Nat'l Poll Supports Foreign Import Restrictions

WASHINGTON (AP) — More than four out of five respondents in a national poll say they support government intervention to restrict foreign imports, even if it means paying more money for the American version of the product.

Respondents in the poll, taken over a two-year period, said keeping foreign products out of the United States to save domestic jobs should be a "very important" foreign policy goal.

The finding indicates a reaction against the heavy influx of foreign imports that led to a $30 billion trade deficit last year and to job layoffs and shutdowns in U.S. industries.

The poll, released today, was commissioned by the Charles F. Kettering Foundation of Dayton, Ohio, and conducted by the Communication Research Center of Cleveland State University.

The survey involved 3,800 adults in nine large cities across the country. The interviews were carried out between January 1976 and December 1977 in conjunction with a series of "town meetings" on foreign policy sponsored by the State Department and local organizations concerned with world affairs.

The survey also showed a shift in favor of increased defense spending and indicated that Americans place high priority on both easing world hunger and containing communism.

On U.S.-Soviet relations, 71 percent of those interviewed felt a nuclear arms control agreement with Moscow was the most important U.S. objective. Fifteen percent chose improvement of human rights as the highest priority objective in relations with Moscow, and 11 percent listed expanded trade.

Fully 85 percent of the respondents listed protecting jobs of American workers as a "very important" policy goal.

That protectionist orientation was underscored by a finding that a majority of those polled disapprove of foreign companies owning factories in the United States.

Other U.S. objectives and the percentage regarding them as "very important" included:

Promoting agreements to prevent war, 82 percent; reducing U.S. arms sales overseas, 52 percent; publicly criticizing governments which violate human rights, 52 percent; stopping the spread of dictatorships, 49 percent; and encouraging racial equality in South Africa, 39 percent.

There was a substantial difference between 1976 and 1977 regarding public attitudes toward defense spending.

In the 1976 surveys, those who favored decreased defense budgets outnumbered those who supported an increase by almost 2 to 1.

In the 1977 surveys, the situation was almost entirely reversed, with 30 percent favoring an increase and 15 percent a decrease. In both years, the largest group, 47 percent, favored continued spending at the present level.

While the Vietnam experience did not alter Americans' ideological opposition to communism, it did dampen enthusiasm for interventionist activity overseas, the survey showed.

Only about a third of the public rated "protecting smaller countries against foreign aggression" and "stopping wars between smaller countries" as very important policy goals.

Education Top Concern Among County People

RALEIGH — According to the 801 persons who completed the "North Carolina Tomorrow" survey, Pitt County residents believe public education is the greatest problem facing the State, according to the Governor's office.

The survey, sponsored by Gov. Jim Hunt and the State Goals and Policy Board, was conducted in the fall throughout the state in an effort to give citizens a chance to participate in the state government decision-making process. Based on the results of the survey, the goals and policy agency will make recommendations to the governor for solutions to the problems.

The "North Carolina Today" questionnaire asked citizens to name the biggest problem facing the state and explain what the state should do to solve that problem. The survey also dealt with satisfaction with service delivery, taxes and the overall quality of life in North Carolina, the governor's of-rice reported.

Fifteen per cent of the Pitt County respondents listed elementary and secondary education as their major concern, and suggested better qualified teachers, paying teachers more money, and teaching basic skills as the solution to the problem.

Welfare services ranked second in the problem list in Pitt, with 14.4 per cent listing it as their major concern. Half suggested eliminating unqualified recipients while others suggested putting people to work as possible solutions.

Other ranking problems included: jobs, unemployment and the economy (13.1 per cent), and crime—law enforcement (12.1 per cent).

Most Pitt residents said creating more jobs and bringing new industry to the state would improve the economy, while solutions for the crime problem included stiffer sentences for offenders and stricter law enforcement, the Governor's office reported.

Other frequently mentioned problems included: state government (7.4 per cent), energy—utilities (4.7 per cent), taxes (4 per cent) and roads—transportation (3.5 per cent).

Pitt respondents, the governor's office said, favored increasing the taxes on alcoholic beverages and cigarettes, decreasing property taxes, and maintaining the taxes on personal income, gasoline, business income and business inventories at their present levels. All the trends were seen statewide, with the exception of the gasoline tax which the remainder of the state more strongly favored decreasing.

Like other areas of the state, Pitt respondents indicated strong dissatisfaction with welfare services and utilities and satisfaction with community colleges, higher education and cultural activities.

Similarly, Pitt residents, like others across North Carolina, ranked in order these factors as important in choosing a place to live: availability of employment, nearness to good schools and services, the desire to be near family, and climate.

Pitt residents also indicated that environmental protection is most important in dealing with economic problems and approaches to solving them.

A total of 101,358 surveys were received in the "North Carolina Today" project.

Surveys were distributed in a number of ways, according to the Governor's office, to assure widespread participation. Forms were sent to citizen and interest groups; to parents of elementary children through schools in the majority of the state's 145 districts; and through state agencies such as Community Action Program offices, public health, Social Services and Job Services offices. Many newspapers also ran the questionnaire as a public service.

Along with the mass survey, which began in August, a scientific survey was conducted as well. The scientific sample was intended to verify the results of the voluntary sample, according

Carter And Pres. d'Estaing Prayed At U.S. Cemetery

OMAHA BEACH, France (AP) — President Carter joined the president of France today at this World War II beachhead and, surrounded by stark white markers over American graves, vowed that "Europe's freedom will never again be endangered."

At a simple, moving ceremony at an American military cemetery atop the windswept cliff overlooking Omaha Beach, Carter and French President Valéry Giscard d'Estaing placed almost identical wreaths at a bronze memorial to the Americans who died in the liberation of Europe from Nazi rule.

Giscard d'Estaing told a solemn, chilled gathering: "All this France remembers. She expresses her gratitude for all those who fell for her freedom, to their families and to all their friends."

Carter and the French leader, who flew to Normandy from Paris aboard separate helicopters, stood side by side during a prayer for the 9,386 Americans buried near the beach where many of them fell during the D-Day allied landings of June 6 1944.

At one point, the American president bowed his head and passed a hand across his eyes. The taller Giscard d'Estaing stood ramrod straight, looking straight ahead.

In his remarks at the cemetery, Carter noted that 90,000 American servicemen from two world wars lie in European graves and that 200,000 uniformed Americans now serve in Europe.

"We are determined with our allies here that Europe's freedom will never again be endangered," he declared.

Enriched By $150,000

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Democratic party coffers were bulging with $150,000 in cash and pledges here today after a fundraising luncheon Wednesday at which Vice President Walter Mondale appeared.

But the vice president was forced to concede with a smile that he had to compete for attention with former federal budget director Bert Lance, who was also there.

Mondale told a $1,000-a-couple luncheon crowd of about 200 persons that when he flew into the Greensboro-High Point Regional Airport, he saw a large crowd of reporters and photographers and said to himself, "Mondale, you finally made it."

"But the first question I got at the press conference," he quickly added, "was 'when did Bert Lance get here.'"

The luncheon, at a Greensboro hotel, was to raise money for a Democratic Party salute to the President dinner later this month in Atlanta.

Lance sat at the head table along with Mondale, N.C. Gov. Jim Hunt, Sen. Robert Morgan, D-N.C., and Rep. Richardson Preyer, D-N.C.

Lance spoke briefly. He said businessmen were telling him the nation's economy was in good shape and he praised Carter for his economic policies and campaigns for human rights and peace in the middle east.

Luncheon organizer Douglas Copeland said the party raised about $150,000 in ticket sales and pledges at the affair. After paying expenses of about $2,000, the bulk of the money will go to the Democratic National Committee for the Atlanta event.

QUAIL?

My husband and I were wondering if there are any persons in this area who have live quail to train bird dogs. Mrs. F. B.

Robert Padgett of Rt. 1, Greenville (the Stantonsburg Road) sells live quail. He has about 400 now. The price of the birds will vary, depending on the number sold at a time. It will range from $1.25 to $1.50 per bird, Padgett said. His phone number is 752-5853.

HOTLINE FEEDBACK

"PULLED THROUGH"

Hotline heard from Sandy Stokes, geriatric specialist and coordinator of volunteer services at the Pitt County Mental Health Center, promptly after the Hotline appeal went in shortly before Christmas for gifts for persons in mental health facilities throughout the county.

"You've pulled us through again," Ms. Stokes said to the many Hotline readers who responded so quickly and well. She said about $500 worth of contributions were made. She gave special recognition to J. S. Wells and the Exchange Club, Paul Little, Mrs. Sally Harris, the Salvation Army, Westhaven Home and Garden Club, the Paddock Club, Mrs. Janice Fuchs and a number of unnamed Stokes residents.

Schools Ask Grant For Energy-Saving Project

The Pitt County Board of Education has requested $9,371.20 in North Carolina Energy Conservation grant funds to begin drafting an energy conservation management system which is expected to realize a 15 percent reduction in energy consumption in the Pitt County schools by the 1979-80 school year.

According to Leek Keeter, assistant superintendent in charge of federal programs at the school system, the proposed management system will address areas of energy consumption including: electrical power, fuel oil, LP gas and coal.

Mid-East Local Government Coordinator Wayne Harris, who prepared the grant application, called the development of an energy management system "a common sense, comprehensive approach to energy conservation."

The requested funds should be forthcoming by Feb. 2, 1978, said Keeter, and at that time, County Energy Officer George Laws will begin to formulate a management system of policies, procedures, and guidelines designed to reduce energy consumption within the county schools.

Phase I of the grant will conclude by June, 1978, and additional grant monies will be requested to complete the management system and implement it in the county schools.

Assistant Superintendent Keeter said energy officer laws would primarily conduct audits of energy costs over the past three years in each school facility within Pitt County.

Specific information on energy consumption in the county schools will be supplied by the maintenance staff of each educational facility. The information will include a complete history of each building, the year and type of construction, square footage and heating and cooling systems.

Keeter estimated a $50,000 savings in energy costs for the school system by the 1979-80 school year, and said the county's administrative team has "set its sights on conserving energy" in response to the national campaign for energy conservation.

Keeter and Superintendent Arthur Alford feel that other school systems in the Mid-East region will benefit from the groundwork being laid in the Pitt County school system through implementation of an energy conservation manage-

Candidate McKnight Is Waging One-Man Race For Senate Nomination

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

People remember him because of his Manteo to Murphy campaign walk last year, David McKnight said yesterday.

"I'm riding now," but still seeking the Democratic nomination to the U.S. Senate, McKnight emphasized.

The Cumberland County resident campaigned in Greene County and Greenville yesterday and was scheduled to visit Grifton, Ayden, Farmville and Bethel today.

"I'm really turning to smaller towns to reinforce my campaign at this point," McKnight said. "I want to spend a lot of my time in Eastern North Carolina and the Western part of the state... in rural areas as a whole."

As I start the year, I have made a number one issue of avowed support for farmers in their efforts to get better public understanding of their special problems. All they are asking for is a fair profit," McKnight said.

McKnight, the only senatorial candidate to attend the tractorcade in Greenville and Fayetteville, said, "I grew up in the city," but understand the problems of the farmer.

He noted that the farmers' rallies such as those in Greenville and Fayetteville, in his opinion, "are really very beneficial in helping the public know" what the problems of the farmer are.

In addition to his expressed support for the farmer, McKnight has urged simplification of the federal income tax laws, overhaul of the welfare system, and greater attention to the problems of small businesses

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

It's been a long time since I worked on my status. Oh, a couple of summers ago I rolled up the car windows and pretended it was air-conditioned. And I used to sit in a public place and trace words across the pages of a book as fast as I could turn the pages and make believe I was an Evelyn Wood graduate, but nothing big.

You can imagine my surprise when I picked up the paper the other day to learn that status symbols have changed considerably. Large homes are considered tasteless. Big cars are out. Degrees and titles are tacky. Having a live-in orthodontist is unimpressive. Fat no longer means affluency and jolliness. And marrying a doctor is no longer the great American dream of maidens everywhere.

The last one was a real kick in the head. Not marry a doctor! Bite your tongue!

I asked my daughter, "Is this true? Have doctors really fallen out of favor as the nation's No. 1 most desirable mate?"

"Assuming a girl wants to get married these days," she said, "she'd be smart to go after the big money — a game show contestant. Do you have any idea how much the Secret Square is worth or what a bundle you get if you solve the $10,000 Pyramid?"

"But how do you get introduced to these people? Formally, I mean."

"Formality is out. My friend, Jan, is marrying a guy she met last week in a 'Star Wars' line."

"But does she really know him?"

