Coal Industry Rejects Carter Talks Call

By DAVID ESPO
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Coal industry officials today rejected President Carter's call to immediately reconvene talks aimed at ending the 72-day-old national coal strike.

Resumption of the talks "would be a mistake," E. B. Leisenring Jr., chairman of the Bituminous Coal Operators Association, wrote Labor Secretary Ray Marshall.

"Collective bargaining has worked," Leisenring wrote. "Long weeks of good faith negotiations produced an agreement with the top officers who came to the bargaining table ... Collective bargaining succeeded — an internal union apparatus has failed."

The bargaining council of the United Mine Workers union rejected the proposed settlement last Sunday by a 30-6 vote.

Carter asked the BCOA and the UMW on Tuesdays to reconvene the talks immediately at the White House. At the same time, the president held out the threat of still "stronger measures" to end the walkout that has cut the nation's coal output by 50 percent.

Union President Arnold Miller replied that he was ready to meet "at any time."

There was no immediate reaction from the White House, the Labor Department or the UMW to the BCOA statement.

"In our judgment, the president should first summon the failing members to the White House — the UMWA international officers and the bargaining council," Leisenring wrote.

"We are as concerned as any citizens about the welfare of this country. That welfare will not be well served by discarding the results of four months of hard bargaining merely because of a crowd of rowdies prevented a lawful meeting and physically terrorized its own officials...

Leisenring alluded to a demonstration last Friday by several hundred miners at union headquarterters that caused postponement of the bargaining council's decision on the tentative agreement.

"The country should not be held hostage to any group which seizes the energy jugular," his letter continued. "It would be a mistake to facilitate overreaching (by the union) by encouraging another round of bargaining.

"Coal companies are losing millions of dollars per day badly needed to develop new energy resources. Nevertheless, with all deference and courtesy ... we are obliged to decline the request (to resume the talks."

Carter stepped up his role in the strike as state officials took new steps to deal with the strike.

National Guardsmen assembled in Indiana to help riot-trained state police convoy coal. There were predictions of mass layoffs in the auto and steel industries if the walkout doesn't end.

Mandatory power cutbacks already are in effect in Indiana and are threatened in Ohio and West Virginia. Emergency shelters are being planned in Ohio in case blackouts shut off heat and light to homes.

The strike has resulted in "extraordinary circumstances," Carter said. He declared that the White House negotiations "must be viewed as a final opportunity" for the collective bargaining process to work.

"If it does not, then I will have no choice but to resort to stronger measures," he added.

The president did not spell out what these measures might be, but said in response to a question that invoking the strike-halting provisions of the Taft-Hartley Act was among his options.

Carter has come under increasing pressure to use the law and seek a court injunction that could order miners back to work for an 80-day cooling off period. But he and other administration officials have stressed repeatedly that they are hesitant to take that step.

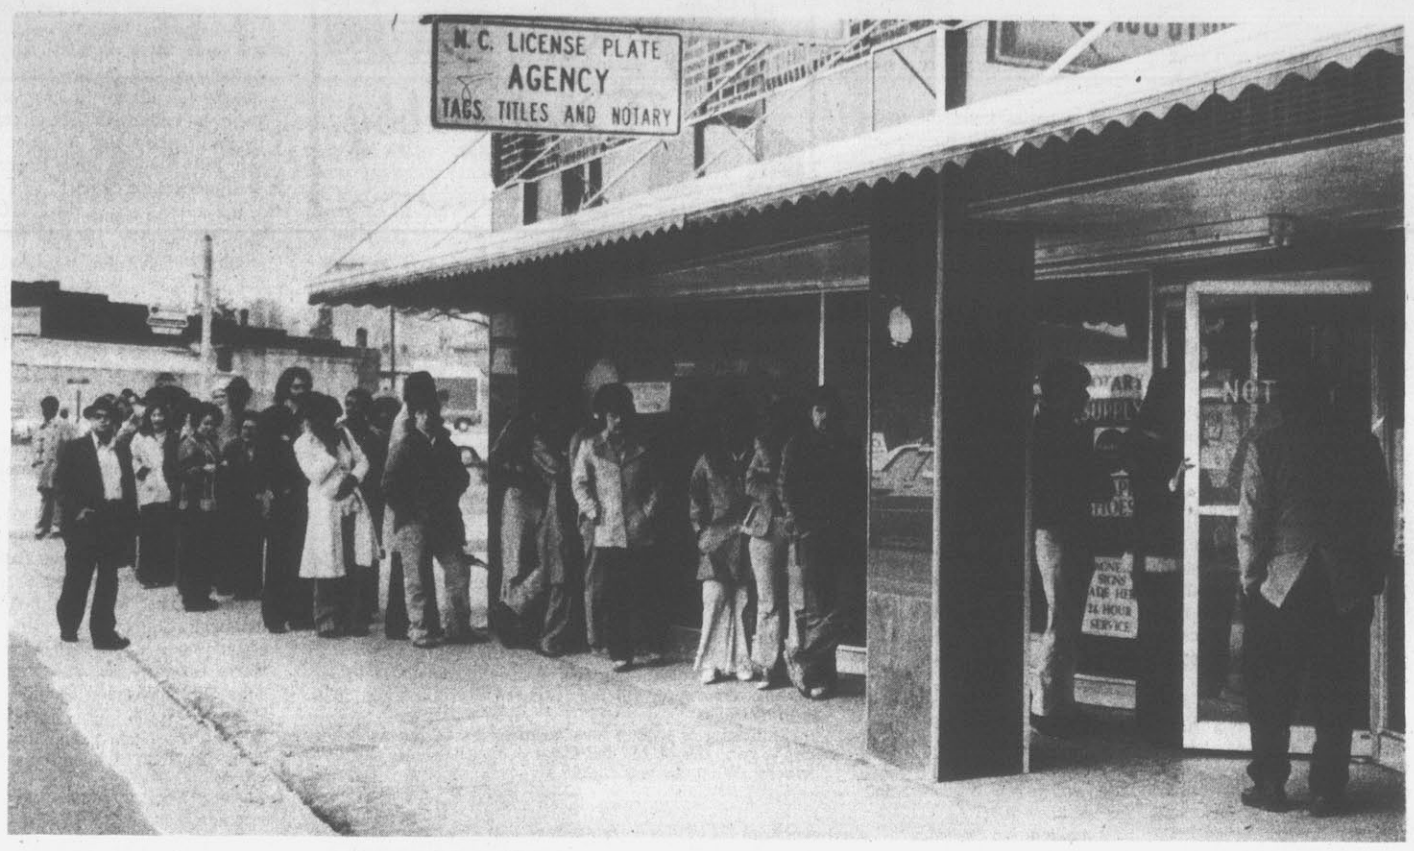

UMW miners have ignored back-to-work orders in the past, and Miller said in an Associated Press interview Tuesday night that, "Taft-Hartley wouldn't move much coal, but it might cause someone to get killed. I've got to see that doesn't happen."

He also said he would refuse to resubmit the rejected contract to his bargaining council, as the industry is asking.

It was the first time since President Lyndon Johnson's administration that a president summoned both sides in a strike to the White House, and it came as a surprise. Only Monday, Powell had said White House talks would be a public relations move with only shortterm benefits.

Asked Tuesday about the switch in official thinking, he said Carter's decision was based on meetings Labor Secretary Ray Marshall has been holding with both sides.

"The feeling was that it would take a personal request from the president to get the negotiations moving again," Powell said.

Last-Minute Line Is Long

VEHICLE OWNERS WAIT — Last-minute car owners wait in line at the N.C. license plate agency on Dickinson Avenue early this morning. Suing Ex-Agent

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A former CIA agent who wrote a book about American involvement in Vietnam will be sued by the government in a test of hiring requirements for agents, Attorney General Griffin Bell said here Tuesday.

Bell said Frank Snepp will be sued "for breach of contract," because he signed a contract when he was hired, giving the intelligence agency the right to veto writings about sensitive operations.

Snepp resigned in 1976 and wrote his book, "Decent Interval," without CIA authorization. It accuses the CIA of covering up grave mistakes in the final days before the fall of Saigon.

Snepp has said he thought the CIA "made a mockery of the secrecy system with its select leaks to the press in its efforts to whitewash its role in the end.

"For that reason," he said, "I regard those secrets as being declassified."

Bell, here attending the American Bar Association convention, indicated that the government lawsuit could seek money damages or an injunction "discouraging him from doing anything more to exploit his book."

"We want to find out if we have a valid contract," Bell said. "If these contracts are not valid, we might as well know it. If they are valid then we ought to be able to enforce the contracts."

"The court may say ... this is a prior restraint, you can't make a contract like that," Bell said. "But let's find out."

He said he does not consider it prior restraint.

"Nobody forced him to take the job. That's not censorship.... We just got a contract with this man."

Israel Objects To Jets Sale

JERUSALEM (AP) — Prime Minister Menachem Begin said today President Carter's plan to sell warplanes to Egypt and Saudi Arabia was "an obstacle to peace negotiations" and called on the United States to reconsider the arms deal.

The proposed sale "is a grave danger to the chances of peace and to the security of Israel," Begin told the Israeli parliament.

He said sale of U.S. attack planes to Egypt would reinforce war threats sounded in the Egyptian press and make negotiations more difficult.

The United States "has to understand that the supply of aggressive weapons at this time cannot be other than...an obstacle to peace negotiations," Begin said.

Sources said Begin had made his feelings known on Tuesday to U.S. Ambassador Samuel Lewis and made an official protest about the arms decision. The deal also includes warplanes for Israel, but only about half the amount requested.

Begin brushed aside assurances that advanced F-15 planes in Saudi Arabia would not be deployed against Israel. "No matter what the promises, these weapons will find their way into any new war and to the front itself," Begin said.

Begin also announced he would go to Washington next month for meetings with Carter on Mideast peace talks and the arms issue. No dates were announced.

Defense Minister Ezer Weizman also was expected to press for reconsideration of the aircraft deal when he travels to Washington March 6.

Begin was replying in the Knesset to opposition motions contending that Israeli-American relations had fallen to a low point. The motions all were referred to committees on voice votes following Begin's speech.

The prime minister spoke of the "unique relationship" between the United States and Israel despite what he called "serious and grave" arguments. Begin said he was confident the differences of opinion would be overcome.

Israel's friends in the U.S. Congress were more concerned over Carter's proposal to sell Saudi Arabia 60 of America's most advanced fighter, the F15, than they were over the 50 short-range F-5Es promised to Egypt.

Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan said the decision to sell Egypt American warplanes for the first time was premature. Haim Landau, a minister without portfolio in the Israeli cabinet, told a Tel Aviv meeting the sales to Egypt and the Saudis would heighten the chances for another war.

Yosef Rom, a defense expert for Prime Minister Menachem Begin's Likud Bloc, warned of the implications of training the Egyptians in the use of American equipment.

"Giving American arms to Egypt gives the Egyptians the capability to mobilize the entire arsenal of U.S. weapons in Saudi Arabia as well," he said.

There was no immediate comment from top-ranking Egyptian officials. But an Egyptian military spokesman in Cairo said while it would be "good" to get the F-5E, "the plane is not such a special plane. Egypt has planes of a similar capacity and some that even surpass it."

President Anwar Sadat during his visit to Washington last week asked for 150 F-5Es and F-15s.

Vacation Flight, Says Plane Crash Survivor

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A survivor of a plane crash Monday night in which four men died said from his hospital bed Tuesday that the six passengers aboard the light twin-engined plane were headed for a vacation in Monroe, N.C.

The plane crashed in a wooded area about 2½ miles south of the Raleigh-Durham airport, disgorging the six men, two briefcases stuffed with $50 and $100 bills and about two pounds of marijuana, authorities said. They added the money totaled at least $20,000.

"We hit one hell of a tall tree, and that's all I remember," said Karl Margolis, 25, of Boston, who suffered multiple abrasions and a cervical fracture in the wreck. He was listed in fair condition at Wake Medical Center.

The other survivor was John W. Burns, 23, of Chelmsford, Mass., listed in serious condition in the Wake intensive care unit with frostbite on both legs, multiple abrasions and cuts.

Margolis was pinned in the wreckage for more than four hours before rescuers found the crash site at 12:20 a.m. Tuesday. Burns apparently was thrown from the plane. He was found wandering about 200 feet away crying, "Mama, help me."

Assistant state medical examiner Brad B. Randall identified the four who were killed as James Malloy of Boston, pilot Emanuel D. Kaknes of Townsend, Mass., John F. Marranzino, 27, of Westford, Mass., and Paul Garvey, 26, of Littleton, Mass.

The plane, which crashed shortly after 8 p.m., took off from Hanscom Air Force Base, which handles private aircraft, in Bedford, Mass., bound for Monroe. The plane's flight plan included no stop at Raleigh-Durham.

Margolis said the six were planning to vacation in Monroe.

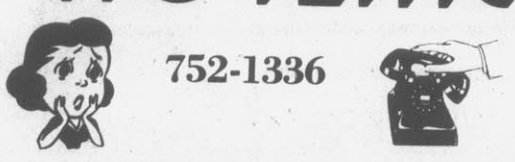

"We wanted to get away from the snow and go south," he said, adding that he and Malloy were painters and couldn't work in the bad weather up north. "I was just along for the fun."

The Federal Aviation Administration said the plane, an Aero Commander 680, was registered to First Missouri Bank and Trust of Creve Coeur, Mo.

Bank vice president Ronald Reece said Tuesday in a telephone interview with the News and Observer of Raleigh that the plane was sold two weeks ago to a man who said he represented Mercury Livestock International Inc. Ltd. and paid for it in cash.

The man told Reece the company was based in Hamilton, Bermuda. But the Bermuda Registry of Companies in Hamilton said it had no listing for such a company.

Suspect Killings In Nursing Home

DENDERMONDE, Belgium (AP) — A nun from a nursing order is suspected of killing up to 10 elderly patients to get their belongings and sell them to support her morphine habit, police said today.

Cecile Blombeek, 44, known as Sister Godfrida in the Apostolic Order of the Holy Joseph, was arrested last week on theft, drug and forgery charges, police said.

They said she became addicted to morphine eight years ago following surgery for a brain tumor, and that she was dismissed as matron of a geriatric ward at a clinic last year and sent to a private clinic for detoxification.

Authorities said they have ordered the disinterment of the bodies of 10 of Sister Godfrida's patients who died between January and August 1977. Autopsies will be performed in order to establish whether they died of insulin injections which are fatal in excessive doses.

Children Die

AGUAS BUENAS, Puerto Rico (AP) — A school bus taking pupils to class plunged off a road into a 500-foot ravine today in east-central Puerto Rico, killing 12 children and injuring more than 30, police said.

They said the accident took place about 6 a.m. between Aguas Buenas and Comerio, in mountainous terrain 13 miles south of San Juan, the capital of this U.S. island commonwealth.

Police said helicopters were rushing victims to the Rio Piedras medical center. Other details were not immediately available.

Gain Accord

SALISBURY, Rhodesia (AP) — Prime Minister Ian Smith and moderate black leaders agreed today, after 10 weeks of intensive talks, on a new constitutional framework that would lead to black majority rule in this southern African nation.

The plan for one-man, one-vote elections was rejected in advance by black guerrilla leaders who did not attend the talks and who have vowed to continue their bloody 5½-year struggle to throw out the white minority government by violence.

The agreement was "a victory for moderation," Smith told reporters after meeting with delegations of three black nationalist movements based in Rhodesia. The guerrillas operate from bases in neighboring Zambia and Mozambique.

"We have succeeded in overcoming because we have shown tremendous patience and we were not prepared to give in," he said.

Rhodesia, home to 6.7 million blacks and 263,000 whites, has been ruled for nearly 90 years by whites. In 1965, Smith unilaterally declared independence from Britain in the face of pressure from London to turn over power to blacks.

Art Of Carpet Weaving' Gets New Touch In Russia

By THOMAS KENT

ASHKHABAD, U.S.S.R. (AP) — Oguljanhan Aramovi, a black-haired, 22-year-old weaver, moved her fingers rapidly across the loom as centuries of Turkmenistan carpet makers have before her. But on the side of the loom hung an untraditional touch: a banner namilabher and her sister, Aknur, as "model workers of Communist labor."

Carpet weaving isn't what it used to be in Turkmenistan, a Central Asian republic of the Soviet Union bordering Afghanistan and Iran. The Oriental-style carpets themselves have changed little, but Soviet organization of the traditional industry has given it a new look that blends curiously with Turkmenistan folk traditions.

About 5,000 people now weave carpets in Turkmenistan, most of them working through 10 state factories. Instead of traditional carpet making in the open air at the weaver's own home, weavers now seem to prefer the warm, well-lit studios the state provides.

About 250 young women work at Ashkhabad Artistic-Experimental Carpet Factory in Turkmenistan's capital, recording their fulfillment of official work quotas on chalkboards and working to the accompaniment of local and Moscow radio broadcasts.

"I had dreamed about making carpets for a long time," Oguljanhan Aramovi told a Western visitor on a recent morning. "I want there to be carpets that are my own work."

"Our carpets are eternal," said Aziz Bagirov, the chief of the factory's experimental art section, showing 60-and 80-year-old carpets that were still in excellent condition. The factory will turn out about 670 carpets this year, part of some 12,000 to be produced throughout Turkmenia.

Bagirov noted that all Turkmenian carpets are still made by hand — with up to one million tiny knots per square meter of fabric. A big carpet can take two people three months to complete.

Some other countries and Soviet republics have switched to machine-made carpets, but "mechanization just isn't appropriate to this work," Bagirov said, claiming that machine-made carpets are much more likely to unravel.

Large Turkmenian carpets sell for about 900 rubles ($1,200) in the Soviet Union and twice that amount overseas. Weavers are paid on a piecework basis and make about 140 rubles ($194) a month, slightly lower than the average Soviet wage. Some 80 percent of Turkmenian carpets are sold abroad.

Most patterns are the traditional ones of Turkmenian tribes, with deep red backgrounds, and black and gray circular and cross-hatched patterns. But the factory has also produced some carpets with images of Lenin and major construction projects in Turkmenia. Government ministries buy many of the carpets and may well be the big customers for political designs.

The carpets are made from pure wool, dyed with colors often made from plants and other natural materials. The weavers work a 40-hour week, with special gymnastics classes to keep them fit despite their sedentary occupation.

APPLE CHESTNUT SALAD

This combination preceded the well-known Waldorf Salad as we know it.

2 medium red Delicious apples, unpeeled and diced (1 and 1-3rd cups)
2-3rds cup diced celery
2-3rds cup coarsely broken cooked chestnuts, see Note
¼ cup mayonnaise
2 teaspoons lemon juice
Lettuce

Mix together all the ingredients except the lettuce. Chill briefly if desired. Serve on lettuce. Makes 4 servings.

Note: Any kind of unsweetened cooked chestnuts may of course be used. We find the dry roasted whole chestnuts vacuum-packed in 16-ounce jars, available in specialty food shops, particularly good. — C. B.

Don't Cut Classes, Get Higher Grades

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1978 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: I live in Jacksonville, N.C., and want to know what you think about the system used here to get kids to attend school.

If a student attends class every day for six weeks straight, he will receive two extra points during that grading period.

Seniors who attend classes for the entire year without missing one day will be excused from taking final examinations.

I think this is a good idea because it's an incentive for kids to go to school. My dad disagrees with me. He says it's bribery. What do you think?

JACKSONVILLE STUDENT

DEAR STUDENT: A student's grades should reflect his scholastic ability which has nothing to do with his record of attendance.

Rewarding students with a higher grade for merely showing up every day makes their grades phony.

Also, allowing seniors to skip final examinations as a reward for perfect attendance would discriminate against those who have been absent for legitimate reasons.

I'm all for giving kids an incentive for attending school regularly, but upping their grades strikes me as a poor idea.

DEAR ABBY: My name is Lance Ramsey, and my Daddy bet me $20 to $2 there are no professional basketball players under 6 feet tall. I say there are.

Please answer as quick as you can because I want to know who wins. Thank you.

BELVEDERE, S.C.

DEAR LANCE: It's only a shot in the dark, but I'd say you win. Now, if there are any professional basketball players out there who are under 6 feet tall, please write in. I need to document my shot.

DEAR ABBY: A word of advice to NEIGHBOR, who wanted to befriend the little widow next door, but her husband nixed it.

He was right, but for the wrong reason. The best thing friends and neighbors can do for a widow is to encourage her to go places and do things on her own.

If they start taking her everyplace they go, they will have her on their hands every move they make, and she will be primed and ready to go every time they are.

It is much easier not to start it than to try to break it off when it gets out of hand. I know. I've been in the widow's shoes and the neighbor's, too.

There are many things widows can do to avoid loneliness, but sitting back and waiting for friends (and especially one's children) to take over is not one of them.

I think you passed up a good chance to give some sound advice to many new widows.

BEEN THERE IN ST. LOUIS

DEAR BEEN: Your "advice" is drawn from experience, obviously. And often that's the best kind. Thanks for writing.

Higgs Family Meets At 'The Gathering Place'

More than 60 members of the late Jacob Wilson Higgs family met at the homeplace, 1112 Dickinson Ave., Saturday to honor Mrs. Helene Higgs Kirkpatrick, Mrs. Herman H. Duncan and Mrs. Phil L. Goodson Sr., daughters of the late Mr. and Mrs. Higgs, for a preopening of The Gathering Place Restaurant.

Prior to the luncheon, guests toured the restored home, which was built around 1901. The restaurant opened last night.

Mrs. Armistead Gill of Rocky Mount, and Mrs. Harry West Abbitt Sr. of Wilson, sisters of the late Mrs. Higgs, were also guests of honor.

The three-course luncheon was served from tables covered with white linen and decorated with white and yellow chrysanthemums. Mrs. Ione Hooker Marshburn gave the invocation. Charles Kavanaugh was host for the event and toasts were given by Phil Goodson Jr., Joe Goodson, Billy Goodson, Lelia Higgs and Sidney Higgs Skinner.

Judge Dink James was the featured speaker. He said the Higgs' brothers, the late Jake, Ed and Sidney, were "rock of ages" type of people for this community. "They always had a pillow of strength that couldn't be shaken for honesty, character, religion, and service."

