Wholesale Prices Up For December

By ROBERT A. DOBKIN
AP Labor Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sharply rising food costs pushed the government's index of wholesale prices up 0.7 percent last month, nearly twice the November increase, the government reported today.

Food prices jumped 1.5 percent in December, marking the biggest rise in seven months and signaling higher prices in the coming months for grocery shoppers.

Changes in wholesale food prices usually show up in retail stores within a matter of a few weeks.

The 0.7 percent rise in wholesale prices last month compared with an increase of 0.4 percent in November and a rise of 0.8 percent in October. During the summer, these prices had risen only moderately or not at all.

In the December report, the Labor Department changed the way it measures wholesale prices to provide what the department said is a more reliable measure of inflation before it hits the consumer.

The new method focuses on prices of finished goods, such as automobiles, furniture, farm equipment and food ready for sale in supermarkets.

In the past, the government measured wholesale costs by using the prices of goods in the various stages of the production pipeline — a system that often resulted in a duplication of price changes as a particular product was transformed from raw material to finished product.

The old wholesale price measure, the all-commodities index, showed prices rose last month by 0.5 percent, compared with a 0.7 percent increase in November. The all commodities index will be phased out in the coming months as the government emphasizes the change in prices of finished goods.

Wholesale prices of finished goods rose 6.6 percent in 1977, the Labor Department said. Producer finished goods, which include commodities such as machine tools and farm equipment rose 7.2 percent over the year, while consumer food prices climbed 6.6 percent from December 1976 to December 1977.

Last month, the finished goods index stood at 185.5, meaning that it cost wholesalers $185.50 for the same goods purchased for $100 in the 1967 base period.

The 1.5 percent rise in consumer food prices last month followed two months of smaller increases and, before that, four months of declines that helped hold down retail food prices.

Sharply higher prices for pork, processed poultry and vegetable oil products were largely responsible for the December increase. Prices also rose for fish and dairy products; processed fruits and vegetables and eggs. Declines were reported for fresh and dried vegetables, fresh fruit and roasted coffee.

The 6.6 percent increase in wholesale prices of finished goods in 1977 was twice the 3.3 percent rise in 1976. It matched the rise in wholesale prices in 1975 and contrasted with a near-record jump of 18.3 percent in 1974.

Most economists are forecasting an overall inflation rate of about 6 percent in 1978.

Egyptians, Israeli Meet Again On Peace Security

By SAMI RIZKALLAH
Associated Press Writer

CAIRO (AP) — Egyptian and Israeli military negotiators met today for their second session to discuss Israel's concern for its security.

Israeli spokesman David Kolitz said the joint military committee headed by Israeli Defense Minister Ezer Weizman and Egyptian War Minister Mohammed Abdel Ghany Gamassy would hear a report from the Israeli chief of staff, Lt. Gen. Mordechai Gur, and then would hold a general discussion.

Weizman and Gamassy at their initial 90-minute session Wednesday eiterated their governments' conflicting demands concerning the 20 Jewish settlements in the Sinai Peninsula.

Egypt's spokesman, Gen. Hassan Kateb, said Gamassy stressed the need for total Israeli withdrawal from Sinai, implying that all Jewish settlers as well as Israel's soldiers must go.

Kolitz said Weizman reiterated the Israeli view that the settlements must continue in existence and handed a written statement to Gamassy because the Israeli delegation was under the impression the talks would begin with formal declarations.

The Egyptians, however, wanted informal remarks. An Israeli source said they demanded withdrawal of the written statement, which said Israel and Egypt would "examine arrangements for continued maintenance of the Israeli settlements." Despite the awkward moment, Kateb labeled the first round "constructive."

The newspaper Al Gomhouria reported that U.S. Ambassador Hermann Eilts met with President Anwar Sadat in Aswan Wednesday and delivered a message from President Carter containing "several ideas and suggestions" concerning the start of the Egyptian-Israeli negotiations.

The paper did not elaborate on these ideas and suggestions. But it said Carter assured Sadat that Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance will play an active role to bridge the gap between Egypt and Israel during the meeting of the Israeli and Egyptian foreign ministers opening in Jerusalem Monday as companion negotiations to the talks between the defense ministers.

U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim will not attend the Jerusalem meeting, a spokesman in New York said, but he refused to confirm an Israeli report that Israel had been informed Waldheim would not be represented at the foreign ministers' meeting. Gen. Ensio Siilasvuo of Finland, the chief of the U.N. peacekeeping organization in the Middle East, represented Waldheim at the preliminary Egyptian-Israeli talks in Cairo last month.

The chief issue at the Jerusalem talks will be the Arab demand for a Palestinian state made up of the West Eank of the Jordan River and the Gaza Strip, which Israel has occupied since the 1967 war. Israeli Prime Minister Menahem Begin has offered the Palestinians limited self-rule with Israeli troops remaining at strategic posts and sovereignty to be decided later.

Strike Ends

BRIDLINGTON, England (AP) — Britain's 33,000 firemen voted overwhelmingly today to end their bitter nine-week strike and accept a wage settlement far below their demands.

The three-to-one decision by delegates of the Fire Brigades Union ends the first strike of its kind in English history. It caused financial hardship for most of the firemen, who had no strike fund, and forced the government to press thousands of military men into service as firefighters.

The strike started Nov. 14

About 200 militant firemen who had traveled by bus at this coastal community 200 miles north of London before dawn to try to persuade delegates to continue the walkout yelled abuse as the voters left the four hour meeting.

Press Association, the domestic British news agency, reported one firemen's official was beaten by angry militants as he left the hall, but he was not reported seriously injured.

Firemen, who average about $121 for a 48-hour week, had sought increases of 30 percent. However the ruling Labor government has set a limit of 10 percent on wage increases as an anti-inflation measure.

"We were starved into going back to work," said union official Terry Segars.

The government mobilized some 18,000 soldiers, sailors and airmen to man outdated equipment and fight fires during the strike, which idled firemen in England, Wales and Scotland.

Wintry Storm In South

By The Associated Press

A winter storm sent freezing rain into north Alabama, eastern Tennessee and west Georgia today after belting Mississippi and leaving a coat of ice on northeast Louisiana.

The storm causing hazardous conditions on many roads that led to numerous multi-car pileups on major arteries.

A storm warning extended into the Atlanta area of Georgia and into the Carolina mountains.

In most areas of the South, temperatures were to climb into the 30s and 40s Friday.

Birmingham police closed the interstate highway system and many major streets just before dawn. There were several large traffic pileups on the interstates, with at least one fatality reported.

Details were not immediately available.

The weatherman said, however, that temperatures could drop again this evening, causing wet areas to ice over and the rain to change to snow.

Northbound roads in the Huntsville, Ala., area were closed. There were reports of icy highways across the northern part of the state.

Most schools in the area were closed.

Electric Short Causes Area Loss Of Power

By DEBBIE JACKSON
Reflector Staff Writer

An electrical short this morning which caused a splice in the underground cable on First Street to fail resulted in loss of electrical power in the area down First Street to Tar River Estates.

Malcolm Green, assistant director for Greenville Utilities Commission, said that the short on the circuit caused so much mechanical strain on the underground cable that the splice burst.

There was so much force behind the short circuit that the manhole cover at First Street and Washington Street over the splice blew off, according to Green.

"These things happen occasionally," Green said. He added that the cold weather did not really cause the splice to fail, but that residents cutting on the heat and appliances at the same time probably strained the circuit enough to cause the eruption.

Green said that if a power shortage is going to occur, it will usually occur in the early morning hours.

"We've been having several of

ACTION BEING TAKEN

Hotline asked Dr. David Stevens, Director of Equal Opportunity Programs and staff attorney at East Carolina University, for an answer to the question raised in yesterday's Public Forum letter about accomodations for the handicapped in the addition to Ficklen Stadium.

Stevens said the design of the new stadium will, in every way, meet the state and federal guidelines for accessibility for the handicapped. There will be ramps to enable those confined to wheelchairs to use a section of the bleachers, he indicated.

HOTLINE FEEDBACK

SA MEETING

Hotline published an inquiry Nov. 22 about whether there might be a local chapter of Smokers' Anonymous. The Eastern Lung Association stated at that time that it would like to be instrumental in starting such a group and would be glad to hear from any interested person. The group has now been formed and Tom Hanifer is president. Any interested person is invited to the first meeting to be held tonight at 7 p.m. at the Eastern Lung Association building on Pitt Street across from the Main Greenville Post Office. Those wishing to stop smoking or those who have stopped but continue to feel a compulsion to smoke are invited.

Dunn Files For Education Board

Henry Dunn, Jr., currently chairman of the Greenville Board of Education, filed Thursday as a candidate for election to that board. Dunn is the first person to file for one of the six elected positions on the city school board, which until this year has been a board consisting of nine members appointed by the Greenville City Council.

Under legislation passed by the General Assembly in 1977, the Greenville Board of Education will be composed of six members elected at large, with three members to be appointed by the city council. Terms of all current members will expire in June 1978.

Dunn is a native of Ballards Cross Roads in Pitt County. He attended Pitt County Schools and East Carolina University, and is employed by the U.S. Post Office.

A veteran of the Korean War, Dunn served in the U.S. Navy for four years. He is married to the former Pennie Johnston of Pactolus, and they are the parents of four children, one of whom is now a student at Rose High School. He is a member of the First Presbyterian Church, the Greenville Moose Lodge, the American Legion Post, the Veterans of Foreign Wars, and Redmen of the World.

Long active in promoting educational opportunities for handicapped citizens, he was involved in the formation of the local chapter of the Association for Retarded Citizens and has served as president of the state association. For five years he was on the board of directors of the Eastern Carolina Sheltered

Angry Officials Unaware N.C. Pupils Taught Smoking Risks

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Angry state officials who insisted Wednesday that cigarettes aren't a proven health hazard were apparently unaware that North Carolina schools have been teaching students about the dangers of smoking for years.

"We get into smoking while we're talking about alcohol and drugs and household poisons," said Norman Leafe of the state Department of Public Instruction. "We emphasize that each person makes a decision. We're concerned that youngsters accept responsibility for their own health."

Some school districts go even further. In Wake County, for example, officials have a special program in some junior high schools to help students stop smoking if they want to.

Farmers, state officials and the tobacco industry were reacting angrily Wednesday to the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare's announced plans for an ambitious anti-smoking campaign, in which public schools will play a part.

Supporters of tobacco contend that no definite link has been discovered between cigarettes and disease, and government should not be interfering with every individual's right to smoke.

But while the emphasis is frequently on helping individuals to make their own decisions about smoking, North Carolina educators do not question the link between smoking and disease.

"Hazardous to your health? Oh, yeah. Of course," said Leafe. "We provide factual information on the links between cigarette smoking and emphysema, lung cancer and other disease," said Jerry Barker, in charge of the Wake County program. "We're sold on the fact that there is a causal relationship between smoking and certain diseases.

"We get into the facts, but we don't dwell on them," he added. "Most of the kids know them already anyway. We try to give them practical help with stopping."

Leafe indicated that teaching the evils of smoking can sometimes be a sensitive matter in a state that depends for much of its livelihood on tobacco. But he said there had never been any serious effort to change the state's health curriculum and he was open to any new federal suggestions for a stronger antismoking push.

"We've had folks in here some years back from the National Institutes of Health with a program," he recalled. "And we were real brave at that time to have them in."

Barker said his kick-the-habit program in the schools had opened at a school in Fuquay-Varina in a tobacco-producing area of Wake County.

"The attitude of many folks down there is that even though tobacco is the way I make my living, I don't want my kids to smoke," Barker said.

Libby Titus Wants To Use Voice As 'Instrument'

By MARY CAMPBELL
AP Newsfeatures Writer

Compilations of new singer-song writers this season include Libby Titus. She has an agreeable new album on Columbia, "Libby Titus," with a single about to appear, had only performed in nine cities when she was invited on TV's "Saturday Night Live."

But instead of basking in quick acclaim, she's quivering, like a person stepping onto an escalator for the first time. She doesn't want to lose balance, stumble or fall.

Just before the TV appearance, she appears fragile and wan in an interview. "Nervous is a euphemism for what I get. I'm in a state of panic. I'm so scared right now I could burst into tears but I won't."

Carly Simon and James Taylor had given a party for Miss Titus the night before in New York, letting her friends show her they were rooting for her. "Nothing would help. Even if everyone I knew was there holding me up, it wouldn't help. I'm alone in this essentially. But I'm thankful to friends. Deeply."

Miss Titus is 31 and isn't really starting out. However, with this album she is making her "real" beginning in show business. She made a record, "Libby," for Capitol in 1968 and started another one for Bearsville in 1969. About the present record she says, "I'm mainly thankful to Paul Simon who, in a way, saved everything. He contributed more to my life than I ever hoped anyone would. That is a little dramatic, but I meant it.

"He just came in and showed me what to do in the studio and gave me direction. He is soothing and he is usually right. I had gone through two producers, neither of which worked for me. The first could have worked but I didn't know it then. The second could never have worked. I couldn't start searching for another producer. Friends decided they wanted to help me out." Carly Simon and Robbie Robertson also produced some of the cuts. Like Miss Simon, Miss Titus is a singer of songs instead of a rocker.

She was born in Woodstock, N.Y., and grew up when the music listened to there was jazz. Of course, with the moving in of Bob Dylan, it became folk. "I always had a desire to sing, really since I was 4. When I was 14, I had a vision of what I wanted to do — sing torch songs. I'm doing what I wanted to do then.

"What I'm aiming for is to become a virtuoso singer, to use my voice as an instrument."

Miss Titus and Eric Kaz met in Woodstock when they were children. She later wrote "Love Has No Pride" with him. It's her best-known composition so far, recorded first by Bonnie Raitt, later by Linda Ronstadt. She is pleased that Kaz has now moved to Southern California.

But Miss Titus regarded Woodstock as a place to get out of. She had an aunt in New York, "a Broadway playwright and composer who wasn't famous. But she was inspiring, to say the least.

"I used to count the seconds until I was 18. I went to Bard College — which was 12 miles away." Miss Titus also married a writer, lived in New York, had a son and divorced. Titus was his name. "My maiden name, Jurust, isn't bad. But it sounds like rocks falling out of my mouth when I try to say it, so I go by Titus."

While she was in New York a friend invited her to Saugerties, N.Y., to meet a group called the Band. "I said no. I thought it would be the pits. But I ended up going and I met Robbie Robertson. We liked each other right away as friends and musicians. We started talking about making a record together. We didn't realize it would be all these years later."

The Band's manager, Albert Grossman, signed her — she was 23 — to his label, Bearsville. "We began a record with Todd Rundgren producing and didn't finish it because I was insecure and not focused — defocused. I saw no future in making a Diana Ross commercial hit record, which it was going to turn out to be. Instead, I had a child, which was actually a great alternative to making the record because she is incredible.

"Now I'm a single, working mother.

"I went through four years of analysis, which definitely focused me, five years after my daughter was born. Still, I'm not finished. I'd like to be — not like a Buddhist priest — I'd like to be very well balanced. I'd like to not succumb to all excesses I can succumb to."

When the Band toured with Bob Dylan, the Woodstock crowd moved to the West Coast. After the tour, the rest of them moved back; she stayed.

"I wanted to make a record, to develop musically. I hadn't been doing that since I'd moved back to Woodstock. I took lyrics I had written in my notebook and showed them to people who could write melodies. It was exceptionally hard to get into the music world, now I think of it. It was hard to become a valid anything at that point.

"Richard Green, a Los Angeles session man, fiddle player, helped me a lot. We did little recording sessions at his house, tune research and writing. I had a lot of music in my life and still do through him. He is just very much there for me, musically.

"It was great to have someone who believed in me at the point when I lost faith in myself. He came where I was living. I was like broken in half, heart broken, confidence shaken. He thought I was great and therefore made me think that I was."

She met Carly Simon when somebody took her to a birthday party for James Taylor, became immediate friends with the couple and has written songs with Miss Simon.

She met Paul Simon through Robbie Robertson.

It doesn't take anything away from the talents of Libby Titus to realize that she gets by with a little help from her friends.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

You've heard me talk a lot about Mayva throughout the last 13 years.

