UNC-HEW Dispute May Set U.S. Pattern

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — University of North Carolina officials, isolated now in their desegregation dispute with the federal government, believe they are beginning a battle that could spread to nearly every college and university in the country should UNC lose.

The officials regard moves by the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare to cut off federal funds to the university not just as an integration case, but as a struggle against federal intrusion in all of higher education, public and private.

If HEW succeeds in North Carolina, officials here suggest privately, the agency can be expected to then turn its sights on public universities of the North and, ultimately, all private schools that benefit from federal dollars.

"They (HEW) feel like if they can break us, they can break any university in the country," said one top University of North Carolina official who asked not to be named.

The real issue, says UNC President William C. Friday, is a university's authority to chart its own future.

"We're not debating race," Friday said. "We're not even debating objectives. But what we are debating is the control over the institution and intervention by federal agencies."

Although HEW has sued Mississippi and Louisiana for failing to even file desegregation plans, and a similar case against Maryland is tied up in the courts, officials here feel alone in their battle.

North Carolina is the only state, says UNC Vice President Raymond Dawson, that has tried and failed to come to terms with HEW over higher education and the guarantees of Title VI of the 1964 Civil Rights Act.

"I think we're involved in very important proceedings to determine what Title VI does mean in higher education and how far federal authority runs in higher education," Dawson said this week. "There's been a lot of case law this in elementary and secondary education, but there's almost none in higher education."

HEW targeted the 16-campus university system two weeks ago for a cutoff of federal funds, and school officials estimate as much as $89 million a year is at stake.

HEW Secretary Joseph Califano presented the move as an attack on lingering vestiges of the segregation that was once required by state law. "What we have to look at is the reality of the fact that there is a separate and unequal school system of higher education in North Carolina," he declared.

Supporting Califano are the figures. Student enrollment is still 90 percent white in the historically white campuses of North Carolina. Five traditionally black campuses are still 90 percent black.

But North Carolina officials say HEW, in asking for a 150 percent increase in black enrollment on white campuses over the next five years and setting other requirements that could lead to merger of some campuses, ignores progress made toward integration so far.

The university has begun steps to fight the move in court, hiring the Washington law firm of Jaworski and Fulbright. The UNC Board of Governors is to decide on a course in early April, and a federal suit is expected.

At the center of the dispute are HEW demands that the university promise to study merger or elimination of all graduate and many undergraduate programs that are duplicated on predominantly white and predominantly black campuses.

UNC officials fear that could mean merging major programs, such as nursing, engineering and education, or even entire schools. They might, for instance, be pressed to merge the largely black North Carolina A&T with UNC-Greensboro, a predominantly white campus in the same city.

Or HEW might even want the law school at Chapel Hill merged with the one at predominantly black North Carolina Central, 10 miles away in Durham.

Dawson says there will be no compromise on that point. "We've said we're not interested in doing that; we don't think we ought to do it, so there's no point in our telling doing that. Because we're not."

Yet North Carolina is an unlikely state to be the focus of such federal defiance. Friday, highly regarded among the nation's educators, is a shrewd administrator who argues unemotionally but has rallied the state's elected officials, Democrat and Republican, to his side.

Traditionally viewed as among the South's most progressive states, North Carolina largely avoided the bitter strife that divided other Southern states over integration of elementary and secondary schools in the 1960s.

And the university system has long been considered the crown jewel in a state whose

Chronology Of Events

By The Associated Press

The U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare's move to slash federal funds for the University of North Carolina stems from a battle that streches back nearly a decade.

Key developments in the case include the following:

—1969. HEW's Office for Civil Rights, responding to complaints from civil-rights groups, cites 10 states including North Carolina for operating "racially dual" university systems.

—1970. Civil-rights organizations in 10 states file suits against HEW for failing to enforce citations.

—February, 1973. U.S. District Court Judge John Pratt in Washington rules in favor of civil-rights groups and orders HEW to take action. HEW appeals, but Pratt's order is upheld.

—June, 1973. UNC Board of Governors submit separate desegregation plans for the university and community-college systems. They are rejected as too narrow. The federal court imposes April 8, 1974 deadline for HEW to obtain voluntary compliance from North Carolina.

—Feb. 8, 1974. UNC board approves new desegregation plan. Amendments requested by HEW are added and the plan is sent to HEW in June. HEW accepts the plan.

—1976. The NAACP Legal Defense Fund challenges plans for North Carolina and five other Southern states.

—April, 1977. Judge Pratt agrees plans are inadequate and orders HEW to issue specific criteria on how UNC and the others state systems should comply.

—July 5, 1977. HEW issues criteria calling for greater black enrollments and greater management participation by blacks.

—Aug. 22, 1977. UNC Board of Governors adopts another plan for desegregating the university.

—September, 1977. North Carolina Gov. Jim Hunt approves the university and separate community-college plans and forwards them to HEW.

—November, 1977. HEW forwards to university administrators 17 pages of commentary and questions about the plan.

—Dec. 5, 1977. UNC board adopts a plan supplement agreeing to work toward the goal of a 150 percent increase in black enrollment if HEW promises to avoid sanctions if the goal is not met.

—Feb. 2, 1978. HEW Secretary Joseph Califano approves North Carolina community-college plan, but says university plans in North Carolina, Georgia and Virginia are inadequate.

—Feb. 4, 1978. UNC Board reacts by seeking legal counsel and planning action against HEW.

—March 1978. HEW approves plans for Georgia and Virginia, but says North Carolina still lacking.

—March 22, 1978. Califano begins administrative proceedings to cutoff federal funds to UNC. At first, only new grants that "would contribute to continuing segregation" are to end, but eventually HEW could end all federal aid to the university system.

Forest Fires

By United Press International

Forest fires raged out of control from the east to the mountains of North Carolina Saturday, and the state Forest Service cancelled burning permits for the western part of the state.

The largest fires reported were a 2,000-acre blaze in Harnett County and a 1,000-acre blaze in Cherokee County.

Tom Hegele, a spokesman for the forest service said low humidity and high winds made the state's forest prime targets for fires. The National Weather Service predicted the conditions will last for at least another day.

The forest service banned burning in all counties west of and including Rutherford, Burke, Caldwell, Alexander, Wilkes, and Alleghany.

"We've had a lot of fires all across the state today," Hegele said. "Most of them have been relatively small, but with the high gusty winds they have all had the potential of enlarging."

Dane Roten of the forest service said smaller fires have been reported in Harnett, Cumberland, Swain, Richmond, Scotland, Moore and Cleveland counties.

Cleveland County authorities said a fire was burning on Crowder's Mountain near the town of Kings Mountain and close to the South Carolina border. Six fire departments have joined rangers fighting the blaze which burned out of control through Saturday evening.

Carter Declares Commitment To Black Majority Rule In Africa

By WESLEY G. PIPPERT

LAGOS, Nigeria (UPI) — President Carter declared his firm commitment Saturday to black majority rule in Africa, predicting the "towering wall of racism" will be dismantled piece by piece and turn "poverty and despair to promise and opportunity."

In a major policy address, Carter warned South Africa and Rhodesia that efforts to delay the inevitable transformation to black majority rule can only lead to "growing bloodshed."

"I have seen the towering wall of racism taken down, piece by piece, until the whites and blacks of my country could reach across it to each other," the former Georgia governor said of his native South.

"I believe that day is coming for Africa," he declared, when "blacks and whites will be able to say the words of slain civil rights leader Martin Luther King, Jr ... 'free at last, free at last, great God almighty, we are free at last!'"

Carter used the first state visit by a U.S. president to black Africa to take his toughest stand on apartheid. He said U.S. relations with South Africa "depend on ending discriminations against the nation's majority of blacks ... we stand firm on that message."

And he also spoke out against Cuban and Soviet involvement on the continent, declaring "we must not let great power rivalries destroy our hopes for an Africa at peace."

Carter, met by masses of cheering Nigerians at every turn on his first full day here, delivered his 30-minute address in the new, shiny $120 million National Theater, a Lagos showplace. On hand was Lt. Gen. Olusegun Obasanjo, Nigeria's military leader with whom he will hold three days of talks.

Majority blacks are struggling to gain control of the governments in South Africa, Rhodesia and Namibia.

Carter said the parties must decide whether to follow a path of agreement, or pursue a "rigid posture that will produce political complications, generating conflict, growing bloodshed and delay the fulfillment of their hopes."

"In the name of justice," he said, the United States believes there should be a "progressive transformation" of South Africa's white-dominated society.

"We have made it clear to South Africa that the nature of our relationship will depend on whether there is progress for full political participation for all her people in every respect in the social and economic life of the nation and an end to discrimination based on race or ethnic origin."

Worried about reports that up to 17,000 Cuban troops are massing to help Ethiopia fight secessionist rebels in the northern province of Eritrea, Carter said "military intervention of outside powers ... too often makes local conflicts even more complicated and dangerous.

"We are concerned that massive foreign troops are already planning for military action in Eritrea, which will result in greatly increased bloodshed among these unfortunate people," he said.

A large portion of his speech was devoted to economic relations with Nigeria. Africa's largest nation is the second largest exporter of oil to the United States, and Carter hopes Nigeria's promised transformation from military to democratic rule will be a blueprint for other Third World nations.

He said he would recommend

Calls To Cost More

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A 20 percent increase in-state long distance telephone rates will go into effect Monday, Southern Bell Telephone & Telegraph Co. announced Friday.

The N.C. Utilities Commission approved the increase March 24 and allowed Bell to put it into effect 10 days after the order.

The increase will net Bell and the state's independent telephone companies $22 million a year.

City Engineer Holliday Doubles As City Manager

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer

Charlie Holliday faces double duty at city hall for the next few months and he says he is relying on the cooperation of all department heads to meet the demands of the busy days ahead.

Holliday, veteran city engineer, accepted the added duties as interim city manager this past week following the resignation of Jim Caldwell.

Although Holliday is aware that the interim post will last only until the city hires a new manager, he also knows that he will be wearing two hats and functioning as manager during one of the busiest periods at city hall.

"I'll continue to work as city engineer," Holliday noted the day after taking the oath for his now office, "but I will also have the responsibility of city manager."

The city official pointed out that the "engineering staff will be asked to help continue with the duties of that office in the interim. I hope with the cooperation of the city department heads to be able to carry on in a satisfactory manner."

Holliday, who noted that he was familiar with the general operation of the city, added that he will "rely heavily" on the department officials for "guidance and advice."

The Aurora native, one of the most popular officials at city hall, said that he would try to serve as the liaison between the City Council and department heads.

Holliday, who also served for several months as interim city manager during the hospitalization of former manager Harry Hagerty, pointed to preparation of the city budget for 1978-79 as his "big concern at this time."

Other areas that he will be involved with during his interim duties include the continuation of the Community Development program activities, completion of the Cotanche Street widening and improvement project, and implementation of several storm drainage projects "in the near future."

Holliday joined the city staff in 1956, serving in a joint capacity as engineer for Greenville Utilities and the city. He organized the city engineering department in 1960.

A graduate of the University of North Carolina with a degree in engineering, Holliday came to Greenville from Pinetops where he lived for 21 years, including 12 as a town commissioner.

He is married to the former Beatrice Bennett of Edward, and they have one son, James Bennett Holliday, who resides in Florida.

Mayor Percy Cox, in recommending Holliday for the interim position at the Council's March 28 call session, noted that the city engineer had been at city hall "longer than any person here."

Cox also recommended that the Council elevate Gail Meeks, who has served as secretary to the city manager, to the new position of assistant to the city manager.

Mrs. Meeks, a Greenville native, joined the city staff in June of 1968, immediately following graduation from Rose High School.

She began her duties as secretary to City Manager Hagerty and then served under new City Manager Bill Carstarphen. Mrs. Meeks served again with Hagerty when he agreed to take the position on an interim basis following Carstarphen's resignation.

She continued her secretarial functions under Caldwell, who assumed the city manager's job in January of 1976.

The new assistant, who has been active in the preparation of the city budget in the past, indicated that budget work would be a "primary responsibility" in her new post. She noted that "we are already working on the budget" for presentation to the Council prior to June 1.

Mrs. Meeks is also responsible for the preparation of the monthly Council agenda and will continue to do that, she said.

For now, she pointed out that she will be handling some of the same duties as before and expand her duties.

Aussie April Fool

SYDNEY, Australia (UPI) — Thousands of Sydney residents were victims of an April Fool's Day prank Saturday when electronics millionaire Dick Smith sailed into the harbor towing a giant "iceberg."

With a radio reporter live broadcasting from a seat on the "iceberg," Smith fooled harborside residents, radio listeners and many newsmen who rushed to cover the event as he moved slowly up Sydney Harbor.

The "iceberg" was a barge covered with white plastic sheets, shaving cream and firefighting foam, but in the gloom and drizzle of early dawn it looked like the real thing.

Radio and television stations and newspaper offices were swamped with calls throughout the morning, and scores of small craft came to inspect the strange object. Ferry skippers politely gave way to the "iceberg."

"I just do these things for kicks. It takes the boredom out of everyday work."

Smith said he pulled the stunt to thumb his nose at critics who say an iceberg cannot be towed from the Antarctic, which he wants to do.

WINTERVILLE — Immanuel Free Will Baptist Church of Winterville will hold its first services in the new facilities today. Sunday School with Keith Manning, superintendent, will begin at 10 a.m. Morning worship services with the Rev. Alfred Cates, pastor, will begin at 11 a.m.

At 2:30 p.m., a service of dedication will be held with the Rev. Adam Scott, pastor of Homerville F.W.B. Church, Homerville, Ga., and founding pastor of Immanuel, delivering the dedicatory message.

Special music will be rendered at both services by Mrs. Carroll McLawhorn, soloist, and by the church choir under the direction of Floyd Avery. A 4:30 p.m. service of gospel music, featuring the Melody Makers of Black Jack will climax the day's activities.

The church and its pastor extend an invitation to the public.

Regaining Momentum

By ROBERT FURLOW
Associated Press Writer

ATLANTA (AP) — The bullet that killed Martin Luther King Jr. a decade ago very nearly killed his Southern Christian Leadership Conference along with him. Now, leaders say, the movement fighting for poor people's rights is regaining momentum despite its lack of a charismatic national symbol like King.

And they say that lack is probably a blessing.

"If I could find another Dr. King, I'd take him," said Hosea Williams, who was elected SCLC's executive director last August.

"It's easier to build a movement around a super-strong personality," Williams said. But he added that if a movement is built more broadly, it's more likely to last.

Back in 1968, he said, "I thought we were to the point where we could move ahead without a super-strong, charismatic personality." But Williams admits he was wrong.

"Too many of us were hooked on the man, the personality. When the personality was wiped out, it led to divisions, crumbling of SCLC," he said.

After the shooting in Memphis — 10 years ago Tuesday — King lieutenant Ralph Abernathy, an Atlanta minister like his boss, struggled for a decade to keep SCLC alive, fighting the contradictory views that King's death made the battle useless and that 1960s civil rights gains made the battle needless.

Jesse Jackson began his own organization in Chicago. Atlanta's Andy Young, now ambassador to the United Nations, left for Congress. King's widow, Coretta, began the Martin Luther King Jr. Center for Social Change, raising millions of dollars, some of which probably would have gone to SCLC.

When Abernathy stepped down as president last year, the SCLC healed a split between young militants and the old guard by electing Rev. Joseph Lowery as president, King's old title, and the fiery Williams to the post once held by Young.

Money is still "a terrible problem," Williams says, but SCLC has a $750,000 budget for the year and an ambitious list of projects which include: — Conducting its first nationwide membership drive, which Communications Director Tyrone Brooks predicts will bring requests for a million membership cards.

—Gathering of complaints from blacks and other minorities in the armed forces, then taking those complaints to Congress for action.

—Organizing folks on the economic bottom rung into "poor people's unions."

—Meeting with government officials and businessmen — and sometimes picketing or marching — to focus attention on what the SCLC sees as injustices.

A case the SCLC calls police brutality — or murder — will bring protesters to Gadsden, Ala., for a big march Tuesday, the 10th anniversary of King's death in Memphis.

SCLC has insisted that the city suspend policemen involved in the Jan. 29 shooting of a 27-year-old man. City leaders have refused.

"We're fixin' to mobilize around the issue of police brutality in several locations," said Rev. Fred Shuttlesworth, 56, a former Birmingham, Ala., pastor now living in Cincinnati.

"The old war horse returns to the scene of the battle," he crowed in a telephone call from Alabama, where two decades ago he'd been in on King's founding of SCLC, a loose-knit but influential group of black churches.

The march is in line with Lowery's inauguration promise last August that if civil rights aren't protected, America "will hear the tramp, tramp, tramp of our feet again."

SCLC leaders also are counting on the march as a show of strength, a signal that King's civil rights organization lives on.

That's part of the reason for the membership drive, which also is expected to bring in needed money.

And national SCLC leaders are hoping to beef up local chapters all over the country.

"The chapters were down to nil, and you can't revive a force like SCLC overnight," Williams said. "But you can't fight a war without an army; we've got to rebuild the chapters."

In America's big cities, the chapters are being rebuilt around younger leaders, many of them not preachers as the old leaders were, some of them not even Christian as the organization's title says.

Shuttlesworth acknowledges the changes, but he adds, "They're doing the Lord's work, and they may be more Christian than they think."

SCLC leaders say the chapters are doing significant, if sometimes-unpublicized, work such as programs to improve nutrition and fight venereal disease among ghetto-dwellers, to find jobs for the legions of unemployed blacks, to press for better schooling.

Another example is supplied by the organization's Tom Brown in Indianapolis. He's begun a program to bring existing federal programs more efficiently to the poor people they were designed to serve.

"The people who fought for the poor in the '60s were somewhat responsible for bringing good federal social action programs into being, but we haven't stayed on top of them," he said.

"We have a responsiblility to make the dollars workable for the poor and also to make the programs accountable for the taxpayers."

Shuttlesworth says "the dramatic civil rights successes of the '60s led us to believe we had conquered, that we had won the war."

Middle-class blacks had won the vote and the right to eat in any restaurant they could afford, so there was the temptation to ease off.

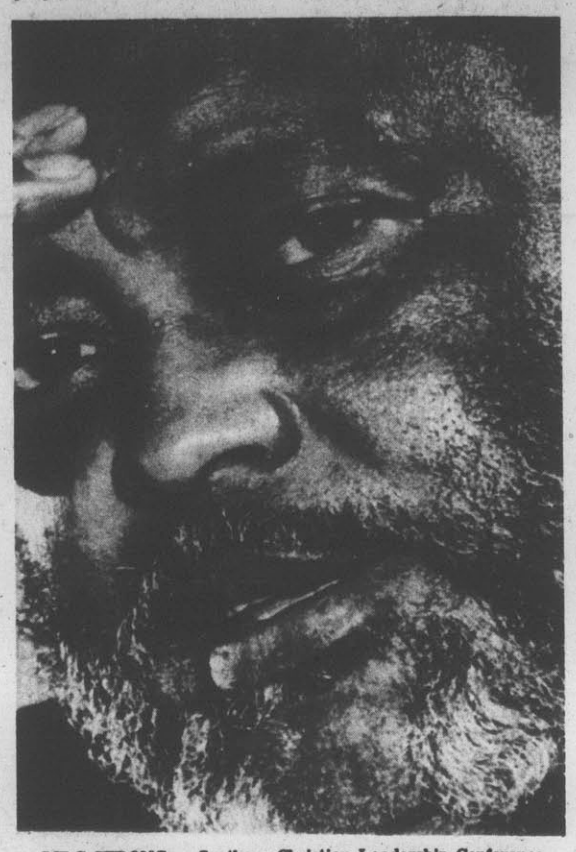

"But look at all the unemployment and poverty we got," he said. "The 1970s are plenty fertile for our work for poor people."

So SCLC will last, he said, even if no new King arrives to lead.

"It was King's hour and moment in history to get people working toward the need," he said.

"But it was his ultimate goal to get everyone involved, and that's the way it's got to be if we're going to make any progress.

"Everybody's supposed to be a King if he's going to resist evil."

SCLC STRONG — Southern Christian Leadership Conference executive director Hosea Williams says the organization is still strong despite the death ten years ago Tuesday of it's leader, Martin Luther King, Jr. But he admits if he "could find another King, I'd take him." (AP Laserphoto)

Teen-Ager Foiled In Hijack Attempt

By WILLIAM ADLER

RICHMOND, Va. (UPI) — A teen-age boy armed with a rifle failed in an attempt to hijack a Piedmont Airlines jet Saturday when an alert stewardess ushered the passengers out a rear exit and the crew escaped down a rope.

The youth, holed up alone in the Boeing 737, surrendered after two hours of talks at Byrd International Airport with FBI agents and state police who parked alongside the commandeered jet in an armored car.

Airport officials said the teenager — identified as Richard C. Bland, 15, of Shanghai, Va. — jumped a chain fence at 10:30 a.m. EST and raced to the plane with a .22-caliber rifle in his hands.

Passengers said the youth bounded onto the jet, demanded to be flown to Newark, N.J., and pointed the rifle at the hero of the hijack drama — stewardess Brenda Lilly of Virginia Beach.

"Is that a toy?" the stewardess said. Passengers said the pale, slight youngster then pulled the trigger, but the weapon did not fire.

Judy Sunshine, a passenger from Columbia, S.C., said the stewardess told the youth she had to check with the pilot. "She helped keep him calm," Miss Sunshine said.

The stewardess then led the youngster into the cockpit and sealed the door, leaving him alone inside with the pilot, Capt. C.R. Anderson, and the co-pilot, P.F. Howard.

Airport Manager Vincent L. Tolson said Anderson helped keep the boy occupied in the cockpit while Miss Lilly hustled the passengers out a rear exit to safety on the tarmac below.

Tolson said the pilot then talked the boy into sitting outside the cockpit and eating a snack. "He said there was Coke and sandwiches and he might as well relax," he said.

The airport manager said Anderson and Howard, left alone briefly in the cockpit, quickly slipped through a window, down a rope to safety.

Security forces then locked all the doors and assembled a "strike force" beside the aircraft, including an armored car and an officer with a high-powered rifle.

Officials notified the youth's mother and she was taken to the armored car, in tears, to help negotiate with her son. Police said the boy finally climbed from the jet onto a luggage rack shortly before 1 p.m.

"You don't need that rifle," police said over a bullhorn. "Why don't you just leave it there and come on down?"

The youth then gave up without a struggle.

Holliday In Two Roles...

Mrs. Meeks, who completed the office occupation program at Rose High, is married to Franklin Meeks.

Cox said Thursday that the search is already underway for a new full-time city manager. Letters have been sent out to some eight different agencies, including the League of Municipalities and National League of Cities, advertising for applicants, he noted. In addition, advertisements have been placed in several leading newspapers.

"We anticipate within a week to ten days receiving some resumes," the mayor said, adding that the city anticipates a great deal of response.

The search procedures for the new city manager will be carried out in much the same way as in the past, he said, with a committee appointed within the City Council to screen applicants and recommend candidates for further considerations and interviews.

According to Cox, Holliday has agreed to serve as interim city manager until a new manager is hired and will receive his regular pay as city engineer plus an additional amount for his new duties. Cox said that the Council has not set the interim salary yet but will do so at a workshop on April 4.

The new salary for Mrs. Meeks will also be discussed and approved at the workshop session, he reported.

The mayor said that, "I feel real good that Greenville can move forward now and our problems are behind us."

Confirms 'No Growth'

By DOLLIE L. SMITH

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — Commerce Secretary Juanita Kreps confirmed Saturday earlier reports the nation's economy had no growth between January and March and she said the unemployment rate would level off after dropping for three straight months.

But Mrs. Kreps told a North Carolina Democratic Party gathering the country is not heading for a recession and a series of economic downturns in the past week "is not cause for alarm."

The no-growth revelation, first reported by UPI Friday, was based on figures on the GNP, the broadest measure of the nation's economic health.

Complete data won't be available for several weeks, but Mrs. Kreps said:

"We know that prolonged and severe cold weather, snow and the lengthy coal strike have produced a temporary interruption in the economic growth for the first quarter. ... It seems likely that the first quarter Gross National Product, after adjustment for inflation, will be little changed from the fourth quarter of the preceding year," she said.

She said despite the worst monthly U.S. trade deficit in history reported Friday, the rising cost of farm products and the lack of economic growth, "This is not cause for alarm and does not alter our expectations that solid growth and real output will occur for 1978 as a whole."

She blamed bad weather, the coal strike and the Congress' failure to pass an energy program for the stalled GNP and the trade deficit.

"Until there is an energy program this deficit will continue to be very large," she said.

Defending President Carter's record on the economy compared to past GOP policies, Mrs. Kreps said, "We have still, however, a long way to travel down the road to full employment and we have not made the progress we had hoped to make in reducing the rate of inflation."

News Briefs

Transit, Newspaper Strikes Avoided

NEW YORK (UPI) — The Big Town's subways and buses and the Long Island Rail Road were running this beautiful spring Saturday. Even newspapers were printing. April Fool? No, just a lucky break for crisis-hassled New Yorkers.

It was the first day in months the city did not face the threat of a major strike.

Mayor Edward Koch emerged an hour before dawn and announced a tentative agreement in the transit negotiations and union leaders called off a strike by 33,000 bus and subway workers that had been threatened for 12:01 a.m.

New Yorkers also learned Saturday that the nation's largest newspaper — the Daily News — was on the verge of settling its labor problems, setting a pattern for other city newspapers.

Seize Typewriters In Moro Case

ROME (UPI) — Police Saturday seized three typewriters of the kind used by the Red Brigades kidnappers of former Premier Aldo Moro and began questioning three persons who lived in the Rome house where the typewriters were found.

Since the Red Brigades seized Moro on a Rome street March 16, slaying his five bodyguards, they have issued three messages saying he was being tried before a "people's tribunal" — all of them typed on an IBM electric typewriter with a rotary head.

Ordered To Show Cause

ELIZABETHTOWN, N.C. (AP) — State Rep. Ron Taylor, D-Bladen, has been ordered to show cause why he should not be held in contempt of court.

Superior Court Judge Giles Clark of Elizabethtown issued the show cause order which is expected to be heard here during the week of April 17.

Taylor's troubles with the court began two weeks ago when he allegedly refused to allow inspectors of the state Occupational Safety and Health Act (OSHA) inspect Taylor Tobacco Enterprises here.

Plan Christian Soap Operas

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Soap opera fans may soon have the chance to view soaps that offer a hope and a solution.

So says Jim Bakker, president and talk show host of the PTL evangelistic television network. PTL is developing the soap operas to fill out its expanded broadcasting schedule that begins Monday.

'Shape Up Or Ship Out'

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Wake County Sheriff Robert Pleasants said he felt that some things needed saying to his deputies so he issued a memorandum ordering his men to "shape up or ship out."

The memo was one of five issued to deputies Wednesday. One of the others was entitled "illegal weapons" and called for the immediate collection of department-issued weapons for inventory and inspection.

Helms Hits Closure

OXFORD, N.C. (AP) — Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., said Friday the Carter administration decision to close the Tobacco Production Research Station in Oxford is a "classic case of being penny wise and pound foolish."

Helms made his statement after a tour of the facilities. He said he had learned of "an astonishing breakthrough in tests showing tobacco has the highest potential of any green plant in providing protein to feed, and to improve the health of hungry people all over the world."

Sophia, Carlo Ponti Charged

ROME (UPI) — A Rome prosecutor charged actress Sophia Loren and her film producer husband Carlo Ponti Saturday with illegal exports of Italian currency — a charge that could get them from one to six years in prison.

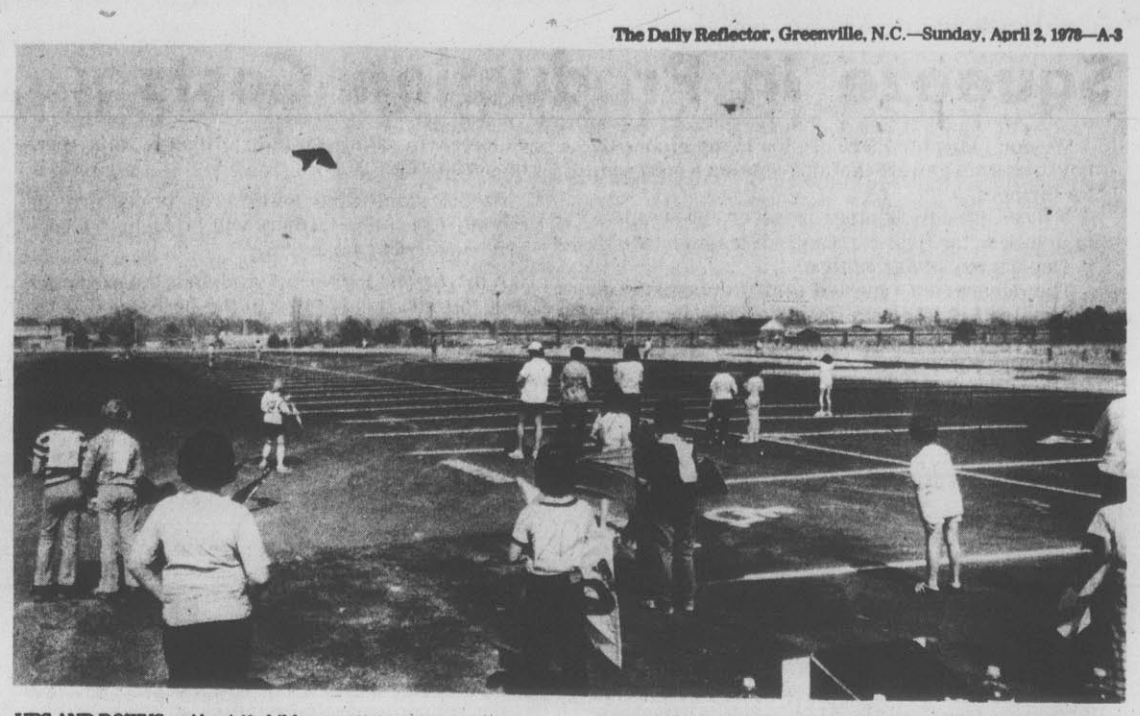

Prosecutor Paolini Dell'anno issued an arrest warrant for Ponti, 65, but none against Miss Loren, 43. He would not explain why only one arrest warrant was issued.

Miss Loren and Ponti were outside Italy and cannot be extradited because they are French citizens. But they can be tried in absence and if convicted would be jailed if they ever return to their native land.

Dr. Haddad Dies

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Dr. Wadi Haddad, a Palestinian pediatrician who masterminded some of the world's most spectacular terrorist operations and was No. 1 on Israel's most wanted list, died in East Germany, Beirut newspapers reported today.

They did not say when the 49-year-old Haifa-born Marxist guerrilla died, only that he died of "an incurable disease" in a Berlin hospital.

UPS AND DOWNS — About 40 children participated in a kite flying contest sponsored by the Greenville Recreation and Parks Department Saturday afternoon. First place winners for the contest are: Chris Ables, age group 5-7; Shelia Perrson, age group 8-9; Tony Little, age group 10-11; Steven Johnson, age group 12-14; and Karie Seykora, for the best homemade kite. Carol Whiteford, a recreation department spokesman, said heavy winds hindered children from obtaining height with their kites and many of the kites were demolished when flyers couldn't let out enough string due to wind pressure. Kreps Endorses Hodges

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — U.S. Commerce Secretary Juanita S. Kreps stirred intraparty passions by publicly endorsing Luther H. Hodges Jr. for the U.S. Senate at a party breakfast Saturday.

Near the end of her address, which centered on the nation's economic health, Mrs. Kreps called upon Democrats to choose their Senate candidates and said, "My own candidate is Luther Hodges."

Secretary Kreps, a Duke University vice president until her nomination last year by President Carter, drew a heated reaction from other major candidates and their partisans for her use of a party function to endorse Hodges.

Wants Negotiations Resumed

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — Commerce Secretary Juanita Kreps urged North Carolina to resume negotiations with federal officials in their dispute over the University of North Carolina desegregation plan.

Mrs. Kreps, joining hundreds of North Carolinians in the capital for the traditional Jefferson-Jackson fundraising weekend, said North Carolina had led the nation in providing quality education for all races, and she wanted that to continue.

per-capita income is among the lowest in the nation, and whose elementary schools have often gone lacking while the colleges grew.

It is at the risk of that reputation that the legal battle will be fought. The university would lose much, officials concede, if its liberal reputation is tarnished with a new image of bigotry.

HEW began looking into university integration in several states under federal court orders resulting from suits by civil rights groups. Califano has said that Texas, South Carolina, Alabama, Ohio, Missouri, Kentucky, Delaware and West Virginia are next.

Yet North Carolina education officials say their case is more complex because of UNC's structure, which is closer to that of comparable institutions in New York and California than those in other Southern states.

None of the other states whose plans were approved have more than three black campuses, and most have just one.

Besides the possibilities of mergers, Friday took issue with HEW's 150 percent enrollment goal. It cannot be met, Friday said, largely because of what the state has done so far to recruit blacks.

The state has spent $26 million to upgrade black campuses since 1972, Dawson said, and another $300,000 a year in special scholarships to attract blacks to white campuses and whites to black campuses.

"The penalty we face is that North Carolina has already done many of the things that these states whose plans have been approved are just now promising to do," Friday said. "Had we been in the business of making promises rather than reporting accomplishments, I believe our plan would have been accepted."

to Congress a $125 million contribution to the African Development Fund, and U.S. Army Corps of Engineers aid in the River Niger development project.

Because of Carter's late arrival Friday night, Obasanjo provided the president a gaudy official welcome Saturday. A 21-gun salute was fired in his honor at Dodan Barracks, Obasanjo's residence, and he laid a wreath at Remembrance Arch, the memorial to Nigeria's war dead.

Nigerian soldiers, in green and gray uniforms with red piping, played bugles as Carter stood silently, head bowed, right hand over heart. Large raindrops began falling from low hanging clouds but provided no relief from the blistering tropical heat.

In his speech, Carter said U.S. efforts to help settle the problem of Namibia, which borders South Africa, "have reached a critical state."

The former German colony is administered by South Africa in violation of U.N. resolutions calling for full independence. The United States, Britain, France, West Germany and Canada are pushing for one-man, one-vote, elections under U.N. auspices to assure Namibia's independence.

On Rhodesia, he said, "Great Britian and the United States have put forward a plan for a solution based on three fundamental principles":

—Free and fair elections.

—An irreversible transition to genuine majority rule and independence.

—Respect for the individual rights of all citizens of an independent Zimbabwe, the nationalist name for Rhodesia.

"This plan provides the best basis for agreement. It is widely supported within the international community and by presidents of the frontline nations (bordering Rhodesia), Carter said.

"Its principle must be honored. Let there be no question of our commitment to these principles or our determination to pursue a just settlement which brings a cease-fire and an internationally recognized legal government."

March For Wilmington 10

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — More than 1,500 supporters of clemency for the Wilmington 10 marched through downtown Raleigh Saturday to the State Capitol, chanting for release of the group in a demonstration marred by a struggle between police and two of the marchers.

Once at the capitol, the marchers listened until late afternoon to speeches denouncing Gov. Jim Hunt's failure to pardon the Wilmington 10, and deploring competency testing, convictions of the Charlotte 3 and racism around the world.

While police described the marchers as generally well-behaved, a struggle occurred between police and two marchers at one point.

Police charged the two marchers with assaulting an officer while several eyewitnesses complained of excessive force by police.

The incident began when a citation was issued to Allen Blitz of Greensboro, who operated a sound system for the march, for violating a city noise ordinance, Blitz said.

"He was given a citation. Some others resented the citation and assaulted Capt. (C.L.) Price and knocked him down," Raleigh Police Chief Robert E. Goodwin said. "They were taken to the Magistrate's office."

Police identified those arrested as Nelson N. Johnson, 34, a march official who returned to speak at the rally after being released on bond, and Kurt M. Krumperman, 26, of Durham.

DOG VACCINATION CLINICS SCHEDULE

The Pitt County Community Health Department is again offering county wide dog vaccination clinics to the citizens of Pitt County as a convenience to them and in its effort to keep Pitt County free of rabies.

All dogs four (4) months old and over are to be vaccinated. Dogs receiving their first vaccination this year will need to be vaccinated again in 1979. For dogs that have been previously vaccinated, the vaccination is good for three (3) years.

The vaccine will be administered by licensed Doctors of Veterinary Medicine, using the latest advancement in vaccine development.

The General Statutes of North Carolina require that all dogs be vaccinated and that they display the vaccination tag at all times. This tag can also be used to identify your dog if lost or strayed. Please take your dog to the clinic nearest your home for this vaccination. Again this year, all of the clinics will be held in the evening as an additional convenience.

Squeeze In Production Costs

We don't suppose there are too many around by now who aren't aware that 1977 was not a good year for farmers.

If there are any doubters, however, they need only to look at the figures recently released by the U. S. Department of Agriculture.

The department reported that it anticipates its figures will show North Carolina farm income at around $20 billion for 1977, about the same as for the previous year.

The problem is that, while farmers were not getting any more for their products, costs of production were going up and thus the profit squeeze.

To no one's surprise the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond predicts that production expenses are expected to climb in 1978, although at a more moderate rate.

At the same time lower crop prices are anticipated meaning farmers will be facing "a cost-price squeeze again in 1978."

A bright spot for North Carolina is the prediction that tobacco seems to be in the best shape of the various crops.

It is anticipated that tobacco use will hold steady for 1977-78.

It could be another tight year for many farmers. For our area alot depends on how ideal growing conditions are and how well the price of tobacco holds up.

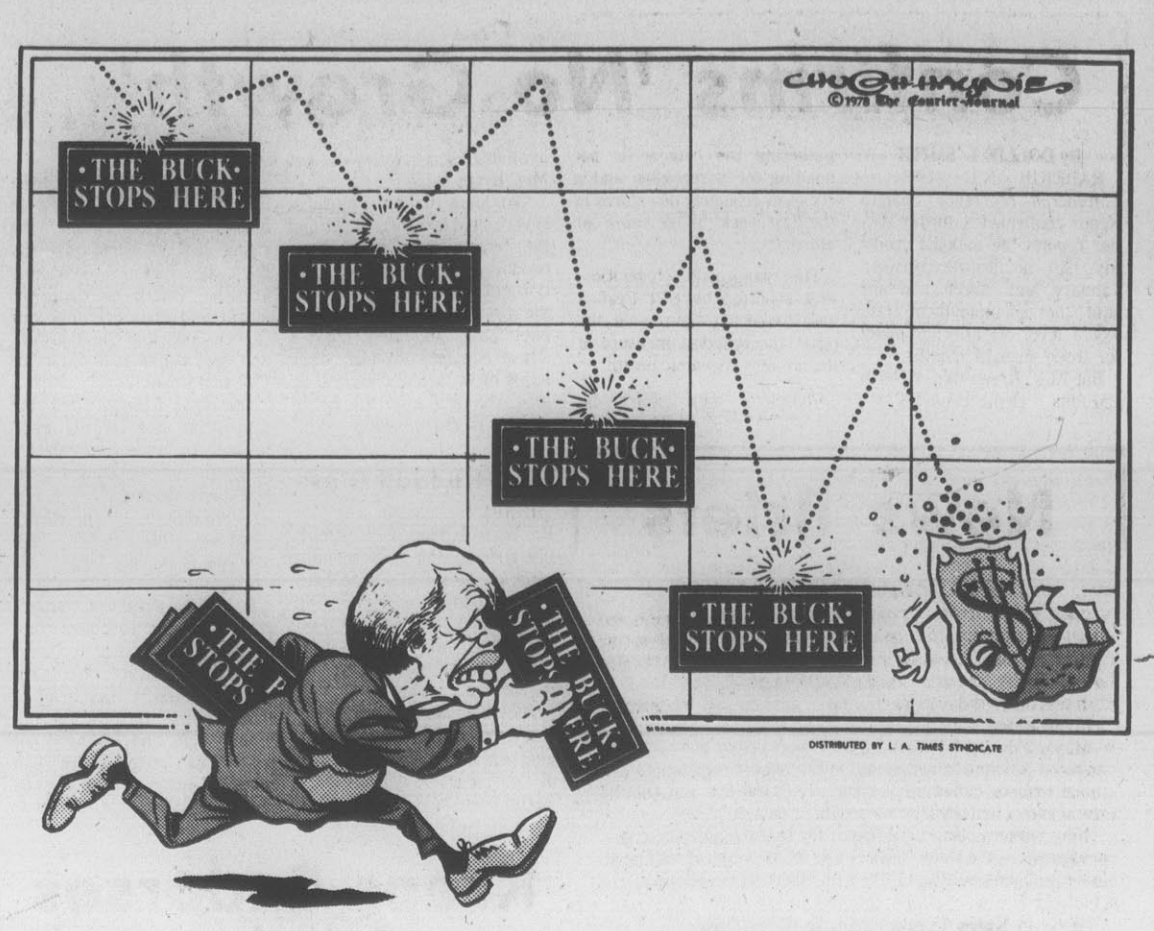

Making Tobacco Program Look Better

Facing the farm problems the Carter administration is proposing programs which would increase farm income by $3 to $4 billion during the year.

Included are paying to idle grain and cotton acreage, increasing the loan rate on soybeans and allowing livestock to graze a portion of wheat acreage.

With all its problems the tobacco program seems to be in better shape that other farm programs and hopefully with only minor tuning the program can be left alone.

As for the other programs, the administration seems bent on getting some remedies started to placate dissatisfied farmers before Congress acts on its own.

THIS AFTERNOON

For Many, Home No Joy

By HOWARD N. LEE
Sec., N.C. Department of Natural Resources and Community Development

RALEIGH — Each night persons living in one out of four housing units in this state return from work or school to a home that is without running water or is dilapidated or is overcrowded.

If there's one thing that best reflects the poor economic conditions of this state, it is the places in which our poor live. From the houses on stilts adjoining the tobacco fields in the east, to the picturesque, but primitive homes in our mountains, there are 350,000 substandard houses in North Carolina.

It's a problem that's spread across our state. In 39 of our counties a minimum of 40 percent of the houses are substandard. In 12 of the counties more than one out of two houses are substandard.

The statistics don't adequately reflect the miserable living conditions. And for those who think this is a problem of the poor, let me assure them inadequate housing multiplies all of our social problems, contributes to economic stagnation, and diminishes growth potential for communities.

What can we do to turn the situation around? First, be realistic. Before we can solve a problem we must admit there is one. North Carolinians have a proud history of solving problems once there is widespread public recognition of them.

Local Help

Second, as individuals we can urge our elected representatives to support housing programs at the local and state level. We can't continue to depend on federal government to carry the full load.

Also, as members of churches we can urge the leadership to invest more of the church's financial and human resources in providing better housing. With Relatively inexpensive rehabilitation of some houses, churches could improve the quality of life for many citizens. Few things are more charitable or brotherly than to provide a decent home for our fellow North Carolinians.

To focus a state's resources on this problem we have for the first time created a Division of Community Housing. New programs that have already begun or will begin in the future include:

BILL NOBLITT

— Use of federal funds to train unemployed persons as skilled construction workers. Their training activities will center on rehabilitation of inadequate housing.

— Expand the funding assistance provided by the N.C. Housing Finance Agency, which has helped 600 low income families buy decent housing at reduced interest rates. Without that help, many of those families would still be living in ramshackle houses.

Downtown

— Better use of urban renewal land as an incentive for single family home construction. Urban renewal land can be sold at a nominal cost to the prospective homeowners and the equity of the land used as a down payment on the home.

— Increase the state's share of available federal housing funds. We've already had some success in this area.

We will encourage local governments to consider tax incentives and valuation benefits as means of reducing the cost of home ownership and construction. The job won't get done without a public-private partnership.

Finally, two points: First, inadequate housing isn't a problem for just the poor. There is an inadequate supply of houses available for young medium income people and for the elderly. We are beginning to work on those problems, too.

Second, we are going to put additonal emphasis on home ownership, rather than public housing. Public housing is sometimes practical, but in many cases is a stop-gap. For those of us living in the suburbs of North Carolina communities, owning our home has been part of attaining the American dream. We believe that a goal of this state should be to make that dream of a good home a reality for as many North Carolinians as possible. We must give people a chance to escape from the sometimes nightmarish conditions in which they live.

Sunday Morning Notes

Last weekend was Easter, one of the few times that the Christian observance comes in March.

The weather, in contrast to what we have come to expect on Easter Sunday, was cloudy and rainy

As if to make Easter complete, however, the clouds did roll away in the late afternoon. Almost immediately the bikers and joggers were out.

The tennis courts at Elm Street Park and adjacent to Minges on the campus were soon filled with players.

And, of course the golfers couldn't resist the late afternoon sun. One golfer was practicing on the field along Charles Boulevard behind Minges, even though the low grassy area was still quite soggy from the heavy rainfall.

It was only a brief gift of more typical Easter weather, however. That evening heavy clouds moved in once again, and a Spring storm was underway, complete with heavy lightning and thunder.

At least, though, Spring was here.

This Sunday April is here, the true month of Spring.

Even though we won't have Easter to look forward to this April, there will be the rapidly blooming flowers, budding trees and, best of all, warmer weather!

The tradition was upheld in this area during the month.

Kites are becoming fancier. There was a time when the diamond-shaped kites of light weight paper stretched over balsam frameswere the standard.

Occasionally one would see a box kite.

Now, however, we see the Oriental type kites — dragons and such, complete with streamers for tails and bright coloring.

When one of the fancy ones crashes into a tree and is destroyed, the loss is awesome.

Kite flying is now giving away to baseball and softball. There's hardly a vacant lot where some group doesn't gather, set up four makeshift bases, come up with a bat and ball and a game is underway.

To the editor:

In today's changing society, everyone's goals have been increased for fast attainment. Many people feel a college degree is unnecessary. Why go to school for four years when you can achieve the same knowledge in two?

After 16 years of school, many people find that their friends they left at home have advantage over them. They have established themselves at jobs, earning money the college grad feels could be his. College students also face the dilemma of becoming over-qualified. Employers feel that college graduates expect to advance more rapidly than their company has planned. Companies spend millions of dollars for training employees, so it is economical to hire a high school graduate and train him or her.

Several reasons may be cited for the benefits of a college degree. For example, the high school graduate may not know exactly what kind of career he wishes to pursue. College gives an individual a chance to see where his interest may lie, as well as an opportunity to meet different people and obtain different views.

Another reason is the "well-rounded" aspect of a college degree. A degree in business does not mean that the student has taken all business courses. They have taken required courses which help them to establish themselves as an individual with an insight to other aspects of life as well.

A college graduate has exhibited several unique qualities. Self-discipline and endurance are important traits which must be acquired in college. The graduate has proven he could endure by the mere fact that he has successfully completed college.

The purpose of this letter is not to condemn any kind of educational process. Nor is it our intent to condone college as the only way. For many, college is not the answer. Every individual must decide what is right for himself. One should remember, however, that college is a chance to expand into many areas.

Gold Town Revival

By CHARLOTTE PORTER
Associated Press Writer

ROCKERVILLE, S.D. (AP) — Rockerville was quite a town a century ago, the local folks say, full of saloons and shops and the hustle and bustle that goes with a gold rush.

Today it is a sleepy little place — population 10 — an assortment of storefronts nestled in a valley between the lanes of a highway that takes the summer flood of tourists from nearby Rapid City to Mount Rushmore.

Except for an ancient black pickup and faint strains from a radio, few signs of life greet the stray visitor.

But big things are in store for Rockerville, or so say the two men who bought the town at auction last October for

Battle For CIA Survival

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — The threat to the survival of the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) posed by the legislation for its new charter is clearly sounded by extreme proposals in the bill's draft even though some of the worst have been removed.

The most bizarre proposal in the original draft would have legitimized tale-telling out of school by junior CIA officers. This hard-to-believe section instructed junior officers to take their complaints about "improper" activities directly to the Attorney General without informing their CIA superiors.

After outraged protests from the intelligence community, this section was removed. But it reveals all too well the mindset of the Senate committee staff. Like many counterparts in the Carter administration, they are part of the post-Vietnam syndrome in their fear of American power. Indeed, they seem motivated more by a desire to cripple U.S. intelligence than to revamp a system to compete with the high-flying Soviet model.

So the time of troubles for the nation's intelligence system, after all the revelation of secrets, is not ended. The battle for CIA's survival begins next week with Senate Intelligence Committee hearings on the new charter. The committee staff, headed by the clever and immensely influential William G. Miller, showed precisely where it stands in its preparation of the draft charter.

Answering Miller's request for comment, former CIA directors protested bitterly about the draft. One wrote that it does not attempt "to enhance the proper functioning of an efficient intelligence service, but rather...to prevent one from operation." Despite the toning-down of some noxious proposals, the draft is still loaded with restrictions on both clandestine intelligence gathering (espionage) and covert actions ("dirty tricks").

[illegible] that the benefits "justify" the risks of possible disclosure "to a foreign power"; that "less sensitive" alternatives cannot achieve the desired end.

Students of intelligence, including former CIA directors, fear that putting a President's personal prestige on the line would drastically reduce future covert activities. So sensitive are such operations, with their admittedly high risk of exposure or failure, that a President's signature ordering them might later be used as blackmail against him.

At least as troubling to U.S. intelligence specialists is the effort of Congress to become, in effect, senior partner with the executive in the CIA's future business. For example, the Senate and House Intelligence Committees are made active parties in drafting presidential directives and "standards" governing high-risk espionage; they would approve these presidential directives 60 days before they become effective.

That implies a congressional veto, in the view of intelligence experts. At least, it provides extended consultation between the executive and legislature giving Congress an unprecedented power to share complex espionage decisions.

While the draft law does continue the President's power to order covert operations on his own, he must report in detail to the two congressional intelligence committees (which have a total of 29 members). Considering Capitol Hill's record of in-

Strength For Today

POWER OF CONFIDENCE

Doubters never build anything. One pessimist can tear down the patient achievement of a dozen hard-working men and women. If we do not believe we can do a thing, we are probably right. Success depends upon many things, but above everything else it depends upon our confidence that success is possible. Start any project with a conviction that it will not succeed, and your worst fears will come true.

The reason for this situation appears to be that the whole universe is positive, not negative. The rising of the sun every day, the rotation of the seasons, the springing up of new life — all these events are positive in their nature rather than negative. The essence of the universe is affirmation, not denial. Jesus declared that if we pray for something and believe we have received it, we will soon discover — perhaps to our amazement — that we have already received it.

Confidence is not the only quality we need for success, but without it, success is impossible.

Overwhelmed By Government

By JOHN CUNNIFF

NEW YORK (AP) — William Norris, founder of Control Data, which now has revenues far in excess of a billion dollars a year, was asked if risk-taking was more common in the early days of his company.

"Oh, yes," he replied. "We actually bet the company three times. And we damn near lost it."

The first time was when the company threw all its funds into development of its 1604 electronic computer, and then didn't have money to build it. A last-minute government contract saved the day.

"If you hadn't (won the contract) you would have gone out of business?" Norris was asked. "Oh, we'd have been broke. No question about it," he replied.

Repartee of this sort is rare, corporation executives being such insecure creatures they tend not to reveal themselves. But Chester Burger won their confidence, and their candid opinions.

Burger, a management consultant and author, tape-recorded the views of 15 chief executives on what it's like to sit alone at the head of a corporation, to feel the responsibility, the power — or absence of it.

The transcriptions were then sent back to the executives. Only one made any change of substance, and that one only to protect another person from embarrassment.

The resulting product is "The Chief Executive," soon to be in bookstores, with a foreward by John D. deButts, the man who heads AT&T, the world's biggest corporation, who comments about his job:

"It makes very little difference that we who are presumed to be so powerful have very little occasion to feel that way." And who asks, "When the chief executive officer speaks, does anybody listen?"

In hours of conversation, Burger learned enough about executives to produce another book. He learned, for example, "Their work is their life. They are overwhelming workers."

But, said Burger in an interview, there is no common personality type. "Some are outgoing, some are painfully shy."

Most of those he interviewed, 15 in all, came from middleclass backgrounds, "ordinary people whose ability and talents got them to the top."

He found they are "terribly conscious of the insecurity of their jobs." Not that they constantly fear getting fired, but that they exert so little control over events that affect their performance.

They have access to computer printouts and expert's opinions, but they must often make very personal, lonely decisions. They are bothered too by not knowing for years whether their decision was right or wrong.

"They are overwhelmed, every last one of them, by the government. They recognize that they must adjust and compromise, and that right is not on one side or the other. But they find government making rules for which it has no accountability."

Chief executives find it difficult to relax. "My feeling is that the chief executive officer doesn't know how to play," said Burger. "They are just as competitive on the golf course."

To the editor:

Fellow citizens, we should be proud of OUR Greenville Rescue Squad. They are first class — World Champions in International Competition, no less!

I recently was in a CPR class taught by this squad. They were teaching how it is possible to restart a heart when it has stopped beating. If you or your family ever experience a medical emergency in Greenville, these highly trained Rescue persons will show they're first class people.

The City of Greenville treats OUR Rescue Squad in a second-class manner. The squad has repeatedly appealed for separate department and facilities (away from the Fire Dept.) City officials refuse to accept these problems as real and the appeals have fallen on deaf ears. This second-class treatment from those who could correct the situation is not warranted.

The squad, not only does not have enough space for its equipment, but it does not even have office space it can call its own. Female Squad members don't even have bathroom facilities! In other words, the Squad is cramped for space in a building that was too small 19 years ago. How do I know? I've done what City officials obviously have not done. I've been to the Rescue Building, talked with squad members (though many were reluctant to speak openly for fear of loss of jobs) and seen the cramped conditions myself.

Any citizen can do the same. If members of the City Council would avail themselves of this opportunity, I fail to see how they can possibly refuse to help alleviate these glaring problems.

Squad members have even asked to be allowed to raise funds to build their own building (They already have promise of land).

This concept of separate department and facilitites has been openly opposed by city officials — and only citizens like ourselves can remedy this. It's up to us to bail out the rescue squad and show we care and appreciate their work.

To the editor:

The Greenville Rescue Squad has got to be one of the best assets of your city. I have just finished a fund-raising project with your squad. You supported them well. The squad worked very hard and the project was successful.

I would like to heap special praise on Capt. D. R. Daniels. He was in charge of the project and he worked day and night for several weeks to insure its success. He is a fine officer, gentleman and a tremendous asset to Greenville and its squad. He has tremendous pride in himself, his squad and his city. He speaks highly of his squad's accomplishments and the cooperation the squad receives from the mayor, city council and community. If Capt. Daniels is an example of other city employees, then Greenville can be proud.

The other employees of my company have expressed sincere pleasure in working with Capt. Daniels, also.

Approximately four years ago, my company did this same project with your squad. Capt. Daniels was in charge then, also, and the project was successful. My company works with many organizations in many cities and states. By far, your squad, your city and especially Capt. Daniels outshine any I've seen.

My employees and I say thank you to a great organization, the Greenville Rescue Squad.

To the editor:

Last week I overheard a lady say that the Jaycee chapters did little to help others, that Jaycees only believe in parties and good times.

For this reason, I'd like to write about a particular Jaycee chapter, the Upper Greene County Jaycees. This is a prison chapter at Maury.

The chapter was chartered in August, 1977 and is recognized by the N. C. State Jaycees, the U. S. Jaycees and the International Jaycees. Here is a rundown on the chapter's activities since being chartered:

The chapter's first project was to raise money for the Maury Volunteer Fire Deparment — $100. The second was to raise $100 for the 10 million-penny project at Camp Sertoma to build a swimming pool for handicapped children.

The chapter has conducted a winterization project for the elderly, cleaned up a cemetery that had been torn up by vandals, raised $500 for the North Carolina Burn Center, recruited 54 donors for the N. C. Eye and Human Tissue Bank. It is responsible for building and maintaining a Jaycee kiddy park at the Greene County Unit and are raising money for the Easter Seals Foundation and Cerebral Palsy Foundation.

They've tried donating blood, but the blood bank says federal law won't allow inmate blood donations. It's a shame that hundreds of blood donors cannot give their God-given blood.

Oh, yes, the chapter did have a Christmas party. The members raised money so a few men and their wives and families could have a happier Christmas.

Yes, we believe in parties, but only when they're to help others as well as ourselves.

telligence leaks and congressional refusal to submit its staffers to the same security safeguards that govern the executive, U.S. intelligence and cooperating foreign governments would be under a constant threat of exposure.

Even worse provisions have been removed from early drafts, such as outlawing any attempt by the CIA to seek help from another country for an activity the U.S. could not perform. Use of so-called "third country" allies is standard practice for every nation capable of running an intelligence service.

That and other early proposals were stricken from the draft because of protests from former CIA directors. But present CIA Director Stansfield Turner has carefully refrained from premature attack on the new charter. The reason: fear of affronting the powerful anti-intelligence cult still in vogue both in Congress and in influential middle-level ranks of the administration.

A Conservative View

Requires A Plentitude Of Felicitous Fortune

By JAMES J. KILPATRICK

WASHINGTON — President Carter on March 23 issued an Executive Order having to do with federal regulations. From now on, he said, he wants these regulations to be "as simple and clear as possible." He wants them written "in plain English."

The president might have asked, at the same level of expectation, for the sun, the moon, the stars, peace in the Mideast, and a workable energy bill. Mr. Carter is trudging along in the identical paths that Messrs. Johnson, Nixon and Ford have trod so ineffectively before him. Let us wish him a surplusful plentitude of felicitous fortune, or, translated from the bureaucratese, good luck.

He will need it. Mr. Carter, one may charitably assume, did not draft his own Executive Order. It was drafted for him by a few faceless fellows somewhere in the basement of the White House. The authors of Mr. Carter's plain English directive asked for "meaningful alternatives." They spoke in the Order of things that must be "minimized." They had Mr. Carter referring to "the decisionmaking process," all one word.

"The following requirements shall govern the preparation of regulatory analyses," the president directed. "(a) Criteria. Agency heads shall establish criteria for determining which regulations require regulatory analyses. The criteria established shall (1) ensure that regulatory analyses are performed for all regulations which will result in (A) an annual affect on the economy of $100 million or more..." and so forth.

One sighs. The anonymous authors didn't mean "regulations which." Under the rule that governs defining and non-defining clauses, they meant "regulations that." They didn't mean an "annual affect," they meant an "annual effect." They did not truly need to fall into the sludge of "implementation" and "meaningful" and "selection criteria." They should have flinched at exempting "regulations that are issued in response to an emergency or which are governed by short-term statutory or judicial deadlines." Arggh!

Mr. Carter is making a brave effort. He deserves all the encouragement the people can give him, but the poor fellow faces an impossible task.

His first problem is that most of the regulations that irritate him are written by persons who suffer, in the jargon of the day, a clarity disability. The syndrome is manifested in two ways. Some of the regulation writers, in their heart of hearts, do not truly want to be clear; the rest are incapable of being clear.

Contrary to what you might suppose, being clear has its drawbacks and being unclear has its benefits. For example: The regulators at the Occupational Safety and Health Administration, if they had put their minds to it, could have written a regulation governing safe exits in a page or two at most. This would have been the English version. Everyone would have understood it. No interpretations, clarifications, constructions, amendments, amendments to amendments, revisions and republications would have been required. Horrors! Fifty-five employees would thus have been rendered embarrassingly idle. But by writing 37 pages of regulations instead, useless work was assured for all of them for months on end.

Doubtless in OHSA's case, there was no such conscious motivation. The 37 pages were demanded by the lawyers. Alas, even when bureaucrats want desperately to write understandably, they cannot bring it off. The training of a lifetime will not permit it. Their minds are set in library paste. They have only to open their mouths and instinct does the rest. They babble in tongues.

I attended a meeting of professional urbanologists the other day. Every word they uttered was an English word; their every sentence had a definable subject and verb. But after 45 minutes, I realized I had not understood a thing they were saying. One expert spoke earnestly of prioritizing the ongoing input. Another asserted Mr. Carter's need to redefine and restructure the corollary mechanisms. Forlornly, I begged one of these distinguished experts to tell me, in a few words, what she wanted most for her neighborhoods.

"Streamlining," she said, and she said it decisively, smacking her hand on the table for emphasis. "Streamlining the guidelines so as to reorder the multiple applications."

Hang in there, Mr. Carter! And don't let the regulators get you down.

Otto Knows Those Old Superstitions, Laughs

PAWLEYS ISLAND, S.C. — The day was clear — sharp with the smell of spring flowers. Overhead there was a high, bright blue sky, its western edges not yet seared red by the falling sun. The air was heavy and sultry, silent with the impertinent lethargy of a late afternoon.

Beyond the trees it was burning hot. We listened without moving to the rhythm of cars passing by on the highway. Otto Brown has been telling stories. He knows the area "like the back a' me hand."

John Allen Young is supposed to show up. He's actually seen a plat-eye and been led on a wild journey all over the Litchfield marshes by the han't (ghost).

Otto squints hard out from under the shade, but no one is coming. He rubs his tough, gray bristles and leans back on the bench, holding his knee.

"Death", he gossips, the smooth resonance of his voice barely audible in the stillness, "death has always been the black man's greatest weakness."

"Weakness?" I ask. "How's that?"

"It's what we've always lived with, always been afraid of," Otto speaks to my ignorance.

"At a funeral, you know, when somebody would die? We'd pass all the younger children, maybe up to t'ree or four years, we'd pass 'em all over the grave so's no ghost would come back and get 'em.

"Yeh, yeh," Otto smiles and leans forward, his hand again at his chin. "We don't do that now, but we used to. We used to. Like putting a sheet over a mirror in a dead man's room, we used to do that too, so's his spirit wouldn't get out, I guess."

Otto isn't always sure of the reasons for such customs, most of which have died out, he says, since World War II, but he knows the old ways and can tell the old stories better than anyone around.

"And when there's a thunderstorm," Otto whispers, "when there's a thunderstorm they used to make all the children be quiet like death itself. For the Lord was talking in the thunder, and you had to listen close to understand what he was saying. Real close.

"Hags, too. Used to be you had to watch out for hags." Otto laughs again. He enjoys telling stories to strangers, especially gullible ones who write them all down.

"Hags," unlike "han'ts," are the spirit of living persons who wish you ill. They very often visit when you're asleep and sit on your chest so heavily you wake sweating, short of breath and racked with pain.

How do you get rid of the hags? There are a number of ways.

One is to fix a pot of boiling grease and look into it just before you go to sleep. Most hags will be scared off.

By far the best way though, is to hire a hag catcher. They'll come sit with you when you sleep, and when you begin to moan they'll wave an open bottle filled with pins and needles over you, then quickly screw on the cap.

"Yeh," Otto reminisces, "folks hereabouts used to believe all those things but not anymore. Only the old folks. They know a lot of stories about ghosts. More'n me even. But you gotta ask them. Nobody believes that stuff anymore."

Then Otto chuckles once more. "Course there's one superstition hangs on quite a bit 'round here," he says.

"What's that?" I ask.

"Well," Otto puts his hands on his knees, smiles broadly and rocks back on the bench. "If you plant a cedar tree and it don't grow, that's a sure sign of death in the immediate family. A sure sign!"

"So nobody plants cedar trees?" I take the bait.

"Why no," Otto replies. "You gets somebody to plant 'em for you." He grins at me and wipes his mouth.

"I'm a landscape engineer and been planting cedar trees for 20 years, fer as many white folk as black, and I ain't dead yet."

"Course." Otto concludes with a sly wink, "I ain't got no family left to make it matter much anymore."

The sun was red over the tree tops and I slapped a mosquito. Otto was tired of telling stories. He got up and stretched. John wasn't going to make it.

What the heck, he didn't want to make too much of a fool out of a wet-nosed writer in Bermuda shorts anyway.

Banners proclaiming the sale are still plastered to some Old West buildings. They will disappear with the overall facelift promised for Rockerville Gold Town in an effort to divert the tourist stream.

