In Violation Of Agreement With U.S.

Israelis Used Bombs On Civilian Targets

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Israeli military forces used deadly American-made anti-personnel cluster bombs in their invasion of southern Lebanon in violation of both U.S. arms control law and the agreement under which the weapons were provided, the State Department said Saturday.

"We have confirmed that Israel used C.B.U.'s, Cluster Bomb Units, supplied by the United States in southern Lebanon," department spokesman Charles Shapiro said. "Israel has told us they were used exclusively against military targets."

Shapiro said the weapons, developed by the United States for use in Vietnam, were provided under the 1952 agreement with Israel that set forth restrictions in conformance with the Arms Export Control Act.

"I can't go into details of these restrictions," Shapiro said. "But Israel's use of the C.B.U.'s in its recent military operation in southern Lebanon was contrary to those restrictions."

"We are having discussions with Israeli govenment with a view to assuring that those restrictions will be observed in the future."

Shapiro indicated the violation would not stop the United States from continuing to suppply arms to Israel. An official estimated at least $4 billion in U.S. arms were currently in the pipeline for the Israelis.

Under American arms control law, the Israelis were believed to have been restricted to using the devastating bombs only in the case of all-out war and against well entrenched targets.

The bombs are normally a cluster of explosive units that spray shrapnel over a wide area.

American journalists first reported on March 20 Israeli planes dropped cluster bombs on a Palestinian camp south of the coastal city of Tyre. As the result of the reports, Rep. Paul McCloskey Jr., R-Calif., sought confirmation from the administration.

Secretary of State Cyrus Vance, in a letter to House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill on Wednesday, said a violation of the arms agreement with Israel may have occurred.

The letter covered the use of the cluster bombs "as well as other military equipment," the spokesman said. "In addition, Israel had also given us assurances that it would observe certain specific restrictions governing the use of C.B.U.'s."

"Since the C.B.U.'s, like other U.S.-supplied military equipment, were covered in the secretary's report to Congress, we don't believe another separate report is necessary," Shapiro said. "However, we will be discussing this matter with interested members of Congress.

"Finally, we don't believe that any further action with respect to Israel is required under the law as the secretary indicated in his letter last week."

Shapiro quoted Vance as saying in the letter, "In these circumstances, including the ongoing efforts to restore momentum to the vital peace negotiations, and Israel's assurance that it intends to withdraw from Lebanon, I am not recommending to the president any further action."

The New York Times quoted an administration official as saying Israel had acknowledged the cluster bombs should not have been used in Lebanon and had apologized.

May Be Endangering Ratification Of Treaty

By DAVID NAGY

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter says he fears Panama may be hurting prospects for ratification of the canal treaty by pressing objections to an amendment on U.S. defense rights.

He said Senate support for the pending main treaty is so tenuous it "hangs by a thread," and, in an apparent effort to ease Panama's anxieties, pledged the United States will never intervene in its internal affairs regardless of what any treaty amendment says.

In an interview with visiting editors and news directors, Carter also said the United States is involving itself in African affairs as never before; dodged a question on whether he thinks Israel has nuclear arms; and repeated his vow to veto a farm price support bill if Congress passes it.

Text of the interview, conducted Friday, was released Saturday.

On the treaty issue, a questioner noted Panama has written the United Nations complaining that the Senate has passed a "reservation" allowing the United States to use military force to keep the waterway open after Panama takes it over in 1999.

The letter appeared to be the first move in a drive to line up international backing should Panama decide to reject the Senate language.

The reservation, authored by Sen. Dennis DeConcini, D-Ariz., was added to the first of the two Panama Canal treaties just before it was ratified with one vote to spare March 16.

Asked if he were "fearful that (Panama's) objections could jeopardize ratification of the second treaty," due for a ratification vote April 18, Carter replied:

"I think any sort of a change or unpredictable development could endanger the passage of the second Panama treaty in the Senate because it hangs by a thread. The support that we have is very tenuous in some instances ...

"Any statement, even if it is well based, by the Panamanians, that would cause consternation or doubt in the minds of U.S. senators could very well endanger the passage of the second treaty."

In any case, Carter said, the United States has no right to intervene in Panama's internal affairs and will not do so.

On other issues, Carter:

—Said the United States has "become more deeply involved in the affairs in Africa than ever before" and is embarking on major efforts to mediate peace in Rhodesia and southwest Africa.

—Asked whether he thinks Israel has nuclear weapons, as some intelligence analysts believe, said, "our policy is to accept the statement of the Israelis concerning their nuclear weapons capability. I don't have any independent information beyond that." Israel denies it has nuclear arms.

—Said farm prices are making "good progress" under existing legislation and he "won't hesitate five minutes" to veto price support legislation approved by House-Senate conferees if it reaches his desk.

Guilty Of Conspiracy

By GREGORY GORDON

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A federal jury Saturday found businessman Hancho Kim guilty of conspiring to deliver $600,000 in payoffs to congressmen as part of a secret South Korean effort to influence U.S. foreign policy.

The jury deliberated more than seven hours before its foreman, Olga King, announced the verdict while Kim and his wife, Soonduk, sat expressionless in the courtroom of U.S. District Judge Thomas Flannery.

The jurors found Kim guilty of both counts in his indictment — conspiracy and a charge that he lied to a federal grand jury in denying he ever received the $600,000 from a Korean intelligence agent.

Kim, a naturalized U.S. citizen who runs a cosmetics business in Maryland, faces a maximum penalty of 10 years in prison and a $20,000 fine. Sentencing was set for May 19.

It was the first case to go to trial in the long-running investigation of Korean influence-buying in Washington and the strongest judgment yet that Korean agents planned to pay off congressmen with the backing of Korean President Park Chung Hee.

President Park has repeatedly denied his government ever initiated such illegal lobbying action, despite a weight of evidence to the contrary.

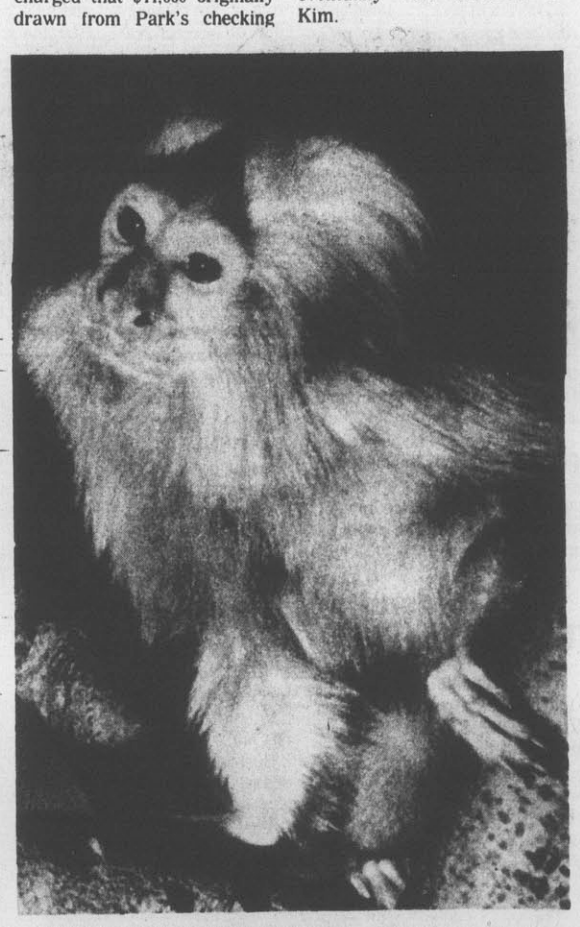

Kim, who did not testify at his trial, was never accused of actually giving any money to congressmen and the prosecution speculated he kept all the money for himself. His attorney, David Povich, had said earlier he would appeal a guilty verdict.

Kim, 56, who joked while pitching pennies in a corridor with reporters minutes before the jury returned its verdict, took the decision calmly, shaking hands and smiling. His wife managed a smile in the courtroom, but broke into tears outside.

The Kims face a separate tax evasion case in Baltimore, Md., for failing to report the money from Seoul on their income tax return.

Flannery ordered Kim to surrender his U.S. passport to the government so he cannot leave the country. The judge allowed Kim to remain free and live at his home in Lanham, Md., until his sentencing, with the condition that he notify the Justice Department of any plans to leave the Washington area.

Besides indicted rice dealer Tongsun Park, who has testified under immunity from prosecution that he gave $850,000 to congressmen, Kim was the only Korean indicted in the scandal to date. Park, a millionaire socialite, testified at the trial that he never had met Kim, but the prosecution charged that $44,000 originally drawn from Park's checking account and turned over to Korean intelligence officials eventually was delivered to Kim.

A NO-LONGER VANISHING BREED — The golden lion marmoset, a diminuitive monkey threatened with extinction in its native Brazil, now stands a chance of being preserved as a species because of the captive breeding program being conducted at the Smithsonian National Zoo in Washington. The zoo recently celebrated the birth of its 100th marmoset, which is half the number of the creatures believed to exist in the wild. (AP Laserphoto)

Would Fine Landlords

WINSTON-SALEM, N. C. (AP) — Secretary Howard N. Lee of North Carolina's Department of Natural Resources and Community Development has proposed that the state's landlords be fined for refusing to fix up slum housing.

"Industry can be fined hundreds of thousands of dollars for putting pollution in our water or smoke in our air. I'm of the opinion that it's time for us to do something about the housing problem and fine landlords for every day they do not fix up a house," Lee said Friday.

He said North Carolina has more than 400,000 substandard houses. He said that means about one in four housing units is too crowded, lacks running water or is dilapidated.

In Forsyth County, it was noted, there are 7,387 substandard units by U. S. Department of Housing and Urban Development count. This represents 10.9 percent of the houses in the county, the second lowest percentage in the state.

Lee spoke at the Area Businessmen's Luncheon sponsored by the Experiment in Self-Reliance and the 70001 Career Association.

The luncheon honored the 70001 program, which helps high school dropouts pass the high school equivalency test and get jobs.

The Winston-Salem chapter recently was named third most outstanding in the nation.

In an interview, Lee also spoke about Africa, saying he hopes to lead a trade delegation to Liberia, Nigeria and other African nations, possibly next year.

He said these nations are untapped markets for such North Carolina products as food and textiles.

Investigating Murder

A Greenville man was shot to death at his home early Saturday morning.

Marvin Earl Stepps, 33, of 1407 Mill Street died at the scene at approximately 5 a.m. from two .410-gauge shotgun blasts which hit him in the right arm and the left side of the body, according to a Greenville Police spokesman.

The spokesman refused to confirm or deny whether a definite suspect is being sought, but said the investigation is continuing.

Pitt County Sheriff Ralph Tyson said Saturday night that officers from his department are assisting members of the Greenville Police Department and the State Bureau of Investigation in the case.

Tyson said he had no firm information on developments but that he expected county and city officers would have definite results by Monday from the ongoing investigation.

Participation Limited

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — As the deadline for the new acreage program passed Friday, it appeared that relatively few flue-cured tobacco farmers were planning to take part.

The program is part of federal efforts to rescue the tobacco price support system. Farmers were told this year that they could plant 20 percent more acreage if they agreed to leave the bottom four leaves on the stalks when they harvested their crops.

"Our report was that participation in Florida was very limited, in Goergia they were hoping to end up with 30 percent, in South Carolina about the same thing, in North Carolina around 7 to 8 percent and it looked like there was going to be less participation in Virginia than anywhere else," said John W. Sledge, president of the North Carolina Farm Bureau Federation.

Oregon Inlet Bridge Sinking

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A North Carolina Dept. of Transportation spokesman said Saturday that the Oregon Inlet Bride which connects Bodie and Hatteras islands in Dare County is sinking due to erosion problems.

Cy Lynn, DOT public affairs director, said the bridge was surveyed last week and found to have sunk more than two inches on the east side and about two inches on the west side. Lynn said divers found erosion problems in the bridge's foundation.

He said the bridge will be closed daily from 6:30 p.m. until 6:30 a.m. until further notice. During the hours it is open, there will be one lane of traffic.

Forest Fires

UNDATED (AP) — Forest fires have destroyed 21,300 acres of North Carolina land, and forest service officials say the fire situation is worsening.

Fire prevention specialist Tom Hegele is blaming the unseasonably warm, dry weather for the number of fires so far this year. He said there have been more than 2,000 blazes reported in the state since mid-March. Sixty-one fires were reported on Thursday alone.

"No records have been set by the fires," Hegele said. "Back in 1971 we had a single fire that burned up 30,000 acres. That was in Dare County. It started on an Air Force bombing range."

Hegele said in spite of the large number of fires, forest service officials have matters under control. He said all 550 of the state forestry division's full-time employees are either fighting fires or standing by to fight them, along with 28 aircraft and other firefighting equipment.

Hegele said the work is being made more difficult by the continuing dry, windy weather, with winds gusting up to 35 miles per hour in some areas.

Standby crews are on alert in Raleigh and other areas to move quickly into regions where special emergencies develop, including two crews of forestry students at North Carolina State University.

"We have been able to cope with it so far," Hegele said. "We try not to go out and get volunteers unless the whole thing falls apart."

Hegele said fires are burning in the tidewater, piedmont and mountain regions of the state. Burning permits in all North Carolina counties have been canceled.

Rare Gutenberg Bible Sold For $2 Million

BUYS BIBLE — New York City bookseller Martin Breslauer pushes his way through a crowd of well wishers and reporters at Charlie's auction house in New York after purchasing a 15th century Gutenberg bible for an unnamed client. Breslauer paid $2 million for the book, a record for a printed book sold at auction. The bible was owned by the Episcopal Church's general theological seminary in New York. (AP Laserphoto)

NEW YORK (AP) — One of the world's rarest books — a 15th century Gutenberg Bible — was sold at auction Friday for $2 million.

The two-volume, leather-bound work — one of the few remaining books printed more than 500 years ago with the world's first movable metal type — was purchased by Martin Breslauer, a New York City bookseller.

Breslauer said he planned to resell the bible, but added any information about possible clients was "very, very secret, confidential."

Bidding started at $500,000 and progressed rapidly at $100,000 intervals.

"I feel it was a very reasonable purchase," Breslauer said as he pushed his way through a crush of well-wishers and reporters at Christie's Auction House.

Christie's officials said the $2 million was believed to be the highest price ever for a book sold at auction.

The Bible was owned by the Episcopal Church's General Theological Seminary here, which intends to use proceeds from the sale to establish an endowment for its library.

Military Exercise Relocated

WASHINGTON (AP) — A major spring military exercise has been moved to Georgia and North Carolina because of Puerto Rican protests over plans to hold it on Vieques Island, the U.S. Atlantic command said Friday.

The exercise, called "Solid Shield," will involve 28,000 Navy, Marine, Army and Air Force troops. About 40 ships also are expected to take part.

The Pentagon said land portions of the maneuvers will be conducted at Camp Lejeune, N.C., and Fort Stewart, Ga., May 16-25.

The exercises originally were scheduled for Vieques Island, but were blocked by Gov. Carlos Romero Barcelo of Puerto Rico, who appealed to President Carter to stop them. Barcelo claimed that the lives and property of the island's 9,000 inhabitants would be endangered by firing live ammunition.

Vieques is a few miles off the coast of Puerto Rico.

Tax Free SS Benefits For Wealthy Questioned

By CHRIS CONNELL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The secretary of health, education and welfare today questioned whether wealthy retirees should receive Social Security benefits tax free.

"Today, Social Security benefits are wholly exempt from taxes," said Secretary Joseph A. Califano Jr. "It seems at least open to discussion whether a wealthy lawyer, doctor or business executive with a $50,000 pension should receive Social Security benefits free from any obligation to pay taxes."

He raised the issue in a speech discussing problems the nation will face when the post-World War II "baby boom" reappears "early in the 21st century as a 'senior boom.'"

Califano also questioned the move toward early retirement for the nation's workers. He described early retirement as an expensive concept "born of the rich choices that affluence without inflation seemed to offer in past years.

"There are reasons to wonder aloud whether the trend toward even earlier retirement is a trend in the right direction," said Califano, citing a 1974 poll that found four million persons 65 and over wanted to work, but were not.

If the nation rethinks its retirement policy, he said, "one place to start is with the existing incentive for early retirement," such as reduced Social Security benefits for retirement at age 62.

He also raised doubts about whether private pension plans can meet their unfunded liabilities in the future, and asked whether the government should continue to provide tax breaks to private pension plans or if it should apply these tax benefits "to more generous and widespread Social Security coverage."

He said HEW will pay out more than $94 billion this year to persons 65 and over in various benefits. This group also will get $14 billion in various government pensions and $4 billion in federal housing subsidies, food stamps, social and employment services.

"This adds up to $112 billion — 5 percent of the gross national product, and 24 percent of the federal budget," he said. If older citizens' share of programs for national defense and foreign aid are added, "the fraction is well over 30 percent," he said.

"This is a whopping increase," he said, noting that in 1960, only 2.5 percent of the GNP was spent on programs for the elderly.

He predicted spending on the elderly would more than triple to $350 billion by the year 2010, and $635 billion by 2025.

Security Tightened Around Hart

PRYOR, Okla. (UPI) — Security was tightened Saturday around Gene Leroy Hart — the man charged with killing three young girls in a Girl Scout camp — after death threats were phoned in to the jail he escaped from twice.

Police arrested Hart Thursday south of Stillwell in a remote cabin, climaxing a search which began shortly after three girls were sexually assaulted and killed at a Girl Scout camp near Locust Grove, Okla. June 13, 1977.

Says Media Discriminates

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Calling for an end by 1988 of discriminatory hiring practices, the Rev. Jesse Jackson accused America's media Saturday of misrepresenting minority communities through distortion and deletion.

Addressing the National Conference on Minorities and the News, Jackson charged the media with, "keeping us busy looking at everybody else's sin but their own. Watergate, Koreagate, the sexual escapades and preferences of congressmen — when they've got a 'news mediagate' in their own ranks when it comes to race."

Says Israeli Plan Inadequate

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim says Israel's plan for withdrawing from southern Lebanon is "inadequate" because it isn't total.

Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin replied by letter to Waldheim's office, which released the secretary-general's assessment Friday, but Begin's reaction was not known.

Waldheim was attending a U.N. conference in London.

S.C. Forest Fire Out Of Control

WALHALLA, S.C. (AP) — A forest fire, which has already destroyed at least 2,600 acres of dry timberland in northwestern South Carolina, continued to burn out of control Saturday.

U.S. Forest Service officials had thought Saturday they had contained the fire in the Sumter National Forest. But strong winds whipped it north across bulldozed lines that had been established in an attempt to prevent its spread.

Officials hope to have all containment lines established by 6 a.m. Sunday and the fire under control 12 hours later.

About 400 persons battled the blaze Saturday, including reinforcements from Maine, Arizona and New Mexico. The effort was led by specialists from Arkansas. Forestry officials said the cost of battling the blaze is $100,000 a day.

So far, no homes or towns have been threatened, but local fire departments were alerted to be prepared to wet down houses around nearby Lake Cherokee as a precaution.

Besides the low humidity and rough terrain, the firefighters were further hampered by sporadic outbreaks of other fires, which officials said are being deliberately set. Two new fires broke out Saturday.

Meanwhile, forest service investigators were trying to find the persons responsible for setting the isolated fires that have kept the blaze going since Wednesday.

Bill Craig, district for the U.S. Forest Service, said he believes the fire was set by "someone with a grudge or it might have been a pyromaniac."

John Connell, forest service spokesman, said persons convicted on federal charges of setting forest fires face a maximum penalty of five years in prison and a $5,000 fine.

VN Massing Troops On Border

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Vietnam has concentrated about 60,000 troops in Tay Ninh Province along its border with Cambodia following an increase in tensions between the two Communist neighbors, but little troop movement has been detected recently, sources said today.

The sources, who declined to be identified, discounted the figure of 100,000 troops reported by the Washington Post in today's editions, but said there were reports of the movement of Soviet-made MiG fighters from northern Vietnam to the south and stepped up arms shipments by China to the Cambodians.

The newspaper said the three Vietnamese divisions along the border had been increased to 12 divisions armed in part with captured U.S. weapons, armored personnel carriers, helicopters and jet fighters.

However, the sources here said the number of troops was about seven or eight divisions.

Most Western analysts in Bangkok don't discount the possibility of another major Vietnamese thrust into Cambodia, but they say that for the time being Hanoi appears to be opting for diplomatic maneuvering, increased anti-Cambodia propaganda and possible a stepped-up use of Vietnamese-trained Cambodian insurgents.

About 100,000 Cambodians have fled into Vietnam since 1975 and are considered by Western and Thai intelligence sources as "perfect recruits" for an anti-Phnom Penh insurgency.

Cambodia and Vietnam have been territorial rivals for centuries and frequent battles have been reported by both sides since the end of the Indochina war in 1975 when Communist forces were victorious in South Vietnam and Cambodia.

The Vietnamese News Agency today reported that Cambodian armed forces have been shelling Vietnamese territory in the Mekong River delta for the past two weeks and accused Cambodia of bombarding densly populated areas. But it said the attackers were "duly punished" with hundreds of soldiers killed in Long An and Dong Thap provinces.

In March, Cambodia radio said troops in a "fierce battle" had turned back a column of 40 Vietnamese tanks that crossed into Cambodia's Takeo Province.

Muriel Will Not Run

By WILLIAM FOX

MINNEAPOLIS (UPI) — Sen. Muriel Humphrey, D-Minn., said Saturday night she will not run for election this fall because she wants to resume private life in Minnesota.

The 66-year-old grandmother has served about two months in the Senate after being named to succeed her husband, the late Hubert H. Humphrey. She said she wants to retire after the November election to be with her family.

Mrs. Humphrey made the announcement at the first Hubert Humphrey dinner — a $100-a-plate affair in honor of the Happy Warrior, who died of cancer January 13.

Mrs. Humphrey has long been a major figure in the Democratic Farm Labor party — but her role was that of campaigner, counselor and helpmate to her husband. It became evident at recent party caucuses that she was not considered a leading candidate for the Senate.

Mayor Ordered To Pay $70,000

HILLSBOROUGH, N.C. (AP) — A Superior Court jury Friday decided that Hillsborough Mayor Fred Cates should pay $70,000 in punitive damages to an Orange County family for an illegal arrest in 1974.

The jury of 12 Alamance County residents deliberated almost four hours before returning a verdict late Friday evening.

The suit stems from the arrest of Geary Blackwood on Dec. 19, 1974 at the home of his parents, Deward and Jewel Blackwood of Chapel Hill, on the charge that he raped Cates' daughter.

F.W.B. Churches Held Fund Raising Meeting

Some 450 members of area Free Will Baptist churches held a dinner meeting at Wellcome School Friday night to celebrate fund raising efforts as part of a statewide drive to raise $100,000 for completion of an activities building at Free Will Baptist Bible College in Nashville, Tennessee.

Area churches raised $25,307 in cash and committments, exceeding their goal of $20,000.

Prior to this year's campaign, an estimated $250,000 was raised towards completion of the $350,000 building.

Co-chairmen Rev. Roger Tripp of Greenville and Rev. Frank Davenport of Goldsboro coordinated fund raising efforts throughout the area.

Dr. Robert Picirilli, professor and registrar of Free Will Baptist Bible College, was the guest speaker, and Bobby Floars, college trustee, opened the meeting.

During the meeting, White Oak Hill F.W.B. Church of Bailey was recognized for raising $2,400 in a walk-a-thon. The goal was $500.

Each church was presented a certificate of appreciation from the College Development Office for participation in the campaign.

Also, a slide presentation of the college was presented, focusing on the activities building.

Free Will Baptist Bible College enrolled 640 students this year in more than 100 courses of study. The college was founded in 1942 by the National Association of Free Will Baptists.

Various dinners are planned across the state with the next one scheduled for Charlotte on April 22.

Hospital Lab Open House

He said that over 150,000 "dedicated individuals practice laboratory science in hospitals, clinics, physicians' offices, research centers, and medical schools. Their work is essential to the detection, diagnosis, treatment, and prevention of disease."

On hand for the proclamation signing were Ms. Debbie Jensen, Pitt County Health Department; Ms. Barbara Winn, East Carolina University Infirmary; George Williams, chief technologist, Pitt Memorial; Dr. Susan Smith, director of medical technology education, ECU; and Ms. Jan Mangun, Pathology and Laboratory Services, ECU School of Medicine.

The laboratory staff at Pitt County Memorial Hospital invited the public to attend an open house on Thursday and Friday, April 13 and 14 from 2-4 p.m.

The open house, it was noted, is being held in conjunction with Medical Laborary Week.

Mayor Percy Cox declared April 9-15 as Medical Laboratory Week in Greenville and surrounding communities in recognition and support of medical laboratory workers.

Cox pointed out that the week has been designated nationally to "observe the vital and significant contributions to health care made by the medical laboratory professionals in our nation."

The Proposal Deserves Trial

The city Parking Authority has approved a trial plan to remove most of the downtown parking meters, and it is asking City Council concurrance.

The authority recommended that in excess of 400 of the 619 meters be removed. Those which would remain would include two leased lots, 30 minute red meters where limited time parking is necessary and one 25 cents for an all-day parking lot for long term parkers.

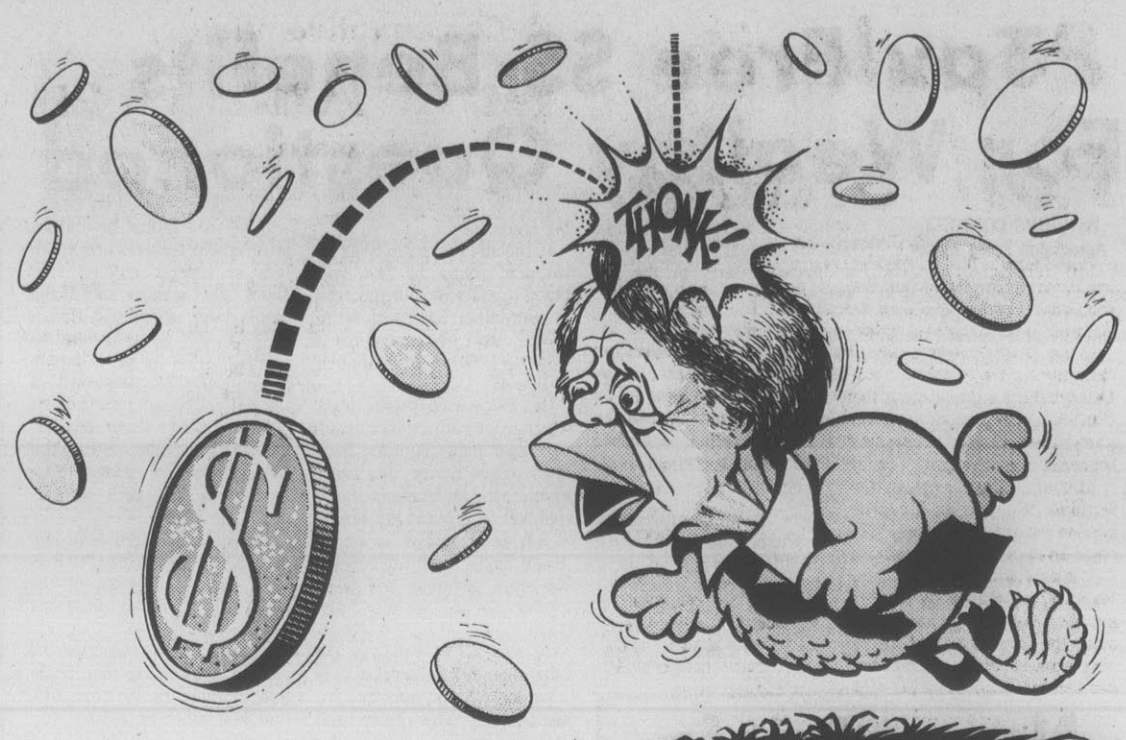

Action on removal of meters was recommended by the Downtown Greenville Association, Inc. as a way to make downtown parking more convenient to potential shoppers. The action was recommended by officials in other cities where the move has been made.

The Parking Authority's proposal was recommended on a trial basis. The plan would be implemented for one year and if it proves successful, it would then be continued on a permanent basis.

There would be some system for enforcement of overtime parking regulations in the unmetered zones and fines for violations would be increased from $1 to $2.

The Downtown Greenville Association recommended the meter removal "in order to maintain, perpetuate and hopefully increase the tax revenues for the city, in order to be in an unhampered competitive position, and, to remove the one excuse people have for not shopping downtown."

Drastically reducing the parking meters in the downtown area can be helpful to the city's commerce in general. What helps one section of the city helps all sections. Certainly the plan approved by the parking authority deserves a trial.

Special Olympics' Popularity Proven

The fifth annual Greenville Special Olympics was held here last week and the 390 handicapped citizens who participated are proof of the event's popularity.

The individuals took part in such activities as the 50-yard dash, long jump, softball throw, broad jump, and wheelchair race. Winners were named in each of the events.

Putting on the Special Olympics takes a great deal of time on the part of a lot of people. We have no doubt that their reward is in seeing the enthusiasm which is exhibited by the participants on that special day.

Putterers Are Welcome

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — Somewhere in a backyard workshop, a basement, or beneath a country shadetree, some Tar Heel putterer just might be fiddling with a solution to the energy crisis.

"Unusual solutions can come from such places. I am interested," says Dr. James C. Bresee who is now taking over his duties as director of the North Carolina Energy Institute.

While his principal job will be pulling together the brains and research capabilities of the wealth of talent in North Carolina's universities and Research Triangle Park installations, Bresee doesn't discount the possible breakthrough coming from a Tar Heel inventor.

Near Raleigh, battery-operated cars are running about backroads with windmills shirring away on top.

A wood-burning stove shaped like a pyramid is being manufactured in an eastern county as the inventor claims one will heat an entire house comfortably.

Shades of Alexander Bell, Thomas Edison, or Wilbur and Orville Wright? Maybe.

New Ideas

"Independent research is important. There will be new and different ideas coming from individual inventors, and I would encourage them to contact us," says Bresee.

The Energy Institute is locating at the Research Triangle Park as an arm of the state's Department of Commerce. Bresee is taking a two-year leave from his federal job as director of geothermal energy in the U.S. Department of Energy.

Gov. James B. Hunt, Jr. appointed Bresee to the new post in January. The office is now getting into gear. "The institute will act as the focal point for gathering information on energy research in public as well as private communities," the governor explains.

"While we don't expect a flashy breakthrough in our initial efforts, I feel it is fair to say we will add significantly to state and national energy research efforts," he adds.

Bresee comes to this state under an intergovernmental exchange program. He keeps his federal post and salary while filling the North Carolina job.

BILL NOBLITT

Why North Carolina? Because, says Bresee, "North Carolina has among the highest capabilities of any state in research potentials."

Describing himself as a member of the "extreme center," Bresee sees a variety of potential energy sources available for study in this state: wind in the mountains; peat bogs, pine trees, tides, and even possible geothermal sources in the east; and above all the tumbling energy of water plummeting from the mountains to the sea across the state's fall line.

Small

The future may not be in massive development on a national scale. It may be in small hydroelectric plants providing electricity to communities all across the state.

"Appropriate technology" is the term he chooses to describe the situation. "That is appealing," says Bresee, as we consider "local solutions to local problems on a limited basis..."

Both an engineer and a lawyer, Bresee was in various positions at the Oak Ridge National Laboratory from 1954 until 1972 when he became an assistant director in energy development with the Atomic Energy Commission.

The state's Energy Institute was set up with $500,000 allocated by the General Assembly. About $300,000 of that will be available for direct grants to research projects which seek state support. Additional funds will be sought through federal channels.

Sunday Morning Notes

"The Fayetteville Observer" had some editorial comments on the use of the English language by the new ECU Chancellor Dr. Thomas B. Brewer. They brought a letter of reply from Franceine Rees of the ECU news bureau.

"The Fayetteville Observer" praised the selection of Dr. Brewer. Then, however, it went on, "It is probably churlish to say so right here at the outset of his North Carolina experience, but Dr. Brewer, from his opening remarks in this state, also promises to carry on the grand old higher education tradition of murdering the mother tongue.

"Consider, if you will, this piece of his higher education philosophy: 'I believe that universities do not plateau, they either improve in quality or decline.' The logic might be impeccable, but the usage is, well, bastardized. There is no respected authority in the English language for using plateau as a verb. Those who indulge in such usage would gift a bride at a shower and fellowship friends at a church supper."

"In the parlance of Sociology 21 and Psychology 42, Dr. Brewer sees East Carolina as 'a place where teachers, scholars and students interface in an atmosphere...' Interface, for crying out loud. That's no way to verb a sentence, nouning a thought like that. What he means, in plain English, of course, is that he sees East Carolina as a place where teachers, scholars and students can rub up against one another."

Ms. Rees replied by letter, "English, and any other living language, is not static and rigid; whether the stickler for the traditional likes it or not, old words are modified and new ones devised as the years pass and need dictates. Brace yourselves for the inevitable: such terms as 'input,' 'output,' 'finalize,' and even 'interface' are going to be a part of our mother tongue, because they do what a word must do. They communicate ideas.

"However, I wonder why you object to Dr. Brewer's use of 'plateau' as a verb . . . you state that 'no respected authority' permits the verb use of 'plateau.' No less that two Webster's dictionaries (the 1963 Third International, Unabridged and the 1969 Seventh Collegiate) do include 'plateau' as an intransitive verb, meaning exactly what Dr. Brewer intended it to mean: 'to reach a period of stability.' This use can hardly be considered a radical development, since the cited editions have been in use for several years."

Then Ms. Rees finale, "It seems odd that a newspaper could accuse 'academics' of murdering our language with outrageous word coinages. Who but American journalists have we to thank for that despised, but useful idiom 'upcoming'?"

Far be it from your columnist to attempt to interface himself in such an sophisticated debate on use of the English language. Life, for us, so far has been all uphill . . . we're still looking for a place to plateau.

Other Editors Say
Who's Bumbling?

(Richmond Times-Dispatch)

During the 1976 presidential campaign, Jimmy Carter and his fellow Democrats portrayed Republican President Gerald Ford as a bumbler who had made a mess of the nation's economy. It was too sluggish, they wailed, and unemployment was too high. The election of a Democrat president, they implied, would assure economic bliss.

But these critics conveniently overlooked a grim fact that President Ford had seen with a frightening clarity: The nation's most dangerous economic problem was not unemployment but inflation. It had been raging when Mr. Ford took office, and he vowed to fight it by, among other ways, eschewing stimulative economic policies.

And he achieved an impressive degree of success. In 1976, inflation moderated and real wages actually increased by 2 percent after a two-year decline. But policies of restraint tend not to be very dramatic, and Mr. Ford himself did not project a dynamic, captivating image. Jimmy Carter won the election.

And the nation has been losing the battle against inflation ever since.

The official inflation rate is now about 6.5 per cent. But according to some economic experts, the inflation rate for goods and services that might be considered the basic necessities is actually more than 8 per cent.

Soon the economy will feel additional inflationary pressures. From the exorbitant (a 37 to 40 per cent increase over the next three years) wage settlement for coal miners, for example. Some steel companies have already announced price increases to offset the higher cost of coal that will result from the settlement.

Increased minimum wages and Social Security taxes will raise business costs and, ultimately, consumer prices. Proposed boosts in federal financial aid for farmers and for cities would also fuel inflationary fires.

So who's bumbling now? President Carter, of course, and the American people know it. According to the latest Harris poll, 72 per cent of the people now give the president a negative rating on his "handling of the economy." Ten months ago his negative rating was only 46 per cent.

When Mr. Carter returns from his trip abroad, we are led to believe, he intends to launch a major offensive against inflation. That he should do, not only for the country's sake but also for his own political good. For if he continues to bumble, the voters might send him on another trip in 1980 — back to his peanut fields in Plains.

President Carter announced Friday he will delay production of neutron warheads and watch for the Soviets to show restraint in both conventional and nuclear arms.

The second heaviest rain on record fell in Greenville last night and yesterday, dumping 4.63 inches during the 24 hours ending at 8 a.m. today.

B. T. Clark, in charge of the local weather bureau station, recalled this morning that only one time during the 20 years he has been keeping records has a heavier rain been recorded in any 24 hours. This was several years ago when the fall was measured at 5.35 inches.

No serious damage was reported as a result of the heavy fall, although many persons declared that the water beat through windows and doors, loosened bricks in chimneys and beat down flues into their homes. One woman reported that a number of her chickens were drowned.

THE INSIDE REPORT

France, Inc. Threatening

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — Eastern Airlines plans to sign the purchase agreement this week for 23 European wide-bodied airliners, a deal that not only delivers another stunning blow to the poor old American dollar but raises serious questions of U.S. industrial survival in the world of subsidized foreign exports.

The A-300 Airbus is an excellent plane, but that's not why Eastern is buying it. Airbus Industrie, a Western European combine, made an offer that Eastern chairman Frank Bormann could not refuse. The price was right because Airbus Industrie is subsidized by the French government, one of its principal owners.

Although the Europeans cannot match the Americans in cost-efficient production of commercial airliners, they are spoon-fed government funds to compete in the world market. In the case of the Eastern Airlines deal, the French taxpayer enables planes to be sold far below cost. What makes this dangerous for the U.S. and the dollar — is its threat to aerospace exports, one of the last places where Uncle Sam still keeps his head above water in international trade.

This is not the ancient conflict between free trade and protectionism. Rather, the model of Japan, Inc., is being Here is a neo-mercantilist system against which American companies are helpless playing by Adam Smith's rules.

Typically, this overpowering problem has not been addressed at policymaking levels of the Carter administration. But almost by accident, it is coming to the attention of worried Congressmen. A warning signal was sounded at a House Banking subcommittee hearing March 17 by J. B. L. Pierce, treasurer of the Boeing Co.: "We can compete with Airbus and the other European aircraft manufacturers on cost and technical merits, but we cannot compete with the national treasuries of France and Germany and other European countries."

Rep. Jim Leach of Iowa, a 35-year-old freshman Republican with no acrospace interests in his district, took notice. That very day, Leach wrote the subcommittee chairman, Rep. Stephen Neal of North Carolina, urging a close look at Eastern's French connection: "We could be witnessing the emergence of a kind of international trade warfare that has nothing to do with economic competition, but rather with the skill of individual governments to establish reverse trade barriers."

Leach, Neal and other Congressmen want to see the fine print of the Eastern deal — a closely guarded secret up to this point. Apart from details, however, the subsidy for eacn A-300 in the Eastern package is estimated at $10 million.

The French subsidy system is revealed by a 1976 French parliamentary report. The government "loan" of $366 million covers half of Airbus production, with repayment indefinitely halted at $2.5 million, or 0.7 per cent. The report vigorously argues that France's aircraft industry "must be supported by the government."

While Boeing fired the warning signal on Capitol Hill, Lockheed Corp. faces more immediate damage. Eastern's new A-300 will replace Lockheed L-1011 jetliners, which will then go on the used plane market. But the Airbus also competes with the Boeing 747 and McDonnell-Douglas DC-10. These three companies can and do offer subsidy plums to buyers, but cannot afford the French government's juicy level.

Those A-300 for Eastern are just the beginning. Similar subsidized deals with Allegheny and PSA (Pacific Southwest Airlines) are in the talking stage. What's more,

Strength For Today

THE PREDECESSORS

Thomas A. Edison is credited with having invented the incandescent light, and deserves this credit. Yet almost forty years before he obtained his patent, in 1879, two men working independently had produced crude lamps of this type.

Three more were produced in 1878.

But Edison's great contribution lay in solving the problem of generating and distributing current to homes, and in devising a lamp filiament which would be long enough lasting to be practical. Edison drew on what men before him had done, added to these accomplishments the increment of his genius, and out of it all produced an invention destined to transform the world.

No one ever produces a great invention or does a great service for mankind independent of all who have gone before. Even Jenus of Nazareth built firmly on the foundations of the prophets. Much of his ministry consisted in giving a divine touch to spiritual inspiration which was already available to humanity.

Entrepreneurs Hard To Teach

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — They're difficult to teach, those enterprising people who create and manage businesses, assuming worries and often great risks in exchange for self-expression and profit.

They don't read very much, said William McCrea, himself an entrepreneur. They don't write much either. They're impatient. They demand hard facts, and they're wary of those who provide them.

Bill McCrea teaches entrepreneurs, and he teaches others how to teach them too, which is a lot more than most business schools have been able to accomplish. In fact, many colleges don't even make the attempt.

While still a student at Massachusetts Institute of Technology, McCrea helped found Tech Films Corp.

The young men understood their technology, but little else. To survive, they sought management information. They didn't find it in schools; they got it from other businessmen. A matter of credibility.

Tech Films was a success, although it long since has become part of other companies, a common fate of successful high technology companies run by people perhaps more eager to innovate than to manage.

Born on an Ohio farm, he returned to that state and headed The Ohio Entrepreneurship Office, designed by businessmen and funded by the state. It taught Ohio colleges how to teach aspiring business people.

McCrea now spends 70 percent of his time running The Entrepreneurship Institute, the other 30 percent as head of Phoenix International Corp., which helps small American companies build businesses abroad.

The institute, which McCrea founded in Columbus two years ago as a nonprofit corporation, now has corporate and individual members throughout the United States and in 20 other countries.

Based in Columbus, its whole fucus is in identifying business development resources, in communities throughout the world.

"In large measure," he said this week, "we've instituted a modern version of the ancient guild system, whereby established business people share their knowledge and experience."

Here to develop a June 10-11 seminar for the Northeast, McCrea was going through his usual routine, setting up a committee of educators, bankers, inevestors, entrepreneurs, attorneys, accountants, inventors.

No idle dreamers are wanted. The two-day course, which cost $295 here but less in other cities, deals with reality, and attendees are made to develop planning programs for their businesses.

And survival skills. McCrea observes that entrepreneurs sometimes ask desperate questions, such as "How do you meet the Friday payroll when there's nothing in the till on Thursday afternoon?"

Popularity Poll Stable

By George Gallup

PRINCETON, N.J. — President Jimmy Carter is making polling history in one important respect. Rarely in the 43 years of the Gallup Poll has so little difference been found between rich and poor in their approval rating of a President.

In the 1930s, economic concerns became the chief basis for determining party preference. Poorer people turned to the Democratic party and gave their support to Democratic candidates; upper-income voters remained loyal to the Republican party. These differing viewpoints have consistently manifested themselves in the approval ratings given incumbent Presidents.

At least for the present, Carter has obliterated these wide differences. His current approval rating (based on three successive surveys) is virtually the same with persons in upper income levels as with those in lower income levels.

Just as little difference is found in Carter's ratings by income level, his popularity by educational level is also remarkably similar. College-educated Americans accord the President about the same degree of support (48 per cent approval) as do people whose formal education ended at the high school level (50 per cent approval) or earlier (also 50 per cent approval).

NATIONWIDE RESULTS STABLE

In the most recent survey, Carter has the approval of 50 per cent of Americans while 35 per cent disapprove of his actions in office. In the two previous surveys (in early March and late February) the approval figures were nearly identical 49 and 50 per cent, respectively.

Here is the trend in the President's popularity for the last three surveys:

CARTER POPULARITY

| | Approval | Disapproval | No opinion |
|---|---|---|---|
| Latest (March 10-13) | 50% | 35% | 15% |
| March 3-6 | 49 | 33 | 18 |
| Feb. 24-27 | 50 | 33 | 17 |

The findings by groups reported today are based on the results for these three surveys combined, reflecting personal interviews with more than 4,500 Americans across the nation.

CARTER LOSSES

The present situation has been brought about by sizable losses in approval for Carter among the groups that gave him the greatest support in the presidential election of 1976 and by gaining strength, or at least holding his own, with the people who voted against him in 1976.

If any one group of Americans can lay claim to the boast they "elected" Jimmy Carter it is the nation's non-white population. Non-whites gave Carter 85 per cent of their vote in 1976 — the largest share of any single group's vote received by Carter.

Today, however, Carter's job rating among non-whites has declined to 59 per cent, from a high of 85 per cent in March 1977.

A more detailed look at Carter's rating among the black population, however, reveals an interesting split. Among Northern blacks, 55 per cent say they approve of Carter's handling of the presidency. Among Southern blacks, though, 65 per cent back the President.

Carter's job rating has also declined sharply among Jews. In 1976, Jews gave Carter 62 per cent of their vote. Today his approval is only 46 per cent.

The President's current popularity profile among Jews is virtually the same as his support among Protestants (48 per cent) — both of which groups support him to a lesser degree than do Catholics (54 per cent).

Similarly, Carter's popularity among labor union families does not compare favorabiy does not compare favorably with his vote in the election.

In 1976, 63 per cent of labor union families voted for Carter but today his popularity is only 52 per cent — not radically different from the 49 per cent approval rating he receives from non-union family members.

This question was asked to determine the President's popularity:

"Do you approve or disapprove of the way Carter is handling his job as President?"

Here are the results, based on three successive surveys from late February through mid-March:

ation" neutron warhead intended it to serve as a weapon that would equalize the disparity between NATO armor and anti-tank fire power and the heavy forces of Soviet tanks.

Current NATO estimates place the Soviet tank numerical advantage over the western allies at about 3-1.

The feature of the neutron warhead that appealed to many U.S. planners was its limited killing range which, they felt, would spare civilian lives and towns on the perifery of the immediate battlefield in Europe while achieving the military purpose of destroying the attacking tank force.

But it was this very limitation of what is called "collateral damage" that aroused some of the strongest opposition. Critics argued that the less widespread damage caused by the neutron warhead would make it easier for nuclear powers to use the weapon without worrying about catastrophic civilan casualties.

Thus, the critics said, such a weapon would make nuclear war in the European battlfield more "thinkable."

This view is disputed by Defense Secretary Harold Brown, Gen. Alexander Haig, NATO commander in Europe and others who insisted that the weapon would not "lower the nuclear war threshhold."

On the contrary, Haig contended that the neutron warhead would make the Russians pause before attacking, and that this would make nuclear war less likely.

Carter's decision to set aside the neutron warhead leaves NATO forces with older and clumsier tactical nuclear weapons which would spread destruction in a wider radius than the neutron warhead.

Now And Then The Press Takes A Few Lumps

By JAMES J. KILPATRICK

WASHINGTON — The American press, as such diverse fellows as Richard Nixon and Bert Lance will tell you, is famed for dishing it out. We are not so widely acclaimed for taking it. But when a few hard lumps come our way, we ought in good conscience to acknowledge the thumping and venture some modest reply.

In the current issue of the Atlantic, Louis Banks gives the press what-for. In the February 15 issue of Modern Medicine, Dr. Michael J. Halberstam lashes about with his cane. They make substantially the same charge, that once the press gets beyond routine reporting, much of our coverage is ignorant, biased, unfair imbalanced, or all of the above.

