Coal Industry Asks Binding Arbitration

By DAVID ESPO
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The coal industry today called for voluntary binding arbitration in the coal strike, but a spokesman for the United Mine Workers said the union was likely to reject it. The industry said binding arbitration is "preferable to the loss which the economy is now suffering." It urged UMW members to return to the mines while a three-member arbitration board would try to settle the record 79-day strike. A Carter administration official close to the talks who declined to be identified said the call for arbitration was "an interesting proposal." He said he hoped the UMW would consider the proposal seriously.

A union spokesman had no immediate comment, but said the proposal was unlikely to meet with UMW approval.

Meanwhile, the White House announced that Labor Secretary Ray Marshall would meet with the UMW negotiators this afternoon to consider the industry's suggestion for binding arbitration. Marshall also will meet with industry representatives this evening. Officials said it was hoped these talks might lead to resumption of face-to-face negotiations.

The industry said binding arbitration is "preferable to the loss which the economy is now suffering." It urged United Mine Workers members to return to the mines Monday while a three-member arbitration board would try to settle the record 79-day strike.

A union spokesman had no immediate comment, but said the proposal was unlikely to meet with UMW approval. The industry's call in a letter to UMW President Arnold Miller several hours after Labor Secretary Ray Marshall met separately with UMW and industry bargainers. More talks were expected today.

"The secretary met with both sides...and he has received the positions of the parties and he's assessing them," said Labor Department spokesman John Leslie.

Privately, officials indicated the two sides remain far apart. The talks came as new job layoffs were announced in the nation's industrial heartland and power cutbacks deepened as a result of reduced coal production.

The White House called the resumption of talks Tuesday "somewhat encouraging," but presidential press secretary Jody Powell cautioned, "whether it's possible through these discussions to make progress remains to be seen."

Impasse At Meeting Of Hospital Bd.

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer
The Pitt County Memorial Hospital Trustees' meeting held last night ended in an impasse.

The standoff was between proponents of a bylaws change to allow for six meetings a year, rather than the 12 for which the bylaws now call.

The first vote concerned whether to change the bylaws all at once or each separately. It was voted 13-12 to change them all or nothing. The hospital charter calls for "a majority of the full board" to effect any bylaws change, so the 13 who voted in favor of the change did not carry it, since there are 33 members at present.

A motion was then entertained as to whether to change the bylaws with only two minor wording changes — not including the number of meetings per year change. It did not get the necessary majority of 17 either.

"Everything will stand as it is. We'll take it up at a later date," Board Chairman Kenneth Dews said.

Whether to have 12 or six meetings a year seems to center around the question of whether it is too much of a hardship for the UNC representatives who must travel long distances to attend every month and whether meeting this frequently is warranted by the business attended to. Those in favor of continuing to hold one regular meeting a month say that having only one every other month would give too much responsibility to the executive committee and would allow a member to be in good standing by attending only three meetings a year, since only 50 percent attendance is required by the bylaws at present.

There were also complaints last night from several members about work going forward toward the procurement of a heart catheterization laboratory for the hospital, without the approval or even the knowledge of the board members. Dr. John Wooten made the original complaint, saying that applications had been made to the Health Systems Agency and other paperwork done and that an item had even been published about one of the applications in the local newspaper before the board members knew anything. "Matters of this type should be brought before this board in their initial stages," he said.

Industry Is Opposed To Annexation

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer
Local industry leaders discussed their positions on the annexation issue involving the industrial area north of the river this morning with city government representatives and members of the Chamber of Commerce.

Gathering for a 7:30 a.m. session, the industry spokesmen who addressed the proposed annexation plan were unanimous in their opposition to the possible city move and urged Mayor Percy Cox and the City Council to carefully weigh the impact of taking the area into the corporate limits.

The meeting, according to moderator Mack Howard, who serves as vice president of the chamber's Public and Governmental Affairs Division, was arranged as a "friendly forum" to give "good people" the opportunity to discuss the issue.

Cox told the gathering that he felt "things have gotten a little out of order" regarding the annexation consideration by the city and he said that industry has "gotten the feeling that we would rush out and annex" the area.

The mayor indicated that the city had intended to meet with industry and "talk about this but we never got the chance." He said that he did not think that any member of the council could say at this point he was ready to annex the area.

Cox said three alternatives are available to the city. Saying that the city has to cope with its growth in some way, he noted that taxes could be increased five to six cents to compensate for cost of living increases and inflation provisions in the budget. A second alternative, he explained, would be to raise the tax rate some 20 cents to compensate for the whole amount needed in revenue, while the third measure would be to bring the industrial area into the city.

Cox said that the industrial section was given first consideration because of services that are already available to the area. The industrial area could be brought in without a great deal of capital outlay, he added.

City Manager Jim Caldwell, questioned as to the city's actual revenue needs, reported that in projecting for 1978-79, it appears the city will be "short a considerable amount of money."

He said some $852,000 will be needed over the current budget to maintain the current level of city services and increased revenue projections for 1978-79, based on a ten per cent increase in the total appraised property valuation, would provide some $277,000.

Of the $852,000, the police department would need a projected $247,338, he said, mainly for increases in payroll, while the Public Works Department figure would amount to $224,901.

Councilman John Howard asked Caldwell how much would the tax rate have to be raised to meet the $852,000 figure. The city manager said that an 18 cents per $100 valuation increase, bringing the city's tax rate to 82 cents, would be needed.

Caldwell predicted that the city could hold the present tax rate if the industrial property is annexed.

Cox pointed out that after the Council scheduled the matter for a public hearing, the city learned that an area that is excluded from the annexation plans on the original map made public can be taken in. He emphasized, however, that the matter has already been advertised showing the deleted area and the hearing will deal with the original plan.

Caldwell said that Greenville Utilities Commission could turn over more funds to the city if commissioners decided to increase rates to provide an adjustment in the annual turnover.

Cox pointed out, however, that he had talked with GUC director Charles Horne who indicated that "they need all the money they can get" to handle their projections. The mayor said that (Continued on page 12)

Inconveniences In Snow

Ole' Man Winter dropped 1.75 inches of snow on the Greenville area during the night and local residents were busy this morning digging their cars out of the white stuff to get to work.

Cars could be seen stuck in ditches and sliding on the ice. There were no fatalities reported in Pitt County, however.

Charles Clark of the N.C. Department of Transportation said that all of the county roads are icy but no roads are closed. Driving is "hazardous," and he urged motorists who feel they must drive to exercise extreme caution. He also noted that bridges are the most danger and that slow speeds should be used in crossing.

Clark added that if the "temperature goes up and it gets shloshy, we can clean up the roads." Not much can be done until that time.

Almost the entire state was hit by bad weather, except for Carteret and Craven Counties. Sgt. Glenn Swanson of the Highway Patrol noted that road conditions were improving but ice was still a danger.

"We've had only one fatal wreck — a double fatality in Beaufort County at 6:30 a.m.," said Swanson. He added that there were no details available on the accident but that an officer was investigating.

County School Bd. Votes Adopt Bus Monitor Plan

By DEBBIE JACKSON
Reflector Staff Writer

The Pitt County Board of Education last night voted unanimously to implement a school bus monitor system on a non-pay scale for the county school buses.

A highly emotional session preceded the voting.

Concerned parents had requested to go before the Board and present their ideas about the necessity of such monitors following the Feb. 3 death of Gina Carraway. The Belvoir Elementary first grader was killed in a bus accident during the snow and ice conditions earlier this month. The girl's parents were present at last night's meeting but did not make a statement. However, their attorney Gary Pegram spoke for them.

Pegram first presented the Board with a petition signed by 30 parents requesting that bus driver Greg Holland be reinstated to his position. Holland was the driver of the bus which was involved in the fatality.

"The first two names on that petition are Mr. and Mrs. Carraway," said Pegram.

He added that there have been three bus-related fatalities within the past four years in Pitt County. "I would assume...this is a little bit higher than the average."

Pegram then read a portion of the August, 1977, County School Board minutes which stated the Duty Imposed upon School Bus Children. He added that it is the child's responsibility to take care of himself. The passenger is supposed to walk to the front of the bus when it stops, look both ways before getting off the bus, and look both ways before crossing the street.

As was the case with Gina, the minutes continued, "In crossing in front of a bus, a passenger should never stoop" to pick up anything. "I don't know how many six-year olds understand this," said Pegram. He added that the passenger's safety is placed totally upon the passenger and the driver. He also referred the Board to an incident in Grimesland where a child fell out of the window of a moving bus.

"You can't blame the driver," said Pegram. He noted that the General Assembly has authorized principals to appoint monitors to preserve order on buses.

"I think this Board has unbridled discretion...to set up some system of school monitors. Hopefully, some child could be protected from himself. In view of the Board having to pay monitors, Pegram noted that the state could have to pay as much as $30,000 as a result of death or injury to children this year. He said that, financially speaking, both the state and the county would probably "come out ahead in the long run" by paying monitors.

"There is also the question of whether we should have had school on Feb. 2 and 3." He added that under the present system, the county superintendent is responsible for deciding whether school will be held or not. Pegram called this "an unfair burden on him (the Superintendent)." The lawyer added that Pitt County is too large to expect any one man to travel the length of the county and decide if conditions are safe enough for school to be held. Pegram said that each area should have one person to judge weather conditions in (Continued on Page 7)

Cyprus Police Official Suspended For Role In Shootout At Airport

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — President Spyros Kyprianou suspended Cyprus' deputy police chief Wednesday for his role in Sunday night's battle between Egyptian commandos and Cypriot troops at Larnaca airport.

Pavlos Stokkos, the second-ranking policeman in Greek-controlled Cyprus, was suspended "for communicating false information regarding the events at Larnaca airport and for negligence in the execution of his duties," an official statement said without elaboration.

Authorities refused to comment on the reasons for the suspension, the government's first action against a Cypriot since the incident.

Kyprianou has blamed Egypt for the clash, saying the commandos violated Cypriot sovereignty by assaulting a terrorist-held plane against the specific orders of the Cypriot government. Fifteen Egyptians were killed and 16 wounded and at least seven Cypriots were wounded.

Neither government has taken action on Cairo's demand to recall Egyptian diplomats from Cyprus and have Cypriot envoys pulled out of Egypt.

A Cypriot Embassy spokesman in Cairo told The Associated Press the embassy has received no order, official or unofficial, to leave. The Cyprus government has not received any notification from Cairo on the withdrawal of envoys, a spokesman said.

However, the two governments are still sparring with words about who was wrong.

Kyprianou said responsibility for the battle "rests with the Egyptian side." He asked why the commandos didn't make their attack earlier Sunday during the 11 hours the two terrorists, their hostages and their commandeered plane were in Djibouti, like Egypt an African Moslem country but one with a French garrison to help protect it.

Hotline gets things done for you. Call 752-1336 and tell your problem or your sound-off or mail it to Hotline, The Daily Reflector, Box 1967, Greenville, N.C. 27834.

Because of the large numbers received, Hotline can answer and publish only those items considered most pertinent to our readers. Names must be given, but only initials will be used. Transcribing is done once a day.

DEED RECEIVED
My wife and I paid $96 a month for six years for a lot in this area. After we thought we were finished, we didn't receive the deed. I called the company, National Realty Company of Lexington, and was told, "Yes, you're paid in full," but still we haven't got the deed. We have our receipts. I know a fellow in my same situation who had to get a lawyer to get his. S. A.

Hotline called National Realty and had confirmed that you and your wife have paid in full for your lot. We were told that some renovations had been going on in the office and that somehow your file had been overlooked. The person we talked to checked with us your correct names and address and promised to get the deed out right away. You called us to report you received it four days later.

OP SUNSHINE FEEDBACK
Hotline has received a lovely drawing as a thank you from Operation Sunshine. The thank you must be passed along to the individuals who gave the record player and the two sewing machines to the members of this girls' activity group after seeing the recent Hotline appeal. The television set appealed for was not received.

Russians Deploying A New Advanced Missile

By FRED S. HOFFMAN
AP Military Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The Russians have started deploying their fourth advanced land-based missile capable of hitting the United States, U.S. intelligence sources said. The SS-16 is the lightest of the four new types of Soviet intercontinental ballistic missiles placed in firing position since late 1974. They are replacing older and less accurate weapons. The most recent U.S. ICBM, the Minuteman III, was deployed between 1970 and 1975.

Defense Secretary Harold Brown and Pentagon research chief William Perry said recently that the Russians are developing a still newer generation of four missiles, with flight-testing expected to begin "at any time." On the U.S. side, the Carter administration has slowed development of the MX, the only new American land-based intercontinental missile in sight. U.S. diplomats have sought to curb development of new strategic missiles on both sides by proposing curbs on testing. But there is no evidence the Russians are interested. So, while a new U.S.-Soviet agreement may put a lid on total numbers of the strategic missiles, it appears that the race for more potent nuclear weapons will continue. U.S. intelligence specialists have watched for the SS-16's deployment with interest because they have seen signs in the past that it might be Russia's first land-based missile on movable launch pads rather than in fixed silos. Sources, who asked not to be identified, said the first SS-16s to be deployed are known to be in underground bases. However, they note that the Russian SS-20 missile — made up of the first two rocket stages of the SS-16 — has been deployed on mobile launchers. While the SS-20's range is too short to threaten the United States, U.S. experts are concerned that the Russians could quickly give it intercontinental range by strapping on a third rocket stage.

Books Offer Glimpse Of Settings That Reflect Home Owners' Taste

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures Writer

In impeccable manner — beautiful color photography, choice antiques, non-antiques and rooms with character — authors Herbert Wise and Jeffrey Weiss, have presented "Good Lives," another of their paperback books of interiors.

The furnishings and room settings are fresh, vibrant, original. They appear to be settings put together, no doubt, by people who love their homes and do not rely on decorators.

The good taste pace was set by these authors in their popular "Living Places" (1976) and "Made With Oak" (1975).

From Maine to California, they unearthed treasures in brownstones, townhouses, southern mansions, turn-of-the-century farmhouses, all in intimate environments shaped by the owners. In "Good Lives" the owners are identified.

The subtle aesthetics found in these books are the result of combining antiques and modern settings because "True antiques have diminished in availability," the authors point out.

In unveiling the owners in their latest book, the authors permit the reader to see beyond the rooms featured. They learn who put these homes together and how a loved "thing" can shape an entire room.

The list of the talented people who design for themselves includes an environmentalist, an illustrator, a painter, a curator, a manufacturer and an editor of National Gallery publications.

In all three books gleam color and texture of floors, ceilings, countertops, shelves, walls. A lack of uniformity can be observed in the rooms that were put together to please their owners.

Chopping blocks, copper, stained glass, 18th-century wicker, barn siding, brick, quilts, roll-top desks, lovely things from the past, or reproduced, find a niche on the pages.

What may be called clutter in some instances by some people, may merely be an extension of an art form. In any event, the average person can relate to it.

"Made With Oak" may prove the most intriguing of the three books for new collectors. Oak furnishings made from the middle 1800s and mass produced since the early 1900s can be found more easily than antiques and most of them are in great condition because of the sturdiness of the wood. Refurbishing oak can bring it back to life in a beautiful way.

In "Living Places," a bathtub is shown encased in oak, with stairs, and a refrigerator is encased in a wood storage structure.

The least expensive oak that may be acquired is usually painted — there has been a vogue over the years for white or cordovan-finished oak — or it might be found antiqued and pickled. An antiques dealer may not want to use his limited time to refinish it or want it to take up storage space and it may be bought for a reasonable price.

Oak is a good wood to refinish. The fast dip-and-scrape method does a satisfactory job, but it may bleach the natural color from the wood, loosen joints, raise the grain or cause the wood to swell, twist or split.

The authors point out they prefer the hand method of refishing, which may be tedious but the finished product is a piece of furniture that cannot be duplicated. Hand finishing also adds an unestimable value to the piece.

"Good Lives," "Living Places" and "Made With Oak" are published by Quick Fox.

It was a wise old sage who said "a dollar saved is worth more than a dollar earned." And today, it is the wisest of consumers who uses a shopping plan that produces profits. The first advantage of such a plan is that it cushions the impact of increasing prices. Secondly, the plan can help a family save money—maybe several hundred dollars during a year.

Any individual or family can design a shopping plan that when followed results in dollars saved. To do this Dr. Thelma Hinson, Family Resource Management Specialist at N.C. State University, recommends the following: 1. Map out a shopping calendar for 1978. List your needs, especially for the big-ticket or expensive items and plan ahead to buy these items when they are traditionally at their lowest prices. Be alert to price advantages when they occur. 2. Evaluate your style of living and reduce extravagances (excessive purchases of sweets and treats, eating out in fancy restaurants, and excessive spending on family and friends).

3. Switch to the less expensive version of goods and services (ex: cuts of meats, store brand goods). 4. Substitute less expensive items when appropriate (ex: cuts of meats, store brand goods). 5. Shop harder to get the type and quality of product wanted for the least investment of money. It is possible to save 10-20% by using store brands, save up to 15% by comparing prices of goods and services, save 15% or more on day-old bakery products, save 6-30% by paying cash instead of using credit, save up to 25% on promotional sales items, save 10-30% on clothing by shopping seasonal sales, save up to 18% on cosmetics by shopping special sales, save 10-18% by comparative shopping for new cars (also remember the price of a new car can be increased 25% or more by the type and amount of optional equipment chosen, and save by paying insurance premiums annually instead of monthly).

CAUTION: Shopping for savings does not mean buying the lowest priced item. It means getting the item that meets your purpose at its best price. For many items, especially the big-ticket items, a family can plan ahead and make the purchase when it is available at a price advantage. Remember, no purchase is a bargain, no matter how low the price, unless it meets the family's need and will be used. Shop for Savings, not for Wastefulness. Keep a record of savings made by planning ahead for needs and waiting to buy at the best price.

WATCH for the unit price of items in grocery stores. Many of the supermarkets post the unit price on the shelves. If they do not, encourage them to do so. The unit price will help determine which size is the most economical to buy. The largest size is not always the lowest price per unit.

New Image Sought For Kosher Food

By MICHAEL PRECKER
JERUSALEM (AP) — Israeli chefs are fighting the notion, at home and abroad, that kosher cuisine consists of heavy, fattening food with a limited appeal.

"We want to show people that kosher food can be good food and it can be made by very sophisticated chefs," said Uri Guttman, chairman of the first international conference and exhibition on Jewish culinary art held here recently.

The all-kosher conference drew 200 participants, most of them non-Jews, from a dozen countries for four days of workshops. Chefs from Israeli hotel chains and five countries participated in a cooking competition that featured margarine statuettes and candyandelabras, as well as traditional Jewish delicacies.

Guttman, the food and beverage director of the Dan hotel chain in Israel and chairman of the country's Chefs Association, said the purpose of the convention was twofold: to promote Jewish cooking abroad and to improve the state of the art at home.

"The Jewish customer is becoming more and more important for hoteliers and caterers everywhere," he said. "And in general, Jewish food is tasty food. If you go to London and you want a good meal, you go to a Chinese or a Jewish restaurant. And in the United States, where do you get the best corned beef and pickles? At a Jewish restaurant."

Guttman said he hoped the contact with foreign chefs would help improve Israeli cuisine. He said the government should sponsor more training programs and competitions to upgrade Israel's gastronomic reputation.

"I wouldn't say the image of chefs in this country is bad," he said. "But what Jewish mother would tell her son to become a cook, instead of a doctor or lawyer?"

The Israeli chef said food prepared under Jewish dietary law could be more diversified than many people thought.

"Most people thinking of kosher food are only considering Eastern European food," Guttman said. "Most of that came from cold climates, where people ate fatty, heavy things. But all over the world, Jews ate local food and adapted it to their kosher needs."

For example, Guttman said, cholent, a traditional stew made with potatoes and beans in Europe, usually contained whole and mashed chickpeas in the Middle East.

And Guttman said that modern advances in food technology — such as vegetable-based creams and synthetic flavorings — removed many obstacles that used to hamper cooks adhering to dietary laws, which ban pork and the mixing of meat and dairy products.

Non-Stop Telephone Caller Is A Pest

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1978 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: Please, in the interest of preserving my sanity, tell me how to get rid of a telephone pest.

This woman is a non-stop talker. She can go on for two hours at a stretch. Once I actually left the line for about five minutes and when I came back she was still talking! Another time I said, "Excuse me, I've got to go. I just cut myself and I am bleeding badly," and she said, "But this will only take a minute and it's interesting." (It wasn't.) She is the biggest bore I know.

Telling her that I am too busy to talk won't work. Please help me. I don't mind in the least if I lose her friendship.