The owners of Rockerville Gold Town — Jon Cochran of Rapid City, a former car dealer, and Ken Andrews, a Phoenix, Ariz., land developer — say they want to restore the town to its original Old West flavor without making it so historical that it would be dull.

The town was born when gold was discovered. By 1880 more than 1,000 people lived there. But water was needed to mine the gold, and when a plan to bring water to the mines died, the town slowly died, too.

By the time Rockerville was developed into a tourist attraction in 1953, little remained of the original boom town but an old log cabin.

The Gold Town is divided into three major parts along a single street — a cluster of rustic mining buildings, a business lane with turn-of-the-century storefronts and a restaurant and theater.

But most of the antiques for sale were bought by Andrews and Cochran, according to the real estate firm that handled the sale.

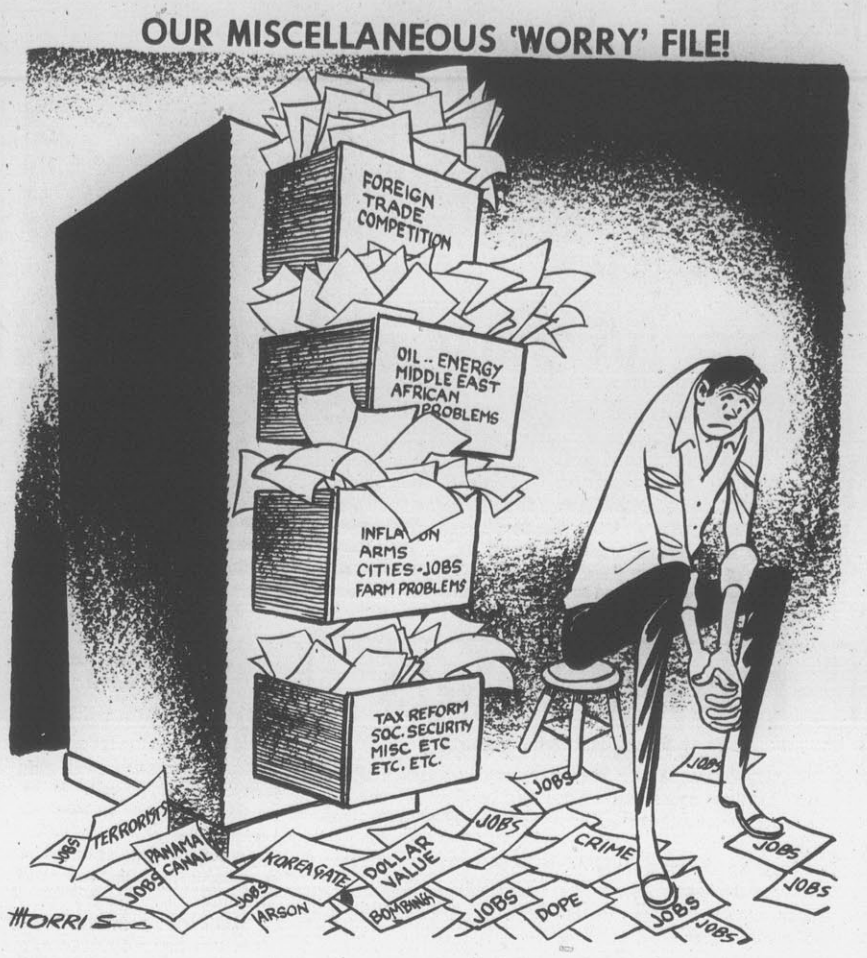

Andrews said one reason he bought the town is because of the ever-declining value of most everything but antiques, land and gold, "and I've got all three right here."

Andrews, interviewed at his home in Arizona, talks about the town with the enthusiasm of someone who has found a new toy.

He said new storefronts are planned, vendors and artisans will be invited up from the Southwest and other areas, and shootouts will be scheduled for the main street every day.

Andrews said the costs of the improvements would push the total investment for him and Cochran to about $800,000 for the first year.

Baffling, Frustrating, Malicious Machinery

As far as I'm concerned, a car is a large piece of malicious machinery which delights in baffling and frustrating the average human being. Vital buttons and switches are never in an obvious place in a car. It took me a year-and-a-half to figure out where the emergency flasher was on my Toyota. I finally found it when I was driving down the 264 By-Pass one moonlit shopping night and I couldn't turn the bright lights off. I pushed every stupid button and lever in that car. I never did turn off the brights, but I caused quite a sensation by driving from Pitt Plaza to Azalea Mobile Homes with my windshild wipers grinding against dry glass and my headlights and taillights flashing on and off.

Of course, the real question is whether or not the pluses of driving a car outweigh the minuses. I think not— that is, unless you're an amateur wrestler practicing your technique at a drive-in. Let's face it. Look at the people who die because of cars — either in accidents or from heart failure due to lack of exercise. And that doesn't even take into account those who disappear into the sunset as they struggle to buckle a tangled seat belt while being serenaded by an insistent buzzer.

The most common excuse for driving a car is that it saves time. And even I accepted that raison d'etre until Wednesday when I had to drive my sister-in-law's Mustang.

It was an abominable experience. I spent 25 minutes looking for a parking place on the ECU campus. I did find one and pulled into it with a profound sigh of relief — exactly one splitsecond before I realized that my staff sticker was on the Toyota and that if I stayed there, I would get towed.

This precipitated infinite gnashing of teeth. I knew from my student days that after 7:00 a.m. trying to find an off-campus parking place within five miles of ECU was like hunting penguins in the Okefenokee. But my class needed me, and, trooper that I am, I plunged ruefully into the hunt once again.

And, lo and behold, I found a spot. What the heck that it was two miles from campus and that I was carrying 25 term papers, several hundred index cards, 13 books, and a sack lunch? I could do it if I tried.

At least that was what I thought before I tried, unsuccessfully, to get out of the car. It wasn't that I couldn't handle my load. I couldn't get the keys out of the ignition switch. Again I pushed every button, and for once in my life I longed for my Toyota. At least, I'd never been trapped in it.

I beat the steering wheel. I screamed. I kicked. But the keys remained locked in place. Finally, I scratched off and sped to the courthouse.

"I can't get the stupid keys out of that stupid car!" I yelled at Phillip the second I saw him.

He marched out to the parking lot and located a miniscule button half-hidden under the side of the steering wheel shaft that the ignition switch was NOT on. He punched the button, took the keys out, and, with a condescending smile, handed them to me.

I began to pant and shake.

"Now calm down," he said. "Get into the car and drive on back to campus."

"No thanks," I whimpered. "I've only got fifteen minutes to get to class. I better walk."

A Soviet-Dominated Europe If No Marshal Plan: Harriman

By JOHN BARTON

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Stalin would have been in Paris and the Soviet Union would dominate Europe if the United States had not come to the rescue with the post World War II Marshall Plan, says the man who played a major role in making it work.

Averell Harriman, still active at 86 after half a century in diplomacy and politics, has no doubt what would have happened to the war-blasted western European nations 30 years ago without massive U.S. aid.

"Stalin would have had his dream, he would have been in Paris. Moscow would have been dominant," Harriman said in an interview recalling his role in the Marshall Plan, which was signed into law April 3, 1948.

Harriman, a tall, trim scion of a famous American railroad family, called the decision to spend $13 billion for a four year rebuilding program in Europe "an exercise in American leadership which was the finest period in our history."

"It was in our own self interest," he said, adding "I think we have been paid off many fold over."

"If it hadn't been for the Marshall Plan, France and Italy, I think, would have had communist governments at that time, and that would have led to communist encouragement in other countries of Europe," Harriman said.

Instead, the Marshall Plan, which he implemented as a roving ambassador based in Paris, "was extraordinarily successful. Each country had its recovery into productive capacities and an improved standard of living far in excess of anything they had in pre-war days."

"The whole purpose was to bring Europe together, and the steps which have been taken to getting the Common Market, a united Europe, have followed from it," Harriman said.

Although many people worked on it, "President Truman decided it should be called the Marshall Plan because ...he had almost a reverence for General (George C.) Marshall," he said.

Harriman, the American ambassador to Moscow during the Nazi invasion of Russia, recalled a talk with Stalin at Potsdam in the closing days of the war.

"When I saw him, it was quite natural for me to say — for I had known him very well — 'Generalissimo, this must be a great satisfaction for you to be in Berlin after all the tragedies and difficulties you have been through.'

"He looked at me and said, 'Czar Alexander got to Paris.' The inference of that seems very clear — Berlin wasn't the end of his ambitions."

But Harriman denies Stalin had military designs on Western Europe. He believes Stalin was misled by overzealous European communists into believing voters unhappy with post-war economic conditions would elect them to power.

Stalin also was misled about eastern Europe and quickly broke promises made at Yalta to "have a coalition government not only in Poland but in all of liberated Europe" and to hold "free and unfettered elections," Harriman said.

"There is no doubt that free elections would have turned out in favor of the non-communists," Harriman said. "I'm sure he agreed in Yalta to hold these free elections because he had been told by his people that the Red Army would be welcomed as a liberating force."

"I think he was very much disappointed that the Red Army was considered as a new invading party not only in Poland but also Rumania, and for that reason he broke his agreements."

But Harriman had disappointments also: "I thought that the Marshall Plan had dealt a body blow to the communists, and it has been very disappointing to me to see the communists come back in Italy as strongly as they have."

He does not believe, however, that communism is what it was 30 years ago.

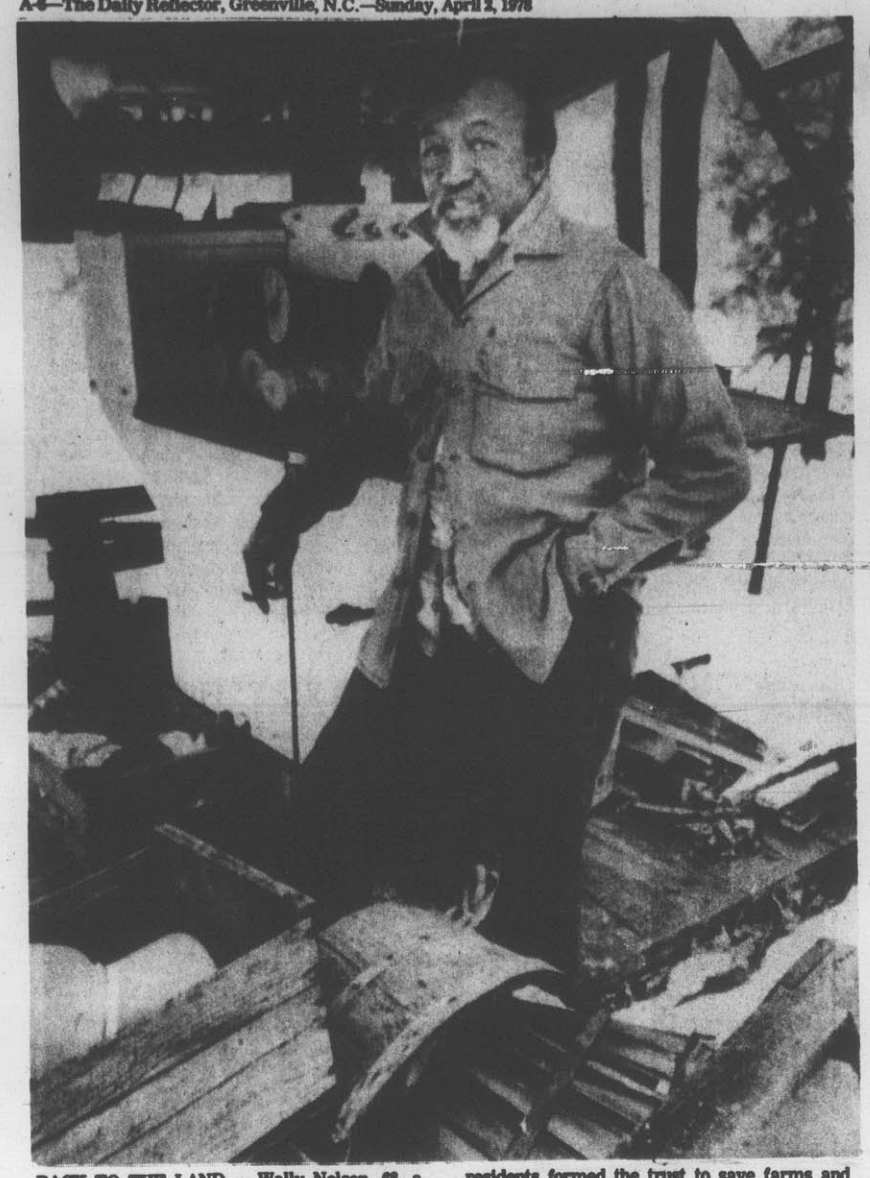

"The communist movement is in quite a different state today than it was in 1948," he said. "In 1948 it was a monolithic structure. Stalin was in control of the governments of Eastern Europe."

"Today, of course, the East European countries, all of them want to be independent of Moscow, with the possible exception of Bulgaria," he said. "And then of course there are Eurocommunist parties in western Europe," which want to be independent, in varying degrees.

"And you've got not only a breach with China, but really a paranoid fear on the part of Moscow of Peking and viceversa ...So that this whole monolithic structure of international communism which Stalin envisioned, with the oracle being Moscow, has broken down," Harriman said.

Harriman says Europe now needs a strong United States: "What would do the most good for Europe is to have a recovery of the American economy."

Eighty-six or not, Harriman still wants to be in on the action. "I am more interested in today and tomorrow than I am in writing books about the past," he said.

GACC Beautification Program Underway

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Sunday Editor

As spring arrives, beautification is the order of the day in Greenville — and the Greenville Area Chamber of Commerce is kicking off a campaign for area beautification not only for the spring months, but as a project that hopefully will continue every month of the year.

Kurt Fickling, chairman of the Beautification Committee of the Chamber of Commerce, announced that the local "Beautification Week" got underway Saturday, April 1 and will be observed for a one-week period, through Saturday, April 9.

In conjunction with this project, Greenville Mayor Percy R. Cox signed a proclamation urging Greenville citizens to join in efforts to make Greenville a more attractive city. "This is the second annual 'Beautification Week' sponsored by the chamber," Fickling commented, "and we are encouraging active participation of civic clubs, nurseries, garden clubs, business groups, firms, agencies and individuals in order to make this event not only city-wide, but county-wide."

The major theme this year, Fickling said, is "plant a tree and come see how beautiful Greenville and Pitt County can be!"

A number of specific events are planned for the coming week. These include:

— Monday, April 3 — Westhaven Garden Club will be planting azaleas at the entrance to Westhaven. Work begins at 9 a.m.

— Also on Monday, the Home Pride Garden Club will make plantings at the Greenville Art Center, 802 Evans Street, beginning at 9:30 a.m.

— Another Monday effort will be at First Federal and Savings and Loan on the 264 by-pass when members of the Lynndale Garden Club will plant flowering trees during the morning.

— An all-day Monday effort will be put forth by about 50 members of ECU's Alpha Delta Pi Sorority, who will be contributing volunteer time to a clean up project along Tenth Street and all around the ECU area.

— Tuesday, April 4 — Fifth Street east will be the scene of clean-up to entrances of East Carolina University. This work, to start at 5 p.m., will be undertaken by members of the Women's Residence Council at East Carolina University.

— Saturday, April 8 — Members of the Boys' Club of Greenville are undertaking a clean up project along the highways. They will begin at 9 a.m. and continue work until noon.

A related program has been the recent formation of a "Keep Pitt County Beautiful Committee," with Steve Evans elected by the Pitt County Agricultural Extension Agency as coordinator of the program.

Persons desiring more information on this program are to contact Evans at 758-4585 or Lynne Olmsted, Greenville Chamber of Commerce, 752-4101. Also, persons desiring more information on the chamber program are to contact Ms. Olmsted at the chamber number.

Ms. Olmsted remarked that several programs and projects are now in the planning stage for later dates in the year.

One of these to be taking place at an early date is the sponsoring by the Lynndale Garden Club of a two day flower show to be held at the Greenville Art Center on Thursday and Friday, April 27 and 28.

Plan For 25,000 More Refugees

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration is taking steps to allow about 25,000 IndoChina refugees to enter the United States over the next year, according to State Department officials.

Officials said President Carter decided to act now rather than await congressional approval of a comprehensive refugee policy because of the difficult circumstances in which the many Indochina refugees find themselves.

As an interim step, the administration will use existing authority to admit Vietnamese "boat people" unable to find homes elsewhere and to other refugees, mostly Laotian, who have fled to refugee centers in Thailand, the officials said.

Warning In El Salvador

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — The Roman Catholic Church predicted more violence for this tiny Central American country unless the government heeds the cries of its dirt-poor peasants for higher wages and lower rent.

"If the social and political means are not created in which the poorest of our people, the peasants, can explain their needs and present their just demands, the violence will increase," the church said in a statement issued Saturday by Archbishop Oscar Arnulfo Romero.

The statement also denied government charges the church instigated the Easter week violence between pro-government and anti-government peasant groups in which at least 29 persons were killed and 50 wounded.

Cambodians Kill VN Villagers

TOKYO (AP) — A Japanese newspaper reported Saturday that Cambodian troops killed between 80 and 100 Vietnamese villagers along the border, including women and children who were stabbed or clubbed to death.

The Asahi Evening News said the massacre took place the week of March 17, two days after Vietnamese forces had launched a counter-offensive to drive Cambodian troops out of Vietnamese territory.

The newspaper said the bodies were found near the town of Ha Tien on the Gulf of Siam just below the Cambodian border and west of Saigon.

World On Threshold

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The world stands on the threshold of fundamental social and economic change brought on by mounting pressure on food and timber supplies and dwindling oil reserves, the president of the Worldwatch Institute said Saturday.

"Whether the impending transformation remains orderly or convulsive depends on our foresight and will," Lester Brown said in a new book, "The Twenty-Ninth Day."

He said the the globe's 4 billion inhabitants must change their lifestyles and reproductive patterns to adapt simultaneously to the carrying capacity of Earth's biological systems — the fisheries, grasslands, forests and croplands — and to the limits of renewable energy sources.

"The essence of this new ethic is accomodation — the accomodation of human numbers and aspirations to the Earth's resources and capacities. This new ethic must above all arrest the deterioration of man's relationship to nature.

"If civilization as we know it is to survive, this ethic of accomodation must replace the prevailing growth ethic."

Brown's book is one of a series of books and papers published by the Worldwatch Institute since it was formed in 1975 to study global problems. The institute is supported by foundations, the United Nations, government agencies and private contributions.

Brown said the forthcoming changes will affect everyone and already has gained a foothold.

"In some circles the bicycle is now a symbol of enlightenment, and parents with more than two children are viewed as socially irresponsible," he said.

"In the future, the social conversation piece may be a thriving vegetable garden or an ingeniously designed solar-heating system. Physical fitness will be more highly regarded than the expanded girth of the successful German businessman or senior Soviet bureaucrat.

"In all, society may come to value more highly whatever contributes to human welfare and to eschew material acquisitiveness as such."

Food Poisoning Hits 12,500

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The number of children treated in area hospitals since an outbreak of food poisoning in Mexico City schools has risen to 12,500, the government said.

About 200 children remained under hospital observation late Friday, none of them in serious condition, the government said.

Pearl Harbor Buddies Get Together

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

A Greenville man and a Michigan City, Indiana, resident — who survived the December 7, 1941 attack on Pearl Harbor by the Japaneese — were reunited for the first time in 37 years, Monday.

Atwood Gurganus of 2703 Edwards St. and William P. Burns of Michigan City, spent their time talking of their war experiences in the Pearl Harbor area and the highlights of their lives since they last saw each other when they returned from overseas together in September 1945.

Gurganus said "We went overseas together in September 1941," as members of Battery A97, Coast Artillary Antiaircraft. And they were stationed at Ft. Kamehameha when the Japaneese planes began their surprise attack.

Gurganus said he was on guard duty at the time, while Burns was in the area of Tripler General Hospital.

Burns, under enemy fire, aided a Chinese doctor treat 34 wounded soldiers that morning — 30 of whom survived.

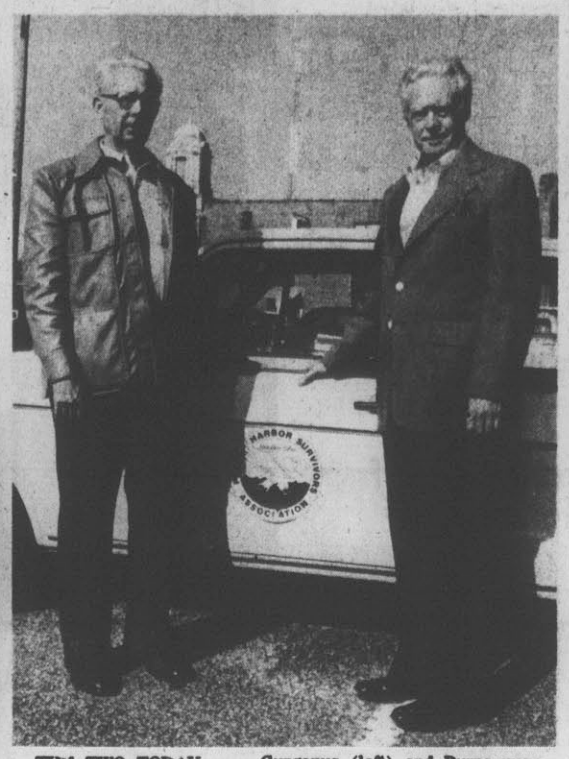

The two men noted that 15 of the 225 men in their battery now belong to the Pearl Harbor Survivors Association, a group of 3,200 veterans of the 1941 attack. There are still some 9,000 men who are eligible to join the association, Gurganus said, who are not members.

Gurganus is one of about 16 Pitt County residents who witnessed the air strike, that began about 7:55 a.m., and are living today.

Gurganus and Burns located each other through the Pearl Harbor Survivors Association.

WNCT-TV Expanding Local News Coverage

Local news programming is being expanded on the Greenville television station, WNCT-TV, Channel 9 Alive. Announcement of the planned action came from Blake C. Lewis, Jr., vice-president and general manager of Roy H. Park Broadcasting, Inc.

"We've added five local news summaries of five minutes each on every weekday at 8:25 a.m. within the CBS Morning News," Lewis said. "These are in addition to the five-minute newscasts we have been running at 6:25 and 7:25 a.m. weekdays during the Carolina Today Show."

Beginning April 8, a half-hour newscast at 6 p.m. every Saturday will supplement the 11 p.m. Saturday news. Also, a 30-second local Newsbreak at 10 p.m. Monday through Saturday, will be added beginning April 9.

These additions bring to 58 the total number of news programs and updates broadcast each week on WNCT-TV. Earlier this year, the station more than doubled the number of local news programs; this was coupled with a doubling of the news staff.

Tick State

North Carolina is by far the leading state in the number of cases of Rocky Mountain spotted fever infections reported in 1977. Last year was a record year for cases of the fever — 1,115 in the nation with more than 50 cases were: Virginia 154, Tennessee 107, Maryland 77, Oklahoma 76, Georgia 65, Arkansas 55, and South Carolina 53.

The disease is carried by the bite of infected ticks and cannot be carried from one human to another.

'Les Girls' Next At Studio Theater

"Les Girls," a song and dance entertainment billed as "a Vegas-on-a-Shoestring Revue" is the cabaret style offering of The Studio Theater at East Carolina University for a three-day run beginning Thursday, April 7 and continuing through Saturday, April 8.

Curtain time each night is 8:15 p.m., and tickets are priced at $1.50. These can be purchased at the Playhouse Box Office or reserved by calling 757-6390. The Studio Theater is located in the Drama Building on campus.

"Les Girls" has choreography by Marsha and Frank Wagner and features 24 of the ECU's Dance Theater top dancers in snappy dances that range from "peaches and cream" through pulsating Spanish Rhythms, to a chorus kickline complete with yo-yo's.

Male dancers are Gary Carter, Dave Massengill, Bill Vann, and Steven Williford.

King Richard Of Wales

By GREGORY JENSEN

HAY, Wales (UPI) — "King" Richard Booth says he will continue to rule his independent Kingdom of Hay as a feudal monarchy even if the townspeople vote not to suceed from Britian.

"We will still do it," Booth said in an interview. "We will just carry on."

Hay's 1,500 people voted Saturday on Booth's tongue-in-check plan to make this tiny Welsh border town a feudal kingdom independent of both England and Wales.

Polls were to stay open until the free beer ran out.

Booth delared himself king of Hay last year — by no coincidence, also on April Fool's day — and with regal generosity promised a referendum on which crown the town wanted to serve, his or Queen Elizabeth's.

"Last year was the day of intent," he said. "This year it's the real thing."

Not everyone in Hay goes along with Booth's imaginative spoof. So he mailed 3,000 ballots to the 1,500 townspeople.

Asked who counted the votes he replied, "Corruption is a fact of life."

Except in his own business — he runs the world's biggest secondhand bookshop, which has taken over Hay's hospital and former workhouse, its movie theater and two other buildings — Booth is a "small is beautiful" man.

CARTER ENCORE — Members of the Brazilian Follies '78 had a surprise visit from President and Rosalynn Carter Thursday night. The show went on as usual as evident by these colorful performers. (AP Laserphoto)

Paper Show At Joyner Library

"Papermaking: Art and Craft," a Library of Congress traveling exhibit, is on display at East Carolina University's Joyner Library through April 12.

The exhibit, developed at the Library of Congress with a grant from the American Paper Institute, is on a two-year national tour. It was last shown in Seattle, at the University of Washington's Henry Gallery.

Historical as well as very recent methods of making paper are illustrated by the exhibit's 40 panels and ten banners. It is open to the public and can be seen in the library's lobby and East Wing areas whenever Joyner is open.

Pre-School Census Set For Greenville City School Children

A pre-school census and registration is being conducted for the Greenville City Schools for school year 1978-79. The census-registration will be held during the period April 3-14 for students who will be in kindergarten or the first grade during the next school year.

Anyone with a child who will be five years years old on or before October 16, 1978, or a six-year-old with a need to be in the kindergarten program is being asked to complete a "Census/Registration" form now being sent to parents of known children in this age group.

For those returning the form to principals of schools in Greenville.. principals will send information back about the pre-school orientation program scheduled to be held on April 24.

One of the requirements for children who will be entering school for the first time in the coming school year is the completion of immunizations required by state law. These are available from family doctors or at the Pitt-County Community Health Department Monday through Friday from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Also, City Schools Superintendent Glenn Cox and Director of Elementary Education Charles Ross are asking all persons who have knowledge of a child eligible to enter school and who may not have received a form, to inform the parents of the census/registration.

N.C. Boy Gets Bone Surgery

VANDER, N.C. (AP) — Mitchell Royal came home Friday. Home to a grandmother's hug and family members who waited for his return after what is believed to be a successful bone marrow operation in Seattle, Wash., for leukemia.

Royal, his brother, Michael, a twin and bone marrow donor, and their mother, Nadine Lockey, arrived at the Raleigh-Durham airport Thursday from Seattle. Royal remained in Duke University Hospital Thursday night for observation.

"Ooh, I was glad to see him," said Hazel Jordan, the 15-year-old's grandmother.

The youth said it "wasn't much of an operation," that he was glad to be home and that he couldn't wait to go fishing.

The family's trip to Seattle was financed with $14,000 raised by Cumberland County residents.

Mrs. Lockey said her son's experience had brought the family closer together.

"It's also given us a lot of friends we never knew we had," his grandmother said.

Dr. Joseph Moore, Royal's physician at Duke, said it will be five years before it is known for sure if the bone marrow operation arrested the leukemia. In the meantime, Royal will have to undergo chemotherapy.

"We'll be happy if there's no sign of leukemia a year and a half from now," Moore said. "He's a remarkable young man. He's kept a good sense of humor about the whole thing. He's been a delightful young man to treat."

Royal said he felt no different from other cancer patients his age he met while undergoing chemotherapy treatments at Duke the past few months.

"They were confident that they would beat it and so was I," he said.

Moore said the youth had "better than a 50 percent chance" to win out over leukemia.

Coastal Plain Forums Set

"Purveyors of Good Meat"

NOTICE

While it is true, beef prices have dropped this past year, we do not know how long they will remain down and at the current level. Rising demand and short supply of beef cattle have caused a major rise of prices in cattle across the country. All indications point to higher prices throughout this year . . . smart shoppers who have not filled their freezers yet should act now. We would welcome the opportunity to be of service to you-just give us a call.

50th Anniversary For The Famed Academy Awards

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer

HOLLYWOOD (AP) - Oscar is 50 — the granddaddy of the entertainment awards; older and more prestigious than Emmy, Tony, Grammy or any other honors for show business achievers.

When the first awards of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences were handed out on May 16, 1929, movies couldn't even talk. The first statuettes were given to voiceless stars: Janet Gaynor and Emil Jannings, both chosen for three performances.

Mary Pickford and Warner Baxter were cited the following year for talkies, "Coquette" and "In Old Arizona." The best picture of 1928-1929 was the first major musical, MGM's "Broadway Melody."

Year after year, the Academy Awards have added a rich legacy to the American scene. The span of history can be seen with the first winner as best picture, "Wings," a romantic tale of aviators in World War I, and a favorite in this year's Oscar race, "Star Wars," concerning intergalactic flight and warfare.

On Monday night at the Los Angeles Music Center, the Motion Picture Academy will bestow its 50th awards. Bob Hope will emcee for the 23rd time, armed with jokes about how he never won an Oscar for his acting ("At our house we refer to the Academy awards as Passover.")

Howard Koch, who is president of the Academy as well as producer of the ABC national telecast, promises the largest collection of Oscar winners in Academy history. As many as 50 in all categories will appear onstage after a musical tribute to Oscar by Gene Kelley.

Presenters will include Bette Davis, Walter Matthau, Goldie Hawn, Steve McQueen, Fred Astaire, King Vidor, Faye Dunaway, Julie Andrews, Jacqueline Bissett, Henry Winkler, John Travolta, Natalie Wood, Janet Gaynor. Also the 1931 winner of a special award, Mickey Mouse.

The 50th awards show is being carefullly planned, but undoubtedly it will be enlivened by the unpredictable. The Oscar has often attracted unusual behavior.

In 1973, Marlon Brando sent a part-Indian actress to refuse his award for "The Godfather," evoking the first boos heard at the Academy Awards. During the streaking craze of 1975, a nude male whisked across the stage as David Niven was making a speech.

The Motion Picture Academy has strived to remain dignified despite such events. Dignity is what the founders were seeking for the film industry when the first meeting was held on May 4, 1927.

A week later, 300 movie leaders gathered at the Biltmore Hotel in downtown Los Angeles. They heard the pitch for an Academy from Louis B. Mayer, Mary Pickford, Conrad Nagel, Douglas Fairbanks and others.

"Our purpose is positive, not negative," said Fairbanks. "We are formed to do, not undo."

The times had brought a need for such brave statements. Hollywood had been shaken by a series of headlined scandals, and moralists attacked the town as a modern Sodom and Gomorrah. President Harding's postmaster general, Will Hays, had been hired as the industry's czar to repair its crumbling image.

Curiously, the 50th awards are being given as the film industry is again under fire — not because of scandalous stars but from reports of questionable business practices, the most publicized of which has been the David Begelman affair.

The public furor known as Begelmania has centered on the financial misdeeds of the former Columbia Pictures production chief, who was discovered with his hand in the company's till to the tune of up to $80,000.

Begelman resigned his post last October following the incident, paid back the money with interest, was quietly rehired by Columbia in December and then resigned again in February as controversy over the rehiring escalated.

Few critics in the 1920s considered the motion picture as an art. It had, after all, emerged not long before from the nickelodeon.

The Academy founders reasoned that they needed an impressive prize to offset such criticism. MGM art director Cedric Gibbons sketched a figure of a slender nude male clutching a crusader's sword and standing on a reel of film. A 24-year-old Los Angeles sculptor, George Stanley, molded the figure in clay.

A few years later, the statuette got its name. The origin is clouded. Margaret Herrick, the Academy's first librarian and later executive director, claimed the figure reminded her of an uncle named Oscar. Also, Bette Davis is said to have named the statuette after her first husband, Harmon Oscar Nelson.

The lowest point in the Academy's fortunes came in the mid 1930s, when the producers used it as a mouthpiece for their economic policies. A Depression crisis in the industry had brought a 50 percent cut in salaries, though not for studio bosses.

"The Academy existed only by the grace of God. Because of the cut in salaries, everyone resigned from the Academy and formed guilds. We were left with about 14 people, and we bought the Oscars with our own money.

"I went around to the guilds on my knees and asked them to have their members vote for the awards, so we could get a big vote. That's how we kept the Academy going. A few of us thought it was too good a thing to lose."

The Academy faced another crisis in the late 1940s, when the film companies withdrew financial support. The awards were presented in the Academy's own ramshackle theater. With the advent of television in 1953, the Academy achieved financial stability, and it has thrived ever since.

Plans Announced For Annual Azalea Festival

WILMINGTON — The 31st Annual North Carolina Azalea Festival will be held this year for the four-day period, Thursday, April 6 through Sunday, April 9.

Activities include a new event, a sculling tournament on the Cape Fear River. The famed Azalea Ball, first held in the late 1940s, this year will be held at the Wilmington Hilton on Friday, April 7, with the 15-piece Warren Covington orchestra.

Other entertainments include the arrival by boat of the Azalea Queen on opening day; a variety show on opening night; the appearance of entertainment celebrities; and a 30-minute fireworks display.

Also, there will be the traditional Queen's Coronation and Show on Friday and Saturday nights at Brogden Hall, when a show features top names from the entertainment world; and the annual Azalea Festival parade through downtown Wilmington Saturday morning.

Events to be held on a continuing basis during the festival include a sidewalk art show, a ceramics show, tours of private gardens, special showing of "The Immortal Showboat," the sound and light spectacular at the USS North Carolina Battleship Memorial, and shows in Wilmington art galleries.

In conjunction with the festival, there will be a three-day coin show, a sailboat regatta at Wrightsville Beaach, band concerts, visiting ships in the harbor, tours at Orton Plantation Gardens and Airlie Gardens, square dancing, boxing matches and other events.

Fails To Get Expected Price

LONDON (AP) — In a reversal of the trend of sky-rocketing prices for famous paintings, a landscape by Joseph Mallord William Turner failed to reach the reserve price at Christie's auction house.

The oil painting, "Neapolitan Fisher Girls Surprised Bathing by Moonlight," was withheld when the bidding failed to reach the $237,500 minimum. The name of the seller was not disclosed.

At Planters you can avoid complicated tie-ins and service charges with a simple $100 minimum balance in checking.

You won't see them advertising it, but a lot of North Carolina banks have raised the cost of "free" checking by doubling your minimum balance. And complicated your once simple checking account by introducing unwanted options. Like requiring you to have other accounts.

Fortunately, we're not one of them.

At Planters, the checking minimum is still $100. We've also lowered the monthly maximum by eliminating those unpredictable per check charges with a new flat $2 fee (if your balance ever falls below $100). Chances are you'll save money.

Now, when you put it all together — our simple $100 minimum, our new $2 maximum, plus the easiest-to-balance monthly statement in North Carolina — you've got every reason you need to check with Planters.

WE STILL KNOW THE VALUE OF YOUR DOLLAR.

"While other banks have raised their minimum balance for no cost checking to $200 and complicated things with unnecessary options, tie-ins and high service charges, we've made it simple. Our minimum is $100."

To Seek More Indictments

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Justice Department is expected to seek indictments against at least two more former congressmen in the Korean payoff scandal, in which ex-Rep. Otto E. Passman is the latest to be formally accused of taking bribes.

Passman, D-La., was indicted by a federal grand jury Friday on charges he took $213,000 in bribes from South Korean rice dealer Tongsun Park, who testified before the panel.

The seven-count indictment said that in return for the money, Passman used his influence to have U.S. Food for Peace program loans allocated to Korea specifically for purchase of rice.

The government's chief prosecutor, Assistant Attorney General Benjamin R. Civiletti, has said publicly that Park's testimony could lead to charges against several ex-congressmen.

And Justice Department officials, who asked not to be named, reaffirmed Friday that they expect indictments to be sought against at least two and possibly three more former congressmen.

Sources close to the investigation have said that it focused on payments to former Reps. William Minshall, R-Ohio; Cornelius E. Gallagher, D-N.J.; and Edwin Edwards, D-La., who is now the present governor of Louisiana, in addition to Passman. All four have denied any wrongdoing.

Power Reduction Plea Ends

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Tennessee Valley Authority customers are no longer being asked to take special steps to reduce their electricity consumption, but should still work at conserving power, the utility says.

TVA passed the message along Friday in a news release, signaling an end to the utility's Feb. 16 plea to customers to reduce power usage by 20 percent. Despite the request, agency officials later said consumer cutbacks never approached that level.

Concerned About Demonstration

BARNWELL, S.C. (AP) — Officials at the Allied General Nuclear Services plant say they are concerned about a planned demonstration April 30 by about 1,000 nuclear opponents.

"We fully acknowledge and respect their right to demonstrate but their announced intention to trespass and be arrested concerns us," said Allied General spokesman Jim Smith.

Brett Bursey, spokesman for Palmetto Alliance, a sponsor of the protest, has said the demonstrators plan to march onto the Allied General property and are ready to go to jail.

Several law enforcement agencies say they plan particularly tight security the day of the protest.

Wilson Irked By Young

OXFORD, England (AP) — Former Prime Minister Sir Harold Wilson lashed out at American U.N. Ambassador Andrew Young today for his anti-British remarks about majority rule in Rhodesia.

"What is particularly irksome, is Mr. Young's statement this week implying that Britain simply wants to abdicate all responsibility for the Rhodesian problem ... what is particularly dangerous is his repeated assertions that any settlement involved without bloodshed and massacre won't count," Wilson told a local government conference.

Slashes Award By $122 Million

SANTA ANA, Calif. (AP) — A judge has slashed a record $128.5 million jury award to $6.6 million in the case of the fiery 1972 crash of a Ford Pinto that killed one person and severely burned another.

Orange County Superior Court Judge Leonard Goldstein accepted the argument of Ford Motor Co. attorneys that the $125 million punitive damages were excessive because they didn't bear a reasonable relationship to compensatory damages.

Ford Attacks Carter's Record

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Former President Gerald R. Ford has launched a new verbal attack on the Carter administration, saying President Carter's economic program "is in utter shambles."

"We've had a tremendous rise of the rate of inflation in this administration," he said Friday.

More than 1,000 people paid $150 each to attend a fund-raiser addressed by Ford Friday night and 1,500 people paid $10 each to attend a party rally, state GOP officials said.

Begelman Expected To Surrender

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Ousted Columbia Pictures president David Begelman is expected to surrender to Burbank police next week on grand theft and forgery charges.

A four-count complaint was filed Friday against Begelman, who was forced to resign the presidency of the company earlier this year and has been retained by Columbia since as a $300,000-a-year consultant.

District Attorney John Van de Kamp said the charges, one of grand theft and three of forgery, cited $40,000 in thefts from Columbia and $40,000 in checks forged with the names of prominent Hollywood figures. The two amounts involve the same money because the checks in question were written on a Columbia Pictures account, Van de Kamp said.

Agriculture Movement Getting Results

By TERRY RYAN
Associated Press Writer

In September of last year, a small group of farmers gathered in the basement of the First National Bank in Springfield, Colo. They talked about weather, complained about prices and recited their problems as farmers.

These farmers, however, did something more. They started the American Agriculture movement. With no officers or members and little money, they said they would call a nationwide farm strike to back demands for better crop prices, a promise they carried through.

Now, seven months later, the movement has in Congress an emergency farm bill that would increase the amount spent on farm programs by 100 percent over the next 15 months. The Senate passed the bill's various sections by large majorities just before its Easter recess.

That same day, American Agriculture supporter Bob Keenan hitched a disc to his tractor and turned 40 acres of wheat back into the ground on his farm north of Twin Buttes, Colo. Other farmers plowed down wheat that day, too, with television cameras there to record it.

But from federal crop statistics and reports from Associated Press reporters around the country, it appears most farmers are not heeding American Agriculture's call to cut production by 50 percent.

The fledgling movement's farm strike has not shut down or slowed the flow of food to consumers.

It has, however, succeeded as a effective political pressure group with an ability to attract media attention and around the nation.

The emergency farm bill has little chance of surviving in full, but most observers expect some kind of farm bill in a year when the president and Congress had no intention of adopting farm legislation.

At the same time, spring planting is proceeding in many sections of the country. Preliminary federal figures indicate reductions in wheat, corn and cotton, but nothing to match the 50 percent cutback American Agriculture urged.

Increases in soybeans, rice and other crops in many cases make up for reductions, and experts say the crop switch is more the result of marketplace pressures than a strike.

And, for the most part, livestock, dairy, citrus and vegetable farmers seem to be ignoring the strike.

American Agriculture's greatest strength has come in the wheat belt, from Texas to Montana and the upper Midwest, and in the South, where reduced cotton prices and last year's drought in the southeast put even established farmers in jeopardy.

With rallies and tractor parades, strike banners and strike hats, and occasional clashes with authorities, American Agriculture put its demand before politicians and the public — 100 percent parity.

Parity is a figure expressing the relationship between the cost of producing a crop and its market value. In the base period, from 1910 to 1914, farmers were able to recover the cost of production, plus profit.

At 100 percent parity, that ratio would be restored. Last month, the parity ratio was 67 percent for all farm products and livestock. The full parity price of wheat was $5.07 a bushel. Farmers were getting $2.58 a bushel, 51 percent of parity.

In recent testimony before the Senate Agriculture Committee, George Levin, an American Agricutlure leader from Hereford, S.D., spelled out his group's demands clearly. He said the marketplace should set farm prices, but government funds should be used to pay farmers the difference between those prices and 100 percent parity.

There are some 2.8 million farmers nationwide and a farm population of about 8 million, including hired workers and farm families. American Agriculture leaders estimate 3 million to 5 million of those people take part in or support their movement. But the group has no membership rolls or dues, and no way to prove its estimates.

It does have some doubters, among them Leland Duvall, farm editor of the Arkansas Gazette in Little Rock.

"The number of strikers is a little bit like bullfrogs," he said. "We can never estimate the number of bullfrogs in a pond becasue they're so noisy."

It was 3½ months ago, on Dec. 14, that American Agriculture called for its nationwide strike. It asked farmers to stop producing and selling crops altogether but then, in January, amended that to a 50 percent cutback. The movement also urged the plowing under of some crops and a halt to seed and equipment purchases from farm dealers.

An Associated Press check showed that farmers expect to plant one-third less wheat in Indiana this year, but 2 percent more corn and 6 percent more beans. Wheat was down 13 percent in Kansas, but farmers there plan 400,000 more acres of soybean and corn. Louisiana cotton was down 7 percent, but rice was up 7 percent.

Farm implement dealers in areas where the American Agriculture is strong generally report a decline in sales. They say farmers are buying used equipment at auction from other farmers or bringing old equipment in for repair.

Reports from seed dealers indicated much the same situation.

Soil-Water Meet Monday

Robert G. Little, chairman of the Pitt Soil and Water Conservation District, announces a meeting to be held beginning at 1:30 p.m. Monday, April 3 in the Federal Building, 225 Evans Street.

Among those presenting reports and heading discussions will be Ralph C. Tucker, Roy Beck, Jacob Crandall, and Frank Wooten.

Topics to be discussed at the meeting include progress on Chicod Creek Watershed, the Mid-East RC&D Project, land-judging contest, and various watershed projects in Pitt County.

The meeting is open to the public and interested persons are invited to attend.

Little Symphony Wilson Concert

WILSON — A concert version of Mozart's "The Marriage of Figaro" will be given at 8:15 p.m. Wednesday, April 5 Wilson's Fike High School Auditorium. The performance is by the N. C. Little Symphony, conducted by John Gosling, N. C. Symphony conductor.

Singers in the concert version are Gwenlynn Little as Susanna; Dan Sullivan, Figaro; Hilda Harris as Cherubino; Mary Ann Stabile, Countess Almaviva; Glenn Cunningham as Count Almaviva; William Brown in two roles — Don Basilio and Don Curzio; Martha Snoddy, Marcellina; and Mark Rendely in the roles of Dr. Bartolo and Antonio.

Admission is by regular season ticket or by individual tickets which can be purchased prior to the concert. For more details, call Mrs. Paul Berry, 291-3300.

Adopt-A-Pet

This gray tabby, adult female, needs a home. Anyone wishing to adopt her may call the Pitt County Humane Society, 758-0468 between 6 and 9 p. m.

Also being sought homes are a four-year-old German shepherd-collie female and nine mixed doberman pinscher puppies, just weaned.

Persons wishing to place animals for adoption may also call the Humane Society President, Mrs. Jeanette Fiore, between 6 and 9 o'clock any evening.

Orton Plantation's Blooms Appearing

WILMINGTON — Because of the cold winter that delayed the usual flowering of late winter flowers, the Orton Plantation Gardens are expected to have a rare show of many colors as both late winter and early spring flowers bloom together.

Just now ready to come into bloom are several varieties of azaleas in many colors: orange, pink, red, purple, white; camellias in red, pink, white and variegated colors; flowering trees in pink; snow drops, daffodils, purple tulip trees, yellow jasmine, and pansies in blue, yellow, red, white, and purple.

These flowers and flowering shrubs lace the walkways and paths of Orton's Neo-Classic mansion — paths that sweep from the house toward the Cape Fear River and old rice fields which now provide refuge for waterfowl.

The grounds also include giant live oaks and magnolias, the formal Scroll Garden with its lagoon; the White Circle Garden; the Sun Garden; and a second lagoon spanned by a Chinese crooked bridge.

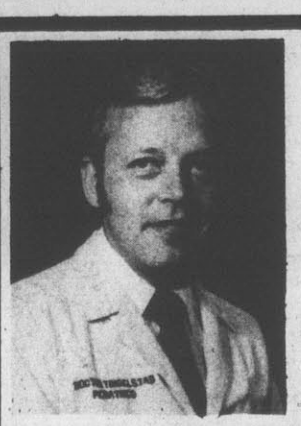

Beyond the grounds is Orton's old graveyard, with tombstones that are a vivid reminder of the plantation's early Colonial history.

Orton Plantation's house is a private residence and is not open to the public. The gardens and grounds, however, are open year-round and visitors are welcome.

Orton Plantation Gardens are located a few miles south of Wilmington on the west bank of the Cape Fear River. It is reached by taking N. C. 133 out of Wilmington.

Adjacent to Orton Plantation is historic Old Brunswick Town noted for its brick ruins of Colonial days.

Three Are Tied For Greensboro Lead

By BOB GREEN
AP Golf Writer

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Rookie Jack Renner, a lanky 21-year-old, had one fond wish after a hard-won, 1-over-par 73 had placed him in a 3-way tie for the lead Saturday in the third round of the wind-blown, $240,000 Greater Greensboro Open Golf Tournament.

"Maybe," Renner said with an anxious look ahead to Sunday's final round in the chase for a $48,000 first prize, "maybe I can just blend in with the other guys."

It's not likely. Dave Eichelberger — with Wally Armstrong the other member of the pace-setting triumvirate — will be keeping a close eye on the youngster who is making his first bid for a pro golf tour title.

"He's a good player. I played with him several years ago when he was still an amateur," Eichelberger said after posting his scrambly 71, 1 under par and an extremely good score in the gusty, shifting winds that slowed the field to a snail's pace, set up 5½-hour rounds and threw the national television schedule way off.

"He's a quiet young man, very intense, very determined," Eichelberger said. "He won't throw it away."

Eichelberger, who has collected two titles in the Milwaukee Open, is the only man among the first four who has won on the PGA tour.

"It may be a very tiny advantage," Eichelberger said. "But the guy who starts playing good, gets off to that good start tomorrow, makes some putts, gets some confidence, that's the person who's gonna win."

Eichelberger had a chance to take the lead alone but bogeyed the final hole in the shifting, tricky winds that raked the 6,984-yard Forest Oaks Country Club course with gusts up to 25 miles per hour.

He finished with a 211 total, 5 shots under par.

"People don't realize how tough it is to play in a high wind like this," Eichelberger said. "It rocks you when you're putting and there's the indecision — you never really know if you've got the right club in your hand."

The other contenders knew how tough it was. Wally Armstrong said he was "really happy with the round" of 2-over-par 74 that left him with a share of the lead. Also tied for the top was 21-year-old rookie Jack Renner, who shot a 73.

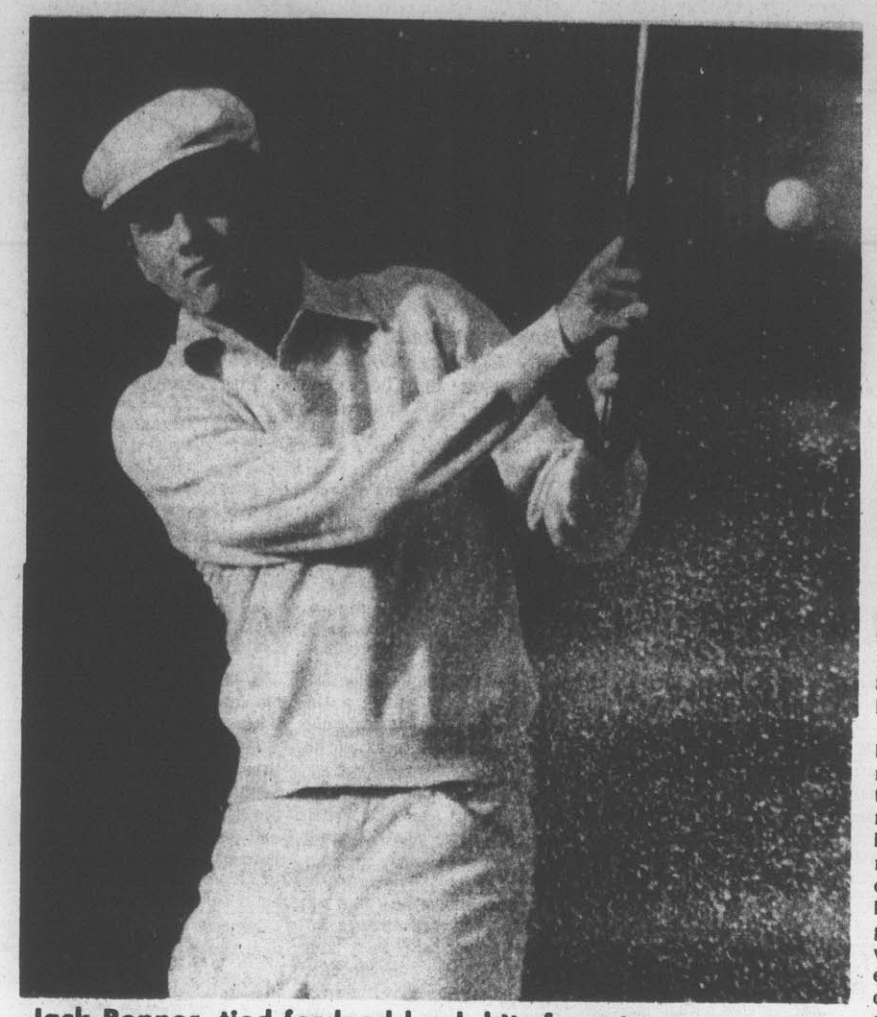

Alan Tapie birdied four times in a five-hole stretch over the back nine, moved into a share of the lead but dropped one back with a bogey on the tough finishing hole. He matched par-72 and went to the Sunday's final 18 holes of the chase for a $48,000 first prize with a 212 total.

Another 2 shots back was a group of seven tied at 214. Included in that number was Argentine import Florentino Molina, who led or shared the lead through the first 36 holes. He blew to a fat 40 on the back nine and shot a 77.

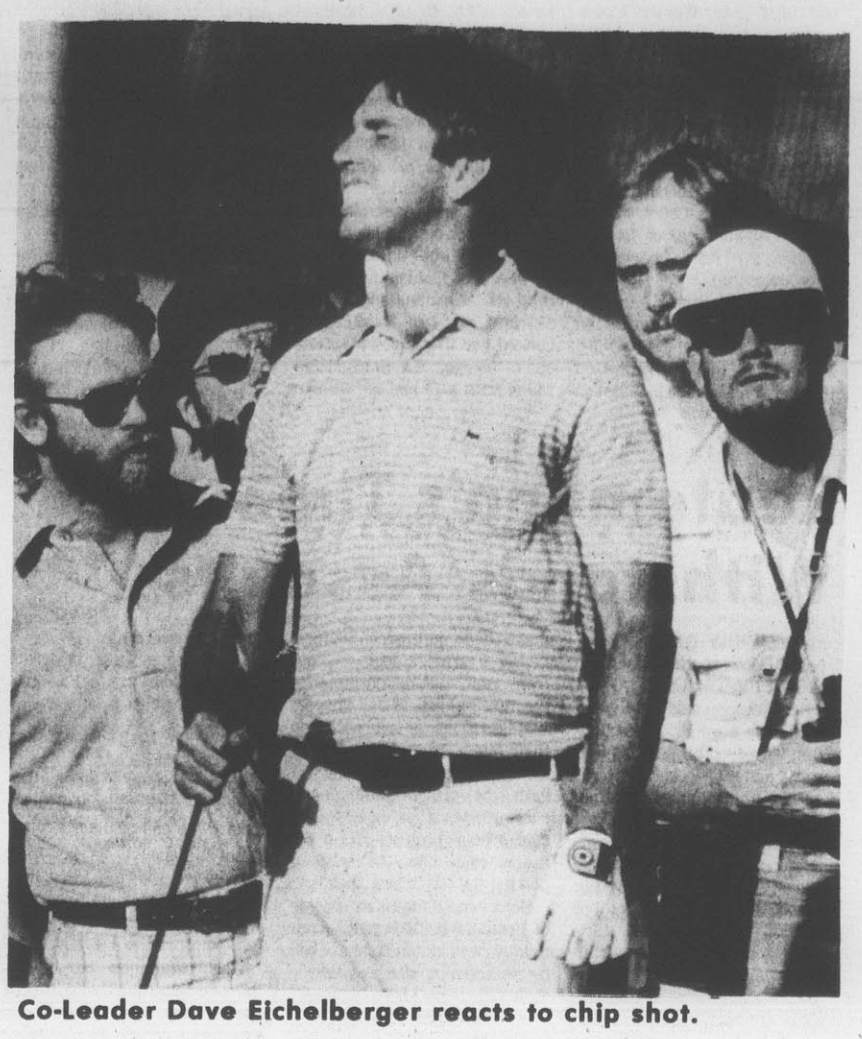

Also at 2-under-par, and their third-round scores, were veteran Gene Littler, 72; Gary Koch, 68; Fuzzy Zoeller, 71; Lee Elder, 73; and former national amateur champion Craig Stadler, 73.

PGA champion Lanny Wadkins, easily the top name in a relatively light field in this event that immediately pre-

Massey Sparks Atlantic Stars

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Lew Massey of UNC-Charlotte came off the bench Saturday to lead the Atlantic Coast All Stars to a 116-100 win over the Southeast All Stars in the inaugural Shoney's Big Boy Basketball Classic Saturday.

The Atlantic Coast team started as if would blow the Southeast tam off the court and quickly ran up a 10-0 lead. They gradually stretched their lead to 19 points at 37-18 with 8½ minutes left in the first half.

But the Southeast team, led by James Lee of Kentucky's national champs, fought back to narrow the Atlantic Coast margin to four points at 54-50 at halftime. The score remained close early in the second half until Massey led a 10-1 burst midway the period that gave his team a 75-61 margin with 12 minutes left. The Southeast team could never get closer than five points the rest of the game.

Massey led the Atlantic Coast team with 24 points and a game high 14 rebounds while Lee, scoring almost at will from inside, led the Southeast team with 28 points and 12 rebounds. The two were named the most valuable players for their respective teams.

The Atlantic Coast team hit on 50 percent of its shots from the floor and had six players in double figures while the Southeast team was hitting only 38.1.

A disappointing crowd of about 2,000 attended the game which was to benefit the Cystic Fibrosis Foundation. The absence of North Carolina's Phil Ford and Wake Forest's Rod Griffin probably caused many fans to stay away.

Monarchs Top Pirates

NORFOLK, Va. — East Carolina University's baseball team seems to be following Murphy's Law: Whatever Can Go Wrong, Will.

Saturday afternoon, things continued to go wrong for the Pirates as Old Dominion University swept a pair of games from the Bucs, 4-3 and 11-10.

The tailspin dropped the Pirates to a 10-11 record and the double disaster saw them extend their current losing streak to five.

"The coaching staff will not take the blame for any of the last three losses," a thoroughly disgusted Monte Little said after the pair of losses.

"Right now, we're not a good baseball team and we're playing that way. I'm not used to losing like this. We just don't do the things we have to do to win," Little said.

"Against Southeastern Massachusettes, we got two and they got three. We got two and Carolina got four. We got six and William & Mary got seven. Today, we get three and they get four, then we get ten and they get 11.

"We're making too many mental errors. We're not thinking. I don't know what the problem is. But something is going to have to happen to snap us out of this."

Saturday, it seemed like every time the Pirates would get a run, Old Dominion would counter it.

East Carolina's top moundsmen were on duty, too. Pete Conaty dropped his fourth game in six decisions in the opener, while Mickey Britt was tagged hard in the second game, but the decision went to Bill Davis, who made his first appearance of the year.

In the opener, the Pirates took the lead in the first inning. Eddie Gates singled and then stole second. The steal was his career 31st, setting a new East Carolina record.

Pete Paradossi then singled and an error on the play allowed Gates to score.

But Old Dominion came right back with one in their half of the first. Bo Wiseman walked and scored when Del Ward doubled.

Old Dominion then took the lead with two in the second. Joe Breeden walked and Richard Giacolone singled. Wiseman followed with a double, scoring both runners.

East Carolina came back with two in the third to tie it at 3-3. Gates walked, and Tim Hardison cracked a long fly ball to deep center. Ward raced back, and made the catch just as he slammed into the wall, and the ball bounced over the fence, for a ruled home run.

But the fates were not with the Pirates even after that. The tie turned into a tease as Old Dominion came back in the fourth to score the winning run. Kerry Baker singled, was sacrificed up, and Dean Dubbe singled. Wiseman then singled Baker in for the 4-3 lead.

East Carolina put men on second and third with one out in the fifth, but failed to score.

East Carolina also got the scoring going in the third inning of the game when Paradossi slapped a solo home run.

But again, the lead was short lived. The Monarchs came roaring back to score six in the bottom of the third.

With two away, Gip Ridley and Gary Wright both walked. Ward then singled in Ridley, and Alan Price walked to load them up. Jeff Crain singled in Wright and Ward and Breeden singled to score Price and Crain. Bob Milliken singled in Breeden.

The Pirates came back with one in the fourth. Butch Davis walked and so did Robert Brinkley. Jerry Carraway reached on a fielder's choice and Scott Layden singled in Davis.

Old Dominion came back with three more in the fourth to run their lead to 9-2. Wiseman singled and Ridley walked. Ward then cracked a three-run homer.

The Pirates rallied for five in the fifth. Best walked and Paradossi singled. Supel walked and a single by Davis scored two runs. Raynor singled in Supel, but was out at second on Carraway's infield grounder. Layden singled in Davis and Gates got a hit to score Carraway.

Old Dominion got another in the fifth. Giacolone reached on a fielder's choice and scored when two errors were committed on Wiseman's hit.

The Pirates then came back to score three and tie it at 10-10 in the sixth. With two away, Davis singled and moved up on an error. Moye singled and a hit by Brinkley scored Davis. Carraway singled in Moye and a delayed double steal scored Brinkley with the tieing run.

But again, the Monarchs came back to score a game-winning run. Wright walked and Ward singled. Both were sacrificed up, and Breeden reached on an error, scoring Wright.

Old Dominion is now 16-8.

East Carolina Takes Four Firsts In Meet

COLUMBIA, S.C. — East Carolina University's track team claimed first place in four events, more than any other school, in the State-Record Relays being held here Saturday.

Calvin Alston, Marvin Rankins, Otis Melvin and Herman McIntyre all captured firsts in the meet to lead the Pirate scoring.

Melvin captured first place in the 200-meter dash, with a time of 20.59 seconds, qualifying for the NCAA Nationals, later this summer.

McIntyre won the triple jump with a leap of 53 feet, 1 inch, establishing a new meet and track record.

Alston's victory came in the 400-meter dash, in 57.1 seconds. Rankins won the high hurdles in a time of 13.9 seconds.

Other Pirate finishers included Ray McDaniels, seventh in the 1,500 meter run in 3:55 (comparable to a 4:12 mile); Larry Austin, sixth in the 100-meter dash in :10.7; Tim Jones, second in the 800-meter run in 1:54.1; Tim McCoy fourth in the 400-meter intermediate hurdles in :53.1, and Bobby Phillips, fifth in :53.2; and George Jackson, fifth in the triple jump in 49 feet, 6 inches.

The "A" mile relay team was fourth in 3:12.4, while the "B" team was sixth in 3:15.2.

There was one sad note for the Pirates. Carter Suggs suffered a knee injury at the start of his leg in the 400-meter relay event, and will be lost for the rest of the season. The Pirates were unable to finish that event because of the injury.

Gold Rally Seals 21-7 Victory In Final Minutes Of Scrimmage

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

A 36-yard punt return set up a 26-yard Vern Davenport field goal that led to further fireworks as the underdog Gold team rallied to take a 21-7 win over the Purple yesterday in the final scrimmage of East Carolina University's spring drills.

"I've got to be pleased with the enthusiasm on both sides," Coach Pat Dye said after observing the game from the stands. "But there were a lot, a whole lot of mistakes. We can't expect to beat a good team playing like we did today. Mistakes like the turnovers, penalties and fielding a punt on the goal line will kill us."

Nearly all of the scoring came in the game's final two minutes.

Vern Davenport had kicked a 36-yard field goal in the first period for a 3-0 Gold lead. But the Purple team came back with a touchdown on a 32-yard pass from Tony Tripp to Sam Harrell and Bill Lamm added the PAT for a 7-3 lead at the half.

In the third period, Bill Pinkney blocked a punt that rolled out the back of the end zone for a safely, bringing the score to 7-5.

Then, late in the game, Holley returned a punt 36 yards to set up a 26-yard field goal by Davenport that put the Gold ahead, 8-7.

Seconds later, after the Purple was pinned at the nine on the kickoff, Pinkney intercepted a Tripp pass and returned it ten yards for the Gold's first touchdown. Davenport's kick missed, making it 14-7. After the kickoff, Steve Greer was hit as he was attempting to pass, fumbling and Vance Tingler recovered at the one for the Gold. Eddie Hicks went over on the first play, and Davenport kicked for a 21-7 final margin.

"The key play may have been when the Gold team downed a punt on the one yard line of the Purple," Dye said. "They got the ball back in good field position for their first field goal. Another big play was Holley's punt return."

With first string quarterback Leander Green sidelined with an injury, the reserves did most of the work: Greer, Tripp, Ernie Saltmarsh and Henry Trevathan.

"There were some good plays, but they were very inconsistant," Dye said of the quarterbacks. "Greer had some good plays and then pulled a boner that got them beat. Trevathan may have been the most consistant."

Dye noted that there were too many penalties, also. "But the hitting was good. I know we had good blocks from the backs. But our offensive line was cripped up or divided up so it was difficult to tell what our line play really looked like."

The coach said that the spring had seen a lot of injuries, but that he was pleased in the changes in personnel the staff had made. One of those changes was obviously effective as Tony Collins looked very good at fullback. "He must have been the leading ground gainer today. He has great quickness and is going to make our fullback situation very interesting."

Dye was also happy with the play of the linebackers. "(Mike) Brewington made a lot of plays, and (Tommy) Summer and (Jeffrey) Warren played real well. Warren is a big-league hitter. (Nate) Wigfall is ready to play too. He had three quarterback sacks, I believe."

The coach also commented that the kicking game was not too bad considering the wind conditions. "The wind also caused our receivers a lot of problems."

