Califano Says UNC Failed Meet Orders

WASHINGTON (AP) — HEW Secretary Joseph A. Califano Jr. declared today that North Carolina, Georgia and Virginia have failed to present adequate plans to eliminate racial segregation in their state colleges and universities.

Califano said HEW has approved North Carolina's desegregation plan for 57 community colleges, but said the state still must do more for desegregation of its 16-campus university system.

He said he found plans by the states of Arkansas, Oklahoma and Florida fully acceptable.

A federal judge in Washington last April ordered the six states to draw up desegregation plans by Feb. 3 to eliminate "the vestiges of their de jure (by law) racially segregated college and university systems," Califano noted in a news conference statement.

He said discussions would continue with the three states with plans he found inadequate. But he said the Department of Health, Education and Welfare would conduct a hearing within 45 days that could lead to a cutoff of federal funds to the states' educational institutions.

The actual process for cutting off funds would be lengthy. However, if no settlement is reached after 45 days, Califano said, he will act immediately to hold up approval of any new applications for federal funds from these schools, "but only if those new funds would contribute to continuing segregation in those systems of higher education."

Califano said he personally notified the governors of all six states by telephone Wednesday.

He said he told the governors of Georgia, North Carolina and Virginia "that the action we are taking should in no way inhibit our continuing discussions."

"In these three states I have every hope and expectation that we can reach an agreement. Each of the governors expressed a desire to reach an agreement," he said.

Snow For The Local Hopefuls

By DEBBIE JACKSON
Reflector Staff Writer

All those Greenville residents that who been hoping for snow got their wish this morning as snow mixed with rain and sleet fell across the area causing problems for motorists.

Sgt. Glenn Swanson of the N.C. Highway Patrol described driving conditions as "terrible."

He said this morning that road conditions were getting worse and that motorists should be smart to stay at home unless it was absolutely necessary to drive.

"Right now we're in the best area of anywhere in the state," said Swanson. He noted that conditions north and east of Greenville were even worse with snow reported in New Bern and Wilmington.

Swanson said if people must drive that they should "go extremely slow" and pump their brakes when stopping.

Snow accumulation was reported at a quarter of an inch at the Greenville Utilities Commission at 9 a.m. today, but sleet later in the morning turned to snow which added to the recorded precipitation.

At 8 a.m. today, the temperature was 30 degrees and sleet was falling on the city.

Forecast By Groundhog

Lest the collection of poor weather conditions makes one forget, be reminded that today is Groundhog Day.

It falls every year on Feb. 2 and it is on this day that the Groundhog (or Woodchuck or marmot) finds its way out of its hole, following a winter's sleep, to look for his shadow.

If it is a sunny day Bro Groundhog returns to his hole for a presumed six more weeks of winter.

If the day is cloudy the animal doesn't see his shadow, assumes spring is on the way and remains above ground.

As all in our area who were up and around this morning would know, there wasn't a chance of anybody seeing his shadow. And if the snow, sleet and rain wasn't enough to convince the Groundhog to flaunt tradition by returning to his hole anyway, we should be on the way to Spring!

But before anyone does hand-springs, be informed that Encyclopaedia Britannica which carefully documents Groundhog Day, solemnly adds, "Convincing statistical evidence does not support this tradition."

Take that for what it is worth, but it is the duty of a newspaper to report that the Pitt County Groundhog today did not see its shadow.

ty.

According to Mayo Allen of Greenville Public Works, a crew was out at 6:30 p.m. clearing the sidewalks and putting sand and salt where it was needed on the roads. "We didn't put out more sand than was necessary that means having to clean it up," said Allen.

"It's sloppy out there, but there's not really a problem," Allen made this statement early in the day and added that crews would be standing by if their services were needed later on in the day.

SNOW FUN — Students at E.B. Aycock Junior High make use of the light snowfall before classes began this morning to have a few snowball fights.

Allen said that the Public Works crew cleaned up the mall for the Dollar Day sale which is being held today and that they made sure that the curbs used by the school buses were sanded.

Local merchants said that Mother Nature's sudden change in attitude slowed sales as area residents stayed at home due to the weather.

John Shannonhouse, chairman of the Merchants Committee for the Greenville Area Chamber of Commerce, who are responsible for the Dollar Day Sale, said that "I have seen people coming into the stores but not like they should be."

"We're hoping that it will slack off by noon and people will start coming in," said Shannonhouse.

Store officials at J.C. Penney and Co. reported a slow day also, in comparison to the crowd that they had expected for the area-wide sale.

Dr. John Howell, Vice Chancellor for Academic Affairs at East Carolina University, said that his office had received floods of telephone calls from ECU students requesting that classes be cancelled.

He said that attendance was not unusually low at the university's 8 a.m. classes.

"We don't have as many classes at 8 a.m. as later, and the traffic is not usually heavy at that hour," said Howell. He noted that there were no problems with heating at the university.

Classes were also held at Pitt Technical Institute this morning.

Approximately 50 to 60 percent of Pitt Tech students attended, according to Joseph Downing, Assistant to the Dean of Instruction.

"We're holding classes but there are a lot of students out," he said. He noted that even with 40 percent of the students absent, "It's pretty good considering the weather."

Downing added that no decision had been made as to whether or not night classes would be held. He also said that no heating difficulties had occurred.

City and county schools were also open this morning with buses running on schedule.

Gross Seeking Seat In House

D. D. "Jack" Gross of Greenville filed today as a candidate in the May 2 Democratic primary for the North Carolina House of Representatives.

Gross is seeking election to one of the two seats in the Eighth District, composed of Pitt and Greene Counties, now held by Representatives Sam Bundy and Horton Rountree.

Pointing out that he had had to take responsibility for his own education, Gross stressed the necessity for responsibility in all areas of life, including government and money. "Almost everything in state government comes down to how the bills are to be paid," he said.

"There are no magic wands," the candidate observed. "Our world requires skills, knowledge, and integrity, and these are gained by people who take responsibility for preparing themselves and then serving."

Gross added, "Government can never do for us what we

Positions Reaffirmed By Senate Candidate

By TOM BAINES

U.S. Senate candidate McNeill Smith reaffirmed his positions on the farm program and utility rate reform during a news conference at the Holiday Inn here.

Smith, a Guilford County Democrat, told a morning press gathering that he grew up in Robeson County and worked on farms as a boy "so I know the problems" farmers are facing.

The candidate said that his experience on the farm taught him to appreciate the farmer plight and he contended, "We need the family farm and its farmers."

He called for retention of the price control program, saying that it has taken some time to develop. Depression farmers were not subject to control and over production caused prices to suffer, he recalled.

Candidate For Commissioner

Tom Johnson of Greenville early today filed as a candidate for the Pitt Board of County Commissioners. He filed for the Greenville Township, District One seat.

Currently a teacher of health education in the Dept. of Health, Physical Education, Recreation, and Safety at East Carolina University, he previously held teaching positions at UNC-Chapel Hill and Clemson University.

A native of the Rosewood Community of Wayne County, Johnson grew up as a farmer and was active in 4-H club work. He graduated from Goldsboro High School in 1953. He holds the A.B., M.A. and the Ph.D. degrees from UNC-Chapel Hill.

An active Democrat since his college participation in the Young Demo Club, Johnson has been Chairperson of the Ninth Precinct and a member of the Pitt County Democratic Executive Committee since 1974.

In conjunction with his teaching profession, he has held numerous leadership positions

Arrest Two For Rape

HOLLYWOOD — Two 18-year-old men have been arrested by the Pitt Sheriff's Department on charges stemming from an alleged rape incident Wednesday at D. H. Conley High School here.

Sheriff Ralph Tyson said that officers arrested Jesse Davis of Rt. 7, Box 382, Greenville, and Ronald Wade Roach of Rt. 1, Box 407-B, Grimesland, and charged them with the rape of a 17-year-old Conley student.

Davis was charged with rape and crime against nature, the sheriff said, while Roach was jailed on one count of rape.

The incident allegedly took place around 1:30 p.m. on a school bus parked at Conley, Sheriff Tyson said.

The victim was taken to Pitt Memorial Hospital following the assault for treatment, it was reported.

Bond for Davis was set at $3,000 on the rape charge and $5,000 on the crime against nature count. Roach was jailed under $3,000 bond.

Investigation of the assault is continuing, Sheriff Tyson added.

Seeks Seat As Commissioner

Doug Gurkins announced that he has filed as a candidate for a seat on the Pitt Board of County Commissioners, subject to the May 2 Democratic primary.

Gurkins is seeking the District Four seat, representing the Winterville, Chicod and Grimesland Townships, in the spring primary. The board seat is currently held by Burney Tucker, who has announced his reelection intentions.

A native of Pitt County, Gurkins graduated from Chicod High School in 1960 and served three years in the Army, including a tour of duty in France.

The candidate currently has farming interests in Pitt County and is involved in an area auction and real estate company.

Gurkins was one of the principal organizers of the state Young Farmers and Ranchers Association several years ago, serving as vice chairman of the organization.

A member of Black Jack Pentecostal Free Will Baptist Church, he has served on the official board of the church for the past nine years. He also held the posts of Sunday School superintendent and youth director for a number of years.

Gurkins is married to the former Virginia Ann Mills of Black Jack and they have two children, a daughter, Kristy Dawn, five, and a son, Michael Vann, 13.

In announcing his candidacy for the commissioner post, Gurkins said that, "I am interested in young people becoming involved in our county government because of the average age of the county board."

HAZARDOUS DECISION?

Who makes the decision as to whether city and county schools hold classes on snowy, icy days like today? And if they must be held, why couldn't the starting time be a couple of hours later, so the state and city workers would have time to get some sand on the icy places? Whoever made the decisions today should have got out and ridden around beforehand. Then I don't think the decision would have been as it was. R. H.

County Schools Superintendent Arthur Alford and City Schools Superintendent Glenn Cox were the decision makers. Both said they were out very early this morning riding around. Alford said he also conferred with Rodney Bullock, the county school bus foreman, before he called the local tv station to announce that school would start at the regular time.

He said he believes that a cover of snow injects a measure of caution in the minds of the school bus drivers, that they take it slower, and transport the children more safely than usual. All the buses got in safely this morning, he said.

Cox said he observed virtually the same things as Alford, that they did talk to each other, but that their decisions were not a joint one.

Britain Has Culinary Specialties

By TOM HOGE
AP Newsfeatures Writer

There has long been a general belief that all British food is tasteless and the cooking unimaginative — a notion that is partly the fault of the British themselves.

Unfortunately, many English inns and restaurants make little attempt to feature the excellent national dishes the country does have. If they do have a gourmet menu it usually plays up French specialties.

Ironically, Britain has long been a larder for Europe. Their beef and mutton are excellent but the best of it goes to France along with British lobsters and scallops. And about 75 percent of Britain's venison is exported to Germany.

The island has a wide variety of fresh fruits and vegetables in season, and both the English and their Scottish neighbors have made the most of the berries and herbs which abound in their forests and fields.

But unfortunately, foreign visitors rarely taste these delights unless they are fortunate enough to dine in a private home.

The British do not go in for seasoning as extensively as the French and Italians but sometimes this can be a blessing. Dover sole usually has a fresh, clean taste and English roast beef accents the flavor of the meat itself and does not blanket it with a spicy sauce or cream gravy.

Britain does have one distinctive culinary custom: the traditional tea, which is actually a meal in itself. This delightful interlude features British specialties like Devonshire scones served with rich jam and clotted Devonshire cream. Then there are treacle tarts and those tiny tea sandwiches — paper-thin slices of buttered bread encasing crisp cucumber slices, or sprigs of watercress with sardine paste or slivers of chicken. British teatime makes one appreciate this low-key cuisine.

Regional dishes include poached salmon with mayonnaise, chicken stuffed with prunes from Lancashire and that superb Scottish dish known as cockle-leek soup, actually a rib-sticking combination of beef and chicken. Here is a recipe for this robust dish.

