

Carter Will Unveil College Student Aid Program

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter will announce a major national aid program for college students from middle-income families on Wednesday, congressional leaders said today.

The Democratic leaders told reporters about the announcement after breakfast with the president at the White House. They declined to disclose details of the program, saying they would leave that to Carter.

In its budget for the upcoming fiscal year, the administration proposed to set aside $700 million in contingency funds for a promised alternative to demands in Congress for tuition tax credit.

Health, Education and Welfare Secretary Joseph A. Califano

Jr., has said that families in lower and middle-income brackets need federal assistance in sending their children to school but that tax credits would provide benefits not just to those groups but to high-income taxpayers as well.

"We cannot afford poverty programs for people who aren't poor," Califano said.

On another topic, House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill told reporters he expects the House to pass legislation establishing an agency for consumer protection. "It'll be very close," O'Neill declared. "But I'll be surprised if we don't win."

The Carter administration tried to gain approval for the agency last year, but the leadership withdrew the legislation for lack of support.

On the president's energy program, O'Neill said the House expects the Senate to propose a compromise on deregulating natural gas prices.

"I have great expectations that something may come in the next 48 hours," he said, adding that House members of a conference committee considering the issue have made three proposals.

O'Neill said he considers it the Senate's turn to make a proposal.

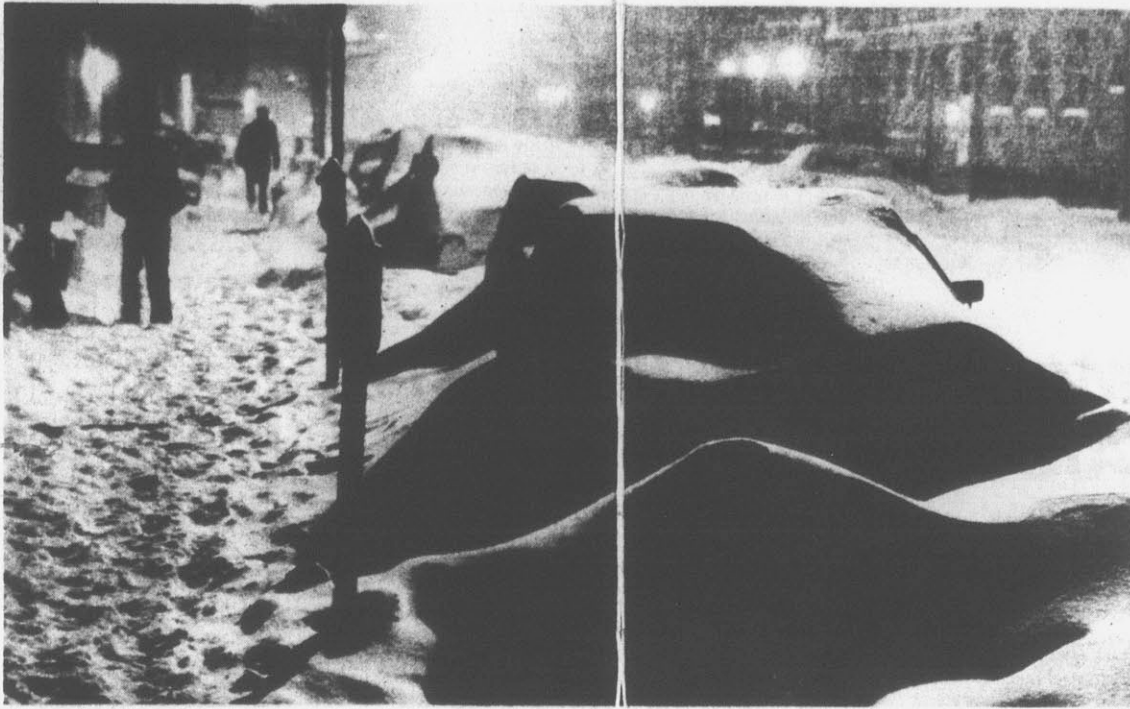

The student aid program was first mentioned by House Whip John Brademas of Indiana, who called it "a major student national assistance program."

Brademas said Carter would announce the program Wednesday at a news conference. But White House Associate Press Secretary Claudia Townsend said no news conference is scheduled.

She said Carter is likely to make the announcement personally but will not hold a full scale question-and-answer session with reporters.

Asked about the program, O'Neill said it would be a new financial assistance program that "hits the middle-income group of Americans." The speaker said other programs have been aimed at the poor or the wealthy.

Questioned about details of the program, O'Neill said: "The president will be announcing the program tomorrow."

Northeast Paralyzed By A Disruptive Blizzard

By The Associated Press

The Northeast from Pennsylvania to Massachusetts was paralyzed today in the wake of a blizzard that brought more than a foot of snow, knocked out power in parts of Boston and disrupted virtually every facet of life for millions.

Chicago was snarled by an unexpected storm that brought 9 inches of new snow to the city; up to a foot fell in lakeside areas of Wisconsin and Michigan; a blizzard lashed parts of Montana and North Dakota; and Northern California was braced for a new round of torrential rains.

More than 24 weather-related deaths were reported around the country.

The blackout in Boston, which was expected to get about 1½ feet of snow before the storm ends, left 75,000 Boston Edison Co. customers without electricity early today. Authorities said power had been restored to all but 20,000 customers by 8 a.m.

Elsewhere throughout the region, workers who had spent hours trying to get home Monday night faced equally difficult commuting today with transportation operating sporadically — if at all. Snow continued but was expected to taper off during the day.

While Easterners had been warned of the storm — the second for the area in 17 days — Chicagoans, who faced another blizzard only 12 days ago, were unprepared for the snow that fell on their city starting Monday afternoon. Forecasters had predicted the possibility of snow but no major accumulation.

A state of emergency was declared across Southern New England, and the National Guard was called out.

"We've stopped clearing snow. We're starting to live with it. That's the best way to put it," said an emergency official in Boston.

As in many other areas, all traffic except for emergency vehicles was banned from Boston streets. Buses were not running.

Road, rail and air transportation throughout the Northeast was snarled. Airports were closed. Commuter trains were canceled; when they did operate, there were lengthy delays. Highways were blocked by disabled cars. Schools, businesses and offices — many of which closed early Monday as the snow built — remained shut.

The Western blizzard struck on Monday and the National Weather Service said the blizzard warning for western North Dakota and eastern Montana — the parts east of the Continental Divide — would continue into tonight.

Sheriff's deputies at Beach, N.D., said at least 20 motorists had to be rescued by four-wheel drive vehicles after their cars became stalled in snowdrifts on Interstate 94.

Rain was the problem on the West Coast. Storm fronts were expected to come at 24-hour intervals, with the worst storm predicted for Wednesday morning. At the height of the rains on Sunday some 44,000 homes and businesses were without power and hundreds of residents still had no electricity on Monday.

In Boston, the trouble started when a roof from a neighboring building blew into Boston Edison's largest generating station, setting off a chain reaction that led to the power cuts.

The city subway system was reported operating under its own emergency power, but with long delays.

Off the coast of New England, a Coast Guard cutter searched Salem Sound in blinding snow for three vessels which reported they were disabled in 60-mph winds and 30-foot seas.

Mixed Review By Old Expert

OXFORD, N.Y. (AP) — Mary Snyder gives a mixed review to a local craft fair she attended, saying "I used to do it." Mrs. Snyder qualifies as a longtime critic — she turned 108 years old Monday and attended the weekend craft fair as part of her birthday celebration.

"I feel pretty good," Mrs. Snyder said at a birthday gathering. "I can stand most anything. I just get a lot of sleep."

Gaskins Files For Pitt Board

Walter E. Gaskins of Rt. 1, Ayden filed Monday as a candidate for the District Five seat on the Pitt Board of Commissioners.

Gaskins is seeking the board seat currently held by B. Alton Gardner, representing the Ayden, Grifton and Swift Creek townships.

Gaskins resides in the Grifton township.

Bids For Adding To Court House Okayed

By STUART SAVAGE

Reflector Staff Writer

Pitt County Commissioners yesterday afternoon approved an application for Farmers Home Administration funding for a county-wide water system, and okayed bids for an addition to the court house.

Three firms bid on the general construction contract for the court house addition. They included the low bidder, Eastern Construction Co. ($202,593), J. Leo Hawkins ($235,000), and James D. Little Construction Co. ($224,828).

With the low general construction contract, the addition, which will provide a communications room for the Sheriff's Department, a new jail entrance, and a new holding cell, as well as new matrons, conference, laundry and other facilities for the jail, will cost $245,705, not including architects fees.

Other low bids for the project, received at an earlier letting at which only one general construction bid was received, include: plumbing, Kinston Plumbing and Heating ($10,552), heating and air conditioning, Humphrey Heating and Roofing ($11,640), and electrical, Stuart Shinn, Inc. ($20,920).

The addition to the North end of the court house annex, is expected to be completed near the end of the summer.

In approving the FHA funding application, the board moved a step closer to a county-wide water system for Pitt, designed to serve areas not served by municipalities or non-profit water corporations.

If approved, the county would receive a $2.62 million grant and a $2.62 million loan from FHA.

The county has already received approval for $1.37 million in State Clean Water Bond funds for the project.

Commissioners hope to receive additional funding from the Coastal Plains Regional Commission to finance the $6.63 million project.

A county-wide water study indicates that there are 2,750 potential customers within the projected service area, and anticipates 2,200 customers will use the service initially.

The non-profit county system as projected, will include four 200,000 gallon elevated storage tanks supplied by nine deep wells, more than 1 million feet of six-inch water main and 510,000 feet of four-inch main.

The cost of maintenance and operation and repaying the FHA loan will come from water system revenues.

At their morning session yesterday, commissioners approved a pilot program proposed by the Juvenile Study Committee, designed to prevent border-line juveniles from running afoul of the law.

Committee chairman Henry Cox presented the juvenile group's recommendation. An article in yesterday's edition of The Daily Reflector identified Cox as Henry Dunn.

Too-High Bids On Development For Elderly Rejected

By TOM BAINES

Reflector Staff Writer

The construction bids that came in considerably over the budget for the proposed mid-rise housing development for the elderly here were formally rejected Monday night by the Housing Authority.

The low bid on the 50-unit, six-story apartment complex was some 60 per cent over available funding and the Authority had sought since the Dec. 14 bid opening to negotiate with the low bidder in an effort to reduce the construction figure.

Executive Director Joe Laney said last night that the negotiations had brought the bid down some $300,000 but the Department of Housing and Urban Development, in a Greensboro meeting with Authority representatives, failed to endorse the bid even with the reductions.

Laney said that the Authority must now go back to the drawing board with the project in an attempt to get the costs within the budget.

Commissioners agreed that they had no alternative but to reject the bids so that the contractors who offered proposals on the development will know where they stand.

Laney pointed out that the architect will have to go back through the specifications for the complex and shave all of the excess high expense items.

According to the director, HUD has been asked to approve an additional 22 units for Greenville that would give the project an estimated 40 per cent more income. HUD has not answered the request, it was noted.

The initial plans call for a one-story multi-purpose room to be built on one end of the complex for use by the elderly residents in meal and social services activities but costs may necessitate the elimination of the room, it was mentioned.

Laney said the one-story section would probably cost $80,000 to $100,000. He said that if the request for additional units is rejected and the development proceeds with 50 units, the one-story section will probably have to go.

According to Laney, the contractors have completed approximately 25 per cent of the new Southside housing project off Evans Street. The construction schedule had called for some 40 per cent completion at this stage but the weather contributed to the delays, he reported.

Laney said that 46 out of a scheduled 62 foundations have been poured and 25 buildings have been framed. He added that the grading contractor is behind in his work and grading is now some 80 per cent complete.

In addition, the closing of a ditch that runs through the project area is approximately 65 per cent complete with city work crews handling the job. The Redevelopment Commission purchased the pipe for the ditch work.

Commissioners voted not to execute a contract with the cable television franchise holders here unless the contract is worded the same as the one executed by cable television with Greenville Utilities. The contract covers the use by cable television of utility poles owned by the Authority.

In other business, board members voted to adopt the reimbursement method of participation in unemployment compensation insurance for Authority employees. The Authority is required to participate in unemployment insurance, effective last month, according to new federal guidelines.

The agency had the option of paying a flat payment per quarter for unemployment compensation or paying the actual amount filed for unemployment claims under a method of reimbursement.

Sallye Streeter, director of tenant affairs, reported that all housing units operated by the Authority were occupied during January and the average rent paid in the five developments amounted to $74.80.

