Prison Term For Ex-Congressman Is Handed Down

WASHINGTON (AP) - Former Rep. Richard T. Hanna, the first congressional figure charged in the Korean influence-buying scandal, today was sentenced to serve six months to 30 months in a federal prison.

Hanna, who was a Democrat from California, appeared stunned as Chief District Judge William Bryant tersely handed down the sentence after lengthy appeals from both the congressman and his attorney for mercy.

In a quivering voice, Hanna had told Bryant: "I apologized to the court, I apologized to the people who elected me to public office..."

hope in the years that I have left I can do something to atone for what I have done."

The white-haired Hanna who served in Congress from 1963 to 1974, entered a bargained guilty plea last March 17 to one count of conspiracy to defraud the government, a charge that bears a maximum penalty of five years in prison and a $10,000 fine.

Hanna's plea agreement averted a trial on a 40-count indictment returned by a grand jury last October. Government attorney Jeffrey White dropped the remaining charges after today's sentencing.

The government said in the bargaining plea with the former congressman that Hanna had "received in excess of $200,000 in cash and checks between 1969 and the end of 1975" for using the power of his office to further the interests of Korean businessman Tongsun Park.

Hanna's attorney, Charles McNelis, argued in a long and emotional presentation to Bryant that while his client "did commit a serious mistake of judgment in his relationship with Tongsun Park," Hanna has since tried to redeem himself by cooperating fully with government investigators.

"What conceivable and earthly good would be accomplished by the incarceration of this man?" McNelis asked.

The lawyer said that while Hanna did receive money from Park, "that is not to say that he corrupted his political office."

Noting that Hanna had been through extensive interrogations with government attorneys and congressional panels and a lie-detector test, McNelis declared that Hanna "did everything humanly possible to correct the grievous error which he knows and admits he committed."

"He leads from the heart rather than the head," said the attorney. "It is inconceivable that he would do harm to his country."

McNelis insisted that while Hanna had taken substantial amounts of cash from Park, "he is not a bag man" and not one penny was delivered to any other politicians through him.

"He does not need the iron gates of incarceration, he needs a helping hand," McNelis concluded.

At that point, Bryant invited Hanna to speak for himself.

The former congressman stood silently as if to gather his composure, and when he finally spoke his voice shook and he seemed to be fighting tears.

Hanna told the court that "I hope that what you have to do will help atone for what I've done."

Justices Refuse Hear Patty Hearst's Appeal

By RICHARD CARELLI Associated Press Writer WASHINGTON (AP) - The Supreme Court refused today to review Patricia Hearst's 1976 bank robbery conviction. The young newspaper heiress, free the past two years on $1 million bond, soon may have to go to prison.

The justices rejected Miss Hearst's appeal with no explanation.

Only Justice William J. Brennan Jr. voted to review her case, and he said he would have limited the court's study to the admissibility into trial evidence of recordings of Miss Hearst's jailhouse conversations.

Now, lawyers for Miss Hearst have 25 days in which to ask the high court to reconsider.

Attorney J. Albert Johnson said such a request definitely would be filed. However, the court almost never grants reconsideration.

Miss Hearst conceivably could be ordered to prison in the interim.

Her immediate fate appears to rest with U.S. District Judge William H. Orrick Jr. in San Francisco. He could allow Miss Hearst to remain free until her lawyers exhaust all legal maneuvers.

Those could include a request that Orrick reduce Miss Hearst's seven-year prison term to a period of probation, as was done last year for state charges of assault and robbery against her.

Declares Downed Korean Airliner Had No Warning

TOKYO (AP) - The crew of a Korean Air Lines jet shot down over Russia received no warning from the Soviet fighter plane that fired on it, the KAL plane's co-pilot says.

The Soviets say the attack, in which two passengers were killed and 10 others were wounded when a Soviet MIG interceptor opened fire, came after the KAL Boeing 707 ignored repeated orders to follow the MIG to a landing field.

The 95 surviving passengers and 11 of the 13 crew members were brought from Murmansk to Helsinki, Finland, on Sunday on a Pan American mercy flight. Three of the passengers chose to remain in Europe, and a KAL plane brought the rest via Anchorage to a jubilant and tearful welcome in Tokyo today.

Most of the passengers were Japanese or Korean, and the plane was flying on to Seoul with the Koreans.

Also aboard were the bodies of the two dead passengers, one a Korean and the other a Japanese. Waiting at the Tokyo airport was Ritsuko Sugano, the 55-year-old mother of the dead Japanese, who said to reporters:

"How could they shoot our innocent and unguarded son? I cannot sleep when I think about his last moment in the plane."

The pilot and navigator of the plane are still being held in Russia, as is the aircraft's flight recorder. Cho Hoon-Ho, KAL president, appealed to the governments of Japan and the United States to help obtain release of the crewmen. South Korea and Russia have no diplomatic relations. A State Department representative said the United States had registered concern about the crewmen's detention.

Cho admitted the plane had strayed into Soviet airspace but said the "incident was an unexpected one, an accidental one." He said it would be impossible to determine exactly what happened until the pilot, Kim Chang-Kyu, the navigator, Lee Kun-Shik, and the flight recorder were returned.

He said the airline would not seek the return of its $15 million jet, which crash landed on a remote frozen lake in northwest Russia after the attack left a grapefruit-sized hole in the fuselage.

The co-pilot, Cha Soon-Do, 43, of Seoul, said: "I was on the international emergency frequency, but I did not hear anything...We didn't contact at all." He said he was unable to say how far the KAL jet had strayed into Russian airspace, but he believed it was "a little bit."

Interviews with passengers, who apparently saw the MIG before the crew did, supported the co-pilot.

Karlheinz Schwaken, a steel equipment salesman from Dusseldorf, West Germany, who was interviewed in Helsinki, said he watched the Russian jet for more than 10 minutes and saw "no wagging, no signals."

The co-pilot said he first noticed the interceptor when it pulled alongside. "I noticed it for about two minutes...no indication (of its intent). Then we was just followed. After that I missed the airplane. After then about five minutes we were shot."

Then the plane had to "come down very quickly from 35,000 feet to 3,000 feet" because the hole in the fuselage resulted in a loss of cabin pressure.

Passengers said the pilot told them he believed the plane's cockpit compass had malfunctioned. The airline president said investigators would seek to determine why a backup compass did not correct the problem.

PATTY may go to prison

Under Supreme Court procedure, Orrick officially will learn of the court's action when receiving notice of it by mail within a few days.

If imprisoned, Miss Hearst would have to serve 14 months before becoming eligible for parole. She served 14 months before, during and after her eight-week trial.

She was convicted of participating in the 1974 armed robbery of a Hibernia Bank branch in San Francisco - two months after her kidnapping by a group calling itself the Symbionese Liberation Army.

Miss Hearst, daughter of newspaper publisher Randolph Hearst and his wife Catherine, was 18 when SLA members abducted her from a Berkeley apartment Feb. 4, 1974.

The kidnapping, reports of her alleged subsequent conversion to the SLA movement and months of police frustration in efforts to capture Miss Hearst and her abductors was international news.

Miss Hearst, 24, has lived with her parents and under constant private guard since the federal conviction. Her father posted a $1-million bond supported by a $100,000 cash deposit to secure her freedom.

The conviction was upheld last November by the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, which ruled that her appeal presented "no novel issues."

Miss Hearst's lawyers then appealed to the nation's highest court, essentially using the same legal arguments.

They contended that the late U.S. District Judge Oliver J. Carter, who presided at Miss Hearst's trial, committed numerous errors that denied her a fair trial.

Among other things, the lawyers objected to testimony admitted into evidence by Carter of Miss Hearst's activities after the April 15, 1974, bank robbery.

Inch Nearer SALT Talk

By BARRY SCHWEID Associated Press Writer

LONDON (AP) - Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance's talks in Moscow may have eased Soviet opposition to the United States telling its NATO allies how to build the cruise missile, but the Russians refused to agree to limits on their Backfire bomber.

Both were key bargaining issues in Vance's three days of talks with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko on a new SALT pact to limit nuclear weapons.

Vance told reporters as he left Moscow for London Sunday: "There was some progress during these meetings toward a SALT agreement and we hope to carry these efforts forward in subsequent meetings." The next round is likely late in May when Gromyko visits the United States for a U.N. debate on disarmament.

U.S. officials with Vance hinted that the Russians eased their opposition to U.S. sharing of cruise missile technology with the other members of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization. The missile is a small, pilotless, long-range drone that could be launched from bombers out of range of Soviet anti-aircraft defenses and would fly at very low altitudes beneath Soviet radar beams.

Defense Secretary Harold Brown has said no new arms pact would be signed without provisions for sharing the missile technology with the other NATO members.

But the U.S. officials said there was no relaxation in Soviet refusal to put limits on production and deployment of their new Backfire bomber, a long-range plane which can make low-level attacks at supersonic speeds. Most analysts say a pact without such restrictions might not get through the U.S. Senate.

A third unresolved issue was the U.S. demand for curbs on new Soviet long-range missile systems.

Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev, who joined the Vance-Gromyko talks on Saturday, acknowledged for the first time that "energetic efforts" are required from his government as well as the United States to reach a new agreement.

Ponder Step On Captive

By HILMI TOROS Associated Press Writer

ROME (AP) - Former Premier Aldo Moro's Christian Democratic Party appears to be retreating from its refusal to bargain with the Red Brigades terrorists who kidnapped the party president. But there was no word from the kidnapers for the second day since their deadline on Moro's life expired.

The secretary-general of the ruling party, Benigno Zaccagnini, said after a meeting of party leaders that they want to find out through intermediaries "a reply to questions on the fate of Aldo Moro and to ascertain... possible ways to achieve his liberation."

Zaccagnini did not repeat the party's previous refusal to bargain with the terrorists. Observers said this could mean that the Christian Democrats, under pressure from Moro's family and some Roman Catholic bishops, might be willing to enter into talks if the kidnapers made concrete proposals.

But the Christian Democrats as well as the Communists and other parties that support the government in Parliament were reported still determined to refuse demands to exchange imprisoned terrorists for the kidnapped political leader.

The Red Brigades, who kidnapped Moro March 16 and killed his five police bodyguards, said on Thursday that they would kill their captive if the government did not agree by 3 p.m. Saturday to negotiate the exchange of Moro for unspecified "communist prisoners."

PRISONER EXCHANGE - Rep. Benjamin Gilman, R-N.Y. (right) helped arrange the release of an Israeli held 19 months in a Mozambique prison as part of a three-way prisoner exchange involving the United States and East Germany. The United States

Possible Exchanges Weighed To Free A Soviet Dissident

By MICHAEL J. SNIFFEN Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - A three-way prisoner exchange among the United States, East Germany and Mozambique is spawning discussions of deals to free Soviet dissident Anatoly Shcharansky from the Soviet Union and a U.S. CIA employee from Cuba.

An aide to Rep. Benjamin Gilman, R-N.Y., said Sunday that East German lawyer Wolfgang Vogel - a key go-between in previous East-West prisoner exchanges - will arrive here this week with "some options for the possible release of Shcharansky."

Vogel helped arrange the three-man deal that began Sunday. He also played a key role in the 1962 swap of U-2 pilot Francis Gary Powers for Soviet spy Rudolf Abel.

A knowledgeable State Department source cautioned, however, "Any speculation on Shcharansky is very iffy. Vogel has indicated a readiness to talk about it, but he's just a middleman."

"I don't think the Soviets are interested in a trade on Shcharansky now. I don't think they've decided what to do with him yet," said the source, who asked not to be identified.

Shcharansky, a 29-year-old computer programmer who was refused permission to emigrate to Israel, is awaiting trial on charges of belonging to a dissident group that collected military and industrial secrets for the CIA.

The United States has denied that Shcharansky worked for the CIA.

Sunday's release of an Israeli citizen, Miron Marcus, on the Mozambique-Swaziland border was the first of three releases to be completed by April 30. The United States is releasing Robert G. Thompson, a former Air Force intelligence clerk convicted of passing secrets to the Soviets. Vogel will take him to East Germany.

The East Germans, in turn, will release Alan Van Norman of Windom, Minn. Van Norman, a college student, was arrested Feb. 8, 1977, in East Germany while trying to smuggle a German doctor, his wife and son to the West.

There was no official explanation of Mozambique's involvement in the exchange, but authorities noted that country has close ties with East Germany, which has hundreds of technicians and advisers working there.

Marcus, 24, walked across the border Sunday into Swaziland, where his wife awaited him. He had been a prisoner since September 1976, when his light plane made an emergency landing while on a flight from Rhodesia to South Africa.

