Big Marijuana Shipment Seized, 13 Face Charges

NEW BERN, N.C. (AP) — Thirteen men face charges of importing marijuana and conspiracy in connection with the seizure of a shrimp boat and six smaller craft loaded with an estimated 20 tons of marijuana.

About 50 state and federal agents descended on the vessels about 4 a.m. Sunday after following the 79-foot shrimp boat Lady Ellen for about a day, said Don Ashton, special agent in charge of the federal Drug Enforcement Agency (DEA).

The marijuana, which Ashton said apparently came from Colombia, had a street value estimated by police at about $16 million.

Ashton said the men unloading the marijuana from the Lady Ellen into four small boats and two barges offered no resistance when officers moved in.

All of those arrested were taken to the Craven County jail, where they were charged with importing marijuana and conspiring to import it.

Paul J. Breslin, 33, of Titusville, Fla., identified as the captain of the Lady Ellen, was held under $100,000 bond. The others were held under $45,000 bond apiece. A hearing was scheduled for Feb. 14 in U.S. District Court here.

Ashton said a tip Saturday had led authorities to follow the Lady Ellen, which he said came through Beaufort Inlet to the intracoastal waterway, then up Adams Creek to a place called Back Creek near the Craven-Carteret county line.

Agencies participating in the raid included the DEA, the U.S. Customs Service, the Coast Guard, the State Bureau of Investigation and the state Marine Fisheries Enforcement Section, Ashton said.

U.S. Attorney George Anderson said three persons were aboard the Lady Ellen when agents moved in and the rest were in the smaller vessels or ashore, some in a nearby house.

The loading platform to which the smaller vessels appeared to be taking the cargo appeared to be new, as did the boats themselves, Anderson said. He said several vehicles, including some pickup trucks, were seized along with the boats.

Ashton said the shipment had no apparent connection to two large seizures — one of 12 tons and another of six tons — made last November and December along the coast near Wilmington. A 1976 raid near Mesic netted a shipment of 22 tons.

In addition to Breslin, those brought here Sunday for an appearance before a U.S.

magistrate included:

Donald W. Harper, 38, Titusville, Fla.; Michael B. Forbes, 32, Morehead City, N.C.; John White, 29, Atlanta; Donald A. Black, 26, Chapel Hill, N.C.; Frank H. Clark, 29, Austin, Texas; David Ray Jenkins, 28, Atlanta.

Also, James M. Burdine, 32, Atlanta; Richard L. Jackson, 27, Morehead City; David R. Govus, 31, Ellijay, Ga.; Peter Forbes, 65, Morehead City; Robert M. Herring, 30, Atlanta; and Neil W. Rowe, 36, Titusville.

Coal Agreement Is Said 'Near'

WASHINGTON (AP) — United Mine Workers President Arnold Miller says a tentative settlement could be reached today at a meeting between negotiators in the 63-day-old nationwide coal strike.

Miller said he felt "pretty good" about having a tentative settlement in hand when he meets Tuesday with the union's bargaining council, according to an interview published in the Sunday Gazette-Mail of Charleston, W.Va.

The council is responsible for giving preliminary approval to a tentative contract settlement and explaining it to the membership before a ratification vote, which UMW officials say would take 10 days to complete.

A spokesman for federal mediators involved in the talks between the UMW and the Bituminous Coal Operators Association said, "It's so dangerous to say you're optimistic."

Miller said that only a few issues remained to be resolved although he refused to specify what they were.

No disturbances were reported in the coalfields Sunday. However, a group of southern West Virginia miners headed for eastern Kentucky by car, hoping to shut down non-union coal mines in the area.

In eastern Kentucky Sunday, the crew of a Louisville & Nashville Railroad freight train stopped their train Sunday rather than cross a picket line set up by striking miners.

The miners "weren't forcing anyone to do anything," said a state police dispatcher at Harlan. The empty 70-car train was on its way to an Apollo Fuel Co. mine in Bell County before it was stopped, railroad spokesman Charles Castner said.

Sadat Takes Gloomy View Of Peace Talk

By BARRY SCHWEID
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) —

Egyptian President Anwar Sadat, taking a gloomy view of Mideast peace negotiations, says Israel is bogged down by "old ideas of security" and is trying to hold on to Arab lands.

In an interview Sunday night with NBC-TV, Sadat said the talks have been headed "in the wrong direction."

But Sadat said he agreed over the weekend with President Carter to resume negotiations with Israel on a declaration of principles.

The discussions will be held through a U.S. intermediary, Assistant Secretary of State Alfred L. Atherton Jr., who soon will shuttle between Cairo and Jerusalem.

Once principles are nailed down for a broad settlement, Sadat said, "let every party sit with Israel to discuss whatever concerns them, including this security issue."

Returning from Camp David, Md., the Egyptian leader faced a busy schedule today, beginning with a meeting with Jewish leaders and then a speech before the National Press Club.

In a statement issued after the talks, the White House said Carter had a better understanding of Sadat's concerns but that the U.S. role is to be "a friend of both sides," Egypt and Israel.

The 5 1/2-day visit generated speculation that Sadat's purpose was to have Carter put pressure on Israel to yield to Egyptian negotiating positions.

There was no word, meanwhile, on Egypt's request for its first shipment of American weapons. Sadat said he needed them not only to defend his country, but also to aid his fellow Africans.

He mentioned Somalia, which is at war with Ethiopia, and Chad, which has fought skirmishes with Libyan-backed insurgents. On his way here, Sadat said, he received "urgent messages" from the leaders of Somalia and Chad.

Sadat offered no details. It was not clear what bearing their situations could have on a U.S. arms decision. Countries sold American weapons are prohibited from transferring them without permission.

So far, Egypt has received only "non-lethal" transport and reconnaissance planes. Sadat told the Egyptian parliament last month he wants everything the United States has supplied to Israel, including jets.

Criticizing Israeli negotiating strategy, Sadat said he had met demands for recognition of Israel and a peace providing for open borders only to be faced with resistance on the issue of "self-determination" for the Palestinians. He also noted fortification of Israeli settlements in occupied Arab lands.

"When we are trying to start a new era as neighbors in one area, let us not think on the lines of some strategic advantage here or there," he said. "Let us not try to tread on another's land or sovereignty."

Life Support Units Concept Endorsed By Commissioners

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Pitt County Commissioners this morning gave their endorsement to a project that would create a series of life support squads to serve areas that do not have rescue squads.

Ray Eubanks, president of the Pitt rescue association, outlined the plan — described as a pilot program in the state — by saying the life support squads would be composed of emergency medical technicians living in the area, under sponsorship of an existing rescue squad.

He said the life support squad members would, "respond to the scene of an emergency and treat patients until the nearest rescue squad gets there to transport."

Eubanks noted that it costs about $40,000 to equip a rescue squad, while life support units can be equipped for about $3,300.

The prime purpose of the program, Eubanks noted, is "better treatment for patients."

The life support squad members would be required to meet minimum training requirements set by the Pitt County Association of Rescue Squads and any other requirements set by the sponsoring rescue squad. Life support units, he noted, would be notified to respond to the scene of an emergency by use of radio pagers, monitors or walkie-talkies and would provide 24 hours coverage in their areas.

Euganks, chairman of the Mid-East Emergency Medical Services council, said efforts are being made to have the life support program funded by the state or federal governments.

The board referred a request by Charles Burnette, president of the Greenville Area Chamber of Commerce for $3,500 to help fund a brochure on the City of Greenville and Pitt County, to the Pitt County Development Commission.

Burnette said the chamber is planning to print 25,000 copies of the pamphlet, to be distributed at the various North Carolina Welcome Centers and other places, in an effort to attract tourists to the area.

The chamber official noted that $1.28 million was spent in North Carolina in 1976 by tourists. Of that amount, Pitt received only .009 per cent.

The Greenville City Council, he told the board, has appropriated $3,500 for the project, while the State has contributed $1,500. He said the Chamber will fund $4,500 and asked that the county supply the remaining $3,500 of the $13,000 project.

Commissioner this morning heard the annual audit report from Cecil Mizelle of Worsley, Farley and Prescott, Inc.

Mizelle told commissioners that, "we're pleased," and have, "no complaints with Pitt County," as far as the audit is concerned.

He praised the board for the county's program of investing funds on hand until they are needed to meet operating expenses.

In other action this morning, the board approved a program proposed by the Juvenile Study Committee, designed to prevent borderline juveniles from running afoul of the law.

Committee chairman Henry Dunn said the "Changing Attitudes Through Recreational Education" (CARE), would involve youngsters referred to the program by school attendance officers or the court during the pilot program for the remainder of this school year.

Dunn said the juveniles in the program would attend school four days a week. "If their conduct has been acceptable," then they would "earn" the right to participate in recreational activity on the fifth day.

"We would use recreation as a vehicle to get kids together," Dunn explained, to teach them acceptable forms of behavior, and hopefully prevent them from turning to criminal activity.

Cost of the program will be funded through a state grant.

Second Severe Storm

By The Associated Press

Heavy snow driven by strong winds struck Middle Atlantic and Northeast states today, forcing schools to close and snarling road and rail traffic in the second severe storm in little more than two weeks.

The snow began during the night and was expected to get worse as the day wore on, with winds of 40 mph predicted. National Weather Service forecasters said accumulations through the region would range from 6 to 20 inches.

By the middle of the morning rush hour, several inches of snow had fallen in the New York City area and forecasters said the city would get between 12 and 18 inches by midnight. Two to 3 inches was on the ground in New Jersey. Major roadways throughout the region were under snow, with ice and gusting winds adding to the danger.

Schools in parts of New York, New Jersey and Connecticut were closed but most businesses said they would open, but many were expected to close early. Commuter trains and bus lines bringing hundreds of thousands of workers to Manhattan reported serious delays.

The National Weather Service predicted up to 20 inches of snow in some New York City suburbs and said the storm would continue through Monday night. The one-day record for the city — 17.5 inches was set on Feb. 5, 1961; the Jan. 20 snowstorm brought 13.6 inches.

Two low pressure systems — one off the Carolina coast, the other in the Appalachians — were blamed for the snow.

Files For Seat On Commission

Etsil Gordon of Greenville announced her candidacy today for the District One, Greenville Township seat on the Pitt Board of County Commissioners.

Mrs. Gordon, a Greenville resident for the past 11 years, is a general contractor associate with the firm of Waston & Associates.

"Pitt County is fast becoming the hub of Eastern North Carolina," she observed, noting that, "It is important that we grow with a sense of unity of purpose realizing our responsibility to all of the citizens of this area."

Mrs. Gordon said that growth must be based on "a diversified and sound economy, an effective educational system that will insure the future of our children, a logical land use that will protect the farmer, developer and generally serve the citizenry, and perhaps most important the County Commissioners need to be receptive to the wishes of the citizens and serve their needs."

She added, "Because of the love and kindness I've received from the citizens of Pitt County, I would like the opportunity to serve them as County Commissioner."

A native of Baltimore, Md., she is a member of the Pitt County Board of Realtors. A past president of the Greenville Jaycees, Mrs. Gordon serves as a director of the Pitt County United Fund. She is also secretary and past president of the Pitt County Boys' Club.

The candidate is Sunday School director at Memorial Baptist Church. She also holds memberships in the Pitt County League of Women Voters and the Greenville Community Chorus.

She was named Jaycette of the Year in 1970 and was cited as one of the "Outstanding Young Women of America" in 1971. Mrs. Gordon represented North Carolina in 1977 in the Mrs. America competition.

Wife of David J. Gordon, she has three children and resides with her family at 1002 W. Wright Road.

Why does the Pitt County Health Department refuse to give flu shots this year? They gave them last year. The doctors have these shots. Why not the Board of Health? B. T.

The flu shots given at the Health Department last year were for Swine Flu and the vaccine was provided by the federal government, Health Department Division of Personal Health Director Tillie Cullipher said. The "regular" flu shots (inoculating against the A-Victoria and B-Hong Kong influenza strains) were not offered by the Health Department last year, nor are they this year. Former John Dean Aide Denies Watergate Role

NEW YORK (AP) — A former Nixon administration lawyer denies he is the Watergate source "Deep Throat," despite a report that former White House chief of staff H.R. Haldeman has named him in a new book.

Fred Fielding, 38, who worked under White House counsel John Dean and is now a lawyer in Washington, told The Associated Press Sunday, "I have not had the opportunity to read Mr. Haldeman's book."

"But I can state that at least any part of his novel that names me as 'Deep Throat' is sheer fantasy and nonsense. I emphatically deny the story and the accusation."

Dean and Haldeman were unavailable for comment.

"Deep Throat" was the name

The Washington Post reporting team of Bob Woodward and Carl Bernstein gave the source who supplied them with much of their information about the Watergate break-in and its aftermath.