Among the out-of-town family members attending were: Mrs. Woodrow Wooten, Falkland; Mrs. Anthony Carey, Kinston; Mrs. Ray Armstrong, Goldsboro; Mrs. Dan Dixon and Mrs. James C. Gardner Sr., Rocky Mount; Mrs. Ed Beddingfield, Stantonsburg; Mrs. Cleon Goodwin, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Goodwin, Mr. and Mrs. John R. Harriss and Florence Pittman, Wilson; Mrs. Robert Herring, Washington; and Mrs. John Epperson, Williamsburg, Va.

Kathy Smith Gives Program

The Theta Epsilon Chapter of Beta Sigma Phi held its first February meeting at the home of Gail Gilbert. Kathy Smith gave the program and Mary Vojtecky served as co-hostess.

Ms. Vojtecky, social chairperson, discussed the Valentine dinner which will be held at the home of Shirley Rogers. The dinner will honor the chapter's Valentine queen, Linda Barnes.

The agenda for the March rush activities was discussed by Phyllis Nichols, who also conducted the pledge training. Pledge rituals were conducted for Kathy Smith, Louise Perry and Susan Walston.

The next meeting will be held Feb. 21 at the home of Ms. Rogers.

Carrico-Scott Vows Spoken

Angela Denise Scott, daughter of Mr. Herman Scott Jr. of Stantonsburg and Mrs. Herman Scott Jr. of Snow Hill, and Dean Russell Carrico, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Russell Carrico of Greenville, were united in marriage Feb. 4 at 4:00 p.m.

The double ring ceremony was performed in the Lebanon Methodist Church by the Rev. Nelson Fulford. Miss Terry Lynn Carraway of Snow Hill presented a program of vocal selections accompanied by Mrs. Mary Wynn Bostick, pianist.

The bride, given in marriage by her parents and escorted to the altar by her father, wore a formal gown of white satin finished crepe over peau de soie. The gown featured a V-neckline, raised waist and long fitted sleeves. Venise lace enhanced the waistline and appliques of Venise lace adorned the bodice, sleeves and skirt. The gown was styled with a flounce bordered with Venise lace. A chapel train, bordered with a flounce, fell from the waistline.

Her fingertip length veil of silk illusion was attached to a crown featuring appliques of Venise lace with sequins. Her bridal bouquet consisted of white phalaenopsis orchids interspersed with pink roses, gypsophilia, ivy and snowdrift poms.

The maid of honor was Miss Wendy Gail Carrico, sister of the bridegroom. Bridesmaids were Miss Kathy Jo Shackelford of Snow Hill, Miss Gail Beamon and Miss Sharon Bowen, both of Ormondsville.

The bridegroom's father was best man and ushers included Keith Owen Scott, Jeffrey Glenn Scott and Steven Todd Scott, all of Snow Hill, brothers of the bride.

Miss Wanda Terry Minshew, cousin of the bride, presided at the bridal register. The wedding was directed by Mr. and Mrs. Larry Harrell of Snow Hill.

The bride is a senior at Greene Central High School and the bridegroom is employed at Pitt Memorial Hospital and is a graduate of Farmville Central High School.

The bride chose a beige and brown suit with matching accessories complimented by her mother's corsage for traveling.

Following the wedding ceremony, a reception was held in the fellowship hall of the church. Guests were received by the bridal couple and their parents.

Mrs. Larry Harrell, cousin of the bride, served the wedding cake after the bridal couple cut the traditional first slice. Punch was poured by Mrs. Janice Minshew and Mrs. Nancy Taylor, aunts of the bride.

The refreshment table was covered with a white lace cloth over green linen. An epergne in a five branch candelabra filled with pink and burgandy miniature carnations, white daisies, acasia, gypsophilia and pink snapdragrons was used as the centerpiece.

On Friday night following the wedding rehearsal, the bric and bridegroom were honored an after-rehearsal party in th fellowship hall of the church.

The bride remembered her a tendants with gifts.

Mrs. Dean Russell Carrico

Ethiopia Threatens U.S. Break

By BRIAN JEFFRIES
Associated Press Writer

ADDIS ABABA, Ethiopia (AP) — Ethiopia's Marxist military regime has threatened to break diplomatic relations with the United States, accusing it of using its allies to arm Somalia for the war in the Ogaden Desert.

Somalia's southern neighbor, Kenya, also said it will adopt a hostile attitude toward countries arming the Somalis because they claim that northeast Kenya along with the Ogaden in eastern Ethiopia is historically part of Greater Somalia. Kenyan Foreign Minister Munyua Waiyaki singled out Iran and Saudi Arabia.

Ethiopia's head of state, Lt. Col. Mengistu Haile Mariam, told a news conference Tuesday Saudi Arabia, Iran, Pakistan, Spain and "other reactionary countries" are supplying arms to the Somalis, and the Americans are replenishing their arsenals.

"There is no question that the government of the United States is giving political and moral support to the ruling class of Somalia," Mengistu said. "Since the support is being provided indirectly, the U.S. policy is given the semblance of neutrality."

Mengistu said Britain and West Germany as well as the United States are supporting the Somalis. Unless the three governments change their policy toward the Ogaden War, "maintaining diplomatic relations with these nations becomes totally meaningless," he said.

The United States denied it was arming the Somalis, and Western diplomats in Addis Ababa pointed out that similar threats in the past have not been carried out.

Kenya's foreign minister accused Somalia of a "war of aggression" against Ethiopia. He said Iran and Saudi Arabia are not African countries and have no business getting involved in an African conflict.

Waiyaki said Somalia has never renounced its claim to "one-third of Kenya's territory, and their policy of Greater Somalia remains intact." He accused the Western powers of dragging their feet in supplying arms to his government, saying: "They give us delivery dates far into the future ... and yet we know that if they wanted, they could supply us arms at a moment's notice."

Somali forces in the Ogaden claimed that fierce fighting still raged around Harar and Diredawa, the Ethiopian goverment's two eastern strongholds. But the claim by the Western Somali Liberation Front was in direct contradiction to the eyewitness reports of Western correspondents who visited Harar during the weekend.

The Front denied reports of battlefield reverses and claimed Ethiopian forces had suffered "terribly heavy losses" in the counteroffensive they launched last month. The foreign correspondents reported from Harar that the Ethiopians had driven the Somalis back to the north, east and south, and they were driven to the southern front 25 miles south of Harar without encountering any fighting.

Taylor Sworn For N.C. Post

RALEIGH — John H. Taylor of Greenville was sworn in yesterday as a member of the Employment Security Commission of North Carolina following his appointment by Gov. Jim Hunt.

Taylor, a financial planner with Diversified Investment Planning, Inc., was one of four new commissioners taking office yesterday. The others included: A. Carroll Coleman of Wilson, David W. Erdman of Charlotte, and J. B. Archer of Raleigh.

The commission is a state agency administering unemployment insurance and the public employment service in North Carolina. It employs about 2,200 people statewide.

A graduate of Shaw University in Raleigh, Taylor spent 18 years in the field of education. The 47-year-old Taylor has also served as an employment manager with Procter and Gamble in Greenville and has served on the board of directors of the Pitt County United Fund and the Pitt chapter of the American Red Cross.

Taylor is also a former member of the Greenville City Council.

Held Workshop In Reidsville

The North Carolina Association of Student Councils recently sponsored its third annual Junior High Leadership Workshop in Reidsville, February 10-12.

Local students attending the workshop from Greenville Middle School were Mary Dawson, Rubie Holloway and Jeff Simpson, along with their advisor Mrs. Phyllis B. Joyner.

The purpose of the workshop was to provide attending council members with communication and leadership techniques to strengthen their individual organizations. Student leaders and advisors from across the state led sessions which included such topics as the qualifications and characteristics of leadership, organizing a junior high council and involvement in the state, district and national organization.

No Meeting By Utilities Board

An insufficient number of board members resulted in the cancellation Tuesday night of the Greenville Utilities Commission's regularly scheduled monthly meeting.

The meeting will be rescheduled later this week or early next week.

Fog Festival Is A Celebration

OCEAN SHORES, Wash. (AP) — The Ocean Shores Fog Festival does not come in on little cat feet. It fairly shouts in celebration of one of the area's most abundant natural resources.

"It's raining right now. The weather is miserable," said a smiling Don Ronde, festival chairman and gas station operator.

Ocean Shores endures about 50 inches of winter rain annually.

"They decided a few years ago to have an annual celebration and let the rest of the state know we're alive and well," he said Tuesday. "We give people a suncheck in case it doesn't rain. Then they can come again in 1979 for free." The festival is free anyway.

The Fog Festival runs Feb. 18-20 and includes among its events a relay race where contestants pass a live crab instead of a baton and a 10-mile marathon footrace beside the surf.

Arrested On Forgery Counts

Greenville Police yesterday arrested Elton Leon Blowe, 20 of Camp Lejeune on five counts of forgery, Chief Glenn Cannon reported this morning.

Cannon said Blowe was charged in connection with incidents here on October 1 and 2, November 28, and December 5 last year involving a total of $345 in forged checks.

Announce Series Of Services

Services for the remainder of the week have been announced for St. Matthew FWB Church. These are: tonight, 7:30 p.m., senior choir rehearsal; Thursday 7:30 p.m., prayer meeting; and Friday (time unannounced), members will accompany the pastor to services at Holy Trinity Church.

Sunday services are: 9:30 a.m. Sunday school; 11 a.m., morning worship with the pastor, Eldress Hattie Maye Cobb in charge; and 7:30 p.m. Elder Fred Teel will preach. At 3 p.m., Pastor Cobb and congregation will be at Bethel Chapel Church, Washington.

Radiologist Chosen Fellow Of College

Dr. R. William McConnell of Greenville has been selected as a Fellow of the American College of Radiology, according to an announcement from the ACR Headquarters in Chicago.

Dr. McConnell will receive his Certificate of Fellowship when the College holds its 55th Annual Meeting in San Diego, April 9-14, 1978. This merit award is based upon a radiologists' professional training, experience, and contributions in the field of medical Radiology.

A member of the Radiology staff of Pitt Memorial Hospital, Dr. McConnell has been associated with Eastern Radiologists of Greenville since 1969 and holds a staff appointment in Radiology with the East Carolina School of Medicine.

The Greenville Radiologist is a graduate of East Tennesse State University. He received his M.D. Degree from the Medical College of Virginia and underwent internship at the University of Tennessee.

Dr. McConnell completed the residency program in Radiology at Duke University Medical Center. He is certified by the American Board of Radiology and the American Board of Nuclear Medicine. In addition, he holds memberships in the American College of Radiology, the American Society of Chest Physicians, the Society of Nuclear Medicine, the Radiological Society of North America, the North Carolina Medical Society, and the Pitt County Medical Society. Dr. McConnell is a past president of the Pitt County Medical Society and of the North Carolina Unit of the American College of Radiology.

Currently, he is serving as a member of the Health Services Agency Committee for District 6 of North Carolina and is a member of the Executive Committee of the Medical Staff of Pitt Memorial Hospital. Recently, he was re-appointed as member of the North Carolina Radiation Control Commission.

Cars Collided At Intersection

Cars driven by Tina Maria Walls of Winterville and Ikie Edward Arnold of 1120 Ragsdale Rd. collided about 8:35 p.m. at the intersection of Greenville Boulevard and Belverdere Drive yesterday.

Police, estimated damage from the collision at $400 to the Walls car and $300 to the Arnold vehicle.

Assigned To Pastorate

Rev. Willie Lincoln Sumerlin, son of Mr. and Mrs. Marion F. Sumerlin of Route 5, Greenville, has been assigned his first pastorate as pastor of Arlington Free Will Baptist Church in Arlington, Georgia.

A graduate of Stokes High School, Sumerlin served for two years in the Icoal National Guard unit while living in the Greenville area.

He is a 1977 graduate of the Free Will Baptist College, Nashville Tenn., and is married to the former Ann Hodges of Simpson. The couple has two children, a daughter, Bonnie, 12, and a son, Lyn, 8.

Friends of Sumerlin who may wish to contact him may do so by writing to him at: Route 2, Box 2A, Arlington, Ga., 31713.

Proposal Deserved Publicity

Mayor Percy Cox apparently feels that the question of annexing the industrial area north of the Tar River has been blown out of proportion.

At a council meeting at which a public hearing was set for March 21 on the annexation question Cox accused the newspaper of running a story before any of the studies were complete.

"There was nothing secret about it," he said, pointing out that Brook Valley was also being considered for annexation.

Maybe there was nothing secret about the annexation plan, but there was surely mighty little known about it by the general public until the information was gathered and published by The Daily Reflector.

If the mayor feels the annexation question was blown out of proportion that is his prerogative. For our part we think that any action by the city government which could possibly affect jobs on which local citizens depend deserves full publicity.

No one can predict what will happen to industrial development north of the river if the area is annexed by the city.

It is safe to say, though, that industries considering the area as plant sites, or present industries considering expansion will have to take into account the additional costs in looking at these sites as opposed to alternate sites in other areas.

Electric Conservation Steps Coming

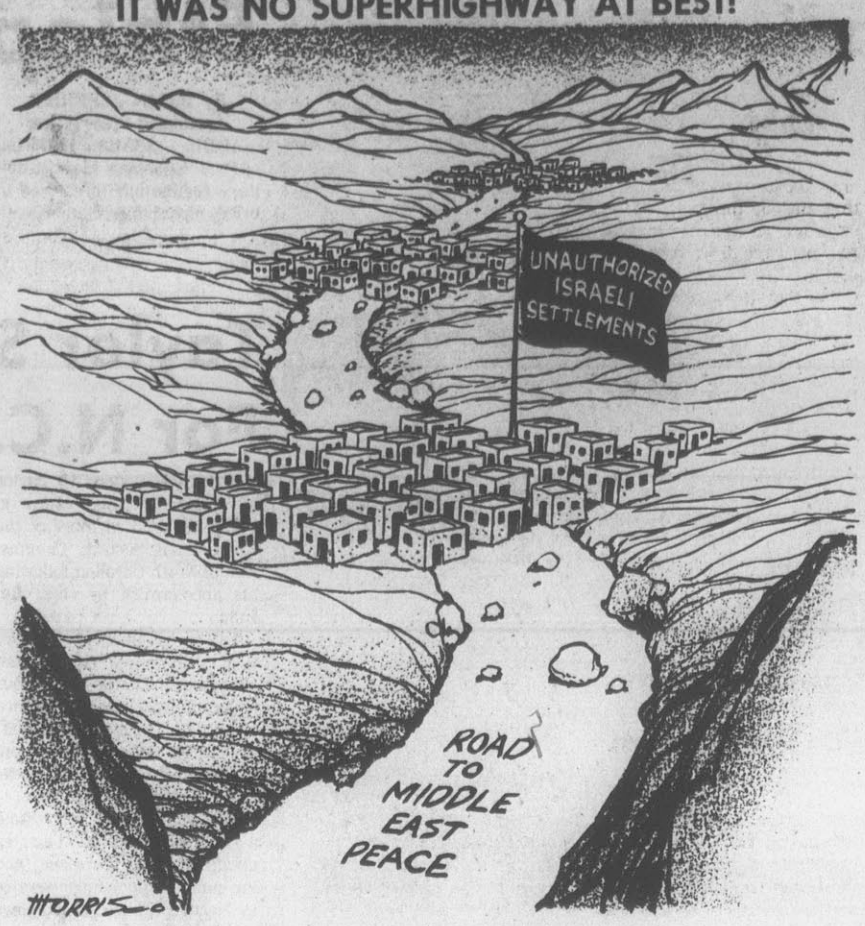

Electric conservation measures are already being called for in some states because of the dwindling coal supply.

We can expect such measures in North Carolina very soon.

The coal strike is beginning to hurt now. Homes will be threatened with power shortages and industries could close because of shortages. The striking miners themselves are taking a financial beating as the strike wears on.

If the strike isn't settled, government intervention is ahead, and that represents a failure of the collective bargaining system.

Show An Economic Shift

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — Gradually, North Carolinians are finding new kinds of jobs opening up for them—jobs requiring higher skills, and offering higher pay.

Early signs of this direction can be found in reports from the industrial services division of the Department of Community Colleges. That agency has prime responsibility for teaching vocational and technical skills, and works closely with industries to provide the needed labor pool.

Five years ago, says Joe E. Sturdivant, director of industrial services, more than half of the 115 training programs were with industries related to textiles, wood, or food.

This year only 17 per cent are in this labor-intensive, low-wage category. Meanwhile, more than half of the training projects this year are in mental machining and fabrication, electronic and electrical products and others requiring some of the highest skills, and paying highest wages. Five years ago only 22 per cent of the programs were in this sector.

Changing

"The character of our clientele is gradually but surely changing. The skills we are training for in 1977 are not the same skills we trained for in 1972.

"The Department of Commerce is making a determined effort to attract to North Carolina jobs that will provide our citizens with better wages," says Sturdivant.

Success in that direction, and industrial growth in 1977 which "exceeded all reasonable expectations" has put the industrial services operation in a bind, "Our New Industry Program has not been able to afford the prosperity North Carolina is experiencing this year in industrial development," Sturdivant has reported to the State Board of Education.

"The program is, in lay language, broke," Sturdivant reported.

The community colleges and technical institutes trained 4,459 new employees for 51 new or expanding firms at a total cost of $723,485 ($162.25 per trainee) during the first six months of this fiscal year (starting July 1, 1977). That is nearly all the total annual allocation from the General Assembly, Sturdivant explains.

NOBLITT

The hyper-active development scene, the more sophisticated training demands, and inflation in general are blamed for the condition. Sturdivant is seeking a $218,000 increase in the annual appropriation from this year's session of the General Assembly.

The Community College system is a direct outgrowth of the state's establishment of Industrial Education Centers some 20 years ago to train North Carolinians in new skills needed by prospective industrial firms wooed by industry hunters.

Skilled

In the mid-fifties when Gov. Luther Hodges launched his aggressive raid into Northern territories in search of economic development for North Carolina, one of the major problems was a skilled labor pool. The state moved quickly to set up the training program which assured North Carolinians of an opportunity to prepare for new jobs; and assured the prospects that trained labor would be available.

With programs now operating at 57 campuses, or in the plant themselves in many cases, the vocational training remains the central focus of the entire Community College system.

A review of firms for which students were trained this year illustrates the shifting nature of the development: Abbott Laboratories, Cutter Labs, Data General, Freightliner, Clark Equipment, Hudson Pulp and Paper, Westinghouse, Eaton, Bendix, Emerson Electric among others.

THE INSIDE REPORT

An SOS To Pres. Carter

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — Far from a routine political call, the 90-minute closed-door talk Feb. 7 between top presidential aide Hamilton Jordan and North Carolina Senate candidate Luther Hodges Jr. was a desperate SOS to get HEW Secretary Joseph Califano to shut up for a while.

Hodges is the leading Democratic hopeful against Sen. Jesse Helms, charismatic leader of the Republican right wing. Helms has transferred himself from a flukish 1972 winner into one of North Carolina's most formidable politicians.

Private polls show Hodges moving into a slender lead for the May 2 primary election, but his long-range hopes are chilled by Califano's new anti-smoking campaign. It is undermining all North Carolina Democrats.

Hodges complained bitterly to Jordan in the unusually lengthy meeting that Califano's public campaign, including a $23 million public relations fund to educate Americans on the health danger of smoking, could assure not only Helms's reelection but help Sen. Strom. Thurmond, another Republican conservative, in South Carolina. Tobacco, a major economic support for North Carolina, also affects South Carolina significantly.

In addition to protesting Califano's anti-smoking habit, Hodges complained about the civil rights section of Califano's Health, Education and Welfare (HEW) Department forcing North Carolina to end "racial duality" in its colleges and universities.

Also grating to North Carolina Democrats was a second anti-tobacco decision by the Carter administration: closing down the Oxford Tobacco Research Laboratory with its $1 million annual budget. That decision was the Agriculture Department's, not Califano's. But the political fallout is similar.

Jordan listened, with frequent telephone interruptions, and seemed sympathetic to Hodges's long list of grievances. He made no promises, and might not be able to keep them if he had. In early encounters with Califano, Jordan has come off second best behind the cabinet's most practiced and effective infighter.

Sen. Kissinger?

Prominent New York Republicans are seriously talking about Dr. Henry Kissinger as candidate for the Senate if, as expected, Sen. Jacob Javits does not seek a fifth term in 1980.

Nobody has yet approached the matter to Kissinger, and some friends doubt the former Secretary of State would descend from his Olympian heights to serve in the Senate. Nevertheless, Kissinger's celebrity status makes him a clearly electable candidate in the eyes of Republican politicians.

Among them is the highly respectable Rep. Barber Conable, senior Republican on the House Ways and Means Committee. Conable believes the strongest prospective GOP candidates in New York are Rep. Jack Kemp for governor this year and Kissinger for Senator in 1980. Conable has been trying to persuade Kemp to drop his 1980 Senate plans, using the Kissinger prospect as an argument with Kemp.

A footnote: Republicans look to the election of Democrat Daniel Patrick Moynihan, former ambassador to India and the United Nations, to the Senate in 1976 as an example of a diplomat succeeding in New York politics. An older example of a diplomat failing was the miserable showing in the 1949 Senate race by John Foster Dulles.

Sen. Humphrey's Plans

Contrary to early speculation, Muriel Humphrey has not closed the door to running in November for Hubert's Senate seat, which she now holds by appointment. Considering strong pressure on Mrs. Humphrey, both from her husband's Senate staffers (now working for her) and outside Humphrey political intimates, the odds on her running are slightly better than 50-50.

Muriel's recent political evolution points that way. When Gov. Rudy Perpich journeyed to Florida to offer her the Humphrey seat, he had two prepared statements: one announcing her acceptance, the other announcing his offer and her

POINTS OF MALICE

Prejudice is one of the most devastating of the world's vices. The word means prejudging, or judging before one has all the facts. It is bad enough to judge one's fellows under any circumstances, but to judge before one has reviewed all the circumstances may be a mistake of tragic proportions.

Someone has said that prejudice is being down on what you are not up upon. The more we know about an issue, the more judicious our attitude will probably be. The more we know about a person, the less likely we are to dislike that person.

