

Pipeline Leak Due Sabotage Attempt

By WARD SIMS
Associated Press Writer
FAIRBANKS, Alaska (AP) — A 20-foot length of fuse and a black stain on the snow are evidence in what state troopers say is the second attempt to blow up the Trans-Alaska pipeline.

A sabotage attempt last summer did not even dent the $7.7 billion pipe, but on Wednesday a hole was blown in the 48-inch steel line.

MAP LOCATES SPOT WHERE A LEAK SHUT DOWN THE $7.7 BILLION ALASKA PIPELINE.

Thousands of barrels of thick Prudhoe Bay crude oil — no exact figure was available — gushed over the tundra for hours. The 800-mile-long pipeline was shut down shortly after the spill was reported, and the flow was slowed to a drip late Wednesday.

An Alyeska Pipeline Service Co. spokesman said the line should be operating again in 24 hours. A "sleeve" was being welded over the hole in the half-inch-thick steel.

Asked whether he would describe the explosion as sabotage, state police Sgt. Larry Mix said, "I would describe it as somebody using an explosive device to blow a hole in the pipeline."

Morris "Jack" Turner of the Interior Department's Alaska Pipeline Office had said shortly after the leak was spotted: "There are some indications that it is sabotage. You have to suspect foul play."

No arrests were reported. The oil was contained in an area 600 feet in diameter around an above-ground section of the pipe about six miles east of Fairbanks, Alyeska reported. The amount of oil lost was not known, but estimates of the peak rate ranged up to three barrels per second. A barrel has 42 gallons.

Clues at the spill site included a length of slow-burning fuse, a hole at the base of a depression in the pipe and a black stain on the snow. Alyeska said the hole was an inch in diameter, but the troopers said it was two inches.

Alyeska workers, state troopers and a military demolition team searched through the night for additional clues.

This is the fourth significant leak since oil began flowing from Prudhoe Bay to the Valdez pipeline terminal last spring. The previous leaks were attributed to human error.

Last summer, three Fairbanks men were charged in connection with a sabotage attempt that did little but shred the thick layer of insulation on the line.

Turner confirmed that the pipeline's highly sophisticated leak detection system had not picked up the spill. It was reported by a private pilot flying over the line.

Reports differed on when the leak was reported, ranging from noon to 3 p.m. Alyeska said the leak had almost stopped by 8 p.m.

Although the pipeline was shut down, Turner said the leak occurred in an area with a downward slope "so that it will tend to drain out, like a garden hose." The hole was about a mile from the nearest check valve, at Mile 454.5 of the line.

Turner said up to 20,000 barrels could spill out if the line emptied all the oil in the affected section.

The pipeline had been carrying 740,000 barrels daily. That rate was due to be increased to 1.16 million next month with the startup of Pump Station No. 8, which was destroyed last summer in an explosion attributed to human error.

THE SPILL — Floodlights cast an eerie glow on pools of crude oil which flowed from a hole in the Trans-Alaska oil pipeline. Police said a two-inch gash was caused by an explosive charge which had been placed against the line by a saboteur. (AP Laserphoto)

Coal Negotiators Urged Confer With Governors

By DAVID ESPO
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter is prodding negotiators and meeting with a dozen governors in a double-barreled effort to deal with the increasingly disruptive 73-day coal strike.

Carter called bargainers from both sides to a rare White House session Wednesday night in an attempt to get the strike settled before it seriously harms the country.

Officials said the session, which lasted slightly more than an hour, went smoothly and that talks would resume today at the Labor Department. However, sources who asked not to be identified emphasized that large differences remain.

The session, the first nighttime labor talks at the White House in a decade, established ground rules for today's bargaining.

That session was expected to focus on narrowing union-management differences. Labor Secretary Ray Marshall said the talks will be "almost continuous."

United Mine Workers President Arnold Miller also expressed satisfaction and said he was "most anxious to get down to business." Asked whether he believes industry bargainers are ready to do the same, he replied, "they don't have any choice."

Industry officials left the meeting without talking to reporters.

Carter, meanwhile, called in governors from the states most directly affected by the strike for a late afternoon discussion of measures to alleviate hardships. Officials said the talks would range from moving coal into areas of shortage to lifting environmental curbs on use of some fuels in certain areas.

Guerrillas To Fight On

By ARTHUR L. GAVSHON
AP Diplomatic Correspondent

LONDON (AP) — The Rhodesian guerrillas and African governments backing them condemned the agreement between Prime Minister Ian Smith and three moderate black leaders for majority rule in Rhodesia. The U.S. government was cool, but it and the British governments may come under intense pressure at home to approve it.

"It will not work. The war continues. We know who the enemies are," said guerrilla leader Joshua Nkomo at his headquarters in Zambia after the agreement was announced Wednesday in the Rhodesian capital of Salisbury.

Radio Mozambique said the agreement was reached between the "leader of an illegal regime and black puppets." Zambian Foreign Minister Siteke Mwale said "Smith is playing games, trying to hoodwink the world."

U.S. Ambassador Andrew Young warned of the possibility of "black-on-black civil war," and the State Department said the agreement does not meet requirements for a lasting solution. But diplomats in London said Zbigniew Brzezinski, President Carter's national security adviser, wants a more vigorous U.S. response to Soviet-Cuban intervention in Africa even if it means supporting the Smith "solution" for Rhodesia.

British Foreign Secretary David Owen, who with Young has been trying to unite all the black Rhodesian factions in support of a British-American peace plan, had no comment on Smith's breakthrough. But Prime Minister James Callaghan's Labor government faced the certainty of intense pressure from the opposition Conservative Party to accept Smith's formula, and the prospect of a national election within the next 20 months will increase that pressure.

Smith's eight-point agreement with Bishop Abel Muzorewa, the Rev. Ndabaningi Sithole and Chief Jeremiah Chirau calls for universal suffrage, 28 of the 100 seats in the future parliament to be reserved for Rhodesia's 263,000 whites for 10 years.

Eight-Year-Old Struck By Car

AYDEN — Eight-year-old Roderick Coley was critically injured yesterday afternoon when he ran into the path of a vehicle. Witnesses said the car which hit the boy skidded 68 feet in an attempt by the driver, Aaron Hines of 404 Allen Drive, Ayden, to avoid striking him.

The child, identified as the son of Jimmie Lee Coley of 700 S. Pitt Street, Ayden, was said by Pitt Memorial Hospital officials this morning to be in critical condition after having suffered head injuries. The accident occurred at 4:10 p. m. and the Ayden Rescue Squad transported the boy to the hospital.

Ruled Justifiable

DOBSON, N.C. (AP) — A Surry County Superior Court jury has ruled Dr. Ralph Cooke of Elkin was justified in fatally shooting an 18-year-old girl who had broken into his office with two companions to steal drugs.

Following a two-and-one-half day civil trial, the jury determined that Cooke had reason to believe his life was in danger or that he was threatened with bodily harm when he fired his shotgun at the three who broke into his office at 2:30 a.m. on July 31, 1974.

The parents of Sherri Teresa Guyer had sued Cooke for $300,000, claiming their daughter had been wrongfully slain. If the jury had found Cooke was not justified, then it would have determined how much money to award D.G. Guyer Jr., and his wife, Helen.

Cooke had been the attending physician at the girl's birth. Thomas White, the Guyers' lawyer, contended Cooke was grossly negligent — that firing the shotgun was unnecessary because Miss Guyer and her two accomplices were fleeing from Cooke's waiting room when he discovered them.

Cooke replied, however, that he was uncertain in which direction the three were headed when he ordered them to "freeze" and one of them was holding an object which "I took to be a gun."

USELESS LIGHT?

Why is there a traffic light at the corner of First and Reade Streets? I don't see any earthly reason for it. O. P.

Assistant City Engineer Ron Sewell said he is in favor of another study, when funds and manpower are available, to see if this light is still warranted. He said it was installed based on the findings of a consulting engineer several years ago. Reasons given at that time for the light included providing adequate gaps for drivers to get out on First Street, especially during peak traffic hours, and to facilitate progression on Reade, i. e. the orderly flow of traffic, so as to enable one to "make" green lights when he is traveling at the correct consistent speed.

TOT FINDER FEEDBACK

A Hotline reader called to say that the "tot finder" and "invalid finder" decals discussed in the Jan. 11 column are also available from the Prudential Insurance local office. Prudential district agent Mike Karachun confirmed this information and said he will be glad to give these decals for use in pointing out rooms occupied by small children and invalids in case of fire to anyone requesting these. His phone number is 756-5527.

Area Plant Decisions Based On Tax Statements

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer

Procter & Gamble's Greenville plant manager, Robert Griffin, said that company officials are "surprised and concerned with the tentative annexation proposal" revealed by the city for the industrial area.

Griffin, saying that the annexation study was "reportedly underway for eight months," pointed out that the "first indication that business had been when the plans were exposed in The Daily Reflector."

The plant manager observed, "Eight months of planning had taken place without business having the opportunity to give input to the City Council."

Griffin stated that P&G was informed of the tax rate on the current site prior to finalizing its purchase decision four years ago. He explained that, "when corporate tax officials questioned the tax rate, the response given was that the proposed plant site was in the county and would be only subject to county taxes. It was stated that the property would not be subject to city taxes."

Griffin said that "business decisions were based on these statements."

"Now the city is proposing a very large increase of 70 per cent," the spokesman said. He added, "This amounts to an increase in taxes of over a quarter of a million dollars to P&G based on 1977 assessed tax values which will be much larger with the completion of the current construction for Pampers Disposable Diapers."

Griffin observed, "The magnitude of this type of increase is unwarranted and may well have the affect of curtailing new business, payroll, and business growth in the Greenville-Pitt County areas and resulting in favoring other locations in and out of North Carolina."

'Beat-The-Peak' Plan Installations Slated

The Greenville Utilities Commission will soon begin the installation of special radio-controlled switches as part of its "Beat the Peak" program, utilities director Charles Horne said today.

The first shipment of switches is scheduled to arrive sometime this week, and installation will begin shortly thereafter Horne explained.

Utilities customers who have volunteered to participate in the "Beat the Peak" program will be getting radio switches installed on their electric water heaters and central air conditioning units to help reduce peak electrical demands.

Participants in the program, in addition to helping control electric rate increases for all GUC customers, will receive a $7.50 reduction in their electric bills for four months during the summer.

Horne said licensed electrical contractors will be installing the switches and will be testing each completed installation to assure that both the customer's appliances and the switches operate normally.

The commission hopes to have some 5,000 switches installed by June. Officials feel that with 5,000 switches in operation this summer a substantial savings in electric power costs can be realized by reducing peak demand by as much as five megawatts.

The "Beat the Peak" program is a long-range effort to reduce power costs and help minimize future rate increases. Plans call for the installation of as many as 20,000 such switches over the next seven years.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

Okay, I'm like the rest of you. I've become uptight about crime, mistrust strangers and am suspicious of my neighbors. I've turned from a trusting naive woman who used to leave her keys under the doormat to a neurotic who locks her car doors when she gets out to fill her own gas tank. I've gone from a devil-may-care madcap to a woman who sits with a handbag, winter coat, attache case and luggage on her lap when she uses the public facilities. Yes, I'm older and wiser now. A lot of Kojaks have gone under the bridge. A lot of Starskys and Hutches, Rookies, Adam 12s' Columbos, Barnaby Joneses and Rockfords have served to make me install hidden cameras focused on my refrigerator. The other night I heard Baretta say, "I know where you're comin' from, turkey, and it's heavy, but I got a lot of bread comin' down on this one and if you're doin' a number on me, either I'll bust you or the dudes will waste you and that's the name of that tune!" I didn't understand one word he said, but I'm no fool. I quit eating my popcorn. Readers of newspapers and viewers of television have absorbed so much crime. I don't know if they can handle the following story, but I hope they try. In Sun City, Ariz., recently a woman decided to have a garage sale. She made up her signs, priced her merchandise and got everything in order for the sale which was to begin the next day. Everything in readiness, she left home for some errands. While she was gone, a neighbor's automatic garage door opener raised her door by mistake, bringing all the signs and merchandise into full view. When our heroine arrived home she found the sale had gone on without her and the garage was picked clean. However, she found a tally of items sold and the prices paid. All items were not only accounted for, but the collection amounted to $15.20... 75 cents more than there should have been. Seventy-five cents. At today's prices, it won't buy much, but it

Friendly Bandit 'Glad' She Is Finally Caught

DETROIT (AP) — She apologized to clerks for robbing their stores — she'd been beaten, she said, or her baby had died. Afterward, she called to make sure everyone was all right. Police called her the "Friendly Bandit," and the woman they arrested says she is glad she was caught. Rosemarie Wojtaszek, weeping while awaiting arraignment, said she resorted to robbing clothing stores because a bookmaker threatened her family over a $6,000 gambling debt. "See, I got these beautiful kids at home and a wonderful husband and I didn't want to hurt them," she said. Police said Mrs. Wojtaszek implicated herself in a string of robberies beginning Feb. 2 — three clothing stores in Detroit and five in the suburbs — and they believe her. After each of the eight cases, police said, store clerks noted how friendly, even apologetic, the woman was. Mrs. Wojtaszek, 39 and the mother of five, said she was addicted to gambling and hated robbing stores. She said she wanted to be caught. She was last Saturday, police said, after a woman wearing a red wig walked up to a clerk at a cash register in Fuhman's Apparel Shop, pulled a gun and said: "My baby died. I need money." The woman took $46, then demanded several articles of clothing, including three fur coats. While she gathered the clothes, a clerk called police. Mrs. Wojtaszek was arrested as she walked out the front door, police said. On Sunday she was arraigned for the Saturday crime. On Tuesday, after talking to police, she was arraigned for the Feb. 2 robbery of a dress shop — the first of the "Friendly Bandit" incidents. Police said they may charge her in the other robberies, and she was being held in Wayne County jail on $150,000 bond. In the Feb. 2 robbery, a middle-aged woman wearing a red wig got away with clothing worth about $350 after telling two elderly female clerks she had been beaten and needed money for an attorney. Afterward she called to make sure no one was hurt. "Those poor old ladies were so sweet to me," Mrs. Wojtaszek said Tuesday. "I never pointed the gun at them and when I got home, I was shaking like a leaf. I thought: 'Those poor old ladies. What if someone had a heart attack?' So I called back to see if everyone was all right." Mrs. Wojtaszek said her gambling addiction started with a few football bets and quickly grew into bets of up to $1,000, placed with a bookie she refused to name to reporters. Her husband, Herman, an auto worker, said the gambling losses amounted to $20,000 last year. He said he helped pay the debt and tried unsuccessfully to get his wife to seek help for her addiction. Mrs. Wojtaszek said the bookmaker called a few weeks ago and demanded immediate payment of the outstanding $6,000.

"He told me: 'Your kids might turn up missing, or we might put a bomb in your car. We know where your husband works.'"

"That's when I knew I couldn't stand it anymore," she said in a whisper. "When they began threatening my family, I had to do it."