"Mom! They saw the movie three times! You see, your values aren't the same as ours. Old is in. Youth is out. Poverty is beautiful. Affluency is obscene. Causes are right on. Employment is boring. Take care of your feet. Teased hair is the pits. Owning a home is time-consuming. Records last forever."

"Let me get this straight. Status to you is marrying an old game show contestant with an overbite who drives a compact and picks up candy wrappers."

"Right. By the way, do you have $10 until Saturday?"
Some status symbols never change.

Parents Upset 40-Year-Olds

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1978 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: My parents just left after spending a two-week vacation in our home and it was a nightmare! Our three children were very sweet and respectful, and my husband was as patient as a saint, but it put a terrible nervous strain on all of us.

Abby, how can you enjoy parents who interrupt every conversation, read your personal mail and tell you to leave your kids alone when you correct them?

They told us we were "crazy" in front of our children, criticized the way we did everything, and treated my husband and me as though we were 10 years old! (My husband is 41 and I'm 40.)

The last day of their stay, I stood up to them and told them how I felt. I wasn't disrespectful, I simply told them that my husband and I were adults and wanted to be treated as adults.

Now I feel guilty because I realize that they are getting on in years, and perhaps I should have kept my mouth shut.

So what do I want from you? A kind word and a comforting pat on the head to ease my guilt.

DAUGHTER

DEAR DAUGHTER: Some parents regard their children (even grown ones) as "children" no matter how old and mature they are. But parenthood doesn't automatically entitle parents to belittle their children or abuse their hospitality. If you weren't disrespectful, you were justified in speaking up.

DEAR ABBY: For Christmas I received a gift subscription for a magazine that I consider to be completely incompatible with my religious and political philosophy. I would never buy it myself, and don't even want it in my home.

What do you think of someone who would attempt to shove his views down my throat?

SAN DIEGO

DEARSAN: He's both presumptuous and foolish. A good rule to follow: Don't send reading matter of a controversial nature (religious or political) to anyone unless you're sure that he is sufficiently open-minded to welcome it. (P.S. If we read only one side of a controversial issue, we never learn anything.)

DEAR ABBY: Christmas morning my husband and I had a serious falling out. Before Christmas we agreed not to spend more than $25 on each other because we are on a tight budget and that's all we could afford.

Well, I ended up spending $31 on him because I honestly couldn't find anything I thought he'd like for less. But he bought me a $50 purse which I needed like I needed another head.

When I found out how much he paid for it, I was furious and took it back. He was very hurt and said I was cruel and ungrateful. Do you think I was, Abby? I feel so bad about the whole thing.

IN TEARS

DEAR IN: Since your husband had already bought the gift, you should have accepted it graciously and kept quiet. At a later date, remind him of your agreement to set a limit on the cost of Christmas gifts, and stick with it next year. I think you owe your husband an apology.

If you feel left out and lonely, or wish you knew how to get people to like you, my new booklet, "How To Be Popular; You're Never Too Young or Too Old," is for you. Send $1 along with a long, self-addressed, stamped (24 cents) envelope to Abby, 132 Lasky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.

EMERGENCY CARE

Hospital emergency rooms treated 9,000 full-size, crib-related injuries during the 1973-74 fiscal year, according to the Consumer Product Safety Commission. Children under two accounted for 69 percent of all cases and those two to four for 24 percent.

Thermographic Flyover Scheduled Next Week

The Greenville Utilities Commission will sponsor a thermographic flyover of the Greenville area one night next week as part of the commission's energy conservation program.

Reese Helms, head of the commission's energy conservation office said results of the flyover will be made available to local area residents so homeowners and businessmen can make their property more energy-efficient. The flyover will be made by Environmental Thermography of Miami, Helms said. He explained that technicians will use an infrared scanner to make "heat pictures" while flying from about 1,600 feet in a helicopter. Two to three weeks later, according to Helms, between 300 and 400 black and white pictures of homes and businesses in the Greenville area will be available for inspection. Helms said the pictures "will reveal to us any problem areas in the city, buildings losing heat excessively."

Helms explained that while an ordinary camera operates on light reflected from the surface of a photo subject, the thermographic scanner operates on heat reflected from the subject, producing scan lines similar to a television set, which in turn, produce a "temperature image" on film.

By analyzing the photographs, experts can determine the efficiency of insulation, and how much heat is being lost through windows and doors.

Helms said it is hoped that the project, which will cost about $10,000, will be used by homeowners and businesses to improve insulation and prevent excessive heat loss in their property, thus conserving fuel and making their buildings more economical to heat.

Saying the "cooler the temperature the better the results will be," Helms noted that the flyover will probably be made beginning around 9 p.m. or 10 o'clock. He added that the night the flyover will take place will be determined next week after Environmental Thermography officials study weather forecasts.

The flyover, he noted, will cover an area of about 20 square miles.

Schools Given No Guidelines

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) - A group of ministers, educators and students concerned that religion as an academic subject is being neglected has failed in its effort to get the state school board to adopt a set of guidelines on the relationship between religion and public education.

"It's a very emotional, political issue and I think the board was fearful that the 'could be creating more problems than they were solving,'" said Dr. Bernard Cochran, professor of religion at Meredith College in Raleigh and a member of the group.

The special committee that drafted the guidelines said it was concerned that fear of legal repercussions had caused school administrators to drive religion out of classrooms altogether, even as a part of the curriculum.

The proposed guidelines would have permitted the teaching of such topics as biblical literature in English or social studies courses by "objective" non-clerical teachers. "Teachers should conscientiously refrain from anything which may be seen as indoctrination of religion," the guidelines said.

But board members said the guidelines seemed to raise more problems than they solved.

"It's a sleeping dog and I just think we ought to let it lie," said board member John Tart of Goldsboro.

The school board agreed to make copies of the proposed guidelines available to local school officials who asked for them. Each school system is responsible under current practice for developing its own policies on religion in the schools.

Arrest Suspect For Break-In

Greenville Police yesterday arrested Harold Stevenson of 1920B Norcott Cir. on breaking and entering charges in connection with a Tuesday incident at 1505B Myrtle Ave. Chief Glenn Cannon reported this morning.

Cannon said Stevenson allegedly broke into the Myrtle Avenue dwelling and took $1,500 worth of television and stereo equipment.

The chief noted that some $800 worth of property allegedly taken from the home has been recovered.

Stevenson was placed under a $2,500 bond pending hearing of the case in court.

Doctor's Safe Reported Stolen

Chief Glenn Cannon said today that police are investigating the theft of a safe from the 200 East Tenth Street offices of Dr. Herbert Hadley, reported yesterday morning.

Cannon said the thieves pried open a window to gain entrance to the building and took a small safe containing about $13 in cash and about $20 worth of old drugs.

Collections Up In November

Matter Doesn't Involve Court

Lou Holtz, coach of the University of Arkansas football team and former coach at N. C. State, won his game in the Orange Bowl against the powerful University of Oklahoma.

He did it after having to suspend three of his players who promptly got lawyers and threatened suits.

It was an important victory for Holtz and it perhaps might be even more important from the standpoint of allowing administrators the right to run their organizations.

Holtz took an administrative action in suspending the three players. There is really no law involved here.

We can't blame the players for being unhappy in the matter or their lawyers for taking the case. The judges, however, should see to it that such cases don't drag on in the courts. In cases like this, the courts should take a position of non-involvement.

It Would Be Easier To Ignore The Law

There were news reports that Gov. Hunt briefly considered, then rejected the idea of halting extradition proceedings to bring Joan Little back to face prison escape charges.

No doubt it was tempting to the governor to leave the fugitive in the hands of New York authorities and rid the state of the problem.

If we are to live by the law, however it must be followed to the letter — and that requires that attempts be made to bring an escapee back to serve the remainder of a jail term.

The easiest course in such matters is not always the right one.

THIS AFTERNOON Shift In N.C. Emphasis

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — Top-level policy in state government is gradually bringing about a shift in emphasis from a number of social, rehabilitation, and detection programs in the fields of health and mental health.

It is still too early to define the situation with firm statistics, but key officials in the Department of Human Resources are elated that the shift is underway and appears to have the backing of Secretary Sarah Morrow and Gov. James B. Hunt, Jr.

"We are aimed toward this becoming the Year of the Child in North Carolina... if things keep working in the direction they now are," says one high ranking health official.

But it is not only in the area of health in which the apparently disconnected activities are taking place:

—A study commission is at work rewriting juvenile law; the goal is to keep delinquents out of institutions where a breeding ground for future criminals exists:

Examination

—The governor is drawing plans to cause every child from one to five years old in the state to see a pediatrician at least once a year;

—Fledgling steps at clinics to help pregnant women with nutrition, health, and emotional adjustments and to make certain the unborn child gets its best opportunity to survive healthily are now underway with plans for expansion;

—A program originally designed to test all children entering kindergarten for signs of emotional, mental, or physical problems which would hamper learning has been re-designed to accomplish this even earlier in life;

—Genetic counseling to help identify potential problems with children yet unconceived are functional all across the state;

—There are the beginnings of debate over whether the public schools, in the so-called 'sex education programs, are truly teaching important information, or whether the curriculum needs to be changed to provide parental training. The cliché explanation is that you have to take driver's education, pass a test, and get a license to drive a car... but anybody can get married and have children.

NOBLITT

All of these activities and more are aimed in one policy direction: prevention of future problems as opposed to treatment and rehabilitation later in life. Institutional care, for example, can cost taxpayers a million dollars for one individual who requires a lifetime of treatment.

Earlier

The purpose at this stage is to move everything up to the earliest possible age on the premise that the quicker troubles are pinpointed, the better chance for success.

Genetic counseling, as one example of this theory at work, actually gets into the area of advising potential parents of future hazards. Such expertise is barely a decade old, but already North Carolina is one of six states with a comprehensive genetic screening and counseling program.

Mongolism, for instance, one of the most prevalent mental handicaps, can be diagnosed; brain damage results from a concentration of amino acid in the blood which can be spotted; and expansion programs are in the works for tests to determine possible hypothyroidism which can be treated, but can result in severe mental retardation.

Genetic counselors work with family members to seek the cause of genetic defects, looking at the family history, chromosome studies, blood tests, tissue cultures and a host of cytogenetic studies.

Worst Is Yet To Come

Al Jolson had a memorable line. Halfway through a show, after the juggler, the seal act and the harmonica king had brought down the house, he would spur his audience to new peaks of anticipation. Folks, he would say, you ain't seen nuffin yet.

For the past several years, college presidents, high school principals and school board members have been fretting against the arrogance of federal bureaucrats in the enforcement of civil rights decrees.

Folks, it must be said to the educators, you ain't seen nuffin yet. Joe Califano is about to double his bureaucratic army. And he is newly pledged to what he describes as "aggressive" enforcement.

The secretary of Health, Education and Welfare last week entered into a consent agreement with plaintiffs in two long-pending lawsuits. The agreement, formally imposed by Federal Judge John H. Pratt, runs to 55 pages. It is comprehensive. It covers the landscape. It leaves no conceivable area of civil rights untouched. Its purpose is to assure equal educational opportunities for women, blacks, the handicapped and other minorities wherever the federal dollar is involved.

That is just about everywhere. The order applies to HEW's activities in grade schools, high schools, colleges and universities both public and private. And unlike HEW's recent assault upon higher education in six formerly segregated Southern states, this attack will apply across the nation. The agreement requires the secretary to hire an additional 898 enforcers in the Office for Civil Rights. Their first job will be to clear a logjam of long-pending complaints. Then they can make life miserable in academic groves.

For an inkling of what lies ahead, educators may want to look back at just one part of the litigation covered by the current agreement, dealing with the narrow issue of public higher education only in Arkansas, Florida, Georgia, North Carolina, Oklahoma and Virginia. Back in July, under court order, the secretary promulgated a set of criteria for desegregation. The defendant states have been struggling to keep their sanity ever since.

Califano's purpose, boiled down, is to control every substantive aspect of public higher education in the six states. This control would be achieved through his asserted power to review every decision made by a college administrator that might "directly or indirectly" affect the meeting of racial quotas.

To be sure, the secretary denies that he is fixing quotas, but this is a Humpty-Dumpty kind of thing. Califano wants specific numbers of black bodies and white bodies, and he wants them according to specific timetables. Such goals are not quotas in the same way that canines are not dogs. Whether he calls them goals, guidelines, benchmarks, criteria or minimal standards, he is demanding

Lucky Drivers Alive

By DAVID TOMLIN
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Out there somewhere are more than 100 lucky North Carolinians who were supposed to die in traffic accidents last year and somehow managed not to.

The state finished the year patting itself on the back for killing only 1,422 persons on the road, compared to the 1,529 who died in traffic mayhem during 1976.