Discussions about this three-way deal had included unsuccessful talks about freeing Shcharansky and Lawrence

Lunt, a contract employee of the CIA serving a 30-year sentence for espionage in Cuba, participants said.

Lunt's name entered the picture when his Washington lawyer, John Wainwright, read news accounts of a State Department official discussing a possible swap of Thompson.

Public Hearing Slated On Development Plan

One of two public hearings scheduled by the City Council on the proposed three-year Comprehensive Community Development Plan will be held Tuesday, April 25 at 8 p.m. at city hall.

The purpose of the public hearing is to receive citizen input on a proposal to apply for a multi-year comprehensive Small Cities Community Development Grant for 1978-1981.

The city Planning Department has prepared data that will be presented to the public at the hearing as part of the development of the three-year plan.

The comments received at the hearing will help the city identify and designate Neighborhood Strategy Areas and to assign priority to the strategy areas.

The main area that will be affected by the grant program is the West Greenville section bounded generally by the Tar River on the north, Memorial Drive on the west, and Dickinson Avenue and Green Street.

Neighborhoods included in the area are Riverdale, Greenville Heights, Lincoln Park, Cherry View, Higgs, Biltmore, and Village Grove.

Under the comprehensive program, the main thrust involves improvement to low and moderate income neighborhoods. The city, in attempting to take a comprehensive approach to the program, will look at all phases of neighborhood improvement since eligible activities are similar to those in the Community Development program.

The City is planning to phase in the three-year program with the phase down of the current CD effort.

The city has also scheduled a public hearing on the proposed three-year program for May 11 at city hall.

Climbers Conquered Vertical Challenge Of Angels Landing

By HILL BEECHAM
Associated Press Writer
ZION NATIONAL PARK, Utah (AP) — Their hands bloody, their bodies exhausted, mountain climbers George Willig and Steve Matous celebrated their conquest of Angels Landing with meals to order.

Safely down from the almost vertical climb up the 1,500-foot peak in southern Utah, Willig asked for two cheeseburgers and iced tea. Matous dined on chicken and a glass of milk. Then they showered away two days of red sandstone grime.

"Man, I feel great, absolutely great. It was fun and exciting, but it's sure great to be back down," said Willig, 28, who survived a 30-foot fall from a ledge only minutes before reaching the top.

It took Willig and Matous 23 hours to inch up the steep north face of Angels Landing, giving a weekend thrill to millions of Americans watching on television and from the mountain's foot.

It was not the first time a Willig climb was witnessed by a crowd. Last May 26, he scampered up New York's 110-story World Trade Center and gained instant fame.

Willig fell when the rock ledge he was standing on gave way at about 1,350 feet up. He fell straight down, turned head over heels, and was caught by an anchored rope held by Matous.

It appeared Willig struck his head as he was jerked against the cliff face by the sudden stop.

"Just knocked the wind out of me," he said a second or two later. "I'm OK." He resumed climbing within minutes.

About two hours earlier, Willig had slipped but caught himself during a free climb. "I almost bought it," he said.

"Bought the ranch, eh?" replied Matous.

"Man, I almost died," Willig said.

Willig and long-time friend Matous, 23, a professional guide now living in Boulder, Colo., were paid by ABC-TV, which sponsored the climb for its "Wide World of Sports."

Portions of the climb were telecast live — including Willig's dramatic fall — on Saturday and Sunday. The network also extended its Sunday show to televise the two climbers reaching the top.

That raised questions about

ABC's involvement, such as whether the network controlled the schedule so the climbers would reach the top during live coverage.

Matous's brother, Ron, noted that the climbers risked a night climb — they went about 200 feet between 7 p.m. and 1 a.m. Saturday night — because they "thought they were behind schedule."

The nighttime climb was possible because there was a full moon and the climbers wore helmet lamps.

Larry Kamm, who directed the "Wide World of Sports" segments, said before the climb on Friday that the network "in no way, absolutely no way, would ... interfere with their climb. This is a sporting event, a happening. We just record it."

Sunday Saw Tip Cracks Big 2 Accidents Art Theft Case

An estimated $2,675 property damage resulted from two traffic mishaps investigated by Greenville Police, Sunday.

Officers reported heaviest damage resulted from a 9:15 p.m. mishap at the intersection of 11th and Charles Streets involving cars driven by Danny Wayne Qualliotine of 1403 South Wright Rd., and Mary Mulherin Crowe of Charlotte.

Police, who charged Qualliotine with failing to stop for a stop sign, estimated damage at $1,000 to the Qualliotine car and $600 to the Crowe vehicle.

A 5:10 p.m. mishap at the intersection of Bancroft Avenue and Fifth Street involved cars driven by Eula Pearl Howard of Route 1, Greenville, Elvira Harris King of 1491 Fleming St., and Henry Cooper Jr. of Route 4, Greenville.

Cooper was charged with driving under the influence by investigators who set damage at $425 to the Howard car, $375 to the King vehicle and $275 to the Cooper car.

Officers reported that both Mrs. Howard and Mrs. King, as well as a passenger in the Howard car, were injured.

FLORENCE, Italy (AP) — Police say an informant's tip about a barroom boast of a "big theft" cracked one of Italy's most daring art robberies and led to recovery of a Rubens masterpiece and nine other Flemish works stolen from the Pitti Palace museum in Florence.

Police arrested three suspects, Franco Mefiti, 29 and Giovanni Manfredi, 31, the men who allegedly made off with the works via a museum skylight last Friday, and attorney Franco Brogi, 37, accused of masterminding the theft. They were jailed on charges of robbery and conspiracy, authorities said.

Rubens' "Three Graces" and the other paintings were found undamaged early Sunday in the trunk of Brogi's car and were returned to the museum. The works were valued at more than $1 million.

Police said the tipster put them on the trail of the thieves on the day of the robbery after he heard Mefiti boast about a "big theft" at the Pitti Palace. Manfredi was seen with Mefiti, police said.

A search of their apartments turned up undisclosed evidence that let police to the paintings in the car trunk. Authorities said Mefiti and Manfredi confessed Saturday evening, but Brogi denied involvement.

Police said the thieves used a ladder to scale the fortress-like wall of the 15th-century palace. Timing their invasion between rounds by museum guards, the thieves climbed down through a rope-ladder hung through a skylight.

The painting came from the Palatine Wing, where burglar alarms were being installed but were not yet operational. Their choice of the Flemish paintings when other more valuable works were in the museum led authorities to believe they were "filling an order."

The 23-by-14-inch Rubens was the most important work stolen. The painting on wood depicts the nude embrace of the mythological Greek goddesses of pleasure, charm and beauty — Aglaia, Euphrosyne and Thalia.

Only Settle For The Worst

CARSON CITY, Nev. (AP) — Steve Strickland is trying to sell a truck that he says is a "lemon." His sales pitch is, "Why settle for anything less than the worst?"

The truck has lemons and a list of 46 alleged flaws painted on it.

Strickland plans to put the truck up for sale in front of the dealership that sells the vehicle.

He tried the same thing a couple of years ago and the dealer sued. A judge first ruled in favor of the dealer. But the decision was reversed by the state Supreme Court in 1976 on a technicality: the dealer had not posted the necessary security bonds.

Ayden Couple Wed At Rountree

In a candlelight ceremony Sunday afternoon at three o'clock, Miss Janet Denise Pierce became the bride of Robert Lee Humbles Jr. in the Rountree Christian Church. The double ring ceremony was performed by the Rev. Al Davis of Greenville.

Mrs. Shirley Harrington of Greenville presented a program of nuptial music and Mrs. Addie Morris of Greenville sang "Love Is The Key" and "The Wedding Prayer."

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Julian F. Pierce Sr. and Mr. and Mrs. Robert Lee Humbles Sr., all of Ayden.

Given in marriage by her parents and escorted by her father, the bride wore a formal length white organza gown designed with a high neckline encircled with re-embroidered lace. The bodice featured panels of chantilly lace beaded with sequins which extended down the front of the gown. The full bishop sleeves featured cuffs of the sequin chantilly lace. The modified A-line skirt was styled with appliques of the matching lace which also edged the hemline.

She wore a chapel length mantilla edged in the matching lace, held in place by a profile headpiece. The bride carried a cascade of pink roses and baby's breath.

The chancel of the church held two nine branched tree candelabra filled with multicolored spring flowers. Honor pews were marked with white satin bows. A three branch candelabra was used with the couple lighting the center taper symbolizing their union. The couple knelt for the benediction on a white profile prie-dieu.

The matron of honor was Joan Wilson, sister of the bride. She wore a formal length princess style pink polyester knit gown overlaid with a pink floral chiffon cape. She wore a headpiece of white baby's breath and carried a white mum with multicolored streamers.

Maid of honor was Juanita Humbles, sister of the bridegroom. Bridesmaids were Mrs. Judy Smith, sister of the bride, and Mrs. Jannette Harris, sister of the bridegroom. Junior bridesmaid was Miss Renee Wood of Chiquapin. Their gowns and headpieces were styled like that of the honor attendant. They each carried white mums with multicolored streamers.

Miss Karen Harrell of Morehead City was flower girl. She wore a formal length pink polyester knit gown overlaid with a pink floral chiffon pinafore and a headpiece of white baby's breath. She carried a basket of miniature spring flowers with multicolored streamers.

The bridegroom's father was best man and ushers were Sammy Humbles brother of the bridegroom, Robert Harris, brother-in-law of the bridegroom, and Leonard Sawyer of Greenville. Joey Pierce, brother of the bride, was junior usher and Julian Pierce III, nephew of the bride, was ring bearer.

Mrs. Pierce, mother of the bride, wore a formal length blue polyester gown with a high waistline, flared short sleeves and skirt. The bridegroom's mother selected a formal length yellow knit gown designed with an empire waistline and short flared sleeves. They wore white carnation corsages.

Mrs. Jeanette Pierce, sister-in-law of the bride, presided at the guest register.

Mrs. Bernice Cannon of Ayden directed the wedding.

The bride is a senior at Ayden-Grifton High School and is employed part-time at Bissette's, Greenville. The bridegroom is employed with the Greenville Fire Department.

The couple will reside in Ayden after a wedding trip to unannounced points.

Immediately following the ceremony, a reception was held in the church fellowship hall given by the parents of the bride.

MRS. ROBERT LEE HUMBLER JR.

The refreshment table was covered with a white lace cloth over pink and centered with an arrangement of pink and white carnations, snapdragons, white pom poms and baby's breath in a silver candelabra.

After the bridal couple cut the first traditional slice of the four-tiered wedding cake it was served by Mrs. Linda Harrell and Mrs. Margaret Benson poured punch.

An after-rehearsal party was held Saturday in the church fellowship hall given by the parents of the bridegroom.

The refreshment table was covered with a white linen cloth and centered with an arrangement of spring flowers.

Assisting in serving were the mother of the bridegroom, Mrs. Juanita Humbles and Mrs. Jannette Harris, sisters of the bridegroom.

Abby Quotes Shana On The ERA

DEAR ABBY: I read that you were all for the Equal Rights Amendment. Can you tell me why women need it? Use plain language, please. I only went through the 9th grade.

CONFUSED IN ELGIN, ILL.

DEAR CONFUSED: No one explained it better than Shana Alexander, when she debated James J. Kilpatrick two months ago on CBS's "60 Minutes" TV program.

She said: "Under the law today, women are not being treated as equals with men. Examples: Social Security Law: Divorced women don't get a fair share of their husband's earnings—even if they were married 30 years."

Divorce Law: A man can divorce a wife on the grounds of drunkenness and adultery, but in some states, a woman cannot divorce her husband on those grounds.

Property Tax Law: In all 50 states, the husband owns the farm. When he dies, his widow must pay inheritance tax—even if she has to sell the farm. But when the wife dies, he pays no inheritance tax!

Physical Abuse: In most states, a wife can't sue her husband for beating her up.

Negligent Injury: If the wife is injured, her husband can sue for loss of her "services," which includes sex, because under the law, he has a legal right to companionship, sex and domestic services. (It's called "consortium.") A woman has no such right.

Alimony: Most states don't allow it, which isn't so bad in wealthy families. But with poor couples, whose only assets are in the man's earning capacity, the woman comes out of a divorce dead broke!

As things stand now, the law is unfair to both sexes. (The Supreme Court says widows get an automatic property tax exemption; widowers don't).

The Court says pregnancy discrimination is not necessarily sex discrimination. It isn't? When's the last time you saw a pregnant man?

The Equal Rights Amendment would take these inequities out of the law and extend the law's protection to both sexes.

