

A Day For Green

Today is St. Patrick's Day, and what could be more symbolic of the Irish holiday than the leprechaun?

A fantasy of Irish folklore the leprechaun is pictured as a small and old man with cocked hat and leather apron.

He is seldom seen and is a shoemaker by trade. The hammering is the searcher's guide to his whereabouts.

The search goes on because he is supposed to possess a crock of gold. If captured, the leprechaun might reveal the hiding place of the gold.

The problem: He's difficult to find and, once located, he has to be watched constantly; even a glance away gives him the opportunity to disappear.

Happy hunting, and if you don't find a leprechaun, at least be aware it is Saint Patrick's Day. —ALVIN TAYLOR

Treaty Opponents Vow To Fight On

By MIKE SHANAHAN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate leaders are confident the second Panama Canal treaty ratification fight will be won more easily than the first.

But opponents say the battle has just begun.

The Senate's close 68-32 vote ratifying the neutrality treaty Thursday — 67 votes were needed — saved President Carter from a major political defeat.

Carter had put his prestige as a world leader and the political strength of his presidency on the line. Senate Majority Leader Robert Byrd said he believes those were the two biggest factors in assuring approval.

The treaty approved Thursday in the crowded and hushed Senate chamber guarantees the neutrality of the canal after the year 2000, when the United States will surrender control of the 64-year-old waterway, provided the second treaty wins Senate approval.

Asked if that pact would be ratified, Byrd said, "We have established good momentum."

The second agreement, to actually give the canal to Panama in steps over the next 22 years, will be taken up after the Senate returns from its 10-day Easter recess.

Assistant Democratic Leader Alan Cranston of California said of his fellow treaty supporters, "In the long run, we will have the votes we will need."

But a major opponent of the pacts, Sen. Paul Laxalt, R-Nev., said, "The proponents have fired their best shot."

Reflecting opinion polls showing broad public opposition to turning over the canal to Panama, Byrd said that for himself, "This was the most difficult vote I have cast in the Senate in my 20 years here. The pressure was intense. This was not popular vote back home."

All 100 senators were on the floor for the vote. Among those looking on were the two principal U.S. negotiators of the treaty, Sol Linowitz and Ellsworth Bunker. Standing at the rear of the chamber were about two dozen House members who will get their own chance to vote on the Panama issue later.

The House must approve legislation providing funds for the canal transfer, and there are some congressional leaders who believe Carter may face a bigger fight there than in the Senate.

The 67th vote providing the needed two-thirds for ratification was cast almost accidentally by Sen. Gaylord Nelson, D-Wis.

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — President Carter, stopping in North Carolina briefly on a St. Patrick's day trip to the South, said today he expects the University of North Carolina's desegregation controversy to be resolved in the near future.

"We have to comply with federal court orders and we have to insure there are no remnants of discrimination against black people," Carter said at a brief news conference after delivering a speech at Wake Forest University.

"I think this is something I share with the people of North Carolina," he said. The president added that North Carolina Gov. Jim Hunt told him this morning he also expects the controversy to be worked out between university officials and the Department of Health, Education and Welfare in the near future.

HEW has rejected the UNC system's latest desegregation plans for its 16 campuses, and HEW Secretary Joseph Califano has threatened to seek a cutoff of some federal funds — going to the higher education system in the state.

UNC President William C. Friday had been invited to greet the president but did not attend.

On other North Carolina issues, Carter said the state's tobacco industry has nothing to worry about with HEW's antismoking campaign. The campaign is part of a broad health-improvement program and more money is being spent on drug and alcohol research than tobacco, Carter said.

"It has nothing to do at all with the maintenance of the standard of living or income of the 600,000 American families that produce tobacco, and nobody need fear the facts about tobacco," Carter said.

A few supporters of the Wilmington 10 stood outside Wait Chapel, where Carter spoke, carrying placards and chanting slogans supporting the imprisoned group. The president gave no indication he noticed them as he shook hands with spectators while leaving the chapel.

Carter said in the news conference that the only way the federal government would get involved with the case would be through the federal appeals court process.

Democratic candidate for the U.S. Senate nomination Joe Felmet interrupted Carter from the audience as the president began his speech, saying he wanted to give Carter a petition urging freedom for the Wilmington 10.

Carter at first ignored Felmet, then instructed one of his aides to take the petition. Felmet then sat down.

Williamston Department Store Total Fire Loss

WILLIAMSTON — Collins Department Store on Main Street in Williamston was a total loss in a fire early Thursday evening.

Initial estimate of the loss, including the building and merchandise, has been placed at about $250,000.

The Williamston Fire Department was joined by five county fire departments in battling the blaze — Bear Grass, Jamesville, Hamilton, Robertsonville and Griffins Township.

The alarm was turned in at 7:56 p.m., and by that time the building was already engulfed in flames. Preliminary investigation shows that the fire in all likelihood started in the back of the store, and investigation is continuing, authorities reported.

At the height of the blaze, about 200 firemen were at the scene, with back-up rescue units from Bertie County, Robertsonville and Jamesville standing by.

WHAT KIND OF CARE?

I have asked this question of persons in several local agencies and institutions and haven't found anyone who knows yet: what kind of care will the new nursing home being built across from the Jones ARC on the Falkland Highway be offering? Will they be taking Medicaid and Medicare patients or only private ones? M. J.

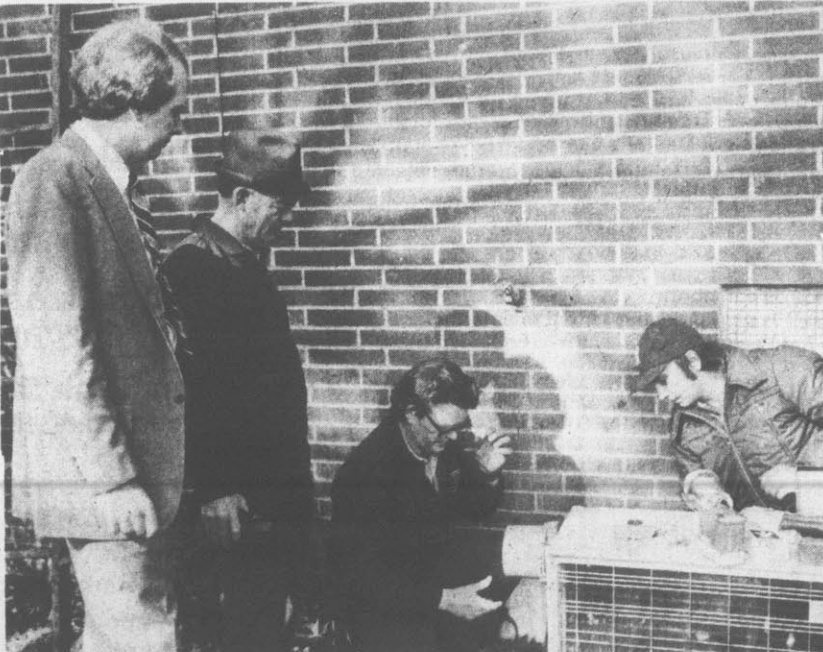

According to a spokesman for Health Care Management Inc. of Charlotte, the University Nursing Center will provide both skilled and intermediate care. It will take Medicare and Medicaid patients. A tentative opening date is May 1.

Hotline asked Pitt Memorial Hospital social worker, Gracie Mebane, to define skilled and intermediate care. She said skilled means continuous licensed nursing care. Intermediate would be for those patients in need of some assistance, but not needing constant nursing care, she said.

CROCHETERS?

I would like to find someone willing to crochet an afghan for me for pay. I know there must be many able and willing to do this, but I have had difficulty finding anyone. N. H.

Hotline called a number of accomplished crocheters, but did not find anyone willing to work for customers. If any of our readers would like to be placed in our files as offering this service, we will be glad to hear from them.

Israeli Commandos Hit Seacoast Base Of PLO

By FAROUK NASSAR

Associated Press Writer

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) —

Israeli commandos swept into Lebanon in helicopters and boats today, blowing up a seacoast base of Palestinian guerrillas and rocketing two carloads of refugees, independent observers and guerrillas said.

The afternoon attack on the guerrilla camp at Adloun, 22 miles north of the Israeli border and between Tyre and Sidon, was carried out under cover of a missile bombardment from four Israeli navy gunboats, one observer said. The helicopter-borne paratroopers reportedly fought hand-to-hand with the guerrillas of George Habash's radical Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine.

Guerrillas said 10 hours earlier in the same area, they found the tail of an Israeli rocket lying near two wrecked autos where the bodies of men, women and children were so mangled it could not be determined how many there were. One unconfirmed report spoke of 20 dead. The guerrillas said that raid was carried out by seaborne Israeli commandos.

The Israeli military command in Tel Aviv refused to comment on the reports of commando raids.

A PFLP statement in Beirut acknowledged the Israeli landing at its camp, but claimed guerrilla defenders beat back the assault, suffering one dead and two wounded.

Israeli tanks operating behind lethal air strikes also overran four more Palestinian villages in southern Lebanon, observers reported, in apparent continuation of the Israeli assault launched Monday against guerrilla strongholds along the Israeli-Lebanese frontier.

The original assault followed last Saturday's Palestinian attack north of Tel Aviv, in which 35 Israelis were killed and for which Yasser Arafat's Al Fatah guerrillas — separate from the PFLP — claimed responsibility.

About 17 hours after the Israeli assault began, Prime Minister Menachem Begin told a news conference in Jerusalem that it was completed but that Israeli troops would remain.

It Takes Irishmen To Really Understand The Irish

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN
NEW YORK (AP) — Some thoughts of Ireland as the big Irish cop blows his whistle and the big parade begins to move up Fifth Avenue this St. Patrick's Day:
It's no secret around 10 Downing Street and the Houses of Parliament that the British have given up on solving the Irish Troubles, always pronounced with the accent on the "u." They'd love to get out if they could.
The solution to this murderous misery, if it ever comes, will have to come from the Irish themselves, both North and South, Catholic and Protestant.
The British must have begun to realize this as early as 1556 when Mary Tudor, the Catholic daughter of Henry VIII who came to be called "Bloody Mary," started it all by driving the O'Moore's and the O'Connors from their lands in Counties Leix and Offaly and importing English farmers to Ireland.
The plantations, as they were called, didn't work. The Irish fought back, as they have ever since, when they weren't fighting among themselves. The Irish never really won, but then neither did the British, who wasted many a monarch's fortune trying to understand their unruly conquests.

The Irish are not an easy subject to understand.
To understand the Irish you have to understand their wild humor and deep piety, the natural poetry of their speech, their unreconciled romanticism for the Ireland of their dreams, the hold that the past has on them and their total commitment to the future, an unshakable belief in a life after death that mixes dogma with superstition and makes the present bearable, even a joy, despite everything.
To understand the Irish you have to understand the old crone, wrapped in her shawl, who was coming out of Mass one weekday morning at the cathedral in Galway and took a mighty hop, almost a leap, to avoid stepping on a crack and offending the fairies, the wee people.
A young priest, just out of the seminary at Maynooth and crammed with ideas from Vatican II, was shocked at her superstitions.
"Now don't tell me, Mrs.

