Annexation Decision Slated

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer

The City Council has agreed to place the controversial industrial area annexation matter on the agenda for the regular March 9 meeting to decide whether to abandon or pursue the study.

Council members, meeting last night in a workshop session, discussed the issue and agreed that a decision should be made on the fate of the annexation plan at a public meeting.

Mayor Percy Cox reminded the members at the outset of the workshop, attended by media representatives, that he had indicated when the feasibility study was initiated that if he decided at any time the annexation might be detrimental to the city, he would let them know his feelings.

"I'm of the opinion that we have come to the point that I have to recommend to the Council that we pull off of the annexation of the industrial area," the mayor told the Council members.

Cox said he had contacted "a lot of people and talked to a lot of people" and he had "been led to believe...the annexation might hurt the city."

Council member Mrs. Mildred McGrath expressed her feeling that the annexation "was right at the time we started looking at it and I still think it is right."

Mrs. McGrath said she had expected the strong reaction to the annexation proposal from industry and asserted that, "I still think Greenville has a lot to offer them."

Cox pointed out, "What I'm saying is that we can win the battle and lose the war." Cox added, "As far as I'm concerned' I'm off of it."

The mayor related that one of the industries in the area had indicated that if the firm was taken in to the city, it would "put them out of the competitive market." He said, "It was proved to me that it would do that."

According to Cox, one industry that had purchased a site in the industrial park area is now looking at another site between Kinston and Ayden.

Fire Claims Restaurant

An early morning blaze today destroyed the Candlewick Inn located five miles west of Greenville on the old Stantonsburg Highway.

Bell Arthur Fire Department was the first unit to respond to the 3:56 call. Firemen, finding one section of the 12,000-square foot structure completely involved in fire, sounded the alarm for assisting units.

Eight additional units, including Red Oak, Farmville, Falkland, Winterville, Staton-House, Stokes, Clark's Neck, and Black Jack, arrived shortly.

"Seventy-five men fought the blaze," said Bobby Joyner, Pitt County Fire Marshal.

He added that at 10 a.m. today the remains of the colonial-style restaurant were still hot. Firemen had the blaze under control by 8 a.m.

Damage to the building and contents was estimated at $240,000. "It's a total loss," said Joyner.

There were no injuries reported.

"All that's left is a couple of pots and pans," said owner W.E. "Bill" Dansey Jr.

He added that there was a "lot of speculation" as to the origin of the fire, but that he did not know what actually caused the incident or where it started.

When asked if he plans to rebuild Candlewick, Dansey said, "We don't know at this time what we'll do. According to Dansey, replacement costs of the structure and equipment would run much higher than the $240,000 estimated damage.

The restaurant had a seating capacity of 450 and employed approximately 60 persons.

Firemen utilized a water supply near the building by drafting water from a swimming pool. Water was also brought in by tanker trucks refilling from nearby hydrants.

According to Joyner, cause of the fire is "undertermined at this time, but the investigation is underway."

TRADE MISSION

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Governor Jim Hunt announced today that he will lead a 13-day trade mission to Europe and Israel next month. He said he would leave for Europe April 2 and return April 15, visiting Germany, Switzerland, Israel and the United Kingdom.

WILL VISIT ASIA

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — U.S. Ambassador Andrew Young will leave New York on Friday for a visit to Thailand, Malaysia and Singapore, the United States' U.N. mission says.

More Families Decide On Lower Standard Of Living; 'Dream' Fading

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — More than a third of U.S. families interviewed in a study on the impact of inflation and recession said they had decided to lower their standard of living and had lost faith in the American dream because of economic problems.

The study, conducted by David Caplovitz, a professor of sociology at the Graduate School of the City University of New York, also found that more than a fifth of those surveyed — 22 percent — said they were less interested than they used to be in owning expensive things.

Thirty-five percent said they were going to lower their living standard and an equal number indicated lost faith in the American dream — which was not defined. Based on answers to the questions about living standard, the American dream and the expensive items, participants in the study were ranked, on a scale of zero to three, as to whether they had lowered their aspirations because of the economic crunch.

Fifty-six percent were ranked one or more, indicating lowered aspirations to some degree. Only 2 percent, however, were ranked as having lowered their hopes considerably.

Caplovitz's study, "Making Ends Meet: How Families Cope with Inflation and Recession," was based on interviews in May and June 1976 with 1,982 people in the metropolitan areas of New York, Atlanta, San Francisco and Detroit.

Poor and retired people were deliberately oversampled because they were most likely to have felt the impact of the economic crunch; single, divorced and separated people were undersampled, because the study was designed primarily to deal with family groups.

Caplovitz measured two types of inflation: objective, meaning the gap between income and rising prices, and subjective, involving the degree to which a family was suffering.

Among the highlights of the report, released Tuesday:

—Inflation has hit hardest at the poor; 43 percent of the poor said they were a lot worse off today than they were a few years ago, compared to 25 percent of the retired, 21 percent of the blue collar workers and 12 percent of the white collar workers.

—The retired are better able than all groups except white collar workers to cope with inflation. When Caplovitz measured subjective inflation, he found 58 percent of the poor suffering to a high degree, compared with 37 percent of the blue collar workers, 21 percent of the retired and 18 percent of the white collar workers.

—Thirty-eight percent of the families surveyed engaged in one or more "income-raising strategies," including working overtime, having an additional member of the family get a job or having the chief wage earner get a second job.

—Half the families said they had cut their food budgets; 49 percent cut back on entertainment and an equal number said they ate out less. Twenty percent postponed dental care to save money and 15 percent put off medical treatment.

Fifteen Years On Local Farm Scene

STILL WORKING — Leroy James, who has served Pitt County agricultural interests for the past 15 years, is still working hard in his new position as county chairman of the Agricultural Extension Service. (Photo by Debbie Jackson)

Leroy James has been working with area farmers for a long time now — 15 years to be exact.

Today, James who has been an agent with the Pitt County Agricultural Extension Agency since 1962, will become the new County Extension Chairman.

The Hertford County native was appointed chairman, effective March 1, by the Pitt County Board of Commissioners in conjunction with the Extension Service. The announcement was made earlier this month by Alton George, chairman of the Commissioners, and Dr. George Hyatt Jr., director of the North Carolina Agricultural Extension Service.

James' previous job at the agency has been working with soybeans, small grain, housing, and community resource development.

HOME BURNED

The home of Daisy Jones and her children and grandchildren at 412 Perry Street, Farmville, burned Sunday night.

The family members are staying with various relatives and they need a place to live. They also need household goods and clothing.

Mrs. Jones wears size 14-16 clothes and a seven-and-a-half shoe; Beulah, 21 wears size five slacks, size nine-10 coat, and size eight-and-a-half shoe; Mary, 18, wears size nine-10 clothes, 12 coat, and an eight-and-a-half shoe; Reneita, 15, wears size 9-10 clothes, 12 coat, and eight-and-a-half shoe; Katie, 13, wears size 8-10 clothes, 11 coat, and seven shoe; and a 19-month-old girl wears size 3-4 clothes and size 4 shoe.

Becky Starkey of the Pitt County Department of Social Services will answer any inquiries about the family's needs (758-2167) and will accept gifts for them at the Department of Social Services, 709 Johnston Street, Greenville (mailing address — P. O. Drawer 1546). Donations are tax-deductible, she said. She said she will see that anything anyone wishes to donate, which cannot be delivered to Social Services or the Joneses, is picked up. She'll also see, she said, that anything the family cannot use is given to some other person in need.

The Dollar Slumps To New Lows In Trading

LONDON (AP) — The value of the dollar dropped below two West German marks on the Frankfurt foreign exchange for the first time today in very nervous and hectic trading.

As the fall of the dollar continued throughout Western Europe, the price of gold soared to a three-year high in London, $184 an ounce.

The U.S. currrency bought only 1.9930 marks in morning trading on the Frankfurt exchange, down from 2.0326 marks Tuesday.

Tourists and Americans living in Germany were already getting less than two marks for their dollar from banks and currency exchanges. But this was the first time the dollar dropped below the two-mark level in interbank trading, a sort of wholesale market.

"I can see no economic reason for the dollar being so low," said one London dealer as the pound traded at $1.9443, up from $1.9387 Tuesday. "But the ball is rolling, and while it is profitable for people to sell dollars they will go on doing so until the central bankers do something about it."

In the Middle East, the Kuwait government said if the dollar continues to weaken, it would call for an emergency meeting of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries to discuss whether to raise the basic price of oil.

OPEC's base price has been frozen at $12.70 a barrel since last July, and the freeze was expected to continue at least until next July. But the OPEC nations are paid in dollars, and the decline in the American currency is reducing their buying power.

$641,932 In Tax Shares Distributed In County

Pitt County received $641,932 in net distributal tax proceeds for the quarter ending Dec. 31, it was reported by Mark Lynch, Secretary of the N.C. Department of Revenue.

On a per capita distribution basis figured relative to population, Greenville received $166,606 of the total amount. The report listed Greenville's population as 33,740.

Farmville, based on a population of 5,150, received $25,430 of the total distribution, according to Lynch, while Ayden, with a population of 3,880, received $19,159.

Other Pitt towns, their populations and receipts, included: Grifton, 2,220, $10,962; Winterville, 2,120, $10,468; Bethel, 1,850, $9,135; Simpson, 540, $2,666; Fountain, 450, $2,222; Grimesland, 420, $2,073; and Falkland, 130, $641.

Total population for Pitt County was listed as 79,500 with the county itself receiving $392,566 of the total proceeds and the balance allotted to the ten towns in the county.

Greene County, figured on an ad valorem basis, received $37,243 in net distributions with $34,690 going to the county itself and the balance allotted to Snow Hill, $2,009; Hookerton, $346; and Walstonburg, $197.

Lenoir County received $477,536 on an ad valorem basis with $359,019 going to the county and the remaining funds distributed to Kinston, $106,319; LaGrange, $8,921; Pink Hill, $3,010; and Grifton (Lenoir's share), $265.

According to the report, Martin County received $157,656, based on an ad valorem levy, with $128,056 going to the county and nine towns sharing in the balance.

Martin County towns receiving shares included: Williamston, $22,742; Robersonville, $4,851; Jamesville, $637; Oak City, $499; Hamilton, $339; Everetts, $316; Parmele, $125; Bear Grass, $52; and Hassell, $35.

Beaufort County, figured on a per capita formula, received a total of $278,360 in distributions with $205,682 going to the county and seven towns sharing in the balance. Receiving shares were: Washington, $48,786; Belhaven, $12,245; Aurora, $3,816; Chocowinity, $3,180; Washington Park, $2,862; Bath, $1,219; and Pantego, $1,166.

TEACCH: Aiding Autistic Children, Their Parents

By CHARLES BABINGTON

CHAPEL HILL — There are an estimated 2,000 children in North Carolina with severe communication and behavior disorders.

Many of them can utter only the sounds of an infant, although they are of school age. Others make no sound at all. And some do not respond even to their names, though they can hear.

Yet some of them show flashes of average, or even above-average intelligence.

These are the victims of autism and related communication disorders. Until fairly recently they and their parents had little choice but to seek help from specialist after specialist, social agency after social agency.

Today, North Carolina autistic children and their parents can get off that not-so-merry-go-round thanks to the program TEACCH (Treatment and Education of Autistic and related Communications handicapped Children).

Established in 1972 as a division of the psychiatry department of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill School of Medicine, TEACCH is the nation's only statewide autism program designed not merely for children, but for their parents as well.

With the recent opening of centers in Charlotte and Wilmington, TEACCH now has five regional, state-supported headquarters. The others are in Asheville, Chapel Hill and Greenville.

Employing parents as co-therapists rather than regarding them as the cause of an autistic child's problems is one of TEACCH's most important contributions to psychiatric treatment, says Director Eric Schopler, UNC-CH professor of psychiatry and psychology. He and Dr. Robert Reichler (now at the University of Washington), co-founded TEACCH, and were the first to employ this technique.

Prior to their innovations, Schopler says traditional psychiatrists, psychologists and educators felt that parents were the major cause of the child's autistic behavior, and therefore should have little or no part in his treatment. But as TEACCH children (and their parents) improved more than did those in many other programs, mental health agencies and departments of education throughout the country and in other nations invited Schopler and Reichler to come tell about, and help implement, TEACCH's methods.

Today, Schopler says, "the parents' role as co-therapists is much more widely accepted."

Parents who bring their child to TEACCH center consult therapists, and together they decide on a training program to meet that family's specific needs. Early goals may include teaching the child to look people in the eye and to associate objects with words.

"TEACCH personnel," Schopler says, "show parents how to express approval when the child learns new skills, and disapproval with interfering behavior so as to maximize his progress."

Often the parents sit behind a one-way window and watch a therapist work with the child. This allows the parents not only to learn new teaching techniques, he says, but also to observe their child dealing with someone else.

Then they practice daily with the child at home. About once a week the family returns to the TEACCH center where the child again works with a therapist, who exchanges observations and suggestions with the parents and helps decide what changes, if any, are needed in the home teaching, the home teaching.

Besides the approximately 150 children who come each week to TEACCH centers, another 130 autistic and similarly handicapped children attend TEACCH's 22 classrooms throughout the state.

These classrooms (except the one affiliated with the center in Chapel Hill) are in public schools. TEACCH trains the instructors, and helps the public school systems direct and fund the classes. Some of the less impaired students attend regular classes also.

Although all TEACCH instructors concentrate on communication, Schopler says, "they also teach survival skills needed by handicapped children. Some classes emphasize mechanical skills as are needed for vocational training and sheltered workshops."

Adolescents in an Asheville class have learned to assemble electric switches. In Wilmington, children learn community living skills such as making a bed and using a kitchen.

TEACCH also consults and advises a Greensboro group home for autistic persons that is operated by the N.C. Society for Autistic Children. The society, comprised primarily of parents, works closely with TEACCH to help provide better treatment for autistic children throughout the state.

TEACCH therapists and teachers continue to seek new ways to communicate with autistic children and bring them out of their worlds of self-absorption. With the more severely language-handicapped children they currently are working on sign language and on games that teach abstract concepts, which will be discussed in part II.

Winesap apples are generally available through late May. They're usually small to medium size and deep bright red with small scattered white dots and are juicy and slightly tart.

Helping Parents Cope Is Important Focus Of Center

"An important focus of the work at the Eastern TEACCH Center is directly with the parents of autistic children to help them better cope with the problems associated with having a handicapped child," said Dr. R. Hal Shigley.

Dr. Shigley is the new director of the center here.

"Many of these parents are actively involved in the Eastern Unit of the North Carolina Society for Autistic Children. Their current project is to raise funds to provide a six-week summer classroom program for their children in Greenville and Washington.

"These classes operate as part of the local school system during the regular school year, but no state or county funds are available for summer programs. The success of their fund raising efforts is especially important because many autistic children appear to regress if instruction is disrupted," he said.

"Also, they have few, if any, other appropriate social or therapeutic outlets during the summer months, as most are unable to establish the usual childhood friendships or engage in the usual childhood activities," Dr. Shigley added.

Dr. Shigley received his Ph.D. in educational psychology from the University of Georgia. Before coming to TEACCH he was an assistant professor in the Department of Psychology at Western Carolina University and a developmental disabilities consultant for the Developmental Evaluation Center, Cullowhee.

Other staff members at the Eastern TEACCH Center include four psychoeducational therapists, Maxine Robinson, Gerry McCall, Terry Dutton and Sally Uzzell, and the secretary, Carol Edwards.

Any person or groups wishing to help with the fund raising effort for the summer program should contact Dr. Paul Dowell, Greenville, 752-1857, or Wiley Woolard, Washington, 946-7268.

Smith-Perkins Vows Spoken

Joy Temple Church of Deliverance was the scene of the Saturday evening wedding ceremony of Shirley Anne Perkins and Clinton Earl Smith.

The single ring ceremony was performed at three o'clock by the Rev. Thomas Dixon.

Parents of the bride are Mr. and Mrs. Thurman Perkins of Greenville. Parents of the bridegroom are Mrs. Alice Bullock of Greenville, and the late Mr. David Earl Cummings.

Wedding music was played by Rondy Fleming and songs were sung by Miss Evelyn Arrington, Lora Arrington and Miss Yvonne Fleming.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. Miss Gwendlyn Smith of Greenville was the bridesmaid and the best man was Oliver Leon Atkinson of Greenville.

The bride is a senior at J. H. Rose High School. The bridegroom is also a graduate of Rose High and is employed at Sutton's. The couple will live in Greenville.

District Winners Named

Members of the Arts Department of the Woman's Club of Greenville received 12 blue ribbons and award certificates at the District 15 Arts Festival.

The festival was hosted by the Williamston Senior and Junior Clubs in the Martin Community College Saturday morning.

The student Rose High winners, sponsored by the local club, were: Philip Broadhurst, sculpture; Harriett Budacz, combination craft; Clyde Owens, wood craft, metal craft and jewelry; Ray Alexander, public speaking; Tyrone Artis, dramatic reading; and Jennifer O'Neal, strings.

Other winners included: Joseph Powell, D. H. Conley High School, orchestral instrument; and Jackie Barnhill, Wellcome Middle School, painting.

Woman's Club members winning were: Mrs. Ernest Holt, literary entry; and Mrs. James H. Smith, crocheted bedspread.

Second place, red ribbon winners were: Scott Gordley, drawing; Sheila Austin, textiles; Jerome Daniels, sewing; and Debbie Whichard, literary entry.

Mrs. Larry Lewis, district arts chairman, announced that blue ribbon district winners would be entered in the N. C. Federation of Women's Club Arts Festival. The state event will be held Saturday, March 18, at Salem College Winston-Salem.

