N.C. Officials Bitter At HEW Action; Suggest Negotiations May Be Finished

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina officials, angry with the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare's move to block millions of dollars in federal funds to the state's universities, say negotiations with HEW may be finished.

William C. Friday, president of the 16-campus University of North Carolina system, reacted bitterly to the fund cutoff, which HEW Secretary Joseph Califano ordered because of the system's refusal to meet federal desegregation demands.

Friday said HEW "has not been ready to acknowledge the significance of what has already been done in North Carolina" to eliminate vestiges of segregation. And he said that despite Califano's wish that negotiations between government lawyers and the university go on, "it is questionable whether we can or should continue discussions."

Califano said he was beginning administrative action aimed at cutting off some of the university's federal aid, variously estimated at $68 million to $89 million annually.

In Raleigh, Gov. Jim Hunt said through a spokesman he was "very disappointed" and felt the cut-off could have been avoided.

In Washington, U.S. Sen. Robert Morgan, D-N.C., said Califano's "demands are totally unrealistic and his inflexibility is insufferable." Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., called it "an unjustified and unprecedented assault on academic freedom in our state," and promised "to discuss at length Mr. Califano's harassment" when HEW's budget comes to the Senate floor.

Hunt and Friday were notified of Califano's decision shortly before noon, when the secretary announced them at a Washington press conference. Friday kept reporters waiting for two hours at his university offices while huddling with key aides to draft a five page response.

Hunt immediately approved the university's recommendation that the Washington law firm of Jaworski and Fulbright be hired to represent it in legal challenges to Califano's move. The state has 20 days to seek an administrative hearing.

Leon Jaworski, a partner in the firm, was the Watergate special prosecutor and is now counsel to the House committee investigation South Korean influence on Capitol Hill. Another attorney, Carl Voght, will handle the UNC case.

There was confusion among state officials over just how much federal money is at stake. Califano said only future money going to programs "contributing to continued segregation" would be withheld for now.

Had that been ordered in fiscal 1977, he said, HEW would have reviewed $68 million and withheld $10 million. No money for student aid would be stopped.

Friday refused to comment on the amount involved. But his legal assistant, Richard Robinson, said officials were puzzled.

"We don't know what (Califano's) remarks mean. We don't have any idea how he arrived at his figures," he said.

At issue in the dispute is the refusal by Friday and the university Board of Governors to agree to several desegregation goals demanded by UNC. HEW was under court order to review desegregation plans of higher education in six southern states, and North Carolina is now the only state whose plans have not been approved.

Friday said HEW has asked the university to set a five-year goal of 150 percent for increased black enrollment at the 11 traditionally white university campuses, where 91 percent of the students are now white.

Friday said the goal "probably cannot be met," and said to promise it would serve no purpose.

HEW has also urged UNC to study consolidating or eliminating programs duplicated on both traditionally white and black campuses as a means of encouraging an enrollment shift.

"These steps would involve us in educational experiments that could seriously damage some of our institutions," Friday said.

Friday refused to answer questions and said he would have a "full report" when the Board of Governors meets April 14.

Inflexible Begin Dims Prospect Middle East Peace Settlement

By BARRY SCHWEID
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin, acknowledging that his talks with President Carter have been "difficult," nonetheless said today that peace talks between Israel and Egypt should continue.

Begin said "the world needs some patience" as the two sides try to reach agreement. "We've only started to negotiate. I don't think any peace treaty was concluded in days," he said.

But Begin, in an interview with NBC news, indicated Israel was standing firm in its refusal to make the concessions asked by Carter on the issues of Israeli withdrawal from the West Bank, establishment of a Palestinian homeland, and a halt to Israeli settlements in occupied territory.

Referring to Arab demands that Israel withdraw from the West Bank and allow establishment of a Palestinian state, Begin said "these two demands are completely unacceptable to the Israelis."

Begin said that although obstacles have diminished the optimism felt in the wake of Egyptian President Anwar Sadat's meeting with him in Jerusalem in December "I wouldn't say I am less optimistic."

American officials, however, in analyzing the talks between Carter and Begin, cast the situation in a much gloomier light.

Some members of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, after meeting today with President Carter, said Israeli inflexibility has dimmed Middle East peace prospects.

Sen. Jacob K. Javits, R-N.Y., said: "I think that prospects are momentarily discouraging" and he described Carter's mood as deeply frustrated after two days of meetings with Begin.

Sen. George McGovern, D-S.D., said that "unless there is some more flexibility on the part of Israel...I don't see any hope for a settlement." McGovern said neither the Arabs nor Israel show "the degree of flexibility it will take to bring about a settlement."

Sen. Charles Percy, R-Ill., said Israel has appeared to take a step backwards in the peace process.

"Static" was an administration official's description of the situation as Begin held out against committing Israel to withdrawing from the west bank of the Jordan River.

Briefing reporters after Begin's talks with Carter ended Wednesday, the official, who barred use of his name, denied there was a crisis but seemed at a loss as to what the United States would do next.

First, he said, "we will have consultations among ourselves" and then try to determine the "most effective and practical way to proceed."

He said there is no plan yet for Alfred L. Atherton Jr., the principal U.S. mediator, to return to the Middle East to confer with Egyptian and other Arab leaders.

The United States planned to issue a formal statement on the talks today.

Begin and President Carter were in sharp disagreement on the nearly 100 Jewish settlements on captured Arab lands. Begin offered no promise not to begin new ones after returning home, the official said.

"I can't say we've reduced the differences at this point," Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance told another group of reporters about dwindling U.S. hopes to wring enough concessions from Begin to resume peace talks with Egypt.

National security adviser Zbigniew Brzezinski, asked after Begin left the White House if the situation was as grim as it seemed, commented, "Appearances were not misleading."

One issue was apparently smoothed over, though.

Administration officials said they were confident that Israel would end its military occupation of southern Lebanon soon after a U.N. peacekeeping contingent was fully in place.

After stating his case one final time in a National Press Club speech today, Begin was flying to New York and then Tel Aviv.

Congressman Today Indicted For Kickbacks

WASHINGTON (AP) — Charles C. Diggs Jr., a Democratic congressman from Michigan for 23 years, was indicted today for accepting $101,000 in kickbacks from employees of the House of Representatives.

The 35-count indictment was returned by a federal grand jury while Diggs was traveling overseas. He had been scheduled to meet President Carter in Africa next week.

Diggs is chairman of the House Committee on the District of Columbia.

The indictment said the alleged scheme to defraud the United States began around July 1, 1973 and continued until March 2, 1977.

Fourteen of the counts against the congressman were for mail fraud. One count said Diggs put Jean G. Stultz, an employee of the House District Committee earning $14,667 a year, on the payroll of his own office at an additional salary of $19,000 a year.

The indictment said Diggs then "directed that this additional salary...be kicked back and applied for the use of defendant Diggs."

Ms. Stultz, Felix Matlock and Ofield Dukes, identified in the indictment as Diggs' House employees, were listed in seven other counts as receiving additional amounts of about $3,000 a month for specified periods which the indictment said they then kicked back to Diggs.

Twelve other counts named three other Diggs employees who allegedly received money from the U.S. government while "performing services for defendant Diggs personally, his family, and the House of Diggs," the Michigan funeral home that Diggs formerly owned.

Death Plunge For Veteran Aerialist

By LEW WHEATON
Associated Press Writer

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (AP) — Everything was there. The frantic confusion of tumbling acrobats. Sadfaced clowns. Animal acts. Trapeze artists. Everything but the greatest aerialist of all time, Karl Wallenda.

"In the great tradition of the circus, the show goes on," the circus ring announcer said.

Thousands bowed their heads in silence for Wallenda, who had plunged to his death less than six hours earlier Wednesday during a promotional appearance for the Pan American Circus here. It was a natural end to the 73-year-old Wallenda's tragedy-filled life and the close of an acrobatic era.

"It was the way he wanted to go—doing what he loved most," said a circus official who asked not to be named.

Wallenda, carrying a balance pole and wearing beat-up slippers, had walked gracefully as he started across a 300-foot cable strung between the towers of two San Juan resort hotels. Then the wind picked up.

He was still walking, leaning into the wind at a 45-degree angle, when a gust threw him off-balance at the halfway (Continued on page 12)

Three Zoning Changes In Corridor Study Are Backed By Commission

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer

The Greenville Planning and Zoning Commission voted last night to recommend to the City Council that three zoning changes proposed in the Hooker Road-St. Andrews Drive corridor study be implemented.

Action on the corridor study, which was undertaken by the planning staff for board consideration, followed a lengthy discussion on the zoning impact involving both residential and commercial property owners.

Community Development Director John Schofield explained the study area included property from Green Mill Run south to the 264 Bypass and from Seaboard Coast Line Railroad to Memorial Drive.

Current zoning districts in the area include R-15 and R-6 residential designations. Highway Commercial along the bypass and also Office and Institutional zoning, he reported.

The three changes in the zoning scheme recommended by the commission involve: rezoning from Highway Commercial to Office and Institutional of the northern tier of lots on Dexter Street, roughly involving three to three and a half acres; rezoning a "finger" of property east of and adjacent to St. Andrews from the American Legion Building north from R-15 to Office and Institutional, (includes the legion building tract) also roughly three acres; and rezoning some 35 acres known as the Haddock Farm located south of Cambridge Subdivision and running from Hooker Road east to Seaboard Coast Line, from RA-20 to R-6.

Schofield said that the recommended change from RA-20 to R-6 involves both the Wilson Rhodes Electrical firm and Beacon Plano Co. property. Beacon operates under a special use permit while Rhodes operates as a non-conforming use since his business was located on the site prior to the residential-agricultural zoning designation. Schofield recommended that Rhodes also apply for a special use permit.

The CD director explained that some 350 acres are included in the total study area and highway commercial property would be decreased from 70 percent acres to roughly 67 acres. No RA-20 property would be included in the study area under the recommended plan. Office and Institutional designation would increase from 7.5 acres to some 13 acres, while R-6 acreage would increase from 85 to 120 and R-15 land would constitute some 150 acres or 43 percent of the total area.

Several of the residential property owners on St. Andrews voiced concern over the rezoning of property near them from R-15 to Office and Institutional. Owners of commercial acreage also objected to the rezoning of their property from Highway Commercial to Office and Institutional.

Schofield said that the idea of (Continued on page 10)

When you call Hotline, you did not specify just what it was you wished done to the deer hide. Pelletier's Taxidermy in Stantonsburg, 238-2481, will send off deer hides to be tanned or softened to a San Francisco firm. Dorothy Pelletier said it usually takes about six months for the job to be done and costs about $30, without the hair. She said she is getting ready to send off a shipment of hides in the near future.

Rupture Spatters Acid

TANK RUPTURE — Three workmen at the W. S. Clark Fertilizer Co. in Tarboro view the debris left after a 12,000 gallon fiberglass storage tank containing a 54-percent solution of phosphoric acid ruptured about 4 p.m. yesterday. Six employees were spattered with acid when the tank gave way as workers were in the process of transferring the phosphoric acid from a ground-level tank to the larger above-ground facility. Donald R. Taylor, 51 of Tarboro, general manager of the plant, was hospitalized in fair condition yesterday after suffering chemical burns in his eyes. The other five workers were treated at Edgecombe County Hospital and released. Firemen were called to hose down the area, and environmental experts were on hand to help in the cleanup.

Wallcovering Can Set Room's Tone

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures Writer

The delicate subtlety of watercolor painting continues to go to walls, setting the decorating pace for an entire room. More of these wallcoverings, which can give the appearance of hand-decorated walls, were shown at a recent industry exhibit sponsored by the Wallcovering Information Bureau.

More than 100 coverings — paper, fabric-backed vinyls and mylars — were among the pre-pasted, pre-trimmed, strippable and peelable coverings. All exhibitors seemed to have gotten the earth message — browns, olive greens, terra cotta and so on, which are being starred with blues, tans, citrus, apricots, warm grays, among the groups of designs shown.

These colors are found in all categories including Americana, novelty and classic. At the exhibit there were large-scale florals — one in shades of gray and brown on white. Another combined a floral and leaf design by Schumacher in apricot and beige, and there was a leaf spray against a trellis by Thibaut.

Some designers see smaller-scale fabrics as a trend but geometrics have definitely slowed up, says Dennis Maiotti of Lennon, because they aren't really being accepted by American consumers "except where they are being promoted by interior designers in some metropolitan cities."

Beryl Oppenheimer, stylist for Seeman Studios, notes that fashionable clear orange colors have shifted toward the apricot and pink colorings, with a peach cast. She sees the Oriental influence and romantic watercolors as a trend.

Peter Hermann, design director of Imperial, agrees that designers are producing many finely drawn designs and these require subtle tones of colors akin to watercolors.

This indicates, he says, that the mechanical aspects of the industry must be kept up-to-date in order to reproduce the desired effect — soft, restful shades of color.

One of his watercolor leaf-design effects is in shades of green and yellow on white.

Warm earth tones combined with gray-blues and dusty pinks can provide a mellow, almost sensuous atmosphere.

Women may not be too impressed with the watercolor motif until they see it in the perspective of a well decorated room in someone's home.

For example, one large professionally decorated bedroom observed recently was an attention-getter because the wallcovering set the tone for the room, yet didn't dominate it. The large, all-over motif is yellow, white and gray with dabs of brown and a white stylized motif of a dove. The same pattern was in the draperies. A wall-to-wall yellow rug was used in the adjacent dressing room and bath.

The stunning effect was enhanced by a simple white or-gandy spread and flouncy ruffle on the king-size bed.

A yellow chair and a low double bureau were the only other furniture pieces in the room.

CW-I Clubs Hold Joint Meeting In Rocky Mount

The monthly meeting of the Greenville Credit Women was held jointly with the Kinston and Rocky Mount CW-I members at the Carleton House, Rocky Mount.

Mrs. Janet Tyndall, president of the Rocky Mount club, presided at the meeting.

Attending from Greenville were Inda Wingate, Mary Roberson, Janie Hudson, Pearl Hartsell, Doris Price, Martha Mills, Angeline Venters, Carol Hardee, Shirley Pitt, Corrine Beddard, Shirley Price, Linda Westbrook, Louise Stox, Gwen Lee, JoAnn White, sponsor, and Lois Stanley, guest.

Wayne Trull, owner of the Goodyear Tire Center, Rocky Mount and Tarboro, presented the program on "Motivation." He stressed that some of the reasons for everyday ways to motivate were fear, motive, enthusiasm and training.

According to Trull, ambition means nothing unless pressed forward by activity. One must be enthusiastic. This is interest plus energy, a combination that is hard to beat and one without which you cannot motivate people, or more importantly, yourself. To seek quality in your life or work you must have a motive. A motive needs to be a sincere, strongly felt urge to find meaning in life.

Carol Hardee, president of the Greenville club and Jean Smith, president of the Kinston club, brought news regarding meeting dates and also of the organization of a CW-I club in Goldsboro sponsored by the Kinston members.

It was also announced that Gail Ottinger of Kinston and Gracie Couch of Rocky Mount has been submitted as candidates for state office for the coming year.

To do so, gently drop them into a skillet of hot, not boiling, water and simmer until the yolks are cooked through. Drain the yolks and chill. They're good added to a spinach and bacon salad. They also make a delightful garnish, when sieved, for cooked spinach or another green vegetable.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

If I were casting a war, using sports enthusiasts, there's no doubt in my mind that the joggers would be the infantry, the golfers the artillery, the swimmers the submarines, polo players the cavalry and tennis buffs the special services.

