Contract Signed, Ending 110-Day Long Coal Strike

By DREW VON BERGEN

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The United Mine Workers and the soft coal industry formally signed a new three-year contract Saturday night, ending a 110-day nationwide coal strike that became so bitter both sides called it a war.

The union's 160,000 miners, who went on strike Dec. 6, are expected to return to work Monday. It was the longest soft coal strike in history.

UMW President Arnold Miller and Joseph Brennan, president of the Bituminous Coal Operators Association, signed the document in an 8-minute ceremony in the library at UMW headquarters. Both men wore serious expressions as they signed the 100-page document.

Brennan said the walkout had produced "an industrial armageddon and we were down as far as we can go.

"I liken it as a peace treaty between two warring nations," he added.

"Everybody suffered," said the laconic Miller. And, speaking to the miners who were bitter about the deal they accepted in Friday night's voting, he said: "a bad peace is better than any war you get into.

"It remains for us to get together and not be in the same situation three years hence," Miller continued.

Brennan said the the national contract between the BCOA and UMW "survived its most severe test since 1950," and thanked President Carter for his patience while pushing for a settlement.

"We appreciate the president's recognition of this ability by permitting a collective bargaining process to conclude these negotiations," Brennan added. "This was a key to their success."

The UMW said final returns showed 58,384 miners, 56.9 percent, voted to ratify the contract, and 44,210 opposed.

President Carter said the ratification "upholds the important principle of industry-wide bargaining between the coal operators and the UMW.

"From the outset, we have known that the only satisfactory conclusion to this strike would be a collectively-bargained agreement, acceptable to both sides," Carter said in a statement read by Labor Secretary Ray Marshall at a White House briefing.

Negotiators for 14,000 UMW mine construction workers and the Association of Bituminous Contractors resumed talks to reach a separate settlement.

Marshall said construction bargainers "expect to reach a settlement by Monday" and Miller said he expected no delay in the Monday start-up date for his miners.

Marshall and Energy Secretary James Schlesinger told reporters Carter would soon name a commission to study long-range problems in the industry.

"As gratifying as the vote was, it doesn't show overwhelming endorsement of the contract," Marshall said.

The labor secretary said he felt the most important factor leading to agreement was fear shared by the operators and UMW that industry-wide bargaining would be broken.

Two earlier contract proposals were rejected, one by the union's bargaining council and the second by the rank-and-file by a better than 2-1 margin.

Carter had invoked the Taft-Hartley Act, only to see miners ignore a federal judge's back-to-work order.

Experts said coal can begin moving within a week and shipments were expected to be back to normal early next month.

Miller's power as head of the UMW was scarred, and some members have filed petitions for his recall.

The new contract provides a 31 percent pay hike from $7.80 to $10.20 per hour over the three-year period, but requires miners to pay a portion of medical bills for the first time, and while boosting pension benefits, continues inequities in payments.

Kidnaper Suspect Questioned

PARIS (UPI) — Police questioning a suspected kidnapper of Baron Edouard-Jean Empain said Saturday he had "furnished a few details" about his cohorts and officials believed the millionaire industrialist was still alive.

Alain Caillol, 35, a stickup man with a long criminal record, was captured Friday when police shot it out with five gunmen at a rendezvous where an Empain aide was supposed to deliver a ransom of 17 million Swiss francs — the equivalent of $8 million.

Caillol was slightly wounded, as were two policemen. A second gunman, Daniel Duchateau, 39, was killed. The other three gunmen escaped.

A Century Old Shell Killed One, Hurt Two

AYDEN — A century-old artillery shell, still packed with destructive power, exploded, killing an Ayden relic shop owner who was trying to disarm it.

The owner of Rick's Relics, Irvin Richard Swain, 30, of Greenville, a native of Columbia, died at the scene shortly after the 10:45 a.m. Friday explosion that ripped through the small shop located across from the Ayden Town Hall.

Two Ayden youths were also wounded in the blast, Arthur Earl Sutton, 14, and Vance Moore, Jr., 15. Sutton, at first in critical condition, was Saturday in satisfactory condition in Pitt Memorial Hospital. Moore was treated and released.

Ayden Police Chief Tommy Burney said Sutton was standing near Swain, who had been working on the shell, and had apparently tried to extract the powder by drilling a hole, touching off the explosion.

The force of the blast sent debris into the street, and parts of the drill press through the roof.

"We can't find parts of the drill press motor. They aren't anywhere to be found in the store," Burney said.

The blast destroyed a section of a two-layer thick brick interior wall to the rear of the drill press. The store's interior was shattered, glass broken, and parts of the shell found in the front lobby.

"It reminded me of Germany in World War II," said Ayden Mayor Ross Persinger.

Persinger runs an antique shop a block away and was among the first on the scene. Persinger said when he entered the store he found Moore, covered with black powder and clearly in shock. The mayor said he ran inside and saw Swain lying in a pool of blood. Persinger went outside again and spotted Sutton. One of Sutton's legs appeared badly mutilated.

Members of the Ayden Rescue Squad and Ayden Fire Department responded to the call. They were assisted by the Winterville Rescue Squad.

Burney also noted that there was some fire shortly after the explosion and that two buildings adjacent to the shop received structural damage.

An ordinance disposal from Fort Bragg was called to search the building for other relics that might be dangerous. No report on their findings is now available.

The shop specialized in Civil War battlefield memorabilia along with metal detectors and other accessories for collecting relics.

Pitt County Sheriff Ralph Tyson cautioned citizens that military relics can be very dangerous and should be handled only by military or law enforcement personnel.

Investigation into the explosion is continuing.

Pilgrims Gather In The Holy City

JERUSALEM (UPI) — Thousands of Christian pilgrims Saturday prayed at Jerusalem's holy sites or shopped through bazaars awaiting Easter Sunday festivities.

Church and tourism officials said some 20,000 worshippers took part in the traditional Good Friday procession along Via Dolorosa — the Street of Sorrow — the last route Jesus Christ took to martyrdom.

Similar crowds were expected to participate in Easter Sunday festivities that will culminate in a pontifical mass celebrated by Monsignor Giacomo Beltritti at the 1,700-year-old Church of the Holy Sepulcher, traditional site of Christ's crucifixion and resurrection.

Israeli officials say pilgrims appear to have ignored Arab guerrilla terrorist threats and warnings to boycott the services in the Israeli-annexed East Jerusalem.

There were no incidents during the Good Friday procession. The pilgrims — some carrying large wooden crosses — filed slowly in small groups, singing hymns in their native languages.

Only a few thousand worshippers will be able to enter the Church of the Holy Sepulcher, which recently underwent major repairs, for the dawn services conducted by Monsignor Beltritti.

Before celebrating the resurrection mass on a special altar next to Jesus' tomb, the Latin patriarch will kneel and kiss the stone where Jesus is said to have been annointed after being taken from the cross.

Moravian Service

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — Old Salem expected 30,000 visitors Sunday for what has been called "the nation's most beautiful Easter service."

Townspeople started getting ready for the service, which features bands from six of the town's Moravian churches, on Good Friday. They began scrubbing the flat white gravestones in God's Acre, where the sunrise service is held, and setting out pots of lilies, azaelas and hyacinths.

The youth of Trinity Moravian Church made their annual trek through downtown Winston-Salem Monday carrying a huge wooden cross, watched by the tourist who had already begun to gather.

Bands from the other Moravian churches — Bethania, Rural Hall, Friedland, Kernersville and Olivet — will serenade their neighborhoods with "Sleepers Wake" a reminder to the faithful that dawn in coming.

The Salem bandsmen will return to Home Moravian for breakfast before going outside for the 206th service at 5:45 a.m.

Two of the bands accompany the worshippers from Salem Square to the grassy aisles of God's Acre. Four more bands are stationed there, and the muscial groups will play antiphonally for the service.

Califano Wishes To Resume Negotiations

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Health, Education and Welfare Secretary Joseph Califano says he hopes both sides will take a new look at the University of North Carolina dispute, but Gov. Jim Hunt says the state stands ready to pick up the tab should HEW succeed in cutting off federal funds.

Califano sent word to university officials that "he wishes to resume negotiations because he believes we may get the matter resolved," said UNC Board of Governors chairman William A. Johnson.

Partly as a result of that overture, UNC officials agreed Friday to postpone bringing a lawsuit against HEW for at least several days. Johnson emerged from a three-hour closed meeting of a special board commitee Friday, saying the university would resume negotiations only if there was some hope of reaching a settlement.

Negotiations between HEW and UNC broke off earlier this week after Califano announced that he would begin steps to cut off federal aid to UNC — an amount estimated at $89 million. He took the action after North Carolina and HEW failed to agree to reach agreement on a plan to eliminate the lingering effects of the old, racially segregated university system.

Hunt, at a news conference here, said Friday that he believes the General Assembly will provide the necessary funds for the 16-campus system if the funds are stopped.

Quadruplets Born At Duke

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Duilio Roura admits he was shocked when his wife gave birth to quadruplets Saturday instead of the triplets the couple had expected.

But Roura expressed confidence Saturday that he and his wife could handle their four new babies as well as the two children they already have at home.

The four little girls born early Saturday morning will be named Diana, Rebecca, Carolina and Lolita, Roura said. The quadruplets, born at 3:45, 3:46, 3:51 and 3:59 a.m. Saturday were reported doing well in the Duke Medical Center's Intensive Care Nursery.

"My hat fell off," when doctors told him he was the father of four more girls, Roura said.

The Rouras have two daughters, Christina, 1½, and Angie, 4, at home in Fayetteville.

The new babies weighed three pounds three ounces, three pounds five ounces, three pounds and two pounds six ounces at birth.

Mrs. Rebecca Roura, 22, was rushed to Duke Medical Center by Army helicopter Friday from a Fayetteville Hospital when she seemed about to go into premature labor. Physicians attempted to delay the labor, hoping to gain time so the babies' lungs could mature before they were born. The quadruplets arrived nine and a half weeks early.

The odds against having quadruplets are approximately one in 729,000 births, according

Four Charged In Accidents

William Lawrence Davis Jr. of Delco, was charged with running a red light in an accident on Tenth Street at 3:35 p.m. Friday. The driver of the other vehicle, Thelma Teresa Speight, and a passenger, Pam Speight, both of Kinston, were taken to Pitt Memorial Hospital and released. Police estimate damages to the Davis vehicle at $1,500 and $2,000 to the Speight automobile.

In an accident in the Holiday Inn parking lot in Greenville, Willie Ray Maye Rt. 5, was taken to Pitt Memorial Hospital and released. Police charged him with excessive speed in the accident which occured at 1:45 p.m. Friday. Also involved in the accident was Edwin Gerald Perkins of Garner. Police estimate damages to the Maye vehicle to be $650, and $800 to the Perkins vehicle.

In a Saturday morning accident, police charged Ovelia Southall Melton of 1208 E. 3rd, with a passing violation, and the driver of the other vehicle, Martha Forbes Jones, 1808 Battle Dr., with a failure to signal violation. Police estimate damages to the Melton vehicle to be $175 and $275 to the Jones vehicle.

Titan Rocket Mission Aborted

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (UPI) — The U.S. Air Force sent a destruct signal to a Titan rocket carrying a pair of military communications satellites Saturday, aborting an $80 million mission eight minutes after liftoff.

Air Force officials said a range safety officer at Cape Canaveral sent the destruct signal when the rocket suddenly began slowing down and falling back to earth.

The officials said the Titan 3-C rocket was definiately destroyed in flight but it might have broken up on its own before the destruct signal was sent from the ground.

"I believe it's broken up, there's no doubt in my mind," said Col. William Barkman, director of launch vehicles for the Air Force Space and Missile System Organization.

Air Force officials said the debris from the 31,000-pound space mission — rocket and satellites — fell into the ocean, but the exact location was not immediately known.

The rocket lifted off on schedule at 1:09 p.m. EST and appeared headed for a routine flight. It went into an orbit ranging from 92 to 230 miles from earth just before the trouble began.

Col. Roland Raab, who was announcing the progress of the "Triple Seven" satellite flight, said the problem began around when the Titan's second stage shut off and the rocket went into orbit.

"The problem occurred within a few seconds before or after that," Raab said. "The rocket then lost velocity and altitude."

Barkman said he has "no idea" what caused the trouble with the launch of the twin satellites, which were to join three others already in orbit as part of the Defense Satellite Communications System.

"We spent a lot of effort to make the launches 100 percent successful, but there's always a chance of a random failure," he said. "It is very heartbreaking when we lose one."

Four of the solar battery-powered satellites were to transmit telephone conversations, computer data and television pictures for the Defense Department, with the fifth acting as a spare.

The Defense Department has been using a NATO satellite stationed over the Pacific as part of the network since it was launched in 1977.

The old satellite was to be returned to NATO control for use as a backup to another of the alliance's satellite now in use over the Atlantic.

Officials said the agreement with NATO would be expanded to keep the old satellite over the western Pacific until two other "Triple 7" satellites are launched in September and become operational.

Saturday's failure was the fifth destruction of a Titan 3-C in 28 flights since 1965, officials said. And it was the fourth rocket failure at the cape in just over six months.

News Briefs

$28.6 Million Rate Hike

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The North Carolina Utilities Commission has approved a $28.6 million rate hike for Southern Bell, far short of the utility's proposal for $65 million in increases.

Under the commission's orders issued Friday, $22 million will be generated from increases in long distance charges and another $6.8 million will be generated by local service rates and charges.

Bell had sought a large increase in the fee charged for installation of a telephone for residential customers, and the commission allowed a smaller hike. Bell had asked for an increase from the current fee of $25.50 to $72.50, and the commission's ruling will allow it to rise to $33 for new installations. Residences which had prior telephone service will be charged $21 for installation.

Wins Brief Delay

NEW YORK (AP) — Joan Little won a brief delay Friday of her extradition to North Carolina, when an appeals court judge granted defense lawyer William Kunstler's request for a show-cause order.

Associate Justice Vincent D. Damaniani of the Appellate Division of state Supreme Court granted the order, routinely instructing the state to demonstrate on Monday why her extradition should be carried out.

North Carolina authorities are seeking the return of Miss Little, who escaped last October from a Raleigh prison and was recaptured in December in New York City. Her return was ordered Thursday by a state Supreme Court justice.

Asks Carter To Intervene

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Jim Martin, R-N.C., has called on the president to intervene in behalf of the University of North Carolina system in its desegregation dispute with HEW Secretary Joseph Califano.

"Help us before irreversible harm is done," Martin wrote to President Carter Friday. "We call on you to intervene in the name of reasonableness and fairness to all the people of North Carolina and to our highly regarded university."

Martin said Califano's move to cutoff federal funds to the 16-campus system is apparently "intended to destroy the reputation of our state, our consolidated university and the leadership of both."

Mayor Killed By Lightning

MORGANTON, N.C. (AP) — The mayor of Lexington, N.C., was killed and four persons were injured when lightning struck a campsite where 18 campers were sleeping.

Mayor Harry Vernon Anderson Jr., 45, was killed Friday night while he and most of the other campers from three family groups with him huddled under a tarpaulin seeking shelter from a rainstorm, according to the Burke County Sheriff's Department.

Those hospitalized were identified as Robert L. Grubb, a Lexington attorney; Katherine Team, 22, and her nephews, David, 17, and Adam, 12.

IRS Begins Probe

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — The Internal Revenue Service has begun on its own probe following voluntary disclosures of possible improper payments and an internal audit in three of Liggett Group's wine and spirit subsidiaries.

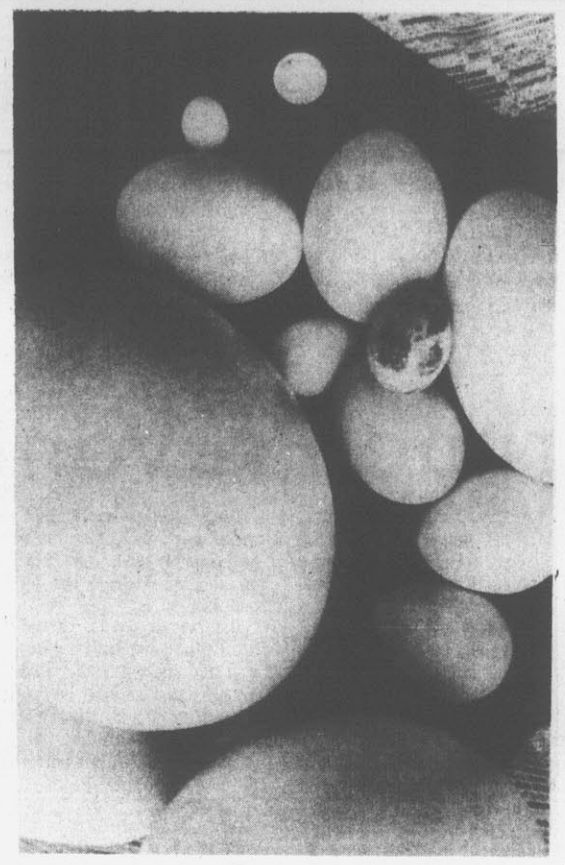

The possible violations were outlined in two reports filed by Liggett with the Securities Exchange Commission.

Roger W. Hooker, Liggett vice president for government and legal affairs, said he did not know why the IRS would begin its own audit when the corporation had already committed itself to an internal audit for the SEC and Treasury Department's Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms.

Easter Is Salmonellosis Time

ATLANTA (AP) — Easter Sunday is a time for egg hunts and church services, but the national Center for Disease Control says it is also the season for salmonellosis, a disease caused by bacteria.

Salmonellosis knows no age barrier and can be caused by a variety of foods as well as by baby chicks and ducklings given children as Easter gifts.

Rain Dampened Annual Fiddlers Convention

UNION GROVE, N.C. (UPI) — Rain dampened the spirits of some revelers at the 54th annual Old Time Fiddlers Convention, but J. Pierce VanHoy's miry cow pasture and the narrow two-lane road leading up to it prevented them from leaving.

"If you've ever seen a hog pen, you've got an idea of what it looks like out here," said one of the deputies policing the 160,000 gathered for the blue grass festivities.

Though the pavillion where the final competition was staged Saturday held 15,000 standing-room-only fans, officials said many more gathered around, holding umbrellas, newspapers and blankets over their heads to ward off the rain.

The convention, the largest of its kind in the nation, offers $10,000 in prizes for the best fiddler, the best blue grass and old time bands and the best instrumentalists in other categories. The competition, begun Thursday with rounds to narrow the field to the finalists, ends in the early hours of Sunday morning.

The massive crowd began pouring into VanHoy's farm Wednesday evening and relaxed under perfect spring skies until rain began early Saturday.

Every time it rains at the convention, area farmers turn out with their tractors to help pull cars from the mire.

"They're out there now," said Lt. John Griffin, supervising the afternoon shift of 40 officers who kept an eye on the crowd.

"The biggest problem now is traffic," he added. "Those who can get out are trying to leave and a lot are swamped up in the mud."

Officials said through mid-afternoon there had been about 105 arrests, most for misdemeanor drug posession, alcohol and traffic charges.

That few arrests over four days for a "city" of 160,000, said Griffin, "is almost too good."

To handle policing problems, Iredell County Sheriff Tom Thompson each year moves his department from Statesville to the Union Grove School. Highway patrolmen and the State Bureau of Investigation help out and magistrates are provided around the clock.

The officers patrol the area around the convention, but do not go onto the convention grounds.

The convention was launched 54 years ago by VanHoy's father to raise money for the Union Grove School. After it outgrew the school yard, it was moved to VanHoy's farm in the Blue Ridge foothills.

Easter Ice Storm

By United Press International

An Easter-weekend ice storm encased the Midwest in ice Saturday, shutting down major highways, stranding motorists and halting air traffic at the world's busiest airport.

Ice toppled trees and snapped power lines across the storm area, plunging hundreds of thousands of people into darkness in several cities.

At least eight persons have been killed in the latest surge of bitter, wintry weather. Indiana, Oklahoma and Missouri each reported two storm deaths and Illinois and Iowa each reported one.

The storm pushed eastward, prompting travel advisories and storm warnings fo parts of Ohio, Pennsylvania and Maryland, where freezing rain and sleet hampered Easter travel.

Freezing rain, snow and high winds crippled Chicago, closing O'Hare International Airport — the world's busiest — stopping elevated trains and transforming expressways into ribbons of ice.

Snow and ice spread over a wide swath off the midlands from Kansas City to Indianapolis.

Freezing rain and ice also triggered scattered power outages in the Fort Wayne, Ind., area, where floodwaters of the Maumee River and its tributaries have forced 2,000 persons from their home. However, floodwaters were subsiding and officials said the freezing rain helped slow the flow of the river.

Up to 8 inches of snow fell in some sections of western Missouri and heavy rain prompted flood warnings in southern Missouri.

Jones ARC Accredited

The Walter B. Jones Alcoholic Rehabilitation Center has been accredited by the Board of Commissioners of the Joint Commission on Accreditation of Hospitals, according to Donald H. Hayes, Director of the Center.

Recommended by the Commission's accreditation council of psychiatric facilities, the accreditation period is two years.

The letter of accreditation stated, "The Commission wishes to commend you for maintaining standards deserving of accreditation and for your constant effort to improve the quality of patient care."

This is the fifth year the facility, located on the Falkland Highway in Greenville, has been accredited. The ARC was also the first alcohol treatment center accredited by Medicare/Medicaid in the southeastern United States.

Dr. David Hancock, the Joint Commission of Accreditation on Hospitals surveyor of the program, stated that the highest praise he could give a center was that "Iwould like to work here". He said the ARC met all qualifications.

Director Hayes stated that every staff member at the center could feel a great sense of pride in this accomplishment and cited Mrs. Phyllis Martin for her outstanding work as chair-chairperson of the ARC Accreditation Committtee.

Roura, an optician, said he plans to convert his bedroom into a nursery and says he and his wife will move downstairs to the living room. He said he hopes to hire a babysitter to help out with the babies, although it "might be costly."

Even when his wife was rushed to the hospital Friday, Roura maintained his calm outlook on the whole situation. He didn't think birth was imminent and spent the evening playing bass guitar with his rock and roll group. He was awakened at 5:30 a.m. with the news that he was the proud father of four more.

"I was in a daze, more or less," Roura said. "I really didn't know what to think."

Roura said his wife " is feeling much better today," and will stay in the hospital for two weeks, "until she gets her strength back." The infants will remain at Duke for about eight weeks.

"But I'm sure if we can handle two, we can handle six," Roura said. "We can't turn back now."

Sentenced

SHELBY, N.C. (AP) — A 26-year-old Taylorsville man, who pleaded guilty earlier in the week to murder in the death of an elderly Granite Falls woman, was sentenced Friday to die in the gas chamber.

Norman Dale Johnson, 26, received the death penalty for the slaying of 65-year-old Mabel Sherrill after a jury recommended the death sentence over life in prison.

2 Die In Fire

FORT LEWIS, Wash. (AP) — Investigators were trying to determine Saturday the cause of a fire which claimed the lives of two young children here.

Authorities said Jacqueline Younger, 5, and her sister Rhonda, 7, died of smoke inhalation Friday in an afternoon apartment fire.

Capt. Frank Maughan, division public affairs officer at the Army base, said the father, Staff Sgt. Raymond Younger of Hookerton, N.C., had been on assignment in Virginia at the time of the fire, but was en route back to Fort Lewis on Saturday.

In The End – Good Compromise

What started out as a routine water shed project and turned into a court case of national importance was finally settled in the court of Federal Judge John Larkins last week.

Judge Larkins signed a consent judgement which concluded litigation that began on Nov. 30, 1971. It goes back even beyond that to 1963 when the Chicod Creek Watershed Project was instituted. Some 250 farmers were requesting asssitance from the U. S. Department of Agriculture concerning flooding and drainage. Around 35,100 acres were involved.

There had been little opposition to such projects prior to that; indeed a number of them had been carried out in Pitt County. By the end of the 1960s, however, a concern for protecting the environment was spreading across the country.

Environmental groups headed by the Natural Resources Defense Council, Inc. brought action opposing the Chicod Creek project and a landmark suit was underway.

Ultimately it was settled by a compromise. Among the requirements was one that the U. S. Army Corps of Engineers must grant a permit concerning water quality standards; seven miles of stream modification were eliminated; clearing and snagging were to be in progress only from July 1 to Jan. 31 to miss the spawning runs of herring; and that sediment traps be installed.

Judge Larkins said the area adjacent to Chicod Creek had been declared one of the 20 best wetlands in the United States.

"I can't tell you how pleased I am" Judge Larkins said as he concluded the case.

We must express pleasure, also. A way has been found to provide for the flooding and drainage needs of farmers in the area, while still protecting the delicate balance of nature in that area.

Pitt County, and for that matter the entire nation, should be the better for that.

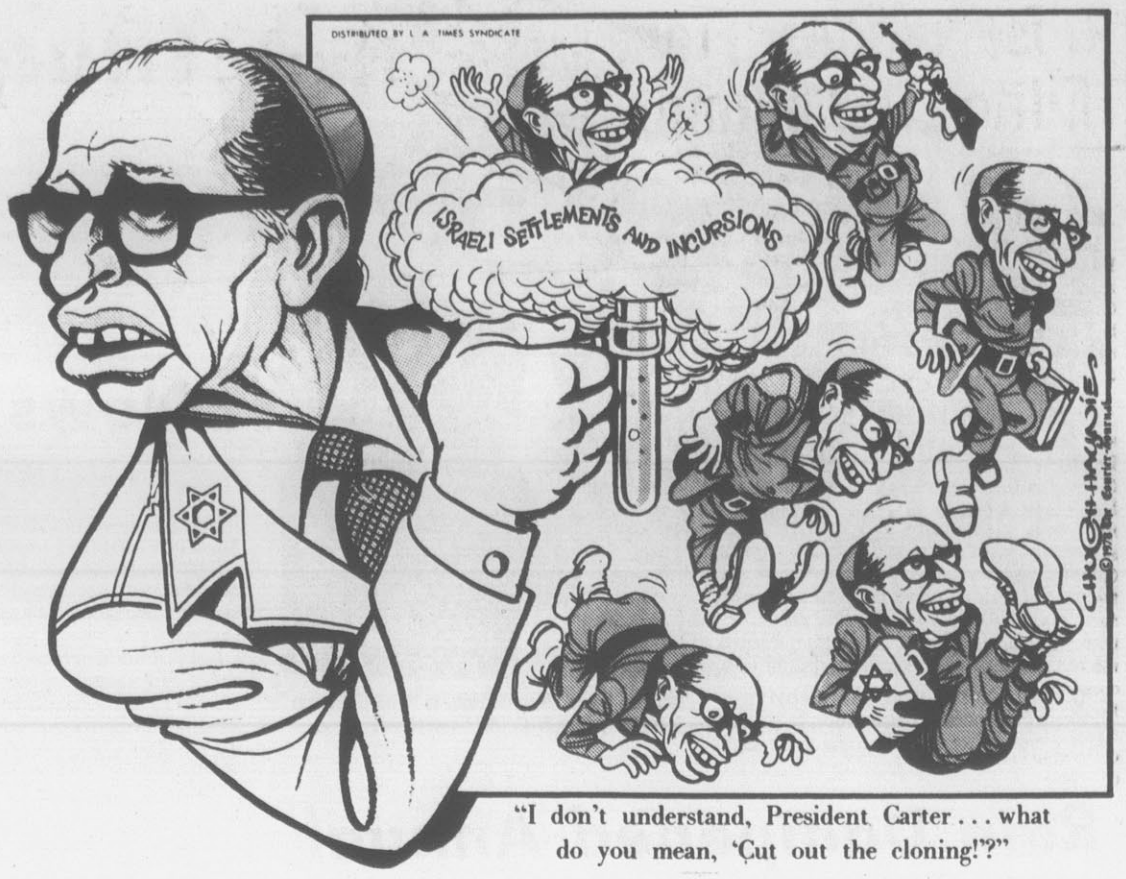

Easter A Day For Renewal Of Faith

Today is Easter, a day that hundreds of millions in the Christian world celebrate for its gift of eternal life.

The day marks the Resurrection of Jesus Christ on the third day after the crucifixion.

The day of Easter is set for western Christians as the first Sunday after the full moon that occurs upon or next after the vernal equinox (March 21).

The actual date of the Resurrection is unknown, but for Christians the world over the symbolic day of Easter is a time for renewal of faith.

ECU Crime Prevention

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — Efforts at student involvement in crime prevention on college campuses in North Carolina are running into a financial problem: they don't qualify for federal funds.

"We are not eligible for funds from the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration to develop a crime prevention program in that we are not a unit of local government and are part of a state institution," explains Francis M. Eddings, assistant director of security at East Carolina University at Greenville.

Eddings points out that even though East Carolina and other campuses "have a larger population concentrated in a small area than some of the smaller towns and cities in North Carolina that are funded by the (federal) crime prevention programs," his security police department is making an effort. Two members of the East Carolina University Police have developed a crime prevention program, largely during off-duty hours, Eddings says.

A special program concerning rape, and another on general crime prevention are presented to students "at every opportunity. The reception has been excellent," Eddings reports.

The School of the Arts in Winston-Salem is participating in the state Community Crime Watch program, and Eddings feels the approach at East Carolina is equally as effective. "We have crime on our campus, but we are giving it our best effort to control it," he said.

Enforcement

The closer North Carolina came to mandatory energy conservation during the coal strike, the more nervous state officials became.

Gov. James B. Hunt, Jr. urged voluntary conservation methods, and those plans were well detailed. He warned that if things went too far, mandatory measures would be implemented, and the details were ironed out by committee.

But nobody really wanted to face the prospect of enforcing the rules till the last minute. Just a week before things stabilized, J. Phil Carlton, secretary of the Department of Crime Control and Public Safety pulled together a group to write those procedures.

"This is so frightening that I think we would lose some of our key people if it came to taking such steps," Carlton feels.

Basically, the Highway Patrol and State Bureau of Investigation would join local police and sheriff's deputies in literally checking the thermostats and operating hours at industrial and commercial establishments — and even spot-checking private residences for violations.

The thought of such officers intruding in such a fashion on private citizens — despite the emergency — is so distasteful to some that there is serious doubt that successful enforcement could take place.

Jobs

Experts in data processing have some advice for students: get into computer technology in high school, grow up with the machines, then get advanced learning in college or technical schools.

There is a chronic shortage of employees so severe that some key industry people insist a qualified person can pick his own section of the country in which to live, always find a good job and a good salary, and look forward to working in a business that is growing at the rate of 40 per cent per year.

Sunday Morning Notes

On one of those warm sunny afternoons recently a group of boys were whiling away the time on the downtown mall.

One of them had a radio which was sending out lively music. The radio was battery operated, but apparently the boy also had an adapter.

To save batteries he had plugged the radio into one of the electrical outlets built into the mall.

There goes another lump of coal.

One observer viewed the under-construction addition to Ficklen Stadium in awe.

"You know," he said. "That thing would probably hold everybody in Greenville.

You know, he's right. The population is estimated now at around 34,000. The stadium when completed should hold in excess of 35,000.

What a town meeting that would make!

Maybe Mayor Cox will schedule a public hearing there on the dog ordinance, or something.

The first day of Spring dawned last week. The season when the plant world reawakens, reptiles come out of hibernation and humans get Spring fever came in at 6:34 p.m. Monday, making Tuesday the first full day of Spring.

A beautiful day it was with mild temperatures and the first hints of the flowers and greenery that will very soon abound.

For your columnist who had escaped the assorted cold, flu and other winter related bugs, the first day of Spring was the day of reckoning. A cold struck with all its typical miseries — a great way to start the new season.

We can take comfort in that age-old advice on how to treat colds.

Take the various medications available and you will cure a cold in seven days; simply ignore it and it will go away in a week.

But this is not to allow a columnist's cold to spoil the pleasant season for everyone else.

The calendar said it was Spring last week and so did the temperatures. If that isn't enough, Spring was confirmed when the sunbathers appeared in large numbers on the hill alongside Clement Dorm on Reade Circle.

Spring is definitely here!

Texas: Limo Land

By RICHARD S. BOGGS

DALLAS (UPI) — Roger Harris says Texas, with its atmosphere, oil and international trade shows, is good scenery for a custom limousine business, but it makes a terrible sales territory.

The state's oil and industrial millionaires apparently would just as soon drive to work, Harris said. And so Harris uses Texas like a stage prop. The city lures the wealthy who expect to find businesses like Harris' Phaeton Coach Corp., and they slap down the $28,000 to $50,000 for a custom limo and ship it home. The firm sells 150 such cars each year.

"Texas really isn't limousine country yet," Harris said. "You could stand on a Dallas street corner all day long and perhaps not see a single limousine, but in New York, they're lined up for blocks, 500 of them along some streets at the end of the day.

"A corporate executive doesn't want to ride public transportation or drive his own car and battle traffic for 90 minutes on his way home. He buys a limo or his company buys him one and he reads the paper, listens to music and has a drink on the way home."

Phaeton, a name borrowed from the son of the Greek Sun God, began in 1970. Its craftsmen rebuild luxury autos, adding a few feet in length, custom moon roofs, special wire wheels, tire and handling equipment and custom trunks, hoods, grills and ornaments.

They add plush carpeting, pushbutton everything including radios, TVs and special communications equipment, bars, safes and a power divider window to exclude the chauffer from rear seat conversations, all at the owner's option.

Harris says he has often been asked to include filing cabinets, dictaphones, rear seat air and electricity for a shaver or hair dryer. Occasionally he receives a strange request, such as an intercom telephone to the chauffeur and a custom shoe horn.

The Phaeton Mark IV is perhaps the best known of the firm's limos, with seating for seven or eight. The 16-foot Cadillac conversion seats nine

THE INSIDE REPORT

Can Carter Beat Begin?

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — Two questionable political weapons have been unsheathed by President Carter for possible use against Israel's Prime Minister Menahem Begin if — no matter what he says — he diddles the President and the United Nations on the demand for a rapid pullout of Israeli troops from Lebanon.

Yet, despite deadly serious purpose, the effectiveness of either weapon or of any other exercise of presidential power over Israel's prime minister is not yet certain. Indeed, the generally low state of U.S. influence, as contrasted with 21 years ago when President Eisenhower successfully ordered Israel to withdraw from its first Sinai invasion, affects the way Israel looks at the U.S. as much as it affects any other country.

The first of Mr. Carter's weapons is straightforward: a law long on the books requiring a total ban on any more U.S. military aid to any country that has used American weapons against a foreign nation, except for self-defense. Begin claims that the invasion and takeover of one-tenth of Lebanon was for "self-defense" — but it will be termed offensive by President Carter if Begin doesn't quickly act on the Security Council order to get out.

The second weapon is more ambiguous but — as with the first — it could pose problems for Begin: a spelling out in detail of the U.S. position for an overall Mideast settlement.

Tenaciously resisted by all previous Israeli governments as equivalent to a hated "imposed" settlement, such a spelling out of the American position would put Begin on the political defensive.

"Carter means business this time," one administration official told us. "He feels more strongly than the so-called Arabists ro-Arab diplomats) in the State Department."

Inside the White House, Mr. Carter's top aides talked bravely about the fact that "we are not defenseless" as they awaited Begin's arrival. But in hard fact, the mood was a bit apprehensive. Some with a long memory recalled nostalgically the way Eisenhower went on national television on Feb. 20, 1957, with his no-compromise demand that Israel withdraw from every inch of the Sinai it seized in 1956.

Stating that Israel "insists on firm guarantees" as a condition of withdrawal, Eisenhower said he would be "untrue" to his office if he endorsed "the proposition that a nation which invades another should be permitted to exact conditions for withdrawal."

The invasion of Lebanon, dictated by the same security concerns that led to that first invasion of the Sinai, has now taken Israeli troops to the Litani River. Some administration aides fear that Begin, a tough bargainer, will employ a series of stratagems to exploit the strong new military position his troops occupy, and his equally new and strong political base following the March 11 terrorist attack.

One stratagem: an immediate, partial withdrawal to a line six miles north of the Israeli border. That was to be the original farthest point of the Israeli advance into Lebanon. By dramatizing a quick readiness to pull back that far — despite the risks of Arab guerrillas penetrating the area to be vacated — Begin would come across as accommodating, making it politically embarrassing for Mr. Carter to bring overt pressure to go all the way immediately.

A far graver stratagem now feared by some Carter Mideast advisers would be a Begin offer for withdrawal from Lebanon, but linked to a demand that the President stop pressuring Israel to change its policy never to give up the West Bank.

That was the Carter administration's top target when the Begin visit was originally planned. Before the terrorist attack of March 11, the President had approved a confidential agenda strongly pressing Begin to agree on eventual withdrawal from the West Bank and on abandoning Jewish settlements in the Sinai as part of an overall Sinai withdrawal plan. That agenda proposed a no-holds-barred Carter attack in the privacy of the Oval Office against Begin's obduracy on A Wasteland?

(Rocky Mount Telegram)

The good green earth may be considerably less so very shortly if a trend in the developing nations continues unchecked. The World Bank warns that there could be no forests left in less than a century if deforestation continues at the present rate in countries seeking to make the great leap forward in industrialization.

A report places the present forested area in developing countries at some 1.5 billion acres, half what it was at the turn of the century. The World Bank, putting primary blame on population pressures, is allocating half-billion dollars over the next five years to projects designed to halt deforestation and renew forests.

Actually, what is happening is an acceleration of a process that has been underway for thousands of years. Through much of man's civilized history, progress toward ever higher levels of culture has been accompanied by a denuding of his original natural environment.

China, in much of which today trees are notable for their scarcity, was once heavily forested. Likewise Italy and Western Europe. Changes in climate have also been involved, but human activities — over-use without heed to replacement or wanton wasting— have been a major force in the degreening of the planet.

Fortunately deforestation need not be an irreversible process. Once much of the original farming population had moved on to the more promising Middle West, large tracts of the Northeastern United States were returned to forest.

Modern Germany's prized woodlands are carefully cultivated replacements of the ancient dark Teutonic forests.

Only God, it is true, is able to make a tree. But man can certainly do a lot to help or hinder its survival.

Strength For Today

NO CORNERSTONES

Very few new buildings today have cornerstones. The steel structures of modern large buildings have made these basic supports unnecessary.

Morally, the cornerstone has gone out of fashion, also. Today many thousands of people have abandoned anything substantial or eternal upon which to build their lives. Some feel that science has rendered untenable most of the claims of Christian doctrine. They view the Ten Commandments not as moral cornerstones but rather as outmoded principles which are useful only if they can be observed without too much sacrifice of personal liberty.

These are the skeptics and cynics who have been corrupted by too much worldly comfort, deceived by superficial education, and intoxicated by too-generous drafts of the philosophy of freedom.

No more cornerstones! Maybe this is why the most comfortable generation in history is far from being the happiest generation in history.

Today's C-of-C Gets Involved

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — Once they used to promote turkey raffles or run benefit dances or crown a teen-age queen of something or other, but now that's all passe.

Chambers of commerce today are more likely to be involved with real challenges, such as school integration, arresting inner city decay, planning energy resources and promoting better work relationships.

"There was a tendency for chambers not to get involved in anything controversial," said Clyde Cole, chairman of the American Chamber of Commerce Executives. "Now we're involved in substantive issues."

Such as in Tulsa, Okla., where Cole is executive vice president of the metropolitan chamber, which threw its support behind a plan to peacefully integrate the once totally segregated school system.

"The business community had heard about a lot of communities being torn apart on this issue," said Cole, and it decided that "from a practical and pragmatic point of view this was not for Tulsa."

Or as in Jacksonville, Fla., where the chamber provided the original impetus for reorganizing and consolidating local governments into one unit, with a resultant decline in the millage rate for nine years.

Or as in Hartford, Conn., where the chamber arranged for the loan of corporate executives to provide free management expertise to school administrators.

Or as in Denver, where the chamber helped consolidate all transportation functions under a single metro transport authority. Or as in Milwaukee, where the chamber helps counsel ex-offenders.

Cole vows the old days are gone. For 50 or 75 years, he says, the personality of many chambers was exemplified by a slap on the back or dollar day sales. "That's gone forever in most cities," he promises.

Today, Cole insists, chambers of commerce are busily building cities. "There is nothing more challenging," he asserts. As he continues speaking he offers proof that the old chamber spirit still exists.

"When I get home at night I can't wait to get back the next day," he declares. Why? "Because it's so exciting."

That might be so for Cole, but why do so many business executives, including chamber members, remove their companies almost overnight from the inner city to the suburbs or even beyond?

Chamber officials have a facility with such questions. "They didn't leave because they lost confidence in the city," Cole replied. "They lost confidence in the processes available to them to deal with the problems at that time."

But now, he continues, the new, more responsible, more community oriented chambers are tackling the very problems that forced some of their colleagues to pull up stakes.

Observations From Editorial Columns

Hard Act To Follow

The Chapel Hill Newspaper

We do not envy Dr. Thomas B. Brewer, vice chancellor and dean of Texas Christian University for the last six years. He was named chancellor of East Carolina University.

We are confident that the selection was a wise one, but Dr. Brewer has a hard act to follow. His predecessor, Dr. Leo Jenkins, is considered by many to be a folk hero and savior of eastern North Carolina. While he served at the helm of ECU the institution grew by leaps and bounds, ending up with a new medical school. Like the man or not, he got things done. Dr. Brewer cannot expect to be another Leo Jenkins, but he can certainly take advantage of the Jenkins accomplishments.

This newspaper has been more of a critic than a supporter of Dr. Jenkins, but we congratulate him for the progress that he brought to the institution that he headed. A recent incident at ECU caused us to gain more respect for Dr. Jenkins. There is a movement on the ECU campus now to get rid of their new basketball coach. He has just finished his first year, had a poor record and a three year contract. "When we sign a contract with an individual," Dr. Jenkins said "we expect to honor it." So far as we know, Coach Gillman will head the basketball program there for the next two years. All of education would be better off if both coaches and college administrators felt this way about contracts.

It Was Up-Hill All The Way

By CLIFF BLUE

LEO JENKINS...During the past few weeks Dr. Leo Jenkins has been holding dinners for some of his friends and ECU supporters during his 18-year tenure as President and Chancellor of East Carolina University. Since Leo Jenkins assumed the presidency of East Carolina College 18 years ago, the institution has witnessed strong growth in becoming a great university.

On the road, block after block was thrown in the path of Dr. Jenkins in making EC a great university, but in every instance, like an oxen in the mire, he moved on and achieved the goal.

The first big battle followed Jenkins move to have the institution's name changed from "college" to university.

Jenkins argued that East Carolina was in fact a "university" and why withhold the name? The powers that be in North Carolina higher education were set dead against this "brazen" move.

To stop Leo's move to change from college to university, they tied to the bill all the little institutions of higher learning in North Carolina, feeling this would bring the East Carolina move to defeat.

Surely, they felt that the General Assembly would never have the little colleges-some little better than high schools, designated as "universities".

But, by golly, Leo's strength had grown as had his institution of higher learning, to the extent that it had the power and muscle to draw the several other colleges along with East Carolina.

The next and last big deal was the establishment of the Medical School at East Carolina. This was a long and hard struggle.

But, like the other advances, it was long needed. For the convenience and the West Bank and the settlements.

The plan was to lay out with great severity U.S. demands for enough flexibility by Begin to bring Egyptian President Anwar Sadat back into the negotiating game. No commitments were to be asked of Begin during his visit; only that he take back Mr. Carter's urgent appeals to his cabinet for a complete review of Israel's basic positions.

Now presidential advisers worry that if Begin yields anything, it will somehow be tied in to his newest conquest of southern Lebanon. Compared to Eisenhower's authoritative call for Israel to get off the Sinai 21 years ago, backed by his great prestige as President, Mr. Carter has little more than the threat of an arms cutoff which Congress might reject and the political leverage of an "imposed" U.S. plan that Israel would surely reject.

Little wonder, then, that Mr. Carter and his aides long for a return of the presidential power and prestige of two decades ago.

comfortably and one version has six-doors.

Phaeton has stretched nearly all types of cars, including making a four-door Volkswagen, "on a lark to see if we could do it" and is planning to cut two feet out of a Camaro to make "a more sporty car" out of it.

"The Camaro a 120 miles per hour car," Harris said. "When you shorten it, you get 15 to 20 percent better traction and with less weight and drag.

"It will make a great car for kids." he said. "The Arabs want a fast, different car for their kids and can you imagine how long the hood will look on that short of a body?"

Harris said half the firm's production is for export, and most of that to the Middle East where "they don't have an energy crisis. There's one place they don't worry about gasoline prices and we've got the car they want."

Phaeton has built five Cadillac limos for the royal family in Saudi Arabia, along with three special "hunting trucks" and the leaders of 13 Malasian states have Phaetons.

The Humphrey-Hawkins Bill And A Kitchen Sink

By JAMES J. KILPATRICK

WASHINGTON — J. Tolliver Spelvin, the Rappahannock County countryman, returned from Europe a couple of weeks ago and paused long enough in Washington to attend the House debate on the Humphrey-Hawkins bill. The experience left him thoroughly bemused.

"I was reminded," said Jaytee, "of a phrase you used to hear at the General Assembly in Richmond. It had something to do with a James River fisherman who looks at a fresh-caught shad and says, 'Li'l shad, I'm not going to hurt you — I'm just going to gut you.' This was known as the shad treatment. When members decided to give a bill the shad treatment, nothing but the head and tail remained."

Was he saying that the Humphrey-Hawkins bill had been so rudely treated?

"I never saw anything like it," said Jaytee. "A couple of years ago, the Full Employment and Balanced Growth Act had bones in it. It had teeth in it. It would have authorized all kinds of federal programs to put five million men to raking leaves. It would have mandated a hundred economic economic measures to keep everybody producing, buying and selling. It was a bureaucrat's dream come true."

We were standing in the corridor just outside the members' lobby. Jaytee nodded cordially as a Republican trio sauntered by — Quie of Minnesota, Ashbrook of Ohio, and Kemp of New York.

"They gave 'em fits," said my friend. "Ashebrook had an amendment on page 47 at line 19, after a list of benefits had been promised. His amendment would have changed the period to a comma and added, 'and a partridge in a pear tree.' It passed by 232 to 111. Kemp had an amendment dealing with deficit spending. He would have inserted a sentence reading, 'And be it further resolved that a stitch in time saves nine.' Well, they debated that for an hour or two, and finally amended the amendment to say that a stitch in time saves sixty-five billion, and they adopted that on a voice vote.

"The Quie amendment threw the House in something close to turmoil. Quie went to the section of the bill on economic policy and proposed that the following declaration be inserted: 'Honesty is the best policy.'

"Well, you never saw such confusion. The majority leader was running up and down the aisle hollering, 'What does it mean, what does it mean?' One majority whip went east, the other one went west. The speaker came down from the chair and tried to calm the boys down. He said they could vote their consciences, if any. Somebody stood up and called the amendment the Tongsun Park amendment, and the floor cleared as if a polecat had wandered through.

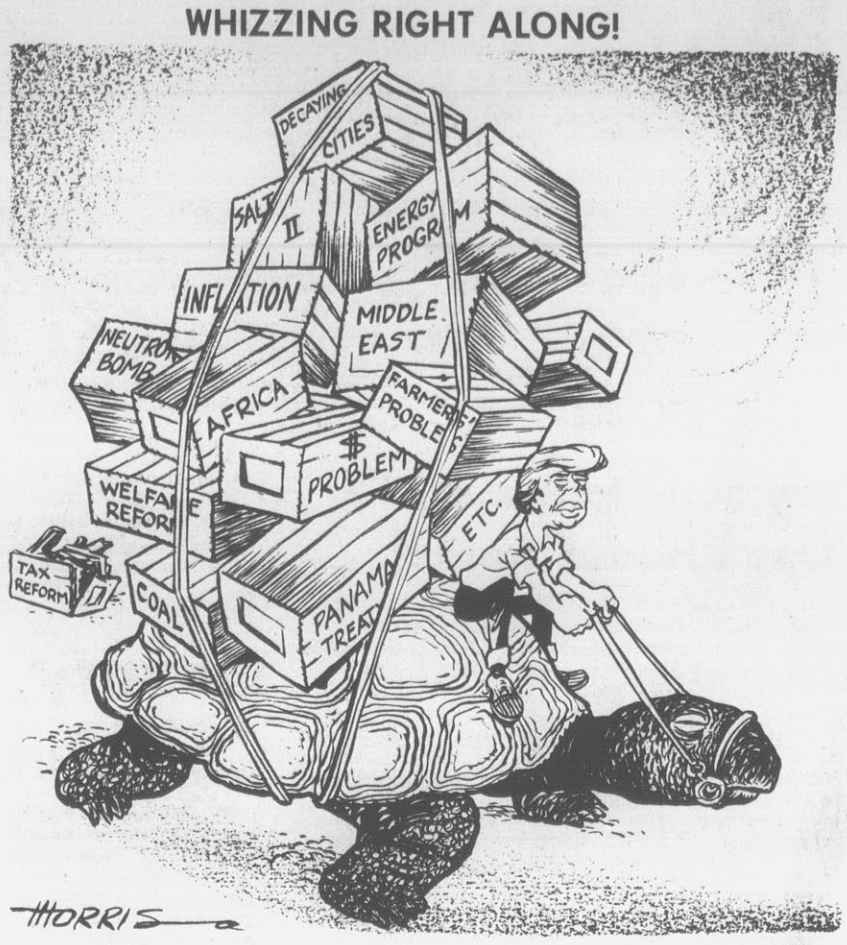

"After a while, the members filtered back, and Quie took mercy on them. He offered a substitute amendment asserting that a rolling stone gathers no moss, and they wrote it into the bill by 325 to 104.

"They had thirty other amendments. Down with inflation! Unemployment is a bad thing! Every budget should be balanced, one of these days! They wrote in a tribute to small business, they praised the magnificent contribution we farmers make to the prosperity of the world, they had kind words for labor, for management and for the chief bartender at the Madison Hotel. They spoke up for capital, and free enterprise, and a fair day's pay for a fair day's work. By the time they finished, nobody could have opposed a single sanctimonious line, but 152 members voted against it out of sheer disgust."

Jaytee said he was pleased by one change: They amended the title to read: "A bill to translate into practical reality the right of all Americans who are able, willing, and seeking to work to full opportunity for useful paid employment at fair rates of compensation; to assert the responsibility of the Federal Government to use all practicable programs and policies to promote full employment, production, and real income, balanced growth, adequate productivity growth, proper attention to national priorities, and reasonable price stability; to require the President each year to set forth explicit short-term and medium-term economic goals; to achieve a better integration of general and structural economic policies; to improve the economic policy-making within the Federal Government; and to provide the kitchen sink."

"You will think I made that up," said Jaytee, "but I kid you not. Only the last six words are my own."

Robert Gray: 'Company Man' In Crafts World

ASHEVILLE, N.C. — Robert W. Gray might be called the quintessential "company man" of Southern Highland handicrafts.

He certainly personifies the business world's "company man," who makes a deep personal commitment to the mission of his firm and whose dedication to his employer overrides any loyalties to a particular field of expertise. But in this case Gray's personal commitment and dedication is to the Appalachian region's entire crafts industry — not just his employer.

Gray is executive director of the Southern Highland Handicrafts Guild, a nonprofit corporation serving about 2,000 craftsmen in nine states: the Carolinas, Virginia, West Virginia, Maryland, Kentucky, Tennessee, Alabama and Georgia.

In that post, which he's held since 1961, he's transformed the Guild from a two-employee operation with little money into a dynamic crafts promotion and marketing agency employing nine people. The Guild operates four crafts shops — two in Asheville and one each in Blowing Rock and Bristol, Virginia — and sponsors large annual crafts fairs in Asheville and Knoxville, Tennessee, as well as traveling crafts exhibits and a continuing education program for member craftsmen.

When Gray came to the Guild, he'd already spent more than a decade spreading the handicrafts gospel that had inspired him years before to leave a job as an engineer with the Florida Highway Department in order to study pottery. He and his wife had done some woodcarving, but they both studied pottery, seeing that field as offering them an opportunity to work together and to use their background knowledge and experience.

After completing their training at Alfred University, they ran the pottery shop at Old Sturbridge Village, Massachusetts, where Gray was also involved in coordinating the crafts program. Then they moved to the Worchester Craft Center, with Gray as its director. Ten years later, the couple moved to North Carolina. Gray joined the Guild's staff and his wife continued her pottery work as a member of the Guild.

The engineer-craftsman-administrator came to that job, despite its bleak budget outlook and a cut in salary, because he felt it would give him a chance to help more craftsmen over a broader area.

The spirit of the "company man" was already at work.

Gray says he doesn't miss working at the potter's wheel very much since he gets so much satisfaction from promoting crafts, working with craftsmen and finding "creative solutions" to the Guild's business problems. He thinks all handicrafts are important because they offer an avenue of personal expression — for both the craftsman and the collector.

"If a person can't afford a fine sculpture or oil painting, he can afford ashtrays, prints, wall hangings and so on. Everybody could furnish his home adequately from Sears and Roebuck, but it would all be just alike. It's important to us to be individuals and, therefore, it's important to have crafts for the individual expression."

Gray's commitment has made him the guiding force behind plans for a Folk Art Center now under construction on the Blue Ridge Parkway near Oteen. The role put his dedication to a severe test, for it has taken 12 years for the project to evolve from inception to construction.

When it opens in the summer of 1978, the center will offer a unique blend of educational and entertainment activities while preserving the traditional folk arts of the center, with exhibits and demonstrations; but other folk arts such as story-telling and folk music and dancing will also be represented at the $2 million facility

It will be operated by the Guild under a 30-year contract with the National Park Service and will serve as headquarters for the Guild.

Gray says the delays in bringing the plans to fruition have been frustrating, but haven't dampened his sense of anticipation as he watches the center take shape on its rolling 16-acre tract.

"This is an exciting time for us."

Not Even The Weather Is A Really Safe Topic

It's usually assumed that weather is a safe topic of conversation. If the neighbor whom you've always considered a model of decorum arrives at your kitchen door one morning wearing a seethrough blouse and plastic butterflies in her newly dyed bright yellow hair, you can always recover your power of speech by pretending to fish a fly out of your coffeepot and remarking that, since she's not wearing a sweater, the weather must have turned warmer. Or if you're at a dinner party and you're seated next to a Slobovian immigrant who's eating his French onion soup with his fingers, you can save the evening by asking him how the winters in Slobovia compare with the one we just had.