Many who heard the news doubtless assumed that the 55-mile-an-hour speed limit was responsible for the safer driving record, or rising fuel prices had suppressed travel or that some other rational force had been brought to bear on highway deaths.

But a closer examination of 1977 accident statistics reveals no reason why fatal accidents did not increase last year. Virtually every other category of traffic accident did.

Total accidents rose in dramatic fashion for the first 10 months of the year from 112,925 in 1976 to 118,115 last year. That includes fatal accidents, injury accidents and accidents involving only property damage.

Figures have not been tabulated yet for the remaining two months of 1977, so the comparison is based on January through October figures. But officials expected the remaining two months would not alter the trend toward an increase.

Accidents involving severe injuries where bones were broken or blood was shed rose from 8,946 in the first 10 months of 1976 to 9,139 in the same period last year.

Accidents involving less serious but still visible injuries which required ambulance transportation from the scene also increased from 26,306 in the first 10 months of 1976 to 27,298 in the same period last year.

And accidents in which persons were complaining of pain but did not need to be carried to hospitals increased from 29,478 in the first 10 months of 1976 to 30,237 in the same period last year.

There is little comfort in these statistics for adherents of the notion that North Carolinians drove more safely in 1977 than they did the year before that. It would appear that the drop in traffic deaths was little more than a lucky break for the folks who might have been killed in serious smashups and only got hurt instead.

40 Years Ago Today

January 5, 1938

Justice George Sutherland of the Supreme Court notified President Roosevelt that he would retire from active service on that bench on January 18.

Numerous names were mentioned as officials in Washington speculated over a possible successor.

During the first six months of the fiscal year, Pitt County collected a total of $290,764.47 in taxes, $221,831.14 of the total being collections from the 1937 original levy of $403,723.97.

For the period the county collected 45.73 per cent of the original 1937 levy. Uncollected 1937 taxes amount to $186,892.83.

WASHINGTON TODAY

Maintaining Momentum

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — Quickly following the predictable deadlock between Egypt and Israel over Arab Palestine, a compromise is being cooked up by President Carter for hard selling on his trip abroad — a compromise demanding greater concessions than Israel has yet been willing to offer.

The essence of the compromise: hold forth to more than one million Palestinian Arabs the prospect of gradual withdrawal of Israeli troops and a nearly independent state with voluntary political and military links to Jordan.

This plan appeals to the Israelis by freezing the Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO) completely out of the action. Besides that, it looks to a future — perhaps five years — when the security of Israel's eastern border with the autonomous Palestinian state would be under control of a United Nations contingent (containing no Americans or Russians) plus small units of Jordanian and Israeli forces. Thereafter, assuming a successful experiment of living side by side along an open border, Israeli security forces would be entirely removed — the unappealing part for Jerusalem.

Mr. Carter has been little more than a spectator since Egyptian President Anwar Sadat made his electrifying journey to Jerusalem on Nov. 19. But he has been brought back into the center of play because of the Ismailia Christmas deadlock between Sadat and Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin. What worries the President and his advisers is that the sudden end of spectacular diplomatic breakthroughs will give too much time for building political resistance to any further compromise — particularly in Israel.

That danger of regression to intransigence seems real, so much so that some prominent Jewish leaders here are worried. "Any endeavor inside Israel to shoot down Prime Minister Begin's peace efforts is not going to be viewed with enthusiasm in America," Rabbi Alexander Schindler told us. As chairman of the most powerful Jewish organization, Schindler's words are usually listened to by Israeli politicians.

What particularly disturbs Rabbi Schindler and other Jewish leaders here is the phenomenon of politicians from Israel's Labor party who always have been decidedly more dovish than Begin starting to denounce the prime minister for selling out Israel. Former Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin is a classic example.

When he was here briefing Mr. Carter on his solution for the West Bank, Begin told the President he was confident his plan for "self-rule" would be acceptable to his hard-line Likud party. But the vote of confidence Begin won so handily in the Israeli parliament was based on a West Bank political plan easy to swallow compared to the minimum Mr. Carter feels must be offered Sadat.

The problem is to keep negotiations moving fast enough to prevent an outbreak of political trench warfare in Israel which might gradually corrode the immense popularity Begin has amassed since his election last spring.

Partly in the interest of promoting speed, and partly to explain the U.S. position, the President has decided to send Secretary of State Cyrus Vance to Jerusalem in mid-January, when Israel and Egypt start West Bank political talks. Vance's real mission: to persuade Israel that Sadat's offer of genuine peace for Israel deserves a larger Israeli concession on the West Bank than mere "self-rule," with no loftier expectation.

If this effort succeeds (about a 50-50 prospect), Sadat would then be in a strong position to justify his one-man diplomacy with Israel. He could claim that he had pulled Israel further along the road to a fair settlement on the West Bank than any Arab leader dreamed possible before Nov. 19. That would free Sadat to pursue an Israeli-Egyptian peace that will return to Egypt almost every square foot of land lost in the 1967 Six-Day War.

But if the effort fails to persuade Israel and Israel decides it cannot afford to sweeten Begin's "self-rule" offer to the Palestinian Arabs, Sadat will face the ominous possibility of isolation. The ignominious prospect of unending Israeli military occupation of the West Bank makes the Begin plan fall short — perhaps far short — of acceptability either to the Palestinian Arabs or to such moderate leaders as Jordan's King Hussein or Saudi Arabia's King Khalid. The "rejectionist" Arab world is already screaming for Sadat's head.

Accordingly, the plan now being cooked up by President Carter seems essential to preserve Sadat's credibility as a peace-seeker — and to stop the Mideast from yet another descent into the maelstrom of war.

Strength For Today

PHILOSOPHY IS NOT ENOUGH

The younger Pliny, Roman author and orator, wrote to a friend upon his daughter's death: "Give me some fresh comfort, great and strong, such as I have never read or heard. Much of a comforting nature comes back to my memory, but my sorrow is too deep to be reached by it."

At the time Pliny wrote, thousands of men and women in the Roman world were finding comfort in their sorrow because of a new religion called Christianity, which was just beginning to make itself felt among the masses.

Pliny knew of this religion, but regarded it as an ignorant superstition. So he asked for comfort from philosophy.

The remedy was at hand, but this upright and sensitive Roman man of letters would give it no consideration. Those who had faith drank of the refreshing water that springeth up into eternal life, but he who had nothing but the philosophy of men which upon which to rely cried out in the bitterness of his anguish. Philosophy is never enough. Only the gospel explains and comforts.

The Malady And Prescription

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — From the nation's productivity center comes a New Year message portentous in its content. It describes a malady and it prescribes some medicine, but it doesn't promise a cure.

The problem is lagging productivity, which isn't to be compared with nagging backache or tension headache, or other disturbing but often superficial ailments.

It goes much deeper; it's a malignancy, but it gets very little attention from the public.

Productivity growth is achieved by the skillful, efficient use of labor, capital and technology. It is what has given Americans their high standard of living and position of economic dominance.

But in recent years the United States hasn't been able to maintain its old rate of productivity growth. Between 1967 and 1977 the annual average dropped to 1.5 percent from 3.2 percent in the period 1947-1966.

In fact, output per hour in manufacturing increases more slowly in the United States than in any of the 12 major western industrial nations between 1960 and 1976. More slowly than in Britain; half Italy's rate.

Meanwhile, greater demands are being made on the U.S. system, not just to deliver more goods and services, but to produce the less tangible products of equality, security and environmental purity.

In a letter to President Carter and Congress, George Kuper, executive director of the National Center for Productivity and Quality of Work Life, wrote: "Our most recent performance should be taken as a warning."

The warning, said Kuper, is that the American belief in bigger and better can no longer be taken for granted. "Our economy may not be able to deliver on our expectations," he wrote.

Already, some of the delivery has been cancelled. If productivity over the past 10 years had increased at its earlier, 3.2 percent rate, the 1977 gross national product would have been $100 billion higher.

In all likelihood, that would have meant lower prices, more jobs, a smaller trade imbalance, a stronger dollar. In short, a bigger pie so that everyone could have a bigger slice without cutting into the slice of others.

As it is, people today seem to be nibbling at their neighbor's portion because we aren't as effectively as before managing our labor, capital and technology.

The problem is not simply that people may not be willing to work as hard as before, although that certainly might be a contributory. The changing work force is believed to be more of a factor.

For example, an influx of women and teen-agers into the labor force, many of them with minimal skills, is believed to have added to production costs. The early retirement of skilled men has hurt also.

Capital, meanwhile, has often been hard to raise, and expensive when available. High energy prices have hurt. And business uneasiness over the extension of government regulation is cited as a factor.

Crown Of St. Stephen Heading Back To Hungary

By ROBERT B. CULLEN
 WASHINGTON (AP) — The controversial Crown of St. Stephen, symbol of Hungary's nationhood, is heading back to its homeland.

An Air Force jet bearing the legendary crown left Andrews Air Force Base in Maryland for Budapest today, accompanied by a delegation of 24 Americans.

The State Department refused to announce where the crown was kept prior to its 6 a.m. EST departure, citing security precautions.

It was secretly transported here on Wednesday from Fort Knox, Ky., where it had been kept in the U.S. gold depository.

There were no demonstrations, but bitterness remained over the decision to return the crown.

A one-time foreign service official who has been in the forefront of the movement to keep the crown in the United States, Stephen Koczak, said Wednesday night no demonstrations are planned to coincide with the crown's departure.

Koczak said President Carter "has denied the people of the United States any voice...He's giving it (the crown) to the dictatorial government of Hungary while pretending to be giving it to the Hungarian people."

Secretary of State Cyrus Vance is scheduled to leave Carter's entourage and join the American delegation in Budapest today. The presentation is scheduled for Friday.

The crown, along with an orb, scepter and robe, was presented to St. Stephen, Hungary's first Christian monarch, by Pope Sylvester II on Christmas Day in the year 1000. It became the symbol of Hungary's national and cultural heritage.

At the end of World War II, Hungarians charged with guarding the crown spirited it out of the country to Austria. The Austrians turned it over to the U.S. Army to prevent it from falling into the hands of the oncoming Soviet army. The crown was brought to the United States and stored at Fort Knox.

Last fall, the Carter administration decided it was time to honor the Hungarians' long-standing request that the crown be returned. The decision touched off protests by Hungarian-Americans, particularly those who fled to this country after the 1956 Hungarian revolt that was crushed by the Soviets.

They said returning the crown would legitimize an atheistic, communist government and filed two lawsuits, but the Supreme Court dismissed both.

Rep. Ted Weiss, D-N.Y., who was born in Hungary and moved to the United States in 1938 at the age of 11, is one of several congressmen in the delegation accompanying the crown.

"It's theirs. It was never ours. It was only given to us for safekeeping from the Russians," Weiss said Wednesday. "The danger of it falling into foreign hands is very remote now."

"The desire of the people of Hungary to have it back is a clear indication of the strong desire of the people of Hungary to maintain ties with their cultural and religious traditions. We ought to be encouraging that," he said.

The delegation includes six other Hungarian-Americans besides Weiss. They ranged from a Nobel laureate in medicine, Dr. Albert Szent Gyorgyi, to a woman from Buffalo, N.Y., Mrs. Marianne Sprague, who was chosen because of a letter she wrote to Vance about the crown issue.

specific proportions of black and white on every campus and on every faculty. He is demanding quotas.

At the same time — and it demands a superlative juggling act on Califano's part — Califano is demanding that the traditionally black institutions be beefed up. The TBI's, in the bureaucratic abbreviation, are to remain TBI. However, and this is the trickier, while the white institutions must have proportionate quotas of blacks, the black institutions may not have proportionate quotas of whites; otherwise, they would cease to be TBI's. The idea is for the black colleges to violate the civil rights laws without actually breaking them.

The chief enforcer for this particular farrago of contradictions, compulsions and racist impositions is David S. Tatel, director of HEW's Office for Civil Rights. This will give you an idea of his approach. The Commonwealth of Virginia made a formal commitment to provide "equal educational opportunity for all persons." This was not enough. Tatel's zealous underlings demanded that Virginia's Governor Mills Godwin grovel before the federal heel: He would have to commit Virginia to "the achievement of desegregation."

To this insulting demand, Godwin replied coolly that Virginia does not operate a segregated system of higher education and therefore has nothing to desegregate. This was an act of intolerable lese majeste, and Tatel blew up. Last week he threatened to cut off $40 million in federal aid in Virginia. Tatel said Godwin was impossible. Godwin said Tatel was unprintable. This is the kind of thing educators everywhere may now look forward to. Happy New Year, and all that there.

