

Abductors Say Moro Treaty Said Within 2 Votes Now Dead

ALDO MORO

CORVARO, Italy (AP) — A message purportedly from the terrorist kidnapers of Aldo Moro announced today that the former premier was executed and his body dumped in a mountain lake near here. Divers flown to the scene began to search the muddy waters.

The statement, bearing the signature of the Red Brigades, said the 61-year-old president of the ruling Christian Democratic Party was executed "by suicide" and thrown into Lake Duchessa, 72 miles northeast of Rome and three miles from the hamlet of Corvaro. The reference to suicide apparently was a mock reference to the disputed deaths in prison of German terrorists.

Moro, five times a premier and probable next president of the republic, was abducted and his five bodyguards were killed by the Brigades, Italy's most feared urban guerrilla gang, in a Rome street ambush March 16. The kidnapers announced three days ago that he had been convicted in a "people's trial" and sentenced to die.

Police could not immediately confirm that today's communique, found in Rome, was authentic. Christian Democrat officials said it appeared to be, but they did not exclude the possibility of a ruse to shock the nation.

Frogmen, soldiers and police flew in helicopters to the lake — virtually inaccessible to ground vehicles — and began looking for the body.

By MIKE SHANAHAN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate supporters of the Panama Canal treaties appear to be within two votes of winning final approval following a compromise on the issue of U.S. intervention.

But the outcome of today's vote on the second treaty remained in doubt because at least two senators who endorsed the first of the treaties March 16 were threatening to switch.

An Associated Press count showed President Carter and Senate leaders holding 65 firm votes for the treaty, which gradually turns the canal over to Panama by the year 2000.

In addition, one senator who voted for the first treaty and whose support of the second agreement had been in doubt is now considered a likely yes vote.

If Sen. Howard Cannon, D-Nev., supports the second treaty, Carter would be within one vote of victory on an issue that threatened to hand the president a major foreign policy defeat and further sour his relations with Congress.

To be approved, the second treaty must draw 67 votes if all 100 senators are present and voting. The first agreement was approved 68 to 32.

Senate Majority Leader Robert Byrd and Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, spent the last four days seeking a middle ground between competing concerns for Panamanian sovereignty and U.S. rights to keep the canal operating even if it were threatened by internal Panamanian problems.

That issue sparked a demonstration in Panama City Monday during which about 100 demonstrators hurled bottles of paint at the U.S. Embassy. The crowd was broken up by club-swinging national guardsmen.

But while demonstrators were marching in Panama, Senate leaders in Washington were agreeing on a compromise that was accepted by both the Panamanian government and freshman Sen. Dennis DeConcini, D-

Ariz.

A statement to be attached to the second treaty would declare a policy of non-intervention in Panamanian affairs while upholding the right of the U.S. to unilaterally keep the waterway in operation.

The amendment, to be voted on today before the final treaty vote, reduces the number of uncertain votes to four, two of whom could switch their previous pro-treaty votes for different reasons.

The four remaining uncertain votes in the AP count are Cannon and Sens. James Abourezk, D-S.D., S.I. Hayakawa, R-Calif., and Jennings Randolph, D-Va. Sen. Edward Brooke, R-Mass., said Monday night he would vote in favor of the treaty.

Abourezk has linked the canal vote with the natural gas portion of Carter's energy plan. Although he voted for the first treaty, Abourezk said Monday he will vote against the second agreement unless Carter declares his opposition to deregulation of natural gas prices.

That was considered highly unlikely by most Senate observers and Abourezk was considered on Monday as a probable no vote.

Another unknown was Hayakawa, who said last week he is concerned about what he sees as a lack of will in the Carter administration to deter communist aggression in various countries.

Hayakawa, who voted for the first treaty, said he might vote against the second one unless Carter shows a sign of changing foreign policy.

The senator met with Carter on Monday, but said he would not decide what to do until shortly before the final vote.

Cannon voted for the first treaty, but was known to be under political pressure.

School Board Attention Is Focused On Curricula

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

Curricula for Aycock Junior High School and the Middle School for the 1978-79 school year received the lion's share in time of a long meeting of the Greenville City Board of Education Monday night, a meeting in which several major items were tabled for future meetings.

The curriculum proposed by principal John Carstaphen for the Middle School and that for the ninth grade at Aycock presented by principal Paul Rasberry were both given the stamp of approval following presentation and discussion.

The curriculum adopted for seventh grade students at the Middle School basically features language arts and social studies for the first two periods; reading for the third period in the first semester of the school year and developmental math in this period for the second semester; math in the fourth period; science in the fifth period; a full period of physical education and health studies in the sixth period; and electives for the seventh period.

Middle School students who elect band or orchestra will be committed to that program every day all year with no opportunity to choose any of the five other electives offered to non-band or non-orchestra students. These electives — business and office occupations; personal and public service; general music; environmental control occupations; and fine arts — are being offered for a nine-week period each for every day of that time period.

Also, the curriculum stipulates that band or orchestra students must provide their own instruments. When the question arose about a worthy student who would be barred from band or orchestra due to the inability to provide an instrument, Superintendent Glenn Cox said this was not a serious problem, that ways could be found to provide an instrument in such a situation.

It was on proposed options that would alter the current gifted and talented enrichment program in the language arts and social studies block for the eighth grade at Aycock that sharp division in opinions occurred among school board members resulting in the proposal being tabled for a special meeting set for April 24 to consider the eight grade portion of the Aycock curriculum.

Three plans were offered, with focus being narrowed to two plans — Plan B that would maintain the current program without change, limited to about 100 students for the coming school year; and Plan A, which would modify the gifted and talented program to cut back from a three to a two-hour time block and enlarge the program to serve 150 students.

The heart of the argument at the school board meeting Monday night centered on numbers served versus quality of the current program, which it was pointed out has been highly acclaimed by the recent accreditation team and is considered by East Carolina University educators a model of a gifted and talented program.

The curriculum adopted for the ninth grade at Aycock is basically the same as the current curriculum with a few minor changes. Among changes are ones establishing a few courses where eighth and ninth graders may be together; and introducing one or two new subjects as well as redefining the breakdown of the reading lab.

Two other major agenda items tabled until future meetings were the proposed capital outlay budget and a policy paper on policies and procedures for selection of instructional materials. The policy paper will be taken up at the regular May 15 school board meeting. Workshop meetings to forge ahead on the budget item are scheduled for two future Mondays — May 1 and May 8, with a final action session set for May 15, the deadline date for submitting the budget to the Pitt County Board of Commissioners.

In addition to these meetings, an executive session was scheduled for Thursday, April 20 at which personal recommendations and a request for a hearing on a student case are scheduled.

In other matters before the school board last night, the board:

— Recognized and congratulated students from Rose High School who made high scores resulting in Rose taking first place statewide and also at the recent math competition at East Carolina University;

— Turned down a request by Rev. Dwight T. Whitworth of Grace Free Will Baptist Church to place posters on a Sunday School activity in the city schools;

— Approved the resignation of three teachers, extended sick leave for one teacher, and the election of two teachers;

— Approved the addition of six new substitute teachers and approved a list of 82 ECU student teachers who under a newly adopted policy can be used as substitute teachers during their student teaching tenure;

Supreme Court Bars Release Of Nixon Tapes

By RICHARD CARELLI
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) —

The Supreme Court today barred the public from listening to the 30 White House tape recordings played at the Watergate coverup trial of aides to former President Richard M. Nixon.

The court's 7-2 decision reversed a 1976 ruling by the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals that would have made the tapes available to the three commercial television networks, public television and a recording company planning to sell copies of the tapes for home use.

"Considering all the circumstances of this concededly singular case, we hold that the common-law right of access to judicial records does not authorize release of the tapes in question," Justice Lewis F. Powell Jr. wrote for the court's majority.

The court's ruling is a major legal victory for Nixon, who persistently challenged the tapes' release as an invasion of his privacy.

Joining Powell's opinion were Chief Justice Warren E. Burger and Justices Harry A. Blackmun, William H. Rehnquist and Potter Stewart.

All but Stewart were appointed to the nation's highest court by Nixon.

Justices William J. Brennan Jr. and Byron R. White did not agree with all of Powell's reasoning, but they also voted to bar release of the tapes.

Dissenting were Justices Thurgood Marshall and John Paul Stevens.

"Needless to say, we're gratified with the decision," said William H. Jeffers Jr., who argued the case for Nixon before the Supreme Court.

Transcripts of the tapes were highly publicized during the 1974 trial of former Attorney General John Mitchell and ex-White House aides H.R. Haldeman and John Ehrlichman. All 30 transcripts were widely quoted in part or in their entirety in newspapers and other publications.

But except for the 12-member jury and those persons who sat through all or portions of the trial, the public has never heard the actual voices of Nixon and his aides discussing the scandal that forced him from office.

Munitons Go

CHARLESTON (AP) — Navy explosives experts have carted a truckload of live bombs, shells, grenades and bullets from the Charleston Museum to be disarmed or destroyed.

Museum official J. Kenneth Jones said Monday, "There's a tremendous amount of live stuff here. The thing that scares me is that we have catalog cards on grenades where they say they're probably live."

He said the items had been stored for years.

"People would donate something, and someone would stick it aside, think they'd deal with it later. They stored things in every nook and cranny and corner they could find," he said.

Jones said the museum wanted the explosives deactivated before they are moved to a building now under construction for the museum.

He said more than 1,000 items were involved, ranging from pea-sized rifle percussion caps to a 13-inch mortar shell. The explosives were made for wars from the Civil to World War II.

Lt. David Porter of the Naval Weapons Station at Charleston commanded the three-member team which hauled away the items.

Nominate Gaskins For Clerk Of Court Post

Sandra E. Gaskins was selected by the Pitt County Democratic Executive Committee last night to be the nominee on the November Democratic ballot for Clerk of Superior Court.

The selection of Miss Gaskins, who is currently serving as acting clerk of court, took place during a special meeting of the executive committee in the District Courtroom here.

Betty Speir of Bethel, Pitt Democratic chairman, explained that with the death of veteran Clerk of Court H. L. Lewis, who had announced his reelection intentions and was unopposed on the May primary ballot, it became necessary for the Democratic Party to name a replacement on the November ticket.

Mrs. Speir noted that every precinct was represented at the meeting as Superior Court Judge Robert Rouse of Farmville outlined the duties of the clerk of court and the responsibilities of the position. Rouse paid tribute to Lewis, who had served as clerk of court since 1968.

In addition to Miss Gaskins, who was selected on the first ballot, Elmore Hodges of Grimesland was nominated for consideration as the committee's choice on the ballot.

A resident of Rt. 3, Greenville, Miss Gaskins has served two years as deputy clerk of court and seven as assistant clerk of court under Lewis. A graduate of Chicod High School, she attend-

Preparing Leukemia Victim For Vital Transplant

By CAROL TYER

BILLY JUSTICE

Billy Justice is fighting leukemia for his life.

In his corner are the most advanced medical know-how in the world, his own strong body and spirit, and two women who love him very much — his fiancée, Debbie Travis, and his sister, Mary Ann Cash.

Billy, 23, a Rt. 3, Greenville resident, is in Memorial Sloan-Kettering Cancer Center in New York City now being prepared to undergo a bone marrow transplant Tuesday, Apr. 25.

Sunday, Apr. 23, Mary Ann will enter the same hospital to supply the bone marrow for him. She will be accompanied to New York by Debbie, also of Rt. 3, Greenville, who will be on hand to give moral support to both Billy and Mary Ann. The two women hopefully will stay within walking distance of the Cancer Center for about a month after the initial injection of the bone marrow, so Mary Ann can continue to donate blood for transfusions for her brother as these are needed.

"They tell us any time we go in to see Billy, we'll have to scrub down and put on gowns just like operating room workers," Debbie said.

"Even so, we won't be able to get very close or touch him."

"They're breaking down his natural immunities now in hopes that his body won't reject his sister's marrow. There's so much danger of infection during this time, but every precaution is being taken to make his environment as hygienic as possible. Everything he touches must have been sterilized; the air is constantly filtered; and he's scrubbed twice a day."

"His body will be rid of his own bone marrow, so as to do away with all the leukemic cells. Then he'll be given total body irradiation."

"It's not an easy thing he's going through, but it's an all-or-nothing gamble. He'd been in remission since last May and had been back at work since last July, doing so well. He went back to Chapel Hill for a routine every-two-months checkup last month and they told him that he was out of remission and, without the transplant, probably had only a few months to live."

