Midwest Clobbered By Killer Blizzard

By JULIE DUNLAP
Associated Press Writer

Flash floods today threatened states already reeling from heavy snows, hurricane-force winds, a thaw that turned mountains of snow to slush and a vicious blizzard that stranded thousands of travelers.

As the Midwest was clobbered Thursday by what Ohio Gov. James Rhodes called "a killer blizzard looking for victims," the Southeast was drenched by rain, sleet and snow. Tornadoes touched down in Virginia and North Carolina, and temperatures dipped to the 20s.

At least 43 people were killed in mishaps blamed on the erratic weather: nine in Wisconsin, six in Michigan, five in Indiana, four in both Ohio and Kentucky, two each in Illinois, Maryland, Pennsylvania, Alabama, Georgia, and one each in North Dakota, South Dakota, Maine, Virginia and Minnesota.

President Carter declared a federal state of emergency in Ohio and today ordered units of the 5th Army into the state to help exhausted National Guardsmen rescue stranded motorists and assist utility repairmen in restoring electrical power to thousands of homes.

The Michigan National Guard was mobilized and Gov. William Milliken declared a state of emergency so the state could apply for federal aid. The storm, which cut power to 160,000 homes, piled up 12-foot drifts and almost sank an ore freighter.

Overnight temperatures ranged from 23 below zero in Devil's Lake, N.D., to 61 in Key West, Fla.

Winds gusting up to 85 mph, well beyond hurricane strength, caused damage all over the East and Midwest.

The storm that hit the Midwest sent barometer readings to record lows, indicating very low pressure generating a severe storm. In Pittsburgh, the barometer plunged to 28.49, the lowest since records were first kept there in 1870.

Creeks and rivers are already over their banks or near flood stage today in North Carolina, Virginia, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, West Virginia, Rhode Island, Vermont and Massachusetts.

The flooding appeared most widespread in West Virginia, where water isolated three towns and forced at least 3,000 people to flee.

The Little Kanawa has caused major flooding at Creston and Glenville, parts of which were 10 feet under water.

The Tug Fork overflowed in Mingo County, where disastrous floods last April almost swept several tiny mining towns out of the hollows. On Thursday, the homes from which some families fled were government trailers supplied when their houses were destroyed last spring.

Pennsylvania reported flooding along the Monongahela River in the southwestern corner, and along the Susquehanna to the east, which rose to the first story level in flood-prone Wilkes-Barre and further south forced evacuations from rural homes in Lancaster County.

Rhodes noted that at least 150,000 Ohio homes had been without heat most of Thursday: "They are helpless victims of something they have no control over."

He said his office was receiving 25 calls every five minutes, "cries of mercy — they want help and you can't get to them."

Labor Scarcity For U.S. Reported Likely By 1985

By JIM LUTHER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A sharp decline in the labor force may end the nation's overall unemployment problem over the next 10 years. But the inability of college graduates to find suitable jobs among those available could cause serious social upheaval.

Those conclusions were drawn by the staff of the congressional Joint Economic Committee in a report issued Thursday that attempts to gauge prospects for long-term growth in the U.S. economy.

Instead of the 6 to 7 percent unemployment that has plagued the economy for the past few years, the report forecasts the likelihood of a labor scarcity by 1985.

If such a change is handled properly by the government, the economists said, it could result in satisfactory growth and an increasingly high living standard.

But one big question mark is how the nation will deal with the employment demands of college-educated workers. In 1960, only 10 percent of the labor force was college-trained. By 1985, that is expected to double.

Because of that steady increase, the report noted, many graduates have been unable to get jobs for which they were trained and have had to settle for what they consider menial, unrewarding jobs.

If this continues, the committee staff said, the benefits of a college education will decline and college attendance will fall correspondingly.

"The potential for social discontent implicit in this kind of underemployment and in the implied limitation on education as a route to economic advancement could be serious," the report said.

The report was based on hearings held last November and on a series of papers prepared by private economists.

The most startling conclusion is that the growth in the number of Americans working or looking for jobs — the labor force — will fall dramatically over the next decade.

The average rate of growth, 2.3 percent a year between 1970 and 1975, should plummet to 0.9 percent a year by the late 1980s, the economists said.

In fact, the report said, the labor force probably peaked in 1977. The chief reason is the declining birth rate since the early 1960s and, thus, fewer teenagers entering the work force.

Community Development Funds Weighed At Meet

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer

The first of two public hearings required in the application process for over $1,250,000 in fourth year Community Development funds was held Thursday night by the City Co...

The public session was conducted to give local citizens the opportunity to make funding recommendations and suggestions and also to allow the CD staff to present departmental proposals and review the 1978-79 funding situation.

The Department of Housing and Urban Development requires the public hearings to encourage citizen input. A second session is scheduled for the Council's February 9 meeting and adoption of the program is expected at that time.

John Schofield, the city's Community Development director, explained the objectives of the federal block grant program and reviewed the activities that are eligible for funding consideration. The city is charged with the responsibility for fund disposal under the CD program, he said.

He pointed out that activities that benefit low and moderate income families and contribute to the elimination of blight must be given priority in the program implementation.

According to Schofield, six neighborhood meetings were held in November and December to afford residents the opportunity to address needs and request funding areas for the upcoming program year.

Seven funding activities surfaced at the neighborhood sessions, he said, including job training and counseling; crime prevention; drug abuse counseling; housing rehabilitation, neighborhood improvements; improved and more diverse recreation; and citizen participation training.

Participants in the meetings stressed the need for a job training center, geared toward the area of minority youth unemployment, it was reported.

Listing Deadline

Pitt County property owners must list their real and personal property for tax purposes by January 31 or face a penalty for late listing.

Pitt Tax Supervisor Phillip Michaels said this morning that the listing places will be opened a half-day tomorrow and all day Monday and Tuesday so persons who have not listed their property may do so.

Michaels reminded those individuals that list by mail that their mail listings must be postmarked before midnight January 31 — not simply dropped in a mail box before midnight — in order to avoid the late-listing penalty.

The tax official emphasized that persons should bring their Social Security number and motor vehicle registration cards with them when they come to list their property.

SMOKY DOCTORS' OFFICE

I have children with allergies and must take them for weekly shots at a doctors' office where everyone in the waiting room is smoking. When I questioned the nurse about the patients being allowed to smoke in the waiting room, she said my children are not the only ones to be considered. I know she's right, but I'm going there and paying these doctors good money to have them try to help my children outgrow their allergies. My children are genuinely distressed by this cigarette smoke they must face there each and every week. I know it's asking a smoker a lot not to smoke during whatever period he or she might have to wait in a doctors' office, but most of them could step right outside the door. You'd think doctors, of all people, would realize the severity of breathing problems for people with allergies and other respiratory ailments and ask those in their waiting room to refrain from smoking. Utilities Body Had Workshop On Alternatives

The Greenville Utilities Commission last night cancelled a scheduled meeting for the purpose of selecting an alternative 201 Facilities Plan and held a workshop instead.

The Commission cancelled the meeting because it wants to consider in more detail alternative plan No. 2 which would involve the upgrading of the existing plant at a limited flow rate and constructing a new plant on the north side of the Tar River to accomodate a balance of the projected waste water flow.

Alternative plan No. 1 would only involve updating the existing plant, located south of Tar River. Orman Whichard, consulting engineer for Olsen Associates in Greenville, told the Commission that even though plan No. 2 is somewhat more extensive, it would only cost about $50,000 more than alternative plan No. 1. However, Whichard said he would like an opportunity to re-examine the estimates.

Director Charles Horne suggested that the Commission invite state representatives to Greenville next week to get a firsthand look at the alternative plans being considered and to visit the existing plant and the proposed site for plan No. 2. Members of the Board concurred that it would be best to discuss with the state the potential for expansion of the proposed plan No. 2.

Although, alternative plan No. 1 seems the most cost-effective, the Board feels the existing site is too limited in available space and would become obsolete within five to seven years. Following its meeting with the state, the commission will meet again to consider final selection of an alternative plan.

Writing Award To Carol Tyer

CHAPEL HILL — Carol Tyer, staff writer for The Daily Reflector, won third place in the feature writing category at the North Carolina Press Association's 53rd annual Press Institute here last night.

Mrs. Tyer, a member of the Reflector staff since 1966, took third place among newspapers under 15,000 circulation for a feature entitled "Cancer Made Lauretta Grow". The article, published May 22, 1977, dealt with a father's thoughts about how his 22-year-old daughter — the mother of four — faced her illness and came to cope with her impending death from terminal cancer.

Mrs. Tyer, since joining The Daily Reflector staff, has previously taken first place in the news or feature series category from the N.C. Press Association and received awards from the North Carolina Press Women in photography, feature writing and women's interest areas. She has also been honored by the N.C. Association for Retarded Children for exceptional coverage in that field.

The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Blackley of Farmville, Mrs. Tyer attended Farmville High School, Campbell College and East Carolina University.

A member of the Falkland Presbyterian Church, she is married to Ruel Tyer. The couple lives with their daughters Amy, 10, and Olive, 8, near Falkland.

Two Young Farmers Awarded Annual Course Scholarships

Two young farmers from Pitt County have been selected for scholarships provided by local banks to attend the 26th Annual Modern Farming Short Course to be held at McKimmon Center in Raleigh beginning next week.

David L. Carraway, 21, of Falkland and Michael R. Tyson, 20, of Ayden, are the two who will be attending the course beginning Monday, Jan. 30 and continuing through Friday, Feb. 10.

The course deals with all methods of farming— the old reliable, the modern new, and in part, a look at the future. Other elements of the course deal with the opportunity for farmers to learn how their state school of agriculture and Life Sciences can serve them.

Among topics to be presented at the short course are ones such as commodity legislation, estate planning, farm planning of producer marketing, pesticide use and management, farm income tax, soil fertility management, farm safety and mechanization, and environmental quality.

Carraway, a graduate of North Pitt High School, is married to the former Lydia Dixon, and they have one young son, Lee. David's principal crops are corn and tobacco.

Tyson, a ... bachelor, is a graduate of ... ilton High School and raises soybeans and tobacco.

The scholarship program is under the auspices of the Pitt County Agriculture Extension Agent. Local banks providing funds for the scholarship are Bank of North Carolina, N.A., Branch Banking and Trust Co., Edgecombe Bank and Trust Co., First Citizens Bank and Trust Co., First State Bank, First Union National Bank of N. C., N. ... ational Bank, Planters Na... Bank and Trust Co., Southern Bank and Trust Co., and Wachovia Bank and Trust Co., N.A.

Exotic Produce Trend Is Booming Throughout U.S.

By JOSEPH ST. AMANT

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — A grocer in Harrison, Ark., population 8,867, sells napa cabbage, cooking bananas called plantains, egg roll and wonton wrappers and a crisp Mexican vegetable called jicama.

A large chain supermarket in Des Moines stocks many Chinese vegetables, "things like gobo root, taro root, bean sprouts and gu chow (Chinese mustard)," says assistant produce manager Barry Brauch.

Consumers in Springfield, Mo., buy such exotica as spaghetti squash, tofu (Japanese bean curd), cherimoyas and carambolas (two varieties of tropical fruit).

Spokesmen in the produce industry give Frieda Caplan of Los Angeles much of the credit for the relatively new popularity of exotic fruits and vegetables throughout the United States.

"We're considered the world's major marketer (of fresh fruits and vegetables)," Mrs. Caplan said of her Produce Specialties, Inc.

The business grosses "well over" $5 million a year, she said in an interview.

When she can't find what she wants, she persuades farmers and fruit growers to grow things for her company.

Among old-fashioned favorites whose comeback she is currently promoting are salsify, a root vegetable nicknamed oyster root, and quince, a tree fruit for cooking that looks like a knobby apple with the texture of a pear.

Her promotional campaigns are aimed at women. Surveys show they make seven of 10 retail purchases in the U.S.

"Consumers have been begging for exotic foods for years," she said. "They're always looking for something different."

She said management starts trends and newspaper and magazine articles keep them going and growing.

Her packaging also helps. Labels for Frieda's Finest brand produce carry cooking and serving suggestions and recipes.

For example, shallot labels suggest: "If garlic is too harsh for you, or onion too strong, then substitute shallots. Remove outer skin of each clove, then slice, dice, chop or mince, according to the recipes."

Mrs. Caplan urges retailers to use display cards showing food values, to take advantage of the new stress on nutrition and slimness.

"Nutrition is the hottest word on the national market today," she said."There is a creeping revolution that is leading to a literal explosion of sales in fresh produce. The trend is away from fatty, sugary and over-processed foods."

A 20-year veteran of the produce business, Mrs. Caplan said a few retailers in major cities always have carried exotic produce, but shoppers had to search for the stores.

Some still do. A cooperative wholesale warehouse in Springfield, Mo., with 300 member retailers in Missouri, Kansas, Oklahoma and Arkansas recently got a phone call from an oriental woman who had moved from Los Angeles to a small town in northeast Missouri. She wanted to know where she could buy fresh oriental produce. She was referred to a retail market in St. Joseph, Mo., population 72,691, only 90 miles away.

Mrs. Caplan said the popularity of what some call "funny food" began to grow in the 1960s, and really took off seven or eight years ago when a giant supermarket chain began stocking and promoting it.

Her own efforts to stimulate demand include speeches and television appearances. She also sells inexpensive paperback cookbooklets by Sybil Henderson on Oriental and Mexican cookery.

She has a full-time adviser to farmers on her staff and a marketing specialist, Cathy Perkins, who says:

"Our business is to take something common to one group and sell it to another. For example, fresh black-eyed peas are common in the South. We sell them in Seattle and Minneapolis."

When Frieda Caplan first went into business for herself in the 1960s, kiwi fruit and shiitake mushrooms were only grown abroad, in such places as New Zealand and Japan. Now California farmers are beginning to grow them, too, in what could be the start of another trend: foreign produce grown in America.

Should Girl Suffer Because Of Mother?

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1978 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc

DEAR ABBY: Something has come up that I don't know how to handle. My 11-year-old daughter has a best friend I'll call Becky. Becky is a sweet girl, but her mother is a tramp.

She ran her husband off when he objected to the way she carried on with other men. In the meantime, Becky's mother entertains men friends night and day. Apparently she has no shame before her children from the things Becky has told my daughter. Some of the goings-on in that house are unreal!

I've told my daughter the facts of life, but it's nothing compared to what Becky has told her! What do you suggest? Should I forbid my daughter to have anything more to do with her friend? It hardly seems fair, but, Abby, I am stumped.