Banks is an old pro who served in the Time-Fortune factory for nearly 25 years before he crossed the street to academia in 1973. He's now an adjunct professor of management at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. His concern goes chiefly to the coverage of business news. He relays his observation that many business leaders distrust reporters, dislike the emphasis on "antibusiness" pronouncements, and believe the press provides "a distorted view of reality."

This resentment is especially severe. Bank advises, among businessmen engaged in producing consumer goods. These executives "see themselves as victims of a media epidemic more virulent than botulims." The bad consumer news gets prominent coverage; the good consumer news rarely is reported at all.

Dr. Halberstam, a leading cardiologist here in Washington, is also a professor of medicine and a prolific writer in the medical field. His February piece in Modern Medicine is an admirable example of polemical writing at its very best. He takes the hide right off. First he skins Mike Wallace and Dan Rather of 60 Minutes; then he flays the print media generally; finally he returns to the television that "almost always trivializes what it covers." It is no more realistic, he says, to expect the press to be fair in its reporting than to expect a rattlesnake to be "fair" in its sriking.

Dr. Halberstam is convinced that much medical reporting is flatly "biased" He denounces the press for covering the harmful side effects of certain drugs without giving coverage to "the triumphs and advances." All this adds up to a performance by the press that is astoundingly bad, inaccurate and vindictive. "It is the manhandling of our profession," he says, "that properly enrages us."

Well. There is some small measure of truth in this farrago of accusations, but two or three points may be made in reply. First, businessmen and doctors alike suffer from a fundamental misunderstanding of the nature of news. Second, much of the picture they complain about is of their own making. Third, the situation is steadily improving.

It is not news, alas, when one million automobiles perform satisfactorily; it is news when ten thousand cars are recalled. It is not news when Kodak names a vice president; it is news when Kodak gets hit with an anti-trust judgment. It is not news when a surgeon performs a thousand successful operations; it is news when he leaves a saw inside. And so on. Yes, we ought to cover more of the "triumphs" and "advances", and in point of fact much coverage is indeed devoted to the good things. But news is news.

The press could do a better job if executives and scientists would climb down from their high horses and respond, on the level, to reporters' questions. Every reporter of my acquaintance has gone through the maddening experience of trying to reach a business executive, close to deadline, only to get the royal run-around from the PR boys. Down in Florida last year, one of the county medical societies voted to discipline any member doctor who spoke to a working reporter. Who's sore at whom?

The situation improves. At the highest levels of journalism, increasingly we see courts covered by reporters who are law school graduates. Many business editors are trained in economics. Food editors have degrees in nutrition. We have science writers capable of holding their own in any laboratory, and so on. This trend toward specialization will grow steadily stronger.

But we will never wholly satisfy our critics, and we ought never to try. So long as the press maintains an essentially adversary relationship to the whole blessed world — them against us — a healthy tension will survive.

To Dorothy Phelps It's The Number One Hobby

NITTA YUMA, Miss. — At mid-morning there is a disquieting stillness in the old house.

A door opens. A cold wind pushes its way into the hallway, pulling the door shut with a bang. Ten thousand staring, unblinking eyes are waiting inside. They peer out from the tops of shelves, around partially opened doors — and every last one of them is as blind as a tenpenny nail.

The floor creaks as if to shake off the cold.

Mrs. Dorothy Phelps slowly makes her way up the stairs of the Nitta Yuma plantation house where her husband, Henry, was born more than 60 years ago. She is leading a visitor to the most important room in the house.

With a sweep of her hand, she introduces the speechless visitor to the inhabitants of the house — 5,000 equally speechless dolls. It is surely one of the largest doll houses in the world.

Mrs. Phelps reaches for one of her favorite dolls and sits down in a rocking chair. She holds the doll close, with great tenderness.

"When I was three, I had a lot of dolls," she said. "One day my cousin and I were talking. He said it was so nice to go to Heaven that we gathered up all of my dolls and buried them.

"A month later my cousin decided they couldn't go to Heaven since they hadn't been baptized. So we dug them up — but it was too late, they had all gone to pieces. I've felt guilty ever since."

Mrs. Phelps has been collecting dolls since she was six, providing a home for wayward manikins, many of which came from as far away as China, Europe, or South America. The oldest doll, she said, was made in China in the 1700s. The modern dolls were made in the United States and Europe during the 1920s to the 1940s.

Most of the dolls were given to her by her husband, who is co-author with her of a book about the plantation settlement of Nitta Yuma. Many of the other dolls came from friends and relatives.

"I try to name them after the person who gives them to me," she said. "But some already have names when they're made. Oddly enough they say the first dolls were not made for children. They were made for religious purposes or to demonstrate new clothing styles."

One of her favorites is a large china doll which she said was made shortly after the Civil War. "My husband and I went to an auction, but my ankle was hurt and I couldn't get out of the truck," she said, her voice suddenly growing very soft. "My husband brought it over to the truck and gave it to me — it's a sentimental doll."

Another favorite is the Scarlett O'Hara doll. "It was made right after they did the movie and it's dressed in the original clothes of "Gone With the Wind," she said. "I've had it for years, many years."

Some of her most valuable dolls, she said, are those with black faces.

"They would make a lot of white dolls and only a few Negro dolls," she said. "They would have the same features, but just a few of them would be black. In the old days, most of the black children played with white dolls. The first dolls were manufactured in Europe and that could be a reason they didn't make so many Negro dolls."

The single most valuable doll she has is a religious doll called Saint Theresa. Kept apart from the others, it is on display beneath a glass cover. "She can be found in any encyclopedia," she said. "And I couldn't put a price on her."

Mrs. Phelps said men who see her doll collections are every bit as excited about them as women. "They just throw up their hands," she said. "You know they say men and boys collect dolls, too. It's the number one hobby all over — but men generally collect toy soldiers, mannish things."

That brought Mrs. Phelps to the subject of Teddy Roosevelt.

"I have a lot of teddy bears in my collection — you know they were named after Teddy Roosevelt" she said with a nod. "My daddy knew Teddy Roosevelt. One day they were at a banquet in Nashville. Teddy Roosevelt picked up his cup of coffee and said, 'Ah, good to the last drop.' And, don't you know, that's where that Maxwell House Coffee jingle came from."

Airbus sales to U.S. carriers are the breakthrough for cut-throat competition against the Americans with Japan the next target. "The Europeans are pulling out all the stops to win sales in Japan," Aerospace Daily reported last week. "Aside from normal commercial representation, the governments involved are applying strong pressure on the Japanese government." totalled $7.6 billion against $732 million in imports. For commercial aircraft, the export surplus was $2.5 billion in 1977 (down from $3.1 billion in 1976). Considering the record U.S. trade deficit and its ruinous impact on the dollar, this bulge in commerical aircraft is one the U.S. cannot afford to surrender.

Unlike textiles, electronics or even steel, this is not a case of foreign productivity and ingenuity outstripping the sluggish Yankees. The Americans can still make jetliners more efficiently than anybody else. The difference is France, Inc., aligned against three private American producers.

While the French emulate the Japanese hard-sell subsidies, U.S. policymakers are occupied in loftier pursuits. At the middle level, officials here say they want to study the Eastern transaction more closely before doing anything rash. But the role of Adam Smith does not fit the hard world of neo-mercantilists, threatening to cloud a rare American bright spot in world economics.

A POWERFUL LOBBYIST

Paint A Kitchen And Disrupt Your Routine

There's nothing that will disrupt a family's routine as much as painting a kitchen. You can compensate for any other room which is suddenly put out of commission, but a kitchen is indispensible. For instance, you can brush your teeth over the kitchen sink. But you cannot broil chicken in the potty.

Last week Phillip and I decided to paint our yellow kitchen walls white. We estimated that it would take a day at the most.

We were naive.

We decided that the very first thing we needed to do was to move the refrigerator away from the wall.

We were impractical.

After Phillip moved the refrigerator so that it deftly blocked both the oven and the dishwasher doors in addition to its own, we decided to take up our paint brushes and to make that irrevocable leap into faith.

We were absurd.

That evening at about 11 p.m. we finished the first coat of our "Cover in One Coat" paint. Unfortunately, the only thing we had covered was ourselves. As for the walls — well, somewhere along the line, had just sucked the white up without a trace except for a few dribbles on the floor. We ate a late supper — bananas and peanut butter — and went to bed.

The next morning for breakfast we had drycereal and warm Pepsi. We lifted the drop cloth long enough to throw the dirty dishes into the sink; then we drew the cloth back over them. That evening we ate at Hardee's.

After we got home, I jammed a paint brush into Phillip's hand and pushed him into the kitchen.

"I don't know why we have to apply another coat," he protested. "It looks fine to me."

"It's fine if you like the look of aged nylon," I said. "Personally, I prefer the color on the can — Spring White."

"But it's so conventional," he argued. "What's so great about white?"

"Well, for one thing," I answered, "it's appetizing. And that is definitely more than you can say for the present color."

He grumbled something about nothing being appetizing in our kitchen, but he went ahead and started the second coat. Naturally, he didn't finish.

So the next night we ate at Roy Rogers. As I stared at my french fries, I experienced an overwhelming craving for homemade mashed potatoes.

"You know," I said. "I never thought I'd say this, but I'm beginning to miss my own cooking"

Phillip didn't look up from his hamburger. "I expect it's just the paint fumes getting to you."

We painted that night, too. Phillip didn't want to, but I threatened to pour Lucite over Baretta if he didn't. But even after another evening of painting, I didn't think that the walls looked right.

Phillip did.

"I absolutely refuse to lift another paint brush," he said the next morning. "The kitchen is perfect."

"It's perfect if you like your walls with jaundice," I said. "Please reconsider."

"No," he said. "I AM FINISHED!"

I looked at the walls and sighed. "Well, let's move these drop cloths. At least there's one good thing. I can cook here tonight."

"Put the drop cloth back down," Phillip said. "I see a few places I missed."

N.C. Shale Oil Deposits Termed Recoverable

By BRAD STUART
Written for the Associated Press

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina may have enough economically recoverable oil locked in shale deposits to support a synthetic fuel industry capable of producing up to 150,000 barrels of liquid fuel or 750 million cubic feet of synthetic natural gas per day, according to a Chicago researcher.

The estimated natural gas total is about twice the state's daily requirement at this time, according to the state energy division.

John Janka of the Institute of Gas Technology in Chicago said rough estimates of shale oil deposits near Sanford and in the northern end of the state indicate there may be enough shale oil to support two or three commercial-size synthetic fuel plants.

North Carolina's biggest shale deposit, according to a recent research paper by Dr. John Dennison of the University of North Carolina, extends through six central counties including Moore, Lee, Chatham, Wake, Durham and Granville. Another bed in Stokes and Rockingham counties extends into Virginia and a third in Anson County runs to the South Carolina border.

Janka has proposed a study on the feasibility of a largescale synthetic fuels industry in North Carolina to be funded by the N.C. Energy Institute. The research would be done by the IGT and Dennison.

The energy institute, a division of the commerce department, was set up this year to grant funds for such research in the energy field by individuals, organizations and the enregy industry. IGT is the research arm of the natural gas industry.

The institute recently solicited energy research proposals which will be screened and submitted to the commerce secretary and scientific advisors before grants are made.

Janka said shale mining in North Carolina would involve massive strip mining. The black shale would be mined, crushed and fed into nearby processing plants where it would be heated along with high pressure hydrogen in synthetic fuel reactors. The process could be geared for production of either synthetic gas or oil.

Reclaiming stripped areas would be relatively easy in the eastern United States since ground covers more quickly, Janka said. Reclaimed land would be several feet higher than before the mining, since mining wastes would exceed the shale deposits.

IGT research on gas production from shales in Pennsylvania and Ohio — which Janka said were comparable to those in North Carolina — show cost estimates of $3 per 1,000 cubic feet of synthetic gas, about twice the current controlled price of natural gas. This estimate is lower than the cost of synthetic gas from coal and projected costs of imported liquified natural gas, Danka said.

Shale oil production is thought to be more feasible in the eastern United States because of the greater availability of water to process it.

"Water use would be in the neighborhood of from 5,000 to 13,000 acre-feet of water per year for each plant," Janka said.

Water is necessary in the process for dust control in the mining, a source of hydrogen for the synthetic fuel reactors and reactor cooling.

Critics of the synthetic fuels industry cite possible pollution of groundwater and air pollution from the processing plants. Synthetic fuel reactors can produce complex pollution products containing organic chemicals known to cause cancer, according to the Scientists' Institute for Public Information.

According to Dennison's research paper, eastern shales contain less leachable carbonates, thus diminishing water pollution problems.

But, according to the paper, the denser population in the east could be an environmental handicap.

Reception Honors Mrs. Jenkins

A reception was given Thursday evening to honor Mrs. Lillian J. Jenkins, who herself has been hostess for literally thousands of receptions, dinners, luncheons and other social events in the ECU Chancellor's home.

Mrs. Jenkins is the wife of retiring ECU Chancellor Leo W. Jenkins and has been 'First Lady' of the ECU community for nearly 20 years.

The reception was a joint venture of all women in the university community including present and retired members of the ECU administration, faculty and staff.

A highlight was presentation to Mrs. Jenkins of a certificate of notification of combined contributions of more than $1,500 for the previously established Lillian J. Jenkins Scholarship Fund at ECU, and introduction of two students who will share in the scholarship proceeds in 1978-79. The Lillian J. Jenkins Scholarship Fund was named in her honor in 1975 and the presentation was made with hope that this expression of esteem would provide impetus for further contributions toward perpetuation of the Lillian J. Jenkins Scholarship.

Also, a plaque citing her "many years of friendship" was included in the formal presentation.

Mrs. Jenkins, the former Lillian Jacobsen of Lavalette, N.J., holds the B.S. degree from Trenton State (N.J.) Teachers College. She came to Greenville with her husband when he became Dean of the University 31 years ago. Dr. Jenkins has served as president and chancellor of ECU since 1960.

They are parents of six children: Mrs. Marcus Lodge of Charlottesville, Va.; Mrs. Mike Hogan of Raleigh; Mrs. Sally Jenkins Person of Greenville; Dr. James J. Jenkins, St. Louis, Mo.; Jeff Jenkins of Washington, N.C. and Jack Jenkins, Greenville; and have four grandchildren.

In addition to her duties as wife of the chancellor and mother, Mrs. Jenkins has been active in numerous community and civic affairs; in garden clubs and literary circles, in her church, as a past Cub and Brownie Scout leader, a charter member and first president of the Aries Book Club which later became two clubs; she assisted in formation of Seira Book Club; Chi Omega, and a helper in all civic activities. She is a frequent visitor and helper at Greenville Villa Nursing home.

"I have never been a joiner", said Mrs. Jenkins, modestly. But those honoring her spoke of "faithful and forceful" performance and her involvement "with loving and serving people."

"My hobbies are gardening and grandchildren", she said. One grandchild, in particular, Yanna Person, occupies a great deal of Mrs. Jenkins' time. Also, she makes use of a greenhouse in the rear of the chancellor's mansion for the growing and arranging of flowers and plants.

The Thursday evening reception was held at the Van Landingham Room of the ECU School of Home Economics on East Fifth St. Reception guests were received by Mrs. Jenkins. She wore a sleeveless long gown of pastel printed jersey, featuring a V-neckline and wore a corsage of orchids.

The two banquet length tables were centered with an epergne featuring silver five-branched candelabrum with burning tapers and jonquil, narcissus and greenery was balanced at each end with silver punch bowls on silver trays. Guests helped themselves to an assortment of finger foods served from silver appointments.

Arrangements of red and white camellias floating i crystal vases were placed throughout the party area. An auxiliary table held the register and an impressive oriental designed arrangement of flowering red bud and soleangena.

Preparations For Shad Festival In High Gear

GRIFTON — Plans for the Grifton Shad Festival are shifting into high gear this week as the date, April 14-16, draw near.

Coordinators and committee chairmen are making last-minute plans and checking food lists, lists of volunteer workers, drawing layouts to guide them in placement of the fish fryers, serving tables, art easels, horseshoe pits, bandstand, and all the many details necessary to ready the town for the expected thousands of visitors.

The Eighth Annual Grifton Shad Festival is taking a "Headin' Home" theme, "These Were Our Days," as its theme because so many people have been planning to meet in Grifton, or bring friends home, or return to the site of old memories.

A nostalgic look at early Grifton is presented in the free souvenir Shad Festival brochure, and Shad Queen contestants will present a special dance from the past which will kick off Family Fun Friday evening, April 14.

The Grifton Historical Museum will sponsor six showings of the film, "The Other Side of the River," about the first contact of Tuscarora Indians and their association with Grifton.

Area artists and craftsmen will demonstrate a variety of creative work Saturday and Sunday afternoons.

Among the most popular free events are the clogging and square dancing demonstrations Saturday afternoon in which spectators may join.

A new feature, an auction, is being presented this year. Anyone who wants to have any item sold, of any value, may bring it to the Auction area at the Grifton Civic Center from noon to 2 p.m. Saturday, April 15. The sale will begin 3 p.m. Saturday.

Popular features of the Shad Festival which provide free entertainment and only nominal entry fees are the Horseshoe Tournament Saturday afternoon, the Canoe Race, Skateboard, and Archery Tournaments Sunday afternoon. There will also be a baseball game Sunday and a weekend golf tournament.

Another new feature of the festival this year will be a softball tournament with finals Saturday evening.

Games and contests Saturday afternoon include basketball toss, climbing the greased pole, and a new event, a pogo stick race.

A Saturday morning parade at 10:30 a.m. will kick off the main events, followed by a fish fry and stew at noon. Other food throughout the weekend include a pancake supper Saturday evening, a barbecue Sunday, hot dogs and drinks all weekend near the speakers' stand and at "Shad-O" Friday and Saturday at the school cafeteria.

Rides will add the festival touch for children.

A new feature, a gospel sing and inspirational film will be Saturday evening, and final event of the weekend will be a Radio-Controlled Model Airplane Show Sunday at 5 p.m.

More Conscious Of Fragrances

MARIETTA, Ga. (AP) — Americans are more fragrance-conscious than ever before. Retail sales of women's fragrances rose 54 percent to $1.1 billion in 1976 from $715 million in 1972, Aromatics International reports.

Fragrances for men showed similar increases as retail sales rose 49 percent to $591 million from $397 million for the same four-year period, the company said.

Suburban Teens Are Competitive

NEW YORK (UPI) — Suburban teen-agers lead more hectic lives than their rural counterparts.

A University of Pennsylvania study reported in "Seventeen" magazine said the rushed, competitive behavior commonly associated with coronary heart disease is often found among suburban teen-agers. The study was conducted among 174 students in suburban middle-class and rural working-class schools.

Ingrid Waldron, associate professor of biology, said:

"Parents in rural areas have more limited and better defined goals for their children than middle-class parents do. The suburban student is faced with a limitless sense of how high he or she must go."

Twenty-nine of the 38 mountain peaks over 13,000 feet in Switzerland are in the Zermatt area, including the Matterhorn.

Next African Crisis Looming

By RAYMOND WILKINSON

NAIROBI, Kenya (UPI) — Africa's next crisis is looming as Ethiopia prepares a major ground and aerial offensive against guerrillas in northern Eritrea province that could provide the Soviet Union with a toehold on the vital oil route from the Persian Gulf to the West, diplomatic sources said Saturday.

Ethiopia is airlifting growing numbers of troops and equipment for the offensive and is expected to kick it off within the next four weeks, the sources said.

The sources reported several thousand Cuban troops also appeared poised to join the battle in the secessionist northern province in their expanding role as Marxist Africa's strike force. Some 500 Cuban military advisers already are reported in the Eritrean provincial capital of Asmara.

Following the Ethiopian victory in the Ogaden war and the continued Cuban buildup in Ethiopia of some 17,000 combat troops along with 1,000 Soviet advisers, the United States and Britain expressed deep misgivings that several thousand of these soldiers were now ready to move in support of the 50,000 Ethiopian ground forces in Eritrea.

Eritrea is of vast strategic importance to the Soviets because it stretches for 500 miles along the coast of the Red Sea, the vital route for Persian Gulf oil tankers bound for passage through the Suez Canal to Western Europe and the United States.

According to diplomatic sources in the Ethiopian capital of Addis Ababa, strongman Mengistu Haile Mariam is now totally committed to a military solution in Eritrea and has ruled out any type of accommodation with the Eritreans, even were that possible now.

"The hammer is about to fall," a senior East African diplomat said. "The Ethiopians are airlifting their troops into Asmara and the Red Sea port of Massawa.

"They are also using helicopters to move soldiers into Barentu, which has been surrounded for months by the Eritreans. We expect a major ground offensive against the secessionists within a month."

Guerrillas of the Eritrean Liberation Front and the Eritrean Popular Liberation Front have been fighting for 17 years for independence from Addis Ababa.

As late as the fall of last year they appeared ready to deliver the coup de grace to the demoralized Ethiopian army in Eritrea.

They had seized 95 percent of the countryside and towns and controlled all but 400,000 of Eritrea's 3 million population and the Popular Liberation Front moved to win the war's biggest prize to date — the port of Massawa, Ethiopia's major port and its naval headquarters.

The guerrillas came close to capturing the port but eventually were flung back with extremely heavy losses. It was the insurgents' worst defeat since they began fighting.

That, and the burgeoning presence of the Soviets and Cubans in Ethiopia, marked a major turning point in the war.

The two main guerrilla groups, who last month joined forces to face the Ethiopians, can put 40,000 guerrillas into the field.

They are highly trained and motivated and enjoy the backing of the Eritrean civilian population. But they are also lightly armed with few artillery pieces and no air support.

The Ethiopians, on the other hand, are putting an awesome amount of firepower into Eritrea including some of the $1 billion worth of newly arrived Soviet military equipment that includes some 50 new warplanes.

"Backed by those warplanes, and Cuban and Soviet expertise, I can't see anything stopping the Ethiopians rolling along the main roads and recapturing all the main towns," a Western observer with many years experience in Ethiopia said.

Engines Added To Hang Gliding Sport

KITTY HAWK, N.C. (AP) — The sky's the limit for hang gliding enthusiasts, but they aren't letting Mother Nature limit the speed of their flights.

Hang gliders are now adding 10-horsepower engines to their crafts, and gliders say the results are likely to revolutionize the sport.

"I envision it as a great addition to the sport," sad John Harris, owner of Kitty Hawk Kites and a glider himself for five years. "It requires much less space. All you need is a small field. Some people are launching out of their backyards."

The motors on the gliders roar like a lawnmower and propel the kites at speeds of up to 30 miles per hour.

The special motors were developed by an Arizona-based firm and took two years to perfect. Production began in December, and the first units hit North Carolina in March. Engine, clutch, driveshaft and a lightweight propeller cost $950, Harris said. The kite is another $1,000 to $1,500.

"This is sport flying for under $2,000," Harris said. Operating costs come to about 60 cents an hour, he said.

Harris believes the day will soon come when motorized kites are used for transportation as well as recreation.

"It's possible a few years down the road," he said. "You could fly anywhere on the right day. If you have the right altitude, you're not at the mercy of the winds."

Bakery Closes

LONDON (AP) — Spillers, a baking firm that produces one out of every six loaves of bread consumed in England, is closing.

The decision, announced Friday, will shut down 23 bakeries and put nearly 8,000 workers out of a job. The company said it has lost $43.2 million in the past six years.

Political Motivation Denied In Firing

(UPI) — James Senter, deputy secretary of the state revenue secretary of the state revenue department, has denied a claim by a former employee he was dismissed because he was a Republican.

Senter told a state personnel commissioner hearing Friday John Banks lost his job as a revenue officer because Gov. James B. Hunt Jr. ordered a cutback in state jobs. He said Bank's job was eliminated because the Greenville office had a relatively light workload.

Banks has maintained he was dismissed by Democratic officials because he is a Republican.

Senter acknowledged the only two persons who did lose their jobs, Banks and a Gastonia officer, both were Republicans. He also testified three positions had been added the day after the cuts took effect.

Department officials also said Banks and other officers fired were the newest field agents and had less experience than those retained.

Hearing officer George Ligon is expected to give his opinion on the case by June 26. The commission's decision can be appealed to superior court.

A Church In Trouble

SORRENTO, Fla. (AP) — Parishioners may find the doors of the New Hope Missionary Baptist Church boarded up today because someone paced off the boundaries of the wrong vacant lot 22 years ago.

A church lawyer says he may have to pray for relief from the Florida courts.

Kenneth Evans, who boarded up the church doors last Friday, says he plans to put up a no-trespassing sign this week in addition to the boarding-up and anyone who tries to attend Sunday services will be prosecuted. Last week, parishioners removed the boards and held their service.

"The church was built on the wrong lot," says Tom R. Champion, attorney for the church.

Champion says a building fund is being collected from the congregation to erect a new and larger church across State Road 437. But they are far from ready to abandon their present church.

Evans says all he has asked of the congregation since buying the property last year was for it to put $100 a month into a building fund. He says it never put the money aside.

"When I found out they weren't putting any money into the bank toward a building fund I told them they had one week to move and to get their stuff out," Evans said.

The church attorney, who insists that a building fund has been kept, says Evans needs a court order to close the church this Sunday. If he closes the church without one, the church will sue, he says.

One of the earliest parishioners of the church says she was involved in the mistake.

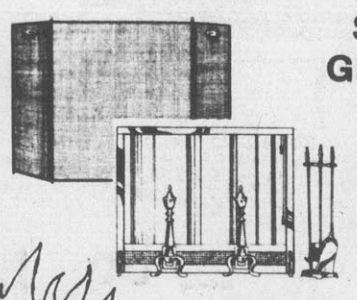

"About 20 years ago, Annie Collins owned the property and donated it to the church on the condition that I would build a church for the people out here," says Mae Borders. Mrs. Collins "stepped off the property line and told me where to build," she adds.

"It's so sad that people would lock the church up and throw away the key and not let us use our church," said the Rev. James A. McKenzie, pastor since 1974.

ASHEBORO, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina Insurance Commissioner John Ingram is seeking to delay a hearing on a suit he filed last June until after his campaign for U.S. Senate.

Ingram filed the lawsuit against an Asheboro man, a realtor and a builder over construction of a house that was begun by mistake on a lot which Ingram owns. The suit is scheduled to be heard in Randolph County Superior Court this week, but Ingram has written court officials requesting that the hearing be postponed.

ECU Medical Students Meet With Dr. Barnwell

By GEORGETTE HEDRICK
ECU Medical Writer

NEW BERN — "Hello and welcome to Craven County Hospital. Today we are going to study the pancreas."

That's how Dr. Sydney Barnwell, a New Bern surgeon, greets the weekly group of four East Carolina University medical students who are meeting with him this semester for a series of surgical pathology conferences.

The Thursday afternoon meetings are designed to teach the pathology students about the important relationship between pathologists and surgeons and acquaint them with hospital procedures. Students learn the "normal" structure of the body and its organs in anatomy and histology courses, but these conferences show them the "abnormal."

Based on the surgery performed at the hospital during the previous week, Barnwell selects for discussion one topic, which has ranged from kidney stones to breast cancer. He then gives the students a detailed presentation of the patient's history, the surgical experience, the pathologic specimens provided by the hospital's pathologists, and a summary of the particular disease process.

"Remember Sherlock Holmes was always asking for data, and so are surgeons and pathologists," says Barnwell as he floods the students with information and loads them up with specimens. When the students return to Greenville, class time is reserved so they can share their experiences with their class members, teaching their colleagues as Barnwell has taught them.

The surgical pathology conference is a unique program for pathology students, according to Dr. Seymour Bakerman, chairman of the School of Medicine's Department of Pathology and Laboratory Medicine. "We are able to set up conferences like these because the class is small (28 students), and it's feasible for us to send only four students at a time to New Bern."

"This program not only teaches students the vital interaction between surgeon and pathologist, but it also gets the students out of Greenville and into another medical environment," says Bakerman. "And being in an unfamiliar community teaches the students how to approach individual physicians and to learn their variations in procedure."

Weekly surgical pathology conferences are also being conducted at Pitt County Memorial Hospital by Dr. Walter J. Pories, chairman of the school's Department of Surgery. These sessions follow a similar format as those in New Bern and acquaint the students with procedures at the teaching hospital where they will be receiving the majority of their clinical experience.

What do the students think of the program designed especially for them? "We are getting more individual, in-depth instruction," says George Moore, a Snow Hill native. "It's a great way to relate what's going on in the hospitals to what we are learning in class."

Liberated Otter In Zoo

ASHEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Udderly and Odderly Otter are taking a liberated approach to caring for their new family.

The two otters, who are at the Western North Carolina Nature Center in Asheville, have been sharing the duty of caring for their two one-month-old offspring.

Animal experts say it is very unusual for a mother otter to allow the male to approach the pups. Mother otters ordinarily handle the care of the young themselves, and behave violently toward males who come close to the pups.

But Odderly, a male North American river otter, has been allowed by Udderly, his mate, to take an active part in the nursery routine.

"When otter pups are born, it is normal procedure to separate the male and female," said naturalist Chip Leslie. "But in this case, when I separated Udderly and Odderly, Udderly left the babies, went out the door and wouldn't go back to them until I let him (Odderly) back in."

Experts decided that even though Odderly was on loan from Louisiana for breeding purposes, he should be allowed to remain where he was. Leslie said what is happening will make "international zoo history."

Ronnie Allen, who cares for the animals at the center, said at first when Udderly got tired of caring for the pups, she would leave them with Odderly while she went for a swim.

"He would go in the cubbing room and curl around the pups like the mother did when she offered milk," Allen said. "And he would nudge them and stroke them and move them around like she would do."

But problems have beset the otter family.

Odderly has begun behaving in the traditional manner, and Udderly will not permit him near the cubs. Leslie is waiting to see if he will be allowed back in the cubbing area.

The other difficulty is that experts aren't sure how long it takes otters to give birth after conception, and there's a chance Odderly isn't the real father of the pups.

The pair will be encouraged to breed again, and animal experts will watch them for signs of the unusual family behavior.

After 40 Years, Search Rewarded

VANCOUVER, British Columbia (AP) — After 40 years and as many blind alleys, Manuel Alvarez has found his Unknown Soldier.

Alvarez had just one clue to go on in his search for the soldier who rescued him during the Spanish Civil War in 1938 when he was 11-years-old and fleeing from the fascist bombs falling on his village, Corbera, in Northern Spain.

He was hiding in a pump shack when a bomb hit the water tower directly above. With one leg broken in two places and the other badly lacerated by shrapnel, the boy was swept by the water and debris toward the nearby Ebro River.

A tall man in a military uniform struggled through the torrent, swept Manuel into his arms and said "Yo Canadiense," Spanish for "I am Canadian."

The soldier took the boy to an aid station and disappeared.

"I came to this country to find a Canadian," said Alvarez, owner of a car dealership here. He emigrated to Canada in 1958.

He knew the soldier was a member of the MacKenzie-Papineau Brigade, a volunteer outfit which sent 1,200 members to Spain to fight with the Loyalists. Only 700 returned.

Alvarez was reading a magazine last fall and came across the name of one of the few brigade members he had not already checked out. He contacted Lionel Edwards of Vancouver, general secretary of the MacKenzie-Papineau veterans, for help in tracking down the new name.

Edwards said there were 120 veterans alive and promised to try to find Alvarez soldier.

Edwards tracked down Jimmy Higgins, 71, a veteran living in Peterborough, Ont., who had an unpublished manuscript describing his experiences in Spain. One chapter, entitled The Boy, detailed Higgins' rescue of the boy and the greeting "Yo Canadiense."

Alvarez and Higgins spoke on the telephone, confirmed the time and place of the incident and helped each other fill in details they had forgotten.

Manuel Alvarez's search is almost complete. The final act is to come in July when he travels to Peterborough to visit the man who saved his life 40 years ago.

Change In Reports On Wage-Listings

A change in reportage of wage listings is effective in 1978. According to Madeline Smith at the Greenville office of the Social Security Administration, beginning in 1978 employers will no longer report detailed wage listings on a quarterly basis to Internal Revenue Service (IRS).

Instead, the wage listings information is to be submitted at the end of the year on the W-2 form to the Social Security Administration.

Prior to the change, employers listed wages quarterly on Form 941-A and submitted the W-2 form to IRS at the end of the year.

Employers will still summarize wage quarterly to IRS on form 941. However, at the end of the year, copy A of the W-2 form will be sent to Social Security instead of to IRS.

These changes apply to wages of all employees except for domestic help.

Employers with computer capabilities are encouraged to report wage listings on magnetic media. Those wishing to do so should contact Ms. Smith at the Social Security Office for assistance and instructions.

Wife-Selling Is A Misdemeanor

By PETER J. SHAW

LONDON (UPI) — Until early in this century, selling one's wife was a swift, usually safe way of unloading an unwanted or unfaithful spouse in England.

It may have been a disgusting, barbarous, outrageous and deplorable practice, to use the words of contemporary critics.

But it also had valuable social advantages.

An Oxford University social anthropologist says it "... once served as a tested way of restructuring the family — a do-it-yourself divorce."

Writing in "New Society" magazine, Samuel Pyeatt Menefee said wife-selling was no more traumatic than most divorce hearings, less expensive than a singles bar and offered its participants "a fresh start in conjugal life.

"It was not merely a form of divorce, but a valuable social method of giving the husband a 'no-fault' separation which insured economic support for the wife and created a potentially viable social relationship for the purchaser."

Interest in wife-selling was rekindled recently in Britain by a television adaptation of Thomas Hardy's novel, "The Mayor of Casterbridge."

Menefee said he found about 200 identifiable instances of wife-selling from early times into the early 20th century.

The Divorce Act of 1857 made divorce economically feasible for all, Menefee said, but "the advantage of wife selling was not only that it terminated an unsuccessful marriage. It also provided a market for social exchange — no woman was deserted without someone to provide for her. This appears to have been the rationale behind the general, and otherwise inexplicable, assent of most wives involved in such transactions."

In most 18th and early 19th century sales, the woman was usually sold in a cattle market. Payment often was based on her weight.

The most blatant link with livestock sales was the halter around the wife's neck or waist, Menefee said.

"Bridled in this way, the woman might be led to market through a turnpike gate, which established possession and legalized the sale."

He said wife sales occurred for many reasons. A significant number involved the wife's adultery.

Husbands sometimes sold directly. One Joseph Thompson is said to have urged would-be purchasers to "avoid troublesome wives as you would a mad dog, a roaring lion, a loaded pistol, cholera ..."

Menefee said most wives consented to being sold, but some were driven to market with cudgels or lured there under false pretenses.

Menefee's research uncovered one wife who turned the tables on her spouse by suggesting she would sell better in a different town. She then had him shanghaied for a long cruise, leaving her with their home and possessions.

Feminists who opposed the practice often used stones and weighted socks to disrupt some sales, Menefee said. They actually caused one auctioneer to seek protection, he added.

Wife-selling has been a misdemeanor in England since the early 19th century. It is punishable by up to two years in prison.

By the early 20th century sales were held in pubs instead of markets and agreements were commonly by private contract. They came to light only in support cases or because of family squabbles.

Chavez And Union In Midst Of Dramatic Changes

By WILLIAM P. COLEMAN

KEENE, Calif. (UPI) — Cesar Chavez turned 51 last month. His farm labor movement turned 16.

And both are in the midst of their most dramatic changes since Chavez came out of nowhere to lead the movement that rocked California's agriculture industry.

They have come a long way from the ragged picket lines that marched at the edge of dusty fields more than a decade ago. Now the United Farm Workers Union has a growing headquarters complex. It already contains one computer and will soon have more.

Chavez is still the quiet-spoken, slightly-built man he was when he came out of the fields to start organizing California's thousands of predominantly Spanish-speaking farmworkers in 1962.

But from behind the old, cluttered wooden desk in the small, memento-filled office at La Paz, a former tuberculosis sanitorium where the union is headquartered, he said, "I'm wiser now, older.

"I think my role has changed from one of an organizer to possibly one of a teacher.

"Mostly, I must teach people to initiate and accept change within the movement because we can't live in the late '70s with the concepts we had in the mid-60s. The things we did in 1965 are no longer necessary, valid or even important."

Chavez, a little heavier than in his days of public fasts, walking the grape fields and leading protest marches through the state, feels the important thing for the UFW now is to develop leadership and planning for the future.

"I have become a teacher and a planner for the movement. When we move our efforts to Texas and Florida next year we'll have other people do the job of organizing; in fact, better than we did in California.

"I'll go there as a symbolic thing and for the planning, mostly, but once that's done we'll try to give the local people the responsibility and let them do the organizing, because they'll make fewer mistakes than I did in California."

Now that the Teamsters Union has dropped its bid to wrest the farm workers away from the UFW, Chavez wants to concentrate on long-range planning to improve the union and the plight of the farmworkers.

"Now we have to get the workers, especially the younger ones, to learn the mechanics of operating the union. We want to train them to be professionals to negotiate and administer the contracts we've already won."

Under Chavez' direction the UFW has begun operating a full-time school for negotiators. Other schools, including one which will teach English to the migrant workers, are planned at the 200-acre La Paz headquaters in the near future.

"We want the people we're training to really understand what we're doing. It's a long-term investment that will bring considerable benefit to the workers in the long run."

In line with that philosophy the UFW is installing computers to handle the files — in marked contrast to the operation years ago which saw boxes of files piled on desks, chairs and the floor in the union's store-front headquarters in Delano.

La Paz is nestled in the Tehachapi Mountains northeast of Los Angeles about 30 minutes drive from the dusty fields of the San Joaquin Valley where some of the union's bitterest, and sometimes bloody, battles were staged with the growers and the Teamsters Union.

It's a peaceful setting with streams running through the green fields. But the serenity outside belies the activity inside the cluster of white buildings with green roofs.

Carpenters, electricians and other workers are partitioning office space, digging out basements and finishing the rooms that will house the computers on order.

One computer now is being fed with personnel files of the 30,000 UFWk members. It takes only seconds to determine where a certain worker is currently employed, his past wages or his eligibility for benefits under the union's medical plan.

Final preparations are being made for another computer which will handle the union's printing business, from contracts to newsletters and eventually a newspaper.

Another computer is planned in the future to handle the medical plan files, which currently are stacked in bookcases from floor to ceiling in a large room in one of the converted hospital buildings.

---

A microwave telephone system which eventually will link La Paz with UFW field offices throughout the state also is being built and a low power radio station is in operation. The union hopes the station will someday become a network broadcasting to all UFW facilities in California.

Outside the headquarters small cottages and house trailers house the center's 100 volunteer workers and their families.

As a product of the battles over the past 16 years, a spokesman admits "there is more security here than meets the eye." But he is not specific.

However, there is a guard at the gate. And Chavez is accompanied everywhere, including to his office, by his guard dog, Huelga (which means "strike" in Spanish).

The center's volunteers, several of them Catholic nuns, are paid $10 per week for their services. They also get monthly stipends for food and clothing.

Chavez hopes to make La Paz completely independent. Several volunteers are in medical and law schools. Mechanics are being trained to keep things running. A 30-acre garden supplies more than enough produce for the community.

---

Chavez, his wife and four of his eight children live at La Paz. His last public fast was in 1972. But, deeply religious, he still fasts privately several times a year.

"I fast to get all the toxins out and clear my head. It's a cleansing process both for the soul and especially the body. It gives you a better perspective of life and tells you where you're at."

Usually up before dawn, he often goes to his office, only about 200 yards from his home, to meditate. He practices yoga and often uses this quiet time to clear the paperwork off his desk before the telephones start ringing.

Chavez looks at the pictures, posters and banners on his office walls recalling the struggle for the migrant farmworker.

"We still have more than 100 contracts we're negotiating with California growers and they are going slowly," he said, "and we aren't happy with all aspects of the farm labor law. But we have been successful and will continue to be successful as long as we change with the times and don't become stagnant."

Organic Farmer Back To Nature

By L.J. HESSBURG
Red Wing Republican Eagle

CANNON FALLS, Minn. (AP) — Back-to-earth enthusiasts would flip their granola bowls over Merle Tate, 64, whose 100-year-old farm is a monument to the philosophy that "small is beautiful" and "natural is best."

"I don't have to make a lot of money and I'm a natural organic farmer," says Tate. "This energy crunch is kind of a great thing; it teaches people simple things they can do for themselves."

The 120-acre world Tate and his wife, Helen, have sculpted for themselves is a convincing testimony to that.

Using only turkey manure fertilizer and no pesticides, Tate still claims healthy crop yields of wheat, corn, alfalfa and oats. His 30 cattle are fed only natural grains and allowed to graze the stubble after harvest. No chemical fatteners are pumped into their diet.

The cows that graze across the farmyard near the Tates' kitchen window look as fat and sassy as any contented Elsies. On the other side of the yard a huge propeller mounted on a tower turns lazily in the breeze.

The 52-foot wind generator Tate installed in his back yard supplies about 340 kilowatts of electrical energy a month, or roughly a third of his electrical consumption. An electric heater supplies about 5 percent of his house's heat.

A quaint old woodburning stove provides about 80 percent of the home's heat and an oil heater kicks in sometimes to take up the slack.

Tate gets by on about four cords of wood a year, harvested from a 20-acre stand of hardwood on his land. He also burns used crankcase oil obtained from area gas stations to heat his tool shop out back.

Another of his recycling schemes is to salvage bark from a local sawmill and sell it to nurseries and neighbors for organic gardening mulch.

Tate and his wife grind their own flour, and munch away all winter on homemade wheat cereal and bread. Tate also sells the brown wheat to his friends for 25 cents a pound.

Tate spent four years restoring a 1931 Model-A Town Sedan which is much more than a collector's car. Last summer the Tates drove it 3,400 miles on a 12-day tour of Western states, a trip he said was made to research energy-saving projects.

Tate's energy-saving interests include production of methyl alcohol from vegetable material — using anything from grass to wheat stubble. The process is relatively simple to engineer and yields a high-quality automobile fuel that Tate claims is as good as gasoline.

"We've got all kinds of energy; we just have to learn how to use 'em," he says. "We should study how nature works and work with it."

DOG VACCINATION CLINICS SCHEDULE

The Pitt County Community Health Department is again offering county wide dog vaccination clinics to the citizens of Pitt County as a convenience to them and in its effort to keep Pitt County free of rabies.

All dogs four (4) months old and over are to be vaccinated. Dogs receiving their first vaccination this year will need to be vaccinated again in 1979. For dogs that have been previously vaccinated, the vaccination is good for three (3) years.

The vaccine will be administered by licensed Doctors of Veterinary Medicine, using the latest advancement in vaccine development.

The General Statutes of North Carolina require that all dogs be vaccinated and that they display the vaccination tag at all times. This tag can also be used to identify your dog if lost or strayed. Please take your dog to the clinic nearest your home for this vaccination. Again this year, all of the clinics will be held in the evening as an additional convenience.

This beauty and her brother, a brown and white dog a little larger than her, need good homes. They've grown up in a fenced-in yard in the country, but their owners have moved to Greenville and cannot no longer keep them, as they have three other dogs.

They're from the same litter, about two years old, and have had all their shots. Missy, the female, has been spayed.

Also, in need of homes are:

— a male German Shepherd with a crushed foot;

— a part-Persian male cat, gray tabby and white, very affectionate; and — a female Siamese cat needing medical care.

All of these animals may be adopted through the Pitt County Humane Society and others may be placed for adoption. One may call the president, Mrs. Jeanette Fiore, between 6 and 9 p.m. any evening. Her phone number is 758-0468.

Uranium Boom Town Sees Revival

EDITOR'S NOTE — Housing is short, rents are soaring, crime is rising, traffic's snarling and workers worry about cancer. Uranium is being mined once again. And the folks who've been through the ups and downs before prefer boom to bust.

By DAVID GERSOVITZ
Canadian Press Writer

ELLIOT LAKE, Ont. (AP) — A boom town in the 50s, a bust in the 60s, Elliot Lake is once again basking in uranium prosperity. Some citizens worry it won't last. Others worry it'll last too long.

"There's a smell of money in the air," one citizen says happily. But there's also uneasiness, among miners especially, about greater hazards that expanded mining may bring — increased radiation, for one thing.

The three hotels in town are usually booked full, as are all the rental car services. Most of the visitors are consultants, contractors, engineers and skilled tradesmen associated with the boom brought on by expanded uranium mining.

Elliot Lake — with its modern homes, wide, clean streets, hospital, theater, community center and recreation facilities — is an oasis of prosperity in a troubled part of Ontario. Just 100 miles to the east, at Sudbury, 4,000 nickel miners are being laid off and other resource-based industries in the rolling hills north of Lake Huron have fallen on hard times.

But uranium prosperity has its complications.

Radioactive waste from the mines has increased fivefold, and environmentalists warn that things could get worse. Miners worry about radon gas — a radioactive, cancer-causing element — and silica dust in the mines. Housing is short, rents are soaring, crime is going up and traffic's getting worse.

And finally, people worry that the money will dry up again.

Elliot Lake was founded in the 1950s, when the United States discovered it needed $1 billion of Canadian uranium to expand its nuclear arsenal. But affluence lasted barely five years. In 1960, the market for uranium began to sour and the population dropped to 6,000 from 25,000.

In 1973, the Arab oil embargo led to an increasing demand for uranium oxide. In five years, the price of uranium has gone from $6 to $40 a pound, and Rio Algom Ltd. and Denison Mines Ltd., who own the mines here, have contracts stretching into the next century.

About 300 men worked the mines at Denison in 1975. Now there are nearly 1,000. By the time expansion is complete, the figure may be 3,000. Rio Algom will double its 1,200-man work force by 1980 and Preston Mines Ltd., a Rio Algom subsidiary, will create 1,000 jobs by reviving its Stanleigh operation, dormant since the 1960s. Another 1,000 men work on the expansion and housing.

All of which makes Elliot Lake a magnet. The population is 12,000 and government projections say it may reach 30,000 by the 1980s.

"People are coming in every week to set up dental clinics, jeans shops, pizza parlors, taverns, restaurants," says Don McKay, manager of a local real estate office.

The mining firms recruit across Canada for experienced miners, attracting them with subsidized housing. The mines own houses and apartments and are building hundreds more to rent to employees at bargain prices.

But newcomers who don't work for the mines must fight for the few vacant apartments with rents that start at $200 for a basement flat. Single-family houses, which went begging during the black years, now go for three or four times their original value.

Some families live in trailers, hoping the housing supply will catch up with demand, and there are people who say they know of 10 men sharing a basement.

While the companies have built about 700 subsidized units in a new subdivision, the province won't let people move in until each unit passes a special test for radon gas, minute quantities of which were found seeping into basements. The companies are installing special ventilation to reduce the hazard.