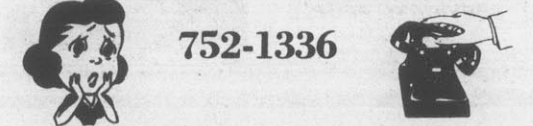

"This is a very new treatment that only the strongest patients with the best potential are chosen to try," Billy's social worker at N. C. Memorial Hospital in Chapel Hill, Nathan Berkoheri, said. "Billy's one of the most personable fellows you'll ever meet. He's got a strong physique and an indomitable spirit and the most supportive fiancée anyone could ever have. I've never known him to come up for even a checkup that Debbie did not come with him. He's got everything in his favor and he just may be one who wins the battle against leukemia. There's potential for a cure here."

Debbie, an operator for Carolina Telephone here, says she and Billy have been going together for the past four years. They both have saved their money and have bought a used trailer and a Hotline gets things done for you. Call 752-1336 and tell your problem or your sound-off or mail it to Hotline, The Daily Reflector, Box 1967, Greenville, N.C. 27834.

SPACE DUST HARMFUL?

Does Space Dust cause lung cancer? A. B.

Hotline called the Food and Drug Administration and asked about the safety of the candy product, "Space Dust." We were sent a news release which says: "FDA continues to receive inquiries about the safety of 'Pop Rocks' and 'Space Dust,' two candy products manufactured by General Food Corporation and sold nationwide. Both products are made of sugar, lactose and artificial color and flavorings. They are processed with carbon dioxide to provide a crackling sensation in the mouth. 'Space Dust' is a powdered form; 'Pop Rocks' is a granular form. FDA has received 10 complaints of illness or injury associated with 'Pop Rocks' and 'Space Dust.' FDA has investigated these cases, but has not been able to confirm that the candy caused injury or illness.

FDA's Bureau of Foods has tested the candies to determine whether there is any danger to the stomach from eating them. The products were found safe and acceptable. FDA also found the amount of carbon dioxide used in a package of the candy is about one-tenth the amount in a 12-ounce can of carbonated soda."

HOTLINE FEEDBACK

NOT CONTRACT SITUATION

Concerning yesterday's Hotline item about why Stator House Fire Department, located near the Sheltered Workshop, which had a fire in its paper recycling facility last Thursday, did not fight the fire, rather than Greenville, Greenville Fire Chief Ray Smith called this morning to say:

"The City Fire Department protects any non-profit organization facility, public building, county or state property, and attends any fire in which it is believed there is a life involved. There is no contract between the Sheltered Workshop and the city, but we consider it our duty to give fire protection since it is a non-profit public agency."

Will Suit-Up In Virus Research

ATLANTA (AP) — Space-suited men, connected to air-hoses and padding around inside a super-sanitized chamber, look as if they belong in a futuristic space laboratory, but actually they are trying a new way of researching a problem as old as man — disease.

The national Center for Disease Control has opened a new Maximum Containment Laboratory, and the section where researchers wear suits is the first laboratory in the world in which technicians have freedom of movement while working with deadly viruses.

On Monday, the CDC opened the small lab to the news media and demonstrated the revolutionary $200 plastic space suits. Once virus research into exotic and deadly diseases begins, however, the airtight room will be closed forever to visitors.

Biologists will work with blood, urine and tissue taken from animals and people believed to be infected by viruses, rare in this country but potentially fatal to those traveling in Africa or South America.

Until now, sensitive research was done in laboratories equipped with incubator-like glass and steel cabinets which have rubber glove boxes through which the technicians reach to perform their tasks.

The new laboratory also contains glove-box cabinets, which are maintained at negative pressure to keep infected air from leaking out.

And Dr. Karl Johnson of the Virology Division in the CDC's Bureau of Laboratories says the plastic suits represent a liberation for the lab specialists.

"Every step along the way is grueling in that setup," Johnson said of the rows of traditional glove-box cabinets.

The suits are served by compressed air hoses hanging in coils from the ceiling of a 40-foot by 12-foot portion of the laboratory and are equipped with close-fitting latex gloves, Johnson said.

To go to the suit lab, technicians must slip see-through plastic suits over their uniforms, enter through an airtight door and plug in to one of the air hoses.

Seated at hooded steel cabinets equipped with instruments which maintain a vertical flow of clean air, lab technicians safely can work with the infected materials. As they leave, their suits are sprayed with a sanitizing dose of peracetic acid.

How's The Weather?

WEATHER FORECAST — A combination of rain and showers are forecast today over much of the East Coast ranging over to the Great Lakes and the Great Plains regions. Showers are also predicted for much of the West Coast. Temperatures across the nation are generally expected to be cool. (AP Laserphoto Map)

By The Associated Press
Heavy thunderstorms rolled over the coastal plain and coastal areas of eastern North Carolina this morning with some of the heaviest of the storms reported in the area east of Fayetteville and north of Wilmington. The showers and thunderstorms were likely to continue during the day and tonight, becoming more severe with gusty winds by afternoon over western portions of the state.

The thunderstorms preceded a cold front moving from the west. Meanwhile, a warm front lay along the coast this morning and wrapped around through South Carolina and up into Tennessee and Kentucky.

Temperatures were expected to remain rather cool across the state until the front could push northward. Winds should pick up from the south after the warm front passes. High temperatures today were expected to hold mostly in the 60s, climbing to the low 70s Wednesday. Thursday through Saturday should be fair and mild.

plot of land to put it on, but have not been able to get married because of Billy's illness.

Billy, a former D. H. Conley High School wrestling champion, has worked first for a tree pruning firm and then, for the past two and a half years, for Greenville Utilities. "He's a good worker and a fine fellow, the kind all his co-workers like," says Haywood Outland, his supervisor at Greenville Utilities.

"Billy loves his work," Debbie said. "He badgered his doctors at Chapel Hill nearly to death till they let him go back last summer."

"Billy has a phone in his hospital room and I talk to him every night," she went on. "I'd like to be up there now, but I'm saving my leave time till Mary Ann has to go up because she'll need somebody to stay with her and that will be Billy's hardest time."

The son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Lee Justice of the Bell Arthur area, Billy has several brothers and sisters, but Mary Ann was picked as the "best donor match" for him. She works as a waitress at two restaurants in Kinston and has been given time off by both to go to New York.

She's been told that a needle will be inserted into her hip bones between 100 and 200 times to draw the marrow that will be used to replace Billy's leukemic marrow. She'll be "put to sleep" for the operation. "That's the only way she could stand it," Debbie said. "Billy says that the drawing out of marrow that he's had done for monitoring purposes is almost unbearably painful when it's done even once — much less over a hundred times."

The doctors have told Mary Ann there is hardly any risk for her. At worst, they say, she'll be sore and will have to take an iron supplement to get over anemia that may result.

Billy will be in Sloan-Kettering for at least two months, if he gets along well. His group insurance will pay for most of the medical costs, which may run as high as $100,000. Generous local people have contributed to offsetting the cost that will be incurred by Mary Ann's hospitalization and stay in New York.

"It's been tough and it's not going to get easier right away, but I'm just so happy that Billy's strong enough to undergo this treatment. If you could know him, you'd understand what a fighter he is."

Miss USA Entry Awaits Court Move

CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP) — Whether 22-year-old Eva Jo Stancil, Miss Alabama in the Miss USA contest, will be allowed to compete for the title

April 29 has not been determined.

The Birmingham resident was indicted by a federal grand jury on charges of possessing marijuana and cocaine with intent to distribute. But evidence has been suppressed by a judge because of improper warrants and Miss Stancil got permission to go to Charleston. She is free on bond while the government appeals the judge's ruling.

Pageant officials said Monday she declared she is innocent.

Miss Universe President Harold L. Glaser said after the charges were revealed, "I talked with her and she was in tears, totally bewildered." Miss Universe conducts the Miss USA contest, whose winner competes in the international event.

Glaser added, "What would be better? To send her home and possibly convict her in some people's minds? Or to keep her here and expose her to questioning by the press?"

"I don't know," he said. Miss Stancil had not revealed the charges when she entered the Alabama preliminary pageant.

He said, "Maybe she just didn't realize what would happen. She should have realized the matter would be made public."

ed Atlantic Christian College for two years and worked for the Pitt County Department of Social Services before joining the clerk's office.

Miss Gaskins was recently named by Judge Rouse to serve as acting clerk of court for a 30-day period. At the end of the 30-day tenure, he will appoint a clerk of court to serve on an interim basis until the first Monday in December, when Lewis' term would have expired.

In addition to naming Miss Gaskins as its ballot choice, the executive committee elected Pat Higgins of Fountain as the new treasurer of the committee, succeeding W. R. Duke Jr. who resigned.

Mrs. Speir reported that several black precinct chairmen and first vice chairmen, expressed their concern to the committee that there are no black employees in the clerk of court office. They asked that qualified black candidates be considered in the future when positions are open.

Board Acts To Relieve School Traffic Tie-Up

An arrangement to provide relief for the current traffic congestion at Sadie Sautter School was adopted by the Greenville City Board of Education last night.

After a review of several alternatives, the board approved Terry Shank's motion for a short-term arrangement that will see the now closed portion of Pennsylvania Avenue behind the school opened only to school bus traffic at loading and unloading periods.

Buses will come into this street from Spruce Street and exit onto 14th Street, with control by means of gates to be installed which would be closed at all other times. Board members concurred this is the most feasible solution to the existing problem of little space and heavy traffic at the school.

Alternatives offered included the construction of turn-off aprons on either 14th Street or Fleming Street (or both); and consideration of altering the playground space to bring a turn-off street for bus traffic through the corner of the school yard formed by the junction of Fleming and 14th Streets. The latter alternative was quickly ruled out as being expensive and taking up considerable space in the already small activity area surrounding the school. Cox was instructed to contact city officials in an effort to secure an additional crossing guard to supplement the single guard now stationed at the intersection of Fleming and 14th Streets.

The campus area at Sadie Sautter does not meet state specifications for space, and mention was made of the necessity to renew efforts to secure additional land to enlarge the area.

The ultimate goal in long-range planning relative to bus and car transportation arrangements for the school hinges on the eventual acquisition of land that will permit a bus turn-around circle at the point where Spruce Street comes into the closed portion of Pennsylvania Avenue behind the school.

Private Property Week Designated

Mayor Percy Cox designated April 16-22 as Private Property Week in Greenville and marked the observance with a proclamation, noting that "the underlying spirit of America has always found praiseworthy expression in the spirit of our citizens."

Cox pointed out, "The free enterprise spirit of our community is a 'model to all Americans' of industrious pursuit of the benefits available to everyone under America's free enterprise system."

Private Property Week is an annual observance held throughout the nation under the sponsorship of Realtors belonging to the National Association of Realtors. Membership of the association totals more than 500,000.

Cox cited the Greenville-Pitt County Board of Realtors, calling the group "a credit to our community by its assiduous cultivation of the free enterprise spirit."

"Realtors," the mayor said, are to be saluted because they have as one of their primary objectives the protection of the right of all citizens to own private property."

According to Cox, "One goal of Private Property Week is to promote deeper public awareness of the privilege Americans share as citizens of a nation where the bounty of free enterprise is limited only by individual initiative."

Etsil Gordon, public relations chairman for the local Board of Realtors, and Trish Byrum, president, presented Cox a plaque commemorating "the soil of North Carolina, our most valuable heritage."

Eye Repeal On Insurers

ATLANTA (AP) — A change in the membership of a Senate subcommittee could mean that an effort will be launched in Congress next year to modify or repeal the insurance industry's exemption to antitrust laws, a Washington attorney said Monday.

Howard E. O'Leary, former chief counsel of the Senate Antitrust and Monopoly Subcommittee, told the National Association of Independent Insurers that the makeup of the subcommittee has changed considerably in recent years.

"All devoted advocates of states' rights and state regulation are or will be gone," he said at an association workshop. "If the votes aren't there to change (the) McCarran-Ferguson (Act), it's close."

The NAII, whose membership consists mostly of small and medium-sized companies, said its members could be subjected to treble damage lawsuits if the antitrust exemptions are eliminated.

O'Leary said he also expects the Carter administration to "be disposed to favor a proposal which narrows or repeals any exemption from the antitrust laws — especially that of the insurance industry."

O'Leary said "everyone agrees that the industry — especially the smaller and medium-sized companies — must be free to engage in certain kinds of concerted activity without fear of antitrust liability. Few agree on where that line should be drawn."

Arrest Four In Break-In

Four persons were arrested by Pitt County deputies and charged in connection with a breaking and entering incident on April 3 at the Alibi Club on Rt. 1, Stokes.