For reasons I am about to explore, the skiers would be the Marines.

It's not that they're so elite. It's just that somewhere along the line they've been brainwashed into believing that by putting big sticks on each foot, riding an open chair lift to the top of a big hill and skiing down into the arms of three ambulance attendants, they are having a good time.

They are absolutely fearless. No snow is too deep, no blizzards too paralyzing, no distance too far. The colder it is, the more inaccessible the slopes, the more hazardous the conditions — the bigger the challenge.

My husband is a ski mercenary. He follows the snow. We happen to live in the southwestern part of the United States where the winters are comparatively mild. When storms began to wreak their devastation this winter, my husband and I watched in horror.

"It's a real blizzard," I said quietly.

"It's a 40-inch snow base," he said, "and I've got to go."

"It's not your war," I pleaded. "There is nothing you can do."

As he packed his thermal underwear, his padded mittens, and his stocking cap, I tried to appeal to his sense of survival. "It's the flu season. You have children. Your skin is dry."

No amount of reason would keep him home. He dug out the car chains, his AAA card and was off to the front.

A week later, he returned from the wars... face burned by the sun, a bruise from a chair lift that gave him a nudge, and a service-connected limp.

"What happened?"

"I was forced to do my reverse wishbone."

"What's that?"

"It's where someone skis across your skis, whirls you around and you are skiing down a hill backwards as both of your legs are skiing in opposite directions." "Sounds exciting. Wanna take out the garbag?" "In 50-degree weather? Get hold of yourself!"

Dear Abby

Wife Needs Some Business Knowledge

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1978 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: My husband will be a physician in private practice very soon. He has already hired an experienced bookkeeper-receptionist to work in his office. She will handle appointments, insurance forms, phone calls and accounts.

What should my role be? Should I stay completely away from all business aspects of his work and office, or as his wife should I be familiar with finances, accounts, etc.? And if so, how do I do this without appearing to be nosy or bossy?

I could easily spend a day a week at the office, helping out. How much do you think a wife needs to know about her husband's business?

DOCTOR'S WIFE

DEAR WIFE: I think every wife needs to know enough about her husband's business to make some intelligent decisions in the event of his illness or death. However, some wives choose to stay completely away from their husbands' businesses—and their husbands prefer that they do.

Much depends on how you and your husband feel about it.

DEAR ABBY: I've been going with a married man for three years. I love him very much and I know he loves me.

Two weeks ago his wife found out about us and started raising a lot of Cain. That's when I told him to make a choice. Either move out of his home and in with me, or forget about me altogether.

He decided to stay with his family because "fewer people would be hurt." So I'm the only one who got hurt!

He told me that one day we will be married, so I shouldn't give up on him.

I feel like I got a bum deal after loving him and him alone for three years. I never looked at another man and I had plenty of chances. I wish I could tell him to get lost, but I still love him and can't bear the idea of giving him up.

My friends say, "If you love him—hang in there." Should I?

HURTING

DEAR HURTING: If you "hang in there," you will be hanging alone. A man who has cheated on his wife for three years is no prize, so even though you "love" him, he's poison. Be wise and cut him off as you would a dead limb. It won't be painful, but it will hurt less in the long run. And remember, HE made the choice, you didn't.

Arrest Two Terrorists

MILAN, Italy (AP) — Two extremists were arrested today by police hunting for the kidnapers of former Premier Aldo Moro. One of them tried to swallow a letter with German names on it but police managed to seize part of it.

The Red Brigades, Italy's most feared urban terrorist gang, has claimed responsibility for kidnapping Moro. Police did not say whether the two men arrested today had any connection with the gang or the abduction.

The extremist who tried to swallow the letter was identified as Giuseppe Zambon, 39. Police said he was stopped here while riding in a car with German license plates.

The other extremist, Franco Berardi, 28, was arrested in a friend's Milan apartment. He had returned to Italy secretly after spending most of the past year in Paris, police said.

Berardi was wanted in connection with a string of violent disorders in Bologna a year ago.

The trial of 15 members of the Red Brigades in Turin has been recessed for one week because of Easter. The 15 are charged with organizing an armed band to overthrow the state.

Moro, 61, was kidnapped last week by gunmen who killed his five police bodyguards. The Red Brigades have said Moro would be tried by a "people's court."

Church Schools To File Report

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina's Christian schools intend to file their annual report with the state by April 10, according to A. Craig Phillips, state Superintendent of Public Instruction.

The schools had originally objected to filing the reports, saying they represented state interference in freedom of religion. The reports cover such matters as the certification of teachers, the subjects taught, and health and safety standards in the schools.

But Phillips said Wednesday that the matter was now closed and said both sides "can get on with educating the children of North Carolina in both public and non-public schools."

As Well Begin Now As Later

It came as no extreme surprise, but Health, Education and Welfare Sec. Joseph A. Califano, Jr. announced Wednesday that he was acting to hold up some federal funds for North Carolina higher education.

Califano and HEW are disputing North Carolina's plan to eliminate the last vestiges of segregation among the 16 state universities.

The administrative proceedings, which are expected to be lengthy, could involve the cutoff of all or part of $89 million which the universities receive in federal funds.

Califano also said any new grants for schools that might "contribute to continued segregation" would be delayed.

The Califano pronouncement of a funds cutoff was not unexpected, despite all the Carter administrations assurances that North Carolina would be treated fairly.

The only real question prior to the secretary's noon press conference on Wednesday was whether or not he would delay instituting the administrative actions that could lead to a federal funds cutoff.

Since HEW seems bent on establishing special rules for North Carolina which don't apply to other states, and since the agency can't even determine what it wants to require of our state, a test of its enormous powers was inevitable.

If Califano had delayed action of the federal funds holdup, it would still have been only a matter of time before the action was taken.

North Carolina is going to have to look elsewhere than HEW for reasonable and just treatment and the process may as well begin now as later.

All Of Us In It If Contract Rejected

If the United Mine Workers disapprove the latest contract offer in upcoming voting the nation may as well — and probably should — prepare for a long continuation of the strike.

Winter is ending across the nation now and with careful use of electricity we might be able to get by for an extended time.

This might mean the curtailment of air conditioning, but that is not as essential as heat is in the winter.

The coal miners have been offered a good contract, and one they should accept. Now it seems it is what the miners want against the needs of the nation. That makes all of us a part of the fight if the most recent contract is turned down.

Indict Massive Programs

By Bill Noblitt

RALEIGH — How does government work?

That becomes the overriding question in a voluminous study of North Carolina's Medicaid system. And the nettlesome question expands outside the boundaries of the study on Medicaid to raise similar concerns over governmental bureaucracies generally.

Perhaps inadvertently, the Raleigh accounting firm of Peat, Marwick, Mitchell and Co. hit some very vulnerable nerves in its analysis — nerves regarding attitudes and relationships found in the Medicaid program, within the Department of Human Resources, and by expansion rather widely throughout state government.

The auditors found the program fragmented and disjointed through four main offices in Human Resources, cutting across to other functions in the Department of Administration, operating patchwork patchwork fashion in determining eligibility, split between coverage for drugs and nondrug services, and bogged down in arguments between state employees of one division with those of another, and between state employees and any outside private contractors utilized.

Fraud

There are no clearcut methods or responsibilities for determining who is eligible for the Medicaid program; and the system of providing eligibility numbers and labels to be used by recipients is so disorganized that abuse and fraud is easily conducted; difficult to detect.

In fact, the study details ways in which one individual could qualify for more than one eligibility number and receive several labels, and even once caught could continue use of the labels since no system for quickly halting the abuse exists.

The hard-hitting report now under study by Gov. James B. Hunt, Jr. and Human Resources Secretary Sarah Morrow says this of the fouled up system: "The required improvements are so significant that the question of whether they are implemented is of equal importance as the question of whether claim processing and utilization review are performed in-house or contracted."

That was the question which gave impetus to the study. The recommendation is that the work continue to be contracted because the savings of doing it by state employees would be slight, and experience indicates things would only get more fouled up if the bureaucracy tried to do the job itself.

NOBLITT

"There is not one single individual who has exclusive responsibility for Medicaid processing and who is not also responsible for other areas.

The Medicaid Accounting Section does not report to the person responsible for delivering Medicaid services... It is interesting that many individuals... acknowledge the lack of assignment of responsibility... we find that people often feel this is an advantage because no one can be held accountable for results," the auditors stated.

Control

Outlining overlapping and fragmentation, the study labels "the process... difficult to manage and control" leading to competition for control.

The complex and highly technical report makes a number of recommendations, but the question still comes down — shall the state government try to run eligibility and payment programs, or shall private contractors be hired to do the paperwork?

Gov. Hunt has privately let it be known he will be hard to convince that the state bureaucracy can do the job despite a minor money savings. He views the criticisms of the bureaucratic bungleings pinpointed by the auditors as all too typical of programs within the Department of Human Resources and feels that the first order of business must be trying to straighten that out.

At the core of the situation is existing divisions (health, mental health, social services, youth services, elderly, etc.) which have built domains with their own constituents and ways of doing business while still supposed to function within one department. The infighting and turf protecting has been documented time and again in numerous areas.

Good Odds In The Court

WASHINGTON — In its panicky effort to block tuition tax credits, the Carter administration two weeks ago asked Attorney General Griffin Bell for an opinion on the issue. Last weekend the attorney general, a man who can take a broad hint, dutifully delivered: So far as they may apply to elementary and secondary education, he said, the pending bills are unconstitutional.

If the attorney general's memorandum was not wholly political, it was mightily convenient. The Justice Department, in a pinch, can call upon some very accommodating fellows. But Mr. Bell's views are at most persuasive; they are not binding; and in the matter at hand, they were not even impressive.

It is impossible to say how the Supreme Court, as it presently is constituted, would come down on the question presented under the tuition tax credit proposal. The principal bill would permit a taxpayer to obtain a credit of $250 to $500 against his income tax, by certifying that he had paid tuition for a dependent in some public or private institution. Because the bill would benefit parents who send their children to Catholic parochial schools, or to other sectarian schools, Mr. Bell says the plan is unconstitutional.

Maybe so, but you couldn't prove it by the confusing array of precedents cited in the Justice memorandum. Observers who have tracked this issue since the Everson case of 1947 will tell you that the Court has produced thirty years of inconsistency and contradiction. The trail wanders off in all directions, wherever individual justices have wanted to pursue it. Certain expenditures of public funds are acceptable; other expenditures are not. In the most recent relevant case, an Ohio case decided in June of last year, the Court split six different ways on the forms of aid that might be permissible.

All the cases in this area have been state cases, coming notably from New York, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, Ohio and South Carolina. What the court has held, in general, is that there can be no "entanglement" of church and state. Whenever a state program operates to advance religious education, as such, the program must be condemned.

This approach has led the Court to some baffling distinctions. In last year's Ohio case, for example, the justices ruled that the state could provide textbooks for the Catholic children, but it could not loan them microscopes. When Hughes said a long time ago that the Constitution is what the judges say it is, Hughes knew what he was talking about.

In a 1970 case, the Court tried to define what the First Amendment means. Its purpose "is to insure that no religion be sponsored or favored, none commanded, and none inhibited." In brief, the Constitution "will not tolerate either governmental established religion or governmental interference with religion."

Viewed in this light, what about tuition tax credits? First off, this is a federal proposal, not a state one. The proposed law is rooted in the general congressional power to tax, and in the more specific power "to lay and collect taxes on incomes, from whatever source derived." Under this authority, the Congress has authorized

Talk Is Easy Part

By FRED S. HOFFMAN

AP Military Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Like its predecessors, the Carter administration is finding it was easier to talk about reducing or closing military bases than getting the job done.

Congressional political pressure has forced changes, delays, and even some reversal of proposed base cutbacks.

The latest development came Tuesday when the Navy announced plans to base four warships at Newport, R.I., next fall to improve "the strategic dispersal of the Atlantic fleet."

About four years ago, the Navy moved 39 ships out of Newport to other bases and virtually dismantled the Rhode Island complex in what was described as a necessary economy move.

"There was political interest in putting ships back into the northeast area" one military source said. He said it was "a higher decision than the Navy's," indicating direction came at least from senior Defense Department officials if not from the White House.

An administration civilian official said: "It was political." Similar political pressures — not only from the Northeast but from other regions as well — are reportedly slowing the Pentagon's progress toward a new round of base closings and reduction decisions.

House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., and a 204-member bipartisan coalition of Northeast and Midwest congressmen, have been demanding that the administration halt what they call a steady drain of military spending from their areas in favor of the South and West.

Carter's record on base actions in his first year as president is a mixed one. A month after he traveled to Massachusetts last year, the Pentagon reversed a Ford administration decision to severely cut operations at Fort Devens, Mass.

But Carter went ahead with the Ford administration's plans to close the Frankford arsenal in Philadelphia, despite a campaign promise by Vice President Walter F. Mondale to keep it open.

Senior Pentagon officials had hoped to announce a new round of closings and reductions in

Mr. Stratton apparently was well pleased with Greenville and local persons interested in securing the hospital for Greenville were instructed to prepare a brief for presentation to the Veterans' Administration.

THE INSIDE REPORT

How Terrorists Arrived

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — An abnormal spell of very bad weather, not a planned "lapse" of Israeli security, explains the ability of Palestinian terrorists to get ashore at Maagan Michael kibbutz for their bloody work.

Storms across the eastern Mediterranean not only forced the terrorists to stay at sea in their small rubber boats for almost 72 hours but also explained the startling lack of Israeli naval and air patrols which should have captured or sunk the attackers long before their secret landing.

Intelligence services of several nations are now piecing together the extraordinary success of the terrorist raid that resulted in 36

Israelis and nine Palestinian invaders killed. One purpose: to discover how highly-touted Israeli security forces had been thwarted by the landing force. That would answer whether there was a planned "lapse" of security to lure the terrorists onto the beach — an obviously risky procedure.

The answer: Weather, not any security "lapse," explains the evasion of Israeli patrols.

So bad was the weather that sea passage from the now destroyed Lebanese port of Damur to the planned destination of Tel Aviv took three days — three times as long as estimated.

Heavy winds and low ceiling stopped Israeli naval and air patrols; the winds sank one of the terrorist rubber boats, drowning two Palestinian occupants.

The totally unplanned landing on the coast about 50 miles north of Tel Aviv, after the dangerously rough three days at sea, disrupted the attackers' whole plan (approved by Yasser Arafat, Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO) chief). That plan was to come ashore at the Pan American Hotel in the heart of beachfront Tel Aviv, round up tourists as hostages and demand release of PLO terrorists in Israeli jails.

Israeli sources believe the attackers planned to take a plane from Tel Aviv's Lod airport (using hostages for protection) and fly to Damascus. Instead, after killing 36 Israelis, nine of the terrorists were themselves killed and two were arrested.

The Nervous Americans

The political nervousness of the U.S. government was glaringly evident when it ordered a naval "demonstration" against Soviet penetration into the Horn of Africa an almost incredible 4,000 miles away in the South China Sea.

A naval squadron making a show of force is a venerable form of great power diplomacy. So, to show displeasure with Soviet military intervention in the Ethiopian-Somali war in the Horn, the Security Coordinating Council (SCC) in Washington presented with several naval options. The most pointed was to dispatch the aircraft carrier Kitty Hawk and its accompanying task force to the Indian Ocean adjacent to the Horn.

Voices were promptly raised in horror. The preponderance of opinion at the SCC meeting felt this would be too provocative. Never was Vietnam's numbing effect on U.S. policy so obvious.

