Carter Administration Sweats Out Coal Verdict

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration, nervously awaiting the outcome of the United Mine Worker contract ratification vote, is taking subtle steps to guide 166,000 striking miners toward approval of the pact.

Officially, the administration is staying out of the ratification drive put together by union leaders. Labor Secretary Ray Marshall said at a news conference Wednesday it would be inappropriate for federal officials to be "out campaigning" for the tentative pact.

But sources said the administration approached Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., earlier this week to discuss whether he would be willing to help in the drive.

Sources said the discussion Monday included the possibility of Kennedy making a trip to West Virginia to urge miners to vote an end to their 87-day strike. Kennedy decided against such a step, according to the sources, who asked not to be identified.

A Kennedy aide said the Massachusetts Democrat "feels that the best role for him to play is as a member of the Senate Human Resources Committee."

The panel would handle any legislation President Carter requests to impose a government end to the strike should the miners turn down the contract.

Carter said Wednesday he has "good hope" for ratification, and Marshall said, "It's looking favorable."

But several top administration officials believe ratification is far from certainin.n. At his news conference, Marshall conceded there is "ferment" in the coal fields over the terms of the pact.

He said there is little chance for new negotiations and said the administration is prepared to act immediately to end the strike if the contract is turned down.

The miners will be voting over the weekend on whether to end their strike against the Bituminous Coal Operators Association, a 130-member organization responsible for half the nation's coal production.

The UMW itself is promoting the proposed contract through a series of radio and television advertisements that began airing on Wednesday. Union officials have said they will spend $40,000 for air time for the television commercials.

The administration has made no secret of its desire for the contract to be approved. Carter, announcing the tentative settlement Friday on national television, urged the miners to ratify the pact, and he and Marshall also have referred to miners' patriotism in several public statements.

Hunt Asks 2nd School

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Gov. Jim Hunt proposed today the creation of a second Governors School like the one the state operates each summer at Salem College in Winston-Salem for gifted high school students.

The proposal, calling for the creation of a Governor's School program at St. Andrews College in Laurinburg won the approval of the finance committee of the state Board of Education and was due for consideration by the full board later.

"I strongly urge you to provide the money for this second school this year so the high schools can begin now idenitfying those students who are eligible," Hunt told the finance committee. "We should not delay this effort any more than necessary because we have a great reservoir of talent and intellect in our high schools, and we ought to nuture and encourage it. Next year will be too late for many of these gifted students."

The present governor's school at Salem College operates six weeks each summer and provides training in English, French, math, science, social studies, choral, art and drama for 400 high school students selected on a basis of their academic standing and talent. The school is free.

The proposed school at St. Andrews College would enroll 200 students next summer and would cost approximately $125,000.

Dr. Craig Phillips, state superintent of public instruction, said "an additional school for our gifted students in the summer is long overdue. We are delighted Governor Hunt strongly supports this proposal."

Hunt told the finance committee that a second school is needed because last year 1,100 students who applied for the Governor's School program were not accepted largely because there was no room for them.

Evasive In Testifying

WASHINGTON (AP) — Tongsun Park is increasingly evasive and is giving the House ethics committee incomplete and sometimes angry answers about alleged efforts to buy influence in Congress, several committee members say.

His evasiveness, they said after Park's second day of testimony Wednesday, was notable especially on the question of whether he was a South Korean agent when he gave congressmen thousands of dollars.

One member said Park was particularly evasive whenever investigators confronted him with information tending to support the allegation that he made contributions to buy influence in Congress for the South Korean government, not just for his rice business.

Park, who contends he contributed to congressmen out of friendship and to help his business, acknowledged to reporters that "the questions were very tough."

"A witness does not like to face such tough questions," Park said, "but I'm glad they are being tough so once and for all we can get the truth out."

The question of whether Park was a South Korean agent is important because the Constitution prohibits congressmen from taking money from a foreign agent, but until 1974, it was legal to accept contributions from a foreign businessman.

Reps. Bruce Caputo, R-N.Y., and Millicent Fenwick, R-N.J., were among the committee members who said Park was increasingly evasive, although they refused to say what kinds of questions he tried to evade.

Caputo said Park gave evasive or incomplete answers "many times" and seemed to have a good idea how much the committee already knows.

Changes Pondered In Draft Of New Zoning Ordinance

The Planning and Zoning Commission began its review last night of the draft of the city's proposed new zoning ordinance.

Community Development Director John Schofield discussed some of the major changes proposed in the new ordinance and reviewed during the workshop three of the significant articles in the draft.

According to Schofield, there has been no comprehensive change in the zoning ordinance since 1969 and since the present ordinance was adopted, over 25 amendments and three new zoning districts have been added.

He said that the frequency at which amendments have been proposed has increased and it signifies that the ordinance is not working as well as it should be.

Schofield explained that the present document does not contain flexibility from the developer's standpoint and from the point of view of surrounding property owners, there is no guarantee of what might be developed on nearby tracts.

The City Council created a Land Development Codes Review Committee composed of two council members, three planning board members, two representatives from the Board of Adjustments, two homebuilders or developers, the city attorney, city engineer, building inspector, city manager and Schofield. Since August of last year, the committee has been working with consultant Robert Leary of Leary & Associates, Raleigh, on a draft of the new zoning ordinance.

Among the major changes, it was noted last night, is the proposed addition of a Planned Development District. Under the new format, the developer would present his plans to the Council and the governing board would approve the development plans but not the zoning. In return for the strict site control, the ordinance would give the developer flexible development standards within his property.

Schofield said that the provision would meet the flexibility desired by developers and still guarantee security for nearby neighborhoods. The development district format could be used for non-residential as well as residential property, it was noted, and also on property with mixed uses.

In rezoning requests, the standard application would be submitted and and a detailed site plan showing what is proposed for construction and where presented before the Council. Once approval is given by the Council, the developer prepares necessary site drawings and other detailed documents and goes before the planning director for an administrative review process and clearance.

Schofield said that the codes committee is also recommending in the draft that certain types of signs not be allowed. Signs would be inventoried and the owner of a

BRAIN-DAMAGED CHILD

The Grimesland Free Will Baptist Church is accepting donations for the family of Melanie Little, a brain-damaged four-year old now involved in an intensive program of patterning to overcome her handicaps.

Melanie and her mother, Mrs. Debra Little, and her grandmother, Mrs. Janet Nichols, spent the week of Feb. 13 at the Institutes for the Achievement of Human Potential in Philadelphia, Pa. They have begun a program that includes patterning for neurological reorganization at least eight times a day, plus many other planned activities to improve Melanie's psycho-motor situation. Many families who begin this program have many volunteers as patterners, because of the frequency with which it must be done. Mrs. Little has elected, however, to have herself, her mother, and her sister, Belinda Nichols, conduct the program in order to provide as calm an atmosphere as possible for Melanie.

Mrs. Little, in order to rearrange her working schedule so as to do the patterning as often as her daughter needs it, has had to take a $70-a-week cut in pay in her job with Carolina Telephone and Telegraph Company. This loss of income, coupled with the cost of the consultation and travel for the program, have placed her and her mother in some financial need.

Anyone wishing to help out may make contributions in care of the First FWB Church, Grimesland, N. C. 27837. Inquiries may be directed to Mrs. Little.

Downtown Association Asking Meter Removal

The Downtown Greenville Association Inc. has recommended to the Parking Authority that certain parking meters in the downtown district be removed.

Dave Mosier, the association's executive director, reported that the Parking Authority tabled action on the meter issue at a recent special call meeting in order for further study to be undertaken, including a visit to another city to view its parking situation.

According to Mosier, the Parking Authority initially recommended to the City Council that the meters be retained but after the merchant's proposal was submitted on Feb. 8, the Authority voted to ask the Council to postpone action on its recommendation.

The executive director said that the association presented the parking proposal, recommendations and results of a five-city study to the Authority on Feb. 22 and the matter was tabled at that time in order for more study to be done.

Mosier reported that Kinston has been recommended as a tentative visiting site with the week of March 27 proposed for the visit.

He explained that the downtown merchants have recommended that meters be removed on all lots except the Hooker Lot where meter rates would be changed to 25 cents for eight hours; on Fifth, Fourth and Third Streets from Greene to Reade; on Dickinson Avenue; on Washington from Dickinson to Second; on Evans from Reade Circle to Second; and on Cotanche from Reade Circle to Second.

Under the association's recommendation, 79 meters would be retained in the area, including the red meters around city hall and on Third Street, and meters on Second Street and on the Hooker lot.

In addition, the DGA has recommended that the overtime penalty be set at $2. The

New Progress On Changeover For Rhodesia

SALISBURY, Rhodesia (AP) — Prime Minister Ian Smith and three black political leaders have made more progress toward conclusion of the agreement they are negotiating for transfer of political power from Rhodesia's whites to the black majority.

Qualified sources reported Dec. 31 has been accepted by Smith, Bishop Abel Muzorewa, the Rev. Ndabaningi Sithole and Chief Jeremiah Chirau as the date for transfer of power to the blacks.

They also have agreed that each of them would be chairman in rotation of the transitional government that will run the country in the interim, the sources said.

Issues still to be resolved before the signing of a formal agreement include the composition of the interim government and the division of the cabinet posts.

The four leaders must also decide whether the present white-dominated Parliament will continue to function as a legislature during the transition or whether it will be suspended until a new constitution is drawn up and it is called back into session to accept it.

Smith has proposed that the interim government be half black and half white. The blacks demanded equal representation for each of the four factions represented in the negotiations, meaning 25 percent white and 75 percent black.

The three black leaders were conferring and were expected to present new proposals to Smith later in the day.

Stockholders Told Best Year

WINTERVILLE — C. Don Langston, president of First State Bank, told those attending the bank's annual stockholders' meeting that 1977 was the best year ever for the firm.

Some 91 per cent of the stockholders were represented either by proxy or in person at the 72nd annual meeting, it was pointed out.

In his report, Langston informed the shareholders that total resources of the state's second oldest bank as of Dec. 31 amounted to $29,213,938, an increase of $4,276,672 over the previous year-end total of $24,937,266.

"The bank's continued outstanding growth can be atrributed to the acceptance of the First State Bank by individuals and businesses in Pitt County," the president commented.

Langston revealed that net earnings for 1977 were $2.56 per share, compared with $2.50 per share for 1976. Dividends for bank stock were 45 cents per share in 1977, he said.

"Significant contributions have been made to the community," Langston reported, "in interest paid to depositors, in salaries and employee benefits, and in other expenditures and contributions made within the community."

He added, "We are the only locally owned and managed bank in our market area so we intend to continue our strong support of the communities we serve."

First State Bank operates an office here and three in Greenville.

Shareholders approved a memorial resolution in honor of the late J. Curtis Hendrix. Hendrix was executive vice president and a member of the bank's board from September of 1974 until his death in late 1977.

Directors elected to serve for 1978 are Langston, Vernon E. White, W. A. Weathington Sr., John Milton May, John F.

Small Improvement By Dollar After Crashing To New Low

LONDON (AP) — The dollar made a small improvement today when trading opened on European money markets, after it crashed to new lows Wednesday.

The dollar rose fractionally in West Germany, Switzerland, France and Italy.

Gold bullion stood at its highest level this year after the regular morning fixing by dealers in London.

Gold was fixed at $183.50 an ounce, up 50 cents on Wednesday's close, and $14 an ounce more expensive than it was Jan. 3, the first trading day of 1978.

Dealers in Frankfurt said the money market was cautious and uncertain, anticipating moves by the West German government to curb the inflow of foreign capital attracted by the strength of the Deutschemark.

London dealers said the market was "fairly steady" compared with the hectic conditions Wednesday.

The dollar opened at 2.0133 marks in Frankfurt, moving back up above the two-mark level below which it plunged for the first time during trading earlier this week. It closed Wednesday at 2.0075.

In Zurich the dollar opened at 1.83625 Swiss francs, up from 1.82125.

The dollar seemed steady against the British pound after closing Wednesday at 1.9465 dollars.

London dealers said the pound was "just an onlooker" in the current fight, with the West German mark and the Swiss franc the two main currencies involved.

TEACCH Therapists Seeking New Ways To Reach Autistic Children

By CHARLES BABINGTON

CHAPEL HILL—The teacher repeatedly asks a 5 year-old girl to "get the ball." The child doesn't move.

But when the teacher clasps his hands together, interlocking his fingers, the girl picks up a beach ball and hands it to him.

In another room, a therapist asks a young boy to hand her a toy car from the group of small objects before him. But he randomly grabs anything, searching her eyes to see if he is correct.

When playing alone, however, with a box labeled with the picture of a car, the child puts only cars in the box.

These children are not deaf—they are autistic. And they are being helped by the state-supported program TEACCH (Treatment and Education of Autistic and related Communications Handicapped Children).

Autism is not a specific disease, but a set of behavioral symptoms, says TEACCH Director Eric Schopler, professor of psychiatry and psychology at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. "Autistic children," he says, "generally relate poorly to their parents and peers, tend to repeat the same activity over and over, and suffer severe language problems, ranging from lack of language to peculiar language usage."

No one knows autism's exact causes, Schopler says, but there's increasing evidence that they are related to brain abnormalities rather than to poor socialization, as previously believed.

"In treating autistic children," he says, "special emphasis is placed on the communication process because it is central to the child's expression of what he thinks and feels." Thus the therapists and psychologists at TEACCH's five regional centers (Asheville, Chapel Hill, Charlotte, Greenville and Wilmington) constantly seek new ways to reach the often severely withdrawn children with whom they work.

PSYCHOEDUCATIONAL THERAPIST. . .at the Eastern TEACCH Center, Maxine Robinson works on number concepts with John Respess.

For example, Bob Foster, an educational specialist at the Chapel Hill Center, has found that some children can associate objects or concepts more easily with signs than with spoken or written words.

Until a few years ago, Foster says, most experts felt that teaching sign language to a child with severe language problems would inhibit his chances of ever learning to speak. Following the lead of a Chicago researcher, however, Foster began to pantomime the uses of certain objects, such as a cup, for an autistic child who could not associate the spoken word "cup" with the object.

The child not only learned that the sign (imitating drinking from a cup) stood for the object, but he also tried to say "cup" when making the sign.

Foster uses various types of sign language with all six of the students in the Chapel Hill TEACCH classroom. One boy, who can say a few one-syllable words, uses about 250 signs, including some fairly sophisticated hand gestures designed for the deaf.

Other students can't speak at all, and have mastered only a few simple signs, such as those for ball, candy and drink.

Although the children's progress seems painstakingly slow compared to that of normal students their age, Foster and his associates continue to work patiently. A child who at first seems unable to communicate, he says, "may learn a concept and associate it with a sign. Later, he may be able to come close to saying the word.

"Of course it's best," he adds, "if he can learn to speak."