With the boom, too, thefts and burglaries have soared. But the town's 13-man police force can't grow fast enough to keep up with the crime rate because Chief Nick Cooke has trouble finding housing for new officers.

"This town is full of transients, some with a criminal past," says Cpl. Ted Hydman of the six-member Ontario Provincial Police detachment. "They get out of stir, they hear there is some work at Elliot Lake, so they come here and rip off some of the contractors and rip off some houses."

But the biggest problems, most agree, are side effects of the uranium. Homer Seguin, staff representative of the United Steelworkers of America, thinks residents will be paying a price for prosperity long after the ore runs out.

Seguin contends that 20 years of mining uranium have already caused serious damage to the environment. He also accuses the companies of ignoring safety and environmental standards to cut costs and boost production. And he says environmental considerations are taking a back seat to mining company needs in government plans.

Company spokesmen say they are doing everything possible to reduce radioactivity and protect the environment and that pollution has been reduced to a minimum. But Seguin wants all pollution eliminated.

"For example, there's radium in my drinking water at home," he says. "Now they say it's within provincial standards, and I guess it is, but it's pollution, it's cumulative."

But Mike Quinn, who heads a group sent by Canada's Atomic Energy Control Board to assess the hazards, puts it this way: "You have to consider what is practical. We know we can't get the radon level down to zero... every part of this region has radon, some in lower amounts some in higher amounts. So the question is, where is the trade-off point? As far as I'm concerned, we haven't reached the point with the people of Elliot Lake where we are trading off their health."

One Elliot Lake resident who knows the problems first hand is Gus Frobel, who worked in the mines 20 years ago and lost a lung to cancer.

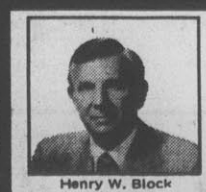

"I was a hidden victim," says Frobel, 53. "When a policeman dies it makes headlines, but when a uranium miner dies nobody cares."

A 1976 report by an Ontario royal commission into mining health and safety found 8.9 percent of Elliot Lake miners surveyed had silicosis or symptoms of it.

The commission estimated the number of lung-cancer cases from 1955 to 1974 at 36, more than twice the average for the country. James Ham, the report's author, said his estimate was conservative.

Is it all worth it? Mayor Roger Taylor worries a little — "It's in the back of my mind" — that the boom could disintegrate as it did before. But overall, he says, the mining is a plus.

"The whole of the country is in a terrible state," he says. "If you say we're not going to get the ore out as long as there is any pollution, you might as well say that Canada as a nation is finished."

Old Barber Pole Is Disappearing

By GEORGE W. HACKETT

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — The old barber pole ain't what it used to be.

The red-and-white-striped sign, born in the 18th century, is disappearing almost as quickly as the wooden Indian that stood in majestic splendor outside tobacco shops.

"If you've got one of those poles stored in the attic, I can use it," said Louis Litchfield, a local antiques dealer. "They're in great demand by collectors and museums."

Litchfield said the early barbers' trademark was carved from wood and ornately decorated with eagles and other embellishments. "It's an excellent example of American folk art and always brings a good price."

Even more valuable are the si $650 de from stained glass. On today's market, they bring from $650 to $850.

"I can't find enough of them to keep my customers happy," said Litchfield, adding that he has a stained glass pole hidden away in his shop. "I'm keeping it myself."

Litchfield could make a quick sale if he contacted Claude Isaacs, who began cutting hair in Owsley County in 1909. Isaacs retired three years ago and would like to have a pole as a memento of his profession.

"There weren't any shops when I went to work," said the 86-year-old Ravenna resident. "The boys would get together on Saturday afternoon at the general store. I'd set them on a tree stump or a box and start whacking away. For 25 cents, you got a shave and a haircut."

Isaacs admitted there were times when he'd nick the customer and draw blood. "I'd apologize and explain that this was the 4way our trade got started."

Barbers originally doubled as surgeons. They advertised by displaying a red-and-white emblem, with the stripes representing the bandage used to wrap a patient after bloodletting.

"That must have been gruesome," said Litchfield, who has seen many changes in his profession.

He's not happy with the trend among hairstylists to avoid the pole and select a sign they consider more sophisticated.

"They're killing off a tradition," he said, "and there's too much of that happening today."

At Planters you can avoid complicated tie-ins and service charges with a simple $100 minimum balance in checking.

You won't see them advertising it, but a lot of North Carolina banks have raised the cost of "free" checking by doubling your minimum balance. And complicated your once simple checking account by introducing unwanted options. Like requiring you to have other accounts.

Fortunately, we're not one of them.

At Planters, the checking minimum is still $100. We've also lowered the monthly maximum by eliminating those unpredictable per check charges with a new flat $2 fee (if your balance ever falls below $100). Chances are you'll save money.

Now, when you put it all together — our simple $100 minimum, our new $2 maximum, plus the easiest-to-balance monthly statement in North Carolina — you've got every reason you need to check with Planters.

WE STILL KNOW THE VALUE OF YOUR DOLLAR.

"While other banks have raised their minimum balance for no cost checking to $200 and complicated things with unnecessary options, tie-ins and high service charges, we've made it simple. Our minimum is $100."

The purpose of this workshop is to present the principles of job evaluation techniques, to show how job evaluation systems can be valuable aids in making wage decisions, and to give participants sufficient background to choose a job evaluation plan to suit their needs.

Registration fee for this workshop is $24 per person and it should be sent to the Greenville Area Chamber of Commerce Office.

The "Methods Improvement For Plant Operations" workshop will be held April 25 and 26 and May 2 and 4 from 1:30-4:30 p.m. in room 10 on the Pitt Tech campus.

The purpose of this workshop is to expand participants' awareness of the need for searching out and developing better and more efficient ways of performing work, to provide a working knowledge of proven systematic procedures for reducing costs by developing more efficient methods, and to provide an understanding of methods improvement and how to initiate a planned profit improvement-cost reduction program.

Financial Study Plan Is Updated

CHICAGO (UPI) — A Chicago bank has updated its nationally distributed Family Financial Education Program in a format for easier classroom use.

Chicago's 75,000 high school students are starting to use it this spring. The program consists of an 88-page booklet and ditto masters for teachers. Study units help students solve problems as they study consumer credit and money management.

One unit teaches them how to write and endorse checks, keep a check register, balance a bank statement and choose the best kind of savings account. Another teaches types, sources and costs of credit and how to read credit contracts, among other things.

The course materials were prepared by Continental Bank in cooperation with the Illinois Council of Economic Education.

Plan Meeting On Food Stamps

A community meeting, sponsored by the North Carolina Hunger Coalition, will be held on Thursday, April 13, at 7 p.m. in the St. Gabriel School Auditorium.

The purpose of the meeting is to inform the public about the Food Stamp Program and prescreen anyone who is interested in applying for the program. Further information may be obtained by calling 758-5667 from 10 a.m. until noon, Monday through Friday.

Hubert Green Forges In Front By Three Strokes

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — Hubert Green, whose putting brilliance on tricky greens of varied speed had produced a spectacular, seven-under-par 65 and a three-shot lead, was composed, confident and in control as he looked ahead to Sunday's final round of the 42nd Masters Golf Tournament.

"I'd rather be three ahead than three behind," he said.

"I'm one of the few guys who can lose the tournament. The others have to win it," he said.

And the others figured they would have to get the cooperation of Green to do it.

"If we could get one guy to slow down, we might have a golf tournament," suggested Gene Littler.

And that, said defending titleholder Tom Watson, is not likely.

"Hubert's not the kind of player who's going to lay down. You have to go out and beat him," said Watson, tied for second going into the last 18 holes of one of golf's great spectacles.

"He's really playing well. He's a tough man to beat down the stretch, so I know I'm going to have to shoot in the 60's to have a shot."

The current U.S. Open titleholder, a two-time winner this season and one of the leaders of the game's current crop of stars, Green's best round of the tournament gave him a 54-hole total of 206.

That was 10-under-par for the gently rolling hills of Augusta National and three strokes in front of Tom Watson, the gritty hard-working, red-haired defending champion who had to rally for a hard-won 68 that included seven birdies and three bogeys in the near-perfect playing conditions — a hot spring day with only a breath of breeze stirring the towering pines.

"Hubert obviously has figured out something about these greens that's beyond me," said puzzled, frustrated Tom Weiskopf. "They're one speed here, another speed there. But he's putting them. I don't know how."

Jack Nicklaus, a five-time winner of this annual sports classic, also failed to find the proper touch on the putting surfaces and appeared all-butblocked from a successful run at still another major title.

"I've had some very frustrating days putting — and this was one of them," Nicklaus said. "I just couldn't get the ball in the hole. I missed only two greens and was less than 25 feet from the hole on those. I was putting for birdie or eagle on every other hole and I made only three of them.

"I hit some very good putts that just wouldn't go. I hit the hole, five times and they wouldn't drop."

He finished with a 69 that left him at 212, eight strokes off the pace.

"I could win from this many strokes back," he said, "if there were only two or three guys in front of me, but with this many, it will be very difficult. I'll have to shoot an extremely good round, a 64 or 65, and hope the others don't play quite that well," said the disappointed Nicklaus.

Low-key veteran Rod Funseth, who started the day in a tie for the lead, shot a 70 that left him in a tie at 209 with Watson.

Gene Littler, a quiet, courageous, vastly-respected 47-year-old veteran, extended to 40 holes his no-bogey streak with a solid 70 that left him 210 and alone in fourth place, four strokes back going into the final 18 holes of the chase for the most famous piece of sports haberdashery, the green jacket that goes to the winner.

Lee Trevino, who once vowed he never again would play in this event and now so desperately wants it to complete a career sweep of the Big Four titles, was ambused by a triple-bogey seven that sent him reeling back into the pack and dashed his hopes of joining Nicklaus, Gary Player, Ben Hogan and Gene Sarazen as the only players to sweep the Masters, U.S. and British Opens and the PGA.

The brash and brassy Trevino entered the third round in a tie for the lead and still held that position when he prepared to hit his second shot on the par four fifth hole.

He flew that one far over the green into the trees and bushes.

"It disappeared from the earth," Trevino said.

His only shot out was low into a bunker. He failed to get it out of the sand on the first try, blew the next to 3½ feet — then missed the putt.

It took the steam out of him.

"I think my green jacket just went the hell out the window," he said.

Trevino finished with a rallying round of par 72 and a tie at 211 — five strokes back — with Australian David Graham, Hale Irwin and Bill Kratzert, one of the more promising of the tour's young players. Irwin fought his way to a 71 while Kratzert had a 67. Graham, who played in the same two-some with Nicklaus, had to overcome a four-putt, doublebogey with five birdies and an eagle for a 67.

Wally Armstrong, with a 70, was next at 212.

Weiskopf, Player and dynamic young Severiano Ballesteros, the handsome young Spaniard who has ruled European golf for two years, were in a group at 213. Weiskopf shot a 70, Player a 69 and Ballesteros a 68 that included a 31 on the back nine.

Arnold Palmer, 48, who has won this event four times, was only three shots back when play started, but disappointed his hopeful, faithful followers with a 74 that left him out of contention at 216.

Some other scores: PGA champion Lanny Wadkins, 73— 217; Jerry Pate, 72—215; Ray Floyd, 71—218; Ben Crenshaw, 74—219; Johnny Miller, 72—221.

Green's putting stance is unique, but highly effective. He crouches in a bent-double stance like a man looking for a small object lost in the grass. The forefinger of his right hand points down the shaft of an ancient putter that is older than he.

"No one knows exactly how old it is," he said. "But it was manufactured by the Great Lakes Golf Co., and they went out of business back in the 30's."

Using that old weapon, now equipped with a green-handled shaft, he required only 27 strokes on the greens that baffled and bothered so many of the other great stars. He oneputted nine times.

John Hurls Dodger Win

ATLANTA (AP) — Los Angeles left-hander Tommy John had just turned in his first pitching performance of the season and was pleased with it.

"I wish they had put the speed gun on me today," he said after the Dodgers beat the Atlanta Braves 6-2 Saturday. "I did 87 miles per hour in spring training against Cincinnati, and I threw harder today than I did then."

John, a 20-game winner for the defending National League champions, went 72-3 innings, striking out four batters.

"Four strikeouts," he said. "That's all I had in 30 innings of spring training."

John gave up a solo home run to Gary Matthews in the fourth inning and a run-scoring single to Jeff Burroughs in the eighth but otherwise was tough in the clinches.

"To have just one bullet hit in this park, you have to be happy," he said of homerhaven Atlanta Stadium. "They had, what, 40 or 50 more home runs hit here than anywhere else?"

Was John thinking about another 20-game winning season?

"Twenty-one," he answered with a smile. "No, seriously, I'm thinking about two wins right now. When I get two, I'll think about three. When you get a 13-3 record, people start talking about a 25-win season, and, zap, you come unglued."

It was the second consecutive victory for the defending National League champions, who backed John's pitching with 15 hits, including three apiece by Steve Yeager and Dusty Baker.

Smith singled with two out in the first against Dick Ruthven, advanced to third on two wild pitches and scored the first run when Steve Garvey singled.

Los Angeles got another run in the fourth when Baker singled, moved up on a walk to Rick Monday and scored on a single by Yeager.

The Braves scored their run in the bottom of the fourth when Gary Matthews led off with a home run over the center field fence. But the Dodgers picked up two more in the fifth when Smith sent a shot over the same fence following a single by Russell.

Smith led off the seventh with a double off reliever Eddie Solomon and scored for the third time when Cey singled.

Cey led off the ninth with a single, setting the stage for the Dodgers' final run. Pinch-runner Teddy Martinez advanced on a grounder and came home when Baker singled for his third hit.

After Jerry Royster walked with one out in the Atlanta eighth and was forced by Barry Bonnell, Matthews singled for his third hit. Bonnell scored on a single by Jeff Burroughs.

Ruthven got himself in trouble in the second when he gave up a single to Yeager and then threw wildly on a pickoff attempt, allowing Yeager to go to third. But he escaped by striking out John and getting Davey Lopes to bounce into a forceout.

Rangers Nip Yanks

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Slugging Richie Zisk drilled a leadoff home run off reliever Rich Gossage in the bottom of the ninth inning Saturday and the Texas Rangers tripped the world champion New York Yankees 2-1 in the American League opener for both clubs.

Zisk, who came to Texas as a free agent after hitting 30 home runs for the Chcago White Sox last year, crashed an 0-2 pitch just over the left field wall. The drive just cleared the fence because of a 20-mile-an-hour wind blowing in toward home plate.

Left-hander Jon Matlack, obtained in an off-season trade from the New York Mets, scattered eight hits to earn the victory before a crowd of 40,078, the largest opening day turnout in the Rangers' history.

The Rangers jumped on Yankee starter Ron Guidry for a first-inning run on a leadoff single by Mike Hargrove and one-out singles by Al Oliver and Zisk.

The Yanks nicked Matlack for the tying run in the fifth on Lou Pinella's triple and Chris Chambliss' infield hit.

Matlack struck out six and survived a one-out, bases-loaded jam in the sixth by getting Reggie Jackson on a pop

Supel's Homer Halts Gobblers

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Bobby Supel provided East Carolina University with a five-run cushion in the bottom of the seventh inning, and it took every bit of that cushion for the Bucs to hold off Virginia Tech last night for a 9-8 victory.

Virginia Tech's Dennis Duff came back in the top of the eighth to hit a grand-slam shot that brought the Gobblers back to the one-run deficit, and Wayne Shelton followed that with a double that threatened to tie the game up before relief pitcher Rick Ramey found his control and retired the side.

Ramsey had been brought on with two down in the eighth when starter Pete Conaty tired. Ramey delivered the final two balls to Andy Aldrich, walking him after Conaty had worked up a 2-0 count. Ramey then walked Harold Williams to load the bases for Duff, who delivered the ball out of the park in left for his second straight home run.

Shelton added the double, but Ramey settled down then and struck out the next batter to retire the side. He got the side in order in the ninth to preserve Conaty's third win in seven decisions.

Coach Monte Little was asked why he chose Ramey, who had worked six plus innings on Friday. "(Tim) Stiller complained of his side hurting, and (Bob) Patterson's arm didn't feel right," Little said. "Rick said he was ready and felt good so we went with him."

Little added that the pitch that cost the Pirates their wide margin was a hanging curve ball that Ramey had tried to shake off. "We called for the pitch from the dugout and Rick didn't want to throw it."

For the sixth straight game the Pirates attacked their opponent with the bat, stroking 13 hits, including two homers and a triple. In each of the last five games, the Pirates have banged out ten or more hits. "And we've scored 70 runs in the last six games," Little pointed out. "The kids are playing with a lot of character now. We're bunting the ball well when we want to and executing well. As far as the hitting is concerned, knew that the ability was there.

"They're just relaxing at the plate and getting their hits. We're also gaining some momemtum now."

Little admitted that he was scared after Duff's homer. "Our bullpen is pretty weak now with two guys not feeling well. I'm worried about (today's) game. We'll go with (Mickey) Britt and have (Bill) Davis in relief, but I don't want to go any further."

East Carolina struck for the lead in the bottom of the first inning as they never trailed in the game. Eddie Gates opened up with a single to left, and Billy Best followed with a triple into the right field corner, easily scoring Gates. Best then scored on Pete Paradossi's grounder to short.

Tech came right back to tie the score in the top of the second. With two down, Shelton singled, and Steve Dodd cracked out the first of three Hokie home runs.

East Carolina regained the lead with two in the third. Gates opened the scoring with a solo homer to center over the 390—foot sign. It was his fourth homer of the year.

Best kept things going with a single to left. He stole second and moved on the ball was overthrown at second. Paradossi then brought him home with a sacrifice fly.

Another Pirate run crossed in the fourth. Tim Hardison reached on a fielder's choice and moved up on Robert Brinkley's single. Jerry Carraway in with another sacrifice fly.

Virginia Tech closed the gap to 5-4 with two in the seventh. Harold Williams walked and Duff delivered his first homer, to dead center, 410 feet from the plate.

But the Pirates came right back to score four in their half of the seventh to run the lead to 9-4. Carraway hit a shot to third that bounced over the fielder into left for a hit. Gates then beat out a bunt to first and they were sacrificed up. Paradossi walked and Butch Davis brought in Carraway with a sacrifice fly. Supel then cracked a homer to right, scoring Gates and Paradossi ahead of himself.

The homer was the 27th of the season for the Pirates, tieing the season record set back in 1968.

Then came the scary part for the Pirates.

With two down, Dan Griel walked and Conaty threw two balls to Aldrich. Ramey came on and pitched two more to walk Aldrich. Williams also walked, loading the bases.

Duff hit his shot to left for the grand-slam, and the five-run lead had shrunk to just one, 9-8.

Shelton followed with a double, but Ramey settled down and

'Hondo' Havlicek Will Play Final Game Today

BOSTON (AP) — The glory days are over, but the Boston Celtics will hang one more honored uniform number from the rafters next year.

No future member of the once-great National Basketball Association team will wear No. 17 after John Havlicek peels it off today.

The 16-year veteran, whose retirement was announced Jan. 29, will play his last game, at Boston Garden. The Buffalo Braves are the opposition.

It will give the former Ohio State star a round number of 1,270 NBA contests, a record that likely will last forever.

True to his durable form, the aging swingman has appeared in every Celtics' contest this season, and continues to play at full speed despite the team's woeful showing.

His NBA records include more than 26,000 career points — third on the all-time list; 16 consecutive seasons of 1,000 or more points — a league mark; a career scoring average of 20 points; 13 All-Star games; and eight NBA titles with the Celtics.

Havlicek even managed to have his 38th birthday fall during his retirement weekend, on Saturday, and against a team coached by his former Celtics' pal, Don Nelson, the Milwaukee Bucks' coach.

A phalanx of celebrities will honor Havlicek on Sunday, including show business stars like Peter Falk and former Buckeye teammate Jerry Lucas.

The Celtics and NBA Commissioner Larry O'Brien will dole out gifts.

It marks the end of an amazing sports career that could have turned out differently.

Havlicek was Boston's top draft pick in 1962, but the Celtics had won the NBA championship the previous season and had the last choice.

Havlicek almost made the Cleveland Browns in the National Football League as a wide receiver, although he didn't play the sport in college.

Ohio State Coach Woody Hayes, Havlicek says, called him the "best quarterback in the Big Ten not playing football." He was the Browns' last cut and arrived at the Celtics' camp as something of an unknown quantity.

Celtics mentor Red Auerbach spotted Havlicek's defensive skills within minutes. But for several years the combination guard and forward was the team's sixth man, in the Frank Ramsey mold.

Havlicek won about as much NBA recognition as a bowl of cold oatmeal until his last-second steal in the 1965 playoffs semifinals preserved a Boston victory over Philadelphia and made him famous.

Celtics radio announcer Johnny Most made a record called "Havlicek Stole the Ball." A year later, Havlicek was picked for the All-Star game for the first time.

Havlicek's phenomenal durability and hustle won increasing heapings of praise as the team's championships piled up. Unlike some other athletes, his rise to superstardom was based entirely on his play rather than his quotes or off-court activities.

He nearly pushed Boston past the New York Knicks in a 1973 Eastern Conference playoff series, despite a shoulder injury that forced him to play with one hand, his left.

He keyed a triple overtime thriller in 1976 over the Phoenix Suns and Boston won its last NBA title on Havlicek's off-balance jumpers.

At his retirement announcement 10 weeks ago, Havlicek reviewed his career.

His biggest disappointment was failing to make the U.S. Olympic basketball team in 1960. He still is bitter that spots on that team were reserved for lesser AAU players.

He won't coach. He'll do small chores for the Celtics if they ask. He'll travel. He'll oversee a fast-food franchise in Westchester County, N.Y.

When the game ends Sunday, Havlicek will do what he's done after each of his 16 NBA seasons: Answer the last questions from reporters and head home to Columbus, Ohio. He's never become a New Englander.

Havlicek says he'll simply walk away from the game and adjust to a new life without basketball. But for a man whose measured pace off the court enabled him to reserve all his energy for competition, that adjustment may look easier than it turns out to be.

Opposition Against Los Angeles

LONDON (AP) — Los Angeles' hopes of hosting the 1984 Olympic Games took another knock Saturday as the international sports federations lined up to oppose the Californian city's television plans.

Tom Keller, president of the General Assembly of International Sports Federations (GAISF), said Los Angeles' financial proposals are not acceptable.

"There are many other cities which could handle the Games, and are geared for them, like Munich and Montreal," Keller said.

Keller flies to Mexico City this weekend with Lord Killanin, president of the International Olympic Committee (IOC), the ruling body of the games. They plan to meet delegates from Los Angeles whose bid for the 1984 games is scheduled to be considered by the IOC in Athens next month.

Some IOC members believe Los Angeles' bid will be rejected unless Killanin can persuade the Americans to modify their approach.

Los Angeles, seeking to guard against a heavy deficit on the Games, has angered the IOC by the tone of its replies to a formal questionnaire. Asked if it will accept the IOC's formula for television contracts, it said it will handle these itself and handle the revenue in its own way.

This is contrary to the rules of the IOC, which insists on negotiating television contracts and taking a little more than one-third of television revenue. This share is then partly divided out among the 26 federations which control Olympic sports and partly used to help the Olympic movement around the world with sports aid programs.

The federations rely heavily on the revenue they get from television rights at the Olympics.

GAISF speaks for 23 of the 26 Olympic federations. The exceptions are the International Amateur Athletic Federation (IAAF), which controls athletics, and the federations of field hockey and ice hockey.

The IAAF is rated the most important of the Olympic federations and receives five times as much money from the IOC as the others. It would be the hardest hit by any change in the formula.

The IAAF has a powerful spokesman in Lord Exeter, the longest serving member of the IOC, who was president of the IAAF for 30 years until he stepped down in 1976. Exeter is known to be one of the IOC members most strongly opposed to Los Angeles' attitude.

Keller said Los Angeles' implied proposals that it will take over the whole responsibility for the Games is "totally unacceptable."

"I am going to Mexico City to help Lord Killanin tell the Los Angeles people this," Keller said. "We shall now have to call again for bids."

The IOC is wholly responsible for allocating the Games. But before the meeting in Athens the IOC executive board is due to meet with the federations, and it would not go ahead with any major decision without the federations' approval.

Olympic cities are normally chosen six years in advance. If the IOC rejects Los Angeles, it is expected to ask for new bids later this year.

Montreal has already said it will be ready to take over the 1984 Games if asked. Mexico City is another likely candidate.

Mets Rally By Expos On Kranepool's Homer

NEW YORK (AP) — Ed Kranepool walloped a two-run, two-out pinch homer in the bottom of the ninth inning, giving the New York Mets a 6-5 comeback victory over the Montreal Expos Saturday.

The Mets were trailing 5-2 when Lee Mazzilli's two-run homer in the eighth put them within a run. When Bruce Boisclair opened the ninth with a walk against Expos starter Rudy May, Len Randle sacrificed the runner to second. Stan Bahnsen relieved May and retired Tim Foli on a long fly to left.

Then Kranepool batted for winning pitcher Mardie Cornejo and smashed Bahnsen's second pitch over the wall in right field to win it for New York.

Chris Speier had four hits and Dave Cash three in a 13-hit Montreal attack that built the early lead for the Expos. Steve Henderson also homered for New York.

Carter Lends Support To LA

LOS ANGELES (AP) — President Carter says he considers Los Angeles an ideal spot for the 1984 Summer Olympics — at a time when the city's bid for the Games has been questioned by some Olympic officials.

In a letter to Lord Killanin, head of the International Olympic Committee, Carter said: "As the site of the 1932 Games, and one of the most dynamic cities in the United States, Los Angeles possesses the tradition and human and physical resources which will insure an exemplary staging of the Games."

Carter said in the letter released by city officials Friday that it would be an honor to hold the Games in Los Angeles.

Carter's support came just before the opening of talks in Mexico City Monday on Los Angeles' bid for the Games.

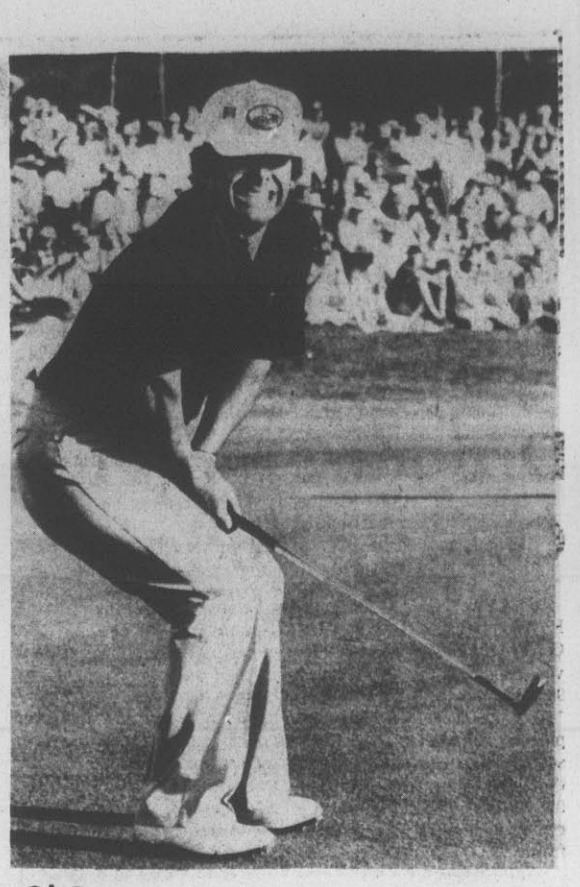

City officials saw in Carter's remarks some hope for a sizable federal grant for the Games. The city has run into problems with the IOC because of its strong cost-control stand.

Killanan had asked Mayor Tom Bradley for a presidential letter assuring the city would abide by all IOC rules and regulations. However, Carter's letter did not touch on that topic.

Meanwhile, Thomas Keller, the president of the International Sports Federations, warned in London Friday that Los Angeles will have to soften its position on financial terms for the 1984 Olympic Games or face losing them.

The Los Angeles Times in its Saturday editions quoted Keller as saying there are "many other cities" that could take the Games.

Keller is chief representative of the 21 federations which are supposed to have final say over facilities for their respective sports.

Chisox Take Second Victory Over Boston

CHICAGO (AP) — Chet Lemon's two-out, two-run game-tying double highlighted a four-run eighth-inning rally Saturday that boosted the Chicago White Sox to their second consecutive 6-5 victory over the Boston Red Sox.

Dennis Eckersley, making his debut for the Red Sox after being acquired from Cleveland last week, turned a 5-2 lead over to relief ace Bill Campbell after seven innings.

But Ralph Garr, Jorge Orta and Lamar Johnson opened the eighth with consecutive singles for one run. Bobby Bonds sacrificed the runners into scoring position and Ron Blomberg struck out but Lemon doubled to tie the game and then scored the winning run on a single by Eric Soderholm.

Eckersley had a one-hit shutout going into the fifth when the White Sox loaded the bases on a walk and singles by Soderholm and Bill Nahorodny before Garr delivered a two-run single.

Boston jumped on Francisco Barrios for three runs in the third inning. Jerry Remy singled, stole second and scored on a single by Jim Rice. After Carl Yastrzemski walked, Lynn and George Scott delivered two-out run-scoring singles.

Burleson homered off Ron Schueler in the fourth and Boston added another run in the fifth on a double by Carlton Fisk and a single by Lynn.

Giants Shut Out Padres

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Jim Barr fired a seven-hitter and Rob Andrews supplied a three-run triple Saturday, leading the San Francisco Giants to a 6-0 victory over the San Diego Padres.

Andrews drove in the game's first three runs with his triple in the second off Bob Shirley. Jack Clark followed with a single, scoring Andrews.

The Giants added a run in the third on consecutive doubles by Marc Hill and Darrell Evans, and scored once in the seventh when Terry Whitfield's sacrifice fly drove in pinch-runner Skip James.

Barr did not walk a batter, struck out one and did not allow a runner past second base. Ironically, he drew the starting assignment for the second game of the season only because Ed Halicki suffered a minor injury late in spring training.

Andrews, who had three hits in the opening-game loss to the Padres, is in the starting lineup temporarily because Bill Madlock has a sore knee.

Christenson Paces Phils Past Cards

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Right-hander Larry Christenson pitched an eight-hitter and drove in four runs, two with a homer, as the Philadelphia Phillies beat the St. Louis Cardinals 7-0 Saturday night.

Christenson, who won his last seven games of the 1977 season, and 15 of his last 16 en route to a 19-6 record, struck out four and walked one in recording the Phillies' first victory of the season.

Rich Hebner staked Christenson to a 1-0 lead by leading off the second inning with a homer. Ted Sizemore socked a two-out double and Christenson drove him home with a single.

Pirates Edge Chicago On 10th-Inning Walk

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Bruce Sutter gave up a bases-loaded walk to Jim Fergosi in the last of the 10th inning to give the Pittsburgh Pirates a 4-3 victory over the Chicago Cubs Saturday.

The Pirates had taken a 3-0 lead into the eighth but four hits, including RBI singles by Bill Buckner and Bobby Murcer, and two walks had tied the score.

In the Pirate 10th, Steve Brye lead off with a double to left. Willie Stargell was walked intentionally and after Rennie Stennett had flied out, Sutter walked Ed Ott to fill the bases before issuing the walk to Fregosi that forced in Brye.

The Pirates had scored in the third on Dave Parker's solo home run to right and added two more runs in the seventh with the help of an error.

Fernando Gonzalez had walked with one out and when pitcher Bert Blyleven laid down a bunt, Chicago first baseman Buckner threw the ball into center field attempting to catch Gonzales at second. The ball rolled to wall and both runners scored.

Darlington Can't Be 'Finessed'

DARLINGTON, S.C. (AP) — Darlington Raceway hasn't been completely repaved since it was built back in 1950. But all the retaining walls have been replaced two or three times.

That really says it all about this place.

As well as can be determined, nobody has ever "finessed" Darlington Raceway. Finesse doesn't enter into it here. Assault might. Survival certainly does.

There is a mysticism about this track. It has something that can spook a driver for life. It commands respect because it has earned its nickname: The Lady in Black.

The idea behind this speedway was to build an Indianapolis Motor Speedway for the South. Apparently no one consulted a blueprint before revving up the bulldozer.

What was eventually carved from the sandy soil of the Pee Dee backwoods was 13-8 miles of — for lack of a better word — non-geometric speedway. Instead of four definite, separate corners with two long straightaways and a pair of short chutes like the 2½-miles that make up one lap at Indy, Darlington Raceway has two long launching ramps into a pair of the meanest, bumpiest, most unpredictable, most irregular sweeping turns on any superspeedway or bull ring in the country.

The track dares chief mechanics to find the setup to outsmart it. It thumbs its nose to even the greatest of drivers — but talent helps. Horsepower means little here. Raw courage or old-fashioned foolhardiness sometimes gets the best results.

The best way to prepare for a race here is to load up on insurance.

Drivers have taken some strange trips here.

Johnny Allen broke through the guardrail and landed in the scoring stand in 1960. He tore out half of it — fortunately the unoccupied half. But it was hard to recruit scorers after that.

Carl Balmer flipped end over end and almost finished up in the press box. Some writers moved permanently to the relative safety of the infield.

Richard Petty may hold the record for most cars destroyed here. In 1969, he beat down the six-inch concrete pit wall and almost killed himself. "I don't care what these other cats do here," he said the other day. "I've already done it all."

Miles of guardrail had to be replaced here every year until the owners got smart and put in concrete walls. They're more durable, but no less abused. The fourth-turn wall is permanently bowed from being pounded year after year.

Drivers know when they start a journey of 500 miles here it isn't likely to end at the finish line. There's a club of guys who go the distance. There's a cemetery for some who don't.

Seventy-five cars used to start here, to make sure there still were a few running at the end. It's possible to finish 100 miles behind the winner and still be in the top 10.

Only 36 will take the green flag in Sunday's Rebel 500 Grand National stock car race. There will probably be enough finishers, thanks to a healthy respect that drivers have learned over the years.

Motorcycle racers respect this place — so much they won't even compete here. Apparently they think it's more dangerous than jumping the Snake River Canyon. At least somebody has given that the old college try.

East Carolina Outslugs VCU By 15-10

RICHMOND — East Carolina University's baseball Pirates, expecting somewhat of a breather on their schedule with Virginia Commonwealth, found themselves scrambling for their lives Friday afternoon.

The Rams came out with their so-called weak bats flying and pushed over six first inning runs to put the Pirates into a hole. After rallying past that, the Bucs had to come back again as VCU again took the lead.

Finally, however, the Bucs triumphed, 15-10, to claim their fourth straight win, boosting their record to 14-11 on the season. Virginia Commonwealth is now 2-14.

While the defense of the Pirates slipped a bit in the game, the offense left nothing to be criticized, slamming out 18 hits.

Billy Davis led the way with three, all for extra bases as he banged out two doubles and a triple. Billy Best and Tim Hardison also each had three, while Max Raynor and Jerry Carraway both added a couple.

VCU hit well, too, getting 12 hits. Wayne Clark led the Rams with three, while Calvin Barner and Bill Murray both had two.

The Bucs found themselves in the hole before they barely got stated as the Rams pushed over six runs in the bottom of the first inning. Barner singled to left and Mark Mitchell singled to center. Chip Noe then cracked a three-run homer.

Bill Murray was hit by pitcher Rick Ramey and Greg See walked. After an out, Clark singled, loading the bases. Warren Foster then reached on an error that allowed all three runners to score.

The Pirates started struggling back in the third, scoring five runs. It all got started after two were out. Eddie Gates walked and Best beat out a bunt. Paradossi then singled in Gates. David got his first double, scoring Best. Supel walked, laoding them up, and Hardison lofted a fly ball to left that the fielder lost in the sun. It fell in behind him for a double, scoring all three runners. That closed the gap to 6-5.

The Bucs tied it up in fifth. Davis got his second double, and after an out, scored on a wild pitch.

East Carolina added three more in the seventh to take a 9-6 lead. With one down, Davis cracked a tripel. Supel drew a walk on a fourth-ball wild pitch, which allowed Davis to score. Hardison singled Supel to third and stole second. Carraway then singled in both runners.

But VCU then came back with four in the bottom of the seventh, regaining the lead, 10-9. Noe walked and Murray doubled, ending Ramey's time on the mound. With one out, Mike Dolan walked and Clark beat out an infield hit, scoring Noe. Foster singled in both Murray and Colan and Karl Robinson's hit brought in Clark with the go-ahead run.

The lead didn't last long this time as the Pirates scored twice in the eighth to regain the lead, 11-10. With one away, Davis walked and moved up on a wild pitch. Supel singled, scoring him. Max Raynor singled and Robert Brinkley lifted a soft fly that fell in between the infield and the outfield, but Raynor, forced to wait to see if it was caught, was forced at second. Supel, who had moved to third on the play, scored when Brinkley gave himself up in a rundown between first and second on the sacrifice steal.

In the ninth, the Bucs added four more to sew up the win. With one down, Raymie Styons singled and Macon Moye ran for him. Gates singled and Best got a hit, scoring Moye. Paradossi then reached on a two-base error, allowing both Gates and Best to score.

East Carolina was to face Virginia Tech at Harrington Field Saturday night. The two teams meet again this afternoon at 1:30 p.m. at Harrington.

Yugoslavia Falls To U.S., 88-83

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — The United States basketball team remained undefeated Friday night as Rutgers center James Bailey poured in 14 points to lead the U.S. to a 88-83 victory over Yugoslavia in the second round of the World Invitational Tournament.

Alexandr Salinkov pumped in 21 points to give the Russian team a 108-78 victory over Cuba in a game earlier in the evening. The title match between the U.S. and the USSR teams will be played in Lexington, Ky. Sunday.

The USSR team has one loss in the tourney, so an American victory Sunday would give the American team the title. A Russian victory would mean the title would be decided according to point spreads throughout the tourney.

The U.S. team trailed early in the game Friday night with Yugoslavia, but they moved ahead 37-35 with four minuts left in the first half on a jump shot by Kentucky's Kyle Macy.

The lead seesawed back and forth in the second half until Macy hit a jump shot with two minutes left in the game to make it 84-79.

Dragan Kicanovic led the Yugoslavian team with 22 points,, and Mirza Delibasic had 18.

North Carolina's Phil Ford had 13 to back up Bailey for the Americans, and Macy had 12.

North Pitt Tops Chargers By 10-5

By JIM KYLE
Reflector Sports Writer

LITTLEFIELD — North Pitt rapped 12 hits, three of them for extra bases, and played nearly error-less defense in winning its first baseball game of the season, a 10-5 victory over Ayden-Grifton Friday.

Although the game was played at the Charger field, Panther coach Pat Smith gave much of the credit for his team's first win in seven starts to the condition of North Pitt's diamond. "We finally got our field in shape and are able to practice like we should", Smith commented after the game.

The coach said his team is still hampered by inexperience, but is improving with more practice time. "I was well-pleased with the way we hit the ball and ran the bases." Defensively, Smith said, "We didn't make as many boo-boos as we've been making."

Freshman hurler Bob Hemingway, who went the distance to pick up his first win against two losses, also drew praise from Smith. "I thought Bob, for a freshman, pitched well." The right-hander allowed eight Charger hits and three earned runs.

Corky Teachey started the day on the mound for Ayden-Grifton, but was replaced in the second by David Smith after giving up five runs. Teachey was charged with the loss and saw his record drop to 1-2.

The Panthers, taking advantage of seven Ayden-Grifton errors, were able to stay in control most of the way. They held a 2-1 lead at the end of the first inning of play and built that to 10-3 before giving up two runs in the seventh.

Shortstop Roy Briley was the offensive leader for the Panthers. He was 2-3 at the plate, scored four runs and had one run batted in. North Pitt first baseman Tim Corey was 3-4, while center fielder Carl Knight and catcher Carl Wilson each had two safeties. Hemingway aided his mound work with a pair of hits and two RBI's.

Center fielder Harold Edwards was the only dominant force in the Charger attack with a 2-3 performance and three runs. First baseman Mike Teachey was credited with two RBI's.

The afternoon started off on a low note for Ayden-Grifton as the first North Pitt batter, Jeff Hines, reached on an error. He reached second on an infield out and then scored when the Charger center fielder failed to make a play on Briley's shallow fly.

Corey knocked a hit up the middle to move Briley to third and he scored on a base hit by Hemingway.

Edwards scored for the Chargers in the bottom of the first. He walked, went to second on an infield out by Ed Coley and scored on Mike Teachey's base hit.

Briley led off the third with a hit for the Panthers, which he stretched into a triple when a bad hop caused the ball to elude the Charger right fielder. He scored when Corey slapped a double down the left field line. Hemingway sacrificed Corey to third and Carl Knight singled him home.

Knight was caught stealing for the Panther's second out of the inning, but Chris Holder walked and was knocked to second by Wilson. He scored when Hines again made it to first on an error for a 5-1 North Pitt lead.

Ayden-Grifton pulled to 5-3 with a pair of the inning. Edwards led off with a single to right and a steal. Coley followed with a triple that rolled down the line in left. Coley came in on Quinn's infield out.

Two more Chargers reached base as Smith doubled and Wayne Newton beat out a bunt, but they, like six other Ayden-Grifton baserunners during the game, were left stranded.

Briley picked up his third run in the fourth. He reached on a fielder's choice as Vic Evans was thrown out at second. Corey's base hit sent him to second and he stole third. The score came on Hemingway's single to right.

Two more North Pitt runs came across in the fifth. Holder led off with a walk and was sacrificed to second by Wilson. That brought up Hines, who cracked a double which hit first base on route to right field. Hines tried to stretch his hit into a triple, but the ball was waiting for him at third base. His slide knocked the ball from the third baseman's glove, however, and he scored on Ron Howe's squeeze bunt.

Briley and Knight both came across in the top of the seventh to provide the Panthers with a 10-3 lead.

The bottom of the seventh was a wild affair with Charger coach Allan Wilson getting thumbed for his earnest protest of an umpire's call.

Edwards led off the frame with a hard chopper past the third baseman and he stole second. Coley reached on an error, but was called out on the next play when the umpire ruled he was touched by Quinn's batted ball. That drew the ire of Wilson, who was subsequently ejected.

Edwards scored on Mike Teachey's infield out and pinch hitter Jay Phillips knocked in Quinn. The game ended with two Chargers still on base.

The contest left both teams with identical Eastern Carolina Conference records, 1-1. Ayden-Grifton, now 3-5 for the season, will host C. B. Aycock on Tuesday, while North Pitt will travel to D. H. Conley.

Lady Jaguars Lost Runners

By JIM KYLE
Reflector Sports Writer

The advent of a softball program at Farmville Central has cut a bit into the girls' track team there, according to track coach Hilda Worthington, but the Lady Jaguars should still have a successful season.

"I have some real, real young girls this year," Worthington said. "Softball hurt me, I guess, with a few people, but we're all right."

Worthington said the Lady Jags will be stronger in the distance events than the sprints this season and could pick up some points in the field events.

In the field events, Farmville Central has junior Lynette Harris, senior Lu Ann Eason and freshman Lillian Tyson.

Lynette will long jump and triple jump for the Lady Jaguars. "She can really do when she sets her mind to it," the coach said. "She is a very determined athlete."

Eason throws the shot and discus and "has improved a whole lot."

Tyson also throws the discus. "Lillian is coming through. She is going to be real good," according to Worthington.

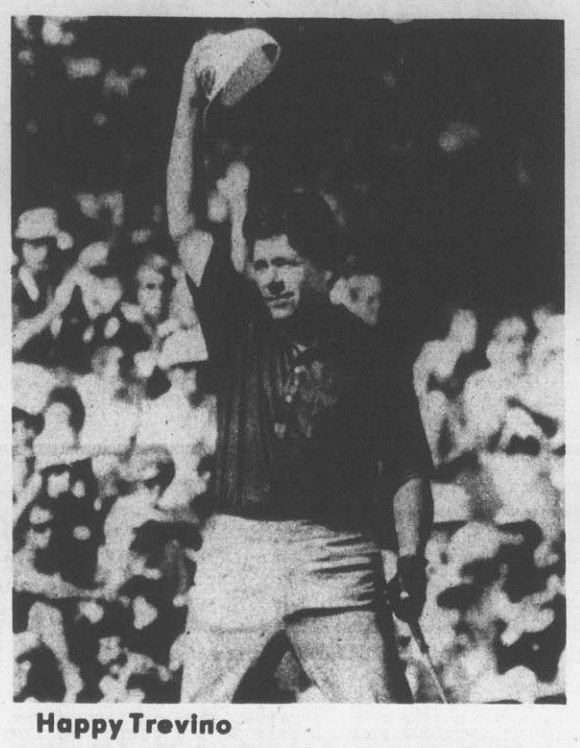

Two other team members will participate in the distance events, senior Terri Lloyd and sophomore Rosa Tyson. Lloyd, who runs the mile and 880, "just loves to run," Worthington said. She does a lot of running on her own and should help the team out this season.

Tyson participates mainly in the 880 and has been bringing her times down with every meet. "She's going to be real good before the season is over with," according to Worthington.

Senior Betty Barrett and junior Sharon Mozingo will run the 440 and are "doing a real good job."

Girls' track in the Eastern Carolina Conference is a confusing situation, Worthington said. Since the season began, two teams have already dropped out and two more teams have entered the race. There are now four teams competing, Farmville Central, C. B. Aycock, Greene Central and Southern Nash.

The season concludes with a conference meet to determine the champion and Worthington said, "I would say we're in good shape, except for lacking in depth. That would probably be the big thing that would hurt us."

Jamesville Rips Bath By 10-1

JAMESVILLE — Jamesville High School remained unbeaten in Beaufort-Hyde-Martin play Friday with a 10-1 victory over Bath High School.

Jamesville got all it was to need in the first inning, scoring four times. Toby Holliday singled and Jeff Holliday got a hit. Both scored when Trent Ange tripled. Ange, however, was cut down at the plate on Ed Lilley's grounder. Tommy DiNardo singled and Keith Long singled in both Lilley and DiNardo.

Bath got its only run in the third. Boyd singled, stole up and scored on Burhage's single.

Jamesville added its fifth run in the third. Jeff Holliday singled, and stole up. Ange walked and both stole up. Holliday scored when Lilley grounded out.

After scoring once in the fourth, Jamesville got three more in the fifth off a home run by DiNardo. The Bullets finished their scoring with one more in the sixth.

Jamesville was led by Toby and Jeff Holliday, Ange and DiNardo, each with two hits.

The Bullets are now 7-2 overall and 2-0 in the conference. They were to play at Williamston Saturday night, then entertain Pantego on Tuesday.

Roanoke Nips S. Edgecombe

ROBERSONVILLE—Roanoke High School pushed over a run in the tenth inning yesterday to gain a 6-5 victory over South Edgecombe in an Eastern Pines Conference baseball game.

