No Jewish Settlements In Sinai Desert, Sadat Vows

By MAURICE GUINDI

CAIRO, Egypt (UPI) — President Anwar Sadat vowed Saturday Egypt would "fight until the end of the world" to keep Jewish settlements out of the Sinai Desert. But he also said he would continue his quest for peace and pledged the 1973 Middle East war "will be the last."

Speaking to a cheering emergency session of parliament, Sadat also disclosed for the first time he broke off the Jerusalem peace talks because Israel would not pledge withdrawals from captured Syrian and Jordanian lands.

"For the information of the stupid Soviet Union, I broke off the negotiations because Israel did not agree to specific mention of withdrawal from the (Syrian) Golan Heights, the (Jordanian) West Bank and Gaza before (mention of) Sinai," Sadat said.

The Soviets and Syrians have accused Sadat of seeking a separate peace with Israel at the expense of Egypt's former Arab allies.

Charging Israel had used issue of Jewish settlements in the Sinai to "overturn the Egyptian peace initiative," Sadat said he had told Israel's defense minister Ezer Weizman:

"Tell (Prime Minister Menahem) Begin that I shall not allow a single settlement or (Israeli presence) on a single square centimeter inside our international boundaries, even if this means having to fight you until the end of the world."

The parliamentarians broke into a standing ovation.

However, Sadat did not spell out what form such a fight would take and later in his emotional address pledged:

"The peace initiative will go on, under its strong slogan that the 1973 war will be the last."

Sadat charged that Israel's use of the "secondary issue" of Jewish settlements — rather than focusing on the larger questions of Israeli withdrawal from all Arab land, and self-determination for the Palestinians — was "a flagrant provocation to corrupt the atmosphere of the talks and an attempt to overturn the Egyptian peace initiative."

Attacking the Israeli stand on the Jewish settlements as a violation of Egyptian sovereignty and territory, Sadat said:

"I thought they were joking at first ... in order to give weight to their negotiating positions. These things are not unknown in international politics."

Sadat, who spoke in classical Arabic except for some extemporaneous criticism of the Israeli negotiating stand, said among the messages he had given Secretary of State Cyrus Vance for President Carter was a call for Washington to balance military aid to Israel with equal assistance to Cairo.

Sadat said he had told Jordan's King Hussein that Egypt wanted total Israeli withdrawal from the West Bank and the Gaza Strip in favor of Palestinian self-determination and U.N. rule for a brief transition period.

"I told King Hussein that in the coming settlement Israel should withdraw from the West Bank and the Gaza area with the United Nations taking over for a number of years to be agreed on, one year or two or three, provided (the period is) not more than five," Sadat said.

Sadat said Egypt and Jordan would, if the Palestinians agreed, "intervene for the sake of the security question which Israel is using a a pretext" for refusing a Palestinian state. He did not specify what kind of intervention he had in mind.

POOCH POWER — David Watson, 13, enlisted the aid of his 7-month-old puppy, Fred, to propel him around the neighborhood. The pair romped around the Mobile Dr. area with the other neighborhood kids as they all celebrated a snowy vacation from school. Drop In Value Of N. C. Crops

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The combined value for field crops, vegetables, fruits and nuts produced in North Carolina in 1977 was $1.51 billion, or 17 percent lower than in the previous year, according to state officials.

The significant drop in value directly reflects a decrease in production of several major crops due to the severe dry weather that plagued much of the state this summer, the North Carolina Crop and Livestock Reporting Service said.

The state's 1977 flue-cured tobacco crop value of $840 million was 14 percent smaller than that of the previous year, but the average price per hundredweight increased from $110.70 in 1976 to $117 in 1977, the agency reported.

Footnote Could Foul

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Revenue officials say a misprint on this year's state income-tax form could cause some taxpayers to foul up their calculations.

The misprint involves a line on which taxpayers compute tax credits for such items as home improvements that conserve energy and income tax paid to another state or country. It refers taxpayers to line 16a of the form instead of line 16d.

Officials say footnotes explaining the error have been added to most, but not all of the forms. Officials estimated that about 150,000 of the state's 2.2 million taxpayers could be affected.

Tax Program Provisions Listed

INDIVIDUAL TAX CUTS

A $23.5 billion tax cut would be enacted (reduced to $16.7 billion when "reform" proposals are subtracted). This would be brought about by reducing tax rates to a low of 12 percent at the lowest income level and to 68 percent at the highest level instead of the current 14 to 70 percent range, and by scrapping the current $750 personal exemption and $35 credit in favor of a $240 credit for each family member.

A credit is subtracted directly from taxes owed while an exemption is subtracted from income before taxes are calculated. Taxpayers making less than roughly $22,000 would benefit from the new credit.

There would be $6.8 billion in net individual tax "reforms" to offset the above cuts and leave a net reduction of $16.7 billion.

Ending the 4 percent federal tax on telephone bills and lowering the unemployment compensation tax paid by employers would reduce taxes another $2 billion.

ITEMIZED DEDUCTIONS

Taxpayers could no longer deduct on their federal form state sales taxes, personal property taxes (except on real estate), gasoline taxes and miscellaneous taxes.

Medical and casualty deductions would be combined and would be allowed only if they exceed 10 percent of adjusted gross income, compared to the current 3 percent.

CAPITAL GAINS

Carter made only one minor change in the favorable tax treatment given capital gains, which is taxed at one-half the rate of ordinary income such as salaries. Carter would do away with the maximum 25 percent tax rate on capital gains, meaning that very high income persons could pay up to 35 percent, one-half the maximum 70 percent tax rate).

CORPORATE TAX CUT

Corporate tax rates would be cut from 20 percent to 18 percent for the first $25,000 of profits, from 22 percent to 20 percent on the next $25,000 and from 48 percent to 46 percent on all profits above $50,000 for a total reduction of $8.4 billion, offset by $2.6 billion worth of business deductions and tax preferences that would be curtailed.

BUSINESS ENTERTAINMENT

No more deductions would be allowed for most business entertainment such as theater and sports tickets, yachts, swimming pools, hunting lodges, and fees paid to social, sporting or athletic clubs.

Only one-half of business lunches would be deductible.

Foreign conventions would be tax-deductible only if the taxpayer could prove it was as reasonable to hold the convention outside the United States as inside.

FOREIGN TAXES

Over a three-year period, Carter would end foreign tax deferral under which U.S. corporations pay no tax on foreign earnings until the money is actually returned to the United States. Also eliminated would be Domestic International Sales Corporations, which allow U.S. corporations to pay lower taxes on exports.

TAX SHELTERS

Use of tax shelters to defer or avoid taxes would be limited by strengthening the minimum tax, requiring all investors (except in real estate) to actually have money at risk before business deductions could be taken, requiring use of the straight line method for real estate depreciation and tightening various other methods used to shelter income from taxation.

In a typical shelter, an investor deducts huge "losses" in the first years of a venture, often claiming loan funds which he is not legally responsible to repay, then pays no tax until later years when the venture begins turning a profit.)

INVESTMENT TAX CREDIT

The temporary 10 percent investment tax credit would be made permanent, and it would be vastly expanded by allowing up to 90 percent of tax liability to be wiped out instead of the current 50 percent. It also would allow the credit to be used for new and rehabilitated structures, instead of only for machinery and equipment. Pollution control facilities could claim the credit even if special five-year depreciation was claimed. The investment tax credit allows businesses and individuals to subtract from their tax bills 10 percent of the cost of new plant and equipment used in a business. This amounts to a $2.3 billion tax break.

FRINGE BENEFITS

In general, employee fringe benefits would have to receive the same tax treatment given fringe benefits of executives.

FINANCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Special inflated bad debt reserve deductions would be ended for commercial banks immediately and for mutual savings banks and savings and loan institutions over five years. Credit unions would lose their tax-exempt status over four years.

Vance Talking With Turk, Greek Leaders

By JIM ANDERSON

ATHENS, Greece (UPI) — Secretary of State Cyrus Vance arrived for talks Saturday with Greek leaders amid tight security following powerful bombs blasts that heavily damaged two U.S. offices.

Vance flew to Greece from Ankara where Turkish officials politely, but firmly, told the United States to keep out of the Cyprus dispute but pressed for renewed U.S. economic and military aid to Turkey.

Hours before Vance's arrival at Athens Airport, two time bombs damaged the offices of the U.S. Information Service and the American Express office in the northern Greek town of Salonica.

There were no injuries but police said substantial damage was done to the buildings. No one has taken public responsibility for the blasts.

Referring to the Cyprus deadlock, Turkish Foreign Minister Gulusc Okcun told reporters, "I think Secretary Vance would not be interested in involving himself in the situation involving the two countries (Greece and Turkey)."

Turkish Premier Bulent Ecevit repeated the thought at his news conference, saying, "The most important role that the United States could lay would be to take a position of equity between the two countries."

American officials said Vance feels the United States should lend its good offices in any dispute involving the two countries, but will not become directly involved in the negotiation effort, as it did in the past.

Vance is no new comer to the Cyprus issue. In 1967, President Johnson named Vance special envoy to mediate a simmering dispute between Greece and Turkey

Gas Rationing Plan

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The administration has drawn up a preliminary plan for emergency gasoline rationing, UPI learned Saturday.

At Secretary James Schlesinger's order, the plan is being distrubuted quietly for comment to more than 100 organizations that would be affected by rationing, along with a list of unresolved issues.

"The Department of Energy believes it is important to develop a rationing plan for gasoline and have it at full operational readiness in the event of a major interruption in the supply of patroleum." Energy Department official Douglas G. Robinson says in a memo accompanying the draft plan.

When it passed the 1975 Energy Act, Congress ordered the administration to draw up such a plan. President Gerald Ford submitted one to Congress just before he left office, but President Carter withdrew it for further study.

Under the proposal now in circulation, the U.S. banking system would control and distribute the more than 4 billion ration coupons printed in 1974 just after the Arab oil embargo and stored since in Colorado.

21 Dead In Wreck

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — A passenger bus and a speeding truck collided head-on Friday night 180 miles northwest of Tehran, killing 21 persons and seriously injuring 15, Tehran newspapers reported Saturday.

The reports said the drivers of both the truck and the bus were among the dead in the collision on the Tabriz-Zanjan highway.

Work To Begin Soon On Simpson Grant Project

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

SIMPSON — Work should begin here within the next few months on improvement projects funded with a $294,000 Community Development grant from the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

The grant includes funds for street improvements, drainage work and housing rehabilitation in a 21.5 acre area of Simpson — a 242 acre village with 540 residents which was incorporated April 14, 1975.

Mayor John McDonald said 3,700 feet of streets — including all of Madison and parts of Jefferson, Pine and Main Streets — will be paved under the program, while 8,200 feet of storm drainage work will be done.

McDonald said 16 houses in the project area will be reahabilitated, with grants from $500 to $4,450 being made to the owners for the improvements.

He noted that 13 other houses in the area will be condemned and removed as part of the rehabilitation project.

John A. Crew, a land use planner and management assistant with the N.C. Department of Natural Resources and Community Development, said a public meeting is scheduled for 7 p.m. Tuesday at the Fire Department, to explain the program to residents of the impact area and other interested residents of Simpson.

The Department of Natural Resources and Community Development is under contract with Simpson to help administer the Community Development program.

The inspection process for homes within the impact area will begin next week following the January 24 meeting, Crew said.

McDonald noted that the town hopes to let the contract for the paving work about March 1.

The mayor noted that contracts have already been awarded for paving on one block on Railroad Street at a cost of $9,331. He said funding for that paving project came from the town's share of Powell Bill money and Revenue Sharing funds.

Robert Halstead Files For Pitt School Board

Halstead filed Friday for the seat from Grimesland, Chicod, and Swift Creek Townships now held by Bobby Stokes.

Halstead, who resides at Gardnerville, is a farmer, warehouseman, and businessman. After finishing Chicod High School, he served two years in the U.S. Army 101st Airborne Division where he participated overseas in the European Theater.

The candidate has served on the Chicod Advisory Council for 16 years and has been its chairman for the past two years. He is also a six-year member of the D.H. Conley High School Advisory Council and is the current chairman.

A member of the Timothy Christian Church at Gardnerville, Halstead is Sunday School Superintendent, Elder, and has served on the Official Board 16 years, eight of which he served as chairman.

In civic affairs, Halstead is president of the Gardnerville Fire Department and a member of The Gideons International of Greenville.

Besides farming interests, Balstead is in partnership with his son in the ownership of Stokes & Lane, a farm supply store at Gardnerville, and is also a partner in Raynor-Forbes-Clark Warehouse in Greenville.

The candidate is a six-year member of the Planters National Bank and Trust Co. Board of Managers, vice president of the Pitt County Farm Bureau, member of the Soil Conservation Service Board of Supervisors, has served seven years as an A.S.C. Community Committeeman, and has served for eight years as an A.S.C. County Committeeman.

He is beginning a new three-year term as an A.S.C. County Committeeman. Halstead is also a past member of the Pitt County Farm Bureau Board of Directors and served three years on the National Tobacco Advisory Committee.

Married to the former Lennie M. Smith, they have three children — Robert A. Halstead Jr., Mrs. Wayne Dixon, and Mrs. Gordon Sumerlin — all of whom attended public schools at Chicod. Halstead also has five grandchildren.

In announcing his candidacy, Halstead observed, "I would like to see the County Board of Education involve the public, who foot the bills, in the decision-making process."

Halstead further noted, "I agree with Gov. Hunt's assessment that what is needed most in our public schools is a return to the basic fundamentals of education. This county is graduating far too many students from school who are unequipped to handle the ever-increasing requirements in the job market."

Jaycees Spearheading Drive

The Greenville Jaycees are spearheading a drive to raise funds for the purchase of a Pheresis machine, a sophisticated piece of equipment that is used in the treatment of several blood disorders such as leukemia and other types of cancers.

The new machine, costing $16,400, will be located in Greenville to serve the Tidewater Regional Red Cross Blood Program area.

Jaycee spokesmen Connally Branch and Ron Hartis noted that the chapter has adopted a goal of $17,000 toward the purchase of the machine with donations scheduled to be solicited from some 56 Jaycee chapters within the Tidewater Region.

The spokesman pointed out that the machine will be located at the local Tar River Sub-Center, scheduled to open soon at a new location adjacent to the area of the East Carolina University Medical Center.

The Greenville Jaycees have made a commitment for $1,000 toward the purchase of the machine, it was pointed out. The project, with Mark Meltzer serving as chairman, falls under the club's external program area.

Dick Carney, field representative of the Tidewater blood program, explained that the machine is utilized in the separation of the four major components within the blood. The equipment enables doctors to transfuse concentrated doses of a particular component and reduces the chances of transmitting diseases to the patient.

As of now, the closest Pheresis machine in the region is located in Norfolk. There is a machine in Durham, it was explained, but is not within the blood region.

Carney said the location of the machine at the new sub-center will enable patients in Greenville and other surrounding communities to be treated by the Pheresis method, a service that was not available in the past due to the 24 hours shelf life of the product prepared by the machine.

The local Jaycee spokesmen said that the target date for completion of the project is March 1.

Several Accidents

Two persons were treated at Pitt Memorial Hospital Friday night following a three-car accident at Cotanche Street and Reade Circle.

A car operated by Leavy Brock Jr. of 1002 N. Overlook Dr., headed north on Cotanche Street, struck a car being driven by Donna Jo Harrington of Ayden in the rear and pushed it forward into an auto operated by Stuart Dameron Flanagan of Bath.

Brock, who was charged with failure to reduce speed, and a passenger, Rebecca Dianne Worthington of 1402 Polk Ave., were treated and released at Pitt Memorial Hospital.

Damages were estimated at $200 to the Brock car, $650 to the Harrington vehicle and $850 to the Flanagan auto.

Greenville police officers recovered a stolen truck, owned by Don Redding Warren Jr. of Greenville Rt. 5, which was used in a hit-and-run accident on East Gum Road Friday night. The driver of the stolen vehicle escaped.

Jacquelyn Jones Cox of 1401 Van Dyke St. told officers her car was parked on the side of Gum Road when an unknown vehicle struck it in the rear and left the scene. Later, the stolen vehicle was recovered at the intersection of Van Dyke Street and Mumford Road.

Damages to the Cox car were estimated at $150 and damages to the stolen vehicle were estimated at $300.

At 6:35 p.m. Friday, Pallie Andrews Barrow of 602-A W. Fourteenth St. was charged with driving under the influence after her car collided with a vehicle operated by Lynn Bullard Powell of 1107 W. Wright Road who had stopped for a traffic light at the intersection of Greenville Boulevard and Hooker Road.

Damages were estimated at $350 to the Powell car and $100 to the Barrow vehicle.

No charges were preferred when a car operated by Jeb Stuart Kelly of 412 Sycamore St. struck a vehicle operated by Sharon Streeter Lanier of Farmville on Evans Street, near Deck Street, early Friday afternoon.

Damages were estimated at $250 to the Lanier car and $700 to the Kelly auto.

Dr. M. B. Massey, 80, Died Saturday

Dr. Moulton B. Massey, 80, a retired Greenville dentist of 1601 E. Fifth St., died at his home Saturday afternoon.

Funeral services will be held at 2 p.m. Monday in Wilkerson Funeral Chapel by Rev. James H. Bailey, Rev. Robert Redmon and Rev. Adrian Brown. Burial will follow in Greenwood Cemetery.

Dr. Massey was born and raised in Princeton. He attended Elon College and the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. He played varsity basketball and baseball at both schools.

Dr. Moulton B. Massey

Later, he played also on the baseball and basketball teams at Guilford College. For several years he played semi-pro baseball in Greenville. He served in the Medical Corps of the United States Army and was in France during World War I.

Massey attended Emory University in Atlanta, Ga., and received his doctorate in dental surgery. He practiced dentistry in Greenville from 1925 until he retired in 1975.

He was an honorary member of the official board of the Jarvis Memorial United Methodist Church and was chairman of the Board of Ushers at the church. He was a director of First Federal Savings and Loan Association and an honorary member of the American Dental Association.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Gertrude Taft Massey, a daughter, Mrs. O. Witcher Dudley III of Richmond, Va.; a sister, Mrs. Ray Whitley of Durham; and five grandchildren.

The family suggests that those desiring to make a memorial contribution consider the Jarvis Memorial United Methodist Church Memorial Fund.

All Four Survive Small Plane Crash

WEST JEFFERSON, N.C. (UPI) — Doctors treated four persons Saturday whose small airplane crashed into a rugged area of Ashe County Friday night. Two are believed to be in critical condition.

Trooper Michael Valentine of the state Highway Patrol identified them as pilot Ken Melton, 24; John Dockery, 28; Donald Baron, 32, and Francesca Singleton, 21. The men are from Myrtle Beach, S.C., and the woman is from Conway, S.C.

Rescue worker Rick Ashley said Melton told him their single-engine Piper Pathfinder was headed toward a ski resort Friday in western North Carolina when it hit a downdraft and was sucked downward. The plane then lost power and crashed against Peak Mountain about 12 miles outside West Jefferson, Ashley said.

Melton and Dockery were hurt seriously, while the other two were able to walk two miles through snowy, 10-degree weather to a cabin where they stayed overnight. Melton and Dockery spent the night in the plane.

Nearby residents heard the crash and notified authorities, who arganized a rescue party of some 100 persons. The group found Baron and the Singleton women in the cabin Saturday morning, then located the wreck. All four were taken to a West Jefferson hospital.

Dr. Congleton Guest Speaker

WINTERVILLE — Dr. Joe Congleton of East Carolina University will be the guest speaker for the January meeting of the Winterville Historical and Arts Society, to be held at 7:30 p.m. on Tuesday, Jan. 31, at the Winterville Missionary Baptist Church.

Seaboard Digs Out Of Snowstorm

By TIM CODER
United Press International

Convoys of bulldozers, dump trucks and ambulances plowed through streets and highways of the Eastern Seaboard Saturday, restoring vitality to cities and towns silenced by the worst snowstorm in years.

At least 67 persons died during the week-long in the barrage of snowstorms and bitter cold that swept from Texas to New England, shutting down major airports in the East, blocking main roads and paralyzing some of the nation's vital centers of commerce.

"The center of the storm is moving over Nova Scotia ... luckily we're expecting no more big storms for the next couple of days," said meteorologist Gary Schmeling at Boston, where a record 21.4 inches of snow paralyzed the area during a 24-hour period.

The storm buried Rochester, N.Y., under 30 inches, and Burlington, Vt., under 24 inches. Providence, R.I. got 23; Dayton, Ohio, 22, and Philadelphia got 15.

While weary Northeasterners were burrowing out, the second major storm of the week drifted east across Texas, dumping more than 6 inches of new snow on San Angelo in three hours. Heavy snow warnings were issued for the Dallas-Fort Worth area and travelers advisories were in effect throughout southwest Texas.

"We're snowed in right now with no way of clearing it," said a San Angelo police spokesman. "I just hope they (motorists) stay home."

Air traffic, at a virtual standstill from Cleveland east to the northern Atlantic seaboard — regained some semblance of normalcy.

Boston's Logan International Airport resumed partial service at about noon Saturday and both Kennedy and LaGuardia airports in New York reopened with one runway. Newark (N.J.) Airport was to reopen later in the day.

About 300 National Guardsmen manned a 50-vehicle convoy of ambulances and bulldozing equipment that rolled into New York City — where 13½ inches of snow fell — to assist in cleanup and attend to the medical needs of storm victims. The storm left at least 12 persons dead in New York city.

New York police reported most major roads were passable but hazardous.

Snowbound New Yorkers were shackled with an additional burden — city regulations. A Sanitation Department spokesman warned that residents it is illegal to push snow from sidewalks and driveways into the streets.

Boston's mass transit authority paid snow shovelers $3 an hour to help dig stations out, cross country skiers slid along the city's snow-covered trolley tracks.

...And In North Carolina

By The Associated Press

Thousands of North Carolina families who have been without power since Thursday night were still without electric service Saturday despite all-out efforts by weary power line crews to restore lines ripped down by the fall of ice-covered trees.

Duke Power Co. and Carolina Power & Light Co. reported at 6 p.m. Saturday that they still had about 17,000 customers without service. This compared with the 130,000 customers of the two companies who were without power early Friday. In addition several thousand customers of rural electric co-ops also were without power Friday.

The outages resulted from the second ice storm to hit the state in less than a week, the first time anyone can remember the state having two such severe storms so close together.

There was no way to estimate the dollar loss resulting from the two storms, but Duke Vice President Bill Burton said the first storm cost his company alone more than $1 million "and this will be bound to exceed that."

No Colored Shorts No Free White Ones

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. (AP) — An inmate at the Charlottesville-Albemarle Joint Security Complex has filed a federal court complaint to get a free pair of undershorts.

Inmate Waddell Boyce Flood petitioned U.S. District Court Judge James C. Turk to uphold his right to skivvies "in hopes that I will be furnished with proper underclothing."

Flood's brief "petition for relief" charges that the jail administrator, Samuel V. Pruett, took away his non-white underwear in November and refuses to give him a free pair of white cotton shorts.

Pruett defended the rule banning colorful underwear and said Flood was not given a free pair of whites "because he had plenty of money to buy underwear."

"We require inmates to wear white," he explained, "because we have to wash all their underwear together and we don't want colors fading all over everything.

If inmates find themselves lacking regulation shorts and are "too poor to afford them," he added, "we will provide them."

Pruett said Flood had $41.75 in his jail account, however.

The jail administrator said the maverick underwear was "yellow and green and orange polka dots or something like that."

"It just proves that you can get sued for anything these days," he said.

"This makes me mad. It's going to take about as much of our time as we would have to spend on a legitimate complaint."

Lived In Cardboard Box

MARTINSVILLE, Va. (UPI) — A 61-year-old Martinsville man is being cared for this weekend by social services personnel, after a two-year ordeal during which the down-and-out man lived in a cardboard box in the woods.

Henry County Sheriff's deputies said two local residents found Haden Gilbert Andrews early this week living in a box of cardboard and plywood just barely large enough for his emaciated body.

The deputies brought Andrews to the Martinsville Hotel, where he was given a hot meal and where he told of his struggle to survive in snowstorms, flooding, and temperature plunges this winter and last.

"I ain't going so well," he said. "But I think it's what you get used to. Anyone that's not used to it will sure have a hard time."

Andrews said he went to live with his sister in the Martinsville area several years ago, but she married a man he couldn't get along with. Andrews, down on his luck, said he moved out into his makeshift shack determined to get along on his own.

"I make it one way or another," he said, scratching his gray, stubbly beard with a calloused hand. He said he smokes one cigarette a day, because the U.S. Surgeon General warned too much smoking was bad for one's health.

With a second straight unusually brutal winter apparently showing its colors, Andrews may owe his life to the two men who found him and helped the deputies convince the old man to come in out of the cold.

Tommy Earles and Mike Handy said they encountered Andrews while stalking a stray dog that had attacked one of their pet dogs. Some tracks led to a ravine at the outskirts of town. They saw a cardboard box and considered firing a shotgun into it to scare strays in the area — but did not.

Later they discovered Andrews was living inside the shanty.

Kodak In Violation

NEW YORK (UPI) — Eastman Kodak Co., the world's largest photographic firm, was found in violation of federal antitrust laws Saturday for using its technological dominance to monopolize much of the amateur photographic business.

The jury decision was expected to have an impact on trading in photo equipment industry stock.

A Kodak spokesman said the company would appeal.

The jury of eight women and two men spent eight days deliberating the $300-million civil action filed against the Rochester, N.Y., photographic equipment giant by Berkey Photo Inc., a relatively small New York City firm. The trial lasted six months.

Three Dead In Fires

MANTEO, N.C. (AP) — State and federal law enforcement authorities reportedly have been called to assist the investigation of one of two apparently unrelated fires that killed three persons on Dare County's Outer Banks Saturday.

One person died in the first blaze that occurred around 3:30 a.m. at Kill Devil Hills. The Dare County Sheriff's Department said it was awaiting identification of the victim by state medical examainers in Chapel Hill. No details of the fire were immediately available.

News Briefs

Influenza Above Normal

ATLANTA (AP) — An influenza epidemic is ravaging sections of the United States, with the death toll from flu and pneumonia 70 percent above normal for the week of Jan. 7, the national Center for Disease Control says.

The CDC said Friday that reports from 121 selected cities showed 855 persons died from flu and pneumonia, compared to the normal toll of 500 for that week in those cities.

TRENTON, N.C. (AP) — A federal judge has further delayed efforts by the U.S. Air Force to claim title to a 45,000- acre Dare County tract whose corporate owners want to keep the property and harvest peat from portions of it.

But U.S. District Court Judge John D. Larkins Jr. specified Friday that the Air Force could continue using the area for practice bombing missions.

Larkins continued a temporary restraining order preventing the Air Force from laying claim to the land until he can make afinal determination in the case.

He gave no indication of when a final ruling would be forthcoming.

Edward McDermott, attorney for First Colony Farms, which currently leases the property to the Air Force for use as a bombing range, contended at Friday's hearing that the Air Force did not have authority to condemn the land.

Thousands Were Spied On

CHICAGO (AP) — The FBI in Chicago spied on about 27,900 individuals and organizations it regarded as possible "security risks" or "extremists" between 1966 and 1976 and also paid some $2.5 million to recruit more than 5,000 spies to inform on Chicago area residents and organizations in that period, court records show.

The U.S. District Court documents, signed by five Justice Department lawyers, also acknowledged an FBI break-in of the offices of The Chicago Committee to Defend the Bill of Rights. A list of financial contributors was taken and dossiers subsequently were started on 46 of the persons whose names appeared on the list, the committee said.

Should Discuss Relationships

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — The president of the Baptist State Convention, acknowledging that many persons on both sides would like to end the church's ties with Wake Forest University, says the two institutions should discuss whether the relationship should be continued.

At a meeting Friday with several hundred Wake Forest students, the Rev. Mark Corts said he and other Southern Baptist leaders want to strengthen the now-strained relationship between the convention and the university.

A New Commitment To Port

The State Ports Authority has made a decision to keep a $2.6 million container crane at the Morehead City State Port and to dredge a turning basin there which will make use of the crane feasible.

Thus for the time being at least, the authority has settled the question of what will happen to the crane. The big crane was installed at Morehead along with a similar one at Wilmington.

The container business has developed at Wilmington so that crane is feasible and, in fact, another one may be needed there in the coming months.

There had been consideration of moving the Morehead crane to Wilmington, which would have solved the problem there but would have left the Morehead port completely out of the containerized shipping business.

There were indications at this week's authority meeting that some container business might be developing for Morehead and in the future tobacco shipping might go to containers.

No doubt it was a mistake to install the expensive crane at the Morehead City port, but the mistake seems to be that it was installed too soon. We would be compounding a mistake if the crane were torn down now and moved — an expensive operation in itself.

The State Ports Authority has made a new commitment to the Morehead City Port. Now we must aggressively go after the containerized shipping business for Morehead which will make the crane there feasible.

At Least The President Will Listen

Gov. Hunt said that President Carter has agreed to meet with the governors of tobacco producing states to discuss HEW Secretary Joseph Califano's latest campaign against tobacco.

It is encouraging that the president seems willing to listen — something that his HEW secretary does not appear inclined to do.

The most distressing part of Califano's anti-tobacco campaign is its exorbitant cost. The president should curtail this wastefulness of the taxpayers' money.

"... please? please, Senate? pretty please ...?"

Govm't Jobs Leading Way

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — As January is time to wrestle with local property tax payments and listings, and to start fretting about state and federal tax filing time coming it might be well to consider where that money is going.

Government is "labor intensive," which means hiring people to do things, and the most recent report from the state Employment Security Commission highlights this fact.

Governmental employment outpaced all other categories in strong gains reported over the past year in North Carolina— up 15,300 workers to a new report high of 352,100 on the payrolls of local, state or federal government in this state.

A year ago, the total was 336,800. Overall growth rate was 4.5 per cent.

State employment— particularly education—led the way. The state payroll grew from 107,000 to 111,400. The local government payroll climbed from 183,600 to 194,600. In both case education was the controlling factor.

Federal employment actually declined two-tenths of a per cent from 46,200 to 46,100.

The total of 352,100 governmental employees makes up a sizable part of the total 2.1 million work force in North Carolina; essentially one of every six; or 17.6 per cent.

So much for trimming the bureaucracy.

Satisfied?

A portion of the "North Carolina Tomorrow" survey dealt with satisfaction levels. Citizens responded whether they are satisfied, not sure, not satisfied, or very dissatisfied with a number of things.

BILL NOBLITT

Education is a mixed bag: 40 per cent say all right; 17 per cent aren't sure; 26 per cent are not satisfied, a and 11 per cent very dissatisfied.

Roads are pretty evenly split, with Coastal residents being most unhappy; central county citizens feeling they're all right.

In three areas, people feel strongest of all that they aren't sure whether they are satisfied or not: prisons, programs for senior citizens, and agricultural lands. Apparently the respondents just don't know enough to make a judgment.

No Problem?

Another segment which might be considered a measure of satisfaction is that listing problems mentioned by very few people. In that section, people volunteered what they consider problem area. Highest were jobs, education, and crime.

Seldom mentioned were tourism, cultural activities, pornography, enforcement of the 55 MPH speed limit, recreation, insurance, water and sewer, opportunities for women, race, liquor, land use management, housing, prisons, children, health care, and the elderly.

Similar reactions were found in both the mass survey statewide conducted through schools, newspapers, and handouts, and in a more scientific poll taken as a control measure.

Sunday Morning Notes

Anybody who has come to Greenville in the past four years — and that includes a class which has almost gone through at ECU — might conclude that very little snow falls here.

Well, we don't have much snow compared to the more northernly areas of the nation, or even to Western North Carolina.

It happens, though, and probably we are overdue for a major snow storm. As anyone who has been here even a couple of years is aware, some snow falls virtually every year. In the past four years we have had snows which covered the ground, but none of them amounted to much.

This winter there have already been a couple of snowfalls although neither so much as coated the ground.

Old timers can tell you about the snow of March 2, 1927 which dumped 16 inches of snow and collapsed tobacco warehouse roofs. It virtually paralyzed the area.

There have been other memorable snows since that are recalled in various ways.

We don't have to go back too many years to remember snow of significant proportions here.

On Jan. 8, 1973 a winter storm dumped around four inches of snow on the area — to the delight of the young people and the sorrow of those who had to go out and clear it away.

The area coped pretty well with highway crews quickly at work clearing the main roads and the Utilities Commission and the phone company reporting no major problems from the storm.

The city and county school systems both closed which made an awful lot of kids happy.

That should have been enough snow for this area in one year. The weather is tricky, however, and a month later another winter storm blew in, this time dropping around six inches of snow on the area. That snow was accompanied by cold weather which saw the thermometer drop to 15 degrees.

Again there were no major problems, other than that of an area which normally doesn't have such snowfalls having to dig out.

Interestingly there was a big increase in long distance telephone calls, as individuals here phoned their friends and relatives elsewhere to tell them about the big snow.

Since 1973 the snows have been puny by comparison, although it is difficult to see how we missed last year. And if the heavy rains of last week had been accompanied by slightly lower temperatures, we would still be digging out.

We shouldn't feel immune from the snows here, however. The area's history

A Kick Out Of Her Job

OLYMPIA, Wash. (AP) — If political enemies accuse Gov. Dixy Lee Ray of driving ambition, they're at least partly right. Washington's No. 1 citizen also is the state's No. 1 transportation junkie.

As a kid, Gov. Ray made two lists. One was of "famous, classical, unique animals, things often called missing links." She checked off nearly all during her travels as zoology professor at the University of Washington, Atomic Energy Commission chairman and U.S. State Department official.

The second list? Things she wanted to pilot or drive.

Through the years she's checked off many of them —

Other Editors Say: Russia In Africa

(Jacksonville Daily News)

While world attention is focused on dramatic diplomatic developments in the Middle East, and, to a lesser degree upon South Africa's problems, the Soviet Union has been maneuvering quietly to castle the free world's position elsewhere on the international chess board. Somalia, a distant little country on the east coast of Africa, has become the latest object of Soviet aggression.

The Russian strategy is to exploit an armed conflict betweek Somalia and neighboring Ethiopia, to subvert Somalia and extend Russian dominance over both nations in order to control the Gulf of Aden and the shipping lanes to the Red Sea and the Suez Canal. Not the least of Moscow's consideration would be a broad extension of Soviet power over the Indian Ocean. The Russian tactic, as usual, is to have the battles fought by other nationals — in this case the Ethiopians as well as the Cubans, who have been aptly described by Senator Daniel P. Moynihan as "the Gurkhas of the Russian empire."

The Russians have mounted a massive airlift of weapons to the Ethiopians, who are being trained by the Cubans. Cuban pilots are reported to be flying Soviet war planes.

Impaled by his campaign rhetoric against the Ford and Kissinger effort to stem the Soviet-Cuban tide in Angola during 1975-76, President Carter has all but ignored Somalia's increasing peril. Washington has turned a deaf ear to Somalia's pleas for modern arms and, ever since Somalia broke with Moscow a year ago, it has been unable to find a source of weapons, even with money from oil-rich, anti-Soviet Saudi Arabia.

Aside from the complexities surrounding the Somalian-Ethiopian struggle, including Somalia's initial aggression against Ethiopia, the State Department's attitude as expressed by spokesman Hodding Carter II that "African problems should be solved by Africans themselves," has become an irrational rationale for doing nothing to check Soviet aggrandizement in the Horn of Africa and mesh that continent's vast raw materials with Communist Europe's industry is a fearsome prospect that deserves urgent attention in Washington and in the other capitals of the Free World.

The Greenville Ministerial Association at a recent meeting went on record as requesting the Merchants Association-with the cooperation of the ministerial group-to sponsor a petition to the Board of Aldermen for an ordinance to be enacted requiring the closing of business houses and like firms on Saturday evenings at 8 p.m.

A statement by the Ministerial Association declared that earlier closings are desired in order that persons working in such places of business might be relieved of the necessity of working to such late hours on Saturdays.

It was pointed out that surrounding towns-Rocky Mount, Tarboro, Wilson and Raleigh for example-were observing early hours.

THE INSIDE REPORT

Environmental Backfire

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — An angry counterattack against federal environmentalists is now being quietly planned by cabinet-level departments, led by the State Department, with indications of support in the White House itself.

The counterattack seems certain to modify drastically and could kill altogether new regulations proposed by the Council for Environmental Quality (CEQ) that would make Uncle Sam the environmental policeman of the world — particularly policing nuclear reactors. "Outrageous," one State Department official told us. "These regulations would impose American environmental standards on all our foreign friends and they would end up hating us."

This places President Carter in a peculiar dilemma. While crusading against nuclear proliferation and environmental pollution, he is bound as President by the practicalities of international life. As such, he seems forced to disappoint his environmental constituency.

The proposed regulations were drawn secretly by CEQ planners with apparent help from the Natural Resources Defense Council (NRDC), an environmentalist private action group. They would in effect require standard environmental impact statements (to be called "assessments" in the foreign field) for all exported material or technology sold abroad with some help — export licenses or loan guarantees — from the U.S. government.

The real target may be nuclear reactors, a prospect that has infuriated the Nuclear Regulatory Commission (NRC). At a closed-door meeting called by CEQ Jan. 6, NRC assistant general counsel Carlton Stoiber said there is "no legal justification" for imposing U.S. environmental standards abroad. That brought objections from CEQ chairman Charles Warren and member Gus Speth, who showed reluctance even to discuss legal justification. But Stoiber insisted that neither the 1969 National Environmental Protection Act nor its legislative history in congressional debate could justify the new regulations.

At least as upset as NRC and the State Department was Export-Import Bank president John Moore, who warned the Jan. 6 meeting that the proposed regulations would benefit Japanese and West German exporters at the expense of this country. The reason: endless delays and lawsuits against U.S. exports on often specious environmental grounds would turn impatient foreign buyers away from the U.S.

Moore, a former Atlanta lawyer close to Mr. Carter, strongly urged White House domestic policy chief Stuart Eizenstat to attend the Jan. 6 session at CEQ. Eizenstat stayed long enough to ask three questions: What is the cost to the federal government of the proposed regulations? What is their legal justification? To what extent would they impose American standards on foreign governments?

Speth, who took the leading role for CEQ in the acrimonious debate, gave uninformative and "fudged" answers, according to one participant. Eizenstat left the meeting before it ended, but those in position to know say he was unimpressed with CEQ's rationale and has strong reservations about CEQ's ambition to be top cop for global environment.

Speth was legal counsel for the environmentalist NRDC before Mr. Carter put him on the CEQ. Last year the NRDC brought suit against the Ex-Im Bank to require it to meet CEQ's domestic standards in all its foreign lending operations.

That suit, while not directly related to CEQ's proposed new regulations, helps to explain why Moore and the Ex-Im Bank are so disturbed. The bank has provided more than $20 billion in loans and guarantees for U.S. exports since mid-1974, much of it for nuclear and conventional power facilities and offshore oil drilling. NRDC claims these have direct impact on the environment.

If Ex-Im Bank either loses the NRDC suit (now in U.S. district court here) or is forced to comply with the proposed CEQ regulations, billions of dollars' worth of exports of U.S. products in the future could go down the drain. Foreign buyers would be forced to wait out endless environmental investigations, filing of impact statements and predictable harassment of court actions brought by well-meaning environmentalist groups.

Add to that danger the equally predictable fury of foreign buyers and governments subjected to U.S. environmental investigations on their own soil and the awesome dimension of CEQ's ambitions comes into focus.

Strength For Today

AVOIDING WAR

A scientist is said to have remarked, "I don't know what weapons will be used in the third World War, but I do know what the weapons of the fourth World War will be — clubs."

In the face of this grim prognostication, which has been echoed by many other astute observers in many different ways, we should try to keep our thoughts and emotions as well-balanced as possible. Extermination is a possibility, and we should never rule it out. Nevertheless, war is by no means inevitable. If we allow it to come, it will be because we are stupid, selfish, and willful. If the world's intelligence can produce modern science and industry, there is no reason why this same intelligence cannot prevent war.

But intelligence and common sense will not be enough. The spiritual powers in the universe are more powerful for healing than atomic poser is for destruction. Mind, matter, and spirit must combine forces to avoid catastrophe.

Cooperation & Coordination

By JOHN CUNNIFF
Business News Analyst

WASHINGTON (AP) — By Monday evening, when the American public has heard the various economic messages of President Carter, they will be able to see the warp and woof, said Walter Heller.

If so, it will bring solace to those critics, many of them in the business community, who say they've been viewing a lot of loose threads but little discernable pattern in the past year.

Heller, an adviser to the Council of Economic Advisers and former chairman of that group under Presidents Kennedy and Johnson, uses such words as cohesion, coherence, cooperation and coordination.

All these, the business community sometimes argue, have been missing or at least difficult to discern. As a consequence, confidence in the Carter economic program has been noticeably lacking.

Therefore the effort, said Heller Thursday evening, just before the round of economic messages began, will show "Not just the substance of policy but how it hangs together." The warp and woof, that is.

In his view, the weaving of a more integrated policy began with the recent appointment of G. William Miller, a businessman, to replace Arthur Burns a chairman of the Federal Reserve Board.

"Miller can cooperate and coordinate," said Heller, predicting that there will be more give and take between the Fed and the White House, "done in a constructive and friendly atmosphere."

Relations between the Fed and the White House will be more like they were in the Kennedy administration, said Heller, who then was chief economic adviser to the White House.

"We had our say and he (William McChesney Martin, Fed chairman) had his. Nobody gave up independence but we had reasonably well balaned policies, without shots being fired acrss othew."

It was not quite that way with Burns and Carter. The president, intent on a growth economy, seemed to irritate the chairman, whose greatest economic fear has always been inflation.

Even if better cooperation and coordination of policies results, there is still a question of how much business support the president can muster.

A survey by the U.S. Chamber of Commerce suggests that Carter's problem is not solely one of programs but of understanding. Many businessmen feel he simply does not understand them.

Large exporters especially are likely to remain angered by the president's insistance on revocation of tax deferrals for goods shipped abroad, on the continuance of double taxation of dividends, and on the goal of limiting tax deductions for business lunches.

The extent of the business community suspicions is indicated by the continued belief of many that the president eventually will revert to wageprice controls in an effort to restrain inflation.

To them, controls are anathema. And, says Heller, they are to the administration too. "He's dead set against them," he said, and so, he said, are all his top advisers.

Nevertheless, a more active role is planned by the president in keeping the wage-price spiral from gaining momentum. "A very gentle attemp," said Heller.

Perhaps the most acceptable aspect of the Carter program, so far as business is concerned, is the prospect of a tax cut, in part to offset higher energy taxes and Social Security payments, but also with some incentives to expansion.

Carter is getting much more on top of the economic-political situation, said Heller, and business people and others will "have a much better feel of the man than in 1977."

Heller, now a professor at the University of Minnesota, said people ask him what kind of a grade he gives the president for the first year.

"I reply, 'incomplete.'" Why? "He hasn't had to take an exam. When he does, he'll get good marks."

The Jan. 18 issue of The Daily Reflector contained a report of the Jan. 17 meeting of the Pitt County Memorial Hospital Board of Trustees. Included in the report was a statement that "The Board was informed that the East Carolina University Business Office controls the preparation of the hospital's budget." This statement is in error and correction of its implication is in order.

The East Carolina University Business Office has never prepared or controlled budgets of the Pitt County Memorial Hospital and has no desire to do so.

The East Carolina University administration, represented primarily by the School of Medicine, endeavors to be helpful and supportive to the Pitt County Memorial Hospital and will continue to assist the hospital in every possible way to better serve the citizens of Pitt County.

Observations From Editorial Columns

Toll Can Be Even Further Reduced

Fewer deaths on North Carolina's highways last year means that many people were paying attention to the laws. More work must be done to cut the still-too-high highway death rate.

Greater enforcement of the 55-mph speed limit on Tar Heel roadways by the State Highway Patrol, along with greater speed control within municipalities, helped reduce the number of Tar Heels and visitors to the state speeding. More enforcement this year will help reduce even more, we hope, the death toll that dropped to 1,422 last year from 1,529 at the end of 1976.

While more speed-limit enforcement helped reduce the highway deaths, we like to believe that much of the credit goes to North Carolina drivers who decided to slow down and live in 1977.

We also hope the number of people who drive vehicles while intoxicated with liquor or drugs has declined. Greater law enforcement and stricter laws on drunk driving could help convince even more people to not drive and drink, before they or someone close to them dies.

North Carolina is a beautiful state, with many educational and recreational opportunities within easy access from major highways. We hope many more people will stay alert and drive with more care this year, before they miss forever all the beauty of the Tar Heel State. — The Durham Sun

The Patient Deserves Top Priority

Reinstatement — with back pay — of O'Berry Center employees dismissed for alleged negligence following the scalding of a patient raises questions which should not be taken lightly.

Were the dismissed employees innocent of negligence in this case?

If so, then we still have not gotten to the bottom of an incident which should weigh heavily on the conscience of this state and those who run our institutions.

Another question is: If negligence resulting in the serious injury of a patient is not an offense punishable by dismissal, what does it take to get fired from a state institution?

Protection of workers' rights is important.

But equally important is public assurance of competent and responsible care for patients in our mental institutions.

The independent, top-to-bottom study and analysis of our mental hospital problems here apparently is not forthcoming from Governor Jim Hunt.

Some who have observed the institutions over the years have concluded that they are rife with internal and external politics and cliques that defy proper administration.

While the vast majority of people working in the institutions must be dedicated and concerned individuals, it is evident to even the most casual observer that we also have incompetence at virtually every level.

And it is apparent to this newspaper that one of the greatest problems is the alignment of priorities.

Protecting the patients, somehow never seems to be in first place. — Goldsboro News-Argus sports cars, boats, cable cars, gondolas and even a hot air balloon and heavy construction equipment.

Since she took office in January 1977, she's piloted an oil supertanker, climbed aboard an antique Canadian steam locomotive, floated down a river in a rubber raft.

"Let me assure you it's nothing contrived," the 63-year-old Democratic governor says. "These are just things I enjoy doing and things I have always done. I just love driving. I always have. The first thing was a kiddy cart, and then a coaster wagon."

She says her idea of luxury would be to buy the fastest, jazziest sports car she could find. Although she once owned a Jaguar, she drives a four-wheel-drive vehicle on her island farm in Puget Sound and still owns the motor home she lived in when she was in Washington, D.C.

She cheered Washington U's Huskies in the Rose Bowl earlier this month after traveling from Olympia to Pasadena in a caravan of motor homes.

To help celebrate Queen Elizabeth II's Silver Jubilee, she hopped aboard an antique Canadian steam engine and rode to nearby Tacoma.

With her sister Marion and her pet poodle Jaques, she was paddler of honor in a high-style float trip down the Yakima River. The after-rafting menu: liver pate, sauteed mushrooms, avocados in shrimp sauce, chateaubriand and champagne.

Gov. Ray already has announced her intention to seek re-election in 1980 even though her popularity seems on the wane. But she says her penchant for odd modes of transit isn't a campaign ploy.

"I'm not a very sophisticated person," she says. "My enjoyments and my interests are the same as many people share."

But the CEQ has almost certainly overreached itself. Representing an activist constituency that takes a highly negative view of extending U.S. military and political power around the globe, it now wants to blanket the world with U.S. environmental power. And that is an unwanted extension of Potomac power which Jimmy Carter, ardent environmentalist though he is, is having trouble accepting.