There are many people who believe that we can never have a reconciliation of the world's manifold hatreds because of little pockets of intrenched prejudice. But how unwise it would be to forego all attempts at reconciliation because of these barriers. Men of good will have more power than they often imagine. And this power will be demonstrated when they attack the points of infection from which hate and prejudice flow.

Winter Of Discontent

WASHINGTON — People used to talk about the weather, but now they just sit in front of their TV sets and curse it.

Everyone has a theory why this country has had such horrible winters. One was advanced by a friend of mine named Merkin. While I personally don't buy it, I feel obligated to pass it on.

Merkin believes all the bad weather in the United States began just after Anita Bryant attacked the gay population in this country.

"God," said Merkin, who is very devout, "got very angry with Miss Bryant when she said He doesn't like gays, and He's been punishing us ever since."

"How do you know this?" I said.

"I talk to God every night," Merkin said. "Right after Miss Bryant's attack He became very upset and decided to teach us all a lesson. You see, God loves us all, and He doesn't distinguish between heterosexuals and gay people. As far as He's concerned, we're all His children, and when one person says He doesn't like a certain group of people He becomes furious."

"But Anita Bryant talks to God, too, and she says God is against homosexuals and believes they're sinners."

ART BUCHWALD

"She doesn't speak to the same God I do," Merkin said. "My God is too busy to get involved in people's sex lives. As long as they don't hurt anybody, my God believes everyone should be left alone."

"But Anita has to be speaking to the same God," I protested. "After all, there is only one."

"Maybe she's not hearing Him the same way I do. Everyone hears God differently. My message from Him is that there are a lot of straight people who are sinning and are on their way to hell, and there are a lot of homosexuals who will be allowed in heaven. What's getting God really sore is that there are more and more people in this country telling other people what He does or does not like. That's why we're having such bad weather."

"Merkin, has God told you this Himself?"

"I'm afraid He has."

"When?"

"The other night, just before I went to bed."

"What exactly did He say?"

"He said everyone is using His name these days to plug his or her own cause. People are making fortunes telling the rest of us what's good and what's bad. He says He's being sold on television like soap or toothpaste. What's even worse is that anyone who has a political ax to grind says that God supports him. If there is one thing we know from the Bible it's that God

Other Editors Say: The Energy People

(Rocky Mount Telegram)

When you get right down to it, farmers are the basic energy people.

What does that mean? They use only three percent of the nation's daily supply of gas, oil and other energy products to produce food energy and fiber for all of us — plus plenty to export to people of other nations.

These basic energy people are so efficient that they take that three percent of the oil and gas they use and turn it into enough food energy to pay for around two-thirds of the oil we import, in addition to feeding the people here in the United States.

In fact, energy is the basis of modern, high productivity agriculture.

As late as 1940 it took in excess of two acres of land to feed each American.

Today, each American is fed a better diet from about one acre.

While improved varieties have played significant roles in this dramatic change, the increased use of mechanical energy has made most of this added productivity possible.

While Americans have done much to trim their energy needs, even if they can cut back 15 percent — overall for the nation— that amounts to only a reduction of about one-half percent of total consumption.

Greater cutbacks would reduce the amount of food energy that can grow and that could affect us all at the grocery store.

It's little wonder, then, that when people make decisions on priorities for gas and oil in times of shortages, farmers and ranchers rate pretty high on the list. And well they should. We need food.

Agriculture is the only industry that produces more energy than it consumes.

That is also something to keep in mind when you sit down at the family dinner table.

The meat and potatoes, the salad and the vegetables, the milk, bread and dessert all started on the farm.

They are the basic energy supply we all depend upon. And perhaps that is why most Americans today are in sympathy with farmers as they raise their voices in protest across the land because of the inequities in farm prices.

The so-called "tractorcades" have become a familiar sight across the land. It is the farmer's way of protesting the condition he finds himself in. And his protest is understandable.

Plane Costs Soaring

By FRED S. HOFFMAN
AP Military Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The estimated cost of the Navy's new F-14, already the most expensive jet fighter in history, is climbing by more than 45 percent to $29.7 million apiece, Pentagon sources say.

The sources, who asked not to be named, say a quarterly report will show that the cost of an F-14, the Navy's chief fleet air defense fighter, is going up by about $9.3 million.

At the same time, the price of an F-18 fighter — described by Defense Secretary Harold Brown as "a low-cost complement to the F-14" — is rising by about $2.2 million to $18 million each.

The Air Force's two prime fighters, the F-15 and F-16, also are registering cost boosts, sources said, but much less than the Navy aircraft experienced.

The F-15, designed to defeat any known Soviet fighter in a battle for air superiority, is up by about $200,000 a plane to $18.1 million. The F-16, the Air Force's lightweight fighter, is increasing by about $800,000 to $10.8 million.

The sources said much of the increase in the costs of the F-15, F-16 and F-18 is blamed on projected inflation in the years the planes are being produced.

Part of the big rise in the cost of the last 162 F-14s to be purchased, however, is said to result from the Carter administration's decision to stretch out F-14 production. Next year, under the Pentagon's plan, the Navy will buy 24 F-14s instead of the 36 that the Navy requested.

Cost of the fighters has climbed steadily from the original estimate of $11.5 million per plane in 1971, and Brown told Congress recently that, "The F-14's cost growth ... has caused us to decide upon a stretched F-14 program." However, he

The Rural Electrification Administration has approved another requisition from the funds available for the Pitt and Greene Electric Membership Corporation project, this time for $4,518.23.

The money will be made available for use as soon as the Treasury Department clears the voucher. The additional sum makes a total of more that $46,000 which has been advanced for the project. Most of the money in today's requisition is to be used for office expenses, salaries and supplies.

The Pitt and Greene Electric Membership Corporation proposes to erect 56 miles of power lines to serve 292 customers in two counties.

Pitt and Edgecombe counties got $58,400 from the WPA for county-wide projects, providing the dredging of Crabtree Creek.

WPA officials said malaria control would be established through the elimination of mosquito breeding swamps and ponds. Tarboro will be project headquarters.

Among other projects approved was one providing $5,155 for the construction of water mains in Lumberton.

Centimetering To Conformity

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — Out of step because it measures in feet, as well as in yards and miles, the United States is now inching — strike that — centimetering into conformity with other countries.

The slow process is well under way. Soft drinks come in liter bottles and thermometer readings in celsius as well as fahrenheit. By 1982, automobiles may be metric, and road signs soon may follow.

No, it isn't going to go away folks. "Slowly but surely" it is proceeding, says Malcolm O'Hagan, president of the American National Metric Council. "All the major industries have plans."

Most countries already are at least partially metric, and the holdouts, Yemen and Brunei, are mere grams on the map. The United States, powerful though it is, was outnumbered.

That condition could create problems. In any measurement there is a tendency to round out the numbers. Thus the 1-inch U.S. bolt would become 25.4 millimeters, a mismatch for the 25-millimeter French nut.

Had it insisted on the old way, the United States would not have had the support of science. The foot, for example, is derived from the human foot; the yard was a measurement of nosetip to handtip.

The metric system is more consistent and, it is said, scientific. It is a fraction of the world's circumference; it uses the decimal scale, enabling calculations to be made simply by moving the decimal point.

And so in December 1975 the United States passed the Metric Conversion Act, which called for the creation of a 17-member Metric Conversion Board, to guide the voluntary transition and educate the public.

Even before then, the various industries affected had created the Metric Council, now made up of more than 300 trade and technical associations and nearly 500 companies.

Meeting in Atlanta next April 2 through April 5, the council expects to publicly present proposed conversion plans for the construction, food, textile, chemical, metals, aerospace and automotive industries.

Some industries are already well advanced. Wines and liquors, for example, will be fully converted by Jan. 1, 1979, and one consequence is to reduce the number of sizes from 16 to 7.

This, some critics maintain, is a reduction in the number of consumer options, but metric supporters react by claiming the fewer sizes will permit consumers to better understand just how much they are buying.

Simplification, in fact, is perhaps one of the greatest benefits foreseen for the changeover.

"The number of sizes tends to proliferate over the years, to get into inventories and stay there," O'Hagan observes. Many industries, he maintains, will now be able to greatly reduce inventories of odd sizes.

Understandably, O'Hagan likes to stress the positive, but experience supports him when he states that few dire predictions ever come true. Planning and education are the key, he says.

Thai Roadbuilders Are Guarded By 'Hard Men'

By KRAIPIT PHANVUT

PUA, Thailand (UPI) — The escaped criminals, social misfits and ex-CIA hired guns who guard road construction sites in the jungled hills of northern Thailand fight off bandits and Communist attacks for $1.80 a day — and like it.

"We need hard men here. These men are hard. I keep order with my fists and feet," said the Thai Army captain who leads one group at the construction camp in Pua, 570 miles north of Bangkok. "I know them well after putting them through three months of tough training."

"They don't talk about their pasts much, but some fought as CIA mercenaries in Laos," the captain said. "Some are rejects from the regular army who couldn't stand the regulations and boredom of barracks life. Others were gangsters. Some have escaped from prison."

Under an arrangement that allows the Highway Department to have its own private army, the mercenaries protect the construction crew building a 20-mile road through Communist-held hills from Pua, in northern Nan Province, to a dozen small villages along the Laotian border.

"Roads like this are a direct threat to the Communists, who need the isolation of the deep forest to woo and frighten the people away from the government," said the project's chief engineer, Jua Sukharat.

"With a good, well-paved road, government officials can reach rural people quickly and easily. This makes everything difficult for the Communists — tax collections, propaganda and organization."

When the project was opened to bids by private construction companies, none were received. So the Highway Department started the work itself last April.

The Communists attacked immediately.

With rockets, hand grenades and semi-automatic weapons, they shot up the camp, burned several trucks and blew up two road graders before retreating into the forest.

"As they left a female voice shouted back to the camp, 'don't work on this road if you want to live,'" Jua said.

The mercenaries, just completing their training, were rushed to the site. More were hired later. Their number is not known but is believed to exceed 60.

The mercenaries' day begins with a careful patrol of the working area, filing down the roadway looking for hidden mines and ambushes.

It's dangerous work. Last November, a Communist ambush seriously wounded two guards before the insurgents retreated.

During the day the mercenaries sit munching sticky rice and dried fish in camouflaged guard posts in the jungles above the road bed while the crew works.

At night they take turns keeping watch from bunkers inside the barbed wire-enclosed construction camp.

The wages are $1.80 a day and the work is hazardous. But the men don't complain.

"I like this life," said one 24-year-old mercenary, his dark skin blue with tattoos. "In other places where there are too many people around, I get a headache."

The mercenary, who would not give his name, said he had done "odd jobs" after the 1975 fall of Laos, where he served with the clandestine CIA-supported mercenary army.

"It is simple here," he said, fingering the dozens of Buddhist amulets around his neck. "We must kill them before they kill us."

Present Study At Symposium

ECU News Bureau

Dr. Avtar Singh and Jules C. Rivera of the East Carolina University Sociology and Anthropology Department will present the results of a study conducted in India on attitudes toward "euthanasia" or "mercy killing" of the incurably ill, dying patient in excruciating pain. The symposium will be held Feb. 16-19.

The authors contend that the most significant finding of the study is that dominant religious and cultural belief systems significantly influence one's attitude toward matters involving decisions such as euthanasia. Furthermore, such attitudes cut across caste, class, educational and age boundaries.

Dr. Singh is professor of sociology and author of numerous articles, books and monographs. Jules Rivera is a graduate student in the department of sociology and anthropology.

"What did you do about it?"

"That was good thinking," I said. "Did God say He was going to continue giving us all these bad winters?"

"He did indeed. He said He was going to keep it up until everyone stopped saying terrible things about their fellow Americans.?"

"How do I know what God told you is any more valid than what Anita Bryant says God told her?"

"Why don't you ask Him yourself?" Merkin said.

And that's exactly what I did. That night as I knelt by my bed I said, "God, did you tell Merkin you were punishing all of us because everyone was using your name for his or her own purposes?"

There was a pause, and then God said, "Merkin talks too much."

refusal.

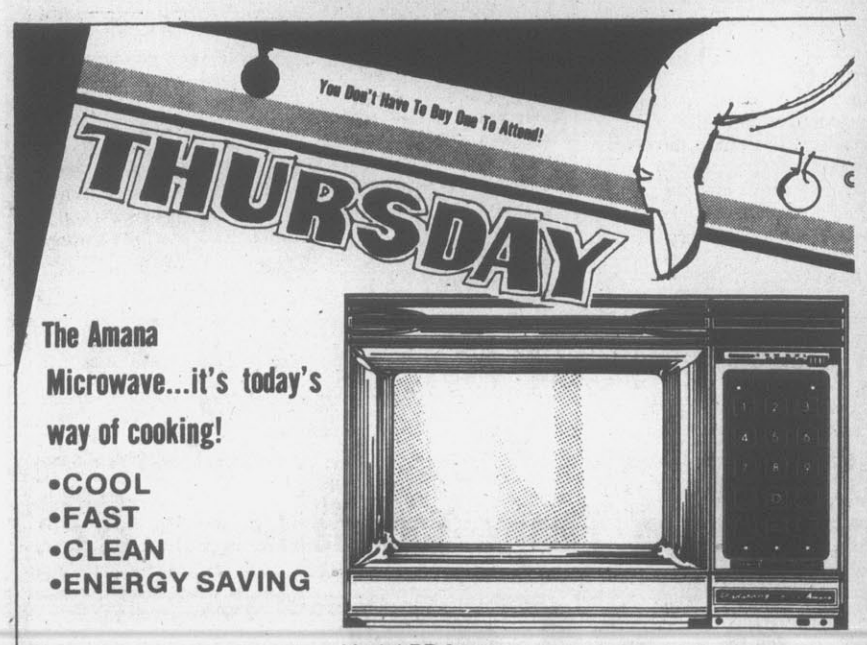

In other words, she waited until the last second to make up her mind, then said yes. Intimates say Mrs. Humphrey is going through the same process now — uncertain, but tugged by friends toward running.

If she runs, she will be a cinch, but such a decision could lead to bitterness within the Democratic-Farmer-Labor (DFL) party founded by Hubert.

Rep. Don Fraser, an important DFL stalwart, is an announced candidate. Neither Fraser nor any other Democrat would oppose Muriel in a primary election. Her decision to run therefore would postpone for at least four years the advancement of new faces within the party which Hubert made a hallmark of his DFL leadership.

A footnote: One reason for Mrs. Humphrey not to run is the possible effect on the campaign for state attorney general by her son Skip (Hubert H. Humphrey III).

CAMERA Angles

By IRVING DESFOR
AP Newsfeatures

Some months ago, I had the privilege of being interviewed on television and, as happens sometimes, the experience proved far more valuable to me for this column. It gave me an opportunity to get better acquainted with the interviewer, Casey Allen, an actor, director, announcer, writer-producer of films and material for theater and radio for almost 30 years, and a professional photographer and photographic educator as well.

This is the eighth year that Casey Allen has produced a weekly television show entitled "In and Out of Focus" for New York City's Municipal Broadcasting System. In that time, there have been more than 220 separate taped sessions with guests who represent a cross section of 20th-century photography. Among them we find: W. Eugene Smith, Andre Kertesz, Alfred Eisenstaedt, Arthur Rothstein, Philippe Halsman, Arnold Newman, Pete Turner, Eva Rubinstein, Eddie Adams, Cornell Capa, Ernst Haas and Barbara Morgan.

The programs are a matter of public service so there are no fees or even expenses available for guests, the city's financial situation being what it is — and has been. But, far more surprising, there is no remuneration of any kind for the show's host, Casey Allen. But he finds his rewards — and an interesting challenge — in securing outstanding photographic personalities who agree to share their experiences and their pictures with the public.

On some occasions, his persuasive power is not enough. Irving Penn simply said "No." David Douglas Duncan wouldn't return his calls, and Richard Avedon's secretary said "Mr. Avedon doesn't do that sort of thing."

The best organized guest who ever appeared was David Eisendrath, photographic consultant, author and lecturer.

"Eisendrath called me a week before the scheduled taping," Casey recalled. "He asked me how long the show was and what were the lead-in and lead-out times. I gave him the facts: 28 minutes for the show which included a three-minute intro and a two-minute sign-off.

"He arrived at the studio with his slides and a stop watch. We sat down on the set, the lights came up and we did the introduction. Then Eisendrath took over and I sat entranced with his slide-illustrated discussion of photographing the invisible. Exactly 23 minutes and 15 seconds later, he turned the show back to me for the lead-out and sign-off. It was a performance of solo virtuosity, precisely calculated and executed.

GENIAL HOST Casey Allen starts his eighth year interviewing photographic personalities for a weekly WNYC-TV show, "In and Out of Focus." A professional photographer himself, Casey donated the framed color print of a bull fight in effective blurred motion for the 1977 fund-raising exhibition-auction of Volunteer Service Photographers.

"The Gene Smith interview made a memorable session. He was still suffering from the violent beating administered by chemical company goons in Minamata, Japan, after Gene's photographs had aided the workers in their court case and he was still having dizzy spells. He eased into a chair with a bottle of ammonia handy for an emergency.

"He looked around and in back of him," Casey said. "I asked him if something was wrong. 'No,' he replied. 'I just wanted to see where I'd fall if I faint.' Gene's complaint immediately asked, 'Do program director 'll the cameras would stop if Gene fainted.' 'No,' keep 'em rolling,' Gene himself answered. 'It'll be another Gene Smith first — he faints on television!'

"When the program got underway, Gene's heart-moving set of Minamata photographs and his dramatic experiences electrified everyone in the studio including Gene — and the ammonia bottle was completely forgotten.

"French photographer Henri Cartigue was worried about his English and had his lovely wife sit just off camera to help out when needed. But his delightful accent and nostalgic photographs from the turn-of-the-century to the present needed no extra help. They were both enthralling. Cornell Capa presented a unique problem: he held up the taping for two hours until station attorneys agreed to delete a seven-word sentence from the standard release form. It was something no one else, before or since, even noticed.

"But Cornell Capa is a photographic force of great stature," Casey said. "And as the only person in the world who could have started the International Center of Photography — and make it work — he can delete any sentences he wants if that's what it takes to have him on the program."

Among the hundreds of "In and Out of Focus" shows, there was bound to be one in which the focus developed a technical blur. It happened on an interview with Barbara Kopple, producer of the film, "Harlan County, U.S.A.," and her cinematographer. All taping is done five weeks before the show is broadcast and by a stroke of sheer luck, the film won an Oscar award the week before it was to be shown. The program promised to be newsworthy, therefore, as well as significant. Casey Allen explains what happened:

"On the day of taping, we planned to have four inserts from the film itself so we left four two-minute blanks to be put in later. I checked with our director two weeks later and he assured me that the editing had been completed and the inserts fitted beautifully. On broadcast night, I watched the show at home and it started off as scheduled. Then it was time for the first film insert and all that showed was black screen! I called the station. No answer. Back to the set, the program proceeded. Time for the next film insert — more black screen. And so it went, the entire show with four blank sections of precisely two minutes each.

"Our post mortem revealed," Casey concluded, "that the engineer on duty had pulled out the original, unedited tape from the bin. To that, he added mistake number two — he failed to take if off the air when the blank spots showed up. But that's what photography is all about. Every picture isn't a winner and the best photographers are those who learn from their mistakes."

Casey Allen's experiences as a professional photographer, and as adjunct associate professor at New York University where he teaches photography two nights a week, will provide more material for future columns.

Art Senior Has Work Exhibited

Eight Are Killed By Toxic Funes

CHICAGO (AP) — The unloading of a chemical into tanks at the wrong building of a Chicago leather factory sent poisonous fumes through a tannery, killing eight workers and sickening at least 30 others, officials say.

The fumes quickly spread through the Horween Leather Co. plant on the northwest side Tuesday morning after sodium sulphydrate, which removes hair from hides, was inadvertantly mixed with chrome liquor in five open-topped basement holding tanks. The chemicals formed hydrogen sulphide, a toxic gas that smells like rotten eggs.

Fourteen of the injured were admitted to hospitals, four in critical condition. Among the injured were a police officer and a firefighter.

Seven of the victims died immediately after the accident, and an eighth suffered a fatal heart attack in a hospital early today after experiencing breathing difficulties since the accident.

About 175 workers were in the block-long plant when the accident occurred at the start of the day shift.

Fellow employees dragged some unconscious workers from the building; others were rescued by firefighters wearing oxygen masks, and still others fled down fire escapes or through windows.

There was no explosion or fire, even though the chemical reaction was violent.

Police Sgt. John Serafini said truck driver Charles Estes, 51, of New Martinsville, W.Va., told him that he had been directed by an unidentified employee of the tannery to hook up his tank to a valve on the outside of the building.

Estes told police someone had signed the bill of lading for the delivery. He said he never had been to the plant before.

Autopsy Rules Are Tightened

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Officials at the O'Berry Center for the Mentally Retarded in Goldsboro have ordered more stringent investigation of patient deaths at the center, following a series of newspaper articles that focused on the absence of autopsies in many cases.

Ben W. Aiken, director of the state Division of Mental Health and Mental Retardation Services, said he had told Dr. Jose Devarona, O'Berry superintendent, to have the local medical examiner review each death and determine whether it should be referred to the state medical examiner.

Devarona was also directed to push for consent to autopsies by relatives of deceased patients and to get signed statements when they refuse.

Aiken said he sent out the directive following the publication of a series of articles in the Fayetteville Observer.

The stories noted that there were 10 patient deaths at O'Berry last year for causes ranging from chronic brain syndrome to propoxyphene poisoning. In only one case was there an autopsy, and in that case homicide was suspected, the Observer reported.

In comparison, the paper said there were 23 autopsies performed in 34 patient deaths at the state's other three mental retardation centers.

Only five autopsies had been performed in the 240 patient deaths since O'Berry was opened in 1957, the Observer said. In two of those cases homicide was suspected.

In calling for more stringent death investigations at O'Berry, Aiken said they were necessary to insure public confidence in the institution.