The item about Haldeman's unpublished book, "The Ends of Power," was published in New York magazine's "New York Intelligence" section. The magazine said it had learned some of the details of the book from Haldeman family sources.

The magazine also reported Haldeman has written that Richard Nixon erased one of the White House tapes, causing an 18 1/2-minute gap. Nixon's secretary, Rose Mary Woods, has said she may have accidentally erased four to five minutes' worth while transcribing the tape, but she said she had no explanation for how the remaining minutes were erased.

"Nixon intended to go through all the tapes, erasing incriminating conversations wherever he found them, but soon realized the task would take years," the magazine said, without attribution.

Haldeman was sentenced on Feb. 21, 1975, to 2 1/2 to 8 years in prison for conspiracy, obstruction of justice and perjury. Last October, U.S. District Judge John Sirica reduced his sentence to one to four years.

He is in an administrative job as head of the Lompoc Prison, sewer facility and will be eligible for parole April 27 after 1 1/2 years in the California prison.

Foreign Study Is Offered By Rotary

Dr. John L. Wooten, president of the Greenville Rotary Club, has announced that the club is searching for young people as candidates for Rotary Foundation educational awards for study abroad in 1979-80.

The awards, which will go to graduate and undergraduate students, teachers of the handicapped, students in technical training programs and journalists, provide round-trip transportation, educational and living expenses for one academic year and funds for intensive language training, if necessary.

District 773 is entitled to three educational awards this year.

Since the program began in 1947, the Rotary Foundation has sponsored more than 10,000 students at a cost of $35 million, involving 127 countries. A trust supported by voluntary contributions from Rotarians, Rotary Clubs and others in more than 150 Rotary countries, the Foundation will spend $25.4 million over the next three years.

The deadline for application to the local Rotary Club is March 1, 1978. Contact the president of the local Rotary Club for further information on eligibility and application procedures.

Soul Singer In A Stolen Rolls

ROOSEVELT TOWN, N.Y. (AP) — Soul singer Bobby Womack has been arrested at the border crossing in this tiny northern New York village, driving what state police said was a stolen Rolls-Royce.

The 30-year-old recording artist pleaded innocent Saturday to a charge of criminal possession of stolen property and was freed on $1,000 bond pending a hearing Feb. 23.

The Rolls-Royce, valued at $30,000, was impounded.

Police said it was stolen in Los Angeles. Womack, of Los Angeles, said he bought it in Phoenix last September.

Police said Womack was traveling from Montreal when he was arrested as he crossed the border from Canada into the United States.

Farm Tractors Mass In Chicago Demonstration

CHICAGO (AP) — A group of farmers angered over low crop prices warmed up their trucks and tractors south of the Loop today, aiming for a demonstration at the nation's largest commodities exchange.

The target of the protest was the Chicago Board of Trade, characterized by the farmers as a gambling pit where speculators manipulate the prices of crops.

A spokesman said 200 to 300 farmers were with their vehicles at a staging area near Soldier Field, about two miles southeast of the Board of Trade Building.

The farmers parked their tractors and trucks at Soldier Field Sunday night, preparing for a 15 mile-an-hour procession, sanctioned by a city parade permit and protected by the police, up Lake Shore Drive to the Board of Trade and Daley Plaza in the Loop.

Board of Trade President Robert Wilmoth said in a letter to traders that "a representative number" of the farmers would be permitted to watch trading and talk with traders. He said extra security guards would be on duty during their visit.

Marvin Oerke of Butler, Missouri, a spokesman for the farmers, said, "We don't want to destroy the Board of Trade, we just want it to act fairly and let the farmers decide what the market will bear in prices."

"We figure the thousand of us will just take a little sight-seeing tour of the building and ask a few questions," said Joe Townsend of Texline, Tex.

"We've got permits to park the tractors there five to seven minutes, but we plan to be there longer than that."

"We figure to take a few bushels of corn and soybeans in the building and show them what the stuff looks like," said another Texan who refused to identify himself. "They should know, since they manipulate the market without ever seeing the products."

The farmers rallied Friday in Bloomington. The group is composed of some of the same protesters who left Texas Jan. 9 and passed through Washington, D.C. before coming to Chicago.

According to a plan by American Agriculture, a looseknit national organization of striking farmers, the protesters will leave Chicago Tuesday for Peoria, Alton and St. Louis, Mo.

American Agriculture was formed in Colorado in October and fostered a nationwide farm strike beginning Dec. 14. Movement spokesmen say the protest has drawn support from farmers in 40 states who have agreed to plant half their normal crop and stop buying equipment until they get a greater return on their investment.

Drawbacks Of Being Married Ms.

By JOANNA FIRESTONE
LANSING, Mich. (UPI) — When I was an adolescent — and even today, I suspect — young girls dreamily doodled their names next to those of a sweetheart, just to picture how they would look.

Mrs. Fred Somebody. Jane Somebody. Mrs. Jane Somebody.

But more and more brides are deciding not to forfeit their surnames.

I'm one of them.

It's usually a matter of preference whether women keep their maiden names or hyphenate their maiden name with their husband's surname.

In Michigan, for example, women and men can use any surname they like, as long as it is not for fraudulent purposes. A woman's name is not automatically changed when she marries, unless she deliberately changes it on her driver's license, social security card and other personal papers.

This practice is growing in popularity.

Lucy Stone, a 19th century feminist, set an example when she married Henry Brown Blackwell in 1855. "My name is the symbol of my identity and must not be lost," she said.

The decision not to adopt a husband's surname is most popular now among professional women and those who launched careers before marriage.

The first drawback to breaking with tradition usually comes before the wedding.

"You're what?" my mother gasped when told her youngest daughter would remain a Firestone for life. She rolled her eyes as if searching for divine guidance.

"What will you put on the mailbox? The mailman will think you're not married."

My father just smiled. I think he was flattered and pleased that the family name would survive a few more years, as there are no boys in my generation.

The first few months are the hardest: cashing wedding checks, for example, when they are made out to Mr. and Mrs. and there is no Mrs.

"You should have thought of that before," the teller sniffed. Motel clerks are the worst. When the reservation and the credit card are in different names, they sneer and wink.

How the word of a marriage gets out so rapidly, I'll never know. Suddenly, insurance policies and magazine subscriptions I'd had for years were addressed to Mrs.

I felt like a criminal with an alias when I paid parking tickets. A note attached to the tickets, which had been issued to Firestone, read: "She just got married. Check under last name Foley for possible additional warrants."

Sandra Kusza, a Lansing-area teacher, was a few years ahead of the trend when she kept her maiden at her marriage in 1972.

"I thought, I'm the last Kusza, I'll keep it going," she said. "Who's going to know me by Sandra Johnson?"

Ms. Kusza said she has met only one serious difficulty:

"I tried to get a library card in Grosse Pointe and the little gray-haired librarian insisted that I use my husband's name."

Ms. Kusza refused, and didn't get the card.

Judith Ruskin, a Lansing free lance writer, kept her maiden name because she had used it for several years in her byline.

"Then it occurred to me that it was just plain old my name, and I liked it and if I wasn't going to change it professionally, I saw no reason to change it at all," Ms. Ruskin said.

She said her greatest problem is trying to get creditors and relatives to address mail correctly. Ms. Ruskin sometimes is called by her husband's last name. He has been called by hers.

"I thought it was funny until I found out I couldn't cash checks made out to Christopher Ruskin," said her husband, Chris Parks.

Diane Silver, a Detroit reporter, said she didn't become Mrs. Arden Heverly because "it would be giving away too much" to relinquish her name.

"I've been Diane Silver all my life," she said. "No man would ever think of giving away his name. It's your identity."

But not to the Internal Revenue Service. It changed Ms. Silver's name to Heverly. She's still trying to sort out that mess.

"When I went to an insurance company to buy renter's insurance, the salesman asked for my husband's name," said Lansing reporter Susan Burzynski. "But then he tried to add 'and Susan' on the next line.

"Wait a minute," I said. "That's not my name." "We've never done that before," he said, after hearing my explanation. A simple: "Do you want to sell me insurance?" worked wonders."

DEAR ABBY: Maybe YOU think it's "gracious" for guests to telephone the hostess the next day or write a note to thank her, but I disagree.

If a guest ducks out of a very large party without saying goodbye because he or she doesn't want to start an exodus (or say goodbye to 100 people), then a note or a call to the hostess the next day would naturally take the place of what wasn't said in person.

But when guests leave my home and say they enjoyed being there, that's sufficient for me; and I don't want them phoning me the next day to repeat what they have already said.

If there is something to discuss, well and good, or if they had an exceptionally good time a written note is welcome, but I think perfunctory phone calls after a party are a nuisance and a thing of the past.

Am I alone in this? Please ask your readers to express their views.

WONDERING

DEAR WONDERING: Readers? Is a phone call phony? Or is it right to write?

DEAR ABBY: If someone had told me this could happen to me I never would have believed it. After six years of marriage (no children by choice), my wife and I got mixed up in a wife-husband swapping deal.

This other couple, who are about our age, weren't happy with each other, and the woman was attracted to me and the man liked my wife, so we went along with the swapping idea just for the fun of it. We had never done anything like that in our lives and thought it would be a good learning experience.

After three months of swapping, my wife left me to move into this man's apartment. His wife had no place to live, so I let her move in with me, but there is no sex between us. I give you my word. (There WAS some at first, but it didn't last long.) All we do is talk about my wife and her husband and wait for them to come to their senses.

It's been five months, and my wife is still living with this man. She says she loves me, but isn't ready to come home yet.

How much longer should I give her? I feel like a fool. We're both schoolteachers and I'm tired of lying and hiding the truth.

SORRY SWAPPER

DEAR SORRY: Although neither of you is a "saint," let St. Valentine's Day be the deadline. (If she's still giving you the "not ready" line, the marriage is dead.)

DEAR ABBY: Your response to NON-SMOKER should be burned! You apparently live in some ivory tower where smokers respect the rights of non-smokers in elevators, restaurants and confined public places. Come out of your tower, Abby, and smell the smoke!

Live in a large apartment building with "NO SMOKING" signs in the elevators, but the smokers smoke anyway. It does no good to remind them that it's against New York City law to smoke in elevators. They do not extinguish their cigarettes—they just move them away from the complainer.

Anyone who says that most smokers will quickly douse their cigarettes when someone complains obviously doesn't live in New York City.

SMOKED OUT IN N.Y.

DEAR SMOKED OUT: You're right, I don't. But please don't tar all New York nicotine users with the same brush.

Hate to write letters? Send $1 to Abigail Van Buren, 132 Lasky Dr., Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212, for Abby's booklet "How to Write Letters for All Occasions." Please enclose a long, self-addressed, stamped (24 cents) envelope.

Shower Given Miss Garver

Bride-elect Dawn Marie Garver was honored at a miscellaneous Tuesday night given by her sister, Kim Garver, at the home of the honoree.

Dora Butler was assisting hostess.

The refreshment table was covered with a lace cloth and centered with an arrangement of white and yellow pom poms and daisies flanked by a candelabra holding green and yellow candles.

The honoree was remembered with a corsage of white flowers.

Morgan Cites Excessive Zeal

Sen. Robert Morgan has expressed his concern about the most recent Department of Health, Education and Welfare campaign against smoking. "We are a nation which has never ceased trying to perfect itself," Morgan recently wrote. "We shall never have a perfect society, of course, but our willingness to reach for it is exceptional in this world, and the trait has a lot to do with our survival."

"Occasionally, however we get into trouble because of excessive zeal," the senator said. "From time-to-time, this group or that is singled out as the 'bad guys', whose social habits have to be stamped out."

"The bad guys these days, are those who choose to smoke. Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare Joseph Califano has taken after them now vowing a concerted attack on smoking."

The North Carolina senator said he could not quarrel with the secretary over what he perceives to be a health hazard.

"But it is hard to justify singling out the smoker to bear the brunt of all this criticism. Nobody is talking about attacking alcohol or drugs, which have far worse social consequences than smoking."

"The newspapers do not carry stories of a man's smoking a pack of cigarettes and going home to shoot his wife. Yet alcohol is not to be banned on airplanes, nor are warning labels to be posted on the bottles. No proposals have come forth for doing away with price supports for the tons of grain used in brewing beer and making whiskey. If alcohol were included in the attack 'we might come to our senses,' the senator said. "Prohibition was an experience which utterly discredited the idea that drinkers could be protected from themselves, and society from them."

"We have been through anti-tobacco campaigns before, with the net result that the number of people smoking has not decreased. The present campaign should have about the same result," the senator said.

We sincerely hope that is true, and we are still concerned about the HEW secretary's inexplicably strong attack in this small segment of his responsibility.