NEEDS ADVICE

DEAR NEEDS: It is highly unlikely that your daughter will be corrupted by anything she hears from her girlfriend. It would be unfair to punish the child for her mother's behavior.

You could do Becky a tremendous favor by making her especially welcome in your home, where wholesome attitudes and decency prevail. She needs understanding and kindness—not punishment and rejection for a situation for which she is blameless.

DEAR ABBY: My mother, a beautiful woman of 53, recently married a widower of 57. Daddy died two years ago and this man's wife died a year ago. Mom and "Pops" (as I call him) seemed made for each other.

It all started when Pops moved into Mom's home. Mom always had an 8 by 10 colored picture of my father (whom I'll call "Daddy") on the TV. Pops placed an 8 by 10 colored picture of his deceased wife on the TV beside it.

Next time we went to Mom's, she had another picture of Daddy—in his hunting outfit—on her bureau. Soon Pops placed a picture of his deceased wife on the bureau. This game has been going on until it's become ridiculous.

Nobody says anything about it, but I'm sure there's been a few words between Mom and Pops. Should I mention it? I'm an only child and I'm very close to Mom. My husband told me to keep quiet.

CONCERNED

DEAR CONCERNED: With a bright husband like yours, you don't need any help from Dear Abby.

DEAR ABBY: We are a group of office employees with a problem that desperately needs to be solved. There is a certain salesman in our company who always wears an overpowering cologne. The smell is so overbearing that it actually nauseates some of us. After he has left the room, the smell of his cologne lingers for hours.

We've tried joking with him about it, but he takes it as a compliment and continues to use the cologne.

Before we consider gas masks, please tell us how to get our message across.

NAUSEATED

DEAR NAUSEATED: Quit "joking" with him, and tell him in all seriousness that his fragrance disagrees with many in the office, and to please either use less or none at all!

15th Annual Charity Ball Set For Feb. 3

Preparations for the Greenville Service League's 15th annual Charity Ball are well underway. Proceeds from the ball, to be held Feb. 3, will benefit the Laughinghouse Hospital Fund, which provides assistance for needy patients.

The theme of this year's ball is "A Visit To Olde Williamsburg" and Service League members have been researching materials to achieve an authentic re-creation.

Mrs. Norwood Whitehurst, decorations chairman, has been gathering dried flowers and plants since June for table decorations. Mrs. Allen Taylor and Mrs. A. Ferguson, food co-chairmen, made menu selections from "The Williamsburg Cookbook." Mrs. Bernard Vick has been working on handmade period costumes for the usherettes.

Several league members have made trips to Williamsburg, Va., to gather ideas including Mrs. Frank Layne, Mrs. Percy Cox, Mrs. Don McGlohon and Mrs. Robert Woronoff.

Other committee chairmen include Mrs. Hubert Bryant, Mrs. Richard Gammon, Mrs. Thomas Mallison Jr., Mrs. Lawton Nisbet, Mrs. W. C. Taylor Jr., Mrs. Charles Wilkerson Jr., Mrs. Jack Whichard, Mrs. Charles Carter, Mrs. C. L. Lupton and Mrs. Herbert Carter.

The overall ball chairman is Mrs. H. Boyd Lee.

The ball will be held at the Greenville Golf and Country Club. An added feature will be an extra fund-raising event during the evening with proceeds to benefit the Greenville Rescue Squad.

Want a quickly put together first course for a company dinner? On a platter lined with salad greens arrange herring fillets in wine sauce (drained), sliced or julienne cooked beets dressed with sour cream and horseradish, and quartered hard-cooked eggs. Tomatoes (sliced or the cherry variety) and cucumbers (scored and sliced) may also garnish the platter. With this as a first course, no salad need be served.

Credit Women Hear Dr. Long

The Greenville Credit Women-International held its meeting Tuesday evening at the Three Steers with President Carol Hardee presiding.

Dr. Susan Long, assistant professor in the School of Business, ECU, presented the State President's Project "Women: To Your Credit."

Her program centered around the Equal Credit Opportunity Act which has caused the availability of credit for women to expand when it became effective Oct. 28, 1975. However, she stated that this act does not guarantee you access to credit simply because you are a woman, but it does guarantee that you will have the same access to credit as a man in your financial situation.

She stated that another law which one should be aware of is the Fair Credit Reporting Act, which took effect in April, 1971. This act requires that creditors provide an explanation of the reasons for rejection of a credit applicant within 30-100 days if the applicant wants to know why credit was denied. Applicants for credit shall be provided with information from any credit records used to determine whether credit would be granted and creditors cannot charge interest on disputed amounts or adversely affect a credit rating while a complaint is being investigated.

She also gave information regarding extending credit to single, married, divorced and widowed women.

President Hardee announced that the Dixie Council Conference will be held April 21-25 in Orlando, Fla., at the Hyatt House and the state conference will be held May 28-29 at the Radisson Hotel, Charlotte.

Guests welcomed were Marian Hardee with Southern Bank, Ayden, Sue Venters, Planters Bank, Ayden, Jackie Arnold, NCNB, Charles Hardee, local club sponsor, and prospective member, Leigh Shumaker with Morgan Printers.

It was announced that an initiation ceremony will be conducted in February for new members, Shirley Pitt, Doris Price and Lillie Darden. The announcement of the scholarship recipient will also be announced month.

There will be a joint meeting of the Greenville, Kinston and Rocky Mount clubs in March with the program centered on "Motivation."

How About Muskrat For Lunch?

SMYRNA, Del. (AP) — Every Wednesday from December until mid-March, in addition to the usual cheeseburgers, steaks and seafood, the patrons of Ernest Council's Hunting Lodge and Restaurant can order a "muskrat dinner."

According to a hand-painted cardboard sign on the wall near the front door, $4.50 buys a plate of "muskrat, raw fried potatoes, stewed tomatoes, roll and a trip to the open salad bar."

Council says this is the third consecutive year that he has offered muskrat during the trapping season. He says that on a good day, 200 to 300 customers will come in and order the muskrat special. "It's like a fish fry."

"Muskrat's the best" of the small wild animals such as rabbit, Council declares.

Muskrats, 9-to 13-inch rodents with long tails and brown fur, are also called "marsh rabbits" by local residents. Others just call them "rats."

They are clean animals, says waitress Connie Thompson. She says the muskrats are dried, skinned and parboiled with onion, salt and pepper. Then they are cut up like a chicken, floured and fried.

Council also sells the pelts from the animals, which weigh an average of two to three pounds.

David Frost Says Wallace Decided Nixon Move

By MALCOLM N. CARTER
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Richard Nixon is quoted in a forthcoming book by David Frost as saying that he decided to resign the presidency only after Alabama Gov. George Wallace refused to use his influence to help rally congressional support for the beleagured president.

Nixon said his decision to resign was made two weeks before he stepped down Aug. 9, 1974, and came after Wallace refused his request to intercede with Rep. Walter Flowers to vote against impeachment in the House Judiciary Committee.

The governor's office Thursday confirmed the Nixon telephone call on July 23, 1974, and said Wallace told the president it would be "improper" for him to approach the Alabama Democratic congressman. Flowers was with the majority when the committee voted for impeachment.

Nixon said his chief of staff, Gen. Alexander Haig, "had been in the room as I was talking (to Wallace). And I said, and he recalls this very vividly, I said, 'Well, Al, there goes the presidency.'"

The 320-page book, a copy of which The Associated Press obtained in advance of the scheduled Monday release by William Morrow & Co., describes the events leading up to and including the 29 hours of interviews Frost conducted for five TV programs.

A secretary at Nixon's San Clemente, Calif., estate said Thursday that it was not immediately known if the former president would comment on the book.

Among other things, "I Gave Them a Sword" discloses some of the details of Frost's negotiations, gives Nixon's explanation for preserving the Watergate tapes and explores his willingness to renew the Vietnam War if the North Vietnamese broke the peace accord.

Frost said he paid Nixon $600,000 plus 20 percent of unspecified profits for the exclusive interviews. That could easily have amounted to more than $1 million for the former president.

During the taping of the five television shows, Frost said, Nixon was plagued by facial perspiration and kept handy a white handkerchief saturated with a drying agent to wipe his face.

Although "the visual impact was enormous," Frost said, he decided it would be unfair to show the former president's face when he dabbed at it or just before or afterward.

On the Watergate tapes, the former chief executive said he at first decided against destroying them in the belief that they would someday vindicate him.

He said he reasoned that to destroy them before they were subpoenaed "would have been an indication that I felt there were conversations on there that demonstrated that I was guilty."

And after the U.S. Court of Appeals ruled in October 1973 that special Watergate prosecutor Archibald Cox could demand nine of the tapes, to destroy the others would have "at least appeared to be an admission of 'I am trying to cover something up,'" Nixon said.

Nixon, who said during the third of the interviews that the president could sometimes break the law for the good of the country, also told Frost that he could have gotten Congress to authorize war again if the North Vietnamese violated the peace accord.

Nixon said he had offered "swift and severe retaliatory action" against the North Vietnamese as a way of getting President Nguyen Van Thieu of South Vietnam to accept peace.

"I felt that if the North Vietnamese, which they had so often done in the past, flagrantly and blatantly violated the agreement, that I could go to the country and to the Congress and get the support that was necessary to bring them into line."

have organized, Schofield said, and others asked for city assistance in setting up their organizations.

Department heads submitted their funding requests for the year, the director explained, and asked for a total of $1,922,000 in activities.

The requests included: Recreation Department, construction of a tennis complex at Evans Park, $130,000; Greenville Utilities, Southside project improvements, $84,000; Inspections, code enforcement, $38,000;

Redevelopment Commission, West Meadowbrook, South Evans, rehabilitation loans and grants, Southside (McClellan Street improvements), Central Business District, $1,545,000;

Police, additions to the crime prevention program, $15,000; Community Development, maintaining three staff members and expanded citizen participation program, $60,000; and administration, $50,000, for an overall departmental funding request of $1,922,000.

Schofield noted that program income for 1978-79 should total $1,630,000 with a break-down involving the $1,250,000 in fourth year entitlement funds, $175,000 in carry-over from 1977, $40,000 from the close-out of Shore Drive, and a parking deck funds transfer of $165,000.

The CD director recommended that $1,267,000 in projects be included for the fourth year program, including: acquisition of parking lots in the CBD, $165,000; GUCO Southside project improvements, $60,000, code enforcement, $38,000; West Meadowbrook acquisition, $255,000, relocation, $323,000, and demolition, $16,000; South Evans acquisition, $100,000; relocation, $100,000; rehabilitation, $85,000; crime prevention, $15,000; Community Development, $60,000; and administration, $50,000.

The program application must be approved by the Council by Feb. 15 and must be in HUD offices by March 1.

Shirley Morrison, president of the Third Street School PTA, asked the Council that funds be designated for playground equipment at the school. She cited the poor condition of the existing equipment in asking for funding consideration.

Boyd Lee, director of the Recreation and Parks Department, explained that the department decided to stress one major project in asking for CD funds this year. He noted that the request for tennis court construction at Evans Park would upgrade the facility and meet the city's five-year needs for tennis accomodations.

Lee requested the Council to consider the tennis complex funding and asked the Recreation Department be given an opportunity to list several smaller requests if the tennis funding is not approved.

Fire Chief Ray Smith asked that the city consider the need for a new fire station and rescue unit station in the North Greenville area. He said that the facilities will be needed in the near future.

In one additional item on the special agenda, the Council approved an ordinance amending the 1977-78 city budget to provide funds for the purchase of another bus for the transit operation.

Finalists Chosen

CHAPEL HILL — Six nominees from District I have been selected as finalists in competition for 1978 Morehead Awards to study at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

The announcement was made by Mebane Pritchett, executive director of the John Motley Morehead Foundation. Selection of finalists is based on academic achievement, and potential evidence of leadership and service, character and physical vigor.

Local finalists are: Charles Neal Coker, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Coker, 201 N. Third St., Pinetops; and Elvie Ann Willoughby, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James T. Willoughby, P.O. Box 14, Fountain.

Also, Cynthia Jane Browning, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Christopher G. Browning, 1202 Oakview Drive, Greenville, was selected as one of two alternates.

Church Holding Special Service

A special service will be held at 11 a.m. Sunday at Holy Trinity Church, located on Douglas Avenue.

Thelma B. Garrett will be the guest speaker.

The public is invited to attend.

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP — Former Governor Bob Scott has told friends he would accept a deputy U.S. Secretary of Agriculture post if one were offered to him.

Employees Honored At Special Dinner

Empire Brushes Inc. employees with five and ten years service were honored recently at the Greenville firm's annual recognition dinner at the Beef Barn.

During the session, 14 five-year employees were cited and ten employees were recognized for a decade of service at the local manufacturing facility.

Leon Wright, personnel manager, recognized the ten-year service honorees, including Daniel Brown Jr., Maude Barnes, Alice Tyre, Laura Nobles, Betty Scott, Janet Lee, Dale Pulliam, Loretta Eakes, Stuart Langley, and Iris Roberson.

Five-year employees introduced by Wright were Ella Baker, William Meeks, Johnny Little, Alice Harrell, Florence Forbes, Connie White, Joy Davenport, Robert Little Jr., Mattie Riggs, Linda Parker, Geneive Branch, Cecilia Walker, Willie Boyd, and Mary Council.

Plant Manager James A. Hecker offered his appreciation to the employees for their service efforts and related the firm's history of expansion and commitment to the community.

General Manager Joe Gantz and Fred Strom, treasurer, also thanked the employees for their contributions to the company.

Whitfield At Safety Session

Carl E. Whitfield, field representative eastern district Governor's Highway Safety Program, attended a Highway Safety Workshop at Wrightsville Beach Tuesday and Wednesday.

Topics were safety plans and accident problem identification.

Col. Edwin C. Guy, coordinator of the Governor's Highway Safety Program, presided at the meeting.

One More Swat For Tobacco

When one tobacco problem is solved in Washington another seems to pop up.

The latest swat at tobacco seems to be a $3 million cut in the tobacco research program conducted by the federal government.

That's the way it shows up in the budget which President Carter presented to Congress this week.

If the cut is made it would eliminate a research station in Granville County. The facility has been there for 50 years and it employs 30 people. Some of the important developments in the growing of tobacco have come out of the station. Dr. Thurston J. Mann, assistant director in charge of tobacco research at N. C. state said it had been "a vital part of the research effort on tobacco in North Carolina." The station has developed disease resistent varieties of tobacco.

It is really a bad situation when the administration proposes to cut $3 million in tobacco research, while HEW Sec. Joseph A. Califano is planning to throw away $28 million on a useless anti-smoking campaign.

