Mark 75th Anniversary Of City's School System

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

The 75th anniversary of the founding of the Greenville City School system was observed in a brief commemoration Monday night at the beginning of the meeting of the Greenville Board of Education.

It was on February 19, 1903 that the North Carolina General Assembly "read three times and ratified" an act to establish a graded (public) school in the Town of Greenville, North Carolina. Provisions ratified by the assembly on that date authorized an election on the First Tuesday in April, 1903, to get approval of voters for the school and for issuing of $10,000 in bonds for site, buildings, and equipment. Information compiled from early school minutes and presented by Greenville City School Superintendent Glenn Cox shows that at the beginning there were 14 members

Board Questioning Rose High Inspection Report

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

A February 6, 1978 building inspection report on Rose High School, submitted by Greenville Building Inspection Department Chief Inspector Alton E. Warren was reviewed by members of the Greenville Board of Education on Monday night. The board expressed doubts in reconciling this report with a previous report made in August, 1977.

Following study of the four and one-half page report, board members directed Supt. Glenn Cox to seek an early meeting with Warren, inspector Dennis Tripp, Rose High principal Frank Davenport, and board chairman Henry Dunn for the purpose of a review of violations and discrepancies noted in the recent inspection.

Among violations and discrepancies noted in the dozens of cited items were ones such as "no hot water" in the teacher's bathroom, and "no dryer vent" in the girls' locker room. These and several other discrepancies it was pointed out, are conditions that have always existed and were not previously noted in inspections, including the one in August 1977 carried out by Dennis Tripp of the Inspection Department.

Many of the discrepancies cited were "cracks in walls," which Cox said was a common condition in all schools and had been a constant factor.

Board members also asked Cox to determine the channel of responsibility for determining and reporting maintenance needs — i.e., whether maintenance personnel were responsible for detecting items that needed correction, or whether it was the responsibility of the principal and teachers to note discrepancies as they occur and report them to maintenance personnel.

Speaking of the high cost of maintenance in the schools, Cox reported that "in the last 45 days alone, we have spent nearly $800 at Rose High replacing broken windows. Part of this was due to wind damage from the storm but part of it is from vandalism."

Dunn commented, "I think the staff at Rose High needs to talk to maintenance personnel and let them know what they're supposed to do, work."

Another matter in which board members expressed concern was that of the audit of the 1976-77 school budget.

Citing several instances about previous audit recommendations that were not carried out, particularly in reference to reconciliation of bank statements at schools, board member Miles Frost said, "I have serious reservations about accepting and endorsing an audit report in which recommendations directed haven't been done."

The schools cited in being amiss were South Greenville, and Sadie Sautter, as well as the Extended Day School, and also the Food Service.

Mrs. Naomi Edwards, budget officer for the Greenville City Schools, explained that in the case of the Food Services, it was a matter of writing checks in advance and holding them until funds were appropriated before payments were made.

"The food service always operates in the red," she commented. "We can't mail the checks until there's money in the bank."

Board members concurred in Dr. James Bearden's recommendation that before the board accepted and adopted the audit, Cox come up with ways to effectively handle these recurring discrepancies.

It was noted too that the principals currently serving

Bipartisan Support Given Coal Decision

WASHINGTON (AP) —

President Carter won bipartisan support from congressional leaders today to do "whatever he needs to do" to end the marathon coal strike, according to the leaders who met with Carter.

Senate Republican Leader Howard Baker of Tennessee, after meeting with Carter, told reporters: "I think the president must do whatever he needs to do."

Carter is holding off on strong action to end the lengthy coal strike while administration officials assess mine owner response to a tentative contract agreement reached by the United Mine Workers and a major independent producer, the P&M Coal Co.

Several of the lawmakers who met with Carter said the P&M accord gave "reasonable hope" that an industrywide accord still can be negotiated. They said a negotiated settlement is preferable to any other option, a view the Carter administration has often expressed.

Baker said failure to resolve the bargaining stalemate could result in "millions, possibly tens of millions out of work."

Baker and the other participants at the meeting did not give blanket advance approval for specific steps the president might take. But the congressional leaders indicated broad-based support for presidential leadership in what they said could become a national crisis by April.

Senate Democratic Whip Alan Cranston of California spoke of "very strong bipartisan support" for presidential leadership in resolving the stalemate. Rep. Thomas S. Foley, D.Wash., said the meeting produced a consensus that Carter be given "as much latitude as possible." Foley expressed the view that whatever steps the president might take would receive strong congressional support.

White House press secretary Jody Powell said administration officials had met before the congressional breakfast to discuss the P&M agreement and would meet again later in the day.

Asked what the administration thought of the agreement and whether it would try to sell the pact as a national settlement, Powell replied: "I'm not going to make a judgment... No, I don't think we're trying to sell it."

But the press secretary added: "The negotiators understand that if this thing doesn't get settled, then the president is going to act very forcefully."

The UMW's bargaining council voted 23-16 Monday to accept a tentative contract proposal with P&M Coal Co.,

a Denver-based Gulf Oil subsidiary.

There was no immediate response from the Bituminous Coal Operators Association, the major industry bargaining arm which has been unable to reach a contract settlement with the union.

But government and industry officials suggested that the tentative settlement might form the basis for an industrywide agreement for ending the 78-day strike.

Administration officials were understood to welcome the tentative agreement and to feel that it placed increased pressure on the BCOA.

White House press secretary Jody Powell said of the P&M agreement, "This is an interesting development which all parties ought to seriously assess."

Meanwhile, the administration pursued an alternative strategy should Carter decide on tougher action to end the strike.

Booms Shake Coast

CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP) —

Four more mysterious booms rocked residents of the Charleston area early today, and a local seismologist asserted again that the phenomena were atmospheric and not earthquakes.

The seismograph at the University of South Carolina at Columbia, about 110 miles to the west, recorded no earth tremors at the time of the booms.

Marcus Cooper of Folly Beach said, "I almost kicked off my sofa while drinking a cup of coffee. Then you feel the shaking. Then I thought the ceiling was cracking."

He added, "Senators and congressmen should put pressure on the federal government to find out what's going on."

A resident of downtown Charleston, John D. Muller, said, "It scared the daylights out of me."

Hundreds of calls were received by the Evening Post newspaper, radio and television stations, the National Weather Service and Air Force and Navy installations from anxious residents.

A woman who didn't give her name told the Post: "People just don't know what to do. It seems some could find out what it is. What if we had a real earthquake?"

There were no reports of injuries or damage.

One resident of James Island south of the city, Mrs. George Johnson, reported her house literally shook and dogs began to bark. Frank Hunt, news director of WCIV-TV north of Charleston, said the third one was the strongest, lasted about four seconds and rocked the building.

Hunt said the first boom came at 8 a.m. and the fourth about 15 minutes later.

Cypriot Seeks To Ease Egypt Rift

By OTTO DOELLING
Associated Press Writer

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) —

President Spyros Kyprianou offered today to meet President Anwar Sadat to try to heal the rift caused by the shootout between Egyptian and Cypriot forces at Larnaca airport Sunday night.

The Egyptian government suspended diplomatic relations with Cyprus after Egypt's abortive commando raid to capture two Arab terrorists at the airport.

Egyptian Information Minister Abdel Moneim Sawy said in Cairo that Egypt was bringing home its entire diplomatic mission from Nicosia and had asked the Greek Cypriot government to take all its diplomats out of Egypt. But he said this was "neither a freeze nor a break in relations."

Sawy accused the Cyprus government of an "unfriendly stand" and said his government would review all aspects of Egyptian-Cypriot relations.

Kyprianou said Cyprus would try to restore friendly relations with Cairo and he appealed to Arab leaders not to turn Cyprus into an arena for settling Mideast conflicts.

"I would like to appeal to President Sadat to do his best to calm down the atmosphere in his country... and to try, both of us, to restore the old relations and the old friendship," Kyprianou told a news conference.

"I would be prepared to meet President Sadat if the latter would be prepared to respond," he said.

The Egyptian action followed a demand by the Cyprus government for the recall of the Egyptian military attaché in Nicosia and its refusal to hand over the two Palestinians involved in the murder of Cairo newspaper editor Youssef el-Sebaei in a Nicosia hotel on Saturday. After the murder the Palestinians held 11 Arab officials hostage aboard a commandeered Cypriot

airliner for 24 hours.

Kyprianou said he had not received official word from Egypt on its decision to have the envoys of both countries withdrawn. He said he had had no direct communication with Egypt since Sunday.

The Palestinians surrendered during the gun battle Sunday night in which Cypriot troops overcame a planeload of Egyptian commandos who were trying to capture the terrorists. The terrorists were charged with premeditated murder before a Nicosia magistrate Monday and could get the death penalty if convicted.

WALLET BROUGHT HIM

Vann Stokes depends on the City Cab Company to take him where he needs to go. He's grateful now, also, for the honesty of the company and one of their drivers. One morning recently, he said, he left his wallet on a cab seat. He called from the restaurant where he discovered the absence of his wallet, and before he needed to pay for his breakfast, the wallet was in his hands again — money and credentials intact. The cab company had voluntarily sent a cab to bring it to him.

Leroy James Appointed As Extension Chairman

Leroy James, a veteran member of the Agricultural Extension Service staff in Pitt County, has been named county extension chairman.

James' appointment — effective March 1 — was announced today by Alton Gardner, chairman of the Pitt Board of Commissioners, and Dr. George Hyatt Jr., director of the N.C. Agricultural Extension Service.

James replaces Ed Yancey, who resigned from the post January 1, to accept a promotion as a district extension chairman. A native of Hertford County, where he grew up on a large farm, James served as a farm manager for a year before entering A and T State University where he received a B.S. degree in animal husbandry and a masters degree in agricultural education.