Arrested and charged with breaking, entering and larceny were Woodrow Wilson Daniels, 28, of Rt. 1, Box 82, Stokes; Louis Person Jr., 23, Rt. 1, Box 360, Bethel; James Earl Green, 22, Rt. 1, Box 79, Stokes; and Daniel Ray Willis, 20, Rt. 1, Box 65-A, Stokes, according to Sheriff Ralph Tyson.

The sheriff said the men were placed under $500 bond each.

Officers recovered a cash register allegedly taken in the break-in, Sheriff Tyson said. He noted that the cash register was found under a bridge on Rural Paved Road 1518.

Miss Whaley, Mr. Andrews Exchange Wedding Vows

PINK HILL—Potters Hill Advent Christian Church was the scene of the Saturday, April 8, wedding ceremony of Alta Kirby Whaley and Paul Milton Andrews, both of Greenville.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Kirby Whaley of Rt. 2, Beulaville, and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John M. Andrews of Wilson.

The double ring ceremony was performed at 3:00 p.m. by the Rev. J. Edward Adams. A program of wedding music was presented by Marilyn Hroza of Albertson, organist, and James R. Stocks of Winterville, vocalist.

The bride was given in marriage by her mother and escorted by her brother, Lewis George Whaley of Beulaville. She wore a formal white gown of silk organza fashioned with a rised waist and sheer scooped neckline with a high collar. The bishop sleeves were sheer and the cuffs were finished in re-embroidered alencon lace. The bodice had motifs of bugle beads and seed pearls on lace. The A-line skirt featured appliques of alencon lace and flowed into a chapel length train. The hem was finished with scalloped alencon lace.

Her three-tiered illusion veil was attached to a Juliet cap adorned with alencon lace and seed pearls. Matching lace encircled the illusion. The bride carried a bouquet of mixed white flowers accented with yellow rosebuds, white ribbon streamers and baby's breath.

The matron of honor was Colleen S. Doucette of Pollocksville. She wore a formal length gown of mint green qiana styled with an empire waist with spaghetti

MRS. PAUL MILTON ANDREWS

The gown was enhanced by a sheer cape of green and yellow styled with a high collar. The cape was empire length in front and flowed to a three-quarter length train. She wore green silk flowers in her hair and carried a single yellow mum with greenery and yellow ribbon streamers.

Bridesmaids were Danita Whaley, Cecilia Whaley and Debra Whaley, all of Beulaville, and Joyce Renee Baysden of Kinston, nieces of the bride. Their formal length gowns of yellow qiana were styled like that of the honor attendant. They wore green and yellow sheer capes and yellow silk flowers in their hair. They carried single yellow mums with greenery and yellow ribbon streamers.

The father of the bridegroom was best man and ushers were Zebbie Lanier of Beulaville, nephew of the bride, Archie Nobles of Winterville, Charles Lehmann of Farmville, and Larry Oakley of Greenville. Cecil H. Whaley of Beulaville, brother of the bride, was the usher for the bride's mother.

At the register were Miss Janet Lanier and Miss Billie Jo Lanier of Beulaville, cousins of the bride.

The couple will reside in Winterville after a wedding trip to unannounced points.

The bride is a graduate of the ECU School of Nursing and the University of North Carolina School of Public Health, Chapel Hill. She is an assistant professor at the ECU School of Nursing.

The bridegroom is a graduate of ECU's Department of Environmental Health and is presently enrolled in the graduate school in that department. He is a sanitarian at the Pitt County Health Department.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held at the Potters Hill Community Building. Guests were greeted by Mr. and Mrs. Willard Price.

The building was decorated with yellow and white flowers. The refreshment table was centered with an arrangement of white and yellow spring flowers.

After the bridal couple cut the traditional first slice of cake, it was served by Mrs. Ervin Lanier of Beulaville, sister of the bride, Mrs. Alton Baysden of Kinston, sister of the bride, poured punch.

Assisting in serving were Mrs. L. G. Whaley, sister-in-law of the bride, Mrs. Macon Brown and Mrs. Morris Grady, Miss Susan Whaley, niece of the bride, distributed rice bags.

A pig picking followed the Andrews-Whaley wedding rehearsal Friday at the Masonic Lodge, Beulaville.

Mrs. Colleen Doucette entertained at a bridesmaids party held at the home of Mrs. P. C. Shaw, Beulaville.

Cooking Meals On Vacation Can Be An Adventure

By JEANNE LESEM
UPI Family Editor

Meals on vacation can be as much an adventure as the trip itself if you plan your route to visit food and wine festivals.

Every state has some. Many are in the summer to celebrate the peak season for local crops.

Take the National Cherry Festival in Traverse City, Mich., in the heart of cherry-growing country. It is staged annually during the first full week after the Fourth of July. The dates this year are July 9-15. There are pie-baking and eating contests, cherry desserts to boggle the mind, a special pancake breakfast and a smorgasbord lunch, food stands selling fresh cherries and cherry products and an ice cream social, among other things.

Is sauerkraut your thing? The village of Phelps (population 1,800) in the scenic Finger Lakes district of upstate New York stages a kraut festival the first Saturday in August. Phelps is the site of two kraut manufacturers. The festival's food specialty is chocolate sauerkraut cake. If you didn't know the ingredients, you'd think it was chocolate coconut cake. Besides food, the event features parades, a midway, antique shows and a marathon race.

The annual International Banana Festival is also held at an unlikely location: the twin towns of Fulton, Ky., and South Fulton, Tenn., total population, 7,000. The towns were once known as the Banana Crossroads of the United States because freight trains carrying the fruit to market stopped there to re-ice. The event usually is held the third weekend of August. This year it runs from Aug. 16-20, with the usual parade and free servings from a one-ton, 10,000-serving banana pudding scheduled for Aug. 19. A local dairy makes the pudding with 3,000 bananas, 250 pounds of vanilla wafers and 950 pounds of boiled custard.

Buffalo barbecues are annual events in some western communities, including Grand Lake, Colo., and Driggs and Victor, Idaho. The Grand Lake event falls on July 16 this year. Pierre's Hole Rendezvous is staged the last week of August at the two small towns in eastern Idaho. It includes an old-fashioned melodrama at the playhouse in Victor; the barbecue, a parade of Indians, trappers, cowboys and fancy floats; fiddling and blackpowder rifle and pistol contests; an Indian exhibition, dancing and a rodeo.

Eating buffalo won't harm an endangered species. Growers in 43 states now raise the animals for meat, says Karen Cure in her excellent new book, "The Travel Catalogue" (Holt, Rinehart and Winston $9.95 cloth, $6.95 paper). Ms. Cure is a former editor of "Holiday" magazine.

Her book contains an extensive list of festivals in the U.S. and its territories and sources to write to for specific information about each one. Or you can write for information yourself to state travel services or Chambers of Commerce. Your public library is a good source of reference books to obtain names and addresses for inquiries.

From Maine to the Gulf and West Coasts, fish and seafood festivals abound. Strawberry festivals also dot the nation. If you stick to secondary roads, you can sometimes happen onto local feasts with the food prepared by the best home cooks in the community to sell at the Grange or a church bazaar or during a fund-raising drive for a church or civic group. They are apt to be advertised on posters tied to telephone poles and trees or staked on lawns.

Many food manufacturers run public tours. If you want to visit a particular plant, write for information to the Consumer Affairs Department at the company of your choice. You'll find addresses and zip codes on product labels.

The same rule applies if you want to visit a particular winery, brewery or distiller.

If California is your destination, a list of about 280 wineries that welcome visitors and a map showing their locations is available free from The Wine Institute, 165 Post St., San Francisco, Calif. 94108. Send a stamped, self-addressed business size envelope with your request.

Raisin Bars Beverage

RAISIN BARS

As one of our tasters said, "They really give you something to eat!"

2½ cups all-purpose flour, fork-stir well to aerate before measuring.

½ teaspoon baking soda

½ teaspoon salt

½ teaspoon cinnamon

½ teaspoon nutmeg

½ cup butter or margarine

1 cup sugar

1 large egg

1 tablespoon grated orange rind

¼ cup orange juice

1 cup raisins

1 cup chopped (medium-fine) walnuts

Stir together the flour, soda, salt, cinnamon and nutmeg. In a large mixing bowl beat together well the butter, sugar, egg and orange rind; beat in the orange juice. Gradually stir in the flour mixture until blended. Work in the raisins and nuts, using your hands if necessary, until evenly distributed. Chill, covered, for 1 hour. Divide in half; roll out each half on a prepared pastry cloth with a stockinet-covered rolling pin to a 12-by-7-inch rectangle. Cut each rectangle into six 7-by-2-inch strips. Place strips, well apart, on greased cookie sheets. Bake in a preheated 400-degree oven until golden brown — 10 to 12 minutes. While still warm, cut each strip crosswise into 3 bars. Makes 3 dozen.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

Greetings have always been divided into four categories.

"Hey, how ya' doin'?" (Ages 15-24.)

"Nice to see you again." (Ages 25-35.)

"You look fantastic! Honest!" (Ages 35-50.)

"What happened?" (Ages 50-death, minus two minutes)

At the moment, I'm somewhere between "You look fantastic!" and "What happened?" It depends on how far I am between hair appointments.

A friend of mine who is going through her metallic age (silver hair, gold teeth, and lead bottom) hit me the other day with, "You look fantastic."

"Compared to what?"

"Compared to an antique quilt I have which is five years younger than you."

"Don't be condescending," I said. "There are a lot of advantages to being 'You look fantastic.'"

"I know I'll recognize them immediately when I hear them," she said, "but fill me in anyway."

"I can get in my night clothes at 7:30 every night and no one wants to know if I'm sick."

"I can write the bank a check for an overdraft and they expect it."

"I can drive a car and talk at the same time and amaze my passengers."

"I can walk into a room on time and get a standing ovation."

"I can be named historian of any club in town."

"I can forget where I parked my car and no one is surprised."

"I can be built like a caftan and everyone thinks I'm hiding something."

"The other day I found a wonderful little cosmetic called 'Erase' to take away the bags from under my eyes. I erased my entire face."

"I know what you're talking about," said my friend. "I said to my husband last night, 'Tonight's the night.' He knew instinctively I was talking about Kojak on TV."

Bible Study

Given At Meet

The meeting was conducted by Miss Mary Wells, president. Mrs. Clara Schackell introduced the speaker.

Cancelled postage stamps, Campbell Soup labels, old eye glasses and jewelry were collected to be sent to Indian schools where they will be used to purchase needed equipment. Members were reminded to continue saving these items and bringing them to the May meeting.

Miss Annie Turner, chairman of the Indian Department, reported a box of clothing had been sent to the Murrow Indian School for Children and a box of soup labels will be sent this week to the Southwest Indian School.

Refreshments were served by the hostesses.

Serious Effort On Problems

The city council and the county commissioners have worked out a plan for the county to assume operation of the solid waste land fill.

The county will completely take over land fill operations for Greenville and other municipalities as well as for rural residents.

In Greenville's case, the city landfill will continue to be operated by the county, with the county purchasing the city equipment now used there.

That agreement removes one of the city's concerns since the long range plan has been to fill the area behind Greenwood Cemetery with solid waste and use the filled land for recreational purposes.

Not only can this plan be realized, but it should come about sooner since it is estimated now that the filling operation can be completed in six to seven years.

Mayo Allen, director of Public Works, sees no problem with the new system, and it certainly will relieve the city of a large expense.

Council member Mildred McGrath, who had been concerned about the possibility of not completing the planned recreation area, expressed pleasure with the arrangement.

She said she was "delighted to see the cooperation with the county commissioners."

We are pleased, too. It looks as if the city and county are seriously working on common problems.

Reclamation Facility A Good Service

Fire destroyed a paper recycling and processing and storage facility at the Eastern Carolina Sheltered Workshop last week at a loss of $100,000.

We are happy to see, though, that plans are underway to rebuild the facility.

Waste paper collected was taken to the facility for reclamation. It was a good service in this time of conservation, and should be continued.

THIS AFTERNOON

Promoting Better Lunches

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — Money spent trying to teach children to read and write when they are hungry and suffering malnutrition may well be wasted, the chairman of North Carolina's Advocacy Council on Children and Youth believes.

"Perhaps it should not be surprising that our school children are far below the national norms on reading, spelling, vocabulary, mathematics and other basic skills."

"By not feeding our children adequately, we may be negating our efforts to educate them," Ruby Milgrom recently told members of the U.S. Senate subcommittee on nutrition and youth.

Mrs. Milgrom was in Washington to endorse changes to the federal school lunch programs which would expand and improve them.

The lunches for underprivileged are "by and large successful," she reported, but the breakfast program leaves much to be desired.