Instead, the SCC sent the carrier task force to the South China Sea, far to the east, to demonstrate without provoking. Actually, the Kitty Hawk first went even further east, to Subic Bay naval base in the Philippines. By the time U.S. warships steamed into the South China Sea, Somali forces had effectively bowed

Strength For Today

THE UNSEEN HAND

One day while on a trip in Africa, the great nineteenth century missionary and explorer, David Livingstone, narrowly escaped death. He had become separated from the rest of his party and was stooping to gather some botanical specimens when a huge, black rhinoceros caught sight of him and started to charge. The animal almost certainly would have killed Livingstone, but suddenly, midway in the charge, it stopped, "as if held back by an unseen hand", as Livingstone described the incident later.

In the life of almost every individual some astonishing preservation has at some time occurred. Jesus assures us that even the hairs of our heads are numbered. If this is true, then certainly it is not hard for us to believe that the God who has made us takes care of us until the commission we were sent to earth to perform is finished. There is an unseen hand guiding every one of us through the maze of life's manifold experiences.

Wage-Price Restraints Loom

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — In spite of his denials, some business executives continue to believe that President Jimmy Carter is getting into such a bind that he will have to rely on wage-price restraints.

Promises mean nothing on this issue. They remember that Richard Nixon, who they believed had an even stronger philosophical commitment to free enterprise, suddenly imposed a wage-price freeze.

That move trapped some businesses before they could announce price increases, and now they are less inclined to delay and be trapped by any sudden governmental action.

Actions instead are their guide, and they observe that Carter's actions, and in some instances his inaction, actually may have undermined the antiinflation cause.

The declining dollar, government regulations, farm supports, a higher minimum wage and restrictions on the imports of goods such as steel and shoes are all adding either to business costs or retail prices.

At the same time, progressively higher Social Security taxes, which the administration supports, are making it more difficult for many workers to buy the things they need.

The pressure for new wage increases, therefore, is building relentlessly, and everyone by now realizes business isn't going to absorb higher costs if it can pass them on.

This presents the issue directly to the president, and some critics fear he has so far developed no program for dealing with it. Under pressure, it is said, he might opt for artificial restraints.

The possibility of such an eventuality is even now sending vibrations through the business community, and conceivably could in itself produce even more pressure by encouraging anticipatory price increases.

The very possibility has already contributed to the low level of stock market prices, not just because controls are likely to limit profits but because they are also viewed as counterproductive.

That is, there is a widespread belief that controls add to economic imbalances and therefore lead eventually to more of the situation they were intended to control.

At the moment, inflation has not become much more urgent a problem than it was a few months ago, but the trend is becoming clear: it is likely to become worse as the year progresses.

The Center for the Study of American Business finds that the prevailing opinion among professional forecasters is that the overall inflation rate is expected to be in the range of 6 to 6.5 percent this year.

While that is not too much higher than the 1977 rate of just under 6 percent, the important difference is that the economists think it will be worsening as the year wears on.

Service And Citizenship Kodak Ordered Award To 2 Tar Heels Pay Damages

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Awards for distinguished public service and citizenship have been presented to Albert Coates and to John F. Watlington Jr.

Coates is the founder of the Institute of Government at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. Watlington is a retired chairman and chief executive officer of Wachovia Bank & Trust Co. and Wachovia Corp.

The awards were made Wednesday by the North Carolina Citizens Association, a statewide group of business leaders, at its annual luncheon and dinner here.

Gov. Jim Hunt, in presenting the award to Coates for distinguished public service, quoted Henry P. Brandis Jr., a friend and colleague of Coates: "Albert Coates is an authentic genius, with matchless words upon his tongue, peerless magic in his pen, lofty ideals in his heart and iron purpose in his soul."

Coates, now a professor emeritus at UNC law school, founded the Institute of Government in the late 1920s and directed it until 1962.

Watlington was cited with a distinguished-citizenship award for his 44-year banking career and for his numerous civic activities. He was president of the citizen's association in 1966-67 and is now a member of its executive committee.

The incoming president of the group is Jack Schweppe of Shelby.

Speaking at the dinner meeting Wednesday was Frank Borman, the former astronaut and current president of Eastern Airlines.

Earlier, Borman announced that Eastern would begin flying a new wide-bodied jet, a European Airbus-300, into Raleigh-Durham Airport on May 1. The jet will make one daily flight each way between Raleigh-Durham and Atlanta, he said.

Language Class Offered Free

PORTLAND, Maine (AP) — Last summer, a French-speaking Canadian tried to make a long-distance call from a pay phone. The Portland operator, who did not speak French, tried to tell him to press the coin return.

But instead of saying "press" (press), she kept saying "embrassez."

She was telling him to kiss the coin return.

That was not only inefficient and embarrassing but "not very sanitary," says New England Telephone spokesman John McCatherin.

So, to prepare for this summer's French-Canadian tourists in Maine and New Hampshire, the phone company is offering French to telephone operators.

About 40 operators are taking the company-paid course, which runs two hours a week for 12 weeks.

NEW YORK (AP) — The Eastman Kodak Co. has been ordered to pay almost $113 million in damages to Berkey Photo Inc. for monopolizing the amateur photography market.

A federal jury awarded $37.6 million to Berkey Wednesday, but that amount was automatically tripled under federal anti-trust laws.

Kodak, based in Rochester, N.Y., issued a statement after the verdict saying it "views the award as unwarranted." The photo giant, with sales of $6 billion a year, said it would appeal both the liability and damage findings.

The same jury had found Kodak liable for damages at an earlier trial that ended Jan. 21. Berkey, with sales of $200 million a year, contended Kodak had used its size and technological know-how to restrict competition. It based its claim primarily on four innovations that made existing cameras, equipment and processes obsolete.

These innovations included Sylvania Co.'s Magicube flash and General Electric's improved Flipflash systems both of which Kodak helped develop during joint research with those companies. The others were Kodak's XL movie camera and the 110 Instamatic.

As a result, Berkey claimed, Kodak was able to monopolize the markets and make competitors dependent upon it for new film, color print paper and necessary processing equipment and chemicals.

Berkey contended that Kodak violated antitrust laws by entering into secret agreements with Sylvania and GE and also by failing to disclose in advance its knowledge that the new products were to be introduced.

Mansfield Lobbies

Sen. Paul Hatfield, a conservative Democrat serving out an appointment, reluctantly announced his approval of the first Panama Canal treaty after Mike Mansfield returned to his native state to plug it.

Mansfield, former Senate majority leader and now ambassador to Japan, is probably the most popular politician in Montana's history. Ex-Judge Hatfield, who will be opposed by liberal Rep. Max Baucus for his Senate seat this year, could scarcely ignore Mansfield's wishes and hope to win a Democratic primary.

Both the State Department and Hatfield's office say Mansfield only mentioned the Canal treaties among a variety of questions he discussed in speeches to fellow Montanans. Nevertheless, some conservative Republican Senators are vexed that a U.S. ambassador was brought home to lobby for a piece of pending legislation. They have not raised the matter publicly because of their personal high esteem for Mansfield.

deductions, by way of example, for contributions to churches and church schools. The Court has held that such deductions do not violate the Establishment of Religion clause.

Mr. Bell to the contrary notwithstanding, it is hard to see how a tuition tax credit would "entangle" the federal government in religious education. The Justice memorandum concedes that federal aid in the field of higher education is constitutional; veterans have been attending Catholic colleges for years under the GI Bill of Rights. A distinction between secondary and higher education would appear to be statutory, not constitutional.

Congress can do whatever Congress wants. Obviously, Congress wants to pass a tuition tax credit bill. The votes are in sight to override a Carter veto. My thought is that the House and Senate should assert their independence, approve this useful proposal, and let the issue go to court. Brennan, Marshall and Stevens would oppose it. Burger, White and Rehnquist would approve it. Blackmun, Stewart and Powell might go along. Those are pretty good odds. Pass the bill!

Wood As Industrial Fuel Has Critics In Western Counties

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — It was good enough for the colonists, but is wood feasible as an industrial fuel? Some state officials, including Gov. Jim Hunt, think it is, but the proposal has drawn fire from officials in western counties.

Hunt announced recently a pilot project to demonstrate how low-grade trees can be used as a substitute for dwindling coal, gas and oil supplies — and trees are one thing North Carolina has plenty of.

Larry McGee of the state Forestry Resources Division says wood fuel would solve a host of problems. Besides helping meet energy needs, he said, the use of wood as industrial fuel could reduce unemployment and halt the waste of wood.

The Center for Improving Mountain Living at Western Carolina University has proposed using $66,667 in federal and state grants to finance a study of wood as an alternate energy source.

"As a state, we are dependent on imported energy when we could use the wood we have in our mountain area," said Dr. Raymond Farrell of WCU.

Farrell said if the allocation is approved, a six-month study would be made of the use of wood as a fuel. After that, another grant application would be submitted to fund a program to put the study findings into action. That could mean building a demonstration wood burner on the ECU campus, he said.

But the project was labeled a "pipe dream" by James E. Brannigan, executive director of Region D Council of State Governments at Boone, one of six councils of government being asked to endorse the idea before it is sent to the federal Appalachian Regional Commission for funding.

"It's a kind of a pie-in-the-sky thing," said Ed Ware, in charge of reviewing such proposals for the Region C Council in Rutherfordton. "Our first impression was that someone was just trying to find something to do so they could write a federal project... We don't need to spend over $66,000 to see if wood can be used for fuel. It's been used as fuel for a long time."

Outside the timber industry, there are virtually no North Carolina firms using wood to fire their boilers. But the idea already has caught the eye of a few North Carolina companies interested in cost saving or a reduction in pollution.

One Piedmont company, ordered by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency to spend $1 million on anti-pollution equipment, is considering a switch to wood.

McGee pointed out that wood is cheaper and cleaner than coal, and that the shift from conventional fuels to wood can usually be done with existing boilers.

The statewide acceptance of wood fuel would add 5,000 loggers to the employment rolls, nearly tripling the number of loggers in the state, McGee said.

And if the mass harvesting of waste-wood trees succeeds, he said, it could clear out many areas for planting of more profitable forests.

Holy Week Service Series Will Begin

Holy Week observances will begin tonight at 7:30 for St. Timothy's Episcopal Church.

The church meets at the Seventh Day Adventist Church, 2611 E. 10th St. The Maundy Thursday service is a commemoration of the institution of the Lord's Supper. The Good Friday Liturgy, to be held Friday at 7:30 p.m., is an observance of the Lord's crucifixion.

Saturday at 7:30 p.m., The Great Vigil of Easter will begin with the lighting of the new fire from which is lighted the Paschal Candle. This represents for the faithful, the first light of the risen Lord. By this light, the community of faith will hear the story of creation. This second part of the service is a liturgical representation of Christian peoples' anticipation of the Lord's resurrection.

This third part of the Vigil includes the Rites of Initiation, Baptism, and Confirmation. Following this will be Holy Communion, the Celebration of the Resurrection.

The Rt. Rev. Hunley Agee Elebash, Bishop of the Diocese of Eastern North Carolina, will preside, assisted by the Rev. John R. Price, Vicar of St. Timothy's Episcopal Church, the Rev. L. Patrick Houston Jr., Rector of St. Paul's Episcopal Church, and the Rev. E. Jesse Gaither.

A reception for those confirming and guests will follow the service. Sunday, the Easter Day service will begin at 9:30 a.m. with the traditional procession of flowers for the Flower Cross and the Celebration of the Lord's Supper. The Rev. John R. Price will preside, assisted by the Rev. E. Jesse Gaither.

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Your relationships with co-workers and close ties produce good results under the influence of the Full Moon. But act quickly in any agreements since by so doing you are able to greatly enhance your present activities.

ARIES (March 21 to Apr. 19) Try to better understand those you are dealing with and you have greater mutual success. An attitude of reconciliation is wise with one whose actions have been strange lately.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Incorporate your own ideas into your present work so that it becomes more efficient and profitable. Be more cooperative where co-workers are concerned and get good results.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Plan recreations intelligently and get the maximum of enjoyment from them. Show more affection for mate, loved one and be happy.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) You are able to get the cooperation you need both at home and in civic matters. Entertain important personalities. Show proper respect and get good results.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) You are thinking cleverly about creative plans and can make headway by eliminating problems. Be in tune with today's good aspects.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Study financial dealings and come to right decisions with others. Put new ideas to work that give you a greater abundance in the future.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) You understand better how to go after personal aims and gain them. Attend social functions that can lead to greater happiness and success.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) A good time to go after the data you require in order to make your operations more successful. Show true affection for the ones you love.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Get out to fun places with congenials, but only after work is done. Find better ways of gaining your aims, be they personal or associated with business.

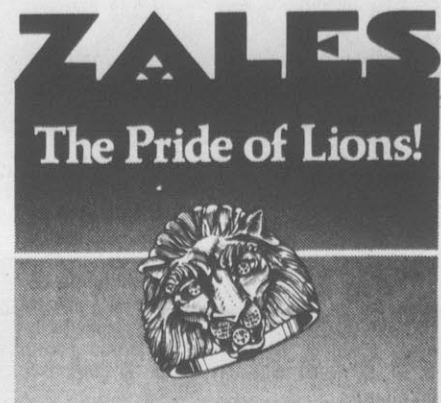

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) You are able to gain the favor of bigwigs who can help to pave your way to greater success now. Plan time for entertainment you like.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Study new interests now that will help you to be more successful and happy. Cultivate persons whose background has been different from your own. Be careful of tricky persons.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Schedule work ahead of you wisely so that you get best results. Use more modern systems. A little talk with co-workers can bring more cooperation.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will scheme all sorts of ways of getting the cooperation of others, whether for new plans or old ones and will get ahead. There can be much success here during the lifetime because the mind is brilliant as well as the ability to do fine and precise work is great.

Coal Strike Expensive To Port

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — The lengthy United Mine Workers coal strike has cost the economy of Hampton Roads at least $37.5 million, says the Virginia Port Authority.

Each ton of coal passing through the port generates $7.14 million for the local economy, said John Hunter, VPA's director of research.

"We've lost 5.25 million tons of coal which would have been shipped through here," he said.

Southwest Virginia's coalfields were quiet Wednesday, as the time for voting on the latest contract offer that would end the strike approached. The miners will vote Friday.

More than 700 Chessie System employees have been laid off in Newport News because of the coal strike, and another 290 employees of Norfolk & Western Railway have been laid off in Norfolk in the last three months. Both railroads operate at Hampton Roads coal piers.

Hardest hit has been the Chessie System coal piers in Newport News, which normally load about a million tons of coal per month.

"So far in March, we've dumped a total of 3,000 tons, all aboard a barge," said Bob Burroughs, a Chessie System assistant vice president in Newport News.

Burroughs said the Chessie pier normally loads about 30 ships per month but has loaded no ships so far this month.

Local Student In New Chapter

CHAPEL HILL — Beta Alpha Psi, national scholastic and professional accounting fraternity, installed a new chapter at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill Saturday, March 18.

Sixty-three UNC-CH accounting majors, six doctoral students and two faculty members were initiated as charter members.

Susan Anne Pacenta, a junior, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clifford T. Pacenta of Greenville, was chosen as one of the new members.

N&W spokesmen say the export situation is somewhat better at their company's pier in Norfolk, but it is far below normal.

No coal has been loaded at the pier since last Friday, when 75 railroad coal cars were dumped, said N&W spokesman William Martin.

"There are 2,244 coal cars now in Norfolk or on their way to Norfolk," Martin said. "This time last year there were 11,433 cars in the pipeline."