Research can go in any direction and for tobacco, it could lead to a variety of tobacco which might be considered safer from a health standpoint. If you eliminate the research facilities then it follows there won't be research going on. Yet, that is what the administration proposes — all this while HEW wastes money.

Candidates Needed For An Election

Dr. John Tingelstad, chairman of the Chamber of Commerce education committee, said the School Board Election subcommittee is encouraging citizens to seek election to the school boards.

The subcommittee is particularly concerned about the city school board since members of that board will be elected for the first time this year.

There is always need for good strong leadership on any school board, and persons who feel that they have something to offer should consider seeking election.

THIS AFTERNOON

Model Development Law

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — A special study committee of the North Carolina General Assembly is treading ever so gingerly across everybody's property.

The subject under consideration is whether this state should adopt laws requiring every local government to set up uniform land use ordinances including subdivision development regulations, zoning restrictions, areas in which development would be permitted—and where it would not—and a host of other activities up to and including a State Land Planning Agency to see to it that the local programs are properly carried out, complied with over the years, and continuing review of various land-related activities at both state and local levels.

So touchy is this matter that the study commission chairman says he doesn't even want people to know he is connected with it. State Rep. Chris S. Barker, Jr., D-Craven County, told a recent meeting of the study group he "would prefer it not get out of this room what we are doing."

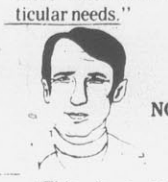

Keep It Quiet

Barker is up for re-election in the May primary, and added that he has not told his "homefolks" that he chairs this study.

The foundation on which the legislative committee is building is the American Law Institute Model Land Development Code. That organization often writes model legislation on a variety of topics which are then circulated nationwide to state legislature for study and adoption.

Many such proposals are embraced by state assemblies without major change. The Model Land Development Code, however, is carefully described as a source book for reference and study as states update and rewrite laws relating to planning and land-use legislation.

Philip P. Green, Jr., public law and government specialist with the Institute of Government at Chapel Hill, is a member of an advisory committee working on the model code at the American Law Institute. He thinks its primary usefulness will be as a "sales catalog, full of innovative ideas and carefully-drafted provision, from which (states) can select those which meet their particular needs."

NOBLITT

"This is a preliminary draft . . . it has not been promulgated or approved by the Council or the members of the American Law Institute. As an unpublished document intended for internal use this draft should not be generally circulated or distributed, nor should it be quoted from or cited or its substance disclosed in any public address or writing."

Local Emphasis

Essentially, the model code stresses local governmental control of land-use regulations; focuses on land planning; stresses coordination in planning, subdivision regulation, zoning, urban renewal, future street reservation, planned unit development, and numerous aspects of protective steps to guide the right kinds of development into the proper places while preserving others.

The model code devotes considerable attention to establishing planning agencies and guidelines, administrative procedure, ways to cause plans to produce specific results, etc.

Perhaps most significantly, the model code provides that the numerous and often conflicting local ordinances variously contained in zoning, subdivision, urban renewal and other sources be combined into a local Development Ordinance. Tools are built in to allow more governmental control over land use by purchase to block undesired activity.

At this early stage the study commission favors the model code as a guideline for local governments which they may adopt by local option, but with a set of minimum state-imposed provisions which would be required of all county or municipal governments.

Life Under The Cloud

RIDGEFIELD, CONN. (AP) — Low gripes under leaden skies and a falling barometer:

HOW COME if man is gifted with a superior intelligence, he is the only animal around pushing a snow shovel?

HOW COME after waiting months and months to see the musical "Annie," I end up with a seat in the row behind the Portland Trail Blazers?

HOW COME every time I fly the only guy with his seat tipped back is directly in front of me and I get his bald pate in my lap for lunch and all the way to Vegas?

HOW COME TV provides instant replays from every possible camera angle of all those fumbles and dropped passes in the Super Bowl but never reprises those Dallas cheerleaders?

HOW COME the book I want is always missing from the library shelves, but there are always six copies of the one I just plunked down $10.95 for?

HOW COME when going through immigration at Kennedy Airport in New York or London's Heathrow I invariably get behind a gentleman from Bangladesh who lost his passport in the last Ganges flood or some guy who just had a hair transplant and can explain in great detail and documentation why he doesn't look anything like his picture?

HOW COME going through customs it's my suitcase they decide to toss, tumble and fluff dry and not the carpet bag of the hippie ahead of me with the gold ring in his ear and the sitar on his back?

HOW COME THE NEW SIMPLIFIED Internal Revenue forms manage to make it through the snow drifts and over the icy roads but the pay check is still lost somewhere in the storm?

HOW COME buying a commuter ticket at Grand Central Terminal I'm always in line behind a sweet little old lady who wants to go to Missoula, Montana, with a stopover in Cedar Rapids to visit her sister and a few hours between trains in Chicago to meet an old friend, a window seat as far as Dubuque and an upper birth out of Omaha?

HOW COME it always snows up a blizzard when I have tickets for the opera, but unseasonal thaws set in when I'm booked into a ski lodge for the weekend?

HOW COME when I switch over to the short line at the post office I wind up behind a chatty old dinosaur buying nine money orders, insuring four parcels and inquisitive about the new Social Security payments and how to renew her passport?

HOW COME the state trooper pulls me over and not the four dudes that passed me in their lowslung sports cars?

HOW COME the ignition kicks to life on the coldest mornings when I have to go to work and could use an alibi but gives off a death rattle when there's a free beer blast down at the hall?

Budget Deficit Bigger

By JONATHAN WOLMAN
AP Urban Affairs Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter's first full-year budget contains a much greater deficit than announced, says the chairman of the House Budget Committee, because the president's forecasts on both spending and revenues are too optimistic.

Rep. Robert Giaimo, D-Conn., told the nation's big-city mayors Thursday that the budget deficit under Carter's 1979 fiscal plan would likely be "in the $70 billion range" rather than the $60.6 billion forecast by Carter.

In a frank discussion of political and budget realities, Giaimo and Sen. Edmund Muskie, D-Maine, the Senate Budget Committee chairman, told the mayors they face an uphill struggle in their call for more urban aid, in part because Congress is nervous about increasing a huge deficit that Giaimo described as underestimated to begin with.

"He (Carter) talks about tax reform that's going to bring in an extra $9 billion. Don't you believe it," Giaimo told the mayors. "You can add roughly $7 billion more (to the deficit) based on that estimate.

"And in spending — there are massive areas where you know Congress is going to insist upon adding funds." He said many members of Congress are unhappy with the defense budget and believe "this is the year" to increase it.

"And in the agricultural area, you know what's happening. Before we even get to talking about new urban initiatives, we could find ourselves in the $70 billion (deficit) range. I think $70 billion is more than Congress or the public will allow."

Giaimo told the U.S. Conference of Mayors that city officials should seek to revamp current urban spending rather than try to pry more money out of the budget.

"Tell us what we can do," he said. "But tell us without saying you need an additional $500 million or an additional $1 billion."

The mayors conference is calling for an additional $11 billion, but Giaimo's remarks — coming from a moderate

THE INSIDE REPORT

Presidential Frustration

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — When ten big-city mayors, meeting that night at New York's Gracie Mansion, publicly deplored the lack of any urban program in the President's State of the Union message, they signalled that Jimmy Carter's great dilemma on domestic policy has intensified, not diminished, after one year in office.

President Carter has been seeking an innovative urban policy reducing the federal role. But the mayors and the federal bureaucracy want the same old programs — slicked up a bit with perhaps some cosmetics — at considerably higher levels of spending. Given that clash of intentions, submission of an urban plan has been postponed.

The same dilemma permeates most of Mr. Carter's domestic policy, accounting for the internal contradiction of his State of the Union message. While avowing a neo-Jeffersonian ideal of limited government' it contains a neo-Rooseveltian agenda for big government.

This contradiction results less from indecision than frustration. Although Mr. Carter would clearly prefer to play Jefferson, the liberal-labor-minorities coalition that put him in office demands that he play Roosevelt. "This President's biggest problem is his constituency," one cabinet member told us. But the preponderance of administration officials side with that constituency.

No issue exemplifies this situation better than the urban question. One urban plan prepared by the Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) was sent to the White House and then shipped back before the President saw it, with instructions to reduce proposed spending. Rewritten without dollar amounts, it was then rejected a second time.

The Carter White House is not one for clear articulation of internal disputes, but the President hinted at what was bothering him in a meeting with Office and Management and Budget (OMB) officials just before Christmas. His voice growing softer as he grew angrier, the President told the bureaucrats he will not consider dollar amounts until there is a clear program. That sent OMB and HUD technicians back to the drawing boards.

The President's intent became clearer when he received a staff memorandum from a Senate subcommittee recommending that "the President's urban policy should include powerful incentives for the states to become more involved in helping their cities." Mr. Carter bucked it over to HUD with the marginal note to "Push This" as reported by the Jan. 14

But HUD is emotionally and intellectually incapable of "pushing" any plan to substitute local for federal power. HUD officials, both political and civil service, want existing federal programs that the President does not like. To HUD policymakers, there are two options for urban aid: present programs at existing dollar levels, or present programs at higher dollar levels.

The mayors fully agree. They deplore incentive schemes for state or local funding but want Mr. Carter to expand grant programs without more soul searching. Thus the anger of the mayors watching the President over television at Gracie Mansion last Thursday night climaxes a year of growing irritation.

Conversely, Mr. Carter lately has been urged to reestablish his largely abandoned 1976 campaign theme by pressing for limited government — privately urged by some staffers, publicly urged by a few Carterite politicians, such as Rep. Elliott H. Levitas of Atlanta. Meeting with the President last Wednesday, Levitas was distressed to find 17 separate administration programs going before Congress this year.

So, Levitas was cheered by the State of the Union's playing down the role of government. "What I found disconcerting," Levitas told us, was a 33-page supplemental statement listing all manner of government programs. "If he goes with the speech and forgets the 33 pages," Levitas added, "it will be good for him, good for us, good for the country."

That view may approximate public opinion but not the Democratic party. The party's dominant liberal-labor faction views Mr. Carter's State of the Union

Other Editors Say Changed His Mind

(The Sanford, N.C. Herald)

Superior Court Judge E. Maurice Braswell of Fayettville, who is well known in Lee County where he frequently holds court including this past fall, confesses in an interview in an area newspaper to having a change of heart on the merit selection of judges.

The judge is quoted as saying he has changed his mind on that in recent years. Several years in the past, including the years when he was president of the North Carolina Conference of Superior Court Judges, he favored merit selection. However, he added, tye type of merit selection as that proposed and sent to the legislature has never been adopted.

"I have come around in my own thinking to believe that the best thing for the people is direct election and henceforth I'm going to support that'" he said.

When asked why he had changed his views Judge Braswell went on to say that without detracting from any judge named by the present system adopted by Gov. Jim Hunt, that in the end it was the governor who had to make the appointment and he does not think it has achieved the type of merit selection by which he would define merit selection. He has decided he would prefer the governor when a vacancy exists to make his appointment speedily, and get it behind him.

In short, he thinks it would be better if politics is going to be in it, to let the governor appoint and the people elect.

That's been our sentiments for many years, Judge, but we would have the superior court judges elected by districts where people know them better and let the appointive judges be subject to assignment statewide.

40 Years Ago Today

January 27, 1938

With the Roosevelt Birthday ball only a few days off, the various committees for the affair declared that indications are this years' dance will be the biggest in the history of the event.

The ticket and founders' certificate committee reports that communities throughout the county are making large purchases, insuring a large crowd for the floor shows and dance.

The Senate killed a proposal for drastic limitation of debate on the anti-lynching bill, against which southern senators have been filibustering since the session started.

The vote was 52-37.

The vote against debate limitation gave encouragement to the southern bloc that the anti-lynching measure would be shelved.

Strength For Today

BAD HABIT TRAP

The inhabitants of a small island in the West Indies have devised a unique method of catching fish. They have built a large aquarium a short distance out from shore, the walls of which are pierced with many small holes. Fish, when they are small, can enter the aquarium through these holes and feed on the food provided for them in generous quantities.

Under these circumstances the fish grow rapidly, and are of course unable to get back into the open sea because they cannot pass through the small holes. Upon reaching their mature growth they are scooped up and sent to market.

Bad habits constitute a trap similar to this aquarium. Like the little fish, we go through a small aperture in response to desire, and then feed lustily upon the food that is given us for our destruction. Belatedly, if we try to escape, we find that our habits are now too large to allow us to get back into the open sea.

Sore Test For Fed Chairman

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — The Carter administration wants less friction with the Federal Reserve, but already it has presented its nominee for Fed chairman, G. William Miller, a formula for sandpaper.

Whether Miller will use it, as Arthur Burns was wont to do, may depend on the degree of diplomatic skill that the former Textron chairman can muster. He will be sorely tested.

Even before he takes office he has been notified that the federal budget deficit for fiscal 1979, which begins Oct. 1, will again be in excess of $60 billion, and might conceivably be considerably higher.

Financing that debt will be Bill Miller's job as Fed chairman. It might appear that various private institutions will put up the money, but it is the Fed that makes it all possible by its money policy.

That is, the Fed will have to make sure there is enough money in the economy to make that deficit financing work. And at times like these, there is always the danger that more money means more inflation.

Perhaps it is in the nature of the job, but almost all Fed chairmen have ranked inflation as the No. 1 danger to the nation. Burns never, ever relaxed his vigilance. Miller will not be able to either.

One way in which he can counter inflationary tendencies is to maintain the money supply at a relatively restricted rate, thus forcing up interest rates and making it more difficult to borrow.

The consequence of so doing, of course, is to slow economic expansion — and economic expansion is what the Carter administration is depending upon to create jobs.

No forecasts need be hazarded at this point, prior to Miller's installation as chairman, but if the Fed's top priority is in conflict with the administration's goals, then friction is likely.

Can Miller, therefore, avoid friction with the president? Will the smoothness of his personal relations, for which he won recognition in private industry, be sufficient to placate the administration?

It does not end there. The Fed generally has found itself aligned with the interests of big business, a similarity of views likely to continue at least for a time under the new chairman.

Big business, however, is hardly enchanted with the Carter administration's understanding of the nation's economic needs or with its approach to meeting them.

Tax proposals aimed at encouraging business investment are believed by some to be insufficient, and in fact only a rebate of the higher expenses they have incurred from higher Social Security taxes.

What is needed, business is saying, are substantial incentives to invest in new, enlarged or modernized plants that will permit more work to be produced at relatively lower costs. That is, more productivity.

