

Consumer Prices Soared During January

By MICHAEL DOAN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Consumer prices rose 0.8 percent in January, the largest increase in nearly a year, because of sharp increases in food and housing costs, the Labor Department said today.

The Consumer Price Index for all urban consumers rose 0.8 percent last month after rising 0.4 percent in each of the past three months, the department said. The increase was the largest since a 1 percent rise in February 1977.

"About two-thirds of this rise was due to price increases of 1.2 percent for food and beverages and 0.8 percent for housing," the department said. "Among other major expenditures, transportation rose 0.6 percent and medical care 0.8 percent."

The department also reported that the average worker's buying power dropped by 3 percent since December, the sharpest one-month decline in 14 years.

The department said the reduction in real spendable earnings was caused by a 1.2 percent decrease in average weekly earnings and a 1.8 rise in taxes, particularly Social Security.

Today's report was the first in a new system the department is using to try to cover the buying habits of more people. The department expanded its index to cover all urban consumers, about 80 percent of the U.S. population. The department also is measuring prices paid by urban wage earners and clerical workers separately, a measure used in union contracts. This index also rose 0.8 percent last month.

The 1.2 percent increase for food and beverages was due to "higher prices for most types of food purchased in grocery stores, for restaurant meals and alcoholic beverages," the department said.

Home-ownership costs rose 1 percent, mainly because of higher house prices, home maintenance and repair services, mortgage interest costs and housekeeping.

Medical care costs were up 0.8 percent, used cars rose 2.5 percent and price increases were recorded for airline, taxi and bus transportation. Clothing prices rose only 0.3 percent, while entertainment costs were up 0.5 percent because of more expensive reading materials, sporting goods and theater and movie prices.

The 0.8 percent increase, if averaged out over an entire year, would amount to an annual inflation rate of nearly 10 percent, well beyond the Carter administration's goals of 6 to 7 percent. The figures were adjusted for seasonal variations, but could also reflect some automatic first-of-the-year price increases.

The index for all urban consumers stood at 187.2, meaning it cost the average urban resident $187.20 for the same goods $100 would buy in 1967. For urban wage earners and clerical workers the index was 187.1.

The index covers all city and suburban consumers, who make up 80 percent of the country's population. Rural areas are still not taken into account. Doing that, officials said, would be too expensive.

Wages paid more than 8.5 million workers are tied to fluctuations in the index, which also affects the monthly checks of 50 million Social Security beneficiaries, retired military and Civil Service employees and food stamp recipients.

Briefing For UMW Persuaders

By STRAT DOUTHAT
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Some 400 coal miners and United Mine Workers district representatives — the men who will have to sell the union's rank-and-file on the proposed soft coal industry contract — are getting the word today on how to go about their difficult task.

Although the contract has been widely criticized in the coalfields, top union officials feel that if they can adequately explain the pact, the union's 160,000 striking miners will approve the contract next week and be back in the pits by mid-March.

Members of the union's bargaining team scheduled meetings with the miners and district representatives at a downtown hotel.

The bargainers are attempting to steep their audience in what the union would get from the contract and trying to second-guess what questions the 400 or so men will have to answer when they meet with local union representatives throughout the UMW's 21 districts later this week.

The 400 rank-and-file members were chosen by UMW President Arnold Miller, who Friday night called them, "my people."

Miller says he has no plans to go into the coalfields and stump for the proposal, as he did in 1974. But Miller did plan to make an appearance at today's indoctrination session to remind the district representatives of their responsibility under the union constitution to back the tentative contract.

The ratification vote will be conducted early next week in 2,100 local union halls. Before the balloting, educational meetings will be held in each district and local officers, in turn, will then hold similar sessions with the rank-and-file.

Following this, a 48-hour waiting period ensues before the miners cast their secret ballots.

The results, tabulated by local union tellers, should be announced the next day.

The UMW plans to blitz the coalfields with radio and television ads urging ratification. The thrust of this media deluge is expected in southern West Virginia's districts 17 and 29, where nearly 50,000 miners live.

Both President Carter and Labor Secretary Ray Marshall said Sunday they think the rank-and-file will approve the settlement.

Meanwhile, the Bituminous Coal Operators Association — with whom the union reached the tentative contract last week — has its own ratification procedure.

The contract provides for a 37 percent wage increase over the next three years, with an immediate $1-an-hour raise. This would leave most miners' salaries at about $80 a day by 1980, not counting overtime. Miners now make an average $55 a day.

The two most controversial areas are the health and pension package and the section dealing with wildcat strikes. During the final hours of last week's negotiations, the coal operators accepted the union demand that the health and pension plans be guaranteed and that the companies' stance on work stoppage penalties be softened.

In the proposal rejected two weeks ago, the companies wanted to jettison the multimillion-dollar health and pension trust funds and provide their own plans.

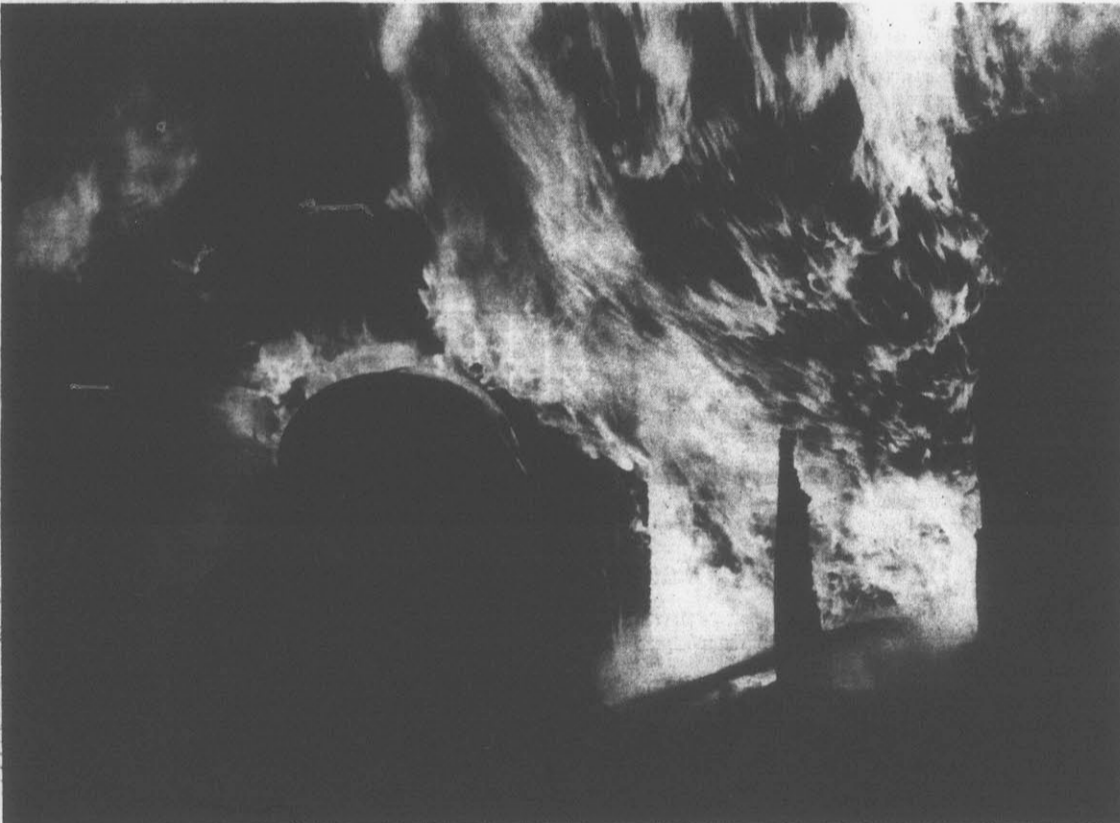

The funds now are operated independently and tied to the amount of coal mined. The operators wanted to tie them directly to hours worked, thereby making them a weapon against wildcat strikes.

In the current proposal, the health and pension plans are guaranteed by the operators. The proposal also provides that miners, for virtually the first time in the last 30 years, pay a portion of their health care bills — up to $7 for a doctor's visit or a prescription.

The contract rejected earlier would have assessed penalties against any miner participating in a wildcat strike, even if only by refusing to cross a picket line. After 10 days, each miner would have been assessed $20 daily to pay for health and pension benefits.

The current proposal provides penalties only for those miners who initiate such an action.

The wage package, in addition to the immediate $1-an-hour increase, provides a 40-to-70-cent-an-hour hike in 1979 and 1980, depending on cost-of-living increases. The union also won improvements in vacations and in sickness, accident and death benefits.

Early Morning Blaze

INITIAL MOVE — Winterville Fireman Phil Worthington holds his head low as he begins to pour water from a hose for an initial attack on a fire that caused heavy damage to a Rt. 1, Winterville residence. Pitt County Fire Marshal Bobby Joyner said the Paul Jones family was not at home at the time of the fire, reported at 3:53 a. m. by a passing motorist. Damage to the dwelling, located south of Greenville, which also housed Myrtle's Beauty Shop, was placed at $55,000. Winterville firemen, aided by members of Eastern Pines Fire Department, fought the blaze for about three hours. Investigation is continuing. No injuries were reported. (Reflector Photo By Tommy Forrest)

Salvage Experts Work On Righting Derailed Chlorine Gas Tanker

YOUNGSTOWN, Fla. (AP) — Hundreds of people stayed away from their homes today as workmen began the delicate task of righting a derailed tank car that ruptured, killing eight people with a ghostlike, yellow cloud of chlorine. Eighty-nine people were injured.

Salvage experts also had to contend with a loaded chlorine tanker, a tanker of liquefied petroleum gas, one filled with ammonium nitrate — which is a highly explosive base for fertilizer — and five others loaded with caustic chemicals.

Workmen planned to ring the site near this small Panhandle town with a wall of earth and to smother the chlorine car with foam before trying to clean up the wreckage left by the derailment early Sunday.

Officials planned to make air tests today before telling the 700 to 1,000 residents who were evacuated when they could return.

Russell Gober, a member of the National Transportation Safety Board, said it appeared the derailment was caused by a broken rail but that was a tentative conclusion.

The accident came a day and a half after a derailed tank car carrying liquid propane gas exploded in Waverly, Tenn., sending a ball of flame tearing through the center of town.

Three victims of that accident died Sunday to bring the death toll to 12 and more than 40 were still hospitalized for burns.

The Florida dead, who were in their teens and early 20s, were exposed to the chlorine as they drove along U.S. 231, which parallels the tracks where more than 20 cars of a 120-car Atlanta & St. Andrews Railroad train jumped the tracks about 2:30 a. m. The car engines of many people choked to a stop in the gas, trapping some and forcing others to run for their lives.

James and Madelyn Miller were among those who had to flee. Their engine stalled when they stopped for a young man waving frantically for help.

The Millers said the young man was too groggy to keep up and fell behind. They did not know what happened to him.

The final victim, a 15-year-old girl, was not found until late Sunday afternoon when a helicopter crew spotted her lying in a field across the highway from the wreck.

The train's engineer, Ray Shores, 53, was the last survivor to be rescued. He took to the swamp along the tracks where he found a pocket of untainted air and waited eight hours until being rescued by a helicopter.

In all 89 people, some of them youths who had been hunting raccoons in the swamp, were treated at area hospitals after being exposed to the gas. By today, 18 remained hospitalized — six of them in critical condition.