Republican Beats Abzug

NEW YORK (AP) — The political career of Bella Abzug hangs in limbo today following her narrow loss to an obscure Republican who overcame both the former congresswoman's celebrity status and a 3-to-1 Democratic registration edge.

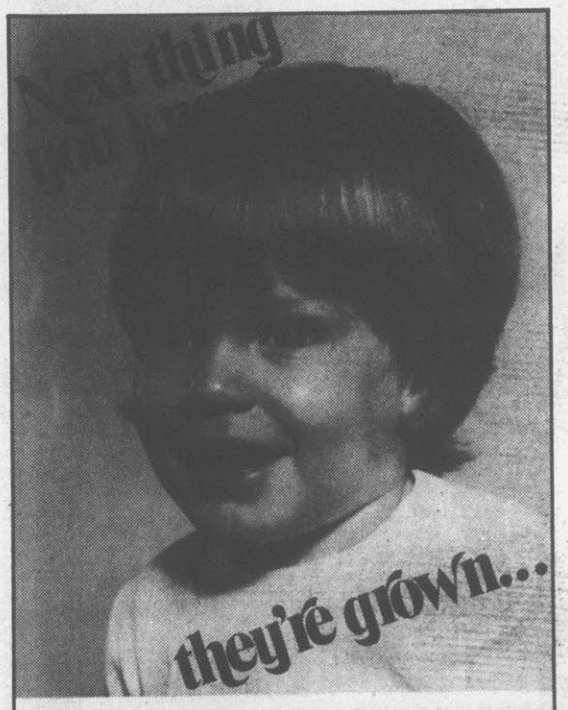

Mrs. Abzug — who in the past 18 months was defeated in primary bids for the U.S. Senate and mayor — lost the race to succeed Mayor Edward Koch in Congress to S. William Green, 48.

Green's previous stints in public office were limited to a term as a state assemblyman in the late 1960s and seven years as regional director of Housing and Urban Development.

The victory margin, however, was close — 1,270 votes of some 60,000 votes cast. Mrs. Abzug, 57, said she would await the results of a recount scheduled for later this week before commenting on the outcome. Green noted that the routine recount usually verifies the unofficial tally.

The final unofficial figures gave Green 30,240 votes, or 51 percent. Mrs. Abzug received 28,970 votes, or 48 percent. Two minor party candidates combined for less than 800 votes.

For much of Tuesday night, it looked as though Mrs. Abzug was headed to Washington to serve out the term until the end of this year. The Associated Press and other news outlets in New York called Mrs. Abzug the winner of the election before 10 p.m., when she led Green by 59 percent to 39 percent with about 20 percent of the vote counted.

How's The Weather?

WEATHER FORECAST — Snow is forecast today in the Southwest and western Plains and in the Great Lakes region. Rain is expected for the central Gulf, changing to snow over northern Arkansas and Louisiana. Very cold to seasonably cold weather is indicated. (AP Laserphoto Map)

By The Associated Press

Weak high pressure was building over North Carolina today, indicating partly cloudy skies with high temperatures ranging in the 40s and low 50s about like Tuesday's readings.

More precipitation, however, is on the way. Clouds will be increasing tonight ahead of a storm moving out of New Mexico. This storm will pose the chance of rain and snow in the mountains and rain elsewhere on Thursday.

Considerable early morning fog was reported in central sectiokns of the state Tuesday and in the north central counties spotty rain and sleet were noted. There was even some rain, sleet and snow at Elizabeth City, which shared with Rocky Mount this morning a low reading of 25 degrees.

High temperatures around the state Tuesday climbed to 55 at Wilmington, 54 at Chalotte, 53 at Fayetteville and 52 at Raleigh. High temperatures Thursday are expected to hold to the 30s and 40s.

Says Tar Heels Reading More

By DAVID TOMLIN
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — While educators wring their hands over the nation's meager reading habits, Marion Johnson rubs hers together with glee.

Mrs. Johnson is in charge of the state's public library development section, and judging from what she's seen, the nation's reading habits aren't meager at all. In fact, people seem to be reading more than ever.

"Around North Carolina, we feel that public libraries are alive and thriving," she said. "Circulation is increasing, and the participation of local, state and federal governments is also on the increase."

If people are abandoning reading material in favor of less demanding media, Mrs. Johnson says there's no evidence of it in library statistics.

In the 1975-76 fiscal year, she said, North Carolinians borrowed 17,880,233 books from the state's 345 public libraries. That doesn't include records, movies, filmstrips or pictures. Just books.

The following year that figure jumped to 18,047,309 books. Mrs. Johnson said library circulation had been increasing steadily from time immemorial and isn't showing any signs of slacking off.

"I don't recall a time when it's actually been down," she said.

"People still love to read," she added. "You hear some diehards say that the movies or television will soon end it all. But I don't think so. There's a place for both."

Government has responded to the evidently still-lively public interest in reading with increasing appropriations.

Mrs. Johnson said local, state and federal spending to support library operations, not including construction funds, totaled more than $19.6 million in fiscal 1975-76. The following year the figure rose to more than $22 million.

All the same, Mrs. Johnson said, it isn't enough.

While North Carolina ranks fairly high among the states in state aid to public libraries, and the number of public library books is growing, there aren't enough books in them by national library standards.

Last year there were 7.4 million books on the shelves, or about 1.46 for every man, woman and child in the state. Mrs. Johnson said the American Library Association standard is two books per person.

In addition to books, Mrs. Johnson said libraries are short of staff and more money is needed for construction since federal funds from the Library Services and Construction Act have run out.

"All the same, we continue to build libraries, and there are some under way right now, including several very substantial ones," she said. "There's the Pack Memorial Library in Asheville, and another large one being planned in Wilmington and a new one going up in Durham."

She said that in addition to continued growth of the reading public, businesses and other institutions are making increasing use of public libraries for research projects.

Conducting Revival Here

The Rev. Ronald Creech and the Living Hope Quartet will conduct a weekend revival Feb. 17-19 at the Grace Free Will Baptist Church, according to the Rev. Roger Tripp, pastor.

Director of development at Free Will Baptist Bible College, Nashville, Tenn., the Rev. Creech is a native of Kenly. He graduated from the college in 1948 and has pastored in North and South Carolinas, Virginia, Kentucky and Mississippi. He was state evangelist for the N. C. State Association of Free Will Baptists for 10 and a half years before accepting his present position.

Services will begin nightly at 7:30 and the public is invited to attend.

Pitt GOP Hears East

Dr. John East, North Carolina National Republican Committeeman, spoke to the Pitt County Republicans at their meeting on Feb. 13.

East spoke on the National Committee meeting held in Washington, D.C., in January. He stated that the interest in the race for vice chairman of the National Committee between Gloria Toote of New York and Mary Crisp of Arizona was discussed. East also reported on the discussion over the Panama Canal Treaty issue.

Jackie Speight told the members about the formation of the Young Republican Club and that its their first meeting was well attended. It was also reported that a newsletter will be sent out to all registered Republicans this month.

The Pitt County Republicans meet the second Monday of each month at 8 p.m. at the Home Savings & Loan Building on Evans Street. Interested persons should contact Mrs. Ted Ellis at 756-1623.

Extension Courses Set In Greene Unit

SNOW HILL — Preregistration is now underway for non-credit extension courses to be offered in the spring quarter at the Greene County Unit of Lenoir Community College.

The new quarter begins March 6. Students interested in attending either day or night extension classes are urged to preregister to insure a place in classes. Formal registration will be held from March 6-17.

A variety of arts and crafts, homemaker services, vocational, and general interest courses are being offered.

Vocational courses include welding, brick masonry, small engine repair, carpentry, nurses aide, farm machine repair.

Among homemaker courses are quilting, drapery making, and sewing classes.

Arts and crafts classes will include art and sketching, needlepoint, ceramics, embroidery, macrame and knitting, among many others.

General interest courses include Bible survey, first aid, estate planning, interior design, and house plant care.

Some classes will be given at the Walstonburg Community Center, with others to be offered at Smith's, Ceramics in La Grange, at Mewborn's Crossroad, Shine, and Arba.

Classes are open to persons 18 years old or older, with tuition free to those over 65.

BAKER, Mont. (AP) — For 7-year-old Kristi Sikorski, a week-long blizzard means a ride with daddy on the family snow plow. But her father, rancher Jerry Sikorski, looks across the vast expanses of snowed-in cattle country with a somber eye that sees trouble.

"You ask if a crisis is coming? Hell, we've had a crisis for a week," Sikorski told a newsman who arrived in a helicopter Tuesday, the first sunny day after a week-long blizzard that left 20-foot-high snow drifts in some places.

"She's already missed 35 days of school this winter," Sikorski said of his daughter.

Montana's cattle are dying. Feed supplies are short and getting shorter. Many ranchers who have feed can't get it to their animals. Some herds are already calving in winter pastures that have been covered by snow for nearly 11 weeks.

Sikorski, whose family is virtually isolated on a 7,500-acre spread just west of the Montana-North Dakota border, said his ranch is luckier than some others because he has heavy equipment to churn through drifts.

"We still lost four calves during the two days. We just couldn't make it a half-mile from the house to the feedlot," he said.

Montana National Guard helicopters have been flying emergency missions since last week, transporting food, fuel and other things to those cut off by snow. Gov. Thomas Judge has called on the federal government for disaster assistance.

Five highway deaths have been blamed on poor road conditions since last week, but no other weather-related deaths have been reported.

At a meeting in Helena Tuesday, state officials decided against starting an emergency haylift. Officials said original estimates of 5,000 dead cattle and sheep were revised downward to about 800 cattle and 500 sheep.

Snow flurries were predicted today.

"This is the worst winter anybody has ever seen around here," said Sikorski. "I just can't believe it."

WASHINGTON (AP) — Weary of the winter weather? Don't expect to be warmed much by the next 30 days' outlook.

The National Weather Service is forecasting more bad weather for just about every part of the country through March 15, such as:

—Below-average temperatures and above-normal precipitation in the East, where it's already been unusually cold and extraordinarily snowy and where added power demands may hasten electrical cutbacks due to coal shorages caused by the nationwide coal strike.

—Heavy precipitation in the West, including California, which already has had excessive rainfall.

—Below-normal precipitation in the southern and central Great Plains, where it's already been uncomfortably dry.

"Clearly this winter has already surpassed last year for storms and snowfall in the Northeast and Midwest," said Dr. Donald L. Gilman, chief of the long-range prediction group at the National Weather Service.

Now, Gilman said Tuesday, the eastern half of the country is experiencing the kind of severe cold spell that made last winter the coldest in at least 60 years.

"We're entering a period when it was heating up a year ago," Gilman said. Overall, this winter hasn't been as cold as last year, but it could "catch up," depending on how cold it is during the next several weeks, he added.

The cold-weather outlook is certain to cause worries in states in which electric utilities with coal-fired plants face dwindling supplies because of the 72-day strike by the United Mine Workers.

The new 30-day outlook predicts precipitation will be above normal in the western half of the nation and the Gulf and Atlantic coast states, and below normal in the Midwest and Great Plains.

Gilman said many cities in the eastern half of the country already have received snowfalls "150 percent or more above normal."

And, in California, only recently recovered from a severe, two-year drought, rainfall this winter is four to seven inches above normal, causing flooding and mudslides that have taken numerous lives.

By contrast, winter precipitation is one to two inches below normal in states such as Texas, Oklahoma and Kansas. That pattern began with a fairly dry summer in 1977 and is expected to continue, Gilman said.

The outlook calls for colder than normal temperatures east of the Rockies and south of the Great Lakes, warmer than normal west of the Rockies, and normal temperatures north of Chicago and in a narrow strip along the Rockies.

"The eastern half of the country has gotten within 10 to 15 percent of the degree days of last winter," said Gilman.

Degree days are the number of degrees each day in which the temperature is below 65.

"But the area of cold is much larger than last year," he said. "It includes the Great Plains west of the Continental Divide — the Dakotas, Eastern Montana, Wyoming, Kansas, Nebraska."

He said temperatures this winter are running 15 percent colder than normal.

Jones Elected To ABFP Bd.

ECU News Bureau

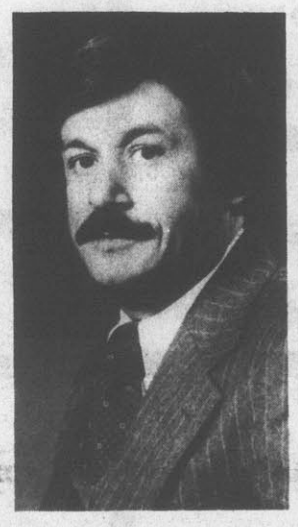

Dr. James G. Jones, professor and chairman of the Department of Family Practice, East Carolina University School of Medicine, has been appointed to the board of directors of the American Board of Family Practice (ABFP), the certifying agency in the United States for the specialty of family practice.

As a board member, Jones will represent the interests of the American Academy of Family Physicians, a professional group representing 37,000 practitioners.

The board of directors, composed of nine family physicians elected for five-year terms, is the policy-making body of the ABFP. The board is responsible for establishing guidelines for residency programs in the U.S. and assuring the quality of training for family physicians.

Jones is past president of the N.C. Academy of Family Physicians and a delegate to the American Academy of Family Physicians. For the last six years he has been a member of the American Academy's Commission on Education.

Prior to joining the ECU faculty Jones, who also serves as director of the family practice residency program and the Eastern Carolina Family Practice Center, was in private practice in Jacksonville, N.C. He also holds an appointment as associate clinical professor of family medicine at the University of North Carolina - Chapel Hill.

Vet Opposes Using Wild Animals As Family Pets

By TOM UHLENBROCK

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — A mountain lion in need of an inoculation and a boa constrictor troubled with irregularity are among the problems Dr. Denise Dietsch has treated as a partner in an exotic animal clinic.

"It was pretty sweet," Miss Dietsch said of the 150-pound lion. "You try to muzzle one of those guys and you're going to cause more problems. You'll put panic into it.

"Just treat it easy, take it slow and you don't have too much trouble. I took its temperature and checked its heartbeat. It snapped at the owner while I was looking it over but not when I was giving it shots."

Miss Dietsch, 26, expected to be working at a routine dog-and-cat hospital after graduation from the University of Missouri. Then she met William Boever while doing graduate work. He needed a partner for his Stonegate Animal Clinic.

Boever is staff veterinarian at the St. Louis Zoo. His private clinic specializes in more unusual pets.

"We get quite a few referrals from other clinics and vets," Miss Dietsch said. "Other clinics don't handle these types of animals and we do.

"We commonly see squirrels, skunks, raccoons, ferrets, a wide variety of birds and macaws, a few birds of prey; mostly turtles, iguanas and boas in the reptile family and a few monkeys. And we had our first kinkajou last week."

Most of the animals are as domesticated as a wild animal can become with human handling. Miss Dietsch said she hasn't had many unusual problems with her patients.

"When you see an exotic, you're expecting trouble and you're ready for it," she said. "Also, most people who have the exotics know how to handle them. I've had more problems with domestic cats and dogs. They come in and you expect them to be friendly."

She does have a few battle wounds.

"A girl found an owl with a broken wing on the side of the road and brought it in. Normally, I'll use leather gloves when working with thse guys, but this one was lying so quietly and you can't feel much with gloves.

"I was trying to find where the break was and I guess I hit just the right spot. It lit into me with both talons, grabbed the skin and had it clamped together down to the bone. I lost feeling in one finger for about three or four months."

The constipated boa constrictor is one of her favorite topics of conversation, she said with a laugh. "Boas will quit eating; we take care of that with vitamin injections. And sometimes they'll get constipated, so you just give the snake an enema to get him going again. We had one in here that was about 18 feet long.

"I even had a lady call up and say a friend was going to give her an Asian puff adder. She wanted to know if I'd remove the poison sacs. I said, 'No way, lady. Stay away from me with that thing.'"

Then, there was the man who found a cat on his front porch.

"He lives just across the way and walked in with it in his arms. He said he didn't think it was a housecat. Well, it was a bobcat, about two weeks old. It was darling.

"He wanted to keep it so I gave him the name of one of our regular clients who raises wild cats. I said talk to him and learn exactly what you're getting yourself into.

"Typically, they bring them in when they're cute little kittens. Three months later, they bring them back to have the claws removed. A couple of months later, they want to have the canines removed.

"By the time the thing's full grown, they decide it's not as much fun as they thought it would be. And no zoo wants an animal without claws or fangs to protect itself when you put it in with animals of the same breed."

Like most veterinarians who treat wild animals, Miss Dietsch does not recommend exotic animals as pets.

"We take care of them because people still insist on getting them and they need doctors as much as dogs and cats. But if people call and ask me what I think about it I say, 'Don't. Please don't.'

"Some people are lucky. They'll get a skunk or raccoon that's pretty easy to handle. But most wild animals get pretty nasty when they reach maturity."

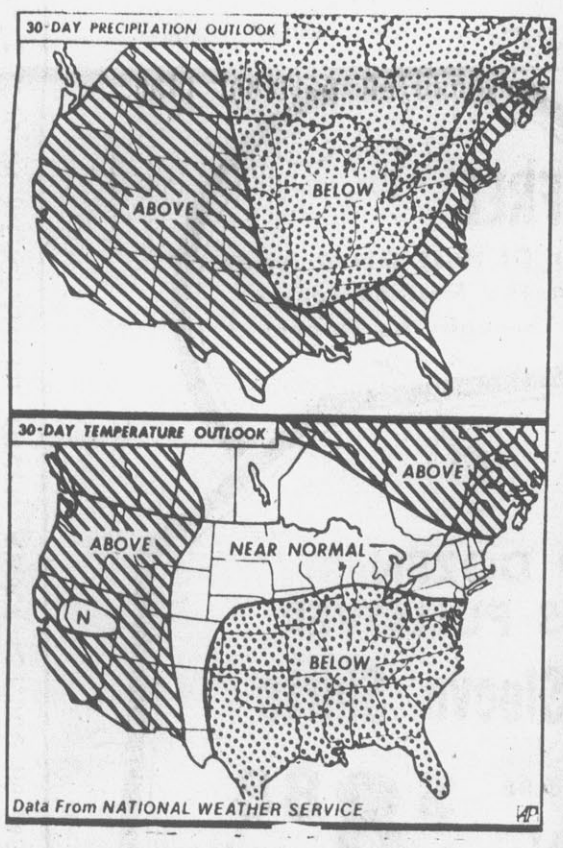

Designs Are Being Used

Terri Eloshway of Goldsboro, a senior in the School of Art, East Carolina University, is the designer of a number of items used throughout North Carolina.

She designed the schedule stationery for Gov. Jim Hunt as part of her duties while a designer with information services, N. C. Dept. of Administration, working through the Cooperative Education program at ECU.

Other items which she designed are publications for the state, including a pamphlet for the N. C. Bureau of Indian Affairs, a bookmark for the Office of Citizens Affairs, a booklet for the N. C. Community Watch Program, and other booklets, brochures, and stickers for doors and windows for different departments of state government.

Ms. Eloshway represented ECU as a member of the student panel at the N. C. Cooperative Education Association convention held in Raleigh last October. She has also been elected to "Who's Who in American Colleges and Universities" for 1977-78.

Earthquakes Are Located, Measured And Reported

By DAN CHISZAR

GOLDEN, Colo. (UPI) — The earth rumbled and shook beneath the leafy, mountainous jungles of western New Guinea in the southwest Pacific Ocean.

The earth's crust strained, bent, and then, when the stress exceeded the strength of the rocks, it snapped to a new position. Seismic waves quivered through the planet's surface like ripples in a pond.

Needles jumped on delicate seismographs around the globe, and alarms rang in the bedrooms of scientists tending seismic observatories at Guam; Honolulu; Palmer, Alaska, and Newport, Wash.

The quake, a serious one, registered 7.1 on the Richter Scale. Observatory reports were relayed to Newport, and a scientist there reached for a telephone.

Half a world distant from the rumble, geophysicist Waverly Person sat in front of a television set at his home in Boulder, Colo. It was about 8 p.m., Oct. 29, 1976, when his telephone rang with the call from Newport.

Person jotted down the quake's magnitude, coordinates, measurements of seismic waves and what time they were taken. He went upstairs to his study and sat at the desk.

He plugged a portable computer terminal into the telephone receiver, dialed into a Denver computer and typed out the information.

Back came a latitude and longitude. Person reached to his left, amid the bookish clutter on the floor around his chair, for his world atlas. His finger moved to 4.5 degrees south and 140 degrees east — west New Guinea.

Earthquakes are common in New Guinea, lying in the infamous "Ring of Fire" volcanic earthquake belt encircling the Pacific Ocean. Person knew this, and asked the computer when the last serious quakes had occurred in the region. Back came the figures on a printout.

Person then telephoned the wire services and gave the world detailed, technical information about the earthquake 2½ hours after it had occurred.

Reports of the 133 persons killed in the tremor would not come for several days out of the dense jungles. Only then would the National Earthquake Information Service know of them.

Waverly Person is one of 10 geophysicists alternately on standby when the NEIS is closed at night. Their work days are spent with colleagues at a U.S. Geological Survey building on the Colorado School of Mines campus in Golden.

The NEIS, foremost collector of earthquake information in the world, operates on the top floor of the four-story, white, brick building overlooking foothills of the Rocky Mountains.

Prediction of earthquakes is not the concern of scientists at the NEIS; that's done at the National Center for Earthquake Research in Menlo Park, Calif. "Our main function here is the location of earthquakes worldwide," said Person.

Each day, geophysicists at the NEIS routinely locate significant earthquakes around the world, about 6,000 annually. They determine magnitudes, intensity of shaking, location of quake epicenters and other technical information. The facility's location, far from shakey California, means the NEIS would continue to function during any major rumblings along the notorious San Andreas Fault.

The NEIS receives reports from the 116-station Worldwide Standarized Seismograph Network, a 63-station network of seismographs in the Soviet Union and about 2,150 additional stations throughout the world. Bulletins of earthquake data are published regularly and distributed to the seismological community.

During the day, any earthquake of 6.5 magnitude and higher anywhere in the world trips an alarm in NEIS offices. At such times, Branch Chief E.R. Engdahl, Person and several others gather in the War Room, on the south end of the building.