Club members attending were Mrs. Holt, Mrs. Delphia Corbett, Mrs. Robert Ison, Mrs. E. T. Czyz, Mrs. W. A. Pollard, Mrs. George Clapp and Mrs. W. R. Roseveare. Mrs. Phil Dixon, Tammy Stocks and David Pate were also in attendance.

We would like to apologize for the unsatisfactory stage conditions at the 11 A.M. showing of Pinocchio on Saturday and any inconvenience it caused those attending.

Reader Should Replace Vase

DEAR ABBY: I recently borrowed a glass flower vase from a friend. When I went to her house to return it, she wasn't home, but her next-door neighbor volunteered to see that she got it, so I left it with her.

Well, the neighbor's little boy accidentally broke the vase. It can be replaced, but it is rather expensive, so I told this neighbor that I thought she should pay half and I would pay half. But she said she was only trying to do me a favor and she didn't see why she should pay anything. Who is responsible in this case?

CHICAGO

DEAR CHICAGO: You are.

DEAR ABBY: For several years I've served as a paramedic on a volunteer basis with the county ambulance service. I enjoy it, but I'm thinking of giving it up. I can handle accident victims, drownings, coronaries, but I'm just not up to facing one more abused child. Last night I held a beautiful 5-year-old child in my arms who had been beaten so badly she looked as though she had been in a wreck. With her tiny hand clutched tightly around my forefinger, she managed to whisper, "I was bad," before she died. (The parents didn't realize they were "hurting" her that much—they were only trying to teach her a lesson!)

I would love to adopt a child, and even went through all the red tape single people must go through in applying for a child. I love children and I know I'd be a good mother, but I'm gay and if the adoption agency found out, that would be the end of it.

Abby, please tell parents who are maiming, killing and psychologically abusing their children to seek competent help. They are so lucky to have children. There are a lot of us who would give anything to call ourselves parents.

NO NAME OR TOWN, PLEASE

DEAR NO NAME: Nearly every city has a hot-line for parents who abuse their children. I hope your letter serves as a reminder that there IS help for such child abusers. Call your local information for the number.

Getting married? Whether you want a formal church wedding or a simple do-your-own-thing ceremony, get Abby's new booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding." Send $1 and a long, stamped (24 cents) self-addressed envelope to Abby: 132 Lasky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.

District Officer Visits Group

Mrs. Rose Sweesy of Goldsboro was a special guest at the meeting of the VFW Auxiliary held Thursday evening. She is District Two president.

Mrs. Carrie West, president, introduced Mrs. Sweesy, who praised the group for their work.

The state convention will be held in Charlotte June 23-25. Mrs. West displayed an award from the Salvation Army. Mrs. Genes Boyd, Gold Star chairman, reported the Gold Star banquet will be held in April.

Mrs. Margaret Hudson, Cancer Aid and Research chairman, announced $60 had been collected this month. Mrs. Doris Harris, Hospital and VAVS chairman, asked members to save magazines for hospitalized veterans.

Mrs. Alice Moseley, Mrs. Mabel Register and Mrs. Martie Squires served refreshments.

Wrap cooled quick breads in foil or plastic and leave at room temperature overnight. They will slice easier the next day.

How's The Weather?

WEATHER FORECAST — Snow is forecast today from the northern Plains and northern Rockies to the southern Plains. Rain is due from the southern Plains to the western Gulf. Cold temperatures are expected for most of the nation. (AP Laserphoto Map)

By The Associated Press

A mixture of rain and snow that visited a wide area of North Carolina Tuesday was getting in its last l lilickcks today with more snow ranging from the northern mountains into the coastal plain counties.

Snow fell around the Raleigh area, Greensboro, and Winston-Salem, and on to Wilson, where the temperature hovered at 33 degrees at mid-morning.

There was little sticking outside the mountains and the storm system moved on offshore after moving up from the Gulf.

Cold weather is expected to settle over the state tonight with temperatures dipping to the teens in the mountains. Elsewhere, the lows will range to the low and mid 30s on the Outer Banks.

Low temperatures this morning included 30 at Greensboro, 32 at Raleigh, 34 at Asheville, 35 at Charlotte and 37 at Wilmington. Highs today were expected to range in the 40s.

Another storm is expected to form in the western Gulf of Mexico by late Thursday, and, meanwhile, snow and rain will be developing late Thursday over the mountains.

Science Fair At Academy

Pace Academy's Upper School Science Director Ann Burden announces a schoolwide Science Fair to be held March 1 and 2.

Students in each grade have been working since before Christmas on projects in various subject areas.

Judges for the Pace Academy Science Fair are Mrs. Elizabeth Savage and Mrs. Bonnie Harrington, both former teachers, and Dr. Irvin Lawrence and Dr. Hubert Burden, both of the E.C.U. Medical School Department of Anatomy.

First, second, and third place honors will be awarded in the elementary school according to grade level. First, second, and third places, as well as honorable mention, will be awarded in the upper school.

The Science Fair will be open to the public on March 2, from 7-8 p.m. and awards will be presented that evening. All exhibits will be on display in the Pace Academy gym.

Coal Contract A Cliff-Hanger

It took negotiation at the White House level, but a contract was devised by the United Mine Workers and the coal industry last weekend.

Now the nation will have a wait of several days before it is determined that the contract is acceptable to rank and file union membership.

While there is still some dissatisfaction among the members, there is no question that the contract, as negotiated, should be accepted.

The tentative contract provides a substantial salary increase for the miners — more than most Americans will get over the next three years. There are also extra health benefits. The miners also won what had been a sticking point, the concession that those who honor wildcat strikes will not be penalized.

We would be the first to concede that coal mining is difficult and dangerous work. At the same time, the proposed contract has made the work pretty rewarding.

Now it is to the good of the miners and the betterment of the nation that the contract be signed and work resumed.

The alternative will be real hardship for the nation. For the miners the alternative could well be invokement of the Taft-Hartley act and seizure of the mining industry by the government.

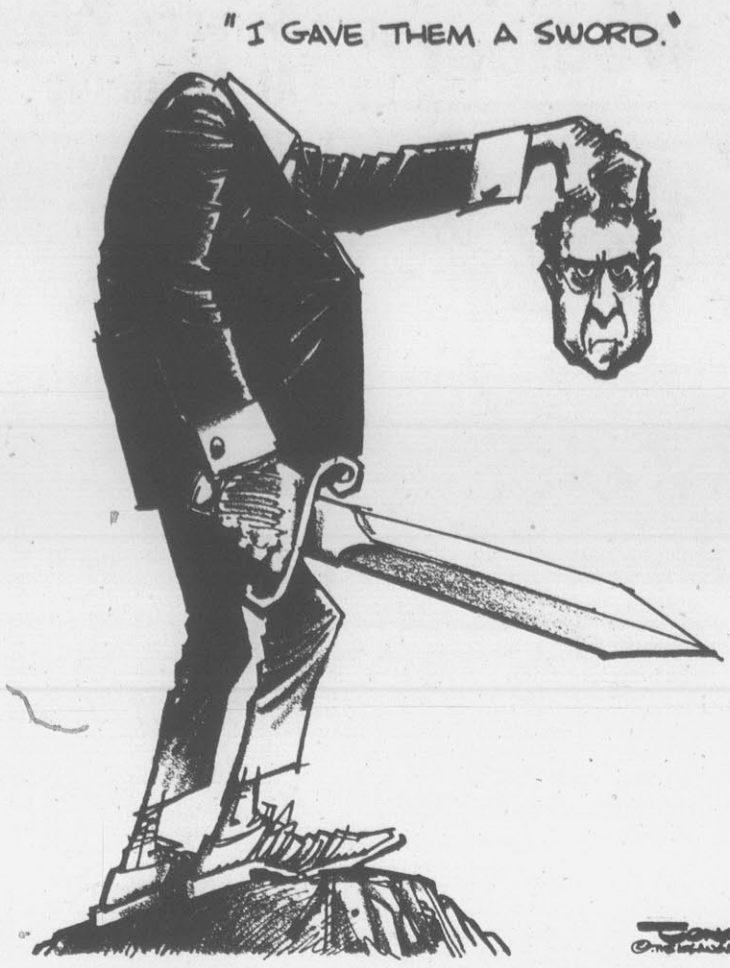

All that can be had has been squeezed out of the present coal mining situation by collective bargaining. The wise move for the miners would be to go back to work.

Israel Is Not Helping Cause Of Peace

The government of Israel is apperently going to continue settling the occupied Arab territories, even in the face of United States' opposition.

This is regrettable. Israel must know that at least some of the occupied lands must be returned if there is to be any chance of negotiated peace. Why then, continue the construction of settlements in the areas?

Israel should declare a moritorium on construction in the occupied areas so that peace talks can continue.

Showdown Stage Was Set

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — The stage had been set for a showdown between Marvin L. Speight, Jr., chairman of the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board, and J. Phil Carlton, secretary of the Department of Crime Control and Public Safety, when the chief of the ABC law enforcement division stalked to the front of the room.

John B. Brooks is a huge, square man whose gruff drawl and clipped "Yups" and "Nopes" remind listeners of old-time western movies.

He heads a team of 82 ABC agents, 12 supervisors, and two assistant directors. Their jobs are to investigate requests for beer and wine licenses, and keep tabs on places which sell beverages to make sure they abide the law and numerous regulations.

"How do you get along with these two .. Secretary Carlton and Mr. Speight?" a member of the legislative Governmental Operations Commission asked. Then the lawmaker chuckled: "Maybe you better not answer that."

Brooks answered: "Fine."

Where would your law agency be most effective? the legislator wondered.

Either Way

"I could work either place," Brooks growled.

At that, Chairman Speight exploded in his seat at the back of the hearing room: "Don't you make me the goat in this, John. I don't want to be the goat.

"Now you get down to it ... haven't you come and set in my office and cried ... haven't you come to my motel room and cried to me and told me you couldn't get anything done over there?"

Brooks slowly and carefully admitted, "Yes, I do have a problem with Mr. Felton not coming to me." A.L. Felton is one of two assistant directors, a lifelong friend to Secretary Carlton, and married to Carlton's cousin. He is not a "relative" as one questioner suggested. The two commute daily — from Raleigh to Pinetops. They drive, not riding in a helicopter as one questioner wondered.

Did Brooks agree to having Felton as his assistant? "I approved the appointment but with reservations ... I agreed to the appointment."

Gradually, the shape of the argument came out as members of the legislative commission chaired by Lt. Gov. James C. Green asked the questions they obviously had been primed to ask.

Brooks was named enforcement chief when Speight was still in charge of both the board and the enforcement operation. Carlton took over when the General Assembly approved reorganization, and kept Brooks on board. Carlton found the agency poorly equipped, untrained, and bothered by being the agents in the field while answering to a political board and its chairman.

NOBLITT

L.O. Godwin is the liaison man between the board which Speight chairs and the law enforcement agency in Carlton's shop. Speight complained he couldn't get an appointment to talk to Carlton, and couldn't get answers to his requests for information.

Relations

But he blamed Carlton, not Godwin, whom he put in the job. When Godwin spoke to the legislative commission he had this to say: "Speight is just great, and he's right about what kind of relations we need with agents in the field.

"Some of them get delusions of grandeur when they put on a gun and a badge. Everybody who was ever a little boy wants to play like a lawman."

Godwin said only 10 percent of the work was law work. Carlton said it was 60 percent law enforcement.

What is needed, and what Speight would have provided, he argued, is enforcement "responsive to the people ... more lenience in enforcement. Why some of these agents just walk right in without knocking on the door and don't even ask if they can go look in the backroom. And they just crackdown if somebody sells a beer to a minor .... anybody could sell a beer to a big, strapping six-foot-four fellow by mistake," Godwin argued.

Aides to Gov. Hunt are fuming over the incident: that Speight "went public" with his fight, that Green used the matter for political advantage, that the legislative commission allowed such long debate in public, and that team in-fighting was put on display.

Old Loyalties Stricken

WASHINGTON — I think for me the saddest thing about Watergate is that members of the old Nixon gang have turned against each other. Who would have ever dreamed that on the David Frost show former President Nixon would have implicated John Ehrlichman and Bob Haldeman, whom he considered his "sons," in the coverup of a third-rate burglary?

Who would have thought that John Ehrlichman would write a fiction novel based on President Nixon showing him in such an unfavorable light? How could anyone have predicted that Bob Haldeman, one of the great White House stonewallers, would let down his hair and blow the whistle on Nixon, Charles Colson and Henry Kissinger?

Whatever they did in the past I always said to my wife, "At least you have to admire them for their loyalty to each other."

I always dreamed the Nixon crowd would meet together on the Tenth Anniversary of Watergate and have a nostalgic reunion, reliving those wonderful days when they were all fighting in the White House bunker. They would kid each other about putting on weight and tell outrageous lies about their Watergate War experiences. It would be a scene out of "White Christmas," with John Dean calling up everybody and saying, "Let's go out to San Clemente and show the old man that, while the rest of the country may have forgotten him, those of us who fought with him still really care."

ART BUCHWALD

I could see them gathering on the lawn overlooking the blue Pacific and everyone would break into "Hail to the Chief" as Nixon came out in the suit he wore when he was President. There would be tears in his eyes as he looked at those familiar faces, and then he'd say, "I want you all to shape up. I've never seen such a bunch of sloppy White House aides in my life."

Then they would all sit around the pool drinking California wine and listening to the tapes, once again thinking back on those wonderful days when it was "us" against "them."

But apparently the reunion will never come off. And once again the Nixon Administration people have the media to blame.

If the newspapers, magazines, TV and book publishers hadn't dumped all that money on them, this great group of honorable men might never have ratted on each-other.

The tragedy of post-Watergate is that in order to pay their lawyers, all those involved in the break-in and the coverup had to go their own way to make their stories worth the megabucks their agents had gotten for them.

It is sad for all of us who sat on the sidelines to see these men who went through so much together now at each

Tracks In Good Shape

By DAVID TOMLIN
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Despite heightened concern nationwide for the safety of railroad lines that often carry dangerous chemicals through populous areas, state officials say tracks in North Carolina are in good repair.

"There are only two major carriers in the state — Seaboard Coast Line and Southern," said Rudy Shaw, head of the rail safety section of the state Utilities Commission. "Both their more heavily travelled track is in good shape."

But Shaw said his two inspectors — one for tracks and one for railroad equipment — aren't enough to keep effective watch on railroad safety.

"We're hoping soon to get the money for one more of each," he said.

Shaw's comments came in the wake of disastrous freight train derailments in Florida and Tennessee. Federal officials are blaming the rash of accidents on deteriorated roadbeds and track, caused by neglect by the railroads.

Shaw said his section was only created two years ago, but when his inspectors took the field for the first time they found little evidence of serious neglect.

"We are out in the field three or four days a week, and there are days when we found numerous minor violations, but seldom anything more serious," he said.

He added that the railroads were always "very cooperative" when problems were brought to their attention.

North Carolina has not been troubled by an inordinate number of derailments, Shaw insisted, and the number does not appear to be growing.

Shaw had figures only for the first 11 months of 1976, when he said there were 150 derailments in North Carolina, most of them minor affairs involving only one or two cars.

"I haven't had a chance to get together the 1977 figures," he added, "but I'm sure it's not any greater than 1976. It's probably about the same."

Shaw said there are roughly 6,000 miles of track in North Carolina, of which about 4,000 miles are heavily-travelled "main lines."

Public Forum

Letters submitted for Public Forum must be limited to 300 words.

To the editor:

As we are becoming more aware of the need to conserve energy and make the best possible use of fuel, the wood-burning stove is again making an appearance as a means of heating and cooking. However, along with the increasing resurgence of the wood-burning stove, is also an alarming number of fires which are traceable to careless installation or misuse.

There are pamphlets available and instructions come with the stove which give the information on how to install and use this appliance. In these pamphlets and instructions are some important DO'S AND DON'TS about wood-burning stoves.

1 — DO make sure there is enough clearance between the stove and floors, walls and ceilings.

2 — DO place stove on a fireproof base.

3 — DO have a competent mason inspect the chimney.

4 — Do burn only dry well-seasoned wood.

5 — Do dispose of ashes in a closed metal container outside the house.

6 — Do consider opening a window a crack for ventilation, especially if your house is tightly insulated.

7 — DON'T start a fire with flammable fuels.

8 — DON'T burn trash in the stove. You could start a chimney fire.

9 — DON'T connect a wood stove to a fireplace chimney unless the fire place has been sealed off.

10 — DON'T let a wood fire burn unattended or overnight.

Of course, there are many other important DO'S and DON'Ts, but space does not allow us to list them all. If it sounds hard to follow, in practice it is not. Skill in running a wood-burning stove is something that improves with time and experience. Fire started are not easily stopped, so use all the safety precautions and don't take shortcuts when installing or using a wood-burning stove. Remember, Safety First.

40 Years Ago Today

March 1, 1938

A movement is underway to reorganize the old Carolina Club, a men's social organization known over East Carolina.

The club was founded about the turn-of-the-century and ceased to operate only a few years ago. The former quarters on the second floor of the building now occupied by the J. C. Penny Company are now a available and a group of citizens interested in reviving the club are endeavoring to work out plans for reorganization.

It is pointed out that there is no down-town club in the city and persons interested in the new movement have expressed the belief that the proposed organization would fill a need in the community. Between forty and fifty citizens already have expressed interest in the reformation of the club and within a few days a committee will approach a selected list of one-hundred persons in regard to membership in the organization.

White House Mood Is Up

By FRANK CORMIER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter and his team are feeling better this week, thank you. And it's not a moment too soon.