But after the crazy weather we've had this year, weather is no longer the demilitarized zone of communications. In fact, people are getting downright touchy about it. For instance, when Phillip came home from work at the first of this week crowing about how beautiful it was outside, I barely missed his ear with a book entitled, "I AM A MOUSE."

"What was that for?" he gasped, moving backwards out of range.

"If you can ask me a question like that, you don't have the sense God gave a billygoat," I sniffed. "Here I am suffering from terminal bronchitis, fighting to retain consciousness in spite of lethal doses of antibiotics and cough syrup so that I can make an effort to care for a two-year-old with strep throat, and you come in cooing about the weather. You've got some nerve!"

"But I . . ."

"Don't make excuses, Phillip Michaels!" I growled. "You know what you are? You are cruel. Here Meg and I have been gazing out the living room window into the bright blue Spring, chained to a house that the SPCA would declare unfit for an animal shelter, and you have to taunt us."

"I'm sorry you don't feel well, but you're making a federal case out of nothing . . ."

"Nothing! Do you call reading 32 stories in eight hours with a voice that only a frog could love nothing?! Do you realize that Meg and I have memorized three books today?! 'My name is Dee Dee. I am a mouse . . . .' " I screamed before I collapsed into a fit of coughing.

"Calm down," Phillip said. "You'll cough less if you shut up."

Of course, as the week progressed and Meg and I got better, my anger began to subside. After this horrible winter, several days outdoors in the glorious Spring made Phillip's enthusiasm about the rising temperatures appear much more justifiable. I was beginning to berate myself for being the only person alive to respond so viciously to an innocuous remark about the weather.

That was before I walked into a store in the Evans Mall and made my own short speech in praise of warm weather.

"Yeah," a man standing near me answered. "But it won't last."

Poor man. Seven people attacked him.

Annexation May Be Seen As Means Of Protecting Urban Futures

By PATRICK A. THOMAS
Farmville Town Administrator

Annexation studies in Washington and Greenville have recently been shelved after encountering heavy resistance and criticism. As Farmville nears action on important annexation plans of its own, it is worth reviewing why non-voluntary annexations are often desirable and necessary to maintain the quality of life in N. C. towns and cities.

The Need. Recent events aside, planned annexations take place with great regularity across our state. These "standards" annexations — so called because the area must be developed according to certain minimum standards — are not undertaken simply because a city seeks growth for growth's sake or because the tax coffers need to be filled. "Standards" annexations are the essential means by which a community insures shound and orderly development, equitable and healthy commercial competition, full citizen participation, and financial soundness in local government. Towns not fully alert to these facts find themselves struggling with the problems of substandard fringe development, declining downtown business areas, and fiscally weak municipal government.

STATE POLICY. The General Assembly prefaced our annexation statutes with a formal declaration of policy on the need for annexing adjacent developed areas (G. S. 160A-33), stating, in part:

—that sound urban development is essential to the continued economic development of North Carolina;

— that municipalities are created to provide the governmental services essential for sound urban development and for the protection of health, safety and welfare in areas being intensively used for residential, commercial, industrial, institutional and government pruposes or in areas undergoing such development;

—that municipal boundaries should be extended. . . to include such areas. . . .

Beyond the State policy, there are several strong "whys" for standards annexations.

Prevention of Surburban Strangulation. If adjacent developed areas are allowed to drain people and business from the core of the community without becoming a part of the town, they isolate the original town from the economic and social base necessary to keep the municipality well-balanced. Often such areas are incorporated separately, encircling and "strangling" the central city. By using N. C.'s model annexation law and another statute (G. S. 160A-9.2) prohibiting incorporations too near existing towns, N. C. municipalities may avoid this fate.

Promotion of Citizen Participation. The fact that most residential and commercial growth occurs near municipal boundaries underlines the desirability of locating near urban amenities. Residents of the municipal fringe place additional demands on the town's services — streets, sanitation, public safety and recreation — without significantly helping to support these operations. Outside businesses are highly dependent upon the concentration of customers from within the city.

In short, the incorporated area and its developed fringe are effectively one community. The outside residents and enterprises are very much members of the community anchored by the town, with a strong stake in the vitality of the town and with substantial enjoyment of its urban amenities. With the privileges should come the responsibilities of becoming a part of the town, including political participation and financial support.

Commercial Health. The commercial and industrial enterprises within the town are its economic nucleus, providing jobs to both inside and outside residents and providing necessary goods and services to citizens and other businesses. These enterprises are also "business citizens" of the town, contributing property and license taxes to the support of municipal services. When new businesses located outside existing municipal boundaries, enjoying the concentration of patrons and the labor force which the in-town businesses helped create, but accepting none of the parallel civic responsibilities, the original businesses are placed at a competitive disadvantage. These in-town enterprises ironically pay for the urban services which help attract growth to the fringe, only to see their patrons begin traveling to outside businesses on the very streets they help maintain. The result is economic decline within the municipal boundaries, particularly in downtown areas. Towns which do not act to annex adjacent developed areas are supporting this inequity, undermining their local economy and eroding their tax base.

Quality of Services. As areas become developed and congested, additional services are needed to keep these areas livable. The higher density of people and commerce creates problems of traffic control, sanitation, personal safety, protection of property, drainage, animal control, leisure time needs and the like.

As the State legislature recognized, municipalities are the organized means of coping with these problems. They possess the expertise and resources to fill the potholes, light the streets, combat crime, prevent fire losses, alleviate flooding, clean up unsanitary conditions and provide recreational opportunities. Municipal services help maintain the quality of life in areas of concentrated development.

Fiscal Soundness of Local Government. Cities and towns are necessary hubs of commerce and culture in developed nations with high standards of living. In order to perform their economic role and remain attractive places for living, towns must deliver efficient, high-quality public services. This they cannot do unless they are able to remain fiscally sound, diversifying their revenue base through the addition of adjacent developed areas.

This does not mean simply that the annexed properties are added to the tax rolls. Annexation brings to the city other federal and state-shared revenues based on the addition of population, area, street mileage, valuation, etc. And frequently there are offsetting benefits for the annexed — lower water and sewer rates, lower fire insurance rates, and the elimination of private refuse collection costs — which balance the city taxes, especially for residential property. Timely annexations of adjacent developed property are needed to help keep North Carolina municipalities financially strong.

Summary. Annexation of developed areas adjacent to towns must take place on a regular basis in order for our towns to remain economically viable, for all community members to participate in shaping the community's future, for congested areas to remain livable, and for local government to remain financially sound. Our cities and town have the means to protect their futures, and those which fail to exercise those powers do so at high risk. At the same time, residents and enterprise in the developed fringe should recognize their objective responsibility to accept the civic and financial obligations of municipal citizenship. A municipal boundary between developed areas lying inside and outside town becomes an artificial boundary that must be dissolved for a community to improve its quality of life.

Pitt Tech's GED Program Offers Hope To High School Drop Outs

CLARENCE SALISBURY . . . Paralyzed from the waist down as the result of an automobile accident in 1967, Clarence Salisbury is finding a new lease on life in training as an accountant at Pitt Technical Institute. (Reflector Photo By Debbie Jackson)

When Clarence Salisbury dropped out of high school in 1960, a high school diploma did not seem so important.

He was young and strong, and he could earn good money as a truck driver and construction worker. But in 1967 an automobile accident left Salisbury paralyzed from the waist down. Without the ability to do physical labor, his future looked bleak.

That has all changed now.

Thanks to his own perserverance and to some help from the staff of Pitt Technical Institute's Learning Center, Salisbury has successfully completed the General Educational Development test and has enrolled as an accounting major at Pitt Tech.

The GED is a battery of five tests, including English grammar, math, and reading, all designed to demonstrate general education competency. Those who pass are awarded a high school equivalency certificate which is generally recognized in industry, government, and colleges.

According to Joy Sasser, cordinator of Pitt Tech's Learning Center, of the 268 persons who took the GED at Pitt Tech in 1977, 196 passed. Approximately 25 percent of those who passed have enrolled in Pitt Tech's curricula program.

"Anyone 18 years of age and not enrolled in public school is eligible to take the GED, and under certain circumstances, 16 to 18-year-olds can take it," said Sasser.

"The 16- to 18-year-olds must have permission from the school they last attended and from their parents, and they must take pre-tests to determine their chances for passing the test. However, we counsel all applicants to take the pre-tests, because those who fail a part must either wait six months to take it again or must obtain a recommendation from a GED examiner after completing a supervised study program."

She added that most people do decide after counseling that they want to take pre-tests.

"When we determine by a pre-test that a person is ready for one part of the test, we give it. He may not take the next part for two more months.

"We don't recommend that people take more than one of these parts in any one day because they tend to be very mentally exhausted afterwards."

Approximately 75 percent of those who take the pre-tests find that they will need to study in order to pass the GED. Sometimes they find that they are ready for two or three of the tests but must prepare for the others. Sasser said that many choose to do their studying under the supervision of the staff at the Learning Center.

She added that for some, passing the GED represents the culmination of a dream, but for many it represents only a beginning.

When Vicie Lorene Bailey of Farmville passed the GED in 1973 she had been out of school for 20 years, but that did not deter her. About a year later she completed the program at Pitt Tech.

Her daughter, Cherry completed the program at the same time. In 1976, Mrs. Bailey returned to Pitt Tech and earned her associate degree in nursing. She is now employed as a staff nurse on the medical floor of Pitt Memorial Hospital.

This year for the first time at Pitt Tech, those who pass the GED will be included in the institution's graduation exercises.

Pitt Tech's Learning Center is open Monday through Friday from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. and on Monday through Thursday from 6-10 p.m. The Learning Center staff will administer the GED at any time during these hours. There is no charge.

Seymour Johnson AFB Open House April 8

SEYMOUR JOHNSON AFB, GOLDSBORO — The Thunderbirds, the U.S. Air Force's Aerial Demonstration Team, will highlight the 22nd annual Seumour Johnson AFB Open House to be held Saturday, April 8.

Another feature attraction will be a performance by the U.S. Army Parachute Team, the "Golden Knights."

Gates to the base will open to the public at 10 a.m. and close at 5 p.m. There is no admission charge for the day's activities.

The Thunderbirds, assigned to the Tactical Air Command, demonstrates the professionalism, versatility and flexibility of Air Force personnel and equipment through their aerial maneuvers. Take-off time for the performance is 3 p.m.

The world-champion "Golden Knights" will demonstrate their sky diving skills at 1:45 over the base's flightline. While maneuvering in free-fall from altitudes of up to 13,000 feet, the "Knights" will plunge earthward at speeds nearing 200 miles per hour before opening their parachutes to glide to a stand-up landing in the demonstration area.

In addition to these highlight events, static displays of various types of aircraft will be on the flightline for the public's viewing. These will include the B-52 Stratofortress, KC-13 Stratotanker, F-4E Phantom, C-5 Galaxy, F-15 Eagle and the A-10 close air support aircraft.

The rock group "Thrust," comprised of musicians from the TAC Band, Langley AFB, Va., will perform twice during the day.

health of the people, North Carolina still needs more doctors.

Dr. Jenkins, having reached the age of 65, will be retiring as ECU Chancellor on June 30, 1978. His successor, Dr. Thomas B. Brewer, Vice Chancellor and Dean of Texas Christian University, will have oversize shoes to fill in his new assignment.

JENKINS FUTURE...Dr. Jenkins, appears to have much vigor and crusade talent within himself and soon will be accepting another state assigment in government from Governor Jim Hunt.

Dr. Jenkins, by the way is close to both Governor Hunt and Lt. Governor Jim Green. He delivered the baccalaureate sermon when Jim Hunt graduated from High School in Wilson County and in World War II served in the U. S. Marine Corps with Jim Green.

Just what Jenkin's assigment in State government will be has not been decided by either Hunt or Green.

What lies ahead for Leo Jenkins at the age of 65?

Well, Winston Churchill at the age of 66 became Great Britain's leader in World War II against Hitler and Great Britain's leader in World War II against Hitler and the world knows of the results.

Dr. Leo Jenkins has a good many of Churchill's bull-dog traits of tenacity.

Just because Leo is finishing at ECU after an illustrious tenure there, don't think fro a minute that he will be content to graze in the sunshine in the early morn and the shade of the mid-day!

Again, remember the illustrious career of Churchill which began at age 66!

County Beautification Coordinator Is Named

Steve Evans has been named Pitt County Beautification Coordinator for 1978. Announcement of the appointment was made by Sam Uzzell, Assistant Agricultural Extension Agent.

"The responsibility of the county beautification coordinator is to provide leadership for an action program to help keep Pitt County beautiful," Uzzell commented. "Pitt County is fortunate to have Evans to serve in this position."

As a 1978 program kick-off, a dutch luncheon meeting is being held at 12:30 Thursday, March 30, at the Three Steers Restaurant. Anyone interested is invited to attend and to contribute thoughts and suggestions to plans for the program. "We hope to involve as many people as possible in identifying, developing, and carrying out a county-wide program," Evans noted.

One of the major steps to be discussed will be a beautification council for the "Keep Pitt County Beautiful" project. Various committees will be assigned.

Steve Evans

Persons who wish to attend are urged to call the Pitt County Agricultural Extension office at 758-1196 by Monday afternoon.

Evans, a graduate of the East Carolina University School of Business, is employed by Overton and Powers Realty Co. He is active in youth work as an Assistant Scout Master for Troop 205 and is a Big Brother in the Juvenile Volunteer program. He is also a member of Memorial Baptist Church, a charter member of the Winterville Jaycees, and currently serves as a member of the state and local affairs committee of the Greenville Chamber of Commerce.

Deadlines Near On Crop Insurance Dates

April 15 is the deadline for Pitt County farmers to make application for Federal Crop Insurance on corn and soybeans. Farmers who do not already have insurance on tobacco and peanuts have until April 30 to insure for 1978.

Farmers using automatic tobacco combines for harvesting crops should check for information on the extra protection available to them through Federal Crop Insurance.

Complete information on crop insurance is available by contacting the Pitt County Office representative, Betty Lou Jones.

The office is located in Room 103 of the Federal Building (corner of Evans and Third Street). Office hours are 8 a.m. to 5 p.m., and telephone number is 752-6752.

The office will be open Easter Monday, March 27.

Parrot Still Chipper At 51

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

She's 51-years old, has shimmering plumage, and despite her advanced age for a bird, Patsy is a chipper, saucy lady who loves to be the center of attention.

Born (or hatched if you prefer) at some unknown point in South America, a resident of New Jersey and Pennsylvania for 40 years, Patsy has lived in Greenville for the past ten years.

Vince Howell, who now has Patsy in his care, refused being labeled as the parrot's owner. "Nobody can own her," Howell stated, "A parrot is much like a cat. Patsy's very independent. She expects to be fed, to be loved, and she's gregarious, wants everybody's attention, but nobody rules her."

Howell is the fourth "custodian" of the bright, talkative bird, and is the first male to have the task of providing for her in the regal style she's been accustomed to.

"The first to have Patsy were Ed and Matt Hub of Phillipsburg, N. J.," Howell explained. "They ordered her from South America. She arrived on a banana boat in New York City on September 17, 1927. She was represented to be one-year old at the time, so her birthday was arbitrarily set as September 17, 1926." Howell admits it's likely she could have been a little less than a year old or somewhat more, "but for all practical purposes, that's the birthday we celebrate for Patsy."

"Aunt Matt Hub was my late wife's great-aunt," Howell said. "She and her husband had no children, so to them Patsy was the same as a child. "It's been told," he smiled, "that great-aunt Matt was a very straight-laced lady and that before she died in the early 1960s, she used to pull the window shade down so that her bird would not see the naughty girls going by the house dressed in shorts." Howell vows he refuses to take the same precaution with Patsy.

After the death of Mr. and Mrs. Hub, Miss Ruth Werkheiser of Easton, Pa., a great-niece of Mrs. Hub, had custody of Patsy. When Miss Werkheiser died in 1967, Howell's wife Dora inherited the bird and she came to live in Greenville.

Mrs. Howell died in September, 1977, and since then, it has fallen to Vince Howell to pamper the autocratic bird. "Dora would be happy to know I'm taking good care of Patsy," Howell commented. "Patsy was very fond of Dora, and Dora thought the world of Patsy."

Mentioning the independence of a parrot again, Howell said that extended to Patsy's preference in her association with people, even those close to her. "Patsy would always kiss Dora, and she's quite ready to kiss my son, Seaton, even though she may see him only once a week or so. But she seldom agrees to kiss me."

The bird's age has not dimmed the luster of her beauty. Most of her body is covered with brilliant, bright green feathers. The area around her neck and head are daffodil yellow, and there's touches of scarlet and deep blue in wing and tail feathers that are fully revealed only when Patsy raises her wings or spreads her tail feathers. She's most attractive when she's ruffled about something. And she can bite when she's displeased."

Like all parrots, Patsy keeps her strong hooked bill healthy and sharpened on a cuttlebone, which also supplies needed salts and lime. "To the best of my knowledge, Patsy has never had her bill or claws trimmed," Howell said. "And her claws are strong. She likes perching on my shoulder, and sometimes, if I have a thin shirt on, it can be rather uncomfortable."

Howell says that her good health at her age "may be partly attributable to her good appetite. Her basic food is sunflower seed which I keep in her dish at all times. But she'll eat most anything, candy of all sorts, and peanut butter. She's meticulous too, after eating peanut butter she'll spend considerable time cleaning her bill on newspapers. Scrambled eggs is another of her favorite foods."

And Patsy has acquired something of a human vocabulary and can mimic animal sounds. When asked "where's the kitty," she invariably responds with three "meows", then says "kitty" several times in succession.

"She also enjoys singing, especially two songs, 'My Bonnie Lies Over The Ocean' and 'Lets All Sing Like The Birdies Sing' Of course," Howell added, "she has her own private language that no human can understand."

Howell observes "I disagree with people who say parrots are incapable of associations. Sometimes when people visit and are leaving, she will, without prompting, say 'goodbye.'"

Although her name is Patsy, Howell admits he and his late wife have never been quite certain of the bird's sex. "We do know from our having her and from her previous owners, that she has never laid an egg." But after being Patsy for half-a-century, Howell feels it would serve no useful purpose to rechristian the bird Patrick if ever it should be determined it's a male bird.

Though far removed from its native jungle habitat, Patsy is not a truly confined bird. "She has the freedom of the house, and on sunny days when it's not cold she is taken outside. Her cage door is always open."

Howell says he is willing to show the bird to interested persons on a time-permitting basis. "Anyone interested can call me during business hours at 752-4470, and if my work schedule permits, I'll be glad to make an appointment for them to see Patsy. She loves people and people love her."

Pastor Sold Pot

PERU, Ind. (AP) — The assistant pastor of St. Charles Catholic Church here has been fined $100 and sentenced to 40-90 days in the county jail after pleading guilty to selling marijuana to a youth he was counseling.

At a hearing in Miami County Superior Court Thursday, the Rev. Patrick Kohl, 32, was also given a year's probation.

Judge Bruce Embrey said Kohl must serve at least 40 days, but added he can be released as soon afterward as Bishop Raymond Gallagher of Lafayette can find a new assignment for him.

Printmakers To Speak At ECU

The East Carolina University Print Group has invited Dr. Robert Nelson and Norbert Irving, printmakers, to speak here.

Dr. Nelson will be here Wednesday. He will speak and given a slide presentation at 3 p.m. in Jenkins Auditorium. He is a professor of printmaking at UNC-Chapel Hill and a nationaly known lithographer.

Irving will be here Tuesday, Apr. 4. He will speak and make a slide presentation at 3 p. m. in Jenkins Auditorium. He is a professor of printmaking at Atlantic Christian College and an ECU graduate. His specialty is silkscreen.

The general public, as well as ECU students, is invited.

Accused Of Stealing $3 Million From Meters

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Nine employees who collect coins from San Francisco's parking meters and their supervisor have been accused of stealing at least $3 million in pennies, nickels, dimes and quarters over a six-year period.

They also were booked along with six other employees of the 17-member department for investigation of embezzlement by working only four hours a day, although they were paid full-time salaries.

The only department employee not booked Friday was one who had been working there only five weeks.

District Attorney Joseph Freitas Jr. said Melvin Wilson, 38, supervisor of the crews that emptied the meters, is believed to have carted home $1,000 a day himself "when he worked."

Among the 10 employees booked for investigation of pocketing meter money, was one who an assistant district attorney said is believed to have taken $60,000 to $80,000 a year.

Freitas estimated the workers' illicit take from the meters was at least $500,000 annually, about 25 percent of all the coins fed into them each year.

He said some of those arrested "were in the habit of taking a handful of coins from the piles in the sorting room at City Hall" while others took sackfuls home.

Freitas said the scheme allowed employees to buy "some pretty grand cars" despite annual salaries of $10,000 to $15,000 a year.

Those accused of theft were the workers who collected money from the meters and placed the coins into wheeled cannisters. Freitas said the men worked in pairs because the full cannisters were too heavy for one man to lift into city vans.

Once the cannisters were in the vans, the men "opened the tops and poured the money into their own large, strong canvas sacks," Freitas said.

Generally, they took the money home or dropped it off in one of their cars parked strategically in the neighborhood, he said.

City tax collector Thad Brown, although not accused in the case, was suspended Friday pending the outcome of an investigation of his department, which includes the meter division.

Asks For Help

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Pakistani demonstrators have asked President Carter and Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim to take action to prevent the execution of former Pakistani Prime Minister Zulfikar Ali Bhutto.

Bhutto has been sentenced to death for allegedly ordering the murder of a political rival.

News Briefs

Urgent Consultations

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — President Carter and President Anwar Sadat will have "urgent consultations" on steps to be taken in light of Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin's trip to Washington, the semi-official newspaper Al Ahram said Saturday.

However, the authoritiative paper did not say whether the two leaders would meet in person or through their representatives. Carter will be in Africa next week on an official visit.

Brittany Coastline Appeal

BREST, France (AP) — A nationwide radio appeal Saturday brought a flood of equipment and volunteers to help clean up oil coating the Brittany coastline as a result of the disastrous wreck of the supertanker Amoco Cadiz.

The cleanup is to begin Tuesday, two days after the high spring tides recede. Once the tides slacken, it will be unlikely that more oil spilling from the tanker will reach beaches already cleaned.

Navy Plans Appear Dashed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Navy's plans for enlarging its fleet by 50 percent appears to be dashed as the Carter administration decides to cut Navy construction by more than half during the next five years.

The Navy had hoped to increase its fleet from the current 462 ships to more than 600, a figure senior admirals contend is the minimum needed to protect U.S. interests worldwide.

But Defense Secretary Harold Brown and Navy Secretary W. Graham Claytor recently told key senators and representatives the administration now wants only 70 new warships and support vessels built and another 13 modernizations by 1983. Pentagon sources put the cost at $28 billion.

48 Die In Burma Air Crash

RANGOON, Burma (AP) — All 48 persons aboard a Burmese airliner were killed Saturday when the plane exploded and crashed in flames in a rice paddy shortly after takeoff from Rangoon airport, officials said.

The cause of the explosion was not immediately known. Witnesses said the craft blew up in the air before plummeting into the field, six miles from the airport.

Authorities said 22 foreigners were among the victims. Six were identified as Japanese. The 16 other foreigners, mostly tourists, were not immediately identified.

Civil Suit Against Moon

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — A former confidant of the Rev. Sun Myung Moon filed a civil suit Saturday claiming the Unification Church is a "pseudo-religious, racketeering" group which should be disbanded.

Calling the church "anti-human, anti-social, anti-moral, and anti-family," Kim Myungsee also charged Moon has had intimate relations with more than 100 females and that his church favors promiscuity.

Guerillas Claims 1,100 Killed

NAIROBI, Kenya (UPI) — Somali guerrillas Saturday claimed they killed 1,100 Cuban, Soviet and Ethiopian troops in renewed heavy fighting this week in Ethiopia's disputed Ogaden Desert.

The claim came in a statement broadcast by official Mogadishu Radio. It said the "enemy troops" died in three separate battles on the western edge of the Ogaden between March 19 and 21.

Runners And Sunworshippers

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (UPI) — The annual Easter beach scene was even more frenzied Saturday as 2,500 longdistance runners mixed with an estimated 50,000 college students and countless other sunworshippers massed at this Gold Coast resort.

Among the tourists were 2,500 Dutch and American sailors enjoying shore leave.

Despite complications — including a traffic tie-up — created by the massive turnout for the first annual Fort Lauderdale Heart Run, police said there were no significant disorders along the beach.

College students concentrated on relaxing and getting as much sun as possible before returning to cold weather climates, police said.

Egypt Not Closing Door

CAIRO, Egypt (UPI) — Egypt said Saturday it was not closing the door to a peaceful settlement of the Middle East conflict despite Washington's failure to soften Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin's negotiating position.

Foreign Minister Mohammed Kamel said the decision was taken at an emergency meeting of the National Security Council, Egypt's highest policymaking body, chaired by President Anwar Sadat.

Exotic Aliens Plague Italy

BY ERNEST SAKLER

ROME (UPI) — An angry loser at a recent beauty contest in Switzerland, threw a pie in the organizer's face, complaining the winner from Sri Lanka was actually a maid in Rome.

Crewmen on some Sicilian fishing boats are swarthier than the average Sicilian, get no social security and speak Arabic.

When the daughter of a wealthy Rome stamp dealer was kidnapped last year, the abductors turned out to be two Ecuadorian couples who had been her father's underpaid servants.

Italy, which sent more than 25 million emigrants to the far corners of the world over the past century, is having an illegal immigrant problem.

No one — except possibly the Mafia — knows how many clandestine immigrants from Africa, Asia, Latin America and the Iberian peninsula there are, but labor officials say they probably number close to half a million.

Quite a figure for a country that has 1.6 million unemployed among its own citizens.

You find them everywhere now, from the Seychelles maid standing in line in front of you in the supermarket to the Moroccan carpet vendor peddling his wares on the Roman beaches in Ostia.

There is remarkably little popular hostility against the immigrants in this racially tolerant country. But labor leaders are worried by the competition this underpaid, legally unprotected labor is providing for Italian workers.

They have asked the government to try to contain immigration and they are also trying to persuade the immigrants to demand contract wages and social security coverage.

When the phenomenon began in the early 1960s, Italy was just a transit point for Africans and other illegal migrants on their way to France and other Common Market countries.

They entered Italy legally on tourist visas or arrived clandestinely by boat, then were herded illegally across the Alps.

Every now and then, an Italian newspaper reported an African froze to death in the snow-covered mountains.

Little by little, as the Italian living standard improved, some of the illegal emigrants began staying in Italy.

At about the same time, a growing number of housewives discovered that fewer and fewer Italian girls wanted to work as maids and that a maid from the West Indies or Mauritius could be valuable as a status symbol.

The underworld caught on, and a growing number of women "tourists" began arriving from exotic countries — their trips paid for by clandestine employment agents who held their passports as a pledge and threatened to have them sent home if they did not pay a commission on their income from low-paid domestic jobs.

A number of suburban bars and restaurants also resorted to the cheap foreign manpower.

Some of the clandestine maids later branched out into prostitution, crime or, if they were lucky, show business.

Tunisians and other North Africans reaching Sicily by the same sea routes used 25 centuries ago by Carthaginian settlers represent another great segment of clandestine immigration.

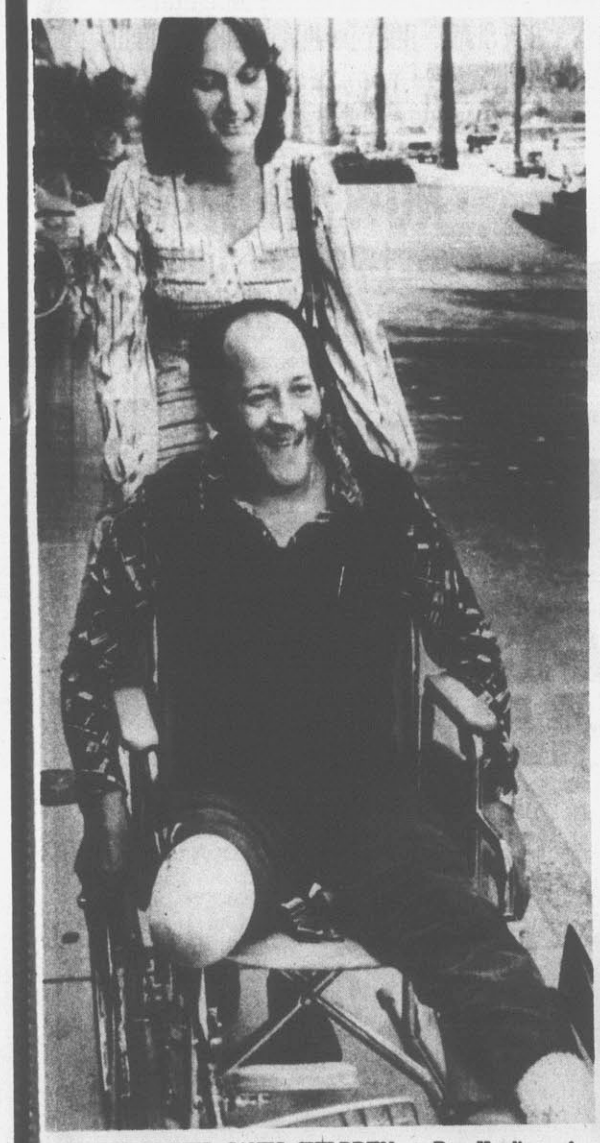

Labor unions say thousands of them are brought to Sicily by the Mafia as cheap fishing and farm labor without any contract or social security coverage.

Speculation that the Mafia is using some of the clandestine immigrants as paid assassins has never been proved.

A number of Tunisian immigrants later found their way to the Italian mainland and a group of them has been reported as far north as the Livorno area, where they work as tomato pickers.

In addition to the thousands of Tunisians — 3,500 new arrivals were reported recently in the Sicilian fishing port of Mazara del Vallo alone — labor officials say there are about 15,000 Ethiopians working in Sicily, Calabria and Sardinia, 30,000 Moroccans scattered all over Italy, quite a few Algerians, 10,000 Egyptians, 10,000 Spaniards and Portuguese and numerous Latin Americans, chiefly Chileans and Uruguayans.

Only a few immigrants have found their way into industry, where government and union control is stricter.

TRUCK DRIVER SAVES CHILDREN — Ron Harding, of Anaheim, Calif., leaves a Los Angeles hospital Friday where he was treated for injuries suffered when he steered his truck off an Indiana highway to avoid an out-of-control car heading towards him. Two young girls and their mother owe their lives to his action. Harding's truck rolled over and his legs were crushed in the accident. A friend, Debbie Hughes, escorts him. (AP Laserphoto)

MUSCLEMAN SUED — Arnold Schwarzenegger, muscleman and actor, is being sued for $3 million by Joe Gold's Gym in Santa Monica, Calif., for alleged libel in an article written by Schwarzenegger in the Feb. issue of "Musclemag International." (AP Laserphoto)

It Really Works!

An open and shut case for heating your home with wood.

Considering the cost of oil, gas and electric heat these days, it's easy to see why hundreds of thousands of homeowners across North America have turned to wood heating.

It's more economical (it can trim 50% or more off your heating bill). Wood smells and sounds as good as it burns. And it's one form of energy that's still growing.

But what do you burn wood in to get the most heat out of it? We'd like to suggest a Fisher Stove.

The Fisher's unique two-step combustion chamber recirculates wood gases back into the flames, resulting in more heat and fewer ashes. Its patented spin draft controls and virtually airtight construction mean you can regulate how much heat it puts out. And because it's made from carefully welded, heavy plate steel, it will give you years of remarkable heating efficiency.

We have a variety of Fisher Stove models to choose from. So come in soon and find out what makes a Fisher a Fisher. Case closed.

Mangione Performs Wednesday

Chuck Mangione and Quartet will be performing at Wright Auditorium on East Carolina University campus at 8 p.m. Wednesday, March 29.

Tickets for the concert are now on sale at Mendenhall Student Center Central Ticket Office (10 a.m. to 4 p.m.) or by phone 757-6611. Tickets can also be purchased at the Music Shop, Greenville Square Mall; and downtown at School Kid's Records and Apple Records.

The concert is being sponsored by the ECU Student Union Popular Entertainment Committee.

A two time Grammy winner, Mangione received an award for the record "Bellevia" and for his music from the album, "Chase The Clouds Away," which was used as background music for the 1976 Olympic Games.

Mangione has just released an A&MM album, "Feels So Good," and is currently at work on a film score for "The Children of Sanchez," a movie starring Anthony Quinn scheduled for showing at the Cannes Film Festival this spring.

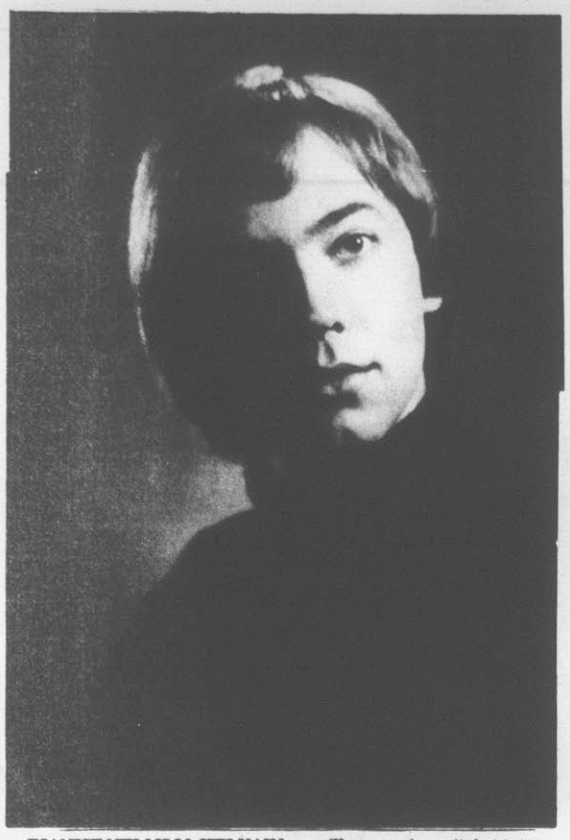

A graduate of the Eastman School of Music, Mangione has taught music in between performances with groups.

In recent months he has made two appearances on the Johnny Carson "Tonight Show," Don Kirshner's "Rock Concert" and the "Las Vegas Entertainer of the Year" Awards program.

CHUCK MANGIONE . . . and quartet will be in a concert at Wright Auditorium at 8 p.m. Wednesday, March 29. Tickets are available from the Student Center Central Ticket Office or at points in Greenville.

McKelvain Recital Set

PIANIST NELMS McKELVAIN . . . will appear in recital at 8:15 p.m. Sunday, April 1 in the A. J. Fletcher Recital Hall. There is no admission charged, and the public is invited to attend.

Nelms McKelvain, a first-year faculty member of the School of Music, East Carolina University, will appear in a free recital at 8:15 p.m., Sunday, April 2 in the A. J. Fletcher Recital Hall on campus.

Pianist McKelvain, a member of the keyboard faculty, is a native of Abilene, Texas. He holds the BM degree from Oberlin Conservatory of Music and the MM degree from the University of Texas, Austin. Currently, McKelvain is working on a doctoral candidate at the University of Texas.

For his April 2 program, he will play J. S. Bach's "Prelude and Fugue in D Major" from the "Well-Tempered Clavier, Book II," "Variations on an Original Theme, Opus 21" by Brahms; Chopin's "Nocture in D-flat Major, Opus 27;" Franz Liszt's "Transcendental Etude in F Minor;" and Beethoven's "Sonata in C Minor, Opus 111."

The public is invited on a first-come, first seated basis.

Second Annual 'Day Of Dance'

The second annual "Day of Dance" for young dance students, sponsored by the Department of Drama and Speech at East Carolina University, is to be held at Wright Auditorium on Sunday, April 9.

Activities will include master classes in ballet, jazz dance, and modern dance. Also, a lecture/demonstration of the classical Indian Kathak form will be given.

Melissa Hayden, world-renowned prima ballerina for nearly two decades with Balanchine's New York City Ballet, will conduct the ballet master classes. A 1973 winner of the Handel Medallion, New York City's highest cultural award, Ms. Hayden choreographed a farewell ballet, "Cortege Hong rois" in her honor at the time of her retirment in 1973.

Frank Wagner, head of ECU's dance program, will conduct master classes in jazz dance. Before coming to ECU last fall, he taught jazz dance for 20 years at the International School of Dance in New York, and has choreographed Broadway musicals, variety shows, touring revues, operas and television specials.

Patricia Pertalion is the choreographer who will be conducting a master class in modern dance. She has choreographed many of the dances for stage at ECU in the past several years. She hosted her own television program for several years.

An Indian dancer, veteran star Prem Verma, a native of the Indian state of Punjab, will lecture on Kathak dancing, one of the oldest classical Indian dance forms. She has lectured on Indian dance forms at several American universities.

Registration for the "Day of Dance" is limited to dancers ten years old or older. Registration fee is $5, and forms are available from the Dept. of Drama and Speech, East Carolina University, Greenville, N. C., 27834.

Eric Haas Concert Friday, March 31

Eric Haas, a student composer in the School of Music, East Carolina University, will appear in a concert of his own compositions at 7:30 p.m., Friday, March 31 in the A. J. Fletcher Recital Hall on campus. There is no admission charge and the public is invited.

A major in theory and composition, Haas' program will include "Benedictus" for soprano and harp; a string quartet, "Three Inventions for Oboe and Bassoon;" "Partita" for unaccompanied double bass; "Grendel" for magnetic tape; "Fugue" a work for woodwind quintet, and "Canticle-Fanfare" for mixed chorus, brass quintet and organ.

Musicians performing in the Haas concert will be faculty cellist Daniel Mellado; faculty oboist David Hawkins and violinist Fairya Mellado; and student performers — Belinda Bryant, soprano; Paula Scarangella, harpist; Linda Hanson, violinist; Karen Coupe, violist; Janet Reeve, double bassist; bassoonist Freddie McLean; Mary Jo White, flutist; Harvey Stokes, oboist; and Laurie Nicholson, clarinetist.

Also — Elizabeth Weeks and Robert Burford, horn; Billy Grimmett, trombone; Connie Ribelin, tuba; Bill Frazier and Scott Carter, trumpets; several members of the ECU Concert choir conducted by Brett Watson; and student organist Elyce Brown.

Symphonic Band To Perform April 2

The East Carolina University Symphonic Band, conducted by George Naff of the East Carolina School of Music faculty, will be in concert at 3:15 p.m. Sunday, April 2 in Wright Auditorium.

A composition by graduate student Jack Stamp will be a featured work on the program, and will be receiving its premiere performance in this program. Stamp will conduct the orchestra for his composition, "Anthithigram."

Other works to be on the program include Alfred Reed's "Armenian Dances;" Vincent Persichetti's "Divertimento for Band;" Francis McBeth's "Divergents;" and Samuel Barber's "Commando March."

The Symphonic Band includes 67 student instrumentalists from the School of Music.

The program is free and the public is invited.

Local Girl Creates A Bank Tapestry

LINCOLNTON TAPESTRY — Greenville's Beverly Joyner is the creator of a large tapestry recently installed in Carolina First National Bank in Lincolnton. The tapestry, which is nine feet high and 50 feet wide, is continuous but is designed in three distinct pictorial units. The left unit features a church; the center the town courthouse; and the right unit depicts the growth of the city through modern industries. (Details from the left and right units are shown in the photo above). Ms. Joyner was notified in May 1977 that she was the winner of a design competition for the tapestry. She worked closely with craftsmen at Cabin Craft, Dalton, Ga., the company creating the tapestry based on her design, using a tufted rug technique. Ms. Joyner, a 1977 graduate of the School of Art, East Carolina University, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Joyner and is currently employed at the Island Art Gallery, Manteo.

Okefenokee, A Wondrous Place

By JULES LOH
AP Special Correspondent

OKEFENOKEE, Ga. (AP) — No other place on earth is quite like the Okefenokee Swamp, the land of trembling earth.

That is what the scientists say, and anyone who has ventured among its wondrous wilds emerges a believer. But that is only one reason why this place in America, this place on the planet, is remarkable. At least two more reasons are obvious.

As a mere curiosity, Okefenokee, Ga. 31501, surely is the only place in America with a post office that serves a population which includes 42 species of mammal, none of them man.

Second, if this swamp is not truly paradise, as old-time swampers hereabouts believe, it is at least a place where two implacable antagonists — those who aim to preserve America's remaining wildlands untouched; those who want to make them accessible — have found harmony. The lion lies down with the lamb.

The Okefenokee is a swamp, yet is more than 100 feet above sea level, the source of two rivers spilling from an ice-age bowl.

For centuries it has challenged indigenes to hunt in it, timber hunters to raze it, naturalists to explore it, explorers to navigate it in its usual forbidding state, which is wet, a wet labyrinth as unpatterned as the crazing in a china cup.

It is a domain of beasts; man is an intruder. Man had better be aware of that if he would survive here.

Some ancient Seminole, a lyricist, gave the swamp its name, Okefenokee, "The land of trembling earth." The "earth" of the swamp, or much of it, was born of decomposed leaves and twigs turned to thick peat from which new vegetation grows, and the whole mass floats.

Step on it. Jump on it. It quivers and rolls, like Jello.

All of this 600-square-mile wonderland, here from prehistory, was assumed to be inaccessible except to the few who were born to it and learned its secrets and its hidden entries.

Then, during the Depression, men with great need and sharp blades hacked through one edge, near Waycross, Ga., as a make-work project.

They widened some water trails which had been blazed by alligators and improved by Seminoles, and made a twisting corridor to the swamp's ghostly interior.

That was that. Years later, after the government had made the swamp a federal preserve, some Waycross citizens had the novel idea that others might like to see a swamp. Naturalists, for instance, or even tourists.

They formed a non-profit corporation and subleased from the state, which had leased from the federal government, that small corridor at the swamp's edge, and made a park.

They have kept their park, which pays its own way, utterly free of tourist ticky-tacky. They have, yes, tampered a bit with nature, but only enough to make accessible that wild interior which is federally protected from man's meddling.

Even the alligators seem to like the arrangement.

Poet Stafford To Read

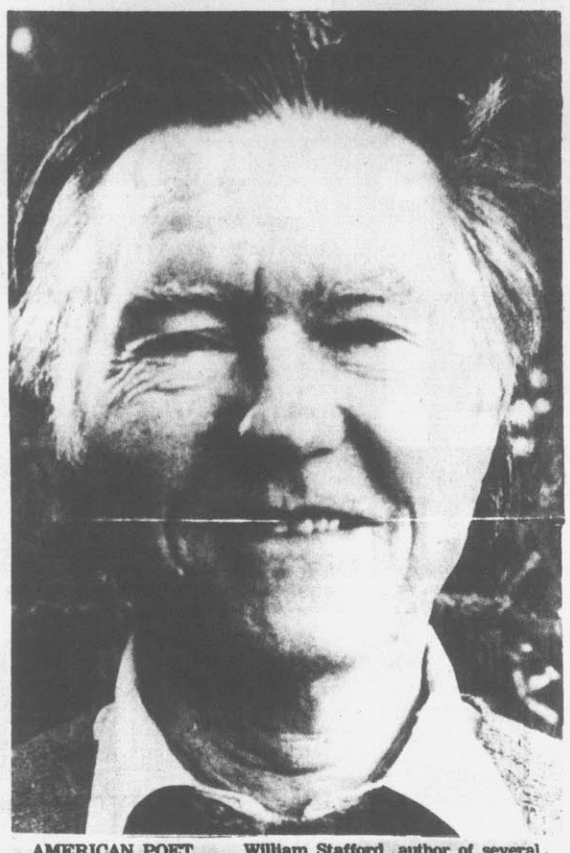

A distinguished American poet, William Stafford, will read some of his poetry in a public reading at 8 p.m. Thursday, March 30, in the auditorium of the Leo Jenkins Fine Arts Center on campus.

Among his extensive output, five volumes of his poetry have been published by Harper and Row publishers— "Traveling Through the Dark;" "The Rescued Year;" "Allegiances;" "Someday, Maybe;" and "Stories That Be True."

Currently Professor in Literature at Lewis and Clark College, Portland, Oregon, Stafford has served as Poetry Consultant to the Library of Congress, on the Literature Commission of the National Endowment for the Arts, and was traveling lecturer for the U.S. Information Agency, making public appearances in Egypt, India, Bangladesh, Pakistan, Iran, and Nepal.

There is no admission charge for the March 30 reading and the public is invited. While in Greenville, Stafford will also conduct free workshops in the writing of poetry. The first will be in Room 132 Austin Building at 11 a.m. Thursday, March 30; with the second workshop on Friday, March 31 at the same time and place.

The public is invited to these workshops and can bring poetry manuscripts. Stafford will discuss as many of those brought in as time permits. Observers as well as participants are welcomed.

AMERICAN POET . . . William Stafford, author of several volumes of poetry and traveling poet for USIA, will be on campus for a poetry reading at 8 p.m. Thursday, March 30. He will also conduct workshops on Thursday and Friday, March 30, 31.

Book News

FROM SHEPPARD MEMORIAL LIBRARY

By Willie Mae Gibbs

Biographies of several celebrated individuals have been added to the new book collection at the library.

Clark Gable, a hero to millions and the most exemplary American movie star comes excitingly to life in LONG LIVE THE KING, a new biography by Lyn Tornabene. Put together from studio archives and other primary source material, this book emerges as an engrossing portrait, not only of Gable, the star and the man, but of the vanished Hollywood in which he worked. Through quality research and depth of insight Lyn Tornabene has penetrated the cloak of legend surrounding the complex, fascinating Clark Gable and has at the same time distinguished her book from most other biographies of show business celebrities. Clark Gable's mother died while he was still an infant. His father was a robust wildcatter. Raised by relatives, Gable grew up under conditions which created odds that were difficult at best. His rise to the top from these modest beginnings is as thrilling a success story as any in American history. Told with perspective, intelligence and taste, LONG LIVE THE KING is a remarkable achievement that skillfully blends a finely drawn picture of the machinery that created and sustained a star of Gable's magnitude with the full story of the human begin behind the celluloid image and of the five Mrs. Gables in his life.

In AUTOBIOGRAPHY OF VALUES, Charles Lindbergh tells the story of his own life. It is the story of the events he caused and their effects on him. It is also about the values he learned as a boy and the effect that a century dominated by science and war and technology and nationalism had on them. Lindbergh, the greatest aviator of all times was also a scientist, soldier, conservationist, and advisor to industry and government on flight. That he was a superb writer is illustrated in the beautiful telling of his life story in this book which belongs with the great memoirs in our literature. AUTOBIOGRAPHY OF VALUES is a rare work that matches the standards of accuracy and completeness and candor Lindbergh set for himself.

Helga Sandburg, the youngest daughter of Carl Sandburg and his wife, Lilian Steichen, sought the story of her origins and inheritance, of the grandparents who were immigrants from Sweden and Luxembough. A GREAT AND GLORIOUS ROMANCE is the story of her search into her past, a story of beginnings and ends, of joys and doubts. It is also the story of her parents—of the extraordinary marriage between a brilliant poet and a magnetic, independent woman. What power in her mother held the love of the wandering poet? What quality in Carl Sandburg lit the spark of his sense of destiny? These and more questions besieged Helga as she searched records and her own memories, discovering the great and glorious romance that flowered over the years and survives in this book.

Gordon Watts To Lecture March 28

Gordon P. Watts, underwater archeologist with the N. C. Division of Archives and History, will give a slide and lecture presentation on the USS Monitor and Fort Branch, Martin County, projects.

The event will be at 8 p.m. Tuesday, March 28, in Room 244, Mendenhall Student Center, on campus. There is no admission and the public is invited to attend.

The nearby Fort Branch Survey and Recovery Project was conducted during the summer of 1977 at a Conrecerate earthwork fortification on the Roanoke River near Hamilton. Led by Watts, the project culminated with the recovery from the river of four cannon, all with carriages attached to some degree.

The event is being sponsored by the ECU Chaper of Phi Alpha Theta honor society in history.

Canadian Brass Concert Scheduled

Canadian Brass, music makers known for their irreverant approach to classical (long-hair) music, will be in Greenville at 8 p.m., Monday, April 3 at Mendenhall Student Center on campus. Tickets, priced at $4, are on sale at the Central Ticket Office or can be purchased at the door prior to the hour of performance.

In their comic opera, "Hornsmoke," the curtain rises to reveal a large cactus, an equally large buzzard, a couple of benches, and a cow in a sunbonnet.

Performers are Graeme Page, French horn (as Blazing Bill); Charles Daellenbach, tuba, (the local preacher, Rev. Tubby Mirum); Eugene Watts, trombone, (the Saloonkeeper, Tom Bone); and Ronald Romm, trumpet, (the bearded local maiden, Cornetta).

The Wild West action is carried out with horn-slinging in a B Flat Bart manner, with a finale trumpet shoot-out.

The brass players tout their approach to classical music as one in which "the classics are reclassified."

All are professional musicians with degrees from universities and conservatories who have joined together to put a different twist to old favorites.

Dolley Show At Mint

CHARLOTTE — An exhibition which explores the lives of the Madisons in the Federal era through paintings, manuscripts, furnishings and clothing is opening at the Mint Museum of Art today from 2 to 5 p.m.

Entitled Dolley and the Great Little Madison, the exhibition is underwritten by $90,000 in federal, state and local grants. The show has previously shown at the Headquarters of the American Institute of Architects Foundation in Washington, D. C. and will show at the Virginia Museum in July.

There is no admission charge and the public is invited to the opening. Conover Hunt-Jones, guest curator and author of the 140 page catalogue on the exhibition, will be among those on hand for the opening event.

Mint hours are 10 to 5 Tuesday through Saturday, 2 to 5 on Sunday, and closed Monday.

Wilmington Art Show

WILMINGTON — A sidewalk art show will be held in Wilmington on Friday, Saturday and Sunday, April 7-9, in conjunction with the annual Azalea Festival.

Entries will be accepted from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Thursday, April 6 on the Orange St. side of the Community Arts Center.

Exhibition hours will be 10 to 6 on Friday and Saturday, and noon til 6 on Sunday.

All work must be original, for sale, ready for hanging and must be works not exhibited prior to 1975. Oils, watercolors, pastels, graphics and photography are being accepted. Awards are $100 first place; $50 second place; and $25 third place. Mike Goins, assistant professor of art at UNC-Wilmington, is juror.

Applications can be obtained by writing to the N.C. Azalea Festival Office, 201 North Second Street, Wilmington, N.C., 28401.

McClancy To Lecture Mar. 18

Artist George McClancy, a working artist who is presently coordinator of the Studio Semester in New York City's Program of Empire State College, will appear in a lecture on Tuesday, March 28.

McClancy will be at the auditorium in Jenkins Fine Arts Center from 3 to 5 p.m. on that date. The public is invited to attend the lecture to be given by McClancy.

Two Serving

Edgar R. Loessin, Chairman of the Department of Drama and Speech, East Carolina University, is one of the drama panel members serving to select candidates for the Visiting Artist Program.

Another Greenville man, Wayne C. Williams, Director of the Audio-Visual Services Center at the East Carolina University School of Medicine, is on the film panel of the selection committee.

A total of 21 panelists representing seven areas began meetings in Raleigh this past week to select candidates for the program, which provides visiting artists for community colleges. The seven areas are: drama, visual arts, crafts, film, literature, music, and dance.

In April, community college representatives will meet to view the qualifying artists' work and to decide which candidates they wish to interview for possible openings.

Actor Learned Martial Art For Movie

JAMES IGLEHART . . . 28-year old black actor, visited Greenville on Thursday during a nationwide promotional tour for the movie, "Death Force," in which he stars. The movie is scheduled to open at Park Theater on April 7.

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Sunday Editor

When husky actor James Iglehart accepted a lead role in the Cosa Nueva Production of "Death Force," the six foot one, 205 pound man had to perfect a new martial art — the ancient art of the samurai.

"Although I am a Black Belt holder in the Korean style of karate," Iglehart said on a brief visit to Greenville, "I had to take extensive training to be believable as a sword-wielding samurai. This is probably the focal point of all the martial arts, and I had as a teacher the best one possible, Yong Won Ahn."

Iglehart said at first the director wanted him to simulate the sword fights, but that later he was permitted the use of real swords. "I got one cut across my back, but aside from that, all went well."

The film, which he and Robert Swaney, promotion director are currently promoting on a fast-paced tour of the U.S., also has Carmen Argenziano, Leon Issac, Jayne Kennedy and Asian Olympic karate champion Roberto Gonzales in the cast.

"Death Force" focuses on Iglehart in the role of a man seeking revenge following his being left for dead in the South Pacific by his drug-dealing buddies.

"It is R-rate because of the physical violence," Iglehart noted of this movie role. "However, it is violence that is not misdirected, but applied to a situation that calls for it under the circumstances of the story."

Although this is his first movie role with the San Franciso area based Cosa Nueva Production firm, James Iglehart is no stranger to movie or TV cameras. He has co-starred in "Beyond The Valley of the Dolls," "The Seven Minutes," and starred in "The Savage," and "Bamboo Gods and Iron Men."

Among numerous TV appearances have been roles in "The Bold Ones," "The Andy Griffith Show," "Mod Squad," and "New People."

The 28-year old actor was born September 12, 1949 in Waco, Texas but has lived most of his life in California. He is married to the former Sandy Hill, who teaches educational opportunity classes in Union City, across the bay from San Francisco. The couple has a young son, James Monroe. "He also has a role in the movie," Iglehart announced proudly.

When he is not tied up before the camera or on tour, Iglehart devotes time to efforts to help delinquent youths who have been in prison.

"In California, the average time out of jail for a first offender before going back in again on a second offense is 41 days. That's where people like myself come in. There's over 200 of us who are volunteers. We try to find a good location, a decent job for these young people finishing jail terms. It's only one solution to a situation where there's many problem areas," Iglehart said he's been doing all he could to help in this program for the past four years and that for him it brings a deep satisfaction.

Commenting briefly on the ordeals of a long promotional tour, he said "finding time for a decent meal is a major problem. Snacks are all right occasionally, but for a steady diet, no. I'm finding out I miss my wife's cooking."

A Magazine For Seniors

ECU News Bureau

A unique magazine "The Graduate" will be given free to all East Carolina University graduating seniors this spring, compliments of the Alumni Association and Wachovia Bank.