Less severely impaired autistic children may be able to associate an object with a single symbol, but not understand that the object can have more than one name or attribute. Margaret Lansing, TEACCH psychoeducational specialist, has developed what she calls "the sorting tray" to help teach abstract concepts to children "whose expressive communication is through the movement and arrangement of objects."

The tray contains four small boxes (cut open milk cartons). On each box, a teacher or parent places a drawing depicting one of numerous small objects before the child.

The child is taught to place the appropriate object in each box. For example, a toy car belongs in the box labeled with the outline of a car, and anything yellow goes in the box labeled with a patch of yellow.

Once this task is mastered, a box will be labeled with the drawing of a yellow car, and the child learns to place only the yellow car in it.

Homemaker's Haven

A FREE, AT-HOME OPPORTUNITY

A sound financial plan for spending and saving is an important step toward successful money management. It can't guarantee you more money but it can increase your chances of having more things you want and need.

Managing your money can help you live within your income, cut down on impulse spending, achieve financial goals, set priorities, gain confidence in handling financial affairs, and increase your net worth.

Beginning March 1978, we would like to offer to you, free of charge, a "Home Study Course in Money Control." There are four activities to be completed in the home study course. One activity will be mailed to you each week. At completion of the home study course, we would like to have a get-together to clear up any problems in completing the activities and evaluate the program. This date will be set later.

If you would like to enroll, please call 758-1196 or write by March 3. It will be fun and an inflation know-how guide.

ENOUGH HOME INSURANCE?

Even though your house is getting older, its value may be getting higher. And that doesn't seem to make sense— especially when it means you have to keep raising your insurance coverage each year.

But that's the effect of inflation on one hand— and the increased cost of replacement, on the other. And this is what you have to insure against—the cost of replacement.

Say you could get fifty thousand dollars today for your house. But how much would it cost to build a new one of the same caliber?

Keep in mind that construction materials have risen about ten percent per year. That means if your house is ten years old, building another one like it could be almost double the original cost.

So check that insurance coverage again. You should be carrying at least eighty percent of the replacement cost— not the market value—of your house.

How do you determine replacement cost? There are professional appraisers who will give you an estimate for a fee. Or you may ask your insurance agent or a local home builder to figure the cost for you.

Unless your insurance company has been adjusting your coverage each year to keep up with rising costs, you may discover that your coverage is far from adequate.

Reader Now Has Guilty Feeling

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1978 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: Three years ago I married a man whom I had been dating for only one month. I didn't love him at the time, but he loved me, and he was such a kind and decent man that I thought I could learn to love him. I married him for security.

Six months later we adopted a baby boy. (He was my sister's child—she wasn't married at the time, and it seemed the best solution to her problem.) Also, my husband loves children and was very eager to adopt this child. I didn't really want a family so soon, but I couldn't turn this precious little boy away.

Now I realize I can't "learn to love" anyone, and it's futile to try. We are separated now (for the third time this year), and I want a divorce.

I am not a flighty, pleasure-seeking woman, Abby. I am simply being honest with myself and am facing my true feelings.

I feel completely justified in what I'm doing. But if I haven't done anything wrong, why do I feel so guilty?

MIXED EMOTIONS

DEAR MIXED: Because you knowingly entered into a loveless marriage for selfish reasons. You don't mention your husband's reaction to all this, but if he still loves you, he's probably hurting over the prospects of losing you and his newly adopted son. And that's why you feel guilty.

DEAR ABBY: My sister's husband took my rosary beads out of my handbag when I went over to visit her. I know this for a fact, because when his mother died, I saw my rosary in her coffin.

My sister asked the funeral director for the rosary, but her husband overheard her and insisted that the rosary be buried with his mother!

It just goes to show you that some people DO take it with them. (The rosary was hand-cut crystals from Czechoslovakia.)

C.B. IN N.J.

DEAR C.B.: This is not a case of anyone taking anything with them. It's crystal clear that the poor woman was laid to rest with a stolen rosary; may the Lord forgive your sister's husband.

DEAR READERS: I was asked if I knew of a suitable substitute for a proud father to distribute instead of the customary cigars.

I was admittedly stumped, and I asked my readers for some practical suggestions. The results were gratifying.

Many sent me blue pencils stamped, "It's a boy," and pink pencils stamped, "It's a girl." I received bubble gum and candy bars with pink and blue wrappers. Some had "stickers" announcing, "I'm here"—and then the baby's name.

But the best idea came from Palm Beach, Fla., in the form of a printed card which read: "The birth of our second child is a joy that we wish to share with everyone without causing discomfort to the majority of non-smokers, so in lieu of the traditional "It's a boy—It's a girl" cigars, a contribution has been made to the March of Dimes to help fight birth defects.—Sharon and Don Hart"

Nutritionist Confirms You Are What You Eat

By MELANIE DEEDS

DETROIT (UPI) — If you're the type that chooses crackers over bread, there's a good possibility you meet your problems head-on.

If you pick something soft and creamy — such as soup or a souffle — instead of steak or chili, you're probably a person who hopes the day will go smoothly with little conflict.

Nutritionist Elizabeth Mills says studies show that food preferences are good indicators of personality, feelings and work habits.

"I love crunchy things," said Ms. Mills, a professor of home economics, family life and consumer education at Central Michigan University in Mount Pleasant.

"My choice of crunch over soft shows I really like to get my teeth into things in my everyday life."

Food tastes and texture preferences alone are not the sole telltale signs. Colors are also giveaways.

In an interview, Ms. Mills said it's a pretty good bet that people who eat bright foods wear colorful clothes and live in a home with intense, lively colors.

Another interesting relationship between food and behavior shows up in the office.

"Some people have five different things going on at the same time," Ms. Mills said. "These people tend to eat their meat, potato and vegetables all at the same time.

"Others who like to finish one project before going on to the next, they're the kind that clean their plate of steak, then finish their pototoes, then eat their beans."

Despite the interesting conclusions she can gather, Ms. Mills spends little time watching her students and friends eat. She devotes much of her time to teaching good eating habits and nutrition and the importance emotions play in food.

"We each have personal values we reflect on food. These values reflect what is important to us in many areas of life."

Certain foods are reserved for certain emotions and situations. Some provide security, the nutritionist said. Others are used as rewards.

Most aspects of eating — the number and content of meals, the times they are eaten — are determined by culture, then varied for family or personal value, she said.

A former student told Ms. Mills she enjoyed breakfast and lunch, but disliked dinner.

Ms. Mills learned that the woman's father saved dinner time for complaining to and questioning the children. They grew up afraid of talking at dinner and ate rapidly to finish the ordeal as soon as possible.

Ms. Mills said the student's disinterest in dinner today stems from the childhood emotions she has attached to that meal.

"When you consider food behaviors are one of the earliest habits that are reinforced every day," she said, "then you begin to realize how difficult it may be to change them."

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

My grandmother used to have a line that broke up the entire family. She'd say, "I called you today, but you knew it was me and wouldn't answer your phone."

No amount of logic could convince my grandmother that every ring of the phone was an unknown adventure and that surprise was on the side of the caller.

She was paranoid about people not wanting to talk with her. And with good reason. To begin with, she called every day. Not only that, she could go 78 rpm for 30 minutes, non-stop. At first I used to put one of those little sand timers by the phone. That little number filled up before she got out, "Hello." Later, I approached the phone with a calendar, a change of clothes, and a tank of oxygen strapped to my back.

Her opening line was always the same: "I don't suppose you know who this is. It's been so long since you called me you probably forgot what my voice sounds like."

"I remember it from yesterday, grandma."

"I guess you're busy."

"Compared to what?"

"You left the phone ring five times. Probably trying to decide if it was me or not."

"I was outside."

"Sure. They all say that. I called Louise yesterday and she left it ring 15 times before she decided not to answer it."

"So, what's new?"

"Don't change the subject. Do you think I like calling you and reminding you I'm alive?"

"I was going to call you after lunch."

"You know I'm on the phone until I get dinner at 4:00. So that's your game. Only call when you get a busy signal."

"No, it's just that I can talk longer when the kids are napping."

"Oh, you have children now? I didn't know."

The other day I read something that stopped me dead in my tracks. The phone company is at work perfecting a new device that will electronically light up and tell you who's calling. For example, two short rings and a long one could be your husband; while two long rings and a short one could be your best friend.

Grandma was 30 years before her time.

Somehow; I always knew she knew.

TEACCH . . .

Finally, a box is labeled with a patch of yellow next to, but not overlapping the outline of a car. If the child consistently places the yellow car in this box, then he has learned that an object can have two attributes—that the toy is both yellow and a car.

Many language-handicapped children fear failure in language tasks and therefore are reluctant to attempt new challenges. Ann Baker, another TEACCH psychoeducational specialist, tackles this problem by devising games that teach a child that failing and asking for help are acceptable.

One example, she says, is a game in which everyone fails, such as looking for a blue bead in a grab bag that has only red beads.

She urges parents to point out their own mistakes to their child at home. "We want to 'de-fuse' the idea of being wrong," she says.

Once a child becomes less afraid of failure, (Ms.) Baker says, he will be more willing to try new tasks and to seek help.

Wearies Of Oil Squeeze

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Senatorial hopeful McNeill Smith says he's tired of the way oil-producing nations have been abusing American consumers and he has a plan to put a stop to it.

"I'm sick and tired of the United States being pushed around," he said. "If we act like a great power, we will be treated like one."

Smith said the United States should begin selling permits to nations that want to market their oil here. He says his plan will "break the back of the OPEC cartel" and "slow down inflation and reduce unemployment."

Smith said he was proposing "a buyer's boycott in response to OPEC's sellers' boycott."

He said under his plan no oil could be brought into the United States without a permit. He said these permits would be sold to the highest bidder. This would enable the United States to determine how much oil is sold.

"Since there is presently a glut of oil in the world market due to the recent discoveries in the Gulf of Japan, the North Sea, and Alaska, the various oil producers will bid for the right to sell their oil," Smith explained.

"For instance, the present price of a barrel of oil is $13 with $12 of this being pure profit," he added. "Many of these OPEC countries have overextended themselves and desperately need to sell their oil. The countries will pay, for example, $3 a barrel for a permit so they can make $10 profit. This money, which amounts to billions of dollars a year, will come into the United States Treasury to be used to lower taxes or develop new sources of energy."

Russian Flu Suspected

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Raleigh city schools had a surge of absenteeism last week, and state health officials say it's possible the Russian flu was responsible.

"There's something else going around different from that earlier peak we had in January," said Dr. J. Newton MacCormack, head of the state communicable disease branch. "It's flu of some sort and it's very likely it's Russian."

The state monitors 10 Raleigh schools in an effort to keep track of flu and other sickness. MacCormack said absenteeism rose to more than 6,300 students last week, up 2,000 from the previous week.

MacCormack said all of the neighboring states have positively identified Russian flu.

He said samples are being studied each day in an effort to isolate the Russian flu here, but it sometimes takes up to two weeks to isolate a specific strain of flu from a specimen.

Health officials have said the Russian flu is expected to hit hardest at people under 20 years of age, since older generations are likely to have developed some resistance from exposure to a similar strain in the 1950s or earlier.

The effects of the disease appear to be relatively mild.

Plan Observe Youth Sunday

Youth Sunday will be observed at Piney Grove FWB Church Sunday.

The youth will be in charge of Sunday School and have various responsibilities for the morning worship hour. Shelby Bradshaw and Emerson Hobgood will be the guest speakers. Miss Bradshaw is program chairman of the Central Conference Youth Convention and Hobgood is president of the Convention.

The public is invited to attend these services. The church is located on the Farmville Highway just west of Little's Nursery.

PLO Violence Now Backfiring

Although we doubt it will sink in, the Palestinian Liberation Organization could learn a valuable lesson about its use of violence.

The PLO reaped a lot of world attention when it used its violent methods against Israel. Many who profess to embrace peaceful methods openly expressed their admiration for the PLO.

The use of violence to attain an end knows no stopping point, however, and sooner or later it brings adverse developments.

An Egyptian newspaper editor was assassinated by Palestinians in Cyprus recently. Also Egyptians suspect Palestinian involvement in the gun battle which cost the lives of 15 Egyptian commandos.

As a result there is an anti-Palestinian feeling abroad in Egypt, and the Associated Press reports that sentiment is building to abandon the Palestinians and seek peace with Israel.

There are other factors in the rise in anti-Palestinian feelings in Egypt, but their methods make that group suspect in any violent situation.

We don't anticipate the PLO abandoning its ways anytime soon, but there should be a message here for other groups who thinks they can achieve their aims through similar methods. Violence brings on more violence and sooner or later the support of sensible people is lost to any cause which embraces blood shed.

Encouraged By Carter Conversation

Gov. Hunt has expressed encouragement following a meeting with President Carter at which the Health, Education and Welfare campaign against smoking was discussed.

Following the meeting the governor said he anticipated some softening of the HEW propaganda against tobacco.

We hope the governor's conversations with the president will improve the situation. HEW is simply too much involved in individuals' lives. There should be a right to choose in this country, whether it involves cigarettes or other things.

Home Care For More Aged

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — Governmental planners are beginning more and more to focus on home care of the elderly rather than use of institutions.

This approach is not really new. In times gone, families largely took care of the elderly at home. Group settings were rare.

Smaller families, people scattered from their community roots, more working wives, the old folks living longer with more ailments and frailties are among factors which produced a change.

Pensions, Social Security, and Medicaid governmetal funds hastened the change to use of rest homes, nursing homes or other institutions for the elderly.

"The problem of providing in-home care is the issue that has received the most attention of the committee," a report from the Committee of Aging of the North Carolina General Assembly notes.

Proposals

Proposed recommendations from that committee currently being readied for consideration at the May session of the General Assembly concentrate on governmental programs designed to keep the elderly at home.

"People want to be left in their homes. They dread leaving familiar settings where they live in dignity, self-respect, and independence to move to any kind of group care where inevitably they lose both some of their dignity and often much of their independence," that report points out.

Essentially four governmental services are suggested as key recommendations:

—Home Health Services in which a person under care of a physician would have an alternative to a nursing home by which a trained nurse or nurse's aide would come in periodically to help with medications and care while training family members in how to care for the patient.

—Homemaker Services in which routine housecleaning, personal hygiene and meals are provided by a worker who may serve in several different homes daily.

—Chore services in which somebody to run necessary errands (shopping, etc.) is provided.

NOBLITT

—Adult Day Care in which social, recreational and rehabilitative activities are provided at a central location.

Aside from helping with the elderly, some experts see the aid services as also opening up more jobs for unemployed or underemployed people—especially women and Blacks.

The Cost

Estimates of the cost for such a widespread program are currently being prepared, and no definitive figures are yet available. Just one service, however, gives an indication of potential cost: chose services for all 17,641 elderly in need of this statewide would require 8,820 Chore Workers and cost nearly $20 million annually.

Most counties already have home health care programs, and either insurance, Medicare or Medicaid helps defray the cost. Some physicians hesitate to use this alternative care method, and committee members feel this is a major obstacle.