Two Collisions Here Yesterday

An estimated $1,300 property damage resulted from two collisions investigated yesterday by Greenville Police.

Officers reported heaviest damage resulted from a 2:35 p.m. mishap at the intersection of Line Avenue and Farmville Boulevard involving cars driven by Bruce Reddick of 1917A Kennedy Cir., and Charles Bunyon Stokes of Route 3, Greenville.

Damage from the mishap was set at $400 to the Reddick car and $325 to the Stokes auto.

An 8:40 a.m. collision at the intersection of Grande and Albemarle Avenues involved cars driven by Patrick Neal Minges of Gastonia and Elizabeth Holland Layne of 401 Crestline Blvd.

Investigators estimated damage at $275 to the Minges vehicle and $300 to the Lane car.

Out-Of-Court Wallace Accord

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — Gov. George C. Wallace, his marriage to Cornelia now ended in divorce, says there are "no hard feelings" between himself and his wife of seven years.

"My former wife and I, in my judgement, are still friends," the governor told reporters Wednesday shortly after attorneys for both sides announced an out-of-court settlement of the Wallaces' divorce suits.

Under the terms of the settlement, the 38-year-old Mrs. Wallace will receive a $75,000 cash award and some of the couple's personal property, including a lot on nearby Lake Martin.

At his news conference, Wallace, who plans to run for the U.S. Senate this year, said he was "not worried" about what effect, if any, the divorce may have on his political career.

The 58-year-old partially paralyzed governor, who lost the use of both legs in an assassination attempt during his 1972 presidential campaign, said he has been concerned only about "private and personal relationships which I still think are personal."

He declined to answer some questions which he said involved "personal and private matters," nor would he discuss the possibility that he may at some time marry again.

Both Wallace and his ex-wife have been married twice. The governor's first wife, Lurleen, died in May, 1968 while serving as Alabama's only woman governor. On Jan. 4, 1971, he married the former Cornelia Snively, who had been divorced from John Snively III.

The out-of-court settlement was announced by attorneys only minutes before the divorce case was to be called for trial. Then, on the seventh anniversary of the Wallaces' marriage, Circuit Judge Joseph D. Phelps signed the divorce decree.

Under Alabama law, the decree becomes final in 60 days. Nevertheless, one of the governor's attorneys, Maury Smith, said the $75,000 cash payment would be made "forthwith."

In addition to the cash settlement, Mrs. Wallace will receive five gifts the couple received: a color television set, microwave oven, Chantilly punchbowl set, Jane Lay painting and French inlay clock.

Wallace agreed to pay some $2,500 in outstanding bills incurred by his former during their marriage. Court costs are to be shared equally by both parties, with each paying his or her own attorneys' fees and deposition costs.

After the settlement was announced, Mrs. Wallace's attorneys said neither they nor their client "will have any further statement in this matter."

The prepared statement said the former first lady remains under the care of her personal physician. Mrs. Wallace recently underwent treatment at a local hospital for what was described as "mental and physical exhaustion."

At his news conference, Wallace was asked whether he and his ex wife have seen each other recently or talked by telephone. "Who I talk to on the phone, is nobody's business," the governor responded.

His reply may have been a veiled reference to tape recordings Mrs. Wallace reportedly made of telephone conversations the governor had in his bedroom at the executive mansion.

Reports of the phone "bugging" surfaced in September, 1976, fueling speculation of marital problems within the first family.

A year later, the governor filed for divorce on the grounds of "incompatibility of temperament" and an "irretrievable breakdown" of the marriage.

In her countersuit, Mrs. Wallace accused the governor of committing "cruelty and actual violence" against her.

Prior to Wednesday's announcement of an out-of-court settlement, Mrs. Wallace's attorneys said they would seek a postponement of the divorce trial.

Both sides acknowledged that negotiations of a settlement were underway but that no progress was being made.

Smith said, however, that the stalemate was broken Wednesday morning when Mrs. Wallace's attorneys asked that he make a final draft of an agreement he had proposed "several months ago."

Smith said after the agreement was prepared, it was submitted to the governor and his wife for their signatures.

The governor's attorney said he was pleased that the highly publicized case did not go to trial. Out of "respect for everyone's position," he said, "it's never good for a divorce case to be litigated."

Begin Is Briefed On Carter Meeting With Sadat

Boeing Suspects Soviet Copied Plane's Design

COPIED? — A Boeing Co. spokesman says it is "obvious to us" that the Russians copied the basic concept of a Boeing plane to make their own jet transports. The Boeing YC-14 is shown at top. Soviet AN-72 is at bottom. (AP Laserphoto)

By PATRICK CONNOLLY
Associated Press Writer

SEATTLE (AP) — The Boeing Co. says it suspects the Soviet Union has copied the basic design of a military jet transport being developed for the U.S. government.

Not likely, says a Soviet embassy official in Washington. "The Boeing design at issue is for a short-takeoff, short-landing transport, designated the YC-14."

"It's obvious to us that we gave the idea to them by showing and talking about the short-takeoff, short-landing plane," said Bill Clark, a spokesman for Boeing's military enterprises.

"We didn't make any secret of the basic concept. It is obvious they saw it and they might have copied it. It looks like our airplane in so many respects that I can hardly believe it."

Why didn't Boeing make it a secret?

"Because there is no point to it," said Clark. "It might be kept secret a couple of years but eventually you fly it. Anybody with an airplane can fly alongside and take a picture."

Clark noted that Boeing has no way of knowing for sure the Soviet AN-72 unveiled in the West last month is a copy of the Boeing version.

"They have three design bureaus in Russia," he said. "They might have come up with the same design we did. I don't want to cause an international incident."

A U.S. military intelligence source in Washington, who asked not to be identified, would say only that the Russian plane "resembles" the Boeing craft. An engineer with McDonnell Douglas Corp. at Long Beach, Calif., says the markedly similar design raised eyebrows there.

"We saw the picture (of the Soviet plane) in the paper and surmised it was copied from Boeing," said the engineer, who asked not to be identified because his remarks were not cleared by the company, a Boeing competitor.

"Boeing released its pictures quite a few years ago and the Russians would have had time to copy."

The YC-14 is a high-wing, two-engine jet transport capable of carrying 27,000 pounds of cargo while flying in and out of a short, 2,000-foot field.

Extradited To Face Charges

An Edgecombe County man has been extradited from New Jersey State Prison to Pitt County for trial on three breaking, entering and larceny charges dating back to Nov. 5, 1975.

Pitt Sheriff Ralph Tyson reported that Charles Linwood Harrison, 30, of 201 First Street, Tarboro, was brought back to Pitt County on Tuesday to face the break-in counts.

Harrison, according to the sheriff, is charged with incidents at the Elton Martin residence on Rt. 2, Robersonville where $203 in property was taken, at the Charles Neal residence on Rt. 8, Greenville where $565 in property, including $100 in money, was reported stolen, and at the residence of H. Herbert Smith on Rt. 1, Stokes where property valued at $285 was taken.

Sheriff Tyson said that a trial date will be set for Superior Court on the break-in charges.

By The Associated Press
U.S. Ambassador Samuel Lewis briefed Israeli Prime Minister Menahem Begin today on President Carter's meeting in Aswan, Egypt with President Anwar Sadat amid signs the United States has moved back into the Mideast diplomatic spotlight.

The United States mainly stood on the sidelines while Sadat and Begin opened their historic direct dialogue in November.

Carter gave Begin a personal rundown of the Wednesday meeting in a brief telephone call from Air Force One. Lewis reportedly brought Begin a detailed account of the talks.

Both the ambassador and Israeli Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan said the United States will resume an active role in Mideast mediation when the foreign ministers of Egypt and Israel open political talks Jan. 15.

Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance will head the U.S. delegation to those talks in Jerusalem. Lewis told reporters Vance "will be active in helping the negotiations along, continuing a supporting role. But I think it will be an active role... That seems to be what both sides would like."

Dayan, in a speech Wednesday, said "the moment they (the United States) feel negotiations are developing snags or running into a dead end, they will not hesitate to roll up their sleeves to promote progress."

Begin, meanwhile, appears to be engaging in some fence mending among the 4,000 worried Israeli settlers in the West Bank of the Jordan River who fear they may be forced out of the territories because of Israeli-Egyptian peace talks.

Despite Egyptian objections to the Jewish outposts, sources in Jerusalem say Begin is encouraging strengthening of existing settlements — in areas captured in the 1967 Arab-Israeli war — with a new influx of settlers.

Work started this week on a new settlement at Karnei Shomron in the West Bank about 30 miles north of Jerusalem. It is the 35th Israeli outpost on the West Bank and the fifth established since Begin took office in June.

The sources, who asked not to be identified, said the enclave was approved several months ago and no new settlements are in the works.

Israel's proposal for limited self-rule for West Bank and Gaza Arabs with a continued Israeli military presence stipulates that Jewish settlements remain in the territories. Egypt says they must be withdrawn and the United States has called them a hindrance to peace.

Meanwhile, armed British police guarded Arab embassies and offices in London today and mounted a watch at Britain's gateways for the assassins of the Palestine Liberation Organization's London spokesman.

Arab extremists are suspected of assassinating Said Hammami, a close friend of PLO chief Yasir Arafat. Hammami was shot twice in the head and once in the heart as he sat in his basement office Wednesday. He was an advocate of coexistence with Israel.

and Scotland Yard suspected he was the victim of a Palestinian faction opposed to such moderation.

ment system. Commenting on the implementation timetable, Keeter said the drafting stage of the management process would be basically completed by June, 1978, and that implementation of the energy conservation system would begin immediately thereafter.

School administration officials are confident that monitoring of the management system will begin during the closing months of 1978.

"We'll have the bugs ironed out of the system by the first quarter of 1979," said Keeter.

Mid-East Chairman Ross Persinger praised the Pitt County school system for taking the initiative in energy conservation, thereby setting a positive example for private businesses and citizens in the county and throughout the region.

RALEIGH (AP) (NCDA) — The trend on the North Carolina f.o.b. dock broiler market was steady, supplies moderate, demand good, weights desirable to heavy. The dock weighted average price is 38.27 cents per pound this week for small purchases of sized plant grade broilers picked up at processing plant. Estimated slaughter to-day 1,364,000.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market was broadly higher today, reflecting the suddenly brighter outlook for the U.S. dollar in foreign exchange trading.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks rose almost six points in the early going. Gainers held a 5-1 edge over losers among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues and the 10 most-active NYSE stocks all posted initial gains.

Analysts said the advance was led by substantial buy orders from foreign and U.S. traders, and by reports that foreign stock markets already had posted strong gains for the day.

Renewed trader optimism, coming after stock market losses in the first two trading days of the year, was attributed to the strength shown by the dollar in foreign exchange dealings after U.S. officials said they would intervene to halt the currency's deterioration.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks, off 13.43 points in the first session of the new year Tuesday, had dropped another 4.16 to 813.58 Wednesday.

Losers held a 2-1 edge Wednesday over gainers on the NYSE.

Big Board volume came to 24.09 million shares, compared with 17.72 million shares Tuesday.

The NYSE's composite index lost .19 to 51.63. On the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was off .55 to 126.14.

 to staff director Dana S. Her-ring.

"In most cases, the scientific survey did verify the trends we found in the mass survey," she said. "Even in cases where the percentages were different, there were broad areas that both samples had in common that point to some general concerns that North Carolinians share."

Generally, respondents across the state felt that the matter of jobs and employment was of uppermost concern, followed closely by public education, welfare, crime and law enforcement, taxes, roads and transportation, government, inflation, energy and utilities, and problems of the elderly. The additional problems of alcoholic beverages, housing, recreation, opportunities for women, agriculture, drug abuse and the environment were offered to a much less significant degree as problem areas.

 the Democratic party. I felt I could do better than I have.

"I'm running without the inside kind of help that's so important in a statewide campaign," he emphasized.

"To counter this," McKnight said, "I'm doubling my efforts in personal campaigning...running a very localized campaign...trying to get the people who already know me to the polls."

According to McKnight, "It's really a personal campaign," of meeting people and shaking hands and talking to them, and he has no paid people on his staff. "It's a one-man campaign literally, but I'm trying to get a few people to look out for me in each town."

However, McKnight said, "I do expect to add some people on to assist on a statewide level."

Saying, "I'm very happy we have a crowded field. It will make my job easier," McKnight added that he has asked John Ingram, the State's Insurance Commissioner who has entered the race for the Democratic nomination, "to resign if he is nominated," in order to campaign full-time against incumbent Republican Jesse Helms.

Group Organize Savings & Loan

A group of Pitt County businessmen have formed a corporation for the purpose of applying for a charter for a stock-owned savings and loan association, the group announced.

