

Widespread Damage Due Hurricane-Strength Gusts

By STUART SAVAGE and DEBBIE JACKSON
Reflector Staff Writers

High winds, gusting at times to 85 miles per hour, played havoc with the Greenville-Pitt County area last night and this morning.

Damage to store windows and signs in the Greenville area was widespread, while in other areas trees were toppled, farm buildings damaged and mobile homes overturned.

The Greenville Utilities Commission weather station reported winds during the night ranged from 50 to 70 miles per hour at times, with gusts up to 85 miles per hour.

The high temperature yesterday was 71 degrees, while the low was 42 degrees. At 8 a.m. this morning the temperature was reported at 43 degrees.

The Tar River level stood at 16.4 feet according to the National Weather Service gauge at 8 a.m. today, up 1.4 feet from the 8 a.m. river level yesterday.

Rainfall during the 24 hour period ending at midnight last night totaled 2.01 inches, the utilities weather station reported.

Officials at Pitt-Greenville Airport said the wind was gusting to 55 miles per hour about 9:30 this morning. They noted that the high winds damaged two private planes at the airport during the night.

Greenville Police today reported signs were damaged by the wind at at least five businesses and reported at least 14 business places.

Probably the heaviest damage from windows being blown out occurred at the J.C. Penney's Auto Center where wind blowing through broken windows caused damage to the interior of the building.

Police noted that a double-wide mobile home at the Azalea Mobile Homes lot was blown over by the heavy gusts, while officials noted that a number of mobile homes at other locations in the Greenville area were overturned or damaged by the winds.

Greenville Public Works director Mayo Allen said no major damage faced Public Works crews this morning. "But a lot of debris was in the street system...quite a few small trees."

Allen, who said, "all our forces are out," reported no streets were flooded and indicated that all the trees blown into streets and over sidewalks should be cleared by noon today.

Carolina Telephone and Telegraph Company spokesmen said between $2,000 and $3,000 damage resulted to the telephone system in the Greenville area due to the high wind.

George Clak said CT and T had four poles broken during the night and "two or three trees" blown into telephone lines, but noted probably no more than 25 customers were without service due to the storm.

Clak said that five poles on the Wilson toll line near Pitt Memorial Hospital were blown over but said service was not interrupted and indicated the poles would be straightened.

Greenville Utilities Commission spokesman Malcolm Green said GUC had 15 or 20 poles broken on their system which includes about 20,000 poles. Green noted that two large areas were without power for a while last night.

One, he said, involved industrial customers and about two-thirds of the residential customers. He said the Tar River. He said power was off in that area for about 30 minutes when something was blown into a 115,000 volt transmission line and a protective device shut the line down.

The second area, according to Green, ran from N.C. 11 West of Winterville to Frog Level. He indicated a feed line into that area was damaged by the wind and had to be rebuilt, although power was restored after several hours.

Green noted, "there was a lot of scattered stuff," where trees fell into lines and service wires were pulled loose from houses, but no major areas were involved.

Indicates Bid To Up Cigarette Tax

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — He doesn't plan to push for an increase this year, but state Sen. Marshall Rauch, D-Gaston, says a battle over higher taxes on cigarettes may lie ahead for North Carolina.

Rauch, chairman of the powerful Senate Finance Committee, said an increase in the two-cent-a-pack tax on cigarettes should be the first revenue source the legislature taps if the state budget gets out of balance.

Rauch made the remarks after hearing two New York tax investigators tell a legislative study commission there is evidence that organized crime has begun taking over some legitimate cigarette dealerships in North Carolina.

Emanuel Urzi, chief investigator for the New York state Department of Tax and Finance, said the takers are part of an attempt by organized crime to strengthen its hold on highly profitable cigarette smuggling.

The smuggling from low-tax states like North Carolina to New York City, where state and local taxes amount to $2.30 a carton, cost New York $72 million to $100 million a year, Urzi said. He said 80 percent of the cigarettes smuggled into that state come from North Carolina.

Higher taxes here would make smuggling less profitable, but a Republican-sponsored cigarette proposal to raise the tax to five cents a pack got little attention in last year's General Assembly. Large volume cigarette sales, even to smugglers, are not illegal in North Carolina, and legislators have been reluctant to tax tobacco, the state's chief cash crop.

Any revenue bill could be introduced in the legislative mid-session convening May 1. Rauch said he is not planning a tax bill, but he said if economic growth fails to cover increased revenue demands, he would support a higher tax.

"If I was going to consider a specific place for money, it would be the cigarette tax because we're so low and because it has been proven that higher taxes on cigarettes do not reduce sales," he said. "If I could wave a magic wand and increase the tax to 10 cents a pack, I would."

North Carolina now collects about $20 million a year from its cigarette tax, New York state, Urzi said, collects more than $400 million.

Urzi underwent sharp questioning about the infiltrated dealerships from Rep. Dan Lilley, D-Lenoir, who represents a tobacco-producing region. But Urzi refused to give details.

"We'll leave that to the SBI," he said. "I really don't think it would be appropriate for us to name specific places. At a closed meeting possibly we could make that available."

Attorney General Rufus Edmisten, asked to respond, said he was aware of no takeovers but confirmed some North Carolina sellers have "close ties" to organized crime.

Chairman Lewis Resigns From Development Body

John B. Lewis Jr. of Farmville has announced his resignation as chairman and as a member of the board of the Pitt County Development Commission, effective Jan. 31, 1978.

Lewis will be succeeded by current vice chairman Bruce Beasley Jr. of Fountain, the commission announced.

Lewis, whose term as chairman expires at the end of 1978, expressed regret to the Pitt County Board of Commissioners in submitting his resignation, submitting his resignation.

He cited several recent appointments to two state boards by Gov. Jim Hunt and the increasing responsibilities of his law practice as major reasons for relinquishing his position on the commission. Lewis had served the past two years as chairman, and he had been a member since 1971.

"I regret departing the Development Commission due to the tremendous amount of activity I envision for 1978," Lewis said in announcing his resignation. "Several very fine industrial buildings have become available around the county and this has generated a great deal of interest in our area."

Lewis pointed out, "Also, our county has some of the best industry in Eastern North Carolina and we look for some existing industry expansion also. I have thoroughly enjoyed my terms on the commission board and I have especially enjoyed the cooperation, the support and the encouragement from the County Board of Commissioners. The Development Commission is one of their prime concerns and it will remain one of mine."

Beasley is a businessman and citizen from the Fountain community. A member of the commission since 1972, he is a member of the board of directors of Edgecombe Bank and Trust Co.

"I am extremely honored to be able to serve the commission and the county during an important year in its history of growth," the new chairman said.

Norman R. Wooten serves as secretary of the commission while Delano R. Wilson is treasurer. Robert Griffin of Greenville was recently appointed to complete the term of Curtis Hendrix, until Dec. 31 of this year, and James W. Black of Winterville was appointed to a full three-year term expiring Dec. 31, 1980.

Parking Lot Design OK'd For Carolina East Mall

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer

The Greenville Planning and Zoning Commission gave its approval last night to the parking lot design for the proposed Carolina East Mall on NC 11.

Community Development Director John Schofield reported that the parking lot for the facility, formerly referred to as Greenville Mall, involves slightly over one million square feet and the ordinance calls for a minimum of five per cent of the total area to be landscaped.

Schofield said that the mall developers have provided for approximately 83,000 square feet of landscaped area or some eight per cent of the total area.

Last night also indicated the parking plan presented a raised concrete curb at every fourth parking bay with some planting included on the raised sections. The original vegetation ordinance, revised recently by the City Council, had called for curbs at every second parking bay.

The CD director added that the Department of Transportation and residents of Club Pines Subdivision across the highway have apparently reached an understanding on the Club Pines-mall intersection which had been the subject of heated objections by the residents.

A planted area around the mall development was also indicated on the design and City Engineer Charlie Holliday said it would provide a good buffer.

Approval of the parking plan was conditional upon the design being followed in the lot development. It was also noted that the plan met the standards set by the parking lot ordinance.

In other business, commissioners discussed a request for rezoning approximately 34.5 acres located on both sides of Arlington Boulevard between Evans Street and Seaboard Coast Line Railroad from RA-20 to Shopping Center and Office and Institutional. The matter was automatically tabled following discussion.

Schofield pointed out that the request involves two sections of Shopping Center rezoning (8.7 acres) and the balance Office and Institutional zoning. He noted that the flood plain involves some of the property.

It was pointed out that substantial flooding occurs in the area and Schofield said that the flooding involves back-up water from the Evans Street bridge. The development will have to comply with erosion control requirements, he said.

Commissioners considered a petition of property owners to rezone land located at Evans Street extension, Red Banks Road and Plaza Drive. Following discussion on the petition, the board members voted not to sponsor the zoning change as requested by the property owners.

Schofield explained that the owners' petition involved some 1,400 feet of road frontage at a depth of 200 feet. The petition sought rezoning from Shopping Center to R-15 (residential) use.

Commissioner Clarence Tugwell observed that if anyone were to purchase property in the rezoned section for a residence, a bigger problem would face the homeowner being zoned up to Shopping Center backing up to Shopping Center zoning across the street.

Board member E. E. Howell said sponsoring the petition would mean that the city is going into a commercial area and rezoning to "satisfy a few people."

City Manager Jim Caldwell

reminded the board that Evans Street will be four-laned at some time in the future.

Schofield reported that the planning staff, after reviewing the petition, did not choose to sponsor the rezoning request.

Approval was also given to the preliminary plat of Fulford Subdivision located on US 264 Bypass east of Nichols Department Store.

Holliday noted that the plat indicates two lots with no street dedication involved. The total parcel is bounded on the east by the railroad, it was pointed out. Highway Commercial zoning extends to a depth of 200 feet.

A spokesman for the developers said that two entrances to the lots are proposed. Tugwell asserted that the concern is that curb cuts might be placed "every 50 feet on 264."

Approximately five lots would be included on the 264 frontage, the spokesman said.

Approval of the plat was given subject to the provision of sewer extensions and other utility provisions.

In an unusual matter, commissioners did not take action on a proposed final plat of Section I of the Holoman property, located west of Memorial Drive behind Clark and Co., since it was pointed out that the preliminary plat on the property had been tabled.

Wilson County And Medicaid To Pay The Bills For John Doe

Medical bills of the man who lay in Pitt Memorial Hospital from Sept. 30 till he died Sunday night, identified only as "John Doe," will be paid by Medicaid and matching funds from Wilson County, it was decided yesterday.

Pitt Memorial Hospital Director Jack Richardson said this morning that he was informed yesterday afternoon by Pitt County Attorney W. W. Speight that the unknown man's case would be treated as that of a Wilson County resident. It was in Wilson County that the black man, believed to be in his 20's or 30's, was brain-injured when he was grazed by a train the afternoon of Sept. 30. He had no identification, and no military or prison record, and no one ever came forth to claim him.

His hospital bill at the time of his death was $19,301. State Medical Examiner Page Hudson said yesterday afternoon that every detail will be studied and recorded to help determine the identity of the man. He said he believes the death to have been from "complications of his head injury," but said he is not prepared to reveal a specific cause of death yet. "We have studied the bodies of many unknown persons over the years and have had very good results in identifying most of them," he said.

He said once the study of the man's body is completed, it will be offered, as provided for by state law, to the State Anatomical Commission. "I have every idea they will decline the body because of the injuries" and the autopsy's making it unuseful for medical study. If they do decline, the body will be cremated and the ashes kept in case his family is ever located and wishes to have these," he said.

Encourage Candidates

Dr. Jon Tingelstad, chairman of the Greenville Area Chamber of Commerce's Education Committee, announced today that the School Board Election subcommittee of the Chamber is encouraging Pitt County and Greenville citizens to file for the upcoming school board elections.

According to Peggy Christopher, sub-committee chairperson, the committee is issuing this special plea to citizens since the 1978 election is the first time that city school board members will be elected, and because only a few candidates have filed for either the city or county school board.

The committee has distributed a bulletin to the chamber members and is encouraging citizens to file on radio announcements. The committee has listed its interest in good educational leadership and the best use of tax dollars for education, as reasons for encouraging citizens to file.

Suing Soul For Child Support

LOS ANGELES (AP) — David Soul, co-star of television's "Starsky and Hutch" ABC series, has been sued for $1.5 million in child support by a woman who alleges he is the father of her daughter.

The suit was filed Wednesday in Superior Court by Angela Dena May, the mother, on behalf of Angela Marin May, said attorney William King.

Damage...

"we should have everybody's lights on today."

City school officials indicated that no major problems were experienced due to the storm other than some heat went off as a result of power outages.

Tom Craft said Pitt County School workers were out this morning checking for damage and noted that covered walkways at Conley, Stokes Elementary and A.G. Cox schools were damaged, as was the roof at the W. H. Robinson gym. He also noted that a green house at Ayden-Grifton and the athletic field at Farmville Central suffered some damage.

Cliff Moore, vice-chancellor for business affairs at East Carolina University said the university suffered little damage from the storm with the exception of rocks blowing off the tops of the high-rise women's dorms damaging some cars parked below and a few car windows blowing out.

The only serious damage at Pitt Technical Institute due to the storm, according to dean of students George S. McRorie, was a pine tree blowing over and crushing the school's Human Resources Development trailer and damaging another trailer on the campus.

He noted that the HRD trailer was destroyed when it was split in half by the falling tree.

preliminary plat.

Schofield said that Holoman was not a party to the 1972 plat and the city was remiss in not keeping the items up to date.

A key question in the matter, it was noted, involves a street that will serve the property. Right-of-way is not available for widening the street to meet requirements and Caldwell said that the City Council would have to consider a waiver involving the street width.

Holoman was asked to meet with the city staff to discuss the new preliminary plat process.

Approval was given to the final plat of Twin Oaks Subdivision, Section II, located north of 14th Street and west of US 264 Bypass (involves eight lots), and also to the final plat of M.E. and J.E. Sutton property at the southeast intersection of Plaza Drive and S. Evans Street (involving one lot).