The 120-page "Handbook for Leaving School" is an easy-reading educational magazine. It includes information on job hunting, careers and life styles, as well as numerous other articles designed to prepare seniors for life after college.

"The Whole Job-Hunting Handbook" provides a guide to tools, advice and inspiration for launching a complete job-hunting campaign. "Job Opportunities for the Class of '78" reports on hiring trends and long-range job opportunities in a variety of career areas.

"The Graduate" magazine is published by 13-10 Corporation, Knoxville, Tenn., an eight-year-old marketing and publishing firm specializing in educational programs. Extra copies of the magazine are available at the Alumni Association Office in the Mamie Jenkins Alumni Building.

Coastal Films Slated Two Evenings At E.C.U.

Two evenings of coastal films are to be shown under the auspices of the UNC Sea Grant program at East Carolina University on Tuesday and Wednesday, March 28 and 29. Showings each evening will be at 7:30 p.m. in Room 103, Rawl Building, on the ECU campus. There is no charge and the publis is invited.

The Tuesday program focuses on the U.S. coastline through four films — "Estuary," "The Great American Fish Story," "Hurricane," and "It's Your Coast."

Coastal North Carolina is featured in four films to be shown on Wednesday night. These are "Watershed," "Storm Tide -The Islanders and The Elements," "The Currituck Film," and "An Act to Protect," a film about the coastal management act.

Simon Baker, a land management specialist with the UNC Sea Grant program, will be on hand for the showings.

'Monitor' Conference Set

RALEIGH — A three-day conference to probe the future of the Civil War battleship Monitor will be held Sunday Tuesday, April 2-4 at the Div. of Archives and History, 109 E. Jones Street.

Registration begins Sunday, with the full schedule of discussions to get underway Monday. Featured speaker will be Lars Barkman, director of the Swedish project to recover and restore the "Wasa," a 200-year-old ship raised near Stockholm.

The conference is open to the public. Registration fee is $5. More information is available by calling 733-4763 or 7305.

Duke Survives Irish Rally

By DOUG TUCKER
AP Sports Writer

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Duke, powered by teenagers Mike Gminski and Gene Banks, held off a desperate Notre Dame rally that sliced a 16-point lead to two, and emerged with a 90-86 victory Saturday in the semi-finals of the NCAA basketball tournament.

"The clock finally ran out," said a relieved Bill Foster, Duke coach, at the end of the hard-fought, physical contest.

"They put some great shots in there. I was hoping they would miss one."

The Blue Devils appeared to be en route to an easy victory, leading by 14 points, 80-66, when the Irish made their move.

"We played well early, got the ball down court, then the clock just stopped for us," said Foster. "We didn't change things. When you are in the Final Four, you revert to what you've been doing all year."

Notre Dame Coach Digger Phelps said the Irish were disappointed in losing, "but not in the way we lost.

"We made a gallant comeback. Our men showed why they belonged in the Final Four. To play catchup, you have to play near-perfect ball. You can't afford to miss shots or make turnovers."

Gminski and Banks combined for 51 points and dominated the boards. Meantime, Duke's zone defense shut off Notre Dame inside game.

Duke, 27-6, will meet Kentucky — a 64-59 victor over Arkansas in the other semi Saturday — for college basketball's national crown Monday night.

Gminski, an 18-year-old sophomore center, scored 29 points, mostly from the inside, as Notre Dame's muscular Bill Laimbeer and Bruce Flowers consistently failed to keep him away from the basket.

Banks, an 18-year-old freshman forward, dazzled the capacity crowd at the Checkerdome with a variety of moves while scoring 22 points.

The Blue Devils ran off a 14-4 spurt in the closing minutes of the first half for a 43-29 lead at the break. The Irish, 23-7, made a run shortly after intermission with Duck Williams hitting three fast-break buckets to shave the lead to 45-37. With 15:04 remaining, Banks, with an assist from Bob Bender, soared in for an easy layup to restore the Blue Devils' lead to 51-39.

Duke held a comfortable 80-68 lead and seemed to be on its way to an easy victory before Bill Hanzlick hit two straight baskets to start a final Notre Dame surge that was aided by a tenacious full-court, man-to-man press. Dave Batton tossed in two free throws and Williams hit a jumper to pull the Irish within 4, 84-80, with 1:37 remaining, the closest Notre Dame had been since the first half.

John Harrell and Jim Spanarkel, who hit 20 points for the Blue Devils, tossed in two free throws apiece for Duke, but Williams and and Tracy Jackson responded with baskets for Notre Dame. With 30 seconds remaining Spanarkel threw the ball out of bounds and Tracy Jackson sank a 15-footer for Notre Dame to make it 88-86 with 20 seconds remaining.

A turnover gave the Irish a chance to tie, but Williams' 18-foot jumper from the left side bounced off the rim with 12 seconds to play. Two free throws by Harrell with 9 seconds left clinched the victory.

The Blue Devils, who led the nation in free throw percentage this season, hit a scorching 32 of 37 while Notre Dame was 14 of 17 from the line. Duke was called for 15 fouls while 26 personals and one technical were called against the Irish.

Notre Dame's loss, in its first trip to the NCAA semifinals, dashed the Irish dream of becoming the first major college power to record national championships in football and basketball in the same academic year.

Notre Dame, forced to shoot from the perimeter more than it usually does, was led by Williams with 16 points. Freshman Kelly Tripucka had 12 points and Jackson, another freshman, had 11.

The Blue Devils, with Gminski consistently moving inside, maintained leads of 10 to 14 points through most of the second half until the Irish made their final rally.

With 8:15 remaining, Gminski, on a fast break, leaped high above the basket for an artistic dunk to give the Blue Devils a 63-51 lead. Two minutes later, after Laimbeer and Rich Branning hit four points for the Irish, Banks drove the lane and threaded between three Irish defenders for an easy layup.

Gminski, a 6-foot-11, 245-pound native of Monroe, Conn., fired in three straight baskets to hand Duke a 27-19 advantage with 6:20 left in the first half.

Tripucka sliced the margin to 27-25 two minutes later after Duke committed two uncharacteristic turnovers.

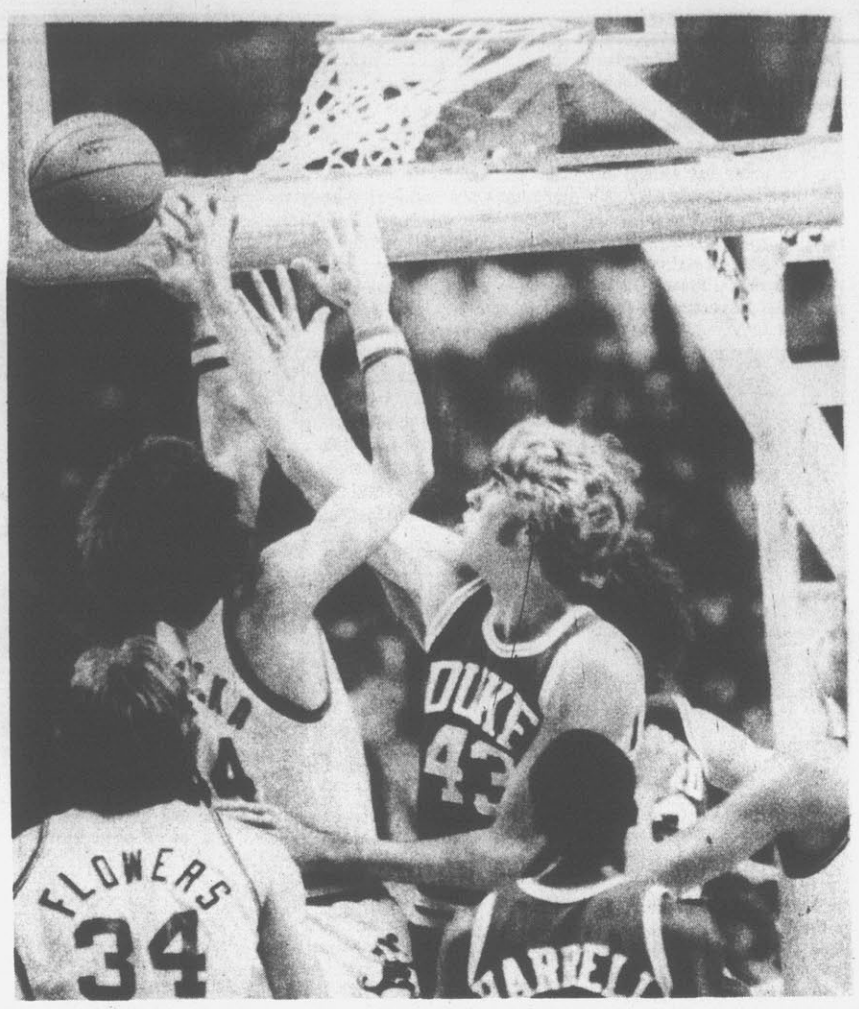

Spanarkel hit a short jumper to ignite a 12-4 Duke run, climaxed by Gminski's tip-in at the first-half buzzer.

Gminski: Fouls Were The Key

By PAUL LeBAR
AP Sports Writer

ST. LOUIS (AP) — "It's tough to beat us in that situation. We're the No. 1 foul shooting team in the country," said Duke's 6-foot-11 sophomore center sensation, Mike Gminski.

Gminski, who led his team with 29 points, was referring to the Blue Devils' proficiency at the line that held off a Notre Dame comeback and gave Duke a 90-86 upset of the Irish Saturday in the semifinals of the NCAA basketball championships.

"Everything I got came off our offense," said the 18-year-old Gminski, the youngest player in the NCAA final four. "We were just going through our patterns and I was getting the ball."

"I thought it was a game of spurts," said Duke Coach Bill Foster. "We changed defenses quite a bit. At the half, we felt extremely confident. I wouldn't have changed anything we did."

That confidence was not shaken by Notre Dame's surge, which saw the Irish cut a 16-point deficit to two.

"I wasn't surprised we won," said Gminski. "I had confidence that we could do it. I wasn't unnerved by it. They kept calling timeouts, but we were still ahead. I was always confident down the stretch. Our defense was successful in keeping them outside."

Freshman forward Gene Banks had 22 points and 12 rebounds for Duke.

"We came out loose and played our type of basketball," he said. "We held them at the end because of our conditioning. In practice we have drills for situations like that. We knew we were ahead and we were in a better position than they were."

The 6-5 Banks, however, nearly became a goat when he bobbled a pass from Jim Spanarkel with 20 seconds to go and the Blue Devils nursing an 88-86 advantage.

"The ball just went through my hands," said Banks. "I'm human, too."

Notre Dame recovered that loose ball, but Duck Williams missed a jumper from the left side that would have tied it. Duke sophomore John Harrell gathered in the rebound and clinched the victory with two free throws with 9 seconds left.

"I was a little bit nervous," said Harrell, who was 6-for-6 from the line, where Duke made good on 32 of 37 tries to offset a 36-29 Irish advantage from the floor. "I just had to concentrate on doing the things I'd done in the past, like holding the ball the right way and taking three dribbles."

After his team's victory, Foster went out and watched Saturday's other semifinal between Kentucky and Arkansas.

"I want to go out and enjoy the game," he explained. "We zeroed in everything on Notre Dame. I just stay with the team at hand and try to learn everything about it."

Pirates Go To Sleep; Suffer Split In Pair

By WOODY PEELE

Thirteen proved to be an unlucky number for the East Carolina University baseball Pirates yesterday in a doubleheader against Southeastern Massachusettes University.

The Pirates romped through the first game, 13-0, and got lulled to sleep. By the time they woke up in the second game it was too late, as the Corsairs rolled up a 3-2 win and got out with a split.

"We just woke up too late," a disgusted coach Monte Little said afterwards. "We got a great game from (Bill) Lucas, but we made too many mistakes. After the first game, we took them lightly. By the time we got started it was too late."

That second game nearly turned into a gem for Southeastern righthander Raymond White, who hurled five innings of perfect baseball against the Pirates before Macon Moye finally snapped that string with a lead-off single in the sixth.

Even so, White finished with a three-hitter in which he walked none and struck out eight. He lost his shutout in the final inning when Bobby Supel hit a two-run homer.

Even that could have been enough for the Pirates to win had not the Corsairs come up with a couple of runs in the top of the inning that they had no business scoring.

It was a complete reversal of the first game of the day that saw Raymie Styons star by knocking in seven runs on two homers, one a grand-slam.

Rick Ramey went six innings of the seven in the shutout win, his second in four decisions. He walked none and struck out two as he gave up three hits. Earl Mobley went the final inning, striking out two as he retired the side in order.

That first game proved too easy for the Pirates, however and they lost their concentration.

Southeastern threatened only once in the first game, as Ray Zemsky led off with a single and moved to third on a sacrifice and an out.

The Pirates started their scoring in the second, getting an unearned run. Bobby Supel reached on an error and Moye was safe on another. Max Raynor then singled in Supel for a 1-0 lead.

The Pirates came up with five in the third inning. Eddie Gates walked and stole second. The steal was his 30th over the past two years, tieing the school's career record held by Geoff Beaston.

Billy Best then walked and Supel beat out a bunt to load them up for Styons. He slammed the ball out in left for the grand-slam.

Supel kept it going with a walk and Raynor singled. Robert Brinkley hit a sacrifice fly to score Supel.

Three more came in the fourth. Best singled and Paradossi walked. Styons again cracked a homer, this one for three runs.

Three more crossed in the fifth. Gates walked and Styons did, too. Supel tripled to knock in two runs. The triple was his third of the season, tieing another school record. Tommy Warrick singled to score Supel.

The final run came in the sixth. Best singled to center, and the Corsair fielder let it get past him on an error. The ball rolled all the way to the fence as Best streaked around the bases to score easily.

But if things went well in the first game, they went horribly in the second.

East Carolina lost a chance to score in the first when Paradossi appeared to double, but was called out on appeal to first for missing the sack.

Southeastern got an unearned run off Lucas in the first. James McDonald reached on a fielder's choice and Steven Morgan walked. With two away, Edward Colombo reached on an error, scoring McDonald.

It stayed that way until the seventh. With one down, Peter Pappas walked. Then, after the second out, Gregory DeRosier grounded to Paradossi at second. He started to go to second, realized it was too late, and then was late in going to first. Zemsky followed with a single after both moved up on a wild pitch, scoring both runners.

The Pirates rallied for two, but fell short. Butch Davis reached on a fielder's choice and Supel slapped a homer, but the rally ended there.

East Carolina, now 10-7, travels to Chapel Hill on Monday for a 7 p.m. game against the UNC Tar Heels.

Cats Slip Past Arkansas

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Kentucky's Wildcats were quicker Cats than a lot of people thought, but Joe Hall wasn't shocked.

"I feel that we surprised them with our quickness on defense and maybe surprised a lot of other people here," the Kentucky coach said after the Wildcats' 64-59 victory over Arkansas in the semifinals of the NCAA basketball tournament Saturday.

"Givens really did a good job on their quick people," said Hall, referring to star Kentucky forward Jack Givens, who wore the hero's mantle with a 23-point, nine-rebound performance.

Givens, whose breakaway layup in the last two minutes was the critical shot for Kentucky, pointed to the tight Wildcats' defense that kept on top of Arkansas' supposedly faster team.

"We played really good defense in the first half," said Givens, "and that enabled us to gain control early. We didn't play our best game, but Arkansas was the reason why. We played well enough to win, though."

Regarding his breakaway basket at the end off a perfect pass by Kyle Macy, Givens noted, "That worked for us quite a lot this year. For it to work right, Kyle has to make a perfect pass — and he did."

Arkansas Coach Eddie Sutton was one of many in the Razorbacks' camp who applauded Kentucky's quickness.

"Anybody who tells you that Kentucky doesn't have quickness ought to have his head examined," Sutton said. "They were much quicker on defense than we thought they would be. They got control in the first half and we had to play catchup. I didn't realize they could play a man-to-man defense so well — they extended us farther out than we wanted to be."

The Wildcats, 29-2, advanced to Monday night's title game against Duke, 27-6, which earlier beat Notre Dame 90-86 before a roaring crowd of 18,721 at the Checkerdome.

Givens, a straight-shooting, muscular senior forward, was the key for the Southeastern Conference champions. He scored 10 of his points during one stretch early in the second half, powering the Wildcats from a tenuous 32-30 halftime lead into a nine-point advantage at 54-45 with 8:53 left.

Despite the foul trouble on Steve Schall that forced the 6-foot-11 center out of the game with 6:19 left, the Razorbacks, 31-4, made a game of it behind key baskets by Sidney Moncrief, Marvin Delph and Alan Zahn, Schall's substitute.

Zahn's tip-in on a missed free throw by Moncrief with 3:33 left brought the fifth-ranked Razorbacks within 59-58, while the red-clad Arkansas rooters roared their approval.

Givens later supplied a key rebound after a missed shot that gave Kentucky possession of the ball with 2:44 left. James Lee, another of the heros for Kentucky with 13 points in a reserve role, was fouled at that point and sank two free throws for a 61-58 lead with 2:21 to play.

Zahn made one of two free throws with 1:58 remaining, trimming Kentucky's lead to 61-59. Kyle Macy, the Wildcats' floor general, then helped seal Arkansas' fate with an inbounds pass than carried past midcourt and landed in Givens' hands. The 6-5 forward drove home the killing points with an easy layup with 1:54 to go.

The Razorbacks, co-champions of the Southwest Conference, were able to get only one shot the rest of the way against Kentucky's brutal press, a flip by Ron Brewer. Macy added Kentucky's final point with a free throw with five seconds left.

The Razorbacks were in early trouble as Schall picked up his fourth foul and had to sit down with 13:12 left in the first half. About 3½ minutes later, another of the Razorbacks' front-court players, 6-7 Jim Counce, picked up his third foul. With 3:52 remaining in the first half, he got his fourth and had to spend the remainder of the half on the bench.

The Wildcats were able to take advantage of Arkansas' foul problems, firing passes inside for easy layups by Givens, Lee and Mike Phillips.

The Wildcats led 28-21 with 5:58 left in the first half, before the Razorbacks mounted a comeback, cutting the deficit to two at intermission.

Lee's field goal with 1:28 remaining gave Kentucky its 32-30 lead at the half, an advantage it held the rest of the way.

The Razorbacks, the nation's best field goal shooting team at 55 percent, were unable to find the range in the second half until a Schall hook shot with 4:16 gone. Givens already had four of his points in his second-half hot streak, giving the Wildcats a 38-34 lead.

The hot-handed Givens quickly came back with a basket at 4:41, starting the Wildcats' run to a 54-45 advantage.

Givens also had a game-high nine rebounds for Kentucky, which won its 12th straight game. Lee and Rick Robey had eight rebounds apiece as Kentucky won the rebounding battle 32-26.

Brewer led Arkansas with 16 points, Delph had 15 and Moncrief scored 13. Delph was Arkansas' leading rebounder leader with eight.

Injuries Mounting Up As ECU Opens Final Week Of Practice

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

It's probably a good thing that East Carolina University has its own medical school these days, at least as far as the Pirate football team is concerned.

Injuries are mounting up as the Pirates move into the final full week of spring practice, so much so that the future of the annual Purple-Gold game may be in jeopardy.

The Bucs passed up practicing on Saturday because of the injury situation according to head coach Pat Dye. "The injury list is a mile long," he commented.

The injuries have knocked such people as Wayne Poole, Leander Green, Sam Harrell, John Morris, Tim Swords, Mitchell Johnson and Theodore Sutton into the stands as onlookers for the final days of drills.

"I think that overall, this has not been an outstanding spring," Dye said. "But we have seen a lot of good things in some areas. Some people that we were counting on are coming around."

Dye said that he was pleased with the play of center Jeff Hagan. "I'm also pleased with the play of Perry Allred at tight end. We moved him over behind Joe Godette, and he gives us the best size and strength we've had there."

Dye also said that he liked the way Jeffrey Warren is playing at linebacker and Clifford Williams in the line.

"I guess the most disappointing thing has been all the injuries," he added.

"I still think we have a long way to go to be a polished football team. But we have got good enthusiasm.

"We still have to find a quarterback who can play behind Leander. So far no one has stepped out." Candidates include Tony Tripp, Henry Trevathan, Ernie Saltmarsh and Steve Greer. "If one of them doesn't take charge soon, I guess we'll have to start counting on finding help from our incoming freshmen. This is a critical position for us."

But Dye isn't counting everything lost here. "You may remember that last year at this time, we hadn't had anyone take charge, so it's no disaster yet. I just wish someone would step out and challenge Leander."

Dye also noted that while the team has a long way to go to be "ready to beat a good football team," he's not worried. "We never have been ready at this point of spring practice."

Dye said he was pleased with the running back play, both in their blocking, ball-carrying and overall approach to the game. "Tony Collins has looked good at fullback. He gives us a first-class backup to Sutton and might even challenge him."

Disappointments also include the lack of progress in some of the second unit offensive linemen. "Our first line has done well, but things get thin in a hurry behind them. Defensively, we have more depth than we've had in a long time."

Dye now feels one of the highlights has been the play of Eddie Hicks at halfback and Zack Valentine at defensive end. "Gerald Hall has also made the switch from strong safety to free safety without a lot of problems," he said.

While the injuries have mounted up, Dye said that he had no plans to quit hitting. "We'll work through Saturday, then maybe take a couple of days next week to start looking ahead to Western Carolina (the first opponent of the fall)"

The Purple-Gold game now is planned for Saturday afternoon in Ficklen Stadium.

The 1977-78 All-Area Basketball Team

He's 6-3, weighs 180 pounds, is a senior and is averaging 17.0 points a game.

She's a 5-8 senior who is averaging 13.7 points per game.

Who are they? They are the average All-Area basketball player for the 1977-78 season as chosen by the Daily Reflector Sports Staff.

The boys' team consists of ten players, most of them seniors. They range in height from Al Tyson's 6-10 to Ricky Whitehurst's 5-10.

They range in weight from James Hawkins' 155 to Tyson's and William Barnes' 210.

William Barnes

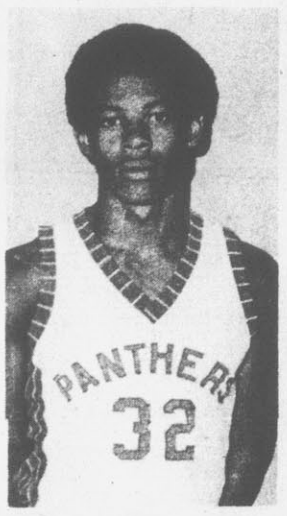

And they average between Whitehurst's 21.3 to Reginald Knight's 11.5.

Overall, there are seven seniors among the group, while two a juniors and one, Knight, is a sophomore. The two juniors are Edward Ward and Donald Freeman.

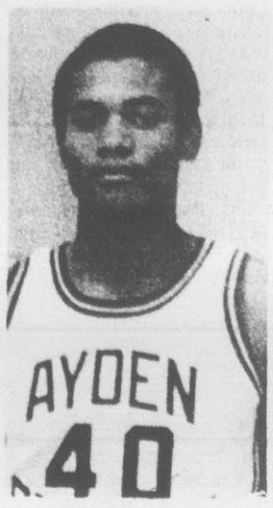

Paula Bennett

The girls' team, also of ten players, has six seniors. There are two juniors, Joyce Manning and JoAnna Lilley, and two sophomores, Annie Hardy and Lib Johnson.

Reginald Knight

James Leggett

They range in height from Karen Haseley's 6-1 to Carolyn Duggins' 5-2. And they range in average from Johnson's 18.9 to Duggins' 8.0.

Boy's Team

The boys' team has at least one legitimate hot college prospect and a few more who could be players to watch as far as the recruiting game goes.

The top prospect is Conley High School's Al Tyson, 6-10, 210, with an 18.1 average. He paced the Vikings in scoring all year, as the team went to a second-place finish in the Eastern Carolina Conference.

Joyce Manning

Three who could be "sleepers" would be two from Rose High School and one from Ayden-Grifton.

Rose contributes 6-7, 210-pound senior William Barnes with an 18.7 average, and 6-1, 155-pound James Hawkins, hitting 15.2 per game. The two led the Rampants to their best season in years, a second place finish in the conference tournament, and a state 1-A tournament berth.

Ayden-Grifton's team member is 6-6, 205-pound senior James Leggett, tagged as another sleeper. He averaged 17.0 points a game this year.

Frankie Dail, a 6-1, 185-pound senior also represents Grifton on the team. He hit 16.6 points a game this year.

Orioles Capture Win Over Texas

POMPANO BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Ken Singleton led a 10-hit attack with two doubles and a single Saturday as the Baltimore Orioles downed the Texas Rangers 8-4 in an exhibition baseball game.

Baltimore center fielder Al Bumby, who hit only four home runs last season, hit a solo homer in the seventh, giving the Orioles a 3-2 margin and putting them ahead to stay.

Lee May followed with a two-run shot in the eighth and Baltimore added three more runs in the ninth.

Texas, now 10-5 this spring, scored twice in the third inning to take the early lead, but the Orioles tied it up with single runs in the fourth and fifth innings.

Al Oliver and Bump Wills each had two hits for Texas.

Indians End Losses

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — John Grubb rapped a two-run double and Paul Dade drove in the winning run with another double as the Cleveland Indians edged the San Diego Padres 3-2 in an exhibition game Saturday.

The two key hits offset a home run by former Indians outfielder Oscar Gamble.

Lib Johnson

Ricky Whitehurst of Jamesville, the smallest member of the team, is a 5-10, 160-pound senior. He led the area in scoring, however, with a 21.3 average.

Roanoke lists Edward Ward on the team. Ward, one of the two juniors, is 6-1, 160, and averaged 17.9 per game.

The other junior is Farmville Central's Donald Freeman, a

Tim Sutton. A senior, the 6-1, 160-pounder, averaged 18.5 points per game for the Knights.

Girls' Team

College recruiting hasn't reached anything near a peak in girls' basketball as yet, but there could be a few area players who might be seeing further play on teams in the future.

Topping the scale in height is Ayden-Grifton's Karen Haseley, at 6-1. She averaged 14.3 points per game in leading the Eastern Carolina Conference's scoring race this year.

Right behind her are a couple of girls from Williamston. Paula Bennett, a 5-11 senior, could be the top prospect. She averaged 15.4 points a game in leading the

Golfers Are 11th

GREENVILLE, S.C. — East Carolina University's golfers finished 11th in a field of 26 in the one-day Furman Intercollegiate Invitational Golf Tournament.

The Pirates finished the two rounds with a 614 total, having shot the second day of play.

Clemson took first place in the event with a 593, followed by Georgia at 594. Georgia Southern was third with a 601, followed by Alabama at 603.

Florida and South Carolina tied for fifth at 606, while N.C. State, North Carolina and South Carolina tied for seventh at 609. Wake Forest had 611 for tenth place.

Individual scores for the ECU golfers were not available.

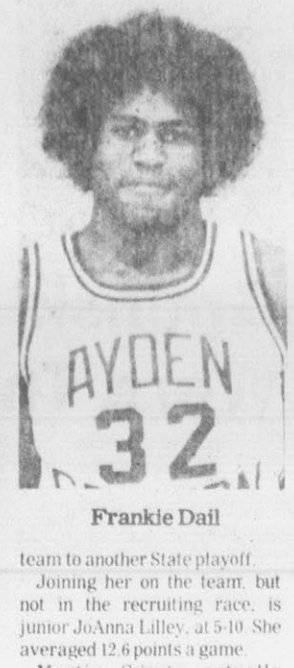

Monday Keys Win

VERO BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Rick Monday drove in three runs with a triple and a single to lead Los Angeles to a 6-2 exhibition victory over the New York Mets Saturday.

Tommy John and Lance Ratzhan combined to scatter nine New York hits as the Dodgers won their third straight and improved their exhibition record to 8-7.

Monday, who has collected 10 hits in his last 15 at bats, singled home the Dodgers' first run in the second inning off loser Nino Espinosa. Monday then tripled home two more runs in the third when Los Angeles scored four unearned runs.

John retired the first 10 Mets in order before Doug Flynn tripled with one out in the fourth. Steve Henderson then singled home Flynn. The Mets got an unearned run in the seventh against John, who gave up seven hits in seven innings.

Frankie Dail

team to another State playoff.

Joining her on the team, but not in the recruiting race, is junior JoAnna Lilley, at 5-10. She averaged 12.6 points a game.

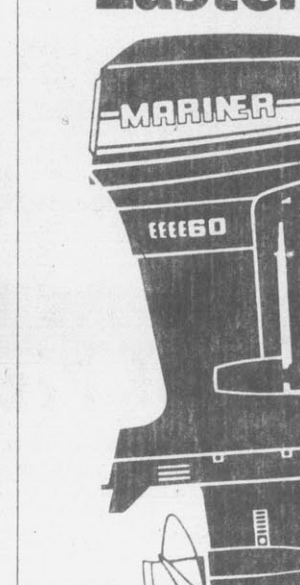

Martin County actually dominates the scene in girls' basketball, with six of the ten from that county.

The group also includes Jamesville's Joyce Manning, a 5-5 junior. She led the area scoring race most of the year, ending up with a 16.7 average.

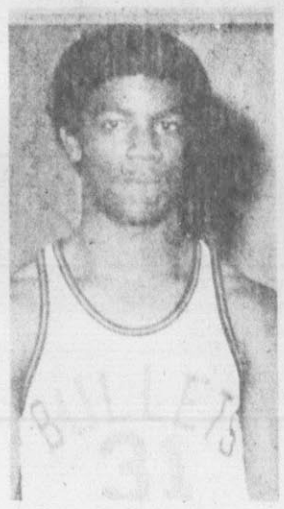

Finishing in second place in the area scoring race this year was Bear Grass, Patricia Taylor. The 5-8 senior hit 16.9 points a game during the year.

Annie Wooten

Dianne Barrett

Ricky Whitehurst

Carolyn Duggins, a 5-2 senior, averaged only 8.0 points a game, but was instrumental in Roanoke High School's second place finish in the Eastern Plains Conference and their trip to the district tournament.

Rounding out the Martin group of girls comes another first. Lib Johnson of Martin Academy is the first girl from an academy picked on the team. And the 5-6 sophomore did it in style, as she led the area's scoring with an 18.9 average.

D.H. Conley's Valkyries, who

Patricia Taylor

won the Eastern Carolina Conference championship after years as the doormat, placed two on the select group.

Annie Hardy was the team's scoring leader wtih a 12.5 average. She's a 5-6 sophomore. Annie Wooten, a 5-8 senior, hit 9.9 points a game. The two were the principal leaders in Conley's title drive.

Farmville Central's Diana Barrett rounds out the team. A 5-9 senior, she averaged 12.1 points per game.

Mariner
Is Here To Take On Eastern N.C. Waters.

Buy a rugged, dependable Mariner outboard.
Mariner may be new to America, but in the past several years they've built a reputation for trouble-free performance all over the world. In the remote waters of places like Venezuela, Asia, and Australia where an engine failure can be a lot more serious than unexpected paddle to the dock.
Mariners run longer because they're designed very simply and built very strong. Built for easy starting and hundreds of hours of hard running without major tune-ups or serious service.
Mariners are available in 14 models from 2 to 140 horsepower. Before we sell them, we thoroughly test them. Just to get to your dealer, they had to be good.
Summer is far too short to own an engine that sits in the shop. Own a Mariner instead. They're built for boating, not breaking.

Local Matmen Perform Well

HEMPSTEAD, N.Y. — Three Greenville wrestlers turned in top performances while competing in a The Eastern Junior Freestyle Wrestling Tourament here this weekend.

Ron Butler of Rose High School lost to Wilson Fike's Gurnest Brown for fourth place in the meet after both were beaten in the semi-finals. Brown was the third place match, 14-4.

Butler, a heavyweight, lost to Jim Smith of New York, 8-2, in the first round, then pinned William Kleman, in 3:40. He pinned Peter Antonelli of New York in 1:23, but then lost in the semifinals on a pin to New Jersey's Bruce Bumgarner in 5:24.

James Cherry, at 123-pounds, reached the final sixteen. He pinned Mark Hoffner of New Jersey in 1:42, and was then pinned by Michael Vilarti of New York in 1:48. He decisioned Matthew McLoughlin of New York, 15-0, before losing to Ralph D'Ascy of New York, 13-2.

Raymond Wooten, at 191, was beaten by Mike Manley of New York, 8-4. He then beat Matthew White of New York, 14-10 before being pinned in 2:00 by Pennsylvania's Larry Cox.

Two other Greenville wrestlers lost out in the early going. Cliff Whichard at 114, was decisioned by Patrick Spates of New York, 11-1, and by Seth Zamek of New York, 10-5.

Alfred O'Neal, at 165, lost a 16-2 decision to New York's Bob Kuff, then was pinned in 20 seconds by Wesley Paine of West Virginia.

All five wrestlers competed unattached in the meet.

Nelson Holds Stroke Lead In Tourney

By BOB GREEN
AP Golf Writer

HILTON HEAD ISLAND, S.C. (AP) — Larry Nelson, who assumed 2-stroke control of the lead with a gritty, hard-won 68 while the others were firing and falling back, really doesn't know what to expect going into Sunday's final 18 holes of the $225,000 Heritage Golf Classic.

"I don't know what kind of front-runner I am," Nelson said after he'd done the best job of surviving a suddenly severe wind that kicked up over the last few holes of Saturday's third round.

"I've never been in this position before," continued Nelson, who has yet to win and is holding a third-round lead for the first time in his five-year tour career.

"I'd think it would have a positive effect. I think it would have to be easier to have a 2-shot lead than being in a five-way tie.

"I've been in position to win before if I had a really good last round, but I've never before been in a position where they have to come and beat me. I don't know how I'll handle it. I don't think I'll be too excited. You see, I'm not a very excitable person," said the quiet little guy from Kennesaw, Ga.

Nelson, a slightly built, balding 30-year-old former illustrator who didn't take up golf until he was 21, was in a cozy group of five who shared the lead at the start of the day but emerged the sole leader after 54 holes with a 205 total.

That's 8-under-par par on the testing 6,655-yard Harbour Town Golf Links, a spectacularly beautiful layout but a temper-testing, troublesome course for most of the field.

As an example of its deceptively destructive capabilities, the final threesome on the course required 20 strokes to play the par 5 15th hole — double bogey 7s by PGA champion Lanny Wadkins and Hale Irwin, twice a winner of this invitational event, and a bogey 6 by Nelson, who is struggling for the first title of his five-year tour career.

Chunky Craig Stadler, a former U.S. Amateur champion, and skinny David Graham, a dangerous veteran from Australia, shared the No. 2 position at 207 after matching 67s.

Another 2 strokes behind at 209 were PGA champion Lanny Wadkins and veteran Fred Marti. Wadkins struggled to a 72 while Marti ground out a 69, one-putting his last four holes, which he played in par figures.

Wadkins was one of the four men tied with Nelson after two rounds. The others all fell further back. The intensely competitive Irwin shot 73-210. Miller Barber and George Burns each were 74-211.

Tied with Irwin were U.S. Open champ Hubert Green, who blew two shots on the final hole, cross-handed putter Bruce Lietzke, Lou Graham and Orville Moody, making his best showing in years. Moody closed up with a 67, Green had a 70, Lietzke 71 and Lou Graham 72.

Ben Crenshaw, one of the first off the tee, completed a round of 66 before the winds off Calibogue Sound reached peak strength. He was at 211. Defending champion Graham Marsh was 69-212 and Tom Watson, a two-time winner this season, shot 70. At 213, however, he appeared out of title contention.

"I'm just happy to be through," sighed the soft-spoken Nelson, who bogeyed two of his last four holes. "The wind really kicked up about the 15th and the course kind of changed complection. It wasn't quite so forgiving."

His superior play on the front side, a 32 produced by crisp irons that set him up for four birdies in the 6-12 foot range, put him solidly in front and gave him the cushion he needed to survive the home-bound bogeys, on the 15th — where he had to hit one out of trees toward the tee — and the 18th, where he missed the green.

"I felt like I had things well under control on the front nine.

"In a position like that, with five tied, you feel like anybody can jump out and take command."

He had his problems coming home, but so did everyone else. And, of the contenders, he handled it best. The rest took a scenic tour of the resort island — Wadkins and Irwin tramping through the woods, David Graham grimacing as if in pain from the gleaming white sand, Stadler bending double in anguish at a missed putt, Green going from trouble to trouble and eventually missing a one-foot putt on the final hole.

It left Nelson in solid control, with only two players within 4 strokes going to Sunday's final 18 holes of play.

Irish Effort Came Too Late

By ED SCHAFER
Associated Press Writer

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Notre Dame Coach Digger Phelps said his team did all the right things in Saturday's 90-86 loss to Duke, but did them too late.

"Obviously, they had control in the first half," said Phelps. "We didn't have the rebounding and we didn't penetrate on the wings as we should have."

To try to offset a 14-point halftime deficit, Phelps said his team had to play "nearly perfect catch-up ball."

It nearly did. The Irish came storming back to pull within two points and had possession of the ball in the final minute, but Duck Williams' jumper bounced off the rim with 12 seconds left.

"I wanted to pass to Kelly Tripucka," said Williams, "but it was a good shot for me. I thought I had hit it, but it didn't go in."

Instead the rebound went to Duke, and two free throws by John Harrell with 9 seconds left put the game away.

Dave Batton, at 6-foot-9 one of Notre Dame's big men, said his team had trouble under the boards, particularly in the first half.

"They went to their strength and blocked us out," Batton said. "That's what beat us."

The Irish never were able to stop the play of 18-year-olds Mike Gminski and Gene Banks under the boards.

Phelps had nothing but praise for the 6-11 Gminksi, who led all scorers with 29 points.

"Gminski intimidates very well," Phelps said. "He controlled the rebounding.

"We're obviously disappointed," he added, "but not in the way we lost. We made a gallant comeback. Anything can happen when you get under 20 seconds — and it almost did."

As for Monday's consolation game, Phelps said he had nothing special planned.

"We're just going to go out and play," he said. "Tomorrow's Easter and I've got my children with me. I'm going to go out and buy some chocolate eggs and play Easter bunny for the kids."

Perry Nearing Several Career Milestones

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

Two National League stars figure to join baseball's 3,000-hit club this season, becoming the first additions to the exclusive group since Al Kaline joined up in 1974.

Pete Rose and Lou Brock, both within hailing distance of the magic mark, head a fistful of major leaguers who will be zeroing in on career records when the 1978 season gets underway.

Rose, who has had more hits than any switch-hitter in baseball history, finished 1977 with 2,966 hits, 34 short of 3,000. Shortly after the Cincinnati third baseman turns 37 on April 14, he should become the 13th player to achieve 3,000 hits.

Right behind him is Brock, baseball's all-time base-stealing king, who finished last season with an even 900 swipes, surpassing Ty Cobb's mark of 892. Now that the St. Louis swifty has the stolen-base record, he can shoot for the 3,000-hit mark. He finished last season at 2,834, leaving him 166 hits short. That is just about Brock's per-year average of hits for 17 major league seasons, so his chase for 3,000 could extend all the way into the stretch of the 1978 campaign.

Rose, working on a consecutive game streak that now has reached 652, is also shooting for a record 10th 200-hit season. He shares the mark of nine with Cobb.

Brock and Rose are the most prominent hitters on the trail of batting pleateaus but they are by no means the only ones.

San Francisco slugger Willie McCovey, reclaimed from baseball oblivion by the Giants a year ago, needs just seven home runs to reach 500 for his career. McCovey's 493 are No. 12 on the alltime list and he slugged 28 of them last year, when he signed as a bargain-basement free agent with San Francisco. McCovey also has 18 career grand slams, second on the alltime list to Lou Gehrig's 23.

McCovey also needs 82 runs batted in to reach 1,500 for his career. Boston's Carl Yastrzemsi is likely to get there first, however. Yaz is 55 away from that figure and needs 34 homers to reach 400.

Three other sluggers, Willie Horton of Cleveland, George Scott of Boston and Reggie Jackson of the New York Yankees, are closing in on 1,000 RBIs. Horton needs 39, Scott 52 and Jackson 66 to reach that total.

Horton is also 23 homers shy of 300 for his career but Tony Perez of Montreal and Johnny Bench of Cincinnati will most likely get there first. Perez goes into 1978 with 296 career homers and Bench has 287.

Perez also is closing in on 2,000 hits for his career. He needs 52 to reach that mark.

Journeyman pitcher Gaylord Perry, now working for the San Diego Padres, will be shooting for three important milestones early this season.

He needs four victories to reach 250 for his career and two shutouts for 50. Three other pitchers, Don Sutton of Los Angeles, Tom Seaver of Cincinnati and Jim Palmer of Baltimore, also are closing in on 50 blankings. Sutton goes into 1978 with 47, Seaver 46 and Palmer 45.

Perry's 2,847 strikeouts are fourth on the alltime list and nine more will move him past Jim Bunning into the No. 3 slot behind Walter Johnson's 3,508 and Bob Gibson's 3,117.

Mickey Lolich, who will team with Perry in San Diego this season, is sixth on the strikeout list with 2,799, the most for any left-hander in baseball history. If he posts 57 strikeouts this season, Lolich would climb to No. 4.

Roanoke Wins, Bears Bow In Tourney Play

JAMESVILLE — Roanoke and Creswell moved into winners' bracket in the Jamesville Invitational Baseball Tournament Saturday afternoon. Roanoke gained a 6-2 victory over Manteo, while Creswell nipped Bear Grass, 1-0.

Two other games, one between hosting Jamesville and West Edgecombe, were rained out and will be played Monday. The tournament has now been extended through Wednesday due to the rainouts.

In the first game, Creswell got a one-hitter from Russell Holton. He struck out 16 Bear Grass batters while walking four.

Duane Baker, the opposing pitcher, broke up the no-hitter with a slap in the sixth inning.

Creswell got its run in the bottom of the sixth. Holton walked and David Sawyer reached on an error. Buck Ambrose singled, loading the bases, and a hit by Don Patrick scored Holton with the game's only run.

In the second contest, Roanoke pushed over two runs in the first inning to take the lead. Ken Gurganus singled and scored when Glenn Cargile reached on an error. Another error moved Cargile up, and he scored on Cliff Keel's sacrifice fly.

Another Redskin run came in the fourth. Charlie Smith singled and stole up. After two walks, an error on a pickoff play let Smith score.

Roanoke gave up both of the Manteo runs in the fifth, then came up with three more of their own in the sixth.

Keel opened the sixth with a homer for Roanoke. Wayne Council then walked and stole up. Street Lee reached on an error and Will Harris walked. Gurganus and Cargile both walked, forcing in two runs.

Both Roanoke and Bear Grass are scheduled to play again Monday.

Defense Key To Victory

By PAUL LeBAR
AP Sports Writer

ST. LOUIS (AP) — The coach of top-ranked Kentucky and two of his senior standouts all credited the Wildcats' defense with Saturday's 64-59 squeeze past Arkansas in the semifinals of the NCAA basketball tournament.

"We knew the quickness of Arkansas," said Wildcats Coach Joe Hall. "One of the big keys to stopping their offense was putting pressure on their passing.

"The big part of the credit goes to Rick Robey, guarding Jim Counts," added the 50-year-old Hall. "We got a double reward because Kyle (Macy) and Jack (Givens) and Jay Shidler did a good job on their quick people.

"We just feel fortunate that things fell together well and we were able to beat an ultra-fine team in Arkansas."

Echoing Hall's appraisal were the 6-foot-4 Givens, the game's top scorer with 23 points and top rebounder with nine, and Robey, a 6-10 senior.

"We played really good defense the first half," said Givens. "That shut them down and helped us to get things in hand. We've played a lot of teams with quickness all year, but I don't think any of them played like Arkansas."

"In the first half, we were able to pressure them and take away their tempo," said Robey. "I think that was the difference in the ball game."

Kentucky's victory, boosting its record to 29-2, sent the Wildcats into Monday night's championship game against Duke, which earlier upset Notre Dame 90-86.

"Sometimes in a tournament like this, you have a team that's a Cinderella, a team that comes on strong and finishes fast," said Hall. "Duke has created intensity and enthusiasm. We hope some of it rubs off on us."

Givens, Robey, Wildcats reserve James Lee and 6-10 Mike Phillips are veterans from a Kentucky team which last went to the NCAA finals in 1975. They bowed 92-85 to UCLA at San Diego.

"I feel, looking back, when we went to the finals in '75 we used up all our energy in the Indiana game," said Robey, recalling the Wildcats' upset of the Hoosiers in a regional title game.

"I don't think we played up to our potential. This week in practice, we talked about that. This time, we came here to win it all."

"When you get to the final four, the pressure's on everybody," said Givens, the Wildcats' second all-time leading scorer. 'You have to win. We're just going to go out and do the best we can possibly do."

The Wayne State football team had four sets of brothers on its 1977 team, the Copacias, the Biondos, the Sommers and Paul and Chris Schultz.

Ayden-Grifton Tops Jones Sr.

TRENTON — Ayden-Grifton pushed over six runs in the sixth inning and pulled out a 12-6 victory over Jones Senior Friday afternoon.

Ayden-Grifton took the lead with a run in the top of the first. Harold Edwards singled and moved up on a wild pitch. Ed Coley singled and a hit by Mike Teachey brought in Edwards.

The Chargers got three more in the second for a 4-0 lead. Brady Quinn singled and David Smith cracked a two-run homer. Wayne Newton then singled and stole up, scoring on Coley's single.

After Ayden-Grifton scored two more in the third, Jones came up with three in the third and three more in the fourth to tie the game at 6-6.

But in the sixth, the Chargers added six more runs to win it. Edwards singled and Coley reached on an error, moving Edwards to third. The two pulled a double steal, scoring Edwards. Jay Phillips walked and Mike Teachey hit a three-run homer. After Quinn singled, Smith hit his second homer of the afternoon for the final 12-6 margin.

Teachey and Quinn each had three hits for Ayden-Grifton, while Coley and Smith added two each. Benny Tootle had a solo homer for Jones in the third.

The Chargers are now 2-3 overall and play Tuesday at Washington.

Rose Has Potential For Good Season

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Things haven't gone according to plan so far for the Rose High School girls' softball team. At this point in the season, the Rampettes are 0-3, but Coach Diana Piatt feels they could easily have been 3-0.

Not that the games have been that close; they haven't.

But Miss Piatt feels that the potential is there for the Rampettes to have a winning year, if they put their minds to it.

"The main problem is that the girls are not thinking about what they're doing," Piatt said. "They're not working together as a team. Once they get this down, they'll be a good team."

There is a lot of inexperience on the team, however. There are no seniors, just three juniors and the rest are sophomores. Numbers are a problem also, since there are only 12 girls on the team, and ten play the field at one time.

Only two girls from last year's team have returned, Robin Edwards and Dianne Littlefield.

"We do lack in experience, but I think the potential is there to have a good team, not only in the future, but this year too," the coach said. "We're just going to have to work harder in our practices, and think more in the games."

In the first game, Piatt said the Rampettes suffered from a bad case of nerves, and then in the second, played well until the final inning when they fell apart. In the third game, nothing seemed to go right for them.

"I feel we could have won all three games. We have a lot of potential, and I think the girls realize this. They just have to reach it. Our practices are fantastic. But when we get into a game, they don't talk to one another, and you have to do this in a game to be successful."

Piatt said some position changes might be in order before the Rampettes return to the diamond. Right now, however, she has Chris Smith at catcher, Betti Lou Tripp at second, Deborah Wingate at third and Edwards at short.

She is uncertain about first, where Stephanie Taylor has been playing, and may try Susan Brown here.

The outfield will consist of Veronica Bridges, Gwen Yarrell, Littlefield and Teresa Williams.

Eden Hooks handles the pitching.

"We have only one other girl, Sheri Helms, and she's injured right now. So we don't have any bench at all," Piatt said.

As far as the conference race goes, Piatt feels that Rocky Mount, Northern Nash and Wilson will be the teams to beat.

"But we can be right in there if the girls start coming around to their potential. They have the ability, it's just a question of playing to it."

Bear Grass Dumps Pantego

PANTEGO — Bear Grass came up with seven runs in the fifth inning to gain an 11-8 victory over Pantego Friday afternoon.

The Bears got the first run of the game in the top of the second inning. David Bowen walked and William Roberson reached on an error. Doug Baker was also safe on an error and Joe Harrison reached on a fielder's choice, scoring Bowen.

Pantego came up with two in the third. Phillips reached on an error and scored when Ramsey was safe on another miscue. Davis reached on another error scoring Ramsey.

Bear Grass rallied for three in the fourth, then broke the game open with seven in the top of the fifth taking an 11-2 lead. Jackie Harrison walked and Bowen singled. Doug Baker doubled in the first run. Abby Baker walked and Joe Harrison got a walk, forcing in another run. Clay Gardiner reached on an error, bringing in a run, and Jesse Bullock singled in another run. Duane Baker walked to bring in the sixth run, and a single by Jackie Harrison brought in the final run.

Pantego rallied for four in the fifth and one each in the sixth and seventh, but failed to catch up.

The Bears are now 2-1, and were to play in the Jamesville Invitational Saturday, Monday and Tuesday.

Simpson Hopes For Shot At Championship

By BILL MARTIN
Associated Press Writer

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — O.J. Simpson is returning to the city where he was born in quest of one goal which has eluded him during a record-shattering career — a professional football championship.

"All my life I've been a San Francisco 49er fan," the superstar running back said Friday. "When I was a kid I used to dream of leading the 49ers to a championship."

Simpson, the National Football League's leading active rusher, was sent to the 49ers Friday in exchange for five draft choices spread over the next three years. The 49ers gave up no players.

"The thing that approved it for me was that we didn't have to give up any of our players or our No.1 draft choice this year," said 49ers General Manager Joe Thomas.

"It is hard for me to believe that the gentleman sitting next to me is actually here and is a 49er," a beaming Thomas told a news conference. "O.J. can play for at least three years, and if he does that it will be the finest acquisition this club has ever made."

For Simpson, it marks a return to the city where he grew up, playing football at Galileo High School and San Francisco City College before moving on to glory at the University of Southern California.

"From 1957 until I went to USC in 1967 I never missed a 49er game," Simpson said. "I used to scalp tickets outside Kezar Stadium when I was a kid. The 49ers made it possible for me to eat in the school cafeteria."

Before the trade was finalized, Simpson had to pass a 49ers' physical examination to check the knee he injured last year. The injury caused him to miss the final half of the season.

"The knee is fine," he said. "I've been playing some tennis and running a little to stay in shape. All I really need is to strengthen it a little."

Although he has long sought a trade to a West Coast team to be near his family and business interests, Simpson confessed that he was a little saddened when it appeared the trade would become a reality.

"I was in Minneapolis last night (Thursday) and I started thinking about Buffalo," he said. "I was kind of down. I thought about all the guys on the team and there was some sadness. I've spent my whole adult life as a Buffalo Bill."

Southern Ill. Tops Pirates

The East Carolina tennis team dropped its third straight match in a row Friday as Southern Illinois destroyed the Pirates, 9-0, on the Minges tennis courts.

Southern Illinois had little trouble in gaining the victory.

East Caroina is now 7-6, and will travel to Buies Creek on Tuesday to face Campbell College.

Roanoke Trims Elm City, 6-1

ELM CITY — Roanoke High School got a two-hitter from Clay Roberson Friday afternoon and rolled to a 6-1 victory over Elm City.

Roberson in going the distance, walked four, hit one and struck out nine.

Roanoke pushed over a run in the first to take the lead. Wayne Council walked, stole up and scored on Charlie Smith's double.

It stayed that way until the fourth, when the Redskins scored two more runs. Cliff Keel reached on an error and Anthony Latham singled. Street Lee singled to load them up, and a hit by Ken Gurganus brought in Keel and Latham.

The Redskins got another in the fifth. Smith walked, stole up and scored on Lee's single.

The final two Redskin runs crossed in the sixth. Gurganus walked and Council reached on a fielder's choice. Both runners advanced on a balk, and scored on Glenn Cargile's single.

Elm City's lone run came in the sixth. Cuttington walked and scored on Joe McCullen's single.

Lee had three hits to lead Roanoke, while Gurganus had two.

Roanoke is now 1-1 in the Eastern Plains Conference and 3-1 overall. They were to play Saturday, Monday and Tuesday in the Jamesville Invitational Tournament.

Teachey To Elon

Ayden-Grifton senior Mike Teachey signed a football grant-in-aid with Elon College last week.

Teachey, a starting lineman for the Chargers for four years, played both offense and defense. He was All-Area four times and All-Conference three times. As a senior, Teachey was named to the first All-East team and was honorable mention All-State.

Elon coach Jerry Jolley termed the 6-2, 220 Teachey a "prize catch." The school is regularly among the top small college powers in the nation.

Tiger Netters Down Ahoskie

AHOSKIE — Williamston's tennis team gained a 6-3 victory over Ahoskie Friday.

Ahoskie won the first two singles, but Williamston came back to take the next four, then took two of the three doubles to win it.

Williamston is now 3-2 and returns to action on April 6 at Roanoke Rapids.

Johnson Makes Good On Second Chance

By ALEX SACHARE
AP Sports Writer

Confidence is the key for Eddie Johnson, and not even two missed free throws in overtime could shake that confidence.

Thumb In Mouth

"Those first two I missed came when I was winded," said the rookie from Auburn, who failed on two tries from the foul line with 1:09 to go in overtime and the score tied. "But I got a second chance."

And he made the most of it, sinking both shots with four seconds remaining to cap a career-high 29-point effort that helped the Atlanta Hawks beat the New Orleans Jazz 96-94.

"Once I got the first one," said Johnson, "I was home free."

Elsewhere in the NBA, the Houston Rockets edged the Kansas City Kings 107-103, the Chicago Bulls trimmed the Boston Celtics 97-96, the Philadelphia 76ers outscored the Milwaukee Bucks 131-122, the Washington Bullets defeated the New Jersey Nets 107-104, the Detroit Pistons topped the Portland Trail Blazers 107-95, the Los Angeles Lakers beat the Buffalo Braves 120-115 and the Seattle SuperSonics stopped the Indiana Pacers 104-102.

New Orleans' Gail Goodrich, who scored 34 points, sent the game into overtime tied at 90 with two free throws with 22 seconds left. Atlanta was unable to get off a shot before time expired.

Two baskets by John Drew gave the Hawks a four-point lead in overtime, but the Jazz tied it on two free throws by Truck Robinson and a 20-foot jumper by Pete Maravich.

