Disappointed Farmers To 'Cook' 193 Democrats

By BRIAN B. KING

Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) —

Protesting farmers who massed thousands strong outside the White House to decry House rejection of an emergency farm bill say

they're heading home to work for the defeat of their enemies on Capitol Hill.

The farmers — brought here by the American

Agriculture movement — had jammed the House gallery

for Wednesday's 268-150 vote defeating the farm bill.

They had lined the White House fence — 3,500 of them

— telling Jimmy Carter

through a bullhorn directed at the Executive Mansion that they wanted to talk to him.

Now they are leaving the city they've lobbied so heavily, for almost four months, determined, says

one, to "cook" the 193

Democrats who voted against the bill.

"In two years' time, the American people will regret

this day ever happened."

Bobby Jackson of Levelland,

Texas, said outside the White House.

"It will be amazing what this will do for the Democrats in the next election. This'll cook 'em," he said.

"Come on out, Jimmy, we want to talk to you," yelled fellow Georgian Oliver

Odom, pressing his bullhorn against the White House fence.

Carter, who was inside

entertaining visiting

Romanian President Nicolae

Ceausescu at a state dinner, said later he had not been aware of the protest.

Carter had repeatedly threatened to veto the bill if it had reached his desk. He said it would have sent the country's inflation rate

skyrocketing while raising farmers' feed grain costs.

He said the defeat of the bill, which had narrowly passed the Senate earlier this week, was "good for the farmers of the United States and ... very good for consumers."

The dissident farmers

didn't agree.

"This is going to cause a lot of bankruptcies this year in rural America," said Texan

Gerald McCathern.

While the Democratic

chairman of the House

Agriculture Committee, Rep.

Thomas S. Foley of

Washington, said he doubted

Carter's veto threat was the key to defeat of the bill, the measure's Republican authors charged that the president's "heavy-handed pressure" and "scare tactics"

had been responsible.

Opponents said enactment

would have added between 58 cents and $2.14 to what a three-person urban family spends on food a week.

The bill would have raised basic support prices for wheat, feed grains and cotton while giving growers of those crops higher federally guaranteed prices this year in exchange for idling one acre for every two they planted.

President Might Turn To House Republicans In Energy Plan Battle

By TOM RAUM

Associated Press Writer

out of efforts to frame

compromise energy legislation, think President

Carter may turn to them in hopes of salvaging his plan.

One House negotiator, Rep.

Bill Archer, R-Texas, said the sentiment has arisen in the

"the last few days."

Archer's fellow

Republicans generally are more sympathetic to the kind of compromise backed by

Senate negotiators than are

Democratic House conferees, who are holding out for tighter federal controls over the price of natural gas.

Rep. Clarence Brown,

R-Ohio, said on Wednesday that the president told the Republicans he'd like their support and that to break the deadlock he might even go with a GOP-backed plan for deregulation by 1983.

Rex Granum, a White

House spokesman, said later in the day that Carter was flexible on a "deregulation date. "Continued inaction on energy will cause far more serious damage to the nation's economy than the kinds of compromises that are under consideration," he said.

House Republicans point to past Democratic failures to break the deadlock among themselves and say they think Carter will come to them as a last resort — even if it means angering some liberal House Democrats on the conference committee.

Leading energy conferees

were summoned to the White House today for yet another bargaining session, the third

since Tuesday, when Carter intervened in the negotiations in an attempt to rescue his longdelayed energy plan.

House Republicans have been excluded from the sessions, even though three

GOP senators have attended.

Carter's intervention came in the form of instructions to Energy Secretary James R.

Schlesinger to work up a compromise plan. The

Schlesinger proposal calls for an end to price controls on newly discovered gas by April 30, 1985.

But Carter told a group of

excluded Republican House

conferees on Wednesday that he wasn't wedded to any particular scheme and would accept nearly any compromise just to get a bill,

several participants at the meeting said.

Meanwhile, Brown and

Rep. Toby Moffett, D-Conn.,

a liberal conference member who has refused to attend

recent closed sessions, are challenging the White House meetings as illegal.

They told a news conference Wednesday that the private deliberations appear to violate a House rule

requiring conference committees to be open to the press and public when legislation is handled.

Pierce Fellowship Club Has 56th Annual Meet

AYDEN—Several hundred persons, including a number of candidates for the May Democratic primary attended the 56th annual meeting of the John Pierce Fellowship Club at Camp Contentment on the banks of Contentment Creek yesterday.

Marvin Blount Sr. of Greenville told those gathered there that he attended the first fellowship club meeting which was held at Peel's Beach on the Pamlico River.

Former Pitt County Recorder's Court Judge Dink James said the first session was held as a birthday celebration for the late John Pierce of Ayden, a business leader in Pitt County during the depression.

Fellowship club president Henry Oglesby presided at yesterday's session.

Officers elected for the coming year include: president Corey Stokes, vice-president Reginald Gray, secretary Kirby Smith, assistant secretary Charles McLawhorn, and treasurer Alton Rowe.

Oglesby called for all candidates and office-holders to introduce themselves.

Among those present were Lawrence Davis and Luther Hodges, who are seeking the Democratic nomination to the U.S. Senate; Floyd Lupton, representing First District Congressman Walter Jones who was in Washington for debate on the Farm Bill now before the House; Appeals Court Judge Robert M. Martin, who is seeking a seat on the North Carolina Supreme Court, N.C. Attorney General Rufus Edmisten, State ABC Board chairman Marvin Speight, Bill Lewis (agriculture advisor to Gov. Jim Hunt) representing the Governor who is now in Europe, Chairman of the State Personnel Board Pete Caraway, Commission for the Blind chairman Charles Waller, and a score of North Carolina General Assembly members, county and city officials and candidates seeking state and county offices.

Traffic Crackdown Ordered For N.C.

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Warning that North Carolina could lose some of its federal aid highway funds unless it enforces the 55 miles per hour speed limit, state public safety secretary J. Phil Carlton announced Wednesday a crackdown on speeders and drunk drivers.

"The time to take aggressive and positive action is now," Carlton said at a news conference. He noted that state traffic fatalities have totaled 346 this year and are running about six ahead of last year. Carlton blamed speed and alcohol for 65 percent of all traffic deaths.

The crackdown Carlton outlined called for: —Use of less easily-recognizable unmarked cars by troopers through purchase of a variety of kinds of unmarked cars. He said that instead of the traditional plain-colored Plymouth, the patrol is buying Chevrolets, Dodges, Pontiacs, Fords and Buicks for use as unmarked cars.

—Placing an additional 375 troopers on the highways each week through use of an $818,000 allocation from the Governor's Highway Safety Program to pay patrolmen for overtime work.

—Stopping every vehicle exceeding the speed limit if possible and stopping all drivers "giving the slightest suspicion that they are driving under the influence" of alcohol. He said the patrol would continue the policy of making arrests only for definite, clearcut and substantial violations of the law.

—Recommending additional penalties against state employees convicted of traffic violations while driving state cars. Such penalties which Carlton said he would recommend to the state Personnel Commission would range from warnings for a first offense to dismissal for a third offense. Serious infractions, such as speeding over 75 miles per hour, careless and reckless driving or drunken driving would bring dismissal on a first conviction.

Carlton said that North Carolina needs several hundred more highway patrolmen, and that he will recommend an increase of 50 troopers when the legislature meets next month and an additional increase the following year.

Carlton also said he supports enactment of a law such as Virginia has to outlaw fuzzbusters which warn motorists of the presence of highway patrol radar.

Citing figures compiled by the U.S. Department of Transportation, Carlton said reports indicate that 60 percent of vehicles on North Carolina highways exceed the 55 speed limit, compared with 48 percent in Tennessee, 42 percent in Kentucky, and 27 percent in Virginia.

Carlton said after a similar crackdown last August, 103 fewer deaths occurred in 1977 compared to 1976.

Sen. DeConcini Refuses White House Coaxings

By MIKE SHANAHAN

WASHINGTON (AP) —

With five days remaining before a final vote, the Carter administration has not persuaded a key senator to back down on a Panama

Canal treaty revision which has angered the

Panamans and threatened

Senate approval of the pact.

Despite several days of delicate negotiations, Sen.

Dennis DeConcini, D-Ariz.,

said Wednesday he has rejected proposals to soften

the impact of his reservation to the first of the two treaties.

The reservation would give the United States the right to keep the canal open after the year 2000, whether its operations were threatened by a third country or internal problems in Panama.

The reservation was attached to the first treaty which was narrowly approved by the Senate on March 16. The second treaty actually turning the waterway over to Panama will be voted on next Tuesday.

DeConcini voted for the first treaty, but said he will vote no on the second if the Senate fails to insure that the United States can act to keep the canal open.

Drs. Hinson, Wagner Speakers At 'Shifting Gears Seminar'

By ROSALIE TROTMAN
Reflector Woman's Editor
A "Shifting Gears Seminar" and luncheon was held Tuesday at the Pitt County Agricultural Extension Service office.

Mrs. Rena Manning presided at the event, which was sponsored by the Pitt County Council on Status of Women and Pitt Extension Homemakers Council. Mrs. Manning announced that a series of follow up seminars will be held throughout the county.

Speakers for the session were Dr. Thelma Hinson, specialist, Family Resource Management, N. C. State University, and Dr. Frances Wagner, specialist, Human Development, at NCSU.

"It's a pleasure being here today and talking about one of my favorite subjects, women," said Dr. Wagner.

Dr. Wagner spoke on "The Future For Women," in the areas of marriage, parenthood, in the working world and as individuals. She gave marriage statistics, facts on births and deaths of infants and briefly discussed the marriage enrichment movement and the "Martha Movement, which is a good trend being started."

"What is in the future in the working world for women? Some is good — and some is bad. Women are moving in managerial jobs but are still having problems. It's difficult to change views of the good old boys." Working mothers still have a hard time because of the lack of day care centers, which cost money.

"Women who shift gears in their earlier years do better than waiting until they are older. Self-esteem of women goes up after their last child is launched," she added.

"The future of women in this county is in your hands," Dr. Wagner stated.

Some of the areas in which she suggested women work included: junior and senior high school groups, encouraging them to steer away from young marriages; classes for those contemplating divorce; encourage enrichment programs; and check colleges and universities on encouraging mature women to get back into education.

"Help women feel more fulfilled in what they do choose to do. Be proud you are a woman, you really have it made," she concluded.

"The Concerns of Women" was discussed by Dr. Hinson, including financial, legal, as an individual community member and employed member.

Some of the financial concerns of women include financial security, business affairs, family finances, serving as an accountant, estate plans, source of funds, employment opportunities and demands on employment, job training, and economic trends.

Legal concerns of women include general legal rights, consumer protection laws, property laws, estate distribution, employment, social welfare laws, support laws, divorce and criminal laws.

One of the purposes of the seminars was involving representatives from various women's organizations throughout Pitt County.

A repeat seminar and dinner was held at the extension office Tuesday night.

Will All Those Ex's Ruin The Wedding?

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1978 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: Our daughter is being married soon and I am making plans for a formal church wedding, dinner and reception.

My problem is that the young man who is marrying our daughter has too many parents.

His mother is presently married to her fifth husband! Worse yet, all four of her ex-husbands have remarried and she's friendly with all of them. To make matters more sticky, the boy's real father has a wife and two ex-wives with whom he is on friendly terms. I have been instructed to send invitations to all of these ex's. Should I?

How about the receiving line? We will be the laughing stock of this city if we have all those ex-husbands and ex-wives in the receiving line.

BRIDE'S BEFUDDLED MOM

DEAR BEFUDDLED: Invite the friendly "ex's" to the wedding but ask only the groom's biological parents and their present spouses to stand in the receiving line.

DEAR ABBY: A reader asks, "What does a deliberately childless couple say to the 'go forth and multiply' relatives and friends who harass them to be fruitful?" Simple: Roll your eyes upward, look sad and sigh, "Oh, if we only could!"

Those few words are guaranteed to turn hostility and unwarranted nosiness into instant sympathy—and never again will you be bothered with that suggestion.

JACK B. IN TUCSON

DEAR JACK: Why pretend you can't "multiply" when you can but choose not to for good and legitimate reasons?

DEAR ABBY: A year ago my husband had a nervous breakdown. In other words, he was mentally ill. After six months of psychiatric treatment he committed suicide. He was 28. I was 27 and left with two children.

My problem: When people find out that I am a widow, they invariably ask, "What happened to your husband?" I'm not about to make up any lies, but I can't bring myself to tell anyone that my husband killed himself. My children are not yet old enough to understand what suicide is, so I am not faced with telling them yet. For the present I'm telling the children their Daddy got sick and died, which is true, and something I'll not have to retract when the time comes to tell them the whole story.

But what do I tell people who ask me now? I'd like to have a pat answer that would politely say, "It's none of your business." Any ideas?

NEW YORKER

DEAR NEW YORKER: There is no polite way to say, "It's none of your business." Besides it will only arouse curiosity.

It will be easier for you in the long run if you realize that it is no reflection on you that your husband took his life. He was sick. The truth is always the best response, but you're not obligated to provide the details. Simply say your husband was ill and took his own life, and you'd rather not talk about it. That should put an end to any further questioning.

greetings from Presbytery. Mrs. John McQueen, Statesville, will speak on "Women of D.C. Update." The sermon will be delivered by the Rev. Ed Conner of Cobb and Johnson Memorial Churches. The Rev. Robert Burns, host pastor, will administer the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper.