In business on the joint board agenda, commissioners recommended to the Council that the request of H&H Development Corp. for rezoning approximately 53 acres on NC 33 one mile east of Greene Street from RA-20 to R-6 be approved. The matter was tabled at the December meeting.

The developers are proposing single family usage for the property. It was explained, with some five to six units per acre planned. The area is generally undeveloped with the exception of scattered residences and a few small businesses. Both water and sewer services are available to the property.

Schofield said that he saw no problems in the request and he added that he was "delighted that residential development is considered for the area."

The joint board gave its approval to the preliminary plat of Wilcar Enterprises, Section 11 and Seaboard Coast Line Railroad and north of Department of Transportation property.

Some three acres are involved in the parcel with eight lots planned for development on the Highway Commercial zoning. It was suggested that the developers consider some type of internal traffic accommodations to avoid too many access points on the highway.

In an item not listed on the agenda, approval was given to the final plat of Northside Commercial Center north of the river. Holliday said that a building permit was issued for the property prior to approval of the final plat.

Three items were also considered by the Greenville board that were not on the agenda. The final plat of Winco Restaurant property located between Evans Street and Greenville Boulevard was approved as Holliday again noted that a building permit was issued for a new structure prior to final plat approval.

Both the preliminary and final plats of Bernice Branch property near Beef & Shakes on Airport Road were approved and the final plat of Hardee property on Stanfordsburg Road gained commission approval.

The semi-annual reports for both the joint and city boards were adopted for the July through December of 1977 period.

DESTROYED BY FIRE — Firemen sift through the remains of a house trailer destroyed by fire this morning at the mobile home park off Brownlea Drive. Fire officials, who said the blaze was reported at 7:20 a.m., said the wind-swept fire caused extensive damage to an adjoining trailer. The trailers were owned by Ed

Stallings of Greenville. One, in which the fire erupted, was occupied by Rick Bennett, while the other mobile home was unoccupied. Officers said the blaze possibly started from the mobile homes heating plant. (Reflector Photo by Tommy Forrest)

Parents Urged To Have Kids Immunized

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1978 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR READERS: If your child has had all the necessary shots to protect him against polio, rubella (German measles), regular measles, diphtheria, whooping cough, tetanus and mumps, skip this column.

Of the 52 million children in this country who are 14 years old or younger, to date approximately 20 million have not been adequately immunized against the above-mentioned diseases!

Almost everyone knows that paralysis and even death can result from polio, but did you know that measles can sometimes lead to retardation, deafness, blindness, heart damage, brain damage and even death? And those not immunized against diphtheria, whooping cough and tetanus can fall victim to pneumonia, kidney damage, heart damage and death as a result of these diseases?

And complications resulting from mumps include deafness, sterility (in males), brain damage and juvenile diabetes.

The incidence of rubella is increasing among junior high school, high school and college students. If a pregnant woman gets this disease, it can have devastating effects on her unborn child.

No child or young adult is adequately protected unless he has been fully immunized or has suffered the disease.

The immunization shots are available without charge at public health clinics. If you prefer to have your own physician give the immunization, a small charge for the office visit may be required. Physicians may obtain the vaccine free from the Department of Public Health.

It is up to you, the parents, to keep track of your children's shot records.

If you are not sure whether your child is completely immunized, call your local health department or your physician's office and find out.

Because many children are not fully immunized (some parents are forgetful, others have neglected to follow through with children's booster shots), we fear that epidemics of these diseases will occur soon.

Although the frequency is very low, there are minimal risks associated with immunizations. Side effects such as fever, a sore arm or a rash are the more likely reactions that might occur.

Finally, if you have any questions regarding immunization, please phone your Department of Public Health or your own physician. It will cost you nothing (or very little). And for a free copy of "Parent's Guide to Childhood Immunization," write to Immunization, Pueblo, Colo. 81009.

What will you tell your child if he contracts any of these diseases because YOU failed to protect him against them? Think about it.

DEAR ABBY: How important do you think clothes are? I am a 31-year-old woman who has been told many times that if I want to get a man I should pay more attention to the way I dress. I am average looking—not too fat or too thin—but I've never been clothes-crazy.

I've always dressed neatly and inconspicuously, but I never did have much style. I think if a man is going to get interested in a woman, what she wears won't make that much difference. I'd appreciate your opinion.

JUST AVERAGE

DEAR JUST: In this day of competition, "packaging" is important. To quote my friend Edith Head, one of the leading authorities in the fashion world: "All women look alike in the bathtub. The only chance a woman gets to show her individuality is when she puts her clothes on." I vote with Edith.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

Boy, television commercials are really something.

The other night I watched a car tear across a rock-studded field, forge a river, scale a mountain, speed through a desert, and pass five stranded autos in a snowstorm to prove how put-together it was.

I have the same make and model in my driveway.

That car has a battery in it that, according to television, can light up an entire air strip at 50 degrees below zero.

It has four tires on it that have been tested on four-inch spikes.

It's so airtight you could ride through a war and not hear a sound.

The suspension is so smooth you could cut a diamond in the back seat.

There's enough trunk room to carry a five-tiered wedding cake.

The brake system is so terrific, anyone would be a fool not to stand in front of it.

There's only one problem. The car doesn't start.

A lot of things are like that. I've seen commercials where they glue two pieces of wood together and make a diving board out of them and this guy springs from them into a pool. I've used the same glue and can't get a picture to stick in a photo album.

Bought a sweeper once that when demonstrated sucked up pennies, pins, metal, nails, garbage, and a small dog that wasn't paying attention. It won't pick up dust.

And a watch that I saw rescued from a sandy beach after three years, stopped running for me one night when I spilled a drink on it.

Maybe it's me. I want to believe that a kid can take a hammer to his kitchen floor and the shine won't crack. Or that my perfume will drive men within a radius of three miles right up the wall.

I wanted to believe there was such a thing as a child-proof toy, so when I saw an elephant stand on a truck one day I went right out and bought it. (The truck, not the elephant.)

Two hours later the truck was in a heap on the floor. Two kids were crying and once again my faith had been shattered.

When they show me a truck that can come in contact with a brother's head and still remain intact, I'll go back to believing.

Meals For One Or Two Can Be Good

LOS ANGELES (AP) — With households getting increasingly smaller, that venerable American institution, the giant economy size, is threatened with extinction, says a Los Angeles home economics consultant and specialist on cooking for one or two.

"Manufacturers of products, particularly food items, are going to have to re-evaluate their large quantity sizes," says Barbara Swain, herself a single.

Ms. Swain points to Census Bureau figures indicating that households of one or two persons account for 51.2 percent of the nation's residences. Of that number, 21 percent are occupied by single persons and the bureau predicts that by 1990, 56 percent of the country's households will be composed of one or two persons.

"We're now part of the majority and it is hoped that will mean we have more clout in the marketplace, especially when it comes to purchasing food," she says.

"For years, singles and couples have stood by and watched the dollars go down the drain, as we tossed spoiled food in the garbage because we couldn't use the large sizes fast enough," she says. "Perhaps we'll be more vocal in the future and the food processors will accommodate our wishes with packaged portions for one or two."

In the meantime, Ms. Swain is doing her part to help out. She's currently preparing a cookbook which will feature recipes and cooking tips for one and two, and she's teaching gourmet cooking classes for singles and couples at Lawry's Foods here.

Among her tips for making economical and satisfying meals for one or two are:

- Maintain a basic stock of staple food items suited to your individual taste.
- Learn to use substitutes instead of buying an item which won't be used up and may spoil. For example, ketchup works for tomato sauce; chocolate chips are good alternatives for squares and cocoa.
- Buy foods in the most versatile form. A lemon provides juice, slices, wedges, twists and peel. A fresh apple can be eaten whole or used in a Waldorf salad, for apple Betty, as apple sauce or baked.

- For faster thawing and cooking, freeze foods such as hamburger and chicken in single serving portions.
- Cultivate a specialty, such as Mexican, Italian, French or Chinese food, for entertaining purposes. Add the necessary condiments, equipment and dinnerware to your "basic" kitchen.

- Stock up on seasoning blends. These eliminate the need for a shelf full of exotic, seldom used spices and they live the taste of the most ordinary dish.
- Foil-packaged seasoning mixes are a good addition to basic stock because they have a long life and can be used to cook several different dishes which can be frozen.

- Buy multipurpose equipment scaled to small quantity cooking. For instance, a seven-inch slope-sided covered skillet doubles as an omelet pan, crepe pan, saucepan or saute pan.
- Use a blender for chopping, mixing, blending, crumbing. Saves time and cleanup.
- Invest in a toaster oven. It can handle the majority of warming, baking and roasting done for one or two.
- Another good investment: An automatic meal sealing machine which bags leftovers, individual portions, sauces and other freezables into airtight pouches. These can be popped into boiling water for a meal in minutes.
- Set a pretty table, even if it is only for yourself. Buy two place settings of china, silver and crystal to dress up a meal.

Far From A Balanced Budget

President Carter sent his first budget—a $500 billion one—to Congress this week and it is safe to say it didn't excite anybody.

The amount is big, of course, and in fact it is beyond comprehension of most Americans who are accustomed to dealing in personal annual incomes ranging in the thousands of dollars.

The budget, it is fairly safe to say, is too big. There has to be some fat in it. It doesn't even come close to the presidential campaign promise of a balanced budget. There is a $61.8 billion deficit built in. Since this is only an estimate, a slight downturn in the economy could make that deficit even larger. What's more, there is little prospect of a balanced budget in the near future, and because of that we can surely bet on more inflation.

There is a $25 billion tax cut in the budget that will be spread out among the taxpayers in various ways. Even this, however, didn't excite anybody.

For one thing billions are going to be taken from the taxpayers in increased Social Security rates in the months ahead, although it might not come from the same pockets.

To his credit, the president did emphasize energy in the budget, an area we had better get to work on if we plan to survive.

But beyond that there is not much to get excited about in the proposed budget. Inflation will go on, something that Wall Street investors noted by moving to the sidelines.

Congress needs to look carefully at ways to prune the proposed budget. We aren't talking about eliminating needed programs. What is needed is the elimination of questionable spending for governmental programs of dubious benefits. It is only in this way that inflation will ever be brought under control.

Scales' Service Deservedly Honored

No one can be more deserving of the Area Chamber of Commerce's "Citizen of the Year" award than W. M. (Booger) Scales.

The Integon representative received the award at the Chamber's annual banquet Tuesday night.

His business accomplishments are legendary. They are equalled by his service to his community.

Scales is credited with raising $2.5 million for civic projects over the past 25 years. He has strongly supported the ECU athletic program and was instrumental in the drives which will see Ficklen Stadium expanded to 35,000 seats.

The Chamber has recognized Scales' deeds and the honor is most appropriate.

THIS AFTERNOON

Threat To N.C. Planning

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH—Anticipating future problems when some governmental agency comes along with a particular development along North Carolina's coast, the Coastal Resources Commission is seeking to close that door early.

Still in the early stages of its work, that commission is charged with overseeing the Coastal Area Management Act in 20 coastal counties—one of the most far-reaching land use planning and management laws yet adopted by a state government.

Parker Chesson, chairman of the commission, has made it clear that a major concern is that state and federal agencies comply with the purpose of the law.

Possibilities for mischief are great: roads and bridges, harbors, schools, hospitals, office buildings, dredging work, landings, stream channelization—a host of state and federal potentials for projects.

The fear is that either through ignorance of the law, or by decree, some governmental activities may be allowed to go against the local plans now in place.

Hard-Nosed

Natural Resources Secretary Howard Lee is blunt about his intentions: "We won't let the state do what we won't let private enterprise do...we must be hard-nosed about that."

Lee says voluntary commitment of state agencies to the purpose of the Coastal Area Management Act is the most desirable solution.

Gov. James B. Hunt, Jr. has issued an Executive Order to all of his departmental appointees directing cooperation. That order, however, doesn't apply to other important state agencies (education, agriculture) likely to be involved in coastal development. Heads of those agencies are elected, not appointed by the governor.

Election makes those leaders more open to "political persuasion" says Lee. He said the staff of the coastal commission will "do everything reasonable" to see that state agencies do comply.

"We recognize the need to tie other services into carrying out these plans. It will be difficult to carry out, but our local governments have a right to expect the state to conform, and certainly to keep them well informed of future developments."

NOBLITT

This issue has particular significance along the coast where the management act is already in place. Each county has developed a plan in which various types of growth can be accommodated in specific locations; other areas in which growth will be restricted or, in certain especially fragile sections, prohibited.

But the implications for all of North Carolina are important as the state moves closer to required land use planning and management in all 100 counties. There has been a fear that the plans would hit private landowners and developers hard, while governmental agencies would be able in one way or another to continue doing as they please, where they please.

Morally Wrong

Gov. Hunt, at a recent meeting of the Coastal Commission, reinforced his executive order with a personal pledge of support: "It would be morally wrong for the state to come in and take action contrary to the plans you have drawn... and North Carolina is not going to do that."

The federal government, however, is another matter. Chesson, who is president of College of the Albemarle, a community college at Elizabeth City, said it might require action by the U.S. Congress to get compliance by such agencies as the Corps of Engineers, Coast Guard, and others.

What of state or federal agencies which move ahead with a project despite the plan? "They either have to go along or feel the wrath of the system...we could use the permit system and say No, you can't do that...coming down very hard on them in the courts if necessary," says Lee.

"And you think... due to the angle... it came from someone higher up? You're (ha/ha!) kidding!"

A Turn To The Right?

WASHINGTON — Is Jimmy Carter turning conservative as he begins his second year in office? A close reading of his two major messages last week suggests that something of the sort is in the wind. It is an embarrassing thing to say, but many passages in Mr. Carter's two documents read like my own editorials.