"... While fuel supplies dwindled, the nation continued to shiver under a new blast of arctic air ..."

"While refusing to intervene in the coal strike, the President suggested everyone follow his example and burn..."

Unemployment Picture Still Improving

A January unemployment rate of 6.3 percent indicates the nation is making some progress in reducing unemployment. It was the lowest rate in three years and was a drop under even the December unemployment rate, which was considerably under November. The rate of unemployment is still too high, but the picture is definitely improving.

Rewriting The Loan Law

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH— Having trouble figuring out just what all that legal mumbo-jumbo in a loan application means?

Don't feel that you are alone. Not even the lawyers, the bankers, nor the lawmakers can say with certainty. And that may be costing the borrower more than it should; or it may be losing money for the lending institution.

Either way, the law needs simplifying and clarifying, say the specialists. A legislative study commission is now at work in that direction, with a rewritten Chapter 24 of the General Statutes slated for consideration later by the General Assembly.

"What we are after is a rewrite of the law in language that the consumer can understand, and the lawyers can agree upon," says State Rep. Graham Bell, D-Gaston, co-chairman of the study commission.

"We are not getting into rate-making," Bell adds. "Most of the work involves disclosure provisions and regulating the process so a lay person can fully understand."

Confusion

"The present law has been changed and added to and subtracted from until the industry has to go to the lawbooks almost everytime a loan is made ... and that adds to the cost of the loan," Bell said.

Many other things add to the cost of a loan, and it is not always clear which qualify as part of the interest rates, which are permitted under particular circumstances, and which—given certain legal definitions— make it possible to charge lower or higher interest rates.

For example, the law puts an eight per cent ceiling on loans of less than $50,000. Most consumers figure that protects from usury. But, exceptions have been written in for home loans, installment loans, charitable loans, and business property loans. That covers most of the loans, so the eight per cent limit is not realistic and the few who would borrow under the eight per cent rule simply can't get a loan.

Further, do appraisal fees, points, closing costs, and such count as interest or extra costs for rate and tax purposes? Nobody's sure including the Attorney General.

A new wrinkle in finance is creating problems: some lenders are giving balloon schedules for homebuyers. Early payments are low, escalating as the owner

A Cosmos Investigation

WASHINGTON—It didn't take the Soviets long to start their own investigation as to why their nuclear satellite Cosmos 954 fell down after being sent into orbit.

Don't ask me how I found out, but this is how the hearings have been progressing.

"Comrade Master Scientist Mickelov, you were in charge of sending up Cosmos 954?"

"Yes, Comrades."

"And you are aware it fell down?"

"I heard it on the 'Voice of America,' but as you know as loyal member of the party I do not believe anything I hear on American radio."

"Unhappily, it is true, Comrade Mickelov. Cosmos 954 is no longer a happy satellite in the sky."

"I'm sorry to hear that, Comrades."

"We're glad to hear you're sorry, Mickelov. We're sorry too. What we want to know is why 954 is no longer in orbit."

"Maybe Americans have way of shooting down our satellites without us knowing it."

"Maybe. Or maybe the person who sent up the satellite in the first place made dumb, stupid error!"

"But, Comrades, I sent up 953 satellites and I never made mistake before."

"We know that, Mickelov. So our question is what happened to the 954th?"

"Let me see. The rocket was supposed to go into orbit 150 miles up in the air. It was launched on Sept. 18, 1977, and was 46 feet long and weighed 8,000 pounds, of which 100 was enriched uranium which, if it worked correctly, would stay in space for 600 to 1,000 years. Now if you multiply x by 3 and then add y you should have z."

"Aha," said one of the investigators, "x times 3 added to y doesn't equal z."

"It doesn't?"

"Where did you put the decimal point, Mickelov?"

"Here, where I always put it."

point in the wrong place. Do we have to make a people's federal case out of it."

"That decimal point cost us 500 million rubles, not to mention the fact that parts of the satellite are strewn over all of Northern Canada. When Americans find the pieces they will know exactly what we put in satellite to make it fly. Our spy system will be destroyed."

"Nobody's perfect."

"You know what's going to happen to you, Mickelov?"

"I can only guess."

"You are getting the Order of Lenin for Scientific Achievement With Three Red Sashes."

"I am?"

"We have no choice. If we punish you we will be admitting we did something wrong. If we give you award, it backs up our story that we always intended Cosmos 954 to fall down in Canada after staying in orbit for only four months."

"Thank you, Comrades. I knew you would have faith in me. When I get my award do you know what I'll say? 'Cosmos 954 was one small step for man, and one giant step for mankind.'"

"That's very good, Mickelov. You may not know where to put a decimal point, but you certainly have a way with words."

Soviet Stress On CD

By FRED S. HOFFMAN
AP Military Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Pentagon says the number of Soviet citizens involved in civil defense projects outnumbers similar U.S. workers by about 16 to one, and the disparity makes some officials wonder if the Soviet program might make that nation believe nuclear war is a "reasonable option."

Russia is expanding construction of nuclear blast shelters for key industrial workers, as well as for political, military and managerial leaders, the Defense Department has told Congress.

The Pentagon report estimated that more than 100,000 civilian and military personnel are involved full time in the Russian civil defense program. In contrast, according to U.S. officials, there are about 600 federal employees and 5,500 others on the state and local level working on civil defense in this country.

Gen. George S. Brown, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, said in his formal report to Congress that U.S. civil defense "has been accorded a low priority and does not maintain an effective capability."

Brown called for "a reassessment of this view."

The nation's top military officer said the strategic nuclear balance and the United States' ability to deter a nuclear attack could be upset "should the Soviets believe their civil defense program makes nuclear war a reasonable option."

Defense Secretary Harold Brown, while acknowledging in the defense report that the Soviet program is growing, is known to remain unconvinced that any civil defense program, no matter how extensive, could prevent nuclear devastation in a super-power missile exchange.

However, he said in the annual defense report that the outcome of a study being directed by the National Security Council "may result in recommendations for changes to the current civil defense program."

Regardless of how they view the significance of the Soviet civil defense effort, U.S. mili-

Saudi Connection Risked

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — President Carter's failure to win Saudi Arabia's consent to delay the promised U.S. sale of 60 F-15 aircraft confronts him with his clearest test to this question: can the U.S. have its own Mideast policy, or only one tied to Israel?

The answer to that question may well decide the future of the vital U.S.-Saudi connection. At issue is whether Saudi Arabia will continue to underwrite U.S. domestic oil needs over the bitter opposition of Venezuela, Iran and other oil-rich members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) lobbying for higher prices. Changes in Saudi oil production and pricing, moreover, could wedge Western Europe and Japan away from the U.S., undermining political unity of the industrialized democracies.

As provided by Sen. Frank Church, soon-to-be chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, the answer to this crucial question is a clear no. Indeed, Church's letter protesting the sale to Secretary of State Cyrus Vance — signed by at least nine other Senators — was couched with generous overstatement in terms of how Israel views the sale, but not in terms of U.S. interests.

"Church wrote his letter like a Senator from Israel," one of Church's colleagues (by no stretch of imagination anti-Israel) told us. Church's letter was so devoid of sensitivity for the U.S. interest that Sen. Jacob Javits, long one of Israel's chief congressional defenders, did not sign it.

Instead, Javits wrote a letter of his own to Vance, along with Sen. Howard Baker, the Republican leader, and two other Senators. They asked for a delay in the sale until a committee study is finished. That study is expected to go beyond Saudi Arabia to the implications of U.S. arms sales throughout the Mideast.

Sen. Abraham Ribicoff, a lifelong leader of the American Jewish community who cannot be faulted on friendship for Israel, signed neither letter, but privately informed one Senator that he agreed with the Javits, not the Church, approach.

In a clumsy attempt to finesse the political dilemma of either delivering on his pledge to sell Saudi Arabia the planes — or surrendering to Church and Israel — President Carter so far has struck out.

During his stop in Riyadh a month ago, Mr. Carter renewed his pledge — then, after reading Church's Jan. 23 letter, had second thoughts. He ordered Ambassador John West to seek Saudi agreement to delay the sale (which can be blocked by Congress during a 30-day period following its submission to Capitol Hill).

The predictable failure of

Other Editors Say The New Minimum

(The Sanford Herald)

Kenneth Flint, North Carolina's Secretary for Economic Development, spoke to the Sanford Jaycees at their annual Distinguished Service Award banquet Tuesday evening.

The picture he painted for the immediate future was not all that rosy. He says that there is a "considerable rise" in the state's unemployment rate on the immediate horizon and he lays most of the blame at the door of the new minimum wage law.

It is not an unexpected turn of events. Many people, including some like Flint who are high in state governmental circles, warned of such a possibility before the new minimum went into effect.

The benefits of having a minimum wage are numerous, especially if you are among those regular workers who usually have to work "for the minimum."

But there are drawbacks as well, as Flint and others pointed out.

Faced with the higher operating cost in the form of higher wages, many employers will tend to trim their industrial force and attempt to get by with fewer workers than before. And such layoffs tend to come at the wage level which the new law was designed most to help. Also affected are the part-time temporary workers — college students on summer vacation come immediately to mind — who used to pick up some badly needed cash by working for the old minimum. Fewer of those jobs are now going to be available.

It all depends upon your viewpoint. The new $2.65 an-hour minimum wage is certainly not too high for those workers whom it has helped. For those in the work force whom it may have forced into the unemployment lines it has proved very high indeed.

Being Affluent: Family Affair

By KRISTIN GOFF
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Becoming affluent in America is increasingly turning into a family affair, a new study on the demographics of the upper income class suggests.

The Conference Board study finds that more American households currently qualify as "affluent" than did 10 or 20 years ago. Even when adjusted for inflation, average family income has increased broadly for those households comprising the wealthiest 20 percent of the country.

But it also suggests that it is more difficult than ever for a family supported by only one worker to climb up the income ladder.

"An extraordinary 77 percent of our upper-income families have at least two persons in the labor force, while only 22 percent have a single earner," writes the study's author, Fabian Linden, director of consumer research for the nonprofit business research organization.

"More often than not, the additional wage earner is a working wife. In some 54 percent of all homes in this bracket the woman is employed, up from 34 percent in the mid-'50s. In addition, there also are many instances where three persons, and sometimes more, are contributing," he finds in an analysis of data from 1975 and the preceding two decades.

In 1965, 30 percent of households in the top income bracket had only one person working and 20 years earlier, the figure was 35 percent.

All of this, of course, does not account for the fact that actual spending power depends on how many people must divide up the paycheck or paychecks coming in. And from that point of view, the economic pinch may still be harsh on families which statistically qualify as affluent.

But it does suggest "a greater democratization of the relatively wealthy segment of the population," says Linden, noting that 3.8 million of the upper-income families in the most recent year studied were headed by a blue-collar worker with a working wife.

Based on 1975 statistics, Linden found that 11.1 million households were earning $22,200 or more, which qualified them as among those in the top fifth. A decade before, 9.6 million families were in the top 20 percent but it took less — $17,600 — in comparable 1975 dollars to make it into the upper-income bracket.

In 1965, a household would

Nicaragua Voters Boycotting Election In Massive Protest

By TOM FENTON

MANAGUA, Nicaraguan (AP) — Voters boycotted municipal elections across Nicaragua in another massive protest against President Anastasio Somoza's dictatorship.

Many polling stations were nearly deserted during the voting hours Sunday.

"No one is voting," said an anti-Somoza member of the election board in a northern village. "It's this way all over the country."

Somoza's opponents had said the voter turnout rather than the results would indicate what support the Somoza family's 41-year-old hold on the country retains after nearly a month of demonstrations and a general strike protesting the assassination of one of his leading critics, newspaper publisher Pedro

Joaquin Chamorro.

Leaders of the nationwide strike by business and labor say 80 percent of all enterprises have been closed, and 14 persons have been killed in guerrilla attacks persons in the last five days.

In Leon, a city of 100,000 persons, the president of the voting district at the El Paraiso housing project said 33 of the 210 registered voters had cast ballots by midmorning, but a member of the election board said only two had done so.

In Masaya, a southwestern town, some voting booths closed briefly when demonstrators ransacked them. National Guardsmen shot over the protesters' heads to disperse them, and witnesses said a boy was hit in the foot.

"The low turnout is another victory for the people of Nicaragua," said opposition congressman Auxilia Sanchez in Granada, a major town southwest of Managua.

The only legal opposition group in this Central American nation of 2.5 million persons, the Conservative Party, said 52 of its 132 candidates had withdrawn in protest against Somoza.

The election was held to pick mayors, city clerks and treasurers in all municipalities but Managua, which is administered by the federal government. The government said results would be announced today.

Armed National Guardsmen patrolled the capital and pushed aside barricades of rubbish flung up in suburban streets by protesting householders, who replaced the debris after the soldiers left.