We're like those two girls on the Bell Telephone commercial who knew one another in gym shorts and still can get on the phone and talk non-stop for $15.60 without ever scratching the surface.

Mayva is one of those rare friends. She never goes on a diet when I am fat. Never has a good time at a party to which I haven't been invited. Her kids were always bleeding from sibling attacks. She always delivered her babies with greasy hair.

The things we've shared over the years . . . the time I asked my pediatrician what temperature was considered normal on a rectal thermometer and Mayva said, "That sounds like a reasonable question."

The time her husband gave her ½ hot water heater for her birthday and I advised, "Leave him before there are children."

The negative of a picture I have of her in high school at the beach with a towel around her head that she would kill for.

The time she talked me into spraying my sofa black and you could do everything but sit on it.

The time I autographed my first book in a department store and she was the only one who showed up.

The creep never mentioned she was going to become a grandmother.

I had to hear it from her son in a note. Mayva will be an insufferable grandmother. I know she will. You won't be able to carry on a conversation without her whipping out a billfold bulging with cuteness. Her letters will be one dreary page after another of cute sayings, first air buddles, and babysitting stories.

If she thinks I'm going to call her on the phone and blow $15 or $20 talking about how her grandchild grabbed her finger and wouldn't let go, she's crazy.

I called her on the phone yesterday. "So! You finally manipulated everyone into making you a young grandmother. When is it due?"

"May. I've got pictures already."

"I hope you have a permanent rainbow over your white sofa from damp diapers."

"I'll let you hold the baby."

"Mayva! I love you!"

His Whoppers Bother Wife

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1978 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: I'm really ticked off at my husband for telling everyone at work that we own our own home. It's not true—we're only renting. He just got transferred and we're new in town.

He justifies his lying by saying that a home owner comes across as being more stable and solid, and it adds to his prestige. Abby, there's no way we could have bought this house because we didn't have the down payment for this (or any other) house!

Every time I hear my husband repeat that bald-faced lie I feel like a louse for keeping quiet, but I certainly can't call him a liar in front of the people he works with, can I?

I could just wring his neck. In the eight years we've been married, I've heard him tell quite a few whoppers, but none has upset me like this one.

Any suggestion? Sign me...

BITING MY TONGUE

DEAR BITING: Of course you shouldn't publicly call your husband a liar. But do tell him that the fact that he's renting the home he claims to own is almost certain to be revealed eventually. And then he'll be exposed for the phony he is.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 13-year-old girl with a problem that may not seem important to some people, but it is to me. I have gym three days a week, and after gym everyone has to shower or they get an "F." The gym teacher stands right there and watches you, so there is no way of getting out of it. Abby, there is one big room with four nozzles coming out of the wall, and 35 girls have to shower together.

I was raised to be modest and I just die when I have to stand naked in front of 34 other girls.

I have talked to my mother about this and she doesn't like it either, but she doesn't know what to do. Can you help me?

MUST GROUP SHOWER

DEAR MUST: No girl should be forced to stand naked before other girls if it disturbs her. Your mother should go to the school and talk to the principal. Even though a private shower cannot be provided for each girl, for the modest ones who "just die," perhaps a little more privacy could be arranged.

DEAR ABBY: What is a man, who has been married for almost 18 years, supposed to think when he accidentally finds hidden in his wife's closet six beautiful sheer, shortie nightgowns and negligees he has never seen before?

They are certainly never worn in MY presence.

Perhaps that explains why she slips her luggage in and out of the house when making increasingly more frequent out-of-town trips—alone, to "visit her mother."

Please answer in your column, as I am beginning to be...

SUSPICIOUS

DEAR SUSPICIOUS: Either your wife is taking in laundry, or you've caught her with evidence that anyone can see through.

If you feel left out and lonely, or wish you knew how to get people to like you, my new booklet, "How To Be Popular; You're Never Too Young or Too Old," is for you. Send $1 along with a long, self-addressed, stamped (24 cents) envelope to Abby, 132 Lasky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.

Workshop.

Dunn was originally appointed to the city school board for a five year term in 1971. In 1976, he was reappointed for a four year term, and is presently serving his fourth year as chairman.

Indicating several areas that he feels will deserve consideration by board members in the future, Dunn mentioned facilities such as the completion of the middle school, construction of an auditorium at Rose High, and the need to look at physical education and athletic facilities in an effort to lessen the city school system's dependence on East Carolina University or the city for certain programs.

"I also want to reaffirm my position as being against the merger of the Pitt County and Greenville City Schools," Dunn commented. "While I recognize the desirability of cooperation between the two systems, I feel that the needs of the Greenville schools can best be met with a separate system."

our people to come in at 7 a.m. because of this," he added.

"When the power went off this morning, we were able to jump right on it."

Residents in other neighboring areas may have noticed their electricity switching off and on this morning also, but Green said that this was due to the Utilities Commission having to reroute the power.

The lights in the First Street area were back on this morning before the splice was repaired because of the rerouting. About 10 a.m. the splice on Washington Street was located and repaired.

Green noted that the broken splice was somewhat difficult to locate since it is underground.

He foresees no further difficulty with electrical failure.

This morning's 8 a.m. temperature was 19 degrees. Yesterday's high was a cold 34 degrees and the low was 11 degrees.

There was no recorded precipitation and the Tar River level stood at 8.1 feet on the National Weather Gauge.

N.C. Roads Open, Caution Is Advised

All roads are open in the state today, except for those in the Asheville area where some icy patches remain in rural sections.

With snow forecast for the weekend, Lt. Lloyd G. Pate of the Highway Patrol Office here gave the following hints on driving on snow or ice.

"Reduce your speed for one thing. Also, always pump your brakes when stopping to avoid skidding," said Pate. He noted that if the driver becomes frightened and locks his car brakes, he will more than likely go into a skid.

"You can also deflate your tires to about 18 or 20 pounds in order to gain more traction."

Pate added that if bad winter driving conditions persist, the best thing to do is to invest in snow-grip tires and / or snow chains.

"The problem in eastern North Carolina is that people here are not used to that kind of weather."

Unexpected Aid In Nabbing Duo

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Police got some unexpected help in rounding up a couple of burglary suspects. A sharp-eyed goat.

When police officer Robert Colyer answered a call Wednesday in the southwestern part of the city he saw two youths and what he thought was a big dog run from a yard.

He radioed officer Robert Tilley, who was covering the area a couple blocks away, and from the description, Tilley spotted the fugitives fleeing through a brush-covered vacant area.

When he approached what he thought was the dog, he found it was a goat, looking at a youth hiding in the brush.

Tilley collared the young man, took him to the police car, and looked back to see the goat peering into another clump of brush.

Sure enough, there was a second hiding youth.

Avers Terrorists Aided By Russia

By BARRY SCHWEID
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger says the Soviet Union is at least indirectly financing some of the terrorist training going on in Libya and Lebanon.

"Many of these terrorists are being trained in camps in Libya and Lebanon by organizations that themselves are financed by the Soviet Union," Kissinger said.

Previous accounts have pointed to oil-rich Libya as a staging ground for terrorists. Libya's leader, Moammar Khadafy, is an arch-foe of Israel and has ties to Palestinians opposed to the Jewish state.

While other accounts have noted that some violent Palestinian elements are trained in and make their forays from Lebanon, this is the first firm suggestion by a prominent western figure that the terrorists have a common money base in the Soviet Union and the Eastern European bloc.

"Without the supply of weapons and training and organization from some of these countries, it would become infinitely more complicated to carry out these terrorist activities," Kissinger commented in a documentary to be broadcast Friday by NBC-TV.

And he said the terrorist movements are related to each other — Japanese terrorists with Palestinians as well as German to Italian terrorists.

"Somebody is clearly financing the training and the organization, and some of it is clearly coming from the communist world," Kissinger said.

While adding, "That doesn't mean the communist world is planning all this," he said even terrorists not directly supported by communists "benefit the communist parties."

He said both terrorism and communism have their roots in alienation with the system.

Kissinger also warned against increased communist influence in Western Europe.

Kissinger, secretary of state under former Presidents Richard M. Nixon and Gerald R. Ford, now is under a multimillion-dollar contract to provide commentary for NBC.

Rules Death Is Suicide

The death of J. Bert Taylor, 83 of Ayden, who died Saturday afternoon after falling from a third-story window at Pitt Memorial Hospital, has been ruled suicide, according to Police Chief Glenn Cannon.

Attempts today to contact Medical Examiner Dr. Richard Vaughn, who investigated the death, were unsuccessful. However, Cannon said the medical examiner ruled the death a suicide.

Taylor had been a patient in the hospital since December 19 and was being treated for a kidney disease. He apparently opened a window in his room — with no more than a 12-inch opening — climbed out and fell to his death.

Vaughn said earlier this week that the impact with the ground caused Taylor's death.

Lowly Lugs Not Good Sellers

The tobacco lug is lowly in more ways than one.

It is the bottom leaf on the tobacco stalk and, in Eastern North Carolina's sandy soil it collects gravel which makes it weigh more but is the bane of the tobacco processing factories.

Years ago the lug was cured along with other tobacco and hauled to market to fetch whatever price it might bring. It wasn't worth much and not much was expected.

Lower stalk leaves came into their own briefly as filter cigarettes moved into popularity. The filters tended to cut down on flavor and manufacturers increased the blend of lower leaf. The heavy leaf tended to compensate for the flavor loss.

Then came the era of low tar cigarettes which meant that the lugs were the last thing that was needed in cigarette manufacturing. By then, however, the support price levels were at the point so Stabilization Corp. had to purchase most of the lugs which appeared on the market. This has come close to breaking the organization which buys up tobacco to maintain an orderly market. Officials don't see much hope of selling the glut of lugs on the world market.

Obviously something has to be done, and before the next growing season.

A plan has been devised to allow farmers to plant up to 120 percent of quota next year. To do this, however, they would have to leave the bottom four leaves on the tobacco plant on the stalk. Lugs would not, in other words, even be harvested.

The plan is not totally satisfactory but it does open the door for discussion on ways to save the tobacco price support program.

New Commission Has Justifiable Role

Maybe the last thing which is needed is another state commission, but Gov. Hunt has recently appointed one which may be desirable.

He named members to a special commission which is to review certain licensing boards and commissions to justify their need to exist.

The special commission will review 35 such boards in preparation for its first report in a year.

Justifying the existence of any governmental agency is virtually unheard of, but this can be a profitable procedure for our state, and its taxpayers.

Crunch Faces Baker

By BILL RAWLINS
Associated Press Writer

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Efforts to pressure Senate Minority Leader Howard Baker to oppose the Panama Canal treaties increase Monday when a squad of congressmen arrives on the first stop in a five-day national tour.

Baker's Panama stand could determine whether the treaty will be ratified.

Helping lead the charge is a state representative who plans to seek the Republican nomination for governor at the same time Baker runs for re-election. Baker, R-Tenn., concedes Tennessee sentiment is heavily anti-treaty.

The senator, with 1980 presidential ambitions, has no known Republican opposition. But Rep. Harold Sterling, R-Memphis, the legislator helping arrange the visit of the Washington "Truth Squad," said the Panama issue could be a factor in his race for the GOP nomination for governor.

Two Democrats also said Wednesday they may run for Baker's seat. Secretary of State Gentry Crowell said Wednesday he is considering running for the Democratic nomination for Baker's Senate seat. J.D. Lee, former president of the American Trial Lawyers Association and president of the recently adjourned state Constitutional Convention, also is eyeing the Democratic race.

Arriving Monday will be a delegation including five U.S. senators and four U.S. representatives. The congressmen are Sens. Jesse Helms, R-N.C.; Strom Thurmond, R-S.C.; Paul Laxalt, R-Nev.; Jake Garn, R-Utah, and Reps. Phil Crane, R-Ill.; Mickey Edwards, R-Okla.; George Hansen, R-Wyo., and Larry McDonald, D-Ga.

During the 6,900-mile flying trip, the "Truth Squad" will then visit to Atlanta, Miami, Cincinnati, St. Louis, Denver and Portland, Ore.

Laxalt was Ronald Reagan's national campaign manager in 1976 when the former California governor, a staunch canal treaty opponent, narrowly lost the GOP presidential nomination to former President Gerald Ford. Sterling, who helped draft an anti-treaty plank as a member of 1976 GOP platform committee, claims the support in the governor's race of the Reagan faction of the Tennessee party.

Sterling's opponent in the campaign for the G0P nomination for governor is Lamar Alexander, a former Baker

The Problem? Washington

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — To you, a resident of North Carolina, The Economy is not Eurodollars or Petrodollars or Balances of Trade and other money-market gibberish.

It's a buck in your pocket. It's how hard it is to get that dollar; how hard it is to keep one; and that gnawing in the stomach which comes from a growing realization that a dollar saved today is 50 cents to spend ten years from now.

It's knowing that when the government gives with one hand it takes away with the other; that those dollars taken off the top for Social Security may not evey keep you in livermush and light bread when you retire.

Look for the Federal Government to do something about all that? Forget it. "How can you expect the government to solve the problem. . .when the Federal Government is the problem," says U. S. Senator Jesse Helms.

Government is destroying job opportunities choosing instead to pump temporary money measures into bureaucracies which don't function; hiking minimum wages till the jobs disappear for those who need them most; creating apprehensions, red tape, and harassment to the point that business is stymied, Helms believes.

Restore

America must act to "restore fiscal sanity" by restoring the free enterprise system and pulling back federal controls over everything citizens try to do. It is not, says Helms, a question of how long such a move would take, but rather "whether we have the political courage to do it."

The nut of the problem, Helms says, is that the nation's political leaders talk one way at home; another in Washington. "Many of my fellow senators privately agree with me. But when it comes to casting a vote . . .they are looking at the next election.

There is not a single federal program—including defense which is a Helms sweetheart—which "doesn't have fat clear up to the eyeballs.

"But the pressure mounts on every vote involving money . . .and that is where you see my colleagues buckle. They leave the floor saying, "I feel like a whore."

NOBLITT

Helms' philosophy of conservatism has earned a national reputation, and as he enters a campaign for re-election in November, the former Raleigh television commentator is a recognized national leader of the conservative position.

That position, Helms argues, suits those who voted him into the Senate. Citizens are tired of grandiose governmental schemes to solve all problems. "If I thought government could solve (our problems) by spending and pumping more money into the economy, I would accept that. . ."

"People are mesmerized into pushing for governmental control and regulation as the solution. . .I don't think the Federal government knows anything about running a railroad, or truck line, or airline. There is an uninterrupted experience of what it costs to do anything on the federal level. . ."

A Lobby

The only solution, says the Republican senator, is a people's lobby to match the power of the unions, the governmental agencies, the numerous vested interests.

"People have got to get involved and stay involved. We are at the point where every citizen has an obligation to keep truly informed. . .not just listening to the gloss and superficialities, but learning what things mean.

"If we don't get control we are going to follow Great Britain right down the tube," Helms fears.

For his strongly voiced viewpoints, Helms has won the label "Senator No"' He says he is not defensive of that title; that he represents the majority of North Carolinians who voted for him six years ago and will continue to say the same things on the campaign stump as he does in Washington.

Courts' Burden Grows

Five years have passed since a blue-ribbon commission recommended a new National Court of Appeals. Nothing much has happened since then — nothing much beyond a further increase in the flood of litigation that washes over our federal courts. It is time to take a fresh look at the situation.

The recommendations of the commission headed by Paul Freund were intended primarily to ease the strain on the Supreme Court. Though there is some dispute about what the figures mean, the basic data are not in dispute. As recently as 1951, the high court received 1,300 petitions for review. In the last term, the number swelled to more than 4,700. Petitions are now running at an average of 90 a week.

At lower levels of federal jurisprudence, the picture is substantially the same. In the past 16 years, the number of civil cases filed in Federal District Courts has soared from 59,300 to 130,600. In this period, the number of cases taken to the Federal Circuit Courts has more than quadrupled. In a word, our courts are swamped.

It is no problem to explain the "why" of this flood. In recent years Congress has created new regulatory agencies as if it were incubating eggs, and every agency has hatched a thousand regulations that provide the stuff of lawsuits. The Supreme Court itself, in the years that Chief Justice Earl Warren was in charge, enormously expanded the rights of defendants in criminal cases; most of the statistical increase in the high court's case load results from prisoners' petitions.

