be provided if they are not paid for once the billing is done. Much of the free service is in the form of such things as rodding out sewer lines, some mowing, and use of the town's bucket truck to get to high places. The Board also questioned whether free utilities should be provided the Pitt Technical Institute Farmville Branch. Removal of dead animals from under houses for private citizens should be discontinued, they directed.

The town administration was given the go-ahead to apply for Community Development Funds. The town was turned down for these federal funds last year.

Each town employee will receive a Christmas gift of $10 from the town, it was decided.

Approval was given to the town administrator's application on behalf of the town for CETA funds to be used for beautification projects around town. Tentative approval, pending availability of funds, has been given,

Staff Tries Life In Wheelchair

NEW YORK (AP) — It was called Awareness Day and it was for "big wheels" only.

Thirty-five big wheels, executives and department heads at Brooklyn's Kingsbrook Jewish Medical Center, volunteered to participate in an unusual program — to follow the routine of the 600 wheelchair patients in Kingsbrook's David Minkin Rehabilitation Institute.

For several hours the staffers, including executive director Harold A. Schneider, Dr. Asa P. Ruskin, director of rehabilitation medicine, and food services director Marvlin Hunter, propelled themselves in standard wheelchairs through the corridors of the Institute. They went in and out of doors, up and down ramps, through the cafeteria, using only their arms, functioning in every way as do the wheelchair patients who are in their charge.

The program was designed by the facility's department of rehabilitation medicine to convey to executives and members of the staff, through personal participation, the problems faced daily by wheelchair patients.

"Being in a wheelchair, even for a short period of time, has made me more sensitive to the needs of the patient who is confined to a wheelchair," said Schneider. "I found I needed the services of other persons to help me get through doors and to press elevator buttons. I found, too, that a whole new set of muscles had to be used in order to propel the chair. I couldn't help thinking of the difficulty a patient would have who did not have good strong arms or who could not coordinate his movements."

Mrs. Hunter said, "My participation in the program was frightening and made me feel completely helpless. Throughout my experience I constantly reminded myself that this was only an act that I was performing, and yet the patients must put up with these situations every day."

The "patients" had difficulty in opening doors and maneuvering the wheelchairs through as the doors closed in on them. They also had trouble getting in and out of washrooms, obtaining food from counters that were often too high and balancing trays of food in the cafeteria while trying to move the wheelchairs, moving up and down ramps that were too steep or moving in areas where there were no ramps.

When the exercise was over, Dr. Ruskin pointed out the need for more electric wheelchairs, which can be maneuvered by pressing buttons with one hand, and for electric eye doors, which open and close automatically.

Schneider ordered an immediate change in the washroom facilities to make them more accessible to wheelchair patients. He said, "I would encourage programs such as Awareness Day not only for executives, but for all our employees, so that they may gain a better insight into the problems of the patients they care for."

He pointed out that the David Minkin Rehabilitation Institute, which was opened just a year ago, was built with the advice and counsel of leading rehabilitation experts. "The facilities," he said, "include many improvements on the previous buildings in which patients were housed."

Previously they resided in wards of 16 to 32 beds; now their quarters are one, two and four-bed rooms. Each room has a toilet with an elongated, counter-type sink, so that a wheelchair can fit under it. There is an alcove in each room with an overhead light for reading. All of the corridors in the new building are wide enough to enable wheelchair patients to get around easily. The building is completely air-conditioned. There are six spacious elevators in the new building, compared with two small, manually operated elevators in the older buildings.

All of the rehabilitation facilities and facilities for social activities are located in the same building as the patients' rooms.

"One of the important aspects of Awareness Day was that it enabled us to iron out 'bugs' which might exist in our new facility," Shneider said.

Christmas In Italy Can Be Gala

By TOM HOGE
AP Newsfeatures Writer

The observance of Christmas varies from nation to nation, and one of the most elaborate is in Italy where they start festivities the night before the big day and keep going until Jan. 6. The colorful details were disclosed to me by Dr. Lucio Caputo, personable Italian Trade Commissioner for America's Eastern Seaboard states.

"Christmas was very much a family affair when I was young," he recalled. "Dinner was usually served at the home of grandparents. Actually it consisted of two dinners. On Christmas Eve we had the first meal, which usually centered on seafood, such as spaghetti and shellfish, or Capitone, the traditional jellied eel. This was an evening in which no meat was served, but there were plenty of other good things, like dried fruit and nuts and Pangiallo, a rich honey cake. After that the family trooped off to midnight Mass.

"The main meal was on Christmas day," Caputo continued. "Some sort of fowl was usually the main dish. It might be turkey or chicken, or it could also be quail or pheasant.

"Times are changing," said Caputo. "When I was a boy we did not have a Christmas tree, only a creche depicting the Christ child in his cradle.

"Nor were any gifts exchanged till Jan. 6, or the Twelfth Day of the Feast of the Epiphany. Traditionally, La Befana, a witch-like old woman with straggly hair and a hooked nose brought gifts to the children.

"Nowadays Babbo Natale (Santa Claus) has replaced La Befana in many homes," Caputo said. "And a tree trimmed with lights and ornaments has joined the creche as a symbol of Christmas much the same as in America."

Here's a recipe for roast quail that graces many yuletide tables in Italy. It is usually accompanied by a sparkling white wine called Asti Spumante, made from grapes grown in the Piedmont region of Italy.

- 6 thick slices bacon
- 12 quail
- 2 tablespoons peanut oil
- 2 ounces salt pork, diced
- 1 medium onion, chopped
- 1 clove garlic, minced
- 3 ounces cognac
- 1 cup chicken broth
- ¼ teaspoon tarragon
- Salt and pepper to taste
- Sprigs of parsley

Cook bacon in skillet till crisp. Drain bacon on paper towel and reserve. Retain fat in skillet and reheat. Add quail and saute, turning frequently till lightly browned. Remove quail to oven-proof casserole and keep warm. Drain off bacon fat. Heat peanut oil in skillet and lightly brown salt pork. Add onion and garlic, brown lightly and stir in cognac, broth, tarragon. Bring liquid to boil and simmer few minutes to blend flavors. Season with salt and pepper and pour over quail in casserole. Set pan in 350-degree oven, cover and cook birds 20 minutes till tender. Baste frequently. Remove quail arranging them, each with slice of bacon, around a ring of cooked hot rice in center of platter. Fill center of rice ring with parsley sprigs. Strain sauce from pan and serve over quail. Serve with chilled Asti Spumante. Serves 6.

A program nuptial music was presented by Mrs. Carol Hayes and Mrs. Gail Boyer, organist. Mrs. Hayes sang "The Wedding Prayer," "Ave Maria" and "For You."

The bride, given in marriage by Bill Anderson, wore a mint pique knit gown styled with an empire bodice of Venise lace and seeded pearls, high neckline and sleeves of Venise motifs. Her mint bridal hat was accented with a varigated mint rose and ribbon. She carried a white Bible and two red roses.

Mrs. Melvin S. Adams was the matron of honor and wore a floor length beige knit gown and carried an old-fashioned nosegay in shades of red.

Miss Billie Jo Anderson, niece of the bride, was junior bridesmaid and wore a red gown. She also carried an old-fashioned nosegay.

Melvin S. Adams was the best man.

The bride's mother wore a gown in shades of green with matching accessories. She wore a corsage of white mums.

Following the ceremony, a luncheon was held at the Officer's Club.

The table was covered with a red linen cloth and centered with an old-fashioned nosegay.

Mrs. Doug Stroud presided at the bride's book.

For a wedding trip to New Orleans, La., the bride wore a pink dress, matching accessories and her mother's corsage.

The couple will reside in Vanceboro.

On Friday night following the rehearsal, Mr. and Mrs. Gleen Franks entertained at a cake cutting at their home for the wedding party and families of the couple.

The refreshment table was covered with a white lace cloth and decorated with doves and ivy. An arrangement of yellow daisy mums centered the table. Mrs. Carol Hayes served the cake and Mrs. Melvin S. Adams poured punch.

Too Tall Teenagers Shouldn't Despair

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1977 by The Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: I wept for the 14-year-old girl who was so tall she didn't care if she never saw her 15th birthday.

Her life can be blessed if she will realize that God made her unique because He loves her. (She should read the 139th Psalm.)

I grew 10 inches in my 14th year. I was 5 feet 11 in high school and was never asked for a date. I got busy and became a swimming champion and had no time to feel sorry for myself.

God was good to me. He kept telling me that He loved me. I heard Him and was born again.

That 14-year-old girl seems to be so full of wailing that she can't hear Him. Please tell her for me that if she will turn her life over to God and realize that He loves her and has a wonderful plan for her, she too can have a beautiful, exciting and rewarding life.

BONNIE W. GREEN

DEAR BONNIE: Thank you for an inspiring testimony. You who have "been there" offer a tremendous source of strength and encouragement to those who are struggling to get there.

DEAR ABBY: I think I can improve on your advice to SOUTHPAW who asked what to do about shaking hands. (He had lost two fingers from his right hand in a farming accident.)

You recommended that he see a specialist who fits prostheses. Abby, artificial fingers will be detected as such the moment they are felt by the other party, and the reaction could range all the way from shock to "ugh." In any case, it's awkward and embarrassing for all concerned.

The man with the missing fingers doesn't need anything from anybody. He should change his attitude about his minor handicap.

He should not be apologetic. He should shake hands with confidence. If HE is comfortable with the fact that he has a few fingers missing, others will be too.

SHELLY

DEAR SHELLY: Thank you for a logical view that I must admit is better than mine. For yet another solution that was suggested by many, read on:

DEAR ABBY: As an occupational therapist, may I comment on your answer to SOUTHPAW (the man with the amputated right thumb and first finger, who wanted a less embarrassing way to shake hands).

Your suggestion that he obtain an artificial hand is not the most practical solution. The artificial hand would probably reduce the functional use of the hand due to its immobility. It would also not feel sufficiently "real" to avoid detection. The end result would most likely be that SOUTHPAW would not want to wear it, and few people would want to shake it.

SOUTHPAW could use his left hand for shaking. Instead of holding it out, thumb up, he should turn it around to a thumb-down position to avoid awkwardness.

I've seen this technique used so efficiently by a person with a non-functional right hand that I didn't realize until much later that I had shaken his left hand with my right hand.

Attempting 'Impossible Task'

North Carolina universities are doing all they can to attract more minority students in face of a U. S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare directive to increase minority admissions by 150 percent.

At the same time University system officials have told HEW that the 150 percent increase over the next five years is impossible.

"There is no way under the sun (HEW's) 150 percent goal can be reached without having a large increase in the number of black students applying," Collin E. Rustin, Jr., assistant director of undergraduate admissions at UNC-Chapel Hill, said.

Nevertheless predominantly white campuses have hired minority recruiters to visit high schools, held campus visitation weekends for promising black scholars, asked black students to contact their friends who are considering college and conducted recruiting programs in churches, community centers and black neighborhoods.

The universities also have remedial programs for first-year black students.

The strong recruitment program is likely to have positive results which is what HEW is demanding.

Recent reports indicate fortunately that HEW may accept the UNC system's stringent efforts to attract minority students without holding the system to a hard percentage increase figure. If so we will all be the better off for it. There are few who disagree with efforts to attract qualified black students to the formerly all-white campuses, but attempting to reach impossible quotas is not going to be good for anyone in North Carolina.

School Maintenance Now Up To Date

Glenn Cox, superintendent of Greenville City Schools, told the county commissioners this week that plant maintenance is now up to date.

He said an on-going inspection program has been put in effect to see that facilities meet health and safety standards.

We are glad to hear that. The condition of Third Street School before it was renovated was an embarrassment, and we would not like to see a repeat of that situation.

THIS AFTERNOON

Red-Tape Cutting Project

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH—A pledge to try to break down the walls has been issued by North Carolina's top prison official.

It isn't the prison walls which have come under the gun of Corrections Secretary Amos Reed, but the bureaucratic walls of State Government.

"It is time for us to cut out this gobbledegook and get down to basics...I am challenging my brothers and sisters in other state agencies, and our citizens throughout North Carolina, to begin serving people with humanity and love in our hearts, and a commitment to improving people," says Reed.

Admittedly somewhat preachy in tone, Reed's call for joint concern for humanity marks a first in governmental approaches to problem-solving.

What the newcomer to North Carolina (he took office after Gov. James B. Hunt was inaugurated last winter) has in mind is a tape-cutting project of monstrous dimensions.

No Success

It has been tried before in a lot of different ways by a host of people representing numerous state agencies.

The nut of it is this: people are whole beings, and their problems are usually related. Yet social agencies— public or private—compete with each other to provide narrow, specialized services (and capture the budgets) while spending considerable time, energy, and emotion defending their turf against encroachment by others or subjugation to higher authority.

Prisoners, Reed points out, come to him with multiple problems: drug or alcohol abuse, lack of education, unemployment, no job training, broken families, mental, emotional, and physical problems.

"Our entire offender population in one way or another, to one degree or another, needs help. One does not have to be a full-blown psychotic to benefit from mental health programs."

Reed and Dr. Sarah Morrow, secretary of the Department of Human Resources, recently sat side-by-side to place their signatures on a letter of intent pledging mutual concern and cooperation.

The goal at this time: to involve all the services of Human Resources in helping criminal offenders at three stages—in pre-sentencing investigation; in helping prisoners in prison; and in providing specialized services and follow-up after release.

NOBLITT

Reed and Dr. Morrow envision a "Master Plan" design of a delivery program for every individual coming into the prison system involving the courts, prison officials, and paroles or probation people. "A true continuum," Reed describes it.

No Plan

An alcoholic, for example, goes in and out of jails, courtrooms, local agencies with no measurable progress. "There must be a life plan. Nobody seems able to orchestrate the various agencies which if used together could solve problems. We have got to build bridges," Reed said.

To his fellow State Government officials Reed said bluntly: "I hope you hear what we are saying and will join in." He plans similar efforts in education, recreation, employment fields.

"We are committing ourselves to this task, and without quibbling over costs. We can tap federal funds; we can involve our own staffs and budgets; we can go to the Legislature for funding and agency changes needed.

"This is a beginning...the building of a bridge," Reed stated. "We must agree that we will cooperate; we will get together and work together."

Dr. Morrow said the effort will run throughout her department and even beyond State Government as community treatment facilities, local governments, and private agencies are drawn into the program.

THE INSIDE REPORT

Carter Hour Of Decision

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — Because budget office civil servants are once again insisting on meat-ax cuts in military spending, President Carter is finally being compelled to resolve his agonizing ambivalence on the defense budget.

Career defense specialists in the Office of Management and Budget (OMB) have directed the three services to prepare budgets reducing their spending in the next fiscal year by 9 per cent. What's more, they are pressing for some specific reductions approaching that figure, requiring cuts in aircraft carriers and aircraft.

That is an entirely familiar OMB refrain. What is new are responsive vibrations from key staffers at the National Security Council (NSC) and doubts that the Defense Department's new civilian leaders will fight hard enough against the cuts. The biggest question of all: how truly committed is the President to the 3 per cent annual real growth in defense spending he promised to his NATO partners last spring?

The OMB's long-standing determination to save money by slashing away at defense has triggered wide-ranging troubles in the past. Its major architect is one of those anonymous civil servants who wield enormous influence in Washington: Richard Stubbing, a 15-year budget office veteran who has been deputy chief of the national security division since 1974.

Stubbing is credited by the Pentagon with talking OMB director James Lynn into proposing massive defense cuts in 1973 — setting off a fateful chain of events. Secretary of Defense James Schlesinger waged so heated a campaign against the reductions that President Ford sacked him. The cuts were later restored, but the Schlesinger affair encouraged Ronald Reagan's challenge and undercut Ford's presidential campaign.

With new, green civilians coming to OMB this year, Stubbing & Co. were peddling the same old wares. In particular, a cost-cutting scheme to reduce the Navy's aircraft carriers from 12 to eight bears the distinctive Stubbing trademark.

Papers sent to the Pentagon by OMB two weeks ago are cloaked in bureaucratic ambiguity essential for self-protection. Besides being asked to prepare the 9 per cent cut ("decrement budget"), each service is also directed to prepare a 3 per cent increase. But there is no doubt the OMB wants cuts. OMB Acting Director James T. McIntyre is talking about a ceiling some $5 billion below what the Pentagon feels it must have.

But how does this square with the President's promised 3 per cent annual increase? The ingenious OMB rationale is that Mr. Carter did not mean what he said but intended to limit the increase to NATO-related defense spending (which would mean no more than a 1 per cent overall increase).

That opens up all manner of word games. For instance, OMB staffers want to knock out funds for the AMST jet-powered cargo plane proposed by the Air Force. Although invaluable for Western Europe, it is not included in the NATO-related 3 per cent increase as defined at the OMB.

Ordinarily, this sort of shell game would be rejected out of hand by NSC staffers, particularly with U.S. resolve in doubt around the world. But many of the new breed of foreign policy specialists brought in under Mr. Carter are wholly sympathetic to the idea of unilateral defense cuts. Thus, remarkably enough, there is divided opinion within the NSC about the OMB's sophistry on the 3 per cent mandate.

At the Defense Department, nobody doubts that Secretary Harold Brown is convinced the 3 per cent promise refers to all defense spending. But when a memorandum attacking the OMB's meat-ax cuts was prepared for Brown's signature to be submitted to OMB, the memo disappeared in the bowels of the Secretary's office. That is explained on grounds that the time is not ripe for such

MISSING THE MARK

The verb "to sin" when found in the Bible is usually the transation of a Hebrew or Greek word meaning "to miss the mark."

It is interesting to retranslate a few well-known Bible statements with this meaning in mind: "He shall save his people from missing the mark." "Neither do I condemn thee; go, and miss the mark no more." "I came not to call the righteous, but people who have missed the mark to repentance." "God commended His love for us' in that while we were yet missing the mark, Christ died for us."

The whole testimony of the Bible is that the sinner is foolish. He thinks that he is getting the best out of life, yet all the time the best is just what he is missing. He is here to be tested for eternal life; to grow a soul. But he wasted his time and ignores his spiritual potentialities. He neglects every opportunity to know God. These are the ways in which he is missing the mark.

Son Of Huey's Hostage

WASHINGTON — The call came in at seven o'clock.

The dispatcher ran over to his chief, "Someone's hijacked the President's energy bill and is holding it as hostage until we give them $40 billion."

"Get the SWAT squad and surround the Capitol," the chief ordered.

When everyone was in place the White House representative said over his loudspeaker, "This is the Carter Administration. We know you're in there. Come out with your hands up."

"This is the Son of Huey," a voice shouted from a window, "and if you people make so much as a move we'll kill your energy bill once and for all."

"Hold it!" the White House man called. "We're willing to talk. Don't hurt the bill. Who else do you have in there with you?"

"We have some stubborn congressmen from the House, a few bleeding heart senators from the East, whom we have tied up, and we're going to stay here until hell or the country freezes over."

"We don't care what you do to the congressmen or the senators. Just release the energy bill."

The Son of Huey laughed. "You'll get your energy bill, but you won't recognize it."

The White House representative shouted, "How do we know you have the energy bill at all?"

ART BUCHWALD

The Son of Huey held up the bill to the window. It was battered and torn almost beyond recognition.

"Here it is. But we're not finished with it yet. Now are you going to meet our demands?"

The White House man got on the radio to the President. "They have your energy bill all right. It's still alive, but just barely. What should I do?"

"Find out what the ransom is for getting it out."

The White House man got on the loudspeaker. "Listen, Son of Huey, we're ready to bargain. What do you want?"

"Now you're talking sense. We want an increase of gas prices to $2.03 as opposed to $1.75 per thousand cubic feet."

"We can live with that," the White House man said.

"We also want the revenues from the new crude oil tax to go back to the oil companies as incentives for drilling new wells."

"But that money was supposed to go to consumers who couldn't afford the high fuel rates."

The Son of Huey held up the energy bill. He had a knife and was about to slash it.

"Wait," the White House man pleaded, "I've got to talk to headquarters."

The White House man reported the demands back to the President. Mr. Carter thought about it for a moment. "He's cutting the heart out of my bill, but maybe we can live with it."

The White House man shouted, "You can have the incentives for the oil companies! Now can we have the bill?"

"Are we talking about new oil or old oil?" the Son of Huey yelled.

"Which one do you want to talk about?" the White House man asked.

Public Forum

Letters submitted for Public Forum must be limited to 300 words.

To the editor:

Obivously, your editorial writer ("Biggest Need: Expert Opinion", Nov. 13) did not attend the joint city-county school board meeting when Dr. Presnell, head of the Division of School Planning of the State Department of Public Instruction, said he favors merger in almost all cases.

If all we want is "expert opinion," we might as well save the State the $12,000 to $60,000 these studies costs. (Figure supplied by Dr. Presnell at a League of Women Voters public forum).

Although he cited 21 mergers and was able to give reasons to support mergers, Presnell was not able to say why some school systems discontinued plans to merge. He was unable to give any negative effects of merger, although all the latest education studies indicate that "There is NO strong empirical base to support the assumptions and assertions of school and district consolidation advocates." (Quote from Economy, Efficiency, and Equality: The Myths of Rural School and District Consolidation (1976)" by Sher and Tompkins, prepared for the National Institute of Education, Washington, D. C. and printed in the April 1977 "Education Digest".)

Ed Carter of the City School Board said, "It seems to me that a feasibility study should give both sides of a question. I'm not sure these Division of School Planning people can do an objective study if they are admittedly prejudiced in favor of merger."

Had the Pitt County Board of Education had objective research done instead of relying on a prejudiced and erroneous Division of School Planning report, perhaps much of the Ayden-Grifton Middle School controversy could have been avoided. As it is now, the concerned citizens of Grifton and Ayden must raise $10,000 and go to court to protect the welfare of our children. Really objective fact-finding without "expert opinion" could have prevented this unfortunate situation.

To the editor:

Unfortunately, it seems we have a real cry baby in new coach, Larry Gillman. He's played two games, Indiana and Mighty UNC-W, and lost both by "blow-out" scores. What's his explanation? Officiating. "Never again will these officials appear at our games!" With this attitude, he follows the path of our past cry baby, Sonny Randle, and may end up the way he did.

Why can't he do as Coach Dye does, accept victory in the team's name and defeat in the coach's name? He isn't going to gain any respect for his team or for his coaching the way he's going.

Change An Old Policy

By H. JOSEF HEBERT
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government will soon require information on sex, race and ethnic background from federal job applicants, after strongly opposing any reference to that information since the early 1960s.

The federal government says such data, once criticized by civil rights groups as contributing to discrimiation against minorities, are needed to determine whether federal agencies are complying with affirmative action goals.