Abby Suggested A Note Or Call

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1978 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: What business do YOU have telling people they should telephone the hostess (within a day or two) to thank her for a party?

When my guests say, "Goodnight and thank you," that is enough for me. I don't need to have a telephone call from each guest the following day, repeating their "thanks."

The day after a party I have plenty to do, putting things back and cleaning up the place. I certainly don't need to spend hours on the phone receiving repeated thank-yous!

A lot of people take your word as gospel, Abby, and if YOU say it's proper etiquette to do something, people are going to do it. Please take back what you said about telephoning the hostess the next day to thank her again. I had a party Saturday night, and by Monday I had a...

CORN ON MY EAR

DEAR CORN: Forgive me, but I also said, "The super-gracious guest writes a note, which is less of an intrusion than a telephone call."

DEAR ABBY: Thanks a lot for asking that mother who didn't want her 12-year-old daughter to start shaving her legs to please reconsider. You said, "How a girl feels about herself is very important." You're right, Abby.

I'm 13 and my mother won't let me shave my legs. Just about every girl in school shaves her legs, and some even slip behind their mothers' backs to do it.

I don't want to go against my mother, but I wish she'd let me shave. When the kids at school laugh and make fun of me, I pretend I don't care, but I do. Can you put in a good word for me?

HAIRY

DEAR HAIRY: If you want to shave your legs because all the other girls do, it's not a good enough reason. But if you're really "hairy," ask your mother to take a good look at your legs and to please be reasonable.

What a pity that when a girl reaches the age where her legs need shaving, her mother is at the age where SHE needs glasses.

DEAR ABBY: May I answer the woman who gets angry and upset when her husband "ogles" the girls?

She is making a big mistake to criticize him for it. My husband is like hers—only he's 72. He not only "ogles" the girls, he always has a compliment for waitresses and checkout girls. No matter what they look like, when he tells them they're pretty, they light up like a Christmas tree!

Why shouldn't men of any age enjoy looking at girls? As Oliver Wendell Holmes said when someone asked him how old a man had to be before he stopped looking at girls, "You'll have to ask somebody older than I am, son. I'm only 82."

MABEL

DEAR MABEL: And as the old vaudeville comics used to say, "A woman is as old as she looks, and a man isn't old until he quits looking."

CONFIDENTIAL TO MY READERS: If you have written to the Salvation Army requesting that they try to locate a missing relative, please be patient and do not write again. The requests are being processed as rapidly as possible.

Getting married? No matter how little you have to spend or how unconventional your lifestyle, it can be lovely. Send for Abby's new booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding." Enclose $1 and a long stamped (24 cents) self-addressed envelope to Abby: 132 Lasky Dr., Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.

Gasoline Tax Hike In Future

We may have a few years to get used to the idea but it is almost a certainty that we will face an increase in the state's nine cents per gallon gasoline tax soon.

Sen. James B. Garrison, D-Stanley, says the increase will come in 1981. "It's the only way," he flatly declares.

The Department of Transportation is faced with two problems insofar as revenues are concerned. One is the fact that sales of gasoline are not increasing as rapidly as once anticipated. The other is the escalating cost of building new roads.

Accordingly the Transportation board sees the possibility of the virtual end of new highway construction within five years unless there are additional sources of revenue.

There is, of course, the possibility that Congress will pass a new gasoline tax designed to discourage the use of petroleum products. If so the federal government might share the revenues with the states. Whether it is a federal tax or a state tax, however, the motoring public will pay it.

Other conditions might also affect the need for new highway construction dollars. There might be significant declines in traffic, for instance, if travel costs keep escalating.

Always, of course, those charged with the responsibility of building and maintaining highways should be looking for more efficient ways to construct them. As cars grow smaller could there be corresponding savings by using less right-of-way for highways, for instance?

Any tax increase in the years ahead is going to be tough to pass, we think. The public will have to be totally convinced the new taxes are needed if they are to be accepted.

Welcome Funds For Improving Airport

An $698,400 Department of Transportation grant for Pitt-Greenville Airport improvements has been announced by Rep. Walter B. Jones.

Some land will be purchased to provide clear zone and transitional area and approach clearing.

Reconstruction, marking and lighting of a runway are also included.

Pitt-Greenville has proven to be a well-used commercial airport and these funds for its improvement will be welcomed.

Heart Of Economic Woes

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH—A full-scale national commitment to finding a new source of energy is the key to resolving our economic woes, according to John R. Ingram.

The price and availability of energy supplies is at the center of the various symptoms of economic illness: inflation, unemployment, unbalanced governmental budgets, says the state's insurance commissioner and wouldbe U.S. Senator.

"When you look at our energy problems—the unavailability, the ripoffs—this contributes to inflation more than any other factor."

"It is vital to solve our energy situation," the candidate thinks. He is in a field of eight seeking the Democratic Party nomination in May to face Republican Senator Jesse Helms next November.

The ripoffs are coming from the monopolistic control of present energy sources—oil, natural gas especially—by firms which control not only vertically (from well to production to retail) but horizontally (coal, uranium, etc.).

Action?

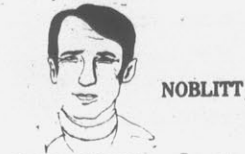

Would Ingram bust those monopolies? Or, would he advocate governmental takeover? To that, he won't answer directly.

He is opposed to deregulation of prices "at this time when there is a monopoly," and he favors stronger action under anti-trust laws by the Justice Department.

Meanwhile, Ingram suggests intensified conservation methods through all possible channels to "buy the 10 or 15 years we must have to develop alternate sources of energy."

To develop a new source will require "a national commitment such as that of John Kennedy to putting a man on the moon in 10 years."

It will cost billions—untold billions—of dollars to accomplish this, Ingram concedes. The job will have to be done by the federal government simply because the monopolistic petroleum companies either will not do the job because of their vested interests in the present system, or would further aggravate

NOBLITT

Once developed, the government should continue to own and operate the energy supply system while allowing the petroleum interests to use distribution and retailing facilities to reach the public. It works with federally generated electricity in the Rural Electrification Administration program, he pointed out.

Would the billions further unbalance the federal budget? "It is a matter of drawing priorities. We might have to take from one place to put another. But by putting dollars into solving the energy dilemma, we would ultimately be taking the strain off of our Social Security system; away from the unemployment crunch."

Health Insurance

As the campaign develops, Ingram is also making a strong pitch for reform in the national health situation. He proposes a national re-insurance facility similar to the auto liability system in North Carolina. Every person would be guaranteed health insurance coverage at a fair rate whether sick, elderly, or outside any possibility for existing group coverage. The poor would continue to be covered by Medicaid under the welfare system.

The result, says Ingram, would be health protection for all without increasing the cost to government and without need for a National Health Insurance program. He does agree that along with this a method of cost containment is needed, but has not developed a proposal.

Ingram is considered one of the top three contenders in the primary race. He is relying on his actions as insurance commissioner and as a state legislator before that to produce widespread support; especially his action to trim auto insurance rates for young drivers, or the parents of young drivers.

THE INSIDE REPORT

Jaworski On The Loose

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON—A spasm of fear is running through major allies of the United States that escalating demands on South Korea by famed investigator Leon Jaworski threaten to undermine established diplomatic practice and jeopardize their own relationship with the U.S.

By using threats to force a former South Korean ambassador to testify in the House Ethics Committee's Korea scandal probe, Jaworski has alarmed not only foreign allies but leaders of the House. His threat: if the testimony is withheld, he will insist that the House vote to shut off U.S. aid to Korea. But under the Vienna convention, approved by the U.S. Senate in 1965, no foreign diplomat can be compelled to give evidence.

Former Ambassador Dong

Washington by U.S. allies to observe it scrupulously, bars the U.S. from even approaching the Korean government with a similar deal for Dong Jo Kim. U.S. Ambassador Richard Schneider was ordered back to Washington last weekend for talks about the possibility of "persuading" the Koreans to let Kim submit a statement. However, pressure is out of the question.

The present Korean ambassador, Yong Sik Kim, told House speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jan. 31 there would be no chance whatever for the U.S. to coerce Seoul into compelling Dong Jo Kim to testify. When O'Neill asked whether that ruled out a "dialogue" — presumably long-distance — the ambassador said nothing that violated the Vienna Convention would be possible.

That leaves the ball in the court of hard-driving Col. Jaworski. Watergate hero turned Korea scandal prober. Even House leaders privately are fearful of military-foreign policy implications of congressional reprisals against South Korea for refusing to produce Dong Jo Kim. What, then, is the source of Jaworski's power to carry out his threat of reprisals?

The answer is partly his towering reputation as the nation's preeminent prosecutor of official scandal. Beyond that, however, it rests on Jaworski's flat statement on "Meet the Press" Feb. 4 that "there are a few" present members of Congress who could be charged with "criminal misconduct" in the Korea scandals. Justice Department probers definitely have not yet reached that conclusion, and may never reach it.

But having labelled "a few" sitting members as likely to be found guilty of bribery or perjury, Jaworski has covered the whole Congress with deep suspicion. "Jaworski's threat (of congressional retaliation against South Korea) is a most drastic one in the case of Dong Jo Kim," a leading Democrat on the House International Relations Committee told us. "But we are so sensitive to the integrity problem that he could deliver on it."

One House Republican leader privately admits the true reason Congress would risk alienating its allies and gravely damaging its vital defense agreement with (Continued on page 5)

BEFORE WE GET ONE PROBLEM ANSWERED--

By MICHAEL PUTZEL

Kennedy Wins A Point

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, a longtime champion of national health insurance, appears to have won a behind-the-scenes battle with the Carter administration to get the president's health care plan before Congress this summer.

In the process, Joseph A. Califano Jr., secretary of Health, Education and Welfare, was undercut by the White House. Califano "got sandbagged in the service of the president," as one of his aides put it.

The Massachusetts Democrat drew the skirmish lines more than a year ago at Califano's confirmation hearings in the Senate. At the time, Kennedy extracted from the incoming secretary a schedule that put national health insurance on the administration's agenda early in 1978.

Less than four months later, in May 1977, the senator thought he detected some slippage in the schedule and told a United Auto Workers convention in Los Angeles that health insurance was "in danger of becoming the missing promise in the administration's plans."

The forum had been carefully chosen. The UAW had founded the Committee for National Health Insurance and had been a key supporter of Kennedy's far-reaching national health plan, under which the federal government would pay for health care for all Americans.

The day after Kennedy's appearance, Carter flew to Los Angeles to address the UAW convention and restated his plan "to submit legislative proposals early" in 1978.

Kennedy said he was pleased with Carter's statement, and the issue faded into the background while the administration struggled with other issues, such as an energy policy, welfare reform, tax revision and the Panama Canal.

At an Oct. 27 news conference, Carter said, "I was thinking the other day about what new major innovative proposals might be forthcoming next year and the year after. I can't think of any. I think we have addressed all of the major problems already."

Then, in December, Califano began sending out subtle signals that the health plan might have to await more guidance from the states.

Instead of complaining again publicly, Kennedy sought out UAW President Douglas A. Fraser, and together they called on Carter to tell him privately that they wouldn't stand for further delay.

The president, apparently realizing that national health insurance legislation had little chance of passage without labor support, reaffirmed his commitment.

Kennedy apparently was promised that the principles of the administration proposal would be completed in March and specific legislation would be submitted to Congress in time for Kennedy to hold hearings on it before adjournment in the summer or autumn.

Last week, Kennedy reportedly was setting a bill before his subcommittee by then.

Instead of complaining again publicly, Kennedy sought out UAW President Douglas A. Fraser, and together they called on Carter to tell him privately that they wouldn't stand for further delay.

The president, apparently realizing that national health insurance legislation had little chance of passage without labor support, reaffirmed his commitment.

Kennedy apparently was promised that the principles of the administration proposal would be completed in March and specific legislation would be submitted to Congress in time for Kennedy to hold hearings on it before adjournment in the summer or autumn.

Last week, Kennedy reportedly was setting a bill before his subcommittee by then.

Kennedy said he was pleased with Carter's statement, and the issue faded into the background while the administration struggled with other issues, such as an energy policy, welfare reform, tax revision and the Panama Canal.

At an Oct. 27 news conference, Carter said, "I was thinking the other day about what new major innovative proposals might be forthcoming next year and the year after. I can't think of any. I think we have addressed all of the major problems already."

Then, in December, Califano began sending out subtle signals that the health plan might have to await more guidance from the states.

Post On His Job Is Gone

By JULES LOH
AP Special Correspondent
CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — Going on 27 years Gene Looper has been on the job, never deserting his post. Now, after all those faithful years, his post has deserted him.

Gene Looper is the man-on-the-street interviewer on the radio.

Every morning during the quarter hour before noon, six days a week, he shows up on a downtown sidewalk, microphone in hand, asking passerby their opinions on current topics.

He has done this over a span of time ranging from: "Should General Eisenhower return from Europe and run for president?" (14 yes, four no, two no opinion) down to: "Should the Senate ratify the Panama Canal treaties?" (four no).

Gene Looper is nothing if not loyal to his task. Counting this morning's broadcast, he has been out on that sidewalk 7,866 times.

The irony is that while Looper is still downtown, downtown isn't.

Downtown has moved to the suburbs. What used to be downtown in the Sparkling City by the Sea, as the postcards call Corpus Christi, has become a lusterless landscape of empty buildings. In the block where Looper does his broadcast all but one storefront is boarded up.

Alas poor Looper, the man-in-the-street has become as rare a species downtown as the (Continued on page 5)

Veterans Administrator Frank Hines said today an engineer would visit various North Carolina cities soon to inspect possible sites for a new veterans hospital in the state.

The project was approved by the President recently. Hines said he believed the facility should be established near a city of at least 10,000 population and within 125 miles of the center of population of the area to be served.

Cities within the prescribed area which will be visited include: Charlotte, Winston-Salem, High Point, Wilmington, Rocky Mount, Gastonia, Salisbury, Kinston, New Bern, Concord, and Statesville.

Other cities, Hines said, would be inspected if deemed advisable.

A report on the law enforcement activities of the Pitt County ABC board and the cost for the period July 1-December 31, was released today by Charles O. Horne, chairman, showing expenditures of $6,996.63 out of an available fund of $18,529.92.

A review of the audit made by Williams and Wall of the Pitt County ABC board for the 6 month period shows a gross profit of $98,103.73, with a total expense of $18,600.70, and a net profit of $81,953.90.

To the editor:

I would like to express my appreciation for the position The Daily Reflector has taken with respect both to reporting and editorial comment on the industrial annexation question for the City of Greenville.

I recognize the City has a difficult problem to solve in order to continue its growth. However, both as an industrial manager and as a resident citizen of Greenville, I believe that increasing the tax rate of the major industry in the area by 60 to 70 percent would be detrimental to the economic growth of both Greenville and a Pitt County.

My hope is that the industrial and political leadership in this community can find solutions to these problems without the negative impact that annexation would surely cause. The Daily Reflector is to be commended for bringing this to the attention of Greenville citizens in a way that has been objective and has not been disparaging to either party. It is important in such an issue that the City's leadership be viewed as positive and that the industry be appreciated for its significant contribution, both to community leadership and economic contribution and growth.