The improved mood around the White House is attributable to the coal settlement, albeit tentative; to final congressional approval of Carter's plan to scrap the B-1 bomber program; and to brighter prospects for Senate ratification of the Panama Canal treaty.

Barely a week ago, executive tempers were frayed because of an escalating series of confrontations between the White House and the Washington press corps that revived memories of the "us against them" syndrome associated with the aborted presidency of Richard Nixon.

To Nixon, most reporters were suspect because he believed they were partisan Democrats. More recently, Carter & Co. have reacted so strongly to displeasing publicity that one could be pardoned for wondering if they saw a Republican fifth column in the White House press room.

But this is nothing new, folks. Although President Kennedy generally received a favorable press, even he once lamented, "I'm reading more now but enjoying it less."

About 11 months ago, sensitivity to press accounts by the Carter White House surfaced when press secretary Jody Powell awakened an Associated Press reporter at 6:15 a.m. to denounce a report that the secretary of state wouldn't deny the administration had miscalculated in handing Moscow an ambitious and quickly-rebuffed proposal to limit nuclear arms.

This was regarded by reporters as fair warning that the administration never miscalculates until or unless the president says so.

A few weeks later, Powell became even more incensed at a New York Times account that pictured Carter as a reclusive martinet. The press secretary stunned reporters by acknowleding he had canvassed more than a score of White House staff members in a search for those who had talked to the Times.

All this was but a warmup, however, for the full head of steam Powell generated as reporters began writing stories that suggested the private banking practices of presidential confidant Bert Lance left much to be desired.

And then came Carter's New Year's trip abroad. Overshadowing made-for-television events were difficulties with a translator in Poland, an open microphone in India that picked up a presidential secret, and other glitches.

The normally good-humored Powell struck back by telling a Boston audience the translator story was blown out of proportion because "most of the American press was drunk" when Polish officials, at a midnight cocktail party, gleefully disclosed the translator's problems.

Powell neglected to say that the unfortunate translator was dismissed by the White House before the Poles began dispensing vodka.

The press secretary had something of greater moment to holler about as the press corps began writing of David Marston, the GOP-appointed federal prosecutor who fell victim to the remnants of the political spoils system that some folks had expected Carter to dismantle.

Powell at one point told reporters he had gone back and "read all of those Washington Post editorials ... over the past 50 years" denouncing the political appointment of U.S. attorneys.

"It took me about 15

Strength For Today

STEERING BY STARS

During most of each day and night, ships without the most recent and sophisticated navigational equipment are steered by "dead reckoning". The captain sets a course from his last known position, and since he knows his speed and compass heading, he can calculate where the ship will be at any time into the near future.

But dead reckoning is not exact because of the action of wind, waves, tide, and ocean currents — none of which, of course, can be accurately be taken account of in this kind of navigation. But the captain can always re-establish his position by sextant observations of the sun or stars.

Just as the captain cannot determine his real position without help from the sun and stars' so a person cannot find his real position in life without help from above. Only God can show us the true course. And He has made it possible for us, through worship and prayer, to receive His guidance at any time.

Find Cutthroat Rules Ruinous

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — In the process of modernizing Wall Street, the government convinced the securities industry to introduce competitive brokerage fees, of all things. That was in May 1975.

Until then, securities firms did not believe in such lowly scrapping, even though the origins of the industry back in the 1700s were in the gutter, under the buttonwood tree.

Finally convinced that competitive fees made sense, especially since they so aggressively espoused it for other industries, the various brokers went after each other like street fighters.

They began cutting commissions for their big institutional customers, and they cut and they cut, and partly because they did so their profits declined. A poor stock market added to the woes.

By the fourth quarter of 1977, some of the houses were bruised and battered, and in order to survive several of them had allied themselves in mergers with stronger firms.

Reporting during the past few weeks, Merrill Lynch was more a docile cow than a galloping bull, its earnings falling 70 percent during the final quarter of the year, and 59 percent for the entire year.

The institutional customers furthered the declines. Obligated to seek out the lowest costs for their clients, the mutual and pension funds, the bank-administered trusts and the like applied pressure.

Commissions plummeted, in some cases cut in half. From the brokerage houses, whose understanding of falling profits is instinctive, there arose a muffled moan. We must do something about this, they said.

They are now doing it; they are doing what so many other free enterprise concerns are doing: they are reaching agreements on commissions in order to lessen destructive competition.

Not everyone is part of the bargain. Merrill Lynch, whose resources are greater than all the others, apparently will continue to offer discounts of as much as 50 percent off the old fixed commissions.

But others, including even such an esteemed name as Morgan Stanley & Co., have been lifting their fees gradually. In so doing they are meeting some resistance along the way from institutional clients.

The managers of these institutions might argue with regulators that their willingness to pay more is based on their fears that the existing level of fees might force the broker to dilute the quality of service. But proving that contention might be a difficult task.

No matter how strong the pressures for higher rates might be, and no matter how strongly the institutions feel they are justified, the matter is still ticklish.

And so Wall Street reaches a conclusion that other industries learned years ago, that cutthroat competition is destructive, and that prices might be better managed for the good of all "competitors."

Who knows, they might be right. But who knows, we might be paying for the inefficiennncy of brokers. Whatever, there's an irony in the sellers of the competitive system saying in effect, "enough, enough."

For a few weeks, Powell rarely overlooked an opportunity to get his spurs into the press corps, regardless of the subject under discussion.

—Middle East: "We have not collected enough columns yet to decide exactly what our new Middle East policy ought to be."

—Would Carter sign an antichild-pornography bill: "I think he is concerned about its impact on the press."

—Why did industry agree to resumed coal talks: "I think that would be attempting to ...look inside people's heads and interpret their motivations, which only columnists and reporters are qualified to do."

There was an edge of bitterness in these and similar comments that became even more pronounced last week after the Washington Post published a Sunday magazine gossip item concerning some after-hours activities of Hamilton Jordan, the president's principal assistant.

Powell's 33-page reaction — many would say overreaction — elevated what essentially was a one-day item of small consequence into a major source of controversy.

But Powell is feeling better now, so the recent echoing of Nixon & Co. may quickly fade.

Those of us who thought that Watergate was behind us now realize that the wounds are too deep and the book advances too high for any of the people involved to stick together.

My wife has taken it harder than I have. When the Haldeman excerpts from his book were printed, she said tearfully, "How could he have done it to Nixon?"

I said, "How could Nixon have done it to him?"

Then she said, "How could Colson have done it to Haldema."

And I said, "How could Dean have done it to all of them?"

Perhaps it's futile for people who weren't there to speculate why these fine, outstanding men would turn against each other at this stage of the game. My own theory is that it never would have happened if Checkers had been alive.

Honors For Pitt Teams

The Junior and Senior Horse Bowl teams of the Pitt County 4-H Horse Fanciers Club won the Eastern Regional Horse Bowl competition held in Pikeville on Feb. 25.

Teams from counties in the eastern half on North Carolina competed in the contest where they were quizzed on topics such as nutrition, anatomy, diseases, and genetics of horses.

The Pitt Junior team, coached by Mrs. Iris Edwards, consisted of Karen Hendrix, captain, Dawn Morgan, Jayne Conway, Susanna Hudson, and Lisa Wright, alternate. The Junior team defeated teams from Edgecombe and Wake County.

Pitt Senior team members coached by Mrs. Pauline Hudson were Malissa Suggs, captain, Patty Lucido, Victor Hudson, and Nonie Ward. The Senior team defeated the Johnston County team.

Also participating in the competition was a Pitt County mixed team coached by Mrs. Peggy Hill. Members of the mixed team were Lauire Daughtry, captain, Meg Hill, Elizabeth Burroughs, and Susan Creech.

Pitt County Junior and Senior teams will now advance to the State Horse Bowl in Raleigh. Both teams have now won the last two Eastern Regional Horse Bowls.

Runners-Up In Competition

Two student pianists in the East Carolina University School of Music were runners-up in the recent Young Artists Competition sponsored by the Greensboro Music Association.

The two are Alisa Wetherington, a senior, of Kinston, and Sheila Marshburn, a graduate student of Jacksonville.

The competition was held on the campus of Greensboro College and was chaired by Fran Moseley of Greensboro.

His single inspector can cover approximately 2,400 miles of track and roadbed in a year's time, and Shaw conceded he would feel more comfortable if he had an additional inspector to permit him to inspect each mile of main line at least annually.

In addition to the track and equipment, Shaw said his office, which administers regulations set by the Federal Railroad Administration, will probably be responsible soon for inspecting operating procedures as well.

"We'll start as soon as the feds write the regulations," he said.

HIGH PERCH — Firemen find a high perch on the roof of the Candlewick Inn Restaurant in an effort to cut off the flames from spreading to the kitchen area of the building. Their efforts were successful, but the area was heavily damaged. About 75 volunteer Pitt County firemen fought the blaze for about three hours. Reflector Photo by Tommy Forrest)

Recommend Removing District Court Judge

HICKORY, N.C. (AP) — The North Carolina Judicial Standards has recommended the removal of Hickory District Court Judge William Martin for alleged misconduct.

The recommendation, first time the four-year-old commission has recommended the ouster of a judge, will now go to the state Supreme Court. Court Clerk John Morgan said he doubted if the court would hear the case before May. After that it will decided whether the 46-year-old Martin, one of the state's nine nonlawyer judges, will be removed from his $28,365 job.

The commission filed documents Tuesday charging that Martin:

—Settled two Burke County divorce cases out of court wthout notifying the defendants nor their attorneys.

—Ordered the dismissal of a drunken driving charge in Catawba County over the protest of the prosecutor because he said he thought the defendant deserved a "break."

—Asked a Hickory policeman to lie under oath in another Catawba driving under the influence case in 1975.

Martin, a former truck driver and auctioneer from Burke County, said in an interview that he tries 15,000 cases a year and "in my three years on the bench they found I diposed of only five cases that are questionable. I think that's a pretty good record.

"I feel what I'm accused of doing, if a lawyer had been accused of it, nothing would have been said about it."

He said he will ask the Supreme Court for a hearing, which he must do within 10 days under state law. Meanwhile, he said he will continue to hear cases and campaign for reelection until the court decides the issue.

Two Winners In District Event

Two Rose High School VICA (Vocational-Industrial Clubs of America) members were winners in District VICA contests held in Windsor Monday.

The winners are Virginia Kimbrell, who placed first in the job interview contest, and Ray Alexander, who placed second in the prepared speech contest.

Kimbrell, who works for Dr. Richard Evans, will participate in the state VICA contest to be held in Asheville later in the year, with 15 districts represented. If she were to win there, she would then go to the national contest, to be held in St. Louis, Mo.

Both Kimbrell and Alexander are seniors. Alexander works for Ina's House of Flowers.

Pro-Treaty Senate Ranks Count One Vote More

By W. DALE NELSON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Thomas J. McIntyre, undecided until now in the Panama Canal debate, said today he will vote to ratify the treaties despite threats of political retribution involving what he called "coarse and brutish" tactics.

The New Hampshire Democrat's announcement was accompanied by a harsh denunciation of some conservatives, whom he said seek not to compete honorably but only to "annihilate those they see as 'enemies'."

McIntyre's decision brings the number of pro-treaty senators to 46 in a running count kept by The Associated Press. Ratification of the treaties would require approval by two-thirds of those present and voting, or 67 if all 100 senators vote.

The AP tally shows 25 senators opposed. Twenty-nine are undecided. Of these, 11 have said they are leaning in favor of ratification and seven that they are leaning against.

McIntyre had not said before today that he was leaning either way.

He has been courted by the White House to vote for ratification. President Carter campaigned in New Hampshire in mid-February for McIntyre, who is up for re-election this year.

But he also has been under pressure by conservative organizations to oppose the treaties, particularly by the Conservative Caucus. Howard Phillips, national director of the caucus, has threatened some senators voting for the treaties with "potential political retribution."

In a speech prepared for delivery on the Senate floor, McIntyre accused the Conservative Caucus and other "new right" elements of using "coarse and brutish" means to impose their views on others.

"These people are different from traditional conservatives," he said. "They truly are radicals whose aim is not to compete with honor and decency ... but to annihilate those they see as 'enemies'."

McIntyre expressed reservations about one aspect of the treaties. They provide for annual payments of $10 million to Panama from surplus canal revenues during the transition period ending in the year 2000.

The senator said he might support an amendment or understanding to make clear that theunited States would not have to make up the difference if operating surpluses fell short of the amount.

In another speech prepared for floor delivery, Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd, D-W. Va., said it was "understood by both Panamanians and Americans that any balance remaining due in the year 1999 would not be paid" since the obligation of the United States is based on the availability of surpluses.

The Senate is considering two treaties. One transfers control of the waterway to Panama by the year 2000; the second guarantees U.S. rights to use and defend the canal after that date.

On Tuesday, the Senate rejected by a 69-24 vote an amendment by Sen. William Scott, R-Va., which Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, the treaties' floor manager, said was designed to kill them by forcing a second plebiscite in Panama.

Indicates Death Due Drowning

Pitt County Medical Examiner Dr. Jack Koontz this morning confirmed that the state chief medical examiner, Dr. R. Page Hudson, Jr. has stated that the autopsy on Mrs. Jean K. Edwards indicates death was probably due to drowning.

"Nothing of note has shown up at this time," Dr. Koontz commented, " although the toxicology is still pending." Koontz said a complete report on the results of the autopsy would be made public as soon as he has all the available information.

Sheriff Ralph Tyson reports that his department is still checking out some leads, but that nothing new of significance has resulted from the checks at this time. "We are still continuing our investigation," he said.

The body of Mrs. Edwards was found in a pond near Greenville on Feb. 19. At the time, she was free under a $50,000 bond after being indicted on Jan. 23 for the Jan. 17 weapon slaying of her husband, Rodney F. Edwards. She had been missing from her home for ten days at the time her body was discovered in the pond.

Set Pre-School Clinic Mar. 22

GRIFTON — The Grifton School will hold its pre-school clinic on Wednesday, March 22, from 9 a.m. to noon in the school media center.

Parents are asked to turn in information blanks, immunization records, and present birth certificates at that time. A child must be five years old by Oct. 16 to be eligible for enrollment. Additional information can be obtained by calling the school office at 524-5141.

Leroy James...

farmers, groups, and workshops. Our job at the agency is to teach," said James.

He added that his new position is more 'administrative.'

"My major responsibilities will be to provide leadership, to coordinate the efforts of the county extension staff, and to develop an effective total county extension program."

Other duties will include "organizing and allocating resources, preparing budgets, and maintaining administrative relationships."

James said that his transition from teaching to administration "is a challenge," and one that he is looking forward to.

There will be some training to make the transition easier, he added. A two-day workshop is being held in Raleigh this month for all of the new county extension chairman in the state.

A veteran in the local extension program, James said that he feels his experience will make the new position much simpler.

"I've had the opportunity to work under three good county chairmen and have learned a lot from each of them. They taught me a lot of things in administrative work."

He added that where previously he was responsible for one area of the program, he is now responsible for the total program. "It is my job to see that everybody (in the agency) carries out their assigned responsibilities.

"I think that my 20 years experience in the extension service will help me move right on into this job."

James worked with the Wayne County Extension Service prior to coming to Pitt County.

"I also have a real effective and good working staff," he added.

As a goal for the upcoming year, James said, "I hope that we can reach some of the people that we haven't had the opportunity to reach so far. The Senior Citizens have a lot to offer, and there is a whole group of people that have never been a part of this program that we hope to touch base with."

He noted that the purpose of the agency is to "go into the community and identify the needs and problems." James will still be doing some one-to-one teaching as he will be responsible for the soybean division of the agency, in addition to his administrative responsibilities.

"There will also be a special emphasis placed on each coworker to help them do a better job."

Eleven persons work in the Agricultural Extension Service under James. Various areas of agriculture which are covered by the agency include Home Economics, 4-H, Nutrition, Livestock, Horticulture, Field Crops, and Soybeans.

The A & T State University graduate said that he has enjoyed his time in Pitt County and intends to finish out his ten-year tenure here.

James is replacing Ed Yancey who moved to Raleigh the first of this year to take a district extension position there.

DIES — Zara Cully Brown, 86, who played Mother Jefferson on the TV series "The Jeffersons", died at the Cedars-Sinai Medical Center in Los Angeles Tuesday. The cause of death was not disclosed. The actress also appeared in such movies as "The Learning Tree", "The Liberation of L.B. Jones", and "The Great White Hope". (AP Laserphoto)

Seven Hurt In Four Accidents

Seven persons were reported injured and an estimated $4,650 property damage caused in four collisions investigated by Greenville Police yesterday.

Officers said heaviest damage resulted from a 10:20 a.m. collision at the intersection of Tenth and Cotanche Streets involving cars driven by James Carlton Bell of Stuart, Fla., and Linda Watson Dixon of Route 5, Washington.

Reporting both drivers and a passenger in each of the cars received injuries in the collision, police estimated damage at $2,000 to the Bell car and $1,000 to the Dixon vehicle.

Both Bell and Dixon were charged with failing to reduce their speed enough to avoid an accident.

Cars driven by Louise Wooten Marston of 2410 East Tenth St., and Harriet Russell Dixon of 312 Roundtree Dr. collided about 8 a.m. at the intersection of Fourth and Harding Streets, causing an estimated $600 damage to the Marston car and $300 damage to the Dixon auto.

Investigators reported both drivers and a passenger in the Dixon car received minor injuries in the collision.

An estimated $500 damage resulted to a truck driven by William Earl Jones of 411B West Third St. when the vehicle collided with a tree on Fourth Street, 105 feet East of the Maple Street intersection about 4:30 p.m.