Few people are likely to understand this better than Miller, whose Textron company is among the 100 largest U.S. manufacturers. And yet, it would seem that he is saddled with a tight money Fed policy.

Tight money, of course, is anathema to investors, including small businesses who often provide the technological improvements that lead to greater productivity.

Recreation Basketball For Grifton Children

GRIFTON — Boys and girls ages 9-12 who attend Grifton School may participate in a recreation basketball program for seven Saturdays, beginning this week, Jan. 28.

Hours will be from 1-5 p.m., but all children will not report at the same hour. Each group will play approximately one and a half hours.

Acting on a request by Bobby McLawhorn of the Grifton Recreation Commission, the Grifton School Advisory Council on Jan. 9, gave permission for the Grifton School gym to be used for the program, and asked school principal Ike Baldree to work out conditions of the agreement after consulting with Tom Craft of the Superintendent's Office.

Key points stipulated by the school system are that participation will be restricted to Grifton School students only, that sneakers or tennis shoes must be worn, that school equipment will not be used, that the outside area is to be kept clean, and that the Grifton Recreation Commission will be responsible for any damages.

Rent for the gym will be waived if these conditions are followed, but the Recreation Commission will be responsible for paying the school custodian for four hours per day during the program.

Sign-up slips have been distributed this week at Grifton School to interested children, and these must be returned to school this week in order for a child to participate in the program.

Plans are for practice on skills the first two weeks of the program, then for teams to play games. Teams will be set up by coaches, using information on the sign-up sheets to assure evenly matched teams with some children of each age on each team. Teams will be co-ed.

Coaches will notify children who have signed up when they should report to the gym.

Soon Mailing Report On Benefits For '77

Workers in the Greenville-Pitt County area who were unemployed and received benefits from the State during 1977 will soon receive notices from the Employment Security Commission of their total payments during the year.

Jim Hannan, manager of the Employment Security Commission's Greenville Job Service office, says that unemployment payments are taxed by the state and should be reported on personal income tax reports.

State unemployment benefits are not taxed by the federal government.

The Employment Security Commission central office in Raleigh will begin mailing information on payments to about 300,000 workers on Feb. 6. The same information will be provided to the State Revenue Dept. Last year, the commission paid in excess of $128 million in unemployment checks under various state and federal programs.

Although claimants are instructed at the time they file to keep records of unemployment payments for income tax purposes, many fail to do so. It is for this reason that the new method has been instigated by the Employment Security Commission to provide accurate information to the claimant as well as to revenue officials, Hannan reports.

language as either political rhetoric not to be taken seriously or as outrageous quasi-Republican posturing. That is also prevailing opinion within his own administration. The President's inclination to appease this view while seeking new approaches has brought only frustration. Accordingly, he must soon choose between Elliott Levitas and his 1976 campaign theme on the one hand, or the mayors, big labor and minority pressure groups on the other. The eventual choice will reveal not only the final shape of his urban plan but also how strong a President Jimmy Carter can be.

Democrat — indicate the city officials are waging a quixotic fight for such a big boost.

The mayors are lobbying now for a big increase in urban programs because Carter is to unveil his urban policy in mid-March and is expected to release a specific budget request for urban aid at that time.

Administration officials say money is available within the budget, tucked away in a $3 billion White House contingency fund. But Muskie and Giaimo both indicated that the contingency fund will probably not survive their panels' scrutiny.

PWP Meeting Announced

Greenville Chapter No. 1058 of Parents Without Partners Inc. will hold a discussion meeting Friday at 7:30 p. m. at Jarvis Memorial United Methodist Church.

Early Debate Urged On Panama

By RICHARD PYLE
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — With approval by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee almost guaranteed, senators now are talking about beginning floor debate on the Panama Canal treaty within two weeks — debate that may last a month or more.

A favorable vote by the foreign relations committee — virtually preordained in an unusual arrangement by Senate Democratic and Republican leaders — was expected today.

Praised by colleagues for having forged a "consensus" that might assure the treaty's approval, Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., and Minority Leader Howard Baker, R-Tenn., nevertheless are not predicting final victory.

Baker told the committee Thursday that "the battle is not over," and said his count shows the proposal somewhere short of the two-thirds majority — 67 votes — it needs for Senate ratification.

The committee itself lined up 12-1 for the treaty — provided certain key changes are made — with two members, Sen. John Sparkman, D-Ala., the chairman, and Sen. Richard Stone, D-Fla., withholding their decisions. The lone dissenter was Sen. Robert Griffin, R-Mich., who said he felt the treaty was "fatally flawed" in several respects.

The committee was to plow through some 22 proposed amendments, reservations and understandings, with the caveat that it would attach none to the treaty, but merely recommend that certain ones be adopted on the Senate floor.

That strategy, worked out jointly by Byrd and Baker, was designed to attract as many senators as possible as co-sponsors on the all-important amendment spelling out U.S. rights to use and defend the canal after the year 2000, when the waterway would be turned over to Panama.

A statement issued by President Carter and Panama's Gen. Omar Torrijos last fall sought to make it clear that the United States would have priority passage in wartime and could use military force if necessary to protect the canal's neutrality.

But Byrd, Baker and a growing number of other senators have decided this language must be incorporated into the treaty itself, despite objections by the Carter administration that any substantive changes might require renegotiation or a second national referendum in Panama.

Byrd told the committee on Thursday the administration now "fully understands" the change is needed, "and that it most likely will be in the form of an amendment."

Treaty backers say that because the Carter-Torrijos memo was issued before the Oct. 23 plebiscite which approved the treaty by a 2-1 majority, even an amendment adding that to the pact would not make another vote mandatory.

Recalling there had originally been many different interpretations of the treaty's security provisons, Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, said the Carter-Torrijos memo and the Byrd-Baker agreement had "demonstrated how consensus can grow out of confusion."

Symposium Slated On Toxic Chemicals

ECU News Bureau

A one-day symposium on problems of toxic chemicals in the workplace has been scheduled for Feb. 3 in the department of chemistry, East Carolina University.

The topic should be of interest to anyone dealing with chemicals in their work, a department spokesman said.

Co-sponsors of the symposium are the ECU Department of Chemistry Chemistry, Union Carbide Corp., the Eastern North Carolina section of the American Chemical Society and the National American Chemical Society. The program will begin at 9 a.m. in Flanagan building at ECU.

Participants from the Research Triangle Institute are Drs. J. J. Kearney and J. L. S. Hickey talking on carcinogens in the workplace. Dr. James Aftosmis from the Haskell Labs division of DuPont Co., Wilmington, Del., will talk on the identification of hazardous materials.

A seminar at 3 p.m. will address the problem of developing a Toxic Substances Contral Act presently in Congress with the aid of The Environmental Protection Agency. This afternoon talk will be by Dr. D. G. Barnes, on leave from St. Andrews College to the Environmental Protection Agency.

All interested persons are invited to attend either the whole day or any part. Further information can be obtained from the Chemistry Department, telephone 757-6711.

Two Collisions Here Yesterday

An estimated $975 property damage resulted from two collisions here yesterday.

Greenville police reported heaviest damage resulted from a 5:20 p.m. mishap at the intersection of Greenville Boulevard and 14th Street involving cars driven by Joyce Buck Langston of Ayden and Deborah Carol Burroughs of Shady Knoll Trailer Pk.

Police estimated damage from the mishap at $500 to the Burroughs car and $75 to the Langston vehicle.

An estimated $200 damage resulted to each of two cars involved in a 6:10 p.m. collision at the intersection of Tenth and Charles Streets.

Officers identified the drivers involved in that mishap as Caroline Revecca Blackwell of Route 4, Oxford and Patty Romero Little of 2907 Rose St.

Driver Charged In Early Hours

Isabella A. Malby of 1026 West Wright Rd. was charged with driving under the influence following investigation of a 3:20 a.m. mishap today in the 1400 block of Bast 14th Street.

Police reported the Malby car collided with a utility pole and mail box, causing an estimated $1,500 damage to the car, $100 damage to the pole and $50 damage to the mail box.

Forums At Farm Show

RALEIGH — Four Farm Credit Forums have been scheduled to be held at the upcoming Southern Farm Show at the N. C. State Fairgrounds. The forums, designed to explain types of credit available to farmers and farmer-owned cooperatives, will be held at 11 a.m. and at 2 p.m. on two days, Thursday and Friday, Feb. 2 and 3.

The Southern Farm Show will also include a large array of farm equipment, supplies and services; a Parade of Power that includes tractors from leading manufacturers; a livestock show and sale; and a concert in Dorton Arena featuring singer Marty Robbins.

Complimentary tickets to the Southern Farm Show—9:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. February 2, 3 and 4 — are available from Carolina Power and Light offices, FCX stores and Farm Credit Bureaus, or by writing to Southern Farm Show, 1945 Randolph Road, Charlotte, N. C. 28207. The complimentary tickets include a $1.00 discount to the Marty Robbins concert.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Joshua Eilberg, D-Pa., urged President Carter to speed up the firing of U.S. Attorney David Marston two days after Eilberg's name came to the attention of FBI agents who had just joined a Philadelphia corruption investigation, an FBI source says.

The source, who asked not to be identified, said investigators were told on Nov. 2 that Eilberg's law firm represented Hahnemann Hospital in Philadelphia to help obtain government financing for a $65 million expansion. That was the day the FBI began quizzing hospital officials about the financial arrangements for the expansion, the source said.

Two days later, on Nov. 4, the Pennsylvania Democrat called Carter to ask the president to expedite the removal of Marston, the U.S. attorney in Philadelphia, and Carter relayed the request to Attorney General Griffin Bell. Marston, a Republican, left office on Monday.

Meanwhile, the federal prosecutor heading the Hahnemann investigation in Philadelphia said Thursday that Eilberg technically was not "under investigation" when he called Carter.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Alan Lieberman said, however, that he told Assistant Attorney General Russell T. Baker Jr. last August that "sometime down the road" Eilberg "might possibly be involved in the investigation" of the hospital.

Since 1975, Eilberg's law firm reportedly has received $500,000 from Hahnemann, about five times what the hospital paid its previous law firm over a two-year period.

The Justice Department's criminal division is looking into whether Eilberg attempted to obstruct justice by pressing Carter for Marston's ouster. The key question is whether Eilberg knew of an investigation possibly involving him at the time he called Carter. Eilberg has denied having such knowledge.

The Justice Department earlier this week cleared Carter and Bell of any wrongdoing in the matter.

In another development, Justice Department sources confirmed Thursday that on Nov. 4, the day Eilberg called Carter, the department authorized Marston's office to seek immunity from prosecution for a key witness in the Hahnemann investigation.

The witness, Stephen Elko, is a former aide to another Pennsylvania Democrat, Rep. Daniel J. Flood, who is being investigated by federal prosecutors in Philadelphia, also about Hahnemann.

Elko was sentenced on Jan. 9 to three years in federal prison for accepting bribes, while working for Flood, to obtain government support for a chain of trade schools in California.

An aide to Eilberg said Thursday that the congressman did not know he might be under investigation in the Hahnemann matter until Dec. 16, when Marston's office subpoenaed financial records from his law firm.

The aide, who asked that his name not be used, said Eilberg "is still unaware of anything (in the investigation) that touches on him rather than the law firm."

Months before Eilberg called Carter and before anyone suggested that the congressman might be under investigation, according to the aide, Eilberg had asked Bell to remove Marston.

Wilmington 10 Action Earns Press Comment

By The Associated Press

Gov. Jim Hunt's action in the Wilmington 10 case drew critical editorial reaction from newspapers outside North Carolina, and mixed comment from papers inside the state.

The Kansas City Star said the decision not to pardon the defendants "left the United States as well as North Carolina subject to ridicule when discussing human rights."

The Wilmington 10 are nine black men and one white woman who were convicted following a grocery store firebombing. The woman had been paroled before Hunt went on state-wide television Monday night to announce he would shorten prison sentences of the men, but that he would not pardon them.

The governor's action made eight of the men eligible for parole consideration later this year. The ninth, the Rev. Ben Chavis, will be eligible for parole in 1980.

The Atlanta Constitution said Hunt "sort of took a middle road, no doubt hoping it will lead to an end to North Carolina's unwanted spotlight."

"North Carolina would have been better served if Gov. Hunt had dealt forthrightly with the claims that the trial and prosecution were unfair...," the Post continued. "It may well turn out that by avoiding the opportunity to address those claim, the governor has fanned the fire, not doused it."

But the Wall Street Journal said Hunt's decision in support of earlier appellate court rulings seemed to be "a reasonable position."

In Wilmington, where the case began, the Morning Star called Hunt's action "an equitable solution." The Durham Herald also believed the governor acted "wisely."

Among the most critical of the state's newspapers was the News and Observer of Raleigh, which said North Carolina "could have breathed a sigh of relief if the governor had mustered a few more ounces of compassion and political courage to commute the sentences of the nine remaining in jail to time already served."

The Greensboro Daily News called Hunt's action "only a partial compromise."

"A much more decisive, and no less honorable, choice for the governor would have been to commute the sentences to time already served. That would have released the defendants without impugning the integrity of the jury or the courts," the paper added.

"If the governor's decision came down to the question of the severity of the sentences, it is hard to see why he did not extend clemency one further degree and allow the defendants to be eligible for parole on the basis of time already served," said the Winston-Salem Journal.

'Fantasy Island' Makes Scene

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — While sampling stout in a Dublin pub a few years ago, I heard a world-weary fellow gargler sigh: "Ah, gee, I wish I could buy an island off the coast of somewhere."

It seems ABC has done just that. It's "Fantasy Island." It floats in Saturday night as an hour-long series featuring debonair Ricardo Montalban as the island owner and Hector Villehaize as his aide.

The premise, in case you missed the two TV movies that paled this frivolity, is that for a small fee Montalban will fly visitors to his island and give them any fantasy their hearts desire.

At the start of Saturday's premiere, one sees Villechaize in a bell tower, ringing the bell and crying, "De plane! De plane!"

Sure enough, one plops down and disgorges three souls in search of a fantasy. Two are plain Janes, played by Georgia Engel and Diana Canova. They seek the jet-set life.

The third, accompanied by his wife, is a famous escape artist, sort of a body-shirt Houdini played by Bert Convy. He wants the ultimate escape challenge — going AWOL from Devil's Island or a facsimile thereof.

When Villechaize sees the two plain Janes, who work at a trailer factory in Akron, Ohio, he does not think they have the potential to be rich, beautiful jet-setters.

In fact, he mutters to Montalban: "Dis time, boss, I think you've bitten off more than you can chew."