Registration Thursday will begin at 9:30 followed by the call to order at 10 o'clock. The Rev. W. Marshall Tredway, Falkland, will bring greetings from Presbytery. The Rev. Nancy J. Ramsay, associate pastor, Rocky Mount First Church, will speak on "Mission Consultation." The sermon will be delivered by the Rev. Jerry D. Bron of Washington First Church. Officers will be installed by the Rev. Burns during the business session.

Mrs. S. D. Fuller, president, Rocky Mount, will preside at all sessions. The theme of the meeting is "Their Souls Did Magnify the Lord." A fellowship luncheon will end the meeting which will be followed by a meeting of the newly elected council.

Women At Center Are Part Of Team According To County Police

EDITOR'S NOTE — The annual budget is only $56,000, and the staff consists of five women. But in less than three years, the Rape-Sexual Assault Center in Des Moines has made a big difference in the way rape cases are handled there — both for the victim and the attacker.

By DAVE CARPENTER
Associated Press Writer
DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — Her former husband was allowed to visit Elizabeth's modest apartment that evening to see their five children, the youngest 10 months old, the oldest 14 years.

Before the night was out, she was attacked. Her head was slammed against a wall, and she was raped. She was half-conscious when police came, and they were disposed to treat the incident as a domestic quarrel until the man swung at an officer who ordered him to leave.

That night, police were told Elizabeth had been raped, but such cases are difficult to prosecute. The former husband had been there by her consent. They charged him, instead, with assaulting an officer.

But a nurse at the hospital where the 29-year-old mother was treated referred her to the Polk County Rape-Sexual Assault Center.

Elizabeth was angry but uncertain about how to press the case. It was, she said, not the first time. After more than 20 hours of counseling, comforting and liaison between the rape center, police and prosecutor, she brought charges.

Her former husband pleaded guilty to a reduced charge of sexual assault with intent to rape.

Without the help of the five women who run the center, Elizabeth says, "I wouldn't even have been able to press charges and he would still be tormenting me ... They were there when I needed them."

Such success stories have brought the center a measure of national attention as one of the more effective agencies of this kind.

The rape center women counsel victims about their legal rights, tell them what to expect before a grand jury, the type of questions the defense attorney will and can ask. They tell them they need not answer all questions about previous sexual activity.

They also help bridge the distance between the victim, the county prosecutor and the police.

"The women at the rape center are part of our team," says county police Sgt. Paul Womack. "They do things that we as police officers with our badges could never do."

The teamwork is evident in a conviction rate that has doubled, and the number of charges filed also has risen. Police clearance rates for rape cases have jumped from 50 percent to 69 percent.

Carole Meade, the second center manager in its 3 1/2-year history, cites ties to the city and county police as a key.

"Many officers are relieved to have us there, taking care of the emotional side of rape cases," she says.

Nowadays police immediately notify the center of most reported rapes so the staff can respond quickly.

The center, founded in 1974, handles 15 to 45 sexual abuse cases a month. "Sometimes we get three or four a night," Ms. Meade says.

At Iowa Lutheran Hospital, where the center is based in a nurses' residence, a specially trained staff treats the victim as an emergency case and preserves clinical evidence of rape for trial.

The crisis intervention which begins at the hospital involves giving the victim some control over her life again.

"We give them small decisions to make," Ms. Meade says. Support counseling continues through police interviews. If the victim wishes, the staff helps her talk the situation over with her family.

A woman who dealt with the center after her former husband assaulted their 11-year-old daughter, says the center staffers "did more for me than the district attorney's office. Carole was with me and my daughter through the whole thing."

The man was found guilty of sexual abuse.

Several things have led to the higher conviction rate. The center handled 21 sexual cases in the first year of operation, and 17 resulted either in guilty pleas or guilty verdicts.

"When the victims go into the courtroom, they understand the court, the criminal justice system and their role," Ms. Meade says. "They have counselors there. They feel they're not just pawns of the system."

Another factor to the improved conviction record was the changes in the 1974 Iowa

Criminal Code disallowing irrelevant testimony about the victim's past sexual history and eliminating required testimony by a witness.

Those changes were adopted after lobbying by the women who later founded the center.

Education is a third element, and the staff works closely with police recruits at the Regional Law Enforcement Academy in Des Moines. Deputies from the sheriff's sex crimes unit often accompany Martha Anderson, state coordinator for the center, on her educational visits to other Iowa cities.

The center's annual budget is modest — $56,000, paid mostly by the Central Iowa Crime Commission. But it still has some critics.

Des Moines Police Chief Wendell Nichols concedes that the center serves a good cause. But he says "There's a lot of money being spent on those ... things that frankly could be spent along the same lines but with police expertise."

County police Sgt. Womack disagrees. "They are specialists in their field. They'll get nothing but the highest praise from our department," he says.

Someday, some bright insurance executive will come up with a policy for parents of teenagers who leave to get their own apartments.

The premiums will be expensive, but they'll cover loss of furniture (up to $5,000), damages to cars in hauling away contents of house, storage of grade school memorabilia and sports equipment, and perpetual stocking of the refrigerator.

It has taken us two years to adjust to our daughter getting her own apartment. Two years of walking through rooms that used to have furniture, closets that used to hold linens and towels, cupboards that at one time stored cooking utensils and dishes.

The only thing she left was an echo.

We were younger then. Like the proud phoenix bird, we built from the ashes, adding a chair here, a table there. Several of our friends gave booster showers and in time we had the humble beginnings of a lived-in home.

The other day our son announced he was getting his own apartment. I nearly passed out. "Not again. I couldn't take it — having only one set of sheets per bed, bare floors, lamps with no bulbs."

"Relax," he grinned, "the apartment is furnished."

I've seen restrooms with more furniture.

There wasn't a night he wasn't "visiting." "Do you want this?" he yelled from the living room.

"What is it?"

It's only been two weeks and I have no casseroles, no cake or pie pans, no leftovers dishes (no leftovers!), no iron, no sweeper, no toaster, no hangers and no broom.

"Not a dime."

Ways To Make Ends Meet During Tight-Money Times

By JEANNE LESEM
UPI Family Editor

NEW YORK (UPI) — Ways of making ends meet during inflation-recession cycles vary widely from family to family and individual to individual.

Here are some tips gleaned from interviews with families in the New York metropolitan area for a research project headed by Prof. David Caplovitz of the City University of New York graduate school.

The New York interviews preceded a major study by Caplovitz and his research assistants in four metropolitan areas of the United States to determine how urban dwellers' lifestyles and mental and social health were affected by inflation and recession.

— Some couples said they had begun buying clothing at discount stores and from mail order catalogs instead of expensive specialty shops and department stores. One said she bought new underwear and went to thrift shops for secondhand undergarments.

— Many women did their hair at home instead of going to a beauty salon.

— One welfare mother skipped breakfast, ate a sandwich lunch and prepared only one real meal a day for herself and her children.

— Another made stews a lot and stretched them with noodles and biscuits.

— A lower middle income wife said she and her husband lived within a budget: "If we spend more one week, we cut back the next."

— Some two-person households bought and cooked in quantity and froze the extra food to serve later.

— Some joined a food co-op to buy at wholesale markets. "But it's only the ones with some money around here who will join it," said one middle income wife, 53, whose home was an extremely well-furnished apartment in a New York City housing project. She said she comparison-shopped for some foods and used leftovers in other dishes and for her husband's lunches.

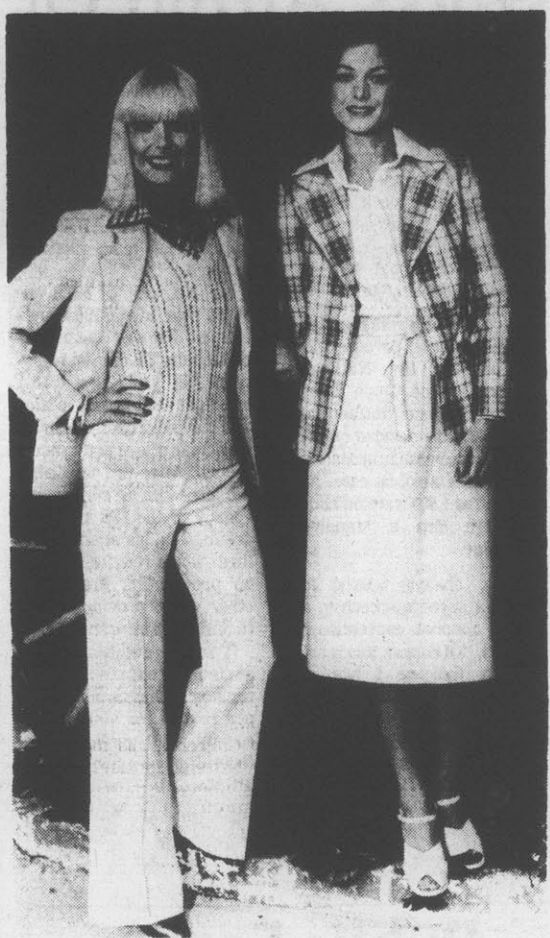

— A retired lawyer, 86, walked to shopping areas from his suburban home if neighbors did not give him a lift. He figured he probably spent more on food because he shopped more than once a week.

— Another middle income family moved from one suburb to a less expensive one when he changed jobs. During a period of unemployment, the family cut out such expensive food as lox (smoked salmon) and lobster tails or bought them less often. They cut out family ski trips because of lift fees.

— A research and development company psychologist, 30, and his sociologist wife, 29, bought two motorcycles to save on gas for their car. "Now we're riding enough to make up for the purchase price," he said.

Parking Plan Has Its Points

The Redevelopment Commission has recommended that the area at Fifth and Evans Streets, now temporary unpaved parking, be designated as a public parking lot.

Presently the Central Business District plan calls for this property to be a park area, and there had been reports that it might become available as commercial property.

The Commission recommended that the parcel be appropriately landscaped. It also recommended that the already paved parking lot behind the front area be improved with additional landscaping.

The commissioners indicated that since the area is adjacent to the downtown mall and pedestrian walkways, parking with appropriate landscaping might be the best use for the land.

The recommendation looks good to us. It would give well placed parking areas adjacent to downtown business area and also to business places on Dickinson Avenue, in effect pulling the two areas together.

Parking continues to be the most critical need in the downtown area. This additional Fifth and Evans Street parking should be a help.

FBI Indictments Pose Time Of Trial

Former FBI Director L. Patrick Gray III and top former top aides have been indicted by the Justice Department on charges of violating citizens' rights through unlawful break-ins.

It will be another trying time for our nation as it now falls to the courts to determine just how far law enforcement can go in obtaining evidence.

There will be the constitutional questions involved, and the former high FBI officials could face fines, or jail terms, if convicted.

Wrong Health Priorities

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — What a poor state like North Carolina needs is not more expensive, exotic, sophisticated, elaborate advances in modern medical technology, but some good, routine health care for a lot of people not now getting that.

Such basic care can be gotten for a fraction of the money now being spent on health care, and is being provided successfully to citizens in developing countries who are a lot poorer than any in this state, and by governments with far fewer resources than ours.

In fact, says Dr. C. Arden Miller, we really should look at North Carolina as in the same league as a "Developing Country" when you consider the shocking infant mortality rate, the malnutrition, the disabilities suffered by thousands of citizens as the result of not having even rudimentary health care.

Miller, professor in maternal and child health at the School of Public Health, University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, is carrying his plea to North Carolinians in increasing numbers.

On The Stump

He has appeared in recent months before gatherings of the Governor's Advocacy Council on Children and Youth; at a meeting of the Children's 100; and on a symposium exploring Childhood in North Carolina.

His message is simple and blunt, not wrapped in medical jargon: the most commonly identified defects are dental, nutritional anemia, hearing loss, and visual defects.

"All of these defects are easily identified even with routine care; they are all easily corrected; and without correction all of them lead to a record of profound disabilities in health, learning and achievement," he says.

But where does the money go?

"For the past quarter century the dominant health policy theme in this state, as in the rest of the nation, has been to improve elaborate technologies for the care of the sick, and to subsidize the development of health manpower and health facilities that function predominately in private health service delivery systems," he says.

And those expensive systems "have not demonstrated their ability to cope with such pressing issues as maldistribution of services, quality control, or cost containment...evidence is complete that private systems of service are not sufficient to reach all the people."

NOBLITT

What is the alternative? North Carolina's most pressing health problems will not be solved by traditional approaches, he says: "The high cost-effectiveness of reaching every person with a routine level of essential service has been demonstrated over and over again. It is far less costly in the long run than coping with tragedies of advanced disease and neglect."

THE INSIDE REPORT

No Anti-Inflation Czar

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — President Carter personally threw cold water on naming an anti-inflation "czar" to ride herd on his cabinet with the power and responsibility to carry out long-awaited proposals to dampen rampant inflation.

The idea surfaced out of White House staff discussions on how the Carter administration could dramatize its fight against inflation — which has become the President's No. 1 political problem. As presented to Mr. Carter, the staff proposal suggested that the anti-inflation war needed "a forceful person, with high standing in the country and good relations with both labor and business."