Dye said that the team now just needs to keep on working on fundamentals, execution, and techniques.

"We have two days left in spring practice and we'll spend them getting ready for Western Carolina, Monday and Wednesday."

The Pirates then wrap it up for the spring. Dye said he expects them to being fall practice on August 11, and the season will open in the newly-enlarged Ficklen Stadium on September 2 against Western Carolina University.

Mack Unanimous Choice For All-South

Calvin Natt of Northeast Louisiana, who helped the U.S. team win the World University Games championship last summer in Bulgaria, and high-scoring Oliver Mack of East Carolina head the 1978 all-South Independent basketball team selected by a panel of 20 sportswriters, broadcasters and publicists.

Joining the two on the annual all-star team are Kevin Anderson and Matt Simpkins of Georgia Southern, Golie Augustus and Jackie Gilloon of South Carolina, Mel Daniels of Stetson, Lester Elie of Northwestern State of Louisiana, Denny Fields of North Carolina-Wilmington and Stewart Reese of Mercer.

Mack, who averaged 28 points a game to rank No. 4 in the nation in that department, was the only unanimous choice on the team, but Natt was an easy winner in the voting for "Most Outstanding Player." Natt, No. 4 nationally in rebounding, received 12 votes to Mack's four in the balloting for the top player award. Others receiving votes were Daniels, Fields and Gilloon.

A powerful 6-5, 221-pound forward, Natt snatched down 13.2 rebounds a game with a high of 25 in leading NLU over Mississippi State. In addition to ranking high in rebounding, Natt also ranked among the national leaders in scoring with a 21.3 average, with a game high of 37, and shot 54.9 per cent from the floor and 73.1 from the line in leading the Indians to a 20-7 record.

The only unanimous choice on last year's all-South Independent team, Natt missed unanimous selection this time by only one vote and was one of three repeaters on the squad. The others were Anderson and Daniels. Like Natt, Anderson missed being a unanimous choice by only one vote and Daniels and Gilloon missed by two.

Mack averaged 28 points a game for East Carolina, shot 52.7 per cent from the floor and 76.2 from the line. When he wasn't making buckets, he was feeding somebody else and ranked second on the team in assists. The 6-3 guard scored 40 or more twice, with a high of 47, and was over 30 in 13 games.

Like Natt and Mack, Daniels ranked No. 4 in the nation in a major offensive category, in field goal accuracy with 63.4 per cent. The high-jumping senior averaged 18.8 points and 9.0 rebounds and recorded 54 dunks. He set a school record with 49 points against UNC-Wilmington.

Anderson and Simpkins gave Georgia Southern one of the best forward tandems in the country. Anderson averaged 19.6 points and 9.7 rebounds, shot 52.6 per cent from the floor and 63.0 from the line. Simpkins averaged 19.0 and 5.8 and shot 43.9 and 76.1. The bookend forwards—both are juniors, both at 6-5, and Simpkins, at 200, is the biggest by only five pounds—made the all-Poinsetta Classic team.

Augustus and Gilloon sparked South Carolina into the National Invitational Tournament. Gilloon was the top playmaker in USC history with 527 career assists with 132 coming this season. Augustus had the second highest field goal percentage in Gamecock history, 59.3, shot 73.8 from the line and averaged 10.8 points and 7.4 rebounds. He was the MVP in USC's nationally televised game against Marquette.

Elie was the first player to ever lead Northwestern State in field goal percentage for four straight seasons, shooting 55.8 per cent this year while averaging 18.1 points and 10.2 rebounds and hitting 60.7 from the foul line. He also had 26 blocked shots and 31 steals and was named to the all-Pacemaker Classic team.

Fields was the number two scorer among southern independent players with a 22.5 average, ranking 29th nationally in that department, and was number six among NCAA field goal shooters with a 62.8 percentage. The 6-8 center finished with one of the best career field goal percentages in the nation, 59.7, and hit 76.9 from the foul line.

Mercer's Reese scored 26 points in his team's three-point loss to North Carolina and averaged 15.8 for the season to lead his club. His shooting percentages were 48.2 and 75.3 and he was also an excellent rebounder for a guard, averaging 5.1 per game. His top scoring games were 28 against Georgia Southern and 27 vs. Murray State.

Samford's Robbin Bumbry narrowly missed a first team berth and leads an honorable metion list that also includes Greg Guye of Stetson, David Hall of Northeast Louisiana, John Heckstall of Campbell, Vic Watkins of Baptist and Bobby White of Centenary.

Sandra Post Scrambles To 72; Clings To Winners' Circle Lead

By KEN PETERS
AP Sports Writer

RANCHO MIRAGE, Calif. (AP) — Veteran Sandra Post shot a scrambling par 72 in Saturday's third round of the $305,000 Dinah Shore Winners Circle golf tournament to hold off a rush by Penny Pulz, winless in five years on the tour, and 1977 rookie-of-the-year Debbie Massey, and retain the lead.

Post, a 29-year-old Canadian who had opened the tournament with a course record 65 over the Mission Hills Country Club, had a 54-hole total of five-under-par 211 for a one-stroke edge over Pulz.

Pulz, a 25-year-old Australian, sank two birdie putts on the front nine of the 6,302-yard layout, had another birdie on the back nine and 15 pars en route to a 69.

Massey, who like Pulz had started the day four strokes behind Post, clipped two strokes off par with a 70, but fell out of a tie for second with a bogey on No.18 and finished the third round at 213, two strokes behind Post.

Massey, a 27-year-old who joined the tour in February 1977, had two birdies on the front nine, but a pair of bogeys to go with two birdies on the back nine.

JoAnne Carner, a stroke back of Post after two rounds, had a disastrous time on the third hole Saturday, shooting an 11 to drop out of contention. On that 395-yard, par four hole, Carner hooked her first three tee shots out of bounds. She finished the round with a 79 and her 54-hole total of 219 put her far back in the pack.

Post has gone four years without a victory and has won just twice in her 10-year career on the Ladies Professional Golf Association. But she has been one of the most consistent players on the tour in recent years, and finished ninth on the 1977 money winning list with $77,000.

Her third round play, however, was spotty. She sank three birdie putts, but had three bogeys and had to scramble for pars on a number of other holes.

Post never has led three rounds of a tournament before.

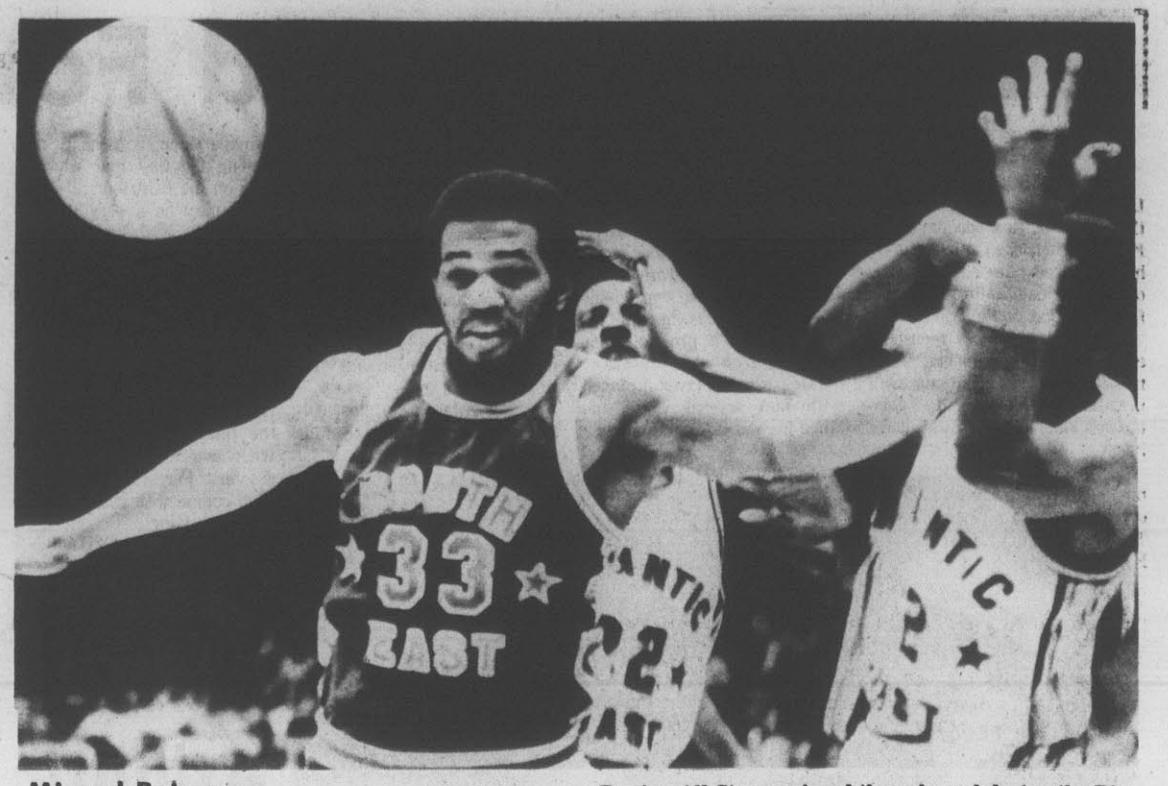

"It seems like I've been playing in this tournament all my life," she said, smiling. "But I don't really feel too much pressure."

Post and Jan Stephenson were the last group to finish the third round, with Massey and Carner just in front of them. Both Post and Massey said a delay caused by Arnold Palmer hitting in a closest-to-the-pin national giveaway contest bothered them somewhat.

"It was unfortunate that we had to wait for about 30 minutes," said Massey, who had to stay on the 17th tee while Palmer was hitting shots there. "I understand why it was being done, however, and I know it is good for the television ratings and for the tournament."

Stephenson, who had 71s the first two days of the tournament, shot a 73 Saturday for a 215 total.

Sunday's final round of the 72-hole tournament, sponsored by the Colgate-Palmolive Co. and carrying a first prize of $36,000 and a new car, will be nationally televised.

Reutemann's Time Withstands Assaults

By JERRY GARRETT
AP Motorsports Writer

LONG BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Carlos Reutemann's mildly disputed time from Friday's qualifying withstood all assaults Saturday, and the Argentine driver kept the important pole position for Sunday's U.S. Grand Prix West.

Defending champion Mario Andretti, who once improved to second, fell back slightly but was still assured a good starting spot among the frontrunners.

Reutemann's teammate, rookie Gilles Villeneuve, made a sizzling lap in the final minutes of qualifying Saturday to move back into second place, giving Ferrari a lock on both front row starting positions in the two-abreast, 22-car lineup.

Most drivers improved on their times from Friday's sessions during which confusion with the official timing and scoring operation caused several official protests and a delay of more than 12 hours in posting the day's best speeds.

However, Reutemann's time of 1 minute 20.636 seconds from Friday was untouchable, even by Reutemann, who was slower than Villeneuve. That "official" time was even faster — by about three-tenths of a second — than that recorded by Ferrari's own scorers.

The average speed of 90.183 miles per hour was a Formula 1 record by about a full second.

But Villeneuve, in his most impressive showing since joining Ferrari straight from the Formula Atlantic series last fall, improved to 1:20.836.

World champion Niki Lauda, the previous qualifying record holder, also squeezed past Andretti with a burst at 1:20.937.

That moved Andretti, who holds a slim lead in the championship standings this season, into the second row behind Villeneuve for the start of the $400,000 nationally televised race.

Reutemann, winner of the Argentine Grand Prix earlier this season, pointed out, "It is important to start in the front here. There are few places to make a pass.

"I am most concerned about trying to make the first corner right. After that, the problem is to keep consistent for all the race. If you lose a position, it will be very hard to regain it."

Reutemann credited the torque of his Ferrari's 12-cylinder engine with helping him win the pole. "The flat 12 is very fast to get the power on coming out of the corners," he observed.

Actually Andretti's Lotus, which started on the front row here last year for the dramatic drive to victory, was the only 8-cylinder car to break into the top five qualifiers. Lauda and his teammate John Watson, in fifth, drive 12-cylinder Alfa powered Brabhams.

Asked about the discrepancy between the official speed and his best speed as recorded by his own team statistician, Reutemann grinned and replied in his best broken English, "So many confusions with times yesterday. I don't know. I only drive."

Earlier Saturday, officials sorted out the mess over Friday's qualifying times. The press had used times compiled by on of the most respected team statisticians, Michelle Dubosc of Ligier. More than 12 hours later, officials decided those times were essentially correct except for a two-tenths of a second improvement in the speed of Andretti, which moved him from fifth to third.

As it turned out, all those speeds, except Reutemann's were improved Saturday.

In Saturday morning's untimed practice session, Hans Stuck of West Germany, bumped into Rupert Keegen of Great Britain, sending Stuck's car sailing through the air. It was heavily damaged and not expected to be repaired in time for the race. Keegen, who escaped injury even though he said Stuck's car drove right over his helmet, later demolished his car in a separate incident.

Ford Gets New Honor

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Phil Ford, North Carolina's All-American guard, was named Saturday as the winner of the John Wooden Award, given by the Los Angeles Athletic Club to the nation's top college basketball player.

Ford polled 697 points to barely edge Marquette guard Butch Lee, who had 689 in the nationwide balloting by sports writers.

Ford starred for the Tar Heels for four years and played on the gold-medal winning U.S basketball team at the 1976 Montreal Olympics.

Ford won a trophy and his school will be given a $2,000 scholarship.

The announcement was made during a news conference at the LAAC. Ford will be honored Sunday night at a dinner.

Hard Time Arriving

By DAVE O'HARA
AP Sports Writer

WINTER HAVEN, Fla. (AP) — Dennis Eckersley, the young right-handed pitching ace acquired by the Boston Red Sox from Cleveland, had a rough time joining his new club late Saturday.

The Red Sox sent a car to pick up Eckersley at Tampa International Airport, but a flat tire prevented the driver from reaching his destination. Eckersley ended up taking a taxi for the 60-mile drive to Winter Haven.

Eckersley, once moved into his motel room, came up to the ball park for his first meeting with General Manager Haywood Sullivan and several sports writers covering the Red Sox spring training. He let them know the airport mixup didn't dampen his enthusiasm about joining Boston.

"This is something you dream about," the 23-year-old pitcher said. "It's going to be a pleasure to pitch in front of big crowds at Boston. I just love fans."

He was asked his feelings during the buildup of trading rumors while he was still in the Indians' training camp in Arizona.

"I thought it was going to happen, then I didn't," Eckersley said. "I was warming up in the bullpen for a game Thursday when I was told I was traded. I really became excited."

Unseen Foe--The Calendar--Is Stalking Jack In The Masters

By BOB GREEN
AP Golf Writer

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — An invisible challenger — unseen and unlisted among the field, but the most relentless and implacable of all the foes an athlete must face — will be stalking Jack Nicklaus in the 42nd Masters golf tournament.

It is the calendar, time, the passing of the years.

It is an ally of the young men who would replace Nicklaus as the dominant force in golf, the unbeatable enemy of the man who has compiled the most awesome record in the history of the game.

Nicklaus recognizes the challenge.

"It is safe to say that most of my golf is behind me," the 38-year-old Nicklaus said.

But he's still the man to beat, the one towering figure, the larger-than-life-sized favorite in the annual spring rite that gets started Thursday on the flowered, rolling hills of Augusta National where so many of golf's legends have come to life.

It was here, last year, in one of the great duels of sports' history, that the Huck Finn-figure of Tom Watson shot down the Golden Bear and established himself as the heir apparent. Another Nicklaus-Watson confrontation is possible. It's a exciting prospect. But if it happens, it will happen by accident, not by the design of either Nicklaus or Watson.

"The Nicklaus-vs.-Watson thing is, largely, an invention of the press," Watson said. "The goal is to win the golf tournament, to beat the whole field."

It was an echo of Nicklaus' long-time, standard comment — and in almost the same words.

"The idea is to win the golf tournament, not beat one man," Nicklaus has said on numerous occasions. "If you beat one particular man and lose the golf tournament, you haven't accomplished anything at all."

His accomplishments are unmatched. He holds almost all the records worth having, including an unlikely accumulation of 14 major professional championships, including a record five Masters.

With time running out on his career, Nicklaus, who takes the long view of history, is grimly determined to add to that record.

"I have an opportunity to set a record in the majors that will be very difficult to beat," Nicklaus said. With that in mind, he has rearranged his schedule to place even greater emphasis on the Big Four — the Masters, the U.S. and British Opens and the PGA.

And, apparently, it has worked.

"I'm very pleased with my new schedule," he said earlier this season. "It has enabled me to do the things I want to do. I'm very happy that, when I have faced the situation where I needed to make things happen, I was able to make things happen."

In his last four starts, he has won two (Inverrary and the Tournament Players Championship), finished second in two (Los Angeles and Doral) and collected $155,600. It is the best record of the year.

"I can't remember a better start," Nicklaus said.

Watson isn't quite so sure.

"Jack, obviously, is scoring well. He's getting the ball in the hole. But he's chipping in and making long putts to do it. I don't think he's actually hitting the ball as well as he could be," Watson said.

And Tom is having his troubles, too. After a brilliant start in which he won two of the first three tournaments of the year, he tailed off badly and missed the cut in two of his last three appearances.

And he isn't quite so pumped up this time.

"I'm not as excited about the Masters as I was last year because I'm not playing as well," the forthright Watson admitted.

"I'm having a little trouble with my swing," he said, and flashed that boyish grin.

"But I haven't lost it. It's just hiding in there somewhere. I just have to find it again."

Should Nicklaus fail to find the magic he has worked so well earlier this year, should Watson's swing troubles fail to respond to his remedies, a solid corps of challengers are primed and ready to make their own bid for sports' most famous piece of haberdashery, the green jacket that goes to the winner.

Chief among them is Hubert Green, the current U.S. Open champion, second only to Nicklaus on the money-winning list, holder of two 1978 titles, a winner his last time out and quite obviously at the peak of his game.

"I've never won the Masters," Hubert said, and added: "but, until last year, I'd never won the Open, either."

Some other standouts in the elite, invitational field that will try the 7,030 yard Augusta National layout are PGA king Lanny Wadkins, former Masters champ Ray Floyd, always-dangerous Hale Irwin, young Jerry Pate, Ben Crenshaw, slump-ridden Johnny Miller, four-times Masters runner-up Tom Weiskopf and Lou Graham, a strong performer over recent weeks.

Lee Trevino will be on hand to do battle with the course that has become his nemesis. Arnold Palmer, 48, will return to the place he loves so well and where he won the first of his four Masters two decades back.

The foreign field boasts two-time winner Gary Player of South Africa, dynamic young Severiano Ballesteros of Spain and decided threat David Graham.

Kupchak Is Fined

NEW YORK (AP) — Forwards Lonnie Shelton of the New York Knicks and Mitch Kupchak of the Washington Bullets were fined $1,500 each Saturday by National Basketball Association Commissioner Lawrence F. O'Brien for their altercation in Thursday's game at Madison Square Garden.

In the brief encounter Kupchak shoved Shelton from behind and Shelton responded by throwing an elbow. Kupchak then threw another elbow and Shelton retaliated by punching Kupchak on the ear.

The fines levied by O'Brien are in addition to the $225 each player was assessed as a result of their ejection from the game.

West Is Winner

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — All-American Mychal Thompson of Minnesota scored 13 points and grabbed 17 rebounds Saturday, leading the West to an 88-84 victory over the East in a college all-star basketball game at the Las Vegas Convention Center.

Thompson, voted the game's most valuable player, led an attack in the first half which put the West ahead by 19 points.

But the East rallied midway through the second half, cutting the deficit to 79-76 on a jumper by Rick Wilson of Louisville.

The West capitalized on a big advantage at the free throw line, hitting 22 of 30 attempts, while the East had only four foul shots and made two.

All-American Butch Lee of Marquette hit only two of 16 shots for the East. But he contributed nine assists, a game record.

Kentucy forward Jack Givens, who scored 41 points last Monday night, leading the Wildcats to the NCAA title, led the East with 18 points. Bradley's Roger Phegley and Indiana State's Harry Morgan each tallied 12 points for the East.

The game was sponsored by Pizza Hut.

ceeds the Masters, was another shot behind at 215 after a 73. Defending title-holder Danny Edwards was 71-216.

"The wind was just unbelievable," said the 32-year-old Armstrong, who is seeking his first tour title. "If wouldn't be so bad if it stayed from one direction and in one force. But it would shift directions and speed while the ball was in the air."

He had to make four par-saving putts in the six to eight-foot range and saved another from 12 feet.

"I three-putted twice, and that's the difference between 74 and a round of par," he said.

Eichelberger, the only man among the first four who has won, had an erratic effort that included 4 bogeys, 3 birdies and a chip-in eagle-3 on the 13th hole.

He played the back side with only 12 putts and keyed his effort around a birdie-par-eagle-birdie burst beginning on the 11th.

The youthful Renner said he "played about as solidly as you could play in this kind of wind. It's the longest day I've had since I've been out here."

He steadily matched par figures, with a single birdie and a lone bogey, through the first 13 holes. Then, with the other contenders blowing in the wind, he took the lead alone with a down-wind 9-iron shot that nestled close to the hole for an easy birdie on the 14th.

But he dropped back with bogeys on the next two holes, 3-putting the 15th and catching the soft sand of a bunker on the 16th.

Red Sox Get Win

LAKELAND, Fla. (AP) — Dwight Evans slammed a three-run homer to hand Mark Fidrych his first loss of the exhibition baseball season Saturday as the Boston Red Sox defeated the Detroit Tigers, 8-3.

Fidrych, who would have equalled the Tigers' spring record of 5-0 had he won, was in trouble all but one of his six innings but held a 3-1 lead going into the sixth.

Carlton Fisk opened that inning with a single and scored on a double by Fred Lynn. Then Bob Bailey walked and Evans homered over the left-field wall.

Jack Brohamer had given Boston its first run in the second with a sacrifice fly. The Red Sox added two in the ninth off Steve Foucault, one on a single by Fred Kendall and the other on a single by Bailey. Kendall arrived Friday night after being traded from Cleveland along with pitcher Dennis Eckersley.

Detroit scored twice in the third off Jim Wright, once on a double by Ron LeFlore and the other on a ground out by Lou Whitaker, who also singled in a run in the fifth.

Royals Top Braves

FORT MYERS, Fla. (AP) — Dennis Leonard, Jim Colborn and Doug Bird combined for a four-hitter Saturday, as the Kansas City Royals blanked the Atlanta Braves 3-0 in exhibition baseball.

Leonard, who will pitch opening day for the Royals in Cleveland, worked the first two innings and allowed two singles. Colborn went the next six innings and gave up only two singles. Bird pitched the ninth.

Rookie outfielder Willie Wilson continued his base stealing spree by walking twice from the leadoff position, stealing twice and scoring both times. The 22-year-old Wilson now has 20 steals in 22 chances this spring.

George Brett singled twice and drove in a run as Kansas City scored all of its runs in six hits off Tommy Boggs, who pitched the first six innings for the Braves and took the loss.

Atlanta's exhibition record fell to 11-10. Kansas City is 10-11.

Seaver Wins First

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Dan Driessen drove in five runs and Tom Seaver won his first game of the spring as the Cincinnati Reds notched their fifth straight victory Saturday, a 10-2 exhibition baseball triumph over the Pittsburgh Pirates.

Driessen's outburst included a two-run homer and a run-scoring triple to key a 17-hit Cincinnati attack, the Reds biggest offensive explosion of the spring.

Pittsburgh starter Bert Blyleven was shelled for 13 hits and eight runs during his six-inning stint as the Pirates lost for the 18th time in 23 spring outings.

Seaver yielded a solo homer to Dave Parker in the first inning, but the Reds countered with three runs in the bottom of the inning, then scored four runs on six hits for a 7-2 bulge in the fifth. Blyleven drove in the other Pittsburgh run.

Driessen, who was hitting only .250 going into the game, added an RBI groundout and an RBI single.

Seaver allowed seven hits and two runs in six innings.

Phils Down Cards

CLEARWATER, Fla (AP) — Bake McBride's ninth-inning double to left scored two runs and gave the Philadelphia Phillies a 9-8 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals in an exhibition baseball game Saturday.

McBride's two-out bloop hit scored Ted Sizemore and Tim McCarver, giving Philadelphia a 12-9 record for spring training games.

The Cardinals' Jim Dwyer contributed a single, double, triple and home run to the losing effort.

Dave Johnson, Barry Foote, Bud Harrelson, Larry Bowa and McBride had doubles for Philadelphia. Foote also homered for Philadelphia while Dwyer and Keith Hernandez hit homers for St. Louis.

Philadelphia took a 5-0 lead in the first inning. The Phils were ahead 7-6 in the seventh when Dwyer doubled in two runs, giving St. Louis an 8-7 lead that held until the bottom of the ninth.

Reliever Tug McGraw got the victory. The loss went to John Urrea.

Mets Rally To Win

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP) — Ken Henderson's second double of the game in the eighth inning knocked in two runs Saturday and helped the New York Mets come from behind for a 5-4 exhibition baseball victory over the Chicago White Sox.

But Mets relief pitcher Bob Apodaca tore a ligament in his pitching elbow during the eighth inning and will have to undergo surgery on the injury next week. Apodaca, working for the first time in two weeks after being troubled all spring by a tender elbow, will be placed on the 60-day disabled list.

The Mets were leading 3-1 in the eighth inning when Apodaca left the game after throwing two pitches to Thad Bosley. Paul Siebert came in and gave up a single and a three-run homer to Lamar Johnson.

Then, in the bottom of the inning. Bobby Valentine was safe on an infield error. Joel Youngblood singled and Henderson doubled both runners home.

The Mets announced earlier that 26-year-old pitcher Mike Bruhert has made the club.

Expos Top Jays

DUNEDIN, Fla. (AP) — Home runs by Wayne Garrett and Tony Perez and two doubles by Warren Cromartie led the Montreal Expos to an 8-6 exhibition victory over the Toronto Blue Jays Saturday.

The Expos scored seven runs off Blue Jays starter Tom Underwood and took an 8-3 lead into the ninth inning. Toronto scored three runs in the bottom of the ninth off Bill Atkinson.

Atkinson gave up four walks and a double to Willie Upshaw. But he got designated hitter Rico Carty to ground out with the bases loaded, ending the game.

Toronto scored its other three runs in the fourth on a three-run homer by Tommy Hutton.

The Expos scored once in the second on Garrett's homer, once in the fourth on two walks and a single by Garrett, and twice in the fifth on consecutive singles by Larry Parrish, Chris Speier and Ellis Valentine and a groundout by Dave Cash.

Montreal added three runs in the sixth when Perez singled, Garrett walked, Cromartie rapped a two-run double, and Speier hit an RBI grounder. Perez homered in the eighth for the final Montreal run.

Gerulaitis, Borg Win Way Into Semifinals Of World Net Tourney

By PIERO VALSECCHI
Associated Press Writer

MILAN, Italy (AP) — Top-seeded Vitas Gerulaitis and Second-ranked Bjorn Borg of Sweden won their semifinals matches Saturday and will do battle Sunday for the $30,000 first prize at a $175,000 World Championship Tennis tournament.

Gerulaitis bested fourth-seeded Sandy Mayer 6-7, 7-5, 6-1, while Borg fought back from a first set tie-breaker loss to down Stan Smith 6-7, 6-0, 6-3.

Borg, the 21-year-old Swede, moved into a WCT final for the fifth time this year to set up a rematch of their semifinal meeting at Wimbledon last year and a recent tournament at Las Vegas. Borg won both of those clashes.

Borg and Gerulaitis face their seventh clash of their careers. The Swede has won each time but with great difficulty in their last few meetings, including the Wimbledon semifinals last year and a final in Las Vegas last week.

Both the 32-year-old Smith and the 21-year-old Borg held service through a 6-6 tie in the first set. In the tie-break, Borg climbed to 6-2 before Smith — playing aggressively at the net — survived four set points to clinch a 10-8 success.

In the second set, Borg broke Smith's serve in the second, fourth, and sixth games for a 6-0 win.

Smith started the decisive set by breaking Borg's serve through a series of volleys and two fine serve returns. But the Swede quickly tied the score as Smith missed a set point, netting a volley, then suffered two straight passing shots fired by Borg from the baseline.

Borg took command of play and broke Smith's serve again in the sixth and ninth games for a 6-3 victory.

Smith complained after the match over a missed point in the third set.

"If I'd managed to climb to a 2-0 lead, things could have gone quite differently. After that mistake, Borg started playing very good tennis and I felt a bit discouraged," said Smith.

Borg agreed that his break of Smith's serve in the second game of the third set was the turning point of the match.

"It was important for me to tie the score immediately, after losing my own serve. I succeeded, otherwise Smith could have managed to win the set and the match," Borg said.

"He was a great opponent, more dangerous than what the final score can let you think," Borg said.

Hill Sparks Giants

MESA, Ariz. (AP) — Marc Hill pounded home runs off two of his former teammates Saturday, leading the San Francisco Giants to a 13-1 exhibition victory over the Oakland A's.

The Giants, whose 16-7 record is best among National League teams during the spring, also got a homer from Larry Herndon among their 10 hits.

Hill hit a three-run homer in the fifth inning off A's starter Alan Wirth and led off the seventh with another homer, his third of the year, off John Johnson. Herndon connected in the third with two on.

Wirth and Johnson were among the six players traded to the A's for pitcher Vida Blue March 15. Wirth allowed 10 runs in five innings Saturday, but five runs were unearned because of Oakland errors.

Giants starter Bob Knepper worked seven innings, allowing one run and three hits, and Gary Lavelle pitched two hitless relief innings.

Willie McCovey contributed two singles and three RBI for the Giants.

Wayne Gross, who has moved from third base to first while Dave Revering recovers from a pulled leg muscle, drove in the A's only run with a sacrifice fly in the first inning.

Leiss In Finals

STUART, Fla. (AP) — Zenda Liess powered her way into the final of a Womens Tennis Association tournament Saturday, upsetting fifth-seeded Renee Richards 6-1, 6-3.

The championship match will be played Sunday.

In 25 seasons with the Detroit Red Wings, Gordie Howe scored 786 goals and made 1,023 assists.

Cubs Top Brewers

SUN CITY, Ariz. (AP — Home runs by Steve Ontiveros and Dave Rader sparked a five-run Chicago sixth inning, leading the Cubs to a 7-5 victory over the Milwaukee Brewers Saturday in an exhibition game.

Ontiveros' homer scored Bobby Murcer and Dave Kingman, and Rader's homer drove in Manny Trillo, who also homered in the eighth inning.

The Cubs' sixth-inning outburst came with two men out.

Milwaukee, trailing 7-3, scored twice in the ninth, with singles by Dan Money and Ben Ogilvie driving in Lenn Sakata and Paul flied out with the bases loaded, ending the game.

Dennis Lamp was the winner and Mike Caldwell, who had retired eight straight batters until the Cubs' barrage in the sixth, was the loser.

Snoddy Snaps 100-Meter Mark

By MIKE RABUN
UPI Sports Writer

DALLAS (UPI) — Oklahoma's William Snoddy ran one of the fastest 100 meters in history Saturday in the Dallas Invitational track meet, but his clocking had no chance of making the record book because of a blustery 26 mph wind.

Snoddy turned in a 9.87, well below the recognized electrically timed world record of 9.95. But since the wind was far above the allowable, his time will not be recognized.

Snoddy was one of seven winners for Oklahoma, but Texas A&M still won the team title, thanks to its depth. The Aggies failed to score in only two of the 17 events.

The Oklahoma sprinter, who won the NCAA 200-meter dash as a freshman last year, crushed the field but pulled a hamstring muscle as he crossed the finish line.

"I want to run a race that is not wind-aided with no controversy," Snoddy said. "I'm happy with this time, but not proud of it since there was the wind."

Texas A&M, which scored 131 points, had victories from Arthur Williams in the 400-meter dash and its 1,600-meter relay team.

In addition to Snoddy, the Sooners had wins from Randy Wilson in the 1,500-meter run, Collin Williams in the 110-meter hurdles, Mike Pleasant in the long jump, Gregg Byran in the 400-meter hurdles, John Rhode in the 800-meter run and from its 400-meter relay team.

Astros Rip Texas

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — Houston's J.R. Richard stifled Texas Saturday, allowing just two hits in seven innings as the Astros grabbed an 8-1 exhibition baseball victory.

The Rangers failed to get a hit until Bump Wills' single with two outs in the fifth inning.

The Astros scored three unearned runs in the top of the first inning off Rangers' starter Doyle Alexander, and added two more runs in the second.

Houston centerfielder Terry Puhl led off the game by rapping a ground ball between first baseman Mike Hargrove's legs, and ended up on second on the two-base error.

Cabell held at third when Cesar Cedeno doubled to right center but came home on a pass ball charged to Ranger catcher Jim Sundberg with Cedeno going to third on the play. Jose Cruz walked and Cedeno scored when Alexander's pick-off attempt to first went wild.

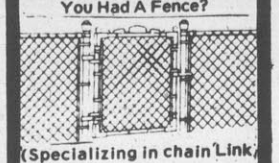

Astro shortstop Roger Metzger doubled with one out in the second and scored on Puhl's base hit up the middle. Puhl went to second base on the throw home and scored on Cabell's single to center.

Houston is 9-10, while the Rangers are 13-8.

Jaguars Claw Way To Tourney Title

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Farmville Central's Jaguars attacked the baseball Friday night and pounded out an 8-6 victory over Rose High School in the finals of the Pitt County Easter Tournament.

Earlier in the evening, D.H. Conley had slipped to a 2-1 win over North Pitt in the consolation game.

The Jaguars banged out ten hits in the game as they were more aggressive that the Rampants at the plate. Rose finished up with five hits.

"They just wanted it more than we did," Rose Coach Ronald Vincent said. "They went up to the plate and if they got two strikes on them, they just choked up and punched out a hit. We got two strikes and just waited to get a walk." The Rampants did get ten walks off three Farmville pitchers, but they also suffered eight strikeouts, five of those coming against the top three batters.

The game did see-saw back and forth for a while. It wasn't until the bottom of the fifth that the Jaguars finally took the lead for good.

Farmville got the initial lead in the bottom of the first. Philip Gordon walked and courtsey runner Eugene Joyner was sacrificed up. Edward Hines walked and with two away, Ted Johnson, the designated hitter, singled to left, scoring Joyner.

Johnson, who went six-for-eight during the two-day tournament, and drove in five runs, was named the event's Most Valuable Player at the conclusion of the tournament.

The Jaguars added two more in the third for a 3-0 lead. Billy McLawhorn singled to open the inning and Donald Holloman was hit by a pitch. Allen Moore eached on a fielder's choice that got Holloman at second. Gordon followed with a double up the alley in left center, scoring both McLawhorn and Moore for the 3-0 advantage.

Rose, which had threatened in the second and third, loading the bases in the latter, finally broke the ice in the top of the fourth, tieing it at 3-3.

Greg Lee opened with a double to right center and Will Sanderson walked. Bobby Woronoff singled to center, scoring Lee, and Reggie Selby ran for Woronoff. Reggie Spain was hit by a pitch, loading the bases. Joey Mattheis' sacrifice fly brought in Sanderson, cutting the Jaguar lead to one. Robert Morehead then walked to reload the bases, and Ronnie Chapman singled to right, scoring Selby.

But a line drive cost Rose a doubleplay, ending the threat.

Farmville then pushed over two more runs in the bottom of the fourth, regaining the lead, 5-3. Clark May reached on an infield hit and moved up on an error on the play. McLawhorn singled him in, and also advanced on an error. He then stole third and scored on Holloman's single for the 5-3 lead.

Rose came up with three in the top of the fifth to take a 6-5 lead, their only lead of the game. Jeff Aldridge singled and stole second. Then, after two outs, Woronoff walked, with Selby running for him. Mike Williams, as a pinch hitter, cracked a triple to right center, scoring both Aldridge and Selby. Williams then scored the go-ahead run when Joey Mattheis reached on an error.

But Farmville came right back in their half of the inning to score two and regain a 7-6 lead. Scott Evans led off with a triple up the alley in right center. After two were out, a wild pitch scored Evans. Johnson followed with a single to left and May walked. McLawhorn reached on an error, loading the bases, and Lewis Yelverton walked, forcing in Johnson with the lead run.

The Jaguars got an insurance run in the sixth. Gordon walked and Al Hamm ran for him. He was sacrificed up, and Tony Eason reached on an error. Johnson again singled, scoring Hamm for the 8-6 lead.

Rose loaded the bases in the top of the seventh after two were out, as they got three straight walks, but they failed to connect as a strikeout ended the threat.

Johnson finished with three hits for Farmville, while McLawhorn had two. No one had more than one for Rose.

Conley's victory over North Pitt in the consolation game came in the bottom of the seventh, as the two teams locked horns in a pitcher's duel.

Conley's Ben Wilson got the win, allowing three hits, walking two and striking out five. Jeff Hines was the loser, as he gave up five hits, walked three and struck out one.

Conley scored first, getting a run in the fourth. Wilson reached on a double when his routine fly to right was lost in the lights. He scored when Mike Phillips singled. North Pitt got him out trying to advance, and although Conley loaded the bases on a single and two walks, no further damage was done.

North Pitt got its only run in the seventh. Roy Briley walked and moved up on an out. He stole third and scored on Bob Hemingway's single.

Conley came right back to score the winning run in the bottom of the seventh. Dale Bailey singled and moved up when Arnell Credle's attempted sacrifice was relayed to second too fate. Nuggie Worthington reached on an error, loading the bases, and a wild pitch let Bailey score the game-ending run.

Bailey had two hits to lead Conley.

Ange's Homer Lifts Jamesville Past Roanoke For Championship

JAMESVILLE — Jamesville High School pushed over a run in the seventh inning to gain a 5-4 win over Roanoke and capture first place in its own Jamesville Invitational Baseball Tournament Friday.

Roanoke had taken the lead in the first inning scoring three runs. Ken Gurganus singled and Glenn Cargile got a hit. Cliff Keel reached on an error, loading the bases. Street Lee walked to force in Gurganus, and a single by Anthony Latham brought in Cargile and Keel.

Jamesville came back with a pair in the bottom of the first. After two were out, Trent Ange and Ed Lilley both walked. Greg Sullivan singled in Ange and Tom DiNardo singled to score Lilley.

The Bullets pushed ahead with two more in the second. Glenn Ellis singled and Keith Long was hit by a pitch. Toby Holliday walked, filling the sacks. Jeff Holliday was hit by a pitch, scoring Ellis. Long scored on an out.

Roanoke tied it up with one in the fifth. Cargile tripled and scored on Charlie Smith's double.

But in the seventh, Trent Ange led off, smashing a home run that gave the Bullets their 5-4 win and the title.

Ange, who pitched a victory in one of the three Jamesville tournament games, and hit game-winning homers in the other two, was named the tournament's Most Valuable Player.

Cargile, Gurganus and Latham each had three hits to lead Roanoke.

Jamesville returns to action on Tuesday, playing host to Mattamuskeet, while Roanoke plays host to West Edgecombe.

Richmond County Runs Past Greene Central

ROCKINGHAM — Richmond County pushed over 11 runs in the first two innings and downed Greene Central, 14-4, in the fifth-place contest of the Pete Hogan Invitational Baseball Tournament here Friday.

Richmond County, the host team, got all it wanted in the first two frames. In the first, Darrell Wallace walked and Bubba Kirkley reached on an error. Steve Chamblee then singled in both runners. Johnny Brewer eached on another error and Franklin Smith singled in both Chamblee and Brewer for a 4-0 lead.

Richmond County came back to score seven more runs in the second inning, on seven hits and four Greene Central errors.

They added two in the fourth and one in the fifth.

Greene Central finally broke the ice with one in the fourth and added three more in the seventh.

The Rams finished the tournament in sixth place and are now 4-5 overall. They travel to D.H. Conley on Tuesday for their next game.

Chamblee led the Richmond County hitting with four, while Brewer and Smith each had two. Greg Holmes and Russell Brann each had two for the Rams.

Firebirds Down Pitt

BETHEL — Southern Nash scored in all but one inning and captured a 10-1 victory over North Pitt's softball team Friday.

Southern Nash pushed over three in the first, and added one in the second. After going scoreless in the third, the Lady Firebirds picked up two in the fourth, one each in the fifth and sixth and two in the seventh.

North Pitt's lone run came in the first inning.

Susie Murray and Angela Hall both had two hits to lead Southern Nash. Both of Hall's were doubles.

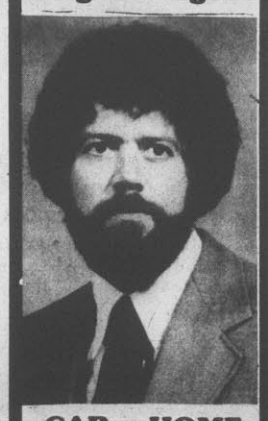

North Pitt is now 0-2, and will travel to C.B. Aycock on Tuesday.

William & Mary Nips Bucs In 13th

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. — The College of William & Mary, not fearing the Pirates of East Carolina Univeristy, hung on and battled to a 7-6 victory in 13 innings over the Bucs Friday afternoon, handing the Pirates their third successive defeat.

Both teams had numerous chances throughout the game, but it wasn't until after the Pirates had pushed over a run in the top of the 13 that the Indians finally pushed in two in the bottom of the frame to end the long game.

Tom Stiller took the loss, coming out of the bullpen to go the final six and a third innings. It was his first decision of the year. He was tagged for ten hits during his time on the mound, giving up three runs, just two of them earned.

Only two of the six Pirate runs were earned.

William & Mary took the initial lead, getting a pair of runs in the second inning. With one down, Tom Dolan singled and Bob Manderfield doubled. Jim Moon grounded out, but Dolan scored on the play. Don Howren then doubled in Manderfield.

East Carolina came back with three in the fourth inning to grab the lead for the first time. Pete Paradossi walked and Raymie Styons reached on an error, with Tim Hardison running for him.

Paradossi, who had moved to third on the error, scored on Bobby Supel's sacrifice fly. Hardison then came in when Max Raynor cracked a triple. Raynor scored on Robert Brinkley's single for a 3-2 Pirate lead.

William — Mary tied it up with one in the fifth. Grey Oliver walked and Ken Cloud singled. Dolan then singled Oliver over.

The Indians moved back into the lead in the sixth with another single run. Joe Manderfield reached on a fielder's choice, and after two were out, Jimmy Carter singled him in.

William & Mary added another run in the seventh to take a 5-3 margin. With one down, Doug Smithhurst singled on a slow roller, and with two away, Bob Manderfield singled. Moon reached on an error, scoring Smithhurst.

The Pirates rallied for two in the eighth to tie it up, and then force extra innings. Styons singled and Supel also got a hit. Both runners moved up on an error on the play, and scored when Raynor hit his second triple of the day.

It stayed 5-5 until the top of the 13th when the Pirates got a run. With one, Macon Moye reached on an error, but was out at second on Raynor's infield grounder. Mike Sage reached on another miscue, and Carraway singled, scoring Raynor for a 6-5 lead.

But it was not meant to be for the Pirates. Smithhurst led off the bottom of the 13th with a single and moved up on a passed ball. Dolan singled, and with one out, Moon doubled to drive in both runners, giving the Indians the win. Raynor's two tripled and two singles by Brinkley led the Pirate hitting.

Dolan had four hits, while Bob Manderfield had three and Cloud, Smithurst and Moon each had two for the Indians.

The loss dropped the Pirates to 10-9, while the Indians climbed to 9-10-1.

Neil Bonnett Grabs Off Pole Position For Southeastern 500

BRISTOL, Tenn. (AP) — Neil Bonnett gives most of the credit to his crew for earning him the pole position for Sunday's Southeastern 500 Grand National stock car race at Bristol International Raceway.

"It really surprised me that it ran that good," Bonnett said Friday of his Dodge after he earned the pole with a qualifying speed of 110.409 miles per hour on the high-banked, .533-mile track.

"We've been plagued with motor problems. But the crew took it apart and put it back together," said Bonnett after earning his third No. 1 start this season.

The Hueytown, Ala., driver also was on the pole for Grand National races at Richmond, Va., and Rockingham, N. C., although he didn't win either one.

Winning the outside pole was Oldsmobile driver Benny Parsons of Ellerbe, N. C., whose fast lap Friday was 110.029 m.p.h. Bonnett and Parsons came closest to the track qualifying record of 110.591 m.p.h. set in 1975 by Buddy Baker.

The biggest surprise Friday, when the first 10 spots were filled for the 30-car field, was the failure of veteran Richard Petty to make it. The best Petty could do was 108.229 m.p.h. compared with 108.309 m.p.h. that earned the 10th spot for Lennie Pond of Chester, Va.

But Petty was to have his chance again today in trials to determine the last 20 spots. Among other drivers still trying to qualify were Skip Manning, J. D. McDuffie, James Hylton, Buddy Arrington, Elmo Langley, Frank Warren and D. K. Ulrich.

Well down on Friday's list was Cale Yarborough of Timmonsville, S. C., who won both the Southeastern and Volunteer 500 races here last year. Yarborough, who has won seven of the last 10 races at Bristol, was sixth in his Oldsmobile with a speed of 109.452 m.p.h.

Lady Pirates Sixth In Virginia Field

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. — The Lady Pirates of East Carolina University placed sixth out of a field of 12 teams Friday in the University of Virginia Invitational Track Meet.

The Pirates tallied 35 points. The University of Maryland finished first with a score of 131.

Debbie Freeman captured third in the shot put and sixth in the discus for East Carolina. Maria Gudjohnson leaped to third place in the long jump and placed fourth in the 100-yard hurdles.

Debbie Knight placed third in the javelin, while the mile and two-mile relay teams both came in fifth.

Elaine Davis took fifth in the shot put, with Minnie McPhatter finishing fourth in the 400-meter dash. Linda Mason was sixth in the 400-meter hurdles.

The Lady Pirates will not see any action until April 15, when they participate in the second annual Delaware State Invitational.

Lady Jags Nip A-G

FARMVILLE — Farmville Central High School pulled out a 10-9 softball victory over Ayden-Grifton Friday in an extra-inning contest.

Farmville Central took the initial lead in the first inning, scoring three runs. But Ayden-Grifton came back with five in the third to move ahead. They added four more in the fifth for a 9-3 lead.

Farmville then rallied for three in the fifth and three more in the sixth to tie it at 9-9.

Finally, in the eighth, Diana Gordon singled and Beth Massey got a hit. Diana Barrett got a hit, scoring Gordon with the game-winning run.

Melba Willoughby was the winning pitcher.

Shanda Brock had a two-run homer for Ayden-Grifton in the third, while Vivian Ellis had two hits. Gordon, Massey and Barrett each had three hits for Farmville Central.

The Lady Jaguars, now 2-3, play host to Southern Nash on Tuesday, while Ayden-Grifton is at North Lenoir on Wednesday.

Williamston Bops Squaws

WILLIAMSTON — Williamston gained a 6-3 victory over the Roanoke High School girls' softball team Friday.

Williamston scored a run in the first inning and added two more in the second. Roanoke tied it up with three in the top of the fourth, but Williamston went right back ahead with one in the bottom of the inning.

The Tigerettes then added two insurance runs in the fifth.

Jean Rogers had two hits, including a two-run homer in the fifth, while Myra Martin had two, with a homer in the fourth. Pam Lilley added two hits as did winning pitcher Sherrie Singleton for Williamston.

Roanoke's hitting was led by Mary Langley with two, including a triple.

ECU Women Split Pair

East Carolina won the opener 2-1, but lost the second game, 8-6.

Martin In 12-1 Win

AHOSKIE — Martin Academy pushed over 10 runs in the top of the fifth inning to roll up a 12-1 victory over Ridgecroft Academy Friday afternoon.

Martin pushed over one run in the top of the first, but Ridgecroft matched that in the bottom of the frame. The Pioneers then moved back ahead with one in the second.

But it was the fifth that put the game out of reach. Ricky Simpson singled to open the inning and Tim Gardner walked. Jeffrey James was hit by a pitch, loading the bases. Sherwood Leggett singled in two runs, and Clif Haislip singled in another. Butch Bragg's singled scored two more runs.

William Peele then walked and Wiley Keel singled in two more tallies. Durwood Leggett singled and Gardner walked. James singled in two more, and the final run scored on a hit by Bill Falvo.

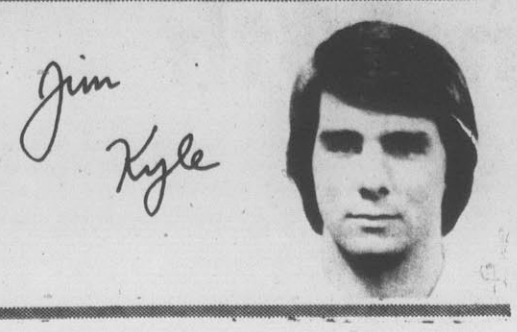

Gardner hurled a two-hitter in the win, striking out 11, walking one and hitting one.

Keel had three hits to lead the Pioneers, while Durwood Leggett had two.

Martin, now 3-2 and 2-0 in the league, travels to Albemarle Academy on Tuesday.

THE UNC SEA GRANT program is sponsoring a number of troll bait rigging workshops around the state next week to help individuals interested in learning more about rigging techniques.

Rigging troll bait is not as difficult as it might sound, according to avid sports fisherman Doug Scott, a a Sea Grant marine advisory agent. He said you do not have to be an expert to learn how.

The workshop will include step-by-step demonstrations on rigging such baits as mullet, ballyhoo, squid and eel, followed by a practice session during which workshop participants will have a chance to try out each of the techniques discussed. Scott, a noted rigging authority, will be on hand to lead the demonstrations and offer individual instruction.

Five evening-long workshops, and one day-long, will be held in the series. The first will be next Tuesday, April 11 at Stallings Marine on Memorial Drive in Greenville. It will begin at 7 p.m.

Others will be Wednesday April 12 evening, at the Marine Resources Center on Roanoke Island; Thursday evening at the Marine Resources Center on Bogue Banks; Friday evening at Sanders Ford in Jacksonville; Saturday morning at the Wrightsville Marine in Wrightsville Beach; and Saturday evening at the Southport Small Boat Harbor in Southport.

The cost for the workshop is $3 for bait, hooks and leader wire. Participants should bring their own bucket, hand towel, cutting pliers and fillet knife. Everything else will be provided.

For more information on the workshop, contact Sea Grant recreation specialist Leon Abbas at the Sea Grant office in Raleigh, 737-2454.

Work Begun On Impoundment

The North Carolina Wildlife Resources Commission has begun construction on a new waterfowl impoundment on the Hydeland Farms Section of the Gull Rock Game Lands near New Holland.

Approximately 250 acres of cropland and timber will be impounded by the project, estimated to take two to three years to complete.

"Plans call for completion of one mile of dike this year with continuation of dike construction next year," said J. C. Brown, Commission wildlife biologist.

Brown said preliminary plans also call for construction of two separate ponds on the area with pumps installed to control water levels. He also said the ponds probably can be drained each year, crops planted, and then reflooded to attract waterfowl.

Shortage Of Trout

There may be as much as a 10 per cent reduction in trout available for stocking to the Commission due to natural events that decimated fish populations in hatcheries this year, according to officials.

"The combination of the drought last summer and the flooding in the fall gave us a much higher mortality in the hatcheries than we usually have," said Bud Ratledge, supervisor of the Marion Fish Hatchery. "Trout need lots of cold water with a high oxygen count; and when the drought hit this summer, the low water and high heat really hurt them. On top of that, a lot were killed in the fall. Debris from the floodwaters would clog the intake pipes of the raceways, and the resulting low water in the raceways killed some of them."

The Commission had planned on stocking about 717,000 trout this year. As a result of mortality in the hatchery, some 36,000 brown trout and 30,000 brook trout aren't available.

Ratledge said, however, that the federal government could help make up some of the shortage. And in addition, the remaining fish will be equally distributed throughout trout waters to minimize the impact of the shortage.

Sting Won't Borrow Players

By HOWARD ULMAN
AP Sports Writer

CHICAGO (AP) — Members of the multi-national Chicago Sting soccer team may not be able to understand each other all the time, but at least they are employed by the same organization.

New Coach Malcolm Musgrove says the idea of a team owning its players is the key to a strong soccer club and a successful North American Soccer League.

Last year, some of the Sting's players didn't join the squad until their European teams had ended their seasons. This year, the Sting owns all its players and won't be waiting anxiously for some European star to bail them out, said Musgrove.

"Last year they borrowed players," he said Friday night prior to the Sting's season opener tonight at Dallas. "They couldn't get hold of them until the season was five or six games under way.

"A lot of the clubs have purchased players this year more than any other year in the NASL. It's obvious after the gates of last season that everybody feels soccer is on the verge of becoming really big in America and you can't become big with players who are not used to performing in big stadiums in front of big crowds," said Musgrove, who coached the Connecticut Bicentennials for the last half of the 1977 season. That franchise has been shifted to Oakland.

Musgrove said neither European nor NASL teams like the loan system, which deprives teams on both sides of the Atlantic of players' services for parts of seasons.

This year's Sting has only six holdovers from the club that finished fourth in the five-team Northern Division. There are 16 new players, but Musgrove hopes the ownership approach will enable the Sting to retain 70 to 75 percent of the team for 1979.

Morgan, Bench Come To Life Leading Cincinnati To Victory

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

Johnny Bench and Joe Morgan are alive and well after all, which probably means bad news for National League pitchers in days to come.

Before Friday's exhibition game with the Chicago White Sox, Morgan had only three hits in 35 at-bats for a .086 spring average while Bench was a sickly 2-26—.062. Together they boasted four Most Valuable Players awards and a combined .082 average.

"It was," said Bench, "an ugly spring, most embarrassing. A sick bat is what I had, but I wasn't really worried."

Any worries anybody else had ended Friday. Bench drove in three runs with a single, double and homer while Morgan had three singles and an RBI as the Cincinnati Reds posted a 5-3 victory.

"I felt it would all come around," said Bench. "It was just a matter of some bad habits I had gotten into, and down here you have time to work them out. One day does not a spring make."

But one day like that from Bench and Morgan makes Sparky Anderson a much happier manager. After all, Bench is 30 and has caught 100 games or more for 10 consecutive seasons — a National League record — while second baseman Morgan is 34 and coming off his lowest batting average (.288) in six years with the Reds.

"If you can hit, you can hit. If you can field, you can field. I can do both," said Morgan. "I'm seeing the ball better, swinging better and snapping the bat. And when you do that, everything falls in place. I was never worried. You writers were making like Rick Auerbach was going to take my place."

The Reds also got a top-flight performance from reliever Doug Capilla, who had been shaky most of the spring but pitched three innings of one-hit baseball to earn the victory.

"I've been walking the first guy I faced and it's been driving me crazy," said Capilla, who needed only 32 pitches to retire 11 batters. "My wife said I wasn't concentrating enough on the first hitter."

Elsewhere:

—Eddie Murray's two-run double helped the Baltimore Orioles nip the Kansas City Royals 3-2 and Jay Johnstone drove in all Philadelphia's runs with a single and double as the Phillies downed the New York Mets 3-1.

—Jerry Morales drove in a pair of runs in the St. Louis Cardinals' 3-1 triumph over the Detroit Tigers and Richie Zisk's tie-breaking homer in the seventh inning paced the Texas Rangers to a 7-5 victory over the Houston Astros.

Larvell Blanks singled home the winning run with two out in the bottom of the ninth to give the Cleveland Indians a 6-5 victory over the Chicago Cubs and rookie Chuck Baker homered, only his second hit of the spring, as the San Diego Padres defeated the Minnesota Twins 5-3.

—Carlton Fisk snapped a tie with an eighth-inning homer as the Boston Red Sox beat the Montreal Expos 6-3.

—The Oakland A's erupted for six runs in the fourth inning, including Gary Thomasson's two-run triple, and defeated the Seattle Mariners 9-7.

—Larry Herndon and Terry Whitfield each collected two singles and a triple while Mike Ivie had two singles and a double as the San Francisco Giants edged the Milwaukee Brewers 8-7.

—Gary Matthews' RBI single in the third inning gave the Atlanta Braves a 2-1 victory over their Richmond farm club of the International League and the opening game of the Freeway Series between Los Angeles and California in Dodger Stadium was rained out with the Angels leading 5-0.

U.S. Stars Take Dapper Dan

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Last year, the Dapper Dan Roundball Classic was a showcase for Eugene Banks, a Philadelphia schoolboy who was expected to do big things in basketball.

Banks, who as a college freshman recently helped Duke to the NCAA finals, was among 16,355 specators Friday night at the latest Roundball Classic.

He saw another high school basketball crop that will have its own impact on the college scene next season.

It was 6-foot-2 Dwight Anderson of Dayton, Ohio, who scored 19 points to lead the U.S. All-Stars to a 105-100 victory over the Pennsylvania All-Stars.

The U.S. team also got 18 points from Walker Russell of Pontiac, Mich. He was named U.S. MVP, the same award his older brother, pro player Campy Russell, won in 1971.

Russell who scored on a layup with 2:44 to play to put the U.S. ahead to stay. Anderson followed with an eight-foot jumper and a later freethrow to make 99-94.

Pennsylvania closed to within 99-98 with 51 seconds left on a tipin by 6-foot-6 Jim Smith of Pittsburgh Schenley High School.

But the U.S. scored its last six points from the freethrow line to secure its 10th victory in the 14-game series which in the past has featured players like Calvin Murphy, Billy Knight, Maurice Lucas, Adrian Dantley and Moses Malone.

Pennsylvania was led by 6-7 Bruce Atkins of nearby Wilkinsburg with a game-high 20 points and 15 rebounds. He was named Pennsylvania MVP.

Two Philadelphians were also in the Pennsylvania forefront. Six-foot-2 Gordy Bryan of Malvern Prep had 14 points, and 6-foot-2 Kevin Broadnax of South Philadelphia had 13.

For the U.S., 6-foot-7 Lionel Marquetti of Verbum Dei High School in Los Angeles had 14 points and six rebounds. He's headed for the University of Southern California.

Darryl Mitchell, 6 feet 4, from North Shore High School in West Palm Beach, Fla., had 11 points.

Six-foot-8 Micah Blount of East Jefferson High School in Metairie, La., had 10 points. He's going to Tulane.

In a preliminary game, the California team, led by 6-foot-4 Jose Slaughter of Compton, beat the Keystone squad 101-78.

The 6-foot-4 Slaughter was named MVP for the California team, which led 43-38 at halftime before outscoring the losers 31-15 in the third quarter.

The Keystone team, composed of Pennsylvania players not chosen to the main game, was topped by 6-foot-7 Tom Parks of nearby Belle Vernon with 17 points.

Ignorance Bliss For Johnson

By The Associated Press

Ignorance was, indeed, bliss for Ollie Johnson.

The 6-foot-6 forward for the Atlanta Hawks calmly stepped to the free throw line with two seconds to play in overtime Friday night — and missed a shot.

Undaunted and apparently unperturbed, he made his second shot — and with it the Hawks climaxed a comeback from a 17-point deficit in the second half and beat the visiting Philadelphia 76ers 111-110.

What Johnson didn't know was that he only had two shots to work with. "I thought it was three to make two," he said. "If I had known it was only two shots, I would really have felt the pressure. I was shocked when I didn't get another shot."

The 76ers had another shot — but Johnson took care of that matter, too, forcing Julius Erving to take, and miss, a 15-footer at the buzzer.

"He backed him right to the baseline," Atlanta Coach Hubie Brown said, "and when Erving caught the ball he was behind the backboard. If Ollie hadn't backed him out he would have had a dunk on the inbounds pass."

In the rest of the National Basketball Association, it was San Antonio 120, Boston 117; New Jersey 122, Milwaukee 114; Golden State 111, Indiana 103; Portland 103, Los Angeles 101; Cleveland 102, Washington 101; Chicago 117, Detroit 107; New York 117, New Orleans 116; Phoenix 136, Kansas City 112, and Seattle 111, Denver 109.

The victory for the Hawks, fighting for a playoff berth, was their 10th straight at home.

"This is the fourth big game we had to win and we did," said Brown. "It shows the maturing of a very young team ... The fans in the second half were unreal. They really got behind the kids and gave them an extra push. All of this can only be done by kids who don't give up."

John Drew led the Hawks with 34 points, including the basket with 17 seconds to play in the fourth period that sent the game into overtime knotted at 102. George McGinnis had 23 to lead Philadelphia.

Spurs 120, Celtics 117

Like the Hawks, the Spurs trailed at one point by 17 points. But San Antonio wiped out the last vestige of the Celtics' lead with 5:40 to play, then grabbed a six-point edge less than a minute after that.

"We just lack the killer instinct," said Boston's Dave Bing. "This is the second night in a row where we built up big leads and let the other team back into the ballgame." Larry Kenon led the Spurs with 32 points. Dave Cowens had 25 for Boston.

Nets 122, Bucks 114

Bernard King poured in 39 points and snared 14 rebounds to lead New Jersey past the Bucks. It was the Nets' 14th victory in their last 26 games, not bad considering they lost 42 of their first 51.

"The finish we're having will start us off next year real good," King said. "The team has confidence in itself now."

Warriors 111, Pacers 103

Golden State, pulling to within one game of Milwaukee in the scramble for a Western Conference playoff berth, ran off the game's last 18 points — 12 of them by Clifford Ray — to wipe out a 103-93 lead Indiana had built with 3:16 to play.

Rick Barry had 28 points for the Warriors while Ricky Sobers had 20 to pace the Pacers.

Trail Blazers 103, Lakers 101

Lionel Hollins, broke a 97-97 tie by hitting a 14-foot jump shot, then scored a 12-footer and a pair of foul shots to give Portland a 103-97 lead and the edge it needed to snap its five-game losing streak and beat the Lakers.

Maurice Lucas led the Trail Blazers with 26 points and Hollins added 22. Kareem Abdul-Jabbar had 29 for Los Angeles.

Cavaliers 102, Bullets 101

Campy Russell, who finished with a team-high 24 points, scored a field goal and free throw and Foots Walker followed with a steal and basket, all in the final 26 seconds, to vault Cleveland past the Bullets. Elvin Hayes had 26 points for Washington.

Bulls 117, Bulls 107

Rookie Mark Landsberger's career-high 25 points and Artis Gilmore's 23 for Chicago more than overcame Leon Douglas' game-high 28 for Detroit and gave the Bulls their victory.

Knicks 117, Jazz 116

Lonnie Shelton and Jim McMillian hit 24 points apiece in the Knicks' triumph. And they put in all the crucial points in the final 1¼ minutes.

