Unemployment Rate Down To 6 Percent

By MICHAEL DOAN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The unemployment rate dropped to 6 percent for the first time in 3½ years last month as more Americans were able to find work, the government said today.

The proportion of the working-age population holding jobs rose to 58.4 percent, the highest in history, the Labor Department said.

In an encouraging jobs report, the department said total employment rose by 535,000 in April to 93.8 million. About onequarter of this increase, however, reflected the return of striking coal miners to work.

The 6 percent unemployment rate was the lowest since a 5.9 percent rate in October 1974. Since then, unemployment jumped to 9.1 percent in May 1975 before gradually descending to 7.1 percent last April and 6.1 percent in February of this year. The jobless rate was 6.2 percent in March.

The Labor Department also reported:

—The unemployment rate for adult men dropped from 4.5 to 4.2 percent, while it remained the same for adult women at 5.8 percent.

—Black unemployment dropped from 12.4 percent to 11.8 percent, the same rate as in February.

—Unemployment among black teen-agers, a big concern of the Carter administration, improved substantially, falling from 39 to 35.3 percent.

—The average length of unemployment declined from 6.2 to 5.8 weeks in April.

—The labor force, which is the total number of persons with jobs and looking for them, rose by 370,000 to 99.8 million, as more adult women sought employment.

—The average work week rose from 36.1 to 36.2 hours.

The improvement in the jobs picture came as the economy recovered from the effects of a severe winter and the coal strike.

Industries increased their output, retail stores were selling more, indicating that more jobs were becoming available.

The percentage of adults holding jobs has continued to climb as women and teenagers have gone into the job market. The proportion of these people holding jobs was 58.2 percent in March before rising to 58.4 percent last month.

Following are the unemployment rates made available by the Labor Department for a select group of states. Like the national unemployment figures, they are adjusted to take into account seasonal fluctuations:

—California had a 7.3 percent rate in April, down from 7.8 percent in March.

—Illinois, 5.9 percent, down from 6.3 percent in March.

—New Jersey, 7.4 percent, up from 6.3 percent in March, and the same as February's 7.4 percent level.

—New York, 7.7 percent in April, the same as the 7.7 percent rate in March.

—Ohio, 5.7 percent, up from 5.2 percent in March.

—Pennsylvania, 7.3 percent, up from 7 percent in March.

—Texas, 4.4 percent, down from 4.8 percent in March.

Area High Water Claims Life Of Brooklyn Man

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

High water, due to recent heavy rains, took the life of a Brooklyn, N.Y. man near Grimesland last night, and caused flooding of a number of areas in Greenville and on several county roads.

Pitt County Sheriff Ralph Tyson said Harrison L. Hatcher, 30, of Brooklyn, drowned about 9:30 p.m. after he stepped from a truck onto water-covered secondary road 1779 near here, and walked into a roadside ditch while trying to get to a nearby house.

Hatcher's body was recovered from the six-foot deep water a short time later, the sheriff said.

Elsewhere in the county, Department of Transportation officials said heavy rains yesterday and last night caused high water on many roads. All roads were passable, this morning, although there was still some water on roadways and dirt roads are "good and sloppy," they explained.

Pitt County Schools superintendant Ott Alford said high water prevented school buses from using secondary roads 1755 between Galloway's Cross Roads and Black Jack and 1766 between Galloway's Cross Roads and Grimesland, as well as 1210 off the Stantonsburg Road, 1914 East of Grifton and 1743 near Chicod.

In Greenville, Department of Public Works spokesmen said rains, coupled with the high level of the Tar River which is causing a back-up of water in Greene Mill Run, caused flooding of 14th Street just East of the Charles Street intersection. However, 14th Street was passable this

Mull Compromise On Warplane Sale

LAWRENCE L. KNUTSON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The White House is seriously considering a congressional compromise on Middle East jet sales that would provide even more warplanes to Israel in coming years, White House sources say.

The sources, who asked not to be named, said no decision has been reached but that consideration is being given to issuing a letter of intent to sell Israel an unspecified number of additional planes, perhaps in the period between 1984 and 1987.

The sources told Associated Press Radio, however, that the administration will not on any account reduce the number of planes in the deal for Saudi Arabia despite the urgings of some members of Congress.

The $4.8 billion jet deal now before Congress would send 60 F-15 fighters to Saudi Arabia, 50 F-5E jets to Egypt and 15 F15s and 75 F-16s to Israel.

A source on the Senate Foreign Relations Committee confirmed, meanwhile, that the search for a compromise is continuing and that the situation remains fluid. That source also asked to remain anonymous.

Congress has 30 days from last Friday to reject the proposed sales if it wishes. To block the deal both houses must adopt resolutions of disapproval by May 28.

Without forecasting a final victory, the White House sources said the administration has a margin of votes in its favor on the Senate floor. They acknowleged, however, that they have virtually no chance of prevailing in the Senate committee and are behind in House vote counts.

The sources said the compromise is being given serious consideration because the administration does not want to run any risk of derailing sensitive Mideast peace negotiations. It also was described as sensitive to the election woes of legislators worried about the reaction of their Jewish constituents.

Despite the congressional overture, there is no assurance that Israel's supporters in Congress who are critical of the jet deal will find the compromise acceptable.

The White House sources stressed that the compromise plan originated in Congress, not the administration. But, one said, "We're not rejecting out of hand any congressional overtures."

High administration officials told Congress this week that the three-country sale is balanced and would help chances for peace by making Egypt and Saudi Arabia, two moderate Arab states, feel more secure.

The Foreign Relations panel does not expect to reach any decision on the matter before hearing testimony on Monday from former Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger.

Kissinger made the original commitment to provide oil-rich Saudi Arabia with advanced jet fighters to replace an aging fleet of British Lightnings.

Resignation

Greenville City Planner John Schofield resigned this morning.

The resignation turned in today to Acting City Manager Charlie Holliday was requested by Mayor Percy Cox, upon the unanimous recommendation of the Greenville City Council, Holliday said when asked by a "Daily Reflector" reporter.

Holliday would provide no information about reasons for the action. He said Schofield has been relieved of his duties and will be given 30 days' pay and vacation time accumulated.

Mayor Cox could not be reached for comment.

Hodges Says Opponent Becoming Repetitious

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer

Luther Hodges Jr., frontrunner in Tuesday's Democratic primary voting for the U.S. Senate, said today that his runoff opponent is beginning to "sound like a broken record" in charging that Hodges has "special interests" obligations.

Hodges, who flew in this morning for an airport press conference, said that he was tied to no corporation or company and was proud of his accomplishments during his board chairmanship tenure with North Carolina National Bank.

The candidate terms himself as "unemployed" and indicated that he had "no apologies" to make for having been associated with the bank. Hodges added that his opponent, Insurance Commissioner John Ingram, is the one who is "running on taxpayer's money."

He confessed that "all along, I've looked forward to running against one opponent" and he added that his strategy for the runoff would be the same as it was for the primary: to "talk about the issues...and how North Carolina can have a more effective voice" in Washington.

Hodges, son of the late governor Luther Hodges, said that he was proud of the fact that in a field of eight candidates, he carried 86 of the state's 100 counties Tuesday and ran second in the other 14, gaining some 40 per cent of the overall vote.

"I feel great about this area of eastern North Carolina," the candidate added, pointing to his polling success in the eastern section.

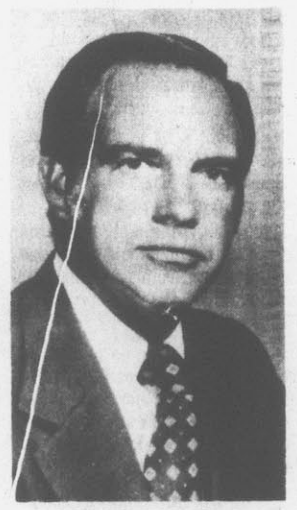

Asked if he is seeking the endorsement of any of the candidates he defeated in the primary, Hodges said that he would welcome any support from the field but he noted that he was more interested in gaining the votes of the other candidates' supporters.

He said that Lawrence Davis, who ran third in the Senate balloting, has indicated that he will stay out of the endorsement picture and will see what issues will be discussed during the runoff campaign.

Hodges said he "fully expects" to gain the support of voters in both Guilford County, home of fourth place finisher McNeill Smith, and Forsyth County, Davis's home territory.

Responding to a question concerning the state's battle with HEW Secretary Joseph Califano, Hodges contended that more can be accomplished by dealing with the official than by

Woman Killed, Two Truck Drivers Hospitalized In Grinding Crash

WILLIAMSTON — A Georgia woman was killed instantly and two truck drivers hospitalized as the result of a grinding head-on collision of two large trucks about four miles west of Williamston on Thursday afternoon.

Mrs. Ruth Evans of Waycross, Ga. was crushed to death in the collision. She was a passenger in the 1973 International tractor-trailer rig driven by Wallace Seay, 28, of Alma, Ga.

According to Highway Patrolman Robert H. Wright, Rayford Dale Phillips, 30, of Fayetteville, driving a 1976 GMC truck east on U.S. 64, moved to the left side of the road in an attempt to pass a car driven by Jack Calloway of Tarboro. According to a statement made by Calloway, he turned off the road to avoid a head-on collision with the truck driven by Phillips, and his car was struck on the side and knocked into a field.

The Phillips rig then struck head-on the tractor-trailer driven by Seay.

Calloway, Phillips and Seay were all taken to Martin General Hospital. Calloway was treated and released. Phillips and Seay remained hospitalized this morning in satisfactory condition.

Patrolman Wright said the estimated speed of the trucks was 55 miles per hour, and it was raining at the time the accident occurred at approximately 2:15 p.m. Damage to the trucks and car have been estimated at $43,000.

Highway crews reported to the scene and spent a couple of hours washing down large amounts or fuel that spilled on the road. Traffic was detoured using the connecting road from U.S. 64 to the Wild Cat Road, until about 4 p.m., when the highway was again opened to traffic.

Phillips has been charged with improper passing, careless and reckless driving, and manslaughter.

"MISREPRESENTATION"

The Greenville Rescue Squad has asked Hotline to tell area residents that persons soliciting for ads to be placed in the "N. C. Emergency News," formerly the "N. C. Rescue News," are not affiliated with the Greenville Rescue Squad.

"We understand," Greenville Fire and Rescue Division Chief Ray Smith said, "that, at least sometimes, potential buyers of these ads are told that a portion of the money paid will go to the local rescue squad. We have never got one cent from this organization."

He said he believes the ads are usually sold on the telephone and that payment is usually sent to a local Post Office box.