"The school breakfast program is of real concern to us. Of the roughly 535,000 children eligible for free or reduced price school breakfasts, only about 124,000 receive them."

Inconvenient

"This is not always because the pupils don't want the breakfast, unfortunately. It is often because school administrators find it inconvenient. Only about half of our 2,032 schools offer a breakfast program" reaching less than one-fourth the eligible pupils, Mrs. Milgrom said.

Breakfast is essential to morning classroom activities, she commented, and proposed on behalf of the state's advocacy council that any school in which 25 per cent or more of the pupils qualify for free or reduced-price lunches be required to offer a breakfast program.

"School bus drivers may have to change their schedules, classes may have to start a little later, cafeteria workers may have to get up earlier. But schools exist for the children and their parents — not for school bus drivers, principals, and cafeteria workers," she observed bluntly.

NOBLITT

More than 80 per cent of all public school students receive free or lower-cost lunches, and Mrs. Milgrom endorsed changes which would potentially make that program more successful. Federal law would involve parents and pupils in meal planning, would require monitoring food waste to weed out items students consistently reject, and would require more choice so students would eat better.

Mrs. Milgrom proposed additionally that "junk foods" such as formulated grain-fruit products, coffee cakes, donuts, cream-filled cakes, etc., be taken off school menus.

Bad Effects

The relationships between malnutrition and daily living go beyond occasional hunger.

"The consequences of poor diets have a long-lasting effect — in terms of physical maturity and mental development. Poor nutrition leads to poor health and iron deficiencies deficiencies," Mrs. Milgrom said. Almost half of this state's preschoolers fall into the bottom 25 per cent in national height and weight averages. Nearly half had inadequate diets, and two of five are "significant nutritional risks," she reported.

Mrs. Milgrom also quoted work by C. Arden Miller, maternal and child health specialist at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, showing that poor maternal nutrition leads to premature birth, a high infant mortality rate, and children who may be physically stunted, mentally dulled and emotionally warped.

The advocacy council chairman lives in Battleboro in Nash County where she is active in a variety of mental health and health related organizations.

One Blow For Anarchy

AUSTIN, Texas — At a time when the Carter administration would move the country toward an ever-expanding government, students at the University of Texas have decided to go just the other way. Last month they voted to abolish their student government altogether. On April 7, the Board of Regents voted to approve their action.

Some other encouraging developments are taking place here in Austin. The Young Republicans and Young Americans for Freedom rank among the most active groups on a lively campus. One of the YAF's is making a name for itself by persistently suing to prevent the Daily Texan from endorsing candidates for political office.

Campus conservatives began working toward overthrow of the student government two years ago. A couple of drama majors, Jay Adkins and Skip Slyfield, announced their candidacies for president and vice president on the Arts and Sausages ticket. Their platform had a beautiful purity at its core: Student government is a farce, they said. So why not elect a couple of clowns? Attired in jugglers' costumes, the two frolicked their way to a splendid victory.

Thus inspired, leaders of the revolution (including many students of a liberal bent as well) set about obtaining signatures on a petition to abolish the student government root and branch. By early February of this year, the effort had succeeded. A Committee to Retire Aspiring Politicos, whose acronym occasioned much applause, led the campaign. The Constructive Abolition movement, headed by a student who withdrew as a presidential candidate, played a role.

in a burst of zeal, the abolitionists pasted together what might have been the largest political poster ever contrived — a paper streamer that dropped ten floors down the Texas Tower. Alas, the wind swept it away.

As it turned out, the winds of anarchy swept away the student government also. The vote was 2,644 to abolish, 2,458 to preserve. In a student body of 40,000, the turnout was pathetic, but this is the way with student elections generally. Next year, or the year after, a revival movement can be expected. Meanwhile, the charade is over. No government is better than sham government.

The effort by law student Howard Hickman stems from an equally vigorous defense of principle. In common with most student newspapers, the Daily Texan is mildly subsidized by the parent university. An excellent paper, professionally produced, the Texan operates from a publicly owned building in the heart of the campus. Under the mandatory fee system, every student is required to pay roughly 75 cents per semester toward production costs.

Color 'Helps' Deficit

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG

Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — In the interest of helping the nation correct its balance of payments deficit, members of the House of Representatives will equip their offices with color televisions rather than black-and-white models.

That was the decision of the House Administration Committee, whose members wanted to avoid sending a lot of U.S. dollars to Japan so congressmen could keep up with such daytime television dramas as "The Guiding Light," "As the World Turns," and President Carter's news conferences.

The committee approved acquisition of 450 17-inch, color television sets for $280 each.

THE INSIDE REPORT

Strauss: Chief 'Jawboner'

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — A clue to future administration strategy against inflation is the fact that Robert S. Strauss was named President Carter's jawboner-in-chief without the advice and consent of an understandably miffed Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal.

Blumenthal thought the notion of an anti-inflation "czar" had been killed by the President two weeks earlier. What he did not know was that the influential circle of non-economists now advising Mr. Carter on economic policy — Vice President Walter F. Mondale plus senior White House aides — at the 11th hour talked the President into naming Strauss "special counselor on inflation."

That Strauss's main task will be jawboning against higher prices and wages underlines Mr. Carter's intention: talk inflation to death — a dubious strategy in the opinion of many economists, including Blumenthal. It also positions Strauss, the millionaire lawyer-politician, to pass Blumenthal, the millionaire businessman-economist, as the President's top economic operative.

The explanation of Strauss's rise is his pattern of success, particularly visible in an administration where failure has been conspicuous. Blumenthal is blamed inside the White House for talking down the dollar last year and for not forecasting resurgent inflation. While Strauss robustly leads cheers for the President, Blumenthal sometimes seems less than ecstatic about the glories of Jimmy Carter.

Although Strauss cannot approach Blumenthal in economic or business expertise, he commands more confidence in the business community. The mood there was reflected in a March 6 presentation to his Wall Street brokerage firm by economist William H. Janeway. Contending that Blumenthal "is quasipublicly criticizing Carter himself all over Washington and around the world," Janeway said the new Washington "focus" should be on Strauss.

Strauss was one of two prototypes suggested as anti-inflation czar nearly two months ago in a White House memorandum drafted by Henry Owen, economic specialist on the National Security Council staff (the other prototype was ex-Labor Secretary John Dunlop). The Mondale-White House staff group, fearful of consigning anti-inflation policies to the economists liked Owen's idea. Blumenthal naturally screamed. When the option paper came to the President just before he left for Venezuela, he checked the box marked "no."

With that annoyance behind him, Blumenthal moved to other battles — winning some, losing some. He convinced Mr. Carter to make a bigger fuss over inflation than the Mondale-White House group originally wanted. But he failed to get a presidential pledge for a lower budget deficit or a presidential delay on the highly expensive national health plan.

Meanwhile, Strauss scored a considerable public victory. He put on a virtuoso solo performance in forcing big steel to roll back its original price increase. Following successful jawboning of coal operators, this persuaded the White House that the talents of trade ambassador Strauss should not be limited to haggling with the Japanese over color television sets.

There was presidential staff talk about moving Strauss into the Executive Office Building next door to the White House to involve him more closely in decision-making. Instead, Henry Owen's czar scheme was dusted off. Why not give the job to Strauss, but limit it to jawboning?

On Monday afternoon, April 10, less than 24 hours before the President's anti-inflation speech, Strauss-for-czar was presented to Mr. Carter by Mondale and White House aides Hamilton Jordan, Jody Powell and Stuart Eizenstat. The abstract concept the President had rejected on paper was suddenly endorsed by him as a flesh-and-blood job for Bob Strauss.

Nobody told the Secretary of the Treasury. To his intense embarrassment later, Blumenthal could not mention the Strauss appointment to economic reporters he briefed on the President's speech Monday night; not until Tuesday morning did the

Public Forum

Letters submitted for Public Forum must be limited to 300 words.

To the editor:

I am writing you this letter to draw public attention to a Bill (HR 8494 — a Lobby Disclosure Bill) that is scheduled to be considered by the U. S. House of Representatives the week of Apr. 17 (this week). This bill is important to our democratic system.

The key word is DISCLOSURE. This bill requires any organization that spends more than a certain amount of time and money lobbying to report this to the government, along with the names of their principal paid lobbyists. Only organizations, not individuals, would have to report, so the bill does not affect private citizens who want to exercise their constitutional right to inform and persuade their legislators. HR8494 includes enforcement provisions to ensure that organizations which violate the disclosure requirements will be subject to civil and criminal penalties.

HR8494 remedies a significant weakness in the existing lobby law (1946), which covers only groups whose "principal purpose" is to lobby Congress. A number of large and powerful organizations that engage in extensive lobbying activities have thus not registered as lobbies, on the grounds that their principal business is not lobbying.

A convincing argument can be made that lobbies, including the American Civil Liberties Union, Mobil Oil, the Sierra Club, Exxon, Common Cause, etc. make important contributions to our great debates on national issues. The point is that the public has a right to know what organizations are spending large sums and great effort to defeat or pass legislation affecting the public interest.

I hope and believe that our Representative, Mr. Walter B. Jones, will vote for HR8494, demonstrating his concern for an informed citizenry and a more effective democratic process.

Strength For Today

SUCCESS

Great importance today is attached to success, but few of the millions in search of it ever stop to ask themselves what it means. To some people it means wealth; to others, power; to still others, recognition. But to a third group and unfortunately this is a small minority — success means service.

This is the highest form of success, and often it can be attained only at the sacrifice of power and recognition. The missionary, the social worker, the unheralded, unobtrusive volunteer for community service — these are some, but certainly not all, of the people who devote their lives to others rather than to themselves and those nearest them.

And often these are the people who achieve the one thing which so often eludes the seekers after personal success — real happiness. The successful man in the eyes of the world often dies with a tragic sense of failure which the person who has devoted his life to service never feels.

About Time For A Recession

By JOHN CUNNING

AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — The economy enters this month the fourth year of an expansion that arose from the ashes of the 1974-1975 recession, the worst since the Great Depression of the 1930s.

In observance of that anniversary, you might not appreciate what some economists are now looking for: another recession. The reason: Three years is a long time in the life of an economic cycle.

It doesn't matter that the stock market might be forecasting a different story. Economists and investors often have different points of view, even if they work for the same outfit.

At the moment, economists are highly concerned about old age. The economy runs in cycles, they believe, and the current one has been around a very long time, as cycles go.

Investors, in contrast, sometimes look beyond a valley of bad news and examine the mountain beyond. They discount negatives if they believe they'll be followed closely by a cycle of the opposite variety.

The National Bureau of Economic Research, a prestigious economic study group, examined 23 peacetime business expansions since 1854 and found only one that reached its fourth birthday.

That sole exception also comes with an asterisk, the fine print explaining it occurred during a general depression, from March 1933 through May 1937, ending two months after its fourth year.

Since World War Two, the longest of four peacetime expansions lasted 39 months, from 1954 into 1957. Our current upswing is only two months short of that record. And forecasters are becoming uneasy.

"Will it keep going, perhaps into and beyond the spring of 1979?" asks Merrill Lynch Economics, a research and consulting arm of the world's biggest broker. Rhetorical question: its mind is made up.

"Our answer to that question is not reassuring," it replies. "We believe that, at best, a sharp economic slowdown is likely by early next year or late this year."

A recession, perhaps? "At worst, in our opinion, an outright recession, of relatively moderate depth and duration, could be in the offing." The odds, it believes, are about 50-50.

The economic unit figures real growth will sink to a 3.4

percent rate by this year's final quarter, and then plunge to a 1.1 percent rate, or perhaps into an actual decline, in 1979's first quarter.

Now the good news: If a recession develops, says Merrill Lynch Economics, it isn't likely to be as long or as deep as in 1974-1975. We aren't likely to be that vulnerable, it says, underlining "that."

Not all economists foresee a recession, of course. While economists swim in schools for much of the time, they often disperse when a major economic turning point is believed to be just ahead.

Fear not, therefore, that there is total agreement on the matter of an economic downturn. It might come, it might not, but a growing number of professional economists are agreeing on the former possibility.

Each House member can order one with the money coming from his office expense allowance.

When the committee took up the television set proposal, Chairman Frank Thompson, D-N.J., explained to members that nearly all black-and-white televisions are made outside the United States.

He said that some components of U.S. brand color sets are manufactured elsewhere, but the finished product is assembled domestically.

Besides, said Thompson, there's not that much difference in cost between color and black-and-white sets.

Reps. James C. Corman, D-Calif., and Guy Vander Jagt, R-Mich., are the chairmen of their parties' House campaign committees and they recently debated at the National Press Club.