There has been a steady decrease in coal loading at Hampton Roads since the strike began Dec. 6.

The flow of non-union coal to the port also was disrupted by "roving UMW pickets and bad weather," Martin said, but added that more non-union coal has begun moving.

"In the last three or four weeks, we've seen the number of mines being worked per day increase from 35 or 40 to about 60," he said.

The Norfolk & Western system serves about 220 mines in four states.

Burroughs said the supply of non-union coal reaching the Chessie System at Newport News "has completely dried up. All of it is going to utilities."

Coal shippers predicted a

Rotten Sneaker Contest 'Close'

MONTPELIER, Vt. (AP) — With bare toes protruding from a pair of tattered tennis shoes, Doug Brigham, 17, of Montpelier trudged to victory in the city's third annual "Rotten Sneakers" contest.

Brigham was one of 23 Montpelier young people who strode across the stage at the city's recreation center Tuesday, sporting the most threadbare sneakers their closets had to offer.

The judges said the competition was especially close this year. "The scores are all coming up ties," one contest official said. "They're all horrible."

Brigham walked away with the first prize — a brand new pair of sneakers.

surge in coal shipments once the strike ends, but world economics probably will keep coal loadings far below the levels of the early 1970s, when more than 40 million tons a year were loaded in Newport News and Norfolk.

Demand for steel worldwide is down, thereby decreasing the demand for coal, a vital ingredient in steel production.

How's The Weather?

WEATHER FORECAST—Showers and rain are forecast today from the Central Gulf to the Midwest and Ohio Valley. Rain and showers are also indicated for the Northwest. Colder weather is expected in the Midwest and New England. Most of the country will be seasonably cool. (AP Laserphoto Map)

Enjoy the sunshine while you can. The National Weather Service observed today, because it will be cloudy and cooler Friday with high temperatures generally in the 50s. The southeast portion may warm to the 60s. Skies were expected to be mostly sunny today over all of North Carolina with the exception of the mountains where a new weather front was approaching. A cold area of high pressure will push the front on toward the coast tonight while a low pressure area will be developing in the Gulf of Mexico. Depending on the speed of movement of the front out of the Gulf, rain could begin in the mountains sometime Friday or Friday night. High temperatures today were expected to range generally in the mid to low 70s with some 60s in the mountains and along the Outer Banks. Some cool readings were noted in this morning's lows as Asheville dropped to 33, Rocky Mount 34, Elizabeth City 35, Greensboro 37 and Raleigh 38.

Stolen Truck Is Found; Not Sure It's Worth It

WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP) — Charles Dove's truck was stolen three months ago. Since then, it has turned up in Georgia, but Dove is not sure he wants it back.

The whole affair, it seems, has already caused him enough problems.

Dove said he was driving through Columbia, S.C., last Dec. 13 on his way to a construction job. Riding with him was another man heading for the same job.

Since it was a cold day, Dove left the motor running when he stopped at a roadside rest. When he got out of the truck, the other man slid behind the steering wheel and sped away, leaving Dove stranded.

Understandably, Dove was angry. He was so angry, he said, that when a deputy sheriff responded to his theft report, Dove was arrested for disorderly conduct and fined — but not before he made it clear his truck had been stolen.

Three days later, the truck was found abandoned in Columbus, Ga. Since it was double-parked, police had it towed away and locked in a warehouse.

Dove, who lives in Wilmington, didn't find that out until a week ago. His wife, Peggy, in whose name the truck was registered, received a registered letter from Muscogee Wrecker Service in Columbus. The letter said the truck would be sold at public auction April 1 unless the Doves came up with a $246 storage fee.

That didn't seem fair to Dove, since the truck had been stolen. But the problem, he found out, was that authorities in Columbia said they had no record that Dove reported the theft.

Dove said he could hardly forget what happened when he reported the crime, and he doesn't understand how the Columbia deputies could forget, either.

"I'm tired of being called a liar," he said.

Dove said he is also tired of spending money to try and get his truck back. He said he and his wife spent $200 on long-distance phone calls trying to find out why no one could locate their truck. And he said Mrs. Dove traveled to Columbia three times to find out why there apparently was no investigation.

Dove will now have to go to Columbus and pay another lump of money to keep the truck — worth an estimated $4,500 — from being auctioned off. But after everything he has been through, he said, he's not sure it's worth it.

Nat'l Hospital Standards Set
WASHINGTON (AP) — Claiming there are too many hospital beds in the country, the government has established the first national hospital standards.

The standards, which go into effect Friday and give local areas five years to bring themselves into line, represent a significant retreat from "mandatory" rules that the Department of Health, Education and Welfare proposed last September. The HEW rules say there should be fewer than four general hospital beds per 1,000 population in a community, with an 80 percent occupancy rate. There are now about 4.4 beds per 1,000 nationwide and a 75 percent occupancy rate.

Offer Free Boat Check

A three-day day information period and a scheduled time for courtesy boat inspections will be provided free to the public by the Coast Guard Auxiliary, Greenville Flotilla, assisted by the Coast Guard Boating Safety Detachment from Group Fort Macon.

The event will be on Thursday, Friday, and Saturday, March 30, 31, and April 1 in conjunction with the Boat Show being held on those dates at the Raynor, Forbes and Clark Warehouse on U.S. 264 across from the Moose Lodge.

Both groups will have representatives on hand to answer questions that boaters may have relative to any safety practices, legal requirements, equipment, and other topics.

Courtesy examinations will be given by qualified examiners; and from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday, courtesy examinations will be given to trailerable boats on Maxwell Street across from the warehouse.

Jim Hecker is Flotilla Commander of Greenville Flotilla 16-05 of the U.S. Coast Guard Auxiliary.

Planning-Zoning...

the Office and Institutional zoning was to provide a buffer between high density and low density uses.

Commissioner Clarence Tugwell asserted that in many cases, land that is zoned for Office and Institutional use is more profitable to develop than Highway Commercial. Tugwell said he saw "no real problem" with the O & I zoning.

Attorney Fred Mattox, who said he represented two of the Hooker Road property owners, proposed that a strip of land from the Rhodes and Beacon Piano property along Hooker Road be rezoned Highway Commercial to a depth of 220 feet and that land lying along the northern boundary of Carolina Telephone property be rezoned R-6 or Office and Institutional. Property south of the telephone acreage could be zoned, he said, for commercial use.

Mattox contended that the frontage in question on Hooker Road is no longer desirable for residential use and that property owners who have non-residential acreage have the right to utilize their land.

Schofield said that he felt Mattox's alternative plan decreased the ability of the Hooker Road-Bypass intersection to handle traffic.

The CD director suggested that if Hooker Road is zoned for commercial use from Rhodes' property down to Manchester Street, the same development problem that now exists on the bypass will arise.

Commissioner Wes Hankins said that from a planning standpoint, he did not see any alternative to the O & I buffer. Saying that he was basically in favor of the rezoning concept as proposed. Hankins noted that he was distressed to see Highway Commercial zoning northward along Hooker Road.

The city board, after discussing at length the request of the Community Development Department to rezone the eastern portion of the South Evans Redevelopment Project from Downtown Commercial Fringe to R-6, voted to table the matter for consideration until the April meeting.

Schofield explained that the proposal involved a rezoning concept and had nothing to do with the acquisition of property or relocation of anyone in the neighborhood.

The majority of the area is now zoned Downtown Commercial Fringe, he said, which allows nearly every use but a single-family house. Major repairs or additions could not be undertaken on houses in the CDF area since they are considered non-conforming uses. Schofield noted.

He said that a strip of CDF zoning would remain on Evans Street up to the middle of the block between 12th and 13th Streets.

H. P. Streeper of 610 E. Tenth Street said he did not understand why the city wanted to force all of the property owners to accept the R-6 rezoning. Some of the property can not be rehabilitated, he asserted.

Schofield said that the city felt it was important to go ahead and get the inspection personnel in the area so that rehabilitation loans and grants can be sought. He noted that the planning staff felt that if the city waited to rezone the area it might be too late to save some of the structures.

One property owner said that if she planned to relocate from the area, there was no way that she could sell her property without taking a loss if it was rezoned from CDF to R-6.

The matter will be placed on the agenda for next month's meeting and the City Council will also conduct hearings on the rezoning, it was pointed out.

Other business on the city agenda included:

— Recommendation to the Council that the request of Collice C. Moore for rezoning 8.7 acres at the northwest corner of Stantonsburg Road and Memorial Drive from Medical Arts to Shopping Center be approved.

— Approval of the preliminary plat on Woods Subdivision located south of Green Mill Run, west of Hooker Road and north of Orchard Hill Subdivision (9.6 acres involved with zoning designated for R-6 usage, recreation requirement waived due to close proximity to Evans Park and size of development).

— Tabling of consideration of Wilson Acres multi-family dwelling complex located east of Elm Street, south of First Street and north of Third Street, in order to seek a ruling from the city attorney as to how the development plan should be handled (questions arose as to whether the development constituted a subdivision); and — Approval of the sediment control plan for Section I of Orchard Hill Subdivision located off Hooker Road.

The Joint City-County Planning and Zoning Commission, after discussing a request by Leroy Cherry and Associates for rezoning 21.6 acres at the intersection of Norfolk & Southern Railroad and 14th Street Extension from R-9 and RA-20 to R-6 and R-9, automatically tabled action until the next meeting.

Cherry, it was explained, plans to build duplex units on the property in a phased development. The units would be developed for sale. Cherry reported.

Two entrances to the property would be provided, according to the proposal, including one south of the Red Banks Road intersection on 14th and a second entrance nearer the railroad. Streets in the development would be dedicated to the city.

Melvin Buck of 1411 Red

Banks Road cited the traffic situation in the area and he asked the commission members to consider the impact the development would have on the area in possibly opening up further development.

Commission member Mrs. Ruth Trevathan said that she was concerned about the two streets opening onto 14th within a short distance.

The board also voted to recommend to the City Council that the annexation petition from Greenville Utilities for an operations center site and the Floyd Nichols property adjoining the city limits on Mumford Road be approved.

The GUC property contains some 22 acres while the Nichols tract involves roughly two acres. The Nichols property would be brought into the city on a voluntary annexation basis, it was noted.

The property, it was explained, is located north of Mumford Road, east of Meadowbrook Subdivision and south of Parker's Creek.

Approval was given to the final plat of Carriage House Apartments, Section III, located east of NC 43 and west of Oakmont Square Apartments.

City Engineer Charlie Holliday said that the property is zoned R-6 and is located outside the corporate limits. The development abuts the existing section of Carriage House Apartments.

Commissioners voted to consider the preliminary and final plats of the Elks Lodge proposed for development just back of Dr. W. S. Dawson's property off E. 14th Street.

It was explained that a special use permit had been secured in order to build the new lodge but the developers were not aware that preliminary and final plats were necessary in order to obtain a building permit. The special use permit has expired.

The commission voted to waive the procedure of not accepting preliminary and final plats at the same meeting and approved the plats with the stipulation that an access street be built prior to occupancy.

Chairman Lyman Ormond Jr. read a copy of a memorandum from City Manager Jim Caldwell to the various department heads noting the establishment of a Subdivision Review Committee composed of department heads and city personnel. The committee will meet monthly and review subdivision plats, it was noted, and then offer recommendations for consideration to the planning board.

Police List 3 Collisions

Three traffic collisions investigated by Greenville Police yesterday resulted in an estimated $3,235 property damage.

Heaviest damage resulted from a 10:10 a.m. mishap on Greenville Boulevard, 600 feet West of the Memorial Drive intersection involving trucks driven by Larry Harold Osborne of 206 Greenwood Dr. and Floyd Edward Stocks of Route 5, Greenville, and a car driven by Joe Ann Todd of Wendell.

Officers, who charged both Stocks and Miss Todd with failing to reduce their speed enough to avoid an accident, estimated damage at $2,000 to the Todd car, $350 to the Stocks truck and $200 to the Osborne truck.

An 8 a.m. mishap on 11th St. near the Anderson Street intersection involved cars driven by Cynthia Mills Williams of 120 Greene Mill Run Apts., and Ronald Joseph Mills of 10D Courtney Sq.

Damage from the mishap was set at $350 to the Williams car and $25 to the Mills vehicle.

A 2 p.m. collision on Pitt Street, 20 feet North of the 11th Street intersection involved a car driven by Ella Mae Shelton of 511 West 15th St. and a city-owned motor grader driven by Raymond Rufus Whitley of Route 8, Greenville.

Police estimated damage to the car at $300 and damage to the motor grader at $10.

Hunting Fraud

CLEVELAND (AP) — Cuyahoga County officials are comparing welfare rolls with Social Security reports on individual earnings in a search for potential welfare fraud, county commissioners announced.

The investigation will involve 8,000 recipients of Aid to Dependent Children who are also listed on Social Security records in an attempt to verify that the income reported by the relief recipient is correct, the commissioners said Wednesday. The commissioners said most welfare recipients who work are not involved in welfare fraud but that there must be tighter controls on the growing program.

REJECT APPEALS

KARACHI, Pakistan (AP) — The Bar Associations in all four provinces of Pakistan adopted resolutions rejecting foreign appeals for clemency for former Prime Minister Zulfikar Ali Bhutto as uncalled-for interference in the country's judicial process and judicial institutions.

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices showed only small changes today in a fairly quiet pre-holiday session. The noon Dow Jones average of 30 industrials stood at 757.54, unchanged from Wednesday's close.

Gainers held a slight lead over losers among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues. In the economic news, G. William Miller, the new chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, indicated to reporters that the Fed would not be hesitant to tighten credit if the recent acceleration of inflation persists.

Analysts said that evoked the prospect of renewed upward pressure on short term interest rates, which might attract money out of stocks and into interest-bearing investments such as Treasury bills.

But they also said some investors appeared to be pleased with the heavy emphasis Miller put on the importance of restraining inflation. Norton Simon ranked among the volume leaders on the NYSE, up 1/4 at 18 1/2. A 145,700-share block traded at 18.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks slipped .05 to 49.84. On the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up .18 at 127.54.

Volume on the Big Board came to 8.44 million shares at noon, down from 8.95 million at the same point on Wednesday. The markets will be closed on Good Friday.

Wallenda...

mark. He was 120 feet above ground.

"The balance pole started going up and down, up and down, like a see-saw," said Gary Williams, a San Juan newspaper photographer who saw the accident.

Wallenda made a desperate attempt to save himself.

"He grabbed the wire with his right hand as he was sitting briefly on the wire. Only his rear end and his hand were on the wire. His feet were in mid air," Williams recounted.

"And then he fell. He just couldn't hold it."

Wallenda was still clutching the pole when his body struck a taxi, bounced and landed on the pavement.

People fainted and collapsed. Screams of "Oh my God, oh my God" filled the air.

Police rushed Wallenda to nearby Presbyterian Hospital. The aerialist was dead on arrival at 10:20 a.m.

"Our life is show business," the 58-year big top veteran and founder of the Great Wallendas said in 1972 after the fourth member of his family perished in a high-wire accident.

"Without show business we don't survive, and we have to exist."

And so the circus here opened at exactly 4 p.m.

"This afternoon all that is missing is the physical presence of Karl Wallenda," the master-of-ceremonies said softly into his microphone. The rest of the Great Wallendas troupe — granddaughter Rieta, 17, and two nephews — were there to carry on the legacy as tears and grief were pushed aside as the circus came alive with a crash of cymbals.

Funeral services were tentatively planned for Saturday or Sunday in Sarasota, Fla., the city that was both home and headquarters for the Wallendas.