The change reportedly has the approval of President Carter and the same civil rights organizations that previously opposed the inclusion of such information on applications.

"The pendulum has now turned," said a Civil Service Commission spokesman. "The objective of this (change) is positive — to make sure the affirmative action programs are working."

The spokesman, Joseph Oglesby, said the change will initially apply to only five or six job titles under Civil Service jurisdiction, but will be gradually expanded to encompass all applicants for federal jobs sometime next year.

And he said the Carter administration is "on the verge of reaching agreement" among federal agencies on guidelines to make it government policy that such information be required from applicants seeking jobs in government or with companies having federal contracts.

The Equal Employment Opportunity Commission, according to a government source who asked not to be identified, is not yet ready to agree to the revised guidelines. But the source said the EEOC's reservations deal with proposed changes in testing methods and not the requirement of sex, race and ethnic background information from applicants.

The EEOC was established to enforce the 1964 Civil Rights Act, which prohibits discrimination in hiring. If the commission adopts the new guidelines, the commission presumably could push for the requirement in the private sector.

Advance columns of Japanese troops assailed Nanking walls.

Japanese officers said a spearhead of the invaders was attempting to climb the city's massive battlements with scaling ladders.

Gates of the apparently doomed city were closed. Chinese had started a final stand which seemed destined to fall.

Japanese asserted that their main forces had not yet reached the city but added that they were "progressing satisfactorily and according to schedule".

The spokesman did not say how soon he expected the fall of the city.

Idle Funds Await The Asking

By DAVID TOMLIN
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Millions of idle federal dollars could be North Carolina's for the asking — if state officials only knew where and how to ask.

Paul Essex, special assistant to Gov. Jim Hunt for federalstate relations, believes it's time the state started looking for someone trained in the fine art of loosening Uncle Sam's hidden purse strings.

"I'm sure we're missing out on some money," Essex confessed in a recent interview. "It's something I'd like to get into. We're working toward that end."

Essex is talking about what government types have long referred to as grantsmanship, the subtle business of finding federal money for whatever you happen to want to do and then applying for it successfully.

North Carolina state government could use some lessons, Essex says. "Our approach has been very uncoordinated. Each department has sort of been doing its own programs."

The departments have mainly been concerned with the grants that permit them to continue or expand their existing programs, Essex says. Most of these grants are "automatic" in that if the state meets the requirements it gets the money.

But relying on these sources of federal funds ignores vast opportunities in areas of which the state may not be aware, Essex says.

"There are competitive grants in which there's a certain amount of money and you make a pitch for it," he said. "And there's a third category — the hidden money area. Some departments have discretionary funds. If you can find out where that money is, you can bring a lot of it home for your projects."

The first step toward getting that sort of money for North Carolina, Essex says, may be encouraging high-level officials to develop personal contacts in the federal departments with whom they deal.

"They maybe we'll get to the place where we can just go up there with an idea and they'll help us find the money," he said. But the state may also need a grantsmanship specialist.

"It's something we'll certainly have to look at down the road," he said. "We'll either send someone to a workshop or hire somebody. It's an alien area. I've never done that sort of work."

Coal Stocks Continue A Dismal Performance

INTERSTATE SECURITIES CORPORATION

Coal stocks have turned in a dismal performance so far this year, with stocks in the S&P coal stock index down 27 percent through September, compared with a decline in the S&P 400 of 11.5 percent. Some individual coal stocks have fallen much more than the average. Severe weather earlier in the year and recent wildcat strike activity have sharply reduced profits from 1976 levels.

No improvement is likely to be seen over the remainder of 1977. Current labor contracts expire early in December, and a general strike is considered likely; wildcat strikes are continuing. Full year profits for the industry are expected to be sharply lower than in 1976. Consumption of coal is up from last year while production has been flat, but coal users entered the year with heavy inventories. Their needs will be met this year, but there will be little carryover inventory for use in 1978.

If there is a general strike in December and if it is settled fairly quickly, industry earnings should rebound in 1978. Earnings of some producers could reach record levels. Production is expected to rise 10 percent, about matching the expected increase in consumption. Bituminous coal consumption should be bolstered by greater use by electric utilities and other industries. Consumption of metallurgical coal, used mainly by the steel industry, could rise slightly in the next year or two, but sluggish operations at domestic and foreign steel companies will restrain growth. Overall, the best growth potential would appear to be in bituminous coal.

Beyond 1978, two related problems must be solved for production to continue to increase: labor problems and productivity declines. Wildcat strikes in the past two years, resulting from benefit cutbacks related to output and productivity, cut production in both years. A strike this year would mean further reductions in production. Any improvement in labor-management relations must be considered a long term proposition.

Productivity is in a long term decline at both underground and surface mines. Employment reversed a 50-year decline in 1970, and the addition of large numbers of new miners in recent years has adversely affected productivity. Tougher health and safety regulations are also contributing factors. As new miners gain experience, productivity should increase. Anticipated higher costs (including wages) can be passed through under the terms of most long-term contracts.

The expected substantial decline in 1977 coal industry profits has probably already been discounted in coal stock prices. There could be further declines if a general strike occurs, and when full year earnings are announced.

Recoverable coal reserves are substantial, and the account for more than 90 percent of all U.S. fossil fuel resources based on energy content. The emphasis on greater use of coal in President Carter's energy program is thus understandable. The industry is not without its near-and long-term problems, but an improvement in the general market climate could present some interesting investment opportunities in coal stocks.

Identify Body In Car's Trunk

HENDERSON, N.C. (AP) — The body of a woman found in the trunk of her car on a rural road two miles south of here was identified Tuesday as that of Alice Vaughan Burgess, 28, of Vance County, sheriff's deputies said.

Mrs. Burgess' body was found Monday night by deputies responding to a report of an abandoned car. She had been missing since early last Wednesday, when she was seen driving home alone from Henderson, deputies said.

An autopsy had not been completed Tuesday, but deputies said Mrs. Burgess apparently had been struck several times in the face and in the back of the head with a sharp object.

memos since the OMB position has not yet hardened. But worried officers see this as an omen that Brown will be only a pro forma advocate of what they feel is vital to the nation's security.

Accordingly, this major decision is now being thrust into the lap of the President, who finally must come to grips with an issue he has always ducked. While promising defense cuts of 5 to 7 billion during the campaign, after his election he promised defense increases. When NATO members started worrying about U.S. constancy, Mr. Carter hardened his views into the 3 per cent promise, later ratified in a formal presidential directive.

Although officials claim the President has not yet confronted this decision, the fact is he has spent unprecedented hours poring over the budget. The time for choice is at hand. If he backs the OMB bureaucrats, he will win loud applause within his administration and from liberal Democrats. But the impact on other nations, both friendly and hostile, will be profound.

"Both. We should get rebates on old oil as well as new oil."

"Okay, you have it. Is there anything else?"

"I want a private plane to take me to Louisiana for Christmas."

The White House man got on the radio to the President one more time.

"He says he'll release our energy bill providing we give him a private plane to take him home for Christmas."

"It's blackmail," the President sighed, "but when the country's only energy bill's life is at stake, what choice do we have?"

Confederate Bldg. May Go

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — A 133-year-old building where much of the money of the Confederacy was printed may soon be coming down.

City building inspectors told the Landmarks Commission Tuesday the old Confederate Printing Plant, which occupies an entire city block in downtown Columbia, is unsafe and could collapse at any time.

No historical buildings can be destroyed without the approval of the Landmarks Commission, which must give two weeks' public notice before taking action. The commission has asked the city attorney for an opinion on how such an emergency situation should be handled.

The building inspectors said engineering studies showed wind or even a plane passing overhead cold cause the building to collapse in five seconds.

"There is no question that public safety is paramount," commission member Phelps Bultman said. "But this is a landmark and it's not going to be demolished without our permission."

The printing plant was built in 1864 and for about a year produced the bulk of currency used by the Confederacy. It was burned by Gen. William Tecumseh Sherman's army in 1865.

In the early 1900s the state purchased the rebuilt structure and used it as a warehouse for the state's liquor supply under the Dispensary System, when the state owned liquor stores.

The building in recent years has been used as a furniture warehouse, but Chief Building Inspector Buddy Hornsby said Tuesday he would order the premises vacated today.

By The Associated Press

Frigid weather with northwest winds that made it feel even colder settled over North Carolina today as gale warnings continued along the coast.

Up to eight inches of snow were reported in the northwest mountains and schools were closed in some areas because of slippery, ice-laden roads. Temperatures began dropping Tuesday and by this morning they had reached new season lows.

Asheville recorded five degrees above zero and Greensboro and Hickory reported 13 degrees. Other lows included Charlotte 19, Raleigh 20, and Fayetteville and Rocky Mount 25.

Grandfather Mountain was the coldest reporting point — 10 below zero.

Hard freeze warnings were in effect for tonight for the coastal plain and the coast while a travelers advisory continued in effect for the mountains.

High temperatures ranged in the 50s and 60s over much of the state Tuesday but today's highs were expected to get no higher than the 20s in the mountains, possibly hitting the low 40s along the coast.

Another frigid night is in store with temperatures ranging from the teens to the 20s.

Increasing cloudiness is predicted for Thursday with a chance of rain or snow in the mountains. High temperatures are expected to range from the 30s in the mountains to the 40s elsewhere.

School closings included city schools in Boone and Asheville, and county schools of Buncombe, Watauga, Mitchell and Madison.

Several stretches of the Blue Ridge Parkway were closed, but highways remained open although some stretches were reported dangerous.

EXTENDED WEATHER OUTLOOK FOR N.C.

Continued cold, Friday through Sunday with a chance of snow over and near the mountains Friday and a chance of rain elsewhere. Highs in the 30s and 40s with some 50s near the coast by Sunday.

House Votes Two More B-1s

By JOHN LENGEL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A decision on building two more B-1 bombers is now before the Senate following House approval of money for the test planes even though President Carter has decided to kill the program.

The House on Tuesday approved production of the fifth and sixth models of the plane at a cost of $462 million. Four test planes already have been built.

In the Senate, which earlier voted to cancel money for the two aircraft, a second vote was not immediately scheduled.

Congress has eliminated funds in next year's budget to begin building a fleet of B-1s, but House backers of the planes said Tuesday's action would help keep the program alive.

Because Congress previously approved the $462 million for the additional test planes, the House, like the Senate, was faced with the decision of whether to cancel funds for the two planes, which would be assembled at the North American Rockwell plant in southern California.

Carter contended it would be a waste of money to build two more bombers in light of the other actions.

The original B-1 program called for construction of 244 planes at a cost of nearly $25 billion. The plane was intended to replace the nation's aging fleet of B-52s, but Carter said the country could continue using the older planes while also deploying the cruise missile.

"The question is, do you want to finance a fleet of two B-1 bombers? That's utterly absurd," Rep. George Mahon, D-Texas, the chairman of the House Appropriations Committee, said in opposing the $462 million. He was once a supporter of the program.

Backers of the B-1 said producing two more craft would keep the program alive, even if only to use as a bargaining chip in arms talks with the Russians.

The bomber money is part of a $7.8 billion compromise bill providing money for several federal programs, including $4 billion for sewage treatment plant construction and $18 million to keep Amtrak passenger trains running on their current schedules through the winter.

The bill also contains $80 million to keep the nation's nuclear breeder reactor program roughly on schedule, despite Carter's opposition.

Biochemical Plant Planned

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Novo Biochemical Industries plans a $15 million plant in Franklinton, about 25 miles northeast of Raleigh. It will produce insulin and other chemical enzymes and employ about 70 people.

The plant is expected to be operating by 1979. The company is the American subsidiary of a Danish firm.

"This is the kind of high-technology industry that North Carolina wants," said state Commerce Secretary Lauch Faircloth.

'Third World' Supports Amin

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The Third World-Communist majority in the United Nations is expected to kill a Scandinavian resolution to censure Ugandan dictator Idi Amin for wholesale violation of human rights.

The resolution was introduced in the General Assembly Tuesday by all five Scandinavian countries, and debate on it is expected to start later this week.

The United Nations has never spoken out against the Ugandan president despite the numerous reports of torture, mass killing and arbitrary detention in the central African country since he overthrew President Milton Obote in 1971.

Nine months ago the Third World-Communist alliance blocked a British request to the U.N. Human Rights Commission for an investigation of the situation in Uganda, a former British colony.

Denmark, Finland, Iceland, Norway and Sweden introduced their resolution in the General Assembly's Social Committee.

Cash Registers Jingle In Snow

DENVER (AP) — If you hear sleigh bells jingling in the Colorado Rockies, listen again.

The ringing comes from cash registers as the state's ski resorts celebrate an early Christmas present — snow and plenty of it.

Snowstorms, rarities over the Rocky Mountains last winter, have been pelting the Colorado high country almost daily since the week before Thanksgiving. As the deep powder snow piles up, lift ticket sales are nearing record levels.

"Business is fantastic," said Dru Walls, a motel reservations manager in Dillon, near the Continental Divide and within a short drive of more than half a dozen ski areas.

"Last year, we had more rooms than we knew what to do with," Ms. Walls said Tuesday. "This year, we'll be booked full on weekends for the rest of the season. Everybody is in a fabulous mood."

A-Basin, Geneva Basin and Berthoud Pass all reported more than 60 inches of powder and packed powder snow on Tuesday. Steamboat Springs, Keystone, Copper Mountain, Crested Butte, Loveland Basin and Breckenridge had more than 40 inches and several other areas had more than 30 inches of snow on the ground.

And more snow was predicted for the mountains through the weekend.

David Garton, a nightclub owner in Vail, said a two-foot snowfall last weekend changed the attitude of almost everyone in town.

"A big snow to us is like the Broncos winning the Super Bowl for Denver," he said. "Up here, we're pulled together by snow."

Some Non-Union Coal Mines Closing

By MARTHA BRYSON HODEL
Associated Press Writer

CHARLESTON, W.Va. (AP) — Non-union coal mines are shutting down in the second day of a nationwide United Mine Workers strike, either in sympathy with the union or in reaction to determined union pickets.

UMW President Arnold Miller called the strike at 12:01 a.m. Tuesday, when the union's wage contract with the Bituminous Coal Operators Association expired after 60 days of fruitless bargaining.

The union has demanded restoration of full health benefits, a limited right to strike over local grievances and a wage increase from the current $60 a day to $114.36 over a proposed three-year contract span.

By Tuesday evening, non-union mines had closed in Ohio, Maryland and Kentucky. In West Virginia and Virginia, UMW members met to plan picketing at non-union mines to try to stop all coal movement during the strike.

The effects of the young strike were already obvious in the railroad industry, where about 3,500 employees have been furloughed.

The contract with the BCOA covered 130,000 union members — about 70 percent of the nation's miners who produce about 50 percent of the coal mined nationally.

Pickets in western Kentucky closed "a substantial number" of non-union mines, said Tommy Gaston, district president of UMW District 23 there.

"The plans are to shut down all the non-union mines in this territory," said Orie Hunt, president of a union local in Pike County, Ky.

Robert Carter, president of UMW District 30 based in eastern Kentucky, said picketing of non-union mines is not an official union activity, but "is up to the individual miners."

In southeastern Ohio, where non-union operations closed Tuesday in sympathy with the strikers, no picketing was reported.

A few pickets appeared in Maryland, but state mining administrator Tony Abar reported that most mines had closed out of concern that equipment might be vandalized or workers threatened.

The union's health funds, which are financed by the coal operators on the basis of production and man-hours, have been financially weakened by wildcat strikes and inflation in medical care costs. Reductions in benefits, announced in June, touched off a wildcat strike that lasted 10 weeks.

All medical, death, and retirement benefits ceased when the union went on strike; the UMW maintains no strike fund.

The bargaining sessions have been recessed until Thursday. In Washington, Miller said Tuesday the union has presented all its demands.

"We asked them (the operators) to come back with a complete counter proposal," he said. "I'm not optimistic about any real movement at this particular time."

Coastal Drilling Opinions Asked

WASHINGTON (AP) — Interior Secretary Cecil D. Andrus has asked the governors of Florida, Georgia, North Carolina and South Carolina for their opinions of the proposed sale of oil and gas leases off the south Atlantic coast.

Andrus also asked the governors to identify other areas which might require special protective measures if they are leased for petroleum exploration.

The governors were asked to submit their comments by next Feb. 6.

The Interior Department tentatively plans to make a final decision on disposition of the 225 south Atlantic sites by March.

Farmville Bd...

Thomas said.

The Board tabled action on whether to try to drill another well for the town for $46,000, an offer made them by the Layne-Atlantic Company. Negotiations are underway with the company about a well that is not producing the quantity of water per minute promised by the company.

Authorization was given for the town to sell some surplus police firearms and vehicles, if need be.

Danny Griffis was appointed by Mayor Albritton to the Recreation Advisory Committee and Richard Dupree to the Housing Authority Grievance Committee.

Commissioner Farrior said he wanted to go on record as encouraging the town to switch over to the use of sodium vapor street lights (the orange ones) as quickly as possible because of the tremendous amount of energy savings realized over the continued usage of the white mercury vapor lights.

Consideration was given to the need to increase sewer charges to bring income into line with costs to the town. More study will be given.

The go-ahead was given to apply for a state grant to help the town switch over to green reflectorized street name signs.

It was agreed that the town would adopt an ordinance, proposed by the League of Municipalities, to be in compliance with a new state law requiring that towns require permits from insulation installers.

No action was taken, but thought was given to repealing the town's park hours ordinance. The present ordinance calls for everyone to be out of the town's parks by 9 o'clock each evening.

A policy was adopted stating that any subdivider or neighborhood wishing to have decorative lighting should pay the difference in cost between whatever lighting is approved by the town and the usual cost of the simple type used throughout town.

Dec. 20 was set as the date for a special meeting to discuss bids, all of which seem to be over the amount expected to be spent, on the Downtown Improvement Project. Some annexation matters will also be discussed at this meeting, the Board indicated.

A public hearing on land use and housing problems and a public hearing on a rezoning application by FCX were set for the regular Jan. 3 meeting.

The Farmville Jaycees were given the Commissioners' blessing concerning a project in which the members will go from door to door pushing grocery carts to collect food to give to the needy at Christmas.

It was decided that from now on the town administrator can handle permits for street closings and permits to solicit, rather than bringing each one before the Board.

The Collins and Aikman Company's offer to pay for an underground television inspection of sewer lines serving the industry was accepted. There have been some serious breaks in this line recently.

Budget amendments were made to transfer some library trust funds to the library fund, to pay for electrical transformers for the new Forest Village Apartments, and to put aside to draw interest money designated for a new street department building.

Meet Thursday

Lela V. will conduct the meeting of Overeaters Anonymous at Arlington Street Southern Baptist Church Thursday at 7:30 p.m.

The group will hear a tape titled, "The Devil Wants Us Fat." Members are continuing to bring food in proportion to the amount of weight each has lost to give to the needy at Christmas.

Correction

It was incorrectly reported in yesterday's paper that members of Cornerstone Missionary Baptist Church would be holding Christmas caroling Dec. 11-20.

The caroling is being done by the Gospelaires and the Majestic Ebonettes Civic Club, both community organizations. The church is the place where the caroling will take place.

Action Inspired By Harassment

By LAWRENCE L. KNUTSON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Campus harassment of CIA recruiters during the Vietnam era prompted the use of agents to identify potential college trouble spots, according to newly released CIA documents.

The documents do not on their face reveal a systematic spying effort on American college campuses during the 1960s.

Instead, they show an effort, mainly by reviewing university publications and establishing liaison with local authorities, to give recruiters early warning of demonstrations or possible violence aimed at disrupting their activities.

The documents also contain a memo in which then-CIA Director Richard Helms told Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger that the inclusion of U.S. students in a survey of student dissidents worldwide was potentially embarrasing because "this is an area not within the charter of this agency."

The documents, some of them censored for security reasons, were obtained through a Freedom of Information Act suit filed by former national security assistant Morton Halperin and former CIA employee John Marks. The documents were made available to reporters Tuesday by the Campaign to Stop Government Spying, which Halperin heads.

Many of the documents sought by the suit were denied by the CIA on national security grounds.

Those that were released contain a description of how, beginning in 1967, the CIA called on its field offices around the country to aid and protect CIA campus recruiters.

A memo said field agents "developed files on the universities and colleges, came to know all the campus security people, special units in the local and state police, etc."

It said some of the information developed by agents "would indicate that they attended some of the dissident meetings."

But it said the agents could only advise recruiters on whether or not to visit a particular campus. If the recruiters ignored advice to stay away, "we would send a man to the fringe area, attempt to spot buildups and advise further action," the CIA memo said.

The report on American student dissidents about which Helms expressed concern concluded that "communist front groups have been permitted to participate in some of the student organizations but have not succeeded in controlling them."

Collision Kills 3 N.C. Men

SELLERS, S.C. (AP)—Three North Carolina men were killed and seven other persons were injured when the Palmetto Amtrak, from Savannah, Ga., to New York, collided with a logging truck at a crossing near Sellers.

The dead were Seaboard Coastline crewmen on the train. A fourth crewman was injured and was reported in stable condition at a hospital.

The crewmen were in the engine, which struck the tractor-trailor rig near the cab at a crossing on a rural road. The rig was loaded with logs, bound for the nearby Celotex Corp., which manufactures hardboard.

The driver of the truck and five passengers on the train were taken to a local hospital. The driver and one passenger were hospitalized. The others were treated and released.

The collision nearly destroyed the locomotive, but the train was not derailed, an Amtrak spokesman said, following Tuesday's wreck.

A highway patrolman said there were stop signs on both sides of the crossing, but no lights or other electrical warning devices. The patrolman said no charges had been filed.

A supervisor at Marion County hospital identified the dead crewmen as Thaddeus Carl Wheeler, 53, Parnell Vann, 47, and Joseph Brownie Thames, 59, all of Rocky Mount, N.C.

The injured crewman was Richard R. Mascia, 23, also of Rocky Mount. The hospital supervisor said he was in stable condition.

The driver of the truck was identified as Nathaniel Nesmith, 24, of Andrews, S.C., who was in stable condition.

Also in stable condition was Robbin W. Hakeem, 25, of Baltimore, a passenger on the train.

The other four injured passengers were treated and released.

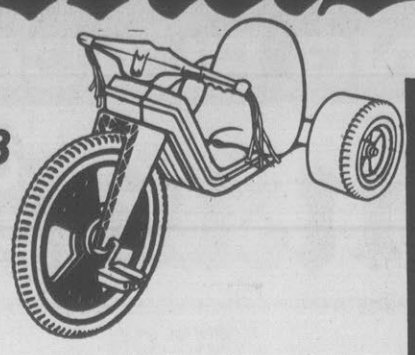

They were identified as James Godsden, 57, of New York, Kevin O'Connor, 18, Parklin, N.J., Anthony Cushionia, 24, Brooklyn, N.Y., and James E. Greer, 42, Raleigh, N.C.