The other proposed services would be paid by other aid programs under the social services agencies (including Medicaid) and the committee's approach at this time is to pass state laws requiring that all 100 counties provide all the services and to come up with some state funds to help. For counties which object to the new spending, the legislative answer will be that such home care efforts cost much less than institutionalization where costs range from $350 to $1,500 monthly.

THE INSIDE REPORT

Andy Young Strains Leash

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — The men who are supposed to make U.S. foreign policy have their fingers crossed that Andrew Young will not abandon his own government's moderate new line on Rhodesia — a ludicrous state of affairs preordained when President Carter named a highly ideological black politician as ambassador to the United Nations.

Young's hip-shooting warning on Feb. 15 that "an internal settlement" for Rhodesia is "no settlement" at all shocked the White House and reverberated throughout the foreign policy apparatus of the Carter administration. It sounded like a declaration of U.S. policy.

Two days later, Secretary of State Cyrus Vance huddled with Zbigniew Brzezinski, the President's national security adviser, in the White House. They drafted a formal U.S. statement of policy recognizing this hard fact, blithely ignored by Young: extraordinary movement toward an internal political settlement in Rhodesia must be commended by the U.S., however cautiously, as a possible basis for settlement.

Even high levels of the State Department fully appreciate Young's clout as a black politician who is idolized by millions of Americans. "Now we have said what U.S. policy really is toward the internal settlement," one official at State told us. "The question is, will Andy stick with us or go out on his own?" That is truly an intriguing state of affairs for a world superpower.

Vance is a quiet man of iron self-control who seldom shows his irritations, but he was angry over Young's warning that an internal settlement could "create a black-on-black civil war." That would be fought between Soviet-armed guerrillas (also backed by black Africa and, since Mr. Carter took office, by the U.S.) and more moderate pro-Western black leaders negotiating the internal settlement with white Prime Minister Ian Smith. In that war, there would be no doubt about Young's sympathies.

Far angrier than Vance were British Labor Prime Minister James Callaghan and other Western leaders. For the first time, they saw in the internal settlement at least a remote chance of blocking Soviet penetration of rich Rhodesia when it becomes black-ruled Zimbabwe. That aim is clearly low on Young's list of priorities.

The Europeans perceive Young as the Carter administration's only foreign policymaker with a powerful constituency of his own: America's black population. Restraining Young's ideological and emotional reaction to black Africa, these European leaders fear, is beyond Mr. Carter's power. Young's political influence over black voters in the U.S. — who were essential to Mr. Carter's 1976 victory — is too great to risk a Carter-Young break.

We asked a key aide of Young what right the UN envoy had to condemn the "internal settlement" in a public statement without clearing his words with Vance. The aide replied that as the "chief representative of the U.S. in the Rhodesian talks" Young had a clear right to "say what he wants."

At the State Department, the view is different. Officials there said that in his quick blast at the internal settlement, Young was strictly on his own; only the White House or Vance are able to state U.S. policy.

Thus, if the internal solution between Ian Smith and the black moderates prospers, Mr. Carter faces serious trouble. Young, still linked to the black guerrilla leaders outside Rhodesia, would confront Vance, Brzezinski and his National Security Council staff and the British.

That clash would confront Mr. Carter with a dilemma: how to muzzle Andy Young without antagonizing American blacks to whom he is a symbol of black achievement.

Cracking down on Young would be something new for the President, who so far has given him unprecedented political freedom. Young is the only American diplomat allowed to raise political funds for Democratic candidates, most recently at a $100-a-plate fund-raiser in Miami for Democratic Rep. William Le an Feb. 18; Young was the star attraction, outshining even House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill. Last fall, he campaigned for a Democratic councilmanic candidate in New York City.

Such politicking by clinically non-political UN ambassadors was forbidden by every other President. Not even George Bush, who left Turtle Bay to become Republican national chairman, ever made a partisan

Strength For Today

GREAT REQUESTS

Ask great things of God.

Perhaps you have believed that God was pleased if you made your petitions to Him modest, entirely consistent with what we call human possibility. But God does not like that kind of praying. All through the Bible we are encouraged to ask big things of God. The bigger the gift we crave, the more pleased is God to listen to our petition.

The great Protestant reformer, John Knox, prayed that God would give him the whole of Scotland. The great preacher, John Wesley, said that the world was his parish. William Carey, one of the founders of modern missionary enterprise, asked God for the strength of a hundred men in spreading the Word; and in the view of many contemporaries, he got it.

God is always beckoning us to high spiritual adventure. "Behold, I am with you always", said Jesus, "even unto the end of the world."

Thirty Years Later (I)

PRAGUE — I don't know how to read Bulgarian (or for that matter Czech) so it isn't absolutely safe to say that the Czechoslovak press is the worst in the world, but I am prepared to accept the representations of those who say it is, that, based on English translations of a couple of days' harvest. February 25 is the anniversary of the Czechoslovakian coup of 1948, the critical postwar diplomatic event that engulfed us in the Cold War, the origins of which the Czechs, dancing as always to the tune of their puppet masters, are celebrating.

"On the occasion of the celebration of the thirtieth anniversary of the Czechoslovak working people's victory, Czechoslovak and red flags will fly on state and public buildings througout Czechoslovakia. In Prague the instructions issued by the Prague National Committee will be observed. Citizens are likewise recommended to decorate their houses."

And citizens do excactly that, because citizens are accustomed to doing what they are told, whether directly by neighborhood representatives of the committee, or by the press giving the decisions of the Praesidium. So it is that one of the most beautiful cities in the world is festooned with the two flags, the Czech, and another of solid scarlet. And then the major buildings, triumphs of Gothic, Renaissance, and Baroque architecture, add to the national gaiety by reproducing in 20-yard long red cloth streamers, professions, infinitely conjugated, of the love of Czechoslovakia for the Soviet Union, for socialism, for the Communist party, and, one would infer, for life in a totalitarian society; because that is what Czechoslovakia is.

There has always been an inclination of sorts in the United States to assume that life in Czechoslovakia is bound to differ qualitatively from life in other of the satellite states. Because Czechoslovakia's long, cosmopolitan history, its bitter wars against Papal fanatics, Habsburg oppressors, Polish, German, Swedish, Italian, Mongol marauders, are the crucible of a people who value liberty. It is true that it was in Prague ten years ago that the most stirring effort came to liberalize the conditions of life, to give socialism a "human face", but the fact of the matter is that Dubcek's Prague Spring withered.

True, in Prague there is the institution known as Charter 77, and from time to time one hears news of the activities of its members, most of whom stress the orthodoxy of their Marxist convictions. But on the whole they are an inconspicuous and dispirited lot. The foreign press does not pay them much heed, and unlike the Russian dissenters they do not seek out visiting journalists, reluctant as they are to convey the impression that they are hostile to the fatherland.

Rather they stress reform in the Dubcek tradition. Reform, of course, is precisely what the Russians would not tolerate, making it absolutely clear, using tanks to cross their t's and dot their i's, in August of 1968. Alexander Dubcek, former prime minister, is now a forestry attendant in Bratislava. He is lucky. In earlier years he'd have been ashes, used perhaps (true story) to pour under the tires of an official car stuck in the snow and

Public Forum

Letters submitted for Public Forum must be limited to 300 words.

To the editor:

Permit me to express my personal appreciation to all those who assisted with the Bloodmobile visit to Ayden, Farmville and Greenville last week. Certainly to be commended are those who took time to give a pint of blood. Our goal with each visit is to have a good turnout. With continued assistance, this can be achieved.

Especially do I want to commend Mrs. Bobbie McLawhorn and her typing class at D. H. Conley School, who prepared 450 envelopes for mailing. Also, students members of the SGA, the Literary Club, the National Honor Society, and the Math Honor Society called better than 75 percent of the Greenville telephone subscribers, encouraging them to give.

The Farmville Central Student Council placed posters around the community, called all industrial firms and called others listed in the Farmville directory. 30 students and staff were pledged to give blood, but were unable to do so with schools closed that day.

The Student Task Force at Ayden-Grifton High School distributed information to the community regarding the visit in Ayden, while several students volunteered their services on the day of the visit.

With a mini-visit scheduled at the Staton House Fire Station on Thursday, Mar. 2, from noon to 4 p. m., North Pitt students called all Bethel telephone subscribers, encouraging them to contribute a pint of blood for someone in need.

If you did not get an opportunity to give this time, please be on the lookout for the next visit. A gift of blood is a gift of life.

Debate Turns Violent

By BETTY ANNE WILLIAMS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — For some "fanatics," the weapons in the war on abortion have changed from strident debate to bombs, arson and guns, says a pro-abortion group that cites attacks at clinics in 13 cities.

The National Abortion Rights Action League, a lobbying organization, says in a report released Wednesday that the attacks on clinics follow a pattern.

About two weeks ago, Aurelia E. Elliot, a worker at the private Concerned Women's Clinic in Cleveland, answered the clinic door and a man threw a bag at her.

She was temporarily blinded when it hit her in the face and burst. The contents were thought to have been gasoline. The man ignited the liquid and the fire caused $30,000 damage.

A few days earlier, vandals threw iodine around the clinic and cut telephone cords.

A clinic in Cincinnati was hit last month when a chemical bomb and packets of literature were thrown through a window. The report claims that the substance in the bomb is listed by the government for use in warfare.

Recently, demonstrators who had been protesting repeatedly outside a Fairfax, Va., clinic roughed up staff members and knocked a pregnant worker to the ground. There have been 20 arrests at the clinic during the last 15 months, according to the report.

There also have been threats against the children of abortion clinic workers, the report adds.

In St. Paul, someone broke into the Planned Parenthood offices a year ago, soaked the floor with a flammable liquid and ignited it. Water and smoke damage was estimated at $250,000.

The clinic director's life was threatened and board members have received threats that their children would be kidnapped. One board member sought police protection because of persistent threats. A bomb was Leon A. Brock, commanding officer of Battery A, 113th Field Artillery of the North Carolina National Guard since the resignation in January of Captain J. H. Waldrop, has just received his commission as Captain.

Capt. Brock, orginally was commissioned in Washington, N. C., in 1931, but was transferred here in 1933. In June 1, 1935, he was promoted to lieutenant and was named second in command of the local unit of the National Guard. He was promoted to this rank and office when Capt. Waldrop took over the commandership of the Greenville unit.

Another recent promotion in the local unit was that of J. E. Waldrop from sergeant to second liuetenant, moving him up from the non-commisioned class the commissioned.

Capt. Brock said other promotions in the battery were likely within the near future.

Trapped By Inflation Spiral

By JOHN CUNNIFF
(AP) Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — If the current 8.4 percent consumer price inflation were to continue for five years, the $75 U.S. Savings Bond you buy today would be worth about $66.45, not the $100 Uncle Sam promises.

And that's before taxes. Assuming you are in a 25 percent tax bracket, Uncle Sam would take one-quarter of your alleged $25 profit, or $6.25, bringing the buying power of your bond down to $60.20.

For lending out your money, you would in effect receive in return a bill for $14.80. That's inflation, and it affects not just bonds, but stocks, insurance, savings, Social Security. In short, your life.

If prices continue to rise at an 8.4 percent rate, as they did in January, the very best savings bank certificate won't add a bit to your assets — because the best provides only 8.17 percent interest.

So you go into the stock market. Don't stock prices "float" with inflation? Sure they do, like an unplugged bathtub in a tidal wave. Experience over the past decade shows simply that they sink.

In isn't difficult to understand why. Inflation adds to the cost of doing business, deducts from the margin of profit. It draws money from stocks into bonds, whose prices tend to rise with inflation.

Well then, bonds are the refuge of people drowning in inflation! Perhaps for a time. But inflation is also a cost of doing business for those who offer bonds. Inflation and bond default are close kin.

Real estate? Somewhat. The median sale price of existing single-family homes in 1967 was less than $19,000. In December 1977 the comparable price was $44,200, about 2.2 times the 1967 median.

In the same period, dollar buying power, as measured by the Consumer Price Index, wasn't quite cut in half. The homeowner comes out with a paper profit of a couple of thousand dollars — pretax.

The truth is there are few hilltops on which one can be assured he or she is beyond the tides of inflation. It is ubiquitous, more pervasive a threat than Russian flu, and more painful and destructive too.

To an extent, those who are active in the economy can attempt to keep pace. Wage earners can demand and get raises. Corporations can raise prices. Eventually, both get caught up in the cycle.

Trite, square, unimaginative as it seems, nobody has ever devised a lasting remedy for inflation other than to limit spending to one's means. It applies to people, companies, governments.

And in capitalist societies, nobody has ever been able to make more for everyone without increasing productivity; that is, without greater efficiences in the use of men, materials and machines.

Greater efficiency means a bigger pie can be baked without added costs. And because the pie is bigger, a person can slice for himself a bigger piece without cutting into the portion of his neighbor.

But, when the pie doesn't grow but appetites do, neighbor is set against neighbor — worker against management, company against company — bidding up the price for a limited amount of pie.

That, some critics say, is the situation we have today. We have shifted the thrust of our efforts from producing to consuming. We have glorified the consumer and we have waged war against production.

In seeking more and more we seem to be finding ourselves with less and less. We are, it has been said, consuming ourselves. Inflation is a consuming disease.

Mine-Sweeping Off Charleston

CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP) — In 1942 two German submarines carrying 12 mines each were dispatched to the Charleston harbor. One never returned home, but the other returned and reported its mission complete.

British and American forces swept five mines after they were laid. But that means up to 19 mines could still be in the area if the missing submarine was also successful.

The U.S. Navy is working on the assumption that some of the mines are, indeed, still in position at the entrance to Charleston harbor. That is why the USS Fearless began a sweep of the 5¼-mile area Wednesday in search of the mines. The $60,000 operation is expected to last six weeks, a Navy spokesman in Charleston said.

The search is centered on an area about six miles off the Isle of Palms, a beach near Charleston. Currently, ships are barred from anchoring in the area because of authorities' concern over possible detonation of the old mines.

A spokesman, Capt. Russ Harney, said authorities are basing their assumption that the mines are still there on logs filed by German commanders during World War II.

"There are probably hundreds of pieces of old garbage out there, anchors, oil drums," he said.

"We're assuming that they were so good ... in their submarine navigation that they laid the mines at the entrance to the harbor," he added. "But they could be five or 10 miles in either direction. Navigation aids weren't that sophisticated in 1942."

Harney said it was unlikely that the submarines would have surfaced and risked being spotted, so the German skipper would have had to depend on his underwater navigation techniques and aids.

Sophisticated acoustic devices are being used to search for the mines, which naval authorities say look like 55-gallon oil drums.

If any are found, divers will be sent down with explosives to destroy them. When the operation is complete, the Navy says, ships will be able to anchor in the area at their own risk.

Charleston is among the sites that may be used to bring oil and natural gas ashore if exploration finds that those energy sources exist below the continental shelf off South Carolina, Georgia and Florida.