Urban 'Marshal Plan' Urged

Jordan told an Urban League dinner Wednesday that the plan must provide more money to the cities, or it will amount to an admission that urban areas will be left to die.

Chief of Police Glenn Cannon also participated in the program.

East Carolina Nips Clemson By 4-3

By WOODY PEELE Reflector Sports Editor When it was all over, there was the air of whether it had not been poetic justice when Clemson's Tony Masone dropped a fly ball that led to a 4-3 East Carolina victory over the Tigers last night.

after Pirate pitcher Mickey Britt claimed he struck batter Masone out. The Bucs missed two home runs, one a grand-slam, by scant inches, and then finally got the winning run when a routine fly ball was dropped.

were called balls by the plate umpire. Britt hailed the win as his biggest at East Carolina. "We battled hard; we're playing good ball now," he said. "Clemson is the best hitting team I've seen this year, and among the top three I've seen since I've been here. They are a good club, the kind you like to see."

standing team effort." Little said his only concern was whether Britt could get the distance and get his breaking ball over the plate. "We knew that they were a good-hitting team, and we knew that Britt had to get his stuff over. When he gets behind he's not as good a pitcher."

He said. "We beat an outstanding team, one of the best in the country. But it will take a fine effort to sweep them." East Carolina charged into the lead as the Pirates opened the game by seeing Clemson's starter leave the mound with arm problems just five pitches into the contest. Leadoff batter Eddie Gates had worked up a full count when Tom Qualters was forced to leave. Gates then greeted newcomer Paul Schmitt with a blast over the fence in left for a 1-0 lead.

Clemson tied it up with one in the second. Pete Peltz led off with a single and was balked to second. He scored on Masone's two-out double.

scoring Hardison with the tying run. Clemson again threatened in the seventh and eighth before the Pirates got their last break in the bottom of the eighth. Styons again missed a homer as his one-out blast was foul by about five feet. Bobby Supel then singled up the middle. All seemed lost when Moyer lifted a routine fly to right, but Masone dropped the ball, and Supel, off with the crack of the bat, had no trouble reaching the plate in time to score the go-ahead run, making it 4-3.

Final out on a high foul fly. The two teams meet again at 3 p.m. today. Scoreboard table with columns for team, AB, R, H, E, and Totals.

Foster Wants To Set Trend

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Duke's performance against Villanova last weekend was one of its most impressive this season, and coach Bill Foster hopes that "sets a trend" that will continue Saturday when the Blue Devils meet Notre Dame.

"Our game against Villanova was such a fine all-around game. I hope it sets a trend," Foster said Wednesday. "I feel better about our team now."

Foster's three freshmen recruits feel pretty good, too, about the Blue Devils' trip to St. Louis for the NCAA's final two rounds. They didn't expect to go so far so fast, they say, but they aren't exactly surprised, either.

Eugene Banks, the muscular 6-foot-7 forward who won rookie-of-the-year honors in the Atlantic Coast Conference, said he "felt we'd win over 20 games, but I didn't expect we'd go this far. But let's just say I'm thankful that we did."

"I knew we could do it next year," added Kenny Dennard, the other half of Duke's freshman front-court duo. "But this year, it all came together early."

Reserve Jim Suddath chimed in. "I knew we had so much potential, but I didn't think it would come together so soon. By the middle of the season, though, I began to say hey, hey, hey..."

It's been that kind of year for the Blue Devils. Coming off a last-place ACC finish, they were not even considered a threat for the conference title at the season's outset. But they are now 20-6 and ranked seventh in the nation.

Foster, who has called the Duke comeback "the greatest thing that ever happened to me as coach," was humility personified at a press gathering

Wednesday.

"We are very honored to be in the final four teams in the nation," he said. "Not many teams ever get this far. There are a number of excellent basketball teams sitting at home. We're just very fortunate to be where we are."

Against the sixth-ranked Irish, 23-6, three Duke starters will still be nursing ankle injuries — Dennard and guards Jim Spanarkel and John Harrell. Foster said Dennard and Spanarkel are seeing only limited practice this week.

The Blue Devils will leave for St. Louis at 5:45 p.m. today and will practice Friday at the Checkerdome. All 1,200 tickets allotted to the school for Saturday's 2:15 p.m. (EST) game and Monday night's final round have been sold.

Bullard In Hall

HICKORY — Harold C. Bullard of Charlotte, a former assistant football coach at East Carolina will be installed as a member of the Lenoir Rhyne Sports Hall of Fame.

Induction ceremonies will be held on the Lenoir Rhyne campus on April 4.

Bullard, who was a football great at Lenoir Rhyne, played on four straight Carolinas Conference championship teams, losing only one game during that time. As a fullback, the Rockingham native was all-conference for three years and All-America for two.

He still holds school records for most points (30) and most touchdowns (five) in a single game, and the career mark for most touchdowns (43).

After receiving his bachelor's degree at Lenoir Rhyne, he received his master's from East Carolina, where he served on the football staff for six years under Clarence Stasavich, who coached him at Lenoir Rhyne.

He is currently general manager of the Charlotte general office of New York Life Insurance Co.

Cubs Take Victory

ROCKY MOUNT — The Rose "B" baseball team gained a 7-2 victory over Rocky Mount yesterday.

Joey Mattheis was the winning pitcher, allowing only three hits. Mattheis also led the Rose hitting with three, while Skip Topping had two, including a double and Skip Hill added two more.

Rose's Rampant Cubs are now 2-0 on the year, and have a return date at Greenville with Rocky Mount on April 5.

Dave Schultz, then with the Philadelphia Flyers, spent a record 472 minutes in the penalty box in the 1974-75 season.

Tiger Netters Are Improved

By JIM KYLE
Reflector Sports Writer

Only three games into the season, Williamston's young tennis team has already won two more matches than the squad won all last year.

The Tigers posted a 2-1 record over their first three encounters, and coming off an 0-14 season, those victories were pretty nice, according to coach Andrew Mason. "Things look pretty promising. We've got some experience this year. Last year they were all sophomores."

Those sophomores are now juniors with a year of varsity play behind them and three more sophomores have moved in to round out the top six for the Tigers. The result is a young team which, although winning some matches now, still has its future ahead of it.

Sophomore Gil Williams is the number one seed on the Williamston team. "He's playing in a tough spot, but he's just as good as anybody I've got," Mason said. "I might as well play him there for him to gain experience."

At the number two position is junior Duke Douglas. He attended a tennis camp over the summer and has shown a lot of improvement, according to Mason. The coach said he "looks real well."

Another promising player is junior Tim Rogers at number three. Sophomore Joey Gardner is the fourth man. He only played exhibition last year, but Mason said, "He broke into the lineup this year and looks real well."

At number five is sophomore Ben Selby, who shows "a lot of talent." Rounding out the top six is Melvin Mason, a junior, who is "not as strong as I thought, but has been winning at number six."

In addition to the singles game, Mason said his team has a strong doubles game.

Mason hasn't seen the other teams in the Northeastern Conference yet this season, but feels Tarboro is the top team, followed by Roanoke Rapids and Washington.

"We might come in fourth, with a little luck," Mason said, "but those top three are hard to beat."

"I think we'll be a contender next year, if I can keep the guys I've got. There's got to be some improvement."

Injuries Could Prove Problem In Finals

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Duke Coach Bill Foster had reason to hesitate when asked about the condition of his young Blue Devils basketball team.

"At a press conference a week ago, when we were asked the same question, I made the comment that I hoped nothing happened for the rest of the week," Foster said Wednesday. "That afternoon, Jim Spanarkel overthrew his ankle rather severely and saw limited service the rest of the week prior to his games against Penn and Villanova. So, I hope nothing happens to any of us the rest of this week."

Foster's comments were relayed during a telephone news conference among coaches whose teams are participating in semifinals Saturday and finals next Monday of the NCAA tournament at the Checkerdome.

And the veteran coach's team, according to reports, fared the worst during the climb of the final four from an original tournament field of 32.

"We have two people playing with bad ankles," said Foster, who identified the other as sophomore guard John Harrell. "They'll be heavily taped. We'll be somewhat on a limited basis for practice the rest of the week and hope that we'll go in to the Saturday game at full strength."

At Notre Dame, the Saturday of Duke, Irish Coach Digger Phelps listed starting guard Don "Duck" Williams and reserve backcourt man Jeff Carpenter as casualties.

"Duck Williams was hurt against Utah when he got a contusion of the thigh. He wasn't, I don't think, 100 percent against DePaul and he did not practice Monday," said Phelps.

"He worked out yesterday for the first time, and I think by game time Saturday he'll be ready. Jeff Carpenter yesterday pulled a muscle in his calf."

Spinks To Call Shots

BOSTON (AP) — Heavy-weight boxer Leon Spinks, the ex-marine, is taking marching orders from no one — even if it costs him a version of his world title.

"I decide who I will fight ... and when I'm going to fight," Spinks said Wednesday, his first comments since the World Boxing Council stripped his championship last week for refusing to defend it against Ken Norton.

The WBC gave the title to Norton. The competing World Boxing Association still recognizes Spinks for his Feb. 15 split decision over Muhammad Ali.

which limited him in practice. Above that, it's just the normal bumps and bruises."

Arkansas Coach Eddie Sutton, who is readying his fifth-ranked Razorbacks to challenge No. 1 Kentucky on Saturday, said star guard Sidney Moncreif should be ready but that reserve Chris Bennett is "touch and go" with a thigh injury.

"I think we're in pretty good shape," Sutton said. "Sidney Moncreif took the worst fall I've ever seen on a basketball court against UCLA and he did receive a concussion but went on and played Saturday. He's had no problem. I think by Saturday afternoon he'll be at full speed."

Kentucky's Joe Hall reported no significant injuries among his Wildcats, who face Arkansas in Saturday's opening semifinal contest.

Ewes Take 4th Win

GOLDSBORO — Greene Central's girls' basketball team rolled to another victory yesterday, romping past Goldsboro, 20-4.

Greene Central pushed over all they needed in the first inning, scoring seven runs. They added three in the third, including a solo homer by Gail Jones.

Eight more crossed in the fourth, with Carol Yelverton and Iris Pridden each hitting two-run homers. The other two came in the seventh as Pridden connected for a two-run round-tripper again.

The Goldsboro team pushed over two each in the second and third.

Pridden led the Ewe hitting with three, while Alberta Sutton had two, including a double.

Lynn Shackelford was the winning pitcher, allowing only three hits.

Now 4-0, the Ewes travel to Saratoga on next Thursday.

NCAA Tournament Tickets Are Hottest Thing In The Market

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Newspapers this week have been replete with classified advertisements for tickets to the National Collegiate Athletic Association tournament in St. Louis.

Some have been plaintive, some desperate, others smug. Most were from sellers, but there were several from fans wanting to buy. One ad offered four tickets to the Kentucky Derby in trade.

Everyone, it seemed, wanted to meet in St. Louis, where Kentucky, Arkansas, Duke and Notre Dame will battle for the national basketball championship.

Wednesday's Lexington Herald and Lexington Leader featured several such ads:

"Wanted — NCAA Tickets. Impoverished recent UK grad needs one or two reasonably priced NCAA tickets. Desperate... Ask for Jim." "For Sale — 4 NCAA finals tickets... Make offer."

The second ad carried an Indiana phone number. Others were placed from Missouri, Wisconsin, Tennessee, Virginia and two from Georgia.

A call to a Lexington listing turned up a man who had succeeded in rounding up eight sets of the coveted tickets, which included tickets for both semifinal and final rounds in St. Louis. He said he bought four from a man in St. Louis and the rest from the manager of a J.C. Penney Co. store in Milwaukee — "He sent 'em COD and I got 'em this morning" — at a total cost of $400.

"If I'd had 20 sets, I could have sold 'em," he said in an interview. "In fact, the darned phone's been ringing off the hook all day. It's unbelievable. People have got more money than they've got sense."

The man said it was his first experience with ticket scalping, which is illegal in Kentucky. "I first started out last week, right after Dayton (where Kentucky defeated Michigan State in the Midwest Regional). I had been looking for two weeks. I called one guy in Atlanta last week and he said he had some, but it would take $400 a ticket to get 'em away," the man said.

He finally scored after running newspaper ads Saturday and Sunday in St. Louis and Saturday through Wednesday in Milwaukee.

Despite the hassle, did the $400 profit make it worthwhile? "Well, no," he said. "I've got about $100 in collect phone calls.

Painter Named HICKORY, N.C. (AP) — Hanley Painter, athletic director of Lenoir Rhyne College and chairman of NAIA District 26, has been named president of the NAIA Athletic Directors Association for one year.

He served as first vice president of the association last year. Painter, a Lenoir Rhyne alumnus, has served as athletic director at Lenoir Rhyne since 1962 and has been on the athletic staff for 24 years.

NAIA District 26 includes 21 North Carolina colleges.

Ford Out Of Game

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Anthony Murray of Alabama has been named to replace North Carolina's Phil Ford on the East squad for Sunday's East-West all-star collegiate basketball game, sponsors said Wednesday.

Ford's withdrawal from the contest at Kiel Auditorium was revealed as due to a conflict. The game, sponsored by the National Association of Basketball Coaches, is being held in conjunction with NCAA semifinals and finals Saturday and Monday at the Checkerdome.

No Problems For Jabbar As He Leads Lakers To Victory

By The Associated Press

Kareem Abdul-Jabbar has been having some problems lately, but you couldn't tell it from his performance against the Houston Rockets Wednesday night.

All the big guy did was score 31 points, grab 14 rebounds and block eight shots to lead the Los Angeles Lakers to a 124-106 National Basketball Association victory.

"I haven't been hitting my jump shot recently, but I was tonight and it complemented my other shots," said Jabbar, who is just 24 points shy of the 20,000 mark, a feat accomplished by only eight other players.

Kings 120, 76ers 108

Bill Robinsone, Tom Burleson and Scott Wedman accounted for 37 points in the third quarter. Philadelphia was ahead 59-58 at the half but Robinsone, Burleson and Wedman outscored the 76ers 37-19 in the third period. Ron Boone led Kansas City with 24 points and George McGinnis had 28 for the losers. Philly lost Julius Erving early in the first quarter with what appeared to be a minor knee injury.

Celtics 105, Cavaliers 99

Sidney Wicks' three-point play with 1:04 left helped boost Boston to a comeback triumph. The Celtics, who trailed 89-81 with under six minutes left, tied the score at 97 on a jumper by Dave Bing, who led all scorers with 24 points, including nine long-range shots in the second half. Dave Cowens hit Wicks with an alley-oop pass and Wicks dunked the shot and added a free throw for a 100-97 lead.

Bullets 124, Jazz 109

Kevin Grevey scored 30 points, Bob Dandridge 23 and Mitch Kupchak 22 to lead Washington. The Bullets were ahead by as many as 18 points in the second quarter but the lead was down to three at the start of the fourth period. Kupchak scored 17 of the Bullets' 27 points in a nine-minute stretch as Washington pulled away in the final quarter.

Nets 105, Bulls 99

Rookie Bernard King scored 33 points and grabbed a career-high 18 rebounds for New Jersey. John Williamson added 23 points as the Nets posted their fourth victory in the last five games. The loss dropped Chi-

SuperSonics 97, Braves 92

Gus Williams, who scored 17 of his 25 points in the first half, got the Sonics untracked in the second quarter, scoring 11 points as they turned a 30-18 first-quarter deficit into a 55-48 halftime lead. The Braves tied the score at 61 in the third period and led 83-78 early in the fourth quarter but ran off nine straight points to take the lead. Randy Smith paced Buffalo with 31 points.