Pending approval of the local application, it was noted, the name North State Savings & Loan has been reserved with the savings and loan division of the State Department of Commerce.

Stock is being subscribed in the new organization, with potential stock holders paying a small deposit on shares of stock and the balance due when the charter is issued.

Members of the Pitt group include: Max Ray Joyner, J. T. Snowden, A. B. Whitley, Durward Harris, J. C. Whitehurst, J. Carlton Taylor, Dr. Charles Broome, Les Garner, Tom Taft, W. G. Blount, Dr. L. E. Ross, Les Fuchs, I. J. Edwards Jr., Morris Brody, and Ferrell Blount, all of Greenville, as well as Bob Whitehurst of Bethel and R. E. Davenport Jr. of Farmville.

The state legislature passed a law last July authorizing stock-owned savings and loan associations. Several have already been chartered.

Heels Survive Overtime Game

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

Stan Rome pulled the trigger and Dean Smith thought that North Carolina was dead.

"That shot looked like it was in all the way," said the North Carolina basketball coach. "They shouldn't have gotten that good a shot."

The ball, however, was off the mark at the end of regulation time, giving Smith's Tar Heels a new life. Resurrected, they came back in overtime to beat the Clemson Tigers 79-77 in an intensely-played Atlantic Coast Conference opener Wednesday night.

"It was awfully disappointing for anyone to lose that game," said Smith.

Clemson Coach Bill Foster agreed.

"I don't think any one play cost us the ball game, but the ones toward the end tend to linger in your mind a little longer," said Foster, obviously thinking of Rome's miss at the end of regulation time.

Along with defending champion North Carolina, two other ACC teams got off winging in the conference race. No. 13 Virginia beat Wake Forest 67-60 and Duke whipped No. 15 Maryland 88-78. Elsewhere among the ranked teams, No. 3 Arkansas smothered Hofstra 95-70, No. 6 Indiana State whipped Southern Illinois 66-58 and No. 12 Cincinnati crushed Tulane 102-67.

The Tar Heels and Tigers were tied at 72 after Rome missed his shot in the last second of regulation time and the teams were just as tight in overtime. North Carolina took a 75-71 lead before Clemson rallied to go ahead 77-75 with just 55 seconds remaining.

North Carolina's Mike O'Koren narrowed the lead to one with a free throw and after Clemson's Bobby Conrad missed the front end of a one-and-one free throw situation, the Tar Heels held the ball for one shot. Tom Zaliagiris made it, and was fouled going in, completing a three-point play for the final margin.

Virginia led all the way and, buoyed by Steve Castellani's 15 points, defeated Wake Forest in a tough defensive battle.

"I thought Wake Forest played great defense," noted Virginia Coach Terry Holland. "They kept us from doing some of the things we wanted to do offensively. By the same token, I thought our defense won the game for us."

Jim Spanarkel scored 33 points and freshman Eugene Banks provided some late help to lead Duke past Maryland. The Terps had pulled within 69-68 with a six-point string before Banks sank a field goal and then assisted on a Spanarkel basket to help the Blue Devils pull away.

Sidney Moncreif and Marvin Delph combined for 53 points as Arkansas shot 59 per cent from the field and routed Hofstra, making Roger Gaeckler a believer in Razorback Power.

"Arkansas legitimately deserves their No. 3 ranking," said the Hofstra coach. "When I read about them, I didn't see how they could be that good. But their timing is so good and with their tremendous quickness, I can see how they are that good."

Harry Morgan scored 23 points and Larry Bird added 21 to lead Indiana State past Southern Illinois in their Missouri Valley Conference opener.

"This was a great ball game for us," said Indiana State Coach Bob King, "because I think our fans have been reading the press clippings too much and thinking we will run away with every game. We're going to have to play our guts out to win night after night in this conference."

Pat Cummings scored Cincinnati's first eight points and went on to tally 12 more as the Bearcats trimmed Tulane in a Metro Conference game.

In other games, Terry Crosby's 20 points led Tennessee to an 80-76 decision over Auburn; South Carolina walloped East Carolina 90-72 behind Mike Doyle's 22 points; a 23-point performance by Walter Daniels powered Georgia over Florida 57-54; George Johnson's 37 points, including four in overtime, led St. John's over Seton Hall 87-86; Reggie King's 17 points paced Alabama over LSU 70-67; Penn State shocked Rutgers 81-79 with a second-half comeback sparked by Jeff Miller's 14 points and Ron Carter scored 31 points as VMI defeated Siena in the finals of the Siena Invitational.

The hot-shooting of the University of South Carolina proved more than enough last night as the Fighting Gamecocks managed to take a 90-72 victory over East Carolina.

South Carolina, which had shot only 40 per cent during the first half, came out red hot in the second, and canned 20 of 29 shots from the floor, many of them long-range bombs by Jackie Gilloon and Mike Doyle, for an outstanding 69.0 per cent.

East Carolina, which had shot 47.1 per cent in the first half, came back with a cooler 44.8 per cent in the second half, as the Gamecocks steadily pulled away from them.

South Carolina, which trailed by as much as four points early in the game, came back to inch out to a six-point lead at the half, as the Pirates got little help in scoring from the rest of the crew besides Oliver Mack and Herb Krusen.

The Bucs were also too slow in making the transition from defense to offense on three or four live-ball turnovers, and South Carolina got several nearly uncontested baskets this way.

"I thought we played pretty good in the first half," a disappointed Larry Gillman said afterwards. "They outbounded us by five or six in the half, and I think that was about the real difference. In the second half, we were sluggish offensively. Krusen shot well and I thought Oliver played pretty good."

"Our man-to-man defense in the first half was pretty decent, but they got a lot of their points on second effort, where we didn't get many second opportunities."

Gillman added that he was impressed with the playing intensity of Gollie Augustus, who scored 12 points in the game, about twice his average. "He was very physical and seemed to get the shot for them when they needed it." Augustus gave the Gamecocks their six-point lead at the half, hitting from the corner, outside his usual range, with four seconds left.

Gillman also felt that the play of Gilloon, a senior, was a key factor in the game. "His leadership is pivotal," he said. The guard hit on eight of 15 shots, all long range.

"He's a very fine player. We wanted to put a lot of pressure on him and try to tire him out because we felt that they wouldn't be as good without him. But we failed to pick him up, till half-court, and it just didn't work that way."

Doyle, who led the Gamecocks in scoring with 22, including seven of 13 from the floor, most of them bombs, is helped by Gilloon's presence, Gillman felt. "He's a fine player, but he's a lot better because of Gilloon. They have a team that has a veteran leading young players. We have young players leading young players, and that makes a difference."

Gillman added that he really felt that the Pirates had a shot at winning. "I'm really disappointed. We just didn't get enough pressure on them. They also have a tremendous home court advantage here, too, and we were just too passive in the second half."

South Carolina's Frank McGuire had praise for the two Pirate leaders. "Mack is a very good basketball player. We knew him in New York, so his ability was no surprise to us. Krusen is a pure shooter."

"The skinny kid that came in is also a good shooter," he added, talking of Bernard Hill, who played in the final eight minutes, hitting three of five shots from the floor, mostly out of the corner, and finishing with ten points.

But aside from those points, Krusen and Mack got little help elsewhere. They accounted for over half of the Pirate total.

Mack, hitting ten of 17 from the floor, but only two of six from the line, had 22 points, while Krusen, 9-17 from the floor, had 18. He also added seven rebounds, while Herb Gray picked off eight.

The Pirates were outbounded, 38-33, with Jimmy Graziano leading the way with 11, while Augustus had nine.

The Gamecocks had four other people in double figures beside Doyle. Gilloon had 16, while Augustus and Graziano each had 12 and Rich Wejnert added 11.

East Carolina enjoyed an early lead, but was unable to hold onto it. Krusen hit the first two shots for a 4-0 lead, but Graziano and Doyle hit to tie it up.

The Pirates denied the lead to South Carolina, however, until Graziano hit with 14:11 left for a 12-10 lead.

After that, East Carolina tied it up four more times, the last at 24-24, when Herb Gray hit the first non-Krusen-Mack points for the Bucs.

But Doyle scored a three-point play for a 27-24 lead with 7:23 left, and the Pirates never caught up again.

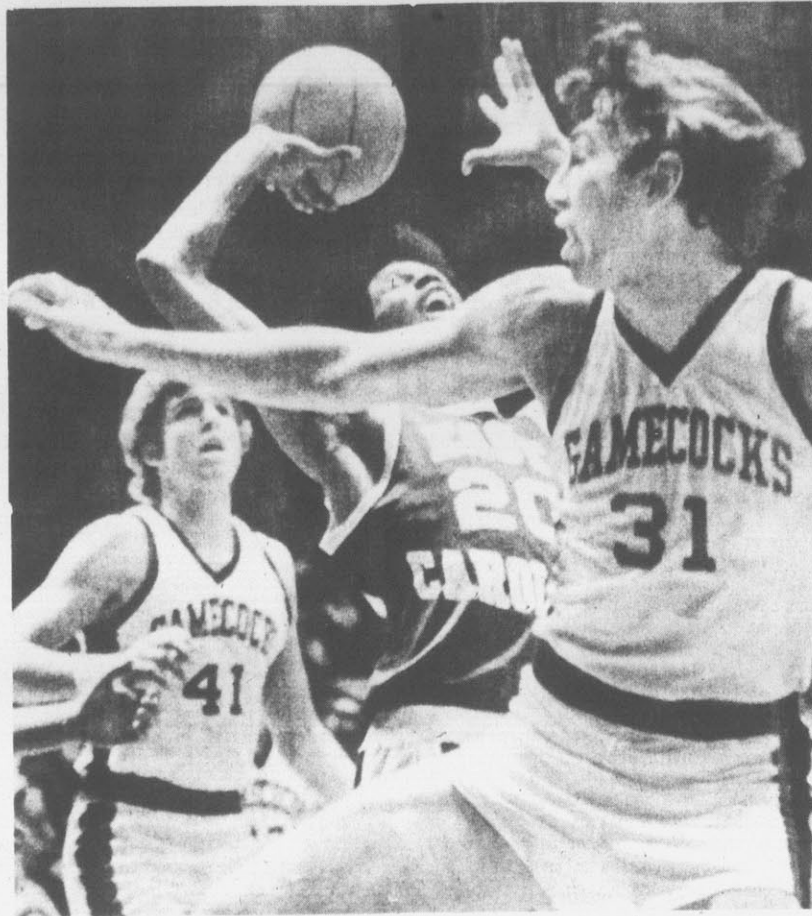

Gilloon followed with a jumper with 6:14 showing to up the lead to five, and a minute later, Graziano hit two free throws to up the lead to 33-26, the biggest South Carolina lead of the half. The Pirates cut it back to one, 33-32 but could not catch up as Augustus hit a hook, and Wejnert hit a three-pointer. After Mack hit for East Carolina, Augustus hit from the corner at the end of the half for a 40-34 lead.

South Carolina, with its hot second half shooting, just pulled away in the final half, steadily building up its lead. Halfway through the period, Augustus hit for a 62-47 lead, marking the first time it hit 15 points. Eventually, it reached 22, at 73-51 with 5:21 left.

East Carolina, still looking for its second win after losing seven, faces once-beaten William & Mary on Saturday in Williamsburg. South Carolina climbed to 7-5 with the win.

Chris Evert Again Top Female Athlete

By CHRISTY BARBEE
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Chris Evert, still indisputably No. 1 in women's tennis and planning to give the other competitors a break, has been named The Associated Press Female Athlete of the Year for the third time in four years.

The gracious 23-year-old blond from Fort Lauderdale, Fla. won 11 of 14 tournaments and 70 of 74 matches in 1977 and was ranked the No. 1 U.S. female for the fourth consecutive year.

Nadia Comaneci of Romania won the award last year for her gymnastics feats at the Olympics.

Evert, who hasn't taken off more than three weeks in a row from tennis since she graduated from high school in 1973, admitted recently that there are days when she can't stand the sight of a tennis ball.

"It used to be so easy for me to get psyched up for a match, but it's been so difficult in the last two years," she told a tennis magazine. "Now, almost every tournament I play, I have three good matches and two lousy ones."

Her opponents might not think those two matches per tournament are lousy enough, but Evert has announced she will sit out the major circuit tournaments for January and February, at least.

The tennis queen received 110 votes from a nationwide panel of sports writers and broadcasters, compared with 43 for Virginia Wade, who upset Evert in the Wimbledon semifinals last year.

Tennis players and golfers dominated the voting as third place went to 15-year-old court upstart Tracy Austin with 34 votes, and fourth place to LPGA money-leader Judy Rankin with 15 votes. Rankin of Midland, Texas, won $122,890 on the 1977 tour.