Individual project rents included: N.C. 22-1 (Meadowbrook), $66.45; N.C. 22-2 (Kearney Park), $76.57; N.C. 22-3 (Moyewood), $78.43; N.C. 22-4 (Moyewood), $76.93; and N.C. 22-6 (Newtown), $67.46.

Mrs. Streeter said that the staff had started conferences with families with high utility bills.

Will Run For N.C. Senate

TARBORO — George Alton Grayiel, chairman of the Edgecombe County Republican Party, filed Monday as a candidate for the N.C. Senate from the Sixth N.C. State Senatorial District. The district includes Edgecombe, Halifax, Martin and Pitt Counties.

Grayiel attended schools in Martin and Halifax Counties. He is married to the former Ruth Wooten of Ayden, and they are the parents of three children, a son George, Jr., and two daughters, Mrs. Brenda G. Marks and Gwendolyn Grayiel.

Also a senate candidate for the 1976 general election, Grayiel said he was interested "in our tax dollar as to where it is being used and if it is being used to the best value of the North Carolina state tax paying persons."

AILING AVOCADO

Help! I have an avocado tree that looks really sick. I've raised it from a baby and hate to lose it at this stage. Can you put me in touch with someone knowledgeable about avocado trees? C. T.

Perhaps this item will bring forth someone. In the meantime, you may wish to contact the Pitt County Extension Service which can provide you with Horticultural Information Leaflet No. 536, titled "Growing Avocado from Seed."

It points out that avocados are tropical plants and as such, like warm, fairly humid conditions and to be watered with tepid (lukewarm) water. They should be fertilized about every three months. Leaves normally reach four to five inches in length. When leaves appear to be getting smaller and falling from the plant, the avocado needs fertilizing. It requires good filtered or indirect light, the leaflet says.

MAXINE WIGGINS

Armed Revolt By Nicaraguans Urged

By KERNAN TURNER
Associated Press Writer

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — The Sandinista guerrillas urged Nicaraguans to take up arms against President Anastasio Somoza as his government acknowledged that nearly two-thirds of the voters boycotted the nationwide municipal elections.

A statement from the guerrillas called for attacks on the National Guard, Nicaragua's army, to obtain weapons. It said guardsmen who join the rebellion will be "pardoned" and urged workers to convert their tools into weapons.

"Every hatchet, hammer, shovel, knife, cleaver, wheelbarrow ... must be converted into the means for gaining liberty and popular democracy," said the Sandinistas.

"The workers' strike is not enough. It must be turned into an armed struggle."

Protest demonstrations and a general strike have beset Somoza since the assassination a month ago of one of his leading opponents, Pedro Joaquín Chamorro. The president's foes are demanding that he resign, but he vows he will stay in office until the end of his term in 1981.

The Sandinistas, named for an army officer who fought the U.S. Marine occupation that put Somoza's father in power in 1937, attacked National Guard garrisons in the southern cities of Rivas and Granada last week. Fourteen persons were killed.

Somoza's opponents called for a boycott of the elections in 132 municipalities last Sunday as a protest against the president, and official returns showed only 258,529 of the 700,000 eligible voters cast ballots.

Somoza's National Liberal Party claimed there were 238,529 votes for its candidates to 12,313 for the Conservative Party, the only legal opposition party. But 52 of the 132 Conservative Party slates had been withdrawn, and one opposition senator, Alfredo Mendieta, said the government "vastly inflated" the figures.

"In my district, there were 107 voting tables and they were empty all day," he said. "We believe 95 percent of the voters stayed home."

The general strike went into its 16th day today with more than half of Managua's stores closed Monday.

The U.S. Embassy distributed a State Department statement calling on Somoza and his opponents to seek a peaceful solution. The Carter administration has refused to take sides in the crisis after four decades of unswerving U.S. support for the dictatorship, and this is interpreted by both the 52-year-old president and his opponents as implied support for the opposition.

Annexation Move Is Tabled By Winterville

WINTERVILLE — The Winterville Town Board last night tabled action on the proposed annexation of the Weathering Heights subdivision following a public hearing at 6:30 p.m.

According to Town Clerk Elwood Nobles, no Winterville residents appeared at the hearing and no letters opposing the annexation were presented to the Board.

The Board also held a public hearing concerning amending Town Article 6, Sections 1-F and G. No opposition was offered by residents, so the amendments were approved.

According to Section 1-F, "except in the case of apartments and planned unit developments, every building hereafter erected or moved shall be located on a separate lot. In no case shall there be more than one principal building and permitted accessory buildings on a lot."

Section G added that "every building hereafter erected shall be on a lot adjacent to a dedicated street right-of-way or a town approved private street or drive, and all structures shall be so located as to provide safe convenient access for servicing fire protection and required off-street parking."

In other business, the Board accepted bids for the construction of a garage building for the town from contractors. Bids are as follows: Dixon, Inc. — $57,025, Farior and Sons, Inc. — $65,475, and Jackson Builders, Inc. — $54,495.

According to Nobles, bids were "taken on advisement" because they were all higher than anticipated by the Board. Board members anticipate trying to re-negotiate with the lowest bidder — Jackson Builders, Inc.

The Board also accepted a state grant of $12,656 from the North Carolina Clean Water Bond Act "for sewage for Brookshire Subdivision." This is a 25 percent federally funded grant. The remaining 75 percent will be funded locally, said Nobles.

In further business, officials agreed to let the state continue to maintain Main Street and Tar Road to the Highway 11 Bypass. The state had previously requested that Winterville begin to maintain these roads, which the state had been taking care of, but town officials elected not to do so.

CETA Counselor Workshop Begins

A four-day Comprehensive Employment and Training Act (CETA) counselor training workshop got underway at the Willis Building on the East Carolina University campus this morning.

The training program is being sponsored by the Division of Community Employment, with Dr. H. D. Lambeth of the ECU Counseling Center serving as workshop chairman.

The four-day program is designed to give CETA counselors more effective skills through instruction, demonstration and practice, so they may more effectively counsel with the employed and get them back into the work force.

The local workshop is the third in a series of four to be held in North Carolina, according to Phyllis Herdendorf, statewide program director of the series which was developed and organized by the Division of Continuing Education at N.C. State University at Raleigh.

Sessions have already been held at Appalachian State University in Boone, and at the University of North Carolina at Greensboro. The final four-day session will be held at NCSU.

Mrs. Herdendorf a continuing education specialist at NCSU, said the morning sessions will be informational programs while the afternoons will be devoted to skill development workshops.

The CETA program is funded under the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act of the U.S. Department of Labor to aid areas of relatively high unemployment, and involves counseling, training and federally funded job placement for unemployed individuals.

Temperatures Dip Into Teens

Temperatures dipped into the teens this morning with a reported 8 a.m. temperature of 18 degrees.

The Greenville Utilities Commission recorded a high of 33 degrees and a low of 19 degrees during the 24-hour span leading up to midnight last night. There was only a trace of precipitation resulting from yesterday's light snow.

The Tar River level at 8 a.m. today stood at 6.2 feet and still dropping.

Hearings In Williamston

WILLIAMSTON — Two public hearing dates, Feb. 9 and 14 were set by the Town of Williamston Commissioners for public input into the current program for the $325,500 allocated to the town under HUD Community Development funds.

This is the fourth of a five-year community program with HUD funds which include developments in a number of projects.

In another action involving HUD funds, approval was given to the final phase of work on the Washington Street Neighborhood Housing Development following a public hearing at which no objections to plans presented were voiced. This phase will conclude a four-year, four-phase program for the housing project.

After considering two plans for city unemployment funds under the auspices of the Employment Security Commission, town commissioners opted for the plan that provides for filling unemployment claims as they occur. This decision was reached when a study showed that unemployment claims on the part of local municipal personnel had been negligible in recent years.

Action was taken to extend the terms of several members of three boards — the Board of Adjustments, the Code Enforcement Board, and the Planning Board. Extensions are for periods of three and four years.

Martin Road Requests Are Heard By Board

WILLIAMSTON — In its February meeting, members of the Martin County Board of Commissioners considered several road requests, the purchase of a fire department water truck, and heard a proposed ordinance for mobile trailers.

No action was taken on two separate requests presented for road improvements, with petitioners in both instances being asked to procure more information and to come again before the board. In the first request, Sara Moore, representing five families living on a three-quarter mile long dirt road, the Moore road, said road improvements are needed to make the dirt road passable.

Earl Moore, of the Dept. of Transportation, noted that an earlier attempt had been made to secure 60 feet rights-of-way for the road, but without success. He recommended that transportation personnel take another look to determine if variances may be possible in the right-of-way requirement.

On the second road request, dealing with Rural Road 1518, it was noted this also had been considered earlier, but that land owners along the road had failed to sign rights-of-way agreements. The petitioners were given right-of-way forms, and asked to come before the board again in March for a further look at the request that this road be black topped.

Approval was given by the board to a representative of the Farmers Home Administration in the matter of contractual agreement for FHA backing in the purchase of a water tanker for the Griffin Township Fire Department. Spokesmen for the rural fire department explained that the purchase would not entail an increase in the fire district tax for the township.

A request from Charles Ward, District Chairman of the Red Cross, that an ordinance requiring tie-down of mobile homes in Martin County be enacted, was referred to the county attorney. The attorney was directed to check out legal ramifications of such an ordinance.

Monday, June 1 was set as the date for the lien sale of property on which current taxes have not been paid.

Authority was given the town of Oak City to proceed with a public hearing on the town's granting a garment industry permission to use the gym of the former Oak City School as an industrial site. Earlier, the property had been turned over to County Commissioners by the County Board of Education, and commissioners have leased the property to the town for a six year period for a token fee of $1 per year. If residents of the town, at the public hearing, approve the use of the building for industrial purposes, the way is now clear for this action.

Winterville Has A Dog Pen

WINTERVILLE — According to Winterville Town Clerk Elwood Nobles, the town presently has a dog pen located on the south side of the Municipal Building.

Anyone having a stray or unwanted pet can take it to the town pen. The animals will then be transferred to the county shelter.

Nobles also reminded residents that town license tags must be purchased by Feb. 15. "Any resident that has lived here for 16 days and his car stays in town at night must purchase tags," said Nobles.

Subdivision Is Penalized

WASHINGTON — Officials at the Department of Natural Resources and Community Development's water quality office here said today that Brook Valley Country Club has been assessed a civil penalty for failing to operate its waste treatment plant as specified in its permit.

A. C. Turnage Jr. said the violation occurred in August and September 1977 and said notification of the civil penalty was mailed to country club officials January 19.

Turnage explained that the country club is permitted to operate a mechanical waste treatment plant which served the club house and several homes. The permit allows treated waste to be dumped into a tributary of Hardee Creek.

The official said the civil penalty was charged because "the waste was not treated to the extent required by the permit."

Scouts Holding Pancake Supper

Boy Scout Troop 340 is having its annual pancake supper on Friday, Feb. 10, from 5 p.m. to 7:30 p.m. at the St. James United Methodist Church located at 1600 E. Sixth Street.

Tickets are being sold by the scouts, by members of the troop committee, and will be sold at the door. The cost for adults is $1.50, for ages six through 12 is $1, and there will be no charge for children under six.

This is the only fund raising effort made by the troop to support its needs for equipment and other expenses.

Big Leaf Sale Made To Taiwan

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A trade delegation from Taiwan have signed contracts to purchase $12 million worth of flue-cured tobacco and promised to buy another $60 million of the 1978 crop, most of which will be produced in North Carolina.

Taiwan's state-owned Tobacco & Wine Monopoly Board purchased tobacco from 13 American firms in a ceremony here Monday. H.K. Shao, director-general of the Taiwan Board of Foreign Trade, led a delegation that is visiting 20 states.

Shao said purchases made this year will triple the amount of American tobacco that Taiwan bought last year. He said the purchases would help Taiwan narrow its trade surplus with the United States, which was $1.6 billion in 1977.

Names Can Help Or Hinder Career

By MARY ELLEN HASKETT
WASHINGTON (UPI) — Christopher Andersen thinks some people would definitely benefit from a name change.

Names affect success or failure in a career, Andersen says, and they can make the difference between social acceptability and an emotional, educational, or sexual handicap.

Andersen is the author of "The Name Game" (Simon and Schuster $7.95) and an editor at People Magazine.

"Your name is at least as important as your wardrobe," he said. Most people conform to what others expect of them.

He said a Bart is more likely to be an athlete than an Irving, a name with studious connotations, while a John is more likely to be manly and trustworthy than a Humphrey, who would tend to be unpopular and sedentary.

"We either live up to society's expectations or live them down," said Andersen. "Some (people with unpopular names) are spurred on to overcome their handicap, but most aren't."

