U.S. Economic Output Drops; First Time In Three Years

By MICHAEL DOAN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's economic output dropped for the first time in three years in the first quarter of 1978 as businesses and consumers curtailed their spending, the Commerce Department said today.

The report was bad news for businesses and unemployed workers, who are counting on economic growth to provide jobs and stimulate purchases.

The nation's gross national product, or output of goods and services, declined at an annual rate of 0.6 percent in the first three months of the year, the department said. That was the first drop since a 9.6 percent slide during the first quarter of 1975, at the end of the recession.

Severe winter weather and the coal strike held the economic output down by about 2.5 or 3 percentage points, the department estimated. That means that even with mild weather and no coal strike, the economy would have grown by only about 2 to 2.5 percnt.

Economists say it takes a growth rate of about 4 percent a year to keep unemployment, which is now 6.2 percent, from worsening.

Contrasting with the latest decline, economic growth in the first quarter of 1977, during another severe winter, was a robust 7.5 percent. Since then, it trailed off to 6.2 percent in the second quarter, 5.1 percent in the third quarter and 3.8 percent in the fourth quarter of 1977.

The inflation rate, as measured in the gross national product figures, was 7 percent in the first quarter, compared with a 6.1 percent rate last fall.

The Commerce Department said the biggest reason for the drop last quarter was a 1.3 percent decline in business sales after a strong 6.1 percent increase in the final three month of 1977. The declines were in consumer spending, construction, exports and government purchases.

Despite the weak first quarter, other economic indicators have shown that the worst was in January and February and that business activity was improving in March. The department said Tuesday that housing construction rose 32 percent in March, although it was still below December levels. Americans' personal income and their retail purchases also have begun to increase.

Consumers spent $24.5 billion more in the first quarter than they did at the end of 1977, but the gain was far less than the $40.6-billion gain in the OctoberDecember 1977 period.

Purchases of such long-lasting goods as autos and home appliances declined $2 billion. Businesses increased their investments by $4.2 billion after increasing their spending by $6 billion in the previous quarter.

The Commerce Department tries to remove the effect of seasonal changes and inflation in computing the growth figures. Including price increases, the gross national product rose $31.1 billion, or 6.5 percent, to $1.992 trillion.

Courtenay Slater, chief Commerce Department economist, said April 7 that the index for the first quarter "probably was little changed from the fourth quarter 1977 level."

Even without the coal strike and severe weather, she said, the growth rate for the first three months probably would have been below 4 percent. The gross national product is the leading measure of the nation's economic health.

Doubts Raised At Moro's Execution

By HILMI TOROS
Associated Press Writer

ROME (AP) — Searchers for the body of former Premier Aldo Moro dynamited the icy cover of Lake Duchessa and drained a quarry today but found no trace of the kidnapped political leader. Speculation grew that the Red Brigades' announcement of his execution was a ruse.

Divers, trained mountain dogs and hundreds of others continued searching in and around the snowbound lake 72 miles northeast of Rome, where a communique received Tuesday said the body would be found.

Experts said the message appeared to have been written by the terrorists who grabbed Moro March 16 and killed his five bodyguards. But no trace of the body was found, leading officials to speculate that the communique was a trick to take police away from the hunt for the kidnappers or a hoax to further the terrorists' psychological warfare against the "bourgeois" state.

The search was widened under floodlights during the night to a flooded stone quarry beside a highway six miles from the lake. Investigators said the metal fence between the road and the quarry had been cut, and there were signs of automobile tire tracks on the ground. However, the search turned up nothing.

Doubt of the message's authenticity also was cast when the Milan newspaper Corriere della Sera quoted a lawyer for Red Brigades leaders being tried in Turin as saying they "do not recognize the style of the Red Brigades in the message."

The lawyer, Giannino Guiso, was quoted as saying when he told gang leaders Renato Curcio and Alberto Franceschini about the message, "they laughed and said: 'Don't you realize that that message has been written by some one else? We found the message entertaining. We would like to know who wrote it."

Interior Ministry officials also said the five-pointed Red Brigades emblem had been drawn somewhat differently than on six previous messages from the terrorists.

Candidates For County Board Appear In Forum

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Candidates for the Board of County Commissioners appeared last night at a forum sponsored by the Greenville-Pitt County League of Women Voters.

A spokesman for the League said the candidates forum was designed to give voters an opportunity to meet the candidates and hear their views on the issues.

Candidates attending the session included Etsil Gordon, Tom Johnson, Howard Wilson and incumbent Ed Warren for the Greenville township seat on the board; Walter Gaskins, Maxine Wiggins, and incumbent Alton Gardner for the Ayden-Chicod-Swift Creek district; and Douglas Gurkins for the Winterville-Chicod-Grimesland seat. Incumbent Burney Tucker, who is seeking re-election to the Winterville-Chicod-Grimesland seat was unable to attend the session.

Mrs. Gordon, a licensed general contractor, told the gathering, "the reason I am running," is, a very basic one. "The people of Pitt County are the finest I have met anywhere.

"Since I firmly believe leaders are elected to serve the people as servants, I genuinely would like to serve the people of Pitt County."

Mrs. Gordon, a resident of Greenville for the past 12 years, expressed her interest in and desire for government that is responsive to the needs and desires of the people.

Johnson, said his candidacy, "has not been a sudden decision on my part," adding that there has been, "a long period of preparation."

Johnson described commissioners as being, "the trustees of this county...as it relates to taxing and spending."

A teacher for 20 years, as well as manager of the family farm and industrial property, Johnson indicated particular interest in, "educational opportunities. It's important how we respond to these needs."

"Graduates of our high schools," he said, "should be employed," or be continuing their education.

"Farm economy," Johnson indicated, is another priority and is, "of cructial importance, It is essential that we lend a hand to encourage a good strong economy."

Johnson said he would be, "responsive to the needs of the people," and, "encourage community spirit."

Incumbent Warren said he was raised at Stokes and has lived in Ayden, the Belvoir-Falkland community, and in Greenville.

"I enjoy serving people," Warren said. "The county is my life. I love the people of Pitt County."

The candidate cited a number of projects completed by the Board of Commissioners over the past 3½ years he has been a commissioner, and other projects he would like to see completed, such as a county-wide water system, a recreation program, tax revaluation and the solid waste disposal program.

Wilson Vice Denied

WILSON, N.C. (AP) — Prompted by allegations which have given "a distorted picture of law enforcement in Wilson County," Sheriff W. Robin Pridgen has issued a statement denying that he has knowledge of any connection between his department and alleged payoffs to allow prostitution and gambling in the county.

The Wilson County sheriff has been linked with an investigation being made by federal agencies, including the FBI and the Internal Revenue Service, concerning alleged payoffs.

But in a statement released Tuesday, Pridgen said that because of various allegations "being made without any foundation whatsoever, I will now say emphatically that there have been no payments to me or to any of my officers in this department to my knowledge so that prostitution and gambling would be overlooked in this county."

Pridgen also said the federal investigation of alleged gambling and prostitution activities in the county "has gone far beyond the bounds of common decency," and "is an insult to law-abiding, decent citizens."

He said he believed the public "now has a distorted picture of law enforcement in Wilson County and it is for this reason that I am now speaking out."

Pridgen said the allegations were "politically motivated accusations" which had been "leaked" to the news media, but he did not specify which persons or agencies who might have released the information.

The sheriff also claimed federal agents have followed his deputies, bugged telephones and people and offered potential witnesses "freedom from prison, protection from imprisonment, forgiveness of tax evasions, promises of immunity of prosecutions of unrelated offenses and freedom from parole restrictions, if they would testify against the sheriff's department."

In addition, he said federal agents had brought pressure to bear against friends of the department, and attorneys consulted by the department "have been the subject of investigation and scrutiny, as well as threats from federal agents."

Federal prosecutors have been quoted as saying they may seek up to a dozen criminal indictments by the end of the summer. "So darn many people are potentially involved, it's amazing," U.S. District Attorney George Anderson said recently.

Earlier, Pridgen admitted he had been questioned by prosecutors and specifically asked about prostitution and gambling, but he has declined to elaborate. He is the veteran of 30 years in law enforcement work and has served as Wilson County sheriff for the last three years.

Panama Treaty Foes Say Controversy Not Ended

By LAWRENCE L. KNUTSON
Associated Press Writer

Cheering in the streets of Panama City, jubilation in the White House, and outright relief in the Senate greeted final approval of the Panama Canal treaties.

But there were predictions in Washington that the controversy and debate will continue as the House considers legislation to implement the treaties, which gradually give Panama control of the canal over the next 22 years and which guarantee the waterway's continued neutrality thereafter.

Speaking on his nation's television, Gen. Omar Torrijos, Panama's chief of state, said he had been prepared to resort to violence if the second treaty had been defeated. To submit the issue to new negotiations with the United States, he said, "would mean shame, the negation of sovereignty."

Torrijos told a news conference that if the Senate had failed to ratify the treaty, "we were going to take the route of violent liberation."

"By tommorrow the canal would not have been in operation," he said.

The Panamanian national guard had trained for a decade, the Panamanian leader said, to disable the canal. And he pledged his army would act to do so should the United States intervene in Panamanian affairs after Panama takes over in the year 2000.

But Torrijos obviously was relieved and elated at the Senate's 68-32 approval of the second pact Tuesday.

"This treaty ends colonialism," he said. "I feel proud that I accomplished our mission. The ratification of the Senate buries the treaty that was imposed on us in 1903 and from the body has emerged a new treaty based on mutual respect."

Torrijos told his countrymen, "I want to tell you a big secret" — that he had decided never to submit to renegotiation had the treaty been rejected by the Senate.

From Senate opponents of the treaties came condemnation.

The package's approval, they said, was a retreat from national greatness and ignored the fervent wishes of the great majority of Americans.

Even Senate Democratic leader Robert C. Byrd, a leader of pro-treaty forces, said that if a majority of the country was in favor of the treaties, it was "paper thin" and that a vote for them was "an act of courage."

But President Carter said he is convinced Americans eventually will accept the treaties as being in "the best interest of our nation."

"These treaties can mark the beginning of a new era in our relations, not only with Panama, but with all the rest of the world," Carter said.

"They symbolize our determination to deal with the developing nations of the world, the small nations of the world, on the basis of mutual respect and partnership."

Senate leaders said rejection of the treaty would have dealt a catastrophic blow to U.S. relations with all of Latin America.

And in initial reaction Latin American leaders hailed the ratification vote.

"The United States has taken a sincerely important step toward the establishment of better-balanced relations with greater respect for the interests of the countries of Latin America," said President Carlos Andres Perez of Venezuela.

Sen. Paul Laxalt, D-Nev., said a grave mistake had been made and that he doubts whether the Panamanians ever will be able to handle their new responsibilities.

Former California Gov. Ronald Reagan called the treaties "flawed" and added: "I feel this is a very extreme case of ignoring the sentiment of the people of our country. They were overwhelming in their disapproval of the treaties."

Neutron Bomb

PARIS (AP) — France has exploded an experimental neutron bomb at Mururoa Atoll, its South Pacific test base, the newspaper France Soir reported today.

Political writer Pierre Sainderichin wrote that a "senior military officer" told him the explosion was a "full-scale laboratory experiment."

The writer said three or four years would be needed to solve problems, "particularly electronic," and develop an operational neutron bomb. He said the device tested was too large to be used as an artillery warhead.

But he said the test put France "on about the same level as the United States and 10 years ahead of the Soviet Union" in neutron weaponry.

Sainderichin said President Valery Giscard d'Estaing has not yet made the decision to continue development of the neutron bomb "but it is almost sure that he will."

The French government has made no announcements about nuclear tests at Mururoa since testing there was moved underground in 1975 following protests from nations around the Pacific against nuclear explosions in the atmosphere.

Officials refuse to confirm or deny the reports that the government is developing a neutron bomb. Asked about that last October, Defense Minister Yvon Bourges would say only that France "was not excluding any type of weapons" from its nuclear research program.

Resignation Of Trustee From Hospital Board Accepted At Meeting

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

The Pitt County Memorial Hospital Board last night accepted the resignation of Gretchen Deichmann as a trustee.

The resignation of Dr. Julian Coleman as an Emergency Room physician was also noted. This resignation will be effective June 1 and a replacement will be sought to start work as soon as possible.

The Board members expressed their delight at a letter of appreciation sent the board for the care received in the hospital by Franc White of Greenville.

Treasurer Norfleet Sugg reported that the cash flow for the hospital has improved this month. He said a form will be prepared for local banks to bid on the hospital account for the next two fiscal years.

Committee appointments of the chairman, G. Henry Leslie, were approved, with Jack Richardson's name being added to the Joint Conference Committee. A list of these committees and their members will appear in a later edition of "The Daily Reflector."

Richardson said that the hospital is now feeling the impact of its role as a health care center of Eastern N. C. Several respirators and external pacemakers have had to be found for use by patients during the past month, he said.

Chairman Leslie reported on discussion by the executive committee on the following items:

— A "Long Range Plan" proposal for the hospital by Dr. John Larson of Powell-Larson Associates. There would be stages to such a plan: Analysis of historical data, assignment of priorities, and the working up of a three-year budget.

— review of a contract with Anesthesia Associates, no action;

— a cost containment resolution that would call for an ideal of a reduction in hospital expenditures and capital investment during '78 and '79, and no net increase in hospital beds. This plan is called for in a challenge of Congressman Dan Rostenkowski, chairman of the Health Subcommittee of the U. S. House of Representatives Ways and Means committee and is recommended by the American Hospital Association.

Sugg said the finance committee has suggested that the pension program for hospital employees be reviewed and improved soon. "We have an obligation to give our employees the very best pension plan we can afford," he said, adding that the present plan is "comparable to most banks, but not up to the state pension benefits."

Trustee R. T. Monk, chairman of the building committee for the new bed tower, reported that this committee will be meeting tonight and hopes to make a recommendation to the Board soon as to an architectural firm to retain.

Director Richardson reported that the paid parking for visitors was implemented Saturday. There have been complaints, he said, and difficulty because the employees' parking lot is not begun, much less finished, but that all has gone fairly smoothly. He said loitering around the hospital has already been decreased by this action.

Nursing Director Jean Owens reported that nurse recruitment is continuing. She gave a medical-nursing audit report on atopic pregnancies.

Hospital Plant Manager Ralph Hall told of energy conservation measures in the hospital. He said the hospital was designed in 1971, before energy was a big consideration and that the large amount of exterior wall space is a difficulty. He told of ways the boilers and chillers and power supply are used to best advantage and said there may be use of solar reheat systems in the future.

Chief of Staff Dr. Jack Welch commented that he thinks Pitt Memorial Hospital has special situation, that it is in "somewhat of a dynamic state" as the medical servant of Eastern

How To Save Money Without Losing Face

By JEANNE LESEM
UPI Family Editor

Saving money on a wedding reception is a touchy subject for a bride's parents — and the bride herself.

No one wants to appear stingy, even on a limited budget.

You can save money without losing face by following the examples of business and industry leaders who plan conventions, meetings and trade shows.

A recent issue of a trade publication for such executives offers suggestions. In an article in "Successful Meetings" (Bill Communications, Inc., Philadelphia) the editors tell how to realize savings at hotels that have minimum and maximum price levels for banquet menus.

While set menus usually are the least expensive, additional savings can often be negotiated, they wrote.

They advise against trying to change an entire menu, but suggest asking if you can gain a rebate by substituting one or two items: say, fruit cup with sherbet or maraschino instead of crabmeat cocktail — or ice cream with a sauce or liqueur instead of baked Alaska, which involves more labor.

Even if you only save $1 per person, that's $100 for 100 guests.

"Look for little savings of little impact," the editors said. Do you really need or want relishes, olives, celery, radishes, nuts and mints? "Nothing in life is free; they are built into your menu price and eliminating all or some of them may mean savings."

Consider your guests' ages. Men and younger people usually have bigger appetites women and older persons. Maybe you could order six-ounce steaks instead of the customary eight to 10-ounce cuts.

Their other tips:

— The entree is the single most expensive item on a menu. You might save a little by choosing a local or regional specialty, such as fish in the East, West or Gulf Coast areas. Or the chef's specialty, particularly if he or the hotel restaurant has a local reputation for it. In either situation, choose something fancy so your guests will think it is really special and delicious.

— "It's easier to get away with a less expensive dessert than a less expensive main course, although the saving may not be as great," the editors wrote.

— Seasonal foods can also save money, particularly if you give the catering department permission to substitute, say, the best similar fish buy in the market for the filet of sole on its set menu.

— Labor is your biggest expense, so try to avoid overtime by planning the reception during union working hours in unionized hotels and restaurants.

— Sauces, glazed and flambeed foods run up prices, as well as calories.

— If you hire a beautifully decorated room, you can order fewer and less expensive flowers, centerpieces, etc. You can also save by mixing fresh and artificial fruit and flowers.

— Ask to see the hotel's or restaurant's linens. "If they are frayed, tell the hotel you'll stay with white linens, which almost never look bad even if they're old, as long as they're crisp and nicely ironed. If you want a touch of tang, even with white cloths, use colored napkins."

— Wine served in decanters at tables accomplishes two things: it removes the snobbery issue with the label and looks expensive even if you have chosen an inexpensive brand.

— Planning a cocktail reception? Call it a wine tasting reception and serve wine instead of spirits. It will seem chic, not cheap, and can cut costs to as little as one-third, the editors said.

— Buffet service isn't necessarily less costly than a sit-down meal. The price includes setting tables, paying waiters or busboys to clear them and serve beverages, labor for the kitchen crew and the union-prescribed number of waiters or waitresses.

Among the experts consulted by the editors in putting together the manual were writer and food functions consultant Marina Polvay and Paul Gomez of the Club Managers Assoc. The manual was sponsored by Americana Hotels.

Can't Stand Son's Wife Or In-Laws

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1978 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: When our son David was 15, he gave a 15-year-old girl (I'll call her Dolly) a "promise ring" against our wishes. When she turned 16, he gave her a $150 sewing machine with money he had earned and saved. Her parents let her accept it, which we thought was wrong. They also let David stay at their house until 2 and 3 in the morning knowing that we disapproved.

Well, Dolly and her family accomplished what they set out to do. She ended up pregnant and insisted on marriage. (We got stuck with all the bills for the wedding.)

Now, I have bitter feelings about Dolly and her people, and have choosen not to be around her. That's the problem. I still love our son, and want to keep in close contact with him in case he needs me, but I cannot stand his wife or her family! I want to be close to my grandchild, but under the circumstances it's very difficult.

My husband says we'll lose our son if we don't break down and accept his wife, but I know being around her would make my blood pressure rise to unsafe heights. Help me.

STILL BITTER

DEAR STILL: Your husband is right, and if you don't want to lose your son and have a stranger for a grandchild, you will go along with him. Even though your resentment is justified, remaining bitter and unforgiving will cause you more pain and unhappiness than changing your tune. So change it.

DEAR ABBY: Please don't take this lightly, but my husband and I have a rather prickly problem. His face. No matter how closely he shaves, his beard grows so fast that the result of our shared affection is a rosy red rash on my face.

We haven't been married long, and I have suffered so much pain as a result of our lovemaking that it's beginning to make me frigid.

We've even considered letting his beard grow, but we don't want him to look like a scruffy, hippie type. Also his supervisor at the bank would never understand.

Until you can help us, sign me

CHAFED CHEEKS

DEAR CHAFED: This may not fit in with your lovemaking schedule, but tell your husband to shave first.

DEAR ABBY: I recently married a man with four children. His wife walked out on him and plumb deserted him and the kids, who range in age from 4 to 12. When she left, she gave him custody of the children, saying motherhood was a bummer.

Well, motherhood is no bummer for me. I love these kids. Now, the problem: I don't know whether they've been immunized against all the childhood diseases. Their father isn't sure, and I can't locate their mother.

If I just go ahead and have them immunized for all the common childhood diseases, will it do them any harm if they've already been immunized?

OKIE

DEAR OKIE: Have them immunized again. It won't hurt them, even if they've already been immunized.

Woman Sommelier Enjoys Drama In Serving Of Wine

By CONNIE GRZELKA
AP Newsfeatures Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — All the world's a stage to Margaret Kustermann, a former high school teacher who once dressed like Hitler for a lesson on prejudice and now dons Toulouse Lautrec-style feather boas for her job as one of this country's few women sommeliers.

As a believer in role-playing to express her artistic nature, Ms. Kustermann, wine steward at Chicago's famed Pump Room, also feels that role-playing can help make a point.

The point is wine and Ms. Kustermann says that it is for everyone's enjoyment, not just the select few. To convey this, she has combined her knowledge of wines with her imagination and her penchant for singing and acting. The result is a "sommelieuse," or a singing wine steward dressed in turn-of-the-century French costume.

"The wine steward is there to help people. They're looking for help in wines and they don't want to be intimidated. My costume and the ambience help overcome this feeling. I give them wine suggestions and I think they go out pleased," she said.