Fifth and sixth in The AP balloting were golfers Kathy Whitworth of Richardson, Texas, with 12 votes, and Hollis Stacy of Hilton Head, S.C., with 10 votes.

Evert began her respite from tennis vacationing with longtime friend-boyfriend Jimmy Connors in St. Louis and Southern California, prompting a British news service to report they had married.

They weren't, and when Evert joined her family in Florida for the holidays, she called a press conference to make sure her marital status — definitely single — was clear.

"We have a lot of fun together and enjoy being together and I see no reason for it to stop," she said of her relationship with Connors, who is currently battling for No. 1 in the men's tennis world.

The tennis wars of 1977 took their toll on Evert. It showed in matches when her determination was lacking, and it became painfully evident in October when she suffered shin splints. A few weeks rest before the women's championship in Palm Springs eased the pain but not the malaise.

And so it is time for a rest. And evident in most discussions of her future are hopes for marriage and children of her own.

"I can neither see myself quitting now nor playing until I'm 30. I'll retire when something big comes along that will make me want to quit, like marriage or another career," she told Tennis World.

ON ANY GIVEN SUNDAY, National Football League Commissioner Pete Rozelle has been known to say, any team in the league has the potential to defeat any other. College football isn't quite that equitable yet, despite the 30-90 scholarship rule, but Monday's bowl games proved that the favorite, as established by the oddsmakers and pollsters, isn't always assured of an easy victory.

In only one bowl game, the Sugar Bowl, did a higher-ranked team defeat its opponent. In that game, third-ranked Alabama demolished eighth-ranked Ohio State, 35-6. But, the oddsmakers had listed the Buckeyes as the favorites in the contest.

The Cotton Bowl saw Texas, ranked number one for most of the season, fall to the fifth-ranked Irish from Notre Dame, 38-10. With that victory, the Irish were awarded the mythical national championship by both wire service polls. But, again, the defeated team was heavily favored.

Another upset occurred in the Rose Bowl, where 14-point underdog Washington, a virtual unknown on the national scene, embarrassed fourth-rated Michigan, 27-20. The Huskies led 27-7 at one point in the game before allowing a Wolverine comeback.

But the biggest shocker was Monday night in the Orange Bowl. Arkansas, rated 18 points behind powerful Oklahoma, ran right over the Sooners on route to a 31-6 shellacking.

FORMER N. C. STATE coach Lou Holtz created national headlines when, a week before the game, he suspended three Razorback players, including his top running back and his top receiver. In addition, All-America guard Leotis Harris was sidelined with a knee injury.

Riddled with the absences of these top performers, it looked as though the Razorbacks would have trouble staying on the field with the Sooners. But, from the opening play, Arkansas took control and rolled right over the bigger Oklahoma team.

The inspired Razorbacks kicked off to the Sooners after losing the coin toss and that proved to be to their advantage. The quicker Hogs threw Oklahoma for losses on the first two plays from scrimmage and then forced a fumble which they recovered. The Razorbacks scored on the game's fifth play from scrimmage and never let up.

Sophomore fullback Roland Sales, a substitute before the suspensions, led the Razorback veer attack by rushing for 205 yards on 18 carries for a new Orange Bowl record. He scored two touchdowns and set up two more with a pair of 38-yard lugs.

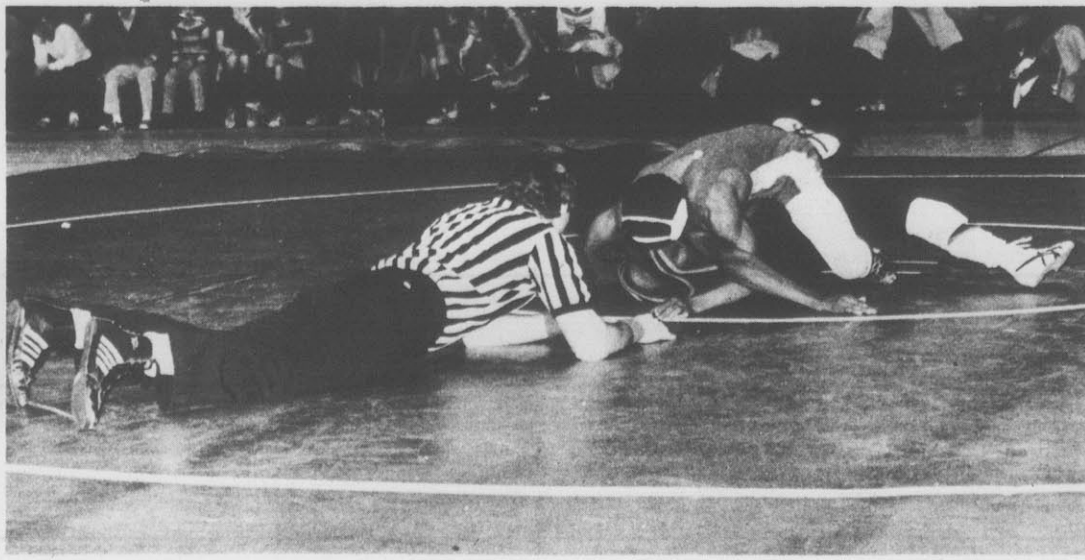

It was a great day for Holtz, who had seen glory as the head coach of State before moving to the NFL to coach the New York Jets. Disillusioned with professional football, he accepted the job at Arkansas, turning around the team, which finished 5-5-1 last season.

MONDAY'S GAMES PROVED that pure talent, size and power are important to a team, but they can be overcome by quickness and enthusiasm.

Ohio State coach Woody Hayes said after the Sugar Bowl that his team had twice as much material than the Crimson Tide, but Alabama was more emotional and that more than evened things out. Nearly to a man, the Buckeye players said Alabama had more motivation in the contest.

Notre Dame certainly demonstrated a lot of emotion in its rise to the national championship over Texas. The Irish nearly completely shut off Heisman Trophy-winner Earl Campbell, who had led the Longhorns to a 11-0 record before the bowl.

Washington was obviously charged up to be able to score 27 points against defense-minded Michigan, while Arkansas showed its fire from the Orange Bowl's very first play.

Almost A Pin

Rose High School's James Cherry come close to getting a pin over D.H. Conley's Donald Hardy during wrestling action last night between the two schools.

Cherry failed to make the pin, however, but won the match. Conley went on to take the overall meet, 35-32, to gain revenge for an earlier defeat. (Reflector Photo)

Conley Gains Revenge For Lone Loss; Hands Rose First Defeat

By JIM KYLE
Reflector Sports Writer

D. H. Conley's Jesse Davis picked up Rose's Charles Gunther, turned him around until he was in the right position and then threw him to the mat for a pin with just 24 seconds gone in the bout.

The pin, at 187 pounds, gave the Vikings a 35-20 lead in the match, an insurmountable margin despite the fact that Conley forfeited the final two weight classes. The final score was 35-32.

"Quite frankly, I was hoping just to stay with them this time around," said an ecstatic Viking coach Milt Sherman. His team, weakened by "quitters," was forced to forfeit a total of three weight classes giving the Rampants, who had defeated Conley in the first match of the year, a distinct advantage.

In the first encounter of the season, Rose defeated the Vikings, 38-20, Conley's only loss of the year. But the Vikings got their revenge last night, handing the Rampants their first loss of the season. Conley is now 6-1 and Rose is 7-1. "We have been hurt by quitters," Sherman said, "but the individuals that have stuck it out with us are fine wrestlers. We knew we could win, but under the circumstances, I felt it would be very difficult for us to do so."

The Viking coach said he was impressed with the Rampants' balance this season, calling them "a real fine team. I'm just very happy to get out of this one with a win."

Rose built up a 14-7 lead through the first five weight classes and, with the three forfeits still ahead, appeared to be in command of the meet.

But the Vikings began to answer the Rampant decisions with pins, winning five of the next six bouts, four by pin, to win the match.

The Conley cause was helped in the meet's first bout when Rose's Ricky Warren was penalized for stalling with just three seconds left to enable Gary Harris to gain a 7-7 tie.

Rose then won the next two weight classes by decision, with James Cherry at 114 winning 14-0 to give the Rampants a 10-2 lead.

Conley came back in the next match as Alton Crandall got a 22-2 decision to make it 10-7. Jesse Baker then scored a decision at 128 by a 14-5 score to put the Rampants ahead, 14-7.

But that was when the Vikings began their onslaught. Ronald Harris won 9-1 at 134 to make it 14-11 Rose and then Marvin Hardy gave Conley the lead with a pin in just 25 seconds at 140.

William Small followed that up with another pin, getting it with just eight seconds remaining in the 147-pound match. Alfred O'Neal won by forfeit for Rose, but Charles Hanson got a pin to make it 29-20 Conley and Davis followed with his pin that sealed the Viking victory.

Ron Butler won by forfeit for Rose at 197 and Franklin Clark won by forfeit in the heavyweight division.

Rose wrestles again tonight when it hosts Northern Nash, while Conley will be back in action Jan. 14 at Cary.

Braves Win On McClain's Steal

By The Associated Press

Coach Jerry West of the Los Angeles Lakers felt as if he had just been held up.

In effect, that's what Ted McClain did — stealing a game that West had in his hip pocket. "I have no idea what happened," said West, dazed after McClain's steal in the closing seconds led to a Buffalo basket that gave the Braves a 94-93 National Basketball Association victory over the Lakers Wednesday night.

The Lakers had a 93-92 lead and possession of the ball with 16 seconds left, a virtual victory in anybody's book. But McClain picked off an inbound pass and fired to Randy Smith, who was fouled by Lou Hudson going up for a shot.

With 10 seconds remaining, Smith delivered the two free throws for a dramatic Buffalo victory.

Elsewhere in the NBA, the Philadelphia 76ers defeated the Cleveland Cavaliers 108-93; the Golden State Warriors routed the Chicago Bulls 115-94; the Denver Nuggets turned back the San Antonio Spurs 119-114; the Detroit Pistons stopped the Atlanta Hawks 111-97; the New Jersey Nets walloped the Phoenix Suns 115-83; the Houston Rockets outscored the Indiana Pacers 104-96 and the Seattle SuperSonics tripped the Kansas City Kings 116-110.

76ers 108, Cavaliers 93
Julius Erving scored 21 points to lead Philadelphia past Cleveland. The lead changed hands 12 times and the score was tied on 12 occasions before the 76ers took the lead for good at 65-63 on Doug Collins' shot with 2:39 left in the third period.

Warriors 115, Bulls 94
Sonny Parker scored a season-high 24 points to power Golden State past Chicago. The Warriors shot over 59 per cent from the field as they broke a four-game losing streak.

Nuggets 119, Spurs 114
Denver used a balanced attack, led by Brian Taylor's 23 points, to edge San Antonio. Bobby Jones added 21 points for the Nuggets while Dan Issel had 20 and David Thompson chipped in with 18.

Pistons 111, Hawks 97
Bob Lanier scored 28 points to lead Detroit over Atlanta. The Pistons outscored the Hawks 58-41 in the second half and went on to the eighth victory in their last nine starts.

Nets 115, Suns 83
Bernard King hit 12 straight field goals in the second half and scored a career-high 44 points to lead New Jersey past Phoenix.

King scored 26 in the second half alone as the Nets pulled away from a 52-43 halftime lead to turn the contest into a rout in the third quarter and hand the Suns their worst defeat of the season.

Rockets 104, Pacers 96
Calvin Murphy scored 29 points and teammates Robert Reid and Moses Malone pumped in 18 each to lead Houston over Indiana.

Conceding a ruff-and-sluft to declarer is usually a "no-no" in respectable bridge circles. But on this hand West proved that doing it twice is not necessarily twice as bad.

Once South opened the bidding, North was determined to play in game—it was only a question of which game was best. His first move was to respond in diamonds rather than hearts to give his partner the chance to introduce a four-card heart suit if he held one. When South instead rebid his spades, North knew exactly where the hand should be played.

West led the king of clubs, and dummy's display of high cards did not please him. From the bidding and the strength in view, it was obvious that West could expect nothing from his partner. The best he could hope for in high-card tricks was two clubs and a spade. Where could he find the setting trick?

A heart ruff was one possibility, but West knew he had no way to get to his partner's hand for the ruff. Diamonds were out as a source of tricks, for declarer had to have the queen for his opening bid. By a process of elimination, West concluded that the trump suit was the only possibility that might be exploited.

If East held any trump honor, West would be able to promote a second trump trick via an uppercut. To set up the position, West continued with the ace and queen of clubs. Since all of declarer's cards outside the trump suit were winners, the ruff-and-sluft did not help him. He ruffed in dummy and led a trump to his jack and West's ace.