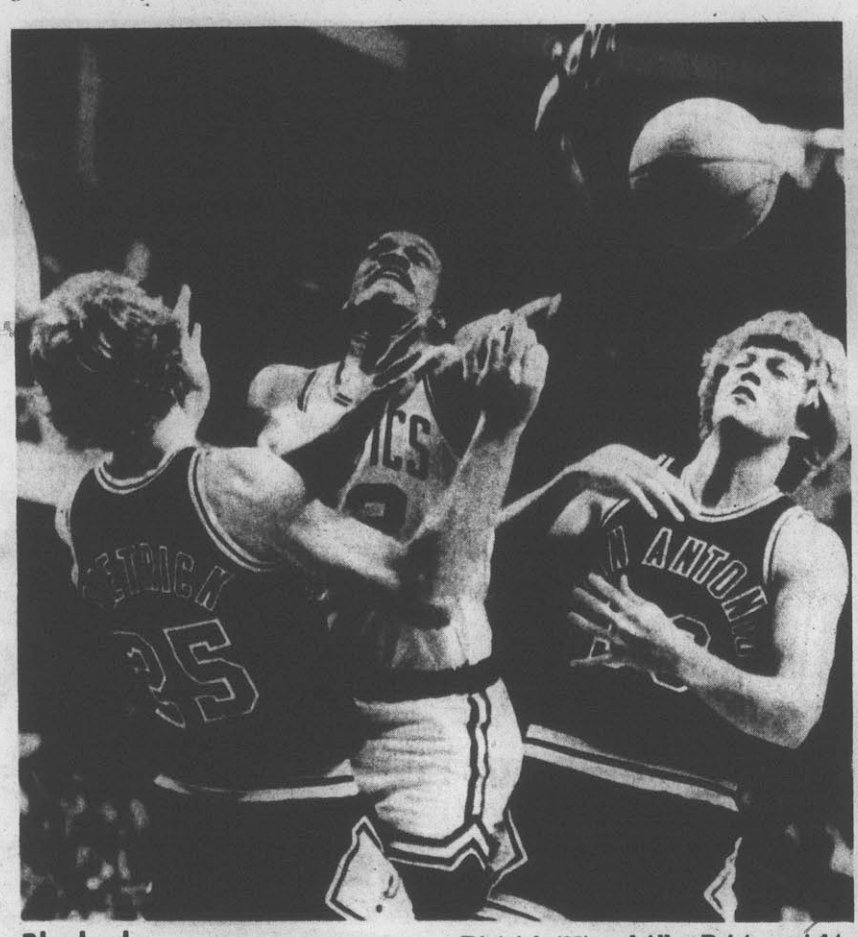

With the score tied at 110, Shelton put in a rebound of a missed New York shot, was fouled and sank the free throw, giving New York a 3-point edge. McMillian then got a field goal and two free throws to insure the victory. Gail Goodrich had 38 for New Orleans.

Suns 136, Kings 112

Phoenix ran away from Kansas City, outscoring the Kings 16-2 in the second period to open a lead of 22 points, and coasted home on Paul Westphal's 35 points. Kansas City's top scorer, Otis Birdsong, had 17 points at the half but added only 6 the rest of the way.

SuperSonics 111, Nuggets 109

John Johnson's 25 points and Dennis Johnson's 24 led Seattle's scoring, but it was former Nugget Paul Silas' two offensive rebounds in the final 43 seconds that led to the points which gave the SuperSonics their victory over Denver.

North Pitt Softball Lacking Experience

By JIM KYLE
Reflector Sports Writer

First-year North Pitt softball coach Gail Stanfield is molding the Pant-HERS for the future. With only two experienced players returning and five freshmen in the starting lineup, the team will probably have a tough time this year, the coach said, but should improve next season.

"We're a real young team," Stanfield said. The Pant-HERS have only one senior starter, and she is inexperienced. The only returnees from last year's losing team are a pair of juniors.

"We're inexperienced, but very enthusiastic and ready to go. They're not ready to quit, even though they know it's going to be a tough season. We don't expect to win many games because of the inexperience."

Despite starting three freshmen and a sophomore in the infield, Stanfield said North Pitt should be strong there. The Pant-HERS' weaknesses are in the outfield and on the pitchers' mound.

Freshman Connie Dupreee will start at first base. She is an "outstanding athlete" who has done "an excellent job" at first base.

At second is freshman Jeanette Brown. "She's a little bit slow at times, but she gets the job done," according to Stanfield.

The only sophomore in the infield is Starla Singleton. She is "real strong at shortstop," the coach commented.

Third base is open right now, and two girls are battling for it. They are freshmen Beverly Holder and Sharon Wade. "Both do a good job, but that place is really still open right now."

North Pitt has no experience at pitcher, Stanfield said. The players who will do most of the mound work for the team are freshman Terry Briley, sophomore Tammy Purvis and senior Marry Pippins. Purvis is the strongest right now, the coach said, but all suffer from inexperience.

Paula Morris, one of the two returnees, will start behind the plate. A junior, Morris is "an excellent catcher."

The other returnee is center fielder Cynthia Barnes, also a junior. She is a "very good hustler."

The only senior starter, Barbara Morning, will get the nod in left field. Morning, who could play third base, has a strong arm.

Several girls are working in right field, senior Brenda Roberson, junior Cathy Harris and freshman Sharon Wade. Joan Harrington, another freshman, will start at short fielder.

Stanfield said she was uncertain about the competition in the Eastern Carolina Conference this year, but "going on what I have heard, I would say the top three would probably be Ayden-Grifton, Conley, and possibly Southern Nash."

The coach said North Pitt won't be a challenger for the crown this season, but "I feel like with the experience gained this year, we have a good possibility next year to be a threat. I have high hopes for them."

Thompson Super Star

By JOHN MOSSMAN
AP Sports Writer

DENVER (AP) — As he soars far above the crowd to make another spectacular play, it's sometimes too easy to forget that David Thompson is only 23 years old and still learning the subtleties of pro basketball.

Quiet, soft-spoken, contemplative, Thompson lives as inconspicuously as a superstar can. He likes to spend his spare time at his southeast Denver home, relaxing to jazz or reading books or magazines. He jogs in the neighborhood with his two dogs and has a girl friend who makes blueberry muffins.

During Denver Nuggets' practice sessions, Thompson's demeanor is that of a rookie intent on making the squad. He's serious about his work, rarely smiling or joking around. But there's no mistaking his skills.

At 6-foot-3½, Thompson possesses remarkable leaping ability, which he uses to launch jump shots and eye-popping slam dunks over taller, befuddled defenders.

Fans are packed into 17,000-seat McNichols Arena, most of them hoping to witness another gravity defying feat by the former North Carolina State All-American whose scoring average has approached 30 points a game this season. He's been a key player in the Nuggets' team success. Denver won 60 games in his rookie season, 50 last year and should reach 50 again this year in repeating as Midwest Division champion in the National Basketball Association.

"It's scary to think what his limits are," says coach Larry Brown. "Maybe he doesn't have any. It's hard to imagine him improving all the time, but he is."

Says Los Angeles Lakers Coach Jerry West: "One-on-one, he's unstoppable."

Such adulation doesn't seem to affect Thompson. He remains the basically shy, unassuming individual he was when he was drafted by the Nuggets. But money talks, and nobody listens better than someone who makes $400,000 a year. Because of a clause in his contract which allows him to become a free agent at the end of this season, Thompson could touch off an unprecedented bidding war for his services.

Will Thompson forsake the happiness he says he's found in Denver for more money? Thompson is busy concentrating on basketball and the upcoming playoffs and declines comment on the contract situation, but he does insist he likes it where he is.

"I'm comfortable in Denver," he says. "This house is more than just a place to stay. And I've gotten to like the mountains."

Bill McDonald

McDonald Honored

Bill McDonald of Greenville has been named Instructor Of The Year for 1977 by the Southeast Karate Association and the National Karate Association.

This is the first time that a sport karate association (SEKA) and a full-contact professional association (NKA) has voted the same person as instructor of the year.

"I give thanks to the East Carolina Karate Club's many wins for the amateur honor and to Toney Lopez 22-1 record for the professional association's honor," McDonald said. "These awards actually belong to them."

NEW Academy Hands Knights Second Loss

Greenville Christian Academy fell before a 26-3 onslaught by NEW Academy Friday in the second game ever for the Knights.

NEW posted a 12-0 lead in the first inning and the Knights were never able to overcome that.

J. Gardner was hit by a pitch to open the first, and Jones reached on an error. Brewer doubled in the first run. Boone singled, scoring a second. Webb then doubled in the third run. A single by Cobb brought home a fourth before Maxam walked. Gardner doubled in two runs, and Jones singled to score another. Brewer doubled in the eighth run, and Boone's double brought in two more. Webb doubled in the 11th run, then later scored the 12th.

NEW added nine more in the second, three in the third and two in the fourth.

All three Greenville runs came in the third. Teddy Harris walked and Tim Sutton singled. John Dubber singled in Harris, and Ben Haddock walked to load the bases. Walks to Rodney Harris and Danny Williams brought in the other two runs.

Coaches Named For North-South

Marion Kirby, head football coach at Greensboro Page, and Don Patrick, head coach at Newton-Conover, have been named to direct the opposing teams in this year's Jaycee Boys' Home Game.

Joining Kirby in leading the North team will be Monty Davis of Southern Durham and Manteo's Jerry Cahoon. Clinton coach Bobby Robinson and Hal Stewart of Richmond County will assist Patrick with the South squad.

Popularly known as the North-South High School All-Star football game, this year's 16th annual contest will be played July 22 at 7 p.m. in Raleigh's Carter Stadium.

The game is sponsored by the N.C. Jaycees and for the past 15 years has been conducted by the Greenville Jaycees and played in East Carolina University's Ficklen Stadium. This year's game, however, is being organized by the Wake County Jaycee chapters and will be played in N.C. State's Carter Stadium.

The contest annually pits the state's top high school players from the North against those from the South, with net proceeds going to support the Boys Homes of North Carolina, Inc.

Players for the game will be selected by nomination from their coaches. Nomination forms will be sent to all high school coaches this week. Any coach who fails to receive a nomination form is urged to contact Jaycee Boys Home Game, P.O. Box 212, Cary, N.C., 27511, to place his nomination.

Greenville Christian Fielding First Baseball Team This Year

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Greenville Christian Academy is fielding its first baseball team this spring, and the Knights are hoping for a good beginning despite the lack of experience.

The Knights opened up with a loss earlier in the month, and will be playing their second game today.

Coach Terry Lee said that practice so far has been good, but the Knights have been hampered by a lack of batting practice. "We haven't had the facilities to hit much so far," he said. The school is building a field on its grounds, and it is nearly completed.

"Our fielding has looked good so far. I think we can be a pretty strong team once we get used to hitting the ball," Lee said.

There are 16 players out for the team, ranging from three seniors to several seventh graders. "We don't have enough to have a varsity and junior varsity team, so everyone is playing as one team."

Experience is reduced to Little League and Babe Ruth League play.

"We have four pitchers that we feel can do the job," Lee said. Tops on the list is John Dubber, while Marshall Crumpler is next. The other two, Tim Sutton and Sammy Harris have yet to see game action. "We're going to try and get to see what all of them can do early in the season," Lee said.

"Our defense looks good. We lost our first game because of our hitting problems. But I hope to have that solved pretty soon. I've made arrangements to use Rose High School's pitching machine, so that should help us."

Troy Hudson will be the top catcher on the team, but Harris could move in behind the plate if needed there.

Crumpler will usually be at first, with David Williams backing him up.

Jeff Harris currently is at second base, with Ben Haddock in a reserve role. Sutton handles the shortstop position, and Dubber can move in here, when Sutton is called to the mound.

The versatile Harris will usually be at third base, with Crumpler also a possibility here.

The outfield has Rodney Harris in center, Teddy Harris and Steve Tyburski in right and Kent Brown and Joseph Sasser in left.

"I think we can have a good season, despite it being our first," Lee said. "We have the potential to be a good ball team. Again, it's just a question of getting used to it."

The Knights play in East Carolina Christian Conference, which also has Faith, Falls Road and Goldsboro academies in it.

"The others have had teams for several years, but I think we can be in the thick of the conference race," Lee said.

The University of Colorado had 30 players on NFL rosters when the 1977 season opened.

Ridgecroft Tops Martin

AHOSKIE — Ridgecroft Academy pushed over five runs in the first inning and went on to record an 11-3 victory over the Martin Academy softball team Friday.

Ridgecroft added two more in the third and got four in the fourth.

Martin scored single runs in the third, fourth and sixth innings.

Gay Griffin had four hits to lead Martin, while Linda Jo Warren had three. Hope Dixon and Dixie Gray each had two for Ridgecroft.

Sting...

He has three players from Yugoslavia, two from Haiti, one from Uruguay and one from South Africa, in addition to several Canadians, Englishmen and Americans.

"When we talk, we normally have some problems, but at least when you're talking soccer you can demonstrate things," said Musgrove.

Eight players joined the Sting after Feb. 25.

"We've got to mold them all together into one unit. It's not going to happen overnight," said Musgrove, a former player and coach in England, where soccer also is known as football.

Last year's Sting was 10-16 and scored just 31 goals.

"That's not enough," said Musgrove. "I was looking for players with good technical qualities who like to go forward and at the same time are disciplined."

He is confident that the Sting, playing in a four-team conference with three expansion clubs, will make the playoffs. But he said that Americans often find soccer boring and that satisfied fans as well as success in the standings are important to him.

"I am hopeful we'll do very well. What I really want to do is entertain the public and put a lot of people in the seats," he said.

"If you don't play attractive football you have to win every game. If you play attractive football you don't have to win every game to keep people in the stands."

Kmart CORNER OF GREENVILLE AND ARLINGTON BOULEVARDS

EDSEL PATCH—Delia and Phil Sperling lean on one of the cars from the late 1950s that they have collected on their Willamette Valley farm near Albany, Ore.

New York Farm Shows A Big Crop Of Edsels

ALBANY, Ore. (AP) — Ford's Edsel didn't make much of a hit with the motoring public of the late '50s — but Phil Sperling has gathered quite a crop of them on his Willamette Valley farm.

Sperling — who grows wheat, mint, corn and ryegrass on most of the rest — began in 1965 to collect the flamboyant and luxurious cars marketed by Ford Motor Co. in 1958-60. The cars, in various states of repair and disrepair, sprawl over two of his 3,000 acres.

He and his wife Delia have about 60 vehicles in the Edsel patch behind the barn. He also has a sprinkling of 1958 and 1959 Mercuries and other Ford models that have parts interchangeable with the Edsel.

The cars, named for Edsel Ford, were introduced with a great hullabaloo, but sales never matched expectations and the company, after losing much money, dropped the whole idea.

The Edsels, sporting a curious vertical grille, were different from other cars of that era, but Sperling says they are anything but ugly.

"The Edsel was one of the nicest-looking cars ever made," he said, looking at some of the cars contending with rust, weeds and wild blackberry vines that snake through windows.

Among their crop of Edsels is one with a push-button transmission selector in the middle of the steering column. Another has a speedometer in which the needle remains stationary while the numbers revolve inside a bulbous dashboard housing.

The cars, typical of the late '50s, are copiously trimmed with chrome, and some have three-tone paint jobs.

The Sperlings bought their first Edsel, a 1958 model, from a neighbor for $325 in 1962. The Edsel also was their first passenger car. Before that they had only pickup trucks.

Then in 1965, they began hitting the Edsel market in earnest.

"...It doesn't cost very much to collect them. And besides, we have enough parts to keep the other cars running," Sperling said.

He and his wife have five driveable Edsels. He figures he could restore about 20 of the remainder. The rest can be cannibalized for parts.

Phil and Delia continue to comb classified sections for more Edsels to add to their collection. Occasionally they find one.

Symposium On Modern Fishing Communities

ECU News Bureau

"Modernization in Fishing Industries and Communities," an East Carolina University symposium on socio-economic issues raised with the adoption of new technologies in fishing, has been set for April 27-29, at the Willis Building.

The symposium is sponsored by the ECU Dept. of Sociology and Anthropology and the ECU Institute for Coastal and Marine Resources, in cooperation with the UNC Sea Grant College Program and the Society for Applied Anthropology.

Symposium speakers include Professors Raoul Andersen (Memorial University of Newfoundland), Gerald Britan (Northwestern Univ.), M. Estellie Smith (State University of New York-Oswego and Woods Hole Oceanographic Institution), James Acheson (Univ. of Maine), James Farris (Univ. of Connecticut), Steven Langdon (Univ. of Alaska-Anchorage), Richard Pollnac (Univ. of Rhode Island).

Riva Berleant-Schiller (Queensborough Community College and the Research Institute for the Study of Man, New York), James Christiansen (Wayne State Univ.) and Orvar Lofgren (Univ. of Lund, Sweden).

Discussion leaders and session chairpersons are Michael Orbach of the National Marine Fisheries Service, Edward Knipe of Virginia Commonwealth University, James Sabella of UNC-Wilmington, and Peter Fricke, John Maiolo and Milton Altschuler of ECU.

Further information about the symposium is available from Dr. Maiolo, symposium coordinator, at the ECU Department of Sociology and Anthropology, East Carolina University.

Director Of Special Lab

ECU News Bureau

Dr. John T. Bray has been named director of the Dept. of Surgery's Trace Element Laboratory at the East Carolina University School of Medicine.

A native of Indiana, Bray joins a growing group of ECU scientists who are interested in trace element metabolilsm. Current research in the new trace lab focuses on the importance of zinc, copper, nickel and selenium in the nutrition of critically-ill patients as well as the possible role of these substances in cancer in eastern North Carolina.

Bray will also coordinate the lab's environmental research in conjunction with the ECU Institute for Coastal and Marine Resources and other departments on campus.

Bray received his undergraduate degree from Rose-Hulman Institute of Technology and his master's and PhD in chemical oceanography from Johns Hopkins University.

Prior to joining the ECU School of Medicine, Bray was research scientist and chemical programs coordinator for Ecological Analysts, Inc., Towson, Md.

Dr. JOHN T. BRAY

Plan Workshop On Solar Energy

ECU News Bureau

Anyone with a professional or personal interest in solar energy is invited to participate in an East Carolina University workshop on solar energy this May.

The workshop, scheduled for 11 a.m. - 5 p.m., May 4, 11 and 18, will be instructed by Dr. Carl G. Adler, professor of physics at ECU. A nuclear physicist by training, Adler has spent the last several years doing both theoretical and experimental research in solar energy.

Further information about the solar energy workshop and registration materials is available from the Office of Non-Credit Programs, Division of Continuing Education, East Carolina University.

Falkland PTA Meets Tuesday

The Falkland PTA will meet in the school cafeteria on Tuesday, April 4, at 7:30 p.m.

The nominating committee will be elected and there will be a discussion on a beautification project. In addition, a film on fire safety will be shown, and students' science exhibits will be on display.

Parents are encouraged to attend.

Prayer Service Set Tuesday

A prayer service will be held Tuesday, April 4 beginning at 3 p.m. at Oak Grove Church in Bonners Lane.

On Tuesday evening, singers from Snow Hill will present a program of music at the church.

The services are sponsored by Sister Alice, and the public is invited to attend.

Revival Services Begin Monday

Revival services will begin at Rock Spring F.W.B. Church Monday, April 3, and continue through the week.

Elder W. Wallace of Mt. Olive will be the speaker for the week. The following churches will render music:

Monday — Mt. Calvary F.W.B. Church

Tuesday — Clemmons Grove Holiness Church

Wednesday — Holly Hill F.W.B. Church

Thursday — Waterside F.W.B. Church

Friday — Arthur's Chapel F.W.B. Church

Services will begin at 7:30 nightly. The pastor, Bishop W.L. Phillips, invites the public to attend.

Lunch Menu

Lunchroom menus for the coming week at the Greenville elementary schools have been announced as follow:

Monday — Hogie Sandwichs, french fries, peaches, peanut cookie, milk;

Tuesday — Spaghetti, tossed salad, rolls, apple crisp, milk;

Wednesday — Barbecue sandwich, cole slaw, corn, apple sauce, milk;

Thursday — Fried Chicken, whipped potatoes, peas, rolls, milk;

Business Notes

RETIREMENT NOTED

Herbert W. Wentworth will retire as president and chief operating executive of the North Carolina Savings and Loan League effective Aug. 31, the League announced.

During his 17 year administration, it was noted, North Carolina savings and loan associations grew from $1.6 billion to $10 billion in assets.

League board chairman F. A. Whiteside Jr. announced that Thad Woodard, vice president for development and public relations at Pfeiffer College, will succeed Wentworth.

STORE OPENING

Charles Lawrence announced the opening of "The Nostalgia Newsstand" at 919 Dickinson Avenue here.

Lawrence, owner of the business, said that his firm involves a joint operation with "The Booktrader" which is in the same building.

"The Nostalgia Newsstand" offers a complete line of magazines as well as comic books and also posters, newspapers and comic-related books.

ASSISTANT CASHIER

C. Hal Knox has been elected cashier of Planters National Bank here, according to an announcement by W. Douglas Starr, PNB senior vice president and Greenville city executive.

A native of Robersonville, Knox graduated from Robersonville High School and attended North Carolina State University for two years before transferring to East Carolina University where he received a B.S. degree in business administration.

Following graduation in 1975, he joined Planters here as an adjuster in the Consumer Credit Department and advanced to loan officer in 1976.

APPOINTMENTS MADE

Burroughs Wellcome Co. here announced the appointment of G. Howard Powell and David A. Bridges to assistant superintendent of the General Packaging Division and section head in the Chemical Assay Department, respectively.

Howard, who obtained an MBA degree from East Carolina University, will assist, understudy, and report to the superintendent of general packaging in his new position while Bridges, a graduate of ECU with a B.S. degree in chemistry, will assume responsibility for the Stability and Raw Materials Groups.

JOINS FIRM

A native of Birmingham, Ala., Pittman has resided in Greenville for the past seven years. A graduate of East Carolina University, he received his real estate broker's license in 1977.

The new associate is a member of the Greenville University City Kiwanis Club and the Greenville Toastmaster's Club.

COMPLETED COURSE

Hal G. Barnes, staff assistant in the Engineering Department at Carolina Telephone here, completed the five-day "General Supervisory Training" course conducted by the company in Tarboro.

Carolina Telephone said that the course, involving lectures, group discussions, and laboratory-type problems, is directed toward helping the supervisor to make the transition from non-management to management.

Philip Morris Chooses North Carolina Site

By MONTE PLOTT
Associated Press Writer

CONCORD, N.C. (AP) — Despite earlier reports that Cannon Mills might not want a Philip Morris cigarette plant as a neighbor, arms were open in welcome on both sides Friday as Philip Morris announced a $100 million factory will be built near here.

"On behalf of Cannon Mills Co., I welcome Philip Morris as a new industrial neighbor," Harold Hornaday, president of Cannon Mills, said at a rally for the announcement of a new plant. Some 5,000 persons joined a parade of businessmen, state and local officials at the Cabarrus County fairgrounds for a festive celebration.

Hornaday promised his company will cooperate "in every way possible" with Philip Morris.

In response, Clifford H. Goldsmith, president of Philip Morris, U.S.A., told the crowd that his company would be "hard pressed to be as good a corporate citizen as (Cannon Mills)."

"We are very much aware of the fact that were it not for Cannon Mills, there would be no Cabarrus County," Goldsmith said.

Cannon, a textile giant, has long dominated the employment picture for Cabarrus County's 82,000 residents. After Philip Morris said last year that it was considering building in the county, there were reports that Cannon was behind an unsuccessful move to withdraw local chamber of commerce support for the cigarette plant.

But there was only celebration Friday as Goldsmith announced Philip Morris would exercise its option to buy 2,100 acres of rural land near Concord, about 20 miles north of Charlotte.

Construction on the plant, which is expected to employ about 2,000, probably will not begin until late 1979, Goldsmith said.

Local citizens launched an organized effort to attract Philip Morris here, and Goldsmith was handed petitions with 27,000 signatures of support during the rally Friday.

Cabarrus County was rumored to be heading a list of possible sites that included Columbia, S.C., and Nashville, Tenn. Earlier this week, word leaked out that Cabarrus County had gotten the nod, but the official announcment was delayed until Friday.

Gov. Jim Hunt also spoke at the rally, hailing Philip Morris' decision as possibly "a turning point in the economic development of this state."

RECORD LEVELS

Shoney's Inc., which operates a chain of restaurants and specialty dinner houses, reported its 75th consecutive quarter in which revenues, net income and earnings per share reached record levels.

R. L. Danner, chairman of the Nashville-based chain, said net income for the 16 weeks ended Feb. 19 rose 22 per cent on a revenue gain of 28 per cent. Net income for the period just ended amounted to $3,648,294 or 37 cents per share, up from $3,077,803 or 31 cents per share for the same period in 1977.

Revenues for the first quarter of fiscal 1978 were $38,905,826, an increase over the $30,469,816 recorded in the prior year, it was reported.

Directors declared a regular cash dividend of six cents per share, payable April 24 to stockholders of record on Apri. 6.

BUSINESS CONTINUES

Rick's Relics, the Civil War memorabilia store in Ayden damaged during an explosion on March 24, will not reopen, but the business will be continued, it was announced.

Mrs. Carol Swain, widow of Rick Swain who died during the explosion, said she will continue to operate the business, which caters to collectors throughout the United States, from her home.

The new address of the business will be 200 Avalon Lane in Greenville.

POSITIONS FILLED

The appointments included: Charles G. Williams to the position of assistant to the sales training manager in the Sales Promotion and Training Department; David J. Forthofer to special representative-trainer in Jacksonville, Fla.;

Sallie Beatty to research scientist in the Microbiology Department; D. G. Ross to field supervisor in Dallas, Texas; L. L. Oswald to assistant to the government services manager in the Sales Administration Department; and W. W. Rich to marketing projects coordinator in the Marketing Services Department.

EVENT PLANNED

The city-wide "Greenville Spring Extravaganza Sale," coordinated by the merchant's committee of the Greenville Area Chamber of Commerce, is scheduled for April 5, 6, 7 and 8.

The event is the second of four planned in Greenville, it was noted. Others are Dollar Day in August and a fall event that will be scheduled.

First Quarter Sluggish

WASHINGTON (AP) — Government economists blamed the coal strike and the severe winter for a sluggish economy during the first quarter of 1978 and say they expect it to rebound.

The assessment was made Friday after preliminary figures for the first three months of the year showed little or no growth in the Gross National Product.

If the figures hold it will be the worst economic performance since the first quarter of 1975 when the GNP dipped 8.9 percent as the economy struggled through a deep recession.

But one government source, who declined to be identified, said the latest 1978 figures do not point to a serious economic downturn.

"It does not mean another recession is on the way. We see no reasonable possibility of another recession like that in the foreseeable future," the source said.

Government economists expect a strong rebound from the disappointing first quarter results during the second quarter of the year, now that the coal strike is ended and weather improving.

The Carter administration is projecting overall economic growth this year averaging 4.7 percent compared with 4.9 percent in 1977. The first quarter performance might require the administration to adjust its forecast downward by as much as 0.3 percentage points, but that would still be above the level necessary to continue reducing unemployment.

Sources cautioned that the preliminary figure is based on incomplete economic information and could be revised before the scheduled release of the offical figures on April 19.

In other economic developments Friday, the government released figures showing the country's trade deficit jumped to a record $4.5 billion in February. The announcement sent the dollar dropping sharply on world money markets.

The mounting trade deficit and fall of the dollar's value is costing some American jobs and may worsen the U.S. inflation rate. When the United States imports more than it exports, it means American consumers are supporting more jobs abroad than foreigners support in this country.

The February deficit compared with a trade imbalance of about $2.4 billion in January and marked the 21st consecutive month in which imports exceeded exports. The previous record monthly deficit was $3.3 billion last October.

Government ecomomists said the trade imbalance was largely because of oil imports, which rose from $341 million in January to $3.3 billion in February. They said exports overall increaed 16.5 percent while exports declined about 1 percent.

Steel imports jumped from $262 milion in January to $688 million in February as importers rushed to buy lower-priced foreign steel in advance of the government's new program to keep out unfairly low-priced steel goods.

Cows Learn To Be On Time

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — Old dogs can't learn new tricks, but cows can, according to Wallaces Farmer, a rural magazine.

Scientists at Purdue University have trained cows to come to the barn when a buzzer sounds. Researchers trained the cows by simultaneously activating a buzzer when the milking parlor door was opened. If the cows did not enter the parlor within a required time period, they were given a mild electric shock, the magazine reports.

When the experiment started, only 19 percent of the cows entered the milking parlor on time. By day seven, 99 percent entered on time.

Wedgwood Still Popular With Collectors

WEDGWOOD TEA SET. . .is an example of pieces that may be collected separately and displayed together. The above pieces are dark blue antique jasper dipped ware.

WEDGWOOD. . .is the name to look for, used alone, if searching for antique jasper ware. There may be a potter's mark, a dot, three dots or perhaps a letter, also on the bottom of a piece where you will find the impressed name of Wedgwood, but there should be no other writing.

By PATRICIA MOORE

No sooner had the small, graying matron crossed the threshold than she saw it on a table in the front corner of the shop.

Furtively, she looked around to see if anyone was watching, then hurried towards the table. Eagerly, she reached for the prize—the blue and white jasper ware pitcher—fingered it lovingly, and breathed a sigh of relief. Once she held it in her hands, no one else could take it.

She knew, even before she examined the pottery mark on the bottom of the pitcher, that she held antique Wedgwood, for the [illegible] jasper is as distinctive as a Rolls-Royce. You don't easily confuse it with anything else.

She noted the price. Though high, it was a secondary consideration, if one at all. She could not more have put the pitcher down without making it her own than she could have ignored a small child lost from its mother in a huge department store.

To her, this was the greatest of Josiah Wedgwood's contributions to the world of porcelain and pottery. The 18th century English potter had perhaps reached his zenith when he invented jasper, a biscuit ware capable of receiving color throughout its body, something no other ware has been capable of before or since.

To it he applied white relief of classical subjects so expertly that even under the scrutiny of a magnifying glass, the detail shows no flaws. Each finger, or each tree limb, is without fault, whether it is on a small cameo or on a large vase.

The gray-haired lady knew all this and more.

Happily, she took her prize home to be in the company of others of its kind. In several ways, she had become richer that afternoon, though certainly not in terms of cold, hard cash.

Today, jasper is still being made by the Wedgwood company in light blue adorned with white, as well as in several other colors.

So why would our gray-haired friend be searching antique shops for something she could more easily buy new?

Sir John Wedgwood, a recent visitor to Greenville, offers some enlightenment on the subject: "If you want to collect, you would be well advised to go antique. Some collectors think any modern piece will increase in value. This may not be so."

Sir John is a retired director of Josiah Wedgwood and Sons Ltd., as well as a direct descendant of the famous potter.

Under the guiding hand of the elder Wedgwood, the production of porcelain and pottery reached new heights in 18th century England during the neo-classical movement. In addition to inventing jasper, he is also noted for the refinement of cream ware and black ware (also called basaltes).

The black ware is a stoneware that does not need to be glazed. Like the blue jasper, it is still being made, and it, too, is expensive.

Cream ware, a commonplace product of potters of his day, varied in color from straw to deep saffron. A perfectionist, Wedgwood was not content to have the shades differ from one lot to another. Further, he felt that when time came for broken pieces to be replaced, a buyer would prefer being able to match what he already had.

He was so successful in his effort to produce uniform color that he made and presented a set of cream ware to Queen Charlotte upon the birth of her first child. After that, the china became known as "Queen's Ware" and this creative genius was rewarded with the title of "Potter to the Queen."

In addition to the jasper, basaltes and cream ware, the company today produces a fine bone china which was not manufactured in the days of Josiah Wedgwood the elder because of the patents process, Sir John points out.

However, the most popular of the company's products continues to be the light blue jasper. That, Sir John says, is in his opinion "the color most desirable to collect."

"It is immediately recognizable—an extraordinarily well known product," he adds.

Among the numerous antique items to be found in jasper ware are: small cameos, medallions, plaques, cups, saucers, plates, all types of bowls, flower pots, candle sticks, vases, paint boxes, bell pulls, toilet sets and jewelry. Large objects which could not be made of jasper, such as furniture, were inset with medallions.

He points out that insofar as collecting is concerned, "Taste is more conventional in Europe. It is hard to tell about continuing popularity, but it is hard to see that anything but good sales will exist for jasper."

Such has not always been the case. Sales for it had declined before World War II and, consequently, production was discontinued from 1945 to 1955.

"Then the Board of Directors decided to bring it back and make it of the highest quality. Light blue was the color chosen," Sir John says. The result has been an increase in sales volume which has remained high.

Had it not been for a bout with small pox when Josiah Wedgwood was about 12, the world might never have had jasper.

The disease eventually settled in his leg, resulting in considerable pain and bad health until he finally had the leg amputated during his mid 30's. His illness made it impossible for him to continue as a thrower in his brother's pottery works and he had to rest for periods of time.

Forced into inactivity, Wedgwood turned his thoughts to other aspects of the business and he dreamed of the possibilities of clay. He turned out to be one of the rare dreamers possessed of enough drive and business ability (as well as some good business partners and a helpful wife) to take failures along with successes and continually try new things.

The result was a dynasty in the world of pottery and porcelain.

While books have been written describing the history, qualities, appearance, and marks of this china, there are a few general rules of thumb which can help the beginner or the seasoned collector weed out the new from the old, and the real from the imitation.

One of these concerns the "mark" or signature which can both indicate the authenticity and the age of a piece of Wedgwood.

Almost every item was marked with the name WEDGWOOD. The exceptions—and these are extremely rare—were possibly some trial pieces or the few that escaped workmen's notice. Wedgewood himself took pains to oversee the production of his work, even to the signature process, so few errors were made.

Consequently, a beginning collector should avoid so-called unsigned works.

Sir John advises the collector of antique ware to exclude any item that has "Made in England" in addition to WEDGWOOD impressed mark on jasper about 1891 and continued to be used until the present "Made in England" was introduced.

The most desirable pieces are those which have only the name Wedgwood in lower case letters (used from 1759 until 1768); or WEDGWOOD, used alone, in all capitals (used from about 1760 until the present). The size type varies from 1-32 to ¼ of an inch.

"If anything is added to the name Wedgwood, it probably is not as old," Sir John says. An exception is the Wedgwood and Bentley label, which is rare.

The above marks on jasper were impressed in the pottery. Printed names were used on bone china.

The study of identifying marks used on jasper and other Wedgwood wares, as with any old pottery and porcelain, is so intricate that it requires detailed study. For example, some 100 marks have been used by the Wedgwood company over the years.

There are several general books on the subject of marks for pottery and porcelain, as well as books devoted exclusively to individual wares such as Wedgwood.

As for his role in the illustrious family of potters, Sir John concedes that having such a name is a responsibility. For him, it requires giving accurate information about Wedgwood and being a respectable member of society, so that he can be a credit to the family name.

While students of pottery and porcelain might regard Wedgwood's contributions as from great to perfect, Sir John Wedgwood's perspective is more modest— that his ancestor was part of the neo-classical movement which included a number of important innovators.

Try telling that to a passionate collector of Wedgwood. He, or she, might feel that the English poet John Keats meant jasper ware when he said, "A thing of beauty is a joy forever." Or that he surely wrote "Ode to a Grecian Urn" while contemplating a piece of jasper.

Shoes Run Gamut—Sophisticated To Casual—High To Flat Heels

NEW YORK (AP) — Classic casuals will walk right along with romantic sophisticated looks this spring, says the Footwear Council, which sees two important fashion directions: Success Dressing and the Sporting Life.

Success Dressing for women takes dancing looks into daytime with high-stepping heels, strippy straps that wrap about ankle or instep, and baby-pale tones mixed with shiny black or metallic. The bare foot complements the swing of dirndls and the swish of silk. Very high heels and wrapped ties give proportion to the leg line.

But look also for "Mary Jane" party flats. Half-inch heels have already been selling in Paris, and are expected to become popular in the United States, the council predicts.

But the Footwear Council assures the woman who wants to play the middle ground that there will also be mid-high heels, with 1-inch to 2½-inch heights showing greatest strength. These heights have been redesigned, though — they're narrower, for a higher, more ladylike look.

Small platforms are this year's trend; clunky, sky-high versions are gone and flexible polyurethane unit bottoms, already so popular in Europe, will become more important. These are especially refreshing in colors that mix or match with the rest of the shoe.

Wedges of all heights will make big fashion inroads. The classic espadrilles will continue to rise higher; but look for mini-wedges on softly colored "little girl" styles.

Women's shoes, especially the dressier styles, will burst forth in kaleidoscopes of color. White may well be the only color to decline in importance as it is replaced by a whole spectrum of cool neutrals. Beiges, in particular, will gain strength. And black will be important, even in the heat of the summer!

Men's Success Dressing footwear fits in with the return to three-piece suits and conservative colors for business and after. Slightly higher heels, polished leather finishes and the importance of basic black indicate an elegant turn of foot.

The most classic of men's shoes — the moccasin — is being updated for spring. It will be lighter in weight and made from softer materials. The newest of this style is the tubular moccasin. This is practically an unconstructed shoe that incorporates handsewn vamps and top stitching and looks new with this year's versions of Ivy League ready-to-wear.

Interest in boots will remain constant and side zipper versions will dominate. Heel heights will rise and narrower toes will be seen in better lines.

Higher heels in business and dress shoes are also an advanced trend for men. Slip-ons and ties will be set on heels up to 2¼ inches, and there will be a few platforms in evidence.

The relaxed dressing of the Sporting Life influences men's, women's and children's casual footwear. Bright colors, easy-to-wear styling and serious attention to function and comfort create a wardrobe of bottom line possibilities. The Footwear Council notes that every important casual style for spring has athletic ancestry, as even confirmed grandstanders want to look as if they're part of the action.

For women, the biggest changes will be in the design of the upper and in use of new colors in interesting combinations. "Specific purpose" shoes such as boating shoes and running styles will be worn more and more with the most casual of sportswear.

According to the council, spring 1978 presents a variety of men's casual "athletic" styles — espadrilles, clogs, meshes, sandals and wedges. Rounder toes (another "playing field" influence) cut across all groups, although wider, heavier lasts will be less popular than last year.

Most of the news in men's casuals is at the bottom. Flat soles, turned-up toes and heels have left the running track and are making tracks in city streets. Boating soles with non-skid treads aren't limited to the harbor. "Signature" treads with logos, words, numbers, are leaving their imprint everywhere.

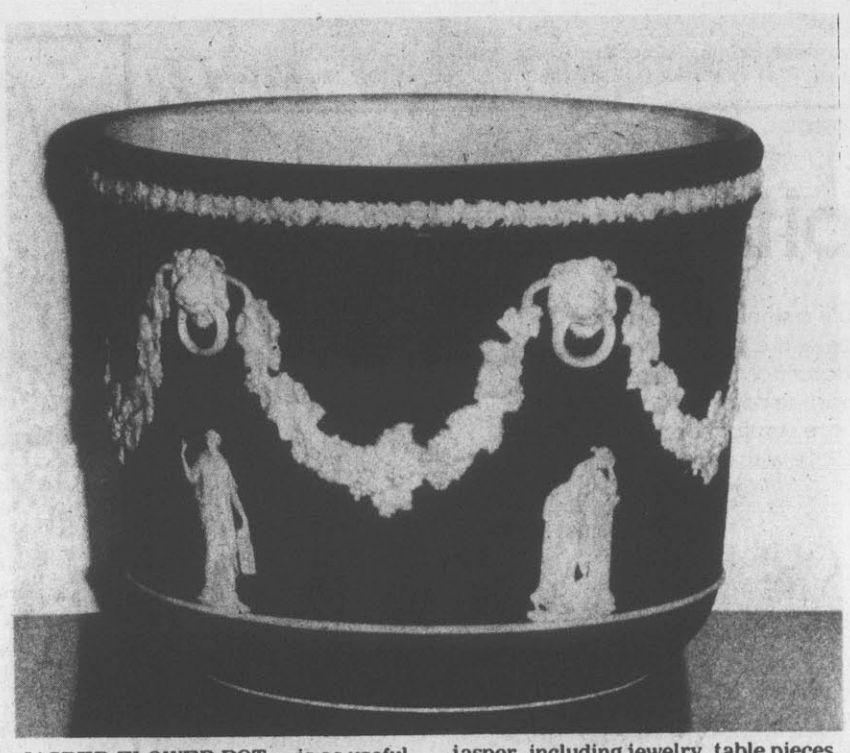

As with the adults, "athletic" influences are by far the most important trend for children, says the council. In fact, the kids will be sporting carbon copies of what their elders are wearing.

The kids continue to hang onto their jeans and don't dress up too often, and shoes are styled to complement their rugged, everyday moods. Functional footwear will increase in importance — whether or not the youngsters are out to jog, they'll dress the part.

Unisex looks continue to dominate with the wavy bottoms, heavier lug soles, naturally finished leathers and topstitch detailing. Girls and boys will be wearing sandals, closed oxfords (for those occasions when they get dressed up), platforms, wedges, clogs and espadrilles.

BOTTOM LINE—The "height" of spring fashion can be either a 3-inch spike or just the suggestion of a heel, says The Footwear Council. It all depends on your frame of mind and the look of your outfit.

Churchill-Coward Vows Solemnized Last Week

Juanita Cayton Coward and James Winston Churchill were married Friday, March 24, at Jarvis Memorial United Methodist Church. The double ring ceremony was performed at 7 p.m. by the Rev. James H. Bailey.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Johnnie Meeks of Rt. 6, Greenville, and the late Mr. Bennie Cayton. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. L. H. Churchill of Greenville.

For the ceremony, the bride wore a candlelight gown styled with an empire waist and fitted bodice accented with seed pearls. She carried a prayerbook centered with three roses in honor of her children, Mrs. Donna Hodges, Miss Becky Coward and Douglas L. Coward.

The bride is employed at Honeycutt Beauty Supply. The bridegroom is the vocational department chairman at Ayden-Grifton High School.

Immediately following the wedding, a reception was held in the church parlor given by the parents of the bride and her sister, Mrs. Travis Purser.

The refreshment table was covered with an Army-Navy cloth and centered with an arrangement of spring flowers.

The couple will reside at Rt. 1, Winterville.

Sandra Tharp Maness and Scott William Shanley were united in marriage Saturday evening at seven o'clock in a ceremony performed at the Ramada Inn.

The Rev. Leonard P. Baxter of Xenia, Ohio, uncle of the bride, performed the ceremony. A program of piano music was presented by Mrs. Marguertie Cook.

Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bryce W. Tharp of Greenville, the bride was given in marriage by her father. The bridegroom is the son of Mrs. Dorothy Shanley and Mr. Earl Shanley, both of Fayetteville.

The matron of honor was Mrs. Andrew C. Stockert of Greensboro, sister of the bride, and the honorary maid of honor was Carolyn Rebecca Maness of Greenville, daughter of the bride.

The best man was William Hendrix of Fayetteville, brother-in-law of the bridegroom, and the usher was Steve Shanley.

The bride wore a formal length gown of powder blue knit designed with an open lace trimmed V-neckline, gathered bodice and full accordian pleated skirt. The sleeveless gown was complemented by a sheer walking length chiffon drape with a high ring neckline. She wore a lace trimmed, wide brimmed fluted straw hat with ribbon streamers. She carried a cascade bouquet of white and blue flowers tied with blue ribbon.

The matron of honor was dressed in a gold lace and chiffon over taffeta gown which was sleeveless with a sheer over drape. She wore a wide brimmed fluted straw hat with ribbon streamers to match her gown. She carried a nosegay of white and yellow flowers with yellow gold ribbons.

The maid of honor wore a floor length high necked dress of white polyester and lace with ribbon streamers. The dress had long sleeves. She wore a white lace trimmed, wide brimmed fluted straw hat with ribbon streamers. She carried a nosegay of white flowers with touches of blue and yellow.

The mother of the bride selected a floor length knit gown in a floral pattern in shades of blue and ecru with bone colored accessories. The mother of the bridegroom was dressed in a floor length coral gown. Both mothers wore orchid corsages.

Mrs. William Hendrix, sister of the bridegroom, presided at the guest register.

The bride is a graduate of J. H. Rose High School and is a sales representative for Carolina Bargain Trader Magazine. The bridegroom graduated from a Fayetteville high school and attended ECU. He is employed in the engineering department of Grady White Boat Co.

The couple will live in Greenville after a wedding trip to the coast.

Following the ceremony, the bridal couple and guests were honored at a wedding dinner in an adjoining room where the head table was centered with a floral centerpiece in the bride's colors with blue candles.

Other floral arrangements and candles were used. Small decorated rice bags and mint cups were at each place.

After dinner, a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents.

Refreshments were served from a table covered in white lace over blue with silver branched candlabra holding blue candles flanking a white and blue floral centerpiece.

The three-tiered wedding cake was served by the bride's aunt, Mrs. Leonard P. Baxter of Xenia, Ohio, and punch was poured by the bride's brother-in-law, Andrew C. Stockert of Greensboro. The corners to the table were festooned with arrangements of blue ribbon, lilies-of-the-valley and doves. The gift table was arranged in blue and white. Floral arrangements and candles were used throughout in decorating.

Corbett-Norville Vows Solemnized On Friday

Marie Bunting Norville and Cecil Earl Corbett Jr. were united in marriage Friday night at eight o'clock in a ceremony performed at the Woman's Club of Greenville.

The double ring ceremony was conducted by the Rev. Tommy Godley of Farmville. A program of organ music was presented by Mrs. Hilda Letchworth and Marvin Sutton, soloist, both of Greenville.

The bride, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Bunting of Greenville, was given in marriage by her brother, Bonnie Ray Bunting. She wore a floor length beige gown made of polyester and chiffon with a round neckline embroidered with beige beaded designs. The gown featured full bell sheeves and an empire waistline.

Her Camelot cap was covered with beige pearls with beige streamers and flowers. She carried a bouquet of white carnations, daisies, baby's breath and streamers.

The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Corbett of Winterville.

The maid of honor was Kimberly Corbett of Winterville, sister of the bridegroom. She wore a floor length blue gown with cap sleeves. She carried a white mum bouquet with greenery and blue streamers.

Kimberly Jones of Farmville, niece of the bride, was flower girl. She wore a dress identical to the honor attendant and her flowers were similar.

The father of the bridegroom served as best man and ushers included Edward Suggs of Winterville, brother-in-law of the bridegroom, and John James of Farmville, brother-in-law of the bride.

The bride attended North Pitt High School and is employed at the Little University Daycare Center. The bridegroom attended Farmville Central High School and is employed by Pepsi Bottling Co.

MRS. CECIL EARL CORBETT, JR.

The couple will live in Winterville after a wedding trip to unannounced points.

A reception was held following the ceremony honoring the bridal couple.

The refreshment table was overlaid with a white lace cloth and centered with an arrangement of white carnations and greenery. Mrs. Brenda James served cake after the traditional slice was cut by the bridal couple. Mrs. Janet Suggs poured punch.

Mrs. Roger Harris presided at the guest register and good-byes were said by Mrs. Vicky Bonner.

Miss Pernell Weds In Hopewell Church Friday

Hopewell Pentecostal Holiness Church was the scene of the Friday evening wedding ceremony of Janice Eileen Pernell and Jonathan David Williams. The double ring ceremony was performed by the Rev. Lotis Joyner at seven o'clock.

The bride's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Lyle Edward Pernell of Greenville. The bridegroom is the son of Mrs. Estelle Williams of Greenville, and the late Mr. John W. Williams.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a formal white gown of sheerganza and re-embroidered alencon lace. The gown was fashioned with a high V-neckline featuring lace and traditional bridal buttons and sheer tapered sleeves which were accented with lace trimmed flowing handkerchief point cufflets. Vertical rows of alencon lace accented the front and back of the A-line skirt which flowed into an attached chapel train.

Her chapel length mantilla of silk illusion, bordered in lace, was attached to a capulet of lace and pearls. She carried a cascade carnation sprayed Bible with a lift-out corsage.

The church altar was decorated with a basket of white and pink gladioli, carnations and pom pons with seven branch candelabra on each side.

A program of organ music was rendered by Mrs. Esther Joyner, who sang "Wedding Prayer" and "You Light Up My Life."

The honor attendant was Pam Forbes of Greenville. She wore a floor length pink floral organdy gown with a rounded neckline with an overlapping ruffle and fitted waistline with a satin bow. She carried a long-stemmed pink mum with pink streamers.

Bridesmaids were Suzanne Williams, sister of the bridegroom, Linda Champion, Kathy Joyner and Nora Shackle. Their dresses were styled like that of the honor attendant in a cream color with pink floral designs. They carried long-stemmed pink mums with pink streamers.

The mother of the bride selected a formal light blue gown of polyester and the mother of the bridegroom wore a formal mint green chiffon gown.

The best man was Gorham Clark of Greenville, and ushers included Shelton Pernell, brother of the bride, and John Williams, brother of the bridegroom, both of Greenville.

Following a wedding trip to unannounced points, the couple will live in Greenville.

The bride is a graduate of Rose High School and is employed by Nichols. The bridegroom attended Rose High School and Pitt Technical Institute. He is employed by the Ramada Inn.

The bridal couple were entertained at a cake cutting Thursday evening given by their parents.

'Basic Training' For Kids

By CONNIE GRZELKA
AP Newsfeatures Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — If basic training works for the Army, the Navy, the Marines and the Air Force, why not apply a similar concept to the rearing of children, suggests author Lois Gould.

Contemplating the future of the still visionary "liberated family," Ms. Gould explains that such a system would rest on this simple base: "That mommy doesn't have full responsibility for the rearing of the children."

Ms. Gould, whose collection of essays on contemporary living, "Not Responsible for Personal Articles," has just been published, urges that children be trained to be self-sufficient as early as possible.

"The simple fact is that most kids can do more than most parents think they can. But unless they have to, they won't," she said in an interview here.

The "basic training" checklist she provides is geared to attack the long-held belief that the mother is the sole keeper of the flock:

"As soon as the child is old enough, he should be responsible for his own maintenance. When he runs out of socks, he can turn on the washing machine. He can clean his own room, prepare his own breakfast, fix his own lunch for school. He can help out with shopping for groceries — it helps the family and offers a consumer skill and a survival art the child should learn early," she says.

Ms. Gould, 40, a former newspaper reporter and author of seven books including the best-selling "Such Good Friends," is married to a Manhattan psychiatrist and is the mother of two teen-age sons.

Although Ms. Gould's latest book takes a humorous, reassuring look at such topics as the Equal Rights Amendment, the impact of television heroines, party-giving, pornography and etiquette for liberated persons, her personal view of the state of the feminist movement is a dark one.

"Many gains have been made, but we can't trust them and sit back and relax," she says. "Each one of these could be withdrawn, simply because women are still not making the decisions in these cases.

"I think we get ecstatic too easily," she adds, urging caution in celebrating the strides of feminism. "We must never assume that anything is permanently won."

One example she cites is the "very active and efficient" day care program sponsored by the government during World War II and abolished after the war:

"Rosie the Riveter, the national heroine, died of unnatural causes along with the day care program. Thirty years later we still don't have a day care program."

There are still huge gaps between groups of women, but there needn't be because they have more links and bonds than they have differences, Ms. Gould believes.

"Many women distrust feminism and channel their loyalties to the men in their lives and the children they rear, as a result of cultural conditioning," she says.

Yet, public awareness of the women's movement has brought some changes, Ms. Gould points out — from more roles for women in the movies to large numbers of women entering graduate school. Television commercials and programs are coming along, in her opinion, but "women are still not being sold the idea that they are strong, independent and autonomous."

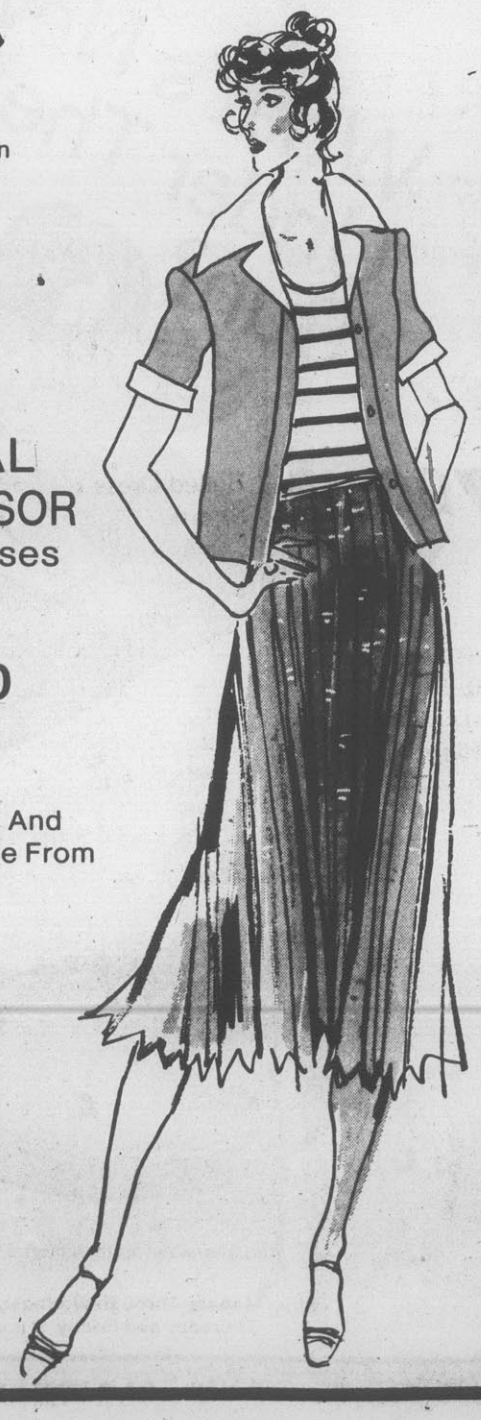

One of the remaining problems that is a "tremendous area of neglect" is the issue of rearing little boys, she adds, noting that "it's easier to expand horizons for little girls than it is to take away the privileges that automatically come with being a little boy."

Feminists have not yet addressed themselves to this task, which is necessary to turn the system around but won't be easy to accomplish in her view:

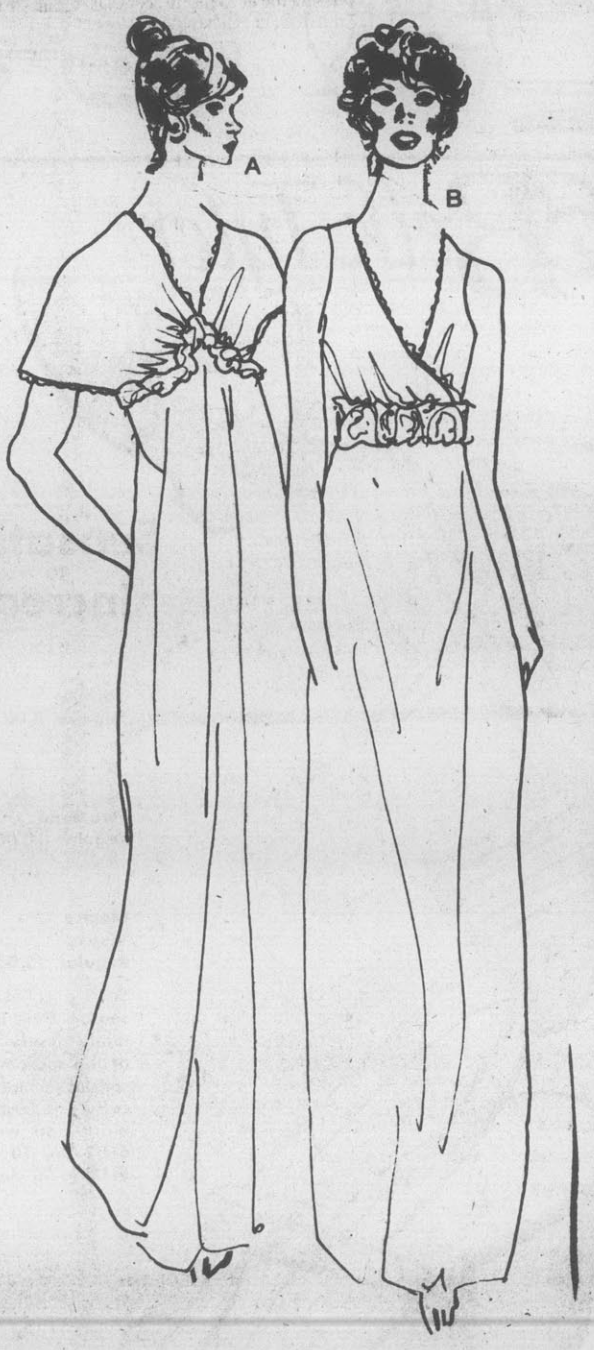

"It's like declawing a tomcat and sending him into a rough backyard. But I have a friend who instead says, 'It's just teaching him to live by his wits instead of his claws.'"

Miss Etha Jenkins Is Bride

The Mount Calvary Free Will Baptist Church was the scene of the candlelight wedding ceremony of Miss Etha L. Jenkins and Curtis Moore Saturday at 4 p.m. The double ring ceremony was conducted by the Rev. J. L. Wilson.

A program of nuptial music was presented by Roger Ingram, organist, and Mrs. Marion Jones, soloist, who sang "I Love You Truly," "Because" and "The Lord's Prayer."

The church was decorated with traditional green and white including greenery in tall standing brass candelabra using a 15 semi-circle flanked by tiered candelabra with bouquets of white gladioli, mums and pom pons. A unity candelabra and a heart candelabra were used during the ceremony. At the altar was a profile prie-dieu where the bridal couple knelt facing each other for the closing prayer and benediction. Pews were marked with white satin bows and greenery.

Parents of the bride are Mrs. Louise Jenkins and Mr. Lenon Jenkins Sr., both of Greenville. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. Zeno Moore of Greenville, and the late Mrs. Reather Moore.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a formal length gown of ivory silk organza over ivory peau de soie designed with an open V-neckline trimmed in panels of re-embroidered ivory lace. The empire bodice was overlayed in the matching lace centered with ivory covered buttons extending to the waistline which was encirled with lace. The fitted long sleeves were enhanced by a butterfly designed flounce trimmed in the re-embroidered lace. The modified A-line skirt and attached chapel length train featured panels in a radiating pattern.

She wore a fingertip length veil edged in chantilly lace held in place by a Camelot cap overlayed in matching lace featuring rosettes of lace beaded with pearls. She carried a semi-cascade bouquet of miniature carnations, orchids, baby's breath and a touch of spring flowers tied with off-white bridal satin.

Miss Mary Jenkins, sister of the bride, was maid of honor. She wore a formal length light blue gown featuring a V-neckline, empire bodice with re-embroidered blue lace and extending from the waist were layers of flowing chiffon. The dress was highlighted by full length handkerchief styled chiffon sleeves. She wore a matching headpiece of a spray of rosebuds and carried a bouquet of spring flowers in varying colors.

Bridesmaids were Miss Joann Jenkins, Miss Peggy Jenkins, Miss Patricia Jenkins and Miss Willie Mae Jenkins, sisters of the bride, all of Greenville. They wore formal length gowns in rainbow shades of nectarine, maize, chiffon lilac and strawberry with a rosebud spray headpiece to match their gowns. Their bouquets were tied with bows to match their gowns.

The flower girls were Tracy and Melba Jenkins, nieces of the bride, of Greenville. They wore floor length light pink dresses with babydoll checks styled with puff sleeves, fitted bodices and hemlines overlayed with white lace. They carried white baskets filled with spring flowers and petals.

Carl Jenkins of Greenville was ring bearer and carried a satin pillow with a spray of spring flowers.

Donald Davis of Falkland was best man and ushers were Jimmy Moore, brother of the bridegroom, Freddie Cherry, nephew of the bridegroom, Willie Shivers, Gerald Holloway and Milton Henderson, all of Greenville.

The bride's mother wore a formal length light green gown with a portrait neckline accented with sequins at the fitted waistline. She wore an orchid corsage.

MRS. CURTIS MOORE

For a wedding to unannounced points, the bride changed into a polyester multicolored spring dress and the orchid lifted from her bouquet.

The couple will reside in Greenville.

The bride is presently employed at the Spinning Mill, Washington, and the bridegroom is employed by Eaton Corp.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held in the fellowship hall of the church. Mrs. Doris Hansley, cousin of the bride, presided at the register and the receiving line was introduced by Mrs. Suddie M. Moore.

After the traditional first slice of the three tiered wedding cake was cut by the bridal couple, the cake was served by Mrs. Helen Newton. Charles Gatlin was in charge of the refreshment table.

Good-byes were said by parents of the bridal couple.

Cooking Is Fun

EVENING REFRESHER
Phyll's Spread Crackers

My sister's economical hors d'oeuvre.

- 2 medium or large cooked smoked pork hocks
- 2 teaspoons prepared horseradish
- 1 teaspoon prepared mustard
- ¼ cup sweet pickle relish
- ¼ cup mayonnaise

Use the meaty part only of the hocks. In a food processor or a meat grinder, grind it fine — there should be about 1 cup packed down. Mix with the remaining ingredients. Cover tightly and refrigerate for several hours or overnight to blend flavors. Makes about 1½ cups. (The water in which the hocks are cooked makes a fine broth for split pea soup.)

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

A carry-out boy looked at my license plate the other day and said, "I don't get it. What's TZE 403 stand for?"

"It's my license plate."

"It doesn't make any sense," he said.

"Is it supposed to?"

"Are you kidding? You're the only driver I know who doesn't have something clever on her plates."

I looked up and down the line of parked cars. There were: E-Z DUZ IT, 38-24-35, I.M. CUTE, SAY AAH, PAID 4, 2 CLOSE, FOXY, CALL ME, I DRINK, and FLY ME.

The kid was right. Every car on the road had a catchy little line that either identified the driver or made a statement of some kind.

That night at dinner, I just happened to mention the phenomenon to the family. "Do you realize I am driving around the only car in the country that doesn't communicate?"

"We should be able to come up with something," said my husband. "How many letters do we have to work with?"

"Six."

"Great," said my son. "That's just enough for BEWARE."

"How about Y 55?"

"Or GAS HOG."

"You might as well be tasteless and have, "SIX THOU."

"Aw c'mon," I said, "I want a plate that won't have people passing me at 75 just to see what kind of a nut is behind the wheel. I was thinking more of a plate that would give me character . . . a self-description that would be unique and apply only to me."

"How many letters in DRUDGE?" asked my daughter.

"I got it," I said snapping my fingers. "How about BUSY B?"

"That sounds like someone who would name their cabin Do Drop Inn, or their camper, The Open Road."

"Those are cute too."

"You don't need cute plates, Mom, you need a public testimonial. Like Mark. On the back of his car, his license plates read STUD, and Tab has a plate that reads TOUGH."

I must have sat there for another two hours trying to get a six-letter combination. Finally, I said, "I've got it down to VIT. B-12. What do you think?"

"I think you have just solved the problem of your kids ever borrowing your car," said my husband.

She's Weary From All His 'Affection'

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1978 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: Boy, do I ever have a solution for the lady signed CRAVING AFFECTION.

My husband is ready to jump into bed at the drop of a hat, a raindrop or a snowflake.

I love my husband very much, but after doing my housework, taking care of five kids, running my errands and helping my in-laws, I'm exhausted by 9 p.m.

Not my husband! He is ready for a night of cuddling and loving. (I like the cuddling—it's the LOVING that wears me out.)

Tell CRAVING AFFECTION that I would gladly change places with her, or send her my husband.

TOO TIRED

DEAR TOO: The problem of sexual fulfillment can be compared to world hunger. Although there's no shortage of food, much of the world's population is near starvation. There's plenty of supply and demand—it's the distribution that's fouled up.

DEAR ABBY: I am having an affair with a married man I am really in love with. (I'm 27 and he's 48.) We have been out in public together, and have even gone to some parties where he knew we'd run into some of his friends. (Once we even ran into his wife and neither seemed embarrassed!)

We've been going together for over a year, and have even spent weekends together, so I finally got up the courage to ask him why he was having this affair. He told me that he and his wife have an "open marriage"—a totally honest arrangement in which they agreed that if either one wants to sleep with someone else, it's okay. That way there's no lying and nobody is hurt.

He tells me he loves me and "needs" me and doesn't want to stop seeing me because I'm everything his wife has never been to him.

I'm confused. If he's being honest with me, why doesn't he get a divorce and marry me?

CONFUSED

DEAR CONFUSED: Because he and his wife prefer to stay married. He is being completely honest with you. He has made it clear that you "fill a need" for the present. So if you're angling for a wedding ring, you're the sucker.

DEAR ABBY: It is the height of stupidity when a smoker starts to light up, stops abruptly, then hypocritically asks, "Is it all right if I smoke?"

Of course its NOT all right!

In addition, I'm tired of having my home stunk up. I want to breathe clean air and so do my children. I'm dumping every ashtray I own.

I sympathize with smokers. I used to be one, but I quit. It wasn't easy. Now I would like to apologize to everyone whose air I fouled up when I smoked around them.

NEW BRIGHTON, MINN.

DEAR NEW: It's hardly "the height of stupidity" to ask, but it is the "height of rudeness" to smoke if the answer is no. And "no smoking" is a movement whose time has come.