1 pound prunes, preferably pitted
2 pound piece of beef round, or boneless chuck
1 stewing chicken, about 5 pounds
Salt and pepper
8 leeks, half left whole and half chopped

Soak prunes overnight. Place beef in pot big enough to hold it and the chicken. Cover beef with water, simmer and skim off grease. Add chicken and whole leeks to pot after 30 minutes, season and let simmer about 2½ hours. Remove chicken from pot and cut up. Remove and slice beef and put both back into pot. About 30 minutes before serving add prunes and the chopped leeks. Discard whole leeks and into individual soup bowls place slice of beef, a piece of chicken, some prunes, chopped leeks and broth. Good with chilled beer or ale. Serves 8.

Reception Honors Worthy Matron

On Sunday afternoon members of Greenville Chapter No. 149, Order of the Eastern Star, gave a reception honoring Mrs. Glenn Whitfield Garner of Kinston, Worthy Grand Matron of the Grand Chapter of North Carolina. The reception was held at the local Masonic Temple.

Guests were welcomed on arrival by Mr. and Mrs. Lonnie Hathaway and Mrs. Shirley Price. Mrs. Pattie Mizell and Mrs. Estelle Tucker presided at the guest register. The registration table was decorated with a small replica of the honored guest with an arrangement of violets.

Greeting guests in the receiving line were Mrs. Mayo J. Rogers, Worthy Matron, Charles E. Ledbetter, Worthy Patron, Mrs. Garner, Worthy Grand Matron, her husband, Nolan Garner, Grand Representative of Oklahoma in North Carolina, Dr. Lewis Doyle Pruett, Worthy Grand Patron, of Elkin, his wife, Mrs. Jewell Pruett, Grand Representative of Utah in North Carolina.

Mrs. Effie Johnson, Grand Marshal, and Mrs. Pauline Mitchell, Grand Ruth. Other distinguished guests present included Mrs. Gloria Wynn, District Deputy Grand Matron of the Second District, a number of Grand Chapter committee members, Mrs. Catherine Beamon, Worthy Matron, and Robert Wheelless, Worthy Patron, of Farmville Chapter No. 146, Robert Wilson, Worthy Patron of Grimesland Chapter No. 350, as well as several Past Matrons and Past Patrons. A musical program was presented during the reception by Mrs. Marguerite Cook, pianist.

Between 75 and 100 guests were present for the reception. The refreshment table was covered with a white lace cloth. Bunches of violets and purple streamers adorned the corners. The center arrangement was of white mums and blue net in a silver Revere bowl flanked by silver branched candelabra holding purple candles in blue net. The mascots of the Worthy Grand Matron and the Worthy Grand Patron were represented on the table with arrangements of apples and redbirds.

You know what you get when you gross an orthodox newspaper clipper with a reformed magazine saver?

A house that's the pits. I don't know which is worse — a husband who sits around night after night ripping and tearing holes in the newspaper or a woman who can't bring herself to throw away the Credit Union Quarterly from Spring, 1943.

"Something has to give!" I told my husband at breakfast yesterday. "I can't turn around without falling over some pitiful little paragraph about the rainfall in Venezuela or a talking dog in a bar."

"Where did you find that story about the dog? I've been looking for it. Besides, what about you? Is there any reason why I am sleeping with three years of Sunset?"

"I am going through those magazines someday and clipping out all the recipes."

"I'm curious. What do you do with all the recipes you clip?"

"I put them in a little notebook called 'RECIPES.'"

"Then why don't you throw the magazines away?"

"Because some of them have instructions for making a doll out of a broom for a bridal shower, transferring zodiac signs to guest towels and making a sauna out of discarded wine barrels."

"But you never do those things."

"I will someday when I'm not busy clipping magazines. Besides, you have more brass than a doorknob to make fun of me. What about all those ridiculous things you clip?"

"I never clip for myself," he said defensively. "It's always for someone else. I save them for people, like that amusing story of what Billy Carter said when they asked him about the energy bill. You never know when someone will need a warm-up story for a serious speech."

"All I know is this house is ready to walk. The stove drawer is stuffed with scraps of paper, the closets and cupboards are bulging with magazines and you are sitting on Prudential's annual report."

"So, is saving the end of the world?" asked my husband. "What possible harm could it do?"

Just then our two sons came in. "He just stole my Sports Illustrated from 1971." "And he took my football program from 1973 and won't give it back."

We looked at one another. An orthodox newspaper clipper and a reformed magazine saver can marry... but they should never have children.

Psychologist: Spanking May Spur Bad Behavior

ECU News Bureau
JACKSONVILLE—Spanking or slapping a child who misbehaves may actually strengthen bad behavior, an East Carolina University psychologist said in a gathering here Monday.

Dr. Stephen Tacker, professor of psychology at ECU, said the parental use of corporal punishment produces "unpredictable results." He was guest speaker at a meeting of the local chapter of the Association for Children with Learning Disabilities.

"Aside from humane considerations, the basic problem with punishment is its unpredictability. It may in the long run increase the strength of the punished behaviors, or other equally undesirable behaviors."

Punishment of bad behavior might also decrease such behavior or have no effect at all, he added. Since many parents use some punishment in child rearing "without obvious ill effects and often with obvious success," reasons for vigorous opposition to the use of punishment are not immediately self-evident.

However, psychologists usually advise parents to be "very cautious" in their use of physical punishment, Tacker said.

"If used incorrectly, punishment can lead to emotional difficulties, it can teach children to lie or be sneaky, and it can interfere with other important parent-child relationships, such as communication.

"Having punishment work the way parents want it to is far more complex than most people realize, because a large number of other variables determine its effects."

She's Had It With Office Collections

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1978 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: I work in a fairly large office with about 40 other employees. It has always been the custom that when someone becomes engaged, married, has a child or is transferred out, a dinner and a gift is given by "the office gang."

This has become a problem because every month one of these "occasions" presents itself and I am asked to pitch in for a gift, bring a covered dish, contribute toward a special cake from the bakery, etc. Needless to say, this has become very expensive.

It's not only the expense, which I can ill afford, but I also object to the principle. Many of these honorees are only office acquaintances, and if it weren't for the subtle pressure put upon us by the little group that organizes these things to comply with past customs, I wouldn't voluntarily contribute at all.

Since all my co-workers read your column, if they were to see this in print maybe they would stop the practice. Also, I'm sure your reply would help many people in similar situations. Please sign this...

DISTRESSED IN DALLAS

DEAR DISTRESSED: As long as you continue to go along with the system, there will be no change. What you need is (a) the courage to be honest and say, "Sorry, I can't afford to be included," and (b) the willingness to encourage like-minded co-workers to organize a united front in opposition to such collections.

DEAR ABBY: Last Sunday the crowd I run around with wanted me to go to a show, but I had to go with my family to visit my aunt and then my grandparents. I was bored to death!

Why do parents force their children to go visit relatives? It's boring. They keep telling you that your "youth" is the best part of your life, then they make you miserable dragging you to places you don't want to go. Can't they realize that when a girl is 14 she isn't happy going to visit relatives all the time?

BORED

DEAR BORED: Children, even 14-year-olds, should not be forced to attend ALL the aunts', uncles' and cousins' get-togethers. But neither should they be excused from all such visits because they are "bored." If you must go—go, with a smile on your face. And make up your mind that you're going to have a good time. And who knows? You may even have one.

DEAR ABBY: I do not want to be a meddling mother-in-law, but how can I impress upon my new daughter-in-law that it is important for her to acknowledge her wedding gifts within a reasonable length of time? (Is three months "reasonable"?)

Abby, she is a darling girl, and I don't want to hurt her, but I have hinted so many times that I hate to mention it again. Many of my friends have asked me if she ever received their gifts. Please tell me how to get her to write her thank-you notes. We are quite well known in this town and it is getting embarrassing.

NOT MEDDLING

DEAR NOT: You'd be doing your daughter-in-law a kindness to tell her in plain language that people have been asking YOU if she has received their gifts. (Three months is the absolute limit.)

Tell her if she needs any "help" in writing her thank-you notes, you are available. Short of writing them for her, there is nothing more you can do.

Morgan Opposes 'Labor Reform' Bill As Written by utility companies as the main cause for the increases in utility costs.

He noted that Carolina Power and Light sold under 60 per cent of its power capacity last year while Duke Power used less than 57 per cent of its capacity. As a result of the less than capacity usage, expensive electric plants were standing idle, Smith added.

"We have got to keep after these companies," Smith continued, saying that they have a tendency to over build.

The senator also cited "discriminatory rates that are charged residential customers" and contended that residential users "pay at least 35 per cent more for their electricity than do large industrial users."

Smith called for a change in the rate structure in order for users to pay the same base rate. He also called for the adoption of mandatory time-of-day pricing and other measures to cut electricity demand at high use periods.

"I fought for the consumer in the North Carolina Legislature and I am asking for the privilege to go to Washington" to continue that fight, he said.

Smith, mentioning other issues, said that it would be a "diservice" if the Panama Canal treaty is rejected. He also referred to several areas where he disagrees with present U.S. Senator Jesse Helms.

Smith said that he supports energy study, solar energy research, and education aid and he pointed out that Helms voted against legislation in the energy and education areas. Helms, according to Smith, "would prefer to have the government leave the whole (solar energy) problem alone." The candidate also said that Helms voted against aid to colleges and to the handicapped.

Smith said that Helms has voiced opposition to government programs for farmers and veterans, terming it welfare. "I believe that when a person has served his country and has become disabled, what is paid to him in the way of disability payments is not welfare."

Smith announced during the press conference that Dr. John Ball of Greenville has been named manager of his Pitt campaign.

"I am very pleased that Dr. Ball has agreed to head up the Pitt... campaign for my senate candidacy," Smith said. "I have always believed that county organization is the most important factor in any successful campaign."

Ball is chairman of the Department of Social Work and Correctional Services of the School of Allied Health and Social Professions at East Carolina University.

Smith also reported that Robert White, a young Greenville attorney, has been named vice chairman of the Pitt campaign effort.

On mild winter days, worker bees may leave the hive for short flights, but as a rule bees don't fly at all when the temperature is below 55 degrees Fahrenheit.

Taste Of Snow...

Ott Alford of the Pitt County School system said that the decision to hold classes was made after much consideration.

"Today is probably a safer day than normal as far as driving is concerned with everyone traveling at a slower speed," he added.

Alford noted that at the time the buses went out this morning, the roads were not in as bad condition as they were when the children's parents went to work.

"There is better traction when there is still snow on the ground than when it gets down to the ice."

"He noted that the fact that classes were held "was not done for the convenience of the parents but that the general public has plans for their youngsters to be in school during certain hours." Alford added that he was concerned about children being left at home without parental supervision and being hurt by a stove left on, for instance.

According to Alford, attendance was down somewhat but no accidents had been reported. Several buses did have problems with their batteries, however, due to the strain caused by the use of lights and heat.

"There's been a little inconvenience but no mishaps as yet."

Glenn Cox of the Greenville City Schools reported that all the city buses made it in this morning with only one minor incident recorded. This occurred when a motorist ran into the back of a stopped school bus. No injuries were reported.

Neither school systems were notified of heating problems at the individual schools.

Counselors Held Recent Meet

The Mid-East Chapter of the N. C. Personnel and Guidance Association met recently in the home of Mrs. Virginia McMillan. Counselors from Beaufort, Martin, and Pitt Counties attended, representing county and city schools, health centers and Johnson Technical Institute. Dr. Rick Barnes of East Carolina University spoke on new support techniques.

Hyde County was elected to join the three county chapter.

Cox said that they "would keep an eye on the weather" to determine if it would be necessary to cancel classes later on in the day.