He noted that Sen. Hubert Humphrey had said teasing about his name helped develop his fighting spirit.

A Bertha, he said, is likely to be fat because most people envision Berthas as obese, while Beths often meet society's expectations of them as "animated and very ladylike."

Andersen wrote his book after reading a University of Miami study on the psychological effect of names. The study said teachers tended to give higher grades to Johns and Michaels — considered to be popular and manly names — than to Caspers or Elroys, names with negative connotations.

He said a Loyola University study of inmates at Chicago's Cook County jail suggested people with "peculiar" names are more likely to have behavior problems and commit crimes.

"There's no replacement for talent or wealth," he said, but he thinks names influence a person's life as much as other external factors such as clothes or physical attractiveness.

Celebrities often influence name trends, he said. Many mothers called their daughters Tammy and Debbie after Debbie Reynolds and the character she played in a 1950s hit film, "Tammy and the Bachelor."

"Now there are a lot of Farrahs because of Farrah Fawcett-Majors," said Andersen. He said many black babies were named Kunta and Kizzy for two main characters in Alex Haley's "Roots" after the highly acclaimed television version was shown.

Anderson urges parents to avoid fads or gimmicks and names with unfavorable connotations, such as Effie, Adolph or Barney.

He generally disapproves of "Juniors," "Ils" or "Illi" for children. But after a certain age, a "Jr." or, even better, a number after a person's name can be a business asset, he said. It can lend a certain air of dignity or authority.

He said "Juniors" are rotten for children because: "They subliminally characterize the kid to that of the parent, especially if they are called Sonny or Little Joe or John."

He also thinks "nicknames" don't wear well. A 65-year-old Willie is ridiculous. In general, avoid them.

He noted exceptions such as President Carter, whose nickname "Jimmy" enhanced his populist image; talk show hosts Johnny Carson, Mike Douglas and Phil Donahue;

And high society figures: such as Happy Rockefeller, Bunny Du Pont, Bubbles Hornblow, Bobo Sears, financier Laddie Sanford, Sonny Vanderbilt, and literary agent Swift Lazar. Andersen feels nicknames can be a sign of acceptance for such persons.

He said celebrities understand the importance of a name.

"Katherine Hepburn said she could track her life stages by her name. First she was Kathy as a child, then Kit as a debutante, then Kate, and finally Miss Hepburn."

It's hard to image a "Divine Rosine" Bernard, but the "Divine Sarah" Bernhardt became a legend, said Andersen. Belle Silverman thought another name would look better in lights so she became Beverly Sills.

Andersen added that he found no need to change his own name but he generally signs himself Christopher P. instead of Christopher Peter Andersen. He said he uses the initial for two reasons: to create a break between his given and surnames, which have the same number of syllables and "I think (using a middle initial) has an authoritative ring."

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

I overheard my children arguing the other night over — of all things — my childhood. The oldest said, "Mama told me they weren't rich, but they always had a little food on the table and a roof over their heads."

The middle child said, "That's funny. She told me they were dirt poor and would have given their eye teeth to have half of the food I wasted."

The baby said, "They were destitute. She told me they were so poor they had to buy parents — on time..."

The oldest child said, "All I know is she had to walk eight blocks to school every day, rain or shine."

The middle child said, "It was three miles in a winter with three blizzards and a spring with two floods."

The baby said, "Would you believe she walked eight miles a day... and came home for lunch... with long underwear tucked under her feet for socks?"

The firstborn said, "Once when I told a lie she told me Grandma took a branch off a tree and switched her legs with it." The second-born said, "I heard that story and it wasn't a tree limb, it was a tree trunk." The baby said, "You got it wrong. She was tied to the tree trunk for three days to bleach in the sun."

The oldest said, "How long was she in labor with you? She told me I took 12 hours to be born."

"She told me three days," said the middle one.

The baby said, "She told me the other day she still gets cramps when she looks in my bedroom."

"All I know," said the oldest, "is she wasn't allowed to drive a car until she was 21."

"She told me 24."

"You get all the breaks. She wants me to vulcanize my feet."

"This is weird," said the oldest child. "Are we talking about the same Mom? The thin, bright-eyed, dark-haired girl who used to read me stories, bake cookies, paste my baby pictures in the album and giggle a lot?"

The middle child said, "The somber-looking blonde who used to put me to bed at 6:30 and bought me a dog to save on napskins?"

The baby said, "The grayish lady who falls asleep during the six-o'clock news and is going to show me my baby pictures when we finish shooting the roll at my graduation."

I knew I should have raised 'em in separate parts of the house.

Friends Unkind After Operation

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1978 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: I have just had an operation that has altered my facial expression. Some nerves were severed and now half of my face is permanently paralyzed.

The operation was easy to endure compared to the pain I have suffered from the remarks of some of my friends.

One woman said, "Now you will know how the rest of us plain Janes feel. Welcome to the club."

Another said, "It will be harder for you than the average woman to adjust to being homely. That's one of the penalties of having had good looks and suddenly losing them."

Abby, I have never been vain about my looks, knowing that real beauty comes from within. I am crushed at these so-called "condolences" in the name of friendship. What would you make of such friends? BETTY

DEAR BETTY: Strangers.

DEAR ABBY: I'm a 21-year-old college graduate who never has been married. A year ago I fell in love with Phil, a wonderful man who is perfect for me in every way. He's 33, divorced and has a 15-year-old son, Sonny. And that's the problem.

Sonny has lived with his father since he was 2. Phil was married at 17 and divorced at 18. Sonny's mother wasn't much good, but Sonny has a fierce loyalty to her, and for some strange reason, he doesn't like me. He has said some cruel things to me, such as, "You don't really love my Dad, you just want his money," and "You're too young to know what love is," and "It's just a crush," and "You'll never take my mother's place."

Meanwhile, I am very much in love with Phil and I know he loves me, but he keeps stalling the marriage because Sonny is so hostile to me.

How long should it take a 15-year-old boy to adjust to a stepparent? I feel that I'm losing Phil. How can I win Sonny's trust and love and get Phil to marry me? LOSING OUT

DEAR LOSING: Sorry, it's Phil's move—not yours. If he loved you as you love him, he'd deal with Sonny. In the meantime, if the wedding is off because Phil's son doesn't like you, you are obviously No. 2 in a winner take all contest.

DEAR ABBY: My father (age 62) is having an affair with a young woman and the whole family knows about it. Everybody but my mother, that is.

This isn't the first time my father has been involved. If it were really a love affair I could understand it, but these girls are always much younger (about my age—30) and they wouldn't look at my father if he didn't have money.

I just hate to see Dad make a fool of Mom this way. I considered typing Mom an anonymous letter, giving her Dad's current girlfriend's name, address and where she works. But I discussed it with my older brother and he said I shouldn't do it—it would hurt Mom too much.

Well, I think it would be doing Mom a great big favor. What is your opinion? ANONYMOUS DAUGHTER

DEAR ANONYMOUS: Your brother's advice was good. Take it.

CONFIDENTIAL TO D.B. IN POTOMAC, MD.: You appear to be a very intelligent person, but what you don't know about transsexualism would fill a book. And it has! Please read "EMERGENCE" by Mario Martino (published by Crown). It's a complete female-to-male autobiography, well written and easily understood. And write again after you've read this eye-opener.

Problems? Tell them to Abby. For a personal, unpublished reply, write Abby: Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069. Enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Dividends In Beat-The-Peak

Greenville Utilities customers can still sign up to participate in the Beat the Peak Program. By so doing the customer agrees to have radio controlled switches installed on water heaters and air conditioners. Power to these units can be interrupted at peak times. Participants will realize a reduction in their utility bills for the months of June through September.

Perhaps more important they will be participating in an energy saving program which could mean long range savings in the construction of new generating facilities. Beat the Peak is a sound energy management program. It will result in little inconvenience to the electric customer and it can pay big dividends for us all.

There Just Might Be Bias In HEW

As he instituted steps which could lead to cutoff of federal funds for the University of North Carolina Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare Joseph Califano expressed hope that agreement with UNC officials may still be reached. The secretary must know that unreasonable, unfair and uneven HEW demands put the UNC system in a position where any sort of agreement is impossible. The secretary depended on his bureaucratic army for this impossible ruling. Perhaps he should be searching his own organization for evidence of bias in relation to this North Carolina ruling.

THIS AFTERNOON

Jockeying For Number 2

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — While most political observers are keeping tabs on the U. S. Senate and General Assembly elections this year, serious work is already underway aimed at the 1980 general election. A major goal of some contenders is the lieutenant governor's office, and a handful of would be candidates are moving quietly in that direction. State Rep. Carl J. Stewart, Jr., D-Gaston, has already made it clear that he will serve only one more two-year term in the House of Representatives. He is currently Speaker of the House, and claims sufficient support to break tradition and repeat in that post during the 1979 and 1980 sessions. After that, a statewide race is anticipated, and there is little doubt that Stewart will run for lieutenant governor. Two members of the administration for Gov. James B. Hunt, Jr. are also possible candidates: Howard Lee Development. Lee was the front-runner in a crowded primary for the lieutenant governor's office in 1976, but lost to Jimmy Green in a runoff. He wants to try again, but reportedly is having some difficulty getting enthusiastic commitments from some of the people who worked so hard only to lose. Meanwhile, however, he is making solid progress in building strong local political alliances with county commissioners and municipal officials who must deal regularly with his agency. Tom Bradshaw is secretary of the Department of Transportation. He took advantage of the recent statewide bond vote to stomp the state and make lots of political contact. He has said openly he wants to be governor one day. A drawback, say some, is his present job in which for every person he makes happy with a road decision, he makes another unhappy. Bob Scott, former governor, lieutenant governor, son of a governor, and nephew of State Senator Ralph Scott, has expressed interest. Some observers dismiss that possibility, but should not do so lightly. Scott is not happy in his job as director of the Appalachian Regional Commission, and has repeatedly said he wants to stay in North Carolina, not Washington, D. C. He is also in line for a two job in the U. S. Department of Agriculture. If he should take that post, work for President Carter's re-election, and move up, he might remain in a federal post. But close friends of his say he much prefers the possibility of becoming governor again, especially since that job can now be held for eight years. All of which prompts a political wag to comment: "He wants to keep trying till he gets it right."

NOBLITT
Top Job

Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green is not seen as a contender to succeed himself. Of the law which now allows that prospect, he snorts: "What difference does it make?" Presiding over the Senate, appointing committee chairman and members, and performing routine chores which the governor doesn't choose to be bothered with do not make up a full day's work. A legislative study commission is even now seeking to define the duties of the lieutenant governor. Given the salary, staff assistance, and political exposure in that office, however, it is clearly the best possible stepping stone to the governor's mansion, and the present contenders recognize it as such. The timetable is such that the person who would be governor must begin now. Gov. Hunt is expected to run a second term in 1980. Four years later, the office will be subject of a wide open race with the winner having the prospect of eight years in office: the losers effectively disbarred until 1988—a fading vision as each grows older, struggles to remain affectionately in public life, and courts disaster through political error.

SOMETHING TO CONTEMPLATE!