At one point Corman was asked to comment on the fact that 42 House members have announced they aren't running for re-election. Nine of them are running for the Senate.

Corman's answer reflected a view many House members have of the Senate:

"Some have tried the House and found out they weren't really cut out to be legislators, so they are running for the Senate."

The amount of mail that flows from the Capitol is always greater in even-numbered years, which, incidentally, are the years members of Congress run for re-election.

To handle the 1978 volume, the House is hiring eight additional employees and buying a special sorting machine.

Rep. Frank Annunzio, D-Ill., defended the move by noting that 281.9 million pieces of mail went out of the Capitol in 1976, and then 250.8 million in 1977. Annunzio predicted the figure would reach 400 million this year.

Maybe the answer to all the unrest over the Panama Canal treaties is sleeping pills.

First, Sen. James Abourezk, D-S.D., said that he awakened at 4 a.m. with the idea of threatening to vote against the Panama Canal treaty unless President Carter took a firm stand against removing price controls from natural gas.

Then, Sen. S. I. Hayakawa, R-Calif., told a news conference he awakened around 3 a.m. one day and decided that he would withhold his vote for the treaty unless Carter could satisfy some of the senator's complaints about administration foreign policy.

COLUMBIA, Tenn. (AP) — A 17-year-old Wisconsin youth, accused of starting the fire that killed 42 people in the Maury County Jail last May, has been indicted on 32 counts of manslaughter and two counts of arson.

Bob Gay, district attorney general, said Monday that Andrew Zimmer of Superior, Wis., would be tried as an adult and was being held at the jail in lieu of $190,000 bond. Gay said arraignment has been set for May 4.

Everywhere a visitor went on campus last week, he was asked for an opinion on this indefensible and abominable trick. Paraquat-contaminated marijuana had been found on campus; its existence had been chemically confirmed by the Middle Earth Crisis Center; students were learning to test their grass with kits containing vinegar, methyl alcohol and sodium hydroxide. It is one way of learning chemical reactions.

All this arouses envy in the breast of an aging journalist. Forty years ago at the University of Missouri, we found our fun and games in swallowing goldfish. Things are livelier now.

White House inform Blumenthal.

Such embarrassment could be repeated in the future. Although the White House says it intends Strauss to be solely a jawboner, others in the administration feel he will inevitably evolve into economic coordinator close to Owen's original concept. Strauss has never matched Mr. Carter in enjoying cabinet government and would love to get cabinet-level departments marching to the same economic drummer.

"Well, Bob finally has a challenge big enough for him," a friend says with only mild facetiousness. It may, in fact, prove too big. With Blumenthal unsuccessful in slashing the budget, Strauss's jawbone will be the major weapon against inflation. That could make his fabled miracle of reviving the Democratic party after the 1972 debacle look like child's play.

Meat Spoiled; Ban Shipments

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department says it won't allow any more shipments from an Argentine meat packing plant into the United States until the packer can "assure sterility" of its products.

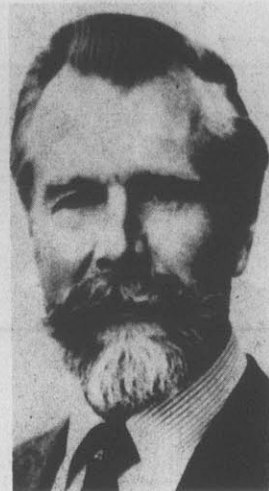

The government ordered a "precautionary recall" of canned beef from the plant Monday because of possible spoilage and a threat of food poisoning. Officials said the recall involves canned beef products bearing various labels, but with the identifying number 1964 stamped on the lids of the cans and possibly on labels.

Seek $30 Million For Handicapped

By GLENN STEPHENS
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Three state agencies plan to ask the 1978 General Assembly for more than $30 million to meet the requirements of a new program mandating a free education for all handicapped children.

DIES — Commander Edward Whitehead, retired chairman of Schweppes U.S.A. Ltd., whose familiar beard and dry English demeanor helped sell his company's tonic water to Americans, has died in England, the company announced in New York Monday. Whitehead died Sunday at age 69. (AP Laserphoto)

Congress passed a law in 1975 requiring states to provide a free education to all handicapped children. The General Assembly last year enacted legislation bringing North Carolina into compliance with the federal legislation and extending coverage to gifted and pregnant students.

The three agencies involved in implementation of the law, which goes into effect Sept. 1, are the departments of education, human resources and corrections.

The Education Department currently has an appropriation of $67.9 million for special education and will seek another $15.4 million to meet the special needs of students covered by the program.

The Department of Human Resources is asking for an increase of almost $15.7 million in state funds for education of handicapped, blind, deaf and mentally retarded or delinquent youngsters in institutions. The Corrections Department also plans to ask for several million dollars for the education of mentally retarded or handicapped youngsters in the prison system.

The federal government initially planned to pay 5 percent of the costs of education required under the program, escalating the amount to 10 percent next year, 20 percent the following year up to a maximum of 40 percent by 1982. The state has been getting a limited amount of federal funding for special education, but the increases came with the requirement that all children be given a free education.

Even with the program in its initial stages, Congress already is considering a reduction in the federal funding that was promised. The Carter administration has asked Congress to reduce the percentage to be provided during the 1980-81 school year from 20 per cent to 12 per cent.

The legislation provides two priority categories for bringing students under the program — first, handicapped children who are not receiving free educational services from any agency; and, second, those who are receiving inappropriate or inadequate services.

"The scary thing is that we all know what the general need is, but if we're going to have to be in full compliance by Sept. 1, why would the federal government wait until 1982 to give us even 40 percent of the costs," said James L. Barden, of the Education Department. "If we're not in compliance, we will lose federal money."

Norman C. Camp III, assistant secretary for children in the Human Resources Department, said the agency is asking for an additional $15.69 million to comply with the mandate.

The department would need the extra money for hiring additional personnel and other expenditures to serve blind and deaf students and handicapped or mentally retarded students covered under vocational rehabilitation or other programs.

The Corrections Department estimates it will have to serve about 5,000 inmates up to age 21 under terms of the program by 1981. That would require the hiring of 400 more instructors in the prison system.

Students now in public schools or institutions or those currently in private schools will be evaluated for the type of educational program they need and will be assigned to regular or special classes. In some cases, local school districts — who have the burden of meeting the requirements — might have to contract for special educational needs of some students.

If parents are not satisfied with the program their child is given, they may appeal to a person appointed to review the case. Either side may appeal for a hearing before the state superintendent of public instruction and, if the parents are still dissatisfied, they may take the case to civil court.

In a statement released by the hospital, Billy Carter's personal physician, Dr. Paul Broun, said, "All tests and procedures, as of this date are normal."

Broun said Billy, who was admitted to the hospital Sunday night, would remain hospitalized for "another day or so as he undergoes further tests and procedures."

Six ways to beat the high cost of checking are better than one.

Over a year, checking account service charges could come to $30, $40, even $50.

Which is probably why most banks have a plan to avoid those charges. But they usually offer you just one or two ways. In other words, it's on the bank's terms — not yours.

But, at NCNB, we've developed six ways, designed to fit almost any financial situation.

1) Say you're starting a savings program. With Triple Option #1, you just let us transfer $25 or more each month automatically from checking to savings. So you're saving service charges and building up your savings at the same time.

2) Maybe you already have some savings. With Triple Option #2, all you have to do is keep a $100 average balance in regular savings. So, you earn interest while you save service charges.

3) Or maybe you'd like to have the advantages of a loan without paperwork. Qualify for Option #3, an "open-line-of-credit" built into your checking account.

4) If it's more convenient, you can avoid service charges by keeping a $200 minimum balance in your checking account.

5) Or, if it suits you better, keep an average monthly balance of $500 in your checking account.

6) Finally, there's what we call "the best bank account in North Carolina": NCNB Deluxe Banking. If you keep $2,500 in a Regular Savings Account, you get a checking account with no check printing charges, no service charges — no charges of any kind. Plus special rates or no charges on almost every other banking service you're ever likely to need.

For all the details, come see us. Soon. Why settle for just one way to beat the high cost of checking when you can have your choice of six?

By DAVE O'HARA
AP Sports Writer
BOSTON (AP) — Bill Rodgers put another trophy on display in his local sporting goods store today after winning the Boston Marathon in the closest finish of the classic's 82-year history.

"What was unique about this race was that I had a guy on my tail right to the finish line," the 30-year-old former school teacher said Monday after winning the Boston Marathon in 2 hours, 10 minutes, 13 seconds, only 18 seconds off the course record he set in 1975.

Rodgers wasn't kidding. He was actually chased to the finish line by unheralded Jeff Wells, a 23-year-old seminary student from Dallas. Wells charged home in 2:10.15.

"I'm grateful to God, but I should have pushed more," Wells said without disappointment over his vain bid to overtake Rodgers. "I can't be disappointed. In fact, I'm just grateful that I finished second."

Rodgers, winner of four marathons last year, although he was forced to drop out after 18 miles in Boston, wore down his chief rivals in the field of 4,212 starters in the 26-mile, 385-yard Hopkinton-to-Boston run.

The victory gave Rodgers victories in the three most important world marathons in the past seven months. He previously won the New York City Marathon last October and he won at Fukuoka, Japan in December.

Frank Shorter, the 1972 Olympic marathon champion and the 1976 runner-up in Montreal, was the first to wilt Monday, falling back halfway through the race, finally settling for a 23rd-place finish in 2:18.15.

Finland's Eda Tikkanen faded on the three hills, including famed Heartbreak Hill about six miles from the finish, but hung tough and finished third in 2:11.15.

Wells moved up from sixth place at the halfway mark and just missed catching Rodgers with a blazing finishing kick in the last few miles.

Jack Fultz, former Georgetown star and winner of the 1976 Boston run, was fourth in 2:11.17, followed by Randy Thomas, a Rodgers protege, in 2:11.25, and New Zealand's Kevin Ryan, who tried to keep pace with Rodgers for 17½ miles.

"I'm super pleased," Rodgers said after becoming the first American to win Boston twice since World War II. "I'm happy. At the finish I didn't know if I would make it. It was a tough pace. I was really hurting. It was just about the hardest marathon of my life."

Rodgers was cheered on by countless thousands who jammed streets for the entire route. He blew kisses to a huge gathering at the finish line as he was crowned with the traditional laurel wreath by Mayor Kevin H. White.

However, his biggest salute was given to friends outside his sporting goods store about four miles from the finish.

"I've never been cheered like that before," Rodgers said. "It made me very gung ho. I had a built-in advantage."

Gayle Barron of Atlanta was the first finisher among the field of more than 200 women. Her time was 2:44.52.

Extra Care

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Crime Control Secretary J. Phil Carlton has told Highway Patrolmen using unmarked cars to enforce the speed limit to use extra care when stopping women drivers.

Carlton said he wants to be sure women are aware it is a Highway Patrolman stopping them even though the officer might be driving a new unmarked car.

Asked about the possibility that women drivers might be afraid to stop for an unmarked patrol car, Carlton said he doubted the situation would arise frequently.

"It's a concern, but it's one that should be resolved since we're talking about uniformed personnel," he said. "Anyone not knowing a highway patrolman when they see one has got problems."

He said troopers will be asked to turn on the interior lights of their cars so they can be readily identified at night and to be sure to have their blue lights on.

Two Union Giants Bid For Miller Brewery Role

EDEN, N.C. (AP) — Employees on the Miller Brewing Company production line will have the opportunity to choose between the Teamsters and the United Steelworkers to represent them in collective bargaining.

The two largest labor organizations in the country are both campaigning for bargaining rights for the workers, and employees on the brewery production line as of May 13 will be eligible to vote in an election to settle the matter. The election date has not been set.

Both unions hold contracts through the company. The Teamsters claim to represent 90 percent of all brewery workers in the nation, but the Steelworkers dispute this claim.

Neither union representative contacted gave an exact count on how many brewery contracts they hold.

The two unions have set up offices near the Miller brewery in an effort to convince workers they offer the best model contract and benefits.

Miller did not offer any comments on the unions' push, but a Teamsters spokesman and some labor sources claim the

from the company.

D.H. Sherrill, secretary of Local 391 of the Teamsters headquartered in Greensboro, said his union's contract has more paid holidays and longer vacations at the Schlitz plant.

"I don't see any problems for us if they just read the contracts," Sherrill said. "It's no question. They can see we're so far ahead of the Steelworkers, it's pathetic."

Gray said the Steelworkers' contract calls for three weeks of vacation and a bonus of 10 weeks paid vacation in every fifth year.

"Our supplemental unemployment benefits are much better," he said.