Yesterday's high and low temperatures were recorded at 41 and 20 degrees, respectively, at the Greenville Utilities Commission. The Tar River level was 13.3 feet and dropping at 8 a.m. today.

Currently, he is serving the first year of a three-year term as an ECU delegate to the Faculty Assembly of greater UNC, and is also a member of the ECU Faculty Senate.

He is married to the former Nancy Walker Adams of Winston-Salem. They have four children, Tom, Jr., David, Stephan, and Nancy Elizabeth, all enrolled in the Greenville City Schools. Active in local school affairs, Johnson has served as president of the Agnes Fullilove PTA, as a member of the Greenville Middle School Planning Committee on Guidance and Health and as a member of the Executive Committee of the Elmhurst PTA serving as chairperson of the Ways and Means and Physical Fitness Committees.

Johnson is a member of the administrative board of St. James United Methodist Church, a delegate to annual conferences, a member of the Methodist Foundation, Inc., and a member of the Div. of Stewardship of the N. C. United Methodist Church. He is also current treasurer of the Wesley Foundation of Greenville.

Johnson, who continues to manage the family farm in Wayne County, said that if elected, "I will use my experience in farming and education to promote effective and efficient government which is responsive to the needs of all citizens of Pitt County."

"A strong economy is essential to the welfare of our county. "I am also pleased," he added, "that the recent Governor's study showed citizens of Pitt County are particularly interested in elementary and secondary educational opportunities for our children."

Rule Suicide In Gun Death

Suicide has been ruled in the Wednesday death of 72-year-old Greenville businessman John C. Proctor, whose body was found yesterday off Port Terminal Road east of Greenville.

Dr. Jack Kooz, Pitt County Medical Examiner, reported this morning that Proctor's death was attributed to suicide.

Pitt Sheriff Ralph Tyson said that a motorist spotted Proctor's body beside his car about half way between the end of the paved road section and the Tar River.

Sheriff Tyson noted that Proctor, founder of John C. Proctor & Co., CPA firm here, was shot once in the head. Officers found a .38 caliber pistol lying near Proctor's body.

According to the sheriff, officers found "nothing out of the way" in their investigation of the incident, reported to the Sheriff's Department at 12:13 p.m.

Califano...

HEW will publish desegregation criteria in the Federal Register. Califano said he plans to hold other states to those standards.

He said states where segregation in higher education once was the law will be reviewed over the next two years by HEW's Office for Civil Rights.

"These states include Texas, South Carolina, Alabama, Ohio, Missouri, Kentucky, Delaware and West Virginia," he said.

Federal financial aid to students would not be affected if new federal funds are cut off to schools in the three states after 45 days, Califano said.

legislative process, you have to judge the tactics and then make a decision."

Bill Kemp of Goldsboro served as spokesman for the group of protestors to the bill. He said the large attendance at the meeting should be indicative of how businesses and industries of North Carolina feel about it.

"This bill would do more to kill the private enterprise system than anything," he said.

Dr. David White, chairman of the Congressional Action Committee of the Greenville Area Chamber of Commerce asked the senator if there is any part of the bill that he supports and whether the senator plans to amend the bill.

Sen. Morgan said that prior to November, the count was overwhelmingly in favor of the legislation. He suggested that, if that is still the case, the legislation must be made as palatable as possible.

He talked about two amendments that he is considering submitting. The first would suggest that, rather than mandating an increase of two members on the National Labor Relations Board, that a study be made on the feasibility of increasing membership on the Board.

The second would call for the deletion of the section of the bill which would allow labor union organization to enter a business and demand quarters for union activities.

"If we can go forth with some amendments, then I think we can get them, even if the proponents of the bill have enough votes to pass the bill," Morgan said.

"Getting half a load is better than no load," he added.

The senator scolded the business representatives for not having been more active in the political process. He told them that, like the union representatives, businessmen must get involved in government.

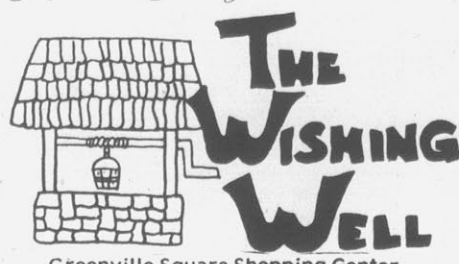

The Labor Law Reform Bill probably will be voted on in the Senate in about a month, he said.

Attending the meeting as representatives of the Greenville Area Chamber were Dr. White, A. D. McArthur of A. C. Monk Inc., Farmville; Charles Burnette, Chamber president; Ed Walker, executive vice president of the Chamber; and Susan Quinn, manager of public relations and governmental affairs of the Chamber.

Paroles Commission Problem

Now that Gov. Hunt has acted to reduce the sentences of the Wilmington 10 the spotlight shifts to the North Carolina State Paroles Commission to determine when the nine in jail will be out.

They will become eligible for parole over the next two years with the first possible parole coming up in June.

Even though the governor has commuted the sentences making earlier parole possible, it is well to remember that parole is not automatic at the earliest possible date.

The commissioners must consider the record of those under consideration while they have been in jail, and whether the state's best interest would be served by returning them to society.

Given the strong feelings about the Wilmington 10, on both sides of the issue, the Paroles Commission will obviously have some difficult decisions to make.

The commission does not have to decide the guilt or innocence of the men, but only whether they are ready for release under supervision, from prison.

No doubt the Paroles Commission will be under the same pressures the governor felt as he was pondering his decision on the Wilmington 10.

It will be important that each case be handled individually and on merit by the commission. The large amount of publicity which has surrounded the matter should not be a factor.

The commission should strive to be eminently fair with the prisoners, always keeping in mind its duty to the state. It is a real test of the Paroles Commission, but one which can demonstrate how well it carries out its duties.

It's Legal, But Sounds Like Rip-Off

HEW Sec. Joseph Califano's administrative officer and security coordinator draws $78,225 from the federal government annually.

He does this because he is retired from the Secret Service and draws a pension of $31,200, and then gets another $47,025 in salary for his present position.

It's all legal, of course, but we have to wonder how our laws could be set up to allow such a burden on the taxpayers.

If the Carter administration wants to make good on its promise of reducing the cost of government, it can start by proposing reforms which will eliminate such situations as this.

THIS AFTERNOON

Will Exam Be A Solution?

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — When the U. S. Supreme Court held recently that the National Teacher Examinations are valid in determining teacher competency, it did not resolve the dilemma for North Carolina.

The problem as seen from the viewpoint of top-level officials in the State Department of Public Instruction is inadequate teacher preparation—not just the flunking of the test.

In short, test failures only point up failures in teacher-training institutions.

J. Arthur Taylor, chief of the certification division, put it this way in a recent memorandum to members of the North Carolina Board of Education: "Reliance upon the tests as a sole factor for determining the quality of preparation of individuals to teach has enabled institutions to avoid accepting final responsibility for failure of graduates to achieve a minimum certification level."

An Excuse

"We believe, that it is a mistake to provide an excuse for an institution to use an excusing its part in failing to prepare a student adequately to meet the minimum academic requirements as measured by National Teacher Examinations."

A review of test scores shows that graduates from predominately Black teacher-training schools perform far below standard. There has been considerable agitation for abandoning the test as "culturally biased" in not recognizing different levels of achievement based on social and economic factors.

A committee is now at work reviewing the National Teacher Exams or some similar test and will report to the Board of Education shortly.

A committee evaluating teacher education has also been at work and plans a report in the next couple of months.

A particular concern of that group chaired by Lafayette Parker, dean at Winston-Salem University, is the system by which teacher-training schools formulate their programs and how those programs are certified.

NOBLITT

At least two members of the State Evaluation Committee refer to "The Club" when they refer to the evaluation process. Taylor has reported, "There are those who raise serious questions about the adequacy of faculty members from one institution evaluating faculty and programs of sister institutions when this process ultimately calls for evaluations back and forth with the role of institutions evaluating and being evaluated constantly switching back and forth."

Tougher

What a number of specialists in the State Department of Public Instruction see as a need is a workable way for those who will be using the product (public schools) to have some say in how the teachers are trained.

For example, there is presently a large oversupply of teachers—particularly in English and social studies; while reading and special education specialists are hard to find.

"Do you suppose the dean, or a counselor, ever tells one of the students that it would be foolish to major in a field which is overcrowded...or that they simply aren't cut out to be a teacher and ought to go into some other fields?" wonders one such official.

The teacher certification exam ought to be like the Bar exam or the Medical exam—given only after college is finished and then as a tough prerequisite to practicing, say some experts.

Then, the colleges would have to bear the responsibility of only graduating as teachers those who truly qualify in terms of academic and personal qualifications. It is expected that recommendations later to the State Board of Education will be along these lines.

DOESN'T DO MUCH FOR ONE'S CONFIDENCE!

By JAMES J. KILPATRICK

The New Reformation

WASHINGTON — Liberals long ago concluded that Jimmy Carter is no liberal. Conservatives are of like mind: Mr. Carter is no conservative either. But recently it became possible to define the gentleman's political religion precisely. Mr. Carter is a Reformer.

This conclusion emerges from a close reading of the written as distinguished from the spoken State of the Union Message. In the spoken message, delivered on the evening of Jan. 19, Mr. Carter mentioned "reforms" barely half a dozen times. The references were lost in the forensic thickets of a 46-minute speech.

In his separate, more detailed State of the Union Message, Mr. Carter bore down. By actual count, he called for no fewer than 18 reforms. So much reform has not been demanded since Luther posted his broadside upon the doors of Wittenberg cathedral.

Mr. Carter begins with welfare reform. His Better Jobs and Income Act would "fundamentally reform current programs to assist the poor."

Then comes Civil Service reform. One of his major priorities in 1978 will be to ensure passage of "the first comprehensive reform of the system since its creation nearly a century ago." Oddly, Mr. Carter did not mention the one reform most needed under Civil Service, which is to say, a change in the rules so that incompetent workers could be fired. Let it pass.

Number three is

"reorganization, management and regulatory reform." The idea is to reduce the federal bureaucracy. Mr. Carter would accomplish this by creating at least two new agencies.

The president next calls for "airline regulatory reform." He asks also for "trucking regulatory reform." His pending bill for labor reform "is one of my highest legislative goals this year."

In his written message, the president returns to his plans for "election reform." The Congress has treated these plans cavalierly, but "the administration will continue to support actions on these measures."

Mr. Carter is nothing if not persistent. His next call is for "consumer reform." He still wants his paper-shuffling Office of Consumer Representation. He is strongly committed to this legislation and regards its enactment "as one of the year's primary legislative priorities."

Grass Is Big Crop

By DAVID TOMLIN
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — One of North Carolina's most important cash crops — cultivated with the same energy and carefully-researched technique devoted to tobacco or corn — never gets harvested.

It's grass. And the fields where it produces the greatest dividends for the state are North Carolina's golf courses.

"Grass is a crop," agreed Eugene Maples, president of the North Carolina Turfgrass Council. "The primary difference between grass and other crops is that it's not harvested and sold on the market."

"But make no mistake about it," he added. "Golf generates a lot of income for the state. We can lay a substantial claim to North Carolina's tourism industry."

Maples is a golf course superintendent in Southern Pines. Most of the Turfgrass Council's 250 members are also golf course managers, but Maples says the council is beginning now to diversify its membership.

"We're trying to get to the point where we can go out and find other potential members in other areas, like cemetery operators, parks managers, sports stadiums and even homeowners," says Maples. Maples and others have

The automobiles missing are two cars used in illustrating wreck cases. They are often used and unless found in the near future will have to be replaced with new, shiny ones in order that justice may prevail.

Marshall Werner von Blomberg, minister of war in the Nazi army, handed his resignation to Reichsfuehrer Hitler before going to Capri on his honeymoon, a highly reliable informant disclosed.

There had been indications the officers corps of the army was not pleased by marriage of the 59-year-old Marshall to Erika Grohn on January 12.