"Our Rescue Squad members only solicit in announced campaigns, if at all," he said, "and they usually go in person in uniform. Revise Vote Totals In Board's Canvass

The canvass by the Pitt Board of Elections of Tuesday's primary vote revealed several changes from those published by "The Daily Reflector," mostly resulting from the omission of some of the Greenville Precinct 7 totals from the elections chart.

None of the changes affected the outcome of any of the political races other than to increase or decrease the final totals, according to Margaret Register, Elections Board supervisor.

The official canvass verified the runoff possibility in the race for the Fifth District seat on the Pitt Board of County Commissioners.

Incumbent Commissioner B. Alton Gardner polled 4,424 votes Tuesday, according to the canvass, and failed by only four votes to gain the necessary majority for election over challenger Walter E. Gaskins. Gaskins, who has indicated he will seek a runoff, received 2,673 votes, while Maxine Wiggins finished with 1,758.

The omitted Greenville 7 results changed vote totals in the races involving State House of Representatives, sheriff, county commissioner, and city education board.

The Greenville 7 additions and final vote totals included: (House), Sam Bundy, 489 for an overall total of 6,872, Jack Gross, 302, 3,427, Horton Rountree, 558, 6,113; (sheriff), Cecil Crandell, 34, 846, Kenneth Ray Evans, 114, 1,532, Ralph Tyson, 615, 7,584; (First District Commissioner), Etsil Gordon, 156, 1,565, Tom Johnson, 212, 2,032, Ed Warren, 343, 5,138, Howard Wilson, 58, 760; (Fourth District Commissioner), Doug Gurkins, 214, 2,648, Burney Tucker, 461, 5,842; (Fifth District Commissioner), Alton Gardner,

Homemade 'Babies' Aid CPR Teaching

ALBION, Mich. (AP) — Betty Beese has 12 "babies" — with more on the way — and everyone is a lifesaver.

Although her babies are empty-headed and helpless themselves, they help save lives because they are homemade mannequins she constructed for use in teaching CPR — cardiopulmonary resuscitation — the lifesaving technique being taught to thousands of people across the country.

CPR is a a combination of artificial respiration and artificial circulation used as an emergency procedure when the heart stops beating. Only trained individuals can apply CPR.

"When you teach CPR," says Miss Beese, "it's practice the students need most. If there are 24 students and one mannequin, they don't get much practice. Commercial mannequins can cost as much as $1,000, depending on how elaborate they are. So I dreamed up my own. They cost about $5."

To apply CPR, one person forces air into the victim's lungs by mouth-to-mouth resuscitation, while a second person uses his hands to put rhythmic pressure on the heart to circulate the blood throughout the body. These combined actions are crucial, since the brain needs more oxygen than any other human tissue, and will suffer irreversible damage if it is without oxygen for as little as four minutes.

Miss Beese, 53, was certified as a CPR instructor-trainer by the Michigan Heart Association seven years ago, and two years ago received the same Red Cross certification. She has taught CPR to more than 500 people from all walks of life in Michigan, where she is a professor of physical education at Albion College.

She has offered the Red Cross plans for constructing her mannequins. To make her "babies" — so named by the local hospital staff — she started with a plastic bleach bottle with an oval cut out for the mouth and a rubber baby bottle nipple with the tip cut off for the nose.

Other whimsical facial features are drawn on with a marking pen. A rubber tube, known as a Penrose drain, serves as the windpipe, which is attached to the open end of the bleach bottle. The neck is baseboards hinged together.

The other end of the tube is attached to a plastic bag which simulates the lungs. The bag is tucked into the fore-shortened, T-shirt-clad body and inflates realistically when artificial respiration is applied. A unique feature is an inflatable red rubber ball, commonly used on a school playground. The ball is packed firmly into the area of the chest where pressure is applied to the heart in CPR.

"I spent a lot of years thinking about what to use," Miss Beese says. "That ball has just the right resistance."

A recent addition to her family of mannequins is a large doll resurrected from her childhood days, which she uses for teaching infant CPR.

Today the doll sports a plastic bag for lungs and a plastic lid breastbone inside its blue overalls. Miss Beese is adapting several new dolls for use in practice on infants.

"The big difference in using CPR on infants is the rate and amount of pressure you put on the heart. Babies breathe more rapidly than adults and you have to adjust for that," she says.

In the past, CPR was used only by physicians, nurses and other health personnel. Today the Red Cross recommends that as many members of the general public as possible be trained in the technique.

Miss Beese is one of the small number of persons qualified to train instructors in CPR. Last year she conducted a course for personnel at the Albion Community Hospital, where the students included the hospital vice president and the nurse anesthetist.

A recent enthusiastic student is the wife of an Albion College professor who suffered a cardiac arrest in the college gymnasium. Using CPR, Miss Beese and another physical education instructor, Carolyn Costa, successfully sustained his breathing and circulation until the hospital emergency room team took over.

The location of their offices in the building where the man collapsed — only a minute or two away— was probably the factor that saved his life and prevented brain damage.

"If the right people are there, you have a chance," said Miss Beese. "We hope to get enough people around trained in CPR so that people's chances are better, wherever they happen to be."

Widower Looking For New Romance

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1978 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: What do you make of a man who buries his wife on a Thursday and asks you for a date for the following Wednesday? I accepted, thinking he needed someone to console him, but I got the surprise of my life. He acted like a sailor on shore leave after six months on a ship.

His wife and I were very good friends and I realize that she had been sick for a year, but I can't see any excuse for the rush this man was in to make up for lost time. When he asked me out for the next night, I told him I didn't think we should be seen in public together because people might talk. So he's been parking himself over here every night telling me how lonesome he is, and how much he needs "female companionship."

Abby, I'm a widow and I am lonesome, too, but I'm not THAT lonesome. How long do you think I should wait before I let him court me? I know lots of women in this town who would be glad to have him.

EUNICE

DEAR EUNICE: The man shows a shocking lack of respect for the memory of his wife. Put him on ice for about a year. He could use some cooling off.

DEAR ABBY: My problem is that I am a very poor hostess—at least I think I am. It's not that I can't relax around people, because when I'm a guest, I'm perfectly relaxed and have a wonderful time. But when guests are in my home, I am nervous and tense and I am just not myself.

I am not the fussy kind of hostess who runs around emptying ashtrays all the time, but if there's a lull in the conversation I feel embarrassed and worry that I'm not giving my guests a good time.

When I invite people over, they say, "Why don't YOU come HERE instead?—which leads me to believe that they have noticed my nervousness, too, and would rather spare me the agony. What's wrong with me? And is there a solution?

POOR HOSTESS

DEAR POOR: Guests can't relax unless the hostess is relaxed. The secret of being a good hostess lies in getting compatible people together in a comfortable atmosphere. No host or hostess can give guests a good time. The guests must make it themselves.

DEAR ABBY: What's wrong with one of the smartest women in town who's so convinced she can't pass the driver's test that she's been driving without a license for six years?

I try to tell her that all she has to do is read the driver's manual, then go take a test and maybe drive around the block a few times with the examining officer. But she won't believe me.

What can I do? She's a good driver, but I can't persuade her to get a license. A husband can't turn his wife in to the police, but I am tempted.

NO NAME, PLEASE

DEAR NO NAME: The "smartest woman in town" could be the sorriest, and her husband could be the "brokest" should she become involved in an accident. So, if you can't talk some sense into her head, ask your insurance agent (or lawyer) to try.

CONFIDENTIAL TO NEW MOTHER: I could write a book on advice to the new mother, but if you want happy, well-adjusted, secure children, never say:

1. "If you do that once more I'm going to punish you."
2. "Why can't you be good—like your sister?"
3. "When daddy comes home you're going to get a spanking!"
4. "If someone calls, say I'm not home."
5. "Go away and don't bother me. I'm busy now."

Do you wish you had more friends? For the secret of popularity, get Abby's new booklet: "How To Be Popular; You're Never Too Young or Too Old." Send $1 with a long, self-addressed, stamped (24 cents) envelope to Abby, 132 Lasky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.

How French Can A Chicken Be?

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Assocated Press Food Editor

Soon now, Lydie Pinoy Marshall and her husband will be going to their vacation home in France, as they do each summer. Then next fall, when they return to their West Village house in New York City, Lydie will have some more homestyle French recipes new to her cooking classes.

Lydie, justifiably acclaimed as running the best French cooking school (A La Bonne Cocotte) in New York, says: "My students really like the bonne femme recipes as much as those I teach from haute cuisine." (The French phrase "bonne femme," now a part of the English language, means "in the manner of a good housewife.")

One of the lovely bonne femme dishes Lydie has already taught her classes is Poulet a l'Anis — roast chicken with a sauce flavored with an anis-based liqueur and aperitif popular in France. Two of the best-known French brands of the liqueur are Pernod and Ricard, both available here.

Because Lydie is a neighbor of mine when she is in New York, I was able to "run over" to her house for supper one night recently to taste Poulet a l'Anis. I arrived just as she was ready to add the liqueur. It was fun to watch her pour it into a ladle, tip the ladle toward the flame on her gas range to ignite the liqueur and then flambe the chicken. When we tried Lydie's recipe in my all-electric test kitchen, we warmed the liqueur in a pipkin on our electric range and ignited it with a match. I detail these two methods so you can choose the one that suits your kitchen equipment.

Lydie says this flaming is absolutely necessary: "The alcohol of the liqueur must burn. Do not throw the liqueur over the chicken without flaming it first because it will give a disagreeably strong taste instead of a subtle anis flavor minus the alcohol."

During the hour the chicken roasts it is basted every 10 minutes. "This is the kind of dish a French woman makes," Lydie explains, "when she has other things to do in the kitchen. Then it is easy to keep the chicken moist by giving it a little loving care."

LYDIE MARSHALL'S
POULET A L'ANIS

3-pound frying chicken
1 branch sweet fennel or 1 rib celery
3 shallots or white bulbs of scallions, minced
6 tablespoons sweet butter, at room temperature
1 tablespoon peanut oil
½ cup dry white wine
Salt and pepper to taste
1 to 2 cups water
1½ tablespoons anis-based liqueur such as Pernod or Ricard

Stuff the chicken with the fennel and shallots; truss. Melt 2 tablespoons of the butter with the oil in a 10-or 12-inch iron skillet; add the chicken and brown evenly on all sides. Remove the chicken. Discard the fat in the skillet. Add the wine to the skillet and over low heat deglaze, by stirring with a wooden spoon to get up the drippings. Remove from the heat. Return the chicken to the skillet, breast side up; sprinkle with salt and pepper. Roast, uncovered, in a preheated 375-degree oven, basting every 10 minutes with about ¼ cup of the water, until tender — 1¼ hours. (There should be only a small amount — no more than a cup — of thickened liquid in the skillet at the finish.)