DEAR ABBY: Women are constantly on guard against the tall, dark, handsome type who has a reputation for sweeping a girl off her feet. But who would believe that a short, fat, 50-year-old, balding man with dentures could come so close to ruining my life?

What did he have? Charm! His words were absolute poetry. He had me believing I was the most desirable woman on earth. (Ha! I am 48, skinny and look every bit my age.) You guessed it. It worked for him for years before we "discovered" each other. We are both married to others.

What brought me to my senses? One night I heard him tell his wife on the phone why he wouldn't be home for dinner. How convincingly he lied to her! Then I asked myself, "How can he be so false to her and true to me?" And then it ended.

Thank God, I saw the light. And now, when I realize how many innocent people could have been hurt had I continued this affair, I shudder. Print this. Perhaps another woman is still trapped as I was.

FORECAST FOR SUNDAY, APRIL 2, 1978

Your Daily HOROSCOPE

from the CARROLL RIGHTER INSTITUTE

GENERAL TENDENCIES: The daytime finds you able to make considerable progress in creative activities. Take time to study important affairs you know little about. Not a good time to make changes.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Try to see as many friends as you can during the day. Allow time in the evening to engage in family affairs. Express happiness.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Study career affairs so you can have greater abundance in the days ahead. Keep your emotions under control at all times.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) You have some interesting ideas which you should discuss with experts before putting them in operation. Be poised.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Plan how to gain your most important personal wishes. Be sure to treat your mate in a more thoughtful way.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Strange situations could arise now so be sure to use tact in your dealings with others. Be thoughtful of family members.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Study a new venture first before making any decisions. A good time to analyze your duties so you'll know best how to handle them.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Show more understanding of family members and increase harmony at home. Don't let the troubles of others upset you so much.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Not a good time to make drastic changes you have in mind. Be more thoughtful of others and get an excellent response.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Spend some time planning how to gain more abundance in the future. Make this a most happy day and evening.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) One who is most successful can give you fine ideas on career matters. Consult this person early in the day.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Formulate a new plan that can improve your personal affairs. It is best to be alone and relax after the sun goes down.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Plan how to gain your most cherished goals and then carry through intelligently. Don't neglect recreational activities during the day.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will want to be helpful to others since there is a genuine understanding of people's needs. Direct the education along humanitarian lines for best results. Be sure to ethical training early in life. Sports are a must here.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to YOU!

FOR RELEASE MONDAY, APRIL 3, 1978

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Some very necessary changes start this week and as soon as you get them rolling, you make big progress toward an effective course of action. But you do need to get rid of some longtime routine or habit that is holding you back. Be openminded.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) You may mind it difficult to contact a close friend early, but later you can get together for working out a fine plan together.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Do some additional work on a civic matter if you want it to turn out as you anticipated. Don't argue over an account that is correct, but go ahead and pay it. Stop trying to fool others and you won't be fooled yourself.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) You have to develop new ideas better if you are to become more successful now. Not the right time to contact that expert you want to meet. Postpone it for a day or two.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Use good judgment if you want to improve conditions around you. Your mate is too busy with own affairs to have much time for you now. Be patient and all works out better later.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Not a good time for working out some ticklish situation with a partner. Plan your campaign with this in mind.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Get into a new system for handling work, but not where uncompleted tasks are concerned. Take care of an old health problem you have been putting up with.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Try to help others with their problems and gain their goodwill. Don't forget to pay pressing bills. Good opportunities for meeting interesting personalities.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Take care of that pesky affair at home and then good things happen to you. Handle business matters well. Do some entertaining.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Be careful of your facts before you speak or you could get into big trouble. Be most careful in motion.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Some important money matter is not solved until another day. Be clever in dealing with irate business allies.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Get rid of annoying situations early and clear your table of work. That long conversation with loved one should wait for a better time.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) You are so bogged down with duties you feel you cannot handle them, but serious application is wise. Intuition is not good right now, but follow it later for best results.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will be able to accomplish a great deal throughout the lifetime if you teach early the value of patience at the right time. Slant education toward humanitarian or civic lines.

McNamara Building World Bank Role

WASHINGTON (AP) — Robert S. McNamara, employing his managerial skills on a global scale, has built up the World Bank in 10 years at a rate that private corporations might envy.

McNamara, former Ford Motor Co. whiz kid and Vietnam War defense secretary, took over as president of the bank in 1968. That year it employed 886 professionals from 52 countries and lent $956 million of its rich members' money to poor members.

As McNamara observes his 10th anniversary on the job and starts a new five-year term Saturday, the bank has 2,533 employees from 100 countries and is lending at an annual rate of $8.5 billion.

But those numbers alone do not reflect McNamara's influence, including what a CIA research paper called a dramatic shift in international aid to poorer nations.

McNamara has moved to target World Bank aid away from large projects toward smaller, often rural, projects that directly increase income, productivity and living conditions of the poorest 40 percent of the population of the poorest countries — hundreds of millions of people living in "utter degradation" with less than $100 per year income.

In the last three years, the bank has supported 128 rural development projects benefitting 60 million poor. In Mexico, $230 million from the World Bank is being disbursed to help a million people in 50 depressed areas. The money is being spent on schoolrooms, irrigation, livestock, roads, water and electricity.

The direct approach also is being applied to urban development and shifting more industrial development loans to small scale enterprises.

Today's Cryptoquip clue: C equals A

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Joe Dubitsky Took His Case To Chief

By JAMES V. HEALION

HARTFORD, Conn. (UPI) — Joe Dubitzky was stymied by Russian red tape so he used the tried-and-true American method of going straight to the top. Leonid I. Brezhnev apparently agreed Joe had a case.

"It's not that I wanted to send in the Marines. I just took every avenue I could. Joe Dubitzky hasn't left a stone unturned," he said in an interview with United Press International.

"My heart shakes a little bit, but I want to let the world know about it," said Joe, 77, the retired owner of an East Hartford neighborhood pharmacy.

Joe emigrated from Russia to the United States in 1920 and graduated from the University of Tennessee's School of Pharmacy with a 98.6 average.

He was visiting Moscow two years ago when he bought a samovar — an elaborate brass urn — at a government store for his daughter, Mrs. David Miller of White Plains, N.Y. He paid 85 rubles, the equivalent of $110.

The airport customs people said the samovar, a charcoal-fired urn used to keep water constantly hot for tea, couldn't be taken out of the country.

They threatened to keep his passport unless he signed a receipt in Russian saying he was voluntarily surrendering the samovar. He refused and told them he wanted to see the American ambassador. That did it. They relented.

"They said it was antique. If I wanted I could turn it over to a Russian citizen. If I didn't, the government would hold it for 30 days and auction it off."

Joe told them, "So okay, keep the samovar. But give me the purchase price. In U.S.A., you can't eat your cake and have it, too. I didn't come here to break the law. I'm not smuggling."

Joe's wife, Gertrude, was whispering, "Forget it, honey, forget it. It's the end of the rope.' I told her, 'You don't know your husband, Joe Dubitzky. I'll fight to the end.'"

But customs was not persuaded. They kept the samovar. For a refund they said he should live so long.

Joe returned home and began a letter-writing barrage. No personage was spared. He promised this reporter if anything developed, "I'll get back to you."

Not even then Secretary of State, Henry Kissinger, or President Ford could get the samovar back. Not even President Carter or Kissinger's successor, Cyrus Vance. Not even Anatoly Dobrynin or the consul of the USSR embassy.

Clifford H. Gross of the American embassy in Moscow said he knew it was no consolation, but such behavior "by customs and other officials here is typical."

When the Soviet trawler Taras Shovchenko violated the 200-mile fishing limit and was towed to Boston by the Coast Guard in March 1977, Joe wanted to put a lien on it but missed the boat by two days.

He sent a "mailgram" to President Carter and got a letter from Leonard F. Willems, Bilateral Relations, Office of Soviet Union Affairs, Department of State. Willems was not optimistic.

Willems told Joe the State Department's pamphlet, "Travel To The Soviet Union," had been revised to warn Americans about Joe's trouble with the samovar.

But Joe wasn't taking "nyet" for an answer. He decided to try the Soviet Union's head man.

"So I wrote Brezhnev in Russian and I said:

'My dear Mr. Brezhnev: Let me speak from my heart. If you were Joe Dubitzky and I were Leonid Brezhnev, you wouldn't act any differently. I want to discuss my situation.

'Your government has been appealing to U.S.A. to observe the friendly relationship between our people within the framework of detente. And I do not believe detente — as we say in U.S.A. — is a one-way road.

'I don't think the way I was treated by USSR officials would contribute to detente. After being away for over 56 years from my homeland, I was ignorant of the fact that samovar was an antique.

'At the time I left Russia, samovars were on every family's dining table as an ordinary item. Please, either return the samovar or refund full purchasing price.'"

Three weeks later, he got a check for $110.92 from Moscow airport.

"I cashed it immediately," Joe said.

Joe has suggested a headline for this story: "AMERICAN TOURIST WINS BLOODLESS BATTLE WITH LEONID BREZHNEV," but as they sometimes say in Joe's circle: after the whole long story — the complete megillah — it was close but no samovar.

Urge Wearing Star Of David

CINCINNATI (AP) — Christians are being encouraged to wear Star of David armbands and ring church bells to "steal the show" if American Nazis march in predominately Jewish Skokie, Ill.

"Imagine the force of repudiation of Nazi ideas if millions of Christians would wear the Jewish Star April 20 in acknowledgement of our Christian debt to the Jews," wrote Barbara Beckwith in an editorial carried in the April edition of the St. Anthony Messenger, a national Roman Catholic magazine with 280,000 subscribers. She grew up in Skokie.

Poster And Essay Contest On Hunger

In an effort to increase the awareness of young people that hunger exists in Pitt County, poster and essay contests have been planned for participation by the school children of the county.

The contest was announced by Betty B. Rouse, Department of Social Services Outreach Coordinator; and Patrice A. Chenier, Pitt County Outreach Coodinator for the N. C. Hunger Coalition.

Students and grades seven through 12 will be invited to take part in an essay contest for each age group. Each essay should answer the questions, "Nutrition or Basic Feeding — Which Is the Answer?" Entries should be limited to 500 words each and be legibly handwritten or typewritten. Each should include the writer's name, address and phone number. The deadline is Apr. 30. The two winning essays will be used in television and radio announcements, in addition to being used in community meeting presentations.

A poster contest is being sponsored for elementary school students, Grades One-Six. Posters should illustrate the benefits of good nutrition. Five winning ones will be selected for each age group to be shown at community meetings throughout the county. Each should be drawn on post board and include the artist's name, address and phone number on the back. The entry deadline is Apr. 30.

All entries may be sent to or dropped off at the Methodist Student Center, 501 E. Fifth Street, Greenville.

Credit Unions Boon To Distressed Neighborhoods

R. BEN JOHNSON of the National Center for Urban Ethnic Affairs says "There is nothing mystical about running a credit union. Most liquidated credit unions did not succeed because of poor management and lack of proper training." (UPI Photo)

By DAVID E. ANDERSON

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Credit unions, the fastest growing financial institutions in the country, may become a major element in efforts to rehabilitate distressed neighborhoods.

To make that point, R. Ben Johnson of the National Center for Urban Ethnic Affairs ticks off a few examples:

— In San Juan, Texas, a community credit union is responsible for the construction of 40 units of housing for Chicano families.

— In Springfield, Mass., a credit union, discovering that local banks were red lining its area, became the sole home mortgage lender in the neighborhood for two years.

— In Ashland, Ore., a community credit union is making automobile loans with incentives to buy energy efficient cars by tying interest rates to the auto's EPA highway mileage figures.

"There is always money in a neighborhood," Johnson, director of the center's Community Development Credit Union Program, said in an interview. "Even the poorest of neighborhoods — paychecks, social security checks, welfare payments and even savings."

He cited the example of a Chicago' neighborhood designated as Zip Code 60653, considered to be one of the poorest in the city.

According to a study of the city, people living in Zip Code 60653 had some $16.3 million in savings accounts and $3.2 million checking accounts. Yet the Chicago financial community made only $25,000 in home mortgage loans to the neighborhood, $1.7 million in consumer loans and $6.6 in commercial loans.

"A community based credit union can be the vehicle for a neighborhood capturing its own wealth," Johnson said.

Johnson's program is aimed at doing just that — developing neighborhood-based credit unions responsive to the needs of the community and training managers and staff to insure that the union's survive.

Credit unions, nonprofit, voluntary associations of members sharing some "common bond" such as occupation or association (church, lodge or club membership), have existed in the United States since the turn of the century and grown to be an industry with assets of $50 billion.

They differ from banks and saving and loan associations in that they are basically cooperatives and the users of the institution's services are not customers but owners.

Nearly 10,500 credit unions are occupational — credit unions where employment in the same place is the requirement for organization and membership.

Johnson said that in 1965, at the height of the "war on poverty," the Office of Economic Opportunity introduced an experimental common bond idea — the urban residential connection. In 1972, the National Credit Union Administration formally established the residential common bond as a legitimate criterion for establishing credit unions.

"OEO started a large number of urban, neighborhood based credit unions during the war on poverty," Johnson said. "But quite a few of them failed because OEO dumped loads of money into them for running them but nothing for training the people.

"It was being run almost like a grant program with the money being dumped in and nothing being done to make sure it worked," he said.

Johnson and the NCUEA want to change all that.

"There is nothing mystical about running a credit union," he said. "Most liquidated credit unions did not succeed because of poor management and lack of proper training.

"Sound neighborhood leadership with imaginative ideas can meet the challenge of operating a community-based financial institution, especially if that leadership will commit itself to the time required for such an endeavor," he said.

And it can have an impact on the neighborhood.

Johnson should know. He spent three and half years pulling a South Bend, Ind., credit union up by its bootstraps. When he went in, the union had a 67 percent rate of delinquency on loans; when he left it had been turned around to 6 percent.

In addition, the South Bend credit union, the St. Joseph County Community Federal Credit Union, became the principal lender for Renew, Inc., a project which moves residents from absentee landlord rental property into their own homes. As money is paid back to Renew by the new homeowners it is deposited in the credit union, thus continuously recycling the funds.

The Springfield, Mass., credit union, the Casa Credit Union in the Brightwood neighborhood, has expanded beyond just providing home mortgage loans.

It was able to develope a standing line of credit of $20,000 for a new co-op supermarket — a major help because nearly all new businesses face cash problems because capital is used up for initial inventory purchases.

Johnson sees the big problem as training people to run community-based credit nions.

"Training officials and staff is extremely critical to the success of any Community Development Credit Union," he said.

"Since they are fairly new to the credit union movement, there are few established credit union organizations that offer the specialized training necessary for such credit unions."

Within the government, the Economic Development Administration has been one of the few agencies sensitive to the need.

"EDA sees the important role that credit unions can play in commercial and residential revitalization efforts," Johnson said.

The agency has sponsored some training programs but they only involved eight of the community-oriented credit unions. Johnson said a NCUEA survey showed that more than 100 need and want the training help.

"What is needed is a training institute," Johnson said. "It would incorporate the the training already available through traditional sources such as the Credit Union National Association, but more importantly would be specifically geared to meet the needs of those credit unions that are located in urban neighborhoods."

When that happens, according to Johnson's vision, urban neighborhoods will have one of the most powerful tools possible to shape themselves: their own money.

Sees Parallel Needs In Monkeys And Humans

MADISON Wis. (AP) — They'll never know it, but Wisconsin monkeys may some day help anxious parents answer the question: "Is my child ready for nursery school?"

Stephen J. Suomi, 32, a University of Wisconsin-Madison psychologist, believes his Primate Lab research exploring the similarities between monkeys and humans may lead to a better public understanding of the social development of children.

"Many of the principles derived from monkey research can be almost directly applied to humans," says Suomi, an assistant professor of psychology. "The influence of peers on socialization is one area with very strong and clear-cut implications for humans as well as primates."

Research conducted by Suomi over the past two years indicates peer interaction among both human children and young monkeys is extremely important in the development of lifelong social skills.

"Peer interaction in monkeys is considerably more than just child's play," Suomi says. "One of the most sensitive indicators of whether or not a monkey will have social interaction problems as an adult is its dealing with peers as a youngster. It's also clear from our data that when a monkey has an unstable relationship with its mother or father, its relationship with its peers will suffer. Poor peer interaction, in turn, results in poor social skills as an adult.

"Comparable data involving humans suggest strong parallels. I'm convinced that if you want to find out which children are most likely to have future social problems, you'll get a better indication by watching them on the playground than in the home with their family," he says.

"Many social skills are developed through peer interaction and perfected through play. The consequences of being denied the chance to play with age-mates are profound. For example, both monkeys and humans learn to control the intensity of their aggression among peers. In this way, monkeys learn to 'play' with friends and 'attack' strangers.

"Monkeys raised without peers generally avoid contact with others their age or are very aggressive when they do interact with them later in life," Suomi adds. "On the other hand, monkeys given too much exposure to peers before they have established secure relationships with their mothers can also experience problems in later social activities. Similar behavior patterns are observed in humans."

Suomi thinks many parents send their children to day-care centers and nursery schools before the child is ready for extensive peer group interaction. If his studies of what happens to young monkeys in comparable situations can be generalized to humans, the consequences may last a lifetime, he says.

While confirming the importance of a healthy infant-mother relationship, Suomi's recent research also indicates a father's presence is much more important than was previously believed.

"Monkey fathers treat their male and female offspring very differently, whereas mothers treat them about the same. The fathers teach and encourage immature males to play roughly, but if females try to do the same thing, the father punishes them. Female monkeys tend to be less aggressive and spend more time grooming than males," Suomi says. "Such findings suggest that social factors can exaggerate already existing biologically based differences in social behavior between males and females."

As an example of parallel psychological development, Suomi observes that monkeys and humans develop social fears at almost exactly the same point in their lives.

"Humans develop 'stranger anxiety' at about eight to 10 months of age, while monkeys show the same behavior at around two to three months. If you compensate for the fact monkeys develop four or five times faster than humans, the parallel is very strong."

Suomi believes primate studies may make it possible to some day predict certain adult personality charateristics for both monkeys and humans through childhood observation.

Although many conclusions from his recent research correlate with similar studies performed with humans, Suomi cautions that "monkeys are not furry little humans with tails. Though they may often act and look human, we can only take our generalizations so far."

Mix Can Induce Deadly Poison

CHICAGO (UPI) — Cancer patients who are taking laetrile should select carefully the foods they eat, a group of University of California researchers warn. Failure to do so could be fatal.

Laetrile, a derivative of apricot pits, has been the focus of much controversy. Its advocates claim it to be an effective cancer treatment, "even less toxic than sugar." Most medical authorities believe the compound is not effective and potentially poisonous.

Writing in a recent issue of the Journal of the American Medical Association, the research team notes that many popular fruits and vegetables — including almonds and certain other nuts, lettuce, celery, peaches and related fruits, bean and alfalfa sprouts, among other things — contain chemicals called hydrolytic enzymes.

Laetrile, in turn, is chemically a cyanogenic glycoside. When cyanogenic glycosides come in contact with foods containing hydrolytic enzymes, the resulting mixture is hydrogen cyanide, a deadly posion.

Never Too Cold For Ice-Fishing

By SETH MYDANS

KHABAROVSK, U.S.S.R. (AP) — Ivan Petrov is an old man with one love and one ambition. He loves to sit on the frozen Amur River and fish through a hole in the ice, and he wants to live to be 100.

Although he rarely catches any fish, he believes his pastime will help him realize his ambition.

Petrov, who is now 70, is one of a dozen regulars who gather at this bend of the Amur, and one of thousands throughout the Soviet Union who spend the bitterest days of the winter hunched over fishing holes, sipping hot tea and dangling the two-pronged hooks of the ice fisherman.

No day is too cold for Petrov and his friends in this far-east Siberian city where winter temperatures drop to 50 degrees below zero. It is the cold wind, blowing up the river from China, that is their enemy, and against it the fishermen here build little roofless igloos that form their outdoor winter homes.

A decade ago Petrov retired from his job as a schoolteacher, and since then, he said, his goal in life has been "to live to be 100."

Asked about his strategy for living so long, Petrov simply held up the wooden fishing handles from which he dangles lines through holes on either side of him.

Each morning, Petrov walks from his home in downtown Khabarovsk to his igloo on the river, chops away the ice that has formed in his holes overnight, and baits his hooks with slices of a small fish he carries frozen in his coat pocket.

Then, sitting on a small sled with his felt-booted feet straight out in front of him, he begins gently twitching his lines, which dangle down to just below the 2-foot-thick ice. Depending on the weather, he and his friends stay from two to six hours a day, rarely catching more than a fish or two.

"The river is getting fished out," Petrov said. "There's dirty water coming from the city." To him, the dirty water symbolizes the unwelcome effects of the spreading Soviet settlements throughout Siberia.

"I was born near Moscow and was sent here to the far east to teach when I finished the institute," Petrov said. "I liked the nature, I liked its virginity, and I stayed."

In the summer he goes out into the Siberian forests to hunt or gather wild berries and mushrooms, but these days, he said, he must go farther and farther to find virgin nature.

The completion of a major new rail line near Khabarovsk will bring further damage to the wild nature of Siberia, he said. "But what can you do? Progress is progress."

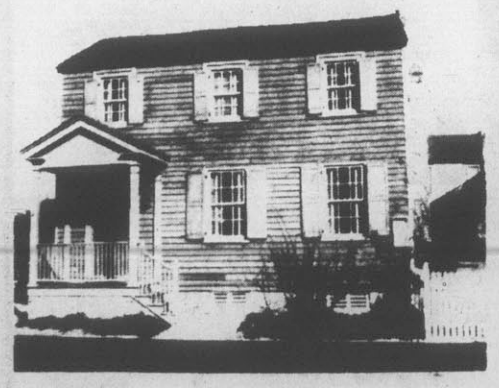

Most of his companions on the ice, including two women who come dressed in furs but wearing makeup, are retirees like himself.

Mime Keith Berger Coming

KEITH BERGER—One of America's performers of the ancient art of mime, Keith Berger is appearing for a single performance at 8 p.m. Monday, April 10 at Mendenhall Student Center. Public tickets are $3 each, in advance from the Central Ticket Office or at the door, and $2 each for groups of 20 or more.

Keith Berger, one of America's foremost performers of the ancient art of mime, will be at Mendenhall Student Center at 8 p.m. on Monday, April 10.

Although only 24, Berger has already been called "the best" by star mime Marcel Marceau.

Berger works completely alone. He, the audience and the stage are his only properties. He has worked in television commercials, and on stages small and as large as the New Orleans Superdome.

A small, lithe man, Berger works in black leotard and white face for a simple, dramatic effect. His acts range from depicting a gorilla in a cage to a hard-shooting cowboy.

In addition to his performance, Berger will conduct an afternoon workshop, for which exact details are not available at this time. Persons interested in the workshop are invited to contact the Mendenhall Student Center, 757-6611 for further details.

Tickets for Keith Berger's April 10 performance are available from the Central Ticket Office and are priced at $3 each ($2 each when purchased in group blocks of 20 or more).

Magical Oz Show To Benefit PCHS

"The Magical Land of Oz," an adaptation of the story of "The Wizard of Oz" is to be seen in Greenville at 7:30 p.m. Monday, April 3 at Rose High School.

The show, a family entertainment, has an array of illusions worked into the production.

Familiar characters in the show include the heroine, Dorothy, the Wizard, the Tin Man, the Scarecrow and the Cowardly Lion.

This version of Oz is produced by magician and showman Phillip Morris and is presented by the World of Fantasy Players.

Tickets for the one and one-half show are priced at $2 each and can be purchased at the door prior to performance.

Proceeds realized from this production will go to the various undertakings of the Pitt County Humane Society, an organization that provides homes, services and adoption outlets for stray and unwanted animals.

Directs Outdoor Drama

Del Lewis

Del Lewis, an associate professor of drama at East Carolina University, will direct the summer 1978 production of the outdoor drama for Historic Halifax, "First For Freedom."

A native of Wisconsin, Lewis holds a master of fine arts degree in directing from the University of Wisconsin, Madison, and a bachelor of music in voice and choral directing from Midwestern University.

Prior to coming to ECU, he taught at the University of Wisconsin, was an instructor at the Valley Studio for the Wisconsin Mime Company, held summer acting workshops for the Texas Fine Arts Council, and has conducted workshops at other theaters and centers.

As actor and director, he has been involved in collegiate productions, and in plays at the National Theater Company, New York, the York Players of New York and the Department of the Army. He has appeared in "The Rothschilds" and "Fiddler on the Roof" on Broadway, and in a number of off-Broadway productions.

"First for Freedom" will open June 23 and run nightly except Mondays through July 9. This is the third consecutive season for the Halifax outdoor drama.

Caribbean Paradise Film

John Roberts, noted film-lecturer, will appear at Mendenhall Student Center at 8 p.m. on Thursday, April 6 to present his travel-film "Caribbean Paradise." The film is being shown under the sponsorship of Mendenhall Student Center.

The film deals with the British Virgin Isles. Known as "The Unspoiled Isles" because of the careful supervision by local government officials of the island's growth and development, the British Virgin Islands are about 65 miles east of Puerto Rico.

Until recently relatively unknown to the casual tourist, there are now several excellent resorts open with easy access from the American Virgin Island which at one point lies within eyesight of each other.

New England native John Roberts is a pioneer in the field of 16mm film productions. Roberts teamed with Clayton Ballou to found the Associated Film Producers, Inc., a firm that has specialized in production and informational films. Theater films produced by the company include "Westward Ski," a four-part documentary, "Spirit of the Vikings," and others.

Tickets are priced at $1.50 each and are available at the Central Ticket Office or will be available at the door prior to showing of the film.

Joint Recital

Two students of the School of Music, East Carolina University, will present a joint recital at 7:30 p.m. Thursday, April 6 in the A. J. Fletcher Recital Hall.

Performers are Larry Carman, percussionist, and Harvey Stokes, oboist.

For his program, Carman will perform Serry's "Aggressions;" "Sonata for Timpani and Piano" by Cirone; Watson's "Recital Suite for Marimba;" and Milhaud's "Concerto for Percussion and Orchestra."

He will be accompanied by Jodie McDowell and Shelia Marshburn.

Stokes will play "Concertino" by Bruno Labate and the K. P. E. Bach "Concerto No. 1 in B Flat." Denise Dupree, pianist, will accompany him.

Next Dinner Theater Set For April 20-23

The next Dinner Theater Production at East Carolina University has been announced for a four-day run, Thursday, April 20 through Sunday, April 23.

"Champagne Complex" is the play chosen for this event. The comedy is co-directed by Dana Mills and Wanda Edwards — Assistant Technical Director and Assistant Program Director at Mendenhall Student Center, respectively. The cast is Charlotte Cheatham as Allyn Macy; Bob McCutcheon in the role of Helms Fell Harper; and Gene Hollar as Carter Brown.

Dinner will consist of sliced top round and one-quarter Chicken Marengo, plus a variety of vegetables, a salad, and dessert.

Dinner is at 6:30 p.m. and curtain time at 8 p.m. nightly except on Sunday when the time is 4:30 and 6 p.m.

Tickets are priced at $8.50 each, and must be ordered 24 hours in advance — on Friday for the Sunday production.

Chamber Music Program

Five musicians from the East Carolina University School of Music will perform a program of varied chamber music at 8:15 p.m. on Wednesday, April 5. There is no admission charge and the public is invited to attend.

The quintet of performers are two faculty members, oboist David Hawkins and hornist James Parnell, and three student musicians, Victoria Iannotta, flutist; Michael Waddell, clarinetist; and Fred McLean, bassoonist.

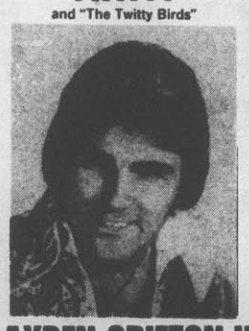

Selections to be performed by the group include J. S. Bach's "Fugue in G Minor," transcribed by music student Eric Haas; Anton Reicha's "Blaserquintett Es-Dur;" Barthe's "Passacaille;" the Frackenpohl transcriptions of two Scott Joplin ragtime pieces, "Maple Leaf Rag" and "The Cascades."

Hospitality House

Kay Currie's "Hospitality House" program over WITN-TV, Channel 7, Washington, goes from a half-hour slot to a full hour today, from noon til 1 p.m.

Among guests on the show will be Margaret Brickell, of the N.C. Travel and Tourism Dept., who will talk about historic Hillsborough, the Azalea Festival in Wilmington, and steeple chases in Southern Pines.

Frances Delamara and Elizabeth Leonard will discuss Rocky Mount's "All Male Beauty Pageant," and Gene Littler, a pro-golfer, will show a film in connection with the subject of cancer. He will be joined by Ed McGrath, president of the Beaufort County Chapter of the American Cancer Society

Final Days For Rose High Art Show

The final three of six artists to lecture in the East Carolina University School of Arts "Visual Arts Forum-Symposium will be appearing on campus during the first ten days of April in lectures to be given in the Jenkins Auditorium.

From 3 to 5 p.m. Monday, April 3, George Kokinas will be on hand. A painter who has lived and worked in New York City since 1966, he is represented by works in the Whitney, Guggenheim, and Chicago Art Institute. Kokinas will give a slide lecture.

Tuesday, April 4 is the date Donald Kuspit will be lecturing, beginning at 7:30 p.m. His lecture is on "Popular Sources of Elitist Imagery in Early 20th Century Art." Dr. Kuspit is Professor of Art at UNC-Chapel Hill, is a contributing editor to several art magazines, and has won numerous awards and distinctions for his work.

The final artist to lecture will be Nick Krushenick, who will be here from 3 to 5 p.m. on Monday, April 10. He will show a slide lecture of his work. He has taught at several universities and his works are in many major American collections and museums.

The "Visual Arts Forum -Symposium is sponsored by the Visual Arts Forum of the School of Art, and is funded through the Student Government Association of ECU.

Three Art Lectures

Only a few days are left to see the annual spring exhibition of art by students of Rose High School and of the Extended School Program at the Greenville Art Center. The show, one of a continuing series of school shows encompassing student artists in both Pitt County and Greenville City Schools, will be on view through Wednesday.

This year's exhibit by the Greenville high school students is considerably more varied and colorful than last year's showing. There's batik put to many uses — small wall hangings' pillow covers, etc. Woven textiles are also prominent this year. Ceramic containers, based on the human head and in brilliant glazes, created by students of the Extended School Program, are delightful, expressive pieces.

Favorite traditional student media — oil and acrylics, pen and ink and pencil drawings, are also well represented in this show. Items of wood are in sizeable numbers, including a chest and several miniature pieces of furniture. A few students have tried their hand at jewelry with amazingly good results.

The nice range of color is enhanced in this show by an excellent job of display — with greenery interspersed among arrangements of ceramics and wood. This is an enjoyable show, and should be seen by all who have time to take it in. Art Center hours are 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. daily.

Ed Reep Lectured

Edward Reep, artist and faculty member of the School of Art, East Carolina University, was one of two guest lecturers during a recent three week symposium on "Artists of American Wars" held at the University of Michigan, Ann Arbor.

Reep and noted World War II cartoonist Bill Mauldin were the two speakers representing the World War II era of military artists.

Reep was an official war artist-correspondent in the African and Italian theaters of operations

Drawings and paintings made in these war years by Reep are now housed in collections in the Pentagon and in other federal buildings in Washington, D. C.

Also, six of the paintings of this period by Reep have been included in a 1975 book by James Jones, "World War II," now used as a textbook by the Department of History University of Michigan.

Attended Convention

Dr. Iradj Rowshan-Araghi, associate professor of art education at the School of Art, East Carolina University, attended the National Art Education Association convention held in Houston, March 17-22.

Sexauer Print In National Show

"Proverb man, on art and man," a color intaglio print by Donald Sexauer, faculty printmaker in the East Carolina University School of Art, has been selected for exhibition in the 22nd National Print Exhibition at the Hunterdon Art Center in Clinton, N. J.

Book News

FROM SHEPPARD MEMORIAL LIBRARY

By MARGARET CLARK

New fiction titles for April include books full of suspense and larcenous entertainment.

In HEARTBEAT by Eugene Dong, the medical details are so plausible that readers will wonder how much of it has actually happened. When Dr. William Bradfield learns of a dying patient for whom a human heart transplant is impossible, he decides to put the last phase of his artificial-heart program into operation. Plutonium is an ideal fuel energy source; the amount needed is too small to make it a target for terrorists. Then a nuclear safety officer refuses to release the plutonium for the operation. Determined to succeed at all costs, Bradfield defies the order, gambling a life and medical triumph against the impossible. Then the impossible happens! HEARTBEAT, a medical novel as gripping as any detective thriller, is based on actual programs now in research and development.

Another suspenseful medical drama is THE NIGHTMARE FACTOR by Thomas Scortia and Frank M. Robinson. First, Dr. Calvin Doohan's friend Benoit becomes ill and in a matter of hours is dead. Then Doonan, the local World Health Representative, begins to get reports of people throughout the state stricken by a mysterious influenza. Is it simply a new epidemic or something frighteningly more sinister? Why does it claim as its victims only those who attend a recent VAW convention? It's soon obvious that the disease is neither flu nor the Legionaire's Disease that surfaced in Philadelphia a few years before. Isolated by Army security to investigate the disease, Doohan uncovers disturbing evidence of a terrifying plot that places in jeopardy his own life and the lives of the men working with him.

Other thrillers by best-selling authors are:GOODBYE CALIFORNIA by Alistair MacLean, a convincing description of how an alarmingly well-planned heist of a California nuclear power plant immediately mobilized federal and state agencies; Mary Higgins Clark's A STRANGER IS WAITING is the story of a group of people whose lives have been shattered by a brutal murder, and who are still trying to cope with its consequences; and Stephen King, a modern master of the macabre, has brought together in NIGHT SHIFT 19 of his most chilling and bizarre tales.

Stines In Festival

Joe Stines, Children's Librarian at Sheppard Memorial Library, will be taking part in a week-long festival of story telling in Raleigh this coming week.

For the celebration of "Library Week," April 3-7, more than 100 librarians will gather in Raleigh to participate in events connected with "Storytelling Festival in the Park."

All types of stories will be told in series of sessions — folk tales of North Carolina, of Japan, Africa, and other countries.

Sessions will begin each of the five days at 9:30 a.m. and continue until 2:30. Following the end of story telling time, librarians will gather for a mime session directed by Cate Howard, children's coordinator for Wake County Libraries.

Stines is scheduled as one of the eight story tellers to hold a session on Tuesday, April 4.

Greece has 6,500 caves shaped by the elements that form unusual iridescent forests of stone. These caves figured highly in Greek mythology, because the ancient Greeks believed them to be secret doors to the kingdom of the dead, known as Hades, ruled over by the divinity Pluto.

Literary Magazine For Campbell

BUIES CREEK — "The Lyricist," Campbell College's literary magazine, was recently unveiled in a dedication ceremony in honor of Dr. Shelby Stephenson, English Department Chairman, poet, and native of Johnson County.

Editor of "The Lyricist" is Debbie Hutchinson of Fayetteville; assistant editor is Vicki Oxendine of Lumberton; and faculty advisor is Mrs. Anna Wooten Hawkins of Raleigh.

This year's edition focuses on award-winning student work and also includes a substantial amount of prose and poetry by older North Carolina writers.

Damian Onyekaba, an exchange student from Nigeria, won the prose contest with an account of coming of age in his home country. Reid Langham of Beaumont, Texas, won second place in student prose; and Linda Lewis of Salemburg, third place.

Prose judges were White Joyner of Durham, Michael Matros of Raleigh, and Jim Wise of Greenville.

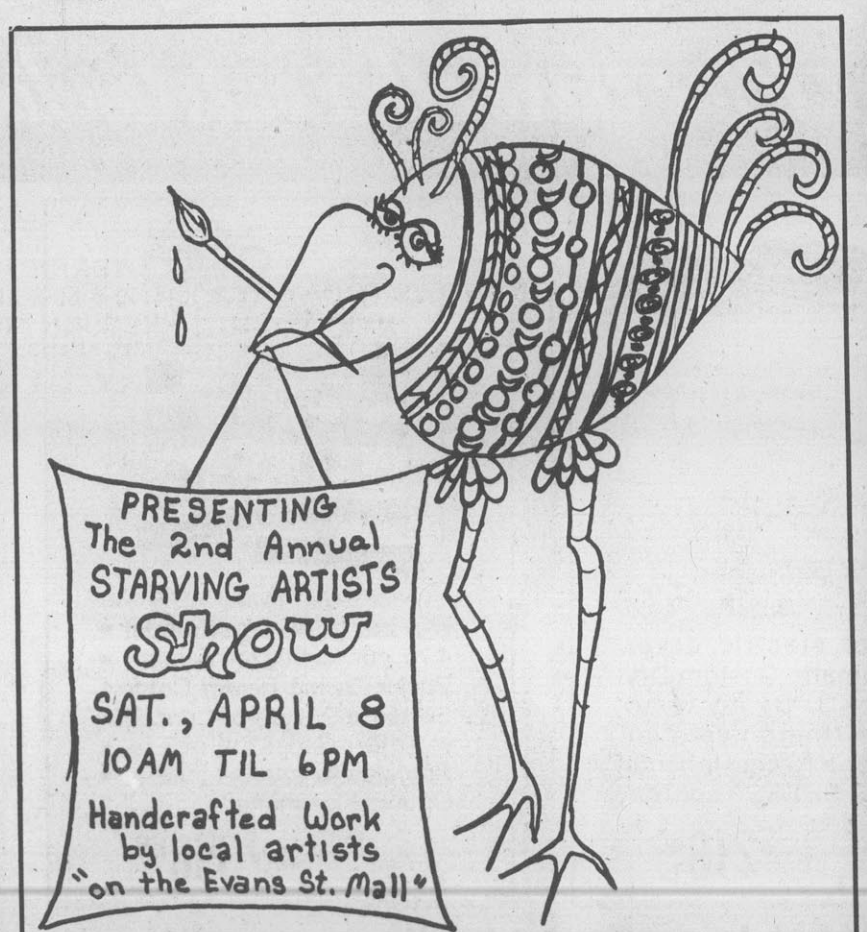

Top honors in poetry went to Mark Van Sciver of Riverside, N. J.; with Tom Dewitt of Cary and Debbie Hutchinson taking second and third places. Judges were Mrs. Sally Buckner, Joel Jackson, and Tom Hawkins, all of Raleigh.

In art, the prize-winner entry, an ink portrait of country boy, by Dennis Perry of Raleigh, was used as the cover for the magazine.

Mini-Concerts By Rose Group

A series of mini-concerts have been held recently at Rose High School to give encouragement to students interested in singing with the choir. The Rose High Concert Choir is directed by Patricia Hiss.

In addition, the Concert Choir has also recently performed with the Girls Glee Club and the Advanced Ensemble in concerts at Third Street School, Wahl-Coates School and E. B. Aycock Junior High.

Fish And Wildlife Service Finds Treasure Of Nature Art

By ALICE Z. CUNEO

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Fish and Wildlife Service has found a fortune in bird and animal portraits by famous artists stored in a vault and hanging ignored in its offices, officials said Saturday.

They said the 487 works by such renowned nature artists as Louis Agassiz Fuertes and John James Audubon have been appraised at $416,000 in total value.

The paintings and sketches — many described as in "superb condition" — will soon be distributed to museums, with the vast bulk slated for 25 year loan to Philadelphia's Academy of Natural Scienees.

"It's been bugging me for eight years that those paintings were in the vault," said Clyde Jones, head of the FWS bird and mammal lab, who decided recently to do something about it and told officials at the Council on Environmental Quality about his find.

Another 90 works, including an Audubon owl, were discovered hanging on the walls of FWS offices, unrecognized by the occupants for the valuable originals they were.

Spokesmen said about half the rediscovered works are by Fuertes, considered by wildlife scientists one of the greatest of all bird life painters. He died in 1927.

The collection also includes detailed portraits of gophers and other small animals by Ernest Thompson Seton, artist and author who wrote "Wild Animals I Have Known."

The spokesmen said the old Bureau of Biological Survey paid from $30 to $50 for most of the watercolors and pen and ink sketches between 1890 and 1927.

Some watercolors of brightly-colored Mexican birds have recently been appraised as worth up to $5,000, while other postcard-size bird portraits in a series called "50 field and orchard birds" are valued from $350 up.

Since most of the paintings were concealed in black cardboard boxes in the vault, they retained their rich colors and avoided the fading and yellowing that comes from exposing acid-based paper to air.

A Shortage Of Music Instruments

By CHARLES M. MADIGAN

MOSCOW (UPI) — The parents of aspiring folk musicians in the Soviet Union are worried about the latest shortage — no instruments.

The newspaper Soviet Culture, which earlier complained about a severe shortage of the national instrument, the balalaika, now says the shortage has hit a wide variety of other instruments.

It printed letters from worried parents who complained that their children cannot continue their studies because they cannot find violins, flutes and a number of other instruments.

The Soviet Union places a high value on the development of folk music among youngsters, supporting national folk music bands and organizations and encouraging the development of local groups.

But the letters to the newspaper indicated the people in charge of planning the production of musical instruments are not doing their job.

"My son plays the violin and my daughter plays the clarinet, but in the shops I can't buy a violin of a clarinet or even bows and strings for the violin," wrote one Ukrainian parent.

Music Festival Report

GREENSBORO — The Eastern Music Festival, the annual summer program of performance and studies located in Greensboro, has reported a number of developments in preparation for the coming season.

The Charles and Mary Grant Foundation has allocated $17,000, and the Emma A. Sheafter Trust has given a $15,000 grant — both for "unrestricted use." Also, a grant of $21,000 is to be received from the National Endowment for the Arts — this is a one-to-one matching grant.

NEW COUNTRY FRIED CHICKEN

1 frying chicken (2½ to 3 pounds) cut-up, or use chicken pieces
Crisco Shortening
½ cup milk
1 egg
1 cup flour
2 teaspoons garlic salt
2 teaspoons MSG
1 teaspoon paprika
¼ teaspoon poultry seasoning
1 teaspoon black pepper
SERVES 4

For Extra Spicy Chicken: Increase poultry seasoning to ½ teaspoon, and black pepper to 2 teaspoons.

To Prepare: Blend milk and egg. Combine flour and seasonings in plastic or paper bag. Shake chicken in seasoned flour. Dip chicken pieces in milk/egg mixture. Shake [illegible] time in seasoning mixture. [illegible] heavily.

To Pan Fry: Melt Crisco in [illegible] inch deep and heat to 365°. Brown chicken on all sides. Reduce heat (275°) and continue cooking until chicken is tender, about 30-40 minutes. Do not cover. Turn chicken several times during cooking. Drain on paper towels.

To Deep Fry: Prepare as above and cook in deep Crisco heated to 365° for 15 to 18 minutes. Drain on paper towels.

Severe Penalties Cut Singapore Crime Rate

By KENNETH L. WHITING

SINGAPORE (AP) — The latest crime statistics confirm that Singapore is one of the safest cities of its size in the world.

Credit alert police work and severe punishment for the continuing law and order, says Police Commissioner Tan Teck Khim.

"Murders, attacks on women and robberies are crimes of violence which hold many cities in fear, and while these are now very low in numbers ... they must continue to receive our priority attention," Tan told a recent graduating class at the police academy.

More non-violent crime, which carries less rigorous punishment, increased the overall crime rate last year. However, Tan said the 1976 crime rate was the lowest in two decades for this city of 2.2 million and among the lowest in the world for cities of comparable size and population.

Lawyers say Singapore is safe because the cops are capable and the courts efficient. Others observe it's relatively hard for a lawbreaker to hide in an island state and that mugging and other street crimes are not part of the local scene.

Death on the gallows may be ordered for four categories of crime: murder, kidnapping, use or attempted use of guns and drug trafficking. Twelve persons were sentenced to hang last year.

A longer list of offenses carries prison terms, as is customary elsewhere. Unlike in most countries, systematic beatings face those convicted of almost 30 crimes, in addition to a stretch in jail.

Pushers of an ounce or more of morphine or a half-ounce or more of heroin may be hanged. Those dealing in lesser amounts of the two drugs face 20 years and 15 lashes from a cane known as the "rotan," which can leave scars for life.

Convicted armed robbers get at least 10 lashes in addition to a prison term. Six lashes plus prison punish those who possess a firearm, knife or brass knuckles.

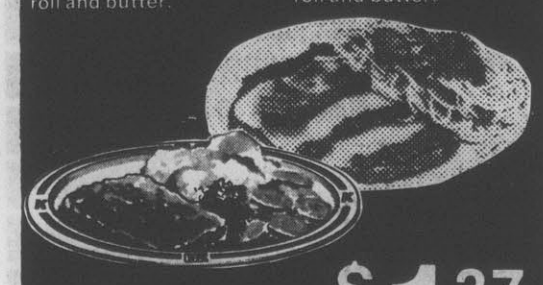

Vandalism, which can include writing on public walls, may draw three strokes, which might explain the lack of graffiti here.

Females, those sentenced to death and prisoners older than 50 are not beaten.

In addition to civil crimes, members of the armed forces found guilty of "aggravated disciplinary barrack offenses" may get a maximum of 12 lashes. The offenses include mutiny, escape and gross misconduct and insubordination.

Prisoners must be medically fit to be beaten and a doctor is always present, authorities said. Beatings are stopped on medical advice if it appears the convict can take no more and a written report is sent to the court.

CLUB PINES... Charming new Williamsburg offers tastefully decorated formal living and dining areas with distinctive trim and molding. In addition to the cheerful kitchen with a roomy breakfast nook and bay window, downstairs there is a cozy family room with fireplace. French doors open onto the treated deck outside. The master bedroom suite and private bath are on the first floor while three bedrooms and a playroom/study are upstairs. $69,500.

CONVENIENT LOCATION... The typical "ranch home" appearance is deceiving, for the floor plan inside is unique and interesting. The large sunken den provides a perfect setting for family entertainment with a fireplace and sliding glass doors onto the outside patio. Step-saver kitchen is well equipped including refrigerator plus a large breakfast area. Located in a desirable neighborhood, this immaculate home features 3 bedrooms, 2 baths, carport with storage area and economical heat pump. $45,200.

BROOK VALLEY... Pleasing decor enhances the livability of this home located on the golf course. Maximum privacy is the result of excellent planning with all 4 bedrooms situated in a suite arrangement located on one side of the double foyer. For formal entertaining, there is a large living room with separate formal dining area. The family room is conveniently located just off the kitchen and provides 2 outside entrances including an exit to the double garage. $78,000

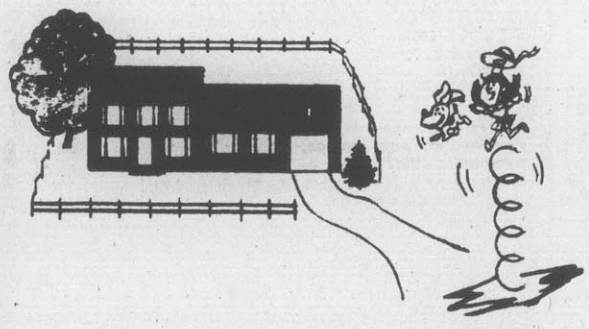

CHERRY OAKS... Three bedroom rustic design features an extra large family room with beams and fireplace. Situated on a corner wooded lot, there is plenty of room for the children to roam outside as well as inside, with the spacious floor plan you'll find here. Including separate living and dining rooms, family sized kitchen with breakfast area, 2½ baths, and double garage. This home is most pleasing to the eye! You'll appreciate the low average utilities provided by the economical heat pump, too. $62,900

KINGSBROOK... Attractive new home under construction in this desirable area will be completed soon. With its French influence and rich decor, this design will appeal to the most selective buyer. You'll appreciate the large formal areas as well as 3 large bedrooms and 2 full ceramic baths. $64,900.

Scenes Around Fishing Villages

Text and Photographs By Jerry Raynor

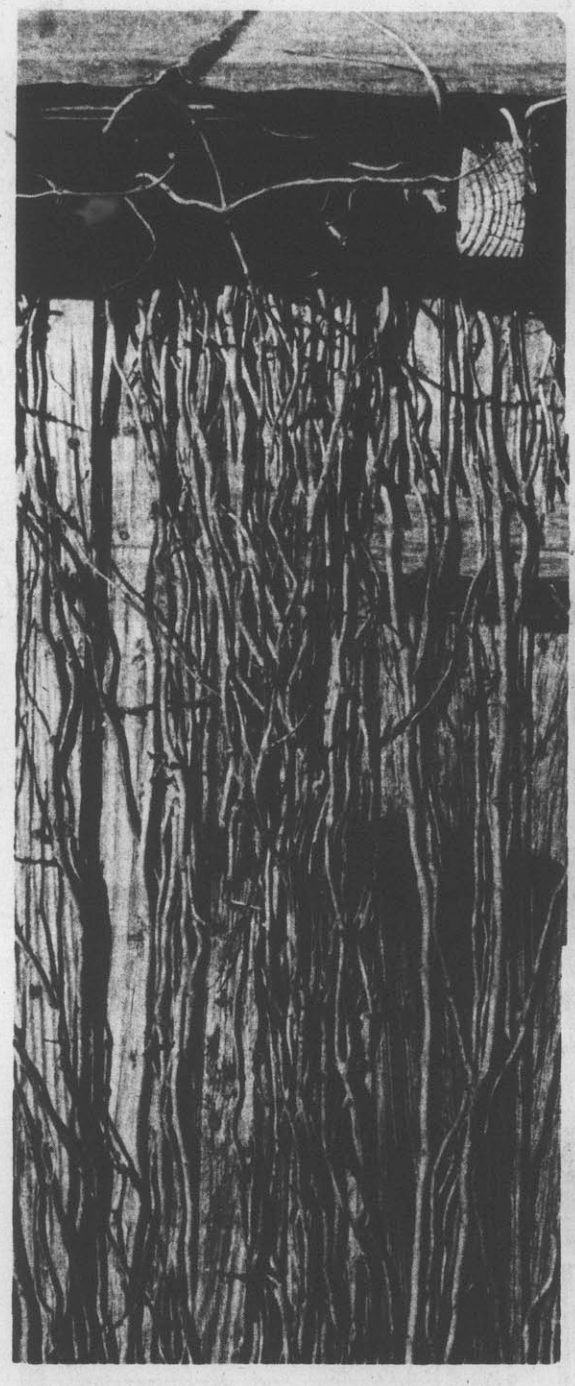

Around the shores and along the waterways of numerous fishing villages of coastal North Carolina, details common to these places stand out clearly in the first warm days of spring before the new growth of green arrives.

Sharp, deep shadows are cast by the sun falling across the angles of wood and tin-sheathed buildings. Crumpled tin, discarded from a repaired building, is like folded metal sculpture; and encroaching leafless vines crowd each other for a toehold on weathered wooden walls.

The casual perfection of knots tied in rope is an art form, a flower in rough hemp; and small boats beached for the winter rock gently from the motion of the water.

Here and there, an abandoned building or pier slowly decays, littering water and shore line with debris, a contrast to areas of more ordered architecture.

These are but a handful of scenes that make these villages places that attract artists, photographers and travelers.

General Motors Prexy Almost Settled For Less

By JEFFERY L. SHELER

DETROIT (UPI) — One of the world's most powerful businessmen enjoys telling how — as a slothful youth in the 1930's — he nearly settled for the meager lot of a parttime "ice jockey" in Chicago.

"Most of the winters I loafed around the house, living on the money I had made during the summer," said Thomas A. Murphy of the three years he worked at a city ice house.

Then, at the urging of a co-worker, he enrolled in college and later landed a job as a bookkeeper with a growing auto manufacturing firm.

Now, from behind a large, cluttered desk in a cavernous Detroit office building, the strapping 62-year-old Irishman directs a multi-billion dollar industrial empire called General Motors.

Murphy and his wife, who have three grown children, live in the Detroit suburb of Bloomfield Hills and maintain an apartment in New York. His salary for 1976 was $950,000. His 1977 salary will be made public shortly before GM's annual meeting in May.

In an interview with UPI, the chairman of GM's board of directors depicted that empire and the automotive industry it embraces as "healthy and strong" but facing challenges of unparalleled proportion.

"If there ever was any concern over the ongoing viability of the automobile industry," Murphy said, "the events of the last five years have had to dispel it.

"All the things that were so upsetting to our national well-being, Vietnam, Watergate and its aftermath, the Arab oil embargo ... I'd say the industry came through with flying colors and, as a matter of fact, really put it together and helped this country come back economically."

Today, Murphy said the industry faces serious challenges from increasing pressures of government regulation and a rapidly changing world energy picture.

"Individual transportation is a part of the fabric of America, and its going to stay that way. I'm not saying it's always going to be exactly as it is now.

"Two hundred years ago you would never have envisioned gasoline-powered vehicles taking people around the way they do today. But we have a system that allows people to make their own selection and determine their own fates. If we preserve that system, and not try to mastermind things and add a lot of constraints to the market process, new technologies will come forward."

Murphy said while he is not convinced the world's petroleum supplies are as near depletion as some federal officials predict, "obviously, at some point, liquid petroleum is going to be exhausted.

"But there are other supplies of energy — coal in unbelievable amounts, nuclear power — and to sit here and not move forward on some of these technologies is a frustration.

"We can't sit around as we did for five years and debate whether the Alaska pipeline is going to desecrate the environment and interfere with the sex life of the caribou. We're going to have to get on with the game."

Murphy predicted within 10 years, battery-powered vehicles will be traveling streets and highways "in fairly good number."

"What's necessary now is a breakthrough in battery technology so that you can store enough energy to give the vehicle the range and performance motorists require. Right now, they are too heavy and too expensive, relatively.

"But if the cost of energy in this country is allowed to move up in line with world energy costs, then some of these other things will become economically viable.

"But to sit here and have the government hold down the price of energy artificially, you don't generate new supplies. You will have low prices but suddenly there will be no availability."

Murphy views most government regulation of the auto industry as burdensome, counter-productive and, in most cases, overzealous. The Carter administration, he said, is no more or less to blame than past administrations.

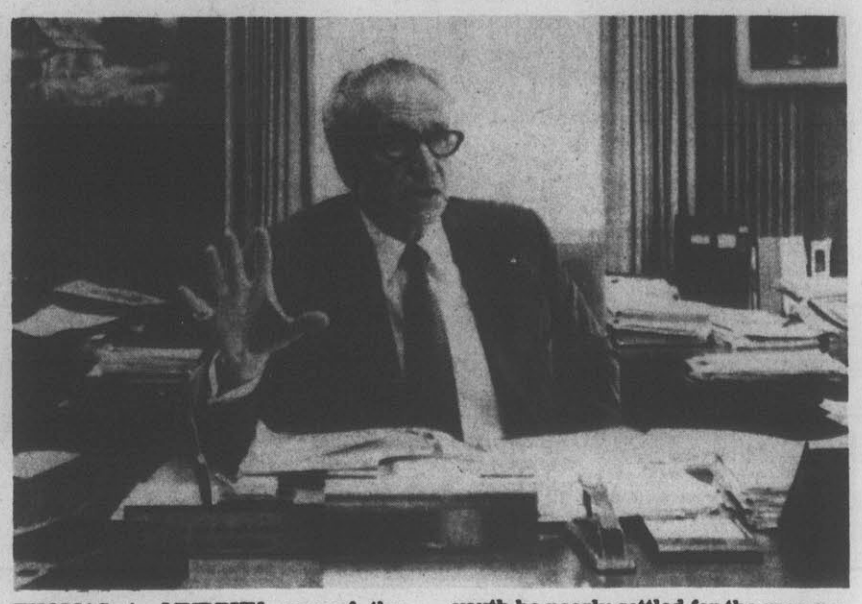

"Under our regulatory system we tend to put people into place, very dedicated people who have a tendency to make life extremely difficult for whatever industry they are watching.

"I think we have to take a hard look at that system and weigh what we are trying to accomplish with the costs involved. I think President Carter understands this and is trying to do something to correct the large number of regulations that have been creeping into the American scene for some time."

Government regulation, to some extent, is to blame for the growing share of the U.S. auto market won by Japanese and European car maufacturers, Murphy said.

"The game is rigged in their favor. They don't operate under the same cost handicaps we do with concerns over desecrating the environment."

"Personally, I don't understand why people would buy a foreign car if they can find a car of equivalent or greater value produced in America. After all, those American-built cars create jobs and economic progress for all of America."

Reluctant Prodigy Beating The Drums For Double Bass Artistry

By GLENNE CURRIE
UPI Lively Arts Editor

NEW YORK (UPI) — Whether you call it contrabass, bass violin, string bass, bass, or double bass, you may not think of it as a solo concert instrument.

James van Demark, who has been playing the double bass since he was 14 and teaching it since he was 15 (he now is 25), hopes to change that.

He has had many solo appearances with symphony and chamber orchestras in this country and Canada, played with the Cleveland Quartet last year in London (where they recorded Schubert's "Trout" quintet with pianist Alfred Brendel), and made his New York recital debut March 5 at Alice Tully Hall with his regular accompanist Robert Spillman and basso Thomas Paul.

Van Demark was a reluctant prodigy.

He got started on the instrument back home in Owatonna, Minn., at age 14 because "the authorities thought it would be a good idea to keep me off the streets."

Eighteen months later he was teaching the instrument at the Owatonna High School and playing solo with the Minneapolis Symphony. At 17 he accepted an invitation to be the principal double bass with the Hamilton (Ont.) Symphony because it meant he could enter McMaster University there "without finishing high school."

At 23 he joined the string faculty of the Eastman School of Music of the University of Rochester, N.Y. In 1977 High Fidelity magazine named him one of its Young Artists of the Year. Last Jan. 7 he capped his career by marrying Amy Blum, a music therapist. Later this year he will tour the country with Andre Watts playing the "Trout" quintet as part of Watt's year-long concert series marking the 150th anniversary of Schubert's death.

Van Demark is voluble on the subject of the double bass. He admits it's been out of favor as a solo instrument, but blames this partly on poor standards of playing till recently. He also notes that, "We've had a few great performers — like Koussevitsky — but we've never had a revolutionary, like Paganini was for the violin."

When the double bass first appeared in the orchestra it was used simply to "double" the viola parts.

"Domenico Dragonetti was the first great double bass virtuoso," Van Demark said in a recent interview, in his best classroom manner, "and Beethoven wrote the double bass passages in the 7th and 9th symphonies with Dragonetti in mind. The next virtuoso was Bottesini, a close friend of Verdi's, who also was a conductor — he conducted the premiere of 'Aida.'

"Then came Koussevitsky, at his height as a performer about 1900-1910. But he quit playing when he started conducting. Then there was a lapse until Gary Karr, with whom I studied" — and with whom he has played in concert, incidentally.

"There's been a pot-pourri of playing styles and standards — most of them rather low," Van Demark said. "This I hope is changing.

"There's a tremendous amount of works for the double bass today. There have been hundreds of compositions in the past few years. This year I'm getting three or four new works."

One of the new works was Joseph Schwantner's "Gossamer Song" for double bass and piano, which had its premiere at the March 5 concert. That program also included music by Boccherini, Hindemith, Schubert, Chopin and Gliere, and an arrangement of Mozart's comic aria "Per questa bella mano," in which the double bass parodies the lovesick singer.

"I think composers are finding the double bass something new and exciting to write for ... its tonal possibilities," Van Demark said. "The instrument hasn't changed, but techniques have improved vastly and the potential is now being realized."

"Playing the bass doesn't need any Herculean exertion," he emphasized. "With a relaxed depression of the strings you can float as flexibly as a violinist. Beginners have the idea that with such a large instrument you have to use a lot of force on the strings, and we have to get them out of the habit before they make good players."

"Owatonna is a town of only 13,000, but it has a fabulous music system," he said, "and strangely at least five good bassists have emerged from there in the past five years. Krueger was extremely important to me. I was very fortunate to be exposed to a great musician when I was very young.

"I got a local reputation after playing with the Minneapolis Symphony only 18 months after starting, and I then turned to teaching."

Van Demark's family is musical — "we all play the piano more or less" — but when his sister, who has played piano with the Minneapolis Symphony, tried to teach him at age 7 he gave up after two weeks.

He got back to music at age 14 when he was on the way to becoming a juvenile delinquent.

"I wanted to join the high school orchestra and I was told the double bass was the easiest instrument to play. Boy, was that a misconception! But I fell in love with it right off the bat."

Dogs Trained To Aid The Deaf

WASHINGTON (AP) — Hearing-ear dogs are now offering this country's 1.8 million deaf people the same kind of independence that seeing-eye dogs have offered the blind, reports the National Geographic Society.

The American Humane Association in Denver has already sent 25 dogs to the homes of deaf people across the country and 20 more are undergoing training, says Robert White, program director.

White says that dogs used as sentries of sound have ranged from a mixed dachshund to a full-blooded golden retriever. Size doesn't matter since the dogs aren't used to guide their masters, he adds.

Training, which can run as long as five months, costs about $1,800. The dog first learns to obey simple commands, then develops a sensitivity to certain sounds. To alert their masters, the dogs run to the source of sound, then to their masters and back to the source.

Frontier Town Is Re-Created

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — More than 200 historic artifacts, documents and original graphics are used to re-create the Town of Kansas during the 1860s in "Frontier Community," the newest permanent exhibit at the Kansas City Museum of History and Science.

During that era, the city was a thriving river port and a pioneer outfitting point.

Seek Coordinate Longevity Study

LAWRENCE, Kan. (AP) — Soviet anthropologists were at the University of Kansas here recently, laying the groundwork for an information exchange program between the Soviet Union and the United States.

The program would allow aging and longevity researchers in both countries to coordinate their efforts and to standardize methods of measurement and investigation.

The Soviet research team, composed of about 40 investigators, has already received funding for the project from its government. The U.S. team has still to obtain a grant from an institute of aging before the program can start.

PUBLIC MEETING

RALEIGH — N.C. Dept. of Transportation officials will hold a public information meeting April 11 in Hatteras to discuss plans and development concepts for State operated Billy Mitchell Airport at Hatteras and Ocracoke Island Airport.

Cattle Testing Tree-Bark Feed

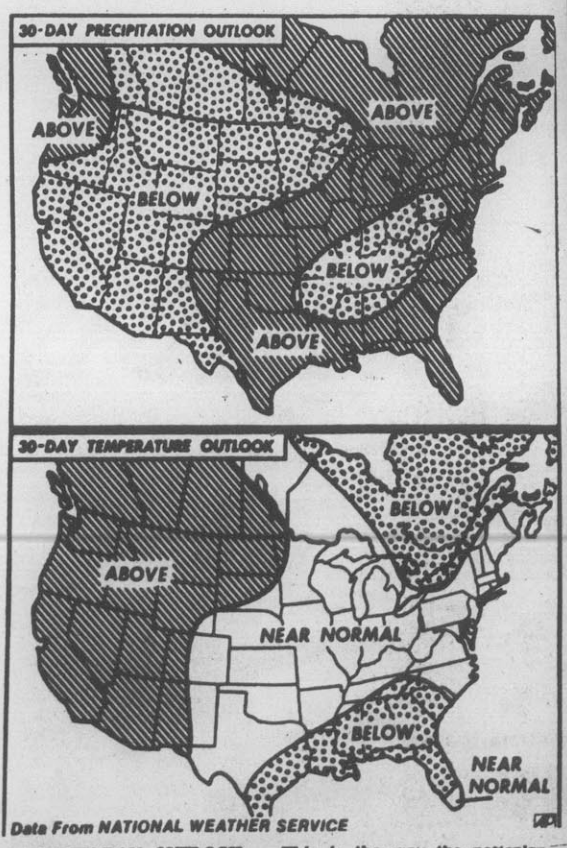

McGREGOR, Minn. (AP) — A study on six northern Minnesota farms indicates that ground-up tree bark can be fed to cattle.

John Cox, one of the directors of the project, believes tree bark could be economical, especially in periods of drought when hay prices are high.