May Hurt Retirement Income

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — The new Social Security law, which President Carter said "evolved after very careful and long preparation," is being dissected by critics just as carefully but much more swiftly.

The critics' common theme is that the law, which sharply increases payroll deductions to support benefits, might not have been so "wise" as the president deemed it at the Dec. 20 signing.

The reason for so thinking isn't only the huge increases in deductions to support benefits. Critics point out that it might also result in a relatively smaller contributions to retirement income. Yes, smaller.

"Millions of workers whose pensions are tied to Social Security may find their private pension benefits substantially reduced," says the public accounting firm of Coopers & Lybrand.

In some private plans, C&L explains, a company may provide a benefit of, for example, 1.4 percent on each year's earnings over the Social Security wage base.

Under the old law, a salaried employee receiving $40,000 a year — with a $20,400 Social Security wage base — had excess earnings of $19,600, and received a pension benefit of $274 a year.

But, it explains, under the new law, the same employee would in 1980 find his Social Security wage base had jumped to $25,000, leaving him excess earnings of just $14,000.

That, of course, would mean a drop in his accrual benefit from $274 to $197, a decline of $77 or 28 percent.

So-called "stepped up" plans also would be hurt. In these, an employee receives benefits of perhaps 1 percent up to the SS wage base, and maybe 2 percent on each year's earnings over the base.

"Every plan that coordinates its benefits or contributions with Social Security must be reviewed now," said the accounting firm. And, it notes, thousands of the 600,000 existing plans are so tied.

The firm of Kwasha Lipton, an international actuarial and employee benefits consultant, is now circulating a detailed "special bulletin" in which it cautions that the new law means lower benefits for some.

Those likely to be hurt, it states, are employees born after 1916 whose benefits begin after 1978. "Social Security benefits will follow a dramatically different course than under prior law," it observes.

Under both laws, it calculates, a person age 65 who retires in 1978 at a salary average of $20,000 over the final five years on the job will receive as a Social Security benefit 31.9 percent of that amount.

But in future years, this consultant estimates that retirees will receive a much lower percentage of final pay under the new law than under the old.

For those retiring in the year 2018, it estimates, the width of the gap could be on the order of 51.2 percent under the old law, 34 percent under the new.

The principal impact of the December law, it concludes, is to produce lower benefits for employees born in 1917 or later and an increase in taxes.

Private consultants aren't the only ones having doubts.

Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal, just a few weeks after passage of the bill, told the Joint Economic Committee that the entire business of Social Security, including financing, might be reconsidered.

But the biggest criticism of all is likely to come from employees and employers, both of whom are by law required to pay huge increases in annual maximum taxes beginning in 1979.

In that year the maximum rises to $1,403.77 from this year's $1,070.85. In 1980 the maximum moves up to $1,587.67, and then it jumps to $1,975.05 a year later.

Korea: "It's not total cowardice but it is a little bit craven. Given the low esteem of Congress, it's the equivalent of Richard Nixon saying, 'I am not a crook,' and not daring to tell Jaworski that he's going too far to prove it."

This Republican leader — never remotely touched by any aspect of the Korea scandal — would definitely vote to cut aid to South Korea if Jaworski presses his case that far. . . Careful White House and State Department head-counters see no chance at all of defeating Jaworski if such a vote were held today.

There can be little doubt that Jaworski will make good on his threat if South Korea protects its diplomatic rights under the Vienna convention. He tells any Congressman who asks that failure to get testimony from Dong Jo Kim will compel Jaworski to inform the American voters his investigation cannot succeed. . . Such madcap investigatory antics may further enshrine Leon Jaworski in the hearts of his countrymen. But the cost to American interests throughout the world could be exorbitant.

HEW Secretary Will Seek Tougher Warning

By JANET STAIHAR
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Calling the present health warning on cigarette packages "utterly inadequate," Health, Education and Welfare Secretary Joseph A. Califano Jr. says he will recommend that the warning be toughened.

Califano, testifying Wednesday before a House health subcommittee on his nationwide anti-smoking campaign, did not give details on how he would propose stiffening the label warning.

But he did point out Sweden's so-called "fortune cookie" approach that calls attention to the hazards of smoking.

In Sweden, 16 different warnings are rotated among all packages to decrease the likelihood the notice will simply be overlooked. It also provides the public with much more information than could be communicated in a single notice, said Califano.

In the mid-1960s, Congress passed a law requiring all advertising and cigarette packs to carry the following message: "Warning: The Surgeon General Has Determined That Cigarette Smoking Is Dangerous to Your Health."

Califano also reiterated that HEW and the Treasury Department are studying whether the excise taxes on cigarettes should be increased.

"Evidence from this country and abroad indicates that a 20 percent price increase — an increase of about 10 to 15 cents a pack — could lead to an overall smoking reduction of at least 5 to 10 percent," said Califano.

The excise tax has been 8 cents a pack since 1951.

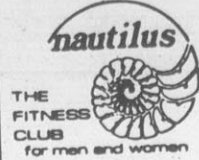

HEW is also exploring whether a higher tax would affect the choice of the young, beginning smoker, said Califano.

In addition, he said, HEW and the Federal Trade Commission will look into what may constitute unfair or deceptive advertising targeted at children or teenagers.

Califano said young people often respond to the cigarette industry's $500 million advertising campaign in newspapers, magazines and billboards that portray smoking as glamorous.

He said about 4,000 teenagers become cigarette smokers every day. About 100,000 children under age 13 are now regular cigarette smokers, he said.

whooping cranes that winter nearby.

"I used to have people lined up to get on the air," Looer said wistfully. "Now I'm lucky if I can snag three or four. I've had to make do with as few as two. It's sad, really, to watch downtown just die."

Sad, and a shame, because Corpus Christi still is a sparkling, breeze-caressed city, a city festooned with spires and palms and beaches washed by royal blue waters.

Like other cities its size across the nation, though, downtown yielded inexorably to the big shopping malls which are out where the people and the parking spaces are.

"I'd like to move out to a shopping mall myself," Looer said. "It's been talked about, but so far the station has been reluctant. It would be sort of admitting that downtown is dead. You've got to admit it sooner or later."

Meanwhile, Gene Looer has become a past master at filling what the radio people call dead air.

Waiting for somebody to wander by on the deserted street, he tells his listeners what the weather is like downtown. He tells them what the responses were to last week's question. He tells them what's on at the movies. "After so many years, you get the knack of it."

Looer gets nostalgic when he thinks about the days when dead air was no problem.

"It was a lively show. I had regulars who would come by all the time. When the question involved some hot local issue people used to pull up to the curb and wave him over. It was never any trouble getting someone on the air."

Getting them off was another thing. He's had to contend with more than a few drunks and, back when people walked the streets, a few streetwalkers.

Trucker Struck Blind, Safely Guided By CB

EL DORADO, Kan. (AP) — A truck driver suddenly struck blind while driving on the Kansas Turnpike was "CB talked" to a safe stop by another trucker whose name he never learned.

Francis Gilmore, 43, of Grand Rapids, Mich., said he went blind as his 40-ton rig, carrying eight new cars, sped along the turnpike east of El Dorado.

"I knew there was a box (tractor-trailer) behind me," Gilmore recalled Wednesday night. "I started hitting my brakes. I was all over the road. He came on the radio and kept saying 'Take it easy, take it easy.'"

As the two trucks sped along, the other driver kept feeding instructions to Gilmore, who admitted he was panicky.

"I owe my life to that man, he was really calm, really beautiful," Gilmore said. "Get calm, just get calm. Go to your right, go to your left...you're getting up to the edge, you're on the shoulder." Gilmore recalled the trucker telling him.

Then the comforting words, "You're okay now. Just shut it down."

Gilmore asked the trucker to go ahead for help. That was the last Gilmore heard of him.

A Kansas Highway Patrol trooper took Gilmore to the office of an El Dorado eye doctor, Dr. K.B. Dellett.

Dellett said Gilmore had "a very uncommon" condition, but that an examination of his eyes showed nothing permanently wrong. He would not comment further on possible causes of the condition.

Dellett also said he believed Gilmore's sight might be restored in a week or a month.

but there was no way of knowing. He added that Gilmore would likely undergo further tests.

Gilmore spent the night at a local motel, awaiting the arrival of his employer, Terry Keiger of C and J Transport, Lansing, Mich., who was to fly to Kansas today to return Gilmore to Lansing.

Gilmore, who said he has been driving trucks for 15 years and has nearly a million miles without an accident, was hauling cars from Lansing to Wichita, Kan., when he suddenly could not see.

He said he knew cars were headed toward him on the four-lane turnpike, which is separated only by a grassy median.

"I was just panicky that I'd hit and kill someone," Gilmore said, his voice breaking. "I feel that God was with me all the way."

And Gilmore credits the voice on the CB with saving his life.

"He saved my life...I know he did. I'd sure like to know who that gentleman was."

Damage from the mishap was estimated at $750 to the Tripp truck and $500 to the Howard car.

A 4:36 p.m. collision on Memorial Drive, 75 feet North of the South Village Drive intersection involved cars driven by Edward Earl Moyer of Route 1, Greenville, and Ralston Butler of Route 2, LaGrange.

Damage to the Moyer car was estimated at $200 while damage to the Butler vehicle was set at $175.

Scout Earns Eagle Badge

Edward Earl Dennis, Jr., a sophomore at Hobgood Academy, received the Eagle Scout Award during a ceremony in the Bethel United Methodist Church on February 12 during the morning service.

EDWARD E. DENNIS, Jr.

The young scout, a member of the Rotary Club sponsored Troop 15, was presented the award by Richard Kelley, District Scout Master of Greenville.

Ed is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Earl Dennis of Bethel. He chose as his Eagle service project, taping the Sunday morning church service of the Rev. Ellis Bedsworth, United Methodist minister and taking it into the homes of those unable to attend church and playing the tape for them or leaving it with them to enjoy alone.

Ed began his scouting career as a cub and advanced through Webelos and then into Boy Scouts as one of the last boys to enter Troop 15 under the long leadership of the late Carey Hammond.

He attended the National Jamboree in Pennsylvania in 1973, having been a scout for four years. He was an active den chief, and now holds the position of Senior Patrol Leader under the direction of Stuart M. Dennis, Scoutmaster.

Ed has earned nine skill awards and 29 merit badges. He is a member of the Bethel United Methodist Church.

Plant Decisions...

had received a verbal or written agreement during site discussions that there would be no future effort to annex the area. Griffin reported that "no statement concerning that" was made.

Questioned as to what effect the proposed increase would have on P&G's current construction of the Pampers production facility here, the plant manager commented that the effect was under study by management officials.

Griffin pointed out that the decision to construct the facility in Greenville was based on a wide variety of data that included only the existing tax rate.

"Obviously, our entire plan would need reevaluation in the event of annexation," he said.

G. Henry Leslie, plant manager at Burroughs Wellcome's pharmaceutical facility here, said that, "We have reported the whole situation to our board and president" and they have been brought up to date.

Leslie reported that one of Burroughs Wellcome's corporate lawyers has been appointed "to become involved in the matter."

The general manager of the local Empire Brushes plant, Joe Gantz, said that the company had received the annexation data and would be studying the plan between now and the scheduled March 21 public hearing on the matter.

Program Revisions On Grain Reserves

Pitt County ASCS Office
President Carter on Feb. 9 made final a 10 percent feed grain set-aside program for 1978 and increased the storage payment for the farmer-owned grain reserve program. He urged farmers to make maximum use of those two farm programs.
Approval of both program actions was recommended to the President by Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland.
"Farmers have the tools at hand to raise grain prices," Carter said. "By participating in the set-aside programs, they help cut the oversupplies that are currently holding down prices. By putting their grain in the reserve program, they will remove excess supplies from the market until farm prices rise."
"I urge farmers to take full advantage of these opportunities to improve prices," added the President.
He said that storage payments for grains held in the farmer-owned reserve program would be increased from 20 cents to 25 cents per bushel per year for the major grains. Farmers now storing grain in the reserve will be offered new contracts to reflect the 25-cent rate.

"We hope that this higher storage payment will encourage greater use of the farmer-controlled reserve program," Carter said. "Our goal is to have 30-35 million tons of food and feed grain in reserve prior to the beginning of the 1978-crop year."
"If our farmers use this program, it will have a positive impact on prices which are now too low, and will, at the same time, assure foreign buyers that we will be a reliable supplier of grain."
The President also said that Secretary Bergland has under consideration other actions that could be taken to improve farm prices and income.
Sign-up for the 1978 set-aside programs will begin March 1, and will be conducted through May 1, in the Department of Agriculture's Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service (ASCS) county offices.

Collect Sunday For Heart Fund

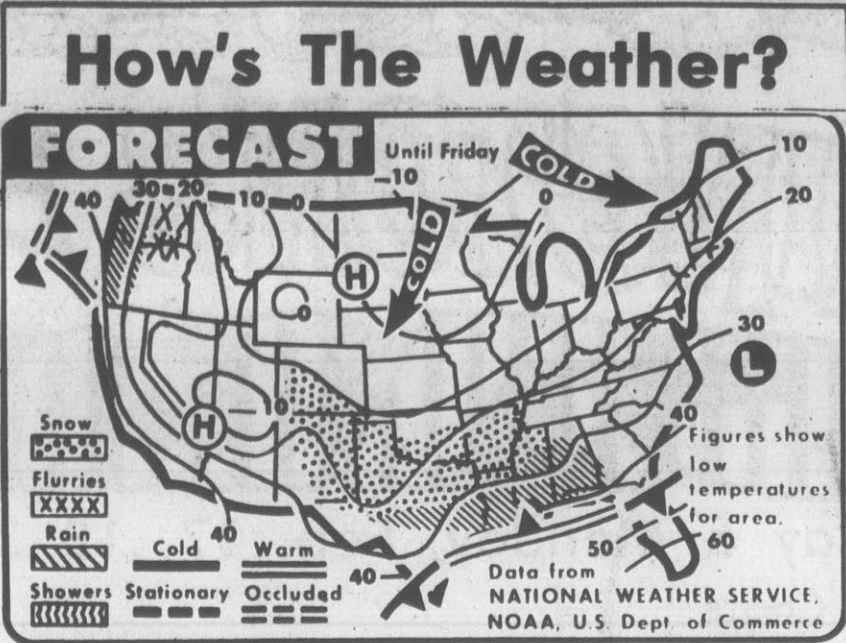

Volunteers for the Heart Fund will be soliciting donations door-to-door on both Sunday, Feb. 19, and Heart Sunday, Feb. 26, according to Camille Archie, Mothers March chairwoman.
"The Mothers March dramatizes the fact that heart and blood vessel disease is not confined to adults," said Archie. "For example, one out of every 150 babies is born with a heart defect."
Heart Sunday volunteers collected over $6,000 last year. Volunteers for this year's march are still needed.