DEAR ABBY: I hope you can straighten out my head. My husband and I are in our late 20s and have been married for four years. Our sex life is excellent. The problem is me. My husband begs me to do a striptease dance for him, but I just can't bring myself to accommodate him.

I know there's nothing wrong with it, and I'm no prude, but I just can't go through with it. I've tried, but at a certain point I get a terrible case of stage fright.

I have a nice figure, and I'm a pretty good dancer, but dancing totally naked embarrasses me.

Striptease dancing turns my husband on. He admits it. He has even taken me to striptease joints with him so I could learn how to do it. Abby, what's wrong with me? STAGE FRIGHT IN ILLINOIS

DEAR STAGE FRIGHT: You're inhibited. You can lose your inhibitions if you really want to, but don't feel guilty if you prefer to leave a little something to his imagination.

CONFIDENTIAL TO "SOS IN MACON, GA.": I don't buy that saying, "As you have made your bed, so must you lie in it."

If you discover that the bed you made is giving you a backache, get out of it and make it over. People who sleep on the same mental lumps night after night and do nothing about it but complain, have only themselves to blame.

Are your problems too heavy to handle alone? Let Abby help you. For a personal, unpublished reply, write: Abby: Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069. Enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Williams-Morse Vows Said In Richmond

RICHMOND, Va. — The marriage of Mrs. Frances Elks Morse to Marvin De Loatch Williams was solemnized Saturday at 5 p.m. in the St. John's United Church of Christ here.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Clarence Hoyt Elks of Grimesland, and the late Mr. Elks. The bridegroom is the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. William Riley Williams of Tarboro.

Dr. Richard A. Cheek, pastor, conducted the ceremony. A program of wedding music was presented by Jerry Field, organist, and Ms. Denise Myers, soloist.

The communion table was centered with a brass cross flanked by single candleholders and brass vases filled with greenery, white chrysanthemums and pom poms. In the chancel of the church was a prie-dieu where the couple knelt for the benediction. Pews were marked with satin bows.

Given in marriage by her son, John A. Morse III, the bride wore an ivory gown of polyester knit with a Princess Anne neckline. A border of scrolled Venise lace enhanced the neckline and the flared cuffs of the long fitted sleeves. The empire waist silhouetted a full skirt that extended into an attached chapel train.

Her fingertip ivory bouffant illusion veil, trimmed in Venise lace, was attached to a cap of matching lace and seed pearls.

She carried a nosegay of silk ivory roses, apricot and blue daisies accented with lace and streamers. Her only ornament that extended into an attached chapel train.

Mrs. Dwight Wayne Parnell, daughter of the bride, was the honor attendant. She wore a two-piece apricot polyester chiffon and knit dress with a chiffon cape. The bodice was trimmed with matching lace and the skirt was pleated. She carried a nosegay of silk yellow, apricot and blue daisies with apricot streamers. She wore an apricot hair braid picture hat with a maline band and streamers, fastened in back with a sheer chiffon rose.

The mother of the bride wore a Nile green gown. Mrs. Jesse Daniels, sister of the bridegroom, wore an apricot chiffon gown and each were given white carnation corsages.

Dwight Wayne Parnell, son-in-law of the bride, was best man and the usher was Michael Hoyt Morse, son of the bride.

Immediately following the ceremony, the couples' Sunday School class entertained at a reception in the church parlor.

After a wedding trip, the couple will live in Chester, Va.

Europe Turned To Hard Work

Gov. Jim Hunt, returning from his trade mission to Europe, reported finding something there that we possibly need to recapture.

"I found a willingness to work hard that has begun to fade here," the governor said on his return.

"It's high time we realize many of the countries of Europe have stronger economies than we do," he continued. "They're simply doing a better job than we, the country that thinks it's the best in the world."

He said the capacity for hard work and competition he found is something "we need to emulate."

As with all generalizations, the governor's about Europe can be misleading. Britain and Italy have economic problems, for instance, and the communist have made inroads in Italy and France. Nevertheless the lesson is not lost. More than anything today our country needs old fashion pride in workmanship.

It doesn't take anymore effort on the part of an auto plant worker to build a car better and be proud of it, for instance. And that is what will be necessary if our products are going to compete with those of other nations where pride in workmanship is still treasured.

The payoff for the worker is going to be a better way of life because the products he produces will sell better. Perhaps equally important will be a lot of self satisfaction in a job well done, and, after all accomplishment is an important part of the good life.

An Added Touch In Shakespearean Play

Last week the ECU Playhouse presented a production of "A Midsummer Night's Dream."

Other than the fact that our community is fortunate to have such high quality productions here, there was nothing unusual about that.

What was unique was that two performances included interpretations for the deaf. Students from the Eastern North Carolina School for the Deaf in Wilson were in attendance.

Providing this addition to the production made the performance much more enjoyable and understandable to the deaf. It was a nice touch.

Children's Bills Waiting

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — With a deadline only four months away, the General Assembly in May will have to take action on several important measures affecting children with special needs in North Carolina.

September 1, 1978, is the effective date of the state law requiring that every child in the state between the ages of five and 18 must receive a free, appropriate public education.

That Equal Educational Opportunities Act is popularly called the "Crech Bill" for its principal sponsor, State Rep. Wm. A. Crech, D-Wake.

The implications are broad: regardless of physical, mental or emotional problems, and whether the child is at home or in some public institution such as a training school, mental retardation center or other facility, the state must provide an appropriate education.

In many cases, such a procedure will cost far more than the normal educational costs in public schools.

therapy, or aid programs in separate sessions. Teachers who must devote more time and attention to the special children argue that they should have overall class sizes reduced. Some educators also argue that spending so many millions for children with special needs will cut into general funding of public education where other needs still exist.

NOBLITT

The Department of Human Resources is seeking $16.7 million, with over half of that for use in educational programs within institutions such as retardation centers, psychiatric hospitals, schools for the deaf, or blind, and the juvenile training schools.

Not Proper

In recent comments in "The Child Advocate," published periodically by an organization of parents and professionals for handicapped children, the Department of Human Resources was criticized for earmarking so much money for appropriate educational programs within institutions, when such "should be provided from funds already allocated to the residential centers."

Such a course works against the philosophy of seeking more appropriate education in the public schools and in the communities, some say.

"While it is true that children in institutions have a right to a quality education, it must be noted that ... the Dept. of Human Resources has neglected to enact a policy consistent with serving children in the least restrictive, nor most normal, environment possible ..."

The Advocate pointed out.

The General Assembly is expected to find about $200 million in new funds to meet supplemental budget requests. Pay raises for state employees and teachers will place the heaviest demand on that amount, with each percentage point of increase costing some $17 million. State employees are asking for a 10 per cent hike.

Alert: The End Is Near

By ART BUCHWALD

WASHINGTON — The latest news from outer space is that our universe has just 90 billion years of existence, and then it will explode in a great big bang. This bleak prediction has been made by scientists who have been studying where the universe is and where it's going.

Their prediction is that for the next 40 billion years the universe will expand. Then it will begin to shrink back until the stars, planets, dust and black holes will be so close they'll go BANG, and the ball game will be over.

This is the kind of information I like to drop at a cocktail. It can make almost everyone's evening. But more than that, you find out how people really react under pressure.

Templeton, a British chap with the World Bank, was eating an ear of corn when I told him the news.

He said, "I thought I read in a Ralph Nader newsletter that the earth would expand for 50 billion years and then contract for 40 billion." "He got it wrong," I said.

Templeton said, "Nader's getting terribly sloppy with his facts. I think his staff is over-expanded. That 10 billion years could change everything down at the bank."

"How's that?"

"Well, we certainly would not want to make long-term loans if the universe is going to explode before the Third World countries have a chance to pay us back."

Farley, a stockbroker, was chewing a chicken leg. "If you want my opinion," he said, "I'd buy soybean futures for the next 40 billion years and then get out. You don't want to be stuck with a lot of contracts if the whole thing is going to blow up on you."

"Where would you put the profits of your soybean futures?" I asked.

"Tax-free municipal bonds."

They're no good when the universe is expanding, but it's a nice safe investment when everything starts shrinking.

Simpson, who was drinking a beer, turned to his wife, "You see, I told you it's not worth cutting the lawn," he said. "Every weekend you have me out there mowing the stuff and in 90 billion years it will all be dust."

Cynthia Simpson said, "You'll always find some excuse not to do yardwork. Suppose the scientists are wrong and the world is not going to end with a bang. All the

THE INSIDE REPORT

Beyond Camp David Days

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — No sooner had President Carter returned from his administration's weekend retreat at Camp David than he called for the American people to demand that Congress enact "tax reform," thereby casting doubt on how much he has learned during 15 months of disillusionment and disappointment.

Mr. Carter had arrived in Washington with the firmly entrenched notion that he could prosper politically, as he had as governor of Georgia, by appealing to the people over the heads of elected legislators. The difficulty of applying this tactic nationally has since been demonstrated, particularly when trying to breathe vitality into a commodity so lifeless as tax reform.

The public call for tax reform following hard on the Camp David meetings was no accident. It was discussed there, formally and informally, by senior White House staffers and cabinet members. Nobody dared mention that the summons sending cabinet members to the nation's crossroads to sell Carter programs had been sounded previously with singular lack of success.

The new aspect at Camp David was the President lecturing cabinet members to stop feuding, stop leaking unfavorable information and get behind his programs. Even if Mr. Carter came over tougher in news accounts than in actuality ("More p.r. puffery, I'm afraid," says one participant) it was needed to break down the image of "the President nobody fears."

The meetings were otherwise taken up by talk about "process" rather than "substance." Although no mechanism for achieving coordination was spelled out, the feeling was conveyed that Vice President Walter F.

straight into a meeting of a citizens' task force for tax reform. Emerging from it, he declared: "If the American people will let their voices be heard to equal those of the special interests, then the Congress will hear, and tax reform will finally go into effect in our country."

Experienced politicians, including some in the cabinet, feel this quixotic approach is at the heart of the President's problem. Actually, tax reform lacks a constituency, provokes the business community and is not an overriding concern of either pressure groups or ordinary citizens. As the President spoke Monday, the House Ways and Means Committee methodically set about shredding his reforms.

But the President's Georgia advisers, including Kirbo, are convinced Mr. Carter's message is just not getting through to the nation, partly because of the Washington press corps. That view is largely shared by Mondale, an increasingly influential figure.

So the Carter inner circle argues support can be built for tax reform and other programs as it was for the Panama Canal treaty.

Other Editors Say Think Small

(Jacksonville Daily News)

The General Accounting Office (GAO) took a rap at the Department of Defense and other agencies of the federal government recently for wasting precious metals.

Citing the defense agency as the prime culprit, GAO says they could have recovered $11.6 million last year with a recovery program for silver and gold. Scrap containing these metals from contact points, circuit boards, connectors and plated pins, was thrown into huge piles and sold for "pennies" a pound.

The precious metals were virtually given away despite findings of recent pilot programs by the Defense Department Disposal Service which had found that recovery was not only feasible but highly profitable.

A report cited a recovery project at Hill Air Force Base, Ogden, Utah, in which electronic scrap returned $46,000 in gold and silver with a recovery cost of $11,600. A net of over $34,000 was realized. Had this been sold as ordinary scrap it would have brought about $800.

The GAO also found that 26 federal agencies were not making an effort to recover all the silver from photographic processes. The loss in silver was estimated at $4 million for the year.

Compared to the billions spent and wasted by government this seems almost nipping. When amounts in billions are batted around with no one really knowing what a billion really is, a few millions here and there may fail to impress anyone in the bureaucracy.

The GAO is about the only watchdog in government which involves itself in trying to hold our profligate government down in wasteful spending. In most cases it can only recommend, so it has not been an effective instrument to curtail waste.

The Congress is supposed to hold the purse strings for the taxpayers but it tossed the strings away long ago and the purse has been empty for some time. All we really have left is mounting debt.

Millions of dollars not saved may be small potatoes to our overgrown federal establishment, but until government officials begin to think small enough to save in thousands and even hundreds or less, no relief for the taxpayers can be had.

Public Forum

Letters submitted for Public Forum must be limited to 300 words.

To the editor:

I want to share something I read recently:

"A likeable old fellow we know seems to be getting a bit crotchety as he grows older. The other day somebody asked him what had happened to the cheery disposition he once had, and he answered, 'I have always tried to see the good in everybody, but lately my eyes ain't been what they used to be.'"

One way you can tell whether you are getting old before your time is to ask yourself whether you are more critical of other people than you once were; whether your "eyes" that used to spot the good in others, "ain't what they used to be."