And Convy, well, three untidy-looking French guards whisk him off to Devil's Island or a facsimile thereof. It is a rugged, swampy place. The waters around it are filled with sharks, by golly.

A scruffy sergeant of the guard tells him to take a last look back: "That is the last you will see of the free world. Ha-ha-ha-ha-ha." (I may have missed a stray ha in all the excitement, but no matter.)

In time, Convy attempts an escape, fails and is dismayed when Montalban tells him he must keep trying or rot in jail. The ladies, meanwhile, are transformed into rich, beautiful "heiresses."

Miss Engel is wooed by a pudgy German count who, she says at one point, "thinks I'm a hearty girl."

Miss Canova's suitor is handsome John Saxon. He's a "rich" pediatrician (his patients must have written the show) trying to sell $10,000-a-head memberships in a club he's "building" in Las Vegas.

He has a Southern accent, I think. He says things like, "Ah was beginnin' t' think you'd nevah show up."

There is great suspense throughout. But to my surprise, everyone makes out okay. Oh darn, I gave away the ending.

The show is from Spelling-Goldberg Productions, makers of such distinguished American dramas as "Charlie's Angels," "Love Boat" and the late, lamented "San Pedro Beach Bums."

Let's hope "Love Boat" never hits fog and crashes into "Fantasy Island." That might cause two more series "Fantasy Boat" and "Love Island" and ABC probably would buy them, too.

Opening lead: Ten of ◇.

Study the layout of this hand and then decide whether you would rather play or defend four spades after West leads the ten of diamonds.

South did well to overrule his partner and select four spades as the final contract. Regardless of what East leads, three no trump has no play whatsoever, for the defenders are entitled to three club tricks and the two major-suit aces if they are careful.

Suppose you elect to defend. Declarer wins the diamond lead in dummy and leads a trump to the king. If you win the ace and return a diamond, declarer can coast home. He wins and draws trumps, and then concedes two tricks to the ace of hearts and the ace of clubs, but that is all.

However, West can improve on this defense. Suppose he allows declarer to win the king of spades. Now, when declarer continues with a second spade, West wins the ace and puts declarer back in dummy with a diamond. That makes a vast difference, for declarer has no quick entry back to his hand. When South tries to get back with a heart, West wins the ace and gives his partner a diamond ruff for down one.

However, that does not mean that you should elect to defend. As declarer, you can make sure of the contract. Win the opening diamond and lead a spade to the king. When West holds off the ace of spades, don't make the mistake of continuing with a second trump. Instead, switch your attention to hearts.

West can win the king of hearts and put you back in dummy with a diamond, but you have a counter. Cash the queen of hearts and continue with the ten, on which you discard your remaining diamond. Now you can revert to drawing trumps, and the defenders can score no more than their three aces.

Answer to yesterday's puzzle.

CRYPTOQUIP 1-27

K L S Q R A F J D A J V N J J U R J - S G G L A T N U K S F Q D N T R J R V A L

Yesterday's Cryptoquip—SPRIGS SWELLED IN SPRING WIND.

Copr. 1978 King Features Syndicate, Inc.
Today's Cryptoquip clue: K equals G

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

FORECAST FOR SATURDAY, JANUARY 28, 1978

Your Daily HOROSCOPE
from the CARROLL RIGHTER INSTITUTE

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Although you are likely to make some poor judgments now, later you find the aspects change and become excellent in coordinating your efforts with others to advance and to progress in joint enterprises.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Talk over joint projects with partners and come to a fine accord, make them more successful in the future. Make any necessary changes.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Be more enthused about the work ahead of you and get it done efficiently. Come to a meeting of minds with co-workers early and all works out well. Don't overwork and undermine health.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Get in touch with congenials and you can make this a happy time. Come to a better understanding with loved one.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Get home in fine condition and feel happier there. Study into a new project that can be very fine for you in the near future.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Pay compliments to those with whom you want to be allied in the future and entertain them. Gather data you need that can help you to be more successful. Avoid one who has strange ideas.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Handle any financial affairs in a most clever way and get ahead faster. Listen to what an expert has to suggest. Do some socializing.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Contact good friends and work out mutual affairs intelligently. Make sure you pay bills, take care of pending business matters.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Be with a loved one and have a good time. Gather information you will need for a future project. Shop early.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Enjoy yourself and see as many friends and relatives as you can. Make new acquaintances who can be of help to you in the future.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Taking care of a civic problem now is wise since you have free time. Consider gadgets that will make daily work more efficient.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Look into new and fascinating outlets that will make your life better in the future. Deepen friendships with new acquaintances. Don't let others take advanttage of your good nature.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Use a better system for handling routines and get fine results. Take no chances with persons who are jealous of you.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will have magnetism and must be taught early to stand on own two feet otherwise your child will be spoiled by others and the fine promise in this chart will be lost. Slant education along lines of pleasing the public, whether in the theater, on the platform, be it in speechmaking, in the ministry and the like. Much creativity here.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to YOU!

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices were mixed in quiet trading today, with blue chip issues attracting some support after Thursday's sharp decline.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, off 9.10 on Thursday to a new 33-month low, recovered 2.17 to 765.51 by noontime today.

But gainers trailed losers by about a 3-2 margin in the broad tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Analysts noted some relief over the Federal Reserve's weekly statistical report at the close on Thursday, which showed a smaller increase in the basic measure of the money supply than some traders had feared.

But brokers also pointed out that buying interest was dampened by fears of some bad news next Monday, when government figures are due out on the nation's trade balance for December.

Wide trade deficits in recent months have been cited as a primary reason for pressure on the dollar in foreign-exchange markets.

Exxon led the active list, off ⅛ at 43¼. Earlier in the week the company reported lower quarterly profits.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks was up .02 at 49.09. On the American Stock Exchange, the market value index gained .29 to 120.91.

Volume on the Big Board continued to set a sluggish pace, totaling 7.86 million shares by noontime against 7.91 million at the same point Thursday.

The body will be at Hemby Memorial Funeral Chapel in Fountain after 6 p.m. Saturday until one hour prior to the funeral on Sunday.

Family visitation will be from 7:30 p.m. to 8:30 p.m. Saturday at the funeral chapel.

Smith

WILMINGTON — Funeral services for Mr. Robert Tucker Smith, 47, a former Greenville resident, were held this afternoon at 3 o'clock at Wrightsville Beach United Methodist Church by the Rev. William Wolfe. Burial was in Oleander Memorial Gardens in Wilmington.

Mr. Smith was owner and operator of Carolina Creosote Corporation. He was originally from Winterville.

Surviving him are wife, Mrs. Nancy Sugg Smith of the home; a son, Robert T. Smith Jr. of the home; his mother, Mrs. Estelle Sutton Smith of Wilmington; and two brothers, John E. Smith of Lewisville and Edward W. Smith of Sacramento, Calif.

Wooten

Mrs. Velmalene Miller Wooten died Thursday in the Eastern North Carolina Hospital in Wilson. She was the wife of Willie Wooten of Greenville. Funeral arrangements are incomplete at Phillips Brothers Mortuary here.

New Policeman For Winterville

WINTERVILLE — The town of Winterville has hired a new police officer under the In-Service Training program which is funded by and between the Governor's Crime Committee of the Division of Crime Control in the Department of Crime Control and the Public Safety Committee.

Calvin Craft became the replacement officer on Jan. 15 under the grant which totals $9,027 in salary.

There were previously three officers in Winterville.

Annexation Plea Heard

WINTERVILLE — The Winterville Town Board in a special meeting held Jan. 19 heard a request from the realtors of the Weathington Heights subdivision for annexation.

A public hearing was set for Feb. 6, at 7:30 p.m. to discuss the request.

In other business, the Board agreed to install a water tap at the site of the Kiwanis Annual Farm Sale with the stipulation that the club be responsible for all bills due for water. The tapping fee will be waived.

The Board also authorized the mayor to accept from the state's Clean Water Grant Division Office the amount of $7,131 "for the use of a potable water system for Brookshire subdivision."

This grant will be 25 percent state funded.

Board members also scheduled a public auction for noon on Jan. 28 in front of the Town Hall for the purpose of auctioning one 1950 Chevrolet Fire Truck.

Also, bids for the new maintenance and garage building will open at noon on Feb. 3.

Clarification

An article in Thursday's paper about the medical expense of a Pitt Memorial Hospital patient whose identity was unknown stated that Medicaid and matching funds from Wilson County would pay the bill.

Actually the bill of the man, who died last Sunday, after having been a patient in Pitt Memorial Hospital since Sept. 30, will be paid by state and federal funds, with the case being processed through the Wilson County Department of Social Services, Pitt County Attorney W. W. Speight said.

FIRE DAMAGE

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — A fire on a conveyor belt disabled the coal handling system at the Thomas H. Allen plant of the Tennessee Valley Authority Thursday.

Woman Honored By Presbytery

Mrs. Fannie P. Jackson of Greenville has been honored by the Albemarle Presbytery of the Presbyterian Church, U. S.

The recognition of Mrs. Jackson came during the 183 session of the Presbytery held at the First Presbyterian Church, Greenville, last Tuesday.

Mrs. Jackson was a Greenville City Schools elementary school teacher for many years and also founded and continues to operate the Meadowbrook Day Care Center, located on property owned by the Presbytery. She has been with the North Greenville Presbyterian Sunday School for 25 years.

The citation was presented by Mrs. Hubert H. Bryant, an elder in the local First Presbyterian Church. It read in part: "Fannie truly loves her neighbor as herself, is, and always has been, a gift to others. Just as salt and light, she has brought flavor and brightness to countless people for many years. She has never counted the personal sacrifices, and no one could possibly count her contributions, help and assistance to her fellow men. She, more than many of us, has given of herself sacrificially to follow our Lord's command, 'Do unto others as you would have them do unto you.'"

She was presented an engraved plaque by Dr. David B. Jenkins, minister of the First Presbyterian Church of Goldsboro, who is the new moderator of the Presbytery. She was accorded a standing ovation.

Jenkins succeeds Mrs. W. D. LaRoque, an elder in the First Presbyterian Church of Kinston, as moderator. The General Secretary of the Presbytery is the Rev. Joe R. Cochran Jr. Presbytery offices are located in Greenville.

Panthers Shock Conley, 39-38

BETHEL — North Pitt rallied from nine points down at the half to pull off a 39-38 upset victory over Eastern Carolina Conference leader D.H. Conley last night.

Lawaskia Jenkins tossed in a basket with one second to go to provide the victory for the Panthers.

Earlier, the Conley girls had preserved their share of first place in the league with a 43-29 win over the Pant-HERS.

Conley's boys jumped out into the lead in the first period, posting a 15-13 lead by the horn that ended the frame. The Vikings then pulled away in the second quarter, outhitting the Panthers, 16-9.

But at the start of the second half, the Panthers went to a zone to try and deny the ball to 6-10 Al Tyson in the middle. That seemed to give the Vikes trouble, and in addition, the Vikings were hit with three technical fouls during the period.

As a result of it all, the Vikings failed to score a point during the period, while the Panthers were scoring nine and tieing it at 31-31.

With two minutes left in the game, Conley had pulled ahead again, 38-37, but the Panthers stalled the ball until the end, with Jenkins hitting with one second left.

"I'm real proud of the way we came back," North Pitt's Cobby Deans said, "especially after being down by nine. That shows a lot of character. It wasn't one of our better games, but we played well at times. Jenkins did a good job at both ends of the court and by his play deserved to win it for us."

Mickey Hines led the Panther scoring with 14, while Tyson had 11 for Conley.

In the girls' game, Conley and North Pitt matched 6-6 scores in the first period, but the Valkyries began to pull away in the second. They outhit the Pant-HERS in the second quarter, and led 21-17 at intermission.

Conley continued to hold to its lead in the third period, building it to 29-23. They then outhit North Pitt, 14-6, in the final quarter, to win going away.

Annie Wooten led Conley with 14 points, while Cassandra Tyson added 11. Kay Hines had 14 to lead North Pitt.

The Panthers travel to Greene Central, while Conley is at Farmville Central tonight.

East Carolina To Challenge Duke In Saturday Night Durham Game

East Carolina University's Pirates take to the road again tomorrow night to wind up their current road trip against the nationally-ranked Duke Blue Devils.

The Pirates will be going into the game with a one-point victory over Georgia Southern, 86-85, while Duke comes in after suffering a 74-73 loss on the road at Virginia in the ACC.

Elsewhere, other Pirate sports will be busy during the coming seven days too, with all of the winter sports in action.

Following the Duke game, the basketball Pirates have one game during the early part of next week, returning home to face Old Dominion on Tuesday night.

The women's basketball team is at Virginia State tonight, and will be at Longwood on Saturday. They travel to Campbell on Tuesday night. Thursday night, the Lady Pirates will be at the University of North Carolina.

The Pirate track team is to be in Pittsburgh today and tomorrow for the Pitt Invitational.

The swimmers travel to Tuscaloosa, Ala., where they will meet nationally-ranked Alabama and Louisiana State on Saturday. Both the men's and women's teams will be in competition.

The Lady Pirate gymnastic team entertains Winthrop here Saturday at 12 noon.

"The kids are looking forward to the Duke game," Coach Larry Gillman said yesterday. "It's got to be a big game for us. It's another chance for us to show the people of the state that we're not just another 4-11 team."

Injuries and illness may be a big factor in the game.

On the East Carolina side of the slate, both Oliver Mack and Herb Gray have been slowed by the flu, and Bernard Hill suffered an injury Wednesday night against Georgia Southern and is questionable.

Duke has also announced that center Mike Gminski and his backup, Scott Goetsch, suffered ankle injuries in the Virginia game and will not play Saturday night.

Instead, Duke is expected to go with a three-guard offense, including Jim Spanarkel, Bob Bender and John Harrell in the backcourt. Eugene Banks and Kenny Dennard will handle the front-court duties.

"We'll have to contain Banks on the boards and we know that Spanarkel, Bender and Dennard are fine players too," Gillman said. "If Mack is able to play up to his par, we should able to give them some problems."

Gillman reflected on the season and the record. "We may be 4-11 right now, but just a little here and there could have turned it around. You take the William & Mary game here last week, and the LaSalle game in the Charlotte Tournament, and the Asheville game, if Mack had played, and we're 7-8, so we're really not that far away from decency.

"But we're young and we don't handle every situation. We still have 11 games to go, and I think we're improving all along."

Spanarkel leads the Blue Devils with a 20.0 average, while Gminski, who will be absent, is at 19.7. Banks is next at 16.4, followed by Dennard at 10.3. Harrell is averaging 4.0.