A Former Presidential Yacht At Wilmington

WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP) — Its passengers have included eight chief executives, but the former presidential yacht Sequoia now sits inconspicuously in a Wilmington dry-dock, awaiting repairs.

Presidents from Herbert Hoover to Gerald Ford sailed on the 105-foot yacht, which was built in 1925 and purchased by the government in 1931. But President Carter decided to sell the yacht as an austerity move soon after taking office.

Its new owner, Norman Pulliam of Spartanburg, S.C., values the 110-ton vessel at around $300,000. But he says its historical value is much greater.

"The ship should have been made a national shrine," he said. "It is an historic site like Mt. Rushmore."

Pulliam takes obvious pride in owning a boat on which important trade agreements were signed. On one occasion, a conference on board may have prevented a nuclear war between Russia and China, he said.

Lyndon Johnson "liked to take his cruises out on the yacht," Pulliam added, while Richard Nixon used it as a hideaway and "told his family he would resign the presidency while they were all on the Sequoia."

For the next month or so, the Sequoia will be undergoing routine maintenance at North Carolina Shipbuilding and Drydock on the Cape Fear River. Later, it is due to go on display at a marina in Myrtle Beach, S.C.

The ship's current captain, James H. Chapman, said the repairs will include cleaning and painting, but not much else.

Over the long run, he said, "I'll try to get her to look much as she did as a presidential yacht."

More Required Pay Unemployment Tax

Recent amendments to the General Statutes of N.C. require some employers of domestic and agricultural workers to pay Unemployment Insurance tax for the first time.

Payments are due soon, reports Jim Hannan, manager of the local Employment Security Commission Job Service office here.

Complying with federal statutes, the General Assembly last year extended Unemployment Insurance coverage to an additional 262,000 workers in N.C., including some domestic and farm workers.

Any employer of domestic workers in a private home, college club or college fraternity or sorority who paid $1,000 or more in wages in any calendar quarter last year is required to pay U. I. taxes to the Employment Security Commission.

Farmers who paid wages of $20,000 or more for labor during a calendar quarter last year or employed 10 or more workers for 20 weeks, are required to pay U I taxes. The tax is 2.7 percent of the first $6,000 paid in wages to each worker. Taxes of the first quarter of 1978 are due by Apr. 30. There is a penalty for late payment.

"Agricultural and domestic employers who have not received liability determinations from us should contact the nearest ESC Job Service office immediately to obtain the necessary reporting forms," Hannan said.

Field tax auditors are stationed in the local ESC office, 3101 Bismarck Street here.

Committee Is Ending Visit

ROBERSONVILLE — A Visiting Committee representing the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools is concluding a two-day visit today at Roanoke High School near Robersonville.

The eight-member committee is headed by Dr. Kenneth Rollins of East Carolina University.

Roanoke was consolidated three years ago from the old Robersonville and Oak City High Schools and has an interim accreditation based on the prior accreditation of the Robersonville school.

The Untouchable

WENDELL — Highway Patrolman Charles Pearce learned first-hand the power of a foreign diplomat yesterday when he stopped a car on U.S. 64 near here in which South African Consul-General Theodore Vorster was riding.

Vorster had a ready excuse for traveling 90 miles per hour. He told Trooper Pearce that he was late for an appointment with Gov. Jim Hunt.

The trooper reminded Vorster of the state's 55 miles per hour speed limit. Vorster reminded the patrolman of his diplomatic immunity.

The standoff resulted in some radio traffic to a supervisor before Vorster and his driver were allowed to depart without a speeding ticket.

Li. H. B. McKee of Troop C headquarters in Raleigh said, "The man had diplomatic immunity. There was nothing we could do," and authorized Pearce to drop the matter.

Closing Of SAC Base Failed To Discourage Town

By JOANNA FIRESTONE SAULT STE. MARIE, Mich. (UPI) — The frontier-spirited residents of Michigan's Upper Peninsula have never liked nosy downstaters and government bureaucrats telling them how to run their lives.

When the federal government closed Kincheloe Air Force Base, the city of Sault Ste. Marie was determined — almost for spite — to prove wrong the meddlesome outsiders who predicted the area's already shaky economy would crumble.

The Defense Department ordered the Strategic Air Command base scrapped in 1976 as part of a nationwide austerity move. Although a caretaker force of about 300 is still on duty, the base has been closed for all practical purposes since last September.

The Defense Department said the shutdown would save the federal government $28 million annually. But the cost to the Soo, as the city is more commonly called, would far exceed that. It was the city's largest single employer.

The Air Force predicted that the local unemployment rate, which always has been high, would climb to nearly 39 percent. Losses totaling nearly $20 million in retail sales also were forecast because the base payroll was 20 percent of the area's total personal income.

The grim predictions have not materialized. In fact, some of the Soo's 14,500 residents claim the city is better off without Kincheloe.

Duane Myers, operator of the Sensual Arts Adult Book Store, said his business has been affected "very little," even though 4,000 servicemen are gone.

"We had more problems than they were worth," he said. "The fact is, shoplifting has gone way down."

The county's unemployment rate is still disturbingly high — 17.9 percent in November — but it is no worse than a year ago. That in itself is encouraging to local officials because the base took with it hundreds of civilian jobs, along with the servicemen, their families and a $35 million annual payroll.

The area is manufacturing a whole new economy.

"In the long, long run, the whole Kincheloe experience may prove to have been a beneficial — if unpleasant — thing," said state Commerce Director Keith Molin.

"With a military base-dominated economy, Chippewa County just simply had too many of its eggs in the same basket — a fact that became painfully aware when the basket dropped."

Businessmen formed an economic development corporation to scout new businesses and find ways of luring them to the Soo. A dozen new firms, an international airport and a state prison have opened.

Fancy street lamps and planters are being installed to spruce up the downtown.

"There is a real strong feeling of optimism in the community, that the impact is not as bad as predicted," said Neil Godby, Soo city manager. "There has been no direct impact on community sales or housing, yet."

Outsiders have been forecasting the Soo's demise for a hundred years.

Shivering on a frosty jut of land between Lake Superior and Lake Huron, the Soo has been a perennial victim of nature, economic downturns and the federal government.

When the U.S. government built the famous Soo Locks in 1881, many said the town was done for because the muleskinners who hauled cargo from Superior to Huron would be put out of business. But, the Soo turned the locks into what is now its biggest industry.

In 1945, the government shut down Fort Brady, which had housed 15,000 soldiers during World War II.

The town converted it to a college. Professors hacked their way into boarded up housing units with axes, while their wives planted flowers and mowed the parade grounds.

In the early 1960's, a changing economic climate again threatened the Soo's survival. Almost overnight, the town's major industries moved out, devastating the tax base and forcing payless paydays for some city employees.

But, as usual, things worked out.

The city's rescue this time can be credited to the grit and determination of the "Yoops," as Upper Peninsula or U.P. residents are called by their downstate counterparts, and to impressive cooperation among local, state and federal governments.

Just days after the planned air base closing was announced, businessmen and state officials started looking for ways to put the property back in business.

Some ideas, such as a Midwest landing pad for the supersonic Concorde or a toxic waste incinerator, didn't materialize. But a few did, and others are planned.

The base had potential. There were housing units, runways, maintenance buildings and about $5 million in equipment.

While two Lower Peninsula communities were protesting and collecting signatures to stop the state from building prisons in their neighborhoods, the Soo opened its arms.

More than 2,300 persons turned out for an open house just before the medium security prison, located on a small part of the base, began receiving prisoners.

Banks, groceries, mobile home dealerships and department stores bought ads in the local newspaper, welcoming the prison and the 300 new jobs it brought to the area.

But the community is most proud of the new Chippewa County International Airport, which replaced a tiny, outmoded facility and uses the base's long runways. North Central Airlines is expected to replace its old prop jet service with DC-9's, now that there are runways to accommodate them.

More than 2,300 persons

All this is not to suggest that the Soo has been unaffected by the closing of Kincheloe. In some segments of the economy, the impact has been as bad as was predicted for the whole.

When the servicemen's children left, about 80 teachers were laid off. Two schools and part of a third were shut down.

A vending machine operator said his business has been cut in half and several other service industries, such as laundries and entertainment outlets, also have suffered. Banks lost accounts.

But on the whole, the Soo is coming through the crisis. The community is capitalizing on some previously overlooked advantages. For example, many service retirees live in the area and had shopped at Kincheloe's base exchange. Now they must buy from local retailers.

Soo merchants reported a 10 percent increase in business over the holidays.

"I feel we had a real good Christmas," said Paul Sawyer of the Tempo discount department store. "We had a lot of business through the base because we could compete with the BX price-wise, but the people coming in for the prison have brought more money back into the community."

said his business hasn't suffered appreciably because an influx of government employees closing the base and opening the prison has offset the salesmen who no longer come to Kincheloe.

"We have to get through the next four months, I think, to the tourist season before we'll know for sure," he said. "It hasn't been bad — it's really okay."

James Allen, himself a former Air Force man, had predicted hard times for his business and the Soo area when the closing was planned.

"As of now, it hasn't affected us," said Allen, who runs a combination party store-pharmacy-short order grill and newsstand in nearby Rudyard. "Our business increased a little. We have an awful lot of military retired people who bought out there (at the BX), that have to come into town to buy now."

Deputy Sheriff Morrill Roberts said the closing "hasn't been so bad as everybody first thought."

"You'd have thought it was the end of the world," Roberts said, musing over a cup of coffee at a Soo hamburger joint. "But things are coming back. Sure, it's been hard on some, but all together, we're still holding on."

British Auto-Maker Vows To Revitalize Industry

By PETER J. SHAW
LONDON (UPI) — Foreign car dealers in Britain notch up record sales and chuckle all the way to the bank about British car makers' inability to meet domestic demand.

They may soon stop laughing if Michael Edwardes has his way.

Edwardes is the new chairman of British Leyland, the state-owned automotive giant that in the decade since it absorbed most of the famous names on the British road has steadily lost money on passenger cars.

Edwardes pulled no punches in announcing his plans for revitalizing the company the Daily Mirror tagged "the ailing monster" of British industry.

"Nothing is more damning than our steady decline in market share against a rising market," Edwardes told Leyland managers and union leaders.

"People are literally walking past our showrooms without a second look. Is it any wonder our dealers are worried and some are defecting to our competitors and strengthening the hold of imported cars in this country?"

Britons went on a surprise car buying spree in January, traditionally a slow month. Sales were up 33.5 percent on January, 1977, and new British car sales increased 18 percent. But import sales jumped 53 percent to capture 50 percent of the British home market. Ford sales went up 55 percent to give it almost a 30 percent market slice. British Leyland's sales only held even and its market share slid from 28.6 to 21.4 percent.

During 1977, British Leyland's car division made an estimated $29 million before-tax profit. But industry sources said the company's successful parts division alone made four times that much, so the assembly and sale of new cars lost at least $87 million.

British Leyland lost 250,000 cars through strikes in 1977, which alone reduced its pretax profit by at least $244 million.

The crisis touches the entire British car industry, although British Leyland dominates it.

The industry's decline began in the early 1950s when it stood fast while foreign competitors were streamlining, modernizing and pouring heavy investments into their products. Britain had too many individual firms producing too many models. Machinery was old, bosses were unimaginative.

Department of Industry figures showed British car output in 1977 was virtually unchanged from 1976 levels.

Car importers reckon overall sales in Britain this year could surpass the 1.6 million record of 1973. They think the proportion of import sales could rise from last year's unprecedented 45 percent to an average 55 percent.

"During 1977 production was consistently below target as a result of all-too-frequent strikes, layoffs and general industrial disruptions," said David Plastow, president of the Society of Motor Manufacturers and Traders.

"All companies are affected by such troubles because of the industry's highly integrated nature. A dispute at one plant has a domino effect on both the suppliers and customers of that company. It was instrumental in robbing Leyland of one-quarter of its 1 million car production target.

There were three times as many working days lost because of strikes in Britain's motor vehicles industry in 1977 than in 1976. Department of Employment figures showed 2,593,000 working days lost last year compared to only 785,000 in 1976.

The British car industry has a capacity to build more than 2 million cars annually. Britain has the world's leading independent component parts supply industry. It should be able to satisfy more than 70 percent of its home market demand.

Yet although British Leyland currently has cars to spare, few seem inclined to buy them. Ford, the biggest importer of cars into Britain last year, has had to increase its shipments of popular Cortinas made in Belgium and Escorts made in West Germany because its plants in Britain cannot fulfill British buyers' needs.

France, Italy and West Germany export 10 to 16 times as many cars to Britain as they buy British cars.

A decade ago, British Leyland held over 40 percent of the home market. Its steady decline has been helped by differences in pay scales throughout the 36 Leyland car factories.

These could be reduced by a recent agreement to start centralized pay bargaining aimed at standardizing wages.

Edwardes, a 47-year-old South African, hopes to rescue British Leyland by dividing the overly centralized company into three independently run profit units: Austin-Morris for volume cars, Jaguar-Rover-Triumph for luxury and specialist cars, plus a components company. A new umbrella company called BL cars will own all the assets and be responsible for employment and pay talks.

Edwardes tapped an American with considerable marketing experience in the United States and Japan, 44-year-old William Pratt Thompson, to head Jaguar-Rover-Triumph.

Unions have given Edwardes qualified support for his vow to eliminate 12,500 jobs this year "by natural wastage, redundancy programs, by plant closures or by some combination of these."

Although Leyland's car division employs 130,000 workers, the current output of 750,000 cars justifies only 90,000. Even without industrial disruptions in 1978, Leyland's loss of world market share means it could sell only 820,000 cars at best.

"We have to stop the rot at home by improving output per man and regaining our competitive position," Edwardes said.

"The less we are able to produce quality cars steadily — and thus regain market share — the more serious the demanning will have to be."

He said a substantial crash program is needed for updating existing models, the Mini, first sold in 1959 and still Leyland's best seller, will continue into the 1980s but a stretched version, dubbed the mighty Mini, is not expected in showrooms before 1980.

Leyland is Britain's biggest exporter with overseas sales between 1968 and 1977 of $16.4 billion. Since 1968, it has spent more than $1.5 billion on new plants and machinery.

British Leyland became operational in May 1968 as an amalgamation of established but ailing British car companies — Triumph, Rover, Austin, Morris, M.G., Wolsey, Riley, Jaguar. Union problems flared almost immediately and by 1974 Leyland was deep in financial trouble.

In September, 1975, the state's National Enterprise Board took over Leyland and since then has pumped in $682 million of public money.

Edwardes hopes to get another $1.65 billion from the government, about half in equity finance and the rest in repayable loans.

"I believe the whole of the work force is itching to see more decisiveness and more success," Edwardes told his managers and union officials.

"No one will have a grain of sympathy for us if we act like a great dinosaur, lumbering around making a lot of noise but not making a lot of headway."

Graham Center Director Quits

WHEATON, III. (AP) — The head of the Billy Graham Center at Wheaton College resigned after the center's board of directors decided at the evangelist's request to slash funds for a museum memorializing him, it was reported today.

The Chicago Tribune said in today's editions that Donald Hoke, head of the center since 1974, quit when the cutbacks were announced. They were aimed particularly at a memorial museum which he had envisioned.

As a result, "There isn't an urgency for my leadership," Hoke said.

The cutbacks were voted on March 10, but announcement of the move was delayed for several days. Amounts of the cuts were not disclosed.

The budget cuts coincided with a nationally distributed wire service story which described the project.