The 41-year-old Milwaukee native recently visited this city as a featured participant in the first wine-service seminar sponsored by Blue Nun wine for waitresses in haute cuisine restaurants.

Ms. Kustermann, the holder of a master's degree in history, taught high school English and history for 15 years. She gradually eased into her career change while traveling and teaching in Europe and at the same time increasing her knowledge of wines.

For the past five years, she has worked with wines exclusively. Aside from her work as a sommelier, Ms. Kustermann has traveled to vineyards and wineries, participated in wine-tastings and belongs to a gourmet group in Chicago which experiments with wine and food. She estimates that, each year, she tastes a couple of hundred wines.

The chanteuse-sommelier views wine as "another aspect of history — for example, Louis XIV and the beautiful French wines created for that court. And Napoleon had to have his Chambertin while on his campaign in Russia. You wonder how many men died getting his wine to him."

Her shift from teaching history to serving wine meant "moving into another aspect where the groundwork has already been laid.

"I had a secure profession, but I had confidence and felt that I had the talents. And the opportunity was there. It's just a matter of giving yourself the permission to do it and believing in yourself."

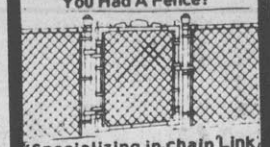

Ms. Kustermann believes there are few women sommeliers in the United States. She is aware of only two including herself, in Chicago. To date, she knows of no women who have been admitted to the London-based Guild of Sommeliers.

Although her chosen field has been a traditionally male-dominated one, she hasn't encountered any resistance — "the men in the business have acknowledged me. They respect me because I'm learning. I know what I'm doing and I've been successful."

Proceeds will be used for beautification and conservation projects including, landscaping the Rehabilitation Center outdoor area at Pitt County Hospital Hospital, supplying vegetable seeds for the Women's Correctional Facility and donating $100 to American Land Trust to purchase land on Roan Mountain, a natural garden of America.

In conjunction with the Greenville Chamber of Commerce Beautification Week, the Lakewood Pines Garden Club completed the following projects:

Planted the cafeteria courtyard at Aycock Junior High School, under the chairmenship of Mrs. Monnie Hedges and Mrs. H. R. Billica with Mrs. Pam Penland, teacher, assisted by students. The planting materials were furnished by the club;

Planted 75 pink dogwood trees in Lakewood Pines and replanted the entrance to Lakewood Pines.

It was announced in case of rain, the fair will be held at the Pentecostal Holiness Church fellowship hall, 204 Brinkley Rd.

. This was the final meeting of the department before the summer.

Program Given BPW Members

The monthly dinner meeting of the Business and Professional Women's Club held Thursday night was highlighted by a program entitled "The Sterotype Woman Gains Status in Society."

Mrs. Kemp Baldwin explained how attitudes toward women have changed through e years in the business and professional fields.

Speakers for the program were Miss Laura Flake, a computor technician with Procter and Gamble, and Miss Carol Ward, industrial engineer with Fieldcrest Mills. They told of their experiences in attaining these positions, the training required and the attitudes of employers and fellow employees.

It was noted that these two fields are typical of the fields of endeavor predominately open to men which are increasingly open to women.

Women Slowly Enter Science Fields

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite the women's movement, there has not been a dramatic increase in the number of young women planning to pursue careers in science, a sampling survey among high school teachers and students involved in the Science Talent Search, a national scholarship program, indicates.

Though there has been no revolution, there has been change and Virginia Rhodes, who teaches advanced anatomy and physiology for college credit at East Noble High School, Kendallville, Ind., is optimistic.

"The numbers are going up," she says. "More of our young women are going on to gain baccalaureate degrees in health care fields such as pharmacy, nursing and medical technology.

"Boys," she adds, "tend overall to be better students in anatomy and physics." This would change, she believes, as did other teachers surveyed, if sisters had the same parental encouragement as their brothers to play when they were children with toys such as building sets and science kits.

Young women whose parents are scientists tend to favor science as a career. Clementina Rodriguez, biology teacher at John Marshall Senior High School, San Antonio, Tex., said. "Of our 685 seniors, 20 percent of the girls plan to pursue professional careers in marine biology, medicine, genetics and chemistry."

She attributes this to the role played by professional parents, the school's science curricula, proximity to a medical complex for research and the Space Age. On the other hand, she is finding little interest among the young women in careers as mathematicians, engineers and physicists.

Sarah Elizabeth Dennis, 17, a senior at John Marshall who this year won a national science award for her work in chemistry, thinks she knows why.

"In our part of the country, being a cheerleader and being socially visible rate higher than anything," she explains.

Prejudice and social stigma exist elsewhere, say officials of the Science Talent Search, started by Westinghouse in 1942 to encourage high school seniors of both sexes to follow scientific careers.

"The interest in science as a career among young women is increasing, but slowly," notes Dorothy Schriver, assistant executive director of Science Service, the non-profit organization here that has administered the program since its inception.

"Unfortunately, the notion that science is not a ladylike profession still persists," Mrs. Schriver says. "During the past five years, the number of submissions from young women high school seniors has remained about the same, representing about one-third of the entries."

Interviews with some of this year's 40 national winners, including 10 young women, during their recent scientific exhibition at the National Academy of Science here augment her views.

"Being a woman in science around my area is unusual," said 17-year-old Donna Joan Pickrell, a senior at Rosencrans High School, Zanesville, Ohio. Her winning project related to biochemistry and soybean plant experimentation.

Without her father's and older brother's encouragement ever since elementary school, she says she might have been influenced in other directions by the conservative, rural farmland area in which she lives.

"A girl I know who is very good in science is quite discreet about it because she's afraid of becoming a social outcast," said second-place winner Joseph Peter Tanzi, 17, a senior at Cranston, R.I., High School East.

How good are career opportunities for women in science? Betty Vetter, a chemist who is executive director of the Scientific Manpower Commission here, says, "Women scientists as a group are a little better off than they were two years ago, but are still holding the long end of the unemployment stick.

"The good news is that unemployment is low among scientists and engineers relative to other groups with similar amounts of education, and lower for women scientists and engineers than for women in other fields."

Mutual Support Is The Idea

J. C. Galloway, Pitt County farm leader, Monday made good on a pledge to disc up his 20-acre wheat crop.

Early Monday morning his son, Jim, mounted a tractor with disc behind and destroyed the winter wheat crop.

Pitt County, of course, is not a large wheat growing area and if all the wheat in the county were destroyed it is doubtful that there would be any effect on the national supply of wheat.

Galloway's action was meaningful, however.

Last month he testified before the U. S. Senate Committee on Agriculture, Nutrition and Forestry concerning farm problems.

When the emergency farm-aid bill was recently defeated many large midwest wheat growers pledged to start plowing up their crops.

Galloway said tobacco growers will eventually need the support of midwest farmers, and consequently he was now giving them his support.

The spokesman for the American Agricultural Movement said he has spent eight weeks in Washington lobbying for passage of new farm measures.

The entire farm sector of our nation's economy is in deep trouble. It is not always easy for southern farmers to identify with midwestern or western farms, but their problems are similar. If farmers of various sections of the nation don't support each other, we are likely to see more farm red ink ahead.

He Made Famous Berlin Airlift Work

The United States has made stands since World War II which turned out well, and some which became fiascos.

One which worked, and perhaps saved Western Europe from communism was the airlift which bridged the Berlin blockade in 1948.

The man who made it work, Gen. Lucius Clay, died last weekend. The airlift he engineered saved West Berlin from being swallowed up by the communists. To this day it remains a part of the western world.

It was a peacetime military maneuver which was brilliantly carried out.

Travel Industry Is Paying

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — Think twice before you honk angrily at that tourist who doesn't know which way to turn.

He has paid for a piece of the highway — and is helping you pay for your school, police, park and other governmental services.

Taxes are a big part of the money being spread across North Carolina by visitors. Preliminary results of a study on the economic impact of travel and tourism in North Carolina last year show that the travel business generated $749 million in taxes. Local taxes totaled $93 million; state taxes were $448 million; and federal income and gasoline taxes topped $208 million.

The study being compiled by Lewis C. Copeland of the University of Tennessee reports a banner year for 1977, outstripping even anticipated records.

Records

A total of 46.7 million visitors either passed through the state, or spent time here. North Carolina was deliberately chosen as a travel destination by 21 million.

Total spending topped $1.7 billion, and Tar Heels themselves contributed more than $591 million to that total by travelling about their home state. Besides the taxes paid and business generated, travelers provide a lot of jobs for North Carolinians — a total of 157,960, Copeland discovered. The payroll ran $617 million.

North Carolina's beaches and mountains needless to say are a strong magnet for vacationers, but the statistical study shows that business from conventions, trade shows, and sales meetings far outweigh vacationers.

Mecklenburg County is undisputed champion of the travel business, capturing nearly 16 per cent with revenues totalling almost $280 million. That urban county has 1,967 firms catering to visitors, and 18,982 jobs. Nearest travel competitors are Wake, Buncombe, Forsyth and Guilford, all doing less than half the business Mecklenburg is.

NOBLITT

Even so, the travel industry doesn't have the same sort of impact in such urban areas as it dows in the smaller resort counties.

In mountainous Avery County, for example, the $15.6 million in travel business represented better than half the total retail business done in 1977. Typically, tourism makes up from 20 to 40 per cent of the retail trade in travel-oriented coastal counties such as Currituck, Dare, Hyde, and in mountaincounties of Swain, Watauga and Madison.

County Totals

Buncombe, Forsyth, Guilford and Wake counties did from $100 to $141 million in travel business. Cumberland had $64.6 million, and New Hanover $53.6 million. Durham and Gaston fell in the $40 to $50 million category, and Alamance and Catawba in the $30 to $40 million range. Between $20 and $30 million was logged in Dare, Davidson, Iredell, Moore, Nash, Onslow, Rowan and Watauga.

Between $15 and $20 million are Burke, Cabarrus, Cartaret, Haywood, Henderson, Orange, Pitt, Robeson, Wayne and Wilson.

Counties with from $10 to $15 million are Caldwell, Cleveland, Craven, Halifax, Johnston, Lenoir, Randolph, Rockingham, Rutherford, Surry, Swain. Those under $1 million are Camden, Caswell, Clay, Gates, Greene, Jones Pamlico, Perquimans and Tyrrell.

THE INSIDE REPORT

Party-Splitting Attacked

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — Republican national chairman William Brock, serving notice he will not tolerate sanotions imposed by rightwing Republicans against ideologically impure party leaders, is preparing a symbolic reprimand against Texas Republican chairman Ray Barnhart aimed at state party purse strings.

Barnhart boycotted the "Republican jubilee" dinner in Houston April 6 because Sen. Howard Baker, the Senate minority leader, was the main speaker. Furious at Baker's support of the Panama Canal treaty, Barnhart went instead to the party's dinner in Dallas the same night (addressed by Rep. Jack Kemp of New York, a leading conservative).

The reprimand of Barnhart is being worked out privately by Brock and national finance director Theodore Welch. They intend to cut Barnhart out of control over some $300,000 in campaign funds raised at the Houston dinner. Those funds are divided 50-50 between state and national parties.

If as in most other states the Texas state party itself controlled use of the state's half of the $300,000, Brock might have given the Houston dinner committee sole power to allocate the money — cutting off Barnhart entirely. But in this case, the legal instrument for handling the money is a special candidates committee (including Barnhard) that cannot be excluded. So, control of the state"s portion will be divided between this committee and the Houston dinner committee (which does not include Barnhart).

Barnhart's decision to go public against Baker's appearance at Houston angered all kinds of Texas Republicans, not just moderates. "The Reaganites and everyone else in the Texas party say, off the record, that Barnhart was just plain stupid to air his grievance against Baker in the press and then boycott the Houston dinner," one Republican insider told us.

Many Republican elected officials and 1978 candidates are pleased by the decision to make an example of Barnhart, For a dwindling party plagued by ideological differences, disciplining Barnhart serves notice that efforts of one wing of the party. to impose sanctions against another is a luxury Republicans cannot afford.

Soviet Neutron 'NYET'

Within minutes of President Carter's decision not to produce the neutron "bomb" at this time, a high official in the Soviet embassy here was ridiculing any chance Moscow would reciprocate by stopping deployment of the dread SS-20 mobile ballistic missile.

The SS-20, based in western Russia and targeted on Western Europe, has been picked by the administration as just the ticket for a Soviet response to Mr. Carter's kindness on the neutron warhead.

When we asked the Soviet official's reaction over Mr. Carter's surprising decision, he said he was delighted. Would the Soviets respond in kind? Certainly, he said: "We, too, will forgo the neutron bomb if the decision of your President really means the bomb will not be produced."

But the Kremlin's military plans do not even contemplate the neutron warhead, a defensive weapon, with little offensive capability

When we pointed that out to the Soviet official and asked whether ceasing deployment of the SS-20 would not be a fair exchange for the neutron warhead, he ridiculed the idea. "The SS-20 has nothing to do with the neutron," he said. That statement should surprise nobody except those who close their eyes to Moscow's drive for military supremacy.

Human Rights Double Standard

The flagrant double standard on human rights prevailing in Congress moved Rep. Henry Hyde of Illinois last week to shame his colleagues with an "anti-hypocrisy" amendment — to no avail.

Hyde, a conservative Republican, was irritated that a House Banking subcommitte was about to adopt an amendment barring future Export-Import Bank loans to South Africa because of human rights violations, while ignoring repression elsewhere. To heighten the irony, another pending amendment would permit loans to Communist China, even though Peking scarcely sets a model for human rights.

Hyde's question: why

Strength For Today

SIN & SICKNESS

It is significant that Christ was crucified between two thieves. Centuries before, the prophet had declared that when the Messiah came, he would be numbered among the transgressors.

And so he was. But the Bible declares that where sin abounds, grace much more abounds. The Great Physician is to be found in places where sin is carrying out its most destructive work.

For our own comfort let us always remember that it is in the moments of greatest unworthiness that we may encounter Christ. It is while our temptations are assailing us and beating us into submission that we become conscious of his saving presence.

Let us never make the mistake of believing that we are acceptable to Christ only if we are good. The truth is that we are acceptable to him while we are still evil. His only demand is our ardent desire to be delivered from evil.

Ghetto Site Is Quiet

By GEORGE BRODZKI
Associated Press Writer

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Little children play now in a big downtown square on the site of the Warsaw Ghetto, where the Jews launched their heroic and hopeless uprising against the Nazis 35 years ago today.

The Germans created the ghetto by rounding up Jews from different parts of Poland and segregating them in an old quarter of the city. In 1940, they forced the Jews to build a wall around the mile-square area, sealing it off from the rest of the city.

By early 1943 the Nazis had shipped 300,000 Jews from the ghetto to the gas chambers of the Treblinka extermination camp.

On April 19, 1943, some of the 100,000 people remaining in the ghetto opened fire on the Nazis in a last, deperate attempt to "save human dignity," Yurek Wilner, a leader of the uprising, said at the time.

German SS troops retaliated, systematically burning out sections of the ghetto until there was no hiding place left for the fighters.

The last bunker, on Mila Street, fell May 8, 19 days after the uprising began. Mordechai Anielewicz, commander of the uprising, was buried in the rubble.

Only a few of the ghetto's fighters escaped. They crawled through sewers to the Polish side of town and later joined the Polish partisans. The Germans razed the ghetto.

The only signs of the uprising today are the black stone slabs of the Ghetto Memorial, which President Carter visited last December.

Lancing The U.S. Press

WASHINGTON — Former budget director Bert Lance, who now specializes in Arab takeovers of American banks, warned U.S. editors at a convention last week that, if the media didn't get its home in order, the American press may be faced with outside censorship.

Mr. Lance feels, as Mr. Agnew did during another administration, that he has been mistreated by the media and is a victim of "erroneous and biased reporting."

Whether he is justified in his belief is one problem. The real question is how does Mr. Lance bring about censorship of the American press if they keep writing those terrible things about him?

The obvious answer is that he does it through his best friend, Jimmy Carter. But the way things have been going lately for Mr. Carter, it's doubtful the President could pull off press censorship in the United States any better than he's pushed through other issues he's handled.

Let us assume that Mr. Lance finally decides he's had it with the media, and the only solution to getting a good press is to demand some form of censorship. This is what could happen:

He would go to President Carter and tell him the biggest problem the country faced was a free press. He would suggest that the President ask Congress for a "Department of Censorship" which would make sure any unfavorable publicity of Mr. Lance be kept out of the newspapers and off television.

ART BUCHWALD

Mr. Carter, as a favor, would agree to sponsor it.

The first thing the President would do is go on television and announce that the press coverage accorded Mr. Lance was a "national disgrace" and he was going to ask Congress to set up a new department to deal with the problem. He would tell the American people that a strong censorship department with teeth in it was the "moral equivalent of war" and one of the major priorities of his Administration.

Then the President would call the Congressional leaders to a breakfast and tell them if they passed nothing else in the next four years, he wanted a Department of Censorship.

The Senate and House leaders would go back to the Hill and introduce the bill.

But then the press and television media would start a counter-lobbying effort, pointing out censorship was a violation of the First Amendment.

A debate would take place in Congress, with Senate and House leaders risking their political careers to get the President's bill through.

Just as they lined up enough votes to create the new department, President Carter would hold a press conference where he would be asked about his intention to censor the press.

The President would reply that he was against censoring any section of the media, and couldn't understand why Congress wanted the bill in the first place. He would add that if they passed such a law he would have no choice but to veto it.

The Congressional leaders would go back to the President and demand to know

Public Forum

Letters submitted for Public Forum must be limited to 300 words.

To the editor:

Apr. 16-22 is Volunteer Week in North Carolina, and I want to take that opportunity to write this open letter to all North Carolinians.

I think we have to begin looking at voluntarism as a necessity, not a luxury, in our society. We have to fact the fact that, without more commitment and effort on the part of individual citizens, our society simply will not be able to adequately address the critical needs we have.

I hear complaints about the size and growth of government. But we should recognize that government has grown because our demand for public services has grown. We can't have it both ways— more services and less government — unless we're prepared, as individuals, to should more of the burden ourselves.

An individual can make a difference. I know, because I spend an hour every Monday morning as a reading volunteer, teaching six third-graders in a Raleigh school — reading with them, coaching them, encouraging them and, most of all, loving them. Two of those children who started out with me have improved so much that they've been put in the regular reading class. If we could get 10 people in every county to do the same thing, we could provide special instruction for 6,000 children in this state — without spending another cent in tax money.

Voluntarism isn't just the most economical way to go. I think it's the best way. Volunteers bring commitment and compassion to their jobs. And the volunteer benefits, too, from giving a part of himself or herself to help other human beings.

I'm asking people to give a new dimension to the word "citizenship" — not just paying your taxes, not just contributing to church or charity, but contributing some of your own time and hard work to give somebody else a better chance in life.

If you want to volunteer and don't know where to start, call my office toll-free in Raleigh (1-800-662-7952), and we'll help.

40 Years Ago Today

April 19, 1938

Falkland citizens were almost frightened out of their wits about 7 p.m. yesterday when a bolt of lightening struck in the center of town, but no damage was experienced.

As told by one witness, "A loud clap of thunder was heard and a ball of fire came down the highway. The wet pavement was dried by the bolt. One woman was put to bed because of shock and jar, but she was up today and none the worse for the experience."

Part of the town was in darkness for a time after the bolt.

Water transportation for Greenville and this vicinity was a step nearer reality today as a result of inclusion of the Tar River project in the rivers and harbors bill approved by the House of Representatives Appropriation Committee yesterday.

Of the $95 million to be appropriated for rivers and harbors work during the fiscal year beginning July 1, $328,000 will be for the purpose of clearing a 12 foot channel 100 feet wide in Tar River between Washington and Hardees Creek near Greenville. Also a turning basin 1,500 feet above the mouth of the creek will be constructed.

This was the largest of the five new projects for North Carolina included in the bill.

Rarity In Market Forecasting

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — Since 1929, investors have been willing to pay on average about 1.5 times the book value of the blue-chip stocks that make up the Dow Jones industrial average.

Before the price spurt of last Friday and early this week, those same stocks were selling at less than book value.

In percentage terms, prices since 1929 have averaged 150 percent of book value; at the recent market low of 742 points, they were selling for just 87 percent of paid-in capital and retained earnings.

For this and other reasons, John Wright was one of those rarities who consistently forecast a rise in the prices of blue chips amidst the gloomy news of budget deficits, dollar declines and trade imbalances.

Only twice before, said Wright, have market values fallen so low: In 1932, when there were no earnings and often no dividends either, and in 1974, when we had Watergate, recession and sharply higher oil prices.

Recently, he said, the bad news hasn't been of the same magnitude. It has been bad enough, he concedes, but he feels we overestimated the inflation potential and unfairly downgraded presidential efforts.

Criticism of President Carter has been mostly unjustified," said Wright this week from Bridgeport,Conn., where Wright Investors' Service invests multimillion-dollar pension and endowment funds.

"Carter really hasn't provided glamorous leadership," he said, but his moves have been correct and gradually they are going to improve things."