Roanoke came back with three in their half of the first. Glenn Cargile singled and Charlie Smith got a hit. Cliff Keel then cracked a three-run homer.

South Edgecombe tied it up with one in the second. Jeff Ellis reached on a fielder's choice and James Corbatt was hit by a pitch. Tommy Tolson reached on an error, scoring Ellis.

Roanoke pushed back ahead with one in the third. Smith singled and Kell got a hit. Street Lee reached on a fielder's choice, scoring Smith.

The Redskins got another run in the fourt. Des Andrews reached when his third strike was dropped. He stole second and scored ion Ken Gurganus' single.

South Edgecombe rallied for a run in the fifth. Webb doubled and scored when Tolson reached on an error.

The Dragons tied it up with one in the sixth. Rodney Taylor was safe on another Redskin error and Perry Edmondson singled him to second. He moved to third on a wild pitch and scored on an error.

The scored stayed at 5-5 until Roanoke scored in the tenth. That came on a first pitch home run to Keel.

The win lifted the Roanoke record to 6-3 overall and 2-2 in the Eastern Plains.

Perry Ties For Third In Strikeouts

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

The San Francisco Giants were sorry after letting Gaylord Perry go to the American League. They may be sorrier, however, now that he's back in the National.

Perry, once traded to the Cleveland Indians for the now-forgotten "Sudden Sam" McDowell back in 1971, has returned to his original base in the National League 112 victories, seven seasons and three teams later.

A Cy Young Award winner with the Indians and the ace of the Texas Rangers staff, Perry now is a member of the San Diego Padres, who coincidentally are in the same West Division as the Giants. And Friday night, the tall right-hander had a homecoming party of sorts at Candlestick Park, helping his new team beat his old team 3-2.

Perry was not involved in the decision, but he did show his onetime team some of the old flame with eight strikeouts that moved him into a tie for third place on baseball's all-time strikeout list. He tied Jim Bunning with his 2,855th strikeout and now trails only Bob Gibson and Walter Johnson on the career list.

Elsewhere in the National League, the Los Angeles Dodgers routed the Atlanta Braves 13-4, the Cincinnati Reds edged the Houston Astros 5-4, the Pittsburgh Pirates blanked the Chicago Cubs 1-0, the St. Louis Cardinals turned back the Philadelphia Phillies 5-1 and the New York Mets beat the Montreal Expos 3-1.

Dodgers 13, Braves 4

Dave Lopes and Rick Monday each hit three-run homers and knocked in four runs apiece to lead Los Angeles over Atlanta. Lopes homered in the third to wipe out a 3-0 Braves' lead built on a solo blast by Rowland Office and a two-run shot by Dale Murphy off Los Angeles starter Don Sutton. Monday's three-run shot capped the Dodger scoring in the ninth.

Reds 5, Astros 4

George Forster slammed a three-run homer and Bill Bonham won his Cincinnati debut as the Reds defeated Houston. Foster, whose 52 home runs last year were the most in the National League since 1949, lifted the Reds from a 4-2 deficit with his first of the season, an opposite-field shot to right in the fifth off losing pitcher Joe Niekro.

Pirates 1, Cubs 0

John Candelaria pitched a seven-hitter and Willie Stargell drove in a sixth-inning run to lead Pittsburgh over Chicago. Candelaria, who last season became the Pirates' first 20-game winner since 1960, allowed only one runner beyond second base.

Cardinals 5, Phillies 1

Ken Reitz hit a home run and Jerry Morales made his debut with St. Louis with three hits as the Cardinals beat Philadelphia. The Cardinals battered Steve Carlton, last year's NL Cy Young Award winner, for 10 hits and four runs in four innings as the defending East Division champions lost their season opener for the fourth straight year.

Mets 3, Expos 1

Consecutive doubles by Willie Montanez and Ken Henderson keyed a two-run rally in the second inning and New York went on to beat Montreal behind Jerry Koosman's eight-hitter. The only run allowed by the Met left-hander was a sixth-inning home run by Montreal catcher Gary Carter.

Race For The Base

St. Louis Cardinal Pete Vukovich touches first base at about the same time as Phillie Garry Maddox (31) after Maddox had grounded to Cardinal Keith Hernandez, who fell down. Hernandez threw to Vukovich, but Maddox was safe on the play. St. Louis won the opener 5-1. (AP Laserphoto)

L. League Registers

Tryouts for the Greenville Little Leagues will being Monday and continue through Friday, April 14.

All practices will be held at the Elm Street Little League field.

Additional candidates for the Little League draft are needed, according to league supervisor Dan Gordon. They msut be between the ages of 9 and 12.

They may register Monday or Tuesday at Elm Street Park from 4 to 6 p.m. All candidates must attend half of the tryout sessions to be eligible for the draft.

To register, a boy or girl must be accompanied by a parent or guardian, and must present a birth certificate.

Candidates must bring their own gloves and shoes to practice.

"This is the last chance for a boy or girl to try out for a Little League team this season," Gordon said.

Conley Girls Keep Rolling

HOLLYWOOD—D.H. Conley's Valkyries romped to a 23-5 victory over Farmville Central on Friday in an Eastern Carolina Conference softball game.

Conley pushed over 13 runs in the first inning to put the game on ice. The Valkyries added three in the second, four in the fourth and three in the sixth. Farmville Central scored one in the second, two in the third and two more in the fourth.

Diane Hardy was the winning pitcher.

Dianne Gowen had two hits, including a two-run homer in the third for Farmville Central.

Angie Robinson led the Conley hitting with four, including three home runs. She hit a three-run blast in the first, a grand-slam in the fourth and a solo homer in the sixth. Lori Garrish had a solo round-tripper in the first.

Conley is now 5-0 overall and 32-0 in the league. Farmville is 2-5 overall and 1-2 in the conference.

SNOW HILL — Greene Central's track team isn't expected to challenge for first place in the Eastern Carolina Conference this year, but Coach Stewart Smith feels that the Rams can be in the battle for the runner-up position.

"Southern Nash has to be the top team in the league," Smith said. "North Lenoir is also going to be strong, and the rest of us are going to be in a real battle for third place. But hopefully, we have a chance to finish second before the season is over."

With only 12 people on the track team, it makes things difficult, however, Smith pointed out. "You don't have the depth to really pile up a lot of points in the meets. But in the conference meet, if we can finish high up in our best events, we'll have a chance for a good finish."

Smith feels the strength of the team lies with several people who do well in several events. These include Bobby Warren in the long jump and the 440 and the 220; Thurman Graham in the hurles, James Best in the shot and discus, David Barnes and James Holmes in the two-mile, and Horace Lovett in the pole vault.

"We are weakest in our lack of sprinters," Smith said. "We don't have a lot of fast people. If we had two real good sprinters and one fairly good distance man, we would be real competitive."

Smith went through the team, listing the top people in each event.

Lovett, who could be in the top one or two in the conference, heads the pole vault. Warren and Melvin Bynum are the top long jumpers, with Warren and Graham leading in the triple jump.

Mike Ham paces the high jump, while Best is tops in the shot and discus.

Anthony Carmon and Bynum led in the 100-yard dash, with Graham and Best pacing the high hurdlers.

Neil McMillar is the top miler, with Ronald Belcher, Carmon, David Ham and Bynum making up the 880-yard relay team.

Warren leads the 440-yard dash group, with Mike Ham and Roger Smith handling the 880-yard run. Carmon and Warren are the top 220-yard dash people.

Barnes and Holmes lead the way in the two-mile with and Johnny Speight best in the low hurdles.

Lovett, Mike Ham, McMillar and Graham make up the mile relay team.

Curry Stops Ex-Roommate

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Bruce Curry stopped former roommate and sparring mate Monroe Brooks in the ninth round of what was labeled a "grudge fight."

Curry took the North American Boxing Federation junior welterweight boxing title away from the more experienced Brooks, who should have known better than to engage in a fight-long slugfest with knockout specialist Curry, ranked No. 2 by the World Boxing Council.

The two Los Angeles fighters landed a lot of heavy blows Friday night and Brooks was the only one to to down — twice.

Curry, 139½, scored a knockdown in the second round with a left hook. Brooks, 138½, took an eight count. Another left hook effectively ended it in the ninth, putting Brooks on his back.

The No. 3 ranked fighter in the division got up, but after the eight-count, he toppled back against the ropes. Referee John Thomas then stopped the bout at 2:26 of the round.

The knockout in the nationally televised bout, scheduled for 12 rounds, was the 10th of the Los Angeles fighter's pro career. It also may earn Curry, 22, a title fight against Thailand's Sansaek Muansurin in either June or July, according to Olympic matchmaker Don Chargin.

Curry said before the fight his share of the purse was $22,500. Part of his feud with Brooks stems from a time in 1975 and 1976 when he was just getting started as a pro and came under the guidance of Brooks.

DEDICATED JONES

BALTIMORE (AP) — Pro football players are not famed for their dedication to practice but quarterback Bert Jones of the Baltimore Colts is an exception. His coach, Ted Marchibroda, insists Bert works as hard in practice sessions as he does in a game.

"Jones is always thinking, always working, during a practice drill," Marchibroda said. "He has a reason for everything he does, a specific purpose for everything he works on. The results of his work in practice show up in the games."

Bird, Boomer, Bamberger Are Stars

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

The Bird is back, the Boomer is back and George Bamberger has arrived.

And while it's much too early to draw any conclusions, the three B's could create plenty of interest in the American League this season.

For openers:

—Mark "The Bird" Fidrych, in his first formal outing since coming up with a sore shoulder last July, pitched the Detroit Tigers to a 6-2 victory over the Toronto Blue Jays.

—Ron "Boomer" Blomberg, playing his first full game in 2½ seasons, slugged a game-tying home run in the ninth inning and the Chicago White Sox went on to defeat the Boston Red Sox 6-5.

—And George Bamberger, who produced 18 20-game winners in a decade as Baltimore's pitching coach, made his managerial debut a rousing success — and against his old club, no less — as the Milwaukee Brewers pounded the Orioles 11-3.

Meanwhile, the California Angels blanked the Oakland A's 1-0 and the Seattle Mariners downed the Minnesota Twins 6-3.

Tigers 6, Blue Jays 2

Fidrych struck out five and walked two. But it wasn't until the fifth inning that the capacity Tiger Stadium crowd of 52,528 started the chant of "Go, Bird, go!" The Bird had home run support from Phil Mankowski — his three-run homer in the fourth inning snapped a 2-2 tie.

White Sox 6, Red Sox 5

After Blomberg's game-tying home run, the White Sox pulled it out on a single by Chet Lemon and Wayne Nordhagen's bloop double to send a record opening day Chicago crowd of 50,754 home happy.

Boston starter Mike Torrez, who, like Blomberg, left the world champion Yankees as a free agent, was tagged for 10 hits and four runs in six innings.

Brewers 11, Orioles 3

Larry Hisle, Sixto Lezcano and Jerry Augustine all played big parts in Bamberger's successful inaugural. Hisle crashed a two-run homer, Lezcano belted his first major league grand slam while Augustine blanked the Orioles until the ninth inning. Both home runs came off rookie Tim Stoddard.

Angels 1, A's 0

Terry Humphrey tripled and scored on a single by Rick Miller in the sixth inning, providing Frank Tanana with the only run he needed. Tanana allowed six hits, struck out eight and issued one intentional walk. Oakland's Rick Langford had retired 13 Angels in order after the first inning until Humphrey led off the sixth with the first triple of his 354-game major league career.

Mariners 6, Twins 3

Rookie left-hander Rick Honeycutt allowed three hits over seven innings and Bruce Bochte, Dan Meyer and Ruppert Jones homered to lead the Mariners to their second triumph in three games with Minnesota. Bochte's homer in the third off Pete Redfern gave Seattle a 3-2 lead and Meyer connected with a man aboard in the sixth off Greg Thayer.

Nesting

Detroit Tigers pitcher Mark "The Bird" Fidrych squats on the mound waiting out a Toronto Blue Jays batter Friday during the season opener at Tiger Stadium. Fidrych, out much of last season with injuries, threw a five-hitter, striking out five and walking two. Detroit won 6-2. (AP Laserphoto)

Bear Grass Takes 10-1 Win

BEAR GRASS—Bear Grass High School spotted Chocowinity a 1-0 lead in the first inning, then came back to take a 10-1 win Friday.

Buane Baker hurled a two-hitter at Chocowinity. He walked five and struck out nine in going the distance.

Chocowinity got its lone run in the first. Nat Rogers singled and John Taylor got the second hit. Billy Mitchell then sacrificed Rogers in.

Bear Grass came back in the second with four runs. Jackie Harrison singled and David Bowen reached on an error. William Roberson walked and Doug Baker sacrificed Harrison in. Abby Baker singled, driving in Bowen and Roberson, and Joe Harrison reached on an error, scoring Baker.

In the thir the Bears picked up six more runs. Duane Baker walked and Jackie Harrison reached on an error. Bowen singled and Roberson reached on an error, scoring Baker. Doug Baker then singled in Harrison, and Abby Baker was safe on an error, scoring two more runs. Joe Harrison singled in Doug Baker, and Abby Baker scored when Clay Gardner grounded out.

Bear Grass returns to action Tuesday, traveling to Bath.

Lawrence Nips Martin, 4-3

EVERETTS — Lawrence Academy scored two runs in the top of the eighth inning and held Martin Academy to just one in the bottom to take a 4-3 victory over the Pioneers Friday.

Martin scored runs in the second and sixth innings, but Lawrence put one across in the first and got a solo homer by pitcher Tim Parker in the seventh to tie the game and force the extra frame.

Lawrence got on the scoreboard when C. Daniels walked and then came all the way around on a trio of Pioneer errors.

In the second, Butch Bragg walked for Martin, stole second and scored on Wylie Keel's double. Cliff Haislip scored for Martin in the sixth with a double, a stole base and a Lawrence balk.

In the top of the eighth, Adams was hit by a pitch for Lawrence and C. Daniels walked. J. Daniels singled home Adams and C. Daniels came in on an error.

Martin scored one run in the bottom of the frame. Bragg walked, advanced on another walk and a single and was brought home by Durwood Leggett's sacrifice fly.

Martin is now 3-4 for the season and plays again Tuesday at Wilson Christian.

Appeals Court Upholds Kuhn's Bar Of Sale

CHICAGO (AP) — A federal appeals court has upheld the 1976 decision of baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn to stop Oakland A's owner Charles O. Finley from selling three star players for $3.5 million.

The three-judge panel of the 7th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals ruled Friday that Kuhn "acted in good faith ... in a manner which he determined to be in the best interests of baseball."

Finley had appealed a March 17, 1977 ruling by Judge Frank J. McGarr of U.S. District Court, who said Kuhn had the power to act in the best interests of baseball to nullify the sales.

Finley had announced in 1976 the sales of starting pitcher Vida Blue to the New York Yankees for $1.5 million and outfielder Joe Rudi and relief pitcher Rollie Fingers to the Boston Red Sox for $1 million each.

Kuhn held a hearing, then disallowed the deals, saying they were "inconsistent with the best interests of baseball, the integrity of the game and the maintenance of public confidence in it."

Finley sued Kuhn for $3.5 million, saying he acted beyond the scope of his powers. The Oakland owner argued that the three players had planned to become free agents after the 1976 season and that he would lose their services and receive no compensation at that time.

Fingers signed with the San Diego Padres and Rudi with the California Angels after the season. Blue remained with the A's until being traded last month to the San Francisco Giants.

Shortly after the 1977 season ended, Finley attempted to send Blue to the Cincinnati Reds for first baseman Dave Revering and $1.7 million. But Kuhn also disallowed that deal.

In its ruling, the appeals court said the parties to the Major League Agreement were "put on ample notice that the action taken by the commissioner was not only possible but probable." All the major league teams are parties to the agreement.

Kuhn acted under the clause in the agreement which gives him the power to take any action which he considers to be in the best interests of baseball. He also said the sales of the three stars in mid-season to two contenders for the American League's East Division title would upset competitive balance.

Bucks, Golden State Vie For Berth

By ALEX SACHARE
AP Sports Writer

His Milwaukee Bucks had just posted a "must" victory but Coach Don Nelson still wasn't happy.

The reason is that while Friday night's 108-102 triumph over San Antonio moved the Bucks one-half game ahead of Golden State in their race for the final playoff berth in the National Basketball Association's Western Conference, the Warriors remain in the driver's seat.

"It doesn't matter what we do in Boston," said Nelson, referring to the Bucks' season finale on Sunday. "Golden State still has to lose a game for us to make it."

The Bucks are now 43-38 while the Warriors, idle Friday, are 42-38. Golden State closes out its season with a home-and-home series against Seattle and a pair of victories would give the Warriors the only NBA playoff spot that's still open.

Elsewhere in the NBA Friday, the Portland Trail Blazers topped the Denver Nuggets 97-93, the Cleveland Cavaliers edged the Atlanta Hawks 111-109, the New York Knicks beat the Kansas City Kings 125-112, the Seattle SuperSonics stopped the Phoenix Suns 95-83, the Los Angeles Lakers beat the New Jersey Nets 114-106, the Detroit Pistons trimmed the Boston Celtics 111-109, the Indiana Pacers defeated the Philadelphia 76ers 127-118, the Buffalo Braves beat the Chicago Bulls 113-103 and the New Orleans Jazz edged the Houston Rockets 117-114.

Blazers 97, Nuggets 93

Maurice Lucas scored 31 points, including 11 in the final quarter, as Portland assured itself of the best winning percentage in the NBA this season, which means a $50,000 bonus and the home-court advantage in every playoff series.

Reserve Willie Norwood hit a jumper from the corner to give Portland the lead to stay at 86-85. Four free throws by Lucas in the final seconds wrapped it up.

Cavaliers 111, Hawks 109

Foots Walker sank a 17-foot jump shot with one second left to give Cleveland its big win over Atlanta, ending an 11-game home winning streak for the Hawks.

John Drew had given Atlanta a 109-107 lead on a layup with 49 seconds to go. Cleveland's Campy Russell hit a jumper to tie it with 31 seconds left, then Elmore Smith blocked a jumper by Drew with 12 seconds to play to set up Walker's game-winner.

Cleveland can now clinch the home-court advantage for its first-round playoff series against New York by winning Sunday in Kansas City. Even if the Knicks win their remaining game tonight at Buffalo and finish tied with Cleveland, the Cavs would get the home-court edge because they won the season series.

Drew led all scorers with 29 points.

Knicks 125, Kings 112

Bob McAdoo and Lonnie Shelton scored 27 points apiece and Earl Monroe had 25 as the Knicks beat Kansas City. Shelton had eight points and McAdoo six in a 21-8 Knicks surge in the third quarter that proved decisive.

Sonics 95, Suns 83

Fred Brown led a balanced Seattle attack with 16 points as the Sonics beat Phoenix and assured themselves of the home-court advantage in their first-round playoff series against Los Angeles.

Lakers 114, Nets 106

Kareem Abdul-Jabbar scored 26 points and Charlie Scott came off the bench to add 17 as the Lakers dropped New Jersey's record to 24-57 and guaranteed the Nets of finishing the season with the worst record in the NBA.

Pacers 127, 76ers 118

Philadelphia's 25-game home-court winning streak came to an end as Indiana built a 22-point third-quarter lead and withstood a late rally by the Sixers. Dan Roundfield led the Pacers with 24 points while ex-Pacer George McGinnis had 29 for Philadelphia.

Pistons 111, Celtics 109

Eric Money, who scored a career-high 39 points on Thursday, came back with 35 as Detroit dealt Boston its 49th loss of the year, the most defeats in the team's history.

Braves 113, Bulls 103

Buffalo moved in front of Chicago 88-71 early in fourth quarter and held on as Randy Smith scored 12 of his 28 points in the final quarter. Swen Nater added 23 points and also became the third player in Buffalo history to pass the 1,000 rebound mark for one season.

Jazz 117, Rockets 114

Truck Robinson scored 15 of his 29 points in the fourth quarter as New Orleans overcame a 16-point deficit to defeat Houston. It was the Jazz' 38th win of the season, tying a club record. Calvin Murphy scored a game-high 42 points for Houston and surpassed the 12,000 mark for his career.

Hand-Me-Downs
Atlanta Hawks center Tom McMillen (52) and Cleveland Cavaliers forward Terry Furlow (25) fall at the Atlanta Omni Friday, losing the basketball in the collision. Cleveland forward John Lambert (24) and Hawks forward Steve Hawes (r) watch the ball fly. The Cavaliers won the game 111-109. (AP Laserphoto)

Littler Has Reasons For Continued Play

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

But Gene the Machine grinds on. What motivates Gene Littler? What continues to drive this quiet, 47-year-old family man from La Jolla, Calif., first stricken with a prolonged slump, then six years ago this week hit by our most dreaded disease — cancer — and believed to be at the end of his golfing career.

"It isn't money," the low-key Littler said after shooting a second-round 68 Friday and moving into strong contention in the 42nd Masters Golf Tournament. "I am financially secure. If I never hit another ball, my family and I could survive comfortably.

"Three things keep me playing. I want to give encouragement to all those people out there who have the same problem I had. I am competitive. Thirdly, I still enjoy the game.

"When I quit enjoying it, when I lose my ability to concentrate and strike the ball properly, I will quit. That's not now."

Littler, winner of 29 tour tournaments including the 1961 U.S. Open, was the sport's brightest prospect when he turned pro in 1954, leader of the game's fabled "Trailer Kids."

Within less than a year, the hinges came loose in his classic swing and he spent three frustrating seasons trying to put himself together again.

"I never knew what I did right," he explained during the trying period. "How was I to find out what I was doing wrong? I was like an airline pilot. I just put it in motion and let it fly."

The problem finally was corrected through hard work, and Littler went on to become one of golf's millionaires.

Then in April 1972, tragedy struck. During Masters week, he underwent an operation for removal of cancerous lymph glands. Key muscles of his left side and back were removed — muscles which the lean 160-pounder could ill afford to lose.

Some observers predicted he would never play golf again. They failed to take into account the man's iron will. Littler not only played again, he remained one of the best.

Last year in the PGA Championship at Pebble Beach, Calif., he seemed to have the title wrapped up, but Lanny Wadkins tied him. Littler lost in a playoff.

Some critics have said that Littler lacks the "killer instinct" and that, if he were more aggressive, few would be able to beat him.

Littler insisted that, while he enjoyed golf, the game had not become an obsession with him.

He decried the notion, promulgated by Ben Hogan and Sam Snead among others, that putting nerves — the "yips" — take the biggest toll in tournament gold.

"I don't think it's the 'yips' or the legs or anything like that is the first to go," he said. "I think it's enthusiasm. I only hope I can retain my enthusiasm."

DAVE WAS RIGHT

NEW YORK (AP) — This one got a laugh at a gathering of the golf clans. Sam Snead, after lashing a perfect drive from the practice tee, said: "Man, ah'd like a million like that."

Dave Hill, standing nearby, commented: "Sam, you've had a million like that."

WITH THE FISHING season now definitely upon us, this seems to be as good a day as any to pass along some fishing tips sent in by the Mercury Outboard Motor Company.

The first deals with the time day best for fishing. Fishermen have long known that fishing is usually best early in the morning and then again late in the afternoon and evening as darkness approaches. Why is this?

The reason for this is that fish, like people, are hungrier at certain times of the day. They have certain periods when they want to eat, and they won't eat again until they are hungry.

Being hungry at dawn and dusk is a conditioned response for fish. It's their reaction to natural factors which make feeding at those times easier and more beneficial.

Fish have two kinds of cells in their eyes which respond to light. One type, cone cells, are used during daylight, while the other, rods, are used at night. The position of these cells within the eye is controlled by the amount of light entering the water.

The cells are most responsive during periods of marginal light when both types are functioning. Fish have their best vision during these times and they find it to their liking to feed when they see best. There, they feed mostly at dawn and dusk, times when they have the best advantage over their prey.

A GULLYWASHER OF a rain can provide some top-notch fishing, especially in the spring, the Mercury experts say. Fishing after a hard short-period rainstorm offers a bonanza for anglers.

A gullywasher floods roadside ditches and small streams, and can also cause minor flooding in larger streams. When one occurs, fishermen should get out to their favorite lake as soon as possible because the trick is to be where the runoff water entering the reservoir.

As the debris-laden, muddy stream moves along, it collects a great number of worms and insects that had been living in the decaying vegetation and topsoil in the gullies and ditches. They are now being washed into the lake in small streams.

Bass, catfish and other sportfish wait at the mouths of these streams in anticipation of the bountiful, short-lived feast that occurs after a heavy rain. At this time, the alert angler can have some real fishing fun.

The best method for catching these fish is to use a plastic or real worm, cast upstream and let the bait drift back in a natural manner. No weight should be used because the motion of the bait should be as natural as possible to imitate the real worms being washed downstreams.

Coastal Fishing Report

Fishing along the North Carolina coast cooled off after the recent chilly weather, but the higher temperatures of the last few days should improve the situation close to shore. In warmer offshore waters, anglers have been doing very well.

Big blues have shown up at the Cape Point on Hatteras and croaker are being taken up and down the coast.

Spot are showing up at the piers along Bogue Banks, but the best fishing last week was offshore.

The rangers at Fort Macon State Park near Atlantic Beach will offer surf fishing instruction, free to all comers, the last weekend of the month.

Classes are slated for 10 a.m. until 2 p.m. on April 29-30. Rods, reels and tackle will be provided by the rangers.

Bulls, Stingers Cling To Hopes

By The Associated Press

Neither the Birmingham Bulls nor the Cincinnati Stingers are ready to end the hockey season. But one of them won't be playing in the World Hockey Association playoffs next week.

Both the Bulls and Stingers were winners Friday night, Birmingham topping Houston 5-3 and Cincinnati beating Indianapolis 6-4.

In the only other WHA game, Edmonton stopped Winnipeg 4-2.

Birmingham leads Cincinnati by two points in the race for the sixth and last WHA playoff spot. The Bulls, who have 73 points, play at Indianapolis Sunday while the Stingers, with 71 points, are at Houston Saturday and entertain Quebec Sunday.

Ken Linseman scored twice for Birmingham and goaltender John Garrett made several tough saves to lead the Bulls to victory.

"Houston battled us to the bitter end even though they have a playoff position clinched," said Bulls Coach Glen Sonmor. The Aeros are third in the standings. "We just battled and battled and John Garrett was great in goal."

Stingers 6, Racers 4

Cincinnati got two goals from Robbie Ftorek and third-period goals from Peter Marsh, Rick Dudley and Hugh Harris to storm past Indianapolis.

Oilers 4, Jets 2

Edmonton, which finished its season in fifth place in the WHA, scored four times in the first period against first-place Winnipeg. Juha Widing, Brett Callighen, Ron Busniuk and Blair MacDonald tallied for the Oilers while Dave Kryskow and Bob Guindon scored for the Jets.

Hanlon Sparks Canucks' Drive

VANCOUVER (AP) — Glen Hanlon's enthusiasm seems to be rubbing off on Vancouver Canucks in their late rush for a National Hockey League playoff berth.

The rookie goaltender took over from Cesare Maniago at the start of the third period and blanked the Los Angeles Kings while the Canucks got a goal from Hilliard Graves for a 5-5 tie, keeping Vancouver in position to grab the second playoff position in the Smythe Division. It was the only game in the NHL Friday night.

"I didn't get time to think about it," Hanlon said after getting the call from Coach Orland Kurtenbach between periods. Maniago had allowed four goals in the second period as the Kings took a 5-4 lead.

"Kurtenbach just came up to me and said, 'You're going in,'" said Hanlon. "No, I wasn't nervous. It just gets more exciting all the time.

"I was right in the action. Everyone was up and shouting before the period started ... everyone was at their peak."

The Canucks got a goal from Graves just 19 seconds after the start of the final period and Hanlon did the rest as the Canucks moved back into a second-place tie with the Colorado Rockies. Both teams have one game remaining tonight, the Rockies in Denver against St. Louis Blues and Vancouver against the Kings in Los Angeles.

Hanlon made seven saves in the last period and three of them came in rapid fashion against the line of Syl Apps, Harland Monahan and Glenn Goldup.

Graves and Mike Walton each scored two goals for the Canucks and defenseman Harold Snepsts got the other Vancouver marker. Both of Walton's goals came on power plays and gave the veteran forward a club record of 14 goals with the man advantage this season.

Center Marcel Dionne scored twice for the Kings with Tommy Williams, Mike Murphy and Apps getting the others.

The tie moved the Kings to within one point of the second-place Detroit Red Wings in the Norris Division. Detroit has two games left and Los Angeles one.

Nevid Sets New Swim Mark

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ
AP Sports Writer

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — If 17-year-old Nick Nevid was a boxer they'd call him Rocky.

Nevid happens to be a swimmer, but he struck a blow that would inspire the underdog in any sport Friday night when he "knocked out" the champ by setting an American record in the 200-yard breaststroke at the Amateur Athletic Union Short Course Swimming Championships.

Nevid, who never had been under 2 minutes, 7 seconds and swimming in his first national championship, delighted the audience at Texas Olympic Swim Center with a record 2:00.53 time, beating the former record holder, John Hencken of the Santa Clara, Calif., Swim Club.

"My coach told me I didn't have much of a chance, but I had nothing to lose and everything to gain," said Nevid, still in a near state of shock moments after his race. "I didn't think there was any way I could do it."

There had been little in Nevid's past to indicate such a performance. His best time last year was a 2:14 and he qualified to the AAU meet with a 2:07 two weeks ago.

Hencken, the world record holder in the 100-meter breaststroke, finished second in 2:00.85.

"I thought maybe if they (Hencken and Spann) slipped to 2:01 or 2:02, I might have a chance," Nevid said. "I was just trying to repeat my qualifying time (2:02.70).

Nevid, formerly of Waukesha, Wis., won the national junior Olympics in 1975 but said he had not been swimming well until he moved to Nashville, Tenn., and came under the tutelage of Nashville Aquatics Coach Paul Bergen.

"I've been doing better ever since," Nevid said. "I'm doing the same distances but with better quality, pushing myself more than before."

Nevid's surprise performance temporarily took the spotlight away from the women swimmers, who have established American record in all 11 women's finals so far in the meet.

The barrage continued Friday night, led, as usual, by Nashville Aquatics' Tracy Caulkins, who got her third American record of the meet with a 2:14.07 clocking in the 200-yard breaststroke.

Nancy Hogshead, representing Amberjax, Jacksonville, Fla., set the American record of 1:55.74 in the 200-yard butterfly after serving as bridesmaid in earlier record performances by Caulkins and Diane Johannigman of the Cincinnati Pepsi Marlins.

Linda Jezek of the Santa Clara Swim Club has set an American record in the 100-yard backstroke and the Nashville Aquatics team set an American record of 7:17.62 in the 800-yard freestyle relay.

Greg Jagenburg, representing Foxcatcher, Newton Square, Pa., won the 200-yard butterfly in an AAU meet record time of 1:45.55, Peter Rocca of Concord Swim Club took the 100-yard backstroke in 49.83 and the Florida Aquatics "A" team won the 800-freestyle relay in American record time of 6:29.81.

New Griddle

ELKHART LAKE, Wis. (UPI) — A new multi-purpose kitchen griddle can be used in boat galleys and recreational vehicles and over campfires as well as at home.

It fits across two range burners, more than doubling the cooking area of a conventional frying pan. A trough prevents grease and batter from overflowing onto the heat source. Metal ringwork on the underside of the cast aluminum griddle distributes heat evenly and prevents the utensil from warping even on a campfire.

Business Notes

BEST QUARTER

Lee B. Thomas Jr., president and chief executive officer of Vermont American Corp., announced that the company capped 1977 with the best quarter in its history, achieving its sixth straight year of record sales and earnings.

Thomas said that sales in the year ended Dec. 31 were $138,038,000 compared with $106,080,000 in 1976, a gain of 30 per cent. While net income rose from $2.59 per share to $2.78 per share, an increase of seven per cent, he noted that it was largely due to an increase in investment tax credit.

Per share earnings for 1976 have been adjusted, Thomas reported, to reflect a 12 per cent stock dividend paid in November of 1977.

NEW SERVICE

Carolina Telephone and Telegraph customers now have the option of writing one less check and mailing one less bill payment each month, according to Warren White, secretary-treasurer.

Utilizing a relatively new service, Automatic Bill Payment, the telephone company can now automatically draft the checking accounts of participating phone customers in a 38-county eastern North Carolina area, it was noted.

Automatic payment of recurring bills is one of several services offered by the N.C. Automated Clearing House Association.

APRIL MEETING

The Northeastern Tarheel Chapter of the American Institute of Industrial Engineers will meet on Thursday, April 13 at the King and Queen Restaurant, beginning at 6:30 p.m.

Guest speaker for the meeting will be Dr. James Bearden, dean of the School of Business at East Carolina University. Bearden will speak on "New Dimensions of the Business Environment."

The chapter invited interested persons to attend.

SALES REPRESENTATIVE

Coy Buck of Ayden has been appointed sales representative for J. H. Cuthrell Co. of Washington, a general contracting firm specializing in metal buildings.

Buck, a Pitt County native, earned a B.S. degree in business administration from Atlantic Christian College in 1972 and following four years of construction cost accounting experience, he joined Clark & Grubbs Realty Co. here as a real estate broker.

Buck is married to the former Nancy Brooks Lee of Robersonville and they have a daughter. They attend Timothy Christian Church.

BANKERS TO MEET

Dennis Dills, vice president and central regional administration manager of Wachovia Bank & Trust Co., Raleigh, will be the guest speaker at the Eastern North Carolina Bank Administration Institute's meeting on April 13 in Kinston.

Dills will speak to the chapter on "affirmative action."

W. C. Cozart Jr., Planters National Bank & Trust Co. in Ayden, is a director of the eastern chapter.

MOVING OPERATIONS

Grimsley & Grimsley Inc. announced the moving of its operations to new corporate offices at 3923 Victory Boulevard, Portsmouth, Va.

Bill Wright of Greenville is the local representative for the company.

GRAND OPENING

Bill Hill announced that the grand opening of the Dip 'N Strip furniture recycling shop at 1606 Dickinson Avenue is scheduled for April 13, 14, and 15.

Hill said that the operation centers around three large tanks holding up to 1,000 gallons of solution which is a non-caustic, non-flammable stripping formula. Pieces of furniture are dipped in the tanks and the chemical processes cut through the layers of paint and varnish.

He noted that once the old finish is dissolved, a stream of water washes off the stipping solution. A neutralizing agent is applied and removed with more water. As the pieces are removed, operators brush the newly cleaned surface.

The operator said that customers usually have an hour's wait for small pieces of furniture while 24-hour service is necessary for larger items.

BUSINESS MOVED

Tommie L. Little & Associates Inc. announced that it recently moved from Greenville Boulevard to 3106 S. Memorial Drive.

The firm specializes in the building and developing of residential homes and properties. The company is presently building in Lynndale, Club Pines and West Haven III.

BW RETIREMENT

Burroughs Wellcome Co. here announced the retirement of Raymond F. Lyder after almost 44 years of service.

Lyder joined the company in 1934 as a utility worker and was subsequently appointed a machine adjustor in the General Packaging Department. In 1946, after returning from serving approximately four years in the Armed Forces, he was appointed department head of Tablets.

In 1962, he became department head of the Bulk Stock and Material Supply Department, a responsibility he held until retirement.

Lyder was honored recently at a production staff retirement luncheon here and was awarded a plaque by Harry Leslie, plant manager, commemorating his service to the company.

Lyder and his wife, Miriam, reside in Greenville.

Trying To Unify Currencies

By CARL HARTMAN
Associated Press Writer

COPENHAGEN, Denmark (AP) — Western European leaders are trying to work out a new system to unify their currencies to help offset the problems generated by the falling dollar.

The account of what's going on at the two-day Common Market summit that ends today was given by Pierre Hunt, spokesman for French President Valery Giscard d'Estaing.

Besides Giscard d'Estaing, the meeting includes the heads of government of Britain, West Germany, Italy, Belgium, Holland, Denmark, Ireland and Luxembourg.

On Friday, they agreed to hold the first elections for the European Parliament June 7-10, 1979.

Hunt said European currencies needs "rules and discipline." He said the current system designed to unify them does not meet current problems — especially the problem of the fall of the dollar.

The present system, often called the "snake," holds together the values of the currencies of West Germany, Belgium, Holland, Denmark and Norway within a narrow margin.

But the French franc, the British pound and the Italian lira — among others — are not in it.

One alternative, according to Hunt, would be a "two tier" system. He gave no details.

Some countries already operate such a system individually, with a controlled rate of exchange for normal trade, and a freer rate for movements of capital. The purpose of the system is to keep the rate stable for regular business transactions.

Hunt did not explain how it would work on an international scale, nor did he say how it would help the dollar problem.

West Europeans worry about the fall of the dollar because it makes American goods cheaper and more attractive.

This takes business away from European industry and throws European workers out of jobs. The nine countries of the Common Market already have 6.5 million unemployed, a third of them less than 25 years old.

How Families Cope With Inflation And Recession

By JEANNE LESEM
UPI Family Editor

Most families cope with inflation and recession in familiar ways.

They cut down and-or cut out purchases of non-essentials.

They work overtime and-or look for second jobs.

The poor and retirees on fixed incomes often must choose between paying their rent or going hungry.

Some people find illegal alternatives.

A survey recently released quotes one New Yorker as saying he augmented his $14,000-a-year income as personnel director of a hospital by fencing stolen goods.

A young Puerto Rican mother on welfare said she shared her medical insurance card with a girl friend because it covered visits to private hospitals and private doctors.

The fence, a 34-year-old white male resident of a middle income housing project, said he was happy with his legal vocation but dissatisfied with the hospital job because of "lack of ethics in the work environment." He also said he and another homosexual, a student, had been living as a married couple for three years.

In the borough of Queens, a 28-year-old black wife, mother and nursery school teacher with a master's degree in education said her greatest fear was of becoming ill and going to the hospital:

"This would wipe me out. It's insane that in a society like this a person has to be afraid to have an operation because of cost."

These three persons were among respondents in a 40-interview study made in the New York metropolitan area in 1975. The following year, the same research team made a 1,982-person survey in four major urban areas of the United States — New York, Atlanta, Detroit and San Francisco. The purpose of both: to determine the effects inflation and recession have on marriage, family life, mental health and faith in the free enterprise system among families in urban areas.

Overall findings reflected no wholesale breakdown of mental health, marriage or family life, even though many people — especially the poor and the retired — suffer badly, says Prof. David Caplovitz of the City University of New York. He is head of the research team that conducted both studies. Caplovitz's report was published recently by the Institute for Research on Human Affairs of CUNY's graduate school and funded by the Center for the Study of Metropolitan Problems of the National Institute of Mental Health.

"Making Ends Meet: How Families Cope With Inflation and Recession" reveals that 64 percent of those questioned in the four-area survey still had faith in the free enterprise system. Only 12 percent had lost faith and 24 percent were undecided.

The poor and the retired were oversampled deliberately, Caplovitz said, because theory suggested inflation and recession hit hardest at the poor, the poorly educated, semi-skilled and unskilled persons, blacks and the Spanish-speaking. Results of the study confirmed that.

Fifteen percent of those interviewed in the larger study had incomes below $7,000 a year, 15 percent were retired, 39 percent had white collar jobs and 31 percent were blue collar workers.

The most prevalent coping pattern was cutting down: half the respondents said they had cut food expenses and about the same number said they had cut down on entertaining and eating out; 45 percent cut down on expenses for clothing and 34 percent, on vacations.

Twenty percent said they had postponed dental care, and 15 percent, medical care.

Fifty-three percent said they had begun repairing things they used to throw away.

Blue collar families were more apt to look for extra jobs and overtime than other groups.

The poor were most likely to cut consumption and to bargain-hunt and make repairs themselves.

About 40 percent said inflation had not impacted on their marriage; 28 percent said money problems had drawn them closer together, but 14 percent said money problems had made their marriages worse.

Caplovitz' somewhat optimistic overview was not shared by many individuals and couples questioned in the preliminary study. Many were cynical about or disillusioned with the private enterprise system.

The Queens teacher, whose husband is a medical electronics technician, said: "Being honest doesn't pay." She said a girl friend with an expense account claims those expenses as a tax deduction, while she herself cannot afford $75 a credit for additional schooling because she still is paying off her undergraduate loan.

Another black woman, a 50-year-old saleswoman with two years of college and a husband who is a postal employee, said the free enterprise system has run its course. The times are right, she said, "for government to take over the big, essential companies and hospitals ... I don't like it, but we are our brother's keeper."

She blamed Americans' high standard of living on inflation and the lack of competition in big business, which sets prices.

She thought prices would remain high because people will buy as long as they have money: "Poor people haven't been taught any better."

She cut corners by buying and cooking in large quantities and freezing the excess. She said she bought darker colored clothes and used thrift shops for basics such as slips, bras and girdles at $1 each. Her husband brown-bagged his lunches and dinners.

She said they stretched their $20,000-a-year combined incomes to contribute $5 to $8 to their church every Sunday, pay her husband's $5-a-month club dues and buy him $10 shirts and fine ties.

"Everyone got to do something with their money to make them feel good," she said.

---

Food co-op membership is popular with some middle income households. A $31,000-a-year white management employee for a large electronics equipment manufacturer said his wife began "co-oping around" but was discouraged when other members wouldn't share the buying and distributing chores. He persuaded her to turn it into a sales deal. She found about 200 customers who buy a total of about 25 boxes of fresh fruit from Florida every five weeks. The couple uses the money for vacations for themselves and their three children and the wife feels productive.

The studies showed retirees were more apt to suffer stoically.

One retired white couple in an academic community in New Jersey estimated their annual income at $20,000-$25,000. To cut expenses, they said they moved to an apartment from a large house with a swimming pool. They cut down on expenditures for bulbs for the wife's gardening hobby, bought fewer books, drove one car instead of two, traded it less often, bought bicycles to peddle to town and did without a cleaning woman.

"Unfortunately, all our friends are rich people and it's a lot worse for us," the husband said. He said their next-door neighbors, an associate professor and his school teacher wife, "... go to New York to fancy restaurants and think nothing of spending $100 for dinner."

He saw one bright side to the inflation-recession picture: "Fifteen years ago you couldn't get anybody to go to a budget hearing in the schools. Now they come."

Another white couple, suburbanites with a $29,000-a-year income, said they no longer go out every Saturday night, had cut down sharply on eating out and "we virtually never take the kids out now ... once a month at most ... and sometimes it's McDonald's."

The husband is a 39-year-old systems analyst for a large corporation. They said they were renting part of their house illegally (their neighborhood isn't zoned for it). "If people ask, we just say the renter is a relative."

Caplovitz said welfare payments appear to keep people from going over the brink, but do not restore them to mental and social health. His major study found that welfare families in every instance were hurt more by inflation and recession than non-recipients.

One black woman said she sometimes used the rent money to buy food "because we're hungry." She lives in a Harlem tenement with six of her seven children, ages 11-25, and a 2-year-old grandchild.

---

Another black welfare mother said she received no support payments from her husband for their five children and one grandchild who live with her in a tenement apartment.

"The most important thing is for them to finish school ... then they won't have to be like me, on welfare," she said.

She said she could get food stamps but did not because they would save her only $20. She also said she couldn't get into public housing because her children were considered too destructive.

A childless white couple in their late 20s represent another side of the coin: the husband, a stock trader, was earning $45,000 annually after only four years in the work force. He said his income represented a 350 percent increase over two years earlier. His wife worked as a paralegal assistant because "she likes it," not because they need the money.

After he lost money in the market, they cut down on expenditures for food, clothes, transportation and dental care. They vacationed with his parents in Florida, so their only cost was for transportation. He blamed the economic situation for more family arguments, but saw no changes in their family happiness or marriage satisfaction. Still, his wife thought their lifestyle had peaked, and would only get worse.

Even a couple with a $66,000-a-year combined income reported money problems.

The husband, 34, was a corporation executive with a property casualty insurance group. His wife, 32, contributed $20,000 a year to the total. Their two children were 7 and 9 at the time of the interview. They had a live-in housekeeper, but the husband said they had cut back on expenditures for clothing, home furnishings, travel, expensive food, eating out and theater tickets. He said the cutbacks were made more because of the business situation and their decision to invest in property than because of inflation. He also said their marriage was closer because adversity had drawn them together.

Lives Actively Despite Blindness

USE OF PHONE. . .demonstrated by Mrs. Stocks with phone aid receiver attachment which serves as a hearing aid and voice amplifier.

A visitor to the home of Mrs. Fannie Mae Stocks of Greenville is welcomed with a friendly smile and cheerful hello. Her living room is immaculate and orderly and furnished in neutral tones of gold and warm brown. Color accents include plump pillows, crocheted doilies, and a multi-hued crocheted afghan which graces the sofa, all examples of Mrs. Stocks' handiwork.

In one corner of the room sits an heirloom rocking chair, which sports a cane back and seat. A professional caner for many years, Mrs. Stocks has several chairs which display her artistry, one of which she has used as a demonstration model in classes she has taught.

Granted, few people are skilled in the folk art of chair caning, and Mrs. Stocks takes pride in her ability to produce fine cane articles. In addition to the above-mentioned crafts, she also enjoys basketry, quilting, indoor gardening, cooking, and canning. There is one characteristic, however, that sets her achievements apart from those of many people: Mrs. Stocks is blind.

When she lost her sight in 1933, she was 25 and had a husband and two sons. The family was living on a farm which the two adults tended themselves. No longer able to assist with the rigorous daily tasks of farm upkeep, Mrs. Stocks stayed indoors and busied herself with housework and looking after her boys.

The farm was too much for her husband to handle alone, so "we quit the farm in 1934 and opened a store and ran it from 1934 to 1965," said Mrs. Stocks. In 1950 the store, which was also their home, burned to the ground and everything was lost in the fire. They were determined to continue their livelihood, so they rebuilt, but this time with concrete blocks instead of wood siding as before. Since 1965 the store has been rented out although the family retains ownership.

A Proud Mother

Mrs. Stocks expresses pride in her three sons, one of whom was born after she became blind. She worked to educate them and to ensure that they each received good training and finished school. "You have to raise children to work, and train them and teach them when they're small," she says with conviction.

Two of her sons and their families have homes next door to her and a third son lives a few miles away. They are all frequent visitors to her home. All three have pursued educational goals beyond high school.

Mrs. Stocks herself planned to attend college but had to forego that desire when her mother was sticken with cancer and became an invalid. Mrs. Stocks, who was 16 at the time, had to assume responsibility for the care of her five siblings and her mother while her father farmed.