He joined the Extension Service in 1958 in Wayne County and transferred to Pitt in 1962. James' major responsibilities in Pitt have been in the areas of soybeans, small grains, community resource development and housing.

LEROY JAMES

Mrs. Josephine Patterson, district extension chairman, told Pitt commissioners that the 43-year-old James has the respect of the Pitt extension staff and is knowledgeable of the county's agricultural resources and opportunities.

"Leroy is persistent in his commitment to work with people and he is very effective in getting extension specialists from N.C. State University to assist with problems in the county," Mrs. Patterson said.

In addition to his Extension Service duties, James is a member of the Board of Trustees of Pitt Memorial Hospital and a deacon of Sycamore Hill Baptist Church. He is a former member of the Greenville City Board of Education, and a former president of the A and T Alumni Association and the Greenfield Terrace Community Club.

Bloodmobile

Three Bloodmobile visits are scheduled in the county, beginning Wednesday with a blood drive in Farmville from 11 a.m. until 5 p.m. at the First Christian Church.

On Thursday, the Bloodmobile will be in Ayden at the Baptist Church for a 11:30 a.m. until 5:30 p.m. visit, according to Mrs. Ruth Taylor, executive secretary of the Pitt Red Cross.

Mrs. Taylor said that the Bloodmobile will be in Greenville on Friday at the Moose Lodge for a 11 a.m. until 5 p.m. drive.

She said that the Farmville and Ayden visits are the only blood drives scheduled this year in those towns and she urged residents to support the collection efforts.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate, after clearing its visitors' galleries and locking its doors, held a secret session today to discuss charges that Panamanian leader Omar Torrijos has been involved in drug smuggling.

Soviet Build-Up Topping NATO

LONDON (AP) — The Soviets are building up their land, sea and air forces faster than the NATO allies, the British government warns.

"Soviet forces have in many areas been strengthened in size and quality on a scale which goes well beyond the need of any purely defensive posture," a Labor government report said Monday.

It said Moscow spends 11-13 percent of its resources on building up its military might, and that the Kremlin can deploy its forces easily "in support of its political interests in the Third World."

The report said despite a British slowdown in defense spending, 4.9 percent of its gross national product goes for defense, compared to 3.4 percent for the West Germans, and 5.5 percent for the Americans.

It gave this breakdown on comparative military strength of the Warsaw Pact and North Atlantic Treaty Organization in the Eastern Atlantic and Central Europe:

—1.2 Communist surface ships for each NATO warship.

—1.4 Communist submarines for each NATO submarine.

—1.2 Communist soldiers for each NATO soldier.

—2.7 Communist main battle tanks for each NATO tank.

—2.4 Communist land-based, fixed-wing tactical airplanes for each NATO warplane.

Over the past 10 years, the report said the Russians have increased their nuclear-powered submarines from 44 to 104, their missile-armed cruisers and destroyers from six to 23, and their fixed-wing maritime aircraft from 170 to 220.

At the same time, they have increased their battle tanks from 7,250 to 9,500, their artillery from 3,200 to 4,400, and their fixed-wing tactical aircraft from 1,655 to 1,975, the report said.

School Board...

In the cited schools were not assigned there during the 1976-77 fiscal year in question.

Two budget amendments were adopted. The first, Budget Amendment No. 3 in the capital outlay fund, is for an increase of $87,150. Of this total, $86,400 is money realized from the sale of the Lynndale property. The additional $750 is a fund balance appropriated for the purchase of materials and equipment to be used at Rose High in lighting and stage sets for theatrical productions.

The second amendment, in the current expense fund, adds $20,155.74 to the instructional and administrative support money for the vocational education program. $16,655.74 is from state allotted funds, and $3,500 from locally appropriated funds.

Acting on the North Carolina unemployment compensation law effective January 1, 1978, which for the first time covers unemployment compensation for school personnel, the board elected to remain on a "reimbursement basis." This is a straight out reimbursement for any unemployment claims, and is binding for a four year period.

Public presentations were made by two individuals—Mrs. Max R. Joyner and Tom S. Krewatch.

Mrs. Joyner, representing the North Carolina Art Society as the person heading fund raising within the city school system for contributions for the new North Carolina Museum of Art, explained that the fund drive within public schools has been endorsed by the State Board of Education and the Dept. of Public Instruction.

She said the purpose of the drive would be primarily centered on emphasizing to school children the role of the museum in public education, and that the manner of raising funds would be at the discretion of the school staff.

A motion by board member Ed Waldrop that the fund raising proposal be accepted was not accepted. Instead, the consensus of the board is that while they heartily endorse the purpose for which funds are being sought, it is their preference that this matter be handled through school clubs as a service project. Cox will meet with principals and Mrs. Joyner to determine what can be done to meet the month of March time period period designated throughout the state for the N.C. Art Society effort to collect $1 million as their share of $5 million being sought in public subscriptions.

Krewatch, vice-president of Sadie Sautter PTA, presented a recommendation that consideration be given to using the now closed off portion of Pennsylvania Avenue as a bus loading and unloading point for the school. He cited hazards resulting from the congestion of bus and car traffic on Fleming Street in front of the school.

Board members concurred in expressing a hope to come up with some alternative to opening the now closed street to bus traffic, as this street area was ceded to the school by the city to enlarge the playground area.

Krewatch was asked to meet with Cox and some board members this week to study other possible solutions.

Aycock principal Paul Rasberry showed a 15-minute film and reported on the status of work being done in preparation for the visit of an accreditation team due to evaluate the school in early March.

Various studies were noted, which Rasberry said represented $1,000 spent for typing fees and another $3,000 for printing and binding. We'll need to spend another $1,500 preparing for the accreditation," he commented.

Chairman Dunn presented to the principals of elementary schools certificates of affiliated status of the schools with the Southern Association of Schools and Colleges.

In a review of work being carried out to select 60 students for remedial work in the Ceta Skills Laboratory, Ken Marks reported that testing was being conducted and that more tests would be given to select the 60 students eligible for the remedial work. The lab is designed to work with students only in relation to assistance to help them pass the competency examinations that will be given to the graduating class of 1980.

Approval was given by the board to designating the library at the new middle school as the Agnes Fullilove Library. Approval also includes removing the Fullilove portrait from the Agnes Fullilove Community School to the middle school library.

A request by Mrs. G.B.W. Hadley that a portrait of Mrs. Jane Forbes Hadley now at Agnes Fullilove be returned to the family was approved. This is a portrait given at an earlier time by the Hadley family to the school.

Cox announced that the move of students and equipment from the Extended School Program at Fourth and Green Streets to Agnes Fullilove would get underway Thursday afternoon, with completion of the move scheduled for Monday, Feb. 27. The program will resume full schedule again on Tuesday, Feb. 28.

Three policy matters to be taken up at the regular March meeting are ones on media (library) selection policy; use of student teachers as substitutes; and access to school facilities for handicapped students.

AMC Plans Join With A Foreign Automaker

LOS ANGELES (AP) — American Motors Corp. President Gerald Meyers says the nation's fourth largest auto producer will sign a far-reaching agreement to combine its assets with a foreign automaker sometime this year, the Los Angeles Times reported in today's editions.

The newspaper said Meyers indicated in an interview the agreement probably would include the eventual manufacture of the unidentified foreign car maker's vehicles at AMC plants in the United States, and sale of those cars through AMC dealers.

"We will make this happen" during 1978, Meyers said of AMC's association with a foreign-car company, the Times reported.

He was quoted as saying the agreement would be a "combination, alliance or affiliation" rather than a merger.

"We're talking about something bigger than the 1954 merger of Nash Kelvinator Co. and Hudson Motor Car Co., which created American Motors," Meyers said, according to the Times.

Meyers said AMC management is expected to remain unchanged, according to the Times. He did not name a company, the Times said.

Speculation in the auto industry has focused on France's Peugeot and, to a lesser extent, Italy's Fiat as likely AMC partners.

AMC is in the midst of a sales slump, and it had been speculated the company might drop out of the car market altogether.

In its most recent fiscal year, the auto firm's slim profits came mainly from its Jeep recreational vehicles and buses. Automobile production operated at a loss.

Sales of new AMC cars accounted for only 2.2 percent of the U.S. market last year, down from 2.9 percent in 1976.

The Times said it interviewed Meyers at a meeting of the National Automobile Dealers Association in San Francisco.

Thomas J. Jarvis, M. A. Allen, R. J. Cobb, G. E. Harris, D. S. Spain, and W. H. Bagwell.

The three elected as an executive committee from the 14 were: Thomas J. Jarvis, president; M. A. Allen, vice-president; and G. E. Harris, secretary.

Two months after the enactment approval, three men were chosen to serve as a site committee — M. A. Allen, W. H. Bagwell, and F. C. Harding.

Just a little more than a month later, the site had been selected and was approved on May 29, 1903. The approved site was that known as the "Old Pitt Academy Grounds," which is presently the location of Sheppard Memorial Library.

On June 15, 1903, the first superintendent of the city schools was selected — Professor W. B. Dove. Cox is the sixth superintendent of the schools. This averages out to a longevity of 12½ years for each superintendent.

During the months of August and September, 1903 the first teaching staff was elected, six for the "white graded school" and three for the "colored graded school."

Teachers for the white school were: Mrs. Willie Ficklen, first grade; Miss Eula Cox, second grade; Mrs. A. L. Blow, third grade; Miss Annabel Moore, fourth and fifth grades; Miss Mary Wiley, sixth and seventh grades; and Miss Lola Exum, eighth and ninth grades.