Wright believes G.William Miller, new chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, will help set the economy on the right road. " He will be more positive, more effective than Arthur Burns," he said.

Despite all the acclaim the former chairman received, Burns was a pedagogue, a man who consistently endangered the economy in his mistaken efforts to correct imbalances, said Wright.

He fully expects that from now on the nation's imbalance of international payments slowly will be corrected, and that Miller will be successful in returning stability to foreign exchange markets.

If these efforts fail, however, he foresees a crisis developing in the next three or four years. Regardless, there is enough security during the next two years for the stock market to rise, he believes.

Wright, whose firm also advises bank trust departments, doubts the president's call for voluntary restraints will be effective and that eventually wage and price restraint will be through tax incentives.

He does not, however, view this in a negative sense, either for the economy or for the stock market. Americans, he suggested, understand and respond to such financial attractions.

Verbal Swipes At Hodges By Opponents During 'Forum'

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Democratic Senate candidate Luther Hodges Jr. was the target Tuesday of a series of verbal blasts by some of his opponents at a candidates' forum.

State Sen. McNeill Smith of Greensboro took the lead against Hodges in the meeting sponsored by the Wake County Young Democrats, saying Hodges was quoted last year as saying he and conservative Republican Sen. Jesse Helms "are not far apart."

And Smith later challenged Hodges on the affirmative action accomplishments of North Carolina National Bank while Hodges was chairman.

Smith said Hodges made the remark about Helms at a Rotary Club meeting in Rocky Mount. At his first opportunity, Hodges responded to Smith by name, saying "As a candidate for the U.S. Senate, I have never spoken to the Rocky Mount Rotary club."

Hodges said Smith had lifted the remark from an article published last year in which he was responding to a question about govenmental regulation of business. Hodges said he was against regulations that stifle business, and that on that point, he and Helms are not that far apart.

Hodges press aide Paul Bernish later said that the remark came from an interview in Rocky Mount in which Hodges said the economic impact of governmental regulations of business should be considered.

Smith has referred to the Hodges' remark previously in his campaign, and has recently accused Hodges of "waffling" on the issues.

Smith questioned Hodges about the number of blacks in top jobs at NCNB later in the program, and Hodges replied with a question about the number of blacks in Smith's Greensboro law firm.

Also at the meeting, candidate Joe Felmet challenged Hodges to answer why NCNB made large loans to South African interests.

Hodges responded by saying he was aware of the loans but did not have a hand in their approval while chairman of NCNB.

Hodges also said that he supports majority black rule in South Africa, but does not favor economic sanctions against the country.

Afterwards, Hodges said the attacks on him are a sign that he is the frontrunner.

"It's been that way. I suppose I should be flattered that everybody's running against me and not Jesse Helms," Hodges said. "It doesn't bother me."

The YDC forum came shortly after all eight Democratic candidates met in Chapel Hill to tape an hour-long session televised on the WUNC television network later in the evening. It is to be repeated on several commercial stations in the state before the May 2 primary.

Only one of the candidates, William B. Griffin of Rockingham, did not attend the second forum.

Elma Lewis Will Speak

RALEIGH — Elma Lewis, founder-director of the National Center of Afro-American Artists in Boston will be special guest speaker for the 2nd annual meeting of the N. C. Cultural Arts Coalition to be held in Raleigh on Saturday, April 22.

Her Boston-based orgnization was chosen by the American Revolutionary Bicentennial Commission as a symbol of the arts made meaningful in current history.

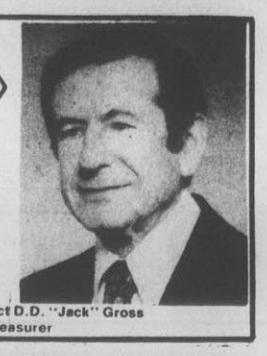

Ms. Lewis is scheduled to speak at the meeting's luncheon on St. Augustine's campus.

Other events in the day-long meeting will include a business session, the 2nd Annual Black Arts Festival in the St. Augustine theater and on the grounds of WRAL-TV, Raleigh; and a members' reception and private showing of a special exhibition of "A Survey of Zairian Art: The Bronson Collection: at the N. C. Museum of Art.

have been reconstructed. But modern buildings cover the site of the ghetto in the center of this capital of 1.5 million people.

Januz Wieczorek, chairman of the Polish World War II Fighting and Martyrdom Commission, said at the Auschwitz concentration camp Monday that Poles had done all they could to help the Jews in their struggle.

The only Gentile partisan organization to help Jews was established in Poland in 1942 under the name "Zhegota," Wieczorek said.

Yad Vashem, an Israeli organization, plans to decorate 19 Poles for aiding Jews during the occupation, when such help was punishable by death.

Wieczorek spoke at the dedication of a permanent exhibit of the Jewish martyrdom to mark the ghetto uprising. Among those attending the ceremony was Nahum Goldmann, 83-year-old founder-president of the World Jewish Congress.

He told The Associated Press he believes Poland is seeking a reconciliation with the Jews although diplomatic ties with Israel have been broken since the 1967 Arab-Israeli War.

At Auschwitz, preserved as a memorial, ovens swallowed the bodies of 4 million people from all over Europe, Jews and Gentiles alike.

why he asked for the new Department of Censorship when he didn't want it.

Mr. Carter would explain he had done it as a favor to Mr. Lance, and he couldn't care less about press censorship. The leaders would tell him that unless he made a strong statement in favor of the censorship bill they would lose it in both Houses.

The President would tell the House and Senate leaders that that was their problem, not his.

And so the "Department of Censorship" would die on the floors of the Capitol, and the country would be stuck with reading about Mr. Lance's wheeling and dealing for the rest of Mr. Carter's term in office.

It won't be any fun for Mr. Lance, but as the President would explain to him at the family dinner table, "Bert, even the President of the United States can't win them all."

single out South Africa? So, he offered an amendment barring aid to all countries listed as less than free by Freedom House. That covers 74 countries, running from Afghanistan to Zaire, and includes South Africa and Red China.

The "anti-hypocrisy" amendment did not faze the subcommittee. Hyde's was the only vote for his amendment. The anti-South African amendment then carried 10-to-5, followed by an 11-to-4 vote in favor of the Chinese amendment.

A footnote: While guilty sometimes of a human rights double standard itself, the Carter administration supports neither the South African nor Chinese amendments; they look too much like a congressional power grab for the State Department's liking.

Withheld Data On Smuggling

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — State Bureau of Investigation Director Haywood Starling has acknowledged withholding from Gov. Jim Hunt some information regarding organized cigarette smuggling operations in the state, but he defended his silence with three reasons, The Charlotte Observer reported today.

Starling said he held back some information documenting violations of state laws because he did not trust parts of it and because he thought Hunt knew about some of it. He said privacy laws also prohibited him from telling the governor other parts of the information.

The newspaper said Hunt sought information about cigarette smuggling from the SBI in February as he prepared to announce plans for a special investigation into the business in North Carolina.

Based on what the SBI told him, the newspaper said, Hunt declared that cigarette smugglers were not violating state laws and said there was no evidence organized crime was involved in smuggling in North Carolina.

However, the Observer said the most recent detailed SBI study of cigarette smuggling, a confidential report completed in 1974 and obtained by the newspaper, concluded that cigarette smugglers in the state have violated state laws in their smuggling operations since the 1960s.

The Observer quoted the report as saying the SBI study "shows organized crime involvement in North Carolina has reached its greatest proportion and impact on the state in the area of cigarette smuggling.

The SBI had at least two opportunities to provide Hunt and his investigators with the information, the newspaper said.

In one, SBI Director Haywood Starling personally approved the wording in a Hunt statement that said, "no North Carolina law is being violated by cigarette smugglers," the Observer said.

In the second case, it said the SBI gave Hunt's investigators the 1974 report but excised some portions dealing with state law violations and organized crime.

The newspaper said the violations include sales of untaxed cigarettes to smugglers and the creation of phony businesses to disguise smuggling. The SBI report suggests organized crime members are regular customers of North Carolina suppliers, the Observer said.

Officials involved in Hunt's investigation were surprised they had not received all the available SBI information on smuggling.

"I thought we had everything" said Phil Carlton, secretary of Crime Control and Public Safety, who was responsible for Hunt's investigtion. He said he was considering asking for the withheld information. Hunt referred all questions to Carlton.

Sheriff Arrests Only Opponent

ASHEBORO, N.C. (AP) — Randolph County Sheriff Carl Moore, seeking renomination in the May 2 primary, has arrested his only opponent on a charge of felony possession of stolen property.

The opponent, 22-year-old J.A. Sheppard, has accused Moore of making the arrest last week in order to discredit him before the primary election.

"The last campaign, he spent a lot of money to get elected," said Sheppard, an employee of Union Carbide making his first political race. "This time he hasn't spent nothing. He knew all of this was coming about and figured he would damage my reputation before the election."

Moore has denied that the charges were politically motivated, saying they had nothing to do with the primary campaign.

Sheppard was arrested last week by 10 sheriff's deputies, Asheboro policemen and SBI agents during a raid on his mother's home. They loaded a quantity of guns, knives, strongboxes, clocks and other items into a truck and took them to the county jail.

Moore said officers knew many of the items at the house were stolen. He said several of the knives were taken from a home in the county last Dec. 31.

The warrant against Sheppard said he knew the knives had been stolen. He was released on an unsecured bond for $1,000 and a hearing has been scheduled for April 28.

Moore said Sheppard's brothers, Clifford Eugene Sheppard and David Phillip Sheppard, were indicted by a county grand jury March 28 in a series of break-ins.

Arrest 3 On Drug Count

Greenville Police last night arrested three men on marijuana possession charges and confiscated $12,000 worth of "grass" following an incident on Memorial Drive.

Chief Glenn Cannon reported David William Chambers Jr., 27 of Stokes, James Clementh Hicks, 24 of Route 1, Biscoe, and Billy Simmons Dunn, 25 of Star, were charged with possession of marijuana, in connection with the case.

The chief said officers recovered 20 pounds of marijuana from the trunk of Dunn's car about 11:45 p.m., after the illegal "grass" had been transferred from Chambers' truck at a car lot North of the Dickinson Avenue intersection.

In addition to the marijuana, investigators found a .38 caliber revolver in the Dunn car and a .25 caliber automatic in Chambers' truck.

Cannon said officers confiscated the marijuana, both pistols, the 1978 model truck and the 1976 model car.

Street value of the marijuana was estimated at $12,000, according to the chief.

Chambers, Dunn and Hicks were placed under $2,500 bond each pending a court hearing in the case.

How's The Weather?

WEATHER FORECAST — Rain is forecast today over New England and into the Great Lakes region where it will change to showers and snow. Showers are also anticipated for the West Coast and into the Rocky Mountain region. Temperatures will be mild in the South and generally cool elsewhere. (AP Laserphoto Map)

By The Associated Press

Showers and thundershowers continued across North Carolina today, especially along the coast and in the southeastern part of the state. The storms began across the state Tuesday in connection with a complex system that has produced severe weather over the Southeast.

Only the mountains were spared this morning but the forecast indicated they could get more showers and thundershowers tonight.

Cape Hatteras had one of the heaviest rainfalls as it measured 2.87 inches this morning. Rocky Mount also had more than two inches.

The forecast indicated some strong thundershowers could develop today east of the mountains along with strong gusty winds. A chance of showers will continue in the mountains Thursday while the weather will be clearing from the west elsewhere.

High temperatures varied considerably around the state Tuesday, reaching a high of 78 in Wilmington and only 55 in Greensboro. Asheville had 52, Charlotte 65 and Raleigh 57.

Heavy fog developed over portions of the state this morning as temperatures dropped to the 50s and 60s. Greensboro was even chillier with a low of 48 degrees.

Temperatures were expected to reach mostly the 60s again today with lows tonight mostly in the 40s. Friday may be some cooler with high readings from the 50s in the mountains to the 60s elsewhere.

A Review...

Talents Vitalized Shakespeare Play

The current production of Shakespeare's "A Midsummer Night's Dream" by members of the East Carolina Playhouse at the McGinnis Auditorium on campus, again proves the Playhouse has outstanding talent in its midst.

Del Lewis splendidly directs the play, one of "the Bard's" most popular, principally by capturing its appeal to all ages in the pleasure of seeing delightful fairies,, lovers go astray all because of love potions.

Lewis has used many inventive techniques, such as the impressive electronic music — shades of "Close Encounters of the Third Kind" — throughout the show. At the same time he creates a mystic, dream land aura. His fairies are light and airy, at times seeming to float across the stage.

Designer Marla Jurglanis' scantily clad characters seem just right, for who could imagine lighthearted fairies burdened with excessive clothing on a warm summer night?

The chief delight of this production, however, lies in the youthfully energetic performances of the company.

Sara Jo Berman is lovely as the sultry and seductive Titania, Queen of the Fairies. Denny Wright is charming as the impish Puck, whose love potions leads to a hilarious turn of events.

Sally Clodfelter as Hermia and Holly Jereme as Helena, two mortal ladies caught up in a confusing lover's quartet, gave two of the finest performances seen in the Playhouse this season. Their portrayals of women changing from innocence to shrewishness when the affections of their lovers are switched, and their exciting fight scene is masterful.

Another fine comedy performance was that of Christopher Kara-Eneff as Bottom, the weaver who is changed into an ass by Puck's mischief. This famous scene and the well known "play-within-a-play" scene depicting the tragic story of Pyremus and Thisbe are performed as one feels Shakespeare would want them performed.

In fact, it is very likely Shakespeare would be proud of this production of "A Midsummer Night's Dream." This is definitely a "don't miss" event, a pleasure for all who enjoy Shakespeare's works and a fine introduction for youngsters who may not before have had the chance to see Shakespeare's fancy come alive on stage.

The production is on stage nightly at 8:15 p.m. through Saturday night. Tickets are available at the door or by calling the ticket office 757-6390 between 9 a.m. and 4 p.m. daily.

North Carolina. He expressed doubt that cost containment overall would work here.

ECU Medical School Dean William Laupus said basically the same as Dr. Welch, calling Eastern N. C. "an area long underserved." He said cost containment would have to be "at a unit level," he believes.

Laupus said the Cardiac Catherization Unit may be bid next Monday, if all goes well in Raleigh, where the plans are now being reviewed. Planned completion date on the Neo-Natal Unit is June 15, he said.

An announcement on acceptances for the next Medical School class probably won't be made before May 15, he said.

Will Vote On New Judgeships

WASHINGTON (AP) — Both houses will vote on a conference committee report that would create 152 new judgeships — the biggest group of U.S. judgeships ever created at one time.

If Congress approves Tuesday's conference report, there would be 117 new district court judges and 35 additional jurists on circuit courts of appeals.

Harry Reasoner Is Said Leaving ABC

NEW YORK (AP) — Barbara Walters will stay, Harry Reasoner will go. That is the gist of an ABC reorganization plan that news chief Roone Arledge planned to announce today, The Associated Press has learned.

The plan cuts out Reasoner, who has more than five years with the network, and establishes Frank Reynolds as regional anchor in Washington, Peter Jennings in London and Max Robinson in Chicago. Miss Walters would continue in her current role.

Robinson, the least known nationally of the group, is a veteran anchorman on WTOP in Washington.

Reasoner denied Tuesday that there was any change in his situation.

Reasoner, who has complained that his role had been decreased since Miss Walters jumped from NBC to ABC 18 months ago, has asked to be let out of his five-year contract in June. He signed the pact last year.

Reasoner has an offer to return to CBS, where he would fill the vacancy left by Bill Moyers.

First, Invest In Insurance

Interstate Securities Corporation

Financial planning involves more than monthly budgets or common stock investments. Mistakes in planning, or lack of a plan at all, are not limited to inexperienced people with modest incomes; professionals often make the same mistakes in managing their money.

One of the first investments you should make is in insurance to protect your family if something happens to you. If you already have insurance, have you checked your coverage lately? Inflation may have seriously eroded the value of your life insurance coverage, and housing prices have risen so sharply that your homeowners coverage could be inadequate.

If you own a home and a life insurance policy, you may have an estate and should have an up-to-date will. Tax laws have changed considerable in the last several years, so your will may need changing as well.

If your financial plan includes buying stocks and bonds, determine what your objectives are and stick with them. Spread your investment funds over several areas, including bonds, common stocks, real estate insurance, and a cash reserve for emergencies.

Many people move from "investing" to "speculating" because that's "where the action is." These individuals wind up with an old collection of stocks bought on advice from friends or on, rumors, which don't meet their investment objectives. Investing for longer term growth - in well managed companies capable of increasing earnings and dividends in the future - will pay off if you stick with it. Trading is best left to the professionals.

Don't fall in love with the stocks that you own. If a company is performing poorly, admit it and sell the stock if conditions warrant that. Knowing when to sell a stock is as important as knowing when to buy it. By the same token, don't be greedy. "Bears make money, bulls make money, hogs never do." Holding out for the last eighth of a point usually costs you part of your profit.

In the last several years, tax shelters have had many headlines, unfortunately because of losses suffered by stock-holders in a few oil drilling, cattle feeding, or real estate ventures ventures. Remember that there are disadvantages to tax shelters as well as advantages.

Keep detailed financial records. Many people know what they own, but not when they bought it or what they paid for it. These records are necessary for tax purposes.

Don't hesitate to pay for professional financial advice. If you are experienced in the financial arena and have plenty of time, you may save money by doing the work yourself. Otherwise, you may save money in the long run by seeking advice from a professional.

Math Awards To 3 Seniors

ECU News Bureau

The Department of Mathematics at East Carolina University has presented three awards to ECU students for outstanding achievement in mathematics.

The William Lowell Putnam Award, a $250 scholarship, was presented to Jay W. Gleason of Toledo, Ohio, who was the highest scorer at ECU on the Putnam examination. The examination, which has been given nationally for 38 years, was taken by students participating in the ECU Mathematics Honors Program.

Gleason, a senior majoring in math with an option in computer science, is a student programmer with the ECU Computing Center and a computer operator at Lenoir Memorial Hospital in Kinston.

The Pignani-Archer Mathematics Award was presented to Linda Lou Bryan of Vanceboro. The award of $100 is made annually to the senior mathematics major who has accumulated the highest overall grade point ration and has completed all of the undergraduate work at ECU and is within one semester of graduation.

The award was established in 1977 as a tribute to the late Dr. Tullio J. Pignani and the late Mrs. Leone D. Archer.

Bryan was also named Outstanding Senior in Mathematics. The award is bestowed by members of the senior class and is based upon the recipient's scholarship, leadership and extracurricular activities.

The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick B. Bryan of Vanceboro, Miss Bryan is currently a student teacher at J. H. Rose High School in Greenville. Her other honors include membership in Pi Mu Epsilon Epsilon, a mathematics honor society and Phi Kappa Phi, a national honor society.

'Hidden' Problem In Humidifiers

We keep a large, cold air humidifier going day and night in our bedroom and in our 8-year-old son's room. I've been a little concerned because I read somewhere that these machines can cause colds and coughs. Is this so? — Mrs. D.M., Minn.

Dear Mrs. M.:

When rooms are heated during cold weather the moisture in the air is diminished. It is generally accepted that the large humidifiers now used in homes are excellent for replacing the moisture.

Very recently, a report in the Journal of the American Medical Association pointed out that the water in these large humidifiers can become contaminated by plant and airborne organisms. This was found to be responsible for respiratory problems unless special care and attention were paid to the proper maintenance and cleanliness of the humidifier.

A study was made and it was found that these organisms were brought into the home on plants and later found their way into the water of the humidifier where they grew rapidly and luxuriantly.

The doctors who studied this problem said, "The situation can be prevented by keeping the humidifiers clean and by adding a growth-deterring chemical, such as copper sulfate, to the water. Portable units should be cleaned thoroughly once a week with detergent, then refilled with water containing growth-deterrent. For the humidifier units that are built into furnaces, the screens should be changed frequently, and growth-deterrent applied."

If you follow these instructions, you will still have the advantages that come with moisturizing rooms during the winter months.

Every few months, I get a skin rash on my legs, hands and especially on my chest. The itching drives me mad. It lasts for a few hours and then disappears. I haven't been able to find out the why ot it. — Miss E.E.S., Ky.

Dear Miss S.:

I'm certain that my suggestions will probably be no different from those of your own doctor, but let's run through some of them, anyway.

Such skin rashes are almost always allergic in origin. Sensitivity to foods or drugs is common. Allergic reactions to soaps, cosmetics and detergents must be considered. Contact with fabrics, natural and synthetic, are possibilities. Contact with plants or flowers may also be the cause. And emotional turbulence, stressful situations and unusual anxiety may create a transient rash.

Diligent detective work by you and an allergist will undoubtedly uncover the offending substance.

Books Can Help To Find Family Roots

By United Press International

Tracing your roots is probably hardest if your surname is Smith.

Federal Census Bureau figures indicate more than 2.238 million persons in the United States bear that name. Jones's families are fifth, with more than 1.230 million members.