Arrest Man As A Peeping Tom

Clifford Norris Kennedy of Route 1, Grimesland was arrested by Greenville police early this morning on peeping tom charges, according to Chief Glenn Cannon.
Cannon said Kennedy was charged after allegedly using a chair to stand on while looking into a room at 503 West Fourth St. occupied by four young women.

WEATHER FORECAST — A belt of snow and rain is forecast today from the Southwest to the eastern Gulf states. Rain is expected for the northern Pacific coast and snow flurries are due for the northern Rockies. Mild weather is indicated for the Pacific coast but most of the nation will be cold. (AP Laserphoto Map)

By The Associated Press
Rain and snow moved back into North Carolina today in connection with a weak disturbance that extended from northwest Florida into the mountain section. The disturbance spread rain over most of the state and snow in the northwest mountains where a travelers advisory was in effect for an expected accumulation of one inch of snow.
The rain was expected to be light with the heaviest occurring in the southeastern counties. The rain, ending from the west, should move out of the state by way of the northeast section.
Temperatures were expected to reach the 40s today and tomorrow. High readings Wednesday ranged mostly in the 50s. Wilmington had one of the warmest readings with 52 and 51 was recorded at Asheville, Charlotte and New Bern. It warmed to 50 degrees at Raleigh and Fayetteville.
Low readings this morning generally were in the 30s but slightly colder were Elizabeth City with 24, Rocky Mount 26 and Raleigh 29.

Club Planning Honor Helms

KINSTON — The North Carolina Congressional Club will honor U.S. Senator Jesse Helms at a dinner here February 24.
The 7 p.m. dinner will be held at the Shrine Club.

The dinner for Helms is being held to honor the North Carolinian for his leadership abilities and record in the U.S. Senate.
Helms is the first North Carolinian ever to win the prestigious Golden Gavel Award, presented to those Senators who have presided over the Senate for 100 hours or more in one session. Helms won an unprecedented second Golden Gavel award the following year.
According to Congressional Club officials, Helms has gained national recognition for his role in efforts to retain jurisdiction over the Panama Canal, and the Senator is particularly concerned over attacks on the University of North Carolina by the Department of Health, Education and Welfare.
The N.C. Congressional Club is a bipartisan political organization with thousands of members from throughout the state.
Helms is honorary chairman

Thermographic Flyover Fell Short Of Hopes

A thermographic flyover of the Greenville area last month failed to produce the desired results, but the lessons learned may prove to be the most beneficial part of the project, according to Reese Helms, energy conservation manager for the Greenville Utilities Commission.

Helms said, "a combination of windy conditions and some equipment problems," with the special infrared cameras used to take the aerial photographs, was responsible for the unsuccessful January 21 attempt to capture heat loss data about Greenville buildings and homes.

"Although the pictures obtained have some value," Helms said, "they are not of the quality we had hoped for." He said the presence of winds during the flight of the aircraft also caused some "gaps" in the area covered.

Even though the hoped-for results were not obtained from the aerial survey, Helms said a series of ground-level infrared pictures were taken, with excellent results. "In comparing ground-level infrared photos with aerial infrared photos, it is obvious that ground-level infrared thermography can give us much better results and much more meaningful information."

As a result, the commission is now considering several alternatives for future projects, according to the energy conservation director.

"Although we haven't entirely ruled out the possibility of another aerial attempt, we are going to seriously consider doing ground-level work," Helms said. "This type of approach would provide our customers with a very revealing look at how well their homes hold in heat and where heat is escaping," he said.

It is unlikely that there will be enough time to conduct another infrared survey this winter, according to Helms. However, commission officials are hopeful that the project can be carried out by next winter, Helms said.

"We believe that infrared thermography is a valuable energy conservation tool, and we plan to explore ways to use it so as to provide the greatest benefit to our customers," Helms emphasized.

S.C. Court Rules Resentencing Of 6 Murderers

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — Six convicted murderers tried and sentenced under an unconstitutional death penalty law cannot be executed and must be resented to life imprisonment, the South Carolina Supreme Court ruled Wednesday.

The court, in a unanimous opinion, found that the six defendants had been deprived of the benefits of a two-stage trial and various procedural safeguards contained in a later capital punishment law.

The earlier law, enacted in 1974, was declared unconstitutional in July 1976 by the U.S. Supreme Court.

The South Carolina court, in an opinion sought by state Attorney General Daniel R. McLeod, said the death penalty act which became law last June 8 could not be applied "retrospectively."

McLeod, in a hearing Jan. 9, asked the Supreme Court to send the six murderers — convicted and ordered executed under the 1974 law — back to trial courts so they could be resentenced under the 1977 law.

The new statute provides for a "bifurcated" or two-part trial, in which the jury first determines guilt or innocence and then, if a guilty verdict is returned, decides whether the defendant should be executed or sentenced to life imprisonment.

Two of the six convicted murderers — Thomas Earl Rodgers Jr. and Ran Brian Cason — had already been resentenced to life imprisonment, as have 16 other inmates who had been on Death Row.

The court remanded Donald H. "Pee Wee" Gaskins Jr., Charles Wakefield Jr., James E. MacPhee and Archie Allen to trial courts for resentencing to life imprisonment.

Five other inmates on Death Row at the Central Correctional Institution will be affected by the ruling, but their full appeals have not been heard yet.

Assistant Attorney General Brian Gibbs said Wednesday his office will not ask for a sentencing trial for those five men.

In its opinion ordering the resentencing, the court said, "Not only were the crimes committed at a time when an invalid capital punishment statute was in effect, but each defendant was tried and sentenced under that statute. Thus, they did not receive the benefits of a bifurcated trial nor were they afforded the additional safeguards provided by the Act of 1977."

The new safeguards which the court said the six convicted murderers did not receive include 30 days notification that the state will seek the death penalty, court appointment of two attorneys to represent an indigent and payment of defense attorney fees.

The court said attorneys for the defendants also were not provided with up to $2,000 for investigation, expert witnesses and other necessary services, as required by the new law.

The Supreme Court took issue with state arguments that the 1977 law may be applied "retrospectively."

"To the contrary, our reading of the Act convinces us that it was the intent that no one suffer the death penalty unless and until the whole bifurcated trial was conducted at both stages consistent with the Act of 1977," the justices said.

Cleared Again

NEW YORK (AP) — J.P. Stevens & Co. Inc. has announced that two labor union charges against its Milledgeville, Ga., plant have been dismissed by the National Labor Relations Board regional office in Atlanta.

The company said Wednesday the dismissals brought to eight the number of charges filed by the Amalgamated Clothing and Textile Workers Union against Stevens. Georgia plant that have been dismissed for lack of merit.

The NLRB's Office of Appeals in January upheld the dismissal of two earlier charges that two workers were dismissed for union activity. The board ruled they were fired for breaking a legitimate company regulation against fighting on company property.

"We are pleased with the results of the latest investigation. The ruling is based on facts and law," a company spokesman said.

Bomb Blasts In San Juan

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (AP) — Bombs exploded in three U.S. bank branches and two department stores early today, causing damage but no reported injuries, police said.

A police spokesman said the bombs exploded between 2:30 a.m. and 4:30 a.m. in two branch offices of the Chase Manhattan Bank, one of Citibank and in the Woolworth's and Barker's stores.

There was no estimate of damages, but police said it was heavy in at least one of the banks and the two department stores.

It was the second terrorist attempt in one week against American-owned firms on this U.S. commonwealth.

Another Chase Manhattan branch was bombed last week and a group calling itself the People's Revolutionary Army claimed credit, saying it was in support of a strike against the Water Resources Authority, a state-owned electric utility.

The strike over wage demands started seven weeks ago.

Still Afraid Of 'Insane' Blanton

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Former elementary school principal Clarence Blanton has been ordered to stay away from the school where he worked, but teachers who once worked for Blanton say they're still frightened of him.

Blanton was found innocent by reason of insanity Monday of kidnap and assault charges in connection with an incident in which he allegedly held 32 educators hostage at gunpoint in the school library.

"I'm fearful for my life and I don't know what to do about it," said Mrs. Barbara Penick. "I'm just extremely upset."
 "I'm scared for myself and a lot of teachers," said Mrs. Wanda Grantham after the trial verdict. "If the man is insane, as they say he is, his behavior is erratic...I didn't want to see that man in jail. I just wanted him away from me."
 "I'm still a little scared," said Betty Becker.

Conrail Asking For $1.3 Billion

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Officials of Conrail, predicting five-year losses of $35 million, have asked the government for nearly $1.3 billion in additional financing.
 Under its new five-year plan, Conrail said it expects substantial losses until 1980, when it expects to turn a small profit.
 However, it said the profits it projects for the 1980-82 period were not expected to be great enough to make the entire five-year plan, which runs through 1982, a profitable one.

Conrail now gets $2.1 billion in government loans and loan guarantees financed through the United States Railway Association. The report said Conrail will exhaust the appropriation when it obtains $874 million through the sale of debentures and preferred stock this year and next.

Superior Court Judge Henry McKinnon Wednesday decided to let Blanton remain free for at least six months, saying he didn't consider the former Bethesda Elementary School principal dangerous to himself or others.

"Some teachers are extremely scared," said Superintendent Frank Yeager, who was among the 32 held at gunpoint. "It's hard to teach children when you're scared... (but) it's over now and people have got to get back to living a normal life and concentrate on other issues."

SISTER DIES
 LOS ANGELES (AP) — Elizabeth Moore, sister of actress Mary Tyler Moore, died Wednesday at the Burbank apartment of a relative, police reported. She was 21.

The judge said Blanton must continue meeting conditions set down at a pretrial competency hearing. He must visit a psychiatrist weekly, he must live outside Durham and he must avoid any contact with school staff or county school officials. Since the incident, Blanton has been living in a mobile home in Oxford.

NEW YORK (AP) — Prices tumbled again in the stock market today amid fears of rising interest rates and concern over the slumping dollar.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, which closed Wednesday at a 34-month low, fell another 8.40 to 753.29 by noon today.

Losers outstripped gainers by a 3-1 margin among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

One drag on the market was the expectation among a number of analysts that the Federal Reserve was aiming to tighten credit further by encouraging short term interest rates to rise.

Another was the dollar's resumption of its months-long slide against leading foreign currencies.

Brokers also pointed to some negative reports on the economy issued by the government late Wednesday. The data showed sharp declines in both retail sales and industrial output last month, reflecting the adverse winter weather that disrupted activity in much of the country.

Weyerhaeuser led the active list, down 3/4 at 22 1/2. A 213,000-share block traded at 21 1/2.

Massey-Ferguson, also active, dropped 1/4 to 9 1/4 after a 2 1/2-point loss Wednesday, when the company estimated a $38 million loss for its latest fiscal quarter and omitted its dividend.

The NYSE's composite index was off .37 at 48.97, and the American Stock Exchange market value index fell .77 to 122.69.

Volume on the Big Board reached 10.40 million shares by noon, up from 8.71 million at the same point Wednesday.

The New Champion

Spinks Wins Split Decision Over Ali

By ED SCHUYLER JR.
AP Sports Writer

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — "I'll be back. I'll be the first man to win the world championship three times," said Muhammad Ali, today a 36-year-old challenger for the heavyweight title.

Ali has backed up his boasts many times. But maybe an era really has ended.

Leon Spinks, the 24-year-old with just seven previous pro fights, stripped the title from Ali Wednesday night after applying pressure for 15 rounds. Ali was reeling at the final bell and Spinks gained a split decision.

It was a stunning upset matching Ali's triumph over Sonny Liston when he won the heavyweight title for the first time in 1964 and his knockout of George Foreman when he won it for the second time 10 years later.

"I tried hard," said Spinks and he certainly did, overcoming Ali's advantages in size and experience with grim determination. He never lost his cool as so many of Ali's opponents did in the past. He never was awed.

"I thank God," the new champion said. "God's the main man. Lord knows I tried hard."

"I'll give Ali another chance." Already, promotional infighting — often more vicious than the fighting in the ring — is under way.

Jose Sulaiman, president of the World Boxing Council, said Spinks, along with Ali, made an agreement that the winner would sign by April 7 for a defense against No. 1-ranked Ken Norton within 90 days of that date. The Norton people know about such an agreement.

"Are you kidding?" said Bob Arum, who promoted Wednesday night's fight and has a promotional contract for Spinks' next six fights.

"Sulaiman is a joke. Spinks will fight somebody respectable next and then fight Ali again. Spinks hasn't agreed to anything."

The battle to provide Spinks' next opponent, if it is not Norton, should be royal. Possible opponents include Bernardo Mercado of Colombia, whom Ali might have fought in defiance of the WBC edict, and South Africans Kallie Knoetze, who recently knocked out Duane Bobick, and Gerrie Coetzee.

It is not considered likely that No. 2-ranked Jimmy Young or the winner of an upcoming fight between Larry Holmes and hard-hitting Earnie Shavers will be in the running as Spinks' next opponent.

"I gave the best I could, said Ali. "I knew he was a good fighter. It was a close fight. He was the aggressor. It could have gone either way."

Judge Art Lurie scored it 143-142 for Ali under the 10-point must system and when his decision was announced, Spinks' handlers looked stunned. But then the announcer read off the cards of Harold Buck, 144-141, and Lou Cabat, 145-140, and announced, "the new heavyweight champion of the world, Leon Spinks."

The Associated Press scored it 143-142 for Ali, but gave Spinks the last three rounds.

The question mark before the fight was Spinks' ability to go 15 rounds against a man of Ali's size and vast experience. The longest Spinks had fought previously was 10 rounds and one of those fights, against Scott LeDoux, ended in a draw.

"What surprised me was his strength and stamina," said Ali, who wilted before the brawling Spinks in the final three rounds and who looked much older than 36 at the end.

Ali, trying to make Spinks punch himself out in the early rounds and picking his spots with jabs, hooks and an occasional right lead, still was in the fight after 12 rounds — he was leading on one card and even on another.

But then Spinks who weighed 197 1/2 pounds less than Ali, and who was at a four-inch reach disadvantage, landed several good hooks and left-right combinations to the head in the 13th round. Spinks' trainer Sam Solomon said he thought Spinks had Ali going in that round but that he was foiled by his inexperience.

Spinks swarmed all over Ali in the 14th and hurt the former champion with a left hook midway through the round. At the end of the round, Ali's left eye was swollen.

The final three minutes were toe-to-toe all the way, with both fighters staggered. Ali was punching desperately but he couldn't keep Spinks off and just before the bell he appeared ready to go down.

"Ali's fighting on memory. He's fighting on guts," said Dr. Ferdie Pacheco, a CBS-TV commentator who worked in Ali's corner for many of his fights.

At the bell Ali wobbled to his corner, throwing out his left arm in a gesture of "well done."

Spinks' handlers jumped into the ring and joyously slapped the 1976 Olympic light heavyweight champion on the back. Across the ring the 1960 Olympic light heavyweight champion stood with his head down while his aids tended to him.

While Spinks' fans rejoiced, Ali left the ring, a shadow of the man who made "float like a butterfly, sting like a bee" his battle cry.