Some city walls carried the slogan: "Somoza to the execution wall."

Energy-Saving Techniques For A House Serve For Apartment, Too

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

While homeowners wrestle with high heating bills and stuff insulation into attics and walls, apartment dwellers too often shrug off energy problems. "That's the landlord's job. What can I do?" they ask.

The answer? A lot. Some of the same energy-saving techniques that apply to houses serve equally well in apartments and involve no major expenditures.

Experts at the cooperative extension service at Cornell University say wind infiltration is a key factor for many apartment residents, as well as for people who live in houses. Proper sealing around doors and windows can cut fuel consumption by 30 percent to 40 percent, according to the Cornell experts.

Caulking, weatherstripping and installing storm windows — temporary or permanent — are the basic ways to save, but it pays to know something about products and processes involved before you start.

Caulking is designed to seal cracks where two different materials or parts of the building meet. In an apartment, you might need caulking at joints where door and window frames meet the side of the building. You may also need it in spaces between air conditioners and window frames.

The most popular form of caulking is the cartridge which is inserted into a caulking gun. Caulk also comes in squeezable tubes, in cans and in strands packaged in a roll. Most caulk has a limited shelf life; if you try to buy in bulk to save money, you may end up throwing out the extra. As a rule of thumb, you should figure on about half a cartridge per window.

There are several materials available for caulking. Oil or resin base caulk is readily available, will bond to most surfaces and is generally the least expensive. It is not very durable, however.

Latex, butyl or polyvinyl based caulk also is readily available and will bond to most surfaces. It is more expensive and lasts longer than the oil or resin based varieties.

Elastomeric caulks are the most expensive and most durable. They include silicones, polysulfides and polyurethanes. An inexpensive alternative to storm windows is to tape plastic sheeting over windows to create an air pocket. Mount the plastic on the inside of the window with masking tape and leave at least three-fourths of an inch between the plastic and the window.

Reminder: If you are trying to save energy by lowering the thermostat, be careful if an elderly person lives in the house or apartment. The National Institute on Aging recommends keeping the thermostat above 65 degrees at all times for people over 65.

Carter's equivocation in the face of Israel's displeasure was predictable. It began with a private letter to Mr. Carter by the Saudi ambassador politely asking that the pledge (first made by the Ford administration) be carried out.

But the Saudi government would not be human if in the face of a dishonored pledge it continued to resist oil price hikes demanded by other OPEC countries or continued high-rate oil production just to satisfy President Carter.

Worse, the Saudis could succumb to OPEC pressure to sell crude oil in a "basket of currencies," costing the dollar its pre-eminent currency position. That would mean a price break for strong currencies (the West German mark and the Japanese yen). Such a damaging policy switch for western unity will be pressed at the next OPEC meeting in June.

But underlying these surface hazards is the spectacle of the U.S. superpower once again squirming in public over an arms sale in the Middle East clearly tailored to its own interests. This spectacle reflects an increasingly dim image of the U.S. — not only to Saudi Arabia but around the whole world.

Collection By Wheelbarrow

NEW YORK (AP) — The Rev. Edgar James Helms, Methodist minister, inaugurated the concept of the collection box for the Goodwill Industries of America Inc. when he found the financial squeeze in this country shrinking the pocketbooks of the affluent in the early 1900s.

Rev. Helms canvassed from door to door asking for cast-off clothing, and any other goods that he could carry away. When a streetcar conductor refused to allow him to bring his bags on board, Rev. Helms resorted to a wheelbarrow.

Plant Doubled

Graham Flanagan, president of North American Fiberglass Corp. here, announced that the doubling of the firm's manufacturing plant, engineering and mill operations has been completed.

Flanagan said that 90 per cent of capacity is now being utilized at the facility, located in the Industrial Park.

According to the president, "excessive demand" for new Sea Ox and River Ox sport fishing boats, as well as for commercial models and present Sea Ox lines "brought about the new facilities."

Flanagan reported that, "Further expansion, to begin midyear 1978, is now being studied as company officials have already determined that even the recent expansion is not sufficient to keep up with orders that have booked the company solid through the winter."

North American initiated production of the original River Ox model in 1975. The firm's new manufacturing plant was completed on March 1, 1976 and a year later, plans were underway to more than double the size and production capability of the facility.

At Burroughs Wellcome Company, we manufacture medicines, and we feel the effect of spiraling health care costs just like everyone else. Anyone who does something to contain those costs is taking on a big job.

"Blue Cross and Blue Shield of North Carolina is doing something. We have Blue Cross and Blue Shield coverage at our company. And one of the things that sold me on their program was their total commitment to cost containment.

"Health care costs have been going up even faster than the consumer price index. They now account for more than 8% of the GNP. Blue Cross and Blue Shield is addressing this problem...by developing a new contracting agreement with hospitals and other institutions, monitoring utilization of health care facilities, and educating the consumer about his own health care responsibilities. And they are working hard to keep rates as low as possible by screening and validating claims and monitoring hospital and physician's charges.

"Now I know this doesn't mean they can lower their rates to us. But it does help them hold down future increases and pay back more dollars in benefits. I know they're working for better utilization of hospital facilities and area-wide planning to avoid duplication.

"They're also paying three outpatient claims for every inpatient claim...another way of saving expensive hospital beds for people who really need them.

"All these things help, now and for the future. And before you know it, the future will be today. I say, good going, Blue Cross and Blue Shield. You've got my dollar—I'm glad you're spending it wisely."

How's The Weather?

WEATHER FORECAST — Snow flurries and showers are forecast today for most of the West. A band of snow is expected from the northern Plains to Texas where it will change to rain.

Snow is due for the northeast. Mild weather is forecast for the Pacific coast but cold weather is facing most of the country. (AP Laserphoto Map)

By The Associated Press
More snow flurries are expected in northeastern North Carolina today with cloudy, windy and colder weather forecast for the remainder of the state.

Cold arctic air was headed this way today, brought by a high pressure system from the Mississippi Valley as a low pressure center off the coast began moving northeasterly. Little snow fell across the state during the night, and travelers advisories were discontinued although some roads were still slippery in spots this morning.

Early Sunday evening light snow spread into the mountains and the Piedmont. Overnight the snow spread eastward giving only a dusting to many areas while continuing to snow in the mountains.

High temperatures Sunday ranged from the mid 30s to the low 50s. By early morning the temperatures ranged from the teens in the west to the mid 30s in the east.

For Tuesday, continued cold is forecast with some clearing. Wednesday though Friday will be fair with a warming trend.

Pump Station 8 Nearly Ready

By WARD SIMS
Associated Press Writer

PUMP STATION 8, Alaska (AP) — In the aftermath, the five men in the pump house at Pump Station 8 on the trans-Alaska oil pipeline that muggy summer day were incredulous that such a thing could happen.

"Everything had been tried and tried and tested and tested," Herbert Robson recalled. "We had done nothing else for the past 10 weeks but check the system out."

But the trying and the testing and the checking were found wanting last July 8 when a valve that was supposed to be kept closed was opened by mistake.

Crude oil under high pressure sprayed into the pump room. Within moments the pump house was destroyed by an explosion and flames.

One man was killed. Robson and four others were injured. The flow of oil through the 800-mile line did not start again for 10 days, with Pump 8 bypassed.

It has taken more than seven months, but now the reconstruction work on Pump 8 is almost complete. It should be back in operation pushing oil through the $7.7 billion line next month.

Alyeska Pipeline Service Co. says the cost of replacing the pump house and other damaged facilities is not yet known. Unofficial estimates put the cost at about $50 million.

The destruction of the pump house delayed the delivery of millions of barrels of crude oil from Alaska's North Slope to markets in the lower 48 states.

Alyeska had planned to be running 1.2 million barrels of crude a day through the line by last fall, but with Pump 8 down the flow has been held to about 700,000 to 750,000 barrels a day.

Investigators found that through "human error" a valve that had been closed while Robson and his four co-workers were cleaning a strainer in one of the three huge pumps at the station was opened.

Oil spurted into the pump room, vaporized and ignited. Robson and the others got out before the pump house ripped apart.

Shock waves were felt more than 10 miles away, and a huge plume of black smoke was visible for twice that distance.

"We have a fire. We've had a hell of an explosion," a supervisor at Pump 8 shouted over the telephone to the pipeline Operations Control Center at Valdez.

It took only four minutes to halt the flow of oil along the entire length of the line, but by that time flaming oil had flooded what was left of the pump house and rivers of fire flowed from it.

Fire engulfed construction equipment and burned through a birch and spruce forest. The air smelled like burning rubber.

Reconstruction started almost immediately and continued through the winter months when the temperature here, 33 miles southeast of Fairbanks, often dips to 40 or more degrees below zero.

A mantle of snow now masks the damage caused by the streams of burning crude. The twisted hulk of the pump house has been replaced by a new structure.

After another period of trying and testing and checking, crude oil from Prudhoe Bay will soon again be flowing through Pump Station 8.

More Funding Sought To Aid Failures In Competency Test

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — The chairman of a special commission assigned to develop competency tests for the state's high-school students has called for more funding for programs to help those who don't pass the tests the first time.

And some educators question whether the competency tests, which will begin next fall, may prove counterproductive in the long run.

Every high-school junior will have to take the state test. Those who fail will have another chance to pass the test the following year, but students will not be given a high-school diploma without fully completing the test.

Gov. Jim Hunt is asking the General Assembly to appropriate $8.5 million to establish remedial reading and mathematics programs for students who fail the test as juniors, but some believe that amount will not be enough to do the job.

"You could probably send each kid a basket of flowers with a ribbon saying 'good luck' and do them just as much good," said Dr. James Gallagher, director of the Granak Porter Graham Child Development Center in Chapel Hill and the chairman of the special commission.

Gallagher also expressed concern that school systems may attempt to gear their programs only toward remedial courses. "Are we going to have more attention and effort put into the area of minimal skills, thus stripping some of the better students of education opportunities?" he asked.

H.T. Connor, assistant state superintendent for planning, research and development, said the need for remedial courses could actually serve to keep a struggling student from receiving a diploma.

"Some of these kids may have to take remedial courses and miss out on courses required for graduation," he said.

Cancer Symposium To Be Held Here Feb. 8

ECU News Bureau
The Department of Pathology, ECU School of Medicine, will conduct a symposium, "Immunology in Cancer", Wednesday. The program will be held from 2 p.m. to 5 p.m. in the auditorium at Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

"The National Institutes of Health is currently spending millions of dollars in research to study immunology's practical application in cancer therapy," says Dr. Alvin Volkman, ECU professor of pathology and symposium coordinator. "The three-hour program will give physicians and researchers an overview of the progress being made in this area."

Research in cancer immunology is based on aiding a patient's natural immunity to his tumor. When certain tumors occur, the body's normal defense mechanisms may not operate adequately or may be "deceived". In tumors found in humans and experimental animals there is evidence that immunizing, or injecting, certain agents into the body can stimulate the defense mechanisms and help suppress tumor growth.

Participating in the immunology symposium will be Dr. Richard L. Tuttle, Department of Clinical Investigation, Burroughs Wellcome Laboratories, Research Triangle Park; Dr. Seymour Bakerman, chairman of the ECU Department of Pathology; Dr. Spencer Raab, director of hematology and oncology, ECU School of Medicine; and Dr. Stephen Mahaley, chairman of the Department of Neurosurgery, University of North Carolina-Chapel Hill.

The symposium is sponsored by the Eastern Area Health Education Center.

Vietnam Calling Diplomat Home

TOKYO (AP) — Vietnam has called U.N. Ambassador Dinh Ba Thi home, ending two days of uncertainty whether he would leave the United States after the State Department ordered him out.

The department announced Friday that the Vietnamese ambassador to the United Nations was being expelled for alleged involvement in a spy plot. He and the Vietnamese Foreign Ministry denied the accusation, and he said he would not go.

But on Sunday, Hanoi Radio announced that Thi was being recalled because "the U.S. government is trying to disturb activities of the Vietnamese ambassador."

There was no indication when he would leave New York.

"We have assumed all along that Thi would leave," said a State Department spokesman in Washington. He would not speculate what the U.S. government would have done had Thi continued to reject the expulsion order.

Thi is the first U.N. chief of mission ordered out by the United States. A federal grand jury named him an indicted co-conspirator with an American employee of the U.S. Information Agency and a Vietnamese expatriate. Both of them pleaded innocent to passing confidential American cables to the Vietnamese mission to the United Nations.

The U.S. mission at the United Nations accused Thi of violating a 1947 agreement by engaging in activities "outside his official capacity" and of abusing his residence privi-

Pupil Projects Put On Display

For the past week history projects done by eighth grade students of E. B. Aycock Junior High School have been on display at the schools.