GOING NUTS.

DEAR GOING: Your last sentence makes my suggested solution very simple. The next time she phones, tell her that you are too busy to visit with her, say goodbye, and then hang up. Repeat this routine as often as is necessary until your "friendship" dissolves.

DEAR ABBY: Joe is 53 and I'm 49. We've been married for 31 years and Joe has always traveled for a living.

I never suspected him of playing around until about six months ago when I unpacked his suitcase and found some hair (reddish) on his bathrobe. (I'm a brunette.) He said he couldn't help it if the motels had poor housekeeping.

The next time he came home, his overcoat reeked with perfume. He said the coat must have been hanging next to a lady's wrap in some restaurant. I suppose that's possible.

Yesterday while riding in his car I found a cigarette butt with lipstick on it in the ashtray. (I don't smoke.) He said he had no idea how it got there.

He doesn't act any different toward me. He's still the same sweet loving man, but all this evidence has made me suspicious.

If he were YOUR husband, what would YOU do?

SUSPICIOUS IN CHICAGO

DEAR SUSPICIOUS: I'd be the same sweet loving woman. I'd also keep my eyes open.

DEAR ABBY: My daughter and I just had an argument and I want you to settle it.

Mary is married to a nice fellow. They have two sons, 11 and 8. My son-in-law has a poker game at the house once a week, and he lets the boys watch them play. The boys love to play cards, too. (They learned from watching their father.)

I told Mary I didn't think it was good for the boys to watch their father gamble, and she got very angry with me and said she saw nothing wrong with it.

Abby, don't you think this will influence the children to gamble? I say this because whenever the boys come to our house they want to play cards with my husband and me for money. We tell them we will play with them—but not for money.

What do you think?

CONCERNED GRANDMA

DEAR CONCERNED: I agree with you. Children should not gamble for money, but playing cards sharpens the wits and exercises one's mathematical ability. But you're expressed your views—now cool it, Granny.

Many Reasons For High Infant Mortality In N.C.

By LORI COOKE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The figures change a bit each year, but North Carolina always ranks as one of the highest states in the nation in infant mortality, sliding back and forth somewhere between third and sixth highest in recent years.

The rate of babies who die in the first 28 days of life remains high despite attempts to deal with the problem under the new state regionalization health plan and an attack on the situation by local health professionals.

"The reasons are exceedingly complex," said Dr. Richard Nugent, head of the Perinatal Health Branch of the state Division of Health Services. "They involve the social and demographic aspects of the state in addition to the quality of health care available."

Doctors at the University of North Carolina Medical Center, one of the most advanced regional centers involved in the program, put it more bluntly.

"This is a poor state," said Dr. Edward Bishop, director of Perinatal Medicine. "It's a rural state. There are transportation problems. There are undesirable educational, social and economic situations."

"We have a long way to go," said Dr. Ernest Kraybill, director of Neonatology. "I think the solution requires a very basic, broad attack on socio-economic problems. North Carolina isn't going to have a satisfactory neo-natal rate until those problems are solved."

Dr. Kraybill pinpointed low wages, poor education, poor housing and poverty as leading problems. He cited a newspaper story several years ago when North Carolina ranked second-highest in infant mortality.

In the same edition, he said, was a story on the average state wage. That year, North Carolina had the second lowest average wage in the nation. "I'm sure there was a relationship between low wages and the infant mortality rate," Kraybill said.

Most babies who die in North Carolina weigh less than five and a half pounds at birth and are the children of very young mothers or those with physical characteristics which make them high-risk.

Prenatal care, which would pinpoint any problems early and make the mothers aware of what they should be doing to ensure a healthy infant, is a major first step in holding down in the infant mortality rate.

Dr. Nugent estimates that 60 percent of North Carolina's expectant mothers receive "pretty complete" prenatal care.

Some don't get any at all. In September 1976, five mothers from Granville County, which ranks among the highest counties in the state in infant mortality, delivered their babies at Duke Medical Center with no prenatal care.

Yet Granville County offers two free prenatal clinics every month.

"People are not taking advantage of what we have to offer," said Jean Averett, supervisor-nurse at the Granville County Health Center. "There's an indifference and lack of understanding."

Dr. Bishop agrees. "There's a lack of motivation and ability," he said.

Many expectant mothers in Granville County show the characteristics of a high-risk mother, prone to deliver a high-risk infant.

Many are teenagers, considered a high-risk category because "their bodies are still growing," explained Dr. Charles D. Rollins, director of the Granville-Vance Health Department.

Many of them don't eat properly, and there are still women in Granville and Vance Counties who suffer from pica, a craving for dirt, clay and starch during pregnancy. "We don't see nearly as much of that as we used to," Mrs. Averett said.

Medical personnel at the health center stress diet, and mothers who aren't eating properly are placed on a nutrition program that allows them to buy adequate food.

To keep teenagers from getting pregnant simply because they don't know about their bodies, Granville County offers classes in sex education in the schools.

Health Education Assistant Maggie Trinkaus recalls accompanying one 16-year-old to the labor room where the girl asked several times, "When are you going to pull the plug?"

"At first, I thought it was because she was so medicated," said Ms. Trinkaus. "But then I began to understand that she thought we were going to pull a plug out of her navel, remove the baby that way, and replace the plug."

Granville County offers its expectant mothers prenatal clinics, a 60-bed community hospital, and highly specialized regional care at Duke University Medical Center in Durham, about 50 miles from the county seat in Oxford.

The regionalization plan seeks to provide several levels of care for mothers with varying levels of complication with their pregnancies.

The first level is the community hospital, with its small, generally-trained staff. On the second level are larger hospitals located in the state's larger cities, with more specialized personnel, a more expert nursing staff and nurseries which offer more sophisticated care.

The third level is the regional center associated with a medical school like Duke or the University of North Carolina, offering intensive maternal and neonatal care and highly-trained specialists.

That level of care is too expensive for most counties, Dr. Nugent admits.

"We're trying to develop it in a few hospitals and bring the mothers and babies to it," he said. "But we don't yet have a good distribution" of centers across the state.

"Things are getting better," said Dr. Bishop. "There's been a fantastic improvement over the last six years. I'm very proud of what happened here."

Dr. Rollins feels that if he could just get the women in Granville County to come in for the twice-weekly pre-natal clinics, he could say the same thing.

"Even when the facts are presented to them, it seems so foreign to them," said Ms. Trinkaus of many expectant mothers. "They don't understand that it's up to every individual."

RETIRED — Rep. John Flint, D-Ga., chairman of the House Ethics Committee which is investigating the Korean bribery scandal, said Tuesday he will not run for re-election this fall. "There is a time to achieve and a time to hang up your suit," the 63-year-old veteran of Congressional service said. (AP Laserphoto)

One Can Stand Up And Fight

What can states like North Carolina, Georgia and Virginia do when they face prejudicial treatment such as they have in the Department of Health, Education and Welfare's recent higher education edicts?

Well they don't have to roll over and play dead. In North Carolina, for instance, the UNC administration has decided in won't—in fact can't comply, even if it means going to court to obtain fairness.

There are other things that we can do. The rest of the nation needs to understand that the same "guidelines" can be applied to most other states, and, if HEW succeeds in this power grab, they very well could be.

HEW doesn't like to talk about quotas of blacks for universities, but its guidelines amount to the same thing. There are few states that have a percentage of blacks enrolled in their universities that are comparable with the percentage of black citizens—although that is something that would be ideal. We think North Carolina's senators and representatives in Congress have a selling job to do to their colleagues. They must be made to understand the threat which HEW poses to higher education in North Carolina, Virginia and Georgia can eventually wreck higher education in their own states.

No doubt our congressmen will run into a it-won't-happen-to-us attitude and possibly there will be private assurances from HEW that such guidelines won't be applied outside the south. Our congressmen can remind their colleagues that North Carolina felt it had assurances from HEW that it was proceeding properly, but this quickly changed.

Bureaucracy can't stand up to an aroused citizenry and a concerned Congress. We must make the rest of the nation understand that what HEW is doing to higher education in three "target" states can later be done elsewhere.

The extension chairmanship is an important one in our heavily agricultural county. We think the new chairman will provide the leadership that will continue the high quality service that our farm segment depends upon.

Excellent Choice For Important Post

THIS AFTERNOON Assembly Probes Goals

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — There is no "Czar of Information" in North Carolina, and there isn't going to be, say specialists involved in design of the Criminal Justice Information System now being installed.

That is the reason such a complex system was devised. Each component (courts, corrections, local law enforcement, State Bureau of Investigation, Highway Patrol, others) will set up and operate its own information system internally to serve its own distinct needs.

Then, links will be established from each part into a central computer for the rapid and accurate exchange of information. Links to other states and federal law agencies will also be included, so that ultimately a police officer on patrol can almost instantaneously get a full rundown on a given suspect or vehicle.

District attorneys can find out whether a defendant has a record anywhere; judges can find out which defendants can be trusted with probation; career criminals can be identified wherever they go; people out on bail or probation can be spotted; those wanted in other counties or states identified, and so on.

Given the fact that most serious crimes are committed by a relatively small number of people who travel about doing their business, law enforcement agencies feel they need an edge to call a halt to the lack of information.

Barbara Smith, assistant secretary in the Department of Crime Control and Public Safety, sees the biggest need as full participation by all agencies at all levels of government, with all information feeding to a central point. Such complex arrangement, and an expensive one—could not be built without federal money, and would not work unless all the parts conform to a central plan.

To overcome the fragmentation and friction between locally elected officials, local lawmen, local courts, and state officials (some elected and some appointed) in courts, prisons, and law agencies a broad supervisory structure was essential, and that resulted in the various Criminal Justice Information System committees.

Such massive amounts could not be gotten at local and state levels. Ms. Smith believes, and only with federal dollars can an effective system be installed.

The Governmental Operations Commission of the General Assembly is probing the charges and countercharges flying between Edmisten and those involved with setting up the information system.

State Senator Kenneth C. Royall, D-Durham, at a recent session of the commission, summarized the concerns: "We spent $7.5 million...can you give me some tangible results? How much has been spent by whom and for what? Where are we on the timetable?"

Have we put more people in prison? I'm not asking for statistics and systems and information jargon...but results. Have we cut crime?" Royall wondered.

The legislative study will continue as answers to Royall's questions are sought out.

In five years, the program has spent some $7.5 million. Total cost of installing the computers, lines, and terminals is expected to run more than $25 million, and another $2.1 million per year for continued operation.

More than at any time in history there are pressures surfacing that claim agriculture as a national good, to be used by the public arenas, rather than as private industry.

The effort in the western part of the United States to limit farm sizes to 160 acres for any farmer using government irrigation waters is a prime example.

Surely, it was never the intent of the central government to keep farms from growing larger and denying the efficiencies of large-scale agricultural operations.

This smacks of agrarian reform in the Communist states. Yet there are some who advocate doing just what has been proposed in the western U.S.

A U.S. senator recently raised questions whether the Soviet Union was buying "our" wheat in a manner unfair to the American public.

First it was George Meany's wheat on behalf of all U.S. citizens, and now some senators are thinking in the same possessive way.

It may be only a matter of years before the U.S. government decides that all grain exports will be handled by the government as a nationalized monopoly so that the U.S. can deal with other governments operating in similar fashion.

This is not an unfamiliar theme; there have been sly suggestions that the central government ought to nationalize America's basic industries such as steel, rails, oil and the like.

The individuals interested in land use planning and land use decisions also see land in some manner belonging to all the people and simply being worked by a private individual.

If you push the deeds of ownership backwards in time, they were first granted by the government to individuals, and thus theoretically that grant could be taken away.

Although there is no great threat that tomorrow land in the U.S. will be redistributed or confiscated by the central government, the fact that individuals acquired this land through great risks, hard work and prudent management does not always cut a great deal of ice with some public thinkers.

At the moment the family farm is simply bigger than it was and requires less hand labor than in the past.

To force the production marvel of the world to be curtailed simply to satisfy the value judgments of those not involved would be destructive to American agriculture and to consumers alike.

There has been enough government encroachment into the private lives of our citizens.

Now that famed anti-Vietnam war activist Sam Brown has lost his battle with the White House to keep the Peace Corps in his ACTION agency, he may be getting ready for a grand political gesture: recommend termination of his agency to President Carter—and then return to the wars of elective politics in Colorado.

Elective state treasurer of Colorado before being named director of ACTION, Brown may have tipped his hand in a Feb. 7 confidential memorandum to a few top officials of ACTION. Explaining for the first time that he was supporting Mr. Carter's plan to move the Peace Corps to a new agency, Brown wrote: "It is inevitable that everyone, including me, will give some thought for his or her personal future."

To some of Brown's colleagues, that was a clear hint that he is preparing to sever his one year's service to President Carter and go home. Terminating an agency (even if its component parts continue in other departments) would be highly popular in today's political climate. Brown denied to us any such intention, but key officials in ACTION insist otherwise.

Good And Bad Lawyers

WASHINGTON — Chief Justice Warren Burger has enraged lawyers by saying that 50 percent of them are not competent to practice in a courtroom. The American Bar Assn., reacting angrily, said only 20 percent of the lawyers now involved in courtroom litigation are unqualified for such service.

The Chief Justice, who has been complaining about court loads in the past several years, is trying to figure out ways of resolving the traffic jam. While I am in sympathy with him on the issue, I'm not sure what he wants to do about it. If his figure is correct, and most of us are willing to take it on face value, the next question is, "Should we prevent from taking trial cases those lawyers who are incompetent and leave the courtrooms open to those who know what they're doing?" I would assume that is what Mr. Burger is driving at.

Rebuff Burger Claim

By RICHARD CARELLI
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Chief Justice Warren E. Burger is about as private a public figure as this city offers, a man who most often effectively avoids news media attention unless it suits his purpose.

But the nation's top judge found himself the center of a much-publicized controversy when arriving in New Orleans for the American Bar Association convention last week.

His charge that one-half of all trial lawyers are incompetent had ruffled a group of lawyers from Illinois enough to spark a resolution that the ABA rebuke Burger.

In his annual speech to the association, Burger welcomed the controversy because, he said, it focused new light on an old problem. In the end the ABA backed down, seemingly vindicating the chief justice's remarks.

But let's take a closer look. Burger's comments were made during testimony before a legal services commission in London last July — testimony not made public until November. For Burger, it was a forum he almost never sees in the United States, an impromptu question-and-answer session which he had no control over.

40 Years Ago Today

February 22, 1938

The Senate rejected, 53-22, today an amendment to increase the emergency relief appropriation from $250,000,000 to $400,000,000.

Senator Bone (D-Wash) proposed the amendment contending that $250,000,000 was inadequate to finance relief for the rest of this fiscal year.

Before the vote Senator Byrnes (D-S. C.) asserted WPA officials had approved the original figures. Bone warned the Senate, however, "we will not be able to answer for the blunder we are making" if the appropriation proves too small.

Another amendment before the Senate was one by Senator Bailey (D-N. C.) to require cities to pay one-fourth of the cost of relief projects.

Under this proposal the President could waive that contribution, if he found some committees could not advance it.

Farmers in approximately 75 of North Carolina's 100 counties will journey to polling places March 12 to cast their votes for or against marketing quotas in cotton and tobacco.

E. Y. Floyd, AAA executive officer at State College, declared today that machinery for conducting the balloting is being set up in affected counties and that everything will be in readiness by the date of the referendum.

Should two-thirds or more of the growers favor the marketing quotas, the poundage restrictions set on 1938 cotton and flue-cured tobacco crops by Secretary Wallace will become effective.

The balloting will be conducted under the supervision of county committees of the Agricultural Conservation Association with ballot boxes being placed in each community where either cotton or tobacco is produced.

THE INSIDE REPORT Farmers vs. White House

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
WASHINGTON — Yet another effort by President Carter to calm down the nation's angry farmers went awry when the militant American Agriculture Movement came away convinced he was preaching a new "survival of the fittest" doctrine for the diminishing farm population.

That was not the majority view after the nearly two-hour meeting at the White House Feb. 14 attended by 21 representatives of various farm organizations. For example, president Alan Grant of the conservative Farm Bureau Federation nodded in agreement with most of what he heard from the President, Secretary of Agriculture Bob Bergland and White House domestic policy chief Stuart Eizenstat.

That was obviously just what the President had bargained for: approval of the administration's present farm programs by old-line farm outfits. Their support is intended to smother opposition of the American Agriculture Movement, organizer of the current farm strike.

For this reason, the National Wool Growers' Assn. was invited, although the impact of Mr. Carter's disputed wheat and feed grain subsidy programs has scarcely anything to do with the wool growers. The same is true of the national peanut growers and cotton planters, also attending the meeting.

Setting off the latest anti-Carter surge among Midwestern wheat and feed grain farmers was the President's "survival of the fittest" theme: farmers indeed are in some trouble, and some indeed may not make it given the rising cost of farm equipment. But, said Mr. Carter, his farm policy offers definite "dividends to those who survive the present crunch."

He also emphasized that the Carter farm bill, passed last year, was the most expensive in history. But what immediately affronted the American Agriculture Movement's three representatives present were the words "who survive the present crunch."

As a result, the Movement plans another march on Washington similar to, but perhaps bigger than, last month's tractor tie-up that angered Washington area commuters but won widespread support from Midwestern Congressmen.

Action's End? Now that famed anti-Vietnam war activist Sam Brown has lost his battle with the White House to keep the Peace Corps in his ACTION agency, he may be getting ready for a grand political

To some of Brown's colleagues, that was a clear hint that he is preparing to sever his one year's service to President Carter and go home. Terminating an agency (even if its component parts continue in other departments) would be highly popular in today's political climate. Brown denied to us any such intention, but key officials in ACTION insist otherwise.

A footnote: The Peace

More than at any time in history there are pressures surfacing that claim agriculture as a national good, to be used by the public arenas, rather than as private industry.

The effort in the western part of the United States to limit farm sizes to 160 acres for any farmer using government irrigation waters is a prime example.

Surely, it was never the intent of the central government to keep farms from growing larger and denying the efficiencies of large-scale agricultural operations.

This smacks of agrarian reform in the Communist states. Yet there are some who advocate doing just what has been proposed in the western U.S.

A U.S. senator recently raised questions whether the Soviet Union was buying "our" wheat in a manner unfair to the American public.

First it was George Meany's wheat on behalf of all U.S. citizens, and now some senators are thinking in the same possessive way.

It may be only a matter of years before the U.S. government decides that all grain exports will be handled by the government as a nationalized monopoly so that the U.S. can deal with other governments operating in similar fashion.

This is not an unfamiliar theme; there have been sly suggestions that the central government ought to nationalize America's basic industries such as steel, rails, oil and the like.

The individuals interested in land use planning and land use decisions also see land in some manner belonging to all the people and simply being worked by a private individual.

If you push the deeds of ownership backwards in time, they were first granted by the government to individuals, and thus theoretically that grant could be taken away.

Although there is no great threat that tomorrow land in the U.S. will be redistributed or confiscated by the central government, the fact that individuals acquired this land through great risks, hard work and prudent management does not always cut a great deal of ice with some public thinkers.

At the moment the family farm is simply bigger than it was and requires less hand labor than in the past.

To force the production marvel of the world to be curtailed simply to satisfy the value judgments of those not involved would be destructive to American agriculture and to consumers alike.

There has been enough government encroachment into the private lives of our citizens.

Now that famed anti-Vietnam war activist Sam Brown has lost his battle with the White House to keep the Peace Corps in his ACTION agency, he may be getting ready for a grand political gesture: recommend termination of his agency to President Carter—and then return to the wars of elective politics in Colorado.

Elective state treasurer of Colorado before being named director of ACTION, Brown may have tipped his hand in a Feb. 7 confidential memorandum to a few top officials of ACTION. Explaining for the first time that he was supporting Mr. Carter's plan to move the Peace Corps to a new agency, Brown wrote: "It is inevitable that everyone, including me, will give some thought for his or her personal future."

To some of Brown's colleagues, that was a clear hint that he is preparing to sever his one year's service to President Carter and go home. Terminating an agency (even if its component parts continue in other departments) would be highly popular in today's political climate. Brown denied to us any such intention, but key officials in ACTION insist otherwise.

Study Sharp Reduction For TV's Kiddie Ads

By JEFFREY MILLS
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Trade Commission is about to consider several proposals to severely cut television advertising aimed at children, an FTC official says.

Tracy A. Westen, who headed the team of FTC employees that spent months developing the proposals, outlined them in an interview Tuesday. They include:

—Banning such advertising on television programs with substantial audiences of children aged 6 or under.