At the colored graded school, teachers elected were C. M. Eppes, principal; Miss Annie L. Enos, primary grades; and Miss Annie L. Blackwell, grammar grades.

Cox noted that principal Eppes, the only male of nine teachers, was elected principal on "because he received the most votes for the position."

Opening date for the first school year of 1903-04 was set for October 5, 1903.

Cox said although there was no concrete evidence in the Minute Book, planners were obviously able to get the site, construct the building, and furnish it, all on the $10,000 bond money authorized for the school system.

This provides a dramatic contrast to the city school system in Greenville today, with its multi-million dollar budget, hundreds of staff members, ten schools with 12 grades, and a student population of about 6,000.

A birthday cake and coffee was served to board members and to persons attending the board meeting.

Easiest Way To Remove Stains

NEW YORK (UPI) — Stains and discolorations that develop with age on aluminum utensils can be cleaned several ways. The cheapest in terms of energy usage — yours and fuel — involves cooking applesauce or tomatoes or any other acid food in the pan. Neither the flavor of the food nor safety will be impaired. Or you can boil a solution of 1 quart of water and 2 to 3 tablespoons of lemon juice, vinegar or cream of tartar in the pan for 5 to 10 minutes, then scour, rinse and dry it.

A Label For Saccharin

WASHINGTON (AP) — Food and drugs containing saccharin now must warn consumers that the artificial sweetener could cause cancer.

While the labels must be in place today on all products shipped across state lines, the warning may not appear on products previously on store shelves.

The statement reads: "Use of this product may be hazardous to your health. This product contains saccharin which has been determined to cause cancer in laboratory animals."

The Food and Drug Administration last April proposed banning use of saccharin because of tests showing it caused bladder cancer in male rats and because limited human case studies indicated the sweetener had a role in human cancer.

Congress passed a law last November that delayed the ban for 18 months, required warning labels on saccharin products and authorized further tests.

The federal government is scheduled to begin next month an 18-month, $1.4 million study to get better information. Previous studies are inadequate, several government agencies said last January.

The study will look at cases of 3,000 bladder cancer patients to try to determine which factors contributed to the disease.

When you think about it, a bank is really like any retail establishment. It sells products. Provides services. And hopefully gives you your money's worth. Or you take your business elsewhere.

So if we want you to bank with us, which we do, we have to prove we can do more for your dollar than the next bank.

Sometimes that means one-upping the competition. Like giving you a competitive interest rate and a flexible loan payment schedule.

Sometimes it means offering something they don't. Say Master Charge or overdraft checking (we call it Check Credit). And sometimes it means doing something a little unconventional. Like listing your checks in numerical order on your monthly statement.

But it always means giving you a reason to bank with us. After all, if we want your business we have to earn it.

We still know the value of a dollar.

We still know the value of your dollar. We've got some great ways to prove it.

greenville LIFE

It's Her Job To Watch The Birdie

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — By the end of this year, photographers will have taken between 40,000 and 50,000 pictures of her.

Each month, she poses for some 4,000 photographs.

Farrah Fawcett-Majors? Her replacement, Cheryl Ladd? Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis? Rosalynn Carter?

No, it's Karen O'Connell, 22, just three years out of high school and well on her way to earning the title of "most photographed girl in the world."

Karen poses for picture after picture day after day, and although the public seldom sees her, the public is the ultimate beneficiary of her efforts. She's the subject that photographers in the film technical services division of Eastman Kodak focus on to test the product quality of various types of instant film, traditional still film and motion-picture film the company manufactures.

For this unusual, almost one-of-a-kind job, Karen was plucked from a manufacturing line where she was one of many people doing regular production work.

However, her new job doesn't involve quite the same duties one usually associates with professional models in, say, New York.

"Sometimes I have to hold the exact same pose or put on the exact same smile 100 times or so and hold it for 30 seconds while different types of film are exposed," she said. "It was hard at first, but now I'm getting used to duplicating the pose or smile as often as I have to."

Posing outside during the winter is not one of her favorite activities. "Winters in Rochester can be pretty rough, and standing still for even 10 minutes can get you ice cold quickly," she said.

Hazel-eyed, with light brown hair, Karen is often asked to pose in outlandish color combinations. She has posed wearing a snow-white dress, holding a red sweater, standing in front of a bright blue wall and with a green shawl over a shoulder — all at once.

SAYS 'CHEESE'—Karen O'Connell, 22, of Rochester, N.Y., is a model, but the public doesn't see her. She spends her working days posing to test various types of film.

"If anybody passing by the studio had looked in, they would have walked away shaking their head," she said.

Some of the pictures snapped of Karen are used to help other departments get to the bottom of customer inquiries or problems about the use of a certain film type, photo paper or camera. Frequently her pictures are used to monitor the film manufacturing steps before the product ever goes to trade.

A trim 5-foot-6, Karen was selected for the job from a test group of 14 to replace the previous model who had married and moved from the area. One of the reasons she was chosen was because she has average flesh tone, a necessity for this type of film testing. And, even though she enjoys water skiing and swimming, she can't stay in the sun for long periods and get a tan or the flesh tone will change.

"It doesn't bother me because I don't stay in the sun that much anyhow," she said. When she went to Florida recently for location shooting for tests of instant film, "the last place in the world you'd find me was by the pool or on the beach."

Most of Karen's modeling is done in an indoor studio or on the shore of nearby Lake Ontario, where Kodak maintains a separate, outdoor quality-control test facility.

The biggest adjustment she had to make when she took the job was wearing makeup. "I'd never worn makeup, but here I not only have to wear it but I have to duplicate the same makeup every day," Karen said. She can vary the shade or color of lipstick, but she can't change the color of her hair, although she can wear it in any style she chooses.

While acknowledging that professional models on the outside can earn a great deal of money, Karen said she had no desire to pursue modeling as a career. She has given some thought to becoming an airline flight attendant, "but not right now. I'm very happy where I am, doing what I do."

among attractions at a pet motel here. The motel is to Rover or Tabby what legendary hostels of big cities are for humans. The management even promises vacationing pet owners their postcards will be read to their animals.

"We'll board any pet that's manageable and non-poisonous," said John Zevchak, vice president of operations.

In addition to a kennel, the American Pet Motel has an aviary and special areas designated for cats, reptiles, fish and horses. It has been temporary residence for ducks, rats, raccoons, foxes, monkeys, chinchillas and even two five-and-a-half-foot boa constrictors.

(Such boarding facilities are growing in numbers, says Dr. James H. McKinley, a Topeka, Kansas veterinarian and technical information manager for a pet food manufacturer, Hills Division of Rivalta Foods.)

(In a telephone interview, McKinley said the trend is due partly to veterinarians now offering more services and space for sick animals and less for boarding and grooming them.)

Widow Proud Of Husband's Name

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1978 by Chicago Tribune N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: Two months ago I lost the sweet and gentle man to whom I had been happily married for 31 years. With our three children grown and into happy marriages of their own, we were looking forward to traveling to all those wonderful faraway places we couldn't see until our "retirement years." And of course we had planned to grow old together.

Suddenly all these hopes have disappeared. I am not bitter. I realize that many couples weren't blessed with as many happy years as we have had.

Not only is my complaint so "petty" I'm almost ashamed to mention it, but it is directed to many of my well-meaning friends who have written to express their condolences.

Each day I want to shout from the rooftop, "Please, good people, stop addressing my mail 'Mrs. E. Jones.' Legally, yes; socially, I'm still 'Mrs. James R. Jones!'"

I was always so proud to be his wife; I am just as proud to bear his name as his widow.

Please tell them for me, Abby. Everyone I know reads your column faithfully. Thank you.

NEW WIDOW

DEAR WIDOW: Although I've mentioned it in my column many times, I will publish your letter as a reminder to those who have forgotten (or never learned) that a widow is always addressed (socially) as "Mrs. (her husband's name) Jones."

DEAR ABBY: There's a guy in our office who is nosy to the point of looking over my shoulder while I'm writing a check. He also will pick up and read anything that happens to be on my desk.

While one of our co-workers was on vacation, his personal mail was stacked up on his desk. Mr. Nosy went through all the mail and commented to the rest of us, "Gee, Mr. Bigshot sure has a lot of bills!"

How does one handle such rudeness?

PERTURBED

DEAR PERTURBED: Good manners, taste, tact and respect for the privacy of others are almost impossible to teach those who have developed tasteless, tactless and nosy habits. So if it's privacy you want, keep everything of a personal nature out of sight.

DEAR ABBY: My mother has been divorced for 15 years. She's 63 and a nice-looking woman. Last month the man with whom she has been going for two years moved in with her. (He's also divorced.)

She says they love each other but if they get married they'll lose their welfare and Medicare benefits.

I am married and have a wonderful family. I disapprove of my mother living in sin with this man and have refused to visit her. She lives only a few miles from me.

She said if I loved her, I would "understand" and visit her. I've told her that she is welcome to come to my home, but I'm not going to hers.

Do you think I'm right?

CONN. DAUGHTER

DEAR DAUGHTER: You have a right to disapprove of your mother's lifestyle, but it's not your place to "judge" and punish "sins." That's the Lord's job. ("Hate the sin but love the sinner.")

Who said the teen years are the happiest? For Abby's new booklet "What Teenagers Want to Know," write Abby: 132 Lasky Dr., Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212. Enclose $1 and a long, stamped (24 cents), self-addressed envelope, please.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

A year ago last December, our college son borrowed $600 from us to buy a second-hand car. We wired the money to him and it cost $3.00.

In January of the next year he wrote us a check for $100 as payment on account. The check bounced.

He called us (reversing the $1.80 phone charges) and said we'd better cover it or he'd look bad at the bank. We wired him $100 to cover the check which cost us another $3.00.