If you would keep your reactions young, nip in the bud any developing tendency to find fault; find good! This will keep you lithe emotionally and it will keep you being agreeable — the kind of person people can keep on liking. Not only can it keep you popular with your associates, it can keep you popular with yourself.

This is artistry in living. Like any other art, it requires continuous practice — especially as you grow older. If neglected, arthritis of the personality sets in."

This sounds like pretty good advice... I'm going to work on it. How about you?

UNDERSTANDING HEART

As Solomon prepared himself to ascend the throne, God appeared to him in a dream by night and said, "Ask what I shall give thee." And Solomon said ... "Give, therefore, thy servant an understanding heart..."

It is interesting that Solomon did not ask for an understanding mind. As he confronted the grave responsibilities of kingship, he wanted not only to be able to handle the political and military problems which his position had thrust upon him. Most of all he wanted a heart that would enable him to understand and sympathize with people. His greatest responsibility was to serve persons.

It would be highly beneficial if our world leaders today followed the example of Solomon. In the past, men in this position have all too often cultivated only the techniques which would increase their wealth and power. They have asked for minds rather than hearts, and the people of the world have suffered as a result.

Secretaries Mind The Store

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — This is National Secretaries Week, all week long, and don't you forget it. Jack Lemmon, particularly after the assessment delivered by your secretary, Connie McCauley.

Miss McCauley, president of the National Secretaries Association (International), believes her boss is "absolutely super," a "marvelously gifted person" and a "fine man to work for."

She commented as the association's board met in Thousand Oaks, a long commute from Hollywood and Jalem Productions, where she minds the store while Lemmon appears in a new play, "Tribute," in Boston.

A large responsibility

perhaps, but in keeping with the association's definition of a secretary — as distinguished from a stenographer, typist, clerk, receptionist or the like — to wit:

"An executive assistant who possesses a mastery of office skills, demonstrates the ability to assume responsibility without direct supervision, exercises initiative and judgment, and makes decisions within the scope of assigned authority."

About 3 million Americans call themselves secretaries, but the association believes the number includes a lot of presumptuous aspirants who don't come near to fitting the definition.

To be an association member, a person must have served two consecutive years as a secretary. The association has 38,000 members in the United States, Canada and Puerto Rico, and an untabulated number abroad.

Their duties vary. "By its nature, secretarial work is highly diversified and rarely are any two jobs exactly alike," Miss McCauley said.

The prototype description begins: "A secretary relieves executive of various administrative details; coordinates and maintains effective office procedures and efficient work flows."

The secretary also "implements policies and procedures set by employer; establishes and maintains harmonious working relationships with superiors, co-workers, subordinates, customers or clients..."

Just the beginning, but one quickly notes the absence of personal pronouns. Equality's the reason; there are many male secretaries, number unknown, and the association wants them. It has only 29.

The reason for lack of male membership isn't precisely known, but one professional suggested men might prefer the title "executive assistant," even though the work might not differ.

"It isn't unusual for secretaries to handle junior or middle management chores," said Miss McCauley. A modest claim. It has been observed elsewhere that some handle the work of vice presidents.

Demo Leadership Hopes Scars Fade After Primary

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Top North Carolina Democratic leaders, for the most part, say they are unconcerned by the turn last week to personal attacks in the eight-man race for the U.S. Senate nomination, that it is primary politics as usual.

But privately there is at least a little worry that damage done now may not heal without a scar, and party leaders are hoping to soothe some of the bitterness this week.

State Democratic Party Chairman Betty McCain, for one, said she planned to bring it up at a meeting of representatives of each campaign today at party headquarters here.

The meeting isn't called solely for that purpose, and Mrs. McCain says she thinks the campaign has been fairly peaceful compared to some past years. Still, the party chairman said she planned to make "a little plea for unity and for a little less bloodletting."

"I want them to depart very good Democrats and very good friends," she said. "I don't like for them to pick on anybody."

There has been a lot of picking, however, and most of it has been on Luther Hodges Jr.

It has been something of a surprise to party insiders that the candidate to begin the serious sniping at Hodges was state Sen. McNeill Smith of Greensboro. Smith, who has a long record for civil rights, consumer legislation and individual liberties, is highly respected by most who know him, including those who disagree with his politics.

"Mac is such a fine fellow, I hate to see this," one party veteran said privately. Smith accused Hodges of "waffling" on the issues last week and resurrected on old newspaper clipping in which Hodges reportedly said he and Republican incumbent Jesse Helms weren't too far apart. Hodges has replied that his remark was taken out of context, and was confined to a narrow question of government bureaucracy stifling business.

There have been other exchanges when tempers flared. At a Young Democrats forum in Raleigh, Smith challenged Hodges on the number of blacks at NCNB when he was chairman. Hodges countered with a question about the number of blacks in Smith's law firm.

And at a meeting last week with an influential black group, the Raleigh-Wake Citizens Association, Smith asked the moderator if he could ask Hodges a question after Hodges answered a member's question about health care.

The moderator politely refused, and there followed a quiet but intent exchange between the two, seated next to each other.

"It's not all that personal," Smith says of his play. "It's geared to show the strategy of the Democrats picking the candidate that presents the clearest choice (to Helms)."

Insurance Commissioner and candidate John Ingram jumped into the fray last week with a blast at "the banker candidate," accusing Hodges of "a mud-slinging attack" on Ingram's wife Gini.

He was referring to a comment by Hodges earlier, noting that of the four leading candidates only Ingram had not made public the personal finances of his wife as well as himself.

In fairness, it must be noted that Hodges was replying to a question, and he qualified it by stressing that he was not trying to raise the issue and that he was making no charges.

And the fact remains that Ingram, alone among the four, has not listed his wife's finances, though he talks at length about his opponent's "special interests." If there are no holdings in his wife's name, he hasn't said that either.

Other blasts have been leveled by Joe Felmet and David McKnight at Hodges at various forums attended by most candidates. Conspicuously removed from it all has been Lawrence Davis. His campaign manager, Rann Carpenter, said that is because of a fundamental decision Davis made last September to avoid a negative campaign.

"Nothing that has happened has caused us to deviate from that plan," Carpenter said.

It is perhaps also a recognition that the attacks may put Hodges in a better light, particularly in view of his effort to remain above them. And it only reinforces the view that Hodges is the frontrunner, an image that can have a snow-balling effect in elections.

The real question about the latest turn is will its effect by lasting. Gov. Jim Hunt, as the party's leader, thinks not.

"You've got to understand this is the Democratic Party," he said last week. "We thrive on adversity. We thrive on strong primaries. "It's sort of like a conditioning exercise; the

"Do you think it's the Russians?"

"They would have the most to gain if the universe goes BANG!"

"But won't they go up in smoke, too?"

"The Russians don't think that way. If they know that we know when the explosion will occur, they might try to move up their space program to get their people out of the way until the gasses have cooled off. Then they would take over everything."

"Including the Panama Canal?" someone asked.

"Especially the Panama Canal."

It was a sobering thought and people stopped eating. Later on as I walked near some bushes I heard Wilson talking to someone. "Look, if we've only got 90 billion years left let's do something about it."

"But suppose Harry finds out?" a frightened woman's voice said.

"You love me, you don't love Harry. Time is of the essence. Let's take our happiness while we can. This proves what George Allen, the former coach of the Washington Redskins, always said."

"What's that my beloved?"

"There is no tomorrow."

Cloudiness was expected to increase during the day, posing the threat of rain tonight through Tuesday. A cooling trend also will be setting in over the state Tuesday.

Temperatures reached normal levels around the state Sunday — mostly in the 70s — and low readings this morning mostly were in the 50s. Sun-

Ironically, many officials (including some at the weekend treat) regard management of the canal treaty as a classically botched job that nearly transformed triumph into defeat. Nobody suggested this at Camp David.

Nor did anybody suggest that Mr. Carter himself might be the real source of trouble, a suspicion widely held within his own administration. Whereas Oliver Wendell Holmes referred to Franklin D. Roosevelt as "a second-class intellect but first-class temperament," some Carter officials think the description might well be reversed in the President's case.

Nobody talks that way to a President's face, but silent doubts were not erased at Camp David. Although hope of a better coordinated administration was generated there, worries about Mr. Carter's perspective remain, boiled down to this question: when economic, political and moral danger threatens the West, does he truly intend to mobilize his administration in behalf of doomed and dubious procedural tax changes?

Thus in March, after the Senate had ratified the first of the two treaties, the survey showed 55 percent opposition, 35 percent approval.

Carter and Powell are comparing public reaction to the original treaty terms with public assessment of the amended versions.

Can they argue validly that the administration succeeded in sharpening public opinion in behalf of the treaties? Or would it be more accurate to say that the administration accepted, somewhat reluctantly, the amendments and reservations needed to get the pact approved.

The answer would seem to be that the case of the canal treaties is more an argument for compromise than for "people power." It's not clear that compromise is exactly what they have in mind on taxes and civil service, priority Carter goals for 1978.

Scholastic Decline Spurred Competency Movement

By PATRICIA MCCORMACK
UPI Education Editor

The most explosive issue on the education scene today is the competency movement.

It calls for testing in certain grades before boys and girls can be put in a higher grade — ending the practice of social (automatic) promotion in those school districts or states where no such a testing rule is in effect.

In some states, the movement mandates that youths must take a test before being eligible for a diploma. The test, in its simplest form is structured to find out if this student who spent 12 years in the most expensive schooling in the nation's history can read, write, add, subtract, divide — survival skills in today's world.

The movement springs from dissatisfaction with what's happening in the nation's schools. Quite a few don't learn the survival skills but they get a high school diploma anyway.

The failing shows up in all kinds of school systems nationwide — city, suburban, rural.

The competency movement is taking root in every state as angry parents, legislators and taxpayers demand that schools do a better job in teaching the basics: reading, writing, arithmetic. The testing at various grades will help identify students badly in need of extra help.

President Carter, in his 1978 education message to Congress, focused attention on the national need for a return to the basics. The President's concern added muscle to the movement.

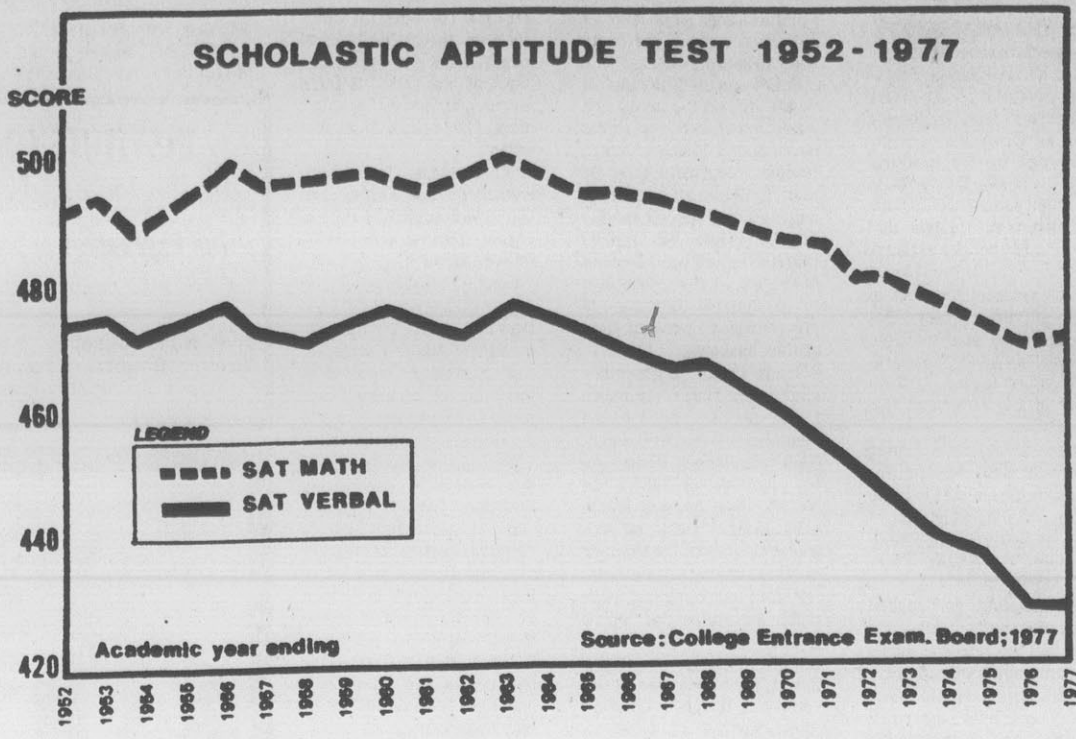

The competency movement also gains strength from concern over a 10-year decline in scores on college entrance tests. Critics of education look on the decline as an early warning that the schools are failing many youths.