Sec. Califano, The Great Nanny Of Us All

By JAMES J. KILPATRICK

WASHINGTON — Joe Califano, the man who wears a hundred hats, has taken on one more. In his role as secretary of Health, Education and Welfare, he has been serving as the nation's chief doctor, lawyer, educator, sociologist and nurse. Now he becomes the One Great Nanny Of Us All.

Our Imperial Governess has launched a multimillion dollar campaign to make the American people give up smoking. It is his "duty", he tells us, as the "chief public health official of this government", to lead an all-out effort against the filthy weed.

Toward that end, Mr. Califano promises the greatest propaganda campaign ever waged against tobacco. He will put pressure on the radio and television networks. He will importune the Federal Trade Commission to require even more formidable warning notices upon every pack of cigarettes. He will create some new bureaucracy, in the form of an Office of Smoking and Health. He will call upon the states to enact anti-smoking laws. He will ask Congress to consider punitive taxes upon tobacco products. He will urge the Civil Aeronautics Board to prohibit smoking entirely upon commercial aircraft. And so on.

In the end, such is the perversity of human nature, Auntie Joe probably will succeed in making the habit more attractive than ever. He is likely to trigger what used to be known in our house as the beans-in-your-nose reaction. This is the reaction of the impudent child who is ordered not to put beans in his nose — and can hardly wait until his mama's back is turned.

The secretary is inviting the same evils that flourished during the long, dark night of Prohibition. As surely as he succeeds in imposing high federal taxes, just as surely will he invite bootlegging, hijacking and the corruption of law enforcement officers. High state taxes already have created a thriving criminal trucking network in the Eastern states. Young persons especially — the very audience the secretary wants most to influence — will take up cigarettes the way their elders took up whisky 50 years ago.

To be sure, the secretary says he is not thinking of outright prohibition. In his speech of Jan. 11, he said: "From my personal philosophy, I bring a profound and unyielding belief in freedom, free will and free choice." All the rest of his 26-page address was devoted to a call for measures just short of prohibition.

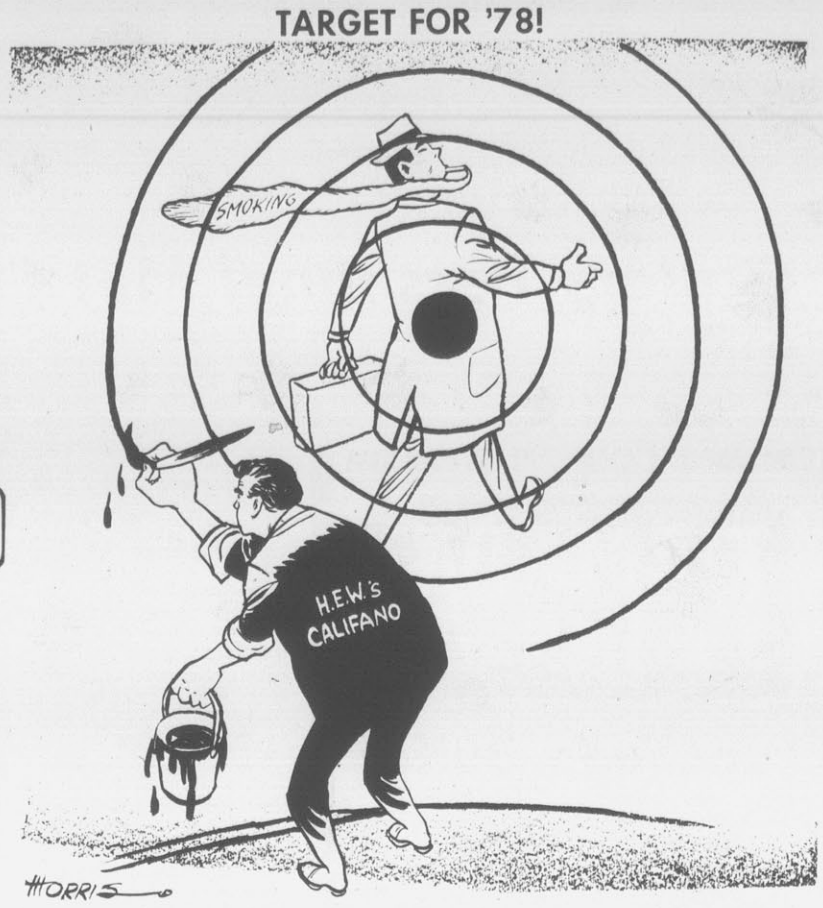

It is inconceivable, or so it seems to me, that there could remain a single living, sentient human being in the nation who is not fully aware of the hazards of smoking. For the past 14 years, through massive public and private programs, these dangers have been incessantly proclaimed. But 40 percent of adult men, and almost as many women, continue to smoke. The number of cigarettes manufactured and sold keeps right on rising, year by year.

Why is this so? It is not sheer perversity. The possibility ought to be considered that these millions of persons smoke because they enjoy it. They find the experience pleasant. They know of the dangers, but they also know that cigarettes, unlike other items, are not necessarily fatal. The fellow who drinks a cyanide cocktail will curl up his toes in 30 seconds. The fellow who smokes a pack a day may live to hit a hundred.

Mr. Califano rationalizes his crusade in terms of cost. Each year, he says, "according to estimates", smoking adds between $5 billion and $7 billion to health-care costs: the cost of lost productivity, wages and absenteeism caused by smoking is $12 billion to $18 billion. Anyone who accepts those moonspun estimates without convincing evidence of their validity will accept anything. Doubtless, smoking contributes to certain hospital deaths under Medicare or Medicaid. But what is his point? Should citizens die only of diseases our nanny approves of?

Joe Califano quit smoking on Oct. 21, 1975. For the record, I myself quit smoking July 25, 1977. We former smokers remember such things. But unlike my busy friend, I never on this earth would seek to impose my notions of good health, by law, upon my neighbor. Smoking doubtless annoys and irritates many non-smokers, thought not all of them, and their rights and feelings have to be respected. But the world is full of annoyances and irritations, and some of these vexations, like paternalistic bureaucrats, are worse than the demon cigarette.

Beneath The Surface, Profound Sorrow Stirs

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. — Monique and Christopher LoRe try not to think about tomorrow. It's better that way.

"We just live from day to day," the mother admits softly, firmly. "I'm not thinking in terms of long-term education for Christopher." She glances out the window and comments on the beauty of the day. "You just don't look too far ahead. You take life in small portions. It's the simple-minded philosophy, but it's THE philosophy."

Christopher LoRe is retarded, a Mongoloid child with an inoperable heart defect. That he has lived to be 16 is a small miracle.

When Christopher was born the doctors looked at the shape of his head, the set of his eyes, and immediately expressed their condolences.

"The doctors shake your hand and say they're very sorry," recalls Monique LoRe. "They say it's a terrible thing. They tell you, 'Our advice is, don't get attached to this child. Don't invest your love in a lost cause.' They didn't give him a chance. It was like, you might as well put him in a garbage can." Despite the prognosis, she kept her child. She kept him though "he was nine years old before there was anything we could even examine" in the way of suitable day care or education in the community. She kept him though her marriage fell apart under the strain.

Monique LoRe smiles as she talks, but a profound sorrow lurks just beneath the surface, a hint of countless tears, you sense a fineness about her life with Christopher that is like treading on very thin ice.

"People are always asking me how I can do it, how can I stand it? To live with Christopher is no more difficult than to be with a husband or wife," explains the 54-year-old native of France, in the South ever since she went to Louisiana State University as an exchange student more than 30 years ago. "Everyone has problems. I listen to parents who have teenagers; THEY have problems."

But being the parent of a "developmentally disabled" child like Christopher is different. "It's a rare person who can understand," she says. There is no malice in her voice. "If I didn't have a retarded child, I would have been just as indifferent as the next person."

For years, otherwise progressive Chapel Hill had no place for Christopher LoRe and others like him. Programs were promised while Christopher stayed home, developing slowly, his mother wondering, "What do we do while the years go by?"

By the time a special center for retarded children was established Christopher was too old to qualify. "They said come and visit", Monique LoRe recalls bitterly. "That's like saying come and watch us eat supper, but don't eat."

When she finally found a school that would take the boy, the teachers struggled "to make him conform, to fit in." They didn't want Christopher as he was — talking aloud to himself, making noises, sticking out his tongue, shaking his hands wildly about his head. He came home parroting, "Shut up, Christopher" and proclaiming what a bad boy he was.

Many childhood peasures passed Christopher by. His heart condition limited his exercise. His appearance and manner set him apart.

"The kids make fun", laments his mother. "They say ugly and cruel things. If you complain you're bitter, you have a chip on your shoulder, an ax to grind."

Christopher sits in a nearby armchair making noises, fidgeting, "in his own world". He has advanced to a third grade reading level; he can count. They've finally found a good school, kind teachers. But he's been home recently, ever since his mother was ill, afraid, she suggests, "that if he leaves the house he may not find me when he comes home."

So the two spend their days together, venturing out to shop, go to movies, church, restaurants, their presence exposing others to a retarded person's capabilities.

"We're accomplishing something", Monique LoRe notes proudly. "I don't want to be dramatic, but the mentally handicapped are the last frontier. If we can go through that barrier, we'll be a worthwhile people."

An autumn chill creeps through the house. The sun is setting on another day sipped to the last.

One Could Forget The Pre-Bedtime Struggle

Ask any parent when she feels her love for her children most, and she'll tell you she feels it most when they're asleep. It's not just because they're quiet — although, believe me, that plays a large part in it— but it's the combination of innocence and vulnerability that is so appealing and so evident in soft baby faces, in footie pajamas, and in fat little legs tucked under round bottoms. It almost makes a mother forget what she went through getting them there. Almost.

Because GETTING a kid to bed is when a parent is most likely to have to remind herself that she'll feel sorry in the morning if she strangles him that night. Getting Meg ready for bed is like asking Morris the Cat to eat with chopsticks. Neither is likely to occur without a fight.

The first step in preparation for bedding down at our house is bath time. Now, this usually doesn't present much of a problem until I try to take her out — UNLESS it happens to be hair-washing night.

"You don't need to wash my hair, Mommy," she told me the other night. "Just rub a little soap on my back and bottom."

"Good try," I said, "but your hair is going to be washed. Lean back."

She did a belly-flop and scrambled to the other end of the tub. "I need to swim."

"You're going to need artificial respiration if you don't get back down here," I hissed, grabbing a leg and pulling her toward me. "Now lean back!"

"Help me! Help me!" she screeched.

Phillip came bounding up the stairs. "What are you DOING to her?!"

"Trying to drown her, of course," I said. "Want a turn?"

Naturally, he didn't. He turned around and left me to go on alone with the next step — toothbrushing.

I tried to be diplomatic. "Which toothbrush do you want? The yellow one or the blue one?"

But it didn't work. "The yellow one or the blue one," she stated.

"I want the blue brushteeth," she whimpered.

Fighting the impulse to stick the blue one in her ear, I carefully transferred the toothpaste and aimed for her mouth.

The screaming started almost immediately. And I didn't stop until she loosened her bite. I sucked my bruised finger for a moment and proceeded with twice my original determination.

"Help!" she sputtered and spit. "Help!"

Again Phillip came bounding up the stairs. "Why is it that between 7:30 and 8:30 this house always sounds like the filming location for "Emergency"?

"Care to try YOUR hand at it?" I asked, holding up my swelling finger.

He quickly disappeared.

I finally got her to bed after the usual chorus of "Read another book!", "I need to rock!", "Walk me!", "I want a glass of water!", and "Please, Mommy, I love you."

A half an hour later Phillip went up to check on her. "She looks like such an angel," he simpered upon his return. "I just don't understand why she behaves so badly for you."

I rolled my eyes upward. "Help," I whispered. "Help!"

Buckminster Fuller A Man Ahead Of His Time

By WARREN TALBOT

BOSTON (UPI) — Marshall McLuhan called him "the Leonardo da Vinci of our time."

Richard Buckminster Fuller would rather think of himself as an "insignificant human being who attempted to solve some problems."

That's quite an understatement from an 82-year-old man who has made 43 trips around the world, written 18 books, delivered hundreds of lectures and is known as a distinguished inventor, poet, architect, engineer, author, educator, and philosopher.

Like Leonardo, most of Fuller's ideas have been ahead of his time. It has been only in the past decade that the world seems to be catching up with him.

"I'm very pleased that people would think of me as another Leonardo, but it isn't anything that crosses my mind frequently," he said in an interview.

"Bucky," as he prefers friends call him, is perhaps best known as the designer of the geodesic dome, a structure which can be built with very light materials but still support great weight and resist great strains. He says geodesic domes are in more than 200,000 places around the world. The most famous is the former Expo '67 U.S. pavilion in Montreal.

"I'm committed to solving the problems of mankind by artifacts instead of through social reforms and politics," he said. "I'm interested in solving world problems, not local problems."

Fuller drove his point home while talking about political attempts to solve housing shortages. "They try to solve the housing problem with today's high-priced building materials and construction methods. Well, a geodesic dome is light-weight, takes just hours to put up in many cases and is less expensive and is comfortable." That's what he means by solving problems through artifacts, not politics.

This short man with thick eye-glasses, closely cropped white hair and hearing aid is an unlikely figure to develop a cult of mostly young followers. His avid followers have read some of his 18 books which include "Operating Manual For Spaceship Earth;" "I Seem to be a Verb;" "Synergetics: Explorations in the Geometry of Thinking;" "No More Second Hand God;" "4D Timelock;" and "Nine Chains to the Moon."

A writer for Saturday Review once described his lecture circuit appearances this way: "Wherever you look, there he is in his blue suit, his wide-open magnified eyes, pouring out his ideas in a flood of words, intoxicated by the universe and fed by an internal stream of energy that recreates itself as it is used."

As a poet, he has written three acclaimed free-verse books. He spent from 1961 to 1962 as a professor of poetry at Harvard University.

In "Operating Manual for Spaceship Earth," Fuller declares the Earth to be a large mechanical device much like an automobile which periodically must be tuned up and that each inhabitant of the earth must become familiar with its mechanics to keep it operating.

"Too much is being left to specialists," he argues. "A highly educated doctor will spend money to have a plumber fix his sink. Why can't that doctor do the job himself?"

Fuller has 26 patents registered in his name. The one for the geodesic dome has made him rich.

Fuller was born July 12, 1895 in Milton, Mass., son of an old and distinguished New England family. He graduated from Milton Academy in his hometown in 1913 and entered Harvard. But he never graduated. He was asked to leave Harvard, he said, "officially for cutting classes, but in fact for general irresponsibility."

Today Fuller holds the title of professor emeritus at Southern Illinois University and at the University of Pennsylvania. He is world fellow in residence at a consortium of schools including Bryn Mawr and Swarthmore College.

After work as a laborer and a salesman, he enlisted in the Navy in 1917 and, while in the service, married Anne Hewlett, whose father influenced him to become involved in housing design.

His first attempt in building construction failed in 1927 but that year he advocated applying the mass production techniques to housing and suggested a prefabricated house. Two years later, he designed one — the Dymaxion house.

In 1933, he designed a Dymaxion automobile with three wheels — was the first aeronautically designed car. It could hold 11 passengers and exceed 100 miles per hour using a standard V-8 engine.

In World War II, while serving on the federal Board of Economic Warfare and the U.S. Foreign Economic Administration, he began his first practical application of his housing design principles.

After the war, Fuller began working on the geodesic dome which encloses the most space with the least surface, and is the strongest structure against internal and external pressure.

In 1953, the Ford Motor Co. asked him to design a geodesic dome for their Rotunda Building in Dearborn, Michigan.

In 1954, the Marine Corps had Fuller design small, portable domes for field shelters for troops. His domes were also used in 1956 for radar sites along the Distant Early Warning defense line in Canada.

In 1970, Fuller set up the World Game, a long term project using undergraduate and graduate students in universities all over the United States in an effort to solve the world's problems.

Gallery Personnel Met Friday

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Sunday Editor

Art museum and gallery directors, publications personnel and a programs coordinator from five North Carolina cities met Friday at the Greenville Art Center for an exchange of ideas on the most effective use of available funds and personnel in the preparation of publications by art museums and galleries.

Mrs. Edith Walker, director of the Greenville Art Center, hosted the meeting. Gay Hertzman, of the Collections Researoh and Publications Branch of the N. C. Museum of Art, Raleigh, coordinated the discussion, providing suggestions and guidelines.

The meeting was held under the auspices of the Affiliate Galleries Program of the the N. C. Museum of Art. Lorraine Laslett, coordinator of the program, which encompasses 12 art museums and galleries in North Carolina, was present

Others attending were: Michael (Mike) Godfrey, assistant curator, Mint Museum of Art, Charlotte; Alan Aiches, director, St. John's Gallery, Wilmington; Beth Schneider, director, Fayetteville Museum of Art, Fayetteville; and Aaron Karp, director, Gray Gallery, Jenkins Fine Art Center, East Carolina University.

Ms. Hertzman focused on the necessity that galleries and museums face in making publications budgets stretch to the greatest possible extent — whether, as in the case of Greenville, Fayetteville and Wilmington, its small amounts included within general operating budgets; larger budgets such as those of the Mint in Charlotte and NCMA in Raleigh; or a university subsidized budget as at East Carolina University.

"I've found that printers are helpful and will give you suggestions for cutting costs significantly in many small ways," Ms. Hertzman commented.

Catalogues, brochures, newsletters, invitations and other printed matter from each gallery or museum represented were studied and discussed in relation to design, paper quality, types of printing and screening, and cost factors.

Periodic meetings covering all fields of directorial and administrative functions of North Carolina art museums and galleries are being scheduled for members of the Affiliate Galleries program. The Friday meeting in Greenville was the first on the subject of publications.

Tough But Deeply Loving People

Children of the Sea. By James R. Nichols. Winston-Salem. John F. Blair, Publisher. 216 pages. $8.95

The coastal rivers of Virginia and the Carolinas were once more energetic than they are now and in an earlier millenia deposited great quantities of sediment on the edge of the North American continental shelf. The southward and northward rush of the Labrador and Gulf currents deposited coarse sand with this sediment and eventually pushed the material toward the shore. Consequently a long group of sandbars and shallows developed along the coast without the security of bedrock. These sandbars are the Outer Banks, and they are constantly at the mercy of the winds and tides which formed them.

James R. Nichols has written a heart-warming and sincere story about how a community of "Bankers" endure hurricanes, ship-wrecks and epidemics by a strong faith in both God and guts. They are a swarthy, weather-beaten people, these islanders, yet as Nichols portrays them they are indomitable.

Take for instance Peter and Rachel Wahab, both descendants from long lines of islanders, who, as the book begins, have lost three of their four sons to diptheria in one season and who are nursing their fourth who is already gravely ill. This son, whose name not coincidentally is Isaac, eventually dies as well, and the book is primarily about their reconciliation with the God and the land which have brought them such great tragedy.

Those who have visited the Outer Banks will recognize them in Nichol's novel. But the seemingly endless beaches, the constantly varying winds and tides, the struggling, sand-lashed foliage, and the overwhelming presence of the sea are more than merely backdrop for Nichol's story. Rather, his characters are deeply related to these islands and find their identity in them.

Peter Wahab's mother, Judith, was a fiery young woman, who "just wasn't an islander" and who eventually left the Banks for good. When Peter is most grieved by the loss of his sons he thinks most about following her example and leaving the islands himself. But he never does.

He is reconciled to a vision of the islands that he has seen in a painting done by an "old, crazy nigger" named Ezekiel, who is grandson of an African tribal princess, and who relates the story told him by his mother of her passage across the sea when during a storm 33 slaves drowned and 33 more were thrown off the ship in order to make it lighter. Ezekiel's vision is a tempestuous one of redemption through persecution. Each man to him is a Job who must submit to the oft-times harsh will of God, even though he might think he can stand no more. God is ultimately a loving God, according to Ezekiel, though one may not be able to fathom it during excruciating hardship.

Although they call him crazy, Ezekiel's is the belief of the other islanders as well, and it is in sharing this humble faith that the islanders find their most fundamental sense of community. The periodic hurricanes, the biting winters, and the terrible onslaughts of disease are manifestations of God's love. It is the only belief the islanders can allow themselves to have; otherwise, like fiery, independent Judith, they would leave the islands.

Nichols at times narrowly skirts the melodramatic, yet maintains sensitive control of our emotions in his unerring sense of how people really feel when faced with personal tragedy and by his convincing portrait of the islanders as a tough but deeply loving people. Like the islands they live on, these people are truly children of the sea.

Bloodworth Book On Sinclair Published

William Bloodworth, associate professor of English at East Carolina University, is the author of a new book on Upton Sinclair, American novelist and political writer. His book, "Upton Sinclair," is part of the U.S. Authors Series published by Twayne Publishers.

Bloodworth traces Sinclair's career from the mid-1890's to 1968, the year of Sinclair's death. Emphasis is given to historical circumstances and literary achievement of "The Jungle" (1906), Sinclair's most famous novel. The book drew attention to oppressive working conditions and unsanitary practices in Chicago's meat-packing district, influenced the Pure Food and Drug Act and now stands as the premier example of American muckraking literature.

A native of San Antonio, Texas, Bloodworth holds the PhD degree in American Civilization from the University of Texas. He has been at ECU since 1972.

Wilmington 10, Little Cases Hurt Image Of N.C.

By ELIOT BRENNER

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — The image of North Carolina has been suffering because of what Gov. James B. Hunt Jr., the man caught in the middle, believes has been an unfair portrayal of his state in two celebrated cases.

The cases involve the Wilmington 10, a group of civil rights activists, and a 24-year-old black woman named Joan Little who says she would rather die than be extradited to North Carolina.

The problems arose before Hunt, who has been in office only a year, was inaugurated, but much of the controversy focuses on him. On Monday night, he will go on statewide television to announce his decision in the Wilmington 10 case.

Hunt believes the world has only heard one side of the story.

"Whatever happens to me, I'm concerned about North Carolina, our image, our good name. That's why I'm concerned when you have a national story that's really not being fair," he said at a press conference last month.

Supporters and attorneys for the group contend they were innocent and are demanding Hunt pardon them.

The governor — under increasing pressure from civil rights groups, liberal congressmen and even churgh organizations — has several options. He may issue pardons of innocence or forgiveness, commute or reduce the sentences, or do nothing. There has been no indication what he will do.

President Carter's push for human rights and the recantation by several of the original prosecution witnesses fueled the drive to free the group. Claiming the convictions were obtained on perjured testimony gotten through coercion and direct or implied bribes, Ferguson and other defense lawyers tried to win a new trial for the 10 last year.

That bid failed. Last month, the state Court of Appeals' refused to review the case, ending freedom efforts in state courts. The ball then was tossed to Hunt who had promised to act after all court appeals had been exhausted.

The Wilmington 10 case, and that of Miss Little, has attracted worldwide press attention and much of the publicity, from the standpoint of North Carolina officials, has been bad.

In Miss Little's case, Hunt said earlier this month he was "disgusted" and that North Carolinians were tried of hearing and reading statements by her about the state's judicial and prison systems. After her arrest in New York City last month, Miss Little said she had been unjustly punished in North Carolina and would be subjected to hostile prison authorities and jealous inmates if she was returned to North Carolina.

Hunt and other state officials vigorously denied the accusations.

Hunt became so upset with the uproar that he briefly considered dropping efforts to extradite her, but decided to continue.

"I didn't ask for it and I didn't do anything to bring it on. But I'm the governor of North Carolina and I hope I make the right decision," he said.

Tooth Grew In Foot

LENOIR, N.C. (UPI) — No one was more surprised than 13-year-old Doug Pritchard when a doctor found a tooth growing in his foot, but the youth took it all in stride.

After all, he reasoned, the pain that had bothered him for several weeks was gone and now he had a ready-made excuse for why he kept wearing out his shoes.

"My father said, no wonder he can't keep shoes on me because my feet kept eating them up," said Doug Friday after a doctor corrected the rare case of genetic misdirection.

The youth was taken to the doctor Friday morning to have a foreign object removed from his left foot.

"I didn't know what it was really but people told me it was bone, dried up skin, I just didn't know what it was," said Doug.

He said he was a little embarrassed by the incident at first, but now thinks it is something he will be able to tell his children about. Dr. Amor Bouraouie, who removed the tooth, kept it for a souvenir, but Doug says he wants it back.

"He said he never pulled a tooth out of anybody's foot before," said the boy.

He said the tooth he removed from the boy was full-grown and even had roots.

City Police To Operate Mobile Radar Units

Greenville motorists who like to speed around on city street will find it a little more difficult thing to do after February 1, when the Greenville Police Department will begin using two new moving radar units.

Chief Glenn Cannon said this morning that the new radar units — capable of clocking oncoming traffic from a moving police car or checking the speed of passing vehicles from a stationary position just as older radar units do — will be placed in operation February 1.

He noted that officers are now undergoing an eight-hour training program to qualify them to operate the new equipment. The last of the training sessions will be held January 27, he said.

At present, according to the chief, the department operates four stationary units which will still be used in the department's fight against speed law violators.

The new moving radar units — with a range of a half-mile — cost the department $1,195 each, although they normally sell for $2,400.

During 1977, Greenville police arrested 2,065 speeding drivers. So far this year, 84 motorests have been charged with speeding.

The moving radar units the Greenville department will be using are similar to the moving radar used by the North Carolina State Highway Patrol since 1974.

At present, the Highway Patrol has five moving radar units in operation in Pitt County and one stationary unit

Tricycles For Handicapped

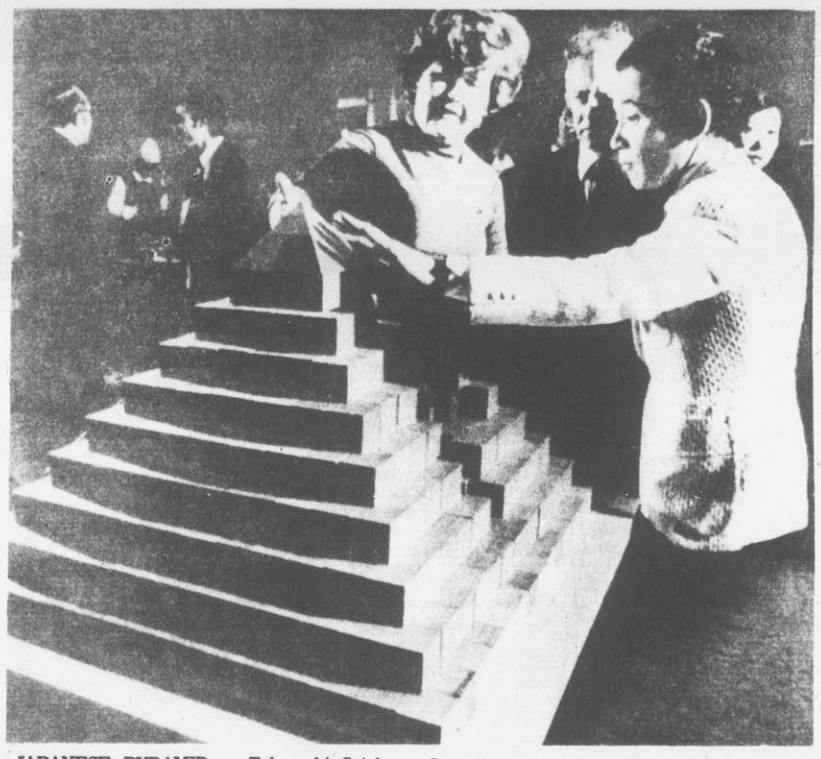

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (UPI) — Tricycles for handicapped children have been designed by an industrial mechanic here.

G. C. Parnell, who works in the machine shop at R. J. Reynolds Tobacco, used company equipment to rework pedals and gears onto the handle bars. This allows crippled children to pedal the tricycles with their hands. They were donated to the Children's Center for the Physically Handicapped here.

Inspired New Credit System

CLEVELAND, Ohio (UPI) — John Tarantino could be considered the father of the consumer credit buying revolution. He made the first charge card data recorder for Addressograph-Multigraph in 1949. It was used by department stores.

Tarantino recently supervised production of the company's four millionth data recorder.

JAPANESE PYRAMID — Takayoshi Satoh, right, representing the Japanese Nippon Television Network, explains a model of a pyramid at Cairo, Egypt. Japanese archeologists plan to build a new pyramid near the 4,500-year-old Great Pyramid of Cheops in an effort to find out how the pharaohs managed the originals. The television network is subsidizing the project. (AP Laserphoto)

Service Awards To Four Winterville Jaycees

WINTERVILLE — The Winterville Jaycees recently held their annual Distinguished Service Award Banquet, honoring Winterville's Outstanding Young Farmer, Outstanding Young Educator, Outstanding Young Law Enforcer, and the recipient of the Distinguished Service Award.

Winners of the awards were: Bruce Gray, Young Educator Award; Kenneth Allen, Young Farmer Award; Wayne Williams, Outstanding Young Law Enforcer; and Jim Bussell, Distinguished Service Award.

Bussell, a minister, is active with the Kiwanis Club and helped to create the Winterville Historical Society.

All winners will represent the Winterville Jaycees in state competition to be held in Wilmington during February.

Red Cross Board Met On Thursday

The board of directors of the Pitt County Red Cross held its quarterly meeting Thursday evening at St. Paul's Episcopal Church with Andy Warren, chairman, presiding.

Miss Nell Stallings, safety program chairman, reported that 85 people took the multi-media first aid course during the quarter and eight completed the advanced emergency care course.

In addition, 48 people were trained in cardiopulmonary resuscitation and 14 completed the advanced lifesaving course.

The safety chairman announced that she will be scheduling an advanced life saving course soon and young people who plan to have summer jobs involving water safety duties should have the course.

Mrs. Ruth Taylor, executive secretary of the Pitt chapter, reported on service to military families during the quarter. She pointed out that 49 servicemen and their families were given help, including emergency leave for critical illness or death and other assistance areas.

In the absence of the blood chairman, Mrs. Taylor discussed the program and said that the next Bloodmobile will be held Feb. 22 at Farmville Christian Church, Feb. 23 at Ayden Community Building, and Feb. 24 at the Greenville Moose Lodge.

She also reported that the local blood sub-center will be moving to new quarters soon on Highway 43 beyond the hospital turnoff.

ERA Meeting Scheduled

RALEIGH — A kick-off campaign for ratification of the Equal Rights Amendment (ERA) in North Carolina will take place February 4 at the Jane S. McKimmon Center.

Among those appearing on the program will be N.C. former first lady Jessie Rae Scott; Judy Carter, daughter-in-law of President Carter; Isabella Cannon, mayor of Raleigh; Sen. Kathy Sebo; and Rep. George Miller.

Registration begins at 9:30 a.m. The fee of $10 includes luncheon. The meeting begins at 10 a.m. and lasts until 3 p.m.

The program will include a panel of national organization representatives of ERAmerica and its affiliates, discussion of campaign status and strategy and regional workshops.

Greenville coordinators are Mrs. Lucille Jones, 752-3177 and Mrs. Willie Mae Carney, 825-5371. Persons interested in attending the Raleigh meeting are to contact either of these two. Registrations must be made by Thurs., Jan. 26.

Deadline for ratification of ERA is Mar. 22, 1979. Ratification was approved by the N.C. House in 1977, but was defeated in the Senate by two votes.

Methodists Take Issue

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — United Methodist leaders from eastern North Carolina have taken issue with a New York church official's claim that Joan Little's "health and safety" would be in danger if she is returned to prison here.

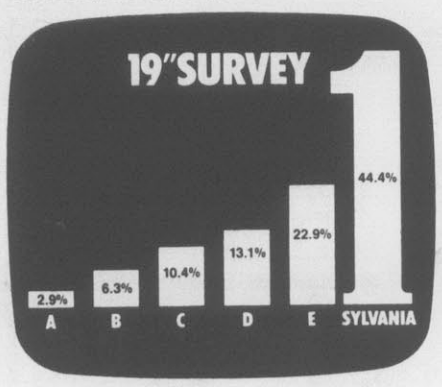

Bishop Robert M. Blackburn and the 12 district superintendents of the North Carolina United Methodist Conference disputed the contention in a resolution made public Friday. The group called on Lucius Walker Jr. of the Division of Church and Society of the National Council of Churches to prove or retract the claim.

Life By The Numbers Is Becoming All-Pervasive

EDITOR'S NOTE — The businessman broods over the bottom line. The baseball addict dotes on batting averages. The government expects us to calculate our income tax, assigns us a Social Security number and rules by a quadrennial vote count. Statistics mirror our national psyche, and numbers are so pervasive that hardly anybody notices. The writer of the following article does.

By SID MOODY
AP Newsfeatures Writer

Ever since some ancient, ancestral ape determined he had 10 fingers, numbers have counted.

Particularly right now.

Numbers, numbers, numbers.

Pushing, manipulating, essential in an Age of Technocracy, speaking — shouting — louder than words. Such as three nagging little ones: are they correct?

Surprisingly, it is a question infrequently asked. Surprisingly, because although we live by the numbers, we take them for granted, like breathing.

Paradoxically it's the little number that bothers us, our own, the one we fear will steal our individuality. This irrespective of the fact that Social Security would have the devil of a time identifying the 60,000 John Smiths in America without numbers.

"Modern man must not only be literate," he cries. "He must also be numerate!"

Then consider: Who said "We have never claimed infallibility, but next Tuesday the whole world will be able to see down to the last percentage point how good we are." Easy. That was pollster George Gallup in 1948 when he picked Tom Dewey as the next president.

Meet Professor Charles Ruggles of Yale. He recently reviewed the Wholesale Price Index for the White House. He found it inaccurate for the sensible reason that it was not based much on wholesale prices. The Bureau of Labor Statistics agrees and will have a new index when Congress gives it the money.

Chuck Barris was dismayed at the sales of his new novel, "You and Me, Babe." He located the selected bookstores that report to the New York Times' best seller list and spent thousands of dollars buying up his book. He made the list, and sales responded accordingly.

The point is not that numbers don't have their uses, vital ones. The point is that numbers can be and are misinterpreted, manipulated, based on misleading or false assumptions, used to quantify the unquantifiable.

Auguste Comte, the French philosopher, said: "There is no inquiry which is not finally reduced to a question of numbers." As regards science, he's probably right. Applied to human beings, who are generally too mutilated, spindled and unprogrammed to be fed into a computer, it can approach absurdity. Yet we try.

Numbers evolved with early society. Money — digits of stipulated worth — enabled man to sell apples for oranges in the market. A knowledge of cubits, a measure, allowed him to build an ark that wouldn't capsize.

"Numbers keep order," says Dr. George Katonah of the Survey Research Center of the University of Michigan. In 1324, for instance, Edward II of England decided to bring order to shoemaking by standardizing sizes, measured by three barley corns from the center of the ear to an inch up to a maximum of 39 corns or 13 inches. Or, size 13. Americans buy shoes to this footstick to this day.

From the ancient Sumerians onward numbers were essential to science and commerce. "But we didn't start to live by the numbers until the 18th and 19th centuries," says Michael Mahoney, professor of science history at Princeton.

"The Industrial Revolution brought the money system to the fore. People began moving into cities and factories. This meant living by the clock. Wages. Production figures."

"Most of us depend on statistics to a great extent for our perception of the world," says Earle J. Gerson, a Census Bureau official. "We may not have been victims of crime, but we know the statistics, and we lock our doors."

In a word, almost everybody for almost any reason is better off knowing "what's going on out there." The numbers don't always give complete satisfaction but they give the best answers we have.

But the answers sometimes have to be challenged.

"If a poll comes out wrong, the pollster blames sampling error," says Albert Sindlinger, a veteran business pulse taker. "How come there are never any sampling errors when polls come out the way we want them to? We only look at what we want to see. That's human nature."

Sindlinger knew Herbert Hoover in the 1920s and recalls Hoover feared an economic collapse but couldn't be sure because no one had the figures. No one knew what levels of employment and production were. Since then Washington has become the numbers capital of the world. A nation that has decided to regulate and, more important, ameliorate the lives of its citizens has to know the numbers.

Fortunately, says economist John Kenneth Galbraith, "our statistics are extremely good. They're done by people of high integrity and competence. There is, though, a tendency of high public officials to take favorable statistics and exaggerate their importance."

Forsooth, we can't turn from numbers and walk away in our three-barley-corn-to-the-inch shoe.

Heed Scammon. Be numerate. But before taking numbers at their face value, ask what they mean, or who says they mean what they mean, and then, before canonizing them, count 10.

Mains'l Reefing Is Made Easier

By LEROY POPE
United Press International

NEW YORK (UPI) — The bane of racing and cruising sailors is being becalmed, but what scares the average duffer who wants to take his family out for an afternoon or overnight is too much wind.

Nearly all modern sailboats are built with the idea that they will be raced occasionally, so they have slotted masts and booms and are otherwise designed to take advantage of the slightest breath of air. But that makes them pretty tender and scary when the wind gets up above 15 knots.

As a result, the ordinary Joe loses more weekends of sailing during the season because the wind is blowing so strong he doesn't dare venture out.

He would be able to sail a lot more if he had a satisfactory way to shorten sail by reefing his mainsail by himself. Single-handed reefing of a mainsail in a blow is nearly impossible with most of the rigs now in use. Even expensive roller reefing booms often must be worked by two crewmen in addition to the helmsman. Slab reefing, so-called "jiffey" reefing and old-style reef points, short ropes sewed to both sides of the sail, are no easier.

Slotted masts and high aspect rigs make the whole problem harder by increasing wind pressure and making the sail hard to pull down when the halyard is slacked.

Yet there is a solution. It's to be found in one of the oldest sailing rigs around, the Chinese lugsail, which has been used at least a thousand years. Western sailors rarely realize that one man, even a woman or a boy, can reef the huge mainsail of a Chinese junk in a matter of seconds simply by utilizing gravity. This principle already has been adapted to a few western yachts.

The full-battened mainsail of the sporty catamarans is copied from the Chinese lugsail. True, the catamaran sailor rarely is interested in reefing, but he does sometimes want to get his sail down in a hurry and the weight of the battens helps in that.

To reef a sail designed like the Chinese lugsail with full width battens, you just slack the halyard and the bottom batten drops on the boom, effectively shortening sail. Slack the halyard some more and the second batten falls on top of the bottom batten. This may cut the sail area by half.

Adapting this idea to the modern Bermuda rig requires that the lower three battens be fairly heavy while the upper battens are left light. All the battens must be fairly flexible. If the sail is small enough to be pulled down quickly, it still can be tracked or slotted to the mast. If it is large, perhaps it will be better to let only the upper half of the luff ride the mast closely; the lower half could be mortised and attached very loosely to the mast with parrel lines like the junk sail to make it pull down faster.

With two big reefs in his mainsail, the timid sailor could keep his bark standing up like a church steeple even in a fairly strong wind.

Registering At Nursery School

The Lutheran Church Nursery School, located at 1801 S. Elm St., announces registration for the 1978-79 Nursery School program is now open.

The nursery school offers both a three year old and four year old program. The three year old program meets Tuesday and Thursday from 9-12 noon. The four year old class meets Monday, Wednesday and Friday from 9-12 noon.

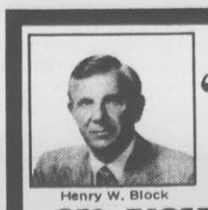

Classes are designed for the total enhancement of an informal learning experience through group activities, reading, arts and crafts, music, field trips and creative play.

Indoor Swim Systems Needed

BARTLESVILLE, Okla. (UPI) — Few regions in the U.S. can have outdoor swimming meets for more than five months a year. More indoor swimming complexes must be built to bolster U.S. chances in future Olympics, said Ken Treadway, manager of three U.S. Olympic swim teams and now director of youth relations for Phillips Petroleum.

Sloppy Pirates Defeated

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

It wasn't Shakespeare, but last night "A Comedy Of Errors" was performed in Minges Coliseum.

It was the Pirates of East Carolina—less their leading scorer, Oliver Mack—who put on the show, and by the time the red-faced Bucs had escaped to the sanctuary of their dressing room, the University of North Carolina Asheville had run up a 101-92 victory.

East Carolina suffered 32 turnovers in the game, and generally played sloppy defense and offense in losing their third straight game of the week. The loss dropped the Bucs to 3-10 on the season.

Asheville, in winning, evened its record to 10-10 on the year, and claimed their first win this season over a Division I NCAA school.

Mack, who was in uniform on the bench, did not play at all. "It was personal reasons," ECU Coach Larry Gillman said afterwards. "Nobody on this team is too big to make mistakes. We have certain rules that must be abided by. You have to have these rules when you are trying to build a program."

Gillman termed the defeat, which saw Asheville rally from 15 points down with 8:30 left in the first half to take a halftime lead, then come from nine back in the second game for the win. "disgraceful."

The coach said that there were a lot of people in Greenville who haven't given up on the program. "We owe them much more than we gave them tonight," he said.

The Pirates started off on a grand note, ripping off nine straight points before Asheville managed to get its first basket. They added four more points before the Bulldogs got another score. With 11:56 to go, it was 17-4.

But for the remaining 8:30 of the half, Asheville tore off 31 points, while the Pirates got only 15 more.

"The early part of the game, we had good defensive pressure," Gillman said. "But then the players felt it was showboat time and the defense stopped moving. Asheville started moving then, and they played together as a team. Our guys must have thought it was going to be a walkaway."

Gillman said the same thing happened in the second half, after the Pirates regained control of the game and moved out by as much as nine points. That came at 56-47 as Cornelius put back a missed shot with exactly 16:00 left in the game. Asheville again took control, as Gillman said the Pirates again quit their defensive pressure on the Bulldogs.

"Then, at the end, we missed numerous shots and had a lot of turnovers."

Gillman pointed out that Mack's "maturity and leadership was obviously missing and left a big gap out there. Then, too, I question the desire of the team on the whole. We have to be more intense."

The coach said he felt that under normal conditions (with Mack playing) the Pirates could have handled Asheville. "I'm not trying to take anything from them, they played a good game. But I still feel we should have won the game, even without Mack. You can coach defense, but it's up to the players to execute it."

Asheville closed the gap in the first half behind the scoring of Bamford Jones, who put through 19 points in the first period. It wasn't until 1:23 was left in the half that the Bulldogs finally caught up, tieing it up on a three-point play by George Gilbert.

He then stole the ball nine seconds later for another bakset and the go-ahead talley, making it 40-38. East Carolina tied it up, then regained the lead at 42-41, but trailed as Jones hit with five seconds to go, making it 43-42.

East Carolina came back and outhit Asheville, 8-0 in the first minute and a half of the second half, taking a 51-42 lead, then extended that to nine at 56-47.

But Asheville again started a comeback, finally cutting it to two at 64-62. Later, a three-point play cut it to one, at 66-65, but it was not unitl Jacob Jordan hit with 9:41 left that Asheville again grabbed the lead, 69-68.

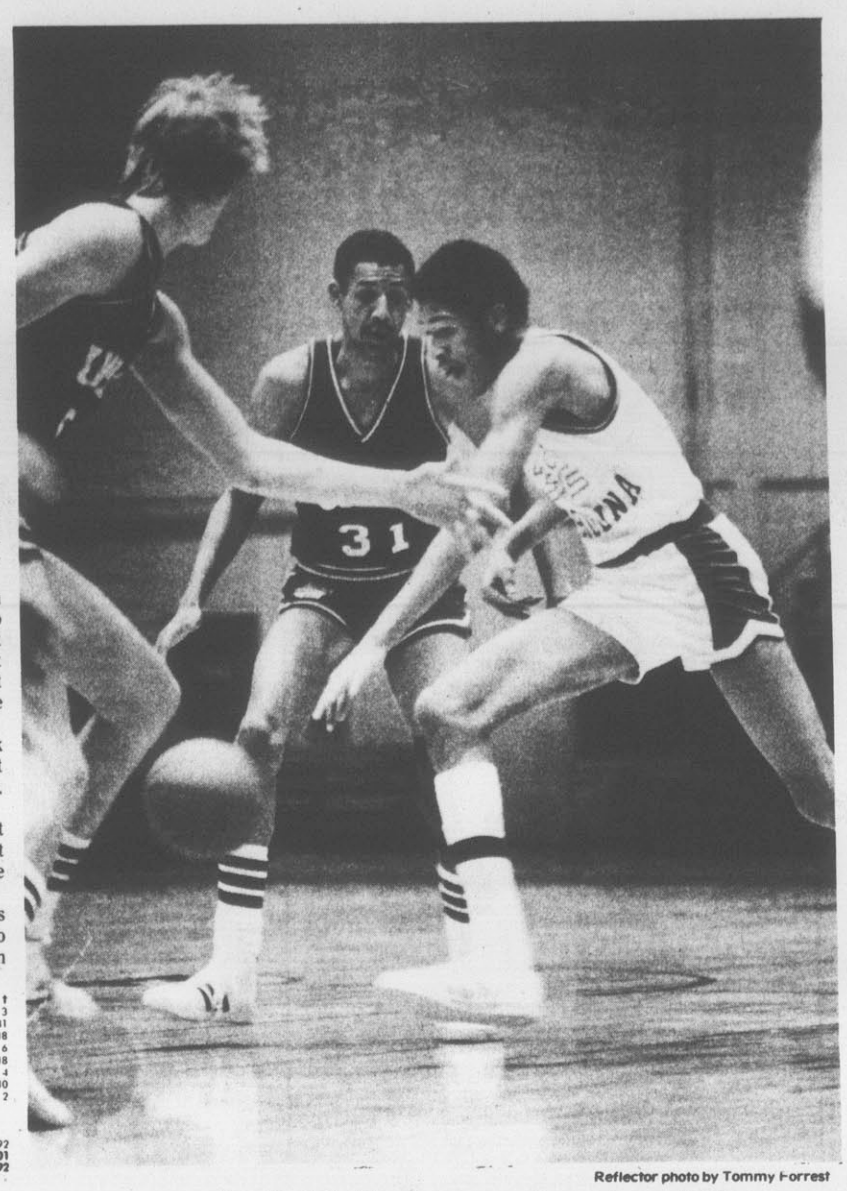

East Carolina moved back ahead, 70-69, but Dave Stickel hit to return the lead to Asheville, which then stretched it to three.

The Pirates tied it again at 77-77, 79-79, and one last time at 81-81, but were never able to take the lead.

Wolfpack Romps Over Gaels

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Freshman forward Art Jones scored 20 points to lead North Carolina State to a 99-72 victory over Iona here Saturday night.

N.C. State broke the contest open midway through the first half on the shooting of Jones, who hit eight of nine field-goal attempts in the opening period.

The Wolfpack led 50-36 at the half and kept its margin above 20 points through most of the second half. Its largest advantage was 91-59 with 5:30 to play.

Jones scored 16 points in the first half and led five Wolfpack players who scored in double figures for the game. Freshman Kenny Matthews scored 17, center Glenn Sudhop netted 14, Clyde Austin had 11 and Tony Warren added 10.

Six-foot-10 freshman center Jeff Ruland led Iona with a game-high 25 points. Guard Glenn Vickers and forward Dave Brown had 10 apiece for the Gaels.

"Art had one of his better games since he's been here," said Sloan. "He was concentrating on doing some specific things. He worked on his man one-on-one and showed some improvement."

He also cited the play of Charles "Hawkeye" Whitney, the Wolfpack's leading scorer who has been plagued with a shooting for the past three games.