But objections were sounded by two high administration officials: Charles Schultz, chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers, and Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal. They argued that a "czar" to tell them how to run their own anti-inflation policy would create bureaucratic confusion (besides threatening their power).

They may have a point. "Czars" don't always work out all that well. But in persuading Mr. Carter to veto the proposal, Schultz and Blumenthal may have cost the President an invaluable political asset: the chance to convince angry consumers harassed by rising prices that he means business. For example, an outside "czar" would have far more freedom to attack the government's highrise pay and retirement policies than cabinet members.

That advantage of the "czar" proposal was appreciated in the Commerce Department which in the end was the only major agency not to oppose the idea. But against the Schultz-Blumenthal combination, Commerce Secretary Juanita Kreps did not stand a chance.

A footnote: the suggestion for a czar specifically mentioned Harvard Business School Prof. John T. Dunlop, an esteemed labor management expert and former Secretary of Labor, as the "prototype." But Dunlop himself would not have been chosen: he is regarded by the Carter men as too abrasive and impolitic.

GOP Treads Softly

The Senate Republican Policy Committee's hard-hitting critique of President Carter's foreign and military policy, now receiving finishing touches, will tread softly on the country's most politically sensitive issue: Arab-Israeli peace.

With President Carter a target of criticism from many Jewish Americans, it would be only natural if the Republicans sought political capital out of the President's discomfiture. One easy way: woo Jewish votes by accusing Mr. Carter or tilting toward the Arabs at the expense of Israel.

But barring last-minute changes, that course will not be taken by the policy committee (headed by Sen. John Tower, who is seeking reelection in Texas).

The reason: among many non-Jewish American voters, feeling is running high against Prime Minister Begin for insisting on Israel's right to retain Jewish settlements and refusing to withdraw from the West Bank; meanwhile, Egyptian President Anwar Sadat remains high in American popular acclaim. The Republicans sense the

Reforms

Improved health will come for Tar Heels by "social reforms that place a new value on people and their well-being," says Miller in pushing for special attention to well mothers and well babies.

The cycle is clear, he finds: a malnourished, underdeveloped, not-so-well educated mother gives birth to a child of similar circumstances and the troubles simply continue.

A firm program of basic health care for all mothers and children in the state should be devised, and "priorities should require that statewide goals on behalf of all children be reached before planning on behalf of lesser priorities soaks up available resources," Miller says.

The biggest hurdle, however, is that children must compete for dollars in a state budget dealing with highways, water lines, and every other service. "And children are poor negotiators....they are invariably pushed to the end of the line," Miller says.

extreme delicacy of this unfolding political equation and fear an all-out endorsement of Israel's position could boomerang.

Reagan Running?

Friends of Ronald Reagan report he is more enthusiastic than ever about a last-burrah run for President in 1980 — so far confounding the widely-held theory that he would back away as the presidential year approached.

Reagan, 67, has informed close associates that if he runs, he will announce it soon after the 1978 mid-term election. As President Carter's popularity declines, Reagan's zest for making the race is obvious.

This is not good news for some Reagan operatives who talked him into making the 1976 race. This time they are dubious, not because Reagan is too old to win but because he might become too old to serve effectively. But nobody has told Reagan yet, and it is doubtful that anybody will.

A footnote: If Reagan runs, several conservative hopefuls are expected to bail out — including Sen. Robert Dole, Sen. Jesse Helms and Rep. Philip Crane. That would leave Reagan to face George Bush, Sen. Howard Baker and possibly Gov. James Thompson of Illinois. But Gerald Ford might come in if it looks as though Reagan is wrapping up the nomination.

Strength For Today

SECULARISM

One of the most notorious sins of the modern world is secularism — the conviction on the part of multitudes of people that they can live without God.

Riches, power, social position, comfort — these are some of the elements of secularism. The New Testament gives this philosophy of life the lie.

From the dim dawn of history has come down the story of a group of men who tried to build the Tower of Babel so high that it would reach the heavens. God laughed when He heard of their scheme. With His little finger He destroyed the tower, confounded the men's speech, and scattered them to the ends of the earth.

The builders of the Tower of Babel were secularists, and the Tower was to be a monument to their way of life. That was why God destroyed them, and He will deal with the pride and pretense of modern life with the same vigor as of old.

THE BATTER LOOKS A BIT NERVOUS!

By JAMES J. KILPATRICK

Who's Afraid Of Teddy?

PALM BEACH, Fla.—Edward M. Kennedy, the senior senator from Massachusetts, turned up in Palm Beach the other day. He had come down to visit his mother and to make a major speech. Before he left town, he provided new evidence to demonstrate why conservatives hold him in respect and fear alike.

Mr. Kennedy was in top form. His chief purpose was to address the National Association of Chain Drug Stores, whose influential members are devoted on the senator's several proposals in the field of medical care. An estimated 1,600 were on hand to give him a standing welcome.

"I've always wanted to make a keynote speech to a great national convention," he said. "Of course, this is not exactly the one I had in mind." The crowd lived it. "I went to see President Carter last Thursday. Mother always said I would make it to the White House to the Democrats: When I see that all you small businessmen can afford five days at the Breakers, we must be treating you pretty well." Comfortable chuckles. "But, then, under the Democrats, the dollar is worth so little it doesn't matter." Wild applause. "You're not supposed to laugh at that!"

Mr. Kennedy, at 46, is one of the most attractive men in politics. He was looking exceptionally fit on Sunday. A couple of years ago, badly overlight he looked puffed and bloated. This morning he was clear of eye and crisp of speech. After the one-liners, he turned to a ringing advocacy of the two bills that are most on his mind. One of them would rewrite the laws on prescription drugs; the other would provide for national health insurance.

It was a revealing speech, perfectly expressing the senator's concept of the proper role of the state in our society. He perceives the federal government not as all-powerful—that is too much to say—but as benevolently authoritarian. He sees the Department of Health, Education and Welfare as a kind of loving father figure, solicitous, wise and firm.

In Mr. Kennedy's philosophy, there is little room for individual freedom. The values of federalism are not values he holds in high regard. His performance is for national regimentation as compared to the disorder that accompanies the private sector. He exudes a breathtaking confidence in the wisdom of the federal establishment.

In one remarkable passage, the senator was extolling his bill to expand federal regulation of pharmaceuticals. Under existing law, he lamented, "once a drug is approved, the government says goodbye—there is virtually no further regulation." Mr. Kennedy deplored this situation.

"Drugs may be used for any purpose, in any dosage, or in any combination that the individual practitioner wishes. The current system allows individual doctors to substitute their judgement for that of the Food and Drug Administration."

Some of us in the hall heard that sentence and shuddered. This is the bone and marrow of Mr. Kennedy's view of the body politic. The judgment, experience and professional skill of the individual practitioner must be subordinated to the judgment of the bureaucracy. His idea is to vest in the FDA vast new powers over the practice of medicine. He envisions a complex and costly program of government "surveillance" of drug usage for years after a drug has been approved. He would create a National Center for Clinical Pharmacology. He would severely regulate the advertising and marketing practices of drug companies. He would prepare a national drug compendium. He would increase the costs of drugs to the consumer by requiring new informational notices. And so on.

It was the same in his advocacy of national health ins.

ERA's Major Effort

By BILL DENSMORE

Associated Press Writer

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP) — Like sand in the hourglass heap aloft by feminists rallying beneath the Illinois Capitol rotunda, time is running out on the Equal Rights Amendment.

With less than a year until the March 22, 1979, deadline for ratification, its supporters have zeroed in on Illinois with money, lobbyists and volunteers to try to win over the only major northern holdout state — heading signs that the proposed constitutional amendment to ban sex discrimination is foundering.

A victory is needed in Illinois, they say, to break the pattern of weakening support for the ERA. Thirty-eight states are needed: 35 have ratified so far but 30 of those were rapid-fire votes during the first year, a heady time of enthusiasm before opponents organized.

"I can't say strongly enough how important Illinois is," says Ruth Clusen, national president of the League of Women Voters. "If Illinois does not come through, we are totally dependent on three states in the South and Southwest," staunchly conservative areas.

But the task here is formidable — since 1972, the first year the ERA was up for approval, it has failed in every session to win a required three-fifths majority of both houses of the General Assembly.

The last House vote was June 2, 1977. The ERA lost 101-74. The last Senate vote was Dec. 16, 1976. The ERA came up short 29-22, even after then President-elect Jimmy Carter personally telephoned the state Senate president and asked him to call the measure.

Rep. Alan Greiman, D-Skokie, is expected to call for a House vote on the amendment this month or in May. It would then go to the Senate. Supporters admit having only 30 firm Senate votes; 36 are needed.

Campaigning in Illinois has proven difficult because of a unique block of conservative.

The airways weather observation station to be located in Greenville is expected to start operating within the next week or two, it was declared today.

The station will be located in the Greenville M Machine Works, owned by B. T. Clark, who is in charge of the official local weather bureau station. Readings will be reported four times a day.

Engineers already have completed their survey and the instruments will be ordered. The government engineers are expected to return this week to install the equipment.

A sure sign that the Pitt County schools are nearing the end of their 1937-38 season is the fact that checks to pay teachers for the eighth and final month of the term have arrived in the offices of the Pitt County Board of Education.

Although the checks are safely in the hands of county officials, the teachers will have to wait until they are due—April 29—before they can get them. County officials are forbidden from delivering the checks until they are scheduled to go out.

There are 354 teachers in the county system.

Government Adds To Inflation

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) —

Shortly before President Carter asked business to hold price increases well below the average of the two preceding years it had already given it answer: We cannot.

That verdict was returned in a survey of business people conducted by the U.S. Chamber of Commerce and the Gallup organization. It was an overwhelming verdict: 85 percent of respondents shared the view.

Analyzing the results, Jack Carlson, vice president and chief economist, offered what he believes to be the reason why: Government-caused inflation, such as from higher Social Security taxes.

"The President tended to look around at other people instead of at the government," said Carlson, who in some capacity has served in every administration since the Eisenhower days.

Under Lyndon Johnson he was assistant director of the Bureau of the Budget. He held a similar position under Richard Nixon. Now, appointed by Carter, he serves on a committee examining the accuracy of employment statistics.

Because of government's own actions, he said, 1.8 percent will be added to this year's inflation, bringing Carlson's estimate for the year to 6.6 percent. It could have had a 4.8 percent rate, he said, if the government had not added to the problem through the higher minimum wage, farm price supports, the Social Security Tax, and increases in regulations from last year to this.

Of the president's dangers-of-inflation speech, Carlson said, "I think he was a little more forceful." But quickly following was the commentary: "I'm not sure I would have set him up that way."

That reference was to what other critics also noted: There was not a great deal new in the president's recommendations or proposals or requests, whichever they are to be called.

And yet, advance publicity — including the president's own promise of an important statement — had indicated to some that a firmer, more specific, and more encompassing program was to be announced.

Ironically, while the message did not live up to that promise, it perhaps did raise to some degree the consciousness and fear among businessmen over the possibility of rigid controls. Ever since Carter said in his pre-election campaign that the president needed standby wage-price controls, some business people have been wary, even though Carter later tried to dispel that wariness.

To some extent, said Carlson, the president might be victimized by the action of Nixon, who publicly disavowed controls until the moment he suddenly imposed them on the economy.

Nixon succumbed to extreme economic pressures. Carter, business people seem to fear, might find himself in a similar bind sometime over the next two years.

And as they have already reported in the survey to which Carlson referred, they are not sure they can help him very much. Business, they say, has problems of its own.

Appointed N.C. Chief

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Betsy R. Stafford, 55, of Omaha, Neb., deputy director of the Nebraska Housing and Urban Development Department, today was named director of the North Carolina office of the federal Housing and Urban Development Department which supervises nearly $300 million in housing and community development programs annually.

Appointment of Mrs. Stafford to the job, which pays more than $40,000 annually, was made in Washington by HUD Secretary Patricia Harris.

Mrs. Stafford succeeds Richard Barnwell, director of the state office since its creation in 1971 during the Nixon administration. The position has been vacant since Barnwell, a one-time unsuccessful Republican candidate for Congress, was transferred to the HUD Office last July.

Although the appointment is effective immediately, Mrs. Stafford said she was not sure when she would report here. She said she must get her affairs in Nebraska in order. She is a graduate of the University of North Carolina at Charlotte.

Fire in the United States caused an estimated loss of $3.75 billion in 1977, the Insurance Services Office reports. This figure represents an increase of $193 million, or 5.4 percent over the 1976 total.

rural Republicans and Chicago-based, organization Democrats who oppose it.

ERA strategists believe the final outcome hinges on GOP votes — which they say are controlled by Gov. James Thompson — and Chicago Democratic votes — which they say need a green light from George Dunne, Cook County party chairman.

But they also caution that many politicians, while endorsing the ERA, are unwilling to twist arms to win ratification.

Illinois also is the home state of arch ERA foe and conservative columnist Phyllis Schlafly.

Mrs. Schlafly was on hand Wednesday when pro-ERA forces kicked off their effort at the Capitol, presenting legislative leaders with the hourglass. She said her forces would organize no special efforts to counter the fresh pro-ERA push.

asserted.

Ingram explained that he held hearings on the "excessive" and "exorbitant" rates that are being charged in the form of credit insurance that people were required to buy when the sought loans.

"People need to look at the connections...other candidates have with these special interests," the candidate added.