At bottom, as Judge Shirley Hufstedler has pointed out, is the litigious nature of the American people and their mistaken view of the role of the federal courts. Americans sue one another with reckless abandon, and they cherish a naive belief that federal judges were meant to solve all the social, racial, educational and economic issues of our time.

None of these root causes is subject to easy remedy. The incoming Congress will resume its struggle over new judgeships, but it is doubtful that even 150 new judges at the district and circuit levels will resolve the troubling situation up top. The problems cited by the commission five yars ago have not gone away; they have merely grown larger.

One such serious problem arises from continuing conflicts among the 11 judicial circuits on issues of federal law. These are not abstract issues, interesting only to judges and law professors. Conflicts touch upon the admissibility of evidence in criminal trials, on the disposition of cases involving libel and obscenity, on statutory questions of tax law of surpassing concern to the taxpayers. Scarcely an area of contemporary law is untouched by the uncertainty that results when one circuit says "yea" and another says "nay".

Another problem goes to the image of the high court and the quality of its work. Because of the intolerable volume of petitions, the Court can review less than 4 percent of the cases in which review is sought. Scores of important cases that would have been heard 20 or 25 years ago have to be passed by. It is humanly impossible for the nine justices personally to give careful consideration to each of the petitions

Other Editors Say Drivel From D.C.

(The Raleigh Times)

How regrettable it is that the obvious need for the City of Raleigh to examine its hiring practices for racial and sex discrimination and to conscientiously work toward eliminating it is clouded — if not obscured — by the idiotic drivel that flows in an endless stream from the mouths of Washington bureaucrats.

Raleigh is currently being ordered by the Office of Revenue Sharing, under threat of a $2.5 million fund cutoff, among other things to put women in 43 per cent of city jobs, in every department.

The practical and physical impossibility of achieving this within six months, five years or ever is apparent to almost everyone but the parasitic irresponsibles in Washington who have nothing else to do but issue senseless edicts such as the one given Raleigh.

Consider, for example, the comments of one Priscilla Crane, the official flack for the Office of Revenue Sharing. Asked if a city's taxpayers would, under the edict, be obligated to provide an unskilled woman with six years of chemical and engineering training so she could if she wished, supervise a wastewater treatment plant, Ms. Crane readily replied "Why shouldn't they?"

It's this kind of unmitigated ignorance, if not arrogance, that sets the public's teeth on edge and engenders the rise of right wing demogoguery in the land.

And it makes Councilman William Knight's response of "We can't slap the federal government in the face and say 'You're wrong'" sound awfully inane.

The government in this case is wrong, just as wrong as the city would be saying it could not improve upon its present record of minority hiring.

Yes, the city can allow women to apply for vacant positions in the fire department and other nearly-all male job areas. It might even allow women to try lugging garbage cans if some wish. But it should not and hopefully will never force them into work they either want nor can physically handle just to satisfy Washington's quotas.

And certainly the taxpayers, already being bled dry financially to support the bureaucratic monolith in Washington, will and should rise up in rebellion at the idea of subsidizing the kind of foolishness Ms. Crane advocates.

40 Years Ago Today

A 100-gallon capacity steam still situated in Belvoir township, was located and destroyed by Pitt County ABC officers, J. M. Ward and J. L. Taylor.

The still was not in operation when officers came upon it, but Mr. Ward expressed the belief it had been operated yesterday as the water in it was still hot. Fourteen-hundred gallons of beer was found about the still.

Soviet Russia's new Red Parliament opened its first session with Joseph Stalin and other government leaders watching from seats of honor in the rebuilt throne room of the Kremlin.

THE INSIDE REPORT

Why Carter Hip-Shoots

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — President Carter's embarrassing verbal stumbles in trying to please all sides in the politics of Mideast peacemaking brought an anguished, though private, cry for help from a prominent Democrat to White House counsel Robert Lipshutz.

At a recent small luncheon, this Democrat complained that Mr. Carter's crashing through verbal thickets with one explosive word contradicting another left everyone in the dark as to what U.S. policy really is. Unplanned ambiguity, he said, must cease.

The answer helps explain presidential contortions that switched the President's foreign trip to Egypt at midcourse and generates worry about the future. This was Lipshutz's reply: Jimmy Carter is contemptuous of Richard M. Nixon's careful formulations and insists that his own free-wheeling talk works better.

The President really means it when he says he wants "an open administration," Lipshutz told his luncheon guests. He's going to continue that way; Nixon never said a word that wasn't weighed and tested; there was no such thing as spontaneity in the formulations of his foreign policy; Jimmy is different; he speaks freely and he speaks his mind.

Even if "spontaneity" and the drive to be different from Nixon — not sheer clumsiness — truly explain the President's verbal pratfalls, that does not mitigate the consternation his repeated mistakes have caused in Mideast capitals. His year-end television interview Dec. 28, on the eve of his world trip, was the most recent case in point.

What was so "embarrassing" to President Sadat was not Mr. Carter's often-stated opposition to an independent Palestinian state. It was the thorny offshoot of a new thought: these stateless Palestinian residents under Israeli military control might decide "to be...Israeli citizens...to actually run for the Knesset (the Israeli parliament)."

Such a thought in the real world of Mideast politics was appalling to Sadat and Arab leaders everywhere, revealing presidential misconception of reality never evidenced before.

In his early "homeland" formulation — delivered without forethought in Clinton, Mass., last March 21 -Mr. Carter spoke feelingly: "There has to be a homeland provided for the Palestinian refugees who have suffered for many, many years." No mention there of Palestinians as wards of Israel.

Likewise, when asked at his April 8 press conference, just after Sadat's visit here, if there should be "Jordanian control" of the Palestinian homeland, Mr. Carter jockeyed: "That's a question that I wouldn't want to answer for President Sadat. I will let him make his own statements publicly and I don't intend to repeat what he tells me privately." That had the ring of a good, solid answer.

By July 12, however, Mr. Carter seemed to be feeling pressure from Israel. Asked again about the "homeland," he said his "preference" was for an "entity" that "should be tied in with Jordan and not be independent."

Besides fumbling the "homeland" question on several occasions, Mr. Carter also has shown singular lack of follow-through on the question of Israeli settlements in occupied Arab territory.

Shortly after Israeli Prime Minister Menahem Begin's trip here in July, the President said he had "let (Begin) know very strongly" that any new settlements would cause the U.S. "deep concern."

But a bit later, on Aug. 5, after Begin continued to approve new settlements and legalize old ones, Mr. Carter told reporters: "I think what he did was in consonance with the desires of the Israeli people." That introduced a new factor in the settlements equation which was manna to Israelis hungry for a show of American sympathy, but it was an unexpected blow to the Arabs.

Strength For Today

THE WASTE OF EVIL

One of the devastating effects of evil is the waste it produces. This is as true in our individual lives as it is in the world around us. For example, any wrong impulse, harbored in mind or in heart, takes the edge off one's intelligence. Think of the hours many people waste brooding over injuries, meditating revenge. Millions of people spend their lives daydreaming — not a heinous sin in itself but something that piles up an enormous amount of waste when computed in years and decades.

Even those who live the longest have little enough time to live creatively. As Cecil Rhodes, one of the architects of the British Empire, said on his deathbed, "There is so much to do, and so little time in which to do it." One of Satan's most subtle thrusts consists in persuading us to waste our time, strength, energy, and purpose in enterprises not necessarily sinful — merely futile. Wasted lives are just as lost as sinful lives.

Big Tax Cut Hopes Dampened

By OWEN ULLMANN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — One of Congress' most powerful leaders on tax matters says he favors a smaller tax cut this year than the $25 billion President Carter is expected to purpose later this month.

Citing a stronger than expected economic recovery, Rep. Al Ullman, chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, said a $25 billion tax reduction is too high and might prove inflationary.

The Oregon Democrat added in a telephone interview Wednesday that whatever the cut is —he would not give a specific figure — it should take effect by July 1, if Congress can act by then, rather than Oct. I as Carter is proposing.

Ullman also said that several controversial tax revisions Carter wants to tack onto his tax cut, such as eliminating certain business tax breaks and deductions, are almost certain to be put off until at least 1979.

The tax cut should only be as large as would be needed to offset new federal energy and Social Security tax increases, Ullman said, adding that he could not give a figure now because the energy plan is still bottled up in Congress.

He acknowledged, though, that "if we get the full crude oil tax," the two new taxes "could be in the range" of the $15 billion to $16 billion that some economists have estimated.

The oil tax, which would add about 7 cents to the price of a gallon of gasoline, was proposed by Carter and passed by the House but rejected by the Senate. It remains in conference committee.

Congress did complete action last month on Social Security legislation that will sharply boost taxes for both workers and employers. Government officials estimate the taxes will go up by about $4 billion this year.

"Twenty-five billion (dollars) is more than an offset," Ullman said. "It would be dangerous to put out too high a figure now and get locked into something that is more than the economy would need. It would be inflationary."

Carter has not announced details of his tax cut plan, which he is expected to unveil in a few weeks. But administration sources have put the total reduction at $25 billion; a figure Ullman did not dispute.

Oct. 1 is the start of the new fiscal year. If a tax cut were to take effect July 1, Congress would have to revise the budget that it already aproved for the current 1978 fiscal year.

Ullman said the size of a tax cut also has to be weighed against "the need for revenues and the need to work toward a balanced budget as quickly as possible."

As for it taking effect by July 1, he said, "We certainly can't pass a tax cut until we get an energy package. I favor July 1, if it is possible, and that depends on the energy program."

Ullman said he favors Carter's general approach to a tax reduction, which administration sources say includes a 2 percent cut in tax rates for individuals and businesses, replacement of the $750 personal exemption with a $250 credit and a more liberal investment credit for business.

Baker flew to Panama last week and told Panama leaders the treaty cannot be ratified by the Senate unless it is modified. The treaty would turn the canal over to Panama in the year 2000. Baker indicated a major problem is a provision calling for joint U.S.-Panamanian defense of the canal after that time.

dumped in their chambers. In the end, most of the petitions have to be disposed of with a cursory glance or a clerk's memorandum.

The great advantage of a National Court of Appeals, going beyond its role in resolving conflicts among the circuits, might lie in simple relief of pressure at the Supreme Court itself. The nine justices fritter away too much of their time on necessary trivia; and the trivia detract from the Court's indispensable function. This is to think; and having thought, to decide; and having decided, to spell out the reasons for its decisions in cogent, lucid, convincing opinions. Today's justices have little time for thought, reading and reflection, and their opinions often show it.

The Freund recommendations need not be endorsed in every particular, but they address a critical need and they just might work. In any event, they merit renewed discussion.

Evans-Novak...

There has been no presidential response yet to the Israeli decision last week to send new settlers to the occupied Egyptian Sinai. Considering the ups and downs of Mr. Carter's Mideast verbalisms, that should cause no surprise.

In sum, Mr. Carter's loose lip on issues of life and death to Jews and Arabs of the Mideast have caused anguish to many parties, including some of the President's most stalwart American supporters. So far, there has been no mortal damage to his overall drive for a peaceful settlement, which he has pursued with more intensity than his predecessors in the White House.

What is needed now is less hip-shooting and less effort to contrast Jimmy Carter from Richard Nixon. That is why, when he gave the results of his 45-minute talk with Sadat last Wednesday to resolve his self-created emergency, his decision to read a rare written statement brought sighs of relief. In at least this one case, the ambiguity necessary for both sides was careful and intentional. After all the amateurish impromptu diplomacy, it could be a sign of creeping professionalism.

Jenkins Recognized By N.J. General Assembly

ECU News Bureau

The General Assembly of New Jersey has given formal recognition to Dr. Leo W. Jenkins, a native of New Jersey, for his achievements as president and chancellor of East Carolina University.

In a resolution adopted in session at Trenton, N.J., the legislative body commended Jenkins "for his long and distinguished record of public service to the citizens of North Carolina" and expressed pride "in his achievements as a native son and representative of the state of New Jersey."

Jenkins, who has 30 years of service at East Carolina, including being president and chancellor since 1960, was born in Succasunna, Morris County, N.J. He holds degrees from Rutgers University, Columbia University and New York University, and served in the U.S. Marine Corps in World War II. He was professor of education at Montclair State, N.J., Teachers College 1945-46, and Assistant to the Commissioner of Higher Education in New Jersey 1946-47.

"While serving as President and Chancellor of East Carolina University, Dr. Leo Warren Jenkins, recognizing that eastern North Carolina was a 'sleeping giant' which would soon awaken to its potential greatness, succeeded in making the University the third largest university in North Carolina, establishing a four-year, degree granting School of Medicine at East Carolina University for which he received the North Carolina Public Service award in 1977," the resolution said.

A copy of the resolution, signed by the Speaker and attested by the Clerk, has been presented to Dr. Jenkins.

SEATS UP FRONT — Most country stores have benches out front and the customers find them a popular place to pause or finish their soft drinks. Charge Ex-Lawmaker In Seizure Of Marijuana

CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP) — A former South Carolina state representative and seven other men have been arrested after some 19,000 pounds of marijuana were seized Wednesday on an island partially owned by Gov. James B. Edwards.

Former Rep. J. Sidi Limehouse, a Republican farmer from Johns Island in Charleston County, was released on $75,000 bond on charges of smuggling and possession of marijuana with intent to distribute, according to a State Law Enforcement Division spokesman.

Limehouse turned himself in to police here Wednesday evening after learning a warrant had been issued for his arrest, said the SLED spokesman, Hugh Munn.

The other seven persons, all from Florida and Ohio, were being held Wednesday on bonds ranging from $50,000 to $75,000, Munn said.

Limehouse, 39, also has a part ownership in Hutchinson Island in the Colleton River, a hunting retreat where the marijuana was found.

He served in the South Carolina House in 1967-68 and in 1971-72, and ran an unsuccessful campaign against U.S. Rep. Mendel Davis, D-S.C., for the state's 1st District congressional seat in 1972.

Charged with conspiracy to smuggle, smuggling and possession with intent to distribute were Joseph Oltmann, 31, of Coral Springs, Fla.; Mark Bauer, 25, of Dayton, Ohio; Brian E. Schaufele, 32, of West Palm Beach, Fla.; Stephen C. Avery, 28, of Gainesville, Fla.; James Snyder, 28, of Dayton; Paul Lawwell, 29, of Carlisle, Ohio; and Richard J. Hunt, 36, Coral Springs.

Oltmann and Bauer were being held under $50,000 bond each, Munn said, while bonds of $75,000 were set for the rest.

The governor's press aide and executive assistant, Robert G. Liming, said Edwards had "been in close contact with law enforcement authorities in reference to the entire situation. He is happy to hear that authorities have made several arrests and seized 19,000 pounds of marijuana with an estimated street value of $6.8 million."

Frank Kinney, director of the U.S. Customs Patrol Division in Charleston, said the arrests were the result of several days of surveillance by several law enforcement organizations.

Agents kept watch as a 50-foot vessel, the Helen L. II, left Charleston Sunday night and returned Tuesday morning, he said. Then they seized the boat, an airplane on a Johns Island airstrip and several vehicles.

Three persons were arrested at the boat, which was docked at Mount Pleasant on the opposite side of Charleston harbor from the city. Agents found marijuana residue inside.

Charts found on the boat led officers to Hutchinson Island in the Colleton River, some 40 miles south of Charleston, where they found the marijuana. The other four persons were arrested at a motel at Points South, a recreation development near Hilton Head Island.

Empress To Ask Clinic Advice

ROCHESTER, Minn. (AP) — Iranian Empress Farah Dibah Pahlavi will arrive here Sunday for a three-day visit with officials at the Mayo Clinic, it has been reported.

The Rochester Post-Bulletin said in Wednesday's editions that the 40-year-old empress will discuss plans for a pediatric clinic, and hospital in Iran that is being modeled after Rochester facilities.

In a statement, the clinic said only, "She is not a clinic patient at this time."

During a two-day visit in 1975, the Shah of Iran's wife toured the clinic and the pediatric wing at St. Mary's hospital. A team of pediatric specialists and hospital officials later visited Iran to help advise in plans for a new medical facility.