For example: "We should rely principally on the private sector to lead the economic expansion and to create new jobs for a growing labor force.... By emphasizing the creation of private jobs, our resources will be used more efficiently, our future capacity to produce will expand more rapidly, and the standard of living for our people will rise faster."

That was from last Friday's economic message, and you can't beat it. In this same pronouncement, Mr. Carter dwelled at length upon the necessity for reducing federal spending as a percentage of our national output. By managing federal expenditures, "carefully and prudently", he hopes to whittle away at this situation. Federal outlays in fiscal '76 claimed 22.5 percent of our gross national product. Mr. Carter believes this is too much.

Therefore: "In formulating my recommendations for the 1979 budget, I have exercised very strict controls over spending. Adjusted for inflation, the increase in outlays has been held to less than 2 percent and the share of federal expenditures in GNP will fall to 22 percent. I intend to continue prudent expenditure controls in the future." Hallelujah!

These fervent pledges of frugality, evoking fond memories of the late Sen. Harry F. Byrd, crop up repeatedly in the State of the Union message also. In his prepared text, Mr. Carter proposed to say that "Government cannot solve all our problems, set all our goals, or define our vision." In his actual delivery Thursday evening, he left out the "alls"; he sounded for all the world like an editorial in National Review.

"We need to realize there is a limit to the role and function of government.... Government cannot eliminate poverty, reduce inflation, save our cities, cure illiteracy, provide energy, or mandate goodness. Only a true partnership between government and the people can hope to reach these goals. Those who govern can sometimes inspire, and we can identify needs and marshal resources, but we cannot be the managers of everything and everybody."

That last sentence drew two-star applause. Mr. Carter won two stars again a few minutes later with his positive assertion that "private business, not the government", must lead an

Other Editors Say Preposterous!

(Henderson Dispatch)

President Carter's new Federal budget, which was sent to Congress Monday, is simply preposterous. It is ridiculous, inflationary, and a threat to the fiscal soundness of the nation. One could almost term it irresponsible.

Every year after year the budget grows larger, as if there were no serious effort to get the Treasury back down to earth. This year is an all-time high, and there is no indication but in another year it will be still higher.

The budget sent to Congress calls for an outlay of more than $500 billion, which leaves a budget deficit of $60.6 billion, the third largest of record. Carter called it "lean and tight", but sufficient to meet the country's needs. If $500 billion won't cover all the needs and some things that are not needs, they had as well toss in the towel. If Congress approves the total outlay, spending in the fiscal year 1979 will be $38 billion over 1978 and the first time in history the budget ever reached the half trillion dollar mark.

In the new spending, provision is made for defense, education and health. The next fiscal year, which is covered by this new budget, begins next October 1.

The proposal calls for $106 billion for defense, which could be adequate for development of all new weapons now on the drawing board, and ought to have something left over. The item shows a consciousness of the need for keeping abreast, and if possible staying ahead, of Soviet Russia. It is deplorable that a potential enemy can continue to force colossal armaments outlays here. But you can't afford to trust such an enemy, hence the defense spending.

Defense is not the place to trim. That is almost as essential and inescapable as the $40-odd billion interest item in the budget. There are points where trimming could be done by eliminating waste, excesses and non-essentials. A $500 billion annual budget ought to make Congress and the American people ponder the direction in which their government is being carried by its leaders. It's a terrible thought, but the nation may be nearer the end in power and prestige, and even in wealth.

THE INSIDE REPORT

Diplomats Had A Beef

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — While trade negotiator Robert Strauss was talking Japan into admitting more American beef imports, the U.S. embassy in Tokyo was privately bemoaning pressure put on the Japanese by U.S. Senators.

The pattern of hand-wringing by U.S. diplomats whenever a squeeze is applied to a foreign government is clearly evidenced in a confidential Jan. 7 telegram from the Tokyo embassy to the State Department. To the men around Strauss, this typifies what they have had to put up with in negotiations.

At issue was Japan's present 1,000-ton annual limit on U.S. beef imports. When Strauss proposed a 10,000-ton quota, the Japanese government came back with a 3,000-ton counter-offer viewed as unsatisfactory by any standard. Visiting in Japan, two Republican Senators from beef-producing states, Clifford Hansen of Wyoming and Carl Curtis of Nebraska, told a Tokyo press conference Jan. 6 that the Japanese response was "totally unacceptable" and "should never be accepted by Strauss."

That produced shivers of fright at the American embassy. On Jan. 7, a telegram signed by William C. Sherman, No. 2 man in the embassy, declared:

"Embassy fears such statements create the air of confrontation and U.S. dictation which will remove any chance of our getting substantial improvement in Japanese agricultural offers. These are personal views of Senators and we believe GOJ (government of Japan) recognizes them as such."

Whatever the Japanese recognize the Senators clearly did not "remove any chance" of a better deal. Arriving in Japan Jan. 11, Strauss negotiated a 10,000-ton worldwide quota on high-grade beef imports. Argentina may send a few steaks to Japan, but nearly all of that quota will be supplied by American cattlemen.

U.S.-Saudi Crisis?

President Carter's promise to sell Saudi Arabia 60 F-15 fighter aircraft, the best the U.S. has, is confronting a politically orchestrated effort in Congress to kill the sale or at least cut it sharply.

If Egyptian-Israeli peace talks can be put back together, the President might defeat the move to block the sale. But if the talks continue downhill and the future looks dark, the mood in Congress will harden against selling weapons to Arabs. That is true despite Saudi help in holding down the price of world oil and despite the fact that Saudi Arabia has now become by far the largest oil exporter to the U.S.

Israel's supporters on Capitol Hill fear the F-15s might be used against Israel in any future Mideast war. "Israel is really worried about the sale," a Senate strategist for the Israelis told us. Past opposition has cut back other U.S. arms sales to Arab countries, including Saudi Arabia.

This time, administration officials are concerned about reaction in the oil kingdom if the Carter pledge cannot be fulfilled. The Saudis regard it as "a point of honor," one official told us, to receive the top-rated aircraft that would give them a small fraction of U.S. airpower supplied to Israel.

A footnote: Israel is quietly lobbying for an extra $500 million in U.S. aid in the fiscal year starting Oct. 1. Although President Carter decided not to put the extra money in his budget message to Congress, White House aides doubt Congress could resist voting most of it on top of the regular annual $1.8

French Crime Rising

By MORT ROSENBLUM Associated Press Writer

PARIS (AP) — Crime is increasing in France, the police have no clues to the kidnappers of a wealthy industrialist, and Justice Minister Alain Peyrefitte has called on the public to become informers.

"Informing on criminals is part of French law," said Peyrefitte. "A criminal who is not denounced is a criminal still on the loose."

He warned that France is threatened with "a reign of anarchy and violence."

"Any weakness or complacency is unacceptable," he declared in a television appearance.

The police say there has been a steady increase in murders, robberies and other crimes, particularly in Paris. Despite the numerous kidnappings and growing political violence in Italy, the newspaper Figaro reported that Paris has the highest crime rate — 102 felonies and misdemeanors last year per 1,000 inhabitants — of any European city.

Brussels was second with 78 per 1,000.

"It's terrible in the suburbs," said one Parisian. "People call up at 1:30 a.m. and then hang up, obviously checking to see if anyone is home. We're almost the only house on the block that hasn't been robbed."

A U.S. Embassy secretary was robbed three times during her first six months in the city. Her apartment was burglarized; she was mugged on the street, and a youth on a motorcycle stole her handbag.

Meanwhile, the police report no significant developments in their hunt for Baron Edouard-Jean Empain and the masked men who kidnapped him Monday in front of his Paris home.

The police said they stopped 140,000 vehicles and spot-checked 250,000 Frenchmen in the first 24 hours after the 40-year-old head of the Empain-Schneider industrial empire was carried off.

Judge Henry A. Grady, presiding over a term of criminal court here, is taking stern steps to help the county collect approximately $2,000 in unpaid court costs.

Fifty-three writs authorizing the arrest of as many persons who owe the county court costs have been issued and are being served.

Judge Grady ordered that the defendants be brought before him in Superior Court here.

Several persons who have been served with the writs and unable to pay have been placed in jail.

Frank R. McNinch, chairman of the Federal Communications Commission, has announced that a hearing on the application for the establishment of a radio station in Greenville has been set for February 23.

A large number of residents will testify as to the legal, technical, financial and other qualifications of the applicant to construct a radio station here.

Six Percent Interest Is Zero

By JOHN CUNIFF AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — G. William Miller knows how to sell America as well as helicopters and other products made by the conglomerate he heads, Textron Inc. of Providence, R.I.

As head of the Industrial Payroll Savings Committee, the chairman-delegate of the Federal Reserve Board helped sell more bonds last year, $8 billion, than in any other year since World War II.

In addition, Miller's effort in his one year as chairman of the payroll savings group resulted in an enrollment of 2.72 million new or increased allotment savers. For it he received a gold medal.

He probably will receive another medal from those savers if, as head of the Federal Reserve Board, he pursues a policy that will help lower the rate of inflation, which still remains near 6 percent or more.

At 6 percent, the entire interest earned on those U.S. Savings Bonds is wiped out, leaving holders nothing for their money. In effect, they have given Uncle Sam an interest-free loan.

Miller can do something about this if he is installed as head of the Fed. Occupying one of the most powerful offices in America, he can to some extent control the flow of money through the economy.

And in exercising such control, limited as it might be, he automatically has a good deal to say about the economy's expansion rate and about the inflation rate as well.

Only when the latter rate is below 6 percent do those bondholders earn any money — before taxes. But the tax story comes later.

In seeking to restrain inflation, which would help bondholders, the Fed head might be forced to opt for higher interest rates, which are widely believed to be a deterrent to the wage-price spiral.

In that case, would savings bond interest rise simultaneously? It is unlikely, at least for some time. Meanwhile, that money locked up in savings bonds might have been earning a better return elsewhere.

There are outstanding about $76.6 billion of Series E bonds, the kind that must be held to maturity in five years in order to collect the full 6 percent, and Series H bonds, which pay interest twice a year.

With 6 percent inflation, none of the more than 25 million families estimated to hold savings bonds made any money on their investments. But some of them paid taxes on their "earnings."

Uncle Sam takes away most effectively, not just through inflation, but by requiring income taxes to be paid on the illusory 6 percent "profits." The bondholder ends up a loser.

Miller cannot do much about income taxes or about raising the 6 percent bond interest rate if he takes over as Fed chairman, but he might be able to do something about insidious inflation.

Now it seems Miller should have another goal: To do his best as Fed chairman to make a 6 percent return something of value. Which is to say, make the U.S. savings bond something worth saving.

Strength For Today

QUICK-TRIGGERED?

Irritation and frustration can often lead us to see only the evil in people, and as a result we often overlook good aspects of their personalities and character which might encourage us to have friendly relations with them.

It is hard to be understanding toward a person we do not like. Yet if we consult history and our own individual experience over the years, it becomes plain that honest, sincere, and even logical opinions can be found on both sides of controversial issues. We may be victimized once in a while if we trust people, but we victimize ourselves if we allow distrust and anger so to control us that we can see only self-interest or malice in those with whom we differ in opinions.

If we would always try to be objective and just when confronted with opposition that irritates us, we will not only widen our circle of friends, but will find ourselves becoming more sympathetic and generous as well.

effort toward economic expansion. He got one star on his promise to seek "strong additional incentives for business investment through additional cuts in corporate tax rates and improvements in the investment tax credit." He won yet another one-star interruption with the flat statement that "I do not believe in wage and price controls."

Now, it is part of the chameleon genius of Jimmy Carter that he constantly manages to be all things to all people. The two messages contained much to gratify the liberal left. Mr. Carter hit a lick, for example, for the Humphrey-Hawkins planned economy bill. He asked for a vast new bureaucracy in a full-blown Department of Education. He stroked the farmers. He renewed his support of bills for welfare reform, consumer advocacy, labor reform, and national health care. He plumped ritually for civil rights and human rights, and he recommended a few tax proposals that business won't like. The two messages had their liberal touches.

But there was no mistaking the overall tone. Last week, Mr. Carter was the foe of needless rules and paperwork. He was the apostle of understandable regulations. He was the old campaign Jimmy, railing against a remote Washington government, so "strange and distant" that many citizens must rely upon lobbyists who have become "too powerful and influential."

This remarkable metamorphosis may last no longer than it takes for George Meany to sit down for tea in the Oval Office, but let us be grateful for even temporary favors. After a year of largely liberal oratory, these conservative sentiments fall sweetly on the ear.

Your Tax Return Audit Is More Likely In The Upper Brackets

By MICHAEL DOAN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The Internal Revenue Service audits about one out of every 40 tax returns, but a taxpayer's chances of being audited increase if he has a high salary or takes unusual deductions.
For 1976, the IRS re-examined 1.9 million individual tax returns, or 2.25 percent, and made taxpayers give up about $1.6 billion in alleged underpayments.

By income, here is the percentage of individuals who were audited:
—Under $10,000, 1.8 per cent.
—$10,000 to $50,000, 2.46 per cent.
—$50,000 and over, long form, 12.43 per cent.

The IRS decides which taxpayers to audit by putting the figures on their returns through a computer and by using a special formula. The formula tries to identify the returns "with a likelihood the tax liability would change if the returns were audited," the IRS says. These returns are then reviewed by an IRS official who decides whether to order an audit.

The average taxpayer who receives most of his income from wages and who sends the IRS a W-2 form listing his earned income and withheld taxes has little to fear from an audit and probably will not be audited at all.

High-income people are more likely to be audited because their returns are usually more complicated.
However, if someone earned less than $5,000 and declared 10 dependents, his return would probably be suspect and his chances of an audit would increase.

An audited taxpayer usually gets a letter asking him to go to an IRS office for an audit. Sometimes audits are done by mail, or, in case of a large corporation, at the company itself. The taxpayer has a right to have an attorney present and can appeal to district IRS officials and eventually to federal courts.