Hitler and Von Blomberg conferred at the War Ministry January 21. The former was seen to enter with great excitement, and later emerged appearing pale and grave.

Soon thereafter Von Blomberg left for Italy.

An official announcement will not be made before the end of the week and may be delayed longer.

It will be coupled, a most authoritative informant said, with publication of a scheme for conduct of military affairs in the future.

Von Blomberg retains the title of field marshal, there being no retirement for that rank.

THE INSIDE REPORT

Why The Delay In SALT

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
WASHINGTON — The historic Senate debate on arms control is being inexorably delayed, perhaps into next year beyond the 1978 elections, thanks to developments in Washington and Geneva tied to a single word: verification.

In Washington, prospects for Senate ratification of a new SALT (strategic arms limitation talks) agreement are going down instead of up because of serious doubts about Soviet compliance. In Geneva, U.S. efforts at verification are partly responsible for unexpected delay in negotiating an agreement.

Central to this problem is the Soviet Backfire bomber. The Senate insists on verification that the bomber will not be an intercontinental weapon, the difficulty of which has stymied the U.S.-Soviet talks. The U.S. effort to bar modernization of strategic weapons, another unresolved point, also reveals the limits of verification.

But questions larger than verification are raised. Does the willingness of U.S. negotiators to accept the Backfire as a non-strategic weapon betray over-eagerness for agreement? Is the U.S. attempt to bar modernization, an effort to compensate for the vulnerability of U.S. Minuteman strategic missiles?

Indeed, expert critics of the nearly completed SALT II agreement feel it gives the Kremlin a dangerous strategic advantage even if all limits on the Soviets could be verified. But it is verification, more understandable to the layman, that causes unease among uncommitted Senators — particularly John Glenn of Ohio.

Having supported chief SALT negotiator Paul Warnke in his closely contested confirmation fight, Glenn was counted on by the White House as a vote for ratification. But after attending the Geneva negotiations as a Senate observer, the former astronaut came away worried about verification. Unless restrictions on the Soviet Union are made more verifiable than they are today, Glenn will vote no on SALT II.

Consequently, senior administration officials are in no hurry for a SALT ratification debate and would prefer waiting until after the 1978 elections. This lack of haste is one reason why the old Carter administration forecast that a SALT treaty would be initiated this month is now inoperable.

Moreover, the Backfire bomber issue — though really less important than missile agreements already reached — remains a serious stumbling block. The Backfire clearly has the range to reach North America on a one-way flight. The Russians insist it is not a strategic weapon, will not count it in SALT's numerical limitation on strategic weapons, and will not even mention Backfire in the SALT II agreement. Instead, they offer a letter from President Leonid Brezhnev promising not to use the Backfire as an intercontinental weapon.

In a recent interview over RKO General Television, Warnke told us any Backfire agreement "will have to be something which is legally binding and which is verifiable." What the U.S. has in mind is co-signing Brezhnev's letter to make it "legally binding." But even putting it into the agreement itself would not guarantee against the Russians turning the Backfire overnight into a strategic weapon. In short, it is not verifiable.

Simultaneously, Soviet negotiators use the nonverifiable argument in resisting U.S. demands to prohibit modernization of intercontinental missiles. This demand is intended, by preventing Soviet modernization, to bolster the largely discredited argument by the arms control community that SALT II would contain the Soviet threat to Minuteman silos.

But Soviet negotiators are adamant. One recent official cable back from Geneva describes this position by Soviet negotiator Shechukin: "Freezing any improvements to existing ballistic missiles (for example, guidance) was impossible and unverifiable."

Other Editors Say Public's Business

(Henderson Dispatch)
Governor Hunt told the North Carolina Press Association in Chapel Hill last Thursday night that he favors a new law regulating and to some extent prohibiting secret meetings of government bodies. He spoke in presenting awards to members of the State press at the midwinter meeting at the Carolina Inn. It was one of the largest attended of recent winter sessions of the news organizations.

The open meeting issue stirred interest as a result of a recent State Supreme Court ruling limiting application of the law in effect until the court recently set it aside.

Secret meetings are held under the guise of executive sessions. They are permissible when personalities are discussed, or when contracts are being examined, and a few others.

When executive sessions are held, the public may or may not be informed as to decisions reached, if any. There is belief that such closed door sessions involve political questions on occasion, and that the public is barred at times without justification. Certainly public business is of interest to the public; which should not be kept ignorant of matters of concern to the public.

Governing bodies are the servants of the people, not their masters. Discussions in secret are a concern of taxpayers who support such bodies.

There are enough rulings made without public knowledge, and which become public knowledge only when made effective. The law requires open meetings, and the Governor thought advance notice should be required of sessions planned. In that way interested persons could be present to learn what is being done.

Governor Hunt said he would seek new legal regulations when the Legislature meets. In that he will have the support of those whose business is being transacted.

Newsprint Price Hike Arrives

By RUTH LANDA
AP Business Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — The move to higher newsprint prices is spreading, but analysts say the recent rises may be the last ones until 1979.

"Costs are still going up, right across the board," said Clifford Bowles, vice president for finance for Great Lakes Paper Co., which this week boosted its quote for standard grade newsprint to the new industry measure of $320 per ton.

The increases, which were expected and which are effective April 1, have been announced by companies producing more than 50 percent of the newsprint used in North America, including five of the top six producers, according to an industry analyst.

Frederic Coffman of the New York-based brokerage house of White, Weld & Co. said 10.2 million tons of newsprint were consumed in the United States last year, 63 percent of which came from Canada. The balance was produced domestically.

"Certainly all the major (newsprint) chains have been anticipating this," he said. "I don't think it's coming as any major surprise."

Edward Dunleavy, analyst with Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith Inc. in New York, said he felt the "small, modest" $15 to $20 per ton hike was, in fact, "a little late in coming."

Dunleavy said he had expected the increase at the beginning of January, and added that it was "not at all onerous or out of line." He said he believed the rise was budgeted for by newspapers, whose profitability he described as "at an all-time high."

Coffman said he expected nearly all newsprint producers to align in charging the $320 price by or shortly after April 1. "The Canadian producers are the price leaders," he said.

As for future increases, Dunleavy said, "It seems right now that this should be the only one for this year."

The new $320 price also has been announced by AbitibiPrice Co., the top producer; Macmillan Bloedel Ltd.; Consolidated-Bathurst Ltd.; Bowater Southern Paper Corp.; a division of Kimberly-Clark Corp.; Boise Cascade Corp.; Crown Zellerbach Corp. and British Columbia Forest Products Ltd.

International Paper Co., the second-leading newsprint producer, has not announced an increase and won't comment on the prospects. But analyst Coffman said he expected the firm to announce one before April 1.

A spokesman for the Los Angeles Times, who said the paper used 365,000 tons of newsprint in 1977, or about one ton per day, said "most newspapers expected a newsprint increase before this time. It had almost become a tradition."

He said the combination of increased labor costs and the cost of raw materials, including newsprint, would quite likely drive up the paper's newsstand price of 15 cents this year.

"It's just part of the inflationary spiral, unfortunately," he said, adding that the possible hike would be "very minimal."

He said that the fact that the newspaper's parent company, Times-Mirror Co., owns an Oregon-based firm that produces newsprint in no way lessened the impact of the newsprint cost hike, because the Times is "a separate profit center."

A spokesman for the New York Times, who asked not to be identified, said the newspaper currently uses about 280,000 tons of newsprint a year. He said the newsprint-price increase would cost the Times $4.2 million more per year.

"It sure doesn't help," he said, but added, "We had

A HEALING REVIVAL?
Why has healing largely ceased in the modern Church?

Certain miracles of Jesus were signs of his position and power and will probably never occur again. Among these are the feeding of the 5,000, the walking on the waters, and the stilling of the tempest.

But for decades after His death, the disciples continued to heal in His name all manner of diseases. Why has this not continued? So far as one can see, there is no reason why faith-filled men and women today should not heal the sick exactly the same as many of the disciples in the early Church did.

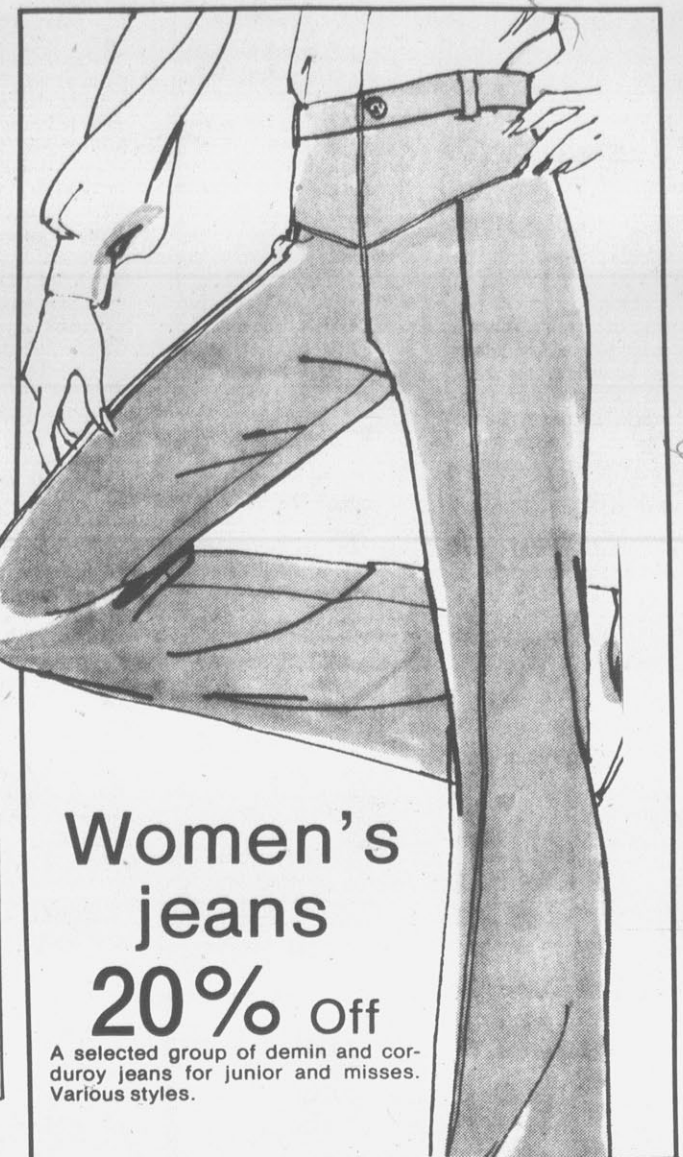

There is a feeling among many Christians today that healing is not only possible, but that the Church is neglecting one of its functions in not practicing healing. If the Church will awake to this duty, its healing ministry will be carried on not in conflict with modern science but in cooperation with it.

Smaller Cities, Towns Suing HUD On Rules

By JONATHAN WOLMAN
AP Urban Affairs Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The Department of Housing and Urban Development is being sued by a nationwide group of small towns and cities in a challenge to pending community aid regulations.

Robert Elliott, HUD counsel during the Ford administration, filed the class-action lawsuit on behalf all communities with populations of 50,000 or less, challenging the legality of the proposed HUD regulations.

The National Association of Smaller Communities, the Mississippi Conference of Black Mayors and 10 other communities allege in the suit that HUD would work "severe hardships" by prohibiting their participation in certain Community Development Block Grant programs.

Elliott filed the suit on Wednesday and said he expects HUD to issue its regulations this month, to take effect immediately.

"We've been negotiating since December, and there's been little movement," he said. The regulations were issued for comment last November.

Specifically, the smaller communities are challenging proposed regulations that would exclude towns of less than 2,500 population from applying for "comprehensive" community development grants.

According to Elliott, HUD seeks to restrict small towns to single-project programs while larger communities can apply for broader programs.