COLUMBIA, S.C. (UPI) — A large Dutch-oven-type electric skillet can operate for 45 minutes before requiring one kilowatt hour, says the National Broiler Council. It estimates about 1.26 times more energy is needed to cook a chicken in the oven of an electric range instead of that type skillet.

Educators Approve Reducing Classes And 'Streamlining'

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — A proposal aimed at reducing class sizes and streamlining personnel allocation in the schools has won the endorsement of superintendents and school board chairmen from the eight largest school systems in North Carolina.

Almost one third of public school students in the state were represented at a two-hour meeting held Wednesday.

The group decided to go before the General Assembly in Raleigh June 7 to voice support for the Fulcher Commission Report, which won the endorsement of the state Board of Education last month.

The Fulcher Commission is a 15-member panel appointed last year by the General Assembly to study ways to reduce size of school classes and to streamline the method of allocating school personnel. The group includes state legislators, teachers and school leaders.

In its report, the commission called for spending up to $529 million over the next seven years to reduce class size and change the formula for allocation of school personnel. But the General Assembly is expected to take up only a small part of the commission's total report at the upcoming mini-session. The educators from the school systems wanted to go on record early as supporting the proposals.

"After several years, it appears as the first oasis in a financial desert," said Guilford County Superintendent E. P. Pearce. "And I hope it isn't a mirage."

But some of the school leaders voiced reservations about the proposals. Bruce Trammell, chairman of the Gaston County school board, said, "This might be an oasis, but it's also a move toward total state control. Where the dollars come from, that's where the control is."

Charlotte-Mecklenburg Superintendent Jay Roberts, said he favored more flexibility in the system.

"We could do more with less money per child if we had greater flexibility," he said.

Despite these reservations, the group felt benefits could be realized from the Fulcher Commission's recommendations.

"It would be a great step forward," said Dr. Kenneth Newbold, who will become superintendent of Greensboro Public Schools July 1. "It would promote equality. At least it is an attempt — in terms of people — to articulate a state foundation system."

Dr. Newbold said that by increasing the "bread and butter" personnel in kindergarten through 12th grade, the proposal would free local funds for other personnel and programs.

The superintendents and school board chairmen, who first came together a month ago because of the mutual problems of large systems, also hashed over a number of other concerns during the session.

Six Accidents In City Traffic

More than $11,000 property damage resulted from a series of six traffic mishaps investigated by Greenville Police yesterday.

Officers reported heaviest damage resulted from a threevehicle mishap at the intersection of Tenth and Verdant Streets about 8 a.m.

Drivers of the vehicles involved were identified as Marjorie Alice Hill of 400 Verdant St., Kenneth Len Dollar of 104 North Meade St., and Cynthia JoAnn Brown of Route 1, Pinetops.

Police, who charged Miss Hill with failing to yield the right of way, estimated damage to the Hill and Dollar cars at $3,000 each and set damage to the Brown vehicle at $400.

Ada Joyner Savage of 2511 Dickinson Ave. was charged with failing to stop for a stop sign following investigation of a 12:30 p.m. mishap at the intersection of First and Eastern Streets.

Investigators reported the Savage car collided with an auto driven by Richard Colwell Ferrell of Burgaw, causing an estimated $1,500 damage to the Savage car and $800 damage to the Ferrell vehicle.

Cars driven by David M. Lancaster of Route 1, Vanceboro and Miriam Singletary of Route 7, Greenville, collided about 5:10 p.m. on Arlington Boulevard, 60 feet South of the Greenville Boulevard intersection resulting in an estimated $700 damage to the Lancaster car and $50 damage to the Singletary vehicle.

A 2:03 p.m. mishap on Tenth Street, 100 feet West of the College Hill Drive intersection involved a truck driven by Raford Grady Key of 108 Cherry Ct. and a car driven by Barry Monroe Woodcock of 102A Sara Ln., according to officers, who estimated damage at $225 to the Key truck and $375 to the Woodcock vehicle.

Cars driven by Mable Galloway Turnage of 1007 East Third St. and Robert David Knight of Highland Trailer Pk., collided about 12:25 a.m. at the intersection of Tenth and Charles Streets.

Police set damage from the mishap at $300 to the Turnage car and $375 to the Knight auto.

An 11:32 a.m. collision on Greenville Boulevard, 45 feet West of the Plaza Drive intersection involved cars driven by Karen Louise Roeser of 210 Fairlane Dr. and Kathleen Ann Goodman of Cape Girardeau, Mo.

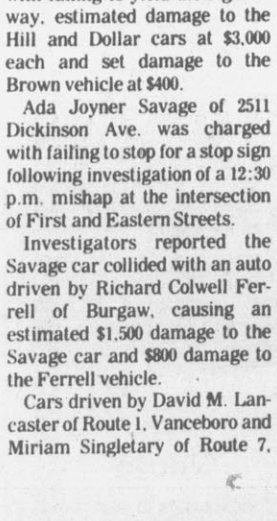

Investigators estimated damage at $150 to the Roeser car and $270 to the Goodman car.

Should Work Out Issues Soon

General agreement has been reached between the county government and the municipalities on a county operated solid waste disposal system.

There are still specifics to be decided by the municipalities involved, however, and final action on the plan was postponed Monday until these details can be resolved.

The main point holding things up is whether municipalities will haul solid wastes to the landfill, or whether they will use transfer stations. From these the county would transport the waste to the landfills..

These specifics should be worked out by the participating municipalities as rapidly as possible so that the county government can implement the new solid waste collection system.

Had Sunshine On Sun Day Program

Sun Day Wednesday was just that in Greenville, although around the nation the sun was often obscured by clouds as celebrants gathered.

The message of the day was not lost, however — the sun is the source of all our energy, and properly used it can solve our present energy problems. And, since the sun is already a part of our environment, harnessing its rays will not upset the balance of nature.

The sun can heat water which can provide energy for generating electricity and to warm and cool our buildings. We must find the ways to harness this tremendous source of energy, and research is the way to do this.

THIS AFTERNOON

Gov. Hunt Urges Caution

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — Things may be looking pretty good for North CArolina economically right now, but who knows what problems might lie ahead, Gov. James B. Hunt, Jr. is cautioning legislators now getting ready for the 1978 session.

Recovery from the recession has sent state revenues up much faster than earlier predictions. Available money for new spending beyond that already earmarked for the 1978-79 fiscal year budget appears to be around the $250 million mark.

And with legislators coming into session following the May primary and before the November general elections, some observers are nervous that increased spending would become attractive to some lawmakers.

The session convenes May 31 as a rump assembly of the 1977 regular session. This state isn't normally supposed to have annual sessions, but of late the Legislature has "continued" its regular session into another year to handle pressing budget matters.

Annual

A two-year budget has already been adopted covering fiscal 1977-78 and fiscal 1978-79. Adjustments will be made to the second year. The budget session of 1976 was kept just that, with other matters held off. This year, however, any business which passed one house and is pending in the other can be taken up. About 99 proposals — many of them budget related — qualify under that rule. Otherwise, new measures will require a two-thirds vote for introduction. The governor intends to ask that dispensation, particularly, for a new Open Meetings law to replace that struck down recently in the State Supreme Court.

Tradition being such, that when special dispensation occurs, it is highly likely other introductions will follow. Thus, some experts predict, the so-called budget session may become a full-blown assembly lasting many weeks.

Still the principal subject will be splitting up the available new money. Gov. Hunt is urging caution. "We have to be real careful in not committing ourselves to a level of spending which may be available at this time, but which, if the economy should dip or unforseen circumstances occur which would cause revenues to decrease would put the state in a serious situation", he feels.

BILL NOBLITT

Actually, the point is that when a commitment is made to spend new money this year — that increased level must be continued in future years as well.

"Our principal goal must be not to overspend ... there are an awful lot of committed additional expenditures which must be taken into account", Gov. Hunt said.

On Tap

Among those items, funding exceptional children programs ($33 million); restoring dental care to Medicaid for the low-income recipients ($12 to $15 million); remedial school programs for those who fail the new tests ($15 million); and a host of other measures involving health care.

Tops on the list, however, is a salary increase. State employees and teachers are pushing for 10 percent. At $24 million for each percentage point, it isn't likely a quarter-of-a-billion salary hike will be given.

Hunt suggests a cost-of-living hike of around six percent, based on the increase in living costs recorded in fiscal 1977-78; and not on the present anticipated increase, or a projected growth for next year.

Besides, says Hunt, about two-thirds of the state employees get merit and logevity increases regularly, and fringe benefit improvements; teachers get longevity increases. Overall, if a six per cent across-the-board hike is approved, most employees would get 12 per cent — and that, he adds bluntly, is better than most people in private industry are doing.

Gifts Left Behind

By HARRY F. ROSENTHAL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Imagine Richard Nixon's heartbreak when he departed the White House and had to leave behind his portrait done in chips of banana tree bark.

And that stone carved figure of an Eskimo with bow and spear — the bow broken in two places.

And the medallion of George Washington that you can peek through and see an honest-to-goodness lock of hair from the head of the actual father of our country.

These items all have two things in common: they were foreign gifts to the president of the United States and he didn't get to keep them, even had he wanted to.

The recipient of these gifts was Richard Nixon, but he is singled out only because the General Services Administration recently went to a lot of trouble cataloging the foreign gifts he received as president. Such gifts flow to all presidents from fellow heads of state and vice versa.

By law, the president can't keep any gift worth more than $50. So the presents are packed away in crates awaiting the day when a library is built to commemorate the president or a museum puts them on display.

(As an aside, it must be said that the inventory of gifts to Nixon was ordered to see if he or his family made off with any goodies. The official answer, it turned out, was no.)

That listing, however, was illuminating in a number of ways: the kinds of presents the president gets, how many of them and from whom.

One thing is certain: many of the gifts truly are fit for a king. And many truly are fit for a king with terrible taste.

In his 5½ years in the White House, Nixon and his family received 969 foreign official gifts valued at more than $50. They are stored in government warehouses in the Washington area and in Laguna Niguel, Calif.

The donors range from Sultan Ibn Abdal-Aziz of Saudi Arabia — who presented Nixon with two automatic rifles, one trimmed in silver, the other in gold — to Senor Alcade Miguel Suarez Zegarra of Peru, whose gift was a gold medal and certificate of honor.

The most loot comes, strangely enough, from the Soviet Union and the Peoples Republic of China.