Back in his dressing room Ali said quietly to a few newsmen:

"Spinks sure proved you wrong. Some of you said he would go in two."

Ali was such a prohibitive favorite that there was no betting line. But Spinks also proved the smart money guys wrong.

Spinks earned $300,000 for his nationally televised shocker. His next purse will be much bigger.

Ali made $3.7 million but has seemingly lost a fight with Norton that could have brought him in the area of $10 million.

While Spinks was winning for the seventh time as a pro Ali was losing for only the third time in 36 fights and for the second time in title bouts.

Ali won the heavyweight title in his 20th pro fight by stopping an aging Liston in seven rounds on Feb. 25, 1964, when Spinks was 11 years old. The only title bout he lost before Wednesday night — he was stripped of the crown in 1967 for failure to accept military draft — was on a decision as a challenger to Joe Frazier March 8, 1971.

Martin In Two Wins

Martin Academy took two victories over Pace Academy in a pair of junior high basketball games yesterday. Martin won the girls' game 27-24 and the boys' game 31-28.

Marsha Griffon was the only player in the girls' game to hit double figures. She scored 11 points for Martin.

Ricky Simpson led the Martin boys with 17, while Frederick Pollard scored 15 and Marshall Rand 11 for Pace.

Jamesville Advances, Bears Are Ousted In B-H-M Tourney Play

JAMESVILLE — Jamesville's Bullets advanced in the opening round of the Beaufort-Hyde-Martin Tournament last night, while Bear Grass' boys fell by the wayside and concluded their season.

Jamesville topped Matamuskeet, 56-45, while the Bears, playing at Chocowinity, fell to the Indians, 59-57.

Jamesville inched out into a 9-8 lead in the first period of the game, and then pulled away in the second quarter. By the end of the first half, the Bullets had built up a 26-17 lead.

Jamesville continued to pull away in the third period, running their lead out to 43-27 by the end of the quarter. The Lakers were able to make a small comeback in the final period against the Bullet reserves, 18-13.

Ricky Whitehurst led Jamesville with 26 points, while Tommy DiNardo added 12. Jay Bryant and Ellis Spencer each had 12 to lead Matamuskeet.

Meanwhile, at Chocowinity, the Bears fell behind at the end of the first period, 15-13. But they put on a rally in the second quarter and took a 34-31 lead into intermission.

Chocowinity came back to oust the Bears, 12-8, in the third quarter, regaining the lead, 43-42. Then, in the final period, Chocowinity held off the Bears, 16-15, to cling to the lead and win it.

Henry McCuller led Chocowinity with 26 points, while Isiah Wilson added 11. Jackie Harrison led Bear Grass with 15, while Norris Wallace and Watson Rodgers each had 13 and Jesse Bullock had 12.

Jamesville advances to tonight's semifinal game against unbeaten Pantego, while the Bears have now completed their season.

A-G Boys, GC Girls Gain Semi-Finals

Jim Kyle

NORTH PITT'S BOYS pulled the biggest upset so far of the Eastern Carolina Conference basketball tournament Tuesday night with their 56-53 squeaker over D. H. Conley.

The Vikings, playing without 6-10 center Al Tyson, who was in bed with the flu, still were favored to win the game; but the Panthers played a fired-up fourth quarter and got some clutch foul shooting down the stretch.

Conley coach Shelly Marsh wasn't making any excuses about the gaping absence of the big man, either. If anything, Tyson's not being there should have been a psychological advantage to his team and should have made them play harder, but it didn't work that way. The Vikes didn't get the kind of leadership they needed from Mike Cox or Darryl Thompson and were unable to hold off North Pitt's late surge.

The win is not a major obstacle in Conley's quest for the state 3-A championship, however. With their second-place regular season finish, the Vikings will still be the second-seeded team from the ECC in next week's district tournament. And the fact that Marsh puts more stock in the district than conference tournament is evidenced by the fact that earlier this week he was scouting possible Northeastern Conference opponents rather than ECC opponents.

The Vikings will probably meet Roanoke Rapids, which defeated Edenton Monday and played Tarboro on Wednesday, in the first round of the district, which will be played at Ayden-Grifton.

NORTH PITT'S VICTORY puts the Panthers into tonight's semi-final game with Ayden-Grifton, and if they win there, they will face North Lenoir in the finals. Although the Chargers are favored to beat the Panthers, North Pitt has been successful against Ayden-Grifton this year.

The seventh-seeded Panthers play the type of game that could defeat the first-place Hawks.

North Pitt's methodical, time-consuming offense just might be the perfect counter to North Lenoir's run-and-gun attack. And if the Panthers can keep the game close, they could have a chance for another big upset and a successful defense of their conference title. It would take a near-perfect game to stop the Hawks the way they are playing right now, but the Panthers' control offense might be the ultimate weapon.

ACC Basketball Notebook

Wake Forest's Rod Griffin, the ACC's leading scorer and rebounder, has been notified that he is being considered for a pair of prestigious college basketball awards.

Last week, the Los Angeles Athletic Club announced the results of an NBA scouting survey to determine the top-rated seniors of the country. Griffin was among the top four. The John R. Wooden Award is presented annually by the Club to the outstanding player in the nation.

Griffin was also notified that he is in the running to receive the Eastman Award, a presentation made each year by Eastman-Kodak to the nation's top college cager.

Duke's Mike Gminski appears to be totally recovered from his sprained toe, which kept him on the bench for two games. He scored 32 points against Davidson with 13 of 17 shots from the floor. In the two games since his return to the Blue Devil lineup, Gminski has connected on 20 of 25 field goal attempts.

Lady Pirates Hosting Meet

East Carolina University's gymnastics team will play host to Georgia College and Longwood College in a tri-meet Friday night at 7 p.m.

The event will be held in Minges Coliseum.

Georgia College is currently ranked 17th in the nation and was the winner of Region III last year, advancing to national competition.

"This should be our finest home meet of the year," said Coach Stevie Chepko. "Each team will present a very high calibre of gymnastics with their top people."

"I really expect a real close battle for the top spot in all-around with Susan McKnight and Mary Hubbard, our top two freshmen, very much competing for that honor." The Lady Pirates competed in the Georgia College Invitational back in November and finished a strong second to host Georgia College.

"Our routines are getting very consistent at this point," added Chepko, "and that's good with the state championships coming up next month."

"As for the meet Friday, we'll face our same problem of depth against the excellent teams. However, we'll give a good show and the thing to remember is that we'll have two events going on at all times, so the folks attending will see excellent gymnastics at all times."

Reflector Sports Writer
WHEAT SWAMP—Regular-season champion and host team North Lenoir proved inhospitable to Farmville Central in the first semi-final game of the Eastern Carolina Conference tournament last night as the Hawks defeated the Jaguars 77-68 in a game that wasn't as close as the final score indicated.

The strong Hawks were able to win easily despite the fact that leading scorer Mitchell Wiggins, who averages 28 points per game, didn't even scratch the scoring column. Going inside, however, North Lenoir was able to feed center Amos Pearcill time after time underneath and the lanky postman poured in 32 points to pace the winners.

The semi-final match-up was the third game last night. In the first game Ayden-Grifton handily turned back Southern Nash 66-48 in a first-round contest, while Farmville Central's girls were downed by Greene Central 47-45, also in the first round.

Tonight, the remaining three semi-final contests will be played as D. H. Conley's girls face North Pitt at 5:30, North Pitt's boys take on Ayden-Grifton at 7 and C. B. Aycock's girls square off with Greene Central at 8:30.

A-G Boys 66, SN 48
The Chargers ran into some early problems with the officials, but turned things around in the second quarter and turned the game into a rout in the second half.

Some early foul calls, two on center James Leggett, drew the ire of Ayden-Grifton coach Bob Murphrey and the expression of his opinions prompted two technicals in the game's first two minutes.

Those two calls helped Southern Nash build up a 9-0 lead, and despite two baskets each by Frankie Dail and Hosea Coley, the Firebirds led 16-9 going into the second quarter.

"We got down early, but I was proud of the way our guys fought back," Murphrey said after the game. "We were handcuffed our defense picked up a little bit."

The Chargers were also hurt in the first quarter by ten turnovers. "We got some turnovers, but it was just a matter of intensity. We had to build up to it. We beat them bad week before last."

Sheldon McCarter started to open up in the second quarter, hitting two jumpers from the top of the key and a layup at the 3:25 mark to pull the Chargers to within one 20-19. After a Southern Nash free throw, Dail tied the game at 21 with a shot from the left corner. McCarter hit another shot from the top of the circle to make it 28-28 at the half.

The Chargers came out red hot in the third quarter, hitting eight of nine shots from the field. Center James Leggett began to control the backboards and seven turnovers in the period was all that held Ayden-Grifton back. Nonetheless, the Chargers still built up a 14-point lead in the period with McCarter, Leggett and Donnie Jackson all scoring twice.

The Chargers stretched their margin out to 19 in the final period and won by 18.

Murphrey said Ayden-Grifton's layoff before its first tournament game could have affected his team and admitted the Chargers handled the Firebird press poorly and were careless with the ball.

He had praise for Dail, Leggett, and McCarter, as well as Coley, who gave the team a lift coming off the bench.

McCarter scored 17 points in the game. Leggett 16 and Dail 14. Southern Nash was led by Dwight Mitchell with 19.

GC Girls 47, FC 45
The Lady Jaguars fought to a seven-point lead in the third quarter, but went cold in the game's final minutes and allowed the Ewes to score the last six points for a 47-45 victory.

Greene Central took advantage of some cold shooting in the first quarter to build up a 12-6 lead, but Farmville Central began to press and quickly tied the score in the second quarter on a pair of shots by Dianne Barrett and a layup by Etta Gorham.

The game see-sawed for a few minutes, but Barrett scored six straight points to give Farmville Central a 22-18 lead, and the Lady Jaguars opened up their biggest margin with 56 seconds left in the third quarter when Terri Lloyd's foul shot made it 41-34.

Greene Central was still down by six in the fourth quarter when two free throws by Pam Moye made it 45-39 with 5:42 left. But the Jaguars ballhandling got sloppy when quarterback Diana Gordon fouled out and Iris Pridgen's follow shot with 2:59 left tied the game at 45.

Pridgen added a free throw with 2:02 left and the Lady Jaguars failed to take advantage of several scoring opportunities in the final two minutes. Marilyn Yelverton hit from the free throw line with just three seconds on the clock to make it 47-45.

The loss was a disappointing one to Farmville coach Hilda Worthington. The Lady Jaguars' season is now over.

"I think the last quarter beat us," she said, blaming her team's inexperience and foul problems.

Greene Central coach Jim Fulghum said, "I felt like if we could get a tie in the fourth quarter we could win." The coach said his team's defense wasn't as good as he would like, but the Ewes moved the ball well. He also praised the play of Paula Brown.

Barrett led all scorers with 17 points for Farmville, while Gorham had 13. Greene Central was led by Melody Ham with 13, most from outside. Pridgen with 12 and Brown with 10.

NL Boys 77, FC 68

The Jaguars were able to keep the game close for half a quarter, but the Hawks began to penetrate Farmville's match-up 1-3-1 zone and Amos Pearcill went to work on the inside to lead North Lenoir to the win.

The most surprising thing about the game was the fact that Hawk ace Mitchell Wiggins, who led the ECC in scoring this year, wasn't able to put a single point on the board. Wiggins shot less than ten times in the game (most of those were taken early) and got into some foul trouble.

Farmville: N. Lenoir

"We're just glad to be alive," said Hawk coach Jerry Walton. "When your leading scorer don't scratch, you're glad to be alive." Walton said the Hawks were "kind of thrown off a little bit," by Wiggins' lack of scoring, but couldn't explain why the 6-4 guard was not hitting. He was bothered by the flu earlier this week, but Walton said, "I thought it was about over." Walton said Mitchell gets down on himself when he has an off night and "when he thinks he's off, he won't shoot."

The coach did see a bright side in the evening, however. "I'm glad to see we can still play without him."

The Hawks built up an early 10-4 lead, but Farmville Central scored six straight to tie it at 10 before North Lenoir reeled off the last ten points of the first quarter, four by Pearcill, to take a 20-10 edge into the second period.

Donald Freeman and Donald Reid began to score to help the Jaguars stay close and two follow shots by Reid cut the lead

Lady Wolfpack Turns Back Lady Bucs

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

N.C. State's nationally ranked women's basketball team proved too much for East Carolina University last night, as the Lady Wolfpack powered to a 92-73 victory over the Lady Pirates.

Too much height, a too-tight defense, and a fine shooting percentage by N.C. State proved the difference for the fifth-ranked club as they won their second of the year over East Carolina.

State trailed only once, in the opening seconds of the game, when Debbie Freeman gave East Carolina a 2-0 lead 30 seconds into the game. But 15 seconds later, Trudi Lacey hit a baseline jumper to tie it up, and she followed that up with a drive 30 seconds later for a 4-2 State lead.

East Carolina twice tied it up, at 4-4 and 6-6 before State ran off five straight baskets to run out to a ten point lead with 14:28 left in the first half.

Freshman Ginger Rouse and 6-2 sophomore Genia Beasley each hit two of the baskets in that streak, while Lacey added the fifth.

East Carolina, unable to put any baskets together over most of the half, eventually trailed by as much as 16 point during the half, 30-14, but closed to within 12 at the end of the period, 41-29.

In the second half, the Lady Pirates struck first and got within eight, 41-33, but State again pulled away. The Pirates came back within eight several other times, but each time, State would widen the gap, pushing out by 17 with 9:10 left, 69-52.

The margin reached its maximum at 21, 92-71, just before the end.

"I just wish they hadn't shot so well in the first half," a disappointed coach Catherine Bolton said. "That kind of deadened our hopes of beating them."

State hit on 74 per cent of its first half shots, and ended up hitting 62 per cent for the game. East Carolina made only 34 per cent of its first half shots and had just 42 per cent in the game.

Oddly enough, State was outbounded by the Lady Pirates, 31-30, despite a definite height advantage.

"We had some defensive lapses due to the noise," Bolton said, referring to a deafening "Noise Night" crowd of 1,700 to kept up a continuing racket throughout the game.

"It bothered us some. We change defenses a lot, but we didn't expect it to be this noisy. I'm sure that it caused State some problems too."

"Don't get me wrong, here, either, we really appreciate the fans' support and the noise. It was just a different experience."

State Coach Kay Yow echoed Bolton's sentiments on the noise. "It was something that had to be experienced to be believed. But I think it was good for both teams to play under conditions like that."

Bolton said one thing that hurt the Pirates was their inability to get the ball inside during the first half. "We had openings, but we didn't take advantage of them. I still think that if we play at our best, we can beat them."

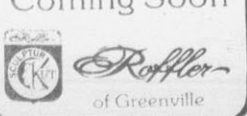

The Lady Pirates may get one more shot, but it will have to be in the state tournament, to be held here starting March 2.

Rouse led the State scoring with 22 points, while Lacey had 20 and Beasley had 20. June Doby, 6-5, added 11 points.