A delinquent taxpayer has to pay the amount due and interest besides. If the IRS thinks it can show the violation was deliberate, it can recommend prosecution for tax fraud. The taxpayer can be fined and sent to jail.

In 1976, the government recommended 3,147 cases for prosecution. Out of these, 1,193 persons were taken to court, 839 pleaded guilty and 138 pleaded no contest. Also, 216 were convicted after trials, 77 were acquitted and cases against 71 were dismissed.

"Tax fraud is a crime. It doesn't matter how much money is involved. It doesn't matter who the person is," an IRS official said.

Not all returns are audited by the computer system. The IRS selected 50,000 returns at random for intensive audits in 1976, but no such audit is planned this year.

Often IRS auditors will tell a taxpayer he paid too much in taxes and is entitled to get some money back.

"People come in to the auditors and are really overjoyed to get a refund," an IRS official said. "People usually go to an audit, expecting to have to pay more money."

All returns are scanned at least briefly to determine whether there are mathematical errors, and whether the return is signed.

billion in aid.

Sen. Muriel
Contrary to published reports that Muriel Humphrey resisted the invasion of privacy that would come with serving in the Senate, the real reason for the delay in her appointment to fill Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey's seat the rest of the year was Minnesota politics.

Before naming Mrs. Humphrey, Gov. Rudy Perpich had to "get his ducks in a row" (as described by a political insider). That meant pacifying Rep. Donald Fraser, who intends to run for the seat and wanted the appointment, during a private meeting Wednesday night. With Fraser certain to be opposed in the primary, his appointment would have furthered splintering within Minnesota's Democratic Farmer-Labor (DFL) party.

One point of agreement in the once monolithic DFL: Perpich should name Muriel, and not just to avoid conflict. In his last days, tears appeared in Humphrey's eyes when he talked of undone work — including bills to be voted on in the Senate this year. His Minnesota colleagues want his widow to cast those votes.

Investigators reported the car driven by Calder collided with an auto operated by Evelyn Jackson Stroud of 2608 South Wright Rd., causing an estimated $500 damage to the Stroud vehicle and $300 damage to the car Calder was driving.

Vehicles driven by Willie Alexander Jones Jr. of 102 Eddie La. and Hilton Theodore Smith of 612 South Elm St. collided about 1:18 p.m. on Hooker Road, 20 feet South of the Millbrook Street intersection.

Police estimated damage at $100 to the Jones car and $300 to the Smith auto.

Found A Home

BARTONVILLE, Texas (AP) — Evangelist Ruth Carter Stapleton, President Carter's sister, says she has found the spot.

And the spot, says President Carter's sister, is near this north-central Texas town.

Mrs. Stapleton said that when she was looking for a place for her religious retreat, she said she prayed for a place near an airport, with some trees, water and a mountain.

"We are just 25 minutes from the airport, and 2½ hours from both coasts," she said Wednesday.

TRYING NEW CAR — Greenville policemen Mark Burton and Kevin McKenzie and Chief Glenn Cannon look over a Chevrolet Nova on loan to the department for the next two weeks to let officers see how the smaller car performs. The special police model first, used by the California Highway Patrol and now in use by a number of municipalities throughout the country, is equipped with a 350 cubic inch engine, and other heavy-duty components. Cannon noted that the department is going to begin using smaller cars (117-inch wheelbase models). He noted that the city is purchasing six small Plymouths through State contract at a cost of about $5,600 each. Four of the new Plymouths he said, will have 360 cubic inch engines while two of the cars — to be acquired through the Governor's Highway Safety Program — will be equipped with 400 cubic inch engines. The chief noted that the smaller cars should be more economical to operate than the big, 122-inch wheelbase models the department now maintains. (Reflector Photo by Stuart Savage)

Says Ingram Spared Surgery Until Main Rival Awareness Is Assured

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Luther Hodges Jr. says the Democratic Senate nomination race will be between him and state Insurance Commissioner John Ingram, whom Hodges called "a populist candidate."

"He's clearly the opposition," Hodges told a group of Capitol reporters Wednesday. "I've got a very interesting race against a populist candidate."

"I worry about the populist kind of candidacy, but I generally worry about the fact that six candidates are running against me and the economics of that," he added.

Hodges accused Ingram of "political rhetoric" about insurance, but said the commissioner will fail in his effort to make insurance a national issue on which he can base his U.S. Senate bid.

"I think that insurance, if that is the question, is totally a state issue and is not one that can be translated into the election of a U.S. senator," Hodges said. "I think the people are smarter than they are sometimes given credit for."

Ingram has been quoted in recent days as saying Congress should make federal antitrust legislation applicable to insurance companies.

Hodges, who resigned as president of North Carolina National Bank to make the race, said another campaign issue may be Ingram's decision to hold onto his state job during the campaign.

"I think that speaks for itself," Hodges said. "It seems clear it will become a campaign issue."

Hodges, Ingram and at least four others are competing for the Democratic nomination for the Senate seat now held by Republican Jesse Helms.

Helms is thus far unopposed for the GOP nomination for a second term.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — An elderly, impoverished woman who refuses amputation of her frostbitten, infected feet has been spared the operation until a court determines whether she is aware her life is in danger.

In a last minute legal effort, a psychiatrist was authorized Wednesday to examine Mary C. Northern, 72, in her hospital room.

Dr. John Griffin was to report today to Chancellor C. Allen High who ruled Wednesday that the state should be allowed to make decisions for Miss Northern about her personal and medical welfare.

The Rev. Palmer Sorrow, a friend of Miss Northern's, tried Wednesday night to change her mind.

But he said he failed. "I tried to bring the subject up five or six times, but she kept saying she didn't want to talk about it. I had really thought I could change her mind," he said in an interview.

Scholarship To Pitt Student

BREVARD — Richard Augustus Adams, a student at Ayden-Gritton High School and son of Mr. and Mrs. A.A. Adams of Gritton, has been awarded a Honor Scholarship at Brevard College.

This scholarship is based on academic achievement and citizenship and leadership ability. Adams has been accepted at Brevard College for the Fall Semester, 1978.

"She has lived with frostbite every year and doesn't understand the severity of her current condition. I don't think she has dying on her mind. She is looking to recover," he said.

The situation is similar to one in New Jersey, but the results were different. Robert Quackenbush, 72, refused to consent to amputation of his legs and a state judge held two weeks ago that Quackenbush was fit enough to decide the matter for himself.

He was in fair condition at Morristown, N.J., Memorial Hospital on Wednesday.

In the Tennessee case, High ruled Wednesday morning that the state Department of Human Services should make decisions about Miss Northern's personal welfare because she didn't understand her situation.

The decision cleared the way for the operation, but the doctor who was to perform it, Dr. Darrell Tackett, delayed it until Miss Northern's condition became stable. He said the woman also suffers from heart trouble.

Tackett, who said Miss Northern has only days to live without the surgery, said he and two other medical workers were at the woman's bedside in the intensive care unit, preparing to break the news of the court order to her, when he was told of the new court order.

"We were trying to tell her as gently as we can. We were working our way up to it when the call came," he said.

The doctor said she needs the operation because her feet have become infected with gangrene which is "slowly ascending her legs."

Police had to force the woman to leave her house and go to the hospital on Jan. 17. Her friends described her house, which has been condemned by the city, as a ramshackle dwelling heated only by a fireplace and littered ankle-deep in trash.

Hints Some Revision Of Panama Pact Acceptable

By RICHARD PYLE
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State Cyrus Vance is signaling that the Carter administration may be willing to go along with some changes in the Panama Canal treaty to win Senate ratification.

With the Senate Foreign Relations Committee in its final deliberations on the pact today, it was increasingly evident that the Senate would insist on clarifying future U.S. rights of canal access and defense.

"If that is what we're talking about, that matter can be taken care of in a manner satisfactory to both the Senate and the executive branch," Vance said Wednesday during a visit to Capitol Hill.

Previously, the administration had said it did not think any changes in the treaty were necessary, despite warnings by leaders of both parties that it could not win ratification without them.

The committee is expected to send the treaty to the full Senate early next week. Then, says Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., floor debate will begin immediately on what already is one of the most emotion-charged issues before lawmakers this session.

Opponents are expected to try to kill the pact on the floor with amendments that would so radically alter the text that it would have to be submitted to a second national referendum in Panama.

But Byrd and Minority Leader Howard Baker, R-Tenn., seek a limited change, incorporating the language of a "memorandum of understanding" issued last fall by President Carter and Panama's Gen. Omar Torrijos.

The unsigned understanding specifies that the United States would have priority access to the canal in emergencies and could use military force to defend it if necessary.

With that change, already endorsed by numerous other senators, the pact's prospects for ratification would appear greatly enhanced.

Torrijos told a group of visiting senators last week he could agree to having the memo incorporated because it preceded Panama's Oct. 23 plebiscite and therefore was known to voters when they approved the treaty 2-1.

The treaty calls for a gradual turnover of the canal to Panama by the year 2000, with the United States and Panama sharing the responsibility of defending the neutral waterway after that date.

Byrd repeated Wednesday that he is only "cautiously optimistic" about ratification and agreed with Baker that the required 67 votes — a two-thirds majority — do not yet exist.

Opponents, who charge the treaty is a "giveaway" posing great dangers to U.S. security, estimate they are about six votes shy of the 34 needed to block it.

Word circulated the last two days that Byrd wanted the committee to approve the treaty without changes, leaving the entire amendment process to be dealt with on the floor.

That would give more senators a chance to serve as co-sponsors of the changes essential to winning ratification. But committee aides said Wednesday this decision hadn't been made, and it was possible the treaty would emerge with amendments, or possibly with attached recommendations for changes.

How's The Weather?

WEATHER FORECAST — Snow flurries are forecast Thursday for the Great Lakes, Midwest and into the Northeast. Rain is due for the northern Pacific coast. Cold weather is expected in the West and from the northern Plains into the Midwest. (AP Laserphoto Map)

By The Associated Press

An intense storm tore across North Carolina late Wednesday and early today, generating gusts verging on hurricane force in some places, overturning trailers and knocking down trees and light poles.

Gusts in Hickory were clocked at 86 miles an hour, and authorities reported damage to shop windows and roofs.

In nearby Newton and Maiden there were power outages and more roof damage. Some witnesses said a tornado touched down in the Maiden.

What might have been a tornado also ripped through the Boonville area of Yadkin County, where wind gusts up to 50 miles per hour were also reported and several mobile homes were overturned.

The National Weather Service issued a high wind warning for the entire state, attributing the break gusts to an intense low pressure system over West Virginia. Most of the state experienced winds of at least 40 miles per hour with gusts to 50.

Gale warnings were in effect for coastal regions, where winds were gusting higher than 60 miles per hour. Wilmington police said that the winds had knocked down light poles, trees and signs, but no injuries were reported.

The Weather Service said the danger of flash flooding in the western part of the state appeared to have subsided, although some streams might still overflow today and the eastern part of the state remained threatened today by heavy rain.

The low pressure system was to be followed by a front, which the Weather Service predicted would bring cold air and snow into the mountains today, with accumulations of one to three inches.

The high winds were expected to continue through this morning.

A Reprieve For Chicamacomico

By JOHN BLIZZARD
Dare County
Tourist Bureau

RODANTHE — The fate of the historic Chicamacomico Lifesaving Station in the Outer Banks village of Rodanthe appears to be on less shaky ground due to several recent developments.

On Friday, Jan. 13, Captain Hiram C. Gallop of Wanchese was high bidder of the land on which the group of historic buildings are built. The buildings, abandoned by the Coast Guard in 1954, are already owned by the Chicamacomico Historical Association, and the association has been seeking to raise funds to purchase the land so that it would not be necessary to move the buildings to another site.

In a drive to acquire funds for this purpose, Carolista Baum, the association's president, reports that a number of contributions have been received, including $10,000 from Slick Enterprises of Winston-Salem; $5,000 from the Battle Foundation, Inc. of Rocky Mount; and $1,000 from East Carolina Bank. Other private and individual contributions totaling almost $5,000 have been received.

Several days following the Gallop Bid, Walter R. Davis of Midland, Texas placed an upset bid with the Dare County Clerk of Court in the amount of $55,500.

This action will bring the property to another public auction on February 17, thus giving the association a grace period in which to seek additional funds. "I just hope that we, the association, will be able to raise enough money to secure our preservation interests," Ms. Baum said. "Our goal is to create the first museum of sea rescue on the coast of North Carolina will need a great amount of financial support and a lot of interest from people all over the country whose heritage is reflected in the history of the Lifesaving Service."

Anyone interested in making contributions should send them to Chicamacomico Historical Association, P. O. Box 140, Rodanthe, N.C. 27968.

Famous Chesapeake Bay Oyster Is Now Imperiled

By EDWARD ROBY
GLOUCESTER POINT, Va. (UPI) — The Chesapeake Bay area once provided up to 65 percent of the nation's yearly oyster harvest, but consumers are being forced increasingly to rely on other sources for them.

Mysterious diseases, pollution, storms, predation and declining fertility have helped cut Virginia's share of the oyster trade from about 40 percent in the mid-1950s to about 25 percent. Maryland has barely held its own.

Jim Wallace of the Virginia Marine Resources Commission said last winter's severe cold makes it "obvious that 1977 production will be down again."

So Virginia, which provided 45.5 million pounds of oysters in 1880, if old records are reliable, could produce no more than 6.1 million pounds in 1976, said Wallace.

Dr. J.D. Andrews, an oyster pathologist with the Virginia Institute of Marine Science, said the biggest problems are pollution and marketing.

"Basically people and oysters don't mix. The environment is deteriorating," he said, citing chlorine, hydrocarbons, nutrient enrichment of the water because of farm fertilizer and a disease called MSX.

The MSX blight appeared in Delaware Bay in 1957, then spread southward into the Chesapeake, killing up to 95 percent of the lower bay's oysters in 1959.