The Soviets are big on giving things to drink out of; for instance, a blue, white and gold enamel tea service for 12; a wine service set of parcel gilt vermeil with 12 short stemmed wine goblets; a 48-piece tea service; a 33-piece demitasse service companion.

The gifts are worth an estimated $2 million, and includee a life pass to Mrs. Nixon on Egyptian railways, stamps, jewelry for the Nixon women, art objects, pamphlets, miniature elephants.

And there is also, for Nixon, a box of "President of Burma" cigars. Included is a White House Gift Unit notation: "Destroyed."

Irrational Guide To Nixon

WASHINGTON — If you never really liked Richard Nixon but never understood why, perhaps his son-in-law David Eisenhower has come up with the only logical reason. In an interview in Your Place magazine, David theorizes that the reason most people showed antipathy toward the former President is that he happened to be a native of California, which is "an untempered state by Eastern standards." Mr. Eisenhower was quoted as saying that Mr. Nixon seemed to be "an American political figure uniquely capable of inspiring personal hostility because, throughout his political career, he represented California in all its meanings in American politics."

I buy the theory.

In all my years in Washington I have never seen a state maligned as much as California. Everyone in the 49 other states holds some grudge against it. Some people are just mad at it because it's there.

But others have more rational reasons for their hostility. It isn't surprising to go to a party back East and hear someone say, "Do you know what I paid for a head of California lettuce today?" And the other person will reply, "Probably as much as what I paid to see 'Star Wars,' which was made in Hollywood." Or, "This California white wine tastes like it was pressed by Sen. Hayakawa."

The image of California has been distorted by the gossip columnists. Most people think all its women look like Farrah Fawcett and its men drive Rolls-Royces and wear Gucci shoes when playing tennis on their private courts.

ART BUCHWALD

The enmity toward California can be translated to one word: jealousy. In the old days Americans couldn't take it out on Charlton Heston, so they had no choice but to kick Richard Nixon around.

I've talked to many people in the East about their hostility toward Nixon and it's amazing how irrational their responses were. One person said, "He turned San Clemente into a slum."

A professor from an Ivy League school said, "When he was Vice President, I heard his cocker spaniel used to do do-do on the bushes in the Rose Garden."

A secretary in New York City admitted she was turned off by Nixon as a politician because every time he took a walk on the beach near San Clemente, he wore a shirt and tie and a pin-stripe suit with the pants rolled up. "When you see a guy walking in surf like that on television you have to figure he's doing something to screw up the country."

It isn't just the East but also the Midwest that harbors a paranoia for California. A friend from the Midwest said he hated the state because "Every time it rains in San Francisco we get snow in Chicago."

Although I was born in New York, I went to the University of Southern California, and I've never shared the enmity toward Nixon felt by so many people in the rest of the country.

I never mistrusted Richard Nixon because he came from California.

A President should not be judged by where he came from. The sole criterion should be his record in office. If he was a good leader and

THE GALLUP POLL...

Ford First In GOP Poll

By George Gallup

PRINCETON, N.J. — In an early test of Republican grassroots sentiment Gerald Ford emerges as the top choice of Republican voters for the party's nomination in 1980, winning 40 per cent of their vote to 30 per cent for former California Gov. Ronald Reagan and 11 per cent for Sen. Howard Baker.

Three men tie for fourth place, each with 4 per cent: Elliot Richardson, Robert Dole, and John Connally.

With speculation mounting that Ford will seek the GOP nomination in 1980, the Gallup Poll included his name in a list of six propinent Republicans in this early look at the 1980 race.

The current findings show a gain for Ford since last September and undoubtedly reflect his increased media exposure and activity on the speaking circuit.

The list of Republicans used in the September survey was considerably longer. Ford, at that time, trailed Reagan.

Showdown

Ford also leads Reagan among Republicans when the two men are matched head-to-head in a showdown test.

When asked which man they would prefer to have the 1980 GOP convention select if the choice comes down to Ford and Reagan, 54 per cent of Republicans vote for Ford and 42 per cent for Reagan.

Name Recognition

Jimmy Carter was almost unknown outside Georgia two years before the 1976 Democratic primaries. In fact, if White House aspirants learned anything from Carter's rise to the presidency it is the value of early and intensive campaigning at the grassroots level to register one's name and one's views.

The latest Gallup Poll shows only a half-dozen of those Republicans mentioned as possible nominees in 1980 are known to a majority of their party members.

The two contestants for the 1976 GOP nomination, Gerald Ford and Ronald Reagan, are known, of course, to virtually all party members. John Connally, with an 82 per cent recognition figure, ranks below Ford and Reagan and about even with 1976 vice-presidential nominee Dole of Kansas, whose name awareness registers 79 per cent. Baker of Tennessee, 65 per cent, and Elliot Richardson (53 per cent) are the only other two men known by more than half of Republican party members.

While Connally, Dole, and Baker have lower recognition scores than Ford and Reagan, they have registered name awareness gains since September, when Connally had a 72 per cent recognition score, Dole 65 per cent, and Baker 57 per cent. Richardson's score shows little change.

This question was asked to determine name awareness:

"Would you please look over this list (Respondents were handed a card with six names) and tell me which of these persons, if any, you have heard something about?"

Then the following two questions were asked:

"Which one would you like to see nominated as the Republican candidate for President in 1980?"

Choices Of Republican Voters For 1980 GOP Nomination
Ford	40%
Reagan	30
Baker	11
Richardson	4
Dole	4
Connally	4
Undecided	7

Dr. K. B. Pace, local physician, was named to the Board of Examiners at the annual convention of the State Medical Society at Pinehurst.

Dr. Paul Fitzgerald, Greenville dentist, was elected secretary-treasurer of the North Carolina Dental Society at the annual session in Winston-Salem.

The general fund of Pitt County has been swelled by a total of $65,000 from the profits of legal liquor since the first store was established here, a report issued by Charles O'Horne, chairperson of the board, revealed.

Life insurance payments in Greenville last year totaled $195,000, a report released today by The National Underwriter, official insurance agency, revealed.

Bethel, with payments of $20,000, ranked second to Greenville in Pitt County claims paid.

Public Forum

Letters submitted for Public Forum must be limited to 300 words.

To the editor:

Mr. Alford has done it again—postponed a regular Pitt County Board of Education meeting without letting the public know. We're beginning to get the message that he doesn't what us to know what goes on.

Apr. 4 when I arrived at the Courthouse for the regularly-scheduled Board meeting (the first Tuesday of the month at 2 p.m.), I found seven other citizens (who normally do not attend these meetings patiently waiting. We were told the meetings had been postponed a week because Mr. Alford and others were at a convention in California.

Apr. 11 when I arrived at the Courthouse for the postponed meeting, I found two women with young children (different citizens from those of the week before) waiting. We were told the Board was in Executive Session and the public meeting would be delayed at least an hour.

Yesterday (May 1) someone told me the Board was to hold a special meeting because of Election Day. I had not seen notice of this in the Greenville paper, so I phoned Mr. Alford's office. No one seemed to know if or when a Board meeting would be held. Finally, I reached Mr. Tom Craft, Associated Supt. of Schools, who said the regular meeting was postponed, but he did not know when it would be rescheduled. I asked if a postponement notice would be in the evening paper, and he said, "I do not know, but feel sure it must be." I searched the paper thoroughly and could find no notice.

It seems to me that Mr. Alford is going out of his way to discourage public awareness of the Board proceedings. Certainly people find it hard to plan their schedules when public notice is so casual or non-existent.

Mrs. Janet L. Haseley

Editor's Note: The blame for the May 2 meeting cancellation not being in "The Daily Reflector" is ours. Supt. Alford called to say the meeting had been postponed, but through oversight the notice was not carried.

SYMBOLISM

In Copenhagen there is a large statue of Christ made by the illustrious Danish sculptor, Thorwaldsen. The head of Christ is slightly bowed. In order to see his face, one has to get down on his knees, very close to the statue, and look up.

There is symbolism in this. People sometimes think that they can read the Biblical account of the life of Jesus or read books about his life and understand him. But Jesus, in addition to being a historical character, is a living, universal personality, still influencing the lives of men and women.

We only understand Jesus when we get close to him, when we get down on our knees and look up into his face. The distant appraisal that we would give any other piece of statuary is not sufficient for the Thorwaldsen statue, nor is it sufficient if we would understand the Christ of the New Testament. Close to him and on our knees — that is the formula.

Hot Seat - A Rite Of Spring

By JOHN CUNNIFF

NEW YORK (AP) — In the spring of the year, corporate executives often are placed on the hot seat for a day, after which they quickly regain their composure with comforting thoughts about a summer of yachting.

The hot seat is one of the rites of spring, annual meeting day, during which shareholders may for a few brief minutes express their views as owners, before retreating to another year in oblivion.

But the spring of this year is bringing more substantial complaints, from more substantial sources, and many of the complaints are directed very personally at top executives rather than at their management.

The scene is not always the annual meeting alone, but close enough to is so that the criticism is bound to use up a good deal of the day — and most likely many days to follow.

Henry Ford 2nd of Ford Motor, John Riccardo of Chrysler and Frank Milliken of Kennecott can attest to the unseasonble warm weather, but almost every other executive is also feeling heat — from Washington.

Barry Bosworth, President Carter's director of the Council on Wage and Price Stability, suggested to executives that they hold their salary increases to 5 percent this year — while inflation heads toward 7.

Such a statement, directed as it was, generates its own heat. Accustomed to performance bonuses as well as salaries and benefits, executives are bristling at the mere suggestion of giving up anything.

Worse still is the insinuation they are the cause of inflation — they who are forced to operate within budget limitations — when Washington is stained by $60 billion of red ink during relatively good times.

But while executives in general are hot under the collar, those sitting directly under the scorching spotlight, such as Ford, chairman of Ford Motor Co., are badly upset.

Accused in a lawsuit of accepting kickbacks and with conspiracy to divert coorporate funds, Ford issued a combined statement of denial and expression of his personal anger at the effrontery of the suit.

The issue, nevertheless, is bound to be a focus of shareholder interest at the annual meeting May 11, and is likely to detract from more positive statements the chairman was prepared to deliver.

Riccardo, Chrysler chairman, already has taken his blasts from angry shareholders at the annual meeting May 2, but his work is laid out for the rest of the year. His job: restore profitability.

Milliken, Kennecott chairman, has received his criticism primarily from Roland Berner, who called him at different times "incompetent" and "inept." Berner, chairman of Curtiss-Wright, is leading a stockholder attempt to take over the big copper producer.