Rockets 107, Kings 103

It was Calvin Murphy night in Houston and the veteran guard responded with 25 points to help the Rockets beat the Kings and snap a 13-game losing streak. Murphy got off to a slow start and shot 9-for-28 from the field overall, but he did hit for 6 points in the last two minutes.

Bulls 97, Celtics 96

Chicago stayed in the playoff chase by beating Boston on a 30-foot jumper by Mickey Johnson with 1 second left. The Bulls are 2½ games behind Milwaukee in the race for the final Western Conference spot.

76ers 131, Bucks 122

Philadelphia posted its 22nd straight home-court triumph behind 28 points and 11 rebounds by reserve forward Joe Bryant.

Bullets 107, Nets 104

Washington's Elvin Hayes snapped a 104-104 tie with a free throw with 32 seconds left. After John Williamson missed a short jumper for New Jersey with 15 seconds to go, Tom Henderson clinched the victory for the Bullets with 2 free throws seven seconds later.

Pistons 107, Blazers 95

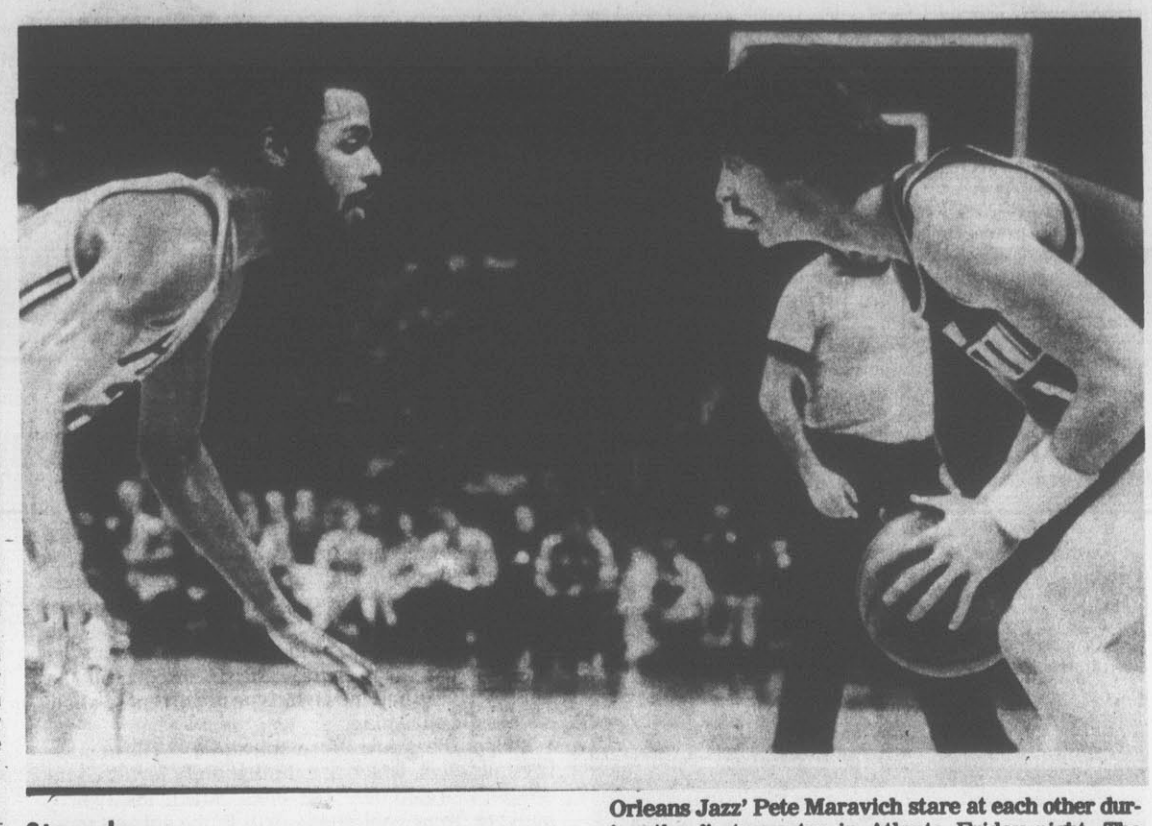

Injury-riddled Portland trailed by just 45-44 at halftime but couldn't keep pace with the Pistons in the second half. The Blazers were without Bill Walton, Maurice Lucas, Lloyd Neal and Bobby Gross.

Lakers 120, Braves 115

Kareem Abdul-Jabbar scored 30 points and became the ninth man to pass the 20,000-point mark in his career as Los Angeles beat Buffalo.

Sonics 104, Pacers 102

Rookie forward Jack Sikma scored Seattle's last 5 points against Indiana, including a 25-foot jumper at the buzzer for the winning margin. He finished with 28 points, a career high.

Staredown

Each player seems to be waiting for the other to move as Atlanta Hawks' Armond Hill (left) and New Orleans Jazz' Pete Maravich stare at each other during the first quarter in Atlanta Friday night. The Hawks went on to win in overtime, 96-94. (AP Laserphoto)

Holmes Pounds Out Decision

By ED SCHUYLER JR.
AP Sports Writer

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — arry Holmes nullified the aunted power of Earnie Shavers with speed, a rapier left ab and flurries of precision unches to the head Saturday pounding out a one-sided 12-ound decision in their nationlly televised heavyweight ght.

The victory apparently puts e unbeaten Holmes into posion for a title shot against Ken orton, the World Boxing Coun-l champion.

It was a masterful boxing erformance by Holmes, who ame close to stopping Shavers the final round. He moved de to side, jabbed well and ountered with both hands gainst Shavers, whose perrmance was much more miss an hit.

In the waning seconds, olmes flashed home a right unter to Shavers' chin and avers buckled, his right knee opping to just inches from e canvas. He straightened up d Holmes fired six shots to e head. Shavers looked ready go down when the bell rang d he staggered across the ng to his corner.

Judge Harold Buck and judge e Swessel each scored it 120-8, and judge Dave Moretti w it 119-109, all for Holmes.

The Associated Press favored olmes, 119-108.

Shavers' best round was the cond, in which he got home ree good rights to the head hich shook Holmes. But the -year-old Pennsylvanian, who lls himself the "Easton Assin," was able to turn Shavers' power against him for most of the fight.

When Shavers would get Holmes onto the ropes, Holmes tied him up effectively, and often punched Shavers away with a flurry usually started with a counter.

Holmes took control of the fight in the fifth round, when he hurt Shavers with two solid rights to the side of the head, then drove the 33-year-old puncher from Warren, Ohio, into a corner.

In the sixth round, Holmes hurt Shavers with a right following a jab after Shavers had missed with a wild left. Holmes, who cut Shavers under the left eye in the fifth round, used his jab to set up and frustrate his opponent.

Indeed, Holmes' biggest problem was his trunks. He split them down the middle of the seat in the second round and between the fourth and fifth rounds had to change into a new pair while his cornermen huddled around him.

In the seventh, Holmes, who weighed 210 — the same as Shavers — hurt Shavers with a left hook late in the round, then slammed home eight to 10 accurate shots to the head that had Shavers wobbling at the bell.

Shavers was very tired.

With Norton watching at Caesars Palace ringside, Holmes was content to box through the ninth, 10th and 11th rounds while Shavers tried desperately to land the punch that would turn the tide.

Shavers was paid $275,000 for his television appearance on ABC's Wide World of Sports.

Unhappy Finley Set To Open

DENVER (AP) — In just 16 days baseball is supposed to begin in Oakland. Its proximity has prompted Oakland Coliseum officials to launch preparations for the A's home opener April 10 against Seattle.

But it's still anybody's guess whether the A's actually will play in the Bay Area this year ... or in Denver.

A's owner Charles Finley maintains he's staying put. Finley announced Friday he has withdrawn his offer to sell the American League team to Denver oilman Marvin Davis.

"Baseball is pressuring me continuously to put up more money, but I'm not putting up another dime over $1 million," Finley said Friday in Chicago.

"I can't dilly dally around and wonder if my team will be sold or play in Oakland. So I just made a decision that I'll play at Oakland."

Davis, who reached agreement on the sale of the team and its transfer to Denver last December only to have the deal fall through when Finley couldn't extricate himself from a 10-year lease at the Coliseum, said he's "had a bellyful" of the protracted on-again, off-again maneuvering. Nevertheless, Davis left the door open.

"If Mr. Finley would reconsider his decision, even at this extremely late date, we still have the capabilities to complete the transfer," Davis said.

The key stumbling block remains a reported $3.25 million assessment the Coliseum is demanding to release the A's from the lease.

Finley has agreed to pay $1 million and baseball's other owners would pay another $1 million. But no one seems willing to budge from those positions.

Bob Lurie and Bud Herseth, co-owners of the San Francisco Giants, who stand to benefit by a move of the A's from the Bay Area, reportedly were meeting Friday in Phoenix, Ariz., leading to rumors that they were considering a contribution to the $1 million needed to keep the sale alive. In the past, however, Lurie has been adamant about not bailing out Finley.

In Oakland, Coliseum President Robert Nahas said Friday the ballpark staff is going ahead with preparations for the A's first home game.

High Point Plumber Captures Top Prize In BASS Tournament

GASBURG, Va. (AP) — Hurley Board says "I fished the same 100 yards of bank near Rocky Creek Channel for three days."

And the effort paid off Friday for the 41-year-old plumber from High Point, N. C., as he took home the $14,000 first prize in the $62,500 Virginia Invitational BASS Tournament on Lake Gaston.

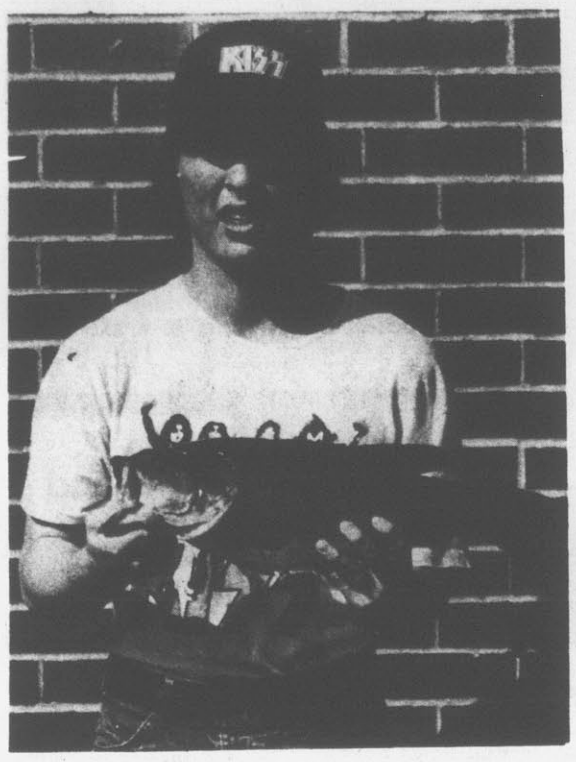

Board, whose best previous finish as a part-time pro on the Bass Anglers Sportsman Society circuit was a second at Santee-Cooper, S. C., in 1975, caught five bass Friday weighing 14 pounds, 12 ounces for a three-day winning total of 38 pounds, 11 ounces.

The Friday catch boosted Board from fourth to first and made a runner-up of Thursday's leader, Tom Mann of Eufala, Ala.

Mann, a two-time winner on the BASS tour, had a 5-pound fish escape the net early Friday, caught only two weighing 3 pounds, 15 ounces and finished the three-day tourney with 34 pounds, 12 ounces and second-place money of $4,000.

A Friday catch of 18 pounds, 8 ounces boosted David Gliebe of Stockton, Calif., into third place. Gliebe, who won the year's first tourney in Florida, finished with 33 pounds, 14 ounces.

Next in line were Frank Colyer of Wise, Va., with 31 pounds, 10 ounces, and Ricky Green of Arkadelphia, Ark., with 31 pounds, 6 ounces. Nine-time BASS winner and first-day leader Roland Martin of Broken Arrow, Okla., wound up eighth with 29 pounds, 5 ounces.

Sutton, Welch Throwing Well

By The Associated Press

Don Sutton pitched seven innings of shutout baseball against the New York Yankees, then was nearly upstaged by rookie Bob Welch.

The Los Angeles Dodgers blanked the New Yorkers 5-0 as Sutton struck out three Yankees and walked one in becoming the first Dodger to work seven innings. He scattered five hits.

Then Welch, the Dodgers' No. 1 selection in the free agent draft last year, finished up, allowing just one hit and striking out three.

In other exhibition games Friday, the St. Louis Cardinals buried the Boston Red Sox 10-4, the Pittsburgh Pirates beat the Detroit Tigers 11-2, the Milwaukee Brewers edged the Oakland A's 6-5 and the Texas Rangers whipped the Kansas City Royals 16-6. The Montreal Expos beat the Houston Astros 10-9, the Chicago White Sox defeated the Toronto Blue Jays 2-1, the San Francisco Giants edged the Seattle Mariners 4-3, the California Angels overpowered the Chicago Cubs 10-5 and the San Diego Padres shut out the Cleveland Indians 2-0.

In night games, the Atlanta Braves squeezed by the New York Mets 3-2 and the Baltimore Orioles beat the Cincinnati Reds 3-2.

The Pittsburgh Pirates pummeled Dave Rozema and demolished Detroit's seven-game winning streak as Willie Stargell and Bill Robinson each homered.

St. Louis had seven hits, including Ken Reitz two-run double, in a 5-run first-inning burst. The Cardinals went on to pound former teammate Rick Wise, Boston's starter.

Larry Hisle singled in two runs and doubled in the winning run in the 2-run fourth inning as the Brewers broke a four-game losing streak and beat the A's.

The Rangers exploded for 19 hits and a third consecutive spring triumph over the Royals as Toby Harrah, Bobby Thompson and John Lowenstein each knocked in four runs.

Bob Reece's single off Houston's Tom Dixon with one out in the bottom of the ninth chased home the game-winner for Montreal. Toronto's Ray Howell, who singled with two out in the ninth and tried to score the tying run from first on Doug Ault's bloop double, was thrown out at the plate by right fielder Bobby Molinero to preserve the Chicago White Sox victory margin.

Johnnie LeMaster's 11th-inning triple scored the winning run as the Giants improved their exhibition record to 10-5 against the Mariners' 8-8. Lyman Bostock, Bobby Grich, Joe Rudi, Don Baylor and Tony Solaita each had two hits as the California Angels battered three Chicago Cub pitchers for 16 hits.

San Diego tallied both its runs in the sixth — one on a throwing error by Cleveland rookie second baseman Dave Oliver, the other on a triple by Oscar Gamble — to blank the Indians.

THANKS TO DISCOVERIES in fish management, fishermen in this part of the country can catch striped bass in fresh water.

Striped bass are not freshwater fish. They are anadramous, which means they live most of their adult lives in salt or brackish water and ascend freshwater rivers to spawn in the spring. But like some other anadramous species, stripers can survive, an even sometimes reproduce, entirely in fresh water. It is this characteristic which makes them ideal for southern impoundments.

Striped bass stocking all began in South Carolina in the 1940's with the construction of the Santee-Cooper Reservoirs for power production. The striped bass population increased dramatically in some of the lakes and scientists discovered the nearby rivers had the right type of current to allow successful spawning.

Striped bass are "free spawners." The female lays her eggs, which are immediately fertilized by one or more males. The eggs, which are nearly bouyant, must continually drift in the current until hatching, or they will sink to the bottom and die. Few impoundments have tributaries with the critical conditions necessary for successful striper spawning.

However, it was soon learned that excellent fisheries could be established in reservoirs, even if the fish don't reproduce. It took several years for the details to be worked out, primarily at the Moncks Corner Hatchery near Santee-Cooper and the Weldon Hatchery on the Roanoke River in North Carolina.

STRIPED BASS HAVE characteristics which make them ideal for stocking in many southern impoundments. They feed primarily on fish which are often excessive in reservoirs and do not feed on game fishes. Therefore a healthy striped bass population can often help improve gamefish populations.

The life expectancy of a striper is about 10 years. During its lifespan, it may grow to over 30 pounds. Stripers hit lures and bait with enthusiasm, fight with strength and determination, are more easily caught than the largemouth bass, and have excellent flavor and nutritional qualities.

At least seven southern states are now attempting to stock striper populations in reservoirs. North Carolina began stocking operations back in the 1950's. Lakes in the Yadkin River and Catawba River chains all have some stripers, but Lake Norman, near Charlotte, is considered the best.

Even better than Lake Norman is Kerr Lake in the north-central part of the state. From 1953 to 1955, three million striped bass were stocked in Kerr, and in 1957, striper yearlings were discovered in the lake, a sure sign that adults were spawning in one or more of the reservoir's tributaries. Further investigation showed that the major spawning river was the Dan, in Virginia.

There appears to be no end to the versatility and usefulness of the striped bass as a manageable sport fish. Biologists have now succeeded in crossing stripers with white bass, producing a fast-growing, hard-fighting hybrid that has been successfully established in several southern reservoirs.

Earns Fishing Citation

J. P. Davenport Jr. of Rt. 5 earned a citation in the Metropolitan South Florida Fishing Tournament when he caught a 34-pound cobia in the unlimited division. Davenport was fishing out of Key West.

BRADENTON, Fla. (AP) — Willie Stargell, one of baseball's most skilled batsmen, says the challenge of hitting is a matter of geometry.

"They give you a round bat and they throw you a round ball," says the Pittsburgh Pirate captain.

"And they tell you to hit it square."

MIAMI (AP) — Arguing that a new stadium would cost less, Miami Dolphins owner Joe Robbie has urged Miami and Dade County officials to scrap plans for a $22 million renovation of the Orange Bowl.

Robbie submitted his own proposal for a $23 million stadium which would seat 70,000. He said his plan was more logical than a consultant's recommendation that the aging Orange Bowl be repaired and remodeled.

TAIPEI (AP) — Tu Ah-Yue, winner of the 1978 Taiwan Ladies Open golf tournament, left for Japan today to compete in the Chubu Ladies Open Golf Tournament in Nagoya, central Japan.

Tu was invited to take part in the Chubu game opening Wednesday by the Japan Ladies Professional Golfers Association.

She retained her Taiwan Open championship by finishing with a three-day total of 73-72-77—222.

EDMONTON, Alberta (AP) — Yugoslavia outscored its opponents by a total of 11 goals over two games Friday to move into a tie for first place in the Can-Am-Mex water polo series.

Cuba led the event after a pair of opening-day victories Thursday but managed only a 5-5 tie with the United States to finish two days of action with five points.

Yugoslavia, which picked up a tie in its only game Thusday, crushed Canada 9-2 and outscored the United States 10-6 Friday to tie Cuba in the standings.

One point back in third place was Hungary, which won both of its starts. Hungary was the winner in the Mexico City and Long Beach, Calif., events in the three-tournament series.

West Germany and the United States are tied for fourth place with three points each while both Mexico and Canada are winless after three starts.

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — The horse races resumed in Beirut today for the first time since Israel's invasion of south Lebanon 10 days ago.

The track committee declared the profits of 13 races today and Sunday would be donated to help relieve the plight of an estimated 200,000 fleeing refugees from the south.

Beirut's fans are said to be the heaviest horse race betters in the Middle East.

MY POP'S TOUGHER

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Middle linebacker Bill Bergey of the Philadelphia Eagles is rated one of the toughest defensive players in the National Football League. At a sports banquet he met Conrad Dobler, offensive guard of the St. Louis Cardinals, ranked as one of the toughest offensive men in the NFL.

Fewer Americans In India; Feeling Of Unwanted

By JOHN NEEDHAM

NEW DELHI, India (UPI) — The last U.S. businessman stationed in the Madras region of southern India to represent a sizeable American company left in February.

Union Carbide Corp., for years headed by an American in India, now has an Indian managing director.

The Ford Foundation, which a decade ago had around 100 Americans and two private airplanes, now has 10 Americans and no aircraft of its own.

The Peace Corps once had about 1,500 volunteers in India, one of them President Carter's mother. Today there are none. Nor are there U.S. Agency for International Development personnel, though once there were hundreds. The building that housed the AID workers is now a hotel, probably the only one in India with a bowling alley.

The AID and Peace Corps workers have been gone for years, withdrawn shortly before, during or immediately after India's 1971 war with Pakistan, when the Nixon Administration "tilted" toward Pakistan and incurred the wrath of former Prime Minister Indira Gandhi and millions of other Indians.

These days it has been the American businessemen who are leaving, yielding to the government's quest for "Indianization," or having Indians run companies in India.

In the 1960's, there were thousands of Americans working in India, stationed in the country for a year or two or three. Today they number in the hundreds.

Fifteen years ago, there were about 250 American businessmen in India, about 150 in Bombay alone. Now there are 40 or fewer, most of them in Bombay, the business center. The overall number is expected to decrease.

Even President Carter commented on the small number during his Jan. 2 address to members of the Indian Parliament in New Delhi.

"It is sobering, for instance, that in a nation of so many hundreds of millions of people, only a few American businessmen are involved on a daily basis in the economic and commercial life of your nation," Carter said.

Scores of American businessmen interviewed during the past two years have told much the same tale: they don't want to be in India if the government doesn't want them and the delays, red tape and harsh laws indicate the government doesn't.

"This country desperately needs capital," said one American who is still here and, because most of his work is with the government, requested his name not be used.

"But they won't take it in foreign investment. They want aid, a gift. If you do manage to invest here, they act like they're doing you a favor just by letting you in."

Prime Minister Morarji Desai and other Indians who grew up when India was a colony of Britain and the subject of what they see as colonial exploitation have a different view.

"We do not want charity," Desai told representatives of 55 multinational companies last month after discussions between the businessmen and government officials arranged by Business International.

"We only want to see that conditions are reasonable so that in the future no one can unreasonably take away the companies based on foreign investment."

Desai's year-old government has been strictly enforcing the 1973 Foreign Exchange Regulation Act, which aims at having Indians own and run as much of the country's business as possible.

Foreign firms can have majority ownership only if most or all of their product is exported or if they use technology needed by India and unavailable locally.

A report prepared for the government-level, Indo-U.S. Joint Business Commission by Americans earlier this year compared conditions for investment by U.S. firms in India, Brazil, Indonesia, Mexico and South Korea.

It found India worst in the fields of technical assistance agreements, likelihood of labor unrest and number of sectors in which investment is curtailed or restricted.

U.S. investment in India has never been high and virtually none of the big multinationals operating here makes as much as one percent of its worldwide profit from its activities in India.

Coca-Cola and IBM have withdrawn from India, rather than comply with sections of the Foreign Exchange Regulation act which would force Coke to yield its branch here.

The action against Coke and IBM has made most U.S. companies even more unwilling to invest in India and send Americans here to live, according to American officials and businessmen still here.

For Americans who are still in India, life can be difficult.

"I would say we have probably a love-hate thing with India," said Stephen Johnson, a 30-year-old New Yorker who is assistant manager of American Express International Banking Corp's. New Delhi branch.

"The phones don't work well. The power supply is bad. The water runs out. It's little inconveniences. At first you have trouble bearing with it. As time goes by, it's part of daily life and it doesn't bother you that much."

"On the good side, life here can be basically very cheap. Many things are cheap which would be expensive back in the States: having tennis court time, horseback riding, flying lessons."

"It takes you a little while getting used to it. If you're used to supermarkets, quality goods, they're just not here. But knowing it's not a permanent thing, you settle for secondrate things and get along."

India forbids or heavily taxes imported goods and locally made substitutes are often shoddy. Rents can range from the equivalent of $200 to $800 a month and an Indian-made car, modeled on the 1952 Morris, costs $4,000.

For the 220 American diplomats, communications technicians, secretaries, information officers and schoolteachers who make up the U.S. "official family," and for their 330 dependents, India can be better.

Diplomats receive a 20 percent bonus because the health hazards supposedly make India a "hardship post." Those on a three-year tour get a free flight home for themselves and family once and a free flight to Hong Kong, or an equivalent distance, for the whole family once.

They live rent-free in houses with wall-to-wall carpeting, furniture sometimes made to order and air conditioning. Diplomats are allowed to run their air conditioners even when the government orders everyone else to turn them off, which last year occurred during daylight hours of 100-degree-plus heat for days on end.

The diplomats also have access to a commissary, with lowpriced liquor, wine and cigarettes and high-priced American potato chips, toilet paper, beef (extremely rare in Hindu India) and Coca-Cola, unavailable items in the local markets.

The American Club is available free for U.S. employees, for a nominal fee to other U.S. citizens, and on a Sunday a slice of suburban America appears in New Delhi with Americans lying by the swimming pool, sipping Cokes and watching a softball game.

Without the diplomat's privileges, life is tougher, but often rewarding.

"I like it here very much during the winter months," said Johnson of American Express. "Other months it can be hell."

"You can be quite comfortable here. Having the servants can be a God-send, but it can be hectic, also, they come to you with all their problems and it's more like running a personnel office sometimes."

There are few jobs available for wives, little non-Indian cultural life and the danger of boredom, especially during the three months of baking heat and three months of monsoon rains.

One thing an American doesn't find, by and large, is any personal danger from muggers or robbers or any antiAmericanism directed at him or her individually, no matter how many members of Parliament denounce multinationals, the presence of U.S. warships in the Indian Ocean or "U.S. imperialism."

John Bissell is a Connecticut native who has lived in India for 20 years, the first two as a consultant for the Ford Foundation, now running a firm called Fabinida that exports textiles, rugs, table linen and the like to high-quality stores in the United States and Britain.

Bissell remembers an overwhelming "naivete for foreigners and Indians both," when he arrived in 1958 as a consultant.

"We'd come out here saying, 'I'll show 'em how to do it. We'll do it the American way. We'll get some capital imported, a few technological breakthroughs and we'll solve the whole thing.' It sounds ridiculous, doesn't it?"

"The really bad period (for Americans) was in the fall of 1971," recalled Bissell, who is married to an Indian and has two children. "It was about the time of the Bangladesh war," with the U.S. "tilt" toward Pakistan.

"I went into a crowded area. I did it deliberately to test the reaction. It was a cricket game or something. I remember being snubbed by someone selling soft drinks. I remember it because it never happened before or since."

An American spending any amount of time in India tries to concentrate on the good things, marvelous flowers and greenery, the wildlife, birds, friends, an exotic land and a different culture.

They normally develop a liking for Indian food, but can still miss the variety of cuisine available in Western Europe, or Bangkok, Hong Kong or Singapore.

"We're almost continually ill here — dysentery, a cold. I have asthma from the dust and all the smoke in the air from the cow dung fires" which burn year-around for cooking, Johnson said.

"But I'm not totally negative about India. When we leave here, I think we'll look back and say it wasn't that bad. I'd like to come back some day after a few years and travel around the country.

U.S. Education Commissioner Dislikes Obfuscation

By MIKE FEINSILBER

WASHINGTON (UPI) — At the end of the day, Ernest Boyer sits at his desk and tries to make a decision about a pile of letters awaiting his signature.

Shall he swallow his distaste and sign them?

Or shall he scrawl on them in red ink and send them back to the aides who drafted them?

He knows rejecting a letter will waste the efforts of the half-dozen people involved in writing it.

The recipient will have to wait another week for a reply.

The process will cost the government money.

So, more often than not, the U.S. commissioner of education signs letters that are clumsy, inarticulate, imprecise, choking with jargon.

What they say may be correct, he says, but the way they say it "breaks your heart."

Boyer takes language seriously. He hates seeing it abused.

And that attitude helps shape him, the way he runs the Office of Education and perhaps the way his agency impacts — ah, there's one of those bureaucratic words he hates — the public schools of this country.

Boyer, 49, came to Washington in April from the post of chancellor of the world's largest university system — the State University of New York, with more than a third of a million students.

He's been in education all his life — even though a high school counselor "advised that I shouldn't plan for college, I wasn't diligent enough." At the time, Boyer was also working in his father's office supply business in Dayton, Ohio.

When he wants insights into what's going on in education today, Boyer needs only look across the supper table.

His three oldest children are out of college and Boyer is twice a grandfather, but Stephen, 13, his youngest, is an eighth grader in a junior high school in McLean, Va.

And his wife, Kay, an obstetrical nurse, is a student too. She has been studying midwifery at Georgetown University and delivering babies at D.C. General Hospital.

Boyer, a quiet, thoughtful Quaker, is becoming famous among the 3,000 people in the Office of Education for the intensity of his dislike for obfuscation.

He called senior staff members in for a lecture about writing clearly and is thinking about having classes conducted within the agency.

He tries ridicule, too.

In a speech, he complained of feeling his agency was in a war zone: "We have target groups, rifle-shot policies, thrusts, impacts and zeroings."

He tells about a staffer who brought him a statement drafted for publication.

"I don't understand what you're saying," the commissioner complained. "What is it you have in mind? You're just going to have to make it clear and simple."

"You're right," the aide replied, helpfully. "We'll have to laymanize it!"

Boyer thinks jargon is purposely used — in government, law, medicine, academia — to produce fuzziness.

"I think it is to make sure you haven't said it so clearly that people might pin you down later," he says.

"Most of the letters I sign can be cut by half or two-thirds. I read paragraph after paragraph and say to myself, 'When am I going to get to the driving sentence?'"

As head of New York state's university system in the angry 1960s, Boyer "was held captive more often than I'll ever wish to recall" and he remembers how students refused to express themselves in anything but a series of shouts, obscenities and "you know's."

They felt clarity was part of the system they were fighting, he says. "It was the Age of Aquarius; you felt, you didn't think."

But, he is convinced, that "era of incoherence" was a fad that is passing.

Boyer's chief job is doling out about $11 billion a year to school systems. But he is intent on propagandizing for his ideas about the way schools teach children to use language.

"Direct, clear, forceful expression is a reflection of clear and uncluttered thinking," he tells educators.

"Language is what makes us a unique species and all students should be required to master the written and spoken word."

He worries that children watching 1,500 hours of television a year will become "sponges soaking up messages" and lose the capacity to express themselves.

He also believes in a year-or-so break in a youngster's schooling, which now can stretch from pre-kindergarten at age 3 to post-graduate work at age 25.

"It's not healthy intellectually, socially, maybe even physically, to have a period of endless incubation," he says.

He advocates a "step out" (as opposed to drop out) period, during or after high school, when youngsters would "engage in another kind of life and test some of the toughness that comes once you get away from the hothouse."

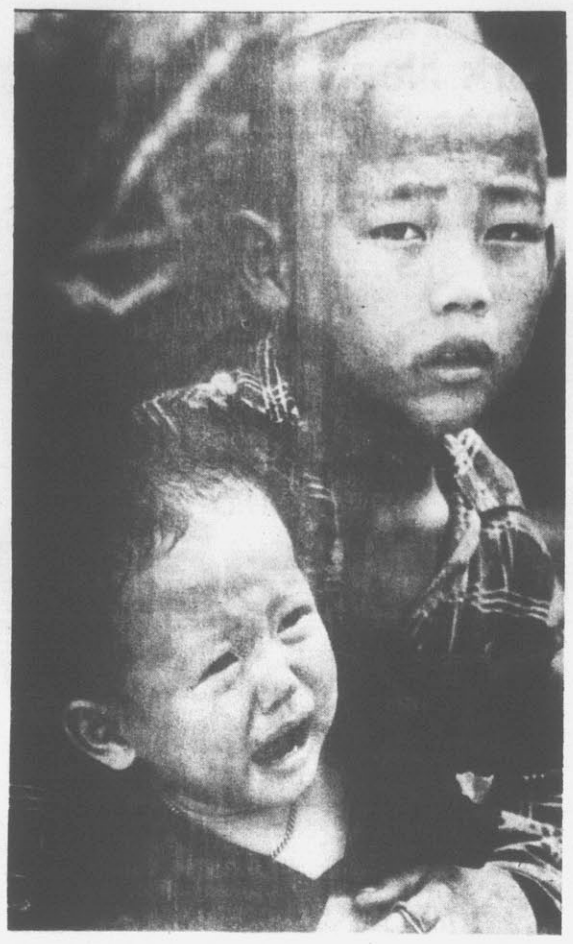

"You should talk to Stephen: he thinks he's trapped forever! He's in a school with 1,000 other 13-year-olds. That would be about as discouraging as forcing me to spend all my life with 49-year-olds."

Boyer believes in the other side of the coin, too: places where adults can drop-in easily to continue their education.

In New York state, he started Empire State College, a school for adults with classes taught in downtown quarters. One of the first students was his wife.

Bicycle Problem

TOKYO (AP) — So many Japanese are riding bicycles to railway stations these days — and leaving them there while they take the train to work — that a serious, sometimes dangerous, problem has been created.

A recent survey by the Ministry of Construction showed that more than 2,000 railway stations across the country were overcrowded with parked bicycles. Most of the problem sites were in suburban areas of major cities.

At Sengendai, Saitama prefecture in northern Japan, sidewalks were so cluttered with bikes at rail facilities that people had to walk in the streets, risking being hit by cars, the survey said. About 5,000 bicycles were parked there illegally every day, it added.

The number of bicycles owned in Japan has soared from around 10 million just after World War II to 45.5 million today, one for every 2.6 persons in the country and 1.3 per household. Officials said Japan, about the size of Montana, now lagged behind only the United States in terms of numbers of bike users.

In 1973 the annual production of bicycles in Japan increased to 9.4 million.

Threat To Chestnuts

By CHARLES S. TAYLOR

ATLANTA (UPI) — A new species of wasp found in central Georgia poses a major threat to Chinese chestnut trees in the United States and to efforts now under way to bring back the American chestnut.

Dr. Jerry Payne, an entomologist at the USDA's Southeast Fruit and Tree Nut Laboratory in Byron, Ga., said chestnut gall wasps have been identified in four middle Georgia counties and appear to be spreading toward the northeast in the direction of the prevailing winds at a rate of about 15 miles per year.

The Georgia Department of Agriculture and the USDA recently launched a survey to determine the extent of infestation in Georgia.

Payne said this was the first occurrence of chestnut gall wasps ever recorded in the United States.

According to Payne the first wasps may have been brought to this country in 1974 in a piece of chestnut tree graft wood from Japan, where the wasp was first reported in 1941, or from Korea, where it was detected in 1961.

From the initial infestation in the Fort Valley-Byron, Ga., area, the wasps have spread into Peach County and to the neighboring counties of Houston, Bibb and Crawford.

Payne said the gall wasps lay eggs in the vegetative buds of chestnut trees, causing a "gall" or small brown knob to form on the end of the twig. The gall disrupts growth and reduces fruiting. Infested trees lose their vigor and often die.

The Chinese chestnut is the principal type of chestnut tree grown in the United States since a great blight caused by a fungus killed all the American chestnuts in the 1930s.

"It so happens that this gall wasp attacks the American chestnut also," said Payne.

This ironic turn of fate, according to Payne, could seriously hamper efforts to develop and re-introduce an American chestnut tree resistant to the blight.

Du Pont Kinston Observing 25th Anniversary

CONSTRUCTION UNDERWAY...Work on the Kinston "Dacron" plant had been underway roughly one year when this photograph was made on March 5, 1952. Original construction cost was $40,000,000. (Du Pont Photo)

By Alex Warren
Special To The Reflector

Two and a half years after the Du Pont Co. announced it was going to build a plant near Kinston, a banner headline in the "Kinston Daily Free Press" proclaimed the start-up of the first "Dacron" polyester fiber production unit.

"DACRON" PRODUCTION STARTS MONDAY was the headline above a story that described March 23, 1953, as "the day long awaited." Extensive coverage of the event described the planning, construction and start-up of a $40,000,000 facility that would produce "this popular competitor of wool."

This month, 25 years later, employees of the local Du Pont Plant are observing a quarter of a century of operation. The plant that was built on a 625-acre tract of farm land belonging to Henry W. B. Canady has quadrupled in size and produces 28 times as much "Dacron" polyester fiber as it did in the beginning.

It wasn't a simple matter selecting Kinston as the site for Du Pont's new plant. A complicated "pinball scoreboard" established by the company was used to compare 87 different sites.

Kinston scored 93 out of a possible 100 points in a system that weighed various factors such as proximity to customers and ease of obtaining raw materials. Other things considered included transportation, labor supply, water, highway access, climate, power and utilities. Schools, recreation facilities, churches, and hospitals also had a part in the final decision.

The announcement was made in September 1950 that Du Pont had selected Kinston as the site of their Number Four nylon plant. Shortly afterward, the company revealed that a plant to produce a new fiber, "Dacron" polyester, would be built at Kinston.

In February 1951, W. E. "Bill" Gladding, then personnel manager of the company's Nylon Division, was named plant manager. The members of Gladding's management team were Emil O. Johnson, assistant manager; Dr. Russ W. Peterson, technical superintendent; W. A. "Bill" Wright, accounting superintendent; W. R. "Bill" Reading, works engineer; John G. Page, personnel superintendent; J. G. "Jim" Elliott, service superintendent; John W. Lucas, manufacturing superintendent; Doug R. Duncan, chief supervisor-manufacturing; E. E. "Em" Eubank, plant buyer; W. F. "Bill" Tripp Jr., chief supervisor-manufacturing; R. P. "Dick" Heller, methods and standards supervisor; James A. Barbee, personnel supervisor; C. R. "Chuck" Kline, area supervisor-polymer and spinning; and Dr. Pres M. Dunning, medical supervisor.

Construction began on April 12, 1951 under the direction of field project manager, C. S. "Butch" Anderson.

In March 1953, there were 852 employees on the plant roll. These people were hired from a group of more than 10,000 who submitted job applications. Many of the plant's first employees worked for Du Pont construction before transferring to the manufacturing organization.

In 1953, the presence of the Kinston Du Pont plant made a tremendous impact on the surrounding area. It was the first large industry of any kind to settle in the Kinston community; and, during the first five years of operation, the plant's payroll pumped over $52 million into the local economy.

Today, a quarter of a century later, Du Pont's Kinston plant still has a significant impact. Its 3,400 employees take home an annual payroll exceeding $51 million and the plant purchases nearly $30 million a year in goods and services from firms in North Carolina.

Du Pont employees come from 11 counties; the majority living in Lenoir (1,420), and Pitt (1,054). They are active in the community with many of them holding elected and appointed positions in local government. They support the United Way and contributed $148,000 to four counties last year (Lenoir, Pitt, Craven, and Wayne). Du Pont also sponsors three Red Cross Bloodmobile visits a year and is increasing it to four in 1979.

Howard A. Kress is the plant's current manager. He participated in the development of "Dacron" polyester fiber while at Seaford, Del. shortly after he joined the company. Kress transferred to the Kinston plant in 1952 and held several supervisory positions in manufacturing until 1957. He returned to Kinston to fill the post of plant manager in September of 1977.

Today, polyester fiber is the most widely used apparel fiber in the United States, and "Dacron" is the most widely used polyester. In fact, Du Pont makes more than 70 different "Dacron" items for apparel, home furnishings and industrial applications.

"What began here 25 years ago is something we at Du Pont are very proud of," said assistant plant manager, Jim Moore. "And we think Kinston and all of Eastern North Carolina should share that pride because a lot of people in this area have contributed to our success."

Another Good Thai Opium Year

By ALAN DAWSON

BANGKOK, Thailand (UPI) — For the third consecutive year, the opium crop is a good one. Heroin supplies for the junkies of America, Asia, and Europe are assured.

The farmers of the misnamed Golden Triangle in Thailand and Burma have harvested another several hundred tons of opium, and it has begun its journey into the arms of addicts.

This year's opium harvest, allowing generously for waste, seizures and local consumption, will provide enough heroin to supply 1.5 million addicts for a full year.

The Burma-Thailand connection still grows, processes and funnels enough heroin to supply all addicts in Asia and Europe and an increasing number in the United States.

U.S. Drug Enforcement Agency Administrator Peter Bensinger said last month 13 percent of heroin reaching the United States now comes from the Golden Triangle. That is double the 1976 figure.

The Golden Triangle is roughly 75,000 square miles of jungles and mostly uncontrolled by the central governments in Bangkok and Rangoon.

Gangsters, refugees, communists, minority groups and hill tribesmen rule there, mainly with the gun.

The almost incomprehensible mishmash of rival factions has made it impossible to stamp out opium production in the largely trackless jungles of the triangle. "Hell," said one narcotics agent in Bangkok, "we can't dent it, let alone stop it."

The beautiful red and white flowers of the opium plant thrive in the highlands of the Golden Triangle, and the farmers whose women cultivate and harvest the crops have generations of experience at it.

Most of them have never heard of heroin, let alone the cities of New York or others where their opium ruins lives and kills. Many drug experts are sorry for the farmers who depend on the poppies to earn a living. It is because of this sympathy that there has been no ruthless eradication of the opium crops.

Among others, Thai King Bhumibol and the United Nations have small programs to teach hill tribesmen to grow substitute crops such as coffee, vegetables or flowers. In sum, these programs aim at cutting the opium harvest by 10 percent in 10 years.

But this goal is laughable to narcotics agents, whose own suppression campaigns on heroin smuggling admittedly seize only 10 percent in a good year.

There has been little praise for a recent Burmese program to eradicate the poppy, either. According to official figures by the government of Burma, 8,300 acres — 13 square miles — of poppies were destroyed during this season. "That might be 1 percent of the acreage, but I don't think it's that much," said an agent.

In recent months, there has been growing disillusion among both the Thai narcotics agents and the more than 30 foreign agents in Bangkok. This is despite a pledge by new Thai prime minister, Gen. Kriangsak Chomanan to fully back the antinarcotics battle.

Kriangsak's civilian predecessor, Tanin Kraivixien, took a personal interest in the narcotics problem. He was overthrown last year, after 12 months in office during which he ordered the executions without trial of at least three narcotics dealers.

"Kriangsak doesn't have the time to deal with drugs the way Tanin did on a daily basis," said a Thai narcotics officer. "He also is interior minister and supreme commander of the armed forces."

So agents sometimes feel — rightly or wrongly — they are not receiving the full support of the government. While agents will not name them, they suspect some senior Thai officials are still involved in narcotics trafficking and helping cover up and protect the businessmen who live off heroin.

These Mafia-like businessmen — Chinese in Bangkok — are known to agents, or at least some are. But as in other parts of the world, knowing who the crooks are and catching them are two different things.

Thai law in particular demands catching traffickers in physical possession of the drugs. "And these guys never, never get close to drugs," said one American field agent. "They're insulated, like the Mafia."

Insulated in a different way are the middlemen, who sit in fortresses on the edge of the Golden Trangle, guarded by private armies.

They include a former Chinese Nationalist Kuomintang general, Lee Wen-Huan, and a self-styled Shan State Army separatist leader from Burma, Chang Chee-foo, also known as Khun Sa.

According to public records these men and others support their armies through sale of opium and heroin, and — in circular logic — use their armies to move and sell the drugs. So far, these men have been untouchable not least because they once had good relations with Thai and American officials when their armies fought the Communists.

"It's complicated. No, it's super-complicated and damned frustrating," said one American anti-narcotics official in Bangkok.

Water Safety Course Set

A water safety instructor course will begin Friday, March 31 from 7-10 p.m. and April 1 from 9-12 a.m. at Memorial Gym on the East Carolina University campus.

The course, to be taught by Stevie Chepko, will continue each Friday night and Saturday morning through May 6, with the exception of April 7 and 8.

Students must have current advanced lifesaving cards to enroll in the course, which will be the only session taught prior to the summer. Persons planning to teach water safety during the summer should take the course, it was noted.

Students should be prepared to swim the first class session.

Persons needing further information should contact the Red Cross office here at 752-4222.

Gave Reports On Research

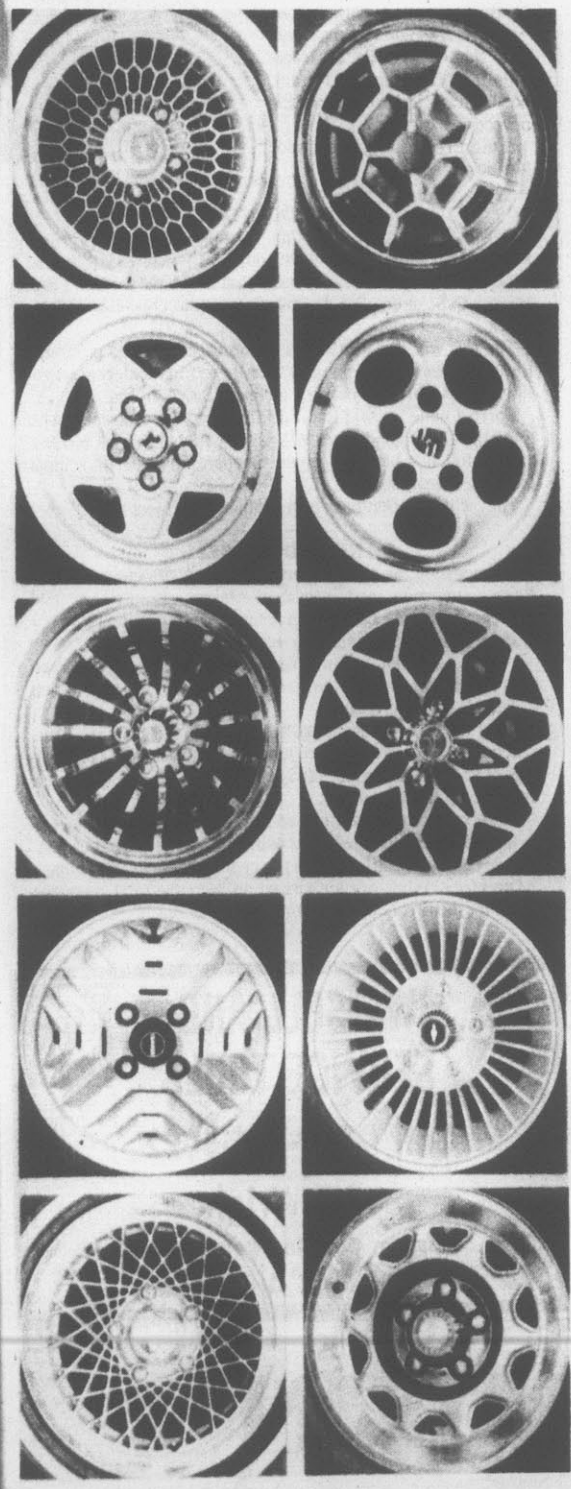

ECU News Bureau

E.E. (Ed Howell of Greenville and Alger Salt of Cove City, graduate students in the East Carolina University Department of Chemistry, reported on their research at a departmental seminar recently.

Howell's topic was "Synthesis and Application of Crown Ethers," and Salt spoke on "Chemistry of Cu-Cr-As Wood Preservatives."

Their research projects were undertaken in partial fulfillment of the requirements for the master's degree in chemistry at ECU.

Parenthood for a single parent in a one-child family can be "very special" and rewarding experience, but the intense parent-child relationship presents problems, says East Carolina University sociologist David Knox.

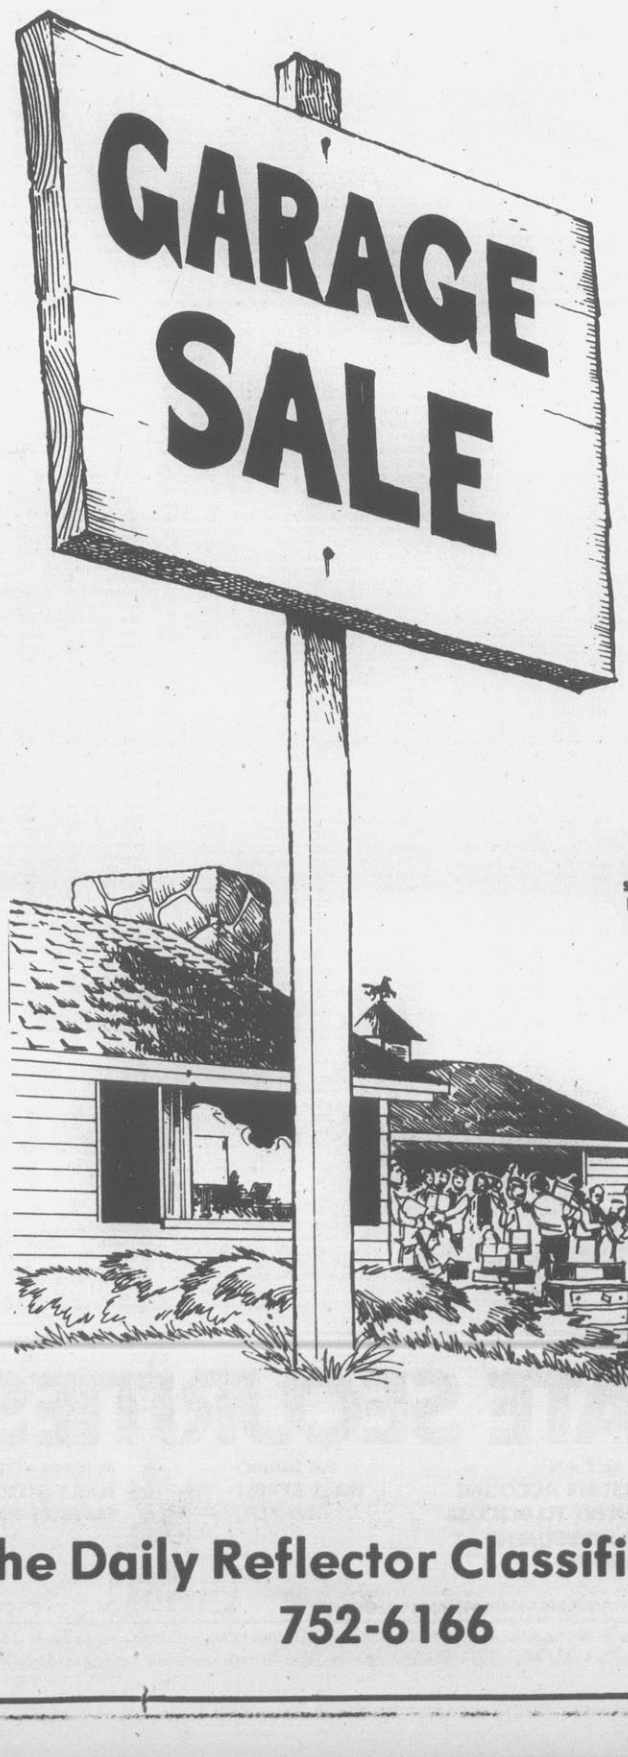

Dr. Knox and social scientist Sharryl Hawke are co-authors of an article, "One Parent . . . One Child," which appears in the current issue of "The Single Parent," the journal of Parents Without Partners.

The authors note at the beginning that one-child parents comprise about 20 percent of the nation's single parents, parents who are widowed, divorced or never married.

The Knox-Hawke article is based on interviews they conducted while engaged in research for their recent book "One Child by Choice" (Prentice-Hall, Inc.).

To Open Mountain

GRANDFATHER MOUNTAIN — The mile-high Grandfather Mountain peak will open for the 1978 season on Saturday, April 1. The popular North Carolina travel spot will be open daily from 8 a.m. to 7 p.m. for an admission price of 75 cents per person.

HOW TO DO A LITTLE BUSINESS ON YOUR OWN...

Holding a garage sale is a fun way to do a little business on your own . . . but it takes a bit of planning.

Like you'll want to decide what to sell and how much to charge for each item . . . and then you'll need price tags so other people will know what you're charging.

And you'll have to be able to make change for all your customers . . . so that means you should have lots of one dollar bills and an assortment of coins.

Then you'll want to advertise your sale to attract that crowd. You can do it with a sign or signs in your neighborhood . . . but you'll want a bigger crowd than that . . . so you'll run an ad in Classified which tells the time and place of your sale to a host of potential buyers.

One more thing . . . get up early the day of your sale! When people read about a Garage Sale in Classified, they shop early.

Have fun with your little business adventure!

Mason-Fentress Vows Solemnized On Saturday

MESIC — The marriage of Mary Elizabeth Fentress and Kenneth Allen Mason, both of Greenville, was solemnized here Saturday in the Bay Creek Christian Church.

The double ring ceremony was performed at 4:00 p.m. by the Rev. David Lupton and Dan Ensley, nephew of the bridegroom. A program of organ music was presented by Mrs. Ormell Purser. Michael Thompson of Greenville was classical guitarist.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Dewey Jones of Bayboro, and the late Mr. Carroll Edward Fentress. Mr. and Mrs. Jack Mason of Oriental are parents of the bridegroom.

Given in marriage by her parents and escorted by Mr. Jones, the bride wore a formal gown of ivory crepe knit over peau de soie. The gown was fashioned with a raised waist, high neckline and fitted sleeves. The bodice featured an English net yoke and a wide ruffle of Brussels lace. A wide ruffle of Brussels lace encircled the hem and the skirt was styled with accordian pleats that fell into a chapel length train.

Her silk illusion full length veil was attached to a Juliet cap embroidered with pearls and Brussels lace. She carried a bouquet of white roses, baby's breath and a white cymbidium orchid.

The honor attendant was Mrs. Rich Bailey of New Bern. Her basket weave lawn gown of Carolina blue featured an empire waist with a full sash tied in back and angel sleeves of matching lace. She carried long-stemmed blue and white carnations with blue and white ribbon streamers. Her hairpiece was a circlet of white baby's breath.

Bridesmaids included Betty Sue Sadler and Bunny Jo White, both of Greenville, Mrs. Michael Whealton of Minnesott Beach, and Mrs. Gary Mayo of Mesic. They were dressed like the honor attendant.

The father of the bridegroom was best man and ushers included William Carroll Fentress of Bayboro, brother of the bride, Jackie Mason, brother of the bridegroom, Raymond Tingle and Aaron Everette, all of Oriental.

After a wedding trip to the west coast of Florida, the couple will reside at Dawsons Creek.

The bride is a graduate of ECU and was employed by the City of Greenville. The bridegroom attended Wake Technical Institute and UNC-CH. He is now with the N. C. Department of Transportation.

Immediately following the ceremony, a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents.

The refreshment table was covered with a floor length cloth of white organza over Carolina blue linen. The centerpiece was of white carnations and roses in a silver bowl and white candles.

Assisting at the reception were Mr. and Mrs. William Andrews of Virginia Beach, Va., Mr. and Mrs. Guyan Ensley of Oriental, Mr. and Mrs. John Alfred Mayo Jr. of New Bern, Mr. and Mrs. Hallett Mayo of Goldsboro, Mr. and Mrs. Haywood White of Bayboro, Mrs. Jackie Mason of Oriental, and Mrs. Frank Alcock of Hobucken. Mrs. Bradford Sneeden of New Bern served champagne.