Steelworkers' by-laws would set up a local union solely for the Miller employees in Eden. If the Teamsters were chosen to represent the brewery workers, they would become a unit of Local 391 which covers North Carolina members throughout the middle two-thirds of the state.

Cheating Marks Role In History

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Financier Bernard Cornfeld says his place in history has been assured by his conviction for cheating the Pacific Telephone Co. But as a result, for the next three months his place will be in prison.

U.S. District Judge Matt Byrne Monday ordered Cornfeld, 48, to begin serving his prison term on May 8. Cornfeld was convicted in August 1976 on three counts of cheating the telephone company by using "blue boxes" — devices used for making free long-distance calls.

"My place in history has been assured in the sense that the world generally knows I've been convicted of defrauding the phone company," Cornfeld, once a renowned playboy, told Byrne.

Mounties Hunt Two Fugitives

OTTAWA (AP) — The Mounties are looking for Joyce McKinney and Keith May, who fled from Britain to Canada to escape trial on charges of kidnapping a young Mormon missionary.

The Royal Canadian Mounted Police alerted all its offices to look for the pair after being informed by Interpol that they took an Air Canada flight from Shannon, Ireland, to Montreal and Toronto last Wednesday wearing wigs and posing as deaf-mutes.

Miss McKinney, 27, of Minneapolis, N.C., and May, 24, of Maywood, Calif., are charged with kidnapping Kirk Anderson, 21, of Provo, Utah, while he was doing missionary work in Britain and imprisoning him in a cottage last September.

Anderson, who had been Miss McKinney's former boy friend, claimed he was kept chained to a bed and forced to have sexual intercourse with her three times.

The woman, a former beauty contest winner in Wyoming, testified at a preliminary hearing that she played bondage games with the young man to help him sort out his sexual problems, but she insisted he was a willing participant and that she "did it all for love."

Miss McKinney and May were out on bail awaiting an appearance May 2 in London criminal court. They reported to police there Wednesday, as required by their bail conditions, then vanished from the north London house where they were living.

Using the names Joan O'Connor and Anthony McGowan, both deceased, they went to Shannon, where Air Canada official John Noran reported: "The couple used scribbled notes to tell me they were due to take part in a mimed play in Toronto."

The crew of the Air Canada plane identified the pair from color pictures sent anonymously to the London Daily Mirror. Miss McKinney was wearing a long-haired red wig, heavy makeup, bright red lipstick and blue-tinted glasses. May wore a thick curly black wig and glasses. The photos were accompanied by death certificates for Miss O'Connor and McGowan.

Top Million In Thievery

LEWISTON, N.C. (AP) — The president of Harrington Manufacturing Co. said Monday more than $1.5 million worth of farm equipment parts has been stolen from the plant during the past three years.

State Sen. Joseph J. Harrington, head of the family-owned firm, said the thefts apparently began about three years ago when the business was expanded but it has "been getting worse lately."

Meanwhile, Bertie County Sheriff Ed Daniels announced the arrest of Floyd Pitchford, 43, of Lewiston, an employee of the company, on a larceny charge in connection with the theft of equipment.

Three other men were arrested on larceny charges in the case Friday. The suspects, former employees, were Darryl D. Coppock, 55, of Tarboro, his son Joseph L. Coppock, 31, of Tarboro and John Steimle, 58, of Woodland.

Harrington said he expected some theft from the firm but was surprised by the amount of parts taken in recent years.

"I haven't had a good systems of checks and balances, and I've had to depend on honesty, unfortunately," he said.

Senate Democrats Vary On Financial Disclosures

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The four leading candidates for the Democratic Senate nomination have varied widely in their disclosure of personal finances, ranging from one candidate who has revealed even his back income tax returns to another who has kept private the finances of his wife.

Federal law requires Senate candidates to make personal financial disclosures on May 15, in most cases including themselves, their spouses and their dependents, a Senate spokesman said.

But one of the four candidates, Insurance Commissioner John Ingram, has so far not made public holdings in any name other than his own.

Hodges was the first to provide a public statement of worth and list his 1976 tax liability, doing so Dec. 28, 1977. Davis did not make his public until last Friday, when a campaign worker telephoned reporters the information. Campaign spokesman Warren Steen said a published listing by Davis' accountant, detailing contributions, will be ready this week.

But it is the Ingram financial statement that has been called lacking by at least one of his opponents.

"The truth is I have no ties to anybody. I've disclosed my finances totally. You all let him get away with disclosing just himself and not him and his wife," Hodges said in response to a question in an interview with The Associated Press last week.

"I did my wife's. Smith did his wife's... But the main point is Ingram's wife is worth a lot of money. You all let him get away with it," he said.

Hodges added that, "I'm not leveling any charges."

Ingram could not be reached for comment Monday.

But Ingram campaign treasurer Charles Webb said he did not believe Mrs. Ingram's holdings were substantial. And Webb said Ingram would meet the federal requirements by the May filing date.

"He's not trying to hide anything, like thousands of dollars," Webb said. "I believe it would be less than $20,000, maybe less than $10,000."

Personal finances of candidates, as opposed to campaign finances, are required by Senate resolution passed last year, according to Nancy Simmons, legal counsel for the Senate Select Committee on Ethics in Washington. She said candidates must disclose real and personal property holdings, personal liabilities, patent rights, outside positions held and agreements for future employment.

"The general rule is both spouse and dependents are required to be disclosed," she said.

In addition, a copy of each candidate's federal income tax

Hostages Fled; Man Surrenders

MENLO PARK, Calif. (AP) — Three young boys who had been held hostage for more than 10 hours sneaked out of a house early today while their armed captor reportedly was in a bathroom shaving in anticipation of a televised news conference.

Menlo Park police said the gunman, identified as Al Boyer, 38, an escaped convict from Alabama, surrendered peacefully after he realized the boys had eluded him. He was in custody at San Mateo County jail in Redwood City.

The gunman, who took the boys hostage after leading the Highway Patrol on a high-speed chase, had demanded a television appearance so he could proclaim on the air that he is innocent of the crimes he was jailed for, police said.

Neither the offenses nor the cause of the chase were immediately known.

The man stopped in front of the MacCorkle house in Sharon Heights, about two miles east of the highway, ran inside and took the boys hostage, then fired two blasts from a shotgun to warn police. No adults were home when the gunman arrived.

After the gunman said he wanted to speak to reporters, San Francisco television station KRON sent its anchorman, John Hambrick, to negotiate with the man.

But the news conference never came off. As the gunman reportedly groomed himself for a TV debut, he left the boys unguarded and they simply walked

Styons' Single Pins Maryland, 7-6

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor
Raymie Styons singled through a shifting infield in the ninth inning to drive in a run and lift East Carolina University to a 7-6 victory over the University of Maryland last night at Harrington Field.

The Pirates, who had seen two leads vanish, had to battle for their lives to escape with their 21st victory of the season in the game.
The Pirates had taken an early lead of 4-0 before Maryland stormed back to take a 5-4 edge. The Pirates regained the lead at 6-5, but saw Maryland tie it at 6-6 in the eighth inning.

Butch Davis led off the ninth reaching on an error that allowed him to move to second. Bobby Supel was then hit by a pitch. Styons came up, and Maryland, looking for a bunt, put on a shift, drawing the third baseman in toward the plate, as the shortstop shifted to cover the bag.

But Styons crossed them up by swinging away, nailing the ball behind the shortstop for the run-scoring single that ended the game.
" We had no intention of bunting," Coach Monte Little said afterwards. " Besides, we have an unwritten rule that whenever we have the sign on, and the defense starts moving, we swing away instead."
Pete Conaty got the victory, raising his record to 5-4 on the year. But for the senior righthander, it was a shaky victory.

Conaty went through the first three innings quite strong, then suddenly got into trouble time after time. It appeared that he might get the hook in the sixth when he gave up three runs on two walks, two hits, and a wild pitch.
" He was out of gas in the sixth," Little agreed. " But our bullpen just didn't seem to be responding either, so we tried to hang on with Pete. Then, as the game went by, he started getting pumped up again."

After giving up a home run in the eighth, Conaty got a doubleplay behind him to end the frame, then retired the Terps in order in the ninth. He gave up ten hits, walked four and struck would be that aggressive."

East Carolina pushed ahead with three runs in the second inning. Supel led off with a triple to left center and scored on a sacrifice fly by Styons. Macon Moyer walked as did Robert Brinkley. Eddie Gates singled in the Pirates immediately came back to regain the lead, 6-5. Brinkley beat out a bunt, and Gates delivered a home run out of the park in dead center, 410 feet from home. The round-tripper was his eighth of the season, tying the single season mark set by Jim Snyder in 1968. Maryland tied it up in the eighth on a home run by Kerley, setting up the final ninth inning rally by the Pirates.

Gates, Supel and Styons each had two hits to lead the Pirates. McGuire had three to pace the Terps.
East Carolina returns to action tonight, hosting Atlantic Christian.

Redskins Disappoint Net Coach This Year

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor
ROBERSONVILLE — Roanoke High School tennis coach Bert Perkins is a little unhappy with the way things have gone so far this year for the Redskins netters.

Roanoke so far has produced a poor 1-7 record on the courts.
" I'm disappointed," Perkins said. " We had a good year last season (9-1), and we only lost one senior. So I had a lot of hopes for a good year this season. But two of our returning starters didn't come out at the start of the season. Then, the cold weather hurt us in getting ready."

One of the two absent veterans eventually returned, but was slow getting back into shape.
" We're still working and I hope that we can win a few of our remaining matches. We're playing a tougher schedule this year, too, and that makes a difference."

the number four player. " He is lacking in aggressiveness. He hits the ball well but he needs to learn to go after it."
At five is another sophomore, Ricky Fernandez. " He's got about the same problem as Smith. Both of them just need experience."
The number six man has been either Carl Jenkins, a senior, or David Wichard, a sophomore. Both are out for the first time, and are hurt by inexperience. Neither of them have claimed a victory yet, while the number four and five players have won but once each.
" We have one other sophomore on the team, Jimmy Long, who could help us next year."
Doubles teams usually have Burnes and Knight at number one, Joyner and Smith at number two and Jenkins and Wichard at number three.
The Redskins have no conference championship to play for, since they are the only team in their league with a team. Next year, however, things may be different. Roanoke is rumored to be joining the Northeastern Conference, where they will have competition.
" So far this year, they haven't shown me that they really want to play. We've lacked a court leader, and this has hurt us. But we still have the ability to come back and finish strong," Perkins said.

Reggie Launches His Newest Enterprise

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

NEW YORK (AP) — "A catalogue of memories that helped strengthen many characters," Reggie Jackson scribbled on the fly leaf.

"I wrote every caption myself — this is a compilation of my innermost feelings," the New York Yankees' $3 million super star added Monday, in launching his newest enterprise with an autograph session at a Fifth Avenue book store.

It's "Reggie Jackson's Scrapbook," a slick pictorial autobiography in paperback, price $5.95 marked down temporarily to $4.76.

Advertised in the local papers, the personal appearance drew several hundred admirers — men, women and a flock of kids playing hooky from school.

After signing one book for a thin, 14-year-old ninth grader named Kimi Schaye, Reggie was taken aback when the girl thrust a lined sheet of paper under his nose.

"What's this?" Jackson asked. "Our excuse," the girl replied.

Jackson perused the scrawl, which said: "Mr. Stanfield: Due to a previous engagement with Reggie Jackson, Kimi, Tracey and Michelle were absent 4-17-78."

Reggie smiled and signed. "For my teacher," Kimi beamed. "That ought to do the trick."

There were scores of tykes, some wearing Yankee pin stripes and helmets in the block-long queue that kept Jackson's left hand busy well past the hour allotted for the occasion.

Gregory Hairston, another ninth grader in a Yankee batting helmet, was first in line, having shown up at 8 a.m., four hours before the scheduled signing ceremony.

One lady gave her name, and Reggie looked up quickly. "You're from Connecticut," he said. "Thanks for your telegrams."

"I was surprised," said Pat Link of Bridgeport, Conn., afterward. "I sent him telegrams before the fifth and sixth games of the World Series and another one this year when the team opened the season in Arlington, Texas. I was amazed he remembered. Maybe he doesn't get many telegrams."

The book is 120 pages of "Jaxabilia" — a self-portrait of the game's most talked-about personality, covering the spectrum from childhood to those three Ruthian home runs that won the 1977 World Series.

Ayden In Victory

AYDEN — Ayden Middle School swept a pair of games over Bethel Middle yesterday with a 13-9 softball victory and a 1-0 baseball win.