"Hawkeye has put himself under some pressure since the Maryland game," Sloan said. "He needed to relax and let it work itself out. I was glad to see him smiling tonight even though his statistics weren't that good." Whitney was 2-of-9 from the floor.

Assistants From Miami May Join Crum At UNC

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Dick Crum expects new faces but few changes in North Carolina's football program in his first season as head coach.

And Crum has no doubt that his first Tar Heel squad will be a winner.

"I don't think I would have applied for the job here if I didn't think I could win right off the bat," he said at his first press conference Saturday.

Crum, who won three Mid-American Conference titles in four years as head coach at Miami of Ohio, said he was given a five-year contract by the Tar Heels.

His entire Miami coaching staff probably will join him at North Carolina, he said, adding that he expects they will be here by the middle of next week.

"The toughest thing will be getting to know the players and them getting to know me," he said, telling reporters not to be surprised if the players are "running around with their names taped to their helmets" in spring practice.

"I don't think I'm a difficult person to get along with," he added.

Miami, which has produced the likes of Bo Schembechler, Woody Hayes and Ara Parseghian, has been called the "Cradle of Coaches," and Crum said he hoped to continue the tradition in his new position.

"I certainly want to do as well as they did," he said in reference to his fellow Miami coaching products. "If I can, we'll have a great program."

He praised former coach Bill Dooley, who left North Carolina to become football coach and athletic director at Virginia Tech, for building "a quality program" here and said he planned to start recruiting Saturday afternoon.

The Tar Heels have generally concentrated their recruiting efforts on North Carolina and Virginia high-school players, and Crum said that would continue.

"I think we'll stay basically with the format that has been established," he said. "It's been pretty successful. I'm not going to rely on going back to Ohio to recruit, though you'd be surprised how many Ohio players leave Ohio."

The bespectacled, 43-year-old coach has spent his entire football career in his native Ohio. He played college ball at Muskingum and Mount Union, although he conceded Saturday that "I was no football star. I can tell you that. The things I learned about football were from being on the demonstration team."

After spending 12 years as an assistant and head coach at Ohio high schools, Crum became a defensive coach at Miami in 1969 under head coach Bill Mallory.

When Mallory left to become head coach at Colorado in 1974, Crum ascended to the position and compiled a 34-10-1 record, including two Tangerine Bowl wins.

Although he said he has "always been an I-formation coach," Crum installed a veer at Miami last season because "we didn't have a huge offensive squad."

Dick Crum

He said he did not know what offensive formation he would use at North Carolina. "I want to look at the personnel here first," he said, adding that he did not consider himself "a conservative offensive coach."

Crum said he met Saturday morning with Jim Donnan, offensive backfield coach of the Tar Heels under Dooley. Donnan, who was among 11 candidates interviewed for the head coaching job, is the only member of Dooley's staff here who has not gone elsewhere, but "it appears we won't retain him," Crum said.

"We exchanged ideas and talked about personnel and recruiting," Crum said. "He was very gracious." Donnan is expected to join Dooley at Virginia Tech.

Perhaps his most difficult task in his first year at North Carolina, Crum said, will be coaching the Tar Heels against the players he recruited at Miami.

North Carolina will take on the Redskins here Oct. 7.

"That will be a real challenge," Crum said, "but at least I'll know the other team's personnel pretty well."

Mackovic Seeks Wake Staff, QB

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — New Wake Forest football Coach John Mackovic, vowing "we will throw the ball," says his first jobs are to select a coaching staff and find a quarterback.

Mackovic, 34, was named coach of the Deacons to replace Chuck Mills, who was fired earlier this month.

"I want to find a quarterback who does what I like to do — put it up," Mackovic said at a news conference Saturday. "Whoever winds up in the quarterback position for us will certainly be of the offensive leaders in the ACC, and maybe the nation."

Mackovic, the first Wake alumnus to coach the Deacons, was the offensive coordinator at Purdue and organized the Boilermaker's passing attack which was 6th in the nation last year.

"I've been fortunate to coach some quarterbacks who are among the top nationally ranked ones," he said.

Mackovic played in the same Wake backfield as Brian Piccolo and graduated in 1965. He said his appointment as head coach has means he has accomplished one of his personal goals.

"I've put a lot of stock in intangible goals and I set a personal goal to be head football coach by the time I was 35," he said. "My wife just found out about that goal Thursday."

Mackovic said he will hit the recruiting trail as soon as possible. "We have to pick up the recruiting, and I hope to have a staff named by next week," he said.

Mackovic said he plans to emphasize recruiting within North Carolina. He said the offensive formation the Deacons will use depends on what style quarterback he finds.

Mike McGlamry, who quarterbacked the Deacons to a 1-10 season in 1977, graduates this year. But returning to the backfield will be James McDougald, a sophomore standout running back this year.

"I'm proficient as an X and O coach. But I don't want to be branded an X and O coach," he said. "I will have quite a lot of input into the offense. As I said, we're going to throw. But I'd be remiss if I didn't think we could run with James McDougald, who is an outstanding back."

Crosby Is Knotted After Two Rounds

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Tommy McGinnis, an off-the-board (and almost off the tour) longshot in a field of the game's greatest players, fought his way to a 2-under-par 70 that lifted him into a 3-way tie for the lead Saturday in the second round of the rain-delayed Bing Crosby National Pro-Am Golf Tournament.

The skinny, graying McGinnis, still competing only because he was granted an extension of his playing rights, finished 36 holes with a 139 total and tied for the lead with Ray Floyd and Hale Irwin. Irwin shot a 70 and Floyd a 69 in the celebrity field at Spyglass Hill, probably the toughest of the three soggy Monterey Peninsula courses used for this unique event.

McGinnis, 30, a career nonwinner from Memphis, Tenn., acquired only $1,800 on the tour last year and faced the loss of his approved players card. He was ill part of the season, however, and was given an extension, which is rapidly running out. He now has three more tournaments to bring his total winnings up to $10,000. A fifthplace finish here would do it.

Tom Watson, the 1977 Player of the Year and defending titleholder here, had the lead alone until he double-bogeyed the final hole at Spyglass and dropped back into a group at 140, one shot off the pace halfway through the event that was rained out Thursday and now is scheduled to end Monday.

"Blah," said Watson, whose first round 66 had given him a 3-shot lead. "That's really ending on a sour note."

The notes, however, were even more sour for Jack Nicklaus, Arnold Palmer and Johnny Miller.

Miller disqualified himself for signing an incorrect scorecard after Friday's first round. He signed for a 76, actually shot 77 and didn't realize the error until he saw the scores in the newspaper.

Nicklaus took a 74 and, with a 151 total, appears likely to miss the cut when the field is trimmed to the low 60 scorers after Sunday's third round.

Palmer, with a 77, is still higher — 152. He and amateur partner Gerald Ford are very much in the race in the pro-am competition, however. They're at 133, 5 strokes back of the leaders. The former President, carrying a 16 handicap, made five net birdies in their round at Spyglass. Two of those came on holes on which Palmer made double bogey. Ford picked up on several holes and did not have a score on his own ball.

Watson, winner of the Tucson Open that kicked off the 1978 season, was tied at 4 under par with U.S. Open champion Hubert Green, Ben Crenshaw, Don Bies, Don Pooley and Dr. Gil Morgan. Pooley had a 70; Green, Crenshaw and Morgan 71s, all at Spyglass Hill. Bies shot his 70 at Cypress Point.

McGinnis, actually fighting for his playing life, took a share of the top spot with a 7 iron to 10 feet on the 17th hole and had a chance to take sole control of the lead but missed a 6-foot birdie putt.

A lesson from Canadian veteran George Knudson helped turn his fortunes around, he said.

"George told me to hold the club tighter," he said. "You can't believe how tight I'm holding it now."

Irwin also had trouble on the still-wet, grainy greens. He 3-putted three times, the final one on his 18th hole, which cost him the lead alone.

Floyd flipped a short iron to 12 feet and made the birdie putt on the same hole.

Watson was clinging to a 1shot advantage when he played the last hole, but drove into the right rough, buried his second shot under the lip of a bunker, just got it out and then 3-putted from the front of the green.

UNC Swamps Maryland

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina guard Phil Ford scored 23 points Saturday to lead the fifth-ranked Tar Heels into undisputed possession of first place in the Atlantic Coast Conference with an 85-71 victory over Maryland.

The win boosted North Carolina's overall record to 15-2 and put them alone in the ACC lead with a 5-1 mark. Maryland is 11-5 overall and 1-4 in the ACC.

North Carolina led 42-40 at halftime and opened the second half by outscoring Maryland 70, sparked three steals in the backcourt, two of them by Ford.

The Tar Heels steadily built on the lead and took an 81-59 advantage with 4:34 left on a three-point play by center Geff Crompton.

Ford became the second alltime leading scorer for North Carolina with 2,015 points. He trails Lennie Rosenbluth, who had 2,045 points in the mid 1950s.

Freshman Albert King led Maryland with 18 points, 16 of them in the first half. Larry Gibson and Greg Manning each scored 10 points for the Terrapins.

Al Wood, a North Carolina freshman, had 13 points, while Mike O'Koren scored 12 and John Virgil added 10.

"I thought North Carolina was trying to rub it in a little by going to the four-corners offense so early in the second half," Maryland coach Lefty Driesell said of the Tar Heels' slow offensive tempo late in the game.

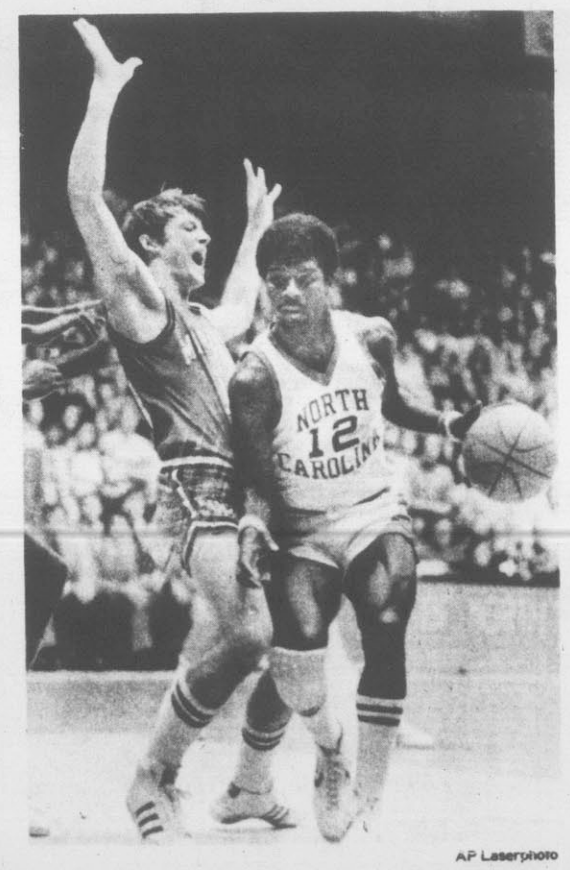

"In the first half we played very well, but we let them get a nine-point lead in the beginning of the second half and sort of folded," Driesell added. "But North Carolina still has to come up to Cole Field House (at Maryland)."

North Carolina coach Dean Smith, meanwhile, was critical of the officials, particularly James Burch. "Mr. Burch is going to drive me crazy," said Smith, who was given a technical foul in the first half. "The guys who played at the end of the game deserve to have the game called as the others."

'Cats Hold Off Miss St. Rally

STARKVILLE, Miss. (AP) — Jack Givens shot top-ranked Kentucky out of a slow firsthalf start Saturday afternoon and the unbeaten Wildcats withstood a late Mississippi State rally for a 75-65 Southeastern Conference basketball victory.

Down 23 points at one time in the second half, Mississippi State closed to 69-63 with 1:08 left in the game, mostly on the long-range baskets of freshman Greg Grim. Grim scored 15 points in the last nine minutes of the game.

But Kentucky put the game away with six straight free throws by Kyle Macy, Jay Shidler and Truman Claytor, and increased its record to 14-0 overall and 6-0 in the SEC.

Mississippi State fell to 9-6 overall and 4-2 in the conference.

Givens wound up with 21 points, 13 of them in an eightminute span in the first half, when Kentucky broke a 12-12 tie and surged to a 36-22 halftime lead.

Indiana State Loses

NORMAL, Ill. (AP) — Senior guard Billy Lewis fired in 25 points and sophomore guard Ron Jones added 18 as Illinois State handed fourth-ranked Indiana State an 81-76 college basketball defeat Saturday, its second loss in a row.

Indiana State forward Larry Bird, the second leading scorer in the country, had 37 points and 17 rebounds in the Sycamores' losing effort. On Thursday, Indiana State lost 79-76 to Southern Illinois University in a Missouri Valley Conference game.

The momentum in the game see-sawed, with the lead changing hands 14 times. Illinois State took an eight-point lead early in the first half, but the score was tied at intermission, 37-37.

Indiana State pulled out to an eight-point lead with 14:48 left in the game, but the Redbirds came back and took a 58-57 lead with 10:14 to play on a rebound basket by Lewis.

Bird tied it up again with a layup at 6:58, but then freshman guard Randy Smithson sank a jump shot from the top of the key to put the Redbirds ahead for good.

Purdue Slaps Indiana

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. (AP) — Senior Wayne Walls sparked a second-half comeback and finished with 20 points Saturday as Purdue defeated Indiana 77-67 in Big Ten college basketball.

Indiana put together a 10-point streak late to cut a 15-point deficit to five, before Walter Jordan scored two free throws for the Boilermakers. Purdue's Jerry Sichting also hit two free throws, opening a 72-63 advantage.

The Hoosiers drew back to 70-65 on Wayne Radford's basket, but the senior fouled out moments later. Sichting made a pair of free throws, Jordan's free throw and a two-pointer by Eugene Parker put Purdue in command with less than a minute to play.

Davidson Shocks USC

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — John Gerdy hit 15 of his last 17 field-goal attempts and his Davidson teammates were almost as hot as the Wildcats defeated South Carolina, 84-73, in a regionally televised basketball game here Saturday.

Gerdy, one of the nation's top scorers, had 31 points and the Wildcats shot 58 percent from the floor, including a sizzling 69 percent in the second half.

The Gamecocks jumped out to a 25-15 lead with 6:43 to play in the first half, but Davidson rallied to tie the score 33-33 at halftime.

Less than two minutes into the second half, Pat Hickert hit a jump shot from the corner to put Davidson on top 37-35 and the Wildcats never trailed after that, running up an 80-64 advantage with 1:35 left in the game.

VCU Stomps Spiders

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Ren Watson and Gerald Henderson led Virginia Commonwealth on a 21-9 tear midway the second half Saturday that gave the Rams an 82-63 basketball romp over Richmond's Spiders.

The Spiders, who had pulled to within 39-38 on a free throw by Mike Perry, went 9:22 with just one field goal as VCU built a 60-43 lead with 7:53 left and won going away.

Watson, coming off a foot injury, had 18 points and 10 rebounds and Henderson, 7 of 8 from the floor, scored 17 points as VCU ran its record to 14-2

Sluggish Keydets Win

LEXINGTON, Va. (AP) — Reserve Harlan Niehaus came off the bench and scored 12 points in 13 minutes Saturday night as he led Virginia Military's sluggish Keydets to an 84-70 basketball victory over Salem's Tigers.

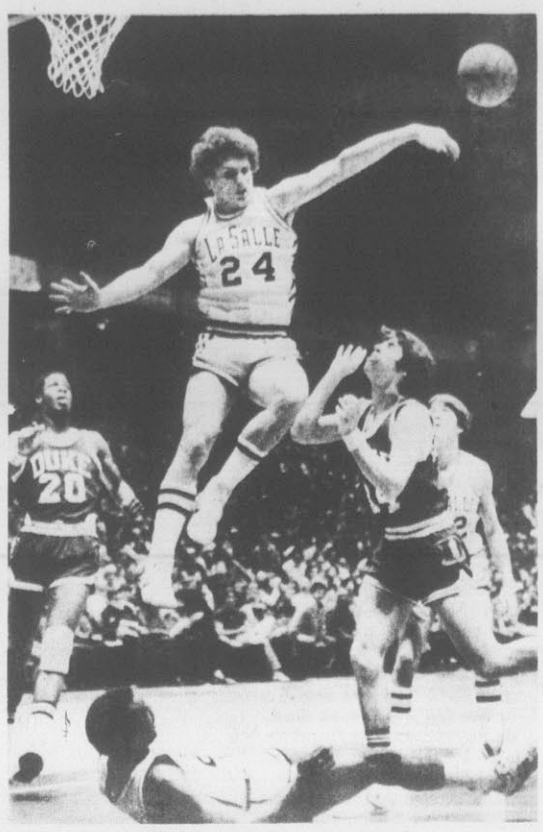

The Keydets, 11-5, trailed much of the first half and their biggest lead was 40-34 just before intermission. VMI slowly pulled away in the second half behind Niehaus, Ron Carter and Dave Montgomery.

Carter scored 20 points but was only 6 of 16 from the floor. Montgomery had 14 points and he and Carter each grabbed 9 rebounds. Niehaus was 5 of 7 from the floor.

The Tigers, now 7-8, were led by Bill Patterson with 19 points. Mike Carey with 17 and Joe Crawford with 16.

Banks Paces Duke Win

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Gene Banks poured in 24 points to lead Duke to a 91-81 victory over LaSalle Saturday in the second game of a college basketball doubleheader at the Spectrum.

Kevin McDonald tallied 27 points to lead the Universtiy of Pennsylvania over Furman 9992 in the opener.

Banks, a former Philadelphia high school All-American, tallied for 16 points during the first half, in which the score was tied eight times.

Sophomore Mike Gminski tallied 22 for Duke (14-3), 18 in the second half. He also had 16 rebounds. Kanaskie topped all scorers with 25 points while Michael Brooks added 16 for LaSalle, now 9-7.

Tigers Nip Cavs In OT

CLEMSON, S.C. (AP) — The Clemson Tigers saw a 12-point lead in the final period dwindle to a 64-64 tie and had to rely on foul shooting in overtime to capture a 79-70 regionally televised victory over Virginia — their first Atlantic Coast Conference triumph this season.

The Tigers placed four players in double figures with John Campbell leading the pack with a 19-point, 12-rebound performance.

Virginia jumped out to an early 12-2 lead, mainly on the shooting of Dave Koesters and Jeff Lamp. For the next three minutes, the Cavaliers were unable to connect and with 7:05 remaining in the first half, Clemson closed the gap to 22-19.

At halftime, the score stood at 32-29.

In the second period, Clemson overtook the Cavaliers and held a 52-40 lead with 11:03 to play. The Tiger burst came on layups by Campbell and the outside shooting of Greg Coles.

Virginia pulled within two when Lee Raker hit two foul shots with 3:32 to play. Mike Owens then tied the score at 64 when he hit two foul shots with 1:20 in regulation play. Neither team could score and Clemson went into its third overtime game of the year.

Clemson scored the first points of the overtime and Virginia never regained the lead. With the score at 73-68, Clemson cashed in on two personal fouls and a technical foul to put the game away.

Virginia coach Terry Holland received a technical after disputing the fourth personal foul called on Lamp. Derrick Johnson hit both technicals and Marvin Dickerson coverted on the one-and-one. Seconds later, Stan Rome went to the foul line and added two more points.

Clemson coach Bill Foster conceded the sharp foul-shooting in the final moments enabled the Tigers to record the victory. "We protected the ball better and made the free throws when we needed them."

He added, "The trap helped us. I'm really pleased with the number of easies that we didn't give up."

Panthers Down Southern Nash

PIKEVILLE — North Pitt gained a split in an Eastern Carolina Conference basketball game last night. The Panthers won the boys' game, 68-54, but the girls' suffered a 52-37 defeat at the hands of the Falconettes.

Aycock junior varsity also won, 70-68.

In the girls' game, Aycock ran out to a 14-7 lead in the first period. They extended that margin to 27-19 by the end of the half.

In the third period, the Falconettes continued to pull away, running their lead out to 37-22. Both teams hit 15 points in the final quarter.

Gail Batts led Aycock with 22, while Rene Hales had 12. The Pant-HERS were led by Kay Hines with 20.

North Pitt's boys raced out to a 17-9 lead in the first period and were never in trouble after that. They pushed that lead out to 34-25 at the end of the half.

The third period saw the Panthers continue their pull-away. That ran the score to 49-35. Both hit 19 in the final quarter of play.

East Carolina Loses

ran it to three. He scored a basket off another steal for a five-point edge, and the Pirates were down for good.

East Carolina was able to control the backboards, 43-37, but their turnovers, coupled with fine Asheville shooting (despite a horrible start), did the trick. Asheville ended up hitting 54.4 per cent from the floor, while the Pirates hit on 49.3 per cent.

Greg Cornelius led the rebounding with 15, and added 18 points for the Pirates. Jim Ramsey, who started in place of Mack, added 18 more, while Herb Krusen had the game high of 31, hitting 12 of 22 from the floor and seven of seven at the line.

Jones finished with 27 points, while Tony Bumphus had 16 and Jordan had 15.

Former Ayden-Grifton High School player Ogden Braxton scored five points in four minutes of relief late in the game.

East Carolina now travels to Chattanooga, to face UT-Chattanooga on Monday. Then, they go to Statesboro, Ga., to meet Georgia Southern on Wednesday. They are back in North Carolina Saturday to meet Duke in Durham, and return home on Tuesday, Jan. 31, to meet Old Dominion.

Grimsley Tops Rose Swimmers

Greensboro Grimsley's swimming teams handed a pair of defeats to the teams from Rose High yesterday afternoon. The Grimsley girls won 96-62, while the boys took a 151-116 victory.

The Rampants had to depend on depth for most of their points, as they took only two first places, both in the 100 backstroke. In the girl's competition, Susan Tucker won the event for Rose in a time of 1:08.6, while John Richards was first in the boy's meet in a time of 1:01.4.

The meet was the third of the year for Rose, which saw its records fall to 1-2 for both the boy's and girl's teams.

The Rampants' next meet will be Feb. 4 when they will host Durham Jordan.

Rampants Crush Bertie Falcons, 94-67

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

WINDSOR — Rose High School basketball coach Jim Brewington called Friday night's game with Bertie a "must win,' situation for the Rampants.

Rose then went out and played like it was life or death, and thoroughly whipped the Falcons, 94-67, evening their Division I record at 1-1.

Rose's girls rallied from an 8-0 deficit early in the game to come back and take a 43-36 win earlier in the evening, and the junior varsity made it a perfect night with a 58-54 win in the preliminary.

For the Falcon varsity boys it was their first loss in three league starts and only their fourth overall loss of the year. Bertie's girls dropped off to 1-2 in the league, while the Rampettes brought their record to 1-1 in the conference.

Bertie scored the first points of the game on a pair of free throws by Ricky Bunch, but Rose then burned through the next 18 in the row for an 18-2 lead.

James Hawkins and Greg Guthrie led the onslaught, scoring 24 and 28 points, respectively.

"It was the best game we've played," Brewington said. "This is the first time we've ever beaten Bertie, and it is the worst they've been beaten at home. We had to win it, and we did."

Brewington said the game was also sweet revenge for him, after last year's contest, in which the Falcons "ran up the score on me," he said.

"I reminded (the players) of that loss, when we put in the second string and they put their first string back on the court."

Rose pressed constantly from tipoff to horn, and it caused a number of turnovers, although the two teams finished almost even in both turnovers and rebounding.

The big difference was in shooting. The Rampants hit on 39 of 65 shots, a fine 60 per cent, while Bertie made only 25 of 71 shots for 35.2 per cent.

"We had some hard practices during the week," Brewington said. "The guys were ready to give it up, the way they were having to work, but they told me just before this game was over that it was worth every bit of it."

As it turned out, the conditioning helped out. Two members of the team, Billy Roberson and Ronnie Chapman, both sometime starters, missed the bus and did not make the trip with the Rampants. That left Brewington with only eight players dressed.

Derwin Clemons drew a starting role against the Falcons and proved a terror on defense, making numerous steals for fast breaks.

"Both Clemons and Hawkins played outstanding games on defense, and Hawkins and Guthrie both were great on offense," Brewington added.

It was Hawkins and Guthrie that sparked the 18-point spurt during the opening period. Guthrie scored eight of the points, while Hawkins contributed a like number. Clemons got the other basket for the 18-2 lead with 2:22 left in the period.

Rose held onto that margin for a 22-6 lead as the period ended. During the second period, however, Bertie began to find the mark, and although the Rampants pulled out to a 19-point spread at 32-13, the Falcons cut it to 15 before falling back by 19 again, 40-21, as the half ended.

Rose ran the lead out to 48-25, a 23-point bulge in the early minutes of the third period, but then began to get a little careless as Bertie pressed. Bertie trimmed the lead back to as little as 16 at 58-52, and trailed, 60-42, as the quarter ended.

In the final period, Bertie put on one last ditch rally and cut the lead back to 68-56 with 4:40 left. But then, the Rampants caught fire again, scoring 14 unanswered points to run out by 26, 82-56, and then upped that to 30, 87-57, before the end.

In addition to the 20-point plus performances by Guthrie and Hawkins, Anthony Bryant had 17, and William Barnes added 10.

Bertie was led by Jean Williams with 20 and Bunch with 12, while Hilton Thompson had 10.

Bertie girls ran out to an 8-0 lead in their game before Rose finally got on the board in the final minute of the first period and trailed, 8-4 at the horn.

Donna Cullipher finally tied it up at 11-11 for Rose, and they were able to take the lead for the first time at 14-13, as Cullipher hit again. The lead changed hands four more times before Rose gained a 20-19 lead on a jumper by Sheryl Taylor with seven seconds left in the half.

Rose never trailed after that. They slowly pulled away, holding a five-point lead late in the period, which held, 32-27, at the buzzer. In the final period, Rose gave up the first basket, then scored nine straight points for a 41-29 lead, and that set the stage for the victory.

"It's good to get a win," Coach Billy Byrd said. "We took some good shots in the first period, but they just wouldn't fall for us, but we stayed with it and rebounded well and they finally began to drop."

Byrd added that he felt the Rampettes may have taken Bertie a little lightly. "But they came to play too, and we finally realized it and played hard. We still had too many turnovers from bad passes. But we played a better team game."

Cullipher led the Rampette scoring with 12 points, while Taylor added 10. Marie Pruden had 18 to pace Bertie.

Rose's junior varsity was led by Cliff Kilpatrick with 17, while Donald House added 10. Stanley Pugh had 19 and Clarence Hayes had 10 for Bertie.

Williamston Rips Jackets

ROANOKE RAPIDS — Williamston High School swept a three-game set of basketball games from Roanoke Rapids in Northeastern Conference play Friday night.

Williamston won the boys, varsity game, 63-36, and took the girls' game, 50-45. The junior varsity also won, 29-27.

In the girls' game, Williamston kept its winning streak alive, but had to rally in the final quarter to do it. Roanoke Rapids inched out into a 14-12 lead in the first period, then upped that lead to 23-20 at the half.

Roanoke Rapids continued to hold the edge at the end of the third quarter, 33-29. But in the final period, the Tigerettes finally put it together and outhit the Lady Jackets, 21-10, to pull off the winning rally.

Paula Bennett led Williamston with 15 points, while JoAnna Lilley had 12. Pam Andrews led Roanoke Rapids with 15 points.

In the boys' game, Williamston wasted no time in striking for the lead, building up a 15-7 lead after one quarter. The Tigers extended their lead to 31-20 by the end of the half.

The Tigers continued to pull away in the third period, upping their margin to 45-30. They finished off the Yellow Jackets with an 18-6 final period.

Horace Wynne led Williamston with 20 points, while Randy Freeman and Jimmy Barnes each added 10. Chuck Maness had 10 to lead Roanoke Rapids.

Albemarle Tops Greenville Five

ELIZABETH CITY — Albemarle Academy found little opposition from visiting Greenville Christian Academy Friday night, sweeping a trio of games, 52-30 in junior varsity, 43-13 in girl's and 79-59 in boy's.

Albemarle was never seriously threatened in the girl's game as it built a 10-2 first-quarter lead and extended it to 22-5 at halftime. Greenville's lack of offense carried over into the second half to allow Albemarle's girls an easy victory.

Sanderlin scored 12 points to lead Albemarle and was helped out by Spencer's 10. None of the Greenville players scored in double figures.

In the boy's game, Greenville was never able to recover from a 20-8 first-quarter deficit. The Knights trailed 35-19 at halftime and, although they cut the margin by one in the third quarter, Albemarle stretched it back out in the game's final period.

Wayne Banks scored 18 points and Jess Wood 15 for Albemarle, while Tim Sutton had 18, Steve Tyburski 14 and Melvin Wooten 10 for Greenville Christian.

North Lenoir Nips Jaguars

WHEAT SWAMP — Farmville Central and North Lenoir split a pair of Eastern Carolina Conference games Friday night. North Lenoir's boys won their contest, 67-62, while the Farmville Central girls took a 58-49 decision.

Farmville Central's girls ran away to a 10-3 lead in the first period, but then saw North Lenoir turn up the gas in the second frame. The Lady Hawks outhit the Lady Jags, 20-8, to take a 23-18 halftime lead.

Farmville Central regained control in the third period, with a 23-10 advantage. That left the Lady Jaguars ahead, 41-33, as the final quarter opened. Farmville then outhit North Lenoir, 17-16, to wrap it up.

In the boys' contest, North Lenoir streaked out to a 16-8 lead in the first period of play. Then came back with a 15-12 margin in the second period to lead, 31-20, at the half.

Farmville put on a rally in the third period, triming the lead to 43-41. But the Hawks outhit them, 24-21, down the stretch, to hold onto the game and win.

Mitchell Wiggins led North Lenoir with 25, while Amos Pearcill had 18. Donald Freeman had 25 for Farmville, with Calvin Horne adding 13.

Roanoke Rally Tops Wildcats

ROCKY MOUNT — Roanoke High School continued to roll along unbeaten in Eastern Plains Conference play Friday night, downing West Edgecombe High School, 54-45.

West Edgecombe's girls, however, handed the Roanoke lassies their third straight defeat, 45-35. West Edgecombe also won the junior varsity game, 45-38.

West Edgecombe threatened to end Roanoke's streak by taking a 14-12 lead after one period of play. The Wildcats held the lead at halftime, taking a 27-24 margin into the dressing rooms.

Roanoke started to get it together in the third period, and trailed only 39-38, as the final quarter opened. The Redskins then outhit West Edgecombe, 16-6, in the final stanza, to pull ahead and take the win.

Edward Ward led Roanoke with 21 points, while Tim Highsmith had 12 and Jasper Martin had 10. Ben Pope had 20 to pace West Edgecombe.

The Roanoke girls started out in good fashion, gaining a 12-8 lead. But West Edgecombe stayed close and trailed 19-16 at the half.

In the third quarter, the Wildkittens outhit the Squaws, 13-8, and took a 29-27 lead. They then outhit Roanoke, 16-8, in the final period to wrap it up.

Pearson On Pole

RIVERSIDE, Calif. (AP) — The Winston Western 500 Sunday at Riverside could be renamed the "David Pearson Invitational" if the wily veteran driver from Spartanburg, S.C., continues his winning ways in the NASCAR stock car event.

Pearson has won this affair the past two years, and blazed to a new lap record in locking up the pole position for the 1978 race.

Driving his familiar red and white 1976 Mercury, Pearson turned a lap of 113.204 miles per hour around the 2.62-mile, eight-turn Riverside course in qualifying Friday, topping the old lap mark of 112.686 set by Cale Yarborough last year.

Game Is Postponed

GREENSBORO — East Carolina University's women's basketball game with the University of North Carolina Greensboro was postponed Friday night.

The game was rescheduled for Sunday afternoon at 4 p.m. due to power outages in the Greensboro facility.

Vikings Roast Rams, 67-50

Stuff!

D. H. Conley's 6-10 center Al Tyson jams the ball through the hoop after taking a lob pass from a teammate in the third quarter of the Vikings' game with Greene Central Friday night. Tyson had two dunks in the contest and finished with 16 points and 12 rebounds. (Reflector photo by Jim Kyle)

Reflector Sports Writer

HOLLYWOOD — D. H. Conley survived a number of first-quarter turnovers to take a surprisly easy 67-50 victory over Greene Central in an Eastern Carolina Conference basketball game Friday night.

The loss was the fourth in the league this season for the Rams, who dropped to 3-4, while the Vikings remain on top of the heap with a 6-0 conference mark.

Conley committed seven turnovers in the first quarter, but still managed to take an 18-12 lead and the Vikes stretched their margin to 33-18 at halftime. Despite the losses of possession, Conley coach Shelly Marsh was pleased with his team's overall performance in the game's first 16 minutes.

"We had the best first half we've had all year," Marsh said. "We got sloppy in the second half. They stuck it to us in the second half and played us pretty even."

Despite their 15-point halftime margin, the Vikings were never able to break the game open. This was due partly to the fact that Marsh cleared his bench early and allowed each player on the team considerable game time.

"Greene Central played about like I thought they were goint to play," said Marsh.

The Conley coach had praise for forward Mike Cox play on both ends of the court. "Cox had a good offensive game and he contained (James) Best pretty good. Best is a double figures scorer and he got nine points tonight."

Cox defensive work on Best took away much of the Rams' scoring punch and the Vikes got 16 points each from Cox, Al Tyson and Darryl Thompson, while Ricky Rountree added 13. Dale Dixon scored 14 points and Johnny Croom 11 for the Rams.

Marsh also had some kind words for back-up center David Brock, who came in early in the game when Tyson picked up two quick fouls and ended up with seven rebounds. "Brock's rebounding was crucial for us when Tyson got two fouls early," Marsh said. Tyson was the leading rebounder with 12.

Greene Central scored the first basket of the game and kept the contest close for over half of the first quarter. But Tyson got a lob pass and dunked the ball with 3:36 left to give Conley an 8-6 lead and the Vikes were never threatened after that.

Thompson scored a layup after a Conley steal and Tyson hit from close range to answer two buckets by Croom and then Cox canned a pair to give the Vikings a 16-10 lead. Rountree's 17-footer from the key with one second showing made it 18-12 going into the second quarter.

During the opening minutes of the second frame, Conley outscored Greene Central 13-2, including a three-point play by Rountree, who also scored a layup after a great assist from Cox.

That surge made it 31-14 with 3:10 left in the half and Rountree scored again on a hook to make it 33-18 at intermission.

The Rams, who had had a bit of trouble with a full-court press by Conley in the first half, got things straightened out in the third quarter and stayed with the Vikings throughout the period, although they could never get closer than 13 points.

Early in the final quarter, six straight points by Thompson, four from free throws, gave the Vikes a 55-36 lead and Marsh took his starting five out for a rest. That allowed the Rams to cut the margin to 11 points at 61-50 with 2:16 left, but Thompson came back in to hit four foul shots and Tyson added a pair of charity tosses down the stretch to make the final margin 67-50.

Conley's shooting was the key to the easy victory. Although the Vikings took three less shots in the game, they hit seven more. Conley was 27 for 48 (56.3 per cent), while Greene Central was 20 of 51 (39.2 per cent). Conley also held a 33-26 rebounding margin, although the Vikings committed 16 turnovers to 14 for Greene Central.

The victory in the varsity game completed a clean sweep for D. H. Conley, which won in the junior varsity contest 49-47 and in the girl's game 46-29.

The Valkyries had little trouble in gaining their victory, rolling to a 9-4 first-quarter lead and then pushing the margin to 26-13 at the half.

Greene Central cut into the Conley lead a bit in the third period when the Ewes held the Valkyries to just two points. But, Conley still held a 28-19 lead at the end of the frame.

An 18-10 fourth-quarter scoring edge allowed the Valkyries to stretch their lead back out.

Annie Hardy was the only player in the game to hit in double figures. She scored 15 points

The Conley girls are now 5-1 the ECC and 10-2 overall, whi the Ewes drop to 4-2 and 8-6.

The teams will take a night o for exams next Tuesday and back in action while Thursda night when Greene Central wi travel to Ayden-Grifton and Co ley will be at North Pitt.

Firebirds Nip Panthers, 58-52

SPRING HOPE — North Pitt rallied in the fourth quarter, but was unable to overcome a 24-6 second-frame surge by Southern Nash as the Firebirds defeated the Panthers 58-52.

North Pitt was leading 15-11 at the end of the first quarter, but the Firebirds caught fire in the second period, outscoring the Panthers 24-6 to take a 35-21 halftime lead. Each team scored 10 points in the third quarter and then the Panthers started to rally. They outscored the Firebirds by eight points in the last frame, but were unable to catch them.

Dwight Mitchell led all scorers with a sizzling 25 points for Southern Nash. He was aided by Allen Sherrod with 13 and Timmy Tabron with 10. Four North Pitt players placed in double figures: William Knight and Lawaskia Jenkins with 12 each, and Mickey Hines and Reginald Knight with 10 each.

The North Pitt girls overcame a slow start to defeat the Lady Firebirds earlier in the evening by a 38-21 score.

The Pant-HERS trailed 9-5 in the first period, but went up 11-10 at halftime after holding the Lady Firebirds to just one point in the second quarter.

The Pant-HERS held a 9-4 margin in third-quarter scoring and scored 18 points to just seven for Southern Nash in the game's final period.

Jackie Clemmons scored 14 points and Kay Hines 13 for North Pitt, while Southern Nash was led by Lamb with 10.

The North Pitt boys are now 3-4 in the Eastern Carolina Conference, while the girls are 4-3. They play again Thursday night when they host D. H. Conley.

Chargers Top Aycock, 66-57

LITTLEFIELD — Ayden-Grifton used a strong second quarter to power into the lead, then held off a second half rally to defeat Charles B. Aycock Friday night, 66-57.

The Charger girls bowed in an overtime against the Aycock lassies, 56-51. Aycock's junior varsity also claimed a win, 62-39.

In the girls' contest, Aycock eased out into an 11-8 lead in the first quarter of play. Ayden-Grifton hung close, however, and trailed only 21-19 at intermission.

In the third quarter, Aycock was able to add only a point to its lead, and took a 31-28 advantage into the final quarter. Ayden-Grifton fought back and Marie Lewis put them ahead, 43-42 with two free throws. Then, with just seconds left, Aycock tied it up, when Helen Jones hit a free throw for a 43-43 deadlock.

Then, in the overtime, Aycock outhit the Chargerettes, 13-8, to claim the win.

Rene Hales led Aycock with 20 points, while Gail Batts added 19, Karen Haseley led Ayden-Grifton with 14, while Marie Lewis and Shanda Brock each had 10.

In the boys' game, Aycock pulled out to a 13-10 lead after one period. But the Chargers took charge in the second period with a 25-12 advantage, running out to a 35-25 halftime advantage.

In the third quarter, Aycock cut two off the lead, but the Ayden-Grifton boys still led, 45-37. Ayden-Grifton outraced Aycock to the win, 21-20, to seal the victory.

Frankie Dail led Ayden-Grifton with 17 points, while James Leggett had 16 and Shelton McCarter had 14. Dail and Leggett also each had 12 rebounds as the Chargers held a 47-37 advantage in that department.

Bucs Have Good Times

Two East Carolina University swimmers, along with the freestyle relay team continue to be ranked nationally, although all slipped in the rankings this week.

According to the College Swimming Coaches Association, John McCauley continues to be ranked in both the 50-yard freestyle and the 100-yard freestyle.

McCauley is still second in the nation in the 50 freestyle with his best time of 20.79 seconds. Steve Allbritton of Florida State leads with a time of 20.70.

The 400-yard freestyle relay team, which led the nation for the first two weeks of the rankings, slipped to third this week. The ECU time of 3:04.83, trails that of California, 3:03.5, and Arizona State, 3:04.20.

Jaguar Matmen Down S. Nash

Can Anything Stop Wildcats?

By The Associated Press

Heavy snowstorms have curtailed some of the college basketball schedule this weekend, but it might take a hurricane, tornado and blizzard combined to stop Kentucky.

The top-ranked Wildcats, 13-0, took to the road for a game at Mississippi State today that would decide the leadership of the Southeastern Conference. Kentucky Coach Joe Hall, whose Wildcats are 5-0 in the SEC, a game ahead of Mississippi State, sounded like he might be giving some people a snow job with his analysis of the game.

"Mississippi State is a veteran club," said Hall. "They'll be putting all their efforts into this game. A win would vault them into a tie for first place. Right now they are playing as well as anybody in the conference."

Anybody except Kentucky, which has demolished its SEC opposition so far this year.

In other games involving Top 10 teams Saturday, weather permitting, Washington will take on No. 2 Marquette; No. 4 Indiana State, losers the last time out at Southern Illinois, journeyed to Illinois State; Maryland is at No. 5 North Carolina; sixth-ranked Arkansas entertains Texas Christian; No. 8 Kansas hosts Kansas State and 10th-rated Michigan State plays Iowa.

In the Second Ten, No. 11 Syracuse is at home to Fordham; No. 12 Providence visits Connecticut for a game originally scheduled at the Hartford Civic Center, where the roof caved in earlier this week; No. 13 Virginia is at Clemson. No. 14 Holy Cross is at Fairfield; 16th-ranked Nevada-Las Vegas plays at Wichita State; No. 17 Duke visits La Salle; DePaul, 18th-rated, plays Dayton, and 20th-ranked New Mexico is at Texas El Paso.

In Sunday action, No. 3 UCLA, seeking to avenge their only defeat this season, will be at Notre Dame.

New Orleans Wins On James' Late Jumper

By BOB GREENE
AP Sports Writer

A blizzard that buried a large section of the country snowed out four National Basketball Association games Friday, while in New Orleans the Portland Trail Blazers ran into Aaron James and all that Jazz.

James sank a 15-foot jumper with nine seconds remaining to lift the New Orleans Jazz to a 101-100 victory over Portland. A desperation jumper five seconds later by Lionel Hollins was way off the mark and the Jazz ran out the clock.

"New Orleans made the tough shots and the good plays and they were more aggressive than we were," said Trail Blazer Coach Jack Ramsey. "After the first period we were not in control and had too many turnovers and forced shots."

It was only Portland's seventh loss this season against 35 victories. For the Jazz, it was their fourth straight victory.

Because of the storm, Denver at Buffalo, Kansas City at Boston, Seattle at New Jersey and Cleveland at Chicago were postponed. In other games Friday, San Antonio crushed Indiana 112-82, Houston defeated detroit 118-108, Golden State downed Phoenix 119-104 and Los Angeles clobbered Washington 121-99.

Spurs 112, Pacers 82

Reserve Allan Bristow scored 18 points to lead San Antonio past Indiana. The Pacers hit only 4 of 28 shots in the second quarter as the Pacers scored only 30 points in the first two periods, the fewest ever scored in a half in the franchise's history.

Warriors 119, Suns 104

Martin Academy Defeats Chowan

In the girls' game, Martin rushed out to a 19-2 lead in the first period. They ran that out to 39-9 by halftime and relaxed the rest of the way.

Chowan outhit Martin, 8-7, in the third period but was outhit by the same score in the final quarter as Martin won easily.

Lib Johnson led Martin with 19 points, while Lou Johnson added 11.

In the boys' game, Martin edged ahead, 12-8, in the first period. Chowan came back with a 15-6 advantage in the second quarter, gaining a 23-18 halftime lead.

But in the third period, Martin rallied, 18-9, and moved ahead, 36-32. Then, the Pioneers outhit Chowan, 23-15, in the final quarter to win it.

Victor VanNortwick led Martin with 22 points, while Grady Smith had 16 and Clif Haislip had 15. Joey Towe led Chowan with 13, while Richard Bass had 11.

Pantego Downs Bears, 77-65

BEAR GRASS — Pantego's basketball teams proved too powerful for Bear Grass Friday night by sweeping three consecutive games, 61-22 in junior varsity, 45-34 in girl's competition and 77-65 in the boy's game.

In the boy's game, the Warriors built up a 36-26 halftime lead and then coasted home for the win.

Pantego was up 16-14 at the end of the first quarter and outscored the Bears 20-12 in the second frame. The Warriors were able to extend that lead by two points in the second quarter.

Four players from each team scored in double figures in the game. Pantego's John Booth led all scorers with 24 points, getting help from Wayne Jones with 18, Steve Mann with 16 and Andrea McCloud with 11. Duane Baker scored 19 points to pace Bear Grass, while teammate Watson Rogers hit 16, Jesse Bullock scored 14 and Jackie Harrison added 11.

In the girl's game, Bear Grass fell behind in the initial period, but closed the gap at halftime only to be outplayed in the second half.

The Lady Bears trailed 12-6 at the end of the first quarter, but pulled to 25-24 at intermission. Bear Grass fell back in the third period and the Lady Warriors put the game away in the final period.

Vanisha Gray had 21 and Ingrid O'Neal 16 for Pantego, while Debra Jo Peaks led the Lady Bears with 13 points. Bear Grass will host Williamston on Tuesday night.

THE GRIFTON SHAD FESTIVAL shad fishing contest has officially opened, although the first shad probably won't be caught until early next month.

The contest, an annual part of the Shad Festival, began on Jan. 1. The peak run of shad in the Grifton area is during the month of March, while the dates for the 1978 Festival are April 14-16.

Any hickory shad taken on hook and line in the Grifton area may be entered in the contest by having it weighed at the Sport Shop in Grifton. Prizes of fishing equipment, donated by manufacturers and distributors, will be presented to the winning anglers at the Festival on Friday, April 14.

Prizes will be given for the first shad entered, the three largest shad caught by adults, the three largest caught by children 13 and under, and for the fisherman who travels the farthest to fish in Grifton.

Only hickory shad, a smaller cousin of the American shad, may be entered in the contest. The bony fish is a real fighter when hooked on ultra-light spinning tackle. Most fishermen use a dart and spoon rig for catching the fish. The most popular shad fishing areas around Grifton are Pitchkettle and Contentnea Creeks.

ABF Bass Tournaments In N. C.

A total of seven American Bass Fisherman fishing tournaments will be held in the state of North Carolina this year, according to Guy N. Eaker, the state's ABF representative.

Five tournaments will be held at various sites around the state and then the top 40 fishermen will compete in a fish-off. Another fish-off will be held for the top six bass fishermen.

- March 12, Lake Wylie, Tackle Box Marina
- April 1, High Rock, Tamarac Marina
- May 13, Lake Hickory, Wettenburg Access Marina
- June 24, Badin Lake, Forest Marina
- July 22, Lake Norman, Midway Marina
- Sept. 9, Top 40 Fish-Off, unknown location
- Oct. 14, Top Six Fish-Off, Lake Wylie, Tackle Box Marina

The tournaments will be scored on a 40-point basis with 40 points to the winner, 39 points to the runner-up, and so on. Each tournament will be held from 7:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. The entry fee for each tournament is $20, with a $100 entry fee for the Top Six event.

For more information, contact Guy E. Eaker, Rt. 3, Box 255, Cherryville, N. C. 28021 or Nelson Cratt, Box 244, Cherryville, N. C. 28021.

Striped Bass Study Underway

Concern of commercial and sport fishermen over a decline in striped bass populations has led the North Carolina Wildlife Resources Commission to conduct a study of the fish in coastal waters.

"We're undertaking the coastal study to try and determine if the populations of the fish have declined in the coastal and joint coastal-inland waters," Don Baker, chief of the Inland Fisheries Division of the NCWRC commented. "We don't know if there's a decline or not; that's what we're trying to find out."