Mrs. Robert Hancock of Hubert presided at the bride's book.

A rehearsal dinner was held Friday evening at the Upper Room of the Oriental Marina Restaurant honoring the bridal couple, members of the wedding party, families and out-of-town guests.

Hosts and hostesses were Mr. and Mrs. John Mayo Jr. of New Bern, Mr. and Mrs. William G. Andrews of Virginia Beach, Va., and Mr. and Mrs. Hallett W. Mayo of Goldsboro.

Engagement Announced

MISS MARY DALE WHITE. . .is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alexander J. White Jr. of Greenville, who announce her engagement to Joseph Leigh Taylor, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Leigh Taylor of Virginia Beach, Va. The wedding will take place July 22.

Widows Told, 'Share Grief With Children'

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (UPI) — Some suggestions for coping with widowhood, from state Rep. Donald Anderson's 10-page pamphlet:

— Be yourself. It does your children no harm to see you grieving. It is natural and right. A stiff upper lip may even suggest you don't really care.

— Share your grief, thoughts and problems with your children but keep your identity intact. Get back into the mainstream as soon as possible. Go back to work or take refresher classes.

— Stay in daily contact with people. Avoid isolation to combat the gravest problem of all, loneliness.

— Learn how to balance your checkbook; read bank statements; understand stocks, bonds and investments.

— Discuss financial matters frankly with your older children, especially since they will need to understand if you choose to take a new job.

— Avoid the temptation to immediately sell the family home. If possible, wait one year to take time to reason clearly. In time, your present home will become a happy reminder of cherished memories, Anderson says.

When you've used canned beets for a salad, don't throw away the beet juice! Add it to a vegetable soup made with cabbage, carrot, onion, celery and vegetable bouillon cubes.

On The Local Scene

by Rosalie Trotman

St. Patrick's Day — New York City — the annual parade — and people — what an experience.

As we arrived in the city early Friday morning on our tour that left Greenville Thursday night, we saw on many street corners, green carnations for sale.

After checking into our hotel, the New York Sheraton, we walked to Fifth Avenue to view the St. Patrick's Day parade. Many hundreds of police officers dotted the growing number of people. We later heard the reason for such a large concentration of police on the corner where we were standing, there had been two bomb threats. One estimate of the crowd was 120,000 — and the people standing behind me were more than 15 deep.

Prior to the beginning of the parade, several persons mingled with the crowds selling Irish buttons and plastic green hats adorned with silver shamrocks.

One of the outstanding happenings Friday afternoon was attending one of the last performances of the famous Rockettes at Radio City Music Hall. The movie of the afternoon was "Crossed Swords," based on the novel by Mark Twain "The Prince and The Pauper." Other features of the performance were "The Glory of Easter" and "Springtime Carousel."

Dinner at Mamma Leone's that evening was a real event. "Carnevale" is the highlight of the year at Mamma Leone's during the 16 days preceding the beginning of Lent. The restaurant is decorated throughout with colored lights, garlands, masks and other carnival items. The music and dancing never stops as the groups of singers, dancers, clowns and brass bands parade constantly among the tables.

We attended the performance of "The King And I" playing at the Uris Theatre. The show stars Yul Brynner and Constance Towers. The entire production was outstanding.

Conwell Worthington, son of Mrs. Cassie Worthington of near Greenville, is one of the play's stage managers, and he invited a small group backstage following the play.

Saturday was spent seeing sights — Cathedral of St. John, Little Church Around the Corner, Penn Station, Madison Square Garden, Sax and B. Altman's.

We dined and saw a show at the Playboy Club Saturday night.

Just prior to arriving in Greenville Sunday night, Maycie Culbreth, tour director, asked, "Who wants to go again next year?" We were ready to return!

Scotch Eggs: Recipe For Leftovers

NEW YORK (UPI) — Try Scotch eggs as a good way to use up leftovers from Easter. They're not only quick and easy to make, they taste good hot, warm or cold, accompanied by milk or coffee or tea or beer.

In "The Highlander's Cookbook," author Sheila MacNiven Cameron writes that the traditional coating of ground ham, anchovies and spices has been replaced in modern times by sausage meat. The book, now out of print, was published by Ward Ritchie Press of Pasadena, Calif.

Here is Mrs. Cameron's recipe: boil 4 eggs until hard. Peel, cool and dry them. Beat 1 raw egg with a fork only until white and yolk are blended. Divide 1 pound of bulk pork sausage into quarters and pat each into an oval a scant half inch thick. Dip boiled eggs, one at a time, into the beaten egg and mold 1 portion of sausage around each one. Dip again into beaten egg and then roll in dry bread crumbs to coat evenly. Place each egg as prepared on a dry plate large enough to hold all 4 without touching. Refrigerate, uncovered, at least 30 minutes to set coating.

Preheat deep fat to 375 degrees. Add eggs 1 or 2 at a time, depending on the size of your fryer, and reduce temperature gauge to 350 degrees immediately. Too many cold eggs added at once reduces the fat temperature so fast the quality of the coating suffers. Fry the eggs 5 to 7 minutes, turning to brown evenly. Drain on paper towels.

Serve whole or slice horizontally into rounds and serve on toast or melba toast.

Department Members Hear Guest Speaker

The Home Life Department of the Greenville Woman's Club met Tuesday at the club building.

Mrs. Ed Ricks, chairperson, welcomed members and guests by reading the poem "Natures Creed." She introduced Herle Kalleneit, representative of Burroughs Wellcome. He gave a program on the prices of prescription drugs.

Kalleneit said one could save money on prescription drugs by asking a doctor to use the name brand of the drug and the manufacturer. Location plays a part in the price of drugs. He advised not to pay less for drugs unless the doctor advises it. "You may be paying for low quality drugs," Kalleneit said.

A short business session followed. New members' names were added to the books.

Mrs. Harry Hastings, president, suggested that the members let the executive board know each month what plans or changes they would like for the club.

Mrs. Roseveare gave the State Arts Festival report. Blue ribbon winners from the Greenville Woman's Club were Mrs. Ernest Halt for her sonnet "Perceptual Life" and Clyde Owens, Rose High junior, for his jewelery crafts. Owens also won third place for his metal craft with enamel.

Hostesses were Mrs. Mary Lib Czyz, Mrs. Nancy Willard, Mrs. Bruce Strickland, Mrs. Charles Whiteford and Mrs. Clarence Haleny.

LUNCHTIME FARE

Salad — BlueCornbread

BLUE CORNBREAD

A New Yorker who brought back blue cornmeal from New Mexico has asked us how to use it. Here's one good way.

½ pound bacon
1 cup blue cornmeal
1 cup all-purpose flour
3 teaspoons baking powder
1 teaspoon salt
2 eggs
1½ cups milk

Cook the bacon until brown but not crisp; drain and chop coarsely. Stir together the blue cornmeal, flour, baking powder and salt. Beat the eggs and milk enough to blend; add to the cornmeal mixture; stir just until moistened; stir in the bacon. Batter will be very thin. Turn into a well-greased 9-inch square cake pan. Bake in a preheated 425-degree oven until a cake tester inserted in the center comes out clean — 25 minutes. Top will be slightly cracked and bacon will be at the top. Cut in squares and serve at once with butter.

MISS PATRICIA GAIL KEEL. . .is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter R. Keel of Robersonville, who announce her engagement to Ricky Dale Capps, son of Mr. James Prentis Capps Sr. of Coats, and the late Mrs. Irene Capps Dupree. The wedding will take place June 4.

MS. DEBORAH MARLENE MCLAWHORN. . .is the daughter of Mrs. Mary B. Williams of Greenville, and Mr. David J. Haddock of Chocowinity, who announce her engagement to Timothy Harmon Ozment, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jack G. Ozment of Greensboro. The wedding will take place June 11.

DAR Members Plan Benefit Bridge For April

The Major Benjamin May Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, will hold a benefit bridge Thursday evening, April 6, at 7:30 and again on Friday afternoon, April 7, at 2:30.

Play will take place at the DAR Chapter House, Farmville. Refreshments are to be served and entertainment will be provided by Mrs. R. E. Deans Jr., vocalist from Farmville.

Proceeds are to go for the maintenance of the chapter house and its grounds. The Major May Chapter is the only DAR Chapter in Pitt County at the present time and is one of the few chapters in the National Society DAR to own its house. The house is used for DAR functions and is also available for community civic, social and cultural events.

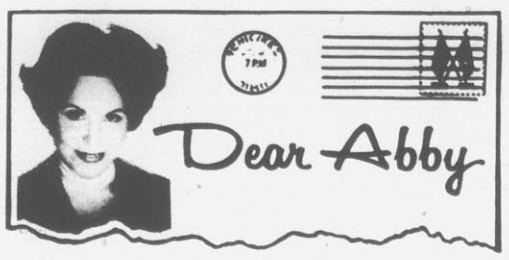

The charge for one day of play is $1.50 per ticket. For further information, call Mrs. John Lautares, 756-0900, or Mrs. Ed J. Carter, 752-4108.

frustration, and believe me, Abby, I did not choose it.
ACCIDENTALLY GAY

DEAR GAY: I believe you, and I know that you speak for many, but you need not continue in a life of loneliness, depression and frustration. Homosexual counseling is available, and I recommend it. You desperately need to accept yourself and respect yourself. And you are as entitled to happiness and a full life as any other human being. God bless.

CONFIDENTIAL TO "HATES TO LOSE": You're normal. Nobody likes to lose. A "good loser" is simply a convincing actor who is trying to be a good sport.

Phone Sales Annoy Potential Customers

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1978 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc

DEAR ABBY: I just got interrupted for about the 200th time by some lazy salesman who insists on calling me to the telephone to give me a sales pitch.

I must answer my phone because it could be an important call, but I get furious when these pests who are trying to sell me something start in.

I have finally figured out a way to beat this system, and you can help by organizing a nationwide program of attack. Tell your readers that when they get these calls (especially long distance), to say hello, and the minute the pitch starts, to lay down the telephone and let the person talk. When they discover that no one is listening and they have to pay for a long distance call, the method will be too expensive to continue. If you just hang up, it saves them time and money, and they go on to their next victim.
BENNETTSVILLE, S.C.

DEAR S.C.: I agree, telephone solicitation is an intrusion, and I have yet to meet anyone who appreciates such calls. More often than not, people are disturbed, inconvenienced and annoyed, which tends to antagonize them and turn them off whatever is being advertised. However, a better method of discouraging such calls is to politely tell the telephone salesman that because you have been inconvenienced, you will NOT buy his product or service.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 19-year-old male college student who has recently accepted the fact that I am a homosexual. Heretofore, I had tried to convince myself that I was bisexual, but I'm realizing that I was wrong.

I never "chose" to be a homosexual. It's just what I happened to be. I was raised with (and found appealing) the idea of marrying, raising a family and living a normal life. Believe me, Abby, I wanted that more than anything. I doubt if "straight" people know of the heartache felt by those homosexuals who truly want but never can achieve this lifestyle.

Why anyone would "choose" to be gay is beyond me. I have been attracted to males ever since fifth grade, and nowhere in my sexual development do I recall "choosing" to like men instead of women. It was just a spontaneous, uncontrollable inclination I had. I wasn't "taught," I wasn't "molested," I've always felt this way. I have two older brothers who had the same parents and same environment, and they are "straight."

In no way do I blame myself for this. I had no control over it. Mine is a life of shame, loneliness, depression and

Kathy Gregg Gives PCAIW Program

The Pitt County Association of Insurance Women held its meeting Wednesday night at the Ramada Inn. A program on poison prevention was presented by Miss Kathy Gregg, ECU senior majoring in health education.

Her program included a film on "Children at Play with Poisons" and pointers on how to poison proof homes.

Reports included one by Miss Hilda Pinkham, education chairman, who announced workshops on Workmen's Compensation and Garage Liability planned for April. Safety Chairman Mrs. Joyce Mills asked that everyone participate in a campaign to locate dangerous intersections and blind corners here. Program Chairman Mrs. Audry Stillwell reported Jean Mason, president of NCAIW, will attend the April meeting for the installation of new officers.

Nominating Committee Chairman Evelyn Stroud presented the following slate of officers for 1978-79: President, Mrs. Stillwell; First Vice President, Sandra Sawyer; Second Vice President, Miss Pinkham; Treasurer, Frances Blanchard; Recording Secretary, Marion Smith; Corresponding Secretary, Mary Stoneham; and Historian, Mrs. Mills.

Mrs. Stillwell, vice president, conducted the meeting and presented awards won at Region II Conference to the respective chairmen in legislation, public relations and safety.

Mrs. Mills reported on the Region II Conference held in Washington, D. C., March 10-12.

Avoid drying very small loads or special items by themselves. Normal size loads dry more efficiently.

On The Young Side

By Sharon Connolly

Tuesday afternoon was an enjoyable time for the Anchor Club and its Crew members. These people spent this time giving an Easter party for the special education class at Aycock Junior High School. Many games were conducted which included Pin the Tail on the Bunny and an Easter egg hunt. Prizes were awarded to the winners of each and all enjoyed refreshments afterwards.

Also pertaining to the spirit of Easter, was an assembly held Thursday afternoon. Dressed as bunnies, several females of the assembly committee escorted the swim team members and the wrestlers to their seats of honor. The members of these two teams were introduced and congratulated for their outstanding accomplishments during state competition.

Next the assembly committee presented an Easter skit to the student body. Caroline Bruton, Chris Dunn, Nancy Garrett, Janet Hodges, Leigh Mesner, Jan Stoughton, and Tom Proctor participated in this event.

Towards the end of the assembly, the concert choir sang two musical selections. The first, "Beautiful Savior", featured soloist Cornelius Satterwhite. The second, "Ezekial Saw de Wheel", featured solos by Robin Edwards, Ron Madison, Cornelius Satterwhite, Henrietta Smith, Montro Streeter, and Audrey Williams.

The newly selected marshals met during the beginning of last week and chose the executive committee. Til Jolly was selected head marshal and will be assisted by Tom Chenier and Carol Lee.

Probation Needed

CARBONDALE, Ill. (UPI) — A criminologist would like to see more emphasis on programs to put more youthful offenders to work on special projects instead of sending them to jail.

Dr. Lawrence A. Bennett, head of the Southern Illinois University-Carbondale Center for the Study of Crime, Delinquency and Corrections, wants to examine the possibility of state subsidies to help counties develop supervised probationary programs for young offenders.

Engagement Announced

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph C. Grogan of Winston-Salem announce the engagement of their daughter, Martha Branon, to Jeffrey Dwight Rawls, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Rawls of Stokes. The wedding will take place June 4.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

I just figured out I've gone through life frying square bacon in a round skillet. When I finally found a square skillet, I was still stuck with four round burner units. It's the story of my life.

In 28 years of keeping house I have never had a "standard" window. Never had a "standard" ironing board. Never had a chair that would fit into a "standard" slipcover.

In trying to match the white paint on my dining room walls, I discovered it was especially mixed by a man who got out of the paint business and is sitting cross-legged in the mountains of the Himalayas trying to find out what is life. He took the formula for my dining room paint with him.

The square butter keeper in my refrigerator does not accommodate my little round tubs of butter. Celery has to be folded to fit into the vegetable crisper.

They were having a wonderful sale on those carpet kits that contain enough carpet to cover a standard 6 by 9 bathroom. My bathroom measures 6-3 3/4 by 9-4 1/2.

I have the kind of sweeper bags that can only be gotten from the wholesale distributors of the sweeper, who are closed at 3 p.m. Tuesday through Friday and closed all day Saturday, Sunday, and Monday.

With regularity, I throw away the top of the coffee unit in my percolator. With regularity, I send off to a company behind the Iron Curtain to have it replaced.

I always have the washer and dryer where the first thing they ask me is the serial number. I own the last models off the assembly line to have the serial number on the bottom.

My open stock dishes were closed out for lack of interest and I don't think I've ever owned a car where anything on it was standard and didn't have to be ordered during a truck strike.

My latest swimming upstream adventure involved a bag of white pebbles for my flower beds. The bag said, "These pebbles will cover an area 8 by 10 feet." My area measured 7 1/4 by 9 3/4. I was in business.

The first bag, when distributed, looked like the trail of Hansel and Gretel. The second bag looked like pigeon droppings. The third bag helped.

Six bags later, the area began to fill in. For the money I could have bought Mt. Rushmore. I was so depressed I put six round cookies into my round mouth. Somethings were meant to be.

Georges Simenon, Now 75, Dislikes Fiction

By ARLETTE BAUDET

LAUSANNE, Switzerland (UPI) — Georges Simenon, settling back in his soft leather armchair and re-lighting his perennial pipe for a 75th birthday interview, said he hates fiction but loves the Muppets.

The author matter-of-factly refers to U.N. statistics, however, showing his own books are outsold only by Lenin and Marx.

"I hate novels," snapped the Belgian creator of Inspector Maigret.

"I only read non-fiction, on psychiatry especially. I don't know if I like my own books because I've never read any of them."

Simenon has written 240 novels, including 82 Maigrets, but not one of them can be found at his Lausanne home.

Nor has he seen any of the 60 movies and numerous television series adapted from his books.

What about the color television set in the corner of his study?

"I never miss the Muppet Show," Simenon confessed. "It's my favorite program."

Sesame Street was his former favorite.

"I turn the television off as soon as a politician starts talking," he said.

"Politicians are nothing but ghosts. They think they have power but its an illusion. Multinationals and big banks are running the show, not politicians."

He watched the first Sadat-Begin meeting, however, because of its "historic significance."

Simenon writes mysteries but does not read them.

"I detest Agatha Christie. She writes about rich people, castles and beautiful scenery. I tried to read one of the books once, but I never made it to the end. It's not literature, it's embroidery."

Edgar Allan Poe and Raymond Chandler are among the few writers Simenon ever enjoyed.

"But the moment I began writing my first Maigret, when I was 26, I stopped reading because I was afraid of imitating other people."

Simenon likes people, and they like him.

On his birthday Feb. 13, he received hundreds of letters and presents from readers from all over the world.

An unknown Russian sculptor carved a long, thin wooden statue of the author smoking a pipe, wearing dark-rimmed glasses and a hat.

But what amused Simenon most was a picture of a Japanese Maigret and his wife. Maigret looked more like a fierce samurai than a quiet detective, he found, and his original homely wife was "a bit too sexy." But Simenon liked it.

The author, whose first book was published when he was 16, has sold over 400 million copies translated into 131 languages.

But he has remained modest and looks upon his work as "semi-literature."

"Maigret's secret," he says, "is his gentleness. Maigret does not behave like an ordinary policeman. He is human. He does his job, but he likes people whatever they may be and tries to understand them without judging them.

"This is the only thing I have in common with Maigret, besides smoking a pipe," the author said.

Simenon smoked his first pipe when he was 13 and has never tried cigars or cigarettes.

He collected 320 pipes during trips around the world and keeps the 15 he still smokes on top of a fireplace in the only room he really uses at his little, renovated farm.

Simenon has been "everywhere," including the United States, where he spent 10 years from 1945 to 1955. He now leads a secluded life, leaving the farm on the outskirts of Lausanne only on daily walks to a nearby lakeside park.

The house is squeezed between high-rise buildings, but he does not mind because no one ever disturbs him. "The Swiss are discreet and polite. This is why I chose to settle here 20 years ago."

"I do everything in this room," he said, referring to his studio. "I write here, sleep here and even give interviews."

The rest of the house, which consists of three rooms upstairs, is empty.

The studio is a bare, square room furnished with leather armchairs, a simple white wardrobe in one corner, a bed in another and sparse bookshelves.

The light-orange painted walls and curtains of a darker shade make it warm and peaceful.

It looks out on a small garden swarming with birds and when the weather is milder Simenon likes to sit under his only tree, a massive 250-year-old pine. "It is the oldest tree in the whole city," he s---

Simenon's Italian companion, Teresa, is always by his side. She attends all interviews and discreetly intervenes when the author forgets dates and events.

Simenon claimed one year ago that he had slept with 10,000 women, but one woman is "quite enough now."

"I have never really counted them," he admits. "But it is a fair estimate considering that I started at 13.

"Some of them were very short affairs. I have not always spent a whole day or a whole evening with all of them."

Women are one of Simenon's favorite subjects and he talks freely.

But when asked about money, the author remains vague, saying, "I have made a lot of money, but I have spent most of it."

He owns a huge $4.4 million mansion in Epalinges above Lausanne and "an important collection" of paintings which includes several Picassos and Vlamincks.

He is not interested in money, but thinks his heirs — four children and a wife he left 15 years ago — are.

"It is obvious that when I die there will be serious disputes over who gets what," he said.

"But I have taken my precautions. My will is very precise and clear. I suspect it will come as a shock, but I want to avoid the kind of tragedy that followed Picasso's death," he said.

One of Picasso's grandsons committed suicide after a family dispute over the painter's fortune.

At 75, Simenon is still a prolific writer, although he stopped writing novels five years ago.

Gov. Ella Grasso: Ringwise, Smiles And Corragio

By ANDREW M. NIBLEY

HARTFORD, Conn. (UPI) — Connecticut Gov. Ella T. Grasso, like a ring-wise boxer, knows when to lean on the ropes, when to slip a punch and when to come out swinging. She has learned the hard way.

Four years ago, Ella Tambussi Grasso, the 58-year-old daughter of an immigrant baker, became the first woman in U.S. history to win a governor's chair without the aid of her husband's name or death.

Although the Phi Beta Kappa graduate of Mount Holyoke College had spent more than 35 years in the political arena, four of those in Congress, her landslide gubernatorial victory in 1974 was not a solo performance. She won her political bout with a pro trainer in her corner — former state and national Democratic chairman, John M. Bailey.

Bailey, the first state chairman to join the John F. Kennedy bandwagon, was the most powerful man ever to wield influence on the Connecticut political scene. He decided Ella Grasso would be governor and then took the political steps to make his decision a reality.

After the male-dominated Watergate scandal, Mrs. Grasso was a welcome challenger, a woman ready to put the state's house in order, a person the party perceived to be a social reformer.

She followed Republican Gov. Thomas J. Meskill who landed a federal judgeship, a nomination fired by Richard M. Nixon from his White House bunker shortly before it fell in the Watergate siege.

In a cruel twist of political fate, Bailey died almost immediately after Mrs. Grasso was sworn in.

Now, she goes it alone and sometimes, the going is rough. The daughter of immigrant parents from Tortuna in Italy's Piedmont region where grapa is king sometimes tells herself, "Corragio!"

Mrs. Grasso concedes Bailey's death forced her to learn how to fight her own battles, to develop her own style.

Her supporters feel she has emerged something of a political Muhammad Ali — a philosopher, a charmer, a moving target. Her critics say she's the same brand of fiscal conservative as Meskill and that she has alienated the big city patronage machines.

This year, five politicians — four Republicans and her Democratic lieutenant governor — are vying to prevent Mrs. Grasso from serving a second term. The gubernatorial challengers say she is a weak leader, who ignores the advice of her party leaders.

Lt. Gov. Robert K. Killian, the same age as Mrs. Grasso, tried to challenge her in 1974 when he campaigned against her as "a politician and not a woman." But Bailey told him to move aside and take the number two spot.

There's no Bailey this year and Killian is going straight for the title.

Killian claims he has had no meaningful contact with the governor for some time. He says the lack of dialogue is an indication of how Mrs. Grasso has turned her back on her advisers and party members.

"There's been an estrangement for the better part of a year," he said. "Her major problem has been inaccessibility. She has a lack of interest in what might be considered contrary views."

Confronted with the criticism, Mrs. Grasso smiled. She smiles a lot.

"I find it hard to believe I'm inaccessible," she said with an air of humility she frequently employs. "I endeavor to meet with every person and group who wants to. Every day, my calendar is full of appointments."

One might think Mrs. Grasso was not responding directly to Killian's bitter criticism. Perhaps. But more signficantly, it was an example of how she has learned to lean on the ropes, waiting for an opening.

Several hours after Killian formally announced his candidacy for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination, Mrs. Grasso was asked by reporters if she had any response to the "harsh charges" Killian had made against her.

"I'm sure they're nowhere near as harsh as some of things I've said to myself," she replied. The governor was slipping the punch, still waiting for an opening.

Mrs. Grasso got one during the Blizzard of '78, a wicked winter storm that belted the Northeast in early February, and she came out swinging.

Mrs. Grasso immediately set up a "Storm Center" at the state armory. While on her way to the command post, her car got stuck in several feet of drifting snow. She jumped out and trudged the rest of the way — a bit of Yankee gumption that delighted several Connecticut editorial writers.

Mrs. Grasso, who endorsed Sen. Henry "Scoop" Jackson, D-Wash., after President Carter had won his first primary, was able to prevail on Carter to send in the Army for the snow job. She took helicopter jaunts to survey the damage, leaving no hand unshook and asking local officials how the state could help.

While Mrs. Grasso was barking orders and winning votes, Killian wandered around the storm center like a stray hunting dog. She made sure he didn't retrieve any game. He had nothing to do, but sniff around.

Grasso's snow campaign was so successful it moved one frustrated Killian supporter to lament that the governor's camp must have seeded the clouds.

The storm provided a subtle exhibition of the political savvy that's become a hallmark of the new Mrs. Grasso. She had learned from the mistakes of her predecessor.

In 1973 the state was in the frozen grip of a week-long ice storm. Meskill went on a ski vacation in Vermont.

Mrs. Grasso has learned to be a politician who talks in confusing circles when confronted by a rival or a reporter. But give her a minute with a constituent and she's all smiles and kind words. You'd almost expect her to walk off into the sunset.

Mrs. Grasso is very careful to cultivate this public image. She loves to look and act like one of the people.

During Hurricane Belle in 1976, Mrs. Grasso traveled to the state police barracks in the shore town of Westbrook to listen to damage reports on the radio. She wore pajamas and a robe.

Years ago, Mrs. Grasso rejected the opinion of a well-intentioned adviser who told her clothes make the woman. She decided to continue dressing as she usually did — in comfortable, loose-fitting slacks.

Her ranking Republican rival, Ron Sarasin, might not agree. He's a congressman with matinee idol looks and is usually sleekly coiffed and impeccably arrayed in the best of threads.

"I truly have a sense of mission. Being in public service is the most important thing in my life," Mrs. Grasso said recently. "I didn't plan to be a politician. I always planned to be in public service."

She said she became enchanted with politics after watching President Franklin D. Roosevelt turn the nation around during the Great Depression.

"I learned very early what government can do for the people," she said. "When I took office, I wanted to have instant results. But I have learned patience and, I think, a positive outlook."

What the governor terms patience, her critics call evasion. What Mrs. Grasso calls a positive outlook, her detractors label arrogance.

Killian recently challenged Mrs. Grasso to a public debate. The governor said she would meet her lieutenant governor face-to-face — after the state Democratic convention in July.

Mrs. Grasso knows if Killian doesn't get 20 percent of the delegate vote at the convention — the magic number for a primary runoff — he won't be around to debate her.

The Republican gubernatorial candidates are also having problems dealing with the incumbent, trying to get their shots at the champ.

Sarasin is considered the early frontrunner, but he is busy trying to re-acquaint himself with Connecticut politics. He's been in Washington for six years, but before that he was an assistant minority leader in the Connecticut House.

Three GOP gubernatorial candidates who do know Connecticut politics are Lewis Rome, state senate majority leader; Gerald Stevens, state house minority leader, and state sen. George Gunther.

But they have found little in the way of burning issues.

They attack Mrs. Grasso for not guaranteeing that all children get an equal education. The state Supreme Court has declared unconstitutional Connecticut's system of funding education, saying more money is spent per pupil in affluent communities than less prosperous ones.

The governor has passed the matter along to a special commission. The panel is scheduled to complete its study — after the election.

They claim she manufactured this year's surplus with some bookkeeping sleight of hand and next year, Connecticut residents will face a tax increase.

But Mrs. Grasso says when she took office there was a $75 million deficit and now there's an $85 million surplus. She figures people will be happy there's extra money around and won't be too upset about how it got there.

So, Mrs. Grasso keeps on ducking and moving and leaning on the ropes, waiting for her chance to throw a haymaker.

"I campaign as a person and I'm always pleased to read the polls," Mrs. Grasso said. "But the only polls I care about are those we have on election day and the only voices I hear are those of the people."

Election day is long way off and the people of Connecticut will hear a lot of gubernatorial voices between now and November. And they will see a lot of the incumbent.

Mrs. Grasso will be working the crowds as she did when Queen Elizabeth of England visited Connecticut on her Bicentennial trip to the United States in 1976. Mrs. Grasso was among the dignitaries greeting the Queen's airplane when it landed at Tweed-New Haven Airport.

About 500 people applauded politely as the Queen walked slowly to a waiting limousine, smiling demurely and waving her white-gloved hand. Mrs. Grasso kept a respectful distance and the crowd was quiet.

Once the Queen's car had driven away, Mrs. Grasso turned, grinned and waved.

The crowd applauded. They cheered. The Queen was the Queen, but Mrs. Grasso was the governor and one of their own — just plain folks from Windsor Locks, Connecticut.

Volunteer Greenville

Volunteers currently needed to serve for Volunteer Greenville have been listed by Nancy Harrington, coordinator of the program. To volunteer or get more information, call 752-4137, ext. 262 or stop by the office at the Joint Library-Recreation Building, 2000 Cedar Lane. Present needs are:

— A volunteer to do clerical work.

— Volunteers to provide musical entertainment for Pitt Therapeutic Recreation Council's Spring Craft Fair on April 29 at the downtown Greenville Mall. Time slots are 30 minutes each between 10 a.m. and 3 p.m.

— Young-at-heart senior citizens to work with children in operating a pediatric play program at the hospital during the summer.

Packages Milk For Long-Term

SUMNER, Wash. (AP) — Curley deTray says he can't understand all the fuss Eastern researchers are going through to keep milk fresh, since he's been doing it successfully for more than three years.

The process is called ultra-pasteurization, or sterilization, in which deTray flash-heats the milk, then flash-cools it, killing virtually all bacteria. He claims milk can be stored weeks or months without spoiling, and the flash-method keeps it from tasting as if it's been cooked.

Pasteurized milk, which must be refrigerated, has a maximum "shelf life" of about two weeks — less, if the container is opened fairly soon after packaging.

DeTray runs Valley Fresh Products here, packaging milk under the Stayfresh label. Besides whole milk, the Valley Fresh line includes 2 percent milk, chocolate milk and carob-flavored milk for an Oregon health food store.

DeTray's customers include Elmendorf Air Force Base near Anchorage, the Coast Guard, the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration and the Federal Aviation Administration. He doesn't sell Stayfresh products locally.

His processing room is pressurized, and only filtered, sterile air can get in. Working parts of the packaging machinery are lubricated with steam.

Only one person works in the processing room at a time, and the worker must wear sterile clothing.

"We've got milk that's been sitting outside for three months that's still as fresh as the day we bottled it," DeTray said.

That milk was packaged in a special carton, made of cardboard and lined with foil. The foil makes a tighter package and keeps out the light, providing a three-to four-month unrefrigerated shelf life, although it must be shipped refrigerated because of Agriculture Department requirements, he said.

DeTray pulled a carton out of a cabinet and shook it.

"This one's been in here a while — couple of months — and it's still good. You can tell. If they go bad, they swell up," he said.

And the taste?

"It's incredible," said Larry Snyder of Puyallup, taking another sip from the glass. "I think it's actually better than regular milk."

"That's what everyone says," DeTray said. "They say they can't believe it."

Pile Of Trash Now 'Mountain'

FRESNO, Calif. (AP) — If South Dakota has Mt. Rushmore, California has a Mt. Trashmore.

It's a huge pile of compacted trash here that rises 108 feet. It began to rise in 1941, and someone dubbed it Mt. Trashmore.

In most places in California, trash is buried in canyons. "But there are no canyons near Fresno, so my dump has become a mountain," said Frank Caglia, 65, who owns a disposal company.

"It can't go much higher," he said. "I plan to begin landscaping the top in a few months. I will transform the dump into a thing of beauty that the people of Fresno will enjoy."

He plans to build a chapel, museum, hotel and restaurant atop it. The museum, he said, will contain among other things his collection of some 200 life-size animated figures.

To Speak On Middle East

Dr. Hisham Barakat, a professor with the East Carolina University School of Medicine, will be the featured speaker in a program on the Middle East.

The lecture will take place beginning at 7:45 p.m. Wednesday, March 29 at the Fellowship Hall of Jarvis Memorial United Methodist Church. There is no admission charge and the public is invited.

Dr. Barakat, Palastinian born, left in 1948 at the time of the creation of the country of Israel. He and his family settled for awhile in Lebanon before moving to the U.S. in 1968.

The lecture on the Middle East is part of the "Great Decisions '78" series of lectures sponsored locally by the E.C.U. Division of Continuing Education with a grant from the North Carolina Humanities Committee.

Pupil Included In Publication

Roy F. Whaley has been selected to appear in "Who's Who Among American High School Students."

Five percent of the nation's youths are selected each year for this honor. Roy is a senior at Rose High School and plans to enter East Carolina University this fall. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Marvin E. Whaley of Greenville.

Craft And Bake Sale Plannned

A craft and bake sale will be held at Eastern Pines Fire Department Saturday, Apr. 8, from 9 a. m. to 2 p. m.

Sponsor of the sale will be the 7-1 Class of G. R. Whitfield School. Proceeds will be used for a school beautification project. Anyone having questions or wishing to donate items may contact Betty Staten, Rt. 3, Greenville.

Bible Comes In 1631 Languages

NEW YORK (AP) — At least one book of the Bible had been published in 1,631 of the world's languages and distinct dialects by the end of 1977, according to the American Bible Society.

The society's annual Scripture language count indicates that the Bible is now available in 266 languages, the New Testament in 420 and portions of Scripture in 945.

N.C. Senate Candidates Desperately Seek Issue

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — hat if they held a free-for-all nd nobody came?

That's the way the fight for e Democratic nomination to e U.S. Senate is shaping up eight candidates struggle to nd an issue that excites the oters, while the voters ruggle to remember every- e's name.

With the May 2 primary less an six weeks away, most of e candidates are moving into e final stages of their cam- ign push, the climax in some ses of a year of work. And ivately, nearly all will admit ey're a little disappointed ith the dullness of it all.

"I'm a little frustrated, and I ink Luther is too, that we ve spoken in some detail on sues and gotten very little verage," noted Paul Bernish, staff aide to candidate Luther odges Jr. "It's hard to get is- ues across — the answers are ot easy."

It's even harder when no e's listening. The campaign date has been marked by a lethora of forums, whose au- iences have frequently come ose to being outnumbered by e candidates.

And drawing more raves than e candidates' dance with the sues are a pair of fringe can- idates who play the fiddle or lk about world government nd UFO's.

Probably happiest with the emocratic race is Jesse elms, the Republican in- umbent who will take on the ventual nominee in November. elms, a national champion of ltra-conservatives, has al- eady raised and spent more an $2 million on his re-elec- on effort and doesn't even ave a primary of his own.

But some campaigners re- ain unconcerned, say all is ormal and look for action to eat up in April.

"The guy just making enough bring the bread home doesn't eally think politics," said harley Webb, a retiring state epresentative from Greensboro nd treasurer for the John In- ram campaign. "He will about 0 days before the voting. I aven't found any way or any eason to rush it."

For the record, the eight can- idates are: Ingram, now state nsurance commissioner; Hod- es, the former head of North arolina National Bank; Law- ence Davis, a state senator rom Winston-Salem; Joseph elmet, a former news- aperman from Winston-Salem; avid McKnight, a former ewspaperman from Fayette- ille; McNeill Smith, a state enator from Greensboro; Wil- iam Griffin, a Hamlet textile orker; and Thomas Sawyer, a tate representative from reensboro.

Hodges entered the race as cknowledged frontrunner, and hough Ingram's staff disputes it, his position was bolstered by a Feb. 24 poll conducted scien- ifically by University of North arolina journalism students. It showed Hodges leading the emocrats handily, though with a sizeable undecided vote.

But more significantly, it showed Hodges running best of the Democrats head-on with elms and holding a hair's- readth lead over the Republi- an. That shattered the pre- ailing wisdom on Helms' in- incibility and raised the value of the nomination.

Now nearly all the candidates re trying to profit from the ocketbook concerns of the vot- rs, as well as contend they est can defeat Helms.

The son of the former gover- or, Hodges began his cam- aign before anyone else, hir- ng Bernish in January, 1977 nd resigning his $100,000-a- ear bank job later to cam- aign full time. He now has the argest paid staff organization nd largest warchest.

On the stump, he argues that s a trained economist he nows how to deal with the problems of inflation, energy, health insurance and jobs. And lately, he's been adding that in North Carolina, unemployment is not as severe a problem as under-employment.

"The United States is not going to have a balanced budget, the United States is not going to have anything, until it gets people back to work," he said earlier this year. "Until the economy is moving more, we've got to have public service jobs."

Hodges' plan is to run a slick campaign and ignore the Democratic opponents as much as possible, though he doesn't mind pointing out his job resignation and Ingram's refusal to give up his post.

"We want to win this primary but we've got to think about the world series too," campaign manager George Autry said. "We've got to be able to pull the party together for November."

Hodges has had to battle natural shyness and a stuffy banker's image in the press, a fight he says he's won.

Ingram has also dwelt on economics, and points frequently to his six-years as insurance commissioner and a record of holding down rates. His campaign has a populist bent, though opponents privately prefer to call it demagoguery.

"The issue-of-issues in this campaign is who will represent the people, not the special interests. I have worked for the people," Ingram says. Then, referring to a gold-colored campaign token, he adds, "If you elect me your senator, this will be money in your pocket.

"What's happened to your utility rates? Have they gone down like your insurance rates have?" he asks later.

But Ingram has the handicap of a late start. His campaign staff is small, and rather than hiring a New York media consultant like Hodges, a local worker splices his television commercials together in a home-made studio.

He also has the problem of a state investigation into his 1976 campaign finances, amid allegations of contributions from insurance companies. Ingram has labeled it a smear.

Smith ran a distant third in the poll, and has taken a more aggressive tone in the past week. He's begun speaking about Hodges and Davis by name and says "I think I'm in the middle."

Smith's problem, though, is a liberal tag he picked up during several legislative sessions. A lawyer, he has represented groups opposed to nuclear power and been active in consumer legislation.

He has a sharp wit. When Ingram recently suggested nuclear fusion as a better source of electricity for home use, Smith snapped back that the suggestion was "like cutting butter with a chain saw."

Smith is a native of rural Robeson County and his strength isn't confined to one region. He's counting on heavy support from women and blacks and has been endorsed by the state teachers group.

Davis is banking on heavy televison use in the final weeks, part of a campaign mapped by DeLoss Walker, who managed Dale Bumpers when he was first elected governor of Arkansas.

Name recognition has been a problem, and Davis admitted when he announced that he was "Lawrence who." But he draws analogies to Bumpers, now a senator, who had the same problem two months before his election.

Davis talks mainly about one issue, inflation. "The root cause of inflation is deficit spending by the federal government," he says. "Deficit spending automatically waters down the valuse of the dollar."

Davis says fat can be trimmed from all departments of government, and points to his experience as chairman of the Base Budget Committee in the state senate. His appeal is plainly conservative, though not nearly so much as Helms.

Adding the most color to the race is Felmet, a jowly, red-faced man given to the outlandish. He issued a position paper on UFO's and disrupted President Carter's speech at Wake Forest University to give him a petition supporting the Wilmington 10.

He advocates a world government and says possession of a nuclear bomb should be "the first international felony." He has addressed more pressing issues too, blasting the oil companies and supporting repeal of right-to-work laws.

David McKnight is also waging an unorthodox campaign. At 30, he's the youngest ever to run for senator in the state and began early last year, walking from Murphy to Manteo. He treats audiences to bluegrass music on his fiddle and says he is strong in rural areas.

"I'm not going to fiddle around while the biggest corporations in America squeeze out the family farmer," he says.

He stresses support for President Carter's programs and repeats a "less is better" theme. The country's problems, he says, are the result of big government, big labor and big business.

Griffin is yet to be heard from. He hasn't campaigned and has accepted no contributions. He says he intends to start soon.

Sawyer's activity has been limited and he has missed the forums. Sawyer, who was swamped in a bid for governor in 1956, spoke strongly in his announcement speech for labor unions and against the banks, which Sawyer says are responsible for inflation.

But one of his main issues is abortions, which he opposes under nearly any circumstance. As a legislator, he took the floor during debate on the death penalty to speak passionately against abortions.

HAVE A CAR? YOU HAVE A GREENHOUSE. . .Howard Mims uses the rear window ledge of his car as a cold frame for starting his garden plants. Tomato and broccoli plants were seen flourishing as his car was parked on Reade Street here. All he has to worry about, he says, is bringing the trays inside on very cold nights and opening the car windows for a ventilation on very warm days. (Reflector Photo By Carol Tyer)

Offshore Oil Exploration Rights Up For Auction

By DICK PETTYS
Associated Press Writer

SAVANNAH, Ga. (AP) — More than a million acres off the coasts of Georgia, Florida and the Carolinas go on the auction block this week when the government offers offshore drilling rights for a new, submerged Southern frontier to oil and gas explorers.

The exploration area ranges from 30 to 75 miles offshore in waters 43 to 540 feet deep.

Commercial drilling has never been done there, but government geologists say the area could produce between 280 million and 1 billion barrels of oil and from 1.9 to 6.8 trillion cubic feet of gas.

It is estimated that exploration could begin within six to 12 months of the sale, with actual production beginning in about eight years if commercially recoverable resources are found.

There has been some opposition from environmental groups and intense concern from some state and local governments, but spokesmen say their principle objections have been overcome.

Even so, industry watchers report that investors are lukewarm to the idea because of a combination of geologic and economic factors.

Bids will be opened Tuesday in Savannah, Ga., for the 224 tracts involved in the exploration area — a site technically known as the Southeast Georgia Embayment. Each tract contains more than 5,600 acres.

The site is only the third exploration area offered on the Atlantic Coast by the Department of Interior's Bureau of Land Management to help reduce the nation's bill for imported oil, although other sales are planned for 1979 and 1980.

Rights have already been sold to an exploration area off New Jersey but legal action and a bitter controversy is delaying the sale of rights to an area off the Massachusetts coast. Both areas have larger estimated gas and oil reserves than the Southern exploration zone.

The Interior Department has chosen the Savannah sale to inaugurate a new pricing system that would require oil and gas producers to pay higher government royalties than they have before if production exceeds specified levels.

Industry watchers say the new pricing plan, combined with what some investors call unfavorable geologic conditions in the Southern exploration zone, makes investors wary of the deal.

Still, industry watchers say, investors can't afford to ignore the tracts in the Southeast Georgia Embayment because the area could contain major fields which can only be found by drilling.

Eighty of the 224 tracts will be covered by the new pricing system — a sliding scale in which the government's take increases as production value increases.

The government's share — technically called a royalty — on those 80 tracts would range from the standard 16.67 per cent on production under $1.5 million per quarter to 50 per cent for production exceeding $34.83 million per quarter.

The remaining tracts of land are covered by the traditional flat rate of 16.67 per cent per quarter.

Those rates aren't negotiable. Oil and gas explorers obtain the rights to specific tracts by bidding on the "bonus" they will pay the government, in addition to the royalty, for those rights.

The minimum "bonus" bid per tract for the Southeast Georgia Embayment sale has been set by the government at $142,848.

Industry observers say they expect the new pricing system to have a generally depressing effect on bonus bids because operators believe the sliding scale will lengthen the time it takes them to recoup their investment.

The observers also say some operators believe the area's geologic conditions are not as likely to produce major oil fields as the other Atlantic exploration zones.

If commercially recoverable resources are found, the economic impact on coastal communities could be profound and a host of further environmental questions would be raised.

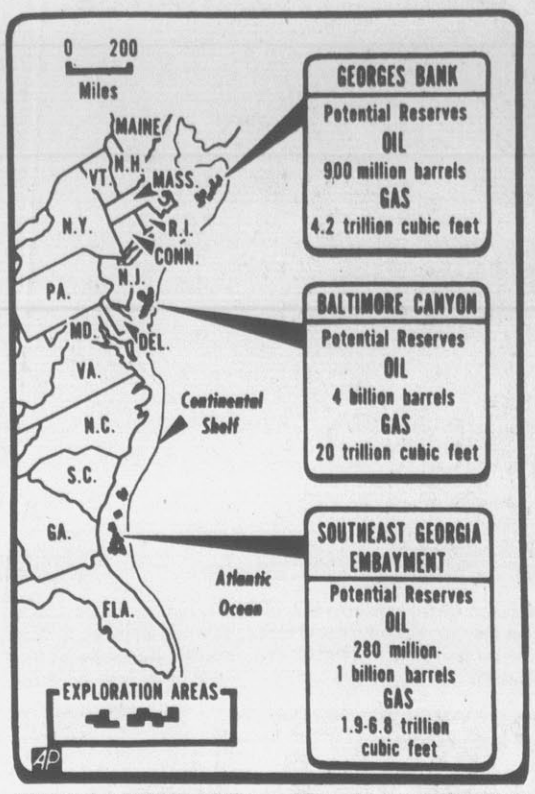

In Georgia, state planner Glenn Davis said he and others have been working for several years to develop an economic plan that would help coastal communities confronted with a surge of oil production workers and demands for expanded governmental services.

Davis said the state is also mapping potential pipeline corridors should that method be chosen for bringing oil from the fields to shore. "We want to be in a position of saying that here's where the corridor should be so that it will be have the least possible impact on the environment," he said.

Georgia Gov. George Busbee has supported exploration off the state's coast on the conditions that it would not burden local economies or prove environmentally harmful.

Press aide Duane Riner said Busbee is satisfied with concessions from the Interior Department which require a new analysis of environmental impact before oil production begins and which allow the state a voice in decisions about bringing the oil ashore.

The Georgia Conservancy, an environmental group, says it still has concerns about the project but is no longer considering court action because of agreements for an environmental study before production begins and because legislation before Congress establishing oil spill liability and fishermen's liability funds will apply to the South Atlantic exploration zones.

Dr. Knowles, an author, consultant, and seminar leader, is professor of Adult and Community College Education at N.C. State University.

Salt Is Tough On Trolleys

DETROIT (AP) — It's not the snow but the salt that makes tough sledding for Detroit's trolleys.

In the 76 years the trolleys ran along the streets of Lisbon, Portugal, from where they were imported, there was never any snow. Now, city crews must repaint and rebuild them after two winters on salted Detroit streets. Modern air brakes and heating units were installed on the antique cars to equip them for heavy downtown traffic.

BIRD PARK

SINGAPORE (UPI) — Singapore's 50-acre Jurong Bird Park, built on a small hillside with natural and man-made terrain on the west side of the island, is home for about 7,000 birds from all over the world.

Senior Citizens Enjoy Weekly Dip

"KEEP THE KICKBOARD ON TOP OF THE WATER or else it will sink down," says the student volunteers to swimmer Sarah Ashton, president of the Senior Citizens group. The boards allow the swimmers to concentrate on their kicks without having to worry about strokes and breathing at the same time.

TWO STUDENT VOLUNTEERS help teach the back float to one of the Senior Citizen swimmers. "Learning how to float on their backs is necessary so that they can rest if they get tired while swimming," said Leslie Ball (center), program co-ordinator.

'Swimming gives me a chance to get away from housework'

Many of them had never swum before, or if they had, it had been a long time ago.

Most of them were unsure when they first started their swimming lessons in February, but Leslie Ball who heads up the Senior Citizens Swim Program, says that her friends have come a long way in the past month and a half.

The class meets on Fridays from 2-3 p.m. in Memorial Gym, and is sponsored jointly by the Greenville Recreation and Parks Department and East Carolina University.

The Recreation Department which supports the Senior Citizens group, initiated the swim program and pays for the lifeguard. East Carolina University provides the pool, dressing rooms, parking spaces and the student volunteers who work with the group. Ball said in an interview recently that participation in the program is on the upswing.

"When we started, only four people attended. One week there were 14 people. Now we grow about three people a week," Ball added.

"We really encourage those who might not think they are really interested to go and look for themselves. Many times this is the way potential swimmers start out. Some of those men have come over first to check it out for their wives. The wives would come later."

The activities that the group does during the swim time are various. Some play water ball with the goal set up at the end of the pool; some swim laps for exercise, and some just relax at the side of the pool.

"Our champ — I guess you could call her that — is Mary Robinette," said Ball. "She holds the record with 46 laps.

"One lady went from putting her face in the water, to staying afloat with a support, all within a half an hour.

"We have to slow them down sometimes, they get so enthusiastic. We have to make sure they don't get tired by overdoing it."

But according to swimmer Sarah Ashton, this is a time that they look forward to all week.

Flo Greene, who is recovering from a stroke, says that this is the best exercise and therapy in the world for her.

One man who had a heart attack said his doctor wants him to get some exercise but not overexert himself. "Swimming gives him movement but does not put extreme pressure on his heart," said Ball.

"Swimming is so relaxing," said Edith Holmes. "It is almost like rocking yourself to sleep. I had to work to swim when I was younger. I did take swimming courses to learn the strokes, but my breathing has never been as good as it should be.

"But I made sure my children learned to swim. As a matter of fact, they learned how in this very pool."

Tom Doyle said that the swimming gives him a chance to get away from the housework.

The student volunteers get credit for their recreation therapy courses by helping out with the senior citizens.

"But we students love it just as much as the older people," said Patty Lorick. "Sometimes when I go I sign up for credit. Sometimes I don't."

Working in this capacity gives the students a chance to see another side of the elderly, said Ball.

"So many times all they see is the nursing home side of these people. ECU was very willing to let us use the pool for this reason."

Sarah Ashton feels the students have the most patience with the senior citizens. "They are all so good to us."

According to Ball, hair appointments have been changed from Friday mornings to Friday afternoons.

"This is the most active co-ed sport for the senior citizens. Most of the ones that come here to swim are also in the yoga class," she added.

When Sarah Ashton, who is president of the Town and Country Senior Citizens group, got up at one of their meetings to make the announcement about the program, she took out this big box from Brody's.

"I went out and bought this just for this activity," she told the group. She then pulled out a little string bikini. But she had really bought it for her granddaughter, she explained later.

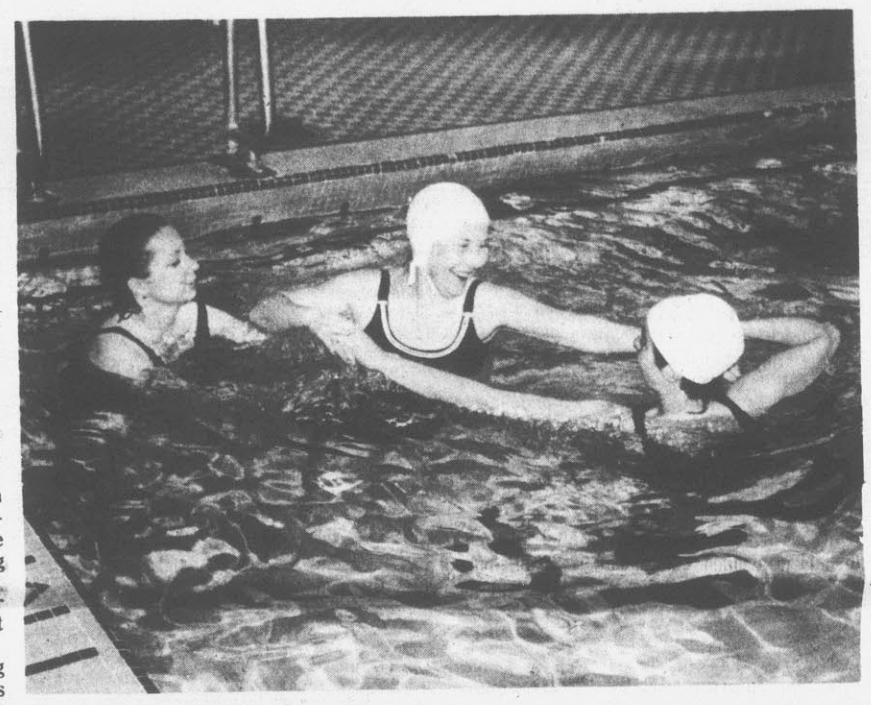

The group has also decided to have an awards banquet to show their appreciation to the students who have worked so hard. There is also a move afoot to try to get certificates for the swimmers.

"We work with the individual," said Ball. "The fact that they didn't start in February doesn't penalize them a bit. We take them from the point where they come in.

"Besides, it sure is a lot more exciting watching them having fun swimming than going out to a place like Greenville Villa."

So with a lot of hard work and much help from volunteers and instructors the senior citizens have made a lot of progress. And best of all, they love every minute of it.

Dean White Has Her Dream Job Waiting In Raleigh

Text And Photographs By Carol Tyer

"I feel better about myself than I ever have in my life," Dean White says.

The 26-year-old Greenville woman graduated with high honors yesterday from Mitchell's Hair Styling Academy here. She's informed the local Department of Social Services that she's no longer in need of financial assistance to support her two sons. She's on her way to Raleigh to accept a job that "fell into her lap" because of her skilled work and pleasing personal conduct as a Mitchell's student. She'll be working in the Raleigh Mitchell's Salon, of which the Greenville Salon and Academy are branches.

MERITS RALEIGH JOB . . . Dean White has a job in Raleigh immediately because of her ability and attitude while in beauty school here.

"When I graduated from Rose High School in 1970, I didn't know what I wanted," Dean said. "I didn't want any more schooling. I got married and had two boys — Maurice is eight and Carlos is six —, but my husband left before long. I worked here and there, but mostly I sat around the house and drew AFDC (Aid to Dependent Children)."

Last summer, almost on impulse, she admits now, Dean and a friend enrolled in Mitchell's Academy. The class began in June with 15 members. Two weeks later it had two — Dean and one other. "I almost quit," she said. "It seemed like the more I tried, the worse things got at home. There seemed to be more bills, more problems.

"But my instructor kept telling me that, if I quit, she'd come get me. That made me think she must see something good about me I couldn't see myself, so I kept on.

"When I started trying to work with white women's hair, it just seemed impossible. 'You'll be a good one,' I told Mrs. Polly Troutman, the instructor, 'if you teach me to get a white woman's hair around a roller.'

"There was one favorite customer's hair — a white woman's — that I kept trying to comb out just right and couldn't. I'd have to call an instructor every time to finish it. Finally, I got determined I was going to do it myself or else — and I did. The customer was pleased and has been a twice-a-week regular ever since.