These figures are from a chart compiled by The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints (popularly known as the Mormon Church) for inclusion in a free booklet to help persons of any race, religion or national origin trace their heritages. "Climbing Your Family Tree" contains basic instructions for tracing your roots, plus 10 different ways of recording family history. To obtain a copy write Family Tree, Salt Lake City, Utah 84150.

Other helpful publications include "How to Find Your Family Roots" by Timothy Field Beard with Denise Demong (McGraw-Hill $24.95). Beard is first assistant librarian of the History and Genealogy Department of the New York Public Library.

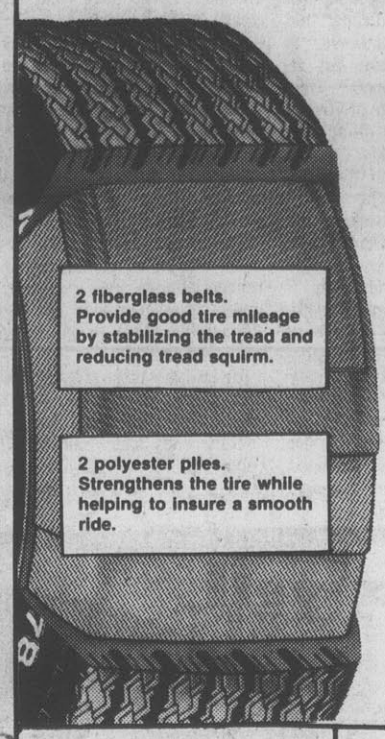

Both "The Trace Your Own Roots Workbook" by Norman Brown (Grosset and Dunlap Today Press $3.95) and "How to Climb Your Family Tree" by Harriet Stryker-Rodda (Lippincott $5.95 cloth, $2.95 paper) are small, easily packable field guides. Brown's book contains names and addresses for vital records from all 50 State Archives, a chart of census records in the National Archives and more than two pages of titles, authors and publishers of helpful books and pamphlets.

"Trace Your Roots" by Grahame Hughes (Stein and Day $1.75) is an excellent step-by-step 29-page workbook for recording family trees. It is designed to fit a standard size 8½-by-11-inch ring binder.

"Finding Our Fathers" by Dan Rottenberg (Random House $12.95) and "Black Genealogy" by Charles L. Blockson with Ron Fry (Prentice-Hall $8.95) are written especially for Jews and blacks.

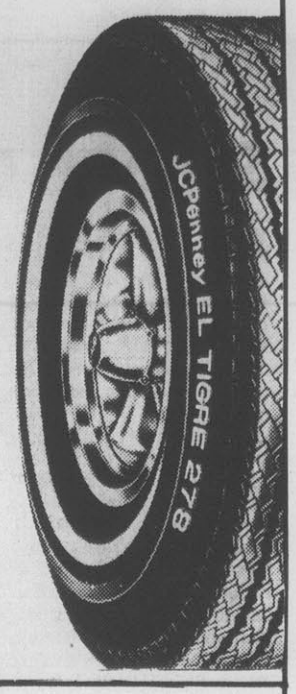

Some of these publications may be consulted at public libraries.

Dancing In Street By Panamanians

By CHARLES GREEN
Associated Press Writer

PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP) — Panamanians danced in the streets long past midnight, celebrating the U.S. Senate's approval of the treaty giving them control of the Panama Canal in 22 years. A brief protest by about 200 treaty opponents failed to dampen the fiesta mood.

Several thousand people drinking free beer jammed into Cinco de Mayo Plaza in downtown Panama City after the Senate's 68-32 vote. The crowd danced under Christmas lights while smaller groups gathered on street corners singing and swaying to bongo drums.

Brig. Gen. Omar Torrijos, the Panamanian strongman who once called his country's desire for a new canal treaty "the only religion uniting all Panamanians," laid on the free beer and declared today a national holiday. He said now that Panama has a sense of national unity, all political exiles will be allowed to return "without strings or conditions" and political parties soon will be allowed to resume normal activity.

Leftist students from the University of Panama tried to demonstrate in protest against the treaties, demanding that the canal be turned over to Panama immediately, but attracted little support. They clashed briefly with pro-treaty students, but the fighting was broken up quickly. Many drifted away to join the celebrants.

On the Atlantic side of the country, President Demetrio B. Lakas led a happy parade through the streets of Colon.

Following the Senate vote, Torrijos told a news conference he had been prepared to sabotage the canal if the treaty failed to pass.

"The armed forces had decided that if the treaty was not ratified, or if it was amended in an unacceptable manner, then we would not negotiate," Torrijos said. "We would have started a struggle of liberation. Possibly by tomorrow the canal would not have been in operation.

"We have the capability to destroy the canal despite all the (U.S. military) commands.... We have had 10 years of preparations."

Torrijos also warned the United States against trying to intervene in Panamanian affairs after Panama takes over the canal.

"If they invade," he said, "they will find a canal destroyed. If they try to invade, we will destroy the canal."

The general said in a TV address that he never considered renegotiating the treaties, which were approved by the Panamanians two-to-one in a plebiscite last fall.

Meanwhile, there was gloom and anger among the 10,000 Americans in the Canal Zone.

"I'm really sad," said Mary Gibbs, 34. Her 9-year-old son, Warren, who was born in the zone, said: "I've come from a place that isn't going to be here anymore."

"I am sick and disgusted that the senators admit to being bribed and threatened," said Ed Steele, 51, a dredge engineer.

Others thought Torrijos had rubbed it in with his talk of sabotaging the canal.

"Whether it is true or not, he didn't have to say that," said one canal company employee.

'Begelman Affair' Is Symptomatic Of Hollywood

By VERNON SCOTT
UPI Hollywood Correspondent

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Chaos has been the normal condition of the politics, economics and morality of the movie industry since 1948 when the Justice Department severed studio ownership of theaters.

In the past 30 years wheeler-dealers, speculators, crooks, stock manipulators, Wall Street hypesters and, of course, honest God-fearing moviemakers have been involved in cut-throat competition to mine the potential millions in films.

Never a wide-eyed innocent, the movie industry was at least a fairly regulated element of the business community. The men who ran the studios were dictators, to be sure, but everyone knew where they stood.

Pre-1948, before the anti-trust ruling, there was an orderly flow of films from studio through distribution to theater. The studios owned the product from conception to projection on the screen.

But the Justice Department cracked down when independent theater owners howled about restraint of trade. They couldn't bid for desirable studio films in an open market. The good movies went automatically to studio-owned theaters.

When independent exhibitors did manage to land a big grosser, they were forced to take inferior films along with the blockbusters or it was no go.

Since those bad old days the situation has worsened. Hollywood — and the New York rabbit warrens which still house some corporate film headquarters — have been infested with sharpies looking for the quick buck.

Where else can an investment of, say, $10 million reap a harvest of $200 million in a year or two, as was the case with "Star Wars?"

There have been some fast and tricky moves, tainted deals that have not been brought to light and probably never will be.

But the lid blew off the money jungle of Hollywood in unexpected fashion — and probably not even a movie screenwriter would have dreamed of such a bizarre denouement — in the affair of David Begelman.

Begelman, an actors' manager who became president of Columbia Pictures, allegedly admitted embezzling some $60,000 from studio coffers by making out checks to other people, forging their endorsements and cashing them himself.

Actor Cliff Robertson, one of the victims of Begelman's check scheme, blew the whistle on Begelman and all hell broke loose.

Begelman was suspended from Columbia last October in the midst of the scandal and reinstated in December. In February he was forced to resign.

Begelman's involvement led to some curious dealings involving producer Ray Stark and Charles Allen Jr., chief officer of Wall Street's powerful Allen & Co. brokerage firm which owns controlling stock in Columbia Pictures.

A New York Times story and subsequent published reports said Columbia Pictures was for sale, at a tremendous profit to Allen, when Begelman's crooked check deal threw a monkey wrench into the works.

Columbia stock, despite the enormous success of "Close Encounters of the Third Kind" at the box office, plunged from 20⅞ to 14⅜ on the stock market, representing millions of dollars in loses to Allen & Co..

Begelman has a date with the Los Angeles district attorney to discuss his alleged embezzlement. But he has been retained as an independent producer with Columbia for three pictures and a salary of at least $300,000 a year.

The "Affair Begelman," as the sordid situation has come to be called, focused a tremendous amount of attention on Hollywood, filmmaking, television, the networks and show business in general.

Because Hollywood is involved in the most glamorous business in the world, involving some of the nation's best-known names and faces, public interest is far greater than it would be if, say, the same scandal occurred in the plumbing contracting business.

Reports have surfaced that four powerful federal offices are investigating show business executives and corporations — the Justice Department, the Securities Exchange Commission, the Internal Revenue Service and the Federal Trade Commission.

They are most concerned with hidden profits, contracts in violation of federal laws, monopolistic practices in movie distribution and exhibition and unorthodox bookkeeping.

The investigations also include the consolidation of power among conglomorates which own such as Warner Bros., Universal and Paramount.

Neither are the three major networks exempt from federal scrutiny regarding studio TV product, pay TV, cable TV and recorded music where curious contracts are commonplace.

Jack Valenti, onetime aide to Lyndon B. Johnson and currently president of the Motion Picture Association of America, denies "wholesale governmental investigations."

On television, Valenti said there were only honest disagreements and interpretations of contracts regarding some outraged stars and directors who feel they were gyped in the split of percentage ownership of films.

He said other than the usual audits and inquiries into specific allegations, "the industry is not a target."

Valenti notwithstanding, the movie-television-recording complex is a target of media criticism as well as government investigation.

The very nature of the production of entertainment lends itself to questionable practices which mixes creative, artistic minds with hard headed businessmen and fast buck artists because of the astonishing profits involved.

The bottom line, as Madison Avenue likes to say, is money.

No movie is made, no television pilot film produced, no record album recorded without financial investment. Few producers or studios invest their own money, not as long as it can be borrowed.

The maxim here is, "Never gamble with your own dough."

It is, therefore, axiomatic, too, that most pictures are made with risk capital belonging to people anxious to get into the glamorous movie business, rub shoulders with the stars and pray for a big payoff like "Jaws" or "The Godfather."

The artist or producer must go to individuals, corporations, Wall Street, consortiums or banks, for money to produce a motion picture. Where that money comes from is not always a primary concern.

Charges have been made that underworld money is laundered through movie production because such funds are not easily traced. Say $2 million is invested in a film, money gained through the rackets — gambling, drugs, prostitution. By the time the picture pays off, the profits are legitimate revenue from the box office.

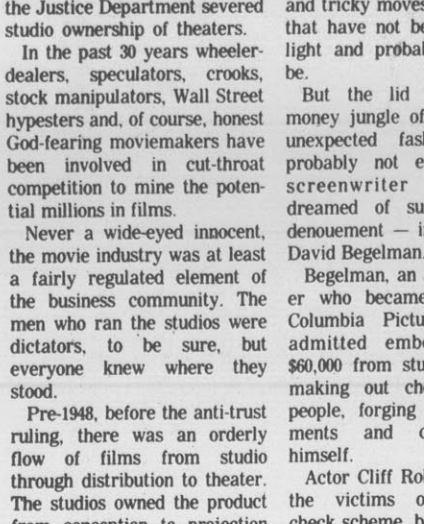

But complications arise when stars and directors have a piece of the action, i.e. a percentage of the profits.

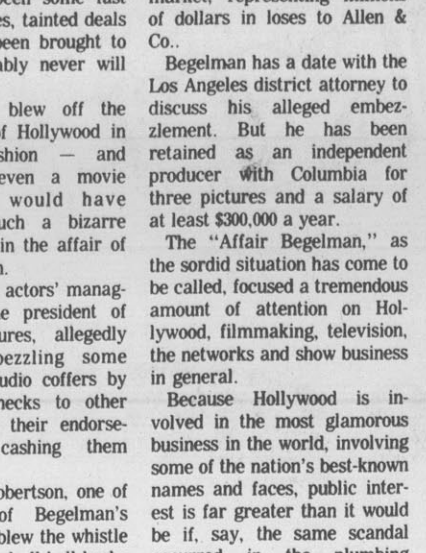

The washed money is first returned to the nefarious investors, after which the star or director is given his share. But traditionally actors have complained bitterly of tricky bookkeeping.

Many a star has been shut out of the profits altogther, told the picture never got out of the red. Others have only been paid a fraction of what they had coming.

Currently Michael Caine and Sean Connery have a suit pending against Allied Artists Pictures, claiming they were cheated of profits due them from "The Man Who Would Be King." Allied Artists denies the charge but admits there have been accounting problems on the film.

There is no such thing as a simple movie deal. The more individuals involved the more opportunity for corruption, misunderstanding, contract hassles and dispute among the partners.

Divorce Suit Facing Liza

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Television executive Jack Haley, Jr. has filed a petition in Santa Monica Superior Court for dissolution of his marriage to singer-actress Liza Minnelli, the Los Angeles Times reported today.

They were married Sept. 14, 1974, in Santa Barbara and separated Feb. 1. They have no children. Haley's petition said property matters would be settled at a later time.

Miss Minnelli is currently starring in "The Act" on Broadway.

Haley, 41, is the son of veteran actor Jack Haley Sr., who starred with Miss Minnelli's mother, the late Judy Garland, in the films "Wizard of Oz" and "Pigskin Parade."

The marriage was the second for Miss Minnelli, who was married before to Australian singer composer Peter Allen. It was the first marriage for Haley, who helped produce and who wrote the narration for the movie, "That's Entertainment."

Miss Minnelli, 32, won an Academy Award as best actress in the film, "Cabaret."

Regard Israel As Intransigent

WASHINGTON (AP) — Six members or former members of European parliaments say Israel is the intransigent party in the Mideast conflict.

The six, who are from Belgium, France, Great Britain and Ireland, said Tuesday there is a growing gap between the Common Market countries and the United States on the Middle East. A spokesman for the six said they represent the Parliamentary Association for Euro-Arab Cooperation which has about 350 members. Their views do not coincide with official positions of the four governments.

Four Accidents Here Tuesday

An estimated $8,400 property damage resulted from four traffic collisions investigated by Greenville Police yesterday.

Officers reported heaviest damage resulted from a 7:10 p.m. collision at the intersection of Dickinson Avenue and Tenth Street, involving cars driven by Bruce Glenn Wade of Riverside Trailer Pk., and John Henry Stewart of Milton.

Police, who charged Stewart with failing to see his intended movement could be made in safety, estimated damage at $2,500 to the Wade car and $300 to the Stewart vehicle.

A 3:11 p.m. collision on Greenville Boulevard near the Elm Street intersection involved cars driven by Mary Pennington Dixon of Farmville, Betty May Nobles Davis of 604B Hudson St., and Julia Flemming Bland of Route 7, Greenville.

Investigators estimated damage from the collision at $200 to the Dixon car, $1,500 to the Davis vehicle and $1,000 to the Bland auto.

Susan Quinn Paige of 301 Kirkland Dr. was charged with having improper equipment (tires), following investigation of a 6:40 p.m. mishap at the intersection of Greenville Boulevard and Hooker Road.

Officers identified the drivers of the other two cars involved in the mishap as Allen Londa Hines of Route 1, Battleboro and Allen Credle Brown of Washington.

Damage was estimated at $600 to the Paige car, $1,000 to the Hines car and $200 to the Brown auto.

A 5:10 p.m. collision on Fifth Street, 150 feet West of the Tenth Street intersection involved cars operated by Joseph Daniel Brennan Jr. of Raleigh, and Viola Webb Mozingo of Route 1, Grimesland.

Police, who charged Mrs. Mozingo with failing to see her intended movement could be made in safety, estimated damage at $800 to the Brennan car and $300 to the Mozingo auto.

Wilson, who has been a resident of Greenville for 25 years, said one of his prime objectives is to, "put business back in government...get a dollars worth of service or goods for every dollar," in taxes paid.

He added that he would like to see, "more quality education and less on quantity," and emphasized his opposition to Pitt Technical Institute becoming a community college.

"We don't have any use for a community college in Pitt County," Wilson said, reminding those present that East Carolina University offers college level programs.

"Why burden the tax payers," he said by, "duplicating two years of college? Expand the technical school," he suggested to train people to, "use their hands."

Wilson said Pitt will, "need some positive leaders," in the years ahead, "someone to look at the problems, analyze the needs, and act."

Gurkins, a resident of the Black Jack section, said, "I'm not a miracle worker. You don't know what you can do and what you can't do," in an office, so, "I won't promise you nothing. I'll do my best. That's all I can promise you."

But the candidate said there is a, "lack of communication," between the board and county residents, and suggested the board should, "know what people want to do," and "do the desires of the people of the county."

He also said the, "budget needs to be looked at and operated properly.

"Rome wasn't built in a day," Gurkins said, "and Rome wasn't built by six men," suggesting that, "it's your responsibility (as citizens) to help."

Incumbent Gardner, currently chairman of the Board of Commissioners, like Warren, cited accomplishments of the board, and emphasized, "I don't believe you will get any commissioners more conscious of the dollar," than the present board.

Gaskins, a resident of near Ayden, said, "I can't promise you anything," adding, "if I do win, I'll do the very best I can."

He, too, cited a problem of communication with the board as a problem area.

Mrs. Wiggins told those present, "I'm a hard worker," and added, "I love God. That makes me a lover of people.

"I believe every person should be considered in every phase of government."

She said, "I would just truly work in the county," and, "do the very best job that I know how."

During a question and answer session, Gurkins noted that, "people are stockholders in Pitt County. It's a people's government...a people's business.

Wilson emphasized, "we need accountability in government just as in business," while Mrs. Gordon said she wanted to serve the people, "by having a sensible budget," and, "listening to people and ... genuinely hearing what they are telling you."

Gurkins said commissioners, when asked questions by Pitt residents should give the, "best answer possible to solve that question in their mind."

Gardner emphasized that, "our doors are open," and said the board would welcome attendance at board meetings by the public.

Luck Is Running Against Montefusco

Who Me, Out?

Los Angeles Dodger Ron Cey (10) loses his cap as he comes to a kneeling position, out, on second base in Los Angeles Tuesday. Cincinnati Reds shortstop Dave Concepcion (13), holding up the ball, took the pitch-throw from Reds second baseman Joe Morgan for the force out on Dodger Glenn Burke's hit in the second inning. John Montefusco gets plenty of respect from the opposition in the National League — but he hasn't been getting too much support from his teammates this year.

It was another one of those games Tuesday night.

The swaggering pitcher known as the "Count" didn't have too much to swagger about, despite pitching brilliant three-hit ball against the Atlanta Braves.

All he had to show for his hard work was a 1-0 loss and possibly some king-size paranoia. Probably that was the reason that he disappeared after the game without a word to anyone.

In three starts, the rangy right-hander has given up just three earned runs in 191-3 innings and has yet to win his first game. The Giants have given him just five runs to work with in that period and some shoddy fielding support as well.

Elsewhere in the National League, the Cincinnati Reds routed the Los Angeles Dodgers 11-3; the Chicago Cubs edged the Montreal Expos 2-1; the New York Mets nipped the St. Louis Cardinals 3-2 and the Houston Astros beat the San Diego Padres 5-1. Rain postponed the Philadelphia-Pittsburgh game.

Reds 11, Dodgers 3

Ken Griffey slugged a three-run homer, Joe Morgan a two-run shot and George Foster and Johnny Bench bases-empty blasts to lead Cincinnati over Los Angeles. Fred Norman recorded his second victory without a loss with relief help and also had three of Cincinnati's 16 hits off four Dodger pitchers. Don Sutton took the loss, giving up three of the Cincinnati home runs.

NL Roundup

Cubs 2, Expos 1

Ray Burris and Bruce Sutter combined to pitch an eight-hitter and batterymate Dave Rader drove in the eventual winning run, leading Chicago over Montreal. Burris was touched for a run in the first inning on Gary Carter's RBI double, then blanked the Expos the rest of the way with eighth-inning relief help from Sutter.

The Cubs scored both their runs in the second, one on a double-play grounder by Manny Trillo and the other on Rader's single.

Mets 3, Cardinals 2

Pinch-hitter Bobby Valentine smacked a two-run double with two out in the seventh inning to snap a 1-1 tie and lead New York over St. Louis. Valentine's hit down the left field line followed Willie Montanez's one-out double and walks to Lee Mazzilli and pinch-hitter Ed Kranepool that loaded the bases.

Rookie New York right-hander Mike Bruhert handcuffed the Cards on three hits, all in the third inning, before he was lifted for Valentine during the Mets' winning rally.

Astros 5, Padres 1

Right-hander Joe Niekro fired a four-hitter and drove in two runs to spark Houston over San Diego. After bunting home a run during a two-run Astro rally in the second inning off losing pitcher Bob Shirley, Niekro singled home another off Padre reliever Rollie Fingers when the Astros scored two more in the eighth.

A consolation game will be held at 1 p.m. Saturday with the championship game to follow at 3:30.

Admission will be $1.50 for adults and $1 for students.