O'Leary," he upbraided her there and then, "that you believe in banshees and leprechauns and pookahs and all that nonsense?"
"Of course not, Father," she assured him. "But they're there."
To understand the Irish you have to understand the worldwide outlook of the Irish farmer I stopped for directions one day as he was leading his donkey and cart to a creamy in County Sligo.
"What's the weather like out there in America?" he asked, noticing the luggage on the back seat of my hired car.
"About like here," I told him. "A few local showers."
"Let me tell you," he admonished, "there was nothing local about the showers we had here yesterday in Mullaghmore."
His directions were pure Irish. "Now keep dead ahead on this road a fair distance until you come to Keegan's pub at the crossroads by the railway bridge. Well, about two miles before that, take the first we road on your left and you'll be sound for Bundoran."

born writer living on Achill Island off the coast of Mayo, is convinced the British can never begin to understand the fervent romanticism that fuels the Irish passion for all things Irish. The Irish, she wrote, "have a tremendously keen sense of racial identity, of the importance of simply being Irish: the very name of Ireland sets their heart strings throbbing. I knew a woman once, singing a ballad at a party, who broke down altogether at the words, 'Oh some day, may be, I'll go back to Ireland...' We tried to comfort her with the assurance that this was where she actually was, out Cabintee way' a few minutes walk from the 7A bus stop, but it took some little while before she was herself again."

Recently there was a piece in the Limerick paper about a local magistrate who fined a man 15 pounds (about $28) for urinating off the back steps of a doubledecker bus about pub closing time. "Fifteen pounds!" cried out the mac in the dock, caught up in the Irish sense of romance and melodrama. "Is this the Ireland I fought and died for?"

It's the native combination "of daring and piety," an old priest once told me, "that motivates an Irishman to down a dozen oysters as an aphrodisiac and then gulp six pints of Guinness to defuse them."
Or as Brendan Behan once explained the geography of the place: "All Ireland is washed by the Gulf Stream except the wife's family."

There's a glorious lilt still in the language that the stranger never knew. "I'm heart-scalded with the killings and shootings," an old widow told me last St. Patrick's Day in County Down, "but maybe someday soon, please God, there'll be an end to it." Amen.

New England In White For St. Patrick's Day

By The Associated Press
New England wore white for St. Patrick's Day, courtesy of a mild snow storm that forgot spring is only five days away.
Although most of the Eastern Seaboard received a dusting Thursday, the effect of the snow was generally less than had been predicted.
It was nowhere nearly enough to hamper St. Patrick's Day parades and celebrations scheduled today in New York and other cities.
The low pressure system that spawned the snow moved out into the Atlantic sooner than had been expected, taking with it the threat of a potentially crippling snowfall.
Boston, for example, had been warned to expect up to a foot and got only four inches.
New York City was expecting four to five inches and wound up with only an inch or two. Streets were clear and dry in Manhattan well before dawn.
The National Weather Service reported up to 10 inches in some mountainous areas of New Jersey, but otherwise the heaviest accumulation was nine inches in southeastern Massachusetts and Rhode Island.

Many southern New England workers left their jobs early Thursday but the National Weather Service canceled the weather alert for Connecticut and most of Massachusetts later Thursday. Travel conditions were expected to be nearly normal today throughout the region.
One storm-related death was reported in New Jersey on Thursday when a Pennsylvania man was killed in a head-on collision while driving on snow-slicked Route 29 in West Amwell Township in Mercer County.
Maryland, which got one to three inches of snow before it turned to rain, also reported a weather-related traffic fatality.
Partial clearing was predicted today in the East and temperatures in the mid 30s were expected to melt the snow quickly.
Elsewhere, high pressure areas brought spring-like temperatures to most of the nation with clear or partly cloudy skies.

Warmer temperatures were expected in the Rockies and Plains along with continued warm weather in the far western states.
Early morning temperatures ranged from 73 at Homestead, Fla., to 2 at Devils Lake, N.D.

States once the waterway has been turned over to Panama, a vote is still to come on the second treaty, which turns the canal over to Panama.
The former President said he had talked last week with six or eight Republican senators to try to get them to support the treaties. "I didn't have much impact on any Democrats."
While the ex-President's visit was billed as non-political, Ford told reporters that doesn't necessarily mean his political days are over. "I'm not ruling myself out as a potential presidential candidate in 1980, but I'm not saying I will be one either."

Ford was critical of the Carter administration on a number of points, including the President's handling of the coal miners strike. Ford said if he had been elected in 1976, he felt the strike would have been avoided because of his good relations with labor.
And the ex-President criticized Carter for bringing the Soviet Union into the Middle East peace negotiations. "We worked hard in my administration to keep the Soviet Union out of the negotiations," he said.

Today, She's 99, And Says: 'I'm Counting On A 100'

By ROSALIE TROTMAN
Reflector Woman's Editor

"Honey, I'm counting on a 100," said Mrs. Evelyn Smith of Rt. 2, Ayden, who is celebrating her 99th birthday today.

Attributing her long life to several things, Mrs. Smith continued, "I always trusted the good Lord and I have never wanted to treat anyone bad. I am always willing to face my enemies if I had any. I have lived to be this old and have only had one person I could point my finger at and call an enemy — they made up a big story about me — and I pray for her every night, that the good Lord will touch her heart and make her a Christian instead of a sinner."

"I was raised up on a farm and did any kind of work anyone else did. We carried tobacco in sacks tied around our necks and waist, following primers in the field until we had an apron full and then we carried it to the bench for tying."

"We raised cows and my father had me roll up my drawers to my knees so I could walk down to the stream and look for the cows," she added. "It was hard times when I was growing up."

Mrs. Smith's parents were Gray Livingston and Martha Ann Ellis Sutton and their farm was located near Greenville and Winterville. She was one of six children.

"We had a big barrel sitting in the back yard and everyone in the family had a bath before the water was dumped. Our house had a stick and clay chimney with a fireplace in the kitchen, with a rod in the fireplace where mama hung the dinner pot to cook. I went to school in an old log cabin about three miles from Winterville.

"I didn't go to town very often. Greenville had three stores when I was a teen-ager," she recalled.

"My fondest childhood memory was looking for Santa Clause. All children got in those days was a red stick of candy and an apple. We hung our stockings on the fireplace," she added.

Mrs. Sutton joined church when she was 16-18 years old. She is the oldest living member of Reedy Branch Free Will Baptist Church, located near Winterville.

"I remember when our Women's Auxiliary offered a prize to the one who made the prettiest dress from our rag bag. I modeled mine at East Carolina and won the prize," she said.

"I didn't do too much courting. He was a bashful fellow and so was I. His sister went to school in Winterville and boarded with my family. That's how we met. I was 32 years old when I married Edward Warren Smith. We had three children, who died in their infancy," she continued.

Mrs. Smith watches some television and gets about the house. "When it gets warmer, I am going outside to get some exercise," she said. She lives with her nephew and his wife, Mr. and Mrs. Jimmie Sutton.

After the interview, Mrs. Smith asked, "Are you going to take my picture? I want to send it to Montana to my three nieces and one nephew."

A FAMILY PARTY... will be held for Mrs. Evelyn Smith, who is celebrating her 99th birthday today.

UPSET AND JEALOUS

DEAR JEALOUS: I think you're making something out of nothing. What harm is there in a little waving and a few hand signals? It's certainly not important enough to worry about. Please try to see the humor of it, dear. It IS comical! If two aging flirts get a "thrill" out of waving at each other, let them have their fun. Laugh about it. And when Norman realizes that you think it's funny, he'll probably quit.

Teen-Ager Learns Unforgettable Lesson

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1978 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: I am only 14, but I learned a lesson I will never forget.

When my parent used to tell me they "worried" when I didn't come home when I said I would, I thought they were silly. Well, now that I got a taste of my own medicine, I don't think they're so silly anymore.

Last Saturday night my folks went out and said they'd be home around midnight. Well, it got to be one o'clock in the morning, then two, then three and they still weren't home, and I nearly went out of my mind imagining they were both dead in a ditch somewhere with the car on top of them.

Finally, at 4 a.m., they came home. They said they ran into some old friends and were just sitting around their apartment talking over old times. They didn't bother to call me because they didn't think I'd worry.

Believe me, I will NEVER give them the kind of night they gave me.

HIGHLAND PARK

DEAR ABBY: My mother, who is 70, has struck up an unusual friendship with a young woman in her early 20s. The two of them make the bars on weekends, strike up friendships with the musicians, and sometimes bring them home for a jam session until the wee hours. It seems strange that this young lady has no friends her own age.

My mother tries to look younger by wearing her hair shoulder length. She even wears false eyelashes and clothes that are definitely not for a woman her age.

She looks ridiculous. Please put this in your column. It might do her good to see it.

CONCERNED DAUGHTER

DEAR DAUGHTER: If you mother looks "ridiculous," she's the one who will pay the price. For my part, if she's happy, I fail to see whom she's hurting.

DEAR ABBY: I am 64 and Norman is 68. We have two married sons. Everything was fine until about five months ago when I noticed that Norman was spending a lot of time in the carport, even when it was pouring rain!

I started to watch him from the window, and I saw him making hand signals and waving to the lady across the street. I noticed, too, that when Norman walked the dog, he would stand in front of this lady's house and stare into her window. Then she'd come to the window and the hand signals and waving would start.

The woman is older than I am. I notice that this monkey business between her and Norman goes on only when her husband is at work—never on weekends or in the evening.

I finally couldn't take it anymore, so I called our two sons over and asked them to talk to their father about this

Care Prevents Hair Problems

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures Writer

Hair falling out?

Any number of medications — aspirin taken every night, amphetamines, the "pill," cortisone, anti-coagulation or diet pills — could be the likely cause.

Nothing you rub on your scalp will bring the hair back in most cases, advises Dr. Jonathan Zizmor, author of "Super Hair." Your hair must be fed from within by good nutrients.

"Hair follicles are among the most rapidly metabolizing organs in the human body. Deprive your body of essential proteins and calories due to an unbalanced and insufficient diet and the follicles will not produce good keratin," he points out. Keratin, the substance that constitutes hair, is pure protein.

In addition to the 100,000 follicles on the normal head, people with luxuriant hair have better hair genetically, but very little can be done to alter genetic makeup. The essential quality of hair is predetermined by genes — you can only improve it cosmetically by conditioning and so on.

Many common hair problems may be self-induced, says Zizmor.

For example, dryness can result from too much blow-drying, sun exposure, permanent dyes, not enough brushing. And there are other problems also:

—Fragility: The cuticle may be eroded.

—Dullness: Faded color and lack of sheen from dryness and overexposure to strong chemicals.

—Split ends: One major cause may be overtreatment with dyes and bleaches — all chemical treatments inevitably damage cuticles.

—Oiliness: Glands attached to hair follicles secrete too much oil as a result of hormonal makeup.

Zizmor, chief of dermatology at St. Vincent's Hospital in New York City, believes that proper hair brushing — letting the head hang between the knees and brushing from back of head forward — can improve appearances of hair as scalp oils are distributed. It is bad to brush hair from front to back in front of a mirror, he says.

A lot of what we do to our hair on a daily basis can make it look dreary, he indicates.

For example, blow dryers can induce excess drying, which makes hair dull and brittle, he points out. The dryers should be selected with care and not used on a daily basis, only occasionally.

"If your hairstyle depends on its use, give up the hairstyle," he advises.

As for the kind of dryer, the smaller the better, he says. His book provides a guide to hair dryers. There's also a lot of good information about shampoos and how to choose them.

A valuable part of the book is a guideline chart on hair removal for do-it-yourselfers.

Comparing electrolysis with other methods of hair removal, Dr. Zizmor finds the newer methods better for small areas, usually on the face, but not fast enough to cope with large areas and lots of hair as electrolysis might.