A sale of leases to companies seeking to explore for oil and natural gas is scheduled to be held in Savannah, Ga., on March 28.

NOW Boycott Action Talked

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Leaders of the National Organization of Women in North Carolina say their organization may start a boycott against tobacco products from states that have not ratified the Equal Rights Amendment.

Jackie Frost, president of the Charlotte chapter of NOW, said a NOW boycott of tobacco products could affect North Carolina, South Carolina, Virginia and Georgia.

NOW leaders say they are considering the move because a boycott aimed at huring convention business in 15 states where ERA has not been ratified hasn't worked in North Carolina.

The Holland Tunnel, completed in 1927, cost the lives of 13 workers in the seven years it took to build the underwater vehicular tube under the Hudson River between New York and New Jersey.

seeking traction on its way out of the prison where a dozen officials fallen from grace had been hanged and cremated.

Besides, it is difficult to circulate any news in Czechoslovakia. The state has one of those model constitutions, like so many of the satellite states, with the same catch-all clause, namely that it is a crime to "harm the interests of the state abroad". Since the telling of the truth about Czechoslovakia results in exactly that, the communication of the truth is done usually by the venerable instrument of the samizdat, the communication copied out by hand or typewriter, using as many carbons as possible. There is a sacramental immunity of these instruments, which are felicitously compared to the ancient tablets by which the persecuted Christians communicated. For some reason, no one has got around to threatening to prohibit the samizdat. For the Czech bureaucracy responds exactly as one might expect: carbon paper is becoming scarcer and scarcer in Prague.

Apart from the samizdat, there is Radio Free Europe, which broadcasts twelve hours per day. But in Prague it is jammed, and reception is precarious. In the countryside it is heard, and at times of great crisis the news seeps in to the city. German is a second language of Czechoslovakia, and German radio is listened to. But no broadcast from any western country is likely to participate in the macabre celebration for which Prague is now bedecked in red, of the eerie anniversary when Benes, after the arrest of prominent social democrats, the repression of student dissenters, the closing down of newspapers, capitulated, and accepted the all-communist cabinet of Klement Gottwald. Two weeks later the young and glamorous foreign minister Jan Masaryk was pushed from his window in the foreign office. They still have the grace to call it suicide, because in Czechoslovakia, as in Russia, they obstinately invoke western standards, ethical, political, and terminological, so that rather than sound like him they imitate the ways of Ghengis Khan, while using the vocabulary of John Stuart Mill.

heaved through the clinic window late last month, but it did not go off, the league said in its report.

A group calling itself People Expressing A Concern for Everyone (PEACE) has claimed credit for six coordinated clinic incidents on Jan. 6. The group disrupted clinic activites around the country, with members being arrested in New York, Minneapolis, Baltimore, Anchorage, Omaha and Fairfax.

"These are serious, horrible crimes being committed by those who oppose women's right to choose," said Karen Mulhauser, NARAL executive director.

The report was released as the debate over abortion took a new turn in Congress. The House Education and Labor Committee voted Wednesday on abortion legislation that will affect, for the first time, middle-class women. So far, congressional debate has focused on federal abortion payments for poor women.

The problem actually is not Andy Young's at all but Jimmy Carter's. Having given Young a special writ in black Africa and freedom to break the wise tradition about politics stopping at the water's edge, Mr. Carter can blame himself if Young stretches his long leash to the breaking point.

WOMEN. YOU'RE EQUAL IN THE AIR FORCE.

Women start out on the same footing as men in Air Force ROTC. Women wear the same insignia and hold the same cadet positions in AFROTC, just as they do later on as Air Force officers.

And the same AFROTC scholarship can be yours as a woman. If you qualify, you can have your tuition, book costs and lab fees paid by the Air Force, and receive $100 a month for other expenses. It helps free you to concentrate on your education. And that's important.

As an Air Force officer, you'll be expected to use your training and education, and be a leader managing people and complex systems. You'll be handed executive responsibility starting with your first job.

It's a great way to be equal, and a great way to serve your country. Check into the AFROTC program at your campus. Be sure to ask about AFROTC scholarships — you may be helping yourself earn an exciting new lifestyle.

Honoring Local Musician

The Warren Chapel Gospel Chorus will honor Roger Ingram, a local musician, Saturday at 7:30 p.m. at the church.

Ingram, son of Mrs. Daisy Ingram and the late Frank Ingram of Ayden, began his musical career with the Rev. Sister Ollie Harris of Grifton. He was later given a music scholarship by the Northeast "B" Division Women Home Mission Convention under the leadership of President Mrs. J.M. Reaves.

He is presently organist and director of the following groups: Warren Chapel Gospel Chorus, Greenville Elm Grove Senior Choir of Ayden, Mt. Calvary's Ruth Hill Gospel Chorus, Selvia Chapel Gospel Chorus, Cornerstone Young Adult Choir, The Gospelaires, The Pugh Sisters, and is pianist for the AA Best Chorale.

Others appearing in the Saturday program, along with the groups under his directorship, include Holly Grove Choir of LaGrange, featuring Joe Scott.

Charge Driver In Collision

Gary Haven Whichard of 110A Baker St. was charged with failing to stop for a stop light following investigation of a 9:05 a.m. collision yesterday at the intersection of Tenth and Cotanche Streets.

Investigators reported the Whichard car collided with an auto driven by Janice Forbes Langley of Route 7, Greenville, resulting in an estimated $500 damage to the Langley car and $800 damage to the Whichard auto.

Quarterly Meet This Weekend

St. Paul Free Will Baptist Church will observe its quarterly meeting on Saturday, with Rev. Joyner speaking, along with the junior choir. On Sunday morning, Bishop Phillips and the senior choir and senior ushers will give the service. Rev. Parker and Cherry Lane will hold the afternoon service. The public is invited.

Pilot Health Program Begun

ECU News Bureau

Full time and permanent part-time employees of East Carolina University are participating in a pilot health education and screening program which began this week for all state employees in Pitt, Wayne and Burke counties.

The program includes both educational lectures and a health screening examination. It is available to approximately 1,800 ECU employees who are among a total of some 3,000 state employees in Pitt County.

Educational lectures for groups of approximately 50 to 75 employees began Tuesday morning in Brewster Building at ECU with health screening examinations scheduled following the lecture. Examinations were being conducted at the ECU Infirmary.

Three sessions of lectures daily were scheduled through Friday, to cover about half of the eligible employees at ECU. A second series of lectures and examinations will be scheduled later in March and April, officials said.

The program, which is free and voluntary, is aimed at improving the overall health of state employees and thereby containing health care costs of the state of North Carolina.

At the educational lectures, information is presented on cancer, diabetes, hypertension and the physical screening process. Males and females attend separate sessions.

Employees were given time off from their jobs to participate. All examination results were to be strictly confidential and if tests revealed a health problem, the employee was referred to a physician.

State government is paying the cost, approximately $10 per employee, of the program. The three counties, Pitt, Wayne and Burke, together have about 10,000 state employees. The pilot project is being conducted to determine whether such a program will be offered to all state employees.

In an earlier pilot screening program at Cannon Mills in Cabarrus County, statistics showed that out of 1,000 adults screened two had an early cancer, seven had diabetes and 150 had high blood pressure.

The method of education and screening was developed by Dr. Siegfried Hayden of Duke Medical Center. Dr. Hayden was scheduled to be on the scene as the Pitt County program began Tuesday.

BOATING SURVEY

WASHINGTON — A survey of recreational boats and boaters in the 48 contiguous States and the District of Columbia being published by the U.S. Coast Guard, Office of Boating Safety, discloses a growth in the number of pleasure boats from 9.6 million in 1973 to 12.75 million in 1976.

Underline Value Of The Older Worker

Citing a proclamation issued today by President Carter, James E. Hannan, manager of the Employment Security Commission's Greenville Job Service Office, announced his office's participation in National Employ the Older Worker Week, March 12-18.

"As much as race, sex, national origin or physical handicap, age is a significant source of employment discrimination today," said Hannan. "Our society is youth-oriented," he added, "and the ESC's participation in this observance seeks to remind area employers that age has very little to do with either ability, employability or job performance."

As a matter of interest, many employers have commente d that the "older worker" is more loyal in many respects than the younger employee.

In addition, Hannan cited the Federal Age Discrimination in Employment Act of 1967 which prohibits any form of job or hiring bias by an employer on account of age. This law particularly applies to persons between the ages of 40-65.

"Our intention, however, is not to intimidate employers with the law," said Hannan. "Instead, we want employers to consider older workers because they've proven themselves reliable, able and experienced employees."

In fiscal year 1977, the Employment Security Commission placed nearly 13,000 persons 45 and older in jobs. This figure represented some 12 percent of all job placements made by the agency, added Hannan. In Greenville, the local Job Service Office placed 124 older workers in FY 1977, about 8.0 percent of the office's total placements.

Hannan stated that each ESC Office offers a trained Older Worker Specialist to aid persons 40 and older in the job search. In Greenville, the local Older Worker Specialist is Larry Hamby.

Voltage Cutbacks Ordered Due Energy Emergency

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — ght bulbs burn a little dim- er and television picture bes are slightly smaller in e Carolinas today.

North Carolina is entering the econd phase of its energy mergency plan, and power ompanies serving both North nd South Carolina said they ould take the same energy- aving measures in both states.

An alarmed Gov. Jim Hunt rdered a five percent voltage eduction statewide Wednesday, warning that the state is in "a ritical situation" because of dwindling coal supplies at pow- r plants.

Hunt said rotating blackouts may be less than three weeks away if the United Mine Workers don't end their strike before then.

Before Hunt made his announcement, state energy officials met with representatives of Carolina Power and Light Co. and Duke Power Co. Duke has about a 50-day supply of coal left for its power plants. CP&L has about 39 days' worth.

In addition to the voltage reduction, all unnecessary outdoor lighting has been ordered cut off.

"I want to emphasize that North Carolina is in a critical situation," Hunt told a news conference on energy. "It's going to take far greater (conservation) efforts than we've had so far."

Hunt said he had spent several days in Washington and talked with governors from coal mining states and other officials, and he is "not particularly hopeful about a settlement of the coal strike" in the near future. He said that United Mine Worker members may reject the latest tentative agreement.

"The mine workers don't seem to be satisfied with anything," Hunt said. "Ten days from now we get to the crisis stage and 10 days after that we go to rotating blackouts."

Hunt said President Carter is prepared to act if the mine workers do not approve the proposed contract, but anything the president does would require time.

"We have to be prepared for the worst," Hunt declared.

Shortly after the governor made his announcement, a CP&L spokesman said it was already putting the 5 percent voltage cut into effect and would have the process completed by nightfall. The spokesman said the company was appealing to its customers to cut off all unnecessary lights, urging citizens to cut back their thermostats and conserve hot water.

He said there was no plan yet to cut back on street lighting. The company was aiming to achieve a 10 percent cut in usage of electricity on its system.

A Duke spokesman said the 5 per cent reduction in voltage would be made as soon as possible. He also said Duke was calling on its commercial and industrial customers to cut power usage as much as possible without interfering with their operations.

Both companies said they would be taking similar steps in South Carolina.

Spokesmen for the two firms told the South Carolina Public Service Commission Wednesday they were making the voltage reduction.

South Carolina PSC Chairman Fred A. Fuller Jr. said, "For the past two weeks, we have asked for voluntary conservation of electricity, and as the coal supplies of our major electricity sources dwindle, it is evident that the commission may have to approve mandatory reduction of energy used by industry very soon if the coal strike is not ended."

Fuller said if the commission has to order reductions of energy usage by industry, it will mean that "people will be out of work. So today, with this looking like a reality, we again plead for conservation from every consumer in South Carolina.

"If we have a concentrated consevation effort from everyone now, it may mean that some people will not be put out of work later."

Duke serves 1.15 million customers in both states. In South Carolina it has 350,000 customers, mostly in northwestern and central counties. CP&L has a total of 675,000 customers. It serves 115,000 persons in northeastern and eastern South Carolina.

UNC-TV Net To Ask Contributions

CHAPEL HILL — The UNC-TV Network will seek $185,000 in contributions and pledges from viewers during FESTIVAL '78, Dr. George E. Bair, director of educational television, announced today.

During the 16 day FESTIVAL '78 period, special programs and fund raising appeals will be broadcast by the network, highlighted by several nights of live studio segments where viewers can call in pledges.

"The UNC-TV Network is supported by three primary sources," Bair said, "state government, the federal government and corporate underwriting. Our federal grant this year was increased by only $2,000. State appropriations were not increased."

Last spring UNC-TV conducted the first on-air fund raising event in its 23 year history. It was a successful attempt. "Everyone responded with real generosity," Dr. Bair noted, "and we were able to exceed our goal of $50,000 as we raised $84,000.

Contributions are tax-deductible and can be sent to: UNC- TV Festival, '78, 202 University Square, West, Chapel Hill, N.C., 27514. Pledges during the programs are by calling 737-3760.

Record-Breaking Sales Of Boats

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Boasting record-breaking sales of $81.4 million, exhibitors at the 1978 Miami International Boat Show are predicting a healthy year for the marine industry.

"We've never had a stronger backlog of orders in our history," said Ken Kranz, manager of marketing services for Hatteras Yachts of High Point, N.C.

"Our factory orders for new boats have broken all existing records."

The boat show, the nation's largest, serves as a barometer of the boating industry and attracts dealers and yachtsmen from all over the world. It ended Wednesday at Miami Beach Convention Center.

Ben Vereen's Special Is Rarity With Class

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — It's been estimated 500 specials will have aired by the end of this season. If you've missed any so far — and that would be a miracle — don't miss the special ABC has tonight.

It's "Ben Vereen — His Roots." Sure, the title capitalizes on Vereen's "Roots" fame as Chicken George. And sure, "Roots" co-star Louis Gossett Jr. co-stars with him tonight.

And you may groan to learn Cheryl Ladd of "Charlie's Angels," yes, "Charlie's Angels," is billed as a singer and dancer.

But the combination, plus dancer Debbie Allen, makes for one of the best entertainment efforts I've seen on the tube in quite some time. It has what most specials lack — class.

It starts with Vereen in his Chicken George threads, playing the "Roots" theme on a harmonica. You may understandably feel ABC is indulging in yet more hype of that over-hyped miniseries.

But then, Vereen, in civilian garb, also shows up on the screen with Chicken George, singing "Cockeyed Optimist" as the "Roots" theme evolves into a lovely counter-melody.

An imaginative touch, and the touch is pervasive in this show, which uses as its take-off point gab between Vereen and a cluster of street kids about his memories of growing up in New York.

Miss Ladd, not exactly known as a singer or dancer, proves one of the hour's most pleasant surprises in a fine duet-and-dance routine with Vereen set in New York's High School of Performing Arts.

She's good, mighty good, and ABC should have its corporate head cancelled if it doesn't give her more opportunities to do what she does so well in tonight's exercise with the show's star.