McCauley Sees Top Challenge

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

John McCauley, East Carolina University's nationally ranked freestyler, may have his problems this weekend, but he just might be pushed to his best time ever, also.

McCauley, who ranks both in the 50 and 100-yard freestyle events nationally, will join the rest of the Pirate team in a trip to Alabama, where the Bucs face the Crimson Tide along with Louisiana State University.

"This will be the stiffest competition I've ever had in dual meets," McCauley admitted. Swimming against him from Alabama will be Jonty Skinner, who holds the American record in the 100 freestyle.

"But I want to go after him, and I'm going to give it everything I've got," McCauley said. "I think I can get him in the 50, but it's going to be tough to beat him in the 100. I'm really looking forward to it."

McCauley will be coming off a week-long bout with the flu, however, and that may affect him. "I got back into the water for the first time Tuesday in a week, and I felt pretty strong. I'm not up to par, but I'll try to compensate by shaving down when I get down there."

A senior, McCauley admits that his national ranking has been a long time coming, part of it his own fa[ult]. "I wish I'd really gotten serious earlier. I'm just getting together mentally and physically. I could have done it earlier, maybe even as a freshman."

His career started when he was seven in the Charlotte YMCA. "Two years ago (as a sophomore) I seriously thought of quitting. I was getting pretty fed up. But then, I began to see what I could do and decided to see what I really was capable of. I'm glad now that I stuck with it."

McCauley's goal this year is to get into the top 12 in the national's at season's end. "I'm shooting for number one, of course, but if I can't win it all, I'd like to finish as high as I possibly can; in the top 12 for sure." McCauley has already met qualification standards for this year's NCAA meet in both the 50 and 100.

"I've been to the nationals every year (since he's been at ECU)," he said. "But there is still a lot of pressure on you there. It's still a big deal to be there. I guess we just don't get the same kind of caliber competition meet after meet in this area."

McCauley feels that the 50 is his best event, and that his 6-7 height gives him an advantage here. "If I'd known that I was going to get this tall, I might have taken up basketball. But I don't miss not playing basketball, and I will miss swimming after this year."

John will finish up his studies at East Carolina next fall, and hopes to teach and coach. Right now, swimming and class work occupy all his time.

Saturday, however, he'll be trying to lead the Pirates to another victory against number two ranked Alabama.

Chargers Top Greene Central

SNOW HILL — Ayden-Grifton was able to hold off a fourth-quarter surge by Greene Central to defeat the Rams 67-62 in a high school basketball game last night.

The Chargers, who rushed out to a 23-9 lead in the opening frame, were leading by a 43-32 score going into the fourth quarter when the Rams rallied behind center James Best.

Best, who scored 17 of his game-high 26 points in the second half, helped Greene Central cut the Ayden-Grifton margin to four with about three and a half minutes remaining, but the Chargers, using superior rebounding, were able to move back out by eight. The Rams trimmed that lead to five at the end of the game.

Besides Best's 26, the Rams got 12 points from Johnnie Croom. Frankie Dail scored 21 points to pace Ayden-Grifton, while Donnie Jackson added 18 and James Leggett 13. Leggett also pulled down 22 rebounds for the Chargers.

Greene Central used an 11-5 second-quarter scoring margin to defeat the Ayden-Grifton girls 30-27.

Ayden-Grifton held an 8-6 lead at the end of the first quarter, but the Ewes were able to turn things around in the second frame to take a 17-13 halftime lead.

The Chargerettes shaved one point off of that margin in the third period, but the Ewes held on in the final quarter.

Greene Central's balanced attack saw no player reach double figures, while Karen Haseley scored 10 to lead Ayden-Grifton.

Ayden-Grifton's victory in the boy's game gives the Chargers a 5-3 Eastern Carolina Conference record and an 11-5 overall mark. Greene Central is now 3-4 and 5-10. The Ewes raised their record to 5-2 and 9-6, while the Chargerettes dropped to 4-4 and 9-6.

Tonight, Ayden-Grifton travels to North Lenoir, while Greene Central will host North Pitt.

Wake Forest Upsets Heels

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

Dean Smith wasn't kidding when he told a group of newspapermen that he thought there was too much emphasis on winning in college athletics.

The way his North Carolina basketball team played Thursday night, it's appears they took him literally.

Not playing anything like the nation's third-ranked team, the Tar Heels couldn't keep in step with Wake Forest for any part of the Atlantic Coast Conference game and lost a 71-62 decision.

"They set the tempo by their defense and kept us from getting the good shots," said Smith of the Deacons. "We got much better shots with them in our game in Chapel Hill."

Smith's reference was to North Carolina's 71-69 victory over the Deacons earlier in the season.

Ironically, earlier in the day Thursday, Smith had delivered a philosophical talk to a luncheon meeting of newspaper executives and scored what he termed America's perverted preoccupation with winning.

North Carolina wasn't the only ranked team to suffer an upset. Indiana State, the country's No. 13 team, similarly playing a league game on the road, dropped a 74-70 Missouri Valley Conference decision to Wichita State in overtime.

Elsewhere, form held with No. 4 Arkansas defeating SMU 72-65; No. 12 Louisville belting Tulane 105-82; No. 14 New Mexico whipping Brigham Young 95-82 and No. 17 Florida State turning back St. Louis 88-75.

Charlie Brent scored 12 of his 23 points in the second half, then gunned in seven in overtime, to lead Wichita State's upset of Indiana State. Larry Bird, the nation's third leading scorer, had 33 points for the Sycamores, who lost their third straight game after a late arrival in Wichita.

They arrived in town at 4 a.m. Thursday after wintry Midwest weather turned a normal three-hour airplane flight into a 10-hour ride that included stops in Chicago, St. Louis and Kansas City.

"We had layovers everywhere," said Indiana State Coach Bob King, who indicated that his team's tired condition may have had something to do with the latest defeat.

"You can't tell what effect it had — you never know," King said.

Willie Howard and Marvin Johnson combined for 44 points to lead New Mexico's victory over Brigham Young. Kris Anderson's 21 points paced Florida State over St. Louis.

Elsewhere, Audie Matthews and Reno Gray scored 16 points apiece as Illinois defeated Iowa 70-61 in the only Big Ten game that was not wiped out by snow. Seventh-ranked Michigan State was snowed out of a game with Ohio State by a heavy midwestern storm that also knocked out four other Big Ten contests.

In another game, Clint Richardson's 23 points led Seattle to a 71-65 decision over Nevada-Reno.

Farmville In Pair Of Wins

FARMVILLE — Farmville Central's basketball teams swept three games from Southern Nash last night with an 84-59 junior varsity win, a 52-40 girl's win and an 60-54 win in the boy's game.

Farmville Central's girls led all the way in taking their third Eastern Carolina Conference win of the year against five losses. The Lady Jaguars held a 14-11 lead at the end of the first quarter and were up 25-21 at the half.

In the third quarter, the Lady Jags put things away, outscoring Southern Nash 18-4 for a 43-24 lead. The win raised Farmville's girl's record to 6-8 overall.

Debra Edwards led all scorers with 23 for Southern Nash, while Diane Barrett scored 13 and Etta Gorham 11 for Farmville Central.

Southern Nash's boys led for most of the first half of the varsity game. They were ahead 16-12 at the end of the first quarter and 30-28 at the half.

Farmville Central staged a third-quarter rally, however, to take the lead 47-38 going into the game's final period, in which Southern Nash was able to cut into the lead by three.

Calvin Horne paced the Farmville scoring with 17 points, while Donald Freeman added 13. The Firebirds were led by Jeff Strickland with 14. Farmville's record is now 4-4 in the ECC and 8-8 overall.

The Jaguars host D. H. Conley tonight.

Rampants Win Match Easily

WILSON — Rose High School's wrestlers, ranked third in the state, didn't even have to work up a sweat to beat Wilson Fike High School last night.

The Titans, with only four wrestlers on hand, had to forfeit nine weight classes, giving the Rampants an easy 64-8 victory. Of the four classes wrestled, the two teams split, with each winning one and two ending in draws.

The victory propelled the Rampant record to 14-1 on the season, and closed out the regular season for them. They will return to action on Saturday, February 4, playing host to the Division I tournament.

Summary:

107: Cliff Whichard (R) won by forfeit.
114: James Staton (R) won by forfeit.
121: Jesse Baker (R) won by forfeit.
128: Mike Norfleet (R) drew with William Jones, 2 2.

157: Mark Shank (R) won by forfeit.
169: Burney Fleming (R) won by forfeit.
187: Raymond Wooten (R) won by forfeit.
197: Ron Butler (R) won by forfeit.
Heavyweight: Gurnest Brown (W) decisioned Franklin Clark, 9 0.

Grapplers On TV

Seven members of the Rose High School wrestling team, currently ranked third in the state, will be featured in the WRAL-TV Wrestling Tournament, to be telecast Saturday at 4 p.m. on Channel Five.

The tournament, held on December 29, was taped for showing this Saturday. The tournament, the sixth annual, won won by the Rampants.

Extended Program Wins

The Extended School Program defeated the Sheltered Workshop 55-25 in a basketball game yesterday afternoon.

High man for the game was SW's Willie Beasley with 18, while Willie Jones hit 15 and Danny Carmon 14 for the ESP.

State Wrestlers Edge Past Bucs

North Carolina State won four of the first five matches as the Wolfpack wrestlers edged East Carolina 19-18 Thursday night.

Jim Zenz won at 118 for the Pack, followed by Mike Zito at 126, Joe Butto at 142 and Mike Koob at 150 to give the Wolfpack a 16-2 advantage going into the upper weight classes. From there, the Pirates captured four of the next five, but it was not enough for the win.

Paul Osman drew with Dave Polsinelli at 134. Steve Goode, Butch Revils and Jay Dever all won matches for the Pirates, who are now 2-5 this season. D. T. Joyner won the heavyweight match by forfeit.

The win improved N. C. State's record to 7-4 for the year.

East Carolina travels to Raleigh for a rematch with the Wolfpack on Feb. 6.

Summary:

ETSU Stops Mounties

JOHNSON CITY, Tenn. (AP) — Forward Jim Smith fired in 20 points to lead East Tennessee State past Appalachian State 84-81 in a non-conference basketball game Thursday night.

The Buccaneers blew a 68-54 lead in the second half as the Appalachian trio of Darryl Robinson, Mel Hubbard and Tony Searcy outscored East Tennessee 17-4 tomove ahead 72-71 with six minutes remaining in the game.

But Smith and teammate Atlee Hammaker, a reserve guard, took charge to help the Bucs to their 11th victory in 16 games this season.

Fun Run Is Scheduled

Angry Pfeil, Spradlin Move To Lead In San Diego Golf Tourney

BOB GREEN
AP Golf Writer

SAN DIEGO (AP) — A couple of angry young men have turned their displeasure into the top spots in the $200,000 Andy Williams-San Diego Open golf tournament.

"I think I just got tired of playing poorly on the tour," said Mark Pfeil. "I got mad."

And he turned that attitude into a 6-under-par 66 that staked him to the first-round lead Thursday.

Jack Spradlin, repentant and "very sorry" that he once sued the Professional Golfers Association to regain his playing rights, followed the advice of Commissioner Deane Beman on his way to a 67 and the No. 2 position.

Spradlin dropped his suit, which he said was ill-advised, before it went to court. He, like Pfeil, had lost his players' card due to poor performance but, like Pfeil, regained it with another appearance in the Players School.

"After I'd made it through the school again, I apologized to the commissioner," Spradlin said. "He shook my hand and said 'No hard feelings. Just go get 'em with your clubs.'"

And Spradlin did just that, firing the best round of his pro career.

One stroke back at 68 were Jerry McGee, Marty Fleckman, Bob Eastwood and Jack Renner. All played on the 6,667-yard North course at Torrey Pines, the shorter and easier of the two layouts used for the first two rounds.

The best scores at the 7,067-yard South course — also a par 72 — were 70s by Jim Dent, Alan Tapie and Artie McNickle.

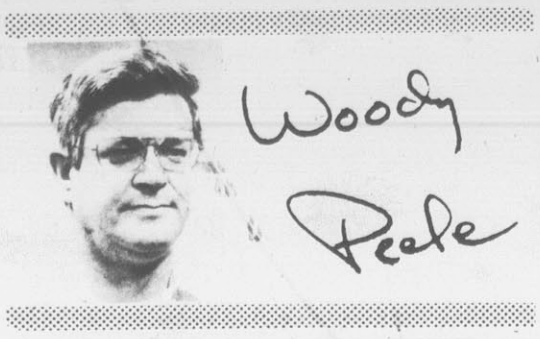

The players switch courses for Friday's play. The last two rounds will be on the South course only.

Tom Watson, a two-time winner this year and the defending champion here, struggled to a 72 on the South course, shrugged and said, "I just didn't play very well."

Watson Ponders His Game

Apparently the "hated" encroachment rule in high school football will be around a little longer.

That rule, passed by the National Federation Rules Committee a couple of years back, calls for an automatic penalty when the plane of the football is broken, whether contact is made or not on the line of scrimmage.

A total of 19 rules were changed during the January meeting of the federation. There are two major changes. One gives an automatic first down to the kicking team, with 15-yard penalty, for roughing the kicker. The other reduces the invalid fair catch sign from 15 to five yards.

The National Federation also took a step closer to the formation of a national basketball championship on the high school level.

A resolution was passed calling for the executive committee to submit a plan for a promotional program and a championship format for the July meeting of the group.

How quickly such a program could be put together is a big question. Then, the problem of state like North Carolina which play to divisional championships rather than to a single title-holder would have to be worked out.

That could mean an eventual tournament between the four class winners in the state.

New Conference Members

The Division I conference will get two new members come next winter, while the Eastern Carolina (3-A) conference will add one.

The two new schools in Wilson County, due to open next fall, will continue to play in the Eastern Plains 2-A league during football, then will become full members of Division I 4-A with the start of basketball season.

That will bring membership in that conference to eight. Current members are Rose, Bertie, Northeastern, Rocky Mount, Northern Nash and Wilson.

The Eastern Carolina loop would add South-West Edgecombe, the new school under construction between Pinetops and Rocky Mount. The two schools, South and West Edgecombe, which will join to form the one school will play in the 2-A Eastern Plains during football, then join the ECC in basketball season.

The addition of that school will up the ECC to nine members. Currently, it includes North Pitt, Conley, Ayden-Grifton, Farmville Central, Southern Nash, Greene Central, North Lenoir and C.B. Aycock. Two other schools, Southern Wayne and Eastern Wayne, dropped from the conference several years back to go 4-A.