Chlorine is a gaseous element often used in bleaching, water purification and other chemical processes. It reacts with moisture in the lungs, turns to an acid and eats away the lungs' mucous membrane, suffocating its victims.

Tongsun Park Is Here To Tell All

By JIM ADAMS
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Accused South Korean influence peddler Tongsun Park says he'll testify fully to "once and for all get down to the bottom of everything so that complete truth will come out."

The onetime Washington party-giver made that pledge as he arrived Sunday afternoon to begin closed-door testimony before House ethics committee investigators Tuesday.

"I hope that as a result of my giving my side of the story as well as I can recollect how things did happen, I hope we'll come to a happy ending," Park told reporters on arrival.

Park has been charged in a 36-count criminal indictment with trying to buy congressional influence for the South Korean government.

He is accused of paying $100,

000 or more to several former congressmen and of making campaign and office account contributions ranging from $100 to $5,000 to 24 congressmen and one unsuccessful candidate.

The ex-vice dealer, who left Washington 18 months ago, once entertained dozens of congressmen at lavish parties at his George Town Club.

He is testifying to the House and Senate ethics committees and then in court under an agreement that all criminal charges against him will be dropped providing he tells the truth.

He told reporters he hopes his testimony will help end the alleged influence-buying scandal "so that we can move on to something more positive which is to enhance the relations between our two countries."

Israel Will Continue New Sinai Settlements

JERUSALEM (AP) — The Israeli government is going to keep on settling Jews in the occupied Arab territories in spite of the Carter administration's opposition and a split over the policy within the cabinet.

The cabinet at its weekly meeting Sunday approved a resolution saying "it does not need new decisions" after a debate that pitted ministers who favor placating Washington by stopping the settlements against those who favor speeding up construction.

Cabinet Secretary Aryeh Naor would not say how many of the 19 ministers voted to continue the policy. Asked whether new communities would be built soon in occupied territories, he said, "We'll wait and see."

Seven weeks ago the cabinet approved expanding settlements in the northeastern Sinai Peninsula without building new ones. The cabinet also has approved construction this year of three new settlements in the occupied West Bank of the Jordan River.

Carter has called the settlements illegal and obstacles to peace.

Meanwhile, Israeli troops blocked right-wing demonstrators led by Rabbi Meir Kahane from occupying a former Jewish hospital building in the Arab West Bank town of Hebron.

The hospital had been owned by Jews until the town came under Jordanian rule in 1948. Kahane was ordered out of town after some of the 25 demonstrators scuffled with troops.

U.S. Assistant Secretary of State Alfred Atherton was to meet today with Prime Minister Menachem Begin and Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan, continuing his efforts to get peace negotiations between Israel and Egypt going again.

Atherton is trying to get an agreement on a set of general principles for a peace settlement so that Israel and Egypt can get down to bargaining on specific points. He returned from Cairo Saturday, saying he brought "concrete Egyptian proposals," but there has been no indication what they were.

Egypt has insisted that the principles must include Israeli withdrawal from all Arab land occupied in the 1967 war and self-determination for the Palestinians in the West Bank and Gaza Strip. Israel refuses to agree to either one.

N.C. Traffic Took 8 Lives

By The Associated Press
Weekend traffic accidents in North Carolina claimed at least eight lives, the Highway Patrol reported, boosting the death toll for the year to 165, compared to 179 at this time last year.

Hubert Glenn Henderson, 20, of Hendersonville was killed at 4:25 a.m. Sunday when the car he was driving left U.S. 25 about two miles south of Hendersonville in Henderson County and struck a tree. The patrol said Henderson was thrown from the vehicle.

Phyllis Thomas Davis, 27, of Greensboro was killed at 8:45 p.m. Saturday when the car in which she was a passenger ran off a rural paved road 2 1/2 miles south of Greensboro in Guilford County. The patrol said the car struck a utility pole.

Louren Chiouarou, 18, of Basking Ridge, N.J., was killed early Sunday in a collision on Interstate 95 in Robeson County five miles south of Saint Pauls. Miss Chiouarou was a passenger in a car that was rear-ended by another vehicle, ran off the road and overturned.

Two persons were killed early Sunday in an accident on N.C. 18 in Catawba County 18 miles south of Morganton. They were identified as Luther Cook, 28, of Rutherford College, and Paul Edward Ingram, 20, of Rt. 3, Newland. Troopers said Cook's car ran off the road at high speed and overturned several times. Ingram was a passenger.

A Virginia boy was killed Saturday night when he was hit by a car on N.C. 66 in Forsyth County three miles north of Winston-Salem. He was identified as Brian Tilley, 7, of Cain, Va.

Bobby Ray Anderson, 23, of Elkin, was killed Saturday in an accident on a Wilkes County road 20 miles northeast of Wilkesboro. Authorities said Anderson was a passenger in a car that went out of control, ran off the road and overturned.

Kathy Arlene Ingold, 16, of Rt. 1, Climax, was killed Saturday in a motorcycle accident in Greensboro. The patrol said Miss Ingold was a passenger on a motorcycle that smashed into a fire hydrant.

Alumni Group Met Friday

The Pitt County Chapter of the North Carolina Central University Alumni Association met Friday evening at the home of Ed and Jean Carter.

It was announced by Pres. Stan Tyson that Ray Greene, former quarterback and receiver coach at Michigan State University, had been named head football coach at NCCU. The alumni join the University President Albert Whiting in expressing pleasure at this appointment, he said.

Bill Carter reported on a four-phase program, which includes a fund-raising project, a non-fund-raising project, a civic event and other events.

Viola Vines of the Membership Committee reported the need for recruitment of local persons who have attended NCCU.

It was reported that all meetings of the group will be held the last Friday of each month. Hosts will take turns in alphabetical order of their names.

Arts Grant For Two Men Are Charged Griffton Festival In Shooting Incident

GRIFFTON — The North Carolina Arts Council has announced a Grassroots Arts grant of $800 to the Griffton Shad Festival, Inc. to help in the arts programs for the 1978 Shad Festival April 14, 15, and 16.

The Grassroots Arts grant will enable the Shad Festival to put on an expanded square dancing and clogging program as part of the Festival, and will enable the Shad Festival to expand its Art Show at the Art and Crafts Display and Demonstrations Saturday and Sunday, April 15 and 16.

These projects will be supported by the Grassroots Arts Program of the North Carolina Arts Council, a state agency, and will allow some Shad Festival funds which would have been allocated to these programs to be used instead for permanent improvements to the lighting and display areas needed for an expanded art show.

"We are very pleased that the North Carolina Arts Council feels that what we are doing is in keeping with the aims of their Grassroots Arts guidelines, because the non-profit Shad Festival has always tried to use its funds as wisely as possible in a manner that will benefit the greatest number of citizens in the Griffton area," said Chairman Tommy Wilson.

"With Grassroots help for our programming expenses, we can transfer some of our operating funds to permanent improvements to the Griffton Civic Center art and museum areas. This will benefit all citizens in future years, and make possible an expanded art show each year at the Shad Festival," Wilson added.

The improvements to the lighting is planned for the lobby outside the Griffton Historical Museum, to make it suitable for an art gallery. Museum and Arts committees said they visualize changing art shows throughout the year in this area.

Two men have been charged in connection with a shooting incident early this morning at the intersection of Fifth and Tyson Streets in which two local men were wounded, Chief Glenn Cannon reported this morning.

Cannon said Craig Whitley and Mark Streeter of Greenville were wounded by shots fired after two men stepped from a car that pulled to a stop at the intersection and accosted the two pedestrians.

Whitley, Cannon reported, was wounded in the head, while Streeter received a leg wound. They were taken to Pitt Memorial Hospital for treatment.

Harold Michael Curtis, 27, of 107 East Lakeview Terr. was charged with assault with a deadly weapon in connection with the shooting, while Ronnie Lee Gilbert, 25, of Raleigh was charged with failing to stop for a blue light and siren in connection with the incident.

The chief noted that Peggy Greene, 19, of 701 Skinner St. was charged with aiding and abetting failing to stop for a blue light and siren.

Cannon said the arrests took place about 2:30 a.m. when a car in which the three were riding was stopped by local Police and Pitt County Sheriff's Deputies at a roadblock west of Greenville on U.S. 264.

According to Cannon, the shooting apparently resulted from an argument at a Fifth Street nightspot earlier this morning.

Poor Results In Recruiting

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina officials say they're taking new steps to encourage blacks to join the state Highway Patrol, but they don't have much yet to show for their efforts.

The problem, top patrol officials say, is that few blacks seem interested in the patrol and not many are applying.

The result is that minorities make up only 3.5 percent of its 1,135-member force.

"We're terrible," acknowledged J. Phil Carlton, state secretary of crime control.

Carlton concedes that until the late 1960s, blacks were excluded from the patrol, but he insists that times have changed.

"I can say with a straight face, we're doing all we can do right now, short of a quota," he said. "I don't have any magic number, but obviously, with 2 to 3 percent, something's wrong."

Neighboring states don't seem to be doing much better. Virginia's state police has 31 black troopers on a force of 1,150, or 2.7 percent. South Carolina, with an active recruiting program, has boosted its percentage to 7.8 — 58 blacks out of 740 troopers.

Tennessee stands at 2.9 percent and Georgia's patrol is 4.8 percent black.

The FBI has also had a hard time attracting black agents. Out of 7,800 special agents, 143 are black. That's 1.8 percent.

Carlton said he is doing two things to increase the number of black troopers.

First, he has changed hiring procedures so that qualified applicants are placed on the list for patrol training school in the chronological order in which they apply.

"If you file your application today and I file mine tomorrow, you're going to be taken first," Carlton said.

The second step, Carlton said, is that a black trooper will soon be assigned full-time to minority recruitment.

"He'll be on the road, doing nothing else," Carlton said.

Murphrey-Allen Vows Solemnized Couple Weds In Double Ring Ceremony

MRS. DALE BELLMONT MURPHREY

Miss Pamela Sue Allen became the bride of Dale Bellmont Murphrey in a candlelight ceremony in Temple Free Will Baptist Church Sunday afternoon at 3 three o'clock.

The bride's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Francis B. Allen of Greenville. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Sherrod Bellmont Murphrey of Tarboro.

Officiating at the double-ring ceremony was the Rev. Richard Kennedy, pastor of the bride. A program of wedding music was presented by Dwight Whitworth, organist, and Mrs. Jane Randlett, soloist, who sang "God Loves You," "If" and "The Wedding Prayer" as the benediction.

The church was decorated with two baskets of white gladioli, chrysanthemums, pom poms and pink carnations. Seven-branched candelabra entwined with greenery were on each side of the altar which was centered with a brass unity candlebra. The couple knelt on a brass kneeling bench. Family pews were marked with white bridal satin bows.

The bride was given in marriage by her parents and escorted by her uncle, Buster Hardee of Greenville. She wore a formal length white organza gown over white taffeta designed with a high neckline encircled in cluny lace with Venise lace trim. The empire bodice pictured a bib effect of antique lace beaded with handsewn pearls and trimmed in ruffled cluny lace. The cuffs of the bishop sleeves were trimmed in ruffled cluny and Venise lace. The waistline of the modified A-line skirt was encircled with white satin ribbon with a bow in back.

She wore a shoulder length veil of imported silk illusion bordered with cluny lace to complement her gown. The veil was attached to a Camelot cap of lace covered with pearls. The bride carried a nosegay of pink roses, pink and white pom poms and baby's breath with white streamers and love knots.