He said that "when you match $11 million against $700,000 that's cheap if they can keep John Ingram out of the Senate."

According to Ingram, he is being outspent as much as "20 and 30 to one this year" in his campaign for the primary. He said that his opposition spent $300,000 to his $29,000 in the 1976 primary for the insurance commissioner's post in 1976.

"We are not going to spend any more this time than in 1976," he added.

Pointing out that he is hopeful of grassroots support in his

Senate campaign, Ingram said that "what we find is that the people want a man in the U.S. Senate who doesn't have to rely on special interest connections and spend hundreds of thousands of dollars to get elected."

Ingram, who was the featured speaker here Tuesday at the annual Greek Awards Banquet sponsored by the East Carolina University Interfraternity Council, said that IFC president Kirk Edgerton "told the John Ingram story in his introduction of me Tuesday night."

He noted that the introduction pointed to his "fight for young people all of my political life" and also alluded to his accomplishments in the 1974 General Assembly.

Ingram said that Edgerton noted in his remarks that the commissioner introduced the voting bill for 18-year-olds and also the "zoo bond referendum bill that got the state zoo on its feet and going." He also co-signed the absentee ballot bill making voting by absentee ballot possible in primary elections, it was mentioned.

The candidate's role in the passage in 1975 of legislation abolishing age and sex discrimination in auto liability insurance rates was also mentioned Ingram said. The new law went into effect in December of 1977, he explained, after two years of delays in the courts by insurance company challenges and brought rates for young men with "safe driving records" down from $240 to $70.

Special interest lobbying last year resulted in the passage of a "bad law" that allows insurance companies to put rates in effect over the commissioner's disapproval, he added. Ingram said that after the law was passed, "a citizen in Wayne County said that we've got to get a bigger stick in the U.S. Senate to curb the monopolistic power of the insurance companies."

Ingram contended that the anti-trust laws must be changed to deal with the horizontal monopoly of oil companies and the special interest exemption that insurance companies have from anti-trust laws.

Insurance companies, he said, have a bigger monopoly than oil companies.

Ingram, who campaigned here as part of an eastern swing, said that he planned to take his campaign to the western part of the state during the latter part of the week.

He said that the "story of fighting for the young people, and their parents, is the theme and thread of my administration and campaign."

Played Wrong Anthem In Greeting Ceausescu

By LARRY MARGASAK
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — How would you feel, Jimmy Carter, if another nation's official band thought "Dixie" was your national anthem? And played it during welcoming ceremonies in your honor?

The thought may have crossed Carter's mind when he realized that the U.S. Army Band played the wrong national anthem Wednesday for visiting President Nicolae Ceausescu of Romania.

When Ceausescu arrived at the White House, he was greeted with strains of "We Praise Thee, Fatherland Rumania." That was the national anthem of the communist nation — until it adopted a new one last fall.

The new anthem is really an old tune known to Romanians for a century as "The Colors," referring to the red, gold and blue of the country's flag. But new words were written last year to reflect the development of Romanian society, a press spokesman for the Romanian Embassy said Wednesday night.

"We were surprised they didn't know about the change," the spokesman said. "There have been a lot of press clippings on this in the United States."

Few if any of the Americans at the ceremony on the White House South Lawn noticed the mistake, but Mary Ann Bader, a State Department spokeswoman, said, "I think it would be fair to say that the Romanians noticed it. It was definitely a regrettable mistake."

By Wednesday night, Carter was joking about the incident and using it for belly laughs at a state dinner for Ceausescu.

Referring to the faux pas in his toast, Carter noted that the correct anthem was played at the dinner.

"We paid him a special honor today, perhaps unprecedented in the history of our nation," Carter said. "We played two different national anthems to Romania — the incorrect one this morning and the correct one tonight."

How did the mixup happen? Ms. Bader said the Army band was given a score of the old anthem. When the State Department later sent copies of the new anthem to the White House, the band mistook them for copies of old and ignored them.

Canal Pilots Pose Threat

WASHINGTON, D.C. (AP) — Sen. Jesse Helms said Wednesday that many American Panama Canal ship pilots will leave within a year if the Senate ratifies the treaty that would turn the waterway over to Panama.

The pilots predicted the exodus of "many hundreds" of other American canal workers, including highly-skilled technicians and supervisors.

Helms called the American pilots irreplaceable. Helms also declared that the when Panama takes over the waterway, operations of the canal will be in jeopardy immediately.

"If they (pilots) leave in large numbers, it is goodbye to operation of the Panama Canal," he said. "We won't own it, we won't control it. And we won't be able to run it."

The pilots said it takes eight years to fully train a new pilot capable of navigating through the canal system.

urance. Variety, diversity, choice—none of these values appeals to the senator. His goal is to impose a uniform, national, comprehensive, compulsory system of hospitalization insurance on the people. How, exactly, would he pay for it? The senator's noble brow clouds with a passing frown. The ways and means, he says, are yet to be worked out.

Yes, the senator gives lip service to the private sector, but the whole thrust of his political philosophy is toward an ever-expanding government. The gentleman is charming. The gentleman is shrewd. The gentleman is young. Who's afraid of Teddy K? I watched him in action last Sunday; and I am.

Jets Crash

JACKSONVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Two F-4 jets crashed today in Onslow County west of Jacksonville, killing at least one of the pilots. The cause of the crashes was not immediately known. Each plane carried two crewmen.

"The preliminary indications are that the two F-4s crashed near the intersection of N.C. 258 and N.C. 53 on the western outskirts of Jacksonville," said Marine Maj. John Woggon, public affairs officer at nearby Camp Lejeune.

Officials at Seymour Johnson AFB near Goldsboro confirmed that the two F-4E Phantom jets were from the base.

An Air Force crew was on its way to the crash scene.

CYPRUS PROPOSAL

WASHINGTON (AP)—Turkish Cypriots today proposed a federation government for the bitterly divided island nation and suggested their proposal could be the basis of new talks between its Greek and Turkish factions.

A Voluntary School Plan For Chicago

By SUE SHELLNBARGER
Associated Press Writer

CHICAGO (AP) — School Superintendent Joseph Hannon, threatened by a federal lawsuit and buffeted by critics who want forced school integration, says his faith in Chicago strengthens his belief that school integration should be voluntary.

He sold the idea to the Chicago Board of Education on Wednesday and travels to Springfield today to present it to the state Board of Education.

The NAACP says it will never work and it will sue the school system.

Parents in the all-white enclaves of Chicago's northwest and southwest sides say they do not want it to work.

And a committee of the state Board of Education recommended Wednesday night that the plan be refused unless mandatory backup provisions are included.

The Chicago Board of Education narrowly approved the $386.6 million voluntary integration proposal Wednesday by a 6-4 vote. One dissenting board member, Louise Malis, asked, "Why do you refuse to include a mandatory backup in the plan ...?"

"It would take away from the integrity of the city ...," Hannon replied.

"A voluntary plan will not work," said NAACP general counsel Nathaniel Jones. "That's a semantical game for maintaining the status quo."

Hannon's plan would: —Expand voluntary transfer programs for students in overcrowded schools, many of which are in minority neighborhoods.

—Eliminate all mobile units, the trailer-classrooms seen as tools of segregation. He already has cut about 400 of the 1,269 mobile units that were used last year.

—Open magnet schools that offer programs good enough to entice students across district lines.

During the 1960s the Chicago board initiated several voluntary transfer programs. The numbers of students who enrolled ... were small — 28 children volunteered to leave their neighborhoods in 1962, 573 in 1968 and about 1,100 last fall.

Loses, Even If Declared Not Guilty

By SANDRA BALMER
Associated Press Writer

CHICAGO (AP) — Even if he wins, even if a judge finds that Frank Walus did not lie to immigration authorities about an alleged past as a Nazi terrorist, the victory may be empty. Walus has already lost a great deal.

His teen-age son, who wants to attend West Point, threatens to leave home. His lawyer is pressing for payment of $60,000 in legal fees.

Strangers scrawl swastikas on his home. Some of his neighbors shout epithets at him. Others testify against him.

"I have lots of phone calls threaten me and also my tenants," said Walus in an interview in his next living room. He rents out the second floor of his modest two-flat building. "They say they will blow up my house. They put lots of swastika on the sidewalk and throw eggs at my house."

Walus, 55, a small man who speaks with a heavy Polish accent, is accused of lying to immigration officials and covering his alleged Nazi background to become a citizen.

Eleven witnesses swore in U.S. District Court before Judge Julius Hoffman that they recognized Walus as the Gestapo agent who 35 years ago was seen to murder and beat Jews in the Polish cities of Kielce and Czestochowa. He would have been a teen-ager then.

Walus maintains he has never killed anyone: "I am innocent, clean like a blank sheet of paper."

Walus first visited the United States in 1959. In 1963 he returned, to reside quietly on Chicago's southwest side — until Jan. 26, 1977, when federal officials thrust a civil complaint into his hands.

Walus and his wife worry most about what conviction and possible deportation later would mean to their sons, Arthur, 16, and Paul, 13.

Walus and his wife renounced Polish citizenship when they became U.S. citizens. They do not know what country would accept them.

"No matter where we go they would have to learn a new language," Mrs. Walus said of her sons. But Arthur has warned his parents he will not leave the country. He threatens to run away.

Walus is deeply in debt. So far he owes $60,000 to defense attorney Robert Korenkiewicz. Costs could climb to $100,000. Because he cannot work, he has borrowed $20,000 from friends and relatives. Walus has had five heart attacks and is retired on a permanent disability leave from his job as an assembly line worker.

City Counts 2 Accidents

An estimated $1,400 property damage resulted from two traffic collisions investigated by Greenville Police yesterday.

Heaviest damage resulted from an 8:15 a.m. mishap on Elm Street, 200 feet South of the North Overlook Drive intersection, involving cars driven by Hubert Allen Westbrook of 113 Hillside Dr. and Rebecca Diane Clark of 1402 Polk Ave.

Damage was estimated by investigators at $800 to the Westbrook car and $200 to the Clark auto.

An estimated $200 damage resulted to each of two cars involved in a 6:50 p.m. mishap on Fourth Street, 25 feet West of the Cadillac Street intersection.

Police reported a parked car owned by Barbara Barghen Williams of 1408 West Fourth St. was struck by a car driven by Calvin Earl Edwards of 1504A West Fourth St.

Edwards was charged with failing to see his intended movement could be made in safety.

Retirees' Group Meets Saturday

Members of Pitt County Chapter No. 1530 of the National Association of Retired Federal Employees (NARFE) will meet at noon, Saturday, April 15 at the Three Steers Restaurant for a Dutch luncheon.

Guest speaker will be Mrs. Marry Anne Barnes, dietician. All federal retirees and employees with five or more years of service are welcomed.

Vow Fight Ban On Lemon Sales

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — The Carolinas Independent Automobile Dealers Association has already threatened to fight a proposed Federal Trade Commission regulation designed to keep consumers from buying a lemon when they buy a used car.

The commission is presently studying the plan, and any type of action on the bill is not expected for months. But the automobile dealers association is afraid the FTC may require the inspection and guarantee of many used car parts, and they say they will fight the legislation in court.

"We'll pull every legal trick there is to try to delay this thing," said John Ellis of High Point, executive director of the association. Ellis said the proposed regulation would cost automobile dealers at least $1.4 billion a year and would force them to add at least $200 to the price of each used car.

But FTC administrative law judge James Greenan disagreed with Ellis's figures. Greenan has presided over the hearings for two years and will make his recommendations to the FTC in a few weeks.

"We've got recommendations all over hell's half-acre," Greenan said. "It's vastly premature for anyone to presume what the commission's thinking will be."

The proposed regulations would not affect used cars sold by individuals.

During the hearings on the proposed regulation, the FTC staff suggested that dealers have to tell the potential buyer things such as if the engine knocks, whether the doors open, whether the brakes work and what types of damage the car had been subjected to.

"We can't live with this or anything like it," Ellis said. "If dealers must disclose all defects to consumers, consumers should be required to disclose the same thing when they trade a car."