"That was the turning point. I started really loving the work and enjoying the varied experience of fixing both black and white women's hair."

As a Public Assistance recipient, once both her children were school-aged, Dean was a mandatory participant in the Work Incentive Program of the Pitt County Department of Social Services' her WIN counselor Sally Williamson said. Once she began her schooling she became a certified WIN participant, eligible for financial assistance in preparing herself to become self-supporting. She had to continue to pay her own tuition, but was assisted through WIN with transportation, lunch money, day care (after school and Saturdays once the boys were back in school in the fall), uniforms and work shoes, and finally a beauty kit.

"I'll tell you like it is," Dean told a Work Incentive Program workshop group soon after school was underway, "that $45 a month ($1 a school day for lunch and $1 a school day for transportation) was what kept me going some of the time. I knew I had to keep going, too, because I had borrowed money from a friend to pay my tuition and I had to pay it back."

She did keep going and was on the dean's list every quarter, Beauty School Director Mrs. Janet Garris said. "Dean's one of the best students we've ever had. She's a skilled beauty operator and has a beautiful attitude that even inspires those around her to do better."

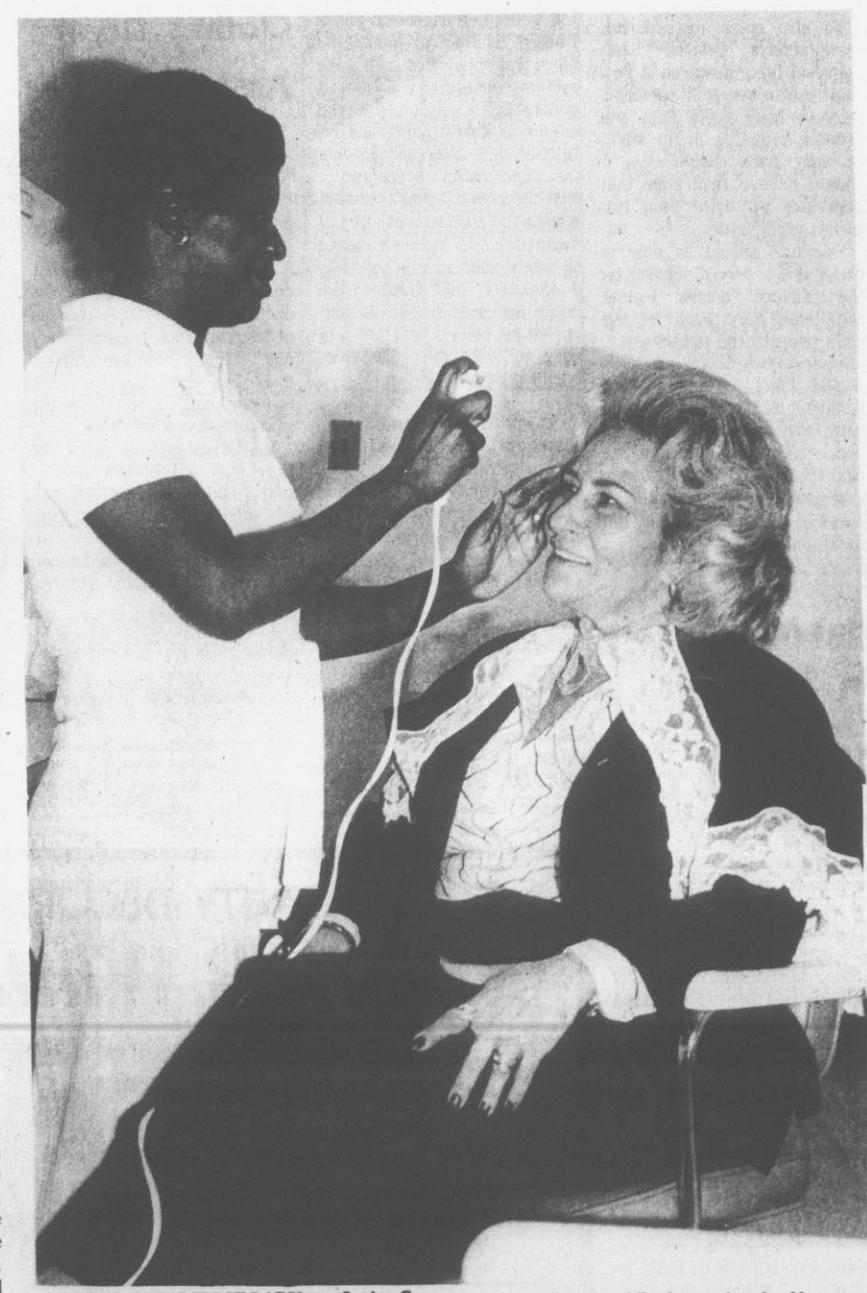

One day during her last quarter at the Academy, she inquired about using a Raleigh phone book. She wanted, she explained, to start contacting Raleigh area beauty shop, because she knew of no Greenville area shops that have black and white customers and she wanted to continue to work with "both kinds of hair."

She was told by Mitchell, who was visiting the Greenville school that day, that she didn't need the phone book, that she would have a job in his Raleigh shop as soon as she graduated if she wished.

Dean says she's embarrassed by all the fuss that's been made over her at the beauty academy and elsewhere."

"But it's earned praise," Mrs. Garris and Mrs. Williamson both say.

"I'm going to keep on working and improving," Dean said. "I know it's not going to be easy from here on out just because I've got a job. I'll be going to a strange place where I don't know a soul. But I'll make it. My boys and I are going to be fine in Raleigh."

GREENVILLE'S FIRST LADY . . . Janice Cox, wife of Mayor Percy Cox, was one of Dean's regular customers while she was in school here.

PLAN YOUR HOME

COMPACT PLAN IDEAL FOR NARROW LOT

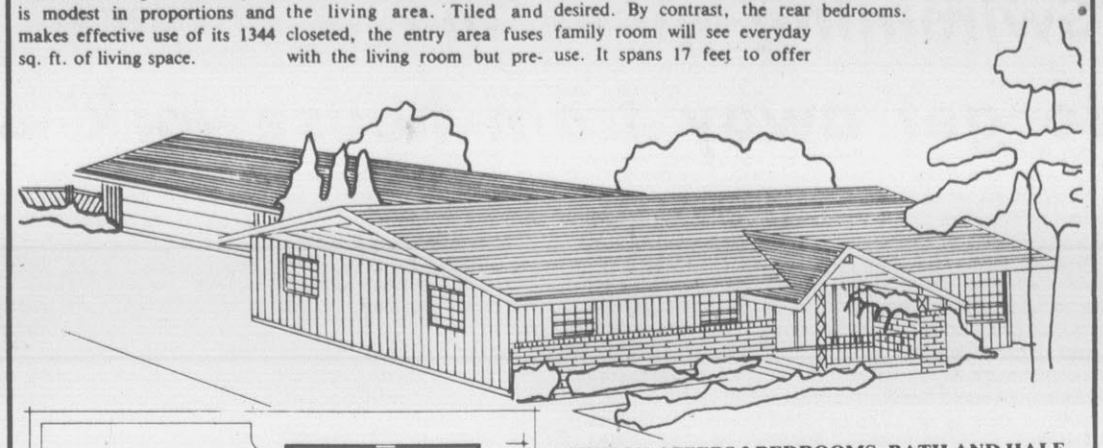

By Jerry Bishop

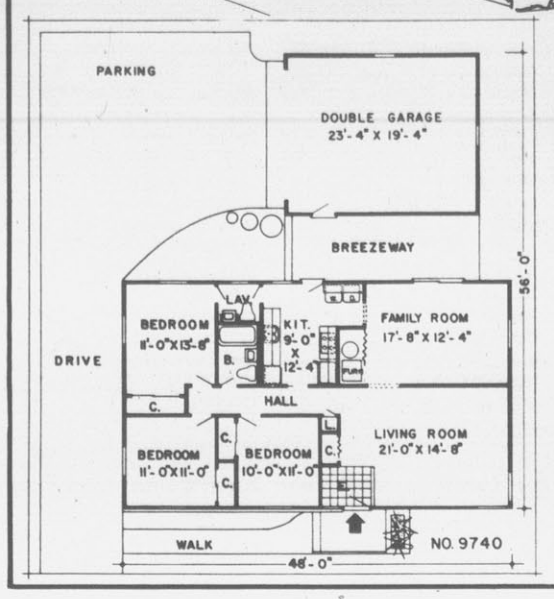

Spanning only 48 feet in width and placing a garage at rear, the Bellechester, a 3 bedroom ranch style, is easily adapted to a narrow lot. In general, the plan is modest in proportions and makes effective use of its 1344 sq. ft. of living space.

The facade exudes simple charm, using a brick planter to accent the balance of brick and vertical siding. A gently sloping roof extends to a roofed front porch, where guests enter into the living area. Tiled and closeted, the entry area fuses with the living room but prevents unnecessary traffic through the middle of the room.

The front-facing living room is brightened by corner small-paned windows and can be reserved entirely for guests if desired. By contrast, the rear family room will see everyday use. It spans 17 feet to offer unrestricted space, and ends in sliding glass doors to the breezeway.

Bedrooms are grouped to the left of living areas and include a master bedroom with half bath that also opens to the kitchen area. A full bath in the hall is shared by the two remaining bedrooms.

DESIGN OFFERS 3 BEDROOMS, BATH AND HALF

The total square footage of the first floor is 1,344, with the garage, large enough for storage, adding another 480 sq. ft.

Area	Sq. Ft.
Living area	— 1,344
Garage	— 480

Laundry space is allotted to the adjacent kitchen, arranged corridor style for efficiency. Another entry to the breezeway is featured.

There Is Nothing Like Having Your Own Home

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures

Before deciding that a house, even in these times, is an exorbitant investment, consider the advantages.

In these last decades, even families with low incomes have made considerable financial strides in their real estate transactions. But when the tax bills arrive, they grumble over the cost of keeping up a house, and they may fail to remember all the things a home provides in terms of happiness and independence for the owners.

Ask a few homeowners what they realistically find are advantages of owning their own home. Some will complain of the high cost of maintenance, some will point out the high cost of taxes, assessments and other necessary expenses. Some will complain of other unexpected costs — leaking roofs that need repair, the tree that must be disposed of after a storm or a failure of the septic system.

But on the other hand, many will see that the advantages of owning one's home far outweigh the costs.

Here is what some owners had to say about their good fortune:

—Your own home provides certain privileges, none of them really earth-shaking but they all add up to a lot of happiness.

—You can have a roof over your head in your old age and house maintenance that costs far less, no doubt, than other living arrangements.

—You can deduct the interest on your mortgage from your income tax. Also, the interest on home improvement loans.

—You are not bothered by special restrictions that may be forced upon you if you rent an apartment or a home. You are not limited on how many children you may have or how many pets. Both children and pets can play on the property without interference.

—You can remodel your home to your heart's content, making your home conform to your own needs and comforts.

—You can borrow money on your property to meet unexpected financial ups and downs.

—You can plant your own special garden and lawn favorites. One of the joys of owning your own home is to see things develop and grow, whether indoors or outside. Planting a vegetable garden or flower garden and seeing the results each summer is a hobby that is only matched by going fishing!

Many people face the buy-or-rent decision now. Even if proper terms can be met to buy, they are put off by one thing or another — more than likely, the fact that the down payment may look more attractive to them in the bank instead of in the house.

If you are young, scrimping is a good tool for acquiring things you want and it is the time to go on a budget to make it possible to buy or rent eventually. As your financial acumen increases, you will learn to more judiciously apply the funds where they can give the optimum return.

Think for example, 30 years hence — if you buy a house on a 30-year mortgage, it could fit into your retirement plans early in life. You will have a home paid off to do what you wish on your retirement. You can live in it or take the equity and move on to the ultimate retirement place of your choice.

Heat Trick Is Nothing New

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. (AP) — The advantages of bringing solar heat into a home through a south wall window were pointed out 33 years ago by the Small Homes Council-Building Research Council of the University of Illinois, which published a four-page circular on solar orientation, but not very many people were interested then.

Now it has republished the circular, with four additional pages telling how to use the information in these solar-energy-conscious days. Copies of the circular are available by mail at 40 cents each from the Council, University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign, 1 East St. Mary's Road, Champaign, Ill. 61820.

Daily Watering Can Be Harmful

STREAMWOOD, Ill. (UPI) — Watering most indoor foliage plants daily can do more harm than good. It tends to waterlog root systems and encourage rot, says a planterware manufacturer. A good dousing at intervals once or twice a week allows the soil to dry out enough to produce better growth results.

GARDEN CLINIC

N.C. State University Answers Timely Gardening Questions

Q. When is the best time to prune forsythia, lilac and spirea? (Mrs. W. H., Yancyville)

A. Immediately after they bloom. Cut these early flowering bushes back just enough to keep them properly shaped and within bounds. When the clump becomes too large remove old canes entirely. (Kim Powell, extension landscape horticulturist)

Q. How does North Carolina rank in pecan production? (H.F., Beaulaville)

A. Usually in last place. Eleven states grow pecans commercially, and North Carolina ranks 11th in most years. Occasionally we will jump up to fifth or sixth in a good year. Georgia is usually first with Texas second. (Mel Kolbe, extension horticulturist)

Q. I've tried growing artichokes for several years but without success. What could be the problem? (N.S., Salisbury)

A. Globe artichokes can be grown in the mountains, but they are not adapted to other areas of the state. They need very humid conditions, which is why the best globe artichokes are grown in the foggy area south of San Francisco. Jerusalem artichokes, which are used for pickling, can be grown all over the state. (A. A. Banadyga, extension horticulturist)

Q. We have a steep slope in our new front yard. What is the maximum slope that a person can normally mow? (K. P., Winston-Salem)

A. If you use a power mower, the slope should not exceed a ratio of 1:3 or 30 per cent. This is the maximum slope on which you should try to maintain grass. Erosion will be a problem unless you get turf or something established on the slope immediately. (Kim Powell, extension landscape horticulturist)

TREES!
Don't take them for granite, because they are wood and will not stand forever. Trees need care and some need removing to protect property or other trees.

What's new on the market?

THE PRODUCT — A retractable auxiliary extension cord.

Manufacturer's claim — That this cord will help avoid accidental cutting or damage to the power cord by keeping it away from the tool ... that it is especially useful when used with electric hedge trimmers, lawn edgers, chain saws, snow throwers and paint sprayers, among other power tools ... that the extension cord stretches as much as 4 feet and retracts to a compact 12-inch coil, thus providing a link between the tool and the cord ... that its heavy-duty vinyl jacket resists the effects of heat, oil and sunlight, and retains flexibility at cold temperatures ... that the cord comes with a belt clip, a plastic cord tie and a molden-on grounding connector and plug ... and that the cord is approved by Underwriters' Laboratories.

THE PRODUCT — A glassless mirror.

Manufacturer's claim — That this mirror has a special reflective coating which has the same distortion-free attributes as a plate glass mirror without its fragility and heavy weight ... that it is both functional and decorative and has a suspension system that gives it a significant advantage over conventional mirrors when it is desired to use heavy mirrors ... that a stainless steel framed glassless mirror 5 feet by 7 feet weighs only 29 pounds ... and that these mirrors are made to order, with frames available in attractive materials, including stainless steel.

THE PRODUCT — A gasoline-powered standby generator for home use.

Manufacturer's claim — That this generator can produce enough energy during power failures to run a home's heating system, refrigerator and a limited number of lights and electrical appliances ... that the system consists of a 5,000-watt generator, a gasoline-powered engine, a starter motor and refillable tank with enough fuel for eight hours' operation ... that the cost is $2,000 ... that it weighs 210 pounds, measures 27 inches high, 35 inches long and 36 inches wide, can be bolted to a concrete pad outside the house and uses theft-proof concealed lug bolts ... and that it is easy to start when the electricity goes off.

(Thirty-five subjects are discussed in Andy Lang's handbook, "Practical Home Repairs," available by sending $1.50 to this newspaper at Box 5, Teaneck, N.J. 07666.)

(The retractable extension cord is manufactured by Belden Corp., 2000 S. Batavia Ave., Geneva, Ill. 60134; the glassless mirror by Skyword International Corp., 400 W. Palatine Rd., Arlington Heights, Ill. 60604; and the generator by Homelite, 14401 Carowinds Blvd., P.O. Box 7047, Charlotte, N.C. 28217.)

How To Size Up New Mattress

CHICAGO (UPI) — A quality mattress has an average life of 10 years.

To size up a replacement, manufacturer Stanley Kluft suggests lying down on a new mattress to see if it conforms to your body, feels firm and creates no hollow in the small of your back. Kluft says it should have a firm edge that depresses no more than two inches when sat on.

You also should be able to press down several inches on the surface before feeling something hard such as the coils beneath the upholstery.

Kluft says a foam mattress should feel cushiony and conform to the small of your back with good support. If your bed is a platform design, he said, buy a foam mattress especially designed for the purpose so you won't feel the wood platform.

Has Monuments In 26 States

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — Five years ago Peter Toth chiseled the final facet of an American Indian sculpture here, climbed into his home on wheels and vowed to sculpt a similar monument to the Indians in all 50 states by the time he was 30.

So far he has completed sculptures in 26 states. He has also acquired a wife, Kathy.

The 29-year-old, self-taught sculptor met her while sculpting a monument in Illinois. He brought her here recently to meet his family and to see the first wooden sculpture he carved.

He learned, however, that vandals had sawed the 12-foot-high sculpture in half and carted off the top.

Undaunted, Toth said he and his wife were leaving for California where he was going to carve another monument from a giant sequoia tree near Palm Springs.

Here's the Answer

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

Q. — We are going to enclose our front porch so that it can be used all year. I have everything outlined and don't anticipate any trouble in handling the job, but there is one thing I am not sure about. The wooden floor of the porch is in excellent condition and I intend to install plywood underlayment over it and lay floor tiles on the underlayment, but I do not know whether insulation is necessary and where it should be placed. There is enough space under the porch to work there, although it will be a little cramped. Can you advise me on this matter?

A. — Assuming that the space under the floor is unheated, you should place batt insulation there, attaching it to the joists. Be sure the vapor barrier on the insulation is facing the inside of the house. To prevent moisture from rising from the ground and attacking the underside of the floor, place sheets of polyethylene on the soil, overlapping the sheets by a few inches and holding down the seams with sand.

Q. — I have a pretty good idea of what hardboard is, but I am not sure how it differs from composition board. Can you explain it to me?

A. — Hardboard is made by exploding wood chips into a fibrous state, refining the fibers and compressing them into dense rigid panels in hydraulic presses. Composition board is a kind of catch-all term to describe various kinds of products made by mixing or combining certain ingredients. Since the term is used rather loosely for such wall materials as particle board, fiber board and insulation board, among others, it is sometimes difficult to tell from a lumber yard ad exactly what it is, but the one thing you can be sure of is that anything designated as composition board is much softer than hardboard. It is usually fairly sound-absorbent with some insulating value and relatively inexpensive.

Q. — About two years ago, you told a reader how to get a pickled finish on pine wood. I saved the clipping, but now that I have to do a job of that kind, I can't locate the clipping. Could you repeat it for me, please? I am sure there are others who would like to know about it.

A. — The pickled look on almost any kind of wood can be achieved in any one of half a dozen different ways. Every wood finisher has his own pet method, but generally the process involves a stain, sealer, some kind of white paint or white pigmented stain and a final coat of a clear finishing material. Here's one finisher's favorite procedure: Apply a coat of brown or gray stain. Wait a couple of hours, then give it a coat of clear shellac diluted 50 percent with denatured alcohol. When the shellac is dry, usually within an hour or two, brush on some flat white paint, wiping it lightly so that some of the paint remains and stopping when you get the kind of effect that pleases you. The following day, apply the final finish. If it isn't entirely smooth, wait another day, then rub very lightly with fine steel wool. Wipe off all traces of grit, apply wax and buff.

Clothes Dryer As A Humidifier

LINCOLN, Neb. (UPI) — Venting a clothes dryer indoors to humidify your home can save energy and the initial cost of a humidifier, but it has pitfalls.

Housing specialist Ardis Hutchins says only electric dryers are safe to use this way. Gas dryers are not because they can create deadly carbon monoxide when they burn gas to form heat. Carbon monoxide is colorless and odorless.

Ms. Hutchins, who is with the University of Nebraska-Lincoln, said indoor venting is not advisable if it creates dust problems that persist even when nylon hose are used as an extra lint trap on the exhaust duct.

It also is inadvisable if so much moisture condenses indoors it causes mold, mildew and wood rot. The first clue to too much moisture is condensation on windows, she said. She added houses usually won't handle the moisture of two or three dryer loads a day.

Back From Year In Antarctica

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (AP) — John and Donna Mitchell Oliver are back from a full year in Antarctica — the first husband-wife team ever to spend a winter at a government research station on the frozen continent.

"I think we're going to see a lot more women working down there soon," said Mrs. Oliver, a 29-year-old laboratory technician at Scripps Institution of Oceanography where her husband is a graduate student in biological oceanography.

The only woman among 87 men at McMurdo Base, she helped her 31-year-old husband collect animal types and studied the effects of winter isolation on 43 of the men.

The companionship "makes the winter a lot more bearable," Oliver said in an interview after their return. But he said selection of government explorers "should be based solely on an individual's work qualifications and personality — without regard to sex."

Mrs. Oliver returned with 800 pages of notes and 43 taped interviews.

The American explorers, she said, "suffer from lower motivation levels, shorter attention spans, lower energy levels and a sort of dullness which is hard to describe." But generally, said Mrs. Oliver, "I saw no serious psychological problems develop among the men."

Dr. Edward P. Todd, director of the National Science Foundation's division of polar problems, praised the Olivers in a statement from Washington as "a new breed of biological problem solvers."

FORECAST FOR MONDAY, MARCH 27, 1978

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Startling and dramatic conditions could exist today, especially if you put a new plan in effect. There is an opportunity now to express a seldom used talent you have.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) If you are more objective, you can easily handle an important business matter. Show others that you have exceptional poise.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Study the promises you have made to others and plan to carry through on them. A good day to handle a civic matter.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Look for new appliances that will help to make your work more efficient and profitable. Co-workers can be most helpful.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) If you show your best qualities to others now, you could receive interesting invitations. Be more articulate.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Don't do anything dramatic at home that could disturb the harmony there. Be more affectionate with mate and get a good response.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Obey every rule and regulation that appleis to you today and don't take any risks. Control your temper and avoid trouble.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) You must be very careful in handling money today, otherwise you could jeopardize your security. Show others you have wisdom.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) You may want to change a personal situation radically, but this would only make matters worse at this time.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) You can easily handle your responsibilities now if you organize your time wisely. Sidestep a troublemaker.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Study your true aims and find a better way to gain them. Be more conventional and all works fine for you.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Be above reproach in both business and personal life today and avoid trouble. Taking any chances now is bad for you.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Stick to present plans for best results in career matters. Forget all those illusions and remain steadfast to the practical.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will possess much charm and should be equipped with a fine education to bring out the fine talents in this chart. Teach to finish whatever is once started. Be sure to use the right kind of discipline early in life.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to YOU!

Surgery Will Correct 'Funnel Chest'

I am 17 with what the doctors call a "funnel chest." When I was small, it didn't matter. When I got older, my parents did not want me to have an operation. Now I am having real trouble. I can't go swimming in the school pool and I find all kinds of reasons to avoid being seen. Am I too old for surgery? — Mark G., La.

Dear Mark:

The condition you describe is known technically as "pectus excavatum." Special types of surgery have been performed with great safety and rapid recovery.

In recent years, a group of doctors have been using special types of silicone implants to round out the concavity in the chest. The operation is a simple one. It is not painful or dangerous and the results are usually most gratifying.

A recent report from the Mayo Clinic in Rochester, Minn., describes the excellence of the surgical results and points out the fact that there have been no important early or late complications from this technique. I am certain that your parents will understand the psychological stress that urged you to write to me. Now I urge you to speak to them and to your family doctor and find out if you are a candidate for the silicone procedure or any other operation.

At some future time, I would like to know whether or not you had this done. It would be gratifying, too, for me to learn that the new shape has relieved your embarrassment and that now you can freely mingle with your friends in all of their activities.

Coughing up a speck of blood is a frequent complaint that is brought to the attention of the doctor. With it there is always an enormous sense of anxiety about what it means.

This anxiety is made worse because a few drops of red blood spat into a basin quickly diffuse and give one the impression that "a tremendous amount" of blood came up.

There are many unimportant reasons for coughing up small quantities of blood. The fears that are induced are probably based on the fact that years ago coughing up blood was immediately associated with tuberculosis. Today, in addition, there is the anxiety that blood in the sputum implies the possible presence of cancer.

Blood can come from the back of the nose or throat and then trickle down into the larynx only to be coughed up again. Tender, bleeding gums may cause blood to appear in the sputum. A break of a tiny blood vessel anywhere in the throat frequently occurs and shows up in the sputum. It is not a complex process to trace the origin of bleeding. Most important is that even this insignificant complaint, which so often causes more than a moderate amount of anxiety, should be tracked down.

Today's Cryptoquip clue: S equals L

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Big Satisfaction In Aiding Elderly

By ANN LO LORDO

CATONSVILLE, Md. (UPI) — Robert Wilson enjoys an afternoon lunch of split pea soup at the local five and dime in Catonsville, thanks to a special service for the aged that helps them remain independent in their own homes.

Without the service, the 72-year-old Wilson, a stroke victim confined to a wheel chair, would have to sacrifice this one small luxury he now can afford.

Laurie Riggs, who describes herself as "ages over 70," has been going to the same hairstylist for 20 years. When she could no longer drive, Mrs. Riggs said she contacted the service for weekly transportation to and from the beauty salon rather than give up her weekly appointment.

Homecall is a private corporation with franchise and branch operations in Beaver Falls, Pa., Rochester, N.Y., Portland, Ore., Boulder, Colo., Clearwatwer, Fla. and seven other cities. It was founded in Frederick, Md. in 1974 by Doris Hanson, a former executive director of the American Home Economics Association.

She said she established Homecall to provide middle income senior citizens with home and personal care services not available under existing social welfare programs.

Ms. Hanson said its rates are $4.25 to $5.50 an hour around the clock seven days a week. Charges depend on services requested.

For example, Wilson pays for transportation to and from the variety store.

"If it weren't for those fellows, I probably wouldn't be able to get out of the house at all," he said.

Mrs. Riggs says getting her hair done weekly is "the orchid of my budget. It's not expensive and it means so much to me."

Patricia Gilroy, Homecall's vice president, says the company specializes in encouraging the elderly to do things they might otherwise neglect because of fatigue or the difficulty of getting around by themselves. Among services they can buy are window cleaning, firewood cutting, lawn care and home health care.

Ms. Hanson said the staff ranges in age from 16 to 65 years because she wants to promote "inter-generational exchange."

"That is one of my big platforms," she said. "I think society must make all kinds of efforts to keep the young and old together and not segregate people in old-age ghettos."

Theresa Douglas, 17, said she and her Homecall coworkers occasionally find themselves having to clean chamberpots.

"But we really don't mind," she said. "There's a great feeling of satisfaction in making the elderly happy. I can't really explain it. It comes from within."

Mrs. Herbert Grymes, 79, who owns an apartment building in Catonsville, said the service has expanded her personal freedom.

"It enables me to be my own boss," she said. "It's almost impossible to get help these days, the kind of help you want on your property."

Helen Crowley, 76, also of Catonsville, said she first contacted the company when she broke her wrist.

"Considering that the service is available when you want it, and no one else would do my lawn or clean the windows, I think it's very reasonable," she said. "I am glad to have this independence."

ROBERT WILSON, a stroke victim confined to a wheelchair, prepares to go out to afternoon lunch with the help of a special service for the aged. (UPI Photo)

Homecall receives no government funds. Mrs. Gilroy said it depends on the hourly fees charged its clients, plus private donations — "whatever we can beg, borrow or steal."

Ms. Hanson added: "We are in an area that traditionally is a funded area. We are trying to be a business, which leaves us only the option of agencies like the Small Business Administration to get help from. But they just shake their heads at us."

Option Program In Minneapolis

By JO-ANNE BYRNE

MINNEAPOLIS (UPI) — For 10 years Minneapolis has had an option to institutionalizing the elderly poor.

For example, a 72-year-old woman who needed help at home when her 83-year-old husband was hospitalized got assistance free from the Minneapolis Age and Opportunity Center, Inc. Among other things, the center provided a handyman and homemaking, counseling and transportation services for three months.

This cost the center $279.35, compared the $996 it would have cost to institutionalize the wife during her husband's hospital stay.

The center was established in 1968 by Daphne Krause as an option to such institutionalizing. It was designed to help solve the problems of the elderly and be a model for similar programs elsewhere in the United States.

It is supported by grants and donations from government and private agencies and individuals. Among its services and programs — all free — are home delivered meals, an employment service, transportation, legal aid, counseling, information and referral services, special health services and a senior citizens clinic, pharmacy and blood bank.

Its bills are paid with, among other things, a grant from Abbott-Northwestern Hospital in Minneapolis and a community development block grant. The seed money was a modest Title III grant from the Administration on Aging. Additional funds have also come from the Mobilization of Economic Resources Board and the Model Cities program.

Mrs. Krause, now president of the center, uses many volunteers, but says "the guts of the services" have to be given by professionals.

The volunteers make it possible to serve more people than the program's limited funding permits.

Mrs. Krause has been involved in community service work for years and has specialized in problems of the elderly for the past decade.

"I use anything I can from the community," she said. She said public contributions are few, but have ranged up to $1,000 and as low as 5-10 cents from grateful elderly recipients of the center's services.

Paper Cutouts Attract Crowd

DETROIT (AP) — Paper cutouts aren't just for kids.

When the Detroit Institute of Arts staged a six-week exhibition of paper cutouts recently, nearly 80,000 visitors — mostly adults — jammed the museum.

The exhibition of 58 colorful cutouts by the late French painter Henri Matisse drew rave notices from critics and the public alike. In addition, city buses displayed Matisse placards while kids did their own cutouts and the museum's gift shop sold out its supply of Matisse posters.

Matisse, who died in 1954, turned to cutouts in his last years when his physical condition prevented him from painting.

Walter Cronkite, Mary Tyler Moore Host As CBS Celebrates 50th Year

115 of the brightest stars ever to adorn CBS gathered at Television City in Hollywood to videotape the grand opening of "CBS: On The Air," a week-long series of special broadcasts hosted by Walter Cronkite and Mary Tyler Moore beginning Sunday, March 26.

It was a sight to behold, because it may never happen again. 115 — count 'em, 115 — of the brightest stars ever to adorn CBS gathered at Television City in Hollywood Sunday, Dec. 11, to videotape the grand opening of "CBS: On The Air," a nine and one-half hour celebration of 50 years of CBS broadcasting history.

The week-long series of special broadcasts — from Sunday, March 26, though Saturday, April 1 — will be hosted by Walter Cronkite and Mary Tyler Moore.

It was, as they say, a veritable galaxy of stars: Lucille Ball, George Burns, Arthur Godfrey, Danny Kaye, Red Skelton, Danny Thomas, James Arness, Art Carney, Mike Wallace, Eric Sevareid, Dan Rather, Douglas Edwards. The list goes on and on: Telly Savalas, Garry Moore, Steve Allen, Cicely Tyson, Beatrice Arthur, Jean Stapleton, Carroll O'Connor, Andy Griffith, Dick Van Dyke, Carol Burnett, Buddy Ebsen, Tony Randall, Nancy Walker. To name but a few.

The first order of business was the taping of the opening segment, in which the celebrities appear on a "calendar" set representing the days of the week with which their shows are associated. That array will highlight the first of the seven "CBS: On The Air" programs.

After the taping and before a lunch break, the stars jammed together for a gigantic CBS "family" photo, where elbows kissed ribs and the ribbing never ceased. "Will you stop doing that, Eva," cried William Conrad to Miss Gabor, in mock annoyance, from out of the crush in row 4.

During the session, Carol Burnett called out, "Can we have just one where we all cross our eyes?" Executive producer Alexander H. Cohen agreed, and it was done.

"I was standing next to Douglas Edwards," Linda Lavin later recalled. "He said, 'I don't know how to do that, but I can make owl eyes.' So we had a lit-the eye-crossing lesson there in row 5. That's what kind of a day it was."

"What's a real gas is that this is the very studio where I was an usher for 'Art Linkletter's House Party,'" said Bert Convy. "And here I am exactly 20 years later, posing in a photo with Art. I was an usher first, then they put me on the show as a singer. I was the original singing usher."

Hal Linden Introduces Working Class Friends

Hal Linden goes to the dogs and introduces some of his working class friends — among which are the malamute, Siberian husky, collie, old English sheep dog, corgi and mastiff — on "Animals Animals Animals," Sunday, March 26, 11:30 to 11:55 a.m., on ABC-TV.

The border collie is one of the oldest breeds of working dogs, and you might even call it the perfect dog. Its remarkable herding instincts are so strong that it will herd "almost anything," including geese and chickens, according to Arthur Allen, a breeder and trainer of border collies in McLeansboro, Illinois. Mr. Allen also shows viewers the border collie in a competition with other working dogs.

"Why the Working Dog Loves His Work" is an animated fable about a sheep dog who dreamed about moving to a castle where life would be easy and there would be no work. After finding out that royal life has chains attached, our friend decided he would rather work in freedom than sit at the end of a chain.

"The Sheep, the Dog and the Thing" is a poem about a sheep dog who loves to count sheep. While the dog might be a sleeper, the poem is not, and it involves a bird, or a horse or a caribou. It's very hard to tell. It must be a thing.

There is a film tribute, "Dogs Then, Now and Sometimes," as well as a fastmoving graphics segment, "Going to the Dogs." "Going to the Dogs" explores the dog's role in history, art and mythology, pointing to Hammurabi's Code, which protected dogs as important property.

New 'Nancy Drew' Signed

A funny thing happened to 18-year-old Janet Louise Johnson enroute to Europe — she was signed to portray feminine sleuth Nancy Drew.

Pretty Janet, who has lived all but her first two years in Southern California (she was born in Evanston, Ill.), began her professional career four years ago when many of her friends encouraged her to try modeling.

"A lot of my friends kept urging me on," the 5-foot-9 blonde-hair beauty explained. "I'd appeared in episodes of 'Alias Smith & Jones' and 'The Waltons' when I was 14, but I wasn't certain about acting or modeling.

"Then, when I was attending North Hollywood High a couple of representatives of 'Teen Magazine' came to the school looking for girls to model for the magazine. They do that regularly, and they talked to me but nothing much came of it until about a year later when they called. So I went in for an interview and I ended up appearing on two of their covers." exclaimed Janet, who still lives with her parents in North Hollywood, sharing a bedroom with her younger sister, Beth.

Janet's expression is one of disbelief even today, for in doing those covers she was signed by Hollywood's foremost child agent, Nina Blanchard, and then a year ago, Miss Blanchard asked her client to come to her office to meet someone. That someone was Eileen Ford, head of one of the world's most famous modeling agencies.

"I went back home and told my folks that I was going to New York in two weeks," Janet says with a blushing smile. "My parents have always been very supportive, but they were a little reluctant about their daughter winging off to New York."

This past Christmas she was flown back to the West Coast for a modeling assignment, stayed for the holidays, and was planning to accept some modeling assignments in Europe when she was sent for an interview by the Blanchard Agency.

Lovely Janet Louise Johnson stars as Nancy Drew in ABC-TV's "Hardy Boys/Nancy Drew Mysteries," which airs Sundays (7-8 p.m.) In the title role of Nancy Drew, Ms. Johnson is the all-American girl detective and one of the first liberated young ladies of American literature.

WHAT A RETURN

Erik Estrada, a star of "CHiPs," returned to work recently after a bout with the flu. "I couldn't believe it when the first scene had me jumping into a swimming pool to rescue two girls whose car had backed into the pool," he said. "At least the water was heated and I escaped a relapse."

Sexes Compete Again

Freestyle skiing, rodeo riding and horseshoe pitching will be highlighted when CBS Sports presents "Challenge of the Sexes," Sunday, March 26, 1 to 1:45 p.m.

Joanie Lincoln is one of the top performers on the women's freestyle skiing World Trophy tour. Freestyle skiing is composed of three events: aerials (or mid-air tricks and flips), moguls (skiing over mounds and bumps), and ballet (to music). Both Ms. Lincoln and Frank Bare II specialize in the most popular of the three events, the aerials.

Ms. Lincoln, 29, took a first on the pro tour in aerials at Stratton, Vt., a second at Heavenly Valley, Calif., and finished first overall in the aerial point standing for the 1976-77 season.

Frank Bare II, 21, also competes on the World Trophy pro tour. He dominated the men's division in aerials last year by finishing first in events at Stratton, Vt., Stowe, Vt., Alta, Utah, and Heavenly Valley, Calif.

Five-time world champion cowboy Larry Mahan adds his expert commentary for the rodeo event, and even coaxes Phyllis George to try her luck at bull riding.

Sue Pirtle is one of the best all-around cowgirls rodeo has known. Born and raised in Weatherford, Oklahoma, she was the 1976 bareback bronc riding champion, and also took honors as the 1976 all-around cowgirl.

Sandy Kirby was born in Salem, New Jersey, but now lives in Greenville, Texas. The 29-year-old cowboy had his best season in 1977 when he finished second in the national title, but he still scored enough points in all the events to finish fifth in the all-around cowboy category.

The horseshoe event shapes up as a battle between the veteran and the youngster.

Vanessa Has Many Faces

To the fans of "Love of Life," the popular daytime series seen weekdays on CBS-TV, the character of Vanessa Dale Sterling has been about the same throughout the show's 26 years. But fans with good memories who've watched the show since it premiered in '51, know that Vanessa's had three distinctly different faces. Those faces belong to the three actresses who've portrayed her — Peg McKay, Bonnie Bartlett and Audrey Peters.

Ms. McKay was the original Vanessa and after five years of playing her, she commented (in 1955) that it was incongruous that an untroubled only child like herself should play a character so weighted down with problems.

"That's why I think I fit the part," she said at the time. "The problems are as new to Vanessa as they are to me, and so both our reactions are sincere."

When Peggy decided to forsake New York City for Hollywood, Bonnie Bartlett stepped into (literally) Vanessa's shoes, and played the part from 1955 to 1959.

In '59, she said she felt "stuck" in the role, but her departure was rather sudden. She was negotiating with the producer for a new contract and a higher salary. The producer decided not to meet her demands, but to bring in another actress.

Enter — Audrey Peters, who — along with Bruce Sterling — has the longest tenure among the show's cast members today

Audrey remembers her first day at the studio— with horror. "My son, Jay, was 2 and as I was walking out the apartment door, I heard a terrible scream, and it was the only time Jay had ever fallen out of his crib. And all day at the studio, I kept phoning the house and asking the housekeeper about Jay.

"I was in a daze...went to the wrong studio. Then, when I finally found my way to the dress rehearsal...the whole show went out of my head, and I could not think of my lines. But I assured them I'd be alright (the show was then live), and I managed during the telecast."

Among the many graduates of "Love of Life" are : Peter Falk, Marsha Mason, Bert Convy, Warren Beatty, Nancy Marchand and Paul Michael Glaser.

Easter Observed

In observance of Easter, the ABC News religious-cultural series, "Directions," takes its cameras to Florence, Italy, to present a one-hour special program, "The Renaissance and the Resurrection," with author-historian Luigi Barzini.

The program tells the story of the Renaissance and then through the art and music of the Renaissance, celebrates Easter. It will air Easter Sunday, March 26, 12-noon to 1 p.m.

Barzini, whose books include "The Italians" and "Oh America," leads viewers on a journey through Florence, the once independent city-state where the Renaissance flowered. He provides insights into the philosophy and history of the time from the 14th to the 16th century for this "bursting forth of man's artistic achievement."

"And to Christians" explains Barzini, "through this new birth of beauty is revealed the magnificance of God."

Throughout the one-hour special there is music of the Renaissance performed on authentic instruments of the era.

"The Renaissance and the Ressurection" looks at the works of 35 leading artists of the time in cathedrals, museums, palaces, monasteries and gardens in the city. The program also focuses on the Palazzo Vecchio, home of the Medici family which ruled Florence for three centuries.

"Credit for the scope, ingenuity and innovation of the Renaissance is due mainly to the Medici," Barzini comments.

Award-winning producer Ernest Pendrell is the writer-director of the special as well as the producer.

FOLLOWING IN HITCHCOCK'S FOOTSTEPS

Garry Marshall, creator and executive producer of "Legs," a program development project for TV, follows in the footsteps of Alfred Hitchcock and appears in a scene of his production set in a seedy nightclub. Hitchcock appears briefly in all of his productions.

Marilyn Beck Landed On Her Feet This Time

"I've had this uncanny way of stumbling through life, tripping over my shoe laces, plunging into endeavors, only to later find out that they had absolutely no chance of ever succeeding," says the very candid hostess of an upcoming Oscar special. What makes this revelation so surprising is that it's coming from the mouth of one of Hollywood's most successful columnists — Marilyn Beck, to whom success would seem to be a middle name.

"Marilyn Beck's Second Annual Hollywood Out-Takes," airing Sunday, March 26, 10 to 11 p.m. on NBC-TV, is her latest stumble. But this time she's landed on her feet, because the special will reveal behind-the-scenes movie out-takes, this year from 22 motion pictures including 12 films with 46 Oscar nominations.

Veteran entertainer George Burns, star of the movie hit "Oh, God," will co-host.

Marilyn Beck, Hollywood columnist for The New York Times Special Features Syndicate, created the special; last season's edition was the most-watched program in its time period, with a 35 share, according to the Neilsen Television Index. She and Burns will be on camera to share anecdotes, comments and human interest stories bridging the various out-takes.

"If I would have thought this thing through," explained Ms. Beck, "I would have realized that it would be difficult to convince the Hollywood community to show out-takes on television. The insane amount of work and effort just to get producers to think about letting us use out-takes from their films was incredible. In the final analysis," she concluded, "it must have been my reputation that allowed us to achieve what we did last year."

FILM FUN — Marilyn Beck and co-host George Burns look at a reel of motion picture film, part of the never-before-screened out-takes from pictures nominated for Academy Awards, which will be included in "Marilyn Beck's Second Annual Hollywood Out-Takes," to be presented on Sunday, March 26 (10-11 p.m.) on NBC-TV.

Memorable Radio Reports Recalled

"This is London."

No one of an age to remember can ever forget those words dramatically intoned by Edward R. Murrow as he opened one of his graphic accounts of the Battle of Britain on the CBS Radio Network.

The lanky Murrow, whose gaunt, brooding face and ever-present trenchcoat made him the virtual movie stereo type of what a foreign correspondent should be, was truly representative of radio in its finest hour in World War II.

He and his fellow CBS News war correspondents — William L. Shirer, Eric Sevareid, Larry Le Sueur, Cecil Brown, Charles Collingwood, Richard C. Hottelet and others, who wrote such an important chapter in broadcasting history — will be remembered with pride on the first program of "CBS: On The Air," Sunday, March 26, 9 to 11 p.m., on CBS-TV.

Walter Cronkite turns back the pages of time to recall such moments as Murrow, standing silhouetted against a murky London sky, reporting another German air raid:

"I'm standing again tonight on a rooftop looking out over London, feeling rather large and lonesome." (He was an exposed target.)

Murrow and his CBS New comrades had received their baptism of fire for the conflagration that was to come in Europe.

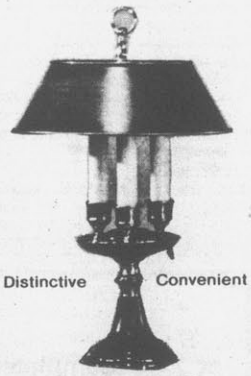

MOTHERHOOD FOR LISA-NANCY

Lisa Wilkinson and Nancy Grant are having babies. Lisa, who portrays Nancy on "All My Children" is happily married to actor John Danelle, who plays Nancy's newly married ex-husband on the same daytime drama. Even though he's married to someone else, John, in his role as Frank, is responsible for Nancy's baby too.

Agnes Nixon, originator and head writer of the highly rated serial, didn't write the script to coincide with Lisa's pregnancy; it happened right after the script was put into production.

"ALL IN THE FAMILY" TO RETURN

"All in the Family," starring Carroll O'Connor and Jean Stapleton, will return in the fall for its ninth season on CBS-TV.

"I am happy that negotiations to keep 'All in the Family' on the air have been successfully completed," Robert A. Daly, President, CBS Entertainment, said. "It's good to know that this innovative and popular series will be on our 1978-79 schedule."

"All in the Family" opened in mid-season on Tuesday, Jan. 12, 1971, moved that fall to Saturday nights and became the nation's most popular television series. Now seen on Sundays, it has continued at or near the top of the ratings.

Arthur Godfrey Reminisces

Arthur Godfrey, whose memorable on-camera demonstrations of physical fitness occupy a unique niche in television annals, continues to practice what he preaches.

To tape a portion of "CBS: On The Air," on which he calls attention to Monday programming, to be presented March 27 (10-11 p.m.), Godfrey flew his own airplane from its Teterboro, N.J., home base to the West Coast in some 13 hours.

Godfrey, whose association with CBS extends back 33 years to the debut of "Arthur Godfrey Time," on the CBS Radio Network, dismisses his cross-country aerial junket as nothing special. It may not be for a pilot with 17,000 hours in his log book who possesses an ATR (Air Transport Rating) and once made the 12,000-mile roundtrip flight from Point Barrow, Alaska, in 62 hours. But, once again, it shows the Old Redhead's positive position on participation.

Some of his more spectacular television stunts will appear in film clips when he co-hosts one night of the gala special, with Mary Tyler Moore, George Burns, Lucille Ball and Beatrice Arthur. For instance, his appearance on a Western bronc in the Cheyenne Rodeo, his mid-air suspension from a circus trapeze, and his surprising skill on ice skates.

Godfrey has strong motivation for his preoccupation with physical activity on his television shows.

"I wanted to get America off its duff," he laughs. "I think spectator sports have been vastly overemphasized. And I just tried to demonstrate the great joy of participation."

"If a banged-up guy like me," he continued, referring to an old accident that resulted in hip surgery, "could do these things, it showed that anyone could."

On other television occasions, he swam in the surf at Miami Beach, chopped and rolled logs in a lumber camp, and performed as ringmaster and rode his palomino "Goldie" in a dressage exhibition in the Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey Circus.

Godfrey, who ranks as one of the nation's earliest environmentalists, demonstrates his concern for ecology as a member of numerous groups.

"My interests in farming and fishing alerted me to the deterioration of the environment a long time ago," he explains.

Arthur Godfrey, entertainer, is also Arthur Godfrey, concerned citizen.

A More Mellow Fellow

To say that crisis and controversy have been prominent forces in the career of Andre Previn would be putting it mildly.

He's been the center of unwanted attention more often than not, with frequent interest from the gossip columns, a fiery relationship with the Houston Symphony and the conspicuous courtship of actress Mia Farrow, now his wife of eight years.

But Previn seems to be mellowing and interest in him these days seems to be focused on his brilliant talent as a classical pianist and conductor, rather than on his real or imagined exploits.

Previn is now in his second year as music director of the Pittsburgh Symphony orchestra. His original three-year contract was torn up last month and replaced with one that commits him to Pittsburgh for the next five years.

His popular series, "Previn and the Pittsburgh," returns Monday, March 27, 9 to 10 p.m., on PBS, with eight new shows.

Previn started earning his living with music at the age of 13, playing electric organ in a Los Angeles department store for two hours after school. From there he graduated to playing the piano in a movie theatre which re-ran silent films.

"I got fired for playing Tiger Rag during a scene of the Crucifixion," he says with a grin, adding hastily, "it was quite accidental — the scenes changed so quickly that it was easy to get left behind."

At 16, he made an album of jazz piano music which, to his and the record company's amazement, sold 200,000 copies almost overnight.

"I'd rather run a mile than listen to it now," he says.

By the time he was 18 he stood baton in hand before the MGM Orchestra as a full-fledged professional writer of film music. In his career as a film composer, Previn was nominated for 14 Academy Awards, winning Oscars four times.

This was the turning point. It led during the 1950s to the serious study of conducting and ultimately to his current career.

At this writing, Previn is living in a bachelor flat in Pittsburgh, and Mia and their children are in Colorado where she is filming a movie.

An 'Eye-Opener'

Linda Purl has spent most of her acting career portraying wide-eyed innocents. Her most recent role, however, was a markedly different eye-opener for Linda.

Miss Purl stars as a teenage runaway drawn into a life of prostitution in "Little Ladies of the Night," airing as "The ABC Monday Night Movie" March 27, 9 to 11 p.m., on ABC-TV. For the actress and her co-stars, the film was an emotional experience they will not soon forget.

"Before I made this picture I always thought that runaways could find somewhere to go and someone to take care of them" Linda said. "But all of us in the film discovered that it isn't so. Very few of them have anywhere to go and the things they have to do to stay alive are absolutely appalling.

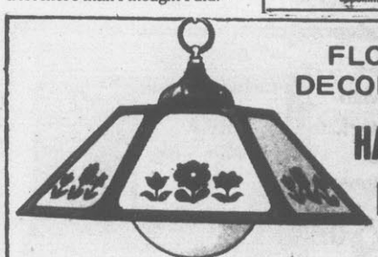

"Both boys and girls have to sell dope, mug people or turn to prostitution to support themselves," Miss Purl indicated. "We had some police working with us on the picture and they estimated that only one percent of all runaways can be helped by the authorities. The rest are open for any degenerate who can offer them a meal and a bed to sleep in.

"It all seemed so unbelievable to all of us until we actually went out on the streets to film. There they were. Dozens of young kids just milling around looking for action. They watched us closely as we filmed and you could see that they were identifying with what we were doing. It was the most shocking experience I've ever had as an actress."

The last year has been good to Linda Purl. In addition to "Little Ladies of the Night," she has had starring roles in "Eleanor and Franklin'" "Young Pioneers" and "The Young Babymakers." She doesn't take things for granted as much anymore.

"I realized that thanks to my family life I didn't have to run away. I've grown to appreciate my family more after 'Little Ladies of the Night.' I owe them a lot more than I thought I did."

NBC Examines Life Inside CIA

"Spying for Uncle Sam," a unique "NBC Reports" program examining life inside the Central Intelligence Agency's clandestine service, will air Tuesday, March 28, 10 to 11 p.m., on NBC-TV.

The program will trace the personal history of an idealistic young American who joined the CIA and operated as an undercover agent for 10 years in Latin America, the United States and Europe.

The report is the story of a life of trickery, deceit and manipulation, which are often the tools of modern espionage. It is the personal story of an American Spy and his wife, Caleb and Claudia Bach, who have had second thoughts about their participation in the CIA's secret work.

Today Bach is an artist and teacher at a small private school in the Rocky Mountains, where his wife is also on the faculty. The couple's final break with the CIA ended what had become a personal nightmare of trying to reconcile their personal sense of morality and decency with the life style of a spy.

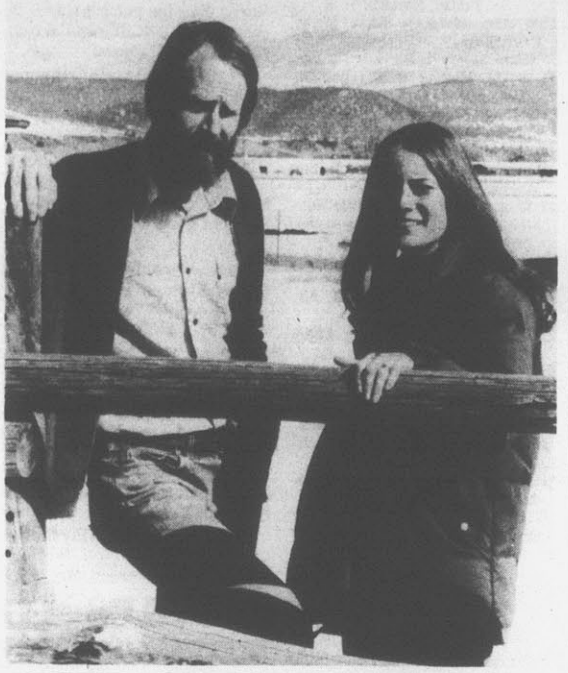

"In all the things that have been said and written about the CIA, the personal side of the equation has been neglected," says Nigel Ryan, Vice President, NBC-TV. "The public does not have an understanding of the high personal cost that some of America's spies pay during a career in modern espionage.

"You take the all-American boy with a sense of American moral values and put him in a position where often he must act contrary to those values and you can have a problem. This report explores that dilemma."

During Bach's years as a spy (what the CIA calls a case officer), he was assigned to trouble spots in Latin America and Europe.

In 1973, Bach began to have second thoughts about the morality of his work as a spy, and upon his return to the United States from Mexico he resigned from the CIA. While trying to establish a new life, he continued to do part-time work for the agency, scouting potential agents among foreign students in universities.

Unable to adjust to life on the "outside," he rejoined the service full time in December, 1974, and was sent to Lisbon where he worked under cover. Soon the moral contradictions in his life were too great to bear, and he resigned from the CIA in May, 1975.

NEW LIFE — Former CIA spy Caleb Bach and his wife, Claudia, enjoy the air outside their home in the Rocky Mountains. The covert activities of Bach and others is the subject of the unique "NBC Reports" special program "Spying for Uncle Sam," to be presented Tuesday, March 28 (10-11 p.m.) on NBC-TV.

Alda Didn't Ad-Lib

When Phil Silvers came by CBS Television City in Hollywood last December to tape his guest-starring appearance with host Alan Alda on the Tuesday segment of "CBS: On The Air" (10-11 p.m.), it was not the first time the two had teamed up.

Alda's first professional job, in fact, was as an extra on "The Phil Silvers Show" — popularly known as "Sgt. Bilko" — in the '50s. But even that was not the first time they had worked together.

Years ago, when Silvers worked with Alda's father, actor Robert Alda, in burlesque, the whole Alda family toured the circuit. Silvers used to get a kick out of carrying baby Alan on stage, sometimes as a gag for the benefit of the other performers, sometimes as part of the sketch.

"It was my first stage experience," Alan quipped. "I was a prop."

Silvers, wearing the horn-rimmed glasses which have always been his trademark, remarked, "What a trouper you were, Alan. Such a good baby. I had my best suit on and you didn't ad-lib all over me."