By JAMES J. KILPATRICK

A Label Counts Little

WASHINGTON — The conservative speaker who travels around the lecture circuit encounters one stock question at almost every stop: If so many people consider themselves "conservative" he is asked, why is the Republican Party in such trouble? Good question; and it's worth kicking around in the dim light emanating from last month's CBS-New York Times poll of conservative attitudes. The poll produced no very satisfactory answers — probably because the questions were not very satisfactory questions. One question, for example, had to do with medical costs. This was the question: "Do you agree, or disagree, that the government ought to help people to get doctors and hospital care at low cost?" The response, as any schoolboy might have predicted, was overwhelmingly favorable. Even among those who regard themselves as conservatives, 79 percent agreed. Among self-styled liberals, 88 percent agreed. But the over-simplified wording of the question fairly coaxes argument. To speak of "the government" in this context is to speak of some remote, benevolent body. It is this body that will "help people". Isn't that nice? And the cost of this humane undertaking will be "low". Put in this fashion, it is remarkable that the question produced even 14 percent disagreement. It would have been a very different matter, I suspect, if the question had been rephrased to this effect: Are you willing to have a scheme of compulsory socialized medicine in the United States? My version is an exaggeration, of course, but it is closer to a fair statement of the public issue than the CBS-Times question. Another question asked if "the government should help a poor woman with her medical bills if she wants an abortion." A third asked for agreement or disagreement with the proposition that "the government in Washington ought to see to it that everybody who wants to work has a job." Issues aren't just that black and white. A couple of the poll questions missed the mark completely. Respondents were asked if the government should restrict the sale of drugs that it thinks are "dangerous", or should government warn people and let them make their own decision. This isn't what the fight is about. The fight has to do with the efficacy of drugs, with freedom of choice, with a doctor's right to prescribe according to his best judgment. A second question asked about restricting the "sale" of marijuana. What is at issue is not the sale but the possession of marijuana. No clear-cut patterns of liberalism or conservatism can be drawn from questions such as these. The only interesting thing in the poll is that increasing numbers of Americans evidently regard themselves as "conservatives", even though they have only a foggy notion of what the term implies. They seem simply to like the sound of the word. According to the poll, 42 percent of American adults think of themselves as very conservative or moderately conservative. This compares with 23 percent who say they are very liberal or moderately liberal. This is a significant gain in conservative identification since a similar poll in 1964. The figures take us back to the original inquiry: Assuming that the Republican Party is more conservative than the Democratic Party, why are

Crisis Tests Policy

By ROBERT B. CULLEN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration views Nicaragua's current crisis as a test case to see whether a new policy of "moral leadership" and refusal to prop up military governments can lead to democratic and peaceful change in Latin America. The administration is gambling that its policy will not topple authoritarian allies only to see them replaced by equally authoritarian governments of the left that align themselves with the neutralist or communist camps. Nicaragua has become a testing ground because of recent events. For the last 15 days, the country has been paralyzed by a general strike trying to force President Anastasio Somoza out of office. The strike follows the death early last month of opposition newspaper editor Pedro Joaquin Chamorro, gunned down by a team of assassins. His death touched off the most severe threat yet to the 45-year-old regime of the Somoza family, which has enjoyed American support ever since it took power, without having to answer many questions about its human rights policies. In return, the Somozas were loyal U.S. allies. That changed with Jimmy Carter's arrival at the White House. Last fall, the administration delayed indefinitely the normal yearly $2.5 million arms sale to Nicaragua. In the fiscal 1979 budget, according to sources, there is no weapons aid for Nicaragua. In addition, the administration has openly pressured Somoza, a West Point graduate, to cut back his authoritarian control. "Five or 10 years ago, we probably would have increased aid to Somoza in this type of crisis," said one official, who asked not to be identified. (Continued on page 5)

THE INSIDE REPORT

Here Comes Chief Davis

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
LOS ANGELES — The performance by former Los Angeles police chief Edward Davis the night of Jan. 30 in the conservative suburban community of San Gabriel suggests the arrival of a major new political force, carrying serious implications for California and perhaps even the nation. Conservative Republicans who paid $25 for Mexican food at Panchito's restaurant to back Davis's campaign for governor were obviously delighted by their choice. The 61-year-old, physically imposing Davis, heavy-set and white-haired, has the star quality to excite Republicans possessed by nobody here since Ronald Reagan in his first run for governor in 1966. More significant was what Davis did not say at Panchito's. No raw meat was thrown out. There was little of what made him the nation's best-known police chief: the colorful language, the hard line against protesters, the denunciation of homosexuals. This combination of charisma and restraint has made neophyte office-seeker Davis, who changed his party registration from Democratic only two years ago, the favorite in the five-man Republican primary for governor June 7. "A year ago, I laughed at Ed Davis as a right-wing kook," one Republican operative told us. "Six months ago, I was afraid he might be nominated and wreck the party. Now I think he's the best candidate we've got against Jerry Brown." The notion Davis might have any chance against Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. this year is privately entertained even by Democratic strategists. However, the more realistic concern among Brown's friends is the damage that might be inflicted by the free-swinging police chief. While unlikely to win, Davis might well cut up Brown badly enough to seriously hurt his hopes of challenging Jimmy Carter for President in 1980. The reason is the theme of the Davis campaign: "Put the heat to Brown." Davis gave his San Gabriel dinner a small taste of what's ahead by charging an eccentric Brown administration with ruining the state's economy. "California has had all of its valves turned down by funny little people Jerry Brown has appointed," he declared. Before the dinner, Davis gave us a larger taste, claiming there is "a Brown plan" to "turn the whole state into a Jerry Brown commune." The governor has packed the state regulatory agencies with "terrorists" who "know how to use power." This is stronger medicine than is possible from Davis's more liberal, more conventional Republican opponents (including state Atty. Gen. Evelle Younger and Mayor Pete Wilson of San Diego). Democrats fear Brown's attractively unusual personality can be pushed over the fine edge into eccentricity by the chief's expert use of ridicule. When Davis caricatured the governor's ascetic lifestyle as "Jerry lying on a bed of nails," he forecast to us his future course. The Republican worry has been that Davis's invective will carry him — and the whole Republican ticket if he is nominated — into oblivion. He first attracted national attention in 1973 by proposing portable gallows to hang sky-jackers right at the airports. Just last August, Davis told appreciative prison officials: "I always felt the federal government really was out to force me to hire 4-foot-11 transvestite morons." Davis's advisers want no more of such colorful language, and the chief is cooperating. Whereas six months ago he would volunteer the importance of anti-gay rights, Davis now stresses the more prosaic "jobs" issue — and how Brown's policy reduces employment. Three days before the San Gabriel dinner, Davis evoked a good response from a black group by stressing jobs. At San Gabriel, he supported an anti-busing initiative but added: "I'm not going to run with it as a platform." He holds his tongue in public about his Republican foes (although it slipped out recently that he considers Atty. Gen. Younger, still the front-runner but dropping quickly, "as exciting as a mashed potato sandwich"). In no other major state would Ed Davis have a chance. He lacks funds (although master fundraiser Richard Viguerie has been retained), campaign structure and past party service. But the California Republican party since 1966 has passed up its own to select such celebrated conservative ex-Democrats as Ronald Reagan and S. I. Hayakawa. Davis's basic strength is revealed by his own appraisal that "while Texas tries to be the most conservative state, California is the most conservative state — for Republicans, anyway." Given that reality and his (Continued on page 5)

Other Editors Say Bad Judgment

Jacksonville Daily News
Nov. 4, 1977 was the day on which Rep. Joshua Eilberg, a Democrat from Philadelphia, made his now-famous phone call to Pres. Carter concerning the need to "expedite" the removal of David Marston from his job as U.S. attorney for eastern Pennsylvania. The Justice Department now has certified that neither President Carter nor Attorney General Giffin Bell knew, at the time of the call, of the investigation then under way. Mr. Carter and Mr. Bell thus may seem innocent of any wrongdoing; but they are not innocent of an outrageously bad judgment. For the fact remains that by Jan. 12 both Mr. Carter and Mr. Bell knew of Mr. Marston's investigation of Mr. Eilberg and his Democratic colleague Daniel Flood from Wilkes-Barre, and yet they persevered in their determination to fire Mr. Marston, and did so on Jan. 20. Mr. Carter says that politics will not play a part in the selection of Mr. Marston's successor. Robert DeLuca has been named temporarily to the post, but Mr. Carter is going to find, in any event, that politics will play a part once the new attorney is selected. If a Democrat is chosen, the presumption must be that he is acceptable to Philadelphia Democrats, including Mr. Eilberg, and doubts justifiably will rise as to the administration of justice in eastern Pennsylvania. If a Republican is chosen, Mr. Carter will be in trouble with his own party and certainly Mr. Eilberg, who might be so imprudent as to make another White House phone call. There is still the little matter of what's to happen to Mr. Eilberg, of course. The White House, per instructions from Mr. Carter, continues to promise that the best person available will be the new Philadelphia attorney. But what may be more useful to know, right now, is whether the new attorney vigorously will expedite the investigation of Messrs. Eilberg and Flood. The question commands the nation's attention, and it would be better if the White House addressed it rather than, as it now is doing, the nuances of merit selection.

Strength For Today

DISGUISED BLESSINGS
Recently a man with an artificial leg died, leaving an estate of more than a million dollars. Before the loss of his leg he had held a series of unimportant, dead-end jobs, and had no ambition to get anything better for himself. Then came his accident. Unable now to do the kind of physical labor he was accustomed to, he became a door-to-door salesman, going painfully from one house to another because of his artificial leg. First he sold magazine subscriptions, and this led him into other types of selling. Finally he became a prosperous and influential dealer in automobiles and real estate. At the outset of his new career, many people did business with him out of sympathy for his handicap. But they soon saw that his artificial leg was a symbol of the triumph of effort over adversity. Calamities try our souls, but if we can conquer them we become all the stronger for it. —by Elisha Douglass

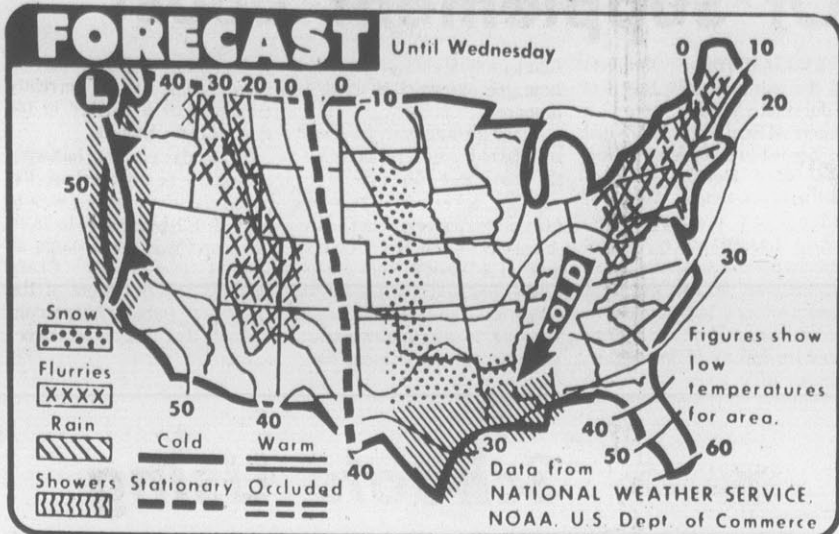

A Profit For Ordinary Investors

NEW YORK (AP) — Can ordinary people using old-fashioned investment techniques make money over a four-or five-year period in which the Dow Jones industrial average declines? They can. They have. They bought their stocks in 1973 and simply let them gather dust in the ensuing months and years, while paper profits accumulated to more than 50 percent. During the same period, 4.5 years from 1973 through 1977, the average fell nearly 10 percent, giving those old-fashioned investors with their musty ideas an advantage of more than 60 percent. Each month the National Association of Investment Clubs picks a stock it feels should be considered for study and possible investment. The guide it uses emphasizes three things:

1. Sales increase over the previous 10 years; 2. per share earnings increase for the same years; 3. price history in relation to past per share earnings to determine if stock can be bought at a fair price. Those who followed the recommendations just put the shares away. They didn't trade in and out. They didn't, said Tom O'Hara, chairman, attempt to finagle in any way. Instead, they let their profits accumulate. Including dividends, Dart Industries rose 90 percent since it was chosen in December 1973. Bausch & Lomb, chosen in January, rose 60 percent. They weren't the leaders by any means. Great Lakes Chemical, recommended in May 1973 at $8, closed 1977 at $33.25, a 316 percent price appreciation that becomes 330 percent with dividends included. National Detroit showed a 30 percent gain, price appreciation and dividends combined. IU International fell 30 percent on the same basis. Franklin Electric showed a gain of 48 percent. Guardian Industries, chosen in June 1973, declined 14 percent. Scott & Fetzer, chosen the following month, rose 13 percent, and Welterau, chosen in August, closed 1977 showing an increase of 10 percent. Royal Crown Cola was a disappointment. Chosen in September at $27.75, it closed 1977 at $18.75, a 32 percent price decline reduced to only 19 percent by dividends paid in the 4-plus years. The choices for October, November and December fared better. Standard Thompson showed an overall investment appreciation of 32 percent. American Telephone & Telegraph returned 59 percent, Dart Industries 90. O'Hara notes that the average 50.8 percent increase over original investment prices was far in excess of inflation during the period, puncturing statements that it couldn't be done. Making the NAIC techniques even more interesting are that they save on commissions and nervous energy. The association is founded on the assumption that it is foolhardy to attempt outguessing the market. Instead, says O'Hara, individual investors and clubs too should seek out companies that have been growing faster than the industries of which they are a part, hold them for an extended period, and reinvest dividends.

How's The Weather?

WEATHER FORECAST — Snow flurries will continue today in the Northeast. Rain is forecast for the central and western Gulf, turning into snow over Texas and extending to the Dakotas.

Snow flurries are due for the eastern Rockies and rain is forecast for most of the Pacific coast. Cold weather for most of the country. (AP Laser-photo Map)

By The Associated Press
Cold arctic air is flowing into North Carolina behind the latest winter storm that has gripped the northeast. Temperatures are expected to continue below normal through the week with some moderation possibly by the end of the week.