Continuing with his defensive plan, West led a fourth club, and declarer was helpless. East ruffed with the ten, and when declarer over-ruffed with the queen, West's nine was promoted to the setting trick.

Your play to the first trick could decide the fate of the contract! A writer once remarked: "There's no such thing as a blind opening lead, only deal opening leaders!" TV Producer Back On Nashville Scene

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Producer Joe Cates began his TV career in New York in 1947 with a show called "When You Wish Upon a Star." He was born in New York, still lives there and says he likes the place.

But such is the nature of TV today he rarely does a show in what used to be the navel of network production. He tends to spend considerable time in Nashville, Tenn., these days.

He produced Johnny Cash's CBS Christmas special there.

He and his brother, Gil, recently co-produced another Nashville show, another tribute to the late Elvis Presley that NBC will air Sunday.

And this week, he returned to Nashville's new Opryland complex to tape yet another down-home musicale for NBC. "50 Years of Country Music," a three-hour extravaganza airing Jan. 22.

Next spring, it's Nashville again for another Cash special. Cates, 53, a specialist in specials, was asked if he suspects Nashville has become a pretty big center of production for network TV.

"I wouldn't say pretty big," he said by phone from New York. "Los Angeles still clearly is the leader, followed by New York only because news, sports, soap operas and a few oddball things come out of there."

"But the only other city in the U.S. that is doing (national) television regularly is Nashville, not the old radio centers like Chicago or Detroit." He offered a few theories why.

"Obviously, there's a concentration of country music stars living there," he said. "And country music has become national."

"So many of these people are crossover" — not limited to country music fans in appeal — "and are of national interest."

"A third reason is that they very wisely built a major studio facility there. The one they have out at Opryland is as fine as anything you have in Los Angeles, maybe even finer."

Cates, who estimates that in the last 10 years he's made between 80 and 100 specials, many of them musicals, says that for him, New York has become a place where you can't do music specials. Why?

"We don't have the studio facilities," he said. "We certainly don't have the sets to draw from in stock. And we don't have the TV stars they require in casting. They're all out in

Limousines Not For Prisoners

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Stuntman Evel Knievel's effort to provide his fellow county jail inmates with a taste of the good life has turned sour.

Knievel, serving a jail term for breaking the wrists of a television executive with a baseball bat, said he "wanted it to be an honest, holiday goodwill gesture" when he purchased limousine service for 10 other inmates on the county's work-furlough program.

But the sheriff's department was upset that the limousines got the inmates to their jobs an hour earlier than normal, leaving them with lots of unsupervised time on their hands, limousine service manager Barry St. John said Wednesday.

Durham Inventor Spurred Tobacco, Tea Production

By Dr. H.G. JONES
Written for the Associated Press

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — The little cloth bag, in which roll-your-own smoking tobacco was sold prior to and even after the popularization of ready-made cigarettes, is not a familiar item to most Americans today.

On the other hand, a tea bag is a standard item in many kitchens.

What do these little sacks have in common?

Their use was perfected by John Thomas Dalton of Durham, whose inventions stimulated production of both tobacco products and tea.

Take the tobacco bags, for instance. In 1905, the insertion of drawstrings was accomplished by hand, a slow and expensive process. A machine was needed that automatically threaded the string through the hem, and the Golden Belt Manufacturing Co. of Durham, which furnished machinery to tobacco factories, offered $100,000 to anyone who could provide a satisfactory piece of equipment for the purpose.

When this fabulous offer reached the ears of Tom Dalton in his blacksmith shop in Virginia, Va., he could hardly believe it. After all, he had worked on a road repair gang for as little as five cents per hour. True, he had later done well enough as a captain in the Bailey Copper Mine near Virginia to enable him to set up a blacksmith shop, but $100,000 was more money than he could imagine.

It was not just the money that led Tom Dalton to take up the challenge. There was his fascination with machinery. Even as a youngster in Pittsylvania County, Va., he had built a wagon with black gum wheels, a hand-powered wood lathe, a corn sheller, a cider mill, and a cradle scythe.

He later recalled his first sight of a strange contraption: "One day a fellow came to my stepfather's blacksmith shop riding something I had never seen before. It had two wheels and a saddle on it, and it had two little things that he could put his feet on. You could push them over, and you could ride. It was called a bicycle."

Now, at the age of 26, Dalton was eager to design a bag-stringing machine that would meet the requirements of the Durham firm. With the financial backing of a friend, he built the crude machine which, following refinements made at a Baltimore machine shop, automatically fed bags into the stringer, inserted the drawstrings, and packed the bags into bundles.

The intricate machine, however had imperfections, and it failed to satisfy Golden Belt. Dalton simply redoubled his efforts, obtained further financial assistance by taking in other partners, and finally in 1912 — after nearly seven year's work — won a contract from the company.

Dalton himself was hired to supervise the installation and operation of the machines which could string 540 million bags per year at a saving of $100,000.

Subsequently Dalton and a partner, R.H. Wright Sr., developed a machine to weigh tea, cut tea bags, pack the tea, sew the seams, and attach the tags. Insofar as we know, he did nothing for coffee drinkers.

For nearly 20 years after the dissolution of the Wright-Dalton partnership in 1937, Tom Dalton continued turning out inventions. Among them were a machine which attached tobacco labels without staples, one which tied the strings into bows, and another that attached bundles of 25 sacks.

During World War II Dalton assisted the federal government by developing a machine that reduced labor in loading bandoliers with cartridges. While observing Dalton's experiments in the American Tobacco Company facilities in Durham, a government inspector was terrified to learn that the inventor was using live ammunition.

Shortly before his death at age 86 in 1966, Tom Dalton offered to the National Aeronautics and Space Administration a plan to assist in gaining the initial thrust in launching a rocket in space.

John Thomas Dalton's contributions to the modernization of the tobacco industry have been recognized by the Tobacco History Corporation, a private non-profit corporation supporting the Duke Homestead State Historic Site where a Dalton Bag Stringer is on display.

Serious Side To Clowning

SEATTLE (AP) — Clowning around is serious business for Richard Nasch, who at 29, is running away to join the circus. Next year, he reports to the Ringling Brothers and Barnum & Bailey Circus as a clown.

"I love the circus," Nasch said. "It offers everything — music, comedy, color, mime, excitement, the whole potpourri of entertainment — even the smells. All your senses are fulfilled."

Nasch began clowning with the Spherical Miracle Circus Works, which performs for local street fairs. When the circus came to town, Nasch would be there, hanging around the big-time clowns.

He applied for the Ringling Brothers' clown college several months ago. Of 4,000 applicants, he was one of 60 accepted and one of 24 to be hired for next year's tour.

As a "baby clown," he'll make $155 a week, less $10 for room in a tiny cubicle on a train carrying the circus across the country.

While clowning may look easy, Nasch said school was "intense" and sometimes scary. Climbing wobbly ladders, dancing on stilts, taking a fall and rolling out so as to avoid injury — and come up smiling — all take practice, he said.

Clown college included classes in Tai Chi, a martial art which "centers your energy and gets you ready for the day," said Nasch, as well as instruction in juggling, tumbling, unicycling, riding elephants, making false noses, magic, mime, balloon sculpture and nutrition.

Then there were the Saturday morning cartoons on TV. "We were polishing our funny bones," he said.

In the search for the clown in himself, Nasch tried various faces, and finally decided his mood was that of a duck — a waddling creature that has certain clown qualities.

When he dons his face, 45 minutes in the making, "a magical transformation occurs — a certain feeling comes over you. It's very joyous," said Nasch.

Clowning may be joyous, but the clown's schedule is not — two shows a day, six days a week, with three shows on Saturday.

But for Nasch, it's fulfillment. "It's really an act of love. It really makes me feel good to make people laugh."

Excursion Has Its Highlights

MANILA, The Philippines (UPI) — For the adventurous traveler, nothing beats a trip to the mountain province of Kalinga-Apayao, home of the ancient Ifugao tribesmen 150 air miles north of Manila.

The area is reached by rugged dirt roads and makeshift bridges over hundreds of creeks and rivers that take a day to traverse. There is no accommodation, but the natives are friendly.

Highlights include a magnificent view of a mountain range called "Sleeping Beauty," at Bugnay; the Balaban-Pasil River, teeming with fresh water eels, twisting through 13 miles of caves along mountainsides and more than 1,000 scenic cascades and waterfalls; and "rice terraces" carved out of the mountains more than 2,000 years ago by the headhunting ancestors of the Ifugaos.

Considering A Condominium? Some Suggestions

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer
Americans still dream of owning their own homes, but the house of the future is likely to be a condominium rather than the traditional single-family dwelling.
Condominiums accounted for less than 20 percent of all housing units sold in the United States in 1975. But the Department of Housing and Urban Development predicts that half of all Americans will be living in some type of condominium housing by 1997.
Buying a condominium presents problems and potential pitfalls for consumers who are not familiar with the terms and conditions of this relatively new form of housing.

A condominium may be part of a high-rise apartment or a cluster of two-story townhouses; it may be in a new building or in a renovated one; it may be located in the city, suburbs or country.
No matter what form it takes, however, a condominium is a home that you own in a multi-unit building. You hold the deed — exclusively — to all the enclosed space described in your title. You are responsible for upkeep and maintenance on that space. You should find out exactly what is included in this space before you buy.

You also own, in conjunction with your neighbors, an interest in what are known as the common elements of the property. These elements include everything from the hot water pipes to the recreational facilities. When you buy a condominium, you become a member of the owners' association which is responsible for maintaining the joint facilities. Costs are shared and you will be charged an assessment — which may increase as expenses rise.
Recreational facilities can be a major factor in a condominium. If development is not complete, make sure you get — in writing — an explanation of what will be built. Find out who will operate the recreational facilities, whether they will be open to outsiders and when they will be turned over to the owners' association.

You should not confuse a condominium with a cooperative. When you buy a cooperative, you are buying shares in a corporation which owns the building involved. You do not own your own unit.
Condominiums are created under state real estate laws. The only federal involvement with condominiums covers mortgages insured by the HUD and the Federal Housing Administration under the National Housing Act.

HUD has prepared a booklet for people considering condominiums. It explains the different types of documents you will face and the terms you'll need to know. It also offers advice on how to go about buying a condominium. The booklet, "Questions About Condominiums," is available at no charge from the Consumer Information Center, Dept. 586E, Pueblo, Colo., 81009.
The National Association of Homebuilders also has suggestions for consumers. Both government and industry stress the importance of asking questions.

"Don't hesitate to ask anything," says HUD.
Don't sign any sort of sales contract until you have read a copy of the declaration, bylaws, operating budget, management agreement and, if any mortgage on the project is federally insured, the regulatory agreement.
Here is a look at some of these documents and what they cover:
ENABLING DECLARATION — Spells out conditions, covenants and restrictions governing the sale, ownership, use and disposition of the property under state laws. Watch out for language that seems to be unduly restrictive of owners' rights, particularly the right to sell. You also should be alert for language that gives the developer unnecessary control over the project for an extended period of time.

The declaration normally provides for what's known as a master hazard insurance policy against loss by fire and other dangers. The policy should contain a condominium property endorsement which recognizes that condominiums have a multiple number of beneficiaries. Also make sure that there is sufficient liability coverage for the entire condominium and that the policy names, as insured, the board of directors and each owner individually.

BYLAWS — Further defines what you can and can't do with your condominium and implements powers given to the owners' association. Again, take care that the bylaws are not overly restrictive. At the same time, they should not be so permissive that one owner may act in a way which harms the other owners. The bylaws should include the steps to be taken to remove an ineffective board of directors.
OPERATING BUDGET — Covers estimated expenses. Look at it carefully to determine whether the maintenance costs listed for such things as swimming pool, building exterior, lobby, grounds, etc. are realistic. If they seem low, you may find the assessments you have to pay increasing sharply soon after you move in. Make sure the developer is not underestimating expenses to boost sales.

Driving Tips For Winter

CHARLOTTE (AP) — If you're out driving and your car starts to skid on ice, don't jam on the brakes or wrestle with the steering wheel.

Take your foot off the accelerator, turn in the direction that the back of the car is sliding, slow down slowly and then smoothly straighten the steering wheel.

That's advice from the N.C. State Motor Club, which has compiled a list of winter driving tips.

Last year, according to club public relations director Peter Vasko, nearly 3,000 highway accidents in North Carolina were attributed to snow or ice. Eleven persons were killed in wrecks caused by wintry roads, and 766 were injured, according to the motor club.