East Carolina's Rosie Thompson paced the Lady Bucs with 22 points, while Lydia Rountree had 13. Debbie Freeman had 12 and Gale Kerbaugh had 10.

The Lady Pirates return to action Saturday night meeting North Carolina in Minges Coliseum.

The Doctor May Be Sick, But 76ers Remain In Great Shape

By ALEX SACHARE
AP Sports Writer

The Doctor is ailing but the Philadelphia 76ers remain in fine condition, thanks to the medicine provided by Doug Collins.

Julius Erving, hospitalized last week because of a mild case of phlebitis in his left leg, missed his fourth game Wednesday night. But the 76ers posted their third victory in Dr. J's absence, beating the Detroit Pistons 116-113 behind a season-high 36 points by Collins.

"The big difference this year is the guys are looking for the hot man on this team," said Collins, who has averaged 32.3 points in the four games Erving has been sidelined. "Last year there was a tendency for everyone to go his own way to fatten his average."

"That hasn't been the case this year and that's one of the reasons I think we've been doing so well and can withstand the absence of a great player like Julius Erving."

Detroit led 62-58 at halftime, but Collins sank nine baskets in the third period and two more early in the fourth to help the Sixers to a 104-96 lead.

Detroit bounced back to regain the lead at 111-110 with 3:52 to go on three baskets by Eric Money and two each by John Shumate and Leon Douglas. But Money fouled out shortly after and Bibby hit two quick baskets and Steve Mix sank a pair of free throws to give the Sixers their seventh victory in the last nine games.

Philadelphia extended its lead over idle New York in the National Basketball Association's Atlantic Division to 10½ games.

Elsewhere in the NBA, the Portland Trail Blazers edged the Atlanta Hawks 102-99, the Houston Rockets beat the Indiana Pacers 126-122 and the Milwaukee Bucks defeated the New Orleans Jazz 112-99.

The Pistons were without one of their top players, center Bob Lanier, who suffered a pinched nerve in his neck Monday against New Jersey.

Shumate led Detroit with a career-high 30 points and Money added 28. Mix, who played briefly for the Pistons, scored 26 for Philadelphia.

Blaizers 102, Hawks 99

Reserve guard Johnny Davis scored 19 points as Portland raised its record to 44-9. Portland led by as many as 10 points in the first half, saw Atlanta close within three at 56-53 midway through the third quarter and then regained control on three baskets by Davis.

John Drew led Atlanta with 32 points.

Rockets 126, Pacers 122

Mike Newlin scored 15 of his 27 points in the fourth quarter to send Indiana to its 11th loss

Crompton To Miss Games

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Because of an NCAA ruling, center Geff Crompton of 11th-ranked North Carolina has been declared ineligible for the last four games of the regular season. And coach Dean Smith isn't a bit happy about it.

"It's a grossly unfair ruling," Smith said Wednesday night after Crompton was deemed ineligible because he played in a recreational basketball league in Burlington, N.C., in December 1976 while he was not enrolled at North Carolina.

Crompton, a 6-foot-11, 325-pound senior from Burlington, will be forced to sit out one game for each game he played in the recreational league.

"Geff Crompton has the two best games of his career, then the long arm of the NCAA says we have to declare him ineligible," Smith complained.

"He played four games in recreational league in his hometown in the year and a half he was out of school," Smith said. "We're lucky he only played four games. North Carolina will go on, but he was just getting his self-esteem."

Crompton will return to eligibility for the Atlantic Coast Conference tournament. Until then, the Tar Heels will have only one center, Jeff Wolf. Starting center Rich Yonakor is out for the season with torn cartilage in his knee.

Crompton's participation in the recreational league was brought to the attention of ACC officials shortly before last Christmas, conference commissioner Bob James said in a telephone interview Wednesday night.

"We discussed it with people at the school and verified what had taken place," James said.

Wellcome Takes Two

Wellcome Middle School swept a pair of junior high games from Grifton yesterday, and tied for the boys' Pitt County Junior High School title.

The boys won their game, 47-44 over Grifton. Kelvin Mooring led Wellcome with 11, while Vince Parker had 10. Bernard Ricciarelli had 15 and Jeff Montgomery had 14 for Grifton.

Both Grifton and Wellcome finished the year with 8-1 league records, tying for the title.

In the girls' game, Wellcome took a 31-13 win. Lisa Barnes led Wellcome with 18 points.

Blue Devils Polish Off State, 76-64

By The Associated Press
If only Duke could play all its basketball games at Cameron Indoor Stadium, the 20th-ranked Blue Devils might be at the top of the national rankings.

to six after the Hawks had built an 11-point edge. North Lenoir scored the last three points of the first half to take a 35-26 advantage at intermission.
The North Lenoir lead began to grow in the hot-shooting third quarter. The two teams combined to hit 23 of 34 shots in the period for 67.6 per cent. Pearce scored 18 points in the quarter as the Hawks built up a 14-point edge and they stretched that to 18 in the final quarter, before the Jags were able to cut it back to nine.

Coach Bill Foster's team won its 10th home game this season in as many tries Wednesday night when it polished off North

"They took advantage of our weakness on defense in the middle," Farmville coach Mike Terrell said. "We gave them the baseline and post position inside time after time. You can't win when you do that."
Terrell has hopes of continuing his season in next week's district tournament, however. In order for that to happen, Ayden-Grifton's boys must defeat North Pitt tonight.
Pearce led all scorers with 32 points, while Johnny Wiggins scored 14 and John Cratch 10. Freeman hit 23 points for Farmville, while Calvin Horne had 22.

Carolina State, 76-64.
The inhospitable Blue Devils broke a second-place deadlock with the Wolfpack and pulled within one game of conference-leading North Carolina.
Elsewhere, Clemson dumped 17th-ranked Virginia, 63-55; 11th-ranked North Carolina routed Kent State, 92-59; and Wake Forest devastated Davidson, 115-82.
DUKE 76, N.C. STATE 64
Duke used a familiar one-two punch — Jim Spanarkel outside and Mike Gminski inside — to tame the Wolfpack. Spanarkel scored 22 points, 18 of them from the foul line, while Gminski had 15 points, 10 rebounds and nine blocked shots.
For a while, it looked as if no one would score. N.C. State opened the game in a controlled offense against the Blue Devils' two-three zone defense. The Wolfpack's Hawkeye Whitney scored the game's first basket 3:40 into the contest.

"We were concerned with the slow pace," Foster said. "I was afraid we would lose patience because we were not used to it."
Duke is now 6-3 in the ACC and 18-5 overall. N.C. State is 5-4 and 16-6.
CLEMSON 63, VIRGINIA 55
Clemson's zone defense was the key to its upset of Virginia, forcing the Cavaliers to shoot from outside and holding Virginia's front line to eight shots.
"I don't guess there's much question about what kind of defense we'll see the rest of the year," said coach Terry Holland, whose Cavaliers have now lost three straight ACC games and ceased to be a factor in the regular-season race.

"We've tried it all — more shooting in practice, less shooting in practice, giving the kids the day off and practicing for three hours," Holland said. "We haven't found the answer." Virginia is now 5-5 in the ACC and 17-5 overall.
Clemson, 3-7 in the conference but 14-9 overall, was "fortunate to win it," said Tiger coach Bill Foster. "We're still missing in a lot of areas, but effort is not one of them."

NORTH CAROLINA 92, KENT STATE 59
You can't tell the starting lineup without a program these days at Chapel Hill. But North Carolina, with Mike O'Koren and Rich Yonakor lost to injuries and Jeff Crompton ineligible for the rest of the regular season, still had enough Tar Heels left over to trounce Kent State and boost its overall record to 21-5.

"Going to Maryland (last week) we had 14 men. Tonight we had eight healthy ones," said coach Dean Smith, whose team has also been bitten by the flu bug.
One familiar face on the court was that of Phil Ford, who scored 20 points.
WAKE 115, DAVIDSON 82
Only lackluster free-throw shooting stood between Wake Forest and a one-game team scoring record. The Deacons put in 115 points against Davidson, despite missing 17 of 34 foul shots.

Surge Of Campus Religious Activity

By PATRICIA MC CORMACK
UPI Education Editor

A campus movement these days centers on a theme of "God is alive."

The surge in religious activities has been documented in a survey of some of the nation's top private colleges.

The pulse of the religious movement on campus was taken by researchers at Albion College in Albion, Mich. It comes across strong and steady. It indicates the "God is dead" movement that dominated campuses in the late 1960s is dead or dying.

Some evidence: — At Carroll College in Waukesha, Wis., more than 60 percent of the student body was in church on any given Sunday last semester. This compares to 15 percent six years ago.

— Student participation in religious organizations at Albion College rose 35 percent in a year.

"What we're talking about is a renewed willingness to confront and a renewed curiosity about religious issues," said Laird Keever, a recent Carleton College graduate and now a student at Harvard Divinity school.

"It's an interest that allows and then perpetuates a religious discussion in dorms, for example. That just didn't happen during my freshman year as an undergraduate."

— In response to student interest, the religion department at Carleton in Northfield, Minn., has doubled its staff and course offerings in the past 10 years.

— Dr. Eric Dean, head of the religion and philosophy department at Wabash College in Crawfordsville, Ind., said: "Ten years ago our classes were small. Today, they are second in enrollment to biology."

— Richard A. Fass, dean of students at Pomona College in Claremont, Calif., says students are more concerned with questions about the directions of their own lives than they are with anti-establishment issues such as the "God is dead" movement.

— At Indiana's DePauw University in Greencastle, Old and New Testament courses once more are filled to capacity.

— At Hollins, a woman's school in Hollins, Va., the Rev. Kathleen Finney, chaplain, said:

"The whole sense of the 'death of God' in the 1960s was dissatisfaction. The period since has been one of spiritual search. The 60s were an era of activism. The second half of the 70s is an era of self study." Signs of the search for self include the growth of independent fellowship groups on campuses. The Albion report said these are "theologically conservative but socially progressive and offer a climate for personal growth."

Christopher M. Thomford, assistant university chaplain at Colgate University in Hamilton, N.Y., links the surge in religious activities with an attempt to answer — "Who am I?"

At Wittenberg in Springfield, Ohio, the Rev. H. Frederick Reisz said students are asking a lot more questions than their predecessors.

"Students are asking how they can discover themselves as full personalities," he said.

Within one year, a student-founded non-denominational campus religious fellowship, The Vine, grew from seven to 40 members at Albion.

"Some of us were frustrated," said Richard Kopp, the founder. "We felt there wasn't the kind of religious group on campus that some of us needed."

Required chapel attendance was abolished at many church-related schools in the 60s.

Today, church attendance is up.

For example: — Baker University in Baldwin City, Kans., dropped chapel 10 years ago. Today in response to student desires, worship services have resumed. College choirs provide the music.

— At DePauw, attendance at the campus Methodist Church has gone up tenfold in four years.

"Religion has always been with us," said the Rev. Alford Beardlee, former Hollins chaplain.

"It's just been observed differently at different times. It goes in cycles."

Crop Insurance Time At Hand

It is time for farmers to apply for All Risk Federal Crop Insurance, Betty Lou Jones, Pitt County Office representative has announced.

The insurance, which can cover a farmer's investment of money, labor, equipment, fertilizer and seed, is available to farmers for tobacco, peanuts, corn and soybeans.

Ms. Jones points out that during 1977 the Federal Crop Insurance agency paid approximately $3 million to Pitt County farmers for crop losses due to excessive moisture which was followed later in the year by drought.

All sales for Federal Crop Insurance are being handled in the agency's office located in Room 103 of the Federal Building (the former post office building) downtown Greenville.

Office hours are 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday. The telephone number is 752-0738.

Powers Lost If 'Hotel' Stolen

DAVIS, Calif. (AP) — Whoever pinched a statue of "Hotel" from a Chinese restaurant here need not bring it back.

"I'm not interested in the return of a stolen Hotel," said restaurant owner George Gee. A Hotel that has been "tampered with," that is stolen and returned, would no longer "project good vibes," he explained.

Hotel is a mythical figure which is considered a symbol of good luck and good health in the Orient.

Realist Says Your Dollars Are Counterfeit

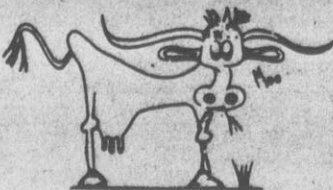

By LASZLO K. DOMJAN
ST. LOUIS (UPI) — The stationery says Merrill M.E. Jenkins Sr., M.R.
“The M.R. stands for Monetary Realist,” explained Jenkins, leafing through stacks of papers until he came to a document which verified he had registered the title as his trademark.
“To be registered I had to provide evidence that I’m an expert on money.”
Operating from a home office cluttered with books, correspondence and recording tapes of his broadcast interviews, Jenkins conducts an educational campaign bearing the message that what the American public believes to be a dollar is not a dollar.
“Everything that’s out there is counterfeit,” he said.
The reason for this, he said, is that the government will no longer redeem currency in precious metals.

“We’re right back where we were in 1779 and 1789, when the continental collapsed. The continental was a paper currency issued to be redeemed in silver later. It never was and it collapsed.”
The issuance of Federal Reserve notes, which are not backed by gold or silver, not only is responsible for inflation, he said, but is destined to lead to disaster.
“If we do not go back to redeemable currency, it is inevitable that the dollar will collapse.” He emphasized the word “inevitable.”
“If there is no redemption, then currency cannot be withdrawn once it is created. Therefore, it accumulates and it will be bid by its holders in ever increasing amounts until we have exactly the German-style collapse.”
Jenkins said the idea that the dollar — he would put quotation marks around the word — can collapse is not so far-fetched.
“Our gross national product is in excess of one trillion dollars. If you divide that by 365 days in a year, you arrive at a daily turnover of $2.8 billion.
“The people have $70 billion worth of Series E bonds. If they get a little excited about the value of the buck and they decide to spend just 5 percent of that in any one day in addition to the normal amount, you have a doubling of prices.
“If you think that 5 percent is a large amount of reaction, then realize that people have $450 billion in savings accounts. Six-tenths of 1 percent would double the prices in one day.

“In a week or two, you’d have bread at $4 million a loaf — and you couldn’t get any. Cities would start starving and collapsing. There’d be disease, pestilence and robbery.”
What would trigger such a reaction?
“Look at the stock market and see how it reacts,” Jenkins said. “One little nation somewhere in the world could say, ‘We’re no longer going to use dollars for anything,’ and see what would happen.”
Jenkins has a solution to prevent such chaos:
“Put the Federal Reserve System through bankruptcy. Start issuing a good monetary unit. It doesn’t have to be redeemable in gold. You could use silver or lead or zinc or platinum. Then let the other (Federal Reserve notes) depreciate rapidly.”
Jenkins, 58, is a former accountant who has spent 20 years designing machinery to validate coin and currency.
“I made the first successful transport that could transport paper currency in vending machine changers,” he said. “My name is on the patent for the changers.”
He said since 1965 he hasn’t been able to concentrate on anything but unredeemable money. That was the year the government began issuing “sandwich” coins containing a layer of copper in the center.