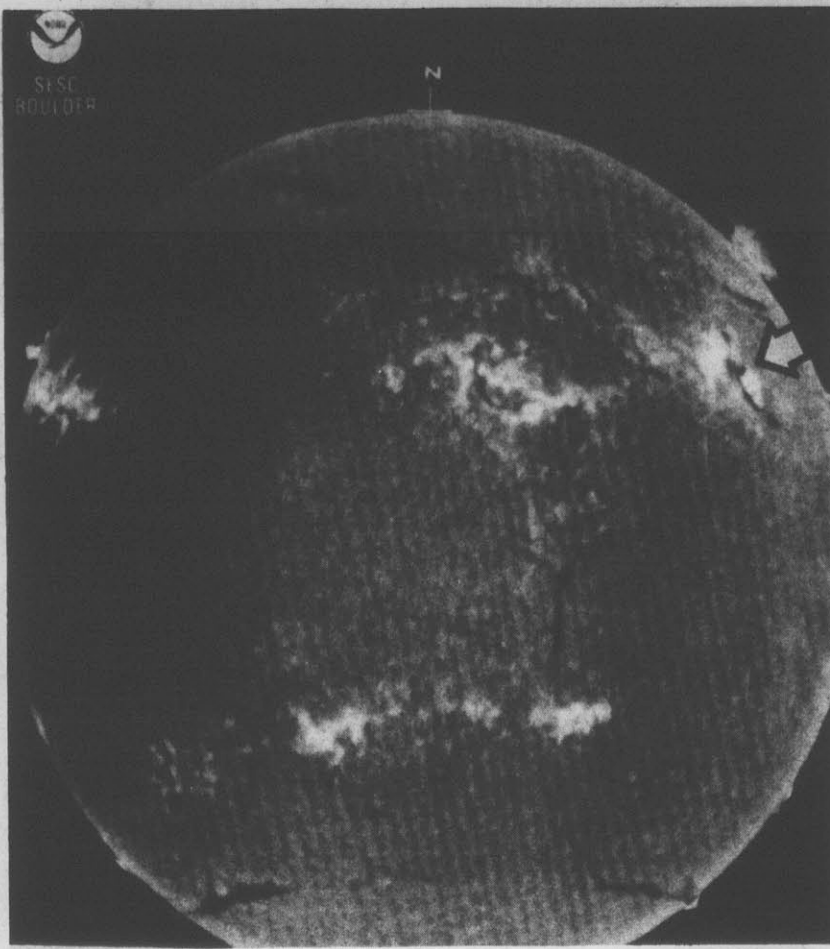

Moderated Panel At Gathering

Czechs Pack Hall For Johnny Cash Concert

By IVA DRAPALOVA
Associated Press Writer

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia (AP) — For 20 years Czechs hummed his songs, listened to his records and played his tapes. Now, with a chance to cheer him in person, they packed every seat at Johnny Cash's first concert inside the Soviet Bloc.

"We never dreamed we would have the reception we got," Cash told the youthful audience in his final Prague appearance this week. "Thank you for it."

"It's very exciting to see they know all John's songs," said June Carter, Cash's wife, at a luncheon given by U.S. Ambassador Thomas R. Byrne.

Cash's four concerts in two days, sold out a month in advance, drew 44,000 persons to the Winter Sports Hall. Traffic jammed all approaches to the hall for more than an hour before the concerts. Special buses brought fans from as far away as Pilsen, 60 miles to the west, and Olomouc, 150 miles to the east.

Old favorites like "Ring of Fire" were greeted with piercing whistles of approval and thundering applause. Sometimes the audience accompanied songs by rhythmic clapping.

The response was "incredible," said daughter Roseanne. "It makes you want to do the best for them."

Simpson Preparing To Apply For HUD Grant

SIMPSON — Plans are afoot for the town of Simpson to make an application for a Community Development grant from the Department of Housing Urban Development.

On Wednesday night, April 12, the first of three public meetings was held to get citizen input for the planned program. Simpson is eligible for a grant not to exceed $500,000, and an effort is being made during April to determine the grant amount the town needs to apply for.

John Crew, a consultant for the town of Simpson and senior planner in the Division of Community Assistance, Department of Natural Resources and Community Development in Washington, said the number of citizens attending the first meeting was encouraging.

"There were 21 people at this first public meeting held in the town's Education Building," Crew said, "and their consensus was that housing, especially the rehabilitation of housing, is the major concern and problem in Simpson at this time."

Crew explained that the 21 attending identified 21 housing concerns, 19 of them related to rehabilitation.

"Those attending agreed that their concerns tie in with the area outlined in a map we have prepared at the area in which work needs to be done," Crew added.

Two more public meetings for citizen input are scheduled for April — at 8 p.m. on Wednesday, April 19 and again on Wednesday, April 26.

Whatever the amount of the grant Simpson applies for must be decided on and the grant application submitted to HUD no later than May 15.

"We hope to continue to get the cooperation of people here and to have a total input from them during the next two meetings," Crew said.

Shevchenko Asks Cash, Safety

By WILLIAM N. OATIS
Associated Press Writer
UNITED NATIONS (AP)—Arkady Shevchenko, the Russian maverick at the United Nations, is reported demanding money and U.S. protection before he will resign and relieve Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim of a difficult choice between firing him and facing Soviet wrath.

U.N. spokesman Francois Giuliani said the top Soviet U.N. employee wanted "a mixed bag of money and personal security" to resign from his $76,000-a-year job.

When he resigns, Waldheim told reporters in Vienna, "this will become an affair between the Soviet and U.S. governments."

Some diplomats expressed concern that the affair would foul the atmosphere for Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance's talks in Moscow next week on nuclear arms reductions.

Informed sources said Shevchenko wants the money he has paid toward the U.N. pension for which he is not yet eligible, a lump sum for the two remaining years of his contract and assurances he can remain in the United States.

One Soviet informant predicted he would get more than $100,000.

In Washington, State Department spokesman Tom Reston said Shevchenko "is free to stay here, return to the U.S.S.R., or go to another country as far as we are concerned."

The 47-year-old Ukrainian was scheduled to return to Moscow on leave this week but instead left his job as under-secretary-general for political and Security Council affairs April 5 because of "differences with his government," a spokesman for Waldheim announced Monday. He has not been seen in public since.

Shevchenko's American lawyer, Ernest Gross, says the missing man is in seclusion near New York but is not a defector. Gross said Shevchenko intends to remain a Soviet citizen.

The Soviet government accused the U.S. government of a "detestable frameup" and a "premeditated provocation" and charged that U.S. intelligence services were holding Shevchenko under duress. The State Department denied the charges.

Although Shevchenko's post is reserved for a Soviet citizen nominated by the Soviet government, Gross contended that the U.N. Charter prohibits Waldheim from firing him at the demand of the Russians. But a well-placed source said the Soviet mission asked Waldheim to get Shevchenko's resignation, and the secretary-general told Soviet Ambassador Oleg A. Troyanovsky he would do his best to get it.

In Vienna, Waldheim today denied a report by Mikhail A. Kharlamov, Troyanovsky's deputy, that the secretary-general had accepted Moscow's nomination of Victor L. Issraelyan, a veteran Soviet diplomat, to succeed Shevchenko.

"I neither got a proposal from the Soviet side nor have I approved it," Waldheim told reporters.

Gross said Shevchenko was waiting to see Waldheim, who had been scheduled to return from Europe Sunday. But Waldheim said today he is going to the Middle East over the weekend, making stops in Lebanon and Israel.

An Army Of Inspectors

TULSA, Okla. (AP)—The massive size of the Oral Roberts University City of Faith medical center will require the addition of five more inspectors, says the director of Tulsa's protective inspections division.

Charles Banks said Wednesday the project now underway will require that he add a supervisor, building inspector, mechanical inspector, electrical inspector and plumbing inspector to his 36 member staff.

The inspectors would oversee construction and insure that the three towers of the complex are built to specifications of the city code, Banks said.

Two weeks ago, ORU was issued the largest building permit in city history to build the 60-story and 20-story towers planned near the ORU campus in southern Tulsa.

A permit has not been requested for the proposed 30-story hospital structure. The controversial hospital portion of the project is subject to the approval of the Oklahoma Health Planning Commission.

The building permit for the first two towers in the complex was for $54 million. Foundation work at the complex has been commenced with driving of piles to support the buildings.

Quit War Against Bureaucracy

By MICHAEL PUTZEL
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP)—The

bureaucracy got to Harry Cain this week, and he quit.

"I don't think I can say why I decided to do it now," the $42,000-a-year bureaucrat said after announcing his decision Wednesday to about 200 of the federal civil servants who worked for him. "I was flying home from Phoenix and decided, now."

Cain, 40, just decided he couldn't fight the bureaucratic rules any longer. He couldn't hire the people he wanted and couldn't fire those he didn't.

But he didn't put it that way in his speech. Cain has a stutter and began slowly, deliberately, cough drops clicking against his teeth.

"I have been in the health programs of this department since 1962 and have been extremely fortunate in having had a wide range of exciting, worthwhile challenges."

Cain's voice failed him. He pushed the microphone away, paused a few seconds, then gave up and sat down. His boss, Henry Foley, whom Cain brought into government years ago, stepped to the podium to "continue for my good friend."

Plan Study Of Housing Needs

The housing committee of the Greenville Area Chamber of Commerce is beginning a study of the housing needs in the Greenville area, committee chairman Lily Richardson said today.

Mrs. Richardson noted that the members of the committee will be telephoning a number of businesses, apartment complexes, realtors and building supply companies in order to gather first hand information on the availability of housing and the need for housing.

Additional information can be secured by contacting Lynne Olmsted, manager of the Chamber's Community Development Division at 752-4101.

Solberg To Be Speaker

Patrice Solberg, an attorney on the staff of the Institute of Government, University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, will address hospital administrators, attorneys representing hospitals and practicing physicians at a seminar to be held May 19-20.

The seminar is being held at the beach, and for further information call, 757-4600.

Sponsor Spring Fling Saturday

The Winterville Christian Church is sponsoring a "Spring Fling" involving a flea market-craft show-auction on Saturday, April 15 in the church parking lot.

Booths open at 10 a.m. with the auction beginning at 6 p.m. There will also be a sidewalk cafe.

Foley, now Cain's boss in the Health Resources Administration of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, read Cain's prepared remarks: "I have totally lost my tolerance for the bureaucratic swamp through which a bureau like this must wade," he read. "The widest and deepest channel in the swamp, of course, is affectionately known as the personnel system."

"Lesser channels include procurement, reports clearance, regulations development, et cetera, in each of which good waders have been known to drown. In the last several years, I've waded through most of those channels, often with the water up to my nose. Too much of anything can ruin one's taste for it."

He urged support for President Carter's proposed overhaul of the civil service system to give managers more authority to fire and more responsibility to perform. But Cain clearly had had enough.

HARRY CAIN

"I wish only that I could have made some progress in draining the swamp," he said. "Having failed at that, I wish (my colleagues) strength, stamina, hope, good humor, faith, a charitable spirit and whatever else they need to keep their heads above the still-rising water."

When the speech was over, several bureaucrats came up to say a few words to their departing boss. The first one, a younger man whose lower lip was quivering, said simply, "You're a good man, Harry Cain," and turned away. A woman threw her arms around him. Others wished him luck.

"What are you going to do now?" Cain was asked. "I'm going to swim over to the side, climb up and dry out. I'll think about it after that."

Rampants Capture Win Over Kinston

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

KINSTON — Rose High School may have found some more help in the pitching department last night. Lindsey Winstead went the distance in hurling Rose past Kinston, 5-1, and could find himself worked into the starting lineup.

Winstead, a junior righthander, has seen only "B" team action prior to tonight's game, and is also coming off a broken thumb which limited his playing time.

In his seven innings on the mound, he scattered six hits, gave up an unearned run, walked none and struck out three.

Meanwhile, the Rampants were banging two Kinston pitchers for nine hits, scoring three earned runs.

"I think it was one of our better games," Coach Ronald Vincent said. "We're playing with more intensity now."

"The sticks came through tonight, too. And we hit a number of good shots that just didn't fall in for us," Vincent added.

Greg Lee, for instance, went one-for-four in the game, but twice hit solid line drives to left field which were caught.

"Winstead picked a good game," the coach said. "He just may move into the starting rotation. He will certainly have another chance to show what he can do."

Rose opened the scoring in the game in the second inning. Jeff Aldridge opened the frame with a single to left and moved up when the ball was bobbled there. With one down, Joey Mattheis singled to left. Skip Topping then added another single to left, scoring Aldridge. Mattheis moved on to third on the play, and when the ball was misplayed there, he moved on in to score the second run.

Rose threatened again in the fourth, putting a man on second with one down, and moving him to third with two away, but he died there.

Kinston didn't get a man on against Winstead until the third batter in the third inning, when opposing pitcher Proctor Freeman singled to left.

Kinston lost a great chance to score in the fourth when an outstanding defensive play took them out of the inning. With one down, Glen Spence singled to deep center, but was thrown out trying to stretch his double into a triple. The next man singled and would have scored a run but not for the play.

Kinston finally did break the ice in the fifth. Drew Head reached when his fly to left was dropped. The play allowed him to reach second, and he took third on a wild pitch. Bert Statham brought him home with a sacrifice fly.

Kinston put men on second base in each of the final two innings, but never could get the hits to move them further.

Rose added three insurance runs in the sixth. Lee opened the frame with a double down the left field line. After two were out, Mattheis was intentionally walked to set up a force. But Topping crossed up the strategy by reaching on a slow roller down the third base line. When the play was made late to first, Lee alertly raced on home, beating another late throw.

Both runners moved up on the play, and scored when Will Sanderson singled to center.

Rose left men on second and third in the seventh, trying for more runs.

The victory moved the Rampant record to 7-3 on the year, while Kinston dropped to 7-4, falling twice to the Rampants.

Rose travels to Elizabeth City on Friday to face Northeastern in a Division I contest.

Vida Blue Gets Rough Welcome To NL

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

"My team colors are orange and black, not red and white," said Vida Blue.

Wednesday night, however, his colors were more like black and blue.

Blue made his National League debut — finally — against Cincinnati, of all teams, and the Reds treated him rather rudely even though his picture, biography and pro baseball record are prominently displayed on page 23 of the team's 1978 media guide.

NL Roundup

That, of course, was before Commissioner Bowie Kuhn blue-penciled the off-season deal in which the Reds thought they had acquired Blue from the Oakland A's for first baseman Dave Revering and $1.75 million.

