

Sinai Towns Complicate Peace Hopes

By The Associated Press

Prime Minister Menahem Begin says the Jewish settlements in the Sinai Peninsula must remain, but Egypt's foreign minister says they must go.

"The Israelis do not burn settlements. They build settlements and keep them," Begin told a meeting of right-wing supporters in Tel Aviv Sunday, referring to President Anwar Sadat's demand that Israel dismantle the 20 settlements it established on the northern and southeastern coasts of the territory captured from Egypt in the 1967 Arab-Israeli war.

Earlier Sunday, the Israeli cabinet rejected plans to establish new communities in Sinai but voted to expand the existing ones by putting more acreage under cultivation and moving in more settlers. However, the Jewish Agency, which helps plan the communities, said a decision was made four months ago to build four new outposts in northern Sinai, and work on them began four weeks ago.

Begin said Israel may withdraw its offer to return the occupied peninsula to Egypt and may demand a change in its Sinai borders if Sadat continues to demand that all Jewish settlers pull out. He did not elaborate, but he apparently meant Israel would try to extend its territory to include the settlements.

Egyptian Foreign Minister Mohamed Ibrahim Kamel said Egypt "will keep insisting on total Israeli troop withdrawal from occupied Arab lands and dismantling of Jewish settlements."

"It is astonishing that such statements come out of Israel before the joint Egyptian-Israeli political and military committees begin their meetings," he said.

Other Egyptian Foreign Ministry officials said they viewed Begin's remarks as an attempt to strengthen his bargaining position in the coming negotiations. The military talks start Wednesday in Cairo and the political ones Jan. 16 in Jerusalem.

Egyptian Vice President Hosni Mubarak said Egypt "would not accept any arguments over total withdrawal from Sinai."

"Giving up a single inch of Egyptian territory will not lead to establishing peace in the Middle East," he added.

Zbigniew Brzezinski, President Carter's national security adviser, said in an interview on CBS-TV's "Face The Nation" that "really remarkable" progress toward peace in the Middle East was made in 1977. But he said "complicated, frequently painful" negotiations lie ahead even if the Arabs and Israelis agree in principle on the broad outlines of a peace agreement.

Oil Import Fee Is Re-Raised

By RICHARD E. MEYER

Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Carter, who has won a new commitment from the head of the Senate energy committee for "a whole new effort" to break the impasse on energy legislation, is nonetheless renewing his threat to impose oil import fees if Congress fails.

Energy Secretary James Schlesinger met with Carter on the eve of the secretary's departure today to Morocco and Saudi Arabia for discussions on energy and development. A Schlesinger spokesman said oil prices are likely to come up.

Schlesinger heard from Carter about his talks with Saudi leaders during his recent overseas trip. In turn, Schlesinger told the president about a meeting he had Friday with committee Chairman Henry M. Jackson, a key figure in the congressional impasse.

"Sen. Jackson told me to report to the president that he and his colleagues will make a whole new effort to end this impasse," Schlesinger told reporters, referring to a deadlock on whether to end the ceiling on natural gas prices.

Because of that deadlock, Congress went home last month without completing action on the president's energy package. Carter has placed the energy legislation at the top of his agenda when members of the House and Senate return to work Jan. 19.

damaging the value of the dollar.

The dollar has been sinking recently on foreign exchanges.

Carter said the Saudis, French and Iranians think "excessive energy imports are the main problem."

Schlesinger said the president found "perplexity and disappointment" among foreign leaders on his recent trip because "we have not as yet produced an energy bill." He said Carter promised to take administrative action if Congress failed.

"It was quite reassuring to those leaders," Schlesinger said.

Asked what the action might be, the secretary said it includes "the possibility of import fees."

The administration has said before that it might impose import fees. But it has never specified the amount of the fees. And government officials have said they would prefer not to impose them, citing the difficulty of administering them.

"We continue to be reasonably confident that Congress will take the necessary steps and that it will not be necessary to impose import fees," Schlesinger said. He added that the administration has set no time to decide whether to take action.

In the next few months we should have a better feel of when Congress will act, he said, adding: "it's very difficult to see final action by Congress before the end of February or the beginning of March."

Awaits Test Critics

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) - Gov. Jim Hunt says he expects heavy criticism from parents of children who fail the new high school competency tests, but he will take the criticism because he believes in the tests.

"The results of the competency tests aren't simply a measure of how the kids did; it's a measure of how we did," Hunt said in an interview with the News and Observer of Raleigh.

"If a child fails who's got the ability to do it, then I've failed as governor, the legislature has failed, the county board of commissioners has failed, the school board has failed, the school system has failed and the parents have failed," he said.

Hunt was referring to tests which all high school juniors must pass next year in order to graduate. If they fail it as juniors, they must take part in remedial courses and try again as seniors.

"I want all North Carolinians to understand how vital this is," Hunt said. "This is a process of us disciplining ourselves. The system now knows it has to work. The teachers know it, the principals know it, the superintendents, the school boards, the parents. It's a whole new ball game."

Hunt said the tests might mean the state would have to commit more funds to education for remedial programs to bring failing students up to levels at which they could pass the tests. But he said in the long run that education in the state will improve.

"You're not going to have county commissioners and legislators failing to give the support we have to have if they know it's going to be reflected in kids not being able to graduate," he said.

"We're going to be far more likely to do what we ought to have been doing all along if we know we are going to be held accountable."

Misfired

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) - A man walking his dogs found two 16-inch, U.S.-made, ground-to-air missiles aimed at the Israeli Embassy from a wall 164 feet away Sunday. Army experts blew them up in a park.

Investigators said the missiles were plugged to a makeshift battery detonator and fitted to a stand. But apparently the detonator failed and the terrorists fled.

Court Gag Order Review Refused

By RICHARD CARELLI Associated Press Writer WASHINGTON (AP) -

The Supreme Court today refused to review an order by a federal trial judge in South Carolina barring all participants in the much-publicized criminal trial of a state senator from talking to news reporters.

The justices turned down an appeal by a group of news organizations that contended the so-called "gag order" issued by U.S. District Judge J. Robert Martin Jr. in the trial of J. Ralph Gasque was an infringement of free-press rights.

The news organizations told the justices that many judges are using such orders to get around a 1976 Supreme Court ruling that judges almost never are justified in restraining reporters from publishing or broadcasting information gathered in open court, another gender of gag orders.

"Throughout the nation, trial courts increasingly are resorting to methods that indirectly achieve what could directly be accomplished only by satisfying the rigorous and perhaps insuperable standards" of the 1976 decision, lawyers for the news organizations said.

Gasque was a state senator indicted in 1976 with two co-defendants on charges of defrauding the federal government by misusing manpower funds.

He was not re-elected after his indictment, and contended that the indictment was "politically motivated." Gasque was convicted.

Before the trial had begun, Judge Martin placed specific prohibitions on all lawyers, witnesses, jurors and others connected with the proceedings.

His order banned them from making "extra-judicial statements which might divulge prejudicial matter not of public record," and from "mingling" with reporters and photographers in and around the courthouse.

It also prohibited release of the names and addresses of prospective jurors and prohibited witnesses from giving "news interviews."

Various news organizations and individual reporters challenged Martin's order but were unsuccessful before the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals and the Supreme

Miner Caravan Hopes To Slow Non-Union Coal

By The Associated Press

Hoping to further crimp non-union coal production, striking miners from West Virginia and Ohio plan to drive in a caravan into the eastern Kentucky area where a retired miner was shot and killed.

The miners were to meet today in Middleport, Ohio, and drive to Prestonsburg, Ky., arriving after an afternoon funeral for Mack Lewis, who was shot Friday near a picket line at a Diamond Coal Co. mine.

Police have charged an off-duty company watchman, Ralph Anderson, with murder. They said they doubt the slaying was linked to the nationwide strike by 160,000 members of the United Mine Workers union, which entered its 35th day today.

Contract talks in Washington between the UMW and the Bituminous Coal Operators Association have broken off.

Kentucky state police said they are adopting a wait-and-see attitude towards the caravan. But troopers in Alabama said they were preparing for possible violence at non-union coal mines planning to open today.

"Knowing there is a chance of a problem, we are here to protect lives and property," said Lt. Roy Smith, a state police spokesman.

In Indiana, papers were to be filed in Spencer Circuit Court in connection with gunfire and vandalism Saturday in Rockport and Boonville.

State police arrested 194 men after the B&M loading dock in Rockport was stormed by 400 to 500 men Saturday night, causing about $800,000 in damage. No one was injured. One of the men was arrested on a weapons charge.

In Boonville, a fire at the Dale Bland Trucking Co. Sunday destroyed six coal trucks and caused about $375,000 in damage. No one was hurt.

Damage By Wind

Area residents may have been somewhat confused by Mother Nature's combination of strong winds last night followed by snow this morning.

The snow which ended early in the day did not cause difficulties for local residents, but according to Mayo Allen of the Public Works Department, last night's gusty winds did lead to some problems.

"A couple of trees blew down and there was some debris in the streets," said Allen.

He added that there was little damage caused by the wind, but that city workers cleaning the streets of branches had reported several television antennae had blown down during the night.

Allen noted that the light snow did not hinder the job of clearing the streets of debris.

Today's 8 a.m. temperature reading at the Greenville Utilities was 38 degrees. Yesterday's reported high was 70 degrees with a low of 42 degrees.

HOME BURNED

"Of material things, all I have left in the world is a '61 pickup truck," says Marie Nalley, whose rented trailer burned the day after Christmas.

The trailer was located on the Old Sumrell farm about three miles from Ayden. Marie and her sons, Ken, five, and Charlie, three, were away from home at the time. They are staying with Marie's mother now, but are seeking a place to live if they are able to accumulate enough household items to set up housekeeping once again.

Ken wears Size 7 slim and a nine and a half shoe. Charlie wears Size 4 and an eight and a half shoe. Their mother wears size 12 and an eight and a half to nine shoe.

Marie's mother's phone number, where inquiries about needs may be made, is 746-2198. Her mailing address is Rt. 1, Box 260, Ayden, N.C. 28513. She will pick up any items donated on her pickup truck. The Salvation Army will also accept gifts for the family. Those leaving gifts at the Salvation Army headquarters should specify that they are for the Nalley family. Items that cannot be used by the Nalleys will be donated to the Salvation Army for the use of others.

Vietnam-Cambodian Claims Becloud Fighting

By NEAL ULEVICH Associated Press Writer BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) -

Cambodia claims its forces have regained control of the Parrot's Beak salient on the Vietnamese border, but Vietnam denied the claim and accused Cambodia of attacks at widely separated points on the Vietnamese side of the border.

Intelligence officials who are considered the best sources of information on the fighting between the two Communist neighbors said they could not assess the accuracy of the rival claims yet. Battle reports by both Radio Phnom Penh and Radio Hanoi are usually one-sided and inflated.

Cambodia claimed its forces "liberated" Svay Rieng province, the Parrot's Beak area through which the United States invaded Cambodia in 1970. Radio Hanoi said the claim was "fabricated."

Hanoi accused the Cambodians of attacking Vietnamese farms and outposts in the Mekong Delta, in areas around the Parrot's Beak and in Ha Tien Province, where the border reaches the sea.

"Cambodia must withdraw without delay all its armed forces from Vietnamese territory and enter at an early date into negotiations to settle the border problem between the two countries," Hanoi said.

Cambodia and Vietnam are traditional enemies and have been clashing along their 750-mile border since the Communist victories in the two countries in 1975. But the fighting escalated in the last months of 1977. Intelligence sources in Bangkok believe the Vietnamese have occupied most of all of the Parrot's Beak and possibly advanced as far as the Mekong River town of Neak Luong, 35 miles from Phnom Penh.

Western analysts doubt Cambodia's claims of battlefield successes and say Vietnam's vastly superior war machine would maul Cambodian forces in any major campaign.

Radio Phnom Penh also broadcast a letter it said was written by Prince Norodom Sihanouk, the former chief of state, which said: "We have the greatest satisfaction... in the historic great victory won by our heroic revolutionary army... over the aggressor Vietnamese forces and lackeys."

Sihanouk and his family are believed to be under house arrest in Phnom Penh. It was the second broadcast statement of support for the Communist government attributed to the prince since Cambodia and Vietnam began publicizing their war.

In Washington, President Carter's national security adviser, Zbigniew Brzezinski, told reporters he found the border conflict "very interesting" because it was "the first case of a proxy war between China and the Soviet Union."

"The Vietnamese are, clearly, supported by the Soviets, politically and militarily," he said, "and the Cambodians are supported politically and perhaps militarily by the Chinese."

But Brzezinski said he had no information that Russian or Chinese advisers were in the field with the troops.

'Airquakes' No New Mystery

By CAROLE FELDMAN
Associated Press Writer

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — Mysterious airquakes recently felt along the New Jersey and South Carolina coasts almost coincide with extremes in the lunar orbit, says the coordinator of a group investigating unexplained phenomenon.

William Wagner, an electrical engineer and coordinator of Vestigia, said Saturday the booms have occurred within five days of the apogee and perigee of the lunar orbit. The peaks, he added, occur every 14 days.

"It's a curiosity we are looking at," Wagner said.

The group, originally formed by scientists, engineers and laymen to investigate the Big Foot phenomenon, has asked North Carolina, Virginia, Maryland and Delaware residents who have heard the booms to contact their Dover office.

"We are trying to determine if there were two specific locations or if they were felt in the entire region," he said. "A pattern is emerging. It appears that there were two specific locations."

"What has happened off the coast is not a single isolated incident," Wagner noted. "This type of boom has been reported many times in history. We think these will continue to happen again."

The series of booms were reported off the coast of Toms River on Dec. 2, 21 and 22 and off the coast off the South Carolina coast Dec. 10.

The history of similar high-altitude booms was detailed in a congressional report that was released Sunday by Sen. Harris A. Williams, D-N.J.

The Congressional Research Service of the Library of Congress reported that similar phenomena were recorded as early as 1890 in India, Scotland, Australia, New York and Connecticut, Williams said in a statement released by his Washington office.

Strange explosive sounds resembling cannon fire were detailed in "Nature Magazine" prior to 1900, Williams said. "These sounds were called Barisal Guns, named for Barisal located in the Ganges River delta of India."

He said other papers were published describing the sounds in Australia and episodes of other mysterious explosions were reported around Seneca Lake in New York and East Haddam, Conn.

"The authors of these papers seemed to feel the atmospheric disturbances were in some way related to seismic phenomena, like rock surfaces shearing along the point of weakness in the earth's crust," Williams said. "However, no one agrees on the precise cause of any of these previous noises."

The senator urged "all concerned federal agencies to do everything they can to provide answers to those who are puzzled and worried about these strange noises."

Predict 'More Selective' Consumers

By MICHAEL DOAN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Consumers will shop more selectively this year as they spend more and more of their earnings on fuel, the federal government predicts.

The rising costs of home heating and running a car may cut into sales of new clothes and autos first, the Commerce Department's annual industrial outlook, released Sunday, indicates.

The department said "high energy costs that absorb an ever-growing share of disposable income have already had a sobering effect on many Americans."

"Recent small annual sales gains for apparel stores and more conservative clothing purchase patterns may mean similar restraints later in other sales areas," the report said.

Shoppers increased their clothing budgets an average of only 5 percent last year, although spending 10 percent more on retail purchases in general, the report said.

For 1978, the report predicted clothing expenses will rise an average 6 percent, matching the projected growth in retail prices. Retail sales in general are expected to rise 10 percent this year.

As for cars, it said "higher energy costs and continuing inflation are expected to cause consumers to allocate larger portions of their incomes to less discretionary purchases than automobiles."

While other industries are expected to show bigger production gains, the auto industry should grow only about 2 percent after inflation per year through 1982, the report said.

This year, auto and truck sales should decline to 14.5 million vehicles from 1977's record 15 million, it said.

Falling used car prices have raised the cost of new cars by decreasing the motorist's trade-in value for his present automobile, the report said.

In its section on retail trade, the report said rising gasoline costs may mean Americans will be less inclined to travel from shopping center to shopping center in search of a bargain.

"The typical customer is a more practical shopper who no longer regards shopping as an enjoyable experience," wrote Marvin J. Margulies, a consumer goods specialist.

"The longer term outlook envisions a quality-conscious consumer, with greater financial demands made on personal income and major buying decisions subjected to more stringent examination than ever before," he said.

Clothing merchants suffered last year "with blue jeans price wars, import restrictions, Tris-treated sleepwear, adverse weather, an often casually dressed president and slow-moving merchandise."

Although men's vested suits and tailored clothing are selling well, the report said, retailers are finding the leisure suit is losing its popularity.

In women's clothing, sales were weak last year, partly because there was little fashion innovation.

Possible Reversal Of Sterilization Surgery

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Women who have had themselves sterilized and later changed their minds now have greater hope of becoming pregnant again, according to doctors at North Carolina Memorial Hospital.

Dr. Gary Berger says doctors are performing operations with high-powered microscopes that dramatically increase chances of successfully reversing the sterilization procedure, compared with conventional techniques.

Berger said research on animals involving delicate stitching of severed fallopian tubes have been successfully applied to humans. The fallopian tubes connect the uterus with the ovaries. They are cut during sterilization.

Berger, assistant professor of obstetrics and gynecology at the University of North Carolina Medical School, said preliminary results "show very substantial improvement" in the chances a sterilized woman can have children again.

Women who have lost a child or who want children by a new husband have expressed desires for such surgery. The hospital team has performed six operations since the first of July, but Berger said it's still too early to determine their success.

Berger said about 750,000 sterilizations are done annually, about half of those on women. Statistics offered by Planned Parenthood say sterilizations now rival birth control pills as a means of birth control.

In the operation, surgeons use the microscope to manipulate delicate tools to stitch the break, which is too small for ordinary surgical techniques.

The tube is about three-sixteenths to one-fourth of an inch wide, and is magnified to 40 times its normal size. The needle that pulls the thread is only one-fourth of an inch long and barely visible.

Berger said reports have shown microsurgery reversals to be 60 percent successful, compared to 18 percent when the break was stitched by doctors using only the naked eye.

"The big problem in doing surgery on the fallopian tube is that the body reacts to trauma," Berger said. The trauma of the operation may create fibrous bands of scar tissue so thick the tube won't function even when sewn together, he said.

Berger says the only way to correct such problems is improve surgical technique. So far, he said, microsurgery seems to produce less damage to the tubes.

Utilities Scorn An 'Old Charge'

By The Associated Press

North Carolina utility officials reacted with scorn to charges by an environmental group that the nation's 100 largest utilities were charging their customers for income taxes the utilities never really paid.

"This is the same tired old charge they make every year and it has no merit," said Albert L. Morris, vice president for corporate communications at Carolina Power and Light Co.

"This statement by the Environmental Action Foundation is not new," said Dick Pierce, a spokesman for Duke Power Co. "Similar ones have been made in years past."

The foundation said that the utilities had based their billings to customers on income taxes they owed of $2.5 billion but had actually paid only about $375 million for 1976.

Morris said the figures may have been accurate, but the taxes weren't paid because they were withheld to be used for expansion under a federal tax law that permits the payments to be deferred.

"It's to stimulate creation of jobs and expand the economy," Morris said. "We use the money to expand. If we didn't comply with this law and take advantage of it, the cost to our consumers would be greater in the long run."

Morris explained that the law permits utilities and other businesses to accelerate the depreciation deductions they take for equipment. Eventually, he said, the taxes are paid, but in the meantime the utilities can use the money for purposes that would otherwise require additional sales of stocks and bonds.

The environmental group said Duke and CP&L were in the top ten overchargers. Duke allegedly overbilled $126 million for 1976 and CP&L $80 million.

"Duke Power Co. has followed all laws concerning us... as we understand them, and we will continue to do so," Pierce said.

Crosses For Old Graves

MADISON, Ga. (AP) — Seventy-six Confederate soldiers lay buried in unmarked graves in the city cemetery for more than a century, but now, a white cross will be erected over each plot. Even so, half of the crosses will bear no name.

No one knew about the graves until four years ago, when a faded piece of paper was found behind a filing cabinet at the Morgan County Courthouse.