In his book the author presents a broad picture of hair care, from simple bleaching, streaking and painting of hair to do-it-yourself home hair analysis.

Another Revision Seen Likely

The administration and Congress approved an upward revision of the Social Security payroll tax recently assuming the matter was behind them.

The move hasn't proved popular with the public, however, and there may be some changes made.

House Speaker Thomas O'Neil thinks Congress will revise the increases approved last year.

O'Neil is urging the administration to come up with a revision plan before Congress does so.

We can expect to see changes in the Social Security tax increase and it could mean turning to the general fund revenues for help. It appears likely that either the administration must come up with a new plan or risk the initiation of a new Social Security financing bill by Congress.

Coping With Town's Hyphenated Name

Fuquay-Varina is a progressive town, located in South Wake County.

One group of citizens, represented by Waverly Akins, Wake County Commissioner, thinks the hyphenated name is just impossible.

Akins says a new name is needed with more dignity. "Is Fuquay-Varina a name we want to live with the rest of our lives?" his group asks.

Suggestions include Fuquay Springs, Sippshaw,

Middleboro and Piedmont.

We will leave it to the approximately 3,600 residents of Fuquay-Varina to decide on a new name or whether to keep the old one.

We can point out that a group of communities in Rockingham County got together a few years back and came up with the now familiar name of Eden.

And Greenville was, of course once known as Martinborough.

Propose Medical Control

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — A law with teeth in it to put the lid on expanding health care facilities and purchase of exotic equipment has been prepared for action in the May session of the North Carolina General Assembly.

Purpose of the proposal is bluntly summed up in the draft legislation now ready for action: "the continuously increasing cost of health care services threatens the health and welfare of the citizens of this state... government regulation is... necessary to control the cost, utilization, and distribution of health services."

Titled the "North Carolina Health Planning and Certificate of Need Law of 1978", the proposal will effectively deliver to control of the State Department of Human Resources full control over any proposal to build or enlarge any hospital or nursing home, or to purchase expensive equipment.

The lid would be clamped on all institutions whether public or private, and the equipment purchases would be regulated whether placed in an institution or the private offices of a physician.

Penalties

The teeth in the legislation are sharp: violation would result in a cut-off of federal and state funds; revoking of licenses to operate; a ban on help from any local or state agency which the violator must deal with in securing permits, licenses, or any other building or zoning conditions; and up to $20,000 fine.

Effective date on the proposal is October 1. The bill has been developed by the legislative Committee on Medical Cost Containment.

What the measure does is this:

The Department of Human Resources, working with the various regional Health Systems Agencies must set up an inventory of all hospital facilities, and needs, followed by a state plan showing where and how many health care facilities of all sorts (hospitals, clinics, nursing homes, etc.) will meet the needs.

Anybody getting ready to build any facility or to buy any equipment costing more than $100,000 (less for some exotic pieces); to buy land; sell bonds; draw plans or do anything to launch a project must get a Certificate of Need from the state.

NOBLITT

The project will be stacked up against the overall plan; services reviewed; need explored; investigation to see that rural or those in economically depressed areas won't be harmed; possible impact of the project on local health costs; and other measures down to and including how construction and energy costs might affect the fees to be charged patients.

Must Comply

The proposal states that "Only those new institutional health services which are found by the department to be needed as provided in this law and granted certificates of need shall be offered or developed within the state."

The legislative package is accompanied by a "Finding of Fact" document which was drafted by the committee and is included as part of the bill. Here are some of those arguments:

Proliferation of facilities and equipment beyond need and inadequate supply of health personnel and resources for long term care results from the current planning system. Too much emphasis goes to acute need (surgery, emergency, specialties) care.

Unnecessary health care facilities and equipment leads to duplication, under-use and a tendency by physicians to put people in the hospitals without need.

Above all, the committee determined, "because of the manner in which health care is financed, the forces of free market competition are largely absent... government regulation is therefore necessary...."

Spring? This Is Winter

WASHINGTON — "I saw my first robin the other day — it was dead."

This sentence has been in my typewriter for two weeks. I was hoping that, like winter, it would go away. But it wouldn't. I read it to my secretary, Jeannie, who told me it would be a mistake to use it. She said I'd only be contributing to the depression the country is already in because of the weather.

"You should write about spring," she told me.

"What's spring?" I asked her.

"You know, when the buds show up on the trees and the grass turns green, and people throw off their overcoats and start mulching their lawns."

"I think I remember it," I said. "Isn't that the time when windows are opened and girls and boys fall in love, and the voice of the turtle is heard in the land?"

"And birds sing," she said. "and dogs romp, and children daydream, and they pick up the garbage on the days they're supposed to."

"It's coming back to me," I said excitedly as I sat at the typewriter. "I can almost smell it. I can smell... wait... I can smell cherry blossoms."

"Of course you can. And you also can smell roses and hyacinths and clover."

"Clover," I cried. "How could I have forgotten the smell of clover?"

ART BUCHWALD

"It's been a long time," she said. "Anyone who has lived through this winter would have forgotten the smell of clover."

"Quiet," I said, playing my fingers across the typewriter. "I think I hear the sound of a babbling brook."

"You do, you do," she said. "It is a babbling brook beside a waterfall."

"Are my ears deceiving me? Is that the buzz of a bee?"

"Of course it's a bee. A beautiful honeybee alighting on a flower. Close your eyes for a moment and think back, back."

"It's so hazy. How far back should I go?"

"Go back to last April."

"I can't go back that far. There's too much slush and ice."

"Concentrate. Concentrate on last April."

"The ice and slush are melting. Yes, I see a bush."

"What kind of bush?"

"A lilac bush — a white lilac bush."

"Write it down before you forget it."

I typed it out. Then I said, "There's dew on the hedges. Silver droplets of fresh morning dew."

"Are the dogwoods in bloom?" she asked me.

"What color are dogwoods?"

"White, pink and red. Don't forget the dandelions."

"It's all there. It's coming back to me. I see virgin forests wearing their new

THE INSIDE REPORT

Cuba's Next Africa Move

By ROWLANDE EVANS AND ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — The unannounced presence of one reinforced Cuban battalion in Communist-oriented South Yemen has raised the spectre of Fidel Castro's Africa corps being used against the conservative royalist states in the vital, oil-rich Arabian peninsula.

The worried government of Saudi Arabia has quietly asked the U.S. to share its secret intelligence estimate of why the Cubans are in South Yemen. Strongly allied with the Moscow-Havana bloc, this is the first purely Arab state to which Castro has sent so many troops.

Although the Carter administration is not certain of the answer, two possibilities spring to mind: one is that the Cubans are training South Yemenis for future military operations against oil-rich Oman; the other is that the Cubans are being quietly positioned by the Russians for future military action of their own against pro-Western North Yemen.

In either case, the appearance of a highly trained battalion of Castro's roving Africa corps has the potential for major trouble in the Arabian peninsula.

When the Russians were booted out of Somalia for helping Ethiopia, parts of the huge Soviet naval base of Berbera were moved across the Red Sea to Aden, South Yemen's capital. That included the Soviet drydock and associated equipment for servicing its Indian Ocean fleet. This has made Aden an important staging area for the Soviet-Cuban operations in the Horn of Africa and Red Sea. But adding to this a Cuban battalion is dangerous new evidence of Castro's cutting edge in Africa.

The Cubans, still arriving in Ethiopia at a rate of more than 100 per day, are in sight of cleaning up Somali resistance in the disputed Ogaden district of Ethiopia. Their next destination will point directly to the West's next African crisis.

It could be on the Rhodesian border, where some U.S. officials in Washington are convinced the Cubans will join pro-Moscow black guerrillas attacking the "internal" Rhodesian political settlement. Or it could be the Sudan, now pro-Western but vulnerable to outside political and military pressures.

Moreover, location of a Cuban battalion in South Yemen now adds the troubled Arabian Peninsula to possible targets for future Cuban operations. That is a matter of deep concern for the Western nations that depend on Arabian oil.

THE ANTI-BAKER PLEDGE

As a sign of right-wing hostility toward Sen. Howard Baker for his support of the Panama Canal treaties, one conservative political action group is quietly organizing a campaign to purge him as Senate Republican leader next January.

The National Conservative Political Action Committee (NCPAC), part of fund-raiser Richard Viguerie's "new right" network, is attaching a slight sting to its contributions for Republican Senate candidates. Each candidate is asked to promise that, if elected to the Senate, he would oppose Baker's reelection as minority leader.

Terry Dolan of NCPAC told us that "so far" the anti-Baker promise is not a condition of receiving the $5,000 contribution. But Dolan added that no recipient has yet refused to take the anti-Baker pledge.

Baker's announced hostility to the prospective arms control treaty (SALT II) will not soften NCPAC. "That's been Baker's strategy all along," said Dolan, "to support Panama and oppose SALT, and it won't work with us."

APPEASING THE TARHEELS

To halt the Democratic decline in North Carolina, senior political advisers are urging President Carter to name former Gov. Robert Scott to the vacant post of Deputy Secretary of Agriculture as a symbolic statement of friendship for the tobacco land.

Scott is currently placed, high but anonymously, in the federal bureaucracy as co-chairman of the Appalachian Regional Commission. His elevation to the Agriculture post (vacant since John White became Democratic national chairman) would be a peace offering to both North Carolina Democrats and the tobacco industry.

Worried Democratic politicians would much prefer, one told us, "Califano fired than Scott hired" — a reference to Health, Education and Welfare Secretary Joseph Califano, architect of the anti-smoking campaign. Nevertheless, Scott at Agriculture would be warmly welcomed.

Strength For Today

THE MAN WHO HAS EVERYTHING

King Solomon seemed to have everything that the heart could desire. He had power which made his neighbors tremble. He had such wealth that neither he nor his counselors could count it. He was one of the most learned men in the kingdom.

Was he happy? Not at all, as the Book of Ecclesiastes makes clear. This revealing document is a regretful reappraisal of life by the old ruler Solomon. Having indulged in every pleasure and having enjoyed every honor which the world could bestow, he came to the end of his life thoroughly disillusioned.

People who have their own way in everything generally miss happiness by a wide margin. Strange as it may seem, the people who are compelled to endure a certain amount of suffering often get a greater measure of gratification. They have the benefit of comparison, which can be very revealing. Those who have unrelieved good fortune often drink, worry, or bedevil themselves to early graves.

Suits 'Chill' Efforts

By NOEL YANCEY

Associated Press Writer
RAELIGH, N.C. (AP) — Even though the courts nearly always rule in their favor, more and more school teachers are being hauled into court on assault charges, and school spokesmen say it's having a chilling effect on their attempts to enforce discipline.

Donald H. Morrow, an assistant executive secretary from the North Carolina Association of Educators, says he believes the publicity given when teachers are charged "does have a chilling effect on other teachers."

"They feel they are right, but they don't want to be brought into court," he said. The same thing is true of school administrators, he added.

"I would not say it's a problem in every school with every teacher," Morrow said.

Dudley Flood, assistant state superintendent of public instruction for student services, observed that the tendency of parents to bring court action is "probably more pronounced in urban areas than rural areas."

"It's almost unheard of that a parent will sue a teacher in a rural area," Flood said.

Teachers who conscientiously apply discipline have nothing to fear because courts almost always back them up, Flood said, but added, "I can't minimize the psychological effect on the teachers of being threatened. They hate to be taken to court. It's less a case of being afraid they'll lose than it is of having to go through the process of going to court."