A classic sketch has Vereen and Gossett as two old-timers in a dusty, deserted ballroom. They talk of the good times they had there, the talk backed by ghostly sounds of the Big Band era.

It seques into those good old days, with Gossett doing a superb turn as a big band singer, and Vereen and Miss Allen excellently dancing their way through those good old tunes, most by Duke Ellington.

It ends back in the deserted ballroom, old-timer Gossett toasting "a past that never saw the future," and old-timer Vereen sighing an old vaudeville line:

"You know, if I'd known I was going to live this long, I would have taken better care of myself."

The behind-scenes folks adding to the program's considerable sparkle are director Dwight Hemion, writer Michael Kagan and music arrangers Billy Byers, Ralph Burns and Ian Fraser.

Today's Cryptoquip clue: O equals U

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Every now and then a stranger comes to town who hasn't heard of Trump Coup Tommy's amazing abilities when faced with a bad trump break. They double Tommy in the expectation of getting rich, and wonder what happened to them when TCT coasts home.

East was a visitor from Dallas who dropped in for some club bridge one afternoon. He left soon after this hand and has not been heard of since.

When his partner could make a vulnerable overcall, East could not be blamed for thinking in terms of a four-figure penalty from four spades doubled after Tommy had gaily leaped to game. But his double alerted TCT to the bad trump split, and Tommy's flare was soon apparent as he handled this difficult hand.

After winning the king of hearts West shifted to the queen of clubs. Tommy won in dummy, cashed the ace-king of diamonds and ruffed a diamond. He entered his hand with a heart ruff and ruffed another diamond, then cashed the ace of clubs. Tommy had taken seven tricks and this was the position:

Declarer led a heart from dummy and East was helpless. If he ruffed low, declarer would overruff with the nine, ruff a diamond with the ace of trumps and then assure his tenth trick by leading a heart from dummy, thus scoring the jack of trumps.

But it was no better when East ruffed high. Declarer simply discarded his club. East exited with a low trump to declarer's nine, and a diamond ruff with the ace again assured that the jack of trumps would be the fulfilling trick.

Membership in the chapter is open to business education major with superior academic grade point averages and high ethical standards in business and professional life.

Initiates include Karen Anderson of Goldsboro, Jessica Johnston of Farmville, Julie Ann Corbin of Jacksonville, Barbara Lynn Baker of Charlotte, Lynn Rose Hinton of Rocky Mount, Beverly Hardee of Lillington, Beth Millard of Kenly, and Linda Lynn Tripp of Greenville.

Associate professor Thadys J. Dewar is faculty advisor to the chapter.

FORECAST FOR FRIDAY, MAR. 3, 1978

Your Daily HOROSCOPE from the CARROLL RIGHTER INSTITUTE

GENERAL TENDENCIES: The early part of the day is fine for you to go directly to higher-ups and discuss your finest and most productive ideas. It is necessary to use more care in motion later in the day.

ARIES (Mar. to Apr. 19) Make plans to start a new venture, but take care not to irk one in high position. Handle civic matters later and get good results.

TAURUS (Apr. 2o to May 20) Know waht is expected of you by your mate and then get busy and try to please. Take time to engage in favorite hobby.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Iron out any differences you have with associates early in the day and much can be accomplished. Take no chances with your reputation.

MOON CHILDREN (June 2 to July 21) Be enthusiastic about getting the work done that is awaiting your attention and much can be accomplished.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Plan the recreation you want to have later in the day and then use care where money is concerned. Later please your mate in some way.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Some special service to kin can bring fine results at this time. A new project needs more study before putting it in operation.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Express yourself clearly in the morning and forget all those angles that only complicates matters. Engage in creative activities.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) first handle financial affairs intelligently and then engage in new interests that beckon you. Make up a better budget.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Take care of personal matters first and then get down to important business matters at hand. Improve your appearance.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Come to a more harmonious understanding with your mate by being more reasonable. Plan the future wisely.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Study your friendships well and know which to weed out for a happier existence. Relax at home tonight.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Make long-range plans that will give you greater abundance in the future. Take steps to improve your appearance.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will have many creative ideas early in life that should be brought to fruition upon reaching maturity, so be sure to give the best education you can afford. Teach not to divulge personal matters for best results.

"The Stars impel. they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to YOU!

ON TOUR — Bob Dylan responds to newsmen's questions in Tokyo, midway through his first concert tour of Japan and his first appearance outside the United States in eleven years. He has found a loyal following appreciative enough to spend $1.5 million to see him. (AP Laserphoto)

Farmers Claim Police Brutality In Bridge Clash

By KEN HERMAN
Associated Press Writer

HIDALGO, Texas (AP) — More than 200 striking farmers, claiming they were the victims of police brutality during a melee with nightstick-wielding police at the international bridge here, have decided to remain in jail rather than pay $18.75 for bond.

Officers arrested 210 farmers from several states Wednesday after about 100 riot-equipped law enforcement officers lobbed tear gas canisters to break up the farmers' blockade of the bridge that spans the Rio Grande.

There was shoving and fighting during the melee, with both sides striking blows.

One handcuffed farmer was taken to a hospital, where he was admitted for treatment of cuts and bruises, and an elderly farmer was hospitalized after the tear gas aggravated his emphysema. A third person, a woman who claimed she had been beaten by police, was taken to a doctor. No officers were injured.

Assistant District Attorney Doug Yancey said Wednesday night that "all but two or three" of the jailed farmers had elected to remain in jail.

The farmers — including American Agriculture Movement members from Texas, Louisiana, Oklahoma, Missouri, Kentucky and Georgia — are upset about the import of Mexican beef and vegetables they claim unfairly compete with American products.

The prisoners were taken by bus to the Hidalgo County jail in nearby Edinburg. About six hours later, County Court at Law Judge Pete Benavides began mass arraignments on charges of obstructing a public place, a misdemeanor.

The farmers could have been released by posting $18.75 of a $250 bond, Yancey said.

"I ain't gonna pay no bond," said Ed Holly, a Mangham, La., farmer.

Prisoners milling in the jail's recreation area said they felt they committed no crime and would leave only under personal recognizance bonds, under which they would have to post no money.

Benavides said he would not consider setting personal recognizance bond. The judge also said if the farmers post no bond, it will be "May or June" before they could be tried.

The jailed farmers said other farmers were headed to South Texas from other states to lend support, although no future actions have been planned.

The arrests and fighting came about 45 minutes after the farmers stopped a Mexican produce truck, gave the driver $10 to take the keys and leave the scene and began the blockade.

"I think under the circumstances we handled it fairly well," said Hidalgo County Sheriff Brig Marmolejo, who coordinated the group of officers that included his deputies, McAllen city police, state troopers and Texas Rangers.

"I don't regret doing what I did under the circumstances."

But Joe Flanagan, a Corsicana, Texas, farmer, said the strikers were not given sufficient time to follow orders to clear the bridge.

"The damn farmers never done nothing," he said. "How much time did they give us, 15 seconds?

"We were not violent at any time. They just started hitting us with sticks," said Ted Farrell, a farmer from Kinnet, Mo.

Officers on the 175-yard bridge that connects Hidalgo with Reynosa, Mexico, gave the demonstrators repeated warnings that they would be forced off the bridge if they did not leave.

The farmers, who had cleared the roadway and had begun to form single file lines on the bridge's sidewalk, were trapped between a line of police on the bridge and other officers on the American side of the border.

With tear gas permeating the area, the strikers were forced into a fenced-off area. Once in the security pen, the farmers hooted and howled at the officers.

McAllen Monitor reporter Bob Fatherree was in the middle of the melee and was also taken into custody, as was the attorney who came to South Texas to represent the farmers.

Some television cameramen claimed they were struck by blows from the officers' nightsticks.

About 300 farmers took part in a peaceful demonstration earlier Wednesday morning. When no Mexican produce trucks appeared, they returned to their headquarters and planned the afternoon blockade.

McAllen Mayor Othal Brand, who owns 40,000 acres of vegetable producing land in this fertile section of Texas, arrived shortly after the afternoon arrests and claimed farmers had violated their agreement to protest peacefully for only five minutes.

"Their word isn't worth a plug nickel," said Brand, who invoked the farmers' wrath at a meeting Tuesday night when he admitted importing some Mexican crops.

Farmers deny such an agreement was made.

As the arrested farmers were being loaded into the bus, trucks loaded with Mexican produce began rolling past — less than 50 feet away.

The strikers also claim Mexican vegetables contain chemicals banned north of the border.

Rescue By An Unknown

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — "I don't know who he is," said Brenda Alexander of Charlotte after a passerby rescued two of her children from a fire. "But he should be commended for saving my children."

The man entered Mrs. Alexander's burning house Tuesday, pulled her children, Andrew, 6, and Sherri, 5, from the building and then re-entered it when he thought two other children were inside.

"It's very few times you see someone saving someone," Mrs. Alexander said. "Usually people try to save themselves."

The man who rescued Mrs. Alexander's children told her he lived in a nearby apartment. Attempts to reach the man were unsuccessful.

Mrs. Alexander had left her four children at home while she bought their lunch at a nearby fast-food store.

"When I saw the fire trucks rushing past, I ran out of the store and left the chicken on the counter," she said.

The man was bringing her two younger children out of the house as she tried to enter. Flames came from the back door.

"All I could see was two children and I knew I was the mother of four," she said.

The man and a family friend went back inside the smoke-filled house to make sure everyone was out. A few minutes later, Mrs. Alexander's other two daughters came back from a neighbor's house, where they had called the fire department.

Fire officials said a short circuit in an electrical panel of the frame house caused the blaze.

PAC Meeting Slated Tonight

A countywide Parent Advisory Council meeting will be held this evening at 7:30 p.m. in the conference room of the Pitt County Courthouse (third floor).

Activities will include: Operation of the Title I Program; "Why Johnny Can't Read", a skit; Teacher of the Year award; and other activities related to how parents can help raise their child's reading level and improve the Title I program.

All interested parents are urged to attend.

Hold Workshop On Puppetry

"Puppetry — A Tool for Teaching," was the title of a workshop presented by Barbara Koenig and Jeffrey Petyon Wednesday at the Mendenhall Student Center.

Sponsored by the Division of Continuing Education, East Carolina University, the program introduced educators from statewide school systems to new creative techniques for teaching with puppets.

Approximately 60 participants were on hand for the workshop session.

Peyton and Koenig, who have recently become residents of Greenville, have established Creative Resources, Inc. in Winterville. Before coming here, they had a creative arts education program in New Haven, Conn. for a six-year period.

Both were formerly teachers at Southern Connecticut State College and are the authors of Puppetry: A Tool For Teaching.

RALEIGH (AP) (NCDA) — The trend on the North Carolina f.o.b. dock broiler market was lower for next week's trading, supplies adequate, demand moderate, weights desirable. The dock weighted average price is 41.42 for this week. Estimated slaughter today 1,359,000.

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices chalked up a moderate gain in quiet trading today, aided by the dollar's modest upturn in foreign exchange.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, which rose 1.21 on Wednesday, managed to add another 1.82 points to 745.15 in the first hour today.

Gainers opened up a 5-3 lead over losers among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Big Board volume totaled 4.49 million shares as of mid-morning.

Analysts noted that some technically-inclined investors had begun buying Wednesday when the Dow dipped briefly below 740, apparently on the theory that that represented a level of potential support for the market.

They also said an upswing by the dollar against leading foreign currencies late Wednesday and today gave investors' spirits a lift.

Pressure on the dollar has been cited as a major factor behind the market's steady slide in recent months.

General Telephone & Electronics led the active list, unchanged at 28 1/2.

Pittston dropped 3/8 to 22 7/8 in active trading. The company reported sharply lower earnings for the fourth quarter.

The NYSE's composite common-stock index picked up .10 to 48.59.

At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index rose .16 to 122.86.

Area Promotions Announced By SHP

Highway Patrol Troop A headquarters in Greenville will receive two new lieutenants and a new sergeant, while the Greenville District — including Pitt and Martin Counties — will get a new first sergeant as a result of promotions and transfers announced in Raleigh this morning.

The promotions affecting Troop A and Pitt County were among 74 promotions announced at a press conference in Raleigh, attended by Secretary of Crime Control and Public Safety J. Phil Carlton and Highway Patrol commander Col. John T. Jenkins.

The new officers will be sworn in at a 1:45 p.m. ceremony Monday at the Scott Pavilion at the N.C. State Fair Grounds in Raleigh.

First Sgt. A. S. Butler will be promoted to lieutenant and transferred from Ahoskie to Greenville, while First Sgt. L. R. Hawley, now stationed in Asheboro will be promoted to lieutenant and transferred to Greenville.

They will replace Lt. L. G. Pate, now on medical leave, who will retire June 1, and Carl Gilchrist who was promoted to captain and Troop A commander last year.

Trooper R. B. Miller, now stationed in New Bern, will be promoted to line sergeant and assigned to Troop A headquarters as operations sergeant, replacing Sgt. T. H. Spainhour who will be promoted to first sergeant and assigned to Washington.

First Sgt. P. C. Eure will receive a lateral transfer from Elizabeth City to Greenville where he will be in charge of the Pitt-Martin district.

Sgt. Eure is replacing Sgt. Titus Martin, now on medical leave, who will retire April 1.

Butler lived in Rocky Mount before joining the Highway Patrol in 1958. He has been stationed in Rose Hill and Lincolnton before being assigned to Ahoskie, August 1, 1974.

Hawley, now stationed in Asheboro, is a Wilson native who joined the Patrol in 1955. He was stationed in Clinton as a trooper, then in Fayetteville as a line sergeant before being promoted to first sergeant and moving to Hendersonville. He has been in Asheboro for the past six years.

Miller, a Kinston native, joined the Patrol in 1956. He has been stationed in Rocky Mount, Tarboro and New Bern. He has been supervisor of the Breathalyzer maintenance program working out of Troop A headquarters for more than a year.

Sgt. Eure, a Murfreesboro native, joined the Patrol in 1961 and was stationed in Hookerton in Greene County before being promoted to line sergeant and assigned to Troop A's Greenville office. He was promoted to first sergeant in February 1976 and transferred to Elizabeth City.

He will replace Sgt. Titus Martin who joined the Patrol in 1942 and has served duty stations in Jacksonville, Washington, Tarboro, Dunn, Kinston and Greenville.

Sgt. Spainhour has been stationed in Morehead City and Washington. He was transferred to Troop A headquarters in 1976 as operations sergeant.

Lt. Pate, who will retire June 1, began his career with the Patrol in 1948 as a trooper in Kinston. He was promoted to sergeant and stationed in Greenville after serving stations in Wilkesboro, Lumberton and Whiteville. He was promoted to lieutenant in 1970 and remained at Troop A headquarters.

Zoning...

sign in violation of the ordinance would be sent a letter saying he had two years to remove the sign or make it conform with the ordinance. In addition, signs located in setback areas would not be allowed and the owner would have five years from the date of notification to remove the sign or make it conform.