1933 A Bad Year

In recounting the beginnings of her visual impairment, Mrs. Stocks said it started out feeling as though there was a "skim" or veil over her eyes, and she felt that she was "looking through something. My eyes got hurting and angry like they had an infection in them."

That was in 1933, and during that year an epidemic of pinkeye (conjunctivitis) was reported in the Greenville-Pitt County area.

Her eyes continued to hurt and one Saturday she was treated by a Farmville doctor who diagnosed the problem as pinkeye. The next morning her eyes were much worse, so her father gave her some aspirin. Still no improvement. The doctor kept saying she had pinkeye and would soon get better. By Wednesday, however, he said she must go to the hospital in Durham where there were specialists in eye care and better facilities for treatment procedures than at the existing hospital in Greenville.

In Durham she was examined by a noted specialist who was not unduly concerned about her condition and indicated she would be fine in a week or two. "I stayed there 35 days," she recalls. "I filled out my own forms when I arrived. When I came out of there I couldn't see at all."

"Nineteen thirty-three was a hard time just following the Depression. We had those two children and we had that big hospital bill and everybody tried to solve our problems for us," relates Mrs. Stocks. She had a big decision to make: whether to leave her family and go to a school for the blind, or stay home and work to care for her husband and sons. "It took a lot of determination," she says, "but I felt that I could do a better job of raising my children blind than anyone else could do."

Mrs. Stocks does not let her blindness impede her from a normal life. Housework is no problem for this active lady. "Ordinary housekeeping: cooking, preserving, freezing, putting up vegetables, laundry, I do by myself. I do it just as good as I ever could so I don't see why not do it."

Volunteer Work

Having risen above her own visual handicap, Mrs. Stocks is determined to help others help themselves and pursues this goal with great zest. She celebrated her 70th birthday on March 20 but sees no reason to let up on her volunteer work with recreational services for the blind and physically handicapped.

Mrs. Stocks has been in recreation work for the past five years. Alice Keene, former coordinator for the Greenville Recreation Department, and Jeannie Manning, former social worker for the blind, "hooked me into it," Mrs. Stocks said with a laugh. "I told Miss Manning that I had no transportation while my boys were at work. Finally she called and said, "Get up a big box of stuff you've made and I'll be out there and get you if you'll go. Show people what folks can make who're blind."

"That first meeting was hard," Mrs. Stocks recalls. There seemed to be very little enthusiasm and self-confidence among the handicapped persons attending the meeting. "I came home and stuffed two wash cloths to make a pillow. I took a kitchen towel and made another pretty pillow. I made them so simple any child could have made one. They kept saying they couldn't make anything." Mrs. Stocks continued her efforts. "Miss Manning started taking me and I started going," she chuckled.

The Greenville Recreation Department now has a van for transporting participants to and from the weekly meetings held every Thursday afternoon. Not all of the participants are blind, says Mrs. Stocks. "Most of them are nearsighted or have some eye problem. We do have some who have physical handicaps but good eyesight. A big percentage of them can see some."

The group enjoys various activities in addition to handicrafts. Frequent visits are made to a popular fast-food restaurant and to a local bowling establishment, as well as an occasional outing at one of the large shopping centers in Greenville.

Mrs. Stocks also works with blind persons who attend a special class at Pitt Technical Institute on Wednesday afternoons. Most of the participants are senior citizens who are only just beginning to learn braille. Mrs. Stocks did not study braille until 10 years after she became blind. She has since learned how to type on a standard typewriter.

She admits that many elderly blind people are discouraged in their efforts to learn even simple things. "Some blind folks insist they cannot unlock their own door. Goodness, my dear, we have them down there who can't even write their name. We don't know what's around us until we get right mixed up in it."

As for her own sightlessness, Mrs. Stocks says, "I have always hoped that I might see again. There's doubt there but there's hope, too. We don't ever stop hoping for good things, especially where there is willpower."

Mrs. Stocks is a long-time member of the National Federation of the Blind, which has meetings in this area every third Tuesday night of each month.

She has been a member of Parker's Chapel Free Will Baptist Church for the past 55 years and is active in Sunday School and church-related functions. On every fourth Tuesday she attends Bryan's Circle meetings at her church. The club is a philanthropic organization which raises funds for missionaries. Bryan's Circle donates to three different missionaries each month for worthy causes. On every fourth Friday her church hosts the Jolly 60's club for senior citizens of the church. There she is waited on and served lunch by the younger wives in the church.

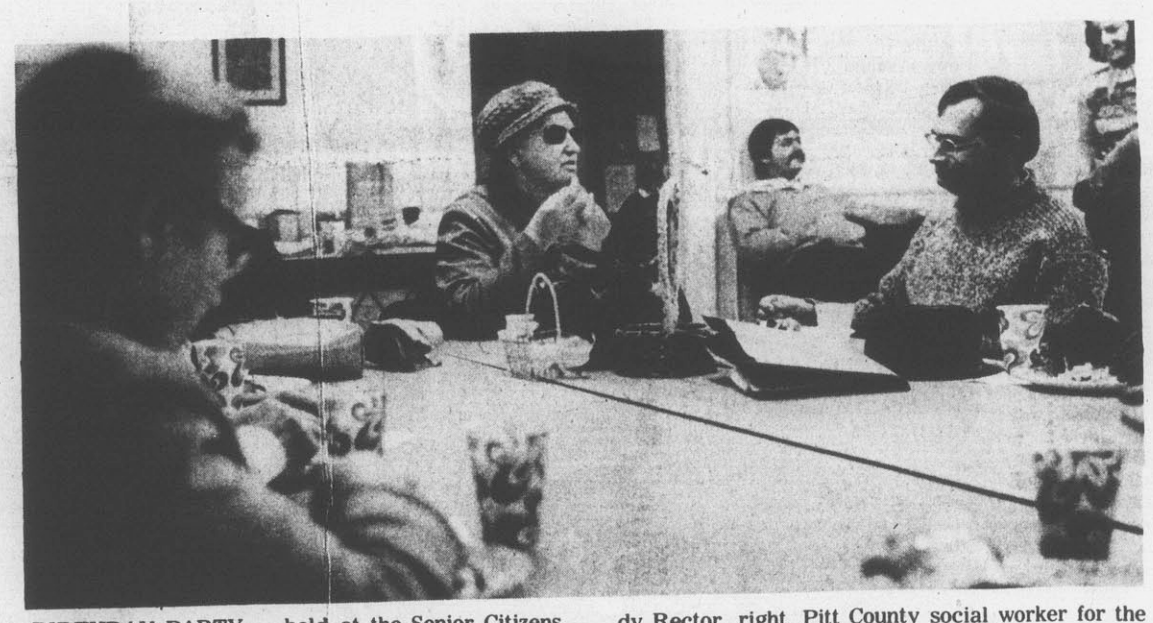

Mrs. Stocks says that by giving of herself she is replenished in spirit. She makes visits to patients in the nursing home and hospitals. "Why not go if you can say or do something to make somebody feel better?" she asks without really expecting an answer. "I've been out mostly to help myself. The only way to really be happy is to make others happy. I wish everybody knew that."

Former Carbohydrate Addict Has Hacked Habit

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

Have you ever eaten marshmallow creme directly out of the jar — the whole jar at one sitting?

Have you ever turn ed up a can of chocolate syrup and downed it — a chocolate chug-a-lug?

Have you ever eaten two ice cream sandwiches out of a six-bar carton, then placed the carton in the trashcan, only to retrieve it later and consume the other four, melted though they were?

Joanne Chatfield, an East Carolina University student, says she's done all these and many other equally disgusting things during carbohydrate binges. She documented her actions and feelings during one of these "foodaholic" periods in what she calls her "Diary of a Junk Food Addict." "I wrote this only a few days after one of my terrible times," she said, "so I could read back over it when I needed to and show myself just how self-destructive this overeating mania is."

"I'd get depressed and not realize that the more food I ate, the more depressed I became and the more I ate," she said. "I'd eat crackers, peanut butter, bread, candy, pies, cakes, even sugar-coated dry cereal which I normally don't even like.

"I'd always eat in secret, when my mother was out of the house or in bed, or when I was alone at a shopping center or driving around," the Winston Salem girl said. "Food addicts always feel that what someone else doesn't know won't fatten them."

"I've gained as much as eight pounds in a week, and I've experienced crying spells, restlessness, listlessness, and lack of mental concentration, all of which, I've learned, are caused both by the chemical reaction going on in my body and by my feelings of disgust with myself. I could predict these things were going to happen, but I seemed powerless to control my cravings once I gave in the first time."

Hypoglycemic

Sugar consumed calls for more sugar, Joanne learned last summer when she was diagnosed as having hypoglycemia. She was told that her body cannot properly metabolize carbohydrates, especially refined ones, and that she must follow a high-protein diet, and virtually elminate refined carbohydrates, which includes anything having sugar or refined white flour in it.

She started reading everything she could find on the subject and gradually developed an eating plan that has caused her to lose weight and feel like a new person.

During the late summer and fall, she did fairly well, but it was Jan. 1 of this year that she resolved to faithfully eliminate sugar and refined carbohydrates from her diet — regardless.

So far, she has lost 27 pounds. She dances and does yoga to keep her body toned as the pounds melt away.

She keeps a supply of raw vegetables and low fat meats like chicken and tuna and other fish in her dormitory room. "I eat small amounts often," she said. "This helps maintain my sugar level."

"I write down everything I eat, regardless of how little of how much in my food diary.

"I weigh no oftener than once a week, so I'll be sure to encourage myself with some results."

Overeaters Anonymous

Joanne said she subscribes to the philosophy of Overeaters Anonymous, which advises taking one day at a time and calling on "a source outside one's self" in conquering one's self-destructive eating habits. She has attended meetings of the local group (each Thursday at 7:30 p. m. at Arlington Street Baptist Church) and has read portions of her "Junk Food Diary" to other overeaters who really understood her struggle.

She soon will have her weight down to an ideal level. And she plans to keep it there. "But I don't ever want to forget what it's like to be fat and victimized by food," she said. "I know I won't, because I'm sure I'll have a lifetime of not being able to handle refined carbohydrates.

"I can truthfully say I'm glad I have hypoglycemia. If not, I'd still be gorging on junk food and doubting my sanity at times.

"As a result of having had to work through this problem, I've come to know myself better and I can truly know what other people with overeating and other obsessive habits go through. It's been a blessing in the long run, and I thank God for it."

A FOOD DIARY. . .is kept by Joanne. She says it acts as both her conscience and her record.

Old Town Serves Modern Pie

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

Although Elsah, Ill., "is a town in which the prevailing flavor is of the past ... and gives a strong hint of the setting of 19th century life along the (Mississippi) river," there's nothing old-fashioned about a marvelous dessert served in a small restaurant there. It's pecan pie made with a layer of cream-cheese filling, an offering that emerged about a dozen years ago — heaven only knows exactly how and where.

A friend, sight-seeing in Elsah, brought back the restaurant's recipe for me. If you try it, it may well become your favorite version of pecan pie.

CREAM CHEESE PECAN PIE
(Elsah Landing Version)

8-ounce package cream cheese
4 eggs
Sugar
Vanilla
Unbaked 10-inch pastry shell
1¼ cups coarsely chopped pecans
1 cup light corn syrup
¼ teaspoon salt

In the large bowl of an electric mixer, at medium speed, beat together until smooth the cream cheese, 1 egg, 1-3rd cup sugar and 1 teaspoon vanilla. Spread over the bottom of the pastry shell. Sprinkle with the pecans.

In the clean large bowl of the mixer, at medium speed, beat the remaining 3 eggs until frothy. Add the corn syrup, ¼ cup sugar, the salt and 1 teaspoon vanilla; beat until blended. Gently pour the mixture over the pecans.

Bake in a preheated 375-degree oven until a knife inserted halfway between the center and edge comes out clean — 40 minutes. Place on a wire rack to cool before cutting.

Makes 10 servings.

---

Cooked diced vegetables that are left over may be folded into fritter batter and deep-fat fried. Good served with cheese sauce as a main course for lunch or supper.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

People do superhuman things in time of stress.

You're always reading about how a 100-pound woman rushed into a burning building and single-handedly rescued a 200-pound, unconscious man. Or how a man lifted a two-ton tractor off his faithful dog, Shep, and didn't even realize it.

I not only understand the phenomenon; I participate in it. Oh, nothing so dramatic that it gets reported in the newspapers, but still enough to astound and amaze my husband.

"Who moved the freezer?" he asked the other day.

"I did."

"That's not possible," he said.

"All things are possible when you drop your car keys behind them. I could scale Mt. Rushmore and crawl on my hands and knees out to the end of Lincoln's wart, if my car keys were hanging there."

"I don't understand something," he said. "Why is it you can't press together a clasp at the top of the zipper on your dress, but you can move a freezer?"

"Simple. It's called the Superman Stress Principle: Motivation overcomes your ignorance of hernias."

"I never heard of it."

"That's funny. You use the Superman Stress Principle all the time. Remember last summer when you loaded your boat on top of the station wagon by yourself, but when I asked you to dance with me at the picnic you said you had a bad back?"

"C'mon . . .".

"Kids use it too. Your son can press 200 pounds in gym class. I asked him to take the garbage cans to the curb the other night and he made a furrow in our grass dragging them that a small child could disappear through. By the way, do you think you could move the piano to the west wall for me? I'm sick of it in the same old spot."

"It would take three men to move that thing anywhere."

"Try the Superman Stress Principle."

"I can't. You need stress to have it work."

"Then try sleeping for a week in a recliner chair with an afghan over your knees."

"Which wall is west?"

Fifty-six students at Rose High gathered to take the National Mathematics Exam in mid-March. Several smiling faces could be seen last week when the results were announced.

In addition to placing first in the state, several students were ranked very high in the state competition of individuals.

Jeen Kim, the first place winner at Rose, is ranked second in the state among juniors. Taking third place was sophomore Fred Parham, who is ranked first among members of his class and Suzanne McGee, a senior at Rose, won third place and is ranked 10th among the seniors in the state.

Congratulations are extended to these students for their achievement. The Rose High Math Department is to be congratulated again. On Thursday, several students participated in the first annual High School Mathematics Contest, which was sponsored by ECU. Among 63 schools, Rose took first place and among 850 participants, 10 Rose students won places in the three different divisions of the Algebra II, Geometry and Comprehensive Math.

Fred Parham, Mark Grossnickle and Steve Woodard won first, second and third place respectively in algebra II while Kevin Clark won second, Karen Bram, fifth, and Susan Vick, fifth in geometry.

In the comprehensive division, students again placed in high positions, Jeen Kim won first, Suzanne McGee, second, Tommy Chenier, fourth, and Curtis Ebbs, fifth.

The final meeting of the year of the Keywanettes was held Monday night and new officers were named.

Hannah Taft will serve as president and will be assisted by Laurie Smith, vice president, Helen Whitehurst, secretary, and Beth Bailey, treasurer. Board members are Bonnie Correll, Lisa Laughinghouse, Jennifer Davis and Coleen Lemnah.

On Friday night, the Keywanettes held a dance as their final project for this year. Disc jockey Steve Hardy provided entertainment for the event which was held at the American Legion building.

A skating party, held Friday night, was sponsored by the junior class to raise money for the Junior-Senior Prom.

TOWEL CARE

NEW YORK (AP) — For longer wear, launder towels frequently with soft water and detergent, advises Cotton Inc., which offers other tips on the care of 100 percent cotton towels.

—Wash colors separately from whites. Do not use bleach on colors, though bleach may be used on white towels. Rinse thoroughly.

—Fabric softeners should be used only occasionally as constant use will cause towels to become stiff and less absorbent.

—Dry thoroughly in tumble dryer, or, if air drying, shake towel before hanging and again when dried to fluff up the terry loops.

—Do not iron towels, as ironing reduces absorbency.

If you like to baste chicken or turkey while it's roasting, you'll find a bulb baster is a good investment.

On The Local Scene

by Rosalie Trotman

Mrs. Maria Dallago of Brazil spent this week here observing teacher training programs.

She visited the Staff Development Center, W. H. Robinson School, Winterville, Northeast Regional Education Center, Williamston, and the ECU special education department.

Mrs. Dallago has spent the past two years at Tulane University, New Orleans, working on a doctorate in learning disabilities. In May, she will return home and set up a teacher training program in special education in northeast Brazil on the university level.

The practical approach that characterizes the Staff Development Center, Winterville, was viewed by Mrs. Dallago as an additional experience to her background. "The center has really accomplished its objectives in assisting teachers in improving their skills," she said.

Mrs. Dallago obtained her master's degree studying in the United States and thinks the "American education system has achieved a level which can be shared with other countries."

She likes the overall atmosphere of Robinson School and was very complimentary of the resource program for learning disabled students. "This special class seems to be oriented not only to academic goals, but also to create a new attitude toward learning," she added.

"The way the teacher relates to the children in the classroom depicts my idea of such a program for special students'" she continued.

Mrs. Jean Averette of Greenville scheduled Mrs. Dallago's observations during her stay in Pitt County. Mrs. Averette is a staff development specialist with the N. C. Department of Public Instruction, located at Robinson School.

Mrs. Dallago's husband and three children are also in New Orleans. Her husband is studying guidance and counseling at Tulane.

Some of her general impressions of the area were:

People here were willing to take more time sharing their experiences, she likes smaller cities and enjoyed seeing large farms.

WokCookery Favored By Editor

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — "I can feed my family of three for $2 per day and that's eating well," says Harry Fries, who has been involved with Chinese cooking for the past 20 years.

"It's not sumptuous Chinese dining, but its a healthy diet of fresh vegetables, some meat and spices," he added in an interview. "All it takes is a wok, the basic Chinese cooking pan, and a hunger for adventures in cooking."

Fries is editor of a bi-monthly newsletter-cookbook on the subject and a partner in a mail order corporation that sells Chinese ingredients, vegetable seeds and utensils. He started the eight-page, tabloid-size publication in San Francisco last summer.

Among his partners are two University of California professors, the first oboeist with the Oakland Symphony Orchestra and Fries's mother-in-law, a resident of Morristown, N.J.

He said the newsletter, "Wok Talk," now has more than 10,000 subscribers, most of them neophytes at oriental cookery.

"The newsletter aims at letting people cook Chinese dishes in their own homes and helps them find those hard-to-find ingredients such as dried black mushrooms, oyster sauce, lichee fruit, baby corn, water chestnuts and plum sauce, especially for those away from oriental markets," Fries said.

He said it also teaches people how to shop for oriental ingredients in most markets and avoid substitutes that detract from the real flavor of Chinese cooking.

Fries's interest in Chinese cookery began when he studied the Chinese language during a hitch in the army. After his discharge in 1958, he moved to San Francisco to "get closer to Asian culture, short of moving to Asia." He is an economist who still does occasional consultant work for California wineries.

He said Chinese cooking and curiousity about it has grown dramatically in recent years with the mass marketing of woks and all the attention given to Asia.

Americans' first exposure to Chinese food dates from the 1800s, he said, when Chinese immigrants came to the United States to work on the railroads. Many of their descendants later opened restaurants, especially in large cities.

Fries said the object of his newsletter is "... to help people, particularly Caucasians who are interested in the cuisine, learn more about its history and techniques.

"It's also to help people along with wok cooking, especially if they've only had bad experiences with their newly acquired wok."

He said those experiences often involved recipes that turn out far different from the flavors of Chinese restaurant fare, sometimes because the home cook couldn't get exotic or unfamiliar ingredients.

One solution he suggests: growing such vegetables such as Napa cabbage or gai lahn, a thin stemmed broccoli, at home. Or substituting romaine lettuce or carefully cut Italian broccoli for the Chinese variety.

Fries said Chinese cooking runs the gamut from quick to sophisticated, with a great deal of variety.

"I think it's the most sophisticated cuisine in the world and anyone in the United States can enjoy its richness if they try Chinese cooking with the large round pans at home," he said.

Economic Barometer In Interest Rates

By MARY TOBIN
UPI Business Writer

NEW YORK (UPI) — There is nothing new under the sun, including the use of credit. It has been used to buy goods and expand business since recorded history.

For as long as humans have used "buy now pay later" they have paid interest on that credit.

"Throughout history, interest rates have been a barometer of a nation's or a civilization's health," says Sidney Homer, a former general partner of Salomon Brothers who retired in 1971 and is now a limited partner with the firm.

"Extremely high or extremely low interest rates usually signal trouble for an economy," he said, "and this is particularly true when extremely high rates have prevailed for a long period.

"While Babylonia was prospering interest rates went down, down, then went through the roof when inflation and other troubles beset the nation."

Homer says the Dutch Republic's victory over Spain in 1648 is an example of how interest rates have changed the course of history.

"Spain, the mightiest nation in the world, was defeated by the tiny Dutch nation because of the superior Dutch financial structure," Homer said. "Because everybody trusted them, the Dutch could borrow money long-term at 3 percent; the King of Spain, whom nobody trusted, was forced to pay 40 percent for short-term loans. Eventually, nobody would lend to Spain at any price. The mighty Spanish armada was defeated for a lack of funds."

Homer, whose recently revised "A History of Interest Rates, 2000 B.C. to the Present," has gone into its second printing, began collecting material in 1935 for what is the most complete history to date on interest rates.

"Its the best because its the only history," Homer said in an interview at his New York apartment. "I still find it incredible that no one had ever written a comprehensive history of this basic economic and commercial price."

While he began collecting and compiling charts on interest rates in the course of his business, he admits that "a sense of history took over."

But Homer says it is not incongruous to compare ancient Babylonian rates on grain and silver and modern interest rates.

"There is more continuity over the centuries in interest rates than there is in most prices."

Because of this continuity, Homer says interest rates are our closest link with our economic past.

Homer began his career on Wall Street in 1923, right after he graduated magna cum laude from Harvard with a degree in philosophy.

"My parents were shocked, but they came to accept my choice," Homer said.

His mother was the Louise Homer, the contralto, who sang with Caruso and whose portrait hangs at the Metropolitan Opera House. His father, Sidney, was a composer "in the school of Brahms," who published over 100 works.

In 1931, the firm he worked for went out of business following the Wall Street crash.

"You couldn't get a job, but it was easy to start your own business, even if you had no capital. There was no regulation, no SEC."

He ran Homer & Co., for 12 years, then went to work for Scudder, Stevens, and Clark in charge of their bond department. He joined Salomon in 1961 as a general partner.

Homer's collection of charts and background on interest rates continued.

"I had no intention of writing a book. I took all my charts to Rutgers University Press thinking they might be published alone. They said the charts weren't enough, and if I could turn them into a book, it would be published."

Homer is now editing 30 speeches out of the 80 or so he has made over a 15 year period, "the last one a few months ago," to be published sometime later this year. He is also the author of "The Bond Buyer's Primer," a spoof of the bond market and "Inside the Yield Book," which has been translated into Japanese.

Although Homer did not follow his parents choice of a musical career, he has maintained an intense interest in music. "We're a musical family, my five sisters and myself."

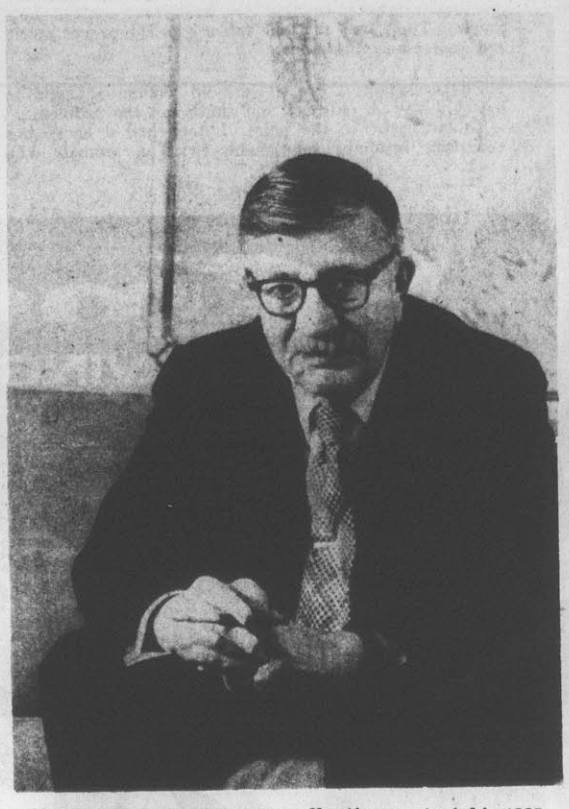

Until a few years ago, he and his second wife Elizabeth regularly hosted concerts in their spacious apartment.

Homer is non-committal about the future of interest rates but he notes in his book that market rates of interest in modern times have rarely been stable for long.

The highest recorded interest rate in the entire span of history and the lowest have both been recorded in this century: 10,950 percent for call loans on the Berlin Stock Exchange in 1923, and 0.01 percent for 3-month U.S. treasury bills in 1940.

Although most of Homer's book is devoted to modern interest rates, he believes his research into ancient civilizations is interesting "to anyone with a sense of history, whether he's interested in the financial end or not."

Demosthenes charged his clients 12 percent per annum if they delayed paying his legal fees. Even Socrates had a banker friend to whom he entrusted his investment problems.

MacArthur Car Now Restored

By WILLIAM C. MANN

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — There's nothing Dan Irish likes better than taking a worn-out old car and making a classic of it. But he thought he'd met his match when he saw the junker that Gen. Douglas MacArthur used to own.

"It was a complete, pure piece of junk. The engine was frozen, there was no body, no interior, nothing else," Irish said.

"Almost everything that you see on the car now has been replaced."

What you see is a sleek, black Cadillac roadster, one of two cars like it built in 1937 and the only one with a liquor cabinet and a dictaphone. Dangling from a steel flagstaff above the bright chromium grillwork is MacArthur's personal flag of five gold stars circled on a field of blue.

Five months of toil by 41 different craftsmen working 12,000 man-hours went into the restoration. Irish said he used 416 square feet of sheet metal, 100 square feet more than in a new compact.

The only original parts are the V-16 engine, the chassis, the wheels and some of the underpinning braces, he said.

"I doubt if anybody has ever restored a car requiring more ingenuity than this one," said Irish, a Californian retired to the Philippines. The job if performed in the United States would have cost more than the finished product would be worth, he said.

Yet Irish said the car would be priceless at an antique-car auction in the United States. "It might go for $45,000-$50,000 by itself, but because it belonged to a president, then belonged to General MacArthur, there's no telling what it would sell for," he said.

Irish has the original purchase order for the car from the Capital Agency in Washington, D.C. Manuel L. Quezon, first president of the Philippine Commonwealth, commissioned the car, then gave it to MacArthur, at the time his military adviser and later commander of U.S. forces in Asia.

MacArthur rode in the car until the Japanese Imperial army drove him from the Philippines in 1942, then reclaimed it briefly after World War II.

Irish, 57, has been restoring cars as a hobby since he and his father worked over a Model T when he was 7. He said the Cadillac was his most demanding restoration subject yet, since it had been ruined by three unprotected decades on display in the Philippines' salty climate.

FORECAST FOR SUNDAY, APRIL 9, 1978

Your Daily HOROSCOPE

from the CARROLL RIGHTER INSTITUTE

GENERAL TENDENCIES: You have an urge to get away from usual pursuits but are all too apt to make some mistakes by being too drastic and upsetting in the way you act. Be gentle, go along with new conditions and you are able to make constructive plans for the future.

ARIES (March 21 to Apr. 19) Avoid annoying situations and get to places where you can make your position in life much better. Read your newspaper and gain information that can be helpful to you.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Refrain from making a radical change you have in mind. Spend some time on appearance and health needs.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Take time out to be alone and get our temper in check and then figure out how to get your responsibilities best handled in the future. Don't argue with a loved one. A good friend gives you pleasure.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Steer clear of a forceful friend and later you can be with congenials who are helpful to you. Know what your true desires are.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 22) Gain the favors of bigwigs you know and then you can do civic work that brings you added prestige. Plan how to improve credit and feel less restricted. Be happy.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Try to set up a better set of circumstances so that life is more satisfying. Give more attention to a partner and improve relationship. Be clever.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Be more objective and you can handle that responsibility more intelligently. Use more poise if you are to have more harmony with loved one. Show you are loyal and affectionate.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) You feel like confronting a partner because you feel he or she is doing something contrary to your liking, but this is not the case. You gain more respect if you handle a civic matter.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Show appreciation to those who have been loyal to you and gain their added goodwill. Take treatments that can improve health.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) After an early annoyance, you can later have a happy time whether at home or at business. Get into the details of a recreational activity you want to get into.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Study home situation early and don't upset any applecarts there. Establish more order and harmony.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to March 20) You have time for handling many small tasks and getting them nicely out of the way. Talk over with friends later how best to handle mutual interests. Be careful of one who bickers.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will like to think something over and over again before doing anything about it. Teach early to come to the right decision quickly or those less gifted would get far ahead of your overly cautious youngster.

DEAR ABBY: Since that song "Short People" came out, short people have suffered a big put-down. I'm sending you a letter you had in your column about 20 years ago. I kept it because I happen to be one of the short people. Please run it again. It might help to improve our image. Thanks.

SHORTY B. HICKS
SHORTSVILLE, N.Y.

DEAR SHORTY: I agree. Short people need an occasional buildup, so here's your letter:

"DEAR ABBY:
In answer to TOO TALL, women in the know go for small men. That's why they go wild over Latin Americans and fight over jockeys. The big, tall men fall apart earlier. They get potbellies and double chins and succumb to heart attacks in their mid-40s, while the little wiry men are still going strong.
The next time you go to a dance, notice that the best dancers on the floor are the small men.
Half the women married to tall, dark and handsome men would love to trade them for the little runt they wouldn't go out with before they got married.

VOICE OF EXPERIENCE"

DEAR ABBY: I am a schoolteacher who has been reading your column for years. Often your thoughts are taken to school with me and discussed with my high school students. However, your endorsement of Edith Head's asinine statement, "All women look alike in the bathtub," really hit bottom! Anyone who actually believes that quote must have lived in a segregated, monastic convent all their lives.

Please retract that gross masterpiece of misinformation!

THE EYEBALL FROM ALTADENA

DEAR EYEBALL: How's this? "All women look alike in the bathtub—if they are up to their necks in hot water"—which is where I was after that endorsement!

DEAR ABBY: About 150 senior citizens live here in a lovely place and we enjoy it. However, recently a problem has arisen. A little old lady has joined us, and no matter what is said, she says, "Oh, my God!"

She says it to express surprise, disappointment, joy and disapproval. Her constant "Oh, my Gods" are getting us down.

We don't want to hurt her feelings, but we would like to put a stop to her using that expression all the time.

We are anxiously awaiting your reply.

ANOTHER L.O.L.

DEAR L.O.L.: Tell her in a friendly way that her constant references to "God" are irreverent—unless she's praying. Then pray that she takes it in the proper spirit and overcomes the habit.

DEAR ABBY: I'm a 21-year-old woman engaged to marry a 43-year-old man, but that's not the problem.

To get right to the point, I once had a short but beautiful, intimate relationship with a woman who happens to be my best friend.

My fiance knows about this and swears that if she is at my wedding, HE won't be there! Every time she calls me, or even when her name is mentioned, he becomes outraged.

Now, Abby, our intimate relationship is over and finished, and we are now simply good friends, but my fiance refuses to accept that. I am worn out trying to explain to him that I really love him and have no desire to start up with that woman again, but he doesn't believe me.

I really love both of them—but in different ways now—and I don't want to be forced to make a choice between them. What is your advice?

TORN APART

DEAR TORN: If the situation were reversed, and your fiance had had a male lover, could you agree to their continuing the friendship without feeling threatened? I can't blame your fiance for wanting this woman out of your life. And if you are "torn" and can't give up her friendship, I urge you not to marry until you get into therapy and straighten out your head.

Drawbridge Schedule

MOREHEAD CITY, N.C. — North Carolina Department of Transportation officials have announced a new weekend and holiday operating schedule for the Atlantic Beach Drawbridge, spanning the Intracoastal Waterway through Bogue Sound south of Morehead City.

Starting April 15, the drawbridge on Atlantic Beach Road will be closed to all casual water traffic from 1 p.m. to 7 p.m. on Saturdays, Sundays and holidays. The span, however, will be raised during this period every hour on the hour to accomodate accumulated vessels waiting to pass.

This schedule will be maintained through June 15 when the regular summer schedule will go into effect.

The summer schedule (June 15 through Labor Day) allows for the raising of the span during the 1 p.m. to 7 p.m. period on Saturdays, Sundays and holidays only at 3 p.m. and 5 p.m.

NCDOT officials add, however, that the schedules for operation of the drawbridge will as always accomodate on signal all vessels "in an emergency involving danger to life or property," and will continue to accommodate passage of vessels of the United States, commercial vessels and towboats with tows as needed.

Public Schools Caught In Tightening Tax Squeeze

EDITOR'S NOTE — Public school children in many states are caught in the bind between property tax relief and higher costs for equal education. One solution is for the state and federal government to assume more of the burden for a bill that will total more than $80 billion this year.

By CHRIS CONNELL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's public schools, saddled with the twin problems of rising costs and declining enrollments, are looking to state governments to pay an increasing share of their bills.

The local property tax, long the bulwark of school finances, pays just under half the bill and is likely to provide even less in the future.

The reason is twofold: Irate homeowners are pressing for property tax relief at the same time the courts and legislatures are requiring more state spending to equalize educational opportunities in rich and poor districts.

Only a handful of states are feeling the school financing pinch as sharply as Ohio, where some city schools had to curtail classes last term for lack of funds.

Dexter Magers, a school finance specialist for the U.S. Office of Education, says, "The national picture is very mixed. Generally, the problems are worse in the Northeast and Midwest (Massachusetts, New York, Pennsylvania, Ohio) in states that are experiencing economic declines and have been tightening up all their spending programs.

"But in the Sunbelt and West, there's no crisis of any proportion. A number of legislatures in these states ended last year with surpluses and are able to improve their contributions to education."

Ohio's situation is exacerbated by the tight hold local voters exert over their school budgets. Local jurisdictions are required by law to provide all services, including schools, from no more than a 1 percent tax on property.

"No local government can provide all the services — schools, police, fire and roads — for 1 percent, so to pay for the schools they have to ask the local voters to override the limit," says Magers.

"When you have that system, you're just going to have angry voters every now and then, particularly when the economic conditions are bad. Most states manage to operate with very few of their school district budgets subject to local election."

Magers says he believes voter rejection of budget and bond issues peaked about two years ago. Nationwide, voters approved 46.3 percent of school bond issues in 1975 and 50.8 percent in 1976, the last year for which figures are available.

Laslo Ecker-Racz, a tax expert who is a consultant to the National Education Association, says, "The answer to the problem of not having sufficient local support for schools is to increase the support from above, from the state and federal governments."

The bill for the nation's 45 million public elementary and secondary school children was $70.8 billion for 1975-76, the last year for which figures are available. That bill is estimated at $74.4 billion in 1976-77, and $82.7 billion for the current school year, with 43.7 million students enrolled.

Ecker-Racz, the NEA consultant and a former school board member in Arlington, Va., believes the nation's schools are in for a squeeze.

"The cards are sort of stacked against the public schools, and you can't expect any change until the political climate and the public thinking changes," he says.

"The public's automatic reaction to declining enrollments is, 'Well, now they'll need less money,'" he says. "But you can't fire a teacher because a classroom goes from 25 students to 24. It may take seven, eight or nine years before there is enough of a decline to dispense with a teacher.

"The only thing it saves you in the short term is a little bit on stationery and school supplies. A large community can close down one school, but that aggravates your standing with parents."

Also, he says, "the conventional wisdom degrades the schools," with parents concerned that they're paying more while their children learn less.

But Ecker-Racz feels that eventually more money will be found for the schools.

"These things come in cycles. A shortage becomes so acute it becomes politically more attractive to support some tax than to shortchange the schools. When this happens, you get a program," he says. "In some years, it's political poison to associate yourself with a tax increase. In other years, it's political poison to ignore some pressing social need."

In an average year, the world can expect at least one "great" earthquake (one which registers a magnitude of 8 or more on the Richter scale); 18 "major" quakes (7 to 7.9 on the scale); and about 120 "strong" tremors of 6 to 6.9, say scientists at the U.S. Geological Survey's National Earthquake Information Service.

Wins USIA Golden Film Award

FILM-MAKER. . .Charlie Sherrod poses with one of two awards he's received for his film, "Heike Prison."

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

Charlie Sherrod of Greenville has won a Golden Screen Award from the United States Information Agency for a film produced, directed and filmed by him.

The documentary, made in Japan just after Sherrod got out of the U. S. Armed Forces there, is titled "Heike Prison." It deals with the legal relations between sovereign nations and traveling U. S. citizens.

He said he has been informed that his low-budget, did-it-himself film beat out two commercially produced ones. Modestly he adds that he believes that each contestant's resources must have been taken into consideration by the judges.

He has not received the trophy or plaque denoting the award yet, but is not surprised since it took months for him to get the Thomas Jefferson bust awarded him for the same film last year. It went all the way to Japan and back before it came to him, he said.

The Jefferson award was given him by the producers of CBS's "60 Minutes." "Heike Prison" was also viewed by the U. S. State Department, which made prints of it for showing at overseas installations. It apparently very well made the point that U. S. citizens who violate laws in other countries are subject to those countries' methods and degrees of punishment, which are often more severe than those of the U. S. for comparable offenses.

Sherrod graduated from Tarboro Senior High School in 1970 and went to Atlanta, where he attended a tv station-run technical school for filmmakers. He then worked for WITN-TV in Washington, N. C. for a while before enlisting in the Armed Forces Radio-Television Service. Most of his two-year stint was in the Orient, with a base in Japan.

When he got out of AFRTS, he taught English conversation for a while in Hiroshima's Peace Park, built on the epicenter of the atomic bomb blast of 1945. And he made plans to enroll in Chiodo University. But then he started to dream of America and Eastern North Carolina.

Soon he was back here enrolled in East Carolina University, where he is now a sophomore who plans to specialize in history and political science.

Filmmaking is his first love, he says, but he wants to be educated in other areas, as he is realistic enough to know that few "make it big" enough in filmmaking to support themselves financially.

A second film that Sherrod filmed and directed has been placed in the Thomas Jefferson competition for this year. It's "Laurie," the story of a 15-year-old female marathon runner, the best in the world for her age. It was made in 1976 when Laurie Taylor, whose father was then stationed at Camp Lejeune in North Carolina, was in Japan to compete in a marathon.

FROM SHEPPARD MEMORIAL LIBRARY

By JULIE HICKS

Among the new books at Sheppard Memorial Library are some which are sure to please the musician as well as those who enjoy reading about the lives of the musical stars.

For the folk song lover there are two volumes entitled SONGS OF ROD McKUEN. Each contains a short biography along with tunes composed by the "gentle poet." Certain interesting facts are brought out which have a definite bearing on the music in these volumes, such as McKuen's ascension up the ladder of success as a search for and a proving ground to himself and the origin of his raspy, whispery singing voice. Anyone who uses these books, SONGS OF ROD McKUEN (Volumes I and II) will be forced to agree that McKuen is an artist who enjoys creating.

For the country music fan, there is a new book called THE SONGS OF HANK WILLIAMS. It too includes a brief sketch on the life of this famous Grand Ole Opry singer. Williams definitely has had an impact on pop music judging by the number of singers who have recorded his songs. This collection includes many of his greatest hits which live on after him: "Cold, Cold Heart," "Hey, Good Lookin' " "I Can't Help it if I'm Still in Love with You," and the ever popular "Your Cheatin' Heart." These songs are an outpouring of Williams' very soul, conveying the truth as he saw and felt it. Hank Williams was and is a legend.

Still another book dealing with music of a different sort is THE STARS AND SUPERSTARS OF BLACK MUSIC. Indeed those stars are all here: Chuck Berry, James Brown, Dionne Warwicke, the Pointer Sisters, Al Green, Aretha Franklin, Otis Redding, the Jackson Five, The Spinners, and many more. These biographical facts bring these famous singers closer to the reader. Surely a book of this type has significance because of the impact which black musicians have had on the music of America.

Whatever your taste in music, the new music books at Sheppard Library will be of interest to you.

Brigham Young University Teaches Film Production

PROVO, Utah (AP) — The stars pose nervously as the lighting is adjusted and the cameramen swing their one-eyed monsters into place. The make-up artists apply final touches as the director issues last-minute instructions.

A Hollywood studio? No, a university motion picture studio here, where professional filmmakers and cinema students work together to produce award-winning, non-commercial films.

"We have not historically been academic," explained Darrell Stoddard, marketing specialist for the Brigham Young University motion picture studio. "The studio was originally designed to produce professional educational and religious productions, not necessarily to teach students."

"Things are changing, though," Stoddard said. "We're more and more involved in teaching students, and they're doing some significant things now. They come out to the motion picture studio to see how movie making really works and fits together."

The studio is located on 22 acres of wooded riverbottom near Provo. It houses two sound stages, a two-story office building and storage areas. A complete old Western street with shops and homes is located behind the studio and additions are currently being made for future productions.

Dr. David Jacobs, a director at the studio, says BYU students take advantage of the studio through part-time employment on the production staff or through film classes offered on campus.

"Some of the students work as grips carrying equipment, others help in set construction or in sound engineering," Jacobs says. "As in any industry, you have to start at the bottom. The important thing is that they get experience on the job, where a film is being made."

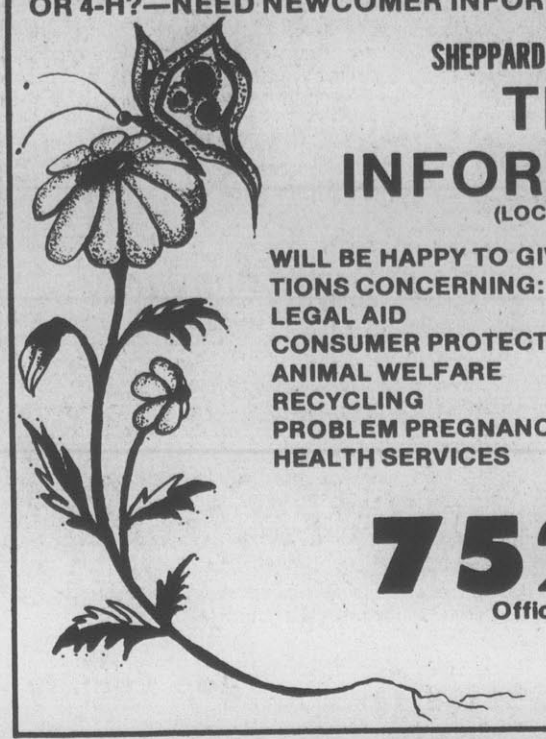

A staff of 16 full-time professionals works in the studio now. According to Stoddard, students are able to participate in professional productions which very often become best-seller educational films.

"Our educational films are very well accepted," he says. "One of our films, written and directed by a graduate student, won an award from the Information Film Producers of America. Other films produced with the assistance of students have won awards at national and international film festivals. Our latest film, 'The Mailbox,' was praised by the U.S. House of Representatives Select Committee on Aging as 'insightful, poignant, and professionally done.'

An Affiliate Of The Boys Scouts, And So Much More

Explorer Posts Provide Career-Choice Insights

"Most people think of the Boy Scouts when they hear about Explorers," said Richard Kelley, district scout executive. "Although we are affiliated with the Boy Scouts of America, exploring is much more."

Explorer groups, or posts as they are referred to, said Kelley, give members the opportunity for practical experience in a chosen career-related field.

"What we do," said Kelley, "is to identify a group of 14-21 year olds who have a common career interest. Then we try to find an institution who can give the Explorers an opportunity to see what is involved in that career area.

"This way, the Explorers find out if they really do like what is involved in that area."

Two results from these activities are possible, both positive, according to Kelley.

One, if the Explorers find out that they don't wish to pursue the career as much as they had thought, then they haven't wasted alot of time and money on further education for a career they won't be happy in.

Two, if they find out they do like the field, then they have the working experience and can be directed to further education possibilities and persons who can help them in their chosen field.

Besides being career oriented, Explorer posts also perform community service projects and participate in social events.

Recently, the Explorer posts in the area took a ski trip to the French-Swiss Ski College in Boone. And plans are underway in each of the posts for participation in the Explorer Olympics to be held on the East Carolina University campus, Saturday, April 22. Events will include table tennis, tennis, chess, diving, swimming, and track and field. Basketball and volleyball competion was held April 1.

"Lights, Camera, Action"

Future news broadcasters, journalists and cameramen are involved with the Explorer post located at WNCT-TV. They are under the direction of Gary Dean, anchorman, and Macon Dail, technical engineer.

"We are presently in the process of producing a half-hour Explorer news program," said Dean, "And the Explorers are doing all of the broadcasting, directing, light and camera work, audio and just about everything else that is involved in putting together a news program."

Most of the Explorers want to be in front of the camera, said Dean, but they are now seeing how many other job opportunities are available in broadcasting.

Deans sends some of the Explorers out with the WNCT reporters "so they can see how words and pictures go together to make a story".

Plans are being made to travel to Washington, D. C., to interview one of the Carter's.

"But right now," Dean said. "we are trying to finish our news program in time to broadcast in June."

Man and Machine

At the Eaton Corporation, the Explorer post is learning about computers and engineering. In particular, keypunching, programming, and operating the computers. And following the step-by-step process on the assembly line to learn how all the parts fit together.

Monte Clark, senior computer operator, Fran VanDort, standard planner in inventory control, and Frank Russ, manufacturing engineer, all employees at Eaton, are involved with the Explorer post.

Right now, the post is trying to decide on a design for a post patch, and recently went to Seymour Johnson Air Force Base in Goldsboro where they took a trip on one of the military planes there.

"What we plan to do," said Clark," "is to take the Explorers through a computer operations, all the way from writing the program, keypunching it, and operating the computer to receiving the final computer print-out."

Newest Post

Over 82 Explorers are involved in the post being established at Pitt County Memorial Hospital. And because of its newness, the Explorers are in the process of being briefed on hospital policy, medical jargon, general layout of the hospital and other vital information they must know to work efficiently in the hospital.

"All posts go through some sort of introductory lecture sessions before actually starting the work," said Kelley.

Dick Petree, employment officer at the hospital, will be involved in co-ordinating the program and placing the Explorers in the area of their particular interest.

"We will try to place the Explorer in the area that they are most interested in," said Petree, "if at all possible."

The program has received inputs from the hospital, AHEC, the medical and nursing schools at ECU and the Allied and the School of Allied Health at ECU.

Junior Police Cadet Force

Established in 1973, the Junior Police Cadet Force will soon have one of their old members become the first Cadet to join the police department as an officer.

"Jeff McGlowhorn had been with post since it began," said Hugh Benson, juvenille officer with the Greenville Police Department, "Now several of our cadets are planning to do the same thing."