A 4:05 p.m. collision at the intersection of Greene and Third Streets involved a truck driven by William Dalton Adams of 207 Columbia Ave. and a car driven by Terry Jackson of 301 Allendale Rd.

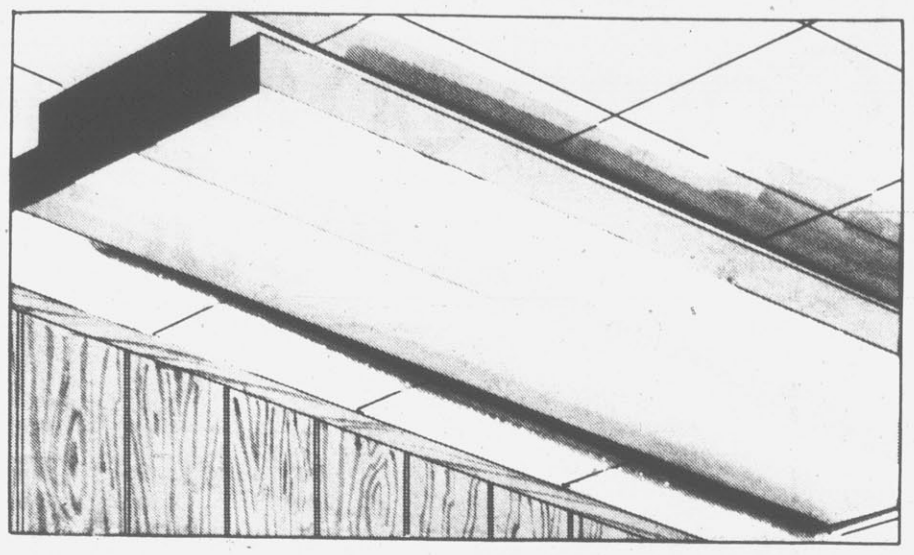

Damage from the collision was set at $100 to the truck and $150 to the Jackson car.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market showed another broad loss today, continuing the slide that set in at the start of the week.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, which had fallen 14.12 points in the last two sessions, dropped another 2.77 to 739.35 in the first half hour today.

Losers outnumbered gainers by close to a 3-1 margin among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

The market continued to follow the downward course of the dollar, which declined sharply again in foreign exchange today to reach new lows against the Swiss franc and the West German mark.

Analysts noted fears that the dollar's slide might lead to moves by the oil-exporting nations that would increase the cost of U.S. oil imports.

Kuwait said today it would seek a special meeting of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries if the dollar continues to decline.

Benguet Consolidated Mining Class B shares led the active list, unchanged at 3 in trading that included a 330,000-share block at that price.

On Tuesday the Dow Jones industrial average fell 6.23 to 742.12, its lowest close since it stood at 739.05 on Feb. 28, 1975.

Declines outnumbered advances by more than a 5-2 margin on the NYSE.

Big Board volume came to 19.75 million shares against 19.99 million in the previous session.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks dropped .38 to 48.43.

At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was off .49 at 122.85.

Milk Price Hike OK'd

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The state Milk Commission has announced an increase in the farm price of milk, expected to translate into a two-cent-per-gallon hike in grocery prices for consumers.

The commission action will push the prices dairies pay to farmers from $11.63 for 100 pounds of milk to $11.78, effective April 1.

The commission sets farm prices using a formula based on several factors that measure farmers' costs of producing milk. Commission officials said dairy feed and production items were behind the latest increase.

In another development affecting the commission, Superior Court Judge Robert R. Browning issued a temporary order barring the commission from taking any action againsts Arcadia Dairy Farms Inc. until a hearing next Monday.

Arcadia makes reconstituted milk, using powdered milk and water along with whole milk. It is cheaper than regular milk, and farmers contend that it robs them of customers for their fresh milk.

The commission, in response to farmers' complaints, had ordered Arcadia to pay more than $12,000 into an "equalization fund" to compensate farmers for their lost sales in December.

Arcadia is challenging the assessment in court, and the commission had scheduled a hearing Tuesday to consider taking away Arcadia's milk license.

Light Snow And Rain For Area

Light snow and rain in the last 24 hours amounted to .22 inches of precipitation in the Greenville area.

Snow was falling this morning, also, but with no accumulation. The 8 a.m. temperature today was 36 degrees.

The high and low temperatures for the 24-hour span leading up to 8 a.m. were 38 and 29 degrees, respectively.

The Tar River level stood at 5.8 feet on the National Weather Gauge this morning, and Greenville Utilities Commission reports the level is steady.

Large Snowflakes In Martin County

WILLIAMSTON — Heavy snowfall marked by "flakes big as a snowball" that hadn't stuck to the ground is the weather picture predominating this morning in the 20 mile east-west stretch of north Pitt County from Bethel to the Martin County town of Williamston.

A police department spokesman in Bethel said that at 10:30 this morning it was snowing heavily, but melting about as fast as it fell. It also snowed sporadically throughout the day Tuesday, but only stuck to cars for a short time before melting away.

In Robersonville, the picture was about the same. A spokesman at the police department there said that snowfall yesterday was an off-on situation during the day. This morning saw rain at first, changing to rain and sleet, and by 10 a.m. the beginning of a heavy snow that at 10:30 was not sticking.

Lee Reynolds in Williamston reported shortly after 10:30 this morning "it's lightening up a little now, but we've had flakes big as a snowball coming down, some of the biggest I've ever seen." On Tuesday's snow fall, Reynolds said it snowed heavily half of the day, and for awhile began to hide ground objects, but "it disappeared later in the day."

Lee said that schools were closed at noon in Martin County yesterday, and that a decision to keep them open or close would probably be made about noon today. "None of the roads are hazardous at this time, so school officials, I understand, are taking a wait and see attitude before making a decision."

Candidate At 'Coffee'

"The chief duty of office holders today is to prove that public service is an honorable profession," D. D. "Jack" Gross, candidate for the N. C. House of Representatives remarked Tuesday night.

Gross made his remarks in the beginning of a series of "Meet the Candidate" coffees that will be held on Tuesday nights.

"Office holders must accept responsibility for their decisions, for their handling of public funds, for informing citizens, and for constructive and cooperative work with our various institutions," Gross commented.

He added that to serve the needs of people in business, farming, education, health and job holders, "office holders must stay in touch with the people all the time."

Gross met with the public at the home of Ms. Pat C. Dunn. Jim and Anne Briley hosted the event.

EXTENDED WEATHER OUTLOOK FOR N.C.

Cloudy with chance of rain Friday, mainly in east. Becoming partly cloudy Saturday and Sunday. Highs Friday in the 40s, mostly 50s on Saturday and Sunday. Lows Friday morning in 30s; lows Saturday and Sunday mostly 30s.

1977 Community Ambassador Is Guest Speaker

Cindy Browning, Greenville's Community Ambassador for the summer of 1977, was guest speaker at a meeting of the Aycock Spanish Club held recently.

Browning explained the purpose of the community ambassador and responsibilities entailed in serving in that capacity as the youth representative for the Greenville community.

While community ambassador, she traveled in several European countries briefly, then lived with a family in Italy. She shared her Italian experience by showing slides she had taken.

The Spanish Club at Aycock has supported the Community Ambassador program in the past with fund raising projects and will be doing so again in the future.

Browning encouraged students to apply for the privilege of being Greenville's ambassador during their junior year at Rose High School.

We would like to thank all our friends and relatives who helped us in the loss of our home. We deeply appreciate all your thoughts and kindness. And a special thanks to Ann Cox and Margaret Zink and the Pepsi Cola Company.

Card Of Thanks

The Jimmy Smith Family and Mrs. Almeda Mercer wish to thank everyone for every act of kindness shown them during their sickness and hard times resulting from the car accident that happended on October 15, 1977.

City Council...

Councilman Clarence Gray concurred that the matter should be discussed at a public meeting and he said that "even at a regular meeting, we should look at it critically."

Gray noted that the annexation would affect a lot of people, "not just industry."

Mrs. McGrath asked Gray if he felt the annexation would mean a loss of jobs. Gray said that job loss would be a possibility and might deter other industry from coming in.

Mrs. McGrath, questioning how Greenville will grow, asked, "Are we going to leap frog over industry?"

Councilman John Howard, saying he was opposed to annexation initially and that he is still opposed to it, told the workshop members that he still felt a public hearing was needed on the matter.

Howard asserted that even if the Council votes to call off the study, the public deserves an explanation of the facts as to why the annexation was considered.

Howard said he was afraid of the unknowns in the matter and contended that if one industry is lost that employs a lot of people, it would not be worth it.

Cox mentioned that if the Council instructed City Manager Jim Caldwell to back off the study and then ratify that action at a public meeting, "that would be the thing to do."

New Council member Charles Vincent asserted that the matter is so far along now that "we need to let the people know."

Vincent said that he had been leaning against annexation of the industrial area but he did not consider the industrial park section a "sacred cow." The Councilman said that a lot of things need to be brought out in the open with industry presenting its side and the city explaining its position.

Caldwell questioned how the information can be related to the public "with the situation we have with the media."

"I think the city will come out better in a public hearing," Vincent said.

Councilman Joe Taft Jr. said that he felt he had heard "about all" he needed to hear on the matter and he would be ready to vote on it at the March 9 meeting.

According to Caldwell, the annexation matter involves a "very important question" regarding the future of Greenville and her citizens. He said the city is at a "crossroads" in its development.

Council member Judy Greene said she felt enough harm has been done in the annexation matter.

"If any harm has been done, I don't think we did it," Cox stated.

Howard told the gathering that the "best salesman we've got for new industry is the industry already here."

The Council, meeting Feb. 13, voted to hold a public hearing on the annexation plan on March 21. The governing board will decide on March 9 whether to hold the public hearing as scheduled or abandon the issue.

Cox also discussed with the Council members last night the use of a consensus agenda practice for workshop meetings whereby any item discussed and agreed to by the Council in a workshop, when no official action can be taken, will be brought before the board at a public meeting and made a part of the official record.

The mayor noted that many towns follow the practice and he said that he felt it would be in the best interest of the city to adopt the measure. The consensus agenda issue will be considered at the March 9 regular session, he added.

Mrs. McGrath said this morning that she still feels that annexation of the industrial area is "right and fair." She expressed disappointment "that it sounds like it will be at least postponed" in view of last night's meeting.

She said that she agreed with the idea of having a public meeting on the matter and added, "I want to stand up and be counted."

When you think about it, a bank is really like any retail establishment. It sells products. Provides services. And hopefully gives you your money's worth. Or you take your business elsewhere.

So if we want you to bank with us, which we do, we have to prove we can do more for your dollar than the next bank.

Sometimes that means one-upping the competition. Like giving you a competitive interest rate and a flexible loan payment schedule.

Sometimes it means offering something they don't. Say Master Charge or overdraft checking (we call it Check Credit). And sometimes it means doing something a little unconventional. Like listing your checks in numerical order on your monthly statement.

But it always means giving you a reason to bank with us. After all, if we want your business we have to earn it.

We still know the value of a dollar.

We still know the value of your dollar. We've got some great ways to prove it.

"Like a simple interest loan that can save you money. Or an easy-to-balance checking statement that saves you time. Whatever it takes, really, to earn your business."

Gryphons Nip Rose For Title

By JIM KYLE
Reflector Sports Writer

ROCKY MOUNT—Rose High, redhot for most of the second half, hit a dry spell near the end of the game and that was all Rocky Mount needed to squeeze out an 82-77 victory over the Rampants in the finals of the Division I tournament last night.

The victory gives the Gryphons the number one seed from the division in the state playoffs, while the Rampants are the number two team. Rose will travel to play Fayetteville Terry Sanford Friday night in the first round of the state 4-A tournament.

Rocky Mount received a boost late in the game when star center Buck Williams, who spent much of the second half on the bench with four fouls, returned to the lineup with 6:45 left in the contest.

Williams helped the Gryphons rally from three points down to a 68-67 lead with his shot from underneath at the 4:55 mark. beat Northern (Nash), which to me is one of the best teams in the state."

Rose coach Jim Brewington also had words of praise for the Rampants, especially center William Barnes who scored 32 points to just 15 for Williams.

"I thought we played a real fine ballgame," Brewington said. "I can't say enough for the way the kids played. Barnes played super. I still think he's the best ballplayer around."

Brewington, who blasted the game's officiating, said one of the keys to the contest was the foul trouble of James Hawkins. Hawkins, who averages over 15 points a game, spent much of the evening on the bench and scored just six points. "When you take his 15-16 points away from us, we're in bad shape," Brewington said.

Hawkins' benchriding was one of the factors which helped the Gryphons take an early lead in the ballgame. With Williams and Jeffrey Battle controlling the boards early, Rocky Mount got the ball out quickly to score numerous points on fast breaks.

Bobby Peele got two straight buckets to give the Gryphons a 13-8 lead midway through the first quarter and Williams scored on a slam dunk after a fast break layup by Reggie Barrett to make it 20-11. The Gryphons took a 22-15 lead into the second quarter.

The teams played evenly thoughout the second quarter with Barnes, Anthony Bryant and Greg Guthrie doing most of the work halftime. Nonetheless, Rocky Mount went to the locker room holding a 38-33 advantage.

A four-point play just two seconds into the third quarter upped the Gryphon lead to 42-33. Battle, who scored layups on the first three quarter-opening jump balls, was undercut after hitting his shot and made both free throws.

The Rampants, helped by three-point plays from Guthrie and Bryant, sliced the margin to one, 46-45, at the 5:38 mark and Williams went to the bench with his fourth personal seconds later. With the big Gryphon out, Barnes began to rule the backboards. He scored on two follow shots, a dunk, and a pair of free throws as the Rampants went up by three and held a 61-58 lead going into the final period.

Williams didn't start the fourth quarter, but came back in at the 6:45 mark with Rose ahead 65-62. "I think that when he came back, and the crowd response was just tremendous — this is what the home court advantage means," Henderson said.

The Gryphons scored the next four points for a 66-65 lead, and after a jumper from the right side by Hawkins, scored four more to go up by three, 70-67, with just under five minutes remaining.

Barnes hit twice and Hawkins added a jumper to give the Rampants a 73-72 lead, but the Gryphons got field goals from Barrett and Peele to again go up by three, and they never gave up that lead.

Barnes was able to cut it to one, 76-75, with a dunk over Williams at 2:57, but the Rampants missed their next six shots, and by the time Barnes scored on a follow shot with 26 seconds left, the Gryphons had an insurmountable lead.

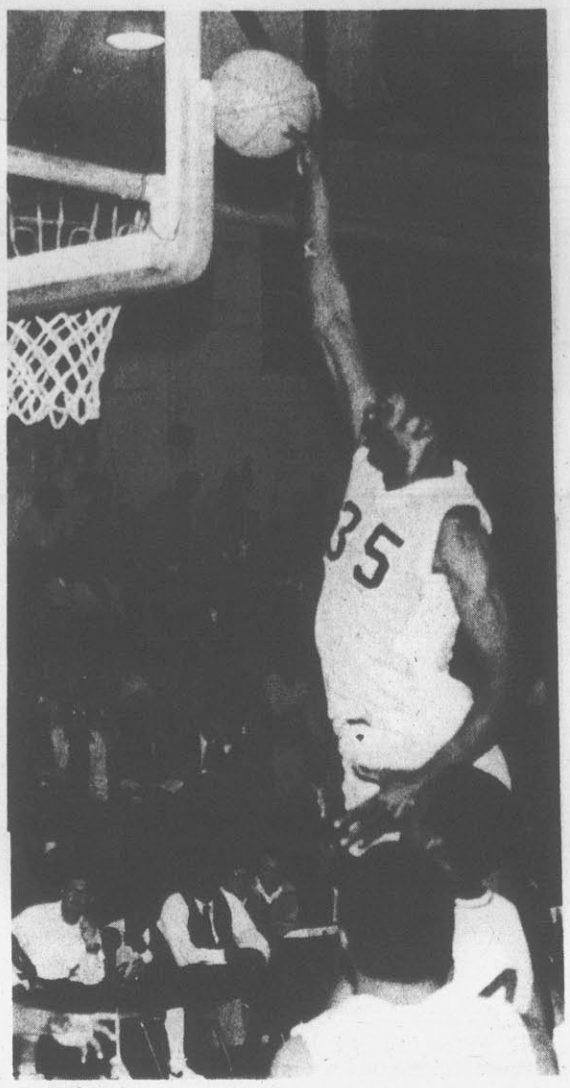

Both teams shot well in the game and both took the same number of shots, 68. The Rampants hit 32 of their attempts for 47.1 per cent, while Rocky Mount connected on 36, 52.9 per cent. The Gryphons held a 44-34 rebounding advantage.

In addition to Barnes' 32, Rose got 15 points from Bryant and 14 from Guthrie. The Gryphons, with five players in double figures, were paced by Battle with 19, Barrett with 16, Williams with 15, and Mike Lewis and Peele with 10 each.

Brewington, encouraged with his team's play despite the loss, said, "We just hope we can play as well when we go to Fayetteville Friday night."

East Carolina Women To Host NCAIAW Event

GREENVILLE, N.C.—The North Carolina Association of Intercollegiate Athletics for Women (NCAIAW) Division I basketball championship will open Thursday afternoon here in Minges Coliseum. East Carolina University is serving as the host school for this year's tournament.

All six teams in Division I will participate, with the top two teams, North Carolina State and the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, receiving byes in the first round. Third-seeded East Carolina will play sixth-seeded Duke University at 4 P.M. Thursday, while the tournament opens at 2 P.M. with fourth-seeded Appalachian State matched against fifth-seeded UNC-Greensboro.