These are not the kind of hot times that executives relish. They are, by contrast, times that make them dream of cool breezes as their yachts cut through the winds and waves.

Atheists Also Experiencing A Schism

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

NEW YORK (AP)-Atheists, those who believe there is no God and who promote faith in his non-existence, are experiencing some troubles familiar in religious history. They've been torn by schism.

Several former members of Madalyn Murray O'Hair's atheist group, the Society of Separationists (SOS) in Austin, Texas, say they either have resigned or were "excommunicated".

They formally launched their Freedom from Religion Foundation of Madison, Wis., as a national organization last month, with an active executive committee of 15 former members of the O'Hair group.

"Perhaps you could call our movement a sort of atheist reformation" says Anne Gaylor, president of the foundation which she had started prior to its conversion into a national organization.

Taking a swipe at the O'Hair group, she adds, "We think that a cause organization has no business owning Cadillacs or holding its meetings in the country's most expensive hotels."

Reports of rumblings and conflict in the O'Hair organization have gone on for some time, with disgruntled followers accusing her of monopolizing control, caustic rudeness, suppressing dissent and appointing relatives to major posts in the organization.

"We decided we wanted a democratic, accountable organization that is responsible to its membership," says Rodger L. Buck, a physician who hosted the founding meeting April 8-9 in Spencer, Ind.

Withdrawals from it by atheist chapters in about a half dozen states reportedly were precipitated by a stormy confrontation at a New Jersey meeting in February over smouldering complaints.

"We never thought we'd get kicked out," says Jane Conrad, head of the Colorado chapter of atheists, Quest for Truth, among those saying there were expelled by Mrs. O'Hair.

"I hadn't even opened my mouth," she says, but nevertheless says she was accused by Mrs. O'Hair of 'conspiracy ... and false and malicious representations against the national office."

Mrs. Conrad says that contrary to impressions that the O'Hair organization has 60,000 to 70,000 on its mailing list, she had learned the mailing list actually numbers 2,517 and membership 1,207.

This and other information reportedly came from a letter sent to members by Mrs. O'Hair's son, William Murray, who earlier had split with his mother to form his own organization.

Figures on the number of American atheists are unavailable, but repeated surveys have found that 97 to 98 per cent of the population believe in God.

Meanwhile, Mrs. O'Hair, the veteran atheist crusader who gained the 1963 U. S. Supreme Court decision banning Bible reading, the Lord's prayer and other devotions from public schools, is seeking in federal court to force removal of the motto, "In God We Trust" from U.S. coins and currency.

Says she: "We're all being forced to carry a symbol of God in our pockets."

Dedication Of Church Set Sunday Afternoon

Dedication and open house will be held Sunday, May 7 at Temple Free Will Baptist Church, beginning at 3 p.m.

The new church is located on State Road 1708 near the Sunshine Garden Center.

The Rev. Don R. Pegram, pastor of First Free Will Baptist Church, Newport News, Va., will preach the dedication address, according to Temple pastor, the Rev. Richard Kennedy.

Temple invited the public to attend the activities and see the newly occupied auditorium, educational and office facilities.

According to Kennedy, the facilities involve a 14,400 square foot structure housing a 440-seat auditorium and 19 educational classrooms and office complex.

REV. DON PEGRAM

The facilities, he added, are part of the initial phase of a construction program at Temple with future plans calling for a gymnasium-activities building to be constructed at the site. The church is located on a 25-acre site.

Reception and open house activities will follow the 3 p.m. dedication service.

Sunday Church Service Plans

Services will be held as follows at English Chapel F.W.B. Church Sunday. 11 a.m. Rev. James Smith and the junior choir and junior ushers will be in charge. 6 p.m. Deacons anniversary, with Rev. Mordicai from Wilson, and the senior choir of Cedar Grove Church, Greenville, will give the service. The pastor, Bishop W. L. Phillips, invites the public to attend.

Faith
Begins
With Crayons

Remember! Arithmetic began with apples: I had one. You gave me one. Then how many did I have?

So don't be surprised that Faith begins with crayons!

And never forget that in this free land your government compells only secular education. Rightly, it leaves the religious education of your children up to you.

From the first halting strokes with the crayon to the eager use of the Bible as a guide for life, the Church is your ally in the spiritual development of your child's soul.

But the compulsion must come from within . . . from your convictions . . . from your determination that your child may share your Faith.

Wise parents find their children's crying need for religious training a happy incentive for their own church life.

Raided Terrorist Bases In Angola

WINDHOEK, South-West Africa (AP) — South Africa says its troops have withdrawn from Angola after a raid against guerrillas of the South-West Africa People's Organization. One report said ohe raiders advanced 150 miles beyond the border.

Casualties were not announced.

Gen. J. J. Geldenhuys, commander of South African troops in South-West Africa, said his men concentrated on "terrorist installations and equipment" of SWAPO, which has been fighting a guerrilla war along the border between South-West Africa and Angola from bases in Angola.

"Strict precautions were taken to ensure that the local population and Angolan troops did not become involved," he claimed.

Defense Minister P. W. Botha called the raid a "limited operation" and said it was ordered after "large numbers of heavily armed SWAPO terrorists recently crossed the border, attacked our forces in Owambo and fled back to safety in Angola.

"After the attack, the latest since SWAPO intensified its hostilities, we were forced to resort to follow-up operations. I trust that the limited operation will leave those who wish to threaten us under no illusion."

The Weekly Guardian, a leftist New York newspaper, said its correspondent in Lusaka, Zambia, where SWAPO has its headquarters, reported the raiders' target was a "refugee" camp at Cassinga, 150 miles north of the border.

The report said the camp was bombed and then occupied by South African paratroopers.

It was South Africa's first admitted raid into Angola in three months.

In Washington, the State Department said it expressed "dismay" to the South African government and asked for "an urgent explanation."

Few Voters Prohibited In Orange County Test

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Only "two or three" of nearly 3,000 Orange County voters whose right to vote had been challenged were prohibited from voting in Tuesday's primary.

Nearly 6,000 registered voters in Orange County had been challenged by a group of citizens from the northern end of Orange Vounty. They contended that the 6,000 were full-time students at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, and therefore, not legal residents of the county. The list was later cut to about 3,000.

Leaders of the Democratic Party in Orange said the challenges were an attempt to prevent liberal-leaning students in Chapel Hill from voting in Orange County elections.

Joe Nassif, Orange County elections board chairman, said Wednesday he had not received an exact report on how many of the challenges had been upheld during hearings held at the polling places Tuesday, but he estimated only "two or three" were disqualified from voting.

One of the challenged voters refused to answer the list of questions the state Board of Elections had given Orange election officials to determine if a voter was actually a resident of the county. The 10-question form is designed to give a subjective guide to whether a person attending school is a legal resident of the town in which the school is located.

Christine Opp, who works with the National Institute of Trial Advocacy (an attorney education program affiliated with the UNC Law School), refused to answer the questions.

"The first thing they asked was if I was a student," Ms. Opp said. She refused to answer the question. She said the election officials at the polls attempted to hold a hearing then on the challenge to her right to vote. She declined to go through with the hearing.

Ms. Opp contends that if she had answered the questions asked her, she would have been assuming the burden of proving she was a legal resident of Orange County. She said the burden of proof should be on the person challenging the voter's rights.

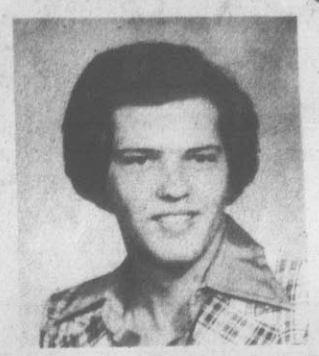

Ms. Opp was not allowed to vote in Tuesday's primary, and she said she is going to fight the decision.

"I don't intend to let it drop," she said. "The right to vote is a real important, fundamental American right for me."

She has conferred with her attorney, Adam Stein of Chapel Hill, and she said it is possible she will file a lawsuit against those who challenged her vote.

Jerry Cohen, vice-chairman of the county Democratic party, said the voter challenges seemed to have little effect on the outcome of most races. He said a spot check of some precincts in Chapel Hill showed about 41 percent of those challenged voted. He said that was about the parallel to total voter turnout in the county.

Again Lambasts Neutron Bomb

By ROBERT H. REID
Associated Press Writer

BONN, West Germany (AP) — Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev in the first speech of his West German visit has sounded a new call against the U.S. neutron bomb.

"Let us agree to renounce the production and the stationing of new systems of mass destruction weapons," he said at a state dinner Thursday night. "By binding mutual agreements, we exclude (the possibility) that the neutron weapon, which they want to present the peoples of our continent like an ominous Greek gift, will see the light of day."

Brezhnev also urged greater efforts for detente, saying those in the West who oppose better East-West relations "think that fear and ill will against the Soviet Union and other socialist countries should be part of their national policy even at the risk of a new war. Others are mistaken, it seems, in believing the words of those who presuppose ill intentions the Soviet Union does not have."

The United States developed the neutron warhead as a weapon against the Soviet Union's superior numbers of tanks in central Europe, and if accepted by the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, it would be deployed in West Germany, NATO's first line of defense against a Soviet bloc invasion of Western Europe. By using the "Greek gift" analogy, Brezhnev clearly was warning the Germans the American weapon was a Trojan Horse.

President Carter has postponed his decision to put the neutron warhead into production or cancel it in hopes of using it as a bargaining counter in disarmament negotiations with the Russians. Brezhnev proposed a joint U.S.-Soviet ban on neutron weapons last week, but Carter said this was no concession because the Soviets don't need the weapon.

Brezhnev, making his first trip to the West in 11 months, met with Chancellor Helmut Schmidt after his arrival Thursday, and a West German spokesman Klaus Boelling said the session was "pleasantly open and factual."

The visit will last until Sunday. Boelling said three documents will be signed: a joint declaration, a 25-year economic cooperation agreement and a communique summing up all matters discussed.

Brezhnev's visit was scheduled originally for last September but was postponed repeatedly because of his health. The 71-year-old Soviet leader was ill with influenza last winter and is reported to wear a heart pacemaker because of an irregular heartbeat.

He walked slowly, and a military aide held him lightly by the arm as he descended from his plane Thursday morning, but he appeared healthy.

Request State Slow UNC System Growth

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Officials of private colleges have urged the state to slow the growth rate of the University of North Carolina system to save public funds and help insure the survival of non-public schools.

The Council of Trustees for Independent Higher Education in North Carolina unanimously adopted a position paper Thursday calling for stabilization of the growth of public universities.