A spokesman for the Kahler Hotel in Rochester confirmed Wednesday that Empress Farah Dibah and her party had registered at the hotel. The hotel is located across from the Mayo Clinic and is connected to the medical facility by a pedestrian subway.

Country Stores Pose Reminder Of The Past

VALDOSTA, Ga. (AP) — A reminder of the past for many Americans, country stores which abound in rural south Georgia and north Florida face many modern problems.

The isolated stores — which often offer benches outside for customers and still stock long-discontinued nostrums — have become easy targets for bandits.

But Mrs. Ethel Waldrup, who has run her small store near Cherry Lake, Fla., since 1947, has found a novel method to chase away potential thieves. She told one holdup man, "The Lord will not let you rob me. Go away."

And he did.

Bo Belinski, who has a store in Pinetta, Fla., has an old-fashioned solution to another modern problem. He refuses to give credit, telling customers who want credit to see a bank for a loan.

"Credit will not pay store expenses," he said.

Community Armed And Angry Over Mysterious Murderer

By GARY MIHOCES
Associated Press Writer

BADEN, Pa. (AP) — Police consult computers. But people in this steelmaking region are turning to simpler hardware to protect themselves from a killer who has slain seven of their neighbors.

The modest homes in this wooded hillside community took on postcard prettiness with this week's heavy snowfall.

Chimney smoke rises from a yellow frame home on McNair Street, but it is empty. Police, not the homeowners, keep the furnace burning. John Shelkons, 56, a steelworker, was killed by a shotgun blast in his home early Saturday.

His wife, Kathern, 48, is hospitalized in fair condition after being beaten and apparently left for dead.

She later gave police a description of the assailant — 6-foot-2, 210 pounds, 25 years old, brown hair, brown eyes.

Investigators are trying to determine if the killing is linked to four other attacks within a 12-mile radius since September.

Data is being fed into a police computer in Pittsburgh in hopes key patterns will emerge, but broad similarities are already clear.

In three earlier attacks on couples, the men were killed by shotgun blasts and the women were beaten to death or never found. In a fifth case, a paraplegic man and his wife were beaten to death.

"We've got a maniac running around," said tavern owner Sam Burson, an outdoorsman who has always kept a loaded pistol in his home. Others are arming for the first time.

"Some are buying handguns, some shotguns. It's way out of proportion to what we normally sell," said Pete Neft, manager of Sol's sporting goods store in nearby Ambridge.

"I don't lock my doors. I have guns but I don't even bother to load them because I'm not a bit afraid," said 61-year-old Mary Wilson, who lives less than a block from the Shelkons' home.

"If he ever started to kill me, I'm afraid he'd be the one that's dead because I'd just beat the hell out of him," she added.

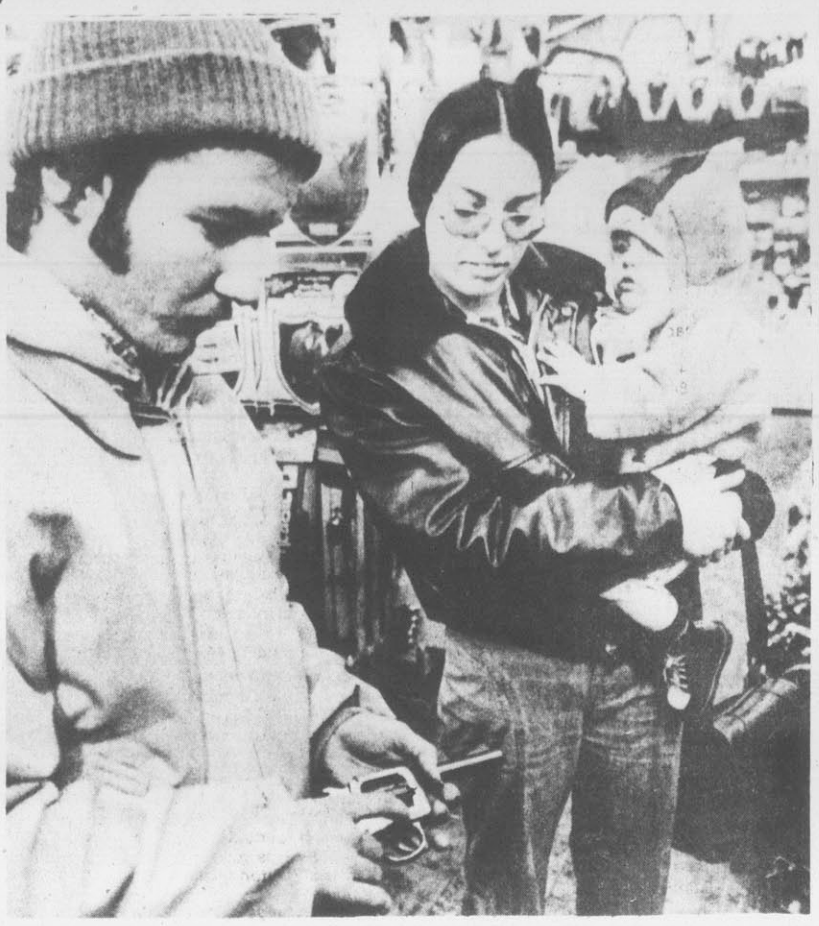

Other unsolved attacks on couples:

—Richard Hyde, 34, Moon Township, shot to death Dec. 3. Wife, Donna, 34, fatally beaten and raped.

—William Adams, 31, Fallston, shot to death in his trailer Nov. 20. Wife, Nancy, 29, missing.

—John Feeny, 17, shot to death in his van Oct. 22. Girlfriend, Renee Gregor, 16, missing.

—Joseph Weinman, 30, of Marshall Township, a paraplegic, beaten to death Sept. 30. Wife, Kathy, beaten to death.

Police Charge For Paul Lynde

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Comedian Paul Lynde has been charged with interfering with a police officer.

Police Capt. Sam Leaver said Lynde was arrested early Wednesday in front of a tavern.

Leaver said an officer was investigating a car burglary when Lynde insisted that the officer attend to Lynde's complaint that his briefcase with $1,000 in cash and valuables inside had been stolen.

The 51-year-old comedian was here to record a segment of the "Donny and Marie" television show.

Raleigh Police Claim 'Dent' In Drug Pushers

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Raleigh Police say they made a big dent in the city's drug pusher population with their Operation Snowflake, a massive round of arrests based on 143 days of undercover work by a single officer.

Starting early Wednesday morning, 64 officers from seven police agencies began rounding up nearly 100 persons named in sealed indictments returned earlier this week by the Wake County Grand Jury.

Sixty five had been arrested by Wednesday afternoon, most in their late teens and early 20s.

It was the largest drug operation ever staged in Raleigh, according to police, costing the city more than $10,000. It was aimed at relatively small-time, teenage drug traffic in North and West Raleigh, although police said some larger dealers were arrested.

"Operation Snowflake" also included 56 drug arrests made last month at a concert at the Raleigh Civic Center — most of them for misdemeanor marijuana possession — bringing the total arrested to 168.

The roundup began at 4 a.m. Wednesday. Those arrested were charged with selling drugs to officer Steve Davis. Davis lived undercover in a Raleigh apartment and drove a rented car during the 143-day campaign.

Most of the charges were for the sale of marijuana, according to police, who said 654 ounces were bought or seized. Other drugs bought and seized by the police included hashish, heroin, MDA, LSD, cocaine, PCP (an animal tranquilizer) and other assorted pills.

In all, $34,238 in illegal drugs were bought or seized, police said.

"When we went into the operation, we attempted to buy smaller quantities of drugs but tried to make at least two buys from each individual to establish him as a dealer," Johnson said.

"That way, we didn't have to spend as much money, but we got the same results," Johnson said. "I think we can say that at least 85 percent of the total would be considered persons who were actively involved in dealing drugs.

Ribbon-Cutting At New Offices Slated Friday

Ribbon cutting ceremonies for Life of Virginia Insurance Company's new Greenville office at 1206 Charles Boulevard will be held Friday, Jan. 13 at 7 p.m., according to Harold H. Pittman, district manager for the company.

Pittman invited the public to attend the ribbon cutting and open house activities.

According to the district manager, Mayor Percy Cox and other local dignitaries will be present for the opening ceremonies.

William L. Wilson is manager of the local office which serves Greenville and surrounding areas. Pittman said that Life of Virginia has been in business for 107 years and now ranks among the largest insurance companies in the United States.

Life of Virginia home offices are located in Richmond, Va.

Destroyed By Lady Churchill

LONDON (AP) — The late Lady Clementine Spencer-Churchill destroyed a portrait of her husband, Sir Winston Churchill, that the former British prime minister had once said made him look "half-witted."

Wednesday, the executors of the estate of Lady Spencer-Churchill, who died on Dec. 12 at the age of 92, said she destroyed the portrait by Graham Sutherland before her husband died in 1965.

After the portrait was presented to Churchill by the Houses of Parliament on his 80th birthday in 1954, it vanished. Lady Spencer-Churchill had refused to say what she did with it.

The executors said Wednesday that Lady Spencer-Churchill "had been distressed to see how much the picture, which both she and Sir Winston disliked, preyed on her husband's mind."

The national anthem of Afghanistan is "Lui Salami," or "National Anthem." Adopted in 1943, it has no words.

SOLD FOR $256,500 — Roger Keverne, a director of London dealer Spink's, holds a piece from Titania's Palace (background), one of the most elaborate dollhouses ever built. The dollhouse, built in 1922 with 16 rooms and 2,000 miniature furnishings, was sold this week for $256,500, more than four times what was paid for it in 1967, the last time it was sold. Unemployment Insurance For Many Large Farm Workers

For the first time in the nation's history, the U.S. Congress in 1976 passed a law which provides for unemployment insurance coverage to most workers on America's larger farm operations.

In June, 1977, the N. C. General Assembly extended coverage to certain agricultural labor in any calendar quarter in the current or preceding calendar year.

In order to understand the requirements of the federal and state laws as it applies both to farm employers and workers, Jim Hannan, manager of the Greenville office of the Employment Security Commission has provided some information on these agricultural unemployment insurance provisions.

Employer Requirements

As a general criteria for farmers who must pay unemployment insurance taxes, the rule is that a farmer who employs ten or more workers for 20 days in 20 different weeks during the current or preceding year will be required to pay the tax.

Warren G. Wittmer, Director of the N. C. Employment Security Commission, Unemployment Insurance Division, says he does not believe many North Carolina farmers will be affected by the ruling.

However, he added "we want all farmers to be aware of the amended law and the possibility of their tax liability. Farmers with large operations definitely must be concerned."

Wittmer further explained that farmers who discover they are liable to paying unemployment taxes, even if they discover this months or even years later the law's effective date, can be hit with an assessment by both state and federal government.

For farmers employing a sufficiently large work force to have to pay unemployment insurance tax, the state rate is 2.7 per cent of the first $6,000 earned by each covered worker and an additional .7 per cent of the same wage base is due the federal government.

Unemployment Eligibility

As in other unemployment coverages, farm workers unemployment benefits that can be drawn are determined by what he earns while working. A farm worker with a record of steady employment and steady wages will receive a higher unemployment check if he loses his job. Again, as with other workers, certain criteria applies. The individual who quits his job without good cause, is fired or who retires, is not eligible for unemployment payments.

The individual who is able to work, available for work, and actively seeks work may be entitled to unemployment payment if no jobs are available.

In North Carolina, the minimum unemployment payment is $15 a week, and the maximum is $112 per week.

Getting Advice

Hannan advises that any local farmer who has questions or is in doubt about whether he falls into the category to maintain tax books and payments into the unemployment fund should contact the Employment Security Commission office. The office is located at 3101 Bismark Street. The telephone number is 756-2628.

Won't Rebuild At Fire Site

HERTFORD, N.C. (AP) — The president of the burned-out oil company where a series of explosions destroyed more than $1 million worth of storage equipment says the company will not try to restore the facilities at the same site.

Julian E. Winslow of Winslow Oil Co. made the announcement as authorities searched for the cause of the blasts, which kept firefighters busy through Wednesday containing the flames and trying to protect additional oil storage tanks of adjacent companies.

"It could have been static electricity, a backfire, a spark — anything," said Hertford Police Chief Marshall Merritt. "It could have even been a cigarette, but that's pretty remote. People who work around these things know better than that."

The fire burned up an estimated 200,000 gallons of oil, kerosene and gasoline in storage tanks and transport trucks at the Winslow facilities. No one was killed, but several firemen were hurt.

The fire was fought in subfreezing temperatures, and a blanket of ice four inches thick covered the yard. Icicles hung from the tanks where the inferno had ranged uncontrollably just hours before.

Jim Bass, manager of the oil yard, estimated the damage at more than $1 million. Seven employees were at the yard, but all were in the office or some other shelter when the explosions began.

"I know there wasn't a guy out there or they'd have died," said Pete Mansfield, one of two workmen who escaped the first blasts by plunging into the icy Perquimans River and wading 100 yards to safety. "Those two truck drivers had just moved inside."

Storage tanks at two adjoining oil companys were threatened, but firemen sprayed water on them and confined flames to the Winslow facility. The offices of Reed Oil Co. were severely damaged by heat, smoke and water, however.

"I don't know how in the world we kept Reed's from burning, not with all that wind," said Floyd Long from the Winfall Fire Department, one of dozens who helped battle the blaze.

The severe cold made fighting the fire difficult, but it may also have helped. "If it hadn't been as cold as it was, it would've been worse," said fireman Wayne Winslow. "It helped keep those other tanks cool, and all this ice stopped some of that diesel fuel from leaking."

There was still fuel in a few tanks Wednesday, and Merritt said firemen reset the fire to burn it off.

Bass said the Winslow workers would still have a job, working out of Winslow's larger facility at Elizabeth City. By Wednesday morning the company had opened an office at a local bank, Mansfield said.

Paving Resolutions By Grifton Board

GRIFTON — The Grifton Town Board at its regular meeting Tuesday night enacted a resolution to pave South Dupont Avenue, Canal Street, and Railroad Street.

In other business, the Board voted to remodel a room at the Civic Center to be used by the Winterville, Ayden, and Grifton Retarded Center. Officials said that they would wait to see if bids would be requested at a later date.

Board members also discussed building a new facility for the Fire Department, Police Department, and Rescue Squad on the town lot on Queen Street. No other action was taken on the matter.

In further business, the Board adopted a resolution to hold a public hearing on Feb. 14 for the purpose of permanently closing East Street. The local Free Will Baptist Church had requested the street be closed so that may build an addition to their church. The hearing will be held at 7 p.m. in the Town Hall.

Also, the Board hired Curtis McLawhorn as a new policeman "pending on the fact that he make plans to move to Grifton." At present, McLawhorn lives in Ayden and operates a business out of his home there.

Week Of Oral Cancer 'War' Is Proclaimed

Mayor Percy Cox has proclaimed Jan. 15 as "Knock Out Mouth Cancer Sunday" in Greenville.

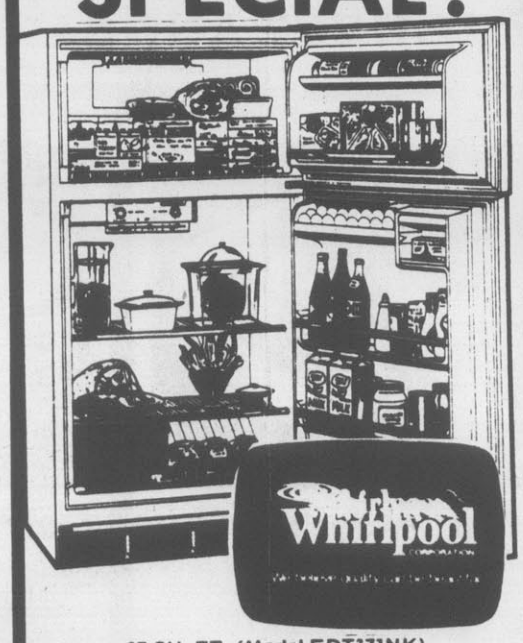

Cox said the N.C. Jaycees have "joined hands with the N.C. Division of the American Cancer Society and set apart a day for concentrated effort to detect mouth cancer by scheduling an Oral Screening Clinic at the Pitt County Health Department from 1-4 p.m."

The clinic, he noted, is sponsored by the Greenville, Farmville, and Winterville Jaycees.