The Wolfpack of N.C. State is the only team to have won the NCAIAW Division I Tournament since its inception in 1976. Both years the Wolfpack faced Appalachian State in the championship game, but that will not be the case this year. The Lady Apps are in the same bracket with N.C. State.

However, the format is not expected to change as far as the Wolfpack is concerned. Coach Kay Yow's club is by far the favorite after finishing the regular season unbeaten in Division I play with a 10-0 record. Overall, the Wolfpack finished 24-3, losing only to nationally-ranked Tennessee, Maryland in the finals of the ACC Tournament, and last week, in an upset to Old Dominion.

Center Genia Beasley and guard Trudi Lacy, both first team selections on the all-state Division I team, pace an N.C. State team that has not lost a game in regular season or tournament play in Division I. The Wolfpack is 27-0 in three years of play.

The North Carolina Tar Heels, the East Carolina Lady Pirates and the Appalachian State Lady Apps battled to the final week for second, third and fourth place seedings. Such indicates that all three are possible candidates to upend the favored Wolfpack.

North Carolina, led by Cathy Shoemaker's 13.4 points per game and all-state first team selection, won four of its last five games. First-year head coach Jennifer Alley guided her club to a 15-10 overall finish, surviving a brutal battle to the end for second-place seeding.

East Carolina was just behind N.C. State with the best overall mark of the six teams, ending with a 17-8 record. Both forwards Rosie Thompson and Debbie Freeman were selected to the first-team all-state five, with 21.6 and 16.2 scoring averages, respectively. The Lady Pirates have been competitive with every team on the court this year. With a homecourt advantage for the state title competition, the Lady Pirates of Catherine Bolton cannot be overlooked.

UNC-Greensboro and Duke University had their problems in regular season play. Coach Jan Donahue's UNC-Greensboro Spartans were 6-15, while Coach Debbie Leonard's Duke Blue Devils were 1-18. But both clubs in the final week gave one or more stirring performances against top-seeded teams to indicate tremendous improvement since early season.

Semi-finals action will be Friday night with the winner of the East Carolina-Duke game facing North Carolina-Chapel Hill in the opener at 6 P.M. The 8 P.M. clash will feature top-seeded N.C. State against the winner of the UNC-Greensboro-Appalachian State game.

A consolation game will be played Saturday at 6 P.M., followed by the state championship game at 8 P.M.

Meet director Catherine Bolton said, "With the intensity of tournament play and the closeness of several regular season games, I expect this to be a highly-exciting three days. For instance, the first-round matchups of Appalachian vs UNC-Greensboro and Duke vs East Carolina will not be your usual opening games' probably. The last time ASU and UNC-G met, the game went into overtime, while the last Duke-ECU game was only a four-point difference."

While the women's tournament is being run during the same time as the ACC men's tournament, no game times clash with scheduled ACC games.

Northeastern Teams Roll Over ECC In District

LITTLEFIELD—The Northeastern Conference walked away with the District 3-A playoffs last night gaining two easy victories over Eastern Carolina Conference opposition. Williamston's girls rolled over D. H. Conley 60-46, while Washington's boys downed North Lenoir 88-72.

The girls' game was close for most of the first half. Williamston held a 10-5 lead at the end of the first quarter, but the Valkyries were able to cut it to 26-23 at halftime.

In the third quarter, the Tigerettes outscored Conley 16-12 for a 42-35 lead and they continued to build on that margin in the final period.

Paula Bennett led all scorers with 20 points for Williamston, while Jo Anna Lilley added 17. Conley was paced by Glenda Green with 16 points.

The loss ends the Valkyries' season, while the Tigerettes will enter the state finals in Hickory next week.

Washington led North Lenoir the whole way in the boys' game, but was unable to break away from the Hawks until the third quarter.

The Pam-Pack who scored many of their points on transition baskets, built up a 24-11 first-quarter lead. The Hawks were able to cut that to 36-33 at the half, however.

In the third quarter, the Hawks pulled to within one, but Washington moved in front by a 54-48 margin at the end of the period. The Pam-Pack stretched its lead to 20 in the final quarter.

Dominique Wilkins led the Pam-Pack with 26 points, one of five Washington players in double figures. Eric Harris and Shawn Williams scored 12 each, while Alvis Rogers and Tony Boston added 11. North Lenoir was paced by Mitchell Wiggins with 31 and Johnnie Wiggins with 22.

Washington will represent the district in the state finals in Durham next week.

Pond: No Wrongdoing

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — "If Darrell Waltrip had done something wrong, I wouldn't mind saying it," stock car driver Lennie Pond exclaimed. "But he didn't. It was just racing."

At issue was an ugly looking bumping incident between Pond and Waltrip during last Sunday's Richmond 400. Pond, the race leader at the time, had to change a flat tire after the incident. And that caused him to lose the race.

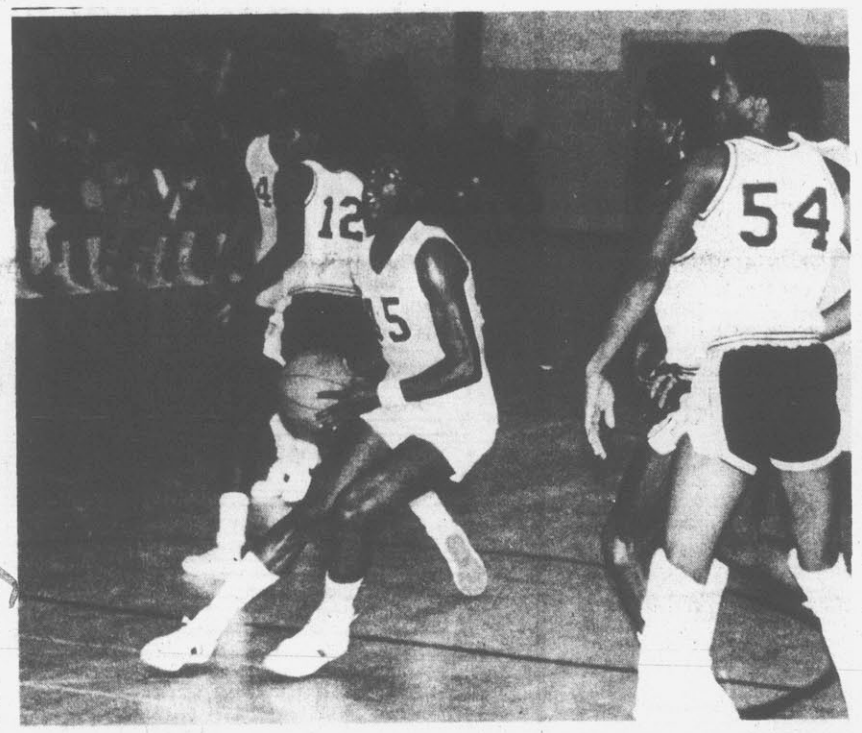

Pond explained: "The tire had apparently picked up something small off the race track a few laps before this all happened because it was going down slow. I was trying to make it hold out until a caution flag. But none ever came.

"I had a pretty good lead over Darrell before all this. He started catching me and then pulled inside to go past. We rubbed together a little bit but it was no worse than what happened with 50 people 50 different times in the race."

The combination of the deflating tire and the contact made the incident look much worse than it actually was, Pond said.

"I don't believe he was trying to run me into the fence or nothing like that," Pond said. "Darrell knows I'd say so if I thought so."

Cremins Is Honored

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — By a margin of nearly 4-1, Bobby Cremins of Appalachian State University has been honored as Southern Conference basketball coach of the year for the second time in three seasons.

Cremins received 37½ votes in balloting, announced Tuesday, by members of the Southern Conference Sports Media Association. Others receiving votes were Charlie Schmaus of Virginia Military (10 votes), Stu Aberdeen of Marshall (5½ votes) and Ron Shumate of Tennessee-Chattanooga (4 votes).

The Mountaineers posted a 9-3 league record on the way to the Southern Conference championship. Their overall record was 14-12.

Cremins took over Appalachian in 1975 when the team had won only eight games in the two previous seasons. His first club finished with a 13-14 record and the second finished with a 17-12 record.

He was chosen conference Coach of the Year in 1976.

At age 28, Cremins was the youngest head coach in Division I of the National Collegiate Athletic Association when he took over the Appalachian team.

A New York native, Cremins was captain of the University of South Carolina basketball team in 1970. Later he became an assistant coach to Gamecock Head Coach Frank McGuire, leaving that position to coach the Mountaineers.

Neal Aiding Portland Cause

By ALEX SACHARE
AP Sports Writer

If you think the Portland Trail Blazers' 50-10 record is pretty fancy, how about Lloyd Neal's mark of 12-0?

Neal, a husky 6-foot-8 veteran who can play forward or center, has started 12 games for the Blazers this season and the National Basketball Association's defending champions have won them all.

No. 12 came Tuesday night, a surprisingly easy 113-92 victory over the Philadelphia 76ers in a rematch of last year's playoff finalists. Neal, starting in place of power forward Maurice Lucas, led Portland with 27 points.

Bill Walton, the Blazers' center and the hub of their pattern offense and pressure defense, sprained his left ankle in the second period against Philadelphia. He did not play the rest of the game and a team spokesman said he would not be ready for Thursday night's game against the Knicks at New York.

In other NBA games Tuesday night, the Milwaukee Bucks edged the Washington Bullets 136-135 in overtime, the Denver Nuggets defeated the Indiana Pacers 122-106, the New York Knicks outgunned the San Antonio Spurs 138-123, the Atlanta Hawks routed the Boston Celtics 117-85, the New Orleans Jazz beat the Buffalo Braves 125-108, the Seattle SuperSonics stopped the Kansas City Kings 114-107 in overtime and the Chicago Bulls defeated the Phoenix Suns 126-115.

Portland scored 15 points in a row to take a 22-12 lead in the first period and Philadelphia never caught up. The Blazers led 57-45 at halftime and 83-67 after three periods as they inflicted upon Philadelphia its worst margin of defeat of the season.

Bobby Gross added 21 points for Portland while Julius Erving was high man for Philadelphia with 18.

Bucks 136, Bullets 135

Brian Winters missed a jumper from the top of the key at the end of regulation play which would have won the game for Milwaukee, but atoned for that by hitting three straight baskets late in overtime to seal the victory. He led the Bucks with 29 points.

Nuggets 122, Pacers 106

Denver eased past Indiana behind 27 points and 11 assists by David Thompson, 20 by Dan Issel and 19 by rookie Anthony Roberts. The Nuggets led 89-82 going into the final period and clinched the victory with an 8-2 spurt shortly thereafter.

Knicks 138, Spurs 123

Bob McAdoo hit on 15 of 23 shots from the field and scored 33 points as the Knicks outscored San Antonio, the league's top offensive team. New York led by as many as 24 points in the second half.

Hawks 117, Celtics 85

Atlanta jumped in front of Boston 20-6 at the start and pulled away steadily to its widest margin of victory of the season. Seven Hawks scored in double figures, topped by John Drew with 21 and Steve Hawes with 20 points and 13 rebounds.

Jazz 125, Braves 108

Jim McElroy scored 26 points and handed out 16 assists and Truck Robinson scored 25 points and grabbed 16 rebounds as New Orleans pulled away in the second half. The victory kept the Jazz tied with Atlanta in the race for the final Eastern Conference playoff berth.

Sonics 114, Kings 107

Seattle won its fourth in a row as Gus Williams scored 13 points in the third quarter to help wipe out a 16-point deficit, missed an 18-footer that would have won the game in regulation time but then hit a key layup in the overtime period. Williams finished with 27 points.

Bulls 126, Suns 115

Chicago snapped a three-game losing streak as Wilbur Holland scored 31 points, Mickey Johnson had 20 points and 17 rebounds and Artis Gilmore contributed 20 points and 15 rebounds. That offset big nights by Phoenix' two hot scorers, Walter Davis and Paul Westphal, who had 36 and 32 points, respectively.

Coach Unhappy Despite Victory

By The Associated Press

The Kansas Jayhawks beat Colorado by 16 points in the opening round of the Big Eight Conference basketball tournament, but Coach Ted Owens was far from satisfied.

"We lost our concentration," Owens said Tuesday night after the fifth-ranked Jayhawks had trounced sIe Buffaloes 82-66, increasing their season's record to 24-3. "I hate that for one reason: if we develop those bad habits, we'll have to pay for them one of these days."

The next opportunity Kansas will have to possibly pay for its mistakes — Owens was unhappy with a rash of turnovers and ragged play in the first half against Colorado, 9-18 — will be Friday night in the conference semifinals against Kansas State.

The Wildcats, 17-10, advanced with a 52-44 victory over Oklahoma 14-13, Tuesday night. In other first-round games of the Big Eight tournament, Missouri, 12-15, posted a 65-63 victory over Iowa State, 14-13, and Nebraska, 21-6, registered a 71-63 triumph over Oklahoma State, 10-16. Missouri and Nebraska will meet in the other semifinal.

In other major results, No.13 Illinois State, 24-2, downed Northern Iowa 82-76, Rhode Island, 22-6, tuned up for the ECAC tournament with an 86-63 victory over Brown, Fairfield, 22-3, Rhode Island's opening-round ECAC opponent, recorded a 63-57 decision over Connecticut, Dartmouth edged Harvard 71-69, Boston University topped Vermont 84-77 in overtime, Dayton routed Xavier Ohio 90-62, and Nevada-Las Vegas outlasted St. Mary's Calif. 100-98 in double overtime.

Kansas bolted to a 12-3 lead after three minutes, increased the advantage to 48-33 by halftime and with 12 minutes remaining was ahead 63-39 against Colorado.

Clint Johnson paced Kansas with 16 points, while Paul Mokeski had 12 points and 16 rebounds.

Sophomore Curtis Redding's basket and two free throws in the closing minutes helped Kansas State get past Oklahoma. Mike Evans led the Wildcats' balanced scoring attack with 14 points.

Curtis Berry's four foul shots, Stan Ray's tip-in and Clay Johnson's 20-foot jumper with five seconds left lifted Missouri over Iowa State. Iowa State's Andy Parker, the Big Eight's leading scorer, did not start for disciplinary reasons, but scored 17 points.

Brian Banks' 22 points and Carl McPipe's 18 keyed Nebraska's victory over Oklahoma State. Mark Tucker led the Cowboys with 31 points.

Billy Lewis and Ron Jones each scored 25 points in Illinois State's triumph over Northern Iowa, and Sly Williams' 25 points against Brown made him the first Rhode Island player to surpass the 1,000-point mark as a sophomore.

Meanwhile, St. Joseph's, Ind. was leading DePauw 71-60 with 10 minutes remaining when the game was halted after a brawl involving eight of the 10 players on the court.

Record major college field goals of 67 yards were kicked by Russell Erxleben of Texas and Steve Little of Arkansas in 1977, a season which also produced the shortest ever by a collegian, a 16-yarder by Paul Marchese of Kent State.

ACC Basketball Teams Begin Tourney Action

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — "We're going to the tournament with a smile on our face and play somebody's rump off."

Clemson coach Bill Foster said that, but the remark seemed to be one that any of his brother Atlantic Coast Conference basketball coaches would be willing to drink to as the league opens its championship competition today.

At 3 p.m., Duke, 8-4 and 20-6, meets Clemson, 3-9 and 15-11. At 7 p.m., N.C. State, 7-5 and 18-8, meets Maryland, 3-9 and 14-12, and at 9 p.m., Virginia, 6-6 and 20-6, meets Wake Forest, 6-6 and 17-9.

On Thursday, the winner of the Duke-Clemson game meets with winner of the N.C. State-Maryland game at 7 p.m., and North Carolina meets with winner of the Virginia-Wake Forest contest at 9 p.m. Friday is an off day and the championship game will be televised on ABC-Television at 4:30 p.m. Saturday.

North Carolina, of course, captured the regular season title last Saturday, which means the Tar Heels advance automatically to the second round. But regular season performance has traditionally not been an indication of how a team ends up at the tourney.

Rod Griffin of Wake Forest, for example, remains convinced that the Deacons, who tied with Virginia for fourth in the regular season, can win not only the tournament but the NCAA national title as well.

"I think we can do it," said Griffin with conviction.

"Momentum going into the ACC tournament doesn't mean crap," asserted Clemson's Foster. "Virginia proved that the last two years."

Virginia coach Terry Holland said a controlled offense and good defense could give it to the Cavaliers, who finished last in the 1976-77 season but nearly sstole the marbles from UNC in the title game.

"Even on bad shooting nights we can win," Holland insisted. "We beat State when we shot 42 percent and beat Maryland even though we shot 39 percent, and both of those games were on the road. The main thing is we know it can be done."

Maryland finished the season tied for last with Clemson, but Terp forward Lawrence Boston figures his team has a shot at the title, if only because the conference is bringing in Southeastern Conference referees for the tourney.

"I'm looking to win because we have different referees," Boston said. "I think that'll make a difference. We won't have guys protecting people like Phil Ford and Rod Griffin."

Ford, Griffin Pace ACC Voting

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The first team of the all-Atlantic Coast Conference basketball squad this year was apparently one of the easiest selections which the conference Sports Writers Association has had to make in some time.

Two of the five, Rod Griffin of Wake Forest and North Carolina's Phil Ford, were first team picks on all 129 ballots cast. Duke's Mike Gminski was on all but two first-team ballots, his teammate Jim Spanarkel was on all but four and all but 12 voters picked North Carolina's Mike O'Koren.

It was the third year in a row that Ford made the first all-conference team. He is the all-time high UNC scorer and third highest career point-getter in the league.