Catch records by the Commission's Marine Fisheries Division showed striper landings down this year. In 1970, the total catch for commercial fishermen was 1,753,000 pounds. In 1976, the total catch was 1,050,000 pounds. But, within this framework, there were several fluctuations.

"We're trying to find out why this catch fluctuates and how many fish were taken by sport fishermen versus commercial fishermen so we can manage the fishery better," Baker said. "We do know that the catch by sport fishermen is considerable. In Albemarle Sound, recreational fishermen take about double the commercial catch, according to recent studies."

The concern over a decline of stripers is not limited to North Carolina. Fishermen as far north as New England have been concerned this year, and many are pointing the finger at PCB pollution in the Hudson River and the Chesapeake Bay as the culprit.

"We do know that PCB can affect the fish, but we don't know if that's what's happening here," Baker said. "We've found some PCB concentration in striper eggs, and these compounds can affect the hatchability of eggs. The larger fish, which are caught off the outer banks, probably do migrate up to the Hudson River and Chesapeake Bay where there are higher PCB levels. The smaller fish seem to disappear at a certain time of year, but we don't know if they go outside or not. A tagging study is being done that should answer some of the questions in the future."

PLAN YOUR HOME

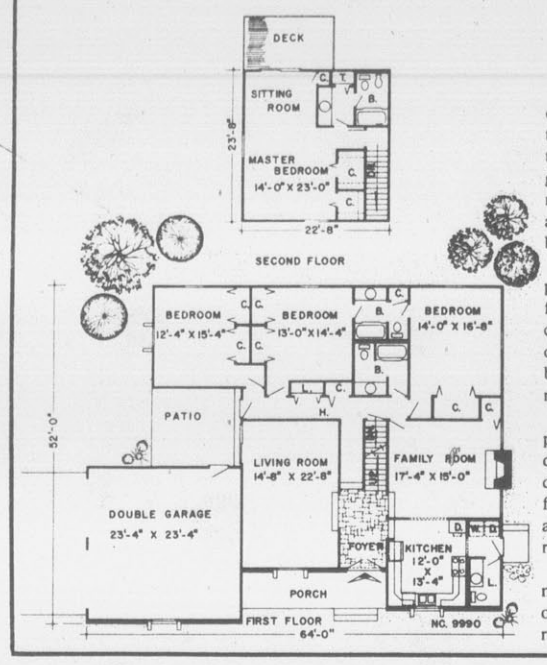

MASTER SUITE SHOWCASE OF PLAN

By Jerry Bishop

Dominating the interior and exterior of the Merion, a gracious four bedroom design, is the outstanding master bedroom suite with private deck. Besides the remaining bedrooms, also lavish, the home boasts immense living areas, tiled foyer, and a general air of luxury.

French Provincial in inspiration, the Merion's facade blends mansard roof, softly curved arched lintels, dormers, and double entry doors. Shake shingles and brick create an exterior that is warmly rustic, and inside, a tiled foyer maintains that feeling.

The foyer is raised one step, a device that gives a sunken effect to all connecting rooms. At left, the 22 ft. living room welcomes guests, while at right, the family room speaks relaxed informality and offers closet and wood-burning fireplace.

The U-shaped kitchen is replete with cabinets and enjoys a front view. Adjoining the kitchen, a versatile mud room offers laundry facilities, half bath, and an ideal place to remove wet or muddy clothing.

While living areas are appropriately elegant, the sleeping quarters are spotlighted in this design and include three first floor bedrooms. Each is large and well-closeted, and the three rooms share two full baths.

Crowning the plan is the master bedroom suite, set alone on the upper level. The 23-ft. room is lavished with two walk-in closets, a sitting room, a compartmented full bath, and two smaller closets. Sliding glass doors open the room to a private rooftop deck for resting in uninterrupted quiet.

ON THE HOUSE

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

The survey of readers' preferences in houses they might have built showed that 65 percent would rather have one large bedroom and two small ones than three of medium size...that 67 percent preferred the laundry near the kitchen rather than the bedrooms.. . and that 76 percent wanted a family room rather than a dining room if only one could be had.

Next came questions about living rooms, garages and bathrooms. Would you rather have a large living room and a small dining room or a medium living room and a medium dining room? Do you prefer a one-car garage that would allow an extra room in the house or a two-car garage? And do you want one bathroom in the master bedroom and one outside it or two bathrooms outside it?

There was almost a dead heat in the replies about living room and dining room sizes. In favor of a large living room and a small dining room were 50.1 percent of the responders. Supporting a medium-sized living room and a medium-sized dining room were 49.9 percent of the readers. This can be called a moderate surprise, since several architects who were questioned were sure the large living room-small dining room concept would get the most votes, although all admitted it would be by a small margin. Admittedly, there might have been a lack of precision in the question, since quite a few persons wanted to know what was meant by large and what was meant by small. "Too many builders," said one woman, "seem to think a room 11 feet by 11 feet or thereabouts is large, when it's really uncomfortably small." A few who specified both rooms should be medium-sized added that the two rooms should be in combination to provide one very large area.

A two-car garage ran far ahead of a one-car garage — 87 percent to 13 percent even though the smaller garage would mean an extra room in the house. "What nearly everybody needs," said one man, "is more space on the outside to store equipment needed for upkeep, toys, etc. That's why so many garages are filled with everything imaginable except automobiles." The 13-percent readers were very emphatic in their choice, as typified by the comment: "It's silly to ask for a two-car garage, even if you have two cars, when you can get an extra room instead. When you go to sell the house, an extra room will add to the value of the house by a considerable amount; a two-car garage rather than a one-car garage will add very little if anything."

Also one-sided was the voting about bathrooms. Nearly 80 percent said one bathroom should be in the master bedroom, one outside it, as against almost 20 percent who thought neither bathroom should be in the main bedroom. Along with this tally came many suggestions about a small or one-half bathroom somewhere else in the house regardless of where the other bathrooms might be located and even if there were only one other bathroom. As one woman put it, "The biggest mistake we made was in not having a little bathroom in the laundry room where it would be reached from the outside without going through any other rooms. Of course, we are retired and spend much time in our backyard, but I would imagine such a bathroom would be just as necessary for a family with small children."

The next article will discuss the answers to questions about attics versus basements, fireplace locations, traditional versus contemporary, and an extra room versus an enclosed rear patio.

(If you fix things around the house, you will find much valuable information in Andy Lang's handbook, "Practical Home Repairs," available by sending $1.50 to this newspaper at Box 5, Teaneck, N.J. 07666.)

Waterbeds Are On Increase

PASSAIC, N.J. (UPI) — Waterbeds, initially a California fad in the 1960s, are today an established business, with annual retail sales of $250 million now expected to increase at a rate of 25 percent annually. Approximately 20 pounds of specially formulated plastic are used to make a waterbed, notes the Pantasote Co., a major plastics supplier.

OLDEST HOLIDAY

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Valentine's Day is the oldest holiday celebrated in the Western world, dating back some 1,500 years, say researchers for Hallmark Cards.

British Country Cooking Saluted

NEW YORK (UPI) — John Tovey, whose country hotel in the English Lake District has become world famed for its remarkable food, will be conducting the "Festival of British Country Cooking" at the Hotel Pierre in March.

The theaterlike ambiance of a meal at Tovey's Miller Howe Hotel overlooking Lake Windermere will be re-created. There, the lights dim like a theatrical opening night and an unobtrusive staff of young waiters begins the "performance," serving a set meal, new each day.

Adopt A Conservation Calendar

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures

Every American has a responsibility to preserve our freedoms — and conserving our resources is one way it can be done.

That message from well-known international designer Roger Rasbach is meant to encourage patriotic citizens to do their own thing in eliminating waste from their personal, family and community life. But it isn't easy, admits Rasbach, one of the first to own a solar conversion home, considered one of the most energy-efficient homes in the United States.

Rasbach's Provident Planner, published last year, explained that judicious planning without waste is the battle of our time. The book was written in an attempt to inspire people to go about it from every principle observed by our forefathers — durability, economy, conservation, permanenc, naturalness, unity.

Now Rasbach has introduced a Conservation Calendar, a daily reminder of how the good life can be preserved for our progeny by conserving what we have today.

"As we begin again to identify with the spiritual principles which created our country and evolved the traits of family life, more than valuable resources will be saved ... future historians may record this as the most valuable event of the century, a turning point when the truly good life was restored to America," Rasbach points out.

But everyone must become involved in the effort.

The calendar which Rasbach dedicated to Ima Hogg, the founder of the Mental Health Association in Texas and a true conservationist, is set up to be a file in a drawer. The backing becomes a folder and the file cards are kept encased within.

"Energency" as he calls the energy aspect of the calendar, begins at the first month with listings for the cost and use of electricity, gas, fuel, water, oil and even seasonal shopping buys from white sales to avocados. Another month is an "energency" checklist for family activities. For example, "Do you plan individual family activities that pool the use of the automobile?" It suggests, too, that microwave cooking may save 50 to 75 percent energy over conventional cooking.

There are suggestions for organizing a household; how to have good mental health about it; how to be a good shopper; replacing some electrical things with their nonelectrical counterparts.

Some file cards are organized for records of transportation, major repairs, consumer supplies and other listings including security, medical, fire and consumer assistance.

There are cards for listing such facts as equipment warranties and service manuals. It is a good, convenient arrangement for listing serial numbers and service dates of major appliances — dishwasher, garbage disposal, freezer, washer — as well as of small appliances and miscellaneous items such as cameras and firearms.

Here's the Answer

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

Q. — We are thinking of having a fireplace installed, but are somewhat confused by conflicting claims regarding its efficiency. We know that the manufactured types give up more heat, but what we have in mind is one of the old-fashioned brick fireplaces. Can you help us? Is there any report available that will give us the facts?

A. — The type of fireplace you want can best be summed up by a report issued by the United States Department of Agriculture, which said that "fireplaces are used more for personal enjoyment than for heating efficiency." A wood fire in the living room or family room warms those fairly near it, but doesn't do very much about warming a house or even more than a single room. There is no denying, however, that it has an esthetic and psychological value. Ever notice the nice feeling you get when visiting someone who has a fireplace roaring as you enter the house? As for reports on fireplaces, there are dozens of them available. The most recent I have seen was put out by the Norwich Laboratory of Norwich, N.Y., and says that more than 90 percent of the heat from an open fireplace goes up the chimney. There are many heat recovery devices on the market designed to force more of that wasted heat into the home. There are few book publishers that haven't issued publications on fireplaces. Your local library and book store carry some of them.

Q. — When a screw works loose and is too big for the hole it was in, what is the standard procedure for plugging the hole so that the screw will hold securely when redriven?

A. — There is no standard procedure. Everybody has his or her pet method for resetting the screw. You can place a little steel wool in the hole and then redrive the screw. Or you can fill the opening with wood putty or plastic wood and reset the screw when the filler has hardened. You can do the same thing, but put the screw in place gently and let the filler harden around it. You can close the hole with a wooden plug. You can smear an epoxy glue around the threads of the screw to keep it firmly in place when the glue hardens. Or you can simply use a larger screw.

Q. — I stored two large boards in our basement several months ago. Now that I am ready to use them, I find they have warped considerably. Is there any way these can be straightened without going through some elaborate process?

A. — It depends on what you consider an elaborate process. One simple way — that works most of the time — is to place one board on top of the other with the convex sides outside; that is, so there is an open space between the boards at the center. You now will need a clamp, which is tightened around the centers of the boards, bringing them together. Inspect the boards every 24 hours (take off the clamp) and see whether the warpage has disappeared. If not, reclamp and repeat the process every 24 hours. If it is necessary that the boards be straightened in a shorter period of time, wet the boards before clamping them, but more frequent inspections then are necessary to prevent warpage in different parts of the boards.

U.S. Bathrooms May Add Bidet

LOS ANGELES, Calif. (UPI) — The bidet, long-recognized in Europe as an essential bathroom appliance for personal hygiene, may soon be revolutionizing the bathroom habits of Americans, reports Rusco Industries, a maker of bidets.

Originally developed for use by Napoleon's cavalry in the early 1800s, the bidet — "little horse" in French — is now a standard item in millions of Continental bathrooms.

GARDEN CLINIC

Q. I recently received a cyclamen while in the hospital. How should I care for it? (Mrs. H.F., Weaverville)

A. For an extended color display, give your cyclamen good light while protecting it from direct sun. An ideal place is an unshaded north or east window, close to the glass. Keep the plant cool — 50 degrees at night and 60 to 65 degrees during the day. Provide plenty of water. Check soil moisture regularly, but keep water out of the foliage crowns. (Joe Love, extension horticulturist)

Q. What is a nectarine? (S.B., Clemmons)

A. A fuzzless peach. It rots easily and can get killed by frost as quickly as a peach. Nectarines are not recommended for the mountains, and they do only fair in the upper Piedmont. Chances of growing them successfully are much better in the Coastal Plain and lower Piedmont. (Mel Kolbe, extension horticulturist)

Q. My success in growing pears has been spotty. Is this true generally across North Carolina? (H.F., Apex)

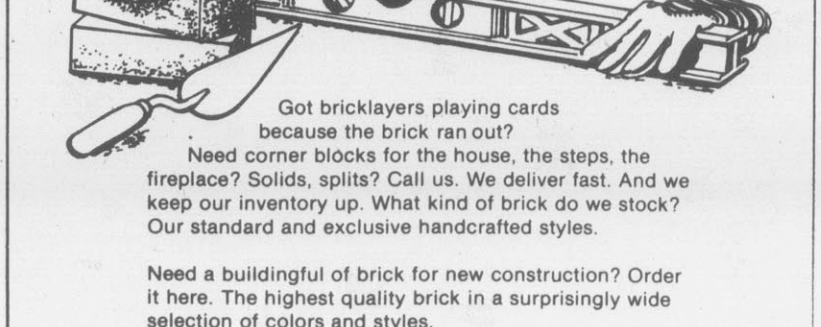

A. Yes. It is possible to grow pears in the Coastal Plain, but the big problems there are fire blight and frost. The chances of getting a crop elsewhere in the state are only fair. Fire blight may not be quite as much of a problem in the Piedmont and Mountains but frost is a problem everywhere. The old style Kieffer does well most years but does not have high quality fruit. Most other varieties get fire blight easily. Moonglow, Maxine and Magness, which is pollen sterile, are large pears which often do fair to good. Sechel and Orient are poorer quality but often fill the need. (Mel Kolbe, extension horticulturist)

Q. I have been unable to "reflower" my kalanchoe plant. What am I doing wrong? (Mrs. S.G., Statesville)

A. Kalanchoes require from five to six weeks of continuous short days or long nights. Keeping your kalanchoe in a room where an electric light remains on periodically during the evening will prevent it from flowering. Either keep it in a dark room from 5 to 7 p.m. each evening until 7 or 8 a.m. the next day, or cover it with a box during this period. (Joe Love, extension horticulturist)

Change On Boardwalk

EDITOR'S NOTE — Atlantic City is preparing for its gambling days, though the first casino won't open for a while yet. Most people see splendid changes ahead for the old resort, but the New Atlantic City may have no place for the poor and elderly, a sizable part of its populace today.

By JOHN BARBOUR
AP Newsfeatures Writer

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — The herringbone gray tweed of the Boardwalk is stitched neatly between the slate Atlantic and the bizarre jumble of shops and hotels, a melancholy whisper of a time that used to be.

The old hotels are mostly closed now. The tired promenade is only four miles long, half its former length.

There's a bated breath in this town — as when an aging lady down on her luck gets a facelift in expectation of a new life, something richer, more exciting, a little more dangerous.

For Atlantic City, the future means gambling — craps, twenty-one, baccarat, slots. But it will take a while. Everyone expected instant miracles when New Jersey voters agreed late in 1976 to a modicum of "sin" to revive the town. Everyone expected a storm of big spenders to descend and bid up the price of everything. No such thing.

It will be Easter before the first casino opens — at the earliest. It will be two years before the second opens — at the earliest.

Still, some out-of-town money is buying up Boardwalk shops in expectation of the gambling surge. Property values have tripled and more. A 125-room hotel which brought $871,000 in 1964 sold recently for $2 million. An old house that wouldn't bring $3,200 when it was offered 10 years ago sold recently for $25,000

Behind the occasional fast buck and the golden visions of much more lies the city's bleak, perplexing present.

Atlantic City has accumulated a higher proportion of old people than any city except St. Augustine, Fla. The population of about 42,000 includes 10,000 school children, a work force of 19,000, half of them out of work (a figure unchanged since the gambling vote). And there are 10,000 senior citizens. They live in old houses and converted hotels. They sun themselves on the Boardwalk and eat White Tower eggs for dinner.

Old men prowl the beaches carefully in age-measured steps, moving their metal detectors back and forth like magic wands, looking for the buried treasures of last summer, lost coins and watches, rings and things. Most carry small spades to dig into the sand.

Reese Palley owns several opulent jewelry and gift shops, advertises himself as "merchant to the rich," learned his economics at the London School, serves as chairman of the State Lottery Commission ("where we mostly sit around and dream up games"). He notes that Atlantic City is unique in several ways:

— Because of environmental regulations, it's the only place on the Atlantic shore from Sandy Hook to Cape May — a stretch of 140 miles — where high rises can be built.

— It commands precious coastline.

"The land has achieved new function," he says. "Gradually, over the next five or 10 years, land that's been used for low income and senior citizen housing will become so expensive it will find higher use. No one will be able to stay here on the same basis as before."

Al Marks, an investment specialist who for years has run the Miss America Pageant, disagrees. "Some say the whole island will be turned over to gambling. That's fallacious. There's room for both casino gambling and housing."

Most, like former Mayor Joseph Bradway Jr., an Atlantic City banker, expect that convention business will greatly expand, and that it ultimately will push the poor, the elderly, even many of the middle class out of the city. But it will happen gradually.

The current mayor, Joseph Lazarow, says, "the only misgivings I have is the anxiety of the people, that they may not be patient enough to wait for things to come true."

From his seventh-floor office in City Hall, he can see the Atlantic and the dead hotels to his left. The Spanish Community and the inlet are behind him. The bleak row of ghetto houses are to his right. More than half of them are over 50 years old. Most are classified as substandard.

"Look," he says, "all those houses are old, wooden, impossible to repair. You have to build a new city."

Get Married To 'Get Ahead'

NEW YORK (UPI) — Executives enjoying fashionable "meaningful relationships" without the marriage committment could be losing out on promotions, said John R. Wareham, president of Wareham Associates, Inc., an international executive selection firm.

In addressing a business luncheon for senior executives, he said that "Board level decision makers tend to be ambivalent toward executives who fail to take up the marriage committment. They see such an "irregular relationship" as a sign of instability, non-conformity, and a possible leftist orientation.

Twelve Resist Sales Tax Boost

CHICAGO (UPI) — Twelve states have maintained a constant rate of sales tax during the past decade, and only three states — Maryland, Missouri and Nebraska — boosted their rates in 1977, Commerce Clearing House reports.

The 12 which resisted the rate rise were Alabama, Arkansas, Colorado, Georgia, Hawaii, Idaho, Kansas, Michigan, North Carolina, Oklahoma, West Virginia and Wyoming.

CCH noted that in the case of Nebraska, the rate rose from three to 3.5 percent in 1977 but reverted back to three percent on New Year's Day. The rate in Maryland went from four to five percent on June 1, 1977, and Missouri's sales tax levy rose from three to three and an eighth percent on July 1, 1977. Additionally, Rhode Island, Tennessee and Washington extended rates which had been slated to drop.

LIFE ALERT™ = Your Link to Life

Dealers Needed

Fantastic, compact, wireless LIFE ALERT transmitter can be carried in a pocket, attached to a wheelchair, belt, bed or walker. In an emergency a button on the transmitter is pushed, and Life Alert goes into operation.

If the person has an emergency, he or she simply presses the Life Alert button and a radio signal is transmitted to the central computer station. This will then institute the emergency call to the rescue teams (ambulance, paramedics, police or fire). The rescue team will then be activated to the person in distress.

And, when you consider that over half of all heart attack fatalities die before they reach the hospital, minutes are very important. But, if you have a heart attack, a stroke or an accident—or if you're attacked in your home—you may not be able to reach or even dial the telephone.

That's why we have developed Life Alert. With the push of a button, Life Alert makes that emergency phone call and summons help for you.

Please call or write if you would like information on Life Alert for 1) personal use; 2) becoming a salesman; 3) becoming a dealer.

Business Notes

NEW EDITOR

C. Craig Wilson, a Greenville native, is the new editor of the NACHA Quarterly Update, official bulletin of the National Automated Clearing House Association.

Wilson will also assume staff support responsibilities for the association's education and communications efforts, including the 1978 annual NACHA conference to be held in April in New Orleans.

Prior to joining the association staff, Wilson was vice president of Wills, Pennington and Associates, a public relations and advertising firm in Raleigh. He also has worked as a reporter for The Raleigh Times.

SERVICE ADDED

Darrell Hignite, local Realtor and president of Hignite& Co. Inc., announced the addition of Translo Relocation Services to the firm.

Hignite said that Translo members are independent brokers linked together throughout the United States and Canada. Translo, he noted, refers to Transfer Location Corp.

SEEK RATE ADJUSTMENTS

J. C. Cluen, president of Carolina Telephone, announced that the company will file an application with the North Carolina Utilities Commission to restructure its rates for basic local telephone service, extended area service, and some miscellaneous charges.

Cluen said that the proposed rates are needed by the company to provide additional revenues necessary to maintain dependable communications. He noted that the proposal actually contains rate decreases for some services.

The official noted that the new rates, if granted, are expected to increase the company's gross income by $5.5 million annually. The last general rate increase for the company was filed in December of 1974, he added.

GRANT PRESENTED

The Du Pont Co. gave $34,000 to North Carolina State University to support the chemical and mechanical engineering departments.

Du Pont officials gave an additional $5,000 to the university for its efforts to recruit minority students into engineering.

CLUB HONOR

Richard L. Tucker, special representative for Jefferson Standard Life Insurance Co. in Greenville, qualified as a member of the company's 1978 President's Club, top honor group for agents.

The announcement was made by Max R. Joyner, CLU, Jefferson Standard's Greenville regional agency manager, following notification from the company's home office in Greensboro.

Membership in the club, according to Joyner, is earned by producing over $1,200,000 in paid business during the preceding calendar year, depending upon the representative's years of service.

RECORD YEAR

Planters National Bank reported its sixth consecutive record year in earnings and assets for 1977.

In the bank's fourth-quarter report to shareholders, president and chairman James B. Powers noted that net income for the quarter was up 13.8 per cent to $685,000 from $602,000. On a per average share basis, the increase was eight cents, he said, from 62 cents to 70 cents.

Directors, it was noted, authorized the payment of 76 cents per share for 1977 dividends, an increase of 10.1 per cent over the 69 cents paid in 1976.

Assets at year-end were per cent from last year $290,023,000.

CREDIT ROSE

According to weekly figures released by the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond, bank credit at 27 large commercial banks rose $450,836,000 in the week ended Jan. 11, raising bank credit outstanding to a level of $23,857,637,000.

Net loans, adjusted — total loans exclusive of loans to other banks and loan valuation reserves — increased $358,829,000, while total investments increased $92,007,000.

Craft Program Grows In Popularity

"Crafts have really become a booming thing," said Mrs. Carol Whiteford, special activities director of the Greenville Recreation and Parks Department.

"For anyone who has done a craft of any kind, the personal feeling of doing something especially for someone else makes the world of difference in a gift."

The junior crafts program was attempted for children seven to 14 years old about three to four years ago, but did not continue as a regular scheduled class because of lack of interest, said Mrs. Whiteford.

But since the program was restarted two years ago, it has grown in popularity and changes in the schedule of the classes has resulted in a doubling of attendance.

According to Mrs. Whiteford, there was only one section of the class on Wednesday night from seven to nine o'clock. "But since, the class has been divided into a Monday afternoon group for the seven-nine year olds, which meets from 3:30 to 5. The Wednesday night class is now for 10-14 year olds."

"This allows the younger group of students to do work more on a level that puts them in compe ion with children their own a "

Projects undertaken for the younger group include seasonal crafts, projects for parents and of course, projects for the children such as sand paintings, rock creatures and wall hangings.

"At times," Mrs. Whitefore said, "Projects are done that are easy in order to build confidence in the child. At other times more difficult ones are used.

"Some projects allow more creativity than others and children are encouraged to use their own ideas in their work although at times this may not result in the most attractive finished project.

"In the younger age group, the attendance is surprisingly largely male. In this particular session that is being held now, a child from the EARTH group is being integrated into the program to be in a more normalized situation," she added.

"All of the children who participate in the program seem to enjoy coming, doing their work and socializing with the other children. For many — after sitting all day in school, it is hard to sit and concentrate for too long, so the class tries to allow for some freedom of movement around the room — sometimes to different stations to do different parts of their project. Refreshments are served for break and if projects are finished early, games are played until time to leave," Mrs. Whiteford continued.

Mrs. Patsy Denson, of the Recreation and Parks Department staff, assists Mrs. Whiteford on Monday afternoons.

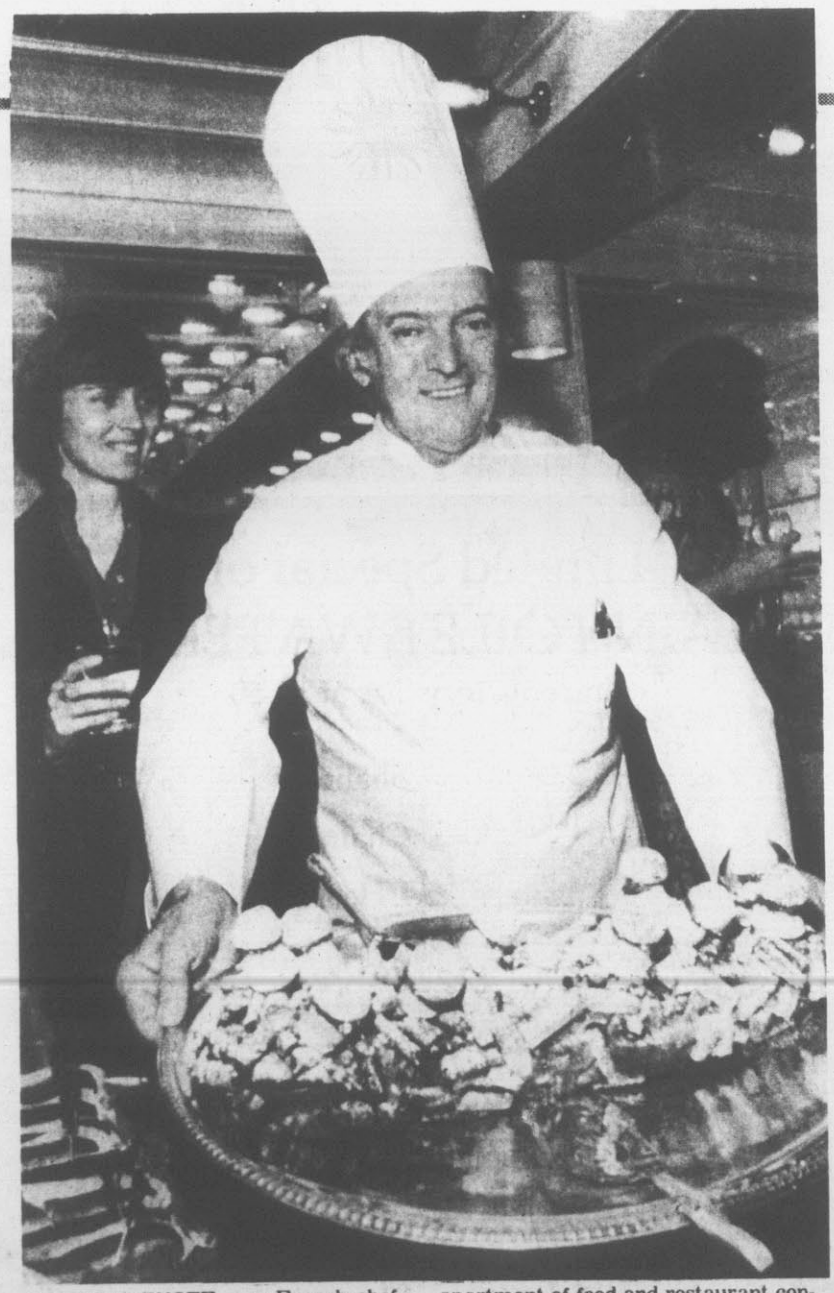

For the older age group, more complicated and involved projects are undertaken. Sometimes these projects can be completed in one night's class and sometimes they take more than one class period.

"For me, as an instructor, the Wednesday night group has to be my favorite because they do quite a few projects that I enjoy doing. It's always easier to teach something that you enjoy ' doing yourself.

"This group which now consist of all girls is a very interesting group. Most of them are the age of turning from children into young adults and they are an enjoyable group to work with. Their interest span is much longer than the younger children and they really take an interest in what they are doing. Often they bring projects they have done at home to share with others and many pick up on a particular craft and expand on it to where it becomes their hobby," Mrs. Whiteford said.

Chef Gives A Tasting Party

By JEANNE LESEM
UPI Family Editor

The invitation called it a pastry tasting to judge pear tarts and chocolate eclairs prepared by four French patissiers, three of whom operate shops in New York City.

It was actually a publication party for "Lenotre's Book of Desserts and Pastries" (Barron's $15.95). Gaston Lenotre is among France's most famous chefs.

Guests voted his eclairs first by a large margin, but his pear tarts ran a poor second to those from one of the New York shops. The winners were much sweeter and their pear flavor less apparent.

"The pear tart that won tonight wouldn't be sold in France," said George Lang, the food and restaurant consultant at whose apartment the party took place. "In France they want to taste the pears.

Lenotre's book was published originally in 1975 in France. The American edition was revised and adapted from the French by Philip and Mary Hyman, an American couple living in Paris. Lenotre's daughter, Sylvie, tested the recipes in her small home kitchen.

In an interview, the chef's daughter said it was her first experience with cooking. She figured if she could follow the recipes, inexperienced American cooks could, too.

"We only chose recipes that could be made at home," she added. "In France, pies and big tarts and eclairs usually would be bought at patisseries. But women often make cakes, charlottes and souffles at home.

"In rural areas and towns that don't have good patisseries, women also make eclairs at home."

In addition to pastries, cakes, custards, cookies, creams and dried fruits cooked in wine, there is an unusual recipe for currant jelly, an essential ingredient in many French pastries.

Chocolate eclairs from "Lenotre's Desserts and Pastries" are easy to make but time consuming.

The book gives directions for three different quantities of pate a chou (pastry dough) and two each for pastry cream filling and chocolate icing:

The following will make 10 standard size eclairs:

Dough: preheat oven to 425 degrees Fahrenheit. Break 2 to 3 large eggs into a measuring cup and beat just to mix the whites and yolks; measure half a cup of the eggs into a small bowl and set aside. Refrigerate or freeze leftovers for other uses.

In a small, heavy saucepan place one fourth cup each of milk and water, a generous one fourth teaspoon of salt, one half teaspoon of granulated sugar and three and a half tablespoons of butter. Measure half a cup of unsifted flour and set aside.

Bring the milk mixture slowly to a boil. Remove from heat, add flour all at once and beat vigorously with a wooden spoon, about one minute or until it comes away from the inside of the pan and the spoon.

Transfer the dough to a warm, dry mixing bowl. Add about one third of the beaten egg, mixing it in with the spoon. Add the remaining egg by halves, beating each time until dough is smooth.

Using a pastry bag with a five-eighths inch nozzle, form 10 (4-inch long) eclair shells on a buttered and floured baking sheet. Dust each eclair lightly with confectioners' sugar so their shapes will be more even after baking.

Bake 15 minutes on center shelf of preheated oven. Reduce heat to 400 degrees and prop oven door ajar with the handle of a wooden spoon. Bake about 10-15 minutes more, watching carefully. The eclairs should brown but remain slightly moist inside. The lowered heat with door ajar helps keep them from cracking open. Cool on a rack.

While the shells bake, make the pastry cream filling: place 2 cups of milk and half a vanilla bean, split lengthwise, in a heavy saucepan and bring to a boil; then remove pan from heat and cover.

Separate 6 large eggs, reserving whites for other uses. Place yolks in a mixing bowl and beat in one third cup of granulated sugar with a wire whisk or an electric mixer until mixture lightens and falls in a ribbon when the whisk or blades are held above the bowl.

Gently stir in one fourth cup of either flour or cornstarch. (Cornstarch has twice the thickening strength of flour. We prefer the texture when only 2 tablespoons of cornstarch is used.)

Remove vanilla bean from milk and pour milk while still hot into the egg mixture, beating constantly. Return the filling to the saucepan and whisk or beat constantly over medium heat to prevent the filling from lumping as it thickens. The book advises boiling the filling one minute; we found it thickened enough before reaching the boiling point.

Pour at once into a bowl to stop the cooking and add five and one half ounces of semisweet chocolate broken in small pieces. (If you use chips instead of one-ounce blocks, add the contents of one 6-ounce bag.) As the heat of the filling melts the chocolate, stir it into the filling until no streaks show. Lightly rub the surface with a lump of chilled butter to keep a skin from forming, cool and refrigerate.

Icing: melt three and one half ounces of semisweet chocolate in top of a double boiler over simmering but not boiling water. Add 1 cup of sifted confectioners' sugar and 5 tablespoons of butter cut into pieces. Stir until smooth. Remove from heat and add no more than 4 tablespoons of cold water, 1 tablespoon at a time, until icing is lukewarm. If it is too hot, it will run; if it is too cold, it will not spread properly.

To assemble eclairs: slit each one with a serrated edge knife and force cooled filling in, using a pastry bag fitted with a one-fourth inch nozzle. With a spatula, frost the tops. Refrigerate, lightly covered, until serving time.

Storage: all dough should be baked when it is freshly mixed. Baked, cooled, unfilled puffs or eclairs bagged in plastic keep one week refrigerated or one month frozen. If frozen, they should be defrosted 24 hours in the refrigerator before filling and icing. The filling, tightly covered, keeps two days refrigerated. The icing should be made just before using.

Miss Mary Lou Bunting Weds Saturday Evening

BETHEL — Miss Mary Lou Bunting and Timothy Wilson Roberson were united in marriage Saturday at six o'clock in the evening in the Bethel United Methodist Church. The Rev. Ellis Bedsworth performed the double ring ceremony.

A program of organ music was presented by Mrs. Robert Harold Staton. Ms. Mary Wells Bunting Andrews sang "The Wedding Prayer." Mrs. James Edward Beverly of Greenville sang "The Wedding Song" accompanied on the guitar by Jeff Arnette of Goldsboro.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Royal Bunting of Bethel. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Hudson Roberson of Robersonville.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a formal gown of ivory sata peau over peau de soie. The gown was fashioned with a Victorian neckline, empire waist and long fitted sleeves. The bodice featured English net and re-embroidered alencon lace. The fitted sleeves were enhanced with matching lace and closed with traditional bridal buttons. The A-line skirt fell into a chapel length train bordered with re-embroidered alencon lace.

She chose a chapel length mantilla set in a Camelot cap. The imported illusion was adorned with appliqued flowerettes of re-embroidered alencon lace. She carried a cascade bouquet of stephanotis, miniature carnations, red sweetheart roses and baby's breath centered with a white orchid.

The mother of the bride wore a formal gown of mint green chiffon. The flowing tiered skirt was caught at the waist by a matching chiffon flower and the V-necked bodice featured a matching stole. She wore a white orchid on her handbag.

The bride's sister, Beverly Carson Bunting, was maid of honor. Mrs. John Hilton Carson, cousin of the bride, was matron of honor. They wore formal length gowns of ivory knit designed with open V-necklines accented at the center front with appliques of ivory Venise floral lace. The slip style gowns featured full circular skirts and were complemented with walking length drapes featuring high choker collars enhanced by appliques of floral Venise laoe. They carried arm bouquets of red roses tied with matching satin ribbon.

Bridesmaids were Mrs. Hubert Wayne Clark of Bethel and Mrs. Tony Allen Hardy of Greenville, sisters of the bridegroom, Miss Terry Lynn Rogerson, Miss Pamela Lyn Andrews and Miss Kathy Lewis Purvis of Bethel, and Miss Cynthia Gail Carson of Grifton, cousin of the bride. Their gowns and flowers were styled like those of the honor attendants.

Miss Leigh Morgan Whitehurst, cousin of the bride, and Miss Trudy Brette Clark, niece of the bridegroom, were flower girls. Their formal length gowns of ivory taffeta and lace featured wide bertha collars of ivory lace. They carried baskets of red roses and baby's breath.

The father of the bridegroom was best man and groomsmen included Kenneth Hudson Jr. and Henry Baker Roberson, brothers of the bridegroom, Matthew Mayo Wilson of Robersonville, John Royal Runting III, brother of the bride, William Offie Dail of Tarboro, Charles Leon Wilson and Rickey Keel Brown of Wilson.

Mrs. Don Columbus Carson Jr. and Mrs. Leon James Whitehurst Jr. directed the wedding.

Following the ceremony, parents of the couple entertained at a reception at the Robersonville Golf and Country Club. The clubhouse was decorated with greenery and lighted with candles.

The refreshment table, covered with a white satin cloth, held silver candelabra with epergnes of snapdragons, red roses and miniature carnations. The bride's table held the five-tiered wedding cake.

The bride attended Atlantic Christian College and is an operating room technician. She was employed by Edgecombe Hospital prior to the wedding. The bridegroom attended N. C. State University and is engaged in farming.

Following a wedding trip, the couple will live in Robersonville.

On Friday evening, the bridal party was entertained at a dinner-dance in the Blue Room of the Candlewick Inn given by friends and relatives of the bridal couple.

Secretaries Plan Meet

The Greenville Chapter of the National Secretaries Association (International) will hold its meeting Monday at the Three Steers Restaurant.

The speaker for the evening will be Jim Rees of ECU and his topic will be "The Four Dimensions of Communicating."

Dinner will be served at 6:15 p.m. followed by the meeting at seven o'clock.

Slide Program Set For Tuesday

A slide program on "Birds and Gardens" will be presented to the Lynndale Garden Club Tuesday at 9:45 a.m. by Roy Beck of the Soil Conservation Service.

Hostess will be Mrs. Naomi Jackson assisted by Mrs. Dolly Vainright and Mrs. Louise Elks.

The program will furnish information on what shrubs, trees and plants attract birds and will be followed by a question and answer period.

Plans will also be made for participation in the spring flower show to be held at the Greenville Art Center in April.

Yard-of-the-Month Award for January was presented to Mr. and Mrs. Frank Dail for their natural looking yard. This award is presented monthly and is based on the following criteria: general manicured appearance, including mowed and edged lawn; well established yard, either natural or grassed; and attractive arrangement of shrubs, trees and plants.

MISS CLARA ELIZABETH BOYD. . .is the daughter of Mrs. Evelyn Boyd of Greenville, who announces her engagement to Larry Donnell Lynn, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Robert Lynn of Conway. The wedding will take place March 18.

Don't Address Her By Her First Name

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1978 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: I would like to express my irritation over a practice that's becoming common these days.

It's the way doctors, nurses, assistants and clerks address all patients by their first names regardless of their age, sex or social status.

Some twerp young enough to be one's grandchild will come to the door of the waiting room and sing out, "Margaret," or "Harold."

Once inside, the doctor also uses the patient's first name. (It's not as though they didn't know the patient's age, because it's on the card which the offender is usually holding in his hand.)

I have noticed that in nursing homes they routinely call the elderly inhabitants by their first names as though they were 10 years old. I think it's rude, unduly familiar, disrespectful and demeaning.

Please comment.

HAD MY SAY

DEAR HAD: Although the practice of addressing elderly people by their first names may strike you as being rude and disrespectful, it's considered "friendlier" than the more formal "Miss, Mrs. and Mr."

I seriously doubt that it's intended as an insult or put-down, but on the chance that you are right in some instances, I'll print your letter with the hope that the offenders will see it and mend their ways.

DEAR ABBY: What should a 17-year-old girl do when she finds out her mother has been reading her diary? I know she also reads the letters I have received after I have put them away. I have lost all faith in her! She has no reason to doubt me. Why does she do this? How can I prevent her from snooping?

SNOOPER'S MOTHER

DEAR DAUGHTER: There is nothing you can do except hide that which you wish to keep private. A mother who snoops in this manner is in effect admitting that she is incapable of establishing a good mother-daughter relationship—one where there is mutual confidence and respect for privacy.

I do not condone snooping, but if your mother is typical of most snooping mothers, she's probably motivated more by good intentions than nosiness. But she is wrong, wrong, wrong!

Sweet Bread Recipe Via Hawaii

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

Found! A marvelous recipe for Portuguese Sweet Bread. We came by it because we happened to tell an acquaintance from California that we were looking for a really good recipe for such a loaf. She said she could help us out.

It seems she learned to bake this specialty because her husband pined for the Portuguese sweet bread (pao doce) he had when he lived in Hawaii, where he would buy it at least once a week at a neighborhood bakery. After a good many trials, she finally succeeded in baking some loaves that suited him.

When we tried her recipe it also suited us. "Suit" is putting it mildly. The recipe makes four loaves. After it was baked in my test kitchen, it was all I could do keep from eating a whole loaf.

The kneading of this bread takes a lot of energy. The donor of the recipe told me her husband helps her with this. If you bake the bread, be forewarned and have an extra pair of strong hands around.

The pao doce, sliced and slathered with butter, is delicious still faintly warm from the oven. After storing, it's wonderful toasted.

PORTUGUESE SWEET BREAD (PAO DOCE)

2 medium potatoes, about ½ pound
7 to 8 cups all-purpose flour
3 envelopes dry yeast
2 teaspoons salt
¼ teaspoon ground ginger
Sugar
½ cup milk
½ cup butter
7 eggs
1 teaspoon vanilla

Cover the well-scrubbed potatoes with unsalted water and boil until tender. Drain, reserving ½ cup of the potato water. Peel and mash the potato; measure 1 cup and reserve.

In the large bowl of an electric mixer stir together 2 cups of the flour with the undissolved yeast, salt, ginger and 3 tablespoons sugar.

Heat the reserved ½ cup potato water with the milk and butter until very hot (130 degrees); butter does not need to melt. Add to the yeast mixture. At medium speed, beat for 2 minutes.

In a medium bowl with a clean beater, beat 6 of the eggs until thickened and lemon color; gradually beat in 1¾ cups sugar until thick and ivory color. Add to the batter with the reserved 1 cup mashed potato and ½ cup more flour; at medium speed, beat for 2 minutes. Gradually stir in enough of the remaining flour to make a soft dough.

Turn out on a lightly floured surface. Knead about 10 minutes, adding only enough flour to prevent sticking. Place in a large buttered bowl; turn to grease top; cover and let rise in a warm draft-free place (about 80 degrees) until doubled — about 1 to 1½ hours. Punch down. Turn out onto a lightly floured surface and divide into 4 equal pieces. Shape into round loaves and place well apart on buttered cookie sheets. Let rise as before until doubled — about 1 to 1½ hours.

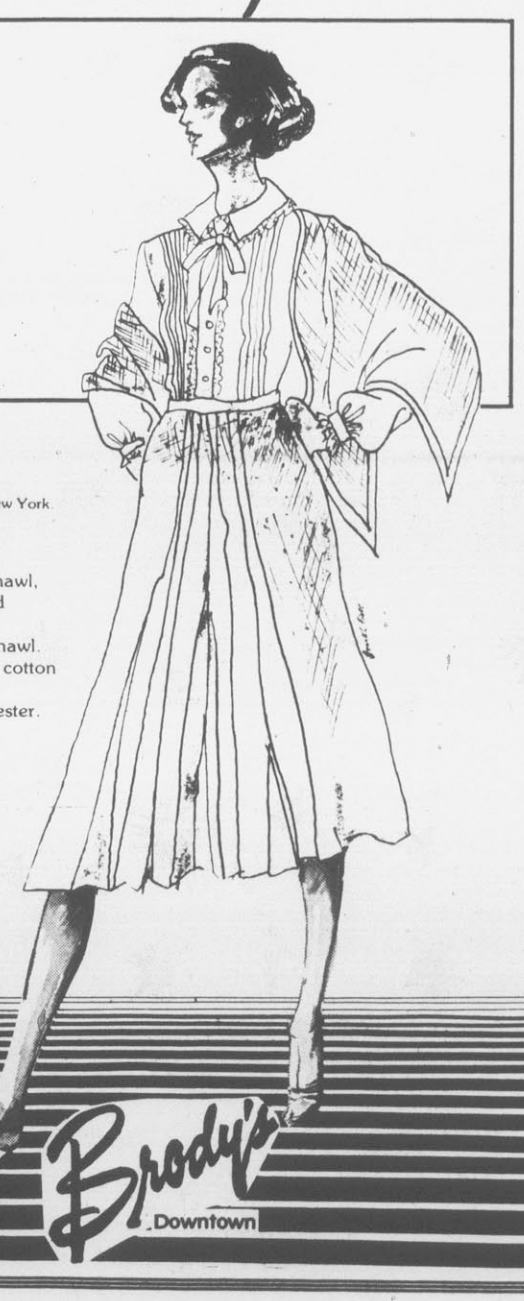

Slightly beat the remaining egg with ¼ teaspoon water and brush over loaves. Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven until golden brown, 40 to 50 minutes. Cool on wire racks.

Many Young Wives Handle The Money

By JEANNE LESEM
UPI Family Editor

It's a cliche among poll takers: consumers who participate in polls often say what they think the pollster wants to hear or what the consumers regard as socially acceptable responses.

You don't often find someone saying, as a Memphis man did in a recent study, "I can't tell you what I do with my money. I leave the house with it and when I come back, it's gone."

Although most wives questioned in the study handled their family's finances, several said they deliberately record incorrect amounts on their check stubs to accumulate money for Christmas shopping.

The study was made to determine how young families allocate their money. This group represents 30 percent of all United States families and has 38 percent of the buying power. It was planned by Jerry Ohlsten, research director for Cunningham and Walsh, a New York advertising agency.

The participants were 15 couples from across the country who met these qualifications:

They came from 15 cities under two-million in population: Denver, Seattle, San Diego, Kansas City, Dayton, Grand Rapids, Minneapolis, Atlanta, Jacksonville, Memphis, San Antonio, Buffalo, Portland, Me., Providence, R.I. and Wilmington, Del.

Each earns an average of $15,000 annually and has two or three children. About half the wives work part or full time. The husbands, ages 30-39, are either high school graduates or have some college education. About one-third of the husbands hold professional or managerial jobs and about half are craft workers and operatives. Their attire, makeup and hair styles are fashionable but not extreme.

All 15 couples are very home-oriented, Ohlsten said, and very conservative, although they grew up with the flower children of the 1960s who rejected traditional values.

Truck driver Charles Morisey, his wife, Ann, and their four children had moved from San Antonio to the suburb of Marion, Tex., to be able to garden and raise rabbits and poultry. Suburbia was so expensive Mrs. Morisey got a secretarial job.

High gas prices and the 32-mile round trip daily to their work began to add up. The Moriseys decided to move back to town, only to find they could not afford to buy back the house they had sold. At this writing, they're still in Marion.

In San Diego, a young banker and his wife said their present home is not their dream house, but costs are escalating so fast they cannot afford to move.

Ohlsten said inflation affects their attitudes as well as their consumer buying habits. They have become more conservative. The husbands shop more for gas than they used to, and often use self-serve islands. They buy less well-known brands when possible.