In his proclamation, the mayor pointed out that cancer is "modern man's most dreaded disease, claiming one death out of every six."

He said that "many cancers are curable when detected in the early stages, properly diagnosed and properly and promptly treated."

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market, struggling to end a seven-session slide, eked out a narrow gain today on some favorable inflation news.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, off more than 55 points since New Year's to a 33-month low at Wednesday's close, showed a .52 advance at 776.42 by noontime today.

Gainers held a very slight lead over losers among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Before the market opened, the government reported that the wholesale price index rose 0.5 percent in December, down from 0.7 percent the month before.

Analysts said the news helped encourage some buying and covering of previous short sales by traders with the Dow at its lowest level since the spring of 1975.

But the market still faced the obstacle of continued pressure on the dollar in foreign exchange markets.

Weyerhaueser led the active list, off ½ at 25⅞. A 402,300-share block traded at 25⅛.

The NYSE's composite index of more than 1,500 common stocks was unchanged at 49.52. On the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up .30 at 120.03.

Volume on the Big Board came to 9.57 million shares by noontime, against 8.96 million at the same point Wednesday.

Rampants Open League Wars

Rose High School's Rampants open their 1978 Division I Conference play Friday night as they travel to meet Rocky Mount, the team picked by everyone to be the best in the state this year.

However, things haven't turned out quite as expected for the Gryphons, who have been beaten three times already this year.

At any rate, it gives the Rampants extra hopes that they might be able to pull off the upset.

The game is the first of two during the coming seven-day period for the Rampant basketball team. Otherwise, the Friday through Thursday period is one that lacks much activity. The basketball team returns to action on Saturday with a home date against non-conference foe Jacksonville. Then, the wrestling team has a match at Rocky Mount on Monday and a home date with Plymouth on Thursday.

"If Rocky Mount takes us lightly and we play well, we can win," cage coach Jim Brewington said of the game. "We can't make a lot of turnovers and hope to win, however."

Brewington said that strategy of the Rampants would be to hold either Buck Williams or Jeffrey Battle, along with the other three starters, and let the other player go and hope to win that way.

Rose goes into the game with a two-game losing streak, having bowed last Saturday to strong Washington, and then on Tuesday, falling in a double-overtime upset to West Craven, both 3-A foes.

"West Craven shot about as well as anyone could. They must have hit 65 per cent of their second half shots, and they missed only one free throw," Brewington pointed out.

The Rampants have everyone healthy now. Greg Guthrie, a starting guard, missed most of the Washington game with an injury, and Anthony Bryant, who missed several games with an injury, is back now.

"Rocky Mount is big, experienced and it will be a real struggle for us to win. Turnovers will be the key, but we're not going to roll over and play dead," Brewington said.

He added that the contest is not a "must game" for the Rampants. "We feel that we can improve right along to the tournament and still get a state tournament berth. Right now, Northern Nash is still undefeated, and is going to be tough too. But we feel that if we can split with both Northern and Rocky Mount, and then win the rest of our conference games, we'll be in real good shape to get first place."

Pirates Host Athletes Tonight

East Carolina University's Pirates return to the hardwood tonight, seeking their third straight victory. The Bucs will be playing host to the Athletes In Action, a non-collegiate team, with tipoff scheduled for 7:30 p.m.

The Pirates have won their last two games, a two-point win over William & Mary on the Indians' home court, and a 90-77 victory over St. Peter's in only the third game this year on the Minges Coliseum floor.

The game tonight won't actually go on the record, since it is with a non-collegiate team, but a victory still would be a big one.

Athletes In Action come into the game with a 16-5 record on the year, having beaten Campbell College last night.

East Carolina goes into the game with a 3-7 record on the season. Their next game is slated for Tuesday, when the Pirates have a return match with William & Mary in Minges Coliseum.

Barnes Wants Better Defense

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Scoring 31 points in a basketball game is okay, but some of the luster goes when your team doesn't win.

That is the feeling of William Barnes of Rose High School, who pushed through 31 against West Craven Tuesday night, only to see the Rampants bow, 84-80, in a double overtime.

"It was a good game for me," Barnes admits, "but I wish we could have won. I think we just took them too lightly after we had beaten them earlier. Nobody was serious about the game."

Barnes is sure that none of the Rampants are going to have that attitude on Friday night when the team opens Division I play at Rocky Mount. "They make take US lightly. At least that's what I figure will happen."

The idea of going up against Buck Williams, one of the top college prospects of the state, doesn't bother Barnes either. "I just treat him like anyone else," Barnes said. "I'll just try to do my best if I happen to draw him."

Barnes last year was plagued by back problems, and this year, he admits that it still bothers him. "I have to get a rubdown after every game to keep it from getting stiff on me," he said. "I'm only now just learning how to play with it. It doesn't hurt me as long as I keep moving, but when I stand around, it starts getting stiff on me."

Barnes feels that his back has caused him some problems with his game. "I worry at times about getting it hurt again. I guess it's more mental than physical."

Barnes feels that his back problems have also hurt him as a defensive player, but helped his offense. "When I first got hurt, I felt that defense was the strong point of my game, but I missed a lot of time. When I was out, I couldn't do anything by shoot, so I improved on my offensive game. But I've never got back to where I could play as good a defense as I would like to."

Still, Barnes admits that he wants to improve his defense, and feels he can. "My defense has to come around. If I can improve on it, I think I can help the team a lot more."

And he also feels that the Rampants have a good shot at getting a post-season playoff berth. "That's my goal, to get into the state playoffs. And I think we can do it."

Barnes also would like to continue his playing career after he completes this, his senior year. "I've been contacted by several colleges already. I sure would like to be able to play college basketball."

Buc Wrestlers Top W. Chester

East Carolina University had little trouble in winning its first home wrestling match last night in Minges Coliseum. The Pirates easily disposed of West Chester State College, 35-7, handing the Rams their first loss of the year.

"It's good to get that first win," said first-year head coach Bill Hill, with a smile creeping across his face. After three consecutive defeats on the road, the Pirates enjoyed their success over a usually strong Ram team.

The Pirates won eight of ten individual matches, recording two pins. Butch Revils, the highly successful freshman from Norfolk, Va., dropped from 177 to 167 for last night's match and recorded a pin over West Chester's Bill Hodge at 6:33.

Another Norfolk native, D.T. Joyner, pinned Steve Wright at 4:13 to finish off the night's action at heavyweight. Both Revils and Joyner attended Norview High in Norfolk.

Winning matches by decisions were: Bob Passino (118), Paul Osman (134), Frank Schaede (150), Steve Goode (158), Vic Northrup (177) and Jay Dever (190).

"I thought we wrestled a little slow tonight," said Hill, "but with three freshmen in the lineup and this being our first home match, I thought we did an overall good job. Now, if we can just get the rest of them this year."

The Pirates are on the road tonight in Chapel Hill to face the North Carolina Tar Heels, a team that has never beaten East Carolina in wrestling.

"We have a chance to win tonight, but we must get them in our stronger upper weights and get a break or two in the lower weight," noted Hill. "But we can win it."

The Pirates return home Friday night for an 8 p.m. match against Athletes in Action.

Summary:

118: Bob Passino (EC) defeated Anthony Stagliano, 14 4.
126: Jorge Leon (WC) defeated John Koonias, 6 0.
134: Paul Osman (EC) defeated Briant Phillips, 17 5.
142: Nelson Stratton (WC) defeated Scott Eaton, 9 0.
150: Frank Schaede (EC) defeated Pete Naylor, 9 5.

State Tops Maryland; Duke Rips Clemson

By The Associated Press

Virginia and North Carolina State knocked off basketball opponents Wednesday night en route to a Saturday Atlantic Coast Conference meeting between the 15th-ranked Cavaliers and 16th-ranked Wolfpack.

State Coach Norm Sloan said his team's 88-82 win over Maryland Wednesday in Reynolds Coliseum did not suprise him.

"I've said over and over again, that it's just that we've come together quicker than most people expected," Sloan said of the Wolfpack's unexpected early success this season.

Virginia put away nonconference foe Delaware 71-59 as freshman Jeff Lamp turned in a 23-point performance.

In other ACC action Wednesday, Duke ran away from Clemson, 107-85, and handed the Tigers their second straight league loss.

N.C.State 88, Maryland 82

"Maryland was aggressive and played that way right to the end," Sloan said. "You could tell they were ready to play, even from the players on the bench. I've said it before and I'll say it again, they have as much talent as anyone in the league."

Talent for State included Charles "Hawkeye" Whitney who brought in 18 points and Tony Warren who added 17.

Sloan singled out center Glenn Sudhop's performance.

"I thought Sudhop had a real fine game. Maybe not stat-wise, but he made some big plays. He hit some crucial free throws and in our zone defense he made up for some of the mistakes we made on the wing," he said.

The Wolfpack is 11-1 overall and 2-0 in the league, while Maryland suffered its third league defeat in as many outings and dropped to 9-4 for the season.

Duke 107, Clemson 85

The Tigers made the mistake of letting Duke on the foul line in the final minutes.

"You don't want to put Duke on the foul line in the late stages because they are the best foul-shooting team in the league," said Clemson Coach Bill Foster, after the Tigers allowed Duke to get 11 of its final 22 points in free throws.

Duke's Mike Gminski was the game's top scorer with 28 points, while Gene Banks added 23 and Jim Spanarkel 20.

"We played errorless ball in the last 10 minutes of the second half. Banks was tremendous — Spanarkel, Gminski — what more can you ask," said Duke's Coach Bill Foster.

Virginia 71, Delaware 59

Virginia took the lead for good at 16-12 early in the contest. Delaware's Mark Mancini led the Blue Hens with 18 points and gave Cavalier defenders a scare as his three, straight buckets put Delaware ahead 12-10 before Virginia rallied.

Delaware closed the gap to 35-33 after trailing 33-27 at halftime, but Virginia's Lee Raker made good a three-point play.

Purdue has a Victory Bell which is rung after every victory for the Boilermakers in Big Ten competition.

FARMVILLE — Farmville Central outlasted North Pitt to capture a 35-26 wrestling victory last night.

Farmville's Jaguars took wins in seven of the 13 weight classes, including two pins and a forfeit. North Pitt, with two pins and a forfeit, won five weights, while one ended in a tie.

Horace Williams of Farmville Central ran his record to 9-0 on the year, while teammate William Maye upped his to 8-0. North Pitt's Mike Manning also ran his mark to 8-0.

Farmville will play host to Williamston on Friday, while North Pitt goes to Williamston on Wednesday.

DAHLIA IS SPECIAL

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Nelson Bunker Hunt and his wife, Caroline, are getting ready to send out birth announcements — for a horse.

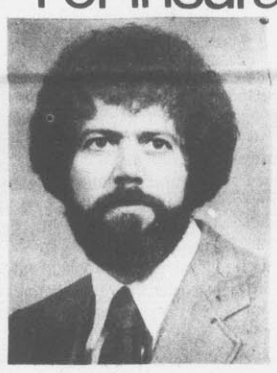

The Hunts, who have owned many champions, say the notices will go out when their great mare, Dahlia, has her foal by the 1976 Kentucky Derby and Belmont Stakes winner, Bold Forbes.

"We wouldn't do this for just any mare," Mrs. Hunt said. "But Dahlia is special."

Cowboys Practice

Morton Would Like To See Dallas Put A Blitz On Him This Sunday

By BRUCE LOWITT
AP Sports Writer

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — When Denver quarterback Craig Morton barks out the Broncos' signals in Sunday's Super Bowl, he'll also be hanging out a sign: "Blitzers Welcome."

The man who spent the first 9½ of his 13 National Football League seasons in a Dallas uniform would be delighted to see a bunch of Cowboy defensive backs and linebackers roaring in on him.

"Dallas doesn't blitz very often and I don't expect they'll do it any more than usual this time," he said. "But I'd like nothing more than to see (safeties) Charlie Waters and Cliff Harris and maybe one or two others trying to climb into my lap, 'cause if they do, that means there's single coverage out there, that someone's isolated one-on-one."

And that kind of situation is Morton's meat. He's a master of the dump-off pass and, occasionally, of the pinpoint bomb when it's man-to-man 30 yards downfield. He'll never run the ball, save for a rare bootleg down around the opposition goal line or a scramble when his protection breaks down.

Pressure, linebacker D.D. Lewis said, could be the difference in the game. "Pressure, a lot of pressure, that's what we need. We feel Morton's not that good under pressure," Lewis said. "So we're going to keep coming at him. Not everybody, you understand. Just all the time.

"And we're going to have to disguise our defenses a lot," he added. "He's real smart at reading defenses, at knowing where and when they're coming."

So is Roger Staubach, Dallas' starting quarterback since he finally beat out Morton for the job midway in the 1971 season. Roger the Dodger is one of the game's most adept running quarterbacks, occasionally calling his own number in a scrimmage-line audible when he thinks good yardage is available up the middle.

"He's got more than just one dimension. He's not like (Oakland quarterback Ken) Stabler. Stabler won't run very often and he's got such a huge line in front of him that he really doesn't have to. So you know where he's gonna be on almost every play," Chavous said.

"But Staubach—he can take off on you almost any time. If we lay too far back or get too spread out, he can be up the middle in no time."

In fact, added Broncos linebacker Joe Rizzo, Staubach would rather take off and risk a collision with a lineman or linebacker than take a loss. "I don't think he's willing to accept a conventional sack if he thinks there's any possible way for him to run for the yards he needs," Rizzo said.

But Rizzo also believes if Staubach tries to scramble for yardage against the Broncos, he's going to be brought up short—quick. "If he tries it, he's not gonna get more than maybe four or five yards, not with four linebackers gunning for him."

Staubach wouldn't say whether he plans to run more or less than usual, but he did acknowledge that the Cowboys' running game in general would have to be in top form. "If you run the ball well, you can beat the 3-4," he said of Denver's defense.

Jamesville's Whitehurst And Manning Lead Area Scoring Race

While D.H. Conley's Al Tyson is the top senior as far as area is concerned when college recruiters are in the stands, he is not the area's leading scorer in this year's first roundup.

That honor goes to Jamesville's Ricky Whitehurst, who is currently posting a 20.7 average.

Tyson is next, however, occupying the second place spot with an 18.4 average.

Next down the line comes Steve Tyburski of Greenville Christian Academy, with an 18.0 mark.

Jamesville also holds down first place in the girls' scoring race, as Joyce Manning is well ahead of her nearest competition. Miss Manning currently holds an 18.2 average.

Another academy player is the chief rival of Miss Manning for the scoring title, as Martin Academy's Lib Johnson is second with a 16.3 average.

William Barnes and Tommy DiNardo, of Rose and Jamesville, respectively, are tied for fourth place in the boys' standings, with 17.6 averages. Roanoke's Edward Ward, at 17.3, Ayden-Grifton's Frankie Dail, 17.2; A-G's James Leggett, 16.7! Bear Grass' Jesse Bullock, 15.4, and Williamston's Horace Wynne, 14.3, round out the top ten.

Rose currently leads area teams in scoring with a 70.7 average, well ahead of D. H. Conley's 65.9 second place mark.

Greene Central heads up boys' defense with a 51.9 points allowed average. Williamston is second at 53.4.

Conley leads in winning margin, outhitting its opponents by 10.0 points a game. Ayden-Grifton is second at 6.2.

Conley, at 10-2, holds down the best record, while Jamesville at 8-5, is second, followed by Ayden-Grifton and Roanoke, both 7-5.

Bear Grass' Patricia Taylor is the third scorer among the girls at 16.1, followed by Paula Bennett of Williamston at 14.4. Karen Haseley of Ayden-Grifton is fifth at 14.0.

Williamston is the top point producer among the girls at 49.7, while Conley is second at 46.4.

The Tigerettes lead the defense at 31.6, also followed by Conley at 36.6. The two also hold down the top two spots, in the same order, in winning margin, at 18.1 and 9.8, respectively.

In record, the two also are tops. Williamston is 13-1, with Conley 8-2. They are followed by Ayden-Grifton, 8-3; Roanoke, 8-4; and Rose, 5-3.

Following are the top 20 scorers in both divisions, the top five teams in offense, defense and winning margins, and all 12 area teams' records, through play on Tuesday.