—Prohibiting television ads for highly sugared foods aimed at older children, perhaps 7 to 12 years old, by limiting such ads to after 9 p.m.

—Requiring advertisers of other products designed to appeal to 7-to-12-year-olds to buy extra time for "counter-advertising" to present health, safety or nutritional information about such products.

Westen, deputy director of the commission's bureau of consumer protection, said the staff recommendations will be formally announced Monday, the day before they are presented to the commission.

The staff recommendations would have to be approved by the commission before becoming effective.

Commission Chairman Michael Pertschuk, in an earlier interview, said he was "convinced some action has to be taken" to guard young children against television ads for products with large sugar concentrations.

Manufacturers of sugar-coated cereals have cited studies, however, that they say show no relationship between cereals containing sugar and tooth decay.

Cereal and candy manufacturers have been mobilizing to counter any FTC move to restrict their products' advertising. One possible attack on the FTC under discussion among industry groups is a legal challenge claiming that such regulations violate advertisers' freedom of speech.

Some cereal manufacturers have embarked on a newspaper advertising campaign to rebut the poor-nutrition charges made against sugary cereals and are including in their television ads a disclaimer that their products are only "one part of a nutritious breakfast."

The FTC scrutiny of children's advertising began after it received petitions from Action for Television's Children and the Center for Science in the Public Interest.

The two groups contended that such ads may destroy a child's view of a good diet and can lead to cavities.

For more than a decade, parent groups and consumer activists have campaigned to restrain what they see as hucksterism aimed at the young, particularly ads for sugary foods. In some cereals, sugar makes up half the product's content.

Saturday morning television, dominated by cartoon shows aimed at children, is sponsored in large part by sugar-coated cereals and candy.

Ex-Senator May Try A Comeback

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Former U.S. Sen. Edward J. Gurney has called a March 1 press conference, but he's not ready to say whether he plans a return to his 9th congressional district seat.

"I don't think I'd better say anything more than that," Gurney told the Orlando Sentinel Star.

He reportedly has been approached in recent months by GOP officials urging him to run for the seat being vacated by U.S. Rep. Lou Frey Jr., who is running for governor.

Gurney, 64, did not seek reelection to the Senate in 1974 after he was indicted on federal charges of conspiracy, bribery and perjury in connection with an illegal fund-raising scheme.

In two separate trials, Gurney was cleared of all charges.

mony showed that the chief justice said he favored a system in which trial lawyers — one in 10 U.S. lawyers ever enter a courtroom — would be required to pass some kind of "written examination."

Burger also said his observations from the bench and statements from other judges led him to believe that about half of all trial lawyers now are unqualified to represent their clients.

Had the chief justice exaggerated and offered a guess not grounded in any legitimate data? Perhaps, but a public relations nightmare for the folks from Illinois led Burger off the hook.

The gist of the resolution was that Burger's "negativism" had been overstated, that there indeed was a problem but not of the scope discussed by the chief justice.

Burger's escape route became apparent even before he arrived in New Orleans. Talking to reporters, ABA President William B. Spann had labeled Burger's estimate on trial lawyer incompetency as "grossly disproportionate."

The figure was more like 20 percent, said Spann — sounding much like the man who claims he beats his wife only two times a week instead of five.

Burger picked up on Spann's quibbling, noting in his speech: "Even if 20 percent are incompetent, we ought to be doing a great deal more about it than we have up till now."

The next day, the ABA's policy-making House of Delegates briefly debated the resolution seeking a Burger apology.

The most effective speakers argued that adoption of the resolution would be interpreted by the public as a cop-out — that the organized bar doesn't want to do anything about cleaning up its act.

Other speakers defended the chief justice as a "good friend" and a citizen who has the right to speak his mind. But no speaker agreed that the chief's specific charges were on target — or even close.

The consensus seemed to be that the numbers do not matter — that if there are some incompetent trial lawyers not earning their fees the legal profession better redouble its efforts to train or weed out those lawyers.

Burger's troops at the Supreme Court report that the chief justice's remarks spurred many callers and letter-writers to register their support, and many editorial pages have awarded him a unanimous decision.

Burger no doubt feels more comfortable with all the publicity than he did on his arrival in New Orleans. Burger's mood then may have been reflected by his administrative assistant, Mark Cannon — a man whose penchant for staying behind the scenes makes most advisers seem like exhibitionists.

Cannon, in not-so-charming tones, blamed ABA publicists for supposedly tipping off reporters about the Illinois resolution flap.

School Testing Is Backed By Diocese

RALEIGH, N.C. — The Superintendent of Catholic Schools in eastern N.C. has issued a policy statement accepting the controversial statewide testing programs in non-public schools.

"From the beginning we have agreed to testing", said Sister Kathleen O'Neill, Superintendent of Schools for the Diocese of Raleigh. Her position differs from those taken by some other Christian educators in the state. She said that "Catholic schools cooperate willingly with the N.C. Department of Public Instruction."

While differing in philosophy on this issue, Sister Kathleen said "I do admire the commitment of (those) people who believe so sincerely in their church's apostolate of education."

Sister Kathleen noted that she has asked for guidelines from the state as to how the test results would be used.

She said she hopes "Catholic schools will continue to grow as long as they are centers of faith, of moral values, of academic excellence and of community service". She added her commitment to public education as well. "As Christians", she said, "we are bound to be interested in all children and to support by word and deed that which promotes their good."

higher court since the case probably won't be appealed.

But when a competent lawyer is litigating, the judge is doubly careful on every ruling he makes so he won't look like a dummy when the good lawyer goes over his head to appeal.

So, while Mr. Burger's heart is in the right place, he is making a big mistake by advocating that incompetent trial lawyers be kept out of the courts.

It is the able lawyers who should not be permitted in the courtroom since they are the ones who are doing all the damage.

It was William Shakespeare who wrote in "Henry VI": "The first thing we do, let's kill all the lawyers." In the interest of speeding up justice I think this should be amended to apply only to competent trial lawyers. I believe the bad ones should be allowed to live and multiply.

Snowed In

FRANKLIN, Mass. (AP) — Fufu, a six-year-old Pekinese, is resting at home after apparently being buried for 11 days under eight feet of snow tossed on him by a snow plow.

The dog, in good condition except for some chest congestion, was uncovered Sunday by his owner, Roland Cossette, a city snow plow operator.

Cossette said the dog was presumed dead after the plow accidentally buried it Feb. 8. Members of the Cossette family dug for several hours after the mishap without finding Fufu.

Last weekend, Cossette thought he heard the dog bark and began to dig again. "I must have hit him with the snow shovel because he started barking," Cossette said.

Cossette opened a hole in the snow and reached inside, only to be bitten by his dog.

Fufu was taken to a veterinarian who said the dog's body heat kept him "nice and warm" beneath the snow.

Bothering Baker
Several conservative Republicans in the House are about to send Sen. Howard Baker of Tennessee a letter urging him to step aside as Senate minority leader for the rest of the Panama Canal treaty debate.

The Congressmen (including Rep. Del Clawson of California, chairman of the House Republican Policy Committee) contend Baker's support for an amended version of the treaty makes it inappropriate for him to present the Republican position. Instead, they urge, Baker should temporarily hand over the leadership to the man he narrowly defeated for the post a year ago: Sen. Robert Griffin of Michigan.

Nobody expects Baker to step aside. But the request reflects the trouble his Panama position is costing him in the party whose nomination for President he seeks.

INTERSECT . . . a painting by Barry Bailey, illustrates the theme of "Intersection: A Greenville Connection," being held at 8:30 p.m. Saturday, Feb. 15.

"Intersection: A Greenville Connection," is the name given to an environment and multi-media art event for the public to be held in the Greenville area on Saturday, Feb. 25.

"Intersection" is scheduled to begin at 8:30 p.m. at the old

Wilson's Cabinet Shop on Clark Street (just off Dickinson). Admission is fifty cents a person, and persons of all ages are invited to attend.

According to Rosie Thompson of the East Carolina University School of Art Visual Arts Forum, the event is "an effort to join hands with the performing arts and the Greenville community."

Among events to be featured in "Intersection" will be a "gong show" and a Mardi Gras type party.

J.P. Stevens Set Back In Plea To High Court

WASHINGTON (AP) — J.P. Stevens has lost its bid to get the U.S. Supreme Court to overturn an appeals court's ruling that Stevens must allow union organizers into non-work areas of its 65 plants in North and South Carolina.

The order came from the 2nd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals last October, along with the threat that heavy fines would be levied if Stevens failed to comply. The Supreme Court declined to review the case, the latest in 18 separate court fights over Stevens' resistance to unionizing efforts.

The company has plants in several states and employs 45,000 people. For the last 15 years, it has battled attempts by the Amalgamated Clothing and Textile Workers to bring union representation to various J.P. Stevens plants.

The appeals court said in October of the latest court case that it raised "grave doubts about the ability of the courts to make the provisions of the federal labor law work in the face of persistent violations."

The lower court cited as an example an incident in Wallace, S.C., in which company supervisors placed an electronic eavesdropping device in the motel room of a union organizer and monitored meetings between organizers and company workers from two local plants.

J.P. Stevens, represented by former Defense Secretary Clark Clifford, now a Washington lawyer, argued in its Supreme Court appeal that the appeals court exceeded its contempt power by infringing on the firm's right to control the use of its property.

"The practical consequences of permitting union organizers access to the non-work areas of a plant would be staggering," the appeal said.

"Non-work areas are not isolated, sealed-off precincts having little relation to the working areas of a plant...such areas could cease to be places of personal use, rest and relaxation and become instead centers of constant professional solicitation and pressure."

The company also charged that the threatened fines are too severe and "disproportionate."

The Carter administration urged the high court to reject the company's appeal.

Stevens officials said they were disappointed with the ruling, but they would obey the law.

But a union official said that remained to be seen.

"The company has made statements like this over the years whenever they ran out of appeals," said Scott Hoyman, vice president and southern regional director for the union. "But in each instance there have been continued violations."

Stabilization Role In 1977 Reviewed

About 200 persons attended the District Six meeting of the Flue-Cured Tobacco Cooperative Stabilization Corp. here last night.

Fred G. Bond, Stabilization's general manager reported on the corporation's operations for the past year, and explained the purposes and function of Stabilization.

Bond said sales last year totaled 219 million pounds of leaf, while Stabilization received 195 million pounds for a total volume of tobacco handled in excess of 400 million pounds...with a value of more than $500 million.

Total Stabilization inventory at year-end was down, Bond said, by more than 20 million pounds from the previous year.

At year-end, Stabilization had on hand 585 million pounds of leaf as compared with 608 million pounds on hand at the end of 1976.

Bond said, too, that the volume of down-stalk leaf coming to Stabilization last year declined.

James T. Hill, region six director from Kinston presided at the meeting and discussed some of the practices that help produce a good quality crop.

Hill noted that problems have arisen over residues caused by the excessive use of MH, and suggested that growers follow recommended instructions for use of that and other chemicals.

Foresees Harm In Farm Strike

AMARILLO, Texas (AP) — Dissident farmers who threw eggs and snowballs at Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland did "great harm" to the farm strike movement. Bergland says.

None of the missiles hit Bergland as he left a motel Tuesday afternoon after a meeting with regional leaders of the American Agriculture group, but one egg hit Amarillo Police Chief Lee Spradlin in the head. "There were a few people there trying to embarrass American Agriculture, but I didn't pay any attention to it," Bergland said in a Wichita, Kan., news conference a few hours later.

Bergland had been challenged several times in a question-and-answer session with leaders of American Agriculture who are unhappy with government farm price policy. He brushed off several questions before leaving to fly to Wichita and a similar meeting with farmers.

PLAN NEW ROOMS

LONDON (UPI) — The British Museum is creating new basement exhibition rooms to show classical sculpture hardly anyone has seen for 170 years. The collection by Charles Townley has been in "reserve" storerooms since 1806.

As he left the building, he walked into a barrage of eggs and snowballs thrown by some of the 150 persons waiting for him.

Tractors surrounded the motel, and a woman tried to prevent Bergland's departure by lying in front of the police car that was to take him to the airport. A farmer tried unsuccessfully to pull his tractor in front of the motorcade.

Bergland proposed a three-year program involving a 20 percent cutback on wheat production and a 10 percent cutback on corn and milo, with the government paying a 25-cent storage rate to farmers holding grain off the market.

Bergland said the national grain reserve program would raise wheat and feed grain prices to at least $3.15 a bushel over the three-year period.

"We can't wait that long," one farmer yelled.

"If farmers participate in the reserve and set-aside programs, grain prices will increase. These are self-help programs," Bergland said.

The farm leaders were unimpressed and gave Bergland a "Worst Salesman Award" plaque.

FBI Following Marston Lead

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Fifty FBI agents, including a dozen accountants, are involved in an investigation that involves the firing of former U.S. Attorney David Marston, the finances of Hahnemann Hospital and the activities of Rep. Daniel Flood, a bureau spokesman says.

"If it's got something to do with Hahnemann Hospital, it's got something to do with Flood," Paul Lorenzetti, FBI liaison officer, said Tuesday.

Flood, a Democrat from Wilkes-Barre, is credited with getting a $14.5 million federal grant for a new $65 million 365-bed addition to Hahnemann.

The FBI investigation reportedly centers on the awarding of a $835,000 contract for construction supervision of the project to Capital Investment Development Corp. of Lionville, despite the receipt of a lower bid from another company.

Marston, a Republican, left office last month after U.S. Attorney General Griffin Bell said he soon would replace him with a Democrat. Marston had begun a Hahnemann investigation similar to the FBI's prior to his departure.

Marston's investigation involved the roles of Flood and Rep. Joshua Eilberg, D-Pa., in helping the hospital finance the construction project.

The 50 agents were assigned to the FBI investigation because the bureau considers it a "priority item," Lorenzetti said. The team of accountants, was deployed here from out of town on a temporary basis to help with the investigation, he added.

"This shoot and shebang is so wide-ranging it's kind of hard to say they're all working on Hahnemann even," Lorenzetti said. "As you start one investigation it's kind of hard to say what's related and what's detached."

Lorenzetti said the Marston firing neither slowed nor accelerated the Hahnemann probe.

"We'll continue the investigation regardless of who the U.S. attorney is," he said. "We do the investigation, they do the prosecuting."

School Board....

that region. He noted that the high school students who act as bus drivers are not used to driving in ice and snow. "Don't have kids at school when it is snowing with no one there who knows how to drive them home."

There should also be some coordination between the School Board and the Department of Transportation in seeing that roads are cleared, he added.

"My clients' sole concern is to express what they feel...Most parents feel the same when it comes to the safety of their children. The cost and inconvenience doesn't matter."

The Rev. Jerry Rowe, pastor of Gum Swamp Free Will Baptist Church, where the Carraways and Holland are members, described the past few weeks as "traumatic." The Rev. Rowe asked that the Board act quickly on the matter of the monitors.

"Tomorrow could be a Thursday, the second of February, another time," he added. He noted that "there is no axe to grind; no finger of accusation to point at either Mr. Alford (superintendent) or the School Board."

Chairman Mark Owens then asked for other speakers, but no one spoke up. He then addressed the group.

"To the parents that have lost a child, I'm sure no words said any more benefit than the ones received from their minister, friends, and loved ones. It takes a parent to realize the importance of the love and significance of a child.

"I can truthfully say that every man that serves on this Board, the superintendent and staff, have a concern for the children...and we welcome any suggestion that can make our system better.

"We will make every effort to take the suggestions and mold them into the procedures we already have and attempt to make a more perfect system," Owens concluded.

Following comments from several other parents, William House made the motion to implement the monitor system. Owens then appointed a committee composed of Thomas Patterson, House, and Bill McLawhorn to "take in the suggestions and incorporate them into the present plan."

In an interview this morning, Superintendent Ott Alford said that he felt two points concerning the Carraway girl's death should be made.

The first is a statement by the bus driver saying that the accident occurred because the child stooped to pick up her books. The driver said in the statement that there was no ice on the road.

Secondly, a report filed by Transportation Superintendent Rodney Bullock said that the highway conditions were not dangerous on the day of the accident.

Alford said that he did not wish to bring these items up at the meeting last night but that he did think the public should be aware of them.

secretary; Norfleet Suggs, treasurer; and Glenn Strickland, Billy Phillips, Hal Tanner and Dr. John Wooten, other executive board members, in addition to the chairman, vice chairman and secretary. The election will be held at the March meeting.

Dr. Fred Irons; Gail Cherry, hospital medical records librarian; and Dwayne Barlow, Professional Standards Review Organization representative, made a presentation about PSRO. It was explained that the board and the medical staff of the hospital must soon make a decision about whether PSRO duties will be delegated or non-delegated. It was made clear the preferable way, the way the hospital is now taking, is delegated, the hospital doing its own reviewing, with the PSRO monitoring.

PSRO is prescribed by a 1972 federal law. Its purpose is to see that every Medicaid patient is getting the level of care needed, not more and not less. Sampling from hospital records is the method used to make these determinations. If the doctors document diagnoses, patients' progress, and other necessary information on each patient, they need never know PSRO exists, Barlow said. It is only when they don't document their work with each patient that they hear from PSRO, he said.

Chiefs of the various hospital departments were approved and Dr. Don Weir was welcomed as chief of the Department of Rehabilitation. He was present at the meeting and will be coming to work here in June. He is now an Iowa resident.

Dr. Jack Welch, Chief of Staff, reported that a problem for nurse anesthetists concerning the obtaining of liability insurance seems to be imminent. He said one way out of the dilemma may be for the local Pitt County Anesthesia Associates, of which he is one, to hire these people, rather than for the hospital to continue to do so.

Hospital Director Jack Richardson said consideration is being given to the establishment of a hospital administration residency program here.

Finance Committee Chairman J. H. Moye reported that accounts receivable are up —$174,327. He pointed out, however, that this is not surprising since total patient revenue has nearly doubled since last January. The January, '78 figure was $1,700,000; the January, '77 figure, $965,000. The revenue to date figure for this fiscal year, which began Oct. 1, 1977 is $6,187,000; the figure at the same time last year for the same time period, $3,700,000.

Construction Manager Ralph Hall reported that bids will be opened for the new parking lot for the hospital Mar. 1. The work on the Neo-Natal Unit is about 45 days behind because of the weather and slow delivery of materials, he said.

It was pointed out that Pitt Memorial will be featured in a special Heart program on WITN-TV's "Hospitality House" this coming Sunday.

A building committee was appointed for the planning of the new bed tower for the hospital. It will be made up of a liaison committee between the hospital and the ECU School of Medicine, with Charles Gaskins representing the County Commissioners, as its chairman.

Richardson reported that a check for $13,501 has been received from the Duke Endowment Fund for "days of charity care rendered by the hospital." This is an annual endowment much appreciated by Pitt Memorial, he said. As a matter of interest, he said the hospital's endowment from Duke in 1941 was a little over $4,000. Then, however, the total hospital yearly budget was $50,000. Now it is running $41,000 a day.

Medical School Dean William Laupus announced that residency programs in surgery and obstetrics and gynecology have been approved, and that acceptance notices to prospective med students are continuing to be sent out.

Continuing Crash Probe

MIAMI, Fla. — A National Transportation Safety Board investigator said today that the investigation into the February 17 crash at Myrtle Beach, S.C. that killed Greenville residents Mr. and Mrs. Ed Rawl is continuing.

Louis Wells said that the report of the investigation should be completed in about 30 days then forwarded to the NTSB for final determination.

However, Wells said tapes of conversations between Rawl, who was piloting the single engine plane, and the Myrtle Beach tower failed to indicate any particular problem with the aircraft.

Wells said at one point the tower asked Rawl about his gas supply and Rawl replied that he had about four hours of fuel on-board.

The NTSB investigator said the Bonanza DE-33 Rawl was piloting was a 1976 model with 171 hours total flying time. He estimated the cost of the plane, which was totally destroyed when it crashed into a wooded area about six miles north of Grand Strand Airport, at $85,000 to $90,000.

Charles MacIntosh, who invented waterproof fabrics, was born on Dec. 29, 1776.

Former Interior Secretary Victim Of Hot Issue

By JAMES R. SCHIFFMAN
CHEYENNE, Wyo. (UPI) — Stanley K. Hathaway went to Washington three years ago as Interior secretary-designate bent on developing domestic energy resources. The experience left him depressed, his confidence shattered.

STANLEY K. HATHAWAY went to Washington three years ago as interior secretary-designate. He resigned after six weeks in office. For the first time he has consented to talk about the Washington experience. (UPI Photo)

He was in office six weeks. Behind Hathaway in those days were eight years as an extremely popular Wyoming governor, marred only by intense attacks from home state conservationists. They branded him an unserving advocate of development at the expense of the environment. During Senate confirmation hearings, that antagonism blossomed into attacks from a united front of national environmental groups.