Both wives and husbands said they try to stick to the 55-mile-an-hour speed limit, not so much as a patriotic effort to conserve fuel as to save money. They see installing home insulation not as a socially responsible way of saving energy but as a way to cut heating bills. Thrift, not ecology, prompts them to ration disposables such as paper towels and cups.

Educating children is a common worry, Ohlsten said. The San Diego couple sets aside a percentage of their income for college costs.

Two of the three children of the Minneapolis couple will be in college at one time. The husband is a refrigerator mechanic. His wife has returned to school for a nursing degree so she can contribute to the family income when the kids enter college.

The Jacksonville, Fla., father, a draftsman, told his son he would have to pay for part of his college education, then added:

"I don't want them going to college on the pretense that they have to go because their friends do."

Food prices worry everyone. The Memphis wife, a nursing student, said she looks for day-old marked-down meat to use for soup or stew.

The Texas wife, Mrs. Morisey, said $1 boxes of cookies are out. She bakes her own, usually four or five different kinds. She freezes them by the gallon to have for lunches and after-school snacks.

Fran Etheridge of the Providence suburb of West Barrington swaps coupons with neighbors. She estimated this saves her $4 to $5 each shopping trip.

The Portland, Me., homemaker said she began grocery shopping bimonthly when her husband's pay date was changed to that schedule. She found it cut down on impulse purchases.

When the Denver wife went to work as a mortgage closer for a bank, her meals became simpler. She said she now cooks on weekends: "You know, I make a meatloaf, a big pot of meatballs, Greek salad."

All 15 couples said their entertaining is extremely casual and communal. Three or four families tend to get together on Saturdays for potluck suppers, Ohlsten said. Some belong to dinner clubs that meet once or twice monthly at their homes for informal meals.

MISS MARGO CUYLER SMITH. . .Mr. Richard A. Smith of New York, N. Y., announces the engagement of his sister to John Pratt Sherman, son of Mr. John W. Sherman of Raleigh. The wedding will take place during the summer.

On The Young Side

By Sharon Connolly

Spirits at Rose High continued to soar upward last week as juniors and seniors practiced each afternoon for the powder-puff football game. Each class felt determined and confident that they would be the winners.

While the girls could be found practicing inside or out, depending upon the weather, a group of boys could be found inside practicing cheers, chants and stunts to prepare themselves for their debut as cheerleaders on Friday during a pep rally and afterwards at the game.

High spirits of the juniors and seniors reached a climax Friday afternoon as the coaches, team members, cheerleaders, and officials were introduced during the pep rally planned for this occasion.

The senior team was the first to be introduced, and each girl was escorted into the gym by a cheerleader.

On the defensive team are: Penny Buck, Rose Ann Mayo, and Lois Phelps, guards; Robin Dixon, Debbie Girdharry, Rae James, and Grace Wilkins, split ends; Inky Dawson, Sandra Harrel, Elizabeth Johnson, and Connie Wallace, running backs; Lisa Harris, nose guard, Laurie Lucas and Elaine Yancey, tackles; Anne Middleton, quarterback; Kim Mills, fullback; Donna Tripp, tight end; and Gina Whichard, center.

On the offensive team are: Sharon Moore, Margie Peoples, and Ellen Pollock, ends; Kim Cargile, Kathy Conway, Donna McLaurin, Kathy Murphy, Pat Paschal, Patty Stoneman, Kim Taylor, linebackers; Diane Goodson, Mary Catherine Hannifer, Camille Smith, and Gwen Tyson, tackles; Tori Clement, Barrie Grady, and Carol Hill, halfbacks; and Sally Dun and Sandy Stott, safeties.

The coaches of this team, who spent their afternoons teaching and organizing these girls, are Sandy Abbot, Kenny Jenkins, Mike Joyner, Bryant Morton, and Dave Northrup. Managers of the team are David Murray and Bob Woronoff.

After all of these introductions were made a very important group of boys were introduced. Announced as this year's cheerleaders were Sandy Abbot, Tim Allen, Curtis Ebbs, Lindsey Henry, Tom Johnson, Steve Lawler, and Tom Proctor. These boys then did a cheer followed by a stunt to boost the players on to a victory.

Next, the junior football team was introduced in the same way as the seniors were.

Those on the defensive team are: Karen Mills, Tammy Riggs, Chris Stawn, Kaye Tyson, and Susan Warshauer, linebackers; Diane Clemons and Jennifer Wooles, nose guard, Faye Tyson, safety; Nancy Garret and Janet Hodges, halfbacks; Carol Levy, Katie

On The Local Scene

by Rosalie Trotman

A territory of eight states keeps Hilda Johnson, a home economist, traveling approximately three or four days per week.

In telling why she enjoys her position with Johnson Wax Co., she said, "Seeing all the places I visit (like Greenville) and meeting the different people. I feel lucky to be in the south because people are so warm and friendly. Each day is a new adventure — I learn something new everyday, not just from visiting new towns but from comsumers and media contacts I have.

"I have been exposed to good information through trips to New York City and Racine, Wis., for product up-dating and program training. I have enjoyed seeing the research facilities and production of products."

"The public in general is most interested in what attitude big business has towards the consumer. A general opinion is that big businesses are out to rip the consumer off. I, personally, get a great deal of satisfaction from telling the other side of the story — of how one major company listens to consumer's needs and complaints," she continued.

In her travels, she is often asked about such subjects as aerosols and fluorocarbons, holding garage sale, the latest hair fashions and how to maintain a car. She has occasionally found herself involved in camping, needleart and even do-it-yourself down-filled clothing, although basic housekeeping topics are still popular.

A native of Jefferson, Ga., Hilda received her associate degree in home economics from Abraham Baldwin College, Tifton, Ga., her B.S. degree from the University of Georgia School of Home Economics, Athens, Ga., and her M.E. in home economics from the University of Georgia Graduate School of Education.

She has been a consumer information specialist for Johnson Wax for about five months after working with the egg industry in Georgia.

When she's not traveling, Hilda enjoys finding time to work with her many houseplants, cook new dishes and do needlecraft. During warm weather, she can often be found spending her weekends swimming, water skiing and rafting.

"I know from the letters I get that I am providing a real service," she says. "People really are interested in new ideas to take care of their home, families and environment."

Publications on "Rug and Carpet Care," "Furniture Care," and "Home Care" and consumer questions will be supplied by Hilda on written request to: Hilda Johnson, Johnson Wax, Suite 1935, 600 W. Peachtree Street N.W., Atlanta, Ga., 30308.

Engagements Announced

MISS GLADYS MARIE JONES. . .is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Lee Jones of Rt. 3, Ayden, who announce her engagement to William Lane Jones, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Henry Jones of Columbus, Ga. The wedding will take place May 6.

MISS PATRICIA LEA TICE. . .is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Cleveland Tice Sr. of Greenville, who announce her engagement to Grover Franklin Black, son of Mr. Charles James Black Sr. of Greenville, and Mrs. Juanita Black of Jacksonville, Fla. The wedding will take place April 2.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

Researchers have gone to a lot of trouble to figure out what makes a woman successful in the corporate world. They've come up with:

1. Don't wear sweaters unless you want to be a secretary the rest of your life.
2. Wear glasses even if you don't need them.
3. Paint your office a masculine color.
4. Don't have a flower on your desk.
5. Take your family's picture off your desk.
6. Have a small chair so you'll look larger.
7. Hang only neuter art.

Now they tell me. For the first six years of my writing career, I listed shower curtains and a new lid for the commode as office expenditures on my tax return.

There are thousands of women who work from their homes who don't have time to play the corporate game. Our rules are a little different.

If you want to get ahead at home:

1. Don't schlepp around in bathrobe and scuffies unless you want to be a housewife the rest of your life. Be dressed by noon.
2. Paint your office black unless you want to spend your entire time scouring around the light switches and looking for dust.
3. Equip your phone with a 75-foot extension cord. This permits you to stir the potatoes, type, turn off the washer, and grab your prize-winning poodle before it mates with a St. Bernard.
4. Detonate your scissors, plastic tape, pens, rulers and matched stationery. Put a sign over your desk that reads, "THIS IS A HARD HAT AREA. ENTER AT YOUR OWN RISK."
5. Wear glasses. Especially when you can find them. They've authoritative and also keep you from shouting at a Boston Fern, "Comb your hair or cut it!"
6. Important phone messages should be posted at all times on the refrigerator door. No fair leaving off last number of digit or etching them out in the kitty litter.
7. Have only neutered dogs.

As everyone files out of your kitchen leaving you with dishes, the garbage and the chores because they've "worked all day," remember, it's lonely at the top.

Couple Has 74 Years Of Togetherness

By BILL SMITH
Peoria Journal Star

PRINCETON, Ill. (AP) — Even after 74 years of marriage, they still look at each other with those mischievous twinkles in their eyes — the kind of impish, teasing peeks that seem to say, "Why, you old buzzard, I still love you more than anything else in this world."

Fred Nothnagel is 94. His wife, Elizabeth, is 92.

Married on Dec. 9, 1903, before a judge in Ottawa, they celebrated their silver wedding anniversary during the height of the Roaring '20s; their golden anniversary during Eisenhower's first term as president.

To say the Nothnagels are something special around Bureau County would most certainly be an understatement. They have ridden together in area parades; Elizabeth's poems have been printed the past five years in local newspapers.

Maybe it's because their health is still astonishingly good that their minds are wonderfully sharp, or maybe it's simply because they still have each other.

Both remain genuinely concerned with politics — they still vote in every presidential election — and they keep up with world, national and local events through newspapers, television and magazines.

On The Young Side...

Stone, and Sarah Wiley, tackles; and Gigi Branch, Lisa Laughinghouse, and Helen Whitehurst, ends.

Introduced as the coaches of this team were Mike French, Curtis Little, Mark Vestal, and Yousef Barakat. These juniors spent much of their time during the last two weeks teaching the girls the basics of football and hopefully plays that would help them beat the seniors.

The guys cheering for the junior team were not to be out done by the senior cheerleaders. After they were introduced, they performed a routine to the music supplied by the stage band and then a cheer for their team to give them more confidence.

The seven guys cheering for the juniors are Gleen Corey, Bill Dunn, Bob Gray, Ron Northrup, Clyde Ownes, Lindy Pollard, and John Richards.

Because of the rainy weather on Friday, the powderpuff game was rescheduled for Monday afternoon.

At this time the two teams will give all that they've got to try to win over the other.

The officials for this game will be Scott Brody, Franklin Clark, Jay Cox, Bernie Fleming, Reggie Spain, and MacDonald Washington.

Good luck to both teams.

Shower Given Bridal Couple

Miss Susie Allen and Dale Murphrey were honored at a floating miscellaneous shower given by Miss Lynne Ball Tuesday night.

Mrs. John Ball was assisting hostess.

Guests were greeted by Miss Ball and gifts were opened by the bride-elect and displayed by Mrs. Ball.

The honoree was wearing a three-piece black suit.

Good-byes were said by the hostesses and honoree.

Wives...

And no matter what they buy — food, clothing, home furnishings or automobiles — they look for durability and value.

The ad agency followed up the study with a nationally dispersed telephone survey of 500 wives on Dec. 27, 1977, to determine how many actually pay most of the family bills by check, cash or money orders. Sixty-seven percent of the women said they did. The responsibility was shared by both husband and wife in only two percent of the families questioned. In the remaining 31 percent of the households, the husbands paid the bills.

The families chosen for the phone survey have backgrounds closely resembling those of the 15 couples in the earlier study:

Total family income ranges between $15,000 and $24,999 a year; half the women work; the husbands' ages range from 30-39 years; they live in suburban areas of metropolitan markets under two million and over 250,000 population; and they are geographically dispersed following the pattern of U.S. population distribution.

The telephone sample was drawn from National Family Opinion's national probability sample of U.S. households. Interviews were conducted from its headquarters in Toledo, Ohio.

Don't waste the syrup or liquid from canned fruits. You can add the liquids to gelatin salads or desserts without adding too much sweetness.

Solid fats in sticks or blocks may be cut as needed; a one-pound block measures about two cups; a stick of butter or margarine, one-half cup.

Pot de creme cups, traditionally used in France, are about demitasse size and come with covers. They are charming to use for vanilla or chocolate-flavored pot de creme (custard made with egg yolks and cream), a mousse or just plain vanilla, butterscotch, maple or chocolate pudding.

Engagement Announced

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Harrison Sink of Raleigh announce the engagement of their daughter, Rosemary Elizabeth, to Robert Alan Unsworth, son of Mrs. William Robert Unsworth of Jackson, N. J. The wedding will take place March 11.

FORECAST FOR SUNDAY, JAN. 22, 1978

Your Daily HOROSCOPE

from the CARROLL RIGHTER INSTITUTE

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A day when you can expect the unexpected. You would be wise to engage in group activities and make a fine impression on others. Try to be more understanding of family members.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Talk over your interests with modern-thinking persons and gain their advice. Do some entertaining of persons you like.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Go to places where you can be inspired to greater heights. Discuss the future with friends and relatives. Show that you have poise.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Study your home and see where to make improvements. Plan how to stretch your finances so that you have greater security.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Look into new and more fascinating recreational activities in which your associates engage in. Relax at home tonight.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Ideal day for meditation and knowing where you are headed in the future and how to add to present knowledge. Use care in motion.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Fine day for joining congenials in recreation you mutually enjoy. Study your financial situation and cut down on expenses.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Don't neglect a civic matter that is important to your welfare. Take time to engage in your favorite hobby.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Study a new philosophy today that could prove enlightening to you in some way. Take steps to become a more productive person.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Use your intuition and you will discover a better way to discharge your responsibilities. Make a sensible plan for the future.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Ideal time to go to the services of your choice. More thought for your mate brings excellent results at this time.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Do a big favor for one who has been most helpful to you in the past. Try a new health treatment and become more dynamic.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) A time to enjoy yourself and get rid of any tensions you may have. Show true affection for mate and get fine response.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will have own ideas and methods of doing things, so be sure to send to schools where orthodox systems are taught, and then a combination of the two will make for much success throughout the life. Much talent in this chart.

FORECAST FOR MONDAY, JANUARY 23, 1978

ARIES (March 21 to Apr. 19) Not a good time for making changes at home or getting into any arguments there. Show that you are thoughtful, tactful instead. Get your home in finer order and be happier there.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Good time to take care of errands. Don't argue with allies or you could get into trouble. Try to maintain your equilibrium no matter what.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Show more consideration for others and gain their good will. Try to economize more so you need not feel lack at odd times.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Don't be so demanding with others and you get along better with them. Do some entertaining and make a good impression on others. Be charming and show good will.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Not a good time for discussions with mate, loved one who is not in a good humor. Think along more constructive lines.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Good time to be with dynamic friends who have fine ideas to give you and which should be followed. If you go out socially, don't get into any heated arguments, discussions. Be tactful.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Be sure to heed whatever a bigwig has to suggest since this can be helpful to you. Do not be pressured into buying anything you don't want.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) You want to jump right into some new project, but it is best to first get facts and figures and think about it. Don't argue with a new contact.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Pay bills and make collections where possible. Be more objective with a partner who is very bossy.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Be fair with associates and gain their good will, listen to their views more. A new contact could prove to be sarcastic, but don't let it bother you.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) You seldom do things as others do and this is a good time to put original ideas to work successfully. Help a fellow worker with a problem.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) If you are careful with your money, this can be a good time for you. Avoid one who could be a deterrent to you.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will have much control and be able to handle big projects efficiently and should have the education slanted along such lines, and would do well in big business, markets, real estate, public work, etc. Permit to work out novel ideas as early in life and encourage to work with hands.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to YOU!

Today's Cryptoquip clue: S equals L

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Color Paper Fire Taboo

CHICAGO (UPI) — Don't burn the Sunday newspaper magazine section with its bright color pages in your fireplace. And by all means do not use the color pages to start the charcoal in your cooking grill. Those color pages are loaded with lead.

In the fireplace most of the lead would go up the chimney, polluting the neighborhood atmosphere. If many homes on the block were burning the Sunday color pages, the lead content of the air would rise considerably.

Starting a grill with black-and-white newspapers won't bother you, but burning color newspapers is taboo. The lead could go directly into the hamburgers.

Clergy Released By South Korea

NEW YORK (AP) — Four Protestant clergymen and a Roman Catholic priest were released by South Korean authorities under a New Year's Eve clemency program, says the American Coalition for Human Rights in Korea.

But it says that 240 political prisoners still are confined.

Charge Of Heresy Is Part Of Larger Argument

By DAVID E. ANDERSON
UPI Religion Writer

WASHINGTON (UPI) — When theologians clash over complex issues of doctrine, rank and file churchgoers seldom even hear about it. But when charges of near-heresy begin appearing in widely-read religious publications, even the laity sits up and takes notice.

Such is the case in the current controversy involving Jesuit Father Avery Dulles and Lutheran lay theologian Peter Berger on one side, and Roman Catholic David Tracy and Protestants Langdon Gilkey and Schubert Ogden on the other.

Their dispute involves such issues as the nature of Jesus, life after death and the role of the church in a modern and increasingly secularized world.

The conflict erupted when Berger, writing in the Jesuit magazine Theological Studies, and Dulles, in his book, "The Resilient Church," attacked the theology of Gilkey, Tracy and Ogden. Dulles accused the trio of "latent heresy" in some of their positions.

Since then charges and counter-charges, responses and explanations have been published in the widely-read Christian Century and National Catholic Reporter.

At the heart of the argument is the Hartford Appeal, a controversial manifesto issued in January, 1975, over the names of 18 prominent Roman Catholic, Protestant and Eastern Orthodox theologians.

The Appeal attacked "debilitating" themes it said were causing the church to lose its sense of the transcendent — a sense of the existence of God in a dimension beyond this world — and capitulate to modern thought.

It was issued at a time of flux for Christian theology, both among Protestants and Roman Catholics.

The theological giants who dominated the middle of the century — Paul Tillich, Karl Barth, Rudolph Bultmann, Dietrich Bonhoeffer and Reinhold Niebuhr — are gone and no group of equal authority has taken their place.

Instead, there have been a number of theological fads and fashions which which have gathered small groups of followers and, sometimes, public notoriety as in the brief "death of God" phenomenon.

The result has been a great deal of confusion among church-goers and a widening gap between theologians and church members.

The central problem is how religion can deal with the contemporary situation, a situation increasingly dominated by the scientific spirit, technology and secularism.

Hartford attacked what it saw as a growing trend among theologians to seek to accommodate faith to secularism rather than being critical of the emphasis on this world as being ultimate.

Berger and Dulles were signers of the Hartford Appeal while Tracy, Gilkey and Ogden were invited to sign but refused. The Berger and Dulles attacks were efforts to expand on the Hartford Appeal and to "name names" of those theologians who hold positions which the Appeal condemns, specifically in denial of the transcendent God, denial of God's redemptive action in Jesus and the tendency to accommodate Christian thought to secular culture.

"Many of the unspoken assumptions of our culture are out of harmony with Christian faith," Dulles argued in his book, "and attuned rather to secularism or some neopagan religiosity. Thus we imbibe from our environment a kind of 'latent' or 'implicit' heresy."

Dulles, commenting on Tracy's view of Christ, says the theologian is "content to say that the early Christians were inspired to invent a good story about Jesus." He suggests that Tracy's thought could just as well lead to a person like Martin Luther King Jr., being viewed in the same way as Jesus.

Tracy responded by accusing Dulles of misreading him and misleading readers into believing "that what I really mean is that the Christian story is a mere fiction in the sense of a fable, that is unreal, that it never happened."

Tracy said he was working with recent New Testament analyses that could lead to new ways of understanding Jesus.

Dulles also argued that Tracy and Gilkey hold that "the hope for everlasting life is marginal if not illusory." He suggests that view is an "implied heresy."

Gilkey replied that "the fact is that both of us thoroughly believe in this affirmation of our faith (the hope for everlasting life), and I have stated so publicly in my published works."

To which Dulles responded: "In my chapter I do not accuse either of them of denying any article of the Christian faith. I do contend that certain themes which are latently heretical may be detected in their work."

Why all the fuss, then?

Because the stakes are fundamental Christian doctrines such as the nature of God, the role of Jesus, the question of salvation and the relationship of the church to the world.

The current argument between these five is also part of a larger dispute.

The question of the incarnation of Jesus, whether or not the man Jesus is to be literally understood as being God, has also been raised by the publication of "The Myth of God Incarnate."

How the Bible is to be read and interpreted is also a key part of this debate — an issue that has already convulsed the 2.8 million member Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod, leading to a schism in that denomination and rumbles of discontent among other church bodies.

Berger and other signers of the Hartford Appeal believe that contemporary theology as represented by Gilkey, Ogden and Tracy, is increasingly "reductionist" — emptied of all traditional Christian affirmations in order to make it compatible with secular or worldly thought.

That means, says Berger, that they essentially affirm the "ultimate worthwhileness of human life in this world as against any notion" of another world.

Gilkey argues that defining salvation in terms of human fulfillment does not mean a capitulation to secularism but a recognition of God's intention for humanity. He says it involves all of the classical Christian ideas of creation, the fall, the incarnation and grace.

The Hartford signers are concerned that Christian faith is being sold down the river, that the church's teachings are being dissolved to meaninglessness in the contemporary culture.

Others, such as Gilkey, Ogden and Tracy, believe if theology is to be successfully defended and communicated in the contemporary situation, it must be restated in a way that the modern world can understand.

How these questions are resolved will profoundly affect the way the church, including the average church member, gives voice to the faith.

Non-Mormons At Brigham Young U.

By MIKE WHITE

PROVO, Utah (AP) — Non-Mormon students attending Brigham Young University give different reasons for enrolling.

At BYU, owned and operated by the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, 625 non-Mormons are enrolled with about 26,000 church members.

"When I first came here, it blew my mind a little bit. At Syracuse it was mostly Jewish, but it was a normal university. Here, the LDS (Latter-day Saints) faith is a whole culture in itself," said Kathy Mooney, member of the Christian Science Church, who transferred to BYU to study Finnish.

Non-Mormon students applying to BYU must meet the same requirements as Mormon applicants, said admissions director Veston Thomas.

These include an interview with a minister, who need not be a Mormon, and a pledge to abide by a dress and grooming code and the moral standards of the Mormon church.

The code requires male students to keep their hair cut above the collar. Coeds are not allowed to wear blue jeans on campus. All students must abstain from tobacco, coffee, tea, alcoholic beverages and drugs. Premarital sex is grounds for expulsion.

Non-Mormons pay $510 a semester tuition, compared to $390 for church members.

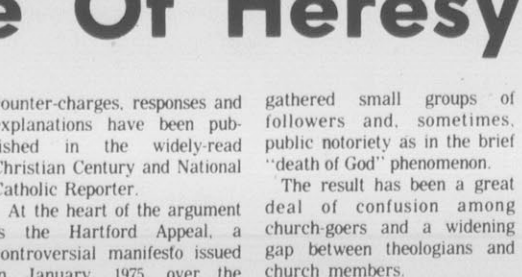

Some non-Mormon students say the strong religious influence is what they are looking for, but others say it can be a problem.

"For me, it's a nicer place to be than some other university because I have the same general standards," said Miss Mooney, from Easton, Conn.

All undergraduates must take one religion course per semester. Ellis T. Rasmussen, dean of religious instruction, said there were no courses designed for non-Mormons. He said instructors knew which students were non-Mormon, since they might need special help on doctrinal points.

Adopt-A-Pet

This is Maggie, a one and a half-year-old collie-Labrador retriever mixture. Her owner had to move out of state and could not take her along. She needs a home and the Pitt County Humane Society is seeking one for her.

Other animals that are having adoptive owners sought for them by the Humane Society include seven "apartment-sized" puppies; four long-haired puppies that will be large when they're grown (part shepherd); four very young kittens; two three-month-old kittens; and a mixed female collie.

Anyone wishing to adopt one of these animals or to place a pet for adoption may call Humane Society President Jeanette Fiore at 758-0468.

Adoptive owners who qualify financially may obtain reduced fee spaying certificates from Marian Frost, Friends of Animals Inc. representative here. She may be reached at 758-2715 between 6 and 10 p. m.

A Close Watch On Lake Mead

By GARY PEDERSEN
Associated Press Writer

BOULDER CITY, Nev. (AP) — If you commit a boating or fishing violation on Lake Mead, watch out — you could have the National Park Service, the Nevada Department of Fish and Game, the Arizona Department of Game and Fish or the U.S. Coast Guard after you.

All of those agencies technically have jurisdiction over this sprawling, winding, 157,900-acre lake that separates the two states in southern Nevada.

And if you are caught using the wrong kind of bait off Hoover Dam, well, the U.S. Bureau of Reclamation could get into the act. That agency is responsible only for the dam and the water taken into the power plant and released downstream, but you never can tell what might happen on the dam.

While all those state and federal agencies have something to say about the lake, and about Lake Mojave just below the dam, the park service bears the bulk of the enforcement work. It plants the buoys, marks the boating ways and spends the majority of the patrol time on the water.

Forty-one rangers for 191,500 acres of water in both lakes, surrounded by 1.5 million acres of land in the area isn't much, but assistant chief ranger Bud Inman says his men are hard workers.

"We are very busy during the summer; that's when all the skiers and hot boats are on the lake. That's when we have the most drinking and related to that, the most accidents.

"This is the slow time of the year. The retired people come here in the cool weather, mostly to fish and relax. They don't give us much trouble," he said. "We seldom run into any jurisdictional problems, despite the fact there are so many agencies around here."

The sheer size of Lake Mead is awesome, and patrolling its waters and camping areas, considering more than six million persons visit there annually, adds to the impact.

There were 24 fatalities on the lake in 1976. That included 20 accidentals and four homicides. In the latter case, it means the FBI or Las Vegas Metropolitan Police Department must be called in.

The lake was formed in the mid-1930s when Hoover Dam was completed and the Colorado River waters began backing up. The lake is now used for recreation, with several varieties of game fish.

Recitals, Jazz Concert Scheduled

IN RECITAL JAN. 29 . . . Cellist Daniel Mellado will be in recital at the A. J. Fletcher Recital Hall at 8:15 p.m. Sunday, Jan. 29. There is no admission fee and the public is invited. (ECU News Bureau Photo by Marianne Baines)

Jazz Concert Jan. 23

A jazz concert and a workshop featuring the Thad Jones/Mel Lewis Jazz Orchestra will take place at East Carolina University on Monday, Jan. 23. The workshop will be at 3 p.m. and the concert at 8 p.m., both in Wright Auditorium.

The award winning orchestra is composed of a racially-mixed group of musicians. Specializing in a subtle and mellow type of jazz, the band has a widely varied repertoire with considerable blues-oriented material. They use oombinations of acoustic piano and bass, solos with rhythm section, bass and flute counterpoint, and such unusual combinations as trumpets and trombones only.

Duo-Piano Recital Jan. 25

Pianists Everett Pittman and Charles Stevens will present a duo-piano recital on Wednesday, Jan. 25 at 8:15 p.m. in the A. J. Fletcher Recital Hall on the East Carolina University campus.

Dr. Pittman is dean of the ECU School of Music, and Dr. Stevens is assistant dean.

Among compositions they will play are Bela Bartok's Sonata for Two Pianos and Percussion and the Poulenc Concerto in D Minor.

They will be assisted by percussionists Patrick Flaherty and John Stamp, both graduate students in the ECU School of Music.

There is no admission charge for the recital and the public is invited.

'Cello Recital Jan. 29

Cellist Daniel Mellado, a member of the East Carolina School of Music faculty, will perform in recital on Sunday, Jan. 29 at 8:15 p.m. in the A. J. Fletcher Recital hall on campus.

His program will include Boccherini's Adagio and Allegro; Kodaly's Sonata for Solo 'Cello; Martinu's Duo For Violin and 'Cello; and Debussy's Sonata for 'Cello and Piano.

Mellado will be assisted in his performance by pianist Gerald Dunbar and violinist Fairya Mellado.

Prior to joining the ECU music faculty last fall, Mellado was on the faculty of the University of Northern Colorado. He holds a master's degree from the University of Colorado and is a doctoral candidate at Michigan State University. In 1973, he received a Ford Foundation Fellowship for Advanced Study.

There is no admission charge and the public is invited.

Music Winners

RALEIGH — Winners of the Kathleen and Joseph M. Bryan Young Artists Competition for artists under 30 have been announced by the N. C. Symphony Society. This year, the 28th of the competition drew 76 contestants from 24 states, Puerto Rico and Washington, D. C., competing for $3800 in prize money and for guest solo appearances with the symphony during the 1978-79 concert season.

Ms. Catherine Tait, an instructor at Michigan State University and a member of the university's resident string quartet, won first place in the strings competition. Other winners in the string category are Timothy Baker of Kentucky, second place, and Guillermo Figueroa of Puerto Rico, third place winner.

The prize for the best entrant in the strings competition from North Carolina went to Michael Mathews of Greensboro.

Ms. Martha Snoddy, an instructor in voice at Shenandoah College and Conservatory at Winchester, Va., won first place in voice competition. Second and third place winners were Ms' Gwendolyn Bradley of Philadelphia and Ms. Deanna McBroom of Eau Claire, Wisc.

Ms. Barbara Metelli of Greensboro was chosen as the best North Carolina entrant in voice competition.

Hospitality House

Latest information on the Monitor is the topic of Kay Currie's "Hospitality House" over WITN-TV, Channel 7, from noon til 12:30 p.m. today.

The guest talking with Kay on the show is John Newton of Beaufort, director of the Monitor Research and Recovery Foundation. Newton will discuss ways in which the sunken vessel can be brought up from the continental shelf of the ocean floor. He also discusses plans being made relative to preparatory work to be carried out in the foundation's headquarters, to be located in Norfolk, Va.

In his remarks, Newton indicates that the support of the people will be necessary, and that the project will be a national one.

Kesler, Thompson Joint Exhibition At The Art Center

The current Art Center exhibition, featuring works by two graduate assistants of the School of Art, ECU — Charles Kesler and Rosie Thompson, offers good points as well as somedisappointments.

With Kesler, the major shortcoming is the lack of more pieces. This artist is one of a growing number of local (mostly university based artists) who shows a fine talent for drawing. Though some of his works can correctly be called paintings, the basic emphasis is on the drawn line. The small number of works shown — ten or twelve of them — are insufficient to give the kind of insight needed in an artist's work.

Two of his drawings, both in black and white — "The Threat of Impotence" and "Sparring Partners", are particularly satisfying in the balance of multiple segments of design and textures. Two drawings (paintings) that make effective use of color are "Twine Remember" and ""Self Portrait." Totally different in concept, "Twine" is a good example of a simplified work that appeals visually, both up close and long range. "Self Portrait" (shown earlier at McDonald's, E. 10th and Cotanche Streets), is by any measure an intruiging work. Symbolism is rich and imaginative, Walking fingers as in a telephone yellow pages ad are transformed into elephant forms; and a head and shoulders portrait in the same manner becomes a brain study before it too becomes an elephant form. A fertilized sperm cell and a gold key are other symbols in the painting. Opaque forms float through the painting like cloud forms. This is a busy, complicated painting, but it works.

Rosie Thompson makes innovative use of modern plastic materials to create strange sculptural forms, most of them displayed onpolished metal racks with a basic similarity to those used to hold bird cages or potted vines. Inevitably, these organically inspired forms invite comparison to other forms — known or imagined. . . scarecrows from outer space, sophisticated designs for elaborate hot water bottles that would delight an interior decorator, or pliable corsets for some oddly shaped creature.

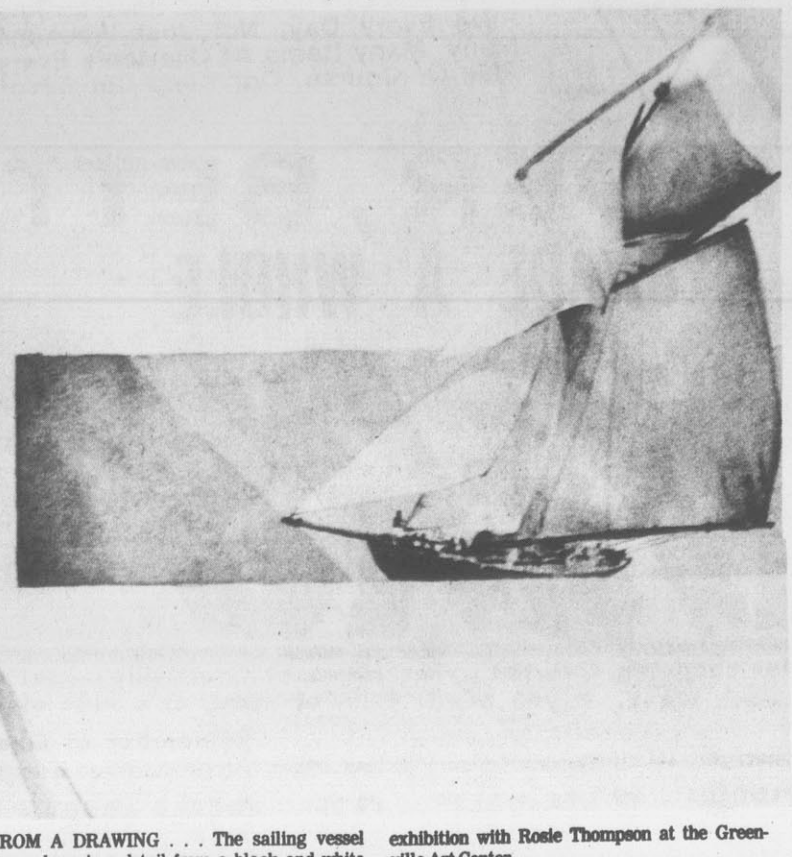

Thompson's meticulous craftsmanship is evident in each piece. Some are wired and have small insets of tiny lighted bulbs or meters that change number combinations while the viewer watches.

In conjunction with the sculpted items, Ms. Thompson shows attractive paper cutouts that parallel shapes ofthe forms. She also has a series of framed medical type readings called "Brain Wave Celebrations."

The disappointment in the sculpted works is that one feels that on a larger scale, in a setting less cramped than a small gallery, they would gain much in an interplay of forms of space.

Art Center hours for viewing this show are 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. daily, Monday through Friday.

FROM SHEPPARD MEMORIAL LIBRARY

By JOE STINES

Among the new additions to the Children's Library, young readers will discover a spirited, liberated ten year old by the name of Georgina Gooch. GEORGINA AND THE DRAGON by Lee Kingman is an amusing tale of Georgina (Georgie to her parents) Gooch's efforts to raise the cash needed to pay her way to Boise, Idaho where her deceased great-grandmother, for whom she was named, was to be honored. Georgina Poindexter Farraday, woman suffragist extraordinaire had brought the vote for women to Idaho with the slogan "Women Are Here for Ever."

A thorough canvassing of the neighborhood for jobs convinced Georgina it was a man's world and that equal job opportunities, even for a ten-year-old girl, didn't exist. With some ingenuity, spunk, and old fashioned determination, however, it wasn't long before Georgina took over where three neighborhood males left off, tackled the fire-breathing dragon of an old lady, Mrs. Livermore, and, with this same independent soul, succeeded in upsetting the stereotyped roles in her own family and neighborhood.

Edith Hunter's SUE ELLEN has also been added to the children's collection. Sue Ellen is eight years old. She can't read or write and sometimes she has difficulty making sense of what is going on around her. She sleeps in class and steals the other students' unfinished lunches. There is no one to blame; her mother is an invalid and her father works seven days a week for long hours to bring home the money which is not enough to support Sue Ellen and her five brothers and sisters. Sue Ellen dreads going to school as much as she dreads staying home.

Then one day Sue Ellen doesn't get off the school bus at her regular stop. She stays on until she arrives at a special class. This class is for children with severe learning problems. The class changes Sue Ellen's life.

This is the story of growth and hope for a child who is "different," and even more remarkable is that it is Sue Ellen herself who takes the reader along with her as she confronts each problem. Sue Ellen's road to education, confidence, and a new respect for herself is slow but steadily uphill. Author Edith Hunter has succeeded in making Sue Ellen a thoroughly believable person. She is not just one child with a specific problem, instead she becomes every child with any problem.

Modern Art Film

"The Challenge: A Tribute to Modern Art," a film featuring the work and personalities of Picasso, Matisse, Chagall, Braque, Dali, Moore, Mondrian and DeKooning will be shown at ECU three times next week.

The schedule is 7 p.m. today; 8 p.m. Tuesday, Jan. 24; and 8 p.m. Thursday, Jan. 26. Showings will be held in the ECU Mendenhall Student Center theater. Tickets are $1 each.

Orson Welles is narrator in the film that includes rare footage of great modern artists in their studios, creating and commenting on their own work. The film also covers museums such as the Louvre, the Guggenheim and the Museum of Modern Art.

Photo Exhibition

An exhibition entitled "Photographing the Frontier," 100 rare photographs which document the lives of frontier settlers between 1860 and 1915, is on display at Mendenhall Student Center gallery for a brief period, through Jan. 27.

The show, sponsored by "Illumina," the Student Union Art Exhibition Committee and the Smithsonian Institution, includes camera portraits of miners, school children and shopkeepers, and frontier settings such as street parades, saloons, and railroads.

The public is invited to see the show during day and evening hours of the center. There is no admission charged.

Abrams Lecture Set

"Linguistics, Art, Sex, and Power" is the topic of a lecture to be given at 3 p.m. Tuesday, Jan. 24 at the Jenkins Fine Arts Auditorium on the ECU campus by artist Jane Abrams.

Ms. Abrams, an assistant professor of art at the University of New Mexico, has an exhibition of her work now on view at the Gray Gallery in the Jenkins Fine Arts Center.

There is no admission charge for the lecture and the public is invited to attend and to meet the artist after the lecture.

FWB TV Special

A one-hour television special celebrating the 250th anniversary of the founding of the first Free Will Baptist Church in North Carolina will be telecast beginning at 12:30 p.m. today on WITN-TV, Channel 7, Washington.

The third oldest denomination in North Carolina, Original Free Will Baptists from across the state gathered at Mount Olive on NvemNovember 22 for a 250-year tribute.

Among persons taking part in the celebration were Dr. Michael Pelt, president of the Free Will Baptist Historical Society and chairman of the Humanities Division at Mount Olive; Gov. James B. Hunt, Jr., and six of the ten living past presidents of the state convention — including Rev. L. B. Fountain of Fountain, C. L. Patrick of Walstonburg, Walter Reynolds of Ayden, and Willis Wilson of Winterville.

Writers To Meet

The second meeting for the month of January of the Greenville Writer's Club will be held at 8 p.m. Tuesday, Jan. 24 at the home of Dr. and Mrs. Oral Parks, 1609 Oaklawn Drive.

All persons interested in any form of creative writing are welcomed. There are no fees involved for the meetings.

Summer Directory

Sheppard Memorial Library now has on hand the 1978 Directory of Overseas Summer Jobs, which lists 50,000 job vacancies in 30 countries such as Wales, Scotland, England, Northern Ireland and Channel Islands.

This annual publication is considered an outstanding guide in helping high school and college students, teachers and others to find overseas employment during the summer months.

Nature Walk

A nature walk, led by a member of the Fort Macon State Park staff, will be held at 9 a.m. Saturday, Jan 28, at the park site, near Atlantic Beach.

Classes Being Offered At Art Center

Three art classes are being organized to be offered to the public by the Greenville Art Center.

Classes to be offered and the projected beginning dates are: Arts and Crafts for children, instructor to be announced, twice weekly, 3:30 to 4:30 p.m. Tuesday and Thursdays, beginning Jan. 31 and Feb. 2. — Painting class for adults, Charles Kesler, instructor, 10 a.m. to noon on Wednesdays, beginning Feb. 1, and — Watercolor classes, Warren Chamberlain, instructor, Thursdays, 10 a.m. to noon, beginning Feb. 2.

Persons interested in registration and information on fees and materials are to call the Art Center, 758-1946.

Of the 2.3 million Americans who sought passports in 1975, more than 1.3 million intended to use them for pleasure travel, with most applicants intending to go to Europe, according to the Census Bureau.

Pitt County Native Walter Avery --- Farmer, Dedicated Churchgoer And Family Man

Going On 92, And Still Going Strong

FARMVILLE — The day before Valentine he will be 92 years old. "And I'm still going strong," Pitt County native Walter Avery likes to say.

Born "this side of the bridge" near Ballards Cross Roads on February 13, 1886, Avery has lived the better part of a century on Pitt County soil "except for 14 years that I lived in Greene County near Lizzie and that ain't far away."

Blessed with health and vitality while approaching the century mark in living, Walter Avery offers no hard and fast theory on attaining that desirable goal.

"One thing that might help, I've been at for 89 years now, is dipping salt snuff," he smiled, taking a small tin box from his coat pocket and putting a bit of it in his mouth. "When I was three years old I got sick and the doctor told my mama to give me snuff." The brand he dips now is Lorilliard's "The one I started on ain't made no more."

Avery makes it clear that just plain being active is important. He's raised two sets of children — eight by his first wife and two by his second wife.

The present Mrs. Avery, the former Nellie Brantley, a native of Spring Hope in Franklin County, is a sprightly 60 year old who vows her much older husband is not yet an old man. "Walter don't act like an old man, not at all," she laughed. "He still takes walks every day and goes to church every Sunday."

Avery has been hospitalized only once in all these years, and that was last year, after he'd reached his 91st birthday. "For a while there I was worried I'd have a bald headed man," Mrs. Avery said. "The medicine they gave him made his skin peel and his hair started coming out, but it's come back now and you can see for yourself he's got a good head of hair." And he has indeed. There's considerable silver in it, but's it's a long way from being white.

Avery admitted he's made a decision not to drive anymore. "I still can drive all right, no doubt about that," he said, "but my eyesight's just a little bit dimmer than it used to be so I let her do the driving."

Boyhood Memories

Avery's memory of events, little and big of long ago are keen. He relishes telling about some of the things he remembers from boyhood years and from later years as his family grew larger.

Perhaps his earliest memory is that as a toddler he wore smocks, or young children's dresses — which was the standard dress for very young boys in those days before the availability of masculine clothes for little boys.

"There's one thing I can talk about now and not worry about it coming back on me now," he chuckled. "When I was a young boy going to school at Williams School House, that's not far from Ballards Cross Roads, seems the teacher was always sending me and another boy to get a bucket of water. It was a good quarter mile we had to tote it. One real cold morning, I didn't want to walk that far. There was a ditch near the school with clean looking water in it, so I scooped up a bucketfull. It didn't hurt anybody. Anyway, we only had one bucket and one dipper for everybody, but we were all healthy just the same."

Avery said that the Williams School and another one-room school he went to, Tucker's School, "are both a long time gone. They were straight little box buildings with boys and girls from all grades in the one room right together. We had first readers, second readers, third readers, on down the line."

Other boyhood memories he recalls with especial pleasure had to do with animals he owned. "None of us back then had bicycles," he related. "The first thing I had to ride was a billy goat. I just called him Billy. After that I broke in a young calf for a pet.

"This friend of mine, about the same age, also had a calf he broke in. We built a riding cart, using an old axle and wheels. One day, the two of us double yoked the two calves, they didn't weigh more than three or four hundred pounds each, to the cart and headed out for Greenville. We were just young boys, but we beat the others who went by mule and cart into town. We brought back four sacks of guano on that little cart pulled by the calves."

The next step up in transportation for Avery was the trade of his calf, "then grown up to a steer, for a mule. It was a light mule, six or seven hundred pounds, and I had a saddle. That meant I had good riding."

Avery's first automobile "was a 1912 Chevrolet. I've had many cars since then," he noted.

One of the events of national import in his youth that sticks to his mind "was the assassination of President McKinley. That was right after the turn of the century. Back then of course we didn't have radio or TV, and so it was not like today, when you hear about something the minute it happens. It took a few days for the news to get out to the countryside."

Simple Ways of Living

"Young people now wouldn't know what to do if they didn't have more than we had," Avery reminisced. "I remember once I made myself a banjo out of a cigar box. I did have a harp and learned to play that. There was no such thing as rock and roll then either," he laughed.

Another form of entertainment, especially on Sundays, was "house visiting. All the young people would meet at certain houses, visit awhile, go on to another house. Lots of time on the way from one house to another we'd play shoo round in the middle of the road, or we'd play it in a yard."

Asked what shoo round was, Avery explained, "it was a simple game, where we'd all join hands and sing 'all ring around my sugar lump, sugar lump.' Sometimes we'd have candy pullings. That was fun."

Living conditions in rural areas before the turn of the century and for many years after would today be termed primitive. "Lots of times I can remember my daddy taking lightwood kindling sticks, lighting them from the fireplace and sticking them in bottles or jars for us to see and read by. That was because there was no money for kerosene."

Avery recalled a move they made from one farm house to another on a winter day. "Everything we had was piled up on a wagon and a rail bedded cart," he said. "When we got there we had to wait a while for the man living there to move out. It was a bitter cold day. Houses back then weren't like they are now. That one didn't have a ceiling in the upper floor. Snow blowed in my face while I slept, but I didn't freeze, I stayed healthy."

In the early 1900's, "town ball was our main game," Avery said. "It's like baseball, only you were allowed to throw the ball at a man running between bases. If you hit him, he was out. We didn't use the kind of baseball people play with now. Ours were string balls." Strings were saved from putting in tobacco and wrapped into a ball around a core.

Very Little Money

"Nowadays," Avery remarked, "people don't know much about what it's like to be without money, at least not most of the time." When he was young, it was far different. "I can remember many the times me and my daddy walked more than two miles each way to help out a man in working. Daddy got 90 cents a day, I got 35 cents a day. And they were long working days. We'd get up at three in the morning to leave the house and not get back until night. They were tough times." One work adventure Avery laughed about involved a long wait for payment. "I made a bargain with this man to tote a cat off for him, to take the cat a mile away, for a dime. When he paid me, he give me a nickel. I had to wait three years before he finally paid me that other nickel."

On the other side of the coin, what money was available went a long way. "The first suit my daddy ever bought for me, and it was a good suit, cost $1.50. I got a whole outfit, shoes for $1.25, and a fancy cap with ears on it for 25 cents. I was really dressed up."

A big bag of meal cost a dollar, and families bought flour by the barrel.

"The only thing you had to buy to get a good supply of wine was a barrel of brown sugar. We'd gather three barrels of scuppernong grapes, load them and the barrel of sugar on a cart and take it to this man who made the wine for us. We'd come back home with 35 gallons of good juice that before long was good tasting wine."

No Fuss Marriage

Avery's first wife was Rosa Verna Nobles, a neighborhood girl he courted. In 1909, when he was 23, he decided it was time to get married.

"We didn't make much fuss about it," he said. "When the day come for us to get married, I got dressed, walked up the road to her house. The man who married us waited on the back porch. That was where he married us.

"That was in the very early part of 1909 before the spring time. Our first child Ethel, was born in December of that year. She's my oldest child, and is 68 years old now." The second child was also a girl, Mattie." (These two are now Mrs. Ethel Garris and Mrs. Mattie Worthington). Six more children were born to this union — all boys — Dalton, (the only one of the eight who is deceased), Linwood, John B., Lyman, Walter, and Wilbur."

It was during those widower years that many changes began to take place in rural areas everywhere in America — the years of the late 1920's and early 1930's — depression years that still saw entertainment by machines take root.

"The first thing we had was a gramaphone," Avery said. "The children, and me too, enjoyed it, but as the girls grew up I traded it off for a piano.