The National Association of Smaller Communities says the regulations "would exclude most of the nation's black mayors from applying for comprehensive grants, since most of their communities are under 2,500 population."

The suit also challenges regulations that would restrict communities of less than 50,000 population from receiving multi-year funding for the programs. Larger cities can apply for three-year grants, allowing better planning.

"Smaller communities cannot afford to employ a staff expert in community development unless they have assured funding for several years' activities," the suit explains.

HUD's $4 billion Community Development Block Grant program earmarks $500,000 for communities under 50,000 population. The money is awarded in "discretionary" grants based on applications evaluated by HUD. Larger cities get urban aid automatically.

The communities that filed the lawsuit include the 16 cities and towns whose mayors belong to the Mississippi Conference of Black Mayors, as well as Waterproof and Grambling, La.; Roper, N.C.; Port Carbon and Lebanon, Pa.; Mount Vernon, Ohio; Cambridge, Md.; North Chicago, Ill.; and Clementon, N.J.

NCCLU Asking Intervention

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — The North Carolina Civil Liberties Union says it is asking President Carter and the Justice Department to intervene in the Wilmington 10 case.

George Gardner, executive director of the group, said this week the Wilmington 10 didn't get a fair trial and the federal government should enter the case on grounds the civil rights of the 10 were violated.

nursed the turfgrass council from its birth four years ago to the point last year where it wielded enough influence to make it an attractive ally for partisans of other agricultural products in the fight for state research funding.

"We found we were able to deal with the legislature on appropriations for specific projects," he said. The most important achievement of the session was money for a couple of extra faculty positions at North Carolina State University devoted to research on grass cultivation.

The university now plans to triple the amount of land it uses in grass research, Maples says, and the council expects to help in the selection of the new faculty members.

Maples expects all of this to make the turfgrass council more attractive to a wider variety of membership, since the council is now in a position to help set grass policy for the state.

"We're just beginning to have what we can put together into a salable package," Maples says. Maples' main worry at the moment is how his carefully manicured fairways are surviving the winter.

Last year's long freezes left many of the state's courses with enormous brown blemishes by killing off large portions of the underground root systems of the Bermuda grass that covers most North Carolina courses.

But Maples says that so far, North Carolina golfers can relax this year.

"So far there's no cause for concern this winter," he said. "There's been enough moderation between the cold spells that we don't expect any damage, assuming the turf has been properly managed."

Innerheritance Lost By Dog

PINEHURST, N.C. (AP) — King, the shaggy dog heir to the good life in his dead mistress' $150,000 house, lost it all last month with the death of the chauffeur who was supposed to take care of him.

King, part chow and part collie, shared the house with George Bisset, who wiped his paws with a towel after walks around town and fed him a dozen sirloin steaks each week.

All that and more was prescribed in the will of Mrs. Florence Green of Pinehurst and Buck Hill Falls, Pa.

She willed the bulk of her huge estate to four friends. Bisset got the Pinehurst house and grounds last September "with the understanding that he will take care of my dog King during his lifetime."

But King's name was left off the deed to the two-story white brick home, and Mrs. Green apparently didn't anticipate that King would outlive Bisset, who died Jan. 19 at the age of 71.

King now lives at the Sandhills Animal Hospital, where nobody wipes his paws and they feed him dog food.

"King doesn't stand to inherit anything," said Warwick Neville, Mrs. Green's Pinehurst attorney. "Now he belongs to the residuary part of Mrs. Green's will. He has not been specifically given to anyone, and therefore falls into what is known as the residue."

But Neville said he believes one of the other three friends named in the will, Mrs. Helen Baumann of Pennsylvania, wants to take King.

The matter has been complicated, however, by a will Bisset has left. Until that is cleared up, King will probably remain at the kennel.

ment construction grant program."

Still further demands for reform may be concealed within the message, but the mind boggles. In times past, presidents regularly have asked that various programs be enlarged, expanded, strengthened, enhanced, improved or even reorganized, but this is not Mr. Carter's approach. Politically he is the inheritor of Luther, Calvin and Knox. Reform!

Well, maybe so, but there is a certain unbecoming arrogance in the approach. We are asked to believe that Mr. Carter in particular and the federal establishment in general, suddenly have acquired all the right answers to all our problems. Given a few tools, they will dismantle what exists and reform the government to their own design. My own thought is that reform is like garlic in the dressing: A little bit, as every cook knows, goes a very long way.

estimated in our budget procedure that there would probably be an increase this year.

The Times owns interests in three different Canadian mills, but he said that fact "doesn't reduce the increase's effects," although the newspaper shares in the newsprint producers' profits.

The spokesman said that although the new hike was "less of a percent increase than it's been in the last few years... Historically, it's always affected the larger newspapers more than the smaller ones."

He said newsprint accounted for 30 percent of a large newspaper's costs, while for smaller newspapers with circulations of 30,000 to 50,000, about 10 percent was budgeted for newsprint.

Another Times spokesman said there were no plans to increase the charge for the newspaper.

Great Lakes' Bowles said that "in a competitive market, no single producer can be seriously out of line with everybody else."

And, according to Pat Brophy, marketing services manager for Abitibi-Price, which has 14.1 percent of North America newsprint capacity, all the producers "are faced with the same costs for raw materials and chemicals."

Brophy said that the price agreement of all the companies was "just inevitable if they're going to stay in the business and be competitive."

And, saying that one pound of newsprint costs 15 cents, he added, "You compare that to a pound of bread and it's a pretty good deal."

"We just have to pay more for anything we buy today."

Any military man who wanted to introduce improvements to his system could do so, could not be stopped, and it was absolutely unverifiable." The Russians are saying: we couldn't stop our military if we wanted to.

If missile improvements are unverifiable, why should the Russians complain? The suspicion is that Moscow plans such extensive modernization of missiles that some of it would surely be observed. Thus, the real concern raised by SALT II is not just lack of verification but the Soviet Union's implacable improvement of strategic systems while the U.S. scraps the B-1 bomber, slows development of the MX mobile missile, and agrees to limit cruise missile development.

In reply Paul Warnke is known to feel there must be some measure of confidence in Russian good faith. But if such confidence is all that is necessary, the entire tedious procedure of SALT negotiations would seem superfluous. The fact is that Glenn and many other fence-sitting Senators lack Warnke's measure of confidence in the Russians, and that is the basic reason why the administration is by no means ready for a SALT debate in the Senate.

Amateur Radio Test Conducted

A test of amateur radio emergency facilities and equipment was held January 29 by the Brightleaf Amateur Radio Club. The test is an annual affair, according to Danny Sullivan, the Emergency Coordinator in Pitt County for the American Radio Relay League.

The test involved simulating a hurricane in the area. The Greenville two meter repeater was used for local messages and out-of-town traffic was handled through the National Traffic System nets.

Sullivan said there were 13 mobile operators in the field and several fixed stations assisted. Some of the new hams participated and experienced the value of amateur radio should a real emergency arise.

The bidding:

1NT 2♦ Pass 3♦

Opening lead: Jack of ♦.

Warned by the opening bid that a key card was off-side, declarer displayed excellent technique to bring home a spade game on this deal.

North-South did well to get to four spades. North's raise to three spades is particularly worthy of commendation. Since South had overcalled two spades in the face of a no trump opening bid, he had to have a long suit, so North's doubleton honor was adequate support to invite game.

We cannot fault West's choice of opening lead. However, had he hit on the other red jack, this article would have been written about a brilliant opening lead. Declarer ruffed, and since he was faced with at least one trump loser, it would appear that he had to find the ace of hearts with West to make his contract. But East was marked with that card for his no trump opening, so declarer came up with another line.

It involved making use of every entry to dummy to score his low trumps via ruffs. Declarer crossed to the king of spades and ruffed another diamond. Then he laid down the ace of spades and heaved a sigh of relief when both defenders followed.

A club to the nine put declarer in dummy to ruff another diamond. Back to the ace of clubs and another diamond ruff brought declarer his eighth trick. Now he simply cashed the king of clubs and continued with the queen.

If East failed to ruff the last club, that would be ten tricks. But it didn't help him to ruff the fourth club either. Down to nothing but three hearts to the ace, East would be endplayed. He would be forced to allow declarer to score the king of hearts for his game-going trick.

Your play to the first trick could decide the fate of the contract! A writer once remarked: "There's no such thing as a blind opening lead, only deaf opening leaders!" Getting An Education While Serving His Time

By FRANCEINE PERRY
ECU News Bureau

ECU junior Jessie High is much like any other student on campus—clad in jeans and casual jacket the tall, bearded black male attends classes here each day, with breaks with friends at the Student Union soda shop and periods of study between.

But in the late afternoon, when other students head toward the dorms or downtown, Jessie meets a car which drives him back to prison, the Martin County Correctional Unit in nearby Williamston.

Jessie High is serving a 40-year prison sentence, but at the same time is acquiring an education through the state's study-release program.

It was a curious chain of circumstances which brought High to ECU: from years of poor performance in urban schools, to being drafted and sent to Vietnam as a Marine, to months of drug and alcohol abuse, to arrest and conviction on a kidnap charge and then to three North Carolina prison units.

High believes it was his imprisonment which made the change in a life that was going steadily downhill.

"When I got 'locked up,' I thought and thought, for days, weeks at a time, about what had caused me to be here," he recalls. "I finally decided that it was my lack of education which caused me to go against the law.

"I looked at my past and my present, and I thought quite a bit about my future."

Jessie had attended school in Youngstown, Ohio, until the tenth grade, but his school years were mostly wasted time, spent in bad company.

"As early as the fifth, sixth and seventh grades, I usually went to school with a pint bottle of Puerto Rican rum in my back pocket, hidden under my shirt-tail," he said. "Since I did not cause any disturbance, the teachers more or less left me alone."

"When I dropped out of school in 1966, I was drafted and sent to Vietnam with the Marine Corps. The standards in those days were very low for all the armed services, so they took me, even though my reading ability was barely at the first grade level."

Before Vietnam, Jessie was a heavy drinker, but had never encountered drugs. During the war, along with many other soldiers in the combat zone, he became a habitual user of narcotics and had no trouble finding supplies of drugs in pill form.

He was wounded during his Vietnam tour and sent back to the States, to Camp Lejeune, with a 90 percent physical handicap, from which he has since recovered. He did not stop drinking or using drugs, however, and after a wild weekend in Jacksonville, he and another Marine were arrested, convicted and sent to prison.

It was early in his period of incarceration, as an inmate at Central Prison in Raleigh, that he assessed his situation and decided that education was the way out.

"At Central Prison, I tried to read everything I could get my hands on, and used to pester the other inmates to help me read even the simplest words. After I improved my reading skills, I enrolled in every educational opportunity available."

At Central, Jessie took several first-aid and paramedical training courses as well as a college-level sociology course offered through N.C. State University.

"The minimum requirement for the course was a high school diploma, which I did not have. I was afraid they would realize this and take me out, but they didn't," he recalls. "Later I took and passed the GED (high school equivalency exam) and enrolled in a 12-month training program in X-ray darkroom maintenance and technology."

After four years at Central Prison, Jessie was transferred as an Honor Grade prisoner to the Polk Youth Center, where he was placed as a clerk in the Center's vocational program and as a dental assistant.

A Polk counselor, Steve Rudisill, became interested in Jessie and got him in touch with several X-ray equipment companies who were impressed with his prison training record. He received several job offers, one as far away as South Dakota, but since he was not eligible for parole, he could accept none of these.

Then Rudisill got him in touch with ECU. "East Carolina said I should be given the opportunity to better myself through education, so here I am," he said.

Now in his third year at ECU through the study release program, Jessie lives in a modular unit at the Martin prison with 24 other men. He finds the quiet hours after the others are in bed the best time to study.

Among his courses here, psychology interests him most. One of his psychology professors observed that Jessie is "friendly and very popular" with his classmates, and is "often the first to stimulate discussion and class participation."