Senate confirmation proved an empty victory. The confrontation with anti-development forces extended into Congress and his own agency. Hathaway found himself unable to control his organization, something that was easy in Wyoming.

Hathaway was not accustomed to the sense of helplessness. He lapsed into depression and then resigned.

With psychiatric care, he recovered and resumed his law practice in Wyoming, and joined the boards of several energy companies. Recently, he consented for the first time to talk about the Washington experience and his view that energy must be developed at a faster pace.

Hathaway had not sought the Interior post. He accepted the call from President Gerald Ford, even though he was up for an appointment to the federal judiciary in Wyoming.

A burly man, Hathaway spoke in an articulate, country drawl. Heavy frowns outlined his forehead and eyes.

"I knew from my experience as governor, the environmentalists would go all out to try and defeat my nomination," Hathaway, 53, said. "That didn't surprise me. I guess my hope and the reason I went there, and my optimism was that the country was ready — the mood was right in Washington — that some decisions were going to be made to produce some more energy, and particularly on the public lands, the outer continental shelf.

"I was wrong about that. The mood was not there. The protectionist attitude was far prevailing, so I was in an arena in which I couldn't live."

Q: What really happened to Stan Hathaway?
A: "I ran into one of the hottest issues in America at that time, which still is. Energy versus the environment. I was right in the middle of it. And because we had a presidential election coming up, the majority in the Congress chose to make an issue of me. Not me personally, but because of what I had stood for and what President Ford stood for.

"...The predominant attitude in the Senate, for example, was to protect the environment, not develop energy. Well, I didn't fit that mold, at least in their opinion. They didn't think I had the balance necessary to make those decisions on public lands.

"I thought I still could be effective after I was confirmed, but the problem was still there. And the Interior Department was pretty well infiltrated over the preceding four or five years with a lot of environmentally minded people, and the development-minded people were as a whole in the minority. So there was a blockage... and that blockage had its clientele on the hill in Congress."

Q: How did all these frustrations manifest themselves for you personally?
A: "They hurt, of course, but I've become quite philosophical about it. I had to get over from depression."

Q: Do you mind talking about it?

A: "Depression is generally a feeling of hopelessness, that you're blocked. You can't do anything, at least in my case. The net result of that is a loss of confidence, which just seems to disappear overnight. Mine fortunately didn't last too long. I had good treatment in Washington, and I had a Navy captain who spent about 90 hours with me and I had good treatment in Denver. And I worked my way out of it. It's not a good feeling. I'll say that. I sympathize with anybody who's had it."

Q: In Wyoming, you were popular: the state's only two-term governor. You had tremendous respect from both parties, and then you get dropped into this Washington environment. Do you think that was part of it?
A: "Oh sure. Well, it's a bigger pool, different players. The key to that, I think, is there's an openness out here among people that I was used to all my life. You don't see that by and large in Washington. It's a more behind-the-back subtlety. You know, they call it hardball there. Maybe I'm not a hardball player, I don't know..."

Hathaway recalled he decided to move forward with coal development when he took the Interior post, but asked his subordinates to keep the decision secret until congressional and state leaders could be notified.

"Out here (Wyoming) you...have the confidence of the people you're working with," he said. However, "within 20 minutes...I had calls from The New York Times and The Washington Post...that's typical of the atmosphere you operate in there."

"There's an intellectual arrogance on the part of eastern people to begin with. For years and years — and it's still true, I think — there was the old saying that there's not much wisdom west of the Hudson or the Potomac..."

"I lay it on the fact that people are so crowded along the eastern seaboard, they almost live in a fear: fear of but not this election year. As governor, he proposed legislation that created the Department of Environmental Quality, a state watchdog agency. The fight over the agency's role was bitter.

"He wanted a strip mining act in Wyoming that was totally flexible, had no standards," said Leslie Peterson, president of the Wyoming Outdoor Council, who fought for a tough code. "He hates me to this day."

Hathaway said: "The extreme environmentalists have always criticized me because I didn't go all the way with them. If you're not with them 100 percent of the time you're against them as far as they're concerned. They haven't been able to find that balance."

Q: They're not consensus politicians?

A: "No. And they're in a battle here they can't win. And my fear (is) that there'll be a degradation of the environment eventually of necessity because we have unreasonable rules and regulations."

Q: But environmentalists have done some good?

A: "Yes. No question they've done some good. They haven't done it all on their own. A lot of people were working before they were organized."

Hathaway stresses a "realistic" balance between demands for resources and the environment. He says many current regulations are useless and waste billions of dollars in delays.

He proposes a stepup in all fossil and nuclear fuel development. To safeguard against profiteering, he advocates high excess profits taxes for big oil companies and is miffed that Congress will not enact this alternative.

Hathaway's interest in energy development has been nurtured by his activities as a director of several executive boards: Pacific Power and Light Co., a Portland, Ore., firm that provides electricity to wide areas of the West; Northern Energy Resources, a PP&L subsidiary that oversees mining operations; and the Apache Corp., an independent oil company based in Minneapolis. He also serves on the board of the Wyoming Bancorporation, a bank-holding company. Hathaway urges a "realistic" balance between the needs to develop domestic energy rapidly and safeguard the environment.

His views haven't changed since 1975, but the economic situation has.

In 1973, 30 percent of the nation's crude oil was imported. Four years later, 50 percent was brought in at a cost of more than $40 billion — four times the 1973 figure.

He rejected the notion major oil companies are withholding their products for higher prices, or that they are in collusion with the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries.

"Some of the big majors that are involved in foreign oil have made some money, obviously," he said. "I don't think the domestic companies and the independents have fared that well because the cost of exploration is going up so much."

He conceded nuclear energy is a risky, expensive business and questions are unresolved about the disposal of radioactive wastes. However, he said the risks must be taken because the alternative — dramatically increased reliance on coal — is impractical.

"If you made the commitment tomorrow that all the future power plants in this country are going to be coal-fired, I don't see how it would be possible to move the coal. You'd have so many unit trains going out of Wyoming that you couldn't get across the road."

Solar, geothermal, and other permanent energy sources are years away from mass commercial development, he said. "What some in the environmental movement would like to do is wait for that. We can't wait for a technology that isn't here yet. So they misled you, they misled me, they misled the American people. The Ralph Naders misled us when they say wait for solar energy."

Early Trucker Has Memories

ST. LOUIS (AP) — C.J. Long remembers the day when truckers put candles on the dashboard to keep ice off the windshield, and fought cattle for the right-of-way.

They were a breed of their own, those cloth-capped men Steinbeck described with admiration in "The Grapes of Wrath." But most of them are gone now, and Long, who recently retired after more than 40 years on the highways and byways of Missouri, Tennessee and Arkansas, laments their passing.

"Drivers today are different from the drivers of yesterday," he said. "They have their CBs, their six- or seven-hour runs, regular paychecks, paid vacations and sick leave. But they don't know the excitement of the unexpected we enjoyed."

The unexpected might be a washed-out road, a slick mud approach to a river ferry, a cotton or lumber wagon plodding through the dark without lights or cattle huddled at night on the warm asphalt.

"There were no heaters in trucks in the 1930s," the 65-year-old Long said. "We kept our feet warm by putting a lantern under a blanket and wrapping the blanket around our legs. You got all dirty and sooty, but at least you kept warm."

Those gray winters during the Depression — Long remembers them well. He remembers the time near Poplar Bluff, Mo., when he burned his spare tire to keep from freezing. And he recalls the fog banks near Wilson, Ark., the time he taped orange candy wrappers over his headlights to help cut through the haze.

There weren't any motels in those days, no fast-food outlets, no air-conditioned cabs to rest a road-weary body after a long haul. Long, and men like him, slept sitting up, if they slept at all.

A usual day might start in St. Louis, Long reminisced. From there he might drive to Memphis or to Stuttgart, Ark., pick up 140 sacks of rice and then head back to St. Louis to unload the cargo a bag at a time at different grocery stores. And when it was unloaded, it was usually time to start all over again.

Long sometimes worked with a driver-helper. A run from St. Louis to Little Rock and back put $8 in their pockets. His first year he made $1,000.

Since then, he's driven through a revolution in the trucking industry. When he started in the '30s, his cab cost $700, the trailer $800. The modern cab lists for about $35,000 and weighs six tons.

Long says he's loath to call some of the modern truckers "knights" of the road.

"We spent years building up an image and now it's going downhill because of a few guys," he said. "We were taught to pull over to let automobiles pass when we topped a hill. Today some guys run like hell going down a hill to pick up speed to make it back up."

Solutions By Hathaway

CHEYENNE, Wyo. (UPI) — Key points of Stanley K. Hathaway's solution to the energy shortage:

— A national commitment to increase domestic energy. Only that, he said, can avert a "crisis of the magnitude that would last a year or two, where people are actually cold, where there are brownouts in the cities, where nothing moves, where industry shuts down, where you have massive unemployment — that's possible, with an oil embargo."

— Relaxation of "unrealistic" environmental requirements. "The National Environmental Policy Act has so many built-in delays... it has no regard for the economics of the situation," he said.

— Deregulation of oil and gas prices. "It doesn't make sense to me that we can regulate a scarce commodity at a price lower than the world price."

— Development of oil shale.
— Expansion of nuclear power.

Garden Cress

A Good Choice

EXCELSIOR, Minn. (UPI) — Garden cress or pepper grass is a good choice for home gardeners who like the flavor and texture of watercress but haven't the climate or the means to grow it. Bruce Johnstone, retired chief horticulturist for a major United States seed house, says garden cress (botanical name, Lepidium sativum) grows easily and rapidly indoors or out. Johnstone says the seeds germinate in four to seven days at moderate temperatures and are ready for cutting in 10-15 days.

Associated Press Writer
CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — The fall has been long and hard for John J. Ryan, from a comfortable and powerful corporate life to unemployment and a duplex apartment.

In 1973, Ryan was fired from his $64,000-a-year job as head of Southern Bell Telephone Co. in North Carolina. Southern Bell has blamed him for a slush fund which was fueled by falsified expense vouchers.

Ryan, who told reporters two years later he ran a political fund in Southern Bell, denies he was mastermind of the illegal falsified expense account plan.

He may soon have another forum — a courtroom.

Ryan, 58, is the only individual still facing charges which came out of a three-year state investigation of Southern Bell. Ryan's accusations that top executives were forced to kick back part of their salaries for political contributions sparked the investigations which eventually led to his indictment.

He faces charges of embezzling company money for his own use. He denies that, but he looks forward to being tried so he can finally get his side on the record.

"When I open fire, I've got the torpedoes ready for a broadside," he said in a recent interview. "Not just Southern Bell. I'm going after AT&T."

Ryan was one of several persons subpoenaed last week when Southern Bell went on trial in Charlotte for fraud and conspiracy. But the company pleaded guilty to a lesser charge, sidestepping a jury trial and testimony by any witnesses.

Ryan was a rising star in the galaxy of American Telephone & Telegraph, the world's largest corporation and Southern Bell's parent, until he was unceremoniously fired in 1973.

The company contends he was fired because of poor management, and because he was directing his subordinates to falsify expense accounts and pass some of the money to him. Ryan argues that his ouster was the result of corporate infighting.

He says the battle has continued since 1973.

He has not kept a job for long since his dismissal. He blames that on the fact that he lists Southern Bell as a reference.

"I don't have any choice. I have to say where I was for 27 years," he said.

"I tried to be an insurance salesman but that didn't work out at all. The ghost of Bell was impossible to get away from. All the rumors and gossip. Everybody taking shots. It was very sad," he said.

His face and name have become familiar, especially in Charlotte. Ryan calls it notoriety.

"I can't even go to the grocery store without being recognized. But most of them tell me they're on my side," he said.

Ryan has told his story repeatedly. State prosecutors have heard it. He said he had an eight-hour interview with Attorney General Rufus Edmisten in 1975, when the state's investigation was just getting under way.

But when prosecutors laid out their evidence against Southern Bell at a sentencing hearing last week, the finger of guilt pointed straight at Ryan. Much of the testimony was based on statements by current company officials.

Assistant Attorney General Andy Vanore confirmed that Edmisten met with Ryan three years ago.

But he said Ryan and his attorney would not discuss the case after that first meeting unless Ryan got a grant of immunity.

Asked why information from Ryan was not used at the hearing, Vanore said, "I don't have any comment on that."

The only bright spot for Ryan came when Mecklenburg County District Attorney Peter Gilchrist told the judge. "The idea that one person would be responsible for this state of affairs is just preposterous."

Southern Bell officials deny Ryan's claim of a payroll kick-back fund. They say executives did toss in money for political contributions in the early 1970s but they maintain the executives' contributions were strictly voluntary and therefore legal.

The company accuses Ryan of ordering his subordinates to falsify expense vouchers. The money went to political contributions and into some executives' pockets, according to court testimony.

Southern Bell says Ryan was fired when a subordinate revealed the voucher scheme to headquarters in Atlanta.

Ryan takes a different view. "Some of them (his co-workers) were passed over when I was promoted...There was some maneuvering with knives toward the back."

Before 1973, Ryan lived with his family in a 12-room house.

He served a term as president of the Charlotte Chamber of Commerce.

A tall, dignified man, he moved easily in circles of political power.

He had a swimming pool and a summer house in the mountains.

But after he was fired, the marriage and influence melted away.

"We had everything," Ryan said, his eyes misting. "And that house, oh, that was the best house we ever lived in."

Divorced, he now shares a $180-a-month duplex apartment with his three grown sons. He lives on help from his brothers and sisters and part of his $15,000-a-year pension.

But he is quick to admit that, had he not been fired, he would still be with Southern Bell.

"Oh sure, sure. I was supposed to be president of Southern Bell. They told me so."

Remedial Try By Democrats

By DAVID TOMLIN
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The state Democratic Party, acknowledging that there are gaps in its relations with blacks and other minorities, plans to act within the month to try to fill some of them in.

State executive director Steve Glass said in an interview Tuesday that the party's executive council has informally agreed on a plan to establish minority affairs representatives in each of the party's 100 county organizations.

Their function, Glass said, would be to act as liaisons between minority groups and the party organization.

The idea came up at a council meeting last Friday at which Dr. Alfreda Webb announced her retirement as state minority representative to run for the state House in Guilford County.

Glass said Dr. Webb made a farewell address in which she cited minority problems that the party had failed to recognize and expressed hope that the Democratic organization would begin listening before it began losing votes. In the discussion that followed, the minority affairs representatives proposal was made, and Glass said there was general agreement that it should be acted upon.

"The party leaders felt like the party wanted to be more responsive and that we need a more readily available avenue for communication with blacks," Glass said.

The executive director said he planned to have a formal proposal to submit to the council within two weeks, and expected it would be approved.

He added that action on the minority affairs representatives did not mean that the party had ignored minority needs in the past or left minority group members out of its decision making.

"We receive a tremendous amount of suggestions, complaints and lots of feedback from all groups, including blacks," Glass said. "All of our committees have the appropriate representation from blacks, Indians, the elderly and women. It has never been a matter of shutting people out or that they're not represented."

Suicide By Children Draws Increasing Attention

EDITOR'S NOTE — How many children killed by cars run into traffic on purpose? How many kids who "fall" from windows actually mean to? Very little is known about child suicides, but experts agree that youngsters, even infants, suffer the same deep depressions and melancholia that drive adults to death.

By BERNARD GAVZER
For The Associated Press

NEW YORK (AP) — Suicide by children of kindergarten and grade school ages — from 5 to 14 — is an emerging problem in the field of mental health. Some experts believe that even infants can intentionally kill themselves.

In New York City a 10-year-old supposedly ignored by his family put a noose around his neck, stood on a chair and asked his brother to pull away the chair. The brother refused, so the 10-year-old kicked it away and strangled.

The National Center for Health Statistics reported 170 confirmed child suicides in 1975, the most recent year for which data are available.

"That figure is demonstrably inaccurate," says Dr. Ari Kiev, developer of the Crisis Intervention Clinic at Cornell Medical College. "There has always been a stigma attached to suicide, particularly child suicide. As a result, it is concealed and it is not accurately reported."

There also are suicides that go undetected. Deaths that appear to be accidental, particularly traffic accidents.

Dr. Joaquim Puig-Antich, chief of the Child Depression Clinic at Columbia-Presbyterian's Psychiatric Institute in New York, said:

Children commit suicide for many of the same reasons as adolescents and adults, mainly while in deep depression, which may take many forms and come from many causes. Some may kill themselves in the hope of rejoining a parent who has died. In achievement-oriented families, children have tried to kill themselves rather than come home with poor grades.

One of the most debated elements of child suicide is whether children recognize that death is final.

"Children do not develop mature ideas about death until middle childhood," says Dr. David Shaffer, formerly of the Institute of Psychiatry in London, where he conducted a "psychological post-mortem" of 30 child suicides. "Half the children in the 6 to 11 age group in one study believed death to be reversible. In the 11 to 13 group, 13 percent still believed this."

Dr. Daniel Casriel, founder of New York's Casriel Institute, has reservations about whether children and adults with emotional problems understand death.

"It isn't so much that the suicide wants to die, but that he doesn't want to live anymore. A child who is severely depressed feels as though he has an emotional spear in his belly. It isn't that he feels he would be happier dead, just that there would be less pain," he says.

"Children who are severely depressed feel sad most of the time. They have difficulty experiencing pleasure. They have difficulty sleeping, they lose some weight, they lack appetite. Frequently they feel guilty about things they haven't even done," says Dr. Puig-Antich. "They also think frequently about suicide and they express this desire in many ways, and some of them attempt to kill themselves."

The phenomenon of possible infant suicide is seen in a wasting-away condition called "marasmus."

"It was first discovered in an orphanage in South America," says Dr. Casriel. "Here were infants apparently given everything essential to their biological needs, yet they seemed to curl up and die. It was found that these infants were never picked up, never cuddled. I think there are babies who want love and refuse to live without it. That is certainly seen in older children."

A number of experts believe there would be more child suicides if young children had the skill to carry them out. For example, one child thinking he was eating poison consumed a bowl of sugar; another tried hanging himself with a light string.

Experts agree that the child whose suicidal tendencies remain untreated may carry them out in later life, especially during the high risk ages of 15 through 24. This age group accounted for 4,736 suicides in 1975 — a rate of nearly 13 a day.

"The way to reduce that incidence is to provide treatment as soon as the problem is discovered," says Dr. Puig-Antich. "There are three rules of the thumb that anyone can use to detect a potentially suicidal child:

— "Does the child look sad frequently?"

— "Does the child say, or make statements, that he feels sad?"

— "Does the child say, at some point, that he wants to kill himself, or do something to harm himself?"

"If any one of those three things happens frequently, help should be sought."

By IRVING DESFOR
AP Newsfeatures

Casey Allen is a professional photographer who started teaching photography at New York University 25 years ago. He was also director of photography at New York's Central YWCA for 14 years. And eight years ago, Casey took over as host of a weekly television show for WNYC-TV on which he interviews people prominent in the world of photography.

Now I'd like you to hear Casey Allen's provocative ideas about "images" vs. "photographs" which he made public some months ago at the Visual Communications Conference at the University of Maryland. His barbed words startled the audience, pleasing some and upsetting others, but they sure got attention. OK, Casey Allen, you're on:

"Just about eight years ago when I started 'In and Out of Focus' as a weekly TV program, I began to hear people in photography talking about their 'images.' It sounded as if everybody had gone into public relations. Then I found out they were referring to their photographs, not their personal status in the community. IMAGE became the new catch word to show others you were 'with it.' So I looked up the word in 'Websters New Collegiate Dictionary':

"IMAGE. 1. A reproduction or imitation of a form, person or thing — a statue. 2a. The optical counterpart of an object produced by an optical device (lens or mirror) or an electronic device. b. A likeness of an object produced on photographic material. 3a. An exact likeness (God created man in his own image). b. A person strikingly like another (he is the image of his father). 4a. A tangible or visible representation (he is the image of filial devotion). 5a. A mental picture of something not actually present; an impression. b. A concept held in common by a group ...

"That's a lot of images.

"Then I looked up the definition of photograph. The noun is described in seven words:

"PHOTOGRAPH. A picture or likeness obtained by photography."

"That's it. No subheads or multiple choices. So why not call a photograph a photograph instead of an image? It seems so simple.