"It was about 1934 that we got our first radio, one with big batteries to operate it with."

Second Marriage

"I stayed a widower for nine years," Avery said. "Then I married Nellie."

"I was 18, and he was 49," Mrs. Avery entered the conversation. "But he was a young 49, just like he's a young 91 now," she smiled. "In fact, his five oldest children are older than I am."

Walter and Nellie Avery have two children. "The oldest, a girl, Judy, is now a Jarvis. Our youngest, Lester Carroll, will soon be 38. He's the father of these two children," Mrs. Avery said, introducing her 13 year old grandson Timmy, and his 12 year old sister, Tammy, when they came in from school. Both are students at Farmville Middle School.

Mrs. Avery is the family's historian. She keeps a neat family tree record of several generations. It took her only a moment to confirm from her chart the figures she and her husband cited from memory.

The Older Generation

Walter Avery is one of 12 children of the late James Henry "Buck" Avery and Woodie Ann Brann Avery. There were four girls — Etta, Lucy, Ellen and Rita; and eight boys — Walter, Butler, Chester, Herbert, John, Herman, Reuben, and Jim.

In addition to Walter Avery, three of the 12 are still living; two sisters, Mrs. Etta Pilgreen and Mrs. Ellen Pilgreen; and a brother, Chester. The two other sisters have only died recently. The oldest of all the 12, Jim, died at 86.

Besides the Avery children, there was an uncle who lived with the family. "Uncle Reuben Kinsaul was a Civil War veteran," Avery said. "He went through the war without a scratch, then come home and got shot rabbit hunting. The way it happened, he leaned over a rabbit hole to reach into it and the gun went off, wounding him.

"Uncle Reuben got married, but his wife and child died in childbirth.

"For a long time Uncle Reuben visited us every day, walking from his house to ours. Later on, he moved in with us and become part of the family."

Faithful Churchgoer

Since boyhood, the church has been central to Walter Avery's life. "I was 18 when I joined the Piney Grove Church," he said.

"I've been a member 74 years, longer than any other person there. There's another member older than me, but he hasn't been a member as long."

Avery said he and his first wife went there faithfully, just as he and the present Mrs. Avery has.

"The only time he's missed," Mrs. Avery pointed out, "was the three weeks he was in Pitt County Hospital. Soon as he got out, he started right back again."

Avery recalled that in past years, when revival would be held, nearly everybody in the neighborhood walked to the night services. "Most of the time, revival would be going on at the same time at Warren Chapel Church, the Negro church down the road.

"They had some mighty good singing, and usually some of us would stop to listen. They were always nice about it, and made room for us so we could hear them singing."

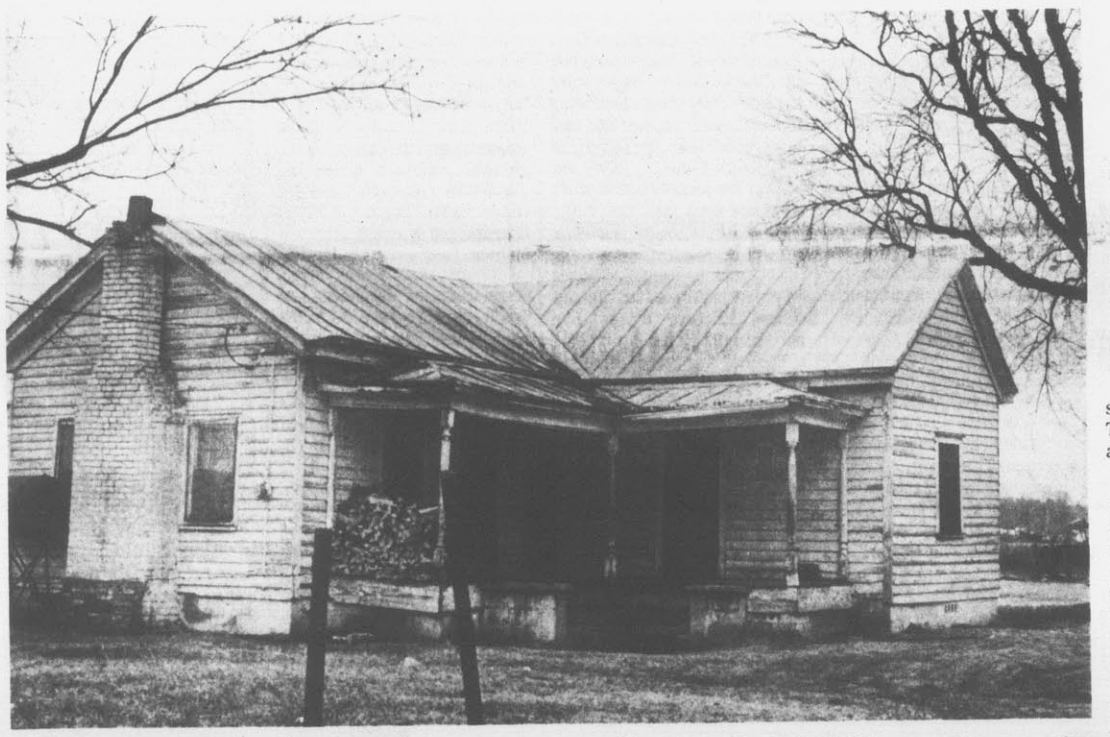

Expects To Reach 100

With eight more years and a week or so to go before his 100th birthday comes around, Walter Avery says he has every reason to think he'll make it. "That is," he smiled, "if the good Lord is willing."

FAMILY PORTRAIT, 1912 . . . This family portrait of the James Henry (Buck) and Woodie Ann Avery family was made at the Avery home in the spring of 1912. Unless otherwise indicated, persons pictured in the photograph are deceased. In the front row, left to right are: Butler Avery, Uncle Reuben Kinsaul, Chester Avery (living), James Henry "Buck" Avery, Etta Avery Pilgreen (living), Woodie Ann Brann Avery, Ethel Avery Garris (living), and Melinda Moore Brann (Mrs. Avery's mother). Back row, left to right are: Walter Avery, (living) Mattie Avery Worthington — shown on her father's shoulder — (living), Herbert Avery, John Avery, Herman Avery, Lucy Avery Wainwright, Ellen Avery Pilgreen (living), and Reuben Avery. Two family members, Jim Avery and Rita Avery, were not home at the time the portrait was made.

THE AVERY HOUSE TODAY . . . This is how the house Walter Avery grew up in looks today. Still owned by a member of the Avery family, the frame farm house is located about eight miles from Greenville on County Road 1124, commonly known as the Speight See Farm Road in what was in the early part of the century called the Nobles Town Community.

Text And Photos By Jerry Raynor

On February 13, Walter Avery will celebrate his 92nd birthday. Still keen mentally and active physically, he has no magic formula to espouse, but feels that hard work, simple living and the fortune of good health have all played important roles in his long life span. "If the good Lord is willing, I plan to live to be 100," he declares.

GOING ON 92 . . .Now living in Farmville, Walter Avery will soon be 92 — he was born February 13, 1886. With Avery is his wife, Nellie Brantley Avery (left), granddaughter Tammy Avery, and seated on the floor, grandson Timmy Avery. Avery says he's had a hard-working life, and has done a little of everything "except digging marl."

Credit Card Boom: Turbulence Unmatched

By JAMES A. WHITE
UPI Business Writer

NEW YORK (UPI) — Major credit card issuers are handing out new plastic to Americans at the highest clip in history.

New Visa and Master Charge card approvals are averaging almost 75,000 a day. Both cards finished 1977 with record increases and expect substantial gains this year as well.

The national economy and the appetite of Americans for credit have less to do with the surge in new cards than an upheaval in the credit card industry. Among the changes that have spurred use of the cards:

— The bank card segment of credit card business, represented by Master Charge and Visa, is the big one. Banks that once issued one card now issue both.

— For the first time, savings and loans and credit unions are offering cards.

— Department stores which clung to their own cards for years now take bank cards.

— New uses are being found for credit cards. They include brokerage business and check approval.

"The bank card industry today," said John J. Reynolds, president of Interbank Card Association's Master Charge system, "is undergoing a turbulence unmatched since the earliest days of its existence." Bank cards, of course, really did only begin to take hold 10 years ago.

"We are in a hell of a hurry," said Kenneth V. Larkin, senior vice president of Bank of America, San Francisco, originator of BankAmericard (now Visa) and the biggest bank card issuer. "But we don't know where we're going."

To the card holders themselves, Reynolds believes, all the churning in the card industry is "of less than consuming importance." He is speaking of the U.S. holders of 85 million Visa and Master Charge cards. And also, he refers to about 8.5 million holders of tougher-to-get travel and entertainment cards. They are mainly American Express, Diners Club and Carte Blanche.

Where the rocketing growth of card-carrying credit users has its most telling effect is within the industry. It tests the ability of card systems to handle millions more transactions. And of concern to credit watchers is how holders use their expanding credit and how the card issuers go about attracting new business.

But card users certainly have a stake in the changes underway. Particularly, they will be affected by the shape of the electronic cashless systems now being mapped and whether they will be charged more or less for credit card services.

Behind such practical considerations is an expanding backlash against the notion that credit is as American as the Fourth of July.

"The average American believes he or she is entitled to credit and hence the drive to open up credit opportunities for women and others," said Gerald A. Lareau, president of the Consumer Credit Counseling Service of Greater New York.

"But you have another force saying credit is too easy," Lareau said. "You see the conflict there building."

Indeed, while Americans now have run up a record consumer debt of $212 billion, and it is an essential ingredient of the economy, most don't like the idea of debt.

A 1975 Yankelovich study sponsored by General Mills Inc. found 60 percent of 1,200 families interviewed feel being debt-free is a "very important personal value." Forty-five percent said debt removal was a major future goal.

But two-thirds of the families use credit for daily expenses, including seven percent who buy food on credit.

"What makes debt more palatable, however, is the way it is now defined," the study found. "Debt means falling behind in payments, not simply owing money."

The latest credit card blizzard was touched off 18 months ago when Visa, bowing to the Justice Department, dropped its long-standing ban forbidding banks to issue Master Charge along with Visa.

Banks quickly moved into "duality," some grudgingly but with little competitive choice as neighbor and even far-away banks started signing up customers for new cards and merchants to honor them.

Mailing unsolicited cards has been outlawed for eight years but banks already in the card business found another way to distribute new cards in a hurry — signing up good risks for a second card.

"You have a good Visa record with us so we have approved a Master Charge account for you," goes one telephone solicitation. Unless the consumer responds flatly, "I don't want it," the new card is on its way.

Rules also were relaxed to allow credit unions and savings institutions to issue cards and many eagerly entered the field.

The plastic flurry has not changed card company views that cash and even checks are here to stay despite steps toward electronic systems.

"The idea that a grandiose electronic funds transfer system will come into being is a figment of the imagination," said Visa President Dee W. Hock. More processing of orders to transfer money will be done electronically but Hock says consumers won't accept an "ephemeral visual image on a terminal" to replace paper.

Consumer acceptance is considered the key to making EFT systems profitable enough to offset huge startup costs.

ATMs — automated teller machines that handle deposits, withdrawals, tranfers and loan payments to the bank — are springing up in many regions with apparent success. So are terminals in supermarkets for grocery charges or check approvals.

Citibank of New York has taken the biggest plunge into EFT, investing $50 million to install two ATMs each in most of its 270 branches. Industry observers say the bank, which also moved last year to sign up credit card customers in 25 states, has taken a huge gamble on ATMs that will either be a major boost or blow to EFT systems nationwide.

Meanwhile, the bank card systems have expanded their capacity to handle today's transactions and say they got through the Christmas rush smoothly. Whether two huge systems are needed is debated but merger talk terrifies many in the industry.

They say consumers would lose and they also fear heavy regulation of a single system. The industry, merger opponents say, already has enough fights on its hands, including a battery of credit card and EFT proposals Congress will consider this year.

Credit cards lend themselves to easy analogies:

— A carspending on credit provides a gratification high followed inevitably when bills come due.

Credit users rarely think in such terms but many — 42 percent in the Yankelovich study — view credit cards and charge accounts as a temptation.

That American attitudes toward credit and debt have deep roots is indicated by the use of the two general types of debt relief provided in the federal bankruptcy laws.

One covered in Chapter 13 of the bankruptcy act is a financial reorganization aimed at eventual debt repayment with the aid of court supervision. The other is the so-called straight bankruptcy, wiping out all debts. State laws vary widely over what possessions the debtor can keep after straight bankruptcy.

"We have very few Chapter 13s," says Federal Bankruptcy Judge John J. Galgay of the U.S. Southern District of New York. Most bankrupts appearing before him want to wipe out their debts, "like crossing the River Jordan and leaving your sins on the other side," he says.

Court officials say the Southern District had about 25 Chapter 13 personal bankruptcies in 1977 compared to some 1,300 straight bankruptcies but the gap is narrower elsewhere in the country.

Galgay cites New England and Southern states where Chapter 13 reorganizations to pay off debts are much more prevalent. "It's a moral or religious focus — maybe it's less in sophisticated New York," the judge said.

Galgay says he sees no increase in personal bankruptcy petitions and in fact the number declined in his district last year. Card issuers like to note their deliquency rates declined steadily in 1977 to 2.6 percent not paying on time.

Bankers, relying increasingly on computer screening, say they are more cautious than ever in issuing cards to good risks. Still they are keeping their fingers crossed to see how post-Christmas bills are paid on all the new cards in circulation.

And while easy credit is a myth for many, the borrowing power showered on some with numerous charge cards and overdraft checking accounts is scary. "When one customer turns belly up, it hurts all of us," says one banker.

While the morality of credit irks some, consumer advocates rail against the injustice they see in spreading credit costs to those who pay cash on the barrelhead.

"When cash customers don't get a discount — when they pay the same as a credit card holder — they are in fact being forced to help finance the cost of credit," in the view of Consumers Union. "... They are paying for a service they don't want and don't get."

Congress agreed and last summer regulations were issued that banned surcharges on credit purchases but allowed sellers to give up to five percent off for cash.

The law has caused barely a ripple in the credit ocean.

Consumers, surveys show, don't know they can ask for a cash discount and many merchants, who choose to give a discount or not, like it that way. The reasons include the cumbersome discount rules and potential problems at the checkout counter.

"Merchants don't want to deal with customers on a different basis," said Master Charge's Reynolds, adding with some self-interest: "What does a merchant want all that cash hanging around for. Nobody is going to steal charge chits."

Pro-discounters, however, see some progress and are watching an experiment by Exxon giving a two-cent a gallon discount on cash gas purchases in two cities.

Exxon has some 6.5 million credit accounts and many more actual cardholders. Of its $7.9 billion in 1976 automobile gas sales, almost half were charged.

The year-old test in Abilene, Texas, and Charleston, S.C., was set up when Exxon dealers created the two-cent a gallon differential — a penny up for charge customers and a penny down for cash motorists.

"The reaction was very favorable, not only with Exxon customers but with others," said an Exxon marketing official in Houston. "We're encouraged."

Exxon backed the test with advertising alerting motorists to the available discount. But despite general acceptance the company still has questions and is not ready to say what it plans with discounts.

"How it affects buying habits — we're still trying to ferret that out," the Exxon official said.

Is Exxon looking to dump credit cards?

The discount test "shouldn't convey that we think credit card customers aren't going to be around," the marketing official insists. "Credit cards are not a profit center — we look at it as an expense item in marketing — but credit card customers are valuable to us."

Much the same can be said for issuers of Visa and Master Charge.

While tough to quantify, customers often do more business with the bank that gave them their charge card. Mailing statements lets a bank stuff the envelope with come-ons for such things as stationery or silverware as well as financial services.

Still, competition has pushed down merchant discounts — the percentage the merchant pays the credit card issuer on charge purchases — and despite increased charge volume, bank card profits have been squeezed.

Even before added competition caused by duality, some banks said they were losing on cards and card officials began talking openly about some sort of fee not unike the $20 annual charge for the travel and entertainment cards.

In April, 1976, Citibank took the first step. In a move widely criticized, the nation's second largest bank and biggest issuer of Master Charge added a 50-cent monthly service charge to bills of cardholders paying their balances in full each month.

The result was a failure, as Citibank conceded when it backed down this month.

The idea Citibank couldn't sell was that those who charge and pay no interest on the borrowed money are getting a "free ride." A bank, Citibank argued, pays merchants for the charged purchases before the cardholder repays the bank, so those who avoid interest charges get a credit float for nothing.

Citibank said it was losing seven cents on each dollar of credit card revenue as some holders used their cards as a bill paying device, paying in full each month.

"These people knew it was a free ride — people like to beat the system," said John Reed, Citibank executive vice president. "We weren't just trying to increase revenue on the cards," he said. "We were trying to make a distinction between the two groups."

Citibank Master Charge cardholders balked and so did other banks Citibank hoped would follow its lead. In addition the bank began issuing Visa cards last year without a fee on paid-up accounts, creating more aggravation.

Citibank's failure has not killed the question. Some bankers think annual fees are inevitable even though it would be an about-face on years of promoting bank cards over the travel and entertainment cards because there is no such fee.

"There's no reason why banks should give away their services," says Master Charge's Reynolds. "The American public is smart — they will accept (a fee) or reject it if they think it's unfair."

HOW LONG have you wanted a home in the country? We have one that is not for the ordinary. Located two miles from Greenville, this almost new ranch was custom built for the owners and what a job the builder did! The large sunken family room in the middle of the house is the center of attraction. But this home has more — formal living room, formal dining room, very attractive kitchen with breakfast room. The bookshelves and desk off the kitchen are very suitable and the three bedrooms and two baths make this the perfect house. Plus a double car garage, storage room outside, heat pump and priced in the low 60's. Call us now to see this fabulous home. Hignite & Company, Inc., 758-6666 anytime.

TOYOTA

WE GOT IT!

There are dozens of import cars to choose from this year. But there's only one Motor Trend magazine Import Car of the Year. The all-new 1978 Toyota Celica. From this year's finest imports, Celica was chosen the overall leader in design, engineering, and quality of construction. Not just one Celica, but all three—the GT and ST Sport Coupes, and the GT Liftback. If you're looking for this year's best all-around import, look at Celica first. Because the car of tomorrow is also the "Car of the Year." Come in today and let us show you why.

TARHEEL TOYOTA

109 Trade St. Dealer No. 3035 756-3228

The Cadillac Motor Car Division announced its dealers have established a new calendar year domestic delivery record of 335,785 units in 1977, 10.3 percent, or 31,300 cars more than the previous record of 304,485 new Cadillacs delivered in 1976.

We ended 1977 the same way we began the year, with a monthly domestic sales record. The 27,773 units Cadillac dealers delivered this December surpasses the former record for any December, 27,341 Cadillacs set in 1976, by 432 cars..

We've proven in the business arena that our new Cadillac offerings satisfy the desires and needs of discriminating owners. The entire Cadillac team is to be congratulated for their superior efforts this past year, and encouraged to use this as a springboard for increased future performance.

Williamsburg, Evanswood Subdivision, Evanswood Drive, $68,000

Pictures do not lie and this picture truly reflects the beauty of this new home in Evanswood. Gorgeous wooded lot, double garage and breezeway. Dual heat pumps and central air.

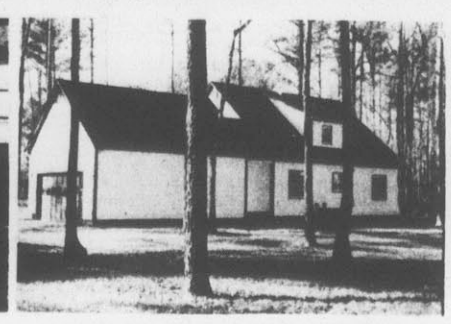

The spacious great room is extra large and can provide for different conversation areas. The adjoining dining room can seat sufficient guests to satisfy the most ambitious hostess. An extra wide colonial...

...Type hall leads through the center of the home to this beautiful kitchen. Quality cabinetry, dishwasher and disposal. The kitchen carpeting creates an atmosphere of happiness and contentment.

The breakfast room will be the family meeting place. There is one large bedroom downstairs with adjoining bath and two additional bedrooms on the second floor with bath.

The rear yard is also wooded and there is lots of space for the kids and dogs to play. The breezeway will be the spot to enjoy spring and autumn evenings.

Traditional Two Story, Evanswood Subdivision, Evanswood Drive $63,500

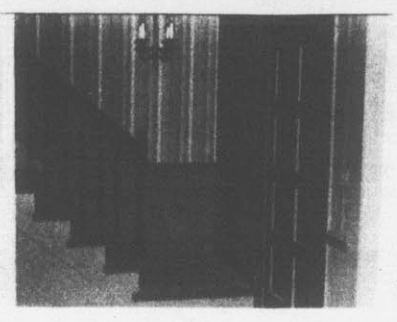

The traditional two story is a long time favorite because it is so liveable and functional. Double paneled garage and dual heat pumps and central air. A pure delight.

The large fireplace with it's mantle and adjoining bookshelves and cabinets is the center attraction in this family room. Sliding glass door to the left lead to the patio.

Kitchens are important to a woman and this kitchen has your needed cabinet space. Dishwasher and disposal. Lots of space for the kitchen table and chairs. The dining room adjoins.

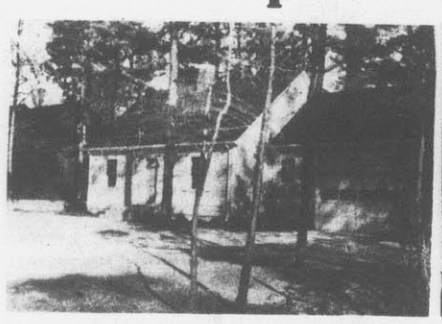

Guests will enter into this pretty foyer. There is a guest bathroom downstairs and three bedrooms and two full baths upstairs.

Cape Cod, Belvedere Subdivision, Crestline Boulevard, $54,800

This Cape Cod sits very happily on it's nicely wooded lot. A very well planned and proven floor plan make it perfect for the growing family.

The front door leads directly into a beautiful foyer with the master bedroom and bath to the right. An elegant stairway leads to two upstairs bedrooms and bath.

The great room with its eye catching fireplace will keep you warm on a winter's night. The adjoining dining area allows dining guests to enjoy the friendly glow of the fireplace.

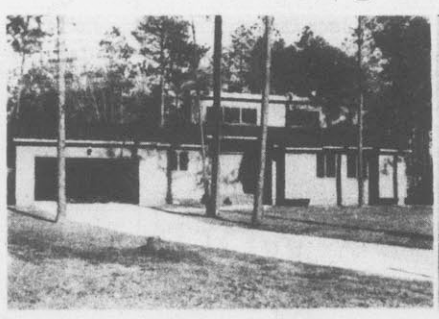

The kitchen is well planned and attractive making it easy to cook the largest meals. Stove, dishwasher and stainless steel sink.

Contemporary, Belvedere Subdivision, Claybourne Court, $51,000

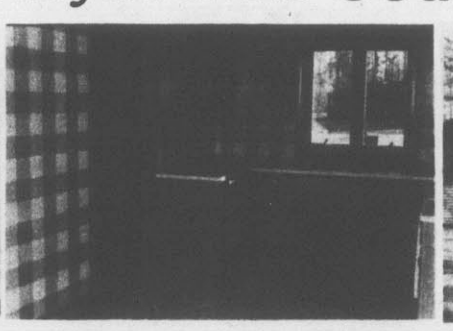

Contemporaries are becoming increasingly popular and this one is really fantastic. Quiet cul-de-sac. Exceptionally large wooded lot. Double garage.

The great room is very spacious and the fireplace is between two windows with a view of the deep tree covered rear yard. There is room for everyone here.

You can save on your lighting bills with this skylight in the great room. All windows are thermo pane and the home has extra insulation. The three bedrooms are large and the two baths are tastefully done.

The kitchen faces the front of the home and has impressive light colored cabinets and gaily checked wall paper. The dining area is in the rear of kitchen overlooking the wood deck.

The rear yard is very deep and has many trees. Totally it is a very private area and one which should provide happiness and contentment to the entire family.

Ranch, Singletree Subdivision, Lancaster Drive, $43,000

A delightful new ranch home with a low, low price and all the features of a more expensive home. An appealing front view and attractive roof line are impressive.

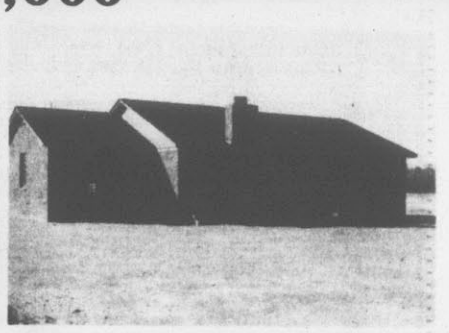

Your guests will enter your home through this pretty foyer. A formal dining room is directly off the foyer and can be used for formal or informal entertaining.

The kitchen has a dishwasher, stove, disposal, stainless steel sinks and well constructed cabinets. Ideal for the mother with a family. Everything is convenient and planned.

The great room has a raised hearth fireplace and beautiful wood panelling. A door leads to the garage and a hallway to the three bedroooms and two baths.

Stars Join Celebration Of Kraft's 75th Anniversary Tuesday On CBS-TV

Singer Leslie Uggams (l), comedian Bob Hope, and dancer Donna McKechnie are three of the many stars who will join in the celebration on "The Kraft 75th Anniversary Special," a 90-minute entertainment special to be broadcast Tuesday, Jan. 24 (9:30-11 p.m.) on CBS-TV.

Personalities representing every facet of the entertainment world, ranging from Edgar Bergen, who, with his Charlie McCarthy, is the personification of the golden age of radio in the 1930's, to Donna McKechnie, who reached stardom on Broadway in the 1970's, will join in the celebration on "The Kraft 75th Anniversary Special," Tuesday, Jan. 24, 9:30 to 11 p.m., on CBS-TV.

Performing on the special are comedian Bob Hope; singer Leslie Uggams; band leader Bob Crosby; Hal Peary, the creator of the Great Gildersleeve; ventriloquist-comedian Edgar Bergen, with Charlie McCarthy; comedians Milton Berle and Alan King; Donna McKechnie, who created her starring role in Broadway's "A Chorus Line"; and country singer and musician Roy Clark.

Each of these performers has been associated with a Kraft-sponsored radio or television program during the 45 years the company has used the broadcast medium for its corporate and product advertising.

In addition to these performances, memorable past performances captured on tape and film, and in photographs, will recall milestone appearances on Kraft-sponsored shows. Some of these personalities include Woody Allen, Warren Beatty, Jack Benny, Glen Campbell, Johnny Carson, Johnny Cash, Perry Como, Bing Crosby, Bobby Darin and James Dean.

The show will also reprise appearances by Al Jolson, John F. Kennedy, Jack Lemmon, Barry Manilow, Groucho Marx, Walter Matthaw, Liza Minnelli, Elizabeth Montgomery, Lee Remick, Don Rickles, Carl Sandberg, Ed Sullivan, Flip Wilson and Stevie Wonder.

Kraft, founded in 1903, began its association with the broadcasting industry with its sponsorship of Paul Whiteman's orchestra in 1933. That radio industry eventually became "Kraft Music Hall," in 1934, and Al Jolson was its first permanent host. Jolson was succeeded by Bing Crosby, who 'ran' the Hall for the next 10 years.

The company used the then infant medium of television for the first time in 1946, with their "Kraft Television Theatre." During its 11 years on the air, the program produced 650 dramas for television and provided a new electronic vehicle for such actors as James Dean, Walter Matthau, Lee Marvin, Rod Steiger, Jack Lemmon, Warren Beatty, Peter Falk, George C. Scott, Charlton Heston, and many others.

Highlights of many Kraft-sponsored shows will be broadcast in a nostalgic parade of great moments in entertainment and broadcasting history on the special.

Martin Reflects Upon TV Roasts

This is how Dean Martin looks upon his NBC-TV Roasts. Martin, who will do six Roasts in 1977 and in 1978, was relaxing prior to a taping at the MGM Grand Hotel in Las Vegas. The singer was sitting inside a portable dressing room on stage in the Ziegfeld Room waiting for producer-director Greg Garrison to give the cue for another Roast taping.

"Our Roasts," Martin continues, "are comedy and people want to be entertained. Viewers like to see their favorite performers made fun of. They know they're not done for real, just for laughs, jokes.

"The bigger the 'name,' or the more involved a performer is, the more audiences like to see them roasted. And they're always in good taste. Oh, sometimes we throw out a line, or an ad lib, knowing it'll be cut out of the show, but that's for the people who are in the room. After all, they sit there for two or three hours — which is what it takes us to tape a Roast, and we try to keep 'em happy."

Martin has taped four Roasts last season and two more to be done later this year. The Dan Haggerty Roast aired in November and the other three — Frank Sinatra, George Burns and Betty White — are not yet scheduled.

"We like to keep addin' new people to our dais, ones who don't usually do them, and we get some really funny people. This year, some of the new roasters are Gene Kelly, Dom DeLuise, Tom Dreesen, Frank Welker, and of course ones who've really been great in the past, ones like Red Buttons, Orson Welles, LaWanda Page, Charlie Callas, Ruth Buzzi, Abe Vigoda, Don Rickles, Milton Berle and Jackie Gayle.

Top Performers Are Spotlighted In '50 Years Of Country Music'

More than 25 top performers — one of the greatest arrays of country music stars ever assembled for a TV program, including seven members of the Hall of Fame and seven winners of the Entertainer of the Year Award — will be spotlighted in a three-hour NBC-TV "Big Event" special, "50 Years of Country Music," Sunday, Jan. 22, 8 to 11 p.m., on NBC-TV.

Glen Campbell, Roy Clark and Dolly Parton will be hosts of the entertainment event, originating from the Grand Ole Opry House in Nashville. Johnny Cash, Ray Charles and Loretta Lynn are the special guest stars.

Other guest stars include Roy Acuff, Chet Atkins, The Carter Family, Danny Davis and the Nashville Brass, Freddy Fender, Larry Gatlin, Crystal Gayle, Merle Haggard, Doug Kershaw, Bill Monroe and the Blue Grass Boys, Minnie Pearl, Charlie Rich, Earl Scruggs Revue, The Statler Brothers, Stony Mountain Cloggers, Mel Tillis, Ernest Tubb, Kitty Wells, The Bob Wills Texas Playboys and Tammy Wynette.

The program will introduce Carlene Carter, of the third generation of the legendary Carter Family, in her first network television appearance.

Seven of the 11 living performers elected to the Country Music Hall of Fame will be on the Grand Ole Opry stage, including Roy Acuff, Chet Atkins, The Carter Family, Bill Monroe, Minnie Pearl, Ernest Tubb and Kitty Wells. There will also be musical salutes to deceased Hall of Famers Jimmy Rodgers (known as the "father of country music"), Hank Williams, Bob Wills and Patsy Cline.

Seven of the 11 winners of the Country Music Entertainer of the Year Award will perform: Glen Campbell, Roy Clark, Johnny Cash, Loretta Lynn (the only woman to be selected), Merle Haggard, Charlie Rich and Mel Tillis.

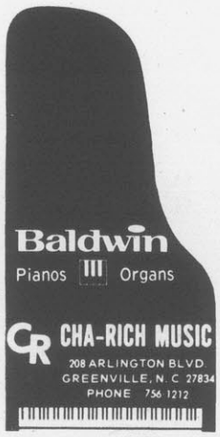

"50 Years of Country Music" will show the growth of country music from its origins in rural America to today's billion-dollar industry, reaching throughout the United States and even spreading to foreign lands. The program also will focus on the evolution of the various musical styles including country and western, cajun, traditional bluegrass, country with a blues beat and rock-a-billy.

ENTERTAINER OF THE YEAR WINNERS — Glen Campbell (r), Loretta Lynn and Mel Tillis are three of the seven winners of the Country Music Entertainer of the Year Award who will perform in the three-hour "Big Event" special, "50 Years of Country Music," Sunday, Jan. 22 (8-11 p.m.) on NBC-TV.

Life, Art Come Together

If you are assigned to play a country western singer and you've never sung a note in public, what do you do?

If you are as resourceful as Jill Voigt, the young actress who portrays the would-be star, Rebecca Lee Hunt, on ABC-TV's "One Life To Live," you'll find a band, rehearse a few Hank Williams tunes, and give it your best shot.

In the continuing daytime drama, Rebecca Lee leaves home, husband, and a passel of problems in North Carolina to crack the country music scene, and her first effort is to audition at "One Life to Live's Blue Ridge Club, where all she is offered is a job as a waitress.

Plain, little Rebecca Lee feels that she needs a gimmick, so she dons a Dolly Parton outfit, changes her act and this time gets signed for appearances one night a week.

To get ready for this role, Jill needed some instruction in a hurry, so she marched into O'Lunney's, a New York C and W nightspot, sought out Troy Ferguson and His Country Gentlemen, an established band, she said "Help."

Jill did a few songs with the band that night and was such a hit with the audience and the band, that she was asked to return, and she enjoyed herself so much that the young actress has put together a nightclub act of her own, and now makes regular appearances at her old "school," O'Lunney's.

"One Life to Live," which recently began one-hour telecasts, is seen from 2 to 3 p.m.

SINGER IN TV MOVIE

Singer Carol Lawrence has been signed to star in "Three on a Date," a two-hour motion picture slated to air on ABC-TV in February.

Linden Looks At Cranes

Hal Linden, star of "Animals Animals Animals," looks at the crane in art, history, legend and mythology, in the program airing Sunday, Jan. 22, 11:30 to 11:55 a.m., on ABC-TV.

In Baraboo, Wisconsin, 'Animals' visits the International Crane Foundation, a non-profit organization dedicated to preserving the cranes of the world. George Archibald explains, "Of the 15 species, 14 are maintained at I.C.F. Eventually we hope to have 15 pairs of each of the endangered species. This will serve as a species bank to begin new populations in areas from which their species has been wiped out.

"It's just during the past 100 years," Archibald continues, "that many species have been brought to the brink of extinction. The problem is that they require great expanses of wetland for breeding, and man has drained those wetlands for his own use."

The program includes a look at the beautiful migration of the sand hill cranes across the Platte River in Nebraska. There is a brilliantly animated poem about a crane, a duck, a goose and two "beautiful things," and a fable about how the crowned crane happened to get his crown. The crowned crane and the sand crane are joined by the whooping crane the Manchurian crane, the blacknecked crane, the wattled crane, the hooded crane, and several others, some of which are seen by Linden at the Busch Bird Sanctuary in Van Nuys, Calif.

Linden points out that 6,000 years ago a crane was painted on the wall of a cave in Tajo Segura in Southern Spain. Paintings of the European crane and a Demoiselle crane are found in the Tomb of Ti in Saqqara, Egypt. A painting of cranes walking between slaves exists in the funeral temple of Queen Hatshepsut. In ancient Japan, the crane was considered the symbol of long life and good fortune, and the crane is the national bird of South Africa.

Animal expert and environmentalist Roger Caras says, "Elegant, the crane is elegant; that is the word. It's a pity that man has placed them in jeopardy. Several kinds are in danger. But it's not too late to save them for future generations."

Archbishop Airs

A conversation with Archbishop John R. Quinn of San Francisco, newly elected President of the National Conference of Catholic Bishops, will be presented on NBC-TV Sunday, Jan. 22, 1 to 2 p.m. Speaking with Archbishop Quinn will be author and editor Philip J. Scharper.

The Archbishop is a theologian and scholar whose new position makes him perhaps the most visible leader of the nation's 50 million Catholics. In the program he will discuss a wide range of religious, moral and social issues facing his Church — and religion generally — in the context of changing American society.

Boy, Wild Dingo Pup Face Danger On Disney

A boy and a wild dingo pup face dangers in a trek through Australia's rugged Outback in "Journey to the Valley of the Emu," airing on "The Wonderful World of Disney" Sunday, Jan. 22, 7 to 8 p.m., on NBC-TV.

While pursuing a fleet-footed kangaroo, a dingo pup and his mother stray beyond their home territory where they are spotted by a boundary rider. Considered cattle killers by ranchers of the Outback, the mother dingo is killed and her small helpless pup scurries into a strange new world.

The orphaned dingo survives a turbulent desert dust storm only to find himself face-to-face with a deadly eight-foot Goanna snake. Just as the reptile closes in for the kill, an Aborigine boy named Wadjiri (Victor Palmer) swiftly intervenes with his spear to save the frightened animal.

Dubbing the pup Coomba (meaning "little brother"), Wadjiri and his new-found traveling companion continue on a journey through the great desert. Wadjiri is searching for the emu, a huge flightless bird which represents a legendary spirit to his people. By returning with the sacred tail feather of the emu, he will gain membership to the "inner circle" of his tribe.

Living off scrawny desert reptiles and water from underground wells, the duo has little success in its search until they meet an old prospector and his camel caravan. The prospector directs Wadjiri to a series of rock paintings believed to be a sacred guidepost to the valley of the emu.

While forging ahead to the rich valley, Wadjiri is attacked by a poisonous tiger snake and rendered unconscious. Coomba gallantly seeks help and at the pup's insistence the prospector returns to determine that the boy requires immediate medical assistance.

Wadjiri is airlifted by the Royal Flying Doctor Corps to the nearest hospital hundreds of miles away while Coomba remains faithfully by his master's side.

Two weeks later, Wadjiri is able to resume his hunt. The Australian government returns Coomba and the boy to the far-off land from which they have come.

Wadjiri and Coomba successfully scale the ridge this time, and arrive in the valley of the emu. The boy takes some emu tail feathers back to his tribe, and then takes his place within the coveted "inner circle."

Bionic Man Airs In Two Segments

Steve Austin desperately tries to immobilize an apparently indestructible juggernaut programmed to destroy a city in "Return of Deathprobe," Part 1, on "The Six Million Dollar Man," airing Sunday, Jan. 22, 8 to 9 p.m., on ABC-TV.

Lured to a remote rural area, Steve Austin and OSI chief Oscar Goldman witness a demonstration of the awesome destructive powers of the rocket-proof, radio-controlled machine. Obviously, it could go through any structure like a hot knife through butter. Steve's bionic powers are ineffective against the giant claws, whirling blades and laser beam. Then, from an unexpected source comes a demand for nuclear warheads, or the "deathprobe" will be turned loose to search and destroy.

Lee Majors stars as Col. Steve Austin. Also starring are Richard Anderson as Oscar Goldman and Martin E. Brooks as Rudy Wells. Guest starring are Than Wyenn as Ambassador Mahmoud, David Sheiner as Arnold Blake and Ken Swofford as Dan Kelly.

James Bond Featured

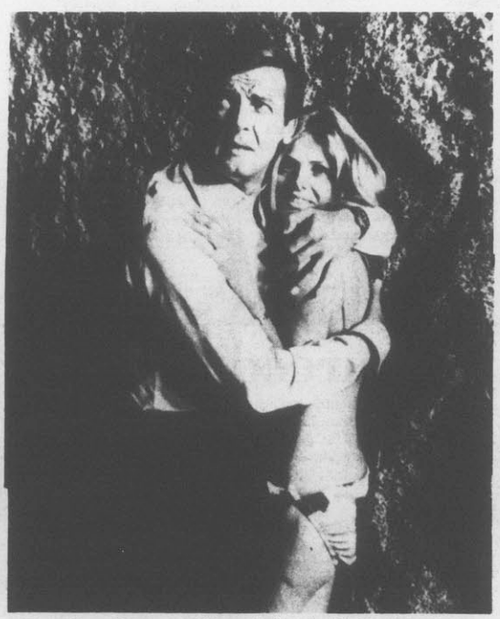

A custom-made pistol of gold is in the hands of a $1 million assassin and pointed at James Bond in "The Man With the Golden Gun," to be rebroadcast as "The ABC Sunday Night Movie," Jan. 22, 9 to 11:30 p.m., on ABC-TV.

Roger Moore, in his second of the nine hugely successful films based on the novels of Ian Fleming, is dueling this time with the notorious Scaramanga (Christopher Lee), a professional widow-maker who earns $1 million each time he helps to decrease the population.

Scaramanga lures Bond into his sights by keeping a solid gold watch over the site of a Solex Agitator, a missing energy machine that the free world's top secret agent has to find and return to its rightful owner before it is used to harness the golden rays of the sun for wrathful purposes.

Roger Moore is assisted in his mission by two beauties — Britt Ekland and Maud Adams — and a bumbler, Clifton James, recreating the role of Sheriff J.W. Pepper that he played first in "Live and Let Die." Scaramanga's tiny assistant — living proof that bad things also come in small packages — is played by Herve Villechaize, who is co-starring in the new TV series, "Fantasy Island."

Guy Hamilton, who established himself as a Bondsman of note as director of "Goldfinger," "Diamonds Are Forever" and "Live and Let Die," directed "The Man With the Golden Gun." The screenplay is by Richard Maibaum and Tom Mankiewicz.

Even the golden rays of the sun hold a deadly threat for Roger Moore and Britt Ekland when the sunshine that's falling on their heads is directed by a man of pure evil in "The Man With the Golden Gun," an encore presentation of the James Bond thriller on "The ABC Sunday Night Movie," Jan. 22 (9-11:30 p.m.) on ABC-TV.

Candy Was Dandy For Director

Casting director Susan Sukman, who had to find juvenile actors to play young Charles and Caroline Ingalls for an upcoming episode, is well prepared for dealing with juveniles. Having been a child performer herself she's sensitive to just what a young actor goes through.

"The first thing you do is use some psychology by relaxing them. Talk to them about their interests and if that doesn't work there's always candy," Susan explained. "If you don't relax someone you don't get a good performance and that goes for adults as well."

The fruits of her efforts resulted in Matthew Laborteaux playing young Charles Ingalls and Katy Kurtzman playing young Caroline in "I Remember, I Remember," on Monday, Jan. 23, (8 to 9 p.m., on NBC-TV), in a touching, romantic tale of Charles and Caroline's first meeting as youngsters.

Two important considerations — besides the ability to handle a lead role — helped narrow the field during Susan's search.

"The physical characteristics of both Michael Landon and Karen Grassle played an important part in our search — I saw only actors with the right coloring," she said. "Blonde girls for Karen's character and dark-haired boys for Michael's character.

"One other important consideration was finding someone with a creative sense," she continued. "The way Karen portrays Caroline, there's a serene gentleness about her and Katy must know how to get that across."

"When you look at Matthew you know that's how Michael looked and reacted as a youngster," Susan said.

Matthew and Katy were chosen from more than 50 child actors. Susan's task involved seeing children after school — ten a day for one week — then narrowing the candidates to the best five or six for producer-director William F. Claxton and Landon to see.

Ironically, Susan's toughest assignment was trying to find young Charles' father...and this time she couldn't use the candy.

GEER IN FOUR-HOUR FILM

Will Geer, who plays the grandfather in "The Waltons," has been signed for a key role in NBC-TV's "A Woman Called Moses," starring Cicely Tyson, who won an Emmy Award for her performance in "The Autobiography of Miss Jane Pittman."

"A Woman Called Moses" will be a four-hour film based on the life of Harriet Tubman, a former slave noted in 19th century American history for helping slaves escape to freedom.

Geer will portray Thomas Garrett, a Quaker gentleman who befriends Harriet and offers refuge to her "passengers" on the underground railroad.

An actor for more than 50 years, Geer has performed in tent shows, repertory companies, on river boats, in the Broadway theater, movies and on TV.

News Requires A Lot Of Legwork

When Robert MacNeil in New York and Jim Lehrer in Washington greet each other every weeknight on PBS's "The MacNeil-Lehrer Report" (7:30 p.m.), the 30 minutes of questioning and analysis that follow are only the final step in a complex and thorough process.

There's a lot of legwork — the legwork of a team of reporters, producers and others who try to know a news story as well as the people directly involved in it. They have to, because the key stone of the program is its ability to examine an important story, trend, or newsmaker more completely and clearly than any other television news show.

When "The MacNeil-Lehrer Report" was still in its development stages in 1975, Executive Editor Robert MacNeil recognized that the program he and others envisaged — a substantive, complete look at one important issue or story a night — would require more research than the usual television news series.

So a staff structure was devised that met the program's unique needs. A system of reporters and beats was the result. Nine reporters cover separate beats ranging from national politics, business and economics to health, behavior and trends. Other reporters handle foreign areas. Such specialization allows the reporters to become thoroughly acquainted with their fields and the authorities in them.

Although story ideas can come from anyone— including viewers — most come from the reporters and all rely on a reporter's contacts and knowledge. A program's topic can be the result of weeks of careful watching and development. At the same time, a fast-breaking story, whether the Israeli raid on Entebbe or the New York City blackout, calls for a staff with the ability to get together the needed information and resources in a very short time. The reporting and production staff of the program has the needed versatility.

When a story has been scheduled for broadcast, intensive research begins. Newspapers and magazine articles and other materials are gathered on the story topic. Extensive phone calls are made and, as the airdate approaches, guests are locked in.

On the day of the show, questions for guests are honed, the day's news is watched closely for any changes it may bring in the story — or for developments that may lead to an entirely different topic. Guests are brought in, and just before 7:30, lights are dimmed, and at exactly 7:30.....

Children's Fare Featureed On CBS

Children — grown-ups, too — will delight in watching CBS-TV Monday, Jan. 23, 8 to 9 p.m., when "You're A Good Sport, Charlie Brown," and "Rikki-Tikki-Tavi" are are rebroadcast.

Charlie Brown, whose athletic prowess has won him boos, laughs and a bit of sympathy rather than cheers and medals, puts away his baseball mitt and football helmet and wheels his way into a different sport when he's talked into a bicycle race over an obstacle course, in "You're a Good Sport, Charlie Brown" (8 to 8:30 p.m.).

Charlie's pitted against tough contenders, Peppermint Patty and The Masked Marvel, the very dogged Peanut, beagle who claims to need his win to bolster his confidence, following a losing streak in tennis.

In the motocross, Charlie's special program include an undersized, underpowered mini-bike — all his piggy bank could finance — a carved pumpkin for a helmet and a brief imprisonment in a kennel when his bike bites the dust.

Suspense Drama Stars Bette Davis

Two-time Academy Award winner Bette Davis (Best Actress: "Dangerous" — 1935; "Jezebel" — 1938) is joined by David Ackroyd, Joanna Miles and Rosanna Arquette in "The Dark Secret of Harvest Home," an NBC Novel for Television to be colorcast on "NBC Monday Night at the Movies" Jan. 23 (9 to 11 p.m.) and "The Big Event" Tuesday, Jan. 24 (8 to 11 p.m.), on NBC-TV.

Portrays Heroic Priest

"We Lepers," Father Damien's poignant and moving cry for crippled humanity will ring out once again as Terence Knapp recreates the heroic Leper Priest of Molokai in a stunning solo performance in Aldyth Morris' "Damien." The 90-minute one-man drama will air Tuesday, Jan. 24, at 8 p.m. on PBS.

Father Damien de Veuster, the Roman Catholic priest who came to the Hawaiian Islands in the late 1800's to work with the lepers confined on the island of Molokai and died himself a leper after serving his beloved lepers for sixteen years, holds an honored place in Hawaiian history and is presently being considered for sainthood by the Vatican.

Ms. Morris' play is a monologue delivered by Damien as a spirit watching the progress of his own funeral procession, nearly half a century after his death, when Ken Leopold III of Belgium ordered a hero's welcome for the martyred priest. As Damien comments on his last and final journey back to his homeland, he reminisces about his childhood, bis ministry on Molokai in the quarantined leper colony at Kalawao, and above all, his faith in God and humanity. The play has been hailed as an "exceptionally moving and genuinely fascinating account of one man's passion and martyrdom."