The Georgia State Archives in Atlanta verified that the slip of paper listed 76 grave locations in the city cemetery.

The National Cemetery System of the Veteran's Administration has already provided markers for the graves, 33 of which have been identified.

But members of the Long Street Camp of the Sons of Confederate Veterans still have a problem in finishing their grave-marking project.

The organization's commander, Willis J. Nolan, said members cannot afford to put up the 76 markers, even though they are busy with several money-raising programs. But Nolan said he expects the needed $800 to be raised in a short time.

Simple white crosses with no names will be placed over the unidentified graves.

LWV Planning Meet Tuesday

The League of Women Voters of Greenville-Pitt County will hold a planning meeting for the national program at the home of Mary and Pat Daugherty, 2009 E. Fifth Street, Tuesday evening.

The purpose of this meeting is to obtain "grass roots" input from members. This open meeting will be held as a forum at which members may express suggestions as to which study items to initiate, drop, continue or expend at the national level. Recommendations will be presented for adoption at the national convention in Cincinnati in April.

All members are urged to attend.

Guitar Lessons Begin Jan. 12

The Greenville Recreation and Parks Department along with Billy Stinson will begin guitar lessons starting Thursday, Jan. 12.

Three levels of guitar will be taught. Guitar I will begin at 7 p.m., Guitar II at 8 p.m., and Guitar III at 9 p.m. Each level of guitar will meet for 45-minute sessions each Thursday for 10 consecutive weeks. These are group lessons but class size is limited.

The cost is $2.50 per lesson or $25.00 for the 10-week session. Class meets in room 125 of J.H. Rose High School.

All interested persons are asked to call the Greenville Recreation and Parks Department at 752-4137, ext. 251 or Billy Stinson at 756-7155.

'Early Bird' Class Begun

An Early Bird class for expectant parents will be held Monday, Jan. 9, at 8:30 p.m. at 229 Churchill Drive.

There will be no charge for this class which is designed especially for early pregnancy. However, expectant mothers in their third trimester may also find it helpful.

A film, "Childbirth for the Joy of It," will be shown, followed by a question-and-answer period. The film shows five couples who have attended classes in Husband-Coached Childbirth or the Bradley Method.

Professionals interested in learning more about this method of prepared natural childbirth are also welcome to attend. This method is based on a book by Robert Bradley, M.D., a Denver obstetrician for over 20 years. His book, Husband-Coached Childbirth, is available at Sheppard Memorial Library.

Parents interested in attending this free Early Bird class or who would like to register for weekly Bradley classes, may call Mike or Judy Beckert at 756-4197. Weekly classes are limited to six couples and begin with the sixth month of pregnancy.

Local Students On Honor Roll

RALEIGH — Seventy-seven high school students have been named to the Honor Roll at St. Mary's College in Raleigh, a four-year intermediate college for women.

To be eligible for the Honor Roll, a student must maintain at least a "B" average.

Local students named were: Laura Cherry White, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Steven M. White; and Brenning Marie Cheatham, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James T. Cheatham. Both are from Greenville.

Bridge Awash, Cars In Creek

YANCEYVILLE, N.C. (AP)

Three cars were washed into Lynch Creek early today when creek waters covered a bridge along N.C. 86 near the Virginia line in Caswell County.

A sheriff's department spokesman said the cars were recovered and no one suffered serious injury.

Deputy Jerry Durham said the bridge was not washed out but that waters over the bridge caused the accidents before authorities could reach the scene and block off the highway. Durham said one woman was treated for minor injuries at a hospital and then released.

Speaking of Your Health...

Heart Disease Research Progress

Research in heart disease is a ceaseless, ongoing process. The effects are apparent by the statistics of the successes that are reported daily in hospitals and universities all over the world.

Hearts too young to die are being saved by the all-inclusive aspects of preventive medicine. Early diagnosis, followed by intensive treatment, is a major factor in the program designed for prolonging life.

Now, a valuable drug has been added to build the record of success. The drug, disopyramide phosphate, has been released for the control of severe interruptions of the normal rhythms of the heart.

Severe abnormal heartbeat, known as "ventricular arrhythmia," can now be better controlled with this new and effective drug. It is a valuable addition to the other drugs now available for the control of some life-threatening changes in the rhythm of the heart.

Ultrasoundic vibrations are sounds far beyond the capacity of the human ear. Many normal-hearing adults can hear sounds up to 20,000 cycles per second. Ultrasound, now used medically, employs sound frequencies as high as 15 million cycles per second.

The adaptation of ultrasonography dates to its use in World War II for tracking down submarines.

Important role in medicine in the diagnosis of difficult medical problems. Disease of the pancreas, gall stones, kidney stones, disease of the brain, tumors of the eye, ovarian cysts, disease of the breast, the inner workings of the heart, and even a "look into" the uterus of a pregnant woman are some of the possibilities for exploration with today's use of ultrasoundic vibrations.

"Seeing with ultrasound" is one of the truly great contributions of modern science.

The carelessness with which gonorrhea is considered has no relationship to the severe complications that can follow infection with this venereal disease.

Early treatment is the key to recovery. Penicillin and other antibiotics base their effectiveness on such early treatment. But antibiotics cannot combat the mass disease of carelessness.

At the University of Pittsburgh, research workers are actively involved in preparing a vaccine which promises to be of great value in stemming the tide of the epidemic disease of gonorrhea.

The experimental work will soon be safely translated to use in humans.

May Eliminate Pneumatic Tire

WASHINGTON (AP) — Cars of the future may ride on foam-filled tires that can be driven 50 to 100 miles after being punctured and then repaired, according to the National Geographic Society.

The tires, which are still being developed experimentally, will not only save money that otherwise would be spent on replacements, but will also mean more room in a trunk. The elimination of the weight of a spare tire will mean less strain on automobile engines, the society points out.

One type of puncture-proof tire is now used on some military vehicles. It is made of a rubber-impregnated steel mat containing about 80,000 wires. It is impervious even to a rifle bullet.

Widows Learn How To Cope

By JOY STILLEY
AP Newsfeatures Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Rae Lindsay had always thought of widows as gray-haired women who had lived their life and were left with money, the mortgage paid and grown children to help them — until she became a widow before the age of 40, with three children under age 10.

It was then, three years ago, that she learned that widows are also young women — one out of four is under 45 and one out of every six women over 21 is a widow — with very little money, and young children to raise.

"There are six million of us under 52 in the United States, and we have not only the emotional trauma to deal with, but often the real problem of putting food on the table when we're not equipped to work," Mrs. Lindsay said in an interview.

"I realized I was not in such a unique position; there were a lot of us out there," added the vivacious free-lance writer, who set out under two grants to learn how her counterparts over the country were coping.

"I interviewed nearly a hundred women, and found that all have emerged as stronger women than they were before," she says, "but it's terrible that their new identity and strength had to come through such tragedy."

"In the best position, of course, were the ones with jobs and no children," reports Mrs. Lindsay, who has written a book dealing with her findings and her own experiences, "Alone and Surviving: A Guide for Today's Widow." "In the worst situation were women with young children who had never worked at all."

Widows go through three stages, Mrs. Lindsay points out:

"Impact, or a state of shock in which you have not come to grips with your loss.

"Recoil, when you realize you're alone, with all the problems attendant on that new status, including settling the estate," as it's grandly called.

You not only have to work through your own grief but also have to help each of the kids deal with theirs.

"Recovery, when you're no longer just living on a day-to-day basis, no longer thinking of yourself as half a couple, but as an individual with a future, a new concept different from just being somebody's wife."

Many younger women today, she notes, not only will have had working experience but also think of themselves as individual beings, so in that sense they are better equipped to face widowhood.

Since three out of four married women will eventually become widows, Mrs. Lindsay urges that they, first of all, should make sure their husband has a will. Seven out of 10 husbands do not, she says, adding "When a man dies intestate it can be very hairy. My husband had no will. He was only 48 and we just never thought about it."

"Women over 35 should give up the idea that it's cute not to be able to balance a checkbook or know anything about finances," she adds.

"Watch out for the 'first year crazies.' Don't make any rash or drastic decisions; don't sell your home, or quit your job, and for heaven's sake don't get married again," she warns.

Mrs. Lindsay suggests that if the going gets rough in the early stages, it's wise to seek out a "rap group," and she emphasizes the importance of a job, which provides a good framework for activity from 9 to 5, and is also "socially rewarding."

Though widows and divorcees come from different directions, after a point they share many of the same problems. Their situations differ, though, Mrs. Lindsay says, because the divorcee has someone to be angry at — "a cleansing type of feeling." But even if the dead husband had not been the best of men, his widow "forgets about the warts and turns him into a saint."

"You can't just lop off a part of your life; it's healthy to talk about your husband, and talk with the children about their father. Look at photos; remember birthdays; never let them feel ashamed of the fact that their father's dead," says Mrs. Lindsay, whose children are now 13, 10 and 6.

"The older two would like for me to remarry for my own sake," she reports. "The little one would like me to get married to give him a father."

Recommended Books For A Cook's Club

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor
DEAR CECILY: Our cook-and-eat club, as a joint venture, wants to buy some of the food books published in 1977. At the end of 1978, we'll draw for them. We have some idea of what to choose, but we'd be interested in your recommendations. — GOURMET.

DEAR GOURMET: For the French scene, and I imagine your cooking club is at least partly involved with it, I propose two entries. One is "Paul Bocuse's French Cooking," by Paul Bocuse, France's famous chef and restaurateur (Panttheon, $20). It includes some recipes within the scope of a group of cooks willing to take the time to duplicate them. There are also elaborate creations that call for epicurean ingredients. I tasted Bocuse's most famous dish, Sea Bass in Pastry, at a dinner he gave in New York, and believe me, your club would enjoy it. Besides a generous offering of recipes and culinary advice, "French Cooking" has a stunning format. The other entry in the French category is "Le Notre's Desserts and Pastries" by Gaston Lenotre (Barron's, $15.95). The author, France's famous pastry chef, has a school for professional chefs and operates baking shops and a catering service as well as an elegant French restaurant. If the members of your club can master the basic recipes in Lenotre's book, they can go on to creating all the marvelous desserts whose recipes follow. The book's handsome color photographs and clear type are appropriate encouragement. By the way, at a recent tasting in New York, I had a chance to compare Lenotre's fruit tarts and chocolate eclairs with those of some French bakeries in New York. In my opinion Lenotre's pastries were the most outstanding because the tarts had the best fruit flavor and the eclairs had the best filling. However, it's only fair to say that the other bakers cater to American tastes.

Closer to home but still wide-ranging is "Craig Claiborne's Favorites from The New York Times, Volume 3," a compilation of the fabulous food journalist's 1976 columns (Times Books, $12.50). This combination of delectable recipes, interviews with chefs and cooks and comments on techniques and tools is worth having in one convenient volume.

Your club will want to consider acquiring "The Encyclopedia of Fish Cookery" by A. J. McClane with photography by Arie de Zanger (Holt, Rinehart and Winston, $35). It covers all worldwide fish and seafood varieties and methods of preparing and preserving them and has 350 recipes and almost 700 color photographs. I find it the best reference book on its subject, one that has become of increasing interest to American cooks. Because cooks need good tools, I must recommend "The International Cooks' Catalogue" (Random House, $19.95). Burton Wolf, Milton Glaser and James Beard, the men behind the original "Cooks' Catalogue," have now taken the whole world's cooking utensils for their province. Each entry is pictured and there's a scattering of illustrations from other times and some recipes throughout the book to egg on cooks to acquire and use some of the cooking equipment described.

Indispensable is what I call "The Complete Food Catalogue" by Jose Wilson and Arthur Leaman (Holt, Rinehart and Winston, $6.95 paper). Here are the mail-order sources a cook may need for certain foods of prime quality and for others that are not locally available. Some of the mail-order purveyors whose catalogs are listed supply cooking equipment, gadgets, books, and seeds and plants for growing vegetables and herbs, so this interestingly written and its format makes it easy to read. As a lagniappe, recipes, serving suggestions and tips are included. — C. B.

Epileptics Can Lead Normal Lives

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1978 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: Thank you for saying that "epilepsy is the only common disorder where the sufferer is more handicapped by the attitude of society than by his disability." I know it's true because I have lived with that problem for many years.

I am enclosing your column of June 18, 1968, which contains more helpful information about epilepsy than anything I've ever read. I hope you agree that it deserves a rerun.

ONE IN BROOKLYN

DEAR ONE: I do. And here it is.

DEAR ABBY: One day last week a little neighbor boy was here playing with my son. Fortunately I was present when the playmate had an epileptic seizure. I took him home and told his mother what had happened. Abby, she turned on me as if I had accused her child of some crime. She said, "What do you mean, EPILEPTIC? Once in a while he has a little fainting spell but he'll outgrow it. Besides, it can't be epilepsy because we have never had any insanity in our family!"

I tried to tell her that I knew an epileptic seizure when I saw one because my younger sister had had many. I also tried to tell her that it had nothing to do with "insanity," and with medication, epilepsy could be controlled. I even told her how happily married my sister is today. I did all I could to educate this woman, but she insisted she had no need for my explanations, so I left.

Abby, it seems incredible that we still have people who think epilepsy is something to be ashamed of. I hope you will print this letter with a few facts of your own to wake up people like my neighbor.

SYCAMORE LANE

DEAR SYCAMORE: The notion that epilepsy is something to be ashamed of dates back to biblical times, when illnesses that couldn't readily be diagnosed were attributed to witchcraft, insanity or the work of the "devil."

It is a safe estimate that about one out of every 100 Americans has epilepsy. The exact cause is not known, but it can be the result of prenatal influences, infectious diseases or brain damage.

Although the "tendency" toward it can be inherited, it is not considered a hereditary disorder. In recent years medication and drugs have become extremely effective in controlling epilepsy. With proper care, most epileptics are able to attend school, hold down a job, eventually marry, and live normal lives. I hope your neighbor sees this. For her sake, but especially for her son's.

CONFIDENTIAL TO "LOST FAITH" IN PAMPA, TEX.: Perhaps a lesson in "faith" can be best illustrated in this way:

A mother had just received word that her only son—a bright, handsome young man of 22—had been killed in the war. Her pastor tried vainly to console her in his grief. "Where was your God when my only son was killed?" she cried. "The same place He was when HIS only son was killed," the pastor quietly replied.

DEAR ABBY: I come from a family that is not in the habit of kissing all the time. We kiss goodbye for long trips, or for important occasions—weddings, graduations, etc. But that is all.

I married into a family that kisses each other every time one of them comes into a room.

I once remarked that I wasn't accustomed to so much kissing, and I hoped they didn't think me unfriendly or cold if I didn't kiss as much as they did, but apparently no one took me seriously.

When I enter a room and don't go around kissing the clan, they kiss ME! A light kiss on the cheek wouldn't kill me, but some of these people grab me and kiss me on the lips.

I don't want to hurt anyone's feelings, Abby, but I have had it up to here with all those wet kisses. How can I put a stop to it? (I've fibbed and said I had a cold, but that didn't stop them.)

NO KISSER

DEAR NO: Since this kissing issue is important to you, why not gather your courage and TELL them that you like them, but you're not the kissing kind. You're apt to be kissed off by a few, but would you really care?

DEAR ABBY: Ever since I was a small child, I've loved dogs. I'm 23, and I still love dogs.

My parents never cared for dogs, so I was never allowed to have one. I always dreamed of the day when I was grown and on my own so I could have a dog.

I've been happily married for a year, and my husband and I are renting an apartment upstairs from my parents. Would you believe it, they still refuse to let me have a dog? They won't even discuss it. No dogs on their property, period!

I feel bitter and angry, but there's nothing I can do except move, which would be foolish because we never could find a place as nice as this for what we're paying.

It's been a year now and I've built up a terrible resentment against my parents. Am I wrong to feel this way? Or are they wrong to continue to treat me like a child?

BITTER IN N.J.

DEAR BITTER: It's your parents' property, and if they don't want dogs it's their privilege. Don't take it personally. If you can't accept their decision with grace and maturity, move.

If you feel left out and lonely, or wish you knew how to get people to like you, my new booklet, "How To Be Popular; You're Never Too Young or Too Old," is for you. Send $1 along with a long, self-addressed, stamped (24 cents) envelope to Abby, 132 Lasky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.

WOMEN ON MOVE
CHICAGO (AP) — Moving industry jobs are increasingly opening up to women, reports the National Institute of Certified Moving Consultants, which says that women are becoming van drivers and packers, as well as moving consultants and traffic managers.

The Utah state legislature had the highest percentage of legislators from the field of education. Twenty-six percent of the state's lawmakers are professional educators.

Bridge Winners Announced

Mrs. B. V. Payne and Mrs. Raymond Martin were first place duplicate bridge winners at Planters Bank Wednesday morning.

Others who placed were Mrs. Eloise Gabbert and Mrs. Robert Perry, second; Mrs. Stuart Page and Mrs. Sidney Skinner, third.

Wednesday afternoon winners were: Mrs. M. L. Eason and Mrs. Robert Exum, first; Mrs. William Parvin and Claude Goodman, second; Mrs. Harold Forbes and Mrs. M. H. Bynum, third; Mrs. W. R. Harris and Dave Proctor, fourth.

Saturday afternoon winners at First Federal were:

North-South: Howard Shipley and Al Aversa, first; Mrs. Alice Johnson and Mrs. Ralph Pate, second; Mrs. Elizabeth Roque and Dr. Charles Duffy, third; Mrs. William Parvin and Mrs. Mavis Smith, fourth.

East-West: Mrs. Myrtle Johnson and Graham Lane, first; Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Webb, second; Mrs. L. D. Harris and Mrs. Clifton Toler, third; tied for fourth were Mrs. B. B. Sugg Jr. and Mrs. J. W. H. Roberts with Mrs. Effie Williams and Mrs. Robert Blenk.

Chapter Members Hear Speakers

The Greenville Alumnae Chapter of Delta Sigma Theta Sorority met with Soror Lillian Powell Saturday with 15 Sorors present.

Two were visitors, Debra Cherry and Paulette Dove. The president, Gladys Sanders, praised the group for their meaningful and successful December activities. "An Agenda for Change" was announced as the theme for the South Atlantic Region meeting to be held at the Greensboro Holiday Inn Four Seasons May 26 and 27.

Soror Rebecca Norcott reported on the "Miss College-Bound" schedule of activities.

It was announced that the Founder's Day celebration will be held in Goldsboro Jan. 21, with the Goldsboro chapter as hostesses.

Mrs. Bishop Chosen As Outstanding Member

Mrs. Jim Bishop has been awarded the 1977 Outstanding Clubwoman of the Year for the Junior Woman's Club of Greenville.

She previously served as second vice president and ways and means chairman for the club. She is currently serving as first vice president.

The guest speaker for the January meeting, held at Planters Bank, was Dr. Robert L. Dough. "Choosing Success for Your Life in 1978" was the topic of Dr. Dough's lecture. The speaker was introduced by Karen Collier.

Shelley Basnight, president, opened the meeting and welcomed members and invited guests. She also thanked Christmas party chairman, Nicki Brown, and her committee for the work on the club party in December.

Charleen Holloway, arts department chairman, reported on the local Arts Festival to be held Feb. 1 at Jarvis Memorial United Methodist Church. The District Arts Festival will be Feb. 25 in Williamston.

Members of ESA Gamma Delta Chapter met Thursday night at the home of Rubelle Goin.

Suzanne Leis and Frances Cassick gave the program and the topic was "The Handicap Learning Disability Child." They noted there is a law which enables the handicap child to have the same opportunity for an education as a normal child.

Carol Stevens is making plans for a bicycle ride in April.

Helen Sermons and Boots Barlow reported on the Christmas party given for the handicap children at Wahl-Coates and Aycock Schools. Fifty dollars was given to Social Services for handicap children.

The meeting was conducted by Hester Latham, vice president.

The Only Way, To Fight Back

The Department of Health, Education and Welfare's Office For Civil Rights has ordered the Pitt Board of Education to reemploy and reimburse a former library aide.