Douglas Pungler, attorney for the Winston-Salem-Forsyth County school system, said it was paradoxical that parents complain about poor discipline, but object to the discipline of their children.

Pungler has had five cases recently in which parents threatened to charge teachers. In two cases, charges were actually brought. In one case, a charge was brought but later dropped. The other two threatened to swear out warrants but so far have not done so.

Pungler acknowledges that the number of cases recently

Trace Losses To 'Tax Reform'

By MICHAEL L. GECZI

AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The tax laws governing reserves banks maintain as protection against loan losses have become too restrictive and are in need of reform.

That's the consensus of a new study of the Tax Reform Act of 1969 sponsored by the Association of Reserve City Bankers, a trade group, and its research unit, the Banking Research Fund. The report was compiled by Golembe Associates Inc., Washington-based bank consultants.

The study's aim was to trace the pattern of banks' loan losses since 1969 to determine whether provisions of the act, which sharply cuts tax-deductible additions to commercial banks' loan-loss reserves, are beneficial when viewed against subsequent developments.

"Net loan losses of commercial banks have increased enormously since passage of the 1969 Tax Reform Act," write Samuel B. Chase Jr. and Gregory E. Boczar, the report's authors.

"During the 1970s, the total for the banking system as a whole averaged $1.8 billion, compared with an average of less than $300 million during 1960-1969. In the worst years, 1975 and 1976, net loan losses were well over $3 billion as compared with less than $450 million in 1967, the worst year for bank loan losses during the three decades preceding."

In 1969, as part of the mammoth Tax Reform Act legislation, Congress, for the first time, imposed ceilings on the reserves banks were allowed to build via income tax deductions. Prior to that time, the additions were regulated by Internal Revenue guidelines.

Because these rules were results of the banks' harsh experiences during the Great Depression, they no longer seemed applicable when the late 1960s rolled around. That's because banks' loan-loss experiences in the three decades prior to that time were very moderate.

Specifically, Treasury Department regulations permitted banks to build their reserves to 2.4 percent of eligible loans. During the 1940s and 1950s, however, loan losses averaged less than 0.07 percent of loans, and rose marginally to only 0.1 percent in the 1960s.

According to the report, banks will be able to deduct no more than actual charge-offs on their tax returns between now and 1988. The two ways permitted by the guidelines are the so-called experience method, which is tied to prior years' losses, and the percentage method, which uses a set percentage.

These methods, the report asserts, will not allow the banks to be able to add substantially to their reserves. At the same time, however, the ratio of reserves to eligible loans will decline.

"Judging from experience since 1969, these restrictions will mean that, as time passes, banks will not be able to maintain IRS bad debt reserves that even nearly match those that will be required by accepted accounting practices," the authors write.

The report cites some additional facts from the 1970s in support:

—Net loan losses were nearly 45 percent of banks' net income in both 1975 and 1976.

—Net loan losses totaled significantly more than 33 percent of bad debt reserves in 1975, compared with a high of less than 10 percent in 1966, the worst year of both the 1950s and 1960s.

As a remedy, the report suggests that either the percentage be raised or the experience method amended in ways that would reflect the times.

But the whole question may be a bigger issue. James J. O'Leary, chairman of the Banking Research Fund and vice chairman of U.S. Trust Co. of New York, says the report underscores the need for tax legislation, "which reflects the dynamics and business realities of the 1970s and 1980s, not the '40s and '50s."

He adds that he is very disturbed that President Carter's recent tax reform proposals seriously diminish the likelihood of building appropriate reserves to satisfy periods of credit difficulty.

In addition to awards in these categories, a number of special awards were given, including ones to persons who have given exceptional support to the club.

Guest speaker Dave Bumgarner, head football coach at Rose High School, talked briefly on the topic of "The Conquering Mind," emphasizing that young people can win or fail depending on their attitudes.

— Michael Brown, spot shot champ; Ronnie Moore, most outstanding in flag football; Albert Brown, most outstanding in junior varsity basketball; and Terry Williams, most outstanding, varsity basketball.

Also physical fitness champ, Jessie Daniels; most outstanding in physical ed activities — Michael Heath, Ronnie Moore, and Tony Worthington; and free-throw champs — Paul Emerson, Ronnie Moore, and Donald House.

— Education (Learning Arts Awards) — Essay contest, "What The Boys' Club Means To Me" — first place winners, Clarence Baker, West Staton and Tony Worthington.

Brian Shannon of Winterville received the After-School Activity Award for the most outstanding work by a member from an area outside the city of Greenville.

Recognition awards for outstanding community support were given to L. D. Thomas, proprietor of U-Ren-Co, for his continued assistance to the Boys' Club in providing items for special use, and to Bobby Short of the West Greenville Recreation Center for making facilities available to supplement the facilities at the Boys' Club building.

Staff members presented awards to winners in their section. These were — Gamesroom, Herbert Harrington; Arts and Crafts, Marsha Ware; Learning Center, Leslie Williams assisted by Educational Director Ed Meyer. A volunteer worker, Bryan Powell, was recognized for his volunteer assistance. Powell is a full-time student at East Carolina University and also a full-time employee at J. C. Penney Co.

Ed French, a student at ECU doing field work with the Boys' Club, introduced guest speaker Bumgarner. Chet Emerson, executive director, welcomed those attending and explained that the food for the dinner was prepared by mothers of boys belonging to the club; and Program Director Matthew Ward coordinated the presentation of awards.

Tony Heath, 1977 Boy of the Year, led the recitation of the Boys' Club Code.

Berland Meeting Not Cancelled By Disorder

By DON KENDALL
AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland still plans to meet with protesting farmers, despite the forceable entry of his department Thursday by the protesters. About 50 persons had to be ejected by riot police.

The meetings planned today were scheduled earlier this week in an attempt by Bergland to find some common ground with American Agriculture members who are demonstrating for higher government price guarantees for wheat and other farm products.

About 25 protesters were still in one of the department's buildings early today, having stayed through the night. Government officials first ordered them out and then decided to let them stay through the night. The farmers who forced their way through security guards Thursday were not content with the meetings Bergland promised them.

The group, part of about 2,000 farmers who marched on the department from Capitol Hill, scuffled with security guards in gaining entry to the Agriculture Department's administration building, where Bergland's office is located.

After federal police restored quiet, about 15 of the protesters agreed to meet across the street in another department building with officials, promising they would leave after the meeting and cause no further trouble. They were joined by about 30 others.

But after their demands to meet with Bergland or President Carter immediately were rejected, the group refused to leave the meeting room. Federal officers initially told them that they had until 6:30 p.m. to leave or face arrest.

But after their demands to meet with Bergland or President Carter immediately were rejected, the group refused to leave the meeting room. Federal officers initially told them that they had until 6:30 p.m. to leave or face arrest.

Each side accused the other of damaging the driveway, and court warrants show that on Feb. 24 there was an axe and stick-wielding melee in front of B.F. White's mobile home.

The next day White, 88, obtained warrants charging Thomas H. Smith and his wife, Myrtle, with trespassing and their son with simple assault.

The same day White's son, Paul F. White, 64, swore out a warrant charging Thomas Smith, 45, with making a threat.

Karen Voight, a department representative in the room, told the protesters that she was in error when she told them earlier they might be able to have a meeting with Bergland on Thursday.

"I screwed up," she said. "It's as simple as that. I checked with the wrong sources. I thought you could meet with the secretary. It was my fault."

Ms. Gilbert explained that Caswell Center is one of the oldest and largest institutions for mental retardation in the state. She said the center was founded in 1911 and the first admissions were taken in 1914.

Today, she pointed out, the center serves 31 eastern counties and has an enrollment of 1,120 men, women and children.

"Mental retardation is not mental illness or a sickness," Ms. Gilbert said. "It is a condition of life than can be sometimes prevented, sometimes reversed, but almost always improved through special services."

Out of the 150,000 mentally retarded citizens of North Carolina, she noted, 125,000 can be trained to lead productive lives.

Groups, organizations or individuals seeking further information should contact Ms. Gilbert at Caswell Center or any Winterville Jaycees.

The sit-in demonstrators still refused, vowing that they wanted to give publicity for their arrest to bring their plight more to the attention of the public.

However, Bergland and security officials a few hours later recommended to federal police that the group be allowed to remain in the room if they chose.

Although Bergland's recommendation was accepted by the police, farmers in the room did not immediately decide whether to leave voluntarily or remain through the night.

"We are selling out our women and our brothers if we walk out," Quincy Murphy, a farmer from Mississippi, told his fellow sit-in protesters.

Wayne Peterson of South Dakota said that "We were called cowards (Thursday morning). ... What are they going to call us if we turn our tails and run?"

Zel Gilbert, volunteer services representative of the Community Outreach Department, a division of the Caswell Center in Kinston, was the guest speaker this week at a meeting of the Winterville Jaycees.

Birthday Dinner For Pat Nixon

SAN CLEMENTE, Calif. (AP) — Pat Nixon celebrated her 66th birthday by having dinner with family and friends.

Julie Nixon Eisenhower and her husband, David, who are expecting a baby, planned to join Mrs. Nixon and former President Richard Nixon for the party Thursday. But the Nixon's other daughter, Tricia Cox, and her husband, Edward, couldn't make it from their home in New York.

There was no comment from the Nixon staff on the health of the former first lady. Mrs. Nixon suffered a partially paralyzing stroke in July 1976. Her doctor said he could not release any information on the progress of her recovery.

Driveway Root Of Family Feud

WYO, N.C. (AP) — It wasn't quite the battle of the Hatfields and the McCoys, but the Smiths and the Whites went at each other with axes, sticks and their bare hands last month in a family feud over a driveway.

The argument was over damage to a 15-foot stretch of common driveway in this rural Yadkin County community which the families of B.F. White, Paul H. White and Thomas A. Smith were sharing.

Each side accused the other of damaging the driveway, and court warrants show that on Feb. 24 there was an axe and stick-wielding melee in front of B.F. White's mobile home.

The next day White, 88, obtained warrants charging Thomas H. Smith and his wife, Myrtle, with trespassing and their son with simple assault.

The same day White's son, Paul F. White, 64, swore out a warrant charging Thomas Smith, 45, with making a threat.

Not to be outdone, Mrs. Smith a week later charged B.F. White with hitting her in the face with a stick and Paul White with swinging an axe at her and hitting her leg with a stick.

And her husband charged B.F. White with hitting him in the face with a stick and Paul White with swinging a stick and an axe at him.

All in all, 10 warrants were exchanged over the battle-ground.

The whole crowd was summoned to District Court in Yadkinville this week, where Judge Sam Osborne encouraged them to reach a negotiated settlement and gave them until May 5 to do it. If they can, he indicated, there won't be any criminal prosecution.

"But I'm going to have to take into account some of these court costs," he said. "There's been a lot of warrants sworn out."

spring colors. And over there is a host of daffodils."

"That's spring," Jeannie said. "You haven't lost it. You've still got it in your breast."

"There's more," I told her. "I see girls in skirts and blouses strutting in high heels and silk stockings along the nation's byways."

"That's lust, but it's also spring," she said.

"Can I write it down?" I begged.

"Yes," she said, "because it goes with spring."

I finally opened my eyes and looked out the window. Wet globs of snow were falling outside, and the cold wind was whipping them around in a whirling dervish.

It was Washington's tenth snowfall of the year.