"It was at that point that the harvests really started to come down," said Wallace.

"The harvest dropped from 21 million pounds before 1959 to 8.4 million in 1971. In 1972, Hurricane Agnes struck and there was so much fresh water released in the rivers that we again had heavy mortality ranging from 40 to 80 percent."

Because MSX remains virulent in saltier waters, oyster-men have shifted from bars in the lower bay to the estuaries of the James, Rappahannock, York and Potomac and a half dozen lesser rivers.

But only in the James do oysters spawn, or set, regularly, making it a stocking source for much of the region's oyster industry.

Andrews said the only other way to combat MSX is to raise resistant oysters, which is feasible only on a small scale under controlled conditions.

"... We have to breed them. The brood stock has to go through the hatchery to produce seed. One good wild set just makes a hatchery look like peanuts."

Spawning in the bay's Maryland waters has also been very spotty in recent years, according to Maryland marine scientists.

An oyster's two or three-year life cycle begins when an adult, which started life as a male, becomes a female and lays 50 million to 100 million eggs. The eggs develop into pea-sized larvae, or spat, which can swim up and down, drifting with the tides, searching for algae to feed on.

Most spat are eaten by predators, but the lucky ones settle to the bottom and attach themselves to an empty oyster or mussel shell.

"The oystermen plant the shells and depend on wild spat fall," said Andrews. He noted signs of a good set in the York River beds while oystermen John DiMaria and Joe Melzer said the James River set was also the best they'd seen in years.

While the growing oyster's main problem is no longer predation, but disease or pollution, there are exceptions.

In the Rappahannock, cow nose rays have been eating a lot of oysters, perhaps because their favorite food, the once abundant soft shell clams, mysteriously disappeared recently in the bay.

Before reaching their mature size of three or four inches, the oysters may also be troubled by a disease called SSO and by dinoflagellates, organisms that cause the notorious red tides and send shellfish into a dormant state.

Along Maryland's Atlantic coast, where waters are cleaner and saltier, oysters mature up to a year earlier, but snails, marine borers and storms exact a high toll of the crop.

Last winter on Virginia's Atlantic coast up to 81 percent of the oysters died when some beds were scoured clean by the action of ice and storm tides.

But still oysters are a $75 million a year industry in Virginia when its total economic impact is reckoned, said Wallace, who added price increases have tended to be offset by declining harvests.

Watermen alone earned $6.5 million on the 1976 harvest, and packing houses that buy enough oysters locally now import oysters from as far away as Oregon.

Andrews said the industry is producing as many oysters in the bay "as can be harvested at present prices. If we could get $20 a bushel as they do in Long Island, we'd be growing them here."

Immature seed oysters from the James River currently sell for $1.50 to $2 per bushel, while full grown oysters sell at from $8 to $11 a bushel. Long Island oysters command the best prices because they "taste better and tend to be fatter longer because of cool weather," Andrews said.

"The oyster is a nearly perfect food. It has all the minor elements. If you eat seafood you don't need much else."

He said oysters are always popular with big city residents, but others tend to prefer crabs, lobster, shrimp and other kinds of seafood.

Wallace believes as a result of new sewage treatment plants and stricter environmental controls bay waters may be cleaner than in years. He believes it "possible to get the Virginia harvest up to about 16 million pounds a year in the next five years. That's tripling the harvest."

"This is a complex business," he said. "When it's done a certain way for 75 years, change itself is a problem. But we've been working with the private sector and we are pretty well convinced changes have to be made."

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market was mixed today, giving up on a modest early advance.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, up more than a point at mid-morning, was off .44 at 772.00 by noon.

Gainers held a slight advantage over declines in the broad tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Analysts said the market drew some support from the dollar's strength in foreign exchange today.

But they also noted doubts about how far a rally by the dollar could go in the face of some expected bad news in the government's monthly report on the U.S. balance of trade, which is due next Monday.

Wide trade deficits, resulting mainly from oil imports, have been cited as a primary reason for the dollar's slide against other leading currencies in recent months.

Athlone Industries led the active list, up 1/4 at 16 1/4 in trad-

WILLIAMSTON — Wind and rain damage in Martin County on Wednesday night and early this morning has been "mostly of a miscellaneous nature, but widespread throughout the county," Lee Reynolds, editor of "The Enterprise" reports.

Reynolds said there were a number of reports received of trees toppled on cars, of roofs being blown off small structures, including one "case of a roof being blown through the windshield of a car."

Considerable power outage has also resulted from the storm from Tarboro to Manteo. "All contractors, everybody available is out in an effort to repair the power lines," Reynolds said.

"There seems to be no serious problem, most of the failure is on feeder lines. There's been some loss of poles where trees fell on lines, and the stress, plus the soft soil conditions from rains, has toppled poles."

Reynolds said no estimate of damages could be assessed at this point. "However, it will probably be considerable," he commented, "with a number of losses ranging from $1,000 on down to many $35 to $50 losses."

Early this morning, the crest of the Roanoke River at Williamston was 11.3 feet, or 1.3 feet above flood level, with expectations that the level would continue to rise.

"I feel certain that this January will be the wettest on record since January, 1937," Lee said. "Already the rainfall is over seven inches, and is within merely hundredths of an inch in going over the official 1937 record."

Rose High School stunned previously undefeated Northern Nash last night with a third-quarter blitz and then held off a Knight rally to capture a 73-63 Division I victory.

The win boosted Rose to a 2-1 Division I record, while the Knights also fell off to 2-1, and 14-1 overall.

The Lady Knights, like their male counterparts, also unbeaten, kept their string alive with a 59-42 win over the Rampettes. The Lady Knights are now 3-0 in the league and 14-0 overall, while Rose dropped to 6-5 overall and 1-2 in conference play.

The Rampants led much of the early going, but fell behind in the second period to the Knights, trailing by as much as five points late in the half, and by six early in the second half.

But a string of 12 straight points powered Rose into a 41-35 lead, and a later string of 16 ran the margin out to 58-41.

During the final five minutes of the game, the Rampants apparently felt the upset was in the bag and got a little sloppy, but managed to hold on despite a Knight rally that cut the lead to only six points at one time.

"I just hope we can keep it going," said a jubilant Coach Jim Brewington afterwards. "This has got to be the biggest win of my career, and one of the sweetest ones in Rose High history."

Brewington praised the overall play of James Hawkins. "I don't know how many points he had, but he played a -- tremendous game for us. The real key right there at the end was when he sank that free throw, then came back down the court to slam dunk the ball for the 65-52 lead after they had run off eight in a row."

(William) Barnes also played a great game, and the rebounding of (Billy) Roberson and (Anthony) Bryant was crucial there at the end."

Brewington admitted that he got worried when the Rampants saw their lead drop down to six. "But I had a lot of confidence in the kids. We put a lot of pressure on them (Northern Nash) at the end, and I don't think they've had to play against pressure like that."

"We got kind of sloppy after we got the big lead, but we're not the type club that can hold the ball."

Brewington credited the early season games with teams like Kinston and Washington in helping in the win. "It helps you to play people like that. Northern hasn't played that type opposition, and I just don't think they were ready for us. I know they'll be ready over there, but if we can keep on playing like this, we've got a great shot at one of those two tournament berths."

Rose jumped ahead first, and despite four ties, never trailed in the first period, building up a 14-8 lead at one time.

Northern tied it up twice more in the second period before moving out into the lead for the first time at 24-23 on a jumper by David Battle. Rose regained it at 27-26, but fell behind again, 28-27, and trailed by as much as 31-27 before the half ended at 31-29.

Northern scored the first two baskets of the third period before Rose took command and ran off 12 straight points.

During the third frame, Northern was charged with 14 fouls and suffered 13 turnovers. Rose hit on 11 of 14 free throws and seven of 15 from the floor.

Greg Guthrie put Rose back ahead, 37-35 with 4:31 left, and they never trailed again. The Rampants ran the lead out to 41-35, before Northern scored again. Then, after it was cut to 42-41, the Rampants went on a 16-point spurt that carried into the final quarter. Barnes closed out the third frame with a 40-footer that made it 54-41.

Rose added the first two baskets of the final period, and later upped the lead to 62-44, before the Knights took advantage of sloppy play to cut the lead back. They reeled off eight in a row before Rose got three from Hawkins, then added seven more to trim it to 65-59. But that was as close as they got, as the Rampants eased away again to hold on for the win.

Hawkins led Rose with 22, while Barnes had 20 and Bryant added 10. Battle paced Northern with 19, while Donnie Earl and Nathan Arrington each added 13.

Northern Nash's girls took the lead after only four seconds and built up a 6-0 lead before Rose scored. The Rampettes were able to cut that down to two points, but could never get even with the Lady Knights, who held a 14-11 lead at the end of the first quarter.

They extended their lead to 11 in the second frame, and took a 30-19 lead into intermission. During the third quarter, the Knights led by as much as 20, 44-24, before Rose cut that to 44-30 at the horn. The final period saw Northern run their lead out to 23 just before Rose scored the final six points of the game.

"They just wore us down," Coach Billy Byrd said. "We got tired and turned the ball over. They got a lot of inside shots, easy shots, and that hurt us."

"We're still progressing, and if we continue to improve, we should still be in the upper division by the time it's over."

Northern was led by LeLetha Harrison with 18, while Clarice Wright had 16 and Marcia Richardson had 10. Sheryl Taylor had 16 for Rose, while Kathy Streeter had 12.

The Rampants play host to Wilson on Friday.

Rose Seeks To Close First Half With Wins

Rose High School's boys' basketball team, with two games left in the first half of the Division I season, finds itself in good position to pad its record after whipping Northern Nash last night.

The Rampants had two games during the coming seven days in the conference, both against the lowest ranked teams in the league. Unless an upset occurs, the Rampants should find themselves in good shape going into the start of the second round next Friday night.

The Rose girls, however, find themselves down slightly as they too, will be facing teams that they should get wins over during the coming seven days.

The cagers will be hosting Wilson on Friday night, with the girls' game starting at around 6:30 p.m. Then, on Tuesday, they travel to Elizabeth City to meet Northeastern High School's Eagles.

In the only other Rose activity, the wrestling team closes out pre-tournament activity tonight, traveling to Wilson. The Rampant matmen are unbeaten in Division I matches, and will be trying to boost their record to 14-1 overall prior to hosting the Division I tournament here next Saturday, February 4.

The Rampants, in a taped delay, will also be shown on television Saturday. The WRAL-TV Tournament, held over the Christmas Holidays, will be telecast at 4 p.m. over Channel 5. Rose won the tournament, and seven wrestlers will be in action in the broadcast.

The Rampants enter their final two games of the first half of the conference season with a 2-1 record. But Coach Jim Brewington has reason to fear both Wilson and Northeastern.

"Northern Nash only beat Wilson by five, and you've just about got to expect a letdown after this one," Brewington said. "Wilson has the type team that can beat you, so we really can't afford to let down. We have to put pressure on them."

Brewington cited the Wilson

Seven Wrestlers Still Among Area Unbeatens

Only seven area wrestlers still post unbeaten records, down one from the last listing here.

Four of the unbeaten come from D.H. Conley's Vikings, although two of them have ties to mar their records. They include Gary Harris, at 100 pounds, 15-0-1; Alton Crandall at 121, with a 16-0 mark; Marvin Hardy at 147, also 16-0, and Jesse Davis, 187, with a 15-0-1 mark.

Rose High School's Rampants boast one unbeaten wrestler in 114-pound James Cherry, pacing the way with a 17-0 record.

Farmville Central's Horace Williams, at 140-pounds, holds down a 12-0 mark, while North Pitt's Mike Manning has a 10-0 record at 157 pounds.

Most of the wrestling is now in the final weeks prior to the sectionals, to be held at Rose High School in just over two weeks.

In addition to the unbeaten, other weight class leaders include Rose's Cliff Whichard, 162-2 at 107; Rose's Jesse Baker, 16-1 at 128; Rose's Virgil Tyson, 15-2 at 134; Conley's Charles Hanson, 19-1 at 169; Rose's Ron Butler, 14-2-1 at 197, and Rose's Franklin Clark, 10-5-1 at heavyweight.

Rose has the top record with a 13-1 mark, followed by Farmville at 9-2 and Conley at 8-2. North Pitt is 6-4-1, while Williamston has the lone losing mark at 4-6-1.

Wrestlers with winning records, based on at least two-thirds participation:

- Ronald Harris (C) 132; Hank Edwards (W) 72; Bernard Paige (R) 85.
- 147 Marvin Hardy (C) 160; Danny Shaw (NP) 63-1; Dennis Brown (FC) 64-1.
- 157 Mike Manning (NP) 100; Alfred O'Neal (R) 124.
- 169 Charles Hanson (C) 191; Burney Fleming (R) 114-1; Sammy Mayo (NP) 53; Sammy Brown (FC) 65.
- 187 Jesse Davis (C) 150-1; Raymond Wooten (R) 121; William Maye (FC) 101; Warren Lamb (W) 102.
- 197 Ron Butler (R) 142-1; Heavyweight: Franklin Clark (R) 105-1.

Gray's Free Throws Win For Pirates

SPORTS ILLUSTRATED, one of the most widely-read weekly sports magazines, has a reputation of being "the kiss of death," and it happened again last week.

This week's issue, prepared last week, featured a story on Indiana State's college basketball team, which at the time was rolling along with a 12-0 record. But no sooner had the magazine gone into publication than the Sycamores dropped two straight games. They lost their first game Thursday night to Southern Illinois and then dropped an 81-76 decision to Illinois State Saturday.

The two losses dropped Indiana State from fourth on the AP poll to 13th and from fifth to 13th on the UPI poll.

Being featured in SI is about like having Billy Packer announce that a player has hit 43 foul shots in a row — you know he is going to miss his next attempt.