After taping an introduction to a segment of "The Phil Silvers Show," which, after its September 1955 premiere, toppled Milton Berle from the top spot in the ratings, where he'd been for eight years, Silvers recalled some other actors who got some of their first jobs on his show.

"Dick Van Dyke, Pat Hingle, Bill Dana, Dina Merrill — now, she played an efficiency expert. She's a wealthy lady, you know. When we cast her, she was on her yacht, off the isle of Majorca. She chartered a plane to fly in for two days' work.

And take George Kennedy — please. No, seriously, he was our technical advisor, the one who told us when our medals were pinned on upside down. Captain Kennedy. He'd been in the Army for something like 15 years. I figure I'll give the kid a break.

KAPLAN IN "ALICE"

Marvin Kaplan has been signed by producers Bob Carroll Jr. and Madelyn Davis to a recurring role in CBS-TV's "Alice" series.

STOCKARD CHANNING SIGNED

Stockard Channing, who recently signed an exclusive TV contract with CBS-TV, will star in the tentatively titled "Silent Danger," based on the life of Kitty O'Neil, who overcame deafness to become a Hollywood stuntwoman.

'The Wizard Of Oz' Returns

"The Wizard of Oz," the classic motion picture which once propelled a relatively unknown teen-ager named Judy Garland "over the rainbow" and down a yellow brick road to stardom and has since reached landmark status in film history, will be rebroadcast Sunday, March 26, 7 to 9 p.m., on CBS-TV.

The famed and continually popular MGM masterpiece, which also stars Ray Bolger, Jack Haley and Bert Lahr, is as well received today as it was when it opened in August 1939, when it was hailed as "A delightful piece of wonder-working which had the youngsters' eyes shining and brought a quietly amused gleam to the wiser ones of the oldsters."

The musical fantasy about the young girl from Kansas who, with her dog, Toto, takes a cyclonic trip into the land of Oz and finds herself off on a yellow brick road paved with adventure, will have among its viewers a whole new audience of children, many of them with parents who had not even been born in 1939.

In the film, Miss Garland, as the transplanted Dorothy, is joined in her travels by the elastic-legged Bolger, as the dancing Scarecrow in search of brains; Haley, as the armor-plated Tin Woodsman who wants a heart; and Lahr, as the Cowardly Lion who is afraid of a lamb and is trying to shake the timidity of his artistically curled mane.

The principals travel through Oz, among Munchkins, Flying Monkeys and witch-bearing balloons, to the accompaniment of a memorable Academy Award-winning score, with lyrics by E.Y. "Yip" Harburg and music by Harold Arlen. Among the songs which emerged from that collaboration was the Oscar-winning song "Somewhere Over the Rainbow," which remained closely identified with Miss Garland over the years.

Supporting the four stars in the film is an equally distinguished set of players including Frank Morgan as the "Wiz of a Wizard," Billie Burke as Glinda the Good Witch, Margaret as Miss Gulch and the Wicked Witch, Charley Grapewin as Uncle Henry, Clara Blandick as Aunt Em, and The Singer Midgets as the Munchkins.

The film was first broadcast on network television in 1956 on CBS-TV. It became an almost annual television event during the next 20 years — on CBS until 1967 and then on NBC through 1975. In '75, CBS acquired the entertainment masterpiece for presentation annually, beginning on March 14, 1976.

'The Sunshine Boys' Airs

"A couple of shining hours. Walter Matthau and George Burns give the performances of their lives.." 'Kathleen Carroll, New York Daily News'

"...filled with the loving humor that links all people, all ages, all seasons." 'Rex Reed'

"A classic screen comedy." 'Judith Crist, Saturday Review'

"...the casting of Burns with Matthau was a brilliant move." 'Vincent Canby, The New York Times'

Oscar winner Walter Matthau ("The Fortune Cookie," 1966) and George Burns, in his Academy Award-winning performance, star as a vaudeville team coaxed out of retirement for one final performance, in "The Sunshine Boys," the comedy based on Neil Simon's Broadway hit, to be colorcast as the "NBC Late Night Movie" Sunday, March 26, at 11:30 p.m., on NBC-TV.

Matthau portrays Willy Clark, an irascible comic whose professional respect for his partner, Al Lewis, is marred by mutual personal animosity.

When Ben Clark, a theatrical agent who happens to be Willy's nephew, decides to pair the two in a reunion, he finds producers wary and the two partners adamantly opposed to the idea.

Matthau and Burns, the latter making his return to the screen after a 36-year absence, couldn't be funnier as they go through their paces. Despite a difference of almost 25 years in age, the stars work extremely well together in a tour de farce, with Richard Benjamin equally important and equally good as the third star.

"The Sunshine Boys" was filmed in New York City, New Jersey and in the MGM Studios, using familiar places and, for the first time, the famed Friar's Club.

Lee Meredith repeats her stage role as the buxom nurse, and Phyllis Diller and Steve Allen make guest-star appearances.

New Drama Premieres

Quiller finds there is more than coincidence to the death of a fellow intelligence agent and the killing of a woman by a hit-and-run driver in the same district of Munich in "Quiller: Night of the Father," a new drama to be seen as "The ABC Tuesday Movie of the Week" March 28, at 11:30 p.m., on ABC-TV.

The adventure was written by Adam Hall, the novelist whose 'Quiller' character was created in his stories and was seen in the film, "The Quiller Memorandum."

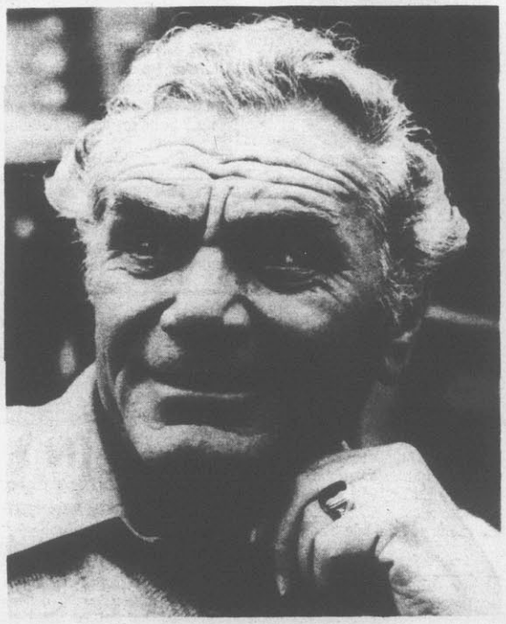

Local police insist that the woman's death was not murder but they turn over to Quiller a letter found in her purse, a letter presumably from her husband, a pilot missing since 1948. The letter leads Quiller to a case of blackmail, murder, double identity, and an underground right wing conspiracy to capture the German government.

Borgnine Stars In 'Event'

Oscar winner Ernest Borgnine (Best Actor, "Marty," 1955), Michael Shannon and John Amos star in "The Cops and Robin," a World Premiere drama and program development project on NBC-TV's "The Big Event," Tuesday, March 28, 8 to 10 p.m., on NBC-TV.

Carol Lynley, Natasha Ryan and Elizabeth Farley guest-star. Borgnine stars as Joe Cleaver, whose partner, Loren, was killed by gangster Dutton (Terry Kizer). In order to persuade Loren's widow, Marge (Ms. Farley), to testify against Dutton, Cleaver and his new partner, John Haven (Shannon) — a robot — promise to protect Marge's 5-year-old daughter, Robin (Ryan).

When Dutton's men, Richard and Tyler (James York and Gene Rutherford), try to kidnap Robin, they don't realize that Haven is a robot programmed by Dr. Alice Alcott (Ms. Lynley) to be the perfect cop.

ON THE TEAM — Academy Award winner Ernest Borgnine stars as a police officer teamed with a robot, and, together, they attempt to solve the case involving the slaying of his former partner in "The Cops and Robin," an NBC World Premiere drama and program development project to be colorcast on "The Big Event," Tuesday, March 28 (8-10 p.m.) on NBC-TV.

'Great Performances' Features 'The Consul'

Cicely Tyson, one of many distinquished performers set to appear on "CBS: On The Air," and who participates in the Wednesday portion (10-11 p.m.) of the celebration, was overcome with nostalgia when she read the script devised for her participation.

Miss Tyson, who holds two Emmys for her superb performance in "The Autobiography of Miss Jane Pittman," was asked to do the narration to accompany film clips from "Medical Center," one of the long-running fixtures on the Network.

Miss Tyson recalled: "I joined college football superstar O.J. Simpson, though it was before he had gained professional status, when he was the guest star on the first episode of the hospital series.

"There was a lot of excitement on the set back in 1969. My role as the wife of O.J., who played an athlete suffering with a crippling disease, proved especially meaningful to my career. I got favorable feedback from several producers and it led to an important casting on 'Gunsmoke,' for which I won an NAACP award.

"You can imagine my delight when I read this script and discovered the 'Medical Center' reference. It brought back many pleasant memories, in particular, being selected for the show. I had come from New York to appear on 'The Courtship of Eddie's Father,' a new series also being done at MGM. As I was about to return, the producer urged me to see Frank Glicksman, the executive producer of a new medical series.

"Mr. Glicksman had someone in mind for the part, but my work on 'The Courtship of Eddie's Father' impressed him and good fortune came my way."

"Medical Center" not only marked a major milestone for Miss Tyson, but it presaged the pro football and acting careers of Simpson, who became the NFL's single-season rushing record-holder with the Buffalo Bills and a successful actor on television and in motion pictures.

Miss Tyson, who earlier appeared as a regular with George C. Scott, in "East Side-West Side," on the Network, went on to an Academy Award nomination for "Sounder," and ultimately, to her highest honor with "The Autobiography of Miss Jane Pittman," which carried off nine Emmys in 1974.

HOLD THAT STRIKE

Milton Berle remained to entertain the studio audience following the taping of "A Tribute to 'Mr. Television' Milton Berle," to be telecast this week.

Celebration Provides Nostalgia For Tyson

Gian-Carlo Menotti's Pulitzer Prize-winning opera "The Consul," videotaped in performance at the Spoleto Festival, U.S.A., in Charleston, S.C., will be shown on "Great Performances" Wednesday, March 29, 9 to 11 p.m., on PBS.

Menotti's dramatic musical, written and performed in English, opened on Broadway in 1950. It captured the essence of the great tragedy of the 20th century — the individual overshadowed by the forbidding forces of an anonymous machine-age bureaucracy. It illuminates the tragedy of the geographically displaced person which became such a visible part of the 20th century life.

"The Consul" tells the story of Magda Sorel (Marvalee Cariaga) who applies for a visa to join her resistance-leader husband (David Clatworthy). He has been hounded out of his own unnamed country by the secret police. The consul, himself, is never seen — it is his impersonal secretary (played by Sandra Walker) who forever chants the bored refrain:

"Your name is a number,
Your story's a case,
You need a request
Your hopes will be filed.
Come back next week"

Caught between bureaucratic red tape and the secret police, the frantic Magda eventually kills himself out of frustration and despair.

When "The Consul" opened on Broadway it was an instant success and, as one of the first full length operas ever to appear on Broadway, it was hailed as a theatrical milestone. One reviewer called it "unpretentious and emotionally gripping...written with the heart as well as the head." Howard Taubman, writing for the New York Times, said it was proof that opera "written in contemporary terms could radiate passion and exaltation even on a hard-boiled doubting thoroughfare." The production won the New York Drama Critics Circle Award as the Best Broadway Musical of 1949-1950, and earned Menotti a Pulitzer Prize.

Menotti directed the original Broadway production, and staged the "Great Performances" presentation, which was a central event at the Spoleto Festival, U.S.A., in June 1977.

Left to right, Dick Van Dyke, Cicely Tyson, Buddy Ebsen (standing) and Danny Kaye are co-hosts on "CBS: On The Air," when they join in celebrating 50 years of CBS broadcasting, Wednesday, March 29 (10-11 p.m.).

Milgrew Portrays Teenager

Kate Mulgrew stars as a lonely teenager who finds a strange and intriguing friend in a television image from another dimension in "Alien Lover," the "ABC Mystery of the Week," airing Wednesday, March 29, at 12:30 a.m. on ABC-TV.

During her first night at the Ballard house, Susan hears her name called by a distant voice which she traces to the attic where the Ballard's son, Jude, keeps his electronic equipment, including a TV set.

The TV receiver is the source of the mysterious voice, projected on the screen by a handsome young man who calls himself Marc. He tells Susan he exists in a different dimension but will be available whenever she needs him. Her belief in Marc involves Susan in the bizarre fate of two members of the Ballard household.

'Rosey' Tangles With Honda Car

Roosevelt Grier, the 6-foot-6, 250-pound former All-Pro star of the Los Angeles Rams, guest stars in the "Moving Violation" episode of "CHiPs," to be telecast Thursday, March 30, 8 to 9 p.m., on NBC-TV. The series stars Larry Wilcox (Jon) and Erik Estrada (Ponch) as two young California Highway Patrol motorcycle officers.

Grier, who portrays the "Honda Killer" in the segment, literally dismantles a small Honda sports car.

Here is a blow-by-blow account of the action:

In the scene, Grier is enraged because his car has blown an engine and he's been stopped for speeding by Jon and Ponch. As Grier, wide-eyed and angry, gets out of the car, he throws the door open. It snaps off its hinges and falls to the ground. He kicks the front fender, leaving a huge dent.

Then, with an arm that looks like it's been pumping iron for 10 years, Grier snaps off the rear-view mirror, and kicks out the headlights and tail-lights.

Grier now is livid. He reaches inside the car and pulls out the steering wheel, then punches out the back side windows. In one mighty flurry and scream, the front windshield is no more. He grabs the radio antennae and snaps it like a pencil.

The crazed driver continues snarling and, with the ease of Atlas, tears out the front seat, holds it high above his head a la "King Kong," and hurls it over the car onto the roadway.

Jon and Ponch, breathing a sigh of relief now that the maniac has exhausted all energies, proceed to issue a citation.

"The Honda Killer" signs the ticket and quietly walks past the wreckage down the shoulder of the freeway.

...All in a day's work for Rosey Grier, who spent 11 years playing pro football, including six seasons with the Rams as a member of the legendary "Fearsome Foursome."

Since his playing days, Grier has segued into numerous television series and motion picture starring roles. He's appeared in "Kojak," "Movin' On," "The Bob Hope Show," "Steve Allen Show" and "Daniel Boone."

In addition to making numerous speaking appearances on high school and college campuses around the country, Grier finds time to entertain as a singer as well as write and compose many songs.

Grandma Returns To Walton Home

Ellen Corby, who was forced to give up her regular appearances on "The Waltons' as a result of illness in November 1976, returns to her multi-Emmy Award-winning role as Grandma Walton on the episode of the series to be presented Thursday, March 30, 8 to 9 p.m., on CBS-TV.

In the episode, Grandma arrives back at the Walton home after having been hospitalized by a stroke. As a result of the illness, Grandma is still a victim of aphasia, or speech difficulty, and goes through a trying adjustment period with the family, including Grandpa, who is concerned that his wife is not as fiery and spirited as usual.

In addition to three Emmy Awards as Best Supporting Actress in a series for her role on "The Waltons," Miss Corby won a Golden Globe Award from the Hollywood Foreign Press Association. Her career, which spans 43 years, also includes more than 400 feature films, among them "I Remember Mama," for which she won an Oscar for her role as Trina.

During her convalescence, the actress has completed the writing of a philosophical novel entitled "Peb."

Earl Hamner, creator of "The Waltons," notes that "Miss Corby's recovery is a monument to her determination, strength and will" and "should encourage all those who face a seemingly insurmountable adversity.

"We are sure that she will continue to improve," continues Hamner, "and will appear in more and more of the episodes next season."

Pike's Peek

By Charlie Pike
TV Showtime Staff Writer

HOLLYWOOD — A lot of flak has resulted because of all the aid and attention given to residents in posh Malibu Colony during California's rain storms and high tides. Some residents who live across Pacific Coast Highway from the Colony said the volunteers and National Guardsmen who devoted hours to saving numerous beachfront homes were a little over-attentive, to the likes of Burgess Meredith, Larry Hagman and, oh yes, Linda Ronstadt. Some residents have even suggested that Gov. Jerry Brown only dispatched the National Guard to the Colony because of Linda, whom he's been known to escort socially from time-to-time. Well, at least he does have good taste, 'Charley.'

A lot of curious questions being asked as to why Suzanne Pleshette is a regular patient of one Dr. Mark Saiginor in Beverly Hills, especially since most of the good doctor's patients go to him for injections to lose weight. Right, Suzanne is not known for having any weight problem.

Kate Jackson is obviously serious about her singing endeavors. During the last week of filming "Charlie's Angels" for the current season, she took a sudden hour off to chat with Cher Allman via the phone. They exchanged a lot of girl-talk, and some about music, while everyone else on the set waited patiently.

Glad to report that 'Young and Restless' star Jaime Lynne Bauer is doing excellent after the delivery of her first child, a son. Damien Michael weighed in at an even six pounds at Phoenix General Hospital, and like his proud mother and daddy, Dr. Richard Goldstein, infant Damien is fine.

Georganne LaPiere, who spent some 18 months on daytime's "General Hospital" perfecting her talent as an actress, has just completed the feature film, "Jennifer," and next stars in "The Trouble With Hello." She'll also co-star with her sister, Cher, in an ABC Movie of the Week, portraying Cher's sister, what else.

Jon Peters, Barbra Streisand's mate, was arrested when he passed through police barricades to get to his and Barbra's hillside home during the worst of the rain storm three weeks ago. Jon wanted to go get La Streisand out of the home threatened by rain and mud slides, but ended up in jail instead, where the singer-actress had to post $500 bail.

Newest fashion craze being made popular by Hollywood's most beautiful people is kimonos — used one which can be purchased at one used-clothing store from $4 to $45. Frequent customers include Bob Dylan, Dustin Hoffman, Sly Stallone and Julie Christie.

A Lady And A Lamb

"Denise DuBarry is my real name," says Denise, explaining that her father, an exporter, is Adrian Pierre DuBarry.

Denise plays Samantha Greene, one of the quartet of beautiful nurses known as Pappy's lambs on NBC-TV's "Black Sheep Squadron."

Is she a descendant of Madame DuBarry, the notorious French courtesan?

"No," she answers, "but I'm always being teased about it. People are always telling me 'DuBarry was a lady.' I tell them DuBarry IS a lady.

Denise says she's convinced she can't please everyone. Even those who believe her name is real tell her it sounds phony and that she should change it.

She says she frequently considered changing her name — not DuBarry ("I love that"), but Denise.

Eve's Fans Miss 'Miss Brooks'

"Our Miss Brooks" hasn't been on television for 20 years, but Eve Arden is still getting rave notices. From fans.

"You know, after all these years, I can hardly walk down the street without someone stopping me to say hello," Miss Arden said, recently. She was in her dressing room following the taping of the Friday segment of "CBS: On The Air" with her co-hosts, Bert Convy, Richard Crenna, Bonnie Franklin, Linda Lavin and Jim Nabors.

"We were flying back from San Francisco not long ago," she said, referring to Brooks West, her actor-husband of 26 years. "As we're landing, one of the stewardesses was talking on the intercom. I was only lending half an ear when, to my utter surprise, she finished by saying... 'and thank you for flying with us, Our Miss Brooks.'"

Eve Arden's voice has a smooth modulation to it, like folds of satin. In her distinctive, measured tempo, words like "stewardesses" and "comfortable" receive all the enunciated syllables to which they are entitled.

"Another time, some years back," she continued, "we took our first trip to Europe, on the Queen Mary, and the captain played 'Our Miss Brooks' over the ship's radio. Wasn't that nice?"

Miss Arden appears frequently on stage in such plays as "Butterflies Are Free," "Auntie Mame," "Hello, Dolly," and "Absurd Person Singular." She has made almost 60 films, including "Stage Door," "Cover Girl," "Mildred Pierce," "Anatomy of a Murder," and the forthcoming musical, "Grease."

When asked why, she launches into praise of the writers and co-stars of the series. However, Richard Crenna, who for eight years played English teacher Connie Brooks' favorite student, Walter Denton, gives credit where it is due.

"All that warmth exuded on the screen as Connie Brooks or whomever — that's the real Eve Arden," said Crenna. "People ask me, is she always that funny? My response is no, she's always that real."

Popular Daytime Actor Copes With Separation

John McCook doesn't hesitate to admit it — it's painful being alone in his Beverly Hills home without his wife and son. It's like a constant echo when all he hears is his own voice or his own music when he sits at the piano in the family room, playing more to occupy his time than to perfect a tune. It's a chore to feed the three dogs and himself, and a bit embarassing when he talks to them as if they'll understand him and respond to him.

But it's an existance John has had to grow accustomed to since he was cast as Lance Prentiss on CBS-TV's daytime series, "The Young and the Restless." His contract prevents him from traveling with his wife, Juliet Prowse, and their son, Seth, who seem to be in some far away city more often than they are at home because of Juliet's own professional commitment. Until the Lance Prentiss role entered John's life he traveled with his family. In fact, being part of Juliet's nightclub act is how they met and fell in love, and they've worked together ever since.

"This matter of being apart is new for us," he said. "For the last five or six years we've been together. I was in Juliet's act; we were constantly together, working and playing, and we were very happy about that.

"But this choice of mine to come home and recommit myself to my acting was greeted with great enthusiasm by Juliet, and the only possible negative thing about it is the fact that we aren't together very much. But," he exclaims, "we've always been aware of that possibility. That's our business, and you can't ignore the fact that being apart is largely responsible for the growing percentage of the unsuccessful marriages in our business.

"But I cope," he says with a grin.

John likes to cook and enjoys trying out new recipes when he's home alone, and he also works out at a nearby gym.

"But what I've found to do when Juliet and Seth are away that's really a good thing is my music. I've just gotten back into piano, really practicing, which used to be a nasty word when I was a kid. Now I'm finding that it makes me feel good to have spent an hour on an 18 bar phrase of something."

Yes, John does get lonely. But he's found ways to fill up his idle time, thereby helping the days to go by until the happy noises of his family fill their home.

ROSEMONT TO PRODUCE "SHOGUN"

Norman Rosemont, one of television's most distinguished producers, will produce "Shogun," a 15-hour miniseries, based on James Clavell's best-selling novel, which will be presented on NBC-TV.

"Shogun," a drama of passion and intrigue set against the conflict of East meeting West in 17th Century Japan, will be produced over a two-year period at international locations starting later this year. The drama will feature 40 characters.

Viewer To Win $1,000,000

A chance to win $1,000,000 on one swing of the club by golf superstar Arnold Palmer will provide another dimension of excitement for viewers when the Colgate-Dinah Shore Winners Circle, the richest women's golf championship, is telecast on NBC Saturday, April 1 (5 to 6:30 p.m.), and Sunday, April 2 (4 to 6 p.m.)

Palmer, who will be one of NBC's commentators for coverage of this prestigious sports event, will drive 21 golf balls in an attempt to score a hole-in-one and thereby win $1,000,000 for some lucky viewer.

Entry forms and full details will be available in supermarkets.

Palmer will make his drives for a hole-in-one on the 180-yard, par-three 17th hole at the Mission Hills Country Club in Palm Springs, Calif., site of the $305,000 Colgate Dinah Shore Winners Circle. Palmer's attempts will be made during NBC's telecasts on Saturday and Sunday.

If Palmer does not score a hole-in-one, his nearest-to-the-pin ball will bring a lucky viewer $20,000 and a 1978 Chrysler Cordoba or one of 1,105 other prizes including cars, sailboats, color TV sets and watches.

NBC Sports, which is televising the richest event in the history of women's sports for the first time, will train its cameras on a field numbering more than 75 of the top female golfers on the pro tour.

Of the tournament's purse of $240,000, $36,000 will be awarded to the winner. There also will be bonus prizes of $55,000 value, including two automobiles and pro-am cash of $10,000, and a player can win $5,000 for any hole-in-one made during the course of the tournament.

In addition to the final two days of competition on Saturday and Sunday, NBC will show some of the earlier celebrity pro-am competition during the weekend telecasts.

The field is in keeping with the prizes offered. Kathy Whitworth, the defending champion, and 1976 titlist Judy Rankin will try to earn another Dinah Shore championship.

Whitworth and Rankin will be joined by JoAnne Carner, the 1978 Colgate Triple Crown Match Play champion; Jane Blalock, winner of the first Winners Circle in 1972 and a two-time Colgate Triple Crown champ; and such top-ranked celebrities of international women's golf as Jan Stephenson, Sandra Palmer, Pat Bradley, Sandra Post, Debbie Austin, Hollis Stacy and the promising newcomer, Nancy Lopez.

Chair Provides Good View

A young boy and his grandmother, fearing an attack by renegades, escape by riding a makeshift raft down a dangerous river to safety in "Trouble River," a two-part "ABC Children's Novel for Television" presentation on the "ABC Weekend Specials" series, Saturday, April 1, and Saturday, April 8, from 12-noon to 12:30 p.m.

"Trouble River," an adventure story with comedic overtones set in the early days of the Pacific Northwest, is based on a story by the Newberry Award-winning author Betsy Byars.

"This is another exciting example of how quality drama can be successfully produced for our young Saturday audience," said Squire D. Rushnell, Vice President, Children's Programs, ABC Entertainment. "This is the sort of programming the Network has committed itself to bring to children through a series of weekend specials developed from the works of such authors as Betsy Byars, O. Henry and many others."

In the story, Dewey Martin convinces his grandmother that the best way to escape the renegades is to ride the raft to the nearest settlement — 40 miles away. Grandma, finally convinced, insists on taking her old carpet bag and her rocking chair on the trip, and she faces the hazards of Trouble River sitting calmly in the chair.

Covers Bowling Action

ABC Sports' "Professional Bowlers Tour" makes its only scheduled stop in the Greater New York area at Garden City Bowl, Garden City, New York, for a live telecast of the finals of the $70,000 Long Island Open, Saturday, April 1, 3:30 to 5 p.m.

This is the ninth PBA national event to be held at Garden City since 1963 under the sponsorship of the Nassau Bowling Proprietors Association. The defending champion is Dick Ritger, current President of the PBA. Ritger has won 19 titles, which ranks him fourth on the all-time PBA champions list behind Earl Anthony (28) and Don Johnson and Dick Weber (26).

Chris Schenkel will report the action throughout the final rounds, supported by the expert commentary of Nelson Burton, Jr.

ROONEY TO RETIRE

After a show business career of 50 years, Mickey Rooney will retire from acting to pursue business ventures, he told Tom Snyder on NBC-TV's "Tomorrow" recently.

"I'm going to bring down the curtain," said the 57-year-old Rooney. "As soon as I finish a movie I'm working on now I'm going to devote all my time to marketing a self-study acting course I've been working on for 15 years."

Rooney received a special juvenile Oscar in 1938 and was nominated for Oscars as Best Actor for "Babes in Arms" and "The Human Comedy" and as Best Supporting Actor in "The Bold and the Brave." He was the number-one box-office attraction in this country in 1939, 1940 and 1941.

Gene Littler Wants Another Win

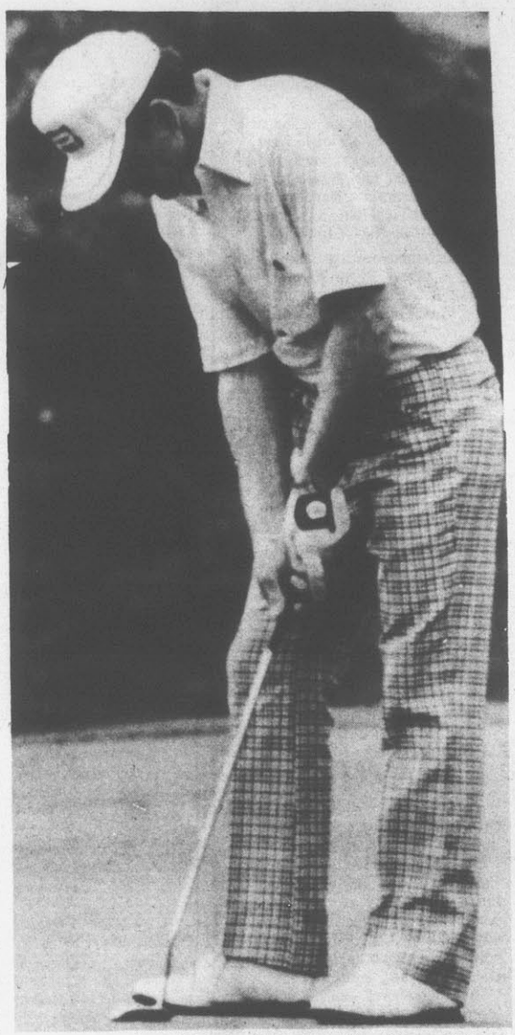

Gene Littler won the Greater Greensboro Open in 1969 and will be trying for his second win of the tournament when NBC televises th G.G.O. on Saturday, April 1, at 3:30 p.m.

Littler, nicknamed 'Gene the Machine,' joined the tour in 1954 and by 1972 had won 24 tournaments including the U.S. Open Championship.

He has set a splendid example of triumph over adversity for all sportsmen, whether they play for money or entertainment. In 1972, Gene was compelled to undergo an operation for cancer of the lymph glands and it was feared his playing days were over. Incredibly, he came back in 1973 to win the St. Louis Children's Hospital Classic. He won the Pacific Masters in 1974, and then the following year won three PGA tournaments — the Bing Crosby, the Danny Thomas Memphis, the Westchester Classic, and once again the Pacific Masters.

In mid-August of last year at Pebble Beach, California, the 47-year-old Littler was on the threshold of topping his three PGA victories won in 1975. Having already claimed the Houston Open title, he was enjoying a five-stroke lead in the PGA Championship during the final round. His picture swing failed him down the stretch, and he closed with a 76 and fell into a tie with Lanny Wadkins, who beat him on the third hole of the event's first extra-hole playoff with par four.

Still, 1977 was a fruitful year for the leather-faced gentleman from San Diego as he went home at the end of August with almost double his official earnings of the previous year. Aside from the P A, Gene was second at Tucson and made checks in 16 of 21 events to finish 17th on the money list. He was also in the top 10 in six tournaments.

Gene Littler, the 1969 Greater Greensboro Open Winner, finished the 1977 tour in 17th position on the money list. Littler would like to become the fifth golfer to have won the GGO more than once in this year's 39th playing of the event which will be televised on NBC-TV Saturday, April 1 at 3:30 p.m.

Championship Game Draws Nearer

After being crowned college basketball champions in both the Associated Press and the United Press International wire service polls, the Kentucky Wildcats must still emerge victorious in the finals of the NCAA Championship to be content and achieve the real distinction of Number One. NBC will televise the title game from Checkerboard Arena in St. Louis on Monday evening, March 27, at 9 p.m.

While most sportswriters and coaches claim the top 32 teams in the nation are not in the tournament, it is conceded that the selection committee did have an almost impossible task of picking the last eleven at-large teams. (21 teams earn berths automatically as conference champions and three others as ECAC playoff winners.)

Further complicating the situation were upsets in most of the 11 post-season league tournaments which are played to determine the automatic NCAA berths from the respective conferences. Regular-season champions or co-champions knocked off the conference meets were: Arkansas, Texas, Kansas, Florida State, North Carolina, Lafayette, Rutgers, Appalachian State, Montana, Middle Tennessee State, East Tennessee State, Fresno and San Diego State.

Arkansas, Kansas, Florida State and North Carolina still managed to gain spots as at-large teams. Unfortunately, some strong and nationally ranked independents were bypassed.

Despite the difficulties, politics and regulations that the selection committee had to work around, few will argue that the 32 team field doesn't represent a formidable group of basketball teams and an impressive gathering of talent.

From the very first round, upsets have become common place: Miami of Ohio defeating Marquette; Western Kentucky ousting Syracuse; Fullerton State surprising New Mexico; and San Francisco eliminating North Carolina.

ABC To Telecast California '200'

Live coverage of the California '200' Indianapolis-Car Race and coverage of the World Ice Dancing Championship will be presented on "ABC's Wide World of Sports," Sunday, March 26, 4:30 to 6 p.m.

The California '200' was originally scheduled to be run on Sunday, March, 5, but heavy rains that drenched California in the days preceding the race forced postponement of what was to have been the opening event of the 1978 USAC season.

The postponement would make for for a much more interesting and competitive race, however since two of the world, top drivers, A.J. Foyt and Mario Andretti, are the newest addition; to the California '200' field. Neither man would have competed on the March 5 date, since Foyt was recovering from injuries sustained in a crash during the Daytona '500,' and Andretti was competing in the South African Grand Prix. Foyt is the defending California '200' champion. The rest of the field will include Tom Sneva, Johnny Rutherford, Al and Bobby Unser, Gordon Johncock and Wally Dallenbach.

The race will provide a preview of this year's Indianapolis '500' with the drivers introducing much of their new racing equipment. The Ontario, California, Motor Speedway's two and one-half mile oval features two long straightaways, each 3,300 feet long, enabling the cars to reach speeds well in excess of 200 miles an hour on the straights.

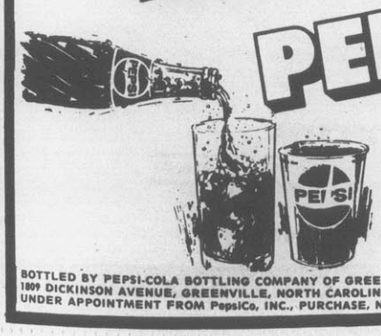

A.J. Foyt has been racing wheeled vehicles since his teens. When he was three, his father, Tony Sr., a racer himself, gave Foyt a blood-red toy racer. In his mid-teens Foyt drove motorcycles, midgets, Indy cars and stockers, on dirt, asphalt, backwoods and big tracks. He went to Lamar High School in Houston, Texas, and before he graduated, Foyt had made his professional racing debut, at Houston's Playland Park.

Amateur Boxing

ABC Sports' "United States Team vs. the World in Amateur Boxing" will present the matches between the U.S.A. boxing team and the national team of Ireland, Sunday, March 26, 3:15 to 4:15 p.m. The bouts will take place at Fort Dix in New Jersey.

This will mark the sixth in a series of 11 boxing programs climaxing ABC's coverage of the World Amateur Boxing Championships in Belgrade, Yugoslavia, in late May. Up to now, the Americans have defeated the national teams of Rumania and Yugoslavia, and lost to the Soviet Union (in Moscow) and to Cuba (in Havana).

Henry Fonda Stars

Henry Fonda stars as an aging gunfighter, who, having survived more than his share of tense encounters, hopes to retire into anonymity, but is thwarted by a cocky young drifter with other plans in "My Name Is Nobody," a western satire to be colorcast on "NBC Saturday Night at the Movies" April 1, 9 to 11 p.m., on NBC-TV. Terence Hill co-stars.

Fonda portrays Jack Beauregard, a legendary quick-draw artist with an established reputation for taking on all challengers during the height of lawlessness in the old West. Would-be opponents seek him out, even as he relaxes in a barber's chair. For years Beauregard has lived as a constant target and he is tired of it.

Determined to live out his days in peace, Beauregard sets out on a trip to the east, intending to establish a new identity far removed from his past. Then, he meets an obnoxious young drifter who identifies himself as "Nobody."

The young man, also an accomplished gunman, explains that he has been a fan of Beauregard for years and would like nothing less than to see his idol conclude his career in a blaze of glory.

Nobody arranges a confrontation between Beauregard and "the wild bunch" and when the desired results are not achieved, the young man decides to challenge Beauregard himself in a shoot-out on the docks of New Orleans.

A Reformed Second Banana

Art Carney has a battered felt hat hanging in his closet. He originally purchased the hat for $5.00 as a high schooler in the 1930's, and it's still with him as a good luck charm.

Anyone who grew up with television in the 1950's will be familiar with that hat. With an up-turned brim, it topped off a costume which consisted of baggy pants and a vest worn over a T-shirt. Inside that outfit was one of the best second bananas in the business: loveable sewer-working slob Ed Norton — Carney's creation, who still generates laughter in late night re-runs of "The Honeymooners," starring Jackie Gleason.

Carney appears with Mary Tyler Moore, Walter Cronkite, Carroll O'Connor, Carol Burnett, Tony Randall, Sherman Hensley and Isabel Sanford in a retrospective of Saturday night programming on the final two-and-a-half hour broadcast of "CBS: On The Air," April 1 8:30 to 11 p.m.

"Somehow," reminisces Carney, "I never got the feeling of being a second banana while working with Gleason. The whole cast developed into a team. Jackie was very generous. He let me go ahead full steam. He never held an actor back when he had an idea that would contribute something to the show. He let us have our say. You know, I think I'm going to have that hat bronzed someday."

There was a touch of irony in Carney's teaming with Tony Randall for this special broadcast, in which they recall some of the golden moments of the Network's Saturday night programs.

It was Carney who opened on Broadway as the meticulously fussy Felix Unger in "The Odd Couple," the role that earned Randall a five-year run in the television series and an Emmy Award.

Carney is an unregenerate Randall admirer who recalls fondly their early radio days when they worked on such popular programs as "Gangbusters," "Counterspy" and "Mr. District Attorney."

Despite his success in comedy, Carney always has regarded himself primarily as "an actor who's done an awful lot of comedy," noting, "Why I couldn't hold a nightclub audience for two minutes as a comic."

He did however run off with five Emmys for his Ed Norton characterization and won an Oscar for his starring role in his first feature film, "Harry and Tonto." And lots of critical praise for the movie "The Late Show."

Fugitives Return

A car carrying fugitives from the law jumps airily over an open swing bridge, two huge vans snap together creating a tunnel too tight for comfort, a relentless lawman pursues his prey in a helicopter and a giggling girl gradually discovers that life "on the road" is a little more dangerous and a lot less satisfying than she had hoped in "Dirty Mary Crazy Larry," to be rebroadcast as "The ABC Friday Night Movie," March 31, 9 to 11 p.m., on ABC-TV.

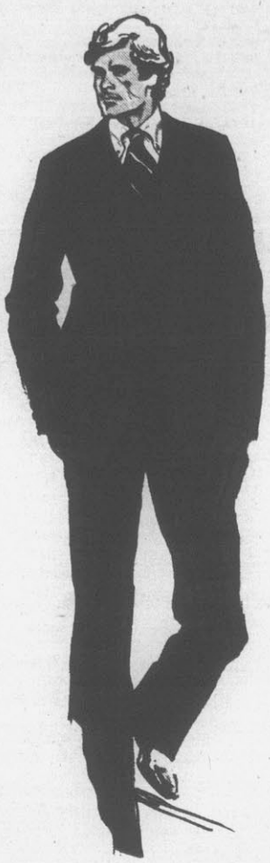

Peter Fonda stars as a speed-mad racing driver who robs a supermarket to finance his career, with Susan George as a rootless girl who insists on tagging along with him because "I don't have anything else to do." Adam Roarke is Fonda's mechanic and sometime friend, and Vic Morrow is the police officer who refuses to be outraced or outsmarted.

Larry and Deke (Fonda and Roarke) extort $150,000 from a supermarket manager (Roddy McDowall) by threatening his wife and daughter and take off with the money and a bit of baggage they hadn't bargained on — Mary Coombs (Susan George), who refuses to get out of their car.

Capt. Franklin (Vic Morrow) is even harder to get rid of; when the thieves elude his roadblocks, he goes after them in a helicopter, trying all available tricks to cut them off before they can cross the state line to freedom.

ASK THEM YOURSELF

Send the question, on a postcard, to "Ask," Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave., New York, N.Y. 10022. We'll pay $5 for published questions. Sorry, we can't answer others.

Handicapped, yes; overweight, no.

FOR ORAL ROBERTS, president, Oral Roberts University

I hear your institution does not admit handicapped or overweight students. In view of the fact the Federal Government is asking people to "hire the handicapped," how do you justify this policy for your Christian college? — L.L.D., Salina, Kans.

● Prior to June 1, 1977, some students who would have had difficulty moving about the campus were discouraged from attending. However, we are now planning the necessary changes so that all students who want to come to ORU can be considered for admission without regard to physical handicaps. Students are required to pass a phys-ed course every semester. One course requirement is that students maintain their weight within an acceptable range. Thus, if over two semesters a student has not made meaningful progress toward a medically determined weight range, that student may be required to leave the university.

FOR THE "ASK" EDITOR

What did Liz Taylor think of all those revelations in Who's Afraid of Elizabeth Taylor, the new book about her, and the report that she didn't even keep her promise to build a hospital in Africa, where she and Dick got married for the second time? — E.M., Hopewell, Va.

● Whatever Liz's reaction is, it's private. The biography is unauthorized. When Brenda Maddox planned a book on Liz and asked to meet her, the answer was an unequivocal no. So Brenda gathered material from people who've long known the actress. Friends related endless stories of her kindnesses and generosity. But since books of this kind need spice as well as sugar, Brenda contacted those with whom Liz had been professionally involved. As to the hospital in Botswana, which Liz decided to build in honor of remarrying Dick, part of the hitch could be that the couple parted not too long after they became "Mr. and Mrs."

Bob Penn/Sygma

Her hospital plans never materialized.

FOR DICK CLARK, host of American Bandstand and $20,000 Pyramid

Does running two TV shows place a strain on your marriage? — Charisse Kelly, Carson, Calif.

● No way. If you'd ask my wife, she'd probably say she sees too much of me. Kari is also my secretary, so on planes to New York where I host Pyramid, we get a lot of work done — and catch up on personal stuff. I do lead a busy life, but I manage to spend lots of time with my family. Kari I see all day at the office. And my son, Richard Jr., is there, too.

FOR JUANITA M. KREPS, Secretary of Commerce

What has happened to the fish harvest since the U.S. extended its jurisdiction to 200 miles? — I.J., Rye, N.Y.

● The news is good. We expect foreign fishermen to catch about 2.1 million metric tons of fish from U.S. waters in 1977, which is about two-thirds of the annual harvests of four or five years ago. Plans for 1978 will further reduce foreign catches to about 1.9 million metric tons. These plans also are expected to restore stocks of fish that had become depleted. U.S. fishermen see these changes as presenting new opportunities for them.

FOR BETTE MIDLER, singer-comedienne

Why do you wear such awful clothes? — O.M., Wilmington, Del.

● Are you referring in particular to that pair of bloomers I wore up around my chest instead of where it was intended? To answer your question — because I like them. Unlike that old joke about Chinese food, my clothes stay with me forever. I tend to recycle my favorite things from one show to another. Always shortening, lengthening, taking in or out.

FOR EDDIE RABBITT, country singer

Since no one could invent a name like Rabbit, I assume you were born with it. Has it ever caused you problems? — O.H.R., Bristol, Tenn.

● At school I was always getting into fights over my name (it's Irish-Gaelic). Everyone made fun of me. I eventually figured out the only way to make them stop was to come up with better jokes about their names. I did. When I got into show business I changed my name to Martin. I didn't like that, either. It sent me from obscurity into complete oblivion.

FOR THE REV. DONALD E. WILDMON, executive director, National Federation for Decency, Tupelo, Miss.

What is the purpose of your organization? — D.E.G., Wayne, N.J.

● We are an action-oriented organization promoting the Judeo-Christian ethic of decency in the media. Currently, our efforts are geared toward TV. We oppose programs featuring gratuitous sex, profanity and violence. We support clean, wholesome, constructive programs. Television programming will continue to get worse until people who care get involved.

FOR FRANKCINA GLASS, author of Marvin & Tige

It must be terrific to sell your first book for $100,000. But is there anything about your success that's not so terrific? — R.B., Greenville, Miss.

● Yes — the fact I keep getting referred to as a "modern Cinderella" and that my story is a classical one of rags to riches. Just for the record, I was not poor, and we did not live in a slum. My mom works at a poultry house and my dad is a bus driver. I also find it strange and tiresome when people who ignored me before are suddenly my friends.

PRO AND CON

Should America's Student Press Be Subject To Censorship?

PRO Rodney F. Page, school board chairman, Fairfax County, Va.

A tide of court decisions in the last decade has extended the constitutional guarantees of the Bill of Rights and due process of students. Freedom of the student press remains a vexatious and disputed area, however. Where students have established and published their own newspapers and are financially responsible, the full protection of the First Amendment seems appropriate. Many student newspapers, especially in high schools, are, in fact, published by the school system with students as working and learning journalists. In these cases, should the decisions of the student reporters or editors override contrary policies of the school system? Clearly not.

Illustration by Hal Just

CON Alan N. Sussman, lawyer and author of The Rights of Young People

The First Amendment guarantees all Americans — including students — freedom of the press. If there was any doubt, the Supreme Court recently declared that students do not "shed their constitutional rights to freedom of speech or expression at the school house gate." Freedom of the press is not an abstract right; it insures that information will flow freely among those who seek knowledge. Therefore, when school officials interfere with the free exchange of ideas, they deny students the right to read as well as the right to publish. Censorship of student newspapers not only violates the Constitution but also seriously impairs the process of education itself.

If your child is a poor reader

—see how phonics can help him

Try it at our risk— for two weeks!

See how your child can learn to read better and spell better in just a few weeks with records that teach him by phonics, at home! Mail Free Trial Coupon below.

Would you like to see your child gain as much as a full year's grade in reading in as little as six weeks' time? These are results parents have seen again and again with this simple home-tutoring course in reading.

Mrs. J. J. Webb, Napa, Cal. writes: "After sending my 10 year old son to Special Reading School at $12.50 per hour, spending $700 on this tutoring, I saw your ad and sent for The Sound Way to Easy Reading. In only 8 weeks he learned more from your course than from his Special Reading School. I am thrilled to see how well he reads."

Mrs. J. J. Webb is only one of over 200,000 parents who have turned to The Sound Way of Easy Reading for help in the frustrating problem of a child who can't read. And more than 26,000 schools use it.

Teaches with records

Don't think it's all your child's fault if he hasn't learned to read. Many of our brightest children are not able to grasp the "look-and-say" method taught in most schools today. Yet, many educators insist that at least 40% of our children must have formal training in phonics—that they will never master reading without it!

That is why so many poor readers show remarkable progress with The Sound Way to Easy Reading. It teaches reading by the phonics method (the method by which most parents learned to read years ago). Its phonograph records and charts show your child exactly what to do, so he can teach himself without any help from you.

The records drill him in the sounds of the 26 letters in the alphabet and their blends. Once he learns the 123 basic phonics sounds in this course he can read up to 85% of the words in the English language. It works for children of all ages—in the earliest grades, and even in high school.

Tested and proved

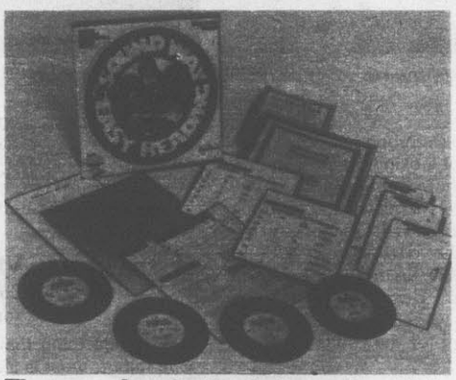

In a pilot study by university psychologists, children gained up to a full year's grade in oral reading skill after only 30 lessons with The Sound Way to Easy Reading.

A semester-long study involving 214 pupils in 4 Chicago schools proved that the classes given The Sound Way to Easy Reading showed marked improvement in reading and spelling over the control groups.

Help your child now

By starting your child on The Sound Way to Easy Reading now, you can change his entire attitude toward school—turn his sense of failure into the joy of sucess. Try it free for two weeks. You send no money—just mail this coupon now!

These records and self-quizzing cards can help your child gain up to a full year's grade in reading in just a few weeks.

USED BY 200,000 PARENTS who send many letters like these:

Advanced two years—"Your course has made my son want to read. No more frustration with words he doesn't know, he just concentrates and sounds them out. In 7 months, Steve's reading level advanced two years."
Mrs. R. Collins, Ft. Lauderdale, Fla.

Better report cards—"If I had known about your course before, Gregory would not have had to repeat 3rd grade. In only 7 weeks, he reads and spells much better, and is bringing home better report cards."
Mrs. R. Quinn, Cheektowaga, N.Y.

IN 26,000 SCHOOLS
teachers are highly enthusiastic

Second grade—"Your course is the best teaching aid a teacher could have. I have been using it for the past 2 years for my basic second grade reading course. My class looks forward to the record quizzes. Their improvement in reading and spelling has been outstanding."
Mrs. Diane Williamson, Chickasaw, Ala.

Remarkable improvement—"I have seen my remedial groups advance 1½ to 2½ levels in reading in 6 months and show 85% to 90% improvement in spelling. A low achievement 6th grade group showed remarkable improvement. I have convinced many teachers in our school to use your course."
Mrs. Angus Bates, Los Angeles, Calif.

THE MEANING OF EASTER TIME

Life...Rebirth...Spring...Peace...Renewal...Hope...Faith

Seven spiritual leaders offer their deep-felt thoughts about the divine promise of the Resurrection on Christendom's most sacred day.

Dr. Samuel Sandmel, teacher of the New Testament at Hebrew Union College, Cincinnati (a leading training ground for reform rabbis)

Jews see Easter as a human striving for an identification with God. Jews cannot participate in the particular theological views of Easter, which are limitedly Christian, but they can have a high regard for the earnestness of the Christian endeavor.

One sees the motif of rebirth in the springtime in many historic religions. In essence, Passover is a springtime religion of rebirth. The origin of the matzoh, as folklore students have taught us, is the harvesting of new grain and baking it into unleavened cakes to symbolize the birth of a new year.

As different as Easter and Passover have become, they share the fact that they are expressions of springtime and the rebirth of life. Until about AD 325, Easter and Passover were always celebrated in the same week. About 325, however, the Christians adopted a new formula to determine the date of Easter. Now, Easter sometimes falls within Passover, sometimes not.

So what does one focus on? The perpetuation or the alteration? Every religion expresses itself on its own terms. Still, no matter how different they have become, Easter originated within Passover and reflects the common background of the two sacred occasions.

The Most Rev. Fulton J. Sheen,

titular Roman Catholic Archbishop of Newport, Wales

A caterpillar looked into the sky and, seeing a butterfly, said, "You'll never get me up on one of those things." A tadpole reflected to another tadpole, "I think I will stick my head above the water." The other corrected him, saying, "Do you mean to say there is something else in the world besides water?"

Is every sunset the last, or will the sun rise again? Do the flowers and foliage that die in the winter come to new life in the spring? Can alcoholics become sober, can drug addicts be human again? Why does all nature suggest that death is the condition of life and that everything can be lifted to a higher life? For example, chemicals to plants and plants to animals and animals to man?

If there had not taken place upon the earth the death of the Godman who conquered the grave and rose to newness of life, throwing off the shackles of sin and putting on the garments of life and peace, those who have walked on plains all their lives could not understand how man could become divine.

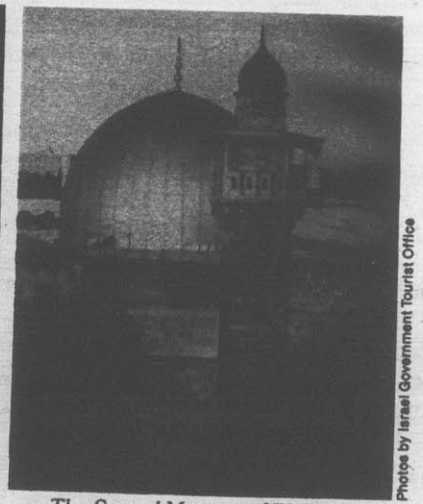

But why does not everyone believe in Easter? Because everyone has not experienced the thrill of looking from the mountaintop on the humdrum of a horizontal world. Why could Magdalen rise from the grave of her eroticism to scenes and visions of purity that dazzled her eyes and won her heart? Why do millions like myself believe in Easter? Because through the mercy of God, we have risen from the dead. I feel sorry for the cadavers still in the tomb.

Dr. Norman Vincent Peale,

pastor, Marble Collegiate Church, New York City

The one thing that you want and the one thing I want is life, and Easter promises us life, now and always. This is why I find Easter an especially appropriate time to affirm my faith that there really is no death, only life — and life eternal. Believe in that, hold onto it, live by it physically, die by it. For spiritually you will not die but move into eternal morning. This, I declare to you, is the Gospel of Jesus, the greatest mind, the greatest spirit, who ever lived, the Divine Son of God. Jesus said, "I am the resurrection, and the life; he that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live. And whosoever liveth and believeth in me shall never die." That is the glorious truth of Easter.

The Rt. Rev. Bennett Jones Sims,

Episcopal Bishop of the diocese of Atlanta

Resurrection arouses doubt. It always has, even from the beginning. St. Matthew reports that following the Lord's death the remaining 11 met Him alive again on a mountainside: "And when they saw Him they worshipped Him, but some doubted."

This passage can be a comfort to us. Notice that there is no censure here. Jesus does not reprimand the doubters. We can take His message to mean that doubt is not the opposite of faith. The reverse of faith is apostasy, willful disbelief.

Since faith is a positve act of inner consent, it may always be in conquest of doubt — like opening the door to a stranger. If this is so, then faith needs doubt for its work — as courage needs fear as the material from which it fashions an act of bravery. Doubt is not a dam but a spillway over which we allow the waters of our longing to run — as they did for those who first met the risen Lord and offered Him what they could of themselves. In return they were lifted by the power that took an ugly brutality and set the very sign of it as a banner of life on the skyline of the world.

Dr. George Webber,

president, New York Theological Seminary

Easter: For 30 years, I have labored as a pastor in New York City. As I look out at East Harlem, where I live, I have to face the harsh reality that the community is far less humane and viable than when I began. Drug addiction, crime, burned-out tenements, unemployment, demoralized schools are all tragic problems that unmask the power of racism and the face of poverty in our society.

But a long time ago, the prophet Jeremiah told his people: "Seek the welfare of the city where I have sent you into exile and pray to the Lord on its behalf, for in its welfare you will find your welfare."

Easter, the triumph of Jesus over the inhumanity of His day, and the powerful assurance that nothing can separate us from God's love, is my source of confidence that all the years of struggle in New York City are worth the doing, that in caring for the city, however fierce the battle or meager the results, I have lived with a meaning and purpose that is the way to life.

I have found my welfare in the signs of justice, peace, reconciliation and joy that have come along the way.

The Rev. Arthur M. Smith,

pastor, First Presbyterian Church, Chicago

It has been said that when one person laughs in this world another is moved to tears. In the predominately black and poor Woodlawn community of Chicago, where the First Presbyterian Church ministers, we see more tears and hear fewer sounds of laughter.