It was reported at last Tuesday's Board of Education meeting that the individual involved was pregnant and unwed when the dismissal took place.

School officials said the HEW office had informed them that they would have to pay the complainant back pay and place her in a similar position to the one she had before dismissal.

The board did something that every local agency should be doing with every HEW demand which it considers unreasonable. It voted to fight the ruling. It said it would not comply with the HEW request and would await further word from HEW.

Enforcement of its myriad regulations has been glaringly uneven by HEW. The huge government agency has constantly sought to usurp the authority of locally elected or appointed officials.

This is a kind of awesome authority that the giant federal agency doesn't — or should not — have. The only way to regain local control is to fight back.

In this case the Pitt Board of Education is doing just that, and that is commendable. If enough local boards and commissions do so, eventually HEW will be brought under control.

Energy Reduction Goal Worth Trying

The Pitt County Board of Education is asking for a $9,371.20 grant from N.C. energy conservation funds.

The money would be used to develop an energy management system designed to reduce energy consumption by 15 percent in the county schools.

Certainly such an energy reduction goal can be realized, and if it is, the grant funds will be well spent.

Exotic New Fish Dishes

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — A mechanical chewing machine at North Carolina State University is chomping away on some exotic new fish recipes these days.

The machine goes through meal after meal of experimental products, keeping careful records on graphs.

The object: testing new products in the test kitchen which should become available to shoppers in the supermarkets later this year.

According to Julie Bender, home economics editor of agricultural information at State's Agricultural Experiment Station, the researchers are being swamped with questions from companies interested in the new processing methods and products.

Fish have more protein than red meat, fewer calories than chicken, and can be served in countless ways.

Besides, the product is available in great quantities at low cost on the North Carolina coast.

A lot of fish are thrown away, or parts wasted.

Croaker, spot, mullet and bluefish—researchers are discovering—can be used for everything from fish jerky to fish bologna to seafood pizza.

Pizza

Schoolkids in Carteret County are already munching seafood pizza in the school lunch program. A major effort is underway to perfect a seafood hot dog, relying on the American adoption of that old-time favorite as a way to boost seafood consumption.

While the machine keeps a record of its work, human tasters also evaluate the recipes, testing for springiness, hardness, chewiness, gumminess, oiliness, and ease of swallowing. Flavor is defined in terms such as smokiness, sweetness, saltiness, spiciness, and fishiness.

Research shows, says Ms. Bender, that quality of the product depends on following strict preparation guidelines including stringent sanitation, rapid chilling at time of catch, and proper handling at the processing plant.

In 1976, more than 15 million pounds of croaker were landed in North Carolina. Fishermen got about 10 and one-half cents per pound. But that fish has remarkably high nutritional value.

NOBLITT

The answer is mechanical deboning flesh from the fish through a cooking process. Different temperatures produce different results, as do the flesh of different kinds of fish. Researchers are struggling to come up with a successful formula for producing fish flakes from the low-cost fish.

Flakes are used as extenders in more expensive seafood recipes using shrimp, crab, and clams, and in pizzas.

Already one firm is using the fish flakes in its deviled crabs, and another has bought a machine to begin production.

Scholarly dissertations and research reports dealing with the functional properties of fish tissues are just the first steps in seeking to boost the seafood industry in this state.

Record Year

Experts continue to predict tremendous growth. North Carolina has a wide variety of shell and fin fish along a coastline surpassed in length only by California, Texas, and Florida.

In 1976, more than 220 million pounds of seafood were docked in this state, with a value of $27.4 million. Retail value was estimated at a record $144 million; still far short of the potential billion-dollar industry.

Intense interest in seafood has developed in the past 10 to 15 years, and the Sea Grant program at N.C. State is conducting a variety of research projects in addition to recipe testing. Studies of marshlands, food chains, marine pathogens, product uses, erosion, waste disposal, environmental issues, marketing, disease control, and fishing methods, techniques, and equipment.

What They Didn't Say

WASHINGTON — The year 1977 wasn't the best of times or the worst of times. But as we look back, it could have been a lot different if, for example:

President Sadat told Prime Minister Begin he would like to come to Jerusalem, and Begin had replied, "I'm sorry, but I have to play golf this weekend."

Ronald Reagan had told the Young Republicans, "We don't need the Panama Canal and we don't have rights to it. I say, give it back to the Panamanians we've exploited for so many years."

Billy Carter had told an agent in Nashville, "It would be undignified for me to exploit my relationship with my brother and make money just because I'm related to the President of the United States."

Jackie Onassis had told her lawyers, "I don't need or want $20 million from the Onassis estate. I'm doing just fine on the $200 a week I get paid from Viking Press."

The engineer at Consolidated Edison had said to himself, "My God, we're getting overloaded. Maybe I better pull a switch or New York will be blacked out."

Jimmy Carter had told Ham Jordan, "I know Barbara Walters' party for Israeli Ambassador Diniz and Egyptian Ambassador Ghorbal is important, but I wish you'd stay here tonight and help me finish off this bottle of Scotch."

Bert Lance had said to his wife, "I don't care what your checking account looks like. I will not permit overdrafts. What kind of bank do you think I'm running?"

HEW Secretary Joseph Califano had told his aides, "I won't need a personal chef. I'm on a diet."

ART BUCHWALD

David Frost had said to Richard Nixon, "I could do the interviews and we'd make over a million dollars on it — but it would be wrong."

The head of Twentieth Century-Fox had said, "Star Wars" as a movie doesn't make any sense, and it would be a mistake for us to release it."

Steve Cauthen's mother had said to him, "What do you mean you want to be jockey? You're going to go to school and learn a trade."

Billy Martin had said to Reggie Jackson, "I'd rather not use you in the World Series. I need some heavy hitters."

Margaret Trudeau had said to Pierre, "The Rolling Stones have invited me to join them in New York, but I'd rather stay here and watch you answer questions in Parliament."

Anita Bryant had told her husband, "I don't care what people do with their sex lives as long as they drink Florida orange juice."

Larry Flynt had said to Ruth Carter Stapleton, the President's evangelical sister, "Are you out of your mind?"

A General Motors lawyer had told the head of the Oldsmobile and Buick divisions, "You can't put a Chevrolet motor in your cars. Somebody is bound to find out about it."

Cornelia had said to her husband, Gov. Wallace, "I found out you tapped my telephone line, opened my mail and had me followed. Don't you think we ought to see a marriage counselor?"

Moped Safety Raised

By LOUISE COOK

Associated Press Writer
Thousands of moped owners are put-putting along the nation's roads and concern is growing over the safety of the motorized vehicles and their riders.

As of late last year, 32 states and the District of Columbia had instituted regulations specifically governing the use of mopeds. The Department of Commerce says, however, that most of the states have no insurance or safety requirements. Only about half require vehicle registration.

The state regulations generally limit moped speeds to 20 or 30 mph; Hawaii and Maryland have set no maximum, according to the Insurance Institute for Highway Safety. Minimum age requirements range from 12 to 16 years. Some states require operators to hold a valid driver's license or learner's permit; others do not. Only one state — New York — has a helmet-use law, the institute says.

"Safety experts are concerned about potential problems when there is a sudden influx of young 'mopedists' into the traffic stream," said Kenneth Licht, manager of the school and college department of the National Safety Council.

Writing in a council publication, Licht added: "These youngsters may have absolutely no knowledge of the rules of the road, will probably be totally inexperienced in the operation of a powered vehicle in traffic, will probably have had only minimal — if any — driving instruction from the dealer, and will not even be required to wear a helmet to protect themselves from their own inexperience and youthful exuberance."

Statistics on moped accidents are not available because the devices have not been in use long enough and because different states record moped accidents in different categories.

Meanwhile, the safety council has some basic suggestions for anyone who is considering a moped. Among them:

—Insist on detailed instructions from the seller. Practice riding the moped in an off-

THE INSIDE REPORT

Succeeding Arthur Burns

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — After a strong first blush of delight in the business world that President Carter had not named some fuzzy-minded economist to replace Arthur Burns as the nation's central banker, sober second thoughts about G. William Miller began to form.

Businessmen accept the fact that as chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, business tycoon Miller will be less independent than Burns — indeed, will take part in Carter administration policymaking. What worries them is that this change in role may be matched by a change in policy.

Certainly, the impression conveyed by the White House of Bill Miller as some kind of a younger Arthur Burns is contradicted by the political reasons for the change. Mr. Carter replaced Burns as chairman at the risk of further undercutting shaky business confidence throughout the nation and the world in order to satisfy important political constituencies. That makes nonsense out of perpetuating Burnsism-without-Burns at the Fed.

Exhibit No. 1 for the contention that Miller does not spell Burns is an article by Miller in the Oct. 5, 1974, edition of Business Week. Studied by the President's men before Miller's selection, the article proposes wide-ranging government action to induce anti-inflationary conduct by the public. That suggests the faith in governmental problem-solving characteristic of the administration.

One suggestion in particular would chill bankers, businessmen and probably Dr. Burns himself: a proposal to classify bank loans by their purpose into "high priority" loans (for example, a mortgage or small business loan) and less important "low priority" loans. "High priority" loans would rate "a decrease or even a credit" in required bank reserves; "low priority" loans would require "larger bank reserves" and — most important — "a mandatory interest surcharge"

To one Wall Street acquaintance, Miller is a "tinkerer." That does not make him a liberal but perhaps a social engineer — philosophically at ease in the Carter White House. If true, he does not meet the business community's desire for a symbol of stability and conservatism at the Fed.

The meaning of Miller can be put in perspective only with this central fact: no serious thought was ever given to reappointing Burns. Not one adviser — not even business-oriented Bert Lance or Robert Strauss — recommended it. The President could not risk the wrath that would bring down on him from labor, blacks and the Senate's liberal bloc led by Sen. Edward M. Kennedy.

In short, the rumored Burns debate, pro and con, was a non-event. The President's economic policy team agreed over breakfast the first week of September that Burns must go. About two months later, Mr. Carter approved their recommendation but did not announce it.

The next six to eight weeks before the decision became public Dec. 28 are explained at the White House as time needed to find an economic look-alike to replace Burns. But competent businessmen and bankers with the Burns mindset come by the limousine-load. What the President sought was somebody who looked like Burns but thought differently.

One requirement was a businessman as attuned to the problems of unemployment as of inflation. Another was a good soldier who would not, as Arthur Burns did, publicly attack the President's proposed $50 tax rebate or write Mr. Carter a letter (certain to leak) attacking his scheme to reduce the capital gains preference.

"We don't want to be hit from the blind side by the Fed chairman anymore," one aide explained.

The White House now admits that regular presidential meetings with Burns were mostly window dressing. It wants the new chairman of the Fed to become involved in administration policymaking. Thus, the job description: somebody compatible with the Carter team but also acceptable to the business community.

The 1974 Business Week article seemed to satisfy the first requirement for Miller. That he passed the second requirement was shown by the Dec. 28 reaction to his appointment. Approval came from the knights of the Business Round Table, General Electric's Reginald Jones and duPont's Irving Shapiro. Dr. Pierre Rinfret, the Republican economic consultant who had urged

Other Editors Say A Major Crime

Rocky Mount Telegram

Some areas of crime naturally seem to gain more attention than others. Murder, kidnapping, hijacking and the holding of hostages are spectacular in nature and grab the headlines. But there is another crime perhaps even more insidious and that's arson.

Arson hurts everyone. It's senseless, and it should be a major crime but it's not. Coping with it, however, is not an impossible task. Local community task forces can help. So can elevation of arson to a major crime.

A federal proposal has been put forth to detect and prevent the spreading cancer of arson. The total number of arson losses is now equal to or greater than the total number of burglary and auto theft losses.

A Senate bill proposed by Sen. John Glenn would place arson in its proper perspective by reclassifying it from a minor offense to a major one in the Uniform Crime Report System while also providing grants to local governments to assist in the development of programs to reduce arson.

Making arson a major crime is essential since it will enable the criminal justice system to measure the extent, distribution and impact of arson. It will also provide for accurate nationwide analysis of arson problems, assist in setting priorities and enable the progress of arson control programs undertaken by law enforcement, fire services and insurance industry personnel to be effectively monitored.

It is ludicrous that arson, although an acknowledged killer, is presently treated as a minor offense such as disorderly conduct, loitering and curfew violations.

The principal challenge in reducing fire losses is overcoming public indifference — indifference which is due, perhaps, to a lack of public information on the extent and impact of fires on our lives and economy.

The crime of arson is essentially a public problem of national concern, adversely affecting all of us either directly or indirectly.

Of a particularly vicious nature is the arson that destroys hundreds of thousands of acres of valuable timberlands and brushlands annually. To us, this is an especially mindless crime, since it profits not the perpetrator while inflicting heavy loss on the economy, natural resources and our wildlife.

Venturesome Spirit Dampened

By JOHN CUNIFF AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — Like the human race, the business community retains its vigor through the creation of new blood, in the latter's case by the emergence and growth of new enterprises.

The new blood brings with it ideas, creativity, innovation, competition. New products and services are introduced, even new ways of life. Old line firms are forced to come alive. Productivity improves.

It is disturbing therefore to read the latest analysis of emerging growth companies by the nation's leading broker, Merrill Lynch Pierce Fenner & Smith. Note the dismal observation:

"In our opinion, future developers of promising new technologies, new products, and new services are likely to be well-financed divisions of major corporations." What happened? In the 20 years or so between 1950 and 1970 more new American industries and new companies had been formed than in any comparable period of the 20th century.

Among industries that emerged in that period, the report continues, were various services, including building cleaning, office help, courier and security operations. Discount retailing developed. So did computer time sharing, and electronics too.

"Those firms thrived by offering unique products or services to meet existing needs. Each spawned hundreds of firms, many of which prospered and are today much larger corporations," said Merrill Lynch.

What happened? The cost of commercial development is now many times that of just two decades ago, ML says. "Inflated costs of manufacturing and distribution have made it extremely difficult to achieve success in marketing a limited line of new products."

Some years ago, it observes in the report, "initial profits from a new venture could be used to broaden the business. Today, the amount of capital needed to launch a venture is so large that we expect few singular ventures even to emerge."

Does that explain it all? No. Something has happened also to the spirit of adventure, to the investor's willingness to assume risk, to his faith in the future. ML expresses it this way:

"The multiples that the market now accords shares of small to medium-sized growth companies are such that the after-tax return to the investor is more likely to be in line with above-average bond yields than with the 25 percent to 35 percent annual rates often realized in years past."

And that, says ML, is why "we think the venture capitalist would be more likely to achieve a high rate of return from investing in existing rather than new companies."

Venture capitalist? One might ask: What's so daring, bold-so venturesome-about investing in already established concerns?

It seems to say something about the times, and what it says isn't very healthy. ML itself gives some clues when it tells of the growth companies it feels are safe for investors.

So much for the state of venture capitalism in America today.

Strength For Today

RECREATION OR DISSIPATION

The word "recreation" means just what it appears to mean—recreation. We should play in such a fashion that we return to work rested and refreshed.

But a great deal of so-called recreation today is really dissipation. Absenteeism on Mondays is a chronic problem in industry, and — if the truth were known — in many offices of high executives. Staying up until 3 a.m. does not rest or refresh anyone, no matter how much of the following day — which is usually Sunday — may be taken to catch up on sleep.

Trying to cover half of the United States in an automobile between Saturday and Monday is another procedure which does not bring people back to their work with renewed energy and enthusiasm.

There are plenty of ways to have a good time, and true enjoyment refreshes the soul and makes life better. But we should not play in such a way that we make our working life harder and unrewarding —

CAMERA Angles

By IRVING DESFOR
AP Newsfeatures

When to discard the hypo bath? What private collector owns a camera made in 1842? How the "Bookshelf Theater" makes home viewing of slides and movies convenient? What's the newest way to mount photos like Cibachrome and RC (resin coated) prints? How to win a Nikon camera and zoom lens with your great ski novel gadget that will protect you and your camera in a heavy snow or rain?

Having accumulated all the answers to this quiz, aren't you glad I collect trivia? But enough questions, let's have the information:

Most darkroom workers can see when paper developer is exhausted. The developer turns brownish and prints take longer to develop and they stain easily. Fixing baths, however, can become exhausted without immediate visual notice. It becomes evident much later when prints begin to discolor. The Tetenal Photo Co. of Germany has introduced a fixing bath tester for amateurs. A test rod is immersed in hypo for a second. In half a minute, two test areas on the rod change color. They determine how exhausted the bath is. They also indicate for professional photographers the content of silver that can be recovered. The test rods come in packages of 100.

The owner of a daguerreotype camera and equipment made in 1842 is Jerry Sprung, a member of the Photographic Historical Society of New York and an avid collector of photo antiques. No other private collector in the United States has a camera of that vintage, it is claimed. His collection is stored in a Teaneck, N.J., bank vault.

The Bookshelf Theater is a lightweight, rear-screen viewer that can be set up instantly at home for small group entertainment or home movie editing. It has an optically coated screen with an 8-by-10-inch viewing area which gives bright, full contrast projection of slides and home movies in a fully lighted room. A 3M Co. product, it folds compactly when not in use for storage on a bookshelf. It's mounted in a case that measures 10½ inches wide, 14 inches long and 1½ inches high when folded. When extended for projection, it is 10½ inches high. The entire unit weighs just over three pounds.

A new type of dry, pressure-sensitive adhesive sheet for mounting photographs is another 3M product. Called "Positionable Mounting Adhesive Sheets No. 567," they come in street area. When you move to regular streets, start with a quiet residential neighborhood and gradually work your way up to heavier traffic.

—Be as conspicuous as possible. Wear light-colored clothing, drive with lights on and use a bike flag.

—Drive defensively so you can avoid collisions even in the case of adverse conditions or mistakes by other drivers.

—Wear a helmet.

—Don't carry passengers.

—Be especially careful when it rains. Like any two-wheeled vehicle, a moped is particularly unstable on wet surfaces. Avoid oil, gravel, sand and wet leaves when possible. If you must ride over a wet surface, try to keep to a straight line and use brakes with caution.

Moped use is growing rapidly in the United States. The industry estimated 1977 sales of about 200,000 and predicted that 3 million or 4 million mopeds would be sold annually in the first half of the next decade.

Burns' retention, called Miller an incredibly good choice. Most stood by, approving, as Miller was unveiled to the world (a major objective of Vice President Mondale, chief talent-scout for the job).

Those sober second thoughts set in almost immediately, with several businessmen noting a superficial resemblance between Miller and another progressive-minded corporation president, Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal. Publicly, few businessmen are complaining about the nation's new central banker; privately, many will urge Arthur Burns not to resign his seat on the board to keep watch on his successor.

Elvis Outdraws 'Punk Rockers'

By MARIAN FOX
Associated Press Writer
MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Rock music symbolized by de-burns and safety pins met in Memphis when Elvis Presley fans gathered to observe his birthday the same weekend the SexPistols introduced the city to punk rock. Some complained about consumer ripoffs, but in the end the dead king of rock 'n' roll drew more of a crowd than the living, breathing British rockers, now on a U.S. tour.

Security officials at Graceland, the mansion where Presley lived, died and is now buried, said 9,600 fans showed up during the weekend to commemorate what would have been Elvis' 43rd birthday. Presley died Aug. 16 of a heart ailment.

The Sex Pistols — whose fans sometimes adorn themselves with safety pins stuck through their ears or cheeks — drew an audience of 650 and had a tough time holding on to that. Many in the audience walked out minutes after the show began, Friday night.

"This is gross," said Missy Bynum, 23, of Memphis, watching lead singer Johnny Rotten blow his nose without benefit of handkerchief.

The Elvis faithful attended revival-like gatherings to remember the king. Two separate events were staged — "Remembering Elvis" at the fairgrounds and "A Tribute to Elvis" at the Cook Convention Center.

At the fairgrounds event, which cost $4 to enter, Presley's first customized Cadillac and one of his beds were on display.

The convention center exhibition, brought to Memphis by promoter Ed Say of Columbus, Ohio, offered fans copies of a home movie of the Presley funeral for $3, and candid photographs of Presley concerts in several cities. Admission was $2.50.