THE PITT COUNTY SCHOOLS held mid-term examinations during the first part of this week and the county's four Eastern Carolina Conference teams took Tuesday night off from their basketball schedules.

On the surface it would seem the schools would have some extra time to prepare for tonight's games, when play resumes. But that is not the case.

A rule prevents the schools from practicing during exams, so actually they had less preparation time than normal for tonight's games.

For this reason, Ayden-Griffon coach Bob Murphrey proposes that the Pitt County schools play each other after the exam period to insure equal preparation time since the schools outside the county don't follow the same examination schedule as Pitt County.

This is an area that the conference should look into since it only takes a couple of days' layoff to begin to affect players' performances.

WASHINGTON REDSKINS FANS should be pleased with the announcement that Jack Pardee is returning to the nation's capital as a head coach. Pardee, both a former player and assistant coach for the 'Skins, replaces George Allen, who was fired last week. Pardee has been the head coach of the Chicago Bears for three years, led the Bears to their first playoff berth since 1963 last season.

Under Pardee, the Bears showed steady improvement, posting records of 4-10, 7-7 and 9-5. Pardee also had a 14-6 record as the head coach of the Florida Blazers in the World Football League.

JOE NAMATH'S RETIREMENT was possibly a bit late, but better late than never. Namath reached the zenith of the quarterbacking world when he coached the AFL New York Jets to a 16-7 victory over Baltimore in the 1969 Super Bowl, the first victory in the series by an AFL team.

But injuries plagued the former Alabama signal-caller and he never again achieved his former greatness. Namath hoped for a rebirth after being traded to the Los Angeles Rams last year, but it never happened.

Namath was wise to choose retirement. The past season proved much of his talent is gone forever and few things are sadder than a once-great athlete lingering on long after his prime. But in his prime, Namath was the best.

STATESBORO, Ga. — East Carolina University got a pair of free throws from Herb Gray with 50 seconds left in the game to pull out an 86-85 victory over hosting Georgia Southern in Statesboro last night.

The victory snapped a four-game losing streak for the Pirates and gave them their fourth victory in 15 games. Georgia Southern bowed for the fifth straight time in the contest.

East Carolina, however, had to hold off the Eagles during the final 50 seconds, as Georgia Southern had several opportunities to cash in and regain the lead before the horn finally sounded.

After Gray's fateful free throws, Georgia Southern had two shots at the basket before Greg Cornelius swept the boards for the Pirates. Then, with 24 seconds to go, Don Whitaker was fouled, but missed on his first one-and-one attempt.

The Eagles recovered the ball and called time out with 15 seconds to go. In the final ten seconds, the Eagles shot again, but Cornelius was there for the rebound, only to foul John Fowler with three seconds to go.

Fowler missed on his free throw attempt, however, and the ball rolled loose on the floor before anyone could gain control, and the clock ran out.

The game was a see-saw affair all the way. The lead changed hands on ten occasions and was tied 12 times.

The hosting Eagles were never able to build up any lead of their own, never more than two points ahead the entire evening. The Pirates, however, pulled away in the early part of the second half after leading by as much as six in the first half.

In the second half, the Pirates bulged out to an 11-point lead, on several occasions, but were unable to shake the Eagles, who fought back and finally tied it up once more at 70-70.

East Carolina moved out at 11-10 in the early moments of the game after the two teams had swapped the lead and tied it several times. The Bucs upped the margin to as much as 19-14 before the Eagles came back and took a 22-21 lead.

The Pirates and Eagles swapped it several times after that before Herb Krusen put the Pirates up 34-32 on a jumper, and the Bucs led the rest of the half. They eventually led by as much as six, 40-34, and held a 45-40 lead at the half on Whitaker's corner shot at the horn.

In the second half, the Pirates pulled steadily away, until they reached their apex at 57-46 on a short jumper by Krusen.

But after that, the Eagles began to rally and chop away at the lead. Finally, with 9:48 left, Matt Simpkins hit from the corner to tie it at 70-70.

Although the Pirates didn't give up the lead then, Georgia Southern twice tied it up, the last time at 74-74 before the Pirates pulled out by four again as Krusen hit two free throws and Gray made a layup.

Finally, with 2:20 left, Simpkins hit again for an 83-82 Eagle lead, but Oliver Mack scored seconds later with a jumper to return the Pirates to the lead.

Jerome Anderson put the Eagles back out, but Gray hit two free throws with 50 seconds left to put the Pirates back up at 86-85, and the score never changed again.

The Pirates shot 48.4 per cent for the game, while the Eagles hit just 45.9 per cent. East Carolina was outbounded by 44-41 in the game, and had 14 turnovers as compared to just eight for the Eagles.

The big difference came at the foul line, where the Pirates hit 24 of 31, while the Eagles made just seven of ten. Only 12 fouls were called against East Carolina, with 21 against Georgia Southern.

Cornelius led the Pirate scoring with 19, while Krusen had 18, Bernard Hill had 11, Mack had 16 and Gray had 10.

Mack, who was off his game, played 35 minutes despite spending the day in bed with the flu.

Fowler led Georgia Southern with 23, while Kevin Anderson and Simpkins each had 16, and Bobby Shields had 10.

Cornelius led the Pirate rebounding with 15, while Fowler had 20 for the Eagles.

East Carolina closes its current road trip on Saturday, traveling to Durham to meet the nationally ranked Duke Blue Devils, coming off a disappointing one-point loss to Virginia.

N. Edgecombe Stops Roanoke

LEGGETTS — Roanoke High School suffered its first Eastern Plains Conference loss last night as North Edgecombe gained a 66-63 win. The Roanoke girls snapped back from several losses, however, to take a 64-47 win.

Roanoke's boys jumped out to a 20-16 lead in the first period and increased that to 36-29 as they looked on their way to another victory.

During the third period, the Redskins upped their lead to 54-45. But in the final period, the "Skins managed only nine points, while North Edgecombe came up with 21, and pulled out the three-point win.

Greg Knight led the winners with 35 points, while Ronnie Smith added 15. Roanoke was led by Edward Ward with 18, while Tim Highsmith had 11 and Jasper Martin and Charles Hines each had 10.

In the girls' game, Roanoke fell behind at the start, and was down 17-13 after one period. But in the second quarter Roanoke came back to push into a 30-26 halftime lead.

The Squaws boosted that margin to 49-32 after three frames, and matched North Edgecombe, 15-15, in the final period.

Barbara Bullock led Roanoke with 17, while Yvette Modica had 14 and Senfield Jones had 12. Terri Allbritton led North Edgecombe with 13, while Sheila Stokes had 11.

Roanoke is home to Saratoga on Friday.

McGlohon Feels Berth Possible

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Margaret McGlohon is hopeful that not only will this year's Rose Rampette basketball team be the first-ever winning team for the school, but also will earn a berth in the state championship playoffs.

Miss McGlohon, a forward on the team, feels that the Rampettes can do just that, in only their third year of competition.

"We should have beaten Rocky Mount," she said of the first league game the Rampettes played this year. "If we can play well from now on, I think we can beat them when they come over here. Then, if we can beat Wilson, Bertie and Northeastern, and play well against Northern Nash, I think we have a shot at getting into the playoffs."

Division I's girls, like the boys, will have two berths in the state 4-A playoffs this spring.

A junior, Miss McGlohon is playing only her second year of organized basketball. "Karen Jeffreys (a tennis teammate) got me to come out for the team. She's a year ahead, and had played as a sophomore. I had played in the intramural program at Aycock when I was in the seventh or eighth grade. I don't remember now."

But when she came out for the varsity team, Margaret found she had a lot to learn. "I learned a lot that first year, then I went to basketball camp at East Carolina last summer, and that really helped me a lot."

She feels that her shooting and defensive play have been the toughest things she's had to work on. "I think I'm coming along, though," she said. "I'm playing defense a whole lot better, but I still don't shoot that much."

Not being a high scorer doesn't bother McGlohon. "I've always thought that if I could play pretty good defense and let the other girls score that that would be best. I don't really worry about scoring."

Rebounding also has been a problem, but McGlohon admits that it is coming along now as she learns to get position.

In addition to her basketball play, Margaret also is a member of the Rose tennis team, where she played second-seed this past fall. "I started that in the seventh grade, and went to camp there too (at St. Mary's) and learned to like it a lot. It's really my favorite sport." She played on the Aycock team prior to coming to Rose. "I've got a lot more confidence in my tennis; that may be one reason I like it better."

In 1963 pitcher Carlton Willey of the New York Mets worked 183 innings without allowing a sacrifice bunt.

A member both of the Keywanettes and the Monogram Club at Rose, Margaret enjoys all sports when off the courts (both basketball and tennis).

Next year, she'll be in line to become the number one seed on the tennis team. "I hope," she said. "Unless some other girl comes up and beats me out."

After that, it'll be another season of basketball, then thoughts of college will begin. "I know I want to go to college," she said, "but I'm not sure where yet. I would like to play tennis in college, however."

Notre Dame Claims Third Win In Fourth Day Of Hardwood Play

By JOHN NELSON
AP Sports Writer

The Fighting Irish of Notre Dame went three-for-four this past week, and Coach Digger Phelps couldn't be happier.

The fifth-ranked Irish began their week with a 75-73 victory over UCLA on Sunday, beat Dartmouth 78-64 on Monday and walloped West Virginia 103-82 on Wednesday.

"Obviously we are pleased with a performance like this one tonight," said Phelps. "It's tough for any team to play three games in four days."

Not only did Notre Dame have to face that tough schedule, but they had to do it with starting center Bill Laimbeer on the bench with an injury.

Bruce Flowers filled in and scored 17 points, as did Rich Branning, and Notre Dame, now 13-3, shot 60 percent from the floor to offset the 40-point performance of West Virginia's Lowes Moore.

Flowers also snagged a game-high 10 rebounds and freshman Kelly Tripucka, starting at Flowers' forward slot in Phelps' shuffled lineup, scored 15.

"We are getting good mileage from our personnel without Bill Laimbeer," said Phelps. "We had to make some adjustments with him out, and we are doing well."

West Virginia, 6-9, shot poorly in the first half and trailed 52-33 at intermission. But the Mountaineers played the Irish evenly in the second half as neither team scored more than four unanswered points.

In other games Wednesday involving ranked teams, Nebraska upset No. 8 Kansas 62-58. No. 9 Providence nipped Massachusetts 50-49. 10th-ranked Syracuse swamped Temple 91-66. No. 18 Virginia edged 11th-ranked Duke 74-73. No. 15 Texas downed Baylor 78-76. 16th-ranked Georgetown defeated American University 72-68 and No. 20 Illinois State handed Northern Michigan 75-58.

In some other games, Hawkeye Whitney scored six of his 19 points to blunt a Maryland comeback and North Carolina State scored an 80-73 ACC victory over the Terrapins; Brad Droy scored 20 points and Clay Johnson had 14 as Missouri downed Kansas State 65-60 in the Big Eight; Army's all-time leading scorer, Gary Winton, pumped in 18 points as the Cadeets downed Colgate 60-58; Herb Gray hit two free throws with 50 seconds left to lift East Carolina past Georgia Southern 86-85, and forward Joe Faine scored 20 points to pace Bowling Green to a 69-63 Mid-American Conference victory over Kent State.

Ice Man Burns Boston Five

By ALEX SACHARE
AP Sports Writer

"Right now, I wouldn't trade George Gervin for any guard in the league."

San Antonio Spurs Coach Doug Moe doesn't mince words when he talks about Gervin, his 6-foot-7 guard who was voted to a starting berth in the National Basketball Association All-Star Game Feb. 5.

"Ice" seldom takes a bad shot," says Moe, using the nickname Gervin picked up for his super-cool demeanor. "He always seems to be in control of the situation. He is just a great player and he definitely deserves to be on the All-Star team."

Moe will get no argument from the Boston Celtics, who were burned by the Ice Man for 37 points Wednesday night as the Spurs posted a 113-103 victory, their fifth in a row. San Antonio now leads the Central Division by three games.

Elsewhere in the NBA, the Phoenix Suns beat the Houston Rockets 118-96, the Denver Nuggets edged the Buffalo Braves 121-119 in overtime, the Philadelphia 76ers nipped the Seattle SuperSonics 128-125 and the Detroit Pistons defeated the Golden State Warriors 99-95.

Suns 118, Rockets 96
Phoenix raised its record to 30-15, third-best in the NBA, but still trails Portland by 6½ games in the Pacific Division. Paul Westphal had 25 points and Walter Davis 23 as Phoenix posted its 11th straight home-court triumph and handed Houston its eighth road loss in a row.

Nuggets 121, Braves 119
Denver snapped a three-game losing streak behind 34 points by David Thompson. The Nuggets trailed by as many as 11 points in the fourth quarter before going ahead in the final 90 seconds of regulation. Randy Smith's layup for Buffalo with two seconds left sent the game into overtime, but Bobby Jones, Thompson and Jim Price staked Denver to a six-point lead at the start of the extra period and Buffalo never caught up.

76ers 128, Sonics 125
George McGinnis scored 15 of his 35 points in the fourth quarter and Philadelphia held off a late Seattle rally to hand the Sonics only the second loss in their last 15 home games. The Sixers led 119-100 with 3:18 to play but Seattle closed within two before Lloyd Free sank four free throws in the final 1:33 to clinch the victory. Pistons 99, Warriors 95

Detroit erased a 22-point deficit in the second half to hand Golden State its third loss in a row and 18th in 20 road contests. Bob Lanier led the way with 32 points, M.L. Carr scored 24 and Eric Money 21 for Detroit.

Whitney Snaps Slump, Leads Wolfpack Past Terps, 80-73

By The Associated Press
Hawkeye Whitney's slump is over.

Whitney, who had been in a three-game shooting slump, found the range Wednesday night. He scored 19 points to lead the Wolfpack to an 80-73 Atlantic Coast Conference triumph over Maryland.