"But the simple, direct way doesn't appeal to everybody. To some, whole new vistas of imagery were opened up. Some found they could substitute the photographic process for lack of talent in drawing or painting and they could become part of the exciting new world of fine arts photography. Just substitute the word 'image' for 'photograph' and there was nothing to hold them back.

"For instance, for a recent exhibit at the Image Gallery (that word again) in New York, the photographer had cut up many color photographs into small pieces, then pasted these bits and pieces together again in new and random arrangements. This is how he created his 'images,' and he assured me that the basic ingredients were actual color photographs. I was not impressed nor did I think it was an example of photography. It is not even necessary to start with your own original photographs.

"I don't think the words 'photograph' and 'image' are interchangeable. Image needs a modifier; photograph doesn't. Is it an electronic image, a mental image, a sculptured image, a photographic image? To call a photograph by Andre Kertesz, Paul Strand or Edward Weston an 'image' is like describing a magnificent mountain by saying it's cute. These men used their great talents to explore and expand the vision of photography. They created photographs. They did not make something as vague or various as 'images.'"

Well, there you have Casey Allen's dissertation on "images," a topic that could start a nice little controversy at any photo gab session when there isn't anything else vital on the agenda.

As a camera columnist for almost 30 years, I find the word "image" of great use merely because it would be monotonous and repetitious to use the word "photograph" or "picture" every time it must be mentioned.

However, one of my pet peeves is the euphoric flow of vague, artsy, bombastic, meaningless words which some experts use to describe photography. Casey Allen had a good example of what I mean. He offers this direct quotation from a publisher's press release for photographer Gary Winogrand's book entitled, "Women are Beautiful:"

"Winogrand has made chaos clearly visible; he has disciplined it without breaking its spirit. It is not supremely difficult to make a clear picture of a truism, and it is easier still to hold a mirror up to the maelstrom and call it art. But to see and set down with acuity the flickering means that illuminate the menagerie we perform in — this is the creative miracle."

That, to me, is critic's jargon that leaves me floundering, confused and at a loss as to exactly what he's talking about. I gather he likes Winogrand's work, but I don't know why.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market showed some scattered gains today, struggling to mount a technical rally from its lowest level in almost three years.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials crept up 1.12 to 750.43 in the first half hour.

Gainers took a 6-5 lead over losers among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Brokers said a steady showing by the dollar since Tuesday in foreign exchange had helped encourage some cautious shopping for "bargains" in the market.

But they also noted continuing concern over the coal strike and predictions of rising interest rates.

One sector which didn't join in today's rise was the utility group. The Dow Jones average of 30 utilities, which hit a 1977-78 low Tuesday, was unchanged at 102.84 in the first half hour today.

There was strong evidence that a large mutual fund sold several big chunks of its utility holdings during Tuesday's session.

Kennecott Copper was today's early volume leader, up 1/4 at 21 3/4.

On Tuesday the Dow Jones industrial average lost 3.38 to 749.31, closing at a 34-month low for the fourth consecutive session.

Declines outnumbered advances by about a 9-5 margin on the NYSE.

Big Board volume reached 21.89 million shares, up from 18.50 million in the previous session.

The NYSE's composite index lost .21 to 48.69.

Annexation...

 GUC members are appointed by the city but the agency functions under its own charter.

It was proposed that the city study the possibilities of cutting costs as an alternative to the revenue dilemma.

Burroughs Wellcome plant manager G. Henry Leslie told the gathering that "one of the compelling reasons" for leaving New York and relocating in North Carolina was the "burden of taxation."

Leslie reported that when relocation arrangements were made here, there was no discussion of the possibility of annexation. He said that the matter was first presented to him some two weeks ago when Caldwell visited his office.

According to Leslie, the city manager informed him that the annexation matter was "practically irreversible" and that the plant would be billed in September at the tax rate of 64 cents per $100 valuation.

Leslie said that Caldwell indicated the tax increase would amount to $307,000 for BW but the company comptroller has studied the figures and projects an increase of $327,000.

The plant manager pointed out that the tax increase was not budgeted by the company and he discounted the projected benefits to Burroughs Wellcome because it also had capital expenses to consider.

According to Leslie, the Burroughs Wellcome board has taken the position that "we are unalterably opposed to the annexation and will oppose it in all mind and effort."

Leslie appealed to the "good sense of judgment to put the proposed annexation to bed."

Caldwell, asked if Stator House Fire Department had been considered in the annexation discussions, pointed out that the city would have three alternatives. He said the city could buy out the station, contract with the station for first alarm response, or do nothing. The city manager noted that the contract proposal would be the most feasible.

Robert Griffin, plant manager at Procter & Gamble here, asked how the city measured the economic impact on future industrial growth in view of the annexation. He said that "obviously, we (industry) weren't asked."

Council member Mildred McGrath contended that industry growth has slowed down here and she predicted it will slow down more if streets are not added and other improvements are not made in the city.

Gene Brown of Hendrix & Dail Inc. reported that his firm would not have built in the industrial area recently if the site had been in the city. He said there was no talk of annexation when the move was made to the new site.

Griffin said that the tax situation was one of the key factors considered when Procter & Gamble decided to build here. He noted that when the company purchased the 220-acre site here, it was done with the idea of utilizing the property for expansion.

Pointing out the increased tax possibilities as a result of the annexation, Griffin said that the costs might make it economical for a product to be shipped from another plant, rather than Greenville.

"What is the cost to put a case of our product in a store?" he said. Griffin said that if another plant can place the product cheaper, then it gets the business.

According to the plant manager, the question is whether annexation is in the best interest. He added that it hurt to be told that "we were on a free ride."

He said, "Our position is one of trying to understand what is best."

Richard Licko, Eaton Corp. plant manager, also mentioned that the tax picture was carefully studied when the company chose Greenville as a site. He said that annexation was not discussed initially.

According to Licko, Eaton purchased the site with plans for expansion here into the 1980's. He said the city should have

SNOW FALL — Motorists on their way to work this morning found Pitt County roads very icy in most places, making driving hazardous. Above, a car moves along rural paved road 1708 near Greenville.

Snowfall Was Inconvenience...

Swanson said that "if you have to go out, reduce your speed and be careful." He added that if a car is stuck on a hill, the best thing to do is to put it in high gear and start out "as gently as possible."

The backbone element of keeping city streets clean for traffic to move, the Public Works, was on the job at 5:30 a.m., Mayo Allen, Director of Public Works stated.

Allen said, "The police department people keep a tab on weather conditions and let us know when conditions are such that we need to get ready to go into action."

One motor grader was put to work early. This is the big machine that scrapes snow and ice off streets. "Hooker Road was our first target," Allen commented, "as it's the one main artery in town without curb and gutter so that motorists cannot easily determine where the road stops and the shoulders begin."

Allen also sent out a sand truck with crew "to sand down bridges and other places most susceptible to the formation of ice. Another crew was sent out to start shoveling ice from sidewalks and in the downtown area, anywhere there's likely to be heavy pedestrian traffic."

Most of the workmen, Allen said, were on the job working by 6:30 a.m. "But the sanitation people were sent out an hour later than their normal beginning time. We did this so there'd be less chance of accidents. They'll be working an hour later than usual." Wednesdays, Allen noted, is the normal day for pickup of trash from along sidewalks and yards.

Allen remarked that because of the lightness of the snow, the one scraper was felt to be sufficient to keep the streets cleared. "We have a second in reserve, ready to be used if needed. But until it's needed, there's no point in using taxpayer's money to operate it."

One of the good things about snowy weather, Allen remarked "is that the kids really enjoy it. It gives them a rare chance to get in some winter sledding. There's certain streets where hills and slopes are located that we barricade off for play areas. However, this morning there was not enough snow to make barricading the streets worthwhile."

This morning's snow, Allen said "is the type that provides good training for us. We're ready for the really big one when it comes, if it does."

One thing Allen wants people to do. "We need to know if potholes develop in any of the streets. Even some of the newest street in good condition can suddenly develop potholes during snow and ice conditions. So if anyone sees any, the sooner they report them to us, the more help it is in getting them repaired."

County and city schools were all closed today due to Tuesday night's snowfall, with a decision to be made at a later time today in the case of county schools and early tomorrow morning for city schools whether schools will be re-opened for Thursday.

Pitt County Schools Superintendent Ott Alford said "a check will be made at about four o'clock this afternoon of all county roads by transportation people. They are due to have reports in to be by five o'clock, at which time I will make a decision. That applies if the weather clears and if the forecast does not call for more of the same weather."

Alford said whatever decision would be made would be a blanket one for all the county schools. "We won't have a situation with some schools open, some closed," he said.

Charles Ross, Director of Elementary Education for the Greenville City Schools, was a spokesman for Superintendent Glenn Cox, who was meeting with other staff members this morning.

"Mr. Cox will wait and see what the weather is like, and will make an announcement early in the morning, depending on the situation," Ross said.

At both school offices, personnel are working normal hours.

In both school systems, maintenance and janitorial crews are on the job, checking buildings for possible freezing or other weather related damages that can occur. They are also at work cleaning and scraping sidewalks and drives so that conditions will be safe when students return.

Obituary Column

Davis

Mr. Richard Davis died last night. He was the father of Mrs. Evonne Barrett of Farmville. Funeral arrangements are incomplete at Joyner's Mortuary, Farmville.

Dunn

FOUNTAIN — Mr. Chester Leroy Dunn, 58, of Fountain died Tuesday in Pitt Memorial Hospital.

Funeral services will be conducted Thursday at 2 p.m. from the Church Street Chapel of the Farmville Funeral Home. Burial will follow in the Hollywood Cemetery in Farmville.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Rubelle Turner Dunn of the home; his mother, Mrs. Suddie Dunn of Greenville; four daughters, Mrs. Doris Bambernick of Sanford, Mrs. Eddie Young of Greenville, Mrs. Joyce Williams of Ayden, and Miss Wendy Dunn of the home; recognized two years ago that it would be in the present situation.

Eddie Smith, president of Grady-White Boats, explained that his firm formerly operated in the city and the decision to build a new plant outside the city was weighed with taxes as a "primary consideration."

Smith said that the industrial community appreciates the problems that the city government faces but it asks that the problems of industry be examined in considering the annexation.

He suggested that the city "look at the impact of this action on the city and the residents of Greenville."

Councilman Charles Vincent told the group that his opinion was that "we have not made up our minds yet." He said that the meeting provided the type of dialogue needed on the issue.

PTI Idle, But ECU Goes On

Pitt Technical Institute did not hold classes today and has postponed night courses, also. According to Dean of Instruction Dr. Edward Bright, classes will be held tomorrow "if it doesn't snow, or rain, or freeze again." An announcement will be made if classes are cancelled for tomorrow.

East Carolina University held classes as usual, although attendance was expected to be lower than normal. Night classes will be held, also. Professors may excuse persons who are not physically able to get to campus, such as persons living out of town.

Both Greenville Utilities and Carolina Telephone reported that no major outages had been reported this morning. Malcolm Green of Greenville Utilities Commission said that "ice-type conditions are the only thing that give us trouble." And he reminded local residents to "turn down those thermostats to conserve energy."

Don Collier of Carolina Telephone added that snow does not affect their operations either. "Troubles are normal today for this time of year. This kind of snow does not really bother us. It's when it gets icy and tree limbs start to fall that it gives us trouble." He added that today has "been basically normal."

A Salvation Army spokesman stated that bad weather has hindered their business. Today is the organization's regular "Clothing Day" and approximately 25 persons usually attend Today only two persons were able to make it. As far as people requesting food and clothing, the spokesman said, "We really don't anticipate more than our usual." The weather has slowed us down somewhat.

Today's 8 a.m. temperature was 26 degrees and cloudy, according to Greenville Utilities. Yesterday's high and low temperature were 52 and 23 degrees, respectively.

The Tar River level at 8 a.m. stood at 6.2 feet on the National Weather Gauge. Melted precipitation this morning was .22 inches.

$13,501 To Pitt Hospital

Pitt County Hospital received $13,501 in the form of a grant from Duke Endowment. The checks were mailed this week to 230 hospitals and children's homes in North Carolina and South Carolina.

According to Billy G. McCall, executive director of the hospital and child care sections of the Duke Endowment, grants to hospital totaled $1,293,949 and represent a payment of $1,024,113 to assist in operating expenses and $269,836 to reimburse those institutions participating in information services provided by Hospital Administrative Services of Chicago and Professional Activity Study of Ann Arbor, Michigan. These two organizations prepare comparative statistics on various aspects of hospital operations which are useful both in managing hospitals and in measuring the quality of care being delivered.

County School Bus Left Road And Hit Tree

A Pitt County school bus ran off an unpaved rural road near Shelmerdine yesterday afternoon and collided with a tree, resulting in minor injuries to ten of the 26 students aboard.

Investigating Highway Patrolman Fred Davis identified the driver of the bus as Tammy Irene Smith of Route 2, Greenville.

Trooper Davis, who said the mishap occurred about 12 miles South of Greenville on rural road 1792, reported the bus failed to make a sharp left turn in the roadway when it went out of control in loose dirt along the road's edge. The bus, he said, ran off the left side of the road and struck a tree.

Damage to the bus in the 3:25 p.m. mishap was estimated at $200.

No charges were made following investigation of the mishap.

More Snow For Martin County

WILLIAMSTON — The Tuesday night snowfall in Martin County reportedly varies erratically in various parts of the county, with Williamston and Bear Grass reporting a five to five and one-half inch cover, and other areas not half that much.

Streets in Williamston were passable with some ice on certain streets and major roads in the county were passable at 11 a.m.

Power was still out in areas around Bear Grass at mid-morning.

Schools in the county were all closed, and a decision was to be made later in the day or early Thursday relative to re-opening on Thursdays.

Conley Girls, Lenior Boys Win

By JIM KYLE
Reflector Sports Writer
LITTLEFIELD—The champions from the Eastern Carolina Conference delivered thrashings to the fourth-place representatives of the Northeastern Conference last night in the District 3-A tournament being held at Ayden-Grifton High School. D. H. Conley's girls rolled over Edenton 55-29, while North Lenoir's boys trounced Williamston 87-64.

"It's a beautiful birthday present," said D. H. Conley coach Norma Respass after her team presented her with the lopsided victory. The coach got a chance to clear her bench and the team rebounded well from last Friday's loss to C. B. Aycock in the final game of the ECC tournament.

The Valkyries were never threatened in the game as they jumped out to a 13-4 first-quarter lead and stretched it to 28-13 at the half.

Conley continued to build on its lead in the third quarter, getting balanced scoring from Miriam Paramore, Annie Hardy and Glenda Green. The Valkyries controlled the boards and their lead grew to 21 points and then 23 at the end of the quarter, 43-20. During the fourth quarter, Respass employed the platoon system, shuffling in five substitutes, replacing them with five regulars for a while, and then putting the subs back in to do the cleanup work.

"I just wanted to give my girls some recognition," the coach said of putting the starters back in near the end of the game.

Green led the Valkyrie scoring with 14, while Paramore and Hardy finished with 10 each. Edenton was paced by Cheryl Redman with 11.

"I'm proud of everybody," Respass said. She said the game was a team effort.

Respass commented also said that she was encouraged about Conley's chances in the tournament. After viewing some of the other teams in the event, Respass said, "Williamston is the strongest team from the Northeastern Conference that I've seen, but I think the Eastern Carolina Conference has three very fine teams. I'm encouraged for the rest of the tournament."

The second game of the evening saw North Lenoir hold off several first-half Williamston charges and then put the Tigers away in the third quarter.

Williamston was bothered by turnovers, partly the result of the Hawks' full-court pressure defense. Each time the Tigers would get close, they would suffer two or three turnovers and North Lenoir's lead would open again.

"I thought we got a good effort," Williamston coach John Hardison said. "They were just bigger and stronger than us." Hardison said the Tigers were hurt by some early foul trouble that prevented free substitution during the game. "Our kids just had to play tired because we didn't have anyone to replace them with."

In addition, Hardison said, "Their pressure forced some turnovers, and I thought that's what really kept them in front."

A nine-point run late in the first quarter allowed the Hawks to break in front of the Tigers after the two teams had battled nearly evenly for much of the opening frame.

North Lenoir held a 15-12 lead when Johnnie Wiggins and Mitchell Wiggins each hit from close range to begin the streak. At the 1:07 mark, Ronnie McPhail sank a free throw to make it 24-12.

The Tigers pulled to within eight, 28-20, after two baskets by Horace Wynne early in the second quarter, but experienced five turnovers before scoring again and trailed by 12 at the half, 42-30.

Two layups by Walter Harris brought Williamston to within 11 after North Lenoir had gone up by as much as 18 in the third quarter. But that was as close as the Tigers could come as the Hawks scored eight straight and led by 20 at the end of the quarter, 63-43.

The final period saw North Lenoir go up by as many as 27 points before a late charge by the Tigers against the Hawk bench.

Mitchell Wiggins led all scorers with 25 points, while Johnnie Wiggins and Amos Pearce had 18 each. Williamston's scoring was paced by Danny Mobley with 13, Harris and Anthony Griffin with 12, and Wynne with 10.

Hardison had praise for the North Lenoir team after the contest, saying, "They just overpowered us."

More first-round games will be played tomorrow night, postponed from tonight due to the snowfall. In tomorrow night's games, Washington's girls will play Greene Central, while Ayden-Grifton's boys will face Tarboro.

The tournament schedule will be moved back one night until Saturday. The event will be on a regular schedule next Monday and Tuesday, with the finals on Tuesday night.

East Carolina Seeks Revenge Over Spiders

East Carolina University's Pirates open their final road trip tonight, facing the University of Richmond in the Spiders' Robbins Center.

The Pirates will be trying to gain revenge for an 82-80 defeat hung on the Bucs earlier this season in Minges Coliseum.

The Pirates closed out their home season Monday night in an 88-83 loss to Georgia Southern. East Carolina's home record was only 5-6 on the year, one of their dimmer home court records in recent years.

On the road, East Carolina currently is 4-6, but has not allowed any one team to beat them twice. Oddly enough, their revenge has been taken on the road in every instance.

Oliver Mack will lead the Pirate attack. He carries a 27.3 average into the game, and now lacks just 62 points to set a new single season scoring record for the school.

Mike Perry paces the Richmond attack.

Richmond will be playing its first game since the announcement that Coach Carl Sloan's contract will not be renewed after it expires this year.

"That could make a difference in the game," ECU Coach Larry Gillman said. "They could be all fired up to give him a good going away gift at our expense. It's hard to say what their attitude will be."

The Pirates travel to Macon, Ga., on Saturday to face Mercer and close out the season next Wednesday at Virginia Tech.

Clemson Worries Duke's Foster

By The Associated Press
 Duke will be trying tonight to stay in the race for the Atlantic Coast Conference regular season title, but Clemson won't have much to lose and Blue Devil coach Bill Foster is worried.

"We beat Clemson before pretty handily and there's a natural tendency for the fans to say the Tigers won't be that tough for us," Foster said. "But Clemson will be ready to knock us off and we will have to be ready too."

"We're at that point in the season when you have to grind it out every game," he added. "Nobody lays down for you in this league, regardless of their record."

The Tigers have had a disappointing ACC season thus far, with a 3-8 conference record. But they're 14-10 overall, and they beat Virginia in Charlottesville before losing to North Carolina State, so who knows?

Wake Forest, meanwhile, will be visiting Maryland tonight. The Terps, at 2-8, would like to climb out of the ACC cellar, and Wake, now 5-5, may be their best chance, since the Deacons haven't won a road game yet this season.

Virginia will be hosting Tulane tonight in a non-conference meeting.

Last night's action pitted North Carolina State, concerned mainly about a share of the ACC title, against Notre Dame, hungry for ACC blood and anxious to secure a spot in the NCAA post-season playoffs.

The Irish had their way with the Wolfpack, crushing them 70-59 with the help of a confusing defense that switched from zone to man-to-man. The Pack shot poorly, but still managed to outscore Notre Dame from the floor by six points. The problem was fouls. State committed 30 personal fouls to 13 for the Irish, who converted 24 of those opportunities into enough points to give them the game.

Texas Earns Bye For Southwest Tournament

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

Abe Lemons, Texas' quick-witted basketball coach, usually leaves 'em laughing, but his latest gag came true and the Arkansas Razorbacks didn't find it particularly amusing.

On his Sunday night TV show, the camera zoomed in on a prone Lemons, clad in a dark suit with his hands folded on his chest around a carnation. The "corpse" rose slowly and shouted, "We're not dead yet!"

And Tuesday night, Lemons' 14th-ranked Longhorns found themselves very much alive with an 82-74 triumph over Southern Methodist that bumped fourth-ranked Arkansas out of an automatic bye into the championship game of the post-season Southwest Conference tournament.