Mrs. Diane Tyson, sister of the bride, and Miss Lynne Ball were honor attendants. Bridesmaids were Mrs. Elaine Hathaway, sister of the bridegroom, and Miss Tina Allen, sister of the bride.

The attendants wore formal length gowns of blue silk sheer designed with a high V-neckline overlaid in white haschel lace. The empire bodice was enhanced by an insert of white lace with an embroidered motif and centered with a row of white pearl buttons. A deep ruffled bertha collar was edged in the haschel lace. Matching lace trimmed the cuffs of the full bishop sleeves. A deep ruffled flounce accentuated the full flowing skirt, topped by a row of haschel lace.

The honor attendants carried nosegays of pink carnations, white pom poms and white carnations tipped in pale blue with bow and streamers of pink and blue. The bridesmaids carried nosegays of white daisies, pink and white pom poms with light blue bow and streamers.

Flower girls were Amy Allen, sister of the bride, and Melanie Cannon, niece of the bride. They wore pink dotted organza long-sleeved dresses with an eyelet lace bodice and ruffles extending down the back. They carried white wicker baskets filled with pink and white pom poms with pink bow and streamers.

The miniature bride and bridegroom were Becky and Scott Hardee, cousins of the bride. Her dress and nosegay were identical to that of the bride.

Belmont Murphrey served as best man for his son. Ushers were Brian Weathersby of Hobgood, Charles Register of Bethel, and Colin Murphrey of Farmville, cousin of the bridegroom. Robin Allen served as his sister's ring bearer.

The wedding was directed by Mrs. Stearle G. Pittman. Rice bags were distributed by Laura Dail, cousin of the bridegroom.

For her daughter's wedding, Mrs. Allen wore a floor length gown of mint green with chiffon trimming the V-neckline and a matching jacket. The mother of the bridegroom wore a floor length gown of deep pink polyester with high neckline, empire waistline and long chiffon sleeves. They wore corsages of white carnations.

Mrs. Melba Woolard, maternal grandmother of the bride, Mrs. D. B. Murphrey and Mrs. Rosa Mae Dail, grandmothers of the bridegroom, were presented corsages of white carnations.

The bride's parents entertained at a reception following the ceremony. Greeting guests were Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Dail, uncle and aunt of the bridegroom. Miss Beverly Dail, cousin of the bridegroom, presided at the register.

For travelling, the bride changed into a pants outfit of beige, tan and blue with navy blouse and navy accessories. After a wedding trip to Myrtle Beach, the couple will reside at Rt. 1, Tarboro.

The bride is a graduate of J. H. Rose High School. The bridegroom graduated from Hobgood Academy and is engaged in farming.

The wedding party and other guests were entertained at a dinner given by parents of the bridegroom at Three Steers Restaurant on Friday night. For the occasion, the bride wore a full length pink chiffon gown trimmed in white lace. The bride and bridegroom presented gifts to their attendants after the dinner.

Double Ring Ceremony

Miss Kathleen Louise Haddock and Frank Charles Harrington Jr. were united in marriage Sunday at 3:00 p.m. in a double ring ceremony performed in the First Free Will Baptist Church. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Davie Brinson.

Daughter of Mrs. Mary B. Williams of Rt. 2, Greenville, the bride was given in marriage by her brother, Richard Haddock.

She wore a formal length gown of ivory silked sheer over ivory peau de soie designed with a high neckline overlaid in floral beaded Venise lace. The empire bodice was enhanced by a sheer yoke styled with rows of miniature Venise lace in a radiating pattern interspersed with motifs of floral lace and the yoke was outlined in pearls and scalloped lace. A similar design was repeated at the top of the full bishop sleeves with the deep cuffs trimmed in lace and miniature lace edging. The waistline was encircled with floral lace. The modified A-line skirt and attached chapel length train were accentuated by a deep ruffle featuring rows of miniature lace.

She wore a fingertip length mantilla edged in floral Venise lace and carried a nosegay of sonya roses with miniature carnations and white baby's breath tied with white satin ribbon.

The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Charles Harrington Sr. of Rt. 3, Greenville.

The church was decorated with a center arrangement of gladioli, carnations and pom poms with baby's breath in white and peach colors. White satin ribbons marked family pews.

A program of organ music was presented by Donald Waters of Greenville. Judi Webb of Ayden sang "You Make Me Feel Brand New." She wore a lavender floor length dress and a corsage of white carnations.

Rhonda Cox of Greenville was the honor attendant. She was dressed in a mint green dress with a matching picture hat.

Bridesmaids were Sharon Porter and Deborah Heath, both of Greenville. They were dressed in peach colored dress styled with a ruffled front and back, V-neckline with bow trim, set-in waist and capelet sleeves. The skirt had a ruffled hem and featured a ruffled bustle.

They wore matching picture hats and carried nosegays of white and peach colored pom poms and baby's breath tied with white satin ribbon. The honor attendant's gown and flowers were styled like those of the bridesmaids.

The father of the bridegroom was best man and ushers included Johnny Phelps and Jerry Lee, both of Greenville.

After a wedding trip to the North Carolina mountains, the couple will reside at Rt. 3, Greenville.

The bride attended D. H. Conley High School and is employed by Hardee's. The bridegroom attended Rose High School and is associated in business with his father.

A reception was held following the ceremony in the church reception room.

Ms. Debbie McLawhorn, sister of the bride, poured punch and Mrs. Vickie Harrington, sister-in-law of the bridegroom, served wedding cake. The reception tables were covered with white cloths with a center arrangement of white pom poms and carnations.

The coordinator of the wedding was Ms. McLawhorn, sister of the bride. The reception was given by the bride's mother.

Dear Abby

Hairdresser Cites Point Of View

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1978 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: That woman who wrote in to complain about gabby hairdressers sure got my goat. I'm a hairdresser, and I wish that lady could have stood behind my chair today. She'd have heard the details of four divorces, three hysterectomies, two kids spaced out on dope, and I don't know how many sad stories about cheating husbands, alcoholics and in-law problems.

If a hairdresser talks too much, the customer can always say, "No more talking, please. I'd like to relax." But if the customer decides to do a non-stop number on her hairdresser, no way can the hairdresser shut her up.

GRINNING AND BEARING IT

DEAR ABBY: Eight years ago I had an affair with a co-worker, and like a fool, I told my husband everything. My life has been a living hell ever since.

I can't take the car without him checking the mileage. I can't use the phone without him adjusting the cord to see if it's been moved. Every time we have a disagreement, he brings up the affair and says I have to put up with anything he dishes out and I should consider myself lucky that he's still here.

We have one son, and my husband keeps telling me he will tell the boy all about me as soon as he's old enough to understand. (Abby, the boy wasn't even born at the time of my mistake!)

My husband wrote down everything I confessed to him and says he can use it in court with no proof. Every time we argue, he threatens to call the man's wife and tell her about me.

I've even told him to go ahead and have an affair himself if it would stop the revenge, but to quit threatening me! Every time we receive a wrong number, he swears I'm fooling around. This has been going on for over 6 years and I can't take any more of it, but what can I do? My nerves are shattered.

TOO HONEST

DEAR HONEST: Give your husband an ultimatum. Tell him that unless he goes with you to a clergyman, marriage counselor or a mental health clinic, you will take your child and leave!

Perhaps with therapy he can be made to realize how cruel and sick his thinking is. If he refuses counseling, leave him. Life anywhere else would be preferable to the abuse you're getting.

Hopefully, Quality Grew Too

It is not easy to realize, but the Greenville City School system got its start on Feb. 19, 75 years ago — within the lifetimes of some living today.

The anniversary was observed by the present school board at its meeting last week.

Following approval of an act by the General Assembly a board of trustees was named with Thomas J. Jarvis as president. Later in the year a superintendent was named— Professor W. B. Dove — and a first school site was selected (where Shepard Library now stands).

A colored grade school was also established with C. M. Eppes as principal. A black high school — discontinued when the schools were integrated — was later named for Eppes.

The first school year began on Oct. 5, 1903. There have been vast changes in the city school system since that February 75 years ago when it was first established.

There are, of course, no longer any "white" or "colored" schools. There are now many buildings, teachers and supporting staff members. Buses pick up many children and take them to their assigned schools, and there are about 6,000 young people in the school system.

The school system has grown in size and, we hope, in quality. We would like to think that quality will always be the prime aim of the administrators in planning for the future.

Improving Relations With Other States

Gov. Hunt has announced North Carolina will increase cooperation with other states in curbing cigarette smuggling.

The Crime Control and Public Safety department is to assign a high level agent to full-time work on such investigations.

Smugglers in buying the cigarettes in North Carolina are not violating our laws. The difficulty comes when the cigarettes are illegally sold in states with higher cigarette taxes.

The situation has not made for good feelings between North Carolina and the affected states and Gov. Hunt is attempting to improve our relations with those states.

THIS AFTERNOON

Scared Of Medical Costs

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — The fear of financial wipeout by medical and hospital bills is one much on the minds of people, McNeill Smith finds as he campaigns in the North Carolina race for U. S. Senate.

One of eight Democratic candidates seeking the party nomination in the May 2 primary, Smith is finding that woe of the economy occupy upper place in voter concerns.

The high cost of energy, and going higher; rising taxes with no end in sight; declining values on money saved. "We must restore confidence that the dollar will remain more constant in value. Too many people are over-anxious to spend what they have because prices continued to go up. It is difficult to save if those savings will be wiped out by inflation," he feels.

One problem at the federal level is built in cost-of-living escalators on a variety of programs such as federal payrolls and retirement systems, Social Security payments among them.

"This doesn't reach everybody. Not all citizens benefit from the automatic increases, and the increases cause taxes to escalate. It seems to me that a plan put forth some 10 to 15 years ago has merit: to remove those index programs. We ought also to index the tax system."

Jobs

Unemployment is a critical part of the general economy and the Greensboro attorney and state senator feels the correct approach would be federal incentives to private business to locate plants and business operations in both rural and urban areas where chronic unemployment is severe; particularly among young Blacks. A tax reduction will stimulate some jobs, and "as a final resort there would need to be some public works programs—cleaning roads, planting trees, insulating homes. There is plenty of work to be done."

Smith sees the cost of medical care related to the problems in the Social Security system. "We have got to protect this system for the people who depend upon it. One proposal with merit has been to address health care through general taxes rather than Social Security funds." The expensive Medicare program, for instance, would be withdrawn from the retirement program.

NOBLITT

A national health insurance program which would "pump large amounts of money into an old system" would not speak to the concerns over rising health costs, Smith believes. "None of the present bills are right. The competition is on to see who will benefit most: the government agencies, health care providers, or the people."

At the end it is "not always the patient who is the one benefitting," and Smith would aim for a comprehensive plan which would be preventive in nature, easy to install, acceptable to the health care system, and cost some $6 billion per year—an amount already being invested through tax deductions anyway.

His suggestion is a pre-paid plan for health of every pregnant woman and the child upon and after delivery.

Full Coverage

Full service medical and health care for mothers and infants would result in bigger, stronger, healthier and brighter children who would perform better in school and throughout life, relieving society of many rehabilitation and institutional obligations and yielding "all kinds of benefits later on." He would leave both Medicare (for the elderly) and Medicaid (for the poor) in place, and install a catastrophic health plan for all families.