These displays were made in conjunction with the students' study of the colonial period of American history. They are involved in a language arts and social studies block being taught by Faye Creegan and Pat Sheppard. Ideas for projects were obtained during class trip to the N. C. Museum of History, Fort Raleigh and Williamsburg. Projects include Indian villages, windmills, plantation and plantation layouts, pottery and candle-making.

Many of the students plan to enter their projects in the Junior Historian Contest, sponsored by the N. C. Museum of History.

Colorful Daniel Flood Known To Get Things Done

By CHRIS ROBERTS
Associated Press Writer
WILKES-BARRE, Pa. (AP) — One night in 1946, Congressman Daniel Flood was attending a party — dressed, he recalls fondly, in a silk-lined cape, white tie, white scarf and opera hat. Suddenly he was called to calm a bunch of drunken coal miners out on a wildcat strike. Swinging an ebony sword cane, the freshman congressman mounted the union hall stage. "Who is this pansy? Look at this simple pansy!" bellowed a burly miner. Flood carefully removed his top hat, then, cape flying, leaped off the stage and rapped his tormentor across four rows of chairs. "I used to get into a fight 'most every night," the veteran lawmaker recalls. "There was always some joker trying to start things. That was until they found out just who Dan Flood was."

Constituents in Pennsylvania's anthracite hills remember that "Dapper Dan" Flood helped them find jobs and financial relief for black lung disease and more recently led them out of the floods of Tropical Storm Agnes. They describe him as the best congressman in America. To his Capitol Hill colleagues, the onetime actor is one tough cookie, a skilled orator who can coax votes with golden voice and unleash political thunder when he calls in IOUs. To others, he is an aging, pugnacious, red-baiting eccentric. Last month, Flood's name was linked to a federal investigation into funding of a $64 million addition at a Philadelphia hospital. The investigation included another Pennsylvania Democrat, Rep. Joshua Eilberg, who asked President Carter to hasten the replacement of Republican David Marston as U.S. attorney in Philadelphia.

Now, Flood is reported to have pushed for renewed U.S. aid to Haiti while his chief aide was negotiating business deals in the Caribbean nation. The former aide, Stephen Elko, has also accused him of taking payoffs in return for securing federal contracts for businessmen. Flood, who throughout his life has always been front and center stage, is keeping a surprisingly low profile since the accusations — which he denies — were made.

Flood first was elected to the House in 1944. He has been defeated only three times, the last in 1952, the year of Dwight Eisenhower's presidential landslide.

His white pumps with silver buckles, his Panama suits, his ascots and his waxed handlebar mustache add a dash to the conservative aura of the U.S. House. His snappy speech, laced with Shakespearean quotations, has jarred the nodding head of many a reporter and usher. Flood heads the labor, health, education and welfare subcommittee, with power over billions spent on schools and hospitals. He is vice chairman of the defense subcommittee. As one of 13 Appropriation Committee subchairmen — a group so strong they are known on the Hill as the College of Cardinals — he has near life-and-death power over the federal budget.

"All those goodies didn't fall into my lap," Flood said several years ago. "Nobody has more clout than Dan Flood." "You sort of get the idea," said a congressional aide, "when you land at that fancy Wilkes-Barre-Scranton airport you know Flood built. And ride on Interstate 81, which you know Flood routed through there. And you see the Daniel J. Flood Elementary School, the Daniel J. Flood Rural Health Center, the Daniel J. Flood Industrial Park. Dapper Dan's been, er, busy."

On the night of June 22, 1972, flood waters spawned by Agnes spilled into Wilkes-Barre. "Stand by!" yelled Flood. "Help's on the way."

As the story goes, he called his friend Melvin Laird, then secretary of defense. All Flood wanted was Laird's personal helicopter and 100 percent help from the Defense Department. The next dawn, Flood stepped out of Laird's red, white and blue helicopter and set up a command post at the nearby Avoca Naval Station — something he had no historic or legal power to do. "This," he said, "is going to be one Flood against another." He asked the young naval commander in charge what he needed. Helicopters, came the reply.

Flood called generals and admirals. He met some resistance at first.

"Have you ever heard of the Defense Appropriations Committee?" Flood roared. "Well, general, I am the Defense Appropriations Committee. And I need choppers!"

He got 40 of them and 1,500 troops.

Speaking of Your Health... Painful Feet-Painful Fears

I have terrible, painful warts on the soles of my feet. I've tried almost every kind of treatment. Now my doctor thinks I should have X-ray treatments by a specialist. I'm fearful of X-rays generally. I wonder if they will do me more harm than good. I'm caught in a bind, between my painful feet and my painful fears. — Mr. G.V., III.

Dear Mr. V.: At a recent meeting of dermatologists, it was shown that radiation therapy can be safe and effective for the removal of plantar warts.

Dr. Stanley Macht and Dr. Jose Cordero, at the Washington County Hospital in Hagerstown, Md., reported some remarkable statistics. They had treated 360 patients with low voltage radiation. They noted in their 24-year study that "not a single complication or adverse effect was observed." They noted, too, that "patients under 25 who received radiation therapy have a much higher chance for complete cure than older patients."

They say that "despite fears among some members of the medical community, X-ray therapy (by their technique) is still one of the most efficient, safe and easily administered forms of treatment for warts."

I hope this information eases your apprehension.

Do small, thin people tend to get high blood pressure as readily as tall, stout ones? — Mrs. T.L., Fla.

Dear Mrs. L.: DR. COLEMAN welcomes letters from readers. Please write to him in care of this newspaper.

That's a particularly interesting question. I wonder how you arrived at that thought because last year two independent research centers confirmed the relationship between bodily bulk and high blood pressure.

One interesting study showed that South Americans who live in the mountains have lower blood pressure than their countrymen who live at the seashore. At first it was thought that the altitude makes the difference. Not so. The answer seems to lie in the fact that those who live in the mountains were smaller in size.

A second study definitely indicates that overweight is a greater factor in producing high blood pressure than is the onset of old age.

In this study it is accepted that overweight as a cause of high blood pressure is followed by, in order: age, financial troubles, cigarette smoking, cholesterol levels in the blood and emotional stress.

SPEAKING OF YOUR HEALTH... Factory workers tend to become careless about using the protective devices that are provided for them. Such carelessness is contagious; one worker follows the example of his neighbor. The hazards of occupation are, thereby, multiplied by carelessness.

NBA East All-Stars Rally Past West

Smith Provides Spark

McGuire's Day Is Not His Day

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

It was "Frank McGuire Appreciation Day" at Columbia, S.C., but it just wasn't Frank McGuire's day.

The fans turned out in large number Sunday to applaud the longtime South Carolina basketball coach who is retiring after this season. However, McGuire couldn't fully appreciate it after a 69-66 double-overtime loss to third-ranked Marquette.

"I thought we had it in regulation," said McGuire, who was all set to celebrate when a funny thing happened on the way to the South Carolina basket.

Butch Lee, a relatively small Marquette guard in a forest of giants, grabbed a rebound.

"He outrebounded our big men when we needed the ball," said McGuire. "That rebound probably won it for them."

More to the point, it put the Warriors in a position to win. Lee was fouled on the play with 16 seconds left and he sank two shots to tie the score at 49. A last-second shot by South Carolina's Kenny Williams bounced off the rim, sending the nationally-televised game into overtime.

Marquette started both overtimes by converting a technical foul after the Gamecocks were penalized for delaying tactics by not coming out of their zone defense quickly enough.

The second technical proved costly, as Marquette took a three-point lead on Lee's free throw and a basket by Gary Rosenberger. South Carolina cut the deficit to one point twice, but Rosenberger scored on a three-point play, and Lee clinched the victory with two free throws with 11 seconds to play, giving Marquette a 69-64 advantage.

Assessing the game's artistic beauty, Marquette Coach Hank Raymonds noted: "It's difficult to talk about a game like this. No one really lost."

In Saturday's games, topranked Kentucky walloped Florida 88-61; No. 2 Arkansas beat Rice 69-48; No. 4 Notre Dame crushed Davidson 100-76; No. 3 UCLA routed California 94-75; No. 6 North Carolina stopped Virginia Tech 101-88; No. 7 Michigan State whipped Indiana 68-59; No. 8 Kansas edged Oklahoma 69-68; No. 9 Louisville topped Cincinnati 83-76 and No. 10 New Mexico defeated Colorado State 91-82.

Also, Wake Forest upset No. 11 Virginia 74-62; No. 12 Texas blasted TCU 87-60; 13th-ranked DePaul beat Oral Roberts 63-57; Loyola of Chicago stunned No. 14 Georgetown 68-65; No. 15 Florida State took a 72-68 decision over St. Louis; No. 16 Providence routed Rhode Island 79-59 and No. 20 San Francisco outlasted Seattle University 96-85.

Wake On Move In ACC Rankings

By The Associated Press

Wake Forest is moving up fast in the Atlantic Coast Conference race, thanks to its habit of beating nationally ranked ACC opponents, and coach Carl Tacy doesn't intend to stop now.

"I sure hope we can stay at this level. It's been a lot of fun for us," Tacy said Saturday after his Deacons defeated 11th-ranked Virginia, 74-62, to spoil the Cavaliers' hopes for a first-place tie in the conference standings.

Wake Forest had played the spoiler twice before in recent weeks, defeating sixth-ranked North Carolina and 17th-ranked Duke. The Deacons kept Virginia out of scoring range with a fierce man-to-man defense.

"It was as good as we've played it all year. By and large, we kept their shooters from getting the ball, and that was certainly vital," Tacy said.

Both teams now have 5-3 records in the conference and are tied for second place. Virginia is 15-3 overall and Wake Forest is 14-5.

In non-conference action Saturday, North Carolina beat Virginia Tech, 101-88, and North Carolina State was upset by Furman, 68-67, in the North-South Doubleheader at Charlotte. Elsewhere, Clemson beat Stetson, 85-65, and Maryland ended a four-game losing streak with an 81-68 win over Nevada-Las Vegas.

ATLANTA (AP) — John Havlicek wasn't surprised. Neither was Jack Ramsay.

"I sort of had a feeling if anyone would turn it around, it would be Randy Smith," said Havlicek, the retiring star of the Boston Celtics.

"What you saw him (Smith) do today, I've seen him do many times," said Ramsay, who helplessly watched as the cat-quick Buffalo Braves' guard poured in 14 fourth quarter points and sparked the East to a 133-125 comeback victory over Ramsay's West squad in the 28th National Basketball Association All-Star game Sunday.

The West had dominated play until Smith took charge, aided by the aggressive rebounding of Boston's Dave Cowens and Philadelphia's "Dr. J," Julius Erving, to erase a 12-point West lead in the final 10 minutes.

Smith scored six straight baskets, two on layups and four on jump shots in the 14-22-foot range, to chop the lead to 113-112 with 5:42 remaining, and Erving put the East ahead for only the second time in the game, this time to stay, on a three-point play with 5:10 to go.

Playing despite five personal fouls with seven minutes remaining, Smith triggered the rally that resulted in 15 consecutive East points during one stretch, eventually carrying to a 21-2 edge that changed a 113-104 deficit to a 125-115 lead as the East captured its third All-Star game in four years and its 18th against 10 defeats.

Smith was an overwhelming choice for the Most Valuable Player trophy and a 1978 automobile awaiting that player. He scored a game-high 27 points, had seven rebounds, six assists and two steals in 29 minutes of action.

"This was one of the highest achievements I have ever accomplished," Smith said of the MVP honor, which he said his wife, Terrian, had predicted he would win.

"She didn't keep me out late last night, so I had all the rest in the world," Smith said.

He also paid tribute to Ramsay, coach of the defending NBA champion Portland Trailblazers, who once coached Smith at Buffalo.

"Ramsay helped me a great deal when I played for him," he said. "He taught me how to shoot over those really tall guys and how to use my left hand. You can't be a success in the NBA using just one hand."

It was his longest shot of the game, a 35-footer over Bill Walton at the buzzer ending the first half, that gave Havlicek an inkling the 6-foot-3 Smith might turn things around. Smith also hit a buzzer basket from 28 feet at the end of the opening period.

"Believe it or not I've been doing that (last second shots) all year at Buffalo — taking the shots, not putting them in," Smith said.

Coach Billy Cunningham of the Philadelphia 76ers, who steered the East victory, said Smith played "a fantastic game. I let him play with five fouls because he was so effective. He's obviously the fastest guard in the league."

"We seemed to lose a little rhythm when we lost our lead," said Ramsay. "They sustained their momentum when they got it."

The West had soared to a 17-point lead in the opening half behind a 16-point flurry by Paul Westphal of Phoenix, who had 20 points. Denver's David Thompson led the West in scoring with 22, including 4 in the third quarter when the West fought off several East spurts that cut the deficit to three points.