The five first-team selections were the leading ACC scorers going into the ACC tournament today in Greensboro.

Ford and Griffin, both seniors, received the maximum 258 points each in the balloting, followed by sophomore Gminski with 256, junior Spanarkel with 253 and sophomore O'Koren with 246. Each man got two points for each first-team ballot and one for each second team vote.

The second-team selections included two freshmen, Gene Banks of Duke with 120 points and Jeff Lamp of Virginia with 99 points. Sophomore Frank Johnson of Wake Forest trailed with 97 points, sophomore Charles Whitney of N.C. State with 71 points and sophomore Clyde Austin of N.C. State with 60 points to complete the second team.

The sports writers did not ballot by position, but the first-team selections looked like an all-star team, with Ford and Spanarkel at the guard positions, Gminksi at center, and Griffin and O'Koren at forward posts.

Going into the ACC tournament, Griffin led the league with a 22 point scoring average, followed by Spanarkel with 21.2, Ford with 20.8, Gminski with 19.7 and O'Koren with 17.8. Griffin also led in rebounding with 10.2 a game and Gminski second with 9.8.

O'Koren led the conference with a .664 scoring percentage from the floor, with Spanarkel's .863 percentage tops in freethrow accuracy. Ford led the ACC with six assists per game.

ACC Roundup

In the six categories of scoring, field goal accuracy, freethrow accuracy, rebounding and assists, O'Koren finished the regular season in the top 10 in all five.

North Carolina and Duke, who each had two players on the first team, finished one-two in the conference standings for the regular season, with the Tar Heels claiming the top spot with an 83-79 triumph over Duke last Saturday.

Schools Give Testimony

By TOM SEPPY
AP Sports Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Woeful tales of a mind-boggling administrative quagmire replete with judicial abuses and intimidation has been spun before Congress by officials of Mississippi State and Michigan State, which were placed on probation by the National Collegiate Athletic Association for alleged rules violations.

Words such as unbelievable, fantastic, unrealistic were sprinkled through the testimony of the school officials in detailing the NCAA's investigation, hearings and subsequent punishment to the House oversight and investigations subcommittee which is probing the operations of the governing body of intercollegiate sports.

After two days of public testimony, the hearings will be continued in about two weeks, probably March 13.

"I truly believe we have only scratched the surface of the problem," said Rep. Jim Santini, D-Nev., who instigated the investigation after the University of Nevada at Las Vegas and Reno were placed by the NCAA last fall. "We've just got to do something to curb the power abuses.

"There are some who want to pursue legislative remedies in the Congress," said Santini after chairing the second day of hearings for chairman John Moss, D-Calif. "I believe the changes can be made internally by the NCAA."

Drs. Jacob A. Hoefer, Charles Scarborough and Frederick D. Williams, three members of the Michigan State University Select Committee, testified on their dealings with the NCAA when their school was charged with recruiting violations in the football program and subsequently placed on probation for three years.

They cited what they called questionable practices of the NCAA investigator, David Berst, the NCAA's disregard for procedural due process, the organization's evaluation of evidence and the NCAA's appeal procedure.

Reading a statement for all three, Williams said Berst "had resorted to threats, intimidation and vulgarity to secure information detrimental to MSU."

He said the NCAA "contends that its hearings procedures are cooperative rather than adversary, but we believe the reverse is true."

"Once the NCAA had formulated and sent formal charges against MSU, we had to assume the burden of proof, and we were presumed guilty until we proved our innocence," the statement said.

"Proving innocence is often difficult, but our task was even more difficult because we had no way of knowing, until the hearing, the basis for the charges, because we were not giving an opportunity to cross-examine those who had accused us of wrong-doing, and because of the way in which the Infractions Committee evaluated evidence."

Williams said the evidence used against two assistant coaches came in the form of notes made from interviews with Ohio State University student athletes and supporters. The coaches denied the validity of the evidence, he said, and strengthened their defense with polygraph examinations, which they passed.

Knights Suffer In Final Game

Greenville Christian Academy wrapped up its basketball season on a sour note last night, losing to Wilmington 71-58.

The Knights held a 15-12 lead at the end of the first quarter, but saw Wilmington turn the tide in the second period for a 35-31 halftime margin.

Wilmington outscored Greenville 23-10 in the third quarter to sew up the victory.

Robert Edens led the Wilmington scoring with 19 points, while Jimmy Suggs had 16. Tim Sutton paced Greenville with 19 and Marshall Crumpler had 12.

Greenville finished up with a 5-16 record.

JV Wilmington 39, GCA 33.

Pain Hits Stockton

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — The exigencies of winning couldn't have been much more pronounced.

Dick Stockton, after winning the first set of his first-round encounter with Jimmy Connors in the $225,000 U.S. National Indoor Tennis Championship, started what could be the end of his career. Chronic lower back pain struck Stockton again, Connors noticed and played the pain for what it was worth.

"From the start I felt he was making me run more than any time when we had played before," said Stockton, 25, who retired from the match after having his service broken once in the second set. Connors took a 4-2 lead at that time and Stockton was getting stiffer by the minute.

They had exchanged breaks in the first set and Stockton had eked out of the tiebreaker after taking a 6-3 lead. Connors came within a point at 5-6 when a volley that hit the net cord just dribbled over.

It wasn't that Connors didn't sympathize. When the players met at courtside for the changeover at 5-2, Stockton told Connors he couldn't go on. Connors grasped Stockton's arm, then helped him wrap a towel around his lower back. They walked from the stadium together.

Stockton, ranked 10th in the world last year, was not optimistic about the future, a future doctors have told him should not include tennis.

He said he would return to his home in Carrollton, Texas, to rest and decide what to do next. "I have no choice."

In other first-round matches Tuesday, second seed Vitas Gerulaitis suffered an upset by Marty Riessen. Riessen, who had to qualify for this tournament, beat the flashy New Yorker 7-6, 6-4.

Seventh seed Sandy Mayer beat Australian Geoff Masters 7-5, 6-2; Australian Phil Dent downed South African Ray Moore 6-4, 3-6, 7-6; Spaniard Jose Higueras beat Mike Cahill 6-0, 6-3; Bob Lutz defeated Balozs Taroczy of Hungary 7-6, 7-5; Stan Smith beat Butch Walts 4-6, 6-3, 7-6, and Cliff Drysdale beat Dean Martin Jr. 6-3, 6-2.

Martin was playing in place of Arthur Ashe, who pulled out of the singles competition with a recurring case of iritis, a virus that effects the iris of the eye. Ashe, who had just returned to tournament play after ankle trouble, said he would try to play doubles Thursday.

In another development, Moore announced he would not play later this month in the Davis Cup because of "political interference in the competition." He was referring to plans by protest groups to demonstrate at the Davis Cup March 17-19, condemning South Africa's apartheid policy.

The second round begins Wednesday and Connors will meet Wojtek Fibak, third seed Brian Oottfried plays John Lloyd, Reissen meets Lutz, sixth seed Raul Ramirez is to play Tim Gullikson, and Mark Cox meets Phil Dent.

Students Build Model Of Future Museum Of Art

By DEBBIE JACKSON
Reflector Staff Writer

Pitt Technical Institute architectural drafting students have just completed construction of a five-story building of modern design that will house some of the nation's finest works of art.

This may sound like a feat of gigantic proportions for a class of 12 young men and women to assume, but the building is actually a four by eight feet replica of the new proposed North Carolina Art Museum in Raleigh.

Charles Sneed of the museum recently contacted Edwin Martin, head of the arcitectural drafting program, and asked Martin if the drafting class could build such a model. After four weeks of work and, at least 900 manhours, the structure stands completed on a table in the drafting room of the Administration Building.

This week, the model will be moved to the lobby of the present Art Museum across from the Legislative Building in Raleigh. Following the move to the new building, plans state that the model will go to the lobby of the new structure for display there.

Martin said in an interview early this week that it was somewhat of a "rush job," but that he is very pleased with the work that his students have done in such a short time.

The museum model is built on a scale of one inch equals 16 feet. Cars in the parking lot of the model are all approximately one inch in length. The building itself varies in height, as the roofline drops and then rises, to drop again at another point of the design.

Martin said that it was by far the most difficult assignment that his classes have ever had.

"We make a model as a regularly scheduled project every year. I usually assign a fictitious building, but this came at the right time to take on as a project," said Martin.

He added that, "it was a complex building to make a model of...due to the size, scope, and detail of the structure." He noted that due to this complexity, a preliminary model had to be built. Representatives from the architectural firm — Holloway-Reeves, — in Raleigh and Charles Sneed visited Pitt Tech to inspect the preliminary structure. After a few corrections, work on the final model was begun.

It was Martin's second-year class that constructed the replica, and he added that this was the class' first attempt at building such a model. "Half of the class worked on the base," said Martin, "and the other half worked on the building. After work on the base was completed, everyone helped to finish the building."

The replica includes landscaping, complete with trees and shrubbery made of lichens. The scaled landscape slopes 70 feet. Marting noted that the building was completed and was then placed into a carved-out portion of the base.

The completed structure is made of illustration board with a wood base. There is also a reflecting pond that was designed by internationally-known architect Edward Durell Stone of New York. Martin added that some of the materials for the project were given to the school by local merchants, but that the school funded the program for the most part.

"We do civic projects free sometimes as a public service."

Martin noted that he was very honored when the museum requested that Pitt Tech build the model instead of asking one of the many universities located in the Raleigh area.

"We were honored and impressed, and we couldn't turn them down," he added. March is National Art Month and Sneed indicated to Martin that the model needed to be completed in time for that and also in time for a presentation in Raleigh the first full week in March.

Martin said that there was not much time to complete work on the replica. "If we'd had three more weeks, it might have been better, but as it is, I'm pleased with what was done in the amount of time available."

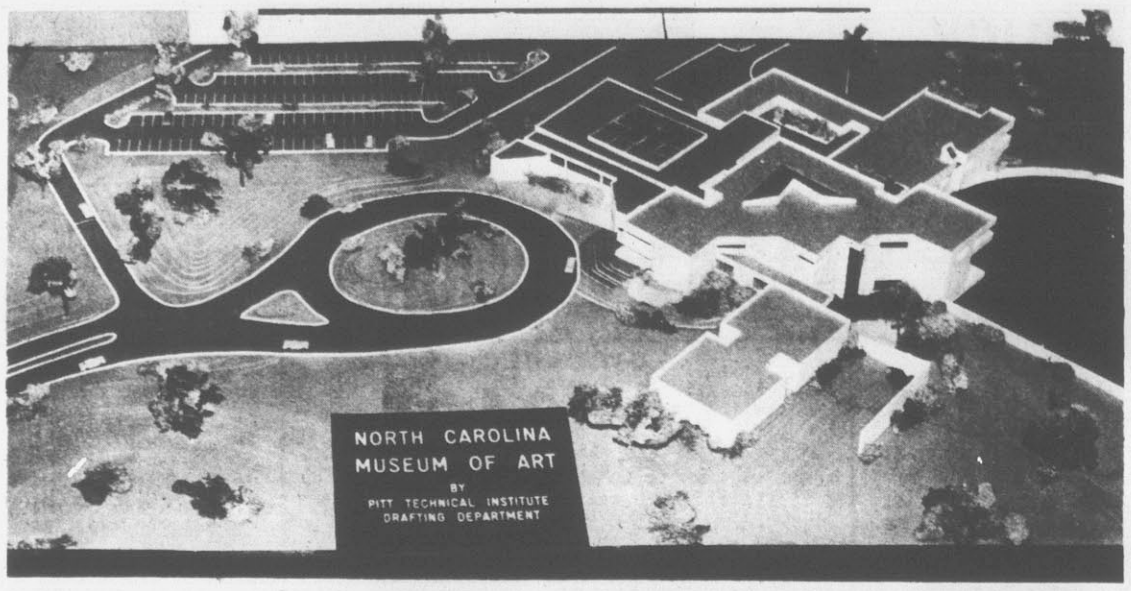

Several million people will more than likely view the exhibition within the next year. Martin said that he feels that this is good publicity for Pitt Tech.

"I hope that people will see for themselves why we were selected to do this." Martin said that representatives from the Art Museum called the Department of Community Colleges which recommended Pitt Tech for the job.

He added that the project, in addition to benefiting the museum, was also a good learning experience for his students. "They learned contours, made recessed glass windows, and it helped them to learn how to take a two-dimensional drawing and convert it into a professional three-dimensional architectural model."

Martin noted that it took the class a week to study the plans for the building because of the unique design. Add to that the preliminary model and then actual construction, and you get a lot of work being put into a very short time span.

Asked how he felt about the time limit on the project, Martin said, "Next year, if the same thing came up, I'd do it again."

Don Brady Is Recognized

Don Brady of Greenville received a Certificate of Recognition at the North Carolina Jaycees' awards banquet Saturday evening in Wilmington.

Brady received the certificate from H. Duke Fentress, senior vice president of American Defender Life Insurance Co., in recognition of Brady's performance in city and community roles which led to his nomination as one of the state's five outstanding young men.

Brady was named recipient recently of the Greenville Jaycees' Distinguished Service Award for 1977 and was nominated by the chapter for the recognition as one of the five outstanding young men in North Carolina.

The awards banquet marked the seventh consecutive year that American Defender has sponsored the event in connection with the state Jaycees.

STATE OF NORTH CAROLINA
PROGRAM YEAR OCTOBER 1, 1977 TO SEPTEMBER 30, 1978

Requests for changes in service definitions and service delivery proposals have necessitated the amendment of the Final Comprehensive Annual Services Plan for social services under Title XX of the Federal Social Security Act. Following are brief descriptions of the changes:

- Changes were made in services provided by local departments of social services due to revisions in planned expenditures.
- The definition for "Family Planning Services" was rewritten so that North Carolina's age limitations for nontherapeutic sterilizations would be the same as those allowed by federal regulation.
- The reference to marital status was removed from the discussion of alternatives for resolving a pregnancy in the definition for "Problem Pregnancy Services" because the alternatives are the same for married and unmarried parents.

PROPOSED EFFECTIVE DATE of the changes is April 1, 1978.

PUBLIC COMMENTS WRITTEN ON THE PROPOSED AMENDMENT may be made during the period March 1, 1978 through March 30, 1978, to the office listed below. Public comments received on the Proposed Amendment will be available for review in the same office.

PUBLIC REVIEW OF PROPOSED AMENDMENT may be done at all county departments of social services Monday through Friday, from 9:00 a.m. to 4:00 p.m.

The Proposed Amendment may be obtained free of charge by calling 1-800-662-7030 (toll-free) or by written request to the office listed below.

Archeologists Racing German Strip-Miners

By ROON LEWALD
Associated Press Writer

HAMBACH, West Germany (AP) — There's a race going on near this Rhineland town, a race between archeologists who have unearthed thousands of cultural treasures from coal mines and miners who find coal more valuable than relics.

The diggers, who have been working in the area for two decades, have unearthed thousands of relics that provide invaluable information about life in the Rhineland as far back as 4500 B.C.

Now the archeologists face their biggest challenge as the miners prepare to rip into the Hambach Forest, a 30-square-mile area between Cologne and Aachen.

Starting in September, giant excavators will claw away the topsoil to reach an estimated 2.4 billion tons of brown coal. The dark brown fossil fuel provides one-third of West Germany's electricity needs.

"On the whole, strip mining is a gain for archeology," says Manfred Rech, who heads an archeology team from the Rhineland Museum in Bonn. A Cologne University team also is digging in this area.

In Hamback Forest, he says, diggers will get "a comprehensive, simultaneous look at all the cultures that existed there."

Rech's five main digging sites are tucked away in woods only a few miles south of the Ruhr River, a World War II defense line where invading Allies pounded at crumbling German opposition in 1945.

One of the team's best finds was made on the overgrown site of a wartime German air base. It was the furnaces of a sophisticated Roman glass-blowing plant and graves of the men who worked there, with well-preserved examples of their craft.

Only two other Roman glass-making plants have been found, both in nearby Cologne. A third plant from a later Roman period was discovered in Italy.

Nearby deposits of fine quartz sand are still used by modern German glass-blowers, and Rech says he strongly suspects more Roman glass-making plants will be found in the area.

That might help answer one question puzzling German archeologists: The origin of Roman glassware found in graves of Germanic tribesmen as far away as Scandanavia and Russia, which were beyond the frontiers of the ancient Roman empire.

At other sites, archeologists uncovered remains of the Roman road that once led from Cologne to Belgium. Nearby were two large Roman villas equipped with luxuries like heated floors and baths.

The Hambach Forest contains traces of perhaps the oldest fortifications in Europe, dating back to the so-called "band ceramic" culture.

The people, named after band markings on their burial pottery, were the first to introduce systematic farming as they move from Turkey throughout Europe during the period from 4500 to 4000 B.C.

Band ceramic settlements have been found all over Europe, but in the Hambach Forest the characteristic long houses were surrounded by deep, ring-shaped ditches with palisade fences.

"The fortifications may have been part of the first systematic phase of warfare in European history," says Rech.

Beer Cans In Solar Heat Test System

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — A computer analyst at Kirtland Air Force Base here is recycling beer cans into a solar energy heating system.

"Based on my experiments," Nat Martz says, "I believe the beer can approach is the most economical method available to me. It will make it possible to eventually heat my entire house."

Martz, who works for the Air Force Systems Command's Weapons Laboratory at the air base, has spent evenings and weekends for the last two years designing, building and testing a prototype system.

It consists of a solar collector filled with 400 beer can halves and connected to an insulated bin of gravel, where the sun's heat is stored.