Government insurance would cover health care for costs when they go above 10 per cent of family income; from 10 to 20 per cent there would be a sharing of costs between individuals and government; and over 20, the government would pay.

Smith is campaigning actively in his senate bid, and is considered among the front runners in the eight-man race. The nominee will face Republican U. S. Senator Jesse Helms in November.

Just Abolish February

WASHINGTON — Cyndi Harding, a friend of mine who works as a secretary for the Motion Picture Producers Assn. in Washington, has suggested an idea concerning winter that deserves discussion and could put the Panama Canal treaty debate on the back burner.

Cyndi wants Congress to pass a law eliminating February from the calendar.

Here are her reasons: "FEBRUARY IS BORING! It is worse than the flu and you can't get rid of it until March. In February Americans look worse than ever, feel worse than ever and eat more than ever to fight their depression. There is nothing to do in February... no place to go... prices are too high... skin is too pale... and people walk with their heads down during the entire month muttering to themselves about breaking up with their loved ones. February is the enemy of romance."

"But what about Abraham Lincoln's and George Washington's Birthday?" I asked.

"We could move them to June," she replied. "The President has already changed their dates as official holidays anyway. There is no reason he can't put them in a much nicer month. If you had Lincoln's and Washington's Birthday sales in June, people would be in a much better mood to take advantage of them."

"What would you put in February's place?" I asked.

"Spring," she replied. "Wouldn't it be great to have spring right after Christmas? Can you picture how wonderful people would feel after the glow of Christmas and New Year's if they could start immediately to paint Easter eggs and begin stocking up on chocolate rabbits? People could start to play tennis and golf outdoors, and the baseball season could begin a month earlier."

"Do you think Congress is ready to eliminate an entire month from the calendar, particularly one in which it takes such a long recess?"

"It would if the congressmen realized what it would do for the country. If you eliminated February you could save billions of dollars spent on heating oil, electricity, gas and coal bills. The economy would boom. No sooner would Christmas shopping be over than it would be time for spring dresses and bonnets and patent leather shoes. Men would go out and buy lightweight suits and sports shirts. Children would start pressuring their parents for bicycles and new sneakers, and automobile sales would triple. Nobody likes to go out in the slush and icy winds of February to buy anything but survival items such as flashlights and electric blankets."

"Congress could take its recess in May which is a much more pleasant month to go home and talk to constituents who would be more amenable to double talk than they would be in the dead of winter."

"Your plan does make sense."

"Even the anti-ERA people couldn't be against it," Cyndi said. "I don't know of any lobby that would fight it."

"What about the ski resort people?"

"We could add an extra week in January to placate "What about people who own houses and will have to start working in their gardens and on their lawns a month earlier?"

"President Carter could give them all a pardon."

"The only objection that I can see," I told her, "is that

To the editor:

As a senior nursing student at UNC-Chapel Hill and a resident of Pitt County, I feel that screening programs for the early detection of potential health problems such as coronary heart disease, cancer, high blood pressure, emphysema and diabetes should be made available to the residents of this area.

Coronary heart disease, cancer and hypertension are the three major fatal illnesses of our adult population, with diabetes and emphysema also among the top 10. If detected, early measures can be taken to improve the chances of survival, decrease the debilitating effects of the condition, and, in many instances, provide a cure.

Such programs, conducted by area public health services and/or medical and nursing students under proper medical supervision, could be provided via mobile units set up in shopping centers, major industrial sites, community recreation areas, and the downtown area, so that residents can receive checkups while shopping or during breaks in their working day. Health screening programs were successfully initiated three years ago by the Retail Clerks Union-Local 204 to provide health screening services for union grocery store employees in Durham and surrounding areas. The successful early intervention health screening program instituted two years ago by Cannon Mills in Kannapolis has motivated N. C. state officials to initiate a health screening pilot program in Burke, Pitt and Wayne Counties to test approximately 10,000 state employees for coronary heart disease, cancer, and high blood pressure. While a health screening program may not prevent disease, it will assist in the early detection of these major health problems. For this reason, I urge Pitt County residents to support and encourage efforts to establish community health screening programs.

THE INSIDE REPORT

Carter's Saudi Backfire

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — Although motivated by highest U.S. interests, President Carter's request for modern fighter planes for Saudi Arabia could backfire by prompting Israeli Prime Minister Menah Begin to stall negotiations with Egypt and thereby endanger peace in the Middle East.

The President's courageous decision to confront Israel and the pro-Israeli bloc in Congress by selling Saudi Arabia 60 F-15 aircraft, the West's best fighter plane, was based on the need for strong U.S.-Saudi links. This nation's economic future depends in major part on Saudi Arabia's friendship, because of both its leading price-setting role in the international oil cartel and its massive dollar holdings now invested within the United States.

If the Saudi aircraft deal

(tied to lesser plane sales to Egypt and Israel) went to Congress today, it probably would escape the simple majority opposition of both House and Senate needed for a congressional veto. But by the time it reaches Capitol Hill in early April, Congress may be far less inclined to approve because of stalemated Mideast peace talks.

The strong suspicion in official quarters here is that Begin's deepening intransigence is motivated in no small part by his opposition to the F-15s for Saudi Arabia. If peace is certainly not at hand in the Mideast, Congress can be more easily talked out of arms for Arabs.

The heart of the issue for Israel is not really concern over future Arab use of these aircraft against Israel, as Begin asserts. Rather, it is deep-seated Israeli fear that the Saudi-U.S. link is becoming strong enough to affect the 30-year alliance between Israel and the U.S.

For the first time since Israel became a state with U.S. aid, it is competing with an oil-rich Arab state for Washington's favor. Gradual strengthening of economic and military links between Saudis and Americans was reinforced by the peace initiative of Egyptian President Anwar Sadat, now the Saudis' best Arab friend.

Israel, accustomed to having its way in Washington, worries about this new competition — as shown when Begin intimate Moshé Arens spoke privately to the House International Relations Committee recently. Arens, chairman of the Israeli parliament's security committee, attacked the Saudi aircraft deal as stupid for the U.S. His point was that if trouble threatens Saudi Arabia from Iraq or Libya or other extremist Arab states, let us — Israel — handle it for you. The message: it's Israel and the U.S. together, and let's keep the Arabs out.

Given that fundamental Israeli policy, Begin's objective is to weaken the U.S.-Saudi link in every possible way and prevent the kingdom from expanding its U.S. political and economic base. One way to achieve that is to block the sale of the F-15s.

Incredibly, Israel is determined to block the deal even if Egyptian-Israeli peace prospects suffer. Begin himself has publicly given warning. On Feb. 16, he told the Israeli parliament that the proposed aircraft deal was a threat to "the process of negotiations" between Israel and Egypt.

High Israeli officials are now using the F-15s for Saudi Arabia as a major reason not to yield to Egypt three Israeli military airfields located on the Sinai Peninsula, particularly a major base near the Israeli Aqaba Gulf port of Eilat. Israel had not agreed to turn over the airfields anyway. But the Saudi aircraft deal is now being used as sudden new justification for retaining them, on grounds they are needed to guard against the Saudi air "threat."

Begin and his hard-line policy are in worsening political trouble in this country. This is shown by recent Gallup Poll results, reflecting more support for Egypt's Sadat than Israel's Begin plus

China's Parliament Opens Up

By JOHN RODERICK

TOKYO (AP) — The first session of China's Parliament in three years has begun on a note of openness recalling the relative freedom of the mid 1950s, when the Communists launched their first industrial Great Leap Forward.

For the first time since 1959, the start of the National People's Congress was announced in advance, and its inaugural session Sunday was given full coverage by Hsinhua, the official news agency, and Peking Radio.

But along with the new openness at home, a few sentences in party Chairman Hua Kuofeng's opening address suggested that his regime may be hardening toward Taiwan.

After saying the 3.5-million man army must be modernized and revolutionized, he declared: "The Chinese People's Liberation Army must make all the preparations necessary for the liberation of Taiwan."

This contrasted with the usual routine statement that Taiwan must be liberated. It could mean that Hua and his colleagues are losing patience with American refusal to break diplomatic and military ties with Taiwan and establish full relations with Peking.

Hua could be saying to the Americans that peaceful resolution of the Taiwan issue won't wait forever.

In an unexpected display of candor, Hsinhua reported the credentials of three of the 3,500 delegates — from Hopei, Liaoning and Peking — were annulled because they were found to have committed "serious mistakes." The mistakes were not specified.

The Communist regime's leading newspapers, the Peking People's Daily, Red Flag and the Liberation Army Daily, exhorted the members of the congress and of the People's Political Consultative Congress meeting simultaneously to express their views fully and "all pool their wisdom so that the meetings will be successful, lively and invigorating."

By contrast, the meetings of the People's Congress in 1964-65 and 1975 were conducted in secrecy, their results were not announced until afterward, and their members were carefully screened.

The reason for the new atmosphere is an urgent need to unite the diverse elements

Carter Tuned Image

By WALTER R. MEARS

AP Special Correspondent WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter won his job by commandeering the Democratic center and holding it against the efforts of rivals to depict him as too far right for the Democrats or too far left for the country.

He always scorned those labels, calling them little ideological boxes and saying that the voters resented them as much as he did.

Yet when Republicans took to calling him a liberal in Deep South disguise, Carter did some fine tuning of his image in order to stress his relatively conservative attitude on matters of budget and government management.

That kind of adjustment is easier made in theory than in action. For example, after a year in office, Carter has had to drop his campaign promise to balance the federal budget by the end of his current term. He hasn't said it won't happen, but he no longer promises that it will.

Now come two political scientists to suggest that Carter could face difficulties in a 1980 re-election campaign unless he can keep voters, especially Southern voters, convinced that he remains near the middle of the political road.

"He won by capturing the votes of centrist switchers," write Richard M. Scammon and Ben J. Wattenberg. "He is in trouble, and may get into deeper trouble if he is perceived to be moving from the center toward the left."

Writing in Public Opinion, a new bi-monthly magazine published by the American Enterprise Institute, Scammon and Wattenberg say that problem could be particularly severe in Carter's own South.

Scammon is director of the Elections Research Center and a director of the Census Bureau. Wattenberg, once a presidential campaign aide to Sen. Henry M. Jackson, is a senior fellow of the institute and an editor of its magazine.

According to their analysis, Carter won in 1976 because of a wholesale shift of white Southern voters out of the Republican column and into his. Hubert H. Humphrey got only 31 percent of the Southern vote in 1968, George McGovern 29 percent in 1972. Carter got 54 percent.

"The big change came among white Southerners," Scammon and Wattenberg say. "Had they not switched to Carter in large numbers in 1976 he would not have won. If those switchers do not — for any reason — vote for him in 1980, it is unlikely that he will win again."

Those voters are generally conservative, but in Carter they had a fellow Southerner, and that overrode ideological leanings which might otherwise have aligned them with Republican Gerald R. Ford.

Now Carter has demonstrated that a Deep South candidate can be elected president, just as John F. Kennedy proved a Roman Catholic could win.

Kennedy's victory effectively eliminated Catholicism as an issue in presidential campaigns. The question Scammon and Wattenberg raise is whether Carter's victory will work the same way on the regional issue.