The loss of the Eastern Plains schools will leave Roanoke in a quandry. With most of the conference gone, only two current members will be left, Roanoke and North Edgecombe. Their fate is yet to be decided.

Smith Followed Army's Orders

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Like any good Army man, Homer Smith follows orders.

So when the brass at West Point told him last year, in the fourth year of a four-year contract, to "win seven and beat Navy," he may not have saluted and said "Yes Sir!" but win seven and beat Navy is what he did.

Army's 7-4 record was its first winning season since 1972 and the heart-stopping 17-14 final-game triumph was also the first over arch-rival Navy in five years.

And for that coaching job under as much pressure as any coach has ever had to contend with, Smith was honored by the Football Writers Association of New York Thursday night as major college Coach of the Year in the East.

He won out over Fred Dunlap of 10-1 Colgate, Joe Paterno of 11-1 Penn State and Jackie Sherrill of 9-2-1 Pitt.

"It was," Smith said, "a 'no matter what' season. The coaching staff made a commitment to go through the season working as hard as we could no matter what.

"The ultimatum was never off my mind. It forced us to get a philosophical game plan for the season as well as a technical game plan. And that philosophical game plan was work."

Obviously, it paid off. It also rubbed off on the players.

At the start of the season, led by co-captains Leamon Hall and Chuck D'Amico, the players cut their thumbs and took a blood oath as their own commitment. Then, before each game, they pressed their scarred thumbs together, one offensive player with one defensive player.

"No one knew but the players," said Smith, who didn't learn of the pact until the season was over. "They'd been tested and whipped a few times in the past but they vowed they were not going to come apart. It was ingenious of the captains.

As a "reward" for his 1977 achievements, Smith received a new contract...for one year. On the surface, it would appear that Army is again putting him under the gun.

For 1978, Smith said Army's "urgent need is to develop depth. We have some excellent football players to spread over 22 positions. I'm thrilled with the ability of the returning players. We have 15 who have started at one time or another. We're reaching for another rung on the ladder of success. We're shooting to be better."

Also honored by the writers was John Whitehead of Lehigh's NCAA Division II national champions as Eastern College Division Coach of the Year.

In addition, the Eastern College Athletic Conference presented trophies to its top teams and players.

The Division I awards went to Colgate University and Yale running back John Pagliaro. In Division II, it was Lehigh and New Hampshire running back Bill Burnham. The Division III recipients were Widener College, the NCAA Division III champion, and its running back, Chip Zawoiski.

Dartmouth and Princeton compete in football for the "Governor's Cup," a sterling silver bowl donated by Nelson Rockefeller and Brendan Byrne.

Colorado State has three Bells on its football roster, the twins Mike and Mark E. and Mark R., no relation.

Don't Worry, Ma! We Won And Now We're Safe Here In Jail

By GEORGE STRODE
AP Sports Writer

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Archie Aldridge planted his tongue in cheek and said, "I never expected to take over the Mid-American Conference lead and be rewarded with a night in jail."

An Ohio blizzard forced Miami University's basketball team off the road early Thursday, hours after they throttled Toledo 79-70 to take over sole possession in the MAC.

Aldridge, a 6-foot-5 senior from Middletown, Ohio, had scored 24 points.

Aldridge and his teammates were forced into emergency housing in the Vandalia city jail. Officials cleared the jail of four inmates so the Redskins' players and coaches could quarter in the 15 cells in the new Vandalia Municipal Building.

"Right now Randy Ayers is sleeping in the judge's chair," Miami Sports Information Director Dave Young said via telephone. "Some of the others are sleeping in the jail. Much to their chagrin, there isn't much padding in those cells."

Vandalia officials brought the Miami traveling party 30 gallons of milk, a dozen packs of lunch meat, 15 loaves of bread, pretzels, potato chips, cakes and pies, paid for by the Montgomery County city's disaster fund.

Darrell Hedric, Miami's coach, spent much of Thursday playing cards. "Never have I seen such weather conditions," he said.

The team's bus stalled three times on Interstate 75 when Hedric decided it was time to contact Vandalia police — leading to the Redskins' voluntary jailing.

Meanwhile, Ohio University's basketball team had a rotten road trip in both senses of the phrase.

The players lost to Central Michigan 77-71 in Mount Pleasant Wednesday night.

They also were stranded in the blizzard on the trip home.

The team celebrated Dale Bandy's 40th birthday Thursday in the middle of U.S. 23, four miles north of Upper Sandusky, Ohio, in a bus with a door ripped off by the wind.

Ohio Athletic Director Bill Rohr said from Athens he was in touch with the team by a telephone link to an Upper Sandusky housewife who had a CB radio. The houswife was talking by radio with those aboard the bus.

Rescue crews plowed their way through the snow and reached the players Thursday afternoon. They spent the night at a Knights of Columbus hall in Upper Sandusky.

Dandridge Puts Team Before Self In Win

By ALEX SACHARE
AP Sports Writer

Many players in the National Basketball Association like to say they put the good of the team ahead of personal achievement. Those pronouncements are often taken at something less than face value.

But Bobby Dandridge of the Washington Bullets got a chance to prove it Thursday night.

Dandridge had already scored 37 points and was well within range of his career-high point total of 40 with four minutes left in the game. But he asked Coach Dick Motta to take him out, since the Bullets were safely en route to a 135-107 rout of the Chicago Bulls that snapped a five-game losing streak.

"Those things aren't important to me," Dandridge said, referring to personal statistics. "We were up by 20 points and we've got another game tomorrow night. I'm more interested in staying healthy for the playoffs than in individual records."

Dandridge has been the most consistent performer this season for the Bullets, who have been plagued by injuries. Mitch Kupchak and Phil Chenier are currently on the sidelines, while the Chicago game marked the return to action of playmaker Tom Henderson after a three-game absence.

Elsewhere in the NBA, the Portland Trail Blazers routed the New Jersey Nets 112-77 and the New York Knicks beat the Kansas City Kings 112-105. Indiana's game at Cleveland was postponed because of heavy snow which blanketed the midwest.

Dandridge, who signed with Washington as a free agent this summer after eight seasons in Milwaukee, connected on 14 of 22 shots from the field. He also contributed nine rebounds and seven assists.

"We really needed a big win after losing five in a row," Dandridge said. "I knew it was important to play well tonight and I was getting open a lot early in the game. That sort of set the tone."

Blazers 112, Nets 77

Portland, unbeaten at home in 21 games this season and a total of 41 consecutive regular season and playoff games, got 27 points from Bill Walton in handing the Nets their 11th consecutive loss. And the Blazers did it without two regulars, forward Maurice Lucas, sidelined by two sprained fingers, and guard Dave Twardzik, who has the flu.

Walton had 21 points in the opening period to help Portland to a 55-37 halftime lead. A string of 11 straight points made it 70-43 early in the third period and Walton came out for good soon after.

Knicks 112, Kings 105

New York blew an early 17-point lead, fell behind early in the fourth quarter but then put on a 19-5 spurt to win its third in a row. Earl Monroe led the way with 25 points, 11 of them in the final period, while Bob McAdoo had 22 points and 16 rebounds.

Rookie Otis Birdsong, hobbling on a sprained ankle, scored 23 points in 20 minutes for Kansas City.

Philadelphia Eagle linebacker Bill Bergey was selected the outstanding football player in the history of his college, Arkansas State.

Storm Over Ordaining Homosexuals

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

Vocal opposition erupted this week in the wake of a United Presbyterian task force recommendation that the church give its blessings to the ordination of acknowledged, practicing homosexuals.

"We're up in arms," said a spokesman for a broad coalition of conservative groups in the church called the Evangelical Forum. "We're not going to take this at all."

If the stand were adopted, the denomination would become the first major Christian body explicitly to condone such ordinations, although it's recognized that they've been quietly common in church history.

But chances of approval appeared slim at the church's governing general assembly in May, considering recent surveys showing heavy majorities of the church's 2.6 million members and 8,600 pastors are against the idea.

Nevertheless, the coalition called a news conference this Thursday, registering combined opposition of three organizations, Presbyterians United for Biblical Concerns, Presbyterian Laymen and the Presbyterian Charismatic Communion.

"Our concern is not to condemn homosexuals but to minister to them," said Eleanor Campbell of Lindenhurst, N. Y., a coalition spokesman. "Our aim is to help them find the power of Christ for redirection toward heterosexual commitments."

The task force majority, in recommending that local church units be given a green light to ordain otherwise qualified homosexuals, said homosexuality "neither is consciously chosen nor readily susceptible to change."

Although it is only a "minor theme" in Scripture, unmentioned by Jesus or the prophets, those passages that do deal with it assumed it arose from "perverse and willful violations of 'nature'," the majority report says.

"The view of what is 'natural' that undergirded these convictions was a view conditioned by time and place," the majority report says.

It says the "primary ethical issue in relationships between Christians is not whether the relationship conforms to a concept of orders of creation," but whether it enhances "faith and self-giving love" of those involved.

The report asks the church to declare belief that "self-affirming, practicing" homosexuals may be ordained, if otherwise qualified, with options about it remaining — as before — with local church units.

On the other side, a minority of five of the 19-member task force say "our present understanding of God's will for his people precludes the ordination of avowed practicing homosexuals."

"This is not to say that moral perfection is expected in his servants," the minority says, but it calls homosexuality a "result of man's fallen condition" and says all Christians are to strive against sin, adding:

"To evade this responsibility is to permit the church to model for the world forms of sexual behavior which may seriously injure individuals, families and the whole fabric of human society."

What seems a likely bombshell in the majority's report is its proposed sanctioning of ordaining "practicing" homosexuals, suggesting inclusion of those active in same-sex liaisons, although neither church nor civil laws recognize homosexual "marriages".

Asked about this, a staff aide, Kathy Young, said the task force didn't put that lifestyle "under a microscope" but that a footnote rejects any connotation that "practicing" homosexuality suggests promiscuity.

The majority report says: "For some homosexual Christian growth toward mature Christian living may imply accepting celibacy; for some it may imply accomplishing reorientation to heterosexuality; however for others it may imply remaining open to or attaining full companionship and paternership with a person of the same sex."

Church Schedule Is Announced

Elder A.L. Miller announces the following activities are scheduled for next week at Warren Chapel F.W.B. Church:

Monday — Officers and ministers of the Northeast Conference A Division will meet at 7:30 p.m. with the Elder W.L. Phillips, the presiding bishop, in charge.

Wednesday — Church officers and members will meet for Board Meeting and Quarterly Conference at 7:30 p.m.

Saturday — The Gospel Chorus will have rehearsal at 5 p.m.

Sunday Service Plans Given

Morning and afternoon services at Holy Trinity Church have been announced for Sunday, Jan. 29. At the 11 a.m. service, Rev. Sister Thelma Garrett will preach for Mrs. Anna Brockett and her group.

At 3 p.m. child minister, 12-year old Jimmie Lee Stokes from Evergreen Holiness Church in Washington will preach for Mrs. Mary Bennett and her group.

The public is invited to attend.

UNION MEETING

A Union meeting will be held at English Chapel FWB Church No. 2 at 7:30 each night on Friday, Saturday and Sunday, Jan. 27-29. The Rev. C. R. Parker invites the public to attend.

Would Pardon If Ten 'Railroaded'

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Gov. Jim Hunt says that pardoning the Wilmington 10 might have ended his political career, but he would have done it anyway if he felt the case called for it.

Hunt made the remarks in an interview with the News and Observer of Raleigh and another on the University of North Carolina television network Thursday.

"If I had found that they were innocent...and railroaded, I would have pardoned them," Hunt said to his television interviewer, adding that he knew what the consequences would be if he did.

In a subsequent interview with the newspaper, Hunt agreed that it could have meant an end to any further political ambitions he might have. "I was ready for that," he said.

The Wilmington 10 are nine black men and a white woman convicted in the firebombing of a grocery story during racial strife in Wilmington in 1971. The men are serving long prison terms. The woman has been paroled.

Hunt has been under pressure to pardon the group. He refused this week to do so, but reduced their sentences so that all will be eligible for parole two years earlier than before.

All but the leader of the group, the Rev. Ben Chavis, could be out of prison this year. Chavis becomes eligible for release in 1980, because his sentence was the longest.

Hunt said the new sentences were "about half the maximum...some a little more, some a little less... I think that was appropriate."

The governor said he did not consider when parole eligibility would come for the group when he was deciding how much to shorten the sentences.

New Use For Stockade

FAYETTEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Fort Bragg has found new uses at last for its sparkling $1.5 million stockade, which was built to house prisoners who never materialized.

Post officials announced Thursday they were turning the building over to engineer and special forces units. The nine prisoners at the facility were transferred this week to civilian jail cells in the Cumberland County Law Enforcement Center.

The stockade was built to accomodate more than 300 inmates and had a staff of 37. Last year the average population was 15 inmates per month, all confined there temporarily awaiting trial or transfer to Fort Riley, Kansas.

The modern facility had pastel walls, a chapel and library. It was built with Vietnamese Contingency funds and was expected to be packed with Vietnam War-spawned troublemakers.

The building's main corridor was so large it was dubbed "Interstate 95," and wags put signs at the ends, one saying "Boston" and the other "Miami."

"Times have changed, and administrative procedures we have now allow us to get rid of many soldiers short of court-martialing them and sticking them in the stockade, said Lt. Gen. Volney F. Warner, post commander.

NCCU Alumni Program Today

The Pitt County Chapter of the North Carolina Central University Alumni Association will present a program today at 7 p.m. at the Cherry Courts Clubhouse. The program will be entitled "Get to Know You and Your University."

Guest participants are Dallas Simmons, vice chancellor for University Relations at North Carolina Central University, and William Evans, Director of Alumni Affairs.

Old and new members are asked to attend the meeting.

The Amazon River's network of waterways includes 18 major rivers and at least 200 important tributaries.

Giving Recital On French Horn

Danna Swain, a senior in the East Carolina University School of Music, will give a recital of works for the French horn at 8:15 Saturday, Jan. 28.

The program will be held in the A. J. Fletcher Music Center Recital Hall. She will be accompanied by pianist Beth Smith. Selections she will play include ones by Beehoven and Richard Strauss.

There is no admission, and the public is invited to attend.

Plan Enrolling Pre-Schoolers

St. Paul's Episcopal Church will begin to accept applications for its day pre-school program on Wednesday, February 1. Classes for two, three, and four-year olds will be held.

Applications are available at the parish office, located at 401 E. Fourth St.