A number of complaints about the quality and nature of the exhibits were reported, and Dick Grob, chief of security at the Presley mansion, said he was sorry that "the people feel they're getting ripped off."

"Everything Elvis did was first class," Grob said. "I've seen him stop in the middle of a song that wasn't right, apologize to the audience and start it again. What's being done in his name isn't first class. I don't even think it's fourth class."

More than 1,000 floral arrangements — including a wreath of red and white carnations from Colonel Tom Parker, the architect of Presley's career — were sent to the mansion.

Doreen O'Brien, 22, and her brother, Tim, 14, drove from Los Angeles to see the grave-site.

"I came just to be close to him," said Miss O'Brien. "I consider myself more a friend than a fan because I didn't love Elvis just because he was good-looking or talented. I loved him because he was a warm, friendly, good-humored and loving person."

Troopers Standing By At Power Line Project

By JOHN LUNDQUIST
Associated Press Writer
LOWRY, Minn. (AP) — Construction work today on a controversial high-voltage power line that cuts through the countryside near this west-central Minnesota farming community.

State Patrol Chief James Crawford said backup forces also were standing by, and the force could be increased to 200 if necessary to ensure the safety of construction workers, who last week became the targets of angry farmers.

"We're going in there to assist the sheriff," Crawford said. "There's no go battle plan. There's not going to be any attack on farmers and we don't feel the farmers are going to attack us."

The largest mobilization of state troopers in Minnesota history came after protesters trying to halt construction work scuffled with troopers last week.

The farmers, some of whom allegedly carried guns and baseball bats, used "very bad threats and language," said Don Jacobson, spokesman for United Power Association of Elk River, one of the two rural electric cooperatives building the 400-kilovolt line.

Jacobson said some construction workers quit because of death threats and other harassment.

"Farmers say the high voltage and ozone created by the line could be dangerous to livestock and to humans. And they see, in the building of the power line, a threat to their way of life. Many protesters wear buttons reading, 'If you kill our farms, your cities will die.'"

They also object to the way the line route, which runs from Underwood, N.D., to Delano, Minn., cuts through farmland rather than following borders, and claim the line will interfere with automatic irrigation systems.

Gov. Rudy Perpich issued a plea to protesters last week.

"It just popped into my head," he said. "It's not exactly original. My grandfather is Greek, but I'm like a Roman — an adapter of other people's ideas."

The membership price in Condyles' club also buys a vase and a discount on other purchases at the store. It takes him about six hours a week to make his deliveries.

Most of the customers are women, but he does have some men in the club.

"When I went on vacation over Christmas, one man whose wife was sending him the flowers called her and said she didn't love him any more," he said.

Starting in March, Condyles says he'll be delivering bunches of mixed flowers on happier occasions — Friday afternoons.

Seeks Erase Blue Monday

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Ed Condyles is embarked on a one-man crusade against the beginning-of-the-week blahs.

Condyles is a florist, and his principal weapon in the battle against the blahs is his "Flower of the Week Club."

For $2 a month, Condyles delivers a fresh carnation to the desks of 135 members in offices in downtown Raleigh or the state office complex on Monday and Tuesday mornings.

Anything that makes people forget that it's Monday morning, Condyles says, can't be all bad. And it's even better if it helps folks remember the Mail Shop, Condyles' business.

"I use it like a restaurant 'I see and I like,' he says. "It's a gimmick — something to get people interested in flowers."

He began making the deliveries last August and had 60 steady customers within a week.

"Citrus Harvest Is Sharply Up"

BUENOS AIRES (AP) — Argentina harvested 1.5 million tons of citrus fruit during the past growing season, up 8 percent from last year, reports the Economy Ministry here.

Orange production was up 10 percent, lemons 17.4 percent and grapefruit 3.3 percent. Only mandarin oranges declined by 3.9 percent.

Employment Survey Here

Local representatives of the U.S. Bureau of the Census will conduct a survey of employment in this area during the week of Jan. 16-21, according to Joseph R. Norwood, director of the Bureau's Regional Office in Charlotte.

The survey is conducted monthly for the U.S. Department of Labor using a scientifically designed sample of approximately 70,000 households throughout the United States.

Employment and unemployment statistics based on results of this survey are used to provide a continuing measure of the economic health of the nation.

For example, in November the survey indicated that of the 99 million men and women in the U.S. civilian labor force, 92.2 million were employed. The nation's unemployment rate was 6.9 percent, compared to 7.0 percent in October and substantially below the recession peak of 8.9 percent reached in the second quarter of 1975.

Information supplied by individuals participating in the survey is kept strictly confidential by law and the results are used only to compile statistical totals.

Mrs. Jean C. Wilson of Grimesland will be the area interviewer.

Entire Continent A 'Playpen' For Top Scientists

By ROBERT C. MILLER
MCMURDO. Antarctica (UPI) — Antarctica, spectacular in its beauty and merciless in its brutality, is unique to this world. It's the only continent never bloodied by the wars of man.

Yet on this continent, bigger than Europe and America combined, more men have died violent deaths than natural, for its perpetual cold renders it almost germ-free.

Today it is a continent of contrasts where men of antagonistic political faiths work together in harmonious concert, warm and comfortable three inches away from 100-below-zero temperatures that would freeze their blood in seconds.

Antarctica is the land of the heartiest appetites where the Americans devour four meals a day without gaining weight as the intense cold devours the calories faster than any diet.

It's the home of the "big eye," the unique affliction of mass insomnia brought on by the never-ending daylight of the summer season which finds residents unable to sleep in the bright 3 a.m. sunshine.

Antarctica arrogantly boasts of the most exclusive club in the world, the "300 Degree Club," but is still a land of barter where a Playboy magazine can always be traded for a pair of Russian felt boots at the big Soviet station of Vostok. For the Christmas edition, the Soviets will throw in a fur cap.

Antarctica boasts the cheapest and southernmost bar in the world at the South Pole where a beer, a 12-year-old scotch or a cognac all cost the same — 25 cents — but even then the bar bill for a night can run up to $30 or $40, for the nights begin in April and end in September.

The Antarctic has a heartland covered with a 9,000-foot shield of moving ice, yet geologists say it may contain enough oil, gas and coal to warm the world.

So peculiar are its laws — or lack of laws — that no fugitive could be extradited, and a criminal would have nearly nine million square miles of wide open spaces, broad valleys and 15,000-foot mountain ranges in which to hide if he could manage to live more than a few hours in this most hostile of all the world's environments.

Antarctica has the lowest crime rate of any continent, yet is governed by no laws. It may well have been the location of a perfect crime, for if a murder has ever been committed, it has never been prosecuted. There are neither extradition treaties nor statutes under which a slayer could be charged and prosecuted anywhere in the continent.

The flags of 19 nations fly over the Antarctic, but none claims a foot of the continent's real estate.

No attempt has ever been made to permanently colonize this most primitive of lands, yet it houses the most sophisticated of scientific equipment, including computers at the South Pole.

Its residents — admittedly mostly short timers — have the highest IQ per capita in the world. It's the only continent where university degrees outnumber high school diplomas. It has more scientific talent than any university, and is the site of more peaceful research than any world capital. It is the only land mass in the world where the explosion of nuclear bombs is specifically prohibited.

Antarctica has the strictest environmental laws on earth. The statutes are so stringent scientific field parties burn their human excrement and urinate into sealed barrels. Special licenses are now required to kill the animal life that was slaughtered a century ago by the whalers and sealers.

The Americans alone, through the National Science Foundation, spend about $45 million a year sponsoring such scientific studies as "the behavioral and ecological adaptation of pygoscelid penguins," "the origin of ice crystals in polar precipitations" and "the evolution of mesozoic and cenozoic depositional basins of the northern Antarctic Peninsula and the South Orkney Islands."

The scientists of all nations probe by air and sled just about every remote corner of the land, but they travel today mostly by helicopter or in huge ski-equipped Navy C-130s, which traverse in seconds the distances the old explorers traversed in hours — or sometimes days.

Today Antarctica is the playpen of the world's pure scientists who are fighting vigorously to keep it pristine. Anthracite coal has been found near the Prince Albert Mountains. A U.S. geological report estimated that the oil and gas reserves in Antarctica were far greater than those of Alaska. A team of German scientists believes the continent holds exploitable quantities of uranium.

Yet nary a scientific dollar has been spent towards the commercial exploitation of any Antarctic minerals, for the Antarctic Treaty of 1959 prohibits any commercialism in the continent.

This is the only place on earth that man's expenditure of millions has been motivated without greed. But as one scientist pointed out, "That was before man realized there were minerals and riches here worth exploiting."

Antarctica's women
Except for an occasional whaling skipper's wife, the rarest specimen of life in the Antarctic was a woman.

But no more. Lady scientists, beginning with Dr. Mary Alice McWhinnie of De Paul University in Chicago, have spent the winter on the continent.

During the busy summer season from November until mid-February, women populate several of the various research stations, and at Vostok near the geomagnetic pole, Russian women are increasing in numbers.

But as yet no female navy personnel have spent the winter on the continent, and the Navy brass swears none will. But don't bet on it.

Increasing pressure is being brought on the Pentagon to include women in the wintering-over parties, both at McMurdo and at the South Pole 728 miles farther south.

"We really have no objection to the idea," explained one senior naval officer, "except for one problem. How are the wives of the men down here going to react knowing their husbands are spending the longest night in the world with other women? Solve that one and we'll green light the ladies for wintering-over assignments."

Antarctica is both the world's biggest desert and its largest potential source of fresh water. Less than two inches of precipitation falls annually at the South Pole compared to Phoenix's 7.2 inches of rain a year and New York's 42 inches. Yet the continent contains 95 percent of the world's ice and is being studied as a possible source of water for the thirsty lands in the Northern Hemisphere.

Nitrite Fear Is Costly To Pork People

By JUDIE CROSSON
UPI-Commodity News Service
CHICAGO (UPI) — The battle over the use of nitrite, a curing agent in bacon, is one of the most important issues the hog producer faced in 1977 as press reports of cancer scares influenced consumers and, in turn, the sale of bacon.

Further government consideration of the issue this year appears certain to further affect the pork market.

Futures prices for pork bellies, traded at the Chicago Mercantile Exchange, reflected the consumer scares. Bacon is made from pork bellies.

Consumer groups claimed nitrite may be carcinogenic, and it appeared those responsible for food safety at the U.S. Department of Agriculture were influenced by these claims.

American Meat Institute President Richard Lyng said if nitrite was immediately banned, it would cost the hog farmer $10 per head. Bellies constitute about 10 percent of the live hog weight. Along with hams, bellies make up an important share of profit for the hog farmer.

But some consumer groups charged that nitrite should be banned now under the wholesale food act because it forms with other substances in meat to create nitrosamines, some of which are suspected cancer-causing agents.

These same consumer groups, however, have attacked the AMI, charging its claim of financial hardship for the hog producer is overdone to scare the farmer into fighting the consumer issue.

Commodity News Service finds, however, that meat industry trade groups may be the ones attempting to scare the hog producer to get him to fight the issue. Most in the industry believe the USDA will not ban nitrite in the near future as to do so immediately would cause severe hardships for both the bacon producing industry and the hog producer.

Pork organizations have informed governors in their respective states of the economic hardship a nitrite ban would have on them.

But farmers cannot believe the USDA would make a decision which would seriously hinder the hog producer.

The government has given the meat processors until March 11 to submit data showing bacon can be produced without the formation of nitrosamines.

But the industry, may not be able to get such data together by that date. So it will probably try to buy time until research shows what "safe" amount of nitrite can be used without forming the suspect substance.

While consumer groups, led by the Community Nutrition Institute based in Washington, D.C., concern themselves with the danger of cancer, bacon manufacturers have a health problem they would rather not emphasize.

Nitrite, in addition to giving bacon its distinctive color and taste, prevents the formation of botulism, the cause of acute food poisoning.

While the meat industry does not disguise that fact, it does not advertise it either. As the mere mention that a substance is necessary to prevent such a dreaded disease could scare the consumer.

So the bacon industry tries to show that bacon, as it is currently manufactured and processed using nitrite, is a safe product.

Further developments are bound to appear this year on that issue.

Tried Avoid Mayor's Job

DEFIANCE, Iowa (UPI) — After nearly two months of trying to turn down the job, Dennis Schaben became mayor of Defiance Saturday.

Dennis Schaben received 23 write-in votes in last November's mayoral election, edging out his cousin, incumbent mayor Dan Schaben, who got 18 write-in votes. But it was a shallow victory. Neither of the candidates wanted the job.

The Schabens had told Defiance's 348 residents before the election that they did not want the job, which pays $300 a year. But they got the votes anyway.

Dennis Schaben said he wouldn't accept the job and Dan Schaben, who had held the post for four years, said he didn't want it either.

"I don't want that mayor's job because of all the complaining you have to listen to," Dennis Schaben had said.

But he finally changed his mind and the town's got a mayor Saturday.

"He wasn't too enthusiastic about it but he took it," Dan Schaben said.

Dan Schaben said he was happy to be rid of the job.

Dennis Schaben, who works nearly 50 hours a week at a service station, said the demands of being a part-time small-town mayor can tie you.

Among the chores the mayor often performs is snow removal.

Several engineers believe it feasible to put cables around Antarctic icebergs and tow them to the arid areas of Australia, Africa and the Middle East.

One berg, the largest ever seen in modern history, has been spotted moving slowly through the Weddell Sea. Meteorologists have tracked it for three years and watched it travel in a counter-clockwise cruise around the continent. So far it has covered some 600 miles in its voyage.

The berg is about 40 miles long and 20 miles wide. Mathematicians estimate it would take care of Chicago's billion-gallon a day water requirements for nearly 32 months.

Now come tourists
No Lorelei was ever more tempting to the adventuresome than the Antarctic. In the "heroic age" of the early 20th century there were Amundsen, Shackleton, Mawson, Scott and scores of others who suffered almost unendurable agony and often died seeking the mysteries of the continent. Through bloodshot eyes and frosted eyelids they gazed upon beauty so vast, so overwhelming it defied comprehension.

To those names today must be added the Ginsbergs, the Jones, the Nakamuras and the Swensons who, in the heated comfort of four ships or through the double-glassed windows of jets, gaze equally wide-eyed at the same grandeur.

Each week of the Antarctic summer shiploads of tourists board cruise ships at the Argentine port of Ushuaia in Tierra del Fuego for a week-long voyage along the Palmer Peninsula across from Cape Horn.

An American company, Lindblad, built a special Antarctic cruise ship which takes today's tourists in complete comfort to see the same sights that caused the first frostbitten visitors to Antarctica to grope for words to describe its moonscape beauty.

Three airlines, Air New Zealand, Qantas and Pan American, make special round-trip excursion flights from Australia and New Zealand to the continent. Each of the 747 flights has been sold out weeks in advance for the 12-hour flights over the continent and back. The only pain suffered by today's visitors are occasional bouts of sea or air sickness and the agony of paying the not-cheap fares.

In contrast to the Arctic with its teeming bird life, herds of caribou and a vast population of furred animals ranging from the Arctic hare to polar bears, the Antarctic is void of any life whatsoever except along the coastline and here the only fur bearer is the seal and they are only sometimes residents.

The biggest bird population, the penguins, have no flyable wings, never sing and, completely contrary to nature, some varieties lay their eggs and hatch their young in the dead of winter during the lowest temperatures of the year.

Yet off the shores of this desolate world exists the richest marine life in the world. It was these seas saturated with whales and seals that brought the first explorers to the Antarctic. They came not for the scenery. They came for the whale oil and the seal skins upon which many a New England fortune was built. Among them was a 22-year-old sealer captain Nathaniel Brown Palmer who is given credit by some for discovering the Antarctic peninsula named after him in 1920.

Huge protein source
In these waters live an estimated 1.5 billion metric tons of a four-inch long crustacean called krill which nutritionalists say is the world's largest source of protein. From the bottoms of the Bellingshausen, the Weddell, the Ross, the Amundsen and the other seas washing the continental shelf the fisheries experts estimate trawlers can harvest more protein in a year than is now being taken annually by all the fishermen in the world's waters.

And some of the ichthyologists say it was the greed and the butchery of the sealers and whalers which produced the present huge supply of krill.

The slaughter of the baleen whales along with the krill-eating seals may have allowed the krill population to increase by the billions following the near-elimination of their biggest enemies.

One of the National Science Foundation studies is a thorough investigation into the life cycle of the krill to determine how much harvesting can be done without depleting the source.

Another project is being carried out at latitude 82 degrees 21 minutes 24.3 seconds south and 168 degrees 39 minutes and 29.3 seconds west longitude. Here, out in the middle of the Ross Ice Shelf, Yankee ingenuity has given man his first look at a "lost sea" buried some 120,000 years beneath nearly a quarter of a mile thick ice shield. This sea, about 500 miles from the pole, has long intrigued man who is curious as to whether the life processes can continue in complete and perpetual darkness.

Using a flame-jet invented by a New Hampshire genius, James Browning, the team of international scientists has put down a 12-inch wide hole through the ice in less than 10 hours. Television cameras lowered into the hole already have found small forms of marine life and possible evidence of crustaceans despite the fact that the sea at this point is 200 miles away from the edge of the ice pack.

Antarctic life today
The life lived today by most of the 800 scientists and their logistic support teams at McMurdo vary but slightly from the life lived in midwinter in the Dakotas or Alberta.

The inmates in their ice-bound prisons both at McMurdo and the South Pole have excellent libraries, stereo music, nightly movies — mostly repeats by the end of winter — and good radio communications with the outside world. There is a bowling alley at McMurdo and even closed circuit television.

But throughout the history of man's venture into the Antarctic it's been the "home" entertainment he has contrived that has enabled him to maintain sanity while living a cocoon-like existence in ice-crusted cubicles.

Ernest Shackleton's men printed a book, Robert F. Scott's expedition put on plays during the long winters. They called themselves the "Terror Theatians," named not for their terrible acting, but for one of the two ships used by James Clark Ross when he penetrated the sea bearing his name in 1840.

300 Degree Club
Today the long, boring winters are broken by parties, arm wrestling, volleyball games, chess, a formal dinner on the 21st of June and — even jogging.

But unique in the history of mystical fraternities is the "300 Degree Club" of the South Pole where the initiates remain in their sauna bath until the temperature is 300 degrees warmer than the outside reading — not a very difficult achievement when the temperature drops to -80 or -90 degrees during the winter.

Then, clad only in shoes; they race naked from the bathroom out into the snow.

"None of them is able to speak above a whisper for days afterwards," confided one "pole soul" who wintered over last year. "The tissues in their throats and larynxes apparently get a bit frostbitten — along with other vital parts of their anatomy."

The record of four trips from steam room to snow is held by a heavily tattooed Navy chief and was made five years ago.

The story is told in NCO clubs around the world that he not only dashed naked into the -80 degree cold, but remained standing atop the 9,000-foot ice shield long enough to drain his bladder.

Hope Reclamation Result Of Clean Water Program

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Officials are hoping that stricter federal anti-pollution laws will eventually permit reclamation of nearly 169,000 prime acres of shellfish waters shut down because of contamination.

The 1972 Clean Water Act requires all towns in the nation to clean up sewage effluent so that by 1983 it will sustain aquatic life.

Environmental experts say

North Carolina's coastal regions are not as dirty as those of other states, but shellfish are sufficiently endangered by pollution to keep the well-informed from eating raw oysters or clams.

"It's generally pretty good, in terms of water for recreation," says Charles Wakild, a state environmental engineer who monitors the waters of southeast North Carolina. "There are problems scattered all over, but by themselves they don't affect a wide area."

But Page Benton, head of the state's water quality section, said he remembers eating an oyster he found lying in shallow water at Ocean Isle a couple of years ago. "I thought I was going to die," he recalled. "I didn't, but for 24 hours there I had the worst case of dysentery you ever saw."

Because of such possible contamination in certain shellfish, Benton now won't eat them, no matter where they come from. "You won't find many environmental engineers who do," he said.

As of December, North Carolina had closed 168,686 acres of prime shellfish waters in coastal rivers and sounds because of contamination by pollution, officials said. Since September 1976, 1,576 acres have been closed. During the same period, while another 570 acres of previously closed breeding grounds were opened as their waters were cleaned.