It was partly cloudy and cold with strong gusty winds over the state Monday while snow flurries continued in the mountains. High temperatures for the day held below freezing in some areas, such as 22 at Asheville and 29 at Greensboro. Wilmington was one of the warmest reporting points with a 40.

The 4 p.m. reading at Grandfather Mountain was two degrees below zero.

Low readings around the state this morning reflected the new wave of cold air with six degrees at Asheville and nine degrees at Greensboro. Other lows included 13 at Charlotte and Raleigh and 18 at Wilmington. Some icing was expected this morning from shallow flooding on Highway 12 on Hatteras Island and motorists were urged to use caution.

Today's forecast called for sunny, windy and cold with high temperatures ranging from the teens in the mountains to the 30s on the coast. Low readings tonight will be near zero in the mountains and range to near 20 on the Outer Banks.

Carter Wants $70,000 Given Slovik Widow

By MAUREEN SANTINI
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter, pushing to lift Eddie Slovik's widow from poverty to what she says would be a life of dignity, is asking Congress to give her the $70,000 she says is owed her by the Army because it executed her husband during World War II.

Carter said Monday he would support special legislation to give Mrs. Slovik her husband's $10,000 National Service Life Insurance policy. With more than 30 years' interest, the policy now is worth about $70,000.

"This is marvelous news," Mrs. Slovik said in a telephone interview from the Detroit hotel where she has lived since September.

"You know I'm broke. I've been trying to get help from the states, but they are so slow. I didn't know what I was going to do."

Mrs. Slovik, who is confined to a wheelchair and receives a monthly Social Security check of $119.60, said if the legislation is passed she would use the money to "live a little bit — live in dignity instead of poverty."

Last August, the Army upheld the legality of Slovik's firing squad execution in a French village on Jan. 31, 1945, and dismissed his widow's petition.

Mrs. Slovik had contended that the Army used her husband as an example for potential deserters and made errors during the court martial process.

About 21,000 soldiers were convicted of desertion in World War II, but only 49 were sentenced to death. Of those, Slovik was the only one executed.

At a White House reception Monday, the president told 300 Polish-American leaders from throughout the country that he had asked several congressmen to introduce the special legislation.

However, a White House statement issued shortly afterward said Carter decided to support the bill only after a "personal appeal" from Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va.

Rep. Charles Rangel, D-N.Y., has introduced the bill in the House. It has not yet been introduced in the Senate.

The White House statement stressed that the president considered Mrs. Slovik's situation unique and emphasized that the decision "in no way condones the act of desertion."

A military staff judge advocate at European headquarters ruled on Dec. 23, 1944, that Slovik preferred confinement to combat and "deliberately sought the safety and comparative comfort of the guard house."

The ruling said he deserved the death penalty "not as a punitive measure, not as retribution, but to maintain that discipline upon which alone an army can succeed against the enemy."

A Pentagon review last year noted that at the time Slovik's death sentence was approved by Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, the allied commander, U.S. forces "had sustained a serious setback at the Battle of the Bulge" and the number of deserters had reached alarming proportions.

Police Cite 2 Accidents

An estimated $3,600 property damage resulted from two collisions investigated yesterday by Greenville Police.

Heaviest damage, according to officers, resulted from a 6:20 p.m. mishap at the intersection of Greenville Boulevard and Hooker Road involving cars driven by Brenda Sue Sholar of Route 2 Wallace and William Conrad Glidewell Jr. of 109 Martinsboro Rd.

Damage was estimated at $2,000 to the Sholar car and $1,000 to the Glidewell auto by police, who charged Miss Sholar with failing to see her intended movement could be made in safety.

A 4:45 p.m. mishap on Evans Street, 20 feet South of the 11th Street intersection involved a truck driven by William Earl Teel of Winterville and a car driven by Tina Cathryn Meacham of Charlotte.

Damage was set at $100 to the truck and $500 to the car.

Investigators charged Teel with having improper brakes, and charged Miss Meacham with failing to see her intended movement could be made in safety, following investigation of the mishap.

Heed The Code

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Most television stations comply with the National Association of Broadcasters code that sets commercial time standards for children's television, says the NAB's research department. Its study indicates the TV industry provides a variety of educational and entertainment programs for children, including programs designed especially for pre-schoolers.

Carter laid out his human rights theme at his inauguration a year ago: "Our moral sense dictates a clear-cut preference for those societies which share with us an abiding respect for individual human rights."

Officially, the State Department says it is completely neutral in the Nicaraguan crisis and wants only to see the competing factions resolve their differences peacefully and democratically. On Monday, the department issued a statement to that effect.

Speaking privately, however, department officials said they realized that anti-Somoza forces are likely to interpret the American statement — in addition to past actions — as evidence that the administration is turning its back on Somoza.

The administration is fearful of what might happen if Somoza were forced to resign and leave the country. And there is the danger that the U.S. policy could prompt Somoza, in an effort to stay in power, to crack down more harshly than ever.

Or, a government no better than Somoza's, from the American point of view, could emerge. "There's no telling what would fall out if Somoza were toppled," one American official said Monday.

Jury Awards Near $128 Million

SANTA ANA, Calif. (AP) — A California jury has awarded nearly $128 million in damages from the Ford Motor Co. to a teen-ager who has had 52 operations since being maimed in the explosion of a Ford Pinto's gas tank.

"This is probably the loudest noise that the jury has made in any civil suit in American jurisprudence," Mark Robinson, attorney for 18-year-old Richard Grimshaw of Orange, said after the verdict was returned Monday.

A spokesman for Ford Motor Co. in Detroit termed the award "a staggering amount of money," but said the automaker would have no further comment on the verdict until the firm's lawyers had been consulted.

Under Monday's decision by an Orange County Superior Court jury, Grimshaw was awarded $125 million in punitive personal injury damages and $2.84 million in compensatory damages.

Since the May 1972 accident that burned 95 percent of his body, Grimshaw has undergone 52 operations and will have to undergo 20 more, Robinson said. The youth, who was 13 when the accident occurred, lost four fingers, his nose and left ear.

Grimshaw was a passenger in the car driven by 52-year-old Lily Gray of Anaheim, who died in the accident. The jury awarded her family $665,000 compensatory damages. No punitive damages were sought in her death.

Mrs. Gray was a neighbor of the Grimshaws, who at the time lived in Anaheim.

The entire passenger compartment of the 1972 Pinto ignited when it was hit from behind by another vehicle traveling about 35 mph on Interstate 15 near San Bernardino. Evidence at the seven-month trial indicated that because of faulty welding, the gas tank was punctured by the impact and that burning gas leaked inside the car.

Robinson said three similar suits involving Pinto gas tanks have been filed, but that this was the first effort to obtain punitive damages. The highest compensatory damage award in the other suits was for $3.3 million in a 1975 Florida suit, Robinson said.

Robinson said Ford had failed five crash tests on the Pinto model involved in the accident.

"We were charging that Ford Motor Co. had consciously, knowing that those tests had failed, put out that model to save 10 bucks a car at the risks of hundreds of human lives and hundreds of more injuries like Grimshaw's," Robinson said.

Robinson said he expects Ford to appeal the verdict.

Last August, Ford characterized as "distortions and half-truths" claims by consumer advocate Ralph Nader that the company knowingly permitted the sale of Pintos with fuel tanks that would rupture in rear-end accidents. Nader had demanded investigations by Congress and the National Traffic Safety Board.

Only Rep. Broyhill Has No Reelection Challenge

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Only one incumbent member of North Carolina's congressional delegation will be unopposed in seeking re-election.

The 10th Congressional District, where Republican James T. Broyhill has served since 1963, was the only district where Democrats failed to seek office. Nor were there any Republican challengers to Broyhill as the filing deadline for the May 2 primary election passed Monday.

Eleventh-hour challengers to two incumbent congressmen, Democrats Walter B. Jones and Richardson Preyer, surfaced. But there were no further candidates for the U.S. Senate, leaving the Democratic field at eight. The incumbent, Jesse Helms, is unopposed for the Republican nomination.

Reginald Frazier, who had announced as a Democratic Senate candidate, filed instead for a seat on the N.C. Supreme Court.

He will face Court of Appeals Judge David M. Britt in the Democratic primary for the seat being vacated by retiring Justice I. Beverly Lake Sr.

In the congressional races, James J. Bonner of Hertford and Gene Leggett of Emerald Isle both filed as candidates to oppose Jones in the Democratic primary. James M. Newcomb of Williamston filed as a Republican candidate for Jones' seat.

In the 6th District, George Bemus of Greensboro filed as a Republican candidate to oppose Preyer, who is unopposed in the primary.

Elbert Rudaill of Warrenton filed to oppose incumbent L.H. Fountain in the 2nd District Democratic primary. Republican Barry L. Gardner of Rocky Mount had previously filed as a GOP candidate.

Roger L. Austin of Monroe filed as a Republican candidate in the 8th District, where Democratic incumbent Bill Hener of Kannapolis is unopposed for his party's nomination. Austin will face Larry E. Harris of Kannapolis in the GOP primary.

remaining congressional districts:

—3rd District — Rep. Charles Whitely of Mount Olive faces L.T. Turlington of Dunn in the Democratic primary. Willard J. Blanchard of Salemburg is the only Republican candidate.

—4th District — Rep. Ike Andrews faces a Democratic challenge from Joseph R. Overby of Raleigh, but no Republican is running.

—5th District — Rep. Stephen L. Neal of Winston-Salem has no opposition in the Democratic primary. He will meet Republican Hamilton C. Horton of Winston-Salem in the general election.

—7th District — Rep. Charles Rose will face Oscar Wiley Brown in the Democratic primary, and the GOP candidate is Raymond G. Schrupp. All are from Fayetteville.

—9th District — Rep. James G. Martin, a Republican, faces no primary opposition and will meet Democrat Charles K. Maxwell of Huntersville in the general election.

—11th District — Rep. Lamar Gudgeon of Asheville faces a Democratic challenge from R.P. "Bo" Thomas of Hendersonville. The only Republican running is R. Curtis Ratcliff of Alexander.

Any necessary run-off elections will be held May 30. The general election will be held Nov. 7.

the Republicans in such a melancholy fix?

The answer, I submit, is that in the final political analysis, issues and ideology have very little to do with the typical congressional election. When you hit a big gut issue — abortion, gun control, the Panama Canal — yes, a candidate's position will make a difference, though I suspect the difference is less than we assume. Otherwise, the typical contest between Candidate A and Candidate B will be resolved on personalities, service, local politics, and a host of peripheral considerations.

Why are the Republicans in trouble? When the party fields attractive candidates, and works like the devil to put them in office, the GOP will get out of trouble. Ideological labels may matter, but they don't matter much.

Dutch Expel Philip Agee

THE HAGUE, Netherlands (AP) — The Dutch parliament voted 76-68 today not to allow ex-CIA agent Philip Agee to appeal a Justice Ministry order expelling him from the Netherlands.

The decision was a major setback for the 43-year-old American, author of the controversial book "Inside the Company: A Diary," who planned to take his case to the Council of State, the country's highest administrative court and last court of appeal.

Holland is the third West European country in the past nine months to order Agee's expulsion. Britain and France have ousted the former CIA agent and West Germany has refused him entry.

The Justice Ministry cited reasons of national security in its initial decision to expel Agee. Officials said his current activities, which include writing a second book about the CIA, could endanger Dutch relations with other countries.

Agee gained worldwide notoriety by exposing in his book several CIA covert operations and naming several CIA operatives despite an earlier agreement with the intelligence agency to maintain secrecy.

Dutch officials have said Agee will be given a "reasonable" amount of time to prepare to leave the country with his two children, probably until the end of March.

Town Council Votes Secede

KINNEY, Minn. (AP) — The town council of Kinney, population 325, has voted to secede from the United States — and threatens war.

"It would be a war of words," adds Mayor Mary Anderson. "We're a peaceful people."

In a tongue-in-cheek resolution forwarded to Secretary of State Cyrus Vance, the council said it is easier to get foreign aid than domestic aid, so they propose becoming an independent country.

Ms. Anderson said the letter expresses the frustration of the small village in wading through the federal red tape in grant applications.

She admitted that Kinney did receive a $35,000 grant for new water lines from the federal Department of Housing and Urban Development last year. But she said that grant "wasn't nearly enough."

No Charges For Patient Abuse

MORGANTON, N.C. (AP) — Indictments will not be sought in connection with the alleged cases patient abuse that prompted two State Bureau of Investigation probes at Broughton Hospital, District Attorney Donald Greene said Monday.