Knapp's Damien sparkles with life's fullest emotions: love for his unfortunate and tragic congregation; humor at his own blundering clumsiness; fierce anger at bureaucratic indifference from representatives of the Church and of the Hawaiian Monarchy's Board of Health; and great sorrow at his own "defects" and the defects of humanity.

The teledrama takes place in five simple, but symbolic sets: the study, the cathedral, the Bishop's office, the Board of Health's Office, and the homeland (Belgium). Authentic religious costuming and artifacts, graciously loaned to the production by the Roman Catholic Diocese of Honolulu, where also used to maintain faithfulness and integrity to the original script.

The suspense drama, based on a best-selling novel by Tom Tryon, chronicles the events that beset a New York commercial artist when he and his wife and daughter move to a rustic New England village they visited during their travels.

Ackroyd portrays Nick Constantine, a disenchanted agency cartoonist who tries to combat his wife, Beth's total dependence on a psychiatrist and control his spoiled, asthmatic teen-age daughter, Kate.

While travelling in New England, the family becomes enchanted with a house in the farming village of Cornwall Coombe. The agrarian lifestyle of the villagers, who work the fields by hand, appeals to the Constantine family and they exchange their urban surroundings for a life in the country.

Nick finds that his neighbors' cordiality becomes strained as he attempts to probe the rigid, traditional mores of the townspeople for a book he plans. Kate is attracted to a young man in the community and Beth quickly adapts to the new society, but Nick is increasingly troubled by the mysteries of Cornwall Coombe, which appear to be a tradition in themselves.

Doggedly pursuing the matter, he confronts Mary Fortune, a widow whose uncanny powers and apparent dominance in the village hierarchy are awesome. In a horror-filled climax, Nick is overwhelmed as he stands alone to face the consequences of his persistent efforts to convince the outside world of what life is really like in Cornwall Coombe.

"The Dark Secret of Harvest Home" was filmed entirely on location in northeastern Ohio.

Bette Davis is a self-confessed fan of her profession, an unabashed idolizer of good performers, a push-over for a good role. "Acting is the best profession in the world," she says. "I love it. I wouldn't be doing it if I didn't. I have no sense of humor about my profession. I am terribly, terribly serious about acting."

Miss Davis, who began her spectacular career in 1931, is now 70 years old and shows no signs of slowing down. Her theatrical accomplishments have been acknowledged by scholars, critics, professional peers and the general public, and her work has stood the test of time.

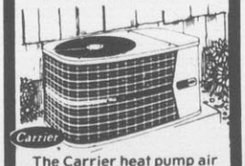

A VILLAGE LEGEND — Two-time Oscar winner Bette Davis stars as a widow with mysterious powers and influence in a small New England farming village in "The Dark Secret of Harvest Home" an NBC Novel for Television with Part One airing as the "NBC Monday Night Movie" and the conclusion airing as "The Big Event," Tuesday, Jan. 24 (8-11 p.m.) on NBC-TV.

'Two Mules For Sister Sara' Airs

IMPISH GRIN — Shirley MacLaine, in the role of Sister Sara, wears an impish grin as she prepares to carry out a clever masquerade in "Two Mules for Sister Sara," to be colorcast as the Tuesday Movie of the Week, Jan. 24 at 11:30 p.m. on ABC-TV.

Shirley MacLaine and Clint Eastwood star in "Two Mules for Sister Sara," and adventure drama to be colorcast on "Tuesday Movie of the Week," Jan. 24, at 11:30 p.m., on ABC-TV.

In the story, Hogan (Eastwood), tired and grimy from days of travel from Texas across Northern Mexico, acts quickly to rescue a woman dressed in a nun's habit from a band of desperadoes.

After Hogan has driven away the outlaws, Sister Sara (Miss MacLaine) reveals that she is on a mission to raise money for the Mexican Juaristas, a group that is attempting to overthrow the French who hold the country in an iron grip.

Hogan tells Sister Sara that he is an American mercenary with the Juaristas and is on his way to Chihuahua to take the French garrison in return for half the gold in the French treasury.

The two decide to join forces in capturing the garrison. Later, once Hogan is asleep, Sara examines a red satin dress folded in her saddlebags and lights up a cigar, thus revealing that her appearance as a nun is merely a clever masquerade.

The 1971 Universal release was produced by Martin Rackin and Carroll Case and directed by Don Siegel. Albert Maltz wrote the screenplay from a story by Budd Boetticher.

Sanders Joins CBS

Marlene Sanders, who has been Vice President and Director of Television Documentaries for ABC News since Jan. 1976, will join CBS News as a correspondent-producer in the documentary area, effective Feb. 6.

Ms. Sander's initial assignments for CBS News will include serving as co-editor, with Bill Moyers, of the recently announced multi-story editions of "CBS Reports."

One of television's most honored journalists, Ms. Sanders became a documentary producer for ABC News in 1972, and has been responsible for many highly acclaimed broadcasts in the "ABC News Closeup" series, including "The Right to Die" and "Women's Health: A Question of Survival." Her other documentary credits for ABC include "Population: Boom or Doom" (1973), "Children in Peril" (1972), and "Stranger in Their Own Land — The Blacks," a three-program study of minority groups in America (1971).

Prior to joining ABC as a radio and television correspondent in 1964, Ms. Sanders was Assistant Director of News and Public Affairs for WNEW Radio, in New York City. While at the station, she wrote and produced a weekly half-hour documentary program and covered local and national stories for that series as well as regular newscasts.

Ms. Sanders has been the recipient of several distinguished journalism awards, and her most recent include the Broadcast Women of the Year Award from American Women in Radio and Television (1975), the New York State Broadcasters Association Award for "Women's Health: A Question of Survival," the National Press Club Award for "Lawyers: Guilty as Charged?" (1976), and the Silver Satellite Award presented by AWRT (1977).

Real-Life Character Role Put Arkin Through Wringer

Alan Arkin, a man with more accents than Berlitz, and who often is cast as a "raging outsider," like Yossarian in "Catch-22," or the deaf mute in "The Heart Is a Lonely Hunter," now undertakes the portrayal of a real-life character in "The Defection of Simas Kudirka," Monday, Jan. 23 (9 to 11 p.m.) on CBS-TV.

"Portraying Simas Kudirka, has been the most draining part I've ever played," comments Arkin, "not just physical, but emotional as well. It just put me through the wringer. At the end of a work day I could hardly move.

"We worked 12 hours a day and I've never experienced such concentrated effort. To be involved in so many crisis moments was difficult. I had to go through what Simas himself endured for years, in a compact filming schedule of only two weeks. I have to have an emotional commitment to what I'm doing. I can't just make faces and yell.

"Every role should be enlightening to an actor who is serious about what he is doing," continues Arkin, whose experience encompasses acting, writing and directing.

"A commitment to a role has got to wrench open a part of you that maybe you haven't explored before. When we began work on this project I met with Simas and was struck by the differences between what I had gleaned from the script and the person he really was. There were certain liberties taken. Had I really wanted to be Simas, I would have had to spend three of four months with him.

"The crux of this human drama is Kudirka's unpremeditated jump to the deck of the Coast Guard cutter. It meant an escape to something better and freer than he lived with. There are crisis moments in your life when you just take action, and not all the analyzing in the world can pinpoint exactly what triggered the act."

"A KGB officer aboard the Russian ship vowed that two of our sailors would never go to sea again, simply because they had accepted some American magazines tossed to us by members on the Coast Guard cutter.

"It was the impossibility of that action — that something so harmless could dictate a man's fate — and the thought of my children growing up to face more injustice that forced my decision to jump to freedom."

Carol Lynley Stars

Carol Lynley stars as a successful fashion model surrounded by numerous male admirers, including an anonymous heavy-breathing phone caller who begins to voice jealousy over his rivals in "If It's a Man, Hang Up," airing as the "Mystery of the Week," Wednesday, Jan. 25, at 12:30 a.m. on ABC-TV.

Miss Lynley, as Suzy Martin, numbers among her suitors photographer Terry Cleeves, his friend Bruno Varella, his professional rival Greg Miles, and even Murchison, the caretaker of the apartment house in which she lives.

They Are Still Cops, Despite Casual Dress

You better believe it. These ARE cops.

Despite their casual appearance, their strange collection of 'friends,' their special brand of humor in life-and-death situations and their unique interpretation of police procedure, Starsky and Hutch are young, dedicated undercover police officers combating crime and trying to protect innocent citizens from criminal elements on the roughest beat in town. Starsky and Hutch get the most dangerous detail (homicide, organized crime, vice, et al) because they are very good cops and exceptional individuals.

So, why do they sometimes seem to be having fun? It's like this: Starsky and Hutch have humor which they use as a safety valve. But they do not denigrate what they do for a living or mock those with whom they come into contact.

"Starsky and Hutch," now seen Wednesday, 10 to 11 p.m., on ABC-TV, is a hard, fast, visual police action show. Dave Starsky (Paul Michael Glaser) and Ken Hutchinson (David Soul) are different without being opposites. Starsky is the more streetwise of the two. His personality and attitude reveal that he is a guy who came up the hard way. Hutch is cut from other cloth. He has had more advantages, received a formal education and might have chosen another profession. But, like Starsky, Hutch is a policeman because that is what he wants to be.

Off screen, however, Glaser and Soul are basically of the same cloth. Both are interested in virtually everything relating to life, both strum guitars and enjoy rides on their motorcycles.

Both have starred in several movies-for-TV, guest starred in many series, and each has an impressive string of motion pictures on their credit lists.

Soul, a political science major in college, gave up his studies to pursue a career in music. Although he'd made a name for himself as a musician, it wasn't until after he began co-starring in "Starsky and Hutch" that his recordings made the Top Ten list.

This is not a 'new' relationship for Glaser and Soul: they were friends long before the casting of "Starsky and Hutch." Actually, their friendship began in 1967 when they were a couple of youngsters being tested for a Hollywood studio's New Talent Program.

David Soul (l) and Paul Michael Glaser, stars of the popular ABC-TV series "Starsky and Hutch," are moving to a new day and time period beginning Wednesday, Jan. 25 at 10 p.m.

'Nova' Celebrates Space Anniversary

"That's one small step for man, one giant leap for mankind." With these words spoken on the moon by astronaut Neil Armstrong in July, 1969, the United States won the space race. Wednesday, Jan. 25 on PBS at 8 p.m., "NOVA" marks the 20th anniversary of America's first venture into space with "One Small Step," the first of a two-part special on man in space.

With the October, 1957 launching of Sputnik, the Soviets took an early lead in the space race. The Russian space program challenged America's claim to technological leadership of the world.

In 1961 President Kennedy led America into the space race with a pledge to the World that America would land a man on the moon and return him safely to Earth by 1970. His bold commitment was made even before the first American, John Glenn, had gone into orbit.

As the U.S. geared up for its goal, the Russians took an even greater lead. It was the Russians who sent the first man into orbit, and it was a Russian cosmonaut who was the first man to walk in space. Each success heightened the competitive climate.

Only with the success of Project Gemini — ten successful manned space missions — was the United States able to gain the lead. And a major American victory came in December, 1968 when, for the first time in history, man left his home planet to orbit around the moon.

'The Train Robbers' Air

John Wayne, Ann-Margret and Rod Taylor search the barren Mexican desert for a stolen gold shipment as a gang of bandits pursue them, in "The Train Robbers," to be broadcast on "The CBS Wednesday Night Movies," Jan. 25, 9 to 11 p.m., on CBS-TV.

Ben Johnson, Christopher George, Bobby Vinton, Jerry Gatlin and Ricardo Montalban co-star.

Using a $50,000 Wells Fargo reward as an inducement, a beautiful young widow (Ann-Margret) charms a drifter named Lane (Wayne) into helping her recover $500,000 in gold hidden in a wrecked locomotive in the desert of northern Mexico. She tells Lane that her only interest is to clear the name of her husband by returning the loot he stole during a train robbery.

Lane gathers together three buddies (Taylor, Johnson and Vinton) and two of their new friends (George and Gatlin) for the expedition.

Sylvia Porter Receives Award

Sylvia Porter, the noted syndicated columnist and author who reports regularly on consumer economics on ABC-TV's "Good Morning America" program, has earned another distinction.

She has been named the 29th recipient of the annual William Allen White Foundation Award for journalistic merit, which is presented to a journalist who "exemplifies William Allen White in service to...profession and...country."

It's an award that Ms. Porter says she will cherish, as she does numerous other citations, among them the National Headliner's Club Medal for "the best financial and business reporting of 1942"; the 1975 Missouri Honor Award for Distinguished Service in Journalism; and her selection this year by the World Almanac as one of America's 25 most influential woman in 1976. She is also listed in "Who's Who."

"It gives me a terrific thrill," Ms. Porter says of her latest honor. "There's only one awarded each year. I always had tremendous respect for Mr. White, and considering who the previous recipients are (among them such highly regarded journalists as Walter Cronkite, Arthur O. Sulzberger, James B. Reston and Clayton Kirkpatrick), I feel very honored indeed."

However, there is one honor that she is still seeking — the one given on the golf course to the lowest scoring player. "I have the distinction of never winning a game of golf," she said. "If somebody has a fallen ego, he or she should look for me to play golf with."

Her golf game, which she admits is so weak that she refuses to divulge her handicap, occasionally proves more exasperating than any pitfall in a hectic work schedule. But always one to clearly assess a problem, Ms. Porter sees the relatively small amount of time spent on the links as the key to those shanks and slices that never seem to disappear. That she plays golf and swims 100 laps three or four times each week is a tribute to wise management of her own time. She tries to make each spare moment a productive one. If she is early for a taping session at "Good Morning America," she'll spend the available moments putting together part of another column. Or, anticipating at least a minor delay at the doctor's office, she'll phone ahead to ask for a small place to work until it's her turn.

Unfortunately, neither location has a putting green.

Detective Show Expands An Hour

There is an old adage that one should never tamper with success. But Quinn Martin Productions is throwing caution to the wind on Thursday evening, Jan. 26, when it presents a special two-hour episode of "Barnaby Jones," entitled "The Final Judgement," 9 to 11 p.m., on CBS-TV.

It's the first time that Buddy Ebsen has been given a two-hour time slot for 'Barnaby' since the original pilot film aired six years ago. When the pilot became a series, viewers became accustomed to watching Ebsen solve his cases within a tightly-written hour-long format, for "Barnaby Jones" still ranks among the three highest-rated programs on CBS and recently rated 11th on the national Nielsens.

There is a good reason why 'Barnaby' expands to a two-hour format — the episode is devoted to showing an entirely different side of the 'Barnaby' character as Ebsen admits that he helped convict the wrong man in a kidnaping scheme and sets about on a convoluted path toward the true conspirators.

"I am especially proud of this episode," says Ebsen. "People who have watched our show since it began may think of Barnaby Jones as a stoic, a man who never allows emotion to show through in the course of an investigation.

Jill Choder plays Hayley Winters, a crucial witness to a kidnapping case that Barnaby and J.R. Jones, played by Mark Shera, agree to look into a second time, in a special two-hour episode of "Barnaby Jones," Thursday, Jan. 26 (9-11 p.m.) on CBS-TV.

Pike's Peeks

HOLLYWOOD — Both Donny Osmond and Stephanie La Motta are issuing heated denials — but it sure looks like a budding romance to everybody else.

Sultry actress Brigette Bardot was approached about the possibility of doing her own TV special, but her request for $1 million ended the conversation — quick.

Look for Charles Bronson and actress-wife Jill Ireland to make a rare joint TV appearance next week when they emcee the 35th Annual Golden Globes Awards on NBC.

Peter Falk finally found the time in his schedule to squeeze in a honeymoon and promptly whisked bride Shera Danese off to Hawaii.

Rock artist Bob Dylan, who's not one to jump at a chance to be on TV, has been asked to do the hosting duties for NBC's "Saturday Night Live." As yet, there's been no answer.

Ralph Edwards, who confesses he's "weary" of producing daytime shows, is huddling with the major TV networks about the possibility of coming up with a contemporary version of the popular "The Is Your Life," his program which ran on NBC from '52 to '61.

On a recent swing through the south on a promotion tour, "Happy Days," Anson Williams spent an hour in Plains, Ga., visiting with Billy Carter and "Miss Lillian." The President's mother told Anson that 'Days' was one of her "favorite shows," and that she even watches the re-runs.

Is it true that Harvey Korman walked away with $1 and a half million instead of residuals for syndication re-runs of "The Carol Burnett Show"? If so, that's a half-million more than the three "Bonanza" stars received for a similar deal.

The Dody Goodman-Eve Arden scenes in the movie "Grease" are so good that now there's talk of a TV series for them.

Week-Long Series Planned By CBS

It was a sight to behold, because it may never happen again. 115 of the brightest stars ever to adorn CBS gathered at Television City in Hollywood on Sunday, Dec. 11, to videotape the grand opening of "CBS: On the Air," a nine and one-half hour celebration of 50 years of CBS broadcasting history.

The week-long series of special broadcasts — from Sunday through Sunday — hosted by Walter Cronkite and Mary Tyler Moore, will be presented in the spring of 1978.

"The problem with this business is that you never get to see anybody unless you're working with them," said Arthur Godfrey. "So it was marvelous to see Lucille again and Douglas Edwards. And Buddy Ebsen. This was the first time in over 40 years — since 1934, to be exact — that we've had time to sit down and chat."

The first order of business was the taping of the opening segment, in which the celebrities appear on a "calendar" set representing the days of the week with which their shows are associated.

Later, following a mid-afternoon lunch, all hubbub and hobnob, the stars taped an outside closing segment.

Zohra Lampert To Make Guest Appearance In 'Quincy' Friday

Zohra Lampert, who co-starred in the TV series "Doctor's Hospital," guest-stars as a forensic sculptress who aids Quincy in solving the two-year-old disappearance of a labor leader in "Passing," a segment of "Quincy" airing Friday, Jan. 27, 10 to 11 p.m., on NBC-TV.

Simon Oakland, who plays General Moore on "Black Sheep Squadron," also guest-stars.

Quincy races against the deadline of a pending union election to confirm that the skull of an apparent homicide victim is that of a labor leader who disappeared two years before under suspicious circumstances. His progress is complicated by the reluctance of the victim's wife to have the case re-opened and the current union head's fear that Quincy's findings will threaten his chances for reelection.

The technique of facial reconstruction, or face-finding, is currently playing an important role in an Illinois murder case. The technical consultant for "Passing," was Betty Gatliff, a forensic anthropologist associated with the Illinois case.

Zohra Lampert never admitted that she wanted to be an actress until after she graduated from college.

The native New Yorker finally succumbed to acting, however, following her graduation from the University of Chicago when she joined the famed Second City group in Chicago. Her first acting role was in the motion picture starring Harry Belafonte, "Odds Against Tomorrow," and this role led Zohra straight into others in "Pay or Die" and "Splendor in the Grass."

On Broadway, she won Tony Award nominations for "Look, We've Come Through" and "Mother Courage." She also won a New York Drama Critics Award for her performance in the latter. Other theatre credits include Miller's "After the Fall," O'Neill's "Marco Millions," plus "Lovers and Other Strangers" and "The Sign in Sidney Brustein's Window."

Her motion picture credits include "Posse From Hell," "A Fine Madness" and "Some Kind of a Nut." Zohra won an Emmy Award for her performance in an episode of "Kojak" and was a regular cast member of the series, "Girl With Something Extra."

Steve Allen Portrays Talk Show Host In NBC-TV Drama

Steve Allen and Michael Lembeck star in a drama about Bret Harte High School's senior class comic who gets his big chance on a television talk show to score or flop, in "The Class Clown," on "What Really Happened to the Class of '65," Thursday, Jan. 26, 10 to 11 p.m., on NBC-TV.

Nick Romansky (Lembeck) graduates and gets a job as a used car salesman for Kelly (William Sylvester). He's a top notch salesman, but he quits to put all his energy into comedy. He also puts off his marriage to Shelly (Robin Mattson). Then he begs TV talk show host Danny Mason (Allen) to give him a spot on his show. Mason thinks Nick is not ready for the big time but gives him a chance to prove him wrong — or right.

Steve Allen, called "a twentieth century version of the Renaissance man" by "The Saturday Review," has been actively involved in countless concerns, which include television comedy, acting, composing, writing (prose and poetry, humorous and serious), orchestra conducting, jazz-performing, record producing, and even a little sermonizing.

He started out in radio, quickly climbed to the top and moved into TV when NBC approached him in the mid-'50s about a show they had in mind — something called "Tonight." The network turned it over to Steve, and he developed the nightly show that quickly became and has remained a national institution.

Steve Allen's success on television and his marriage to Jayne Meadows unleashed an almost obsessional hunger for education. As he delved into books and scholars' minds, he also discovered he had a strong conscience and became deeply concerned with philosophy, religion, politics, the problems of the underprivileged, the underhoused and the underfed in this country and around the world.

Describing his social and political philosophy as "radical middle-of-the-roadism," Allen has involved himself in the fight to ban atmospheric nuclear bomb testing, speaks in behalf of the U.N., associated himself with the Center for the Study of Democratic Institutions in Santa Barbara, and fights the continuing civil rights battle. Steve says, "I'm not worried about my TV ratings. I'm worried about mankind's rating."

'Fail Safe' Airs On Channel Three

The inexplicable failure of mechanisms that control United States bombers armed with atomic warheads, leads the world to the brink of a holocaust in "Fail Safe," starring Henry Fonda, and airing as the TV 3W "After Midnight Movie" Friday, Jan. 27, at 12:30 a.m. on WWAY-TV.

In Omaha, Col. Cascio (Fritz Weaver) is told that U.S. Senator Raskob is planning to inspect the many intricate fail-safe mechanisms in the company of the electronics experts responsible for their construction.

During the inspection, an unexpected emergency arises: the S.A.C. swings into action as Senator Raskob watches. But, once the situation has been clarified and the S.A.C. planes ordered to return, one flight continues on toward the fail-safe point because of an unsuspected mechanical failure.

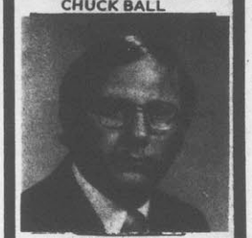

The President (Fonda) and the War Room meeting are informed

'Duffy Moon' Repeats As Special

The littlest boy in the sixth grade discovers unexpected personal powers — with surprising results — in the comedy adventure, "The Amazing Cosmic Awareness of Duffy Moon," encoring on "ABC Weekend Specials" Saturday, Jan. 28, 12-noon to 1 p.m.

Starring Lance Kerwin as Peter Finley and Ike Eisenmann as Duffy Moon with special guest stars Jim Backus as Dr. Flamel and Jerry Van Dyke as Mr. Finley, this funny and poignant children's special centers on the plight of an under-sized but multi-talented boy who realizes his potential through a hilarious set of circumstances.

When his schoolmates kid him about his size, Duffy Moon finds inspiration in a self-improvement course sent to him by a mail-order charlatan.

With the grudging cooperation of his friend and frequent protector, Peter, he forms an odd-jobs company that does everything from bathing a huge Great Dane to baby-sitting for the most impossible children in town to solving the mystery of the eerie sounds in the local "haunted house." Along the way, Duffy Moon, Inc., incurs the enmity of a rival group, "Help Is Here," headed by the alledgedly tyrannical Boots McAfee.

Only when Duffy's new power seems to fail him does he seek out his mail-order mentor, Dr. Flamel, which leads him to a confrontation with the feared Boots, who has vowed to put Moon out of business. In an unusual turn of events, Duffy finds the inner strength to meet the challenge and turn adversity to advantage.

The special was written by Thomas Baum from the novel, "The Strange But Wonderful Cosmic Awareness of Duffy Moon," by Jean Robinson.

Kids Air Opinions On Televised Quiz

The opinions of 8-13-year-olds on personal dilemmas such as privacy, cheating, shoplifting and personal rights, is the subject of "The National Kids' Quiz," a one-hour special hosted by Michael Landon, airing Saturday, Jan. 28, 12-noon to 1 p.m., on NBC-TV.

Landon questions a studio audience of young people on eight questions involving a variety of personal and family-related situations. Their electronically tabulated answers are then compared to the responses of almost 640,000 school children nationwide who answered a questionaire in five Zerox Educational Publications.

The questions answered by the studio audience and their peers in the classroom are:

"If my parents said or did things I didn't like, I would..."

"If my teacher said I was cheating when I wasn't, I would..."

"If some kids made fun of me and picked on me, I would..."

"If I thought my bedtime was too early, I would..."

"If I thought my parents were always picking on me but letting my brother or sister get away with everything I would..."

"If I felt that my family didn't respect my rights (used things of mine without asking or threw away my things without checking with me), I would..."

"If I had just moved to a new neighborhood and was having trouble making friends, I would..."

"If I knew that my best friend had been shoplifting, I would..."

The sampling is by far the largest ever complied on children's attitudes. The situations and preferred responses were prepared with the cooperation of a panel of noted educators, psychiatrists and psychologists, prominent in the field of mental health and family relations.

PGA-TV Package Issued

Deane R. Beman, PGA Tour Commissioner, recently announced a $30,000,000 television package extending over three years starting with 1979.

The transaction, largest in the history of golf, more than doubles the worth of the previous PGA Tour's three-year contract.

CBS-TV is expected to telecast 18 tournaments annually while NBC-TV will carry the balance of the televised events which are expected to total 25.

CBS-TV's schedule will include the Bing Crosby National Pro-Am and the Tournament Players Championship, both previously carried by another network.

YOUNG BACKS "KING"

Andrew Young, U.S. Ambassador to the United Nations, took the unusual position of promoting "King," an upcoming NBC-TV mini-series on the life of civil rights leader Martin Luther King, at a recent new conference.

"I don't want to make any money out of it," said Young, who is portrayed in the series in a prominent role. "My promotion aspect is in terms of promoting the message of the film. It's the kind of thing that ought to be done."

The message of the series, according to Young, is that nonviolence is the wave of the future and that King was a preview of the "new man."

Oakland Raiders Head Star List As AFC Meets NFC In Pro Bowl

Although AFC teams have dominated the Super Bowl over the years, stormed to a 19-9 record in interconference play this season, and now hold a 147-143 overall advantage, they have not enjoyed total supremacy in the Pro Bowl. In fact, after breaking a two-year losing string with a 24-14 victory last year, the AFC holds a slim 4-3 advantage in the series.

When the two conferences meet in the NFL's Pro Bowl on Monday, Jan. 23 (9 p.m. on ABC-TV), the AFC stars will be led by the Oakland Raiders, who placed 8 players on the team. Ray Guy, the NFL's most proficient punter in recent years, was the only unanimous AFC selection. Joining Guy are teammates Cliff Branch (wr), Dave Casper (te), Art Shell (t), Gene Upshaw (g), Dave Dalby (c), Ken Stabler (qb), and Mark Van Eeghen (rb).

Five members of the famed Denver 'Orange Crush' defense were named to the Bowl. They were: Lyle Alzado (de), Tom Jackson (olb), Randy Gradishar (mlb), Louis Wright (cb) and Billy Thompson (s).

Lydell Mitchell was easily the AFC's most versatile back. He led the conference in pass receiving with 71 catches and also finished third in rushing 1,159 yards. George Kunz (t), John Dutton (de), Mike Barnes (dt) and Tony Linhart (k) will join Mitchell as all-stars from the Baltimore Colts.

Bob Griese boasted the highest rating among AFC quarterbacks in the NFL's complicated formula. He tossed 22 touchdowns, completed 58.6 percent of his passes and had only 13 passes intercepted in 307 attempts. Griese, winner of the Maxwell Trophy as the outstanding professional football player in 1977, will be joined by three other Dolphins on the squad, Nat Moore (wr), Bob Kuechenberg (g), and Jim Langer (c).

Also placing four players on the team were the Pittsburgh Steelers with Lynn Swann (wr), Franco Harris (rb), Jack Ham (olb), Jack Lambert (mlb), and the Houston Oilers with Ken Burrough (wr), Curley Culp (dt), Robert Brazile (olb), and Billy Johnson (rs).

The Cincinnati Bengals will have three defensive players in the game — Tom Casanova (s), Coy Bacon (de), and Lemar Parrish (cb).

The San Diego Chargers and Buffalo Bills will contribute two all-stars each: Russ Washington (t) and Louis Kelcher (dt) will represent the Chargers, while Joe Delamielleure (g) and Tony Green (s) will be there from the Bills.

Greg Pruitt had the AFC's best rushing average with 4.6 yards per carry. Pruitt with his 1086 yards on the ground rounds out the AFC Pro Bowl team.

Maryland Terrapins Face N.C. Wolfpack

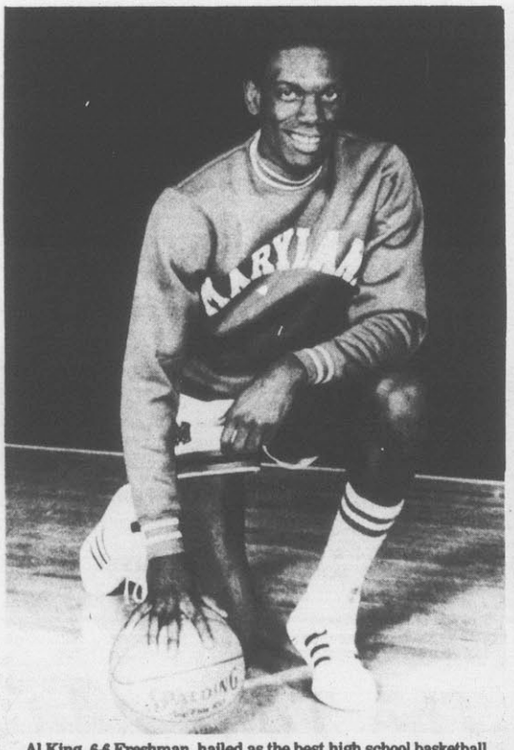

On Wednesday, Jan. 25, at 9 p.m. on Channels 5 and 6, the University of Maryland will face ACC foe N.C. State.

Lefty Driesell and the Maryland recruiting corps pulled one of its biggest coups back in June when Al King, hailed by many as the most outstanding High School basketball player of last year, announced that he would attend the University of Maryland. Maryland was one of some 500 colleges that were trying to persuade King to attend their campus this fall. Why Maryland?

"Lefty Driesell impresses me as a man, not just a coach. They have a nice team, a good school and they receive good exposure," says King.

King, who received the "Iron Horse Award" — the most distinguished award given by Madison Square Garden at their annual All-City Sports Award Night — and was voted "Best Basketball Player in New York City," attended Fort Hamilton High School where he averaged 38 points a game in his senior year. He developed a reputation as being an unselfish, low-keyed team player.

King should add just what Maryland needs after losing Brad Davis and Steve Sheppard. With other outstanding players like guards Billy Bryant and Jo Jo Hunter, guys up front like Lawrence Boston, Larry Gibson and John Bilney who are all .500-plus shooters' King should be able to provide the Terrapins with the winning punch they need.

Al King, 6-6 Freshman, hailed as the best high school basketball player last year, will join his University of Maryland teammates when they face ACC foe North Carolina State Wednesday, Jan. 25 at 9 p.m. on Channels 5 and 6.

Classic Pro-Am Tournament Airs

Final rounds of the nation's oldest and most popular pro-amateur golf classic, the annual Bing Crosby National Pro-Amateur Golf Tournament at Pebble Beach, Calif., will be the premiere event of ABC-TV's 1978 golf coverage, Sunday, Jan. 22, from 5 to 7 p.m.

The new sponsor of the Bing Crosby National Pro-Am Golf Tournament may be young, but he's no stranger to the world of golf and glamour that have combined to make the Crosby one of the world's most celebrated tournaments for 40 years.

The new sponsor is 16-year-old Nathaniel Crosby, son of the legendary Bing, a three-handicapper and two-year veteran of the tough Crosby tournament competition.

The 37th annual tournament offers $255,000 in prize money with 168 pros and 168 amateurs competing on the three demanding Monterey Peninsula courses at Cypress Point, Spyglass Hill and Pebble Beach.

All of the top pros including Tom Watson, Ray Floyd, Ben Crenshaw, Hubert Green, Johnny Miller and Jack Nicklaus are expected to be on hand for this famous tournament in which the pros and their amateur partners play each golf course with low teams and pros competing on the final day at Pebble Beach.

Many celebrities from entertainment, sports and business are expected to play including former President Ford, Bob Newhart, Mac Davis, Andy Williams, John Brodie, Clint Eastwood, Adm. Alan Shepard, Efrem Zimbalist Jr., Willie Mays, Tommy John, Glen Campbell and Arthur Ashe.

All profits from the tournament go to the Bing Crosby Youth Fund which provides grants to youth organizations and interest-free scholarships to private colleges and universities. To date more than $3 million has been disbursed.

Irish Hope For Win

One of the most intense rivalries in college basketball will renew itself for the second time this season when the Fighting Irish of Notre Dame play host to the UCLA Bruins Sunday, Jan. 22. NBC will televise the game, beginning at 4 p.m.

Rich Branning, 6-3, 160-pound guard, will be on the court to help the Irish try to immerge victorious once again. Branning was given the starting berth last year when Ray Martin suffered a broken ankle. Head Coach Digger Phelps says Branning is a winner. And he's only a sophomore.

Few athletes have broken into college basketball at such an important position and performed as well as Branning has.

Welk Show Airs

Since Al Jolson talked and sang in Hollywood's first talking movie in 1928, films have introduced hundreds of memorable song hits beloved by generations of movie fans, and Lawrence Welk this week observes the 50th Anniversary of that great day when Jolie astounded the world with his proclamation, "You ain't seen Nuthin' yet."

Hollywood-oriented, Lawrence's show, airing Saturday, Jan. 28, at 7 p.m. on Channel 7, abound with great tunes presented by his family of performers, starting with the entire group sining "You Oughta Be in Pictures." Tom Netherton sings "The Way We Were," Myron Floren's accordian sounds off "Never On Sunday." Arthur Duncan dances to "Zip-A-Dee-Doo-Da," and Ralna and Guy Hovis duet the unforgettable "Green Leaves of Summer."

Norma Zimmer and Jim Roberts offer "Three Coins in the Fountain," and Anacani, attended by "make-up attendants" makes like a movie star, singing "Whatever Will Be." "Born Free" is Joe Fenney's solo, with Welk's choraleers, Ken Delo comedically offers "Gal in Kalamazoo," and Ava Barber warbles "Everybody's Talkin'."

"Zorba the Greek" is danced by Cissy King and Bobby Burgress, while band numbers include "Raindrops Keep Fallin'," "Laura," "High Society," and a concertized "Exodus." The finale number, in a typical movie studio set, presents the rousing "Toot, Toot, Tootsy," with the entire Welk ensemble in film-oriented costumes.

CHAFFEE CAST

Suzy Chaffee, captain of the U.S. Women's Olympic Ski Team in 1968, has been signed to guest star in the "CBS Movie of the Week," "Ski Lift."

It's Not The Tour Ads

"Fantasy Island" is not likely to be found in the tour ads of travel publications, but — for those people who have fantasies and desperately would like to live them out — a "Fantasy Island" does exist.

Ricardo Montalban stars in the series, which premieres Saturday, Jan. 28, 10 to 11 p.m., on ABC-TV, as an impeccably dressed, debonair, handsome and mild-mannered gentleman named Mr. Roarke who owns and operates an unusual island somewhere in the middle of the ocean, where anyone with any fantasy can go to see it materialize.

Co-starring as Montalban's friend and aide is Herve Villechaize, a French born three-foot eleven-inch actor whose credits include more than a dozen feature films, two Broadway plays, a variety of television appearances, and numerous repertory productions. Herve reprises the original role of Tattoo he played in the initial "Fantasy Island" movie for TV.

As an hour series, "Fantasy Island" will feature two fantasies per episode. Examples of fantasies that can be lived out on the island are those of a man and wife who simply want to re-experience the abounding happiness they had when they were first married; or that of a prince who, about to become king of his small country and who only has known the spoiled life of a member of the royal family, wants to know what it feels like to be a common man; or a hardened New York police detective who would prefer to go back in time to the law-and-order days of the old West where the sheriff was judge and jury; or the fantasy of a man who has spent his entire life learning the hotel business by selling hotel supplies and wants to meet the most important man in the business who can help him own and operate his own hotel; or the fantasy of a not-particularly attractive girl who wants just once to know the thrill of participating in — and possibly winning — a beauty pageant.

Coeds Are Stalked

The occupants of a sorority house in a small-town college are terrorized by a mysterious caller who follows up his abusive telephone calls by systematically slaying one resident after another in "Stranger in the House," a suspense drama to be colorcast on "NBC Saturday Night at the Movies" Jan. 28, 9 to 11 p.m. on NBC-TV. Olivia Hussey, Keir Dullea, Margot Kidder and John Saxon star.

During Christmas Eve celebrations at the sorority in the town of Bedford, an intruder makes his way into the attic of the house and begins the eerie events with a series of telephone calls. Later, one of the residents is found slain in the attic. Then, the body of the housemother who ventured into the attic seeking the missing young woman is also discovered.

ASK THEM YOURSELF

Send the question, on a postcard, to "Ask," Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave., New York, N.Y. 10022. We'll pay $5 for published questions. Sorry, we can't answer others.

New York Zoological Society

FOR ROBERT E. CHASEN,
Commissioner of U.S. Customs

What's the strangest item ever smuggled into this country? — D.V., Washington, D.C.

● A tough question to answer because the list is endless. We've stopped an orangutan at Dulles Airport in Washington and parrots by the trunkload along the Mexican border. We pick up vipers so dangerous no zoo will take them and buttons made of oleander beans, a deadly poison. Anything that's on the endangered species list is fair game for smugglers — from walrus teeth to leopard skins. On St. Patrick's Day an inspector stopped a border crosser eating a pistachio nut ice-cream cone. The cone contained a balloon filled with heroin. We recently found 85 pounds of cocaine in candy bars from Colombia. One of our strangest cases involved cages used to ship two Himalayan bears. Hashish was hidden in the cages' platforms.

FOR THE "ASK" EDITOR

I've heard that Robert Redford has a mean streak and is a practical joker. True? — R.J., Bay City, Mich.

● Mean, no. A practical joker, yes. That is according to Bruce Dern, who's been pals with him since they made The Great Gatsby together and has often been the butt of his pranks. When friends visit Bob, he often sends them home in a chauffeured limo. The driver gets "lost," drives for hours, then asks the passenger, "Where are we going?"...When spotted on the street, Bob goes over to those staring at him, points a finger and says, "Are you?" peers real close and adds, "Yeah, yeah," then walks away...When Bruce was thinking of building on Bob's property in Utah, he sent plans to Bob for approval. Back came a box with a model. A note said plans are approved with enclosed modifications. The model was a huge, one-room outhouse with an enormous bay window.

FOR DEREK JACOBI, star of PBS-TV's I, Claudius

Your stutter as Claudius is so real — it can't be a put-on. So how could you land a job as an actor with such a terrible speech defect? — N.R., Stockton, Calif.

● It is acquired. Most of the credit must go to a dear friend with whom I spent three years at Cambridge. He had an awful stutter. I can still see the weird shapes he'd make with his mouth as he tried to get the words out, nor will I ever forget the sound of his voice. So when I tried out for the part, it was pretty easy for me to assume a stammer.

Why do you refuse to appear on talk shows. — T.J., Oklahoma City, Okla.

● Because I can't stand them. I have nothing to say — or nothing that I know anyone would want to hear. I'm not quick and sharp. Hardest thing in the world for me is to ad-lib and make witty responses. I couldn't come up with a funny story off the top of my head to save my life. Also, I don't like the way I look and sound on those shows. I did a few and looked and sounded so phony.

FOR OLIVE OSMOND, mother of Donny and Marie

Your kids seem almost too good to be true. Did they ever misbehave? — C.R., Hot Springs, Ark.

● Sure. Of all their pranks, there's one I'll never forget. They decided to play pirates and wanted some treasure to bury. So they stashed my jewel box in our backyard, which would have been fine — except that they forgot where they had buried it. Ours was a very large backyard to dig up — which we did, almost every inch of it. Would you believe we found my "treasure" on the very last shovelful?

FOR LAWRENCE WELK

Did your daughter-in-law, Tanya, leave your show because you had a fight? — Walter Pauls, Bloomington, Ind.

● Sorry to disappoint you, but we didn't have a fight. We're best of friends. Tanya's out on tour right now. She has created her own nightclub act and is booked in many cities up and down the country. It's something she has wanted to do for a long time, and I'm glad she got the opportunity — but we hope that one of these days she'll come back to us.

FOR DANNY THOMAS

Why didn't you ever have your big nose fixed? — G.B., Danbury, Conn.

● Cold feet and lack of money when I was young. I'm glad I didn't; that honker of mine made me a millionaire. I'm glad I ignored the late L.B. Mayer [the MGM tycoon]. In one of his famous "fatherly" talks he suggested I have a nose job. I refused, and the next day my contract was canceled. A nightclub owner fired me after one night because I was too ugly. When I heard remarks like that, I thought of Jimmy Durante and Bob Hope.

FOR CHERYL TIEGS, model

What kind of clothes do you like to model, and what is your favorite pose? — B.F., Great Falls, Mont.

● I like to wear light, simple things, and the ones I can't stand are bulky winter clothes. I feel so bundled up in them because my body and personality don't show. That's why I like living in L.A.; I can wear summer garb most of the year. I'm happiest when modeling outdoors, or at least moving about in a studio. I'm best when caught in action. I hate getting stuck in a pose. That's when my personality disappears.

PRO AND CON

Should Users Of Less Electricity During Peak Hours Be Rewarded With Lower Rates?

PRO Robert G. Uhler, executive director, Electric Utility Rate Design Study

Electric rates should reflect the costs of providing service. This encourages an efficient use of scarce resources and helps curb peak demand. For some utilities, particularly those with heavy air-conditioning or winter-heating loads, the costs of providing electricity during peak demand periods are much higher than at other times. Time-of-day rates, however, would mean extra metering costs, and for families using small amounts of electricty it may not pay to install expensive meters. In addition, for some utilities, the difference in costs over the day may not warrant time-of-day rates and time-of-use metering. Each utility is different, but in many cases, time-of-day rates should be offered.

Illustration by Hal Just

CON Dr. Lemont K. Richardson, economics consultant, Richardson Associates

Wide-scale adoption of time-of-day rates could damage certain industries, create hardships for breadwinners and their families and encourage wasteful consumption of electricity. Continuous process industries, such as chemicals, paper and steel that operate around the clock, cannot shift operations to off-peak hours to take advantage of lower rates. This could lead to higher prices for many products. If multishift manufacturing industries switched their operations to off-peak, breadwinners would have to work between 11:00 P.M. and 7:00 A.M. Many workers would lose their seniority advantages. Lower off-peak electricity rates might encourage industries and households to use more electricity, not less.

Some say it's his laconic acting style; others maintain it's his careful cultivation of an image as a loner. Whatever he has, his 27 films have grossed a record $500 million.

Warner Bros.

Eastwood in The Gauntlet, his current film in which his usual role as a macho loner is altered somewhat by costar Sondra Locke. Left: With Maggie, his wife of 24 years. Eastwood has grossed more than any actor at the box office over the last 10 years and was No. 3 in 1977 behind Stallone and Streisand.

Warner Bros.

By Helen Dorsey

"We did one picture together, Where Eagles Dare," recalls Richard Burton, "and within three minutes of shooting time, we all realized that we were in the presence of a very remarkable man. We all adored him, and, to this day, we love him very much."

Can this be the gun-toting Eastwood we know so well, the silent macho loner whose films resound with violence?

In Burton's view, this loner is one of the screen's most gifted performers: "There's a certain line of American actors who are immensely different, and he is in the great line of, say, Spencer Tracy and James Stewart. They have a kind of dynamic lethargy. They appear to do nothing, and they do everything. Clint reduces everything to an absolute minimum. If he has four lines of speech in a scene, he reduces them to four words. It is enormously effective, much more effective than if he had spoken the four lines."

Not everyone, however, has such high regard for Eastwood's reticence in front of the cameras. Writing in The New Yorker, respected film critic Pauline Kael once said: "Clint Eastwood isn't offensive; he isn't an actor, so one could hardly call him a bad actor. He'd have to do something before we could consider him bad at it."

But in another appraisal of the 6'4" angular man, a critic who recalls the early days of Eastwood's "spaghetti Westerns," remarked, "I give those Italian guys credit. They took one look at him, they saw mythic, and they grabbed it."

Just what does being No. 1 at the box office mean? For one thing, it means his films have grossed more than $500 million. It also means that over the last decade Eastwood has ranked in each yearly poll among the top 10 moneymaking stars in movies. Except for 1975, when he placed sixth, he hasn't finished lower than fifth. This year he is No. 3. His consistently high ranking places him in box-office terms above such stars as John Wayne, Burt Reynolds, Barbra Streisand, Paul Newman, Robert Redford, Marlon Brando, Jack Nicholson and Dustin Hoffman.

Box-office draw is not the same as popularity. The latter is measured by the amount of publicity a celebrity gets. Does he appear on a lot of talk shows? Do you see his face on posters and T-shirts? Do you read about him a lot? Farrah Fawcett-Majors, for example, gets lots of exposure but is completely unproven as a box-office attraction.

Some say the key to Eastwood's success is that he is not overexposed, that his image as a loner serves him well by keeping the public from getting tired of him. Besides, he probably wouldn't do as well as other stars as a talk-show personality. He is unpretentious, self-effacing, even a little shy, and thus would run the risk of boring his audience.

He lives in Carmel, Calif., he says, because he feels "comfortable" away from the glitter and funk of Hollywood "The air is purer," he says. "I feel more like I'm in the mainstream of middle America, although sophisticated things go on here, too, like great concerts." (Eastwood's a music buff; he once played ragtime piano in an Oakland bar for all the beer he could drink.)

Clint and his wife Maggie live an almost reclusive life. They visit with old friends and occasionally entertain one or two couples at home. Clint practices meditation and likes to go to the movies at the little local theater. He and Maggie are never seen in the Hollywood "in" spots, but once a year the Eastwoods host the Clint Eastwood Celebrity Tennis Tournament, with proceeds going to a local charity.

Clint also likes guns and is knowledgeable about them. He doesn't hunt, however. "I don't enjoy killing anything, he says, but adds "I'm the first to sit down and enjoy a venison dinner. Just don't ask me to look them in the eye and shoot them."

Clint is very much his own man. Maggie, whom he met on a blind date 24 years ago, says, "Clint gives you the feeling he is in control of his own destiny." Actress Susan Clark suggests, "Eastwood is the quintessential Western man. He has a certain code, and he adheres to it religiously."

Clint uses a lot of expressions like "gut level feelings," "playing your hunches," "instinctive action." "Life," he says, "is like a multiple-choice test. You can talk yourself out of the right answer every time if you think too hard and long about it. Most people have the ability to rely on their natural instincts, but, too often, they ignore them."

Eastwood's self-reliance began in his nomadic childhood, which he spent following his father around in search of jobs during the Depression. He attended 10 different schools in as many years, finally settling in Oakland, where he went to high school. After graduating, he worked in sawmills in Oregon and went to college for a while in Los Angeles, majoring in business administration because he didn't know what he wanted to do.