In his spare time, Jessie enjoys karate, and has found much satisfaction in practicing meditation and yoga. In order to gain work experience, he has been a volunteer student assistant in several campus departments, including the main library, the Division of Continuing Education and the Alcoholism Training Program.

"When I was growing up, I never would have dreamed that one day I would be a student on a university campus," he said. "The benefits to me are many: learning, being with nice people and having the opportunity to demonstrate what I can do."

"My being allowed to come here shows me that things are getting better in the prison system. It's a wonderful experience."

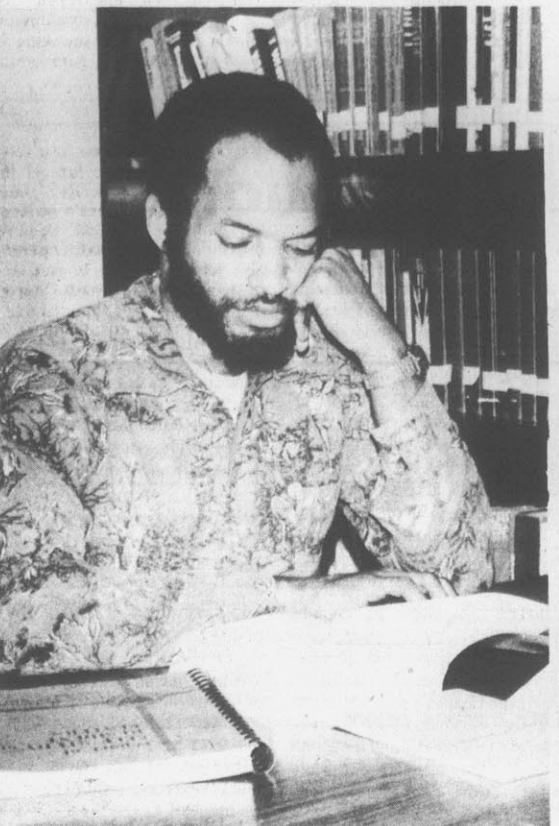

This September, Jessie will have served nine years. Next year he will be eligible for parole. Upon release, he would like to spend more time with his mother and stepfather, Alfreda and Edward Cornwell of Youngstown, and find a good job. He might accept an offer to go into business with an Ohio trucking firm or seek a position in some area of X-ray equipment—sales, installation or maintenance-repair.

Jessie High is the first eastern N. C. prisoner to participate in the relatively new study-release program and is the only one at ECU.

"I have misused and abused life," he says, "but life can be good."

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices showed a broad gain today on the heels of Wednesday's late rally.

The noon Dow Jones average of 30 industrials was up .87 at 775.21, after a 4.42-point rise on Wednesday.

Gainers outpaced losers by more than a 2-1 margin among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Brokers said buying was encouraged by the market's performance earlier in the week, when it held its ground despite a dividend cut by U.S. Steel.

They also cited a positive response to a steady showing by the dollar against leading foreign currencies recently after a protracted decline.

American Motors led the active list, unchanged at 4 1/4. The stock rose 1/4 Wednesday when the company said it was willing to consider merger possibilities should they arise.

The NYSE's composite index of more than 1,500 common stocks was up .15 at 49.94. On the American Stock Exchange, the market value index gained .25 to 122.85.

Volume on the Big Board stepped up considerably, totaling 10.60 million shares in the first two hours against 7.58 million in the comparable period Wednesday.

Can Possibly 'Destroy' UNC System

Gross Seeking...

neglect to do for ourselves. Government can encourage opportunities, but people must remain free to exercise their own responsibility. That applies especially to our business and farming people who want to make their own decisions."

Gross retired in July of 1977 from East Carolina University where he had served for 17 years as Director of Religious Activities and teacher of religion.

Gross came to North Carolina in 1937. Born on a farm near Roanoke, Va., the first of five children, his father died when he was seven. At 16, Gross went to work in a textile plant in Roanoke and worked there ten years until he went to Campbell College in 1937 to finish high school and enter college.

While working his way through Campbell, Gross served two years as campus president of the Baptist Student Union and won first place in North Carolina Junior College debating.

At Wake Forest College, he was elected president of the statewide North Carolina Baptist Student Union and was elected to Omicron Delta Kappa, national honorary leadership society. He was ordained to the Baptist ministry and served as student pastor to the Franklin Baptist Church.

In World War II, Gross requested that his draft board waive his ministerial classification and draft him into the Army. After a year's training with the 70th Infantry Division at Camp Adair, Oregon, Gross entered Officer Candidate School at Ft. Sill, Okla. where he was commissioned in field artillery. He remained at Ft. Sill as an instructor until he was assigned to duty in the Pacific area.

Following his war service, Gross took a position as education director at Temple Baptist Church in Durham and entered Duke University where he received the Master's degree in religion. He served Baptist Churches in Western North Carolina until he came to East Carolina in 1960 as Director of Religious Activities and teacher of religion. After coming to ECU, he began graduate studies in religion at New York University for which he received the Ph.D. degree.

Gross served for 17 years as a chaplain in the North Carolina Army National Guard. His service for the last four years was as supervisory chaplain for the 30th Infantry Division. Upon completing that service, he was awarded the N.C. Distinguished Service Medal.

A life-long Democrat, he served as chairman of the city's Precinct Two before it merged with Precinct Eight. He served as chairman of the reorganized precinct until he resigned to seek the House post. As precinct chairman, he was a member of the Pitt County Democratic Executive Committee.

The Pitt County Democratic Party twice elected him to serve on the party's state executive committee, and the state chairman appointed him to serve on the state finance review committee.

Officials of the University of North Carolina system are taking a dim view of a recent U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare proposal that would eliminate most of the duplication of academic programs now existing at predominantly white and predominantly black schools in the 16-campus system.

William A. Johnson, chairman of the UNC Board of Governors said the proposal — the latest step toward desegregation of the UNC system proposed by HEW — "would probably destroy the University of North Carolina System as we know it today."

Made public Tuesday, the HEW proposal is designed to break down the remnants of the old racially segregated university system by making students attend certain school in the system in order to study certain major subjects.

For example, the three schools of engineering in the system — at N.C. State University at Raleigh, at UNC-Charlotte and at A and T State University in Greensboro — might have to be consolidated into schools at Raleigh and Greensboro. Or all elementary school teaching programs might be consolidated at one institution, while all special education teacher training programs might be consolidated at another school.

HEW has been pressuring the state to update the UNC system's 1974 desegregation plan since the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People's Legal Defense and Education Fund filed a successful motion in federal district court in Washington, D.C., alleging North Carolina was not moving fast enough in its efforts toward total desegregation.

UNC board member David Whichard of Greenville, said of the newest HEW proposal, "I think it would disrupt the whole state university system as we now know it and as it is now constituted."

"I just don't think the State of North Carolina can afford to turn the university system over to HEW or any other federal agency to operate," Whichard emphasized.

He noted that the Board of Governor's planning and programs committee is scheduled to meet Saturday, and indicated that the HEW proposal would be discussed at that time, with the committee possibly making recommendations for a course of action to the entire board which is scheduled to meet February 10.

UNC president William Friday termed the HEW proposal, "not acceptable." He is expected to ask the Board of Governors to adopt that position at their next meeting.

"Their basic motivation is the movement of people, not sound education decisions," Friday said, adding that HEW has taken, "a new and more forceful advocacy than I had encountered before."

HEW and UNC have been negotiating for several months on the desegregation issue and UNC officials had thought a compromise had been reached. However, Friday said, HEW indicated that it would require greater efforts in the elimination of duplicate programs at a recent meeting in Atlanta.

In a letter to members of the Board of Governors dated January 31, Friday said HEW had asked the university system to "develop a new plan which would use transfers, terminations and reassignment of academic programs as the principal means of changing student attendance patterns."

Virginia Gov. John Dalton Tuesday said Virginia will ignore a February 4 deadline that the state has to submit a revised state college desegregation plan to HEW, although the governor said

Rose Hosts Rocky Mount In Key Game

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor
One championship will be decided this weekend, and another could be up for grabs in the Rose High School Gymnasium.

Friday night, Rocky Mount, the unbeaten Division I leader places its 5-0 record on the line against the Rose Rampants, 4-1, in a basketball contest that could decide the title in the league.

Then, on Saturday, the Division I wrestling championships will be held at Rose, with the Rampants a clear-cut favorite to win another title.

The lone defeat the Rampants have suffered in the Division I cage wars came at the hands of Rocky Mount in the Gryphon gym earlier this year by a three-point margin. Since then, both clubs have waded through the rest of the first round of play unbeaten.

"This is the one we've got to have," Coach Jim Brewington said of Friday night's game. (Tipoff in the girls' game is at 6:30 p.m., with the boys starting at about 8 p.m.)

"We'd like to win the regular season conference title and be assured of a state playoff berth. That would take a lot of pressure off us in the tournament," Brewington said. "The kids feel like they can win it, and I guess that's what's important."

Brewington said that in the first game, the Rampants didn't get the ball inside to William Barnes effectively in the second half of play after they had forged a half-time lead. "So we're going to try and improve on that this time."

Brewington pointed out that one big factor in the Rampant success is the inability of the opposition defense to stop the team by stopping one person. "If they sag back on Barnes, then Greg Guthrie and James Hawkins are going to kill them, and if they take away the outside stuff, then Barnes will get them in the middle. Then, we get good support from Anthony Bryant and Billy

Guthrie Sees Teamwork As Most Important Factor In Rose Success

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor
"I just did what I had to," Greg Guthrie modestly said. What he had to do was lead the Rose victory last Tuesday against Northeastern, as the Eagle defense cut off William Barnes and James Hawkins.

Guthrie responded with a career high 39 points, many of them made by just driving to the basket. "Our plan is for the team to have a balanced scoring attack," Guthrie explained, "so nobody can stop us. If they try to stop one of us, the others will get more."

What happened Tuesday was that when Guthrie drove, the Eagles expected a pass to Barnes and sagged back on him. That left the way open for Guthrie to score easy layups. On other occasions, he will have to get his scoring from the outside, or pass to Barnes and the other inside men as the defense comes out to get him and Hawkins. "This is the way for us to win," Guthrie said. "The fellows on the team realize this, and everyone has a good attitude."

Sometimes Guthrie is on the court wearing his glasses, while at other times he has contact lenses on. "I really feel better with the glasses," he said. "I feel safer in them too, and I think I play better with them than with the contact lenses."

Guthrie still had to miss three games this year, when he suffered an injury to his thigh in the opening game of the year. "I got kneed, and it hurt to have to watch from the bench."

Guthrie looks to Friday's game with Rocky Mount to be the key for the rest of the season. "If we beat them, and nobody else touches us, then I think we'll be in for the championship. Buck

(Williams) and Jeff (Battle) are two good players, but we can't get scared of them." Greg said that the Rampants have a different attitude about this Rocky Mount game. "I really think that we'll be ready to go

Conley Girls Take The Lead

HOLLYWOOD — D.H. Conley's girls' basketball team moved into first place in the Eastern Carolina Conference last night with a 56-48 victory over C. B. Aycock.

The Vikings also prepared for their key meeting with North Lenoir on Friday by spanking the Aycock boys, 82-44.

The victory raised the Conley girls' record to 8-1 in the conference, while Aycock fell off to 9-2.

Conley pulled out to an 11-6 lead in the first period of the game, and didn't allow the Falconettes to catch up. The Valkyries led at the half, 26-20. In the third period, Conley upped its margin to 36-29, then outthit Aycock down the stretch, 20-19.

Annie Hardy led Conley with 20 points, while Annie Wooten added 11. Helen Jones paced Aycock with 15, with Cherri Braswell adding 10.

In the boys' game, Conley had little trouble with the last-place Falcons. They broke away to a 19-6 lead in the first period and upped that to 35-14 at the half.