Reorganization Battle Today

By ED SHEARER
AP Sports Writer

ATLANTA (AP) — College football's bigtime powers, seeking legislative clout to control their own destiny, were saving their ammunition for an expected bitter floor fight today on a controversial reorganization proposal before the National Collegiate Athletic Association convention.

"It's too close to call," Dr. Boyd McWhorter, commissioner of the Southeastern Conference, said Wednesday night.

The nation's traditionally powerful conferences and major independents let the opposition do the arguing during a roundtable discussion of the proposal Wednesday.

That group has been busy here during the preconvention activity, saying passage of the proposal would virtually kill several conferences currently ranked in Division 1 — the Southern, Mid-American, Pacific Coast Athletic Association, Southland and Missouri Valley.

Some schools in each of those conferences could meet the criteria for membership in the top division, but opponents of the measure say others would be forced to withdraw from those leagues.

"The PCAA will be decimated if restructuring passes," said Bob Murphy, athletic director at San Jose State, a school that could qualify.

The proposal would divide the 145 Division 1 membership into 1-A and 1-AA divisions. To remain in the top division, a school would have to participate in at least eight varisty Division 1 sports, have 60 percent of its football games against other Division 1 members and have averaged 17,000 in paid home attendance in at least one of the last four seasons.

Unsuccessful attempts to restructure the division were made in each of the last two NCAA conventions after financial restrictions were voted in by an expanded Division 1 membership.

The major powers want to set for themselves limits on athletic grants-in-aid and the sizes of coaching staffs.

The proposal would take into account major basketball powers that do not play football — such as defending national champion Marquette — by requiring that they schedule at least 75 percent of their games against other Division 1 schools.

The major powers appeared to have the majority vote needed to pass the legislation, but opponents were attempting to persuade some of the cellar dwellers of the big conferences to oppose it.

The issue is expected to reach the convention floor this afternoon, producing one of the fiercest floor fights in convention history.

L.A. TIX GO HIGH

LOS ANGELES (AP) — There were audible gasps among sports fans in the City of the Angels when Los Angeles officials announced that the average cost for tickets to the 1984 Summer Olympics might go as high as $25 apiece. Los Angeles is favored to get the role of host city.

A spokesman for the Los Angeles Olympic Committee explained the high cost of an Olympic ticket: "$25 for a once-in-a-lifetime ticket is not exorbitant by any means."

Who Can Feel Safe In NFL?

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Sports Writer

Tom Landry and Red Miller, the Super Bowl coaches, will be around to whistle at their teams for another season, but few other members of the profession can be so secure.

If a man like Chuck Knox, who was 5-for-5 in getting his Los Angeles Rams an NFC Division title, can be gently pushed out for not winning enough, then who can feel safe?

Knox, whose five-year stint with the Rams produced 54 victories in 70 games but no Super Bowls, left the club and signed a multi-year contract with the Buffalo Bills Tuesday night. The surprise signing came one week after Knox had reached a five-year agreement with the Rams.

Rams owner Carroll Rosenbloom soured on Knox for the team's failure to win the big playoff game — the latest postseason loss was a 14-7 upset to Minnesota — and for its conserative offensive philosophy.

Knox realized his days in Los Angeles were proably numbered when Rams management met with earlier this week with Don Coryell, the estranged coach of the St. Louis Cardinals whose contract extends through 1980 but whose heart doesn't have the same commitment.

At the moment, the Los Angeles job is the only vacancy among the 28 National Football League teams. If the disenchanted Coryell and the Rams do marry, the Cardinals would extract a divorce settlement — namely a No. 1 draft choice, according Joe Sullivan, the Cards' director of operations.

Knox hiring by the Bills was the fifth by an NFL club since the regular season ended a month ago. Other new head coaches are Marv Levy at Kansas City; Sam Rutigliano at Cleveland; Pete McCulley at San Francisco, and Monte Clark at Detroit. Clark was given the job Wednesday and McCulley got his new playbook on Tuesday.

Lost in the shuffle were Tom Bettis at Kansas City; Forrest Gregg at Cleveland; Ken Meyer at San Francisco; Tommy Hudspeth at Detroit and Jim Ringo at Buffalo.

These new coaches can be considered safe for one year — no matter how long their contracts are — and thus fit into the NFL's secure coaches category. Included in this group are Tom Landry-Dallas, Red Miller-Denver, Ted Marchibroda-Baltimore, Chuck Fairbanks-New England, Walt Michaels-New York Jets, Dick Vermeil-Philadelphia, John McVay-New York Giants, Chuck Noll-Pittsburgh, Bum Phillips-Houston, Bud Grant-Minnesota, John Madden-Oakland, Tommy Prothro-San Diego, John McKay-Tampa Bay, Leeman Bennett-Atlanta and Jack Patera-Seattle.

Until they get axed and then fall into the category of coaching victims, several coaches are in limbo, knowing they are in immeeiate danger and, if they make it to the 1978 season, probably must win quickly.

In limbo are these coaches: Hank Stram at New Orleans, Bart Starr at Green Bay and Bill Johnson at Cincinnati.

Another category — coaches who seem discontented with their present jobs — includes Allen at Washington, Don Shula at Miami and Jack Pardee at Chicago.

It's unlikely, however, that any of these three men would give up a job without having another one in his pocket.

Edenton Downs Williamston

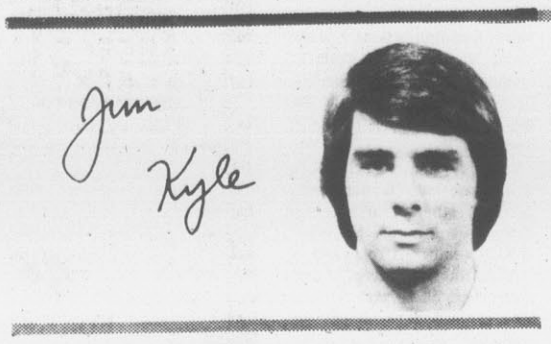

WILLIAMSTON — Edenton High School handed Williamston a 41-24 defeat in a Northeastern Conference wrestling match last night.

Edenton worked up a 22-0 lead by winning the first five weight classes before Williamston picked up a victory. The Tigers won only four of the 13 weights, taking three by pins and the other by a forfeit. Edenton counted three pins among its victories.

The match left Williamston with a 4-4-1 record. The Tigers travel to Farmville Central on Friday.

PRE-SEASON FAVORITE D. H. Conley got by a major obstacle in its quest for the Eastern Carolina Conference basketball championship Tuesday night in defeating North Lenoir, a team considered to be one of the top challengers for the crown.

The game proved to be as exciting as a key conference tilt should be with the Vikings edging the Hawks 63-62. "I was just happy to get out of that one alive," said Conley coach Shelly Marsh.

The Vikings led for most of the way, but North Lenoir kept within three in the final period and had a chance to score the winning points on a pair of free throws in the last 10 seconds, but missed.

The victory leaves Conley as the only undefeated team in the ECC after four games. North Lenoir is tied with Greene Central for second place at 3-1 and Ayden-Grifton and Farmville Central follow with 2-2 records.

Although Conley's Al Tyson got most of the preseason publicity, Mitchell Wiggins of North Lenoir is playing the best basketball in the league at the moment. The Hawk performer is the league's leading scorer with a 27-point average and he is hitting 57 percent of his shots from the field. In addition, he is the ECC's second-leading rebounder with a 12.4 average.

Tyson's statistics are not unimpressive, however. He leads in rebounding with 14.8 per game and is averaging nearly 18 points per game. He is not currently listed among the top shooters in the league percentage-wise, but has hit around 80 percent in his last few ballgames, so he could climb into that group soon.

GC Girls Pull Upset

In the ECC's girl's race, Greene Central pulled the first big upset of the year Tuesday night when it knocked off previously unbeaten C. B. Aycock 48-45.

The Lady Falcons were riding high with 9-1 overall record and 3-0 conference mark before their encounter with the Ewes.

That game threw the ECC girl's race into a three-way tie for first place between Aycock, Ayden-Grifton, D. H. Conley and Greene Central, all with 3-1 records. North Pitt is next at 2-2.

UNC Can't Afford To Wait

The six-member search committee appointed by the University of North Carolina to find a successor for head football coach Bill Dooley, who resigned to go to VPI, needs to make a decision quickly.

"We are right in the middle of recruiting — one of our most important times of the year — and we can't afford to take a real long time before naming a coach," admits assistant athletic director Moyer Smith.

The group is headed up by Ben Wilcox, faculty chairman of athletics of the school. Other members are Bill Cobey, athletic director; Bill Moss, student body president; Carl Blyth, chairman of the physical education department; Joe Maddux, president of the Educational Foundation; and Ralph Strayhorn, vice president of the board of trustees.

Smith said the job has drawn a lot of interest, but to his knowledge, no interviews have been conducted.

One obstacle to a quick decision could be an HEW affirmative action rule which requires colleges to advertise job openings for "an adequate time" before filling them, ordinarily at least three to 10 weeks.

However, Smith said the school is in an "emergency situation" and the HEW has "been very understanding about it. They realize if we wait five or six weeks before naming a coach, all of the recruits will be gone."

Carson On UNC List

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Pittsburgh Steeler defensive coordinator and secondary coach Bud Carson has joined the list of serious candidates for the football coaching job at the University of North Carolina.

Carson was head coach at Georgia Tech for five seasons. He played at North Carolina in the 1950s and said recently that if he ever took a college coaching job it would be at North Carolina.

Others believed to be under consideration by a five-member search committee include Pat Watson and Jim Donnan, both members of the North Carolina staff, Southern Mississippi coach Bobby Collins and Furman head coach Art Baker.

Collins worked for eight years under coach Bill Dooley, whose departure for Virginia Tech is creating the vacancy.

Confident Over N.C. Outlook

By MONTE PLOTT
Associated Press Writer

CHARLOTTE (AP) — After three days of talking about the problems and strengths of North Carolina's economy, the man who put together the three-day Governors Conference on Balanced Growth and Economic Development came away optimistic.

"The state of the state's economy is good now but we need to do things now, make plans, so we don't have problems in the 1980s," said John G. Medlin Jr., president of Wachovia Bank in Winston-Salem, and chairman of the conference.

"That's one thing we tried to do here in this conference — achieve a unity of purpose for the future," Medlin said.

About 400 delegates, representing each of the state's 100 counties, listened to a parade of speakers and discussed the state's economy during the conference.

The conference had two goals: forming a picture of the state's overall economy and preparing a delegation from North Carolina for a national economic conference in Washington later this month.

Delegates heard from spokesmen representing the varying viewpoints in the East, Piedmont and West sections of the state.

"What I hope came out of this, if nothing else, is the ability to accept other points of view," Medlin said.

Each region put forth its own strengths and weaknesses, but there were points of agreement.

The state needs new industry, but must give consideration to factors such as energy and environment, the spokesmen said. They agreed the state's right-to-work law ought to be retained, but they called for changing or eliminating the state's tax on manufacturer's inventory.

Gov. Jim Hunt, in a speech which closed the conference Wednesday, called for change in the inventory tax but not its elimination.

Doing away with the tax would "take too much money out of the state treasury," Hunt said.

"But I believe that well-focused manufacturers' inventory tax relief can be a powerful development tool (for bringing in new industry) and still preserve the state's fiscal soundness."

Hunt said he favored "tax relief" that would include a credit for state income tax paid, and he said relief measures should be structured so as to cost the state no more than $10 million a year.

In assessing the conference, Hunt called for business and government leaders to develop plans "on where to locate jobs, public services and public investment.

"The idea is to build upon our growing urban base — both small cities and large cities — and guide job opportunities and public services to where people choose to live," Hunt said.

Not all his remarks were favorable.

"We stand 38th in the nation in per capita income, 45th in median family income and dead last in average hourly manufacturing wages," he said.

Hunt said the conference was a "first step" in handling economic development in North Carolina, but a state labor leader said he thought the conference ignored major issues.

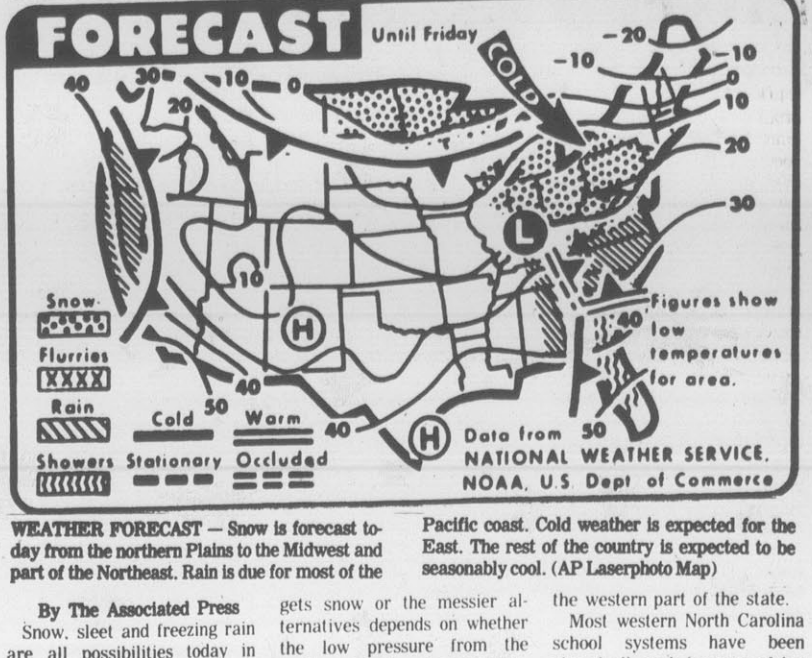

"I didn't hear talk about jobs," said Wilbur Hobby, president of the North Carolina AFL-CIO.

"I heard repeal the inventory tax, the intangibles tax, keep the right-to-work law...I don't feel the conference addressed the real problem of job development."

He also disagreed with conference organizers' statements that delegates represented the state's population.

"I think that workers are not represented here. First, they weren't invited. Also, most can't afford to take a day off to come to the conference and most can't afford the $40 for a ticket."

How's The Weather?

WEATHER FORECAST — Snow is forecast today from the northern Plains to the Midwest and part of the Northeast. Rain is due for most of the Pacific coast. Cold weather is expected for the East. The rest of the country is expected to be seasonably cool. (AP Laserphoto Map)

By The Associated Press

Snow, sleet and freezing rain are all possibilities today in North Carolina, where a winter storm from the Gulf of Mexico is due to collide with the high pressure system that has had the state in a deep freeze all week.

Schools remained closed in several western counties today, although others that had shut down because of hazardous driving conditions reopened.

All of the state except coastal areas were to be under a winter storm watch by tonight, and snowfalls up to four inches were forecast for the mountains by Friday.

Whether the rest of the state gets snow or the messier alternatives depends on whether the low pressure from the southwest pushes the high pressure system out to sea and warms things up.

Temperatures all week have been in the 20s and 30s, dipping at night into the low teens and below.

The cold, coupled with maintenance problems and frozen coal, has forced Duke Power Co. to ask its customers in the Carolinas to cut back electrical consumption.

And Carolina Power and Light Co. developed similar difficulties on a smaller scale and asked the same thing of about 10 percent of its customers in the western part of the state.

Most western North Carolina school systems have been closed all week because of icy roads, but schools in Jackson, Swain, and Macon counties and Hendersonville were reopened Wednesday and were expected to remain so today.

Asheville city schools will remain closed, along with schools in Buncombe, Avery, Haywood, Henderson, Madison, Mitchell, Watauga and Yancey counties. Asheville planned to resume classes Friday, weather permitting.

California Lettuce Prices Sharply Up

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Iceberg lettuce, just 29 cents a head last month in local stores, will cost as much as 69 cents here because of abnormally warm weather last month and recent heavy rains in the Imperial Valley, the nation's lettuce bowl.

Agriculture officials said Wednesday that lettuce farmers are charging as much as $10 per ton, five times more than their price one month ago, since adverse weather conditions cut sharply into the valley's normal production of nearly 500,000 tons of winter lettuce.

They said New York buyers may have to pay as much as 90 cents for a head of lettuce.

State marketing specialist Jack Kloth estimated yields were down by as much as half in some fields. He predicted that once the rains end and normal harvesting resumes, the price of lettuce could drop to $5 per ton.