The most obvious reason for survival skills in reading, writing and arithmetic is, of course, being equipped for a job.

But there are other reasons. To wit:

— A person who can't read the instructions on a fire extinguisher may fail to put out a little fire, lose his life and contribute to the loss of other lives.

— A person who can't

understand the printing on a credit agreement may find himself pauperized by unreasonable interest.

— A mother who can't read and comprehend the instructions on the infant formula container may overfeed or underfeed the baby. If she can't read the antidote instructions on a can of drain cleaner after her toddler ingests some of the poison, her child most likely will die.

— A Navy recruit who can't read well is liable to make mistakes that can cost a lot of money and take a lot of lives.

Vice Admiral J. D. Watkins, chief of Naval Personnel, recently drew attention to the problem in a speech before the San Diego, Calif., Chamber of Commerce.

"Recently on one of our ships, an engineman was rebuilding a diesel engine as part of a routine maintenance schedule. He could not read well.

"So he went about accomplishing the process by looking at the pictures in a technical manual. When he tried to install the cylinder liners, there was no picture.

"So he installed them the way he thought they should be. The result was that he installed them upside down. It cost $250,000 to repair the engine.

"A well meaning individual who cannot read can cause unnecessary and unwanted problems, to say nothing of the danger to his life and the life of his shipmates."

Watkins is concerned that declining trends in reading and other basic skills will interfere with the United States Navy's assigned mission and could short circuit the missions of other branches, as well.

"We are finding more and more of even our high school graduates who cannot read adequately. The pool of truly qualified young men and women shrinks to an alarmingly low level," he said.

College students also are floundering in the reading, spelling and arithmetic gap. It's not happening at the tougher schools where nearly perfect SAT — Scholastic Aptitude Test — scores are required for entry.

But it's a common problem at the schools with less stringent entrance requirements.

A sign of the problem on campus: a major publisher of college text books is cutting back on the reading level of new editions and new books. The books are being written to ninth and tenth grade reading levels!

Another sign of the problem on campus: remedial courses in reading, writing and math.

The problem is more acute for high school graduates who don't go on to college. If the very poor readers, writers and dunces at arithmetic aren't helped as they pass through the public schools, the nation's pool of literary cripples will grow. An estimated 22 percent of the adult population is so handicapped today.

Not everyone greets the competency movement cheerfully. Most teachers' organizations fear the tests will unjustifiably label some teachers as deficient.

Teachers, speaking through their organizations, say the purpose of competency tests should be simply to identify children who need remedial work.

Critics of education say social promotion is probably how the nation got into this strange situation: high school graduates who are functionally illiterate.

A high school diploma, say the critics, should stand for something more than recognition of attendance.

There is not agreement among the states, school districts or educators, generally about the modus operandi for minimal competency testing.

Some favor setting a level of minimum competency in reading, math, and language skills at a particular grade level — say at grade 8 or grade 9.

Others lean to the direction of survival skills demonstrating ability to deal with application forms, driver's licenses, bank statements, and similar items.

And there are hybrids — systems combining both approaches.

In Florida newspaper readers got involved in the competency movement when 37 percent of high school juniors flunked the state's "functional literacy" test last October. The test was for eighth grade level performance.

Many parents and some legislators put up a cry: the test is too hard, the test is unfair.

Was it? The Miami Herald undertook to answer the question in a way unique in the annals of journalism. A similar but not identical test was prepared by the Dade County Schools curriculum office in cooperation with the Herald.

The "simulated literacy test" was run in a Friday edition of the paper. It started on page 1 and took up nearly 5 inside pages.

"Can you pass a test many kids failed?" asked the headline. Readers tried.

By state law, students get three chances to pass the Florida test. If they don't pass it before graduation they will be denied a diploma.

Since the many failures in the state's "functional literacy" test, Florida has begun a massive remedial program to help students pass the next time, putting them in line for a diploma.

The state will distribute $10 million to fund remedial tutoring this spring and summer. The legislature also has promised $26.5 million for remedial education next year.

The program in Florida, as elsewhere, is not without controversy.

The Miami National Association for The Advancement of Colored People, has threatened to file a discrimination suit against the state because of the large percentage of blacks who failed.

"Minimal competency testing for high school graduation and grade-to-grade promotion continues to be one of the most explosive issues on the educational scene today," Russell B. Vlaanderen, Director of Research at the Education Commission of the States, said.

The Commission, based in Denver and funded by the United States Office of Education, is composed of the hierarchy of the state departments and boards of education.

"Probably no concept in recent years has received such widespread attention, either legislatively or by state boards of education," he said.

Since April of 1976, Vlaanderen's office has issued seven updates in an attempt to keep the states in touch with latest developments.

By his count, today 11 states have enacted legislation; 20 state boards have adopted regulations; activity is underway in 19 other states at the state or local level.

The debate has reached the federal level with proponents and opponents of nationwide standards testifying before congress.

Rep. Ronald M. Mottl, D. of Ohio, has introduced three bills that would impose national standards in the absence of state standards.

His most recent bill calls for a National Commission on Basic Education and would require states to give proficiency examinations in reading, writing and mathematics to students in grades 6, 8, 10 and 12.

It asks for remedial programs for students failing as they go through the various "test gates."

"Education, U.S.A.," an important newsletter, recently reported on some of the birth pangs in the competency movement.

Educators in Virginia, for example, urged a delay or amendments to the state's competency law which requires testing for grade-to-grade promotion. The policy, they said, threatened to reinstitute segregation.

In New York, the Board of Regents delayed the first version of a state competency test. Questions were considered too easy. Among the mind benders were these:

— How many pennies in $4.00?

— What time is it when the clock reads 1:35?

Mary Berry, the nation's Assistant Secretary for Education, has recommended that her office and the National Institute of Education develop a voluntary standardized national basic skills competency test.

This would measure reading, writing and arithmetic at various grade levels. She made the recommendation before the Senate Education Subcommittee.

School administrators describe the competency movement as either "a fundamentally sound trend in education" or "a temporary imposition on the classroom."

At the annual convention of the American Association of School Administrators, both views were evident.

An optimist predicted the movement would dry up in 10 years.

At the Harvard Center for Law and Education, meanwhile, questions center on the legality of competency movements. One of the tougher questions: Will eliminating social promotion bring back segregation?

Opposition also has come from the National Council of Teachers of English, the National Education Association, the National Council of Teachers of Mathematics, among others.

The fears are multiple and include:

— A possibility that the minimum requirements will become the maximum standards. If so, the levels of proficiency will be set so low they will become worthless.

However, a baseline below which relatively few students would fail yet still allow students to acquire enough skills to function as citizens, is preferable to the status quo.

Who will determine what exactly constitutes a minimum level of competency. How much should a student master in relation to his ability? What constitutes functional literacy? How many competencies are enough? These are all questions the educators designing the standards must answer.

— A concern that by imposing an arbitrary cut off too many youngsters will fail. And the poor and the minorities, educators say, will be most directly affected.

The American Association of School Administrators officially takes a cautious view.

Its resolution on the subject at its recent convention, made these points:

— Programs for minimal competencies and basic skills should recognize individual differences in students, should include a variety of methods of assessing students, and should not set single standards.

— Programs should "reflect concern for student needs" beyond minimal competency and consider the goals of students beyond high school.

Crash Of Aircraft Claims Nine Lives

By CHARLES A. ROBINSON
Associated Press Writer
ARLINGTON, Ind. (AP) — Authorities today began sifting through the debris of a twin-engine plane that crashed and exploded in flames 25 miles south-east of Indianapolis, killing nine persons, including seven top U.S. Auto Club officials and a member of USAC's medical staff.

USAC confirmed that the victims included Frank DeRoy, long-time chairman of the USAC technical committee, and Ray Marquette, USAC vice president in charge of public affairs.

The other victims were identified as:
—Shim Malone, head of USAC's midget car division and chief starter at many races throughout the country.
—Stan Worley, USAC registrar.

—Don Peabody, head of the USAC sprint car division.
—Judy Phillips, artist and typist who helped direct the publication of USAC's newsletter.

—Russ Teegarden, assistant USAC technical chairman.
—Dr. Bruce White, a member of USAC's medical staff.

—Don Mullendore, pilot of the plane.
Rush County Coroner John Todd said the bodies of the victims would be taken to his funeral home in Rushville, the county seat. The USAC officials were returning to Indianapolis from Sunday's race at Trenton, N.J.

The aircraft went down in a 30-acre cornfield after passing near the farmhouse of Gene Gardner, about one-half mile east of the crash site. The plane crashed Sunday night, shortly before 10 p.m. EST.

"I knew the plane was in trouble," said Gardner, a World War II Air Force veteran. "The engines were wide open like it was in a power dive."
"It was really screaming. There was a large thud and then a boom," he added. "When we looked out, there was fireball."
Gardner said he telephoned the Rush County sheriff's office, then he and his 19-year-old son, J.B., rushed to the scene, where the plane's impact left a crater 5-8 feet deep and at least 10 feet in diameter.

Recovery efforts were hampered by muddiness in the freshly plowed field. Vehicles, including those with four-wheel drive, were not able to get nearer the site than one-quarter

Dissident Russian Says America Is 'Startling'

By GERALD NADLER
NEW YORK (UPI) — Soviet war hero-turned dissident Gen. Pyotr Grigorenko, stripped of his citizenship while visiting America, paints a grim picture of his homeland as a nation of shortages and regulations.

"We plan and we plan but in America there is no plan but a mass of goods," said the 70-year-old former Red Army major general. "Russia, with its plan, is a nation of shortages."

"Your roads and buildings are things of wonder. Russia virtually has no roads in comparison."

"In construction, the Soviet Union is not 10 years behind, not a hundred years behind, but an epoch behind," Grigorenko said in an interview.

"I have stood for hours admiring American bridges and the skyscrapers."

While here on a six-month visa to visit his son, Andrei, 33, and undergo a prostate gland operation, Grigorenko was stripped of his citizenship "for behavior damaging the prestige of the Soviet Union."

He was granted asylum in the United States a few days ago.

Surrounded by his wife, Zinaida, 68, and two sons, Oleg, 44, and Andrei, 33, an electrical engineer and also a former dissident, he warned of American complacency in the Soviet civil rights struggle, adding that American foreign policy is tricked by "Soviet duplicity."

"The more they (the Soviets) lie, the more they are believed," Grigorenko said.

He said the Soviet Union wants Americans to believe the human rights movement in Russia is dead, and "some people say so, playing into the Soviets' hands but the movement is growing all the time."

"In Russia not a day went by without 10 to 20 and sometime 50 persons coming to me for advice on human rights."

He said if he had thought the Soviets would strip him of his citizenship, he would not have come to the United States. The Soviet action, he said, violated international law.

"It was vile," he added.

Despite his training in engineering and cybernetics which he taught at the Soviet Pentagon — Frunze Academy — Grigorenko said he found America startling.

"The key," he said, "is organization — of trade, industry, road and building construction."

"Here the stores are full, and I see no plan," Grigorenko said, contrasting it to the Soviet system where the entire economy is planned and regulated by the five-year plans.

"In Washington, I went to Congress," said Grigorenko. "I listened, I watched. I did not understand (the language).

"But if I were to ask to attend a session of the Supreme Soviet (the nominal parliament), I would be looked upon as if I were mad."
"And writing a congressman who will write back!" Grigorenko said shaking his head in disbelief.

ECU Road Troubles Continue At UNC-W

WILMINGTON — The Dr. Jekyll/Mr. Hyde play of East Carolina's baseball team continued yesterday as the Pirates dropped both games of a doubleheader against UNC-Wilmington.

The Seahawks scored first in the game with a pair of runs in the opening inning, but the Pirates took the lead in the fourth with three scores. They added a run in the top of the fifth, but Wilmington scored four runs in the bottom of the frame and added one more in the sixth.

started for the Seahawks with a leadoff single in the first. Richard King followed with a base hit and both runners moved up on Bubba Baldwin's sacrifice. Herbie Dawkins reached on an error by Bobby Supel to load the bases and Richard Lancaster knocked in Peoples with a single. Larry Livingston slapped a sacrifice fly to right to plate King.

courtesy runner Chip Giannettino moved up on an infield out. He came home when Jerry Caraway reached on an error.

with two out in the ninth for the win. East Carolina scored its first run in the opening inning. Eddie Gates walked and Billy Best singled. Paradosi moved them up with a sacrifice and Gates scored on Davis' infield out.