Seven East stars scored in double figures. Erving and San Antonio's Larry Kenon trailed Smith with 16 each. Cowens, Doug Collins of Philadelphia and Bob McAdoo of New York each had 14 and Havlicek 10.

Havlicek drew a standing ovation from the Omni sellout crowd of 15,491 when he was introduced. He hit the first basket of the game, giving the East its last lead until Erving's three-point play with 5:10 remaining.

Havlicek, retiring after this, his 16th NBA season, tied the record of 13 for most All-Star game appearances held by Wilt Chamberlain and Bob Cousy.

Trailing Thompson and Westphal in the West scoring were Golden State's Rick Barry and Walton, the Portland ace, with 15 each and Portland's Maurice Lucas had 12.

Smith received 95 votes in the MVP balloting by members of the news media covering the game. Cowens, who had a game-high 14 rebounds, was second with 13.

"I thought we put on a good show," said Smith, who said he signed his first NBA contract for $20,000 or $25,000. "It has gone up considerably since then," he said, grinning.

"This (MVP award) gives me a lot of recognition," he added.

Basketball Aided Downfall Of Wise

BALTIMORE (AP) — The cheers have long since subsided for Skip Wise as basketball—the game that made him famous—helped destroy him.

"I raised heck with him time after time when I saw what was happening," said Shirley Wise in the wake of her son's 12-year prison sentence for possession and distribution of heroin.

She said she tried to stand behind him as the troubles continued to mount over the last 18 months. "I was about to turn my back on him," she conceded, "but I couldn't. He is still my own and I have to give him my support."

In retrospect, her advice was probably correct on two crucial decisions for the former basketball star.

Her son went the opposite direction both times—deciding to attend Clemson University rather than a more distant school and signing a professional contract with the Baltimore Claws.

The Claws folded a few weeks after Wise left Clemson, sending him down a path of rejection by other teams and scrapes with the law.

"It has all been a bad mess," Mrs. Wise said. "Skip has some good buddies and some bad ones. He just wasn't able to pick and choose among his friends."

She believes that the crux of her son's problems was his inability to accept being cut by the San Antonio Spurs and the Golden State Warriors after the Claws folded.

"He actually believed he had failed," Mrs. Wise said, "and he can't take failure. I told him he didn't owe anybody anything as long as he had given his best."

Mrs. Wise said her son lived on false hopes over the past 1½ years. "He was always talking about this team or that team taking him," she said, "but it was nothing concrete enough to build your hopes on."

Although she didn't want him to attend Clemson, Mrs. Wise can't understand why he wanted to leave the South Carolina school.

"They treated him like a king down there," she said. "When we walked into a restaurant, the band struck up the Clemson fight song and little children crowded around our table to get his autograph."

"How could he give that up?" Mrs. Wise asked. "We had been struggling all of the way to make it at home, and then all of a sudden he gets treated royally and turns his back on it."

Mrs. Wise said she had reservations about Clemson because she had heard "it was like off-limits to blacks at one time." She also wanted Skip to go to a college as far away as possible from Baltimore and his "bad buddies" here.

"I never made any secret of that," she said.

Leon Howard, Wise's first basketball coach at a city recreation center and a longtime family friend, said the Claws made an initial contact with the former Dunbar High School star while he was home from Clemson for the 1975 Labor Day weekend.

"They got the pros in his mind and then left a ticket for him down there on a Wednesday night after the Labor Day weekend. They had somebody pick him up at the airport and everything," Howard said.

Mrs. Wise said she wasn't tempted by the lure of professional basketball and told her son to go back to school when he unexpectedly came home that Wednesday night. She said he was unhappy because Clemson coaches Bates Locke and Charlie Harrison had resigned.

Skip Wise signed a $120,000, two-year contract after negotiating with the Claws until 5 a.m. Thursday. "I was never consulted in the matter," Mrs. Wise said with a trace of bitterness.

"He was being used and exploited because he was a product of Baltimore. They knew that people here would be at the Civic Center every night to see Skip. I knew a whole lot of my friends already had season tickets," she said.

The 22-year-old former star has little left to cling to except hope for a planned appeal or recovering some of the money he was to have been paid by the Claws. He has sued the Claws' organizers and two NBA teams for $111,500.

"He is still in good spirits," Mrs. Wise said. "He's already asked me to bring him some tennis shoes and a shirt to play basketball in and he's talking about getting up games against teams from the outside."

In addition to visiting her son, the energetic woman continue to work long hours in a local beauty shop and is one of four resident advisory board chairmen across the country for the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

She travels to different cities and helps set up housing regulations.

Hubie Green Wins

HONOLULU (AP) — Hubert Green was shooting for his 13th PGA victory in the 13th Hawaiian Open and he got lucky on the 13th hole at Wai'aleale Country Club.

Green, who says he is not superstitious, won the $250,000 tournament Sunday with a par on the second hole of a sudden-death playoff against Bill Kratzert. He sank a seven-foot putt for a four on the hole, No. 16, while Kratzert missed his par putt from five feet.

"I'm not superstitious, but I was aware of the 13s and wasn't sure what it would mean," Green said afterward.

"I think the biggest turning point came on the 13th hole, when I hit a couple of bad shots, but then sunk a 35-foot putt for a birdie. I wasn't sure I deserved it."

Green took the lead in the second round, then held it alone until falling into a tie with Kratzert late in the final round. He had a 71 Sunday, his worst round of the tourney, finishing at 274, 14-under-par over the 7,234-yard, par-72 Wai'aleale course.

Kratzert, who joined the tour less than two years ago, shot a final-round 68, forcing the playoff.

The winning putt made a $21,500 difference for Green, who collected $50,000 for the victory. Kratzert, who won $134,748 last year and is one of the most promising young players on the tour, got $28,500 for finishing second.

Mike Morley, Bob Wynn and Hale Irwin tied for third at 275. Morley shot a closing 66, Wynn a 68 and Irwin a 69.

Gene Littler, the first-round leader with a 65 who stumbled to a 73 on the second day, finished at 276 with a 70 Sunday.

The final two rounds of the tournament were telecast live by ABC Television, with the exception of the playoff holes. The network switched to regular programming after Green and Kratzert finished the 18th hole.

Kratzert has won twice on the tour, taking the Hartford Open last year, and teaming with Woody Blackburn to capture the World National Team Play title.

Green and Kratzert are close friends, and Green said he had to play Jekyll-and-Hyde when the two went into overtime.

"You have to get up a hate for him when you're in a playoff," said Green. "You've got to concentrate enough to get up a grudge."

Match play, grudge or otherwise, isn't exactly his specialty, said Green, who called himself "a bad match play golfer."

Green's experience edge over Kratzert was probably the deciding factor in the playoff. They both hit into bunkers on the final hole, then hit good shots from the sand. But Kratzert, who said he felt the pressure, appeared to hesitate when he took the club back on his putt and missed the cup.

Pirates Host Mocs

East Carolina University closes out its current three-game home stand tonight at 7:30 p.m. in Minges Coliseum when it plays host to the University of Tennessee-Chattanooga.

The Moccasins and Pirates will be meeting in a rematch. Two weeks ago, they met in Chattanooga, with the Mocs taking a 110-101 overtime victory from the Pirates.

Chattanooga comes into the game with a 12-8 record, having bowed Saturday night to James Madison College in Harrisonburg, Va.

East Carolina is currently riding a three-game losing streak and stands 4-14 on the year. Following tonight's home game, the Pirates go on the road against UNC Wilmington on Thursday, then return home on Saturday to face USC-Aiken. They have one home game, on Monday, Feb. 20, remaining after that, against Georgia Southern, along with road games at Old Dominion, Richmond, Mercer and Virginia Tech.

Hall Inducts Berg

LAKE BUENA VISTA, Fla. (AP) — The newest member of the PGA Hall of Fame is Patty Berg, winner of more than 100 professional and amateur golf titles.

A native of Minneapolis, and a longtime resident of Fort Myers, Fla., Berg was inducted to the Hall Sunday. Her achievements and contributions to the game have made her one of the most widely known women golfers.

Berg, who will celebrate her 60th birthday Feb. 13, becomes only the second woman inducted into the Professional Golfers' Association Hall of Fame. The late Babe Didrikson Zaharias was posthumously elected as the 45th member last year.

East Carolina University's 82-80 defeat at the hands of the Richmond Spiders will do little to calm the storm that is raging over the Pirate basketball program.

Rumors are flying that Coach Larry Gillman will be dismissed at the end of the season, with two years to go on his contract.

Other rumors say the Pirates will not change, but will give the coach at least another year to prove himself. Another camp claims that the Pirates can't afford the money it would take to pay the coach off and to hire another.

Gillman, of course, insists that he will be back, and that he has no intention of resigning.

The loss to Richmond dropped the Pirates down to a 4-14 record, and gives them one of their poorest seasons to date in history.

And a look down the remaining eight games of the season can give even the strongest die-hard fan little to look forward to. The way the Pirates have been playing lately, it would appear very likely that there will not be many wins during those eight contests.

Only three of the eight are at home: tonight's contest against UT-Chattanooga, Saturday's against USC-Aiken, and Feb. 20th's against Georgia Southern.

Then, there are road games against UNC-Wilmington, Old Dominion, Richmond, Mercer and Virginia Tech.

Realistically, the Pirates stand a chance to beat Chattanooga, Aiken, and Georgia Southern, based on past records. It took an overtime for Chattanooga to win on its home court, and the Pirates nipped Georgia Southern on its home court.

Wilmington already holds a win over the Pirates, as do Old Dominion and Richmond. Mercer carried North Carolina to the wire earlier and Virginia Tech is strong at home.

Unfortunately, it is not beyond belief that the Pirates could lose all their remaining games. We hope this is not to be true, but things sometimes have a snow-balling effect.

The worst Pirate record since World War II was in the 1966-67 campaign when Tom Quinn, in his first year, went 7-17. The most games lost in any one season was 18, that coming last year. The worst percentage ever is .214, held by only the third team the school fielded.

The Pirates must win two more games to surpass that. Whether that can be accomplished will be learned during the next three weeks.

School officials have already stated that when the Virginia Tech game is over, there will be a reevaluation of the situation at East Carolina.

If there are to be changes of any sort, that will probably be known before four weeks have passed.

That Final Shot

Saturday night, we talked with Tommy Mattocks, the official who made the fateful call Friday night awarding the winning basket to Rose High School in the Rampants' 76-75 win over Rocky Mount.

Most of the Rocky Mount fans went away grumbling about it, claiming that it had not been before the horn.

Mattocks said he and the other official had talked in pre-game about such a situation, and that he was positioned on the baseline just beside Anthony Bryant when he made the winning basket.

"As soon as I saw daylight between his hand and the ball, I glanced at the clock," Mattocks said. "I saw the one change to a zero right then. There was just a fraction of a second left when the ball left his hands, but there was no doubt at all about it being good if it went. I never heard the horn for the noise."

The win tied Rose and Rocky Mount for first place in Division I, both with 5-1 records. Each has four league games left.

Solomon Seeded First

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. (AP) — Harold Solomon, ranked 13th in the Association of Tennis Professionals, was top-seeded today as the week-long $75,000 Springfield International Classic got under way at the Civic Center.

Veteran Stan Smith, the 1971 Wimbledon champion, was seeded second, followed by Jeff Borowiak, Bob Lutz, Jan Kodes, Mike Fishback, Marty Riessen and Billy Martin.

Martin is a wild card entrant, while Kodes, the Czech veteran who won the Wimbledon championship in 1973, was named to replace ailing Vijay Amritraj.

The tournament runs through next Sunday afternoon.

Stommelen Takes 24-Hour Daytona

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — "It wasn't as easy as it looked," said Rolf Stommelen after he and Toine Hezemans had driven a turbocharged Porsche 935 to victory in the 24 Hours of Daytona race Sunday, beating the second-place car by 115.2 miles.

Stommelen said that night driving and heavy traffic in the first half-hour, with 67 cars on the road course, always presents problems.

But an added factor was that his team had to nurse its highspeed exotic machine through an oil problem over the final 12 hours.

"When I'd lift the throttle, oil would come through the exhaust pipe," Hezemans explained. "I had to keep one foot on the brake and one on the throttle at the same time, so it wouldn't smoke so bad. Otherwise, I was afraid they'd blackflag us."

A puff of smoke boiled out the rear of the new machine every time the driver downshifted. If officials had deemed it serious enough, they would have black-flagged the car out of competition until the trouble was fixed.

"I think now we will sell it (the car) to an Indian camp for smoke signals," a relieved Hezemans said after the gruelling race.