The Minnesota project used bark from aspen trees, obtained at a paper mill. The mixture fed to cattle was 60 percent bark, 12 percent corn, 10 percent soybean meal and 10 percent alfalfa meal, plus vitamins and other supplements.

Cox said weight gains by bark-fed cattle were excellent. The cattle got low-grade hay along with the bark mixture.

Wisconsin researchers first proposed the use of ground-up wood in cattle feed 20 years ago. The Minnesota project was one of the first aimed at finding out if it was commercially feasible.

It Really Works!

An open and shut case for heating your home with wood

Considering the cost of oil, gas and electric heat these days, it's easy to see why hundreds of thousands of homeowners across North America have turned to wood heating.

It's more economical (it can trim 50% or more off your heating bill). Wood smells and sounds as good as it burns. And it's one form of energy that's still growing.

But what do you burn wood in to get the most heat out of it? We'd like to suggest a Fisher Stove.

The Fisher's unique two-step combustion chamber recirculates wood gases back into the flames, resulting in more heat and fewer ashes. Its patented spin draft controls and virtually airtight construction mean you can regulate how much heat it puts out. And because it's made from carefully welded, heavy plate steel, it will give you years of remarkable heating efficiency.

We have a variety of Fisher Stove models to choose from. So come in soon and find out what makes a Fisher a Fisher.

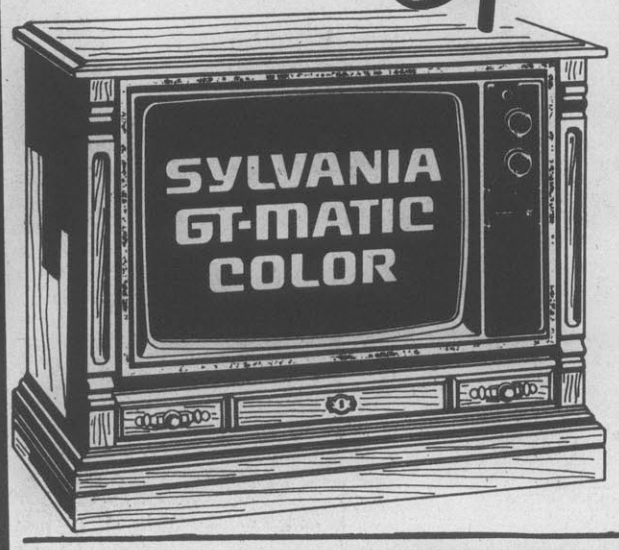

Case closed.

Public Defender: Lawyer Of Last Resort For Poor

By SID MOODY
AP Newsfeatures Writer

SOMERVILLE, N.J. (AP) — Unlike most lawyers — or any professional men for that matter — John Trombadore has no framed diplomas on his office wall.

Instead, there is a print of a painting by Peter Breughel of medieval countrymen carousing in one of those Flemish mob scenes.

"I really like Breughel," says Trombadore. "He basically represents the people I deal with — the peasants." Peasants in trouble.

John Trombadore is the public defender for Somerset County, a suburban-industrial area 35 miles west of New York City. He is the lawyer of last resort for those who cannot afford their own counsel, a clientele that is often bewildered, ignorant; society's victims and victimizers, all, however, equal before the law. Or as equal as Trombadore can make them.

Defending the downtrodden is an obligation of American justice strengthened by U.S. Supreme Court decisions such as the landmark Gideon case. As may be expected, the office of public defender does not invariably attract the best legal minds.

"The civil service has the reputation as a repository for the unskilled and unmotivated," says Trombadore. "It is not always true."

No. Sometimes there are John Trombadores.

He makes about $50 a day as public defender, handling anyone who can walk or crawl to his office in a modern glass and pebbled concrete building of no originality near the courthouse. He charges his private clients $75 an hour.

He tolerates the imbalance out of a sense of principle. What role his upbringing as the son of an Italian immigrant might also play he declines to conjecture about. He confines his explanation to what he refers over and again as "the system."

"That is our adversary system of justice. This is going to be applied universally, or we're not going to have a system. The system envisions an acquittal of a murderer, whom many people think guilty, rather than allowing someone many think innocent going to jail. This system does not permit exceptions for dangerous persons because if you permit them, you or I might some day be billed as dangerous persons. The public defender is a necessary representative in that system."

Trombadore does not resemble a shining knight. He is 34, of so-so height, probably would have a pasta stomach if he didn't watch it and looks like an owl under a Prince Valiant hairdo.

"My basic predisposition to clothes is Levis, sweatshirt and sneakers," he says, moccasined feet on his desk.

"Before a jury I dress beyond any serious criticism, not too flashy or conservative. I don't give in entirely. I wear a bracelet, sometimes a diamond stickpin, but I've shaved moustaches and beards. It's part of a trial lawyer's obligation to his client not to let dress interfere in the jurys' minds."

He dazzled a murder trial not long ago by showing up in a celestial three-piece white suit to show the world "the prosecution wasn't beating me down."

Few trial lawyers are modest. Nor is he. They can't be. Their abilities are out there, in the well of the court, for all to see. This does not invite a retiring personality. Complete candor can, as well, be a luxury when you are trying to sway juries.

Defense of "the system" requires Trombadore to be quick, logical, opportunistic, sly — just as it does of his adversary, the prosecutor. Based on how the jury assesses those two competing performances, they render their verdict, and justice, it is hoped, is done.

That he once worked in the Somerset County prosecutor's office is not a paradox to Trombadore. The system demands the very best from both sides.

"This office has a dual obligation," says the public defender. "If there's obvious guilt, see that the case is resolved expeditiously. If not, see that the defendant gets his rights observed and a prompt trial."

Trombadore not long back spent a year and a half preparing the defense and trying the case of a ghetto black charged with blowing away a white patron with a sawed off shotgun in a bar holdup. There were numerous pretrial hearings, motions and appeals. The public defender, with one investigator compared to a staff of 50 for the prosecutor, conducted what interviews it could.

"Patty Hearst couldn't have been better represented," said the prosecutor when it was all over.

If it is comforting to know the system can attract such advocates, it is also perhaps worthy of notice as to how they got there.

Trombadore's father, an immigrant from Sicily, became a track supervisor for the Lehigh Railroad at age 17, which kept him employed during the Depression and enabled him to raise a brood of four sons and two daughters besides helping support friends and other relatives. But from 12 on, Trombadore worked after school at a print shop his father owned.

Summers he also worked at the sewage plant in his native Manville, a neighboring factory town. "I learned a lot about the internal digestive systems of Manville. The second summer I pulled a five-month fetus out of the machinery. It was a critical point in my maturation.

"What saved me was books. I used to read all the time. My brother was majoring in philosophy, and there were a lot of his books around."

He entered Rutgers, majoring in philosophy, and decided against a doctorate and teaching career "because of what I'd seen of academic politics and what professors made." So he went to Rutgers law because he couldn't afford Yale or the University of Pennsylvania.

"In law school I was very much interested in where the action was, trial work. It's the same reason a doctor becomes a surgeon instead of sitting in an office dispensing pills. To me a lawyer is someone who goes into court."

He ended up in the prosecutor's office. But it was becoming a full time job and he wanted some time for private practice. "So I took the public defender's job. It was happenstance.

"But at the same time I can remember being the sole voice for a more liberal attitude towards drugs. I thought it unreasonable to be prosecuting people who weren't worse than drinkers, labeling people criminals who weren't. The day after Kent State, I was in the detective room and deplored it. A detective agreed it was a great shame. He said they should have used machine guns.

"I thought it would be very hard to shift to the other side, but I found it very easy. Just take a professional stance. I think I prosecuted with as much vigor as I defend.

"That murder case I spent 18 months on cried out for the way our office handled it, the time spent. Not every murder case through here gets that kind of treatment. In cases where the the issues are standard, one-tenth of the time would have been deemed competent. I could have turned that way, but it would have been like a doctor walking away from a dying patient. You take an oath, after all. And there is a sense of self worth in doing a job to the best of your ability. I felt I had no choice."

Trombadore would never say for publication whether he thought the murder defendant was innocent or not. He always carefully used the term "presumed innocent" during the trial.

"Each of you has an obligation to the presumption of innocence," he told the jury in his summation. "For the last 18 months (my client) has been presumed innocent. Not because I'm his lawyer, but because the Constitution of the United States says it, because the Constitution of New Jersey says it. The burden rests on this, the prosecutor's table, not in any way at the other table (his). That's the cornerstone of the system, of our society."

The jury nonetheless found Trombadore's client guilty. Trombadore helped initiate a mandatory appeal. Some months later the prosecutor who opposed him in the case was musing.

"You know, John's really mad at that guy."

Why?

"All that work and he never thanked him."

Trombadore said no, he wasn't really mad. "The system" never said it had to thank you.

CATHEDRAL CEILINGS, DECKS BENEFIT PLAN

ABUNDANCE OF WINDOWS CREATES AIRY DESIGN

By Jerry Bishop

Generously supplied with cathedral ceilings and gable end windows, the Idlewild, a two level contemporary, chooses spacious living areas and sleeping areas that enjoy deck access.

Notable in the up-to-the minute facade the front sun deck and the sizable amounts of glass that carry light to the interior. Inside, the illusion of space is expressed by the high ceilings and profusion of windows. But space is more than an illusion, since the design provides a 23-ft. family room, a 19-ft. living room, and a 17-ft. master bedroom with walk-in closet and deck.

Entry is off the living room, where the split level arrangement allows access to the bedrooms above or to the family room a few steps below. On the mail level, the living room, formal dining room, and efficient kitchen are set to host parties, while the family room is geared to everyday activity.

Sliding glass doors link family room with patio. Other bonuses on this level include two storage closets, a powder room with closet, and a laundry center. Entry to the double garage is also a plus.

Bedrooms are grouped on the upper level, with natural zoning assuring quiet. The well-planned master bedroom offers a walk-in closet, private bath, vanity built into the room, and access to a private deck. At front, the second bedroom and sitting room also merit sliding glass doors to the deck.

Protect Possessions In Moves

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

Almost half the complaints received by the Interstate Commerce Commission about moving every year concern lost or damaged goods and you will have to learn how to protect your possessions if you want to prevent trouble.

Movers are not liable for the full value of lost or damaged goods unless you buy extra coverage; the normal liability is only 60 cents per pound per article.

Suppose, for example, you ship a four-pound lamp which was bought a year ago for $20 and has a current value of $18. If the lamp is not packed in a container, the mover's liability is only $2.40. (If the lamp is included in a container, either alone or with other items, liability is based on total weight of the full container.)

"It is our normal recommendation," says the Interstate Commerce Commission, "that unless you are being fully reimbursed by your employer or other source for any losses or damages, you do not ship your goods at the minimum responsibility..."

The bill of lading you get when the driver picks up your furniture and other items will include a valuation statement. If you want minimum coverage, you must write the words "60 cents per pound per article" in the appropriate place and sign your name.

If you want further protection, you have one of two options. You can choose not to declare any value at all and not sign the valuation statement. In this case, the mover's liability is automatically set at $1.25 times the weight of the entire shipment. If your goods weigh 4,000 pounds, the mover's liability is $5,000. (Since the amount of liability is based on total shipment weight, you are not limited to recovering only $1.25 times the weight of any individual article.)

You also can choose to list a specific valuation higher than the $1.25-per-pound limit. You may, for example, list your 4,000 pounds of possesions as being worth $8,000. In this case, you must write the amount of your estimate and sign your name on the bill of lading.

The extra coverage — which costs 50 cents per $100 of value — means you will be reimbursed for losses caused by an act of God — like a storm — and in cases where goods you pack yourself are broken or damaged. (Without the extra coverage, you would have to prove negligence by the mover.)

You generally will be reimbursed only for the market value of an item — not its purchase or replacement price. When a damaged item can be repaired, the mover's liability generally is limited either to repair costs or the depreciated value of item, whichever is less. And a mover who damages one item in a set is liable for that item only.

Most movers disclaim responsibility for items of extraordinary value — jewelry, antiques, etc. — unless these things are specificially listed on the face of the bill of lading.

Movers and government officials agree that consumers should not ship items of unusual value. "Any items you have that are absolutely irreplaceable, keep those items in your possession," said Ray Atherton, head of the ICC's Household Goods branch.

Large Hole For Tree Root Ball

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (UPI) — If your spring landscaping plans include planting trees, be sure you dig big enough holes.

Larry Voss, who cares for trees at the Whitaker Park visitor center at a tobacco company here, says too small a hole can kill a tree. He suggests one twice the diameter of the root ball. His other tips:

— Loosen soil in the base of hole and mix in organic material such as peat moss or well-decayed cow manure and two cups of fertilizer such as 5-10-5.

— Build up a small mound of soil in the center of the hole, with dirt halfway up the sides of the root ball to support the tree and allow for settling.

— Cut away the burlap on the trunk, saturate the tree, fill the remainder of the hole with soil, tamp it lightly and apply a heavy mulch of decayed sawdust or wood chips.

— Pile about eight inches of mulch shaped like a saucer around the base of the tree to help retain moisture that falls.

— Run three guy wires through lengths of rubber hose to protect the tree bark and fix them firmly in the soil to keep the tree from being blown or knocked over.

— To protect against rodent damage, severe frost, sun scald and insects, wrap the trunk from the base to the first branches and leave the wrapping in place for a year.

— The tree should then be pruned back to keep energy from being diverted to the top and short-changing the root system.

Voss says new trees need water at least once weekly in dry weather, and food in the fall after the leaves fall or whenever the trees are dormant.

'Dream House' For Disabled

SEATTLE (AP) — Like most couples, John and Margaret Eickhoff had ideas for a dream house. But their dreams were a little different from most — no steps, no thresholds, wide doorways and sinks with open access for a wheelchair.

It took four years of looking and planning, frustrating delays from the Veterans Administration, and $108,000, but now the couple is getting a home that will allow Eickhoff, a paraplegic, more independence.

The two-bedroom, 1,900-square-foot house was an "extreme challenge," said architect Dick Keller.

The couple said that after finding there were no suitable existing homes on the market, they talked to new-home builders about modifying stock house plans.

Most didn't want to be bothered or said it would cost too much to build a house with flat entries, no thresholds and other features.

They finally hired their own architect and builder and started from the beginning.

Their new home is absolutely level, from the street through the garage and out to the family-room patio. Instead of thresholds, the builder installed commercial-type weatherstripping which pops into doors when they are open.

Electrical switches and outlets and all cabinets are a few inches lower than standard. All doorways are at least 3 feet wide, floors are specially designed to resist the extra wear of wheelchairs, canes and crutches, and sinks have open access.

A special therapy room has a sauna, a therapeutic pool and a large shower for wheelchair access.

It may sound institutional, but the house was designed to be light and airy, opening up onto the sixth green of an adjacent golf course and featuring an interior atrium with sliding glass doors for easy access.

The Eickhoffs took advantage of a Veterans Administration $25,000 housing allowance for handicapped veterans — but not without going through extensive red tape.

The VA took eight months to approve the plans after hassles over design, bonding the builder and the home, they said. That included time for resubmittal because the agency lost a set of the house plans.

For two winters now — unusually cold winters in a cold area — the Edneys have been keeping down their energy costs by teaming solar-heated water with a heat pump.

Since David Edney, a 32-year-old engineer, sells solar equipment and knew he could get parts at wholesale prices, it was natural for him to decide on using a solar energy collector system when building a new house in blizzardy Belfast, N.Y., 60 miles south of Buffalo. It's a 1,128-square-foot ranch with a small basement and an attached garage and shop. There are 6 inches of fiber glass insulation sandwiched between 5-8ths-inch plywood and a combination of gypsum board and pine boards; an extra strong nearly flat roof on the theory that it holds an insulating load of snow; and 6 inches of insulation in the ceiling. The garage-shop shields the house from north winds, grape vines ward off the hot western sun in summer.

A 280-square-foot solar energy collector leans against the south walls, angled at 58 degrees from the horizontal to get maximum sun in November and February. It supplies solar-heated water for a 1,500-gallon underground storage tank. A York heat pump extracts its heat and supplies it to a forced-air system. Edney says the big advantage of this system is that water alone must be 100 degrees to heat air, but the pump can pull heat from water that is down to 50 degrees. The solar-assisted pump supplies most of the Edneys' heat and, by reversing the system, provides air conditioning for the few weeks a year it is needed.

When the solar-heated water goes above 85 degrees, it is pumped directly to a radiator installed in the hot-air duct. If the stored water goes below 45 degrees (which happened only 9 or 10 days throughout the winter), the Edneys use their wood-burning stove, which heats a water-filled coil to supplement the storage tank and draws its combustion air from the outside rather than wasting the home's heated air.

The heating system cost $4,600 for the parts, most at wholesale. Edney estimates that a similar setup today, including installation, would run about $8,000. Does it pay? The Edneys say that, averaging the past two winters, both very cold, 55 percent of their home's heat was supplied by the solar-assisted heat pump, 36 percent by solar-heated water alone and 9 percent by the stove. Their total electric bill for the calendar year was only $146! They didn't have to pay for wood because they were able to get it from their own property.

"Are you sure," Edney was asked, "about that $146? It sounds rather small for an area where utility rates are fairly high."

"I've checked our bills over and over again and that's the exact figure," he answered.

Here's the Answer

Q. — We have a living room table with a marble top. Recently, while moving it to another room during a rearrangement of the furniture, the top, which was not attached, dropped and split into two pieces. It is a kind of jagged split running every which way across the top. Is there any way we can glue this together without taking it to a marble shop? If so, can you advise what kind of glue to use? Might we spoil the top?

A. — You can probably make the repair yourself at a minimum cost. There is little or no danger that you will do any more damage than already has been done, unless you drop one of the pieces again. The worst that can happen is that you might not be satisfied with the result, in which case you will have to take it to a professional. But if you are very careful, the chances are you can do a passable job. Make sure the broken edges are clean and dry. Use a two-part epoxy adhesive, the kind which must be mixed just before applying. Apply the mixture to both surfaces according to the directions on the containers. To be sure that none of the combined adhesive-hardener spills over to the top of the marble, work very carefully with a small spreader, such as a toothpick. Apply the mixture in thin layers and join the two parts immediately, holding them together with clamps, tapes, rubber bands or anything else that will suit the size and shape of the marble top. Quickly wipe off any mixture that may be squeezed out of the joint. The longer it stays there, the harder it will be to remove. A little denatured alcohol on a clean cloth should be kept handy for just this purpose. After a couple of days, examine the repair. If there is a glue line that is very visible, go to a marble shop and buy some polish for rubbing over the glue line. To get the right kind of polish, tell the dealer how you plan to use it.

Q. — I see a lot of conflicting comments about how much insulation should be placed in attic floors and floors above cold spaces. Can you give me some figures?

A. — Insulation is rated by R numbers. The R stands for resistance to heat loss and heat gain. You have seen differences in recommended R numbers because the recommendations have changed several times in recent years and because there are different figures for different locales. If your attic floor is not insulated at all, R-30 or R-38 is recommended for cold climates. R numbers are additive, so that two pieces of R-19 insulation equal R-38, and so on. In floors above cold spaces, R-19 is recommended for houses in the northern half of the United States and for homes in the southern half that are heated by oil or electricity. Otherwise, use at least R-11.

(Where and how to insulate are detailed in Andy Lang's booklets, "Save Money by Insulating," available by sending 35 cents and a long, STAMPED, self-addressed envelope to Know-How, P.O. Box 477, Huntington, N.Y. 11743. Questions of general interest will be answered in the column. Individual correspondence cannot be undertaken.)

Tornado Monitors Keep Watch From Kansas City

EDITOR'S NOTE — Night and day in a government office in Kansas City, meteorologists monitor upper-air conditions, pilot reports, and radar and satellite data in search of nature's strongest, most unpredictable form of fury: the tornado.

By SCOTT KRAFT
Associated Press Writer

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — The rain was tapping harmlessly on Jim Clark's home in west central Missouri that afternoon last May.

In Kansas City the night before, the country's top tornado forecasters agreed that a storm moving toward Missouri was classic tornado weather: Moist air near the ground, dry air above and a wind disturbance moving through the upper atmosphere.

Now they were trying to predict when and where the atmosphere's least predictable and strongest storm would drop from the swirling clouds. They thought late afternoon. They were wrong.

The first funnel landed on the Kansas-Missouri border at midday and left a 28-mile path of twisted trees and mangled fences about 80 miles west of Clark's home in Sedalia. A tornado watch, indicating weather conditions were prime for tornadoes, was issued for the rest of western Missouri.

Two hours later, meteorologists in the National Severe Storms Forecast Center squinted to see a tiny, hooked cloud on the radar screen. It was heading for Sedalia. They issued a warning, meaning a tornado had been sighted.

Looking out a window, Jim Clark saw the "churning, yellow mass" tear across a nearby golf course. He and his wife huddled in a closet, their young daughter between them.

Seconds later, cool rain was falling on them: their home had been tossed from its foundation and splintered. Except for a few scratches, they were unharmed.

That twister was one of 30 spawned by the same spring storm moving across the Midwest that day. Three persons died, dozens were injured and more than 2,000, like the Clarks, were left homeless by the funnels' 100-to-200-mph winds.

The scene was repeated often across the United States in 1977 — 850 tornadoes were spotted on the ground. And that was fairly calm, according to Allen Pearson, who heads the National Weather Service's division known as the severe storms center.

Pearson predicts 1978 "will not be as gentle," a forecast based on both his intuition and the activity of the strong westerly winds often called the jet stream. Those winds steer weather systems in the Western Hemisphere.

In 1977, they brought abnormally warm, moist air north to Alaska and cold, dry Canadian air south through the Midwest. This year, meteorologists say, the jet stream generally lies across the southern half of the country.

The 1978 tornado season already has begun. In Florida, preliminary reports indicate 20 tornadoes were sighted in January — that state's record for the month. During February, March and April, tornadoes generally move through Alabama, Georgia and Mississippi and strike Texas, Oklahoma and Kansas in June and July. In the fall, they move south across the Midwest.

If they are wrong too often, forecasters know their credibility may be impaired and their warnings ignored. But the thought of a twister terrorizing unsuspecting residents is stronger than the worry about credibility. "We have to sacrifice something in accuracy in order to save lives," says Pearson, a veteran of many decisions.

The tough ones, he says, involve possible tornado weather in New England, where tornadoes are rare.

"One watch might cover 10 million to 15 million people. You want to be right or you catch a certain amount of flak. We sweat those."

Pearson has been head of the center for 13 years but he's never seen a tornado — a distinction the 52-year-old forecaster seems to relish.

"The best meteorologists are simply good scientists who have a natural instinct for weather forecasting," he says. "They often have a tremendous recall of previous weather sightings and the circumstances of those sightings."

Around the clock, members of Pearson's staff monitor the country's severe weather from an open room furnished with drafting tables, closed circuit television and dozens of charts. Their calculations are based on satellite reports, upper-air profiles, radar information, pilot reports, weather data from reporting stations nationwide and a network of thousands of part-time weather spotters.

For a quarter of a century, the Commerce Department's National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration has based the country's severe storms office in Kansas City because, in Pearson's words, "It's close to the action."

Most tornadoes in the United States occur in "Tornado Alley," which extends from Texas through eastern Kansas, then southeast through the South. More tornadoes per square mile are reported in Oklahoma than any other state.

But the most devastating twisters occur in "Dixie Alley," which runs from Texas across the South. In Alabama, the average length of a tornado's path is five miles — more than twice that of Oklahoma.

And tornadoes in the South tend to be stronger than elsewhere because of the high humidity.

More persons are killed by tornadoes in the South because the twisters there most often hit in the middle of the night — a fact that baffles meteorologists.

The extent of a tornado's wrath in terms of lives and property is determined not only by strength but by what time it hits, population density and how well homes are built. More killer tornadoes — about one every five years — hit Jefferson County, Ala., which includes Birmingham, than any other county in the country. And about one in 10 tornado deaths occurs in Mississippi, where only slightly more than 3 percent of all twisters are sighted.

Despite technological advances in tornado forecasting, convincing the public of the menace of tornadoes remains a major problem.

An average of 100 persons die every year in tornadoes, 70 percent in areas where a t believe or didn't have any place to go," Pearson says. "Our information shows that for the most part, they don't believe."

Deforestation Problem Grave

By BARRY SCHLACHTER
Associated Press Writer

KATMANDU, Nepal (AP) — The continuing destruction of Nepal's forest lands could transform the scenic Himalayan kingdom into a barren moonscape in less than 20 years, Neapalese and foreign experts warn.

Wide-scale deforestation, causing a critical loss of topsoil through erosion, has presented one of the world's poorest and least developed countries with an environmental crisis as grave as those facing industrialized nations, they said.

Nepal's hills, once thick with teak, sal and simmel trees, are being denuded to meet an ever-growing demand for farmland and firewood, the major source of energy here. Since the late 1950s, some 4.5 million acres of forest have been cleared.

"If the Nepalese continue on the present path, they will use up all their forests within the next two decades," predicted Mervin E. Stevens, a U.S. Forest Service official temporarily assigned to manage a United Nations Food and Agriculture Organization project here.

In an interview, Prime Minister Kirta Nidhi Bista called deforestation one of Nepal's gravest domestic problems.

"We are very alarmed," he told The Associated Press. "But I think it can be controlled,"

Bista said King Birendra, who holds near absolute power in the country, is concerned with the environmental problem and has instructed that appropriate measures be taken.

But in private, Nepalese officials are less than optimistic. One forestry expert complained that the government was still allotting to farmers forest land unfit for crops.

Nepal's rapid population growth and limited flat land are forcing farmers to clear and terrace wooded hillsides, often illegally. In a country where only 15 percent of the land is suitable for growing crops, a whopping 97 percent of the population is engaged in agriculture.

The population, now about 13 million, is expanding at an annual rate of 2.6 percent. By the year 2000, it is expected to reach 24 million.

"The government wants to help the landless and save the forests," said one Nepalese official. "But it can't do both."

Aside from encroachment by farmers, the forests are also being decimated by persons in search of wood for fuel and leaves to feed Nepal's livestock, some 14 million head. Lopping or cutting of leaves kills thousands of trees every year.

Sherlock Holmes In Office Of Auditor

OLYMPIA, Wash. (AP) — With deerstalker cap and deep-bowled pipe, Sherlock Holmes keeps an eye on the Legislature.

Holmes, 56, is a senior examiner in the state auditor's office, and he led the team that audited the Legislature the last time.

"My dad wanted to call me Sherlock, but my mother wanted Oliver Wendell," said Holmes, who until he was 17 thought his name was Gordon.

He learned his real name when he read his birth certificate. His parents said they wanted to save him from school teasing, so they used his middle name.

Once he learned he was Sherlock Holmes, though, he launched into a career of investigations.

Holmes dabbled in fingerprinting and studied criminology. During World War II, he spent a few weeks with the military police classifying fingerprints.

Sometimes he playfully assumes the role of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's fictional detective, donning the distinctive cap and bringing out the long, curved pipe. He has a complete collection of Sherlock Holmes novels, many mailed to him by people who have read of him.

Naturally, there have been incidents.

Holmes was called to jury duty in a murder case, but the defense attorney exercised his right to challenge and dismissed him.

"You've probably already solved the case anyway," the lawyer said.

Once, while working in a bank, Holmes handled a new customer whose name was Daniel Boone. But he made no comment about the name, and the man was surprised.

Finally, the customer said, "That's my real name."

Holmes looked up. "Yes, I know, and my name is Sherlock Holmes."

Though he's been in state government for 23 years, Holmes is careful to carry identification with him. If he meets a new administrator, he sometimes has to prove he's for real.

"And if I have an assistant with me, you can be sure after I introduce myself, somebody will come up with, 'Sure, and I suppose this is Dr. Watson,'" he said.

Island Independence Bids Slow

By PIETER VAN BENNEKOM

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (UPI) — Less than two years ago, three small Caribbean islands had firm plans to become fully independent from Great Britain during 1977. Two others did not seem far behind.

But the expected new states have not materialized. Even the three leaders of the move to independence — St. Lucia, Dominica and St. Kitts — have been unable to set dates for their independence celebrations.

The problem is not that Britain wants to hold on to its colonies. Britain would gladly have the islands fend for themselves.

But the British Foreign and Commonwealth Office, the House of Commons in London and the islands' own constitutions require some agreement among the main political factions on the islands on independence before it can be granted.

Such agreement has been lacking. Governments and oppositions squabble over procedure. The parties now in opposition don't want their opponents to walk away with the glory of leading their nations into independence.

Since all of the islands are democracies, the oppositions have considerable stalling and delaying powers.

St. Lucia, an island of about 120,000 persons with a territory of 238 square miles, seems the farthest along the road to independence. Besides banana crops, St. Lucia has a flourishing tourist industry, two airports and it is getting an oil refinery.

Premier John Compton of the ruling United Workers Party has been to London several times for constitutional conferences along with Allan Louisy, a retired judge whose opposition St. Lucia Labor Party.

Compton's government prepared a so-called "green paper" setting out the need for independence. The document said Britain is withdrawing so much from the western hemisphere that St. Lucia must make its own arrangements with American powers like the United States.

But the opposition prepared a "green paper" of its own arguing that St. Lucia should not become independent under Compton and asking for a special referendum or a new election.

Dominica, an island of 75,000 persons, is wedged between the rich French islands of Martinique and Guadeloupe. Premier Patrick John of the ruling Dominica Labor Party and opposition leader Mary Eugenia Charles of the Dominica Freedom Party are squabbling over the kind of constitution their new nation should have — monarchy or republic.

John finally said he would accept a republic, as long as the presidency was a figurehead post. But Miss Charles said poor Dominica can't afford figurehead posts and insisted on a popularly elected strong president.

With the independence debate bogged down, the island was plunged into a 47-day strike by civil servants and John claimed to have discovered a communist plot to seize his government by force with Cuban help. The charges triggered demands for new elections and the independence timetable was set back once again.

St. Kitts: The main issue has always been the composition of the new state. St. Kitts claims the smaller islands of Anguilla and Nevis, but Anguilla rebelled against Kittian rule in 1967 and now Nevis wants out, too.

Britain doesn't want to give St. Kitts a constitution with sovereignty over Anguilla. But if St. Kitts accepts Anguilla's separation, it fears that Nevis will soon follow suit.

To delay matters more, the moving force behind independence in St. Kitts, Premier Robert Bradshaw, has been seriously ill in London for three months.

Antigua: Premier George Walter of the Progressive Labor Movement went into a new election in 1976 on an independence plank. The opposition Antigua Labor Party of Premier Vere Bird opposed independence under Walter and won.

Even though he might like to make Antigua independent, Bird cannot easily change from his campaign position that Antigua is not ready for independence. So Antigua remains a "British associated state" for now.

St. Vincent is the fifth associated state of Britain in the Eastern Caribbean. Premier Milton Cato said at one time that he planned to start moving toward independence this year. But he so far has not gone through any of the preliminary steps.

Six former British colonies have already become independent — the Bahamas, Jamaica, Trinidad-Tobago, Barbados, Guyana and Grenada — and apart from the five associated states going through the birth pains now, Britain also has five colonies left.

They are Montserrat, the Turks and Caicos Islands and the Cayman Islands, which show no interest in constitutional advancement, the British Virgin Islands where there is a movement to join the U.S. Virgin Islands, and Belize, which fears an invasion from neighboring Guatemala if it dares accept British offers of independence.

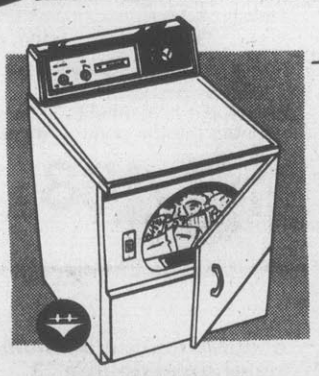

PLANS DEFERRED — Less than two years ago, three small Caribbean islands, St. Lucia, Dominica and St. Kitts, had firm plans to become fully independent from Britain in 1977. Two others — Antigua and St. Vincent — did not seem far behind; but the expected new states have not materialized. (UPI Map)

TV SHOWTIME

For Week Of April 2 - April 8

'World's Largest Indoor Country Music Show' Is Two-Hour Special

COUNTRY MUSIC STARS—Kenny Rogers and Dottie West are co-hosts and performers on "The World's Largest Indoor Country Music Show," a special to be presented Wednesday, April 5 (9-11 p.m.) on NBC-TV.

Leading country music performers, including stars of Nashville's Grand Ole Opry, will be among 100 entertainers headlining "The World's Largest Indoor Country Music Show," a two-hour special hosted by Kenny Rogers and Dottie West, airing Wednesday, April 5, 9 to 11 p.m., on NBC.

Performers appearing on the special which was taped late last month at the Pontiac Silverdome arena in Pontiac, Mich., include: Roy Acuff (dean of country music); Minnie Pearl (star of the Grand Ole Opry and queen of the country comediennes); Grandpa Jones (of "Hee Haw") and his wife, Ramona; Bill Monroe (blue grass music headliner); The Osborne Brothers (top blue grass group); Porter Wagoner (composer-performer-record producer in his first appearance on the road in two years); Little Jimmy Dickens (of the Grand Ole Opry); Don Williams; the Oak Ridge Boys; the comedy team of Lonzo and Oscar; 14-year-old Wendy Holcombe; singer-songwriter Jeanne Pruett; blind singer-guitarist Benny Dean; and harmonica virtuoso Charlie McCoy.

The concert was performed for nearly 80,000 people, and millions more will be viewing it on TV. The Silverdome audience was the largest indoor arena audience ever for a country music concert which is further proof—if proof were needed — of the dynamic and continuing growth of country music's popularity.

The telecast faithfully captures the events on stage, and there were no theatrical or electronic gimmicks — just pure country music entertainment. An added treat for TV viewers will be a glimpse backstage of the excitement and chaos which take place when 100 musicians prepare to perform.

Captain And Tennille Drop Hat And Bangs

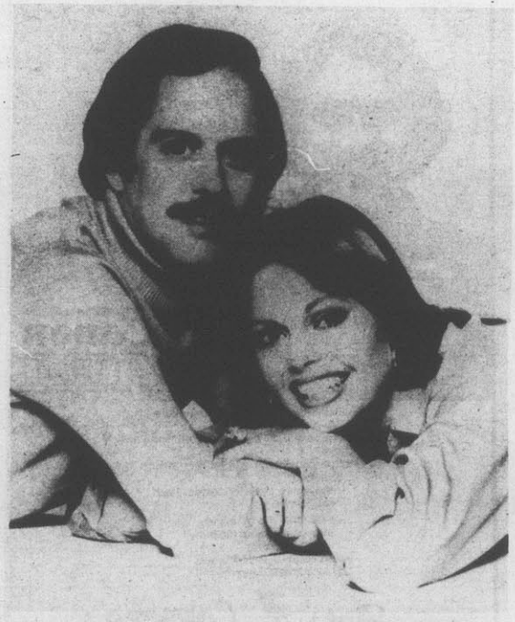

Time changes everything, so it's been said for low these many years, and so it is for The Captain and Tennille for their upcoming ABC New Orleans special that will air on Monday, April 3 (8-9 p.m.).

It is in that show that Daryl Dragon will first discard his famous trademark, his Captain's hat, and Toni will lift her hair off her forehead, evidence that the successful husband and wife team are changing with the times.

"We decided we wanted to get rid of the hat for awhile," the native-born Alabaman Toni explains. "Dick Clark (the special's producer) thinks that's going to be a big rating point," Daryl adds with that sly grin so many of the couples' fans admire.

"We did a New Orleans jazz funeral," Toni adds, "for the hat. We had one of the funkiest jazz bands you've ever heard in your life, and we went down to the levy and we had sort of a mock service for the hat and dumped it into the Mississippi River. It all ends with all of us throwing off our black hats and black arm bands and parading down the street because the hat gets buried. It was fun."

As a result, The Captain will be hatless for the second half of the special.

There always seems to be a little marching, and sometimes dancing, in the streets of New Orleans, and Daryl Dragon and Toni Tennille aren't about to miss any of the fun in "The Captain and Tennille in New Orleans," a musical variety special on Monday, April 3 (8-9 p.m.) on ABC-TV.

Hope To Host 50th Awards

Hope is back...and Oscar's got him! After a ten-year hiatus, ageless funny man Bob Hope will host the 50th Annual Academy Awards Monday, April 3 at 10 p.m. on ABC-TV. The motion picture industry's most prestigious gathering will also salute 50 years of the art, glamour and sheer magic of movies.

The comedian's appearance will mark the first time since 1967 that one person presided over the telecast. Hope, coincidentally, was the emcee at that time. More closely associated with Oscar than any other Hollywood celebrity, Hope previously has made 22 appearances on the awards, a record. He also has served as master of ceremonies 15 times, another record, and was the sole emcee on eight occasions.

Bob Hope first officiated at an Academy Awards presentation in 1940 and immediately set out on his patented path of deflating egos, puncturing pomposities and providing a spirit of laughter to lighten the inevitable tension of the Awards. He is the receipient of an honorary Oscar, a specially designed gold medal award for his unique and distinguished service, a silver plaque, a life membership and the Jean Hersholt Humanitarian Award.

Those who have been set as presenters to date include Fred Astaire, Richard Burton, Bette Davis, Olivia de Havilland, Faye Dunaway, Goldie Hawn, Mark Hamill, Janet Gaynor (winner of the first Oscar for Best Actress in 1928), Farrah Fawcett-Majors, Steve McQueen, John Travolta, Henry Winkler and Natalie Wood.

GLOBE THEATRE RECREATED

Sam Wanamaker, who has a starring role in NBC-TV's nine-and-a-half-hour original drama, "Holocaust" recontruct Shakespeare's original Globe Theatre in London." He says Shakespeare wrote and produced all of his plays for the Globe Theatre, which is located in the center of London.

Game Show Airs

"Pass the Buck," a new half-hour daytime game program which will test contestants' skills and quick thinking and award valuable cash prizes, will premiere Monday, April 3, 10 to 10:30 a.m., on CBS-TV.

The new game show, which will originate from The Ed Sullivan Theater in New York City, involves a fast-paced elimination contest between four contestants and their skill in making instant decisions under pressure by coming up with multiple answers to questions, with the winner proceeding to a jackpot round.

The host of "Pass the Buck" is Bill Cullen, who has complied one of broadcasting's longest winning streaks — he has never been unemployed since he entered the medium at the age of 19.

The witty and personable performer began his broadcasting career in his native Pittsburgh, when he took a job at a local radio station while enrolled as a pre-med student at the University of Pittsburgh. Quickly realizing that a radio career was what he really wanted, Bill quit school after a year as a student.

In 1944, Cullen moved to New York and snared a position as a staff announcer on NBC. His first game show was "Winner Take All," which was on radio from 1946 to 1950, when it moved to television. Never at a loss for words or the bestowing of prizes, Bill is perhaps best remembered for the very successful show, "The Price Is Right," which he hosted for nine years. He also hosted "Eye Guess," "Three on a Match," "The $25,000 Pyramid" and "Winning Streak."

An unusual indication of Cullen's popularity and professionalism is that at one period during the 1960s he was appearing on all three networks.

American Sportsman Returns

The 14th consecutive season of ABC Sports' "The American Sportsman" premieres Sunday, April 2 (3:30-4:15 p.m.) with a jolting, successful rubber-raft descent of the headwaters of the Ganges River in the Himalayas by actor Robert Duvall; then a segment in which beauteous Olivia Newton-John meets up with rare captive-bred cheetahs. It is Olivia's goal to stem the tide of extinction. Also on the season premiere program, series host Curt Gowdy introduces some memorable moments from "The American Sportsman" shows featuring Bing Crosby.

India's treacherous Alknanda River, a boiling stretch of water with rapids that took the lives of two members of a Czechoslovakian team only three weeks before Duvall's trip, had never before been conquered. Duvall, a principal actor in "The Godfather" and more recently "The Betsy," is joined in the 145-mile river trip by the expedition leader, Lute Jerstad, a former Mt. Everest climber, and Ken Warren, chief oarsman, both of Portland, Oregon. For Duvall, real life proved to be the most demanding of all.

The velocity and turbulence of the river currents puts them in complete awe of the challenge ahead. There is one moment when the rubber raft folds like an accordian; another shocking moment when Duvall is thrown from the raft into the churning waters, then snatched back from the deep. When the expedition finally reaches the Ganges 10 days later and the mission is accomplished, Duvall says: "We have beaten the best."

Olivia Newton-John, who co-stars with John Travolta on the upcoming film version of "Grease," is introduced to the cheetahs at a breeding compound in Winston, Oregon.

Baio To Co-Star In 'Special Threat'

The dramatization of the prize-winning book, "Luke Was There," will be repeated on NBC-TV's "Special Treat" Tuesday, April 4, 4 to 5 p.m.

Winner of the 1975 Children's Book Award of the Child Study Association, "Luke Was There" is the story of a young boy who gets into trouble when he is left in a children's shelter. The book was written by Eleanor Clymer and adapted for television by Richard Marquand. The program has been recommended for viewing by the National Education Association.

David Pendleton portrays Luke, an understanding black social worker, and Scott Baio plays Julius, the boy who is put into a shelter when his mother is hospitalized.

Julius had come to distrust adults since his father went away and failed to keep his promise to return. When his mother's second husband deserted them, his distrust deepened. At the shelter, Julius fails to get along with the other children, especially Max, until Luke wins him over. Later, when Luke has to go South to his family, Julius rebels, gets into trouble and runs away.

Scott Baio's career began to flourish about the time "Luke Was There" was filmed in 1976. That was also the year that he starred in the film, "Bugsy Malone." This year he became a regular on the popular series, "Happy Days."

All of this, however, has left Scott a quiet, unassuming youngster. "A lot of people might think I'd become conceited, but I'm not," he says. "I feel the same as before. Some friends in school feel I'm a celebrity, and they kid me."

Scott's not too sure what career he will pursue in later years. "I'd like to be an actor, but I'm not sure. I'd also like to study animal husbandry — to be a veterinarian; you know. I love animals. I'd like to cure them and make them well, and that would make the animals happy and the owners happy and me happy too."

When "Happy Days" goes into hiatus, Scott will go back to his home in Brooklyn, N.Y., where he lives with his parents, and older brother and sister, who are twins. He started to act in commercials at the age of 9. His older cousin, Joey, now in law school, did commercials and got Scott interested and found an agent for him.

'Sky In The Window' Is Premiere Episode

Molly and David Beaton, a young and courageous couple, whose love for each other helps them to build a life for themselves in a newly opened wilderness in the 1870s, are held hostage by Indians in "Sky in the Window," an all-new two-hour premiere presentation of "The Young Pioneers," airing Sunday, April 2, 7 to 9 p.m., on ABC-TV.

Linda Purl and Roger Kern star as Molly and David Beaton, the young wife and her husband who strike out for an unknown destiny in a newly opened territory.

Also starring is Robert Hayes, as their close friend and neighbor, Dan Gray. Other regular members in the cast are Robert Donner as another neighbor, Mr. Peters, father of three motherless children, played by Mare (cq) Winningham as Nettie, Michelle Stacy as Flora and Jeff Cotler as Charlie.

Guest starring in the initial episode, "Sky in the Window," are David Huddleston as Juniper Jones, a wandering loner who is a friend both to the Indians and the settlers; A Martinez as Circling Hawk, and Cynthia Avila as Sweet Water, his wife. Guillermo San Juan appears as Spotted Calf.

In the premiere, Molly and David are held hostage in their barn by Indians (Circling Hawk and Fool's Crow), who have brought the injured Spotted Calf for shelter. At first, the Indians refuse Molly's help, but finally allow her to treat Spotted Calf, with whom she establishes an understanding.

Later, Molly and David are asked to give refuge to Sweet Water, who is wounded and expecting the birth of her child. Her presence endangers Molly's and David's safety from bounty hunters in search of Indians.

"The Young Pioneers" is a love story. Radiant young Molly married impulsively, handsome David Beaton two years ago in Iowa. She was sixteen, and he was eighteen. Immediately after the wedding day they journeyed to the Dakota Territory.

Linda Purl and Roger Kern star as young people facing a young country in ABC-TV's "The Young Pioneers," which premieres in a special two-hour presentation on Sunday, April 2 (7-9 p.m.) on ABC-TV.

Dramatic Feud Airs On CBS-TV

Bobby Ewing, the youngest son in the oil and cattle rich Ewing dynasty, shocks the entire family when he brings home as his bride, Pamela, the daughter of his father's long-time enemy, and at the same time requests a more important role in running the family business, on the premiere of "Dallas," new-hour long dramatic series, Sunday, April 2 (10-11 p.m.) on CBS-TV.

Bobby's older brother, J.R., sees Pamela as a spy and Bobby's new seriousness about the business as a threat to his own position of power. Since all the Ewings live on the ranch under one roof, the clash of personalities is inescapable.

Starring in "Dallas," in alphabetical order, are Barbara Bell Geddes as Bobby's mother, Eleanor Southworth Ewing; Jim Davis as the senior member of the family, Bobby's father, John "Jock" Ewing; Patrick Duffy as Bobby Ewing; Larry Hagman as his older brother, J.R. Ewing; Victoria Principal as Bobby's bride, Pamela Barnes Ewing; and Charlene Tilton as Lucy, Bobby's high-spirited niece.

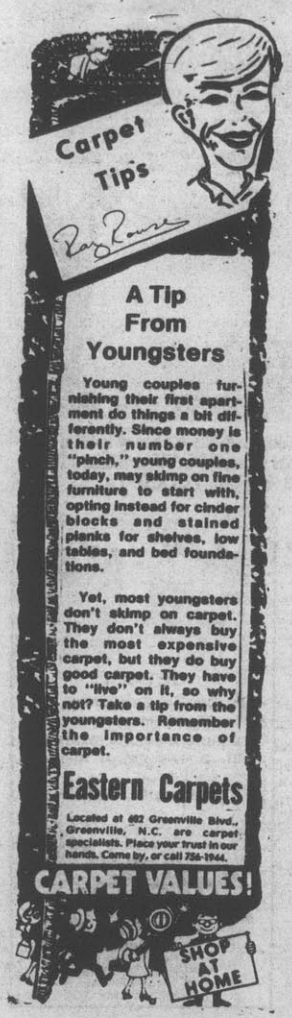

Also starring are Linda Grey as Sue Ellen Ewing, J.R.'s wife; Steve Kanaly as Ray Krebbs, the ranch foreman; and Ken Kercheval as Cliff Barnes, Pamela's brother.

Special guest star David Wayne appears as "Digger" Barnes, who refuses to give up on his long-standing plan of revenge against "Jock" Ewing and his family. Tina Louise guest stars as J.R.'s secretary, Julie.

Eastwood Stars

Clint Eastwood stars as the quietly menacing stranger who defends the terrified citizens of a small western town by turning the streets into an inferno in "High Plains Drifter," the "ABC Sunday Night Movie," April 2, 9 to 11 p.m.

Eastwood, playing the sort of nameless wanderer that had made his westerns box-office bonanzas, also directed the film, which was written by Academy Award-winner Ernest Tidyman ("The French Connection"). Verna Bloom and Mariana Hill are co-starred.

Cher Returns In Variety Special

Cher will star in a one-hour variety television special, "Cher...Special," as the first project of her multi-million dollar deal with ABC-TV, to air Monday, April 3 at 9 p.m. on ABC-TV. Joining Cher will be guest stars Dolly Parton and Rod Stewart. "Cher...Special" will be Cher's only musical variety special television appearance in 1978.

The program is a unique view of a very special lady. In addition to rousing production numbers featuring Cher singing and dancing, the multi-talented entertainer will be highlighted with guests Dolly Parton and Rod Stewart in a lavish lyrical battle between good and evil — with the virtuous Dolly (backed by a full compliment of gospel singers) vying with a funky Stewart and his disco devils for the "heart and soul" of Cher.

The talented Ms. Parton has just completed a record-breaking concert tour of the United States and was recently nominated for a Grammy for her latest smash-hit record, "Here You Come Again." Stewart is making a rare television appearance on Cher's special, having also ended a successful concert tour of the U.S. His latest album, "Foot Loose and Fancy Free," has been certified platinum.

The special opens with a lavish musical medley from "West Side Story," with the versatile Cher singing all the roles. It closes with an operetta starring Cher, Dolly and Rod.

Other highlights of the show include: a brief appearance by Cher's children, Chastity and Elijah; Cher in a dialogue with her comedic alter-ego, the tough-talking and truth-telling Laverne; Dolly singing "Two Doors Down"; Dolly and Cher in a conversation made up entirely of lines and titles from songs; and Cher as a prim and proper woman in a drab secretarial pool who lives for her Saturday night flings at the disco.

Cher's songs, comedy and glamour provide a cheery lead-in to the 50th Annual Academy Awards when ABC-TV presents "The Cher...Special," Monday, April 3 (9-10 p.m.) on ABC-TV.

Oscar Celebrates 50th Anniversary

In 1928, a 24-year-old sculptor just out of art school was commissioned to fashion a small (10-and-one-fourth inches) statuette of a male figure gripping a crusader's sword and standing on a reel of film.

George Stanley was an active sculptor until his death in 1970, yet the small figure remains his most renowned work. It is probably the most photographed, the most widely reproduced, and the most familiar piece of sculpture made in this century — the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences' famous Oscar.

This year, Oscar's Golden Anniversary will be celebrated with the telecast of the 50th Annual Academy Awards, which will air live Monday, April 3 at 10 p.m. on ABC-TV.

Stanley attended the first awards banquet in a Hollywood hotel on May 16, 1929, and stood to acknowledge applause for his work before Janet Gaynor, Emil Jannings and the film "Wings" were named the first Academy Award winners. Like most of the people attending the affair, Stanley had had no inkling of the vast importance the award would assume, and the statuette symbolize.

MGM art director Cedric Gibbons designed the figure in sketch form for the Academy's approval. He chose Stanley to execute the statuette and described the components that he wanted rather than offering Stanley the sketch. The sculptor submitted three different versions to Gibbons for selection. Did he recall how the original forms differed from today's Oscar?

"No, I'm afraid I don't," he said. "That was a long time ago and it didn't seem important at the time. The changes Mr. Gibbons suggested concerned the compactness of the figure. The legs were together, for instance, but more defined. He wanted more of a mass and less detail."

Was a model used to pose for the figure? "No, just imagination."

A mold was made from the clay original. The first figure, cast in solid bronze, was given to Stanley and remained a treasured possession.

Stanley, who for a time received mail addressed to George O. Stanley from people who assumed that Oscar was his middle name, was asked in the early 1950s to sharpen the detail on the figure by working on a plaster copy. That was his last contact with the statuette.

Second Edition

The seond edition of "Your Turn: Letters to CBS News," anchored by CBS News Correspondent Sharron Lovejoy, will be broadcast Sunday, April 2 (10:30-11 a.m.) on CBS-TV.

Presenting some of the most "thoughtful and interesting" viewer correspondents — pro and con — about recent CBS News broadcasts, this edition of "Your Turn" has our letter writers' comments on two segments of "60 Minutes," "Rhodesia," a report on the racial controversy in that troubled nation, and "No Kids Allowed," about apartment complexes where children are barred; two "CBS Reports" broadcasts, "Beyond the Superdome," dealing with the poor of New Orleans, and "The Aliens," concerning the plight of illegal Mexican aliens in California.

Needed Chimp Trained

"There's a definite psychology used in training animals for films," says Frank Lamping, the handler who trained Raffles-the-chimp for the title role in the comedy spoof, "The Barefoot Executive."

The show, which is airing as a two-part presentation on "The Wonderful World of Disney," Sunday, April 2 and 8 (7-8 p.m. both nights) on NBC-TV, concerns a chimp that picks TV's top-rated programs. To make Raffles appear to be the clairvoyant, cool executive the script called for, Lamping used his own brand of psychology.

"If you're cautious, careful and have respect for animals, you should never have any trouble," theorizes the trainer. "Chimps can sense if you really love them. They don't have the artificiality of civilization. They like you or they don't.

Adventure Drama Airs On NBC-TV

"The Wind and the Lion" is an adventure drama which will air on "NBC Monday Night at the Movies," April 3, (9-11 p.m.). Sean Connery, Candice Bergen, Brian Keith and John Huston star.

The film is a sweeping, handsomely scaled and thoroughly exhilarating return to the old-fashioned entertainment spectacular, fusing epic adventure, admirable rivalries, breathtaking battles and romantic heroism with contemporary ear for humor and a remarkable sense of perspective. Basing his movie on an actual but little known historical incident — President Theodore Roosevelt's landing of a detachment of U.S. Marines in Morocco to rescue an American diplomat's family being held for ransom by a local desert chieftain — writer-director John Milius has fictionalized the footnote into a multi-dimensional tapestry ranging from the pragmatism of world politics to the elemental relationship between a proud warrior and an equally proud woman.

Connery portrays Raisuli, a powerful desert chieftain who succeeds in his kidnapping plot and then proceeds to communicate his demands to the American President. As the kidnapped family and the government of Morocco wait for a decision, Raisuli and Roosevelt (Keith) cautiously size each other up.

The widow, Eden Pedacaris (Bergen), stiffly cautions the brash leader that her country will never respond weakly to such a challenge. Roosevelt, on the other han seized upon the incident as a perfect campaign issue, and, in a spirit of adventure, has prepared a highly publicized Marine invasion to free the family, despite the worried appeals of his Secretary of State, John Hay (Huston).

Mark Harmon Stars In Series

Mark Harmon stars as Officer Mike Breen of the Los Angeles Police Department, who has an unusual partner, a yellow labrador retriever named Sam, in "Sam," action-drama airing Tuesdays (8-8:30 p.m.) on CBS-TV.

Not too many seasons ago, Mark Harmon's studies were focused on the play book of UCLA's football team' not the script of a network television show. But today, the son of Tom Harmon is back on center stage as the star of CBS' new, "Sam" which airs Tuesdays (8-8:30 p.m.).

"Sam" is actually a dog, specially trained for police work, and together Sam and Mark venture into locating stolen money, bombs and an occasional fox, the feminine two-legged kind.

"It's an out and out family entertainment show," Mark says simply and honestly over a fillet of sole lunch. "I read where some critic commented on how I talk to the dog, you know, like it was human. Well, how else do dog lovers or pet owners as a whole talk to their pets?"

Mark's candor is not only true, but it's a hint of the young man's trademark. Ever since his days as quarterback at UCLA, he's had the public reputation of being an honest and vigorous young man, while retaining a definate politeness about him.

"I approach my acting like I did football," Mark says simply. "It is fun. I work very hard at it, I'm very disciplined about it, and I enjoy it, but it's got to be fun for me. Sure, I like the competitiveness of it, that's part of my make up, but I truly just get a kick out of doing what I'm doing."

There was no pun intended in Mark's last remark, for the expression in his voice is evidence that he indeed is having fun doing the show. In fact, while he used to tell sports commentators that he was going to pursue law as a career, in truth he had a yearning for acting.

"I don't know, going to UCLA and being from the family I am, law just sort of seemed like a more appropriate answer than saying I wanted to be an actor," Mark admits with that charming grin of his. "And actually what I did, I went to work for a sporting goods company as a sales representative and was making good money and traveling, but on a flight back from the East I discovered that acting is what I really wanted to be doing."

"My appearance in 'Franklin and Eleanor' last year is what really put me on the map as an actor," Mark acknowledges.

Johnny Cash Production To Be Broadcast On NBC

The story is old, but the perspective is up-dated and brought into sharp focus by the film "The Gospel Road," to be shown Tuesday, April 4, at 8:00 p.m. on Channel 7..

"The Gospel Road," distributed by World Wide Pictures, was conceived and produced by Johnny Cash and his wife, June Carter Cash, whose desire was to tell the story of Jesus Christ in a realistic and meaningful way.

The film is a unique blend of scripture-based narrative, and abundant supply of specially written songs, and a series of in-depth character portrayals, with Israel itself as the mixing bowl.

You are there, walking beside the Jordan and the Sea of Galilee; you are there, seeing Him in many human situations that establish a practical and personal rapport with every viewer.

You are there' being introduced to the disciples, and gaining insights into their varied personalities.

You are there, experiencing the highly charged emotional impact of the trial before Pilate, and becoming so personally involved that you feel sympathetic pain when Robert Elfstrom, in an outstanding portrayal of Christ, suffers the physical attack that precedes the Crucifixion.

Adding to the effectiveness of "The Gospel Road" in its endeavor to convey reality for this day are: the fascinating treatment of the Crucifixion, making this tragedy an event of significance that reaches from its own time across the years to take on meaning for all men of all ages; and the songs and background music of Johnny Cash and other outstanding musicians, whose contemporary style is not out of keeping with the story...a story that reveals that His darkest day has become our brightest.

STILL TOGETHER

Contrary to previous reports, the Beach Boys are staying together. They are currently on tour in Australia and will continue touring this country later this year. There is also an upcoming TV special in the group's future plans.

Chilling Western Drama To Air

A legendary outlaw with the powers of Satan, uses hypnosis to possess a woman's soul and help him escape from justice in "The Devil and Miss Sarah," a chilling western drama on the "CBS Late MOvie," Tuesday, April 4 at 11:30 p.m.

Gene Barry stars as Rankin, personification of the Devil himself; James Drury as Gil Turner, a homesteading farmer; and Janice Rule as Gil's wife, Sarah. Charles McGraw and Slim Pickens are featured in the 90-minute suspense drama laid in the Southwestern United States just after the Civil War.

The film opens with Marshal Duncan (McGraw) escorting Rankin across country to the authorities in Las Cruces, New Mexico. Suddenly, Duncan is ambushed and wounded by members of Rankin's gang. But he manages to escape with his prisoner still in tow.

Later, Duncan and Rankin come upon a homesteading couple, Sarah and Gil Turner, on their way to find new land. Gil agrees to help Duncan deliver his captive, and when the marshal dies from his bullet wound, he decides to carry out his mission.

Rankin senses that Sarah has peculiar telepathic powers and the ability to predict events before they happen. Rankin reasons such a mind should be readily receptive to his evil purpose. He will gain complete control of Sarah, causing her to turn on her husband and help him escape.

Conrad Stars In Tuesday Night Movie

The three beautiful daughters of a murdered moonshiner team up with a stock-car driver to settle some old scores, in "Moonshine County Express," an action drama starring John Saxon, Susan Howard and William Conrad, to be broadcast on "The CBS Tuesday Night Movies," Tuesday, April 4 (9-11 p.m.).

Maureen McCormack, Jeff Corey and Claudia Jennings also star.

After their father's death, the three Hammer sisters (Miss Howard, Miss McCormack and Miss Jennings) find themselves at the mercy of the country's number one moonshine runner, Jack Starkey (Conrad). Convinced that Starkey was responsible for their father's ambush and the theft of his moonshine cargo, the girls find an opportunity to get even when they discover a cache of fine aged moonshine left to them by their father.

The girls go into competition with Starkey. Caught in the middle is playboy stock-car driver (Saxon) who is also secretly Starkey's best moonshine runner. Starkey is not about to let the girls set themselves up in competition and he starts playing very rough. Outraged by his boss's actions, the stock-car driver joins forces with the Hammers, particularly Dot, in their effort to even a few scores.

Wuliam Conrad stars as a moonshiner who plays rough with his main competition, three young women, in "Moonshine County Express," to be broadcast on "The Tuesday Night Movie," April 4 (9-11 p.m.) on CBS-TV.

Thriller Laced With 'Satanism'

Peter Fonda and Warren Oates star in "Race With the Devil," action thriller laced with Satanism, to be presented on "The CBS Wednesday Night Movie," April 5, (9-11 p.m.). Also starring are Lara Parker and Loretta Swit (who plays "Hot Lips" on the series M*A*S*H).

Two vacationing couples from the city are headed cross-country in a motor home bound for the ski slopes of Colorado. In a campground one night, the foursome inadvertently witness a coven of witches performing a human sacrifice on a deserted hill.

Frightened out of their wits when they are spotted by the Satanists, the couples dash for the nearest town to report the murder. Reassured by the local sheriff that he will handle the matter, they continue their journey. The party receives a written message from the coven warning them to forget what they saw. Later that evening Ms. Parker's dog is found brutally killed. The Satanists, like the hounds of hell, have begun a deadly pursuit of the terrified couples, bent on silencing them forever.

When the chase finally turns onto the main highway, the couples' camper is dogged by an enemy convoy of trucks, jeeps, and even school buses. The highway becomes a speedway for a dynamic, bang-up, hell-on-wheels car chase.

SHAUN ON NBC-TV?

Teeny-bopper idol Shaun Cassidy is reportedly negotiating with NBC-TV's Dick Ebersol for Shaun's own special on that network. Apparently the agreement had been made before Shaun signed with ABC-TV.

Aimee Meets Mystery

Actor Bill Jordan has found a gem of a role.

He is the mystery man in the "NBC Late Night Movie," drama "The Disappearance of Aimee," starring Faye Dunaway and Bette Davis on Sunday, April 2 at 11:30 p.m.

Jordan portrays Kenneth Orimston, the married man alleged but never proved to be romantically involved with Sister Aimee (Dunaway), the flamboyant evangelist who disappeared mysteriously in 1926, and then reappeared.

The two-hour drama deals with the district attorney's efforts to prove that Aimee's kidnapping claim was a hoax to cover up a romantic rendezvous.

'Amazing Spider-Man' Series To Premiere

"The Amazing Spider-Man," a limited series of five hour-long adventure dramas based on the comic book super hero created by Stan Lee for Marvel Comics Group and starring Nicholas Hammond in the title role, will premiere Wednesday, April 5 (8-9 p.m.) on CBS-TV.

Hammond stars in the dual role of Spider-Man and his alter ego, Peter Parker, a young science student and part-time news photographer, reprising the role he introduced to television in a 90-minute film drama which gained a large audience when it was broadcast on the Network last September. Also returning in his original role is Michael Pataki as Police Captain Barbera.

Other cast regulars are Robert F. Simon as newspaper publisher F. Jonah Jameson, Peter Parker's irascible boss on the Daily Bugle; and Chip Fields as Rita, Jameson's sharp-witted secretary who is Peter's ally and protector through many a bizarre adventure.

Guest stars who will appear in single episodes of "The Amazing Spider-Man" series include Theodore Bikel, Barbara Luna, Alejandro Rey, Lloyd Bochner, JoAnna Cameron and Robert Alda.

"Spider-Man" comes into being when Peter is bitten by a radioactive spider in a college laboratory experiment and suddenly achieves superhuman powers. In addition to prodigious physical strength, he is able to vault buildings and scale blank walls unaided. The fantasy hero can leap through the air on a magic web he conceals in a wrist band, a web capable of holding a man in free flight or entangling would-be attackers. He is also endowed with a unique Spider-Man Danger Sense, an extra-sensory reaction that alerts him to impending trouble.

No one is more mystified by these sudden powers than the naive, ingenious Parker upon whom they have been so strangely conferred. A shy, studious, non-violent young man, he is now forced to lead a double life and cope with a secret he can share with no one. He turns his Spider-Man talents to crime-fighting and protecting the weak and the threatened, while continuing to pursue his "normal" life.

It is a Charles Fries Production, in association with Dan Goodman Productions. Ron Stalof and Bob Janes are producers; Charles Fries and Dan Goodman are executive producers.

"Spider-Man" appears as a syndicated daily comic strip in newspapers across the country and is widely circulated as a comic book feature in Europe, the Far East and South America.

"LOVE BOAT" ANCHORED

"Love Boat," highest rated new series of this season, has been renewed for next season by ABC-TV.

Nicholas Hammond stars as Peter Parker, a young physicist who achieves mysterious superhuman powers after a radioactive spider bite, in the television production of the number-one comic book superhero, "The Amazing Spider-Man," Wednesday, April 5 (8-9 p.m.) on CBS-TV.

PBS Presents Live Double-Bill Opera

The double-bill of "Cavalleria Rusticana — Pagliacci" will air over PSB live from the Metropolitan Opera in New York Wednesday, April 5, at 8 p.m.