Meanwhile, David Koesters hit an improbable 22-foot jumper with 22 seconds remaining as 18th-ranked Virginia ambushed 11th-ranked Duke, 74-73. In a nonconference game, Clemson was devastated by Furman, 87-68.

"If it was a slump, it's over," Whitney said, after the Wolfpack's victory. "It's definitely all behind me now. I really haven't been able to figure it out. I guess I just wasn't performing up to my potential."

After the Terrapins fought from a 46-39 halftime deficit to tie the score at 61-61, Whitney went to work, scoring three quick baskets as N.C. State forged ahead, 70-65. The Wolfpack never looked back.

"This was a big win for us to stay alive in the race," said coach Norm Sloan. "I thought we played a very good ball game. Hawkeye toughed it out."

The Wolfpack, picked by many to finish last in the ACC, is tied for third with Virginia at 3-2 and is 13-3 on the season. Maryland fell into the ACC cellar with a 1-5 conference record. The Terps are 11-6 overall.

Virginia's Koester surprised even his own coach with his clutch jump shot.

"He forced that one, even for a shot-putter," said Terry Holland. "It was one of those shots where everyone on the bench says, 'No, no... nice shot.'" Duke led, 71-66, with 3:11 left, but Marc Iavaroni made a lay-in and Koester hit a jumper to close the gap to one point. After Duke's Gene Banks missed a free throw and Jim Spanarkel missed a follow shot, Virginia grabbed the rebound. That set the stage for Koester's bomb, which put the Cavaliers on top, 72-71.

Mike Givinski, who sustained an injured tendon in his left foot earlier in the game, missed a free-throw attempt for the Blue Devils with eight seconds left and Virginia grabbed the rebound.

Iavaroni was fouled and made two free throws — and that was that.

"So many things happened during the game," said Duke coach Bill Foster. "but it all boiled down to our offensive inefficiencies."

It was a bitter setback for the Blue Devils, who fell one game behind North Carolina as their conference mark slipped to 4-2. Duke is 14-4 overall, while the Cavs improved their ACC record to 3-2 and their overall figure to 13-2.

Clemson was humiliated at the hands of Furman, a team the Tigers had vanquished earlier in the season by a 101-83 score.

"They just beat us every way you could beat us," said Clemson coach Bill Foster. "We weren't ready to play. Why, I don't know."

In tonight's only ACC game, conference-leading North Carolina travels to Wake Forest for a regionally televised match.

Jamesville In 64-39 Victory

CAPE HATTERAS — Jamesville High School made the long trip out to Cape Hatteras last night and came away with a pair of basketball victories. The Bullets took the girls' game, 69-26, and won the boys' by 64-39.

In the girls' contest, Jamesville jumped out to a 13-6 lead in the opening period. They increased that to 24-14 by the end of the half.

The Lady Bullets dumped in 20 points in the third quarter as they sprinted out to a 44-18 lead. They coasted home with a 25-8 final period.

Joyce Manning led Jamesville with 17, while Lorey Modlin had 13 and Tammy Williams had 10.

In the boys' game, Jamesville moved out to a 13-6 lead in the first period. They were unable to get much after that to add to the lead, however, and settled for a 25-16 halftime advantage.

The Bullets pulled away in the third period with a 21-14 advantage and led, 46-30. They finished off their hosts, 18-9, in the final quarter.

Tommy DiNardo and Ricky Whitehurst each had 21 points

FORD FAIRMONT IS AMERICA'S BEST SELLING NEW CAR IN HISTORY.

VIRGINIA-CAROLINA OWNERS TELL YOU WHY.

Joseph White, Chester, Va.
"I like the Fairmont's style and I like its handling. But the mileage is what I bought the car for."

Michael Knowles, Motoaca, Va.
"We have three children and it's a good sized car for us. Gas mileage has been real good."

Gladys Edwards, Greenville, N.C.
"I saw it on the lot and I liked it. And when I tried it, I said, this is it. I'm buying gas a lot less often now."

Col. James Zieg, Goldsboro, N.C.
"It's got about 90% of the space of the large station wagon that I had before. And it cost a great deal less."

In its first 40 days, the new Ford Fairmont took off at an even faster sales pace than the original Mustang. Virginia and Carolina owners can tell you why.

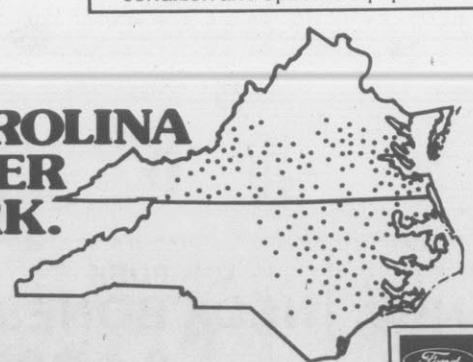

They were first attracted to Fairmont by its excellent fuel economy. And when they drove one, they were thoroughly impressed with its roominess, its handling and ride.

And they were completely sold by the Fairmont's clean, good looks and the lowest sticker price of any mid-size car in America.

Come drive one for yourself. You'll see why so many people are sold on the new Ford Fairmont.

The bidding:

1 ♣ 5 ♠ 3 4 ♥
4 ♠ 5 ♠ Pass Pass
Pass

Opening lead: Eight of ♣.

In an attempt to stop an opposing ruff, South chose the course of trying to pull trumps, but he overlooked a second method that would have proved more effective.

With his strong distribution, South was eminently correct in bidding hearts at the four-level, and both West and North did well when they bid one more for luck. Four spades is actually cold except against double-dummy defense. Note East's jump to three spades—over a takeout double, a jump raise of partner's suit is preemptive and not forcing. It shows a hand with good trump support, distributional values and little or no defense.

West led a club, obviously a singleton. Declarer won in dummy and decided that he had better draw trumps in a hurry, so he led the king of hearts from dummy. West won the ace and underled the ace of spades to his partner's jack. East returned a club, and West's ruff spelled down one.

Declarer was in a trifle too much of a hurry to draw trumps. He should have realized that West was quite likely to hold two or more trumps since he held only a singleton club. Therefore, declarer's efforts should have been bent on preventing East from gaining the lead.

That could be accomplished if West held the king of diamonds. One way would have been to win the opening lead in hand and take the diamond finesse, then discard a spade on the ace of diamonds. The trouble with that line was that it would have led to a two-trick defeat if East held the king of diamonds. There was a safer method.

After winning the club in dummy, declarer should cash the ace of diamonds and continue with the queen. If East covers with the king, declarer has no alternative but to ruff and lead a trump, and hope for the best. But when East cannot cover the queen of diamonds, declarer sluffs his spade. West wins the king of diamonds, but he has no way to get to his partner to obtain a club ruff for the setting trick.

Your play to the first trick could decide the fate of the contract. A writer once remarked: "There's no such thing as a blind opening lead, only deaf opening leaders!" May Play Self In Seirras Film

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Lauren Elder may play herself in a television movie recreating her experiences when she and a companion were trapped in a sudden snowstorm in the Sierras last February.

Her companion died in her arms after the storm caught them on a camping trip near Bishop. Miss Elder walked on frozen feet until she was rescued by searchers.

NBC has ordered a script for the projected movie.

Only One Left For Silverman

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — News of the future, 1981: Fred Silverman, the programming genius who led CBS, then ABC, then NBC to dominance in the rating, just accepted a job as president of PBS.

"Heck, there's only one network left to conquer now," he said in a statement issued by jubilant executives of the Public Broadcasting Service. He immediately plunged into program meetings.

Sources say he already has scheduled three new series for public television — "Downstairs, Downstairs," "Easthampton Beach Bums" and a drama about ancient Rome called "I, Laverne."

Silverman, who joined PBS moments after his $500,000-a-year contract as NBC's president expired, said he was "excited and challenged by this new opportunity, even though it doesn't pay much."

PBS declined to make public his new salary. But sources said part of it will come from the nation's 212 public television stations next month in what is to be called "Freddie's Pledge Week."

Industry observers were puzzled by Silverman's move. There were no rumors he was unhappy at NBC. His relations with top management there were described as "frank and candid."

As NBC's president, not only did he make big dough, he also had lavish stock options, a chauffeured limousine, priority use of the company jet and three company-supplied television sets.

But one high-level network executive, noting Silverman had made successes out of all three major networks, best summed up the industry's attitude this way: "He really wants to get even now."

Reaction by the public television community to Silverman's hiring was mixed.

"I don't think we'll have to stop talking about the important issues," chuckled a spokesman for "Washington Week in Review."

"It could mean the end of the dull documentary as we know it," said a worried executive at New York public TV station WNET.

"Hard to tell," said a source at Boston's WGBH. "For example, can we still buy stuff from the BBC, old chap?"

"It's like a shot in the arm," said a happy official at KCET in Los Angeles. "We've just hired Kate Jackson to host 'Hollywood Television Theater.'"

"I can't talk now, somebody from People magazine is here," muttered Dick Cavett, the PBS talk show star.

Whatever the reaction, everyone agreed Silverman now has an almost impossible task — to raise public TV, which now barely disturbs a Nielsen meter, to No. 1 in the ratings.

Said one expert: "You've got to realize that only a handful of people sleep through 'Masterpiece Theater' each week. But literally millions do that with

'Happy Days.'"

"He's got to turn that ratio around and I don't envy him."

(Those who deny this is the news of the future, 1981, probably are in the pay of NBC, which Silverman definitely will join next June.)

Team Up Again On New Movie

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Producer Joseph E. Levine, director Richard Attenborough and writer William Goldman, who last brought you "A Bridge Too Far," have teamed up again for "Magic."

The love story stars Anthony Hopkins, Ann-Margret and Burgess Meredith. Production is now under way in Northern California.

Nothing Wrong with a Massage

I have a massage twice a week. Some of my friends think this is a terrible indulgence. Perhaps it is, but I know I can function better in my job on this regime. Do you see anything medically harmful in two massages a week? — Ms. R. H., III.

Dear Ms. H.: A massage, carefully performed by a competent person, can be extremely beneficial. It is really not an indulgence when one considers the fact that almost everyone has his own form of body pampering.

Swimming, jogging, bike riding, tennis or squash are not "indulgences." The body reacts kindly to such stimulation. With massage, muscles relax, fatigue is reduced, nervous tension is minimized and the blood circulation activated.

There are innumerable kinds of massage, all of which have their own group of devotees. Massage, like every other form of exercise, should be started slowly and increased at regular intervals so that the muscle tissues are not injured.

Despite what your friends think, if you enjoy your massages, why not "indulge" yourself?

I fractured my leg two months ago in an automobile accident. I'm 22 and in good health. No one has been able to explain to me why my fracture has failed to heal. Now they're talking about another operation to speed up the healing. — Mr. J. F., N.M.

Dear Mr. F.: The failure of a fracture to "knit," or heal, is known as "non-union." In most instances, there is an explanation for non-union or delayed union of the bone fragments. Only rarely can no explanation be found.

The most important reason for this difficulty is some interference with the blood supply to the area of the fracture.

Infections and severe damage to the muscles and ligaments may be responsible. There are now many new techniques by which bones can be made to heal by surgery, bone grafts and electrical stimulation.

I eat what I consider to be a nutritious diet. Recently, I find I have painful cracks in the side of my mouth. I was told it might be a vitamin deficiency. I don't understand it because I take vitamins in addition to sensible meals. — Mrs. T.T., Fla.

Dear Mrs. T.: Cracks, fissures and ulcerations of the corners of the mouth are known as "perleches." When these occur in people who have a vitamin deficiency there almost always is some other evidence of it.

In most instances, the failure of these tiny cracks to heal is caused by excessive salivation, allergies and infections. Many people who wear full or partial dentures tend to salivate a little more than normal. The accumulation of saliva at the angle of the mouth seems to prevent the cracks from healing.

Keeping the area dry and using a soft lotion may be beneficial. Sometimes these lotions contain antibiotics and cortisone to speed the healing process.

Vet Drives 40,000 Miles A Year On House Calls

By CYNTHIA MILLS
LEESBURG, Va. (UPI) — Jack Howard is one doctor who doesn't mind making house calls. He's a country veterinarian. He drives 40,000 miles a year in Northern Virginia to visit the horses, cows and other farmyard animals who are his patients.

Son of a country vet brother of another, Howard practices only about an hour from Washington, D.C. The area is so threatened by suburban sprawl, he sometimes complains about rush-hour commuter traffic.

But he can match stories with James Herriott, the Yorkshire Dales vet whose warm accounts of his work in an isolated area of northern England have hit best-seller lists three times in a row.

To a reporter accompanying him on his rounds one recent day, he recalled lying in the snow and pulling a calf out from a straining cow in a blizzard. And that brought another story.

"One night several years ago, we did a caesarean (section) on a cow in this barn that had no lights. All the man had was a little Coleman lantern, so we had to move our car around and shine the light in the barn door to see."

"It was so cold, with the snow blowing in the barn, I would be working with one hand in the cow and shift hands to keep from freezing."

He described his life on the road since starting a "dairy and beef practice" after graduating in 1943 from Auburn University Veterinary School and serving in the Fifth Army Remount overseas.

"When I first came out (of the Army), why, my dad carried about 12 drugs in his car that he practiced with. That was just before the sulfa drugs came on the market." Or penicillin, for that matter.

He gestured toward his blue and white truck, rigged with sliding drawers and cabinets to carry medicine, surgical tools and even a portable X-ray machine. "Now we must have at least 200 (drugs) in this truck."

Howard pulls out early each morning from his Leesburg veterinary clinic in the truck accompanied by assistant, Nancy Nelson, and they often don't return until after dinner.

He said he has read only a little from Herriott's books, of which the first was "All Creatures Great and Small," but found the stories "very true to our life."

"It used to be more so than it is now," he said as he drove past a row of small farms with white fences.

"Fifteen years ago, I doctored hogs, cattle, sheep and horses and sometimes made house calls to cats and dogs."