He wrote us back and said, "I had to pay a service charge because you processed the check in the first place so you owe me $5.00."

He came home for the Easter break and said he was crediting his account with $105 because that's what he saved us by not flying. He also subtracted $1.35 as a gas allowance because he drove his sister to the dentist.

In September, he made another payment of $35. However, he called again ($1.80 collect) to report that the $35 depleted his checking account balance to 87 cents and the bank insisted he have a $5.00 minimum and due to the payment we received we owed him $4.13.

In November, he sought our advice on what to do about "our" investment. We could either write the car off as a loss as it no longer ran or put it in running order to keep our investment alive and productive. To be "alive and productive" would cost us $311.00. (Phone consultation $5.40.)

In December he called ($2.30) to tell us a tree had thrown itself in front of his right fender and caused him $56 worth of damages. However, he could live with the dent and was sending the $56 check to us from the insurance company as payment on his debt.

The insurance company, however, raised our rates and we were obliged to pay an extra $3.00 per month on the premium.

Last week, he appeared with a ledger and said: "Counting the $400 I saved you in air fare, the $56 from the insurance company, the $15 I spent getting estimates, the $75 worth of aggravation of maintaining my own transportation, the $30 errands I've run for you and the $24 worth of car washes, we'll just consider the debt paid in full. And don't think about the break on the income tax I give you because I'm dependent. After all, you ARE my parents."

Somewhat, I always imagined we'd feel better when he paid the car off.

The Only Relief: To Use Less

Greenville Utilities Commission approved a .218 cent per kilowatt hour electric increase at its meeting Friday.

The increase will partially cover fuel charges increases which GUC pays to its supplier Virginia Electric and Power Co.

Only a few years back electric rates remained as steady as anything the consumer used. If the monthly electric bill increased it usually meant that the individual customer was simply using more power for additional things.

With the petroleum prices on the upswing, however, all that has changed, and no one is very surprised anymore when a new electric rate hike comes along.

The only answer for the hard pressed consumer is to use less electricity and to level out the load as much as possible. We can participate in the utilities' Beak-the-Peak program which allows a $30 reduction in electric bills if water heaters and air conditioners can be turned off at peak times.

We will have to better insulate our homes, turn off unused lights and be more efficient in using appliances such as laundry equipment.

High electric costs aren't going away. The alternative will be to make more efficient use of electricity.

Both Contributed Much To The Area

The deaths of Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Rawl, Jr. in a plane crash near North Myrtle Beach, S. C. during the weekend was a community tragedy.

The Rawl deaths mark a sad time for Greenville and Pitt County.

THIS AFTERNOON

Foe Of Information Setup

By BILL NOBLITT
(First of Two Articles)

RALEIGH — Denouncing a federal scheme as "Big Brother at his worse" and one which will trade North Carolina freedom for a mess of federal porridge, Attorney General Rufus L. Edmisten has decided on an all-out attack on the Criminal Justice Information System (CJIS).

"I am going to rule them illegal, and sue them if they don't stop," Edmisten warned the committees now at work designing the computer system.

That system linking local law enforcement agencies and courts with their counterparts across the state, and with state agencies dealing with corrections, courts, motor vehicle laws, and crime is now under construction. Some $7.5 million has been spent, most of it federal money from the Law Enforcement Assistance Act. Full implementation will take twice that much more, and another $2.1 million per year to keep the system running.

It is, Edmisten complains, "computer mania" costing millions and under federal domination while the same end could be gained by beefing up existing state efforts with "significantly less money."

Conflict

As attorney general, Edmisten supervises the State Bureau of Investigation and the Police Information Network of records keeping and communications now in place.

Complete criminal justice information, however, touches several jurisdictions at several levels of government. Thus, the U. S. Justice Department set out requirements for a central information system in order to qualify for the money.

Former Gov. James E. Holshouser, Jr. launched the program in reality after preliminary study had been done by his predecessor, Gov. Bob Scott. To cut through the conflicting and competing agency and jurisdictional lines, a central committee was established, along with a technical advisory committee to deal with more complicated computer matters, and a security and privacy committee to deal with the volatile questions of access to the computerized information, and protection of citizens from misuse.

Edmisten fought the arrangement when it was established by Holshouser, but was muzzled in a dramatic confrontation during which the governor threatened to cut off funds which Edmisten sought for his agency.

NOBLITT

Now, says Edmisten, he is "tired of fighting alone... a lone voice crying in the wilderness trying to get some information and stop this federal encroachment and keep this state from committing itself to millions of federal dollars to start a program which will, one day, no longer be funded federally and we shall have to pick up the costs and continued operation."

Edmisten's attack is now directed at the CJIS committees and the Department of Crime Control and Public Safety where those activities are housed.

Gov. James B. Hunt, Jr. created that new agency in an effort to consolidate various law enforcement and protection functions.

Sold Out

"Gov. Hunt has personally promised me that he will do nothing in his administration to make any attempt to infringe upon the duties, responsibilities, and powers of the Department of Justice."

"Nevertheless, the CJIS staff continues to demand that the Attorney General sell his soul for 30 pieces of silver and that they be allowed to establish and implement this vast multimillion dollar network of computers which duplicates programs which the Police Information Network and State Bureau of Investigation are already effectively providing to local law enforcement," Edmisten complains.

The attack is apparently not altogether altruistic on Edmisten's part. While he denounces the system as a Nixon Administration scheme to put us all under Big Brother's thumb, it is obvious that he is most upset at seeing his Justice Department gradually stripped of the exciting, prestigious, and politically potent crime-fighting role which it enjoyed in the past.

Tide May Be Turning

Pride goeth before destruction, says the Proverb, and an haughty spirit before a fall. We saw the Proverb working in the House on the evening of February 8, when a bill to create an Office of Consumer Representation went down to defeat.

When the first such bill appeared a few years ago, it was the pride and joy of Ralph Nader. In its final unrecognizable form, the bill was an embarrassment all around. One of the forces that contributed significantly to its defeat was Nader himself. Once he was "Mr. Consumer," and his name struck terror among political figures. Today his name inspires animosity instead.

In the judgment of Speaker

Thomas P. O'Neill, Jr., Nader's support of the consumer bill cost the administration at least eight votes in the final rollcall. Other members might put the number still higher. But Nader's haughty spirit was not the main force working against the bill. Neither should business lobbyists claim too much credit for killing the measure.

My guess is that something curious is happening on Capitol Hill — something curious, and unexpected, and wonderfully encouraging. It is barely possible that the vote two weeks ago against the Nader bill marked the turning of an ideological tide.

There is not a wiser old pol in the House than its speaker.

Toward the end of the debate, O'Neill recalled, a much stronger consumer bill passed by 344 to 44. In the 93d Congress, the vote was 293 to 94 in favor. Now, plainly, even a watered-down bill was in terrible trouble.

"Why, all of a sudden," asked O'Neill, "is there this tremendous change in the feeling of this body? I do not understand it."

Well, I am not sure I understand it, either, but when the roll was called up yonder, the bill crashed down to defeat by 227 to 189. President Carter had urged its enactment. O'Neill had begged his colleagues to go along. The sponsors had accepted a dozen amendments in the desperate hope of sending a bill — any bill! — to conference. Consumer groups had lobbied for the bill just as vigorously as business groups had lobbied against it. In its final, threadbare, patched-up form, the bill was not a terrible bill. Yet down it went.

O'Neill's "tremendous change" is a dramatic move away from the legislative prospects that seemed so clear after the congressional elections of 1974 and 1976. It was in 1974 that the Democrats picked up 52 seats in the House. Far from bouncing back, the Republicans lost one seat more in 1976. There was every reason to believe that in 1977 the House would whoop it up for every bill that liberals, laborites, and a Democratic president might desire. What else was to be expected with Democrats in command?

We were fooled by the labels. Democrats have not been behaving as Democrats should. On the vote the other night, no fewer than 101 Democrats deserted their president and their speaker. They cast solidly conservative votes against the further expansion of a paper-shuffling federal bureaucracy.

If this were the first time for such a phenomenon, the vote might be dismissed as an anti-Nader backlash. But in the past year we have seen the House reject a common site picketing bill much sought by labor. We have

Carter Pays A Debt

By JAMES GERSTENZANG

WASHINGTON (AP) — First, President Carter mentioned the Middle East. Then Africa. Then inflation, taxes, energy, welfare revision and a gamut of other issues.

But, ending a holiday week-end during that had top administration officials concentrating on the coal strike, Carter, in two speeches Monday evening in Delaware, managed to avoid mentioning the country's longest mine strike ever and the negotiations to end it.

The president spent 100 minutes aboard his Marine Corps helicopter for a roundtrip to Wilmington and two fundraisers: a $1,000-a-couple dinner for Sen. Joseph Biden's re-election bid and a $35-a-person party for the state Democratic Party's coffers. The first attracted about 100 persons to a downtown hotel and the second about 1,000.

In return for their contributions, the party faithful got 25 minutes of presidential politicking, including a five-minute dose of handshaking.

In exchange for his evening's work, the president paid off a political IOU to Biden, the first senator to support his presidential campaign, and perhaps picked up a few IOUs from the 35-year-old first-term senator, a member of four key Senate committees.

Biden faces little or no opposition in his re-election bid.

Carter last visited the state in November 1975, when he toured all three counties during the early phase of his presidential campaign. Delaware gave Carter a 53 to 47 percent edge over Gerald R. Ford in the 1976 election.

Across the street from the school a group of Pennsylvanians and some Delaware Republicans held a self-proclaimed "town meeting" at the Hellenic Community Center to demonstrate their opposition to the firing of U.S. Attorney David Marston in Philadelphia by Attorney General Griffin B. Bell.