The spell was broken. I ripped out the paper from my machine, put in a fresh piece and started out all over again. The first sentence came out automatically.

"I saw my first robin today — it was dead."

Private Colleges Eye Tuition Hikes

By ELISSA MCCRARY
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP)—Private colleges in North Carolina have been hit hard by inflation, and most of them will be raising tuition and fees next year or have already done so.

Lenoir Rhyne College in Hickory hiked its tuition this year, but officials say they will need another increase next year.

"Our tuition rate went up this year by $300," said J.C. Epting, financial aid director. "And I understand that when the board of trustees meets in April, another rate increase is almost certain."

Lenoir Rhyne's tuition for an in-state student is now $2,075 a year.

Tuition rates are on the way up at Brevard College in Brevard, according to Brunner Hunt, business manager of the college.

"We will be raising our tuition rates next year," he said. "The cost of tuition, room and board will go up $170. But we do plan to also increase our financial aid and scholarship budget to help those students who might be hurt by the increase."

Davidson College has increased the total cost for a resident student to $5,088, an increase of $423 over last year. Tuition will rise $255 to $3,385. Rooms will go from $590 for a double room in a dorm to $665, up $75. Board will increase $83, up from $790 to $873.

At Queens College in Charlotte, tuition will be going up by $320 to $3,000, according to public relations director Mary Bartlett-Stafford. Room rates will total $900, a $100 increase. And the school's meal plan will cost more, with total meal costs depending upon how many meals the student receives.

State-supported colleges are not feeling the effects of inflation as sharply as private schools and are not planning any tuition increases next year.

Felix L. Joyner, vice-president of finance at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, said, "The only increase we have scheduled at this time is a $13 fee rate hike, which will be in effect on each of the UNC system's campuses." Joyner said additional fee totals will be set on the individual UNC campuses.

North Carolina Central University, a part of the UNC system, is planning a room rate increase next year.

"The room rate hike will mainly be used to cover the cost of renovating two dormi-raries on campus," said George Thorne, vice-chancellor of financial affairs. "The board of trustees has approved the increase, and the plan is now before the board of governors."

If the room rate hike is approved, it would mean students would be paying $615, an increase of $100 over this year's rate of $515.

In an effort to ease the strain of additional costs on students, most of the private colleges in the state are planning to increase their financial aid and scholarship budgets. But no figures have been submitted to the boards of trustees for consideration yet.

One of the co-treasurers of the church, Ella Grimes, has asked the public for contributions to complete the new building. Anyone wishing to make donations may send them to Mrs. Grimes at 104 Vance Street, Greenville. Inquiries may be directed to her at 752-6348 or to the pastor, Eldress Hattie Cobb.

How's The Weather?

WEATHER FORECAST — Rain is forecast Friday for the Pacific Northwest coast. Snow is expected in the northern Rockies and adjacent Plains. Snow is also due in New England. Most of the country will have sunny skies with mild weather, but much of the East will be cold. (AP Laserphoto Map)

By The Associated Press
Cold, dry air will be pushed by brisk northwesterly winds across North Carolina through Saturday morning.

Cloudiness caused by the colder air will linger over the state today, and scattered snow flurries will continue over the northwest mountains this afternoon.

Today's late wintery blast is a dramatic change, as temperatures reached the 60s and 70s over much of the state Thursday. At Fayetteville, the temperatures peaked at 79 degrees.

In the higher elevations of the mountains snow flurries fell last night. Just before 2 a.m. the Highway Patrol reported snow around Henderson.

Temperatures this morning were mostly in the 30s with some 20s in the northwest mountains. Skies cleared this morning from the eastern slopes to the Piedmont.

The recreational weather outlook calls for windy and cold today with partly cloudy skies for most of the state. Light rain or drizzle possibly mixed with snow will end in the northeast this morning. Scattered snow flurries will continue over the northwest mountains.

Over the weekend, temperatures will moderate as high pressure builds over the area. Tonight temperatures will dip into the teens in the west and 20s east. Saturday night will be only slightly milder. Highs today will be mostly in the 40s except 30s in the northwest mountains.

By Sunday afternoon readings will be back into the 60s. Small craft advisories are in effect on the coast for strong northwest winds.

Youngest Vet Is Seeking Help

By MILLER BONNER
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — When an enemy shell burst through the decks of the USS South Dakota during the Battle of Guadalcanal, one of its victims was a 13-year-old boy sailor masquerading as an adult.

The boy, Calvin Graham, lost his front teeth when he was sent tumbling through "three stories of superstructure."

A few months later, Graham's real age was discovered and he was stripped of his veteran's benefits and the medals he had earned and sent home.

Today, 36 years later, two senators and the House majority leader have introduced private bills aimed at restoring those benefits so Graham can get his teeth repaired.

Graham, now 48 and living in Fort Worth, Texas, says Veterans' Administration officials "just laugh at me" when he tells them about his dental problems and when his injury took place.

Calvin recalls that when he landed on the deck after the shelling, his two front teeth didn't. But "I didn't go complaining because half the ship was dead. It was a while before they worked on my mouth."

Graham had only recently turned 13. He was 12 when he enlisted on Aug. 16, 1942, after presenting parental consent papers saying he was 17.

Eight months later, his true age revealed, his enlistment was "canceled." With that went not only veteran's benefits, but the Navy Unit Commendation, the Asiatic-Pacific Campaign Medal with two battle stars and the World War II Victory Medal.

Graham has written President Carter — "because he's a Navy man" — asking for help. Calvin's plight caused Sens. John Tower, R-Texas, and Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, to introduce a private bill on his behalf. Rep. Jim Wright, the House majority leader from Fort Worth, sponsored a similar bill.

But both bills are stalled in committee and last week, the Navy wrote the Senate Armed Forces Committee that it opposes the bill.

New Decals Mark Postal Collections

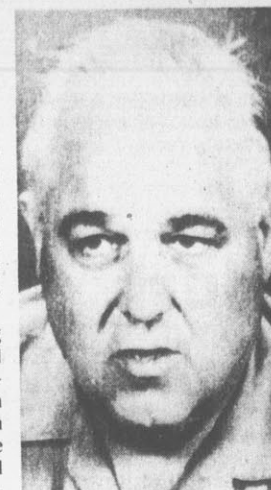

Collection boxes in the area are now displaying a new decal that shows the time mail must be deposited to get the last Monday-Friday pickup from the box. Postmaster H. Lloyd Mills of Greenville announced Thursday.

"The new decals cover 30-minute periods from 5 p.m. to 8 p.m. and indicate to the nearest half-hour the time mail must be deposited prior to the last scheduled pickup from the box," said Mills. "For example, a box with last scheduled pickup at 6:45 p.m. will display a 6:30 p.m. decal."

The red, white and blue decal replaces the white star system used to indicate late pickup from collection boxes. In addition to the decals, each box continues to display a collection schedule showing all pickups, including weekdays, Saturdays, Sundays and holidays.

The new decals are being adopted on a national basis and will appear on over 85,000 high-volume boxes that are located in business areas, main thoroughfares, all self-service postal units and in front of all main post offices, classified stations and branches.

Coal, Atom Focus Urged

MARTIN, Tenn. (AP) — The nation should put emphasis on developing coal and nuclear resources and turn away from "its puzzling stance on energy," the chairman of the Tennessee Valley Authority says.

"To meet electrical energy needs, we've got to go as hard as we can with what we've got," Aubrey Wagner said Thursday. "The public demands more of us than being led down the primrose path to exotic energy sources which simply won't be available when the lights go out."

Wagner said the immediate task should be removing roadblocks to greater use of coal and nuclear power while research efforts focus on alternatives such as solar energy, fusion and the wind.

"The public must understand the difference between energy sources that are commercially available now and those which hold promise for the future," he said. "With respect to nuclear energy, the constant deferrals, delays and studies that seem to be harmless today may in reality be the crushing blows which bring this country to its knees in the early 1980s."

Wagner made the remarks in an address to a Martin civic club. They contrasted somewhat with a speech a week ago by David Freeman, the newest director on TVA's board.

Freeman told a nuclear industry forum in New York that nuclear power has "gobbled up" almost all of the tax dollars for energy the past 25 years and it's time to divert some money for solar development.

New Library Branch Is Open

East Branch Library has now re-opened in its new location in the Joint Library-Recreation Center Building, at the end of Cedar Lane next to Eastern Elementary School.

The librarian of East Branch, Louise Perry, notes that an official opening will be marked at a later date to be announced.

New library hours for East Branch have also been set. These are from 10:30 a.m. to 6 p.m. daily Monday through Friday, closed Saturday and Sunday.

Windmills Play A Role In N.C. Apple Growing

HENDERSONVILLE, N.C. (AP) — The landscape in Henderson County isn't dotted with windmills like the Dutch countryside, but they're no less vital to the Henderson County apple grower than the farmer in Holland.

Since 1974, apple farmers in the county have been using windmills in their orchards to prevent frost damage. There are approximately 25 of the machines being used today throughout the county, according to Boyd Campbell, county agriculture extension agent.

The windmills are used to stir stagnant air in the orchards at times of potential frost. The idea is to mix colder low lying air with warmer air above it, and hopefully produce a more uniform temperature two to four degrees higher.

Aside from the temperature improvement, the moving air created by the machines also helps prevent frost damage.

Elbert Justus, one of the first farmers in the county to have one of the machines, estimates that his production has increased by as much as 75 percent in the trees effected by the windmills. He also believes that the quality of the apples has been substantially improved.

The apple business is worth between $15 and $20 million a year to the county, Campbell estimates.

Justus uses windmills with 15 foot, four-inch fans which turn at 800 revolutions per minute and rotate every four and a half minutes. They cover roughly six acres of land, Justus said. A new windmill of that kind costs close to $10,000. There are also larger models available.

Operational costs are not high, Justus said. The machine uses three to five gallons of gas per hour. Justus estimates that he has used the windmills 15 to 30 hours a year since he has had them.

Justus thinks the investment is worthwhile even though he only uses the windmills a few hours a year, because "It can mean the difference between having apples and not having them."

Roman Police Find Second Car In Moro Abduction

PRECINCT MEETING — Pitt Democratic precinct meeting were held last night at most of the county's polling places. Members of the Ayden precinct above meet at the Ayden Community Building. According to county chairman, Betty Speir, the purpose of the meetings were to elect delegates to the county convention in April, and nominate delegates for district and state conventions. (Reflector Photo by Tommy Forrest)

Associated Press Writer
ROME (AP) — Police said today they found the second car used in the escape of the terrorists who kidnapped political leader Aldo Moro, increasing their belief that they were hiding him in northwest Rome.

The car was parked on the same street where the first one was found Thursday afternoon, several miles from the site of the kidnapping in the Trionfale section of the city, a spokesman said.

He said there were blood stains on and in the first car. Tests were being made to determine whether it was the blood of the 61-year-old Moro, president of Italy's dominant Christian Democratic Party.

However, police have expressed the belief that Moro was unhurt in the abduction in which his five police bodyguards were killed. They said one of the officers got off three shots, probably wounding one of the terrorists.

As 50,000 troops and police spread a dragnet across the country for Moro, news media continued to get anonymous telephone calls purporting to come from the kidnappers. One caller identified himself as a member of West Germany's Baader-Meinhof Gang and said, "Moro is with us." The police said they considered that one a hoax. But they said they had no way of knowing if some of the others were genuine.