Seismicity maps cover the east wall, and a faded, green 32-inch diameter globe stands near the window. In one corner is a teletype, next to a wooden rack crammed with atlases. Nearby, on a long table, are telephones and a computer terminal.

It was in the War Room that geophysicists first learned how serious was the earthquake that occurred last July 27 in the Tang-Shan area of China.

"We knew it had to be dangerous," said Person. "We knew the magnitude (8.0), and we knew it was near the surface, and we knew it was in a populated area. The damage extended as far as Peking."

When the government of China finally released casualty figures, more than 655,000 persons were reported killed and 799,000 injured. It was the second deadliest earthquake in recorded history, since 830,000 persons died in a quake in the Shansi Province of China in 1556.

Since the last China earthquake, Person said the general public has taken to thinking that earthquakes are occurring more frequently. But, he said, "It's just that we've had earthquakes in populated areas this year.

"People call in and say: 'Oh, we're having a lot more earthquakes.' It's not the case, not at all. We're just having them in populated areas."

CHRISTMAS-PLANNING — Luz Calvillo displays one of the reasons this 51-inch high doll is named "Big Foot" during the 1978 Toy Fair in New York City. The annual exposition by the nation's toymakers opened amid growing indications the government intends new regulations of advertising aimed at children. And, while most Americans are concerned with paying the bills of Christmas past, the toymakers are busy planning production for Christmas 1978. (AP Laserphoto)

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market declined again today amid concern over the economic outlook and the continuing coal strike.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials fell 2.34 to 762.82 in the first half hour.

Losers outpaced gainers by about a 3-2 margin among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Coal industry officials today rejected President Carter's call for an immediate resumption of negotiations between the industry and the United Mine Workers.

Analysts noted recent warnings from the auto industry and elsewhere that the 72-day-old coal strike could soon begin to disrupt economic activity.

The market also was faced with continuing concern over reports that some early-warning signals were pointing toward a possible slowing of economic growth.

Royal Dutch Petroleum was the early volume leader among NYSE issues, down ⅛ at 56. An 80,000-share block traded at that price.

On Tuesday the Dow Jones industrial average fell 9.27 to 765.16, finishing the day just above the 33-month low of 763.34 it touched on Jan. 26.

Losers outnumbered gainers by more than a 2-1 margin on the NYSE.

Big Board volume picked up to 20.47 million shares from 16.81 million Monday.

The NYSE's composite index dropped .43 to 49.47.

On the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was off .74 at 123.67.

Street Is Closed By Grifton Board

GRIFTON — The Grifton Town Board last night voted to close East Street following a public hearing.

According to Town Clerk Nan Smith, no one appeared at the hearing to contest the closing of the street, so the resolution was adopted. Board members also adopted a resolution to construct a new road parallel to East Street which would run to the town limits. Officials did not say when construction would begin. The Free Will Baptist Church had previously requested the closing of East Street in order that the church might make an additions to its facilities.

In other business, the Grifton Jaycees notified the Board that they would match town funds to be used for building a new recreation building and a park. The Jaycees also said that they would be responsible for labor.

The Board also discussed plans for a new structure to house the Fire and Police Departments. The proposed building would be constructed on the vacant town lot. Smith said that plans for the new building are still "in the beginning stages."

Members also moved to adopt a resolution favoring Pitt County's stand on the Land Use Program.

Delay Hearing On Extradition

SAVANNAH, Ga. (AP) — An extradition hearing for a 16-year-old Port Wentworth, Ga., girl charged with murder in North Carolina has been postponed until Friday.

North Carolina authorities are seeking the return of Karen Lynn Batton, charged with murder in the 1977 slayings of Mrs. Myrtis Miller and her 3-year-old granddaughter, Crystal Dawn Miller.

The hearing was scheduled for Tuesday but a Superior Court judge granted the delay to allow prosecutors additional time to obtain testimony that Miss Batton was in Lexington, N.C., on Feb. 10, 1977, when the two victims were stabbed to death.

Insanity Is Jury Ruling

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — A jury of seven men and five women deliberated for a little more than two hours before ruling that former Bethesda School principal Clarence C. Blanton was legally insane when he held 32 educators hostage for several hours at gunpoint.

Superior Court Judge Henry A. McKinnon was to decide today whether to commit Blanton to a regional mental hospital, to require him to get psychiatric treatment on an outpatient basis, or to set him free unconditionally.

Blanton was declared innocent by reason of insanity of kidnapping and assault charges stemming from the incident which occurred at a faculty meeting called Nov. 3 to inform teachers that Blanton was being relieved as principal at Bethesda.

Blanton and members of his family showed little emotion when the verdict was returned Tuesday. The jury foreman, Paul Vick, a Duke University official, said Blanton was insane at the time of the incident.

A court order barring the former principal from the Bethesda campus, the Durham County School system's administrative offices and from residences of teachers and administrators remained in effect today pending the judge's decision. The $10,000 bond also remained in effect.

The jury returned to the courtroom once during its deliberation to ask the judge to define sanity versus insanity, and to explain what degree of certainty was necessary to find the defendant insane.

McKinnon told the jurors the defense did not have to prove insanity beyond a reasonable doubt. He said that if at the time of the crime, the defendant was considered incapable of understanding the nature of the act or whether it was right or wrong, the decision would be that the defendant was not sane.

Blanton faced a maximum sentence of 187 years in prison if he had been convicted of the seven counts of non-aggravated kidnapping and six charges of assault with a deadly weapon.

Club Launches Drive, Balloons

The Health Horizon Club began their fund-raising efforts for this year's Heart Fund Campaign with a Valentine's Day Balloon Sale at Rose High School.

Club members will be selling balloons to the general public on Saturday, Feb. 18, and on Saturday, Feb. 25, at Pitt Plaza and Greenville Square. Proceeds will be used for education and rehabilitation programs and for cardiovascular research.

"We hope to combine our fund-raising efforts with efforts to educate the public on the dangers and causes of heart and blood vessel diseases," said Mary Catherine Hanifer, Health Horizon Club president.

Bucs Get Revenge Over Old Dominion

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

NORFOLK, Va. — February 14 was Valentine's Day, but last night certainly wasn't a night that Valentine enjoyed.

Valentine, Ronnie, that is, is the sweetheart of Old Dominion University, and his play along with that of Richie Wright, drove East Carolina University crazy two weeks ago in Minges Coliseum, as the Monarchs took a 112-81 win, the worst licking the Pirates have gotten this year.

But Coach Larry Gillman insisted that it was not a true picture of what the Pirates were like. Last night, the Pirates proved him right, ripping the Monarchs on their home court, the Scope floor, 78-72.

Oliver Mack, who suffered through a horrible first half, hitting just one of nine shots, came back to finish with a game-high 32 points in leading the win.

Valentine finished with 27, but had little help. Wright, who hit 26 against the Pirates the first time, was cut off entirely, hitting just four points.

Mack, after missing his tenth shot of the game in the second half, came back to toss in 11 of his next 14. Overall, he was 12 of 24 for 50 percent. He also hit eight of nine at the line and had three rebounds and three assists.

Herb Gray, who added 20 points, led the Pirates in rebounding with 10. Overall, however, the Pirates were out-rebounded by the Monarchs, 39-33, with Valentine getting 13.

East Carolina shot a blazing 76 per cent in the second half, after a poor 41.7 in the first, to finish with a very respectable 59.2 per cent. Old Dominion, harried by some of the best defense the Pirates have played this year, shot only 39.5 percent.

"We worked hard for this one," Gillman said afterwards. "Maybe someone doesn't want to fire me any more," he referred to reports that his job was in jeopardy.

"You've got to give the credit to the kids," he continued. "We played well and we did a good job mentally.

"We knew we had to stop Valentine from getting the ball, and I think we did a pretty good job on him. He scored a lot but Herb Gray did an excellent job of defense." Valentine hit on 10 of 26 shots, getting about half of them on offensive rebounds.

"We also had to stop Wright's penetration, and we were very effective in doing that. We did a good job on the boards, too, when we had to."

Gillman praised Mack's comeback in the second half. "I didn't say a thing to him. He's the kind of kid who knows what he has to do. He just showed why he's All-America caliber by coming back like he did."

Mack said he didn't know what caused him the troubles in the first half. "I'm just now sure," he said. "I was getting open for my shots, but they just didn't drop. Maybe it was just having to adjust to playing in a big place like that after so many smaller gyms."

The victory was the fourth in a row for the Pirates and raised their record to 8-14 on the year. Old Dominion fell off to 11-11.

"We lost to UT-Chattanooga, we lost to UNC-Wilmington, and we lost to Old Dominion and we came back and beat them," Gillman pointed out. "I think this shows that we have a lot of young players who can come back and do the job. We're still learning, but we're finally doing the right things.

"We handled their press very well. I don't think they got but about one turnover out of it, and we scored nearly everytime. We just know what to do now against the press," Gillman said.

Old Dominion grabbed the initial lead, but East Carolina took it at 6-4 on a rebounding shot by Gray. He then tossed in two more baskets to run the Pirate lead out to 10-4.

That held until midway through the period, when Old Dominion closed to one, then finally took the lead with 4:44 left on a jumper by Reese Neyland, 25-24. The Pirates got it back on two Mack free throws, but Bobby Vaughan got a steal with 41 seconds left for a 31-30 lead at the half.

"We put in our freshmen at the end of the half, and they tried to blow 'em out right away," Gillman said. "Instead of leading by three or four, we were down by one."

But in the second half, the Pirates came out and outhit the Monarchs, 16-2, during the first five minutes, forging a 46-33 lead. The scoring was spread out over that period, with Herb Krusen and Mack the only ones with more than two, both hitting four.

Old Dominion fought back, cutting the lead to eight at 62-54 on a four-point play after a technical was called on Gillman.

"I really don't think I deserved it," he said afterwards. "My understanding is that when time is out, as long as you are at your bench, you can do what you like. I was down on one knee, gesturing for walking on the call they made."

After the game, he spoke with the official who called the "T," and was told that he was using a towel at the time of the call. "That tended to incite," the official told him. "If you had not had the towel, we wouldn't have called it," the official added.

Still, the Pirates were able to maintain their lead, until Neyland hit with 4:01 left to cut it to four, 66-62. East Carolina went back out by eight on two charity shots by Don Whitaker and a jumper by Mack, and held that until Tom Conrad hit four straight at the line with 2:03 and 1:53 left to trim it to 74-70.

But Gray hit two at the line, and Whitaker followed with two more, the latter at 26 seconds, to put it at 78-70, and two free throws by Neyland finished the job for Old Dominion, closing it to the final six-point spread with three seconds left.

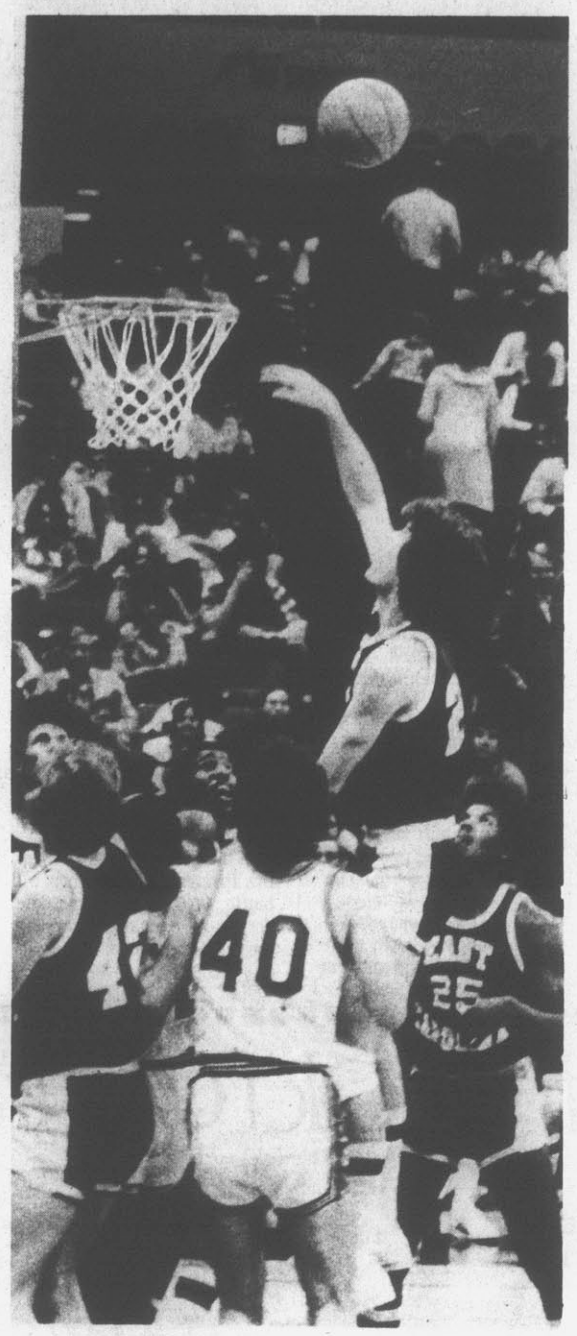

In addition to Mack and Gray's scoring, Krusen added 12. Old Dominion was helped by Conrad with 15 and Neyland with 13.

East Carolina is now idle until Monday, when it closes out its home schedule against Georgia Southern.

The Pirates will be seeking their fifth straight victory in that contest.

Leap For Two

Martin Takes Two Victories

EDENTON — Martin Academy won a pair of games from Chowan Academy last night. Martin won the girls' game, 53-32, while the Pioneers took the boys' game, 76-51.

In the girls' contest, Martin romped away to a 21-6 lead in the first period. Martin slowed in the second frame, but continued to advance, holding a 32-12 halftime lead.

The Lady Pioneers added to their lead in the third quarter, advancing to a 46-24 lead. Chowan outhit Martin, 8-7, in the final period.

Gay Griffin led Martin with 17 points, while Lib Johnson had 14.

In the boys' game, Martin also jumped away to a big lead, 19-9, at the end of the first quarter. They continued to power their way past Chowan, 24-11, in the second frame, holding a 43-20 halftime margin.

Chowan rallied in the third period, 18-12, and cut the lead to 55-38. Martin ran away again, 21-13, in the final period.

Grady Smith led Martin with 23, while Clif Haislip had 19 and Victor VanNortwick had 18. Willis Byrum led Chowan with 14, while Art Lane had 11 and Mark Noeman had 10.

Martin's girls and JV travel to Pace tonight.

Aycock Gets Win

Billy Dough sank a pair of free throws with 10 seconds left to lift E. B. Aycock over Goldsboro 65-63 yesterday afternoon.

The victory raised the Jaguars' record to 7-5 for the season.

Aycock was led by Don Jackson with 13 points, John Sheppard with 12 and John Barrett with 10. Barrett sparked an Aycock rally with eight points in the fourth quarter.

Goldsboro's Henry Coley led all scorers with 27, while Haywood Sykes scored 10.

Appalachian Tops Pirates

BOONE — Depth proved a problem for the East Carolina gymnastics team last night at Appalachian State as the Lady Pirates dropped a 125.10 to 99.10 decision to the Lady Mountaineers.

Mary Hubbard and Susan McKnight were the bright spots for the Lady Pirates, as both recorded some excellent scores. McKnight's best finish was in the balance beam, where she finished second with an 8.10 mark. Hubbard finished second in the floor exercises and was third in the overall competition.

Appalachian was led by Dey Yeager, who finished first overall, and Valerie Striggow, who claimed second place.

East Carolina, which dropped to 2-3 with the loss, will be in action again Friday when it hosts Longwood College and Georgia College in a tri-meet at Minges Coliseum.

Summary:

Vaulting: Dey Yeager (AS) 8.50; Nisa Northrup (AS) 8.40; Mary Hubbard (EC) 7.80.

Uneven bars: Valerie Striggow (AS) 8.50; Beth Wilson (AS) 8.20; Mary Hubbard (EC) and Dey Yeager (AS), tie, 7.90.

TONI CONCENTRATES

HOUSTON (AP) — Toni Frisch, who kicks field goals and extra points for the Houston Oilers, was a professional soccer player in his native Austria. He was schooled in pressure situations before he came to the United States.

"I played before crowds of 100,000 people in soccer games in Austria," Toni said. "When I am called on to kick a field goal in the National Football League I have to give it my entire concentration. I cannot allow myself to worry about the crowd, the wind, or the grass. What can I do if the grass is too high, call time out and ask that it be cut?

Panthers Upset Vikes; Jags In Win

Rebound Action

D. H. Conley and North Pitt players battle on the boards for a rebound in last night's 56-53 upset victory for the Panthers. Joining in the fight are Ricky Rountree (22) and Kenny Phillips (40) for Conley and Lawaskia Jenkins (55) for North Pitt. Darryl Thompson (20) looks on. (Reflector photo by Tom Baines)

WHEAT SWAMP — North Pitt pulled the first big upset of the Eastern Carolina Conference tournament last night as the Panthers defeated Tyson-less D. H. Conley 56-53.

The victory was the second in a row for North Pitt, seeded seventh, over the second-place Vikings. The Panthers defeated Conley with 6-10 Al Tyson, who was out sick last night, during the regular season.

North Pitt's win came in the third game of the evening. In the first game, Farmville Central's boys rolled over Greene Central 62-37 and C. B. Aycock's girls routed North Lenoir 64-46 behind points.

Tonight's action features two more first-round games and one second-round contest. In the 5:30 game, Ayden-Grifton's boys will meet Southern Nash. Greene Central's girls face Farmville Central at 7 and North Lenoir's boys play Farmville Central in a semi-final game at 8:30.

FC Boys 58, GC 37

The Jaguars took advantage of a 23.2 per cent shooting night for Greene Central to easily defeat the Rams and eliminate them from further play.

Calvin Horne got eight points in the first quarter as Farmville moved out to a 16-10 lead, and a Greene Central press resulted in a number of fast break layups for the Jags.

Despite a low-scoring second quarter, in which Farmville committed eight turnovers, the Jaguars were able to take a 24-17 lead into the dressing room at halftime.

Farmville continued to get the ball out quickly in the third quarter and two straight fast breaks by James Tyson gave the Jags a 32-17 lead.

Greene Central began to press after James Tyson's layup with 5:06 left in the third, but the Rams were cold from the field, hitting only two of 16 third-quarter attempts, and Farmville held a 42-26 lead going into the fourth quarter.

The Jaguars quickly built up a 20-point lead on three straight follow shots and coasted to their 25-point victory.

Despite 22 turnovers, Farmville coach Mike Terrell said the game was the best his team has played all year.

"We still made some turnovers," Terrell said, "but as far as our general game, I felt like it was our best game of the year.

"I think the fast break was the key. We took advantage of more things tonight. They didn't have a good game, and that makes you look good."

Horne paced the Farmville Central scoring with 16 points, Donald Freeman scored 14 and Donald Reid 10. Johnny Croom had 11 to lead Greene Central.

Terrell isn't conceding anything to North Lenoir. The top-seeded Hawks will face the Jaguars tonight. "We played North Lenoir one time before and had a good shot to beat them. We still feel like we're capable of beating them."

NP Boys 56, DHC 53

Despite the absence of Al Tyson, the Vikings were able to build up a seven-point lead in the third quarter, but North Pitt battled back to take the lead in the final period and grab a 56-53 win over D. H. Conley.

The game was close the entire way. Ricky Rountree, who took over for Tyson, scored six first-quarter points, while Shawn Little added four, to stake the Vikes to a 13-9 lead

Henry Knight hit three free throws and Terry Shelton canned a shot from the lane to give North Pitt a 14-13 lead, but Mike Cox scored from the baseline and hit two free throws to put Conley back in front and the Vikings held a 25-22 margin at the half.

Rountree and David Brock each hit follow shots to stretch the Conley margin to seven points, 29-22, but William Knight scored six third-quarter points to lead a North Pitt comeback and the Panthers trailed by just one, 35-34, going into the final quarter.

Shelton scored on two drives early in the final period to give the Panthers the lead, and they never gave it up, scoring their last six points on free throws as the frustrated Vikings began to foul.

Shelton scored 14 points, William Knight 13, Lawaskia Jenkins 12 and Reginald Knight 10 for North Pitt, while Conley was led by Rountree with 18 and Cox with 12.

"I was going to play golf tomorrow," a happy Panther coach Cobby Deans said. Now he will have to prepare for the Panthers, semi-final game against the winner of tonight's Ayden-Grifton-Southern Nash matchup.

Deans, surprisingly, said he was more worried before the game about playing Conley without Tyson than with him. He said the Panthers get up for playing against the big center and he was concerned they might not play as hard. But, he said of Tyson's absence, "No doubt, that was the difference."

Deans said his team played well in spurts and "for once, we recognized what they were doing. We took the good shot and we made the good shot."

Not taking good shots was Conley's downfall, according to Viking coach Shelly Marsh. "We were just in a gift-giving mood; North Pitt did a good job, but we just beat ourselves. We worked well in the third quarter and got a seven-point lead by working the ball inside, but then we took a couple of 30-footers that weren't even close."

North Pitt scored after those shots, and the Conley defense broke down, Marsh said.

The Viking coach said he wasn't going to use Tyson's illness as an excuse, and that back-up sophomore center David Brock "did an outstanding job."

But the Vikes got away from their game plan, and didn't get the kind of leadership they needed on the floor, Marsh explained.

GCA Tops Grace

Greenville Christian Academy romped to an 88-59 victory over Grace Academy last night.

Greenville Christian about put the game on ice in the first quarter, roaring out to a 24-9 lead.

They continued to pull away in the second period, outhitting Grace, 19-14, to build the lead to 43-23 by halftime.

Grace chipped a point off the lead in the third period, but was still far back, 63-44, as the final quarter got underway.

Greenville outhit Grace, 25-15, in the final period to win going away.

Tim Sutton led Greenville with 30 points, while Melvin Wooten added 24 and Steve Tyburski had 11. Tim Davis had 26 to lead Grace, while Hobert Sanderson added 22.

Greenville Christian travels to Faith Academy on Friday.

Georgia Tech Upsets Cards

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

The Louisville Cardinals, the nation's ninth-ranked college basketball team, marched to the beat of a different Drummer Tuesday night and were drummed right out of the lead in the Metro 7 Conference.