It hasn't been the best of times for Arkansas. The Razorbacks lost their No. 1 national ranking when Houston upset them Saturday and Tuesday night's 58-49 victory over Texas Tech was only good enough to earn them a share of the SWC title with Texas.

Both teams finished with 14-2 conference records and they split their two regular-season meetings. But Texas took two games from third-place Houston and earned the coveted bye that Arkansas felt it would get.

Texas has an 11-day layoff before the SWC title game while Arkansas must win three times to get there.

In other games involving the Associated Press Top Twenty, ninth-ranked Notre Dame downed North Carolina State 70-59 behind Dave Batton's 22 points and 12 rebounds; Sly Williams scored 17 points and grabbed 12 rebounds as Rhode Island upset No. 11 Providence 73-64, and Harry Davis had 22 points and David Thompson 20 to lead No. 12 Florida State over Georgia Tech 78-72.

SMU battled Texas to a 37-37 halftime tie but Ron Baxter, who scored 20 of his 30 points in the second half, ignited a Longhorn surge with a pair of three-point plays. Texas built a 17-point lead, enough to withstand a 32-point performance by SMU's Jeff Swanson.

Arkansas' Marvin Delph scored 16 points, Sidney Moncrief 12 and Ron Brewer 10, offsetting 23 by Texas Tech's Mike Russell. Four free throws and a jump shot by Russell put Tech on top 11-6 in the first half but Arkansas reeled off 10 straight points to take command.

Notre Dame, 18-5, confused N.C. State by switching between a man-to-man and a zone defense. The losers shot only 31 percent in the first half, fell behind 34-27 and never caught up.

Rhode Island's Williams had help against Providence from John Nelson with 15 points and Jiggy Williamson with 13. The losers made 22 of 26 free throws but shot only 33 percent from the floor.

Florida State's victory over Georgia Tech enabled the Seminoles, 20-4 overall, to nail down the Metro 7 crown. The losers got 27 points from Tico Brown and 21 from Sammy Drummer but it wasn't enough to overcome Florida State's balanced attack.

Bear Grass Girls Win

CAPE HATTERAS — Bear Grass shook off a cold first period and went on to take a 53-41 victory over hosting Cape Hatteras in the first round of the girls' District I, 1-A Tournament last night.

The Bears now will meet the winner of the Belhaven-Chocowinity game Friday at 7 p.m. at Williamston.

Bear Grass fell behind early, trailing by 6-3 at the end of the first period. But the Lady Bears caught fire in the second quarter, charging into a 21-17 lead by the end of the half.

In the third period, Cape Hatteras managed to knock a point off that lead, trailing 33-30. But in the final quarter, the Bears outthit them, 20-11, to claim the victory and move on in the tournament.

The eventual winner will move into the state 1-A girls' tournament.

Jandra Crawford led Bear Grass with 20 points, while Debra Jo Peaks had 12 and Patricia Taylor had 11. Jackie Gray had 12 and Dara Cox had 10 for Cape Hatteras.

Bear Grass—Taylor 11, Peaks 12, Crawford 20, Holliday, Hoell 2, Rogers 6, Andrews, Williams 2, Coltrain, Whitehurst.

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Bill Cobey, athletic director at the University of North Carolina, told the Greenville Sports Club yesterday that decisions are not always final, thus leaving the door open for a possible resumption of the UNC-East Carolina football series.

That series is due to expire after the 1981 game, and Cobey said that tentative agreements have filled the schedule through 1988. "But people feel that a decision, once made, is forever. They are reevaluated in the light of existing situations," he said.

Cobey spoke on the athletic program at UNC and its relationships with other schools, mostly within the Atlantic Coast Conference.

The UNC athletic head was introduced by ECU head football coach Pat Dye, who told the Sports Club to "let it lie," as far as the cutting off of the schedule between the two schools. "We'll just have to try and come up to the standards they want, so that they will want to continue playing us."

Cobey admitted that the last thing he expected was to have the head football coach at East Carolina running interference for him, and praised the leadership of the ECU athletic program.

"Selecting a new football coach at North Carolina was a trying experience for us. One of the good things about it was getting a chance to know Pat Dye. I'm impressed that East Carolina has one heck of a football coach who is also a fine person."

Among things pointed out about the UNC program are:

—The school has 25 varsity sports, 13 for men and 12 for women, with approximately 500 to 600 athletes involved. Women's grants have grown from 16 last year to 44 this year, to about 75 next year.

—UNC's goal is to win every championship in the ACC. "I know we will fall short of this goal, but if we don't strive for it, we won't win any championships." These titles will include the growing ACC women's competition.

—It takes a lot of money, $31.2

million this year, all raised without state funds. The money comes from ticket sales, concessions, radio and television rights, student fees ($700,000 this year, $35 from each student per year), and from the Educational Foundation. A half-million dollars in grants are awarded annually.

—Emphasis is put on football and men's basketball, since they are the money-makers. For this reason, the university has hired a promotions director to help sell out football. "I would advise every school to have a promotions director," he added. (East Carolina has just recently appointed Wayne Newman as its promotions director.) Cobey added that there would be no public sale of Duke, State or East Carolina tickets in football this fall. "You have to be a student, faculty or staff member or a season ticket buyer to get them," he said.

(East Carolina will receive 7,500 tickets to sell here, Cobey noted. Gus Andrews, Pirate Club head, said that a certain percentage of these would go to students, with the remainder going on sale first to Pirate Club members. Only after Pirate Club members demands have been met will there be any general sale, if tickets remain.)

—Cobey said there were public relations problems at the University, the biggest of which is Carmichael Auditorium, where UNC plays its basketball games. With a student body of 19,500, only 3,600 get into each game. UNC is working to build a 16,000 seat facility, "hopefully in five or six years." It is expected to cost $16 to $20 million, all of which must be raised without state funds.

—Cobey praised the ACC as being one of the best leagues in the country in all sports. He added that he would like to see Georgia Tech join the league. "They have a great football tradition; they would bring in one of the top markets in the country; and there membership would make Clemson, Virginia and Maryland feel more comfortable in the ACC."

—He noted that the decision to bring in outside referees for the ACC tournament was not an overnight decision. "We've gotten a lot of pressure from the fans and from the media. We'll take a look at it and see what happens. I feel that when they do bring in outside officials, they'll find that ours are as good or better, so it may be a one-year proposition. I just hope our officials will see that this could be a blessing in disguise."

—Cobey said that the reason for dropping East Carolina was not a fear of ECU, but to avoid pressure from other in-state schools. "We have great pressure on us to win the three in-state games we play in the ACC. A fourth or fifth game would add that much more pressure. Too, we will probably be playing six ACC games in the future (with the addition of a school like Georgia Tech), and that would not leave a great deal of games for us to schedule. We want to bring in some top outside people and also play a good road schedule, like Oklahoma, or Ohio State."

"Playing East Carolina helped both schools at the time, and East Carolina has given us all the difficulty we want to have from a football team," he added.

Cobey noted that UNC is signing agreements to negotiate contracts, but not signing the actual contracts until three years prior to a game.

The speaker for March 7 will be Loren Smith of the University of Georgia.

Wrestlers Are Ranked

East Carolina's D. T. Joyner and Butch Revils have been selected to the national Mat News all-Southern team.

Mat News, a major eastern wrestling publication, has ranked Joyner second in the heavyweight division. Joyner boasts a 15-1 overall record, and is undefeated in dual matches with a 10-0 record.

Revils, a freshman from Norview, Va., is ranked third in the 177-pound weight class. Revils owns a 13-5 record and has won two tournament championships this season. He was named the outstanding wrestler in the Monarch Open earlier in the season when he won the 177 title. He was also the outstanding freshman wrestler in the Wilkes Open this season.

Football Banquet

East Carolina University's annual football banquet will be held Thursday night at the Greenville Country Club.

The affair will begin at 7 p.m. Following the dinner, awards will be presented to the outstanding members of this year's football team, with brief remarks by Coach Pat Dye, chancellor Dr. Leo Jenkins, athletic director Bill Cain, and trustee chairman Troy Pate Jr. A 45-minute highlight film of the 1977 season will also be shown.

Tickets for the general public are on sale for $15 and may be purchased at the Minges Coliseum Athletic Ticket Office, the football office in Scales Fieldhouse and at H.L. Hodges Co.

Gamecocks To NIT?

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — Despite 11 losses, the University of South Carolina basketball team is in the running for a bid to the National Invitational Tournament, a Columbia newspaper says.

Peter Carlesimo, president of the Metropolitan Intercollegiate Basketball Association, is quoted in Tuesday's editions of The Columbia Record as saying, "We have a huge pot of teams to pick from, but South Carolina is definitely in the pot."

The association is the governing body of the NIT.

"Our rule of thumb has been that a team with double-digit losses is eliminated from getting a bid," said Carlesimo. "But we set a precedent a few years ago by letting Notre Dame in with 11 losses because they had a great second half, and South Carolina is in the same position."

South Carolina, 14-11 with two games remaining, upset 7th-ranked Notre Dame last Saturday, 65-60. And the Gamecocks two weeks earlier narrowly missed upsetting then 3rd-ranked Marquette — now the nation's No. 1 team — before losing in double overtime.

South Carolina must win its remaining games against William & Mary and Richmond to remain in contention for a bid to the NIT, one of the nation's most prestigious tournaments.

HOW SWEET IT WAS

LOS ANGELES (AP) — No offensive lineman ever forgets scoring a touchdown, not even a star in the pro game.

Tom Mack, the crack Los Angeles Ram guard, still savors the eight points he put on the scoreboard while playing for Cleveland Heights High in a game against Euclid. Mack was an end in those days.

"Somebody blocked a punt," Tom recalled, "and I fell on it for a touchdown. That was six points and then I added two more by catching a pass on the conversion. We won that game, 8-0."

EARL KNOCKS REFS

NEW YORK (AP) — Earl (The Pearl) Monroe, captain and star guard of the NBA, thinks the league should use more former players as referees. Monroe is displeased with the quality of those officiating.

Only one former player, Bernie Fryer, is working as an NBA referee. Fryer, who is in his first season, once played for the Portland Trail Blazers.

Bullets In Victory

COLUMBIA — Jamesville High School's girls kept their title hopes alive with a 54-49 victory over Columbia High School last night in the first round of the District 1, Class A basketball tournament.

Jamesville is now scheduled to play the winner of the Pantego-Chowan game, scheduled for tonight. Jamesville will meet that winner on Saturday at 7 p.m. at Williamston High School.

Columbia and Jamesville battled through a close first period, with Columbia taking an 11-10 lead at the horn.

Columbia continued to hold sway in the second quarter, pulling out to a 30-24 halftime lead. In the third period, however, Jamesville reversed the trend, and outthit their hosts, 16-9. That pushed the Lady Bullets into a 40-39 lead as the final period opened. Jamesville then outthit Columbia, 14-10, down the stretch to get the win.

Edith James led Jamesville with 14 points, while Joyce Manning had 13 and Lorie Modlin added 11. Alease Moore led Columbia with 18, while Aldora Basnight had 11 and Gloria Manns had 10.

The district tourney winner advances to the state tournament.

Umpire Clinic

The East Carolina Baseball Umpire's Association will sponsor an umpire's clinic Saturday at Ayden-Gritton High School.

The clinic is free and open to the public. Umpires from all levels are urged to attend.

Instructors include Malcolm Sykes, the association's secretary, and a former minor league umpire; Joe West, a member of the 1978 National League Umpiring staff; and Drew Coble a member of the AAA American Association staff for 1978.

Registration will begin at 10 a.m., with rules, including changes and interpretations, and a question and answer session slated for 10 a.m. also.

A luncheon will be available at the school, followed at 1 p.m. with field work.

Congress Check On NCAA Police Arm

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress, after more than five months of investigation, will begin public hearings Monday into the powerful police arm of the National Collegiate Athletic Association, the major governing body of intercollegiate athletics in the United States. The House subcommittee on oversight and investigations will hold the first of what should be eight days of hearings into the policies of the NCAA, particularly the enforcement of its rules and regulations.

The subcommittee staff has visited seven of the some 100 colleges and universities involved in official inquiries by the NCAA since January 1970, the period covered by the Congressional investigations, as well as having studied thousands of documents.

First-day witnesses include J. Brent Clark, an attorney who resigned from the NCAA enforcement unit last Dec. 30, and representatives of Mississippi State. On Tuesday Jack Fusak, a past NCAA president, and officials of Michigan State are scheduled to testify.

Mississippi State was suspended two years for alleged recruiting violations. The suspension expired last season. Michigan State was suspended three years for alleged football recruiting violations. The suspension ends after the 1978 season.

Clark, an Oklahoma lawyer who now works for the committee staff, is expected to testify that the NCAA has a policy of "selective punishment" under which certain major colleges are never investigated or penalized by the association when they are suspected of having violated NCAA rules.

Clark also plans to testify, according to the New York Times, that the NCAA selects for penalties those major colleges that do not fully cooperate with the NCAA.

In its March edition, Sport Magazine says congressional investigators are encountering witnesses "terrified" of testifying against the NCAA.

The subcommittee, headed by Rep. John E. Moss, D-Calif., is studying whether the investigative methods of the NCAA provide for due process, whether the association is violating antitrust laws and whether it levies fair penalties against member colleges, their coaches and athletes.

The investigation of the NCAA enforcement program was instigated by Rep. James D. Santini, D-Nev., a member of the subcommittee. Santini got signatures of 68 House members and petitioned Moss after penalties were imposed on the University of Nevada-Las Vegas last summer.

Jerry Tarkanian was dismissed by Nevada-Las Vegas on the strong recommendation of the NCAA, which had found his basketball program guilty of many recruitment violations.

A Nevada judge, in granting Tarkanian a permanent injunction against the dismissal, said the association's evidence against the coach was "total 100 percent hearsay, without a scrap of documentation in substantiation." And he added, "The evidence shows that every fundamental principle pertaining to the plaintiff's due-process rights was violated" by the association.

The association contends its 12-member investigations staff and five-member Committee on Infractions conduct inquiries and hand down punishments that are essentially administrative and not judicial. Thus, it says, their hearings are less formal than regular court proceedings and do not have to strictly follow the rules of evidence.

At its annual meeting last month in Atlanta, the members of the 844-member organization approved a codification of its policies and procedures. But committee members said the Congressional inquiry and pending court cases had nothing to do with the action, which they said had been in the making for a year.

Critics of the NCAA claim it is a cumbersome organization, uneven in the enforcement of its rules and beholden to a small group of influential schools with "major programs" — in short, unaccountable and unresponsive to most institutions it is purported to represent for the general good of the college sport.

Defenders contend the NCAA runs as smoothly, efficiently and fairly as can be expected, given certain realities. It is a voluntary membership association, called upon both to police and serve institutions of varying size and funded primarily from gate and television revenues generated by the schools with "big-time" football and basketball programs.

The NCAA grew out of a meeting in 1905 of a small group of colleges which wanted to save football from extinction. The game was then particularly vicious, and President Theodore Roosevelt had threatened to have it outlawed unless there were reforms. That little group saved football, but its aims soon expanded, as it proceeded to devise rules for the conduct of virtually all intercollegiate sports.

Lakers Score Fifth Straight Road Victory As Bulls Kayoed

By ALEX SACHARE
AP Sports Writer
Watch out for the Los Angeles Lakers.

Kareem Abdul-Jabbar & Co. posted their fifth straight road victory and their 14th triumph in the last 17 games, beating the Chicago Bulls 106-104 Tuesday night as Lou Hudson hit a 30-foot jumper with nine seconds to play for the winning margin.

"I think the guys have made up their minds that they want to win," said Lakers Coach Jerry West, whose club is now 31-27 and climbing after a disastrous start marred by Abdul-Jabbar's broken hand and the suspension of Kermit Washington for punching Rudy Tomjanovich.

The mid-season trades that brought Adrian Dantley and Charlie Scott to the Lakers have given the club added firepower.

Hudson had the hot hand against the Bulls, hitting for 29 points, while Dantley scored 24 and Abdul-Jabbar 19.

Chicago trailed by 13 in the third period but took a 104-103 lead on two free throws by ex-Laker Cazzie Russell with 39 seconds left. Don Ford got the rebound of a missed shot by Abdul-Jabbar and fed Hudson for his winning basket.

In other NBA games, the Portland Trail Blazers edged the San Antonio Spurs 118-114 in overtime, the New York Knicks nipped the Seattle SuperSonics 122-120, the Houston Rockets beat the Boston Celtics 111-96, the Phoenix Suns trimmed the Buffalo Braves 114-111 and the Philadelphia 76ers defeated the Cleveland Cavaliers 127-114.

Blazers 118, Spurs 114
San Antonio lost a golden opportunity to knock off the defending champions when George Gervin missed an 18-footer with five seconds left in regulation play. Portland's Bill Walton took command in overtime, scoring six of his game-high 34 points in the extra session.

Knicks 122, Sonics 120
New York trailed by 19 early in the fourth period before storming back to win with 42 points in the final 12 minutes. Bob McAdoo scored 37 points and Butch Beard 20 for New York and teamed with rookies Ray Williams, Glen Gondezick and Toby Knight to turn the game back around.

Rockets 111, Celtics 96

Will Legal Reform Melt Liability Case Snowball?

By LeROY POPE
UPI Business Writer
NEW YORK (UPI) — A snowballing rise in big liability judgments against municipalities as well as against private business and professional people has stirred the insurance industry into demanding drastic reform in American tort legal procedure.

There also have been demands for severe limitations on the right of attorneys to take tort cases on a contingency fee basis. The United States is the only major country where one can file a lawsuit without putting up any money for legal fees and court costs. The lawyer must win to collect his fee.

Britain, from whence the American legal system is derived, still does not permit lawyers to take cases on a contingency basis. The demands in the United States for sharp limitations on contingency began a few years ago with the big increases in medical malpractice suits.

A few insurance people also have begun to attack the judiciary for being "socialist minded" and "irresponsibly spending other people's money" while abandoning traditional principles of law and equity.

The answer of the Association of American Trial Lawyers to all this is that the increases in malpractice suits, product liability suits and other tort liability action have been grossly exaggerated by the insurance industry for propaganda purposes, also that the contingency fee is the poor man's key to the courthouse and to limit it would aggravate rather than remedy the evils complained of.

On Feb. 1, the Trial Lawyers Association sponsored a suit filed by four accident victims in federal court at Bridgeport, Conn., against four of the nation's biggest insurance companies and a national advertising agency. The suit said the defendants were engaged in an advertising campaign to deprive accident victims of their rights and that the ads sought illegally to tamper with juries and influence state legislatures on the question of tort suits.

In levelling its charge of deceitful propaganda against the insurance industry, the trial lawyers association makes much of the fact that insurance people spoke of "one million product liability suits" filed in 1976 whereas an intergovernmental task agency headed by Undersecretary of Commerce Sidney Harman determined that not more than 70,000 product liability suits were filed in 1976.

It is not possible to estimate how much the big rise in liability judgments is costing business, the taxpayers and professional people. The astronomical rise in the cost of medical malpractice insurance was just the beginning. That was followed by the wave of claims and judgments against corporations because of occupational safety hazards and product liability hazards. Next came such a big rise in suits against officers and directors of corporations that it now often is difficult for company directors to get liability insurance. This is causing some business leaders to refuse to accept multiple directorships.

The crunch in liability judgments against cities, counties and states now has reached serious proportions.

Hundreds of cities and towns have had their liability insurance rates doubled or tripled. Many have had their insurance suddenly cancelled and have been forced to set up self-insurance funds. Home insurance companies have pulled out of the public liability field just as companies withdrew from the medical malpractice field.

The big causes of the municipal tort liability crunch are the rapid erosion by the courts of the doctrine of sovereign immunity and the growing litigiousness of the American people — the public attitude that somebody must pay for anything that happens to anyone; that there no longer is any such thing as contributory negligence.

According to the insurance people, this leads to outlandish concepts of liability. Articles in the insurance trade press give numerous examples of this. Typical is the case of a man who got a $3,600 judgment against a midwestern city because he broke his leg sliding into second base while playing baseball in a playground.

Bernard Daenzer of Cranford, N.J., president of the Howard Swann group of insurance companies, who also is a lawyer, says judges also are much to blame for tort liability getting out of hand.

"Something happens to judges once they are appointed," Daenzer told UPI, "all of a sudden they want to give away everything. They don't know where the money they hand out in awards comes from and they don't care. They depart both from the common law and from equity principles and see themselves as social reformers, which they should not do."