He cut the aluminum cans with a band saw and installed the halves with the open ends facing the sun in a glass-covered wooden box 7 feet long and 3 feet wide.

There is an open space between the cans and the glass. Heated air is drawn from there with a fan and forced into a 2-by 4-by 6-foot concrete-block bin filled with gravel.

Martz plans to install 10 or more similar solar collectors on the south side of his seven-room house's pitched roof and build a gravel bin 10 times larger than the present one against an east wall.

"I believe I will reduce my heating bill 75 percent by using the sun instead of natural gas," says Martz, who has collected 3,000 additional cans for the project, total cost of which he estimates will be about $2,500.

"When the system is finished by next winter, air will be blown over the gravel to bring the stored heat from the bin into the house," he explains. "I plan to build a microprocessor computer to automatically control the air flow."

Martz says the idea is not a new one and that he has heard of a Colorado man who tried the scheme a decade ago. But his research turned up no more information, and he had to design the prototype from scratch.

He has spent $300 for materials so far, borrowed heat sensing instruments for his tests and has depended on friends for cans and assistance.

The prototype is a closed loop system and provides heat only for test purposes. It has generated temperatures as high as 300 degrees and operates at 80 percent efficiency on sunny days.

Most of the last two years were spent determining the best size for the collector, experimenting with different gravel sizes and amounts, and laying out air passages through the bin to provide even heat absorption. Martz also had to find the best position for the collector relative to the sun.

He calls the beer can halves "heat cups." They provide more heat absorption and reflecting area than corrugated or angled surfaces. And aluminum painted black absorbs and releases heat faster than other metals, he points out.

Wood partitions connected at opposite ends separate the cans, providing a channel for an even air flow.

Martz, who does his own carpentry, metal and masonry work at home, has also constructed a solar water heater hooked up to a home-built whirlpool bath. He is convinced that "everyone should and can have at least some sort of supplementary heating system if we are to really conserve energy."

"Building a beer can solar heater is no job for the person who is all thumbs," Martz concedes. "But anyone who is reasonably handy with tools should be able to do it."

Kindergarten Registration

Registration of kindergarten students for the school year 1978-79 will be held Wednesday, March 22, from 10-11 a.m. in the Pactolus Elementary library.

To attend kindergarten, a child must be five years of age by October 16. In order to register, a child must have a birth certificate and a shot record. A child cannot be enrolled until all records are seen and are up to date.

Those who cannot attend the March 22 meeting, should bring the child's records by the school March 17-23 between 9 a.m. and 3 p.m.

A homing pigeon can fly at 35 to 70 miles an hour. However, when the wind is right, they can move as fast as 90 miles an hour.

How Tar Heel Congressmen And Senators Voted

By Roll Call Report

WASHINGTON—Here's how area Members of Congress were recorded on major roll call votes Feb. 16 thru Feb. 22.

HOUSE

POTHOLES—Passed, 274 for and 137 against, a bill (HR 10979) to give the states $250 million for repairing potholes on their roads. The money would be allocated according to such factors as a state's climate, miles of paved roads and the number of vehicle-miles travelled within the state. Each state capable of demonstrating "emergency" conditions, including those with tropical climates, would receive no less than one-half of one percent of the $250 million. The bill was sent to the Senate.

Rep. Robert Young (D-Mo.), a supporter, said: "This is a record-setting winter, and I believe that it demands some precedent-setting legislation. The bill...is a one-time emergency measure. It does not imply that the federal government will assist the states in road repair every winter."

Rep. Butler Derrick (D-S.C.), an opponent, said: "The resources of the federal government are not infinite. We simply cannot assume every new responsibility even when it may be a worthy one...The Federal government cannot be all things to all people and at the same time maintain a sound budget and a strong national economy."

Members voting "yea" favored the $250 million appropriation for pothole repairs.

Reps. Ike Andrews (D-4), Richardson Preyer (D-6), W.G. Hefner (D-8) and James Martin (R-9) voted "yea."

Reps. L.H. Fountain (D-2), Charles Whitley (D-3), Stephen Neal (D-5), Charles Rose (D-7), James Broyhill (R-10) and Lamar Gudger (D-11) voted "nay."

Rep. Walter Jones (D-1) did not vote.

HUMPHREY INSTITUTE—Passed, 356 for and 53 against, a bill (HR 10606) authorizing a once-only expenditure of $5 million to help establish the proposed Hubert H. Humphrey Institute of Public Affairs at the University of Minnesota. The facility would provide college-level and adult-education instruction in government, and serve as a repository of the public papers of the former senator and vice president. The Senate has not yet acted on the bill.

Rep. Albert Quie (R-Minn.), a supporter, said: "the greatest memorial to (Humphrey's) life will be the preparation of future generations of leaders. Let us insure that today."

Rep. Robert Bauman (R-Md.), an opponent, said his opposition "in no way denigrates" Humphrey's public record but expresses his concern that "if we are in fact to spend taxpayers' money in the amount of $5 million for any one of the many who are prominent, one has to raise the question of exactly where the line is to be drawn."

Members voting "yea" favored the expenditure.

Fountain, Whitley, Andrews, Neal, Preyer, Rose, Hefner, Martin, Broyhill and Gudger voted "yea."

Jones did not vote.

B-1 BOMBER—Voted, 234 for and 182 against, to terminate the B-1 bomber program. This vote rescinded a previous $462 million appropriation for two more B-1 prototypes, and was regarded as the final congressional action needed to kill the B-1 program in accordance with President Carter's request of last year. The B-1 once was regarded as the "bomber of the future" and four prototypes were built. But Carter and Congress have now decided that B-52's outfitted with Cruise missiles will serve as the next generation of manned bomber.

Rep. Jack Edwards (R-Ala.), a supporter of killing the program, said: "I guess I am looked upon as something of a superhawk...And yet I cannot go along with the construction of (two more B-1 prototypes)...For goodness sake, think of the folks back home who are paying the taxes."

Rep. Samuel Stratton (D-N.Y.), an opponent said: "We Americans prided ourselves on keeping our military technology ahead of that of the Soviet Union. Certainly, in our vital nuclear Triad, we cannot do anything less than use the latest technology, which is, of course, the B-1 bomber."

Members voting "yea" opposed the B-1.

Jones, Fountain, Whitley, Martin, Broyhill and Gudger voted "nay."

SENATE

PANAMA CANAL—Tabled, 67 for and 30 against, a motion aimed at undercutting Senate support for the proposed Panama Canal treaties. The motion sought to reverse the order by which the Senate will consider the two treaties, so that the treaty transferring control of the canal zone to Panama would be voted on before the treaty guaranteeing the canal's neutrality. Adoption of this tabling motion means that the neutrality treaty will be brought up first. The order is important because many senators will vote for transfer only if the neutrality treaty is first amended to guarantee U.S. defense interests.

This was the first record vote since Senate debate on the treaties began Feb. 8. A two-thirds majority—at least 67 votes—is required for ratification.

Sen. Howard Baker (R-Tenn.), a supporter of tabling, said the neutrality treaty must be considered first because "it is only if we pass perfecting amendments to (it) that I could say, in good conscience...that the national security interests of this country are fully protected."

Sen. William Scott (R-Va.), an opponent of tabling, said: "It seems to me that, first, we ought to decide whether or not there will be a transfer of title and control of the Canal Zone before we consider this question of neutrality. It just is not logical to consider it any other way."

Senators voting "nay" were opponents of the treaties who wanted to change order of consideration in hopes of blocking ratification.

Sen. Robert Morgan (D) voted "yea."

Sen. Jesse Helms (R) voted "nay."

Expert Bridges A Gap Between Man, Machine

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn. (AP) — Arnold Kanarick once gave a speech on "What's a Nice Psychologist Like You Doing in a Job Like This?"

It's a fair question. In Europe his field is called ergonomics. In the United States, human factors engineering. On both continents, the field is so little known, he admits, that "when strangers ask me what I do I deliver a 30-minute lecture."

At Honeywell's Man-Machine Sciences Group here, Dr. Kanarick supervises an array of projects, the most recent ones including:

—How much new visual and auditory information can an airplane pilot process without suffering "overload?"

—Development of a "vision tester" for drivers that can test eyesight nine ways in minutes.

—What are the most effective colors for the indicators on a plane's display panel?

"What we try to do is improve the interaction between human beings and machines," the psychologist says. "The machine population is increasing even faster than the human population. Improving the interaction between them becomes more crucial every year."

Human factors engineering got its start during World War II when substantial numbers of people began to interact with genuinely complex machines, Kanarick explains.

"Airplanes are the principal example," he says. "One out of a hundred was crashing during pilot training. A terrible percentage. So people started asking: was it human or machine error?

"It turned out to be neither. It was human-machine error. The pilots were fine and the planes were fine; they just didn't work well together. The aircraft was designed for convenience from an engineering standpoint, not the pilot's. For example, the control knobs all were the same. Once they were redesigned — giving each knob a different shape so the pilot could tell just by touching what function it performed — the number of crashes diminished."

Since then, human factors engineering has expanded into scores of other areas. Examples:

Transportation: What effect does automobile headlamp intensity have on driving safety?

Insurance claims: Did the fire occur because of careless cooking habits or because the stove was badly designed?

Industrial design: What are the best levels of key force and displacement for typists?

Communications: Should we devise a special, highly resonant vocabulary to help people communicate better in noisy environments?

"Human-computer interaction is the real growth area," Kanarick says. "I don't think it's too blue-sky to say that you'll find a computer in the American home by the year 2000. They're getting smaller and less expensive every year. One day computers will be running our houses, ordering our groceries, doing a thousand things we now do for ourselves.

"Interacting with them will be a common and casual thing, like using the telephone is today. No matter how automated the world becomes the machines will still be working for our convenience, and not the other way around."

The Verrazano-Narrows Bridge, between Staten Island and Brooklyn, N.Y., has a suspension span of 4,260 feet. It is the longest bridge in the world, exceeding San Francisco's Golden Gate Bridge by 60 feet.

GOLDSBORO, N.C. (AP) — O'Berry Center director Dr. Jose M. deVarona resigned Tuesday, insisting he had not been responsible for problems at the facility for the mentally retarded.

"Although I am in no way responsible for the bad publicity, I am intrinsically associated with the institution," deVarona said. "A new director would have a clean slate with the press."

DeVarona, 54, who had headed the institution since 1973, said he was stepping down "without regret" and cited improvements made in the institution under his administration.

The center broke into the news following the death of a patient who allegedly had been scalded. Later it made headlines when a patient was given cleaning fluid instead of fruit juice at a meal.

In his letter of resignation, deVarona said that when he took over, O'Berry had the highest patient-to-staff ratio and the lowest budget of any of the state's mental retardation centers. He said in spite of this he was directed to get the center certified as an intermediate care institution.

"Essentially, I had to change O'Berry from a medically-oriented to a program-oriented institution, from custodial care to active treatment," he wrote.

He said this "placed an enormous burden on all our staff, especially since we were operating with approximately one-fifth of the staff normally required for this work." Even so, he said, O'Berry won temporary certification.

DeVarona said this certification enabled the state to collect an average of $6.5 million a year from the federal government — or a total of about $30 million.

DeVarona said that these federal funds went to North Carolina's general fund rather than the center.

New Explorer Post Program Starting

A new Explorer Post will begin activities tonight with a meeting at the Allied Health Building at 7, according to District Scout Executive Richard Kelley.

"This new program will involve persons who are interested in medical-related fields," said Kelley. "It will provide the participants with some insight into the various careers available in medicine and give them some idea as to whether or not they would like to pursue a career in any of these areas."

At the meeting, is Kelley, there will be inputs by Pitt Memorial Hospital, AHEC, both the nursing and medical schools at ECU, and the Allied Health department of ECU.

From now until May, the participants will learn basic medical knowledge and gain exposure through a multi-media presentation. Then in September, they will begin actual work in the hospital.

Anyone 14-21 years of age, male or female, who is interested in joining this Explorer post is invited to attend the meeting. It is expected to last about an hour.

LearnedLaw From Inside

LEGAL RESEARCHER — Paul Kelley, 31, of West Chicago, Ill., peruses law books in the Chicago office of an attorney. (AP Laserphoto)

By MARK K. METZGER
Associated Press Writer

WEST CHICAGO, Ill. (AP) — When Paul Kelley says he knows the ins and outs of criminal law, he's talking about more than just what he's read in books. He learned much of what he knows while serving a 50-to 100-year stretch for murder.

Today Kelley, 31, of West Chicago, is out of prison and has a thriving business doing legal research and writing briefs. He works, on a case-by-case basis, for lawyers throughout Illinois, and his technique has been cited in a least one law book.

"I kind of like the idea of helping people get out of the penitentiary," he said with a chuckle. But he said when he first stuck his nose into a lawbook, all he had in mind was getting himself out of the penitentiary.

Kelley, an orphan at 9, went into prison a two-time loser. A high school dropout, he pleaded guilty at 19 to taking part in a murder that he had gone to the police to try to prevent.

He found himself in prison wondering if he couldn't get a better shake from the system. "I got 50 to 100 years. You can imagine what kind of defense I got," he said recently. With some authority, he added, "I could have defended myself better."

He had developed a distrust for lawyers, so he decided to take things into his own hands and began reading law books. On his prison income as a mechanic — 3 cents an hour, or about $7 a month — he started to build his law library.

"In the beginning, I didn't even know what law books to buy," he said, "I bought any law book. I got stuff on wills, torts, taxation. It took a while to learn."

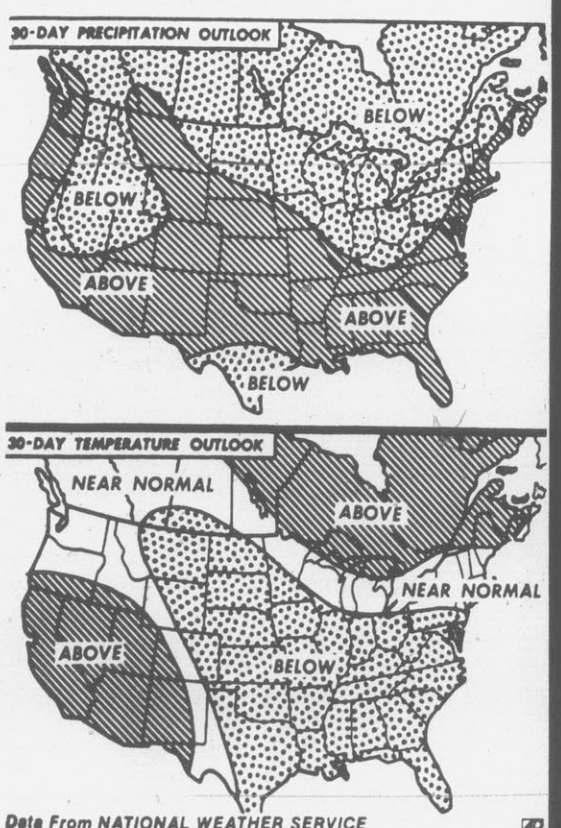

After about a year of this scatter-shot self-education, he stumbled across a publication called the Illinois Reporter, which contained the legal decisions and opinions that he was looking for. But Kelley had just $8 and the subscription was $16. He sent in his $8, promising to pay the rest as soon as he got the money.

The publisher not only gave him a year's subscription, but also sent along five years' back issues. Kelley went to work with a vengeance.

In 1967 he filed his first appeal, claiming the court that convicted him had no jurisdiction over the case. He took that appeal all the way to the U.S. Supreme Court, which dismissed the suit, but not before asking the U.S. Justice Department to file a response to it.

Soon, he was writing appeals for other inmates, developing a booming practice as a "jailhouse lawyer." He estimates he wrote 200 or 300 motions, briefs and other legal documents in prison.

In 1971, a law book referred to Kelley as "a leading brief writer in the state." And when he got out of prison on parole in 1976, he had a job offer from the prosecutor who had sent him up.

PUZZLE PROF — Michael Miller, 15, teaches a course in crossword puzzles at New York's New School for Research where he is the school's youngest instructor out of about 800 teachers. (AP Laserphoto)

Puzzle Prof Is Only 15

By BURT BERLINER

NEW YORK (AP) — Palindromes, pangrammatics, rhopalics — they're no puzzle to Michael Miller.

Miller teaches one of the most unusual courses of 1,300 offered at New York's New School for Social Research: "Beyond Crossword Puzzles."

"I wasn't sure if people would pay $115 each to better their puzzle skills, but here they are," says Miller, who at 15 is the school's youngest instructor out of about 800 teachers.

A dozen people have enrolled in the course, which meets once a week for 14 weeks. Aged 25 to 70, students' professions range from artist to market analyst, says Miller, who is getting $550 to head the class.

"No one has acted aloof to me because of my age," the youth says. He first sent in a course proposal to the school, then met with administrators to discuss details.

"It was whimsy at first. I thought I'd have fun teaching," says Miller, who began working the New York Times crossword puzzles — some claim they are among the country's most challenging — when he was 11 years old.

Since then, he's had two of his own accepted by the Times. The themes were academy awards and Mark Twain.

"I did them in bits and pieces — a half-hour here and there — over three months," says Miller, whose father is a conductor with the American Symphony Orchestra. His mother has authored a book on the problems television creates in family life.

"We never did watch much TV. And the whole family's always been interested in word games. You pick up a lot of information that way," he says.

Many of those tidbits are obsecure facts, he readily admits.

"Once in awhile, a latin phrase will come up at school and I'll know it from having seen it in a crossword puzzle," says Miller, a 10th grader at the Collegiate School in Manhattan.

He teaches students about word games involving palindromes, pangrammatics and rhopalics, which he says don't always require as much accumulated knowledge as crossword puzzles do.