Officials say pollution comes from a number of sources. The most easily pinpointed ones are municipal, industrial and private wastewater systems that discharge treated sewage into coastal waters.

More than 787,000 gallons of sewage a day are dumped directly into state shellfish waters, according to Robert A. Carter, state water quality official. Much of the discharged waste, he says, is inadequately treated.

Authorities say the greatest pollution problems appear to be resort towns that have mushroomed along the coast. Of all the communities on the barrier islands that line the edge of the coast, only two — Carolina Beach and Wrightsville Beach — have sewage systems. The rest use septic tanks.

William E. Burnett, an environmental planner in Wilmington, said effluents seeping from the septic tanks move into the sound and also down into the underground water table. He said there has been some contamination in private wells in the Surf City and Dare County areas, although no public water supplies have been affected. Burnett said other sources of pollution are toxic substances from upriver Piedmont industries that filter into coastal waters.

The FARM SCENE

By LEROY JAMES Agricultural Extension Agent

The decision to plant soybeans in 1978 should be made only after considering alternative farm crops.

In evaluating soybeans relative to other possible crops in the Southeast, many factors must be taken into account. Each farm situation has special problems influencing the selection of crops for production and requires a special solution.

Soybean acreage in this region rose from an average of 2.9 million acres during 1964-1968 to 6.2 million acres in 1977. This represents a 114 percent increase in the 14 year period. During this same period total U. S. soybean acreage increased also, but the proportion of total U. S. acreage planted in the Southeast increased in soybeans is that in the combined judgment of farmers in the Southeast soybeans have been the most profitable crop among the alternatives available to them.

One practice currently attracting much attention is irrigation. Because of the wide variety of irrigation equipment and systems available and because of varying individual farm needs for irrigation, general estimates and statements as to costs and returns from irrigation of soybeans are most difficult to determine.

Irrigation is a practice that each producer should evaluate in terms of his own needs and resources.

Another feature of soybean production relative to corn and cotton is that total production costs per acre for soybeans is only about 70 percent that of corn and 38 percent the cost for cotton. Stated differently, for the same investment in production resources, a producer can grow 1.4 acres of soybeans for each acre of corn and 2.7 acres of soybeans for the cost of each acre of cotton.

As the 1977-78 soybean crop year begins, domestic users and exporters will have a record supply of soybeans to meet their needs during the current marketing year. Soybean supplies for 1977-78 are estimated at 1.6 to 1.7 billion bushels, some 10 percent to 16 percent more than 1976-77 this consists of the 1977-78 soybean crop of 1.6 billion bushels and carry in stock 6.5 million on September 1.

Authentic English Stoneware. Free. From BB&T.

English Stoneware is something special. Made the way it's been made for over 150 years. By hand. By craftsmen.

Potters take the clay from their native England and fashion it into distinctive shapes. Each piece is individually dipped in a glaze. Then hand decorated by a talented artist.

All this care does make an elegant difference, recognizable in subtle variations from piece to piece.

By saving at Branch Banking and Trust Company, you can get your first three-piece place setting free.

That's a hand-crafted cup, saucer and dinner plate free, just for depositing $25 or more, in a new or existing BB&T Regular Savings Account at any BB&T office.

12 piece snack set for four.

Each snack set consists of a coffee mug, soup/cereal bowl and a salad/luncheon plate. It's ideal for snacks, breakfasts and light lunches.

When you deposit $500.00 in a new or existing BB&T Savings Account, you may purchase this twelve-piece snack set for four for only $31.75.

26 piece service for four.

Entertain the idea of having enough Stoneware for a dinner party this evening: four dinner plates, four cups, four saucers, four bread and butter plates, four soup/cereal bowls, a 1.5 quart casserole dish with lid, an oval platter, a sugar bowl with lid, and a cream pitcher.

They can all be yours for only $65.00. Simply deposit $1,000 in a new or existing BB&T Savings Account. And entertain.

Limited to one free place setting per account.

Alcohol Agents Report Arrests

Four arrests, three of them involving liquor law violations, were made in recent days by agents of the Alcohol Law Enforcement Agency, Division of Crime Control and Public Safety.

Agent Danny Dilda said that James Ray Stancill Jr. of Rt. 6, Box 327-B, Greenville, was arrested around 11:30 p.m. Saturday following a high speed chase that began near the Pitt-Greenville Airport and ended some six miles west of Greenville.

Dilda, who noted that the Highway Patrol was also involved in the apprehension, reported that Stancill was charged with exceeding 110 miles per hour in a 55 zone, driving 15 miles per hour over the stated speed limit while attempting to elude a law enforcement officer, careless and reckless driving, and driving while his license was revoked.

The agent said that Stancill's car was impounded and he was placed in Pitt County Jail under $600 bond with a trial date set for Jan. 24 in District Court here.

Dilda also arrested Dennis O'Neal Freeman of Cove City on Saturday night in Gritton and charged him with driving without a license and transporting liquor in the passenger area of a vehicle with the seal broken.

Dilda reported that Freeman was placed under $100 bond with a trial date set for District Court here on Jan. 24.

Agent Warren Hopkins reported the arrest of Jasper Perkins Jr. of 109 E. Sixth Street, Ayden, last Wednesday on a charge of possession and consumption of wine in an unauthorized place. Hopkins said that the alleged offense took place on S. Lee Street in Ayden.

The agent also reported that Joyce Elaine Davenport, 20, of 2903 Jefferson Drive, Greenville, was arrested Friday at 11 p.m. and charged with possession and consumption of alcoholic beverages in an unauthorized place and also with possession and consumption of alcoholic beverages under the legal age.

According to Hopkins, the offense allegedly took place at Baboo's Tavern in Grimesland.

NEW YORK (AP) - The stock market, unsettled by rising interest rates, continued its early-1978 slide with another steep decline today.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials which closed Friday at its lowest point since Oct. 1, 1977, fell 10.31 to 783.18 by noon today.

Losers overhauled gains by about a 7-1 margin among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

The Dow's 37.68-point slide last week in the first four sessions of the new year drove the average below the 800 level, which had been widely regarded as an area of technical support.

Late Friday the Federal Reserve announced a 1/2-point increase to 6 1/2 percent in the discount rate—the rate it charges on loans to its member commercial banks.

Analysts said the move was designed as a prop for the slumping dollar in foreign-exchange markets.

But traders seemed fearful that it would also have the effect of pushing up other interest rates to the point at which they would slow economic activity and attract funds from stocks into interest-bearing securities.

Open-market interest rates climbed today on those developments, and an increase in the prime lending rate from 7 1/2 to 8 percent spread gradually in the banking industry.

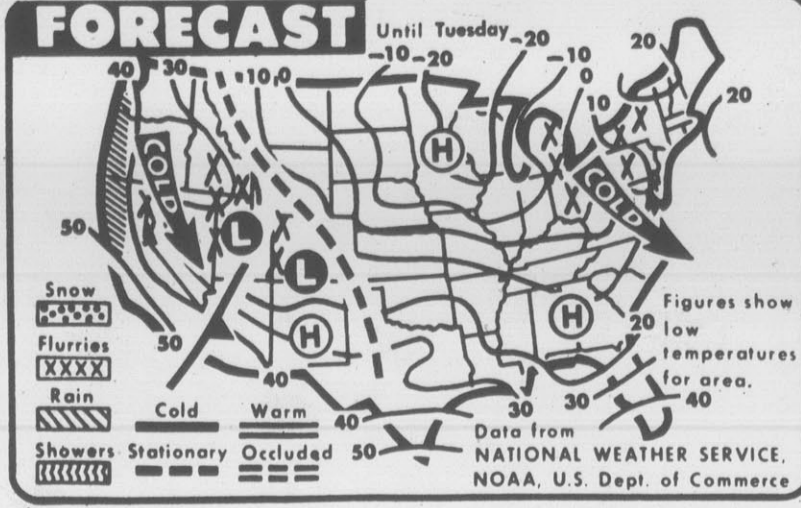

Among actively traded blue chips, General Motors fell 1/2 to 59 1/2; General Electric was off at 47 1/2, and American Telephone & Telegraph slipped 1/4 to 5.

The NYSE's composite index lost 57 to 50.07. On the American Stock Exchange, the market value index tumbled 75 to 121.30.

Volume on the Big Board reached 13.32 million shares by noon, against 11.87 million at the same point Friday.

Cold And Snow Blow Into Carolina

By The Associated Press

Heavy snow trailed a gusty cold front across the North Carolina mountains overnight, then turned into light snow and sleet to deliver hazardous driving conditions to eastern portions of the state as well early this morning.

In the mountains, two to six inches of snow had accumulated by this morning on ground already rendered hazardous by rains and low temperatures earlier Sunday evening. The National Weather Service described travel as "nearly impossible" in many mountain sections due to blowing and drifting snow on top of ice.

The state Highway Patrol said all roads west of the Triangle area were icy in spots this morning. Main roads in Avery, Watauga and Mitchell counties required snow tires or chains, and secondary roads in those counties were impassable, the patrol said.

The combination of bitterly cold temperatures and high winds made conditions severe in much of the mountains. Hugh Morton reported the temperature was 10 degrees below zero and falling on Grandfather Mountain at 9:30 a.m., with about five inches of snow.

Winds were clocked at 60 knots, gusting to 90 knots or better than 100 miles an hour, Morton said.

"There's a few that are outside here, but only those that have to be," he said.

The snow and bitter cold prompted officials at Appalachian State University at Boone to delay registration for the spring semester. Six inches of snow fell at Boone temperatures were reported 2 to 3 degrees below zero and winds were gusting up to 50 m.p.h.

The front blew into the Piedmont accompanied by heavy rains and strong, gusty winds which littered streets with limbs and fallen trees and flattened power lines in some areas.

Rain turned to sleet in some areas, and a burst of hail was reported in the Durham area about 3:30 a.m.

In Caswell County, north of Burlington near the Virginia line, a flooded creek covered a bridge on N.C. 86 with water and several cars washed into the creek before authorities to reach the scene and block the road. One woman reportedly suffered minor injuries.

Gale warnings were issued for the coast as the front streaked eastward, and the weather service warned that the strong northwesterly winds behind the front could cause flooding on the sound side of the Outer Banks later in the day.

Temperatures dropped rapidly behind the front, adding the danger that snow, sleet and rain on the highways could develop into a slippery glaze.

Winds were forecast to remain strong throughout the day, mostly from the northwest at 25 to 40 miles per hour, with some stronger gusts.

Temperatures yesterday were very warm ahead of the front with high temperatures ranging from 50s in the mountains to low 70s over the southern coastal area. Rainfall ranged up to nearly three inches at Hickory. Temperatures fell through the night and ranged from the teens in the mountains to around 60 on the coast.

At daybreak, the forecast indicated an additional one to three inches of snow was still possible for the northwest mountains. The precipitation was expected to end late in the morning as the front moved offshore.

Fields

WALSTONBURG - Mr. Seth Gray Fields, 73, died in Wilson Memorial Hospital Sunday.

Funeral services will be held Tuesday at 2 p.m. at the Church Street Chapel of the Farmville Funeral Home by the Rev. Joseph Lehmann, the Rev. Ronald Coleman and the Rev. Charles Triehart. Interment will be in the Walstonburg Cemetery.

Mr. Fields, a lifelong resident of this community, was a retired farmer and merchant. He was a member of Howell Swamp F.W.B. Church and the Greene County ABC Board and was a former Walstonburg town commissioner.

LAGRANGE - Funeral services for Miss Sherry Denise Parks of 506 S. Wooten St., LaGrange, who died in Pitt Memorial Hospital Saturday will be held Tuesday at 2 p.m. at Mitchell's Funeral Home with the Bishop E. L. Uzzell officiating.

Gag Order...

Court in attempts to have the order lifted.

The Supreme Court voted 7-3 last May 23, three days before Gasque's trial began, not to interfere. Justices William J. Brennan Jr. and Thurgood Marshall voted to set aside the order.

Surviving him are his wife, Mrs. Sarah Sawyer Fields of the home; a daughter, Mrs. Julia Boyce of Garner; two sons, Carson E. Fields and Henry Gray Fields, both of Walstonburg; a half sister, Mrs. Gene Cole of Memphis, Tenn.; two brothers, Fenner A. Fields of Roanoke, Va. and Albert Fields of Newberry, S.C.; a half brother, Johnny Fields of Phoenix, Ariz.; seven grandchildren; and one great-grandchild.

Martin's order apparently was issued to assure Gasque a fair trial in the face of heavy publicity, but the judge's reasons were not specified. His order was entered "for reasons appearing to the court."

Mrs. Gay was the wife of Hayward Gay and daughter of Will Davis. Funeral arrangements are incomplete at Joyner's Mortuary in Farmville.

Retired farmer, died Saturday. Funeral services will be held today at 2:30 p.m. at Farmer Funeral Chapel with the Rev. Ralph Leggett officiating. Burial will follow in the Wesley Cemetery near Grimesland.

The 4th Circuit court upheld Martin's actions, saying such orders are valid if there is a "reasonable likelihood that prejudicial news prior to trial will jeopardize the defendants' right to a fair trial."

Mrs. Hellen, a native of Greenville, spent all her life here and was a graduate of East Carolina University, class of 1915. She was a member of Memorial Baptist Church.

Surviving are five sons, Isaac, Joseph, and Leland Taylor, all of Snow Hill, Allen D. Taylor of San Antonio, Tex., and Charles R. Taylor of Columbus, Ga.; three daughters, Mrs. Thelma Sumrell of Greenville, Mrs. Estelle Goff of Elm City, and Mrs. Evelyn Stepps of Hookerton; one brother, William R. Taylor of Chocowinity; two sisters, Mrs. Effie Taylor and Miss Ida Taylor, both of Chocowinity; 27 grandchildren; and 14 great-grandchildren.

Noting that other circuit courts have adopted less restrictive constitutional tests for when such bans are valid, the news organizations challenging Martin's order told the Supreme Court that lower courts were in the "hopeless disarray" on the issue.

She is survived by a son, Earle W. Hellen Jr. of Newport News, Va.; a daughter, Mrs. Christine Snuggs of Albemarle; a sister, Mrs. George Gortmo of Wilmington; 12 grandchildren and four great children.

The family will receive friends at the funeral home from seven to nine o'clock tonight.

The Supreme Court appeal also urged the justices to rule that all judges entering such restrictive orders must give "interested parties" a chance to air their views and must accompany such orders with a written opinion giving reasons.

The Justice Department urged the high court to turn down the appeal, arguing that such bans do not infringe on free-press rights because they are not directed at members of the press.

Registration for the spring semester was to have begun today, with classes scheduled to begin Wednesday. Registration now has been postponed until Wednesday and classes until Friday, Jan. 13.

Government lawyers said there is "an important distinction between the right to publish news and the right to gather news."

Funeral services are incomplete at the Norcott & Co. Funeral Home in Ayden. Mr. Moore was the husband of Mrs. Lydia Jackson Moore of the home.

Registration for the spring semester was to have begun today, with classes scheduled to begin Wednesday. Registration now has been postponed until Wednesday and classes until Friday, Jan. 13.

Martin's order was challenged by the Central South Carolina Chapter of the Society of Professional Journalists, Sigma Delta Chi; the South Carolina Broadcasters Association; the South Carolina Press Association; The Enterprise, Inc.; and individual newsmen.

Surviving are one son, Dean Painter of Greenville; three daughters, Mae Parker of Albany, Hazel Williams and Grace Hodges, both of Corvallis; five grandchildren; nine great-

Shower ending today and turning colder. Lows Monday from the upper 20s in the mountains to 40s along the coast. Fair and cold Tuesday and Wednesday with overnight lows in the 20s with teens in the mountains. Highs in the 40s.

ECU Returns Home Against St. Peter's

Coming back off the road after six straight games is enough to make anyone happy. But coming off the road after snapping a five-game losing streak makes the East Carolina University Pirates almost delirious with excitement.

The Bucs, who won a 58-56 victory over strong William & Mary on Saturday, return home for the first time since December 5 to entertain St. Peter's College Tuesday night, with tipoff set at 7:30 p.m. in Mingos Coliseum.

The Pirates might not even recognize their home court. Coach Larry Gillman joked, "We haven't had many practices there, and we haven't played at home much either."

East Carolina has had just two home games, against UNC Wilmington and Alderson-Broaddus, losing the former and winning the latter. Gillman has called the loss to Wilmington the most embarrassing ever for him.

"I just hope that we can play well at home. I really don't think we played well in either of our home games, even the victory."

East Carolina is now 2-7 on the year after the win over William & Mary, which fell to 9-2 on the year. For the Indians, the loss ended a seven-game winning streak. During the seven game streak, they beat number two ranked North Carolina.

Oliver Mack continues to lead the Pirate scoring with a 27.0 mark, having hit 22 and 24 points against South Carolina and William & Mary, respectively, last week.

Herb Krusen ranks second in scoring with a 15.0 mark. Krusen was held to below ten for the first time in a number of games by tough John Lowenhaupt of the Indians. Herb Gray, who saw little action in either of the two games, dropped his average to 13.7. Gray is still hobbled by an ankle injury.

But the man who has come on in relief of Gray, freshman Bernard Hill has done well. He hit ten against the Gamecocks, and then added 12 in the Indian game. He's upped his average to 7.1 while hitting eight of 12 shots from the floor and six of seven from the line in the past two games.

The other starters include Walter Moseley, 3.4, and Greg Cornelius, 6.6. Cornelius is the top rebounder with a 7.4 mark, while Gray is getting 7.3 and Krusen, 5.3.

St. Peter's will be coming into the contest with a 5-6 record, having lost its last three games, all at home. The last loss was a 67-63 defeat at the hands of Manhattan. In that game, St. Peter's hit 13 of 16 at the free throw line, but saw their foe cash in on 21 of 28, making the difference in the contest.

Only one starter returns off the Monarch's 13-13 team of last year.

Kevin Bannon, a 5-11 guard, is the leading scorer this season at 16.9, while his backcourt mate, Paul Siljee, 6-3, is averaging 16.0. The next man is 6-7 center Larry Barrett, averaging 9.0 points and 7.5 rebounds a game.

The Pirates and Monarchs have met eight times in the past, with St. Peter's holding a 5-3 lead in the series. Their last game, in 1976, saw the Monarchs take an 83-67 victory.

The contest is the first of five straight home games before a three-game road trip. The Bucs entertain the Athletics In Action on Thursday night, then are idle until next Tuesday, when they have a Mingies rematch with William & Mary. After that, strong Iona comes in on January 19, with UNC Asheville on the 21.

Searches Begin For Successors To Dooley, Mills

By The Associated Press
The Atlantic Coast Conference lost two football coaches over the weekend, one of them a winner snatched away by a non-league school and the other a loser dismissed by his school's athletic council. Searches for successors for both men are under way.

Bill Dooley Sunday formally confirmed speculation that he would leave the University of North Carolina to become football coach and athletic director at Virginia Polytechnic Institute.

And Wake Forest University's Chuck Mills, whose Deacons limped to a 1-10 record in the just-completed season, was considering whether to accept the university's offer of other duties.

Sports promotion director Pat Gainey said Wake Forest Athletic Director Gene Hooks met with the football team Sunday afternoon. "He urged them to stick with the program and explained the situation," Gainey said.

University President James Ralph Scales told the Associated Press he did not know if Mills planned to accept the university's offer. "That's the question I have," he said. Mills could not be reached for comment.

Meanwhile, Hooks was in Atlanta for the NCAA convention and meeting of the American Football Coaches Association. He told the Winston-Salem Journal that he would interview candidates for the head coaching job while there.

Published reports said John Mackovic, a former Wake Forest quarterback and now an assistant coach at Purdue, appeared to be the top prospect.

University of North Carolina officials said they were sorry to lose Dooley, the school's most successful football coach ever. A number of potential successors were being mentioned Sunday, including assistant coaches Jim Donnan and Pat Watson.