The hard-throwing left-hander, who now toils across the bay from Oakland in San Francisco, was tagged for 10 hits and six runs — five earned — in five innings as the Reds pounded out 20 hits and walloped the Giants 12-3.

Elsewhere, the Houston Astros edged the Los Angeles Dodgers 11-10, the St. Louis Cardinals downed the Pittsburgh Pirates 5-1, the Montreal Expos nipped the Philadelphia Phillies 8-7 and the Chicago Cubs beat the New York Mets 4-2. San Diego at Atlanta was rained out.

Astros 11, Dodgers 10
Pinch hitter Jesus Alou's

grounder scored Jimmy Sexton from third base in the bottom of the ninth inning to end a 29-hit slugfest. Art Howe opened the inning with a double, pinch runner Sexton moved to third on Wilbur Howard's grounder and scored when Alou's grounder was fielded by shortstop Bill Russell too late for a play at the plate.

The Astros failed to hold an 8-3 lead built with five runs in the fourth inning on Howe's three-run homer and Bob Watson's two-run double. Enos Cabell also homered for Houston while Rick Monday connected for Los Angeles.

Cardinals 5, Pirates 1

Bob Forsch hurled a four-hitter, striking out nine, and Mike Tyson doubled home the tie-breaking run in the fourth inning as the Cardinals beat Pittsburgh ace John Candelaria. A two-out throwing error by shortstop Frank Taveras helped the Cardinals snap a 1-1 deadlock. Ken Reitz reached second base on the error and scored on Tyson's double.

Expos 3, Phillies 7

Gary Carter and Chris Speier slammed two-run homers and Larry Parrish added a two-run single but Montreal needed a ninth-inning run off Gene Garber on Pepe Frias' double and Andre Dawson's single to withstand a two-run Philadelphia rally in the bottom of the inning.

Cubs 4, Mets 2

Ray Burris' five-hit pitching and two-base errors by New York outfielders Steve Henderson and Bruce Boicclair helped Chicago to victory.

The Cubs got a run in the second on singles by Bobby Murcer, Dave Kingman and Manny Trillo and tied it in the fifth on Henderson's error, a sacrifice and Greg Gross' grounder. In the sixth, Boicclair dropped Murcer's fly ball and Kingman singled for the go-ahead run. Chicago added an insurance run in the eighth when Murcer doubled and Manny Trillo singled.

In A Cloud Of Dust

San Francisco Giants' runner Terry Whitfield slides across the bag under the tag by Cincinnati Reds' third baseman Pete Rose for a triple in the fourth inning of a game in Cincinnati Wednesday night. Whitfield drilled a long hit to centerfield and outran the throw to Rose from Reds, outfielder Cesar Geronimo. (AP Laserphoto)

Ken Norton Signs To Fight Man He Claims He Has Never Liked

NEW YORK (AP) — "I haven't liked him since the first time I met him," says Ken Norton of Larry Holmes.

Norton will have a chance to vent his feelings when he meets Holmes June 9 at Las Vegas.

On that night, Holmes will be trying to wrest Norton's World Boxing Council heavyweight championship.

"They call me the Easton Assassin," Holmes said Wednesday, "but after I get done with Ken Norton, they'll be calling me the Easton Can Opener."

Norton didn't betray even a hint of a smile at the remark, which drew laughter at a news conference to announce the scheduled 15-rounder at Caesars Palace. It will be nationally televised by ABC.

"I just don't like the man," said Norton. "That's all. He's trying to emulate a man (Muhammad Ali) he can't. His wit isn't as quick and he can't fight as well. Some people just rub me the wrong way."

"People think there's something bad between Norton and me," said Holmes, of Easton, Pa. "We just don't see eye to eye."

Promoter Don King is delighted. Grudge matches are attention-getters, and the two fighters helped build the image even before the news conference.

Photographers asked Holmes to pose with Norton. Holmes moved next to Norton, but Norton turned his back. There were some words and Holmes walked away.

Norton became champion when the WBC withdrew recognition from Leon Spinks, claiming he violated an agreement that he would fight Norton in the first defense of the title he won from Ali Feb. 15. Spinks, still champion in the eyes of the World Boxing Association, is scheduled for a rematch against Ali at the New Orleans Superdome Sept. 15.

Spinks and other critics have called Norton a "paper champion."

"You're always a champion on paper," said Norton. "It's what you do after you get it that counts. I would like to fight again before September. I want to fight as much as possible."

The purse structure for Norton and Holmes, King said, calls for the champion to get about $3 million and the challenger about $500,000.

King said ABC is paying $3.2 million for the entire package.

Lady Jaguars Far Behind

Hosting Pike finished first with 56½ points, while Elm City was right behind with 54½. Bertie was third with 31½, while Farmville Central trailed with 19½.

Elm City won five individual events, while Wilson took four. Farmville Central won two and Bertie, one. Wilson took two of the three relays, while Elm City won the other.

Armstrong won the 100 and the 220 for Elm City, while Williams took the mile, 440 and 880 for Wilson.

Farmville Central's girls return to action on Wednesday, hosting Greene Central and Charles B. Aycock.

This May Be Renner's Time

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — Unpretentious Jack Renner, his white Ben Hogan-type cap notwithstanding, is a young touring pro who sort of sneaks up on you — unheralded but among the top money winners.

The 21-year-old Renner, a pro since 1976, had missed the cut only once in 10 tournaments going into today's start of the 10th Tallahassee Open and had won $40,722 to gain the 25th spot among golf's 1978 earners.

Renner's best finish as a pro in a major tournament came two weeks ago when he wound up second in the Greensboro Open. He finished sixth at Phoenix and 11th at San Diego. Last year, his first full year on the tour, he earned $12,837 with his best finish a sixth at Quad Cities.

Among those vying for the $16,000 first prize here are Lon Hinkle, the ninth-leading money winner with $57,288 and loser in a sudden-death playoff to Ed Sneed a year ago; Bob Murphy; Mike McCullough; Rik Massengale; Bruce Lietzke; Lyn Lott; George Burns; Bob Wadkins; Grier Jones, and John Mahaffey.

Orioles Off To Poor Start

By FRANK BROWN
AP Sports Writer

It has been 13 years since the Baltimore Orioles had a poorer start than the 0-5 record that has dropped them to the bottom of the American League's East Division.

The Seattle Mariners haven't even been around for 13 months. But they are suffering a similar affliction: a five-game losing streak and a lengthening list of disappointments.

"This is a nightmare," said Orioles Manager Earl Weaver after a three-run outside-the-park home run by sickly Amos Otis and an inside-the-park shot by Darrell Porter carried the Kansas City Royals to a 5-2 victory Wednesday night. "I'd like to wake up."

Seattle Manager Darrell

AL Roundup

Johnson might have been thinking the same thing after watching a credible pitching performance by Rich Honeycutt ruined by errors in a 4-3 loss to the Oakland A's.

"Honeycutt pitched outstanding baseball," said Johnson, though the rookie's wild pitch permitted a run to score in the A's three-run seventh. Seattle came back to tie the game 3-3 in the eighth, but Jeff Newman led off the A's ninth with a game-winning home run. "It's a tough way to lose, but ..."

In the other American League games, the Detroit Tigers trimmed the Texas Rangers 3-2 behind Mark Fidrych, the California Angels defeated the Minnesota Twins 9-5, the Boston Red Sox bested the Cleveland Indians 6-3, the Milwaukee Brewers — helped by Moose Haas' 14-strikeout pitching — trimmed the New York Yankees 5-3 and the Chicago White Sox nipped the Toronto Blue Jays, 5-4.

Tigers 3, Rangers 2
Fidrych survived a two-run, first-inning homer by the Rangers' Al Oliver and permitted Texas just five other hits in helping Detroit come back to win. "I was over-throwing the ball early," said The Bird. "But I decided I was still going to throw my best pitches at the Rangers. I struck Oliver out in the ninth inning with the same pitch he hit a home run off me in the first. You lose in this game when you give up."

Angels 9, Twins 5

Rick Miller's first home run since 1974, a grand slam, highlighted a nine-run first inning and carried California to its victory over Minnesota. Frank Tanana survived a home run and a triple by Rod Carew before getting help from the bullpen.

Brewers 5, Yankees 3
A two-run, tie-breaking double by Don Money backed the club record 14-strikeout performance by Haas and carried Milwaukee to its fifth consecutive victory. The Brewers continued their power barrage. Larry Hise cracked the team's 11th of the season — his third — to tie the score 3-3. Sal Bando had homered earlier for Milwaukee.

Red Sox 6, Indians 3

Home runs by Jim Rice and Fred Lynn and a two-run single by Jerry Remy paced Boston's victory over Cleveland. Andre Thornton connected for the Indians.

White Sox 5, Blue Jays 4
Jorge Orta slammed two home runs while Ralph Garr and Wayne Nardengen hit one apiece to power Chicago past Toronto.

IT'S HARD TO IMAGINE a season ending with more of a flourish than the National Basketball Association showed Sunday in the final games of its regular season. So much was happening in so many different places, a fan would have needed four or five television sets plus a computer to keep up with all the action.

One day provided nearly a season's worth of sentiment and emotion, red-hot shooting and sky-high slam dunking, and a division race that didn't end until the final seconds of the final game.

The emotional focal point was in Boston where veteran Celtic John Havlicek was playing in his final game.

"Hondo" was greeted by the crowd at the Boston Garden with a nine-minute standing ovation before the game and made a tearful farewell speech which lasted for 15 minutes at halftime.

It was Havlicek's 1,270th NBA game, a league record. He brought his point total to 26,395 career points in the contest, second only to Wilt Chamberlain and Oscar Robertson. And the swingman went out in style. Playing one of the best games of his career, Havlicek scored 21 second-half points as the Celtics whipped the Buffalo Braves 131-114. He finished with 29.

A well-loved and most non-controversial player, Havlicek was refunded the $925 in fines he paid during his career by NBA Commissioner Larry O'Brien. The check was donated to the Special Olympics. O'Brien also gave him a gold lifetime pass to all NBA games.

Hondo's number 17 jersey will be retired by the Celtics. CBS announced during the game that Havlicek will join the network's broadcasting team as an analyst next season.

THE LEAGUE SCORING race provided many of the final day's thrills as first David Thompson and then George Gervin went on scoring rampages in their battle for the crown.

Thompson, the former N. C. State star now with the Denver Nuggets, went into the final game needing to outscore Gervin by 15 points to take the title. He was up to the occasion as he pumped in 73 points in a 139-137 loss to Detroit.

Thompson set a record with 32 points in the second quarter and his 53 first-half points were just six shy of the NBA mark. His total of 73 tied him with Wilt Chamberlain for the third-highest production in a single game.

Gervin, playing a night game for San Antonio in New Orleans, was informed of Thompson's feat Sunday afternoon. Being awakened from a nap with the news, the 6-7 guard exclaimed, "David T with 73! My, oh my and whoeee! I haven't ever hit 58, but I'm going for them."

His words were not just idle chatter. He scored 33 in the second quarter, tied Thompson's first half point production with 53 and midway through the third quarter scored his 59th point to win the scoring crown. He was taken out shortly after, finishing with 63 points as the Jazz scored a 153-132 win.

IN OTHER DEVELOPMENTS, the Milwaukee Bucks moved into the playoffs in the very last game to end Sunday by virtue of Golden State's 111-106 loss to Seattle. Had the Warriors won the game, they would have received the Western Conference berth.

"Our kids really deserved it because we worked so hard all season," Milwaukee coach Don Nelson said. "I'm a little sad for Golden State after it made such a run at the end of the season, but our kids really deserved it. We really played well, too."

In the first round of the playoffs, Atlanta faces Washington and Cleveland takes on New York in the Eastern Conference, while Los Angeles and Seattle and Milwaukee and Phoenix tangle in the Western Conference.

Also on Sunday, Chicago coach Ed Badger resigned and was replaced by Jerry Sloan. Badger reportedly will try to get the head coaching job at Cincinnati, while Sloan, an assistant on the staff and former Bulls star, could get the Chicago job on a full-time basis.

Sloan's initial coaching effort was unsuccessful, however, as he guided the Bulls to a 99-85 loss to Atlanta.

Rampants Back In Contention

"Ronnie Chapman and I are going to have to have a little talk," Rose coach Ronald Vincent grinned. Moments before, Chapman had run Vincent's third-base "stop" sign to score the winning run in the Rampants' 2-1 victory over Wilson Fike.

Chapman, who had struck out with a man on second earlier in the game, redeemed himself in the top of the eighth with a single to send Robert Morehead to third. Morehead scored on an error on the play and Chapman went to second.

When the next batter, Mike Shank, rapped a hit into right field, Chapman rounded third and slid home safely without slowing up, despite the signal to stop from Vincent.

"I think the third baseman heard me call 'Stop!,' Vincent said, "because he held the ball" after getting the throw from the left fielder. "By the time he spun around and saw Chapman going home, it was too late."

The victory was the second for Rose in Division I against two losses. Coming into the game, Fike was the only undefeated team in the league.

Vincent said he feels the Rampants are now in good shape in the conference race and that the eventual champion could suffer as many as four losses.