Pirate Club Will Meet

Predicting Winners In Golf Is Almost Impossible, Player Says

HOUSTON (AP) — Gary Player of South Africa, seeking a rare third consecutive victory, heads the foreign entries who hope to extend their domination of the American pro golf tour this week in the $200,000 Houston Open.

With Player's last-round heroics setting the pattern, foreign players have won the past three major events on the American circuit and have led or shared the lead in nine of the last 12 rounds.

Although holding the hottest hand on the tour, Player wasn't about to predict a continuation of that string in the 72-hole test that begins Thursday on the 6,997-yard, par-72 Woodlands Country Club course.

"Golf is the hardest and the most unpredictable sport in the world," Player said. "When Rod Laver was at his peak, he was winning every time he played. It was predictable. Golf is never predictable.

"I'm playing very, very well right now," said Player, who has come from seven shots back in each of the last two weeks to win the Masters and the Tournament of Champions. "But," he said, "there are so many things that can enter into it in golf, no one can really say, 'I'm going to win this tournament.'

"Three weeks ago, I lost by five shots in Greensboro. But I probably played as well there as I did the last two weeks."

Spain's Severiano Ballesteros won that tournament and led or shared the lead for three rounds before Player broke through in the final round last week. Ballesteros returned to Spain, but the remaining foreigners in the 156-man field offer a decided threat to the $40,000 first prize.

Among them are former American title winners George Knudson of Canada, Victor Regalado of Mexico, John Lister of New Zealand and the very dangerous David Graham of Australia.

Others include Argentina's Florentino Molina, who led most of the way at Greensboro, Cesar Sanudo and Tony Cerda of Mexico, Vicente Fernandez of Argentina and Bob Shearer of Australia.

Lanny Wadkins, the current PGA champion, and Lee Trevino, currently on a hot streak and a runnerup last week, lead the Americans.

Some other standouts include Ben Crenshaw, Arnold Palmer, Johnny Miller, Jerry Pate, Bill Kratzert, Bruce Lietzke, former Houston winner Lee Elder, defending titleholder Gene Littler and Barry Jaeckel, who won last week in Talahassee.

NBC-TV will provide national television coverage of portions of the final two rounds Saturday and Sunday.

Clemson Wins ACC Crown

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Rightfielder Tony Masone hit a two-run homer in the top of the eighth inning Tuesday to give Clemson a 2-1 victory over North Carolina State and the regular-season Atlantic Coast Conference baseball title.

The game, delayed an hour at the outset by inclement weather, was halted in the bottom of the ninth inning with one Wolfpack player on second base and none out. It was called when lightning struck the outfield fence following a 45-minute delay.

The victory gave Clemson a first-round bye in the ACC tournament and the right to host the final rounds of the double-elimination event.

Barnes Is All-Star

William Barnes, senior center on the Rose High School basketball team, has been invited to play in the annual East-West All-Star basketball game, to be played this summer in Greensboro.

Barnes, at 6-7, led the Rampants to a second place finish in the Division I race this past season, and to a first round State Playoff contest.

He averaged 18.7 points a game during the past season, second best among area scorers.

Barnes is the first Rose player since Ricky Webb was selected to the all-star team back in 1966.

Rain Delays Area Action

Rain washed out the entire slate of activities scheduled for yesterday on the high school and collegiate levels.

No new dates were set for the play of Bear Grass at Jamesville baseball; Atlantic Christian at East Carolina tennis; and East Carolina at N.C. Central softball.

East Carolina's baseball game with Atlantic Christian was rescheduled to April 29. A game with the University of North Carolina, scheduled for that same day at Tarboro, was cancelled at the request of UNC.

Reggie, Luis Perform

By BERT ROSENTHAL
AP Sports Writer

"Reg-gie! Reg-gie!" chanted the 15,628 fans at Yankee Stadium.

"Loo-ie! Loo-ie!" chanted the 18,928 fans at Fenway Park.

AL Roundup

Reggie Jackson and Luis Tiant both heard the chants Tuesday — and both responded with typical performances.

Jackson, New York's prolific home run hitter, greeted Baltimore reliever Tippy Martinez with a leadoff homer in the ninth inning, giving the Yankees a dramatic 4-3 victory over the Orioles.

Tiant, Boston's crafty right-hander, made his first relief appearance since 1972 and his first appearance this season — hours after coming off the disabled list — and pitched three hitless innings as the Red Sox rallied with two runs in the ninth inning for their sixth straight victory, a 7-6 decision over the Milwaukee Brewers.

In other American League games, the Kansas City Royals blanked the Toronto Blue Jays 5-0 for their eighth consecutive triumph on Paul Splittorff's five-hit pitching and Amos Otis' grand slam homer, and the Seattle Mariners turned back the California Angels 6-1.

Three other scheduled games were rained out — Chicago at Detroit, Texas at Cleveland and Oakland at Minnesota.

Cy Young Award winner Sparky Lyle gained his first victory of the season, although his bases-loaded walk to Gary Roenicke in the seventh inning had forced in the run that tied the score 3-3.

Red Sox 7, Brewers 6

The Red Sox' victory was almost as stunning as New York's. Boston trailed 6-2 after 5½ innings before rallying for three runs in the sixth on Butch Hobson's two-run triple and Rick Burleson's sacrifice fly, then tied it in the ninth on Hobson's single, a sacrifice and Jack Brohamer's RBI single, his fourth hit of the game.

Brohamer went to second on the throw to the plate, and after Carl Yastrzemski was walked intentionally, Carlton Fisk ripped a two-out double off the left field wall, driving in the winning run.

Larry Hisle rapped two doubles and a two-run homer for the Brewers, and Sal Bando smacked a three-run homer.

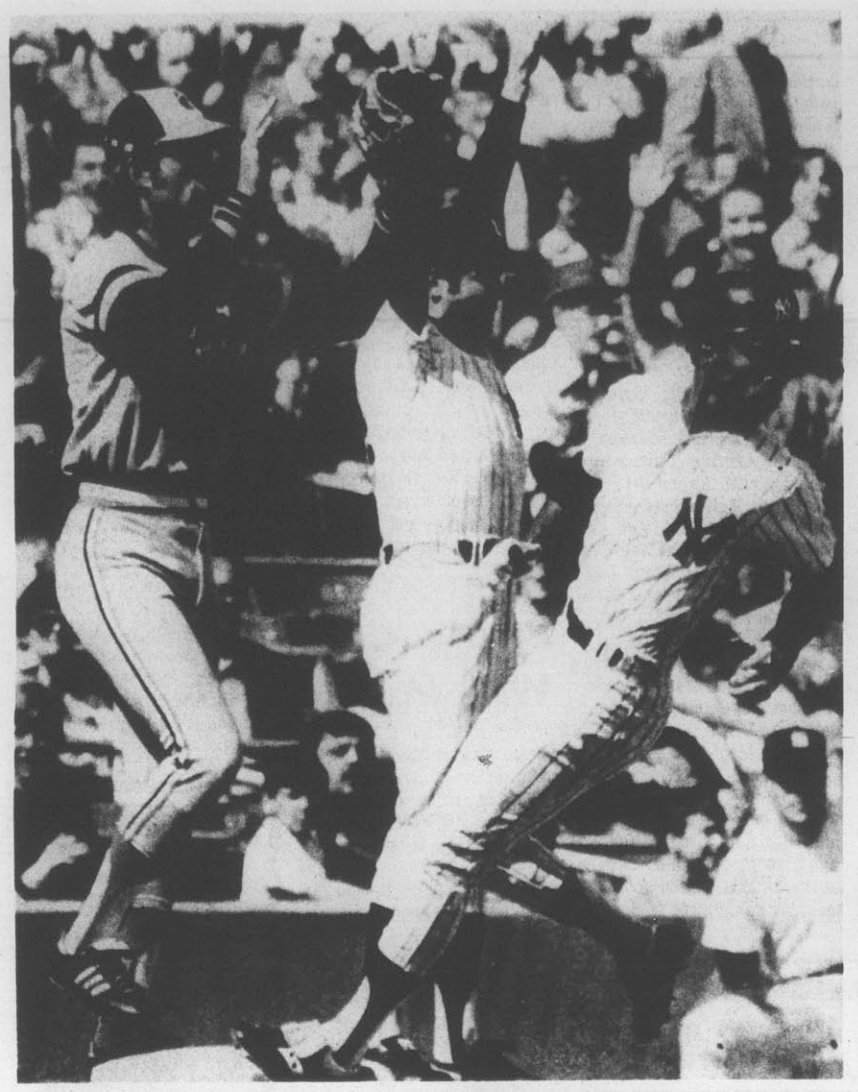

Royals 5, Blue Jays 0

Otis connected for the first grand slam homer of his career in the opening inning following singles by Willie Wilson and Hal McRae, a strikeout, a double steal, a pop out and an intentional walk.

Mariners 6, Angels 1

Bruce Bochte scored two runs and drove in a third as Seattle parlayed four hits into a victory over Nolan Ryan and California. Seattle curveballer Paul Mitchell scattered six hits and was never seriously threatened after the fourth inning.

Ryan was hurt by six walks and three wild pitches. The California right-hander struck out seven to pass Sam McDowell and move into 13th place on the all-time strikeout list with a total of 2,459.

Three's Enough

Willie Randolph of the New York Yankees rounds third in the first inning Tuesday after hitting a triple to open the game for the Yankees. The Baltimore Orioles third baseman Doug Decinces awaits the throw and third base coach Dick Howser alerts Randolph of the play at third. The Yankees won on a ninth-inning homer by Reggie Jackson 4-3. (AP Laserphoto)

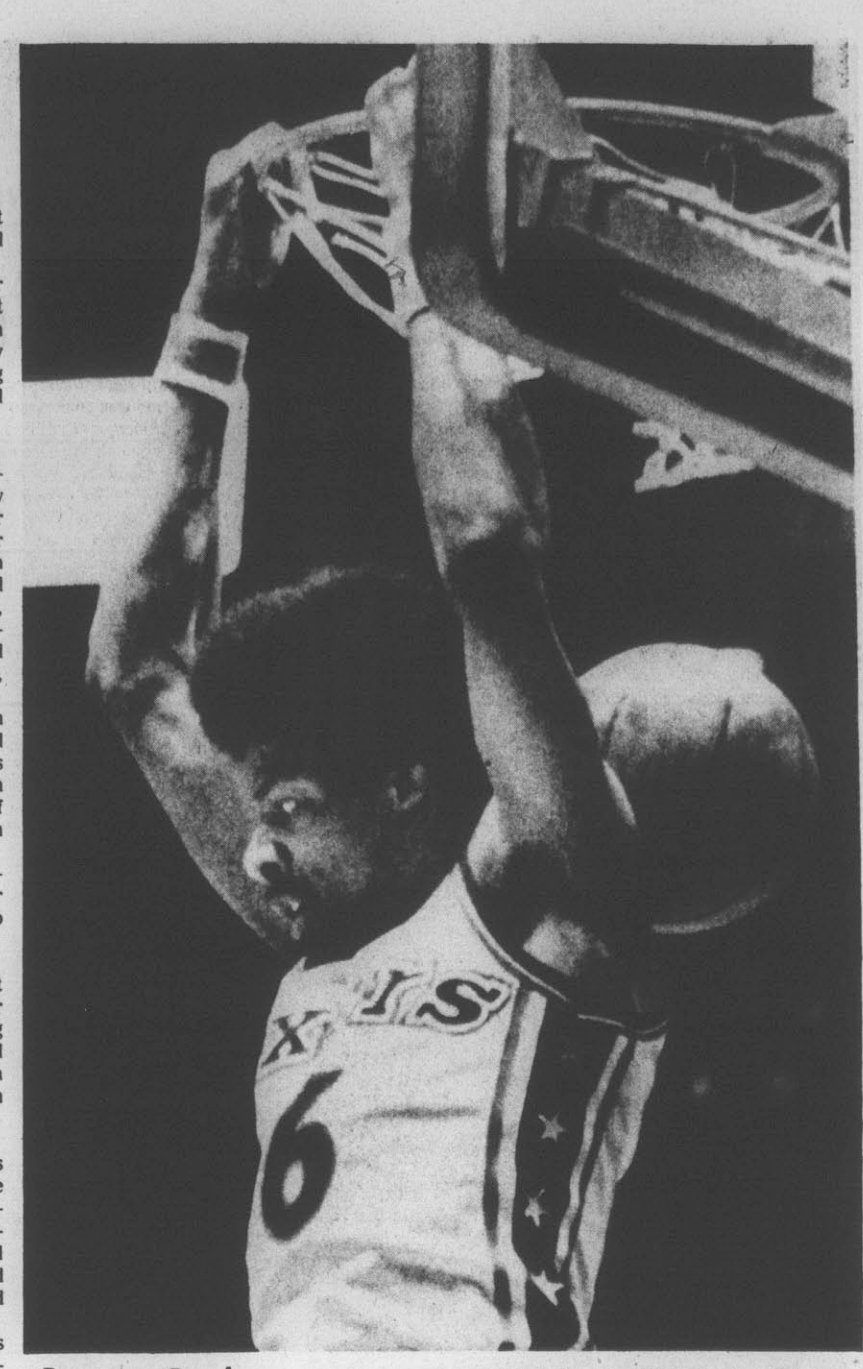

Paladins Ink Star

GREENVILLE, S.C. (AP) — William Hanks, an All-State basketball player for Holston High School in Knoxville, Tenn., has signed a grant-in-aid to play for Furman University, school officials have announced.

A three-year starter, the 6-foot-4½, 185-pound Hanks led Holston to a 33-1 record his senior year while averaging 16 points, 11 assists and 12 rebounds per game.

Joe Williams, head coach of the Southern Conference champions, said Tuesday that Hanks "is an excellent shooter and has the ability to drive to the basket and make the scoring play ... he was one of the best players I saw all year at passing the ball off to the inside man."

In addition to the All-State team, Hanks was named to the All-East Tennessee, All-City, All-County and All-State tournament teams.

Sonics Boom Blazers

By ALEX SACHARE
AP Sports Writer

Bill Walton is back in the Portland lineup, but his presence didn't seem to bother the surprising Seattle SuperSonics.

Walton, the Trail Blazers' all-star center, scored 17 points Tuesday night in his first game since being sidelined by a broken bone in his foot Feb. 28. But it was not enough to stop the surprising Seattle SuperSonics, who beat the Blazers 104-95 at Portland in the opening game of their National Basketball Association quarter-final playoffs.

The second game of the best-of-seven series between the Sonics, who have been one of the league's toughest clubs since recovering from a 5-17 start, and the defending champion Trail Blazers will be played in Portland Friday night.

Walton hit his first five shots and played well, but so did Seattle's young Marvin Webster, who led all scorers with 24 points, including 17 in the second half.

In other NBA playoff games Tuesday night, the Denver Nuggets won the opener of their series with the Milwaukee Bucks 119-103, the Washington Bullets evened their series with San Antonio at 1-1 by beating the Spurs 121-117 and the Philadelphia 76ers took a 2-0 lead over the New York Knicks with a 119-100 victory.

Nuggets 119, Bucks 103

David Thompson, who earlier in the day ended speculation that he might become a free agent by reaching agreement with Denver management on a five-year, $3.75 million contract, scored 27 points to lead seven Denver players in double figures against Milwaukee. The Nuggets led 91-82 after three quarters, then Thompson hit for 10 of his points in the final period as Denver pulled away.

Bullets 121, Spurs 117

Washington, which shot just 40 percent from the field in losing the opener at San Antonio, connected on 57 percent of its tries to even the series, which now shifts to Washington for games Friday night and Sunday. Kevin Grevey led the Bullets with 31 points.

NBA scoring champion George Gervin topped San Antonio with 46 points.

76ers 119, Knicks 100

Julius Erving scored 14 of his 22 points in the second period, fueling a 19-3 burst that gave the 76ers a 45-33 lead it never was in danger of losing. Doug Collins added 21 points, Lloyd Free had 17 — 13 of them in the fourth quarter — and George McGinnis scored 16.

Philadelphia's defense, meanwhile, shut down Knicks scoring leader Bob McAdoo for the second straight game, limiting him to just 10 points, far below his 26.5 average. McAdoo scored 12 in the series opener, won by Philadelphia 130-90.

The next two games will be played in New York Thursday night and Sunday.

Navratilova Bill Is Delayed Two Weeks

WASHINGTON (AP) — Martina Navratilova, one of the top women tennis players in the world, will have to wait at least two more weeks before learning whether she can become a U.S. citizen without waiting the full five-year period.

In a parliamentary maneuver, the House declined Tuesday to take up a private relief bill that would have permitted the 21-year-old Navratilova to gain citizenship immediately, without waiting until Oct. 6, 1980, the date she would normally become eligible.

Rep. Robert Bauman, R-Md., one of three Republicans who screen private bills before they reach the House floor, asked that the measure be passed over without prejudice, thus keeping it alive on the docket and eligible to be acted on within two weeks.

It is doubtful, however, that the bill will come up for vote in the near future because of opposition to shortening the waiting period.

Rep. Jim Collins, D-Tex., sponsor of the bill, said he was disappointed that Bauman had asked that the bill be passed over, a maneuver which normally indicates that the "objector" wants more time to study the measure.

"Their idea is to object to anything that is unusual," said Collins of Bauman and his two colleagues, Reps. Chalmere Wylie, R-Ohio, and John Rousselot, R-Calif., who blocked the bill two weeks ago. "They come out here every Tuesday and decide what bills they don't want any action on.

"It really hurts me that a Communist defector wants to become an American and can't," he said.

Navratilova also was upset. As soon as Bauman made his motion, she left the chamber and was seen crying in the hallway.

Collins said if she could become a citizen by July she would be eligible to play on the U.S. team in the Federation and Wightman cups. She also would be able to receive a visit from her parents who remain in Czechoslovakia, he said.

A major blow to Navratilova's chances for passage of the bill came in a report to the House by Rep. Joshua Eilberg, D-Pa., chairman of Judiciary Committee's subcommittee on immigration, citizenship and international law.

In the report's dissenting view, Eilberg said Congress would have difficulty defending passage of the bill in the future.

He said the major question is whether citizenship should become an "award for athletic excellance."

Eilberg said passage of the bill would "encourage other talented athletes and performers to seek exceptions from the normal statutory requirements for naturalization," and it would "invite, if not ensure, a rash of private expeditious naturalization bills every four years just prior to the Olympic games."

Congress Asked To Curb NCAA Policies

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress has been asked to pass legislation that would subject NCAA policies and procedures to judicial scrutiny and attempt to assure that its reforms be instituted fairly.

Burton F. Brody, a law professor at the University of Denver, on Tuesday asked the House committee investigating NCAA policies and procedures to make participation in intercollegiate athletics a property right to be protected for universities and their students. He also asked the committee to insure that the NCAA reform its enforcement procedures.

Brody, who appeared before the House investigations subcommittee Tuesday with former Denver hockey Coach Murray Armstrong, said the National Collegiate Athletic Association should not be able to get away with its past practices.

"On the one hand, the association creates millions of dollars of television and tournament income; and on the other hand, it maintains that participation in intercollegiate athletics is not a property interest so that its governance of them is not subject to judicial scrutiny.

"Such legislation is not only fair," he said of his proposal to make participation a property right, "it is necessary to assure the nation that the reforms adopted by the NCAA will grant those individuals and institutions subjected to its enforcement program the fair treatment they deserve."

Brody, Denver's faculty representative to the NCAA, was special counsel to the school in 1974-75 when the school was placed in a two-year probation by the NCAA because of violations in its ice hockey program.

He suggested that the Congress use its authority to assure that NCAA reform of its enforcement program be undertaken by a truly representative cross section of its members.

"Study of the association's structure, its officers and committee appointments quickly reveals that a relatively small number of individuals control the association work," he said. "Over the years, these individuals move from key committee assignments to offices and back to ther committee assignments. They develop friendships with members of the administrative staff and with each other. More significantly, they develop loyalties and commitments to the NCAA's policies, practices and procedures.

"If internal reform of the Official Procedure Governing the NCAA Enforcement Program is to be truly meaningful, it must be led by knowledgeable individuals devoid of an emotional commitment to the existing program," said Brody.

Hilary Hilton Turns Deaf Ear To Hollywood; Sticks To Rackets

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

NEW YORK (AP) — She's a dead ringer for Farrah Fawcett Majors. She specialized in drama at Southern California. She is besieged by agents and courted by Hollywood, but she turns a cold shoulder and says, "No, thanks, not now. I have my own racket."

Her racket is rackets. Meet pretty Hilary Hilton of Pacific Palisades, Calif., queen of racket sports.

"I have done some commercials, some TV pilots, a few plays here and there and even experimented with playwriting," the statuesque Californian said. "I prefer sports. You might say I am hooked on competition."

Hilary, 27, blue-eyed, blonde, with a smile made for the toothpaste ads, came to New York this week to promote her role in the World Racquets Championship — the first woman to compete in the novel tournament featuring standouts in the many varieties of racket and paddle sports.