The ordinance would also treat outdoor advertising signs as commercial land uses and they would not be allowed within 100 feet of any residential zoned property.

Other significant changes proposed include provisions in the non-conformance section; creation of the position of zoning officer; creation of a zoning compliance permit which would provide the city with a file on building activity; the amalgamation of the joint and city adjustments boards into one board with four city members and one county member handling all requests;

A provision that any property owner may make an application for rezoning and city departments would no longer be able to sponsor zoning requests; presentation of rezoning requests before the City Council at only four designated times of the year;

New application process for rezoning with the Council receiving the matter, scheduling it for a public hearing at least 65 days after the request is submitted, and then forwarding the request to the planning board for review and recommendations;

Requirement that the planning commission would totally review the zoning ordinance at intervals of not more than three years; and a new definition section.

The commissioners discussed Article One, dealing with title and intent; Two, involving the establishment of the zoning districts and zoning map; and Five, involving setback regulations.

The board members have numerous workshops scheduled in the ordinance review process, including a session on March 8 on the planned development district and land use intensity.

Public hearings are not required by the Planning and Zoning Commission, it was pointed out, but the Council is required to conduct public sessions on the ordinance. The planning board will probably consider holding public hearings on several aspects of the draft, however.

The commission last night agreed to schedule the discussion of the development plan including the St. Andrews and Hooker Road areas at the regular March meeting. The planning staff, which has been studying the development in the area, is basically recommending three changes that would reflect the development underway now, Schofield said.

association proposed that small information signs on meter posts be placed, noting two hours of free parking with the overtime fee of $2.

Present personnel would be retained by the city under the merchant proposal with the personnel checking meters, marking tires and giving penalty tickets.

The five cities surveyed by Mosier included Rocky Mount, Wilson, Goldsboro, Kinston and New Bern. All of the cities removed meters at the request of the merchants, it reported, and absorbed all costs for parking control. The system of chalk-marking tires to enforce the parking provisions was used in all cities contacted, he noted.

According to Mosier, all of the cities have the common problem of employee parking.

He said the merchants proposed the removal of certain meters "in order to maintain, perpetuate and hopefully increase the tax revenues for the city, in order to be in an unhampered competitive position, and, to remove the one excuse people have for not shopping downtown."

Mosier said that another special call meeting will be requested with the Authority following the additional study and visit to another city.

Appeals For Cut-Backs

FARMVILLE — Farmville Water and Light Department Director J. A. Wooten is appealing to electric users to cut back on usage in every way possible.

Wooten said he received word was received from Carolina Power and Light Company yesterday that its coal supply is below the 40-day level. When it gets to the 30-day level, they say, certain industries and commercial establishments (those considered to be supplying "non-essential" services will have to have their electric services) curtailed. Were the supply to go even lower, the next step would be the rotating of blackouts throughout the service area.

"We hope these drastic measures can be avoided," Wooten said. "Therefore, we're asking everyone in our service area (Farmville-Fountain) to use just as little electricity as possible. Any steps taken to cut back heating, lighting, or whatever will be appreciated," he said, "and will benefit our entire area economically and otherwise."

Moving Offices To Charlotte

CHARLOTTE (AP) — The National Gypsum Co. says it will move the headquarters of its Gold Bond Building Division, which employs about 450 persons, from Buffalo, N.Y., to Charlotte.

The company, which makes building products, made the announcement at a news conference in Charlotte Wednesday. The move is expected to be completed this summer, but spokesmen said they did not know how many employees will be moved to Charlotte.

Virginia Tech Crushes Bucs In Finale

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

BLACKSBURG, Va. — Sparked by senior guard Ron Bell, the Gobblers of Virginia Tech streaked away from East Carolina University during a four minute period in the second half last night and romped to a 95-77 victory in the season finale for both teams.

The Hokies are still hopeful of getting a bid to the National Invitational Tournament, and after a lack-luster first half, came on strong in the second in their attempt to impress the selection committee of the event.

The game was won on the backboards, as Tech demolished the Pirates there with a 55-38 margin. It was one of the worst beatings in that department that the Pirates suffered during the year.

Tech finished the year with a 19-8 season, their second straight with that mark. East Carolina ended up with a 9-17 mark under first year coach Larry Gillman.

The Pirates, who trailed by only six with 14:46 left in the game, went scoreless during the next 4:15, while Tech pushed through 14 points. That ran the Gobbler lead from 48-42 to 62-42 and put the game out of reach for the Pirates. Bell canned eight of the 14 points.

"We missed a couple of free throws and a couple of easy shots during that period," Gillman said. "Then, Tech got a lot of extra shots with their rebounding."

Gillman commented that in the first half, Marshall Ashford, who bombed several long-range shots, kept Tech in the game as the Bucs built up as much as a six-point lead. "I don't think our defense was that bad, it was just a question of how bad we were beaten on the boards."

He also felt that his Pirates were tired at the end of the long season. "The kids have been through a lot physically and emotionally during the past few weeks," he said. "We didn't play as well as we are capable of playing, but then neither did Tech."

The Pirates also experienced horrible free throw shooting, hitting just nine of 23 shots for a icey 39.1 percentage. "That helped take us out of the game, too," Gillman said. "Earlier in the day, I shot a free throw in practice, and it seemed different somehow. I don't know what it was. We just couldn't seem to hit them."

Oliver Mack closed out his season with 32 points, missing his intended goal of 700 points for the year by one. His 699 set a new school record for most points in a season, and gave him a 27.9 average for the year, also a new mark.

Mack canned 15 of 26 shots from the floor, but like the rest, had his troubles at the line, making only two of five shots.

The only other Pirate in double figures was Herb Gray with 18.

Virginia Tech, meanwhile, put four players in double figures, led by Bell with 19. Ashford added 18, while Tic Price had 15 and Wayne Robinson finished with 10.

Tech got the opening basket and moved out to a 6-2 lead during the first two minutes. East Carolina caught up and went ahead for the first time at 9-8 on a baseline jumper by Mack with 16:12 left. Gray and Greg Cornelius each added baskets for a 13-8 lead with 15:17 to go in the half.

The margin reached its high point at 20-14 on a three-point play by Kyle Powers with 12:00 to go.

But Robinson hit on a drive, as did Price, and Sam Foggin scored from underneath to tie it at 20-20 with 10:53 left.

Bell stole the ball for a layup with 9:33 showing, and Tech was back in the lead. The two teams then swapped baskets until the final minute of the half, when Price tossed in a missed shot and Bell hit a jumper with 15 seconds left for a 38-34 Tech lead.

Price scored the first basket of the second half to run Tech's lead to six, and three minutes into the half, Price added two free throws for a 48-36 lead.

East Carolina closed it to within six at 48-42 on a Mack jumper with 14:46 left; but the Pirates ran into a cold streak right there, and Tech ran off 14 in a row to move out by 20.

The Pirates came back with in 14, but never got closer. They eventually trailed by 21, at 91-70 with just under two minutes left.

Gillman: No Word As Yet

What's up, Doc?

What's the latest in the continuing adventures of Larry Gillman, East Carolina University's controversial basketball coach.

Apparently there is nothing to report today except to say that there is not likely to be any announcement of any kind from the University today.

Bill Cain, athletic director, said that any announcement from the school would come through the Sports Information Director's office, but probably would not come today. "It will be soon," Cain said, but did not define soon.

He gave no indication of what that announcement would be. There have been rumors that Gillman, who is in the first year of a three-year contract, will be fired. But there have also been counter-rumors that he will be retained, also.

Several weeks ago, the coach said that he was tired of the "flack" he was getting and he threatened to resign.

Last night, following the loss to Virginia Tech, he was asked if he had any definite word on that, and he would only answer, "No comment."

Asked if the administration had given him any hint of their plans, he referred the press to the administration.

"I would like to be back very much," he said. "Our team has a lot of youth and enthusiasm. With a few people in the right places, I think we can be a good team next year.

"So, yes, I would like to be back."

The announcement could come as early as Friday.

Rampants Test Terry Sanford

Rose High School's Division I runner-up Rampants travel to Fayetteville to meet Terry Sanford High School Friday in a 7:30 p.m. game.

The contest is a first round State 4-A playoff game, with the winner advancing to the final eight in Greensboro next week.

Rose bowed to Rocky Mount in the finals of the Division I tournament to claim the runner-up spot, while the Gryphons claimed the top berth and will be at home to Wadesboro Bowman on Friday.

Terry Sanford's Bulldogs, with a 21-5 record, finished second in the Division III race during the regular season to Westover. But in the tournament, Westover was upset in the semifinals by Seventy-First. Sanford then topped Seventy-First in the finals of the tournament to grab off the league's top-ranked spot.

The 'Dogs will be troubled by the taller Rampants, but rely on outside shooting to get the job done.

Keith Turriff is their tallest player at 6-3, and will have to go up against 6-7 William Barnes in the middle.

Bobby Miller at 6-0 is the next tallest starter, while the others include 5-11 Walker Worth and Ennis Wright and 5-9 Bobby Spider.

Wright is the leading scorer for the Bulldogs with a 17.5 average, while Worth is hitting 15.3 per game and Turriff is averaging 11.3 and Spider, 10.3. Miller carries an 8.6 average into the playoffs.

Rose is led by Barnes with an 18.2 average, while swing man James Hawkins, 6-1, is hitting 15.3 per game. The other guard, Greg Guthrie, 5-10, is scoring 14.7 per game, while forward Anthony Bryant, 6-3, is scoring 13.1 per contest.

The other starter usually is 6-2 Billy Robinson, a forward, hitting less than ten a game.

The state tournament will be held starting on March 8 at Greensboro Grimsley High School.

Rose carries a 16-9 record into the game.

Buc Wrestlers Try Regionals

Ten members of the East Carolina University wrestling team travel to Williamsburg, Va., this weekend to compete in the Eastern Regional Championships. The two-day tournament will be held Friday and Saturday in the William& Mary Hall.

The winner of each weight class along with one wild card selection will advance to the NCAA Championships March 16-18 in College Park, Md.

This will be the first time East Carolina has ever completed in the Eastern Regionals. The Pirates qualified for the nationals in the Southern Conference Tournament during the last seven years, but ECU withdrew from the league at the end of last season.

D.T. Joyner, Butch Revils, Steve Goode and Paul Osman are all potential national qualifiers and have performed well in tournaments this season.

Joyner, currently ranked fifth in the nation in the heavyweight division, has a 16-1 record and won the Carolina Invitational earlier this season. He is also ranked second in the heavyweight class on the All-Southern team.

Revils, a freshman from Norfolk, Va., boasts a 14-5-1 record and won the Monarch and Wilkes Open tournament and placed second in the Carolina Invitational. He was named the Outstanding Wrestlers in the Monarch tourney and was selected as the Outstanding Freshman in the Wilkes Open.

Goode has wrestled extremely well during the last month. He has a 7-3 dual record and a 17-7 overall slate.

Osman and Frank Schaede both qualified for the NCAA Tournament last year although neither has enjoyed an outstanding season this year. Osman has a 15-7-3 record with two tournament place finishes while Schaede finished the season with a 12-10-1 overall mark.

Other members of the Pirate regional team will include Charlie McGimsey at 126, Don Foster at 142, Vic Northrup at 177 and Jay Dever at 190.

East Carolina finished the season with a 3-8 dual record this season, the first losing record for the Pirates since 1966-67.

Golfers Seventh

MYRTLE BEACH — The East Carolina golf team fired a first round total of 322 strokes and is in seventh place after the first round of the Coastal Carolina Classic at Bay Tree Plantation course.

Sophomore Donnie Owens was the low man for the Pirates with a five over par 77. No other member of the team broke 80 although the round was played in wet, rainy conditions.

Following Owens was David Brogan with an 80, senior Mike Buckmaster with 82, John Abraham and Doug Davis, 83, and Keith Hiller with an 84.

Miami is leading the tournament with a 311 total followed by Ball State and N.C. State at 312. Virginia Tech and Duke are tied with 314, followed by Michigan at 315.

Trailing East Carolina in eighth place is James Madison with a 323, followed by Richmond at 331.

The tournament winds up Friday.

Duke, Wake, Terps Claim ACC Wins

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — "If there's a tougher way in the country to make a living," said Lefty Driesell, "I want to know what the hell it is."

Driesell's job as head coach at Maryland this season has not been an easy one. But rarely has it been more exhausting — or more rewarding — than Wednesday night, when the Terps outlasted North Carolina State, 109-108, in a triple overtime to advance to tonight's semifinals of the Atlantic Coast Conference basketball tournament.

In other first-round games, 15th-ranked Duke turned back Clemson, 83-72, and Wake Forest defeated Virginia, 72-61.

So Wake Forest will meet 10th-ranked North Carolina and Driesell's Cinderella squad will go up against Duke in tonight's semifinal round.

"I really haven't thought about Duke yet,"said Driesell, who apparently was not counting on more than a one-night stand for his Terps. "I have to get my thoughts together. But we'll be there."

Larry Gibson, who played all 55 minutes in what was the longest game in ACC tournament history, posted 27 points, 18 rebounds and five blocked shots for Maryland.

But it was a freshman, 6-foot-6 Albert King, who brought the Terps alive in overtime after a sluggish second half. King had 14 of his 21 points in the extra periods, including two free throws in the closing seconds of the third overtime.

Maryland had its biggest lead, 48-32, shortly before halftime, but the Wolfpack whittled that down and actually forced the Terps to play catch-up to send the game past regulation. Kenny Matthews, who led N.C. State with 23 points, scored 12 of them in the last 10 minutes of regulation to spark the Wolfpack comeback.

But it was all for naught, and the frustration showed on the face of Wolfpack coach Norm Sloan.

"It looked like it just wasn't meant to be for us," he said.

Maryland climbed to 15-12 overall, while State's record fell to 18-9.

The other two first-round games featured less excitement and held fewer surprises, as Duke and Wake Forest each took early leads and cruised to berths in the semifinals.

But Duke coach Bill Foster said it wasn't easy to motivate his team for its tournament encounter with Clemson.

"It was hard to prepare them psychologically," Foster said. "It's a big problem not having 9,000 fans all scream for us. But I told them, 'We play sloppy and we can just warm up the van and head back to Durham."

Duke freshman Kenny Dennard didn't look like he needed too much encouragement, however. Playing just down the road from his hometown of King, Dennard pumped in 22 points, including 10 of 14 field goal attempts, to lead all scorers.

"Dennard game them an added dimension to what they already have," said Clemson coach Bill Foster, adding sadly that "we tend to bring out the best in everybody we play this year."

Mike Gminski, the Blue Devils' all-conference center, had 20 points, but his opposite number, Clemson's John Campbell, held his own. Before fouling out, Campbell had 16 points, including two dunk shots around and over Gminski, to pace the Tigers.

Duke guard John Harrell hit the deck late in the game and had to be helped from the floor. Duke's Foster said Harrell was "not too alert" after the game, but expected him to be ready to go against Maryland.