However, assistant county agricultural commissioner John Taylor warned that lettuce prices will soar again when the winter harvest ends in March. He said that is because "the warm weather gave us too much early growth. A shortage of lettuce is likely to occur in the late stages of the harvest."

Last month's warm spell left lettuce fields with overgrown, excessively leafy plants and subsequent rains have muddied fields, bogging down the harvest.

Enrico Caruso made his American debut at the Metropolitan Opera in New York on Nov. 23, 1903.

Tax Assistance

Ray Midgett, local Revenue Office for the N. C. Department of Revenue, advises that personnel to assist in filing state income and intangible tax returns will be available on Monday of each week through Apr. 15.

The State Tax Office is located at 300 W. First Street here. Assistance is available each Monday from 8 a. m. to 5 p. m.

Midgett requests that taxpayers bring the pre-addressed forms which were mailed to them from Raleigh.

Taxpayers filing their own returns should mail those which indicate a refund to the N. C. Dept. of Revenue, P. O. Box R, Raleigh, N. C. 27634. Other completed returns should be mailed to the N. C. Dept. of Revenue, P. O. Box 25000, Raleigh, N. C. 27640, Midgett said.

Critics Pick Best Books

NEW YORK (AP) — Toni Morrison's "Song of Solomon" is the best work of fiction published by an American writer in 1977, according to the National Book Critics Circle.

The critics described "Song of Solomon" as "the black experience in America, from crawling to walking to running to flying — into poetry and myth — jazzy and wondrous."

The Morrison book won over four other fiction nominees — John Cheever's "Falconer;" Joan Didion's "A Book of Common Prayer;" Philip Roth's "The Professor of Desire," and John Sayles' "Union Dues."

The circle gave its poetry award to "Day by Day," the final work of the late Robert Lowell; the general nonfiction award to Walter Jackson Bate's biography, "Samuel Johnson" and the award for a book of criticism to Susan Sontag's "On Photography."

The awards were announced Wednesday.

The critics' circle, organized in 1974, has more than 200 professional book critics and book review editors across the country as members. They all participate in the nomination of semifinalists, and the 18-member board of directors selects the winners.

Damage from the collision was estimated at $300 to the Davis car and $200 to the Osborne vehicle.

A 5:45 p.m. mishap at the intersection of 14th and Charles Streets involved cars driven by Linda Denise Mills of Route 1, Winterville and John H. O'Beirne of 106 North Summit St.

Officers set damage from that collision at $100 to the Mills car and $200 to the O'Beirne vehicle.

Silverman Undecided On His Future With ABC

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — ABC programs chief Fred Silverman, who in 2½ years helped boost his network to No. 1 in evening ratings, hasn't decided yet if he'll leave ABC when his contract expires in June.

But he denies rumors he'll be joining Paramount Television or was offered the presidency of the National Broadcasting Co., whose TV division is third in prime-time ratings averages so far this season.

Silverman, whom some reports have described as tiring of network life and considering a move into independent TV production, said Wednesday he's still negotiating with ABC about remaining there.

"Right now, I'm having discussions with Fred (Pierce, head of ABC-TV), and hardly anything has been resolved," he told a news conference here attended by about 60 local and visiting TV critics.

"I think there'll be a resolution shortly," added Silverman, 40, who boosted ABC's stock two points in 1975 at the time he joined the network after five years as top programmer at then top-rated CBS-TV.

"I've heard rumors, everything from NBC to Walt Disney, and they're just ridiculous," he said of speculation on his future.

"We (at ABC) are in conversations. You know, for me, it's a very important decision ... it's kind of a crossroads in my life. That decision will be made very, very shortly."

He declined to name the day his decision will come, or to say what his ABC contract talks involve. He laughed when asked if he'd considered working simultaneously for all three networks.

He also announced four new "limited run" series coming to ABC in March and fielded a series of quesions that included when ABC will rerun "Roots," which broke ratings records in January 1977.

The four new shows are "Young Pioneers," about a young couple in the 1870s in South Dakota; "Having Babies," based on the two hit TV movies of the same name, and two situation comedies, "A.E.S. Hudson Street," set in a hospital emergency room, and "The Harvey Korman Show" with the former co-star of CBS' "Carol Burnett Show" playing an eccentric actor.

On "Roots," Silverman said the 12-hour miniseries will be repeated prior to the start of the new TV season in September, but that no air date will be set until two or three weeks from now.

Asked if ABC plans a series based on the hit movie, "Star Wars," Silverman replied: "There is no 'Star Wars' series planned anywhere."

He noted that the film's maker, 20th Century-Fox, will soon shoot a sequel and "I don't think 20th will do a 'Star Wars' series for many years to come.

"I think they've got a gold mine in a theatrical movie property."

Asked which competing network now is best prepared to challenge ABC in the ratings, he said he thinks "there's no question" that CBS is, at this point, because it has a stronger schedule than NBC.

Held Liable For Damages

HILLSBOROUGH, N.C. (AP) — A superior court jury has found Hillsborough Mayor Frederick S. Cates Jr. liable on two of three charges in a $3 million suit filed by a man who claims Cates had him falsely arrested on a charge of raping the mayor's married daughter.

The jury determined that Cates had falsely imprisoned Geary D. Blackwood in 1974 and trespassed on the property of Blackwood's parents in Chapel Hill. Cates is liable for civil damages on those charges, the jury ruled.

Judge James H. Pou Bailey scheduled a trial here April 3 for determination of the amount of damages.

Hillsborough police Sgt. Larry Biggs and former Carrboro police Sgt. Larry Edwards were also found liable on charges of trespass.

The jury rejected a claim by Blackwood's mother that she was entitled to damages because Cates allegedly telephoned her twice and threatened her son's life.

"I haven't commented on this for three years and I won't now," Cates said later. He was not present when the verdict was announced. His attorney filed notice of appeal, which won't come until after damages have been set.

Blackwood had been charged after his arrest three years ago with raping Elizabeth Cates Cox. He was acquitted in a 1976 trial. Blackwood was arrested in Chapel Hill and contended neither of the officers who brought him in had jurisdiction to do so.

"I feel like partial justice was done," said Mrs. Jewel Blackwood, Geary's mother. "I am optimistic. I believe we've come a long way."

Croatan Study Is Awarded To ECU

ECU News Bureau

East Carolina University has been commissioned by the U.S. Forest Service to study land use management in the Croatan National Forest, eastern North Carolina's largest federally protected forest area.

The purpose of the study, which begins this month, is to provide the Forest Service with information about the changes in land use in the forest between 1900 and 1975. It will also study the effects that these changes have had on local communities in Craven, Carteret, Jones and Onslow counties.

Dr. Peter Fricke, a senior scientist in the ECU Institute for Coastal and Marine Resources and a visiting associate professor of sociology, will direct the project. He will be assisted by Dr. William Still, professor of history and Dr. Mark Brinson, associate professor of biology.

According to Dr. Fricke, "The proximity of the forest to the White Oak and Neuse River estuaries, and to Bogue Sound, is of particular scientific and public interest because of the intricate relationship between land use and the marine resources of the region."

The Croatan National Forest encompasses 308,324 acres. Of this area, 156,584 acres are owned by the U.S. Forest Service and provide varied recreational and employment opportunities.

ECU received a grant of $9,978 to support the study.

Opening lead: Ace of ♠.

West chose to ignore his partner's lead-directing double and allowed the declarer an opportunity to give a dazzling display of technique at his grand slam in hearts.

South's decision to bid the grand slam was quite a shot in the dark, for North might have raised to six hearts on a somewhat weaker hand. East made a Lightner double to suggest an unusual lead, usually the first suit bid by dummy.

However, West was not content with a mere one-trick set—it was obvious from his hand that his partner had to want a club lead and should be able to ruff. He must have presumed that declarer had gone entirely out of his mind, for he decided to lead the ace of spades. His folly was soon brought home to him.

Declarer ruffed with a low trump and entered dummy by leading the seven of trumps to the jack. He noted that East dropped the ten and, in view of the opening preempt, there was no reason to doubt that it was a singleton. Declarer crossed back to his hand by ruffing a spade high, then entered dummy with the jack of diamonds for another spade ruff with a high trump. Next, he led a low trump. When West followed with the five, declarer finessed the six!

When this held, the contract was virtually home. He ruffed dummy's last spade with his own last trump, the ace. Now declarer crossed to the king of clubs and used dummy's nine of trumps to draw West's last trump. On this trick declarer sluffed his club loser.

Four tricks remained to be played. They were won by declarer's three high diamonds and the ace of clubs. Instead of down one, the grand slam rolled home for an enormous swing.

There is a moral to this story. If partner suggests a line of play and you choose to ignore him, you had better be right. After all, if you hearken to him and go wrong, you know where to put the blame.

Your play to the first trick could decide the fate of the contract! A writer once remarked: "There's no such thing as a blind opening lead, only deaf opening leaders!" Foreign Investors Inflating U.S. Farmland Prices

EDITOR'S NOTE — American farmers, already up in arms over unfair return on their investments, may have to contend with inflated land prices. A lot of foreigners are buying farms and farm-related businesses as investments — at prices beyond the reach of most farmers.

By WAYNE SLATER
Associated Press Writer

EUREKA, Kan. (AP) — The bidders wear cowboy boots and the cattle are Kansas-bred, but there's something alien about this glimpse of the American heartland.

None of it is locally owned. Not the auction barn where the Herefords are sold. Not the brick mansion behind wrought iron gates nor the grazing land which stretches as far as one can see.

In fact, the owners of this sprawling cattle ranch aren't even Americans.

Gary Longacre, a big-boned cattleman in leather chaps, sold 28 cows and 18 bulls at the November annual sale here. And at pretty good prices, he's pleased to say.

What he's not anxious to talk about, however, are the owners of the cattle ranch, a wealthy West German family which rarely visits the spread in the picturesque Flint Hills of eastern Kansas.

"Being a poor man all my life, I find it hard to understand people like the Flicks who live in a fishbowl," Longacre says, pulling a reporter out of earshot of a circle of Kansas farmers in Western hats and dusty boots. "I don't talk about them."

The Flicks, heirs to the Mercedes-Benz fortune, bought Flint Hills Hereford Ranch from a Wichita oilman about eight years ago and hired Longacre, a rancher of good reputation, to manage it.

Legally, the purchaser was a Maryland corporation controlled by the Flick family. The sale and management agreement were handled by non-Kansas firms.

Increasingly, foreign interests are buying large tracts of American farmland. They are German industrialists, Italian bankers, millionaires from the Netherlands and wealthy tycoons from Argentina.

"They are people who have typically been from landed families in Europe," says Marvin Duncan, agricultural economist for the Federal Reserve Bank in Kansas City. "Further, they are people interested in diversifying their portfolios but concerned about political stability in their own country.

"And they are quite good business people and interested in profit. As an investment, farmland has performed better than the stock market over the past years."

By anybody's calculations, the total foreign holdings of U.S. farmland is small, but Kenneth Krause, an analyst with the U.S. Department of Agriculture, said purchases to foreign interests are growing.

A U.S. Department of Commerce study of direct alien involvement in the United States at the end of 1974 shows that 4.9 million acres of land were foreign-owned and that almost 63 million acres were leased by foreign-owned American enterprises. Of that total, only about 22 percent, or a million acres, was identified as farm-related.

However, it doesn't include property held for personal use, holdings of less than 200 acres or tracts owned by small businesses.

Foreign investors are reluctant to disclose their purchases and reporting laws are largely ineffective.

A few foreign transactions are known: Prince Lichtenstein's 10,000-acre farm in Texas' Red River area; the Busonis' 12,000-acre Norris farm in Illinois; the Metternichs' 2,135 acres in Iowa; the Japanese Kikamo farm in Wisconsin; a 2-million bushel grain elevator in Salina, Kan., purchased by Mitsubishi, Japan's No. 1 trading company.

To remain anonymous, foreign investors buy land through a series of intermediaries or invest in large-scale American agribusiness.

For example, Saudi Arabian interests purchased 15 percent of the Arizona-Colorado Land and Cattle Co., which owns and leases more than a million acres of land. It operates cattle ranches in several states and has business interests in a beef-packing plant, cattle feedlots, a commodity futures, brokerage firms, a real estate company, natural resources, engineering firms and a bank.

Perhaps the most popular spot for foreign investors is California, although purchases are being made in the Midwest and Southeast.

"Over the last four years, we've sold about $70 million in real estate to foreign investors, some grazing land and some farmland," says Reed Oppenheimer of Oppenheimer Industries, a brokerage and land management firm in Kansas City.

In 1977 alone, Oppenheimer Industries sold some $8 million of farmland to foreign investors, much of it in Missouri and Arkansas. Most recently, the firm handled the sale of 1,000 acres to a German family and some 4,000 acres to an Italian interest, both from rich Marais des Cygnes bottomland in Bates County, Mo.

Newcomers to the market are from the oil-rich countries, although Oppenheimer says much of the Middle Eastern money is going into food packing and processing, not farmland.

Some Tips From Russia On How To Live 100 Years

By PEGGY POLK

KIEV, U.S.S.R. (UPI) — Soviet specialists believe that man is capable of adding some 30 years to his average lifespan.

According to academician Dmitry Chebotaryov, director of the Kiev Institute of Gerontology, medical care and social conditions are important. So are eating and drinking sensibly, avoiding tensions and thinking twice about retirement.

The institute is one of the world's major centers for study and treatment of the aging. It exchanges information with similar centers in Eastern Europe and Sweden and, Chebotaryov said, "from next year I hope also with the United States."

"Unique discoveries in our field don't come very often. There are no breakthroughs. But even without them we believe that people can live to be 90 or 100," Chebotaryov said in a recent talk with visiting Western correspondents.

The average life expectancy in the Soviet Union is 70 years today. But Chebotaryov said this country's population of 259 million includes three million people over the age of 80, some 600,000 over 90 and 20,000 over 100.

In the Soviet republics of Azerbaijan and Georgia and in some parts of the Ukraine there are people who live anywhere from 130 to 150 years. Chebotaryov said the oldest "long liver" he knows of was 158 when he died.

"It is impossible to think that all people can live that long," Chebotaryov said. "But there is a reserve for living up to 90 or 100 and we should fight for that reserve."

Chebotaryov said Soviet geneticists expect very soon to be able to predict whether an individual will have a long life or a short one. But he said much is still up to the individual.

"According to heredity, every person has his own program which can be reduced by a way of life or prolonged. Unfortunately, many people reduce their lifespan by smoking, drinking, tensions, too much coffee — an irrational way of life."

"From 40 onwards we should gradually reduce calorie intake by about one-third," he said, because the metabolism no longer burns up calories at the same rate.

For the Soviets in particular, obesity is a problem. Chebotaryov estimated that 40 per cent of middle-aged and elderly Soviets — almost 50 per cent of the women — are overweight.

Chebotaryov said retirement is a major problem because it often carries with it "pension diseases."

"Going on pension can cause much stress and influence the whole body, causing illness," he said. "The best thing is to find a way for a man at pension age to go on working but in a more relaxed manner. He shouldn't work as hard as he did when he was younger."

Chebotaryov himself is 69, four years past the Soviet retirement age for men.

"Pension diseases can appear at any age," Chebotaryov said, "if a person is not ready to retire.

"If he goes on pension it is necessary to provide some kind of professional activities or social activities or a hobby to take up time and fight against indifference. Gardening is a good way to avoid pension bankruptcy."

Chebotaryov said it is not entirely clear why some people in the Soviet Union become "long-livers," still alive and vigorous well past 100, but there is a pattern to their lives.

"Throughout their lives they did agricultural work, which they did not stop at age 75 or even 100 but continued in a limited way. They did not come from rich families allowing them to eat rich foods. They ate very simple food."

And, he said, "for an old man, psychological changes in the family are very important. If he lives in the family and the family respects him, he feels he is a patriarch. If not, this depresses him very much."

The long-livers are patriarchs.

Chebotaryov said his institute's prescription for lengthening the life span is:

— More effective treatment or elimination of the diseases characteristic of the second half of life, including cancer, arteriosclerosis, and hypertension. This would add five to eight years.