Although there is only a 4 percent vacancy rate at the 38 private colleges across North Carolina, officials said the rate could increase in the 1980s because the increase in the number of students is expected to slow.

The position paper urged the UNC system to consider stabilizing the growth of student enrollment, new liberal arts and teacher education programs and the construction of facilities such as dormitories.

"We would hope that additional capital appropriations for the state sector would be used for qualitative purposes, including the renovation of existing structures, rather than any construction of facilities designed for enrollment growth," the paper said.

At the same time, the private college council urged its member institutions to take care not to expand too rapidly.

It also suggested that the state consider contracting with private colleges when new education services are needed in a particular geographic area and called for an increase in state aid to private colleges from $500 to $600 per student this year.

The council asked the state Board of Education to "investigate the proliferation of college transfer degree programs in liberal arts at technical institutes when these services are available in private and other public senior institutions which are geographically accessible."

Terry Sanford, president of Duke University, said there should be an increase in state aid to private colleges to help ensure their continued existence. He said state funds keep tuition low in public colleges, making it difficult for private schools to compete for students.

Improved Corn Hybrid Sought

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Scientists at North Carolina State University are experimenting with the manipulation of genes to develop types of corn that will top even the best of today's high-yield hybrids.

Dr. Charles Levings, a geneticist at N.C. State, says corn hybridization — or cross-breeding of superior strains of corn — has been used to produce plants that are resistant to disease, able to withstand droughts, produce high yields and have uniform-shaped kernels.

But he said sexual barriers prevent the crossing of certain strains of corn plants, limiting the use of some superior types of plants. And a good hybrid will contain the weaknesses, as well as the strengths, of the two parent strains.

Those weaknesses would be eliminated under a process called gene transfer that is being studied by Levings and other researchers.

A specific gene — an information carrier that contributes to the characteristics of a plant or animal — is chosen to bring with it a specific trait. The gene does not carry with it any other unwanted characteristics.

Levings said the gene transfer process, when perfected, could be used in numerous ways. For instance, he said, a farmer whose soil lacks nitrogen could use a type of corn specifically developed through gene transfer to fix its own nitrogen, eliminating the need for addition of nitrogen fertilizer.

The research at NCSU involves working with molecular structures that make up the living cell.

"To say when gene transfers will become commonplace is impossible, but I can assure you that molecular engineering of this kind will happen," Levings said. "And that's a certainty."

At Planters you can avoid complicated tie-ins and service charges with a simple $100 minimum balance in checking.

You won't see them advertising it, but a lot of North Carolina banks have raised the cost of "free" checking by doubling your minimum balance. And complicated your once simple checking account by introducing unwanted options. Like requiring you to have other accounts.

Fortunately, we're not one of them.

At Planters, the checking minimum is still $100. We've also lowered the monthly maximum by eliminating those unpredictable per check charges with a new flat $2 fee (if your balance ever falls below $100). Chances are you'll save money.

Now, when you put it all together — our simple $100 minimum, our new $2 maximum, plus the easiest-to-balance monthly statement in North Carolina — you've got every reason you need to check with Planters.

WE STILL KNOW THE VALUE OF YOUR DOLLAR.

"While other banks have raised their minimum balance for no cost checking to $200 and complicated things with unnecessary options, tie-ins and high service charges, we've made it simple. Our minimum is $100."

Arrested 5

Greenville Police early this morning arrested five persons in one car — three of them on drug law violation charges— following an incident at the intersection of First and Jarvis Streets.

Chief Glenn Cannon said officers stopped a car driven by William Franklin Cannon of Ayden about 1:45 a.m. because the vehicle was traveling without its headlights on.

As a result of that incident, the chief said Cannon was charged with driving under the influence and driving without headlights.

Further investigation led to the arrest of the four passengers on various charges, Cannon noted.

They included: Curtis Wayne Stancill, Route 2, Ayden, possession of marijuana and cocaine; George Michael Butts, Riverside Trailer Pk., public drunk; Johnny Ray Stancil, Route 2, Ayden, public drunk and possession of marijuana; and William Earl Anderson, Ayden, possession of marijuana.

Said Killed By Escapee

ROCKINGHAM, N.C. (AP) — A fugitive from a Georgia prison, released on bond in South Carolina while fighting extradition, has been charged with murdering a Laurinburg man.

Lt. Frank Stewart of the Richmond County sheriff's office said Thursday that James Carl Quick of McColl, S.C., is being sought in the slaying of Wesley Harold Thompson, 26. He said a murder warrant was filed earlier this week.

Thompson's body was found Monday afternoon in a wooded area near a dirt road south of Rockingham. He was identified from a name tag in one of his boots. An autopsy showed Thompson had been shot under the right arm.

Quick, a 26-year-old native of Laurinburg, was given a life sentence in 1972 after being convicted in Muscogee County, Ga., of armed robbery and kidnapping.Authorities said he escaped from a Georgia prison last Aug. 22 and was apprehended by FBI agents in Florence, S.C. He disappeared after being released under $5,000 bond while fighting extradition to Georgia.

Stewart was last seen in McColl Monday while driving a car belonging to Thompson, investigators said.

Bond Is Denied 3 Accused Kidnappers

By CARL MANNING
Associated Press Writer

HUNTINGDON, Tenn. (AP) — With Ben Gaines intently watching, the three men accused of kidnapping his 18-year-old daughter were denied bond Thursday by a General Sessions Court judge and returned to jail.

The handcuffed trio was spirited up the Carroll County Courthouse steps by FBI agents as about 200 residents gathered around the building to watch. They were taken into a packed courtroom for a bond hearing — the first step toward their trial, which is not expected to be conducted before this fall.

Charged in state warrants with kidnapping for ransom are David Michael Wilson, 24, an unemployed truck driver and a former employee at Gaines' furniture manufacturing plant; William Andrew Dixon, 22, and his brother, Harvey Douglas Dixon, 19.

Kidnapping for ransom carries a penalty of 20 years to life imprisonment without parole.

The next step for the trio is a preliminary hearing within 10 days at which time the men could enter a plea. Unless a special session is called, the next term of the grand jury will be in September.

After Judge Walton West agreed with prosecutors to deny bond, the men were returned to the Henry County jail in nearby Paris, where authorities said they will be held until at least their preliminary hearing.

Meanwhile, kidnap victim Jodie Elizabeth Gaines is slowly recovering from a 3½-day ordeal that began with her abduction Friday night and ended with her escape Tuesday morning. She freed herself from the bed to which she was shackled in an isolated concrete-block cabin in a thickly-wooded area of Henry County.

"She's doing much better," Gaines told a reporter after the 20-minute hearing. He said Jodie is staying inside the family's two-story white brick home in neighboring McKenzie.

Asked when his daughter would to be able to leave the house, he said, "It'll be quite awhile."

FBI agents removed the manacles from the men after they entered the courtroom. Throughout the hearing, all three sat impassively with officers standing behind them.

Three deputies with walkie-talkies perched atop the courthouse roof and six others lined the steps when the men were escorted in. About 20 minutes earlier, an FBI agent asked officers to clear the steps of all but about two dozen reporters.

Wilson told the judge he would try to retain an attorney. The Dixon brothers said, however, they could not afford attorneys.

Miss Gaines was accosted last Friday night on a country road near McKenzie by persons posing as policemen.

Her escape Tuesday morning came after her parents made a futile attempt to pay the $250,000 ransom, which authorities later recovered. During her ordeal, she said her abductors argued over whether to murder her, but one opposed it and he prevailed. She was left Monday night shackled to a iron bed, but freed herself by pounding for 10 hours with her free hand on the frame until it broke.

Executives Are Terror Targets

By VICTOR L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Writer

ROME (AP) — Terrorists peppered the legs of two more Italian industrial executives with bullets Thursday night while investigators quizzed aides of Aldo Moro to try to learn if the political leader's family is communicating secretly with his kidnappers.

Umberto Degli Innocenti, 51, an engineer for a Milan communications equipment firm, was shot on the steps of his home. Alfredo Lamberti, 41, a labor relations officer for a Genoa steel firm, was attacked as he walked near the Genoa railway station.

They were the third and fourth men shot in the legs within nine days. The Red Brigades, the urban guerrilla group that kidnapped Moro in a bloody street ambush March 16, announced it was responsible for all four attacks. The technique, called "kneecapping," originated in the guerrilla war in Northern Ireland.

Meanwhile, assistant national attorney Guido Guasco called in three of Moro's aides for questioning because a series of handwritten letters from the missing president of the Christian Democratic Party to other political leaders went to his family last weekend before they were sent on to the addressees.

The Moro family has repeatedly denied it is negotiating with the Red Brigades and has attacked the Christian Democratic leadership because it refuses to negotiate. But government investigators said they want to find out how the family is getting messages directly from the kidnappers.

"We were asked things that they thought we might know," said Sereno Freato, one of the three aides. He said there was "a cordial exchange of ideas," but he and the others refused to reveal anything.

"There seems to be no doubt that letters not only come from the Red Brigades' prison but also go there," said the Communist Party newspaper Unita. It did not say on what it based that conclusion.

An unidentified man telephoned the Brussels headquarters of the Belgian news agency, Belga, from Duesseldorf, West Germany, early today and said: "This is the Red Brigades. We want to announce the execution of Aldo Moro who was found guilty of charges brought against him and executed immediately afterward."

The agency said it could not determine if the call was authentic. But the phrase "executed immediately afterward" indicated it was not. The Red Brigades announced on April 15 that Moro had been sentenced to death by a "people's court" but five days later they released a picture of him with a newspaper of the day before to prove that a report he had been killed was a hoax.

The succession of handwritten leaders from Moro pleading for an exchange of imprisoned terrorists for him has been proof that he was alive as late as last weekend.

Vote-Getter Won't Serve

FAYETTEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — The platform of Norma Currie of Fayetteville that if elected coroner of Cumberland County, she would not serve, apparently appealed to many voters Tuesday.

Mrs. Currie was the top vote-getter in the race with 5,000 votes. Second-place finisher Earl Britt had 3,814 votes.

Mrs. Currie contends that the county coroner has little to do and that the job ought to be abolished. She says that would save the county $41,000 over a four-year period.

However, Britt is expected to call for a runoff election. And if all those who voted for Britt and the seven other candidates in the coroner's race throw their support to Britt, Mrs. Currie could be defeated.

"I suppose Mr. Britt thinks he could get all of those votes," Mrs. Currie said. "I think each of those (other candidates) was out for himself, and they know there's nothing to the job. I was thinking positive of this all along, and I will continue to think positive."