"I will confer immediately with Athletic Director Bill Cooney, our athletic council and our faculty athletics committee concerning the selection of a new head football coach," UNC Chancellor Ferebee Taylor said. "We will name our new coach as soon as possible so we can preserve the continuity of our fine football program."

"I was sorry to learn of Coach Dooley's decision to accept the offer made to him by Virginia Tech," Taylor said through a school spokesman. "He leaves Carolina with our good wishes to him in his new endeavors."

Dooley had four years remaining on his UNC contract. His teams compiled a 69-53-2 record since he began as head coach in 1967.

Donnan's name was reported earlier this week as a possible successor, and a source close to the UNC athletic department who asked not to be named said Sunday that Donnan would be considered.

After serving as head coach at Iowa State and Pittsburgh, Johnny Majors is now coaching his alma mater, Tennessee.

Ali Track Meet A Big Knockout

LONG BEACH, Calif. (AP) — The Muhammad Ali Invitational indoor track meet, first competition of the 1978 indoor season, was nothing less than a knockout.

The Ali meet produced three world records and several other outstanding marks Saturday night, which was surprising considering that this midyear between Olympic Games is traditionally an off season for U.S. track and field.

If Saturday night is any indication, perhaps 1978 will be an exception.

Setting the records at the Long Beach Arena were Houston McTear, who clocked 6.54 seconds in the 60-meter dash; Mike Tully, who cleared 18-feet, 4 inches in the pole vault, and Herman Frazier, who zipped to a 1:01.3 time in the 500 meters.

In addition, Paul Cummings set an American record in the 1500 meters with a time of 3:39.4 in finishing second to Kenya's Wilson Waigwa. Greg Joy just missed what would have been a world record of 7-7 in the high jump and Tommy Haynes leaped 26-6 to win the long jump.

The 1,500 and long jump marks were better than any established last year.

McTear defeated an outstanding sprint field in setting his world record. Among the also-rans were Olympian Steve Riddick, two-time NCAA champion Harvey Glance, World Cup 100-meter champion Steve Williams and Olympic 200-meter champion Don Quarrie.

McTear's time eclipsed the 6.57 record set by West Germany's Gerhard Wucherer in 1972. Tully cleared five heights, beginning with 16-6, on his first try in breaking Dan Ripley's mark of 18-3". Tully did not attempt a higher height.

Waigwa's winning time in the 1500 was 3:38.6, the second fastest indoor clocking in history. Favored Filbert Bayi of Tanzania ran a distant fourth.

Bucs Ranked Nationally

East Carolina University's swimming team was ranked first in the nation in two events by the latest standings of Swimming World, which are compiled by the College Swim Coaches Association.

Pirate John McCauley was ranked tops in the 50-yard freestyle with a time of 20.79 and second in the 100 freestyle with a time of 46.08 in the listings, published late in December.

The Buc 400 freestyle relay team was also ranked first in the nation with a time of 3:04.83. The team consists of McCauley, Billy Thorne, John Tudor and Bill Fehling. In addition, Thorne was ranked fourth in the 100 freestyle.

Watson Wins By 1

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Despite a round of 63 and a quick victory already in the bag, Tom Watson has a lot of work to do. "I'm glad that's over," he said Sunday after a too-close-for-comfort triumph in the kick-off event of the 1978 PGA Tour season, the Joe Garagiola-Tucson Open.

"It's too early in the season for this kind of thing."

He had to manufacture a hard-won final round of par 72 to secure a one-stroke victory over challenging Bobby Wadkins, finally winning with a par to Wadkins' bogey on the final hole at the sprawling, cactus-studded, 7,305-yard Tucson National Golf Club course.

"If I don't start driving the ball better, I'm not going to have the season I had last year. Even winning the tournament, I don't feel the Tom Watson of January, 1978 is playing as well as the Tom Watson of January, 1977."

Watson didn't win a tournament in January of 1977, but he was setting the groundwork for Player of the Year honors. Before the season was over he'd beaten Jack Nicklaus in dramatic, head-to-head confrontations in the British Open and Masters, won three other American titles, topped the money-winners with $310,000 and had the lowest stroke average on the tour.

Mentally and physically tired, he took 2½ months away from the game at the end of the year, devoted himself to flying lessons and came to Tucson with a bright, cheerful attitude and a certain doubt about what he was going to pull out of his golf bag.

"I was nervous during the first round," he said. "You have to wonder to yourself, 'Have I lost it all?'"

He answered that question with a 63 and finished out the week at 276, 12 under par. He collected $40,000 from the total purse of $200,000 and immediately returned $1,000 to the sponsoring Conquistadors for use in their local charities.

Wadkins, the younger brother of PGA champ Lanny Wadkins and seeking his first title in four years of tour activity, twice tied Watson for the lead and went to the final hole needing only a par to force a playoff. He made bogey instead, missing the green with his second shot. That finished at 71-277, good for the $22,800 second place check.

"I'm very disappointed about 18," Wadkins said. "I hit my (second) shot just absolutely perfect but I must have got a bad bounce."

Howard Twitty chipped in for a birdie on the final hole for a 68 and a 278 total that put him third alone. The group at 279 included Lee Trevino, Charles Coody and Keith Fergus. Coody and Fergus each shot 70 in the warm sunshine, and Trevino had a 71.

Defending champion Bruce Lietzke was 69-286 and Johnny Miller, who won this title three times in a row before slipping into the golfing doldrums, beat only one man with a fat 76 and a 297 total.

Connors Is On Top Again

NEW YORK (AP) — Jimmy Connors was talking like an older man, a man approaching the Geritol age.

"I'm getting a little older, you know," the Belleville, Ill., left-hander, looking bright-eyed and content, said Sunday after beating Sweden's 21-year-old Bjorn Borg 6-4, 1-6, 6-4 in the $400,000 Grand Prix Masters tennis tournament.

"When you're 18, you're young and you're eager. When you're 25, like I am, I've done it all. I've seen it from both ends, and I like it better at the top."

Connors was on top again after a doubtful year in which he had lost Wimbledon to Borg and the U.S. Open to Guillermo Vilas of Argentina. He was seeded only eighth here. His claim to the No. 1 spot in tennis had been under serious question.

And while Sunday's victory in the final of the eight-man round-robin Masters doesn't seal it in bronze for him, he and his public could at least consider him king for the day.

Connors won $100,000 and he seemed to have a lot of fun, being reasonably polite at the same time. He bantered with the crowd. Unlike the hostile group that cheered Vilas over him at the Open, these spectators seemed to love him.

With one set each on the board, Connors pulled himself together in the final set. After suffering a service break in the first game, he held the next time and broke Borg in the fourth game on a tricky forehand net-cord shot to tie it 2-2.

He squandered three break points in the eighth game, allowing Borg to make it 4-4. He went up 40-0 in the ninth game, only to have Borg run it to deuce. Then Connors put the game away on a brilliant forehand volley cross court.

Connors broke service in the final game on a forehand volley that brought sweet revenge for his five-set loss to Borg at Wimbledon, the English grass-court classic.

Borg, who had defaulted his third-round match with the flu, prompting much criticism, said he had been tired but that the illness didn't have much to do with it.

Meanwhile, Raul Ramirez of Mexico beat good friend and doubles partner Brian Gottfried 7-6, 7-6 in what turned out to be no more than an exhibition.

Vilas, who had defaulted his third-round match before playing in the semis against Borg, defaulted again from the third-place match that had been scheduled for Sunday.

Officials at first said they would replace him with Ramirez and pay both players fourth-place money. But that didn't conform to the substitution system officials had used for Borg's and Vilas' earlier defaults. So they decided to pay Gottfried $40,000 for third place, Vilas $32,000 for fourth and Ramirez $24,000 plus a fee for playing the exhibition.

Tournament officials acknowledged that the default dilemma had been an embarrassment and said they are working on a new system for next year's Masters.

Bill Dooley's decision to resign at the University of North Carolina as head football coach to take over that job, plus the athletic directorship at Virginia Tech was about as surprising as dawn by Sunday afternoon when it was finally confirmed.

Rumors had flown for a week of the impending move, but there was always that slight amount of doubt about it. Dooley recently came close to taking the job at the University of Miami and thought better of it on the way to the airport to fly there.

But the offer made by Tech was too good to pass up. Apparently, Dooley will serve in the dual capacity of football coach and AD for the next five years, then become the full-time athletic director. Those plans, of course, are subject to change.

The dual position offers a good deal of security for Dooley, more than he had at Carolina. Despite his record at UNC, there were those who wanted him out. Those people are now happy.

Where Carolina will go from here is up in the air. We asked Doug Paschal, former Rose High School running back, now a rising junior for the Tar Heels, what he thought.

"I have no idea what they might do," he said. "Coach Dooley could end up taking the whole staff with him to Virginia Tech. I don't know whether they will pick someone on the staff or go outside."

Some circles have mentioned former N.C. State star Jim Donnan for the job already, and Paschal feels that he might make a good coach.

"Losing Coach Dooley is a big loss, a great loss, really," Paschal said. "We have to find a new coach soon, regroup and get back together." Doug added that he did not feel that the move would hurt the Tar Heel recruiting, however. "Most of the kids who want to come to Carolina will come regardless."

However, we learned Saturday while attending the ECU-William & Mary game in Williamsburg, Va., that at least one highly-sought Virginia player who had stated that he was going to Carolina has already backed off. He, along with others, will probably end up at VPI.

How Will It Affect ECU?

Dooley's move could have some affect on East Carolina. Not that it will change the announced policy of the Tar Heels no longer playing ECU after the current contract expires in 1981.

Virginia Tech has been called by those seeking a new conference in the area, the kingpin school. Tech, in moving to help form a new conference, would be very instrumental.

Last year, VPI made moves to get into the Atlantic Conference and were rebuffed. Could they, or would they, try again with an old ACC man at the helm?

ECU Athletic Director Bill Cain doubts it. "I don't think the ACC wants Virginia Tech regardless of who is at the helm," Cain said. "Georgia Tech is the only school with any chance to get into the ACC."

Cain does feel that Dooley, despite being a detractor of East Carolina while at UNC, will look more favorably on ties with ECU in the future. "He knows the area, so that should be a plus for us," Cain said. "I may be wrong, but I think he'll want to do what is best for Virginia Tech, and being outside a conference isn't easy. I think he'll want a conference tie-up." That, feels Cain, could lead to the formation of a new conference, of which ECU would hopefully be a part.

"My only real concern," Cain added, "is who will take over at North Carolina." Did this mean he might feel his own coach, Pat Dye, might be a candidate?

Cain had no comment on that, but added that if Carolina stayed with its staff, Donnan might be the logical choice.

Deacons Surprise

The move by Wake Forest on Friday to fire Chuck Mills as football coach came as a big surprise. Not that Mills was fired, but that the school waited so long to do it.

Apparently there is more to the story than it would appear. Mills was in a situation where winning is darn near impossible, and most people felt that there would be no move this year anyway. Waiting this late certainly will cause great recruiting problems.

Add to that the relative unattractiveness of the job, and it makes finding a head coach even more difficult.

A quick check of the Wake Forest record book reveals only four Deacon teams in the past 25 years have come up with winning records, and all those were barely winning. Cal Stoll did it last in 1971, when he had a 6-5 record, following up a similar mark the year before.

Prior to that, one must go back to 1959 to find another Deacon winner, that under Paul Amen when the Deacs were 6-4. Prior to that, Tom Rogers had a 5-4-1 team in 1955. Rogers also had two other winners in 1951 and 1952, the two years after he took over from Peahead Walker, the last winning coach in Wake history.

No Wake Forest team has won more than six games since the 1944 team went 8-1, and no other team in the school's history, since 1888, won more games.

Sudhop Improving

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina State basketball Coach Norm Sloan used to insist that Glenn Sudhop really did have potential while everybody else was laughing at the gangly center's latest display of clumsy incompetence.

Now Sloan can afford to tell the world that he told us so, because Sudhop has suddenly bloomed this season as a real threat.

That he had improved was apparent when the season opened, but Sudhop must have amazed even himself Saturday as the Wolfpack demolished the Blue Devils of Duke, 74-50. Sudhop was up against Mike Gminski, generally acknowledged as the best of the conference under the basket. But Sudhop, who stands 7-foot-2, outscored Gminski 15-6 and matched him off the boards with eight rebounds. "I just tried not to let him get the ball," Sudhop said afterward. "I always tried to keep a hand in his face."

'Chemistry' Is Key To Portland Success

By The Associated Press
Elgin Baylor calls it "chemistry."

"They play together like champions," notes the New Orleans coach. "That's about the best way I can describe it."

Whatever combustible mixture it is that Jack Ramsay has cooked up, the Portland Trail Blazers have it in abundance this season. And they improved the best record in the National Basketball Association with a 122-100 victory over the New Orleans Jazz Sunday.

"We're putting our talent together," said Lionel Hollins after leading the defending NBA champions to their 39th straight homecourt victory, dating back to last season.

The victory, the 31st in 36 games for the runaway leaders in the Pacific Division, was led by the ubiquitous Hollins, who not only scored 27 points but held high-scoring Pete Maravich in check.

Hollins was also the hero in Portland's comeback victories over Chicago and Detroit.

Elsewhere in the NBA, the Philadelphia 76ers beat the Boston Celtics 94-91; the Denver Nuggets trimmed the Chicago Bulls 109-104; the Washington Bullets nipped the New Jersey Nets 99-98; the Indiana Pacers beat the Los Angeles Lakers 104-103; the Seattle SuperSonics whipped the Golden State Warriors 99-91 and the Milwaukee Bucks turned back the Kansas City Kings 133-123.

76ers 94, Celtics 91
Lloyd Free scored a game-high 20 points to lead Philadelphia over beleaguered Boston. The Celtics, who trailed by 15 points at halftime, challenged in the fourth period, but Free tossed in four field goals and one free throw to help the 76ers pull away.

Nuggets 109, Bulls 104
David Thompson scored 23 points and rookie Anthony Roberts provided 18 points in a reserve role as Denver beat Chicago. Denver's sixth victory in a row gave the Nuggets a five-game lead over the Bulls in the Midwest Division and extended Chicago's losing streak to five games.

Bullets 99, Nets 98
Tom Henderson's 20-foot jump shot at the buzzer gave Washington its victory over New Jersey. Henderson drove the length of the court for his game-winning basket after grabbing a rebound of a missed shot by Kevin Porter.

Pacers 104, Lakers 103
John Williamson poured in 24 points and Ricky Sobers added 20 as Indiana staved off a late rally to beat Los Angeles. Two free throws by Danny Roundfield with 15 seconds left wrapped the game up for the Pacers.

Sonics 99, Warriors 91
Marvin Webster scored 17 points and grabbed 17 rebounds as Seattle climbed to the .500 mark for the first time this season by beating Golden State. The SuperSonics, improving their record to 20-20, have won 15 of 18 games since Lenny Wilkens took over the slumping team last Nov. 30 from Bob Hopkins.

Bucks 133, Kings 123
Brian Winters scored 12 of his 22 points in the third quarter to propel Milwaukee over hapless Kansas City. It was the Kings' eighth straight loss and 11th on the road, occurring only hours after the dismissal of Coach Phil Johnson. The club's assistant general manager, Larry Staverman, was acting coach for the game.

Houston Coach: Razorbacks No. 1

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

The start of the Southwest Conference race brought out the best in the Arkansas Razorbacks...and that of course was the worst thing that could happen to the Houston Cougars.

"I didn't see anything that will change my mind about Arkansas," said Houston Coach Guy Lewis after Sunday's conference-opening 84-65 loss to the nation's third-ranked team. "I still think they're No. 1 in the country."

The Cougars had been averaging 102 points a game, but certainly didn't look like one of the nation's top scoring teams against their powerful SWC colleagues.

"Sometimes you just play folks that are better than you," Lewis said. "That's what happened today. There's no one in the country who has three finer players than (Sidney) Moncreif, (Marvin) Delph and (Ron) Brewer. (Steve) Schall and (Jim) Counce give them the best starting team in the world."

Arkansas Coach Eddie Sutton could find few things wrong with his fine team as the Razorbacks opened defense of their SWC crown.

"Along with Kansas, Houston has the best press we've faced this year," said Sutton. "We gave them a different look early to try and break it. Our defense and their cold shooting were the big factors in the lopsided score. Defensively, we had an outstanding first half."

Houston could hit only 12 of its first 45 shots through the Razorbacks' defensive curtain and at one point found itself in a 40-20 hole.

"Getting into foul trouble is the only way they can lose," said Lewis. "Or maybe Moncreif, Delph and Brewer can catch the flu when they play us at Houston later in the season."

Two other ranked teams were in action in an unusually heavy Sunday schedule. Seventh-ranked UCLA whipped Washington State 70-55 and No. 16 Holy Cross edged Army 78-76.

In Saturday's games, No. 1 Kentucky defeated Florida 86-67; No. 2 North Carolina turned back No. 13 Virginia 76-61; sixth-ranked Indiana State whipped West Texas State 79-63; New Mexico upset No. 9 Nevada-Las Vegas 102-98 and No. 10 Louisville beat No. 12 Cincinnati 78-75.

Also, Illinois upset No. 11 Indiana 65-64; No. 14 Kansas defeated Missouri 71-67; Wake Forest stunned No. 15 Maryland 84-75; No. 17 Providence outscored Canisius 82-72; No. 18 Michigan State beat Wisconsin 74-63; No. 18 San Francisco walloped St. Mary's 111-87 and No. 20 Georgetown defeated St. John's 72-61.

Delph scored 24 points and Moncreif had 19 to lead the Razorbacks. Cecile Rose paced the Cougars with 21 points and Mike Schultz had a game-high 14 rebounds for the losers.

Ray Townsend and Roy Hamilton combined for 36 points to pace UCLA over Washington State. Michael Vicens converted two free throws with one second left to boost Holy Cross over Army in the bedlam of a pro-Cadet crowd at West Point.

"I knew I'd make both shots," said Vicens. "The crowd got me psyched up."

Kentucky overpowered Florida with Kyle Macy's 20 points and a tenacious defense, leaving Gator Coach John Lotz in awe of the nation's top-ranked team.

"That is the best team we've played since I've become head coach," said Lotz. "Kentucky just outplayed us, shooting outside and inside, and on defense."

The Wildcats won in one of the toughest places to play in the Southeastern Conference—Florida's intimidating little arena nicknamed "Alligator Alley."

"I was really surprised at the margin of victory in that place," noted Kentucky Coach Joe Hall.

North Carolina played near-perfect ball behind Phil Ford's 25 points to beat Virginia on the Cavaliers' home court.

"You saw a very fine basketball team have a great basketball game—and unfortunately it was against us," said Virginia Coach Terry Holland.

after watching the Tar Heels shoot a blazing 77 percent from the field. "I thought we had a good shot in the second half, though. I told our kids at halftime they wouldn't shoot that well in the second half. That shows how much I know."

Larry Bird scored 30 points to lead Indiana State past West Texas State. A 31-point, 11-rebound performance by Marvin Johnson helped New Mexico break Nevada-Las Vegas' 72-game home-court winning streak—the longest in the country.

Ironically, Cincinnati's mammoth 69-game streak also was snapped in the loss to Louisville Darrell Griffith's stuff shot with 19 seconds left led the Cardinals' victory before a standing-room-only crowd of 17,038 at Riverfront Coliseum, the largest in Ohio college basketball history.

Rich Adams' 21 points sparked Illinois over Indiana. Adams scored 15 of his points in the first half to help the Illini build a 10-point lead at intermission and they held off a furious Indiana charge in the second half.

Kansas beat Missouri behind Donnie Von Moore's 25 points. The Jayhawks built up leads of 11 points in the first half and 10 in the second, but couldn't shake a Missouri club which they beat by 47 points less than two weeks ago.

Frank Johnson scored 24 points and Rod Griffin added 23 and collected 17 rebounds to lead Wake Forest over Maryland.

Pam-Pack Downs Rose

WASHINGTON — Dominique Wilkins' 32 points offset a 27-point production by Rose High's Anthony Bryant as Washington defeated the Rampants Saturday night, 84-61.