Stommelen, 35, of Germany and Hezemans, 34, of The Netherlands had an unexpected third driver on the team — Peter Gregg of Jacksonville, Fla., who entered two cars for his Porsche dealership and was principal driver in one, who lost one hour and 45 minutes changing an engine in e early morning and finished ninth.

The winners traveled 2,611.2 miles, at an average speed of 108.743 miles per hour.

Porsches dominated the race, as they have in recent years, taking 15 of the first 16 places.

Two-time Indianapolis winner Johnny Rutherford of Fort Worth, Texas, joined Manfred Schurti of Liechtenstein and Dick Barbour of San Diego in the second-place Turbo Porsche. They lost time in two early smashes into the wall which riddled the glass fiber body, but they finished strong.

Third place went to a stock Porsche Carrera driven by Diego Febles of Puerto Rico and Alec Poole of England. They finished 19 miles behind the second-place car.

Another Carrera was fourth, with Bonky Fernandez of Puerto Rico, John Paul of Cocoa Beach, Fla., and Phil Currin of Gainesville, Ga., driving.

The German team of John Winter, Dieter Schornstein and Josef Braming was fifth. Sixth went to Steve Earle of Santa Barbara, Calif., Bob Akin of Ossining, N.Y., and Rick Knoop of Manhattan Beach, Calif.

Seventh was Gary Belecher of Miami, Al Holbert and Doc Bundy, both of Warrington, Pa.

Announcers' Honesty Draws ACC Criticism

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — When an Atlantic Coast Conference referee blows a call, or when a coach makes a bad move, should television viewers from Atlanta to Pittsburgh know about it?

As far as Jim Thacker and Billy Packer are concerned, they should.

"Our role is to be honest," said Thacker, who supplies the play-by-play commentary on ACC telecasts. "If an official makes a mistake, well, they are only human. It's not being critical to point out what the viewer sees anyway."

Packer, the "analyst" on many of the televised games, gave an example.

"If a ball gets hit out of bounds off Joe's knee and the referee gives the ball to Joe, and I just say it's Joe's ball, the people watching are going to say that guy doesn't know what he's talking about," Packer said.

He also cited a game last week in which Duke fell far behind Wake Forest.

"Mike Gminski's not playing and Duke is going with three guards. It's fair to say, 'Wait, Duke, it's 14-2; you're going to have to make a change.'"

But what Thacker and Packer both consider "honest reporting" apparently has run afoul of the conference commissioner, Robert James.

"It's uncalled for," James said recently. "Anyone who goes to a game knows officials and coaches are human beings who inevitably make errors. To highlight an error and ignore an accomplishment is inappropriate. It's easy to look at a replay and say, yes, a foul was missed. I could call a game like that."

While James was quick to add that the ACC telecasts are a "quality production," he said he planned to discuss his concern at a meeting this week with C.D. Chesley, executive producer of the telecasts for the past 21 years.

Chesley's company is producing 31 ACC basketball telecasts this season. Eighteen stations carry the broadcasts on a regular basis, and some games are seen on stations in Atlanta, Philadelphia and Pittsburgh.

Chesley indicated that he feels James, in general, has a valid point.

"Our basic job is to call the game, not what an official did or coach should do," he said in an interview. "I don't like my announcers to second-guess too much. I tell them, 'You fellas be very careful about what you're calling.'"

Farm Problem Hearings Begin

The FARM SCENE

Growers are encouraged not to cut back on lime use for soybean fields.

The impact of the poor corn crop and only a fair soybean crop in '77 may cause soybean growers to think of cutting back on some production practices for '78. Liming to correct soil acidity should not be one of those practices considered. Soil tests should be taken early and lime added as needed and worked into the soil so that the situation is effectively corrected.

Lime is needed on many Pitt County soils to raise the soil pH. Intensive cropping, leaching, and heavy use of nitrogen fertilizers on corn have all contributed to the low pH problems in many fields. Soybeans do best on most soils with a pH of around 6.0.

At low soil pH, manganese and aluminum become more available for plant growth, even to toxic levels. Manganese, for example, when absorbed at high levels by soybeans causes stunted growth and a characteristic wrinkled leaf symptom. Conversely, manganese deficiency may show up at high pH's, possibly beginning at around 6.2 on some sandy soils.

Aluminum acid soils also increase the availability of some of the major soil nutrients. Although phosphorous is rarely lacking in optimum quantities for plant growth in N.C. soils, its overall availability is increased for plant up-take by increased soil to optimum levels.

Magnesium and calcium are extremely important nutrients for good soybean growth. Lime applied to tolimite supplies both of these elements. Calcitic lime contains no magnesium, and instead provides calcium.

Molybdenum is an important element in the nitrogen fixation process carried out by the bacteria which live in the nodules attached to the soybean roots. At soil pH's below 6.0 molybdenum is not readily available for plant uptake and the result is poor nodulation and subsequently less nitrogen fixation.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Four months after a new law was signed to bring federal farm programs in line with modern problems, Congress is once again listening to tales of crisis on the nation's farms.

The House Agriculture Committee begins seven days of hearings today, with witnesses scheduled from Congress, long-established farm groups and the strike-organizing American Agriculture movement.

Members of the Colorado-based strike group also will kick off at least 10 days of similar hearings before the Senate Agriculture Committee Feb. 23.

The farmers' complaint is that prices are too low for them to pay their bills, meet inflation for equipment and other costs, feed their families and continue as farmers without selling out to absentee corporations.

American Agriculture, which Friday claimed to have the support of 1.5 million farmers out of the total 8 million persons on 2.3 million U.S. farms, wants a law providing for 100 percent of parity.

Parity is a measure of farm prices and farmers' expenses compared to the price-cost relationships 65 years ago.

President Carter and Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland maintain that farmers should receive a "fair price" but full parity would raise federal costs by more than five-fold, boost consumer food prices by up to 25 percent and should not be legislated.

Instead, they said farmers should cooperate with the new programs of the 1977 statute, use federal financing to build granaries, put their unsold grain under loan in a grain-reserve program and watch prices rise this summer.

Bergland urged his program directors in a telephone conference call Friday to go out and sell that message in the Dakotas, Minnesota, Montana, Nebraska, Colorado, Missouri, Oklahoma and Texas.

But 54 House members and several senators wrote Carter at the same time that the conditions for farmers entering the programs must be sweetened if they are to be accepted.

More than 100 bills have been introduced in response to the almost three weeks of intense daily American Agriculture lobbying, but only those sponsored by agriculture committee members are likely to be given serious attention by the panels.

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) —

Some prominent North Carolina Democrats reportedly feel they've "had about all we can take" from Joseph Califano and believe the U.S. secretary of health, education and welfare could be a liability to the party.

They point to two recent actions by Califano that have been controversial in North Carolina — a nationwide anti-smoking campaign and demands for strict desegregation guidelines for the University of North Carolina system.

"Right now," observed Sen. Robert Morgan, D-N.C., "there is a strong feeling that we've had about all we can take in North Carolina. All this isn't going to help Democrats any, and it can make a big difference."

Some Democrats fear public sentiment against Califano will give Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., strength enough to ward off a Democratic challenge this year.

Gov. Jim Hunt, who has reacted sharply in public to both HEW actions, reportedly predicted at a recent meeting in Washington that North Carolina Republicans "are going to run against Califano just like we ran against Butz." He was referring to Earl Butz, secretary of agriculture under presidents

Nixon and Ford.

Former state Sen. Hamilton C. Horton, a Republican aspirant to the seat of U.S. Rep. Stephen Neal, D-N.C., has already taken Califano to task.

"I don't know that it's going to hurt me in this election, but it's tearing things up for the president," Neal said. "I personally believe he is one of our greatest presidents, but he'd have trouble winning anything in North Carolina right now."

U.S. Rep. Ike Andrews is more guarded in his view of Califano's impact.

"I'm sure all this is going to hurt some," he said, "but I think the North Carolina voters have become more sophisticated in distinguishing candidates from what's going on at the national level."

Will Picket Hunt Speech

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Although Gov. Jim Hunt says he will take no more action in the Wilmington 10 case, supporters of the group have announced plans to picket a speech by Hunt next weekend in an effort to change the governor's mind.

"People are fed up with Gov. Hunt's position," the Rev. Leon White said in an interview before a rally here Sunday on behalf of the Wilmington 10. "We're going to do something and we're not going to wait for the election."

White, North Carolina-Virginia field director of the United Church of Christ's Commission for Racial Justice, said supporters of the 10 would picket a state Human Relations Council banquet Saturday at North Carolina State University.

"We are asking friends not to cross the picket line," White said.

Gary Pearce, the governor's press secretary, confirmed that Hunt was scheduled to speak at the banquet but declined to comment on the demonstration plans.

The Wilmington 10 were convicted in 1972 in connection with the firebombing of a grocery store in the port city during racial troubles the previous year.

Last month, Hunt reduced the sentences of the nine members of the group who remain in prison, but said he did not intend to take any further action in the case. Supporters of the 10 had demanded a full pardon of innocence from Hunt.

About 250 persons attended a three-hour rally in support of the 10 here Sunday at which speakers said they would continue to protest Hunt's position.

"We want the governor to change his mind," said Golden Frinks, state coordinator for the Southern Christian Leadership Conference.

Plans were also announced Sunday for a demonstration in support of the 10 next Saturday at the Capitol and the Federal Building in Raleigh.

Today's Cryptoquip clue: L equals I

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Q.1—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠A72 ♥A72 ♦K863 ♠A95
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♥ Pass 2 ♦ Pass

What do you bid now?
A.—While an opening bid opposite an opening bid would normally produce game, your hand contains a flaw—the perfectly flat distribution. Since you have no ruffing value, you should deduct 1 point, reducing the worth of the hand to 12 points. Therefore, a raise to three hearts is quite adequate.

Q.2—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠A1092 ♥A ♦752 ♠A98
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♥ Pass 1 NT Pass

What action do you take?
A.—Pass. Partner has shown a weak hand with a long heart suit and no preference for either of your suits. Game is out of the question, and you are in your best spot.

Q.3—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠Q1072 ♥83 ♦6 ♠KJ10952
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
Pass 1 NT Dble. Pass ?

What action do you take?
A.—One no trump doubled may be headed for a heavy defeat if partner would oblige by leading a black suit. Unfortunately, your holding makes it obvious that partner will lead a red suit, and that might cost a trick as well as a tempo. We suggest a jump to three clubs. While this is not forcing, it suggests a game contract—probably three no trump—if partner has a fit for clubs.

Q.4—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠AK7652 ♥A85 ♦73 ♠J8
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South
3 ♦ Pass ?

What action do you take?
A.—If partner is a reliable bidder, he should have a pretty good hand for a vulnerable preempt, so one more toward game is warranted. Your most likely game is in spades. We suggest you respond three spades. This is forcing, of course. If partner raises, which he should do with any three spades or doubleton honor, or simply returns to four diamonds, pass. You have done your duty.

Q.5—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠K8 ♥K92 ♦AJ107 ♠Q1032
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♦ Dble. Rdbld. 1 ♥
Pass 2 ♥ 2 ♦ Pass
2 NT Pass 3 ♦ Pass ?

What do you bid now?
A.—Avoid the trap of rebidding three no trump. You have already shown your heart stopper and partner has indicated that he is not the least bit interested in no trump. With good four-card support for partner's second suit, you should raise to four clubs.

Q.6—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠K6 ♥KQ1082 ♦J1054 ♠93
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♦ Pass 1 ♥ Pass
1 NT Pass 2 ♦ Pass

What action do you take?
A.—Since partner has already shown a minimum opening bid, there is a tendency to pass at this point. However, the two heart bid has improved your hand considerably. The double fit in the red suits increases your trick-taking potential, so you are worth one more toward game. Bid three hearts to advise partner that you are not averse to further action.

Q.7—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠4 ♥J852 ♦Q1073 ♠KJ82
The bidding has proceeded:
West North East South
1 ♥ 1 ♦ Dble. ?
What action do you take?
A.—We are not in the habit of saving partner from his folly, but here a bid of one no trump seems to have everything to gain and little to lose. East should be short in hearts for his double of one spade, so partner rates to have two or three hearts. And if partner can't stand one no trump and can introduce a second suit, you will have located a good fit.

Q.8—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠73 ♥95 ♦A10762 ♠AKJ
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♥ Pass 2 ♦ Pass
2 ♥ Pass 3 ♦ Pass

What action do you take?
A.—By first reversing with two spades and then jumping to four hearts, partner has shown a strong hand with six or seven very good hearts and four spades (perhaps only three spades). You have considerably more than your bids have shown up to now. The two hands should produce a heart slam, and the only sensible bid is to jump to six hearts.