"It is my opinion that criminal prosecution is not warranted," Greene said after studying the latest SBI report. "It's just not clear cut at all. In my opinion, we would not get a jury to say, 'Now this is a clear-cut assault.'"

Martin Bd. Told Cost Of Supplement Boost

WILLIAMSTON — Members of the Martin County Board of Education Monday heard a report on local funds that would be needed to provide an across the board increase in supplements to teachers.

The report, prepared by the school finance officer, shows that for teacher personnel alone, an increase of one per cent would amount to $46,373.66 — and at five per cent, the amount would be $231,868.30. In addition, figures were given that would encompass all school personnel — teachers, principals, supervisors, etc. The figure for the inclusive group is $52,267.31 at one per cent, and $261,336.55 at five per cent.

No action was taken on the report by the board, but these figures will be considered at the time the upcoming budget is prepared.

A suit filed against the board by a former teacher, Bobby Little, has been dropped on a mutual agreement between lawyers for the board and Little. A teacher in the 1976-77 school year at a Robersonville school, Little a probationary teacher not on career status, filed a suit in Superior Court against the board when he was not re-hired for a teaching position for the current school year. He is currently employed as a teacher in the Bertie County Schools.

On Monday evening, following the school board meeting, the annual appreciation dinner was held, with representatives from the county and town boards as special guests. Dr. Craig Phillips, Superintendent of the Dept. of Public Instruction, Raleigh, was speaker for the occasion.

Schools Using TV Services

Throughout the schools in North Carolina instructional television is being used as a meaningful way of helping students to learn.

In every school system across the state teachers are using this medium as a valuable teaching tool. In the Greenville City Schools, 85 teachers out of 308 teachers are using or planning to use instructional television in their classrooms. In Pitt County Schools, 213 out of 634 teachers plan to use this medium.

Thirty-three percent of the Pitt County teachers and 27 percent of the Greenville teachers are presently using this method.

From 8:30 a.m. until 3 p.m. each school day, all UNCTV stations broadcast the school television programs that are sponsored by the Department of Public Instruction. The School Television Programming section in the Division of Educational Media is responsible for selecting series to be broadcast, acquiring them and providing the broadcast schedules and teachers' guides to the schools.

Starting in the fall a 15-program television series entitled "Trade-offs" will be broadcast over instructional television. The series is designed for nine-to-11 year-olds to increase their knowledge of economics.

Polanski 'Report' Said A Whitewash

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — Roman Polanski's judge says a prison psychiatric report on the director is "a complete whitewash" and that Polanski should have been imprisoned and deported for having had intercourse with a 13-year-old girl.

Superior Court Judge Laurence Rittenband said Monday that Polanski knew a harsh penalty was in store when he fled the country to avoid sentencing on a charge of unlawful sexual intercourse.

The judge disclosed that he told Polanski's lawyer in advance that he planned to send the director back to the state prison at Chino for 48 days, then seek his voluntary deportation from the United States.

Rittenband said he assumed the attorney, Douglas Dalton, passed the word to Polanski.

Dalton could not be reached for comment. Polanski took a plane to London last Tuesday and later flew to his home in Paris to avoid the sentencing, which had been set for last Wednesday.

The judge said he had told attorneys during a private conference last week that he considered the psychiatric report "a complete whitewash" and would disregard its recommendation of straight probation for Polanski.

Polanski spent 42 days undergoing the diagnostic study at Chino.

The judge said the report failed to adequately investigate Polanski's behavior with the 13-year-old girl.

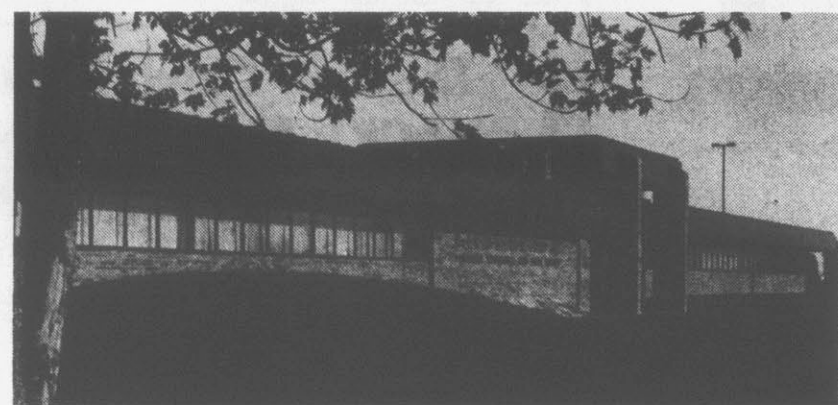

In a plea bargain last August, the director pleaded guilty to the unlawful intercourse charge. Five other sex perversion and drug abuse charges were dismissed.

The 44-year-old Polanski, director of such films as "Chinatown" and "Rosemary's Baby," admitted he had sex with the teen-ager.

The judge said his main aim in sentencing the filmmaker would have been to insure Polanski's deportation.

Until Feb. 14,
you can choose your "tax break"
on an IRA.

When you contribute to an IRA from now through February 14, you can take your "tax break" on either your 1977 return or your 1978 return, whichever works best for you.

Now that's true of any Individual Retirement Account, and many financial institutions offer them for people without a qualified retirement plan. And, while any IRA is good business, they're complicated, so it's hard to figure out whose is best.

At NCNB, we think that you'll be hard-pressed to find one with all the advantages of ours.

In the first place, the NCNB IRA, with a four or ten-year maturity, currently pays 7-3/4% annual interest.

And that's not all. At NCNB, that 7-3/4% interest is compounded daily and credited quarterly.

Secondly, with each deposit, we guarantee the rate being offered for your choice of four or ten years. (Many IRAs offer 3 years or less.)

And, right now, we charge no administrative fees or service charges. (Many IRAs do.)

For the details, mail us the coupon or call 1-800-822-8855. Or better yet, stop in at any NCNB office. Because the sooner you get all the facts, the better IRA you can get.

Pirates Hold Off Mocs For 73-72 Win

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor
A failure to communicate cost the University of Tennessee-Chattanooga a fateful six seconds and enabled the East Carolina University Pirates to pull out a 73-72 victory over the Moccasins last night in Minges Coliseum.

Trailing by that one point, the Mocs sent Don Whitaker to the line for a one-and-one with seven seconds left. Coach Ron Shumate called instructions to his players to call a time out if Whitaker missed and they got the rebounds.

But all of the Mocs didn't hear it, and when Whitaker missed and Chattanooga came away with the loose ball, they started a drive down court, instead of calling the time. By the time one of the Moccasins finally called for time to be stopped, only one second remained, and when time was back in, it wasn't enough time.

The key play came with 23 seconds left, when Herb Gray, playing the best game of the year, picked off the rebound from a missed free throw by Kyle Powers and put the ball back for a 73-70 lead.

After that, Chattanooga came down and got a basket from Edsel Brooks to close the gap to one with 13 seconds left, but that was the be the end of the scoring.

"This was a much needed win," Coach Larry Gillman said afterwards. "It proved to the team that it could win. Chattanooga was 12-8 coming in here, and this was an emotional game, after our game out there (won by Chattanooga in overtime 110-101).

"It was not one of our best games, but we played hard with guts and character," Gillman said.

Gillman praised the play of Kyle Powers during the late stages of the game. "We had Kyle and Don (Whitaker) in there and we didn't want to go back to (Walter) Moseley and (Herb) Krusen because the others were into the flow of the game. They all did a good job."

Oliver Mack, however, didn't have a "Mack-type" game, Gillman noted. He scored only 15 points and was five of 17 from the floor. Krusen also was off his usual game, scoring just four points on two of eight from the floor. He also missed on two of three free throws, after hitting 35 in a row. The misses brought his average down to 93.4 per cent, second best in the country. He would have been leading the country if he had not missed.

"We shouldn't have put him in for the technical foul," Gillman said. "But he's been so good at the line, we brought him off the bench to shoot. That was a mistake."

The Pirates started off hot, and then cooled off midway through the half. They worked up an 11-point lead and looked as if they could make a runaway of it.

"But we got into a lull," Gillman said, "and let them get back in the game. They made a good comeback, and Edsel Brooks is a very tough, hard to stop player."

Brooks was most of the offense for the Moccasins, scoring 24 points, hitting 11 of 22 field goals. Keith Parker added 12 for the Mocs.

Chattanooga also held a slim 50-48 rebounding edge, with William Wright pulling off 18. Gray led the ECU rebounding with 14, while Greg Cornelius had 12.

The Pirates scored first, but UT-C tied it up on a shot by Parker. Chattanooga scored only one other basket during the first five minutes, however, while the Pirates pushed out to a nine-point lead. Mack hit a free throw to break the 2-2 tie, and Gray followed with two baskets.

Mack scored again, and two free throws by Moseley ran the lead to 11-2.

The Pirates finally gained a ten-point edge, 15-5, with 14:05 left, and eventually ran the margin to 11 at 25-14 with 10:46 left as Gray hit a three-point play.

With 7:03 left, the Pirates still had that edge, 33-22, but scored only four more points the rest of the way, as UT-C took control of the game.

The Mocs finally cut the margin back to two, 35-33, before the Pirates eased back out, and were able to take a 37-35 halftime margin.

The Mocs hit first in the second half, tying it up, but the Pirates went back out, 39-37. Brooks tied it once more, then Mark Merritt put the Mocs ahead for the first time, 41-39. Merritt followed with another basket and a free throw by Darrell Payne ran the lead out to five before the Pirates came back to take the lead again, 49-48. The two swapped the lead ten more times during the next 13 minutes, with UT-C never leading by more than two after that, and the Pirates holding as much as a four-point edge.

Chattanooga held the lead for the last time with 3:55 left when Brooks hit the first of a two-shot foul chance for a 70-69 lead.

Powers hit with 3:38 showing for a 71-70 margin, but Chattanooga missed on several opportunities after that, before sending Powers to the line again. He missed, but Gray was there for the fateful basket that sealed the win for the Pirates.

The top five teams in The Associated Press College Basketball Top Twenty won all their games last week and so each retained the same position it held last week. But it was another story for many of the other ranked teams.

The teams that were ranked sixth through 20th last week combined to lose 13 of 31 games and jockeyed for position with three new teams entering this week's poll.

Kentucky, 16-1, routed Southeast Conference rivals Georgia 90-73 and Florida 88-61 and remained atop the heap with 1,140 points.

The Wildcats received 52 of 57 first-place ballots cast by the nationwide panel of sports writers and broadcasters. Second-place Arkansas received two first-place votes, No. 4 Notre Dame got two and sixth-place New Mexico received one.

Arkansas, now 21-1, beat Southwest Conference foes Texas 75-71 and Rice 69-48 and received 879 points to remain No. 2. Third-ranked Marquette beat Penn State 73-60, then was forced to two overtime periods before prevailing over South Carolina 69-66. The Warriors, 17-2, received 836 points.

Fourth-ranked Notre Dame, 16-3, garnered 723 points as the Irish beat LaSalle 95-90 and Davidson 100-76. UCLA, No. 5, beat Stanford 101-64 and California 94-75 to improve its record to 16-2. The Bruins received 566 points.

New Mexico, 17-2, beat Wyoming 94-91 and Colorado State 91-82 and leaped from 10th to No. 6. North Carolina beat Mercer 73-70 and Virginia Tech 101-88, but lost to Furman 89-83 and fell from sixth to seventh with an 18-4 record.

Kansas, 18-3, beat Oklahoma State 83-65 and Oklahoma 69-68 to remain No. 8. Louisville beat Marshall 85-69 and Cincinnati 83-76 to stay at No. 9 with a 14-3 mark.

Michigan State, 16-3, fell from seventh to No. 10 on a 71-66 loss to Indiana and a 65-63 loss to Michigan before beating Indiana 68-59.

DePaul, 18-2, moved up from 13th to 11th as the Blue Demons beat Creighton and Oral Roberts. Texas, 18-3, beat Houston and TCU but lost to Arkansas and remained at No. 12.

Virginia, 15-3, beat Maryland but lost to Wake Forest and dropped two spots to 13th. Wake Forest, 15-3 and unranked a week ago, beat Virginia and Duke and jumped all the way to 14th.

Illinois State, 18-2, did not play, but the Redbirds jumped from 19th to 15th.

Rounding out the Top Twenty were: Florida State, 16-3 and 15th a week ago; Detroit, 18-1 and unranked last week; Syracuse, 15-4 and 18th a week ago; unranked Nebraska, 18-3, and 17-4 Providence, which was No. 16 last week.