Sellers is a small community in Marion County.

Rubens Year Puts Antwerp Back On Tourists Map

By KIRSTEN O. LUNDBERG

ANTWERP, Belgium (UPI) — On a golden autumn afternoon an elderly woman stopped to watch a tourist focus his camera on the statue of Pieter Paul Rubens that stands in Antwerp's cafe-lined cathedral square.

"It needs polishing," she said, glancing critically at the statue as if she would have liked to have taken a cloth to it herself. "But it's always been there, just like that," she said, with a proud lilt in her voice.

This year was Rubens Year, a 400th-birthday celebration for the renowned Flemish artist, which drew to an official close Sept. 25 with a fireworks extravaganza. Tourists came from all over the world to see exhibits, concerts and pageants centered here in the painter's hometown, and city officials feel it has all helped to put Antwerp back on the cultural map.

"It is as though the people of Antwerp have rediscovered their own identity," said Frans Baudouin, keeper of Antwerp's art history museums and coordinator of the Rubens Year celebrations.

"In the 19th century Antwerp was one of the places to go, which is elitist to say, but it was always mentioned by writers in novels and by travelers in diaries. Since World War II it has declined somewhat in reputation," he said.

"After this year, however, we have put ourselves back on the map, artistically."

Charles Gloudemans of the Antwerp tourist office agreed.

"We discovered if you have a good product and the time and money to campaign for it, it pays off," he said. "People know about Antwerp now. They'll come back."

Rubens, known for his heavily atmospheric paintings of voluptuous women, was an incredibly prolific artist and revolutionized painting with his dynamic use of brushwork.

And Rubens Year drew tourists to Antwerp at an astonishing rate, considering that the year before — 1976 — the tourist board estimated that only about 160,000 tourists visited the town.

This year though, "we had 650,000 visitors to the Royal Museum alone. Our catalogue (388 pages of photos and text) sold 130,000 copies. We even had to do a reprinting of 5,000 copies after the exhibition to fulfill the demand," Baudouin said.

Even more popular than the huge collection of Rubens paintings, sketches and drawings at the Royal Museum — the major exhibit among the 14 or so Rubens exhibitions in Antwerp — was the permanent exhibit at Rubens' own home. It drew some 700,000 visitors curious to see how this giant among artists furnished the place where he lived.

For Rubens was a rarity even in his own time — an artist who never knew the inside of a garret, a classicist, engraver, designer, diplomat and habitue of royal courts. His output, with the help of the school of prominent artists he founded in Antwerp, was phenomenal. He never lacked for commissions from his royal patrons and never seemed at a loss for new inspiration.

"He's remained popular to this day because of the brillance of his art, his colors, his intimate style," Baudouin said.

"Rubens emphasized the beauty of man, physical and spiritual, in his work. He created a world in which we see people in nature, in surroundings created for the gods, a kind of paradise. In this age of pessimism, people can find self-confidence in Rubens," he said.

Arthur van der Wee, who runs a curio shop here specializing in handmade brass and pewterware, put it another way.

"Rubens time was the golden age for Antwerp, the golden age of artists," he said.

The Rubens Year explosion of artistic self-confidence brought back a taste of that distant golden age, a taste which looks as if it might linger.

Argue Phone Rate Impact

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Southern Bell officials and members of the state Utilities Commission public staff gave widely differing versions Tuesday of the effects of a requested 19 percent increase in long distance phone rates.

W.F. Dyer Jr., Bell's rate and tariff supervisor, told a commission hearing that the increase would mean fewer long distance calls, and special new discounts would erode revenues even further.

Bell and other phone companies would end up with a $24 million-a-year increase, or about 12.79 percent.

But members of the public staff's telephone division, said in a brief filed with the commission of testimony to be presented later that the companies would actually make nearly twice that much from the increase.

Hugh L. Gerringer said the hikes would bring in a 22.6 percent increase or about $44.2 million.

The increases apply to all phone companies, since the commission has kept long distance rates uniform statewide. Whatever increase is granted, Bell would get slightly more than half of it and the others would get the rest.

Bell is also asking the commission to allow an increased installation charge for residential phones from its current $24 up to $72.50 and to hike monthly service rates by 60 cents.

The company also wants business installation charges raised from their current $33.40 to $86.40 with a $1.20 monthly service charge hike.

Bell officials have contended these increases are necessary to pay the actual costs of installations, which until now have been subsidized by service charges.

Oral Roberts Presides Over Ever-Growing Empire

EDITORS' NOTE: Oral Roberts presides over a worldwide, multimillion dollar ministry. Here, in the third of a five part series, is a look at the United Methodist minister.

By BILL JOHNSON
Associated Press Writer

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — Sweat glistened on his forehead and streamed down his face as the dark-haired man closed his eyes and reached out his hands.

"Put your hands right on the screen," he crooned, his necktie drooping beneath his opened collar. "That's right, put them right up there, next to mine.

"Oh, God, heal these people. Let your spirit flow through me and cleanse and heal these people. Heal! Heal!"

With those last shouted words still reverberating through the 10,000-seat canvas tent, the Rev. Granville Obadiah "Oral" Roberts opened his eyes and prepared to close another weekly television performance. But not before an appeal for money to help him continue his work.

That was the way Oral Roberts, evangelist and faith healer, appeared on black and white television in the late 1950s.

The tent has long gone and the weekly color telecasts are taped now in a studio on the campus of the university he founded and named for himself. They and the four yearly televised spectaculars are slick productions, equal in quality to any top network show.

The new Oral Roberts still preaches of hell and redemption, but the television specials have the aura of a variety show.

Even the weekly services have high entertainment value, with the World Action Singers, a group of clean-scrubbed youngsters, and Roberts' son Richard doing most of the performing.

But the elder Roberts does appear for a short talk and to plug his new book, which is free for the asking.

It wasn't always that way. Before the big tent there was a smaller one, seating only 300, and litle, backwoods Oklahoma churches. That was the time of the shirt-sleeved, shouting Pentecostal Holiness faith healer who slowly, surely, gathered in the sick, the halt, the lame — and the dollars.

Today, the suave, fashionably tailored United Methodist minister presides over an ever-increasing empire that includes the $150 million Oral Roberts University, a proposed $100 million health center, the television productions, Abundant Life magazine, a retirement village and a worldwide ministry reaching into virtually every corner of the earth.

In the days before prosperity, his stock in trade was healing.

It's a much more subdued program now. But the money that started trickling in then has reached a torrent estimated at well over $20 million a year, mostly in contributions.

The Oral Roberts Evangelical Association Inc., is the umbrella organization which covers all the varied activities.

The latest available information from the Internal Revenue Service is from the fiscal year ending July 31, 1975. It showed that the association had gross receipts of $27.5 million of which $25.6 million came from contributions, gifts and grants.

The information also showed expenses of $24.37 million. The net worth was listed as $7.69 million, up from $4.55 million at the beginning of the fiscal year.

The single biggest expenditure — $7.2 million — was for contributions, gifts and grants. All but $12,694 went to Oral Roberts University.

The next biggest expenditure — $6.19 million — was for radio and television expenses. Other major budget items included: religious literature, $2.8 million; magazine costs, $1.1 million; postage, $1.55 million; and compensation of officers, directors, and trustees, $132,355. (Roberts says he receives a salary of $29,000 a year, a car, a house and expenses. The association's tax return lists no salary for him, as board chairman, or his wife, a trustee, but his son, who is listed as president, was down for $25,000 compensation.)

Other salaries and wages amounted to $2.6 million; Office supplies and expense, $603,655; Data processing: $861,974; additional spending for such things as rent, travel expenses, professional fees, photography and miscellaneous, made up the rest of the $24.37 million.

Roberts also serves on the boards of several banks and other corporations.

He says all his savings have been plowed back into his university. But he adds: "I believe God wants you to be successful" and that it's not wrong for a minister to live comfortably. He says that if Jesus were alive today, he would have had his needs met adequately.

He warns, however, that with all the money coming in from his various ventures, he has one worry.

"The main thing I have to watch is — now this is important — the moment I think about money, I'm dead.

"I can't get on TV and ask for money. Some do, but I can't. I have to think and concentrate on how I can help that person who is discouraged or hurting, who needs to have his needs met."

And he doesn't ask for money on his weekly television programs. But he does hold up his latest book — he has written more than 40 — and says it can be had free just by writing to him in Tulsa.

Many will write for the book, and their names will go on a list to be contacted later about subscribing to the magazine or buying other books.

Roberts, a trim 6-foot-1, 57-year-old, was born in Ada, Okla., where his father was a preacher. He was the last of five children in a family he says was "so poor the poor people called us poor."

He ran away from home at the age of 15 and moved in with a former coach at Atoka, Okla. He said he left home "to change the conditions under which I could achieve ... I could see no way of succeeding being raised in such a tightly religious home where the premium was not upon education."

He had stuttered all his life, and his hopes of achieving anything seemed doomed when he collapsed from tuberculosis during a basketball tournament.

He was driven back to his home in Ada, and for five months was in bed, living on raw eggs mixed in sweet milk. It was during this time, he said, that he thought of how his parents held daily "conversations" with Jesus.

At that point, he says, "my parents finally got through to me. And it was like a light turned on ..."

But the physical problems remained. "I needed to be healed," Roberts says. "I believed I could be healed. I believed I could be cured."

And, suddenly, he says, he was cured. Shortly after that the stuttering stopped.

Roberts decided to become a preacher and enrolled in Oklahoma Baptist University at Shawnee, then transferred to Phillips University, a Disciples of Christ-related school at Enid, Okla. But he never graduated.

As he tells it, he was sitting in a classroom his final semester when he recalled that when he was cured of tuberculosis God, whom he calls an inner voice, told him, "I'm going to heal you and you are to take my healing power to your generation." It was then, he says, that the Lord spoke to him and said, "'Don't be like other men. You be like Jesus and heal the people as he did.' Those were his precise words."

He preached his first sermon in Tulsa in May 1947 as a guest preacher for evangelist Steve Pringle. The tent seated 1,000 but the crowd on the cold, rainy night was only about 200.

His ministry grew and today his thousands of followers send money.

And in keeping with his statement that it's not wrong for a minister to live comfortably, Roberts lives in one of the most exclusive and plushest sections of Tulsa. The latest IRS information lists a $205,594 item for residential property, and while it is not specifically listed as Roberts' home, those who know the area say that land values and the style of his house would put it in that bracket.

Aside from the donations that make up the bulk of the association's income, the Oral Roberts Evangelistic Association Inc. listed investments in 38 corporations totaling $1.19 million in the latest tax return. These ranged from American Airlines, Minnesota Power & Light, CIT Financial Corp., Southwestern Bell Telephone, Standard Oil of Indiana, Mack Financial Corp., Dial Finance debentures, and Ford Motor Credit Co.

While Roberts no longer acts as a healer, he still believes in the healing power of God. "Most doctors I know would not say they healed," he says. "They would say they were instruments...

The Trend Is To Bigger Speed Boats

By BART KINCH
UPI Boating Editor

The giants of the outboard motor field have introduced their 1978 models and the trend continues toward bigger, more powerful speed machines.

Evinrude and its sister corporation, Johnson Outboards, set the pace for the industry with a new 235 horsepower V-6 designed to meet the growing demand for more outboard power for the increasingly popular larger outboard boats.

The top of the Mercury line for 1978 is that company's most powerful production model ever offered, the Merc V-2000. This 142.2 - cubic-inch-displacement engine also is a V-6 and has a rated horsepower of 200.

Chrysler's big baby is a four-cylinder, 100-cubic-inch engine boasting 140 h.p.

T.B. Kalbfus, director of marketing for Johnson, said there are solid reasons, based on economy and efficiency, for the new 235's during these energy conscious times.

Pointing to the increasing number of large outboard fishing and cruising boats, Kalbfus said, "There are a lot of boats out there, some production models and some custom models, that are perfect for the V-6's, which also include 200 h.p. and 175 h.p engines.

"The 235, like the 200 and the 175, is powerful enough to replace what otherwise would be a twin outboard installation," he said. "It's not hard to figure that one outboard, even a V-6, is going to cost less than two of the V-4 outboards, and it will cost less to operate, too."

Donald A. Milton, general manager of Chrysler Corporation Marine Products Group, said that although their new 140 has more piston displacement, the engine is significantly lighter in weight than others rated in the same horsepower range.

"Chrysler's power flow lower drive unit that delivers speed from the same horsepower engines has been combined with performance-type pistons rings, high compression, large carburetors and race-style exhaust porting to provide maximum power for water ski boats, sport boats, tournament fishing hulls and family runabouts," Milton said.

Evinrude said the increased horsepower and performance of its 235 V-6 was the result of a number of internal changes to the basic 200 power plant. Intake and exhaust ports were raised and new exhaust passage filler blocks were located outside the exhaust ports. A new exhaust manifold evens out the length of the exhaust path from the ports giving the 235 an all new finely tuned exhaust system. In addition, a new fuel metering system on the carburetor improves engine fuel economy in the midrange cruising speeds.

Rounding out the line for Evinrude and Johnson are motors ranging in horsepower from 85 to 140 in the four-cylinder category, two three-cylinder jobs, a 70 and a 75 h.p., nine two-cylinder engines with a 55 h.p. at the top of the range and a 4 h.p. on the lower end.

And if that isn't enough, both also offer a one-cylinder, 2 h.p. for pushing a dink or fishing on a quiet lake.

Mercury has seven different six-cylinder engines, some V-6's and some straight 6's, ranging from 200 h.p. down to 90; two four-cylinder jobs, one 80 h.p. and the other 50 h.p.; a 70 h.p three-cylinder model and five two-cylinder outboards ranging in power from 40 h.p down to 4.

Chrysler, in addition to the 140, has three other four-cylinder engines all in the 100-plus power range. There also are three models in the three-cylinder field, two are rated at 85 h.p. and the other a 75. The difference between the two 85s is weight. One weighs 245 pounds and the other 224.

Chrysler has 11 two-cylinder models from 65 h.p. down to 6 and a one-cylinder motor in the 4 h.p. range.

Prohibitionists Today Have Broadened Horizons

By JOHN J. SANKO

DENVER (UPI) — An old two-story home, its red bricks faded and its cement porch aged with cracks, serves as headquarters for the third oldest political party in the nation — the National Prohibition Party.

Carrie Nation and her famous hatchet are long gone, but there still are those who support the temperance movement for which she fought. Among them is Earl F. Dodge, a 44-year-old father of seven who ran as the party's vice presidential candidate in 1976 and is its only paid staff member.

Dodge has devoted more than half of his life to the cause. He spends his days alone in the building — squeezed between another old home and an office supply firm along a busy west Denver street. He also is frequently on the road, delivering talks to high school and college students.

"In our party, executive secretary (Dodge's official title) is Latin for 'he who does all the work,'" said Dodge, a Massachussetts native who moved to Colorado in 1971.

"It is a one-man operation as far as our office is concerned. I'm the office manager, the office secretary, the mailer, the stuffer, the stamper, and the field worker, too."

He is also the man who mows the back yard and who carpeted and painted the old house — with the help of his wife and seven children, ranging in age from 16 to 25. The Dodges also have four grandchildren.

Dodge says it takes him a while to recall the ages of his youngsters.

"I've been accused occasionally by friendly Republicans, saying if we're not going to outvote them, we're going to outbreed them."

He delights in showing visitors his vast collection of old temperance buttons, miniature axe pins and pictures of "demon rum" fighters,

But much of his work is devoted to convincing people his party is not now a collection of little old ladies who want to smash kegs of beer and pour the brew on the ground. He says that is a picture too many people have and one encouraged by the news media.

"We don't want to soft pedal the liquor issue," said Dodge, leaning back in an office chair beneath a picture of himself and his running mate of a year ago — Benjamin Bubar, a Baptist minister from China Lake, Maine.

"But what we want to do is get away from the image that most people have of us as being a one-issue party. We try every election to hit hard on all of the issues but a lot of the time — when the news media do cover us — they will only give a line or two to the other issues we mention. Then they'll concentrate all of their fire on the alcohol issue."

When photographers show up at the scene, they inevitably aim their cameras at the oldest members they can find, he said. The pictures he has seen are enough to convince everyone "all the people come from the old folks' home.

"Fifteen or 20 years ago, this was fairly true (that membership was made up primarily of older people)," he said. "But that has not been the case in recent years. I'm 44 myself, and most of our state chairmen are under 50. Some of them are in their 20s and 30s."

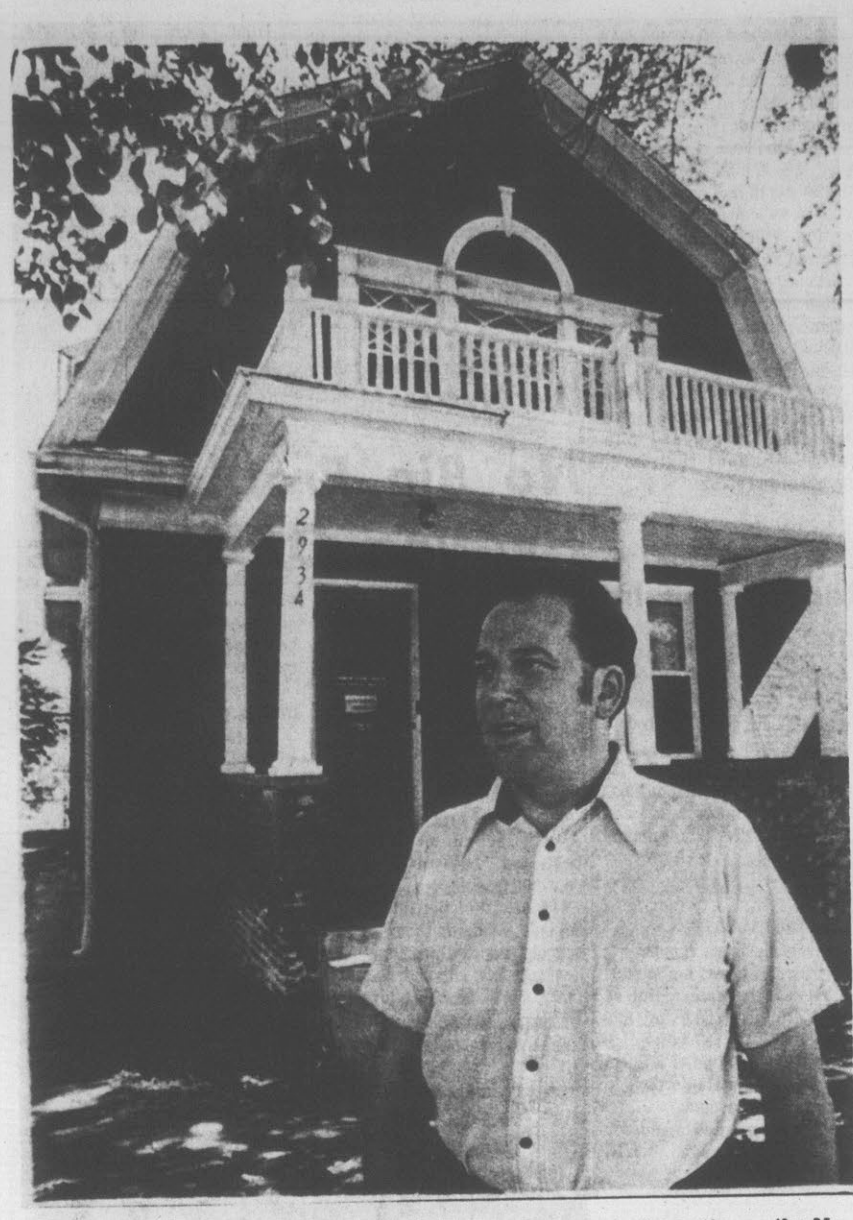

The party picked up 15,900 votes in seven states last year and next year, Dodge said prohibitionists will run under a different party name — perhaps The National Statesman Party — to see if it makes a difference at the polls.

If successful, an official change will be made. Dodge said the reason for the change is to convince people the party is concerned with more than one issue — the banning of alcoholic beverages.

Prohibitionists last year took stands against Communism, monopolies, forced busing, abortion, pornography, gambling, narcotics and socialized medicine. They also called for a constitutional amendment to limit taxes.

As it always has done in the past, the party continues to push for prohibition, even though only 19 per cent of the American people favor such a law. Dodge said his party would not try to enact such legislation until 65 or 70 per cent of the people support it.

"But we do believe that prohibition is going to come," Dodge said. "It's not going to come tomorrow."

Winterville Bd. Votes Distribute Overcharge

WINTERVILLE — Winterville Town Board members Tuesday night voted to refund VEPCO utility fuel overcharge via check to local residents.

According to Town Clerk Elwood Nobles, the payments will be made for utilities taken in during the period between June, 1976 and July, 1977 at a rate of .00120 per kilowatt.

The refunds pertain to only those residents that are presently on the line. Officials said that persons having moved from Winterville will have to request the refund in order to receive their checks.

Nobles said that the town is hoping to have the refunds out by Christmas, but there is no definite date on the returns.

In other business, the Board accepted the tabulations of the Pitt County Board of Elections on the Nov. 8 elections.

The official results were as follows: Mayor — Walter Dale, 218; Leland Tucker Jr., 194; Patrick Decuzzi, 21; and Donald L. Avery, 17.

In the race for Alderman, the following votes were final: Bob- by Crawford, 236; and Hoyt Hammond, 157.

Dale and Crawford were both sworn into office by Nobles for their four-year terms. Crawford was also reappointed to serve on the Contentnea Metropolitan Sewage District Board for another four years.

A request was made by James Rice of Baywood Subdivision that the Board amend the zoning and subdivision ordinance to allow private streets in subdivisions. The recommendation was supported by the Planning and Zoning Board.

The Board took no action on the request, pending further research "to determine the specifications that the town would need to make private streets."

Planner Bob Clark and Rice are to appear at the January meeting of the Board for further discussion of the item.

The Board also heard complaints from neighbors living next to Mrs. Rosa Daniel's store. Residents said that loud music coming from a juke box located in the store was keeping them awake nights. The Board turned the matter over to the Winterville Police.

Complaints were also heard concerning inadequate garbage pickup. The Board will notify the Sanitation Department to correct this.

In further business, no action was taken on the rate increase by VEPCO which became effective Nov. 28. Greenville Utilities notified Winterville officials of the 12 percent increase recently which was handed down to them from VEPCO.