SUNDAY SERVICE

Services will be held Sunday at 7:30 p.m. at Cherry Lane FWB Church, Rt. 5, Greenville. Sister Mary L. Phillips will preach her initial sermon. The pastor, Rev. C. R. Parker, invites the public to attend.

Yet only a few had been struck!

Success is not simply reaching one's aim. A bowler knows how much depends on the right "action" once the ball hits that first pin.

Religion doesn't guarantee worldly success. The people who are in church every Sunday share their neighbor's hopes and dreams. But they are learning to cherish values which will make firmer their aims. They are challenged by a faith which teaches men to use constructively every achievement.

The Church can help you cultivate religious convictions which will influence how you live on the way to your goals . . . and what you become when you reach them.

Emphysema Can't Be Cured

There seems to be so much talk about emphysema these days. I'm 56 and never heard of emphysema until recently. Now, two people in my family have it. I wonder if they're more frightened about this condition than they should be. How serious an illness is emphysema? — Mr. T.F.J., Wis.
Dear Mr. J.:

Emphysema is not a new disease. It has been around for a long time. Undoubtedly, the increased frequency of this lung condition can be attributed to the hazards of modern civilization. Smog, air pollution, exposure to chemical fumes and, above all, tobacco are among the major reasons for this.

Emphysema occurs when the elasticity of the inner lining of the bronchial tubes of the lungs has been diminished. When this happens, oxygen intake is reduced and free breathing is affected.

The tiny air sacs at the terminal end of the smaller bronchial tubes, having lost their elasticity, cease to function. The end result is shortness of breath, even with the slightest exertion.

People who have had long-standing asthma and chronic bronchitis are the ones who are most severely affected, especially when their conditions have been untreated and neglected.

When emphysema is recognized early and when the irritating factors are eliminated, many of the severe incapacitating complications can be prevented.

Once emphysema is established the elasticity of the sacs does not return. It is imperative, therefore, that all the contributing factors be eliminated as early as possible. The essence of good medicine is prevention. Pre-emphysema cases must be flushed out of hiding and treated intensively. Remember that tobacco is the archenemy of healthy lungs.

Are hormones in facial creams dangerous? I get mail-order literature that sounds tempting. — Miss D. L., Miss.
Dear Miss L.:

The fraudulent claims made by many manufacturers about the rejuvenation of the skin and the elimination of wrinkles when their jellies and hormones are used in creams and lotions have caught the attention of the Food and Drug Administration.

They have clamped down on these manufacturers and, in fact, have insisted that such use of hormones can be dangerous.

When hormones are included in specific prescriptions and are used under the supervision of a physician, the risk elements are eliminated.

You are wise to question such advertisements before you buy.

Area Honor Students At ECU Listed

A total of 2,757 East Carolina University students earned places on the university's official honors list for the fall semester. The total compares with 3,296 for the spring quarter of 1976-77.

The honors list included students from 89 of the state's 100 counties, from 27 states, and District of Columbia.

Most elite of the honor students are those making all A's. Next are those who made the Dean's List with a solid B-plus average with no grade below C. The Honor Roll includes those students making a B average with no grade below C.

A listing of honors students by local area follow:

Disclaim Release Was Due Pressure

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Anne Sheppard Turner of the Wilmington 10 says her release from parole supervision was the result of public pressure on Gov. Jim Hunt, but paroles officials say it was routine and Hunt's office says it knew nothing of the change.

Mrs. Turner and nine black men were charged in the firebombing of a grocery store during racial strife in Wilmington in 1971. She was the only member of the group to win parole, since her sentence was shorter than those of the others.

James C. Woodard, chairman of the state Paroles Commission, said the change in Mrs. Turner's status was routine. He said persons serving sentences of 10 years or less to spend only one year on parole.

But Mrs. Turner said at a news conference Thursday that pressure on the governor was responsible for her new freedom to travel, which she says she will soon need for her national speaking tour on behalf of her co-defendants.

"As a result of the mass of pressure on the state of North Carolina, the governor's paroles board has been forced to end my parole. This will allow me to continue my struggle for complete freedom for the Wilmington 10. I plan to go on a national speaking tour to spread the word," she said.

Mrs. Turner was serving a 7 to 10 year sentence. Ben Runkle, spokesman for the state prison system, said she was paroled Jan. 19, 1977.

"We didn't receive a word from the governor or anyone else. Not Anne or anyone. She just fell within the guidelines," Woodard said.

Stephanie Bass, Hunt's assistant press secretary, said the governor did not know about the change and had nothing to do with it.

All nine men convicted with Mrs. Turner are still in prison, and Hunt this week reduced their sentences to allow parole consideration for eight of them this year.

Festival Adopts Nostalgic Theme

GRIFTON — Because many former high school classes are planning olass reunions in Grifton during the Eighth Annual Shad Festival, a nostalgia theme, "Those Were Our Days," has been selected as the secondary theme for this year's festival.

In last week's Shad Festival planning meeting, it was decided to leave Friday evening open for special reunion activities, and not to try to hold a late evening activity after the Shad Queen Pageant. "Shad-O" will be the only other official Friday evening event, and the Pageant will be staged at 8 p.m.

The winners of the Hickory Shad Fishing Contest, which is now in progress, will be announced at intermission of the Pageant.

MEETING TONIGHT

Daughters of Goldenrod Temple 368 will meet tonight at the home of Annie White to perform rites for the funeral of Nellie Clemmons at Norcotts Funeral Home in Ayden at 7:30.

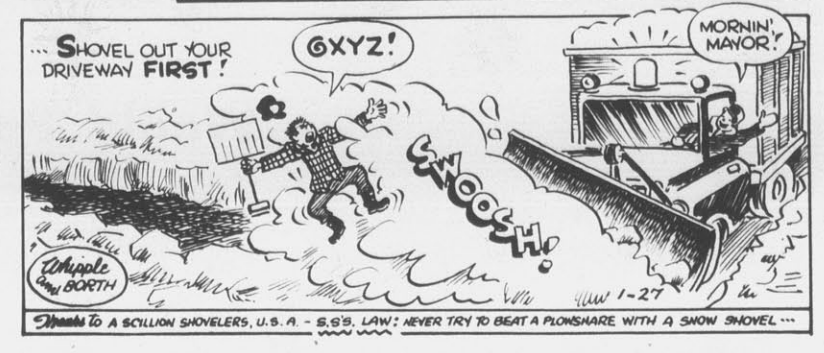

Future Senator Is Vacationing

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (AP) — Muriel Humphrey, widow of Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey, is vacationing at the Caneel Bay Plantation Hotel on St. John Island, a long-time favorite vacation spot of the Humphrey family.

Mrs. Humphrey, who has accepted an appointment to fill the Senate seat of her husband, arrived Thursday in the U.S. Virgin Islands east of Puerto Rico.

Hotel manager Werner Graef would not say how long Mrs. Humphrey would be there.

How's The Weather?

WEATHER FORECAST — Snow flurries are forecast today from the northern Rockies to the central Plains and from the Midwest into the Northeast. Cold to very cold temperatures are expected for most of the country. (AP Laserphoto Map)

By The Associated Press

As the weatherman put it, things have settled down quite a bit since Thursday. And well they might after the raging winds associated with what the National Weather Service described as one of the most intense low pressure systems of all time.

The low pressure system was located today over Lake Huron where it was producing blizzard conditions for much of the midwest area. Windy conditions still prevailed over North Carolina today but nothing to the degree of Thursday.

High temperatures Thursday ranged from the 40s in the mountains to the low 70s on the coast, but they were registered shortly after midnight. From then on, temperatures went downhill with lows this morning including Asheville 16, Greensboro 20, Charlotte and Raleigh 24, and Wilmington 28.

Gale warnings were reduced to small craft advisories this morning for Albemarle and Pamlico sounds and this change was expected to apply later to coastal waters.

It was expected to be mostly sunny today and Saturday except for the chance of snow flurries in the northwest mountains where temperatures in the 20s were predicted. Highs were to range to the 40s along the coast.

It will be clear and cold tonight with lows from zero to 5 above in the northwest mountains ranging to the 20s on the coast.

Confirm Russian Flu Outbreak

By MICHAEL PUTZEL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Confirmation of an outbreak of Russian flu in Wyoming raises the specter of a major new epidemic sweeping the country this spring with no vaccine available to protect the public.

"We didn't doubt it (Russian flu) would get here," said a spokesman for the government's Center for Disease Control in Atlanta. "The only real question was whether it would be this flu season or next."

The spokesman, Don A. Berreth, said Thursday that there is no way to know at this point whether the new strain will develop into epidemic proportions in the next few weeks, but he noted that the Russian virus "has already demonstrated it can move fast."

People under 24 years old and over 50 are expected to be most susceptible to the Russian strain, which is believed to cause somewhat less severe an illness — and thus fewer deaths — than the Asian and A-Hong Kong strains. Those two together killed an estimated 90,000 people in this country in the 1957 and 1968 epidemics.

CDC investigators this week identified the Russian flu virus in throat cultures taken from high school students in Cheyenne, Wyo. The confirmation comes less than two weeks after government flu experts agreed that the strain could strike here this spring but that there was no way to get ready for it that soon.

Growing the virus, turning it into vaccine, testing and mass-producing it takes the pharmaceutical industry months, and work has just begun.

The 75 experts were hesitant to make firm predictions about a possible epidemic in the wake of last winter's abortive swine flu vaccination campaign, but they recommended that a vaccine against the Russian strain be developed for inclusion in any immunization program next season.

Late in 1976, the government launched a massive swine flu inoculation campaign in anticipation of an epidemic that never materialized. The campaign was abruptly canceled after a statistical link was found between a flu vaccine and a rare paralytic disease.

Flu seasons usually begin in the fall and run their course by the end of March or April.

The Russian flu, known in medical circles as A-USSR and technically as H1N1, already has swept across two continents, leaving millions of sick people and thousands of dead in its wake. But precise information on the virulence of the strain and the toll that it might take here is being analyzed by a team of experts who returned Thursday from Moscow. They will report their findings Monday to a special Department of Health, Education and Welfare panel.

Way Is Cleared For Amputation

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — An elderly, impoverished woman judged incompetent to make medical decisions for herself is to lose her frostbitten, infected feet to amputation despite her objection.

The state Department of Human Services has been granted the right to make personal decisions for Mary C. Northern, 72.

The woman has repeatedly refused to submit to amputation despite doctor's warnings that she will die without it.

The last legal impediment to proceeding with the operation was apparently cleared Thursday when Chancellor C. Allen High read a psychiatrist's report on the woman's mental condition.

"She seems to believe that her feet are black because of soot or dirt," the report by Dr. John Griffin said.

"She does not believe her physicians about the serious infection. There is an admanant belief that her feet will heal without surgery, and she refused to even consider the possibility that amputation is necessary to save her life," Griffin wrote.

Carol McCoy, lawyer for Miss Northern, said the ruling sets a bad precedent for individual rights.

"I don't see how the court could overturn it, based on what is in the record," she said. Ms. McCoy said the decision may allow other persons or agencies to decide in future whether stricken individuals should be operated on.

Dr. Darrell Tackett, who is to operate on Miss Northern, could not be reached Thursday for comment on when surgery would take place. He has said it must be done within a week to stop the spread of gangrene.

The Rev. Palmer Sorrow, a friend of Miss Northern, said the woman's feet were being encased in ice and that doctors hoped to take some time to prepare her psychologically for the operation.

A friend brought Miss Northern to the attention of the authorities. She has lived alone in her childhood East Nashville home since 1960. A Jan. 11 fire partially burned the condemned brick house, and police said she had retreated to a dirty interior room heated by a fireplace and strewn with empty cans and rubble.

Your Tax Return

The IRS Is Ready To Answer Your Question

By MICHAEL DOAN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Millions of Americans will get help on their taxes this year by calling the Internal Revenue Service or going to special centers for elderly and low-income taxpayers.

The IRS estimates that it answered questions from 27 million taxpayers at its district offices last year but that 7 million more got busy signals or had to wait and hung up.

The local offices have toll-free numbers that will be publicized in advertisements and in the mailed tax packages. The telephone numbers for taxpayer information can also be found in the phone book under U.S. government, Internal Revenue Service. Taxpayers can also walk into their local IRS office to get help.

In addition, the agency has trained thousands of volunteers for special tax booths at libraries, schools and other public buildings. The program is intended to help the elderly, low-income people and those who have trouble speaking English.

Many low-income persons will be eligible for the "earned income credit," a special benefit that pays up to $400 for poor working families.

Taxpayers over age 65 get special help because they face a maze of tax regulations on how to treat income from pensions, life insurance payments, annuities and other benefits. In addition, there is a complex formula for computing a retirement tax credit for some people.

The IRS sends taxpayer service representatives to nursing homes, hospitals, retirement communities and even state welfare offices.

Help is also available from professional tax preparers. Other helpful information on taxes:

—It takes an average of four to six weeks for taxpayers to get a refund check, the IRS says. Chances are better to get a refund back quickly if a taxpayer files in January or early February than just before the April 17 deadline.

—Taxpayers need to keep checks and receipts used for tax purpose for at least three years. After that, the statute of limitation runs out. However, they must keep property information such as housing deeds longer than that.

—The IRS says you can use the short form if you had only wages, salaries, tips or other employee compensation and not more than $400 in interest or $400 in dividends. Your total income must be $20,000 or less, or $40,000 or less if married and filing jointly.

—You must use the long form if you itemize deductions or claim any of a variety of adjustments to income or credits.

—The IRS mailed out tax forms to about 80 million taxpayers this year after Christmas. It is expecting about 86 million persons to file returns.

—The deduction for sick pay is limited in the 1977 return to people under age 65 who are totally and permanently disabled.

Electricity Is By Pedal Power

MOSELEM SPRINGS, Pa. (AP) — A homemade generating plant which provides lighting via "foot power" was put together by 20 science students at the Richmond Township Elementary School here.

The plant, which was constructed from parts made available by parents and school faculty members, is actually a stationary bicycle hooked up to a small electric generator.

The students, who received technical assistance from the local subsidiary of General Public Utilities Corp. during the construction, used the apparatus to light the classroom Christmas tree last year and will continue to use it for other projects.

Mears Elected To AP Post

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Walter Mears, Washington bureau chief of The Associated Press, has been elected a vice president of the AP by its board of directors, which is meeting here.

Keith Fuller, president of the news cooperative, said Mears' elevation to vice president Thursday reflected the board's recognition of the importance of the Washington operation.

Mears, who won a Pulitzer Prize for his coverage of the 1976 presidential campaign, directs a staff of 95 reporters and photographers in the nation's capital.