Hard Bounce

Chicago White Sox' third baseman Eric Soderholm smashes into the ground after losing his balance trying to catch a fly ball by Toronto Blue

Jays' Rico Carty in the fourth inning Wednesday in Chicago. The ball bounced free and Carty was safe at first base. Backing up Soderholm is shortstop Don Kessinger. (AP Laserphoto)

Knicks Red-Hot In Win

By ALEX SACHARE
AP Sports Writer

The home-court advantage doesn't mean a thing if the visiting team is hitting 61 percent of its shots.

That's the formula the New York Knicks used Wednesday night to beat the Cleveland Cavaliers 132-114 at Richfield, Ohio, in the opener of their first-round National Basketball Association playoff series.

"That was a great ball game, one of the best this team has played all season long," said Coach Willis Reed after enjoying his team's explosive offensive display that featured 41 points by center Bob McAdoo and 16 apiece by Earl Monroe and Spencer Haywood.

Two other best-of-three first-round playoff series got underway Wednesday, with the Washington Bullets beating the Atlanta Hawks 103-94 and the Seattle SuperSonics defeating the Los Angeles Lakers 102-90. Milwaukee beat Phoenix 111-103 Tuesday night in another playoff opener.

The second game in each series will be played Friday night, with third games, if necessary, on Sunday.

McAdoo scored 15 of his points in a 36-point third quarter as the Knicks took a 99-90 lead into the final period and then drew away. New York's 132 points were the most scored against Cleveland all year.

Forward Campy Russell led

Cleveland with 21 points and reserve guard Terry Furlow scored 20.

Bullets 103, Hawks 94
Washington built a 75-57 lead in the third period and hung on to beat Atlanta, getting 14 points from reserve guards Larry Wright and Charles Johnson in the fourth quarter to turn back a Hawks rally.

"They were coming at us pretty good," said Washington Coach Dick Motta, who saw the lead dwindle to six points in the fourth quarter. "With 7 minutes to go we slowed up too much, got a little cautious. It was a natural thing, but we shouldn't have played against the clock so soon."

Told that it had not been a pretty game, Motta said, "I don't think you'll see any Atlanta game that's pretty. If they played in a dark alley, they'd be arrested. It was hard-nosed basketball, no place for the timid or weak at heart."

Bob Dandridge led Washington with 20 points despite sitting out the final period because of a recurrence of a pinched nerve in his neck.

Sonics 102, Lakers 90

At Seattle, Lakers center Kareem Abdul-Jabbar picked up his fifth personal foul 30 seconds into the fourth quarter and the Sonics ahead 73-68.

He sat out the next five minutes, during which time the Sonics stretched the lead to nine points. The Lakers could come no closer than five after that as Sonics center Marvin Webster scored seven of his team's last 15 points.

Gus Williams led the Sonics with 23 points and Webster and Fred Brown added 19 points apiece. Abdul-Jabbar topped Los Angeles with 26.

Los Angeles' Plans Intact

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The city's plans for a "Spartan" 1984 Olympic Games remain intact after successful negotiations with the International Olympic Committee, Mayor Tom Bradley says.

Bradley said Wednesday that differences between local officials and the IOC were ironed out during closed-door meetings in Mexico City earlier this week.

"We had no desire to run the Games," Bradley said. "All of that is the responsibility of the IOC. The city's essential concern is to hold the Games in a low-cost Spartan tradition without cost to the taxpayer."

The key concession granted Los Angeles by the IOC was veto power over any decision which could increase the cost of the Games, according to Bradley.

The agreement includes a wording change that permits Los Angeles to negotiate U.S. television rights for the Games and retain all money except for a one-third share taken by the IOC.

The IOC, in a letter signed by IOC President Lord Killanin, agreed that except for the television money, "the IOC will not request any other proceeds from the Games."

The IOC, Killanin's letter said, agrees to waive a rule that requires that television revenues be sent directly to the IOC and then distributed. The IOC agreed that television revenues would be distributed by Los Angeles.

IOC officials earlier had indicated that contingency plans were being developed to hold the Games elsewhere because of a reported challenge by Los Angeles officials to the IOC's power to control the Games.

IOC members reportedly were angered by a questionnaire returned recently by Los Angeles in which the city said it would take all television money.

Low-Key Atmosphere For Champions Golf

CARLSBAD, Calif. (AP) — There's a decided, low-key, relaxed, easy-going atmosphere about the $225,000 Tournament of Champions.

The world's finest golfers, winners of more than 50 international titles in the last 12 months, took it easy for a couple of days in the wake of the emotionally-draining Masters.

Only today, in the first round of one of the most prestigious events on the PGA Tour, did they really get to work.

Three of the favorites for the $45,000 first prize — defending champion Jack Nicklaus, U.S. Open winner Hubert Green and British Open titleholder Tom Watson — didn't arrive at the posh La Costa Country Club until Wednesday.

And Gary Player, the little South African who won the Masters, took a day off from his usual, non-stop schedule for complete relaxation, a massage, no golf. Many of the others in the elite 29-man field — winners all — followed his example, skipping practice rounds for a visit to the spa. Leisurely lunches replaced the usual intense preparations.

"After the Masters, or any major tournament, there's a natural letdown for a few days," said Nicklaus, five-time winner of this event.

Despite the letdown, Nicklaus and Player — who said he came into this tournament "absolutely drained, completely exhausted" — ranked as the top choices in the 72-hole chase over the 6,855-yard, par-72 La Costa Country Club course.

Other leading contenders included Green, Watson, PGA champion Lanny Wadkins, Hale Irwin and Tom Weiskopf, all multiple winners in the 12 months since the last Tournament of Champions.

This tournament, to be televised nationally by ABC-TV, is sponsored by Mutual of New York.

Ali (Again) Says Next Fight Will Be Last

FAIRBANKS, Alaska (AP) — Will his Sept. 15 heavyweight title rematch against Leon Spinks be Muhammad Ali's last fight? To listen to the ex-champion, it could be yes or maybe. The yesses appear to have it.

Spinks lifted Ali's crown with a 15-round split decision at Las Vegas Feb. 15, and the two have signed for a World Boxing Association title rematch at the New Orleans Superdome Sept. 15.

The World Boxing Council gave its version of the title to Ken Norton after Spinks refused to fight Norton in his first bout after the victory over Ali.

"I'm coming back for the last time," Ali said at one point during a news conference Wednesday. "I'm putting all my cards on the table. This is the third time to get my title back. And at my age now, I need to do everything right. I need to put it together."

At another point, the 36-year-old Ali said: "I'd like to wind it up in the Superdome. I'd like to fill the Superdome and be the first man to win the title three times, and go out champ."

At another point, Ali said: "I got another shot to come back and get my title, and make history. Then, naturally, I'd like to get out then."

But there also were some maybes.

"I don't know what I'm going to do. I have to get out soon, we all know that, and I want to go out a winner. I would hate to quit now after Spinks beat me," Ali said.

But would he really retire after the Spinks fight, in view of two previous pronouncements of retirement, and of unemployment?

"I don't want to say for sure that I will, but I'm intelligent and I've got wise people with me, and the odds are that we'll get out after getting the title. I won't hang around and lose it again."

Ali, in Alaska to film some television commercials for the Ford Motor Co., said he took Spinks lightly the first time, but that he won't on Sept. 15.

"I won't give him any rounds. I'll come right out dancing, giving him the old Ali shuffle," he said.

Reviving Of Draft Felt Politically Unfeasible

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Selective Service system, whose unwelcome "greetings" from Uncle Sam changed the lives of millions of American youths it drafted into the military over three decades, now faces an uncertain future of its own.

The agency had more than 9,000 full-time employees and some 20,000 unpaid members of local draft boards reporting to it at the height of the Vietnam war, but it is now in "deep standby" mothballs.

President Carter's government reorganization program is considering scrapping Selective Service as an independent agency and absorbing its present emergency planning role elsewhere, such as the Defense or Labor department.

The $50,000 director's post has been left unfilled since its last occupant, Byron Peptide, departed last year. Other executive offices are dark and unused. Sixty-seven employees remain scattered throughout its headquarters, which once occupied an entire floor of an office building.

Even the receptionists' cubicle at the front door stands empty.

Until draft registration ended two years ago, the Selective Service System issued every male youth on his 18th birthday the white pasteboard square known as a "draft card" that once was the standard means for a teen-ager to prove he was old enough to buy a beer.

It drafted more than 10 million men in World War II, about 1.5 million in the Korean War and 1.7 million men in the Vietnam war years, ending in 1973. The customary method was to send induction notices which started out, "Greetings."

Some officials want registration resumed because it would take up to 110 days to start a draft again in case of crisis. But less than five years after the anti-war and draft evasion memories of Vietnam, that does not now appear politically feasible.

"Many feel it's an infringement on an 18-year-old to require him to go down and register in this day and age," acknowledges Robert Shuck, a career civil servant who is sitting in as acting director.

The planning Shuck now does, aimed at setting up the system again in an emergency, is low-

Free Clinic For Animals

NEW WASHOE CITY, Nev. (AP) — A physician and his wife run a free clinic here for the sick and injured with nowhere else to go, specializing in treatment of gunshot wounds and the like.

Dr. James Laird and his wife, Nancy, a registered nurse, are on 24-hour call to treat sick animals. And they foot the bill for any treatment they give.

"It's discouraging to get a beautiful two-and-a-half-pound owl with wings so badly blown away we can't reconstruct them," said Mrs. Laird.

The Daily Reflector, Greenville, N.C. — Thursday, April 13, 1978 — 17

"The majority of the birds we treat have been shot," she said. "It's too bad because these birds have a terrific will to live and eventually starve to death. I don't know why people have to shoot them. I guess they make a nice moving target."

The Lairds turn their family room into a pet hospital at night. The animals are kept outside during the day. Laird and his wife have built incubators, made splints and constructed cages for their patients.

Laird, 58, and his wife, 48, said they had been treating animals for years. They ran a similar clinic in Pontiac, Mich., until they moved to Hawthorne.

Neve, in 1969 to get away from the cold, damp weather. They moved here, just east of Washoe Lake, in 1974.

The Lairds will pick up an animal if necessary, and if a bird or mammal needs an X-ray, they'll take the animal to a veterinarian and pay the bill.

For the past year, state Fish and Game officials have been bringing the Lairds injured birds found in the wilds.

"We want to warn people that if the animal is badly injured we put it to sleep," Mrs. Laird said. "If a bird can't fly perfectly well with both wings it isn't in shape to go out because it'll just starve to death," she said.

Notice is hereby given that Carolina Telephone Company, Tobacco, North Carolina, has made application to the North Carolina Utilities Commission for authority to adjust its rates and charges for telephone service to its North Carolina subscribers. The application proposes an annual increase in gross revenues of approximately $5,818,724.

Carolina has proposed alternative basic rate schedules for the Commission's consideration which produce approximately the same amount of additional annual revenue but which differ in the treatment of rates for Extended Area Service. The two basic rate proposals are as follows:

U.S. Aluminum Industry Glows Compared To Steel

By STEVEN PROKESCH
PITTSBURGH (UPI) — An executive of the Aluminum Company of America looked out of his office window over a church steeple to the U.S. Steel Building recently and said: "There but for the grace of God go we."

Alcoa executives don't rejoice over the misfortunes of the steel industry.

"The steel industry may be our competitor but it's a customer, too," one said.

Aluminum and steel are basic metals industries. But there are crucial differences between them — including the impact of imports, technology and demand for their products.

In 1977, the United States Steel Corp. had sales and operating revenues of $9.7 billion. Its net income was $137.9 million, down from $410.3 million in 1976. The firm's non-steel operations saved the nation's largest steelmaker from going into the red.

U.S. Steel Chairman Edgar B. Speer told UPI that the steel business did not offer a particularly attractive profit potential and his company planned to continue developing its non-steel operations.

Alcoa, the nation's leading aluminum producer, reported record sales and operating revenues of $3.42 billion in 1977. Net income was $195.2 million, compared with $143.8 million in 1976.

Alcoa executives expect the trend to hold.

"The economic health of Alcoa right now is good and stable and we're confident of the future," Alcoa President William B. Renner said in an interview. "But I still have great concern about escalating costs of labor, energy, raw materials and the availability of energy."

"Demand has been growing at a sounder rate than it has in the past," he said, predicting Alcoa's shipments will rise 5 percent to 7 percent in 1978, the same amount by which overall industry shipments are expected to increase.

Alcoa executives say their company will continue to operate at about 90 percent of capacity throughout 1978.

With the energy crisis not about to go away and aluminum an obvious way to make cars lighter and more efficient, Detroit has become increasingly interested in the light metal. Strong demand by transportation and beverage container industries are keeping flat-rolling mills working at capacity.

So it is no surprise that Alcoa plans to stick with aluminum.

Asked about diversification Harry M. Goern, Alcoa's general manager for corporate planning, said: "We're not spending an awful lot of time in that right now because we're concentrating primarily on the aluminum business, finding out where it is that we're strong."

The United States is the world's leading aluminum producer, accounting for about 31 percent of the world's annual output. By comparison, the U.S. share of world steel output has dropped dramatically over the last 20 years.

"In 1955, the United States was the world's largest (steel) producer with 39 percent of total output," the White House Council on Wage and Price Stability said in a study last year. "Today its share has declined to less than 20 percent, matching that of the European Common Market and Japan."

In 1971, the Soviet Union overtook the United States as the world's largest steel producer, a position it has maintained.