Davis doubled to plate Gates and Paradosi came in on Styons' fielder's choice. The inning ended when Davis was picked off third on a double steal attempt.

The Seahawks came up with another run in the bottom of the seventh to tie things up and force the extra innings. Peoples reached on an error by Supel and moved up on Greene's sacrifice. With two out, Dawkins singled him in.

Player Pulls Another Comeback Win

HOUSTON (AP) — One of Gary Player's standard comments, almost a code with the South African globe-trotter, is: "Golf is a very humbling, very strange game."

I've done for the past 20 years." Player came from 7 shots off the pace in the last rounds of the Masters and Tournament of Champions. On Sunday he came from 3 strokes behind — actually he was 5 behind at one time during the final 18 holes — with a solid, no-bogey, 3-under-par 69 that left him a single stroke in front of big Andy Bean.

ningest player in the game this year and says he's playing better now than at any time in his 25-year pro career. The hulking Bean, 6-foot-4 and 210 pounds, struggled to a 73 that left him a single shot back at 271. He had a chance to tie with a 15-foot birdie putt on the 18th, but as Player watched with his 5-year-old daughter in his arms, Bean missed.

Blasts For Bird Gary Player blasts from the sand trap at the 16th green Sunday in the Houston Open. Player went on to birdie the hole and then won the tournament with a 17-under-par 271. It made three tournaments in a row the South African has won. (AP Laserphoto)

Waltrip Wins Third Of Four April Races

MARTINSVILLE, Va. (AP) — Darrell Waltrip still feels he has a chance to salvage a good season on the Grand National stock car circuit, but some of his preseason goals, such as the national championship, may be out of reach now.

position to win almost every race. If I hadn't crashed in the Daytona 500, I still think I had a good chance to win that race.

Alcott Takes LPGA Tourney On Extra Hole

RAYLEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Amy Alcott knew she'd wrapped up the $55,000 American Defender Golf Classic title when Hollis Stacy blew a seven-foot birdie putt on their first hole of a sudden death playoff.

thrive on competition," Alcott said. "Although I would like to have won it easier, I'm glad I was in the playoff, because it adds to my experience."

"I felt I'd worked so hard all week that I didn't want anyone else to win," she added. "There was no way anyone else was going to win even though it was against tremendous competition."

A 22-year-old fourth-year member of the LPGA tour, Alcott had a chance to win the tournament without a playoff, but she suffered her only bogey of the day on the 18th hole to set up the sudden death situation.

Sixers Sweep Knicks In Four Games

The final NCAA basketball statistics are in now, and East Carolina University's Oliver Mack finished the 1977-78 season as the nation's number four scorer.

The junior guard ended the year with a 28.0 average, scoring 699 points in 25 games.

Freeman Williams of Portland State led the country in scoring with a 35.9 average, while Larry Bird of Indiana State was second at 30.0. Purvis Short of Jackson State was third with a 29.5 average.

Of the four, only Bird and Mack will be back next year, and there still may be some question about Bird. The junior state for the Sycamores is being highly sought after by the Indiana Pacers, who have the number one draft choice in the NBA this spring. Should they convince the Hoosier to go hardship, Mack would return as the nation's number one scorer.

If not, there will be an early confrontation between Bird and Mack. The two are slated to meet when East Carolina and Indiana State collide in the first round of the Hatter Classic in December in Florida.

Should be quite a drawing card for the event.

Recruiting

East Carolina's basketball recruiting has resulted in at least three players being signed so far, although only one has been announced as of this writing.

That signee is D.H. Conley star Al Tyson, the tallest senior in the state.

The Pirates were scheduled to make another announcement early this week, possibly today. Then, the other would probably come later in the week.

That would leave only two more scholarships available for use by Larry Gillman, unless someone on the team chooses to leave.

There are continued rumors that one or more players eligible to come back next fall won't. Nine are scheduled to return, along with transfer David Underwood, who becomes eligible at the start of the second semester.

With the three signees, that brings the Pirate total to 13, with the NCAA limit at 15.

Casey at the Bat

Gaylord Perry, Williamston native, went to bat Friday night, and found that strange feeling quite interesting.

Perry, who spent the last seven years in the American League, had only one official trip to the plate prior to Friday night's contest when he pitched the San Diego Padres, his current team to victory.

But he also helped out at the plate, banging out a single and two doubles.

Not bad for a 39-year old, the oldest right-handed pitcher in the National League.

Metro 7 Drops Tech

ATLANTA (AP) — The Metro 7 Conference has officially notified Georgia Tech that the Yellow Jackets have been dropped from its basketball schedule for the upcoming 1978-79 season.

Tech, which recently was admitted to the Atlantic Coast Conference, expected the action.

NEW YORK (AP) — George McGinnis says he feels like the world's largest yoyo, and he doesn't like the way Billy Cunningham is pulling the string.

"I'm in the lineup one minute and out the next," said the 6-foot-8, 235-pound forward of the Philadelphia 76ers, a starter and former National Basketball Association all-star. "If I gotta be in that system, I don't want to be here."

McGinnis' discontent was the lone sour note for the Sixers Sunday as they completed a four-game sweep of the New York Knicks in the playoff quarter-finals with a 112-107 victory. They now await the winner of the Washington-San Antonio series for the Eastern Conference crown.

Washington took a 3-1 lead in that best-of-seven set by beating San Antonio 98-95 and can wrap it up Tuesday night.

In Western Conference action Sunday, the Seattle SuperSonics beat the Portland Trail Blazers 99-94 to take a 2-1 lead in that series, and the Milwaukee Bucks routed the Denver Nuggets 143-112 to trim Denver's series lead to 2-1.

McGinnis played just 21 minutes Sunday, scoring 10 points. While his teammates celebrated in the Sixers' lockerroom, he dressed hurriedly and avoided most questions from newsmen.

New York led 50-37 midway through the second period before the Sixers got rolling, cutting the deficit to 2 by halftime. The second half was close all the way, the Sixers taking the lead to stay 98-97 with 3:13 to play on a free throw by Julius Erving following a technical foul against New York's Lonnie Shelton. Mix hit a bank shot and Doug Collins converted an offensive rebound to give Philadelphia a comfortable 5-point spread.

Monday Leads Dodgers

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

In 1977 Rick Monday suffered through most of the baseball season with a painful back and an injured ego. So he made a new year's resolution for 1978.

"The number one thing was convincing people that my back was all right," he said.

Getting off to the best start of his career has certainly helped. Monday's back is fine — and so is his bat for that matter. The Los Angeles outfielder continued to hit like a man obsessed Sunday, blasting his eighth home run and driving in three runs as the Dodgers beat the Houston Astros 7-3.

While Monday continues to hit homers, Don Sutton continues to give them up. Bob Watson's shot Sunday was the eighth off the Dodger right-hander in just 221-3 innings so far this year.

In other National League action, the Cincinnati Reds edged the San Francisco Giants 2-1 in 10 innings; the Montreal Expos turned back the Philadelphia Phillies 5-2; the Chicago Cubs defeated the New York Mets 3-2 in 12 innings; the San Diego Padres beat the Atlanta Braves 5-4 in 12 innings and the Pittsburgh Pirates walloped the St. Louis Cardinals 14-7 in the first game of a doubleheader before the second was called after six innings by curfew with Pittsburgh in front 5-4.

The Dodgers took a 6-2 lead over the Astros after three innings. Reggie Smith had a scoring fly ball and Ron Cey and Dusty Baker smashed run-scoring singles in the first inning as

The Dodgers jumped to a 3-0 lead against loser Joe Niekro. Watson homered leading off the second. Los Angeles added an unearned run in the second. Bill Russell's double scoring Dave Lopes who was aboard on an error.

Enos Cabell singled home Terry Puhl in the Astros' third inning and then Monday smashed a two-run homer in the bottom of the third. The Dodger slugger later delivered a sacrifice fly in the fifth to boost his National League-leading RBI total to 19.

Reds 2, Giants 1

George Foster's infield hit with the bases loaded in the 10th led Cincinnati over San Francisco in a game played before a Bat Day crowd of 50,510, the biggest in San Francisco Bay Area baseball history. 'Skins Top Plymouth Saturday Night, 12-7

PLYMOUTH — Roanoke's baseball team raised its Eastern Plains Conference record to 5-2 Saturday night with a 12-7 victory over Plymouth.

The Redskins, now in second place in the league, built up a 12-3 lead over the Vikings, but allowed four Plymouth runs to score in the final inning.

Anthony Latham led the way for the winners, going 3-4, while Charlie Smith was 2-4. Brady Pinner hit 3-5 for Plymouth.

Roanoke scored a pair of runs in the first inning. Ken Gurganus and Glenn Cargile walked, while Smith reached safely on a Collins led the Sixers with 24 points. Erving scored 23 and Lloyd Free 17. Bob McAdoo topped New York with 24.

"The turning point was the way we played defense in the second half," said Cunningham. "Our offense wasn't clicking in the first half, but our defense and defensive rebounding got us going."

Bullets 96, Spurs 85

Elvin Hayes' slam dunk with 46 seconds left put Washington in front 96-85. San Antonio worked the ball to NBA scoring champion George Gervin, who drove for the basket only to have his shot blocked by Hayes. Two free throws by Charles Johnson with 11 seconds left tied it.

Bob Dandridge led the Bullets with 24 points and Hayes had 23, while Gervin scored 35 points for the Spurs.

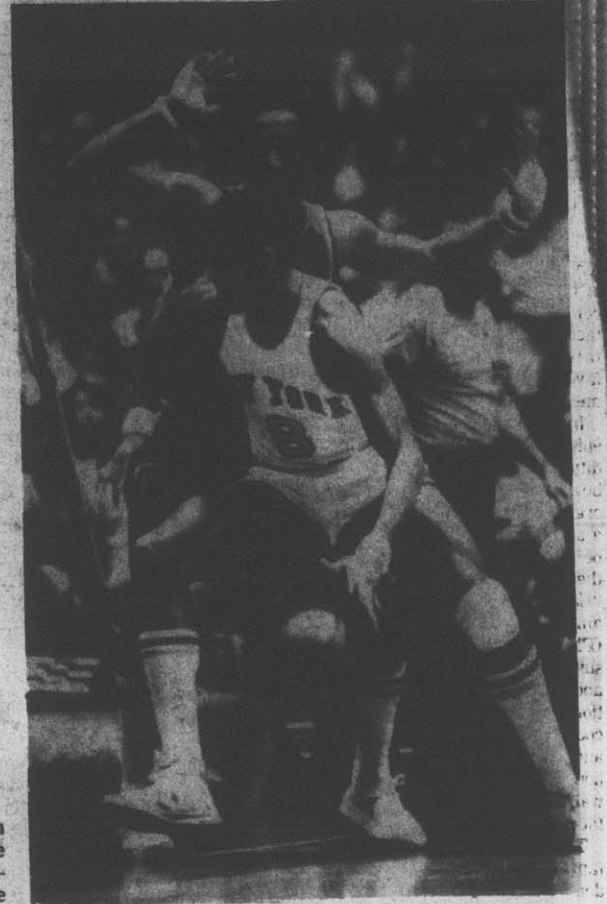

Sonics 90, Blazers 84

Portland, reduced to nine men because of injuries to Bill Walton and Bobby Gross, held Seattle to 22 percent shooting in the first half but could not maintain that defensive pressure after intermission. A 20-8 spurt moved the Sonics in front 64-51 eight minutes into the third period and they led by as many as 19 points in the fourth quarter.

Bucks 143, Nuggets 112

After losing twice at Denver, the Bucks came home and hit 66 percent of their shots, accumulated 46 assists and scored 87 points in the second half. Rookie Marques Johnson led the way with a career-high 35 points, 10 in Milwaukee's 40-point third quarter.

Milwaukee led 75-62 at halftime. Denver came within eight points early in the third quarter, then the Bucks pulled away.

Blue Jays, A's Find Pitching

AL Roundup

By BARRY WILNER
AP Sports Writer

The Toronto Blue Jays and Oakland A's may not have too many thrills this season so they probably should savor the pitching gems turned in for them Sunday.

The Blue Jays, who had the worst record in the majors in finishing last in the American League East in their first season last year, can point proudly to Jesse Jefferson's three-hit, 4-0 blanking of Chicago Sunday. The A's, who were 63-98 and last in the AL West in 1977, are expected to be near the bottom of the division standings again this year, so they might want to remember rookie John Johnson's six-hit, 5-0 whitewash of Seattle.

Royals 6, Orioles 5

Hal McRae drove in three runs with a home run and a two-run double, and a quintet of Kansas City relievers held off the Orioles.