It was a long haul before the 47-year-old actor's hunches paid off. He played a string of forgettable roles, including those of lab technician, football player and valet to Francis the talking mule. He progressed to modest success on TV as the second lead in Rawhide. Then, in 1967, he became a monumental success with A Fistful of Dollars, one of the first Italian-made "spaghetti Westerns." Two similar films followed: For a Few Dollars More, and The Good the Bad and the Ugly.

Eastwood started as a $75 per week contract player, but his fee soon went to $15,000 with Fistful and then to $400,000 for Coogan's Bluff, his first starring role in an American-made picture. In 1968 he formed his own production company, Malpaso, which enabled him to rent his increasingly expensive services to other studios and to produce and direct his own films.

He relies heavily, he says, on "gut level feelings" when selecting scripts and casting. He tends to cast people, particularly actresses, who "look genuine, real, true-to-life and who don't think of acting in terms of dark glasses and autographs."

When he talks about his family, the same gut-level note is struck. "Mostly, I play it by instinct," he says about raising children. (The Eastwoods have a 9-year-old son, Kyle, and a 5-year-old daughter, Alison.) "You hope to inspire values in your kids, but they don't always work out. Children should be able to express themselves so that they can continue to do so all their lives. I encourage them to believe they don't owe anything to anyone, except decency and respect."

The Eastwood children, so far, have had little trouble dealing with the fame. "Fortunately, they don't go to school with movie-star children or with all upper-income bracket kids," Clint says.

His kids love to go to their father's films. Kyle particularly enjoyed the car crack-up scene in The Enforcer. "Kids of all ages liked that," Clint says.

He is, of course, often asked about violence on the screen. "It's just a game," he insists. "Over the years kids have reacted to violence in much the same way. When I was growing up, we never rooted for the outlaw killer — always for the good guy — unless the outlaw killer had been done in for some reason. Kids who saw Dirty Harry understood it. Violence on the screen doesn't turn anyone into a killer."

He sees his role of father as simplicity itself. If the children do something he doesn't like, he says so. If they persist, he explains a little harder "with a tap on the rear and plenty of loving."

When he speaks about his marriage, the emphasis falls more on liking then on loving: "Maggie's still my best friend. It's easier to be romantic. Everyone talks about love. Nobody talks about like. To have a lasting relationship, you have to really like. Love has an element of hate to it, but to truly like a person means you have a certain respect. Besides, I'm a creature of habit." FW

Observations

Noble genius. Leo Tolstoy does not fit the "starving artist" mold which has characterized so many of the world's great creative geniuses. The author of War and Peace was of noble birth—a count—who moved easily among his wealthy and aristocratic peers in late 19th century Moscow and St. Petersburg social circles. But he was most "at home" overseeing the family's vast land holdings south of Moscow. Not just a gentleman farmer, Tolstoy was a conscientious manager, who introduced many innovative farming techniques and promoted social reforms for the serfs.

Tragic struggle. Tolstoy's second novel, Anna Karenina, weaves these varied elements of the author's life into a rich background tapestry for the story of the Oblonsky family—and Anna's tragic struggle between loyalty and love. Called "the world's greatest modern novel", Anna Karenina is Tolstoy's most autobiographical work. The character of Konstantin Dmitrich Levin is Tolstoy; through Levin, the author expresses his views on a wide range of subjects, from marriage to farm management.

Compelling drama. The story of Anna Karenina has been interpreted on film and in the theater. But never before has it come alive with such force and brilliance as in the 10-week "Masterpiece Theatre" series which begins Sunday, February 5, on Public Broadcasting Service stations nationwide, with Alistair Cooke as host. Produced by BBC/London Film Ltd., this superlative adaptation of Tolstoy's towering novel reflects the high standards which have distinguished previous Mobil-funded productions.

Familiar faces. The star is Nicola Pagett, who was Elizabeth Bellamy in Mobil's widely acclaimed Upstairs, Downstairs. As Anna, she is torn between her role as wife and mother and love for the handsome Count Alexei Vronsky. Eric Porter, who portrays Alexei Karenin, will also be familiar to regular viewers as Soames Forsythe of The Forsythe Saga. Other leading members of the superb cast include Stuart Wilson as Vronsky, Robert Swann as Levin, and Davyd Harries as Prince Stepan Oblonsky.

Make a date. Set aside the next 10 Sunday evenings as the powerful and compelling story of Anna Karenina unfolds in the rich setting of Czarist Russia. See the television listings for the time and station in your area. (And make a note of these other "Masterpiece Theatre" presentations: Our Mutual Friend, beginning April 16; Poldark (Series II), beginning June 4; and the Duchess of Duke Street, beginning September 3.)

HOW DO THE RICH AND FAMOUS HANDLE KIDS' ALLOWANCES?

Even they can't agree on how much, whether the money should be earned and when to begin a program.

By Robert Dallos

"I think I give them too much. They think I give them too little." Speaking is Joan Mondale, wife of the Vice President of the United States. But to her three children (William, 15, Eleanor, 17, and Teddy, who is 19 and out working) she's just plain Mom. She's discussing their allowances.

While the Vice President and his boss are said to see eye-to-eye on most of the world's problems, even they disagree on the subject of allowances. Amy Carter, who just turned 10, gets no regular allowance. The White House won't say why.

Certainly a parent's income doesn't tell much about the size of the allowance his child gets. A few years ago, Nelson Rockefeller, one of the world's richest men, gave his son, Nelson Jr., then 9, an unvarying stipend of 60 cents a week. But he also enabled the little fellow to supplement that income by helping with the gardening at the family's 4,000-acre estate.

A recent study by the Rand Youth Poll, an opinion research firm, revealed that American teenagers have a lot of money to spend — about $26 billion — and they earn over half of that themselves.

Experts contend that what parents teach their youngsters about handling nickels and dimes will determine how well they manage their dollars as adults.

"An allowance is a learning tool," notes Grace Weinstein, author of Children & Money, A Guide for Parents. "If we want children to learn to manage money, we must give them money to spend or misspend."

Another book, Teach Your Child to Manage Money, is published by U.S. News & World Report as part of its Money Management series. "No child should be without that steady source of income," says the book. "An allowance lets a child plan his spending, make important choices, live within his income, save for a large purchase — in short, manage money in a sensible, adult way."

Whatever the size of the allowance, experts insist, it should be regular. "Giving money to a child as needed," says a report by Household Finance Corp., "makes it difficult for him to plan his spending. He never knows how much money he will receive or when. This does not offer regular experiences in managing money, and it encourages a child to ask for money."

The experts also recommend that allowances be kept businesslike, with no strings attached. It shouldn't be used to bribe, reward, punish or discipline. "Cash awards for good behavior or high grades teach the child that everything has its price," says the U.S. News & World Report book.

Should a child be required to earn an allowance? Psychologists differ on this issue, but most parents are unanimous in the affirmative. Actress Dina Merrill, (heir to the General Foods and E.F. Hutton fortunes) says her daughter, Heather, who is 9, must make her bed every day and empty wastepaper baskets for her allowance. "I think she gets 50 cents a week," says Miss Merrill, but I let my husband [actor Cliff Robertson] take care of this."

Miss Merrill has a better recollection of how her son by a previous marriage was taught the value of money. "We took a penny off his allowance every week," she says. "We wanted to teach him the taxation system. We wanted him to learn that one doesn't keep all of one's income."

A major question for many parents is when to begin a formal allowance program. Beginning too early can be counterproductive, such as when a 6-year-old does something silly like give money away or throw it in the garbage can.

An allowance program should be started when a child enters school. A rule of thumb is that most youngsters should get a quarter a week when under 7. Eight- and 9-year-olds should get 50 cents; a dollar is sufficient allowance for kids 10 through 13. When they get older, you should have a serious talk with your children concerning needs and requirements. While opinions differ, in general, an allowance should end the moment the child earns enough to take care of his needs.

Every parent seems to have his own story about the magic "when." "When he was 16," recalls New York businessman Harry Winkler, father of actor Henry ("The Fonz") Winkler, "the allowances stopped. He came to my office and earned his spending money. He was an errand boy. We sent him to the bank, and he dusted the shelves. He used most of the money to go to the movies. Oh boy, how he loved the movies." FW

My Feet Were Killing Me ...Until I Discovered the Miracle of Hamburg!

It was the European trip I had always dreamed about. I had the time and money to go where I wanted—see what I wanted. But I soon learned that money and time don't mean much when your feet hurt too much to walk. After a few days of sightseeing my feet were killing me.

Oh, I tried to keep going. In Paris I limped through Notre Dame and along the Champs-Elysées. And I went up in the Eiffel Tower although I can't honestly say I remember the view. My feet were so tired and sore my whole body ached. While everybody else was having a great time, I was in my hotel room. I didn't even feel like sitting in a sidewalk cafe.

The whole trip was like that until I got to Hamburg, Germany. There, by accident, I happened to hear about an exciting breakthrough for anyone who suffers from sore, aching feet and legs.

This wonderful invention was a custom-made foot support called Flexible Featherspring. When I got a pair and slipped them into my shoes my pain disappeared almost instantly. The flexible shock absorbing support they gave my feet was like cradling them on a cushion of air. I could walk, stand, even run. The relief was truly a miracle.

And just one pair was all I needed. I learned that women also can wear them—even with sandals and open backed shoes. They're completely invisible.

Imagine how dumbfounded I was to discover that these miraculous devices were sold only in Europe. Right then I determined that I would share the miracle I discovered in Hamburg with my own countrymen.

Today thousands of Americans including those who have retired—many with foot problems far more severe than mine—have experienced this blessed relief for themselves.

Here's why Featherspring work for them and why they can work for you. These supports are like nothing you've ever seen before. They are custom fitted and made for your feet alone! Unlike conventional devices, they actually imitate the youthful elastic support that Nature originally intended your feet to have.

Whatever your problem—corns, calluses, pain in the balls of your feet, burning nerve ends, painful ankles, old injuries, backaches or just generally sore, aching feet. Flexible Featherspring will bring you guaranteed relief with every step you take.

Don't suffer pain and discomfort needlessly. If your feet hurt, the miracle of Hamburg can help you. Write for more detailed information. There is no obligation whatsoever. Just fill out the coupon below and mail it today.

WHAT PEOPLE SAY ABOUT THE MIRACLE:

Received my wife's Featherspring two days ago. They are super—neither of us can believe the results. She has had terrible feet for years; already no pain. Incidentally, her sore knee is much better . . . As a retired physician, this result is amazing.
C.O.C. MD/Tucson, Arizona

"My husband felt a great relief and no more pain. They are truly an answer to our prayers. Only wish that he had heard of them twenty years ago."
Mrs. F. S./Metairie, Louisiana

"I feel that these arches are the best money I ever spent on my feet or rather the best buy I ever made."
Mrs. E. E./Theresa, Wisconsin

PEOPLE QUIZ / By John E. Gibson

Who is most likely to suffer a household injury? Can a happy event increase your chances of a highway mishap?

ACCIDENTS: WHO HAS THEM AND WHY

TRUE OR FALSE?

1. Interesting differences exist between households in which accidents and injuries frequently occur and those in which they seldom happen.
2. There are two personality types that make it easy for a vehicle collision to occur.
3. The sort of man most likely to have a fatal automobile accident is easy to spot.
4. Whether you drive an automobile swiftly and recklessly or safely and sanely may well depend on who is riding with you.
5. For some people, being temporarily disabled in an accident has psychological fringe benefits.
6. Happy events in your life can create a climate conducive to accidents, particularly when you're driving on a freeway.

ANSWERS

1. True. Researchers at the Pennsylvania Department of Health surveyed a random sample of 3,807 households with 11,453 people and found that households reporting product-related accidents or injuries differed from the others in that they were more likely to purchase reconditioned products (such as retread tires or blemished or secondhand household appliances) and that they also tended to repair damaged products themselves rather than have them serviced by specialists. "Injured persons," point out the researchers, "tend to consider usefulness more important in a product than quality or appearance." The investigators also reported that the use of tranquilizers and diet pills was associated with injuries. "These observations," conclude the researchers, "can perhaps be explained in terms of increased exposure to risks for both adults and children."

2. True. The Continental Research Institute's (N.Y.) evaluation of the findings of leading studies indicates that two specific personality types provide the ingredients for a large percentage of automobile collisions: those who use the vehicle as a weapon to provide expression for frustrations and antisocial urges and those who are more passive and merely blunder, leaving themselves completely vulnerable. On the other hand, it's noted that "safer drivers are more conforming, controlled persons who tend to avoid exposure to hazards." In short, vehicle collisions are seen as symptoms of either a hidden destructive intent or of an incapacity to adjust to hazards.

3. True. Research at Johns Hopkins University School of Medicine examined cases of men fatally injured in car accidents over a four-year period. Close friends and relatives of the victims were interviewed, and each case was rated in terms of 205 behavior items. Findings: "The socially obstreperous man — belligerent, talkative, hyperactive — is the most likely to die in a car accident." The researchers further concluded that regardless of age or drinking habits, the socially obstreperous driver is at increased risk of becoming a fatality.

4. True. In a study of the risk-taking behavior of automobile drivers, Austin Peay State University investigators cite findings showing that a male driver with a car full of male passengers is a combination that increases risk-taking driving behavior, escalating the likelihood of fancy lane-changing, swift cornering and speeding. Such risk-taking was found much less likely to occur when the driver is alone or when the passengers include women. Adeptness in maneuvering an automobile is associated with masculinity. Thus "to appear successful as a male, the male driver with male passengers may be more willing to take risks in this situation."

5. True. Psychiatric studies at Laval University's Faculté de Médecine (Quebec) on the mental and emotional effects of accidents found that while some people react with rage and emotional vulnerability to accidents, the recovery from an accident can sometimes represent a socially acceptable way of recovering from frustrations at work or at home. Other forces which prolong the recovery process: gratification of dependency needs and not being in a hurry to return to work.

6. True. University of Southern California studies have shown that important events in a person's life — even if they are happy ones — can evoke nervous tensions which find expression in driving at high speed or in a reckless manner. Investigations of case histories of men in various age groups whose high-speed or erratic driving culminated in freeway accidents resulted in the conclusion that "confronted by a current event in their lives, such as an impending job promotion or marriage, such men reacted with anticipatory anxiety regarding their adequacy or worth. Their concomitant driving was then used aggressively and daringly for self-reassurance and anxiety reduction."

Try it at our risk– for two weeks!

See how your child can learn to read better and spell better in just a few weeks with records that teach him by phonics, at home! Mail Free Trial Coupon below.

Would you like to see your child gain as much as a full year's grade in reading in as little as six weeks' time? These are results parents have seen again and again with this simple home-tutoring course in reading.

Mrs. J. J. Webb, Napa, Cal. writes: "After sending my 10 year old son to Special Reading School at $12.50 per hour, spending $700 on this tutoring, I saw your ad and sent for The Sound Way to Easy Reading. In only 8 weeks he learned more from your course than from his Special Reading School. I am thrilled to see how well he reads."

Mrs. J. J. Webb is only one of over 200,000 parents who have turned to The Sound Way of Easy Reading for help in the frustrating problem of a child who can't read. And more than 26,000 schools use it.

Teaches with records

Don't think it's all your child's fault if he hasn't learned to read. Many of our brightest children are not able to grasp the "look-and-say" method taught in most schools today. Yet, many educators insist that at least 40% of our children must have formal training in phonics—that they will never master reading without it!

That is why so many poor readers show remarkable progress with The Sound Way to Easy Reading. It teaches reading by the phonics method (the method by which most parents learned to read years ago). Its phonograph records and charts show your child exactly what to do, so he can teach himself without any help from you.

The records drill him in the sounds of the 26 letters in the alphabet and their blends. Once he learns the 123 basic phonics sounds in this course he can read up to 85% of the words in the English language. It works for children of all ages—in the earliest grades, and even in high school.

Tested and proved

In a pilot study by university psychologists, children gained up to a full year's grade in oral reading skill after only 30 lessons with The Sound Way to Easy Reading.

A semester-long study involving 214 pupils in 4 Chicago schools proved that the classes given The Sound Way to Easy Reading showed marked improvement in reading and spelling over the control groups.

Help your child now

By starting your child on The Sound Way to Easy Reading now, you can change his entire attitude toward school—turn his sense of failure into the joy of sucess. Try it free for two weeks. You send no money—just mail this coupon now!

USED BY 200,000 PARENTS who send many letters like these:

Advanced two years—"Your course has made my son want to read. No more frustration with words he doesn't know, he just concentrates and sounds them out. In 7 months, Steve's reading level advanced two years."
Mrs. R. Collins, Ft. Lauderdale, Fla.

Better report cards—"If I had known about your course before, Gregory would not have had to repeat 3rd grade. In only 7 weeks, he reads and spells much better, and is bringing home better report cards."
Mrs. R. Quinn, Cheektowaga, N.Y.

IN 26,000 SCHOOLS
teachers are highly enthusiastic

Second grade—"Your course is the best teaching aid a teacher could have. I have been using it for the past 2 years for my basic second grade reading course. My class looks forward to the record quizzes. Their improvement in reading and spelling has been outstanding."
Mrs. Diane Williamson, Chickasaw, Ala.

Remarkable improvement—"I have seen my remedial groups advance 1½ to 2½ levels in reading in 6 months and show 85% to 90% improvement in spelling. A low achievement 6th grade group showed remarkable improvement. I have convinced many teachers in our school to use your course."

HYPERTENSION STRIKES CHILDREN, TOO

High blood pressure is the nation's No. 2 killer, and we now know that it can be a serious problem for children.

By Alvin N. Eden, M.D.

More than 20 million Americans, or about one-fifth of our adult population, suffer from high blood pressure, according to the latest figures from the National Center for Health Statistics. More frightening, high blood pressure or hypertension is the country's No. 2 killer (arteriosclerosis is No. 1). And more and more evidence is accumulating that high blood pressure in children, too, is a real problem, so the taking of a child's blood pressure is becoming part of physical examinations.

A task force on blood pressure, appointed by the National Heart, Lung and Blood Institute, recently drew up specific guidelines for practicing physicians and health-care providers involved in school health and other community programs for children. This report was sent by the American Academy of Pediatrics to all its members.

Among the task force's recommendations is that all children over age 3 should have their blood pressures measured annually as part of their continuing health care.

Remember that a single blood-pressure determination is not accurate, especially if the child is agitated or crying during the procedure. In such cases, the blood pressure should be taken at a subsequent visit when the child is calmer. Another serious matter is that the size of the blood-pressure cuff is important. A cuff that is either too large or too small will give inaccurate results.

If you find that your child's physician neglects to take the blood pressure, I suggest that you remind him to do so. If your child has an elevated blood pressure, your physician may do additional tests to determine the reason for the high blood pressure. In the majority of cases, no specific reason will be found, and your child will be labeled as having essential hypertension.

What can be done for a child with essential hypertension? There are three factors related to high blood pressure that you can help control. These are obesity, salt intake and psychological stress.

Obesity: We know that high blood pressure develops more frequently in overweight adults and that it is related to the rate of increase of body weight. Similar trends have been noted in children and adolescents. It has been found that more than 50 percent of the children with high blood pressure are fat. Loss of weight has been reported to lead to a lowering of blood pressure. Furthermore, avoidance of obesity in children is important since overweight children and overweight teenagers tend to become fat adults. Clearly, then, if your child has high blood pressure and is overweight, you must try to slim him down.

Salt intake: Many investigators have stressed the primary role of excess salt intake in the development of hypertension. Further, excessive salt intake can aggravate the course of hypertension. There is general agreement that people with hypertension as well as children with a family history of hypertension should reduce their salt intake.

The recommended daily requirement for salt is three grams or three-fifths of a teaspoon. The average American takes in between six to 18 grams. The daily goal can be met by not adding salt to food and by avoiding such foods as pretzels, potato chips and salted nuts. By reducing salt intake, the blood pressure can be lowered in a significant number of cases.

Psychological stress: Elevations of blood pressure definitely occur during periods of emotional strain. There is no evidence, however, that a temporary rise initiated by emotion leads to sustained high blood pressure. But many studies have maintained that high blood pressure is associated with certain traits characteristic of what is called "repressed personality drives." This is more serious.

At times your child's doctor will have to prescribe medication to control your child's high blood pressure, and a number of effective drugs are available for this purpose.

You can go a long way toward preventing your child from ever developing high blood pressure and its serious medical consequences by making sure that he never gets too fat and by restricting the salt intake in your house. Prevention is the name of the game. FW

How to Hire a $100,000 Lawyer for Ten Dollars

I'm a lawyer myself—and I may be cutting my own throat—but I'm going to tell you the truth:

The bulk of what most lawyers do could be done by someone who had never seen the inside of a law school—and usually is.

Lawyer's secretaries do most of the work on wills, divorces (as well as annulments and legal separations), bankruptcies and creditor plans, simple contracts, real estate deals (buying, selling, and leasing), run-of-the-mill personal injury cases, adoptions, filing homesteads, insurance claims, minor criminal cases . . . and the list goes on and on.

And what do these Legal Secretaries do? They follow directions and fill in the blanks on forms. That's all. It's as simple as that.

That's why I think you may be ready to try being your own lawyer—and save a ton of money.

But before you decide, answer these two questions: (1) Can you follow simple directions—no more complicated than assembling a Christmas toy or reading a cook book? (2) Do you have the few cents necessary to buy the correct forms at a Legal Stationery Store?

If your answer to both of those questions is "yes," you're ready. Well, almost ready. There are just two more things you should know:

(1) You don't necessarily have to have "the few cents necessary to buy the correct form at a Legal Stationery Store." Because I'll tell you how and where to get many of these forms free.

(2) You'll need a book. It's called "Do Your Own Legal Work." And you can do your own legal work—no matter which State you live in. The book took more than a year to write. Based on what I've actually been earning in my law practice, that represents more than $100,000 worth of advice.

I mention that, not to brag, but so you'll know that I'm not some kid, fresh out of law school, and hungry for a few bucks. Along that line, you should know that I've been practicing for 13 years, and I've written the book about the legal problems I work with, day in and day out.

Some other things you might want to know: I've published technical legal articles that explain the law—to lawyers. I've served as a research assistant to a Judge of the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

What will it cost you to "hire" a lawyer wtih those qualifications? Ten dollars. Just about what I—and lots of other lawyers—would charge you for 10 minutes of legal advice.

Why so cheap? Because I hope to sell a million copies—or at least enough so I can take some time off and enjoy life with my family.

That's what's in it for me.

How to find and use forms . . . page 7
How to draft your own will . . . page 36
How to handle your own criminal case . . . page 72
How to settle your own accident or personal injury case . . . page 82
How to handle an adoption . . . page 99
How to dissolve your marriage . . . page 113
How to solve debt problems—from consumer-credit counseling to bankruptcy . . . page 127
How to draft a contract . . . page 209
How to handle real estate transactions . . . page 216
How you can use a Law Library—free—to avoid probate! . . . save taxes! . . . form a corporation! . . . and handle hundreds of other matters! . . . page 25

Now I'm not saying that you're never going to need a lawyer. I am saying that if you do need to see one, you'll be ready and be able to handle a lot of the simple, clerical work yourself. You'll save his time.

Here's an example of how my book will cut down on those precious minutes: For an attorney to draw up a simple contract might cost you $400 if he had to start from scratch. It could cost you $30 if he had to take only a half hour to review the work you'd already done—and can do, using my book.

Lawyers get $60 for husband-wife wills; I'll show you how to do your own in less than an hour. Lawyers charge $450 for a simple divorce which may take less than two hours of their time. Lawyers get between $3,000 and $4,500 for obtaining a $9,000 personal injury settlement. I'll show you how to do as well, or better, by yourself. Lawyers get $150 for an adoption, but their secretaries do the work—and so can you.

Your best guarantee that my book is everything I say it is, is this: my fellow lawyers will be watching me like a hawk. I wouldn't dare mis-step or mislead you. It could cost me my license.

What's more, I'm so sure you'll find my book immediately profitable—that I'll let you read it before you pay for it!

Send me your check or money order today—and I promise not to deposit it for 30 days. That should give you enough time to look it over and decide whether to keep it or return it. If you do return it, I'll send back your uncashed check or money order.

At worst, you'll be out a few cents for postage. Seems like a pretty small risk for a book that I honestly believe could save you thousands of dollars in legal fees.

Why not fill out and mail the coupon now? Post-date your check if you want to. I won't cash it for 30 days anyway.

THREE CHEESE NOODLE CASSEROLE

- 1 lb. medium egg noodles (about 8 cups)
- Salt
- 4 to 6 quarts boiling water
- ½ cup butter or margarine
- 2 cloves garlic, crushed
- ¼ cup flour
- ½ teaspoon dry mustard
- ¼ teaspoon ground black pepper
- ½ teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
- 1 quart (4 cups) milk
- 2 cups (8 ozs.) grated natural Swiss cheese
- 1 cup (4 ozs.) grated sharp Cheddar cheese
- ½ cup grated Romano or Parmesan cheese
- ½ cup fine dry bread crumbs
- 2 tablespoons butter or margarine, melted

1. Gradually add noodles and 1 tablespoon salt to rapidly boiling water so that water continues to boil. Cook, uncovered, stirring occasionally until tender. Drain in colander. Rinse with cold water.

2. Prepare cheese sauce: melt ½ cup butter in Dutch oven or large saucepan over low heat. Add garlic and sauté ½ minute.

3. Stir in flour, 1 teaspoon salt, mustard, pepper and Worcestershire sauce.

4. Gradually stir in milk; bring mixture to a boil. Simmer 1 minute, stirring constantly.

5. Add cheeses; stir mixture constantly over low heat 1 to 2 minutes or until cheeses melt.

6. Add noodles; toss until well coated with cheese sauce. Turn into lightly greased 1½- or 3-qt. baking dish.

7. Mix crumbs with melted butter; sprinkle over noodles. Bake in preheated 350°F. oven for 30 to 40 minutes until bubbly. Great as a main course or with a roast or steak. Makes 8 servings

MANICOTTI AMERICAN STYLE

- 1 lb. ground chuck or sausage meat
- 1 cup finely chopped onion
- ½ cup chopped green pepper
- 2 cans (6-oz. size) tomato paste
- 2 cups water
- Salt
- 2 teaspoons sugar
- 1 teaspoon oregano leaves
- Ground black pepper
- 1 pkg. (8 ozs.) manicotti shells
- 6 qts. boiling water
- 1 lb. fine-curd creamed cottage cheese or Ricotta
- 2 cups (8 ozs.) grated Mozzarella cheese
- 2 tablespoons chopped parsley
- ¼ cup grated Parmesan cheese

2. Add onion and green pepper; cook until tender, stirring occasionally. Drain off fat if necessary.

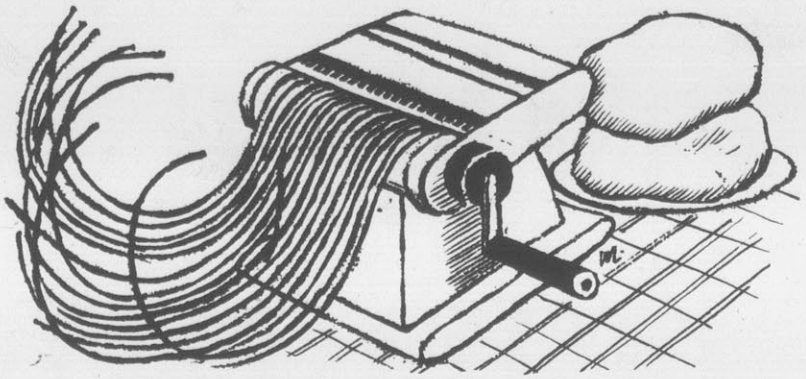

3. Stir in tomato paste, 2 cups water, 2 teaspoons salt, sugar, oregano; ½ teaspoon pepper; bring to boiling. Cover and simmer 1 hour, stirring occasionally.

4. Meanwhile, gradually add manicotti and 1 tablespoon salt to rapidly boiling water so that water continues to boil. Cook, uncovered, stirring occasionally, until barely tender. Drain in colander. Keep shells in cold water until ready to fill.

5. Combine cottage cheese, Mozzarella, ½ teaspoon pepper and parsley. Using small spatula, fill shells with cheese mixture.

7. Cover with remaining meat sauce. Sprinkle with Parmesan cheese. Bake, uncovered, in preheated 350°F. oven 30 to 40 minutes until bubbly. Makes 6 servings

PASTA FAZOOL
(Zuppa Pasta Fagioli)

- 1 lb. dried pinto beans
- Water
- 2 tablespoons flour
- Olive Oil
- 1 clove garlic, crushed
- 1 cup chopped onion
- 2 cups chopped celery and leaves
- 1 cup chopped carrots
- ¼ lb. (½ cup) butter or margarine
- 1 can (28 ozs.) tomatoes
- ½ cup firmly packed chopped parsley
- 2 cans (10½-oz. size) condensed beef broth
- Salt
- ¼ teaspoon ground black pepper
- 1 tablespoon dried basil or ¼ cup chopped fresh basil leaves
- 3 qts. boiling water
- 2 cups (8 ozs.) elbow macaroni
- Chopped parsley

1. Soak beans in cold water overnight; rinse and drain.

2. Place beans in a large pot; add flour plus 3 tablespoons olive oil and shake until beans are coated.

3. Add 2 qts. warm water and garlic; cover and simmer for 1¼ hours.

4. Cook onion, celery and carrots in 2 tablespoons olive oil and butter in large skillet for 5 minutes.

5. Add tomatoes and parsley; cover and simmer for 1 hour. If necessary, add water to prevent sticking.

6. After beans have cooked 1¼ hours, remove 3 cups beans and set aside.

7. Put remaining beans and all the vegetable mixture through a food mill; pour into large pot.

8. Add beef broth, reserved beans, 2 tablespoons salt, pepper and basil. Simmer for 15 minutes. Add water, as necessary, to achieve desired thick soupy consistency.

9. Meanwhile, add 1 tablespoon salt to rapidly boiling water. Gradually add macaroni so that water continues to boil. Cook, uncovered, stirring occasionally until tender. Drain in colander.

10. Add macaroni to soup; stir gently until mixed. Garnish with chopped parsley before serving. Makes 8 main-dish servings

SPAGHETTI CARBONARA

- 8 ozs. spaghetti
- 1 tablespoon salt
- 3 qts. boiling water
- 2 eggs, separated
- ½ cup grated Parmesan cheese
- ½ cup heavy cream
- Dash crushed red pepper
- 6 slices bacon, crisp-cooked, drained and crumbled
- Salt
- Few twists freshly ground black pepper
- Grated Parmesan cheese

1. Gradually add spaghetti and salt to rapidly boiling water so that water continues to boil. Cook, uncovered, stirring occasionally until tender. Drain in colander.

3. Heat cream with red pepper just until hot. Do not boil.

4. Return spaghetti to pot, add egg mixture, toss until mixed. Pour hot cream over spaghetti and toss again. Add bacon; toss again.

5. Season to taste with salt and several twists freshly ground black pepper. Serve with additional grated Parmesan cheese.

Makes 6 servings

MEDITERRANEAN MINESTRONE

2 lbs. beef soup bones
3 lbs. shin beef, sliced
4 quarts water
1 can (28 ozs.) tomatoes in purée or juice, undrained
1 can (15 ozs.) tomato sauce
2 medium onions, quartered
¼ cup chopped parsley
2 cloves garlic, crushed
2 tablespoons salt
2 teaspoons basil leaves, crushed
½ teaspoon ground black pepper
2 bay leaves
2 cups (1 lb.) sliced carrots
2 cups sliced celery
4 cups (12 ozs.) uncooked shell macaroni or elbows
2 pkgs. (10 ozs. each) frozen Italian green beans
1 pkg. (10 ozs.) frozen peas
1 can (1 lb. or 20 ozs.) white or red kidney beans, undrained
Parmesan cheese, grated
Italian bread

1. Place soup bones and shin beef in large 8- to 10-qt. soup kettle; add water. Bring to a boil; skim surface of liquid.
2. Add tomatoes, tomato sauce, onions, parsley, salt, basil, pepper, garlic and bay leaves. Bring to a boil again, reduce heat, cover and simmer for 1½ hours.

Makes about 6 quarts

DEEP SEA CHOWDER

1½ cups elbow macaroni or small shell macaroni
Salt
Boiling water
4 strips bacon, chopped, or 4 tablespoons butter or margarine
1 cup chopped onion
1 cup chopped celery
½ cup celery leaves
½ cup chopped parsley
1 clove garlic, minced
2 cans (8 ozs.) minced clams, undrained
½ teaspoon thyme leaves
¾ teaspoon ground black pepper
1 bay leaf
1 pkg. (1 lb.) frozen fish fillets, thawed and cubed
2 cans (13-oz. size) evaporated milk, diluted
⅓ cup flour
⅓ cup cold water
Grated Parmesan cheese

1. Gradually add macaroni and 1 tablespoon salt to rapidly boiling water so that water continues to boil.
2. Cook, uncovered, stirring occasionally, until tender. Drain in colander; run cold water through them.
3. In 4- to 6-qt. kettle or Dutch oven, fry bacon until partially cooked. Add onion, celery, celery leaves, parsley and garlic. Cook, stirring occasionally, until vegetables are tender, about 8 to 10 minutes.
4. Drain clams, reserving liquid; add water to make 4 cups. Add liquid to Dutch oven along with one teaspoon salt. Add thyme, pepper and bay leaf. Heat to boiling; cover and simmer 10 minutes.
5. Add drained macaroni, clams, cubed fish and evaporated milk. Heat soup to boiling; reduce heat slightly and boil gently 15 minutes.
6. Smoothly blend flour with cold water. Add to soup, stirring over medium heat until mixture comes to a boil. Taste for seasoning, adding additional salt and pepper if desired.
7. Serve in large, deep soup bowls. Pass grated Parmesan cheese to sprinkle on top.

HAIRCOLOR CLINIC

"Dear Barbara Britton..."

Coloring Gray Hair! Did you know there's a hard way and an easy way?

Everyone remembers Barbara Britton as the lovely star of the TV series Mr. & Mrs. North. Recently she discovered a new and simple way of coloring gray hair that has aroused a lot of interest among other women. Here are some of their questions and comments.

• Dear Barbara: Lately my gray hair has been getting me down. I've toyed with coloring it—my daughter-in-law said go to it. But I'm afraid I'll get that dull dyed look. I read you were pleased with Lady Grecian Formula so I looked for it, but there was no color chart. How do I pick my shade?
Mrs. V. M., Fredrickstown, Ohio.

There's no confusing color selection with Lady Grecian. The same clean clear liquid works whatever your original color was. You just comb it through your hair daily until you get the color you want. Then just a quick once a week or so keeps it that way. And don't worry about looking "dyed," your color will be beautifully natural looking because Lady Grecian works with the natural chemistry of your hair to retain a natural blend of shades and highlights. So take your daughter-in-law's advice and go to it with easy to use Lady Grecian Formula.

• Dear Barbara: I've used haircoloring for about 10 years . . . all kinds. They look fake and they dry my hair and split the ends. And I hate those messy touch-ups. Can I switch to Lady Grecian without waiting til the old color grows out?
Mrs. L. D., Hallstead, Pa.

Yes indeed. Lady Grecian Formula is perfectly compatible with any haircolor you may have been using. And, most important, it has no damaging peroxide so you'll notice your hair starting to look softer, healthier. Even the dry split ends will begin to disappear thanks to gentle Lady Grecian. Friends tell me switching is even easier than starting with gray hair as I did. You just use Lady Grecian on the gray root area til it blends in. And before long you'll notice your hair will look and feel softer, the color will be more natural looking. And, just think . . . no more tiresome touch-ups.

• Dear Barbara: I'm just beginning to notice some gray hairs—it bothers me, but I don't want to get involved in complicated haircoloring routines. Will Lady Grecian work when you're just a little gray?
Mrs. B. D., Bowie, Md.

Lady Grecian is especially good for early gray because it colors only the gray . . . leaves the rest of your hair its natural color. And it's so simple. There's no messy dye to cope with, just comb a few clear drops through the gray area until it blends with your natural color. Or, you can even make your gray hairs into the popular frosting effect with Lady Grecian Formula.

• • •

The uniquely easy way to color gray hair—Lady Grecian Formula. It's totally different from ordinary haircolor. First of all, it's a practically clear liquid that works gradually and gently. You just comb or brush it through your hair daily until you have the color you want.

There's no mixing no mess and no peroxide. So you know it's gentle. No tiresome touch-ups either. Once your hair is the color you want (usually about 10 days), the same quick Lady Grecian application once a week or so will keep your color looking naturally lovely with no gray roots ever. Lady Grecian Formula is available at toiletry counters everywhere.

ARMOUR'S ARMOURY

WHO NOSE?

When I've a cold my nose drips,
Indeed much like a hose drips
Or like a leaky faucet—
I can't control or boss it,
Perhaps, and I'm no josher,
It needs another washer
Or else some twisting, tightening,
Or lowering or heightening.
A doctor would my spouse call,
But he will make no house call.
Two aspirin? What's dumber?
I think I'll try a plumber.

—Richard Armour

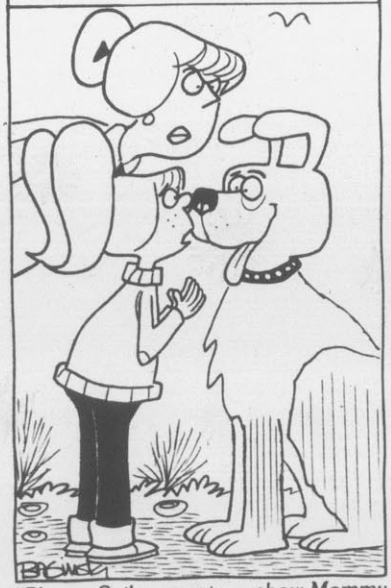

Now they're working on a science-fiction movie that's going to be a tremendous hit all over America. It's all about this giant hubcap that steals vandals. —Robert Orben

One thing about drinking brandy to get rid of a cold: if you don't kill the cold germs, you at least show them a good time. —Al Batt

Two angels were chatting. One said, "Me? How I got here? Well, the last I remember was my girlfriend saying, 'C'mon, be an angel and let me drive the car.'" —Lillian Koslover

WHAT IN THE WORLD

Fear Of Success

Why aren't you getting ahead as fast as you think you should be? If you're like many people who are their own worst enemy, it may be because deep down you're afraid of success.

"If you have ability and aren't getting anywhere or have achieved success and can't enjoy it, it's time to analyze your situation," says Dr. Leon Tec, a Conn. psychiatrist. "Many people aren't successful because they're afraid of failing."

Tec, who has written a new book, The Fear of Success, says that almost everyone has a certain amount of the fear, but the problem is most severe in people whose self-image hasn't kept pace with their achievements. "People who rise very quickly, such as actors and politicians, are in the greatest danger," says Tec. "And the greater the gap, the greater the fear." Tec points out that other common victims are women afraid of competing with men.

What can you do to overcome your fear? Tec says it isn't easy, but it can be done: "The first thing to do is to realize it exists. Next, keep doing what you're afraid of long enough to prove to yourself that you can do a good job."

Dog Of The Year

Meatball, a German shepherd, proved to be his owner's best friend when he interrupted a burglary and tried to capture the culprits. Meatball's heroism earned him the title of "Dog Hero of the Year" and prizes including a $1,000 U.S. Saving Bond and a year's supply of dog food.

Mrs. Robert Keith of Morris, Ala., Meatball's owner, was alone when she heard someone in the greenhouse behind her home. She took Meatball with her to investigate and surprised an intruder.

Meatball chased him to his getaway car, where an accomplice was waiting. As the would-be burglar jumped into the car, Meatball held on to his leg firmly, even though he was dragged for several yards and suffered injuries as a result.

If you have a dog who you think is a hero, write: Kathy Rand, Public Relations Manager, Quaker Oats Co, Mechandise Mart Plaza, Chicago, Ill. 60654.

What Stress Is Doing To Working Women

For some time doctors have been predicting a rise among working women of such stress-related ailments as hypertension, heart disease and ulcers. But now these women may run an increased risk of another disease — gout.

Catherine Carlton, past pres. of the American Academy of Osteopathy, says that observations from her Fort Worth, Texas, practice have convinced her that the increase of gout is partly due to excessive wining and dining.

She points out that gout also seems to attack stress-prone people who have rich diets, consume a lot of shellfish and don't get enough exercise.

The remedy? To dissolve the uric-acid crystals in the blood that are the main cause of painful, gouty swellings, Carlton advises patients to drink a lot — of water.

Bread With A Brick-Oven Flavor

A Long Island, N.Y., housewife developed a novel way of giving bread that brick-oven taste — she baked it in a flowerpot. Mrs. Linda Wasserstein's discovery led a team of engineers and designers at Alfred Univ. to develop a new ceramic breadpan that testers say produces bread that tastes as if it came from an old-fashioned brick oven.

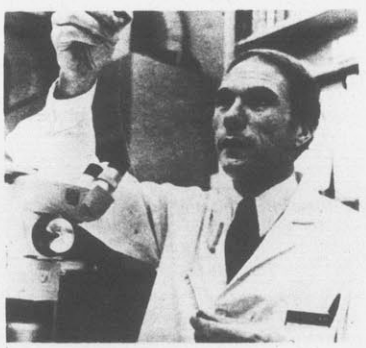

Mrs. Wasserstein explains her discovery this way. "I'd been a bread-baking and pastry-making teacher for 5 or 6 years, and I wanted a brick oven. After investigating a number of alternatives, I thought I'd try baking the bread in a flowerpot."

The Alfred Univ. pan, which will be available soon in stores throughout the country, is made from crushed red shale and sprayed with a special coating to prevent sticking.

Auto Hot Line

If you'd like to find out if a car you're considering buying has ever been recalled for a safety defect, all you have to do is call a toll-free Govt. hot line (800-424-9393; in Washington, D.C. call 426-0123). You can get information on any new or used car by telling the operator the vehicle's make, model and identification number.

Bernie Ames of the National Highway Traffic Safety Admin., which runs the hot line, says almost ½ the cars recalled have never had their safety problem corrected. If you discover the car you may buy was recalled, you can find out if it was fixed by sending a postcard to the manufacturer.

A TV Doctor Who's For Real

A man on the verge of going into a diabetic coma recognized his symptoms, a small-town physician was able to diagnose hepatitis and a woman whose friend had committed suicide found comfort — all by watching Daniel Foster, M.D., a weekly ½-hour medical information show on PBS stations across the country.

Although the host, Dr. Foster, a prof. at the Univ. of Texas Health Science Center at Dallas, is a leading diabetes researcher, unlike his fictional TV colleagues, he doesn't pretend to know all the answers. "The stars of the show are the guests, all of whom are experts in their fields," says Dr. Foster.

Each week Foster and the visiting guest specialist discuss a common health problem in a conversational format. They often are joined by patients who talk about their personal experiences. Viewers can obtain complete transcripts of the program, including photographs of all the diagrams, for a modest fee.

Quick Takes

What happens when people considering surgery get a second opinion? According to researchers at New York Hospital-Cornell Medical Center, many patients decide against surgery. In a recent study, 83% of those who voluntarily sought a second opinion and almost 68% of those who were told to get one decided against the surgery. Three of the operations most often decided against were hysterectomy, knee surgery and prostatectomy.

And now for some heavy news — the Department of Health, Education and Welfare says that since the early 60's, adults in nearly all age groups have put on weight. Biggest gainers are men between 35 and 44 whose weight has soared an average of 8 lbs. During the same period, their female counterparts have gained an average of 6 lbs.

While most people are content to hang on to the job they have, an increasing number of Americans believe that if 1 is good, 2 are better. Recent figures show more than 6% of male workers and 3.4% of female workers moonlight. A third of the moonlighters say they do it to pay bills, 8% to save for the future and 20% because they just plain like it.

There are some bridges you should think about before you cross — the kind you drive over. The Insurance Information Inst. reports that almost 1 in 5 of the country's bridges is unsafe. One reason is that 75% of the bridges were built over 40 years ago and weren't designed to bear the weight of modern trucks and their loads.

Here's how The Literary Guild works:

You get top best sellers at up to 40% off publishers' edition prices. After your membership's accepted, you get your 4 books for only $1, plus shipping and handling. If you are not completely satisfied, return them within 10 days and we will cancel your membership and you owe nothing. About every 4 weeks (14 times a year) you'll be offered dozens of exciting best sellers at up to 40% off through your free copy of The Literary Guild Magazine. In addition, up to 4 times a year, you may receive offers of special selections, always at discounts off publishers' prices.

You never have to buy a minimum number of books a year. Only buy four more during your membership, after which you may cancel anytime. If you want the selection featured in the magazine or the special selection, do nothing, it will be shipped to you automatically. If you want an alternate, or no book, return the order form marked with your preference by the date specified. You always will have at least 10 days to make a decision. If you get an unwanted selection because you had less than 10 days, return it at our expense. There is a shipping and handling charge on all books shipped.

ASPARAGUS FERN — $2.98

Grows fast and easy even under adverse conditions of dim light and low humidity . . . and what a breath-taking sight it is! The wire-thin stems, bearing thousands of hair-like leaves, grow up and out, down and around the hanging basket in a "waterfall" of multiple shades of green. Non-blooming, adds a stunning contrast to your other plants because of its abundance of lacy green foliage supported by hundreds of stems. 2¼" pot size plants. Complete with hanging basket.

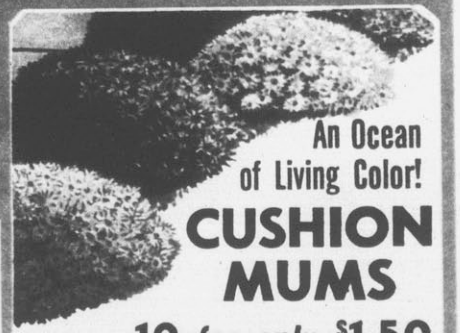

CREEPING SEDUM

(DRAGON'S BLOOD)

4 for only $1.00

Rugged and carefree, spreads rapidly in sun or shade. The lush, semi-evergreen foliage erupts in massive clusters of fiery red blooms mid-summer to September. Easy-growing, sensational in rock gardens, "trouble spots", slopes, borders, shady areas where grass won't grow. Hardy, Michigan nursery grown, plant 6-12" apart. Bloom year after year without replanting. Send today.

IN THE DAYS OF KING ARTHUR

by HAL FOSTER

IT IS THE WOMEN OF THE DISTRICT AROUND THE GATE WHO RISE TO THE CHALLENGE, TRYING COURAGEOUSLY TO HOLD BACK THE PIRATES UNTIL HELP ARRIVES.

ON THE BEACH THE MAIN FORCE OF PIRATES FIGHTS DESPERATELY, CAUGHT BETWEEN THEIR BURNING SHIPS AND QUEEN ALETA'S WARRIORS. NOW WORD COMES OF AN ATTACK ON THE WESTERN GATE!

VAL IS SICK WITH HUMILIATION FOR IT WAS HE WHO LED THE CHARGE THAT DROVE THE CORSAIRS TO THEIR SHIPS, BUT LEAVING THE GATE OPEN BEHIND HIM. AND WOMEN RALLIED TO CLOSE THE GATE AND DEFEND THE WALLS.

NOW HE GOES RAGING INTO BATTLE LIKE A MADMAN, TRYING TO ATONE FOR THE MISTAKE THAT MIGHT HAVE LOST THE CITY.