Duke, which survived the first round for the first time since 1972, upped its overall record to 21-6, while Clemson dropped to 15-12.

Later, Virginia ended the evening — and perhaps the season — on an inauspicious note, hitting only three field goals in the first half as it succombed to Wake Forest.

"It was a heckuva long 40 minutes," said Cavalier coach Terry Holland after the game. "Certainly we can play much better."

The Cavs looked just as bad in the final statistics as they did on the court. They made 20 field goals and 21 free throws — while committing 27 personal fouls and 23 turnovers.

Wake Forest did not have one of its more impressive outings of the year — nor did its all-America forward Rod Griffin, who tallied only eight points.

But Frank Johnson kept the Deacons comfortably ahead in the second half, when he scored 22 of his game-high 23 points.

Wake coach Carl Tacy, who hasn't taken the Deacons to the tournament semifinals since 1973, said he wasn't worried about tonight's foe, regular-season champion North Carolina.

"They're rested," he said of the Tar Heels, who drew a first-round bye. "But for us, I don't think it will be much different (than playing Virginia). I just hope we play up to our capabilities."

The Deacons will have to contend with Jeff Wolf, the Tar Heels' reserve center, who will play despite a knee injury hat was aggravated in practice this week. Another North Carolina center, Geff Crompton, is also slated to return to action tonight after sitting out four games because of an NCAA eligibility ruling.

Wake Forest will enter the semifinal round at 18-9. Virginia's record dropped to 20-7.

Mack Gains District Honor

WICHITA, Kan. (AP) — The U.S. Basketball Writers Association Wednesday named North Carolina's Phil Ford as the college basketball player of the year.

More than 700 members of the association took part in the balloting.

Ford, Rod Griffin of Wake Forest and Mychal Thompson of Minnesota were repeat selections from last season's AllAmerica team.

Other members this year include Butch Lee of Marquette, Larry Bird of Indiana State, David Greenwood of UCLA, Freeman Williams of Portland State, Jack Givens of Kentucky, Ron Brewer of Arakansas and Michael Cooper of New Mexico.

In addition, the writers named Ford player of the year in District III-B. District III-B includes Maryland, Virginia and the Carolinas.

The all-district team, in addition to Ford, includes Ron Carter of Virginia Military, Denny Fields of North Carolina-Wilmington, Mike Gminski of Duke, Rod Griffin of Wake Forest, Oliver Mack of East Carolina, Lew Massey of North Carolina-Charlotte, Jonathan Moore of Furman, Mike O'Koren of North Carolina and Jim Spanarkel of Duke.

Pitchers Look Over Shoulders

By ALEX SACHARE
AP Sports Writer

For Tom Seaver, spring training is a time to ponder the possibility of a 30-win season.

For Jim Beattie, Ken Clay and Gil Patterson, it's a time to play another kind of numbers game, looking over their shoulders at the other pitchers in camp and worrying what their mailing addresses will be this summer.

Seaver is at one end of the baseball spectrum; Beattie, Clay and Patterson are at the other.

Seaver is a veteran, a superstar assured of a job with the Cincinnati Reds, a pitcher who spends his springs easing his way into shape for the long season.

Beattie, Clay and Patterson are youngsters, three of 17 pitchers in the New York Yankees' training camp who are competing for nine jobs. For them, spring is a time for survival.

And when their turns come, they have to produce. The rookies know they have to be sharp every time out or their slim chances for survival will vanish.

While the young Yanks talk about making the team, Seaver mulls his chances of becoming the first National League pitcher since Dizzy Dean in 1934 to win 30 games.

One thing on Seaver's side is the Reds' superb defense that includes four Gold Glove winners — catcher Johnny Bench, second baseman Joe Morgan, shortstop Dave Concepcion and center fielder Cesar Geronimo.

Meanwhile, Morgan was among three Reds who were absent as the team reported to training camp. Morgan is completing college examinations and has been given permission to report late. The other absentees were Ed Armbrister, who is having visa problems, and Junior Kennedy, who is unsigned.

Seaver was nursing a strained calf muscle which he injured on Tuesday.

At the Yankee camp, it was reported that Hunter has diabetes and has known about the illness for about 10 days. However, the illness is not expected to keep the former Cy Young Award winner, who slumped to a 9-9 record last year after being plagued by shoulder and abdominal ailments, from pitching this season.

Elsewhere as spring training swung into high gear, second baseman Dave Lopes was named captain of the Los Angeles Dodgers.

Third baseman Lenny Randle ended his brief "retirement" from the New York Mets and returned to the club.

The Atlanta Braves announced that holdout slugger Jeff Burroughs, who blasted 41 homers last season and is reportedly seeking a raise from $160,000 last year to over $300,000 this season, would report to the club's West Palm Beach, Fla. training camp next week.

And the Boston Red Sox said they are trying to find a backup to regular shortstop Rick Burleson.

Tournament Action Heats Up In Nation

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

The players aren't the only ones who sweat in the Atlantic Coast Conference playoffs.

Coaching is tough work, too — especially when your team has to go into triple overtime to win.

"If there's a tougher way in the country to make a living, I want to know what it is," said a sweat-drenched Lefty Driesell after his Maryland team upset North Carolina State 109-108 Wednesday night in a triple-overtime thriller.

"I'm kind of speechless," added Driesell after the dramatic game, one of three first-rounders in Greensboro, N.C. "I thought we had it won a couple of times before. But we did everything we were able to do to get them back into the game — and we got them back in it several times."

The victory moved the Terrapins into tonight's semifinals against 15th-ranked Duke, an 83-72 winner over Clemson in the tourney's opening game. In the other first-round contest, Wake Forest defeated Virginia 72-61 and advanced to tonight's meeting with North Carolina, the ACC's regular-season champion which drew a first-round bye.

While ACC teams started their playoffs, the teams in the Missouri Valley Conference continued theirs as Indiana State defeated Bradley 88-81 and New Mexico State whipped Drake 90-73. The winners will play Friday in the semifials for the right to meet Creighton for the MVC championship.

Elsewhere, St. Bonaventure and Virginia Commonwealth pulled upsets in the Eastern College Athletic Conference playoffs. St. Bonaventure subdued No. 14 Syracuse 70-69 in the Upstate New York Division and Virginia Commonwealth downed 17th-ranked Georgetown 88-75 in the Southern Division and will meet Saturday for an NCAA playoff berth.

In other action Wedneszh night, third-ranked Marquette defeated Butler 90-79 and No. 6 DePaul trounced Valparaiso 89-62.

Kenny Dennard scored 22 points and Mike Gminski had 20 as Duke overwhelmed Clemson. It was the first time in the past four years under Bill Foster that the Blue Devils had advanced past the first round of the ACC playoffs.

Frank Johnson collected 23 points to pace Wake Forest over Virginia. The Deacons led by as many as 23 points in the second half.

Larry Bird scored 33 points and grabbed 14 rebounds and Harry Morgan keyed a second-half hot streak to power Indiana State over Bradley.

A balanced scoring attack, led by Robert Gunn's 19 points, boosted New Mexico State over Drake. Six players hit in double figures for the Aggies. Gunn was followed by Cyrus Cormier with 18 points.

Delmar Harrod scored a career-high 22 points, including the winning basket with 16 seconds left, to lead St. Bonaventure over Syracuse.

EXCEPT FOR BRIEF periods at the beginning and end of Tuesday night's Division I title game, Rose High played excellent basketball against Rocky Mount, the regular season champion.

A problem area for the Rampants was the transition basket and the taller Gryphons got the ball down the court quickly after missed Rose shots to score many times on fast break layups. This helped enable Rocky Mount to build an 11-point lead early in the second quarter.

Rose was able to cut the lead to five by halftime, however, and trailed by only one, 46-45, when star Gryphon center Buck Williams went out with four fouls.

That helped Rose build a three-point lead, but the Rampants missed six shots late in the game and the Gryphons, sparked by Williams' return, took advantage of the cold spell to capture an 82-77 victory.

Rose coach Jim Brewington was happy with his team's play, despite the loss, especially the performance of center William Barnes, who outscored Williams 32-15, including several jumpers and a slam dunk over the heralded Gryphon. Barnes' play attracted the eye of the numerous college scouts in attendance, including representatives of Maryland and N. C. State.

Rocky Mount coach Reggie Henderson was also very complimentary of the Rampants. The Gryphon coach said Rose creates a defensive problem because "they are a fine shooting ballclub. There is no one you can key on."

THE LOSS GIVES the Rampants the second-place seed from Division I in the state playoffs, forcing them to go on the road. Rose will travel to play Fayetteville Terry Sanford Friday night, a small, but quick team, which is disciplined along the lines of North Pitt.

The Bulldogs' biggest player is 6-3 senior center Keith Turriff, who averages 11.3 points per game. The leading scorer on the team is a 5-11 jumping jack, Ennis Wright, who hits at a 17.5 per game clip.

Terry Sanford has depended on its outside shooting in compiling a 21-5 record this year. Although the Bulldogs averaged 70.3 points per game, they showed tendencies to slow the ball down towards the end of the season.

The team is quick and plays good defense, alternating between zone and man-to-man to mix up the opposition. Coach Len Maness told a reporter after the conference tournament that his main concern in the playoffs would be going up against a team with a big front line an experienced inside game — a team much like the Rampants.

The Bulldogs will have to be hot from the outside and play good defense to defeat the Rampants, and although they would appear to be much weaker than Rose, they should not be considered a pushover. The Rampants will have to have a solid ballgame to advance to the 4-A quarterfinals.

Even the sun has deserted the Phoenix Suns.

Heavy rains pelted the "Valley of the Sun" on Wednesday and the roof of the Phoenix Coliseum sprung a few leaks. A mop-up crew got the arena in shape for the Suns' game against the DetroitPistons Wednesday night, but play was halted late in the first half when a downpour soaked one section of the floor.

And to top it all off, the home team dropped its fifth game in a row, bowing to the Pistons 115-102.

In other National Basketball Association games Wednesday night, the Philadelphia 76ers beat the Golden State Warriors 125-119, the New Orleans Jazz edged the Boston Celtics 101-100, the New Jersey Nets trimmed the Atlanta Hawks 97-95, the Buffalo Braves defeated the Houston Rockets 114-104 and the Cleveland Cavaliers beat the Denver Nuggets 110-104.

76ers 125, Warriors 119

Doug Collins scored a season-high 37 points for Philadelphia, which trailed Golden State by as many as 18 points in the first half before taking a 110-102 lead with eight straight points, six by Julius Erving.

Three free throws in the final minute by Lloyd Free, who scored 25 points, and two free throws by Harvey Catchings kept the Sixers in control.

Jazz 101, Celtics 100

Truck Robinson scored 33 points and grabbed 13 rebounds as New Orleans edged Boston and moved one game ahead of Atlanta in their battle for the final Eastern Conference playoff berth. A basket by Gail Goodrich with one minute left gave New Orleans a 101-99 lead, then Boston's John Havlicek blew a chance to send the game into overtime when he could convert only one of three free throws.

Dave Cowens led Boston with 26 points but was ejected from the game after picking up two technical fouls with 2:13 to play for protesting an official's call.

Nets 97, Hawks 95

John Williamson scored 37 points and Bernard King 25 for New Jersey, which took a 96-93 lead with nine seconds remaining when Williamson sank a technical foul called against Atlanta for taking too many timeouts. Charlie Criss hit a baseline jumper with four seconds to play, but one second later, Criss fouled Ed Jordan and the Nets' rookie guard hit a free throw for the final margin.

Braves 114, Rockets 104

Randy Smith scored 14 of his 27 points in the final quarter to help Buffalo snap a five-game losing streak and hand Houston its fourth loss in the last five games. Buffalo overcame a 13-point deficit early in the third quarter, aided by 14 points by little-used Bill Willoughby. He finished with 20.

Bullets 125, Spurs 110

Kevin Grevey scored a career-high 29 points and Bob Dandridge broke out of a slump with 26 as Washington beat Central Division-leading San Antonio. The Bullets built a 15-point lead after opening the second period with a 14-3 burst and were never caught.

Cavaliers 110, Nuggets 104

Campy Russell scored 23 points and Elmore Smith blocked two shots in the final minutes as Cleveland dealt Denver only its fifth loss of the season on its home court. David Thompson had 15 of his 33 points in the fourth quarter for the Nuggets.

Getting The Word

Maryland Coach Lefty Driesell shouts to his team as he prepares to send Larry Gibson back into Wednesday night's ACC tournament game against N.C. State at the Greensboro Coliseum. Gibson scored 27 points and grabbed 18 rebounds as the Terrapins defeated in Wolfpack, 109-108, in a triple overtime. (AP Laserphoto)

Ford, Lee Pace All-America

NEW YORK (AP) — North Carolina's inimitable Phil Ford and Marquette's indispensable Butch Lee have been named to The Associated Press 1978 Division I All-America basketball team.

Ford and Lee, two of the country's premier guards, were joined on the first team by Minnesota center Mychal Thompson and forwards Larry Bird of Indiana State and David Greenwood of UCLA.

Ford scored the highest point total among the five in the nationwide voting by sports writers and broadcasters. The Tar Heel star collected 906 points based on 5 for the first team and 3 for second.

Lee was the second leading point-getter with 866, Thompson collected 686 and Bird 608. Greenwood's 364 just nosed out Portland State's Freeman Williams for first-team honors.

The high-scoring Portland State guard amassed 346 points and headed a second team that also featured Jack Givens of Kentucky, Ron Brewer of Arkansas, Alabama's Reggie King and DePaul's Dave Corzine.

The third team included Sidney Moncreif of Arkansas; Rod Griffin of Wake Forest; Rick Robey of Kentucky; Earvin Johnson of Michigan State and Mike Evans of Kansas State.

Ford is the only repeater from last year's first team. Thompson and Lee were on The AP's second team in 1977.

Ford, apple of the pro scouts' eyes, is considered to be the best playmaker ever to run Dean Smith's heralded "Four-Corner Offense" at North Carolina. He broke the Tar Heels' career records for scoring and assists this season in his best year ever at Chapel Hill.

While leading North Carolina to the regular-season championship of the Atlantic Coast Conference, Ford averaged nearly 21 points a game and amassed 168 assists. The 6-foot-2 guard from Rocky Mount, N.C., finished the regular season with 2,246 career points.

Similar to Ford, Lee is the ultimate team player. The essential element of Marquette's attack, he averaged 17 points a game and handed off 130 assists during the regular season. A dynamic penetrator with a superb shooting eye, Lee made 51 percent of his floor shots this year and converted 90 percent from the foul line.

Thompson, Minnesota's career leader in scoring and rebounding, is an artist on defense as well. The 23-year-old native of Nassau, Bahamas, was closing in on the career scoring record in the Big Ten at season's end and the coveted 2,000-point level. The 6-10 center averaged over 23 points and nearly 12 rebounds a game during the regular season.