"It's a matter of understanding the mechanics of these games, how they're constructed," Miller says. "A palindrome is a word or sentence that reads the same forward and backward. Pangrammatics are sentences that use every letter of the alphabet one time only. Rhopalics are sentences in which each word is one letter longer than the previous word."

Miller's favorite puzzlemaker is Richard Maltby, whose word puzzles appear in Harper's magazine. "Maltby gives you less to work with. For instance, the clue to 18 across might read 'related to 16 down, 27 across and 52 down.' You have to figure those out first."

Miller, who writes for his school newspaper, hasn't settled on a career yet.

Mite-Resistant Eggplant Sought

NEW BRUNSWICK, N.J. (UPI) — Researchers at Rutgers University are trying to develop eggplant resistant to two-spotted mites to eliminate the need for chemical sprays.

It is a long, involved process. A cross between the large purple eggplant variety familiar in the United States with an African variety that is small, egg-shaped and yellow created a first generation hybrid. A quarter-acre planting of the hybrid produced 40,000 fruit but only 27 seeds and only two of the seeds germinated.

That's not unusual, says Dr. Bernard Pollack of Rutgers's cooperative extension service. He added the research team is forging ahead, backcrossing the two plants to both parents in hopes of coming up with fertile plants that have inherited the mite resistance of the African parent.

Recipient Of Spear Award

CAROLYN CLINE

Carolyn Leona Cline, senior student in the East Carolina University Department of Physics, is the 1978 recipient of the department's James Fenly Spear Memorial Award.

The award is given each year to an ECU physics student on the basis of scholarship, citizenship and leadership. Selection of the recipient is made by the physics faculty.

Established by Nell C. Spear of Chapel Hill in memory of her son, a former East Carolina student who was killed in World War II, the award carries a cash prise of $50.

Carolyn Cline is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Herbert Rothfeder of Greenville and Mr. and Mrs. Bert Cline of Gaffney, S.C. She was presented the award at the physics department's recent awards banquet here.

Garden Plot's Needs Outlined

DOYLESTOWN, Pa. (UPI) — What's the best spot for a home garden? Vegetable breeder Theodore C. Torrey recommends a plot that gets sun most of the day. It should be away from shrub and tree roots and with good drainage to get rid of puddles after heavy rains. If the soil is not reasonably fertile, it can be improved by working in organic material such as compost, well-rotted manure or peat moss or a complete garden fertilizer.

On the Christmas of 1830, the first scheduled rail service in the United States was initiated at Charleston, S.C., with a four-ton locomotive and five coaches.

Cruises See Number Of Repeaters

By MURRAY J. BROWN
UPI Travel Editor

ABOARD THE S.S. OCEANIC (UPI) — "We're hooked," said John Gibson of Philadelphia. "This is our ninth cruise on the Oceanic and we're looking forward to the 10th."

"No question about it," said his attractive wife, Fern. "John may be the world's worst sailor but he loves the sea and we can't think of a more perfect holiday.

Chief Purser Lucio Sulligoi said repeaters average about 50 percent and have run as high as 85 percent on some cruises.

Sulligoi hosted the Gibsons and other "alumni," 450 of the 700 passengers, at a shipboard party during the Oceanic's 11-day, five-port Caribbean cruise in January. New York attorney Harry Salvan and his wife topped them all with 20 voyages.

"It does cause some minor problems. Everyone wants the same cabin and table and the same stewards," Sulligoi said. "But we manage to keep them happy."

Because of repeaters, Sulligoi said new itineraries and new menus are constantly under review for the liner's Caribbean winter program. At 39,241 tons, the Oceanic is the largest ship ever built exclusively for cruising. In April, it is due to resume weekly sailings New York on seven-day cruises to the Bahamas and Bermuda. Passengers have a choice of sailings: two days and nights in Nassau or one day in Bermuda and one day and night in Nassau.

The remainder of the ship's 1978 winter program out of New York includes four 9-to-16 day multiport Caribbean cruises in February and March.

Our itinerary included San Juan, Puerto Rico; St. Thomas in the U.S. Virgin Islands; the French island of Martinique; and British-flavored Barbados and Antigua. The ship sailed between the ports mostly during the night.

On-shore activities included swimming, golf and tennis (privileges can be arranged), sightseeing and shopping. Although we arrived in Martinique on Sunday, Roger Albert opened his store stocked with French perfume and other top quality imports at bargain-basement prices. He deducts 20 percent on all purchases (except alcohol and cigarettes) paid with traveler checks or major credit cards.

The Home Lines' 774-foot-long, 97-foot-wide, 11-deck Oceanic was built in 1965 at a cost of $35 million. Several more millions have been spent since on a refurbishing in 1973 and redecorating the major public rooms on the Riviera Deck last year.

A unique feature is its Magrodome, a retractable glass roof over the Lido deck. It covers two big free-form pools and a spacious lounge area. In fair and warm weather, the panels are opened. In foul or cold weather, the panels are closed and radiant heating is turned on.

Cabins and staterooms are furnished in modern decor. All have private bathroom facilities (some have bidets), private telephones and individually controlled air-conditioning and heating.

A daily newsletter lists the functions and activities planned and the suggested attire for dinner, formal, informal or optional. Coats and ties for men at dinner are a must even in the Caribbean. That drew a few complaints.

While the Oceanic flies the Panamanian flag, most of its deck and service personnel are Italian. The chef de cuisine is Gerolama Purrone. The emphasis is on Italian cooking, although menus offered a variety of other dishes and some dinners featured French and Caribbean specialties. Meals and services were top-rate.

With another invited American travel writer, we toured the spotless galley and walk-in refrigerators in the hold. For the 11-day cruise, Sulligoi said the Oceanic took aboard more than 34,000 pounds of meats, 8,660 pounds of fowl, 11,900 pounds of fish and seafood, 36,000 pounds of vegetables, and several tons of other provisions, including fresh and canned fruits, pastas and cheeses.

Capt. Giovanni Ruffini has been master of the Oceanic since its debut. He maintains a low profile and often shows up unexpectedly in public rooms. He said passengers sometimes mistake him for a member of the crew and ask questions about the ship and cruise.

What is the most frequently asked question?

"Where is the ladies room," he said without hesitation.

Emergency Medicine A Specialty

By HAROLD H. MARTIN

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — A new brand of doctor is preparing to join the ranks of specialties recognized by the American medical community — the emergency medicine physician.

Final approval by the American Board of Medical Specialties and the Council of Medical Education is expected soon, just 10 years after the American College of Emergency Physicians was formed by eight physicians.

Unlike neurosurgeons, obstetricians, opthamologists or psychiatrists, emergency physicians don't confine themselves to a single part of the body, or a single ailment.

According to the application for approval submitted to a joint CME and ABMS committee, the emergency physician is trained for "the immediate initial recognition, evaluation, care and disposition of patients in response to acute illness and injury.... the direction of the patient to sources of follow-up care, in or out of the hospital as may be required." It also includes emergency care for hospitalized patients, and administration and teaching of emergency care.

According to Dr. David Wagner, national president of the University Association for Emergency Medical Services, until the 1960s emergency medicine was ignored. He said it was relegated to interns, physicians who had failed in other specialties, rotating staff assignments of in-house physicians in other branches of medicine, or a nurse who could marshal a specialist when the need arose.

"One night you might have a pathologist, another night a surgeon, a pediatrician or an obstetrician," said Dr. Wagner, who directs the residency course in emergency medicine at the Medical College of Pennsylvania.

Wagner, himself a pediatrician who came into emergency medicine through a junior staff assignment, described emergency medicine as, "The response to the unplanned medical need."

While there is some similarity to the televised presentation of medical drama, he said, "it's only one leg of the elephant.

"A large amount of emergency medicine deals with the patient who presents himself to the emergency room with a complaint."

The emergency physicians take a three or five year residency course and learn such things as the battlefield knack of sorting out a sudden influx of disaster victims by severity of injury, how to recognize many diseases at various stages and how to react to drug overdoses. They also learn how to calm the fear of a child with a cut finger.

Only 5 to 8 per cent of the problems faced in the emergency room involve life-or-death situations, Wagner said, and these are the ones that have always been handled there.

Some 43 percent are problems that require immediate attention to prevent medical or mental complications and another 40 to 45 percent are problems that are of concern for the individual who has no other place to go.

According to Dr. Albert Finestone of Temple Hospital, who helped establish emergency medical training in Philadelphia's many teaching hospitals, it was this latter group flocking to the emergency rooms that brought about the change in their nature, and a need for a new speciality.

Where the doctor's office used to have an x-ray machine, anesthesia, electrocardiogram and a small laboratory that could take care of emergencies, he said, new sophisticated scanners and life support equipment was outside his experience and pocketbook.

"As more sophisticated things became available, more and more people decided to go to hospital," said Finestone.

"If you think you're having a heart attack you don't go to the doctor's office, you go to the hospital. If you're stabbed you go to the hospital.

"House calls are obsolete. Particularly in the inner city, it is a matter of security. A doctor on a house call at 2 a.m. is just as likely to get mugged as he is to see a patient."

In 1976, Wagner said, there were over 70 million visits to emergency rooms, about 500 visits to every 1,000 people.

Estimates quoted in "The New Physician" magazine said there will be about 90 million visits by 1980.

New Dracula Is Pretty Special

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Televison Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — It'll make your blood run cold, but no matter. Public TV is offering a great new show about Dracula, the ever-thirsty Transylvania Necker, and you've got to see it.

It's "Count Dracula," a classy BBC version of Bram Stoker's classic horror tale. It comes in three parts, tonight, on March 8 and on March 15, in most cities. No, Bela Lugosi isn't in it.

Louis Jourdan, the matinee idol, now plays the caped chap who leaves the coffin corner at night to bat around and generally dismay all types of folks — types A, B, AB and O.

Unlike Lugosi, whose Dracula gave legions of rubber-lipped comics a fresh chance at laughs, Jourdan does the count as a restrained, exquisitely mannered, quietly menacing carotid taster.

By underplaying, he greatly increases the chill, chill, chill of the evening, which commences with Chapter One tonight.

It starts normally enough with young English lawyer Jonathan Harker (Bosco Hogan) bidding adieu to his fiance (Judi Bowker) and promising to write from Transylvania, where he's bound on business.

He carries documents deeding a house in England to a Count Dracula. As the lad learns during a coach ride through Transylvania, the locals wouldn't touch his client with a 10-foot stake.

Deposited at Castle Dracula near midnight, with a cold wind blowing and wolves howling, Harker seems a mite uneasy even though given the big hello from the count in this manner:

"Welcome to my house, Mr. Harker. Come freely, go safely and leave something of the happiness you bring."

But at dawn, while shaving, Harker suspects something is amiss when (a) Dracula's image doesn't reflect in a mirror and (b) the count gets downright weird when he see blood caused by a shaving nick.

At night, as the wolves resume howling, the count murmurs: "Listen to them — the children of the night. What music they make."

Well, the lad knows he really is in for a hard time when he finds himself a veritable prisoner and espies Dracula that night flapping bat-like down a castle wall to make his rounds.

"Am I going mad?" cries lawyer Harker.

No, but he may become a bit drained. I know I was as the program slowly increased its horror level bit by bit, drop by drop.

'Barney Miller' Today Is Not Quite As Originally Conceived

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — With cigar clamped between teeth, Danny Arnold turns his back to the actors rehearsing "Barney Miller" and stares at four television screens in a dark recess of the cavernous stage.

Hal Linden, a pistol strapped to his waist, his arms folded, stands beside him, also intently watching the actors on the monitors. Linden, who plays Capt. Barney Miller, is directing this episode of the hit ABC police comedy series, but producer Arnold is doing "the fine tuning."

In a flash, Arnold yanks the cigar out of his mouth and, waving it like a baton, whirls and rushes toward the actors. He is a formidable figure, with craggy face and booming voice.

"Hold it," he yells, as he approaches Steve Landesberg and Mari Gorman, playing two detectives in the squad room of the 12th precinct, fictionally set in New York's Greenwich Village.

Turning avuncular, he pulls the two performers aside for a quieter discussion.

"Barney Miller," in its fourth year on ABC, has had actors come and go, but has gotten better in the ratings.

"The star of the show is the room, and the kinds of characters that come in," says Linden. "We're only the reactors to the insanity. Each of us represents a different view of the world. I'm the straightest.

"Dietrich (Steve Landesberg) disects and analyzes the world. He is rarely emotionally involved. Wojo (Max Gail) is emotional and sees everything in black and white. Harris (Ron Glass) is detached from people, concerned only with his dress, his women. Work for him is an interruption of his life. Yamana (Jack Soo) is an Oriental enigma. He sees all, knows all, and gently drops his wisdom. But it's different key from the rest of us."

Then Linden, a Tony award winner for "The Rothschilds," does not see it as a star vehicle?

"Yeah, I think it's a star vehicle. I've got the title role. And Barney is in everything. Everybody else could go on vacation, but not Barney.

"Barney represents the audience's eye. I can do the reactions for them. When Yamana says something in another key, I can get confused for the audience. They know they're supposed to be confused."

Arnold sees "Barney Miller" as the flip side of "Detective Story," with an ensemble of disparate characters reacting individually to a similar situation — in this case comedically. It approaches police work in the way "M-A-S-H" approaches war.

Arnold created the show with Theodore Flicker, although what the show is now is not what they envisioned. Miller was to have been a Jewish cop, but the role has evolved into something nonethnic.

"You start out with one concept, but as you cast the roles, the personalities of the actors begin to change," he says.

"It was never a question of whether Hal Linden could play Barney Miller. It was a question of whether what I saw in Hal Linden would eventually become visible in Barney Miller. It's typecasting to an extent.

"People make instant impressions. You only have 22 minutes in a half-hour comedy. You want someone who comes in and causes the audience to say, 'hey, I know who that person is.'"

Opening lead: Jack of ♣.

No, your eyes aren't playing tricks with you. This is the same hand as yesterday. It was played recently in the Von Zedtwitz Double Knockout Team Championship in New York, and we are going to take a look to see what happened at the other table.

As you may recall, the same contract was reached at the first table and declarer made his slam after West led the queen of clubs. Here, too, a club was the opening lead, but here West chose the mildly deceptive lead of the jack of clubs.

We do not recommend blindly falsecarding. However, it can be a sound principle when defending against a slam, especially if you know that the lead is unlikely to give partner any problem.

The play proceeded exactly as at the other table. Declarer won in dummy and lost the diamond finesse. West continued with the ten of clubs, taken by the king. Declarer cashed all his red-suit winners, discarding a spade and a club from his hand. East parted with a low club, and West sluffed the nine of clubs and two spades.

Declarer was faced with the problem of guessing whether to finesse in spades or play for the drop, since only four spades were outstanding. He crossed to the ace of spades, both defenders following, then paused to review the situation.

From the lead of the jack of clubs, declarer decided to place East with the queen. East's last card could be either a spade or a club. Since West seemed to have no problem about discarding his club, declarer decided that he was probably trying to hold on to a guarded queen of spades. So declarer decided to take the spade finesse, and lost the last two tricks to the queens of spades and clubs.

Yesterday's Cryptoquip—POLYUNSATURATED FOOD FAILED TO SATISFY PATIENT PARROT.

©1978 King Features Syndicate, Inc.

Today's Cryptoquip: S equals W

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Your Daily HOROSCOPE from the CARROLL RIGHTER INSTITUTE

FORECAST FOR THURSDAY, MAR. 2, 1978

GENERAL TENDENCIES: The daytime is fine for you to make extensive plans that will enable you to make rapid progress in your line of endeavor in the future. Be alert to new opportunities at this time.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Get together with persons who can inspire you to new heights and listen to their ideas carefully. Think constructively.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) You have to be more tactful with loved one in the evening but directness is best during daytime. Avoid misunderstanding.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Ask questions so that you know exactly what others expect of you and then you can work together with them intelligently.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Make sure to use modern appliances efficiently and get good results with your work. Use your imagination more.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21.) Make plans to have greater abundance in the future. Come to a better understanding with a co-worker. Use common sense.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Study well any problematical affairs you have at home and know how to solve them ideally. Guard your reputation.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Try to be more cooperative with close ties and get better results in the future. Take any health treatments you may need.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) You want to have a greater income and you can do so by using practical ideas and methods. Be active, be happy.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) By being clever you can easily improve your personal existence and gain more happiness now. Be logical.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Discuss a private matter with a close friend and get the advice you need. Show increased devotion to loved one.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Getting together with good friends can bring something good into your life now. Strive for increased happiness.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) You have a career plan that can become successful if you get the advice of an expert now. Avoid one who is a detriment to you.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will be endowed with a keen intellect and should be given the finest education you can provide. Include the study of foreign languages since there is likely to be much travel. Don't neglect spiritual training early in life.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to YOU!

CHICKEN JAMBOREE

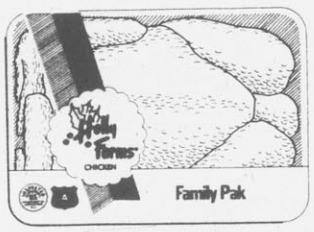

Now's the time to buy chicken during our big Chicken Jamboree. And Holly Farms is the chicken to buy. It's bred and fed to be plump and juicy. It's always U.S.D.A. Inspected. And every piece is always Grade A (or it doesn't reach our store). Shipped chilled, never frozen or packed in ice, so you're not paying for a lot of absorbed water. And it's dated for freshness right on the package. If you haven't tried Holly Farms Chicken before, now's the time. Look for the bright red and yellow ribbon emblem that identifies every package of Holly Farms Chicken. It's the one to pick to be sure.