The organization advises motorists to prepare their cars for winter by getting an engine tune-up if the car is not running properly, getting snow tires and making sure the battery is strong.

To prepare for the possibility of getting stranded in freezing weather, the club advises that blankets or newspapers be kept in the trunk. Newspapers can serve as insulation when tucked inside outer clothing.

If a stranded motorist relies upon his car heater for warmth, he should make sure the exhaust pipes are not blocked by snow and he should open a window about an inch for ventilation, the club says.

As for driving on snow and ice, Vasko points out that "It is fairly easy to drive fast on snow but almost impossible to stop quickly."

Motorists should adjust to snow and ice by slowing down and doubling or tripling the distance between cars, the club says. On ice, braking distances may be ten times more than usual.

Clock Museum 20 Years Old

WUPPERTAL, West Germany (UPI) — The famed Historical Clock Museum in Wuppertal, center of the Rhineland's textile industry, is celebrating the 20th anniversary of its founding.

The museum features a comprehensive collection of clocks and watches which is continuously being enlarged.

An anniversary exhibit, "5,000 Years of Chronometry," shows the evolution of time-keeping devices from the sun dials of the Egyptians to modern wristwatches with quartz and tuning fork control.

Lake Tovel Has Turned Red

TRENTO, Italy (UPI) — Visitors to the Dolomites have a good chance of seeing Lake Tovel turn red again next summer.

The tiny Alpine lake used to turn blood-red every summer when microscopic red algae of a species known as Glionidium Sanguineum multiplied in its waters. The phenomenon stopped for 12 years due to pollution, then resumed faintly last summer after authorities built a new sewer channeling waste away from the lake.

Law Is On The Side Of Helms Reminds Not 'Inde'

Wake Forest U. Board

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A state law governing trustees of non-profit corporations gave Wake Forest University trustees all the authority they needed to defy the wishes of the Baptist State Convention, according to Secretary of State Thad Eure.

Eure said his opinion was based on his reading of the Non-Profit Corporations Act, which became effective in 1957 and seems to indicate that Wake Forest University trustees did not violate their charter when they rejected the convention's demand that they return a federal grant.

"Where the power of the trustees begins and stops may be a matter for the courts to decide, but according to my interpretation, Wake Forest's trustees acted within the law and exercised the authority given them when they were elected trustees," Eure said in an interview.

Delegates to the Baptist State Convention, meeting in Charlotte in November, voted overwhelmingly that the WFU trustees should return $85,000 from a $300,000 federal grant.

The Baptists took the position that the university would provide no service for the money and hence violated the doctrine of separation of church and state. But the trustees voted Dec. 9 to use the money for a building anyway.

The Rev. C. Mark Cortis of Winston-Salem, newly-elected president of the Baptist State Convention, said the trustees violated their charter which says they must operate as an agency of the convention and "in accordance with policies adopted by the convention."

But Eure said state law gives trustees "broad power to manage the affairs of the corporation and I don't think they stepped out of bounds." Eure said he was interpreting the way state law applies to all non-profit corporations.

Dr. Pasco M. Bowman, dean of Wake Forest's Law School, said he found ambiguity in the role of trustees.

"On the one hand, there's something that seems to say the trustees are subject to the overall will of the convention," he said. "On the other hand, you have the generally applicable legal norm which says the trustees are legally responsible for the affairs of the corporation. How do you balance these two confusing statements? I couldn't say."

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., says he has raised the bulk of his campaign contributions out of state to avoid indebtedness to large North Carolina interest groups.

Helms, whose organization has already raised and spent about $1.7 million in campaign preliminaries, has been criticized for getting so much of the money from constituents.

"I don't want anybody contributing money to make me feel I'm obligated to them," he told newsmen Wednesday. "This seemed to me to be the best way to do it — to get a minimal amount of money from a lot of folks. Thus far it has worked."

Helms said his organization had hoped to build a list of about 70,000 people around the country willing to give $10 to $15. He said it was hoped a good percentage would give again this year.

"To our astonishment, about 115,000 persons have given 10 to 15 bucks," he said.

Helms, the first Republican senator from North Carolina in modern history, is not expected to face primary opposition, but several Democrats have already announced they will vie for the privilege of facing him in the general election.

A leading national spokesman for conservatives in Congress, Helms said he is not bothered by the "Senator No." label given him by some North Carolina critics. He said his opposition to forced busing, "bloated appropriations bills" and "the Panama Canal giveaway," reflect the feelings of his constituency.

But Helms added that, as a joke, his Congressional staff has given him a large rubber "No" stamp.

Helms said the legislation he was most proud of during his first term was the bill blocking power dams planned along the New River that would have flooded portions of northwestern North Carolina and a bill granting American citizenship to Soviet dissident Alexander Solzhenitsyn.

Helms was a long-time radio commentator in Raleigh before running for the Senate. He was asked if he had any regrets about his conservative positions then on civil rights and if segregation in North Carolina was wrong.

"Not for its time," he said, adding later. "As for segregation, anybody who says there weren't wrongs done is out of his mind. This isn't any new opinion of mine either."

Responding to questions, he denied allegations by Hugh Cannon, a one-time Democratic candidate for Helms' seat who withdrew last year, that Helms had dropped membership in Raleigh's First Baptist Church in the 1960's because of a dispute over the admission of a black person as a member.

But, he said later on civil rights that perhaps "a lot of us should have done more in terms of what is right."

A cold high pressure system continued to move off the North Carolina coast this morning, leaving behind it moderating temperatures over the western part of the state and comparatively chilly readings along the coast.

After the cold start, temperatures climbed to the 40s over most of the state Wednesday, even reaching 50 degrees at Charlotte and Wilmington. Readings today were expected to range mostly in the 50s. Tonight's lows will be in the 30s to around 40.

Cloudiness will be increasing today and scattered light rain is predicted for the mountains tonight, spreading over the west portion during the night and Friday. Variable cloudiness will prevail Friday with a few showers over the east portion.

The weekend is expected to bring partly cloudy skies with a chance of showers Sunday and near the coast Monday.

The Liberal Arts Also Required Of New Engineers

EDITOR'S NOTE — You can't just want to be an engineer at Worcester Poly. You have to want to know people and to solve human problems. You also have to study liberal arts and learn to be independent. The belief is that technology is better learned from experience than from textbooks full of facts.

By DANIEL Q. HANEY
Associated Press Writer
WORCESTER, Mass. (AP) — The engineer is the sort who sets out to build a better mousetrap. But engineering students at Worcester Polytechnic Institute are trained to consider the mouse.

In short, WPI has a new concept on how to train engineers for a creative life in a new America. Graduates are called "technological humanists."

A typical WPI student might design a scale for weighing bed-ridden patients, or find a way to reduce the lighting bill on a government building, or design a series of miniparks for a town.

The theory behind all this is simple: design a world to fit people.

"We felt there must be a better way of teaching engineering and science than simply teaching courses," says Dean William R. Grogan. "Courses are a fine way of learning, but we felt that didn't go far enough because it doesn't bring people into a situation where they put together a total experience."

In the old days, he said, the school told students what courses to take. "Then upon graduation they were expected to assume full responsibility for planning a lifetime of learning. We thought that should start earlier, so we put the responsibility for planning their educational programs in the hands of the students."

The result is a new breed of engineers. They come expecting to master electronics and physics, chemistry and computers, the tools the engineer needs. But at this Victorian hilltop campus that is the point of departure.

They encounter a blend of science and liberal arts and independent adventure. There are no required courses and no grades, only a conviction that young men and women learn best when they're free to chart their own educations.

They call it "The Plan." And people here are convinced it works.

The program, begun in 1970, was WPI's answer to student protests in the 1960s over traditional education. The school began phasing out step-by-step methods of teaching in favor of molding graduates who can learn on their own, tackle engineering problems like professionals and understand how their work will affect people. This year, all 2,300 undergraduate students are on The Plan.

"This is a modern version of the liberal education," said President George W. Hazzard, who came to Worcester nine years ago when educators began talking about a radical new way of teaching engineering. "We have a technological society, and you can't be liberalized unless you understand it."

There are three basic requirements at WPI: an interactive qualifying project, a sufficiency project and a project directly relating to a student's chosen field.

In the interactive qualifying project, students must do work that uses their engineering skills to solve social problems. Peter Kent, a material science major from Sarasota, Fla., produced an eight-minute slide show explaining to hikers in the White Mountains National Forest how overuse can harm the wilderness.

Two students wrote a booklet for the federal government on how packaging contributes to the price of food.

The sufficiency project amounts to a minor in the humanities. Students take courses in one field, such as history or literature, then write a paper. Claire L. Chance, an electrical engineering major from Gardner, Mass., is studying the writings of James Joyce. Paul Wrable, a mechanical engineering student from Windsor Locks, Conn., is writing about the culture of the Russian Cossacks.

Projects relating to a student's major field often involve solving problems for companies in the Worcester area.

"We ask for back burner problems," says Dean Grogan. "These are real problems, not ones that won't drive the company out of business if they aren't solved."

Wiebe Postema, a civil engineering major from Wayland, Mass., worked out equations for the Association of American Railroads that are used for designing tracks.

Dennis Kelly, a mechanical engineering student from Brockton, Mass., designed a new loom shuttle for Crompton and Knowles, a textile firm.

Other students have built an electronic piano tuner, designed a computer security system, found how an alloy strengthens eyeglass frames and worked on converting carbon dioxide to sugar for astronauts to use.

Finally, to make sure all three programs have worked, there is a week of written and oral exams to test their knowledge of engineering.

Even though traditional courses are not required, students take them.

"As a practical matter, a student must get a background in math, physics and chemistry, because you have to build fundamental knowledge," Grogan says. "But the emphasis is different. The student takes the course not because it's required but because it will lead him to qualification in his field."

Students seem enthusiastic about The Plan. Some say they work on major projects impresses recruiters when they job hunt. Others say the freedom to plan their education makes them work harder.

"Under a system where courses are required, I would have passed them but I wouldn't have learned much," says Richard D. Bourgault, an electrical engineering major from Worcester. "Now I'm learning what I need to know, and I'm liking it."

"When you graduate you're going to be an engineer, not just a student graduating from an engineering school," says Anne Wynne, an electrical engineering major from Northboro, Mass. "We have to work on our own and survive. By the time we graduate, we can call ourselves engineers. There's no culture shock."

One criticism of The Plan is that students may ignore important areas of engineering.

Says President Hazzard: "Sure there may be gaps, but they have the tools to fill those gaps on their own. People forget facts very quickly. We believe that people can learn the facts as they need them to solve problems."

Builders Hold Meet

The Greenville Home Builders Association held its monthly meeting Tuesday night at the Candlewick Inn with the organization's president, Mark Tipton, presiding.

Guest speakers for the meeting were Alton Warren and Bob Smith of the city's Inspection Department.

The speakers discussed revisions in the state building codes and Smith emphasized insulation standards and inspection requirements for new construction.

It was explained that minimum insulation standards, which went in effect Jan. 1 call for R-19 resistance factor in ceilings and R-11 for walls and floors.

The insulation standards apply to new construction, according to the spokesmen. It was also noted that an insulation permit is now necessary for the installation of new insulation or re-insulation in existing housing.

The association members discussed plans for the Parade of Homes scheduled this year for Mother's Day weekend, May 13 and 14.

Sierra Club To Meet Jan. 9

A meeting of the Greenville chapter of the Sierra Club will take place at 8 p.m. Monday, Jan. 9 in the basement of the First Presbyterian Church, corner of 14th and Elm Streets.

Speaker for the evening will be Steve Benton, geologist in charge of the Environmental Education Program, East Carolina University. He will present a slide show of flora and fauna.

Members of the club are also planning an outing to the Croatan National Forest south of New Bern on Saturday, Jan. 15.

The public is invited to attend the Monday meeting and to get more details of the planned Croatan outing.

Concert By A Singing Group

The Singing Masters from Pennsylvania will be in concert at Faith Assembly of God on Friday and Saturday, Jan. 14, beginning at 7:30 p.m.

On Saturday night, there will also be a Pamlico Section Assemblies of God Youth Rally. Guest speaker will be the Rev. Spud DeMent, national youth director.

The pastor, the Rev. Steve R. Jones, invites the public to attend these services at their new location on the corner of Stantonburg and Allen Roads.

Crocodile Farm Is For Skins

BANGKOK, Thailand (UPI) — One of the world's largest crocodile farms is within taxi reach of Bangkok.

The farm at Samut Prakarn claims to have 10,000 crocodiles, most of them small and almost all raised just for their skins.

There are a few others, including an 18-foot monster, for display and a crocodile-wrestling show that all is part of the $2 admission.