About 75 persons showed up, holding open a seat for Carter, whom they said they had invited.

THE INSIDE REPORT

Threat To Cruise Missile

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — Surprising new intelligence that the Soviet Union has started actual deployment of a lethal new air-defense system raises agonizing new questions about President Carter's decision to scrap the B-1 bomber and use the cruise missile as a substitute.

This alarming news about the SA-10 was contained in a top secret briefing given to Gen. David C. Jones, Air Force Chief of Staff, on Jan. 26. The newest Soviet ground-to-air missile travels at five times the speed of sound and can accelerate up to 100 times the force of gravity.

The unexpected appearance of the SA-10 in actual operational deployment far ahead of schedule deepens the debate over strategic arms. Originally designed to defend against intercontinental ballistic missiles, the SA-10 is now viewed by military strategists as a grave threat to the new U.S. cruise missile. That causes new doubts about Mr. Carter's reliance on the cruise to follow the present B-52 bomber.

The SA-10's threat to the cruise missile is both highly technical and in some dispute inside the Pentagon. Stripped to its essence, the threat centers on the SA-10's extraordinary power to accelerate in seconds up to five times the speed of sound. That could be fast enough to reach and destroy incoming cruise missiles flying below the speed of sound even though it is at such low altitude as to be visible to ground radar just briefly.

Secretary of Defense Harold Brown testified before closed doors to Congress last September that the SA-10 might be nearing deployment. In fact, the first hard intelligence was then becoming available that deployment could come in a matter of weeks (probably near the Baltic coastline). Obviously, deployment of a few initial SA-10 launchers has not the slightest immediate impact on the U.S. cruise missile, which is itself far from operational.

The problem is not today but the early 1980s. Defense officials freely admit that the present-day U.S. cruise missile could become dangerously vulnerable to Soviet air defenses by 1985 and beyond. That is because of Moscow's ability to pinpoint unlimited funds on specific military goals, such as defending against new offensive weapons.

But the Pentagon's Defense Science Board concludes that the cruise missile of 1985 will be superior to the present version and that offensive technology can always stay ahead of defensive technology. Thus, the board claims, the U.S. cruise of 1985 will defeat the expected Soviet anti-cruise defense system.

It is precisely such logic — based on assumptions that the Soviets operate in predictable fashion — that so frightens the President's defense critics. The astonishing speed-up in deployment of the SA-10 is major new ammunition for these critics.

Official defense doctrine placed the full operational capability of the SA-10 sometime in the early 1980s. But that projection antedated Mr. Carter's decision to dump the B-1 bomber and make the cruise missile the principal "penetration" weapon for strategic purposes.

The American cruise, a superb and versatile weapon when it is fully developed, has both terrified Moscow and galvanized Soviet defense planners in to extraordinary accomplishments. That has demolished comfortable assumptions by U.S. defense planners of a free ride for the cruise until the mid-1980s, at which time new-model cruise missiles could carry radar-deflecting counter-measures as part of their payload and defeat the SA-10.

President U.S. underestimates of Soviet technological breakthroughs have plagued the weapons succeeds another, this country makes the same incorrect conclusions time after time. (Continued on page 5)

Strength For Today

THE HEAVENLY CITY

In his magnificent vision of things to come, St. John in the Book of Revelation gives us a picture of the heavenly city, the consummation toward which the whole of creation moves.

One of the most striking statements he makes is that this city has twelve gates. We wonder why there are twelve, or why there is more than one. The answer may be that the gates symbolize various religions which approach the heavenly city from different directions. The important thing is that all the gates lead into the city and open into the presence of God Himself.

The Bible teaches us that no individual or any group of individuals has ever been able to comprehend the whole of divine truth. "We know in part and we prophesy in part, but when that which is perfect is come (when the twelve gates will be thrown open), then that which is in part will be thrown away."

Let us rejoice in our own revelation, but let us not regard with enmity those who walk through other gates.

Misconceptions As To Profit

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — It was revealed again in still another survey of public opinion: the belief that business pockets as profit a lot more of the sales dollar than it really does.

Thirteen to fifteen cents, said respondents in the latest survey, done for U.S. News & World Report. Not bad. At least one earlier survey came up with a 33-cent figure.

The true figure, insofar as any numbers are really true, is between 5 and 5.5 cents for all manufacturing corporations, according to the Commerce Department.

That, at least, was the profit rate in 1977. In general, the rate for 25 years has been around 5.

While this is so, you may be almost certain that any survey of corporate profits would come up with a figure at least double that supplied by the Washington statistics factories.

It is a myth that transcends social and economic category. A few years ago an independent consultant polled the views of scores of sales executives. Their figure was 33 percent, or 33 cents.

The U.S. News survey, conducted by the firm of Marketing Concepts, found little difference between the belief of those with executive-level incomes and those on blue collar wages. Those who earned $50,000 or more said 13 cents of every sales dollar was profit. Those with incomes of less than $15,000 said 15 cents.

How do you explain it? There is the size factor. Corporations are enormous; they produce statistics that make those of many United Nations members look like small change. Understandably, these companies also produce huge profit statistics.

When Ford or General Motors produce quarterly earnings that run 10 digits long, without any decimal points, the factor of size is impressed on the awed reader.

Style is a consideration. Corporations live well. Their executives often travel first class, ride in big cars, eat in fancy restaurants. They earn big incomes. Their children go to elite schools. Can anyone not associate this comfortable style with wealth and profits?

Distortion must be considered. At bargaining time, unions can be expected to promote the notion of exorbitant profits. Prior to annual meetings, corporate propagandists crow about their profits.

And in conversations with corporation executives, education almost certainly would be discussed as a possible contributor to the misimpression about profits.

The educational system, they sometimes argue, turns out a product that initially is biased against private enterprise after having read about the robber barons and economic tyrants.

But then you have to wonder about all these possibilities. That same U.S. News study found that while Americans have an exaggerated notion of profits, they also believe business is entitled to such profits.

Not just entitled to the 5 cents or so that it actually earns, but the 13 to 15 cents that Americans think business earns.

Evans-Novak...

makes the same incorrect conclusions time after time. The new intelligence discovery that the SA-10 is in active deployment will have immediate impact on Capitol Hill. A powerful case now can be made that the cruise missile, good as it may be, must not be allowed to bear the full burden of this nation's future needs for a "penetration" bomber.

Accordingly, the vote in the House (scheduled next week) on keeping the vestige of the B-1 bomber program alive is almost certain to go against the President's desire to kill the program once and for all. Likewise, new research and development money for a lighter, long-range substitute — the F-111H — will also find a more receptive congressional audience.

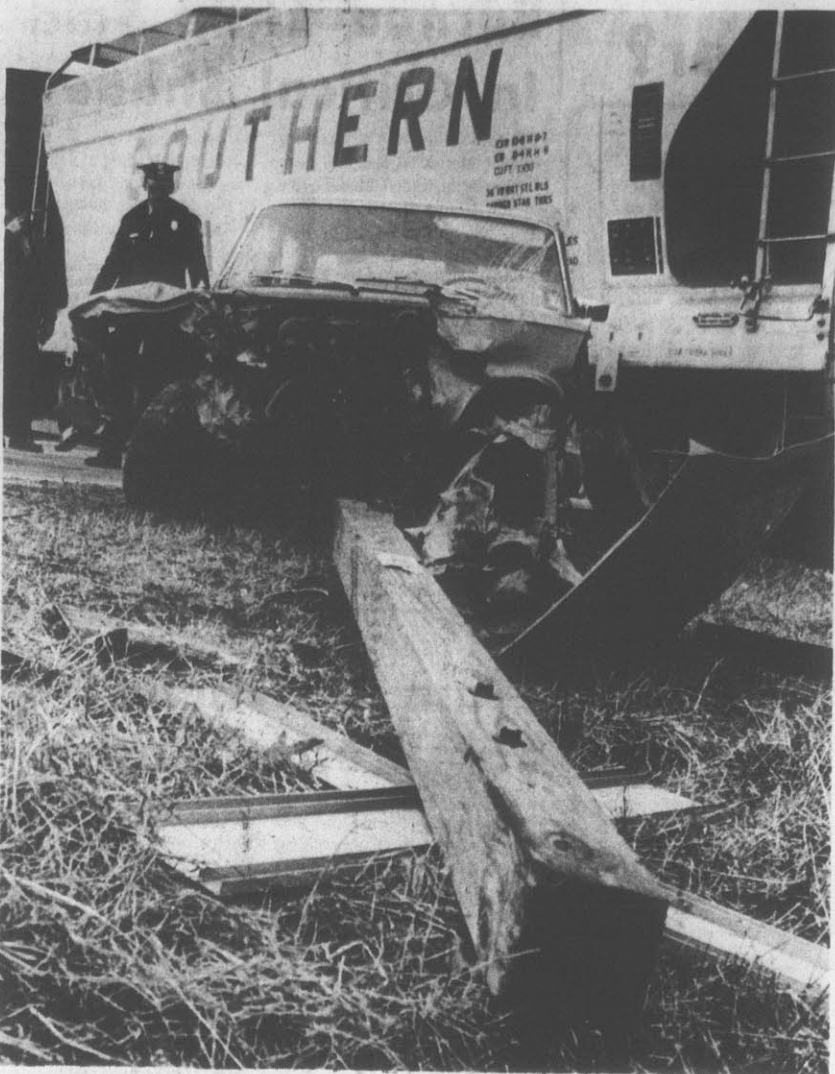

Civilian officials at the Pentagon still claim the cruise missile will always keep ahead of developing Soviet defenses against it. Doubters of that benign theory have new ammunition in the latest intelligence about the SA-10, and they intend to exploit it.

seen the administration hastily back-pedal on bills labeled "welfare reform" and "election reform." We have seen the Senate balk on the tax-and-tax provisions of an energy package. No experienced observer sees any immediate prospect of a national health insurance program or a new Department of Education. The so-called labor reform bill, passed by the House last October, is running into trouble in the Senate.