Jenkins and others in the coin-changer business met with government officials in the late 1950s to discuss the problem of slugs being used in changers. He told the government the most troublesome slug would be a copper disc with a paramagnetic surface.
“Seven years later when this stuff hit the market, it was like a bomb went off in my mind. I said, ‘Oh my God. They’re counterfeiting.’ Then I started looking into currency and found out what was really going on.”
Jenkins has an extensive collection of books on the history of money and carries on a continuing exchange of letters with Treasury and Federal Reserve officials arguing the merits of his beliefs.
To warn of what he considers the dangers of today’s currency, he has published a book, “Money — the Greatest Hoax on Earth.” He also appears on broadcast talk shows, holds twice-monthly seminars on money and speaks before business groups or any others will to hear his message.
Among such groups, he said, “Bankers don’t like me.”

Shrinking Cars May Cost Jobs

By JEFFERY L. SHELER
UPI Auto Writer
DETROIT (UPI) — The trend to smaller, more fuel-efficient cars may have a shrinking effect on jobs in the auto industry in the next decade.

Wall Street analysts predict a 10 percent decline in certain semi-skilled jobs and a general lag in the entire automotive work force as U.S. manufacturers gear up production of downsized cars that require fewer hands to build.

Radical changeovers and retooling at assembly plants, the analysts said, will give rise to more automated production techniques, eliminating even more jobs.

But industry officials said it is impossible to predict what effect small car production will have on jobs in the near future. In the long run, they said, employment will be determined in the marketplace.

LaVerne Tripp Conducting Song Revival Here

LaVerne Tripp, a nationally known gospel musician and Greenville area native, will conduct a song revival at St. Paul Pentecostal Holiness Church Friday at 7:30 p.m.

The musical evangelist is a native of Chocowinity, who sang with the Blue Ridge Quartet for six years before entering full-time evangelistic work. His song, "I Know" was the No. 1 gospel song for all 12 months of 1971. His next composition, "That Day Is Almost Here," replaced "I Know," and was replaced by his "After Calvary." He was named "King of Gospel Music" in 1972, and, in 1973, won the award as the No. One lead singer among all gospel groups. He has a nationwide ministry.

Accompanying Tripp will be the Song Revival Band.

The "Big Three" auto companies, already under the gun to meet stricter government fuel economy standards, were placed under even greater pressure to make the switch to smaller, lighter cars by the invasion of gas-sipping imports from Japan and elsewhere.

The United Auto Workers union, representing 570,000 auto production workers, is keenly aware of the potential impact the small car trend may have on employment. UAW officials said they will press for shorter working hours in future contract talks as one way of spreading jobs around.

"It makes sense that a small car is less complicated to produce," said David Eisenberg, an analyst for the New York investment firm, Sanford, Bernstein & Co. "Therefore, you can produce more per hour with less labor per unit."

Assembly line workers, lathe operators and metal workers are among those expected to be hurt the most, Eisenberg said.

"A decline of 10 percent, particularly in the metal working category, would not surprise me at all," he said.

Besides taking fewer man-hours to produce, Eisenberg said, "the move to smaller, lighter cars gives the auto companies an opportunity to redesign production from the ground up, to lower costs and improve productivity by automation."

ECU Chaplain To Be Leaving

The Rev. H.C. Mulholland, Catholic chaplain to students at East Carolina University for the past 10 years, will be transferred this month. Father Mulholland will assume pastorate of the Catholic community in Washington, N.C.

The Rev. William Elsesser, formerly of the Newman Center at the University of North Carolina - Chapel Hill, will become the Catholic chaplain at ECU.

ground up, to lower costs and improve productivity by automation."

An example of that, he said, was conversion of Chrysler's Belvidere, Ill., assembly plant for production of the new Dodge Omni and Plymouth Horizon models. By using automatic spotwelders and other advanced equipment, the plant produces a third more cars than when the work was performed by hand.

Arvid Jouppi, an economic analyst in Detroit, said the decline in employment first will be felt this year as a reduction in overtime, followed by temporary shutdowns of some assembly plants.

"Last year, the 9.2 million cars produced required 3 percent less overtime," Jouppi said. "This year overtime will go down by 5 to 6 percent. Meanwhile, in the next 10 years the growth rate of cars produced will be 2 to 3 percent while the labor force will grow maybe 1 percent."

"What this means is that the auto industry will not be a growth area in the labor force."

Many of the new jobs in the auto industry, Jouppi said, will be in specialized fields requiring highly trained workers able to operate and maintain sophisticated production equipment.

In the next 10 years, the auto industry plans to spend nearly $70 billion worldwide on capital expenditures and retooling, Jouppi said. But much of it will be front-end costs and may not mean a big boost in permanent production jobs.

While the UAW recognizes the impact production trends could have on its members, union officials said the small car is here to stay and that shorter working hours now are the key to saving jobs.

"We don't think the way to correct the situation is to say, 'Don't build small cars.' We think that's necessary and inevitable," said Howard Young, a special consultant to UAW President Douglas Fraser.

"Our position is that however it's done, the average number of working hours has to get shorter," he said.

General Motors and Ford Motor Co. officials agreed the job picture ultimately will be determined by the direction car sales take in the future and what type of cars people want to buy.

"It is extremely difficult, if not impossible, to quantify the effect of the change to smaller cars on employment in the auto industry," said Robert Middlekauff, Ford executive director of labor relations.

"While it is obvious that a small car should take less work to build than a large one, such a generality might not hold true in specific instances. A small car with many options may actually require more hours of work than a 'stripped' large car."

George B. Morris Jr., GM vice president of industrial relations, said even with automation, new jobs will continue to grow and many traditional jobs will remain.

"We've got painters now and we're going to have painters when we build our last car," Morris said. "Whatever happens to the work force is going to be decided in the marketplace — not on the drawing board."

Archivist Saves 'Endangered Records'

By MIKE FEINSILBER
WASHINGTON (UPI) — A small government agency struggles to keep a step ahead of the garbage man.

It parcels out about $3.5 million a year to preserve "endangered documents" and other old records that might otherwise be discarded or simply decay.

It has arranged to save old railroad records and the place cards and floral bills of a famous Washington hostess of the Harding era, and the minutes of the city council of Buffalo, N.Y., from 1832 to 1900. The National Historical Publications and Records Commission also made it possible for the scholarly and the curious to learn about the lives of tramps who were befriended in the 1890s by John J. McCook, Episcopal preacher, language professor at Trinity College, Hartford, Conn., and student of paupers, prostitutes and alcoholics.

If it hadn't been for a commission grant, McCook's records on the lives of gents like Philadelphia Shorty, Pittsburgh Phil and Connecticut Fatty might still be gathering dust. McCook interviewed hundreds of tramps about their travels, habits, histories and health.

"When did you take to the road?" his questionnaires asked. "When are you going to work again? Are you temperate, intemperate or abstainer? Where do you generally sleep?"

He left behind a vast collection of facts and photographs of the underside of American life.

A $28,000 grant permitted the Antiquarian and Landmarks Society of Connecticut to microfilm McCook's records so they would be available in libraries around the country.

Commission funds also enable scholars to gather, edit and publish the papers of great men — Jefferson, Madison, Adams, Hamilton, Franklin and the like. (But not Monroe. Due to bad luck, the bulk of his papers have vanished.)

"Our first job is getting things out of the basement and the attic," says archivist Frank Burke, executive director of the commission.

Sometimes he has to hurry. A stateside conglomerate took over a Hawaiian sugar plantation and was about to throw out the plantation's vast accumulation of employment records, stuff from which much early Hawaiian social history could be deduced.

The 11-member commission made an emergency grant to preserve these "endangered documents."

When Conrail was created by Congress to take over six Eastern railroads facing bankruptcy, a grant made it possible to preserve warehouses of records reflecting mergers, takeover fights and tariff wars from the times railroads were king of commerce — records invaluable to business historians.

All told, the commission last year subsidized 72 records processing projects and the publication of the papers of 60 historic figures — writers like James Fenimore Cooper, reformers like Jane Addams and labor leaders like Samuel Gompers as well as political leaders.

Burke, 50, who oversees this activity, got into the archival business accidentally.

Son of a New York City railroad clerk and a switchboard operator, Burke was working as an aviation radio operator in Alaska in the 1950s.

"If you didn't want to read about husky dogs and gold miners, you didn't find anything to read in the public library," he recalls. So to fight boredom, he studied history in the University of Alaska.

Eventually he landed a job at the National Archives, warehouse of government records and parent of the historical records commission.

Burke says archivists lose sleep over records that might be lost through oversight — and also over a taunting issue: what to save and what to discard. What will history a century or a millennium away want to know about today's society?

Saving too much is almost as bad as discarding too much. Records can bulk so large that no researcher could dare wade through them.

Usually, when someone famous leaves his papers to an institution, the archivist throws out such things as canceled checks, seating lists for parties and old Christmas cards.

But not always. When hostess Evalyn Walsh McLean's papers were examined, it turned out that sort of thing was "the meat of the collection," Burke says.

"There was the bill from Tiffany's for the Hope diamond. And a receipt for $5,000 worth of flowers for a dinner party was important if you were going to understand her role in society," he says.

Whatever happened, Burke muses, to the papers of Roy Knabenshue?

Knabenshue lived in Chicago early in this century and made a lot of balloon experiments. The Library of Congress, which has a big collection of aeronautical papers, would love to have Knabenshue's. But apparently no one saved them.

To an archivist, no news could be worse.

Genealogy Said Fascinating To Most

PIQUA, Ohio (AP) — One of Americans' more favored past-times these days is tracing their ancestry. And whether they discover a hero or a skeleton in the family closet doesn't seem to matter, says James A. Funkhouser, genealogy enthusiast and chairman of general and public services studies at Edison State Community College here.

"People are more interested in the individual today," Funkhouser says. "That's one reason why family-tree tracers find an uncle who died a pauper or a cousin who was a horse thief just as fascinating as a great-grandparent who knew Abraham Lincoln."

Funkhouser, who teaches a non-credit course in genealogy at Edison State, believes the revival of interest in family roots began long before the book by that title took America by storm.

"We've become a nomadic people," he says, "and our family ties are more fragmented than they used to be. Finding out more about your family gives you a feeling of belonging, of being tied to a certain locality at a certain time. Call it 'roots' if you want to."

But Funkhouser doesn't totally discount the effect the book "Roots" had on increased interest in genealogy — especially among black Americans.

"The book certainly showed that blacks could also trace their ancestry although it is a long and difficult process because of sketchy records," he says.

Funkhouser believes other reasons for increased interest in "second cousin Tabitha" include the bicentennial, which aroused a heightened interest in history among Americans, and more emphasis on ethnic groups such as Polish Americans and Italian Americans.

Whatever the reason, though, Funkhouser thinks the hunt for ancestors an intriguing business.

"You have to have a bit of Ellery Queen in you to be a genealogist," he says. "You look for clues to solve the mystery. The only difference is the mystery concerns people who once really lived."

How and where do you find these clues? Quiz everyone in your family for things they can tell you; then consult family records like the old Bible, family papers, journals and photos. Finally, go to the public library and to the original records Funkhouser advises.

"There are numerous repositories for this sort of thing," he notes, "such as county court records, state archives, church, land and probate records, federal censuses and military records. Area records go back to the days of settlement, if something like fire hasn't happened to them. The original colonies were required to keep vital records but states didn't start keeping them until the mid-19th century or even as late as 1900."

What happens when you've traced back as far as you can in this country? "Overseas ancestors are harder to trace," Funkhouser says. "The ideal thing would be to go abroad and continue the search but this isn't practical for most people. There are, however, some guides to overseas research available from genealogical publishing houses."

If you want to know more about your family but you don't want to do the research yourself, there are companies and individuals who will accommodate you, Funkhouser points out. However, there is a risk in this, he warns. Some people are legitimate and some are fake genealogists who would just as soon as not create a mythical Aunt Minnie who came over on the Mayflower. It is important to know whom you're dealing with. This method is also expensive and takes the fun out of your own detective work, he adds.

Some specific research centers are the Library of Congress in Washington, D.C., and the Genealogical Society of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, which has compiled genealogies and statistics on microfilm.

Patti, From Punk To Poetry

By PETER COSTA
NEW YORK (UPI) — If Patti Smith were an astronomical object, she would have to be a neutron star: a body so highly energized and electrically compact that it emits not ordinary light but high-frequency X-rays.

But one would expect the Queen of Raunch and Roll to be extraterrestrial. What one does not expect to find, however, is energy generated by a mind that respects the past and responds to the traditional teachings of the Old Testament.

In talking recently in New York about her new book "Babel", the duality is evident: a Star Wars poet with biblical enthusiasm.

"In the book, I'm trying to establish some kind of thread back to God. When I was a little kid I wanted to be a missionary like Albert Schweitzer but I discovered I didn't have the discipline. My book really comes from Genesis 11, the story of the Tower of Babel. And that is what my book is, it's a struggle to communicate," she said.

And for Patti Smith the best communication is ancient.

"Beautiful communication is the language of the Old Testament. It is now part of the rhythm of my generation," she said.

As she said this, she looked at the ceiling and closed her eyes for a long time. It was as if she were trying to see back through the intellectual strata of history to divine the future. She called the reflective process "studying the layers" and she called the Bible a collection of the "layers of heaven."

She told her version of the expulsion of Adam and Eve from the Garden of Eden.

"Eve is a woman who experienced both total perfection and total evil. Eve was a mutant, a mutation of Adam. She was the first creator because she made the first act of rebellion. She restructured the rhythm of the world. If the Garden of Eden was a perfect society, well, she went outside that society," she said.

"Rhythm of the world" was an interesting phrase, one she used constantly. If you could not hear the rhythm, you were not alive, you were not vital.

And then there are the rhythms of her own poetry: cut time, hypertime, no time at all, voyages into the fourth dimension, treks into galactic interfaces where time is often space, space always time.

She talked about dreams and success and defined success as complete international communication.

"What I dream of is a new United Nations where we could all talk the same tongue and play in electric guitars and plug together," she said and smiled.

She shifted in her chair, clasped her hands in front of her and nodded, her head swaying slightly from side to side.

A metaphor of rhythm, Patti Smith, rock star, avant garde poet, Old Testament visitor, stopped swaying and sat motionless.

Inside her, one could almost see the radiation building.

Speaker At Ass'n Meet

Mrs. Evelyn L. Spangler, Pitt County Home Economics Extension Agent, was the guest speaker at the Feb. 14 meeting of the Pitt County Agribusiness Association.

She spoke on "The Woman of the House...the Farm...and the Office." Mrs. Spangler added that over 84,000 women now own or manage farms, and over 2 million on-farm workers are female. She stated that farm women are "running combines, hauling grain and livestock, attending organizational and educational meetings, and often serving as the farm accountant..."

She stressed the effectiveness of farm women lobbying for improved laws and regulations affecting farming.