The Pam-Pack led the whole way, jumping out to a 17-10 first-quarter margin and stretching it to 43-31 at the half. The Rampants cut into that lead in the third quarter, but still trailed 59-50 at the end of the quarter.

Washington stretched its lead back to 13 in the final frame.

James Hawkins added 14 points to Rose's total, while Eric Harris and Alvis Rogers scored 13 for Washington and Tony Boston had 12.

In the girl's game, the Lady Pam-Pack defeated the Rampettes 52-37. Campbell paced the Washington attack with 21, while Cheryl Taylor had 13 for Rose.

The losses drop the Rose records to 6-4 for the boys and 2-5 for the girls. Rose travels to West Craven tomorrow night.

Drought-Stricken People On The Edge Of Disaster

If It Moved, Hunters Of Edwardian Era Shot It

By ROBERT MUSEL
LONDON (UPI) — The Marquess of Ripon, a meticulous fellow, kept a record of every living thing he killed in a 46-year career of dedicated hunting. The exact total is 556,813 rhinoceri, tigers, buffaloes, wild pigs, deer, hares, rabbits and all sorts of game birds, including a mysterious category listed as "various" under which he reported 10,258 victims.

If that sounds as though his lordship spent most of his leisure time between 1867 and 1923 shooting everything that came into his sights, that is exactly the impression given by a new and intriguing look at a vanished era titled "The Big Shots" (Doubtless).

The subtitle of Jonathan Garnier Ruffer's re-creation of the heyday of the great landowners is: "Edwardian Shooting Parties." These were a feature of the social season under the Prince of Wales during his long apprenticeship as heir to Queen Victoria and after his ascent to the throne in 1901 as King Edward VII. And the fact they had royal patronage was partly the doing of the old Queen, whose refusal to let him partake in government after the death of her beloved Prince Albert, forced him into other diversions.

Ruffer says shooting was the way all the land-owning nobility entertained in the declining years of the 19th century and at least until the first World War, and they did so on a scale so staggering it caused some bankruptcies. Among these were Lord Walsingham and Maharajah Duleep Singh, who called Queen Victoria Mrs. Fagin because she would not return the fabulous Kohinoor diamond seized from his family by the East India Company and presented to her as a gift.

Walsingham's framed record of 1,070 grouse in a single day now hangs in the lavatory of Merton Hall, one of the few possessions left to the family after the debacle. The present Lord Walsingham, a collateral descendant, in a foreword to the book also pays tribute to the book also pays tribute of sorts to his shooting forebears "remarkable record for marital infidelity."

"He left no legitimate issue," he avers.

They were extraordinary characters in those days, men of ancient lineage and vast wealth, often living in huge medieval castles and houses whose lack of heating and few widely separated lavatories, says the author, made "constipation a positive blessing," especially at venerable Warwick or royal Windsor Castle.

Food was served in quantities inconceivable today and often cold by the time it took to reach the dining room from the kitchens, which at Blenheim Palace, home of the Dukes of Marlborough, to name but one, were 300 yards apart. The dinners at Blenheim to mark the shooting season usually consisted of eight courses — a hot and a cold soup served together, two fish courses, a meat course and a game course, a hot savory dessert and mountains of fruit.

The record for shooting 7,000 rabbits in one day was set at Blenheim. It was at Blenheim or similar, the author does not say, that socialite Washington Hibber, asked by his noble host for the reason he was leaving early replied: "My dear fellow, I am leaving because the entree was so cold at dinner it made my teeth ache all night."

King Edward, who set the fashion of having trousers pressed down the middle instead of the sides and of leaving the bottom button of his vest undone, always staged one mandatory shooting party the week of Nov. 9 — his birthday. All invited were expected to bring presents, which he would accept with a fine show of surprise that anyone should have remembered the day.

Another great shot was the eighth Duke of Devonshire who, as the Marquess of Hartington, was known as Harty Tarty because of his long friendship with the famous courtesan Catherine (Skittles) Walters. He married the former Duchess of Manchester, and when he moved up to the dukedom she was known as Double Duchess. Habitually drowsy, the Duke once said he dreamed he was addressing the House of Lords and when he woke up he was.

Lord Tennyson had a Russian nobleman as a shooting guest. He came in one day reporting he had shot two peasants. "You mean pheasants," said his Lordship. "No," said the Russian. "Peasants. They were insolent so I shot them."

By GUY GUGLIOTTA
SERRINHA, Brazil (UPI) — The mayor of Serrinha scuffed the toe of his boot in the thin crust of dried mud overlaying the deep dust of the rural airstrip.

"Look here," he said, mashing a piece of the hardpan into a gray powder between thumb and forefinger. "It rained a bit yesterday, but not enough to sink in before the sun came out and dried it up."

"I planted soybeans last year... Then it didn't rain."

"Everything died. It hasn't rained here hardly at all for nearly two years."

Serrinha, lying 90 miles west of the Bahia state capital of Salvador on the Atlantic coast, is one of hundreds of small cities and towns living on the edge of disaster in an area twice the size of California on the northeast shoulder of Brazil. This region is called the Sertao.

Sertao has variously been taken to mean "backlands," "scrublands," "backwoods," "bush" or simply "interior," but it has no translation. Sometimes it is green. But mostly it is a flat gray tableland swimming in the tropical heat, its parched surface dotted with cactus and bristly shrubs known as "catinga."

It is a country rich in legend and tradition, a land of blood feuds and bandits, of unspeakable crimes and dark romances, of mystery and terrible hardship. Its mixed-race population of whites, blacks and Indians are a hard people, raised on drought, hunger and poverty, accustomed to survival in a hostile environment.

The Sertao's cruelties are one reason why the Northeast is Brazil's most backward region, but its folklore also makes it a wellspring of Brazilian culture and literary inspiration.

Euclides da Cunha's epic historical novel, "Rebellion in the Backlands," takes place 150 miles north of Serrinha, in the Sertao town of Canudos, where some 25,000 virtually unarmed, starving followers of a fanatical holy man called Anthony the Counselor defied the Brazilian government for two years before a 4,000-man army backed by artillery razed the town and killed its defenders in 1897.

The Sertao also sired "Gabriela," "Tereza Batista" and others of the bold and beautiful heroines that inhabit the novels of Bahia Jorge Amado, Brazil's best-known living writer.

But for the people of the Sertao, 334,880 square miles of territory in ten different Brazilian states, life is seldom bold and beautiful. Most of the time it is a continuing struggle against the periodic droughts that strike without warning.

Brazil's geographers describe the Sertao as "semi-arid," and the region's moderate 25-inch-per-year average rainfall hardly seems cause for alarm. But the geographers also point out that the problem is not how much, but when. In many parts of the Sertao the rain all falls in one or two months to run off or evaporate before the land can absorb it.

The mayor of Serrinha, Aloisio Carneiro da Silva, says his rainy season is supposed to last from April to July with additional showers coming between October and January. In other parts of the Sertao the "season" is different, but everywhere in the Sertao there is always a possibility that, as in Serrinha, there will be no season.

The 1975-77 drought in Serrinha and the neighboring towns of Teofilandia, Ixu and Araxi, has destroyed money-making sisal crops, ruined corn, bean and manioc harvests, killed livestock and left a good part of the area's 70,000 inhabitants destitute.

Children two and three years old, suffering from malnutrition, couldn't walk, couldn't talk. Some had permanent brain damage, many others had retarded motor skills and growth impairment. Heads of household, with no crops to harvest, traveled to Salvador to take industrial jobs to support their families until Serrinha's next planting season.

"We had drought in 1968 the last time," said one Serrinha farmer. "It was bad, but not as bad as this. These last two years, the economy just evaporated."

For four centuries the primary solution to drought in the Sertao has been migration by its inhabitants, first to the sugar plantations that dominated the thin strip of fertile, moist tropical farmland along the Northeast coast and more recently to the shantytown slums of the region's main cities — Salvador, Recife, Natal, Fortaleza and Joao Pessoa.

Innumerable social and economic development programs in the Northeast have made a dent in the problem, but they have not stopped the droughts, tamed the Sertao or stopped it from spitting streams of exhausted refugees in the time-honored pattern.

In Serrinha, 1977 brought a new social services center to provide technical assistance to farmers, health care, sports and cultural development programs and a documentation facility to furnish working papers to people who have to leave the area to find jobs.

The Brazilian legion for Assistance also brought food supplements to children under age three and to nursing and pregnant women from families with incomes of less than $300 a month.

This program has 14,500 clients, "for all practical purposes every young child and nursing mother in the area," according to national supervisor Luiz Fernando da Silva Pinto. In five months the project's two-year-olds showed an average weight gain of 5½ pounds.

Silva Pinto, in Serrinha for the dedication of the center, said the program "is not an emergency relief project."

"What we're trying to do is salvage a generation. A well-fed child's brain reaches 90 percent of development at age three, but the kids here don't reach that level until they are 21. Some of them don't reach it at all."

Pork Producers Gather Jan. 12

The 22nd Annual Pork Producers Conference will be held Thursday, Jan. 12 and Friday, Jan. 13, at the Royal Villa in Raleigh. Registration will begin at 8:00 a.m. on Jan. 12 with the first session of the conference beginning at 9:00 a.m. Registration fee is $8.00 prior to January 12 and $10.00 on January 12.

An outstanding program on various phases of swine production will be presented. Anyone interested in the swine industry is encouraged to attend. For registration forms or further information, contact the Pitt County Extension Office.

Surprise Gift To Orphanage

OSTEND, Belgium (AP) — Singer Ella Fitzgerald has donated $2,000 to the "Ibis" orphanage to help Belgian children, directors of the orphanage announced.

They said Sunday that a check from Miss Fitzgerald came in the mail as a "complete surprise" Friday.

Miss Fitzgerald sang at a gala here last July to raise funds for the orphanage. About $5,000 was raised then.

Guild Salutes Totie Fields

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Totie Fields, the comedienne who made a nightclub and theater comeback after a leg amputation and a string of other medical maladies, has been named "Entertainer of the Year" by the American Guild of Variety Artists.

The 8,000-member guild, which has been presenting entertainment awards for eight years, also selected Miss Fields as female comedy star of the year. Other 1977 awards were announced previously.

The awards ceremony, hosted by comedian Jackie Gleason at Caesars Palace here, will be broadcast by CBS-TV on Jan. 18.

Peggy Lee A Perfectionist Then, Now

HER DOLLS TREASURED—Actress Margaret O'Brien still displays the flashing eyes that made her famous even as a child star at the age of four. She hasn't made a Hollywood movie in twenty years but still stays active in television and the theater. At the height of her career toy makers turned out Margaret O'Brien dolls, and today they are collector's items, one having been sold for $500. (AP Laserphoto)

LOS ANGELES (AP)—“The lass has a great flair for phrasing... that she gets a fine beat, that she sings in tune, and that she's awfully good-looking are self-evident,” critic George Simon wrote in 1941.

The object of his cheers: Peggy Lee, 21, a new singer in Benny Goodman's band. Thirty-six years later, the words still hold true. The blonde-haired lass is a grandmother now, but still going strong.

On Friday, Miss Lee, a gifted songwriter as well as singer, will do a turn on a CBS special, “People's Command Performance,” reprising such hits as “Is That All There Is,” “Lover” and “Fever.”

A perfectionist who exudes confidence, she laughed in recalling the unease she felt in 1941 when she got the proverbial big break while singing in a Chicago club after little success elsewhere.

A lady who later became Benny Goodman's wife lured him in the saloon to hear the smoky-voiced Miss Lee, a native of Fargo, N.D.

“I didn't think Benny liked me,” the singer said. “When she brought him in, he looked at me in a rather preoccupied way—which I later learned was just his way of listening, of being absorbed in music.”

He was absorbed enough to hire her. While with his band, she co-wrote and recorded her first hit, a bluesy lament, “Why Don't You Do Right?” Times and tastes change, but she's still on top.

So how does a singer survive musical eras that go from big bands to middle-of-the-road to rock 'n' roll to acid rock to all of these? She took a deep breath and tried to sum it up.

“Well,” she said, “I think it's being genuinely interested in what's going on, in the moods of the public, choosing the best of what I can interpret while continuing with the standards.”

By standards, she meant tunes by Cole Porter, George Gershwin, Johnny Mercer. The other wares include rockers by such as Blood, Sweat & Tears and off-the-wall works by Randy Newman.

As a talent considered in a class with Frank Sinatra and Tony Bennett, Miss Lee was asked for a few observations on younger music stars and other assorted matters in popular music.

Paul Simon: “I love him. I sing anything of his that a woman could sing. He shows such deep feelings in so many diverse directions.”

—Disco music: “Happy and fun, but it can get a little monotonous after a while. I'm all for it, but not as a serious kind of music.”

—Roger “King of the Road” Miller: “I love his stuff. His humor is beautiful.”

—Carly Simon: “I'm a big fan. And of her husband (James Taylor).”

—Major influences: “Hard to answer. I learned from a lot of musicians by listening to anyone who had something that sounded good to me. I imagine I was subconsciously studying techniques, phrasing, things like that. I still am learning...”

READY TO WORK AGAIN—Actor Dan Haggerty laughs with his wife, Diane, in Los Angeles during a news conference to announce his recovery from burns he suffered on his hands and arms six weeks ago during a birthday party for him. Haggerty will return to the television location for “Grizzly Adams” in which he plays the title role, in Salt Lake City, Utah, and Payson, Arizona, to resume filming the series. (AP Laserphoto)

Today's Cryptoquip clue: J equals E

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Q.1—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠83 ♥73 ♦KQ9652 ♣764
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♠ 2 ♣ Pass Pass
3 ♣ Pass ?
What do you bid now?

A.—By cue-bidding the opponents' suit, partner has shown an enormous hand. It is impossible to determine just how valuable your hand is—that depends on whether partner has a diamond fit. You can alert him to the fact that you have something by jumping to four diamonds. Don't do more than that. Partner might have a heart-spade two-suiter, so you can't afford to bypass four spades.

Q.2—East-West vulnerable, both sides have 60 on score, as South you hold:
♠Q85 ♥7 ♦KQ873 ♣K962
The bidding has proceeded:
West North East South
1 ♥ 1 ♠ 2 ♥ ?
What do you bid now?

A.—Three spades. You should let partner know that you have a reasonable hand. If you bid only two spades, he might think that you are competing on minimal values just to stop the opponents from buying the hand cheaply and closing out the rub. That false impression could put him at a disadvantage as the auction progresses.

Q.3—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠K93 ♥Q7 ♦865 ♣AKJ103
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♥ 1 ♠ 2 ♣ Pass
3 ♣ Pass ?
What do you bid now?

A.—In view of partner's jump shift, you should be in the slam zone, so a bid of three no trump would not meet with our approval. We suggest that you temporize for the moment by taking a preference to three hearts—honor doubleton on this auction is usually adequate support. This will allow partner to clarify his hand at a reasonably low level, and we will have ample opportunity later to rebid our good club suit.

Q.4—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠KQJ92 ♥105 ♦A1073 ♣83
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
Pass Pass 1 ♥ 2 ♦ ?
What action do you take?

A.—It is a close decision between a penalty double and a bid of two spades. We favor the latter action because we do not like suppressing a major suit of such quality. Also, the fact that the opponents are not vulnerable limits the size of the possible penalty. Despite the fact that partner opened in third seat, we want to try for game.

Q.5—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠K92 ♥86 ♦K983 ♣J1072
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♥ Pass 1 NT Pass
What action do you take?

A.—Partner has shown a weak hand with a long club suit. Still, your hand is so strong that the possibility of game is very much alive. A bid of three clubs won't show your full power, and five clubs is too unilateral. Four clubs fits the bill perfectly. Avoid a jump shift in diamonds because partner might be forced to raise, taking you past your safe club contract.

Wife Shaped Life Of Chester Bowles

By JAMES V. HEALION
ESSEX, Conn. (UPI)—It was war and the line had to be held against a supercharged economy. President Roosevelt reached into Connecticut in 1942 and named Chester Bowles to head the sensitive Office of Price Administration.

Bowles was ready. He was a Yale man, the guiding hand behind the booming New York advertising agency known as Benton and Bowles, and an articulate public speaker. In his role as head of the O.P.A. he developed a reputation as one of the nation's first consumer advocates.

Behind every successful man there is said to be a woman. In Bowles' case it was his wife, Dorothy Stebbins, a psychiatric social worker from Boston. He said meeting her in 1934 was “the most important event in shaping my later life.”

In the Office of Price Administration when Bowles headed it was a young Californian who came East with his wife, Pat, and started at $61 a week. But Richard Nixon became disenchanted and joined the Navy, returning to public life later to leave his mark on American history. Bowles stayed on in Washington after the war, insuring an orderly transition to a peacetime economy as director of the Office of Economic Stability. A Democrat, he became Connecticut's 78th governor in 1948 and served one term, producing legislation aimed at improving education, housing and taxes.

President Harry Truman appointed Bowles ambassador to India and Nepal in 1951. There he developed a keen interest in Asian affairs. He returned to the United States in 1958 and won a congressional seat from Connecticut.

Bowles was a severe critic of American involvement in Vietnam and the 1961 “Bay of Pigs” invasion. Despite this, he served as President Kennedy's chief foreign policy adviser before Dean Rusk was named secretary of state. In 1963 Bowles was named again to be ambassador to India and served there until he retired from public life in 1969.

FORECAST FOR TUESDAY, JANUARY 10, 1978

Your DAILY HOROSCOPE
from the CARROLL RIGTER INSTITUTE

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Some drastic and unexpected conditions arise to cause you deep thought as to how best to handle them. Take it easy and do nothing of a drastic nature. Evening brings you the good will and the active assistance of good friends and interesting acquaintances so join with them.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Don't be forceful with others and you avoid trouble. Update wardrobe and make a good impression on others.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Be very clever in the handling of any civic work or career matter, and don't take any chances that could bring danger. Be wise to the ways of others.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Not a good time for pursuing a new interest. Don't accept new acquaintances on face value. Screen them well before accepting them.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Be very precise in paying your debts and making collections, and keep credit high. Not good to be with a loved one during the day, but evening can be a fun time.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Partners are in a bad mood now but later you can have a fine understanding. Do not take any risks with other persons or there can be trouble. Keep your credit good.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Organize your work early so that you have time to get it done smoothly and without loss of precious time. Take time to meditate during free time. Take more interest in sports.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) The early part of the day is not good for recreation, but evening is just fine since the planets are favorable. Don't permit a loved one's crankiness to get you down.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Take care you do nothing to make a tense situation at home any worse. Don't make decision now as your thinking is unclear.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Any risks you take in motion could prove costly and painful. You need more cooperation from partners, but this does not come until late in the day. Take no risks with money.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Study money affairs well and reach right decisions. Wait for a better time to set up a better budget.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Not a good time for some unpredictable but clever act on your part. Wait for another time for such. Handle correspondence you have been neglecting.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Be with a trusted adviser or quietly plan how to make your life more successful, and avoid pitfalls. Improve health and good looks and go out socially. Feel more sure of yourself.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will have many progressive talents that should be channeled in the right directions. There is much ability at modernizing old ideas and methods and making them work efficiently. Permit to work out own systems that are original and can prove most successful, even if you as parents do not understand them.

Horowitz Plays Benefit Concert

NEW YORK (AP)—Pianist Vladimir Horowitz has performed in concert here with the same orchestra and in the same hall where he made his American debut 50 years ago.

The 74-year-old Horowitz, who last played with an orchestra at his silver jubilee on Jan. 12, 1953, chose Eugene Ormandy, 78, music director of the Philadelphia Orchestra since 1936, to conduct the Carnegie Hall concert with the New York Philharmonic on Sunday.

Horowitz, Ormandy and members of the orchestra all donated their services to the “Vladimir Horowitz Golden Jubilee,” which cost $250 for each box seat. The $168,000 raised will go to the orchestra.

Monday Night is Church Night at Sports World. So we've given your church youth director special coupons that let you skate for only $1.00. Because we think Sports World is an ideal place for church groups. With our great plastic skating floor, super skates, supervision, and a super good time. See your youth director for more information.