The misbegotten bill to create an Office of Consumer Representation was not a vitally important or monumentally costly bill. It was little more than a bill to make a big bureaucracy bigger. Such an objection has not deterred Democratic majorities in recent years. But How's The Weather?

WEATHER FORECAST — Snow is forecast today for the mid-Atlantic region. Showers are due in the Pacific Northwest and warmer weather is expected for the central Plains, but most of the nation will remain cold. (AP Laserphoto Map)

By The Associated Press
The forecast called for snow over North Carolina today but it was hard to believe in the eastern part of the state under a clear sky this morning.

A low pressure system bearing down on the state from the west was expected to deliver snow to the mountains by midday. The snow then was expected to spread eastward across the state, falling in all but the south coastal area, where rain was expected.

The forecast called for an accumulation of two to four inches in the mountains, where a travelers advisory was in effect. East of the mountains, no more than an inch or two was expected.

Meanwhile, an upper level disturbance moved through the state during the night and some light snow was reported around Greensboro and also at the Raleigh-Durham Airport.

The outlook is for clearing tonight and sunny with rather windy conditions and cold Wednesday.

High temperatures today were expected to hold in the 30s after lows this morning in the 20s. Lows tonight were expected to be in the teens in the mountains and in the 20s elsewhere.

Summarizes Las Vegas Crusade

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — A summary of results of evangelist Billy Graham's Feb. 1-5 crusade in Las Vegas, Nev., says that at a special 3 a. m. service for night casino workers, 43 of about 1,000 attending indicated acceptance of Christ, including a Moslem belly dancer, three showgirls, seven cocktail waitresses, four keno runners, a bartender and a crap dealer.

Regular evening services were attended by an average 12,600, and an average 3,100 nightly responded to Graham's invitation to accept Christ, the summary says. Graham told audiences he wasn't there to condemn Las Vegas gambling, nor to uphold it, adding: "Probably the greatest center of gambling in the United States is Wall Street. I would not condemn Wall Street... The great gamble in the whole world is with your soul."

Burned Child Said In Critical Shape

A Maysville child is a patient in Pitt Memorial Hospital here for burns sustained during a fire in the family home. His four-year-old brother died here Thursday afternoon as a result of burns sustained in the Thursday morning blaze.

Deangelo Matlocks, one-and-a-half years old, is listed in critical condition from burns. His father, Rudolph Matlocks, is reported as saying that he carried both Deangelo and Rudolph Jr., four, from the living room where they were sleeping with their clothing in flames.

The fire occurred in the early hours Thursday and is believed to have started from an electrical outlet in the room where the two children were sleeping. Rudolph Jr. died at 4:45 p. m. Thursday, having been brought to Pitt Memorial, along with his brother, at 8:05 a. m. the same day.

Parents of the two and three other children — Lisa, 15; Gypsy, seven, and Benita, 11 months — were treated for burns at Craven County Hospital and released.

The New Bern Sun Journal reported Friday that the roof had fallen through on the six-room house located one mile north of Maysville on Highway 17 when firemen from the Pollockville and Belgrade volunteer fire units arrived at 4:30 a. m.

Lack Answers To All Problems

BOSTON (AP) — A Paulist leader, the Rev. Thomas F. Stranksy, says Christians shouldn't assume that the church — or its leaders — are failures because they don't have answers to all life's problems. He told a meeting that "most of the sayings of Jesus were given not to answer our problems but to help us live with them."

Georgia Southern Slips Past Bucs

Lady Pirates Rip Greensboro

East Carolina University's women wound up their regular season home schedule last night with an 87-57 romp past UNC-Greensboro.

The Pirate ladies, despite a poor-shooting first half, had little trouble with their opposition.

East Carolina fired in 48 per cent of their shots for the game, hitting only 38 per cent in the first half, but coming back strong in the second to hit 58 per cent.

Despite that poor performance in the first period of the game, the Lady Pirates were able to take a 37-25 lead into the dressing room.

UNC-Greensboro's suffered through only a 29 per cent shooting night, and was unable to do much against the Lady Pirate rebounding strength either.

East Carolina led the board battle, 55-28, with Debbie Freeman leading the way with 11 and Rosie Thompson adding nine.

Freeman, who has already set a new career scoring record for East Carolina, finished the evening with 30 points, while Thompson added 20.

Cathy Strange led the Spartans with 18, while Anna Parker had 14.

The win snapped a two-game losing streak for the Lady Pirates, who travel to Raleigh on Friday to face Peace College.

East Carolina will then play host to the NCAA Division I State Tournament starting next Thursday, March 2.

Martin Teams Split In Play

AHOSKIE — Martin Academy's girls advanced and the Martin boys were eliminated from the Tar Heel Independent School Conference tournament last night.

Martin's girls downed Albemarle, 52-40, and advance to a Wednesday night game against first place Lawrence Academy. Martin's boys, meanwhile, bowed to Lawrence and completed their season, 60-54.

In the opening game, Albemarle's girls inched into a 9-7 lead, but Martin took control in the second period. By halftime, the Lady Pirates had turned things around and vaulted into a 23-13 lead.

Albemarle turned on a rally in the third period and charged back into a 34-34 tie. Martin pulled away in the final period, however, 18-6, to take the win.

Lib Johnson led Martin with 23 points, while Gaye Griffin added 10. Carol Spencer had 21 to lead Albemarle.

In the boys' game, Lawrence took the lead in the first period, holding a 14-8 lead at the horn.

They pulled away from Martin in the second quarter, and gained a 33-19 halftime edge.

Martin was able to cut two off that lead in the third period, but still trailed 43-31. Martin again outlasted Lawrence, 23-17, in the final period, but was too far back.

Tim Parker led Lawrence with 23 points, while David Jackson had 15 and R.E. Everett had 12.

Cliff Haislip led Martin with 18 points, while Grady Smith had 14 and Victor VanNortwick had 11.

Marquette Is New No. One

By GARY MYERS
AP Sports Writer

The major college basketball teams are engaging in their own version of king of the hill these days. In the latest Associated Press voting, reflecting games through Sunday, there is a different No. 1 team for the third week in a row.

Two weeks ago Kentucky stood at the top of the heap, a position they held consistently for the first half of the year, before relinquishing it to Arkansas last week after a loss to Louisiana State. But Arkansas lost to Houston Saturday, which paved the way for Marquette to take over as No. 1.

Big Mack Attack

Oliver Mack leaps high to stuff in the basketball as Georgia Southern player Phil Leisure slides along the floor after a vain effort to catch the Pirate sharp-shooter. Mack poured in 34 points in the game, but it failed to stop Georgia Southern from taking an 88-83 victory. (Reflector Photo by Tommy Forrest)

Gillman Says He May Quit

East Carolina University's controversial basketball coach Larry Gillman said last night that he is considering resigning his position with the school.

"I'm starting to get more flack," he said after his team dropped an 88-83 decision to Georgia Southern here Monday night. The loss snapped a four-game winning streak by the Pirates.

"This is just not good for me or for recruiting," he said. "So I'm giving serious consideration to resigning."

The coach, in his first year at East Carolina, has two years left after this season on his contract. During recent weeks, the status of his future at East Carolina has been rumored to be about to be terminated. University officials have had little comment, although ECU Chancellor Dr. Leo Jenkins told Gillman that his contract would be fulfilled.

Athletic Director Bill Cain said earlier that, as with all sports, basketball would be re-evaluated at the end of the year.

East Carolina has three games left this season, all on the road. They play Richmond Wednesday, Mercer on Saturday, and Virginia Tech next Wednesday, winding up the year.

Gillman did not elaborate on his statement nor did he say when he might have a definite decision about his future.

Georgia Southern, riding the crest of a night of hot shooting, snapped East Carolina University's winning streak at four games last night, taking an 88-83 victory.

The Eagles cashed in on 56.3 per cent of their shots from the floor, and that proved to be the big difference in the contest. East Carolina made just 48.6 per cent, marking the first time since they started their four-game streak that they were below 50 per cent.

The result left Georgia Southern with two more field goals, and they added a one-shot free throw margin to that for the five point spread.

East Carolina's free throw percentage, however, was as hot as it has ever been, as the Bucs dropped in 15 of 16 shots for 93.8 per cent.

Georgia Southern made good on 16 of 21 at the line.

Surprisingly, both teams were even in rebounding, each getting 33.

It was another banner night for Oliver Mack, despite the defeat of his team. The All-America candidate tossed in 34 points, hitting on 13 of 23 shots from the floor and all eight of his free throw attempts.

"I'm surprised that we're even in rebounding," Coach Larry Gillman said afterwards. "I thought that they outrebounded us."

"They shot the ball well, but we gave them some good ones. They also made some long shots that I don't think they normally would have made. I don't think we played well defensively."

Georgia Southern took advantage of numerous picks and switches to spring their players free for short jumpers, many of them from around the foul line area.

East Carolina's defense did work early in the game, as the Bucs employed a half-court trap that caused several turnovers. But Georgia Southern was able to solve that after a few minutes and pick up some easy baskets due to three-on-two coverage when the traps failed.

East Carolina was able to spring out to as much as an eight point lead before that happened however.

"I think we could have just as easily won as lost," Gillman said. "They just played so very well."

"Mack and (Herb) Krusen shot well for us," he added.