Bird, a retiring, curly-haired country boy from southern Indiana, has the most impressive statistics on the first team, a 30-point, 12-rebound average. The 6-9, 220-pounder also led the Indiana State team in steals this year and was second in blocked shots and assists. This year, he shot 51 percent from the floor.

Greenwood's average of 11.7 rebounds a game is the highest at UCLA since Bill Walton was the scourge of the Pacific-8 Conference in the early 1970s. The 6-9, 240-pounder led the Bruins to a Pac-8 title this year with a 17.5-point average, shooting 53 percent from the floor.

ERA Not Faring Well In Carter's Home Region

By PEGGY WALSH
Associated Press Writer

ATLANTA (AP) — The Equal Rights Amendment, moving toward the last year of its chance for ratification with a push from President Carter, isn't faring well in Carter's home region, and it's beginning to hurt some state pocketbooks.

The proposed amendment, whose purpose is to ban sex discrimination, has been ratified in 35 states but needs approval from three more before March 22, 1979, to become part of the U.S. Constitution.

Tennessee, the only one of the eight Southeastern states to ratify the amendment, has since voted to rescind approval, but the legality of that is in question.

In Carter's home state of Georgia, the ERA has fared poorly in the past — going down to defeat in the House in 1974, dying in the Senate in 1975 and never getting out of a Senate committee in 1977 and 1978.

Legislatures in Alabama and South Carolina defeated the measure this year. In Mississippi and North Carolina, it was given little attention during the session, and in Florida and Louisiana, where 1978 legislative sessions are upcoming, the amendment is given little chance of passage.

Although the Carter administration has actively supported the amendment, many opponents in state legislatures in the Southeast say they are concerned about the second paragraph of the three-paragraph amendment which says Congress "shall have the power to enforce by appropriate legislation the provisions of this article."

Some state lawmakers argue that provision would put enforcement of the law too much in federal hands.

A recent tactic by supporters of the ERA has been to urge national groups to refuse to hold conventions and other meetings in states which have not ratified the measure.

The economic effect in the Southeast has been difficult to determine, since some organizations have said only that they wouldn't hold conventions in states opposing the ERA, even if conventions were not planned.

But several conventions already have been canceled, and state officials, careful not to support or oppose the amendment, are totaling up the losses.

In Atlanta, one of the South's most popular convention cities, Rick Myers of the Atlanta Visitors Bureau has estimated the city may lose about $10 million over the next four years.

In Miami Beach, Fla., officials say potential losses outweigh actual cancellations.

"We had two conventions we were preparing to bid on that we could not bid because their bylaws forbid going to a non-ERA state," said Hal Cohen, director of the city's Tourist Development Authority.

Cohen said those conventions — the National Education Association and the American Library Association — probably would have meant $9 million in business for the city. "It was not a loss of a convention, but a loss of potential," he said.

Edward J. McNeill, executive vice president of the Greater New Orleans Tourist and Convention Bureau, estimated that city's losses from non-ratification at about $8 million.

But in North Carolina, South Carolina and Tennessee, convention officials say the ERA has had no visible effect on tourism.

"I keep reading about that elsewhere, but as far as any specific convention is concerned, I don't know about it," said William Arnold, director of North Carolina's Travel and Tourism Division.

"We are not being boycotted," said Polly Lewis of the Tennessee Department of Tourism. "And I haven't heard of any conventions coming to Tennessee because we've approved it."

Ashby Ward, executive director of the Greater Myrtle Beach (S.C.) Chamber of Commerce, said he has received pro-ERA letters threatening cancellation of meetings, but added, "It seems there is more smoke than fire."

The only major reversal of a decision not to hold a meeting in a non-ERA state in the Southeast came last month when the federal volunteer agency Action said it made an error in striking Atlanta, Chicago and St. Louis from the list of cities where the agency planned to hold training sessions. The cities had been stricken because they were located in non-ERA states.

The reversal came after U.S. Sens. Herman Talmadge and Sam Nunn, both Georgia Democrats, wrote to their fellow Georgian, Attorney General Griffin Bell, to complain that such pressure for "political" purposes exceeded the powers of a federal agency.

Action Director Sam Brown wrote the senators that "while I personally favor the ERA and would like to see it ratified by other states, I know that this position which I expressed was in error."

Brown said he "reacted to concerns expressed by employees of this agency but, in doing so, I believe we overstepped the legitimate bounds of a federal agency."

A Workshop For Riders

Friday and Saturday, March 4 and 5, are the dates for a rider's workshop to be held at Turkey Quarter Riding Academy near Jasper in Craven County, on N.C. 55 between Kinston and New Bern.

The workshop will be conducted by James Cantwell, head of the Horsemanship Department, Intremont College, Bristol, Va. Cantwell holds both a No. 1 Rider Rating and National Judge Certification. He will work with riders in beginner, intermediate and advanced levels, from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. on both days.

He will focus on techniques of forward-seat equitation riding, which is an English style riding of a more formal style than cowboy riding or other forms of riding.

Participation is limited to active members of the Turkey Quarter Riding Academy, which includes a number of Greenville residents.

However, the public is invited without charge to attend as observers.

WILLIAMS PREMIERE

CHARLESTON, S.C. (UPI) — The world premiere of Tennessee Williams' "Creve Coeur" will take place at the Dock Street Theater here June 1 - 11 as part of the 1978 Spoleto Festival.

Martin Countian Played Distinguished Role

By Dr. H.G. JONES
For the Associated Press

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — March 6 is the 100th anniversary of the death of Asa Biggs who was licensed to practice law before he was 21 years of age and who was elected to the Convention of 1835 before he was 25.

During his lifetime he was elected to both houses of the state legislature, both houses of the U. S. Congress, and was appointed to both federal and Confederate judgeships.

He left North Carolina rather than apologize for accusing the state Supreme Court justices of partisan interference in the election of 1868.

Asa Biggs was born Feb. 4, 1811, at Williamston, the son of Joseph and Chloe Daniel Biggs. His father was a merchant and a Primitive Baptist preacher.

The youngster attended the Williamston Academy, then clerked in stores in Washington, Hamilton and Williamston. While working for Henry Williams in his hometown, Biggs took a reduction in salary to $350 per year so that he could spend more time reading law.

He appeared before the state Supreme Court and was licensed when he was 20 years old. No one bothered to ask him his age.

In 1832, Biggs married Martha Elizabeth Andrews and they had 10 children, eight of whom grew to adulthood.

At Williamston the young lawyer's practice was good, and in 1835, at the age of 24, he was elected a delegate to the state convention called to amend the antiquated constitution of 1776.

He associed at the convention with the leading statemen of the day — Nathaniel Macon, William Gaston, David L. Swain and others.

In 1840, Biggs was elected to the House of Commons. In this campaign he followed the old custom of "treating" voters to liquor, but when he ran for a second term in 1842, his strict sense of sobriety led him to publicly denounce the tradition. His constituents apparently approved, for he was reelected.

After two terms in the lower house, Biggs in 1844 went to the state Senate and while a member of that body was elected to the U. S. House of Representatives.

In Washington he was depressed by the bickering and extravagance of Congress, and he did not want to seek reelection. However, out of a sense of obligation to the Democratic party, he ran and was defeated by David Outlaw, whose seat Biggs had won two years earlier.

This was the only time he was ever defeated at the polls.

Returning to Martin County and reestablishing his law practice, Biggs was instrumental in the codification of the laws in the 1850s. Then, in order to steer the revisal through the legislature, he returned to the state Senate in 1854, fully expecting to make this his last public office.

His colleagues, however, had other ideas, and to his surprise and without any effort on his part, Biggs was elected to a six-year term in the U. S. Senate.

Three years, though, were enough, and in 1858 he resigned. A plain, frugal man, he simply could not stomach what he considered the spendthrift ways of the Senate.

President Buchanan appointed Biggs to the federal judgeship for North Carolina, a position he filled with honor until the eve of the Civil War when he resigned in protest over federal policies.

Shortly after the war began, President Jefferson Davis commissioned Biggs as Confederate judge for North Carolina. In less than a year, the judge and his family were driven from their Williamston home by Union troops.

They lived for a short time near Tarboro and then, for more than a year, their home was near Rocky Mount.

Still too close to the enemy, the judge in late 1963 moved to "Dalkeith" in Warren County, "secure from Yankee raids and invasion."

With the fall of the Confederacy, Biggs returned to private practice. The conduct of the justices of the state Supreme Court in the presidential campaign of 1868 so disgusted Biggs and a number of other Democratic lawyers that they drewup a protest.

When the court demanded an apology, Biggs refused and was disbarred. He sadly left the state in 1869 and entered the commission business in Norfolk, Va.

For a short time, in addition to his business interests, Biggs practiced law with Judge W. N. H. Smith, who soon was appointed chief justice of the North Carolina Supreme Court, the Democrats having returned to power.

After that, Biggs devoted most of his time to his successful business. He occupied a prominent place in the life of Norfolk, where he died in 1878.

His contemporary, John H. Wheeler, described him as "a fair sample of a North Carolina gentleman, solid rather than showy in his acquirements, retiring and modest in his opinions, but tenacious and firm when assailed — consistent and conciliatory in his course."

Winter's End Should Bolster The Economy

INTERSTATE SECURITIES CORP.

Recently released government statistics for December and January continue to show a less than ebullient economy. Despite the poor readings ob business inventories, personal income, retail sales, and a downward revision of fourth quarter Gross National Product, the Administration is sticking with its estimate that the U.S. economy will grow at 4.5-5 percent, after inflation, this year.

Many of the January numbers are being distorted by severe winter weather and effects of the coal strike, but there is also some concern that the consumer's willingness to spend is slowing down.

Business inventories declined less than 0.1 percent in December, a small drop, but the first decline since December, 1975. Business is so cautious in building inventories that December stocks represented only 1.41 months sales, the lowest level reached since January 1951. This low a level obviously cannot be sustained for long, so we could soon begin to see some inventory building. This will benefit manufacturers over the near term, but it would not be expected to contribute much to economic growth for the entire year.

Personal income rose 0.3 percent in January, the smallest gain in a year, but it follows substantial increases in the two previous months. Income was boosted by government payments to wheat farmers and an increase in the minimum wage, but it was negatively affected by the coal strike and increases in Social Security taxes.

January retail sales dropped 3.1 percent the steepest monthly decline in 13 years. Retail sales for the week ended February 11 fell 6.4 percent. January retail sales represent a gain of about 1 percent from the comparable year-earlier figure, but contrasts with previous gains of 4-5 percent through 1977. All but three major categories of retail goods were up: apparel sales, auto sales, and sales of building materials and hardware.

Gross National Product for the fourth quarter of 1977 was revised downward to 4.0 percent real growth from 4.2 percent, which compares with a gain of 5.1 percent in the previous quarter. That figure is subject to further revision when actual corporate profits are considered.

Other recently reported January statistics include a decline in housing starts of 29 percent on an adjusted annual rate, and a drop of 0.7 percent in industrial production, the sharpest decline since March 1975.

It is impossible to tell how much of the recent poor economic statistics are due to cold weather and the coal strike. Administration officials continue to expect a 5 percent real gain in GNP for the first quarter, but that hope should quickly fade if the coal strike continues.

Better weather through most of the nation and an end to the coal strike should result in improved economic statistics, but only time will tell if administration forecasts of real growth are on target.

Earn Honors At Session

A group of students from D. H. Conley High School attended the District 1 FBLA Competitive Events meeting at Bertie Senior High School in Windsor on Monday, February 27. First place winners were Nancy Berg, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Berg, and Jodie Faust, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Faust. Nancy won in public speaking, while Jodie won in the steno 1 events.

Other winners include second place winner in the clerk-typist 1 event, Kay Heath, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James E. Heath, and third place winner in Miss Future Business Leader, Betty Gurganus, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Gurganus.

Other students who attended the meeting and participated in the event were Debra Daniels, Gwendolyn Smith and Jimmie Smith.

Speaking of Your Health...

Lester L. Coleman, M.D.

New Drugs for Psoriasis

I am plagued by psoriasis. My life seems to revolve around trying to get some information about new drugs for treatment. I've been through all of the old ones without any real success. Do you know of any new drugs being manufactured anywhere that can be of some help for me? — Mrs. E.L.L., Mich.

Dear Mrs. L.:

The secrets of the cause and cure of psoriasis have defied the tremendous amount of scientific studies that are in progress. Every once in a while, a new drug is brought out with great enthusiasm. For some it is helpful; for many, it is not.

One of these drugs, methatrexate, seemed to have great promise, but it has not fulfilled all that was expected of it.

Recently, a group of research scientists, under the direction of Dr. Rosalie Marinari, working at the Hahnemann Medical College and Hospital in Philadelphia, described a new drug, Mycophenolic acid, which seems to be effective in the treatment of persistent and severe psoriasis.

Although there seem to be some discomforting side effects, these doctors have been able to control them. The cases that were selected for study were those that were resistant to any form of treatment with the older, conventional methods.

The results have been sufficiently interesting to stimulate other workers and students of psoriasis to attempt to duplicate the successful work of Dr. Marinari's group.

It is hoped, too, that some of the more annoying adverse reactions to this new drug, or its modifications, will be eliminated.

The uninterrupted diligence with which psoriasis is being pursued leads many to believe that its control and eradication are no longer speculative dreams.

My father recently had a very serious operation for strangulated hernia. I can't get any information from anyone about what caused it. — Miss C.L., Ohio.

Dear Miss L.:

It isn't clear to me why the doctor who operated on your father didn't completely clarify this for you. Perhaps you didn't press the question, as you should have.

Occasionally, people who suffer from a neglected hernia for a long time run into this kind of complication. Sometimes, a small loop of intestine becomes caught in the hernial opening. Most often, this tiny intestinal bulge can be pushed back into its proper position.

When it cannot be "reduced" or returned to its normal position, the intestine becomes swollen. The swelling then shuts off the blood supply to that part of the intestine. This is known as "strangulation" of the intestine, or "strangulated hernia." Now, surgery is almost always necessary. An unfortunate result of neglected hernia.

Dr. Hoffman At Annual Session

Dr. Donald R. Hoffman, associate professor of pathology at the School of Medicine, East Carolina University, is attending the annual American Academy of Allergy in Pheonix, Arizona, where he is presenting two papers.

One paper, "Biochemical and Allergenic Studies of Vespid Venoms" deals with Hoffman's comparisons of yellow jacket, paper wasp and hornet venoms.

The other paper, "Identification of Important Allergens in Dog Dander," is the result of a collaborative study which focuses on what makes certain individuals allergic to dogs.

The meeting began Feb. 25 and is concluding early in March.

Normal Rain In Vineyard Areas

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Rainfall in California's vineyard areas is normal this winter after two years of drought. Reports compiled by the Wine Institute, a trade organization, indicate rainfall ranging from just under an inch over normal in one area to as much as four to eight inches above normal in Napa, Sonoma and Mendocino counties north of San Francisco. This year had been regarded as critical for the state's drought-stressed vines.