Other Explorers in the post are interested in becoming game wardens, probation officers and working in various area of corrections.

The main activity of the post is working in conjunction with police department directing traffic for ball games and other civic events.

"The cadets have worked the county fair for the past four years," said Benson, "and are the total security force at scout camporees."

The cadets have their own system of communications, through the use of walkie-talkies, when they are working.

"The most exciting part is getting to ride with police officers on their patrols," said one cadet, "especially when the officer puts that blue light in the window and takes off."

The police officers have the responsibility of not deliberately placing the cadets in jeopardy, explained Benson.

"Most of the time the cadets ride with a sergeant or a lieutenant," said Benson, "which means they usually don't come into a situation until after the event occurs."

The cadets have also sat on stake outs and have seen some bad wrecks.

"But for the majority," said Benson, "it is five percent action and 95 percent just riding around."

High Adventure Post

The post that meets every Wednesday at Memorial Baptist Church is a group of students who are all musically inclined and hope to raise enough money to establish themselves as a dance-stage band.

"We call ourselves a ' 'High Adventure" post because we really aren't as career-oriented as the other posts," said Terry Strickland, advisor of the post.

The group recently had a car wash to raise money. And to show their appreciation to the church members for giving them a place to meet, the Explorers wash dishes after the Wednesday evening fellowship.

Emphasis Shifts

Last year the post at Burroughs-Wellcome actually made some tablets and ointments, but this year the post has become more civic-minded, according to Mike Wrenn, post leader.

"We emphasized the chemistry and pharmacy aspects more last year," Wrenn said, "but the Explorers seem to have become bored with that. We recently raised $150 for the Pitt County Association of Retarded Citizens in the Bike-A-Thon."

And they are really getting excited about the upcoming olympics. Many of the Explorers wanted to enter just about every event that is going to be held.

A very congenial group, the Explorers are all seniors at Rose High.

"I would like to show them around the quality control lab here," said Wrenn, "when the construction in there is finished."

Posts at D. H. Conley

There are two Explorer posts that function as regularly scheduled classes at D. H. Conley High School. One of them is a Junior ROTC post under the leadership of Col. Paul Lasker.

"Our post studies subjects like leadership development, human behavior and communications," said Lasker, who has been a full-time instructor at Conley for two years.

The class of 14 uses some class time for Explorer business, said Lasker, but much use is made of the bulletin board for notices and information.

Lasker is presently looking into the possibility of going to Seymour Johnson to fly on a KC-135 jet fuel tanker, and spending a weekend on a ship docked at Norfolk, Virginia.

The other post at Conley is a Wilderness Appreciation post that has been established for four years and presently has 13 members.

Under the direction of Chuck Dunn, teacher and football coach at Conley, the class studies emphasize wilderness ethics and outdoor skills, as well as how to plan an outdoor trip and the history of well-known outdoorsmen.

"We will soon study survival skills," said Dunn, who has been with Conley for six years and associated with scouting in general for 12 years.

A trigonometery teacher, Dunn takes his class to the mountains every year to do some surveying projects.

"The post really grew out of the interest the students showed for these excursions," said Dunn.

There have been no injuries or students getting lost. Not even when the post spent a week hiking 100 miles on the Appalachian Trail.

"Most recently," said Dunn, "we were responsible for a three-mile section of the trail, clearing out undergrowth, repainting trail markings and picking up trash.

"We were on a section of the trail located near Roanoke, Virginia," said Dunn.

The students are also interested in rappelling which is coming down the rock face of a mountain on a rope.

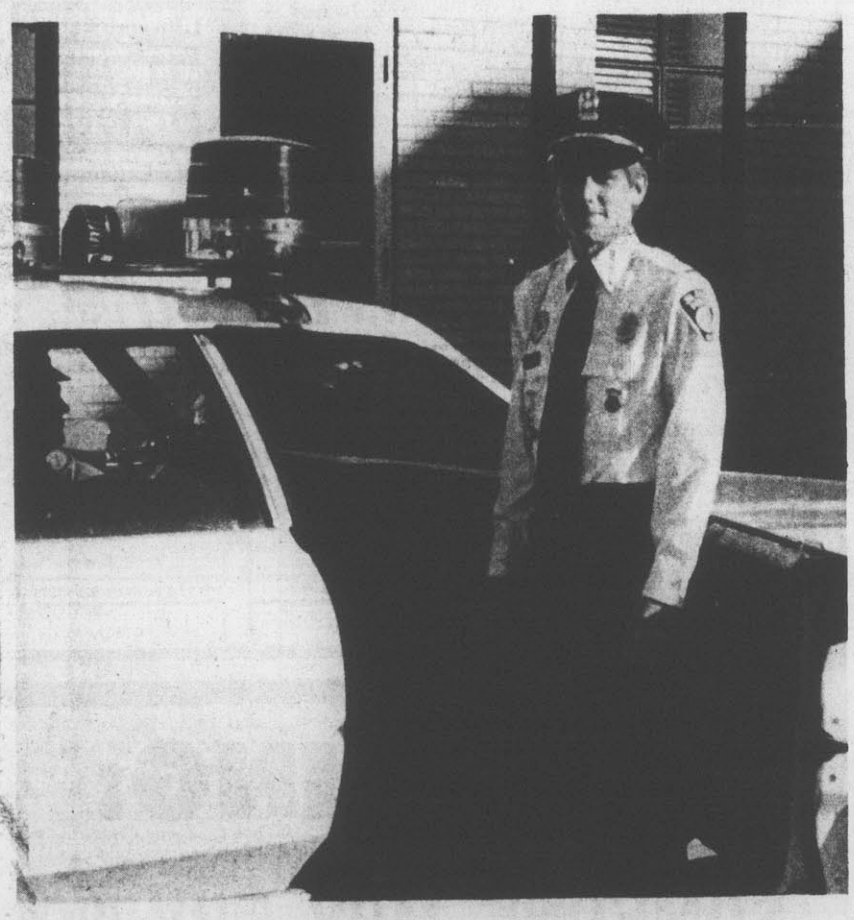

"We have practiced on the fire tower in Greenville," said Dunn, "and at Hanging Rock State Park near Winston-Salem."

"What ever future Explorer members are interested in," said Kelley, "we will try and set up a post if we can find an institution to sponsor them."

Music Lovers In The 'Big Apple' Liked The Sound Of Super Grit

Super Grit Cowboy Band is a name that many people may not be familiar with, that is unless they are fans of progressive country rock and roll — that sort of Lynard Skynard style without the polish.

But if you haven't heard of them, you probably will, and soon.

Super Grit, a local band, is a "jam, get up on the table and clog" group, and last week they hit the "Big Apple" head on. The results, according to manager Buzz Ledford of East-West Productions, was a packed house, full of Manhattanites, performers, and other curious folk that did, indeed, get up on the tables and dance.

"It was the wildest thing I,ve ever seen," said Ledford. "All those Yankees boogying to country music. The people were standing outside in line to get in."

The scene of this success story for the group was The Lone Star Cafe, located on Fifth Avenue and 13th Street. Ledford said in an interview last week that the Lone Star used to be a Schraft's candy store until manager Mort Cooperman got the idea that New York, in addition to discos and Rollin' Stonish rock n' roll bars, needed a good place to boogy to country music.

Ledford calls Lone Star the "number one honky-tonk north of Abilene." And last weekend, when Super Grit played a three-night gig, there were about 500 people packed into a room intended for 250.

"There's a revolving door that leads into the place, and they had to turn both sides back to let the people come in in double file."

On Thursday night, Super Grit played backup for Kinky Freedman, who tells "off-color ethnic jokes." Freedman and a Jewish sidekick who wears an Arabian headband got the audience warmed up with songs like "They don't make Jews like Jesus Anymore.

"After that, he invited us on stage to jam with him. Friday and Saturday nights we played by ourselves."

And it was on Friday and Saturday night that the audience contained the likes of James Taylor, Mick Jagger, Neil Young, Tom Jones, Wet Willie, the crew from "Saturday Night Live'," and many recording studio personnel.

"This is a weird gig for me," Jagger told the group after their Saturday night performance. He said that he went to see Super Grit out of curiosity, because he wasn't sure what kind of music progressive country was.

Ledford said that when Super Grit started playing, Jagger was sitting in the balcony in the back where he wouldn't be noticed. "Then they started playing 'Carolina By The Sea' and Jagger jumped up, pushed two people out of the way, and started dancing. It was wild."

Ledford laughed when he told the following story. "After they finished, Jagger came backstage to say he enjoyed the show. Then he looked at Clyde Mattocks (who plays pedal steel) and said, 'How do you pronounce the name of your band ?' Clyde said, 'Super Grit Cowboy Band, and what's the name of your band ?' Jagger cracked up."

James Taylor told the group "It's good to see some other bands from the Carolinas getting a break." And Ledford agrees.

"They've been working really hard for a long time at this. This was their second trip to New York, and we're hoping to land a major record bill within the next two trips.

"We're all real excited about it," he added. "It's really great to be able to go to a major city and turn people's heads around."

Ledford said that John Rockwell, feature writer for the "New York Times," said he would do a feature on Super Grit after their next appearance in town. "That will do it for us," he added.

So who are the local boys that have made it big ? There's Clyde Mattocks from Kinston who for a long time was the only microwave repairman in North Carolina and who has played pedal steel guitar for about 20 years; and Bill Ellis of Virginia Beach who plays bass.

Dana Belser, guitarist, used to drive an ice cream truck in Washington, D.C. "He would stop the truck and get out and play his guitar for the children. Then, they'd buy ice cream from him."

Danny Vinson, drummer, hails from Goldsboro, and Mike Kinzie, who plays fiddle is a strict vegetarian. "All he does is take vitamins and eat alfalfa sprouts," Ledford said. "His goal is to live to be the oldest person in history."

Ledford said the band threatened to tie Kinzie's hands and take hime to a fast food store.

There is also Tom Robinson who Leford says puts on "one of the best light shows around."

One of the unusual aspects of the group is that they are all vocalists. "It's not unusual for a group with four members, but it is with five." The oldest member of the group is 40 and the youngest is 24. Between them, there is about 80 years experience.

The kind of music that Super Grit plays has been coined by Ronnie Milsap as "crock" or country rock. "They're a cross-over act," said Ledford. "They try to reach all audiences and all ages."

Most of the music the group plays is their own, but they also do songs of the Eagles, Jackson Brown, Little Feat, Merle Haggard, and B.B. King, just to name a few. "They've got about 10 or 11 of their own songs now and are working on more," Ledford noted.

The band as it is now has been together for about eight months. But, as individuals, the members have put in a lot of years in the industry. Their next appearance in New York will be either the end of May or the second week in June.

"They've been a long time looking for a break," said Ledford.

"Either they've got it or they don't. I think they've got it. They're going to set the world on fire before long."

Super Grit will be playing at the Attic May 5, 6, and 7.

FIVE UNIT COMPLEX EMPHASIZES PRIVACY

TWO, THREE BEDROOM UNITS FEATURED

By Jerry Bishop

With a basic design that assures each tenant a private entry and rear patio, the Sundel, a five-unit complex offering both two and three bedroom units, manages to meet one of the prime demands of apartment dwellers.

In addition, the plan specifies such desirable extras as a compartmented bath upstairs, a handy powder room downstairs, and a kitchen with space for laundry equipment and access to the patio.

Simplicity marks the exterior, where a sloping roof forms an overhang that shades and protects the second story. The design itself juts out in front, creating a private entry for each apartment.

Inside, the five units are fairly similar. Units 1 and 5 offer three bedrooms, and units 2, 3, and 4 show two bedrooms.

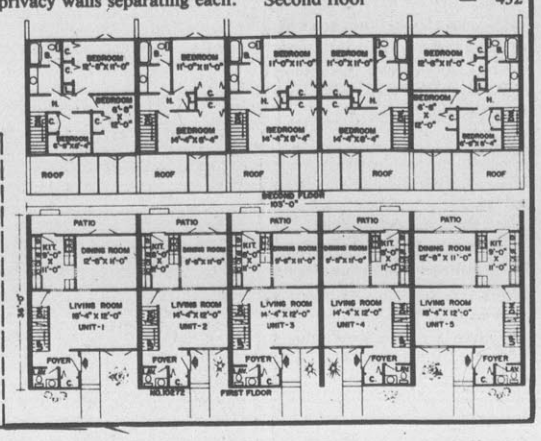

In all units, entry is into a closeted foyer, an appreciated extra in rental apartments. Another bonus is the adjacent half bath, set close to stairway and living room.

In the three bedroom units, the living room spans more than 18 ft. and merges with the dining room, also comfortably large. Two bedroom units call for slightly smaller living areas, but, even here, the areas are roomy enough for family and friends.

Upstairs, all units provide a large compartmented bath with built-in-vanity. In three bedroom units, the master bedroom offers two closets, while the smallest of the three rooms is ideal for a nursery or den. Linen closets are outlined in all units.

For outdoor living, the kitchen opens to a patio that spans the width of each unit, with privacy walls separating each.

ON THE HOUSE

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

The job of spreading an adhesive prior to the installation of resilient floor tiles can be eliminated by using the so-called self-stick tiles.

These tiles are more expensive because pressure-sensitive adhesive must be applied to their backs at the factory and then protected by sheets of paper. To determine whether your budget can stand the extra cost, measure the dimensions of the area to be covered and take them to a tile dealer for an estimate of how many tiles will be needed. You can then determine the total cost of the project for each kind of tile. Remember, when evaluating the non-stick tiles, to include both the price of the tiles and the adhesive.

Regardless of your decision, the chances are that you will have to put down plywood or hardboard underlayment, sheets 4 feet by 4 feet which are nailed into place with about 1-16th of an inch between sheets. The only exception to that is if the wood floor has both a top floor and a subfloor, with top boards less than 3 inches in width, and if the surface is free of wax, paints, oils, varnishes, etc.

Again, without regard for which type of tiles you are using, you have to find the center of the room. This is done by marking the middle points of the two end walls of the room, using only main dimensions and ignoring irregularities. Connect these two centers with a taut string, heavily coated with chalk (you can buy cord already coated). Snap the string to transfer a chalk line to the floor. Now do the same thing with the two opposite walls. The place where the chalk lines intersect will be the center of the room for your purpose. (For a copy of Andy Lang's booklet, "Installing Resilient Floor Tiles," send 35 cents and a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Know-How, P.O. Box 477, Huntington, N.Y. 11743).

If you don't care whether the tiles around the border are equal in size, you can begin laying the tiles, starting at the point where the chalk lines intersect. If you want the border tiles to be of the same size, lay one row of tiles in each direction, without spreading any adhesive or removing the paper backings. This "dry run" will show you the size of the border at each wall. You can then determine how far the "center" point of the room needs to be moved (never more than a few inches) so that the border tiles will all be the same size.

In putting the tiles into position, butt each squarely to the next, with the corners meeting exactly. Lay each tile in place; do not slide it into place. This is especially important when you have spread adhesive on the floor, because the sliding maneuver may cause adhesive to emerge from the tile joints.

Most persons install the tiles in conventional fashion, one next to the other and in even rows and, generally, that is the best idea. But if you want your floor to be a little different and you are willing to spend a little more time on it, you can lay the tiles in interesting designs. The manufacturers usually put out pamphlets or brochures offering illustrated suggestions on different designs.

GARDEN CLINIC

N.C. State Univ. Answers Timely Gardening Questions

Q. Can a person get earlier tomatoes by waiting until his plants have small fruit before setting them in the garden? (H.S., Lincolnton)

A. Not necessarily. Developing fruits place a serious nutrient drain on tomato plants. If the plants must also overcome transplant shock while producing fruit, the results can be slow early growth. It's usually best to transplant before blossoms form. An alternative is to grow the plants in large containers, which will allow for good root development and consequently reduce transplant shock. (George Hughes, extension horticulturist)

---

Q. What is the latest date that I can plant roses? (M.P., Wilson)

A. Dormant, bare rooted roses should not be planted later than the first of April. Container grown roses, though more expensive, can be planted up until late May. Be sure the planting hole is large enough to accomodate the root system without cramping the roots. Remember, roses don't like wet feet. (Kim Powell, extension horticulturist)

---

Q. Several of my foundation shrubs — hollies and nandina — have grown "leggy" which exposes the bottom limbs. Should I fill around them with soil up to the foliage? (B.B., Clemmons)

A. No. The best solution is to drastically prune them to 8 or 10 inches and allow them time to put out new growth this spring. If you fill around the base of these plants with several inches of topsoil you will cut off the normal water and oxygen supply and possibly damage the shrubs. (Kim Powell, extension horticulturist)

Retirement Requires Planning

By CONNIE GRZELKA
AP Newsfeatures

NEW YORK (AP) — Choosing a retirement home is one of the most important decisions a couple can make, says an expert in the field.

A happy retirement isn't something that just happens. If you want to make a go of it, you've got to plan. And if you don't have a plan by the time you're 45, it may be too late, according to Peter A. Dickinson, a former special investigator for the U.S. Senate Committee on Aging.

A couple should first know what they want to do and how much it will cost, he explains. In most instances, they will find that they can't afford the same things they had before retirement.

Dickinson, 51, of Larchmont, N.Y., is the editor of "The Retirement Letter." He recently published "Sunbelt Retirement," a state-by-state guide to retiring in the Southern and Western parts of the United States.

He calls the sunbelt area "the new frontier — for people, places, politics and retirement. Whether you're looking for lower cost-of-living, opportunities, climate or better housing, you can find it more readily down there."

Regardless of the area, Dickinson offers some tips for couples who are looking ahead to retirement.

On housing, he recommends this approach:

Try to pinpoint the area you'd like to settle in; write to the state departments of aging located in the state capital; write to the chamber of commerce; subscribe to the local paper; vacation there; rent a home in your preferred community before buying one.

To size up a community, he suggests investigating these areas: Climate and environment; health facilities; housing costs and availability; cost of living; leisure time activities; special services for senior citizens.

Dickinson emphasizes the importance of renting a home in a new community first: "Don't buy before you try. Swap your own house, rent it out, but don't sell and move right off.

"A house," he continues, "is as personal as your dreams and as practical as your pocketbook. It should satisfy both before you commit yourself."

If you decide to move to another area, Dickinson recommends selling some of your furniture to help cut down moving costs. "If the furniture is ordinary, have a tag sale. If there are any suspected heirlooms, have the items appraised," he advises.

Dickinson also provides a checklist of economic considerations. "For a comfortable retirement, you need an income of about $10,000, depending on the area, and a nest egg of about the same amount. Most of your major obligations should be paid off, such as mortgages. Plus, you need some study in advance, so you'll know what to expect."

Although he concedes that emotional adjustments will have to be made, Dickinson asserts "I've found that you won't miss the folks at home as much as you think you will."

It is his feeling that "if you want to commit yourself to the future, you have to break with the past."

If you belong to a group or club, transfer your membership when you move to your retirement community, he suggests.

"You're bound to find people with similar interests, or from the same area. It's important to be active in a church, service organization or hobby group."

Here's the Answer

Q. — I am adding an extension to my garage so that two cars can be put in it. The existing shingles are black and I can't seem to get black asphalt shingles. Do I have to completely reroof the old garage or should I put up new shingles on the addition and paint them?

A. — Roofing manufacturers now advise against painting asphalt shingles. Painting can invalidate a manufacturer's guarantees and cause other problems, especially if the paint is not compatible with the shingles. Ask your dealer if he can get black shingles and, if he seems reluctant, get the manufacturer's address and write to him yourself. However, even if you are able to get new black shingles, some color variation will be visible because the shingles already there have been exposed to the sun's rays. Later, color variations between the old and the new will be less noticeable. It is also well to remember that different planes of a roofdreflect light differently, making it even less likely that anyone will notice color variations.

Q. — I intend to make a new counter top for our kitchen, using laminated plastic sheets to cover the present wood surface. What is the best way to cut the plastic to fit the area around the sink?

A. — Make a paper or cardboard template or model. When cutting the laminate to the pattern, keep the decorative side of the plastic up, using a fine-toothed saw and cutting only on the downstroke. Allow one-eighth of an inch overhang, which can be filed off later. When making curved cuts, use a keyhole saw.

Q. — We will be finishing our basement this summer and are not sure about the lighting requirements, since we expect to use the downstairs area mainly for games for our teen-age children. We have some lighting recommendations, but these seem to be for an ordinary finished basement and we want to know if they will hold up for a basement to be used for recreational activities.

A. — You did not say what the recommendations are, so it is impossible to tell you whether they are sufficient. However, if the area is to be designed just for games, you should provide a recessed box, minimum 10 inches by 10 inches, with a maximum 100-watt bulb for every 40 square feet or a louvered downlight for an R-40, 150-watt floodlamp for every 30 square feet. For an even higher level of general lighting, use a recessed or surface-mounted fluorescent fixture with two 40-watt home-line tubes for every 40 square feet. A ceiling fixture also should be placed over a specific game area — such as a table tennis top — in addition to the general lighting.

Driver, 75, Passes Test

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — A 75-year-old woman who flunked a written driver's test 103 times in a row can now legally drive an auto she bought six years ago.

"Some people might have given up, but somehow or other I just wanted to learn how to drive," Fannie Turner said after gaining her learner's permit recently.

The veteran pedestrian started taking the tests after she bought a used car in 1972.

"I should have learned how to drive and then bought the car, that's what I should have done," she said.

When she failed the test, troopers at the state testing office gave her a driver's handbook and told her to study up and try again.

Two years ago, Mrs. Turner began a weekly routine of strolling 10 blocks to the testing office. Troopers came to expect the Wednesday visits by "Miss Fannie."

Sgt. Jerry Reinhold of the Arkansas State Police said that two years ago "she'd miss all 35 questions."

A machine decides which test an applicant takes, and the device seldom dishes out the same 35 multiple choice questions, he said.

Test scorers started noticing a definite improvement in Mrs. Turner's scores a few months ago. "Miss Fannie" was only missing 10 or 12 questions each time, Reinhold said.

Finally, she answered 28 questions correctly. The score was high enough to merit a learner's permit, which means she can legally drive as long as she is accompanied by a licensed driver.

Mrs. Turner, who has just turned 75, says she considers the learner's permit a birthday gift to herself.

She said she dog-eared four driver's handbooks studying for the tests. But through all 103 failures, Mrs. Turner said she never felt like giving up.

Oldest Mine Has History

AUSTINVILLE, Va. (AP) — Both the famous and the infamous have owned the oldest continuously worked mine in the United States.

The mine has been in operation since ten years before the American Revolution and has already produced more than 35 million tons of lead and zinc. Approximately 3.9 million tons of lead and zinc are estimated to remain, according to Paul Tripucka who manages the mine for the New Jersey Zinc Company.

The mine was discovered in 1766 by John Chiswell, who started a legend that he could produce silver from lead. Later, he served in the states' legislature and, shortly before his death, was involved in a murder scandal, but was never brought to trial, Tripucka says.

During the Revolutionary War, the manager adds, the mine was state-run by Charles Lynch, whose infamous conduct is credited with introducing the term lynching into the American vocabulary.

From 1780 to 1800 the mine was run by Moses Austin, who left Virginia for the new territory of Texas, where his son was to become a national hero and later the first governor of the state.

The New Jersey Zinc Company acquired the mine in 1902.

Now there's a more profitable way to build and sell quality homes.

With Continental Homes, you earn a good margin on each home you complete, and you can complete a lot more homes in the same amount of time. This also means your money isn't tied up in one project for very long.

We do most of the work--up to 90% in fact--under the best conditions. We use the highest quality materials and many of the same techniques you do. But in our plants, we don't face things like bad weather and manpower shortages that can drive up the cost.

Before you start to build, you can tell your buyer the cost and completion date (most of our homes can be completed in just 30 days).

So if you like building, but get fed up with building problems, find out more about the logical alternative. Continental Homes. With over 20 years' experience in manufactured housing, we know our business. And we can help you get the most profit from yours.

SMITH-WALDROP MOTORS

P.O. Box 1767 Greenville, N.C.

Dear Customer:

As a valued customer, I am writing to inform you of the end of an era. Something dramatic is about to happen that may affect your new car buying plans.

It's the end of the traditional, full-sized Mercury Wagons. The 1978 Mercury Wagons will be the last of a breed. As you may have heard, next year's models will be down-sized. A wagon owner such as yourself can well appreciate all the features, comfort and appointments that have made the Mercury Wagons traditionally America's Wagon Master. From over 600 cubic feet of cargo capacity to 6 full-size adult passenger capacity (plus room for the kids with Mercurys dual-factory rear seat) Mercury Wagons offer the kind roominess, smooth ride and good performance that most wagon owners need and want. So if your family cannot accommodate a smaller car, it's time right now to do something about it.

In a few weeks, I must place my final factory order for full-size wagons. Until then, I can provide you with Mercury Wagons fully equipped with the options you want. Should you miss my last order, I will be able to offer only those wagons I will have in stock and will be unable to order special equipment.

In these days of increasing concern over higher prices for less car, it is a pleasant experience to be presented with a purchase investment which is designed to offer uncompromised product benefits at a reasonable price. The 1978 Mercury Station Wagon offers an opportunity to acquire the finest station wagons in America today with traditional roominess, comfort and classic styling. Can we build a Mercury Wagon for you?

To help both of us in our planning, I've added a box to the bottom of this note. If you will check off the comment that best applies and mail the entire ad back, I will make the appropriate arrangements, or if you prefer, telephone me at 756-4267 with the information. I will be glad to handle it.

It is indeed and end of an era. I HOPE YOU'LL LET US HELP YOU SEE IT OUT IN STYLE.

Sincerely,

C.F. Freike

Fred Astaire, Helen Hayes Co-Star In 'A Family Upside Down' Special

TOPSY-TU Y: Fred Astaire and Helen Hayes, appearing together for the first time, star as the senior members of "A Family Upside Down," on NBC-TV Sunday, April 9 (9-11 p.m.) Patty Duke Astin (left in oval) plays their daughter, and Efrem Zimbalist Jr., and Patricia Crowley their son and daughter-in- law in this special about a loving family's valiant efforts to keep its relationships right side up.

What happened when Fred Astaire and Helen Hayes, two of the entertainment world's most illustrious stars for nearly half a century, co-starred for the first time in a forthcoming TV special?

Very little, if it's temperamental fireworks you have in mind. As a matter of fact, the two veteran actors — both perfectionists at their craft — worked so well together in "A Family Upside Down" that they now constitute a virtual mutual admiration society.

"Working with Fred for the first time went like a breeze," says Miss Hayes. "Fred's sister, Adele, told a mutual friend that Fred had taken such a shine to me after 'Upside Down' that he wished we had met years ago."

A smile flitted across her face. "He forgot that we did meet years ago. He took me dancing one night when we were in Broadway shows at the same time. I guess I wasn't too good a dancer."

Astaire doesn't remember that. "But I do recall we saw each other frequently when my sister and I were in a Broadway show across the street from Helen's theater," he says. "If I did not take her dancing then, I wish I had."

While Astaire is known primarily for his many movie and stage musicals, Miss Hayes rates him "very high" as a serious actor. "He's such a perfectionist," she says. "Everything in his acting must be as perfect as in his dancing— and you know what would happen if each of his taps wasn't done perfectly."

She added with a grimace: "Too much of this perfectionism has gone out of the movies and theater. Today, you're supposed to be spontaneous, or inspired. That's why it was a joy — and a relief — to work again with somebody like Fred, who feels the same way I do about this."

Astaire, more shy and diffident than Miss Hayes, seemed equally impressed. "Of course, I feel the same way," he said. "She's the great lady of the stage and screen, known by everybody as 'the First Lady of the American Theater.' It was very interesting and delightful to work with so wonderful a person."

Impressive Cast Airs

Seldom do viewers have a chance to see so many well-known stars as when "Dallas" airs on Sundays, 10 to 11 p.m., on CBS. The series, which premiered last week, stars Barbara Bel Geddes, Jim Davis, Patrick Duffy, Larry Hagman, Victoria Principal and Charlene Tilton.

"Dallas" marks a return to the world of entertainment after a three-year absence for Ms. Principal, someone who definately believes in controlling her own destiny.

In 1975, Victoria's acting career was in full swing, with featured and starring roles in such films as "The Life and Times of Judge Roy Bean" and "Earthquake " and with a new three-picture contract, when she decided to quit acting.

"Once I made the decision, which was a difficult one," she explained, "I went down to the Screen Actors Guild and quit."

Explaining why she quit, then resumed her film career several years later, Victoria said: "At the time I quit, I wanted to do something else with my life besides acting. I felt I wasn't handling my life properly and I wanted to get a clearer perspective of where I was going."

So, after a short vacation, she was surprised to be offered a job by her agent — not as an actress, but working with him in the office. She spent two months in training, then, in her first week as a full-fledged agent, she signed her first client.

The New York Yankees Vs. The Texas Rangers

The World Champion New York Yankees take on the Texas Rangers in Arlington, Texas, on the third-season premiere of "ABC's Monday Night Baseball," April 10, 8:30 to 11 p.m.

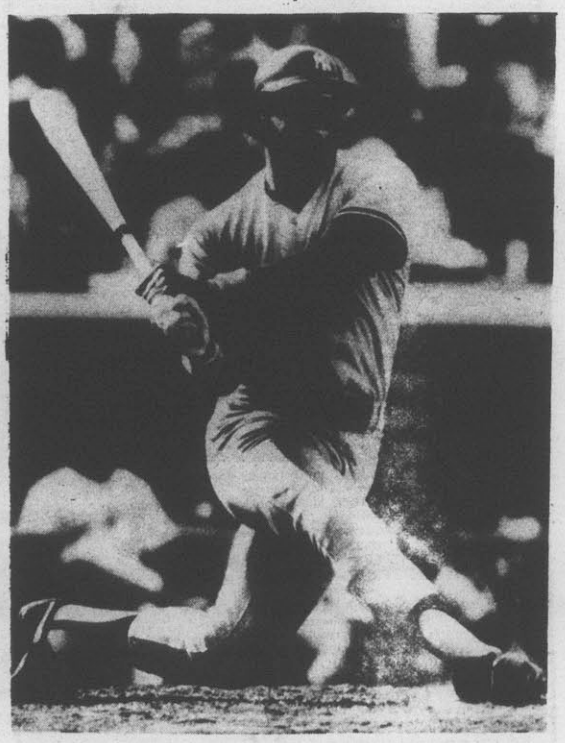

Don Drysdale, who turned to sportscasting in 1970 after 14 brilliant years as a National League pitcher with the Dodgers, joins ABC Sports commentators Keith Jackson and Howard Cosell to form the 'Monday Night Baseball' broadcast team.

The Yankees, who closed out Baseball 1977 on the wings of Reggie Jackson's three consecutive World Series home runs, have since added two quality relief pitchers to their staff — Rich Gossage of Pittsburgh and Rawley Eastwick of St. Louis — in the free agent market, plus Andy Messersmith, now injured, in a deal with Atlanta. They have also traded for Jim Spencer of the White Sox and he could become their left-handed hitting designated hitter.

George Steinbrenner, the Yankee owner, has shelled out an estimated $4 million for Gossage, Eastwich and Messersmith. The Yankee pitching staff already includes millionaires, Don Gullett and Catfish Hunter and other highly-priced stars as Sparky Lyle, Ken Holtzman, and Ed Figueroa.

With New York's great abundance of pitching, some kind of major trade is likely. This would be in keeping with Steinbrenner's desire to put a star at every position. The Yanks are expected to deal for a slugging outfielder.

Last year after Reggie Jackson's three home runs and the World Series champagne still in his hair, Billy Martin promised, "Next year will be different; next year there will be no problems."

"ABC'S Monday Night Baseball" premieres for a third season on Monday, April 10 at 8:30 p.m. as Reggie Jackson leads the World Champion New York Yankees against the Texas Rangers in Arlington, Texas.

IT'S ABOUT TIME!

It took 18 years, but the Beverly Hills Chamber of Commerce finally got around to handing out the annual Will Rogers Award to a fellow political satirist — Bob Hope.

The sons of the late humorist, Will Rogers, Jr. and James Rogers, flew in to validate the presentation ceremonies at the Chamber's 55th anniversary ball in the crowded International Ballroom of Hollywood's Beverly Hilton Hotel last week.

Ritter Monkeys Around

John Ritter was monkeying around in show business long before he became the object of affection for two lovely ladies in the hit TV series, "Three's Company."

The handsome 28-year-old-son of western star Tex Ritter started his film career by keeping "company" with a chimpanzee in Walt Disney Productions' comedy spoof of the television industry, "The Barefoot Executive." Part two of this delightful feature will be telecast Sunday, April 9, at 7 p.m. on NBC-TV's "The Wonderful World of Disney."

For his film debut, Ritter played a patsy to a precocious primate whose uncanny ability to select hit TV programs turns a last-place television network into the ratings champ. Co-stars Kurt Russell, Joe Flynn and Harry Morgan didn't fare much better when matched against the mischievous monkey.

From second banana to popular television star, Ritter has established himself as an extremely versatile performer with credits ranging from a dramatic role in "Starsky and Hutch" to a singing and dancing guest appearance on Goldie Hawn's recent TV musical variety special.

The affable actor has sampled most areas of entertainment. Ritter's films include "Nickelodeon," co-starring with Burt Reynolds and Ryan O'Neal; and Disney's "Scandalous John." His numerous stage credits cover musical comedy to Shakespearean drama.

Television is where John has registered his greatest impact. After guesting on popular TV shows such as "M*A*S*H," "The Mary Tyler Moore Show" and "Kojak," he was given the opportunity to do a series of his own. "Three's Company" has proven to be the real turning point in his career.

Mclaughlin Looks Back

When Emily McLaughlin was invited by ABC to see the pilot for daytime TV's "General Hospital" fifteen years ago, she was forced to take her 5-year-old son, Bobby, along with her because she couldn't find a babysitter. Her only child wasn't pleased by the excursion because it meant he'd miss seeing "Superman" on TV.

Today, Bobby's called Bob. He's 20, and a member of an up-and-coming rock 'n roll band, and Emily's kept busy cooking hamburgers and preparing snacks for the group during its daily rehearsals at the McLaughlins' home in Van Nuys, Calif.

The only things that's remained constant is the fact that Emily continues to portray Jesse on the now hour-long soap, making her and John Beradino (Dr. Hardy) the only remaining original cast members from the longest running soap on the West Coast.

Emily, a soft-spoken and reserved person like her TV character, reflects on the 15th anniversay of the serial with a great deal of fondness mixed with a touch of admitted regret that so many of the regulars have come and gone over the years.

The actress chuckles when she thinks of Jesse's life before she says, "She's been married five times, but three times were the same man, the same character, Phil Brewer. She's lost two babies, been tried for murder twice, and was convicted once. That time Phil came back and forced the girl who did it to confess, and the second time it was Phil's murder, but Jesse didn't do it.

JOHN RITTER, THEN AND NOW...Before John Ritter (r) acquired two beautiful roommates named Janet and Chrissy on the hit series "Three's Company," he made his film debut as a straight man (l) to a chimpanzee in this scene from "The Barefoot Executive," a comedy spoof of the television industry, the conclusion of which will air Sunday April 9 (7-8 p.m.) on NBC-TV.

Western Adventure Airs Sunday Night

A lonely young woman in the Old West — sold to her aged husband for $100 — takes flight with a gentle half-breed Indian outlaw and his partner in "The Lady and the Outlaw," a western adventure making its television premiere as "The ABC Sunday Night Movie," April 9, 9 to 11 p.m..

Desi Arnaz, Jr., Gregory Peck and Sian Barbara Allen star in the drama of a young half-breed who turns to bank robbery after he is rejected by both Indians and settlers alike. "The Lady and the Outlaw" (released theatrically as "Billy Two Hats") was the first American western to be filmed entirely on location in Israel.

Alone in a friendless world because of his mixed parentage, Billy Two Hats (Arnaz) joins forces with Deans (Peck), a grizzled outlaw who dreams of returning to his native Scotland. After robbing a bank, they are pursued by a racist sheriff (Jack Warden), who takes Billy prisoner. Deans rescues his young partner — breaking his own leg in the process — and the two take refuge with a homesteader (John Pearce) and his slavelike young wife, Esther (Sian Barbara Allen).

The homesteader — for a price — takes Deans to a doctor, leaving the two young people — both outcasts in a hostile world — alone to discover each other.

The relentless sheriff, infuriated by Esther's love for the half-breed, takes the two of them prisoner, forcing them to ride with him as he goes in pursuit of Deans with murder in his mind. The focus of the film is really on the characters and interaction of the two main protagonists — portrayed by Peck and Arnaz. This turns out to be somewhere between big-brotherly and paternal, with Peck dispensing vibrant quotes from Ecclesiastes along with twinkling-eyed wisdom on the ways of wily men.

Gregory Peck is an aging Scottish outlaw on the run, weighted down by the company of a young half-breed Indian and his woman, in "The Lady and the Outlaw," a television premiere on "The ABC Sunday Night Movie," April 9 (9-11 p.m.)

'Mean Streets' Airs

In a test for survival, three young men grope through life seeking acceptance and success in the established operations of small-time crime in New York's Little Italy, in "Mean Streets," on the "NBC Late Night Movie" Sunday, April 9, at 11:30 p.m.. Robert DeNiro, Harvey Keitel, David Proval, Amy Robinson and Richard Romanus star in Martin Scorsese's acclaimed film.

De Niro portrays Johnny Boy, whose erratic behavior and penchant for generating hugh debts — and resultant threats from loansharks — casts a shadow over his empty life.

Johnny Boy is a close friend of Charlie (Keitel), who dates Teresa (Robinson), Johnny Boy's cousin. When Michael (Romanus), a small-time loanshark, begins to pressure Johnny Boy for payment of a large sum of money, Charlie attempts to intercede on his friend's behalf.

Johnny Boy continues to renege as each deadline passes, and Charlie realizes that his own life may be in danger, for the neighborhood has rules about dealing with those who don't honor their debts.

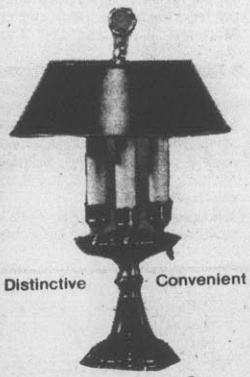

Reportedly, much of "Mean Streets" is semibiographical. Scorsese grew up in New York's lower East Side among these characters and their experiences, and this is obviously a very personal movie.

Previn Visits Couple

"An Evening with Comden and Green" will be spent by Andre Previn Sunday, April 9, 8 to 9 p.m., as "Previn and the Pittsburgh" temporarily departs from its classical music format for casual conversation and charming and familiar show tunes.

Betty Comden and Adolph Green, lyricists for an almost endless stream of Broadway musical comedy hits, chat informally with Previn, one of their collaborators, and sing several of their classic songs.

Demond Wilson Is 'Looking'

The first thing you notice about Demond Wilson, when visiting a rehearsal of his "Baby, I'm Back" series, is his immaculate dress habits. It doesn't make any difference whether a visitor drops in any day, Monday through Friday, the actor is always dressed to the teeth in absolutely impeccable attire.

The handsome star of the series that airs Mondays, 8:30 to 9 p.m., on CBS, admits to a lifelong grooming habit that he inherited from his father, a New York tailor of fine clothing.

"My father was always dressed in a suit and a tie when I was a child," said Demond. "And from the time I was in grade school I was always similarly attired in a suit, and usually with an under sweater or a vest. To be well dressed has always been an accepted part of my life."

Demond also believes that people in public life owe it to others to be well turned out at all times. "Especially actors," he said. "If the public has made you a star, you have an obligation to dress and act the part."

Demond will wear anything that's required of any character he may be playing; but off camera, that's another story.

He has three complete wardrobe groupings which he characterizes as his "skinny group," his "medium group," and his "bruno group." "My weight fluctuates according to how much tennis I'm playing or how much I'm working out with the weights," he said. "So I have my wardrobe for 165 pounds and under, my group for up to 180 pounds, and my "bruno" group for over 180 pounds."

Demond has 200 suits, 70 sports coats, 70 pairs of slacks, 45 vests, 50 ties, six over-coats, a dozen assorted sweaters and 300 pairs of shoes.

"I have a tailor's wardrobe," he explained.

Demond keeps his entensive wardrobe in a special 10-by-15 foot closet with a motor driven traverse hanger system that brings a chosen outfit to the fore. Every dress unit is coordinated and hung together in precise fashion.

He delights in giving away many near-new pairs of shoes to the men who service his car in the public car wash located near his home. He kiddingly covers up his generosity by claiming he gets a kick out of seeing all his favorite shoes as he watches the men work on his car.

The love of fine clothing has passed from father to son and now looks like it will continue to Demond's 3-year-old daughter, Nicole. "Whenever her mother buys her a pretty new dress," he smiled, "She can't wait to model it for us."

Denise Nichols and Demond Wilson co-star in "Baby, I'm Back," half-hour situation comedy centering on a husband legally declared deceased who tries to bring his "dead marriage" back to life, which is telecast on Mondays (8:30-9 p.m.) on CBS.

Peanuts Clan Sows Arbor Day Thought

The Peanuts clan, those animated small folk who deal in a special way with major holidays from Halloween right through the school months up to spring, have found that another important day is starting to grow on them — Arbor Day.

In "It's Arbor Day, Charlie Brown," to be rebroadcast Monday, April 10, 8 to 8:30 p.m., on CBS, they throw themselves into a tree-planting project that may well plant thoughts about the importance of the day that Peanuts creator Charles M. Schulz notes "has been lost in the shuffle over the years."

Since its origination in Nebraska in 1872, Arbor Day has been variously observed as a legal holiday, a school festival, and a spring date for the public planting of trees. The time of celebration varies in different states, sometimes even in different localities of the same state.

The scope and purpose of Arbor Day, wherever it appears on one's local calendar, have been broadened over the years. From simple exercises and the planting of single trees to beautify public grounds, it has been the occasion for impressing upon school children the importance of forestry, and for the planting of seedling trees to reforest otherwise wastelands.

All of this, of course, is a worthy project, but the Peanuts, as always, can't leave well enough alone. In "It's Arbor Day, Charlie Brown," they choose Charlie's baseball field for their planting, including "a nice little tree" right on top of the pitcher's mound. The resultant jungle growth gives a life to Arbor Day, but it doesn't do much for Charlie's already overwhelming problems in trying to win a baseball game.

"We certainly don't try to preach or spout facts about the various holidays," comments Schulz, "because our main purpose is still to entertain. But if we can get a basic message across and be funny at the same time, well, that's our goal.

"What could be more important than the beauty of nature and the importance of conservation. That's what Arbor Day is all about, and that is the theme of our show."

MARCIA'S ACCENT PROBLEMS

It usually happens with performers from the Deep South, but comedienne Maria Lewis's problems is "straightening out my New England accent." So for her starring role in the upcoming NBC-TV program, "Legs," the writers had to explain her accent by putting in a line that she had been raised in Boston and thus "speaks differently than her young son," played by Scott Baio.

Return Was First Class

Joe Don Baker's return to New York after a 12-year absence to film the four-hour television movie, "To Kill A Cop," was in a decidely different style than when he left.

Baker, who stars as Chief Earl Eischied in the movie which will air in two parts on NBC on Monday and Tuesday, April 10 and 11, had lived in New York as a struggling young actor, "in a variety of walk-ups and cheap hotels that left a lot to be desired," he recalls.

When he left the Big Apple after five years, the 6'2" actor had little more to show than "a handful of good notices for acting in the play 'Blues for Mr. Charlie' and a tiger-striped cat that had adopted me," he says.

His return was something of a triumph. As the star of "To Kill A Cop," he was comfortably ensconced at the St. Moritz Hotel off of Central Park and was driven to work each day by a chauffered car.

"No doubt that's the best way to live in New York," he admits. "The city was a little dirtier, more depressing and depressed, maybe, than I remembered it. But then I'm different now too."

The role that Baker chose as his return to television after seven years in feature films is also a different style than the ones he played previously.

In his early years in Hollywood the Texas native was always a villian on television and his dialogue was usually monosyllabic. As Eischied, head of detectives, he's the hero with a gloss of sophistication and even a beautiful mistress.

"The character of Eischied was quite a talker," he says, "and I have more dialogue than I've ever had in a film before and that goes for any feature work I've done. I had to consciously work hard at suppressing my southern accent through all those speeches."

It was the challenge of playing this character and the quality of the script that attracted Baker back to the small screen after all these years.

"I've reached that point in my career when I have the choice of doing only what I want to do," he says.

Happiness Eludes Character

Jean Simmons stars as a woman who expected to live "happily after after" with the man of her dreams but finds that happiness eludes her, in "The Happy Ending," to be broadcast in its world television premiere on "The CBS Tuesday Night Movies," April 11, 9 to 11 p.m..

John Forsythe, Shirley Jones, Lloyd Bridges and Teresa Wright also star in this look at modern marriage and the romantic myths about it, written and directed by Richard Brooks ("Looking for Mr. Goodbar," "Elmer Gantry," "In Cold Blood," "The Catered Affair," and "The Blackboard Jungle"). Co-starring are Dick Shawn, Nanette Fabray, Bobby Darin, Tina Louise, Kathy Fields, and Karen Steele.

Sixteen years ago, Mary Wilson (Miss Simmons), who believed in fairy tales and movie-screen romances, married her Prince Charming (Forsythe). Everything was going to be perfect. Over the years, he gave her all she could ask for, but somehow the fairy-tale ending didn't happen, and Mary does not know what went wrong. On the surface, the Wilsons, like their friends, dutifully go through the motions of a working marriage, but Mary yearns for something different.

"The Happy Ending" is about her attempt to recapture her romantic dream, and the challenges, disappointments, heartbreak and humiliations she meets on the way, and how she learns to survive.

The Michel Legrand musical score includes the hit song, "What Are You Doing the Rest of Your Life?"

Jean Simmons as an unhappy housewife, consoles Kathy Fields, as her daughter, who is puzzled by the sudden disruption of what seemed a perfect family life, in "The Happy Ending," to be broadcast on "The CBS Tuesday Night Movie," April 11 (9-11 p.m.)

Cameras View Vietnam

Since the fall of Saigon in April 1975, Americans have had virtually no opportunity to see what has happened to Vietnam, the country where America lost a war.

But in December, 1977, Jon Alpert, Keiko Tsuno and Karen Tanucci became the first American television journalists allowed in Vietnam since the war's end. For more than a month they traveled through the northern and southern sections of the country, now reunited under Communist rule, visiting the cities and places whose names became all too familiar to Americans during the tragic years of fighting — Hanoi, Saigon, Haiphong.

Alpert and his associates produced "Vietnam— Picking Up the Pieces," which offers the first comprehensive look at the new Vietnam. The documentary airs Tuesday, April 11, at 9 p.m. om PBS.