In the third period, Conley ran its lead out to 52-28. Then, in the last frame, the Vikings dumped in 30 points, as Aycock got 16.

North Pitt In Upset Victory

LITTLEFIELD — North Pitt surprised Ayden-Grifton last night with a 58-48 victory. The Ayden-Grifton girls, however, pulled off a 47-36 win in their game.

In the opener, the Ayden-Grifton girls rolled out to a 10-4 lead in the first period and were never caught by the Pant-HERS. Ayden-Grifton continued to lead at the half, 25-19.

In the third period, the Chargerettes kept on moving away, building their lead out to 37-25. North Pitt outthit them in the final quarter, 11-10.

Karen Haseley led Ayden-Grifton with 19 points, while Sue Grimes had 12 to pace North Pitt.

Then, in the boys' varsity game, North Pitt broke out on top at the start and built up a 16-8 lead in the opening quarter. The Chargers were able to cut only one point off that in the second frame, and trailed, 25-18, at the half.

North Pitt got that point back in the third quarter, and took a 32-24 lead into the final stanza. North Pitt outthit Ayden-Grifton, 26-24, in that.

Allen Makes His Return To LA

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A jubilant George Allen, promising harmony, excitement, an end to the "Allen myth," and wielding a plan designed to put the Rams into the Super Bowl, has made his return to Los Angeles.

Allen, who first became a National Football League head coach in 1966 with Los Angeles, then was fired after the 1970 season and went to the Washington Redskins, had said he would be back Wednesday at a press conference to formally introduce him as the new Rams coach, a beaming Allen said. "It's like a dream come true. It's home to us."

Fired by the Redskins two weeks ago and Ram owner Carroll Rosenbloom's much-preferred man to guide Los Angeles, Allen replaces Chuck Knox, who left the Rams last month to become head coach of the Buffalo Bills. Allen's contract with Los Angeles is a multi-year agreement worth an estimated $200,000 annually.

Some Rams players reportedly did not want Allen as their coach, but he said, "I don't see disharmony as any problem here. I think maybe some of the Redskins felt the same way at first when I went there. After we get down to working, I think everyone will feel good about our team."

Although known for his emphasis on defense, Allen said the Rams' offense will be more entertaining than in the past. One of Rosenbloom's chief complaints with Knox was that the team's offense lacked imagination.

Washington Is Back Now

NEW YORK (AP) — Kermit Washington, saying his 60-day suspension without pay and $10,000 fine were ample punishment for his devastating punch-out of Rudy Tomjanovich, has been spared "eye-for-an-eye" justice and reinstated by the National Basketball Association effective Feb. 10.

NBA Commissioner Lawrence F. O'Brien ruled Wednesday that the 26-year-old Washington, who was traded from Los Angeles to the Boston Celtics during the suspension, can return to action when the Celtics entertain New Orleans on Feb. 10.

As a member of the Lakers, Washington caused a furor when he flattened Tomjanovich as the Houston Rockets' ace tried to break up a fight between Washington and Houston's Kevin Kunnert during a game last Dec. 9.

Besides the suspension and fine, Washington also lost an estimated $50,000 in salary because an NBA player cannot be paid while suspended. He still faces court action in damage suits brought by both Tomjanovich and the Rockets.

O'Brien's ruling followed a Jan. 23 letter from Washington in which the 6-foot-8, 230-pound forward applied for reinstatement. The commissioner rejected suggestions that Washington not be allowed to play until Tomjanovich can return to action.

Mistrial Is Declared In Suit Against National Football League

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — "You haven't won and you haven't lost. Nothing was accomplished," said Bubba Smith's attorney after a jury failed to decide if negligence was involved in Smith's 1972 knee injury.

U.S. District Judge John Miller declared the former All-Pro athlete's $2.5 million suit against the National Football League a mistrial Wednesday after six days of testimony.

Smith's lawyer, Tony Cunningham, said he would seek a retrial, possibly by spring.

The judge urged the four-man, two-woman jury to reach a verdict during its seven hours of deliberations over two days. But the panel reported it was hopelessly deadlocked.

"After polling all of the jurors, we feel that coming back tomorrow would be to no avail," the jury foreman told Miller.

"It's like kissing your sister,"

Cunningham said afterwards. "Nothing was accomplished, but the costs involved in the trial run into the thousands."

Smith was just as gloomy. "It was like going into sudden death overtime," he said. "About the only thing I got out of it was eating almost all the lifesavers ever made."

Smith, 32, claimed he was severely injured during a game at Tampa Stadium Aug. 26, 1972 between the Pittsburgh Steelers and Baltimore Colts.

A defensive end for the Colts, Smith said he ran out of bounds on a fourth-quarter play and collided with a sideline down marker. The injury, he said, wrecked his pro career.

He sued the NFL, and two officials, head linesman Ed Marion and Bob Lastra, who held the sideline marker that day.

Smith sat out the rest of the year and underwent knee surgery. He was traded to Oakland in 1973 and finished out his career in 1976 as a substitute player with Houston.

He said he was never the same high-caliber athlete after the injury. The defense attempted to raise doubts about Smith's claims that the marker was responsible for the injury and that the injury ended his career.

NFL attorney Daniel Burton showed game films and said it was his opinion that Smith collided on the field — not on the sideline — with Steeler running back Franco Harris, then fell over him into the pole.

An injury on the field is a risk of the game, Burton insisted.

He also argued Smith did play for Oakland and in fact earned more money than he did at Baltimore.

Cunningham produced witnesses who testified that Smith's injury greatly reduced his potential income in salary and commercials.

FORD FAIRMONT IS AMERICA'S BEST SELLING NEW CAR IN HISTORY. VIRGINIA-CAROLINA OWNERS TELL YOU WHY.

Joseph White, Chester, Va.
"I like the Fairmont's style and I like its handling. But the mileage is what I bought the car for."

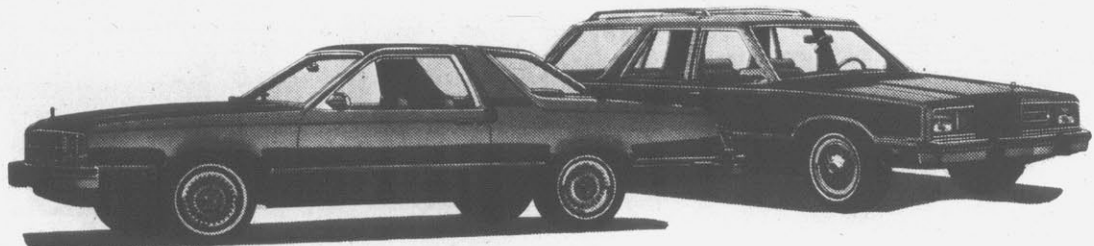

Gladys Edwards, Greenville, N.C.
"I saw it on the lot and I liked it. And when I tried it, I said, this is it. I'm buying gas a lot less often now."

Michael Knowles, Motoaca, Va.
"We have three children and it's a good sized car for us. Gas mileage has been real good."

James Zieg, Goldsboro, N.C.
"It's got about 90% of the space of the large station wagon that I had before. And it cost a great deal less."

In its first 40 days, the new Ford Fairmont took off at an even faster sales pace than the original Mustang. Virginia and Carolina owners can tell you why.

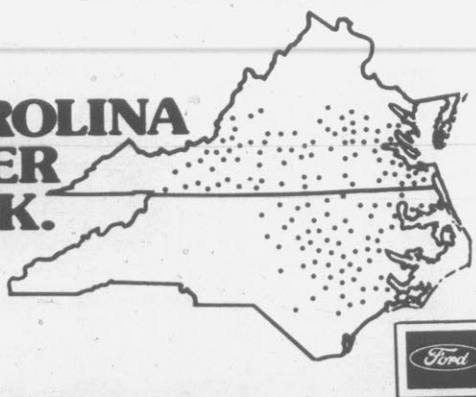

They were first attracted to Fairmont by its excellent fuel economy. And when they drove one, they were thoroughly impressed with its roominess, its handling and ride.

And they were completely sold by the Fairmont's clean, good looks and the lowest sticker price of any mid-size car in America.

Come drive one for yourself. You'll see why so many people are sold on the new Ford Fairmont.

Cuban Presence Is Mostly Felt By The Africans

By LARRY HEINZERLING
Associated Press Writer

Cubans are fighting wars in black Africa, breeding bulls and building roads in Asia and waging a low-key campaign to win influence among their Caribbean neighbors.

The island nation's campaign for Third World leadership — with Africa replacing Latin America as its top priority — mixes the gospel of socialism with a flood of soldiers, doctors and other technical advisers.

Cuba's largest presence abroad is in Africa where an estimated 27,000 Cubans, mostly soldiers, operate in 16 countries.

President Fidel Castro also has dispatched his "international builders brigade" to Vietnam and is wooing friends in Jamaica in the Caribbean and Guyana on South America's northeast coast.

Aside from soldiers, the brigade resembles in many ways the U.S. Peace Corps. It includes everything from teachers, basketball coaches and doctors to construction workers and dance instructors, often followed by propaganda movies and the government news agency, Prensa Latina.

In Vietnam, Cuba has opened a bull-breeding center northwest of Hanoi, built a hospital in central Binh Tri Province and constructed a 30-mile highway southwest of Hanoi linking industrial and agricultural areas.

The Vietnamese government recently awarded friendship medals to 20 Cuban experts for their contribution to war reconstruction.

In the Caribbean, Cubans in Jamaica have built an agricultural school for 500 students outside Kingston, have a micro-dam project in the works, are training construction crews and are providing technical assistance in sports, science, tourism, mining and agriculture.

In Guyana, a brigade of doctors has been working in Georgetown and remote areas of the interior. Cuban experts in Georgetown are also in charge of the shrimp fleet, training Guyanese in fishing.

Elsewhere in the region, Cuba is the main supporter of the Puerto Rican independence movement. Informed sources in San Juan say they are convinced that Havana is the main financial backer of the Marxist pro-independence Puerto Rico Socialist Party.

Some of the islands of the Caribbean are seeking independence and Cuba is believed to be seeking influence in those areas through political parties rather than violent revolution.

Cuba's involvement in Africa was capped last March by a tour by Castro to Somalia, Ethiopia, Tanzania, Mozambique and Angola. Its role in Africa has widened since.

Last month, a soldier whom Somalia identified as one of an estimated 2,500 Cubans supporting Ethiopian forces was captured by ethnic Somali insurgents in the Ogaden region of eastern Ethiopia.

Also last month, Western diplomats in Lusaka reported the recent arrival of an estimated 50 to 75 Cuban military advisers in Zambia to train black nationalist guerrillas fighting in neighboring Rhodesia. The report was called "complete rubbish" by Joshua Nkomo, leader of the Zimbabwe African Peoples Union, who visited Havana last year.

Cuba's largest present in Africa is still in Angola, the former Portuguese colony where an expeditionary force of 19,000 soldiers and 4,000 civilian advisers are backing the Marxist government against two guerrilla nationalist movements.

Cuba's most recent major commitment is to Ethiopia, whose leftist regime is fighting at least two secessionist movements. Cuban troops are reported to be flying into Ethiopia from Angola and Havana aboard Soviet-made IL-62 jet transports to prepare for a counteroffensive against Somali-backed rebels in the Ogaden area.

Angola, Ethiopia and Zambia are only three of the 16 African states where Cuba is reported training armies, growing coffee, running hospitals, building schools and establishing state security systems.

Castro also provided military advisers to Arab South Yemen to support insurgent activities against neighboring Oman. Oman crushed the rebellion. But virtually all of Cuba's soldiers overseas are in Africa, and it is Africa which Castro has apparently chosen as a battleground in his bid for Third World leadership, with the blessing and funding of the Soviet Union.