According to Nobles, the town hopes to absorb the cost with no increase in cost to Winterville residents.

Town officials also approved a $21,739.60 payment on the town's new firetruck. Total cost of the truck is $43,479.24. Payment was divided by the town and the rural fire department.

Officials also made notice that a Christmas tree will be placed in the town lot as usual.

Nobles also noted that December is the last month that residents may pay their 1977 taxes without penalty.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market declined broadly again today in the aftermath of Tuesday's sharp selloff.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials dropped 1.73 to 805.18 in the first half hour.

Losers outstripped gainers by a 5-2 margin among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Analysts said the market was depressed by anticipation of some bad news Thursday when the government reports on the wholesale price index for November.

They also noted uneasy speculation that the Federal Reserve might soon move to push up interest rates in order to support the dollar, which has been slumping in foreign exchange markets.

Citicorp, the early volume leader among NYSE issues, was off ⅛ at 22½.

On Tuesday the Dow Jones industrial average fell 14.12 to 806.91, for its largest loss since it took a 19.75-point drop last July 27.

Declines overwhelmed advances by more than a 5-1 margin on the NYSE.

Big Board volume stepped up to 23.77 million shares from 19.16 million in the previous session.

The NYSE's composite index was down .79 at 51.33.

At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index tumbled 1.87 to 122.42.

Bethel, Pactolus, and W.H. Robinson Schools in order to readvertise.

According to reports from the architect and engineers, the bids received previously were too high and both groups recommended to the Board that they not be accepted

A report was also read from Beverly Congleton concerning his effort in trying to secure a blinking caution light at the intersection at Wellcome Middle School.

According to Congleton's report, the State Department of Transportation (DOT) said that the traffic volume count was not sufficient to warrant the caution light.

Board members voiced their disapproval of the DOT action, saying they would send a letter of their concern to DOT. The letter will contain their feelings that in the case of an accident, parents and attorneys should be referred to DOT.

The Board said that they did not feel a child should have to be injured before the state would install a precautionary device.

In other business, Assistant Superintendent Jack Edwards submitted the following names for substitute teachers: Edward A. Daughtry of Ayden; and Kenneth K. Dews, Miss Dana Duke, Miss Dianne L. Foreman, Miss Adelaide Giordano, and Daniel A. Graham, all of Greenville.

The Board approved the new names.

The Board also ratified previous action, naming Dec. 5 as a school day for students with Nov. 7 becoming a holiday.

Spurred On By Farming Costs

ATLANTA (AP) — Georgia farmers say it is easy to understand why they are driving 20,000 tractors to the state capital to demonstrate this weekend: it costs them $7.41 to grow a bushel of corn they sell for $1.90.

Farmers in Georgia and other states have threatened a nationwide strike Dec. 14 unless Congress guarantees them a profit on their farm products.

While supermarket prices and the cost of farming soar, farmers complain they are getting less of the food dollar.

Government figures show that an average basket of food costing $10 in 1967 would cost $18 this year.

"The farmer gets only 38 cents out of the food dollar," compared to 39 cents a year ago, Jack Gilchrist of the state Department of Agriculture said in an interview.

The rest goes to the so-called middlemen, those processors, transportation workers and others who help get food from the farm to the table.

Labor costs account for 47 percent of the middleman's share. Packaging takes 13 percent; transportation 8 percent; profits 7 percent; taxes 4 percent; advertising, depreciation and rent 3 percent each, and other miscellaneous expenses 12 percent.

What about the farmer's cost?

State and federal agriculture experts say there is no way to gather precise figures. But the University of Georgia, the state agriculture department and the federal-state crop reporting service estimate that the average cost of growing a bushel of corn in Georgia this year was $7.41.

In September, Georgia corn was selling for $1.59 per bushel. As of Nov. 15, it was $1.90 a bushel.

No Big Problem In Heating Of Schools

This morning's low temperatures may have caused some chilly fingers in the local schools, but there were no severe problems with heating systems, according to local school officials.

Teresa Little of the Maintenance Department for the Greenville City Schools said that several rooms at E.B. Aycock School were without heat, but that was the only reported trouble.

Ott Alford of the Pitt County Schools said that no county schools reported problems with heating units, although he added that some rooms were probably much cooler than usual.

This morning's low was a chilly 26 degrees with 31 degrees reported at 11 a.m.

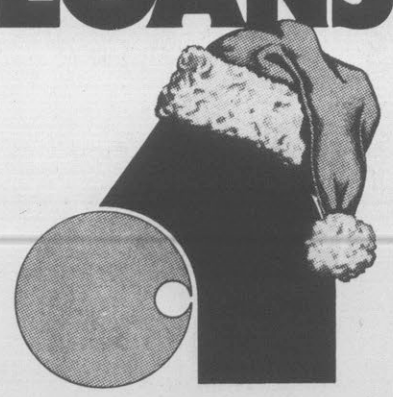

Today's expected high is approximately 40 degrees.

According to Greenville Utilities, yesterday's high and low temperatures were 67 degrees and 33 degrees, respectively.

WHAT TO DO IF YOU SMELL GAS.

Call Greenville Utilities immediately. Anytime day or night. We'll get a serviceman to your home or location to correct the problem.

While you're waiting for him to get there, open a window, make sure you use no electrical switches. Extinguish any open flames and evacuate the area.

If you don't know what natural gas smells like, stop by our office and pick up a scratch and sniff leaflet.

Because even though natural gas contains no poisonous ingredients, a leak can become hazardous if combustible gas pockets are allowed to form. Which makes it important for you to know what natural gas smells like.

Pirate Swimmers Defeat Tar Heels

It was all it had been cracked up to be and much, much more.

Last night, at Minges Natatorium, the East Carolina men's swimming team captured its first dual meet win of the season and, at the same time, captured a first for head coach Ray Scharf — a victory over UNC-Chapel Hill — by the score of 61-52. ECU's women's team was defeated by the Tar Heels, 52-34.

The final tally was not indicative of how close the men's meet really was. The Tar Heels led only once during the night, after the first event of the evening. The Pirates bounced right back to take the lead and held it for the rest of the night. That first ECU margin, after Kevin Meisel's victory in the 1,000 freestyle, was called by Scharf, "possibly the turning point of the meet."

The Bucs employed some keen strategy in preparing for that event, as sophomore sensation Ted Nieman was the favorite in the race. Through some careful placement, Scharf was able to match Nieman in the middle lane of the pool, right beside the top UNC threat, Bob Omansky. Shielded on the outside was Meisel, a freshman from Orlando, Fla.

Scharf was hoping that Omansky would concentrate on beating Neiman. The coach instructed Nieman to swim fast enough to keep even with the Tar Heel swimmer, while Meisel took the lead on the outside. The ploy worked to perfection as Meisel took first place in a time of 9:35.39, setting a new meet, pool and varsity record in the process. Meanwhile, Nieman edged out Omansky for second place to give ECU the edge in team scoring.

"This is by far the greatest win I've ever had," exclaimed a jubilant and wet Scharf after the meet. He was given the traditional dunk in the pool after the victory was sealed.

"This is the happiest I've been in ages," Scharf said. "All the guys on the team had a part in this one tonight. They did times that were nothing short of phenomenal. Really, they all just swam out of their heads. I'm so happy, I can hardly find the words I want to say."

North Carolina came into the meet as the strong favorite by virtue of the Tar Heels' victory in the Penn State meet. The Pirates were fourth in the same meet. John Tudor and John McCauley were both triple winners to pace ECU to victory.

Though the final difference was nine points, last night's meet was in question until the final event of the evening. All along, it was becoming more and more evident that the 400 freestyle relay, the final event, would decide who would win this grudge match.

Pirate fans anxiously waited as ECU battled the Tar Heels on even terms in the off strokes. UNC captured one-two, but could not get the sweep. ECU then came back to take one-two in the next event. A bonus came for the Bucs when freshman Tom Bell from Rockville, Md. took the three meter diving competition.

Finally, the time came. It was strength against strength, best against best and brother against brother as ECU's John Tudor faced brother Bill from UNC in the third leg of the race.

McCauley opened for the Pirates, gaining a three-quarter body length advantage at the end of his leg. Co-captain Billy Thorne followed for ECU and held that same lead through his leg.

Then came the Tudors. John got a good start, before Bill narrowed the gap to about a shoulder. But this was the night for the home team, the underdogs. John put on a good burst of speed and widened the margin to about one and a half body lengths.

Billy Fehling then took off on the anchor leg and extended the lead to three lengths as the screaming ECU crowd roared its approval.

The drought had finally ended for Scharf. After 11 years of trying, he had finally accomplished an elusive goal — a victory over Carolina.

"So many times we've come away disappointed," Scharf said. "We would come up four or five points short, just barely out of reach, but not tonight."

Summary:

400 medley relay: UNC 3:35.71, ECU 3:36.41. (David Moodie broke ECU varsity record on lead leg.)

Rampants Down North Pitt For First Win

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

BETHEL — Rose High School cut into North Pitt's zone defense with James Hawkins' outside shooting, and held off several Panther rallies to claim a 68-55 victory last night.

It was the first win in three outings for the Rampants, while North Pitt was falling for the first time in three games.

Rose led all the way in the contest, moving out to an 8-0 lead before the Panthers could finally find the mark. After that, however, the Panthers came back to within four before falling behind by 14 late in the half. Even this, another North Pitt rally cut the lead back to eight points before the half ended.

The Panthers later trimmed that lead to just six points before Rose slowed down the action and forced the Panthers to go to a man-to-man defense. That was what the Rampants wanted, and they quickly ran their lead back out to 18 points. North Pitt made one more run at Rose, cutting it back to ten before the Rampants ran it back to 17 with just over a minute and a half left.

"We got a real good game from Hawkins,', Rose coach Jim Brewington said afterwards. "And Billy Roberson helped us a lot on the boards."

Robinson contributed 12 points to the Rampant totals, and most of his points came off offensive rebounds.

"We did a lot of things well. We played our best third quarter, cutting down our turnovers in the second half," Brewington pointed out. Rose had 26 turnovers for the game, just nine in the second half.

"(William) Barnes had kind of an off night, and we were still missing (Greg) Guthrie. But the rest of the kids did real well.

"North Pitt has a scrappy little club. If we had let them stay in that zone, there's no telling what would have happened. We did play a little more together tonight, however," Brewington added.

"I hope we get Guthrie back Friday. That's a real big game (home against Kinston)."

Meanwhile, North Pitt Coach Cobby Deans felt that his club didn't play especially well in the game. "Too many of our older players were playing like freshmen," he said.

"Their outside shooting hurt us. ' I thought that with Guthrie out, that they wouldn't be able to hit like that. We can't match up with them, and I didn't want to play a man-to-man defense against them."

But even then, Deans didn't consider it a lost cause. "I thought we had a chance at it when we made a run at them."

The run didn't pay off, however, mainly due to the shooting of Hawkins, who hit on 10 field goals for 20 points.

Rose shot well, hitting 54.4 per cent, 13 for 57, while the Panthers managed just 23 of 54 for 42.6. North Pitt made nine of 18 at the line, while Rose hit six of eight, all in the final quarter.

The rebounding was almost even, 35-34, with Rose in the advantage. North Pitt had two less turnovers, 24-26.

Hawkins hit the first two Rampant shots for the start of the 8-0 early lead. But the Panthers rallied, cutting it back to 10-7 on three free throws and baskets by Lewaskia Jenkins and Reginald Knight. Barnes and Hawkins hit again, however, to run Rose back to a 14-7 lead before Knight got another basket and William Knight added a free throw to trim it to 14-10 at the end of the first quarter.

Rose inched back out to a 20-15 lead, then got a stretch of five baskets around one free throw by the Panthers. Roberson had two baskets during that stretch, while Hawkins was credited one when a missed shot bounced off his head and back into the basket.

That ran the lead out to 30-16, a 14-point bulge. But the Panthers, behind two baskets by Jenkins came back to within eight before the half ended at 32-24.

The Panthers closed the gap to six, 36-30 with 4:30 left in the third quarter, but didn't get another point in the period. Rose, meanwhile, held the ball and pulled the Panthers out of the zone. That enabled Rose to run off six straight baskets, three by Hawkins and two by Ronnie Chapman, to extend the lead to 18, 48-30 as the period ended.

The Panthers had one last gasp left, cutting the lead back to ten before Rose pulled away to a 65-48 lead with 1:33 left in the game. That came just seconds after the Rampants went to their bench.

In addition to Hawkins' and Roberson's totals, Anthony Bryant hit for 16 points.

Reginald Knight led North Pitt with 14, while Terry Shelton hit 13 points.

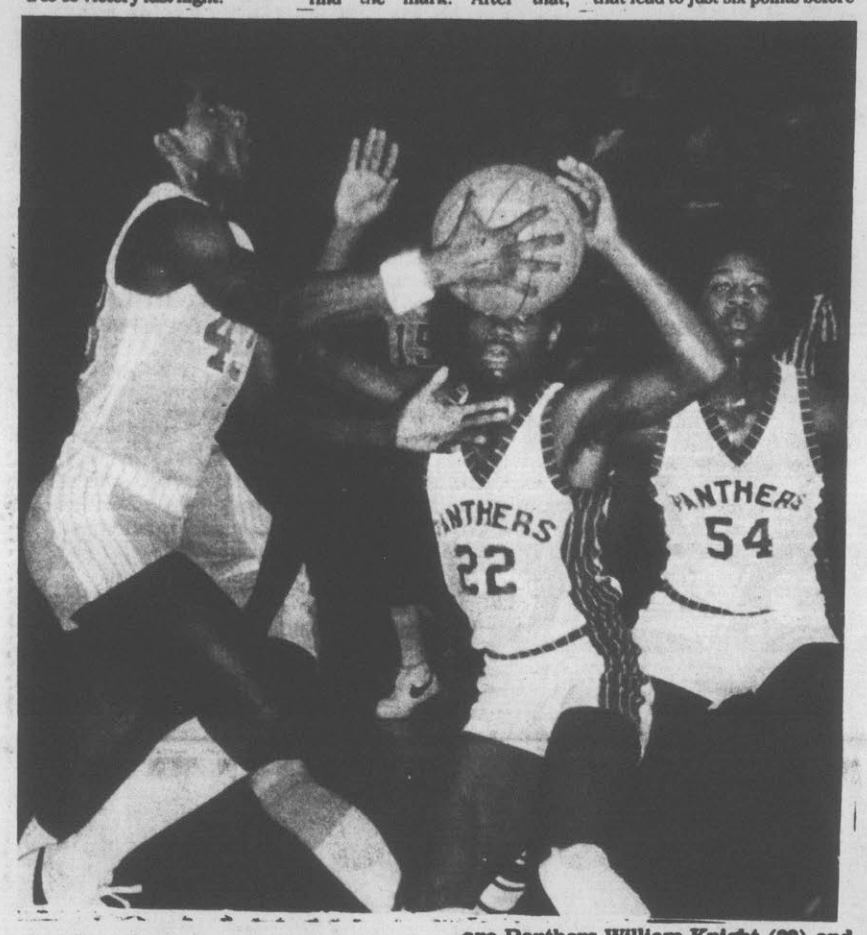

North Pitt travels to South Edgecombe on Friday, while Rose is at home to Kinston.

Runs After Lung Removed

TOKYO (AP) — Mrs. Michiko Okazawa, 52, whose infected right lung was removed in surgery when she was a child, will be among Japanese runners participating in the Hawaiian Waikiki Marathon Saturday.

Mrs. Okazawa said she started jogging two years ago and has since done it daily for distances averaging about six miles. It was tough at first, she said, but the routine has improved her stamina and health as well.

She said she hopes to finish the Waikiki Marathon in six hours.

She plans to leave Tokyo for Honolulu Thursday.

A Philadelphia Athletic football team, featuring star pitcher Rube Waddell, played a Pittsburgh squad, which had the great Christy Mathewson of New York Giant fame at fullback, in 1902. Philadelphia won, 12-6.

E. Carolina At Maryland

The East Carolina University Pirates travel to the University of Maryland tonight to meet their first Atlantic Coast Conference foe of the season.

Tipoff is set for 8 p.m. in Cole Fieldhouse.

The Terrapins come into the game with a perfect 4-0 record, while East Carolina has won just once in three outings.

The Pirates do come into the game with a victory, after claiming a 102-95 win over Alderson-Broaddus Monday night.

The game is the second of four slated for this week. The Pirates travel to Charlotte on Friday to face unbeaten LaSalle in the first round of the First Union Invitational Basketball Tournament. Boston College and hosting UNC Charlotte are also participating in that tournament. The winners and losers meet in the championship and consolation games on Saturday.

Farmville Central Tops S. Edgecombe

By JIM KYLE
Reflector Sports Writer

FARMVILLE — Farmville Central's switch to a 2-3 zone defense early in the fourth quarter shut off South Edgecombe's inside game and enabled the Jaguars to halt a Dragon rally and take a 58-53 victory last night.

The win made it two out of three for Farmville as the school won the junior varsity contest, 73-69, but lost the girls game, 56-42.

"I think when we went to the zone it helped change the tide a little bit," Jaguar coach Mike Terrell said following the game. Farmville held a 47-38 lead going into the final period, but the Dragons got the ball inside to post men Wade Farmer and Melvin Wooten and suddenly it was a 48-44 ballgame.

After Donald Reid hit a foul shot to make it 49-44, Terrell called time out and inserted the zone defense. The Jags quickly forced four turnovers and converted six straight points to take an 11-point lead, 55-44.

The Dragons cut into that margin in the game's final four minutes, but Farmville managed to hold on for the victory.

It was a win, but not a pretty one for the Jaguars and Terrell was disappointed with his team's showing. "We're real happy to win, but not at all pleased with the way we played," he said.

"We're still not playing the way we're capable of playing. I think that's due to our late start." Several of the team's key members were late coming out due to the Jaguars' two state 3-A football playoff games.

Terrell said the team was not organized. "We can't decide on the right combination and the guys aren't used to playing with each other. We've got a long ways to go if we want to compete in that 3-A conference."

South Edgecombe held a 15-14 advantage at the end of the third quarter, despite eight points in the frame by Reid. The Farmville sophomore forward connected on a pair of jumpers to give the Jags a 10-6 lead, but the Dragons hit seven free throws and a layup in the final two and a half minutes of the quarter to go up by one.

The second quarter was all Farmville as the Jaguars outscored the Dragons 14-5. South Edgecombe didn't connect on a single field goal attempt in the quarter, getting all five points on ten free throw attempts.

The Jaguars hit only six of 21 attempts from the field in the frame, but that was enough as they built up a 28-20 halftime lead. Guards James Tyson and Calvin Horne did most of the work in the period with Tyson scoring six points and Horne four.

The third quarter was relatively even with the Jaguars holding to their lead, despite the inside work of Wooten and Farmer. The pair of big men scored 14 of the Dragons' 18 points in the period, nearly all on turnaround jumpers from underneath.

The highlight of the quarter was Farmville guard Mark Owens' halfcourt shot at the buzzer which hit the back of the rim and went through to give the Jaguars a 47-38 lead.

The Dragons continued to go inside early in the final period until Farmville went zone to quell the South Edgecombe rally attempt.

Neither team shot well during the contest. Farmville hit on 26 of 73 attempts for 35.6 per cent, while South Edgecombe connected on 17 of 51 shot 33.3 per cent.

The Jags blocked out well and used muscle underneath to outrebound the taller Dragons, 54-38. Both teams committed 21 turnovers.

Reid led the Farmville scoring with 15 points, while Horne had 14. Farmer paced the Dragons with 16, Leonard Mayo had 12 and Wooten 10.

The win was the third in three tries for the Jaguars, while South Edgecombe's record dropped to 2-2 with the loss.

The South Edgecombe girls team broke loose in the third quarter to outscore Farmville's girls 23-10 and turn a tie game into a rout.

The two teams had battled to a 19-19 halftime deadlock, but the Lady Dragons, led by Alphelia Jenkins' 13 points, grabbed a big lead in the third quarter and coasted to the 56-42 victory.

Jenkins was the game's leading scorer with 27 points, while Kathy Hart scored 13 and Diana Gordon 12 for the Lady Jaguars, who are now 1-2.

The teams will all be back in action next Tuesday night for a rematch of last night's games at South Edgecombe.

Richardson Explains Challenges Of American Athlete To Club

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

A three-pronged challenge was issued to the Greenville Sports Club by former New York Yankee second baseman Bobby Richardson yesterday.

Richardson, who played over ten years with the Yankees and still holds several club and World Series records, gave an inspirational talk to the club, and also reminisced about his baseball days.

"The American athlete can be the exponent of good things in the world," he told the club. "And there are three areas of challenge they have to meet."

Richardson said the first area was in influence. "Whether you coach a little league team or just the kid across the street, you have power in the example that you set. I've told athletes in many high schools that they should be the ones to set examples because most of the other students look up to them."

The second area is one of outlook. "You should realize that your children's needs are important to them right now, not tomorrow. You want your children to be men's men, and that type person stands for principles he believes in and is not taken in by the phase "everyone's doing it.'"

The third area is one of religion or philosophy to live by. "Only God can guide your footsteps," Richardson said.

Richardson said that another former Yankee great, Joe DiMaggio, was the biggest inspiration to him. "I never played with him (as a Yankee), but we have become very good friends. Both he and Mickey Mantle volunteered to help me when I ran for Congress (in South Carolina.)"

Richardson was asked whom he thinks is the best second baseman in the game today. "I think Willie Randolph (Yankees) will be a great one someday. But I think the best one over the years has been Dick Green of the Oakland A's."

Asked about the high-money contracts and the free agent flaps of this day, Richardson said that he was "for the player," but that the average fan is being turned off by the amounts of money being paid. "The players today aren't thinking of team loyalty either," he added, "just how much they can get next year."

Richardson also noted that Roger Maris, who cracked Babe Ruth's 60-homer record in 1961 (but in more games), suffered horribly during that season. "He was under tremendous pressure. He and Mantle both had a shot at the record, and everyone was pulling for Mantle. It was a frustrating year for Maris, and he didn't really like New York (City) anyway."

Richardson, who coached at the University of South Carolina for several years after his retirement, said he feels the minors are on their last legs. "College baseball is on the rise. It's not uncommon for them to draw big crowds. And I do think that eventually the pro leagues will subsidize the college programs."

Charles Adams, number two man in the North Carolina High School Athletic Association will be the club's next speaker on December 20.

Knicks Defeat Boston

By ALEX SACHARE
AP Sports Writer

The frustration was written all over the face of Boston Celtics Coach Tommy Heinsohn.