In an article in The Weekly Underwriter, Daenzer accused many judges of being socialist minded. He also told UPI it is a fallacy to believe judges are more reasonable or responsible than juries in handing down money judgments — "We often hear people say, 'do away with the jury awards and depend on the judges.' Any intelligent insurance claims man will say 'Hell no!' to that."

Daenzer said he doesn't feel hopeless about the problem, though. "The trouble is that in this country opinion and public attitudes move in extreme cycles from harsh laissez faire economics and social attitudes to just the opposite. I think the pendulum has swung almost as far as it will go in the direction of extravagant irresponsibility on tort judgments and is starting to swing back the other way."

It is conceded generally that there is little possibility of restoring the doctrine of sovereign immunity to protect the taxpayers from the avalanche of liability claims although at least seven states are trying to do so. Just one such judgment can put a huge burden for years to come on the taxpayers of a smallish town.

Numerous schemes have been advanced for dealing with the problem. Florida now has put a $100,000 ceiling on claim payments, for example. Some of the plans propose setting up state insurance pools to meet the claims and compelling the insurance companies operating in the state to contribute. The insurance companies are resisting this vigorously.

The idea of drastically curbing the right to file tort claims on the contingency fee basis has been debated vigorously in the insurance trade press and legal journals both in the United States and Britain, where some lawyers are attempting to gain the right to take cases on a contingency fee basis.

The American correspondent of the British publication, the Post & Insurance Monitor said in the December issue that he had discovered a substantial movement in the United States to do away with the contingency fee system and instead to permit fee-shifting, which long has been forbidden except in certain special situations under American law. Fee shifting permits the lawyer for a successful plaintiff to recover a standard fee from the unsuccessful defendant instead of a speculative share in the judgment which can be as high as 50 percent.

The British article went on to cite the arguments in favor of the American contingency fee system, that "it is especially beneficial for the small man with limited finances, especially for the prosecution of minor claims but sometimes ones that have merit."

The article continues, "the system has special appeal in product liability cases which often involve expensive technical investigation and expensive expert witnesses... the elimination of the contingent fee, they would deprive many injured persons of their right to bring a case to court."

But it concludes that the British bar remains adamantly opposed to contingency fees for the following reasons: — In the long run they force successful plaintiffs to pay exorbitant fees to lawyers to reimburse them for their expenses in other suits they have lost.

— The contingent fee creates an automatic conflict of interest on the part of the lawyer because his livelihood and the recovery of his expenses depend on winning the case by any means. There is even a temptation, the article said, for the lawyer to accept a settlement that will guarantee payment of his fee although the settlement is not really in his client's best interest.

Insurance Monitor conceded that under the British system as it presently operates, only the rich and those who are eligible for legal aid have access to the courts in tort cases. But it quoted the president of Britain's Law Society as saying that 80 percent of the population in Britain now is eligible for legal aid.

In defending contingency fees as they now operate, the trial lawyers association noted that moves to limit the fees by legislation or court ruling have been advanced in New York, Texas, California, New Jersey, Michigan, Idaho and Indiana.

The association cited a number of reports defending the present system, one of the most elaborate by a research panel directed by Prof. William F. Willier, faculty advisor to the Boston College Law Review: This panel reached the following conclusions:

— The contingent fee system has worked efficiently for many decades without abuses or scandal.

— This system is in the true American tradition of providing competent legal representation to all, rich or poor.

— There is no evidence that excessive fees are being charged. There is abundant evidence that lawyers usually charge less than their agreed basis of contingent fees.

— Restriction or change of the existing system would deprive millions of accident victims of competent legal representation, leaving them to the mercy of arbitrary treatment by insurance carriers.

One of the more vigorous articles defending the present contingent fee system was published in the Journal of the American Bar Association by a Chicago lawyer, Philip H. Corboy.

An article in the magazine, Business Insurance, last April said contingent fee tort cases had "made Corboy quite a rich man with extensive farmland and apartment houses..." and questioned whether he was indeed entitled to contingent fees of one-third or more of judgments exceeding $1 million.

The article said Corboy was offered 750 cases last year and chose the 220 he deemed the strongest, and that fully 60 percent of these cases were referred to him by other lawyers who got anywhere from nothing to one-third of Corboy's final fee.

A New York lawyer, Carl E. Person, after obtaining a favorable ruling from a federal judge in Brooklyn, last year proposed a novel alternative to the contingent fee. He proposed selling shares in promising lawsuits to public investors. But when Person tried to put this plan in practice, New York newspapers refused to accept advertisements for the shares.

Large Pitt Investment For Soil Treatments

Pitt County tobacco producers will be investing an estimated $1,000,000 for chemical soil treatments in the next 60 days.

The secret to success when using chemical soil treatments is selecting the right chemicals and applying them correctly, according to L. Gaylon Ambrose, associate Agricultural Extension agent.

Growers have a wide choice of chemical soil treatments including multi-purpose materials, fumigant and non-fumigant (contacts), nematocides and several piggy-back combinations.

Multi-purpose treatments (Telone C-17, Terr-o-cide 15D, Terr-o-cide 30) are suggested for fields where the black shank or wilt level is high (above 6 percent loss in previous crops) and where you practice continuous culture, added Ambrose.

Nonfumigants or contacts (MOCAP, DASANIT, FURADAN, VYDATE, and NELLITE) have fair to good ratings and are suggested for fields where the population ranges from low to moderate. These nematocides may not provide adequate protection in fields where the nematode population is high, he said.

Fumigants and multi-purpose treatments are liquids that kill by gas or vapor action. Inject these materials into the soil about 14 inches below the top of a high, wide bed. When the chemical changes to a vapor, it moves upward through the soil, killing nematodes, fungi and bacteria.

Broadcast-row is the most popular method for application of nonfumigant or contact nematocides. These materials kill by contact rather than by gas action. Spread them uniformly over the soil surface and disc about three inches deep. Follow this by preparation of a high, wide bed which concentrates the chemical in the row or bed where control is most important, said Ambrose.

Livestock Meet Set Feb. 27

The Pitt County Livestock Development Association will hold its monthly meeting Monday, Feb. 27, at the Pitt County Agricultural Extension Office, 203 W. Third Street, Greenville.

The meeting will begin at 7 p.m. and activities of the Livestock Association will be discussed.

Anyone interested in the livestock industry is invited to attend. For further information, contact Mike Regans at the Pitt County Agricultural Extension Office 758-1196.

Britain's Real Experts, The People, Have A Say

By GAIL GREGG
 LONDON (UPI) — The real experts on Britain — the people who fuel its factories, produce its food, run its businesses and count among its 1.6 million unemployed — hold a wide variety of views on the state of the nation.
 Here is what some say:
Tom Osman, 48, lives with his wife and two teenaged children in a government housing project down the road from the Dagenham Ford plant where he has worked as a fork lift driver for 22 years.
 "With me two kids at work, I should be better off," he said. "But I'm not noticing. If my wife packed up work I don't know where we'd be."
 "I used to go out for a drink on Saturday and Sunday and now it's either Saturday or Sunday. In 1960 I bought a new car from Fords. Now there's no way."
 "It'll be the working people who keep Britain from going under. We're pressing for better equipment in our plant — the new technology just isn't being used. Henry Ford isn't interested in the economy of the country, he's interested in the economy of the company.

 "And the biggest strikers in this country are the investors — they strike with their money. The unions aren't strong enough. A lot of them are doing more to keep wages down than to get them up."
 "It started with entering the Common Market. Prices went up and wages stayed the same. "But some things are getting better. We've got North Sea oil, some of the richest coal fields in the world, a high degree of industrial skill. And we've got our working people."
Catherine Harries, 71, is a physician with five grown children. She bought a practice in 1945 which she now shares with her husband, also a doctor. She takes several months off each year to travel around the world as a ship's doctor.
 "I come back a little more critical of the British when I've been away," she said. "There's not quite the same friendly attitude that there used to be. When you see the rioting that goes on, you say you never thought that could happen here."

 "But the economic decline isn't so bad if you look at it sensibly. All these people who say they get bad wages have never had it so good. Now people can afford cars, better clothes and homes."
 "I think people need stirring up, someone to inspire them."
 "But I don't think the British people ever get worried. They may bellyache and carry on but they don't get worried. I think there are hidden reserves in us all."
 "I was a socialist until I realized what the socialists were doing — they seemed to be dragging everyone down instead of bringing them up. So I became a conservative."
 "I think the trade unions did a lot of good at the beginning of the century. But now so much of what they do amounts to blackmail. I do think, though, that when a real emergency comes they pull around."

Negin Bhadrassa, 22, emigrated with his family from Kenya in 1968 when his father became fearful that Kenya, like Uganda, would expel its Asian population. A British citizen, Bhadrassa finished school, completed a two-year college degree, worked in industry and finally bought a small grocery store from an uncle. He owns his own house and car, and is working on a university degree in biochemistry.
 "My ambition is to have a larger store, a supermarket," he said. "I'm studying only to fulfill my ambition. There's a lot more in my business. A laborer who digs a road here gets the same as a doctor so there's not much point."
 "If you really want to get on top you have to sacrifice a lot. I don't mind working hard — I work seven days a week, often 12 hours a day."
 "When I got out of college I went into industry for the experience. The working class people were friendly, but they used to work only about 20 hours a week for 48 hours a week wages. I felt bad about taking the money."

 "Britain can be right on top again, but the people have been spoiled by colonialism. It's like a spoiled child whose father has died — he doesn't know how to survive in the world because he's never had to."
 "Race problems happen everywhere, but the newspapers here blow things out of proportion. Do the papers know the consequences we have to suffer? Even when I travel on the Underground (subway) I can see that some people get angry just looking at my face."
 "But I wouldn't want to leave this country for a moment — I love it."
Janice Kelly, 17, left her neighborhood school in Islington, North London, this summer where she studied math, English and typing. She's looking for work as an office clerk in a business near her home. She has two younger sisters and three younger brothers, and while she's looking for a job she cooks and cleans for her family. Both her parents — who came to England from Jamaica — work for the local council.

 "My dad wants me to go to college, but I'm not sure I want to," she said. "I want a job for myself, my own flat."
 "I come to the employment center two or three times a week. The future doesn't look too good. Most of the office work you have to have experience for. And even if you have college qualifications, it can turn out that you can't find a job."
 "I didn't notice any prejudice in school. But the first thing that comes into my head when employers say 'no' is that they're prejudiced. I don't know. When I go to interviews they say they have to see other girls, so maybe they're waiting for girls of their own color."
Gary Barnett, 35, lives with his wife and four children on an 80-acre farm he rents from the Essex county council. He took over the farm 10 years ago with capital of 1,400 pounds ($2,436), planted wheat and potatoes and has since accumulated 200 sows, 1,000 fattening pigs, 3,000 laying hens and 170 barley beef.

 "We came into it thinking we'd save our money to buy our own farm, but that's impossible now. Land is so scarce and so expensive. But this is a smashing place and we like it ever so much."
 "There's a good living to be earned out of a stock farm. We made only a small profit this year because pork prices went down so much, but the year before it was jolly good."
 "When we went into the Common Market we had this galloping inflation and the consumer just couldn't pay the prices for food. There are a lot of things I like about the Common Market, though, like fair-competition rules. And in the long run it must be right because there'll be more people to sell to."

"People are generally better off today, but a lot of people want a kick up the backside. There's not enough productivity per man. But then there hasn't been enough initiative in wages, and profits haven't been good so there's been no investment."
 "But I think there's a good future for anybody who wants to go out and work. North Sea oil is going to help tremendously. And this jubilee lark showed that everybody can still pull together."
Geoffrey Shakerly, 44, and his family live in a luxurious house in Notting Hill Gate where he and his wife both run home-based businesses. Shakerly is an art and architectural photographer. Mrs. Shakerly runs a party planning business. Their three children are between 4 and 14 and the two oldest attend private boarding schools.
 "People are very ostrich-like about this economic situation."

Real Experts...

They still try to live as they always have," Shakerly said. "The British are marvelous in times of war at depriving themselves but I don't think they like cutting back much."

"What's terribly sad about this country is that there's not much fun in England anymore... I don't know whether people enjoy life as much as they should."

"People on the whole really can't starve here. Their health is looked after. And they can live if they're unemployed. But taxation is so heavy that it's destroying incentive and causing the best brains to leave the country."

"This is still pretty much a divisive society. If you are born into a working class home or a lifestyle where there is some inherited wealth, your attitudes are blinkered."

"I did two years of national service after Harrow, which was enormously valuable after having been cloistered and out of touch with people."

"I worked with people from the East End of London. I found them marvelous people. Then I went up to Oxford and I found their attitudes very narrow. Probably from that experience I became a confirmed Socialist."

Plants Droop If Fed Too Much

ARBONDALE, Ill. (UPI) — Potted house plants that droop in the winter may be getting too much rather than too little plant food, says Gerald Coorts, floriculturist at Southern Illinois University-Carbondale.

Coorts says watering procedures may be all wet, or light and temperature levels may not please the plant.

Food, water and light requirements vary with plants, he said, advising uninformed or uncertain plant owners to read directions that come with the plants or obtain plant care pamphlets.

Tobacco Has Complex Fertilization Program

Agricultural Extension Service

The purpose of a fertilization program for tobacco is to provide enough of the different kinds of nutrients, in the most effective form, at the most desirable time and place, and at the lowest cost so that the crop will produce the highest yield and quality.

It is a matter of adding enough of the different nutrients to the supply already in the soil. The use of excessive quantities of nitrogen and sometimes potassium can have an adverse effect on tobacco. Also, the use of any nutrient at rates beyond those needed by the crop is an unnecessary expense and must be considered wasteful.

The first step in developing a fertilizer program for a given field or farm should be obtaining a soil analysis. Among other things the soil test will determine the need for lime and give the soil phosphorus, and potassium levels.

Based on soil analyses of tobacco fields in Pitt County, 45 percent need lime. Tobacco may not respond to lime as quickly as crops such as corn and soybeans; but a good liming program will improve the alternate crop being grown in rotation with tobacco and will improve the general fertility and productivity of the soil.

This, in turn, will provide better conditions for tobacco production. In addition to keeping the pH within the desirable range of 5.6 to 6.0, the use of dolomitic limestone as suggested by soil tests, will give an additional supply of calcium and magnesium.

Nitrogen influences tobacco more than any other nutrient. Too little nitrogen lowers yields and often results in pale, sick tobacco which is considered poor quality. Too much nitrogen results in dark colored, thin, chaffy leaf which is undesirable, and extremely high nitrogen rates might lower the yield. Also, excessively high nitrogen rates increase sucker growth, lower quality, delay harvest and make curing more difficult.

A base nitrogen rate of 60 to 80 pounds per acre depending upon soil types and previous fertilization and cropping systems, is enough to produce good yield of good quality tobacco.

Pitt County growers are applying phosphorus to the soil at much higher rates than is removed by tobacco. The result has been a build-up of phosphorus in tobacco fields. Phosphorus is retained by the soil and is not subject to leaching. A summary of soil analyses from tobacco fields in the Coastal Plains fields of North Carolina shows that 25 percent of the tobacco fields are in the high phosphorus level and 65 percent in the very high.

However, soil analyses for Pitt County show that nine percent of the fields are in the high content level and 88 percent are in the very high content level of phosphorus. Available information suggests that when soil phosphorus content is medium or higher, applications of 35 to 40 pounds of P<sub>2</sub>O<sub>5</sub> per acre are sufficient to grow a good crop of tobacco and maintain the phosphorus level in the soil. Based on fertilizer sales for Pitt County, it is estimated that an average of 190 pounds per acre of phosphorus are being used on tobacco. This is over four times the amount needed to grow a good crop of tobacco and maintain the phosphorus level in the soil.

A summary of soil analyses for potassium from Coastal Plains tobacco fields in North Carolina in 1976-77 shows that 46 percent in medium, 37 percent in high, and two percent in the very high content levels. Soil analyses of tobacco fields in Pitt County for the same period show 27 percent in medium, 65 percent in high and seven percent in the very high content levels for potassium.

Available information suggests that if the potassium content of the soil is medium or higher about 100 pounds of potassium (K<sub>2</sub>O) per acre are sufficient to grow a good crop of tobacco, yet fertilizer sales suggest that the average grower in Pitt County is using in excess of 250 pounds of potassium per acre. Two hundred and fifty pounds of potassium per acre is more than twice the amount needed to grow a good crop of tobacco.

Every grower owes it to himself and the tobacco industry to use enough of the different fertilizer nutrients to produce a good yield of good quality leaf, but to guard against using excessive rates because of adverse effects on quality and the increased cost of production.

Deadline On Application

March 15 is the deadline in Pitt County for filing applications for Pitt County's $4,143 portion of Grassroots Arts Programs Funds. These are funds authorized by the 1977 State Legislature.

These funds are available to assist non-profit, tax-exempt organizations in carrying out community arts programs taking place during the period July 1, 1978 and June 30, 1979. Awards will be for a maximum of $1,000 and will require a matching amount in cash from the recipient organization's budget — although the match does not necessarily have to be used for the funded project.

Forms and further information are available by writing to: The North Carolina Arts Council, Grassroots Arts Program, Dept. of Cultural Resources, Raleigh, N. C. 27611.

to share with the birds. They will pay you back by helping control some insects.

Plant A Share For The Birds

ITHACA, N.Y. (UPI) — Birds are a mixed blessing to the home gardener who grows fruit. Some people cover their plantings with netting with three-fourths to one-inch mesh if birds are a serious problem. Pomologist John P. Tomkins of Cornell University has another suggestion: plant a little extra

Today's Cryptoquip clue: T equals N
The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Woody Scores In Oscar Nominees

On Wrong Lot

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A man who built a $190,000 home in suburban Kenner will finally get to move into his mansion, one year after he built it on the wrong lot.
John L. Sagers and Gaylon D. Simmons bought adjacent lots in the expensive subdivision and planned to build homes on their property. Simmons started his home first, but mistakenly built it on Sagers' lot.
The house was two weeks from completion on Jan. 14, 1977, when Sagers discovered the error.
Simmons filed suit asking Sagers to reimburse him for $193,471, which Simmons said represented improvements he had made to the lot.
Last week both sides agreed to swap lots, and Simmons agreed to pay Sagers an undisclosed amount for building his house on the wrong lot.
Still pending is a $343,471 damage suit that Simmons filed against the savings and loan association that financed his house and the contractor who built it.
Simmons charges that the loan company used an incorrect survey to finance his lot and that the contractor's employees incorrectly located the boundaries of his lot.

Opening lead: Three of ♣.

East took full advantage of the information supplied to him gratuitously by declarer to sink a seemingly cast-iron contract.

We don't know whether South's bid of three hearts was intended as a slam try or an effort to locate a better contract than four spades. If the former, he was hoping for a magic fit with his partner. Had he simply bid four spades at his second turn, he might have made his contract.

West led his fourth-best diamond, East won the ace and noted the fall of South's queen. Prospects for defeating the contract seemed dim, for declarer was marked with the ace of clubs—he would not have bid so powerfully without that card.

There was one ray of hope. Declarer had announced length in hearts, so West had to be short in that suit. If declarer could be induced to take a wrong position in hearts, the defenders might be able to come to four tricks.

To give the impression that he, and not West, held the short hearts, East shifted to the eight of hearts at trick two. Alert to the possibility of a ruff, declarer won the ace and led a trump to the queen and East's ace. Now East continued with the three of hearts.

Consider the hand from the South seat. It looked as if East was striving for a heart ruff with a doubleton heart. If South risked the finesse, West would win the queen and continue with a heart, and East's ruff would defeat the contract.

Not surprisingly, declarer did what you and I would have done. He rose with the king of hearts, and East's well conceived plan came to fruition. West ruffed with the monarch and exited with the king of diamonds. Though declarer ruffed, there was no way he could avoid conceding the setting trick to East's queen of hearts.

What Allen ended up with was a bit of pure pleasure called "Annie Hall," and nominations for three of Oscar's most prestigious awards.

Allen was nominated Tuesday for best director, best actor and best original screenplay, the grandest display of Academy Awards nominations since Orson Welles was chosen in the same categories for his 1941 epic, "Citizen Kane." Welles won a writing Oscar for his script.

"Annie Hall" was nominated as best picture and Diane Keaton was nominated for best actress as the beautiful, flighty Annie.

When Allen heard how his film had fared in the nominations, he said, "I hope Diane wins."

The National Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences will hand out its coveted statuettes at the 50th Academy Awards presentation April 3 in Los Angeles.