"African blood flows through our veins," Castro said more than a year ago. "We are not only a Latin American nation, we are a Latin African nation." Cuban blood has spilled in Angola, where thousands of Cuban troops helped President Agostinho Neto and his Popular Movement for the Liberation of Angola defeat two other nationalist armies backed by the United States and South Africa. U.S. officials in Washington say 500 to 600 Cuban soldiers have been killed in clashes with antigovernment forces. Some political observers regard Angola as a potential Cuban Vietnam since one of the defeated factions, Jonas Savimbi's National Union for the Total Independence of Angola, is still fighting a guerrilla war in the southern part of the country.

The Cubans are not universally embraced in black Africa. Such conservative leaders as President Felix Houphouet-Boigny of the Ivory Coast fear communist expansion. Stories of the "ugly Cuban" also are beginning to surface. "Go boil this water again!" one Cuban was heard shouting at a waiter at a cafe in Bissau, capital of Guinea-Bissau, last year. "You want us to get sick with this African water?"

There are persistent although unconfirmed reports of ill feeling between Cuban soldiers and Angolan troops who resent taking orders from the outsiders.

Australian Book Carries Article

ECU News Bureau
An article by East Carolina University psychologist John Lutz will appear in a teaching manual to be published by Northern Rivers College in Australia.
The article, "Some Comments on Psycholinguistic Research and Education," was first published in a 1974 issue of the Journal of Reading. It stresses the limitations of basal readers now in use in elementary schools.
Language comprehension capacity of the primary age child is much greater than is usually assumed, the article states, and current reading texts do not challenge the child's potential for learning.
An assistant professor at ECU, Dr. Lutz studied at the University of Chicago and Florida State University, and holds the PhD degree from the University of Tennessee.
His research specialty is language development.

Remedial Steps In Weightlifter Takes Top Basic Education Award In Virginia

ECU News Bureau
East Carolina University is "doing something positive" about complaints of insufficiency in basic education on the part of college students.

Dr. John Howell, Vice Chancellor for Academic Affairs, told the ECU Board of Trustees Tuesday that new programs — including testing — have been implemented in the areas of mathematics and English, apparently with good success. The programs were instituted in the Fall semester.

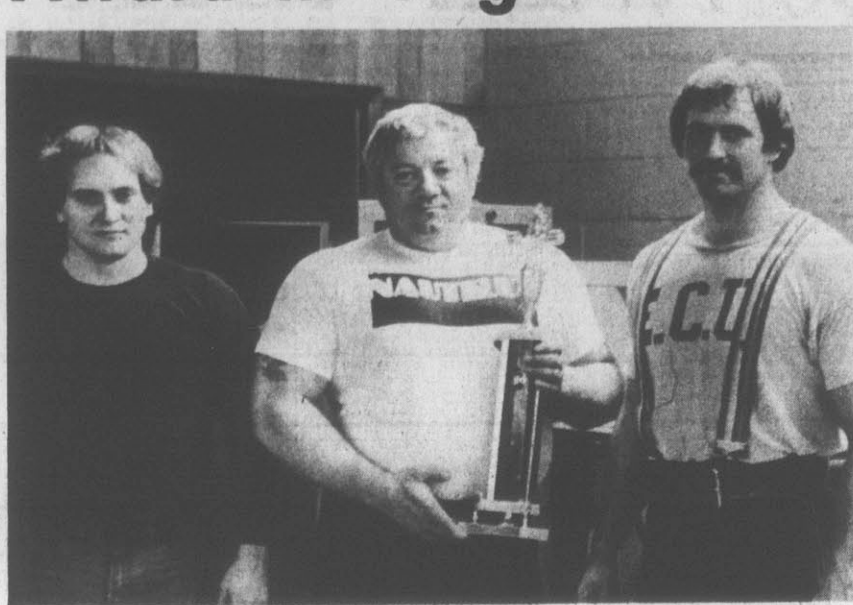

"With these programs, we are moving forward to eliminate the complaints you hear so much about that college graduates are unable to read and write," Howell said. The programs involve testing for levels of preparatory education and remedial work or close supervision courses as indicated. In one program, a test is required for a passing grade in a course whether or not the student completes the course satisfactorily. The student must still take and pass the additional test.

Howell reported that black enrollment at ECU is increasing each term, with a 7.34 per cent overall black enrollment. For the Fall semester, he said 9.7 per cent of freshmen and 6.4 per cent of transfers were black, for an overall percentage of 8.8 in incoming students.

Farmville's Charles (Chuck) Braxton has chalked up another weightlifting victory, taking the top award in the overall lift record encompassing three separate categories of events.

At the Virginia State competition held in Lynchburg, Va. on Saturday, Jan. 28, Braxton established a total weight lift of 1700 pounds. The competition was open to all weightlifters nationally.

In the separate categories, Braxton's record was — the squat position, 620 pounds; bench press position, 430 pounds; and dead lift, 650 pounds.

Braxton, an employee of Tarheel Toyota, Inc., trains under the supervision of Fred Roll at Nautilus Health Club. Nautilus sponsored Braxton in the Virginia event. Braxton said he plans to compete in the Atlantic States competition being held in Raleigh on February 25.

Faculty Appointees Announced Tuesday

ECU News Bureau

A list of 23 new faculty appointments was approved Tuesday by the East Carolina University board of trustees. The list submitted by Dr. Robert L. Holt, Vice Chancellor for Administration and Planning, also included 16 separations. Two of these were because of death. Dr. Holt reported five faculty leaves and two returning from leave.

Dr. Edwin Monroe, Vice Chancellor for Health Affairs, reported that two new masters programs, the M.S. in Nursing and the M.S. in Environmental Health, were implemented last Fall and are "doing quite well."

A report requested by the Liaison Committee on Medical Education about status of the East Carolina University School of Medicine is being prepared by Dr. William Laupus, dean, and his staff, Monroe said. This report, which will be "positive," will assist the Liaison Committee in determining an increase in medical school class size in 1979. Monroe said the medical school faculty now numbers about 50 and will be in the 60s by July.

He reported satisfactory progress in medical school recruiting, facilities and approval and beginning of residency programs.

Camping For Handicapped

A new self-awareness camping program for physically handicapped young adults from across North Carolina will be held April 17-May 12 at Camp Easter-In-Pines.

The purpose of the program is to help the handicapped adult develop and improve self-help skills and social interaction abilities, Susan Clark of the Easter Seal Society said. Group and individual activities will be guided by a staff of professionals and volunteers.

Personal growth, daily living skills, language arts, community interaction and constructive use of leisure time will be stressed. For more information, one may contact the Easter Seal Society, Box 1391, Greenville; phone, 758-3230.

British Class System Is Not What It Used To Be

By GREGORY JENSEN
LONDON (UPI) — It stands to reason that a nation headed by a queen, whose senate is a "House of Lords" and which produced "Upstairs, Downstairs" is bound to be riddled by class.

Only it ain't necessarily so. "Like a lot of other things, class is not what it used to be," says social historian Graham Turner.

Time was — and not so long ago — when Charles Dickens could pray without much irony: "Oh let us love our occupations,"

"Bless the squire and his relations,"

"Live upon our daily rations "And always know our proper stations."

But the generations since World War I have lost patience with "our proper stations."

Says columnist Peregrine Worsthorne: "In the old days, people knew their place. That was what the class system guaranteed. Today, of course, they no longer do so."

The British have an exquisitely refined code system for identifying a person's social class. Nearly everything becomes a clue, including — says social scientist Colin Crouch — "birth and inheritance, education, accents, pastimes, linguistic usage, sometimes even clothing."

Government census results divide Britons into no fewer than 17 separate classes.

Is "class" simply identification, a pigeonholing of strangers? Or does it freeze people into inflexible blocks, thwarting ambition, professional or social?

No two experts agree. Reconcile these opinions if you can:

— "Foreigners who know little of Britain are obsessed with labelling this country as cursed with class divisions and hatreds. They could not be more wrong." — Prof. P. T. Bauer, London School of Economics.

— "Class is set against class, the middle classes denouncing the rapacity of the workers while the workers rail at the privileges and hypocrisy of the better off." — Douglas Jay, British Ambassador to the United States.

— "Social class pervades almost every vital aspect of man's experience in Britain." — Ivor Reid, social scientist.

— "The real problem in contemporary Britain does not arise so much from the existence of class as from its absence. The problem springs from there being too much equality rather than too little." — Peregrine Worsthorne.

Even contradicting authorities, however, would agree there has been a drastic change.

Writer David Cannadine says that in 1914 aristocrats "remained socially the most exalted, politically the most influential and economically the most wealthy single group."

But World War I tilted the balance toward the middle class. The aristocracy adapted. World War II tilted it toward the working class. The middle class, financially crippled and morally outraged, screamed blue murder at injustices which threatened its extinction.

For decades virtually every government move — taxation, education, medical treatment, ownership and organization of industry — has aimed at levelling, at egalitarian uniformity.

Some of the results are astonishing.

In 1953, according to the National Institute of Economic and Social Research, about a fifth of the population lived in poverty. In 1973, about a 40th did.

For the 1977 silver jubilee year, one survey found dramatic improvements during Queen Elizabeth's 25 years "in almost every category which can be measured," from life expectancy to polluted air to the percentage of homes with indoor toilets (now 98.9 percent).

This improvement has blurred the sharp edges of class.

Movement from class to class is continual. Barriers between classes are probably no higher than other societies erect. Some authorities maintain this always has been so.

"Britain has never been a closed, much less a caste, society," says Prof. Bauer. "There was never even a closed aristocracy or nobility." Most 20th century prime ministers came from exceedingly humble origins. Most industry was founded and is run by "new men, even very new men."

Yet out of this welter of conflicting opinions three certainties emerge.

The first is that most outsiders judge Britain's class system through a dense screen of misconceptions.

Queen Elizabeth and the royal family are symbols, not powers. The House of Lords has less clout than Manchester City council. The mental picture of a titled nobleman is probably as wrong as the image of a coal miner. Stereotype "class" characters exist, but exceptions outnumber the rules.

The second certainty is that the British are utterly obsessed with class.

"Has anybody noticed the recent extraordinary increase in middle-class kissing?" asked a Wimbledon housewife of the London Times. The resulting correspondence ran for months.

The Annan Committee, in a government-ordered study of broadcasting, announced that too many television programs show upper or middle class people and not enough feature the working class.

"Nowhere outside Britain," lamented TV writer Peter Black, "would a report like this use the word 'class' to distinguish between fictional characters."

Ask a stranger here what class he belongs to and you will get, not a mouthful of knuckles, but a considered reply.

The third certainty is that class matters.

A noble title may have nothing behind it, but just watch it work in restaurants or getting theater tickets.

The village squire may no longer be called that, but his authority is very real. An undiminished flock of debutantes is as frivolous as ever.

The aristocracy and nobility is not entirely rich, not wholly at the top. But most of it is. The Old School Tie still binds.

Private schools like Eton and Harrow educate 2.6 per cent of Britain's children — and supply 80 percent of the country's bank chairmen, 80 percent of top judges, 68 percent of industry's directors, 67 percent of Church of England bishops and, in parliament, 73 percent of Conservative party members and 9 percent of Labor's.

Furthermore, the British seem to want class to matter.

"Why shouldn't we have a divided society?" asked one middle-class housewife. "All this talk about a unified society, everybody the same class as everybody else, is a lot of cant and humbug."

"Change doesn't mean there is a great demand for equality," says sociologist Crouch. "There isn't."

Thus perhaps there is a fourth certainty about the class system in Britain. It was voiced by the late Richard Crossman, three times a government minister and perhaps the keenest analyst in the Labor party of his day.

"All the obvious things have been done which were fought and argued about," Crossman said.

"We have done them. We have created the means to the good life which they all laid down and said, 'If you do all these things, after that there'll be a classless society.' "Well, there isn't."