"Graham's concern was that the museum 'grandized' him too much. There was too much Billy Graham in there," Hoke said. "He has a right to that (opinion)," he said.

Hoke added that lack of money also contributed to the decision to scale down the museum.

He said income for all the Graham enterprises has been down during the early part of this year.

Other programs, including the center's Institute of Evangelism, Laymen's Bible Training, and International Conference Ministry programs, also have been postponed, he said.

But plans for the center's library, archives, and graduate school of communications have not been affected, a spokesman said.

The center is being funded through a Graham foundation, a $23-million World Evangelism and Christian Education Fund.

Therefore, he entered dummy with the king of hearts to ruff a club, crossed back to the king of diamonds and ruffed another club, then re-entered with the ace of hearts to ruff dummy's last club. Now he intended running diamonds until East ruffed, but East followed all the way. This was the position:

Tommy exited with the nine of hearts, and East had to ruff. Whatever he did, he was destined to make only one more trick. He chose to exit with the ten of spades. Dummy's queen won, and a spade toward the king assured Tommy of an overtrick.

Ancient Ruins Remain In Modern Soviet City

RELIC OF PAST—Domed mausoleum of Sultan Sanjar, dating from 11th century, remains as a reminder of ancient city of Merv that existed where Mary, Turkmenistan, stands today in the U.S.S.R.

By THOMAS KENT MARY, U.S.S.R. (AP) — A crumbling mausoleum, a faded palace and some low walls of brick and stone are all that remain of the city of Merv, one of the ancient world's most highly developed civilizations from the seventh to the 12th centuries.

Surrounded by the scorching Karakum desert — once infamous as the "graveyard of the caravans" — the ruins of Merv have blended into the present-day city of Mary, a cotton-growing center of Soviet Turkmenistan 100 miles from the Soviet-Iranian border.

The region now has 700,000 people compared with some 5 million in ancient times. In place of Merv's one-time sway over lands from the Mediterranean to Northern India, Mary presides today over one province of Turkmenistan about the size of Alabama.

The most durable monuments to Merv are a small palace and the 118-foot, domed mausoleum of Sultan Sanjar, who ruled the city in the 11th century. The mausoleum took 10 years to build, and Soviet artists are now restoring the blue and red murals on its simple brick walls.

The remnants of the past run alongside modern-day buildings and farms. Nearby hang banners reading "We will fulfill the party's plans," a reminder that the Soviet Communist Party is the new management in what was Merv.

In Hindu and Arab folklore, Merv was regarded as the ancient paradise and the birthplace of humanity. Its existence is recorded in ancient chronicles from at least 1,200 B.C.

The city was ruled by a series of Greek, Persian and Christian empires until the seventh century, when it was occupied by Moslems loyal to the Caliph Othman.

It was soon transformed into an oriental center of learning, and legions based there conquered much of Central Asia, penetrating even into parts of China.

Arab rule in Merv ended in the ninth century, and was replaced in 1040 by the Seljuk Turkish dynasty that eventually produced Sultan Sanjar.

Merv, on an oasis formed by the nearby Murghab River, became an important way station on east-west caravan routes. It had advanced irrigation systems, markets covered against the desert sun, piped water, 10 libraries, a school for civil servants and factories for cloth, jewelry, chemicals and arms.

Grapes, wheat and sheep raising were major industries, along with warehousing and other services for passing caravans. Its population was bigger than the present population of all Turkmenistan.

Mongols attacked and destroyed the city in 1219, killing more than a million people. The city then passed to a series of later Asian rulers, was captured in 1787 by the Emir of Bokhara and occupied by the Russian Empire in 1883. With the rest of Turkmenia, it was incorporated into the Soviet Union after the Bolshevik Revolution.

Blind Twins Forging Career In Music

HIGH POINT, N.C. (AP) — Jane and Janet McBride have found that being blind doesn't affect their voices, so they are forging ahead with their plans to make it big in the country-music field.

The 23-year-old High Point twins are bubbling with enthusiasm over their country-music careers. Several of their records are already on the market, and the two girls are being booked at country-music festivals, supper clubs, shopping centers and anywhere else crowds gather to hear music.

Even their blindness can't put a damper on the twins' lively personalities.

"We were so eager to get on with it that we couldn't wait to be born, so we arrived three months early," Jane said as Janet agreed.

The twins were born three months prematurely, weighed only a little over three pounds each and, for a while, there were doubts that they would live. Their blindness is a consequence of their premature births.

The twins started singing together in stage shows when they were toddlers and began concentrating on country music when they were 11 years old.

"We'd listen to the radio a lot and sing along," Jane said.

Soon they were singing together for church gatherings.

The pretty, dark-haired girls were students at Morehead School for the Blind in Raleigh until the ninth grade. But they decided to enter public schools, and they graduated from Jamestown Junior High School and Ragsdale High School.

"We knew we would have to get along with sighted people," Jane said. "And they treated us just like anyone else."

The twins credit their public-school experiences with helping them get along better in every day life.

The girls met recently with recording executives in Nashville and Chattanooga and were encouraged by the warm reception. The twins would like to get back to the recording studio in a few months.

"The executives who met Jane and Janet were complimentary of the girls' talent," said Marilyn Chilton, the twins' booking agent, who suffers from an incurable eye disease and is slowly going blind herself. "They all want to help."

Their earlier trips to the Grand Ole Opry and other country-music landmarks have made some lifelong friends for the twins.

They excitedly refer to time spent with Conway Twitty, Bill

Anderson, Charlie Pride, Jan Howard, Mary Lou Turner, and especially blind award-winning singer Ronnie Milsap.

The twins idealize Milsap, who also attended Morehead School, and feel that he endured the same types of hardships with his blindness as they are facing.

"One of our teachers in Raleigh told us we would never make it in the country-music business," Janet said. "It was the same teacher who told Ronnie Milsap that he'd never make it."

"We're not going to give up easily," Jane said. "We plan to work hard and give it our best."

"Music is a rough, demanding business," Janet agreed. "It's hard, often frustrating work, but we've made it our life."

It's Cheaper To Build Own Boat

By LeROY POPE
NEW YORK (UPI) — The only way to get a boat at modest cost today is to build it yourself.

Inflation and the energy crisis have run the prices of new boats so sky high that there are comparatively few bargains in the used boat market. Prices on all boat-building materials have gone way up, and good marine grade plywood in long lengths simply isn't being stocked any more. So the amateur builder may find that strip planking is the only method by which he can save any real money.

In the factory, strip planking is expensive because it is so labor intensive, but to the amateur who doesn't count the cost of his own labor it may seem cheap. Strip planking means gluing and edge nailing narrow strips of wood together in a female mold to form a hull.

First thing to do, of course, is to go to the library and get a couple of books on the subject. After reading them, you can make your plans. You can build a skiff, a small cabin cruiser or a sailboat up to about 18 feet long out of three-quarter-inch-square cheap pine strips. If you buy a lot of random lengths and join the strips with six-inch scarfs you'll get a better price.

The mold stations can be made of old lumber and cheap used plywood. After assembling them, set up the boat's backbone, consisting of stem, keel and keelson and transom frame and transom inside.

The hull then is built up strip by strip. The strips are planed to shape to the curve of the molds, fastened to each other with resorcinol glue and edge nailed at intervals of three inches. Drill for the nails and tap them in at opposing angles. Use ringed bronze boat nails in the bottom half of the hull.

When the hull is complete, the necessary frames, stringers and bulkheads to support the floors, deck and cabin must be installed. Then the mold is removed for fiberglassing. Some experts favor fiberglassing both the inside and outside of the hull but most regard inside fiberglassing as risky because too much moisture will be trapped in the wood and that may cause rot.

For outside fiberglassing, the hull is turned over and sanded fair, then two layers of glass, probably woven roving first then mat, are laid on in pigmented resin. The boat then is turned rightside up again for finishing.

The resulting hull should be strong and long lasting and have good lines and you should find the work easier and the cost much less than by any other method under today's expensive conditions.

The Galapagos Islands, 650 miles off the coast of Ecuador, consist of 13 major islands and 47 smaller ones with a total area of more than 3,000 square miles of land.

SINGING BLIND SISTERS — Jane and Janet McBride flank agent Marilyn Chilton. Chilton is suffering from an incurable eye disease and is going blind. (AP Laserphoto)

Ship Now Floating Residence

By LEW WHEATON
 CIUDAD GUAYANA, Venezuela (AP) — The gleaming white paint, shiny brass fittings and gold-lettered name "Cristoforo Colombo" across the stern are the same as when it plied the seas as a luxury Italian cruise ship.

But the Venezuelan flag now flies from the fantail and the high-paying tourists who once thronged the grand salon have been replaced by hard-hatted engineers and technicians working on a huge industrial complex here.

The former luxury liner is now the property of the state-owned Venezuelan Guayana Corp. (CVG), which is constructing a series of heavy industrial projects in the Orinoco basin.

Venezuela bought the ship in the spring of 1977 and brought it here to serve as a floating residence for technical personnel with families.

"It just made very good sense economically to buy the ship rather than build permanent facilities on a rush basis," said Ronald Jacobson, an Australian engineer working for CVG as a consultant.

The Cristoforo Colombo is now tied up to a floating dock connected by a pontoon bridge with the rapidly expanding Venezuelan National Steel Co. plant. From the upper decks the view in one direction is the smoke-belching steel mill and heavy construction activities, and from the other the steaming savanna across the muddy Orinoco River.

Andres Atela, who brought the ship here from its home port of Genoa following its last cruise and who serves as its captain, said he would have an eventual load of 1,200 "passengers" plus his crew of 45.

This compares with the crew of 550 that ran the ship as a luxury liner and served the 1,161 passengers it carried on voyages around the world, said Atela, who gained his sea experience on boats hauling iron ore from Guayana to the United States.

"This ship is beautiful, one of the most beautiful in the world," he said, proudly showing off the baroque-style chapel with its colorful murals and gilded woodwork.

The 700-foot-long, 28,430-ton liner retains its nautical touches. CVG officials say the engines are in good repair and the ship could get under way if it had to, although it might take a day or two.

The soft background hum of ventilating fans and the light rumble of air-conditioning equipment give the impression of a still-functioning cruise ship. Signs in four languages point the way to boat stations, salons and different decks.

Sumptuous meals are served on china bearing the Italian-line symbol in the first-class dining room, which has been turned into a public restaurant. One CVG employee called it "one of the best eating spots in Ciudad Guayana," a boom town whose 300,000 population has multiplied more than 10 times since 1960 and which is still short on places to eat.

Farther forward, workers are replacing carpeting around the inlaid dance floor in the grand salon, which is being turned into a discotheque. The disco, restaurant and a bar will be run by the Boatel Corp., a U.S.-based concessionaire whose employees are not counted among Capt. Atela's crew.

"Officially, this ship is a temporary solution to our needs for housing and will be sold in about four years when the steel plant expansion is finished," Jacobson said, gazing down on the ship from a wing of the bridge. "But temporary things around here have a way of becoming permanent."

Zero-Base Budgeting: Catch-Phrase Or For Real?

By LeROY POPE
UPI Business Writer

NEW YORK (UPI) — Zero base budgeting is being hailed as a possible miraculous solution for New York City's massive and otherwise seemingly hopeless financial crisis.

The advice to New York's Mayor Ed Koch comes from various sources but particularly from James Cleaveland of Management Analysis Corp. in Washington, which is pushing ZBB. Cleaveland conceded it probably would take ZBB four years to straighten out New York's money crisis.

But although ZBB has been adopted by 13 states and many cities, companies and institutions, the jury verdict on it is still out. No one can say yet for sure whether it can be made to accomplish a great deal or, in the long run, will degenerate into a catch phrase to be exploited by ambitious politicians and opportunistic management consultants.

A new report on the progress of ZBB prepared by L. Allan Austin, a Salt Lake City consultant, has just been published by the American Management Association. He concludes that the novelty of ZBB may easily wear off and the process might become as mechanical and stereotyped as other budgeting methods.

Austin lists a number of blue chip companies using ZBB, among them Xerox, Texas Instruments, Boeing, International Harvester, Rockwell International, Eastern Airlines, Westinghouse Electric, Dillingham General Dynamics, New York Telephone and California Edison.

Both advocates and skeptics agree that the big problem with ZBB is that it must be used selectively. To try to apply it across the board in a government or a corporation imposes too huge a workload on executives.

Just as the power to tax is the power to destroy, the control of budgets is the key in the modern world to economic, political and social power. Budgets set up the power structure in business, in government, in churches and universities and other institutions and even in the family.

In his famous book "Mathematics for the Millions," Lancelot Hogben showed how for thousands of years the priestly class held the reins of power throughout the world by maintaining a monopoly on the ability to measure. Nobody but the priests really knew how to count or to measure land, crops, manpower and money. Even kings could only guess at their own wealth and power and that of their rivals.

It was not until this priestly monopoly was broken that the industrial revolution occurred and democratic ideas began spreading.

Budgeting is a more sophisticated form of measuring because it can measure the present and the future as well as the past. And by so doing it can control virtually every human activity. So, it is not surprising that nearly all the really severe conflicts in peacetime are over budgets.

As a scientific method, budgeting is very modern. In former times resources and manpower were allocated by feudal custom and nearly all income was tied to hereditary ownership of land.

Most of the budgeting we know is incremental, particularly in government. It works by adding or subtracting increments to the allotment each year of every department, bureau, agency or subsidiary.

Of course there are provisions for creating new activities in the budget as needed but there is no automatic way to get rid of obsolete departments or activities and to stop paying for them. Indeed it is extremely difficult under incremental budgeting to keep the expenses of outmoded and useless activities from continuously rising.

That enables bureaus and departments with vague or outmoded functions to grow like mushrooms and become sizeable empires for the executives who run them.

It is one of the biggest reasons for the mushrooming development throughout the world of big government and sky high taxes.

Incremental budgeting is not so all pervasive in the internal management of business corporations as in government and the institutional world because departments and subsidiaries of companies run for profit must show a profit each year or must demonstrate that their existence is necessary to the profitability of the whole company.

The basic idea of zero based budgeting is to make every department, every bureau and every subsidiary justify its existence anew each year. Therefore, zero based budgeting theoretically provides an automatic way to get rid of all the expensive deadwood in government — to kill off all the vague and useless bureaucratic empires that spring up like weeds throughout the nation's economy.

New Jersey's four-year experience with ZBB has been good, says Robert Cubberley, the state's budget supervisor. It has been extended gradually until in the budget recently submitted to the legislature by Gov. Brendan Byrne, the technique is applied to every state program.

But Cubberley cautioned that ZBB cannot be given primary credit for the very substantial cuts in New Jersey's governmental expense in recent years. "The plain truth is we saved the money because we didn't have to spend."

But he said ZBB helps enormously in deciding the right priorities for making cuts and allocating resources to get better results. "It boils down, to the fact that ZBB is not a way of getting rid of people, it's a way to shuffle them around and get more useful work out of them."

Cubberley said it also is a mistake to assume that ZBB can force social or political decisions. "Except for providing information, it doesn't make these painful decisions any easier for the governor or other executives."

Jimmy Carter reached the same conclusion when he adopted ZBB as governor of Georgia, according to the testimony before a congressional committee of Peter Pyhrr, who introduced ZBB at Texas Instruments and was engaged by Carter to help install it in Georgia. Carter announced he would not fire people on the basis of ZBB studies but simply would move them around.

Cubberley also said a lot of politicians and management consultants have jumped on the ZBB bandwagon possibly without understanding its limitations.