"Cavalleria Rusticana" and "Pagliacci" are two operas of personal passions that end in tragedy, and both take place among working people whose lives are filled with the everyday drudgery of peasant life.

This idea of creating opera from the experiences of non-aristocrats was relatively unknown in the early history of opera. When opera began to gain a wide audience, the music served to demonstrate how high-born characters were subject to the same emotions as more ordinary people. In "Cavalleria Rusticana" and "Pagliacci," the opposite strategy is used. Characters of low social rank are seen as having feelings on an aristocratic scale. This highly emotional style of opera is known as "verismo," or "realism."

Pietro Mascagni, the composer of "Cavalleria Rusticana," and Ruggiero Leoncavallo, composer of "Pagliacci," both entered their respective works in the Sonzogno one-act opera contest in 1888. Mascagni's opera won the contest, having beaten out 72 other entries, but Leoncavallo's work was disqualified because it was actually in two acts.

Two years later, Leoncavallo's now-classic musical story of the clown who cried was premiered in Milan to resounding applause. A few years later, the two operas shared the bill at the Metropolitan Opera House in New York.

Irony and violence are the dramatic hallmarks of the two operas. "Cavalleria Rusticana" means "rustic chivalry" but the story that follows deals with adultery and murderous revenge. Even more ironic, the violent action takes place on Easter morning, a highly sacred time; especially in rural Sicily.

"Pagliacci" introduces one of the classic opera's most famous figures, the clown who laughs on the outside while feeling anger and sorrow within. The action of this opera also takes place on a religious holiday amid an initially peaceful atmosphere. The central characters are a group of travelling players whose lives are being disturbed by infidelity and frustration within their company. In the final scene, the players, acting out their clown show, suddenly begin to reveal their real feelings of hate and revenge. The light-hearted "Punch and Judy" show suddenly erupts into a terrible reality of death.

Mitzi Gaynor Dances On CBS

Mitzi Gaynor, with the help of guest stars Benny Goodman, Gavin MacLeod and John McCook, explores a wide range of contemporary trends in the aptly titled "Mitzi...What's Hot, What's Not," an hour-long music-variety special to be broadcast Thursday, April 6, 9 to 10 p.m., on CBS-TV.

Goodman joins Miss Gaynor is tracing the evolution of the discotheque, one of the "hot" items on the contemporary scene. Then, the famed clarinetist, who brought jazz to New York's Carnegie Hall 40 years ago and helped make that musical form popular in this country and throughout the world, joins his septet in a musical standard of that time.

MacLeod, who appeared as newswriter Murray Slaughter on "The Mary Tyler Moore Show" and who is now the star of the series "Love Boat," assists Miss Gaynor in a words-and-music exploration of what's "hot" among the different age groups in our society today.

And, in a comedy vein, John McCook, star of the daytime series "The Young and the Restless," will be Miss Gaynor's very own special consultant in a musical appraisal of television soap operas.

Featured dance numbers for Miss Gaynor include a tribute to the ever-changing world of fashion, a history of the dance, a highlight of the touring treasures of King Tut.

The special's executive producer Jack Bean polled several hundred newspaper editors for their opinions on the "in" trends in their areas of expertise. The results of this poll provide material for the program's opening segment.

Goodman, the King of Swing who continues to reign in the 70's, admits that he's not particularly charmed by the current trend toward nostalgia in music, or any other form of the arts.

"Frankly," he says, "it gives me a pain in the neck. I suppose we all have to get old, but this looking back — I mean, I don't really miss anything."

By way of explanation, he adds, "I just don't like to see that nostalgic approach to the music if it still has some validity. Suppose you're playing the Mozart Concerto. Is that nostalgic?"

The fact that Goodman's musical longevity has survived the collapse of the Big Band era, the takeover of rock and roll, and the discovery of jazz by a new generation of listeners, however, suggests that he would be the last to succumb to a nostalgic tone in his current arrangements.

"LITTLE WOMEN'S" MALE STARS

William Shatner of "Star Trek" fame, Richard Gilliland of "Operation Petticoat" and Cliff Potts of "Big Hawaii" have been cast in the roles of Professor Bhaer, Laurie and John Brooks, respectively, in the upcoming four-hour Novel For Television, "Little Women," based on the Louisa May Alcott classic.

Pike's Peek

By Charlie Pike
TV Showtime Staff Writer

HOLLYWOOD — Isn't there new rumblings of unhappiness among the "Charlie's Angels" cast, and not from one of the "Angels?" Reportedly, during the closing weeks of production, David Doyle flexed his vocal muscles in protest to a handful of things he doesn's like on the set. Maybe it was fatigue from nine months work, but whatever it was, it did stir the cast and crew.

Robert Evans, head of Paramount Studios, is seeking to team his ex-wife Ali MacGraw with young Vince Van Patten in the film, "Catch a Falling Star." Significantly, it was originally rumored that Farrah Fawcett-Majors would star with 21-year-old Vince, since the story is about a movie star and tennis player who see a lot when they meet eye-to-eye, which was the rumored rapport between Farrah and Vince early last year when the two attended numerous tennis matches together.

Brenda Dickson of daytime's "The Young and the Restless" and hubby, Bob, have bought a new (to them) home in Pacific Palisades, but they won't be moving for several months because they're adding 1,000 square feet to it first! It's an English Tudor and yes, Brenda says there are a couple of rooms to choose from for a nursery, but they have no such plans at the moment. Brenda's first recorded single is foremost in their lives, which should be released this Fall.

Mark Harmon, the handsome former football star at UCLA who now stars in the new series, "Sam" says he simply doesn't keep up with the sport these days. Naturally, those who don't know him well don't realize that he's expected to be an expert on certain football fortunes. But when he tells them he doesn't bet anymore because he lost all the time, expectant acquaintances suddenly change the subject.

Scuttlebutt has it that Pamela Sue Martin, the former "Nancy Drew," is gearing her career in a more "mature" direction, but no, don't believe any rumor that means a layout in a certain men's magazine.

"How the West Was Won" is headed for a weekly, hour-long slot in ABC's schedule next Fall as a result of the superb ratings during its' short run the past couple of months.

Daytime's "General Hospital" celebrates it's 15th Anniversary this week with two remaining original cast members heading up the on-the-set party. They are, of course, John Beradino (Dr. Hardy) and Emily McLaughlin (Jesse).

Several 'Magazine' Extras Are Added

Three additional broadcasts have been added to this season's schedule of "Magazine," the CBS News informational daytime series on subjects of particular interest to women, it was announced by Robert Chandler, Vice President and Director, Public Affairs Broadcasts, CBS News, and Michael Ogiens, Vice President, Daytime Programs, CBS Entertainment. "Magazine" is broadcast the first Thursday of each month (10-11 a.m.) on CBS-TV.

"Magazine" editions added will be presented Thursdays, April 6, May 4 and June 1. Six broadcasts have already been televised on a monthly basis this season, starting last October.

The critically acclaimed series, which is in its first season of regularly scheduled broadcasts, has dealt with a variety of subjects that are controversial as well as informative, and is anchored by CBS News Correspondent Sharron Lovejoy. Segments broadcast this season have included those on teen-age suicide, ESP, new modes of dental care the wives of prisoners, emergency medical care, stepparents, and profiles of comedienne Joan Rivers and anti-ERA activist Phyllis Shafley.

"CBS News is delighted at the opportunity to further extend our efforts at news and informational programming on the CBS Television Network," said Chandler. "We have always believed that properly presented informational broadcasts can find substantial audiences in all parts of the schedule, and we are pleased that 'Magazine' has proved this to be true."

This is the first season that a network has scheduled public affairs broadcast on a regular basis during the weekday daytime hours.

"Up until this season," said Ogiens, "'Magazine' appeared as a pre-emptive special, not scheduled with any regularity. I was concerned that viewers who found 'Magazine' found it by accident. But, since it's been on a consecutive basis, its audience has demonstrated growth. Besides its being an entertaining and informative broadcast, I feel it's an important one. We plan to give it every opportunity to succeed."

Flintstone Special Presented

Stone Age characters Fred Flintstone and his pal Barney Rubble return to nighttime TV and strain their friendship when they become managers of competing baseball teams, in "The Flintstone's Little Big League," a new one-hour animated HannaBarbera special to be presented Thursday, April 6, 8 to 9 p.m., on NBC.

Joseph Barbera and William Hanna are Executive Producers of this program for Hanna-Barbera Productions, whose holiday special, "A Flintstone Christmas," that aired last December, topped such popular shows as "Starsky and Hutch," "Charlie's Angels," "The Jeffersons," and Donny and Marie," according to the Nielsen Television Index.

Another Hanna-Barbera production, "The Hanna-Barbera Happy Hour," a unique comedy-variety series, premieres in the Thursday, 8 to 9 p.m. time period April 13.

Paul Glaser Stars As Houdini

He claimed he could get out of anything and always did. He drew bigger crowds and made more money than any other performer in the history of vaudeville. He spent the last years of his life on a one-man crusade to expose spiritualists as frauds, yet he desperately wanted to believe in them. He was The Great Houdini.

The life and times of Harry Houdini — magician, illusionist, escape artist — are explored in "The Great Houdinis," as "The ABC Friday Night Movies," April 7, 9 to 11 p.m.

Melville Shavelson, who wrote and directed the film, discovered that there was a lot more to Houdini than just magic: "When I was first approached about doing this film I had my doubts, since I couldn't see where it would go beyond magic, which really didn't interest me," he said. "But then I began to research his life and I discovered that Houdini was a complex and tormented man, and that his career was a mask for a lot of inner turmoil. He became a fascinating subject for a movie."

Paul Michael Glaser of "Starsky and Hutch" stars as Houdini (born Erich Weiss) with Sally Struthers portraying his wife, Bess, and Oscar-winner Ruth Gordon as his mother, Mrs. Weiss. These two women were at the core of the upheaval in Houdini's life.

"Houdini's act consisted of himself and Bess, and they were known as 'The Great Houdinis,'" Shavelson said. "But he was equally devoted to his mother, and he gave her just as much attention as he did Bess. The conflicts were endless and they only increased after the old lady died.

"On her deathbed she called out Houdini's name, and he was convinced that she was trying to give him a message. He tried to reach her spirit through spiritualists but found that they used the same tricks that he used in his act. Furious, he set out to expose them, though, and just before he died he gave Bess a secret message which he would try to communicate to her from the beyond. Controversy has raged for years as to whether Bess really received the message again."

Paul Michael Glaser recreates the amazing feats that still mystify other magicians when he stars as Harry Houdini in "The Great Houdinis," the "ABC Friday Night Movie," April 7 (9-11 p.m.) on ABC-TV.

Williams Played Character

Composer-singer Paul Williams who wrote the story of "The Good-Bye Orphan Annie Blues," the episode of "Baretta" to be broadcast Friday, April 7, at 11:30 p.m. on ABC-TV, believed he had created a strong and colorful character as the central figure and hoped the producer would cast it with an actor who would do justice to the role.

The producer obliged. He chose Williams for the part.

Series star Robert Blake and executive Bernard Kowalski not only liked Williams' story, but they agreed that Williams was the man who could best interpret the nuances of the character he had created. The assignment of writing the teleplay based on Williams' story was given to Paul Magistretti, and on the basis of his script and the fact that Kowalski would direct it, Williams agreed to play the role.

In the story, Williams portrays Sandy, the owner of a bizarre music emporium, who supports his crippled sister in a luxurious apartment, where Baretta, a good friend of both, is a frequent visitor.

Masters Coverage Begins

With a select field of international professional and amateur golfers, including defending champion Tom Watson, the two closing rounds in the Masters Tournament at the world-famed Augusta National Golf Club in Augusta, Ga., will be broadcast live by CBS Sports for the 23rd consecutive year, Saturday, April 8 (4-6 p.m.) and Sunday, April 9 (4-6 p.m.).

On Friday, April 7 (11:30-11:40 p.m.), CBS Sports will broadcast highlights of early-round action in the 72-hole tournament.

The broadcasts from Augusta National Golf Club, with is sweeping green panorama, and colorful groupings of blossoming spring flowers, trees and bushes, will include play on the 440-yard, par 4, 9th hole; the 485-yard, par 4, 20th hole; the 445-yard, par 4, 11th hole; the par 3,155-yard, 12th hole; the par 5, 485-yard, 13th hole; the par 4, 420-yard, 14th hole; the par 5, 520-yard, 15th hole; the par 3, 190-yard, 16th hole; the par 4, 400-yard, 17th hole; and the majestic, uphill, dogleg right, par 4, 420-yard, 18th hole.

Should two or more golfers be tied for first place after 72 holes of play on Sunday, they will immediately proceed to the No. 1 tee for a sudden-death playoff, which will also be broadcast by CBS Sports, continuing on to successive holes until a Masters champion is determined.

During the first round of last year's Masters, 17 players led or shared the lead. At the conclusion of play, Hubert Green was in front by two strokes. After Friday's play, Watson emerged the co-leader with Rod Funseth, at five under par, and after Saturday's play, and the conclusion of 54 holes, at least five players had an excellent chance of winning. However, as the final round evolved on Sunday, it was a duel between Watson and Rik Massengale, who were tied for several holes; and then Jack Nicklaus, the tournament's only five-time champion, provided the thrilling competition on the concluding nine holes. After 14 holes, Watson and Nicklaus were tied and they remained so until Tom made a 20-foot birdie putt at No. 17. This forced Jack, who was playing in front of Watson, to gamble for a birdie at hole No. 18. The result was a bogie, which gave the new champion a two-stroke winning margin.

Vin Scully, Pat Summerall, Jack Whitaker, Ben Wright, Jim Thacker, Frank Glieber, and Ken Venturi will be the commentators for CBS Sports.

Major League Baseball Returns

It is the time of the year when flowers bloom, birds sing and America starts to thaw-out. People take rides in the park — walks in the evening and the great American pass time is played in vacant lots across the nation.

Even our primary media of entertainment with regard to sports starts to turn its focus from basketball to baseball. NBC-TV will televise the first doubleheader of the new season on Saturday, April 8 at 1:15 p.m. In the first game the Los Angeles Dodgers will meet the Atlanta Braves. In the second game at 4 p.m. the World Champion New York Yankees will be contested by the Texas Rangers.

George Steinbrenner, chairman of the American Shipbuilding Co., is the man who bought into the Yankees — took control and returned them as an institution.

As a kid, Steinbrenner was a Cleveland Indian fan, living in Cleveland and a typical Yankee hater. Yet, he recalls, every kid wanted to go see the Yankees when they came to town.

A great believer in the pride of the Yankee pinstripes, Steinbrenner says: "When I took the Yankees over in 1973, I was determined that that pride had to be restored, not only for the good of the Yankees but for the good of baseball. You have to remember, the Yankees are the most internationally known sports franchise that there is in any sport."

With wallet in hand Steinbrenner took advantage of the free agent rules and landed Catfish Hunter (3.7 million), Don Gullett (2 million) Reggie Jackson (2.9 million) and most recently from the Pittsburgh Pirates ace reliefer Rich Gossage (2.5 million).

Last year the New York Yankees overcame an injury riddled pitching staff, internal dissention and owner-manager conflicts to win the World Series.

The slugging right fielder Reggie Jackson returns to lead the offense after rearranging his trophy case with all of last season's awards. He is joined by the stars of last season, to name a few: Mickey Rivers, Lou Piniella, Thurman Munson and Craig Nettles.

LYLE'S HAPPY OVER RATINGS

Lyle Waggoner says that since "Wonder Woman" is now climbing in the ratings, the show will be renewed.

Major League Baseball opens its television season Saturday, April 8 with a doubleheader beginning at 1:15 p.m. The World Champion New York Yankees meet the Texas Rangers at 4 p.m. on NBC-TV.

Golfing Rivalry

The Masters Golf Tournament will be televised from the National Golf Club in Augusta, Georgia, on Saturday, April 8 at 4 p.m. on CBS-TV.

It appears that another great sports rivalry had its birth last year at the Masters Tournament. Tom Watson not only beat Jack Nicklaus in the tension filled finish at Augusta but again in the British Open.

PHILLIPS, HAMILTON TO CO-STAR

Michelle Phillips and George Hamilton have been signed to co-star in "The Users," a movie-for-television currently in production.

CLARK GETS HIS CHANCE

"I've always wanted to be Ed Sullivan," said Dick Clark, America's perpetual teen-ager, "and now I've got my chance."

Clark was referring to his upcoming variety series on NBC next fall. "Obviously I hope it's a big hit. I'm coming to variety with a background that most don't have — both as a performer and as a producer."

Clark's contract with NBC guarantees him $20 million in projects.

"Variety has had a rough time on TV lately, but I feel like our show, which will be live will make it," Clark concluded.

Mario Andretti Seeks Race Win

It has been 17 years since an American has won the world driving Championship. Last season Mario Andretti reminded us that there is more than oval racing in the world as he made a serious bid for the Formula I title.

Two years ago the Europeans were not taking Mario seriously. However, last March he won the Long Beach Grand Prix and the Spanish Grand Prix and those from across the Atlantic opened their eyes. When the final standings of the World Championship were posted they revealed Niki Lauda of Austria in first position. Jody Scheckter of South Africa second, and Mario Andretti of the United States third.

Andretti will be making his quest for a second consecutive Long Beach win Sunday, April 2 when CBS-TV presents the U.S. Grand Prix West from Long Beach, California, at 4 p.m.

Mario's record and four Formula One Grand Prix wins, was so impressive that the Ferrari racing team — the most presitious in the hierarchy of racing — made an effort to lure him away from Colin Chapman's Lotus group. Mario eventually decided to remain with Lotus and continue his quest for the world title.

The organizer of the Long Beach Grand Prix has stated: "If Mario wins the world championship, it would do a lot of good for Formula I racing. Most drivers seem to get Championitis when they win it. Lauda became rude and icy; Hunt turned into an adolescent prima donna. I'm absolutely certain Mario won't change. He's been around long enough to know how to accept winning and its consequences with class."

One morning during last year's race at Monte Carlo, Mario and Niki Lauda were surrounded by a group of spectators as they spoke. When the discussion ended Lauda left, pushing his way through the crowd. Andretti remained — patiently and thoughtfully signing autographs.

As he made his way to his car, Mario looked back at the fans and remarked: "Sometimes the attention is a pain in the neck, but you've got to put it into perspective; if I weren't where I am, they wouldn't be there, but if they weren't there, I wouldn't be where I am."

Sexes Go At It On CBS-TV

Tommy Hudson, six-year Professional Bowler's Association veteran, matching strikes with pretty Paula Sperber Carter, Sunday, April 2 (1-1:45 p.m.), will be highlighted when CBS Sports presents "Challenge of the Sexes."

A race between motorcycle champion Jay Springstein and Diane Cox, and a log-rolling challenge featuring Tina Scheer and Fred Wickheim will also be on the program.

The "NBA on CBS" will follow "Challenge of the Sexes" with a full slate of regionalized professional basketball action. BOWLING:

Paula Sperber Carter, who is married to former PBA great Don Carter, startled the bowling world when she won the Women's Open in 1971, at age 20.

The attractive blond, who is 5'6" and comes from Miami, was named "Woman Bowler of the Year" by the bowling writers in 1971, and won the Women's Open again in 1975.

Tommy Hudson has made steady progress on the professional tour since he earned the title of "PBA Rookie of the Year" in 1972 from The Sporting News.

In 1973, he was earning $11,000, and by 1976 he was up to $48,000 in winnings. Last year, he won four major tournaments and earned nearly $100,000. Known as one of the real nice guys of the pro-bowlers' tour, Hudson was the recipient of the PBA tour's sportsmanship award in 1977. MOTORCYCLE RACE:

Jay Sprinstein, 21, is a two-time American Motorcycle Association Grand National Champion, having captured the title in 1976 and 1977. In the last three years, the young man from Lapeer, Mich., has won 15 national events. In 1976, he won four consecutive national dirt track races, becoming the first rider ever to accomplish the feat.

Diane Cox, also 21, is the first woman to reach the "expert" class in professional racing, and the only woman now racing, on a national level.

She reached the "expert" class after earning points for high finishes in the "novice" and "junior" classes. Although she has not yet won a major event, she is one of the top 10 riders in "Tourist Trophy Races" in the northwest part of the country. She is originally from Salem, Ore. LOG ROLLING:

Fred Wickheim, 18, is from Shawnigan Lake, B.C., Canada, where he won numerous amateur log rolling titles from 1970 through 1973. By 1976, he had won both the Canadian and North American Men's titles, victories he repeated in 1977.

Only 16, Tina Scheer already has moved up to third in the Open Professional in world competition. In 1976, she won the novice division of the world championships.

FRAMPTON GUEST STARS

Peter Frampton's guest stint this week on "Black Sheep Squadron" came as a result of his meeting Bob Conrad at the "People's Choice" awards show. Conrad says Frampton came over to his table, told him "You're my favorite — I've cassetted every show. Could I do one?" "Get yourself a haircut first, laughed Conrad. Frampton said he would — and so a script was tailored for him which will be telecast Thursday night.

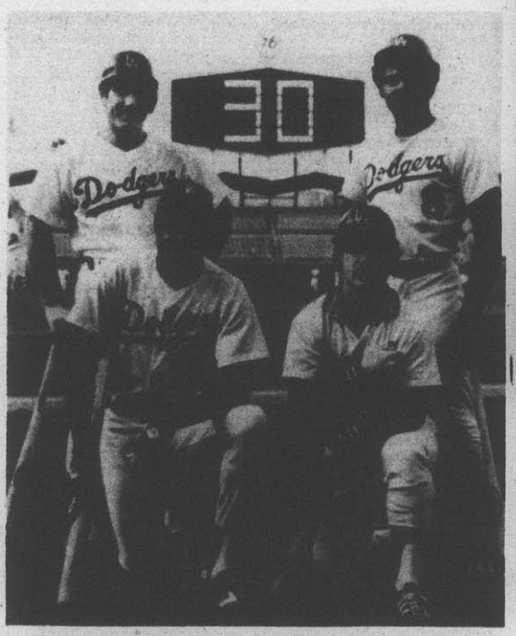

L.A. Dodgers Aim For Series

Major league baseball returns to television Saturday, April 8. National League Champs — the Los Angeles Dodgers meet the Atlanta Braves at 1:15 p.m. on NBC-TV.

"We did it before and we can do it again."— that's Manager Tom Lasorda's motto for the 1978 season. Lasorda, in his first year of managing in the Majors, guided the Los Angeles Dodgers to the National League title as he bested the Cincinnati Reds by 10 games in the Western Division race and took the Philadelphia Phillies in the National League Championship series, three games to one. Thus, he became only the 19th manager in Major League history to win a league title in the first year of managing in the Majors. As a result, Lasorda earned United Press International and Associated Press "Manager of the Year" honors.

Although much of L.A.'s success last season was due to the guidance of Manager Lasorda, one cannot forget the superb hitting of a quartet of men Lasorda refers to as his "Murderer's Row." These men were the first 30-homerun foursome ever in the Majors. All-star first baseman Steve Garvey led with 33, while switch-hitting right fielder Reggie Smith cam in second at 32 and left fielder Dusty Baker tied with third baseman Ron Cey with 30.

There may be a few adjustments to this year's lineup, but "Murderer's Row" remains intact for the Dodgers as they lineup for the start of their second winning season.

Major League Baseball's first 30-homerun foursome belong to the Los Angeles Dodgers. They are No. 6 Steve Garvey, No. 8 Reggie Smith, No. 12 Dusty Baker and No. 10 Ron Cey. The Dodgers meet the Atlanta Braves Saturday, April 8 at 1:15 p.m. on NBC-TV.

Surfing Presented

The Duke Kahanamoku Surfing Classic from Hawaii will be presented on "ABC's Wide World of Sports," airing Sunday, April 2 (4:30-6 p.m.). Also to be seen on the same program will be Pool Champions Trick Shot Wizardry, featuring Willie Mosconi, Minnesota Fats, and six more of the world's best pocket billiard players. In addition, coverage of the World Record High Diving Championship from Fort Lauderdale, Florida, will be presented on the same program.

The Duke Kahanamoku Surfing Classic, held each winter on the island of Oahu in Hawaii, is one of the major surfing championships in the world, and one of the most challenging, as the athletes battle the legendary waves of Oahu's north shore. In addition, "ABC's Wide World of Sports" this year will explore the significance the spirit of Duke Kahanamoku has had in the Hawaiian Islands.

New Shows Debut

Two new situation comedies — "Another Day," starring Joan Hackett and David Groh, and "The Ted Knight Show" — will premiere Saturday, April 8 on CBS-TV.

"The Ted Knight Show" will be presented Saturday's at 8:30-9 p.m. and "Another Day" will be scheduled at 9-9:30 p.m.

"The Jeffersons," currently presented at 9-9:30 p.m., will move to 8-8:30 p.m. on Saturday, April 8.

Future scheduling plans for the rest of the season will be announced for "The Bob Newhart Show" and "The Tony Randall Show."

"The Ted Knight Show" stars the Emmy-Award-winning actor as the super-elegant boss of an escort service who will go to any lengths to keep his customers happy.

"Another Day" stars Joan Hackett and David Groh as a married couple who find humor in pursuing their share of the American dream, despite their problems involving their jobs, growing children and mounting bills. The program was created by James Komack, creator of "Chico and the Man" and "Welcome Back, Kotter."

STILL RESTLESS

A surprising exit has been made by Trish Stewart (Chris Foster) of "The Young and The Restless." Trish wished to pursue other aspects of her acting career.

And from "All My Children" we hear that Larry Keith (Nick Davis) has decided to vacate the role he created when the show premiered. Larry stated that his role on the soap had been a long, fulfilling run, but it's time he moved on to other things.

'Family Style' Special

By Hollywood standards, Pat Boone and his family are considered to be 'dull.' There names aren't continually in the headlines, nor does 'Boone' ever appear on the L.A. police dockets. People have laughted at Pat's white shoes, at his marriage that's now in its 25th year, and they've poked fun at his family life, his strong religious convictions. But all jokes and derision hasn't bothered Pat. Not in the least. In fact, he welcomes it. "Actually, I think these jokes tend to be great public relations for me," he said, "because most folks around the country' tend to identify with those things."

That family image, which happens to be no illusion but the 'real thing,' will be strongly in evidence when "Pat Boone and family" airs Saturday, April 8, 8 to 9 p.m. on ABC. There will be three generations on the special — including grandson Ryan, 15-months old.

"It's been a while coming," Pat says about the special which is a pilot for a projected musical and variety series. "but the timing is right."

"There's a growing appreciation of traditional values and of integrity and dependability and things like that," he explained. "They're not flashy values, and they're not always newsworthy, but I think that in America, especially — and around the world, really — there is a deep-running appreciation of these things."

Pat believes a highlight of the special is a sequence featuring the Senior Boones — Pat and Shirley — titled "flattery." "The reason we think it's the 'hub' of the show is because my family is built around a mom and dad, who love each other — who are for each other, which we are. And that's the real premise of the show."

Pat says another highlight is a "fantastic disco number" featuring his four daughters. "What makes it different," he added, "is that No. 2 daughter Lindy is nine months pregnant."

No. 3 daughter, Debby, who recently won a Grammy for "You Lght Up My Life," — which Pat refers to as "Debby's giant single" — will also sing her latest release, "God Knows."

Pat admits that the immense success of 'Debby's giant single' caught him by surprise. But, in true Boone — fashion, success hasn't changed her. "She's 21, making a lot of money, having all kinds of success, and she still lives at home," Pat said in true 'Daddy-like' pride.

Wayne Changes

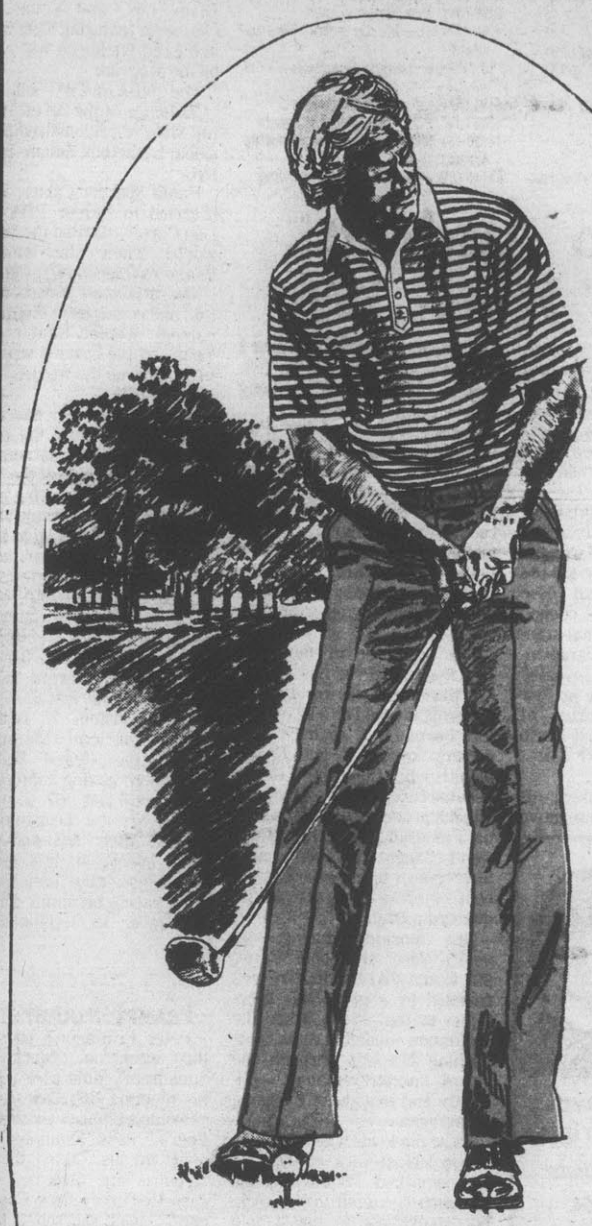

When John Wayne accepted the starring role in "McQ," an action drama airing as the "NBC Saturday Night at the Movies" April 8, (9-11 p.m.,) he acknowledged the staggering decline in Westerns and joined the cop cycle.

"I felt like a bit of a change. I had to stick to action movies, of course, and the tough cop thriller is where a lot of the action is these days. So that's what I went for," said Wayne.

It is quite a change, too, for Wayne had never played a cop or detective before, surprising as this does seem. "McQ" brought Wayne into collaboration with new people both in front of the camera and behind, including a director, John Sturges, who has some first-rate work to his credit. "McQ" also gained a fresh look by being shot on location in Seattle.

FIRST DAY CASH PROTECTION...FOR BOTH COVERED SICKNESS AND ACCIDENT

An Important Message From Harry T. Dozor, Chairman Of The Board

When you're hospitalized for sickness or accident you are not a statistic . . . you are a person with problems. One problem is often money. The coverage you have may not pay all your bills. And with President Carter reporting a 1,000% jump in health care costs since 1950, plus a probable doubling again in the next 5 years, your problems are getting worse mighty fast.

What can you do about it? The best answer is STAY WELL. The next best thing is have a good additional hospital cash source should you or your family be hospitalized. That's what the Union Fidelity Hospital Cash Policy is! Compare it with any other offer and see for yourself. And remember, your UFL benefits are in addition to any coverage you may have, even Medicare. Payments are made direct to you or anyone you choose to use for doctor bills, hospital costs, even household expenses.

When comparing insurance plans, start with the important things first. Take first day coverage for example. Your UFL policy starts paying the first day you are hospitalized for covered sickness or accident, not the 4th or 5th day when you may have run through hundreds of dollars already. Cancer and Heart Attack bring additional benefits, and that's important. See what the other policies do and say.

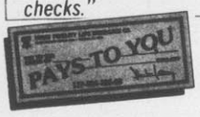

The reasons why I'm proud of our coverage go on and on. We spell them out in this brochure. We urge you to carefully read any other policy and see if it matches us. Can there possibly be a better way to decide wisely?

Sometimes small-looking rates can be confusing if you don't carefully examine what you get for what you pay. That's where a UFL Insurance Professional or a UFL Policyholder can be more helpful than a paid spokesman who is not an insurance specialist like we are. But the best judge still is you. You will be the one getting the bills. Check what our coverage delivers and let your good judgment do the rest.

As an additional special feature, if you apply before April 30, 1978, we will give you a $5,000.00 Accidental Dismemberment Benefit for one penny a month. Because of the savings we can realize through the almost simultaneous processing of applications, we are able to offer you this added benefit at this time.

PLEDGES TO OUR POLICYHOLDERS FROM HARRY T. DOZOR, CHAIRMAN OF THE BOARD

YOUR CASH BENEFITS START THE VERY FIRST DAY
Your Union Fidelity $1,200.00 a month, $40.00 a day hospital policy pays all its cash benefits from the very first day for both covered accident and sickness. There are no costly deductibles.

YOUR CASH BENEFITS INCREASE THE LONGER YOU HAVE YOUR POLICY
If you select the Individual Plan, the total benefits available to you for hospitalization are $14,000.00. Under the Husband-Wife Plan or Single Parent Plan, the maximum amount is $21,000.00; while under the All-Family Plan, it's $28,000.00. For every month your policy remains in force, your total benefit increases with the amount of each paid premium.

GUARANTEED ACCEPTANCE
The coverage is absolutely guaranteed to you, if you are under 65, regardless of your health. You cannot be turned down.

THESE ARE THE EXCLUSIONS
Loss due to alcohol or narcotics, unless under the advice of a physician; confinement in nursing homes, convalescent, extended or self-care units of hospitals. New sicknesses manifested in the first 30 days your policy is in force are not covered for one year from your policy's effective date.

CASH BENEFITS ARE PAID IN ADDITION TO ANY OTHER INSURANCE DIRECTLY TO

UP TO $560.00 $20.00 A DAY

$600.00 A MONTH $20.00 A DAY
Cash for each dependent child when hospitalized for covered sickness or accident. (Includes pregnancy when covered for full term.)

TOLL-FREE NUMBER TO INSURANCE SPECIALIST
Union Fidelity is the company that pioneered "Instant Policyowner Service" and the toll-free telephone "Hotline". After you are a policyholder, you will receive this number to call any time you have a question about your policy.

HERE'S WHAT MORE UNION FIDELITY POLICYHOLDERS HAD TO SAY

"After seeing your ad in the paper, and after thinking and discussing, we decided to give you a try. After taking the insurance, my husband was hospitalized a number of times. We are impressed with the manner and speed in which you process our claims."
Mr. and Mrs. J. Ralph L. Jones, Roanoke, Va.

"We have been most pleased with the courteous and prompt way in which you handled our claims. We'd also like to say a good word for the pleasant voices of the people who answered the Toll-Free numbers when we called with questions."
Mr. and Mrs. Charlie F. Sparks, Lakewood, Ca.

"I want to thank you. You are a wonderful company. I highly recommend you to everyone. I often wonder what people do without Insurance. Yours is the Best. Doctors and Hospital charges can be unreasonable."
Fred Shannon, Oceanside, Ca.

"Enclosed is my check to cover 12 months' premium. I would like also to add a word of appreciation for the way your company does business. It is so refreshing to receive what has almost disappeared from our way of life — good, and helpful 'service.' Thank you."
Dorothy Touhey, Toms River, N.J.

HERE'S HOW YOU GET YOUR POLICY TO EXAMINE

1. Choose the plan and the amount you want and check the correct boxes. Including the special $5,000 Accidental Dismemberment Benefit.
2. Fill out the application completely and sign at the bottom. Please list all members of your family you wish covered.
3. Detach application and mail in the postage-paid envelope. Send no money now!

3-WAY COMPANY GUARANTEE

1. Guaranteed Acceptance: We guarantee to accept you regardless of your health. You must be accepted.
2. No Individual Cancellations or Rate Increases. Rates may be changed if there is a general rate increase on all policies of this form (1-2490) in your state, or when you reach age 65. Policies may be cancelled if the same action is taken on all policies of this form in your state. We guarantee that we will never cancel your policy individually for any reason until you receive your total maximum benefits . . . or raise your rates individually regardless of the amount you collect.
3. We guarantee to issue you an in-force policy. If you are satisfied with the policy, send us your premium within 21 days. If you're not, don't pay for it. Of course, if you don't send your premium within 21 days you'll have no coverage. Even after you've paid your premium, you still have the opportunity to return your policy within 30 days, and we'll refund any money you have paid. We guarantee it.

New Camel Lights

Everybody knows the problem.

Ordinary low tar cigarettes can't deliver the full measure of satisfaction that's the very reason you smoke.

Now Camel Lights has the solution.

With a richer-tasting Camel blend that's been reformulated for low tar filter smoking. Just 9mg. tar. The result: a rich, rewarding, truly satisfying taste.

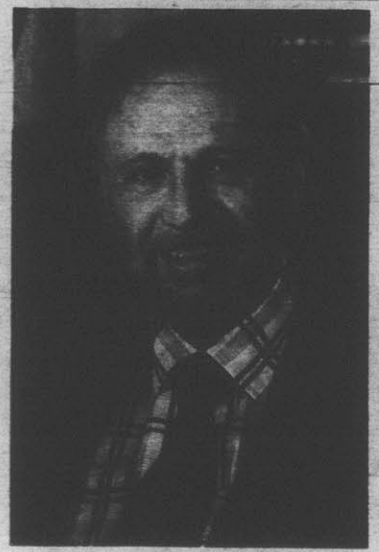

What's in a name?

Satisfaction, if the name is Camel. All the flavor and satisfaction that's been missing in your low tar cigarette. With a name like Camel Lights, you know exactly what to expect. Try one pack. The solution could be in your hands.

ASK THEM YOURSELF

Send the question, on a postcard, to "Ask," Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave., New York, N.Y. 10022. We'll pay $5 for published questions. Sorry, we can't answer others.

He keeps an eye on money owed us.

FOR ANTHONY M. SOLOMON, Under Secretary of the Treasury for Monetary Affairs

How many countries owe the U.S. money, and will these loans ever be repaid? — E.J., Bangor, Maine

● Currently, 118 countries are indebted to the United States for loans and credits extended since World War II. The Treasury Department takes very seriously its responsibility to insure that foreign debts owed the U.S. are paid promptly, and in the vast majority of instances, payments have been made on time. Of the $74 billion in long-term loans and credits extended by the U.S. between the war and the end of 1976, over $49 billion in repayment of principal and interest has been received. As of Dec. 31, 1976, principal and interest payments due and unpaid 90 days or more amounted to approximately $.3 billion, or slightly more than 1 percent of the total amount outstanding. Twenty-one countries still owe us debts incurred during W.W.I.

FOR THE "ASK" EDITOR

How and when were the Academy Awards created, and how did the Oscar get its name? — H.L., Yuma, Ariz.

● In 1927 36 leaders of the film business organized the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences as a nonprofit concern. A week later, around 300 met at an industry banquet. While all the talk was going on, Cedric Gibbon, art director at MGM, began sketching on the tablecloth. He drew a man standing on a reel of film holding a crusader's sword. Sculptor George Stanley later molded the figure. So it could be said that Oscar was born on a tablecloth, but he wasn't christened until four years later. According to the Academy, in 1931 Margaret Herrick, librarian at the Academy, looked at the statuette and joked, "He looks like my uncle Oscar." The story goes that newspaperman Sidney Skolsky overheard the remark and printed an item stating that Academy employees affectionately named their gold statuette Oscar.

Oscar: the movies' award of awards.

FOR BARBARA PARKINS, actress

I know that when you finished your five-year stint on Peyton Place you lived in Europe. What's the difference between their men and ours? — E.T., Pomona, Calif.

● There really is no difference, but European cities, with their age and tradition, have a romantic aura, and we transfer this to men. The Frenchman knows how to kiss your hand, the Italian how to bite your ear, the Englishman how to take care of your dog...and the American always knows when a ball game is on.

FOR WALTER F. MONDALE, Vice President

What changes do you think should be made in the new campaign-financing laws? — Mrs. L. Mills, Hobart, Ind.

● 1976 was the first Presidential campaign financed out of public funds, and it worked very well. President Carter and I have recommended that the concept be extended to campaigns for the Senate and the House in 1978. We believe it would be a major step toward cleaning up the political system, giving candidates a better opportunity to present their views and helping them avoid obligations to special-interest contributors.

FOR FRED GRAHAM, CBS-News

How do you keep such a stony face when you're reading reports that touch you? — C.S., Norwich, Conn.

● CBS drums into its correspondents that they must not inject personal feelings into any newscast, either by what is said or by facetious winks or smiles. My wife complains that I have learned the lesson so well that I sometimes deliver the news looking as if I just ate a pickle.

FOR EDITH HEAD, Academy Award designer

● Dress-designing is comparable to home-decorating because you use fabric, color and design to achieve whatever results you want. For example, if I want to make a woman look larger, I will put her in light colors and larger prints. The same applies to a room. Of course, to make a larger man or woman appear smaller, I do the opposite — use darker colors and plain fabric. This would also apply to the size of a room.

FOR ARNOLD "RED" AUERBACH, president and general manager, Boston Celtics

Many more basketball players seem to become active in programs for the underprivileged than athletes from the other sports. Is this so? — G.S., Elmira, N.Y.

● I don't know about other sports, but many of our players were underprivileged kids themselves. Now, when they take the time and effort to help those in similar straits, it makes them feel very proud. When a man is proud of himself, he reacts better under all kinds of situations, including his ability to play ball.

FOR GARRETT BROWN, Philadelphia filmmaker

I know from friends in the movie business that you're getting an Oscar for some camera you developed. What's it all about? — R.B., Pomona, Calif.

● My invention lets the cameraman run or climb stairs but removes all the bumps from his shot. The camera is held by a mechanical arm attached to a vest. He sees what he is shooting by watching a small TV screen. You can see how we used it if you watched Sylvester Stallone running up the steps of the Philadelphia Art Museum in Rocky.

PRO AND CON

Should The Tax-Deductible Business Lunch Be Eliminated?

PRO Sen. Edward Kennedy (D.-Mass.)

If we had a "truth in dining law," menus at fancy restaurants might list two prices, one for the average citizen and a bargain-basement price for expense-account executives. A $25 meal for corporate executives actually costs only $13 because the rest is picked up by the United States Treasury. Some wealthy individuals can write off as much as 70 percent of the cost of their meals. The result of this $1 billion annual bonanza is higher taxes for the rest of us and bigger deficits in the Federal budget. Corporate lobbyists argue that an end to the tax break would cost jobs for waitresses, dishwashers and cooks, but there are better ways to provide jobs than by subsidizing the extravagant appetite of the rich.

Some believe the "three martini lunch" is an abuse that will be remedied with the elimination of this deduction. It is absurd to imply that our present tax laws have created a business community of alcoholics and gluttons. What is not absurd is the almost devastating effect this proposal would have on domestic conventions, tax revenues and employment. The threat of unemployment is especially disturbing for restaurant employees, many of whom are unskilled, and members of minorities, whose unemployment now far exceeds the unacceptable national average of 6.4 percent. Business meals are one of the tools of the trade. In our highly competitive free-enterprise system, such a tool is essential.

Plant Now...Step Back...and Watch Out!

Imagine! A Magnificent Shade Tree That Soars Up to 2 Stories High IN JUST ONE YEAR!

Grows More In One Month Than Most Other Shade Trees Grow In An Entire Year . . . More In One Season Than Ordinary Shade Trees Grow In 2 Years, 3 Years Or Even 5 Years! Picture shows magnificent size, spread and beauty of mature Ulmus Pumila — and keeps on zooming to a towering 30, 40, 50 — even 60 FEET OR MORE in less time than most trees even nudge themselves a few feet off the ground!

That's the kind of wonder-results reported by U.S. Government Landscapers . . . Botanical Gardens . . . and University Plant Scientists on what is undoubtedly the most fantastic shade tree ever introduced in America . . . the incredibly beautiful Ulmus Pumila . . . perhaps the most spectacular super-hardy, super-growing shade tree in all of nature!

A ROOF-HIGH TOWER OF BEAUTY IN JUST ONE SINGLE YEAR!

Yes, one of the most exciting introductions by U.S. Plant Science — this sensational super-growing shade tree actually grows higher than even a full-grown English Hawthorne IN JUST ONE SINGLE SEASON! Actually grows higher than even a full-grown Star Magnolia IN JUST ONE SINGLE YEAR! In fact, it grows so fast, so quick, you can literally measure the difference in height from week to week!

PLANT NOW — REACH OUT AND TOUCH ITS LUSH GREEN BRANCHES FROM YOUR SECOND STORY BEDROOM WINDOW — BY NEXT SUMMER!

Who says you have to spend a small fortune for a beautiful shade tree — and then spend half a lifetime waiting for it to grow? That's the way it used to be — BUT NOT ANY LONGER! Not since we've finally tracked down the one single tree in all of nature that hoists itself so high, so fast you can literally measure its incredible rate of growth week by week . . . or for even more dramatic proof, take a yardstick and measure the difference in feet month to month!

GROWS MORE IN JUST ONE MONTH THAN MOST OTHER TREES GROW IN AN ENTIRE YEAR!

Yes, here is a dream come true . . . everything you've ever hoped for or wished for in a tree. Here is a miracle of nature that hoists itself higher than even the most treasured weeping willow . . . that reaches out wider than even the most graceful English maple . . . that lifts its symmetrical branches over your grounds and gardens with a splendor, and beauty few trees can match!

SPECTACULAR BEAUTY ALL 4 SEASONS OF THE YEAR!

Yes, here is one of those rare gifts of nature that not only thrusts itself to towering heights in record time . . . that not only drapes itself in lush green foliage from Easter time to way past Labor Day . . . but for a real "magazine cover effect" lavishes its branches with delicate clusters of beautiful flowers starting in spring . . . and then in fall and early winter transforms its colors, and in the dead of winter its graceful branches make a startling contrast against a snow-covered landscape! Meaning: you get a spectacular show of changing beauty ALL 4 SEASONS OF THE YEAR!

Here's a luxury sight you don't have to wait half a lifetime growing — a matched pair of showpieces, so strong and sturdy you can actually sling a hammock between them.

Picture your patio bathed in the cool, fragrant beauty of this show-stopping miracle-tree from early spring to the first snows of winter.

GROWS IN VIRTUALLY ANY SOIL — REQUIRES NO SPECIAL CARE — SOARS INTO A MASTERPIECE OF LUSH, GREEN BEAUTY IN JUST A MATTER OF MONTHS!

Best of all, unlike most trees that demand constant pampering . . . the only thing you do when you plant this super-growing wonder-tree is water it and enjoy it. That's why leading botanical gardens . . . landscape artists . . . garden editors . . . can't stop raving about its indescribable beauty . . . its delicate flowers . . . its trouble-free care. Is it any wonder that leading experts have hailed it in the most glowing terms . . . recommended it again and again for home-owners who want a stunning display of both beauty and shade . . . and with practically no more work than a couple of sprinkles a week; or return within 90 days for full refund (less postage & handling) . . . on iron-clad guarantee of full satisfaction.

JOHN WAYNE AT 70— STILL AN AMERICAN INSTITUTION

"I'm too old to play those second lieutenants, and I've done the generals and the father image, but there might be a role...there's a couple of stories I'm thinking about... maybe next year."

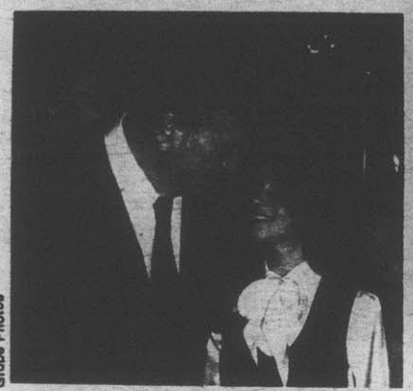

Jack D. Miller / The Register

By Jim Dean

70 is old. Right? Not if you're John Wayne and a living legend. John Wayne, at 70, is ripe, robust, exciting, interesting — all alive, with seven children and 21 grandchildren to sweeten the summing up if ever there's a time to sum things up.

Wayne stays active and keeps fit with physical exercise — walking and jogging at 7:00 A.M. each day "for as long as I feel I'm up to it," he says. "I'm in great shape. I have a little difficulty breathing sometimes, but I'm in great shape."

Globe Photos

The generous and compassionate side of the man is less known than his combative nature, but the gentleness is there, and it is real. He has been known, for example, to donate his yacht to groups of underprivileged children for a cruise around the harbor or to Catalina — and it costs a bundle just to fire up the engines of the 136-foot Wild Goose, a converted Navy Minesweeper.

Wayne shies away from intimate talk about his charitable activities: "I'm a normal human being, and I think most human beings, given the opportunity, will help their fellow man, particularly those most important, the children. And also those who can't help themselves."

This concern for others causes Wayne a few problems. In the latest of his many controversies, The Duke clenched his dukes over the Panama Canal. His support of the new treaties has infuriated the conservatives who once idolized him.

Wayne says he simply has a compassionate concern for the dignity of Panama's people. He was accused, however, of trying to influence the treaty vote because he owns property in Panama. In fact, he owns no such property.

His association with Panama began in 1933 when he wed his first wife, Josephine Saenz, whose father was consul general for Panama in Los Angeles. They were not Panamanian, but Saenz handled consular affairs for several small Latin-American countries. Because he had developed many friendships and had met Panama's General Omar Torrijos, Wayne says he thought it would be a polite gesture to send a telegram of encouragement to Torrijos when treaty negotiations seemed to be progressing.

"All I said was I am pleased we are negotiating, and I hope the relations between our two countries will improve," explains Wayne. "Well, it came out in the press that John Wayne had telephoned Torrijos and promised to get behind the treaties. I hadn't even read the treaties, much less made up my mind one way or the other. So, now I had to find out."

He read the treaties and decided they should be approved. Since then he's been bombarded with hate mail. Writers call him everything from senile to traitor.

But controversy is nothing new to Wayne. According to one biographer, at age 11 he punched another child at a birthday party. Then, on his first Hollywood set, he clashed with director John Ford, who was baiting him.

In 1928 Wayne was Marion Michael Morrison, a football player at the University of Southern California. He was given a summer job moving scenery at Fox Studios because his coach and John Ford were friends. When he was injured in a game, Marion Michael Morrison quit football and gave up his plans to become a lawyer. Because Ford liked the unusual way he walked, Morrison was given bit parts in movies. And because the name Marion Morrison did not have a "show biz" ring, he became John Wayne.

With fame came more controversy. As president of the Motion Picture Alliance for the Preservation of American Ideals, Wayne was asked about actor Larry Parks (The Jolson Story), who acknowledged having been a member of the Communist Party. Wayne said he didn't believe a man who admits his mistakes should be made to pay again and again.

The most humorous of Wayne's controversies concerned the charge that he had financed an aborted Communist takeover of Panama. Wayne was in a shrimp-boat business with Tito Arias, son of a former president of Panama. Tito's neglect was ruining the business. Wayne chuckles as he recalls the letter he wrote: "Listen Tito, you're playing kinda free...after all, I've got half a million dollars in that operation...."

Unknown to Wayne, Tito Arias had staged an abortive coup involving Cuban Communists. When the officials found Tito's brief case, it contained Wayne's letter. The Duke had a difficult time explaining the $500,000 was for shrimp.

When people show surprise that the movie star has been involved in so many activities, Wayne replies with good humor, "Well, ya know, I went to school! I can put a sentence together without using 'ain't,' and I can use it to good advantage."

His projects include processes that will use coal and oil shale without causing pollution. He also is investing in a system to reclaim automobile tires and another to reclaim garbage and rubbish.

Wayne became interested in energy projects when he met inventor Bill Chambers, and the two are now partners in a number of them. One project involves producing hydrogen for use as an energy source. Even more visionary is a dream to produce protein from fossilized material and thus end famine in the world.

Noting all these projects and his past successes, one can't help wondering how much John Wayne is worth. "That's none of your business," he answers. But whatever he's worth, and it must be considerable, Wayne has earned his money with hard work and astute business investments.

He has been in more than 150 movies, a lot more than any other Hollywood star. At one time he was being paid $1 million a picture plus a percentage. The people who employed his talents can count about half a billion in earnings from his pictures, and money is still coming in from TV reruns.

He reportedly was paid $1 million for a current series of TV commercials, but that's "none of your business, either!"

He reads his mail over his morning coffee as he looks toward the Pacific. His elegant home, a single-story French provincial, is richly furnished with black inlaid chests from Hong Kong, cabinets from Spain and wall hangings from Japan.

But the real warmth is in his huge den where a half-century of memorabilia covers walls, cabinets, desks and tables. The room includes a gun case with dozens of gold-plated first editions. Silver and gold spurs dangle from the wall. On a narrow ledge is his collection of Kachina dolls made by Pueblo Indians. "I've been collecting them since 1928," he says. "I think I may have more of them than Barry Goldwater."

But what he is most proud of are three pages of a letter in simple black frames. It says in part: "Your performance meant more than words can express to us: particularly since this performance was given within one hundred yards or less of the Japanese outposts....The fact that you had everything to lose and nothing to gain was an inspiring factor to us."

The letter is from Harvey Thompson Jr., president of Troop G., 112th Calvary Association, Dallas, Texas. It's dated March 3, 1947. John Wayne had visited the men of Troop G during the hostilities of World War II at Arawe, New Britain.

And the big guy stood at his wall of memories and said, "Almost 50 years now I've been in show business. I look around at the world, and it's great. I have to remind myself every now and then that I'm 70.

"I'm too old to play those second lieutenants, and I've been through the majors, and I've done the generals and the father image, but there might be a role...there's a couple of stories I'm thinking about ...maybe later this year." FW

Observations

"Do as I say..." The federal government spends millions of dollars each year cracking down on industrial and municipal polluters. At the same time, a recently published Environmental Protection Agency list of pollution lawbreakers shows that one of the biggest culprits is—you guessed it—the federal government. Nearly 25 percent of the government facilities subject to provisions of the Federal Water Pollution Control Act fail to meet its standards, according to the list, compared with 10 percent of the private industries covered by the act.

Pedaling clean air. Then there's Davis, Calif., a city of 34,600 residents and 25,000 bicycles. Davis's two-wheeled approach to cleaner air has the important added benefit of energy conservation. Bikes are used by a broad cross-section of the Davis population, for virtually every kind of local trip. Two-thirds of the vehicles in a typical rush hour are bicycles—and 90 percent of the riders are adults.

"How should I refer to you in my chronicle, as the discoverer of fire, or as the first man to pollute the atmosphere?"

Between the wars. America is more than 200 years old. But its emergence as a major force in world affairs dates back only to the years from the end of World War I to our entry into World War II. It was a contradictory time—an era of flappers and famine; diplomacy and deceit. The pages of its history carry such names as Wilson, Hoover, Hitler, Roosevelt, Churchill, and Mussolini. This vital period is the subject of Between the Wars, a 16-week "Mobil Showcase" documentary which begins at 7:30 P.M. (6:30 Central) next Wednesday evening, April 5, on a nationwide network of commercial television stations.

BETWEEN THE WARS

Turbulent times. The distinguished commentator Eric Sevareid, in his first undertaking since retiring as a newscaster, is host for Between the Wars. Under Mr. Sevareid's knowledgeable and balanced guidance, the all-new series examines the stories behind such history-shaping events as the Versailles Peace Conference, the rise and fall of the League of Nations, the Great Depression, and the rise of the men who led the Allied and Axis powers through World War II. A superb documentary, Between the Wars offers fresh insights into a period of history many of us lived through. Don't miss Wednesday's inaugural broadcast. Consult your television listings for the station in your area.

PLAY BALL!

A veteran observer of our national pastime takes a nostalgic view of Opening Days and then gazes into his crystal ball for several predictions about '78's season.

By Frank Slocum

Once, this time of year brought a lot of tongue-in-cheek references to the office boy who used his grandmother's funeral as an excuse for taking the day off so that he could go to the ball park for the opening of the season. We don't hear much about that anymore, maybe because we don't hear much about office boys anymore. Today the office boy is called a junior executive trainee, has an office with a television set and lets the ball game come to him.

The opening of the baseball season is somehow a significant time for Americans, even those who aren't baseball fans. It seems to be a well-regarded harbinger of spring, although the openings in some parks are often postponed because of cold weather and even snow.

One reason for the attention given to Opening Day is that baseball, more than any sport in this country, is a topic of interest and conversation during the off-season. By the time the season rolls around, fans are so "hyped" that no matter how badly things went last season, this could be the year.

Historically, Opening Day's importance in baseball is mostly in the area of trivia. When Washington, D.C., had a major league team, it was a ritual for the President to throw out the first ball on Opening Day. Veteran watchers of Presidential pitching say Franklin D. Roosevelt was the most relaxed, probably because he had the most opportunities. John F. Kennedy is regarded as having had the best pitching arm, and Harry Truman was easily the most versatile. Truman, the ultimate politician who wanted to identify with everyone, threw righthanded sometimes and lefthanded other times.

Baseball trivia collectors like to test each other with the question, "Was there ever a major league game in which every player on the team had the same batting average after the game as he had before the game?" The answer is yes, and the game was played between the Cleveland Indians and the Chicago White Sox on Opening Day, 1940. That day, Bob Feller of the Indians pitched baseball's only Opening Day no-hitter.

Opening Day 1975 marked the debut of Frank Robinson of the Cleveland Indians as the game's first black manager. Much was written and broadcast about the event, and many wondered whether Robinson would ever be recognized as a manager, rather than as a "special" member of the fraternity. Last season he achieved the ultimate in that type of recognition. He was fired. (Of the 24 managers who went to spring training in 1975, four still hold the same job.)

For the last two years, Opening Day has been the time for speculation regarding the effect of cold cash on hot pennant races. Players were letting their contracts run out so that they could take their chances in the free-agent marketplace. Clubs pushed, shoved and jostled one another in a mad rush to give the newly liberated players quantities of money previously paid only to lottery winners and basketball players. New York Yankees owner George Steinbrenner proved that the root of all evil is good for growing pennant winners. In California, Gene Autry also dug into his saddlebags to hire some hands that could win for his California Angels. However, his newly acquired superstars were out most of the year with injuries, and the team wound up losing more games than they had the previous year.

This year baseball may have to dig for a little controversy. Maybe 1978 will be remembered as the first year of a change brought about by the Labor Department. It issues a directory of job titles, and the most recent edition shows that the battle against sexism can claim another victory. According to the Labor Department, there is no longer such a job as "bat boy." The proper title now is "bat handler." Asked for a reaction, Joe Garagiola said, "Not only do I think it's a good idea, but so does my ex-teammate, Stan Musial. You remember 'Stan the Person,' who was such an outstanding first-base person for the St. Louis Cardinals."

What's ahead for baseball in 1978? Well, there are a few "automatics," such as a controversy about whether some pitcher is getting away with throwing a spitball and whether the pitch should be legalized. Spitballs are the baseball equivalent of flying saucers. There are frequent reports of sightings, but hard evidence seems impossible to come by.

Also, you can be sure that some player, disgruntled about not getting an opportunity to play more often, will issue the cliché ultimatum, "Play me or trade me." The club will do neither.

There will be the usual attacks by the press that baseball has sold out to television. These attacks will arouse the clubs just about as much as "Play me or trade me." And any controversial decision by an umpire will bring about more demands for the utilization of instant replays.

It's now time to make some predictions for the upcoming season. First, let's look at the players. The American League batting champion will be Rod Carew of Minnesota, not merely because he's won the title five times in the past six years but also because Carew is the most consistent hitter baseball has seen since Ted Williams. In the National League, a vote here for Cardinals shortstop Garry Templeton for two reasons. First, as a rookie in 1977 he hit .322, third in the league. Second, there's no such thing as a "sophomore jinx."

For pitching in the National League, recognition should catch up with achievement, and the Cy Young Award should go to Pittsburgh's John Candelaria. In the American League, look for Mark "The Bird" Fidrych to fly high again.

Which brings us to the pennant races. In the American League East, for the third year in a row, it should be the Yankees. Television gets around to making movies about everything, so it may someday do the saga of the Yankees of the 70's. The problem is that the two most fitting titles have already been used by other films: Star Wars and High Anxiety.

Lady Luck can't continue to stomp on the California Angels, so the best team on paper should finally become the best team on grass and win the championship of the American League West.

In the National League West, the Dodgers and the Reds figure to provide the toughest pennant fight in baseball. Picking a winner calls for a broad-based knowledge of the intricacies of the game, a complete familiarity with the personnel of both teams and a coin that can be flipped. The one flipped here came up Cincinnati. In the National League East the Phillies should do it again, but don't mortgage your house to bet on it.

I might as well carry the predictions to their conclusion: the Reds and the Angels to meet in the World Series and the Angels to win it all. If it doesn't work out that way, remember the immortal words of Emily Latella on Saturday Night Live: "Never mind."

Baseball should continue to prosper and maybe even do as well as it did last year, which won't be easy. In 1977, even without including the new franchises in Toronto and Seattle, the big leagues showed an attendance increase of more than 4¼ million customers. It appears that baseball has moved back solidly into the sports spotlight in this country.

There has been speculation about what all the changing of teams by star players might mean to the fans. It's beginning to look like it won't mean much of anything. The simple rule of success in baseball is, "Win." The departure of a star might sting briefly, but if the team wins, the fans will show up. The only two attendance disasters in baseball last year were the Oakland A's and the New York Mets. Where attendance fell elsewhere, the loss was negligible. But the A's and the Mets both finished last, and while the Oakland franchise might be beyond recall, the fact is that the Mets lost 400,000 in attendance not because they traded Tom Seaver but because they finished last. Should they do well this year, they will certainly make up a proportionate share of that loss.

People in and out of baseball sometimes lose sight of the fact that its success is due more to the game than to the people who play it. Some 20 years ago, the Major League Players Association was having a meeting, and the group's attorney, J. Norman Lewis, made the point that the game depended on its players. One of the player representatives was veteran first baseman Earl Torgeson, an outspoken man on and off the field. Torgeson told Lewis and his fellow players, "We should all remember one thing. The greatest man who ever played this game was Babe Ruth. One year he retired. The next year the season opened right on schedule."

"I have my own ideas about smoking."

"I know what I like out of life. And one of the things I like is smoking. But there's no getting away from the stories I keep hearing about cigarettes and high tar.

"There's also no getting away from why I smoke. I smoke for the pleasure of it. For the taste. And for enjoying a cigarette after my long day as a teacher.

"Then at night when I work my other job—as a drummer—I enjoy lighting up between sets. It's part of the way I live.

"For me, the dilemma was how to find a cigarette that could give me taste without high tar. And that was quite a dilemma.

"Which is why I appreciate Vantage as much as I do. It's the only low-tar cigarette I've found (and I've tried several other brands) that really gives me cigarette taste and satisfaction.

"And the Vantage filter is especially neat because it's firm yet easy drawing.

"As far as Vantage goes, my mind is made up. And that's just the way I like it."

THALASSA CRUSO'S BEST SPRING GARDENING TIPS

What's a sure-fire way to repel tomato pests? How do you make certain bulbs and flower shrubs bloom each season? Find out with this expert guide.

By Thalassa Cruso

Early April is when sap begins to rise in plants and in people. On the first good day, outdoor gardeners often try to get an immense amount of work underway, but doing too much too early sometimes can lead to disaster. Work should never be begun on a garden when the soil is still too wet, something that can be checked by making a ball of it in the hand and then opening the fingers. If the soil remains tightly packed, it is too wet. If it crumbles, it is mellow and ready.

To avoid compacting the soil of a vegetable plot, buy a four-foot length of heavy 1- × 8-inch planking and always lay it on the ground and walk or kneel on it when planting.

Early Planting Vegetables

The first cool-loving plants that can go into the ground in the vegetable plot are peas and spinach. They can be safely planted even if frosts are still ahead.

Peas should be sown thickly in a three-inch-deep furrow that is drawn with a straight-ended hoe. Leave the earth banked up alongside one side of the furrow and put up nylon netting or chicken wire (sold at garden centers) supported by strong stakes. Once peas start to grow, pull the earth back around the base of their stems, and do not thin. To get the best possible crop, apply one of the pea-and-legume inoculants sold. Let air into the soil with regular hoeing to stimulate large crops.