This Drummer, named Sammy scored 25 points to go with Tico Brown's 24 as Georgia Tech shot a school record 66 percent — 31 of 47 — and upset Louisville 69-59.

Louisville Coach Denny Crum was properly impressed. "Drummer hit some shots mere mortals don't make," he said. "He ought to sign pro."

Actually, that 66 percent was a bit of a comedown from the first 25 minutes, when the Yellow Jackets buzzed away at a sizzling 77 percent clip.

"They played as good as they can play," Crum said, "and when you shoot that well, you usually win. It was amazing. On a lot of their shots we were all over them."

What really was amazing was that Louisville stayed as close as it did in the face of such bombing. They sliced an 11-point halftime deficit to 56-55 with 5:49 remaining but Tech outscored the Cardinals 13-4 the rest of the way. Brown had three baskets and Drummer scored five points during the final minutes.

The setback snapped a five-game winning streak for Louisville, 16-4 overall and 7-2 in the Metro 7 heading into Friday night's showdown against 12th-ranked Florida State, which is 8-1 in the league.

"I don't know if we were looking ahead to FSU or what," Crum said, "but we didn't play that well. I thought Tech played a super game. They did everything you have to do."

In the only other contests involving members of The Associated Press Top Twenty, second-ranked Marquette downed Wisconsin 75-64, No. 5 New Mexico trimmed Hawaii 87-69 and No. 13 Providence nipped Niagara 72-70 in overtime.

Marquette used its superior quickness and Butch Lees 29 points while smothering Wisconsin's offense with a pressure defense. Jerome Whitehead added 12 points for Marquette, 20-2 with a five-game winning streak and a 15-game domination of Wisconsin in the intrastate rivalry.

The Warriors led 41-25 at halftime and three consecutive hook shots by the 6-foot-10 Whitehead and a steal and layup by Lee opened a 61-39 spread with 11:15 to play.

Marvin Johnson scored 23 points as New Mexico, 20-2, won its 13th straight game and extended Hawaii's losing streak to 17. The Lobos tallied the game's first seven points and built their lead to as much as 14 points before settling for a 44-35 halftime lead.

Hawaii got to within six early in the second half and the Lobos led by only 59-51 with 12:58 to go. But New Mexico exploded down the stretch to run away with the contest.

Pirates Host North Carolina

After an impressive 35-16 victory over Old Dominion last week, the East Carolina wrestling team returns to action Thursday night when the Pirates host Atlantic Coast Conference rival North Carolina. The match will begin at 8 p.m. in Minges Coliseum.

The Tar Heels defeated ECU 25-15 in the first meeting of the two teams this year in Chapel Hill. North Carolina will take a 6-2 overall record into the match, while the Pirates are 3-6 this season.

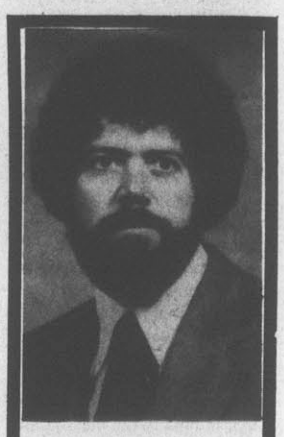

"North Carolina really took it to us in the lower weight classes in the first match," said ECU head coach Bill Hill. "Kenny Evans' victory over Paul Osman at 134 really hurt us, and it certainly turned the match around for them. We've got to do better in the lower weights and dominate the upper weight classes like we did in the first match if we hope to beat them.

The victory over Old Dominion last Friday snapped a two-match losing streak for the Pirates, who had lost both matches to N. C. State. State defeated Carolina twice this season.

"I think our fans could really make the difference this time," noted Hill. "The match in Chapel Hill earlier in the season was extremely close. One or two breaks and we could have just as easily won."

Several key match-ups will pit ECU's Bob Passino against UNC's Bobby Monahan at 118, while Jay Dever will square off against UNC's Dean Brior. Monahan decisioned Passino 12-6 in the first match, while Dever edged Brior 6-5.

In the heavyweight match-up, the Pirates' D. T. Joyner will battle UNC's Jody Truesdale. Joyner got a pin over Truesdale the first time around.

Bullets Win; Bears In Loss

Third-seeded Bear Grass was upset by Bath last night, while Jamesville rolled over Chocowinity 46-33 in the Beauford-Hyde-Martin girls' basketball tournament.

Molly Hopkins hit a jumper from the outside and then completed a three-point play with eight seconds left to give Bath a 35-33 victory over Bear Grass.

The third-seeded Lady Bears lost high-scoring Patricia Taylor in the second quarter with a sprained ankle. She went out with just two points and the sixth-place Lady Pirates took a 17-13 halftime lead.

Bear Grass tied the score in the third quarter, and held a one-point margin before Hopkins game-winning play.

Hopkins led all scorers with 15 points, while Beverly Morgan scored 13 for Bath. Bear Grass was paced by Jandra Crawford with 12 and Debra Jo Peaks with 11.

The Lady Bears will now prepare for the district tournament next week.

Jamesville had a strong second quarter to down Chocowinity and advance to the B-H-M tournament's semi-finals.

The Lady Bullets were up 9-6 at the end of the first quarter and outscored the Squaws 17-9 in the second period for a 26-15 lead. Jamesville then coasted in for the win.

The Lady Bullets were led by Jeannette Barber with 12 points. She had a 100 per cent game, hitting five of five from the field and two of two from the foul line. Lori Modlin and Joyce Manning each scored 10 for Jamesville.

Roanoke Tops W. Edgecombe

ROBERSONVILLE — Roanoke High School won a pair of Eastern Plains Conference games from West Edgecombe last night. The girls' took a 62-52 win, while the boys gained a 60-40 decision.

In the girls' game, Roanoke edged out into a 14-10 lead after the first period. Both teams pushed in 15 points in the second, leaving Roanoke with a 29-25 lead.

In the third, Roanoke broke away and ran its lead out to 49-35. West Edgecombe outhit them, 17-13, in the final quarter but it was not enough.

Carolyn Duggins led Roanoke with 16 points, while Yvette Modica had 15 and Barbara Bullock had 10. Rene Triplette had 18 for West Edgecombe.

The Roanoke boys managed a 12-9 lead after one period, then shot away to build up a 26-13 halftime lead over West.

Both teams matched points in the third period, which ended with the Redskins holding a 41-28 lead. Roanoke outhit the Wildcats, 19-12.

Lindsay Wilkes led Roanoke with 19, while Edward Ward had 13 and Chris Morning had 11. Ben Pope had 15 to pace the "Cats.

Roanoke entertains North Edgecombe on Friday, closing out the regular season.

Duke, State In Key ACC Battle

By The Associated Press

The Atlantic Coast Conference spotlight tonight will be on the North Carolina State-Duke game as the two teams battle to break their second-place deadlock in the league standings.

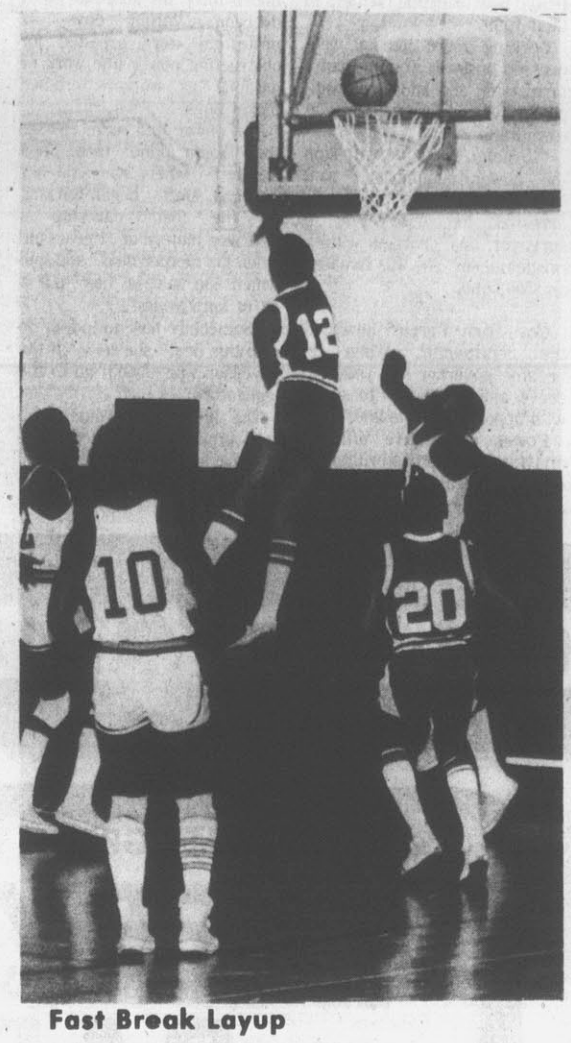

In the only other conference game tonight, cellar-dwelling Clemson will visit Virginia, which could move into third place with a victory behind the winner of the Wolfpack-Blue Devil clash.

Wake Forest will meet Davidson in a non-conference clash tonight at Winston-Salem and North Carolina — with two key players sidelined by injuries — will host Kent State.

Mike O'Koren is out with a badly sprained ankle, and center Rich Yonakor has a knee injury which could eliminate him for the rest of the season. Dave Colescott may also miss tonight's game because of the flu.

Both North Carolina State and Duke are sporting 5-3 conference records going into their confrontation tonight, with Duke enjoying the home-court edge. North Carolina is still the team to beat with a 7-2 scorecard.

The Wolfpack appears to have the edge in depth, but coach Norm Sloan said that Duke "may have the best starting five in the conference. They have one of the most powerful front lines in the nation."

Fast Break Layup

WILSON — Rose High School's Rampants, after two straight losses, rebounded last night to crush Wilson Fike High School, 107-76

The Rampette girls also came away with a victory, 58-49. Wilson won only the junior varsity encounter, 73-59.

The Rampants had trouble in the first half of the game, mainly due to their defense. Cut down to only nine players dressed due to illness, they were also hampered by the fact that Greg Guthrie was playing sick. He did not play much, however.

Because of this, the Rampant defense was forced into a zone. "We just didn't want to be too aggressive," Coach Jim Brewington said. "With so few players, we just could not afford to get into foul trouble early."

Because of this, Wilson was able to take an early lead and built up a 27-22 margin during the first period.

The Rampant offense began to warm up during the second quarter, scoring 23 points, while limiting Wilson to just 11. That turned the score around and left Rose in command, 45-38, at intermission.

"In the second half, we decided to go back to our man-to-man defense, and that really got us going," Brewington said. "We got the ball going up and down the court and put in 62 points during the half."

Rose scored 28 during the third quarter, while Wilson got ten less. That ran Rose's lead out to 73-56, going into the final period.

The Rampants got even hotter then, dumping in 34 points during the period, while Wilson was able to improve to only 20.

The 107 point total was the high for the Rampants this year.

Billy Roberson paced the Rampant scoring with 24 points, while James Hawkins had 21. William Barnes added 16 and Anthony Bryant had 12.

"Roberson played a fine game for us," Brewington said.

Barnes led the team in rebounding with 15, while Bryant had 11 and Roberson had 10.

Rose shot 52.4 per cent for the game, while Wilson made 47.5 per cent.

In the girls' game, Rose pushed out into a 16-10 lead in the first period. The Rampettes continued to lead the way in the second, running their lead out to 34-20 by the half.

Wilson put on a rally in the third quarter, outhitting Rose, 14-8, and cut the lead back to 42-34. But Rose held them off, 16-15, in the final period for the win.

"It was the best game we've played in a while," Coach Billy Byrd said. "I still think we can end up in a tie for third place. It just depends on what happens Friday."

Friday, Rose closes out the regular season, playing host to Northeastern.

Spinks Goes After Ali's Crown Tonight

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Leon Spinks, who was 11 years old when a youthful Muhammad Ali beat an aging Sonny Liston in 1964, fights Ali tonight for the world heavyweight championship in what will be the ex-Marine's eighth pro fight.

Ali was 22 and in his 20th pro fight when he won the title for the first time with a stunning seventh-round upset of Liston in Miami Beach, Fla.

"The only thing that makes this fight a big fight is his age and my age," said the 36-year-old Ali, who held a news conference Tuesday, breaking two months of public silence.

When somebody asked him how he felt about the challenger, he stared blankly and then said, "Oh, yeah, Spinks." The only other thing he said about Spinks was, "He's easy to hit with a right cross."

A victory by the 24-year-old Spinks would be equally stunning. Nevada bookmakers have not established a betting line.

There are some boxing observers, however, who feel that Spinks can pull a surprise. They feel his winning combination could be his youth and aggressiveness, combined with Ali's age and the fact that he has slipped as a fighter.

Ali's plus factors are his ability to take a punch, his long experience and his size. Ali, who stands 6-foot-3, 1½ inches taller than Spinks, will enjoy a four-inch reach advantage and a 27-pound weight advantage.

Ali officially weighed in Tuesday at 224¼, three-quarters of a pound less than wen he outpointed hard-punching Earnie Shavers last Sept. 29. Spinks weighed 197¼.

"I wish I was a little heavier," said Spinks, who is the fourth lightest opponent Ali has had in 23 title fights.

His three lightest opponents were Henry Cooper, who weighed 188, Karl Mildenberger at 194¾ and Floyd Patterson at 196¾.

The scheduled 15-rounder between the two former Olympic light heavyweight champions — Ali in 1960 and Spinks in 1976 — will begin about 7:15 p.m. PST, at the 4,500-seat Hilton Pavilion. The card also will feature a 15-round bout between Danny "Little Red" Lopez of Alhambra, Calif., the World Boxing Council featherweight champion, and David Kotay of Ghana.

The CBS telecast will run from 8 p.m. to about 11:15 p.m. EST.

Spinks, an ex-Marine from St. Louis, is getting $300,000 for his shot at really big money. His record is six victories, five by knockouts, and a 10-round draw against Scott LeDoux. In his last fight, he scored a 10-round decision over Alfio Righetti here Nov. 18, 1977.

Ali, who has a record of 55-2-0, with 37 knockouts, is getting $3.7 million for his 11th title defense since regaining the championship by knocking out George Foreman in the eighth round in Zaire in 1974. And the biggest purse of his career is being negotiated for a fight against No.1 contender Ken Norton.

Jose Sulaiman of Mexico, the WBC president, said that Ali, who must sign by April 5 to fight Norton by July 5 or be stripped of the title, has indicated he wants Norton soon. Sulaiman said he would like the fight to be in May.

Jack Back On The Tour

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Jack Nicklaus returns to the 1978 golfing tournament wars Thursday with the start of the $200,000 Glen Campbell-Los Angeles Open tournament at the Riviera Country Club, and must rate as one of the favorites.

"I'm anxious to play, but I'm really not tournament-sharp because of my rest," Nicklaus said. "I like the feeling now of wanting to play golf."

This year Nicklaus, winner of more than $3 million in purses during his career, has played only in the Bing Crosby tournament.

"It would surprise me if I could put together four rounds of winning golf," said Nicklaus of his return. "It wouldn't surprise me to win because of my background (in this tournament)."

Farmers Fight Super Power Lines As Health Risk

By GERALD KOPPLIN

ST. PAUL, Minn. (UPI) — A farmer's wife is leading the fight against a high voltage power line project in Minnesota because she believes its emissions will be a health hazard to the farmers whose land it crosses.

It is just one of a growing number of battles in various parts of the nation which pit landowners and environmentalists against laws that give officials the right to condemn and take private land for utility corridors. Elsewhere:

— Powerline arrests occurred recently in eastern Washington. Federal marshals were called out to protect surveyors there after a farmer pushed a truck into an irrigation ditch.

— Of the dozen people arrested in upstate New York, three were farm wives who went to jail when they refused to pay fines after convictions for misdemeanors. All were released after serving 4 to 8 days.

New York Gov. Hugh Carey called protesters "outsiders" and "troublemakers," but has since backed off and merely said power is needed and the line in dispute there has been approved.

— Iowa farmers, as in eastern Washington and upstate New York, have been unsuccessful in stopping power line construction, but they have delayed work.

— In Montana, the confederated Salish and Kootenai Indian tribes and the Northern Cheyenne Indian tribe have threatened lawsuits to block power lines that would connect with the Bonneville Power Administration facilities serving the Pacific Northwest.

— In northeastern Nevada, the Bureau of Land Management recently turned down a Sierra Pacific Power Co. proposal to build a line over a proposed wilderness area to bring power to Reno. Federal officials said the company had to follow established but much longer utility corridors along highways, costing millions more.

— In Oregon, Pacific Power & Light Co. moved to modify a 528-mile, 500-kilovolt route to avoid a wildlife refuge. Environmentialists protested that the lines might endanger the birds.

Power company officials contend the cross country electric lines are more economical than numerous local facilities.

"The alternative to a transmission line is to build a power plant in every community," said Don Jacobson of United Power Association, one of the two Minnesota cooperatives that is building such a line.

"Bigger plants are much more efficient," Jacobson said. "We got plenty of coal. Why haul the coal? Why build a whole bunch of little plants to use oil and coal? Their efficiency is less and power lines still have to be built to transmit the electricity."

The farmers' protests have centered on charges the super power lines endanger the health of those who work near them.

They contend ozone, a form of oxygen created by electrical discharges in the air — specifically in the vicinity of the high voltage lines, may have damaging effects on livestock or persons nearby.

At least one expert has said there is evidence to support the claim.

Dr. Merle Hirsh, 46, a professor at the Univesity of Minnesota at Morris, based his statement on a year's research into dangers of high-voltage lines in France. He said studies show that ozone alone is not hazardous but ozone's contact with air can produce harmful nitrogen oxide.

Hirsh said the problem is more likely to occur during rain, sleet or snow and on the highest voltage lines.

Two Minnesota power cooperatives have agreed to a special study of the health dangers. But they refused to stop construction while the study is in progress.

In the Minnesota dispute, the direct current power line is being built over 410 miles of rich farm land from a lignite-coal burning power plant in central North Dakota to eastern Minnesota.

John Millhone, Minnesota energy director, certified the need for the line to serve 19 rural cooperatives and nearly a million rural residents in southern Minnesota.

For nearly two years, the farmers delayed construction of the 400-kilovolt power line. They opposed it in the courts and lost. There were scuffles between police and protesters with minor injuries and numerous arrests but no deaths.

Mrs. Gloria Woida, 37, a mother of four who has been called a Joan of Arc of the corn fields, now leads the farmers in their fight.

Looking more like a well-dressed business woman than a farm wife, she addresses anti-power line protest meetings at town halls.

"I really think we will stop the power companies," said Mrs. Woida after she was arrested for obstructing a surveyor and charged with a misdemeanor. She was released on $500 bond.

Gov. Rudy Perpich inherited the controversy. When he became governor last year, he drove alone to farms to speak with opponents of the line.

Power cooperative officials and farmers were unwilling to compromise and the Minnesota Supreme Court ruled in favor of the utilities last September.

"We have gone the extra mile," Perpich said in announcing a decision to send 150 state troopers to protect surveyors and enforce the supreme court decision. Within days, 42 protesters were arrested for obstructing power line work or assaults as workers crossed picket lines.

The power line route crosses the Woida land new Sauk Centre — where she said her husband, Matt, "began working on the farm carrying a kerosene lantern at 12 years old when his mother died" and into which she said he has "put a lot of hard years."

"Somebody has the power to stop this line," she said. "If the governor won't, we'll go to the legislature."

The line, Mrs. Woida said, was rerouted on one occasion — to avoid a wildlife area.

"Birds are more important than people," she said. "Farmland should have priority over wildlife areas."

Revival Series Begins Sunday

Revival services will begin Sunday at the Saint Paul Pentecostal Holiness Church and continue through Friday, Feb. 24, at 7:30 p.m.

The guest evangelist will be the Rev. W. M. Wooten, pastor of the Whiteville Pentecostal Holiness Church and former pastor of the Grimesland Pentecostal Holiness Church.

Special music will be presented nightly. Pastor Maurice Phelps extends an invitation to the public to attend.

Senate Vacancies Are Often Jinx To Governors

By STEVE GERSTEL

WASHINGTON (UPI) — When Sen. Walter F. Mondale was elected vice president and resigned his Senate seat, Minnesota Gov. Wendell Anderson chose a successor. Himself.

In doing so, Anderson took a calculated, high-risk gamble with his political career which, at the time, seemed to have unlimited possibilities.

But mid-term governors who send themselves to the Senate have a notoriously poor track record the first time they face the voters and their stay in Washington tends to be very brief.

According to records compiled by the Senate Library, Anderson is the ninth governor who resigned with the understanding that his successor — in this case now-Gov. Rudy Perpich — would appoint him to the Senate.

Of the first eight, only one — Kentucky's A.B. (Happy) Chandler — managed to escape the jinx of self-appointment. The others were beaten, either in primaries or the general election.

Anderson, a highly-respected governor, seems to have run into the same sort of trouble. There was an immediate, dramatic drop in his popularity traced by most politicians to the fact that he named himself to the Senate.

Before the death of Sen. Hubert Humphrey there was talk of a party-splitting Democratic primary in Minnesota and the GOP was looking at Anderson as likely prey in this fall's election.

Humphrey's death may have taken some of the heat off Anderson and increased his chances of winning a full term. Rep. Don Fraser, who had been thinking of challenging Anderson in the primaries, will now file for the special election to fill Humphrey's seat.

For his part, Perpich was very careful not to repeat what now appears to have been a hazardous decision by Anderson.

Perpich named Muriel Humphrey, the senator's widow, to the vacancy, thereby not giving an edge to any candidate. Although she has not closed the door to a run for the seat, most politicians assume she will serve only as a "caretaker" until the special election.

Montana Gov. Thomas Judge said after the death of Sen. Lee Metcalf, a fellow Democrat, that he had been urged to appoint himself but added "I discarded that option." One reason may have been that polls showed he could not win the fall election.

Judge named Paul Hatfield, chief justice of the state supreme court, and, in the process, outflanked his chief party rival, Rep. Max Baucus, who has already filed for the Senate seat.

Arkansas Gov. David Pryor's decision when Sen. John McClellan died was much easier. He was forbidden by state law to have himself named.