Over the years, developments pushed many dairy farmers out of the Northern Virginia area. Howard's practice is primarily pleasure horses today.

But one customer still pays him in vegetables. "I've done work for different things. I used to have two or three farmers who would say, well, you treat the cow for half interest in it, or something like that, when they thought it was about dead. With a lot of them it was a challenge and I'd go ahead and do it. And I came out better than 50-50 on it," he chuckled.

This particular day began with a visit to treat a foal with a disease that causes it to stagger. Then came a sad task. Howard had to "put down" an aged horse crippled with arthritis.

He explained to the grey-haired owner that he would inject an overdose of tranquilizer and the horse would feel nothing. The mare was chewing on a last carrot offered by the man when Howard gave her the shot. Seconds later, she fell stiffly over sideways.

The rest of the morning was taken up stitching a horse who was injured when he "threw himself on the ground" after apparently being stung by a bee. X-raying a gray mare to learn why it was lame and examining another to see if it were pregnant.

Howard did this by pulling on a plastic "glove" that extended all the way to his armpit, gripping the stall door with one hand and, standing off to the side to avoid getting kicked, working the other arm slowly into the horse. He found a foal about the size of a small cat inside.

During the afternoon, Howard made many more stops. He checked a foal with a hernia and looked over with pride another horse whose nose he had sewn up earlier in the week. He prescribed eye drops for a third patient and gave the owner's dog a shot. He also "froze" a growth on the third eyelid of a horse, while several standers-by were recruited to keep the tranquilized animal from sitting back on its hind end as it groggily tried to do.

people doctor, because "you have to treat both the animal and the person."

With big animals like horses and cows, treatment also is complicated by their "vast multitude of flesh and tissues," he said, and because "we can't tell the horse to lay still in bed and expect him to stay there."

In addition, there is no Blue Cross-Blue Shield for animals. Some owners do not always want to pay the cost of expensive treatment, but others don't let money stand in the way of saving their pets. "We did a caesarean on an ewe recently," Howard said. "The caesarean was $60. The ewe's only worth $22, that's all she's worth. But the people loved the ewe. She was a pet and a very good show animal."

After a day which might end in the late evening, Howard often returns to his office to look at X-rays and make phone calls to clients. He may be called out again at night on emergencies, and he only gets every second weekend off.

But he says his love of being outdoors and working with animals makes all the effort worthwhile — along with occasional cases which seem like small miracles.

On one occasion, a horse was caught between a truck and a building and, in its panicky struggle to get free, cut most of its shoulder muscles and suffered other injuries.

"We sewed on him for two hours and a half," Howard recalled. "That horse is racing now and doing fine."

Columbus Found New World Beer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The first recorded consumption of beer in America occurred in 1502 when Christopher Columbus made his fourth and final voyage to Central America, where he was served beer made from maize, according to Philip C. Katz, senior vice president of research services, United States Brewers Association.

"Columbus' first sip of beer probably was not consumed in a tavern or 'on-premise' as it is now called," Katz said. Today, on-premise sales of beer represent about 35 percent of the beer sold in this country. Food stores alone account for close to 40 percent, he said.

Katz added that the brewing industry currently buys $900 million-worth of agricultural products from U.S. farmers.

Ship Blows Up In Gulf

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP) — A Liberian-registered cargo vessel carrying three tons of explosives exploded, burst into flames and apparently sank early today in the Gulf of Mexico, the Coast Guard said. Twenty-seven crew members were aboard, and there was no immediate word on their fate.

"It happened awfully quickly. We're wondering if the crew had time to get off," Coast Guard spokesman Steve Frazier said. He said the captain of the vessel was identified as Peter Lunau, a German, and his crew members were Filipino and German.

A distress call from the 492-foot Eva Maria, at 12:56 a.m. EST reported the ship was sinking after an explosion in the middle of the Gulf about 600 miles from St. Petersburg.

But a search plane still had not sighted the ship, survivors or debris by morning, Frazier said.

The ship was primarily carrying general cargo in containers but also had three tons of explosives aboard, he said.

The vessel carried two large lifeboats, two life rafts and 32 life jackets.

Death With Dignity Is Becoming A Movement

By GEORGE ESPER
Associated Press Writer
NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP) — "My dad said things to me that he'd probably never said to his son before, realizing it would be the last time. He hadn't said in years. I love you. I love your mother and your brother and I want you to go on doing that with them, too."

directly say that to somebody. Bob Gery's father died May 11, 1976, of cancer of the pancreas. He was 64 years old. "I would like to die. I have no reason to live. No job. My children are adults and able to take care of themselves. The pain. The medication tends to make you sleepy. Since I have nothing else to do anyway, I sleep most of the day."

The New Haven program provides care in the home with regularly scheduled visits to patients during the day and evening throughout the week. Hospice workers are also ready for emergency home visits around the clock, seven days a week.

Realizing A Radio Dream

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Most college dormitory bull sessions are forgotten the morning after, but not the one James M. Sempson, Gregory F. Procopio, Greg's twin brother, John, and Ned Langston had five years ago. All were students at North Carolina State University who decided in 1973 that the best way to get what they wanted out of radio was to create their own station. Next month they expect to do exactly that.

Cornelia Lively, a 54-year-old widow, stutters and lisps. Her right jaw is swollen. She has cancer of the mouth. Eating is almost impossible for her. Everything has to go through a blender. Terminal patients like Bob Gery's father and Cornelia Lively have always had to come to terms with approaching death, but in the past they and their families were usually left to their own devices, without much support in meeting the psychological needs in those final weeks and months.

Hospice of New Haven was founded in 1971. It has an operating budget of $500,000 and is financed by third-party payments like Medicare and Medicaid and contributions from foundations, private organizations, businesses and individuals. It also receives federal money. Hospice is pledged to accept patients regardless of their ability to pay.

"We were all personal friends and were dissatisfied at the time with what radio had to offer," said Sempson, 23. He will manage the new station WCPE-FM. He said Procopio, then an electrical engineering student, had wanted to start a radio station since high school. "It was what Greg wanted to make out of his life. For the rest of us it was a challenge," Sempson said.

This is changing. Programs of care for the dying — and help for their families — are springing up all over the United States. Many are hospice programs, and New Haven's was among the first.

A full-time and part-time staff of 27 is supplemented by 74 trained volunteers, who take part in the home-care programs, reading to patients, taking them shopping or to beauty parlors, even fishing. They make it possible for them to lead as normal a life as they can.

"Eight percent of what we earned we poured into the station," he added. "Anne (Procopio's wife) did the legal work. Ned did surveys to show what programming was necessary. Greg designed the equipment and I helped him build it," Sempson said.

"He was bitter," Bob Gery recalls of his father. "I think almost anybody would be bitter if you're told a year or so after you've retired that you have less than six months to live."

Most are afraid of death, in the experience of the Rev. Dr. Edward F. Dobihal Jr., president of Hospice of New Haven. He was one of its founders after he spent seven months studying St. Christopher's Hospice in London.

OUTDOOR NEEDLEPOINT DENVER (UPI) — Needlepoint on indoor-outdoor furniture? A Denver manufacturer has introduced a line that includes chairs, a loveseat and a lounge whose polyester cord fabric slings can be worked like needlepoint canvas.

"In the last couple of months, when we had the understanding and he had the appreciation of the things told to him by the people at hospice and by us, there really wasn't any need to do any more arguing. "The people at hospice were straightforward and told him he was going to die and that how he chose to die over the next several months depended on him and on what they could do for him if he let them."

More familiarly and freely spoken of these days, death remains "an anxious topic," Dobihal says. "There's concern about, well, is there something after? What is after? Is this the total end?" Dr. Lack, the hospice medical director, feels there's too much talk about psychological and emotional problems of the dying and too little about making the patient comfortable.

"At first I kept saying, 'Dad, how could you treat Mom like this?' realizing I was talking from my perspective, a healthy person. "In the last couple of months, when we had the understanding and he had the appreciation of the things told to him by the people at hospice and by us, there really wasn't any need to do any more arguing."

"There is never a time when nothing more can be done. There may be nothing more that can be done to cure the disease, but there are always further measures to be taken for the comfort of the patient."

Dr. Sylvia Lack is medical director of Hospice Inc., of New Haven, a pilot project and demonstration center for the United States under a contract with the National Cancer Institute. In the past few years, she notes, "There's been an explosion of interest in death and dying," and this has been marked by a growth of hospice programs in the United States. More than 80 have been established in more than 30 states in the past three years. "The main concern of a hospice program," Dr. Lack says, "is the management of terminal disease in such a way that patients live until they die, that their families live with them as they are dying — and go on living afterward."

Champion Of One-Ring Circus

By KIRSTEN O. LUNDBERG BRUSSELS (UPI) — Sampson Bouglione thinks a one-ring circus has it all over three rings. He ought to. He owns one.

The Bouglione self-styled "Circus of Circuses" is going into its 108th year, still under the ownership of the same family which has run it for six generations. And they show no signs of giving up.

"Why should I want to get out of the circus," says Bouglione, a natty dresser sporting tinted glasses. "It's a good life."

The rest of the family seems to think so, too. There are 40 Bougliones at the moment, and they are all involved in the circus, either behind the scenes or on-stage. From Emilien, a Rhett Butler look-alike who puts his troop of 13 horses through their paces, to Joseph, whose act features a double flip to land on his feet on a tightrope eight feet off the ground.

Sampson Bouglione, whose position in the family business is as president director general, likes the atmosphere of the one-ring circus.

"In European circuses, which all have one ring, the act is the center of attention. It's not like in the (United) States with their three rings, where it's a carnival, like trying to watch three plays at once.

"Not only is that impossible for the audience, it's also not good for the performers. They don't feel they have to be at their best, because if you mess up your act, it doesn't matter — the audience just watches something else. With us, if your act doesn't measure, the audience will let you know."

"We're professionals, artists. Here we have a chance to show our talent, and also to have close contact with the audience."

The contact has to be close in a tent where the seats, folding chairs, are crowded between the edge of the sawdust-strewn ring and the flaps of the tent, supported by steel poles.

So close that at a recent performance one woman gasped every time the trapezist almost fell from his rope swing, and a small boy screamed and tried to climb up his father's shoulders when an alligator came creeping over the edge of the ring.

But putting on a show is not the whole of running a circus. Keeping 300 people, numerous animals and 350 caravans on the road for 365 days a year is a business in itself.

"We stop at about 280 towns a year, sometimes for only one night, often for a week, depending on the size of the population. We only go to towns that have more than 10,000 inhabitants."

That means putting up the tent in the morning, putting on a show in the evening, often one in the afternoon as well, and packing up at night to take off for the next stop. In the meantime, feed must be procured for the animals: 1,000 pounds of hay, 450 pounds of potatoes, 100 quarts of milk, 70 pounds of lettuce a day.

The performers, who live in their own caravans with all the comforts of home, cook for themselves. The staff, however, eat communally and food must be bought and cooked for them as well.

"When we arrive in a town, it's full. No parking. You know the circus has come to town," Bouglione says. "But we order all our supplies ahead from local merchants. It's very good business for them."

The business also involves getting together a new show every year, booking engagements and arranging local formalities. Since the circus follows roughly the same circuit from year to year, new acts must be auditioned annually.

It all gives rise to a very cosmopolitan organization. Although the Bouglione is Paris-based, its members come from around the world and circulate freely within the European performing community. Artists, who sign one-year contracts, move from one circus to another, or vary their lives with occasional stints in cabarets and theaters.

Bouglione insists the life is not so different from any other.

"We live in our homes, go home to eat and sleep, go to work just like anyone else. But it's fun. The people here love what they're doing or they wouldn't be in it."

He looks out of the window of his plush caravan office, complete with carpeting, stereo and air-conditioning at the big tent surrounded by trailers in a market square in Brussels.

"When we travel, our caravans stretch for five kilometers," he says with pride.

Ruritans At Annual Meet

Several local Ruritan members were among the more than 2,500 Ruritan delegates who met in Washington, D.C., from Jan. 15-17 to convene the organization's 47th annual meeting.

Among the delegates from local Ruritan Clubs were: James Stroud, Zone No. 2 governor, Maury; and Jimmy Hinson, Zone No. 2 past governor, Fountain.

The convention marked the beginning of the 50th year of Ruritan work in America. The organization's Golden Jubilee slogan is, "Better Communities Building A Better America," an appropriate motto for this service oriented group which now boasts over 37,000 members in more than 13,000 local clubs in 30 states.

Presiding over the Golden Jubilee Convention was outgoing Ruritan President Jerry F. Ellis of Tennessee. He was succeeded by newly elected President Robert Wrenn of Virginia.

Other officers and directors elected were: Vice President Tom Benfield, Md.; Secretary Jim Rader, Va.; Treasurer Ed Cartner, N.C.; Trustee Floyd Moore, Tenn.; Directors A.J. Stephens, N.C.; Joe Jaynes, Tenn.; Jim Yeatts, Va.; Ervin Miles, N.C.; John Woods, Kan.; Nick Hardinger, Ohio; and Ernest Goodman, Va.

A Bulletproof Clipboard Tried

NEW YORK (AP) — Wonder Woman may have her bulletproof bracelets but the New York Police Department has bulletproof clipboards.

Nine of the clipboards, said to be capable of stopping a speeding bullet fired from four inches away, have been issued on an experimental basis.

If they work out, the department plans to buy them for all 3,750 patrol cars.

The new clipboards, made primarily of Fiberglas, are an eighth of an inch thick, 15 inches long and 10 inches long. They go for $14 each.

New York police bought its first clipboards after a research analysis concluded:

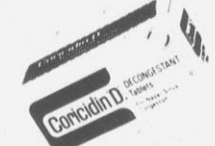

"The majority of confrontations occur at less than five feet and mainly at arm's length, revealing the need for a piece of cover that officer can carry conveniently and employ swiftly."

Cookie Sale Til January 30