Nolan Picked As Saint Coach

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Dick Nolan was the first man John Mecom Jr. interviewed as a potential head coach for the New Orleans Saints, and the young team owner hopes he'll be the last one for a while, at least.

Nolan succeeded Hank Stram as head coach of the National Football League team Monday, becoming the fifth head coach hired by Mecom since the team was formed.

The Saints were formed in 1967, and the team has never posted better than a 5-9 season record.

"Nolan was my first choice, the first coach I ever interviewed," Mecom said Monday after formally introducing his new coach.

Nolan was a defensive coordinator at Dallas in '67. Instead of choosing him, Mecom named Tom Fears as the first coach of the Saints.

Mecom said he settled on Fears, instead of Nolan, "because I was talked out of it by Vincent Lombardi," Fears was an assistant under Lombardi.

The following year, Nolan left Dallas to take the top job at San Francisco. Nolan was 54-53-5 at San Francisco, winning three division championships and being named NFL coach of the year in 1970. But he was fired after losing seasons in 1974 and 1975.

He moved to the Saints as a linebacker coach for the 1977 season.

Mecom said Stram was fired because he failed to show any progress toward building a winner. Stram's teams were 4-10 and 3-11, and he was fired with three years to go on his contract.

Larry Gillman Wants To Clear Air About His Cage Program

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor
(Editor's note: During recent weeks, the East Carolina basketball program has come under a great deal of criticism. Rumors have flown constantly, and one area media has already reported that Coach Larry Gillman will be relieved of his duties at the end of the current season.)

The following is the first of a two-part interview with Gillman in which he "wants to clear the air" about some of the rumors and criticism.)

"A lot of people are probably wondering just why I came here in the first place," Gillman said. "This area has a great potential in basketball. The fans in North Carolina are the most enthusiastic I've seen anywhere, and Greenville is no exception. But we have to create a new type of identity and excitement that will show that we do have the program to go places."

"We had to get talent, and we did that by signing (Oliver) Mack. Then, we had to promote the program, not only to get support in Greenville, but across the state."

"We talked about Mack being one of the top three guards in the country, along with Phil Ford and Butch Lee. We talked about the capability of our team to step on the court and beat anyone they played. And I still think we need this type of enthusiasm here. If Ford or Lee were at East Carolina, would they be doing any better?"

Gillman admitted that the basketball rivalries and the keen competition in North Carolina was much greater than he had thought at first. "But by bringing me all the way from San Francisco showed that this university wanted to have a good program," he said.

Gillman was then asked if he felt that perhaps the Pirates and his own position were hurt by his early statements about the team.

"I do think I was guilty of overselling the team," he answered. "And I want to humble myself before the student body and the community for this. The things I said were brought on by the desire to excel and do well for the school and the community. I hope that they can be patient with the team and forgive me for overselling this young group."

"I'm still optimistic about the rest of the season, and I think the people of this area deserve nothing but the best effort we can give the rest of the way," Gillman added.

The coach reflected back to the Indiana game, and felt that this was probably one of the best efforts the team had. "Six of our top eight are freshmen or sophomores," the coach said. "We had six weeks to prepare for Indiana, and I think that was one reason we gave such a good account of ourselves in that game. But with our youth, the rapid-fire pace of our games since then haven't really given us the chance to prepare as well as we should."

Gillman said that he had to be patient with the team, and he hoped that the people of the community would be patient too. "Added depth will give us a brighter future."

To rumors that the Pirates have been involved in recruiting violations, he replied, "I have never had any recruiting violations, and I don't intend to have any here."

Gillman said that in the coming years, the basketball schedule will be improved. "We have tournaments in Florida and Louisiana next year, in addition to games at Tennessee, Maryland, Duke and State. Also we have South Carolina and Detroit coming here. We close out the season at Notre Dame."

"By continuing to schedule like this, we will be able to attract the good players," he pointed out.

Briefly on the defense, Gillman said that the team is trying to play with a quick tempo, and games such as this result in high scores by both teams. "Unfortunately, our opponents have been scoring more than we have. But we are trying to put in the basics of a complex system that we want to use.

"A lot of our players are used to one-on-one ball, and to instill team defense takes time. Our defense has looked bad, I'll agree. But it has looked good at times too. The St. Peter's game was probably the best overall."

"But we've had breakdowns and mistakes that have hurt us. When it does come around, I think it will look good."

(In part II, to be run Thursday, Gillman will discuss the defense, the offense, the duties of his assistants, the future and his reaction to the "heat" he's getting from some quarters.)

Eastern Carolina Teams Enter Final Week; Titles Unsettled

By JIM KYLE
Reflector Sports Writer

As the Eastern Carolina Conference basketball seasons wind to a close, a couple of two-way races have developed in the boys' and girls' competition.

North Lenoir's 81-55 victory over D. H. Conley last Friday put the Hawks in the driver's seat in the boys' league. North Lenoir is now 11-1 in the conference, while the Vikings are 9-2. Conley must now hope for the Hawks to be upset in one of their two remaining games to have a shot at the top seed in the conference tournament.

Over on the girls' side of the card, Conley is battling with C. B. Aycock for the regular-season title. The Valkyries have a 10-1 record, while Aycock is now 10-2.

Conley's girls have three games remaining on their schedule and victories in each one are important for the Valkyries to retain their number one spot going into the tournament. Conley is at Ayden-Grifton tonight, at Greene Central Friday night, and at home to Southern Nash on Saturday night.

Valkyrie coach Norina Respass had few comments about the action this week, however. She said her team will have to "play good" when asked what would be needed to produce wins in the three games. When asked how Conley will approach the trio of contests, Respass replied, "We'll probably just play the same way as before."

The situation in the ECC girls' race puts Ayden-Grifton in an important position this week. At 7-5 in the league, the Chargerettes have no hope of winning the regular-season title, but they will play both Conley and Aycock this week, and thus can do much to determine which of those teams will finish first.

"Right now, we're tied for third, and I really don't anticipate us finishing any higher than third," said Ayden-Grifton coach Debra Pfeil. She added that her team has had its ups and downs this year so she really can't predict what the week might bring.

"We were playing good, but we lost to Conley and Aycock and started playing poorly. Now, we're playing better defense than the last few weeks and Karen (Haseley) is recovering from her sprained ankle."

Pfeil seems optimistic about her team's chances, however. "I think they are up and are going to be playing hard. They really want to beat Conley and they lost in overtime to Aycock" so they have a score to settle there, too.

The Chargerettes will play both teams generally the same as before, but Pfeil said they may do some things differently against Conley. "They try to run on you and we did a pretty good job of holding them down in the first game, but they hurt us near the end last time with free throws."

Pfeil said the Chargerettes will work to stop the Valkyrie running game, "and we also want to be in a situation where we don't have to play pressure defense near the end."

Ayden-Grifton's rebounding ability will be a key in both games. Pfeil said, along with how closely the officials call the action under the boards. The coach said her team benefits from close officiating.

"I think the league is probably about as it should be" going into next week's tournament, Pfeil said. She added that the tournament could very easily come out exactly the same as the regular season.

The ECC's basketball action this week includes: D. H. Conley at Ayden-Grifton, Southern Nash at Greene Central, North Lenoir at North Pitt and C. B. Aycock at Farmville Central tonight; Ayden-Grifton at C. B. Aycock, Southern Nash at North Pitt, D. H. Conley at Greene Central and North Lenoir at Farmville Central on Friday night; and Southern Nash at D. H. Conley on Saturday night.

ECC wrestling tournament champion Farmville Central will lead the league teams as they participate in the sectionals tournament at Rose High on Friday and Saturday.

Gordon, Lady Jaguars Look To Tournament

By JIM KYLE
Reflector Sports Writer

As the defending Eastern Carolina Conference champions, Farmville Central's girls' basketball team hasn't been able to equal the successes of last year's team in this year's regular season, but the squad is looking forward to next week's conference tournament, according to Diana Gordon.

"We think we can do pretty well," the lady Jaguar guard said. "We're ready to start winning now. We've got to play C. B. Aycock tonight, so a win there would help us a lot mentally for the conference (tournament). It could be a turning point to start winning."

Gordon is a second-year sophomore for the Lady Jaguars. "Diana's an up-coming little girl," according to her coach, Hilda Worthington. "She's going to be a good player. I think as far as hustle and everything, she's done a tremendous job this year."

Gordon is the 10th-leading girls' scorer in the ECC with a 9.6 points per game average. She also handles much of the ball-handling for the Lady Jags and "is just a wellrounded athlete," Worthington said. "She's probably one of the more outstanding tennis players we have had at Farmville Central, and I think she will probably go a long way with tennis." Gordon also plays softball.

Youth and inexperience have been the major problems for the Lady Jags this year, Gordon said. "We haven't been working together lately; the team hasn't been getting together. We're a young team and we need a little more experience." The Farmville girls currently have a 3-8 conference and 6-11 overall record.

But the Lady Jaguars have a big future ahead of them, according to Gordon. "I think we'll do pretty good next year. We have two freshman starters, who are getting a lot of experience and they'll be able to help us a lot next year. And next year, we have only one senior, so our future is looking pretty good."

Although she enjoys tennis and softball, Gordon said she prefers the teamwork of basketball. "I like working with other people instead of going out and doing it myself," she said.

Graduation is two years away,

but Gordon has her sights set on a college education. "I plan to go to college, but I don't know whether I'm looking for an athletic career or not."

"I'd like to go into P. E. probably, but I do definitely want to go to college."

James Lee Sparks Kentucky Rout Of Auburn; Georgetown Rebounds

By FRANK BROWN
AP Sports Writer

James Lee is the No. 6 man on the No. 1 team in college basketball, and that's quite all right with Lee, Kentucky Coach Joe Hall, and the top-ranked Wildcats.

Lee came off the bench to score 25 points in Kentucky's 104-81 rout of Auburn Monday night. He admitted after the Southeastern Conference contest that, "If it would help, I'd be willing to start, but right now I'm happy doing what I'm doing."

Coach Hall is equally happy with the situation and has no plans of changing his starting lineup just to give the 6-foot-5 forward more playing time.

Lee's 13 first-half points helped the Wildcats to a 45-40 halftime margin. Then Rick Robey and Mike Phillips each scored 4 points in a 10-0 Kentucky spree that ruined any hopes of an Auburn upset on the Wildcats' home court.

"A team might beat them on the road, but nobody's going to beat them here" said Coach Bob Davis after his Tigers dropped to 8-11 and 4-7 in the SEC.

The Wildcats, who raised their record to 17-1 and 9-1 in the SEC, will lose seniors Jack Givens, Robey and Phillips to graduation after this season.

Other games involving teams ranked in The Associated Press Top Twenty saw No. 15 Illinois State rip Oral Roberts 84-71 and No. 16 Florida State edge Memphis State 95-89 in double overtime.

Georgetown, which was rated 14th last week but dropped out of the rankings after losing two games, ended the streak with a 77-55 drubbing of Stony Hill.

Controversy flared briefly in another SEC clash at Nashville, Tenn., where Vanderbilt trimmed Florida 59-57 in double overtime. It may have been the only contest in college basketball history which required 11 minutes for the playing of the final three seconds.

After Vanderbilt's Tommy Springer made two free throws, Ric Clarson inbounded for Florida. The final seconds ticked off and the Commodores rushed off the court to celebrate their victory.

But it was established that the timekeeper had started the clock before the ball was touched in play. Vanderbilt was called back from the dressing room and the clock was reset at three seconds.

It mattered little, since the Gators botched their second chance after the long delay. Clarson's inbound pass was batted away and the game came to an official conclusion.

Senior Billy Lewis scored 16 points to become the third-leading scorer in Illinois State history and help the 15th-ranked Redbirds, 19-2, beat Oral Roberts.

Elsewhere, Lavon Mercer's close-range shot with 4 seconds to play lifted Georgia past Mississippi 57-56 in another SEC contest; Randy Boarden scored a career-high 24 points and grabbed 18 rebounds to help Ball State blast Kent State 88-64, and Lovell Joiner scored six points in overtime to carry Eastern Kentucky past Western Kentucky 78-74 in an Ohio Valley Conference game.

Wood Gets ACC Honor

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Freshman Al Wood of North Carolina, who scored 39 points in three games last week, has been named the Atlantic Coast Conference rookie of the week.

Wood, a 6-foot-6, 187-pound forward from Gray, Ga., is averaging 9.8 points per game this season and has made 64.2 percent of his field-goal attempts.

His two foul shots late in the game iced the Tar Heels' 73-70 victory over Mercer last week.

Opening lead: Four of ♣.