In addition, Kaneaster Hodges, who Pryor did appoint, also is barred from running in the November election. Pryor is expected to go after the McClellan seat then.

Political observers in Minnesota attribute part of the drop in Anderson's popularity to Perpich whose open and down-to-earth style tends to make Anderson look a little on the stuffy side.

Another factor may be that Anderson — like any freshmen senator — does not get the exposure that he did as governor. But unlike other freshmen, who have six years to establish themselves, Anderson has to run this year when Mondale's term would have expired.

Minnesota is considered a heavily-Democratic state but some of that edge showed signs of eroding when a conservative Republican, Arlan Stangeland, captured the supposedly safe Democratic seat vacated by Robert Bergland to become agriculture secretary.

Chandler, the only self-appointed senator to make good on his own, resigned as governor and was appointed to the Senate in 1939 after the death of Sen. Marvel Logan. He was elected in 1940 for the remainder of the Logan term and two years later won a full six-year mandate.

In 1945, Chandler chucked his Senate seat to become Commissioner of Organized Baseball. The baseball club owners were harder to please than Kentucky voters; they fired Happy after a short tenure in the job.

The others who fell victim to the jinx:

— Gov. John E. Erickson of Montana had himself appointed to the Senate in 1933 and lost the next year in the Democratic primary to James E. Murray.

— Gov. E.P. Carville of Nevada was appointed to the Senate in 1945 and was beaten by Berkeley L. Bunker in the Democratic primary the following year.

— Gov. John J. Hickey of Wyoming had himself named to the Senate in 1961 but lost to Republican Milward Simpson the following year.

— Gov. E. L. Mechem of New Mexico had himself appointed to the Senate in 1962 but was defeated by Democrat Joseph Montoya two years later.

— Gov. J. Howard Edmondson resigned and was appointed to the Senate in 1963 and was beaten in the Democratic primary the following year by Fred Harris.

— Gov. Charles C. Gossett of Idaho resigned as governor in 1945 after serving about half a year but in 1946 failed to win his party's nomination.

— Gov. Donald Russell of South Carolina had himself appointed to the Senate in 1965 but lost the Democratic primary to Ernest F. Hollings the next year.

Alumnae Group Meets Feb. 22

The Pitt County Alumnae Chapter of N. C. A & T State University will meet Wednesday, Feb. 22 with Ms. Connie Woods in Ayden.

The group reports a successful "Sweetheart Disco" fund-raising event, held Friday.

Gospel Sing On Saturday Night

A gospel sing will be held Saturday night beginning at seven o'clock in the D. H. Conley High School auditorium.

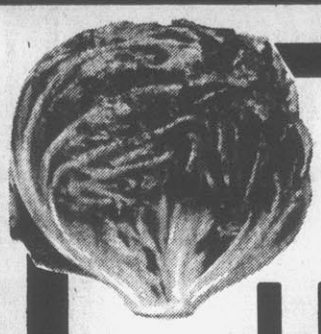

The program will feature the Gospel Chargers of Winterville, the Gabriels of New Bern, and the Maranatha Trio of Black Jack.

Sponsored by the D. H. Conley High School Bible Club, the program will benefit senior citizens.

The public is invited to attend.

Bridge "truths" are not holy writ. The successful player knows when to depart from the "rules" in favor of a practical solution.

We are among those who recommend a five-card suit for an overcall, even in the balancing position. However, there is a tide in the affairs of men which dictates departing from this principle. Observe South's dilemma. Even though the opponents were in his longest suit, he was reluctant to let West play one diamond when his side might be able to make a partial, or even a game, in one of the black suits. But South could not double because of his heart void. To bid one spade was a practical solution to a difficult problem. West doubled to show power and North jump raised preemptively—with a better hand he would first have redoubled. South judged that once his partner had announced considerable length in spades, there ought to be play for game.

West led the king of hearts, and declarer was quite satisfied with his prospects. He ruffed the heart and led a low club toward dummy's ten. West was not caught napping. He rose with the queen and shifted to a trump in an attempt to cut down on declarer's ruffing power, but it was too late.

Declarer played low from dummy and captured East's eight with the nine. The king of clubs was covered by the ace and ruffed on the table. A heart ruff put declarer in his hand, and he discarded a diamond on the jack of clubs. A club ruff was followed by a heart ruff with the king of trumps.

Seven tricks were now in the bank, and the moment of truth had arrived. Declarer cashed the ace of diamonds and held his breath as he ruffed a diamond with the ten of trumps, but all was well. East had to follow, so the contract was safe. In fact, an unexpected overtrick came rolling in when the ace of spades drew the outstanding trumps and East had to concede a heart trick to dummy's 10-9.

Rubber bridge clubs throughout the country use the four-deal bridge format. Do they know something you don't? Charles Goren's "Four-Deal Bridge" will teach you the strategies and tactics of this fast-paced action game that provides the cure for unending rubbers. For a copy and a scorepad, send $1.60 to "Goren-Four Deal," c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 259, Norwood, N.J. 07648. Make checks payable to NEWSPAPERBOOKS.

Today's Cryptoquip clue: H equals E

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Signs To Write Another Novel

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Best-selling novelist Paige Mitchell has been commissioned to write a novel called "The Cutting Edge," involving a physician and an astronaut in Houston.

The book will be published by Doubleday & Co., which bid $400,000, and will be made into a motion picture by Columbia Pictures and Barry Weitz Productions, which commissioned the work.

Weitz said "The Cutting Edge" is an abstract reference to the astounding growth of Houston and its success as a leading world medical center. In the book, the Houston physician will be caught up in the inexplicable behavior of the astronaut following a moon shot and how it exerts a startling change of perspective for him in the field of medicine.

'Broadway Joe' Taking A Fling In TV Series

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Television Writer

BURBANK, Calif. (AP) — It surprised a few folks to learn that Joe Namath, upon ending his 13-year career as a pro football quarterback, had signed to make an NBC comedy pilot, "The Waverly Wonders."

Sure, he'd dabbled in acting. But most thought he'd go into sportcasting, or coaching, not playing a high school basketball coach in a TV idea that could run a few weeks or more next season.

"Well, that's what we're hoping for," he said of the prospect of a long-run series. "We're doing this because we want to. And I like working. I'm the kind of person who's always got to be doing something."

Namath, 34, tanned and fit-looking, spoke during lunch at the studio where he's taping his pilot here. At his request, the chat wasn't held in the exclusive section where most stars hold forth.

The man they call Broadway Joe preferred the peasant section where the bit actors, prop men, tourists and apprentice moguls take lunch.

He said yes when asked if he's given thought to coaching pro or college football. And he also said he lacks the kind of dedication needed to do justice to that line of work.

He's totally ruled out coaching, then?

"Yes," he said. Then, disgusted with the snap answer, he added: "Well, not totally. That's so dumb. How can I say totally? I don't know what the future's going to hold."

He declined to talk specifics about any sportcasting prospects, other than to vaguely say: "Maybe it'll come about in the future. Right now, we're set right here with the (comedy) pilot.

"Hopefully, the people at NBC and across the country will like it. If they do, we'll do the series."

During his pro football years, 12 with the New York Jets, the last with the Los Angeles Rams, Namath was known to say brash things now and then. It doesn't extend to his first season as a practicing actor.

Sure, he's made three movies, "C.C. & Co.", "Norwood," and "The Last Rebel," and next month starts another one, "Avalanche Express." But he readily says he has a lot to learn in the emoting business

"I never took an acting lesson until '71, after I'd done the first three movies, and recognized some of my deficiencies," he said. "I realized, 'Good Lord, everything I've done someone's taught me.'

"But no one taught me to act. So I started studying for three years in New York during the football season. Each year, I got a different teacher and studied voice, movement, improvision."

He grinned. "I know 18 months isn't a lot of studying ... but it gave me a lot more confidence getting on stage, working with people. And I plan to study more, certainly, a heckuva lot more."

Your Daily HOROSCOPE
from the CARROLL RIGHTER INSTITUTE

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A day when you can easily employ your finest mental qualities to achieve greater success in your line of work. An excellent time to put across your ideas to others.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) You can communicate well with others now and get excellent results. Sidestep one who could be detrimental to your best interests.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Make a sensible plan which could give you greater income. Confer with a trusted friend for advice you need.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Make plans to gain your personal aims early in the day. Allow time for enjoyment in the company of good friends.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Delve deep into a new plan you have and gain the backing of friends. Show increased devotion to the one you love.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Make long-range plans which could give you greater abundance in the days ahead. Show family members you are most devoted.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Contact influential persons and gain their backing in a new project you have in mind. Avoid a troublemaker.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Know your best mode of self-expression for the future and delve right into it. You can rely on your intuition at this time.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Keep promises made to others in a most precise way and get excellent results. Strive for more harmony with loved one.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Come to a better understanding with your associates. Situations arise that show how best to solve perplexing problems.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Do whatever will bring more accord between you and associates. Express happiness with loved one tonight.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Put your finest skills to work and make rapid gains in career matters at this time. Be active and strive for happiness.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Do some entertaining at home and make a fine impression on others. Study a new plan before putting it in operation.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will have many natural talents, so be sure to give the right kind of education that can lead to a successful life. An inventive mind in this chart that could be a boon to society. Permit to engage in healthful sports.

01 PUBLIC NOTICES

Public Announcement
Greenville Utilities Commission
Radio Controlled Switches

Greenville Utilities Commission will employ the services of licensed electrical contractors for the purpose of installing radio-controlled switching devices on electric water heaters and central air conditioning units.

Contractors who desire to install radio switches for the Commission must meet the following qualifications:

1. Be licensed.
2. Carry comprehensive liability insurance in the minimum amount of $300,000 bodily injury and $100,000 property damage. The policy must carry a broad form property damage endorsement.
3. Carry automobile liability insurance in the minimum amounts of $100,000/$300,000/$25,000.

In addition, contractors performing switch installations will be required to meet certain contractual specifications including but not limited to the following:

1. A flat fee of $15.00 per switch installation will be paid, except for extreme situations.
2. Installations are to be made at a minimum rate of 48 switches per week.
3. All completed installations must be thoroughly tested to assure that:
   a. Residential water heating and air conditioning equipment operates normally.
   b. Installed switches respond to the proper tone (test equipment to be provided by the Commission).

Contractors who meet the above qualifications and specifications, and who desire to enter into an agreement with the Commission for the purpose of installing radio switches should contract Phil Morin at 752-7166, Ext. 252, on or before February 28, 1978.

A Handbook On Custody

ECU News Bureau

"A Glossary of Custody and Related Legal Matters," a handbook for social workers and other non-legal professionals, has been completed by East Carolina University faculty member Ken Lewis.

The "Glossary" defines 84 legal and social services terms and is designed for use by professionals who are often required to testify in court on such child-related matters as custody, support, paternity, abuse or neglect.

Dr. Lewis, an associate professor of social work at ECU, said he became aware of a need for such a handbook while teaching and conducting workshops on social work and single-parent families.

Working with him on compiling the handbook were two judges, four lawyers specializing in domestic relations cases and two county directors of social services.

The pocket-sized handbook discusses procedures for giving testimony and lists resource books with publishers' addresses.

The Lewis "Glossary" will be advertised in several national professional journals next month. It is available now by mail for $2.50 from "Glossary on Custody." P. O. Box 9356, Norfolk, Va. 23505.

How Tar Heel Congressmen And Senators Voted

By ROLL CALL REPORT

WASHINGTON — Here's how area Members of Congress were recorded on major roll call votes Feb. 2 thru Feb. 8.

HOUSE

CONSUMER AGENCY — Defeated, 189 for and 227 against, a bill to create an Office of Consumer Representation to represent the consumer interest in policy-making by other federal agencies. Although the bill (HR 6805) has not been voted upon by the Senate, rejection in the House eliminated any chance of it becoming law.

Establishment of the agency, the first of its kind, was favored by Ralph Nader, President Carter and consumer and "public interest" groups and opposed by the Republican leadership and business organizations such as the National Association of Manufacturers and U.S. Chamber of Commerce.

Rep. Robert Drinan (D-Mass.), a supporter, said: "Simple justice requires that such a consumer advocate be created. . .

Businesses are thoroughly represented before federal agencies while all too often consumers lack the organization and resources to press their own interests effectively."

Rep. Bill Alexander (D-Ark.), an opponent, said "the public interest is already sufficiently protected through federal agency and state consumer offices and. . .

the establishment of this new layer of bureaucracy is unnecessary."

Members voting "nay" were opposed to establishment of a federal agency for consumers.

Rep. Richard Preyer (D-6) voted "yea."

Reps. Walter Jones (D-1), L. H. Fountain (D-2), Charles Whitley (D-3), Ike Andrews (D-4), Stephen Neal (D-5), Charles Rose (D-7), W. G. Hefner (D-8), James Martin (R-9), James Broyhill (R-10) and Lamar Gudger (D-11) voted "nay."

CONSUMER AGENCY & Rejected, 138 for and 274 against, an amendment to include the National Labor Relations Board (NLRB) and Federal Mediation and Concilation Service (FMCS) among the federal agencies that could be targets of the proposed consumer protection agency. The amendment sought to eliminate the two labor-oriented agencies' exemption from the bill to create an Office of Consumer Representation (see vote above).

Rep. Dan Quayle (R-Inc.), the sponsor, said the NLRB and FMCS should not be exempted because "in all fairness, any labor dispute or labor agreement could in fact affect the consumers that this bill is so inherently interested in."

Rep. Benjamin Rosenthal (D-N.Y.), an opponent, said neither labor nor management favored the amendment because "those who are concerned with public policy have recognized that it is extraordinarily injurious for any outside forces to tamper with or to interfere with the labor-management relations."

Members voting "yea" were opposed to the exemption granted the NLRB and the federal mediation service.

Martin and Broyhill voted "yea."

Jones, Fountain, Whitley, Andrews, Neal, Preyer, Rose, Hefner and Gudger voted "nay."

JUDGESHIPS — Passed, 319 for and 80 against, a bill creating 145 new federal judgeships, 110 in U.S. district courts and 35 in appellate courts. The bill (HR 7843) was sent to conference with the Senate. It sets up non-binding procedures for the merit selection of district court judges, in an effort to make judicial ability more important than political connections in the selection of judges. However, the procedures are unlikely to be put into use, because senators are unwilling to give up their prerogative to pick federal judges.

Rep. Peter Rodino (D-N.J.), a supporter, said more judges are needed because the district court caseload increased from 92,000 to 177,000 between 1950-77 and the appellate court caseload from 3,226 in 1953 to 19,000 in 1977.

Rep. Jack Brooks (D-Tex.), an opponent, said "the docket is not as imposing as the statistics they cite may indicate. In too many instances, judges simply need to be more efficient."

Members voting "yea" favored the bill.

Jones, Fountain, Whitley, Andrews, Neal, Preyer, Rose, Hefner, Martin, Broyhill and Gudger voted "yea."

SENATE

NUCLEAR POLICY — Adopted, 47 for and 44 against, an amendment to make it easier to bring spent nuclear fuel from a foreign reactor into the U.S. for storage. Such a policy seeks to diminish the chance of the spent fuel being diverted from peaceful uses to nuclear weapons. The amendment was generally opposed by the nuclear power industry. It was attached to a bill (S 8638) to control the exporting of peaceful nuclear technology, in order to curb the proliferation of nuclear weapons. The bill was later passed and sent to conference with the House.

This amendment required vetoes by both houses of Congress to block an agreement for bringing spent nuclear fuel into the United States. It replaced language requiring only a one-house veto.

Sen. John Glenn (D-Ohio), the sponsor, said the amendment was a necessary part of the Senate's "attempt to curb a growing specter of potential nuclear holocaust around the world."

Sen. Pete Domenici (R-N.M.), an opponent, said additional nuclear waste should be brought into the U.S. at a time when the "country itself has no — and I repeat no — plan for the disposition of waste in this country at all — no plan whatsoever."

Senators voting "yea" favored the Glenn amendment'

Sens. Robert Morgan (D) and Jesse Helms (R) voted "nay."

NUCLEAR POLICY — Tabled, 56 for and 36 against, an amendment to ease the procedures by which the Nuclear Regulatory Commission (NRC) licenses the export of nuclear fuel for use in foreign reactors. It was proposed to (S 8638), the bill to curb the proliferation of nuclear materials, later passed and sent to conference with the House (see vote above).

The amendment was addressed at language making it difficult for irresponsible governments to obtain nuclear fuel from U.S. suppliers. It sought to allow a foreign purchaser of demonstrated responsiblity an essentially lifetime license, rather than having to seek a new license for each order placed.

Sen. Charles Percy (R-Ill.), a supporter of tabling, said the amendment "now starts to invade our ability to keep the non-proliferators in charge rather than the nuclear salesmen."

Sen. Pete Domenici (R-N.M.), an opponent of tabling, said that without his amendment to simplify licensing by the NRC, suppliers in the U.S. will lose business.

Senators voting "yea" favored the stricter licensing policy.

Morgan voted "yea."

Helms voted "nay."

Speaking of Your Health...

Lester L. Coleman, M.D.

A Matter of Individuality

I never seem to be able to pin my doctor down to give me some idea about how long an illness will last. Recently, I recovered from a bladder infection. I had to make plans for a business trip and couldn't get a definite answer about time. It seems that this ought to be possible with his vast experience. — Mr. V.G., Texas.

Dear Mr. G.:

Your complaint is one that is often registered with doctors. It is based on a total lack of understanding of the complexity of the diagnosis and prognosis of an illness.

Doctors are not prophets and cannot be asked to prognosticate the intensity or the duration of an illness. Many factors, some apparent and some hidden, are involved in the art of prognosis (the prediction of the course of a disease and its final outcome).

In the recovery from an illness, or from surgery, there are many variables. Some people rebound more rapidly from an illness than do others. The young, expectedly, recover more quickly than do the elderly. The emotional state of the patient plays a vital role in the duration and complete recovery from an illness. An illness can vary in severity and may alter its course depending on complications, simple or complex, that can't always be anticipated.

Expecting your doctor to give you a definite time for complete recovery imposes an unfair burden on him. Doctors rarely allow themselves to be placed in the untenable position of speculating about the duration of illnesses. Such pressure can do an injustice to both you and your doctor.

I never hear the term "dropsy" anymore. Is this an obsolete disease? Or is there a new name for it? — Mr. C.C.H., W. Va.

Dear Mr. H.:

"Dropsy" never has been a disease. It is simply a word taken from the medical term "hydrops," which is an abnormal collection of fluid in various tissues of the body.

"Dropsy" is a symptom of this accumulation of fluid. Because of some deficiency in the normal functioning of body organs, fluid can accumulate in the legs, the feet, in the chest cavity and in the abdomen.

Chronic heart conditions, impairment of function of the lungs, kidneys or liver can produce the symptom of "dropsy."

Our greater knowledge of fluid balance now makes it possible to control fluid saturation before it advances too severely.

The newer drugs can relieve the accumulation of fluid in certain specific instances. Swelling, or "edema," of the feet and legs and fluid in body tissues can be markedly helped with many of the modern drugs.

Only rarely is the term "dropsy" used today.

SPEAKING OF YOUR HEALTH... Snowmobile injuries are mounting. Failure to respect the "rules of the road," inadequate training and carelessness are responsible for a great number of accidents.

Interest Rates Stir Investors

INTERSTATE SECURITIES CORP

The current trend toward rising interest rates has made investors more yield conscious than ever. If your major investment consideration is the immediate level of income, there are many attractive fixed income investments available. But if your concern is for future growth of income, common stocks clearly have the edge over fixed income securities.

Government attempts to control inflation have resulted in rising interest rates for some time now. Interest rate trends affect stock prices, since investors move away from common stocks toward fixed income investments as rates move higher. The spread between yields on common stocks and fixed income securities can vary widely at times.

The average yield on common stocks and on savings accounts today is about 5 percent. Short term (up to one year) fixed income securities yield between 6.5 percent and 7.5 percent, and 10-year Treasury issues can yield around 8 percent. The yield advantage in typing up your money for more than one year is thus not very great. There are no reinvestment guarantees; when your investment matures, the level of interest rates then existing on fixing income securities may be lower. Buying longer maturities can help you avoid this problem. The major disadvantage is that, as the name implies, the level of income is fixed. There is a guatantee of the principal in a savings certificate or a U. S. Treasury certificate, but there is no opportunity for increased return.

There is no guarantee of future market value on common stocks, but the yields on some common stocks provide good competition for fixed income investments. Short term yields on fixed income securities of 7-8 percent compare with yields of 7 percent or more on some good quality common stocks. But the benefit in owning common stocks lies in the potential growth of that income.

We have just completed a year in which stock dividends increased at a double-digit rate, for the second consecutive year, and 1978 is expected to witness similar growth. Many companies have more than doubled their dividends in the last five years. Growth stocks cannot compete with fixed income returns since their yields are around 4 percent, but many of these companies have increased dividends sharply in the last five years, at a rate exceeding the rate of inflation. These stocks can be bought not only for growth of earnings and the resulting market appreciation potential, but also for future dividend growth as well.

If immediate income is the primary consideration, fixed income investments may be for you. But if you are more interested in future growth of income, common stocks are clearly the answer. Careful selection is still a necessity, but stocks yielding 7 percent and offering the potential of future dividend increases are available and merit investment consideration.

Big Potential For Abuse In 'Junk' Telephone Calls

By WILLIAM E. CLAYTON

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The telephone rings and a voice says, "Hello: Mr. Clayton?"

"Yes."

"Hold on, please, for a message."

There is a pause, then a much more lilting and professional voice, on a somewhat scratchy background that marks it for a recording.

This voice says, "We'd like to have you help us do some market research. I am going to ask some questions and would appreciate it if you could give your answer to each. After each question, there will be a pause for you to answer. The first question is...."

From there, the message builds into a pitch for a product.

That is an example of the latest selling technique, which by one estimate is used 12 million times each day.

Some call it modern marketing. Some call it a "junk" telephone call.

One person in the latter class is Rep. Les Aspin, D-Wis., who wants people who don't want to get such calls to be protected against them.

"Junk telephone calls are the ultimate invasion of privacy," Aspin says.