In the North, they discovered a country that remains largely undeveloped. Alpert examines the effects of the massive American bombing, the North's economic structure and how underdevelopment worked to North Vietnam's advantage during the war.

Peasant life is also depicted, focusing on a day in the life of a Vietnamese family living and working on a state commune.

PBS-TV Airs Award-Winner

The Emmy Award-winning National Geographic Special "Journey to the Outer Limits" will have its PBS debut Tuesday, April 11, 1t 8 p.m.

Awarded an Emmy for "Best Achievement in Cultural Documentary Programming" in 1974, 'Journey' follows the adventures of 19 city kids from ghetto and high society, with little knowledge of the outdoors, as they go through the rigorous training of the Colorado Outward Bound School. Their personal conflicts and struggles are captured on film as they push themselves beyond their physical and emotional limits towards their final test — climbing the Santa Rosa Peak, nearly 19,000 feet high in the Peruvian Andes.

The documentary received a number of awards including First Place in the 1974 New York City Film Festival, a Chicago Film Festival Bronze Hugo and a 1975 American Film Festival Blue Ribbon. It was also nominated for an Oscar for "Best Feature Documentary" in 1974.

Four-Hour Movie Presented

Joe Don Baker and Louis Gossett Jr. star as two strong men on opposite sides of the law who are locked in a deadly conflict in the four-hour movie "To Kill A Cop," airing in two parts Monday and Tuesday, April 10 and 11, 9 to 11 p.m. on NBC.

Baker stars as Earl Eischied, chief of detectives in a big eastern city, who faces a rash of robberies linked with several senseless cop killings and a police commissioner who is plotting to discredit him.

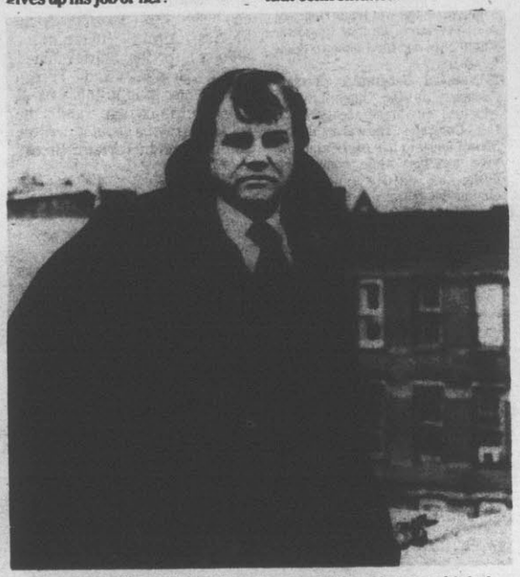

Gossett stars as Everett Walker, a former revolutionary leader of the 1960's, long in exile, who returns to reestablish his terrorist power in the United States.

Guest starring in the telefilm are Patrick O'Neal, Desi Arnaz Jr., Christine Belford, George DiCenzo, Eddie Egan, Alan Fudge, Rosie Grier, Robert Hooks, Eartha Kitt, Joyce Van Patten and Diana Muldaur.

"To Kill A Cop," based on a novel by Robert Daley, former deputy assistant police commissioner to Mayor Lindsay, exposes the internal political machinations of police work in a big city today as Chief Eischied (Baker) tries to discover who is behind a series of crimes committed by a terrorist group named FEAR. While trying to maintain public calm, Eischied becomes the target for dismissal by a politically ambitious police commissioner (O'Neal) and his staff (Fudge and DiCenzo) who want to exploit the crime wave to their own advantage.

Eischied finds that not only is his professional career in jeopardy but his personal life is falling apart. His ex-wife (Van Patten) chides him for his inattention to their son and his mistress (Muldaur) gives him an ultimatum that either he gives up his job or her.

While Eischied is searching for him, Walker (Gossett) is slowly molding a group of young thugs into a revolutionary group that plans to destroy the system by fear and chaos. Events bring the two men together in a final taut confrontation.

THE COP AND HIS CITY — Joe Don Baker stars as chief of detectives Earl Eischied, a man who is trying to solve several senseless cop killings while combatting a police commissioner who is plotting to discredit him in "To Kill a Cop," airing in two parts Monday, April 10 and Tuesday, April 11, (9-11 p.m. both nights) on NBC.

Comedy Stars Hoffman

Dustin Hoffman stars as a successful rock music composer who attempts to sort out joy from pathos and reality from fantasy during 24 hours of his life, in "Who is Harry Kellerman, And Why Is He Saying Those Terrible Things About Me?", a comedy-drama airing as the "NBC Movie of the Week" Wednesday, April 12, 9 to 11 p.m.. Barbara Harris, who received an Academy Award nomination for her performance, co-stars with Jack Warden, David Burns and Dom Deluise.

Hoffman portrays Georgie Soloway, whose life style now boasts a triplex apartment overlooking New York's Central Park, a chauffeur-driven limousine and a private jet. Having composed 64 songs in a single year, he has appeared on the cover of Time magazine and met scores of admirers, including Allison (Harris), a lonely and tortured aspiring actress he befriends.

Despite his wealth, Soloway finds himself plagued with doubts and isolated from those around him. With the memory of his loving parents, a marriage that failed, his haunted past drives him to visit a psychiatrist and bare his soul.

Georgie's primary obsession is to find a mysterious figure, Harry Kellerman, who he believes is trying to disturb his life by spreading damaging lies.

'Westerns Are Changing,' Says Savage

As a lad, Paul Savage wanted to be a cowboy, but fate (and his parents) decreed otherwise. Savage, who wrote and produced "The New Daughters of Joshua Cabe," airing as the "Tuesday Movie of the Week," April 11 at 11:30 p.m. on ABC, later channeled his boyhood dreams into writing.

Savage thinks that western stories are changing and says, "The classic western might have trouble being accepted by the public today. The classic western is good against evil and the good is always represented by the single figure such as the lone lawman. These days, the lone man has a difficult time. We are becoming committee-minded."

Savage, who has written scripts for many western series and was for several years executive story consultant on "Gunsmoke," has set this story in the town of Grand Forks in the Wyoming Territory in 1880.

Starring in the title role of Joshua Cabe is John McIntire, a veteran of many western films. Bewhiskered Jack Elam, whose villainry was an integral part of dozens of westerns until producers discovered his kind heart, plays Josh's crusty friend, Bitterroot, and McIntire's wife, Jeannette Nolan, portrays the proprietor of Grand Fork's boarding house.

The three "daughters" are Liberty Williams, Renne Jarrett and Leslie Dalton.

Some years ago, shortly after his arrival in Hollywood, Savage heard that television's "The Millionaire" series was looking for stories. He borrowed a typewriter and some blue stationery from a girlfriend. Despite the blue paper, the story sold for $240 and Savage was on his way.

Savage regrets that there are only a few cowboys in "The New Daughters of Joshua Cabe," but he explains that much of the story takes place in a town where there would be little reason for their presence. He has lived their lives vicariously many times in his stories, since his youth when he used to curry horses every Saturday morning.

"I get paid a lot better these days — in money," says Savage. "In those days I worked for cookies and milk."

Uprisings Dramatized

Jim Brown, Rod Taylor, Yvette Mimieux and Kenneth Moore star in "Dark of the Sun," a realistic drama set against the background of the violent conflict in the Belgian Congo in the early 1960s. This agonizing story of rebels, mercenaries, refugees and murderers will be presented on "The CBS Late Movie" Monday, April 10, at 11:30 p.m..

John Cardiff ("Sons and Lovers") directed the drama of a war-torn nation, where children are casually murdered on behalf of a 'cause'; money means more than lives, and a new nation brings out the best and worst in heroes and cowards.

'School For Scandal' To Air On Public TV

In a lively and lavish production from the Guthrie Theater Company of Minneapolis, Sheridan's 18th century comic masterpiece, "The School for Scandal," will be presented on UNC-TV Wednesday, April 12, at 9 p.m., as part of the "Great Performance" series.

The Guthrie Theater has had a profound impact on the burgeoning regional theater movement since 1963 when it was founded by the late Sir Tyrone Guthrie. As one of the best-known professional repertory companies in the United States, it has attracted extensive professional and popular interest with its wide variety of outstanding productions. Since 1971 the company has been under the creative leadership of director Michael Langham who has impressively staged such ambitious classics as "Cyrano de Bergerac," "Oedipus the King," "The Merchant of Venice" and most recently, "The School for Scandal."

The play vividly captures what Langham describes as "one of the most bibulous, irresponsible, lusty, lively periods ever, and age of risk with nothing whatsoever stable about it."

It was written in 1777, when Richard Brinsley Sheridan was twenty-five, and had already learned a good deal from the faculty of that "school" and which gave the play its name.

PRINCESS GRACE SAYS "YES!"

'Framed' Is Action Movie Of Revenge

Joe Don Baker and Conny Van Dyke star as a gambler framed for a crime he didn't commit and his girlfriend, in "Framed," an action movie to be broadcast on "The CBS Wednesday Night Movies," April 12, 9 to 11 p.m..

Gabriel Dell, John Marley, Brock Peters and Warren Kemmerling also star.

Ron Lewis (Baker) is a successful gambler and nightclub owner in a small town in Tennessee. His girlfriend, singer and partner, Susan Barrett (Miss Van Dyke), wants him to settle down, but Ron is having a winning streak and won't give up his high-stakes gambling.

His luck turns with ferocity when he accidentally drives into a roadside shootout. Finding himself suddenly under attack by the police, he kills a deputy sheriff in self defense. He is arrested, and it soon becomes clear that the deck is stacked against him. The police deny the shootout ever happened, his lawyer insists he plea bargain rather than plead innocent, and even Susan seems unable or unwilling to help.

After four years of brutal prison treatment, Ron is released, swearing revenge on whoever arranged his frameup. He is helped to solve the mystery and battle the thugs, crooked cops and stop-at-nothing politicians he encounters by two of his prison friends (Marley and Dell) and a sympathetic honest policeman (Peters).

Joe Don Baker (l) stars as a gambler seeking revenge on the powerful people who sent him to prison for a crime he did not commit and Brock Peters plays a policeman who helps him, in "Framed," action drama to be broadcast on "The CBS Wednesday, Night Movie," April 12 (9-11 p.m.)

FRANCINE YORK JOINS DAYTIME SERIES

Francine York, whose early credits include four Jerry Lewis movies and who appeared more recently in Irwin Allen's movie, "Flood," is now a regular cast member of "Days of Our Lives"

Francine portrays Lorraine, who confronts Don Craig (Jed Allen) just as he becomes engaged to Marlena (Deidre Hall) and tells him her teen-age daughter is "their" child.

Dentist's Name Pulled For Part

What's in a name...often quite a bit more than meets the eye, at least if you're Gregory Sierra, who stars on the comedy series, "A.E.S. Hudson St.," airing Thursdays (9:30-10:00 p.m.)

In character, Sierra plays hospital emergency ward chief resident Antonio "Tony" Menzies — half Puerto Rican, half Jewish, and all aggravated about the shabby conditions under which he and his fellow doctors and the nurses must ply their healing trade.

The harried Tony Menzies, of course, is just a TV character. But, Sierra said, there is a real life Dr. Menzies— only he's not an M.D. but a D.D.S. in fact, he's Greg's Los Angeles dentist, Dr. Fred Menzies.

"Good names just don't fall out of the sky," Sierra explained, "I like his, it fit, so I asked if he would mind my using it. He didn't, so I did."

It won't be the first time Sierra has lifted from life to come up with a good character name. During his two seasons as a detective on "Barney Miller," he was known as Chano Amengual, a combination of the names of Mexican film director Chano Ureta and lifelong friend Raymond Amengual.

For that matter, when Greg played a semi-regular role on "Sanford and Son," as the funloving, goat-tending next-door neighbor, he appeared as Julio Feuntes, a monicker borne through life by his late uncle, whom he described as having been "a sort of Zorba the Puerto Rican."

According to Sierra, "I just feel a little more comfortable working with a character name that has a bit of special meaning to me.

Obviously, I can't go deciding that Hamlet should have been named Irv, just because I might prefer it. But, where it's possible for me to adapt a name to a role, why not ?"

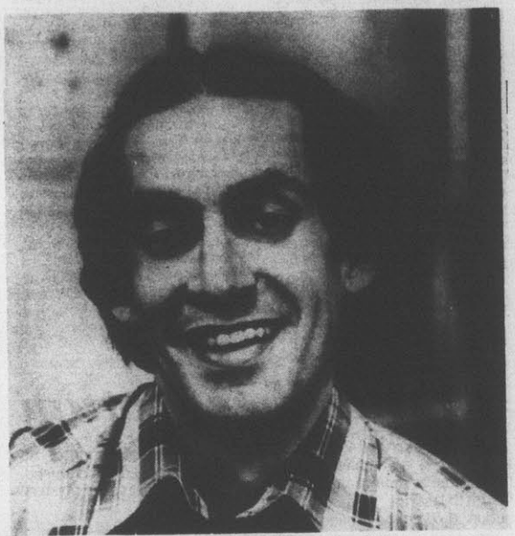

Lucky for ABC Greg's favorite drill and fill man wasn't tagged Vlasdislaw Pestalozzi.

Kristy McNichol Stars

Kristy McNichol, one of television's most popular teen-age performers, will star in "The Summer of My German Soldier," a two-hour NBC World Premiere drama to be colorcast during the 1978-79 season.

McNichol, who currently stars on the "Family" series, will portray a troubled young American Jewish girl in the South in 1944 whose life changes when she befriends a German youth interred in a prisoner of war camp near her home.

When the young man escapes, she makes every effort to hide him from authorities and is ultimately denounced by her family and members of her faith.

Gregory Sierra stars as Dr. Anthonio "Tony" Menzies in the new comedy series set in a large urban hospital, "A.E.S. Hudson Street," which airs Thursday, (9:30-10:00 p.m.) on ABC-TV.

Landon Produces Movie

Gil Gerard stars in "Stone," a two-hour NBC World Premiere movie written, directed and produced by Michael Landon, executive producer and star of the top-rated series, "Little House on the Prairie." The contemporary drama — the second television movie written, produced and directed by Landon — is currently in production.

Gerard, who recently guest-starred in "The Handyman" episode of 'Little House,' stars in the title role of a man who attempts to pick up the pieces of his shattered life after being wrongly convicted of murder and serving time in prison. Using his newly acquired writing skill, Stone becomes engulfed as a free-lance journalist in a sensational small-town murder case involving a United States senator's son.

"Stone" also stars J.D. Cannon as a savage sheriff; Nehemiah Persoff as Stone's father; Jim Davis . as a powerful senator; Corinne Michaels as Stone's ex-wife; and Valentina Quinn, daughter of actor Anthony Quinn, as an employee of the senator.

Pike's Peek

By Charlie Pike
TV Showtime Staff Writer

HOLLYWOOD — It's the season to wait and see for a lot of TV series while the networks begin to determine what shows will be back in September and which ones will become has-beens. "Hawaii Five-O" will be back, and so will "The Rockford Files," two veteran shows whose fate was debatable a couple of weeks ago, but there's a big question mark hanging over "The Hardy Boys." Some speculators are guessing that Pat and Debby Boone's pilot will be picked up as a replacement for Shaun Cassidy and Parker Stevenson.

It's a busy time for daytime television. NBC's "Days of Our Lives" is celebrating its 12th anniversary the same month that ABC's "General Hospital" is toasting its 15th.

Meanwhile, the Fifth Annual Emmy Awards for Daytime Programming will be telecast on ABC June 7 from the New York Hilton.

About a year ago, Loretta Swit was rumored to be heading for the altar, but the "M*A*S*H" co-star never made it. That love is now out of her life and she's spending a lot of her time on the arm of fashion designer Doug Hiatt.

Bill Bixby and wife Brenda Benet have had quite a year already. No sooner did Bill put his name on the dotted line for his "Incredible Hulk" series and found himself working 12 hours a day than a close friend's wife passed away, the Bixbys' housekeeper fell and broke both hips and their three-year-old son, Christopher, became ill with a viral infection. Then, just as Christopher was on the mend, Brenda was stricken with a similar illness, leaving Bill with the responsibility of nursing everyone in his family as well as the show!

Ironically, three days before ABC changed the name of "Having Babies" to "Julie Farr, M.D.," series star Susan Sullivan told this pillar that the show's title was its biggest drawback and she hoped something could be altered should the series be picked up for the fall. The original title was too restrictive for mass appealing storylines, she said, and obviously the producers and network agreed.

It's Suzanne Somers and Bruce Boxleitner of "Three's Company" and "How the West Was Won" respectively who'll star in Tri-Media's "Jack and the Princess," a TV movie for CBS. Interesting, while so many Hollywood projects get their financing from foreign oil fortunes, Tri-Media is a domestic oil product, having been founded by Anne Whitaker of the pioneer oil family of the same name.

Patience Is Key

"Patience!" That was the most-repeated word in the diary kept by David deVries, wildlife photographer and film maker, while he spent 27 weeks in the frigid wastelands of the Yukon Territory and a section of Alaska north of the Arctic Circle.

DeVries went there to film "Caribou: The Incredible Journey," a Survival Anglia special which chronicles the annual 2,000-mile trek by approximately 125,000 caribou of the Porcupine River herd for calving, feeding and mating.

The program, narrated by Michael Landon will air Wednesday, April 12, 8 to 9 p.m., on NBC.

Most actors probably would be apprehensive about the notion of co-starring with Don Rickles, fearful of being torn to pieces by the razor-tongued man they call "Sharkey."

Harrison Page (as Chief Robinson on "CPO Sharkey," Fridays, 8:30 to 9 p.m. on NBC, is proof that "Mr. Warmth's" co-star doesn't have to be a card-carrying masochist or kamikaze pilot.

"The man (Rickles) is a pussycat," said Page. "I used to have the impresssion before the show that this was a nasty person. Friends of mine wondered whether I could even deal with Rickles."

A PAGE FROM RICKLES — Harrison Page (l), who appears with series star Don Rickles (r) of NBC-TV's "CPO Sharkey" (Fridays, 8:30-9:00 p.m.) admits that prior to meeting Rickles, he was apprehensive about co-starring with "Mr. Warmth." As Chief Robinson to Rickles' Sharkey ("The Man is a pussycat," said Page), he now has no qualms about exchanging friendly insults on the set with the master of the putdowns.

"CPO Sharkey's" rehearsals, not surprisingly, richochet with Rickles' zingers as he alternates pot-shots at the cast, crew and innocent bystanders.

"It's nothing to me to trade put-downs," said the Georgia-born Page. "We do it many times, but he never puts me down when we're alone. He jokes about my ancestors being from Africa (Page moved to Hollywood from Detroit), and I joke about him being an 'old Jew.'

"We're just having fun — especially when he does his (Jack) Benny-and-Rochester bit."

As Sharkey's best pal, guardian angel and "happy-go-lucky guy," Page's Chief Robinson also serves a valuable function as something of a straight man for the volatile CPO's barbed humor.

"I feel good about my role," he said. "But I don't really consider myself a 'straight man.' I'm the wall — the one who keeps the show logical and in hand — sort of like an enforcer."

Page gladly notes that he has had a chance to develop Robinson's sense of humor.

Would-Be Bogart

"Brockelman wants to be like Bogart — the best private eye there ever was," says Dennis Dugan, star of NBC-TV's "Richie Brockelman, Private Eye" (Fridays, 9 to 10 p.m.).

In the series, which premiered St. Patrick's Day, Dugan (an Irishman) portrays a 23-year-old novice detective who relies on numerous disguises and his innocent, youthful appearance to track down leads.

About his character, Dugan continued: "He doesn't consider himself inept. He's just new at it. He's very serious about what he's doing and he devotes all of his energy to it. In 10 years he will be as good as Rockford, if not as good as Columbo.

"He hates violence, but he gets roughed up in every show. Most of the time, he just pushes the heavies, runs away and jumps in his beat-up Mustang."

Born and raised in Wheaton, Ill., the slender, 5'9" actor began training for an acting career while he was in junior high school. After attending the Goodman Theatre in Chicago, where he participated in actors' workshops and summerstock, he headed for New York. He appeared in numerous off-Broadway productions while supporting himself as a clerk in a marketing-research firm.

The following year, he was offered a role — without pay — in a film that was to be shot in Denmark. He agreed to do it for expenses plus one dollar. The film, "You'll Never Miss It," was never released.

Two years later; Dugan was chosen as an understudy in the production, "The House of Blue Leaves." He moved up to the starring role in 1971, and when the play closed in New York, he and the entire company relocated to California.

Recently wed to actress Joyce Van Patten, Dugan says he could not be married to someone outside of the business. "Being in the same business is good for us. We understand the nature of the profession and we work at helping each other out."

Double-Feature Airs On ABC

"Stickin' Together" and "The Two-Five" comprise the double feature presentation airing as "The ABC Friday Night Movie" April 14, 8 to 11 p.m..

"Sticking' Together" is a comedy-drama of five orphaned children living in Hawaii who must find a surrogate uncle to help them stay together as a family. The feature will be the first of the two and will air from 8 to 9:30 p.m.

Clu Gulager stars as Cuda Weber. Starring as the Mackenzie children, ranging in age from 17 to 7, are Sean Roche as Kevin, Lori Walsh as Bridget, Sean Marshall as Michael, Randi Kiger as Celia and Keith Mitchell as Timothy.

The spirited Mackenzie children, in order to avoid being assigned to foster homes after the loss of their parents at sea, have invented an uncle, William Mackenzie, as their guardian. But when young Timothy gets a ticket for truancy, it is necessary that the ticket be signed by Timothy's guardian in the presence of Timothy's teacher.

Cuba Weber, a crusty, free-spirited owner of a sport fishing boat, agrees to pose as the kids' guardian "just this once" in return for help with household chores. But an emergency arises and Cuda, as William Mackenzie, takes Timothy to a pediatric clinic. An acquaintance reveals Cuda's real identity, and the social welfare agency is notified.

In "The Two-Five," airing from 9:30 to 11 p.m., two eager cops must resort to anonymous police work in setting up a major narcotics bust because their eccentric boss wants to keep his precinct out of the limelight.

Don Johnson and Joe Bennett star as the partners, who accidentally stumble onto a gambling den while trying to find the owner of a stolen hubcap. They make some politically embarrassing arrests, including the mayor's mother. Praised publicly and promoted to detective rank, they are then transferred to the "Siberia" of their police force, the 25th precinct.

Their apoplectic commander, played by George Murdock, is a few years from retirement. He wants no spectacular arrests made that will draw news media attention or headquarters scrutiny. When a pretty "information broker"' played by Tara Buckman, tips them to ongoing cocaine traffic.

Chris Evert Is After 'Frosting'

For Chris Evert, the $125,000 Family Circle Magazine Cup tennis tournament is not only a piece of cake, it's the frosting too. When a blue ribbon field of the world's leading female tennis players convenes for the Family Circle Cup — on NBC-TV Saturday, April 15 (5 to 6:30 p.m.), and Sunday, April 16 (2:30 to 4 p.m.) — Evert will be seeking her fifth straight triumph in this prestigious international competition.

Evert has won the top prize spanning an impressive string of victories in 1974, '75, '76 and '77. Last year she made it four in a row by breezing through the tournament; she climaxed her relentless advance by snowing under none other than Billie Jean King in the final round (6-0, 6-1). In winning her four in a row, Evert has toppled, in successive finals, Kerry Reid, Martina Navratilova, Reid again and King.

Despite the fact that Evert has won this prestigious and profitable tournament four times, the improved and more consistent play of Navratilova in recent months makes this edition of the Family Circle competition as wide open as it has ever been.

There is no discounting the evidence in any evaluation of Navratilova's recent play. At one point she won seven straight tournaments and 30 matches in a row; she is at the top of her game.

While she was busy swinging the racquet in competition, Evert had cut back considerably in her tournament appearances. But for the past few weeks, Chris, the top star in women's tennis, has returned to action and is coming into top form. By mid-April, when the big doings are telecast on NBC from Sea Pines Plantation in South Carolina, Evert will be ready.

This year, one of the more interesting aspects of the competition for the singles title — worth $26,000 — is bundled in the person of 15-year-old Tracy Austin, a youngster who has been called the new Chris Evert.

Austin's progress has not gone unnoticed by the more experienced competitors in women's tennis. Certainly not by Navratilova. As recently as March 10, Austin got the complete attention of the women's tennis world by upsetting the top-seeded Navratilova to gain the semi-finals of the $100,000 competition in Dallas.

Evert, Austin and Navratilova will be swinging their racquets against a field which will include Billie Jean King, Wendy Turnbull, Kerry Reid, Nancy Richey, Greeg Stevens, Virginia Ruzici, JoAnne Russell and Rosie Casals.

Chris Evert is seeking her fifth straight triumph in the prestigious Family Circle tennis tournament. NBC will be spotlighting a field of the world's top women net stars when the event is telecast on Saturday, April 15 at 5 p.m. and Sunday, April 16 at 2:30 p.m.

Lone Star '200' Airs On CBS-TV

Defending champion Johnny Rutherford is expected to be one of the favorites, along with A.J. Foyt and Tom Sneva, to win the USAC Lone Star 200, which will be broadcast live on "CBS Sports Spectacular," Saturday, April 15, at 4:30 p.m.

Rutherford won the 1977 edition of the race, held at the Texas World Speedway in College Station, Texas, with an average winning speed of 164.19 miles per hour. Gordon Johncock was second.

Sneva, who won the other 200-mile race held last year at Texas World Speedway — the Texas 200 —, also was a winner in the Pocono 500. He finished 1977 with over $272,000 in winnings, second only to Foyt's $347,583.

Much of Foyt's top purse earnings came from his victory in the Indianapolis 500, his fourth triumph at Indy. But the 43-year-old Houston native also won at Ontario, Calif., in 1977 and at Ontario, Canada.

Renowned as the World's Fastest Speedway with its high 22-degree banked corners, the Texas World Speedway offers a different challenge for the Indy-type cars than some of the smaller, flatter slower tracks. A.J. Foyt was able to attain an average speed of 208 miles-per-hour for the first 10 laps of a 200-mile race held over the two-mile 'D' shaped oval in October, 1976.

Gary Bettenhausen's 181-miles-per-hour average in 1973 still ranks as the fastest winning average ever recorded on any speedway in this country.

Others expected to competed in the 100-lap race include Al and Bobby Unser (Al won the Ontario, Calif., 500 in '77), Wally Dallenbach (winner of the Trenton 200 in '77), Mario Andretti (now the leader on the Formula One Grand Prix circuit).

Ken Squier will be trackside for commentary, along with driver David Hobbs and Brock Yates.

Mario Andretti (l) and A.J. Foyt (r) are two of the top USAC drivers who will be on hand when CBS televises the USAC Lone Star 200 on Saturday, April 15 at 4:30 p.m. The Texas Speedway is renown as the fastest track upon which the Indy-type cars compete.

Dave Twardzik: Can't Shoot?!! Huh!

Dave Twardzik came to the Portland Trailblazers in 1976 as a free agent from the ABA's Virginia Squires. His arrival in Portland was three days late and, after his first practice with the Trailblazers, his new teammates were rather unimpressed.

"He's just a little guy who's pretty scrappy on defense, but he has no offense," said one Blazer teammate who wanted to remain anonymous then, and would die of embarrassment now.

"I like the way he moves without the ball. He's a smart player," said Bill Walton.

"Anything else about him strike you?" Walton was asked.

"Yeh, he can't shoot," said Walton.

Open mouth and insert foot — how wonderful it would be if we could retract our remarks before they appear in print.

Twardzik has been a Trailblazer for two years now and one World Championship has already come their way. They are now embarking on the NBA's complicated playoff season with sights set for another title, and CBS will televise a playoff contest Friday, April 14, at 11:30 p.m.

With regard to Twardzik's shooting, he led the NBA in field goal shooting last year with a .612 percentage, but didn't take enough shots to qualify for the championship. He has 263 shots, and 300 was the minimum. Earlier this season Dave was again leading the league in field goal percentage.

Kentucky Provides Nucleus For Game

The hot-shooting Jack Givens, who fired a near-record 41 points to lead the University of Kentucky to the NCAA basketball championship over Duke March 27, will make a triumphant return to his home base in Lexington, Ky. as a member of the U.S. National Team, which takes on a basketball team from the U.S.S.R. on NBC-TV's "Sportsworld," Sunday, April 9, at 4 p.m.

In a game spotlighting a pair of international teams of exceptional talent and experience, Givens will be joined by Kentucky teammates James Lee, Kyle Macy and Rick Robey to give the U.S. team an awesome scoring potential against the best from the U.S.S.R.

The Kentuckians will be joined by seven other top performers in the recent college campaign: James Bailey— 6-9 center from Rutgers: Larry Bird — 6-9, forward from Indiana State; Joe Berry Carroll — 7-1, center from Purdue; David Greenwood — 6-9, forward from UCLA; Darrell Griffith — 6-3, guard from Louisville; Ervin Johnson — 6-8, forward from Michigan State; and Sidney Moncrief — 6-4, guard from Arkansas.

Their coach will be Joe B. Hall, who led Kentucky to their thrilling 94-88 victory in the NCAA finals in St. Louis.

The U.S.S.R. National Team, highly successful in two American tours this season, have defeated many of the top teams in the country, including UCLA, Arkansas, Providence, Indiana, Alabama, Brigham Young and the University of Utah. They lost hard fought games to Kentucky, Notre Dame, St. John's and Rutgers. The Russians played under International rules, which the Russians are more accustomed to playing

The Russian team, which is representative of the best players in the U.S.S.R., make much of their physical attributes. Vladimar Tkachenko, 7-3, and Alexander Belostennyi, 7-0, are very strong under the boards.

New Series Begins

Ted Knight, a double Emmy Award winner for his portrayal of the pompous news anchorman on "The Mary Tyler Moore Show," stars as the elegant owner of a New York escort agency, on "The Ted Knight Show," a half-hour comedy series airing Saturdays, 8:30 to 9 p.m. on CBS.

Knight plays Roger Dennis, a man of meticulous standards for the beautiful girls who work for him. Roger operates the agency from his apartment, and to insure his clients' satisfaction, he takes on particularly difficult assignments himself.

Roger has a few problems and one of them is his brother, Burt (Normann Burton), who financed the business on two conditions: one, that the loan be repaid, and the other, that Roger must hire his sister-in-law, the cranky and inefficient Dottie (Iris Adrian) as his secretary. Then, there is Roger's college-age son, Winston (Thomas Leopold), who would much rather help his father at the agency than stay in school.

Roger's "family" are the alluring girls who work for him and make the agency successful: his chief assistant, the zany Graziella (Cissy Colpitts), Honey (Fawne Harriman), shy Irma (Ellen Regan), the beautiful Phil (Tanya Boyd), sexy Cheryl (Janice Kent), and blonde Joy (Debbie Harmon).

Ted Knight was one of Hollywood's busiest actors when he rose to stardom in 1971 for his portrayal of the bumbling, pompous newscaster Ted Baxter on "The Mary Tyler Moore Show." Knight won two Emmy awards for that characterization, one in 1973 and another in 1976.

Normann Burton, who plays Roger's son Winston, was in the Broadway revival of "Ah, Wilderness." He is also a writer, having contributed material to "The Chevy Chase Special" and "The Manhattan Transfer."

Doggedly Pursues Case

When Lieutenant Columbo sets out to solve a murder, he always sinks his teeth into it.

In his next case, the dishevelled police detective tries to save a pair of canines — in "How To Dial a Murder," a "Columbo" drama starring Peter Falk on "NBC Saturday Night at the Movies" April 15, 9:30 to 11 p.m..

However, this time, Columbo ran the risk of having the dogs sink their teeth into him!

The animals used were Doberman pinschers, owned by Frank Inn, Inc., one of the busiest suppliers of four-legged actors in motion pictures and television. The Dobermans were trained to look ferocious, but don't judge books by their covers.

"These are really very affectionate dogs, but because of their mean look, we had trouble getting the actors to relax around them," pointed out Cindy James, one of the on-set animal trainers. "People are scared, especially when the dogs look mean."

Laurel and Hardy, the two Dobermans in the show, were actually played by three dogs. One, Midnight Sun, is a 6-year-old male who's a five-year veteran of movies and television. Also on hand were two of his daughters, 5-year-old Twilight and 4-year-old Schoene.

The dogs have starred in such canine theatrical releases as "Daring Dobermans" and "Courageous Dobermans."

"They were selected for film work because of their temperament," Cindy explained. "Their disposition and willingness to be trained have to be considered. Some dogs don't like to work, so they aren't as desirable. It should be fun for them to work."

Even at such young ages, the dogs are victims of type-casting. They play loveable dogs trained to be killers.

The fact, however, escaped Falk, who in the final scene of the show, is knocked down and attacked by the Dobermans in a surprise ending to his latest homicide caper.

Falk, as "Columbo" fans know, is accustomed to working with Captain (known as "him" on the show), the dead-pan, do nothing Bassett Hound who plays the detective's pet dog.

"My only concern was that I didn't want to be a meaty terat," quipped Falk while feigning nervousness.

PHYSICIANS MUTUAL INSURANCE COMPANY — Entered 1902

OMAHA, NEBRASKA 68131

Dear Friend:

I am a doctor as well as Chairman of the Board of Physicians Mutual Insurance Company. And over the years of my practice, I have seen many cases where a good supplemental hospital policy could have eased the financial strain on the families of hospitalized patients.

That's why I wanted to call your attention to a brand new policy we've developed here at Physicians --

-- a policy that pays equal benefits of $30.00 a day -- $900.00 a month for you, your wife and all of your children from the very first day you're hospitalized for a covered accident or illness.

You'll find all the details in this booklet. So why not read it over now. It could be something you'll want for yourself and your family.

Sincerely,

Herbert H. Davis, M.D.

Herbert H. Davis, M.D.
Chairman, Board of Directors

P.S. I'm especially pleased that we can make this outstanding value available to you. I sincerely believe it's the finest policy we've ever offered.

Board of Directors: JOHN A. AITA, M.D. · ARNOLD W. LEMPKA, M.D. · R. RUSSELL BEST, M.D. · H. W. MC FADDEN, M.D. · HERBERT H. DAVIS, M.D. · ROBERT A. REED · WILLIAM R. HAMSA, M.D. · EDMOND M. WALSH, M.D.

Dr. Davis is right! Medical costs have soared to such unbelievable heights that it makes it almost financially impossible for us to be sick. According to the American Hospital Association, the average patient now pays $175.08 a day for hospital care.

An average stay in the hospital—8 days—could cost you a small fortune. And that's not even counting the doctor . . . medicine . . . plus all the other bills that you still have to face whether you're sick or not—food, electricity, house payment.

The plain truth is that you could use $900.00 a month ($30.00 a day) cash to help you pay your bills when you go to the hospital. It's a mighty comforting thought to know you have this extra help available just when you need it most.

And that's what this policy is all about. It was created to help you face the problems that arise whenever you're hospitalized for a covered sickness or accident.

Here is insurance that gives you extra protection with cash benefits for

SICKNESS! ACCIDENTS! MATERNITY! CANCER! HEART ATTACK!

Pays 50% increased benefits for cancer or heart attack!

Pays you $900.00 a month ($30.00 a day) cash!

You'll collect $900.00 a month ($30.00 a day) for any covered sickness or accident beginning the very first day you are hospitalized. Protect yourself, your wife or your whole family. $30.00-a-day equal benefits for all. Just pick the plan that meets your needs.

Pays you $1,350.00 a month ($45.00 a day) cash for cancer and heart attack!

Your daily benefits are increased 50% if you or any covered member of your family are hospitalized for cancer (including leukemia and Hodgkin's disease) or heart attack (acute myocardial infarction, coronary thrombosis, or coronary occlusion).

Pays you double benefits—$3,600.00 a month ($120.00 a day) cash for you and your wife!

Yes, that's a lot of money. But you'd need it. So under the Husband-Wife or All-Family Plan, you'll collect $3,600.00 a month ($120.00 a day) if you and your wife are both injured and hospitalized at the same time—by the same or by different accidents.

Pays maternity benefits, too!

You'll collect full cash benefits—$30.00 a day—for hospitalization due to pregnancy or any pregnancy complication if your policy has been in force for 10 months. There's no added cost to you!

No waiting period for accidents or new sicknesses.

Remember — accidents and new sicknesses are covered immediately—the very day your policy is issued. You collect the first day and every day you're hospitalized for a covered sickness or accident.

You get lifetime coverage and benefits.

There's no limit on the number of days for which you can collect cash benefits. You can be hospitalized as often as necessary and stay as long as you have to — knowing that your $30.00-a-day benefits cannot run out. Our plan will pay you benefits for as long as you're hospitalized—EVEN FOR LIFE!

Pays cash benefits in addition to any other insurance you have.

Remember, this is extra, supplemental protection. Your benefits are paid over and above any other insurance you may carry—including Blue Cross/Blue Shield, Major Medical and Medicare. This policy is designed to help you make up the difference between your total hospital bill and what your other insurance will pay.

Your benefits are not taxable.

Your benefits from your Physicians Mutual Hospital Policy are not taxable by any level of government. They are not subject to state or Federal income tax.

Your policy is guaranteed renewable!

This is a very important point, because you want to be absolutely sure you'll have your protection when you need it. So for as long as you live and keep your policy in force, we guarantee never to cancel or refuse to renew your policy. No matter how much money you collect. No matter how often you go to the hospital.

What's more, we'll never raise your rates unless we do so for all policies like yours in your entire state. This means you can't be singled out for a rate increase.

Please note these exceptions.

Pre-existing conditions (health problems that became evident or were medically treated before the effective date of the policy) are not covered for one year from the date the policy is issued. Half-benefits ($15.00 a day) are paid for up to 4 weeks confinement due to mental disorder. Not covered is hospitalization for alcoholism, drug addiction or any condition covered by Workmen's Compensation or Employers' Liability Law benefits. Confinement in nursing homes, Federal hospitals, or the self-care, extended-care or convalescent units of hospitals is not covered. Pregnancy or any consequence is covered after your policy is 10 months old.

We guarantee to issue you a policy, regardless of your present age or health condition.

You will not be turned down because of your age, health or size of your family.

As soon as we receive your Application, we will issue your policy (P350/360 Series) and put it in force. From that day on—even before you receive your policy in the mail —you're covered for new sicknesses and accidents. Naturally, we can issue only one policy to you on a guaranteed issue basis.

If you're already a Physicians Mutual policyowner and would like information about additional coverage available to you, please write for details.

Enroll today. No salesman will call!

You can enroll in this new Physicians Mutual Hospital Policy by simply filling out the short Application attached and mailing it together with $1—which pays for your first month.

People 65 and over are also protected . . .

When you are 65, you'll find help for hospital care in many forms—Medicare, Social Security, special agencies, and perhaps a pension plan. But because people in this age group go to the hospital more often, this extra help is frequently not enough.

In addition to Medicare, you'll be receiving cash benefits from Physicians Mutual . . . to fill the financial void created by your illness. During the first 60 days of hospitalization—when Medicare coverage is highest—you collect half benefits, $15.00 a day.

After 60 days of hospital care—when Medicare coverage reduces and you need help most—your cash benefits go up to $30.00 a day. And stay there no matter how long the hospital visit!

We've found that most folks over 65 prefer this approach . . . because your monthly premiums do not increase after you turn 65.

Another feature many senior citizens appreciate is that you will be covered for cancer, heart attack, stroke, hernia, disease or disorder of the prostate, tuberculosis, cataracts, emphysema, cirrhosis or diabetes if your hospital confinement commences more than six months after the effective date of your policy.

First, choose the plan that fits your needs best. Remember—no matter which one you choose, $1 pays for your first month.

Individual Plan

Ideally suited for the single person or for the individual family member who needs protection.

All-Family Plan

Offers protection for the entire family. Covers father, mother and all eligible dependent children — including future additions.

Husband-Wife Plan

Designed for the married couple without children or whose children are grown.

One-Parent Family Plan

Created especially for the single parent with children. Covers you and all eligible dependent children.

Now choose the combination of cash benefits and premium options that fits your needs and budget best. Remember—your first month's premium is only $1.00!

providing help when you need it most.

At its founding in 1902, the Company specialized in health insurance for physicians, surgeons and dentists only. Today, our various policies protect over a million Americans in all walks of life.

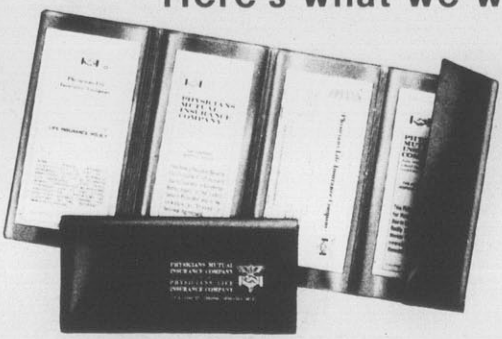

Headquartered in Omaha . . . licensed in 49 states and the District of Columbia, Physicians Mutual is proud of its record of service. Last year alone, we paid claims totaling over $54,000,000 on all policies.

As proof of its financial stability and sound operating performance, Physicians Mutual has been awarded an A (Excellent) rating from A.M. Best Company, independent insurance analysts since 1899.

NASA's "landnaut," Chris Kraft.

FOR DR. CHRISTOPHER C. KRAFT Jr., director, Johnson Space Center

What accomplishments will we see in space travel and exploration by the year 2000? —S.V., Yuma, Ariz.

● Space accomplishments in earth resources, technology and manufacturing, medicine, communications, meteorology and other fields will provide great benefits to people on the earth by the end of this century. It is likely that plentiful, clean energy from the sun will be transmitted to earth from satellites by that time. Space telescopes and unmanned probes to the planets will reveal more about our universe in the next 20 years than we have learned in the past 2,000 years. The Space Shuttle will provide engineers and scientists almost continuous access to the weightless vacuum of space, an environment which cannot be duplicated on earth.

FOR THE "ASK" EDITOR

At my skiing class I heard that blind singer José Feliciano has taken up skiing. I said that's impossible. Am I right? —S.G., Redondo Beach, Calif.

● We checked with José, who said, "Why shouldn't I ski? I have a terrific sense of balance?" (He also rides horseback.) A couple of years ago José, who regards his blindness as a challenge, not as a barrier, was performing at Steamboat Springs, a Colorado ski resort, and got the itch to ski. José goes out with a sighted companion, who wears a bell, and José follows the sound. His only concession to his handicap — and sole protection — is a sign he wears that says "Blind Skier." Of course, José does not whiz along. When asked how he knows if he hits a tree, he teases: "The sound of a ski running up a tree is a lot different from the noise of a ski rubbing on the snow."

José Feliciano: into sports.

FOR BECKY YANCEY, author of My Life With Elvis

Were you close to Elvis's wife and daughter during his lifetime? Are you still friendly? —A.G., Kenosha, Wis.

● I was working at Graceland as Elvis's secretary when he brought Priscilla back with him from Germany, so I was one of the first people she met. We became friends right away and often went shopping and out to dinner when Elvis was away on tour. Lisa, their daughter, used to come into the office and sit on my lap and play with my typewriter. Since Priscilla now lives in California, we rarely see each other anymore.

FOR ABE VIGODA, star of ABC-TV's Fish

Do you enjoy being mobbed by autograph hunters? —D.B., Little Rock, Ark.

● What's this about being mobbed? Let me tell you a little story. A few weeks after my series was first on the air, I was in a supermarket when a woman came up to me and, with a big smile, said, "I know you from somewhere." I gave her an even bigger smile. Instant recognition! Just as I was about to ask her how she liked the show, she said, "Of course! You're the new butcher here."

FOR MIKE DOUGLAS, talk-show host

In planning a show, do you ever knowingly put on acts or guests that may hinder you in the ratings but have talent or a message you want to get across? —B.R., Concord, N.H.

● First, I don't pick the guests. I make suggestions, but the ultimate decision has to be my producer's. He evaluates the recommendations of our talent coordinators in terms of the types of guests our viewers will enjoy, but I do select a cohost I can be comfortable with.

FOR TANYA WELK, former singer with Lawrence Welk's orchestra

Your father-in-law said in this column he was hopeful you'd return to his show. Will you? —S.G., Santa Fe, N.M.

● I doubt it. I think I've outgrown that bubbly kind of music, although it has a vast audience, and it was great for me while it lasted. Since leaving the Welk band, I've performed in nightclubs and on TV as a "single" and with good results. My heart has always been in more contemporary music.

FOR DR. JOYCE BROTHERS, psychologist

Do you find that men are turned off by your intelligence? —T.U., Las Vegas, Nev.

● Something sure turns them off. I don't know whether it's too many brains or not enough sex appeal. Seems men never give me a second look. At Phyllis Diller's "102nd" birthday party a few years ago, a man dressed as a gargoyle (it was a costume bash) pinched me. I don't know who he was and can only assume that under the protection of anonymity he felt it was O.K. to make a pass. I loved every second of it.

FOR GEORGE GALLUP, pollster

Do you find that the public is cooperative when asked to give opinions? —S.T., Cocoa Beach, Fla.

● Most people like to give their views to our interviewers and, strangely enough, this desire isn't limited to the U.S. In the surveys that we make in the nations of the free world, we find people willing and often eager to tell about their worries, their hopes and their lives on issues which concern them. Individuals who do not cooperate usually have a good reason. They're running for a bus or have something burning on the stove.

PRO AND CON

Should The One-Dollar Bill Be Replaced With A Coin?

PRO Stella B. Hackel, director, Bureau of the Mint

Treasury Department studies indicate that the one-dollar-coin denomination is practical although the existing Eisenhower dollar coin does not circulate because of its size and weight. To address that problem, the proposed coin is only 10-percent larger in diameter than the quarter (same size relation as quarter to nickel) and 50-percent heavier (the current one-dollar coin is 400-percent heavier). More importantly, the fact that the coin will last about 12-times longer than the one-dollar note generates the primary savings. If the coins displace one-dollar notes in reasonable quantity, the savings could be hundreds of millions of dollars in production and related costs over the first 10 to 15 years of the program. The proposal does allow for a two-to three-year inventory of existing dollar coins to ease the transition for anyone affected.

Illustration by Hal Just

CON David L. Ganz, attorney and coinage expert

Replacement of dollar bills with dollar coins is preposterous. Even if Congress creates a new dollar coin (about the size of a quarter) it would still be too bulky and heavy to substitute for the paper dollars. With no dollar bill there would be virtually no paper currency below the five-dollar denomination. (We already know that the two-dollar bill does not circulate effectively.) Also, this presumably convenient coin has not been tested for consumer acceptance. Though the vending industry apparently welcomes the change, there is no machine now compatible to accept such a coin and conversion costs are high. Finally, few people have even 10 coins at a time in their pockets; it is not unusual to have eight bills. The reasons are clear: convenient size, foldability and lack of bulky weight.