"When they missed, they got a lot of second and third chances. They also handled themselves well when they got back up by nine. That's a sign of a well-coached team. They were just a better team tonight."

East Carolina was able to pull ahead in the early minutes of the game, and their trap defense did work well for a while, enabling them to take a 16-8 lead at one point.

But after that, Georgia Southern took command of the situation with their hot shooting. Behind the floor leadership of Phil Leisure, who missed the first meeting of the two teams, the Eagles came back to finally tie it up at 18-18 on a jumper by Matt Simpkins. East Carolina moved back out as Greg Cornelius hit a baseline jumper, but Kevin Anderson hit a jumper to knot it again, 20-20.

Anderson followed with a basket off the fast break to put the Eagles ahead for the first time, 22-20. Simpkins then added another basket for a four-point Georgia Southern lead.

East Carolina fought back and twice more tied it up, the last time at 28-28 when Roger Carr tossed in a missed shot.

But Georgia Southern then ran off six straight points to run out to a 34-28 lead. Leisure started it off with a shot from underneath, then John Fowler added two free throws. Leisure finished it off with another basket with 5:44 left for the six-point lead.

The Eagles eventually led by nine, 39-30, before the Pirates came back to cut the lead to 45-42 at the half.

In the second half, the Bucs continued to try and get back into the game. After falling back by five early in the half, they struggled back to with one at 47-46, but were never able to take the lead.

Each time, Georgia Southern was able to hit. And when they finally turned the ball over, the Pirates missed two straight shots before committing a turnover themselves.

The Eagles took advantage of that to move back out by three, and eventually pulled ahead by nine once more, 67-58, with 12 minutes left.

After that, the Pirates were never able to mount a significant rally. They did cut the lead back to three at 84-81, but only 22 seconds remained, and the Bucs were forced to send the Eagles to the foul line in attempts to get the ball, and the Georgia Southern team canned eight in a row during the final minute of the contest.

In addition to Mack's 34, Krusen added 20 points on 10 of 19 field goals. Herb Gray picked off 14 points.

Gray led the Pirate rebounding with seven, while Greg Cornelius and Roger Carr each had six.

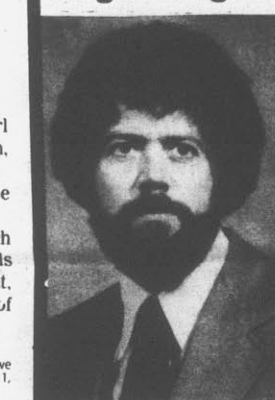

Anderson finished with 24 points for Georgia Southern, while Leisure had 15. Simpkins and Fowler each had 14 and Bobby Shields had 12. Fowler led the rebounding with 13.

Carolina has three Saturday, and close out at Virginia Tech on Wednesday, March 1.

Rampants Stomp Northeastern Five

By JIM KYLE
Reflector Sports Writer

Rose High turned last night's Division I tournament opener with Northeastern into a practice session. The Rampants played everyone extensively and had seven players in double figures as they rolled to a 109-76 victory over Northeastern.

Coach Jim Brewington, while pleased with his team's performance against the Eagles, said, "The big thing now is the return trip to Northern Nash." Rose will play at Northern Nash tomorrow night in the tournament's semi-finals. The two teams split their pair of games during the regular season.

"We played a lot of people and got a chance to see a few of the people that are going to be back next year," Brewington said last night. "We played good offense, and I think we played good defense."

Brewington said he wanted to praise his entire squad.

But the coach quickly turned his mind from last night's contest to Wednesday night's game. After beating the Knights at Rose earlier this season, the Rampants were defeated by three points in the return match at Northern Nash.

"We hope we can play a little better basketball this time. We didn't play anything in the first half (over there). We need everything we can get for them."

The Rampants, who never trailed in last night's game, shot 60 per cent from the field and led by as many as 36 points in the fourth quarter. From the opening minutes, it wasn't a question of whether Rose would reach 100, but when, and how many more than that the Rampants could score.

A layup by Anthony Bryant gave Rose a 2-0 lead in the early going, but Paul Sylvester scored on a baseline drive to tie the game. That was the last time the contest would be anywhere close to competitive.

The Rampants scored nine straight points for an 11-2 lead as all five starters got on the scoreboard in the first three minutes of the game.

Balance was the key to the Rose attack as the Rampants scored from all over the court in building up a 27-12 first-quarter lead. But defense also played a big part in the ballgame as Rose forced 26 Northeastern turnovers and turned many of them into easy fast break layups.

Ronnie Chapman came off the bench for seven quick points late in the first quarter and early in the second, while James Hawkins and Derwin Clemmons also hit and the Rampant lead started to climb. Greg Guthrie hit two foul shots at the 3:08 mark in the second quarter to make the margin 26, 47-21.

The Eagles cut the lead to 18 at the half, 49-31, but with William Barnes, who controlled the boards, and Hawkins leading the way, Rose quickly pushed the margin up in the third quarter and led Northeastern by 32 when Clemmons' layup made it 72-40 with 2:28 left in the third.

Brewington, who substituted frequently throughout the game, used at least a few of his regulars until they got the score to 98. When Guthrie's foul shot made it 98-64, Brewington reached deep into his reserves and let them do the cleaning up. After Kenny Hall's foul shots gave the Rampants 100, what little suspense the game had had was gone.

Barnes led the Rose scoring with 23 points. Bryant and Billy Roberson had 14 each, Hawkins scored 12 and Guthrie Chapman and Clemmons had 11 each. The Eagles were paced by Paul Sylvester with 17, Dudley White and Mike Everett with 16 each, and Ed Brooks with 14.

Rose's girls' basketball team also met Northeastern in the first round of the girls' tournament, but the Rampettes lost a 39-33 in overtime.

Rose jumped out to an 8-2 lead in the game's opening period, but Northeastern's Robin Harris scored six points in the second quarter to pull her team to a tie at halftime, 14-14.

After a see-saw battle for much of the third quarter, Rose took the lead on a free throw and jumper by Sheryl Taylor with 1:16 left in the period, and held it until the Eagles went up 28-27 with 3:35 left in the game.

Barbara Johnson hit from underneath to give Northeastern a 31-28 lead with just 1:48 left, but Taylor connected from the baseline at the 45-second mark and Kathy Streeter hit a foul shot with just 16 seconds on the clock to tie the game and send it into overtime.

The ice-cold Rampettes never had a chance in the extra period and didn't even score until Karen Jeffereys' layup with two seconds left. The Lady Eagles scored the first eight points of the overtime for a 39-33 victory.

Rose coach Billy Byrd commented, "This is kind of a bad way to end the season." He said the Rampettes were not completely healthy and also seemed to lack the intensity necessary for victory.

However, Byrd said the team accomplished a lot this year, the third year for girls' basketball at Rose. "Overall, I think we're on the right road and we've got the program where we want to go," Byrd said.

Taylor, who led the team with 12 points, and Jeffereys were praised by the coach as three-year starters who have helped the program along.

Favorite Entertainers Received Recognition

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Perennials Bob Hope and John Wayne won "People's Choice" awards for the fourth straight year while actresses Carol Burnett, Mary Tyler Moore and Barbra Streisand shared the spotlight in the women's categories.

Results of the nationwide survey of viewers over 12 years old, conducted by the National Family Opinion Inc. were announced during the nationally televised 1977 "People's Choice" awards show Monday night.

Hope won the all-around male entertainer award and Wayne outpolled Robert Redford and Burt Reynolds for the favorite movie actor prize.

James Garner of the television series, "The Rockford Files," was named favorite male TV performer, with Alan Alda of "M-A-S-H" and Robert Blake of "Baretta" runners-up.

Miss Burnett coupled her favorite all-around female entertainer award with the favorite TV variety program award given to her longtime series, "The Carol Burnett Show." Miss Moore and Miss Streisand were runners-up to Miss Burnett for the all-around award.

The favorite female TV performer award went to Miss Moore, who outpolled Miss Burnett and Angie Dickinson of "Police Woman," while Miss Streisand picked up favorite movie actress honors, trailed by Sally Field and Diane Keaton.

Other leading award winners were:

—Linda Ronstadt, favorite female musical performer. Debby Boone and Olivia Newton-

John were runners-up.

—"Little House on the Prairie," favorite dramatic TV program. Voted runners-up were "The Waltons" and "Family."

Winning the awards for favorite new TV actor and actress were Dan Haggerty of "Grizzly Adams" and Suzanne Somers of "Three's Company."

"Eight is Enough" pulled in the most votes for favorite new TV program, and favorite new TV dramatic program, "Love Boat" and "Three's Company" tied for new TV comedy honors.

The bidding:
South West North East
1 ♥ 1 ♦ Pass Pass

Pass Pass
Opening lead: Jack of ♠.

Declaring at four hearts, South took a line that seemed to offer excellent prospects in view of the bidding. Unfortunately, he overlooked a line that would have virtually guaranteed the contract.

After West's one spade overall was passed back to him, South showed his strong hand and good suit with a jump to three hearts. Holding a ruffing value, a king and four trumps, North had just enough to go on to game.

West led a club to his partner's ace, and declarer won the club return. Trumps were drawn in two rounds and, since declarer had to lose a spade trick, he concentrated his efforts on trying to avoid two diamond losers. Since West had overcalled in spades, declarer decided that his best chance was to play West for the jack of spades. Accordingly, he led a low spade to dummy's ten, and when East won the jack, the contract was doomed. West had to score his two aces for a one-trick set.

If we presume that West has a five-card suit for his overcall, declarer has a sure-trick line for his contract. Have you spotted it?