"Will Southerners have to

Strength For Today

SPIRITUAL REALITIES

In a play performed many years ago entitled "The Return of Peter Grimm", old Peter comes back occasionally to the house in which he had died years earlier. The members of his family, who were completely preoccupied with their own concerns or who were quarreling, were never conscious of his spiritual presence. The sensual and hateful never saw him. He appeared only to one member of the family who was worthy of seeing him — a child who had a beautiful and pure spirit.

Everyone who has witnessed the play or has read it is aware of its lesson. We become aware of the presence of God only if our hearts, minds, and souls are attuned to the beauty of spiritual things. Hatred, jealousy, evil passions of all kinds make us blind to the presence of God in the world. The spirit has its own perceptions quite apart from those of the five senses. "Blessed are the pure in heart", said Jesus, "for they shall see God".

RALEIGH (AP) (NCDA) — The trend on the North Carolina f.o.b. dock broiler market was steady, supplies moderate, demand good, weights desirable. The dock weighted average price is 41.42 for this week. Estimated slaughter today 1,226,000.

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices were mixed today after an early advance faded in the face of some adverse inflation news.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, up more than 2 points in early trading, was off 1.91 at 754.33 by noon.

Gainers clung to a 5-4 advantage over losers after leading by more than 2 to 1 in the early going.

The government reported this morning that the consumer price index rose at an 8.4 percent annual rate in January, and that two new versions of the index climbed at a 9.6 percent annual rate.

Julius Shiskin, Bureau of Labor Statistics commissioner, said the figures reflected some special circumstances such as severe winter weather, but nevertheless described them as "a cause for concern."

Brokes said some early buying might have been prompted by the tentative agreement between the coal companies and negotiators for striking miners announced Friday night after the market closed.

But they also pointed out that it remained uncertain whether members of the United Mine Workers would approve the new contract when they vote on it next Monday.

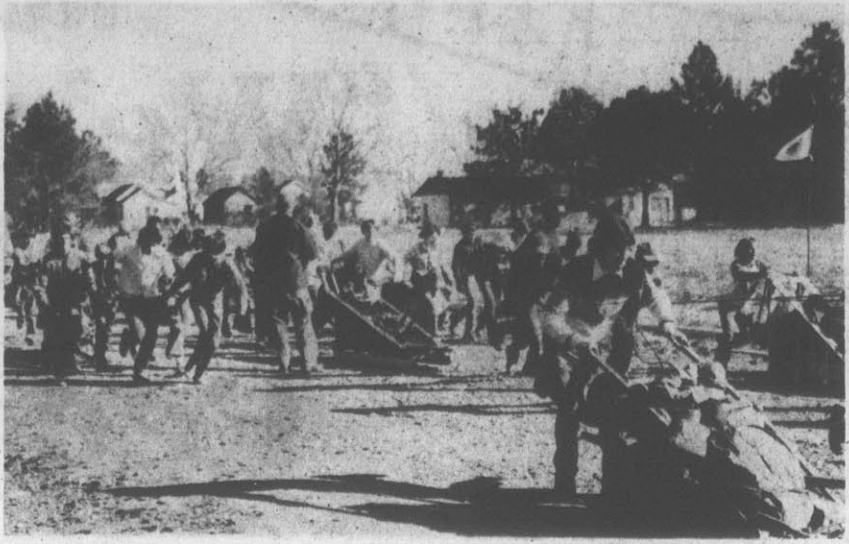

Matsushita Electric, the Japan-based company that produces Panasonic products, showed a 1-point gain at 26 in active trading. Matsushita said its earnings for the year ended last Nov. 30 were up 18.8 percent.

The NYSE's composite index dropped .08 to 49.11. On the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up .07 at 123.94.

Volume on the Big Board came to 8.92 million shares as of noontime, against 9.56 million at the same point Friday.

District Scouts At Annual Camporee

Some 181 Boy Scouts from Pitt County participated in the annual Pitt District Camporee this past weekend at a site near Winterville.

Richard Kelley, Pitt District scout executive, reported that 19 troops and 20 patrols were represented at this year's scouting activities.

According to Kelley, the activities, centered around the theme for the 1978 camporee, "Klondike Derby."

He explained that patrols built sleds and entered them in competition with four to eight scouts serving as dog teams to pull the sleds.

Each team completed a course outlined on a map, Kelley said, with the streets of Winterville utilized for the competition. He thanked Winterville Police for helping with traffic control during Saturday's sled races.

The patrol competition included orienteering, knot tying and rope rescue, raising of patrol flags, scout maze, and emergency operation involving the starting of a fire with flint and steel. The competition events took place at various stops on the course with "cities" bearing Alaskan names designated.

All patrols were eligible for blue ribbons in the competition, according to Kelley. Blue ribbons were awarded to 14 patrols and three received red ribbons and one received a yellow ribbon.

Juggling Makes A School Break
BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — Instead of such traditional breaks in school routine as nap periods or milk breaks, Richard Chamberlain gives his third-graders juggling breaks.

The teacher thinks juggling is a dandy tension-reliever and has other positive benefits for people of all ages.

"Anyone with problems or a lot of tension should take a juggling break. It relaxes your muscles and gets your mind off all your problems," Chamberlain said.

"When you're finished you have a fresh start on things. You start looking on things with a different perspective."

He said juggling improves muscle control and results in good penmanship.

A noise level of 90 decibels is the equivalent of using a jackhammer or punch press.

Comply On Rescued Copter Handicapped Also In Water

PORTSMOUTH, Va. (AP) — An amphibious helicopter picked up six survivors from a sunken clam boat off the Virginia coast today, but then lost power and fell back into the water, the Coast Guard said.

A Coast Guard spokesman said the copter remained upright in six to eight-foot seas and that its four crewmen and the six survivors of the sunken 127-foot boat Pari Passu apparently were uninjured.

A seventh man from the Pari Passu — the only other member of its crew — was not picked up with the others from the Pari Passu's wooden life raft and died in the water, Coast Guard spokesman Fred Maldonado said.

A second Coast Guard helicopter arrived at the scene, 40 miles southeast of Chincotague Inlet, just after the amphibious copter went down, Maldonado said, and picked up the dead man from the Atlantic.

A third helicopter was dispatched by the Coast Guard "to lend whatever assistance it can," Maldonado said.

The downed amphibious helicopter "is just bouncing around out there. Our main concern now is to keep it from tipping over, so we can tow it in or, perhaps, lift it," he said.

Maldonado said the Coast Guard didn't know from what the Pari Passu's wooden life raft and died in the water, Coast Guard spokesman Fred Maldonado said.

Panic Over A Teaching Aid

LEAVENWORTH, Kan. (AP) — Officials at Fort Leavenworth's military college have learned that one of the hazards of operating a military school is dealing with some scary teaching aids.

One of those aids, a harmless model of the type of explosive used by terrorists in Ireland, came in the mail this past weekend. And before officials realized it was harmless, a bomb alert was issued and the FBI, postal inspectors, military police investigators, a criminal investigation detachment and an emergency disposal team from Fort Riley, Kan., had arrived at the scene.

They evacuated the building housing the Command and General Staff College, and took elaborate precautions to detonate the "bomb," which contained some suspicious looking wires and a wrist watch.

It refused to destruct. Then, officials found an accompanying letter describing the model bomb as training material for the college.

The fishing boat later capsized, another Coast Guard spokesman, Dennis Post, said, and then sank.

The amphibious helicopter began lifting the survivors to safety just before 9 a.m. and had hauled six aboard when it suffered mechanical problems and came down into the ocean.

Post said the Pari Passu was owned by the Otten Harbor Clam Co. of New Jersey and was operating out of Cape May, N. J.

Benny Parsons, The Gentleman, Wins Richmond

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — It's been said of stock car driver Benny Parsons that he is a gentleman, on and off the track. It's been said that being a gentleman on the track is no virtue; that it has cost Parsons races he could have won by being less of a gentleman.

Now it can be said that being a gentleman may have helped Parsons win a race. Parsons' 100-yard victory over Lennie Pond in Sunday's Richmond 400 Grand National race probably was greatly aided by the fact most everybody treats Parsons as well as he treats them.

Conversely, the rest treat each other about as badly. Several long-standing vendettas were satisfied, several new ones were started, and other merely continued or renewed in the usually mild short track race that follows by one week the emotion-charged Daytona 500.

While Pond and Cale Yarborough, Darrell Waltrip, Richard Petty and others merrily were bashing the daylight out of each other, they would almost let the mild-mannered Parsons go by to get a better shot at their foes.

Parsons' Chevrolet looked like a Grand National race winner at the finish, except for a nose job given it by a slower car late in the race.

Pond's Chevrolet, Yarborough's Oldsmobile and Waltrip's Chevrolet, which finished in that order behind Parsons, were marred by tire marks, collages of damage. Yarborough's car wouldn't even go down the road straight, thanks to Petty, a non-finisher.

"Some of that out there today was pretty rough," Parsons commented. "But I managed to stay clear of most of it. As hard as the racing was, you'd think they were all racing for that Daytona money again."

Pond had a certain victory drive going, just 40 miles from the end when Waltrip decided to play chicken with him. In a desperate move to unlap himself, Waltrip banged his car into the side of Pond's and gave him a choice: back off or hit the fence.

Pond, who received a damaged tire in the close encounter, backed off.

Red-Hot Nicklaus Rallies To Victory

LAUDERHILL, Fla. (AP) — Jack Nicklaus is back.

And he's about as hot as a golfer can be, which can only mean trouble for the others on the tour. Especially with the Masters just six weeks away.

"I said a couple of weeks ago I would be reasonably sharp at the end of Inverrary," said Nicklaus Sunday after winning the $250,000 Jackie Gleason Inverrary Classic by scoring five birdies on the last five holes. "I think I am about on the schedule I wanted to be. I'm playing reasonably well."

Nicklaus, whose last victory came in his own Memorial at Muirfield last May, rallied from nine strokes behind at the midway point Friday. He shot rounds of 66 and 65 to edge Grier Jones by 1 stroke. Hale Irwin by 2 and Andy Bean and Jerry Pate by 3.

To his own amazement, Nicklaus successfully won his third tournament in a row here at the par 72, 127-yard Inverrary Tournament with birdies on No. 14 through No. 18, three of them from off the green.

"I played beautiful golf up through 13 holes," said Nicklaus, who shot rounds of 70, 75, 66 and 65 for a 12-under-par 276 and the $50,000 first prize. "I played well but was kind of discouraged at that point because every time I turned around Hale and Grier kept making birdies and I kept getting further behind."

Playing in the same threesome with Nicklaus, Jones and Irwin kept the pressure on. Jones was 4 under for the day for 67 and 9 under for the tournament at 277. Irwin was 1 under Sunday and 8 under for the tourney with 278. Pate and Bean wound up at 279.

Jones, who took home $28,500, said Nicklaus' birdie chip of some 80 feet on No. 14 "turned the whole day around. It was just one of those days where everything went right for him. And you've got to believe that when everything goes right for him, he's going to win."

Nicklaus followed the spectacular birdie on 14 with a 13-footer after going into the woods on No. 15. He chipped in from the fringe about 18 feet on No. 16 and putted from about 20 feet on No. 17. Then, by his own admission, Nicklaus sank a putt he thought was the only one he should have made on No. 18: about four feet.

Nicklaus, who lost the Los Angeles Open last week after coming up with a bogey and a double bogey on the back nine, said, "I've played well in quite a few tournaments but I haven't pushed one over. Winning again is fun, particularly after throwing away that one last week."