She will get a chance to match her skill against Argentina's Guillermo Vilas, the French and U.S. Open tennis champion, and four other males in table tennis, badminton and racketball in the second annual tournament next month.

The event is scheduled at the Atlas Health Club, San Diego, May 6, for airing on CBS-TV June 11.

"I don't feel uneasy about going against the men at all," Hilary said. "It seems I have been competing against men all my life — my father and two brothers — and I have an autographed dollar bill to show that I once beat Bobby Riggs in paddle tennis."

It happened in 1973. Riggs, the former U.S. and Wimbledon titleholder known as the "Happy Hustler," had beaten Margaret Court in California in the first of his "Battle of the Sexes" challenges and was pointing toward his ill-fated meeting in the Houston Astrodome with Billie Jean King.

"Bobby, although 55 years old, was considered a very good paddle tennis player," she explained. "He said he had been playing all his life. We were matched and I beat him. I still have the dollar bill on which he wrote, 'I beat Court. I couldn't beat Hilary, but I'd like to try again.'"

Bobby said the same thing to Billie Jean after his Astrodome debacle, but he has been left dangling.

Miss Hilton, proficient in many sports and winner of national and world titles in three, insists that the male dominance that exists on the tennis court where power and endurance are such vital factors don't hold true in the offshoots of the game where the arena is more condensed, notably paddle tennis, squash, badminton, table tennis and racketball.

"In these sports, strength is not as much a factor as finesse and quick reflexes," she said.

Hilary is the only athlete, male or female, ever to hold three different racket titles the same year. In 1975, she grabbed national trophies in tennis, paddle tennis and platform tennis.

Sports Briefs

By The Associated Press

NEW YORK (AP) — Mike Wilhite hit his eighth home run of the season in the third inning Tuesday, leading Columbia to a 10-0 victory over St. Johns and breaking the Lions' season home run record previously held by Hall of Famer and New York Yankees great Lou Gehrig.

Gehrig set the Columbia season home run record of seven in 1923. The record was tied in 1976 by Bob Kimutis.

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — The Buffalo Sabres have rescheduled the third game of their National Hockey League playoff series with Philadelphia from Friday night to Saturday night, the club said.

The change was made so the NHL's television network could televise the game.

The third-game of the best-of-seven series will be 8 p.m. Saturday in Buffalo's Memorial Auditorium, and the fourth game, also in the Auditorium, will be 8 p.m. Sunday.

SAN DIEGO (AP) — The San Diego Sockers are the surprise of the North American Soccer League in 1978 with a 4-0 record. Another surprise followed their latest victory.

Coach Hubert Vogelsinger has fined team president and co-owner Ed Lewis $150, the Sockers said Tuesday, and the fine has been paid.

Smile And Keep Your Eyes On Marx Brothers

By LILLIAN O'CONNELL
UPI Life-Style Editor

NEW YORK (UPI) — When Lord Patrick Lichfield posed the entire royal family in the white drawing room at Windsor Castle in 1971 to take their photograph, he didn't tell them to "keep your eye on the birdie." He asked them to watch the Marx brothers.

"In order to keep their attention towards me, I put the television set underneath the camera," the fifth earl of Lichfield explained, and went on to say that an old Marx brothers film was on the screen.

The 38-year-old earl, a second cousin of Queen Elizabeth II, discussed the only picture ever taken of the royal family all together at an exhibition of his work titled "A Privileged View" at the New York Public Library at Lincoln Center.

Is the queen a Marx brothers fan? "I don't know that particularly, but I knew that the children would probably react better if they had to keep sitting there for a long time," he said. And, indeed, if one examines the portrait closely, the royal youngsters, seated in the foreground, do seem to be enjoying the show on the small screen. Even Prince Charles and the Queen Mother appear to be watching the famous comedy team.

Lord Lichfield explained that the royal family only gets together on one day of the year, Christmas Day, and that is when the photograph was made — just after lunch, he said.

In the limited space of the drawing room, the earl could only get back so far from his subject, which consisted of 21 persons, so he took three pictures and joined them up, he said. He refrained from using a wideangle lens because of the distortion factor.

The exhibition, which consisted of 250 photographs, was basically in two halves — one half retrospective work "done over the years for various magazines" and the other an "exercise that was set for me" by State Express of London, sponsors of the show. That "exercise" was to do a series of "portraits" of English cities and the countryside.

"They asked me to go out and photograph London as I saw it. And Oxford and one or two other English cities, and I did that in a very short time last summer," Lord Lichfield said. "So half the exhibition was done in 10 days and the other half was done in 10 years."

Lord Lichfield, whose mother, the former Countess Lichfield, is now married to a prince of Denmark, began taking photographs at the age of 6. He has earned a worldwide reputation for his work in Vogue, Harper's Bazaar and Playboy, among other publications.

He chose as the subject of an early portrait study a young woman who later became his wife. Eight years after he photographed Lady Leonora Grosvenor for Vogue, they were married.

Leonora, Countess of Lichfield, is the eldest daughter of the Duke and Duchess of Westminster. Her early years were spent in a remote part of western Ireland. Like her husband, she is interested in creative work and has trained for a career in fine and decorative arts.

The couple have a daughter, Lady Rose, born in 1976 and are expecting a second child later this year.

Among the other pictures on display was one of the Duke and Duchess of Windsor, "one of my first jobs for Vogue," at their country house near Paris; Capt. Mark Phillips and Princess Anne, photographed for a stamp to commemorate their wedding; and actress Diana Rigg, playing three parts in one series: the aging scarlet lady, the nun and the Agony Column correspondent.

A young tourist lost in London in the pouring rain is a wonderful shot, a bit of trick photography. A slow shutter speed blurred the crowds rushing by the tourist who was standing still, earnestly studying his tour guide.

There were countless shots of fashion models and show business personalities. Lord Lichfield, who said he uses "masses of kinds" of cameras, prefers a 35mm Olympus for much of his work. He does all his own darkroom work, he said.

His favorite subjects? Children and horses. "I have a thing about horses," he said, and though he owns some, he does not race them. "My family have lost too much money at racing."

As for children: "They don't put on faces for you. I like photographing them naturally, not particularly posed. I like photographing unpretentious people, and they're not very pretentious."

New York was the last of four U.S. cities showing the exhibit. To commemorate the tour, State Express of London is making available a limited edition of the earl's photographs in a leather-bound volume, each volume personally signed by Lord Lichfield.

For further information describing the limited edition write Walter D. Heithaus, Ketchum, MacLeod and Grove, Inc., 90 Park Ave., NY, NY 10016.

EYES NOT ON THE BIRDIE — When Lord Patrick Lichfield posed the entire British royal family in 1971, he didn't tell them to "keep your eye on the birdie." To keep their attention he put a television set under the camera. An old Marx brothers film was on the screen. He is shown with photograph in Los Angeles where an exhibition of his work was recently on display. (UPI Photo)

Given Eight Life Terms For Murder And Burglary

By THOMAS C. COTHRAN
Associated Press Writer

FLORENCE, S.C. (AP) — Donald H. "Pee Wee" Gaskins, a man whose code of ethics allowed murder but disdained alcohol and drugs, has been given eight life prison terms on guilty pleas of murder and burglary.

Gaskins, who already is serving two life terms on convictions of two of the Prospect mass murders, pleaded guilty to seven more of the 13 killings Tuesday. He is expected to plead guilty to two others later.

Shortly after Gaskins entered the pleas, Florence County authorities charged a new suspect, identified as Belton Eaddy, 46, with three of the Prospect slayings.

Eaddy, whose name had not been publicly mentioned before in connection with the case, was charged with the murders of John Henry Knight, 15, his half-brother Dennis Bellamy, 29, and Johnny Sellers, 36. Gaskins was convicted in 1976 of the Bellamy slaying and he pleaded guilty Tuesday to the Knight and Sellers murders.

Records at the Florence County Detention Center show Eaddy had been brought there for "protective custody" April 4. But Tuesday he was in a Florence hospital in fair condition with what a hospital spokesman said were complications from high blood pressure and diabetes.

Eaddy told county sheriff's investigators he had heard Gaskins state that he was going to kill Knight and Bellamy.

Gaskins apparently implicated Eaddy in the Sellers slaying under his agreement with Solicitor T. Kenneth Summerford. In exchange for prosecutors dropping plans to seek the death penalty, Gaskins was to plead guilty to all the Prospect murders and tell authorities all he knew about how they occurred.

Eaddy formerly operated a general store in the Johnsonville area of Florence County, where he lived, but lately he had been distributing automobile stereo equipment and other merchandise.

Circuit Judge David Harwell said Gaskins, 45, technically will be eligible for parole in 20 years. But, he told the jury, in his opinion "Gaskins will never be released by any penal institution in this state."

The motives for most of the killings have never been revealed. But sources close to the investigation told reporters that Gaskins had a "strange code of ethics."

Gaskins disliked alcohol, drugs and interracial dating. But his code permitted the murder of those who violated it.

"Whereas he would not betray a good friend in almost any circumstances, he would kill him if he infringed on the code," the sources said.

The dead were almost all persons he knew. One of them, the sources said, was a girl Gaskins had been in love with, Jessie Judy, 22.

Along with her killing and those of Sellers and Knight, the former roofer and carnival worker pleaded guilty Tuesday to murdering Avery Howard, 35; Diane Bellamy Neely, 29; and Doreen Dempsey, 23, and her 2-year-old daughter, Michelle.

He also pleaded guilty to burglary and armed robbery in the theft of a television from the home of Elizabeth Marlow. South Carolina law allows life sentences for a combined charge of burglary and armed robbery.

In the slayings of Mrs. Dempsey and her daughter, Gaskins apparently was offended that the child was fathered by a black man, the sources said. Mrs. Dempsey was white.

A source said some of the victims may have supplied drugs to some of his friends and relatives. Asked if that could be the motive for their deaths, he told a reporter, "I'd say you're pretty close to it, yeah."

The 13 killings occurred between 1970 and 1975. The first bodies were unearthed in December 1975 from shallow graves near the rural Florence County community of Prospect by authorities who were probing reports of missing persons.

One of the bodies was Knight's, and Gaskins was about to be tried in that killing last week when he asked prosecutors to plea bargain.

Gaskins was also convicted in April 1977 in the slaying of Silas Barnwell Yates, 45. Suzanne Kipper Owens, 29, who paid Gaskins $1,500 to kill Yates, also was convicted and sentenced to life imprisonment.

Vocational, Trades Fair Is Scheduled

A high school Vocational and Trades Fair will be held on a two day period, Friday and Saturday, April 21 and 22 at Washington Square Mall in Washington.

The event will be open until 9 p.m. on each of the two nights.

Junior and senior students in vocational programs from a 15 county area will bring to the fair examples of their programs to include objects of craftsmanship. Also they will demonstrate techniques used in classes, laboratories and shops in their vocational training.

Among products and professions to be demonstrated are those involved in cosmetology, health occupations, bricklaying, carpentry, electronics, welding, drafting, and others.

Agriculture, home economics, distributive education, health occupations, business and office trades, industrial and exploratory programs will also have programs and displays.

The public is invited to attend the trade fair and to see these vocational programs and demonstrations.

Interstate 40

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The state Department of Transportation has been urged by its Highway Planning Committee to approve construction of Interstate 40 through the Benson area.

The board will consider the proposal Friday during a meeting in Tarboro.

Among five alternate routes that have been proposed for I40 east of Raleigh to I-95 are one from the Raleigh Beltline to the Benson area and another generally along U.S. 70 to the Goldsboro area.

Board member William Herring of Wilson has agreed to a request by residents of the Goldsboro area to seek a delay in adoption of a plan Friday.

Some Benson-area leaders have maintained that only a small group is attempting to delay the decision on the highway.

Picking Peas Is Best On Level

MINNEAPOLIS (UPI) — You've got to be on the level to pick a pile of peas profitably.

Mobile harvesters spill a lot of peas when they bump and roll over farmland. To help increase the world's 10.6 million-top pea crop, Honeywell has developed a level controller that keeps the mobile pea combine within one degree in all directions. If the threshing bed were allowed to tilt even five degrees, says the company, product loss could amount to five or even 10 percent.

Dirty Words: A Day In Court

By RICHARD CARELLI
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Comedian George Carlin may be "boffo" on the college concert circuit but one sample of his irreverent brand of humor may bomb at the Supreme Court.

There were no smiles in evidence Tuesday as a very select audience of nine justices considered whether a Carlin monologue should be banned from the airwaves.

The justices' final critique probably won't be announced until late June.

At issue is whether the government, namely the Federal Communications Commission, can ban certain "dirty words" from broadcasts.

The controversy stems from the playing of a segment from the record album, "George Carlin, Occupation, Foole," on a non-commercial New York City radio station, WBAI-FM, almost five years ago.

In the monologue about "cuss words," Carlin takes a satirical look at how society deals with words depicting sexual or excretory organs and activities.

After receiving a complaint from a WBAI listener whose young son had heard part of the broadcast, the FCC decided to clarify its definition of the term "indecent."

The commission said Carlin's use of seven specific words made his monologue indecent, and ruled that those words never may be used on the air at times when children might be listening.

A federal appeals court last year struck down the FCC's ban. It said that as in cases of alleged obscenity, words deemed indecent must be considered in context to determine whether they have any "serious literary, artistic, political or scientific value."

The context test for judging whether a work is obscene was prescribed by the Supreme Court in a landmark 1973 ruling.

The Justice Department refused to represent the FCC in court because Justice lawyers agreed with the appeals court that the ban was overly broad.

Carlin was absent from Tuesday's courtroom proceedings. So were the seven words.

Before FCC lawyer Joseph Marino began to argue, Chief Justice Warren E. Burger advised him that the court was "fully aware" of the facts of the case and that he could proceed to the legalities. Marino stuck to vague terms when discussing what he called "verbal taboos."

WBAI's lawyer, Harry Plotkin of Washington, portrayed WBAI as an educational station and said it similar to a popular local television station. "Not quite," snapped Justice William H. Rehnquist.

Plotkin was weaving his way through First Amendment arguments — "the government is trying to suppress speech" — when Burger asked in incredulous tones, "Are you arguing that this work had literary value?"

Plotkin could barely reply "yes" when Justice Thurgood Marshall interjected: "I'm no expert but if that is artistic, deliver me."

If the justices decide that the words in question are never suitable for airing, Carlin's work will be in good company.

As the appeals court noted, "The commission's action proscribes the uncensored broadcast of many of the great works of literature, including Shakespearian plays ... the works of renowned classical and contemporary poets and writers, and passages from the Bible."

Neglect Said Wasteful Of Gifted Child

By ROBERT LEE ZIMMER
Associated Press Writer

Gifted and talented children — their special educational needs often ignored — may account for 20 percent of all high school dropouts, some experts say.

And those who stay in classes that do not challenge them may develop emotional problems, become juvenile delinquents or simply sink to the level of average classmates and never reach their full potential.

Slightly more than a million schoolchildren in the country — about 4 percent of the total — are considered gifted. But of this number only about 145,000 are getting any special attention in public schools. In 1972 the number was only 48,000.

Gifted and talented children typically are creative, have long attention spans, learn quickly, ask many questions and want to explore subjects in great depth.

But it is precisely these characteristics that often work against them at school, specialists say.

Teachers not used to dealing with gifted and talented children often view their behavior and attitude in the classroom as abnormal and an irritation.

"Many people want to drum that (giftedness) out of them," said Dorothy Sisk, director of the federal Office of the Gifted and Talented. "They want them to stop moving around and asking questions.

"When somebody is trying to drum it out, some adjust, but others become juvenile delinquents and develop emotional problems. Some become tremendous under-achievers to be like other kids. Many are bored and not challenged" and lose interest in school, said Ms. Sisk.

She said studies in Iowa and Pennsylvania showed that 20 percent of the dropouts were gifted.

This year, the federal government will spend about $6.5 million on the gifted, while spending more than $600 million on the 3.5 million children in the nation who are physically and mentally handicapped.

Parents and educators cite several reasons for this disparity: a general feeling that only those who are below average need help; a better organized lobby by parents of the handicapped; and the belief that gifted children can make it on their own.

"We're much more inclined to work with children who are underprivileged — the underdog," said Ms. Sisk. But since her office was established in 1972 it has been working, along with private groups, to change things.

The number of full-time state consultants for gifted programs has grown from 10 to 40, more universities are offering special training to teachers who want to work with the gifted, and membership in private advocacy groups is growing.

However, Ms. Sisk and others agree that there is much more to be done for the gifted and talented children.

"I think we have a long way to go," said Sally Sowell of Hot Springs, Ark., an official of the National Association for Gifted Children. The group, with 3,000 members — mostly educators — advises teachers and parents on how to deal with the gifted, and encourages more training of students and research into their needs.

"The state of the art now, while there has been some improvement since 1972, is still inadequate," said John Grossi of the 70,000-member Council for Exceptional Children in Reston, Va.

The council, which is also an advocate of special education for the handicapped, has suggested to Congress a plan that could mean more federal money for gifted education programs.

Grossi said he did not think states should be forced to provide special training for the gifted, but believed that federal money should be available to help those moving ahead with gifted education.

Although most people think of gifted children as having high IQs, general intellectual ability is only one of several criteria for identifying them. Others considered gifted and talented may excel in visual and performing arts, dancing and athletics, leadership, creative thinking, or in some specific academic subject.

Those who work with gifted and talented children agree that early identification is important.

Child Safety Device For Living Room

By MELANIE DEEDS

DETROIT (UPI) — The living room can be the most dangerous place in the house for a frolicking young child — an obstacle course of sharp-edged table corners that bump, bruise and inflict painful head gashes.

An emergency room physician who has treated all too many youthful victims of high-speed household collisions offers some preventive medicine.

Dr. Frederick Sawaya of the Providence Hospital staff in suburban Southfield invented The Corner Guard, a simple rubber device that fits onto tables, desks, and sharp-edged counter tops.

"It's amazing what can happen as the result of a simple fall in the living room," he said. "You can't just assume your children are safe because they're inside.

"It's hard to watch everything they do."

Sawaya has treated dozens of children who suffered cuts, bruises and lacerations from running into jutting, head-level obstacles while scampering after the family pet or engaged in some other innocent pursuit.

His project began last August.

"I had just finished stitching up one kid and there was a lull in activity in the emergency room," he said. "I started thinking about what could be done to keep children from splitting their foreheads."

Sawaya began folding a small piece of paper various ways and fitting it over the corner of a table.

He soon came up with a rubber model of the safety device.

Sawaya visited a patent lawyer in New York, then preseented his invention to officials of Montgomery Ward and K-Mart.

"They tested it, saw that it did what I said it did and agreed to market it," Sawaya said.

The product has been approved by the Consumer Product Safety Commission. It has an adhesive backing. When the backing is removed, the device can be applied to any surface.

"I never really saw myself as an inventor," Sawaya said, "but after seeing how kids get hurt in their own homes, it was time to take some action."

Sawaya said he did not originate the idea. He said research into patent records showed that other inventors never got as far as marketing such a safety device.

"The project has been fun and I'm proud of it," said the 34-year-old graduate of the University of Michigan medical school. "How many times have you seen a little kid running around the house, then sort of flinch when they go near a table?

"I want children to have fun around the house. My 2-year-old daughter delights in chasing our 100-pound dog everywhere and there have been several close calls with table corners.

"It can be a horrible thing when a child is hit hard with the edge of a table on the forehead or in the eye. They can be scarred for life."

Sawaya attributes the favorable response to his invention in part to the current trend in home safety.

"Just look at the interest right now in smoke alarms," he said. "People are becoming more and more aware of just how important it is to have a safe home."

Attend Area Games Event

Eighty Greenville Special Olympians and their chaperons attended the Fourth Annual Area I Special Olympics Spring games held at Fike High School in Wilson last Saturday.

They were among more than 500 athletes from ten eastern North Carolina counties represented at the games.

A number of the Greenville athletes took first place in the various competitions, which included softball, running long jump, 50-yard dash, standing broad jump, the 440 relay, and the wheelchair race.

On May 19-21, 30 Greenville Special Olympians will compete in the North Carolina State Special Olympics to be held at held at High Point College.

RESEARCH EQUIPMENT—Dials control temperature and humidity inside $30,000 smokehouse at Iowa State University Meat Laboratory in Ames. Bob Rust, ISU extension meats specialist, checks settings.

Lab Seeks To Improve Meats

By STEVE DAUGHERTY
Associated Press Writer

AMES, Iowa (AP) — The next time you bite into a fast-food store hamburger that's tender and tasty, thank the crew at the Iowa State University Meat Laboratory.

Bob Rust, the ISU extension meats specialist and a driving force behind the new facility, said they recently discovered that hamburger patties frozen quickly taste better and are more tender than those frozen slowly.

"This," he said, "will give us some handles on recommendations we'll make to processors and consumers. As well how to go about doing a proper job of freezing these meat products to retain the best of their flavor characteristics — juiciness, texture and the like."

Rust said the discovery was actually an accident.