The city of Los Angeles has applied ZBB to all of its city departments — but to only 15 percent of all activities in the departments, Bob Chase, an assistant city budget administrator, told UPI. He said Mayor Tom Bradley is enthusiastic about ZBB's possibilities but that results and evaluation so far have been inconclusive. Reactions of department and bureau managers have ranged from enthusiastic to definitely negative.

John Yagielski, assistant to David Robinson, superintendent of schools at Greece, N.Y., a big suburb of Rochester, said ZBB definitely saved the district $1 million out of a $30 million, the second year after its adoption.

An enthusiastic ZBB backer is Logan Cheek of Xerox Corp. in Rochester, author of a book entitled "Zero Base Budgeting Comes of Age," also published by the American Management Association. He disagrees with Cubberley and says ZBB can force managers to make decisions and be innovative.

ZBB is not really a new idea. As long ago as 1924, it was proposed by an author named E. Hilton Young, who attacked the prevailing incremental budgeting, saying, "Nothing could be easier or more wasteful and extravagant."

The federal Department of Agriculture experimented with ZBB under President Kennedy in 1962. Two scholars who studied that effort, Aaron Wildavsky of the University of California at Berkeley and Arthur Hammond of the University of Michigan, concluded it was a failure because the departmental executives simply couldn't or wouldn't think in such terms. They couldn't give up thinking only in terms of how much money Congress could be wheedled or hoodwinked into providing.

The attack on incremental budgeting conceivably could lead to an attack on the incremental allocation of wealth in society. This awesome possibility is raised in a new book by Yale Professor Charles E. Lindblom ("Politics and Markets," Basic Books, New York). He says that in spite of the rising power of labor unions and the growth of the welfare state the top 5 percent of the people in the economic scale have almost as much of the national income as the bottom 40 percent.

Couple that with the contention of writers like Harvard economist John Kenneth Galbraith and David Bazeelon ("The Paper Economy," Random House, 1969), that while business leaders are fond of talking about the virtues of competition, they actually spend much of their time to preventing competition. In other words, they insist on incremental allocation of markets in order to protect their dominant share of the national income.

11-Year-Old Worshipped

By BARRY SHLACHTER
Associated Press Writer
KATMANDU, Nepal (AP) — The 11-year-old daughter of Prim Sakya can't go out and play like other children in Katmandu. She's too busy being worshipped.

The girl, whose real name her family refused to disclose, is regarded as a living goddess to the Nepalese — from ragged peasant to the Himalayan nation's king.

Young Miss Sakya is the object of what is called virgin worship, a Hindu and Buddhist practice in Nepal which dates back to the sixth century B.C. There are at least 11 girls revered as deities around Nepal, and who become the center of attraction during religious festivals, but only Prim Sakya's child is recognized as the "Raj Kumari" or "Royal Virgin Goddess," a title she has carried for seven years.

The sick, particularly those with tuberculosis or hemorrhaging problems worship her in the hope she will cure them. Politicians make offerings at her feet, believing it will help their careers.

Her most important patron, however, is Nepal's 32-year-old King Birendra who holds near absolute power in the tiny landlocked country. Traditional belief has it that the monarch derives this power from the royal kumari.

Shoe-Shaped Store Is Idled

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — A shoe-shaped shoe store here which looks like the nursery rhyme house of "The Old Woman Who Lived in a Shoe" is closing because of declining business.

Built as a pilot project in 1965, the company hoped to franchise the concept and put similar buildings in shopping centers. But trends toward leasing, rather than owning stores, and operating in strip or mall centers rather than in free-standing buildings, defeated the idea, said Mrs. Phyllis Scruggs, advertising director of Raiford's Inc. She's the daughter of the publicly held company's late founder, Phillip Raiford.

"We have investigated the prospect of moving the building to another location, but the cost would be prohibitive. It's made of heavy concrete and steel," she said.

The king worships her every September, touching her crimson-painted toes with his forehead and presenting her with a gold coin. His own blessing comes in the form of a red dot she applies to his forehead and a garland of flowers she places around his neck.

The present royal kumari, the daughter of the superintendent of the royal Nepal army arsenal, leads a life of ease and opulence in a rugged and resource-poor country where the average income is about 110 U.S. dollars a year.

Everyone, including her family, calls her "deo meiju" or "goddess lady." Her aunt explained: "We don't use her real name because she has become a goddess." And she lives as one.

Her home is a three-story mansion. The few times a year she is permitted to go outside, the goddess is placed aboard an ornate palanquin and carried because her feet must not touch ground.

Without lifting a finger, she is bathed and dressed every morning. Makeup is applied and a third "eye" attached to her forehead. From a treasure of gold jewelry, a fine piece or two is selected to be worn that day.

Although she lives in luxury and her parents are considered celebrities in their neighborhood for producing a goddess, the Nepalese know that the life of an ex-royal kumari most likely will turn out unhappy — or even tragic.

Her reign ends abruptly when she betrays a human frailty — by crying, falling ill, becoming petulant and refusing to receive devotees, or by bleeding when scratched or at the start of menstruation.

Back at home and approaching the age to marry, many cannot find a man who will consent to be their husband. The reason is an old but still prevailing superstition that the man who first makes love to an ex-kumari dies soon after.

The most comprehensive parade of this continent's amateur photography is represented by the more than 900 finalists in the 1977 Kodak International Newspaper Snapshot Awards competition.

More than 250 top winners were selected from the 900 finalists which came from contests sponsored by 123 newspapers in the United States, Canada and Mexico. All of them were chosen from more than 350,000 snapshots sent in by photo hobbyists in North America.

The top winners and the finalists were displayed in Washington, D.C., late last year and are currently on display — through April 14 — in the Kodak Photo Gallery in mid-Manhattan, New York City.

A keen eye, an alert finger and a captivating subject can be very rewarding as well as the source of personal satisfaction for amateur hobbyists. A total of 259 cash and travel prizes worth $55,000 were distributed to the winners.

A Vermont student coach and a Louisiana businessman, judged top winners for the best black-and-white and the best color snapshot, each have the choice between a month-long world tour for two with $1,000 spending money or $5,000 in cash. Eight runner-up winners will each have to choose between an expense-paid trip for two to Europe, Mexico, Hawaii or the West Indies, or alternative cash prizes which range from $4,000 to $800.

In addition, there are ten Honor Awards of $500 each and 239 Special Merit Awards of $100 each. Amateur snapshots can pay dividends.

In studying the prints on display, I was again struck by the range of subject matter that was made visually interesting. And most of it is within the normal environments and vacation trips of most people. Often they are scenes which we pass by regularly without seeing — that is, photographic seeing. There are beautiful moments at home, in our neighborhoods, our parks, zoos, fairgrounds and on our trips which become significant when they are caught on film and made permanent by the magic of photography.

I was intrigued, too, by the situations, thoughts, motivations and comments of some of the camera fans in the contest. Let me take you back-stage and share with you a few notes that accompanied the pictures:

A father watched, camera in hand, as his two young daughters looked at themselves in a distorting mirror in an amusement park. Suddenly, the three-year-old pulled down her shorts to see if her body was broken like the mirror showed. Snap! Bingo — a winner.

A part-time art director shooting at a parade, became irritated when his camera started "acting funny." He was ready to quit although there were only two shots left on the roll of film. His wife persuaded him to finish the roll and then send the camera in for repair. He saw motorcycle riders coming up and decided to experiment with a slow exposure 1-30th of a second while panning the camera with the movement. Snap! Snap! Bingo — the last one was a winner.

A college student was given a set of false teeth as a gag. He put it on the kitchen table.

PRECIOUS MOMENT PRESERVED. Housewife Lucy Kirshner of Ann Arbor, Mich., caught this tender study of her daughter becoming acquainted with her 1-month-old brother. It won a Special Merit Award in the 1977 Kodak International Newspaper Snapshot Awards.

Nearby was a partially eaten apple. Like magnets, they seemed to come together. Snap! Bingo — yes, a humorous winner.

An art director with a knee injury, unable to go after pictures, sat on a beach and let the pictures come to him.

Scarce Puffin Again Sighted

EASTERN EGG ROCK, Maine (AP) — The sighting here last summer of the scarce puffin "provides real encouragement that puffins may some day recolonize this former breeding site," reports Dr. Stephen Kress of Cornell University.

Kress is working under a grant supplied by the National Audubon Society to reintroduce puffins to this Muscongus Bay area. Puffins have not bred on Eastern Egg Rock since 1895 when the original population was erased due to excessive hunting.

Kress' latest progress report outlined the return of a puffin which had been transplanted from large colonies in Newfoundland to Eastern Egg Rock in 1975. He said it would be several more years before any puffins could be expected to return to Eastern Egg Rock to nest and lay eggs, at which time the success or failure of the project could be evaluated.

Snap! Bingo ... A fire department training officer on a trip to Greece got up before dawn in order to take a sunrise picture he planned which would feature some monastery buildings he had noticed near a lake. He got there and it didn't "come together." He was disappointed and ready to turn back. At that moment a sailboat came into a sunlit path on the water. Snap! Bingo ...

A graduate student's cat found some sunshine streaming in on a cool March day. The cat propped her head on an old rocking chair and proceeded to ignore the world — and the camera. Snap! Bingo ...

A housekeeper repeated that familiar refrain. "I just happened to have the camera in the right spot at the right time." She went to take pictures of a foal on a friend's farm. The family dog wandered over and sat down. The foal came over to the dog and they touched noses. Snap! Bingo — another winner.

These are examples of photographic seeing. That in itself is not enough. You must have the camera ready to capture that instant of time that can never be repeated in exactly the same way. Those precious memories can happen to you. Are you ready for them?

The newspaper snapshot competition will soon be under way again this year. Will your picture win a trip around the world or a cash award?

You'll never know unless you start "seeing!" and Snap! Perhaps you'll hear "Bingo — a winner!"

World's Terrorists Have Diverse Aims

By ARTHUR L. GAVSHON
AP Diplomatic Correspondent

LONDON (AP) — The terrorists who make headlines with bombings, hijackings, assassinations and kidnappings share a common bond of violence, but their aims are as diverse as the nations and peoples they prey on.

Italy's Red Brigades, which kidnapped former Premier Aldo Moro last week, seek a disruption of the state and a Marxist revolution, for example. The South Moluccans who recently held 70 hostages in the Netherlands for 29 hours want freedom for their homeland, now part of the former Dutch colony of Indonesia. The late Ulrike Meinhof, founder of West Germany's Red Army Faction, also known as the Baader-Meinhof gang, summed up her ambition as wanting "to hit the Establishment in the face."

Intelligence experts and diplomats from the NATO countries and elsewhere say four major extremist organizations — with the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine at the center — are linked in a "Terrorist International" conspiracy which provides support and advice to other revolutionaries.

Their conclusion is based on analyses of about 1,150 acts of transnational terrorism since 1967, including more than 500 bombings, 140 hijackings, 60 assassinations, 135 kidnappings and 100 arson attacks. In many missions, Palestinians and other Arabs worked with West German, Japanese and Latin American affiliates.

An Associated Press survey found about 226 groups, parties or movements in 56 countries use violence for political ends. Half are leftist revolutionaries with a variety of allegiances; 39 are pledged to an undefined Marxism; 29 to Peking; 12 to Moscow; 11 to Castro's Cuba; and 8 to anti-Soviet Trotskyites. There also are 30 neo-fascist groups, 34 separatist movements and about a dozen national liberation organizations. Other rebels range from anarchists hostile to capitalism and communism alike to religious sects with labels like India's Anand Marg (Path of Bliss).

Trying to control terrorism costs the noncommunist nations billions of dollars each year. Security has been more than doubled at every major West-ern military and civilian installation, nuclear and non-nuclear; surveillance in the private sector has escalated to protect national and international investors and investments.

More than a dozen countries, including the United States, West Germany and Israel, have highly skilled commando units, trained to rescue hostages, particularly from hijacks. The Dutch alone have two anti-terror squads, including a 100-member marine unit which rescued the hostages held in Assen early last week. The same group stormed a train and school near Assen last summer to end twin sieges by another group of Moluccan extremists.

Officials, most of whom did not want their names used, say an uncounted number of revolutionary groups cluster around a network of terrorists who maintain a full-scale "service industry" in Europe with Paris as their headquarters. This network — what has come to be known as "Terrorist International" — provides training in shooting, bombing and even poisoning oranges at secret instruction centers in Libya, South Yemen, Iraq, Syria, Lebanon and Algeria.

The Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine, probably the most militant of the Palestinian groups, is at the center of the Terrorist International; its allies are West Germany's Red Army Faction, Japan's United Red Army and the Junta de Coordinacion Revolucionaria, combining revolutionaries who have fled Argentina, Bolivia, Chile, Paraguay and Uruguay.

A distinctive feature of most of the extremist movements is that their leaders quarrel over strategy, policy and power. Rhodesia's black nationalists, Puerto Rico's leftists and the Palestinian Liberation Organization are typical of those divided among themselves.

In Rhodesia, moderate black leaders are negotiating with white Prime Minister Ian Smith; militants like Joshua Nkomo and Robert Mugabe and their guerrilla forces war against the minority regime. Within each camp, tribal and other rivalries lead to further argument.

Puerto Rico's Armed Forces of National Liberation — FALN

— have bombed targets at home and in the United States to call attention to their demands for independence. Fellow leftists with a Maoist orientation have criticized the FALN strategy.

The PLO, meanwhile, is an umbrella for 15 groups. They are united in a pledge to recover all land considered Palestinian, but disagree over how much territory they are willing to settle for. Some groups have vowed to drive the Jews of Israel into the sea by force and incorporate all their territory into a new Palestine; others, including PLO Chairman Yasser Arafat, seem more willing to compromise. The militants, led by the Popular Front and the Arab Liberation Front, have formed an alliance whose members describe themselves as "rejectionists of any capitulationist solutions."

Learn White Collar Crime

MONTCLAIR, N.J. (AP) — A professor at Montclair State College thinks business students should learn more than just finance, accounting and marketing. He teaches them "White Collar Crime."

Dr. David N. Alloway, a sociology professor, teaches students "what criminals do, how they do it, how to recognize what's going on and how to stop it."

The business students learn how to spot bankruptcy fraud or a rigged computer, Alloway said.

Computers offer the best opportunity for white collar crime, Alloway said, because most accountants are not equipped to catch irregularities.

The Bloomfield resident became interested in crime while serving in the finance section of the Army when he helped the Criminal Investigation Division apprehend people who were diverting federal funds.

He taught a "Criminology" course at the college but decided three years ago that business-bound students needed to know more about white collar crime.

"Organized crime and white collar crime together steal about $1 out of every $17 from the annual Gross National Product for a total take in excess of $100 billion," the professor said.

He has also taught a course in organized crime, asserting the two crime categories are closely related. "White collar crime is where organized crime is now going. It is now getting at least partially out of the dope, prostitution and gambling business and into the more legitimate type of endeavors," Alloway said.

Revival Series Begins Mar. 26

SIMPSON — The Rev. Jack M. Hunter, pastor of Murfreesboro United Methodist Church, Elizabeth City District, will be preaching in revival services at Salem United Methodist Church March 26-31.

Services will begin each night at 7:30 with morning services beginning at 10 o'clock.

The Rev. Hunter was educated at Louisiana College, Methodist College and Duke University. He has served Methodist churches in Harlowe, Fayetteville, Stedman, Gardners and Murfreesboro.

There will be special singing each night and a nursery will be provided.

The pastor, Rev. James G. Lupton, and the congregation invite the public to attend.