One of the first things Mrs. Currie says she will do is take the matter to the Cumberland County Board of Commissioners and "hope they ask our legislative delegation to bring it up as soon as possible in the General Assembly. They've put it off for the past four years."

Mrs. Currie said she thinks the coroner's job wastes the county's funds, but she says she'll do the job for nothing if the county really thinks it needs a coroner.

Assassination Plot Is Charged Three Exiles

WASHINGTON (AP) — The FBI today charged three Cuban exiles with conspiracy to assassinate former Chilean official Orlando Letelier.

The FBI said one of the suspects was under arrest and the two others were being sought.

Letelier, who served as Chilean ambassador to the United States from 1971 to 1973, was killed when a bomb explosion wrecked his car while he drove to work Sept. 21, 1976, in Washington. Also killed in the blast was Ronni Moffit, a research assistant who worked with Letelier at the Institute for Policy Studies, a research organization.

The FBI said Ignacio Novo Sampol was arrested in Newark, N.J., late Thursday. Novo, 39, was said to be a naturalized U.S. citizen and the brother of Guillermo Novo Sampol, who is being held in New York on unrelated charges but who the FBI has said figures in its investigation of the Letelier murder.

The FBI said the two other men charged and being sought are Jose Dionisio Suariz Esquivel, 39, and Virgilio Paz Romero, 26, both naturalized U.S. citizens and Cuban exiles.

The FBI last month charged a fourth man, Michael V. Townley, with conspiracy to murder Letelier. Townley, an American who had been residing in Chile and has links with the Chilean secret police, has been cooperating with prosecutors in the case, according to the Washington Post.

Letelier was an exiled critic of Chile's right-wing military government. He had served as Chile's ambassador to the United States under Marxist President Salvador Allende and had held various cabinet posts in the Allende government.

After a military coup in 1973 deposed Allende, Letelier was arrested and imprisoned. He later was released and moved to Washington.

Banks Increase Prime Rate

CHARLOTTE, N. C. (AP) — North Carolina National Bank, the state's largest banking institution, and First Union National Bank announced today an increase in the prime lending rate from 8 percent to 8¼ per cent.

The prime rate is the interest charged a bank's largest and best corporate customers for short-term borrowing.

A bank spokesman said the increase locally is intended to keep pace with similar increases instituted by major New York City banks last week.

morning.

According to the Greenville Utilities Commission weather station, the Tar River level at 8 a.m. today was 18.3 feet, some 5.3 feet over the 13-foot flood stage.

The National Weather Service in Raleigh yesterday predicted the Tar would crest at 18.5 feet this afternoon. However, spokesmen said a new forecast, taking into account last night's rains, would be available about Noon today.

The high river water has caused flooding of River Drive in the area of Tar River Estates, and surrounds the party house at the apartment complex.

Apartment manager Jerry Cox emphasised this morning that although water is in the streets, no apartments have been affected by Tar waters.

On Stancill Drive, the Tar River was lapping at the foundations of apartments there, while on Summit Street, the Tar flooded the parking lot of an apartment building, forcing residents to wade to and from their rooms.

The GUC weather station recorded 2.40 inches of rain between midnight Wednesday and midnight Thursday, while recording 1.86 inches of rain between midnight last night and 8 a.m. today.

The high temperature yesterday was 73 degrees, while the low was 51 degrees. The temperature stood at 52 degrees at 8 a.m.

"ranting and raving" about his decisions.

He said that the best approach will be to go into Califano's office and talk with him about North Carolina, the tobacco industry and how it relates to jobs and other matters instead of bickering with him.

The government, according to Hodges, has the responsibility to spend more money on medical research involving the tobacco industry and pursue research into alternative uses of tobacco.

The Democrat, who was scheduled to make an airport stop here Wednesday, cancelled the trip "when they started talking about tornadoes."

Hodges joked that he kept his determination as a candidate but his pilot "lost his courage" in view of the weather.

Cold water washing conserves energy.

Every day the front page of almost any newspaper tells the story.

Declining petroleum reserves. Coal problems. Rising inflation. The threat of mandatory energy cutbacks. Billions of American dollars spent on foreign oil.

It's obvious the energy crisis isn't going away. If anything, it's getting worse. That's why it's so important that we all save energy in every way possible.

So read our reminder notes. If they can help you conserve this summer, cut them out and put them up around your house. These are the things you can do to help save energy and keep your electric bill in line.

What's Vepco doing to help?

Among other things, our nuclear units are providing the lowest cost energy available in our area. And every kilowatt-hour of electricity they generate helps us save on the more expensive coal and oil that would otherwise have been used. As part of our balanced mix of generation, nuclear power is seeing us all through some tough times.

Together we'll make it through this energy situation. If you help conserve, and if Vepco can continue to build a balanced power supply, neither of us will be wasting our energy.

Vepco

America is a powerful idea. Let's keep it that way.

NEW YORK (AP) — A wave of buying in oil stocks provided the impetus for a rally in the stock market today.

The noon Dow Jones average of 30 industrials was up 7.88 at 832.29, bouncing back from a 19.92-point drop over the past three sessions.

Gainers outpaced losers by a 2-1 margin among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Many of the big-name oil stocks jumped ahead on heavy volume today after an Associated Press story crossed financial news wires quoting a Continental Oil drilling foreman as saying early exploratory drilling in the Atlantic Ocean off New Jersey had encountered "very promising" rock formations.

Continental later said the foreman's statements gave a "misleading and premature" impression about the prospects of the drilling efforts.

After that, the oil stocks eased back a bit, but the general market remained strong.

Analysts noted that investors are watching the search for oil off the New Jersey Coast extremely closely because of the key role oil plays in such economic problems as inflation and the decline of the dollar.

Continental shares were up ⅞ at 28⅛. Exxon, ahead by as much as 1⅜ at one point, showed a ⅝ gain at 47⅝.

Pan American World Airways, the most active NYSE issue, climbed ⅜ to 7⅛ in trading that included a 275,000-share block at 6⅞.

The NYSE's composite index picked up .50 to 54.10. On the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up .76 at 139.55.

Trading was heavy. Volume on the Big Board volume totaled 18.71 million shares by noontime.

The CDC, in its Morbidity and Mortality Weekly Report, said that if no cases of the disease are found in the countries of Somalia, Ethoiopia, Djibouti, Kenya, Yemen and Democratic Yemen by October 1979, the disease will have been eradicated on a global basis.

The last case of smallpox was reported in Merka, Somalia, in October, 1977.

A global commission has been established by the World Health Organization to monitor the disease.

That commission will be reponsible for obtaining certification by international commission in 15 countries not yet visited by commissions; for obtaining special documentation or visits to 16 countries and for requesting statement from other countries declaring their smallpox-free status, the CDC said.

Fishermen Find Gold In Ocean

TOKYO (AP) — Japanese fishermen on their way home found 24 gold bars in two packages suspended from inner tubes about a mile off the southern coast of Honshu.

The Maritime Safety Board said the gold was worth about $265,000 and probably was to have been picked up by smugglers bound for South Korea, where gold sells for premium prices.

Publishing Career Came By Accident

TRAPPE, Md. (AP) — No one is more surprised than M. Clarke Reed Jr. at finding himself the editor, publisher and chief writer for a magazine with what he likes to call an international circulation.

The tall, bearded man moved here seeking a simpler, quieter and healthier life. He took over Decoy World by happenstance.

"I had been a subscriber to Decoy World for years, and when I heard the owner was about to give it up, I thought it would be a shame if it disappeared," the 52-year-old publisher said.

Every three months or so, Reed holes up in a small office at his home and prepares another issue of the quarterly dedicated to decoy carving and collecting. He has 1,200 subscribers in the United States and 42 in Germany, France and Canada.

When he took over the magazine, Reed had no background in publishing — other than a college degree in classical literature — and he still hasn't bothered to get a typewriter for his editorial office. He sends handwritten copy to his printer in Easton.

Three years ago at the peak of his career as the head of a small laminated plastics firm in Baltimore, Reed decided to radically change his life. He dismantled the firm and moved his large family to the Eastern Shore.

"When we made the move, I wasn't independently wealthy and had no pension," Reed said. "People told me I couldn't do it, but you can if you really want to."

He has supplemented his income from savings by running an antique and decoy shop, dabbling in real estate, and managing a warehouse in Cambridge, where two of his sons run a small business.

Since Reed and his wife, Jane, took over Decoy World, they've doubled its circulation. She handles subscriptions, classifieds and other editorial chores.

It's strictly a hobby so far. "We have yet to make a profit, but at least we're just about breaking even now," the editor said.

Reed does much of the reporting and writing himself, traveling to decoy shows to get material.

Yarborough Zips Around Track To Capture Winston 500 Pole

By JERRY GARRETT
AP Motorsports Writer

TALLADEGA, Ala. (AP) — A runner needs at least nine seconds to complete a 100-yard dash. Cale Yarborough can do it in less than one second, with the help of his powerful Oldsmobile 442. He did it most of the way around the 2.66-mile Alabama International Motor Speedway track Thursday in winning the pole position for Sunday's $250,000 Winston 500 Grand National stock car race.

To travel the length of a football field in one second, one must be moving at least 204.54547 mph. Yarborough, who had to slow down some in the corners, averaged 191.904 mph, easily exceeding 200 mph on the straightaways.