The steel industry laid much of the blame for its poor 1977 on the 17.8 percent share of the domestic steel needs captured by imports. The United States has been one of the strongest markets for steel during a period when worldwide demand has been weak.

Alcoa, on the other hand, is worried about insufficient imports.

"This country has been aluminum short," Goern said. "We generally import 5 percent to 10 percent of the aluminum that is consumed in this country. Something approaching 50 percent (of aluminum made in the U.S.) is consumed here."

"We don't get upset about fluctuations in imports. If imports don't begin to at least handle their traditional role and maybe expand, then we can start to talk about long-term shortages."

Alcoa analysts predict there will be an aluminum shortfall in the early 1980s and Alcoa has been building inventories for the last couple of years.

The Japanese are widely considered the most efficient steel producers in the world. But Goern said the Japanese aluminum industry is no challenge to the U.S. industry.

One reason for the U.S. aluminum industry's edge over competitors is that the technology to make the metal is still being developed.

"Technology in steelmaking is fundamentally known," Goern said.

Founded in 1888, Alcoa built up its research and development department early and with no outside technology available, has maintained a strong R&D department.

Last year, R&D expenditures totaled about $53 million, comprising about 19 percent of Alcoa's $281.7 million capital expenditure.

An example of technology Alcoa has sold is a system for controlling fluoride emissions from aluminum smelters that was installed at an Anaconda Aluminum Co. plant in Montana. Alcoa also has been building smelting potlines for Anaconda in Kentucky.

One major discovery that Alcoa has kept to itself is the Alcoa Smelting Process.

The product of 15 years of research, the Alcoa Smelting Process is now in pilot operation in Anderson County, Texas. It uses 30 percent less energy for smelting than the most efficient equipment now in use. The process is the first new method of making primary aluminum developed since Charles M. Hall, a founder of Alcoa, discovered how to use an electrolytic process to separate aluminum from its oxide in 1886.

The new process is significant because smelting accounts for about 71 percent of Alcoa's energy requirements.

Alcoa also plans this year to test a new smelting pot design that will cut the option of increasing metal production or reducing energy consumption, vital to an industry that uses a little more than 1 percent of the nation's total energy output and about 4 percent of the electricity generated in the United States.

The results of increased computer use also has proven the value of Alcoa's R&D expenditures.

"Computerization at a typical rolling mill permitted about doubling of capacity over the last 10 years," said Marvin E. Gantz Jr., Alcoa's executive vice president for mill products.

Alcoa experts believe increasing the use of computers could increase smelting pot efficiency about 4 percent.

Gantz said another big difference between the aluminum industry and the steelmakers is that with aluminum being a relatively newcomer, it has had to fight to take away markets from the older metals.

Two areas in which competition is especially fierce are automobiles and beverage containers.

Pressured by the government to develop more efficient cars, Detroit has increased the amount of aluminum used in vehicles. The average aluminum content in U.S.-made cars rose from 84 pounds in 1975 models to 114 pounds in 1978 models.

Alcoa has been pushing a fabricated aluminum wheel, which, it says, could reduce net car weight by up to 60 pounds.

Aluminum companies also have had success in wresting the beer and soft-drink can market away from the steel industry. In 1970, the aluminum industry's share of the beverage container market was only 13.7 percent. That share is now about 50 percent.

About $108 million out of Alcoa's $360 million capital expenditure in 1978 is earmarked for increasing and improving productivity.

Clean-Up Day Is Planned May 20

FARMVILLE — Representatives of several community organizations met Monday here to plan a Spring Cleanup Day to be held Saturday, May 20.

On this day trucks from the Town Sanitation Department and private businesses will be placed at strategic locations around town to aid yard and roadside cleanup by residents and community volunteers.

The Student Council Association of Farmville Central High School will be a major participant. Students will rake mow, pick up trash and perform any needed tasks for elderly and/or disabled persons during the week preceding May 20.

Initial planners were Mayor

Sara Albritton; Jack Farrior of the Boy Scouts; Jess Heizer of the Home and Lawn Garden Club; Frankie Moye of the DAR; Rudy Cobb, E. P. Freuler, and L. S. Willoughby of the Cleanup-Fixup Committee; John McAdams of Farmville Central High School; and Town Administrator Patrick Thomas.

It is asked that interested groups and individuals contact the office of Town Building Inspector H. P. Norman, 753-5921.

Elderly or disabled persons needing assistance of student volunteers should call FCHS, 753-5138 or 753-5139.

The rain date for the Cleanup Day is May 27.

The Properties of Contract Bridge state that you may draw an inference from the actions of an opponent at the table, but that you do so at your own risk. To an expert, anything you do could be a dead giveaway. Consider this hand from the Sunday Times Pair Championship, held in London at the end of January.

Several pairs reached seven spades on this hand, and almost everyone went down after relying on the club finesse for the thirteenth trick. The only player to score the grand slam was French ace, Henri Svarc.

Against Svarc's grand slam West led the king of hearts. Declarer ruffed, then cashed dummy's two high trumps. Now he came to his hand with the queen of diamonds. It was his intention to take the club finesse, but on the diamond trick East displayed some agitation and asked to inspect the trick.

Svarc decided that East could only be interested in the proceedings if he held the outstanding trump and the king of clubs. Therefore, he abandoned the club finesse in favor of another line.

Svarc started to run the diamonds. East realized that it would not help to ruff, so he discarded three hearts on the third, fourth and fifth diamonds. On these tricks Svarc discarded three clubs. Now Svarc carefully refrained from cashing the sixth diamond, for that would have allowed East to sluff his last heart and prevent declarer from ruffing another heart in dummy.

Instead, Svarc cashed the ace of clubs, then led the queen for a ruffing finesse. East covered and declarer ruffed. He entered dummy with a heart ruff, then discarded his last heart on the jack of clubs. The ace of trumps scored the thirteenth trick, and a brilliant piece of card-reading was suitably rewarded.

Writer Luckily Hooked On TV Shows

By JERRY BUCK
(AP) Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Since I began writing about television 11 years ago the question I am most often asked is: "Don't you ever get tired of watching that stuff?"

Frankly, no. I am hooked on television, although that doesn't mean I like everything I see.

As part of my work I try to watch every series several times during the year. So I will look in on "Charlie's Angels," "Laverne and Shirley," "Happy Days" and others that are not really to my personal taste.

I must confess, however, I have never been able to sit all the way through "Starsky and Hutch." Despite my resolve I always end up picking up a book or turning it off.

I like the movies, particularly such gems this year as "Mary White." "Thaddeus Rose and Eddie." "When Every Day Was the Fourth of July" and "Verona, the USO Girl." The ministries have been rather disappointing, except for "Washington: Behind Closed Doors," "The Awakening Land" and "How the West Was Won."

Here are some of the shows I usually watch:

"Lou Grant" — The best

newspaper series I've ever seen. Ed Asner's Lou Grant reminds me of a few bosses I've had, and in particular my old mentor in New York, Ed Dennehy, now retired. Incidentally, Ed's son, actor Brian Dennehy, has appeared in the series.

"Black Sheep Squadron" — A man's show, a rarity on TV. It's a part tailor-made for Robert Conrad. I like the male camaraderie among the pilots, but the show has suffered since NBC forced it to broaden its appeal to increase the ratings. And shame on you, NBC, for moving it up against "Hawaii Five-O."

"The Bob Newhart Show" — This series gets my vote as the most improved show of the year. It looked ready for the scrapheap last year. Suddenly, it's fresh and funny and better than ever. Too bad it's now come to an end.

"Hawaii Five-O" — The last of a breed, and still the classic, most stylized crime show of them all. The stories are bizarre without being unbelievable. Jack Lord's square-jawed prickliness and James Mac-

Arthur's just-one-of-the-boys-air play well against each other. "The Rockford Files" — The best of the tongue-in-cheek, off-the-wall detective shows. The stories have just the right amount of implausibility and James Garner is without peer as the private eye-cum-con man.

"M.A.S.H." — What more is there to say about this great show? Actors come and go, but it just keeps rolling along.

Other shows I try to see as often as possible are "Barney Miller," "One Day at a Time," "All in the Family," "Alice," "Three's Company," and "Soap."

And the one show I really hate to miss is "60 Minutes."

Speaking of Your Health...

Lester L. Coleman, M.D.

The Dread of Neglect

It's difficult to understand that there are thousands of children in the United States who are not properly immunized against infectious diseases. The failure to be vaccinated and to maintain immunization are rapidly becoming dire threats to the health of the American people.

Even one single unvaccinated child who pays a lifetime penalty with blindness, deafness or a devastating neurological disease is a sad reflection on the people responsible for such neglect.

The Center for Disease Control in Atlanta has issued a warning that all levels of immunization are substantially lower than they should be. In fact, these public health officials believe that the downward trend in vaccinations continues, despite arduous health campaigns.

My own feeling is that the campaigns are obviously not arduous enough, for the health of any community depends on complete immunization of its people. When there is less than 85 percent immunization in any area, the risk of an epidemic becomes great.

The laity has become terribly complacent about the remarkable scientific accomplishments that have virtually wiped out many of the infectious diseases. Yet they do exist, and when they occur, leave sad evidence of their complication.

Diphtheria, whooping cough, mumps, smallpox, tetanus, polio, measles and German measles can be completely wiped off the face of the earth with proper vaccination.

Far too many people have forgotten the panic that raged through a community when the first case of poliomyelitis was reported in the spring. If one were to recall the physical and emotional devastation of that period, then the incredible carelessness and negligence would be apparent.

Supporting a vaccination program in your own community insures the greatest safety within your home.

Five of us in the family swim in an indoor pool. The pool area reeks of chlorine when we first come into it. We get accustomed to it, but I always have some hesitancy thinking that possibly the chlorine can, in some way, be harmful. — Mrs. E. S., Ky. Dear Mrs. S.:

The concentration of chlorine is very light, despite the heavy odor that is present in a pool area. The protection it adds compensates for the temporary unpleasant odor. There are no dangers associated with chlorinated water that is used for swimming. Only rarely is there any allergic skin reaction or irritation of the eyes to the chlorine or the variations of chlorine that are used.

A brisk fresh water shower after swimming insures against precipitation of chlorine salts on the skin surface. You can be sure that if there were any dangers to chlorination of pool water, public health officials would not sanction its use.

Pitt Blood Donor Survey Shows Many Repeaters

Dick Carney, administrator of the Tar River Sub-Center here, released statistics regarding Pitt County's blood donorship program.

According to Carney, so far this fiscal year, which ends in June, 1,907 donors have contributed 2,964 pints of blood toward an annual collection goal of 3,245. He said the figures indicate a high number of repeat donors for the county.

Carney said that the figures are as of March 31, and do not include a recent two-day blood-mobile at East Carolina University that resulted in a collection total of 543 pints of blood.

The official noted that a breakdown of the county blood donors reveal that 7.9 percent have A negative blood; 35.2 percent are A positive blood type;

five-tenths of a percent are AB negative; 2.7 percent are AB positive; 1.1 percent are B negative; 9.1 percent are B positive; 7.5 percent are O negative; and 35.5 percent are O positive.

He added that there is a constant need for all negative blood groups, especially O negative, which has a universal characteristic, making it possible to transfuse it to almost any other blood type.

Within the next six months, he reported, it will be possible for local residents to make an appointment to donate blood within the facilities of the sub-center, located adjacent to the site of the new ECU Medical School.

He disclosed that pending final approval and funding by the American National Red Cross, the local sub-center, a part of the Tidewater Regional Red Cross blood program, will become a full scale collection, processing and distribution center for all types of blood products.

At the present time, he explained, the local sub-center is distributing blood to 16 eastern North Carolina hospitals. It is also the base for a staff of 14 nurses and two technical assistants.

Recruitment efforts for blood donors at the new sub-center, Carney pointed out, will be a joint effort between his staff and the local Pitt Red Cross chapter, directed by Mrs. Ruth Taylor.

He said that persons desiring any information regarding the blood program should contact his office at 758-1141. An open house is planned for the sub-center pending its completion and installation of various pieces of equipment.

Cool Plant Is No Joke

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Remember the old-time farmer whose notion of when to water crops depended on whether they felt cool or warm to his hand?

That very notion is under intensive study at the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Water Conservation Laboratory here.

Instead of using a hand to take crop temperatures, laboratory director Herman Bouwer and his fellow scientists use super-sensitive infrared thermometers.

Now in the experimental stage, the thermometers are manipulated manually, but the scientists envision infrared equipment mounted in satellites capable of global scanning of agricultural fields.

Already the National Aeronautics and Space Administration has taken "heat pictures" of farm fields near here as part of the project.

At the bottom of this is the principle of water evaporation. When it evaporates, water cools. Likewise, as plants give off moisture through leaves, they are cooled. So, a cool plant has enough water.

Crosby's Barber Said The Best

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Bing Crosby called Claude Vancleave the best barber in France in 1944, and the Memphis man has a signed franc note to prove it.

Vancleave, 64, had been a barber here for more than a dozen years when he trimmed the singer's hair in Normandy shortly after D-Day. He was a medical corpsman working with an Army field hospital when Crosby came to entertain.

"Bing came through the hospital, and the boys were joshing him about how badly he needed a haircut.

"So they called me up there and I gave him a trim. When he was through, he gave me a 50-franc note and I asked him to sign it. So he wrote on it, 'To Vancleave. The best barber in France, 1944.'"