New Orleans Wins

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Even though he had to overcome a slow-motion South Alabama team in the Sun Belt Tournament championship Sunday, winning coach Butch van Breda Kolff says there's no need for rules to speed up the college game.

"It's a coach's prerogative to play any way he thinks he can win," van Breda Kolff said after his Privateers snatched a 22-20 win for the tournament championship on a last-second shot.

Until New Orleans guard Nate Mills banked a jumpshot from the foul line in the final second, the game was an exhibition of time-consuming passing drills and stingy defense by both teams.

After South Alabama opened with the same patient offense which gave the Jaguars a tournament upset over top-seeded North Carolina Charlotte Saturday night, New Orleans followed suit.

"I just finished writing a book called 'The Complete Book of Fast Break Basketball,' if you can believe that," said South Alabama coach Cliff Ellis after his team took the game to the wire.

"We planned on the game being close. But we were not going to get into a running-up-and-down game with them," Ellis said.

"He damned near pulled it off," van Breda Kolff declared. During a New Orleans timeout with 15 seconds left and the score at 20-20, van Breda Kolff set down the final play.

"What I really wanted was for Nate to go up like he was going to shoot and pass off to (center Wayne) Cooper, but I think Nate had ideas of his own. He wanted to be the hero and he was," the Privateer coach said.

"I just put it up there, hoping it would go in," said the 6-2 guard who was declared the tournament's most valuable player.

The tournament win, which put New Orleans at 21-6 for the season, does not carry an automatic NCAA bid. New Orleans finished second to UNCC in regular-season play.

Duke, UNC May Meet Again

By The Associated Press
Feeling was strong in Atlantic Coast Conference circles after the Duke-North Carolina game that Saturday's Tar Heel victory wouldn't be the last time this year that the two teams met.

And in the locker rooms in Chapel Hill, both teams were talking about this week's ACC tournament after the 87-83 decision.

"The loss makes us really want to win the tournament now," said Duke freshman Eugene Banks. "If we get up by 10 points again, we won't let the game get away."

Phil Ford wasn't ready to rest on his laurels either, even though he had just turned in the best single performance of his career with 34 points.

"We can't roll over and die," Ford said. "We have to keep on going."

The Heels had just won their third straight regular season title. Elsewhere in the ACC, Wake Forest downed N.C. State, 87-81; Virginia clipped Maryland, 79-70; and Clemson routed non-conference Biscayne, 91-47.

When the conference tournament gets under way Wednesday in Greensboro, North Carolina will draw a first-round bye. Duke will meet Clemson at 3 p.m.; N.C. State will face Maryland at 7 p.m.; and Virginia will play Wake Forest at 9 p.m.

Here's a look at Saturday's action:

UNC 87, DUKE 83
"We played pretty darn well, but a guy played almost a perfect game," marvelled Duke coach Bill Foster after Ford, his injured left wrist wrapped in gauze, proceeded to demolish the Blue Devils' hopes for the regular-season title.

Duke led by as many as 10 points in the first half and as many as seven after intermission. But North Carolina battled back each time.

The crucial play came with 12 seconds left and the Tar Heels leading 84-83. North Carolina's Mike O'Koren made only one of two foul shots, but teammate Jeff Wolf tapped the rebound to Ford. That forced the Blue Devils to foul Ford, who made the two free throws that iced the victory.

North Carolina finished the regular season with a 9-3 conference record and a 23-6 overall mark. Duke, 8-4 in the ACC, is 20-6 overall.

WAKE FOREST 87, N.C. STATE 81
It was billed as Rod Griffin Day at Wake Forest, but once the game started, it was Larry Harrison day from then on.

"It was Harrison's best game ever," declared Wake coach Carl Tacy after the 6-foot-11 junior center scored 28 points, grabbed 10 rebounds, handed off four assists, blocked three shots and made a steal to lead the Deacons to victory.

The contest was highly physical, and after it was over, Wolfpack coach Norm Sloan was pointing an angry finger straight at the officiating crew.

VIRGINIA 79, MARYLAND 70
It was every bit as rough at Maryland's Cole Field House, where Ernest Graham of the Terrapins was ejected from the game for throwing an elbow at Virginia's Lee Raker.

"The kids played very hard from then on," said Virginia coach Terry Holland. "We told them regardless of what happened, don't quit playing basketball."

Marc Iavaroni had 21 points and 16 rebounds to lead a come-from-behind effort for Cavaliers, who trailed 51-44 early in the second half. Virginia, 20-6 overall, finished in a fourth-place tie with Wake Forest at 6-6, but was designated as the "home team" in Wednesday's first-round game against the Deacons on the basis of a draw Sunday.

CLEMSON 91, BISCAYNE 47
Stan Rome had 18 points to lead Clemson to an easy victory in the Tigers' last breather before the tournament.

Coach Ponders Pro Job Offer

East Carolina University basketball coach Larry Gillman is reportedly considering a professional basketball offer, a Greenville source reported today.

The Pirate coach, who has been under fire repeatedly during his first year, earlier said he was considering resigning. It was reported on one area television station that he would have an announcement sometime today.

Early this morning, Gillman was unavailable and in conference with ECU athletic director Bill Cain.

Reportedly, Gillman has been offered a $32,000 a year job with the National Basketball Association Chicago Bulls.

One of Gillman's top players, Oliver Mack, a junior, is reportedly high on the list of players who may go hardship this year. Gillman told the source that if he left East Carolina, Mack would not remain here. It is believed that if Gillman does leave, Mack would apply for the hardship draft, thereby automatically forfeiting his final year of college eligibility.

East Carolina is currently 9-16 on the season and will wind up play Wednesday night at Virginia Tech.

Irish Comeback Tops Marquette On National TV

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

Whenever the television cameras are around, Notre Dame's basketball team seems to get its Irish up.

Playing before a national TV audience four years ago, the Fighting Irish broke UCLA's fabled 88-game winning streak. This year, they've continued that tradition — twice beating the Bruins on the tube. And Sunday they performed again like TV stars, defeating top-ranked Marquette 65-59 before a national audience.

The Irish came up with an old-fashioned Hollywood ending to win it.

"We've had some great comebacks in the history of Notre Dame athletics," said Notre Dame Coach Digger Phelps after watching his team rally from a 14-point halftime deficit, "and I would have to compare this to winning the UCLA game and ending their 88-game streak when they were No. 1."

The victory virtually sewed up an NCAA playoff bid for the ninth-ranked Irish. Marquette no doubt will be going to the post-season playoffs, too.

Georgetown, another team looking forward to post-season play, was caught with its points down Sunday and suffered a shocking 63-59 loss at Fordham.

The nation's 18th-ranked team will compete in the ECAC's Southern-Upstate. New York playoffs for an NCAA berth.

Meanwhile, the University of New Orleans earned a spot in the NCAA playoffs by recording a slowed-down 22-20 decision over South Alabama in the championship game of the Sun Belt Conference tournament.

Kentucky and San Francisco secured NCAA playoff berths with victories on Saturday.

Kentucky topped Tennessee 68-57 to clinch a share of its 31st Southeastern Conference title. The victory assured the country's second-ranked team the SEC berth in the NCAA's Midwest Regionals.

San Francisco clinched the West Coast Athletic Conference championship with a 79-73 decision over Nevada-Reno. The victory earned the Dons a berth in the NCAA's West Regionals.

In another Saturday development, eighth-ranked North Carolina defeated No. 13 Duke 87-83 to win the regular-season championship of the Atlantic Coast Conference. The victory earned North Carolina a bye in the opening of the ACC tourney, which begins Wednesday in Greensboro, N.C.

Michigan State moved closer to the Big Ten championship by whipping Illinois, 89-67. The triumph assured the Spartans of at least a tie for the league title.

Creighton defeated Southern Illinois 62-56 to win the regular-season title of the Missouri Valley Conference. The victory assured the Blue Jays a bye in the Valley playoffs until the final game on March 5.

Fourth-ranked Arkansas was one of four winners in first-round play at the Southwest Conference playoffs, moving into the quarter-finals with an 84-42 rout of Texas Christian.

In other SWC playoff games, Houston trounced Rice 108-67; Texas Tech beat Texas A&M 85-78 and SMU turned back Baylor 73-68.

In other SWC playoff games, Houston trounced Rice 108-67; Texas Tech beat Texas A&M 85-78 and SMU turned back Baylor 73-68.

In opening round Southern Conference tournament action, regular-season champ Appalachian State beat The Citadel 81-64; Marshall trimmed Western Carolina 64-56; Furman took Tennessee-Chattanooga 83-73 and VMI whipped Davidson 95-80.

Elsewhere Saturday, third-ranked UCLA routed Oregon 83-57; fifth-ranked New Mexico hammered Brigham Young 71-66; No. 6 Kansas tripped Colorado 70-60; St. John's upset No. 11 Providence 60-51; No. 12 Florida State edged Georgia Tech 85-82; No. 15 Illinois State walloped Centenary 90-77; 16th-ranked Detroit defeated Xavier of Ohio 83-77; No. 17 Syracuse beat Boston College 97-80; Georgetown whipped Holy Cross 77-61; Indiana stunned No. 19 Minnesota 68-47 and 20th-ranked Louisville stopped Memphis State 115-97.

Kelly Tripucka poured in 15 second-half points to lead the Irish rally against Marquette. The Warriors led until Don Williams' jumper with 2:50 left put Notre Dame up 58-57.

Bill Lombardi scored 18 points and Paul Williams had 17 as Fordham shocked Georgetown.

Nate Mills' jump shot from the foul line with one second left helped New Orleans edge South Alabama in the Sun Belt finals.

Jack Givens scored 18 points as Kentucky beat Tennessee for the first time since 1972. Winford Boynes broke open a tight game with nine points in the first five minutes of the first half, leading San Francisco past Nevada-Reno.

Phil Ford scored a career-high 34 points in the Tar Heels' victory over Duke. Greg Kessler's 32 points and 14 rebounds powered 10th-ranked Michigan State past Illinois. Rich Apke's 18 points sent Creighton past Southern Illinois.

A 23-point performance by Ron Brewer helped Arkansas beat TCU. Houston crushed Rice as Charles Thompson scored 21 points and Cecilie Rose 20. Mike Russell's 24 points led Texas Tech over Texas A&M and SMU defeated Baylor behind a 15-point performance by Phil Hale.

UCLA crushed Oregon as Raymond Townsend and Roy Hamilton each scored 20 points. Marvin Johnson scored 25 points to lead New Mexico past Brigham Young. Ken Koenigs scored four of his 24 points in key free throw situations late in the game to pace Kansas past Colorado.

Bernie Rencher put St. John's in front with a jump shot at the three-minute mark and the Redmen cashed in at the free throw line the rest of the way to beat Providence. Tony Jackson's 17 points led Florida State over Georgia Tech.

A 27-point spree by Billy Lewis led Illinois State over Centenary. Detroit beat Xavier of Ohio as John Long collected 24 points. Marty Byrnes' 23 points led Syracuse over Boston College. Ed Hopkins scored 21 points and grabbed 13 rebounds as Georgetown defeated Holy Cross.

David Joe Patton is a happy man these days.

The former East Carolina University basketball coach doesn't regret his decision of a year ago to call it quits in that profession. Since then, he and his family have moved to Tifton, Ga., where Patton is employed by a firm that manufactures school yearbooks and class rings.