One assumes that somewhere else in the world, laughter overcomes the tears. But the hope, the joy, the reasons for our ministry, take in all of the tears, all of the laughter, all of the human needs. As we look forward to the institutional celebration of Jesus as the resurrected and living Lord on Easter, we also know that He is with us every day.

Though Easter often means new clothes, a breath of spring and an overflowing of shoppers, it is far from this. To truly understand Easter, one has to fully understand the pain and sorrow of Jesus, which means the pain and sorrow of all humanity. As we immerse ourselves in the cruel realities of Woodlawn, our faith in Jesus as the Christ lifts us to a vision that transcends its veil of tears.

Our ministry and our work culminate in the celebration of Easter, but the power and the glory of Easter are the heart and soul of why we do what we do every other day of the year.

The Rev. W.A. Criswell

(Billy Graham's pastor), First Baptist Church, Dallas

The whole world is a paean of praise to the Lord God in heaven, who brings to new birth and to resurrection the dormant world at the Easter season.

Spring is the glad time of all of us who have lived through the long days of the dreary winter, and now we look forward to the bright and happy days of the soon-coming summer. Easter is resurrection time. It is beginning and a new lifetime. It is rejoicing time. It is praise time to our heavenly Father who raised our Savior from among the dead and whose resurrection is the promise of our own enduring immortality.

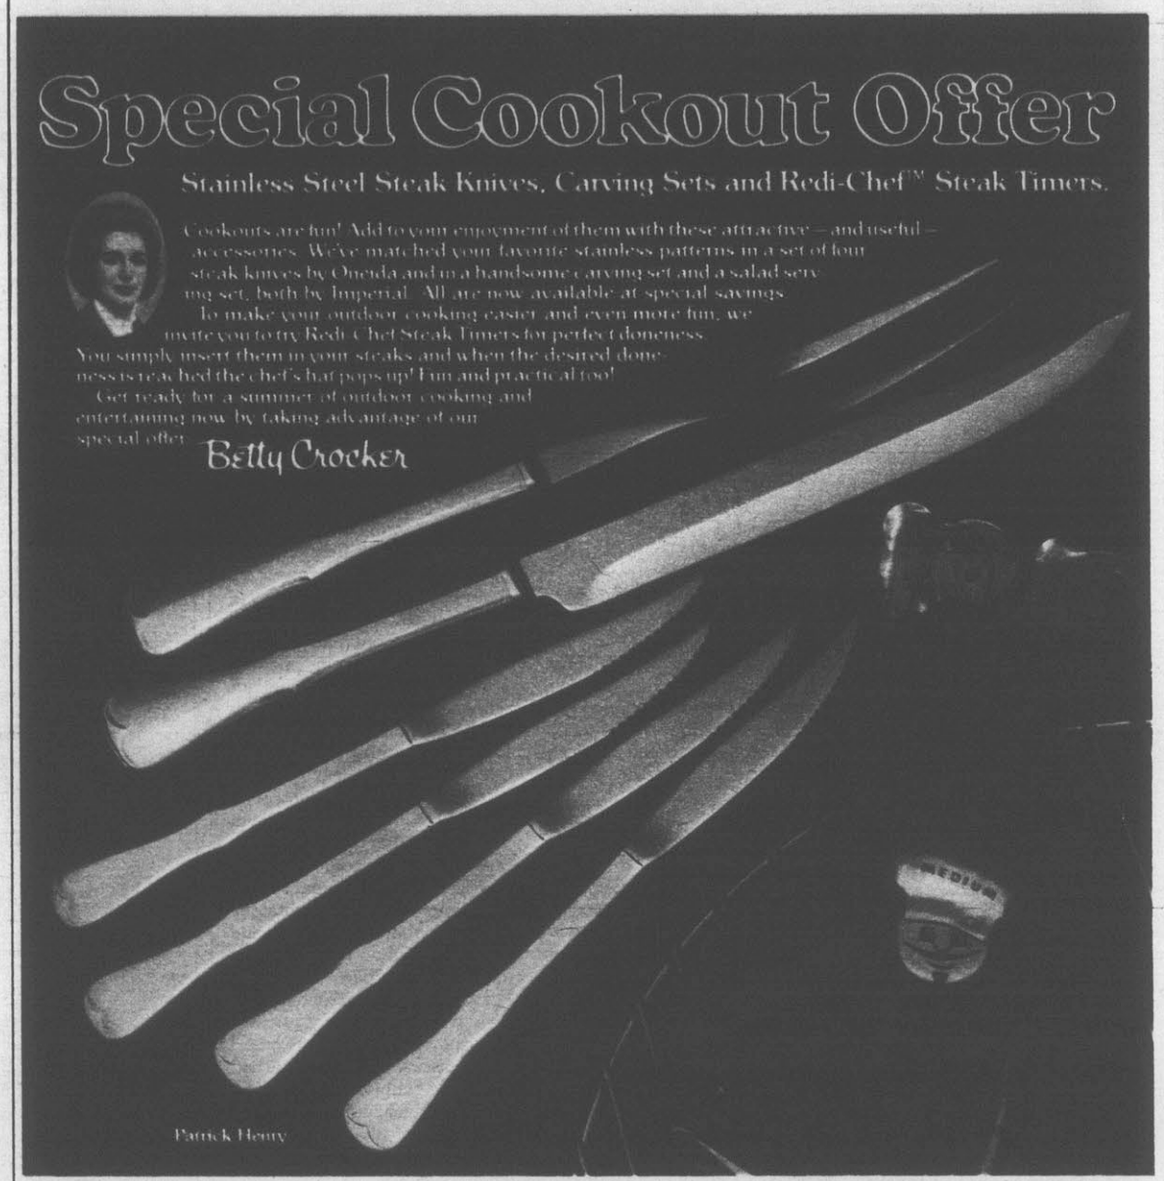

As God brings to life the trees that are so barren and the grass that is so brown and the herbs that have lost their foliage and the fields that are so sere, so God, through Christ Jesus, has promised us in His resurrection a new day and a new life, even a new heaven and a new earth. If ever there were a people who had cause to rejoice at Easter time, it is the Christian community that has looked in faith to Him as their ultimate and final redeemer. Easter is the happiest time of the year.

About Our Cover

The painting on our cover, A Peaceable Kingdom, is the work of folk artist Edward Hicks (1780-1849). The theme of the peaceable kingdom, inspired by the vision described in the Old Testament, was one of the favorite themes of the Pennsylvania-born Quaker, a coachmaker who only began painting at age 40. Hicks painted about 100 versions of A Peaceable Kingdom, and many are owned by major American museums.

In addition to the peaceable kingdoms, Hicks also is known for his paintings of historical subjects — William Penn signing the treaty with the Indians and the signing of the Declaration of Independence, for example — and for his landscapes. The inner light with which his paintings appear to glow is created by his use of different-colored varnishes as glazes.

Although Hicks was not well known in his own time, today a painting like the 26-by 29-inch oil on our cover is worth approximately $225,000.

HOW CHILDREN ARE LEARNING ECONOMICS — AND ENJOYING IT

"We used to teach kids how to count money and make change....That didn't really tell them anything about what happens to money once it enters the marketplace."

Carrol Copeland

Children learning economic principles in a Fort Smith, Ark., school.

By Jack Moseley

From Europe to the Middle East to Japan, kids are learning about the American free-enterprise system, thanks to a handful of highly creative teachers in Fort Smith, Ark.

Thousands of American youngsters — from kindergarten through high school — also are discovering how economics affects every aspect of their lives and their world through innovative education projects that personally involve the students. What's more, the children are actually enjoying their schoolwork.

A high-schooler can explain the economics of a local murder, from burial expenses and financial losses for the family to taxpayer costs of investigating, arresting, trying and imprisoning the killer, not to mention the finances of jury duty and missing work to testify in court.

In a fifth-grade classroom, children don't read The Little House on the Prairie books just for the story of a pioneer family. They also learn about the problems of scarcity, the development of economic goals and the role of institutions, productive resources, market economy, interdependence and trade.

These and dozens of other original economics studies developed in Fort Smith have brought the teachers involved numerous awards from the National Council on Economics Education, and this practical, common-sense economics has become a model for schools from coast to coast.

"Some people wonder why we teach economics to small children," says Wallace C. Floyd, director of instruction in Fort Smith. "The fact is that children live in an economic world. Almost every childhood experience is rich in the elements of economics. A child will ask for many things — from lollipops to prom dresses and cars. At first he does not understand the impossibility of satisfying his unlimited wants. Without some instruction, a child cannot understand that even his nonmaterial wants have certain economic significance. It's the job of education to create this awareness — and at an early age."

Floyd, noting that Fort Smith began economics education in a single elementary-school class 15 years ago and that the total school program has grown to include every public-school grade, explains that children make economic decisions every day. Should a youngster spend all the money he has or save some? What is the value of caring for his toys? "We used to teach kids how to count money and make change," says Floyd. "That really didn't help the children in making decisions about how to use money wisely. And it didn't tell them anything about what happens to money once it enters the marketplace.

"Economics also must be a study in real life," he goes on. "It must be practical information with which students identify."

The school official gives much of the credit for the success of the Fort Smith program to the Arkansas Council on Economic Education. The Council, concerned that not only students but teachers as well were uneducated about how economics and the free-enterprise system operate, began conducting seminars for schoolteachers. The Fort Smith school system enthusiastically took advantage of the exposure offered by the Council.

"We do offer high-school courses in economics," says Floyd, "but I feel the most important thing we did was not to limit economics as an isolated area of study.

"Economics can be taught along with everything from math and science to art and sociology. Our teachers always begin with a topic of interest to the students. A second-grade teacher may use a local snowstorm as a springboard for discussing the good and bad economic implications of the weather. The children may be stimulated to think about the damage to streets and the costs of repairing that damage."

Eleventh-grade students may explore the economics of diversified businesses, from the importance of tips to waitresses to leisure-time activities for factory workers. In the process, they get a firsthand picture of life in Fort Smith and how the free-enterprise system works.

Because these teachers and students understand how Fort Smith functions in an economic world, others in this country and abroad also are getting a more honest understanding of America and the American economic system. FW

Here's how you may win $1,000,000:

With one swing of his golf club, Arnold Palmer may win a million dollars for you! It's a unique sweepstakes that's part of the Seventh Annual Colgate-Dinah Shore Winners Circle Championship from the Mission Hills Country Club.

It works like this: While the top women stars are competing for tournament prize money of $305,000, there will be a separate event—Arnie trying to win money for you! During the telecast on NBC, he'll have 21 shots at the 17th hole to make a hole-in-one. There will be a Grand Prize of $1,000,000 if he does. Even if he misses the hole-in-one, the ball he hits nearest-to-pin will win some lucky person $20,000 and a luxurious Chrysler Cordoba. And there are over a thousand other prizes too.

To enter the sweepstakes you need the number of Palmer's winning ball. Watch the telecast or follow the Official Rules below.

1,016 Valuable Prizes!

Grand Prize	$1,000,000 for hole-in-one
Alternate Grand Prize	$20,000 plus a 1978 Chrysler Cordoba— for nearest-to-pin

Merit Key Factor In Smoking Shake-Up.

Large numbers of high tar smokers converting to Low Tar–'Enriched Flavor'™ cigarette.

Confirmed high tar smokers are finding an answer to the dilemma of choosing between good taste and low tar.

In two short years, an unprecedented number of high tar smokers—the toughest "taste" critics of low tar smoking—have switched to one low tar brand.

Their answer: MERIT.

In fact, 75% of current MERIT smokers are coming directly from high tar cigarettes.

It's clear.

MERIT is delivering the kind of flavor smokers thought they could only get from higher tar brands.

The reason: 'Enriched Flavor' tobacco.

Tobacco fortified with certain key flavor-rich ingredients isolated in cigarette smoke and proven to deliver taste way out of proportion to tar.

Tests Prove Taste

MERIT and MERIT 100's were both tested against a number of higher tar cigarettes.

Overall, smokers reported they liked the taste of MERIT and MERIT 100's as much as the taste of the higher tar cigarettes tested.

Cigarettes having up to 60% more tar!

Only one cigarette has 'Enriched Flavor' tobacco. And you can taste it.

MERIT

A MEDICAL EXAM THAT COULD SAVE YOUR LIFE

This test uses medicine's most sophisticated tools — including computers — to detect diseases in time for them to be cured.

By J. Wandres

Sardi Klein

The exam includes a physical and computerized health profile.

Early detection of disease can, and does, save lives. And now a two-hour comprehensive examination called the multiphasic test can give you the best and most thorough use of present-day medical tools.

It's given in a medical center or a hospital and usually involves a computer-assisted health evaluation. The cost is from about $75 to $200.

Here's how a multiphasic (simply meaning "many parts") examination goes in any of the 140 facilities around the country that administer it.

A patient is first given a 143-part questionnaire covering his way of life and the general state of his health (how many cigarettes per day, how many drinks, etc.). The questionnaire is "read" by a computer, and the information becomes part of a printed health profile. One copy is given to the patient, and another is mailed to his family physician.

Next, the patient undergoes blood and urine tests. While each is being analyzed, vision and hearing tests are given. The results are fed into the computer.

The third step is an electrocardiogram and a chest X ray. (Women are also given a mammogram and a Pap smear test.)

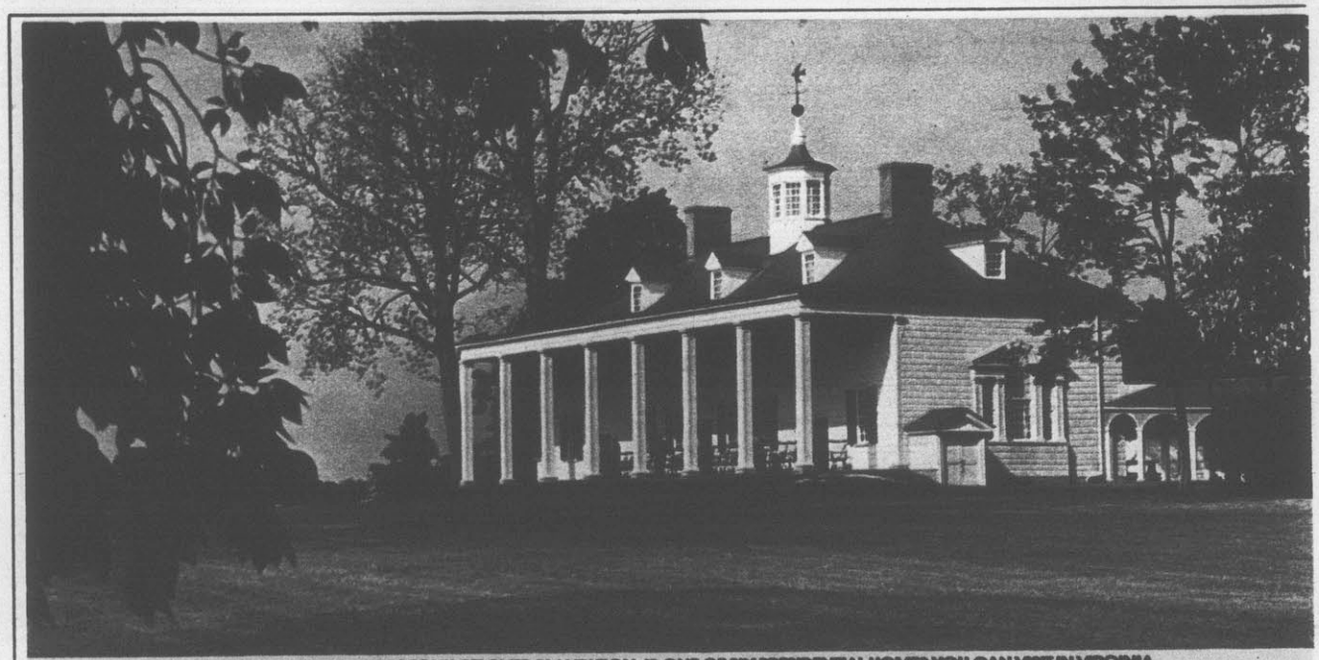

Finally, a doctor who now has the computer printout of the patient's physical characteristics as well as the test results administers a "hands-on" physical exam.

That's it. But why should a person who feels fit spend a large sum for such an elaborate examination? Critics of the automated multiphasic health exam claim it is prohibitively expensive. One study showed that in more than 43,000 proctoscopic exams only 55 cases of illness were discovered. Admittedly, that is a low figure for so many tests. But if you were one of the 55, that would not have bothered you.

Defenders of the multiphasic exam argue that the screenings can detect abnormalities which, if treated early, can be cured. Again, if you're a person for whom a multiphasic uncovers such a disability, the exam will have more than paid for itself. And while the medical profession argues the pros and cons of the multiphasic, hundreds of thousands take the exam every year.

Most health professionals agree that persons in their 20's and 30's can get away with a comprehensive health exam once every five years. (If a multiphasic costs only $100, that works out to $20 per year.) Persons from 35 to 45 should be screened every two to three years, and the exam should include a test for glaucoma. Persons over 45 should not let a year pass without a complete screening.

Can a multiphasic exam effectively prevent a person from being disabled by a treatable disease? Yes, with a little help from the person. The evaluation is of little use if the recommendations arrived at from the findings aren't followed. FW

MOUNT VERNON, WASHINGTON'S BELOVED PLANTATION, IS ONE OF SIX PRESIDENTIAL HOMES YOU CAN VISIT IN VIRGINIA.

Virginia is a day full of sunshine at Mount Vernon. Jefferson's Honeymoon Cottage at Monticello. A soaring ride to the top of the Eiffel Tower at Kings Dominion. Robert E. A FRESH NEW SL

Wet your lips, America.

The new-size, quick-size, mid-size Malibu is here.

And it's so right in so many ways for so many people right now, you'd think it had been designed by Mr. John Q. Public, himself.

A crisp new Coupe.

A stylish Sedan.

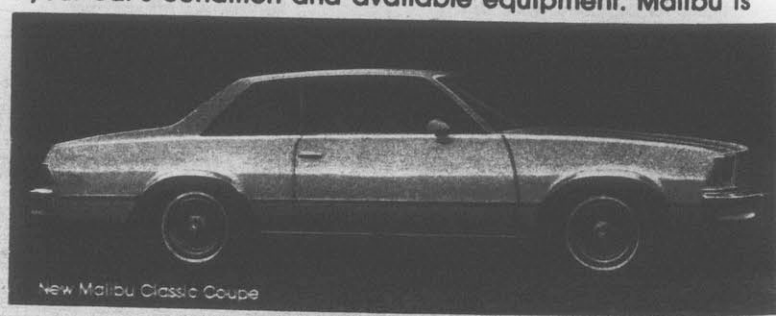

And a mouth-watering Wagon with loads of load space and a handy new two-way hatchgate.

Malibu is full of fresh ideas, slim on the outside, roomy on the inside, nice and nimble on the road.

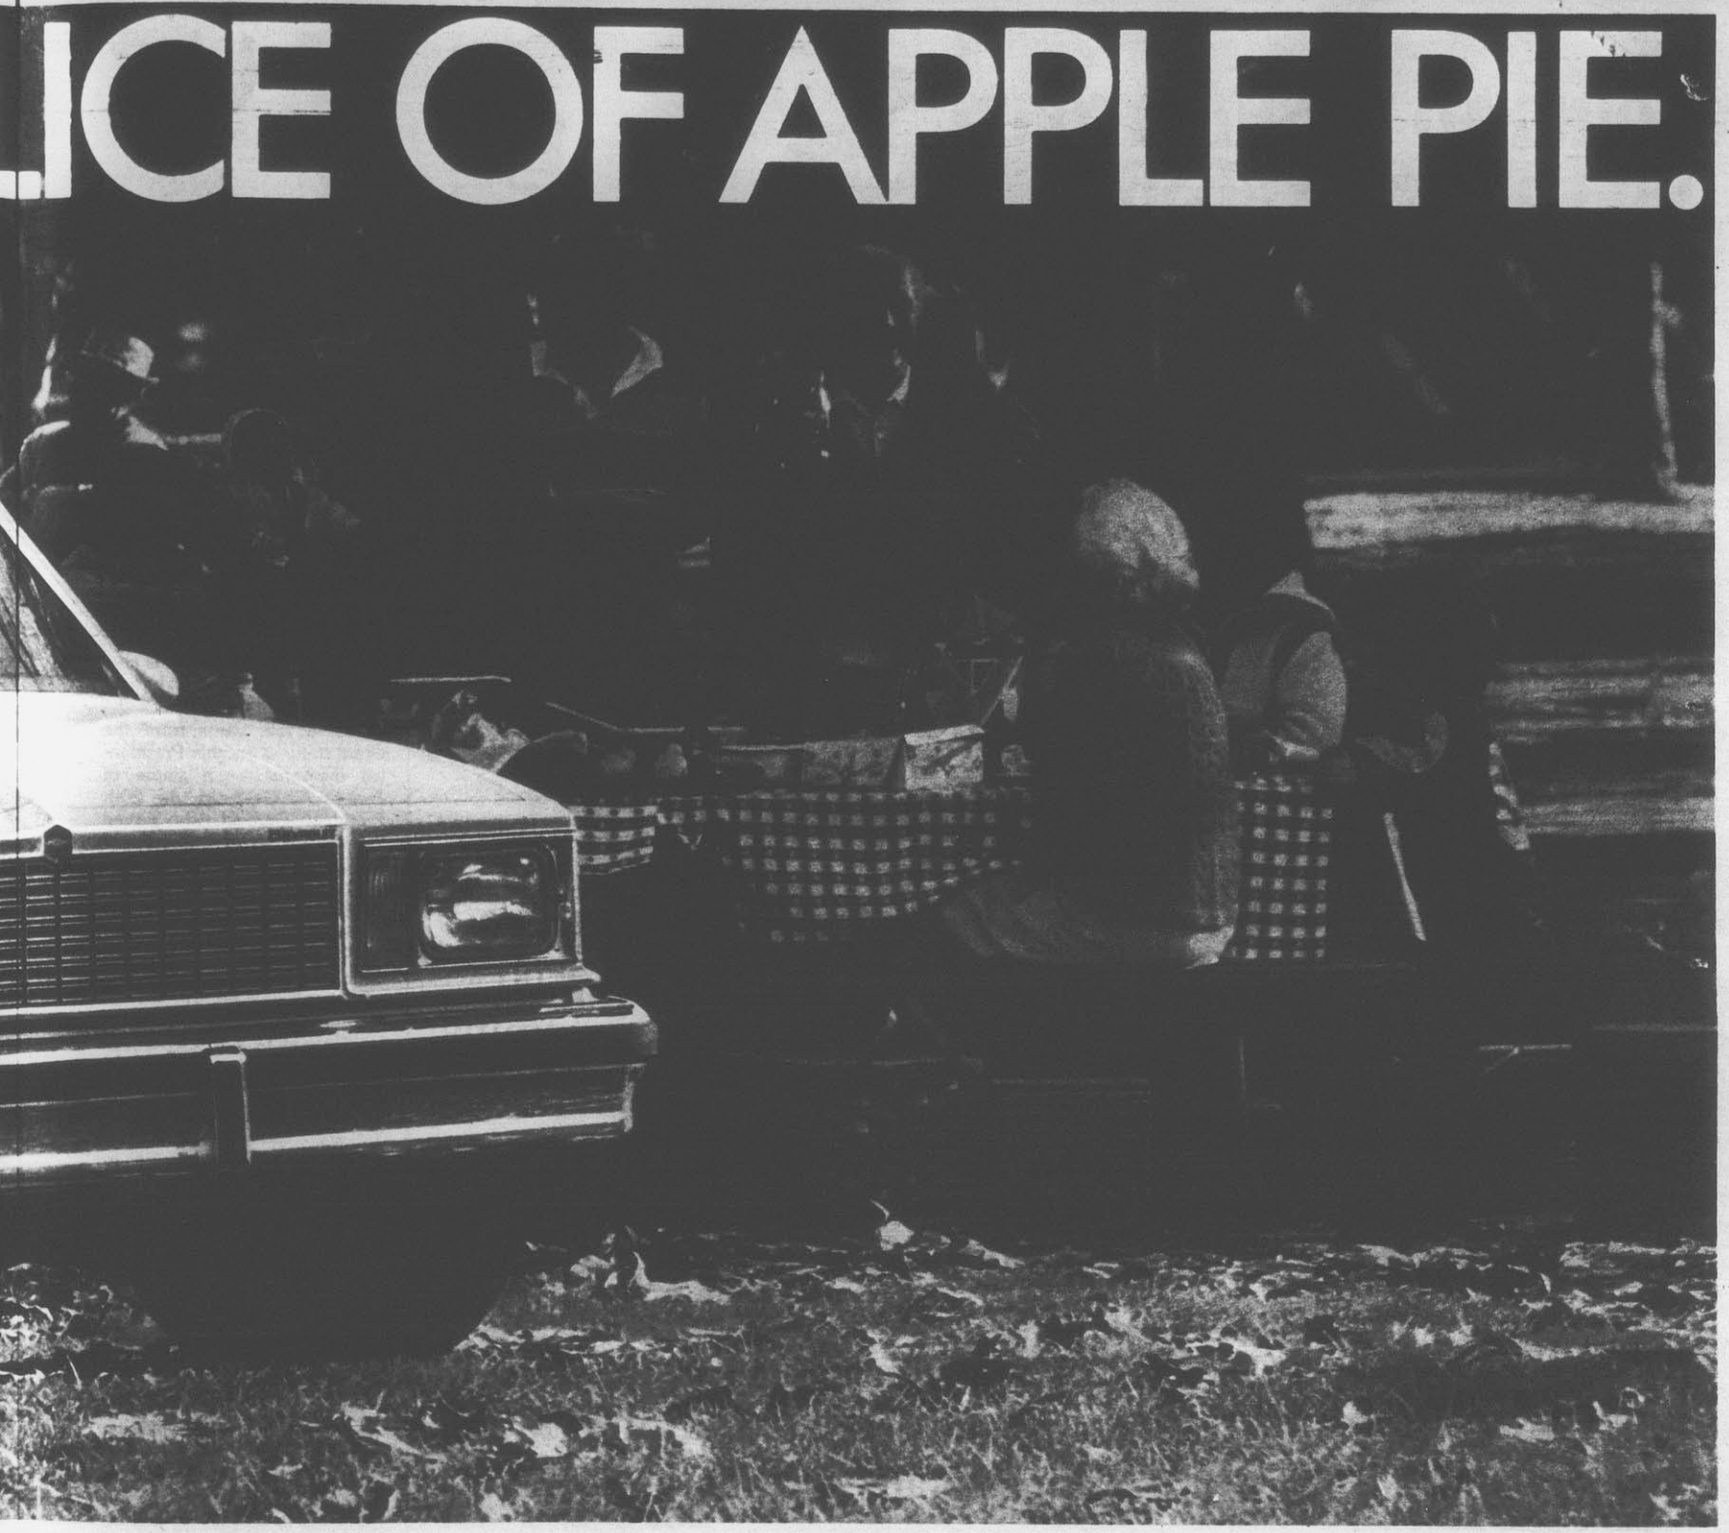

The Coupe and Sedan have more head room, leg room and trunk room than last year's Malibu.

A new V6 engine offers smooth, responsive power plus the kind of gas mileage we all want and need today.

EPA estimates are 29 mpg highway, 21 mpg city with the new standard 3.3 litre V6 and 3-speed manual transmission. Your mileage will vary depending on how and where you drive, your car's condition and available equipment. Malibu is equipped with GM-built engines produced by various divisions. See your Chevy dealer for details.

When it comes to value, America comes to Chevrolet.

And we've got a feeling a large slice of America is going to be coming to Malibu in the days and years to come.

GOING TO WASHINGTON? DON'T MISS THESE LANDMARKS

Lincoln, Jefferson and Washington are just a few of the Presidents who are commemorated in the nation's capital.

By Barbara Palmer

Armed with cameras and "official guidebooks," tens of thousands of tourists will descend on the nation's capital this spring. And for the next several months, crowds at the Lincoln and Jefferson Memorials, the Washington Monument and the John F. Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts will be bumping into one another.

But at some of the less familiar Presidential monuments nearby, the arrival of Washington's annual tourist season may go by this year as it has in the past — virtually unnoticed.

As National Park Service spokesman George Berklacy put it, many of Washington's historical landmarks seem to "attract more pigeons than visitors."

Why this apparent lack of interest in all but what Berklacy calls "the four biggies"? In most cases Park Service officials agree — visitors to the nation's capital simply aren't aware of what else there is to see.

So here are a few of the less familiar Presidential monuments that range from statues and shrines to gardens and an island.

Most people think that the statue in the center of Lafayette Park, directly across from the White House, is that of the Marquis de Lafayette, the Frenchman who provided aid to the colonies during the Revolution. But the 125-year-old monument — the oldest equestrian statue in the city — is actually a memorial to Andrew Jackson, our seventh President.

Jackson, who became a national hero during the Battle of New Orleans in 1815, is depicted atop a horse that is reared up on its hind legs in a position many contend looks unrealistic.

But according to legend, the sculptor, Clark Mills, bought a retired racehorse named Olympus and trained him to stand on his back legs for long periods. Then Mills copied the horse's position in a sculpture that includes bits of the actual metal from cannons used by Jackson during some of his military campaigns.

Another memorial of sorts to Jackson is an Egyptian sarcophagus known as the "tomb in which Jackson refused to be buried." Located in the Smithsonian's Museum of History and Technology, the tomb was brought to this country in 1838 and later offered to Jackson, who died in 1845.

Jackson, considered to be our first populist President, turned down the offer, saying his principles prevented his being buried in a "repository prepared for an emperor or king."

James Buchanan, like his successor, Abraham Lincoln, was born in a log cabin and overcame great odds to become President. Before taking office in 1857, "Old Buck" — as he was known to his contemporaries — had been a Congressman, U.S. Senator and minister to Russia and Great Britain. But his achievements were overshadowed by the strife between North and South.

A memorial to Buchanan, the only bachelor President, is located in a secluded corner of Meridian Hill Park, a once-fashionable area of the city.

When built in 1922, the $250,000 Paul Manship sculpture of Ulysses S. Grant mounted on his horse and surrounded by soldiers carrying cannons was the most expensive statue in the United States. Today a quarter of a million dollars wouldn't go far toward the care and landscaping of the mall area where the Grant statue is located near the foot of Capitol Hill.

Just a few yards from the Grant statue is another Presidential memorial — a statue of James A. Garfield, the 20th President. Garfield, who served the shortest term of any President, died in September, 1881, after only six months in office. He had been shot two months earlier by Charles Guiteau, who held a grudge against the President for not naming him to a consulate post in France.

Theodore Roosevelt Island, a memorial to our 26th President, is one of the most remote monuments in the city since it is accessible only by foot or bicycle. Yet each spring, thousands of Washingtonians find their way to the island, located in the Potomac River across from Georgetown, to picnic or to hike on the acres of trails and woods.

At the center of the island is a 17-foot Paul Manship statue of the original Rough Rider, who was an athletic outdoorsman and would have felt at home on the island bearing his name.

President Lyndon Baines Johnson's memorial, which he specifically requested, is a grove of trees and shrubs across the Potomac River near Arlington Cemetery and just across the George Washington Memorial Parkway from Lady Bird Johnson Park. Opened in 1976, the grove's footpaths meander through white pine, flowering dogwood and American holly.

Anyone visiting Washington will short-change himself if he confines his visits only to the Big Four. Throughout the capital there are statues, plaques, little parks, all commemorating moments in American history. For further information, contact the Washington Area Convention and Visitors Association, Dept. FW, 1129 20th St. NW, Washington, D.C. 20036 FW

IF YOU NEED TO BUILD UP YOUR BLOOD DON'T COUNT ON VITAMINS

Iron poor blood is the most widespread nutritional ailment in America today. And taking vitamins can't help, because vitamins don't contain iron.

Take Geritol, every day. Geritol is so rich in iron, each tablet contains more iron than even a pound of calf's liver. Plus vitamins important to your health.

Geritol's iron will actually build your blood back to normal. That's what makes it different from just plain vitamins—and so important to you.

ARMOUR'S ARMOURY

HONESTLY

I'm not the luckiest around,
And money I have rarely found,
In fact I doubt that I've found any
Until today — I found a penny!
In plain view on the walk it lay.
This was indeed my lucky day.

But should I run an ad to try
To find the owner, catch his eye?
Or should I, mindful of success,
Disclose this to the IRS?
I'm growing so upset, alack,
I think I'll put the penny back.

— Richard Armour

A young man who had been studying an income-tax advice book remarked, "I think I've found a loophole. The only thing is that you must be a 65-year-old student who owns an oil well." — Conrad Fiorello

"My brother-in-law has been out of work so long," a lady complained, "that now his bills have become collectors' items."
— Edward Allen

NO RESEMBLANCE

Whatever the doctor finds I enjoy
He promptly insists I give it up.
Perhaps he keeps me living — but boy,
It's a far cry from living it up.
— Hal Chadwick

Plaintively, my neighbor told me, "My wife is seldom home, but you can find her at fine stores everywhere." — Al Batt

I told my 4-year-old son not to play in a mud puddle. A while later I looked out the window and saw he was in the puddle and having a ball. I took my ruler and went out to give him a whack or two. He saw me coming, looked at the ruler and said desperately, "Mama, whatcha going to measure?"

JOBMANSHIP

How To Look Good When You're With The Boss

When people ask for appointments with the boss, they usually say they need to discuss a certain project or they need clarification. But these same people may have hidden goals of which they themselves may not be aware. Management consultant David Nierenberg explains that in today's hectic business world there's often little time for the personal sharing between boss and subordinates that makes people feel appreciated. And sometimes men and women instinctively feel, "It's time I touched base with the boss."

How you handle your meetings with your superior either enhances or tarnishes your image. To look your best, Nierenberg suggests: 1) Have a mental list of items you wish to discuss, arranged in order of importance. Without a list, you'll probably ramble and appear disorganized: 2) Be prepared with possible solutions to problems. Nobody loves a subordinate who dumps a problem and sits back and waits. 3) Check the facts of any other assignments you may have. Now that you're there, the boss may ask you about them. If you stumble over your reply, you give the impression of not being on top of your job. 4) From time to time be prepared with a creative idea on something outside your responsibility; something that makes it clear to the boss that you understand the "big picture" and that you can see beyond your own corner. — S.R. Redford

PAT BOONE'S DAUGHTER DEBBY TALKS ABOUT FAMILY AND CAREER

By Anita Summer

Despite spankings and embarrassing moments caused by her father, the singer of "You Light Up My Life" says she'll be tough on her kids, too.

Debby Boone, 21 and singer of the huge hit "You Light Up My Life," is a famous unknown. People who hum her song on the streets pass her by without a second glance. Recently, at a music store, she pushed her way unrecognized through the crowd. When she got to the counter, ready to start autographing albums, her "fans" stared. "That's Debby Boone?" was the unflattering reaction.

R. Dominguez/Globe Pictures

Debby with Jose Ferrer's son, Gabriel.

Debby is the attractive, dainty and rather square (by today's standards) daughter of crooner Pat Boone. And her meteoric rise to success, rocketing her from a galaxy of hopefuls to star status, did not increase the size of Debby's head. If anything, it has increased her qualms. This soft-spoken young lady is convinced that her upbringing and a lot of luck steered her to where she's perched today.

Over the years, reports of the puritanical manner in which church-going, former teenage idol Pat Boone ruled his family caused eyebrows to rise in doubt. Not only were these stories true, but they also were watered down.

Said Debby, the third of Pat's four daughters: "My father was incredibly strict. Spankings were part of our daily diet." Vivid childhood memories include getting whacks with a shoe, the back of a hand or a Jack La Lanne muscle-building gadget. What produced such chastisement?

"Disrespect and lack of obedience," recalls Debby, somehow managing to sit erect while tucking her toes under her too-slender 5'4" frame. "When we were younger, we had to say 'yes, sir' and 'no, sir.' That was hard for me to swallow because most times I really did forget. 'Huh' or 'what' or just 'yes' would make Dad demand, 'Yes, what?' If we interrupted a conversation or got sassy, we were sent out of the room in disgrace." Punishments included missing a friend's birthday party, cancellation of weekend plans, going without candy.

Debby's social problems surfaced at 16, the age when Pat Boone (who was 19 when he married Shirley Foley in 1953) permitted his brood to date. Before that, they went out in groups. But the easing of one restriction created others. "My parents had to know the boy before he could take me out," says Debby. "If they didn't, or were unfamiliar with his background, he had to spend time at the house for a quick once-over. I could never say, 'I met a boy at the drugstore who wants to take me out.' Imagine how embarrassing it was to tell him, 'I can't go out with you since my folks don't know you, but if they can see you first, it'll be all right.'

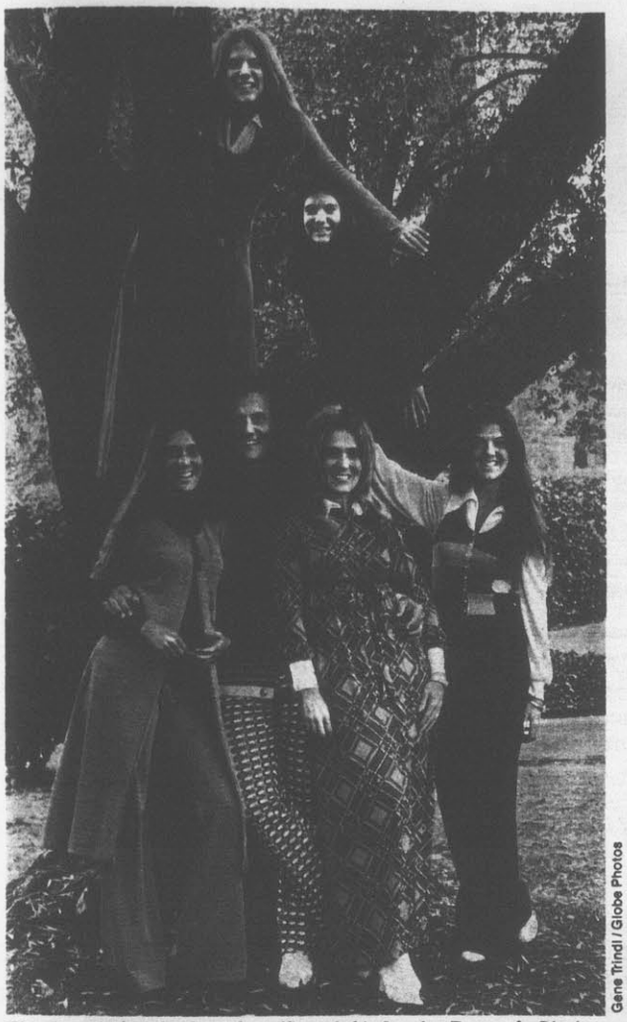

"If they said no, it was because the boy was too old, too smart-alecky, too scruffy."

Nor did the green light signal smooth sailing. Debby was clocked out, then clocked in. Pat composed a timetable: "Movie starts at 8:00; you'll leave home at 7:30. It's over at 10:00 — an hour for ice cream. Be back at 11:30." Sighed Debby: "It never worked out that way. Fear of being late made me jittery. There could be no changes of plan, such as going 'there' instead of 'here' to eat. 'There' was usually farther away. I'd have to sneak to a phone, without the boy knowing, and ask for a half-hour extension. Dad, dismayed, insisted on the full facts of why we chose 'there' rather than 'here.' Dates got to be so nerve-racking that it was less trouble to stay home. I didn't have the strength for all that quizzing.

"Another problem was Mom never went to bed until she heard the front door close. We (my sisters, too) always felt guilty knowing she was sitting up."

Did all those years of parental control knock the stuffing out of the sisters? No, says Debby.

"I resented it then but, in retrospect, am very thankful because it made me responsible. Discipline pays off. I can cope in crises and make my own decisions. Many kids with whom I grew up turned out a mess.

"Please don't interpret all this as life in a prison," Deborah Ann adds with a grin. She and her sisters (Cheryl Lynn, 23 and married; Linda Lee, 22, also married, expecting her second child; Laura, 20, at school in Malibu) have a close family relationship, and outweighing all that rigidity are treasured flashbacks to laughter, fun — and music.

Debby reveled in being the daughter of a celebrity: "Dad involved us in his work and TV show when we were small. I adored getting shown off, the attention and the travel. I loved show business, and Dad loved kids. My friends were intimidated by my father, until they met him, then their fears vanished. He'd play with them, take us places. Dad was always singing. In the car we had singalongs. Mom taught us four-part harmony (whatever help I got in voice training came from Mom, not Dad). We had a devotional at breakfast. Dad read from the Bible, giving us a message for the day. We sang our prayers, put on shows for our parents and friends. I grew up loving music."

When the time comes, will Debby raise her family the way she was or rebel and do the reverse? "I'll surprise myself and be tougher than I think, but what I won't do is have my kids say 'yes, ma'am, no, ma'am.'"

She's many years away from all that, however. A career, not romance, is first on her agenda. There's no steady beau on the horizon. Debby says of the slew of potential suitors that materialized after her record took off, "I'm very particular and never date for the sake of going out. I'd rather be with a girl I like than a guy I couldn't care less about. I haven't dated on a regular basis for ages or sat home praying the guy I was nuts about would call."

Debby is as devout as Pat and Shirley. Divorce and the practice of setting up home without a marriage license are in conflict with her religious and spiritual beliefs.

Debby knew she and the stage were meant for each other eight years ago, when Pat headlined a bill in Japan with the then unknown Osmond Brothers. He advised his kids that if they came up with one good song, they could join him in the Orient. They did, choosing "What the World Needs Now is Love."

With only four voice lessons in high school, Debby's range and style established her as the leader of the quartet. In time, Cherry and Linda married and Laura went to college, but Debby struck out on her own. Last September she recorded "You Light Up My Life." She also has an album with the identical title, and it features her sisters as well.

Debby is baffled by the record's extraordinary success, which, for lack of a better explanation, she attributes to a catchy melody, easily memorized lyrics and the fact that "it's an emotional experience. I've been told, 'The first time I heard your song, tears started streaming down my face.'

"After you cut a record, even though you think it's something terrific — and dream — you forget it exists," says Debby, which is exactly what she did, putting it right out of her mind until seven weeks later, when she heard she had a hit on her hands. She didn't believe it then and can't accept it now. When Pat realized he'd become grandfather to a hit, he took a four-hour walk, joking, "I must get used to my new title — Debby Boone's father."

Exactly how much of a shove in the right direction did the Boone name provide? Says Debby: "Many people who liked the song told me they had no idea I was Pat Boone's daughter.

"I was lucky," she sums up. "I'm not loaded with looks or talent. I worry. Can I deal with what's ahead of me? Was this first try a fluke?"

When Pat and Debby returned from their recent concert and promotional tours of South Africa and Europe, she did not return to an apartment of her own. She went to the Los Angeles house where she lives with her folks.

"It's good to come to a family and let it all out," she explains. "It helps me remember who I am. It's too easy to lose one's sense of perspective in the show-business world. I do lots of traveling, and it would be depressing to be greeted by empty rooms. To whom would I say, 'And then we did....' Who'd have dinner ready for me?

"I suppose the day will come when I'll have to make the break and live alone, but, until then, I enjoy staying with my folks and being, what I guess, is an old-fashioned girl." FW

PEOPLE QUIZ / By John E. Gibson

Do right-handers think and reason better than left-handers? Can the foods a person eats as a child have an effect on his intelligence?

FIND OUT HOW SMART YOU ARE

TRUE OR FALSE?

1. If you're not as smart as you'd like to be, the reason could be that you didn't eat enough of the right foods when you were young.

2. People of above average intelligence tend to share specific personality traits.

3. In moments of life-threatening danger your I.Q. can skyrocket.

4. A baby is largely insensitive to the world around him during the first few months of his life and doesn't do any real thinking until he's well over a year old.

5. When it comes to thinking and reasoning, left-handers aren't as gifted as right-handers.

ANSWERS

1. True. Studies at the University of Alberta cite evidence showing that infants who have not received a sufficiently nourishing diet during the first six months of life have decreased mental performance compared with children from the same area who have not been malnourished. Other research shows similar findings. And a recent study conducted by the All India Institute of Hygiene and Public Health found that regardless of socioeconomic status, well-nourished children had higher I.Q.'s than others.

2. True. For example, University of North Carolina studies have shown that people with more than average intelligence choose to work and lay the foundations for future rewards, even though they may have to tighten their belts for a while. On the other hand, the also-rans in the I.Q. department were inclined to live in the present and to have little faith in whatever future rewards their efforts might bring.

3. True. Studies conducted by University of Iowa behavior specialists have shown that periods of life-threatening danger can give a person's ability to think, reason and make lightning-fast decisions a tremendous shot-in-the-arm. It's pointed out that the enormous adaptive capacity of the human mind, stretched to the utmost by the threatening situation, can render a person capable of superhuman performance.

4. False. Research at the University of Michigan indicates that "infants do a considerable amount of thinking and learning during this early stage." The study, which included mental tests on close to 1,000 infants over a four-year period, showed that early infancy is an important period in the development of the mind and the nervous system and that even the earliest experiences of the newborn may have an impact on shaping his personality and intellect.

5. False. In studies at Cambridge University mental tests were administered to more than 2,000 students, measuring their ability in verbal, numerical and perceptual thinking and reasoning. Left-handers were compared with right-handers. Findings: No evidence was found that left-handers do less well than right-handers. Moreover, the results suggested that "left-handers, especially males, may be better than right-handers at numerical tasks." FW

WHAT IN THE WORLD

Typed by Paul Smith / Typewriter Art

Believe it or not, this picture was "drawn" with a typewriter.

Typing Becomes An Art

The picture above would be remarkable even if it were done with pen and ink or paint and brush. But it's actually "drawn" using only a typewriter — by a man who can't even hold a paintbrush or pen because of a serious nervous disorder.

The artist, Paul Smith, is an outstanding practitioner of typewriter art, a pastime that is now being enjoyed by enthusiasts ranging from high-school students to retirees.

Smith, in his 50's and a resident of an Oregon nursing home, developed his skill over years of painstaking work. But Dan Carlinsky, author of Typewriter Art, says anyone with "a few minutes to kill and some imagination" (and access to a typewriter!) can enjoy this form of mechanical doodling.

What distinguishes Smith's work from that of less-advanced artists, says Carlinsky, is his use of many different keys and the high frequency with which he turns his paper to achieve different effects. Smith also enhances some of his work with subtle shading achieved by smudging the typewriter ribbon with a finger.

If Your Brakes Fail

Did you read the piece, "Driver Decisions That Could Save Your Life," in our January 29 issue? Some automotive safety experts did, and they want to add their comments to the advice we gave about what to do in case of brake failure.

One suggestion in the article was, "If you don't have an automatic transmission, you could turn off the ignition switch and let the weight of the 'dead' engine help slow the car."

Experts say that although this suggestion may be of some help in slowing the car down to a speed of 25 mph, unless you've practiced, you might inadvertently lock the steering column. So the best ways of handling brake failure, as described in the article, are to slowly apply the emergency brake, to shift to a lower gear and to pump the brakes hard.

What Every Jogger Should Know

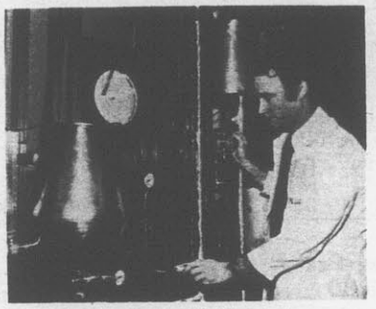

These days a lot of people are either jogging, planning to start or feeling guilty because they haven't. But there are a number of things you should know to help avoid injuries and make your jogging more enjoyable says Garth Fisher, dir. of the Human Performance Research Center at Utah's Brigham Young Univ.

Before starting any jogging program, make sure you're in running form. Fisher says that anyone who's over 35, smokes, is overweight or has a family history of cardiovascular disease should get a physician's O.K.

Fisher also advises beginning by walking briskly. When you can do that for 25 minutes without feeling winded, you're ready to start jogging.

Select a shoe with a durable, multilayer sole to absorb shock and an elevated heel to reduce stress on the Achilles tendon. The uppers should be of a smooth material to prevent blisters. "Your shoes should feel good the first time you have them on," says Fisher. "If they feel bad in the store, they'll feel bad when you come down on them 1,000 times a day."

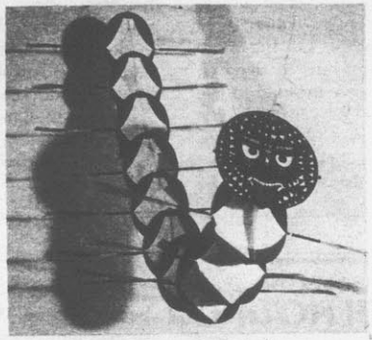

How do you know if you're overdoing it? Fisher says, "If you can't talk while you're running, you're pushing yourself too hard."

School Has Own Brewery

The Univ. of California, Davis, has a well-kept secret — it's the only school in the Western Hemisphere to have its own experimental brewery. But industry giants need have no fear of competition — when the operation is in full swing, it produces only a trickling one keg per day.

The brewery is used in teaching malting and brewing science to students, who examine the effect of such factors as processing temperature and hop concentration on the final product. All beer is used for chemical or taste-panel analysis and experimentation.

Go Fly a Kite

Go Fly A Kite!

March is kite-flying time. The Japanese use kites to celebrate 1 of their holidays, but you don't have to wait for a special occasion to get in on the fun.

Whether you're flying an exotic Oriental kite or one you've made at home, there are a few safety tips to keep in mind. Fly your kite only in open areas like parks, beaches or fields. Be sure to stay away from power lines and never use wire as a line. If it starts to storm, pull in your kite.

Quick Takes

High blood pressure is more prevalent in people with low levels of education, reports a national study published in the American Journal of Epidemiology. The study says the disease was found to be 40% less prevalent in college graduates than in those with fewer than 10 years of education. Two explanations for the effect of educational differences: diet and incidence of overweight.

Gov't. paperwork is costing every American a staggering $500 a year, according to a 2-year survey by a Congressional commission. One major drug manufacturer testified to the recently dissolved Commission on Federal Paperwork that the 27,000 forms and reports the manufacturer must fill out for the Gov't. each year add 50¢ to the cost of every prescription drug.

Seems as though many Americans still see themselves as potential James Bonds. Despite bad press in recent months, the CIA reports it received 37,000 inquiries about jobs last year — for 1,000 openings.

There's a new reason to make sure your children are vaccinated against German measles — diabetes. An Australian research team recently reported that over a 10-year period the incidence of diabetes among the patients with congenitally acquired rubella was more than twice that in the average population. Rubella virus also has been shown to cause severe birth defects.

TIGER

Prince Valiant

by HAL FOSTER

Our Story: THE JOURNEY NORTHWARD HAS BEEN VERY PLEASANT UNTIL THEY COME TO LYON. HERE SOME ROBBER BARON HAS SET UP A TOLL TOWER AND DEMANDS A FEE TO PASS.

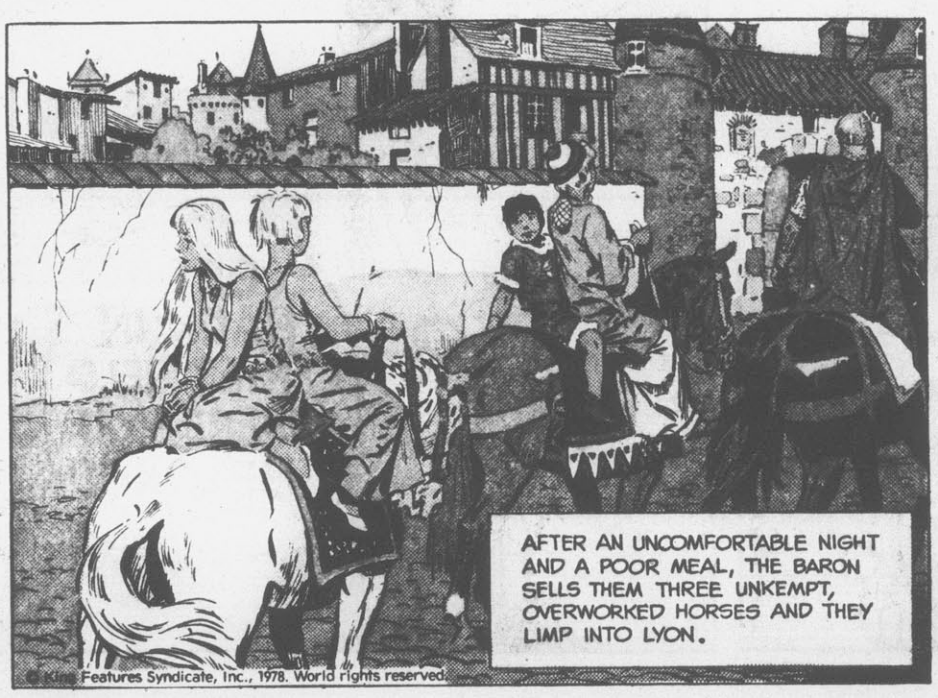

VAL DELIBERATELY DONS HIS HELMET, SHIELD AND SWORD: "GO TELL YOUR MASTER TO COME AND COLLECT THE BLACKMAIL HIMSELF!"

GROWLING AND GRUMBLING, THE ROBBER BARON COMES CLUMPING FROM THE TOWER. "WHO QUESTIONS MY TOLLS?"

"I! PRINCE VALIANT, HEIR TO THE THRONE OF THULE, AND MY CHARGE, ALETA, QUEEN OF THE MISTY ISLES, BOUND TO THE COURT OF KING ARTHUR. WE WILL ACCEPT YOUR HOSPITALITY UNTIL MOUNTS ARE FOUND FOR THE REST OF OUR JOURNEY."

THE BARON CHEVAY TAKES THE TRAVELERS ACROSS THE RHONE TO HIS DISMAL CASTLE. NEVER DID HE DREAM THAT HE MIGHT ENTERTAIN ROYALTY... HIS EFFORTS TO ASSUME COURTLY MANNERS AMUSE EVERYONE.

AFTER AN UNCOMFORTABLE NIGHT AND A POOR MEAL, THE BARON SELLS THEM THREE UNKEMPT, OVERWORKED HORSES AND THEY LIMP INTO LYON.