Nitrogen and carbon dioxide are the most common gases used in the freezing process, he explained, but carbon dioxide is preferred because it is cheaper. There were rumors in the industry that carbon dioxide gave meat a bad taste, and a company that markets the gas financed a study to see if that was true.

Rust said there was no difference in the gas used, but the study did show the freezing time was important. Now, he said, the question to be answered is: "How slow is slow."

But the lab is much more than freezing hamburger patties.

"It's one of the most up-to-date laboratories in the country," said Rust. "We can duplicate most of the processes that would be conceivably used in the meat industry today, as well as handle all of the species of livestock that we would be producing for meat animals."

The 40,000-square-foot building was constructed and equipped with $3.9 million in funds appropriated by the Iowa Legislature. Approximately $300,000 in additional equipment is on loan from industries.

"From the extension standpoint we have our educational programs going on with consumers, producers, meat processors and retailers," said Rust. "The lab provides support in providing us with a facility that we can use for demonstrations, applied research problem solving and the like.

"The meat laboratory is just one more tool to help us do a better job in our responsibilities of serving the whole state of Iowa. Of course," added Rust, "as we serve the meat and livestock industries of Iowa, we also serve all the consumers in the United States.

"About a fourth of all the meat produced in one form or another originates in Iowa or is processed through Iowa plants."

There was a $30,000 smokehouse made by the Maurer company of West Germany. The only other such facility is located at the University of Berlin, said Rust.

A maze of dials controlled the temperature and humidity inside the cabinet, which contained freshly made salami and sausage. Processors could use the information gathered from the meat — some finely sliced and some ground — to develop new products for the consumer's table, said Rust.

In another corner of the lab a meat cooler was filled with individually wrapped slices of bologna. Rust explained they were checking different types of packaging and amounts of vacuum.

"When we do the work, the information is the property of the public and we try to see that the data are all published," he said.

The meat laboratory does not simply churn out information day after day. It also produces a considerable amount of meat.

"Well, actually," said Rust, "This has been one of our problems — to try to dispose of this and retain as much of the value as possible. If you stop and think of the value of an animal today, we can't very well let this literally 'go down the drain.' So, the meat is sold."

Besides helping consumers through industry, the meat lab also works with livestock producers to breed a better animal.

Kenneth Brown To Address Gathering

Deputy insurance commissioner Kenneth Brown will speak at the April meeting of the Pitt County Epilepsy Association Thursday night at the Willis Building in Greenville.

Brown, head of the consumer services section of the North Carolina Department of Insurance, will outline the insurance needs of the epileptic, including life, health and accident insurance, policies on insuring a person with seizure disorders, rating above standard rates, and how the Insurance Department can serve the epileptic population.

An ordained Methodist Church minister, Brown was appointed director of Insurance Commissioner John Ingram's, "people division," when it was approved by the North Carolina General Assembly in 1973.

The Pitt Epilepsy Association, founded last summer as the only group of its kind in Eastern North Carolina, is presenting the 7:30 p.m. program as part of its educational series on special problems of the epileptic in society. Epileptics, their families and other interested persons are welcome to attend.

Further information is available by calling 756-7231.

Plan Party For Pre-Schoolers

A party will be held on Monday, April 24, at 9 a.m. for all children entering kindergarten or first grade for the first time next year at South Greenville. The party will be held in the school auditorium and parents are urged to attend.

Parents are requested to bring their child's birth certificate and immunization record at this time.

FORECAST FOR THURSDAY, APRIL 20, 1978 •

Your Daily HOROSCOPE

from the CARROLL RIGHTER INSTITUTE

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A good time to get rid of lots of uninteresting but necessary details. A bigwig you want as an associate does not approve of a standpoint you have. Be clever and eliminate such opposition and achieve much of value.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Take care of minor chores and then get into discussions with associates regarding mutual ventures. Take needed health treatments.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Take exercise, other treatments, that make you more magnetic, charming. Handle important tasks first. Be more cooperative with fellow workers.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Handle domestic affairs first and later you can enjoy the amusements that appeal to you most. Make a good impression on higher-ups with your fine talents. Be a friend to all.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Analyze just where you and your associates are going in your joint ventures and how to get there faster. Be wiser to the ways of others.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Take care of monetary matters before going out for social fun with good friends. Seek ways to become more financially independent.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) First handle personal affairs and then get down to the practical. Use intelligent methods to improve property. Avoid one who could get you off the beaten track.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Get personal affairs in fine shape and then carry through with business duties intelligently. Take time out for recreation also.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Listen to the advice of a good friend then decide what you will do in the days ahead. A good adviser can give solid suggestions, also.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Take care of a civic problem before joining friends for fun. Know what it is you want and decide how best to attain it.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) You have ambitions that require the assistance of a bigwig, so be sure to get it. Don't wait until the last minute finalizing plans for a trip you have in mind.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Take care of chores early and spend some time with a new friend. New and interesting activities can bring advancement.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Try to come to a better understanding with a partner before tackling other work. Get involved in community work and gain the prestige you need.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will work along with others in a most cooperative way. Give as fine an education as you can since there is fine ability at precision work, neatness, thoroughness. Sports are a must to build up the rather frail body. Give courses in psychology, too, in order to understand the thinking of others better.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to YOU!

Today's Cryptoquip clue: M equals L

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Opening lead: Four of ♠.

We have often stressed in this column that two chances are better than one. But to take advantage of every opportunity, it is essential that you get the timing right.

In support of spades North's hand revalued to 13 points, so his decision to make a jump raise of his partner's opening bid was sound. With first- or second-round control of all the side suits, South checked on aces and settled in a small slam when he discovered that one was missing.

West was reluctant to lead anything that might help declarer, so he selected a trump. When dummy came down, declarer saw that he could make his contract if either the ace of clubs or the king of diamonds was onside, for he could discard one of dummy's minor-suit cards on the fourth round of hearts.

But which suit to play first? If he led a club and the ace was with West, the defenders could take two tricks in that suit. If he tried diamonds and the queen lost to the king, the defenders would get the ace of clubs as well.

Declarer won the trump in his hand and led another spade to dummy's king. Mentally tossing a coin, he elected to try the diamond finesse. Down one.

There was no need for declarer to subject himself to a guess. By playing his cards in the right order, he could avail himself of both opportunities.

After drawing the second trump with a high trump in his hand, declarer should play four rounds of hearts, sluffing a club from dummy. Now dummy is entered by leading the seven of trumps to the eight, and declarer leads a club towards the king.

If this loses to the ace, declarer can reenter dummy with a club ruff and try the diamond finesse. As the cards lie, East has the ace of clubs, and if he does not take it now, he won't get it. But if he does, the defenders can't get a diamond trick. East shifts to a diamond, but declarer rises with the ace and discards dummy's remaining diamond on the king of clubs, and the slam is home.

Rubber bridge clubs throughout the country use the four-deal bridge format. Do they know something you don't? Satire Returns To TV In 'Madhouse Brigade'

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — You might call t "Saturday Night Live Meets Ernie Kovacs." The actual title is "Madhouse Brigade." It's a new syndicated comedy series offering such bent bits as these:

— A leather-clad sadist, whip in hand, sits laughing. Suddenly, he looks up and says: "Hi. Would you believe I'm cleaning my stove?"

— An inventor is amazed at the invention of the thermos jug. He points at said jug and murmurs: "You put cold in, cold comes out. You put hot in, hot comes out." A pause. "How does it know?"

Both were in a sample of quick, unrelated skits executive producer Jim Larkin showed last month to prospective "Brigade" buyers at a national convention of station program executives here.

With a seven-member troupe of players, it was the only offering of traight satire at a busy bazaar of network reruns, game shows and such things as "Bonkers" and "The $1.98 Beauty Contest."

Marshall, 32, seen in the sample as a bogus Brando in a wild "Godfather" takeoff.

The show's writer, he's been making encs meet the past 10 years doing weird voices for films and commercials in New York. His credits range from the movie, "Lennie," to an ad for "Meow Mix."

He's never written for a network comedy show, he said by phone from Fun City. Odd as it may seem Ernie Kovacs, one of TV's most inentive comic minds, Mashall says his show's aim "is to put American satire back on TV. I think it's been lacking for too many years.

"Yeah, we've had 'Saturday Night' and 'Laugh-In.' But they're comedy, not satire...satire is different in that it's like a punch in the nose. But it can make you laugh instead of cry."

The New York-based 'Brigade" comes in two versions: Toned down for early-evening display, and no-holds-barred for airing late at night, when America's impressionable tykes are theoretically abed.

Producer Larkin says there'll be an initial batch of 13 "Brigade" shows made and the caperings will commence next fall.

He spoke while awaiting word on final negotiations with various stations for the show, including ones in TV's three largest markets — here, New York and Chicago.

Those hamlets are rumored to be where satire flourishes. Any reluctance by stations there to invest in satire, though?

"No, they aren't reluctant," Larkin said. "What it is, I think, is that they'd like to buy everything for 37 cents. The money they offer you is a bit low.

"You go in and ask for the ceiling, they offer you the basement. And eventually, you compromise on the first floor, I guess."

Will Perform At Concert

Violinist Patricia Bath, a sophomore at Rose High School, is to perform the first movement of Mozart's "Concerto No. 3 in G Major" with the UNC-Wilmington Community Orchestra.

The concert will take place at 3 p.m. Sunday, April 23 in Kenan Auditorium on the UNC-Wilmington compus.

Miss Bath, as one of two winners in the 1978 Youth Auditions conducted by the university, earned the opportunity to perform with the orchestra.

The other winner is pianist Katreese Barnes of Weldon. Miss Barnes will play the first movement of Bach's "Concerto in d minor" with the orchestra.

The public is invited to attend the concert honoring the two Youth Audition winners.

His Honeymoon Spent Working

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Bass guitarist John McVie of the rock group Fleetwood Mac and his longtime girlfriend, Julie Rubens, have been married in Hollywood, but McVie is spending his honeymoon in a recording studio.

McVie, 32, and his bride, 25, were married at McVie's home Sunday. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Rubens, owners of a Beverly Hills boutique.

Mick Fleetwood, the group's drummer, served as best man and Stacy Cashin, a friend of the couple, was maid of honor.

Chicago Drugstore Has Its Buyers Of Leeches

By DAN SHERIDAN
Associated Press Writer

CHICAGO (AP) — They're wiggly, squiggly bloodsuckers with three razor-sharp teeth.

They were important to physicians for thousands of years. And you might remember Humphry Bogart was covered with them in "African Queen,"

Leeches.

Bloodletting — either by cutting or by attaching leeches to the body — nearly died out as a medical treatment in the late 1800s. But not entirely. Hirudo Medicinalis — medicinal leeches — are still sold by the hundreds at an old-time drugstore in Chicago's Loop.

"Nine out of 10 people who come in to get leeches are buying them to withdraw blood from black eyes. Monday morning is a good morning — after the weekend fights," said Harvey Snitman, manager of Sargent's Drugstore on Wabash Avenue.

He said others, who come from as far away as New York for the leeches, claim they help relieve migrane headaches, phlebitis, and the swelling of bruises.

"We're the only retail outlet in the country for live medicinal leeches," he said, adding that the store sells 500 to 600 a year.

Snitman, wearing a white pharmacist's coat, took what looked like a big pickle jar from the store's front window, reached in and drew from the water a thin, blackish-brown worm that squiggled in his palm, trying to sink tiny teeth into his flesh.

"It attaches itself to whatever you want it to. It gets to look like a little sausage, and then it drops off. Then the swelling goes down; it's dead blood in there that causes the swelling," he said.

Does it hurt? "No, he's got teeth sharp as a razor."

"Years ago every drugstore had them; 50 cents apiece. Now they're $6," the pharmacist said.

He emphasized that the store does not prescribe the use of leeches and he will not recommend their use. But sales are legal and he's just passing along what his customers tell him, he said.

The medicinal leeches, he said, come from a London supplier, who imports them from Russia, Poland and Hungary.

Dr. Lester S. King, a professor at the Center for the Study of the History of Science and Medicine at the University of Chicago, said in a separate interview that the use of one or two leeches does no harm at all. It doesn't do much good for most ills, but in some case, he said, it may be beneficial.

"In reducing a black eye, for example," King said. "Up until 1840 it was very widely used for a great many diseases, then medicine began to become more scientific. It's rather outmoded now; like taking an oxcart to go from the suburbs to downtown."

The early purpose of leeching and bleeding — before doctors knew that blood circulates — was to redistribute bodily fluids and thus restore health, he said.

Pre-School Orientation

The pre-school orientation of children who will be entering kindergarten and first graders new to Greenville will take place in Greenville elementary schools on Monday, April 24.

Registration for the majority of the children in these categories has already been accomplished, however, there are a number of children whose parents have not yet registered their children.

Charles Ross, Director of Elementary Education for the Greenville City Schools, urges all parents who may have children in these categories and who have not registered, to do so in conjunction with the pre-orientation sessions.

The sessions will be held in all the elementary schools. Parents of children already registered as well as those who have not registered are asked to contact the elementary school nearest them to get details on the time and the location within schools of the orientation place.

Record Industry Honoring Joan

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's recording industry has honored Joan Mondale for her role in obtaining support of the arts from government and private donors, along with her personal backing of young artists.

The wife of Vice President Walter F. Mondale received the recognition Tuesday night at the 10th annual cultural awards dinner of the Recording Industry Association of America Inc., a leading record trade association.

Dept. Of Physics Will Mark Sun Day

ECU News Bureau

Sun Day, a national day set aside to promote awareness of the importance of the sun and its potential as a source of energy, will be observed Wednesday, May 3, by the East Carolina University Department of Physics.

Lectures by ECU physicists and displays of solar hot water collectors, solar hot air collectors and commercial solar units and instruments will highlight the day's activities.

The public is invited.

Solar energy units will be on display during the morning and afternoon outside the Science Complex.

Dr. Adler, an authority on solar energy and solar devices, is serving as the program's organizer.

Crop Insurance Date Extended

The Federal Crop Insurance has extended its final date of new applications on corn insurance through Monday, May 1. Applications for insurance on tobacco, peanuts and soybeans will also be accepted through May 1.

U.S. DEPARTMENT OF HOUSING AND URBAN DEVELOPMENT INVITATION FOR APPLICATIONS FOR SECTION 202 FUND RESERVATIONS

The Department of Housing and Urban Development invites applications for newly constructed and/or substantially rehabilitated housing units under the Section 202 Direct Loan Program for Housing for the Elderly or Handicapped.

Section 202 direct loan authority in the amount of $7,148,375 for metropolitan and $8,755,362 for non metropolitan areas is being made available to the Greensboro Area HUD office jurisdiction to finance an estimated 250 units for metropolitan areas and 305 units for non metropolitan areas. The areas listed below, within this HUD office jurisdiction, have been identified as those in which additional housing for the elderly or handicapped is warranted based on the goals expressed in local housing assistance plans. Applications for the designated areas below will be evaluated first, and only in the event that an insufficient number of approvable applications are received for the designated allocation areas will applications for other areas be considered for approval. Notwithstanding the above preference for applications received for a designated allocation area, applications for housing designed exclusively or primarily for the nonelderly disabled or handicapped for any area will be accepted and evaluated. Prospective applicants are also advised of the existence of factors (other than the funding capacity of the Greensboro Area Office) which will limit the number of approvable units for any one application.

METROPOLITAN AREAS: Cumberland County, Currituck County, Gaston County, Mecklenburg County (Outside Charlotte), New Hanover County.

NON-METROPOLITAN AREAS: Alexander County, Alleghany County, Anson County, Ashe County, Avery County, Beaufort Court, Bladen County, Burke County, Cabarrus County, Caldwell County, Camden County, Catawba County, Chowan County, Cleveland County, Craven County, Dare County, Gates County, Hertford Country, Hyde County, McDowell County, Mitchell County, Montgomery County, Moore County, Pasquotank County, Perquimans County, Pitt County, Polk County, Richmond County, Robeson County, Rowan County, Rutherford County, Tyrrell County, Washington County, Watauga County, Wayne County, Wilkes County, Yancey County.

Applications must be received in the Greensboro Area Office by 4:45 p.m., June 15, 1978. Appropriate instructions, forms and other program information are contained in an Application Package which may be obtained from the Director, Housing Development Division, U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development, 415 North Edgeworth Street, Greensboro, North Carolina 27401.

This office will conduct a workshop in Greensboro at 9:30 a.m., on April 26, 1978, to explain to interested applicants the regulations and instructions governing the Section 202 Program and the Section 106(b) Nonprofit Sponsor Housing Assistance Loan Program, to distribute the Application Packages and the required forms for both programs and to discuss application procedures, required exhibits, and any further information on the availability of loan authority to the designated allocation areas. Space-Age General, Now 75, Has Become Priest

EDITOR'S NOTE — He's into his fifth career — and his fifth life. After surviving three cancers and open-heart surgery, the man some call the father of the U.S. space program has found his calling as a priest.

By IKE FLORES
Associated Press Writer

MAITLAND, Fla. (AP) — As a mere stripling of 57, Maj. Gen. John Bruce Medaris ramrodded the team which developed the rocket carrying America's first satellite into space.

At age 75 and in the 20th anniversary year of the nation's space program, Medaris is a bit stockier and sports a sparse, snow-white goatee and moustache. This crusty general turned priest has overcome cancer three times — at least once, he contends, by "divine intervention" — has undergone open-heart surgery and wears a pacemaker.

But this man some call the father of the U.S. space program goes about his duties as an Episcopal priest with the same fervor he had as a Marine, Army general, businessman, civic official and friend and boss of Wernher von Braun.

And he still is as outspoken as he was in the days when he argued with his Army bosses and President Eisenhower's policymakers for authorization giving his Redstone Arsenal command primary responsibility for launching this country's first satellite.

"Von Braun and I went to Washington and made it clear that we weren't going to be anybody's backup support," Father Medaris says, referring to the inter-service rivalry over the development of a powerful rocket needed to play catch-up to the Russian Sputnik. "We threatened to resign."

But they didn't, and eventually they resolved what Medaris calls the key problem in space travel — returning an object from space without destroying it on reentry into the earth's atmosphere.

Medaris, in an interview in his sun-dappled study next to the Church of the Good Shepherd in Maitland, explains his role in what he calls "certainly the most exciting period of my busy life."

"Von Braun and I were the cutting edge of getting into space," Medaris says.

The Air Force doesn't like ...e fact that he's called the fa...r of the space program, Me...is says, and neither does the ...tional Aeronautics and Space ...dministration.

...t was Redstone Arsenal and ... von Braun-Medaris team ...hich on Jan. 31, 1958, provided ...e modified Redstone rocket called Juno which blasted into orbit an 18-pound, basketball-size missile, saving some face for the United States in the space sweepstakes.

The Soviet Union had shocked the world with its Sputnik almost three months earlier.

After Explorer I — as the first space object was called — came the reorganization and concentration of the country's resources into one space agency. And Medaris and other Army men became disenchanted.

"NASA was to take over half of my empire," Medaris recalls. "I had nothing more to gain. I had no desire to preside over the dismemberment of what I had built."

So he retired in 1960 after 37 years in the military.

Then came some rough times mixed in with his civilian life as president of Lionel Corp., the electric train company, and later as an industrial consultant with his own firm in Florida.

He had prostate cancer successfully removed during his tenure at Redstone Arsenal in Huntsville, Ala. But in 1964, bone cancer was diagnosed. "I was full of it," he says. "In those days, it was inoperable. The verdict was I would be dead by Christmas 1965."