"We had all kinds of chances to win, but we didn't," said Heinsohn, whose club bowed to the New York Knicks 122-119 in overtime Tuesday night. The defeat dropped the once-mighty Celtics to 7-15 — second worst in the National Basketball Association.

The heroes for the Knicks were Bob McAdoo, who scored a season-high 40 points and led all rebounders with 13; Butch Beard, who took over for injured playmaker Jim Cleamons (bruised hip in the first half) and had 20 points and seven steals, both season highs, and Earl Monroe, who saved seven of his 21 points for the overtime.

"It was a good game to win; hey, they're all good," said Knicks Coach Willis Reed.

In other games Tuesday night, the Los Angeles Lakers trimmed the Milwaukee Bucks 109-108, the Chicago Bulls beat the Washington Bullets 116-108, the Buffalo Braves defeated the New Orleans Jazz 113-90, the Portland Trail Blazers whipped the Cleveland Cavaliers 116-94, the Phoenix Suns topped the Kansas City Kings 103-92 and the Golden State Warriors edged the Houston Rockets 107-105.

Lakers 109, Bucks 108

Lou Hudson's three-foot jump shot with three seconds remaining gave the Lakers their onepoint victory.

In their first meeting since Lakers center Kareem Abdul-Jabbar broke his hand punching Milwaukee's Kent Benson, Abdul-Jabbar had 26 points and 13 rebounds to 14 points and six rebounds for the Milwaukee rookie. Before the opening tipoff Benson extended his hand and Abdul-Jabbar completely ignored him, but after the game, in a tunnel leading to their dressing rooms, Abdul-Jabbar came over to Benson and the two shook hands.

Bulls 116, Bullets 108

Norm Van Lier scored eight points in the final 5:06 of the game to seal the Bulls' third straight victory and snap the Bullets' five-game winning streak. It was a costly victory, however, as the Bulls lost veteran reserve center Tom Boerwinkle with torn ligaments in his left knee.

Braves 113, Jazz 90

Billy Knight and Randy Smith led a fast-breaking Buffalo attack, scoring 32 and 24 points, respectively. Buffalo played without recently acquired forward Marvin Barnes, who left the Braves to clear up "personal and financial matters," the club said. The Braves announced they have suspended Barnes.

Blazers 116, Cavs 94

Portland set a club record by posting its eighth straight victory as Bob Gross scored 27 points and Bill Walton 22. The Blazers, who built a 20-point lead early in the third period, are now 18-3, tops in the NBA.

Suns 103, Kings 92

Rookie Walt Davis scored 12 of his 29 points in the fourth quarter as Phoenix pulled away from Kansas City. The Suns outscored the Kings 18-7 to close out the game.

Warriors 107, Rockets 105

Robert Parish's tip-in with 41 seconds to play was the winning margin for the Warriors. It gave Golden State a 107-102 lead, enough to withstand a closing Houston rally.

Rams Roll Over W. Edgecombe

SNOW HILL — Greene Central's boys' basketball team won their second game in three starts last night, downing West Edgecombe, 61-35. The West Edgecombe girls, however, nipped the Ewes, 48-43, giving Greene Central its first loss in three outings.

In the girls' game, the Ewes eased out into a 12-11 lead in the first period, but fell behind in second quater. West Edgecombe took a 22-18 lead into intermission.

Greene Central rallied in the third quarter, outscoring the Wildkittens 13-6. That pushed the Ewes ahead, 31-28, as the final stanza started. But West came back with a 20-12 margin in the final period, pulling out the win.

R. Triplette led the Wildkittens with 14 points, while C. Howard added 13. Melody Ham led Greene Central with 28.

In the boys game, the Rams quickly put the game away. By the end of the first period, Greene Central had pushed out to an 18-8 lead. They extended that to 26-12 by halftime, and upped it to 39-20 by the time the horn sounded at the end of the third quarter.

Greene Central finished the Wildcats off with a 22-15 advantage in the final quarter.

Johnny Croom led Greene Central with 15 points, while Steve Jennette added 13. No one hit double figures for West Edgecombe.

Greene Central travels to South Lenoir on Friday.

Anaheim Gets Franchise

ANAHEIM (AP) — Anaheim has a new World Team Tennis franchise named the Oranges, and now officials of the organization will begin trying to put a squad together.

Dennis Hall of Los Angeles is president of the Anaheim WTT entry, and said he will "make every effort to sign major tennis stars" to make the Oranges competitive.

Hall said he will try to trade for some established WTT stars, and also will attempt to sign top draft choices, including Bob Hewitt, Lea Antonopolis, Ray Moore and John Evert, Chris Evert's brother.

Bear Grass Splits Pair

BEAR GRASS — Henry McCuller popped in 30 points last night to lead Chocowinity to an 81-70 victory over Bear Grass.

The Indians built up a 40-32 halftime lead in the ballgame and coasted to the victory, despite four Bear Grass players in double figures.

McCuller was the game's leading scorer, while teammate Roy Daniels scored 18 and Nelson Small 10. Jackie Harrison and Norris Wallace each scored 14 points to pace Bear Grass. Duane Baker had 13 and Jesse Bullock 11.

In the girls game, the Lady Bears took a 15-5 lead in the first quarter, but saw that cut to 23-16 at halftime. The Bear Grass lead was 27-21 at the end of the third quarter, but the team stretched back out in the game's final period.

Patricia Taylor was the only player in the game to score in double figures. She finished up with 20 points for Bear Grass.

The Bear Grass boys are now 1-4 for the season, while the Lady Bears are 4-1. Bear Grass also took a victory in the junior varsity contest, 55-43.

North Pitt Is Lacking In Experience

By JIM KYLE
Reflector Sports Writer

North Pitt basketball coach Cobby Deans isn't predicting another Eastern Carolina Conference championship for the Panthers, but he feels they may be able to have something to do with who does win this year.

North Pitt lost all five starters from last season's team which won the conference and finished second in the state 3-A tournament. Deans does have five players returning off of that squad, but they lack a lot of experience. "We're going to be really green," he said.

Despite inexperience, however, Deans is pleased with the progress the Panthers have made. "They're hustling. They'll scrap, they're not shy, they'll come at you. I think this is the reason we've been able to win," Deans said after the Panthers won their first two games this year.

"We've got a good group of kids and they're working hard. We've got about 12-13 guys that are pretty much equal. We're not backing off from anybody. We're real pleased with the progress we've been making. We're looking for a positive season, I guess that might be the best way to put it."

However, the Panther coach realizes his team is going to have some stiff competition this year. "It's going to be pretty tough. The conference is pretty tight all the way up.

"We're going to try to help determine who the conference champion will be. I can't say we're going to be a contender, but we're going to try to have a say-so as to who wins it."

The Panthers haven't set their starting lineup as yet. Deans said he has 7-8 players who could start.

"Our center is basically Lawaskia Jenkins, a 6-2 senior. He's doing a good job as far as team leadership and is doing a good job on the boards." In addition, Henry Knight (6-3, sophomore) will also see some action at the post position. "He's making a few sophomore mistakes, but he's learning every day," Deans said.

At the forwards are Reginald Knight (6-2, sophomore) and Mickey Hines (6-0 junior). Reginald Knight is also doing a real good job rebounding, Deans said, while Hines probably has the most experience on the team. Hines started out slow this year, according to Deans, but "he's coming along real well."

William Knight (5-11, junior) is working at one guard spot and he has been a pleasant surprise, Deans said. At the other guard position, the point guard, are Terry Shelton (5-8, junior) and Calvin Carmack (5-8, senior). "Shelton has played quite a bit and has shown a lot of leadership as far as being the team quarterback," Deans said. Carmack has also been working at the point spot and is steadily improving, along with Shelton.

North Pitt also has five other players that should play a key role as reserves. They are guard Victor Evans (5-8, sophomore), forwards Allen Hardy (6-0, senior), Tim Corey (6-0, junior) and Donald Harris (6-0, junior) and center Darrell Smith, a 6-3, first-year senior.

The teams other reserves are Gary Mayo, Reuban Matthews, Roy Briley and Terry Knight.

Deans said the strength of the North Pitt squad this year should be hustle and offense. "We're really hustling and scrapping. On offense, if we stay in our pattern, we will get a good shot off."

The team's defense is a worry to its coach, although he said hustle can help make up for poor defense.

Deans agrees with most of the other coaches in the league that D. H. Conley will be "top dog" this season. "North Lenoir and Ayden-Grifton will be challengers. The rest of us are in another group, but I don't think there will be any pushovers teams that the top three can overlook," he said.

"The conference has really improved and it's going to be a great year for basketball in this area. I think the (bottom five) teams will have a chance to pull off a few surprises."

Ayden-Grifton Crushes Tigers

WILLIAMSTON — Ayden-Grifton and Williamston high schools split a pair of games last night. The Williamston girls gained their third win of the year, 50-36, over the Chargerettes, while the Tigers bowed to Ayden-Grifton, 56-33.

The win was the second in two games for the Chargers, while the Tigers are now 2-1. Ayden-Grifton's girls are 1-1.

In the girls' game, Williamston inched into a 10-8 lead after one period, but then pulled away. By halftime, the Tigerettes had run their lead out to 30-19.

Ayden-Grifton was able to clip one point off that margin, trailing 40-30, as the final quarter opened. They were outhit by Williamston, however, 10-6, in that frame.

Paula Bennett led Williamston with 14 points, while JoAnna Lilley and Sharon Hudgins each had 12. Aretha Cannon led Ayden-Grifton with 10.

In the boys' contest, both Ayden-Grifton and Williamston fought to a draw during the first half. The game was tied at 9-9 after one period, and at 20-20 at halftime.

But in the third period, the Chargers took command and roared away, scoring 18 to just six for the Tigers. That ran A-G out to a 38-26 lead. They polished off the Tigers, 18-7, in the final quarter.

Frankie Dail led Ayden-Grifton with 19, while James Leggett added 14 and Shelton McCarter had 10. Horace Wynne and Walter Harris each had 11 to lead Williamston.

On Friday, Ayden-Grifton travels to Saratoga, while Williamston visits Washington.

Sox Fire Kennedy

BOSTON (AP) — Former Red Sox utility infielder John Kennedy, who quit baseball in 1974 to manage in the Boston farm system, has been fired as pilot of the Bristol Red Sox.

Boston Red Sox Vice President Buddy LeRoux, at the winter baseball meetings in Honolulu, said in a telephone interview Tuesday that Kennedy had been "let go." He did not elaborate.

Kennedy, 36, managed the Winston-Salem club in 1975 and spent the last two years at Bristol in the Eastern Baseball League. He spent 17 years as a player in the majors, 4½ years with the Red Sox.

Overton Named Master

Kristi Overton, a seven-year-old Greenville girl, has become the youngest female ever to have received the Masters rating in competitive trick water skiing.

The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Parker Overton of Greenville, Kristi is a second grade student at Greenville Christian Academy.

She was recently notified by the American Water Ski Association that she is the youngest female ever to have received the Masters rank, the highest given to a competitive skier.

Kristi began skiing at four on two skis and by five was slaloming on one. She became a trick skiier at age six, and entered her first competition in Rocky Mount in 1975.

Since then, she has earned 18 trophies. She competes in the junior girls division, which consists of girls 12 and under. She had won the N.C. State Championship for junior girls tricks for the past two years.

Trick points in competitive skiing are received for each trick done in two 20 second passes with no repetition of tricks. The total number of points earned determine the rating one may receive. Ratings graduate from third class to second to first to expert to master.

Ratings are given only by qualified judges, and a master rating can only be earned in a sanctioned tournament, and the skier must be a member of the American Water Ski Association.

Votes By N.C. In The House, Senate

By Roll Call Report

WASHINGTON — Here's how area Members of Congress were recorded on major roll call votes on November 28 and 29, the days immediately following the semi-recess that began in early November.

House

SOCIAL SECURITY Failed, 183 for and 209 against, to insist that the Social Security "earnings limitation" be lifted at age 65. As a result of this vote, House and Senate conferees on HR 9346 are likely to go along with Senate-passed language lifting the limitation at age 70. That will mean that when pensioners reach 70 they can earn as much as they like without having their monthly Social Security entitlement reduced by Uncle Sam. The vote was on a motion to instruct House conferees to insist in the House-passed 65-years-old threshold.

Rep. Bill Archer (R-Tex.), sponsor of the motion, said the earnings limitation at 65 costs society "the services of wise and experienced workers who simply cannot afford work for substantial pay because, if they do, they will lose their valued Social Security benefits."

Rep. James Burke (D-Mass.), an opponent, said that if Congress lowers the threshold to 65 it "would have to levy a tax of $3.5 billion on the business firms of this country . . . to finance this provision."

Members voting "yea" favoted removing the earnings limitation at age 65.

Reps. James Martin (R-9) and James Broyhill (R-10) voted "yea."

Reps. Walter Jones (D-1), L. H. Fountain (D-2), Charles Whitley (D-3), Ike Andrews (D-4), Stephen Neal (D-5), Richardson Preyer (D-6), Charles Rose (D-7), W. G. Hefner (D-8) and Lamar Gudger (D-11) voted "nay."

AMTRAK Voted, 258 for and 138 against, in favor of increasing by $18 million the supplemental appropriation for Amtrak— an amount sufficient to delay until at least March proposed cutbacks in passenger service. Major routes such as the Floridian apparently were given a lease on life by this vote. The vote, on a motion to recommit, came during consideration of the conference report on HR 9375, a fiscal 1978 appropriations bill. It approved $18 million instead of proposed lower increments.

Rep. Albert Gore Jr. (D-Tenn.), a supporter, said: "We need a national rail service for passengers. We can have one if we go about it in an intelligent manner."

Rep. John McFall (D-Calif.), an oppoent, said he favored an $8 million rather than $18 million supplemental appropriation. "Now this extra $10 million is not really going to provide the opportunity to restore service that everyone believes will be provided," he said.

Members voting "yea" favored an extra $18 million for Amtrak.

Jones, Fountain, Whitley, Andrews, Neal, Preyer, Rose, Hefner, Martin, Broyhill and Gudger voted "nay.'

Senate

ABORTION Approved, 44 for and 21 against, language on federal funding of abortions which was a bit stricter than previous Senate language. This was yet another attempt at compromise with the House, which for months has been taking a harder line against the funding of abortions under Medicaid. This vote was on the conference report on HR 7555, a fiscal 1978 appropriations bill for the departments of Labor and Health, Education and Welfare. After it occurred, the House rejected the compromise language, thus continuing the stalemate and raising questions as to whether employes of those departments will receive their next pay-checks.

The language approved in the vote would have permitted federal funding of abortions where the life of the mother was endangered and in cases of rape and incest that are reported "to a law enforcement agency or public health service or its equivalent."

Senators voting "yea" favored the compromise language.

Sen. Robert Morgan (D) voted "yea" and Sen. Jesse Helms (R) voted "nay."

Too Much Out Of Paychecks

By EDMOND Le BRETON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nine out of 10 American workers subject to withholding taxes are letting the government take too much of their weekly paychecks, the General Accounting Office says in a new report.

The GAO, Congress' investigative agency, also said most employees apparently prefer to have too much withheld and get a refund than not to have enough withheld and have to pay more.

But the agency said a better job could be done of matching withholding with tax liability. Meanwhile, it said, millions of earners are, in effect, constantly lending money to the government without receiving interest.

The report said the average amount overwithheld in 1973, the latest year for which full statistics were available, was $380.

"Since overpayments are normally refunded in March or April of the following year, taxpayers are denied the use of some of their income for more than a year," the report said. "By the time they receive their refunds, their current taxes are already being withheld."

GAO said the system imposes "a particularly great hardship on low income wage earners. About 97 percent of taxpayers earning under $5,000 had too much money withheld."

The report said there are various ways in which employers and employees can legally adjust withholding to minimize the discrepancy with the amount of tax owed, but that these are not generally well publicized.

It suggested that the Treasury Department provide better information and survey withholding practices to see whether they could be modernized. Revising revenue codes to allow quick refunds to the unemployed might be considered, it added.

Other options the GAO said Congress might consider include simplifying the income tax, paying interest on the refunds and allowing taxpayers still more latitude in setting their exemptions.

In comments appended to the report, the Treasury Department said "withholding has been designed to work best for the large group of taxpayers who have one job and a steady, constant income ... and for such taxpayers, withholding does work very well."

Pres. Carter Just Another Of Guests

FAYETTEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — The parents of the bride say President Carter will be just another wedding guest, and the White House says Carter would like to keep it that way if he can.

Carter will be in Fayetteville Dec. 16 and 17 for the wedding of his nephew, Sydney Scott Stapleton, to Caro Lee Gainey.

"He'll be an uncle like the other relatives," said Mrs. Robert Holland Gainey, Caro's mother. "Of course, he's the President, but he's coming as a member of the family."

Assistant Press Secretary Rex Granum said Tuesday in Washington that Carter would make no speeches or statements and expressed hope that media interest in the occasion would be small.

"We don't anticipate much newsworthy substance there. If you can see it in your hearts to stay home, we'd appreciate it," Granum said.

Mrs. Gainey said she didn't expect to be bearing any additional burdens because of Carter's decision to come.

"I couldn't handle it if I wanted to," she said. "If you've ever been the mother of the bride, you know you can't handle anything else. I have been assured everything will be taken care of."

The Rev. Leighton B. McKeithan Jr., pastor of the church where the wedding will be, said he expected no problems either. "I'm sure there'll be enough police and Secret Service to keep things in order," he said.

The groom is the son of faith healer Ruth Stapleton of Fayetteville, the President's sister. He is a medical student at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. His bride is a Raleigh dental hygienist.

Mostly 'No' On B-1 Models

WASHINGTON (AP) — Here is how North Carolina congressmen voted Tuesday in the 191-166 roll call by which the House approved production of the fifth and sixth models of the B1 bomber.

Under the parliamentary situation at the time of the vote, a no vote was a vote to approve funding of the two aircraft. A yes vote, in effect, was against production.

Democrats — Andrews no; Fountain no; Gudger no; Hefner yes; Jones no; Neal yes; Preyer yes; Rose yes; Whitley no.

EXPECTS CHALLENGE

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Ronald Reagan, speaking here Tuesday, said he thinks President Carter will be challenged by Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr., for the presidency in 1980.

Today, Some 400,000 Americans Living On Boats

By MARY ELLEN HASKETT

ANNAPOLIS, Md. (UPI) — In 1971, Jan and Bill Moeller left their New York jobs and suburban home to live aboard a sailboat for a few years. They are still cruising. They say they may never move back ashore.

"I can't sleep any more if my bed doesn't rock," said Moeller, who gave up steady free-lance photography to live aboard the Whiffle, a 32-foot sloop.

The Moellers are among about 400,000 Americans who find living aboard boats a more congenial lifestyle than living on land.

"We just got sick of our cute little home with its high taxes in New Canaan, Conn.," Moeller said.

Mrs. Moeller, a free-lance writer, added:

"We were just planning on a year or two to get away from our high pressure businesses."

The Moellers, both 47, left their New York jobs in 1971, the year they bought their Danish-built steel cutter with a sky blue hull and white trim.

"We had responsible jobs," said Mrs. Moeller. "We're not hippie types like people think most 'live-aboards are.'"

They make enough money at their free lance work to support themselves. They recently wrote a book about the techniques and pleasures of living aboard a boat year-round. They give seminars at various ports to prospective "live-aboards."

The Moellers also said they will take odd jobs if needed to support their lifestyle.

"It's very inexpensive," said Mrs. Moeller.

After the initial outlay for the boat, the main cost is for docking, $50 to $100 a month. Boats like the Whiffle cost $18,000 to $20,000 in 1971 but prices have doubled since then, they said.

"It costs one-fifth as much to live on water as it does to live on land," Moeller said. "We can live on $5,000 a year."

"And we're rather spend-thrifts by 'live-aboard' standards," his wife added.

Most "live-aboards" take odd jobs outside their regular professions to meet expenses. But some have professions such as nursing or painting that allow working in different ports of call.

Mrs. Moeller said some of their "live-aboard" friends have gotten by on as little as $500 a year.

Her husband, a hefty man with a quick smile and friendly eyes behind wire-rimmed glasses, said the small expense involved in living aboard a boat is not the reason most people, he and his wife included, choose the sea-going lifestyle.

"It's the adventure of cruising and seeing other things," Moeller said. "The sea is one of the last few areas that man can still explore. There's a sense of achievement, you feel you've accomplished something. This lifestyle gives a lot of satisfaction."

He said the motivation for many is "the true American pioneer spirit" while for others there is the appeal of living closer to nature.

Mrs. Moeller said the water "always feels new and unexplored" even if other people have been in the same spot before them. She said one's lifestyle can be as adventurous or as quiet as one chooses.

She particularly enjoys navigating, "making our own way to a place."

So far, the Moellers have cruised only the Atlantic Coast, north to Canada and south to the Caribbean. They hope to sail to the Pacific Coast soon. Last year, they cruised up the Hudson River, through the Great Lakes and down the Mississippi, emerging finally in the Gulf of Mexico.

They read Mark Twain while sailing down the Mississippi and looked through their stacks of Revolutionary War literature while sailing in the New England and Mid-Atlantic area. Both are Revolutionary War buffs.

The main room of the Whiffle combines a living room, a dining room and a kitchen. It has two matching built-in blue couches facing each other with a drop leaf mahogany table between. Large drawers under each couch hold most of the tools and spare parts needed for repairs.

A small fireplace augments battery-powered heaters for warmth. A battery-powered television set, a cassette tape recorder with 300 recordings on tape and over 600 books, mostly paperback, provide entertainment.

The Whiffle also carries a sewing machine and a small Christmas tree.

So they can continue their free-lance work, the Moellers have stored away a typewriter and darkroom equipment. Moeller arranges the equipment in the vessel's small bathroom for a complete darkroom.

They have kerosene lamps and battery-powered lights for night use and several ways of cooking, including a gas stove, a hot plate, a toaster oven and a broiler.

The bedroom forward of the main living room and kitchen is filled nearly wall-to-wall with a built in double bed that has lots of storage underneath.

"We don't use sleeping bags like most people think," Mrs. Moeller said. "I have honest-to-goodness sheets."

Both disputed popular opinions that sailing from port to port is a lonely lifestyle lacking in permanent attachments.

"We've made more friends since we started cruising than we had in the rest of our lives," Moeller said.

"And they are true friends. I think it's because there is such a tremendous bond of common interest."

The majority of their friends are other "live-aboards" because even though they go in different directions their paths always cross, the Moellers said.

"You can always count on meeting again," said Mrs. Moeller.

They have found many others to be kind, friendly and interested in what life is like on a boat all year.

"People will go out of their way to be friendly," Mrs. Moeller said.