In the old days, virtually all telephone selling was done by humans. Often by handicapped people for whom jobs were hard to come by. The all-human system had its limitations and so the average home escaped constant bombardment, Aspin says.

Then automation gave telephone solicitors a new tool: one person could work a machine — sort of a double recorder — and handle many more calls.

These are calls of the sort described above. Either the salesperson or a machine dials the prospect's number and the salesperson comes on only for the introductory "Hello." After that the job is turned over to a recording. That way, the human salesperson can go on to make more calls while the recording is making the sales pitch.

Suddenly last summer, "a new, wholly automated selling device came on the market," Aspin says.

This machine, usually with a spiel on one tape and a parallel blank tape for responses, can zip through 1,000 calls a day — some makers claim several times that for the deluxe models. The devices can cost several hundred dollars, or several thousand.

Depending on where the sales company buys its list, it can target recipients: people with children (for, say, children's apparel sales), people with investments (for land sales pitches), subscribers to magazines (for a pitch to add another magazine or newspaper).

But if the calls are made to a whole block of telephone numbers in sequence, Aspin says a business with 20 "rotary" lines could get calls from the same machine with the same sales pitch, on each of the lines in sequence.

A more emotional example Aspin cites is that of a Minneapolis woman whose mother suffered a heart attack. The daughter picked up the phone to call for help just as a sales spiel was starting, and it would not stop even when she hung up the phone and tried again.

The woman finally got aid, so the story ends happily. But her experience shows that some telephone equipment in the country does not disconnect when one party wants to hang up.

Here is what Aspin's bill, and a companion introduced by Sen. Wendell Anderson, D-Minn., would do:

Telephone companies would have to give each subscriber a chance to indicate once a year if he or she objects to receiving unsolicited commercial sales calls. (Aspin stresses "commercial" and points out his bill would leave charities and polls alone.)

A company wanting to make unsolicited pitches over the phone would have to get the lists of people who want to be left alone. Then the company would have to make sure its dialers — human and automated — cut those numbers off the list of calls to be made.

There would be a fine up to $1,000 for violations.

The cost to the telephone companies of making up the lists would be borne by the firms who rented the lists from the phone companies.

Jack Gertz, manager of news services for American Telephone and Telegraph Co., said the Bell system is concerned about people's privacy. Bell has asked for a "thorough fact-finding inquiry" by the federal government into sales solicitations by telephone.

"The potential for abuse is enormous," an AT&T statement said. It called the Anderson-Aspin proposal a sincere attempt to solve the problem, but wondered if there is not some other cheaper way.

"For example, callers could be required to identify themselves as part of the record message transmitted by an automated dialer. This would give a customer an opportunity to terminate such a call if necessary," the AT&T statement said.

Aspin says the telephone marketing industry estimates 12 million sales solicitation calls are made each day. Of those 4.2 million either hang up or cut the spiel short with a "No, thank you" or angrier variations.

"Few of these people complain," Aspin said, "because most know there is nothing that can now be done about the calls. My bill would give people who are irate over this kind of intrusion the power to do something about it."

A spokesman for Aspin said the congressman does not want the dialing machines outlawed — just some protection for people who do not want to get calls from them.

The spokesman said the machines have some beneficial uses such as by organizations to contact all their members, for the National Guard to call all members of a certain unit, and the like.

Polls and charities can also make good use of the devices, he said. The bill specifies it would apply only to commercial calls that the person called does not want to receive.

People involved in mass phoning for sales or advertising pitches contend the objections are few and the technique is a good way for people to shop from their homes.

Aspin says he has nearly 100 cosponsors for the bill in the House.

Weight-Losing Class Planned This Spring

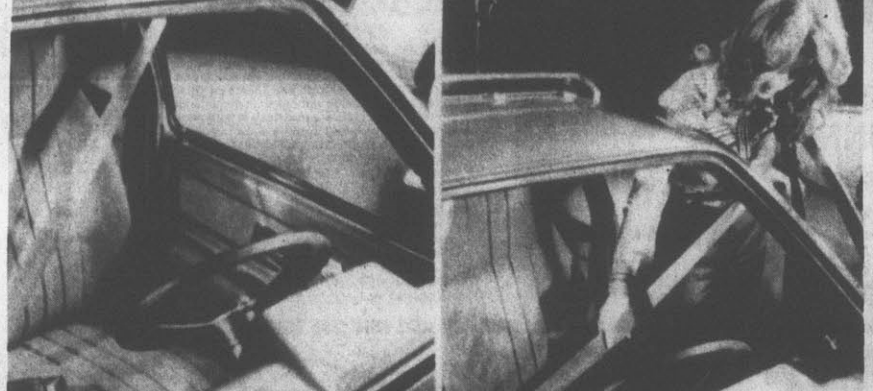

ECU News Bureau

Persons at least 18-25 pounds overweight are invited to enroll in "Positively Losing Weight", a new weight control program to be offered by East Carolina University this spring.

The program will involve six meetings (Thursdays, March 16 - April 27, 7-to-9 p.m.) for instruction and discussion on exercise and health, balanced diet, self-management and low-cholesterol and low-calorie diets.

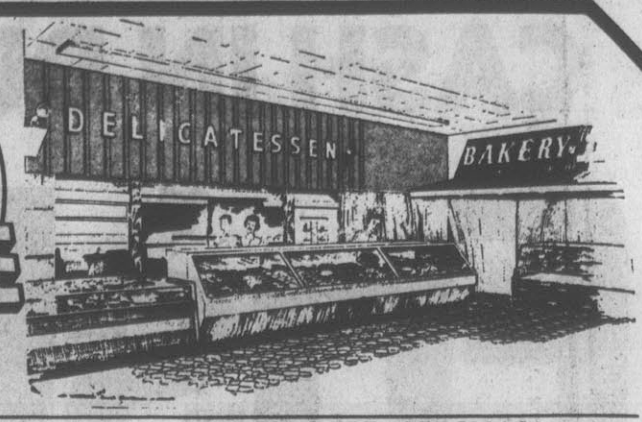

Instructor is Dr. Valorie Nybo of the ECU physical education faculty, who developed the program over the past six years, and has lost more than 50 pounds by following it herself.

Details about the program are available from the Office of Non-Credit Programs, Division of Continuing Education, East Carolina University.

NEW SEAT BELT — Mrs. Cindy Hermes, a General Motors secretary, demonstrates how to use the first "automatic" seat belt to be offered on a U.S.-built car that will be introduced this spring by GM on its cubcompact Chevrolet Chevette. When the door opens (upper right) the belt stretches out so a person can be seated behind it. Closing the door (lower left) "snugs up" the belt for automatic protection in the event of an accident. The "active" lap belt (lower right), though not required by law, will be included by GM. (AP Laserphoto)

No Politics Since Ordeal

POETRY, NOT POLITICS — Soviet writer Yuli Daniel, one of the first dissidents, says now he has no interest in politics and is occupied translating foreign poets into Russian. (AP Laserphoto)

By THOMAS KENT
Associated Press Writer

MOSCOW (AP) — If any single event sparked the Soviet dissident movement to the prominence it has had in recent years, it was the trial 12 years ago of writers Andrei Sinyavsky and Yuli Daniel.

They were sentenced in February 1966 to labor camps for writing satires of Soviet society and publishing them abroad. The trial put the international spotlight on the lack of literary freedom in the Soviet Union, and many specialists credit it with expanding open opposition to the Soviet regime from a small circle of writers and artists to hundreds of other intellectuals and professional people.

Sinyavsky, who served a seven-year sentence, now lives in Paris. But Daniel, who spent five years in jails and camps, is still in Moscow, quietly occupied with the translation of poetry and removed from today's dissidents. He says he has no intention of writing anything that would anger the government.

"I'm just not in the mood to write," he tells an interviewer in the spacious, book-lined study of his apartment. "If I had the desire, I would write. It's not that I'm afraid of the consequences."

Chain smoking, his face deeply lined at 52 and speaking slowly and carefully, he says he does not consider himself a founder of the dissident movement.

"I'm not interested in politics," he said. "I'm not a fighter. I wanted to publish my stories then and so I did. But I'm very skeptical about the ability of literary people to bring about great social transformations."

He says he has the highest respect for Nobel Peace Prize winner Andrei Sakharov, the star of the dissident movement; for his fellow labor-camp inmate Alexander Ginzburg, now under arrest again, and for some other dissidents.

But he accuses many dissenters of looking for "sensations and self-advertising," of being "careerists interested in whatever is in style."

Daniel's most famous story was "This Is Moscow Calling," published abroad in 1961 under the pseudonym Nikolai Arzhak. It told of a Kremlin decree creating Public Murder Day on which any citizen over 16 was allowed to murder anyone except policemen and transport workers.

The story mocked the docility of the Soviet masses and their obedience to all official decrees.

"After all," explained the story's hero, "we had Artillery Day and Soviet Press Day, so why not Public Murder Day?"

Now, says Daniel, the translation of poetry into Russian is his "main love." He translates from English, Spanish, French, German and several Slavic and minor Soviet languages and last year published a volume of poems by the late Spanish poet Antonio Machado.

The official Soviet publishing houses buy his work but publish it under another pseudonym, Y. Petrov, because his own name would remind many people of his trial.

Receiving Scholarship Applications

RALEIGH — Applications for the Blackburn Scholarship are now being received, according to the Rev. Samuel D. McMillan Jr., chairman of the Committee of Scholarships for the Division of Higher Education of the North Carolina United Methodist Conference.

McMillan says the $1,000 scholarship will be awarded to a person entering college as a freshman for the 1978-79 year.

An applicant must be an active United Methodist in the North Carolina Conference (the eastern 56 counties of the state) and must be planning to attend one of the colleges supported by the conference. Application deadline is April 1.

Second Chance For High School Dropouts In Pitt

By DEBBIE JACKSON
Reflector Staff Writer

Ronald G. dropped out of a Pitt County high school his senior year with only two required courses remaining for graduation. His grades were above average and he was not a problem student.

And no, he was not a lazy teenager who gave up.

He is an unfortunate teenager whose father died, leaving him with the responsibility of caring for a large family. Then, Ronald could not go back to finish his education because his job hours conflicted with school hours.

Fortunately, Ronald can now get that diploma.

Sharon J. dropped out when she discovered she was pregnant. She was too embarrassed afterwards to return to school where it seemed as if everyone knew her situation.

Now, she too has a second chance at an education.

Neither one of these people are real but their situations are like those of some local young people who find themselves with no alternative to giving up hope of graduation.

Thanks to a Comprehensive Employment and Training Act grant received by Pitt County in early December, there is now hope for such young people.

Irene Hannifer, director of the Pitt County Extended School Day program, said in an interview recently that the classes are open "to economically disadvantaged high school dropouts, age 16-19." The Pitt County program based at Wellcome Middle School will allow 36 local youths to complete the courses they lack for graduation.

Screening for the available openings began last week when 15 students were chosen. The remaining 15 openings will be filled this week. Six of the extended day school students are enrolled in courses at the Greenville City Extended Day School program which has been in operation for four years.

Classes are held from 3:15 to 7:15 p.m. with a basic high school curriculum offered. At present, there are three instructors provided under the $119,300 grant — Hannifer who was previously a private counselor in Greenville, David Graham who is certified counselor, and Carlton Floyd who is certified in social studies.

Hannifer describes the objectives of the pilot program as being aimed at "raising the students to the next grade level or helping them to get their diploma."

The courses are also "to provide specific vocational training" and to help the students to become economically productive and self-sufficient.

She added that the instructors also hope to help the young people to better understand themselves, to make them more self-confident, and "improve their ability to hold a job.

"The way to do all of this is through education," noted Hannifer. The success of these objectives centers around a basic change in attitude on the part of the student.

"It's a positive program in that it is building and creating a new self-image."

Referrals for the project which is funded through September were made by community schools, primarily the principals, guidance counselors, court counselors, and social service workers.

"We then contacted the referrals, explained the program, and screened them for CETA, according to interest and willingness to work," she added.

According to Hannifer, a large part of the program money goes to finding jobs for the students. One of the stipulations under the Extended School Day program is that 90 percent of the students must work, either in public or private positions.

"There's no preference between filling public or private jobs," she said, but added that the program pays the students' salaries that work in public positions, such as hospitals or schools.

She encouraged local businesses to consider hiring these students for employment and added that the program needs community support to be a success.

"These students are not lacking intelligence," she explained.

"No one is retarded or handicapped, here, except other than by virtue of a lack of education." She noted that some of the reasons for their not finishing school are: an excessive absence from class, having to go to work to support families, having to leave due to pregnancy. But these are not the only reasons.

"They're nice kids...they seem to care...and they love it."

Hannifer said that last week when the program first started, "one of the girls hugged my neck and said how much she really loved being here. Then she asked if we loved her, and I said "Why else would we be here?"

She added that the teenagers who are enrolled in the program are highly motivated. "Some of them realize that they made a mistake by dropping out. They feel that this is a second chance.

"If anyone expresses a desire to learn, we try to help them." Hannifer noted, however, that the program is not large enough to take on persons who are not willing to work and are not serious about acquiring their diploma.

There is not a time limit as to how long a student has to finish a course. "But they should be able to do it in the same balance of time as they would have in high school." She said that she does not want the students "to feel pressured" into finishing into a certain time period, because this may have been what presented problems for some of the students before.

"The prepared curriculum complies with the required course work in high school," she said, noting that among these are included three levels of English, practical and consumer math, biology, practical and applied science, health, nutrition, and social studies.

"We're hoping to give real life practical experiences for the real world," she added. There are courses in percentages and credit, finance, how the law affects the individual, and the rights and duties of the citizen.

"We're trying to bring the student to his fullest potential."

She added that the classes are small, and when possible, they try to work with the students on a one-to-one basis.

"The main thing is that we care."

Anyone who is able to employ one of these students, should call Irene Hannifer at Wellcome Middle School, 752-5938.

Annual District Meet Set Here

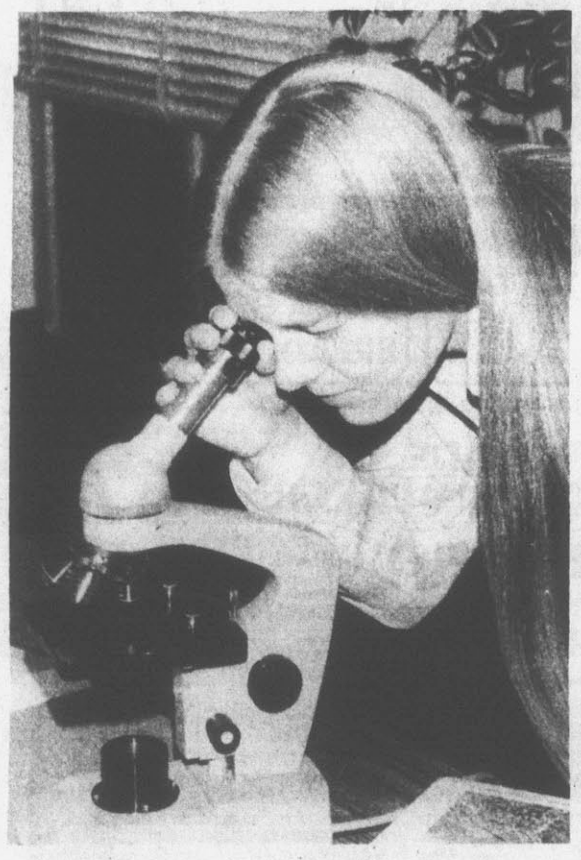

The 20th Annual Meeting of District 6 of the FlueCured Tobacco Stabilization Corporation has been set for Tuesday, Feb. 21.

This dinner meeting will begin at 6 p.m. at the Moose Lodge in Greenville. Anyone interested in attending should call his County Agricultural Extension Office to make reservations. District 6 includes the following counties: Beaufort, Bertie, Carteret, Craven, Dare, Jones, Lenoir, Martin, Pamlico, Pitt, Tyrrell, and Washington.

At the meeting, an operational report for the calendar year will be given. Stabilization's stocks totaled 585 million pounds as of Jan. 1, 1978, compared to 608 million pounds for the previous year.

In addition to Stabilization's reports, reports will be given by representatives of Tobacco Associates, Inc., Tobacco Growers' Information Committee, USDA-AMS Inspection (Grading) Service, and other allied organizations. Ample time will be provided for discussion.

During the business session, the election of Stabilization's Advisory Committee members from each county will be held.

CORA'S COUNTRY COOKERY

"Save 30¢ on the coffee that's as American as apple pie."

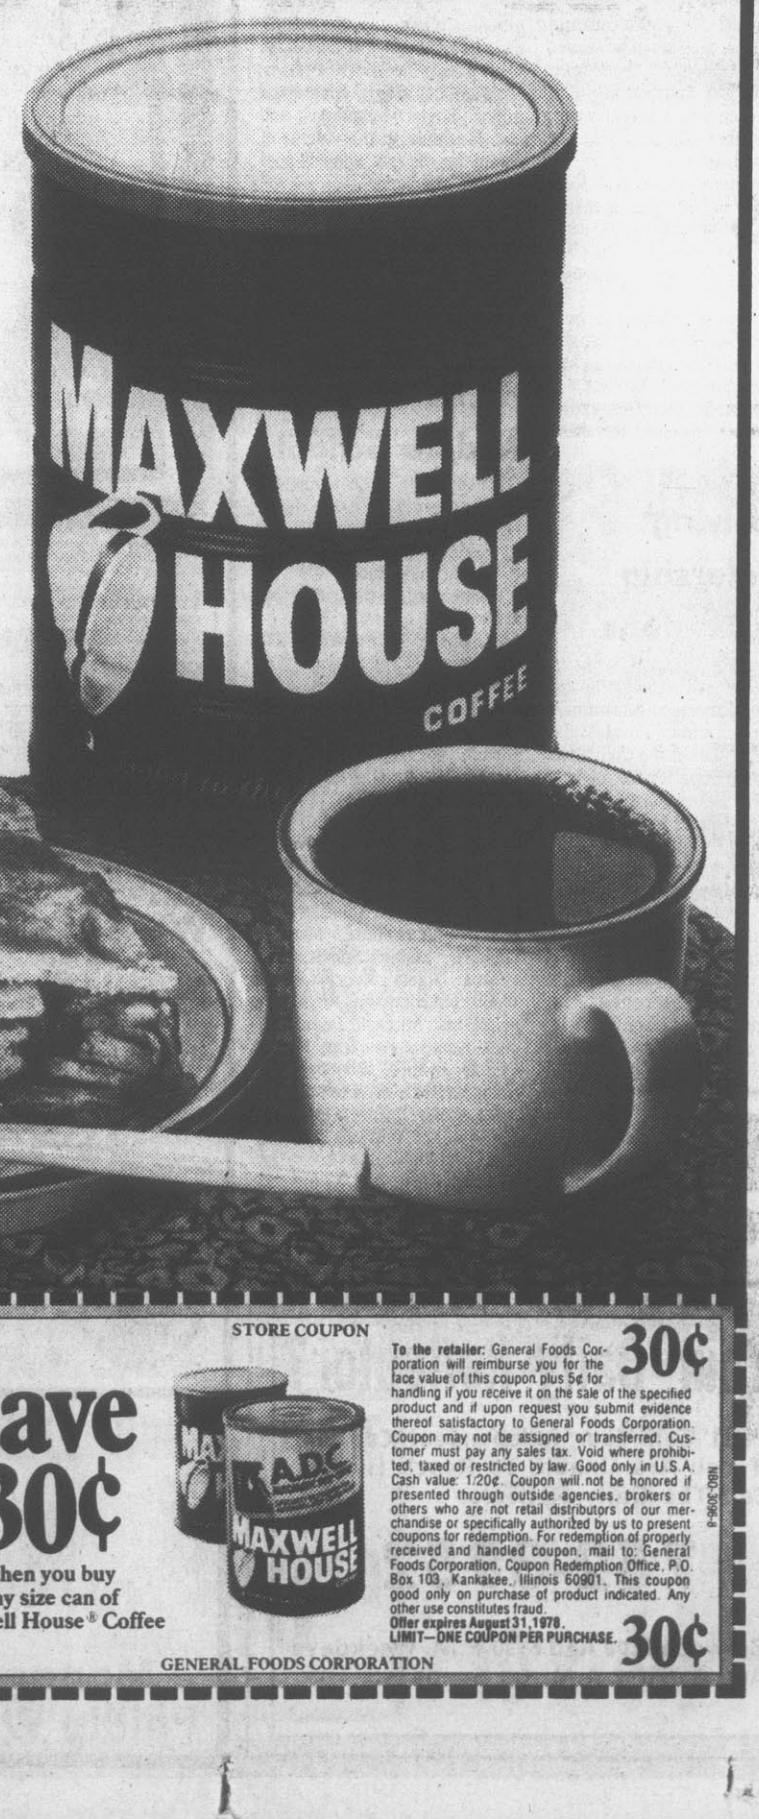

"When I think of coffee, there's only one—Maxwell House® Coffee. It's always good. Maybe that's why folks just keep buying it can after can. I think it tastes best.

"And wait till you try it with my apple pie. Just readin' the recipe will make you hungry.

"Bake up some apple pie and see how good it tastes with the coffee that's always...'Good to the Last Drop.'"

—Cora

Cora's Apple Pie

7 cups thinly sliced peeled apples*
2 tablespoons MINUTE® Tapioca
1 cup sugar
1 teaspoon ground cinnamon
¼ teaspoon ground nutmeg
⅛ teaspoon salt
Pastry for two-crust 9-inch pie
1 tablespoon butter or margarine

Combine apples, tapioca, sugar, cinnamon, nutmeg and salt. Let stand about 15 minutes. Roll out half the pastry very thin (less than ⅛-inch thick). Line a 9-inch pie pan; trim pastry at edge of rim. Roll out remaining pastry very thin. Cut several small slits or a design near center. Fill pie shell with apple mixture; dot with butter. Moisten edge of bottom crust. Place top crust over filling. Open slits to permit escape of steam. Trim top crust, letting it extend ½-inch over rim. To seal, press top and bottom crusts together on rim; then fold edge of top crust under bottom crust and flute. Bake at 425° until syrup boils with heavy bubbles that do not burst, about 55 minutes.