Hollins lofted a high-arching jumper from 30 feet out on the left side and then watched it bank off the backboard and through the net as the final buzzer sounded to give the undermanned Trail Blazers a dramatic 100-99 National Basketball Association victory over the Chicago Bulls Sunday.

"The ball was supposed to go deep to either Lloyd Neal or Tom Owens, but when (Chicago center Artis) Gilmore choked off the corner, I held the ball and forced it up," said Hollins.

Portland Trail Blazers Coach Jack Ramsay. "It just so happened they were all shut off, so Lionel Hollins was literally forced to shoot from the twilight zone."

Portland played the game with the minimum eight men, Maurice Lucas, Dave Twardzik and Larry Steele all being sidelined with injuries.

But Lloyd Neal picked up the slack, scoring a career-high 35 points.

In other NBA games Sunday, the Seattle SuperSonics stopped the Philadelphia 76ers 99-97, the Milwaukee Bucks edged the New Orleans Jazz 122-120 in overtime, the Atlanta Hawks trimmed the Buffalo Braves 119-117, the Boston Celtics beat the New Jersey Nets 94-92, the Washington Bullets defeated the Golden State Warriors 121-110 and the Detroit Pistons beat the Los Angeles Lakers 127-124.

On defense, Dye said no player particularly stood out, but linebacker Mike Brewington made some good plays.

The team will continue practice this week, with a possible scrimmage on Thursday, before taking off next week for spring break.

Patton said he was following the Pirates as closely as he could this year. "It would seem like they are having the same problems this year that they had last year. It seems tough to win at home, too."

He said that he felt the pressure of playing before peers was the at home problem of the Pirates. "On the road, I guess they feel that they have no one to impress, so they play better. But who knows?" he said.

Patton was recently quoted in the Chapel Hill-published Proop Sheet as saying that he had watched ECU play Georgia Southern (in Statesboro, Ga., earlier this year) and had seen no defense at all.

"I never made any statement of the kind," Patton denounced. "And I resent anyone making up and publishing such a statement."

But the coach would volunteer some advice for Gillman, should he return next fall. "Vic Bubas tried to tell me the same thing," he said. "Relax and enjoy it. But I doubt if any coach can listen to that and do it. The second thing I'd say is to let the games speak for themselves after the fact rather than before. Now, I'm not trying to criticize, that's just the way I feel. He (Gillman) had a job to do when he came in and he felt that that was the way to do it, since when you get down to the bottom line, it's all on his shoulders."

Would he return to the hardwood? "I don't think so," he replied. "I hate to say never, though. If I can make a go of it in this job, I'll be happy. I've got a friend at (a big-time school) who is an assistant. He expects to be the head coach there in a few years, and told me he was going to be calling me to help him out when he gets the job. I told him no way."

However, the old coach hasn't let it all get out of his blood. "I've moved from head coach at East Carolina to being the assistant coach on my son's third and fourth grade recreation team. And we're unbeaten."

Earlier this year, he set a new school record for points and field goals in a single game. He has also set marks for field goals attempted and made during a season.

Saturday night, he surpassed two more records. He has now scored 667 points, surpassing the old season record of 662 set by Bobby Hodges back in 1953-54. He has also assured himself of finishing with more than Hodges' current school record for a season average with 26.5 points a game. Mack, even without scoring in the final game at Virginia Tech Wednesday, will have at least a 26.6 average.

But is Mack's future secure at East Carolina? Coach Larry Gillman has said that he is giving thought to resigning, and reportedly told someone this weekend that if he leaves East Carolina, Mack will leave also.

That will be a difficult decision for the All-America candidate to make, however. He has only one year of eligibility left, and to move to another school of any caliber would cost him a year of sitting out. That cannot help him.

Reasonably, it would seem that Mack's options are two at the most. Finish his final year here next season, or apply for the hardship draft and hope. But under this year's new NCAA rules, going hardship costs all remaining eligibility.

Derivation 30-Footer Provides Portland Win

Sometimes the best play is the one that doesn't work.

"We set up three alternatives for the final shot," said Portland Trail Blazers Coach Jack Ramsay. "It just so happened they were all shut off, so Lionel Hollins was literally forced to shoot from the twilight zone."

He said that he felt the pressure of playing before peers was the at home problem of the Pirates. "On the road, I guess they feel that they have no one to impress, so they play better. But who knows?" he said.

Patton was recently quoted in the Chapel Hill-published Proop Sheet as saying that he had watched ECU play Georgia Southern (in Statesboro, Ga., earlier this year) and had seen no defense at all.

"I never made any statement of the kind," Patton denounced. "And I resent anyone making up and publishing such a statement."

But the coach would volunteer some advice for Gillman, should he return next fall. "Vic Bubas tried to tell me the same thing," he said. "Relax and enjoy it. But I doubt if any coach can listen to that and do it. The second thing I'd say is to let the games speak for themselves after the fact rather than before. Now, I'm not trying to criticize, that's just the way I feel. He (Gillman) had a job to do when he came in and he felt that that was the way to do it, since when you get down to the bottom line, it's all on his shoulders."

Would he return to the hardwood? "I don't think so," he replied. "I hate to say never, though. If I can make a go of it in this job, I'll be happy. I've got a friend at (a big-time school) who is an assistant. He expects to be the head coach there in a few years, and told me he was going to be calling me to help him out when he gets the job. I told him no way."

However, the old coach hasn't let it all get out of his blood. "I've moved from head coach at East Carolina to being the assistant coach on my son's third and fourth grade recreation team. And we're unbeaten."

Earlier this year, he set a new school record for points and field goals in a single game. He has also set marks for field goals attempted and made during a season.

Saturday night, he surpassed two more records. He has now scored 667 points, surpassing the old season record of 662 set by Bobby Hodges back in 1953-54. He has also assured himself of finishing with more than Hodges' current school record for a season average with 26.5 points a game. Mack, even without scoring in the final game at Virginia Tech Wednesday, will have at least a 26.6 average.

But is Mack's future secure at East Carolina? Coach Larry Gillman has said that he is giving thought to resigning, and reportedly told someone this weekend that if he leaves East Carolina, Mack will leave also.

That will be a difficult decision for the All-America candidate to make, however. He has only one year of eligibility left, and to move to another school of any caliber would cost him a year of sitting out. That cannot help him.

Reasonably, it would seem that Mack's options are two at the most. Finish his final year here next season, or apply for the hardship draft and hope. But under this year's new NCAA rules, going hardship costs all remaining eligibility.

Sometimes the best play is the one that doesn't work.

"We set up three alternatives for the final shot," said Portland Trail Blazers Coach Jack Ramsay. "It just so happened they were all shut off, so Lionel Hollins was literally forced to shoot from the twilight zone."

Hollins lofted a high-arching jumper from 30 feet out on the left side and then watched it bank off the backboard and through the net as the final buzzer sounded to give the undermanned Trail Blazers a dramatic 100-99 National Basketball Association victory over the Chicago Bulls Sunday.

"The ball was supposed to go deep to either Lloyd Neal or Tom Owens, but when (Chicago center Artis) Gilmore choked off the corner, I held the ball and forced it up," said Hollins.

Portland played the game with the minimum eight men, Maurice Lucas, Dave Twardzik and Larry Steele all being sidelined with injuries.

But Lloyd Neal picked up the slack, scoring a career-high 35 points.

In other NBA games Sunday, the Seattle SuperSonics stopped the Philadelphia 76ers 99-97, the Milwaukee Bucks edged the New Orleans Jazz 122-120 in overtime, the Atlanta Hawks trimmed the Buffalo Braves 119-117, the Boston Celtics beat the New Jersey Nets 94-92, the Washington Bullets defeated the Golden State Warriors 121-110 and the Detroit Pistons beat the Los Angeles Lakers 127-124.

On defense, Dye said no player particularly stood out, but linebacker Mike Brewington made some good plays.

The team will continue practice this week, with a possible scrimmage on Thursday, before taking off next week for spring break.

Patton said he was following the Pirates as closely as he could this year. "It would seem like they are having the same problems this year that they had last year. It seems tough to win at home, too."

Doyle will report to the division superintendent and, in addition to his other duties, will be available for special assignments.

OFFERING VISA

First Citizens Bank & Trust Co. announced plans to offer Visa cards. R. M. McClain, senior vice president and supervisor of the bank's Consumer Loan Department, said the bank received approval from National BankAmericard Inc. to begin issuing the cards.

Currently, the statewide bank is offering Master Charge and will begin formally offering Visa within a few weeks, he said.

McClain reported that he expected the program to be in full operation in March and that present customers of the bank could expect to receive a formal offering of Visa within the next few weeks.

Volunteers Out On Heart Sunday

Doorbells rang all over North Carolina on Heart Sunday, Feb. 26, as neighborhood volunteers visited residents to leave educational materials and ask for donations to the Heart Fund, according to Camille Archie, Pitt County chairman of the Heart County Heart Association.

"If you were not at home, you found an envelope in which you could mail your contribution, and we hope you will do just that," she added.

"Cardiovascular disease is the most life-threatening health problem in our area, our state, and the nation," Archie continued.

"The death rate has declined somewhat in recent years, though it still continues to kill more people than all other causes combined, and more are having to learn to live with some form of heart or blood vessel illness.

"We must continue to support Heart Association programs of research, education, and community services for patients and the public if we hope to make more significant inroads against our Number One Killer," she added.

"For this reason, your Pitt County Heart Association hopes that you will use your not-at-home envelope to mail your tax-deductible gift to the Heart Fund, and help us fight for your life."

Sunday Saw 2 Accidents

An estimated $675 property damage resulted from two collisions investigated by Greenville Police Sunday.

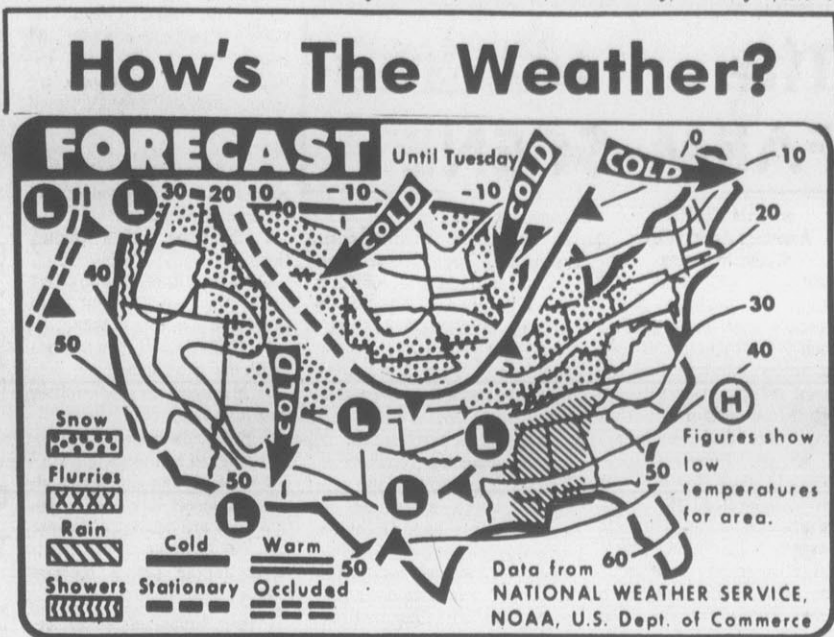

Officers reported heaviest damage resulted from a 10:27 a.m. collision at the intersection of Fifth and Contentnea Streets involving cars driven by Tony Denison Perkins of 805 West Fifth St., and Eddie Lee Barnes of 1308 Myrtle Ave.