After drawing trumps, declarer should lead a low spade toward the queen. West cannot afford to rise with the ace. When he plays low, the queen wins. Declarer returns a spade. As it happens, the jack drops and the ten is set up for a diamond discard, but let's suppose that East started with two low spades and West has the jack.

West captures the king of spades with the ace, but he is end played. If he returns a low spade, dummy's ten wins. If he returns the jack of spades, declarer ruffs, enters dummy with a trump and discards a diamond on the ten of spades. Anything else West does is equally futile, for a club return gives declarer a ruff-sluff, while a diamond automatically eliminates declarer's second loser in the suit since it is into his Q-10 tenace.

Ed Ring Named Co-Chairman Of Seal Drive

Ed Ring, weatherman at WITN-TV, has been selected as one of the co-chairmen for the 1978 Easter Seal campaign, it was announced.

Ring, who joined the Washington station in May, worked previously at KDBU-TV in Dubuque, Iowa. A native of Baltimore, Md., the staff meteorologist earned a Masters degree in geology from the University of Wisconsin at Superior.

The new co-chairman, who resides with his wife in Washington, is a member of the American Meteorological Association.

In addition to Ring, five other television weathermen are chairing the campaign, including Jim Burns of WECT-TV in Wilmington, Bob DeBardelaben of WRAL-TV, Raleigh, Jerry Peterson of WSOC-TV in Charlotte, Glenn Scott of WXII-TV in Winston-Salem, and Bob Caldwell of WLOS-TV, Asheville.

Developing A Grain Reserve

Secretary of Agriculture Bob Bergland announced Feb. 6 that beginning March 1, 1977-crop barley, oats, and wheat may be placed directly into the grain reserve being developed by the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

Previously, farmers who wished to enter grain in the reserve needed to wait until a government loan on the crop matured.

Secretary Bergland also announced a change in the farm storage facility loan program for reserve program participants that will increase the amount of storage for which they may qualify. Under the change a farmer will be able to obtain a loan for storage structures to store two years' crop production; however, in determining eligibility, existing capacity used to store grain in the reserve program will be excluded.

USDA offers farmers an opportunity to place their grain in the reserve program for a three-year period and receive storage payments annually in advance. Storage payments are 25 cents per bushel for wheat, corn, barley, and sorghum and 19 cents per bushel for oats.

Farmers, in return, must agree to hold their grain off the market at least until the price reaches the minimum release level (140 percent of the current loan rate for wheat and 125 percent for feed grains) or the contract expires.

The goal of the program is to bolster market prices by isolating from the market about 17 million metric tons (670 million bushels, corn equivalent) of feed grains and around 9 million metric tons (330 million bushels) of wheat. Participation will be on a first come, first served basis until the goal is reached.

Secretary Bergland also said that he will allow early entry of corn and sorghum into the reserve at a later date.

The grain reserve program, farm storage facility program and commodity loan program are administered by USDA's Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service (ASCS) through its county offices.

Beginning March 1, a farmer with an existing loan on 1977-crop barley, oats or wheat may place the grain into the reserve. A farmer without an existing loan can obtain a loan and immediately place the grain into the reserve.

Inmates Burn Jail Infirmary

By STEPHEN LOEPER

Associated Press Writer

CASTAIC, Calif. (AP) — A jail infirmary was burned to the ground and at least six barracks were ransacked by up to 300 prison inmates when a fist fight mushroomed into a full-scale riot.

"We have the troublemakers isolated, and they will be reassigned to maximum security around the county," sheriff's spokesman Chet Ballew said after the 1 1/2-hour melee Monday night at the Wayside Honor Rancho, about 40 miles north of downtown Los Angeles.

Deputy Carl Riegert said many inmates would have to be transferred to the county's central jail in Los Angeles because of damage to their barracks.

More than 85 deputies joined the six guards at the minimum-security, county-run facility, which is surrounded by a low chain-link fence and has no guard towers. Most of its 700 prisoners are serving terms of less than one year on minor offenses.

"It's a real mess," said a reporter leaving the compound Monday night.

Six of the 25 barracks-style buildings were ravaged by rioters.

Firefighters entered the besieged jail compound under a sheriff's escort to battle the fire at the infirmary, but the building was a total loss, a sheriff's deputy said.

Riegert said the trouble began earlier in the day when about 50 inmates brawled on the baseball field.

That melee was broken up by guards, and prisoners were confined to their barracks, Riegert said. "But about 7 p.m., 50 men again gathered on the baseball field and began fighting with rocks and any other weapons they could find," he said.

One inmate suffered head lacerations in the first brawl, but no injuries were reported in the later riot, Riegert said.

N.C. Does Have Its Own Coal Supply

By DAVID TOMLIN
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Let the cold winds blow while the coal miners strike. North Carolina has plenty of coal of its own.

On second thought, let the winds blow and the miners strike next year. Nobody has mined coal in North Carolina since the 1920s, and it would take some time to get production rolling.

But the coal is definitely there in profitable quantities, says Eldon Allen of the state's Earth Resources Division, and the energy crisis has brought several companies to the state in the past year or two to investigate it.

The most promising deposits are in what is called the Deep River Coal Field in Chatham, Lee and Moore counties. The center is about 10 miles northwest of Sanford.

Geological studies of the area indicate that the coal lies in a flat bed or "seam" roughly 35 miles long by five to 10 miles wide, reaching near the surface at its northern end and sloping into the earth as it goes south.

Allen says the coal is similar to what is mined in Virginia and West Virginia, a bituminous variety deposited about 180 million years ago. A U.S. Geological Survey report estimated the deposit contained 110 million tons, of which 56 million could be recovered with existing technology.

The principal drawback, Allen says, is that the seam is broken in many places by faults — places where the seam is shifted in the earth so that a coal shaft might suddenly come up against a blank wall.

"Several companies are investigating it," Allen said, "but so far no one at this time has been able to come up with a solid venture."

The companies are probably smart to watch their step. North Carolina coal mining has been pretty much a hard luck story so far.

The coal was first discovered by a University of North Carolina geologist in 1820 in the Sanford area. In the 1850s it was surveyed in more detail and the Egypt mine was soon operating.

That mine went out of business after the Civil War, but it was reopened in 1888 and continued operating until 1905, when it went bust again.

In 1915 the Norfolk and Southern Railroad reopened the shaft as the Cummock Mine and ran it until 1922, when it sold the mine to the Erskine Ramsey Coal Co. That firm ran the mine for several years before going out of business.

By 1927 the Carolina Coal Co. owned the old Egypt mine and another one called the Carolina Mine nearby, but they were flooded out of business by 1929. Another mine was opened up in 1921, but a methane blast in that shaft killed 53 miners in 1925. The company never recovered and the mine closed for good in 1930.

There was a brief attempt by a group called Coal Products Inc. to reopen the Carolina Mine in 1942, but it failed before any coal was brought up.

Allen said that groups looking at the area now include both mining companies and investor groups with ideas that include both conventional mining and proposals for converting the coal at the mine to methane gas. But nobody's risking any money yet.

"Whether it will be opened again or not is still a pretty strong question mark," Allen said.

No Closer Over Terms Of HEW

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — University of North Carolina president William C. Friday talked again Monday with federal officials about desegregation but reached no new agreement and may have unearthed a new bone of contention.

Friday said Monday's talks concentrated on two main areas: whether some courses should be offered at both traditionally white and black campuses and whether the university is hiring enough black employees.

The hiring issue had not been mentioned before as a major area of disagreement.

"This is the first time we have talked about employment requirements in detail," Friday said.

Officials said each of the 16 UNC campuses has had its own affirmative action plan for minority hiring, but the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare is pressing for more vigorous efforts to recruit minority employees.

UNC now has exactly one month to submit an acceptable plan for faster desegregation of its campuses or HEW says it will begin moving to cut off millions of dollars in federal funds the system gets each year.

HEW is acting under a court order in a desegregation suit filed against the agency by the NAACP, which contended UNC and other southern state university systems were not being made to integrate fast enough.

UNC officials have said they would resist any efforts to interfere with their operation of the system, and they have rejected HEW guidelines for desegregation. HEW has rejected the UNC proposal and demanded another one.

HEW official Arlene Mendelsohn said after meeting with Friday Monday that HEW wasn't trying to tell UNC how to meet the desegregation goals.

"I think we are leaving the determinations of what the state system would like to do up to the educators," she said. "We hope they will come forward with suggestions."

"We still have time and we will keep the conversation going," Friday said, adding that "the conversations we had today led to no conclusions."

Activities For Week Reported

Mount Calvary Free Will Baptist Church announces these activities for the week:

Tuesday — Bible Class in the education department at 7:30 p.m.

Alumni Group Gather Friday

Suspended Two ABC Permits

The State ABC Board has suspended permits issued to two Pitt County businesses for violations of ABC regulations.

Permits issued to Elkins' Grocery, Route 3, Ayden, were suspended for 30 days effective February 10, on charges of: "Permittee's employee... did knowingly sell malt beverages and unfortified wine to...a minor...on September 16, 1977."

Permits issued to Kelly Barnhill for Barnhill Gameroom in Winterville were suspended for 30 days, effective February 27 on charges of: "Permittee did knowingly make a false statement for a malt beverage permit as an individual on or about June 8, 1977, when in fact the establishment was a partnership consisting of the permittee and Frank Spellman..."

The ABC Board's action came at its meeting in Raleigh, February 10.

The Pitt County Chapter of the North Carolina Central University Alumni Association will meet at 8 p.m. on Friday, Feb. 24.

Events and activities for the balance of this year will be discussed. The meeting will be hosted by Edward and Jean Carter, 104 Fireside Road, Greenfield Terrace, Greenville.