"Every guy I brought in did the job on the first hitter he faced," said Royals Manager Whitey Herzog of relievers Larry Gura, Steve Mingori, Doug Bird, Al Hrabosky and Marty Palfin. "But Marty was the only guy who didn't mess up later."

Brewers 3, Yankees 2

Larry Sorensen pitched eight innings of five-hit ball and Bob McClure retired New Yorkers in order in the ninth. The Brewers are 4-1 against the Yankees this year.

Ben Oglivie's homer and a two-run single by Sal Bando provided the Milwaukee runs while Reggie Jackson clouted his third homer for New York.

Tigers 9-1, Rangers 6-2

Richie Zisk's fourth homer of the year won the nightcap for Texas in the 11th inning, snapping an eight-game losing streak for the Rangers. Bump Wills also homered for Texas in the game as the Tigers had a five-game winning skein broken.

Rusty Staub drove in three runs and scored two and Jason Thompson found three safeties to pace the Tigers' victory in the opener.

Red Sox 6-7, Indians 3-10

The Indians virtually handed the Red Sox the opener by committing five errors, including one by reliever Dennis Kinney which led to the winning run. Carlton Fisk knocked in that run with a double and George Scott followed with a two-run double in the eighth inning.

In the nightcap, Duane Kuiper had four hits and drove in the winning run in the 11th inning. The Indians took a 7-6 lead in the 10th on Paul Dade's RBI double but Boston tied it on Jerry Remy's sacrifice fly in the bottom of the inning.

The FARM SCENE

Sammuel N. Uzzell,
Assistant Agricultural Extension Agent

Plant diseases are an aspect of crop production that are given less emphasis than some other aspects of modern agriculture. In many years, diseases caused by fungi, bacteria, and viruses do not damage crops to the extent that weeds, insects, weather or chemicals do. Plant diseases can, on occasion, severely attack a crop and even cause crop failure if conditions are favorable for disease development.

In order for a disease to reach epidemic proportions, three conditions must be met. There must be a pathogen or disease-causing organism present, there must be a suitable host, and there must be an environment conducive to the development of disease. "Late blight of potato," for example must have the pathogen (Phytophthora infestans), a suitable host—the Irish potato, and proper environmental conditions, namely, high humidity, cool temperatures between 45 and 70 degrees F for several hours, and lastly, some free water standing on the leaf surfaces.

The well-known "Irish potato famine" of the 1840's caused the death of several hundred thousand Irish and the emigration of over a million more people to America. The famine was caused by a few days of cool, wet weather causing the disease to reach epidemic proportions in every potato field throughout Ireland.

This is one of the most graphic examples of how severely a plant disease can affect humans. The problem would have been of a lesser magnitude if Irish farmers had planted more than one crop. But potato was the main part of their diet and they had developed such a dependence upon this one crop that the loss of it entirely brought about tremendous hardship and suffering.

Other types of disease such as leafspots, or perhaps mildews on leaves may or may not be severe. These types of diseases can be controlled somewhat with regular sprays of fungicides. Apple leaf and fruit spots are controlled to a remarkable degree by about 14 different sprays throughout the growing season. Apple growers can afford to spray their orchards this many times because their produce is of high value and the market place demands that the fruit be blemish free.

Many other crops are not high enough to warrant more than a few sprays for disease control. Instead of chemical control, these low value crops must have certain precautions taken prior to planting the crop. The idea is to reduce the amount of disease at the beginning of the season. This strategy is in contrast to fungicide sprays that limit the rate of spread of disease.

Farmers have been advised for years to bury all crop residue after harvest. In peanuts, this is the only real control of southern stem rot. This disease was severe all through the peanut belt before growers began to bury crop debris from the previous year with 4-6 inches of soil during spring land preparation. Also, it is advisable to keep all soil off of the peanut plant during cultivation.

Good crop cultural practices always include disease reduction. The very successful R-9-P (Reduce Nine Pests) program conducted by NC Agricultural Extension Research-on-Wheels has benefited all farmers in North Carolina. The R-9-P program has demonstrated that a program of sound cultural practices, wise use of chemicals and the use of pest-resistant varieties of plants can give outstanding results in reducing damage caused by all pests.

Most farmers are prepared for invasions of insects or mites and most will gear up their operation to combat weeds. Plant diseases should be dealt with before they begin to multiply in the field. Before beginning to prepare land, fertilize and apply pesticides to the soil, seed protection should be considered.

Seed treatments can greatly help in reducing losses to seedling diseases and root rots. Seed-borne diseases can also be reduced with proper seed treatment. The use of the best seed available is money well spent. Certified seed is guaranteed to germinate at a high level, has few or no weed seeds and should be free of seed-borne diseases. Good seed stock is important to all crops, but especially so to vegetable growers. Many of the serious diseases of vegetables are seed-borne bacteria and cannot be controlled once they get into a plant.

Be sure to watch your plants this summer for signs of disease. If detected early, perhaps some control can be applied. Whether you farm for a living or grow house plants for a hobby, keep

Farm-Wise Bergland Says Newsmen 'Taken'

By DON KENDALL
AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland prides himself in having an open door to reporters.

But now and then he gets a little edgy about what he considers inaccuracies or just plain darn ignorance on the part of some who tell the public what's going on among farmers.

Bergland can understand when a reporter doesn't know the difference between a cow and a steer or is unable to distinguish milo from corn.

But when protesting farmers, probably suppressing grins, are able to run a tractor-drawn chisel of disc over a field of scrawny-looking wheat and convince reporters they are destroying crops as part of a strike movement, he gets a little ticked off.

At a meeting of farm magazine editors here earlier this month, Bergland talked about the impact of the months of protests by American Agriculture and the claims by the group's leaders that farmers are going broke.

"I farmed for 27 years and I never admitted to any prosperity," Bergland said. "I mean, it's not fashionable."

But, he continued, if people would talk with hog producers, cattle feeders, rice producers, dairy farmers and corn growers in Iowa and Illinois they would "find out things aren't quite that bad as CBS has been saying" about farmers.

His criticisms were not confined to broadcast reporters, however.

Last fall, American Agriculture began its protests by announcing that farmers were being encouraged to stop producing and buying anything but essential items on Dec. 14 and continue the "strike" until the government guaranteed them 100 percent of parity for commodities they sell.

During the winter, however, American Agriculture modified its no-plant dictum to a cutback of 50 percent. The latest USDA figures last week showed that the strike has had no visible your plants healthy and ask for assistance at the first signals of disease or insect problems. Diseases are difficult to deal with usually, but you can be sure that not being prepared for them makes matters worse.

impact on the amount of land farmers intend to have in crops this year.

"What interests me is that a relatively few people can say 'we're going to go on a big strike and plow down all these crops and we're going to force shortages' and it's picked up by what I regard as relatively uninformed news industry as though it were the gospel," Bergland told the American Agricultural Editors Association.

"It's put out over the wires and people read it and it's reprinted as though it is fait accompli when it's pure and simple symbolism, nothing more," he said.

"I know that no farmers is going to go out and plow down his or her crop, of course not. If they plow down the crop they have nothing with which to bargain, just like cutting off your nose to spite your face."

Under acreage rules this year, grain farmers must set-aside part of their land from crop production of any kind in order to qualify for federal price supports and other benefits.

During one of the recent demonstrations here by American Agriculture, several of its leaders acknowledged that at least part of the reported crop destruction involved farmers tearing up excess acreages of wheat so that they could comply with the set-aside rules.

Bergland mentioned this kind of field work during his talk to the magazine farm editors.

"I know that some of those out in western Kansas who were destroying their wheat and had it picked up on national news a couple of weeks ago. I know what they're doing. They're getting down to compliance with the wheat set-aside program, and the reporter who did the story didn't know the difference," he said.

"So we have to put up with amateurs in the business of reporting agricultural news, and it's picked up and repeated," Bergland said.

Despite his barbs, which are not frequent, Bergland maintains a homey relationship with reporters. Each day, unless he is out of town or has a rare priority for other business, Bergland allocates an hour for interviews. He also is easily accessible for impromptu interviews.

"There is no vendetta here at all," one of Bergland's associates said when asked about the secretary's remarks about the failings of some reporters. "He just thinks that if he has a responsibility to be candid, reporters should be accurate."

Bergland will be asked about Carter administration farm programs and many other subjects of agriculture here this week at the annual spring meeting of the Newspaper Farm Editors of America.

The group represents professional farm editors from throughout the United States, including many who have covered the farm protest movement closely for months.

And Bergland will be the group's banquet speaker. He probably will have an opportunity to field questions about news coverage and whether he has other complaints about the media's attention to agriculture.

Seven Died In Weekend Toll

By The Associated Press

At least seven people died in traffic accidents around North Carolina during the weekend, the Highway Patrol reported.

The deaths brought the state's toll for the year to 386, compared with 391 in the corresponding period of 1977.

Authorities said a 24-year-old Southport woman, Patricia Ann King, was killed about 4 a.m. Sunday when her car ran off the right side of the road and struck a tree just west of Southport.

John Charles Reinke Jr., 17, of Lake Surf was fatally injured early Sunday when he was hit by a car on U.S. 1 about two miles north of Southern Pines.

Rosa Foster Perry, 36, of Belhaven was killed early Sunday when her car crossed the center line and hit another vehicle head-on on N.C. 92 2-1/2 miles east of Bath.

A Denton youth, Earl Wayne Blackwell, 16, was killed early Saturday in Davidson County when his car ran off the road, down an embankment and overturned.

A Seattle, Wash., man was killed on I-85 near Charlotte Friday night in a four-vehicle accident. Nick George Tulintseff, 46, was killed when the car he was driving was struck by another automobile which had run into the path of oncoming traffic.

Herbert Best, 72, of Edwards was killed Friday night in Beaufort County when the car in which he was riding ran off the road. One other person was injured in that accident.

Clinton Richardson, 42, of Battleboro died Friday night in Nash County when the car in which he was riding ran off the road and overturned about 12 miles west of Rocky Mount.

Better Hearing And Speech Month Next

May is National Better Hearing and Speech Month. Pitt County and Greenville Schools speech clinicians have launched their annual effort to inform the public about hearing and speech problems and where to go for help.

The theme of this year's campaign is "Our Wonderful (?) World of Sounds."

In Greenville an estimated 5,000 people suffer from hearing and speech problems, speech clinician, Patti Loesche said. Communicative disorders constitute our number one handicapping disability, she said, affecting more than 22 million Americans. She said the tragedy is that many of these people are reluctant to seek help, because of fear or vanity, or because of misinformation or lack of any information.

Most persons with hearing problems can be helped—medically, surgically, through amplification or therapy, Ms. Loesche said.

Besides information dissemination, a purpose of the month-long campaign is to make hearing and speaking individuals aware of the importance of sound — loud and soft, pleasant and unpleasant, musical or noisy.

The speech clinicians are using varied means to reach the public, including the schools, with guest lectures, presentations, and classroom activities. A poster contest is being conducted in some schools. One winner from each grade, K-5, and from the combined upper grade contributions will be selected for display at Pitt Plaza Shopping Center Friday through Sunday, May 5-7. Entries will be judged Friday, with prizes to be contributed by area businesses.

Greenville City Schools speech clinicians are Lynn Shine and Greg Baldwin, who serve Grades K-6 in six elementary schools. Ruth Williams, JoAnn Allen and Patti Loesche serve Grades K-8 in 12 schools in Pitt County. Kay Fagundus is the county's educational audiologist. All of these persons are willing to provide information to the public and may be reached through the school offices.

TOBACCO GROWERS TALK ABOUT VIKING SHIP® CALCIUM NITRATE

"Calcium Nitrate goes to work overnight...way before soda"

Frank Baggett, Pamplico, S.C.

"Calcium Nitrate gave my crop vigor under the cold, dry stress this past spring. 'CN' also goes to work sooner than 'Soda' and gets out of the way when time to gather. I also like a dependable source of supply and 'CN' gives me dependability in the field and in supply."

Get budworms. Get hornworms. Get aphids. Get Penncap-M. Insecticide.

And get the Penncap-M bonus: lower costs and reduced toxicity.

Penncap-M is the bonus insecticide that protects your investment in tobacco from budworms, hornworms and aphids. But Penncap-M gives you a lot more than great insect control.

You get bonuses like extended control. To save on re-treating. In one tobacco test, Penncap-M meant treating every 14 days instead of every 10. And per acre leaf return was increased 30% over an untreated check.

Another big bonus—less hazardous handling. Microencapsulation reduces toxicity.