A phoner in Turin said Moro would be killed within 48 hours unless the government released the 15 leaders of the guerrilla Red Brigades on trial there along with five other terrorists in prison.

A message in Naples Thursday night said the five-time premier had been "executed."

A caller told a Milan newspaper early today Moro was in a "people's jail" outside Rome and that photographs of him there would be delivered to the papers.

A number of calls starting soon after the kidnapping Thursday morning said it was the work of the Red Brigades, Italy's most feared urban guerrilla gang.

A dozen terrorists ambushed Moro's limousine as he was on his way to a session of Parliament, killed all five of his police bodyguards with a barrage of pistol and submachine-gun fire, and took him away in another car.

As the powerful president of the party that has dominated every government since World War II, Moro was one of the chief architects of the pact under which the Communists agreed to support Andreotti in exchange for an equal voice with the other parties in contributing to cabinet policy and monitoring the government's performance.

Photographs and names of 18 men and two women described as Red Brigades members or suspected supporters were televised nationwide and published in newspapers with appeals for cooperation in locating them.

Roadblocks were erected on most highways. Police stopped thousands of motorists and searched their cars. Checks were stepped up at airports and border points. Identities were carefully checked, especially of people on stretchers or in wheelchairs. Helicopters and police dogs were used widely by the searchers.

Several Children Hurt In School Van's Mishap

HOOKERTON — Several children were injured this morning when the school van in which they were riding collided with another vehicle on Highway 123 west of here.

A spokesman at Mt. Calvary Christian Academy here said that 16 students were riding the van enroute to the school when the accident occurred at the Four Way crossroads approximately one mile from Hookerton.

The spokesman reported that two of the students were admitted to Lenoir General Hospital in Kinston and others were transported to Pitt Memorial Hospital in Greenville.

Pitt Memorial director Jack Richardson said that eight persons were brought to the hospital's emergency section this morning and four were admitted for treatment. He said that two others involved in the accident were still in the emergency area at 11:15 a.m. for further evaluation.

Richardson listed the conditions of those admitted as "guarded."

According to a spokesman at the Hookerton town office, the accident took place around 8 a.m. He said that both vehicles went off an embankment and overturned.

The spokesman noted that the driver of the second vehicle was also injured and transported by rescue personnel to Greenville. The driver was the lone occupant of the car, it was pointed out, but no word was available on the driver's condition.

Rescue units from Farmville, Walstonburg, Hookerton and Snow Hill responded to the accident scene, he said.

The investigating highway patrolman could not be reached for comment this morning.

Will Exhume Her Mother

LUMBERTON, N.C. (AP) — The body of Mrs. Lilly Bullard, the mother of a Robeson County woman charged with murder this week in the arsenic poisoning of a St. Pauls man, is to be exhumed Saturday.

Judge Maurice Braswell of Fayetteville signed the exhumation order Wednesday. Mrs. Bullard is buried in a Cumberland County Cemetery, but officials declined to say which one.

Margie Bullard Barfield, 45, a Lumberton nurses' aide, was charged this week with the arsenic poisoning death of St. Pauls farmer Stewart Taylor, who died Feb. 3.

The exhumation order for Mrs. Bullard, who died in 1974, had been requested by Robeson County District Attorney Joe Freeman Britt. Her death certificate indicates she died of "unknown natural causes" resulting from shock and extreme vomiting and diarrhea over a six to eight hour period.

"With acute arsenic poisoning," according to Dr. Marvin Thompson, pathologist at Southeastern General Hospital in Lumberton, "the patient will have vomiting, diarrhea, stomach pain and possibly some inflammation of the gastrointestinal tract."

Taylor became ill on Feb. 2 with many of those symptoms and was treated and released at Southeastern General Hospital. He returned the next day and died before his ailment could be diagnosed. An autopsy revealed arsenic in his liver.

They had some of the best equipment available, much of it donated by sporting goods manufacturers and outfitters. The trip was sponsored by the Young Men's Christian Association.

Macridis and Black were last seen about noon last Saturday. Their equipment was found on the shore at 4 p.m.

Hunt Missing 2 Canoeists

STEVENSON, Wash. (AP) — For a full year they planned their trip. They studied maps of every inch of the 5,000 miles of rivers and lakes that stretch from Astoria, Ore., to the mouth of Maine's Kennebec River.

Canoeists Peter Macridis, 25, and Tim Black, 23, wanted to forge a national cross-country waterway and hoped their trip would spur the necessary legislation. "Like an Appalachian Trail for hikers," said Macridis the night before the two headed up the Columbia River on March 1.

But the adventure ended about 150 miles from Astoria, on a treacherous stretch of the Columbia Gorge named Wind Mountain.

"I don't believe there is any hope whatsoever for the pair's survival," Macridis' father, Roy Macridis, said Thursday, five days after their equipment was found washed up on the river's bank.

A ground party supported by aircraft searched the river east of Stevenson the first days after the green, 16-foot canoe and the equipment, including KCIA Man?

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. intelligence reported in the late 1960s that accused South Korean influence peddler Tongsun Park was not a South Korean agent as such but was under the Korean Central Intelligence Agency's control. House investigators say.

That summary of U.S. intelligence reports came at a House hearing Thursday.

A U.S. District Court jury was empanelled, meanwhile, to hear opening arguments in the trial of Hanchu C. Kim, another Washington area businessman, on charges of conducting a second influence operation in Congress.

The U.S. intelligence conclusion that Tongsun Park was not a South Korean agent as such appears to help Park's contention that he paid some 30 congressmen $750,000 as a businessman and not to buy influence for Seoul.

But Tongsun Park denied to reporters the assessment that he was under the KCIA's control.

"I don't know what they (the KCIA) did themselves, but I have no knowledge of being controlled by anybody, not even my own mother," Park said after the third day of questioning by Senate Ethics Committee investigators.

Explosion Hits Norfolk Port

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — An explosion in a floating drydock at Allied Towing Co. here today killed one person and injured several others, preliminary reports from the Coast Guard and police indicated.

A Coast Guard spokesman said the explosion occurred about 9:15 a.m. and was reported about 10:30 a.m.

spokesman said.

Ancient Bards Knew How To Gently Lampoon

By ED DENNEHY
Associated Press Writer

St. Patrick enjoyed limericks, but not the kind that Hamilton Jordan, President Carter's assistant, allegedly wrote to a woman in a Washington singles bar.

The missionary bishop who spread Christianity throughout pagan Ireland back in the 5th Century is pictured by his biographers as deeply spiritual yet full of humor, enthusiasm and love of life.

When he traveled around Ireland, he must have heard on many an evening the Gaelic forerunners of the modern-day limerick. Clean five-liners, not the unprintable such as the one starting "There was a young lady of Worcester ..."

Researchers have found that the limerick is an ancient verse form written in the Irish language. In those 5th Century days, of course, they had no daily newspapers, radio or the chance to watch "Laverne and Shirley" or "Donnie and Marie" on television. So the people were dependent on itinerant poets, singers, storytellers and musicians. These artists composed verse and sagas about Irish leaders and major events of the day.

You can picture St. Patrick, the bishop of all Ireland, resting from his missionary journeys at a fireside in a house located, say, near the shores of Galway Bay. He would hear romantic stories, satirical verse, or the playing of a harp. Bards would extol a king's bravery in battle against a neighboring king. But the bard wouldn't overdo the praise. The losing king might be his next prospective host. There were a lot of local Irish kings in those times. If you hear an American proclaim, "My ancestors were kings of Ireland," he's probably right.

This short verse form may have been called "limerick" after Limerick, the picturesque port city where the River Shannon flows, but this is a matter of controversy. Edward Lear is the king of modern-day limerick writers. An Englishman, he lived in the 1800s — and had Irish ancestors. Some of this output was light satire that lampooned politicians and other contemporary figures.

If the ancient bards were around today, they probably would be gently kidding personalities of the 1970s. Here is what they might write:

ALL IN THE FAMILY
Now there is our prexy, Jimmy Carter.
Does he feel like a long-suffering martyr?
As he thinks of Billy Peddling his beer willy-nilly.
So which Carter is the smarter?

WHAT'S WRONG NOW?
Will you look at lonesome Ralph Nader
Who is a flaming crusader
As he hurls his hot lance
At anything askance.
He's a relentless upbraider.

MIDDLE YEAST

Sadat is always in the news
Pushing his Middle East views
Then Begin says "No!"
To any PLO.
Keep talking, don't light the fuse.

DOWN THE HATCH
There is an O'Neill named Tip
Who is wont to take a little nip
To mark Paddy's Day.
Sure, there's no better way.
So go ahead, Tip, with your sip.

INS AND OUTS
Now the Washington bureaucrats

Are party-regular Democrats.
If the Republicans win,
They'll go in with a grin
As the outgoing mutter "Oh, rats!"

SEOUL OF THE MATTER
How about smiling Tongsun Park.
Some hoped he'd clam,
Keep 'em out of a jam
And not sing like a meadow-lark.

Held Unqualified To Teach, Lead

NEW YORK (AP) — The Standing Conference of Orthodox Bishops says "persons who embrace homosexual life-styles are not qualified to teach children or act as spiritual leaders."

In a resolution adopted at their spring meeting, bishops heading Eastern Orthodox churches totalling 5 million American members said secular pressures seek to establish homosexual life-styles as being of equal worth to marriage.

Although offering sympathy and pastoral assistance to those with homosexual conditions beyond their control, the bishops said Scripture and church tradition condemn "voluntary homosexual acts as sinful and forbidden and detrimental to existence of the Christian home."

'Strong' Word To Withdraw

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States has told Israel in unusually strong diplomatic language to withdraw its troops from the "Fatahland" of southern Lebanon, saying the only real solution to its security problems is a comprehensive settlement of the Arab-Israeli conflict.

The call was issued at the directive of President Carter as the Israelis strengthened their control of the staging area of Palestinian terrorist bases along the Israeli border. It gave no timetable, while saying in stern diplomatic language, "we expect Israel to withdraw and we have made our views in this respect known to the Israeli government."

For the short run, the U.S. administration said late Thursday it had begun "urgent exchanges" with parties in the Middle East on possibly stationing a United Nations peace-keeping unit along the Israeli border.

The U.S. statement deplored both the "tragic killings" in Israel last Saturday, without specifically mentioning the Palestinian terrorists, and the loss of innocent civilian lives in Lebanon as a result of Israeli raids.

Implicit in the statement was that Israel's security depends ultimately on a solution to the Palestinian question. Carter has called for creation of "a homeland" for the Palestinians.

The United States clearly aimed at meeting Arab demands for Israeli withdrawal and Israel's concern about protection from terrorists who have struck at civilians from bases across the border in Lebanon.

Profanity On TV Surveyed

TUPELO, Miss. (AP) — The word, "God," is the third most frequently used term of profanity on prime-time television, says the National Federation for Decency after monitoring 864 hours of prime-time viewing, and registering a total of 1,054 profane utterances.

The Rev. Donald E. Wildmon, the Methodist who heads the NFD, says the study found that American Home Products, makers of Anacin and Ford Motor Company sponsored shows with the most profanity, that CBS aired the most profanity, with ABC next and NBC the least.

Better Living, Dying By Faith

NEW BRIGHTON, Minn. (AP) — A physician told the congregation of Cross of Glory Lutheran Church that people who have faith in God live better, do better during illness and die better.

Dr. John Brown, president of the Minnesota chapter of the American Cancer Society, said years of caring for the terminally ill have taught him that such people "know they're not alone . . . The absence of fear of dying is really a positive force." He added that those without faith suffer more.