As one example, she cited a marina owner on the Mississippi who loaned them his car so they could buy groceries before they had even introduced themselves.

The Moellers said living aboard a boat is a good way to conserve energy and natural resources and control pollution.

Mrs. Moeller said she and her husband use bicycles whenever possible to move around on land.

"Most 'live-aboards' use a maximum of 20 amps of electricity at any one time" and have fewer electric appliances than an average household, she said. Also, they use only 80 gallons of water a month.

They are strong proponents of pollution control to protect the environment, although that is not their main reason for choosing their lifestyle.

Mrs. Moeller said now she feels cooped up when she is in a house for a long period during their rare visits with friends ashore.

The Moellers said they don't know if they will ever move back to land.

"We're just like turtles, we carry our house with us wherever we go," she said.

They don't like to plan too far ahead. Mrs. Moeller likes sailing in the northern climate while her husband likes the tropics and they never plan their trips too far ahead.

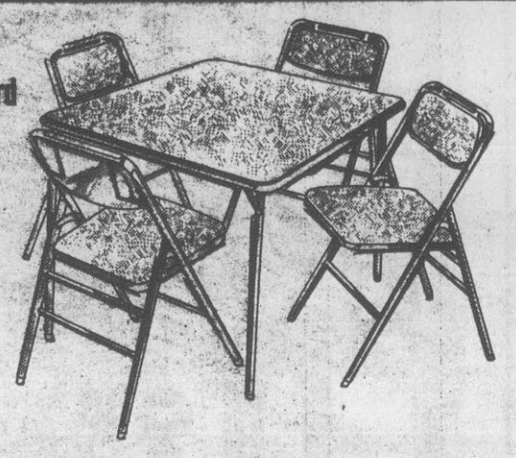

"If you want to know where we'll be next week, ask us next week," she said.

Bees keep warm during the winter by forming a ball-shaped cluster around the frame of the bottom section of the hive.

Two Patriarchs Guiding Puerto Rico

By DANIEL DROSDOFF

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (UPI) — An elderly man with a moustache, dressed in Chinese-style pajamas, appeared in the doorway, spread his arms and clapped them to his side, smiling in greeting.

"It's not that I'm a Maoist," he said in a halting but clear voice. "But these clothes are comfortable."

Luis Munoz Marin, 79, is a living legend who founded modern Puerto Rico and still keeps close tabs on its affairs, advising politicians and at times addressing rallies of the Popular Democratic Party he founded.

Munoz, like his opposite, Luis A. Ferre, founder of the pro-statehood New Progressive Party, are political father figures who cast a long shadow over the current bitter debate over whether the island should continue to be a commonwealth or embrace full American statehood.

Munoz, recovering from a stroke that has impeded his speech, lives in a villa in shaded wooded area outside San Juan. He has owned the home since 1952, the year he founded the commonwealth.

Trees block out the view of new high-rise condominiums that dot the area, symbols of the rapid economic growth that Munoz spurred during his four terms as governor.

Puerto Rico's economy is still based on Operation Bootstrap, the Munoz formula for attracting large American companies to the island with tax exemptions.

Recently, however, that formula has come under strong criticism from Gov. Carlos Romero Barcelo of the New Progressive Party, which last year for the first time won control of both houses of the legislature as well as the governorship.

Puerto Rico has not not been able to shake off the effects of the 1973-74 oil crisis and has an unemployment rate of around 20 percent, with over 50 percent of the population receiving food stamps.

One can detect a trace of sadness in Munoz's voice when he surveys Puerto Rico's political and economic problems, but he is more than willing to explain why he feels Puerto Rico's economic survival depends on keeping the commonwealth form of government.

Under the commonwealth formula, Puerto Rico has kept a large measure of fiscal and political autonomy, but its people are American citizens and many federal laws apply to the island as well as to the mainland.

"It's not that I'm partisan," Munoz said in an interview. "There is too much partisanship in Puerto Rico already."

He said Puerto Rico's current statehood government was hurting chances for economic recovery by not giving enough support to tax exemptions.

"If a government has too strong ties with statehood, it meets difficulties at every step in solving economic problems. It's like an automobile with a brake underneath the accelerator." He said the commonwealth, on the other hand, was created "to meet the peculiar conditions of Puerto Rico."

Munoz said he was worried about the tremendous flow of federal aid into Puerto Rico, both under the commonwealth and pro-statehood governments, creating "the concept of a beggar state."

Although he said the aid "went to good things," he wanted Puerto Rico to pay more of its share, perhaps "by offering matching funds. We have to get the money respectfully."

Munoz's attitude toward federal aid is in sharp contrast to that of Ferre, who considers the money a right of American citizenship rather than a handout.

At the age of 72, Ferre is president of the senate and elder statesman of the New Progressive Party he founded.

A successful industrialist and philantrophist Ferre's is a moderate voice in the constant bickering between the statehood and commonwealth factions.

"I feel statehood is inevitable," he said. "I'm with the younger generation. Our polls show young people are supporting our party. They realize now that statehood is no danger to their culture or to their economy".

Ferre said Puerto Rico is entitled to federal aid just like any other depressed area of the United States.

"Every state gets federal funds in an emergency. If there is unemployment in California, the federal government is going to create jobs in California.

"You have to remember the oil crisis was a devastating thing for Puerto Rico. If it wasn't for the food stamps, we would be in complete bankruptcy."

Ferre said he favored keeping the tax exemptions of Operation Bootstrap now, but he said they would have to be modified to prevent companies from pulling out of the island when their tax-exempt period is over.

"The tax exemption for industry is a privilege that by its very nature is temporary," he said.

The island's economic future depended on building up Puerto Rico's agriculture, tourism, and construction industries as well as converting to nuclear and solar sources of energy, he said. "Those are the economic motors."

During his term as governor from 1968 to 1972, Ferre devised a policy called "jibaro statehood." The jibaro is the Puerto Rican hillbilly and island slang for Puerto Rican. "Jibaro statehood" means Puerto Rico would keep Spanish as its official language.

"Language is something you can't change and we won't want to change. It's a part of culture. When you have a culture, society is emotionally stabilized."

Although Ferre strongly believes that Puerto Ricans will not be able to exercise their full political rights until the island becomes a state, he does not feel that most Puerto Ricans vote for the commonwealth and pro-statehood parties because of the always debated political status issue.

"People are not going to vote for status. They will vote for performance in government. I feel my contribution has been to create a two-party system in Puerto Rico. After running the country for 28 years (1940-1968), the Popular Democratic Party felt it owned it."

SPLIT — Political patriarchs on opposite sides of the current debate on Puerto Rico's future are Luis Munoz Marin (top) and Luis A. Ferre. (UPI Photo)

Foundation Preserving Cranes From All Over

By HARRIET LEEDS

BARABOO, Wis. (UPI) — They come from Japan, India, Siberia and other parts of Asia, Australia and various areas of Africa and North America.

The tallest are the saruses from India. The most exotic are beige and brown crowned ones with pompons on their heads. The rarest are the stark white whoopers.

They live on a unique 65-acre Baraboo farm and comprise the world's largest and most complete collection of cranes. The farm is headquarters of the International Crane Foundation, a nonprofit publicly-supported corporation founded in 1973 and dedicated to the study and preservation of cranes.

Seven of the 15 crane species are endangered, mainly because of man's encroachment on their habitat. The ICF collection includes all but one of the species — the endangered black-necked crane.

The goals of the ICF, according to director George Archibald, are research, habitat preservation, captive propagation, reintroduction and public education.

Archibald and Ron Sauey, the two founding ornithologists, met at Cornell University when Sauey was starting graduate studies and Archibald was doing doctoral research. They shared a fascination with cranes and had traveled far to study them.

Archibald once lived in an underground South Korean army bunker to study white-naped cranes in the Han River estuary near the demilitarized zone. Sauey had crouched in a bamboo blind on cold, dark, Indian mornings to research the winter habits of Siberian cranes.

The idea for the foundation took hold when Archibald stopped in at the Sauey farm in Wisconsin on his way to Japan.

Sauey's father helped them out by moving his Arabian horses from Wisconsin to Florida. He turned his farm over to the two young men and their cranes on a $1 a year lease.

The foundation is best known for its efforts to maintain and breed rare cranes in captivity.

The most seriously endangered of all are the large white whooping cranes of North America. There were only 15 whooping cranes in 1942. Now, they number about 100, three quarters of them in the wild.

The ICF has three whooping cranes — two males, named Tony and Angus, and a female, named Tex.

Tony was hatched at the Audubon Park Zoo in New Orleans. His mother, Josephine, was the last of the now-extinct Louisiana whooping crane population.

Tony and Angus are the last of the non-migratory whoopers, according to Archibald. The ICF is working with Louisiana on plans to return to the wild any offspring produced on the farm by the captive birds.

The ICF also is working on returning Siberian cranes to Iran, Japanese cranes to Korea, and common cranes to Great Britain.

In the area of habitat preservation, the ICF is working for the preservation of the remaining wetlands of Hokkaido, Japan. In 1972, the ICF conducted the first aerial survey of the Japanese crane's nesting grounds in Hokkaido that revealed the species is non-migratory and much of its nesting habitat was being destroyed by developers.

The ICF has won the support of Japanese conservationists and both are working to convince the Japanese government to buy the land to preserve the threatened marshes.

In Korea, the ICF claims responsibility for the declaration of the Han River estuary — which supports most of the world's remaining white-naped cranes — as a national monument.

On his office wall, Archibald displays a letter dated Sept. 29 he received from Tso-Hsin-Cheng of the Peking Institute of Zoology. The Chinese scientist wrote:

"The scientific cooperation between science workers of our two countries is a matter of much significance in the promotion of scientific work of both countries.

"We feel regretful that there is yet no formal diplomatic relationship between our two countries and also on account of other factual difficulties, we are in no position to comply with your request."

But, Archibald, who had suggested a cooperative field study, is hopeful of working with Chinese in the future.

Only through international cooperation, Archibald said, will the foundation be able to pursue its goal to preserve cranes which have been on the earth for at least 60 million years.

By IRVING DESFOR
AP Newsfeatures

Among the great number of photographic books which reach my desk, some grab attention because they they are offbeat and I am curious as to how — and why — the photographer arrived at his concept.

Such was the case with a current soft-cover book, "At Home," by Norman Sanders, published by Morgan & Morgan, Dobbs Ferry, N.Y. 10522. Skimming the pages revealed view after view of room interiors, each different in atmosphere and each with a single occupant. The quality of the photography and printing is superb but the question remained, "Who are these people and why are they together?"

Before getting an answer, a second new book in the same mail got attention. Radically different in subject matter, it was technical in nature with charts, graphs and tables ... and from the same publisher. Entitled "Photographic Tone Control," it was by the same author, Norman Sanders. The book describes an original personal system of tone control in black-and-white photography which ensures consistently high quality prints.

Two current books of such wide diversity by the same photographer? From Morgan & Morgan, I was able to contact the author and we had a long, informative chat on the phone.

Norman Sanders is a serious photographer who juggles several careers simultaneously. Primarily, he's president of a lithographic printing firm in New York City. At the same time, he puts aside two days a week to teach photography and lithography at the highly rated Cooper Union Institute of Art in Manhattan. He is also lecturer and consultant to the Federal Design Improvement program of the National Endowment for the Arts and contributing author to Kodak Bulletin for the Graphic Arts. On weekends, he pursues his personal projects in serious photography such as the two-year series which comprise the "At Home" book and an upcoming exhibition at the Witkin Gallery in New York City in February 1978.

"At Home" started with Sanders' fascination for people and how they live. He was intrigued with how different people create different lifestyles in the sanctuary of their homes. Some people furnish their rooms by careful design while others accumulate possessions by chance but eventually, he believes, a home reflects a person's feelings about objects that represent value, comfort, beauty or perhaps social status.

A WORKSHOP is the favorite room of this anonymous artist in Rockland County, N.Y. This is one of a series of studies of individuals by Norman Sanders which is included in a new book, "At Home."

Sanders felt he could capture on film the inner spirit of a person by photographing people at ease at home in their favorite rooms. He started in 1974 in his own home with his son in his poster-decorated den and with friends in the rooms they were most attached to. These led to their friends and to strangers as word of the project spread. He confined the picture taking, however, only to the area in which he lived, in Rockland County, N.Y. to save time.

All subjects volunteered or were recommended. They posed and dressed to suit themselves. Of 95 pictured, several felt most comfortable in the nude. No extra lighting device was used to avoid possibly changing the character of a room and each photograph was made with whatever illumination was present.

All pictures were made with a Hasselblad camera on a tripod, with a lens setting of f-16 for the greatest depth of field. Since the illumination varied with each room, the exposures ranged from 1/8th second to 1½ minutes on black-and-white film. Subjects took positions they could hold for the time necessary.

Sanders confirmed each shooting session beforehand by phone. To reduce the possibility of camera fright, he appeared at each appointment without the camera. It was left in the car. He and his subjects would get acquainted usually over a cup of coffee. After talks that sometimes lasted two hours, he got his camera and tripod and the shooting would take from 15 minutes to half an hour. Each subject signed a photo release.

The 95 studies of individuals "At Home" are offered without any text or commentary on Sanders' part to accompany the visual impressions.

"From the start, I perceived that the people who agreed to sit for these photographs were entrusting me with deep and often delicate feelings," Sanders explains in a preface. "What they open-heartedly offered to my camera could easily be distorted by words, so it must be left to the viewer to sense the moods and interpret the symbols that evoke his understanding."

Here, then, are 95 pictures of people that offer a home-study course in the psychology of individuals through photo interpretation. They are a cross section of a small typical community and could be your friends and neighbors.

In "At Home," Norman Sanders has conceived and achieved an offbeat photographic project with great technical proficiency and has made it an interesting human study.

Italian Tailoring Will Be Made In The U.S.A.

By JOHN MOODY
UPI Men's Fashion Editor

NEW YORK (UPI) — For years, American men have had to decide whether they wanted custom-tailored or ready-made clothes.

Price, quality, and taste were major factors. Seldom did aficionados of one side cross over to the other.

Italian designer Angelo Vittucci, who has built a reputation for quality and a fiercely faithful clientele in Rome, says he's going to bridge the gap with old-world tailored clothes made in a Maryland factory.

Working After Six Inc. in New York and Harry Lebow of Lebow Bros. in Baltimore, Vittucci plans to introduce his signature line to the United States market in March 1978 after an initial showing in January.

"This idea can work in the United States because there are no longer any tailors in America," he said in an interview during his tour of the country.

"Most people who call themselves custom tailors really aren't," he said. "They have their fabric cut in factories, sometimes some of it is stitched in factories and then they do the last part of the work. That's not custom-made, but Americans have come to think it is."

Determined to refresh our memories, Vittucci says the 36 suits and the dozen or so sports jackets he'll offer will be made of natural Italian fabrics. They range from pure wool to mohair to a mink and wool blend that's softer than almost any other clothing material known to man.

"The style will be mine but the cut of the fabric will be more like a tailor would do than a machine," the 54-year-old Vittucci said proudly.

Jackets and suit coats will feature single-breasted, two-button fronts, knot ends, a very Italian suppressed waist, soft-but-straight shoulder, and narrow lapels.

Details are important in Angelo's world. Buttons on blazers will be solid gold and silver colored metal ("I hate those hollow tin ones on so many blazers"), each jacket will be silk-lined, and stitching will be meticulous.

"I'm not trying to force myself on anyone," he said, "but I think most people who like tailor-made clothes will like what I offer."

They should also be braced for the $450 to $550 price tags on most Angelo suits.

But, the designer countered, "Do you think you can get a suit that is cut, stitched, and patterned all by hand for less than $600? You can't."

That's where Lebow comes in.

"We have people learning about Angelo's designs, how he does things, how the clothes should look," Lebow said. "We'll go into actual production in a few weeks, and the products should start coming soon after that."

Most work will be done by hand. But machines, the only way to keep costs in the three-figure range, will handle part of the job, he said.

"The materials we're using cost an incredible amount per yard, and I can't say I'm not nervous about sinking that kind of money in a project," he added. "But I really believe there'll be a market for these clothes. They really are beautiful."

Vittucci shrugged. "I've had offers to market my line in America before, but I never thought I could present the quality here I'd always given my customers in Rome. Now I think I can."

His customers, by the way, include actors Robert Mitchum and Henry Fonda, the Shah of Iran, and Constantine, former king of Greece.

Refreshingly, Vittucci isn't anxious to sign his name all over his garments.

"My workmanship is my signature. People will know they are my work. Why should I put a big 'A' all over the place?"

Art Student's Work Exhibited

Jesse Jackson Engaged In Crusade For Excellence

By DAVID SMOTHERS
UPI Senior Editor

CHICAGO (UPI) — Mention Jesse Jackson's name, particularly around Chicago, and you could be in for a heavy argument.

Trouble maker, loud mouth, publicity hound, clothes horse and phony are some of the more attractive characteristics variously ascribed to the Rev. Jesse Louis Jackson.

He is Chicago's most visible symbol of what used to be known as the civil rights movement. As head of Operation PUSH, his activities are nationwide.

He is a specialist in applying pressure and getting people mad at him — sometimes, it seems, deliberately.

Right now, Jackson is engaged in a campaign with which his most choleric critics might find it difficult to disagree.

Put simply, it is to make black youth smarter, more disciplined, and more fit to take advantage of opportunities now available to them. The same goes, Jackson says, for white kids.

Jackson, at 36 a relatively young veteran of the civil rights struggle, believes what the movement badly needs now is a kick in the pants. He says his program is the way to do it and indicates he is the man to do the kicking.

He fears the fight has gone out of the old freedom fighters; the doors they pried open in the 60s are now closing again; the youth who should be preparing themselves for struggle are hung up on alcohol, drugs, sex and self love.

"Where is this generation of strugglers, where are they?" Jackson asked in an interview. "Many have been victimized by the alcohol epidemic, many have been victimized by the drug epidemic, there is an unusual high level of premature pregnancy.

"There is a new level of narcissism, an inward turningness, a self-love movement. You cannot fight ... if an entire generation of people is preoccupied with looking into the mirror."

The Vietnam War, Watergate and all the attendant ills led youth to conclude "that whatever the adult generation had, it was not worth having," Jackson said. " ... so the marches stopped, voter registration slowed down, the drive for excellence and productivity slowed down.

"What does it matter if the doors of opportunity are wide open but you're an alcoholic and can't get through that door? What does it matter if you have the right to go to graduate school but you can't read, write or count?

"There are fewer black ... medical school and fewer blacks in law school than you had 10 years ago. The doors are now closing that once opened."

Whatever one may think of Jackson, he has the credentials to speak out.

He enlisted in the movement at the start. Demonstrations, sitins, marches, pressure, whatever was needed, Jackson did it.

When Martin Luther King Jr. was felled by an assassin's bullet on a Memphis motel balcony in 1968, Jackson was there, one of King's inner circle. When the media looked around for new young black leaders, Jackson was there. He made the cover of Time magazine.

On an end run into politics, Jackson was one of those who did the manifestly impossible — kept the late Mayor Richard J. Daley of Chicago out of the 1972 Democratic convention. Daley was a party potentate, but Jackson and his fellows managed to bar him on grounds the choice of Chicago delegates was rigged. When the convention opened, Jackson was in the Illinois delegation but Daley was not.

When those who inherited King's official leadership of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference implied Jackson was getting too big for his britches, Jackson cut himself loose.

Now, the Stokeley Carmichaels and H. Rap Browns — those who used to be called firebrands — are gone for practical purposes. Ralph Abernathy and Roy Wilkins, establishment figures of the black movement, appear to be fading.

But Jackson is very much around, operating out of Chicago, whipping about the country, preaching his doctrine that it is black youth's responsibility to push for excellence.

Those last three words happen to be what Jackson calls his current program. It is off to an impressive start.

After a test in Washington, D.C., his project got an invitation to see what it could do in Los Angeles with a $402,000 appropriation from the board of education to work in 12 schools. The Los Angeles program is operative, Jackson said, and Push For Excellence also is working in 11 Chicago high schools, although apparently to a lesser extent.

Nevertheless, Jackson demonstrated he has something going for him in Chicago when he led an exuberant march of 100 units through the Loop Sept. 30 in the cause of excellence.

Basically, Jackson appears to be trying to browbeat young people into being what they can be.

He demands commitments that they will turn off television and radio and study at least two hours a day. He makes their parents promise they will see to it.

"We are not so dumb that if we study we will not learn," Jackson said. "But we're not so ingenious that we will learn if we do not study.

"The school system (in Los Angeles) can't very well mobilize 200 churches as easily as we can. It can't relate to parents as we do. We have challenged the students and they have responded magnificently, because somehow we have a relationship that many other social types don't have.

"We're getting stars. We've got Dr. Jay (Julius Erving, basketball forward of the Philadelphia 76ers) and Reggie Jackson (right fielder of the world champion baseball New York Yankees) and other artists and disc jockeys and other media people to create the atmosphere and make this the feasible and likable thing to do.

"We thought in the 1960s all we needed for real upward mobility was opportunity. We've now found we need more. We must excel because the competition is keener, because we are behind.

"At this point there is a kind of national rowback on black demands."

Maybe Jesse Jackson has changed, too. He does not deny it.

He used to meet visitors in tacky offices at the top of rickety stairs, in store front social service centers, even in the back rooms of saloons.

He was something to be experienced — lean, elegant, cool, mod; bell bottom trousers; shirt opened half way down to his belt buckle; a medallion with King's likeness on his chest; his big eyes flashing, his voice hypnotic.

Now, in a rather antiseptic community center built of concrete on Chicago's South Side, Jackson accepts visitors in an office which would be in place on the executive floor of a corporate headquarters.

So would Jackson in his light grey vested suit and his conservative blue striped shirt. The blue patterned tie is carefully tied into a large knot, although Jackson makes a concession to the old Jesse by loosening it and his top shirt button.

The son of a Greenville, S.C., janitor, he is an alumnus of the University of Illinois, North Carolina A&T, where he quarterbacked the football team, and the Chicago Theological Seminary. He lives in the fairly affluent South Shore neighborhood of Chicago with his wife and five children.

"I think I've changed," he said. "I think that I see some things that I once didn't see. I concede to change and I'm grateful I'm capable of changing and growing...

"And I'm saying our will to struggle in many quarters has given way to capitulation and to escaping confrontation politics.

"So that is why I am in the process of building an institution that is capable of struggling. We are training people who are capable of struggling. (I am) emotionally and intellectually prepared to struggle the rest of my life."