Also nominated for best film of 1977 were "Julia," "The Turning Point," "The Goodbye Girl" and the space show box-office bonanza, "Star Wars."

Finally responding to years of criticism that women weren't given meaningful parts, Hollywood produced a bumper crop of female roles. The strongest competition in the Oscar race figures to be in the best actress category, and two films about women, "Julia" and "The Turning Point," led all films with 11 nominations each.

"Star Wars" won 10 nomi-

How They Voted In Congress

By Roll Call Report
WASHINGTON—Here's how area House Members were recorded on major roll call votes Feb. 9 thru Feb. 15. There were no Senate votes.
REDWOODS—Failed, 116 for and 274 against, to cut a proposed expansion of Redwoods National Park in California. The vote was on a motion to send the bill (HR 3813) back to committee, where, among other cuts, the expansion would be trimmed from 48,000 to 14,000 acres. After failure of the recomittal motion, the House passed the bill and sent it to conference with the Senate. The bill adds 48,000 acres at an acquisition cost of $359 million, plus a 30,000-acre "buffer zone" that could be added later by the Secretary of Interior at additional cost.
 Rep. Thomas Kindness (R-Ohio), a supporter of sending the bill back to committee for trimming, said: "I wish to express the indignation of the voters of Ohio and other states throughout the country who will never see the Redwood National Park and who are concerned about the profligate waste of money that is proposed in this bill."
 Rep. Phillip Burton (D-Calif.), an opponent of recomittal and supporter of the bill, said that by putting additional redwoods acreage in the sanctuary of a national park "we are protecting living things that were on the face of this earth before Jesus Christ was born."

 Members voting "nay" favored the 48,000-acre expansion of Redwoods National Park.
 Reps. James Martin (R-9) and James Broyhill (R-10) voted "yea."
 Reps. Walter Jones (D-1), L.H. Fountain (D-2), Charles Whitley (D-3), Ike Andrews (D-4), Stephen Neal (D-5), Richardson Preyer (D-6), Charles Rose (D-7), W.G. Hefner (D-8) and Lamar Gudger (D-11) voted "nay."
AQUACULTURE—Passed, 234 for and 130 against, a bill (HR 9370) to establish a national program to develop aquaculture, defined in debate as "the cultivation of aquatic plants and animals in marine brackish and fresh water." At a projected cost of $288.8 million over six years, a new agency in the Department of Commerce would stimulate the breeding of commercially-desirable fish within U.S. territorial waters. To that end, the department would make available to private industry such inducements as federal loan guarantees and insurance to attract development capital.

 Rep. Trent Lott (R-Miss.), a supporter, said the bill would "provide fishermen with the necessary incentives to make their industry a viable one, and one that will be able to meet the ever-increasing demand for protein-rich foods."
 Rep. Sonny Montgomery (D-Miss.), an opponent, said: "The legislation appears to be primarily for the benefit of salt water aquaculture. Yet...the most significant aquaculture we presently have in the U.S. is fresh water fish."
 Members voting "yea" favored establishing a new federal program for aquaculture.
 Jones, Whitley, Andrews, Neal, Preyer, Rose and Gudger voted "yea."
 Fountain, Hefner, Martin and Broyhill voted "nay."
BLACK LUNG—Adopted, 264 for and 113 against, the conference report on HR 4544, the Black Lung Benefits Reform Act of 1977. The bill liberalizes the procedures under which coal miners receive disability payments for pneumoconiosis (black lung disease) and related occupational ailments. It was headed for the White House and President Carter's signature.

 It's thrust is to make it easier for miners to obtain payment for future and existing impairment, at the same time costs are shifted from the U.S. Treasury to coal mine operators.
 Rep. Carl Perkins (D-Ky.), a supporter, said "our nation's coal miners and the survivors of those who died crippled from the ravages of black lung disease will begin to participate in the kind of sensitive and equitable federal program we imagined when we enacted the first black lung benefits law in 1969."

 Rep. Ronald Sarasin (R-Conn.), an opponent, called the bill "special interest legislation" which contradicts medical fact in its presumption "that simple pneumoconiosis is rebuttably presumed to be totally disabling."
 Members voting "yea" favored passage of the bill.
 Jones, Whitley, Andrews, Neal, Preyer, Rose and Hefner voted "yea."
 Fountain, Martin, Broyhill and Gudger voted "nay."

Reactivated Klan Is Goal

CHINA GROVE, N.C. (AP)—Efforts are under way in China Grove to reactivate the Ku Klux Klan in North Carolina, but the new organizer says there won't be any new rash of cross burnings.
 "We're going to stay peaceful," said Robert H. Stirewalt. "You get five years for burning the cross as an act of terrorism. I don't go with that."

 Stirewalt, 47, a disabled veteran, says he and his son, Robert Dale Stirewalt, are doing the organizing as a team.
 Stirewalt is now a Kleagle with responsibility for setting up a China Grove Klan unit and at least one other so state organizational elections can be held.
 The younger Stirewalt is exalted cyclops, or president, of the China Grove unit.

The father said he has been trying to reach members of the now-defunct unit of the United Klan that used to operate in Rowan County, and of those he has reached so far only two have turned him down.
 "We're trying to locate our people from before, a skeleton crew," he said.
 Exactly what the new organization would do hasn't been decided, Stirewalt said.
 "I enjoyed associating with the boys," Stirewalt recalled of the old days. "They're just a good group."

ACC Hosts Art Session

WILSON—Atlantic Christian College is serving as host to the 1978 Annual Conference of the North Carolina Art Education Association to be held on campus Thursday, Feb. 23 through Sunday, Feb. 26.
 All public and private school art teachers from across the state, as well as art supervisors, college art educators and college art education students, are invited to attend.
 Norbert Irvine of the ACC art faculty, who is serving as program coordinator and conference director, notes that the four-day conference has been designed around workshops which include pottery, ceramic glaze techniques, watercolor, tempera painting techniques, weaving, sculpture, drawing techniques, the pin-hole camera, and art appreciation and criticism.
 Registration will take place on Thursday, with exhibits and workshops on Friday and Saturday. A general session and executive council meeting of NCAEA is planned for Sunday morning.
 Dr. Perry Kelly of Western Carolina University Art Dept. is president of NCAEA. Irvine is president-elect.

Brass Rubbing Popular Hobby

MIDDLETOWN, Ohio (AP)—Barbara Sanford has made it possible to enjoy the art of making brass rubbings without kneeling for hours in a cold, dank church.
 In fact, her students don't even have to go to Europe to practice their craft.
 She owns 32 brass replicas, called facsimiles, of the more popular English and Belgian brasses. She is currently teaching others the European art form of capturing the designs, which are on engraved brass tomb coverings.
 She became interested in the art when she and her husband lived in Belgium for five years, where her husband was on assignment for his employer.
 "Many American women living overseas are interested in brass rubbing, more so than European women," she said.
 She and another woman gave brass-rubbing lessons in Belgium and Mrs. Sanford thinks the lessons will be popular here, too.
 "It really doesn't take special artistic talent, but it does take a strong arm to make a good brass rubbing," she said.
 "It's the same principle as taking an impression from a coin which you might have done as a child. Getting the detail around the face and hands is very important."
 Mrs. Sanford, who has sold her finished rubbings to gift and furniture stores, said the idea of using incised brass to replace stone effigies seemed to have come originally from Holland and Flanders in the 13th century and caught on quickly in England.
 The brass plates lent themselves to more intricate and detailed engraving than had previously been done in stone.

 "In most cases, only the nobility had their likenesses made before their deaths, but there are some commoners and even one convict in brass," she noted.
 England has preserved most of its memorial brasses. Brasses in Holland, Germany and France did not fare as well, particularly during the Napoleonic era when many were melted down for wartime use.
 Remaining brasses have lost much detail over the years from brass rubbers who must bear down hard to get vivid imprints, according to Mrs. Sanford.
 For that reason, an English firm has received permission to cast facsimiles to preserve the originals and yet keep brass rubbing a popular hobby.

Bugs Fail To Bug A Prof

BETLEMANIA—Dr. Stephen L. Wood, Brigham Young University zoology professor, examines an enlargement of bark beetle parts. On the desk is a tray of bark beetles he has collected from all over the world.

PROVO, Utah (AP) — Dr. Stephen L. Wood doesn't mind sharing an office with 250,000 beetles.

The Brigham Young University zoology professor has been "hooked" on bark beetles since he was 14, when he dug his pocketknife into a pinhole in a tree and eased out a tiny beetle on his knife blade.

"They were so interesting," he recalls. "They made such fascinating tunnels in the bark, and caught my imagination. I decided there and then that I wanted to study those beetles."

Now Wood has what is believed to be the largest collection of bark beetles in the world.

The tiny beetle, an insect less than 1/8 inch long, destroys more forest each year in the United States than do fires.

The beetle expert works with about 3,000 forest entomologists around the world who call on him for advice. His desk at BYU is stacked high with mail containing samples of beetles from such faraway places as Sri Lanka (Ceylon), Venezuela, Japan and Guatemala, with requests for advice on what kind the beetles are and whether or not they are dangerous to forests.

"When I receive the beetle, I compare it with others in my collection to determine whether or not it can be dangerous," says Wood. "For example, when immigration officers found beetles in a shipment of oranges from Japan to British Columbia, naturally they got a little upset.

"However, after I identified the beetle, I assured them they could unload the oranges. The hitchhiker was a subtropical beetle and there was absolutely no way it could survive in Canada.

"I received another call from Guatemala when a bark beetle was found devouring the inside of coffee beans. Since coffee is a multimillion-dollar money crop in that Central American country, near panic set in," says Wood. "After I analyzed the beetle and confirmed the fears, an eradication process was started."

Wood's work has saved millions of dollars of timber and other crops from the devastation of the bark beetle, because workable controls can be developed after the beetle is identified.

"Collecting expeditions have taken me all over the world," says Wood, who recently spent two weeks in India and six weeks in Sri Lanka collecting bark and ambrosia beetles for the Smithsonian Institution.

"I've collected 15,000 specimens in Venezuela, 25,000 in Central America, and have collected in Finland, Russia, Mexico, New Guinea and Australia, as well as 48 states. The jungle is an exciting place, although at times it's been too close for comfort to the cannibals, leeches, jaguars, wild elephants and other creatures," Wood says.

"It's fascinating work. I've discovered more than 800 new species of beetles, which hasn't been easy considering that some are so small (ranging from half a millimeter to 14 millimeters) that I had to use a magnifying glass to see them.

"Altogether, there are about 8,000 named bark beetles in the world, and less than 100 of these are destructive," adds Wood.

Among these are the Western pine beetle, mountain pine beetle, and Southern pine beetle, which are extremely destructive and disruptive to forest management operations. They have easily earned the distinction of being the most destructive group of forest insects from the standpoint of the amount of timber destroyed.

"No state and no country goes untouched," says Wood. "Each year we lose several billion board feet of timber in the United States alone because of beetles. This is considerably more than we lose because of forest fires."

Wood's work helps forestry officials control these beetles. After he gathers facts about the ecology and classification of the insects, determining which species affect which trees, the forestry officials can better manage them.

'Back Tobacco' Meeting Mar. 4

The Wilson County Young Farmers, Inc., will sponsor a "Back Tobacco" meeting and supper on Wednesday, March 1 at 7 p.m. in the American Legion Hall in Wilson.

The meeting is designed to increase awareness of the importance of the Tobacco Industry in North Carolina and to raise money for support of Pro-tobacco organizations.

Speaker at the meeting will be Billy Yeargin, executive director of Tobacco Grower's Information Committee. Cost is $10 per person donation at the door or from Young Farmer Club members.

The public is invited.

Plan Boar Sale At Smithfield

A North Carolina Tested Boar Sale will be held Tuesday, Feb. 28, at the new Livestock Arena in Smithfield.

Boars will be shown at 6:30 p.m. and the sale will begin at 7:30 p.m. Forty-six boars, including Durocs, Hamps, and Chester Whites will be sold. The 46 boars averaged daily gain of 2.21, a backfat of .94, and 156 days to 200 pounds.

For test figures on individual boars or further information on the sale, contact Mike Regans at the Pitt County Agricultural Extension Office 758-1196.

History Has Him Hooked

By PHIL THOMAS
AP Books Editor

NEW YORK (AP) — Writer Robert Lewis Taylor swears off with regularity, but every time he gets near a pile of historical material he finds himself hooked again.

"Whenever I go to Yale University to look at their collection of Western Americana I swear to heaven I'm not going to get involved again, because when I do it means two years of grinding labor," the 65-year-old Taylor says with a smile. "But then I read some things in the collection, read a bit more, and there I am caught again."

Which is lucky for Taylor fans, since his obsession with history has resulted in such good-to-read, well-received novels as the Pulitzer Prize-winning "The Travels of Jamie McPheeters" and "A Journey to Matecumbe." "Two Roads to Guadalupe" and, most recently, "A Roaring in the Wind."

Taylor has numerous other books to his credit, among them such well-made biographies as "W.C. Fields: His Follies and Fortunes" and "Winston Churchill: An Informal Study of Greatness." He says he wrote some of his books between assignments while working at The New Yorker magazine, where he first handled the reporter-at-large pieces and then the profiles.

Taylor, who went to the magazine from newspaper work, says "The New Yorker was a great place to work — if you could stand loneliness. On the St. Louis Post-Dispatch I enjoyed working in a noisy, lively city room. At The New Yorker it was different. There was no one sticking his head in your door to ask you how you were doing."

Taylor says he hasn't written anything for the magazine for the past five or six years, instead devoting his time to writing his books.

A tall, fit-looking man who wears dark glasses even indoors because his eyes are sensitive to light, Taylor says he likes researching his books because "digging is darn good fun," but he finds the writing hard.

"Once I get started, though, I keep charging right in," he says. "I work every day in the week, there are no holidays. Every morning I get up at 5:30 a.m. and, oozing pain from every pore, I drink some coffee and then I start writing and keep it up until about 1 p.m. without leaving my desk."

"At our home in Ajijic, Mexico (he and his wife also have homes in Connecticut and Florida which they use frequently), I've got the housekeeper trained to keep people away from me. She's marvelous! When she's there no one gets to see me before I'm through working."

Taylor relaxes during the afternoon by playing tennis "very hard," swimming, lifting barbells and shooting pool. He says his father taught him billiards when he was 5 years old — "I stood on a chair and used a sawed-off cue." He says he varies his schedule occasionally by going horseback riding, "but I'm no good at it."

About a year of research — equally divided between Yale and the Montana State Historical Society — went into "A Roaring in the Wind," a sweeping novel about life in the West, especially Montana, during the late 1850s and early 1860s.

"Many of the characters in the novel are patterned after real people who lived at that time in what now is Montana, and in some cases I used real names, but I'm the one who put the words in their mouths. The same is true of the incidents in the book — some are real, some fictitious."

A relaxed, easy speaker, Taylor says he once again has been caught up by history and is at work on a novel about the Niagara Falls area from about 1840 to 1860.

"Do you know," he says with enthusiasm, "that by 1850 there were 150 major resort hotels there and that they were occupied mainly by Southern planters who came to get away from the heat? That's one of the many things I found in my research. But I've finished the research. Now I've got to write it."

("A Roaring in the Wind" is published by Putnam.)

Handicapped Are The Beneficiaries

Federal and state legislation has had great impact on the education of handicapped children in the past two years.

Public Law 94-142, the Education for All Handicapped Children Act, was signed by President Gerald Ford on Nov. 28, 1975. This law assures that all handicapped children have available to them a free appropriate public education designed to meet their needs.

The North Carolina General Assembly on July 1, 1977, ratified House Bill 824, An Act to Provide for a System of Educational Opportunities for all Children Requiring Special Education. The purpose of this bill, now known as Chapter 927, is to repeal portions of the existing state exceptional children law and to bring State law into conformity with federal legislation.

Many classroom teachers will now be serving exceptional children because of this legislation. Classroom teachers will also serve as important members of education teams whose task is to design Individual Education Plans for exceptional children. Individual plans are to be completed for all handicapped children as well as gifted students.

In order to equip teachers with the needed skills in serving special needs students in the regular classroom, expanded staff development services are available throughout North Carolina from eight regional education centers.

The Staff Development Specialist in each center provides training to regular classroom teachers through workshops, visits to classrooms, observations, and the development of materials. Training sessions are conducted by request in individual school units for classroom teachers in grades K-12 at no cost to the unit.

Participants may receive renewal credit for this training if prior approval is granted by the administration of the local school unit. Topics often requested include: Individualization techniques. Self-concept development. Teacher-made materials. Classroom organization and management. Behavior management, and alternative teaching strategies.

The Staff Development Specialist serving Educational Region One is currently housed at W.H. Robinson Primary School in Winterville.

Region One is made up of 17 local education agencies in the northeastern corner of North Carolina. Administrators, supervisors or teachers who are interested in the services of the Staff Development Specialist should call 756-7795 or write to Staff Development Services, c/o W.H. Robinson Primary School, P.O. Box 505, Winterville, North Carolina 28590.

Assertiveness Course Planned

An Assertiveness Training course will be held each of the four Monday evenings in March at Planters National Bank here for men and women of this area.

The course is being co-sponsored by the Greenville-Pitt County League of Women Voters, the Greenville Business and Professional Women's Club and the Mental Health Association in Pitt County. Funds from the $10 tuition charge will benefit the Women's Correctional Facility here.

Betsy and Dan Kelly will lead the course, which will involve both assertiveness training and positive addiction concepts and techniques. Lecture and small group discussion will be used. Inez Fridley and Linda Keel will be group leaders, along with Mr. and Mrs. Kelly. Class meetings will be from 7:30 to 9:30 each of the four nights.

Children In Africa War

BOY SOLDIER — Refugees, both men and boys, who fled Ethiopian air raids on their villages, are undergoing military training at Jijiga, in Somali-held Ethiopia. (AP Laserphoto)

By RICHARD TOMKINS
Associated Press Writer
FIYAMBIRO, Ethiopia (AP) — Children in oversized, cast-off uniforms clutching wooden rifles are a common sight in the brushfire wars that periodically erupt across Africa.

But in the rebellion to end Ethiopian control of the Ogaden Desert and join it to Somalia, the children are not playing soldier. They are actively engaged in combat, to avenge the deaths of loved ones and to help turn the dream of Western Somalia, the rebels' name for the Ogaden, into a reality.

Three such youngsters seen here in the mountains and valleys on the rebel side of the Fiyambiro battlefield appeared to be at that awkward age between childhood and adolescence.

Wearing brown uniforms, they crouched in the bush facing Ethiopian positions on an opposite ridge. Across each boy's back was an automatic rifle about half his size, a weapon the Russians supplied to the rebels' backers in Somalia before the Kremlin switched its support to Ethiopia.

"As is our tradition, they want revenge for the deaths of their parents," said Mohammed Hassan, a field commander for the Western Somali Liberation Front. "They have all received military training."

Hassan explained that the Ethiopians killed the boys' parents when they recaptured hill-top Fiyambiro temporarily last month and executed persons suspected of working for the Liberation Front.

Hassan did not say how many armed children were under his command, but he indicated there were more in the area, one of two main battlefronts in eastern Ethiopia where guerrillas are battling an Ethiopian army counter-offensive to reclaim the Ogaden.

The people of Fiyambiro, like most of the people in the Ogaden, are ethnic Somalis. Moslem nomads like the people of neighboring Somalia, with no cultural ties to the Christian Ethiopians to whom the Ogaden was ceded by the colonial powers in the 19th century.

Biochemist To Speak Friday

ECU News Bureau
Wilhelm R. Frizell, professor of biochemistry in the East Carolina University School of Medicine, will direct the regular Friday afternoon seminar for the ECU Department of Chemistry this week.
Dr. Frizell's topic is "Flavine-Pteridine Peptides". The program, scheduled for 2 p.m. in 201 Flanagan Building, is free and open to the public.

Three Attended Regional Meet

ECU News Bureau
"Families of the South" was the topic of the recent annual meeting of the Southeastern Council on Family Relations in Athens, Ga.
Attending the gathering were three members of the ECU School of Home Economics child development and family relations faculty: Dr. Jannis Shea, Dr. Mel Markowski and Jena Johnston.

Gospel Music Program Sunday

A gospel musical program will be held Sunday afternoon at St. Matthew Free Will Baptist Church for the building fund of the church.
Registration will begin at 4:30 and the program starts at five o'clock.
For further information contact Mrs. Josephine Brown.

ANCIENT STATUES

SAN AGUSTIN, Colombia (UPI) — Hundreds of ancient stone statues carved before the time of Christ stand in this green valley. Little is known of the Indian civilization which left them