"They become bitter because they think they're about to lose all they have. To them, this life is the whole ball game."

Declare Soviet Action 'Illegal'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Soviet Union broke international law by revoking the citizenship of two famous Soviet dissidents now in the United States, the State Department says. Over the past seven days, the Soviet Union has taken away the citizenship of conductor Mstislav Rostropovich and Gen. Pyotor Grigorenko.

State Department spokesman Hodding Carter on Thursday said the Soviet action violated both the United Nations Universal Declaration and the 1975 Helsinki Agreement guaranteeing everyone "the right to leave any country, including his own, and return to that country."

Ex-Congressman Pleads Guilty To Avoid Trial

By HARRY F. ROSENTHAL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former Rep. Richard T. Hanna, D-Calif., the only present or former congressman charged in the Korean influence-buying scandal, pleaded guilty today to one count of conspiracy to defraud the U.S. government.

Hanna thereby avoided trial on a 40-count indictment scheduled to begin next week.

He could be sentenced to a maximum of five years in prison and a $10,000 fine.

The white-haired Hanna, who served in Congress from 1963 to 1974, sat by as government lawyer Jeffrey S. White read the agreement reached in plea-bargaining with Hanna.

In it, Hanna admitted that he had agreed with Korean businessman Tongsun Park to use the power of his office and position as a congressman to further the financial interests of Park.

"For these acts, Hanna received from Park substantial amounts of money and other material considerations," the plea-bargaining agreement said.

When called to the bench by chief U.S. District Judge William B. Bryant, Hanna attempted to explain what got him into his predicament. But the judge said that all he wanted to know was whether any pressure was put on Hanna to plead guilty.

White told Bryant what the government expected to show if the trial had gone on as scheduled.

"In return for his efforts, Hanna received many benefits," White told the judge. "He received in excess of $200,000 in cash and checks between 1969 and the end of 1975."

That is twice as much as previously published estimates of money that Hanna received from Park. In the course of congressional hearings, Park has denied bribing any congressmen or in any way acting as an agent of the Korean government.

Peking Confirms A Nuclear Test

TOKYO (AP) — China confirmed it had "successfully" conducted a nuclear test. The Peking Radio broadcast did not give the yield range, test site or other details.

The U.S. Energy Department said Wednesday the blast was in the atmosphere, set off at the nuclear testing site in Lop Nor, and was in the low yield range of less than 20 kilotons.

Japanese Air Space Violated

TOKYO (AP) — A Soviet bomber violated Japan's air space today, prompting a brief scramble of military aircraft, defense agency officials said. They said it was the sixth time a Soviet plane had violated Japan's air space since 1967.

The bomber, one of two TU-95s heading toward Korea, was over Japan for 75 seconds, flying at 430 mph at an altitude of 600 feet, they said.

Defer Studying Rule Changes

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Democratic National Committee will delay until June 9 consideration of rule changes that would make it more difficult for outsiders to challenge an established presidential candidate.

Chairman John White postponed from April 21 consideration by the committee of the rules which would shorten the primary season, partially revived the winner-take-all formula and forced presidential contenders to enter primaries at least 55 days before the election.

Find No Abuse In Banker Loans Nationalization Pleas Raised

WASHINGTON (AP) — A survey of preferential loans to bank insiders reveals no prevalent abuse and requires no corrective legislation, Federal bank regulators say. Some members of the Senate Banking Committee are complaining that the $4 million survey was a waste of time and taxpayers money.

Committee chairman Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., originally ordered the study by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp., because the three federal agencies that regulate banks had no statistics on such abuse.

WASHINGTON (AP) — A number of state leaders are urging Congress to nationalize railroad tracks and roadbeds to prevent further derailments of the kind that have taken 15 lives in recent weeks.

Tennessee Gov. Ray Blanton and Massachusetts Lt. Gov. Thomas P. O'Neill III both admitted on Thursday that nationalization would cost billions of taxpayers dollars, but said it is needed to maintain safety and protect lives.

Arkansas, Fullerton State In Wins

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

When Jim Counce was growing up, the magic word in college basketball were always, "UCLA."

"You've got to remember," says the Arkansas forward, "that from the time I was 7 until I was 17, they were national champs every year except one."

It explains why Counce was a bit "in awe" of the Bruins before Thursday night's Far West Regional game in the NCAA playoffs. But he didn't let it bother him too long.

Counce scored only two points, but it was his splendid defensive work on UCLA's David Greenwood that helped the Razorbacks upset the glamorous Bruins 74-70 in the semifinals of the Far West Regionals.

That glittering triumph moved Arkansas into Saturday's Far West championship game in Albuquerque, N.M., against Cal State-Fullerton, which advanced with a shocking 75-72 victory over No. 11 San Francisco Thursday night.

Kentucky and Michigan State both won big Thursday night to move into the finals of the Midwest Regionals in Dayton, Ohio, also on Saturday. The top-ranked Wildcats trounced Miami of Ohio 91-69 and the fourth-ranked Spartans routed Western Kentucky 90-69 in Thursday night games.

The NCAA tournament continues tonight with semifinal regional games in the East and Midwest. In the East Regional at Providence, R.I., it's Duke against Penn and Indiana vs. Villanova. The Midwest Regional pairs Notre Dame against Utah and DePaul with Louisville.

Marvin Delph and Sidney Moncrief sparked Arkansas to a 16-point lead at the half and the Razorbacks held off a furious second-half charge by UCLA.

Will Take The Title

NEW YORK (AP) — The World Boxing Council's executive committee has voted to strip Leon Spinks of his heavyweight title by this weekend if he does not accept bids for a title fight against Ken Norton, says WBC President Jose Sulaiman.

Sulaiman said Thursday in a telephone interview with The Associated Press from Mexico City that he felt Spinks had dealt in bad faith with the WBC. The WBC executive committee voted 15-2, with one abstention, to withdraw title recognition if Spinks does not agree by Friday midnight to accept open bidding for a bout with Norton, the No. 1 contender, Sulaiman said.

Sulaiman said, however, no WBC action would be announced until at least Monday or Tuesday.

The rival World Boxing Association has given its blessing to an Ali-Spinks rematch although it also ranks Norton No. 1.

Led by Roy Hamilton, the Bruins put on an exasperating press to cause a cache of turnovers after intermission, and finally pulled ahead of the Razorbacks 60-58 late in the game. But Arkansas rallied for six straight points on a pair of free throws by Ron Brewer and baskets by Delph and Steve Schall. The Razorbacks never trailed again. Keith Anderson hit a 20-foot shot with four seconds left to lead Cal State-Fullerton over San Francisco as the upset trend continued in this 40th post-season tournament. Anderson's jumper snapped a 72-72 tie and put the Titans on top in the game for only the third time.

Kevin Heenan sealed the victory with one second left when he connected on a free throw that was the result of a technical foul against the Dons for calling a timeout even though they had none left.

Mike Phillips scored 24 points to pace Kentucky over Miami, the team that upset defending national champion Marquette last weekend. Phillips scored five of Kentucky's first seven baskets to get the Southeastern Conference champions started in the one-sided game. Greg Kelsier and Rob Chapman each scored 23 points as Michigan State buried Western Kentucky. It was the second straight NCAA tournament game that the Spartans moved out to an early lead in the second straight game. Kelsier had scored 23 points. They had opened a 24-8 lead early in their victory over Providence.

The club, which recently inducted 17 new members, is seeking affiliation with Road Runners of America and the North Carolina AAU.

Once again, the upset bug has struck in the NCAA Tournament, and the powers that be will probably be worried to death now that the television audience will be lacking.

Last night, two more of the favored teams, including one of the most prestigious ones, bit the dust in the regional semifinals. Both UCLA, one of the glamour teams, and San Francisco, another team thought to be headed for the regionals finals, were ousted. Arkansas, a fairly new-comer to the basketball spotlight, and Cal. State-Fullerton, a new unknown to such circles will battle on national television Saturday in one of the two finals broadcasts.

The other regional semifinals from last night went more or less according to form, although the "big" game was washed out by last week's results.

Kentucky, the team that now must assume the mantle of overwhelming favorite in the tournament, will meet Michigan State in the Mid-East final. But the Wildcats had better beware that upset syndrome.

Young Lady Pirates See Good Year

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

The East Carolina University's women's track team plays host to nine other schools on Saturday in the second annual East Carolina Invitational.

The meet opens the season for the Lady Pirates, and is held in conjunction with the men's track team.

Joining the Lady Pirates in the meet will be N.C. A & T., N.C. State, Delaware State, the University of North Carolina, the University of South Carolina, St. Augustine's, Winston-Salem State, Howard and North Carolina Central.

"Due to the weather, we haven't had the time I'd like to have had to get into condition," Coach Laurie Arrants said. "We're behind schedule, and we've got several top performers injured. Lydia Rountree came in from basketball with an injury and won't be ready for a while. My best 200 girl has a kidney infection, and by best 400 girl just reinjured her ankle."

But all is not gloomy for Coach Arrants. She predicts that her field events group will be the strong point of the team again.

"Basically, we're healthy. We have 19 on the squad, and I'd really like to have about 22 qualify people. We're improved in quality from last year, but this is only the third year of our program, and it takes time."

The Lady Pirates have a tough schedule that puts them up against some of the best competition along the east coast.

"But we feel we can be competitive. Last year, there were 11 teams at the University of Virginia meet, and we finished fifth when we were hurt. If we're healthy this year, we should be an even better team."

Running down the events, Arrants listed the top Lady Pirate performers.

Maria Gudjohnsen, who has done 18-3, will lead in the long jump, with Cookie McPhatter pushing her.

Debbie Knight will handle the javelin, with Elaine Davis, a freshman who should hit around 120 feet and Debbie Freeman working with the darts.

Sandy Sampson leads in the high jump, with Davis and Freeman in the shot put. Davis is using the new rotary technique in the shot this year.

Rountree, Dawn Henderson, ("a pleasant surprise"), and Catherine Suggs (sister of the men's team's Carter Suggs) will anchor the 100-meter dash. Jeanette Whitfield, out of action right now, along with the three 100-meter girls, will hold down the 200-meter dash.

McPhatter is the top girl in the 400-meter dash, along with Veronica Jones.

Joy Forbes is the leading Lady Pirate in the 800-meter run.

Ann Holmes will hold down the mile, while Linda Mason runs the 400-meter hurdles. Gudjohnsen will run the 100-meter hurdles.

"Our relay events are still undecided. We have a number of people we could use," Arrants said.

"All in all, we have a very young team," she pointed out.

"There is not a single senior on the team. So I guess that means that our future is a bright one."

Light Patterns Speaking Aid

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — We've always been told that speech has patterns, and now students at the North Carolina School for the Deaf are learning to speak through a machine that translates sounds into light patterns.

The students can see on the screen what a correct sound looks like. Then they can practice making the same sound by trying to produce the same light pattern or the same shape, depending on which machine is used.

The simpler of the two machines is the speech analyzer, which makes speech sound visible on a display panel which consists of two banks of 16 lights each. The light pattern varies according to the frequency and amplitude of the sound.

The therapist speaks a syllable into the microphone and a pattern of colored lights appears on the panel. This pattern will hold as long as a switch is depressed, so the therapist can show the student what the correct sound looks like.

Then the student can try to duplicate the light pattern. When he does, he's making the sound correctly.