Q.1—East-West vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠83 ♥KQJ72 ♦A874 ♠AQ
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♠ 1 ♣ Pass Pass
Dble. Pass 2NT Pass ?

What action do you take?
A.—North has not made a particularly strong bid. If he had good all around values, he would have made a free bid of one no trump over West's one spade interference. At this vulnerability we would pass. If we were vulnerable, we might take a shot at game.

Q.2—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠6 ♥93 ♦KQ10764 ♠K972
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♣ Pass 1NT Pass
2 ♣ Pass ?

What action do you take?
A.—Pass. North's rebid in this sequence should guarantee a six-card suit. Since there are virtually no prospects for game, get out of the auction as quickly as possible. A bid of three diamonds may not uncover a better fit and all you will have accomplished is to increase the level of the auction and the danger of a penalty double.

Q.3—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠Q965 ♥K104 ♦AKJ1094
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♣ Pass 2 ♣ Pass
3 ♣ Pass 4 ♣ Pass ?

What action do you take?
A.—In terms of high cards, your hand is minimum, yet your good six-card suit offers excellent trick-taking potential. You should not yet rule out slam possibilities. Your hand is worth one further move, and we suggest four clubs as the most descriptive bid.

Q.4—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠AJ10 ♥A762 ♦AQ84 ♠KJ
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♣ Pass 2 ♣ Pass
3 ♣ Pass 3NT Pass ?

What action do you take?
A.—Your partner has gone out of his way to show you a singleton diamond, but that is just what you did not want to hear. Most of your strength is concentrated in partner's short suit, and that means duplication of values for suit play. Bid three no trump to tell partner that you have the diamonds well stopped.

Q.5—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠A87 ♥95 ♦Q9652 ♠843
Partner opens the bidding with one spade. What do you respond?

Q.6—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AJ10 ♥A762 ♦AQ84 ♠KJ
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♣ Pass 2 ♣ Pass
3 ♣ Pass 3NT Pass ?

What action do you take?
A.—Had partner responded at the one-level, you would have shown your 19 HCP by jumping to two no trump. Since partner's response was at the two-level, you now have to jump to three no trump to show your strength.

Q.7—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠J6 ♥AK10952 ♦7 ♠A1062
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♣ Pass 3 ♣ Pass
3 ♣ Pass 3NT Pass ?

What action do you take?
A.—In terms of high cards, your hand is minimum, yet your good six-card suit offers excellent trick-taking potential. You should not yet rule out slam possibilities. Your hand is worth one further move, and we suggest four clubs as the most descriptive bid.

Q.8—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠J2 ♥984 ♦AKJ ♠QJ872
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♣ Pass 2 ♣ Pass
2 ♣ Pass ?

What action do you take?
A.—Your partner has gone out of his way to show you a singleton diamond, but that is just what you did not want to hear. Most of your strength is concentrated in partner's short suit, and that means duplication of values for suit play. Bid three no trump to tell partner that you have the diamonds well stopped.

What do you bid now?

A.—It is simply a question of whether to play a small or a grand slam. That should depend solely on partner's trump holding—our clubs should take care of any heart losers he may have. We would jump to five no trump—the Grand Slam Force, asking partner to bid seven if he holds two of the top three honors in the agreed trump suit, spades.

Q.4—East-West vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠K952 ♥QJ1094 ♦Q82 ♠7
The bidding has proceeded:
West North East South
1 ♣ Pass 1 ♣ Pass
2 ♣ Dble. Pass ?

What action do you take?
A.—Pass. Partner's double is for penalties. Had he wanted you to bid a suit, he would have made a takeout double of one club. With your fine defensive values, you should anticipate a rewarding set.

Q.5—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠A87 ♥95 ♦Q9652 ♠843
Partner opens the bidding with one spade. What do you respond?

A.—The choice is between a raise to two spades and one no trump. We would be inclined to make the less encouraging response of one no trump, despite our ruffing value, because we have an absolute minimum. Give us a fourth spade instead of a fifth diamond, however, and we would bid two spades.

Q.6—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AJ10 ♥A762 ♦AQ84 ♠KJ
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♣ Pass 2 ♣ Pass
3 ♣ Pass 3NT Pass ?

What action do you take?

An end to the spring-like weather in North Carolina is in sight due to a storm system developing over Texas.

This morning it was cold and crisp over North Carolina. Only a few thin clouds were observed in the sky and these had little effect upon the falling temperatures. At daybreak thermometer readings were in the 20s over all the state except in the 30s on the outer banks.

High pressure drifting eastward controlled the Tar Heel weather today. Winds were light and variable under sunny skies. Highs will be mostly in the 40s but will range from the upper 30s in the northern mountains to the low 50s along the coast.

Cloudiness will spread over

By SAM UZZELL, Assistant Agricultural Extension Agent

Last year will go down in history as perhaps North Carolina's most severe growing season ever. If you talk to other folks around the state, they will think of 1977 as, "too cold," the "hottest summer," the "wettest spring," the "driest summer," and so on. None of these statements about the same year were exaggerated. But there were other factors in addition to the weather that made a bad situation worse.

One entomologist and North Carolina State University called 1977, "the year of the army worm." The past growing season will probably be a year that is used as a reference point for all infestations of the army worms for the next few decades. Despite many applications of pesticides such as carbaryl (Sevin) or methomyl (Lannate or Nudrin), the fall army worm seemed to keep proliferating. Coastal Bermudagrass pastures in one county were said to have as many as 25 larvae per square foot. Other crops suffered under populations of the army worm that were much less severe than this.

In a year such as last year, no amount of pesticide would be effective in controlling the pest unless several well-timed applications were made. Of course, the parasites and predators that feed upon "worms" and help a great deal in holding down pest populations are eliminated early. Once the natural controls that compete with many of our serious caterpillar pests are moved, pesticides must be judiciously and regularly applied.

Techniques are being developed that help alleviate some of the difficult problems involved in using insecticides and using them to the best advantage. These techniques are based upon a properly timed spray program that is intended to:

- 1 - Reduce the pest population when the pest is most vulnerable to chemical treatment;
- 2 - Minimize cost of production;
- 3 - Have as little adverse effect upon the environment and beneficial insects as possible;
- 4 - Utilize varietal resistance to insects, if available;
- 5 - Maximize net profit rather than high yield;
- 6 - Relate the need to spray insecticides to a "threshold level" (where a certain number of insects or insect larvae in a certain area are causing economic loss. An example is two hornworm larvae per 5 tobacco plants, etc.).

Proper timing of sprays requires surveying the fields to obtain information about insect populations and the potential damage that can result from their presence. Surveying pest populations is a very critical part of any pest management program. Scouting fields once a week or every 10 days by visual inspection is perhaps the primary method of proper surveying. It has been said many times that you cannot look through a windshield and know what is going on in your field.

Many areas of our state have established pest management programs that hire college students on a set fee per acre to look through the fields and monitor insect pest populations on a regular basis. More and more this will become a common practice simply because it works, and it pays off.

If scouting is not a part of the program, then perhaps blacklight traps can be used to determine approximate adult insect levels and peak adult flights. The blacklight trap is particularly useful with lepidopterous pests such as corn earworms, hornworms and perhaps fall army worm. The blacklight has been used in Alabama as a method of monitoring flights of the budworm and bollworm into cotton fields.

In Alabama, scouts were the primary detection tool. However, a blacklight system was found to be a valuable tool. By checking the blacklight trap for numbers of adult moths and simultaneously counting the cotton bollworm and cotton bud-

Offer Reward To Tar Heels

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) - The state of Pennsylvania has begun a reward campaign to lure insiders in North Carolina cigarette smuggling schemes to turn informant.

The campaign began Sunday with an advertisement in the News and Observer of Raleigh, offering 50 cents per carton for information leading to confiscation of cigarettes bought in North Carolina, which charges 2 cents tax per pack, for sale in Pennsylvania, which charges 18 cents.

Informants could be paid as much as $30,000 for a tractor-trailer load of cigarettes.

Milt Lopus, Pennsylvania secretary of revenue, said the advertisement had drawn four phone calls on the first day to numbers listed in the ad, which he said might be the forerunner of similar notices in other North Carolina papers and on radio and television.

"We can afford to pay $30,000 reward for a tractor-trailer load," he said. "Since we also seized those confiscated cigarettes, we can't lose."

worm eggs in the nearby fields, researchers found that the increase and decrease of eggs in the adjacent fields closely followed the number of adults captured in the blacklight trap. Furthermore, it was found that the two major flights of the bollworm and budworm occurred in late July and late August.

By knowing the life cycle and biology of a pest insect, we can base management control strategies on these facts. It is now known that plants may be able to yield well even though they may have lost some of their foliage. The stage of growth that the plant is in determines how much damage can be dealt with. A balance between insect populations and damage to the crop so that good yields can be attained without heavy outlays of time and money for insecticide application is the goal of a successful pest management program.

The upcoming growing season will see more emphasis placed upon pest management in soybeans, tobacco, peanuts and grain crops. There is not too much that can be done in a year such as last year with overwhelming populations of a pest species. But in a "normal" growing season much time and effort can be saved with monitored insect pest population levels and careful chemical control of them.

2-to-1 approval for Mr. Carter's Mideast performance.

During Israeli Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan's recent visit here, his congressional briefings did not end with the habitual spontaneous outbursts of pro-Israel support. Instead, the mood was somber, even hostile.

Despite this clear cautionary signal, the American Jewish community is now gearing up the toughest campaign against an American President since Gerald Ford and Henry Kissinger were backed against the wall in their ill-fated "reassessment" of U.S. policy toward Israel in the spring of 1975. The new campaign is to teach Mr. Carter and Secretary of State Cyrus Vance, as Ford and Kissinger learned, that the pro-Israel bloc is too strong to be challenged - even in the present political climate.

Behind the threatened aircraft sale lies what remains of Sadat's peace initiative, now stalled in haggling and recrimination. Seeking to shore up his indispenible links with Saudi Arabia, President Carter made an understandable and quite likely unavoidable decision. But in so doing, he may have gravely undermined his great dreams for the Mideast.

Congress might feel it's too expensive to eliminate an entire month from the calendar. It would mean redoing the fiscal year, and also moving up April when everyone has to cough up taxes.

"All right, then. If they can't do away with it altogether, why can't they put February after July and nobody would gripe about 28 crummy days, if they knew they had August to look forward to?"

prove a point about the South, again, after they proved it one in 1976?" they ask.

The question can't be answered now.

But if in fact Carter's regional pull is diminished next time, more traditional campaign factors would loom larger.

He would, of course, have incumbency as his issue, and if times are relatively good, that is a big head start on any challenger.

Another of those traditional factors is ideology, which is where Scammon and Wattenberg see the potential risk to Carter's Southern base.

"How vulnerable would President Carter be in his home region if he can readily be depicted as pro-Panama giveaway," pro-quotas, welfare, antigrowth, pro-Cuba and so on?" they ask.

The answer is very vulnerable.

But no challenger is going to find it easy to paint Carter into such corners as that. And he has plenty of time, as Scammon and Wattenberg note, to shift course as necessary "if he feels politically threatened in the South, or anywhere else for that matter."