Lisa Mitchell went 3-3 and Lisa Ward 3-4, with a home run for Ayden in the softball game. Francis Barnhill paced Bethel with a 4-4 performance.

In the baseball game, Timmy Suggs pitched a two-hitter and led Ayden at the plate, going 3-3.

Cox Takes Two Games

Maury and A. G. Cox split a pair of ballgames yesterday. Maury won a girls' softball game 13-2, while Cox won a baseball game 14-4.

Doug McRoy was the winning pitcher in the baseball game, while Leon Cox went 2-2 at the plate for Cox.

The Cox girls are now 2-1, while the boys are 3-0. The Cox baseball team will host Snow Hill on Thursday.

A's Continue To Win

By ALEX SACHARE
AP Sports Writer

The skies were overcast, a stiff wind was blowing and only about 500 spectators were on hand.

The Oakland A's felt right at home in Bloomington, Minn., Monday, where they beat the Minnesota Twins 7-2 for their sixth victory in the last seven games.

Picked by most experts to lag near the bottom of the American League's West Division, the A's have gotten off to a surprising 7-3 start. Manager Bobby Winkles feels this may be partly do to the spring-long question of which city the team would be calling home, Oakland or Denver.

The A's trailed 2-0 after the first inning but came back with four runs in the second to go ahead to stay. That has been their early-season pattern: fall behind, then come back to win.

In other American League games, the Detroit Tigers outscored the Chicago White Sox 10-9, the Kansas City Royals beat the Toronto Blue Jays 3-1, the Boston Red Sox clobbered the Milwaukee Brewers 9-2, the Cleveland Indians blanked the Texas Rangers 6-0, the Baltimore Orioles beat the New York Yankees 6-1 and the California Angels turned back the Seattle Mariners 7-3.

Forsch Gets Some Attention

An AP Sports Analysis
By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

Anonymous Bob Forsch, who quietly won 20 games for St. Louis last season, has finally attracted some attention.

Forsch had the good sense to pitch a no-hitter Sunday and that's always guaranteed to turn a few heads. What's more, he managed to make it controversial because of a scorer's decision and now some people are suggesting he may not have pitched a no-hitter at all.

The box score tells us that the Phillies neglected to get any hits against Forsch and that would seem to settle the matter.

But for a fleeting moment, most of the witnesses at Busch Stadium thought they had seen a single. It fell to Neal Russo, veteran baseball writer of the St. Louis Post Dispatch, to tell them they were wrong.

Russo was the official scorer at Sunday's game and as soon as Garry Maddox's eighth inning shot ripped past third baseman Ken Reitz, Russo called the play an error. The no-hitter was preserved.

Every umpire who ever wrestled with a close call has offered this bit of philosophy to critics who offer opinions that a runner was safe or out or that a pitch was a ball or a strike. "It ain't nuthin' till I call it," they like to say.

And the same thing applies to official scorers, who operate as officers of the league. Russo felt Maddox' ball could have been handled. When it wasn't, it became an error.

"I thought Reitz should have had it," Russo explained. "I called it immediately. It was an ordinary play, maybe a step to Reitz' left. The ball wasn't hit that hard. There was no doubt in my mind."

That should be good enough. Russo is an approved scorer, appointed by the league to function in that capacity. He has been scoring games for 17 years and covering baseball for 22 years. He qualifies for the job.

His call may have been a good one or it may have been a bad one. But it was his call, his job to do. And he did it. The Cardinals thought his judgment was perfect.

"Error, all the way," decided Reitz. "I came up too soon on the ball. I got my glove on it. I should have had it."

There is some differing opinion on that phase of scoring. Some official scorers believe if a major leaguer gets his glove on a ball, he should make the play, unless he has made an extraordinary effort to reach the ball. Others argue that you can only flash the "E" sign when a routine play is not executed. At issue here is whether Maddox' ball was routine. Russo and the Cardinals thought so. The Phillies, obviously, did not.

Mike Schmidt, the Philadelphia third baseman and something of an expert on the geography as a Gold Glove winner, said there was no sense debating the play. "Hit, all the way," decided Schmidt. "I think they should go to former ball players who know what the game's all about to do the scoring," he added.

The third baseman neglected to add that Russo has been covering baseball since Schmidt was 6 years old. It is possible the writer has picked up a thing or two about the game in that time.

Wellcome Wins Two

FARMVILLE — Wellcome Middle School defeated Farmville in a pair of games yesterday, taking a 12-3 softball victory and a 14-4 win in baseball.

Lee was the winning pitcher for Wellcome in the softball game and she helped her own cause with a pair of hits. Wellcome was led by Braswell, who had three hits, including a pair of home runs. Farmville was paced by Anderson and Joyner with two hits each. Joyner also had a home run.

In the baseball game, Lloyd pitched the win for Wellcome. Richard Heller had four hits and Jerry Simpson three, while Quinton Dove added two for Wellcome.

HARD-ROCK HOWE

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — Gordie Howe, at 50, was still scoring goals in 1978 for the New England Whalers of the World Hockey Association. A lot of people wondered how he did it. One of Howe's long-time opponents on the ice had an explanation.

"His toughness had as much to do with his lasting that long as anything," the player said.

The Cincinnati Reds admit to being a bunch of front-runners. As a matter of fact, they like it that way.

Santini Wants Student Rights

By TOM SEPPY
AP Sports Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Jim Santini, D-NeV., believes there should be legislation to protect the rights of student-athletes from the National Collegiate Athletic Association, the governing body of intercollegiate sports.

Santini also thinks Congress should take a closer at the tax exemption status of the NCAA, which is listed as a nonprofit organization. "An athlete does not have the rights he would have as a citizen of the United States under the Constitution," Santini said Monday after the House investigations subcommittee held another public hearing on alleged NCAA abuses. "They forfeit the status of any citizen for the privilege of being student-athletes."

"It's the only game in town and you have to voluntarily submit in order to participate in intercollegiate athletics," he said. On the tax exemption, he said, "There needs to be a total reevaluation of amateur intercollegiate athletics. I had no idea they were marketing socks, tee shirts, jock straps, whatever, in a noncompetitive market. They have a virtual monopoly. It was a $26 million business last year and they called it amateur athletics."

Santini commented during a

"We're in front in the West Division and we plan on staying in front the rest of the way," Joe Morgan said Monday night after pounding three doubles to help the Reds beat the Los session in which the committee focused on the two-year football probation given Oklahoma State by the NCAA in January. The panel, headed by Rep. John Moss, D-Calif., looks today at the probation the NCAA gave the University of Denver on May 11, 1976, for violations in the conduct of its intercollegiate ice hockey program.

The two-year probation was sanctioned against Denver because the school initially refused to place several ice hockey players on probation. Lana Tyree, an Oklahoma City lawyer who represents Mike Edwards, an OSU defensive end who was ruled ineligible for next season, told the subcommittee the NCAA is big business, negotiating a new $118 million television contract for football and marketing NCAA-endorsed athletic equipment on the side. Coaches pick up extra money through endorsements, television shows and instructor clinics of their own, she said.

However, she said, the athlete is restricted to a scholarship for tuition, room and board and denied the opportunity and rights of other students to take an extra job or defend himself from accusations from a governing body.

"The athlete does play for pay — I don't care what they say — but he plays for the pay of others," she said.

NL Roundup

Angeles Dodgers 8-2 in the season's first confrontation between the powerful National League West rivals. "When we're in front, we're tough to catch," noted Morgan.

"And I know some people have been saying this first series doesn't mean much. But this game tonight is every bit as important as the games we'll play against the Dodgers in September." Bill Bonham, who has taken the play away from Tom Seaver as the big winner on the Cincinnati staff, pitched eight innings of five-hit ball for his third victory of the season. "When you get that many runs, it makes it easy," said Bonham, a UCLA product who used to be a Dodger fan. "And I felt real happy about the game because some of my family were in the stands watching."

In other National League action, the Philadelphia Phillies defeated the Pittsburgh Pirates 6-2; the New York Mets trimmed the St. Louis Cardinals 6-2; and the San Francisco Giants defeated the Atlanta Braves 5-1.

Phillies 6, Pirates 2
Jim Lonborg and Tug McGraw combined on a seven-hitter to lead Philadelphia over Pittsburgh. Along with his strong pitching performance, Lonborg drove in two runs. Greg Luzinski added a two-run homer for Philadelphia off losing pitcher John Candelaria. Lonborg's two-run double highlighted a three-run second inning for the Phillies. The Philadelphia starter later needed ninth-inning relief help from McGraw.

Mets 6, Cardinals 2
Doug Flynn smashed a tie-breaking single in the fourth inning and contributed another run-scoring hit in the sixth to lead New York over St. Louis in a contest delayed two hours and 22 minutes by three rain delays. Flynn's hits backed the strong pitching of right-hander Nino Espinosa and pinned the defeat on Cardinal left-hander Pete Falcone. Espinosa boosted his lifetime record to 3-0 against the cards with relief help over the final two innings from Skip Lockwood.

Giants 5, Braves 1
Willie McCovey's two-run triple capped a three-run, fifth inning rally that led Vida Blue and San Francisco over Atlanta. The victory was Blue's first in the National League and squared his record at 1-1. The left-hander went seven innings, allowing five hits and one earned run.

Blue was scheduled to pitch no more than seven innings in his second start of the season. The left-hander missed 10 days of spring training late in March after the Oakland A's traded him to the Giants. His victory was the 125th of his big-league career.

Nelson Says Thompson Best Player In NBA

By ALEX SACHARE
AP Sports Writer
"Inch for inch, David Thompson is the best player in the National Basketball Association."

So says Milwaukee Coach Don Nelson, whose Bucks will have to contain the explosive Thompson if they hope to win their best-of-seven quarter-final playoff series against the Denver Nuggets, which opens tonight in Denver.

"Julius Erving is a great player at 6 feet 6," says Nelson, referring to the Philadelphia 76ers' high-scoring forward. "but Thompson, at 6-4 1/2, is better inch for inch. Thompson's as complete a player as he can be for his size."

"No one jumps as high under control as Thompson does. Once Thompson's over half-court, I don't think anyone will take the ball away from him. He likes to put the ball on the floor, and he makes the pass better than he used to."

Thompson finished second in the league in scoring with a 27.15 average, closing out the regular season with a 73-point outburst against Detroit on 28-for-38 shooting. Nelson said he'll go with Quinn Buckner, the Bucks' rugged 6-2 playmaker, on Thompson, with other players helping out as needed.

"He'll get his points," Nelson conceded about Thompson. "The key is how he gets them. If he gets them easy, we're in trouble. If not, we have a decent chance to win."

Another quarter-final opens tonight, with the Seattle SuperSonics at Portland against the defending champion Trail Blazers. Also tonight, the Philadelphia 76ers, leading 1-0, play the New York Knicks at Philadelphia, and the San Antonio Spurs, leading 1-0, play the Washington Bullets at San Antonio.

Bill Walton, the all-star center and key player on the Portland Trail Blazers, is expected to be in the starting lineup against Seattle tonight.

He's had problems with both his feet, including minor surgery on one, and sat out the final month of the regular season.

Trade Only A Matter Of Time

By ERIC PREWITT
AP Sports Writer

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — It was only a matter of time before the San Francisco 49ers traded Delvin Williams, too good to be a No. 2 running back trying harder behind O.J. Simpson.

The trade came Monday when the San Francisco 49ers, who acquired superstar Simpson last month, traded Williams to the Miami Dolphins for wide receiver Freddie Solomon, safety Vern Roberson and two draft picks, including the Dolphins' first-round choice in next month's National Football League draft.

"I talked to Delvin and he's very happy with the situation. He's going to a winning club and a fine organization," said 49ers General Manager Joe Thomas.

Williams confirmed that by saying later, "If Joe Thomas were here right now, I'd kiss him."

The running back who, at 27 is three years younger than Simpson, rushed for 1,203 yards to break a single-game 49ers record in 1976.

"Don Shula's system at Miami should be close to what our system was under Monte Clark," Williams noted.

Clark was an offensive line coach under Miami's Shula before getting the 49ers' head coaching job in 1976. He was ousted when new ownership came in last year, however, and last season's coach, Ken Meyer, has been fired and replaced by Pete McCulley.

Williams rushed for 931 yards last season with an offense which was one of the weakest in the NFL. He also missed some playing time because of minor injuries.

"They're getting a fine running back," said Thomas. But once Simpson, second leading rusher in NFL history, became a 49er, logic seemed to demand a trade of Williams. Thomas said he talked to several clubs interested in the running back before dealing with Miami.

"The key was to get a first-round pick," said Thomas, who will be choosing seventh and 24th in the first round on May 2.