The Agribusiness Association breakfast meeting is held the second Tuesday of each month at 7:30 a.m. Anyone interested in attending should contact Leroy James at 758-1196.

Highly Edible Bean Is Potential Future Hope

BY VICTOR LANIAUSKAS
MANILA, Philippines (UPI) — For the world's malnourished and protein-starved millions, a curiously named and little-known vegetable — the winged bean — provides a glimmer of hope for the future.

Scientists at a recently concluded seminar held in the Philippines say the winged bean's pods, leaves and seeds are all rich in protein and vitamins and its roots also contain a high level of protein.

Better yet, all the bean's parts — roots, flowers and shoots — are edible, while the stalk can be used for animal fodder.

The winged bean — so named because of its wing-like, four-sided pod — was virtually unknown until three years ago. A report by the U.S. National Academy of Sciences in 1974 described it as a "backyard" crop grown only in Southeast Asia and Papua New Guinea.

Today, experimentation and research on the potential of the plant are taking place in more than 15 countries including the United States, England, and Japan. The goal is to develop a significant new food crop for the malnourished millions in the tropical climates of Asia, Africa and Latin America.

Edgardo Quisumbing, a Philippine Department of Agriculture official, said fundamental research on the winged bean as an alternate source of protein is just beginning. He said more than 50 varieties are being studied to find the most promising seed.

"It is too early to tell the final results, but it is amazing that so much information has been gathered in just a few years," Quisumbing said.

He said a major drawback of the winged bean is its sensitivity to light. The plant grows best during the short "winter" season of the tropics when the nights are longest. Some varieties stop growing altogether during the long daylight hours of the summer season.

Quisumbing said another disadvantage of the winged bean is that it needs to be propped up by a stake because of its long, vine-like stalk, but added that research is underway to develop a shorter, bush-type variety.

Researchers working in Bangladesh reported during the recent seminar that there are a number of ways of eating the winged bean and that its green pods were "tender and delicious."

They said the matured seeds were soaked for 24 hours before cooking and then boiled for one hour. Other seeds were roasted with oil and tasted like peanuts, they said, while ground mature seeds made excellent poultry feed.

Australian Graham Eagleton, a seminar participant and researcher who has experimented with the new bean, said it grew "very well" in the northern part of Australia and that in tropical areas the plant could be harvested twice a year.

ON LOCATION — Actress Mary Tyler Moore and Anthony Perkins stroll through snow falling on street in midtown New York City. They were on location, filming a movie for television in which they portray a married couple. The film to be telecast next fall, concerns a woman who must undergo a mastectomy. Entitled "First You Cry," it is based on the book by the same name, written by Betty Rollin. (AP Laserphoto)

WESTPORT, Conn. (AP) — An international celebration of children and the family will take place on May 1, according to Kenneth H. Phillips, director of development and public information for Save the Children, the 46-year-old international child assistance agency.

"Save the Children Day '78" is aimed at focusing public concern on the needs of poverty-stricken children, their families and communities all over the world. A campaign to raise $50 million to help meet those needs is being launched, Phillips said.

Favorable Reaction To Dramatization Of King

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

Reaction from several Greenville people interviewed the morning after the final segment of the three-part television dramatization (Sunday through Tuesday evenings) of the adult life of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. was favorable.

Greenville businessman Donovan Phillips went to Morehouse College in Atlanta, Dr. King's alma mater. "Dr. King was in and out of town, but as often as he could he was a guest lecturer at Morehouse," Phillips, who is now serving as chairman of the Greenville Human Relations Council, said. "I took part in some of the movement and was with Dr. King and his aides on several occasions, though I won't claim that I was 'close' or 'on the inside.'" I thought it was great that Bernard Lee and Julian Bond played themselves and I think the portrayals of some of the others like Ralph Abernathy and Andrew Young were good. I can't say enough about what a good job Paul Winfield did playing Martin himself. As far as I'm concerned, they might as well go ahead and mail him his Emmy."

Phillips said parts of the movies made him feel bitter at the time he was viewing it. "Some of the hatred portrayed was just so vivid," he said. He said he believes the conversation between Dr. King and Malcolm X was well drawn and that Malcolm was influenced toward more non-violent thought by King. "Had someone not seen fit to bump both of them off, we'd have seen them doing great things for the Black cause in later years," he said.

Dr. Mary Jo Bratton of the East Carolina University History Department, whose specialty is Black history, said, "I think the writers did an exceptionally good job with a difficult assignment — dramatizing recent history. "As far as I could see, there were no discrepancies. I think the timing of the tv presentation was good, too. It takes time to put a person's place in history in perspective, but this show pointed up the tremendous influence Dr. King had on events in the United States and the world."

Dr. Ken Lewis, an East Carolina University social work professor who took part in the "Poor People's Campaign" in Washington, D. C.

just prior to and after Dr. King's death, said he believes the spirit of the Civil Rights movement was well captured in "King." "Times are so quiet now," he said. "Many of my students were young children then and cannot begin to realize the struggles that were part of everyday life then. Some of us were taking part directly and some were seeing it on the nightly news, but it was part of all our lives. When I think back, I realize that the mourning for Dr. King was not even as intense as it would have been, had Americans not become so hardened to violence because of John Kennedy's assassination."

"I think most of the characterizations were good. I was especially impressed with the stability seen in Corretta Scott King."

Mrs. Mary Louise Whichard, a Greenville homemaker, said, "I thought it was terrific! It made me understand what was happening during those years better than when it was actually taking place. I heard about Dr. King second-hand from white people who didn't admire him then. It was an enlightening experience for me."

The shoals of distribution can wreck even seemingly impregnable contracts. However, quite often declarer has a safety play available to counteract a possible bad break.

Once North could raise spades freely over West's overall, South realized that all North's values would be working. Therefore, he wasted no time in bidding what he thought he could make.

West led the ace of clubs and continued with a low club, which declarer ruffed. A thoughtless declarer would draw trumps and then play off the ace and king of diamonds. When that suit failed to break, he would have to lose two diamond tricks and the ace of hearts in addition to the ace of clubs, for down one. Unlucky, he would claim.

The declarer who thinks ahead realizes that a 4-1 diamond break could jeopardize his contract, and he looks for a plan that would nullify the unfortunate distribution. Observe South's technique.

After ruffing the second club, declarer drew three rounds of trumps. Next, he led the king of hearts, and West could do no better than win the ace and return the suit. Declarer won the second heart in dummy and then cashed the queen of hearts, stripping the suit from both his hand and dummy, and leaving himself in his hand for the key play.

West was marked with long clubs and had shown up with at least three hearts. If anyone was short in diamonds, it would be West. So declarer led a low diamond and, when West followed with the four, declarer inserted dummy's eight. East won the ten, but he was end played. If he returned a low diamond, declarer would finesse the nine and the contract would be assured whether or not West followed. A high diamond would run to the ace, and the finesse of the nine on the next round of diamonds would be marked. A heart or a club return would give declarer a ruff and sluff.

What if West produced a high diamond when the suit was first led? Declarer would win the ace and return a diamond, intending to finesse the nine if East followed low—a safety play which again would insure the contract.

Your play to the first trick could decide the fate of the contract! A writer once remarked: "There's no such thing as a blind opening lead, only deal opening leaders!" PROF AT PLAY — Dr. William Furnish, a professor of anatomy at the University of Louisville, shows off part of his vast model railroad collection. This part features a home-made version of Mt. Rushmore, which took Furnish and his family 20 years to complete. (AP Laserphoto)

Model Railroad No Small Hobby

By MANUEL SCHIFFRES
Associated Press Writer

LOUISVILLE, Ky. AP—Dr. William Furnish, a college professor with a genial laugh and a mischievous gleam in his eye, plucks a Lionel Blue Comet off one of the homemade track shelves in his home.

He delicately pulls off the roof and points to the car's toilet. "Look at this," he says. "The toilet actually lifts up. Can you imagine that?"

Furnish owns a model train collection that boggles the imagination. But it's not so much the thousands of cars and accessories that call attention to him as it is the perspective from which he views his avocation.

For Bill Furnish, a 62-year-old professor of anatomy at the University of Louisville, a train collection is a hybrid of history book and Disneyesque fantasy land.

Illusion and reality are blended in the basement of Furnish's roomy Louisville home, which is occupied by colorful tin-plate models — the kind you buy your kids for Christmas, only fancier.

On the one hand, as three or four trains begin to whoosh, hiss and chug, Furnish gently chides a visitor for suggesting that the noise lends reality to the scene.

"Remember," the white-haired Furnish admonishes, "there is no attempt to make this realistic in any way."

"A dealer friend of mine once came by and said to me, 'You know, your derricks are too large,' I said, 'You flunk.' He flunked because he was asking for everything to fit together and that defies the whole idea of toys."

On the other hand, Furnish researches his trains and their surroundings for every historical nuance.

Furnish hopes to perpetuate his collection by passing it on to his six children and their children. "I look on it as a kind of art form, a whole culture."

The third floor houses Furnish's model railroad collection, which, he explains, represents a more serious attempt to reproduce a railroad to scale.

In this model, Furnish's trains travel through a dizzying array of tunnels under a home-made Mount Rushmore. The maze is so complicated that Furnish promises visitors he will give them the train if they can guess which tunnel it will emerge from.

Furnish, who has been collecting intensively for 20 years, says he doesn't know the value of his collection and wouldn't tell if he did, though he admits his most valuable piece — a black Buddy-L locomotive — could bring $4,000 to $5,000.

Putting a monetary value on his trains "takes away from the spirit of collecting," Furnish says. "If I couldn't collect for the pleasure of collecting, something would go out of my life."

Speaking of Your Health...

Lester L. Coleman, M.D.

The Role of the Spleen

My 8-year-old grandson fell and ruptured his spleen about two months ago. The spleen was removed and he left the hospital after 10 days. I don't want to pry, but I would like to know if this operation will affect him in later life. Will he be able to take part in all activities? — Mrs. W.E., Ga.

I don't feel that it is "prying" for a grandmother to look for added assurance. Grandparents deserve to be given details that will relieve their anxiety, especially when such a severe accident occurs.

The spleen is a remarkable organ that is actively involved in many of the important processes that go on in the body. The manufacture of blood cells, the storage of blood and the utilization of iron are only some of the functions of the spleen.

One of the main roles that the spleen plays throughout life is to destroy red and white cells that have exhausted their function and are no longer needed. The spleen can also capture and kill bacteria that may be circulating in the blood stream. When there is a sudden loss of blood, for any reason, the spleen, which stores a large quantity of blood, tries to replenish the blood loss.

With so many important functions, it is difficult for most people to understand how the removal of the spleen is not detrimental to the eventual health of the person.

Fortunately, the wisdom of the body is so remarkable that there are other structures that can take over just about all the duties of the spleen. Tissue cells distributed throughout the body are part of the "reticuloendothelial" system. These cells and the bone marrow compensate for the removal of the spleen by taking over many of its important functions.

You can be certain that your grandson, after a normal period of convalescence, will be able to return to full and normal activity. His operation will not interfere with normal growth and excellent health.

There is a tendency on the part of parents and grandparents to overprotect children who have had such a serious accident. Sometimes, in these cases, the psychological scars are more difficult to cope with than the operation itself.

As a child, I remember that the town barber was called in to do "cupping" when my father was sick. Is it still used? How does it work? — Mr. S.S.L., Mont.

Dear Mr. L.: Some ethnic communities still call in their barber as a "consultant." Cupping is the technique of applying an inverted small heated glass to the skin surface. When suction occurs it brings more blood to the area and, in many instances, is effective for some types of muscle pain. Long before antibiotics were available, cupping was even tried for treating pneumonia.

Modern methods and drugs have, of course, replaced the need for the cupping specialist who used to thrive especially in small European communities.

Mel Blanc's Best Voices In A Special

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — While a tyke in Portland, Ore., Mel Blanc began doing funny voices. Sometimes he did them in school. His teachers didn't voice disapproval of his voices, though.

"They always used to laugh, then give me lousy marks," recalled the ex-tyke, who graduated to become the famed cartoon voices of Bugs Bunny, Porky Pig and 400 others in a career now in its 51st year.

Next Thursday, he has five of his best-known voices in a CBS special, "A Connecticut Rabbit in King Arthur's Court," a Bugs Bunny takeoff on the Mark Twain classic.

Blanc, 67, has been in show business — but rarely seen by the audience — since 1927. Fresh out of high school, he made his debut on a Portland radio show, "The Hoot Owl Program."

Oddly, the job didn't require him to do what he does now. He just sang a comic song, "Juanita," in his normal voice.

In the mid-thirties, he and his gift for the odd sound arrived in Hollywood when he started on a radio show run by Joe Penner, a comic famed for inquiring: "Wanna buy a duck?"

Blanc became the duck, and in time one of radio's busiest one-man collections of dialects, comic animal voices and sound effects. At one point, he estimates, he was doing 18 network radio shows a week.

But that success didn't come until his debut at the studio whence came his greatest fame — Warner Bros. That happened in 1937 and only after he'd spent 1½ years trying to get his voice in the door.

"I was doing radio here, and this guy at the studio says, 'No, we got all the voices we need,'" Blanc said. "I went back every other week and tried again. The guy kept saying no."

"Finally he dies, so I went to the next guy in charge, Treg Brown, and he said, 'Sure, let's hear him.'"

The hearing led to his first Warner Bros. cartoon voice, a drunk bull, for $15. In 1938 he was on his way as the voice of Porky Pig and Bugs Bunny. How'd he cook them up?

"Well, I see the character first," he explained. "Contrary to what you'd think, the voices always come first in a cartoon. Then they draw to the voice. They show me a character, say what he'll do."

"They said Porky was a timid little guy, so I gave him a timid voice. Bugs was a tough little stinker. I figured he was either Brooklyn or the Bronx."

"So" — Blanc slipped into his flat, nasal Bugs voice — "I put da two of dem toggeda and I got Bugs."

Blanc, regularly heard on two networks each Saturday morning — on ABC's "Capt. Caveman" and CBS' "Bugs Bunny" — has a deep, pleasantly modulated voice when he's just talking, not working.

Hair-Curling Is Museum Topic

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — A hair-curling collection of publications has been donated to a library and museum here by the trade organization representing American hairdressers and beauty experts.

The collection of more than 3,500 patents deals with almost every cosmetology tool and technique in the industry developed since the late 1800s.

They include the patents granted A.F. Godefrey in 1891 for the first electric curling iron and to Marcel Grateau of France 19 years earlier for his wave technique that was the first for duplicating the natural wave pattern of human hair with a curling iron.

The collection was donated to the National Hairdressers and Cosmetologists Association by Zotos International, Inc., a large manufacturer of cosmetology products and holder of many patents. It will be available for research by association members and cosmetology researchers.

'Batman' Plays In 'Stuntman'

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Adam West, who formerly starred in "Batman," has signed for a major role in "Hollywood Stuntman."

West will play a movie star in the film, which stars Burt Reynolds, Jan-Michael Vincent, Sally Field and Brian Keith.

The movie is now in production in Alabama and Southern California.