Eagleton Fought To Stay On Demo Ticket, Says McGovern

By WALTER R. MEARS
AP Special Correspondent

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. George McGovern says Sen. Thomas F. Eagleton would have defied him and refused to withdraw as his vice presidential nominee in 1972 "if I so much as hinted publicly" at concern about his ability to cope with the stress of national office.

McGovern now says that was the concern that finally convinced him Eagleton should quit the Democratic ticket. But he says Eagleton's price for withdrawal was a guarantee that his health would not be blamed.

In his newly published autobiography, "Grassroots," McGovern writes that he complied because he had no power to force his running mate to withdraw.

"I did what I had to, but the Eagleton matter ended whatever chance there was to defeat Richard Nixon in 1972," says McGovern, whose Democratic ticket was defeated overwhelmingly.

Sargent Shriver took Eagleton's place on that losing ticket. Eagleton withdrew as Democratic vice presidential nominee on July 31, 1972, a week after disclosing that he had entered hospitals in 1960, 1964 and 1966 to be treated for nervous exhaustion and fatigue, and on two of those occasions had undergone electric shock therapy.

McGovern also writes that Eagleton threatened to turn against the ticket he was leaving and "fight me" during the campaign if the health issue was raised later to explain the vice presidential switch.

McGovern quotes two doctors who had treated Eagleton as saying privately they were concerned about his ability to withstand the stress of the presidency should he ever succeed to that office. McGovern does not name the doctors.

Eagleton would not discuss the McGovern account, but disputed it indirectly by saying that the fairest and most objective version of the episode is that of author Theodore H. White in "The Making of the President - 1972." White wrote that Eagleton volunteered to withdraw after trying unsuccessfully to persuade McGovern that he should stay.

In addition, White's book reports that McGovern said after talking to the doctors that "the bill of health was clean."

Eagleton, re-elected to the Senate in Missouri by a landslide two years after the vice presidential episode, suggested that he may yet have the last word. "Should I ever write my autobiography, it will no doubt include my recollections" of 1972, he said.

McGovern recounts the chaotic and confused series of staff and personal contacts through which he learned of his running mate's medical record, and his own mishandling of the problem. At one point he had said he was 1,000 per cent for Eagleton and had no intention of dropping him. But the pressure for a change in the ticket intensified steadily.

Finally, on July 31, Eagleton and McGovern met in a Senate anteroom, joined by Sen. Gaylord Nelson of Wisconsin, a mutual friend.

According to McGovern, Eagleton said then that he was resigned to leaving the ticket, but insisted that his health not be cited as the explanation, and said that he and his staff had drafted a statement to that effect for McGovern to use in announcing the withdrawal.

APPLAUSE BY HOROWITZ — Pianist Vladimir Horowitz stands and applauds the New York Philharmonic orchestra following his concert, "Vladimir Horowitz Golden Jubilee", Sunday at New York's Carnegie Hall. The concert, a benefit for the orchestra, came 50 years after the famed pianist's debut in the same hall with the same orchestra. (AP Laserphoto)

Nine Died In N.C. Wrecks

By The Associated Press
Fatal traffic accidents, including a triple-death, seven-vehicle smashup Saturday near Canton, killed at least nine persons in the North Carolina over the weekend, the Highway Patrol reported.

That brings the toll for 1978 to 16, compared with 25 at this time last year.

Timothy Robert Parrott, 26, of Monroe, was killed Sunday in a head-on crash in Charlotte. Ronnie Dale Christianbury, 26, of Valdese, was killed Sunday in a head-on collision half a mile south of Drexel in Burke County.

Tony Randall Bright, 18, of Jacksonville, was killed Sunday when his motorcycle hit a driveway culvert on a rural road four miles east of Belgrade in Onslow County.

Johnella Richardson of Hollister died Sunday when the car she was driving ran off a rural road and struck a tree in Warren County, 15 miles south of Warrenton.

Clemmon D. Pulliam, 23, of Leasburg died Saturday when his car ran off N.C. 86 south of Yanceyville and hit a tree. Ruth T. Roberts, Ned Roberts, 7, and Frank D. MacIniek, 18 months, all of Millford, N.J., died Saturday in a seven-car chain collision on Interstate 40 near Canton.

David L. Ware, 21, of Kings Mountain, died Friday when he was struck by a vehicle while he was lying on a rural paved road a half mile south of Bessemer City in Gaston County.

Learned Divorce Plans Shortly Before Slayings

ROCKFORD, Ill. (AP) — Simon Peter Nelson reportedly learned that his wife planned to divorce him only hours before his six children were found bludgeoned and stabbed to death in their beds.

Nelson, 46, was scheduled to be arraigned today in the killings, which Winnebago County Coroner John Seward said occurred late Friday or early Saturday.

Police said the children were found in several rooms of the Nelson home on a quiet, middle-class street. The bodies of Roseann, 5, and her sister, Jennifer, 12, were found in their bedroom, beaten and stabbed repeatedly.

Their four brothers, Matthew, 7; Andrew, 9; Simon Peter Jr., 10; and David, 3, were similarly slain, said police Capt. Richard Anderson. The family's pet dachshund was found with its throat slashed.

Investigators said the children had been killed, apparently as they slept, with a rubber mallet and a hunting knife.

Michael Weldon, Nelson's employer and friend, said he returned from a vacation to the office of Management Recruiters Inc. last week to find Nelson completely changed in his attitude toward his troubled 14-year marriage.

"He said the whole thing started to come to a head over the weekend before," said Weldon, and that Ann had set down rules. There were certain things he was doing that had to stop — drinking, overweight and facial hair."

Ann Nelson, 38, had gone to her attorney about a divorce but had been advised to get away and think things over for a couple of days, according to the Rockford Morning Star.

With her husband's knowledge, she had checked into a Milwaukee motel on Thursday morning. But the next day, she called the lawyer and told him to proceed with the divorce, the Star reported.

Weldon said Nelson left the office abruptly Friday.

Nelson later arrived at the motel, and around 6 a.m. a desk clerk telephoned police saying there was trouble in Mrs. Nelson's room.

Police said they found Nelson beating his wife in the bathroom, and they arrested him.

On Mrs. Nelson's advice, Milwaukee police called authorities in Rockford and told them to break into the Nelson home, where they found the children's bodies.

Computer Is Abandoned

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration is stopping development of a new computer system for monitoring tax returns because it could threaten civil liberties, an administration source said Sunday.

Instead, the Internal Revenue Service will expand its current computer system, which has better controls against the invasion of citizens' privacy, the source said.

The source, who asked not to be identified, said, "The IRS had to do something because the caseload was getting heavier. It was a question of which way to go."

The new system would have cost more than $800 million by 1986, while improvements to the existing system would cost several million less in the same period, according to IRS figures.

However, the decision to halt the project was based on the privacy issue, not the cost, the source said.

The new Tax Administration System (TAS) computer was proposed by the IRS more than three years ago.

Sees Uprising In South Africa

NEW YORK (AP) — Donald Woods, the banned newspaper editor who fled South Africa more than a week ago, predicts a general uprising by the 24 million blacks in his country against the white government within three years unless racial policies are modified.

He also predicted that the blacks would win over the 2.5 million whites in South Africa, even if it takes them 20 years.

Woods, editor of the East London Daily Dispatch in South Africa, was silenced by banning, a form of house arrest, before he escaped the country.

He said black South Africans look to the West to stop providing economic aid to the white government. If that doesn't happen, he said, young blacks will turn to Moscow and Peking for help.

He said racial policy is no more an internal South African matter than Hitler's policies were an internal German affair.

Woods was interviewed in London by ABC-TV's "Issues and Answers."

Arrest Man In Ayden Robbery

AYDEN — Melvin Earl Freeman, 27 of Kinston, was arrested by Ayden Police Sunday in connection with a 6:30 p.m. Saturday robbery here.

Chief Tommy Burney said this morning that Freeman was charged with common law robbery after Hilbert Bowen of Route 1, Ayden reported that he had been robbed of $375.

Burney said Bowen allegedly picked up three men on Second Street about 6:30 p.m. Saturday and drove them to East Avenue where Bowen said one of the three took the money from him.

The chief said Freeman was taken into custody with the aid of the Kinston Police Department Sunday and returned to Ayden where he was charged in connection with the incident and placed under $5,000 bond pending hearing in District Court January 26.

Quilting Course At Pitt Tech

Pitt Technical Institute is offering a 30-hour course in quilting each Thursday from 7-10 p.m. The class will meet in room 207 of Humber Building on campus.

The course provides instructions in choosing fabrics, colors and designs, cutting and placing patches, traditional and contemporary patterns, appliques, patchwork and quilting projects, and care of quilts.

A $5 per student registration fee will be charged to students under 65 years of age.

For further information contact the Continuing Education Division of Pitt Technical Institute at 756-3130, ext. 238 or 266.

Arrest Suspect In Robbery Case

Williamina Diane Cherry, 23 of 1115 Douglas Ave. was arrested by Greenville Police Saturday on armed robbery charges in connection with a December 2 incident, Chief Glenn Cannon reported this morning.

Cannon said Miss Cherry was charged in connection with an incident that occurred on West Fifth Street, and placed under a $5,000 bond pending hearing of the case in court.

Wambaugh Overcoming Late Start

By PHIL THOMAS
AP Books Editor
NEW YORK (AP) — Don't tell Joseph Wambaugh a policeman's lot is not a happy one. He'll disagree.

JOSEPH WAMBAUGH

After 14 years with the Los Angeles Police Department and with three best-selling books to his credit, Detective Sergeant Wambaugh left the force in 1974 to pursue the writing life full time. He has written two more books since — the latest is a novel "The Black Marble."

But despite the great success he has had with his writing career, Wambaugh is quick to admit that he misses being a cop and working the burglary detail.

"For a long time I was a cop first and a writer second," the 41-year-old Wambaugh says. "Now, I'm a writer first and second. But it's more fun being a cop. It's no fun being a writer. It's just hard work and drudgery every day."

"When I'm doing a book I work from breakfast to dinner, eat, and then go back and write some more. I have no recreation until the first draft is done. Nothing stops me until I've got that first draft ready, then I can relax. But it sure is hard work. Police work seems easy to me compared to writing. I still miss the cops, and I still dream of being a cop."

Although the success of his early books left him financially secure, Wambaugh originally had planned to remain on the force for 20 years.

"But I had to leave because it was getting ridiculous," he recalls with a wry smile. "I'd become an oddity. No one was treating me the same. And people kept coming to the station trying to see me. Other people kept trying to call me on the telephone and my buddies were getting resentful of screening all those calls. So I decided I had to go. I did it as much for my comrades as I did for myself."

Wambaugh came to writing rather late. The holder of bachelor's and master's degrees in English that he took while also working as a policeman, he says his college work started him thinking about writing, but "I was 30 before I wrote a line. "I wrote some cop stories. No one would publish them. But at one magazine they sent me a letter of encouragement instead of a formal rejection slip. So I sent them more stories and they sent me more letters. Finally, they sent me a letter suggesting I try writing a novel. I did, and that's how "The New Centurions" came about and that's how the writing started."

Wambaugh, a relaxed, easy-to-talk-with man, says the ideas for his books come from a variety of places.

"Take 'The Black Marble,'" he says. "It deals partly with dog shows, something I knew nothing about until I happened to go to a big dog show in Beverly Hills with a dog trainer. It was a whole new world and it was hilarious. And then the ideas started coming. First, there was this world of dogs itself. Then I looked around and noticed some of the trainers were watching a football game on television. And I thought, 'What kind of book could I make out of a dog trainer that got himself into deep trouble gambling?'"

The result was a novel about dogs, gambling, dognapping, cops and love.

Now—for any covered accident or sickness

We guarantee to pay you $900.00 a month—$30.00 a day for every day you're in the hospital—6 days—6 weeks—6 months—or the rest of your life.

50% Increase in Cash Benefits for Cancer and Heart Attack

$1 enrolls you in this extra protection plan that puts cash in your pocket to help pay the bills your other insurance won't cover. And we guarantee to issue you this plan regardless of your age, your health or family size. Then you can renew for as little as $755 a month depending on your age.

- Pays cash benefits from the very first day of hospitalization.
- No limit to the number of days you can collect cash benefits—even for life.
- Pays cash benefits directly to you—to spend as you wish—unless you tell us otherwise.
- Guaranteed renewable for life.
- No waiting period. Accidents and new sicknesses are covered immediately.
- Pays you over and above any other insurance you may have—including Medicare.
- No salesman will call.

DO YOU KNOW that the cost of a day in the hospital now averages $175.00? That's right! And that's only for room, board and routine nursing care. Then come the other charges for the services and supplies needed to treat an illness or injury. And these costs have been going up, too. All of this on top of your regular expenses—food, rent, utilities, telephone, loan payments.

If your basic protection is like most hospitalization policies, it won't pay all of your hospital bills. Not by a long shot. You have to come up with the difference between what your present policy will pay and the total amount of your hospital bill. And what happens if your paycheck stops while you're in the hospital—and you don't have any cash coming in? In no time you could find your savings gone. You could even find yourself going deeper and deeper into debt!

This is why Physicians Mutual created this extra protection hospital plan. So that—instead of your money all going out—you can have money coming in. Money to help you pay the hospital bills your other insurance doesn't cover. Money to help you pay your phone, electric and food bills. Money to help safeguard your savings, and keep you on your feet financially.

$900.00 a month—$30.00 a day—cash!

Hospital rates are usually the same for everybody. That's why this policy pays the same $30 a day cash benefit when you, your wife or any of your children are hospitalized for any covered sickness or accident. Compare these benefits with other policies that pay reduced benefits for dependents.

50% increase in cash benefits for cancer and heart attack: $1350.00 a month, $45.00 a day.

No one likes to think about getting cancer or having a heart attack. But it happens all the time. About 53 million Americans now living will eventually have cancer. That's 1 in 4 persons.* And it's estimated that nearly 4 million people have a history of heart attack. We sincerely hope you never have to collect. But if you should, daily benefits are increased 50% if you or any covered member of your family is hospitalized for cancer (including Leukemia and Hodgkin's Disease) or heart attack (acute myocardial infarction, coronary thrombosis and coronary occlusion).

Double benefits for you and your wife!

When your wife is covered and both of you are hospitalized at the same time due to accidents, your daily benefits are increased. That's right, you get twice the regular cash benefit—$3,600 a month ($120 a day) to help you through this emergency. By the way, hospitalization doesn't have to be due to the same accident; you and your wife could be injured in unrelated accidents.

*American Hospital Association American Cancer Society
American Heart Association

Pays maternity benefits, too!

You'll collect full benefits—$30 a day—for hospitalization due to pregnancy or any pregnancy complication, if your policy has been in force for 10 months. There's no added cost to you!

No waiting period for accidents or new sicknesses.

You're covered the very minute your policy is issued and put in force for new sicknesses—and accidents. That means you could be rushed to the hospital a few minutes after you get your policy—and be able to start collecting your $30 a day benefits immediately, starting that very day!

You get lifetime coverage and benefits.

There's no limit on the number of days for which you can collect cash benefits. You can be hospitalized as often as necessary and stay as long as you have to—knowing that your $30 a day benefits cannot run out. Our policy will pay you benefits for as long as you're hospitalized—even for life!

Pays cash benefits in addition to any other insurance you have.

Remember, this is extra, supplemental protection. Your benefits are paid over and above any other insurance you may carry—including Blue Cross/Blue Shield, Major Medical and Medicare. This policy is designed to help you make up the difference between your total hospital bill and what your other insurance will pay.

Your benefits are not taxable.

Your benefits from your Physicians Mutual Policy are not taxable by any level of government. They are not subject to state or Federal income tax.

Your policy is guaranteed renewable.

Don't forget, this extra protection is yours as long as you want to have it and pay your premiums when due. We cannot drop you or cancel your coverage because your health changes, or because you've a few years older, or because you've submitted a number of claims. On the other hand, you can drop your policy on any renewal date. Also, your premium can never be increased unless premiums are raised on all policies like yours in your entire state.

These are the exclusions.

Pre-existing conditions (health problems that became evident or were medically treated before the effective date of the policy) are not covered for one year from the date the policy is issued. Half-benefits ($15 a day) are paid for up to 4 weeks confinement due to mental disorder. Not covered is hospitalization for alcoholism, drug addiction or any condition covered by Workmen's Compensation or Employers Liability Law benefits. Confinement in nursing homes, Federal hospitals, or the self-care, extended-care or convalescent units of hospitals is not covered. Pregnancy or any consequence is covered after your policy is 10 months old.

Physicians Mutual—the insurance company run by doctors since 1902.

You don't have to think twice about enrolling in this plan. You're doing business with a solid, reputable company with a 76-year history of steady growth and of under-standing service.

From 1902 until 1962, Physicians Mutual offered health insurance only to physicians, surgeons and dentists. Then, recognizing the rising need for supplemental health insurance, the company began offering this extra protection to the general public.

Today our policies protect more than 1,000,000 Americans in 49 states and the District of Columbia. And Physicians Mutual has grown to become the 10th largest individual health insurer in the country!

That's not all. Last year, for instance, we paid over $50,000,000.00 in cash benefits on all policies—to folks like yourself.

More—Physicians Mutual is truly a company "run by doctors." Our Board of Directors continues to be made up almost entirely of doctors. Men who know the cost of hospital care and want to put your mind at ease. Men who take our obligation to our policyowners seriously, and have a personal pride in the company's reputation for integrity, reliability and service.

And we're proud to say that Physicians Mutual has been awarded an A (Excellent) Rating by the A.M. Best Company, the insurance industry's authority on a company's financial stability and operating performance.

Money-back guarantee.

First, we guarantee to issue you a policy regardless of your age or your health. As soon as we receive your Application and $1, we will issue your policy (P350/360 Series), put it in force, and mail it to you. You are protected right from that minute!

Naturally, we can issue only one policy to you on a guaranteed issue basis. If you are already a Physicians Mutual policyowner, please write for details of the additional coverage we have for you.

When you get your policy, you will have 30 days to make up your mind—to completely satisfy yourself this policy is all we say it is. Should you change your mind about your need for this important supplemental coverage, simply return your policy. We will promptly refund your $1 in full—with no questions asked. What could be fairer?

Enroll right away. Now.

You can enroll in this extra protection plan right now—right from this page. All you do is fill out the short Application at the bottom of the page and mail it together with $1 which pays for your first month—no matter how many family members you want covered. Do it right away. You never know what can happen! Fill out and mail your Application now.

People over 65 are also protected.

When you are 65, you'll find help for hospital care in many forms—Medicare, Social Security, special agencies, and perhaps a pension plan. But because people in this age group go to the hospital more often, this extra help is frequently not enough.

In addition to Medicare, you'll be receiving cash benefits from Physicians Mutual—to fill the financial void created by your illness. During the first 60 days of hospitalization—when Medicare coverage is highest—you collect half benefits, $15.00 a day.

After 60 days of hospital care—when Medicare coverage reduces and you need help the most—your cash benefits go up to $30.00 a day. And stay there no matter how long the hospital visit.

We've found that most folks over 65 prefer this approach—because your monthly premiums do not increase after you turn 65.

Another feature many senior citizens appreciate is that you will be covered for cancer, heart attack, stroke, hernia, disease or disorder of the prostate, tuberculosis, cataracts, emphysema, cirrhosis or diabetes if your hospital confinement commences more than six months after the effective date of your policy.

YOUR POLICY COMES IN THIS HANDSOME VINYL WALLET.

Your policy is made out in your name and comes to you in this rugged, handsome vinyl document holder. It's yours to keep even if you decide you don't want to continue this coverage. It's a convenient and easy way to file your important personal papers in one safe place.

YOUR OWN I.D. CARD. Along with your policy and wallet, you will receive a Physicians Mutual Policyowner Identification Card. It is your assurance of hospital cash protection and fast, personal claim service.

If you have any questions about this policy, call 800-228-9100 toll-free from anywhere in the Continental United States. (Nebraska residents, call 800-642-8250 toll-free). Our Customer Service staff is ready to serve you from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m., Central Time, Monday thru Friday. Remember, we pay for the call.