That makes Penncap-M less hazardous* to handle and apply. And the skull and crossbones insignia is not required on the label. That's especially important in a worker-oriented crop like tobacco. Plus Penncap-M is low in cost. So you get economical as well as effective, extended control.

This season, don't gamble with budworms, hornworms and aphids. Get 'em with Penncap-M. See your dealer and order microencapsulated Penncap-M today. It's the insecticide that gives you the bonus. AGCHEM DIVISION, 1630 E. SHAW AVE., FRESNO, CALIFORNIA 93710 (209) 226-8400.

All pesticides can be harmful. Read the label carefully and use only as directed. *Compared to methylparathion EC.

GOREN BRIDGE

BY CHARLES H. GOREN AND OMAR SHARIF © 1978 by Chicago Tribune

Q.1—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold: ♠AQJ1095 ♥A8 ♦A5 ♠AQ7 The bidding has proceeded: South West North East 2 ♠ Pass 3NT Pass ?

What do you bid now? A.—It is difficult to construct a hand on which partner could bid three no trump where a slam wouldn't be virtually a lay-down or, at worst, on a liness. For instance, two kings and a queen in partner's hand might suffice. However, the slam should not be played in spades, rather than no trump, because we might have to set up a card in partner's hand via a ruff.

Q.2—As South, vulnerable, you hold: ♠A43 ♥KJ1072 ♦Q8 ♠KJ6 The bidding has proceeded: North East South West 1 ♠ Pass 1 ♥ Pass 2NT Pass ?

What do you bid now? A.—Simple arithmetic is all we need to arrive at the right spot. Partner has shown 19-20 points and we have 14, giving a combined holding of 33-34—just right for a small slam. Bid six no trump.

Q.3—North-South vulnerable, as South you hold: ♠AQJ ♥6 ♦AKQ1092 ♠QJ6 The bidding has proceeded: South West North East 1 ♦ 1 ♥ Dble. Pass ?

What action do you take? A.—While partner's double is for penalties and we hesitate to overrule partner on matters of this sort, this is not the type of hand to defend a one-level contract, especially since the penalty is unlikely to compensate for our almost certain vulnerable game. We would insist on game, and the way to get that message across to partner is to cue-bid two hearts. Three no trump is a likely resting place.

Q.4—Both vulnerable, as South you hold: ♠83 ♥Q9652 ♦6 ♠K10954 The bidding has proceeded: North East South West 1 ♠ 2 ♦ Pass Pass 2 ♥ Pass ?

What do you bid now? A.—You could not act at your first turn because you did not have the values to enter the auction. Now that partner has rebid in your five-card heart suit, your hand has improved enormously, and a bid of three hearts would be timorous indeed. We are all in favor of a full-blooded raise to four hearts.

Q.5—Both vulnerable, as South you hold: ♠83 ♥Q965 ♦KJ85 ♠A943 The bidding has proceeded: North East South West 1 ♠ 2 ♥ Pass Pass 2 ♦ Pass ?

What do you bid now? A.—You have a good fit for partner's second suit, but bear in mind that partner's hand is limited—he had other ways to reopen the bidding if he had a really strong hand. We just can't see your hand producing games because too much of your strength is in the opponent's suit, so we suggest you pass. A raise to three hearts would be invitational.

Q.6—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold: ♠QJ872 ♥73 ♦K85 ♠A104 Partner opens the bidding with one spade. What do you respond? A.—You have an awkward responding hand—too strong for two spades, not strong enough for three spades, and not distributional enough for four spades. You have to mark time with a bid, and the logical choice is two clubs. Naturally, you intend raising spades at your next turn.

Q.7—East-West vulnerable, as South you hold: ♠K82 ♥Q1075 ♦K962 ♠83 The bidding has proceeded: North East South West 1 ♠ Pass 1 ♥ Pass 1 ♠ Pass ?

What action do you take? A.—Since partner might still have a very good hand—up to 18 points—there is no good reason why you should unilaterally decide that one spade is the optimum contract. A bid of one no trump now describes both the shape and strength of your hand, so why not make it?

Q.8—As South, vulnerable, you hold: ♠J76 ♥A5 ♦K854 ♠Q972 The bidding has proceeded: North East South 1 ♠ 4 ♥ ?

What action do you take? A.—The bidding has developed nastily. You have a fair hand and no good way to show it. To bid four spades could expose your side to a huge penalty, yet to pass would be cowardly. The solution is to double. Partner should realize that you are bidding under pressure and that you are not likely to have a trump stack. If his hand is unsuitable, he can pull the double. If he leaves it in, you should do well—after all, your hand should produce at least two tricks on defense.

Your play to the first trick could decide the fate of the contract! A writer once remarked: "There's no such thing as a blind opening lead, only deaf opening leaders!" Comedian Norm Crosby Readily Confesses To Rampant Malaprop

By JAY SHARBUTT AP Television Writer LOS ANGELES (AP) — NBC's Edwin Newman, who broods about misuse of the English language, meet comedian Norm Crosby. He cheerfully splits definitives "without fear of extradition."

Norm does those TV ads for a certain beer, but "has trouble renouncing the name." He concedes nobody, not even "beer-tenders," knows "how to verbalize the name, let alone put it in words."

But as he sees it, "Who needs a whole resuscitation every time you order it?" And, as "a word to the wise is deficient," he just says keep those brews coming because "my clavichord is so dry."

Crosby, a short, merry refugee from Boston, readily pleads guilty to committing rampant malaprop, which is a profuse confusion of words that are similar in sound.

He does it for fun and profit on the "Tonight" and other TV shows, in Las Vegas, and soon will be doing it on his new syndicated comedy series, "Norm Crosby's Comedy Shop."

Norm, who served on a Navy subchaser in the Atlantic in World War Two, set out after the war to be a traditional comedian. How'd he come to install the malaprop as an untraditional prop?

"I found it accidentally, but I was looking for it when it happened," he grinned, explaining the happening this way:

In 1963, after he put in years of labor at various New England saloons and smokers, the owner of New York's famed Latin Quarter caught his act and offered him a week's work. Facing the big time, Crosby realized he'd need a different kind of comedy routine to make a lasting impression in Fun City.

He found it at a club he was working in Springfield, Mass., 90 miles from Boston. The show had girl dancers. Some stayed nights in Springfield, some commuted back home to Boston each evening. The club owner, a pal, had big eyes for one of the new dancers, Crosby said, "and he told me, 'Find out if she's staying over or if she communicates to Boston.'"

"I knew that was not the word he meant. And I said, 'My God, that's the way to go!'" And that's the way Crosby has gone ever since. But he emphasizes the malaprop isn't his comedy act per se. It's instead just part of the act, "just a side tool to the basic humor."

Does he ever slip into malaprops while trying to be serious? "All the time, all the time," he laughed, citing a White House function at which he commiserated. Lyndon B. Johnson was the president and Hubert H. Humphrey the vice president at the time.

Crosby said he suffered a short-circuit between the ears and told all present that LBJ had just "declared war on puberty." About a month later, a package arrived in the mail.

"It was a nice picture of Mr. Humphrey," he beamed. "He inscribed on it: 'Remember, we may need you in the State Department to explain foreign policy.'"

Awards Go To Six Composers

NEW YORK (AP) — The American Academy and Institute of Arts and Letters has announced scholarship awards of $4,000 for six young composers. It also said it would give one special citation and four awards to established music writers.

The citation went to Dane Rudyard, 81, for his "continuing integrity and achievement in art." Rudyard is a composer, poet and scholar of oriental music and philosophy.

Peanut Butter Removes Gum

SPRING HOUSE, Pa. (AP) — What do you do if your children get bubble gum in their hair? Try peanut butter, says hair stylist Guy Robinson.

"The peanut oil will break up the gum," says Robinson, 32, who runs a salon strictly for kids called "Haircuts for Peanuts."

"Comb it out after the gum has softened, and then wash the hair," is the advice of this expert.

Robinson also says the sticky problem can be solved by cooling the gum with ice cubes, or soaking it in lemon juice, and then applying baby oil to the mess.

"The gum then can be removed easily with the fingers, or combed out," Robinson says. Candy or taffy is slightly less of a problem. "Since sugar is water soluble, warm water will melt it," Robinson says.

Lump Sum For Semi-Retired

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Social Security Administration said Saturday it has begun to implement a 1977 law modifying payment of benefits to millions of persons either in their first year of retirement or in semi-retirement.

Those immediately affected by the action include 250,000 persons who began to receive Social Security checks before 1978 and have jobs that brought them substantial income this year.

Under the new law, those who plan to work part of the year and earn more than the Social Security law allows would no longer be sent monthly benefit checks during the months they are unemployed — but would be sent a lump sum at the end of the year. Their benefits would be reduced $1 for every $2 of income over the maximum months they are unemployed — but would be sent a lump sum at the end of the year. Their benefits would be reduced $1. Employed persons who applied for benefits were considered to be "retired" for each month they failed to work or earned less than an allowable monthly limit.

They could keep the money, regardless of whether their incomes for the remainder of the year exceeded the annual amount allowed by the law.

The annual earnings limit was increased for 1978 to $4,000 for people age 65 to 72, and to $3,240 for those under 65. The 1977 limit was $3,000 for beneficiaries under 72. There is no limit for those 72 or older. The new monthly limit under which retirees still can qualify for benefits is $334 for persons 65 or older and $270 for those under 65.

Under the law change, persons in their first year of retirement will be allowed to collect monthly benefits for each month they do not work, regardless of how much they earned in the months before retirement.

The Social Security Administration advised that some affected retirees, who earned a few months of benefits before 1978 but who now earn substantial income from working part-time, may be better off setting a new retirement date.

Those working part of the time who already have received monthly benefits checks during their idle months may not be due all those benefits and should consult their nearest Social Security office, the agency said.

The new law is expected to save the Social Security trust fund $159 million in fiscal 1978 and $224 million in fiscal 1979, it said.

The agency said it would notify 34.5 million Social Security recipients of the change in the next several weeks.

Debate Bed Space Need

ROCKY MOUNT, N.C. (AP) — Officials of two hospitals in Rocky Mount are engaged in a running feud over the need for additional facilities.

Randy Hammond, administrator of the Rocky Mount Sanatorium, recently wrote a letter to Bryant T. Aldridge, administrator of the larger Nash General Hospital, to complain about expansion plans of Nash General.

Hammond said officials of the sanatorium will oppose a move by Nash General to build a 10,000-square-foot administrative wing at a cost of a half million dollars because the wing would make space available for 20 hospital beds in addition to the 272 already available.

The U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare recently rejected plans by the 50-bed sanatorium to replace its outmoded plant with a new building having eight additional beds. HEW said the area already has 100 more beds than it needs.

The decision by HEW would make it difficult for the private sanatorium to obtain financing for its new building.

Hammond's letter challenged Aldridge "to acknowledge that there is a need for beds in this community."

But Aldridge said in a telephone interview that Hammond is confused if he believes the new administrative wing at Nash General would provide new beds.

"We already have the beds," Aldridge said. "We don't need any more approval to open the additional 20 beds."

The dispute flared last year when Frank P. Meadows Jr., chairman of the board of trustees at Nash General, wrote in a letter that "based on the factual recitals of unopened beds, unused operating rooms and substantial additional capacity and other support services, it is obvious that the expenditure of $4 million to duplicate available facilities cannot be in the best interest of cost containment."

First To Die In Long Strike

WHITE OAK JUNCTION, Ky. (AP) — More than 600 people attended funeral services for Donald "Buddy" Watson, the first person killed in the often bitter 21-month strike against the Stearns Mining Co.

Watson, 26, died Thursday when shots were fired into a pickup truck in which he was a passenger. State police believe Watson and Arie Hill Jr., the driver, were attacked because they returned to work at the area by Justus mine in Stearns despite a United Mine Workers picket line.

New Med School Is Accredited

ATLANTA (AP) — Morehouse College announced today that its proposed medical school has been accredited and that 24 students will be enrolled in the first class in September. Dr. Louis Sullivan, dean and director, said the school is "the first effort in this century to start a medical school for minority students."

But white students will be accepted, Sullivan said, and "if a white student comes from a rural area and expresses a desire to return to that area in the practice of medicine, then he would be given preference over a black student from a metropolitan area."

'Why I choose to smoke'

"Why kid anyone? I smoke because I enjoy it. I'm the kind of guy who gets pleasure out of a cigarette. But I'm not deaf to what's being said about tar.

"So I searched out a cigarette that would give me taste with low tar. And two years ago I found it in Vantage. Vantage has all the taste I enjoy yet, surprisingly, much less tar than my old brand.

"Why did I choose Vantage? Because I like it."