ROCKY COMES TO DUBUQUE

"This town is such a perfect representative of where the strength of this country lies....Hollywood is a dream supported by people like this, and the day these people withdraw, the dream is over and we'll all go out and get an honest job." — Sylvester Stallone

Photos by Louis (The Greek) Psihoyos

By John McCormick

Here comes Sylvester Stallone, lean and mean, stampeding his zealous union strikers past foundries and factories that squat along the river, through air befouled by smoke stacks, into a choking cloud of police tear gas.

Wait a minute. Lovable Sylvester Stallone? The man who became the top box-office draw of 1977, when he starred in Rocky as a plodding boxer who finally got a shot at the world's heavyweight champion? That's right. The same guy who was a total unknown when he wrote, directed and starred in Rocky, which later won an Academy Award as Best Picture.

This, his newest picture, is called F.I.S.T., short for Federation of Interstate Truckers, and Stallone plays a downtrodden warehouse worker named Johnny Kovak, who catapults to union power in the Depression-wracked 1930's. Stallone as Kovak forges an unholy alliance with mobsters and blends idealism with vengeance. Two decades later, this proud but corrupted labor baron stands humbled by the Senate Rackets Committee and its keystone, Sen. Andrew Madison, played by Rod Steiger.

"I wanted F.I.S.T. to test myself, to see whether I was a one-character actor, a phony," says Stallone. "After people come out of a theater I think they're going to say, 'Geez, I didn't think he could do that.' Most people think I can only drool and act at the same time, play with a runny nose and sniffles and be punch-drunk. Now I think they'll say, 'Hey, this is quite a stretch. In Rocky he comes out playing a moron. Now he's playing a leader of men.'

"It's not like Rocky as an underdog," he continues. "Johnny is an underdog half the movie, and then he's an overdog in the end; he's up there looking down. Johnny made one mistake in his past, and he has to atone for it when it catches up with him years later. I think movie audiences will feel sorry for him."

As far as Stallone is concerned, this movie comes none too soon. For 18 months he has been saddled with the Rocky reputation, and now he's ready to move on. He's 31 now, and it's time to see whether there's more to him than his role as a romantic. And besides, he says, "It's such a big movie. I don't think I'll ever be able to do one like this again."

He may be right. F.I.S.T. is an $8 million gamble, the most expensive flick in United Artists' shooting schedule last year. But dollars didn't cause all the hoopla last summer when F.I.S.T. came to Dubuque, the home of canned hams and little old ladies.

Sylvester Stallone caused all the hoopla. And an eight-week filming stint that could have been a lousy blind date instead left the city all puckered up and begging for more. By the time it was over, the citizenry of 62,000 had supplanted its initial suspicion with a saucy case of wonderment.

Weeks before Stallone's arrival last May, dozens of antsy local fans would have sworn they'd seen him in this store, at that hotel or near those buildings. When he finally did show up, he tried to have a quiet drink in his hotel lounge the first night, but a high-school principal spied him and invited him to address a spring prom in an upstairs ballroom. Only after 90 frenzied minutes of autograph-signing, cheek-pecking and picture-posing could the actor retreat.

In the lobby, middle-aged matrons pleaded with a desk clerk, begging for Stallone's room number. "I'll do anything!" one of them said. "I've got to know! I've got to find him!"

Almost 1,000 local folks hired on as F.I.S.T. extras, gladly trading each 12-hour workday for $35 and a chance to watch Stallone up close. When the film company quietly announced that applications would be accepted for "a limited number of women's roles" in the mostly male picture, 800 hopeful starlets stormed a casting office, and the two bewildered employment agents had to summon reinforcements.

Many extras, spurred on by the joy-juice of Hollywood's presence, also became ardent disciples of producer-director Norman Jewison, whose 14 films have earned 26 Academy Award nominations and nine Oscars. Jewison stood with his camera crew day after day, smiling and nodding as his band of extras barreled through the movie's strike and riot scenes. Real-life business executives, housewives and blue-collar workers ran side by side, delivering their pandemonium right on cue. During one sequence, an overenthused gang of strikers even trashed a truck that sat totally out of the camera's eye.

"These people are a joy," Jewison said during the making of F.I.S.T. "They're open. They behave like real people in front of a camera because they are real. Back home, we'd be dealing with Hollywood extras, and they are not real people."

In fact, it was Jewison's obsession with realism that brought his film company from Hollywood to Dubuque for location shooting. The movie is actually set in Cleveland of the 1930's, but the search through 40 American cities, including Cleveland itself, turned up too many dilapidated warehouses in neighborhoods speared by modern freeways.

Dubuque, despite its small size, offered a vacant industrial complex suitable for several sequences. And there was a bonus: since the city has one of the nation's oldest cable television systems, audiences won't see Stallone gazing at horizons dotted with troublesome antennas that didn't exist in the 1930's.

There were a few problems, however. Because Dubuque has clearer air than Cleveland had during the Depression, filmmakers secured permission from the Iowa Department of Environmental Quality to create pollution with smudge pots burning mineral oil.

Scores of other show-biz details accompanied the crew of 100 Hollywood types who assembled between the cornfields of Iowa and the Mississippi River. Crucial settings had to be nailed down with airtight contracts. Food and lodging had to be provided. Courier service had to be arranged to fly each day's film to

Los Angeles for overnight processing and then fly it back to Dubuque the next day. Props, including a fleet of 40-year-old vehicles, had to be gathered.

And virtually everything had to be artificially aged, most often with a special paint compound made from evaporated milk. Even the movie's Cleveland Police Department paddy wagons were exact replicas of 1938 Cleveland police vans depicted in old photo files, right down to the paint jobs and the lettering.

As the filming of F.I.S.T. progressed, all of this middle-American fervor began to affect Stallone. He met with fans almost daily on the set. "I think this town is such a perfect representative of where the strength of this country lies," he said one afternoon as the girls squealed and the cameras clicked. "The people on the West Coast think they're where it's at, the people on the East Coast think they're where it's at, but it's not true. Hollywood needs Dubuque — Dubuque doesn't need Hollywood. That's the way it is, and that's the way it's always going to be. We need these people.

"Hollywood is a dream supported by people like this, and the day these people withdraw, the dream is over and we'll all go out and get an honest job." He pondered, smiled and added, "Which is kind of a frightening thought, when you think of it."

The words were taken kindly in Dubuque, a place most Americans view as a pleasant eccentric, wandering through the ages with one hoof in the bucket. But Dubuque also profited mightily from its tryst with F.I.S.T. Perhaps $2 million of the movie's budget was spent there, and, more importantly, the making of the picture became an evangelical sort of project for the populace.

Wherever F.I.S.T. went, it seemed, loyal crowds popped up like acres of wide-faced sunflowers. Before long, the townsfolk began to appreciate what movie-making is all about. On one warm evening, on a street corner in the Flats of Dubuque, 2,000 people stood so quietly that you could hear the adrenaline pumping through them.

Two nether-world figures from the Depression, Kovak and one of his warehouse pals, came trudging down a railroad track. Lunch buckets in hand, they clowned their way toward the house, bellyaching about their jobs. It kept the crowd riveted behind the police barricades, obedient to the calls for silence. They studied what they saw, and when they learned to tell a good take from a bad one, they applauded the good. Not loud applause, mind you, but respectful.

There were other human touches as well. Local brewmaster Joe Pickett Sr. donated free beer to crew members, and they returned his friendship by gracing Pickett's Brewery — once America's tiniest — with a 40-foot mural of the company's beer label. Old Joe nearly cried.

The same crew members erected Hollywood and Vine signs outside their offices, and Stallone joined a pack of actors and actresses who put their footprints in wet concrete at the nearby Blue Moon Inn, the crew's favorite oasis.

The Blue Moon itself drew so much publicity that part-owner Pam Schurbon was invited to audition for photo spreads in both Playboy and Penthouse magazines. She declined.

Stallone found time to be Model Citizen Number One. He stopped work one night to chat with Iowa's governor and toyed with the assembled civic leaders by telling them, "Dubuque has been ideal for what we wanted — a Depression."

Despite all this hoopla, Stallone and Jewison brought F.I.S.T. stammering to life, take by take, scene by scene. United Artists is banking that all the effort will pay off.

Stallone says he knows his film future may be riding on public reaction to Johnny Kovak, but he thinks his performance is up to snuff. "I really believe that if I had lived during the times when F.I.S.T. was going down, I would have been doing what I'm doing in this movie."

Stallone came through the filming tired but unscathed. The motion picture, with all its rampaging riot and strike scenes, produced just one casualty worthy of hospitalization: Sister Catherine Hickey had climbed to the attic of her convent, an ideal spot to watch shots in a small cemetery below, but her rubber-soled shoes snagged on a patch of rough flooring and she fell and broke her wrist.

Stallone and the film company eventually moved on to Los Angeles and Washington, D.C., for final shooting, but the memory of their visit still hasn't quite left Dubuque. At an auction after their departure 300 bidders huddled around leftover props, trucks and trinkets.

Buyers coughed up $25 and more for whiskey barrels Stallone had touched, and a draftsman who had worked on the picture muttered, "The guys from Hollywood would go nuts if they could see this. It's unreal what people are paying." In a fit of delicacy, auctioneers kept just one item off the block: a pair of baby-blue undershorts salvaged from Stallone's dressing room.

Jewison, thankful for the special attention his troops received, talked United Artists into scheduling the movie's world premiere engagement in Dubuque. And local burghers, equally thankful for his efforts, promptly redoubled their determination to lure other producers away from their California studio lots.

For now, though, the makers of F.I.S.T. are gone from Dubuque, and springtime rainwater languishes in the cement-cast footprints of the stars. Just down the block from the scene of mobs and explosions an occasional truck now hauls industrial foam to be sliced into seat cushions.

But all is not bleak. Graffiti on a nearby plant still gushes, "I love your body, Sylvester Stallone!" FW

Average U.S. Home May Soon Cost $78,000

The average price of a typical American home could reach the almost incredible level of $78,000 within five years. This startling information was released in early March 1977 in a report by the Joint Center for Urban Studies of Harvard University and the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. The price of housing in the past few years has jumped twice as fast as family incomes. Contributing to this rapid rise in the price have been inflation, government regulations, and periodic shortages of mortgage money — all of which has caused a sharp decline in housing starts since 1972.

WHY THE MASTERS IS A CLASSIC SPORTING EVENT

"When something dramatic occurs, great roars soar through the Georgia pine trees. Old Masters-goers read these roars — 'Arnold just birdied the 12th,' 'Jack just knocked it on in two at 15' — and they are invariably correct."

By Jack Whitaker

Drawing by Elizabeth Van Italie

Green is the color of the Masters. It is the bright green of the fairways at Augusta National, stretching over the rolling countryside, giving way to the darker green of the Georgia pines and magnolia trees rising into the blue spring skies. It is a green that is relieved only by the white and pink of the dogwoods and the red and white of the azaleas and an occasional flash of scarlet and flowering peach. It is a green that overwhelms the senses and declares quite simply that winter has waned, that spring is here, that spring is moving north. That is one reason the Masters is special. It is a reaffirmation that we have all survived another winter. And, of course, green is the color of the coveted jacket awarded to the winner.

The Masters also is special because it is the only major golf championship played on the same course at the same time every year. Hence, the Masters has a continuity and tradition stronger than other tournaments. There is a sense of reunion at Augusta. There are few places in the world more pleasant than the lawn in front of the clubhouse in the late afternoon. As the shadows begin to lengthen among the round tables with green and white umbrellas, a visitor can look out at the putting green and watch the early finishers work at their trade.

And then, looking around him, he will see the best golfers of Japan, Great Britain, Australia, South America and Europe. There will be tournament chairmen representing the PGA tour, members of the United States Golf Association, journalists from around the world, golf-club salesmen quietly enjoying the scene and an occassional movie or television personality. And, finally, there will be the living history of golf passing before your eyes. Because the Masters, alone among American tournaments, grants lifetime exemptions to its winners, almost all previous winners return every year to Augusta. Therefore, on this late afternoon on the lawn in front of the clubhouse, our visitor can see Gene Sarazen, who 42 years ago this week, gave the Masters its first legend when he holed out a 220-yard four-wood on the par five 15th hole for a double eagle. That shot enabled him to tie Craig Wood, whom he defeated in the playoff. With that shot, the Masters began building its history. The visitor also will see Ralph Guldahl, winner in 1939, Jimmy Demaret, Byron Nelson, Sam Snead and Arnold Palmer, and if they finished their rounds, Tom Watson and Jack Nicklaus.

This is no wax museum. The tournament is alive and very much a moving tapestry of the game of golf in America, all displayed on this green lawn in the spring afternoon amid the sounds of clinking ice cubes and friendly, muted laughter.

Yes, the Masters is green, and it has a tremendous sense of history about it. But it is first of all a golf tournament. Unlike the Super Bowl, which sometimes is obscured by social activities, whatever occurs during this April week in Augusta will flow directly from the tournament. All conversations are about golf and golfers. Everyone in attendance knows the game and the players, and the communications system is the best of any tournament in the world. There are two main sources of information. From the clubhouse lawn you can see the large scoreboard that stands between the 10th and 18th fairways. The red figures indicate below-par scores, the green, even par and the black numbers, over par. With this simple color coding, one can read the scoreboard as baseball fans read the box scores.

The other source of information is sound, and it comes from the galleries that station themselves in strategic positions around the course. Augusta National was the first golf course built with the spectator as well as the player in mind. There are mounds situated in places that give the paying customer a choice of two or three views without moving. Those who do not use the mounds follow a particular group of players or simply march out in the morning to their favorite hole and stay there all day. The course is well populated every day, and when something dramatic or unusual occurs, the galleries let our visitor on the clubhouse lawn know about it. Great full-throated roars go up into the Georgia skies, soaring up through the pine trees till they reach full crescendo, and then they fall swiftly away like the sound of a whistle on a fast moving train. Old Masters-goers read those roars — "Arnold just birdied the 12th," "Jack just knocked it on in two at 15," "Watson must have eagled number two" — and they are invariably correct.

The Masters has reached its present state of preeminence because a good idea was translated into reality. Bob Jones and Dr. Alister MacKenzie, the noted golf architect, laid out the course so they could take full advantage of the topography that had been a nursery. (The course opened in 1934.) They made the greens large and undulating, the fairways wide. There is little rough. In short, Augusta National penalizes the bad shot and rewards the good shot. For example, the four par fives, with a decent drive, are reachable in two shots. But should a player elect to go for the green in two and not hit the perfect shot, he could easily end up with a bogey or worse. The fairways are kept short and the greens fast, and if the weather is not being an absolute bore, the conditions are exactly what they should be for a major championship — perfect.

If Bob Jones was the soul of the Masters, Clifford Roberts was its head and hands. As the organizing force behind Augusta National and the tournament, he was a brilliant, feisty, dictatorial force that built the Masters into a major sporting event. For 43 years he ruled with an iron hand in a velvet glove, driven by an ideal to make the Masters the best tournament in the world. His ability to change, to innovate, to always seek ways to make the tournament better brought the Masters to its present situation of prominence.

Innovations under his leadership include the aforementioned scoreboards, spectator mounds and the roping off of the fairways. He had the concession stands painted green and set in back of bushes or in a stand of trees so they would not impinge upon the beauty of the course. The considerable amount of permanent television equipment also is set back and painted green. Even the trash baskets are green. Many tournaments are borrowing these ideas.

Clifford Roberts died on the Augusta National grounds several months ago. This will be the first Masters without his presence, but that presence will be felt, as much as Bob Jones's presence is still felt. The momentum of "Robert's Rules," the bible by which the club and this tournament are run, should carry through for many years.

What can we expect from the final round of play at the Masters this year? What can we expect from a tournament that has given us a thrilling playoff between Ben Hogan and Byron Nelson, a playoff between Ben Hogan and Sam Snead? What can we expect from a tournament that was almost stolen by amateur Bill Joe Patton in 1954 and by amateur Ken Venturi in 1956? What can we expect from a tournament that provided one of the greatest competitions ever seen in the sport in 1975, when Johnny Miller, Tom Weiskopf and Jack Nicklaus battled it out on the final day? Even if one player goes out in front and wins wire to wire, as Ray Floyd did two years ago, it will still be a first-rate sporting occasion, rich in tradition, impeccable in ambience. It is one of the better weeks of the year. It's Masters week; it's green: it's spring. FW

BLUE DIAMOND ALMONDS

Blue Diamond
California Almond Growers Exchange
Sacramento, California 95813

February 24, 1977

Gentlemen:

I would like to take the time to express my extreme satisfaction with your product, Blue Diamond Almonds. They are so convenient for parties or just for a snack! They go well with practically every kind of snack food available. It is virtually impossible to tire of these tasty nuts because of the various flavors that your company universally produces. Just the aroma of a can of those almonds really makes my mouth water!

I also appreciate the fact that each and every almond is fresh to the bottom of the can, and because of the plastic lid, they remain as fresh as the day I opened it! In our household you're literally down over the popcorn, potato chips and pretzels! Blue Diamond, you're great stuff!

Sincerely,
Susan Kawaguchi

HOW MOTHERS SHAPE THEIR DAUGHTERS' LIVES

"The most obvious example we have of how to be a wife is Mother. She is an unavoidable model."

Reanne Rubenstein

Nancy Friday, author of My Mother/My Self, with a family portrait.

By Pam Lambert

Even if you left home 20 years ago and are now living halfway across the country, your mother is probably still having an important influence on your life. Maybe you're arguing with your daughter about her makeup and suddenly realize you've had that debate before — with your own mother. Or perhaps your husband says that you're just like your mother, and you cringe.

These are just some of the surface manifestations of the pervasive influence mothers have on their daughters' lives says Nancy Friday, author of the new best seller, My Mother/My Self. Friday says, "The common concept is that it is a girl's relationship with her father that determines her later happiness with men, but I thought, 'Hey, what about Mother?' Mother is the bread and butter of life, and Daddy's the dessert. It's Mom who raises us."

My Mother/My Self combines Friday's interviews with more than 200 women across the country and her reflections about her own childhood with her widowed mother and sister in Charleston, S.C. "I didn't write the book like a textbook; I wrote it from my guts," she says. Even the numerous psychiatrists, psychologists and other professionals quoted are not dispassionate — the majority are mothers with daughters and discuss their personal relationships.

Five-feet-ten without the black leather boots she was wearing, Friday has a voice as striking as her appearance — deep, powerful and with the clear diction of the actress she originally set out to be.

FAMILY WEEKLY: Is it true, "Like mother, like daughter"?

FRIDAY: Yes. Of course, there's the conscious imitation of our mothers, the ways you wanted to be like her. But you didn't mean to be such an anxious person like she was, and you suddenly hear that voice and you think, Uh, oh, where did I hear that voice before? and you realize it was her voice that you didn't used to like.

I think the explanation for why this happens is fascinating. If we never feel separate from our mother, our identity is so wound up in her that we feel uncomfortable when we dislike things about her. So rather than hate our mother for doing something we don't like and risk losing her, it is much safer to adopt these habits and to hate ourselves for them.

FW: How does a woman's relationship with her mother affect her choice of men?

FRIDAY: Well, for instance, if you had a mother who was just not emotionally there for you, you may become the kind of woman who all her life is looking for someone who will be the mother to her that she never had. If your mother was overly possessive, you may run away when you find a very warm, smothering man.

FW: How does the mother-daughter relationship influence marriage?

FRIDAY: Ah, that's when the resemblances really begin. The most obvious example we have of how to be a wife is Mother. She wasn't much of an example when we were single because we didn't know her when she was single. But she's an unavoidable model when we marry.

FW: What effect do you think not having children had on your writing the book?

FRIDAY: I would have been in the middle of a sandwich between my mother and my child. I couldn't have stood it.

FW: Why don't men have the same problem of separating from their mothers that women do?

FRIDAY: If your son is a momma's boy, you'll be labeled a bad mother, and no one wants that. So early on, mothers begin to train their boys essentially to leave them. But you will not be judged a bad mother if your daughter is still tied to you later on. On the contrary, society says, "Oh, isn't that nice, look how close they are."

FW: What effect would you like your book to have on women?

FRIDAY: I suppose to feel better about themselves, to be more accepting — and to realize they aren't the only ones that have these problems. FW

STOO-PENDOUS DR. SEUSS!

And NOW comes an act of Enormous Enormance! No former performer's performed this performance!

By Lee Bennett Hopkins

Although the above couplet describes Sneelock, a character in If I Ran the Circus, it could well be used to hail the book's creator — the one and only STOO-pendous Dr. Seuss.

Seventy-four years ago in Springfield, Mass., Theodor Seuss Geisel, inventor of sneetches, grinches, gacks, ooblecks, nurkles and nutches, as well as the equally fantastical Drumm-Tummied Snumm, the Hippo-no-Bungus from Hippo-no-Hungus and the Tufted Mazurka from the Isle of Yerka, opened his eyes to the world. And the world has never been the same.

Seuss. The mere mention of his name starts juices flowing through the mouths of millions of children throughout the world. For the past 41 years, Seuss has been writing and illustrating books for children — a career that began by sheer accident.

"I had no lofty reason whatsoever for writing a book for kids," he says. "In the fall of 1936, while aboard the Kungsholm on a long rainy crossing of the Atlantic, I amused myself by putting words to the rhythm of the ship's engine. The words turned out to be, And to Think That I Saw It on Mulberry Street. Once ashore, I drew pictures to go with it. The book, my first, was rejected by 29 publishers before Vanguard Press accepted it.

Following Mulberry Street, other Seuss titles poured forth in rapid succession, and characters such as Bartholomew Cubbins, Thidwick, the Big Hearted Moose, and Horton, the elephant who hatches an elephant-bird, captured the hearts of children — and their parents — everywhere.

A recent figure shows that close to 80 million copies of Seuss's now 40-plus books are in print. The count makes him one of the most popular children's author-illustrator's in history.

But it was in 1957 that Seuss turned around the entire genre of literature for children. In the mid-50's, John Hersey wrote an explosive article for Life magazine telling the nation the reasons "why Johnny can't read." In the article he urged that the entire educational system be turned over to Dr. Seuss.

Random House contacted him, sent him a basic word list of 300 one-syllable words and asked that he write a book for 5- to 6-year-olds based upon this limited vocabulary.

"I kept reading and rereading the list in desperation," he comments. "I finally took the first two words that rhymed — cat and hat."

With The Cat in the Hat, a book containing 223 words, he not only sparked a volcanic eruption in the children's book field but also created a scintillating, whimsical and witty character that is as familiar and popular as Winnie the Pooh, Alice in Wonderland and Peter Pan.

To top himself — and the Cat — he works endlessly at his craft, polishing each line, making innumerable sketches for a drawing before he is satisfied. He estimates that he writes and draws more than 1,000 pages for each of his 64-page books.

"Writing books for children is hard work, a lot harder than most people realize," he says. "And it never gets easier. The most important thing about me is that I work slavishly — write, rewrite, reject and polish incessantly. I know my stuff all looks like it was rattled off in 23 seconds, but every word and every sentence is a struggle."

His entire purpose is to get children over the fear of books and make them want to read. "I am trying to capture an audience," he explains. "Most every child learning to read has problems, and I am just saying to them that reading is fun."

Seuss lives in what he describes as a "remodeled and augmented derelict observation tower" on a tip of a mountain in La Jolla, Calif. He shares the place with his second wife, Audrey, and two stepdaughters.

Antony Di Gesu

Many of his readers are surprised that the good doctor has never had any children of his own. "You have 'em, I'll amuse 'em," he snaps.

At times, droves of children troop by his house totally unabashed by the small sign which reads, "Beware of the Cat!" Some ask him if he really is Dr. Seuss. "Yeah," he tells them. But they don't believe him.

"They expect Dr. Seuss to be a baggy pants character with big whiskers and a nose that lights up," he says. "Instead, I come to the door, a normal old poop, and the kids say, 'Go on, you aren't Dr. Seuss.' Although that's the way I like children to talk, it can be embarrassing."

Seuss balks at the word retirement. "I've got more things to do now than ever," he says. "I'm writing, illustrating, serving as president of Beginner Books, producing animated half-hour television specials. Television is the biggest, the most exciting, medium there is."

Seuss books needn't be "sold" to children. They continue to be the most dog-eared volumes in any library. And his award-winning television specials, such as How the Grinch Stole Christmas and The Lorax, are destined to become prime-time classics.

Recently a 4-year-old told me that the good doctor is her most favorite person in the whole, wide world.

"Why?" I asked.

"Because he's good, and he knows what I like, and he's Mother Goose's son, you know."

Not quite. But at least Seuss and Goose rhyme — and they both rhyme swell-well! FW

Grass Seed Will Never Grow A Lawn Like This!

From Part Shade To Full Sun!

Save Now. Special Introductory Offer. Up To 200 Amazoy Zoysia Grass Plugs FREE

FULLY DROUGHT AND WEAR RESISTANT. Amazoy lawns take cookouts, parties, lawn furniture. You could even play football on it and not get your feet muddy. Rarely (if ever!) needs watering.

Grass Seed Is For The Birds! Zoysia Saves Time, Work, Money

Amazoy is the Trade Mark Registered U.S. Patent Office for our Meyer Z-52 Zoysia Grass.

By Mike Sandin

Years ago I was like nearly everyone else with a lawn. I worried about it more than any other thing around the house.

Then things changed. My company obtained a new grass just released by the U.S. Dept. of Agriculture. In honor of the explorer, Frank Meyer, it was named Meyer Z-52 Zoysia Grass.

We received only a small amount of this Grass — enough to plant test plots in our Nursery Farm.

From that small beginning, these few precious clumps of Zoysia Grass spread until they built a lawn so thick and beautiful that visitors stopped to admire it.

We Tell People, "Walk On It"

Instead of saying "Keep Off The Grass," we invited visitors to walk on it. It was an unforgetable experience for them — like walking on a thick pile carpet.

After walking on it, visitors learned that Amazoy Zoysia turf was crabgrass-proof, and the next question never failed: "How can I get some?"

Other Lawns Burn Out

Now, grass is my company's business; but it was a long time before an order of Amazoy Zoysia Grass was accepted. First we wanted to see how good this grass was. We really found out!

One summer the heat was so great you could fry eggs on the highway. Daily the sun blazed from cloudless skies; the drought worsened; whole ponds dried up. Meanwhile crabgrass flourished and took over lawns by the thousands.

IT RESISTS DROUGHT, STAYS GREEN THRU HEAT WAVES

Through it all, our deep-rooted Amazoy Zoysia stood out like a green island in a brown wasteland.

Thrives In Poor Soils

When I planted it in sandy, clay soils and sub-soil, it took hold and thrived. Other grass in the same soils struggled and died.

I compared it to other grasses in the winter, too. Ordinary grasses may die or turn sparse and scraggly due to frost and winter, but in such weather my Amazoy Zoysia merely went off its green color . . . it stayed so thick you could walk on it and not get your feet muddy.

Through zero-cold winters and blistering summer droughts . . . through onslaughts by weeds and diseases . . . our Meyer Zoysia had proved it could "take it." It had earned the right to be called AMAZOY, our Trade Mark published coast to coast and border to border.

HOW AMAZOY LAWNS CHOKE OUT CRABGRASS AND WEEDS ALL SUMMER LONG!

If costly chemicals fail to control crabgrass for good, how does Amazoy Zoysia do it? Your deep-rooted, fully established Amazoy lawn grows so thick and luxurious that crabgrass seeds just do not germinate!

Your lawn chokes out not only crabgrass, but other weeds all summer long — year after year.

You will never need to spend a cent on crabgrass and weed killers again. So if you have wanted to get away from costly and dangerous lawn herbicides, Amazoy is your answer.

Your Own Supply Of Plug Transplants

Your established Amazoy lawn provides you with plugs for other areas as you may desire.

HERE'S WHY AMAZOY PLUGS ASSURE SUCCESS WHERE OTHER GRASSES FAIL

Due to Amazoy's national reputation, you may find other grasses offered that sound like it. But Amazoy's pre-cut plugs look different, ARE different. Our plugs are grown exclusively for transplanting. They are winter-hardened under professional supervision — for 3 full years! — before we take them from the soil.

Each sturdy plug is cut to contain precisely the right balance between soil, root and surface growth. When they come to you, they're ready to grow!

NEVER NEEDS REPLACEMENT

AMAZOY Saves Money, Cut Work. Never a seed to sow again with Amazoy! Year after year your lawn grows thicker, like a deep pile carpet. Defies enemies that kill other lawns.

PEOPLE WRITE TO ME . . .

"Mrs. Harry Winslow writes to me from the heart of wintry New England:

". . . How pleased we are with our Zoysia lawn! We had a lawn that was a disgrace. My husband used weed killers for every known weed, but next season new weeds sprang up. We dug the lawn up twice and reseeded before we learned about Amazoy. It does everything you say."

"Mowed It 2 Times," Writes Woman . . .

Mrs. M. R. Miller writes me how her lawn "is the envy of all who see it. When everybody's lawns around here are brown from drought ours just stays green as ever. I've never watered it, only when I put the plugs in . . . last summer we had it mowed (2) times. Another thing, we never have to pull any weeds — it's just wonderful!"

Wonderful? Yes, Amazoy Zoysia IS wonderful! Plant it now and you'll cut mowing by ⅔ . . . never have another weed problem all summer, for the rest of your life!

PLUG AMAZOY INTO OLD LAWN, NEW GROUND OR NURSERY AREA

Just set Amazoy plugs into hole in ground like a cork in a bottle. Plant 1 foot apart, checkerboard style.

When planted in existing lawn areas, plugs will spread to drive out old, unwanted growth including weeds.

Easy planting instructions with order.

AMAZOY LAWNS CUT WATERING. CUT MOWING BY ⅔

Your drought-resistant Amazoy lawn not only cuts your water bills, it cuts your work in other ways: it cuts pushing a noisy mower under a broiling summer sun by ⅔. It resists blight, disease, most insects. IT WILL NOT WINTER-KILL TO 30° BELOW ZERO. After killing frosts, just goes off its green color, regains fresh new beauty every Spring – a true perennial that ends re-seeding forever!

THERE IS NO SEED

Reports U.S. Dept. of Agric., referring to Meyer Z-52 Zoysia. Experts advise planting only live grass to be sure of getting winter-hardy grass perf. by U.S. Govt., Meyer Z-52.

For Slopes, Play Areas, Bare Spots

Or correct problem areas such as slopes where Amazoy halts erosion, in hard-to cover spots, around swim pools, in play areas, etc.

NO SOD

Sod of ordinary grass carries with it the same problems as seed — such as weeds, disease, frequent mowing, burning out, etc. Amazoy is sold ONLY in pre-cut plugs . . . never a slab of ordinary sod you must cut up in order to plant.

PATENTED STEP-ON PLUGGER IS . . . . FREE WITH ORDERS OF 500 PLUGS OR MORE

Amazoy exclusive! No one else can offer you this patented 2-way plugger. Saves bending, time, work. Light, rugged, invaluable for transplanting. Cuts away competing growth as it digs plug holes.

MORE THAN A HALF-BILLION PLUGS SOLD, OUTSELLS OTHERS 10 TO 1!

If you don't want to take another chance with lawn disappointment, switch to the grass that assures your success: Amazoy. ### Isn't It Time YOU Switched To The Grass Making Others Obsolete?

If it isn't Amazoy, you're not getting the plugs that made Zoysia famous.

PEOPLE QUIZ / By John E. Gibson

INSIGHTS INTO LOVE AND ROMANCE

TRUE OR FALSE?

1. How romantic you are is likely to depend on your sex and your marital status.
2. Women are more likely than men to reveal their innermost feelings in romantic relationships.
3. Most men believe that they care more for their girlfriends than their girlfriends care for them.
4. Most women have romantic fantasies.
5. Love can't be measured.
6. Verbal expression of love is vital to a happy marriage.

ANSWERS

1. True. In a United States International University study, men and women aged 18 to 70 were given a psychological test designed to reveal attitudes toward love. The researchers concluded that "males were significantly more romantic in their orientation toward love than females and that married subjects were significantly more romantic in their love orientation than single subjects."

2. True. Psychological studies at Purdue University show that in a romantic situation the woman is more likely to "open the door to her secret self" than the man, who was found to be much more selective and discriminating in what he revealed about himself in a love relationship. Other investigations have shown that men are less inclined than women to disclose their inner feelings in situations that have nothing to do with romance.

3. False. Studies of dating couples conducted at the University of Illinois showed that "males believed that their partners cared more for them than they did in return." Females, on the other hand, perceived no difference in caring.

4. True. In a University of Utah study of 19- to 45-year-old women, 99 percent of the subjects reported that they entertained romantic fantasies. Studies at Northwestern University showed that women who were most given to such fantasies tended to have the most fulfilling relationship with their spouses.

5. False. In a Purdue University study, love was measured by a "Love Scale," which is described as follows: "This scale was developed by interviewing approximately 200 people and asking them to describe their love relationships. From these interviews were derived items that were subsequently administered to 1,200 subjects of varying ages. The result of this process is a Love Scale containing 200 items describing various aspects of love relationships: 1) verbal expression of affection, 2) self-disclosure of intimate facts about oneself, 3) tolerance for the less-desirable characteristics of the loved person, 4) concern, encouragement, moral support of the loved person, 5) feelings you have for the loved person, but which you have not expressed." This scale has been found to be highly effective in measuring the amount and type of love present in romantic relationships.

6. True. In the Purdue study, groups of happy and unhappy married couples were compared in their expression of love by means of the Love Scale. The groups consisted of couples from a variety of social, educational and occupational levels. The people ranged in age from 21 to 55 and in length of marriage from one to 33 years. Findings: "Functional [happy] husbands and wives express more affection to each other verbally; they disclose more personal facts about themselves to each other; and they provide more psychological encouragement and moral support to each other. The dysfunctional [unhappy] married couples feel much of the same affection for each other, but they do not verbally express it to each other. [They also] reveal fewer personal facts about themselves to their spouses, and they provide much less moral support and encouragement to each other."

Fitness is my business

I RECOMMEND BULLWORKER® BECAUSE IT'S FAST, IT'S EASY AND IT REALLY WORKS!

Bob Breton says "I earn my living by keeping top executives in peak physical shape. My clients insist on maximum results with minimum time and effort. I recommend Bullworker because it's fast, it's easy and it really works."

Most men know they're not getting enough exercise to keep their bodies in shape.

Ten years as a fitness coach has taught me one important fact: most men will not stick with a training program long enough for it to do them any good, unless the training is fast, easy and shows results right away.

Bullworker gets a top score on all three counts:

—it's fast: each exercise takes only 7 seconds and the complete workout can be done in about five minutes

—it's easy: any man between 15 and 65 in good general health can perform the full program without getting tired

—you see your results right from the very first day on the built-in Power-meter gauge. After two to three weeks of regular training, most men can expect to measure an extra inch or two of muscle on their shoulders, chest and biceps—and an inch or two less flab around the middle.

And that's just the start: there are specialized exercises for building-up or trimming-down any part of your body you want to. What's more since Bullworker training is progressive, you perform better each time. Yet the training always seems easy since with every workout your strength increases by about 1%—that's an increase of up to 50% in just three months, and I've seen many men go on to double and even triple their strength. For my money, Bullworker is the most advanced home trainer on the market. I use it and recommend it to any man who wants to get back in top shape fast.

LAST-MINUTE TAX TIPS

In your rush to beat the April 17th deadline, be sure you don't miss these often-overlooked deductions.

By Bob Rosenblatt

Income-tax time is a painful season, but the sting will be a bit easier to tolerate this year.

The IRS forms are shorter and easier to read, fewer calculations are required. But despite the simplifications, preparing a tax return is still a difficult chore. Here is a guide to the tax forms and a listing of helpful deductions commonly overlooked.

The first decision focuses on the appropriate form to use, the short 1040A or the long 1040. Use 1040A if you meet all these conditions: total income was $20,000 or less ($40,000 or less for a married couple filing a joint return); you do not itemize deductions; you received no more than $400 in interest or $400 in dividends.

Certain taxpayers may qualify for the 1040A but should use the long form instead. You need the long form to take advantage of the child-care credit, to get a tax break for alimony payments or to receive the special credit granted to people 65 and older.

Don't forget these tips that might apply to you:

Earned Income Credit. The tax system offers a special break for people with families and an income below $8,000 a year. You qualify if you supported in your home a child who was under 19 or a full-time student or disabled and dependent at any age. The credit is 10 percent of your earned income up to $4,000, for a maximum figure of $400. The credit declines as income rises.

The credit is subtracted from your tax liability. If you owe $300, for example, and have an earned-income credit of $400, you will get a $100 refund. If you owe no taxes at all, you will get a $400 check from the Government.

Child-Care Credit. A taxpayer working full-time or part-time gets help with the expenses of child care, whether the money goes for a baby sitter, a day care center or a nursery school. The credit is equal to 20 percent of the costs, up to a maximum credit of $400 for one child, with a limit of $800 for two or more children. As with the earned-income credit, this credit is subtracted directly from the taxes you owe.

Elderly Taxpayer Credit. This helps retired people with taxable income other than Social Security or railroad retirement system benefits. It can range up to $375 for a single person or $562.50 for a married couple. The credit is applied against your tax.

Alimony. These payments were itemized deductions in past years. Now, alimony payments are "adjustments" to income. You subtract them from your taxable income even if you take the standard deduction.

Medical Expenses. Half the cost of health-insurance premiums qualify as an itemized deduction, up to a maximum of $150. Many taxpayers overlook this deduction because they think they get deductions only for medical bills greater than 3 percent of their income. But the 3-percent rule doesn't apply to the first portion of health-insurance payments.

Selling a House. If you're 65 or older, you get a bigger tax benefit when you sell your house. Profits are tax free if the selling price was $35,000 or less, adjusted for selling costs and other expenses.

Business Mileage. If you use a car in your work, you can deduct all travel costs according to a Treasury mileage-allowance table instead of keeping detailed records on gasoline purchases, repairs and depreciation.

Sales Taxes. Use the table in your long form 1040 to calculate sales taxes in your state as an itemized deduction.

List all your legitimate deductions and use all available credits. While doing this, watch the numbers. Mistakes in arithmetic can be the downfall of an otherwise meticulous taxpayer. FW

American Camping Association

How To Select A Summer Camp

Do you want to send your child to camp but don't really know how to select one? If so, these tips from the Am. Camping Ass'n. should help.

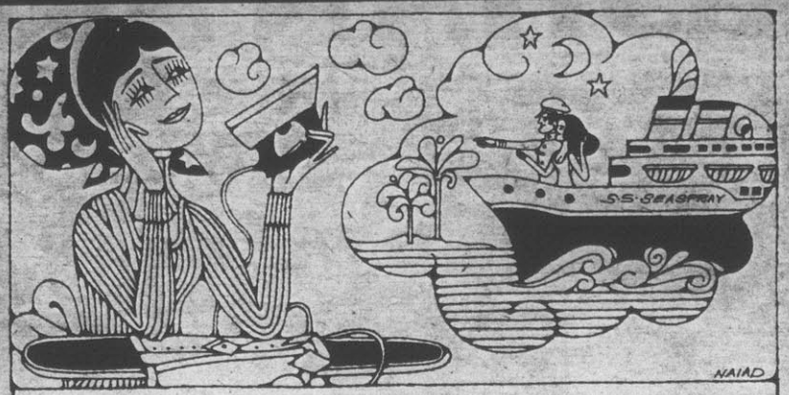

Before you even read a brochure, the ACA advises evaluating your child's needs. Is he or she ready to leave home? Has the child been prepared by short stays away from home? If not, a day camp might be a good choice. You also should consider whether your child has any special needs, such as discipline, or requires consideration because of a physical condition. Do you and the child want a general camping experience, or is there some particular interest, such as tennis or drama, that he would like to pursue?

After you've narrowed your choices by getting recommendations from friends and by carefully reading camp brochures, arrange an appointment with the camp dir. If the camp is nearby, try to have the interview at the camp site so you can evaluate the facilities.

Since the dir. is responsible for hiring the staff and making most arrangements, you'll want to determine whether he is the kind of person you'd like to be responsible for your child. Is camping or some related work his full-time interest?

What are the qualifications of the staff? The ACA recommends that counselors be 18 or older and that there be 1 counselor for every 5 campers age 6 and under. For 7-and 8-year-olds there should be a counselor for every 6 children, and for those 9 through 14, there should be a counselor for every 8 youngsters.

Has the camp passed a health inspection if one is required locally? Does the camp have a clean and quiet infirmary with at least 1 registered nurse in attendance? If the camp is ACA-approved, it will conform to certain minimum health and safety standards.

How Daydreaming Can Help You

Daydreaming can be good for you says Dr. Philip L. Taylor, an asst. prof. of psychosocial science at Penn. State Univ. "Most people who let themselves daydream are often refreshed, stimulated and renewed when they come back to what they are doing. For many people, it is analogous to relaxation and meditation."

Another benefit of daydreaming, says Taylor, is that it allows us to sort out things in our minds. "Many people work out solutions to problems while daydreaming."

The only people Taylor doesn't encourage to daydream are those who find themselves preoccupied with obsessional fears. In this case, Taylor advises seeking professional help.

What should you do if your child appears to spend a lot of time daydreaming? "I wouldn't do anything unless it is interfering with the child's activities," says Taylor.

Taylor says if the child seems preoccupied, you might ask him in a friendly way what he's thinking about, but don't press. "Children need to have some freedom and private thoughts of their own," he says.

It's Becoming Harder To Make Friends

Making and keeping friends is increasingly difficult because of changes in our society says a Purdue Univ. psychiatrist. "We live in a society that is relatively mobile — here today, gone in a year," says Dr. John Wilms, dir. of Mental Health Services at the university's health center.

In addition to mobility, Wilms says the increase in 2-job families also has contributed to problems in maintaining friendships. "In the past, much of the social life of the family depended on the woman of the house," he says. "Now, as women are increasingly employed, this is going by the wayside."

Easy On Your Eyes

Do you spend a lot of time reading, drafting or sewing? If so, these suggestions should help you minimize eyestrain and judge if you have sufficient light.

- For reading, writing and other close work, keep approximately 15" between eyes and book or desk. Avoid reading while lying on your stomach.

- All reading and writing work should be sloped in front of you at a 20° angle. Doing so puts the angle of the face and the task on the same plane and will reduce near-point vision stress.
- Look up periodically after reading 3 or 4 pages. Young children often will read 45 minutes at a time without looking up, which can be extremely detrimental.
- To minimize eyestrain, use 2 sources of light: an overhead light or floor lamp for general illumination and a special source of light for the work area.
- Such tasks as reading, sewing and nondetail factory work require the amount of light produced by an uncovered 100-watt bulb at a distance of 4 feet. Such work as drafting and needlework requires 25 to 50% more light.

Quick Takes

Deaths from heart disease might be reduced by 15% if drinking water contained just the right mixture of minerals and other components, says a study sponsored by the Environmental Protection Agency. The report indicates that "hard" water has been linked to decreased incidence of heart disease, high blood pressure and strokes.

The job market for new college graduates will be the best in years reports a national survey of corporate recruiters. Over ⅔ of the respondents said that they planned to hire as many or more graduates than they did last year. Engineering graduates are most in demand, followed by graduates with degrees in accounting, business, economics and marketing. It's still a tight market for liberal-arts grads; only 11% of the companies reported a need for them.

Increasing numbers of people no longer have to deal with the problem of how to move their furniture when they relocate — they rent it. Furniture rentals have tripled in the last 5 years and are still rising. Who principally rents? The recently divorced, newlyweds, professional athletes, flight attendants and diplomats.

Adding spice to your life can be good for your lungs says a Calif. lung specialist. Dr. Irwin Ziment, chief of medicine at Los Angeles County-Olive View Medical Center in Van Nuys, Calif., says that a spicy diet clears your nose and sinuses and may help clear your lungs.

Our Story: THE CALIPH HAS TRAVELED ALL THE WAY FROM AFGHANISTAN. HE HAS PLENTY OF BRUNETTES IN HIS HAREM BUT HE LONGS FOR A BLONDE. WHEN HE SEES ALETA HE OFFERS VAL A GOOD PRICE FOR HER. VAL REFUSES AND LOSES HIS TEMPER WHEN THE CALIPH OFFERS THE SAME PRICE FOR ONE OF THE TWINS.

"THOSE DESERT MEN WILL CURSE, THREATEN AND SCREAM TO WORK THEMSELVES INTO A FIGHTING MOOD. TAKE YOUR FAMILY DOWN TO THE STABLES AT ONCE."

HORSES WERE ALREADY BEING SADDLED, GUARDS ACCOUTERED. THEN, AS DARKNESS FALLS, VAL AND HIS FAMILY QUIETLY LEAVE LYON AND TAKE THE ROAD TOWARD ROANNE.

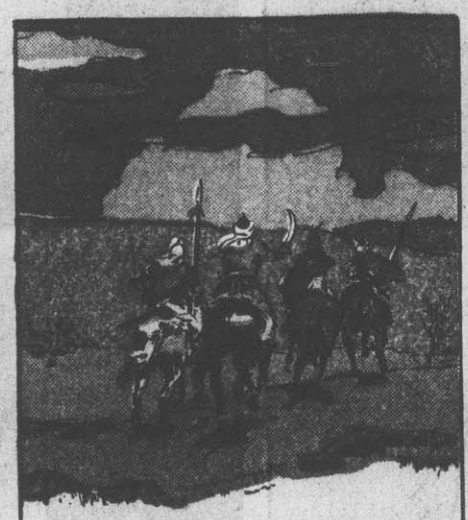

WITH DARKNESS, THE ANGRY SCREAMING OF THE DESERT MEN ENDS IN A STEALTHY TREAD IN THE CORRIDOR. THEN THE SILENCE IS SHATTERED BY THE SCREAMS OF THE FRUSTRATED ASSASSINS AS THEY FIND THEIR VICTIMS HAVE GONE.

THE CALIPH HAS ALWAYS GOTTEN EVERYTHING HE DESIRES AND HE DESIRES THAT GOLDEN WOMAN MORE THAN ANYTHING ELSE. "FIND HER! BRING HER BACK!"

© King Features Syndicate, Inc., 1978. World rights reserved.

AT DAWN FOUR OF HIS ASSASSINS ARE SENT OUT TO BRING BACK THE CALIPH'S NEW TOY, FOR HE CONSIDERS ALETA HIS. HAD HE NOT MADE A GOOD OFFER FOR HER?

AT SUNSET VAL RIDES TO A HIGH HILL AND LOOKS BACK AND SEES THE DESERT MEN FOLLOWING. HE SMILES, FOR THEY WILL PROVIDE SOME FUN.