REV. JESSE JACKSON is now involved in a campaign to make black youth smarter, more disciplined, and more fit to take advantage of opportunities now available to them. (UPI Photo)

Coyotes Find A Georgia Home

By BILL SCHULZ
Associated Press Writer

ATLANTA (AP) — There is an established and growing coyote population in Georgia, and the Department of Natural Resources is trying to find out how many of the wily predator-scavengers are loose here.

Coyotes, who have a black-bandana reputation as sheep killers out West, are not native to Georgia, but were brought here perhaps 70 years ago.

"There is the potential for a problem or we wouldn't have started this study," department biologist Thagard Colvin said from his Fitzgerald office.

"There is, definitely, a coyote population in this state," said Colvin, who is heading the study. "Coyotes have been collected and their skulls have been identified by the Smithsonian Institution as pure strain coyotes."

Information collected since the study began in July has found that coyotes are raiding some livestock, particularly sheep and goats. And they feed on some crops.

"I'm finding in my survey that goats are the most vulnerable right now," Colvin said. "Probably the farmers who have goats are the ones receiving the most extensive damage. I've talked with one man who has a tremendous problem with his sheep — but there aren't that many sheep in south Georgia."

"We don't have a firm grasp on the problem yet," he said, "but I'm convinced...that it was coyotes who did the damage."

Some of the damage probably can be blamed on packs of dogs which are a problem in parts of Georgia, Colvin said.

The coyote is one of the most intelligent animals in the wild. Despite intensive efforts to kill them off in the West, they have survived and according to some reports their populations are increasing.

"The most popular theory I've heard is that fox hunters in south central Georgia brought them in and released them to run with their dogs, but that's just a theory," Colvin said.

Also, he said, there are reports of coyotes being brought in as pets, then escaping or being released when they got too troublesome.

In addition to killing off some livestock, coyotes could disturb the natural balance of Georgia's animal population.

"I feel they are competing with the native predators, the fox and the bobcat are the major two," Colvin said. "I don't think he (the coyote) has found a major unoccupied niche in the natural food chain."

The coyote is a scavenger, but his natural prey includes rabbits, rodents, some snakes and ground-nesting birds, including game birds. Rabbits and rodents also are the major food items of the fox and bobcat.

The bidding:

East	South	West	North
Pass	Pass	1 ♡	Dble.
Pass	2 NT	Pass	3 NT
Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Two of ♠.

Defense is a partnership matter. Good work by one partner is too easily undone by the other.

After West's third-hand opening and North's takeout double, South showed a hand almost good enough to open by jumping to two no trump. North felt that his cards would be well placed behind the opener, so he went on to game.

West arrived at a club lead by a process of elimination. His own suit did not look attractive, and the takeout double virtually guaranteed that dummy would have a spade suit. Diamonds were out of the question, so that left only clubs.

Dummy's jack of clubs lost to the queen, the ace decapitated the king and declarer's ten won the third round. Since declarer did not have nine tricks without a diamond trick, he started on that suit. West won the ace, but that was the last trick for the defenders. East's long clubs withered on the vine.

The opening club lead was a killer and it should have resulted in the contract's defeat. Looking at an entryless hand, East should have reasoned that it was unlikely to cost if he withheld the queen at the first trick. If declarer held the ace of clubs, that suit had little future and the contract was probably secure. If West held the ace of clubs, the queen would be much more valuable later as a third-round entry. At worst, withholding the queen of clubs would give declarer a trick to which he was not entitled, but it probably would not be his ninth trick. West almost surely would regain the lead before declarer was home.

Observe the effect if, at trick one, East simply signals encouragement with the nine of clubs. When West wins the ace of diamonds, he cashes the ace of clubs to fell the king, and now leads a third club to East's queen. Two more club tricks for the defenders spell down one.

'Expected' Decline By A Submariner

NAGS HEAD, N.C. (AP) — The Man Will Never Fly Memorial Society wants to present an award to President Carter, since he'll be in the state for a wedding on Dec. 16, the day of the society's awards banquet. But Carter isn't coming.

"Just what I'd expect from a submariner," said society co-founder Jack Aulis. The banquet will go on anyway.

The group was founded in 1959 by Aulis and Dr. Ed North with the motto: "Birds Fly, Men Drink."

North said Carter was invited to accept the society's annual Orville Proxmire Trophy. The banquet will be held in this coastal resort not far from Kitty Hawk, site of the Wright Brothers' original airplane flight.

North said the trophy honors a mythical senator whose life is dedicated to making the United States less than No. 1 in air power.

Carter was selected as this year's recipient because of his decision to halt production of the B-1 bomber, North said, adding that the society applauds the president's decision to replace the B-1 with the Cruise Missile.

"We maintain that the Cruise is nothing more than a computerized firecracker invented by the ancient Chinese," North said.

"If all goes as planned — and it seldom does — sometime during the evening there will be a short period of sobriety during which we will eat and grant awards to those who have furthered our cause in 1977," he said. "An unknown international celebrity traveling under an alias will most likely speak."

'Szysznyk' Back On TV Screens

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — That series with the name like a typographical error is back. "Szysznyk" — say it Sizz-nick — premieres tonight on CBS.

The show, which stars Ned Beatty and Olivia Cole, was on briefly last summer and made enough of an impression to cause CBS to bring it back to replace "Busting Loose" at 8:30 p.m. EST Wednesdays.

Tonight's premiere episode, which also stars New York Yankees great Reggie Jackson, was still being edited at deadline and was not available for review.

Beatty plays Nick Szysznyk, who retires after 25 years in the Marine Corps and takes a job as playground director at a public park in Washington, D.C. Miss Cole is Ms. Harrison, who represents the faceless bureaucracy "downtown."

A playground means kids, and they are represented by Thomas Carter, Jarrod Johnson, Scott Colomby and Barry Miller. They hang out at the playground and have a relationship with Szysznyk not unlike that of Kotter and the Sweathogs.

Ron Landry and Jim Mulligan created the show from their own experiences of hanging around the Turkey Thicket playground when they were growing up in Washington.

"Szysznyk is based on a compilation of many field directors that we knew," said Landry, a one-time radio personality and performer. "We used to hang around the fieldhouse and give the director as many problems as we could. Ray Gun, Tony and the rest were the guys we grew up with. In fact, we used their real names. The kids had great nicknames — it was like a Little League Damon Runyon."

Mulligan, a former writer for "Laugh-In," said: "The playground was our turf. It was like a private club. We were too young to go to Hap's bar to drink."

Although the show has been compared to "Happy Days" and "Welcome Back, Kotter" because of the kids and its obvious youth appeal, producers Rick Eustis and Michael Elias deny any intentional connection.

"It certainly didn't start out that way," said Eustis. "It's about a guy who gets out of the Marines after 25 years and has to make an adjustment to civilian life.

Emphasis On Bike Safety

Members of the Citizens Bikeway Committee and representatives of Sadie Saulter, Eastern and S. Greenville Schools met Monday evening to discuss bicycle safety.

Mrs. Beverly Orr of the Highway Safety Research Center, the city's safety consultant, also participated in the committee session.

Prior to the discussion of bicycle safety needs in the schools, a film, "Bicycles are Beautiful," was presented by Ms. Debbie Lundy of the local McDonald's restaurants.

The film was shown to provide an example of the educational material on bicycle safety which is currently available to schools in the area.

Monday's meeting was the first of a series aimed at getting citizen input into an effective bike safety program.

Barshop's Motel Chain Follows A K.I.S.S. Policy

By K. MACK SISK

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (UPI) — Sam Barshop entered the motel business "accidentally" 14 years ago as a sidelight to his family's banana importing company.

Since then the energetic 48-year-old entrepreneur has watched his initial $45,000 loan grow into a regional motel chain whose assets are expected to exceed $100 million next fiscal year.

So far Barshop has not put one dime of his own money in the venture and does not expect to in the future although the regional network of 64 motels with 7,293 rooms in 13 states is now on the threshold of going nationwide and becoming one the country's leading motel chains.

The success of La Quinta Motor Inns, Inc., according to Barshop, can be attributed to his K.I.S.S. principle — "Keep it Simple, Stupid."

Some observers would term Barshop's operation innovative, but he contends he only has brought a measure of "horse sense" to an industry that has been trying to outgrow its own britches in recent years.

Barshop said he grew tired of getting up at 3 a.m. in the banana business. He and his brother, Philip, decided to dabble in motels and obtained the regional franchise for Rodeway Inns, a mom-pop type chain, "when mortgage money and co-owners were plentiful."

His father, "banana king" Joe Barshop, was not too excited about the motel business and told his sons, "Do what you want. Just don't go to my banks and mess up my credit."

After several years in the business, Barshop and his brother decided to build the first La Quinta Inn just across from HemisFair Plaza in San Antonio to host visitors to the 1968 world's fair. Now La Quinta's Spanish architecture and mounted "Caballero" insignia are familiar across the Southwest and the firm is developing 15 new inns from Las Vegas to Florida.

After that, depending on availibility of money and sites, Barshop said the firm would take a "cookie cutter" and try to repeat its growth in other areas of the nation.

"We have no compulsion of being the biggest (motel chain) in the United States, but we want to be the best," he said.

In keeping with his KISS theory, La Quinta has actively sought "the commercial man," by keeping its rates between those of the $8 motel and what Barshop calls the low-rise garden type motels with full facilities such as restaurants and cocktail lounges.

"Our motels are very simple and cater to 95 per cent of the traveling public," he said. "We give a break to all people, especially the commercial men who are breaking their backs to make a living. Our first customer is the commercial man.

"Our business is based on politely selling a clean room. We are not in the food business, the bar business, the banquet business. The most important thing to the traveling commercial man is a clean room."

Although most La Quinta Inns have no room service, no restaurants, no bars, no convention rooms and small lobbies, they all have swimming pools and the rooms are comparable to those of the bigger chain facilities with color television. The average price of a room was $15.80 in 1977, according to the company's annual report. The occupancy rate in established inns has been 80 percent during the last five years.

Instead of serving food, the company has leased adjacent land to its motels for chains such as Denny's to build and operate restaurants.

The report also shows that during the past five years (La Quinta went public in 1973) revenues have increased at an annual compound rate of 21.3 percent, earnings grew at a 20 percent annual compound rate and return on shareholders equity averaged 21.1 percent.

During fiscal 1977 La Quinta extended its joint venture agreements with the Prudential Life Insurance Co. of America, providing 12 million for new motor inns, $1 million from La Quinta and $1 million from Prudential, increasing to approximately $35 million the total funds committed in the joint venture.

Total assets were listed as $83,242,000 on Aug. 31, 1977, compared with $64,502,000 the same date of 1976.

La Quinta also was a pioneer in solar room and water heating at one of its Dallas inns a year ago, and recently was awarded $559,000 to develop solar energy systems in 11 of the facilities currently under construction, more than any other motel chain. La Quinta will add $513,000 from company funds for the solar projects.

The company also has devised a precast concrete structural shell and bathroom modules in its construction, eliminating many problems of conventional construction and reducing building time to six to nine months, instead of the previous 12 to 18 months. Under the plan, a La Quinta Inn theoretically could be disassembled in one place and rebuilt in another from the same materials.

Barshop has personally selected the sites for the motels, partially on "gut feeling," along major freeways and near airports, again aiming at "the commercial man."

Barshop, a board member of Southwest Airlines which also has shown stellar growth in Texas, said he discovered a "mom-pop" ownership arrangement did not work and so has opted for "mom-pop type employees" on salary. The only instructions the operators are given are to properly handle the desk, "keep the rooms spotless," and file an accurate daily report of revenues to the home office in San Antonio, a process Barshop hopes eventually can be computerized.

Freeing the innkeepers of bookkeeping allows them to concentrate on the clientele, Barshop said.

Many of the couples managing La Quinta inns are more than 50 years old with no previous experience, making "second careers" in motel management to supplement their incomes. Many of them are retired military personnel, he said, and "some of those retired sergeants are some of our best housekeepers."

Barshop also has kept his inns small, preferring to build another motel in the same city rather than make one into a huge operation.

"We'd rather have five 100-room inns than one with 500 rooms," he said.

"We just went back to the very simple, basic things. All we've done is just start building the base (of the motel chain). All any business is is horse sense. I'm not saying it's a perfect system, but it's less imperfect than some of our competitors."

Christmas Eve 'Live'

NEW YORK (AP) — The Christmas dancing of the Maori, former Polynesians who journeyed across the South Pacific from Polynesia to New Zealand nearly 1,000 years ago, will be one highlight of "Christmas Around the World," a one-hour TV special of live Christmas Eve celebrations from five continents which will be transmitted via satellite worldwide on Dec. 24.

The ancient voyaging Maori might find it hard to recognize the religious rites of their descendants today. After a gradual journey out of the myths and legends of the past, the Maori religion that once included such gods as Tangoroa, god of the ocean, and Tanemahuta, god of the forest, has been replaced by Christianity. Although today's Maori holiday rituals are much the same as in the rest of the world, much of the spirituality is still observed.

The Christmas Eve program will be shown in the United States by the Public Broadcasting Service, which will also feature live transmissions from Bethlehem, Jerusalem, Southern Bavaria, London, the Loire Valley and Jamaica. The U.S. segment of the program, underwritten by the Sun Co., will feature the University of South Carolina concert choir serenading last-minute shoppers in Columbia, S.C., heading home for Christmas Eve.

Hourly Wage Of $4,799

SPRINGFIELD, Minn. (UPI) — At the current rate of inflation, a worker making $5 an hour today would make $4,799 for 60 minutes toil in the year 2077, the way Dr. R. M. Tessien has it figured out.

In a letter to a newspaper editor, he wrote: "Inflation is folly, the child of greed and insane. We seem to have no people of character and insight in labor, business or government who can understand this."

Clubs Offer Social Life To Organist

CHICAGO (AP) — Retired Massachusetts businessman William Dennis follows the sun, carrying an electronic organ in his camper.

"I try to get in at least six hours of practice time each week," said Dennis, "but that depends on whether I have an available power source."

Dennis began taking organ lessons two years ago at age 65, and soon joined a local organ club at the suggestion of his music teacher.

"I started taking lessons because I needed something creative to do with my time," he said. "I'm too old to play baseball, and didn't want to vegetate in front of the television set. My organ club membership gives me an incentive to practice, and provides an opportunity to socialize with people who share my interest in music."

During the summer months, Dennis lives in the Boston area, where he takes weekly music lessons and is active in the organ club. In the fall, he heads for the sun belt to enjoy organ club events that range from weekend festivals to week-long musical cruises in the Caribbean.

Dennis is not alone in enthusiasm for the electronic organ.

According to industry estimates, there are about six million amateur organists in the United States today, up from four million in 1973. The most visible members of this rapidly growing "subculture" are the thousands of hobbyists who belong to organ clubs in cities across the country.

Organ clubs come in many shapes and sizes. Most are structured along the lines of the 35-member Greater Milwaukee Home Organists Club, which meets in various members' homes on a rotating basis so that the music buffs will have an opportunity to experiment with different makes and models of the instrument.

A typical meeting begins with a half-hour business session, then proceeds to musical activities. Occasionally, the club will host concerts by special guest artists, but most meetings consist of workshops conducted by professional teachers or other members.

"Our club meets a real need in the lives of its members," said president Clyde Winquist. "They are encouraged to form smaller groups and get together between our monthly meetings. We try to strike a balance between social and musical aspects."

At the other end of the scale, one Detroit club purchased an 800-seat theater in order to restore a decaying theater organ dating from silent movie days. Club members fill the seats once each month to hear top professionals play.

Many organ hobbyists belong to more than one club, in order to take advantage of the wide variety of activities available. Californian Frank Faust, for example, belongs to five clubs with memberships ranging from 20 to 200.

"My clubs run the gamut," said Faust. "One is strictly a concert series of professional performers. Another includes such social activities as dances and pot luck suppers to stimulate interest. The highlight of the year for another group is a chartered cruise on San Francisco Bay, complete with dancing and concerts."

The biggest annual club-sponsored event is a six-day organ festival held in late summer at a state park near Monterey, Calif. Sponsored by a 2,200-member association of clubs, the event attracts thousands of people from all over the country for six days of workshops, concerts and social activities.

"The festival is an example of organ clubs working together to do things they couldn't afford to do on an individual basis," said Faust.

Phoenix, Ariz., native Marelene Anderson says she enjoys the festival so much that she has scheduled her vacation around it for the past six years. Mrs. Anderson began studying the organ 14 years ago at age 53, and says that her lessons have served as inspiration in hard times.

"I was fascinated with the theater organ when I was small, and vowed that some day I was going to learn how to play," she said.

In 1909, the average American consumed 4.5 pounds of sugar in cereal and bakery products, compared with 1971 when consumption estimates for these same foods were placed at 17.6 pounds, says the Health Insurance Institute.

Old Indian Village Site Is Uncovered

By TIM O'NEIL
Associated Press Writer

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Phil Freeman used to exercise the state prison's dogs on Bloodhound Hill at Angola. Back in 1976, he found some old beads and trinkets washed out of the ditches along the road.

Freeman didn't know what he had clinking in his pockets, but word about the beads made its way to the state Archeological Survey and Antiquities Commission in Baton Rouge. Archeologists rushed out to Bloodhound Hill and soon learned that Freeman had found hints of a long-lost village used by the Tunica Indians in the early 18th century.

Archeologists say the find is substantial, and can show the ways of a tribe that was good enough at trading to be described by the French as "rich." It is a word that eluded historians, and they hope Freeman's discovery will help them understand.

Some of the Tunicas still remain in Louisiana, but the tribe's lore crumbled as the survivors spread out during the 19th century, and little is known other than what the colonial French scribbled into their records.

The Tunicas were first recorded by DeSoto in 1541 as residents of north Mississippi. In 1699, the French said the Tunicas lived near old Fort St. Pierre on the Yazoo River bluffs north of Vicksburg, Miss. By 1706, they had moved into Louisiana.

Freeman's curiosity helped find exactly where. Alan Toth, assistant state archeologist, said the first digs in late 1976 produced a number of artifacts. He said they supported French claims that the Tunicas were unusually adept at commerce.

"We did just enough digging to confirm the site, find a few artifacts and find part of a house," Toth said. More digging, he said, is needed to learn more about the customs, eating habits and homestyles of the small tribe.

Most of the artifacts will be on display early next year at the state museum in New Orleans, then travel to Baton Rouge and Shreveport.

In addition to Freeman's beads, archeologists working on the first dig found flintlock rifles, pots, pans, large and small bells, and pottery. Toth said he believed such artifacts explained why the French considered the Tunicas rich, and said excavation of grave and home sites would further uncover the tribe's history.

"This will illuminate their cultural history considerably," Toth said. "The French histories don't tell us much. They say the Indians traded, but they don't tell us what. Now we know more about what they owned."

The Tunicas traded horses, supplies and sometimes medicines to the French in return for weapons and metalware. They first allied with the French, and stayed with their allies as the Frenchmen lost more and more control of the lower Mississippi Valley.

Because Indians outnumbered the white settlers in the 17th and 18th centuries, Toth said that a study of the Indians was essential to learning the history of development in the river valley. "We actually are working with a tribe that was really important," he said.

Toth said the site was recently worked again for several weeks by archeologists from Harvard and Brown universities, with state prison labor doing the digging. The archeological team was headed by Dr. Jeffrey Brain of Harvard, once one of Toth's professors, who has been studying the Tunicas for eight years.

Meanwhile, Freeman might earn himself a piece of recorded history. Because the village lacks a recorded name, Toth said archeologists informally referred to the spot as "Freeman's."

Money Book Is Choice Premium

MINNEAPOLIS (UPI) — A University of Minnesota marketing professor says bank premiums are a good reflection of who has the money in a community.

William Rudelius says many premiums in the Twin Cities are chosen to appeal to people over 55.

He said this age group owns about 70 per cent of the money available for saving in that area.

People with money are attracted to money-related premiums, he said. One of the most popular is "Sylvia Porter's Money Book."

Soviet Spy Ships Alert

By EDWIN SMITH

LONDON (UPI) — Commanders of the NATO navies are so used to being shadowed by Soviet intelligence gathering ships that they reckon the Russians are just going through the motions — until something goes wrong.

Then there is a chance for an intelligence coup. The Soviets move in quickly to pick up whatever prizes of wreckage or information they can from the waters.

That pattern was confirmed during NATO sea exercises in the past two years. During Teamwork '76, the huge land, sea and air exercise in September that year, Russian ships concentrated their attention on the F14 Tomcat fighter which rolled from the deck of the U.S. aircraft carrier John F. Kennedy and sank in 1,900 feet of water off Scotland.

This year, in October, during exercise Ocean Safari, the focus of Soviet attention was a Royal Navy Sea King helicopter crammed with anti-submarine gear which ditched in the Bay of Biscay.

In each case the Soviets sought to recover wreckage to assist their evaluation of NATO missile and anti-submarine defenses. They were thwarted the first time by bad weather and a hastily-mounted U.S. salvage operation; the second time by 2½ miles of ocean deep.

The ships the Russians use for this purpose are specially designed and built. Hulls are based on the design of the large fish factory ships which process the catches of Soviet trawlers, but these vessels are crammed with radio and electronic detection equipment. Some are believed to carry computers for instant analysis of the data they pick up.

In an exercise like Ocean Safari, they plot the movement of the ships and the pattern of anti-submarine maneuvers and intercept as much radio traffic as possible as they shadow the NATO fleets.

It has been going on for years and U.S. Vice Adm. Wesley L. McDonald, who commands the NATO Striking Force, Atlantic, says he thinks the Russians are starting to lose interest.

"So far in this exercise," McDonald told reporters halfway through Ocean Safari, "there's been less (Soviet interest) that we have seen than in previous exercises. We've seen this coming down over the past several years. There has been a decrease of Soviet interest in scheduled exercises."

But the next day there was something to whet the Russians' appetites. A Royal Navy Sea King helicopter skimming 40 feet above the waves in a sonar search ran into trouble and had to ditch in the Atlantic.

The sophisticated anti-submarine sonar and radar aboard the Sea King would have made a nice intelligence catch for the Soviets.

The helicopter was in the sea before the four-men crew could get a Mayday call on the radio, but a Russian intelligence ship which had been trailing the Royal Navy carrier HMA Hermes obviously guessed what had happened from other radio traffic. It quickly moved up from its shadowing position 10 miles behind the Hermes to the spot where the helicopter had ditched.

While Royal Navy helicopters and a frigate were rescuing the crew, the Soviet ship scanned the waves for wreckage. But the Sea King sank within two minutes and the Atlantic is 2½ miles deep at that point.

A year before, when the F14 went over the side of the carrier Kennedy, the stakes had been considerably higher. The plane carried elaborate electronics counter-measures equipment to allow it to fight its way past Soviet anti-aircraft defenses plus the supersecret Phoenix guided missile system.