Your play to the first trick could decide the fate of the contract! A writer once remarked: "There's no such thing as a blind opening lead, only deaf opening leaders!" Britt Ekland Making TV Show In Sweden

By JAY SHARBUTT

AP Television Writer

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Britt Ekland, who no longer lives with rock star Rod Stewart, was in NBC's "Ring of Passion" last week and is in NBC's "The Great Wallendas" next Sunday. And after that?

She'll start filming a six-part miniseries on Feb. 20. But the beautiful blonde actress says it won't be for NBC, ABC or CBS. It's for non-commercial television in her native Sweden.

The show is "The Shipowner," by British writer Norman Crisp. Miss Ekland, 35, says she'll play the friend of a British journalist who marries the playboy son of a Swedish shipbuilding family.

"I've never worked in Sweden before, never said a line of dialogue in Swedish, and it's scary," said the lady, calm, assured and confident when interviewed over a few toddies at a famed hotel here.

There arose the inevitable question of her recent settlement with Stewart, whom she sued last August for $15 million when they split up after living together 2½ years here sans benefit of marriage.

The suit, filed in Los Angeles, was called off last month with an out-of-court agreement. Miss E. politely but firmly declined to say what was worked out by the opposing forces.

"It was a private settlement between me and Rod which will never be known to the press," she said. "Neither he nor I will discuss it. We have made an agreement between ourselves to that effect."

That being settled, she was asked why she's returning to Sweden to make a TV show — at relatively low pay — instead of continuing to labor in Hollywood's lucrative film and television hatteries.

"Well, it was a hard decision," she said. "But I'm so fed up with Sweden not recognizing me for what I am — an actress, not a soap opera, not an object."

"I'm a working actress and have been that for close to 15 years," said the veteran of nearly 30 movies, including "The Night They Raided Minsky's" and "The Man with the Golden Gun."

Miss Ekland, ex-wife of Britain's Peter Sellers and mother of two young children, isn't abandoning movie-making here. But she concedes that her acceptance of that Swedish TV offer has caused some distress to certain parties here.

"My agent is tearing his hair out, my business manager is quitting, but what can I do?" asked the actress, whose career began when she moved from Sweden to England at 20 to study acting and work.

"The ties to my own country are stronger than the desire just to make lots of money and be very, very famous."

An 'Old Pro' Says Bank Robberies By Amateurs

BUTNER, N.C. (AP) — Bank robbers did 32 percent less business in North Carolina last year than in 1976, and at least one "old pro" says it's because rank amateurs are taking over.

"These guys nowadays are strictly amateurs. It's getting to the point today when a person is absolutely out of his mind to rob a bank," said Carl Hamby, a white-haired 68-year-old with a long prison record. He is presently serving a 10-year sentence in federal prison here for a 1972 bank robbery and assault.

"The pros are moving out because it's too tough and the profits are too small," he added. "There are a few around who are still involved, but the ranks are beginning to thin out."

Asked why he thought the number of bank robberies in the state has declined — from 79 in 1976 to 54 last year — Hamby said, "They're locking too many of them up. That's why."

With the sophisticated security measures that banks are now taking, he said, "to be a success, you have to go into it as a business with a stopwatch, and maps and a disguise and all that. It's hard work."

Hamby said it is much more difficult to rob a bank than, say, a small business, primarily because bank robbery is a federal offense. And that means the Federal Bureau of Investigation gets into the act.

"Going in and sticking up the bank's easy," Hamby said. "The getaway and the cover-up is what's hard. Don't underestimate the FBI. A lot of people make that mistake."

One person who made that mistake is Stanley Crawford, who is serving a life sentence at Butner. He acknowledges that his single bank-robbery attempt in 1972 was not only poorly planned, but a mistake.

He did not know, for example, that he could be sentenced to up to 25 years for armed robbery alone — much less that he faced a possible life sentence when he and an accomplice took five bank employees and a customer as hostages.

"It was not a situation that I knew all these things. I didn't know nothing about robbing a bank. I never knew I was going to be charged with kidnap before."

cause I never even knew I had done that," Crawford said.

"Some guys are bank robbers. Some guys rob banks," he said, making it clear he felt he belonged in the latter category.

Crawford said he understood why he received a life term, but said he felt he had served enough time for his crime. He said the best place for him would be "where I could tell the kids. This (prison) is not the place."

Hamby had some advice to share, as well.

"If anyone wants to go out there and rob a bank," he said, "they should go to a psychiatrist and lie on the couch awhile."

TO ALL INTERESTED AGENCIES, GROUPS AND PERSONS:
The City of Greenville proposes to request the U.S. Department of Housing and Community Development to release Federal funds under Title I of the Housing and Community Development Act of 1974 (PL 93-283) to be used for the following projects:

- b) This project would alleviate congestion at the intersection of Fourteenth Street and Dickinson Avenue and serve to promote a smooth, safe flow of traffic.
- c) The project is located in Enumeration Districts 28 and 30. Total project costs equals $398,000.

- a) South Greene Street Extension.
- b) The project would provide access to the low-income housing project under construction and to existing residences.
- c) The project is located in Enumeration Districts 29 and 31. Total project costs equals $85,000.

- a) West Greenville Recreation Center Tennis Courts.
- b) The project would provide two lighted tennis courts for use by West Greenville residents.
- c) The project is located in Enumeration District 27. Total project costs equals $30,000.

01 PUBLIC NOTICES

It has been determined that such request for release of funds will not constitute an action significantly affecting the quality of the human environment; and, accordingly, the City of Greenville has decided not to prepare an Environmental Impact Statement under the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969 (PL 91-190).

The reasons for such a decision not to prepare such Statement were as follows:

PROJECT ONE
The proposed widening of Fourteenth Street will provide for a smooth, safe route to the hospital and Medical Arts district as well as alleviate ill effects that present traffic congestion imposes on the adjoining neighborhood.

PROJECT TWO
The proposed project will provide adequate access to the low-income housing project under construction. Existing site conditions will determine construction specifications such that the quality of the human environment is not negatively affected.

PROJECT THREE
The proposed construction of two tennis courts at West Greenville Recreation Center will provide the residents a recreational opportunity currently not available. It will be such that adverse impacts will be minimal.

An Environmental Review Record reflecting the review of the project has been made by the City of Greenville which documents the environmental review of the projects and fully sets forth the reasons why such Statements are not required. The Environmental Review Record is on file at City Hall and are available to public examination and copying, upon request, at the Department of Community Development between the hours of 8:00 a.m. and 5:00 p.m. during weekdays.

No further review of such projects is proposed to be conducted prior to the request for release of Federal Funds. All interested agencies, groups and persons disagreeing with this decision are invited to submit written comments for consideration by the City of Greenville to the Office of the Mayor, City of Greenville, P.O. Box 1905, Greenville, North Carolina 27834. February 6, 1978.

Poultry

RALEIGH (AP) (NCDA) — The trend on the North Carolina f.o.b. dock broiler market was steady, supplies short, demand good, weights desirable. The dock weighted average price this week is 39.89. Estimated slaughter today 1,345,000.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market posted a moderate loss today in trading limited by an East Coast snowstorm.

The noon Dow Jones average of 30 industrials was down 3.20 at 767.76.

Losers held a small advantage over gainers among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Analysts said it was difficult to discern any pronounced trend in the market, given the slow pace of trading. But they did note some apparent sources of concern over the inflation outlook and interest rates.

First of all, they cited a report from an association of corporate purchasing executives that inflationary pressures stepped up last month.

They also noted fears that the Federal Reserve might soon tighten credit if the money supply continues to expand at its recent rate.

Howard Johnson led the active list, up 1/4 at 11 1/4. A 100,000-share block traded at that price.

Columbia Pictures rose 1 to 16 1/4. The company said David Begelman, under fire for alleged mishandling of corporate funds, had resigned as president of its motion picture and television division.

The NYSE's composite index of more than 1,500 common stocks slipped .13 to 49.59. On the American Stock Exchange, the market value index edged up .04 to 122.82.

Volume on the Big Board came to just 6.87 million shares over the first two hours, against 8.36 million in the comparable period on Friday.

Skyjacker Surrenders

FRANKFURT, West Germany (AP) — A man carrying a suitcase in which he said he had a bomb surrendered to the police after emerging from a hijacked Czechoslovak airliner that landed at Frankfurt early this afternoon.

Frankfurt airport spokesman Karlhans Mueller said no bomb was found in the suitcase.

The hijacker requested political asylum in West Germany, the police said. His nationality was not immediately known.

The Tupolev 134 plane was commandeered after taking off from East Berlin on a scheduled flight to Prague, authorities said.

Police said there were 42 passengers aboard the plane and airport sources said they were believed to include 38 East Germans and three Czechoslovak citizens. The aircraft carried a crew of three.

It was the seventh hijacking of a Czechoslovak airliner to West Germany since 1970.

REMOVE LIFE RAFTS
MIAMI (AP) — At least two airlines flying overwater routes have removed life rafts from their aircraft with federal permission, a Federal Aviation Administration spokesman said today.

The expedition set sail from the Iraqi port of Qurna last November and has stopped at the Persian Gulf sheldoms of Bahrain and Oman.

Volunteer Plan For Defense Proving Costly

WASHINGTON (AP) — The all-volunteer military service has cost an additional $18 billion since the end of the draft in 1971, far more than previous estimates, the General Accounting Office said today.

Releasing the new study, Comptroller General Elmer B. Staats said the biggest additional cost of the volunteer force is the much higher pay for new military enlistees.

Staats, who heads the congressional auditing service, said it cost the taxpayers $14.2 billion in higher pay to entice enough volunteers for the Army, Navy, Air Force, Marine Corps and Coast Guard.

Staats testified before a Senate armed services subcommittee.

Subcommittee Chairman Sam Nunn, D-Ga., a frequent critic of the all-volunteer concept, said he asked the GAO to do the study after several unsuccessful attempts to obtain a complete cost estimate from the Pentagon.

Nunn said previous Defense Department estimates on the costs have varied widely from a high of $300 million, with some Pentagon officials maintaining that an all-voluntary force was actually cheaper than the draft.

Besides higher pay for younger enlisted men and women and junior officers, the GAO attributed the higher cost to a number of factors:

—Recruiting and advertising,

—Improved military housing, $1.2 billion.

—Incentives for doctors and dentists to join the military services, $932 million.

The GAO said $289 million was saved by phasing out the Selective Service System.

In his testimony, Staats acknowledged that if the military draft were restored, it is unlikely that the higher cost would be eliminated. No one can determine that saving, he said.

The Pentagon disputed the GAO's findings, asserting that the agency used oversimplified accounting methods and misattributed some costs.

Report Samuel Dash Is Chosen

NEW YORK (AP) — Samuel Dash, former chief counsel of the Senate Watergate Committee, has been chosen to succeed David W. Marston as U.S. attorney in Philadelphia, the New York Times says.

The Times, quoting unidentified sources in the Senate, said in today's editions that during this week, Attorney General Griffin Bell is expected to appoint Dash to Marston's post. Marston was dismissed by the Carter administration last week.

The newspaper quoted Marvin Wall, a spokesman for Bell's office, as saying that final considerations before Dash's appointment were "still being checked."

Rep. Joshua Eilberg, D-Pa., had asked President Carter to remove Marston, a Republican, as federal attorney in Philadelphia. Later, it was revealed that Marston's office was investigating Eilberg in connection with allegations that Eilberg had used his influence to seek federal and state aid for a hospital which had retained his law firm.

Carter and Bell have denied that they knew about Marston's investigation when they were asked by Eilberg to remove Marston as federal attorney.

Dash, 53, is a law professor and director of the Institute of Criminal Law and Procedure at Georgetown University in Washington. He is among five persons being considered to succeed Marston.

Babysitter And Others Charged

NEW YORK (AP) — A family babysitter and two male accomplices reportedly have confessed to abducting the 11-year-old daughter of clothing designer Calvin Klein for $100,000 ransom.

Assistant District Attorney Thomas DeMakis told a judge during arraignment proceedings Sunday that all three "have made full tape-recorded confessions to me."

The babysitter, Paula Christine Ransay, 23, her half-brother Dominique Ransay, 19, both French citizens from Martinique with permanent resident status in the United States, and Cecil Wiggins, 24, were arrested late Saturday in the kidnapping of Marci Klein.

The child was held more than nine hours Friday until her father paid a ransom of $100,000. Miss Ransay was with the youngster when she was released Friday.

Skiing Season A Record-Setter

BLOWING ROCK, N.C. (AP) — The 1977-78 skiing season in North Carolina appears to be another record-setter, and one promoter says the boom indicates the state's ski industry is no longer just a land-sales gimmick.

"Initially, the entire thrust of the whole thing was to get people here so they could sell them land," said A.C. Marshall of the N.C. Ski Association.