The more complicated and precise video articulator works on a wave form, says public information officer Marilyn Williams. It is similar in operation to a heart monitor, when the heartbeat can be seen moving on the screen.

Each sound produced by the human voice is phoneticized into a shape on the screen. The length and volume of the sound affect the figure on the screen.

A speech therapist doesn't need to be present each time the video articulator is used. A set of pattern cards accompanies the machine. A student can work on the machine on his own, working to reproduce the chosen card pattern on the screen.

"The video articulator is good for the clinician," Ms. Williams said. "It has a timer which can be set. This means the clinician can tell the student to repeat a sound five times in five seconds and the child will do it."

An additional plus for the machine is that it doesn't handicap color-blind students. The speech analyzer panel includes red and green lights, which could prevent its use by students unable to distinguish between those colors.

The idea of "visible speech" is not a new one, according to a release from the Telephone Pioneers of America, a service group which donated the machines to the school.

In the 1940s Bell Laboratories developed spectrograms, visible speech patterns somewhat like modern day voiceprints, that appeared on a screen.

The deaf could look at a pattern and "translate" from it. This method, however, was extremely difficult to use because of the complexity of the patterns.

Jerry Brown's Popularity Dips

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Move over Jimmy Carter. Jerry Brown's popularity is slipping, too.

A California Poll survey of 1,217 Californians released Thursday showed that 29 percent of those polled say Brown is doing a "good job" as governor of California compared to 53 percent two years ago.

The most recent poll showed 20 percent of those surveyed giving Brown a "poor" rating compared to 7 percent two years ago.

Other recent polls have indicated President Carter's popularity also has slipped. Brown is regarded as a potential challenger to Carter for the Democratic presidential nomination in 1980.

Five Accidents Here Yesterday

An estimated $2,150 property damage resulted from a series of five traffic mishaps investigated yesterday by Greenville Police.

Heaviest damage resulted from a 5:15 p.m. collision on Greenville Boulevard, three tenths of a mile East of the Hooker Road intersection involving cars driven by Arthur Ray Holloman of Farmville and Ephraim Edward Grubbs Jr. of 27 Scott St.

Police, who charged Holloman with failing to see his intended movement could be made in safety, estimated damage at $200 to the Holloman car and $325 to the Grubbs auto.

An estimated $200 damage resulted to each of two cars involved in a 5:33 p.m. mishap on Greenville Boulevard, 200 feet East of the Hooker Road intersection.

Drivers involved were identified as Eugeneia T. Lanier of 302 Country Club Rd. and Clifton Wayne Anderson of Route 1, Greenville.

A 4:30 p.m. mishap on Greenville Boulevard, 150 feet West of the Seaboard Coast Line Railway crossing involved cars driven by Sallie Beachum McLawhorn of Route 7, Greenville and Gale Smith Butler of Lawson's Trailer Pk.

Police, who charged Mrs. McLawhorn with failing to see her intended movement could be made in safety, estimated damage at $200 to the McLawhorn car and $300 to the Butler vehicle.

An estimated $200 damage resulted to each of two cars involved in a 10 a.m. collision on Memorial Drive, 100 feet North of the lone Street intersection.

Investigators identified the drivers involved as Myrtle Harris Wooten of Greenville and Sarah Lynn Cox of Ridgecrest.

Cars driven by Annie Wooten Johnson of 1612 Lincoln Dr. and James Preston Lilley of 612 East Tenth St. collided about 7:50 a.m. at the intersection of Fifth and Reade Streets, causing an estimated $175 damage to the Johnson car and $250 damage to the Lilley car.

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — "I gouted up in the past, but in the last 12 years I've worked hard to be a good citizen. I know we've built a new life."

Vote To Sue Cemeteries

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The North Carolina Cemetery Commission voted Thursday to bring legal action against 14 cemeteries that have failed to comply with a 1975 law designed to protect consumers.

The cemeteries, scattered across the state, are accused of failing to comply with a law that requires cemeteries to put into a trust fund 75 percent of the money they receive from the sale of merchandise that has not been delivered.

The law is designed to protect customers who buy vaults and bronze markers for themselves before their deaths, in the event a cemetery goes out of business before the items are needed.

James E. Scarbrough, associate attorney general, said the cemeteries will be given notice before a lawsuit is filed. He said the attorney general's office would probably seek temporary restraining orders against cemeteries that still do not comply.

So, admitting his past mistakes but promising to remain a model citizen, Edward Davies appealed to the governor Thursday to block his extradition to North Carolina.

The Madison Heights man was recently unmasked by a minor traffic ticket as a 1966 escapee from a North Carolina prison farm. He was serving four years for writing bad checks to get money to pay for the delivery of his wife's baby.

After living in fear of discovery for all those years, Davies told an aide to Gov. William Milliken, he now faces the prospect that his new life will crumble.

"You work 12 years, and then it looks like it's falling apart. It's tough," the slight, dark-haired Davies told Peter Ellsworth, a legal aide to the governor.

But a decision on North Carolina's extradition request may not be made immediately. Ellsworth said North Carolina is conducting an investigation, and may drop the matter, commute Davies' sentence or parole him in Michigan.

Until North Carolina finishes its study, Ellsworth said, he will not send a recommendation to Milliken.

But he warned Davies of heavy odds in favor of his extradition if North Carolina insists on it. "The presumptions are all against a person in your position," he told the 41-year-old Detroit native. "The odds are never with you; most people are extradited. But the governor is flexible enough to consider all the circumstances."

Davies' circumstances began with a troubled first marriage and a federal rap for stealing a car — the family car he says his wife permitted him to take on a trip. But things really went bad when he married a teen-age girl in North Carolina and had no money to pay for the birth of her first child.

Trying to live on about $48 a week, Davies said, he wrote overdrafts on his bank account and then checks on a closed account to pay for medical bills, baby clothes, a crib and diapers.

"I admit it, I just broke the law. I cashed the checks. I didn't know what else to do," he said.

Science Teacher Receives Award

ECU News Bureau

Jessie M. Jones, a high school science teacher from Elm City is the recipient of the 1978 Austin D. Bond Award for distinguished service in science education.

The award, sponsored by the East Carolina Univ. Department of Science Education, was presented today by Chancellor Leo W. Jenkins at the awards ceremony for the Eastern Regional Science Fair. The award is given annually in honor of a former chairman of science education on the basis of an individual's contribution to the field of science education.

A teacher of physics, chemistry and physical science at Elm City High School, Ms. Jones received the bachelor of science degree in chemistry from Shaw University and the master's degree in physical science from Pennsylvania State University.

She has also done additional graduate study at Holy Cross College, the University of Dayton, UCLA, the University of California at Berkeley, Florida Technological University, the University of Wyoming and East Carolina University.

Her professional activities include membership in the National Science Teachers Association, the National Education Ass'n, the N.C. Ass'n of Educators and the N.C. Academy of Science. She is past president of the N.C. Science Teachers Association.

Sentenced to two terms of two years each, he immediately escaped, spent the night huddling in a swamp, was recaptured and given 90 extra days in jail. Then his wife and three-month-old baby came to see him.

"They wouldn't let her see me — she yelled at me through the fence. She was crying," he said. "She had no place to stay that night. She had no place to go and no money. I just said, 'I'm not staying. I couldn't stand it.'"

He also hinted he was treated poorly by state corrections officials, but refused to give details. "I don't want North Carolina mad," he said. "I really love North Carolina. The people down there were the greatest."

Davies escaped a second time, rejoined his wife in Virginia and headed home to Michigan.

Once in Detroit he got a steady job at a Chrysler Corp. assembly plant and began a decade of steady improvement. He worked hard, went to junior college, was elected union steward at the plant, had three children and bought a house in the suburbs.

He joined the PTA, while his wife taught Sunday school. He was a Big Brother, taking boys fishing up north. "I felt I owed society a lot," he said. "I don't want anybody else's boy to do what I did."

He had a few speeding tickets, but nobody discovered his past until he made an illegal U-turn in the northern Michigan resort town of Honor while on a fishing trip.

A computer check turned up the North Carolina warrant, and Milliken signed a warrant to send Davies back.

"He's been a model citizen, a good father, a good employee," said his attorney, Charles Maloney, in asking Milliken to block the extradition. "He'd be a good risk to keep as a member of this state."

Speaking of Your Health...

Don't Delay on Varicose Veins

I have varicose veins. The doctor who recently examined me feels that there is no choice but surgery. Of course, I want to avoid this if possible. Are there any exercises that can be helpful for varicose veins? — Mrs. A.N., Texas

Dear Mrs. N.: When once varicose veins have become evident, it means that changes have already occurred in the muscle walls of the veins. Weaknesses of the valves within the veins (there are small valves in veins) are rarely, if ever, reversible.

The exercises that you seek are really your way of avoiding confrontation with the truth that surgery is the method of choice to relieve you of the symptoms associated with varicose veins.

There are now many excellent techniques to determine if the superficial or the deep veins of the legs are affected. Each case must be individually studied in order to determine the efficiency of the flow of blood in the veins.

Some form of exercise is beneficial to everyone. Exercise stimulates the blood circulation and may prevent some of the stasis, or stagnation, of blood that occurs in some cases of severe varicosity. But exercise cannot change the physical structure of the veins themselves.

If there is a concurring opinion that surgery is the optimum choice for you then do not delay by seeking other avenues that will only prolong your discomfort and invite complications.

Surgery for varicose veins is simple and safe. The rewards can be most gratifying.

I get sore throats very often. The nurse where I work says it's a "strep" throat. My doctor says it isn't. I worry a lot about strep throats. — Miss J.N.A., Maine.

Dear Miss A.: "Worry" is not classed as one of the antibiotics that can cure strep throats. With today's culture techniques, it is possible to find the exact germ that is responsible for an infection of the throat. Then, by special methods, it is possible to determine the exact antibiotic to which the germ that you are harboring is most vulnerable.

Prior to the time of the antibiotics, the streptococcus sore throat invoked a great deal of terror for there were no specific ways to combat the strep infection, or the complications that were associated with it. Today, the so-called "wide spectrum" antibiotics can almost always keep the strep germ in control.

You should not be confused by any conflict of opinion. There is no guesswork in diagnosing a strep throat. Perhaps the nurse at your office is using the term too loosely. I'm sure that she didn't mean to induce in you a sense of anxiety about a condition that is so readily controllable.

SPEAKING OF YOUR HEALTH... A short visit to a patient is a gift. A long visit can be a burden.

Holding Shower To Aid Couple

Members of Sheldermine Pentecostal Holiness Church will have a miscellaneous shower for Anne and Grover Smith.

The couple lost their home in a fire several weeks ago.

The shower will be held Saturday from 5-7 p.m. at the church and friends are invited to attend.

Ladies Night On Tuesday

The annual ladies night dinner of Post 39, American Legion will be held Tuesday at 7 p.m. at the Legion Home.

Featured on the program will be the consul in New York from the Republic of South Africa, Theo Vorster. While in Greenville, Vorster will talk to several civic clubs and to classes at East Carolina University.

He will give attention to economic and cultural aspects of his industrial country against the backdrop of the plural race situation. He points out that South Africa has the highest standards of education, health and general progress of all Africa and that these high standards are multiracial.

A previous announcement to legion members said that the program would feature a photo-slide talk by Dr. Marshall Helms on Japan. The program will be rescheduled.

Dr. Edgar W. Hooks Jr., commander of the legion, invites all legionnaires and their wives and members of the Ladies Auxiliary to be present.