Jean Besse of Switzerland, one of the world's great players, describes this fascinating grand slam from the Philip Morris European Cup. Here's how he sees four players of different ability tackling the hand.

The "average player" sees no problem. He runs all his trumps, then cashes the top clubs. By that time he hopes diamonds will break 3-3 or that one of the defenders will have erred by discarding a diamond. Down one. "No chance," he concludes.

The "theoretician" begins the same way, but he improves slightly on this line. When the 10-9 of diamonds drop under the king-queen, he employs the "Principle of Restricted Choice." He realizes that the A-8 of diamonds now constitute a finesse position against the jack, and that West is more likely to have started with 10-9 bare than the specifically J-10-9. So when he leads the third round of diamonds from dummy, he finesesses the eight! The probabilities stand up and the grand slam comes home.

The "unlucky expert" looks deeper into the position. He foresees that, besides the obvious 3-3 diamond break, he can make the grand slam if the suit breaks 4-2 provided that the player with two diamonds has no more than two trumps. So, after drawing two rounds of trumps, declarer plays three rounds of diamonds, planning to ruff the fourth diamond in dummy. Unfortunately, the operation is a failure, for West ruffs the third diamond for down one.

The "technician" can virtually claim his contract via a dummy reversal. When the seven of trumps wins the first trick, he ruffs a heart. He then uses a trump and two minor suit entries for three more heart ruffs. He can then cross to dummy in either minor suit to draw the last trump and all the tricks roll in. "When I have 13 tricks laydown," he says, "I make 13 tricks."

A New 'Maverick' Is Afoot For Movie And Possible TV Series

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Ah, there's good news today. A new "Maverick" is afoot. It'll be in the sardonic, work-fearing, skirt-chasing tradition of brothers Bret and Bart Maverick and their cousin Beauregard. That's the word from Alan Shayne, president of Warner Bros. Television. His studio made the original "Maverick," which ran on ABC for five seasons, from 1957 through 1962.

Still in reruns, it starred James Garner as Bret, Jack Kelly as Bart and Britain's Roger Moore as Beau. It was the first TV Western to poke fun of that, ah, art form. Its heroes weren't brave. They tended to excuse themselves when a fight seemed imminent.

The 1978-model "Maverick" is being made as a two-hour movie for ABC, Shayne says, and may become a weekly series if ABC likes it.

"It will introduce a new Maverick, a young Maverick," he said, adding that no actor has been cast in the part yet.

Garner, propelled to stardom as the first of the shiftless, gambling Mavericks, has agreed to play Bret again just for the TV movie, and Kelly is being asked to reprise the role of Bart, Shayne said.

He doubted that Moore would return to play cousin Beau, though, "because the new Maverick would be his son."

The script for the pilot currently is being written by Juanita Bartlett, who writes for Garner's "Rockford Files" series on NBC, Shayne said.

Executive producer of the new venture is Meta Rosenberg, Garner's former agent and now executive producer of his "Rockford" series, the Warners chief added.

Filming of the "Maverick" pilot will begin the first week of March, Shayne says ABC hasn't set an air date for it yet. He was asked why the concept of a show that joshed Old West traditions was revived.

"I just thought it seemed a very good idea for a series today, to do an action Western with humor and introduce, hopefully, a new male star," he replied. "We thought it'd be fun."

He said he doesn't know how well or badly reruns of the original "Maverick" are doing on various TV stations around the country.

But ratings played no part in his company's decision to have another go at the original idea, he said.

"I think this came about probably because people were going through some of the old series and thinking, 'Well, how would they be 20 years later or whatever?'" he explained.

"And going through our material here, someone came up with the idea of, 'Let's see what it would be like if we did "Maverick" X-number of years afterwards.'" So that's what we're doing."

Rosalynn Says She's Not Tough

LONDON (AP) — Rosalynn Carter says she is strong, not tough, and adds that she could never imitate an earlier American first lady, Eleanor Roosevelt.

In an hour-long television profile of the Carter family Monday night, Mrs. Carter was portrayed as an independent woman valued as a trusted aide by her husband and happily accepting her duties as wife and mother.

For the British Broadcasting Corp. special, film crews accompanied her on trips to Mexico and Puerto Rico and filmed the first family in the family quarters of the White House.

"I get very upset when my children are talked about," she said when asked if the constant attention journalists pay to her life upsets her.

Of her youngest child, Amy, 10, she said: "Of course she's spoiled. She's our first daughter and she has three older brothers. But I really think she's well adjusted. I'm proud of her."

Sen. Muriel Humphrey Picks Up Where Hubert Left Off

By LAWRENCE L. KNUTSON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — An eager Sen. Muriel B. Humphrey is picking up her husband's unfinished legislation where he left off while keeping Minnesotans guessing whether she'll run for election in her own right next fall.

Beginning a 10-month term as an appointed senator, the 65-year-old widow of Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey, D-Minn., is promising "to help people wherever I can and pass the legislation Hubert had underway."

The new Sen. Humphrey, who becomes the only woman in the 100-member Senate, also says she doesn't intend to "leave things hanging," but wants about two months to decide whether to seek election to the remaining four years of her husband's term.

"I feel a little like the astronaut when he stepped off the space ship on the moon," she said Monday after being sworn in by Vice President Walter F. Mondale, her husband's political protégé.

"I must say that I don't know of another day that felt quite like this, except the day Hubert and I were married," she said. "I just hope with all my heart that I can do a good job and fill the shoes that he filled."

Hubert Humphrey died of cancer last month.

The new senator said she is eager to get started on her husband's unfinished work and promised to "come to work at 9 in the morning and put in a full day, just like Hubert did." But she said she also realizes that it will be impossible to complete work on all the pending Humphrey legislation in just 10 months.

Her husband's Senate staff is intact and Mrs. Humphrey said she intends to lean on it for any expertise she may lack.

At the top of her agenda is the Humphrey-Hawkins full-employment bill, which has been stripped of most of its mandatory job-creating provisions and diluted mostly to an expression of intent.

Next in priority is the sweeping reorganization her husband charted of the U.S. foreign aid program.

Other unfinished Hubert Humphrey bills concern urban and rural development, child and adult nutrition, agricultural trade expansion, solar energy, small businesses and aid to the handicapped and victims of crime.

Both Humphreys had a special interest in the problems of handicapped children that was stimulated when their first grandchild, Vicky, was born mentally retarded.

Sen. Humphrey already has been named to seats on the Senate's prestigious foreign relations committee and on the governmental affairs committee, but has yet to receive subcommittee assignments.

Hospitalized, But Couple Is Together

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Married life has not been easy for John and Hope Burkhead. Not that they haven't gotten along; it's just that half their married life has been spent in a hospital.

But with the help of some understanding doctors, hospital rules were stretched a little so the young couple could share a room together.

The Burkheads were injured in an automobile accident on Dec. 23, five weeks after they were married. John broke his leg while his wife suffered two broken legs, a broken jaw and a skull injury.

Both were hospitalized at Charlotte Memorial and while Hope spent 12 days in intensive care, John tried tape recording messages to send to her. But that wasn't good enough.

The couple suggested moving their beds into the same room, an arm's stretch apart, and their doctors and hospital officials agreed.

"It's tremendous," said John. "I'd have been a nervous wreck if they had put us in separate rooms."

"Nurses will come in here and take second looks," said Hope. "We have people come all the way up here to see that there is nothing wrong with letting a guy and a girl in the same room."

Letting a husband and wife share a room isn't normal policy at most hospitals, but officials at Charlotte Memorial made an exception.

Being in the same room, said Shirley Kotlarz, director of nursing, is "very calming — a very reassuring type of thing. And when they are reassured and emotionally calm, they'll use their physical powers for a faster recuperation."

John expects to be discharged within a week but Hope will probably stay behind for a few more weeks.

WASHINGTON (AP) — United Mine Workers President Arnold Miller is going before his union's bargaining council to sell a proposed contract and begin a ratification process that could end a record 64-day coal strike.

Miller called the council into session at midmorning to lay out terms of the tentative accord, which he said would boost wages and fringe benefits by nearly 37 percent over three years.

But Miller may have a difficult task in gaining approval from the 39-member council, and the first reaction after announcement of a proposed settlement Monday was cautious.

"I think our miners are ready to go back to work, provided they get what they want," said Valerio Scarton of UMW District 2 in Western Pennsylvania. "If they don't, I'm sure they will stick it out some more."

The bargaining council is not a rubber stamp. In 1974, it ordered Miller to renegotiate portions of a proposed three-year accord, and then rejected the revised pact before approving it in a second vote.

The council is expected to take a particularly close look at reported union concessions concerning wildcat strikes.

Miller said the agreement would restore the miners' health benefits and improve their pension plan.

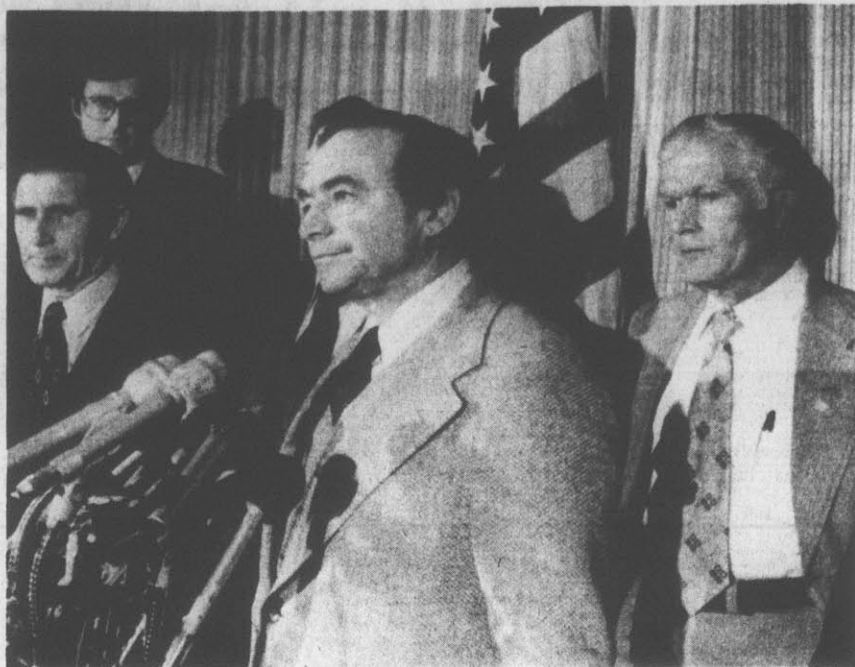

"If that's the case, it sounds like he may be sending down something that's pretty good," said George White, a miner from Lincoln City, W.Va. He called the top minimum wage boost — to just over $80 a day after three years — "one hell of a raise."

The walkout by 160,000 miners, which began Dec. 6, has cut the nation's coal production in half, and electrical output has been reduced in several locations because of dwindling coal supplies.

Even if ratification goes smoothly, the walkout is unlikely to end soon. The union's ratification process takes about 10 days, and it will be several days beyond that before coal can move through the supply pipeline.

Labor Secretary Ray Marshall hailed the proposed settlement as "genuinely good" for both sides.

The tentative accord was announced at a news conference.

'Noncompliant' On Air Quality

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Six North Carolina counties reportedly will be held in noncompliance with federal clean-air requirements, forcing them to take steps to improve their air quality and possibly affecting their industrial development.

James A. McColman, state air-quality administrator, said the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) has notified the state that the counties will be designated as "non-attainment areas" requiring special state attention.

The designation, expected within weeks, would also bar large new companies that would compound the pollution problem from locating in those counties.

Most seriously affected are Durham and Mecklenburg counties. Tests indicate that both counties have excessive amounts of carbon monoxide and ozone.

Buncombe County also is expected to be cited for ozone pollution, although state officials said the situation there is less severe and is not likely to have a serious impact on industrial development.

The other three areas involved are sections of Mitchell, Avery and Yancey counties near the mining town of Spruce Pine. Spruce Pine has too much dust in the air, mainly from nearby feldspar and mica mines, according to the EPA.

Brock M. Nicholson, state air-quality engineer, said federal laws limit the amount of new pollution-emitting industry the counties will be able to accept until they clean up their air.

If a plant would emit more than 100 tons of pollutants a year, either it would be barred from the area or existing industries would have to cut their emissions enough so that overall pollution would not increase, he said.

The same would apply to expansions of existing plants, Nicholson added.

Under the federal clean-air act, the state must develop plans to bring the areas into compliance by 1983. Since most of the pollution in Durham and Mecklenburg counties is believed to be automobile-related, those counties will be required by the end of this year to devise traffic plans to reduce car pollution.