The 49ers gave the Buffalo Bills a collection of future picks in exchange for Simpson, but Thomas said Monday's trade "will offset practically the entire O.J. trade."

"I know people were concerned that we were giving away all our draft picks. But that's not the way I operate."

Shula said, "It's a stiff price to pay, but in Williams we're getting a complete back that has breakaway potential."

Panama Students Plan More Demonstrations

By CHARLES GREEN
Associated Press Writer
PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP)—Students opposed to the new Panama Canal treaties planned more demonstrations today as the U.S. Senate prepared to vote on the second treaty transferring the waterway to Panama, by the year 2000.

Students from the University of Panama who demand that the canal be handed over now without any restrictions mustered only about 100 persons for a march Monday against the U.S. Embassy and the Panamanian Foreign Ministry. They threw bottles filled with paint against the embassy and shouted slogans. The national guard, Panama's army, broke up the demonstration with tear gas, and no one was hurt.

The students were followed Monday night by about 40 persons from a Roman Catholic church who held a peaceful protest at the embassy. They read from the Bible, prayed and listened to a priest protesting Senate changes in the treaties.

The national guard was on the alert, and a spokesman for the U.S. Southern Command said American forces in the Canal Zone were prepared "for any eventuality."

The U.S. Army radio station warned the 10,000 Americans living in the 50-square-mile zone of the student demonstrations and recommended "caution Monday and Tuesday when traveling in downtown Panama because of the treaty vote."

"We have no reason to expect any violence but prudence dictates we take certain precautions that we cannot discuss," said an Army spokesman. "We have not declared an alert but some units have increased their readiness."

The Senate proceedings were being broadcast live in Spanish and English throughout the country. Aides said Gen. Omar Torrijos would be listening to the Spanish translation in a hotel suite overlooking Panama Bay about a mile from the U.S. Embassy.

Torrijos had been angered by the reservation which Sen. Dennis DeConcini, D-Ariz., succeeded in attaching to the canal neutrality treaty which the Senate approved March 16. But Senate leaders agreed Monday on a compromise that was accepted by both the Panamanian government and DeConcini.

Tax Proposals Under Review

By DAVID ESPO
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP)—Congressional taxwriters are moving ahead with a review of the Carter administration's tax proposals after adopting one presidential "reform" and rejecting two others.

The House Ways and Means Committee decided tentatively Monday to repeal the deduction that taxpayers claim for state and local gasoline taxes. The repeal would cost taxpayers $1.15 billion when returns are filed in 1980.

At the same time, the committee went against Carter's wish, voting tentatively to permit taxpayers to continue claiming deductions for state and local sales taxes and for personal property taxes.

The committee arranged to discuss proposed changes in the current system for medical and casualty expense deduction today as it continues work on a new tax bill.

Rep. Al Ullman, D-Ore., the committee chairman, said he hoped to have work completed on the measure by the first week in June. Middle-income Americans, millions of whom benefit by itemizing deductions, were clearly on the minds of committee members.

"Rate reduction is terribly important," Ullman said. "We must give the middle class some tax relief."

Carter's proposed $23.9 billion net tax cut proposal includes an estimated $33.9 billion in tax cuts partially offset by $10 billion in revenue-raising "reforms."

Many of the revisions, which the administration advocates to simplify the income tax system, would be costly to taxpayers who itemize their deductions. The more deductions Congress eliminates, the fewer taxpayers are able to itemize their returns.

Broadcasts Industry Worrying Regulators Get A Bit Too Cozy

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Not long ago, federal agencies such as the Federal Communications Commission often were accused by consumer activists of being a bit too cozy with the industries they regulate.

Is it fair to say the broadcast industry now worries that the federal regulators may get too cozy with consumer activists?

"That certainly is the fear we have, yes," says Vincent T. Wasilewski, president of the National Association of Broadcasters.

Last week, in a speech to NAB members, he voiced concern that "informal alliances appear to be forming among supposedly independent regulatory agencies and branches of government."

Public-interest lawyers who previously "were fomenting petitions to deny" broadcast licenses in many cities now hold top and mid-level posts in government and regulatory agencies, he said.

Wasilewski described them as "informally bonded together by the cement of philosophical agreement." He said all this in a speech at the annual NAB convention in Las Vegas, Nev.

After the talk, he was asked what sort of climate he feels this "informal alliance" of former public-interest barristers may create in official Washington.

It's "a climate of change," he said, and "the worry on the part of the broadcast industry concerns what this change is going to be."

He cited something the NAB opposes: a Federal Trade Commission proposal to limit TV commercials aimed at kids and ban the ads that tout highly sugared food products.

"It's a wonderment," said

Wasilewski, "about what'll happen if the FTC succeeds in removing certain ads for children."

"Will the FCC then step in and say, 'Although those ads are precluded, you're still obligated to carry children's programs even though you lack the financial support you had before?'"

He meant the revenue from the sugar-food ads that now appear on Saturday morning shows for children on television.

"It's this type of thing, a Tinkers-to-Evers-to-Chance kind of situation" that worries broadcasters, the NAB chief said.

His organization represents CBS, NBC, ABC and 4,500 radio and 550 TV stations. He was asked if, should the Federal Trade Commission's proposals be adopted, the NAB will go to court to battle them.

"Yes, we'll be involved" in any legal action, he said.

Despite worries about the regulators of broadcasting, he says he found nothing disturbing in the premiere speech of the new FCC chairman, Charles D. Ferris, at the finale of the NAB convention.

Ferris vowed independence, advocated less regulation, called for more responsibility by broadcasters and emphasized he'll be even-handed with broadcasters and consumers alike.

He put the broadcast industry on notice that his agency's "only constituency is the public" and said "no industry we regulate will be regarded as a 'constituent.'"

Wasilewski, whose constituency is located at 5,050 stations and three networks, nonetheless later praised the FCC chairman's speech as "very well-balanced and good".

pitcher in the movie "The Bad News Bears", while at right she is shown during an appearance at a New York discotheque at age 15 Saturday night. (AP Laserphoto)

The bidding:
South West North East
1♥ Pass 2♥ Pass
4♥ Pass 2♥ Pass
Opening lead: Queen of ♠.

The usual complaint at the bridge table is: "I hold such bad cards!" On this deal South had valid grounds for a gripe of a different nature—he could have argued that he might have made his contract had his hand been weaker!

Since his hand was good enough for only one forward-going bid, North rightly elected to raise his partner's suit rather than show his shabby five-card spade suit. South had ample values to proceed to game.

West led the top of his broken diamond sequence and declarer saw good reason not to hold up—he didn't want the defenders to shift to clubs. Declarer drew two rounds of trumps, ending in dummy, and tried the spade finesse. West won the king and the defenders took their two diamond tricks, ending in the West hand. West simply exited with his trump and declarer eventually had to concede a club trick for down one.

Declarer might have made the hand had his queen of spades been a low card, for then he might have realized that his best shot for the contract was to set up dummy's spades.

After winning the ace of diamonds at trick one, declarer should cash a high trump in his hand to make sure that trumps were no worse than 3-1. When that is verified, declarer simply cashes the ace of spades and leads the queen! When West takes the king and East follows, the contract is assured.

Best defense is for East to win the third diamond and shift to a club. Declarer wins the ace in dummy and ruffs a spade high. He enters dummy with the ten of trumps and ruffs another spade high, setting up the fifth spade. The trump ace provides an entry while drawing the last trump, and declarer can discard his losing club on dummy's long spade.

STAMFORD, Conn. (AP) — Drug possession charges have been dropped against actress Linda Blair, who has agreed, in turn, to enroll immediately in an accelerated rehabilitation program.

Miss Blair, 19, was charged with possession of amphetamines. Police said they found the drug in her purse when they arrested her at her Wilton, Conn., home on a Florida fugitive warrant last Dec. 20.

Miss Blair's lawyers also filed petitions against the actress' extradition to Florida, where she faces charges of conspiracy to buy or sell cocaine.

No hearing date has yet been set on that plea, which will be heard in Superior Court in Stamford.

Danny Kaye Wearing Two Different Hats Next 2 Visits

CLEVELAND (AP) — Multifaceted entertainer Danny Kaye will wear two different hats during his next two visits to Cleveland.

"When I come to Cleveland May 9, I'll be wearing my baseball entrepreneur's hat, and when I'm here May 14, I'll have on my conductor's vest," Kaye said Monday.

Kaye, 64, who is a part-owner of baseball's Seattle Mariners, plans to be on hand for his team's series with the Cleveland Indians. Five days later, he'll conduct the Cleveland Orchestra in a benefit performance.

"I've found that conducting an orchestra gives you the greatest feeling of neurotic power," said Kaye, who has no formal music training and cannot read music.

Kaye has raised more than $5 million with his guest conducting performances across the country.

On Winter Vacations in the Sun

We live in a cold climate. A lot of our friends go south for a few weeks. I wonder if a short visit to a hot climate doesn't make me more susceptible to colds when I return to cold weather. — Mrs. N.N., Mich. Dear Mrs. N.:

There is no scientific truth to the fact that a return to a cold climate after a short or prolonged holiday in a warm area makes one more susceptible to colds, influenza, gripes or sinus infections.

Everyone, I am sure, has noticed that they have fewer infections during the summer months or when they go to a warm climate. There are those who, in fact, believe that a holiday in a warm climate revitalizes the body's energy and makes one more resistant to infections.

Associated with holidays is a release from emotional tension. People get more rest and exercise during their holidays. All of these prepare them for greater resistance when they return to everyday routine.

If you can sneak in that warm weather holiday, do it. And don't be afraid of any "cold" consequences when you return home.

I am bothered by a feeling of a lump in my throat. It seems to be worse in the morning. I worry because it has lasted so long. There is the hidden fear that I might be dealing with the big C. — Mr. J.G., Vt. Dear Mr. G.:

The sensation of a lump in the throat is one of the common complaints brought to the doctor's attention everywhere. It is a particularly confusing complaint because it is so vague and is sometimes confused with post nasal drip and other annoying but not significant symptoms related to the nose and throat.

Many adults, even those who have had their tonsils removed, have an extension of tonsillar tissue running down the back of the tongue. These lingual tonsils become irritated and can be responsible for the sensation of a lump in the throat.

After overindulgence in tobacco or after a cold or sore throat, these lingual stubs may become swollen and make the lump in the throat complaint more marked. Constant hawking in an effort to get rid of the lump and constant swallowing adds to the dryness and increases the sensation.

During the day when people swallow and chew, there is less dryness. After a night's sleep, there is additional dryness in the mouth. This accounts for greater discomfort in the morning.

The fear of cancer (your big C) is even a more frequent complaint than is the lump in the throat. The only way you can get the reassurance you need is to be examined by your own doctor and, if necessary, by a throat specialist. With such assurance, the discomfort, too, will be immediately lessened.

New National Smoker Study:

MERIT proven major alternative to high tar smoking—see results below.

The first real alternative—major alternative—to high tar smoking has just been reaffirmed by extensive new research conducted among thousands of smokers.

That alternative: MERIT.

Nationwide Studies—Thousands Of Smokers Involved

The research involved a complete spectrum of smokers from both high and low tar backgrounds. It was conducted nationwide and in two parts:

1. A nationwide taste-test comparison against leading high tar cigarettes.
2. Detailed interviews with current MERIT smokers from all over the U.S.

© Philip Morris Inc. 1978
Kings: 8 mg "tar," 0.6 mg nicotine av. per cigarette, FTC Report Aug. '77 100's: 11 mg "tar," 0.8 mg nicotine av. per cigarette by FTC Method.

Warning: The Surgeon General Has Determined That Cigarette Smoking Is Dangerous to Your Health.

Could MERIT taste hold its own against high tar brands? Does MERIT satisfy smokers over a long period—or do MERIT smokers find themselves slipping back to old favorites and switching around?

The results will interest you:

Confirmed: Majority of high tar smokers rate MERIT taste equal to—or better than—high tar cigarettes tested! Cigarettes having up to twice the tar.

Confirmed: 9 out of 10 MERIT smokers not considering other brands.

Confirmed: 85% of MERIT smokers say it was an "easy switch" from high tar brands.

Confirmed: Overwhelming majority of MERIT smokers say their former high tar brands weren't missed!

Confirmed: Majority of high tar smokers confirm taste satisfaction of low tar MERIT.

First Major Alternative To High Tar Smoking

MERIT has proven conclusively that it not only delivers the flavor of high tar brands but continues to satisfy!

This ability to satisfy over long periods of time could be the most important evidence to date that MERIT is what it claims to be: the first major alternative to high tar smoking.