The Russian spy ships were close enough to see the F14 go over the side and mark the spot precisely. U.S. Navy chiefs were afraid the Soviets might attempt to salvage it from the ocean bottom 1,900 feet down.

The Navy's own efforts to locate and recover the plane and its missile were at first defeated by choppy seas and by currents which shifted the plane three miles from its original location.

After a tense two months with Soviet ships lurking in the background, a research submarine eventually recovered the 13-foot missile with a grappling hook and civilian deep sea divers got lines around the plane so it could be winched to the surface.

But the Soviets watch and wait. One of these days they may be on the scene of an accident before NATO ships or planes can get there and salvage some rich intelligence prize.

Teens' Tooth Decay Severe

NEW YORK (UPI) — Tooth decay is particularly severe among teen-agers, says nutritionist Marci Guiney.

Miss Guiney, executive director of the Dairy Council of Metropolitan New York, blames teen-agers' haphazard eating habits and snacks, among other things. She said snacks are a big offender because they often conist of carbonated beverages, candy, pastries, cookies and other foods made with sugar.

"Mouth bacteria use the sugar in these products to form acid, which dissolves tooth enamel.

"Sugar is also used by some bacteria to form a thin, colorless film called plaque. Once plaque is formed, it sets up a medium for more bacterial growth. These bacteria also act upon sugar to produce the acids which cause tooth decay."

Catering To Handicapped

By MURRAY J. BROWN
UPI Travel Editor

"I'm cutting the umbilical cord," Vivian Mechutan said. "I am going to travel abroad for the first time since I became attached to my machine."

Mrs. Mechutan suffers from a kidney disease. She must spend several hours daily three times a week hooked up with tubes to a dialysis machine in St. Joseph's hospital in Yonkers to remove impurities from her blood. Her life depends on the treatment.

"It's more than seven years," she said. "I am nervous but excited."

She said necessary arrangements have been made to continue her dialysis routine at the Biomedical Center in San Juan, Puerto Rico, during her week-long stay. In addition, she said, the people at the Caribe Hilton Hotel offered to provide any assistance necessary.

Mrs. Mechutan is only one of millions of Americans who have found out that medical problems or physical disabilities need not be a deterrent to travel in the United States or overseas.

Air, sea and land carriers, hotels and resorts, tourist organizations and travel agents are becoming increasingly aware of the potential market — estimates range up to 35 million — and doing something about it.

Tours are tailored for the special needs of the traveler in a wheelchair, the blind, the deaf, the diabetic, the heart patient, and other handicapped. There are special diets, early boarding, wider doors, ramps, bathrooms with grab bars, menus in Braille, raised numbers on elevators and room doors, lowered telephones, etc.

Listings of airports and hotels in the U.S. and abroad that offer special facilities are included in the first travel guide for the handicapped published in the U.S.

The author is Louise Weiss, who was assistant travel editor of "Esquire" from 1971 to 1976. "Access to the World — A Travel Guide for the Handicapped" is loaded with essential information for individual and group travelers, whether confined to a wheelchair or restricted in certain activities because of medical or physical problems.

Mrs. Weiss covers all forms of transportation; popular destinations; airports, hotels and motels; travel agents and tourist organizations catering to the handicapped; and health and medical problems. She also provides helpful hints on packing, clothing, jet lag, etc.

Included are current policies of domestic and foreign airliners on handicapped travelers. Some demand medical approval, others do not. Some have quotas, others do not. Almost all require advance notice.

Mrs. Weiss tells readers where to write for booklets known as access guides (information on the accessibility of facilities for the handicapped) here and abroad as well as helpful government publications and general tourist information.

She notes that Amtrak's new Amfleet cars were designed with handicapped passengers in mind. Greyhound and Continental Trailways also provide special services for the handicapped when advised in advance, including carrying a companion-helper at no extra charge.

Advance notice also is required for travelers who want to lease a hand-controlled car in the U.S. Avis, Hertz and National Car Rental will provide such specially equipped cars in certain areas only at no extra charge.

Mrs. Weiss also warns of some problems handicapped travelers might face. Blind tourists, for instance, should check on possible restrictions on bringing in seeing eye dogs. The United Kingdom, Ireland, Australia, New Zealand and Hawaii have a 120-to 180-day quarantine period for all dogs as a precaution against rabies.

A cruise can pose difficulties for wheelchair travelers because outside and most inside doors have high sills to keep out water and elevators are usually narrow. The only other way to get from deck to deck is by stairs. Cabins and bathrooms are small. But Mrs. Weiss lists several cruise lines that welcome the handicapped and make special efforts to accommodate them.

Tenth Year For Phone Call Plan

NEW YORK (UPI) — Phone bells rung this Christmas by American servicemen and women around the world will signal the 10th anniversary of the musicians union Christmas phone call program.

The American Federation of Musicians (AFL-CIO) will foot the bill for phone calls placed overseas by service personnel to the U. S. through the union's facilities. The free calls must be made within the 72 hours starting at 12:01 a.m. EST Christmas Eve.

The calls will be transmitted by the Military Affiliate Radio Service to a HAM radio station in Mansfield, Ohio. There, amateur radio operator Robert Altomonte will route the calls to their final destinationy through regular phone wires. These costs will be paid by the federation.

During the past decade, more than 10,000 men and women in uniform have made such calls courtesy of the largest entertainment union in the world.

Advance arrangements must be made by the service personnel with the MARS operator on their bases.

Pompeii, Italy, was buried by an eruption of Mount Vesuvius in 79 A.D.

'Bluegrass Opera Of Detroit' Includes Mixed Bag

BY DIANE SILVER

DETROIT (UPI) — It's foot-stomping, banjo-picking good times, shouting the glories of the union movement in the auto industry.

It's slow-sung laments of lost dreams and Southern sweethearts and being stuck in "Deetroit" where the only bit of home is the tiny bluegrass bar on which the owner keeps jars of dirt from Alabama, Mississippi and all the other places left behind.

The players laugh at the monotony of the auto assembly line. Reformed alcoholics sing the praises of Jesus.

"The Original Bluegrass Opera of Detroit," a production consisting of five musician-actors and a slide-show, is an anthem for thousands of Southerners who came to Detroit after World War II to find work — a song of praise for anyone who ever left his home to find a better life.

Author Bud McKirgan, a magazine writer who came to Detroit from Lafayette, Ill., (pop. 250) for a job, explained the theme behind his creation.

"'Detroit' is another way of saying 'a job' to many folks, a ticket to better times," he said. "A man can ride that bus to the Motor City and build cars until he has a little nest egg. Then he can take that hard cash and go back home, buy the little farm or gas station and live the good life from then on.

"I know it doesn't work that way. About the first thing you have to do is buy a car and that means car payments. And while you're sitting around in Detroit dreaming of the hills back home, you might as well watch a little TV. More payments. Pretty soon, you're stuck."

McKirgan wrote the songs and narration in 1975 as a series of vignettes for 15 actors and musicians. The performers, gradually reduced to five, portraying different characters while singing ballads and playing the banjo, guitar, fiddle and autoharp. They became a tight-knit group over the past two years as the show skipped from night club to night club and one small local theater to the next.

The group produced a musical soundtrack at its own expense. Still, its fame has not extended beyond metropolitan Detroit, though it's hoping to get on the Midwestern college circuit.

The show has yet to turn a profit.

The cast — Herschel Freeman, Lee Kaufmann, Steve Whalen, David Cahn and Gary McMullan — all have daytime jobs but dream of the day when the show can pay its own way.

Freeman, narrator and main promotor of the show and a native Detroiter, manages a music shop in suburban Birmingham. Fiddle-player Whalen is an attorney from Chicago. Banjo-picker Kaufmann is a French history scholar from Davenport, Iowa. Cahn is a New Yorker who works as a professional musician on anything from the banjo to the mandolin. Guitarist McMullan, of Detroit, is a professional folk singer.

The opera is populated by spirited characters who treat their lives with humor rather than knuckle under to the monotony of factory work or homesickness.

Most of the songs and stories tell about natives of the fictitious town of Taylor's Creek, Ky.

There is Jerry McGee, Cadillac assembly line worker who scratches a mark on each Caddy and declares, "Body by Fisher, frame by Jerry McGee."

There is Carter Blank, trying to drink himself out of loneliness, singing of how he got religion, admitting, "If there's a bar on Michigan Avenue that I missed it was only because my eyes were too blurred with drink to see."

There is a rousing song praising the United Auto Workers and a fictional labor organizer named Red Kate Miller.

The opera concludes on the tribulations of Mert Brazee, who worked 25 years in Detroit then got offered a job at a new Ford truck plant in Kentucky.

"I guess one of the overriding themes is that a lot people come to Detroit and grow up in Detroit and spend a lot of time bad-mouthing Detroit," McKirgan said. "It's sort of a regional hobby around here.

"But I find that Detroit is not a city in the way that New York and Chicago are. I see it as a big, old small town. I find the people very friendly in Detroit."

And despite all the complaining people do, he said, many never return to their hometowns. "When all is said and done they just keep talking until they put them under (ground) and they have children and grandchildren and they become part of Detroit."

McKirgan, who is concentrating on his career and a new wife, has dropped out of performing. The other cast members said they had no intention of allowing their show to be restricted to the Motor City.

"Our dream is to play the White House," fiddler Whalen said. "There is a bunch of boys who came up from the South to get a job. We should be quite a hit."

Heart Alarm Fits Pocket

SANTA CLARA, Calif. (UPI) — Donald Craig has a new product he put to an unexpected test. Luckily, the test succeeded. The occasion was Craig's own heart seizure.

The product is a battery-operated pocket alarm he developed after surviving two coronary by-pass operations.

When Craig, 54, pushes the panic button, the device automatically dials his home telephone and transmits pre-taped messages for help to five recipients: nearby friends and the local ambulance service.

Last April Craig's wife left the house on some errands. Craig, who has had two heart attacks, felt the symptoms again and pushed the button.

The alarm dialed the number of a friend and delivered the message. The friend whisked Craig to a hospital, where he spent three days in the coronary care unit. Craig says, "It saved my life."

Craig was a real estate manager until forced into early retirement. He got the idea for Medi-Call after hearing about a telephone dialing unit connected to a burglar alarm.

The burglar alarm was plugged into an electric wall outlet. Craig wanted a device that would operate even during a power blackout.

He got together with an engineer friend who designed circuitry to operate on a 12-volt battery. In August, he incorporated.

The dialing mechanism is housed in a console that is plugged into a home telephone like an extension.

The Rev. Dr. John Tietjen Believes In Miracles

By DALE SINGER

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — After being branded a heretic, dragged through lengthy and bitter trials and investigations and rejected by his church, the Rev. Dr. John H. Tietjen still believes in miracles.

As the head of moderates who left the Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod over the basic question of whether the Bible is history or allegory, Tietjen battled conservative leaders of the synod who argued that everything in the Scriptures is fact.

Tietjen lost the fight but in the proces he gained insight into what God had in mind for him, he said in an interview.

"I learned there's a big difference between compliance with the law and the pursuit of justice, both in the church and in the world. There can be times when you have to ignore the law and maybe even break the law if it stands in the way of justice.

"It was a tough lesson for me because I'm a law-and-order man. It took me a long time to learn that one."

At the height of the struggle between followers of Tietjen and officers of the synod, led by the Rev. Dr. Jacob A.O. Preus, synod president, the example of Jonah and the whale was often used to explain the controversy.

Preus and conservatives took the story as unvarnished truth. The Tietjen camp said it could be viewed as a parable.

"We were arguing about what is right and wrong in Biblical interpretation," Tietjen said. "They said it was okay to use different methods as long as we got the same conclusions. When the conclusions were different, they said the methods were bad.

"Other Lutheran groups have had this problem too, but they rode it through because they didn't let it fall into the hands of the politicians."

At 49, a veteran of nearly eight years of controversy, Tietjen appears to be relaxed, at peace with himself and his role in the fledgling Association of Evangelical Lutheran Churches, a newly formed group whose thinking closely mirrors his own.

Christ Seminary-Seminex now has 285 students and a 97 percent rate of placing its graduates "in spite of impossible odds," he said. More than 100,000 Lutherans in 225 congregations have joined the new church body.

In his small ninth-floor office at a midtown building that once housed a posh private club — "the marble slab they used to slice meat on is now our altar" — Tietjen is surrounded by few of the trappings that one might associate with his position.

A biography of his antagonist, Preus, rests on his bookshelf, and Tietjen talks quietly of the man with whom he once had frequent contact but hasn't seen for two years.

The showdown between the two men and their philosophies came at the synod's 1973 convention in New Orleans when Preus called for Tietjen's resignation as head of Concordia. Tietjen refused.

"He knew it wasn't a viable alternative for me," he said. "He planned to take over the school. He understood the political situation, he had the votes and they did what he wanted them to do."

But it was more than four years before Tietjen was officially removed from the church, charged with "holding and defending, allowing and fostering false doctrine." At the end, he refused to answer the charges.

"It was quite clear there was nothing to be gained," he said. "Someone sent me a clipping that said if you agree to participate in an immoral legal process, you are then bound to accept the results.

"I guess in the secular world, if they take you to court, you have to go. But you don't have to take part in an ecclesiastical court."

Helped through his long struggle by his wife and four children and by expressions of support from leaders of other faiths, Tietjen can laugh about his ordeal now. But some things have never been easy to accept.

"It's not a pleasant experience, being called a heretic. It's not nice to hear that people think you're a teacher of false doctrine when being a teacher of true doctrine is your highest goal.

"But that's the type of interpersonal hurt you can endure when you know the charge is not true. I now literally live by the Gospels. I put my future in God's hands and rest assured in his promise for the future."

The outlook for the future of Lutherans in America is not so assured.

Tietjen said about 45 percent of the Missouri Synod's membership is moderate in outlook, though he doesn't foresee an early mass exodus to join his new association.

"It's too much of a hassle for them to get out. There is a Missouri mystique. We were an inbred family for so long that it's inconceivable for some people to leave the synod."

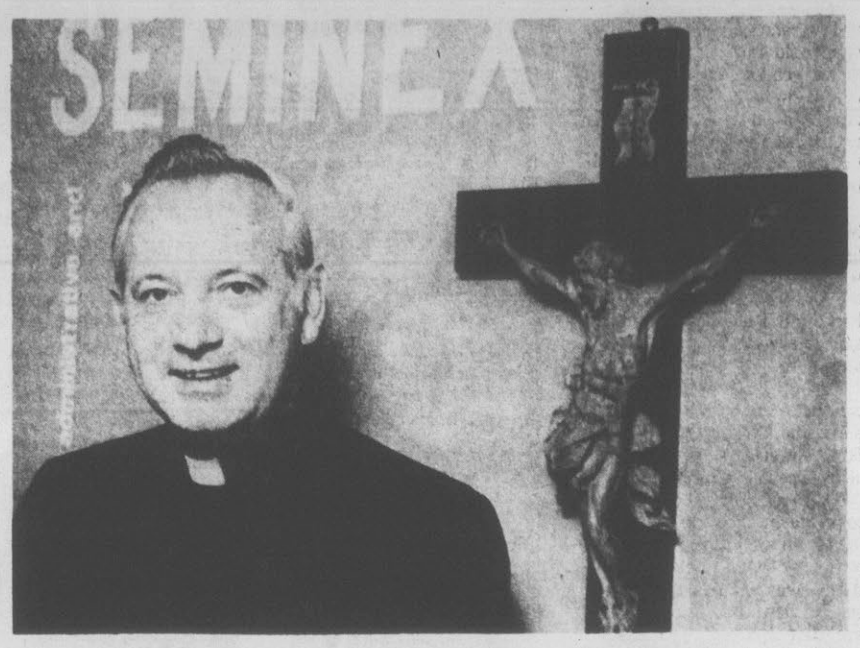

He doesn't expect any reconciliation with Missouri for at least a generation unless the synod has what he termed a "Watergate scandal".

However, Tietjen does see a realignment including moderates from his group and the denomination's other major bodies, the Lutheran Church in America and the American Lutheran Church.

For now, he seems more than content administering Christ Seminary-Seminex and training the minds that will lead the moderate movement in the future.

"It's a marvelous experience once again to deal with each other on the basis of trust," he said. "We don't have to be suspicious of each other any more.

"I usually don't use faith language to a hard-bitten reporter, but we have no way to account for it except to call it a miracle."

ONCE PRESIDENT of the world's largest Lutheran seminary, the Rev. Dr. John H. Tietjen now heads Seminex, formed by him and his followers. (UPI Photo)

Foreign Competition Hurts Cotton Exports

By GILDA Le PATNER
UPI-Commodity News Service

NEW YORK (UPI) — U.S. cotton shippers are feeling the pinch of withering textile demand, slumping overseas economies, flourishing U.S. and world cotton crops, and lower priced foreign competition.

U.S. cotton exports in 1977-78 are expected to total 4.6 million bales, according to the U.S. Department of Agriculture. But sources throughout the cotton production and shipping industry doubt the accuracy of this calculation.

"We're not going to ship but four million bales of cotton this year," one major Memphis shipper said. "A person would have to be not in his right mind to buy U.S. cotton now, when the Central American crop is going for up to eight cents lower per pound."

The cheaper Central American crop has posed a threat to U.S. exports for the past several years. Last year's prices (including cost, insurance and freight) to northern europe averaged 82.43 cents per pound for Memphis cotton and 80.30 cents for comparable Central American crop.

But the two cents per pound price difference has widened. As of Sept. 29, cotton was quoted at 61.75 cents, while Nicaraguan crop was quoted at 56.75 cents per pound. Guatamalen and El Salvador were also cheaper at 58.50 and 61.25 cents per pound respectively.

Compounding the lower Central American price situation is the increased size of these Latin crops and the large percentage exported.

Of the nearly 1.7 million bales expected to be grown this season in Nicaragua, Guatemala and El Salvador, more than 1.4 million bales is destined for export, according to Charles Russell, foreign trade economist for the National Cotton Council.

With the potential to export a total of 2.94 million bales this season, the u.s.'s southern neighbors appear to be formidable competitors.

One memphis trade source said Japanese and Southeast Asian mills usually blend U.S. cotton and Central American growths in a 60-40 or 70-30 ratio. But with prices as radically different as they are now, the source said he expects the ratio to fall to 50-50. Other trade sources found this to be a reasonable assessment.

Mediterranean countries, including Turkey, Egypt, Greece and Syria, are the U.S.' chief competitors, according to another source. These nations will have an estimated 2.8 million-bales export potential this season, according to the USDA.

These Mediterranean countries also offer lower prices. Texas short staple crop for northern europe was recently quoted at 55 cents per pound, while comparable south Turkish cotton was quoted at 53.75 cents per pound.

Industry observers also say Soviet production must be kept in mind, particularly with its new crop, estimated at 12.4 million bales with an export potential of 4.1 million bales. Most Soviet cotton is shipped to europe.

Most sources agree that, after price, the U.S.' other key export problem is a stagnating worldwide textile industry.

Create Mosaic In Beans, Seeds

GLENDALE, Ariz. (AP) — Sixth-graders at Pioneer School have fashioned a mosaic made from assorted beans and seeds in a term-long project.

The students spent about 3,000 hours on their work of art. As the first "graduating" class from the new school, the 80 pupils wanted to leave behind a unique remembrance.

They used some 16 pounds of pinto beans, popcorn, lentils, black and red beans, sunflower seeds and cotton seeds.

Old Customs Survive In Our Holiday

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. (AP) — The Grand Illumination of the City on Dec. 16 marks the official opening of the annual Christmas fortnight at Williamsburg, which keeps Christmas with traditional customs from the days when this small city was the 18th-century capital of the Colony of Virginia.

The festive program starts with a cannon blast at one end of the old Duke of Gloucester Street, echoed by a second cannon midway along the street and by a third near the other end. Musket volleys follow, and the fifes and drums strike up a lively tune.

"For the residents of the Historic Area, this is the signal to light the candles in all their windows — a tradition known as the white lighting," says Richard B. Sessoms, director of special events for Colonial Williamsburg.

Singing, dancing and music continue at various places along the Duke of Gloucester Street for about an hour as part of the opening ceremony.

"Each night thereafter," Sessoms says, "the candles are lighted in the windows without ceremony until New Year's and they give Williamsburg that special glow at the holiday season that has delighted thousands of visitors each year."

Burning cressets provide light in the yard of the College of William and Mary and on the Palace Green, and candlelight tours are given through the 18th-century buildings, as well as at the Capitol and Carter's Grove Plantation.

All down Duke of Gloucester Street residents decorate their doorways by combining the natural materials found in the area with designs appropriate to the period, Sessoms says. Swags and wreaths adorn the Governor's Palace, and the 40 exhibition buildings and shops are all decorated.

At the Abby Aldrich Rockefeller Folk Art Center the famous doll house and a traditional Christmas tree are decorated with handmade ornaments.

Feasting was an important part of the holiday season in early times and Colonial Williamsburg's restaurants fulfill the tradition with special menus, Sessoms notes. Hotels have holiday receptions, recitals and caroling, and the old English custom of finding and burning the Yule log has been revived.

"Family members and friends often gathered for impromptu concerts in the 18th century, for music was a favorite pastime," Sessoms says. Today, professional musicians wearing period costumes perform each night during the season, playing early-day music on harpsichords, fifes and drums, organ, lutes, violas da gamba and even a bagpipe. Carolers and balladeers sing throughout the season.

"Christmas Day, celebrated as the highest of holy days in the 18th century, is still kept in quiet dignity in Williamsburg today," says Sessoms, who notes that the 200-year-old bell at Bruton Parish Church rings now, as it did then, summoning residents and visitors to services.

There are holiday films and limited Christmas Day tours of the historic buildings during the day which closes, again at Bruton, with a Christmas organ recital.

Games and contests popular with colonial children are recreated in the garden of the Governor's Palace during the fortnight. These include hoop rolling, sack races, pie-eating contests, climbing a greased pole, quoits, horseshoe pitching, penny-pitching and dances.

"Present-day children can learn 18th-century dances if they wish and chances are they will not be able to resist marching along with the fife and drum corps or finding out what it's like to race downhill rolling inside a barrel," Sessoms says.

U.S. Quartet In European Tour

FRANKFURT, West Germany (UPI) — "Manhattan Quartet," the well-known group of four American singers, will appear in 40 concerts in Europe early next spring.

The quartet plans to make 20 stage appearances in West Germany alone.

The singers also are scheduled to perform in Sweden, Norway, Denmark, Holland, France, Spain, Austria and Switzerland.

The premiere is set for March 1 in Frankfurt's Century Hall auditorium.