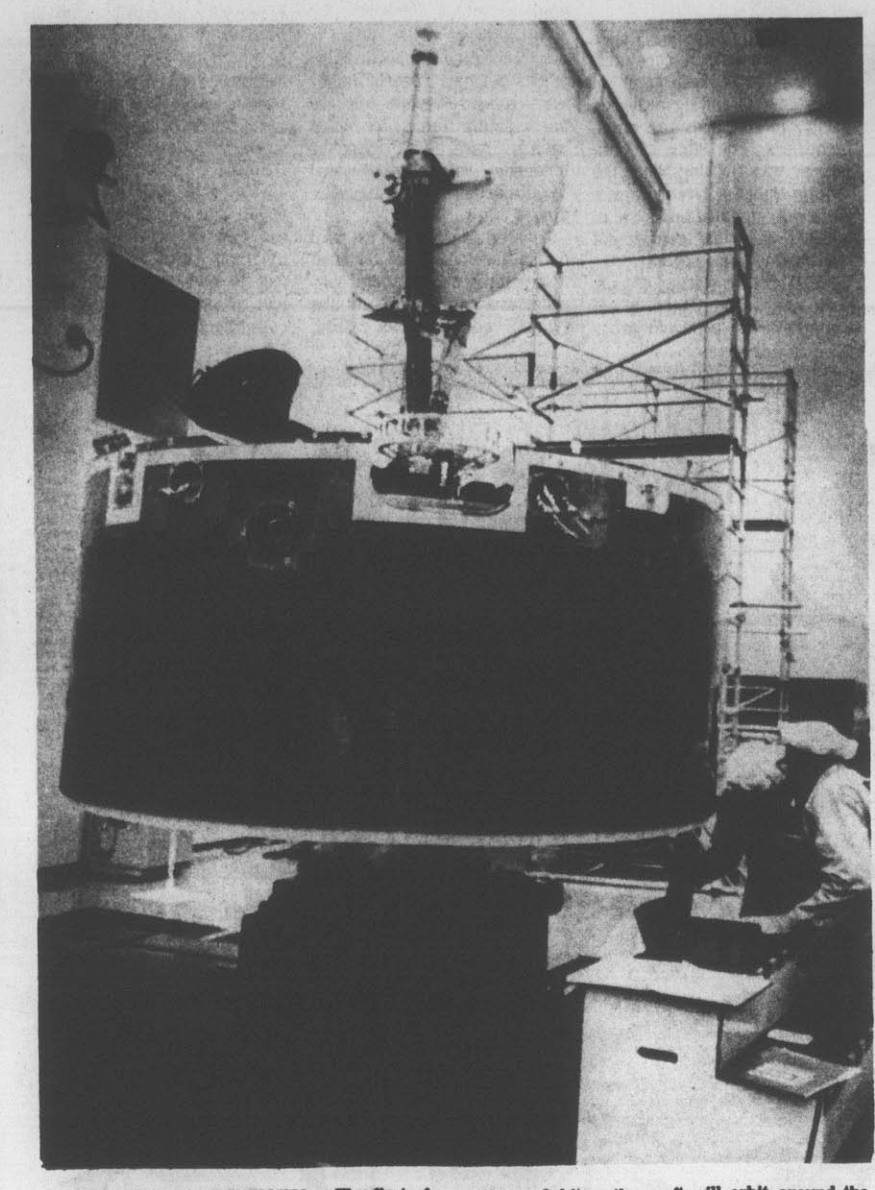

However, Medaris says he was cured by the "laying on of hands" and the spiritual powers of a faith healer who ministered to him through the auspices of the Church of the Good Shepherd. Instead of death, his doctor informed him around Christmas 1965 that after slow remission over many months his cancer had vanished.

Shortly after 10th anniversary ceremonies of the first space flight, he was again stricken with cancer — of the lower part of his mouth. Chemotherapy treatments, along with "my strong faith that God had other plans for me," got him through.

It was at that time, Medaris says, that he entered into his "special relationship with the Lord." He became a lay leader, then a deacon and finally in 1970, at age 68, a priest.

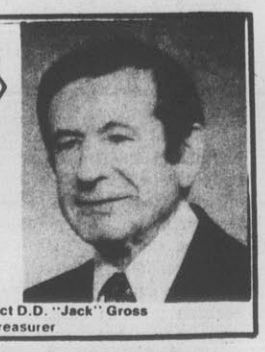

Less than two years ago, Medaris underwent open-heart surgery and got a pacemaker implanted in his chest.

His various trials convinced him that "as long as the Lord wants me to do his work, he will take care of me."

Bad Check Epidemic Spreads; The Comsumer Pays

By JAMES J. DOYLE

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — It's as easy to pass a bad check as it is to jaywalk, and much more profitable, according to a study made by a bank and confirmed by police.

Bad check passing, or "paperhanging," accounts for millions of dollars lost annually in Southern California alone. But the same problem exists all across the country, according to a police expert.

"Cashing checks is a very legitimate enterprise. Everybody uses it," Lt. Lewis Riker of the Los Angeles Police Department's Bunco-Forgery Division, said.

"It becomes a very common thing to pass bad paper, because it is so easy to slip from a legitimate check to a bad check. Everybody is doing basically the same thing — cashing a check."

It has become a profitable crime in many areas because merchants will not take the time to prosecute, or even report in most cases.

Statistics on dollar losses are rising due to "apathy and non involvement," Riker said.

Bad check passing by both professionals and careless consumers has about reached epidemic proportions, Riker said. "The merchant realizes that if he does report it and an arrest is made, he's going to have to go to court and testify. So he weighs the amount of the check against the value of his time and decides not to report it."

He estimated that four of five criminal check violations in Los Angeles are not reported. And the problem is compounded, he said, by the light sentencing given those who are convicted.

Often a paperhanger can steal more with a pen than a pistol, passing as much as $3,000 a day in bogus checks among retailers.

Honest but careless consumers add to the losses. A shopper might bounce a check for $40 or $50 and if the store's check collection procedure is lax, never have to make it good.

Supermarkets cash more checks than any other business including banks, according to a study made by Security Pacific Bank. And they lose more money than any other business.

A typical supermarket cashes more than 10,000 checks a month, more than 300 a day, the bank said. The check approval process causes irritating delays at the checkout stands and adds up to a surprising amount of time, about 125,000 hours a month for all the supermarkets in Southern California.

"Supermarkets really get hit," Riker said. When you look at the total business volume it seems like a small percentage but it's a loss everybody, every consumer, picks up.

"If they lose $100,000, they add it to product costs.

"But if a retail merchant didn't accept checks," Lt. Riker said, "he would soon be out of business. The Federal Reserve Bank has said that nine of 10 dollars spent in the United States is by way of checks.

"That includes credit cards because credit card bills are paid by check. When a system is based on trust — and that's what a check is — it's very easy to violate it. The merchant trusts the consumer has the money to cover the check. Our whole financial system is based on trust."

That trust is frequently misplaced and the situation grows worse yearly.

In 1971 there 46,329 worthless document, or bad check and credit card, crimes in Los Angeles alone. The total amount of money lost was $4.8 million, Riker said.

In 1974, there were 52,626 such crimes reported, the dollar loss was $7.2 million. The figures for bad checks went down in 1977 to 44,618 crimes, but the money figure jumped to $8.4 million.

The figures for bad checks alone — no credit card frauds included — jumped to a money loss of $5.2 million in 1977 from $2.3 million six years earlier.

The 12th Federal Reserve District, which includes eight states, reported that one of every 114 checks processed was returned as a "dishonored item" in 1973. The figure reached to one in 96 in 1974 and one in 91 in 1975, the last year figures were kept on the category.

Riker said while more checks are being returned, fewer are being reported.

The Los Angeles Police Department uses a computerized system to keep track of paperhangers and their checks, using more than a dozen identifiers. The state of California was looking into the system under a proposal for a statewide identification system.

Riker said his department was providing speakers to appear before large groups, such as the Chamber of Commerce, to point out areas where merchants can tighten security, know what is required and what to look for.

"It's an educational program to help the merchant reduce losses," Riker said.,

Security Pacific Bank has initiated a new check cashing system, called Security Service which it is marketing to supermarkets throughout the state.

At the heart of the system is a computer facility in Glendale, a Los Angeles suburb, linked via leased telephone lines to participating stores. The stores usually have two electronic terminals which are operated by cardholders using magnetic plastic cards.

A cardholder inserts his card and a check into the terminal and presses one of four color-coded buttons to indicate the type of check to be cashed, ranging from personal to third-party checks and checks for cash only.

The information is transmitted to a computer center where it is scanned. If the check meets the policy of the participating store, it is instantly approved, and the approval stamped on the reverse side.

About 1.4 million persons carried cards which could be used in 317 supermarkets of seven chains in the state as of December of last year. Security Pacific said thousands of new cards were being issued each week.

Similar systems were in operation in other parts of the country in an attempt to stem the flow of worthless checks, the bank said, along with the loss to merchants and, at the end of the chain, the cost to consumers.

Consumer Data Bank Could Be Money-Saver

ITHACA, N.Y. (UPI) — Computer scientists and economists say a consumer data bank financed by the general public could save people money by providing current information on local retail prices and vendor services via telephone, cable television, mail or vending machines at home or in shopping centers.

The proposal was made by a Cornell University department head and three University of Michigan scientists writing in "The Journal of Consumer Affairs." They say it would lower prices for similar products and services in a given community. If financed just by people using the system, they said prices generally would remain stable, but individual users would benefit from better knowledge of local markets.

Among other things, the pilot system proposed by E. Scott Maynes of Cornell's Department of Consumer Economics and Housing, and Michigan's James N. Morgan, Weston Vivian and Greg J. Duncan would test devices for assuring accuracy and fairness to local retailers.

High IQ Tied To Daydreaming

UNIVERSITY PARK, Pa. (UPI) — Intelligence and positive daydreaming are matchmates, says a researcher looking into the relationship between I.Q. and daydreaming.

Philip L. Taylor, assistant professor of psychosocial science at Pennsylvania State University's Capitol Campus, says daydreamers with guilty fantasies score lower on I.Q. tests.

"For many, many people, (daydreaming) is analogous to relaxation and meditation," Taylor says, adding that most people are often refreshed, stimulated and renewed by the practice, as long as it does not become an obsession.

Old Fortress Being Restored

BASSETERRE, St. Kitts (UPI) — The British Development Division in Barbados has forwarded a further grant of $11,000 to continue restoration work on the ancient fortress of Brimstone Hill. Earlier this year a similar amount was received for the same purpose.

The Fortress is known as the Gibraltar of the West Indies because of its legendary background in connection with 17th and 18th century warfare among French, Spanish, Dutch, British and Americans for possession of the 68-square-mile island. The 750-foot hill is now a major tourist attraction.

Played Opposite Former Teacher

NEW YORK (UPI) — When James Earl Jones turned up on the set of "Sesame Street" to make a guest appearance as a famous movie star in search of the perfect old-fashioned egg cream, he found himself playing opposite his old acting teacher, Will Lee.

Lee, who has portrayed Harold Hooper, the popular candystore owner on the award-winning television series for preschoolers since the show began in 1968, was a drama coach at The American Theatre Wing when Jones was a student

CAMERA Angles

By IRVING DESFOR
AP Newsfeatures

This is a love story.

I love photography. That love came first, when I was a youngster more than half a century ago.

And I loved my wife, my partner for 40 years.

The beauty of photography's love is that it begs to be shared with others for then it expands and multiplies its joys, excitement and rewards.

I also love my children and grandchildren. And photography has welcomed them with lavish attention and ample affection.

Photography is blessed with a permanent memory and total recall. So when we turn the pages of our family photo albums, we remember again the joyous events, the memorable sights and the parade of people in our lives.

That is a blessing now.

My wife died a week ago and the period of mourning has been made easier by reviewing a multitude of memories that we shared so beautifully.

Gertrude was my photo shadow, always attached or just a step away. On our many travel trips, while I concentrated on shooting with one, two or three cameras, she carried the gadget bag. The children dubbed her "pack horse number one" on our photo safaris.

She took pictures too and she had two specialties. Using a simple Instamatic, she focused on children everywhere because they reminded her of her own children or grandchildren. And she would take pictures of me in action to show that I was along on the trip.

At times, that could be embarrassing. Like the view of me taking an early morning view from a balcony — garbed only in shorts. Or the time I slid down a rock into a lake, holding the camera up high to save it. I had to strip completely to wring out my clothes. That's the shot she got.

Gertrude was patient, uncomplaining and always ready to be the symbolic human figure in any composition when needed — someone to read a signpost or the spectator admiring a scenic view or the person in the foreground or background to add perspective to a scene.

She was also the alert liaison agent with one eye on the tour group up ahead and the other eye on me lagging behind to get still another angle. She was the one who heard me banging on a corridor door in a Spanish palace, locked for security when the guide thought all had passed through.

Thanks to Gertrude, our home displays a color photograph of which I am most proud. We were in a motel in Toledo, Spain, in March 1963. She awoke very early, pulled back the heavy drapes and saw a glorious sunrise. She hesitated just a moment, then decided to wake me. I saw the magnificent sight and got every camera into action.

Out of it came one memorable 35mm Kodacolor negative. With the camera angled down from our balcony, I focused on two boys lugging a basket of coal between them. The sun hit my lens, producing a path of light with rainbow colors at the narrower top edge. The figures were silhouetted with long shadows reaching toward cobblestone steps in the bottom foreground.

That picture, which has been a conversation piece in the homes of our three daughters and my son, would never have been made if Gertrude hadn't seen it first and recognized its potential.

I wonder how many other pictures by photographers ought to include a wife's credit line?

When I became bogged down with pictures and more pictures, it was Gertrude who organized the family albums and found a home for the prints. She really reached the heights with a series of grandchildren albums. She included not only the photographs but the youngsters' first drawings, their cute notes, cards and memorabilia that make each volume far more interesting and visually an experience.

It was my wife, too, who discovered the therapeutic value of family albums. It was her idea to take one along when visiting my mother in a nursing home. The pictures triggered her failing memory and evoked a fund of family stories that made the visits enjoyable occasions for everybody.

My wife is gone now, but she is still with us — in precious images.

I love photography more than ever now for the solace and comfort it brings in reviewing the highlights of our 40 years together.

It's a love story that will continue for my children, grandchildren and those that come after them. The photographs are our "roots," permanently fixed and perennially flowering.

I love photography.

Contest Open To All Composers

NEW YORK (UPI) — A top prize of $5,000 will be awarded at the 13th annual Castlebar International Song Contest in County Mayo, Ireland, Oct. 2-7.

The Castlebar Contest, which last year drew more than 1,100 entries from 35 countries, is open to all composers, both amateur and professional, but entries must be original and unpublished. Closing date for entries is June 15, and composers chosen to compete in the closing stages of the contest will be announced in July.

For further information, application forms and complete rules, contact Mrs. Gisela O'Connor, Castlebar International Song Contest, 10 St. Helen's Road, Booterstown, Co. Dublin, Ireland.

Urge Skilled Labor Emphasis

NEW YORK (UPI) — Renewed emphasis on the value of skilled labor in today's work force will help the U.S. take a long stride toward improving its unemployment scene, according to the chief executive of a major multi-industry company.

The recent closing and downgrading of trade schools has meant that millions of would-be employers throughout the country find it hard — if not impossible — to find workers already trained with the specialized skills required for the jobs available, says Forrest N. Shumway, president of Signal Companies, Inc.

Nepal Is A Land Of Festivals

KATMANDU, Nepal (AP) — Nepal has more festival days than days of the year.

The major festival, Bada Dasain, takes 15 days to celebrate. Others include Gai Jatra, an eight-day Cow Festival; Indra Jatra, also eight days long, featuring three parades with the living Goddess in Katmandu; Tihar, when all homes are illuminated; and Teej, a special festival for women.

The celebration days are different each year, according to the lunar calendar.

FINED FOR LOSS

CRAWLEY, England (AP) — Britain's largest air cargo company has been fined $3,515 because 28 pregnant cows died on one of its planes last October from lack of oxygen and the heat.

How Tar Heel Congressmen And Senators Voted

By Roll Call Report

WASHINGTON—Here's how area Members of Congress were recorded on major roll call votes April 7 through 13.

HOUSE

FARM BILL—Rejected, 150 for and 268 against, the conference report on the emergency farm bill (HR6782). Although the Senate had passed the legislation (see vote below), this vote killed the slim chance the bill had of becoming law over President Carter's promised veto. Farmers in the American Agricultural Movement lobbied in Washington for more than three months for the bill.

HR 6782's most controversial feature was a "flexible parity" plan under which wheat, feed grain and cotton farmers could benefit from sharply increased 1978 price supports by taking more land out of production. The bill also raised federal loan rates for those crops and hiked the borrowing authority of the Commodity Credit Corporation.

Rep. James Abdnor, R-S.D., a supporter, said "it is little to ask that the average American family, which is living on about $5,000 more income each year than the average farm family, should be expected to pay $100 more a year to help establish a healthy farm economy. That is all the Council on Wage and Price Stability estimated the Senate bill would cost the average family...."

Rep. Charles Whalen, R-Ohio, an opponent, said "the long-term interests of grain producers, livestock farmers and consumers alike do not lie in pushing farm prices up to artificial and unsustainable heights. Such a program, either through excessive support payments or large crop set-asides, can only produce another boom-bust cycle that we seek to prevent."

Members voting "nay" opposed the emergency farm bill.

Reps. Walter Jones, D-1, L.H. Fountain, D-2, Charles Rose, D-7, W.G. Hefner, D-8, James Martin, R-9, and James Broyhill, R-10, voted "yea."

Reps. Ike Andrews, D-4, Stephen Neal, D-5, Richardson Preyer, D-6, and Lamar Gudger, D-11, voted "nay."

Rep. Charles Whitley, D-3, did not vote.

HISTORIC PRESERVATION—Passed, 326 for and 76 against, a bill (HR 11661) to preserve the most historic features of Lowell, Mass. by including them in the National Park System. Lowell, founded in 1822, is considered America's first planned city. The bill establishes a precedent of interest to other deteriorated industrial cities of historical significance, for it marks the first such extension of the National Park Service protective umbrella to a central city. It authorizes $40 million in fiscal 1979, about half of which is for property acquisition and development. It was sent to the Senate.

Rep. Joe Moakley, D-Mass., a supporter, said: "There is a strong realization that this is our only opportunity to accurately preserve a physical model of the development of the Industrial Revolution."

Rep. Jack Cunningham, R-Wash., said that he favors historic preservation but is concerned about spending $40 million for this purpose "after watching Congress recently place on the backs of the American workers the highest tax increase in peacetime history of this country...."

Fountain, Andrews, Neal, Preyer, Rose and Hefner voted "yea."

Martin and Broyhill voted "nay."

Jones, Whitely and Gudger did not vote.

POST SERVICE—Adopted, 203 for and 189 against, an amendment dealing with the U.S. Treasury's annual subsidy of the U.S. Postal Service. It was attached to HR 7700, the postal reorganization bill reasserting limited congressional control over postal operations. HR 7700 was later passed and sent to the Senate.

The amendment requires the Postal Service to identify, through more sophisticated accounting procedures, those operating costs which result from its "public service functions"—for example, delivery to remote areas, six-day door-to-door deliveries, and the location of post offices on the basis of consumer convenience rather than cost-effectiveness. This figure would guide Congress in determining the amount of the annual subsidy of the Postal Service.

Rep. Tom Corcoran, R-Ill., the sponsor, called it "incredible" that there is presently no such accounting. He added: "I do not believe we in Congress should continue to present subsidy without establishing a procedure for such an accounting."

Rep. James Hanley, D-N.Y., an opponent, said he was "terribly apprehensive" about letting the Postal Service "establish itself what are public service costs" and in effect dictate the amount of its subsidy.

Members voting "yea" favored the amendment.

Jones, Neal, Preyer, Rose and Hefner voted "nay."

Whitley did not vote.

SENATE

FARM BILL—Adopted, 49 for and 41 against, the conference report on HR 6782, the emergency farm bill. The measure was later killed by the House (see vote above). With such provisions as "flexible parity" linking price support levels to the amount of acreage set aside, the bill sought to immediately hike farm income. President Carter had promised to veto the legislation as too inflationary.

Sen Milton Young, R-N.D., a supporter, said: "The average consumer...wants farmers to receive at least the cost of production. This is in the consumer's best interest, as it would enable many farmers, who otherwise would have to quit, to keep on farming—thus assuring consumers of an adequate supply of food and fiber in the future."

Sen. Edmund Muskie, D-Maine, an opponent, said: "We should recognize by now that federal programs which aid farmers cannot create money out of thin air. Sooner or later... those dollars which are added to farm income must come either from U.S. taxpayers in the form of higher spending or from consumers in the form of higher food prices."

Sens. Robert Morgan, D, and Jesse Helms, R, voted "yea."

Cuts Ranks Of Shoplifters

ATLANTA (AP) — "You are sentenced to write a research paper, make an apology, give two weekends of volunteer service ..."

Rex Ruff, president of the Georgia Council of Juvenile Court Judges, doesn't think he is doing anything innovative with his sentencing in shoplifting cases. He believes he is simply doing something that makes sense.

And statistics suggest Judge Ruff's approach is working. In 1976, 212 cases of shoplifting came before his court, but as of Sept. 1, 1977, he had dealt with only 87.

Two of the judge's favorite topics for the paper are "Who Pays for the Cost of Shoplifting?" and "Devices and Means Used to Detect Shoplifters."

Comics Join The Classics

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Comics such as The Hulk and Tom & Jerry have taken their place alongside Tom Sawyer and other literary works at a public library here.

"I want some readers. This is another attempt to snag a couple more readers," says children's librarian Mary Ann Maginnity.

Mrs. Maginnity spends about $40 on a bundle of comics every two months.

"Once the kids see we have the comics, they will come back. Then, maybe we can suggest something else that might catch their fancy. If they never came in, we'd never have that chance," she said.

Photographic Role Illustrated

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — The use of photography as a sign language that can often be more eloquent than the spoken word is being demonstrated as a communications tool to junior high and high school students and their teachers across the nation through a multimedia show.

The 35-minute Eastman Kodak Company presentation, which is offered free to the schools, shows how pictures can be used to convey emotion more strongly than words through the use of slides that illustrate loneliness, joy and triumph.

The presentation, entitled "Photographically Speaking," explains how visual images have a language all their own and can underscore, explain or even contradict the written or spoken word.