— Contro of environmental factors. Achieving a sensible balance of work, nutrition, leisure and interpersonal relations would add another few years.

— Pharmacological control of aging.

Chebotaryov said medical science is not yet advanced in slowing down the aging process but some substances have worked in experiments with animals, prolonging their lives by 25 to 30 percent.

Among them he lists polyvitamins, anabolic hormones and mild stimulants like royal jelly and ginseng.

Wilmington Now Uneasy

WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP) — The Wilmington Chamber of Commerce isn't as anxious as it was at first to attract the Monitor Research and Recovery Foundation to this port city.

Officials said Wednesday they were uneasy about vague budget information the foundation had provided and uncertainty over who will have final authority over efforts to raise the sunken Civil War ironclad, now lying in more than 200 feet of water off Cape Hatteras.

"The Chamber of Commerce doesn't feel the community can commit a large sum of money over a number of years based on the information the foundation has sent to Wilmington," said Mayor Ben Halterman.

Wilmington has been a contender along with Hampton, Va., and Carteret County for the foundation, whose officials say that wherever the foundation has its headquarters is likely to be the location of the Monitor itself if it is raised.

The foundation's board was scheduled to meet this weekend in Beaufort to make the decision, but the Wilmington group said it was still interested only if the foundation would postpone its decision and provide additional information.

Halterman said the foundation did not provide enough specific information on how it proposed to spend its requested $960,000 over the next three years.

The Wilmington group also wants assurances that the foundation plans to cooperate with state authorities who have an agreement with the federal government which gives the state power to plan and oversee all Monitor-related activity.

John Newton, foundation director, said that the organization would need operating expenses, a site for historical display and office space from its host city.

Your Daily HOROSCOPE

from the CARROLL RIGHTER INSTITUTE

GENERAL TENDENCIES: There is apt to be some confusion and muddled thinking now, so avoid what can be deceptive and fraudulent. Later, a whole new series of conditions comes into being by which you can advance to a much better life with more prosperity.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) You get a puzzling communication early but ignore it; do not take it seriously. Try to be of assistance to friends and relatives. Increase own happiness.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Don't permit a monetary affair to disturb you now since later you can see how best to handle it. An expert can be of great assistance if you consult him.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) You are not in a good mood. Take time to improve your appearance and your feeling of well-being. Seek company of good friends.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Conditions are rather trying for you but be philosophical and all works out to your benefit. Don't forget to pay important bills.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) A new contact is disappointing, but a good friend comes to your aid. Take no chances with one who is a fair weather friend.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Give attention to outside affairs that are important early, then plan other activities for later. Show you are a thoughtful person. Take no chances with reputation.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Study future plans and make revisions if you deem them necessary. If you have a trip in mind, make arrangements well in advance for best results.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Take care of promises you have made early, although it may be somewhat annoying. Then arrange other obligations intelligently. A loved one may be irritated but this condition soon passes.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) A new attitude toward some association matter brings good results. An outside affair can also be beneficial to you. Do whatever will bring you more happiness.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Your work may seem annoying but if you persevere you can turn it into pleasure and gain benefits. Take treatments to improve health.

Memory Of 'Big Six' Still Is Held In Awe By Moonshiners

BIG SIX RECALLS DAYS AS "REVENOOER" — Big Six Henderson, who once struck fear in the hearts of Kentucky moonshiners, recalls his days as a federal treasury agent. Behind him in his Louisville, Ky. home is a collection of liquor bottles. (AP Laserphoto)

By JULES LOH
AP Special Correspondent

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — In Kentucky's moonshine hollows, one name still strikes awe: Big Six Henderson.

Big Six Henderson busted up more stills in his time than anybody in history. If that is not so, at least it is the legend. When moonshiners talk about Big Six Henderson, the line between truth and legend blurs.

"I don't know what the record is," Big Six Henderson allowed, thinking back on his days of prowling around in alien corn, as it were.

"I know I raided more than 5,000 stills and sent more than 5,600 moonshiners to prison. You could figure it up. I've kept a copy of my daily reports for every day I was a revenue agent."

That was for a span of 28 years until he retired a few years ago, and it figures up to roughly a still every other day. The saga of Big Six Henderson, though, is hardly told in dry statistics.

The moonshiners Big Six Henderson tracked down imparted heroic dimensions to him and respected him as much as they feared him.

"Mr. Big Six," one woman said when he came to haul her husband off to jail for a third time, "we're proud to have folks know we know you." More than a few moonshiners named their children for Big Six Henderson.

One even named his mash barrel for him, painted "Big Six" on it and talked to it fondly.

"Good morning, Bix Six," he said to the barrel one day. "Why don't we just run ourselves off a little batch, you and I. What do you say to that, Big Six?"

"That you're caught, Thurlow," Big Six Henderson said, stepping out of the mist.

At 75, Big Six Henderson is still impressive to behold.

He is a great bear of a man, six-foot-four, with a thick bush of white hair and eyes the color of wet turquoise. His mother named him William; Big Six was the name he picked up when he was going to law school and throwing a baseball after the fashion of Christy "Big Six" Mathewson.

He became a federal treasury agent, a "revenooer" as they are known in the hills, and went about it with a single-mindedness that became the stuff of myth.

It was no myth, though, that he could creep through the woods as quiet as smoke in his green raiding suit and could run like a deer for miles. Usually he didn't have to run after his quarry.

"Homer, halt!" he shouted at one fleeing moonshiner. The man froze in his tracks.

"I'm halted, Big Six, I'm halted."

He was a legend in his time, all right, and not just because of his uncanny skill and his zealotry. He also had a reputation for fair play and decent treatment of the moonshiners he caught.

"I never regarded them as doing something evil, just illegal," Big Six Henderson said, "and I never abused them." The big man thumbed through a sheaf of his faded daily reports, looking wistfully at the names.

"Killed a few, but never abused them."

Chemist To Direct Seminar On Friday

Dr. William J. Bailey, professor of chemistry at the University of Maryland and a former president of the American Chemical Society, will direct a seminar at the East Carolina University Department of Chemistry on Friday, January 13. His program will begin at 2 p.m. in Room 201, Flanagan Building. There is no admission charge and the public is invited to attend.

Bailey's topic will be "Monomers that Expand on Polymerization." These monomers are unique and have many useful applications to everyday life — for example, they may be used instead of explosives for cracking underground rock materials, or as material for dental fills as they can expand into any cavity or fissure in the tooth.

Dr. Bailey has carried out research work on biodegradable polymers that has great interest from the ecological standpoint, since the research is directed to creating plastic material that will degrade on exposure to sun and bacteria.

Dr. Bailey has been a consultant to various industries, including the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Co., BASF Wyandotte Corp. and Hydron Laboratories. He is the author of more than 150 technical articles, books and patents in the field of organic and polymer chemistry.

The 'Threshold' for Pain

My husband seems to fall apart with any pain or ache. He just doesn't seem able to handle any kind of pain. Generally speaking, don't you think women are able to take pain better than men? — Mrs. E.F., Ill.

Dear Mrs. F.:

I don't know of any in-depth studies that have revealed women's ability to tolerate pain as compared with men.

My personal experience, however, is that women do, indeed, handle pain better and continue to function with pain more readily than men.

There are many variables that determine the capacity to tolerate pain. This is known as the "threshold" for pain. Even those with a high tolerance for pain may, under certain circumstances, find that this is lowered. When there is additional emotional stress, even those who can accept a great deal of pain may find that their tolerance is lowered and that they react more severely than usual.

The capacity to withstand pain is not a comparative game. Children and adults should not be stigmatized when they react more actively than is commonly expected.

Some people cannot tolerate the slightest pain associated with drilling of the teeth. Others can sit through the most exhaustive sessions in the dentist's office, without a complaint.

Stoicism and the tolerance for pain can be acquired. I have found that when patients are armed with the truth, when their fears are allayed and when their anxiety level is reduced their threshold for pain improves.

Patient understanding, rather than condemnation, is in order if physical and emotional pain are to be made more tolerable.

I have a hooked nose. My problem is that I can't breathe well through it unless I raise the tip. Is it possible to have this fixed? I'm 27. — Mr. B.O'T., Mass.

Dear Mr. O'T.:

You describe so well a condition known as the "hanging tip syndrome." Many people, even those without a hooked nose, find that by elevating the tip they can breathe more easily.

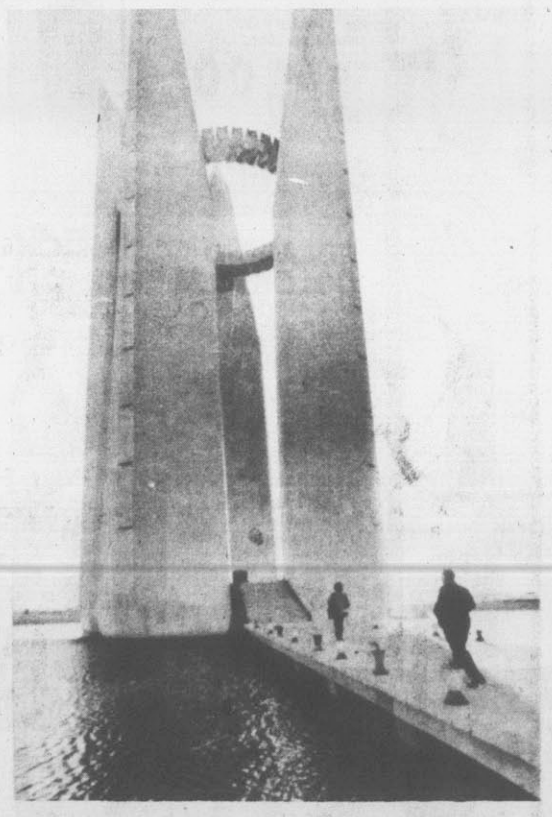

Sometimes, a deviation of the septum is present and interferes with the free flow of air to the nose. The septum is the cartilage that divides one side of the nose from the other.

The "hanging tip" can be easily repaired. Very often people elect to have cosmetic plastic surgery done at the same time, especially if there is a marked deformity of the nose. In this way, the appearance and the ability to breathe are both improved.

The most popular
Mercedes-Benz idea:
The 240D.

The 240D represents the evolution of a concept established in 1936: a practical diesel engine in a sedan with the engineered comfort found only in automobiles built by Mercedes-Benz.

Pre-combustion fuel injection (see drawing) feeds fuel to the refined 2.4-liter overhead cam engine. There is no ignition system to require conventional tune-ups, no spark plugs to replace.

Panama Canal Treaties-Similar To Versailles?

By NICHOLAS DANILOFF

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A hush fell over the Senate chamber that historic Friday afternoon, March 19, 1920, when the clerk read out the final tally: 49 yeas, 35 nays, 12 senators not voting.

The President pro tem then solemnly intoned:

"Not having received the affirmative votes of two-thirds of the senators present and voting, the resolution is not agreed to, and the Senate does not advise and consent to the ratification of the treaty of peace with Germany."

The Senate thus rejected the complex peace treaty which ended World War I. It rebuffed President Woodrow Wilson's cherished dream — a League of Nations to prevent war.

America's isolationism had been reaffirmed. America kept out of an intimate involvement in Europe's affairs. Despite that, a new European war erupted two decades later and forced the United States into new, bloody, conflict.

This spring, 58 years later, the Senate again faces a historic moment:

To approve or reject a diplomatic accord with Panama which, like the rejected Treaty of Versailles, calls for a major transformation of the old order in an effort to avoid bloodshed and keep a valuable transportation artery operating.

The canal treaties — negotiated over the last 13 years by four administrations, both Republican and Democrat — would transfer the American-built waterway to Panama in the year 2000. They would provide for the canal's permanent neutrality.

The administration has called for the approval without amendment. Former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger has warned a rejection would deal a severe blow to President Carter's ability to conduct foreign policy.

Yet, the American public seems to be against what critics call "the canal giveaway."

Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan., has prepared six amendments and two reservations. Conservative senators have additional proposed changes.

The outlook for the treaties seems anything but assured. As of late last year, 29 senators opposed the treaties, 32 were uncommitted, 39 supported the pacts.

Is history repeating itself?

Mark Trice, 76, recently retired Secretary to the Minority, may be the only living person who was associated with the Senate in the 1920s. He says the historic vote of 1920 does not particularly stick in his mind.

"It was just one of the many things of the time," the retired Secretary of the Senate said in an interview.

"But I do remember Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, the Republican leader," he added.

Lodge, the bearded Massachusetts Republican Leader and chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, played a key role in the Versailles Treaty defeat.

"As a Senate page I was supposed always to answer all Lodge's calls. He was irascible, impatient, dapper, aristocratic. He wanted things done, when he wanted them done."

That partisan conflict between the Republican Lodge and the Democrat in the White House as much as anything doomed the treaty. Lodge objected to provisions of the complex pact, particularly Article 10 which required the United States to come to the aid of any League member under attack.

At his urging, the Senate Foreign Relations Committee added 14 amendments to the treaty and the Senate approved them. The Senate then went on to defeat the treaty — both in the amended version and as originally offered.

Wilson, like Carter today, resisted amendments. Wilson agreed to some changes in the treaty's provisions as a result of Republican demands in March 1919. But after he signed the 285-page document in June, he refused further compromise.

When it became clear he was not convincing senators to approve the treaty without further change, Wilson took the issue to the country.

On his famous cross-country railroad tour of the United States in the summer of 1919 he suffered severe headaches in Pueblo, Colo., and sped back to the White House where he suffered a debilitating stroke.

President Carter faces a somewhat different situation.

Carter is working with a Senate, which unlike Wilson's, has a Democratic majority. Sen. Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., the majority leader, has not declared his position on the treaties, but seems to be cooperating with the White House.

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee, which will hold final hearings this month, seems likely to report favorably on the treaties. The committee may recommend an "understanding" which would incorporate the provisions of an agreement President Carter reached with Panama's Gen. Omar Torrijos in October clarifying two provisions of the treaties.

This spells out the United States' right to intervene in Panama to maintain the neutrality of the canal after the year 2000. It makes more explicit the U.S. Navy's right "to go to the head of the line" in seeking priority passage for warships in times of emergency.

But Sen. Dole, something of a latter day Lodge, feels the two companion treaties are unclear in certain respects.

If accepted by the Senate, the Dole amendments would probably force the United States and Panama into a new round of negotiations to adjust the texts of the treaties.

Neither wants that.

But the Republican from Kansas is adamant. He wants, among other things, to extend the transition period during which the Panama Canal Zone would be handed over to Panama from 30 months after the accord comes into force until January 1990.

He wants the United States to have the right to build a new canal elsewhere in Central America, not necessarily in Panama as now agreed, and he wants to reduce Panama's share of canal revenue.

In an interview, Dole acknowledged he did not know if he could rally the support to carry the amendments. A treaty, he noted, may be amended by majority vote — 51 yeas — although it requires a two-thirds vote to be finally ratified.

Historians have reckoned that President Wilson might have seen his dreams come pretty well true if he had been more flexible.

In 1919 and 1920 a group of "mild reservationists" could have joined the Democrats to form a controlling coalition which would have defeated the Lodge amendments and substituted their own milder changes.

But Wilson gave them no encouragement. Until the very last moment, Wilson took an all or nothing approach.

What he had agreed to at the peace conference in France would not be changed. He seemed to fear if the United States made last minute changes, other states would want to do the same.

So, in the end "the irreconcilables" or "the small band of willful men", as Wilson called them, triumphed.

And this, despite American popular opinion which favored the treaty; despite the irony that Lodge voted for the pact, as amended, of course.

Would License Politicians

FRANKFORT, Ky. (AP) — A Kentucky legislator says politicians, like doctors, teachers and dogs, should be licensed.

State Rep. Bruce Blythe told fellow House members Tuesday that he will introduce a bill that would require persons seeking public office to be licensed by the state.

"Think about the rest of our trusted professions," he said. "Doctors, lawyers, engineers, teachers, even barbers and beauticians, must have state government sanction in order to serve the public. We should ask for and expect no less from the people we elect to guide our local and state governments."

Blythe said his proposal would require an office-seeker to have a basic education, be familiar with the state constitution, have a working knowledge of government function and possess "other necessary requirements to ensure that our candidates are qualified for the job."

The license would be good for four years, he said.