About now you also should be making careful plans for locating where each crop is to be grown. Tomatoes, eggplants and peppers never should be grown where they were set out the previous season. Doing so would not only encourage disease but also reduce the crops. For reasons not fully understood, lettuce and carrots flourish best in close association.

Take A Soil Test

Early April is the time to make a soil test, and numerous simple testing kits are available at stores. Vegetables do not thrive in an overly acid soil, and if the reading of the test shows a pH below 6.0, spread ground limestone over the soil so that it gives the appearance of a heavy powdering of snow. Add to this equal quantities of any fertilizer that carries the numbers 5.10.5 or 5.10.10. Rake both these substances thoroughly into the soil and do not plant anything more until there have been at least two heavy rainstorms. Failure to correct the pH of the soil and to fertilize the ground where vegetables are regularly grown will result in poor crops.

When hot weather arrives and the time comes to set out tomatoes, buy some marigolds and plant them close to the tomatoes. Marigolds repel many tomato pests, and they will brighten the vegetable plot.

Flower-Tending And Cultivating

Inspect the roses in the yard now and cut them back to outward-facing buds. Do not, however, plunge into action if the roses have been earthed up or covered during the winter. Remove the coverings slowly, and do not prune until the canes have been exposed to the open for at least two weeks.

Now is also the time to get to work on the perennial weeds, grass, chickweed and dandelions that have crept into your flower garden. Unless dug out with an old knife early in the growing season, they will remain obdurately established for the rest of the season. Clean off all dead, matted leaves that have blown in and edge the grass (a neat edge between grass and flower bed makes a world of difference in the appearance of a yard).

If you have peonies and they are above ground, scratch a ring of fertilizer into the soil around them, using a fertilizer with a high middle number on the bag. Peonies do much better if the foliage and bloom are kept upright. The time to make a neat little cylinder of chicken wire, held steady with a stake threaded through each side and set into place around each plant, is now, when the growth is still neat and small.

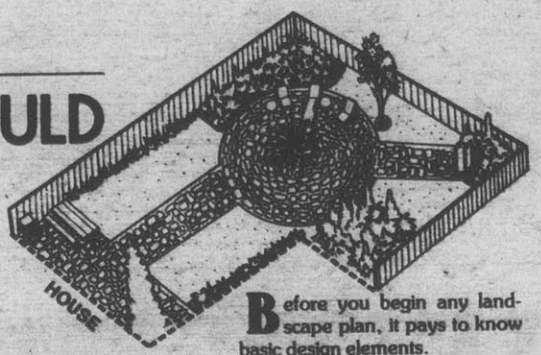

Peonies will not do well if their roots are planted more than two feet below the soil surface. If you use mulch as a weed suppressor and soil conditioner on the rest of the flower beds, make sure the mulch is never spread over the area of the peony roots. If there is obvious top growth already visible from phlox, daylilies and fall asters, now is the time to dig and divide these plants. Replant strong, new small sections in soil that has been enriched with fertilizer or, better still, with homemade compost. Failure to divide these plants at least every second year leads to considerable deterioration. After the dividing is completed and weeds are eliminated, scatter a light dusting of fertilizer over the beds and rake it into the soil. Leave the foliage of all spring bulbs alone; do not cut, tie, braid or mow it to the ground. Bulbs must keep their foliage until it withers naturally if they are to bloom again next year. Do not prune forsythia until it has finished blossoming. The same rule applies to all spring-flowering shrubs. Enthusiastic cutting back on the first warm spring day will merely deprive you of this season's flowers.

WHAT YOU SHOULD KNOW BEFORE LANDSCAPING

Enjoying the outdoor space surrounding your home depends on how well you arrange your grounds for comfort and beauty.

Line And Texture

In a natural outdoor setting, you will find the verticality of tree trunks, the horizontal line of branches, the bend of a stream. They are nature's ways of balancing her elements and avoiding monotony. The same is true in a successful garden design. Trees balance low shrubs or a fence. A brick path emphasizes the curve of a lawn. When grouping plants, keep the textures harmonious. Delicately textured shrubs should not be paired with large, heavy leaf specimens. If you have trouble visualizing how plants will look together, ask whether you can experiment grouping some at the local nursery.

Proportion And Scale

Every element in your landscape should be in proportion. A sense of proportion can't be charted. Some people may feel comfortable surrounded by free and open space; others may feel more at home in a small, heavily planted area. But here is one rule of thumb: If sizes and shapes are too even in a landscape or extremely uneven, the design probably will not be successful. Elements also should be in scale with your house and lot. A small house on a small-to-medium plot of land calls for scaled-down shrubs and trees. Avoid planting trees that mature at huge heights, thereby dwarfing your house and property.

Composition

When decorating a room, you place the furniture according to use and in a pleasing arrangement. You should follow the same rule in your outdoor areas. In grouping shapes or masses, keep in mind that most of us see orderliness in familiar shapes, such as squares, rectangles, triangles, hexagons and circles. You should translate those shapes into the layout of your lawn, paving, shrubbery beds, patio furniture. The best way to unify a garden setting is to create an arrangement of units into a pattern. (See illustration)

Balance

Draw an imaginary line down the center of your property from the front to the back of the house. To achieve an optical balance of units on either side of the property, you need to think about weighting them aesthetically. For example, a patio shelter on one side could be balanced by a tree unit on the other side. You can mentally place the units you would like in your landscape design — a patio, paths, a tool shed, a paved play area, a privacy screen or fence. The existing natural elements, such as a hill or a slope and the location of new shrubbery, vines or ground cover, all play a part in this balancing act.

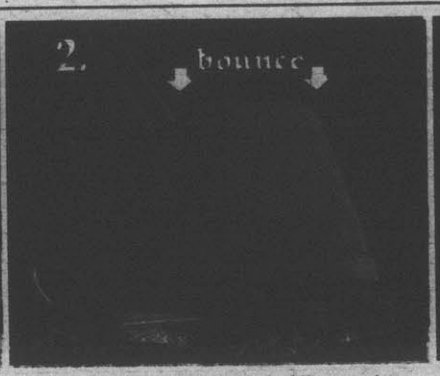

Color

It may not be obvious, but color is present everywhere in a landscape design — in garden structures, in wood surfaces, in plantings, in the shade of soil. Each contributes to the overall effect. Even in an all-green garden, there are gradations from brilliant light shades to dark velvety hues. If you want a garden with a profusion of colorful flowers — bulbs, annuals and perennials — they should be arranged to produce in spring, summer and fall. By adding flowering bushes and trees, you can further heighten the panorama of color.

1. Time for fresh line on your Toro trimmer? No need to feed out line and cut it by hand.

2. A mere tap on the ground while you trim triggers a spring-loaded mechanism that...

3. ...automatically advances fresh line and cuts it to the proper trimming length.

Toro® takes the stop-and-go out of grass trimming

Toro engineers drew on 60 years of lawn-care experience in designing this heavy-duty flexible-line trimmer.

Of course, you get the quality and convenience you expect to find engineered into any Toro.

Feeds line automatically

Toro saves you time and trouble with its fully-automatic feed. You simply tap your Toro on the ground and it automatically lets out new line, then cuts it to the proper length while you trim. No stopping, no unplugging.

You avoid the three-step hassle of manual feeding.

1. Unplug trimmer 2. Feed out new line 3. Cut to proper length

Our fully-automatic feed is a significant advance in trimmer design. Significant because it employs a spring-loaded device which now allows you to keep on trimming without stopping to advance new line.

Here are a few of the other outstanding features that make this heavy-duty trimmer a worthy addition to the Toro family of quality lawn-care products.

Adjustable handle

A comfortable ring-grip handle slides up or down to accommodate the user's reach. A telescoping tubular shaft adjusts to the user's height.

This Toro weighs only 5.6 lbs. Anyone can handle it with ease. You'll make quick work of grass that shoots up along fences, walls, borders, around trees or over the edges of walks and driveways.

3.5-amp motor

Powered by a 3.5-amp heavy-duty motor, this new Toro whips sturdy cutting line around at 7,000 rpms. That's power enough to level weeds up to half an inch thick, or trim grass along a 50-foot chain link fence in only five minutes.

Cord lock handle

Like all Toro products, your new trimmer is engineered for convenience. A cord lock on the handle keeps your extension cord from unplugging while you trim. And the trimmer is double insulated against electric shock.

The complete Toro trimmer line also includes cordless and gasoline-powered models.

Grass Seed Will Never Grow A Lawn Like This!

From Part Shade To Full Sun!

Save Now. Special Introductory Offer. Up To 200 Amazoy Zoysia Grass Plugs FREE

FULLY DROUGHT AND WEAR RESISTANT. Amazoy lawns take cookouts, parties, lawn furniture. You could even play football on it and not get your feet muddy. Rarely (if ever!) needs watering.

Grass Seed Is For The Birds! Zoysia Saves Time, Work, Money

By Mike Sandin

Years ago I was like nearly everyone else with a lawn. I worried about it more than any other thing around the house.

Then things changed. My company obtained a new grass just released by the U.S. Dept. of Agriculture. In honor of the explorer, Frank Meyer, it was named Meyer Z-52 Zoysia Grass.

We received only a small amount of this Grass — enough to plant test plots in our Nursery Farm.

From that small beginning, these few precious clumps of Zoysia Grass spread until they built a lawn so thick and beautiful that visitors stopped to admire it.

We Tell People, "Walk On It"

Instead of saying "Keep Off The Grass," we invited visitors to walk on it. It was an unforgetable experience for them — like walking on a thick pile carpet.

After walking on it, visitors learned that Amazoy Zoysia turf was crabgrass-proof, and the next question never failed: "How can I get some?"

Other Lawns Burn Out

Now, grass is my company's business; but it was a long time before an order of Amazoy Zoysia Grass was accepted. First we wanted to see how good this grass was. We really found out!

One summer the heat was so great you could fry eggs on the highway. Daily the sun blazed from cloudless skies; the drought worsened; whole ponds dried up. Meanwhile crabgrass flourished and took over lawns by the thousands.

IT RESISTS DROUGHT, STAYS GREEN THRU HEAT WAVES

Through it all, our deep-rooted Amazoy Zoysia stood out like a green island in a brown wasteland.

Thrives In Poor Soils

When I planted it in sandy, clay soils and sub-soil, it took hold and thrived. Other grass in the same soils struggled and died.

I compared it to other grasses in the winter, too. Ordinary grasses may die or turn sparse and scraggly due to frost and winter, but in such weather my Amazoy Zoysia merely went off its green color . . . it stayed so thick you could walk on it and not get your feet muddy.

Through zero-cold winters and blistering summer droughts . . . through onslaughts by weeds and diseases . . . our Meyer Zoysia had proved it could "take it." It had earned the right to be called AMAZOY, our Trade Mark published coast to coast and border to border.

HOW AMAZOY LAWNS CHOKE OUT CRABGRASS AND WEEDS ALL SUMMER LONG!

If costly chemicals fail to control crabgrass for good, how does Amazoy Zoysia do it? Your deep-rooted, fully established Amazoy lawn grows so thick and luxurious that crabgrass seeds just do not germinate!

Your lawn chokes out not only crabgrass, but other weeds all summer long — year after year.

You will never need to spend a cent on crabgrass and weed killers again. So if you have wanted to get away from costly and dangerous lawn herbicides, Amazoy is your answer.

Your Own Supply Of Plug Transplants

Your established Amazoy lawn provides you with plugs for other areas as you may desire.

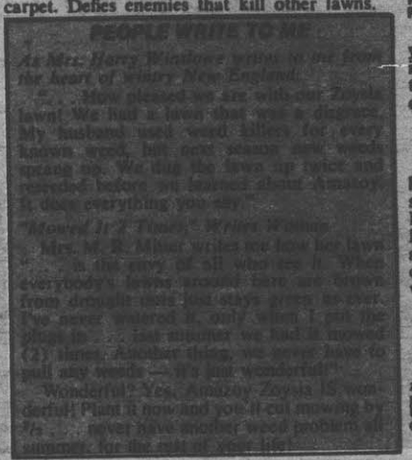

HERE'S WHY AMAZOY PLUGS ASSURE SUCCESS WHERE OTHER GRASSES FAIL

Due to Amazoy's national reputation, you may find other grasses offered that sound like it. But Amazoy's pre-cut plugs look different, ARE different. Our plugs are grown exclusively for transplanting. They are winter-hardened under professional supervision — for 3 full years! — before we take them from the soil.

Each sturdy plug is cut to contain precisely the right balance between soil, root and surface growth. When they come to you, they're ready to grow!

NEVER NEEDS REPLACEMENT

AMAZOY Saves Money, Cut Work. Never a seed to sow again with Amazoy! Year after year your lawn grows thicker, like a deep pile carpet. Defies enemies that kill other lawns.

PLUG AMAZOY INTO OLD LAWN, NEW GROUND OR NURSERY AREA

When planted in existing lawn areas, plugs will spread to drive out old, unwanted growth including weeds.

AMAZOY LAWNS CUT WATERING. CUT MOWING BY ⅔

Your drought-resistant Amazoy lawn not only cuts your water bills, it cuts your work in other ways: it cuts pushing a noisy mower under a broiling summer sun by ⅔. It resists blight, disease, most insects. IT WILL NOT WINTER-KILL TO 30° BELOW ZERO. After killing frosts, just goes off its green color, regains fresh new beauty every Spring – a true perennial that ends re-seeding forever!

THERE IS NO SEED

Reports U.S. Dept. of Agric., referring to Meyer Z-52 Zoysia. Experts advise planting only live grass to be sure of getting winter-hardy grass perf. by U.S. Govt., Meyer Z-52.

For Slopes, Play Areas, Bare Spots

Or correct problem areas such as slopes where Amazoy halts erosion, in hard-to cover spots, around swim pools, in play areas, etc.

NO SOD

Sod of ordinary grass carries with it the same problems as seed — such as weeds, disease, frequent mowing, burning out, etc. Amazoy is sold ONLY in pre-cut plugs . . . never a slab of ordinary sod you must cut up in order to plant.

PATENTED STEP-ON PLUGGER IS . . . . FREE WITH ORDERS OF 500 PLUGS OR MORE

Amazoy exclusive! No one else can offer you this patented 2-way plugger. Saves bending, time, work. Light, rugged, invaluable for transplanting. Cuts away competing growth as it digs plug holes.

MORE THAN A HALF-BILLION PLUGS SOLD, OUTSELLS OTHERS 10 TO 1!

The controlled transplant quality of Amazoy has made it another word for Meyer Z-52 Zoysia . . . the world's best known Zoysia Grass. If you don't want to take another chance with lawn disappointment, switch to the grass that assures your success: Amazoy. We guarantee every plug will grow, no matter your soil or why other grasses have failed you.

Meyer Z-52 Zoysia Grass Was Perfected by U.S. Govt.; Released in Cooperation With U.S. Golf Assoc. as a superior grass.

Order guaranteed Amazoy now, get your bonus plugs FREE. Your order will be shipped promptly for fullest growing season.

We ship all orders the same day grass is taken from the soil, shipping charge collect via most economical means.

Doctor Proclaims:

"THE WAR AGAINST FAT IS FINALLY OVER!"

Yes, the most powerful reducing aid ever released to the public without a prescription!

Yes, depending upon how obese you are to begin with—you can enjoy 10, 20, 30 even 40 or more pounds of FAT BURN-OFF—and inches off your waist, thighs, stomach...hips and buttocks—without fad-diets or ravenous hunger. The only thing that happens is this: you start the program and hours after your first capsule, your body begins to break down fat...LIQUIFY...away excess pounds and inches up to 6 pounds of fat and fluid the first 72 hours alone.

ONCE A LIFETIME STRUGGLE—VICTORY OVER FAT, NOW A REALITY! From the doctor who forces his patients to feast NOT fast their way thin—comes news of THE FINAL VICTORY OVER FAT! An approach that opens the way to a lifetime of slimness—without serious strain or struggle—even if at this very moment you are 10...20...30 pounds overweight!

IT'S WHAT A DOCTOR NOW REACHES FOR WHEN HE WANTS TO LOSE WEIGHT AND LOSE IT FAST! The secret behind this SUPER BURN-OFF Plan is a wondrous capsule that "sets the stage" for a FAT-BURNING CHAIN REACTION. So remarkably effective is this doctor's diet plan, that bulging pockets of fat are liquified and drained away at an incredible rate of up to ONE POUND FAT AND FLUID GONE EVERY 12 HOURS in the first 3 days alone! Yes, a SUPER-FAST BIO-CHEMICAL reaction that attacks and shrinks the fat cells in your body...

(1) you are never tortured with insane exercise.

(2) you are not shackled to any fad-diet, crash-diet, whatsoever.

(3) and though this may startle you—you eat 3 luscious meals a day PLUS snacks...and are never once asked to pit your hunger against a cast-iron will power.

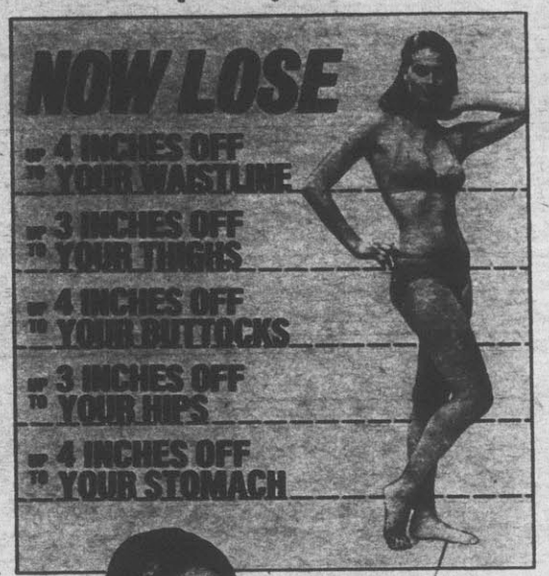

TURN FOOD INTO BURNED-UP ENERGY INSTEAD OF INTO FAT! Picture your digestive system as a furnace that burns calories for fuel. Now, imagine that medical science provides you with a sure, easy...and quick way to accelerate the burn-off rate...so that your body converts all the food you eat into BURNED-UP ENERGY...and...burns, liquifies, and drains away those bulging pockets of fat that pad out your hips, stomach, thighs, face and chin. Yes, excess pounds and inches literally burned away by your own body chemistry...

THE ACTIVE INGREDIENT IN THIS PILL PROVEN SEPARATELY IN BOTH CLINICAL AND UNIVERSITY TESTS. You not only lose weight fast, but keep it off PERMANENTLY. That's because you are not saddled with a rigid system of exercise—you are not required to torture and starve yourself to death...you are not forced to give up all the foods that make life fun to live. Matter of fact, you are ordered by this doctor to keep on eating mouth-watering steaks, roasts, chops, etc.-as long as you take one capsule before each meal. That's because this SUPER BURN-OFF program not only helps stoke up the inner furnace, but also damps down your appetite.

IMPORTANT NOTICE

Before starting this diet program consult with your physician to be sure you are in normal health and your only problem is obesity. Individuals with high blood pressure, heart disease, diabetes or thyroid disease should use only as directed by a physician, not to be taken in conjunction with anti-hypertensive medication. For that matter we urge you to show this entire program to your own family physician and see if he doesn't agree that this PNP No. 2 program including the few minutes of nightly tone-ups highly recommended by our doctor is by far one of the most medically sensible approaches to the problem of obesity.

LOSE WEIGHT STARTING RIGHT NOW OR YOU DON'T PAY A PENNY! If you've finally decided to achieve a lifetime victory in the war against fat ...and you want to see those pounds and inches start rolling off faster than you ever dreamed possible—then let PNP No.2 Fat Attack go to work for you! That excess weight must start to melt away and you must feel totally delighted or we'll refund your full purchase price with no questions asked! Now, that's a guarantee in writing! To score your LIFETIME VICTORY OVER FAT, mail the coupon today!

WHO EVER DREAMED OF LOSING WEIGHT AS FAST AS EASY AS THIS:

A scant 3 days have passed since you have taken your first few capsules. You have not missed a single meal...not done any torturous exercise... you've even been given the green light on snacks. So you step on the scale. You can't believe your eyes... SUCCESS without having suffered for it. ...AS MUCH AS 6 POUNDS OF FAT AND FLUID GONE IN JUST ONE WEEKEND... your body has actually discovered how to burn away excess pounds and inches...

And, in the days and weeks to follow...just as easily your body will continue to DRAIN AWAY 10-20-even 30 POUNDS of excess fat...until you have achieved your life-long goal, a new, slender body, a slim streamlined figure! Is it any wonder we say THE WAR AGAINST FAT IS FINALLY OVER!

BUYING PATIO FURNITURE THAT LASTS

Redwood furniture by John Hancock

You can have style and practicality if you know what features to look for.

If you're purchasing outdoor furnishings, you'll want to know how to get the best buy for your needs.

Frame Construction

Aluminum tubing is probably the most widely used framing for outdoor furniture and is available in qualities ranging from the one-season "disposable" kind to the very durable. It is generally lightweight, which could be a consideration if you plan to move your furniture around often.

There are several structural points to look for when buying aluminum-framed patio furniture. Examine the tubing for sharp creases where the tubing bends; such creases could cause weakness in the frame. Make sure no steel parts are set directly against aluminum parts. A chemical reaction occurs, causing the hard metal to make furrows in the soft metal. This reaction weakens the moving pieces, and they will wear out faster. Better quality aluminum furniture will have plastic-to-metal contact or the same metal in these areas.

Steel frames are heavier than aluminum and offer greater durability and strength. They should be coated with paint or a plastic coating that will resist rust and chipping and remain cool to the touch on hot days.

Both aluminum and steel frames should have mitered and welded joints for strength and a polished appearance.

Genuine wrought iron once was high in silicone content, which protected it from the elements. Today "wrought iron" styled furniture is solid metal, usually of aluminum, steel or a combination of both. It must be coated or painted for protection. Examine the joints for finished welds. The ends of decorative pieces that join another piece should be hammered thin or tapered. Remember that wrought iron is heavy and difficult to maneuver.

Wood Construction

If you are interested in redwood, be sure that you are looking at the real thing. Other woods can be made to look like redwood but will not have its durability.

Quality redwood furniture is made of wide boards that have been kiln-dried, leaving 15 percent or less water content. The boards should be knot-free. Edges should be sanded smooth and the wood protected by a penetrating sealer stain. A sealer stain will add to the durability, provide depth of color and allow the wood grain to show. Don't forget to examine the overall construction. Mortise and tenon joints provide a solid structure that won't wiggle or pull apart. Hardware should be at a minimum, but any that exists should be rust resistant.

Safety And Maintenance

Examine furniture for sharp corners or rough edges that could rip clothing or scratch. Inquire if the seating (canvas, sling, slats, cushions) can be easily replaced. It should be made of materials that will last more than one season and be reasonably maintenance-free. Seat coverings should be protected against mildew and fading and be easy to clean. The pieces should have protective guards to prevent marring of the deck or patio and scratching or nicking of the piece itself. When you sit on the edge of a chair or chaise longue, it should be stable — not tip over. Check whether it will stack or fold for convenient storage.

Finally, because you will expect service or replacement capability over the life of the furniture, it's best to buy from a reputable dealer. FW

GROW HERBS FOR FUN AND FLAVOR

Herbs certainly are versatile. You can plant them in containers, directly in the ground and as fillers between other plants. They love sunny locations and airy, dry soil with good drainage. Most herbs prefer an alkaline soil with a pH of 6.5 to 7.5. Have a soil-test analysis made through your county extension service. If there is acidity, work ground limestone into the soil.

When planning an herb garden, remember that herbs are classified according to life span. Annuals may be planted in the vegetable garden since they mature in one season. Biennials and perennials, which live several years, should be planted in locations that won't be disturbed by cultivation or rotation.

Prepare the plot as you would for vegetables. Compost and animal manure are good fertilizers, preferably applied in early spring. Use mulch to preserve soil moisture and for weed control. You can buy herbs in seed packets from established seed houses or propagate from plants available from commercial growers. (Check carefully for insects and disease.) Herbs should be bought and planted when the ground has warmed and all danger of frost is past.

Sometimes dill and fennel attract tomato worms (which can be removed by hand). Japanese beetles also attack basil. (You can shake them off into a can of kerosene or into a bucket filled with warm water, salt and detergent.) Don't use poisonous substances or powders on any herb to be used in food or drinks.

Harvesting should take place just before the flowers fully open, which is when the richest fragrances and the most oils and flavors prevail. Successive harvests can be made by cutting the stems early in the season, not too close to the ground, so that new growth will start quickly.

Basil. A tender annual. Plant seeds when all danger of frost is past. Cut the last harvest before cold winds turn the leaves black. Basil's clovelike flavor is good on tomatoes and cottage cheese and in salads. Chives. A beautiful perennial with a mild onion flavor. The lavender flower heads may be cut close to the ground and dried for winter arrangements or chopped fresh and added to salads. Dill. A hardy annual. Plant the seeds in early spring. Make successive plantings from April to July. Makes a fragrant garnish or blends into sauces for veal and fish.

Sweet Marjoram. A tender perennial, treated as an annual. It is a small, low plant to be set into the garden when the ground is warm. Its delicious, spicy flavor remains when the leaves are dried. Can be used with fowl, lamb and vegetables. Parsley. A very hardy biennial. The seeds take about three weeks to germinate, unless soaked overnight in water before planting. Its foliage makes an attractive low border.

Rosemary. This tender evergreen perennial is one of the most decorative herbs. It has an assertive spicy flavor that is delicious with lamb and chicken and in stuffings. FW

Drying Or Freezing Herbs

Here's how to dry herbs for future use. Cut the stems when the plant is ready. Don't cut too close to the ground. Separate into small bunches; tie with string and hang in a warm, dry, dark place until the leaves are crisp and brittle. In the summer drying takes from three to 10 days. Strip the leaves and buds and put as whole as possible into a jar with a tight lid to preserve the flavor. Check during the first few days to be sure the herbs are dry; otherwise mold might develop.

To freeze herbs, gather as for drying, wash if dusty, pat off excess water, place into plastic bags and put into the freezer immediately. When it's time to use, snip or chop the herbs without thawing because they mince easily. Also, put chopped herbs into an ice-cube tray, fill with water and freeze. Cubes can be popped into soups or stews as needed.

A SPRING SHOWER OF FOODS

By Marilyn Hansen

These delectables are just the answer for a party for a new baby or a bride-to-be.

BABY BOOTIE CAKE

4 pkgs. (10¾-oz. size) frozen pound cake
3 pkgs. (15.4-oz. size) creamy white frosting mix
Pink ribbon (¼-inch wide, 1 yard long)
Blue ribbon (¾-inch wide, 1 yard long)

1. Cut 5- × 11-inch rectangle from cardboard and cover with foil.
2. On foil cardboard, place 2 pound cakes on top of each other to form foot and toe of bootie. Place 1 pound cake upright at end of other two cakes to form heel and ankle of bootie.
3. Cut last cake in half and place ½ upright at end of cake to form front part of ankle of bootie. (Second half is for nibbling while you work.)
4. Make up frosting mix according to package directions, 1 package at a time, and frost cake.
5. Make up last box of frosting mix and use to fill decorating tube with large star tip. Decorate bootie with rosettes and shell border to resemble a knit or crocheted effect. Place on platter and refrigerate.
6. Just before serving, tie pink and blue ribbons around ankle, making one bow with long streamers.

Makes 10 servings

CURRIED TOMATO APPETIZERS

4 hard-cooked eggs
2 tablespoons mayonnaise
½ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon curry powder
3 drops Tabasco
1 box cherry tomatoes

1. With fork, mash hard-cooked eggs until very fine.
2. Combine mashed eggs with mayonnaise, salt, curry powder and Tabasco.
3. Cut off tiny slice from blossom end of tomatoes. Remove seeds and stems and turn upside down to drain.
4. Spoon egg mixture into decorating bag with large star tip and squeeze a rosette of egg mixture into each tomato. Stand upright on serving plate; refrigerate until ready to serve.

Makes 24 to 28 stuffed tomatoes

STRAWBERRY-SPARKLE PUNCH

1 can (46 ozs.) pineapple juice, chilled
1 box (10 ozs.) frozen, sliced, sweetened strawberries, thawed
1 quart strawberry soda, chilled
Ice cubes
Strawberry sherbet

1. In punch bowl, combine pineapple juice, strawberries, strawberry soda and ice cubes.
2. Float small scoops of strawberry sherbet on punch. Ladle into small glasses or punch cups.

Makes 2⅔ quarts (20 half-cup servings)

NUT BREAD

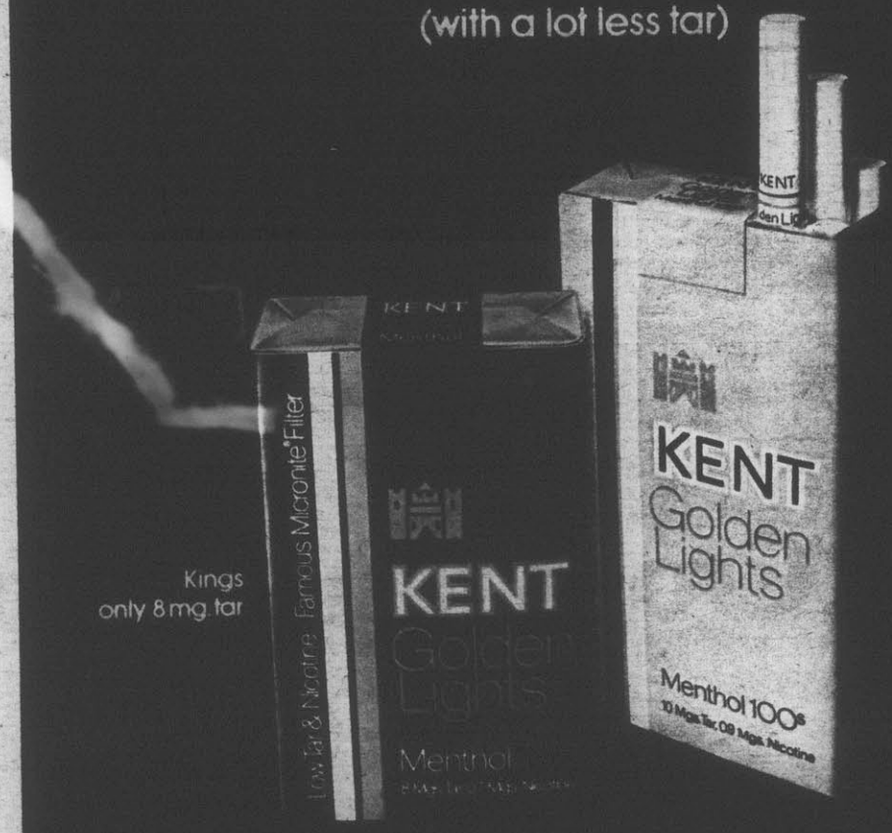

2½ cups unsifted all-purpose flour
1 cup sugar
3½ teaspoons baking powder
1 teaspoon salt
3 tablespoons vegetable oil
1¼ cups milk
1 egg
1 cup chopped almonds or walnuts
2 teaspoons grated lemon or orange rind

1. Preheat oven to 350°F. Oil and flour a 9- × 5- × 3-inch loaf pan or two 8½- × 4½- × 2½-inch loaf pans.
2. Measure all ingredients into large bowl; beat with electric mixer on medium speed ½ minute. Clean bowl and beaters.
3. Pour into pans. Bake 55 to 65 minutes or until wooden pick inserted in center comes out clean.
4. Loosen from sides of pan; turn out of pan. Cool.
5. Wrap in foil when completely cool. Serve plain in slices or spread with butter and marmalade and cut into fingers.

Makes 1 loaf

Frosty fresh and fully satisfying.

PEOPLE QUIZ / By John E. Gibson

Do we have an internal "clock"? Does body temperature affect how fast time seems to pass? Is our sensitivity to pain greater in the morning than in the evening?

THE DIFFERENT WAYS WE PERCEIVE TIME

TRUE OR FALSE?

1. People tend to be most subject to anxiety and depression when they first wake up in the morning.
2. The way you react to various prescribed drugs and medications is likely to be markedly affected by the time of day you take them.
3. Your sensitivity to pain is greater in the morning than in the evening.
4. Our "internal clock," which measures subjective time, makes clock time appear to pass swiftly or slowly, depending on who you're with, what you're doing and how you feel.
5. If your internal clock tends to keep in step with the clock on the wall — if you usually have a pretty accurate idea of what time it is without looking at a timepiece — you probably have a fanciful view of life.
6. Your body temperature affects your sense of time.

ANSWERS

1. False. While many people have times when getting up in the morning is the hardest thing they do all day, studies conducted at the University of California and the University of Illinois show that this is definitely not the case for young people at any rate. In the study, more than 2,000 students were subjected to tests designed to measure emotional states. Half were tested early in the day and the other half late in the day. Findings: subjects tested in the later part of the day — middle to late afternoon — scored significantly higher on measures of anxiety, stress, regression and depression than those tested in the morning.
2. True. A U.S. Public Health Service study cites findings showing that the effectiveness of medications and a person's vulnerability to drugs and toxins vary significantly during the day. The best time for a medicine to be ingested was found to depend on the person's biological rhythm. "Clearly," note the investigators, "the diagnosis and treatment of illness cannot overlook biological time of day. A person whose blood pressure registers 'normal' in the morning may be hypertensive by afternoon." It's also pointed out that blood levels of gamma globulin are different at one hour than another and that biological time is also important for accurate biopsy and laboratory tests. To ascertain a person's biological time of day requires physiological tests at intervals around the clock for several days. It's interesting to note that these findings appear to explain why some persons find themselves responding better to medications when they change the time of day the medications are taken.
3. False. In studies at the Experimental Psychological Laboratory, University of Sussex (England), people were found to be least sensitive to pain in the morning, with sensitivity increasing markedly as the day progressed, hitting two slight peaks at noon and at 6:00. Sensitivity was still on the increase at 10:00 P.M.
4. True. Several factors can determine whether our internal clocks keep pace with the clock on the wall. For example, studies at New York University have shown that an encounter with a pleasant or interesting person often seems to increase the speed with which time passes. On the other hand, tests have shown that an encounter with an unpleasant or boring person has the opposite effect. Interestingly enough, the effect of an unpleasant meeting on one's internal clock was found to be most pronounced during encounters between two females.
5. False. Purdue University studies have shown that people whose internal clocks tend to be synchronized with clock-on-the-wall time make high scores on tests designed to show drive to accomplish and the ability to solve difficult problems and to perform tasks requiring skill and effort. Other studies have shown that a good sense of time is related to a realistic outlook on life.
6. True. Experiments at the Psychological Laboratory, University of Cambridge (England), have demonstrated that when the body temperature increases, the brain's internal clock is affected, causing time to appear to pass more slowly. When the body temperature falls below normal, time seemingly passes faster than it otherwise would. FW

In 1978... How to Achieve Total Financial Freedom

"Millionaires Are Not 100 Times Smarter Than You, They Just Know The Wealth Formula"

Millionaires are not 100 or even 10 times smarter than you. But it is a fact that millionaires are making 10 to 50 and even 100 times more than you.

Are these wealthy people working that much harder than you? No way!

If you are working only 20 hours a week, it would be physically impossible. (There are only 168 hours in a week, no one gets more.)

These questions used to really stump me. That was just a few years ago.

My wife and I then lived in Denver, Colorado, at 2545 South High Street. We paid $135 a month rent for a cramped, tumbled down house. My wife was expecting our second child and we were flat broke. I felt desperate and forced into a corner. I had to borrow $150 from my father and another $150 from my father-in-law just to buy the groceries and pay the rent. If that wasn't enough, I was several thousand dollars in debt.

Things are much different now. Last year I could have retired and lived off the income of my one million dollars in real estate holdings. (Incidently, almost all of the income from the real estate is tax free).

Since I had worked 20 to 40 hours a week, I know that I didn't work even 10 times longer or harder than you. And with my C-average from Ames High School (located in Ames, Iowa). I'm quite certain that I'm not any smarter than you.

If hours, efforts, or brains are not what separates the rich from the average guy who is swamped with debts and very little income, then what is?

I learned the answer to that question from an old fellow in Denver. This fellow worked in a drug store stocking the shelves. Very few people knew that he had $200,000 in the bank, all of which he had earned starting from nothing.

Within a year after meeting him, I was told and shown the same thing by a young man who had recently earned over a million dollars. By this time, I began to realize that what I was being shown was truly a remarkable and workable way to grow rich.

I began to apply the principles and methods I had been shown. The results were amazing. I couldn't believe how easy it was, in fact it seemed too easy.

But then I met an elderly lady (83 years old) who although not very smart, has made $117,000 using the same formula.

I then figured my beginning wasn't luck.

For three and one half years, I worked hard to refine and improve on the formula that I had been shown, so that it would be easy to get quicker results.

As I did this, my assets multiplied very rapidly (160% per year) to the point that I didn't have to work any longer.

Mark Haroldsen, pictured with his wife Lois, spent four years perfecting a "wealth formula" and became a millionaire in the process. "I've found," says Haroldsen, "that most people just need a very specific road map to follow...they can do what I've done." More than 200,000 people have discovered how his methods can lead them to Total Financial Freedom.

I guess I am bragging now, but I did start spending alot of time in our back yard pool, traveling around the country, and doing a lot of loafing.

Then one day a friend asked me how he could do what I had done.

So I began to outline the formula that I had improved to show him really how simple it was, and how he could do the same thing.

By the time he approached me, I had written almost a complete volume on the easy way for him to copy my results.

I wrote this in simple, straightforward language so anyone could understand it.

This time my friend's questions were very specific. (He had already begun buying properties with the formulas I had been giving him). Now he had a property he wanted to buy, but was out of cash. How could he buy it?

I not only showed him how to buy without cash, but by the time the deal was complete, he had $5,000 cash in his pocket to boot.

I also showed him how to buy a $26,000 property for $75 down.

You, or anyone, can do exactly what I did, or my close friends have done/ in fact, you may well do it better. (I began doing this in my spare time only).

It doesn't matter where you live or the size of your town or city, my formula will show you exactly how to:

- Buy income properties for as little as $100 down.
- Begin without any cash.
- Put $10,000 cash in your pocket each time you buy (without selling property).
- Double your assets every year. Legally avoid paying federal or state income taxes.
- Buy bargains at ½ their market value.
- Allow you to travel one week out of every month.

When you send me a check or money order for $10, I will send you all my formulas and methods, and you are free to use them anywhere and as often as you would like.

Now, if you were a personal friend of mine, I know you would believe me and not need any kind of guarantee that you will be completely satisfied and that my formula will work for you if you apply it. I will back up that guarantee by not cashing your check for 30 days, and if you for any reason change your mind, let me know and I will send your uncashed check back.

You may ask, why am I willing to share my formula for wealth? Well, simply because those of you who order my material will be helping to increase my net worth.

You shouldn't care if I profit as long as you profit. I guarantee that you'll be satisfied that my methods will help you or I'll send your money back!

To order, simply take any size paper, write the words "Financial Freedom", and send your name and address, along with a check for $10.00 to Mark O. Haroldsen, Inc., Dept.G-255, Tudor Mansion Bldg., 4751 Holladay Blvd., Salt Lake City, Utah 84117.

If you send for my material now, I will also send you documents that will show you precisely how you can borrow from $20,000 to $200,000 at 2% above the prime rate using just your signature as collateral.

By the way, if you feel a little uneasy about sending me a check or money order for $10.00, simply post-date it by 30 days which will completely eliminate your risk. If you would like to check a financial reference, I have listed one below:

CRAFTS/By Rosalyn Abrevaya

MAKE BEAUTIFUL ARRANGEMENTS WITH DRIED FLOWERS AND FOLIAGE

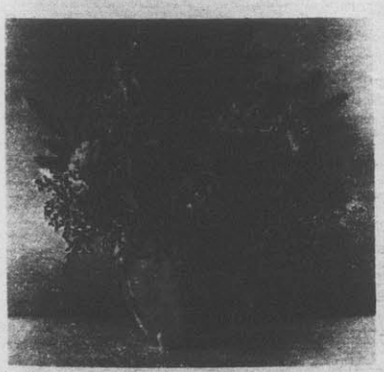

You can learn how to preserve flowers, leaves — even fruit rinds — and turn them into fantasy creations.

Prized garden flowers and those that are very delicate can be arranged and then protected under a glass dome.

These unusual blossoms are created with dried palm leaves. Other materials, such as dried fruit rinds, also can be used to create fantasy flowers.

Grasses, mums and maple leaves make a pleasing dining-room centerpiece when arranged in a casual fashion.

Flowers hold such fascination. For centuries, nature lovers have been practicing the art of drying and preserving blossoms and foliage.

Since texture, color and structure of flowers and foliage differ so widely, various methods of preservation are required.

Some plant materials are best preserved by hanging them to air dry. Others require a glycerin treatment to keep them from becoming brittle.

Another drying technique, which requires a sandlike drying agent you can make yourself, allows the flowers to retain a natural form and a great deal of color.

Leaves of certain trees can be skeletonized to create "angel feathers." This is done by soaking the leaves in a solution that eats away the fleshy parts and leaves behind the veins. These lacy leaves add a soft touch to dried arrangements and also are an interesting material for making collages and parchment note cards.

Vegetables, gourds, seed pods, citrus fruits and pomegranates are other materials that can be preserved and used to accent arrangements. You even can create your own flowers. Fruit rinds can be turned into petals for fantasy flowers.

With spring and summer just ahead, now is the time to start collecting and preserving prized garden flowers and all the interesting materials nature offers in fields and woods.

FAMILY WEEKLY's Preserving Flowers and Foliage leaflet #307 gives complete instructions on such drying methods as air-drying, glycerin treatment, drying with agents (instructions for making the agent are included), pressing and waxing. The leaflet also tells how to skeletonize leaves to give plants an icelike coating and to make parchment note cards and pinecone wreaths without wire.

By following instructions in the leaflet, you also will be able to dry vegetables, artichokes (to make them look like flowers), gourds, fruit and seed pods.

Here's how to order instructions. Send $1 for each copy of Preserving Flowers and Foliage leaflet #307 to:

Recommended by the U.S. Government's very own doctors to members of Congress who want to lose weight fast . . . Hailed as the weight-loss "breakthrough of the century" by leading medical journals . . . here at last is the most effective NO-DRUG program for FAST — INSTANT — PERMANENT LIFETIME WEIGHT-LOSS ever made available to the public without a prescription!

WORKS SO FAST THE FIRST WEEK ALONE YOU LOSE AS MUCH AS 1½ TO 2 POUNDS OF BOTH FLUID AND FAT EVERY 24 HOURS!

Direct from the pages of medical journals and America's leading digest magazine come reports of an incredible "fat burning" breakthrough by medical researchers at one of Boston's foremost medical schools! Reports of a new "crash-loss" program (featuring a remarkable natural substance) that safely yet surely steps up FAT-BURNING METABOLISM . . . forces your system to ATTACK bulging pockets of fat . . . and starts to shrink and burn that fat in just a matter of hours!

Yes, from one of New England's leading medical centers comes the new SUPER FAT-BURNER way to turn up your "inner furnace" . . . unlock those clinging pockets of fat . . . break them down SO FAST . . . you burn off excess bulge at the unbelieveable rate of up to 6 POUNDS of both fluid and fat GONE the very first weekend alone!

Think of it! You actually burn away more fat each 24 hours than if you ran 12 to 14 miles a day! Lose more inches each week than if you did 300 sit-ups each morning and 300 push-ups each night! Actually LOSE as much as A FULL SIZE THE FIRST 7 DAYS . . . and from 3 to 5 inches off your waistline the very first month!

U.S. ARMY OFFICERS LOSE WEIGHT 3 TIMES FASTER THAN EVER BEFORE!

Case History #1: When medical researchers in Boston, New York, Philadelphia and Los Angeles first tested this new hi-amino concept on a scientific weight-loss program . . . they reported astonishing results of as much as 12 POUNDS LOST IN JUST THE FIRST 7 DAYS! — 16 to 18 pounds gone by the end of week number two — and most mind-boggling of all — U.S. Army Officers actually losing weight 3 times faster than ever before! As much as 50 POUNDS GONE, like that!

WAISTLINES SHRINK UP TO 3 INCHES IN 7 DAYS — A FULL 5 INCHES SMALLER IN A SINGLE MONTH!

Case History #2: When first rumors of this medical breakthrough leaked out to professional actors, actresses and celebrities . . . they immediately rushed to the offices of America's leading weight-loss specialists to get their hands on this "magic compound"; and no wonder! Because the first week alone they carved away as much as 2 pounds a day . . . 13 pounds a week . . . were forced to take in their belts 3 notches smaller in just 10 days!

DOCTORS REPORT: AVERAGE LOSS — 57 POUNDS!

Case History #3: But most significant of all . . . when universities, hospitals and medical schools, (such as New York's Leading Medical School and Cleveland's largest hospital) tested this newly discovered "crash-loss" program on patients who all their lives had been hopelessly overweight . . . they reported astonishing losses of as much as 2 pounds a day at the start . . . 20 to 30 pounds a month . . . as much as 70 pounds lost over a single summer season! — by simply stepping up their fast-burning metabolism and burning, melting oxidizing 50, 70, 100 pounds of hard-set fat . . . FASTER, SURER than they had ever dreamed possible!

WORKS LIKE "POWDERED HEAT" — MAKES YOUR INNER FURNACE BREAK DOWN BODY FAT!

What is this wondrous new development that helps safely stimulate fat-burning metabolism and shrink your body's fat cells the moment it starts working in your system? It is a totally new concept in the war against fat. An ANTI-FAT WEAPON unlike anything you've ever seen, or tried in your life. A FAT-BURNING aid that helps you convert body fat to body fuel AUTOMATICALLY . . . and EVAPORATE excess pounds and inches starting the very first day!

Think of it! A medically proven formula that is such an effective reducing aid . . . that when combined with the food you eat on this "crash-loss" program . . . burns off as much fat each 24 hours as if you jogged up to 14 miles a day . . . or played 3 hours of tennis in the most brutal heat!

The name of this wondrous amino formula is "THERA-SLIM-100" and here is precisely how you use it to win the body and figure of your dreams as you:

LOSE UP TO 4 TO 6 INCHES OFF YOUR WAISTLINE
LOSE UP TO 2 TO 5 INCHES OFF YOUR HIPS
LOSE UP TO 3 INCHES OFF YOUR THIGHS
LOSE UP TO 4 INCHES OFF YOUR BUTTOCKS
LOSE UP TO 4 INCHES OFF YOUR STOMACH and as we've said before, starting not in weeks, but in mere days.

HELPS YOUR BODY CONVERT STORED UP FAT TO BURNED UP ENERGY! At this very moment — having read this far — you are but one short step away from LIFETIME IMMUNITY TO FAT! Now comes your FINAL GIANT STEP into a whole new world of LIFETIME SLIMNESS.

Of course, there is one thing you must keep in mind. With the "THERA-SLIM-100" way to LIFETIME SLIMNESS you cannot gorge yourself on all sorts of fattening foods, candies and desserts. Not that you'd ever want to, because with "THERA-SLIM-100" — due to your new, stepped up metabolism — besides enormous weight-loss you also experience a loss of hunger. Which makes it one of the easiest ways to lose weight fast.

Now here's how simple it is:

STEP #1 — YOU EAT

In addition to the wide and tasty selection of food you enjoy morning and night, (all scientifically programmed to help maintain a high-level of FAT BURN-OFF) . . . STEP #2 — YOU TAKE "THERA-SLIM-100" hi amino compound.

Once a day, you take "THERA-SLIM-100" in a glass of water, (just like refreshing fruit juice). This hi-amino intake helps keep the fat-burning chain-reaction going ALL 24 HOURS OF THE DAY — NON STOP!

STEP #3 — YOU HAVE AUTOMATICALLY STEPPED UP YOUR FAT-BURNING METABOLISM — SO YOU AUTOMATICALLY BURN OFF EXCESS WEIGHT!

In virtually no time at all, you make your inner furnace accelerate fat burn-off. Safely, gently, yet surely you cause a gradual change in your fat-burning metabolism as you "rev-up" that inner furnace.

The result: Your body begins to eliminate stored-up fat and fluid at a rate so incredibly fast, the very first weekend alone YOU DRAIN AWAY AS MUCH AS 5 OR 6 POUNDS!

In short, with the "THERA-SLIM-100" weight-loss program, you force your body to automatically convert body fat to body fuel . . . automatically shrink fatty cells . . . drain off excess flab . . . flush it right out of your system ONCE AND FOR ALL!

Never before has medical science offered you a surer, faster, more effective weight-loss method, (short of total fasting) than this super fat-burning breakthrough developed at one of Boston's Leading Medical Schools.

THE FACTS ARE IN! THE RESEARCH IS DONE! THE INCREDIBLE WEIGHT-SLASHING RESULTS HAVE BEEN PROVEN BEYOND A SHADOW OF A DOUBT BY MEDICAL SCHOOLS — HOSPITALS — DOCTORS — AND SCORES AND SCORES OF OVERWEIGHT PATIENTS! NOW THE FINAL STEP IS UP TO YOU!

REMEMBER: You must see dramatic results in just 24 hours — results you can measure with both your scale and your tape measure . . . you must lose:

up to 6 lbs. the first 48 hours up to 12 lbs. the first 7 days up to 7 lbs. more the next 7 days or it costs you nothing! Simply return within 10 days for full refund (except postage and handling, of course). Act now!

IF YOU READ NOTHING ELSE—READ THIS!

What you see on this page is the announcement of the fastest breakthrough by medical science in the war against fat. Developed at one of Boston's leading medical schools, the incredible weight-loss results this new "crash-burn" program delivers are so astonishing (average loss 57 lbs.) it has been featured in every leading medical journal . . . given headline coverage in the medical news columns of many major newspapers. Aside from — ABSOLUTE STARVATION — there is no surer, faster, more effectvie way to slash away pounds and inches than with this Boston Medical School discovery.

However, before starting we advise you to consult with your physician to be sure you are in normal health and your only problem is excess weight. Individuals with gout, heart disease, diabetes or pregnant women should not use it at all. As a matter of fact, we insist that you show this entire program to your family physician . . . have him check you regularly to make sure you're not losing too much, too fast . . . and advise when you've lost enough. See if he doesn't agree that the "THERA-SLIM-100" road to Lifetime Slimness, including the recommended progressive daily toneup, isn't by far the most effective approach to the conquest of excess weight ever developed by medical science.

ARMOUR'S ARMOURY

A-HUNTING SHE WILL GO

My wife goes hunting without a gun,
And hunting to her is the best of fun.
She never would kill an endangered species,
For a kindly kind you will surely see she's.
If she has no gun and is loath to kill,
Then what does she hunt with? I'd say with skill
In use of her elbows and sometimes her feet,
Which makes her a huntress one hates to meet.
And now I shall say — no more hints or jargon —
My wife when she's hunting is hunting a bargain.
— Richard Armour

Wife (partly conscience-stricken): "I'm giving our former maid a reference for a new job. I've said that she's impertinent, undependable and lazy. Now I'd like to say something good about her. What do you suggest?" Husband (totally virtuous): "You could say that she eats well and sleeps soundly." — Samuel J. Stannard

I wouldn't exactly say my Aunt Tillie is heavy, but every time she becomes excited, she suffers from mass hysteria. — Al Batt

While we are all thinking of tax returns this April, consider this as well: don't scorn the IRS. It has discovered some of our country's most creative people.

If they were balloons, they up

Inflated as they are — more and

The washing machine broke down, and the repairman arrived, tapped it once lightly with a hammer, got the machine working and submitted a bill for $40. Outraged, the householder wanted an itemized bill, arguing that it was too high for a simple tap. So the repairman obliged:
Tapping with hammer . . $1
Knowing where to tap . . . . $39.

LITTLE EMILY

"That about does it for now. See You next time I'm bad."

It's interesting how many persons read the Bible and quote the Bible without knowing anything of the story of how the Bible came to be written. Not that the Bible's story is more important than the Bible itself. But some knowledge of the background helps to avoid many false notions.

One such false notion is that which sees the Bible as the adversary of the Church and vice versa. Another is the notion that the Bible can be read in a vacuum as though it had no history at all or no dependence for meaning upon the history and culture of its human authors and their communities.

Quite apart from avoiding error, a knowledge of the history of the Bible helps to enrich one's reading of the Bible and thereby deepens one's faith. For a simple introduction to the great subject of the Bible's beginning and development, write for our free pamphlet, "God's News to Man." No one will call on you.

Hogs Who Jog

Pregnant hogs jog 15 minutes every day and take a shower once a week as part of an experiment at the Univ. of Georgia's Coastal Plain Experiment Station. The research, which is being done by a team headed by Dr. O.M. Hale, is an attempt to help people learn how to increase pork, ribs and bacon yields.

Dr. Hale says most pregnant sows in confinement get little activity. Does this have a negative effect on their performance as meat producers and mothers? Nobody knows for sure, but Hale and his staff hope to find out.

In the meantime, Hale's experiment has demonstrated that pigs aren't all that different from people — they love the shower, but grunt and protest at jogging.

Get Your House Ready For Sale

Planning to move? Now's the time to make those inexpensive improvements, suggested by the National Ass'n. of Realtors, that will get your house ready to sell.

- Tidy up the outside. Driveways should be clear, lawns, shrubs and trees neatly trimmed. Remember, overgrown plantings can keep out necessary light and even make some rooms damp.
- Paint your house if the old paint is wearing thin or is an unappealing color. A new paint job may not add much value, but an old one will detract.
- Give the inside of the house a "cared for" look. This means no cracked walls, burned-out light bulbs, leaky plumbing or missing tiles.
- Clean out closets, attics and basements to make the house look more spacious. You also can make rooms appear larger by rearranging furniture.
- Remove water marks on walls or ceilings and correct their causes.

Don't forget to keep a record of what you spend on these improvements. In some cases, the expense of improving a home for sale can be used to reduce taxes. Ask your realtor or accountant for details.

Reviving Our Musical Heritage

Would you like to hear the way the "Star-Spangled Banner" originally sounded? How about the music that Thomas Jefferson performed for his guests? Now it's possible to take a musical time-trip back into America's past with the help of the Federal Music Society, a group that plays Early American music on authentic antique instruments of the period.

Frederick R. Selch, who founded the group in honor of the Bicentennial, says many people don't realize that Early American music originally sounded quite different from what it does now. Selch says in Jefferson's time orchestras were evenly divided between stringed and woodwind instruments, giving a crisper and more precise sound than the modern orchestra.

Selch, who has a collection of more than 300 antique instruments in his N.Y. City townhouse, adds that Early American music used some bizarre-looking and strange-sounding instruments.

Listeners will soon be able to hear the society's music on records produced by the Rockefeller Foundation.

Storing Medicines

Your bathroom medicine cabinet may be the worst place to store most medications, reports a major medical magazine. Why? Because the warm, damp air that fills a bathroom after a shower or bath can cause many common medications to deteriorate — with potentially harmful results.

After prolonged storage either above or below recommended temperature, a drug's potency can also be seriously altered. The medication may become useless — or toxic.

To protect your family, make sure to ask your pharmacist for information on how to store each prescription drug you order as well as such over-the-counter products as cough medicine and aspirin.

Quick Takes

Complaints about unsatisfactory products and sloppy service are increasing according to a national survey conducted by U.S. News and World Report. Seventy percent of the respondents said they had returned unsatisfactory products during the past year to the place where they were bought, compared with 59% who made such returns in 1976. A quarter of the participants said they had lodged a complaint with a branch of govt. Where is the consumer most likely to get satisfaction? Retailers scored highest, with 4 out of 5 people reporting that their complaints were handled satisfactorily. However, only 37% of those who complained about gov't. service won satisfaction.

Mother's milk may be best for your baby say Chicago medical researchers, who report it contains elements that protect infants against certain infections. It also has a softer curd than cow's milk, so infants are less likely to develop intestinal obstructions.

Newsmen aren't always in touch with their readers' interests, reports a Harris poll. Sixty percent of the adults polled said they were "very interested" in national news, a subject only 34% of the journalists surveyed said they thought interested their audiences. Similarly, 75% of the newsmen said they thought the public was very interested in sports news; only 35% of the public indicated a high interest in sports.

Why Buy A Genuine Diamond

When only an expert can tell if it's real ?

IT'S TRUE-- -- FEW PEOPLE CAN TELL THE DIFFERENCE. -- This is why movie stars and millionaires often wear simulations when they make public appearances. They know that only real experts or jewelers with powerful magnifiers can tell (for sure) if they are wearing a ring worth thousands or a Gemfire Simulation costing less than $25!

GEMFIRES ARE CATCHING ON LIKE WILDFIRE! -- Your friends and neighbors sporting big beautiful sparklers may be wearing Gemfires now and using the difference to make a payment on their dream house or buy a car! And once you see a Gemfire you'll be proud to wear one yourself, or give it to someone you love.

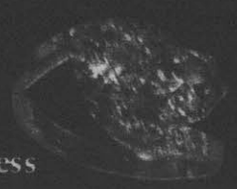

PICTURES DON'T DO JUSTICE TO GEMFIRE BEAUTY. -- You can't really tell how lovely they are from pictures. That's why Crown Galleries offer every Gemfire Simulated Diamond with a FULL ONE YEAR GUARANTEE. You can't lose!

GEMFIRES ARE SELECTED FOR BRILLIANCE AND FIERY BEAUTY. -- No cracks! No bubbles! No imperfections to dull their radiance. They are carefully cut and polished by master-craftsmen and just as genuine diamonds Gemfires have 58 facets. Then they're hand-set in handsome 18Kt-Heavy Gold Electroplate or solid Sterling Silver mountings. Remember - - Gemfires are not cheap paste or glass. They're so hard they cut glass! Order your Gemfire today - - and put some sparkle into your life!

OUR NO RISK GUARANTEE!

If within one year of date of purchase you are dissatisfied in any way with your Jewelry, return to PLANTRON, INC. by INSURED MAIL for either repair, replacement, or refund of your purchase price.

How to Find Your Ring Size

1. Cut a strip of paper 3 inches long and 1/4 inch wide.

2. Wrap the strip around the finger that is to wear the ring. Then place a dot, on the strip where it meets the end.

3. Place the dot on the strip of paper at "A" on the ring guide. The number at the end of the strip is your ring size.

LADIES RINGS AVAILABLE IN SIZES 5 THRU 10

MEN'S RINGS AVAILABLE IN SIZES 7 THRU 13

ALL RINGS SHOWN LARGER THAN ACTUAL SIZE.

GLOSSARY OF TERMS

CARAT (CT)-- a measure of weight for a diamond. Our simulated diamonds are given approximate carat values based on size, not weight. A 1-carat Gemfire is approximately the same size as a 1-carat diamond.

HEAVY GOLD ELECTROPLATE (HGE)-- this mounting uses karat gold (either white or yellow) that is electrically bonded to the mounting after it is formed and the gold, by government standard, is 14 times thicker than the designated "gold electroplate."

STERLING SILVER (SS)-- the mounting is 92.5% pure silver, 7.5% other metals for strength, and to eliminate tarnishing is lightly plated with precious rhodium.

GOLD FILLED (GF)-- a lamination of Base Metal placed between sheets of gold.

Wh. Mtg. - - white mounting
Yel. Mtg. - - yellow mounting
SS - - Sterling Silver

VERY SPECIAL — 100 FT. RED TWIG

DOGWOOD HEDGE

Only 20 for $2.98

40 plants $5.75 (200 foot)

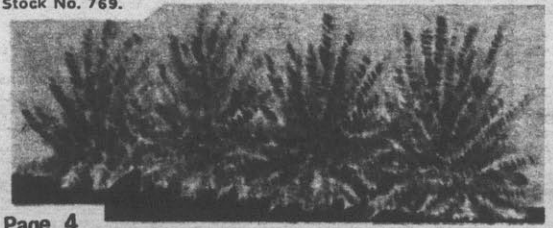

Some shrubs give beautiful spring flowers, others give nice summer foliage, and most seem to wither away unattractively each winter. But these hardy Red Twig Dogwood (Cornus Stolonifera) have beautiful clusters of white flowers in the spring, loads of lush green leaves in the summer, and in the winter, when you expect a drab yard, they put on a fiery show of color with their bright red stems contrasting against the snow — an outstanding year around hedge! You get nice 1 to 2 foot well rooted nursery grown shrubs. Grow to 6 feet, but can be trimmed for a beautiful hedge.
Stock No. 726.

Our Story: VAL BRINGS HIS FAMILY TO THE GOVERNOR'S PALACE AND FINDS IT FILLED WITH THE RETINUE OF SOME EASTERN POTENTATE. "THESE JACKALS OGLE ME AS IF THEY HAD NEVER SEEN A WOMAN BEFORE!" SNAPS ALETA.

GIAN SUFENDI HAS WEALTH AND POWER AND ONE HUNDRED GIRLS OF DIFFERENT COLORS IN HIS HAREM BUT NO GOLDEN ONES LIKE THE BEAUTY APPROACHING.

BATHED AND DRESSED IN FRESH GARMENTS, VAL AND HIS FAMILY DESCEND TO THE GREAT HALL... NO OTHER WOMEN ARE PRESENT.

THEY MEET THE GOVERNOR AND HE IS DELIGHTED TO ENTERTAIN ROYALTY. ALL HIS NEIGHBORS WILL ENVY HIS SOCIAL RISE.

DINNER IS SERVED ORIENTAL STYLE, SITTING ON THE FLOOR ON RUGS AND CUSHIONS ON EITHER SIDE OF THE CALIPH WHO LOOKS LONGINGLY AT ALETA AS IF HE WERE UNDRESSING HER WITH HIS EYES.

FINALLY THE CALIPH TURNS TO VAL: "I'LL GIVE YOU ONE HUNDRED TALENTS IN GOLD FOR THAT WOMAN."

"WHAT!" EXCLAIMS VAL, "ONE HUNDRED TALENTS FOR A QUEEN? WHY, SHE SPENDS MORE THAN THAT ON CLOTHES. I FEAR YOU CANNOT AFFORD HER."

"THEN I'LL SETTLE FOR ONE OF HER DAUGHTERS." BUT VAL'S TEMPER EXPLODES: "YOUR WHOLE BLASTED, GRUBBY LITTLE PROVINCE COULD NOT BUY SO MUCH AS ONE STRAND OF GOLDEN HAIR!"

Archie

SVENSON, HAVE YOU BEEN TAKING INVENTORY OF WHAT NEEDS TO BE REPAIRED?

YA, SURE! I EVEN TEST ALL MATCHES IN KITCHEN TO SEE IF THEY LIGHT UP O.K.!

MISS BEAZLY, HOW WOULD YOU SAY WE COULD ARRANGE THINGS TO SAVE STEPS FOR GREATER EFFICIENCY?

WE COULD MOVE YOUR DESK INTO THE KITCHEN!

MISS PHLIPS, SEE THAT EVERY TEACHER GETS A COPY OF THESE NEW RULES!

1. ACCOUNT IN WRITING FOR ALL MATCHES USED
2. ABSOLUTELY NO MOONLIGHTING
3. TARDINESS WILL NOT BE TOLERATED

I RUN A TIGHT SHIP AND ANY TEACHER VIOLATING THESE RULES WILL...

...WALK THE PLANK?

SATURDAY...

THIS SHOULD BE ENOUGH PAINT FOR MY BEDROOM!

BE WITH YOU IN A FEW MINUTES! I'VE GOT NO HELP TODAY!

I CAN PUMP GAS, CHARLIE! I WORKED AT A GAS STATION WHILE IN COLLEGE!

THIS IS FUN! NOTHING LIKE A COMPLETE CHANGE OF SCENE TO MAKE YOU FORGET ABOUT THE PRESSURE OF YOUR JOB!