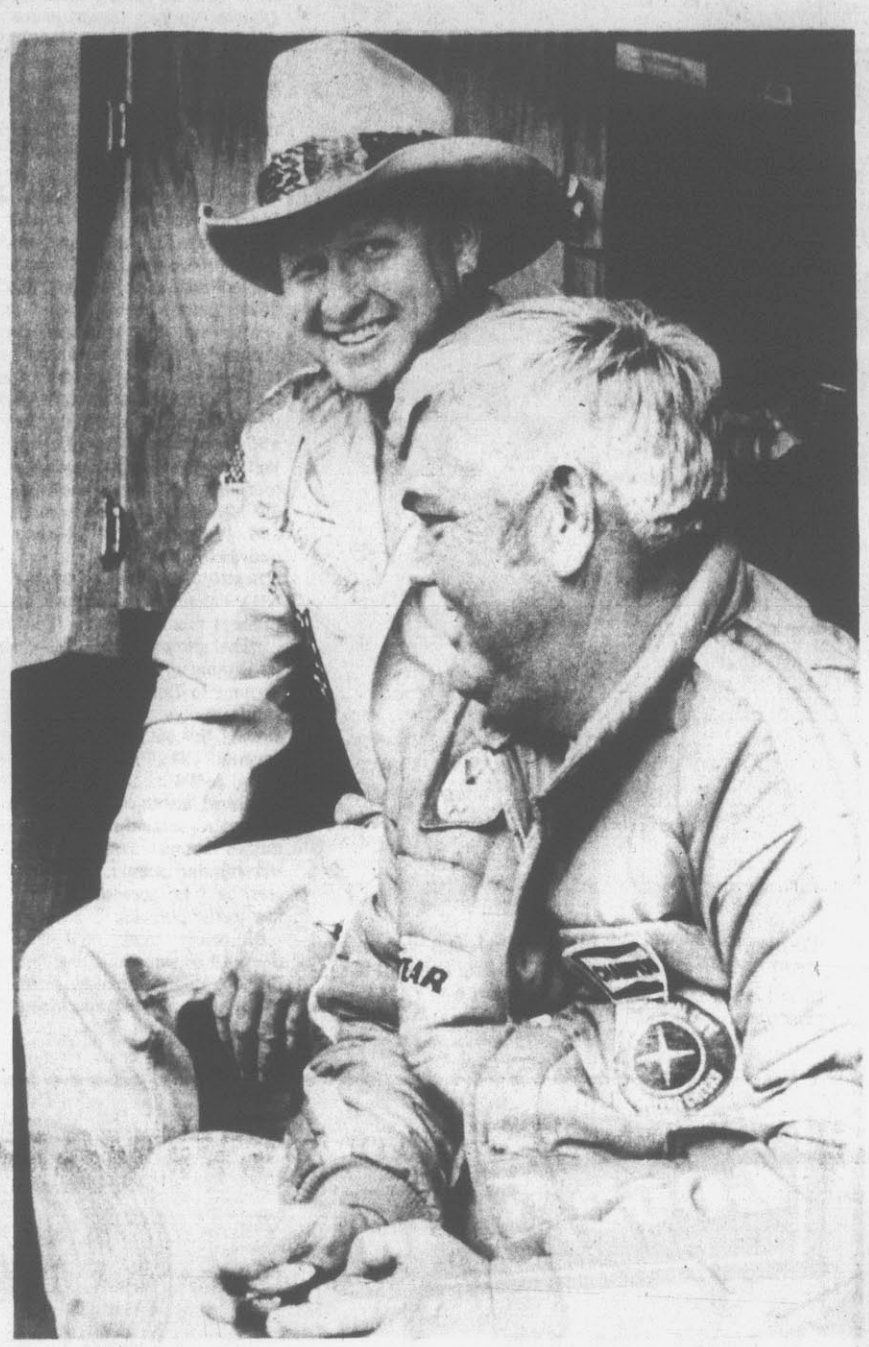

"Man, my heart is still going 200 mph," Yarborough said after the fastest qualifying run on the circuit this season. "That's one of the hairiest rides I've ever had. We really didn't know what the race car would do because I got here late and didn't have time to practice.

"We figured that A.J. Foyt and maybe a couple of others would run at least 190. In order to have a shot at beating them, we had to set the car so it would be loose and not bog down.

"When you stick too tight at those speeds it slows you down. You feel a whole lot better about running those speeds when the car sticks and is stable. It felt like I was sideways all the way around on that first lap — well, really on both laps.

"But I figured we had the pole if I made it. I did, but I wouldn't want to do it again right now."

Foyt was the only other qualifier to top the 190 mark. He earned the other front row spot in the 40-car starting field.

Reason To Smile

Stock car driver Cale Yarborough (l) and his crew chief Junior Johnson, a top driver in his day, have reason to smile as they put the clock to the competition at Talladega's Alabama International Raceway Thursday. Yarborough won the pole position with a speed of 191.739 mph for Sunday's 500-mile race. (AP Laserphoto)

Hole-In-1 Contest

A Hole-In-One golf competition, sponsored by the Greenville Civitan Club, will be held Saturday and Sunday from 2 to 8 p.m. at the J.H. Rose High School athletic field.

The contest, according to Glenn Cox, chairman, will enable participants to test their skill in driving a golf ball across a 90-125 yard range towards a regulation size cup. Prizes will be awarded to the players who come closest to the hole and a grand prize worth $50 will be given to the first golfer to make a hole-in-one.

Entry fees are $1 for three balls and $2.50 for ten. Golf clubs and balls will be provided.

All fees collected during the event, which is one of many service projects supported annually by the Civitan Club, will be used to fund programs for the Association for Retarded Citizens.

Rose: 3,000 Tonight

CINCINNATI (AP) — Pete Rose, on the verge of being the 13th major leaguer to get 3,000 career hits, predicts tonight is the night.

The Cincinnati Reds third baseman has 2,998 hits going into tonight's game with the Montreal Expos.

"Friday night," Rose predicted. "I don't want to upstage the Kentucky Derby" on Saturday, he joked.

Rose, who will lead off the Reds against Steve Rogers, 2-3, had two worries: First, he doesn't want to make an error that might cost the Reds the game if he gets the two hits, and, second, he does not want the final hit to be one of dispute over the ruling of the official scorer.

On Thursday, Rose spent the day making a broadcast commercial with the man who was there when Rose started his career in the Reds farm system at Geneva, N.Y., in 1960 — Tony Perez.

Perez, traded before last season by Cincinnati to the Expos, was asked what he remembered about Rose his first year in the minors.

"Nothing good," Perez smiled. "He was not that good a hitter. He hit .277. He was terrible playing second base. I don't know why they didn't kill him on double plays. Every time he pivoted they hit him.

"All he did was hustle and work hard. He went out before every game to field ground balls at second base. He told me he was a catcher in school but he worked and became a good second baseman," said Perez, still a close friend to Rose.

Rose was moved up to Tampa in 1961 leaving Perez behind. "They wanted me to work on my English," said the Cuban native. "I no can communicate with the other players and they wanted me to get better so I stay behind."

Three years later, Perez recalled, "I been hearing about Pete all along, about how he lead the league at Tampa in triples and how he hit .330 at Macon. Then I see, he is in the big leagues."

Perez joined Rose with the Reds the following year but was not yet a close friend of Rose.

"He ran with Tommy Helms (former Reds infielder). We never see him. They were crazy," Perez said.

In 1966, Rose, Perez, Lee May and Helms began running together, on the field.

"The big thing is the families. Pituka (Perez' wife) got to know Karolyn (Rose) and then the kids came along and they played together. You get close. You become friends.

"The thing is, you look after the guy. You care for him," said Perez.

"First thing I do when I pick up the paper in the morning is look at the box score, see what Pete did, what the others did" among his former Reds teammates.

Tom Hume, 2-1, was scheduled to pitch for the Reds tonight.

Jockey Charges

BALTIMORE (AP) — A jockey, whose fallen horse touched off a four-horse spill that resulted in the death of one jockey, has blamed the accident at Pimlico Race Course on injections of anti-inflammation drugs.

But his theory was rejected Thursday by a Maryland racing commission official.

Rudy Turcotte, who suffered a fractured collarbone Wednesday, was riding Easy Edith when her front leg snapped during the second race.

Robert Pineda, 25, who was aboard the horse directly behind Easy Edith, died of "multiple chest injuries," according to Dr. Ann Dixon, an assistant state medical examiner. He was "trodden upon," she said.

Easy Edith had been injected with butazolidin, known as "bute," and lasix, two anti-inflammation drugs that are legal in Maryland. The mare was destroyed at the track after the accident.

Robert Banning, chairman of the Thoroughbred Board of the Maryland Racing Commission, said it would be "unfair" for him to make a blanket statement that drugs caused the death of Pineda.

Holtz To Speak At Sports Club

The Greenville Sports Club will hold its annual banquet Wednesday at 6:30 p.m. at the Greenville Moose Lodge.

University of Arkansas head football coach Lou Holtz will be the featured speaker for the evening.

Holtz, who began his head coaching career at William & Mary, enjoyed much of his success at N.C. State prior to accepting the head coaching position with the New York Jets of the National Football League.

But he resigned that position after one year to return to the college ranks at Arkansas, where he has completed his first year. Arkansas, nationally ranked all season, lost only one regular season game under Holtz, and defeated Oklahoma in the Orange Bowl. Holtz was later named by several groups as the national Coach of the Year.

Awards will also be presented to the outstanding athletes in each of the five high male and one female athletes in each of the five county high schools, as well as East Carolina University, with one male and female high school star being honored as Athlete of the Year.

Tickets for the banquet are $10 each for members, their wives or dates, and other members of their immediate family. Non-members and their guests are $15 each.

Mariners are available in 14 models from 2 to 140 horsepower. Before we sell them, we thoroughly test them. Just to get to your dealer, they had to be good.

The Quality Of Life Matters

Dodgers Don't Give Foes Any Rest

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

The Los Angeles Dodgers just don't give you any rest.

First it was Rick Monday with the hottest bat in the National League in April.

Now it's Reggie Smith getting away to a blazing start in May.

The Dodgers' illustrious switch-hitter has taken up where Monday left off, knocking in three runs Thursday for the second straight day as Los Angeles beat the Chicago Cubs 4-1.

"Reggie is the pivotal man on our club," said Dodger Manager Tom Lasorda. "He leads by execution. When he gets big hits, everything falls into place."

They certainly fell in for Smith at Chicago's wind-lashed Wrigley Field Thursday.

In the first inning, his two-run homer fell into the left field seats as he batted from the right side of the plate. Then he turned to the left side and smashed a sacrifice fly. He also had a double in the ninth.

His home run, incidentally, was hit through the teeth of a 22 mph wind.

"I wasn't worried about it going foul," he said, "but I really hit it well and I was afraid it might be a heartbreaker by hanging up in the wind."

Smith also drove in three runs in Wednesday's 9-5 victory on a triple, a double and a pair of singles that helped the Dodgers break a three-game losing streak.

In other National League action, the New York Mets defeated the Atlanta Braves 8-2. A game between San Francisco and St. Louis was rained out. In the American League, the Boston Red Sox whipped the Minnesota Twins 8-1 while rain postponed the Texas-Baltimore game.

Smith's first-inning homer, following a single by Bill Russell, was all the support Rick Rhoden needed in winning his fourth decision without a defeat.

"I'm thowing as well as I can," said Rhoden, who shook his head negatively when asked if this was his best start.

"I was 5-0 last year and 9-0 in 1976," said Rhoden. "In the past when I didn't have good stuff I'd try to overpower the hitters. Now I can go to my breaking stuff."

Mets 8, Braves 2

Bobby Valentine drilled a two-run homer and drew a bases-loaded walk and Jerry Koosman pitched a seven-hitter as New York beat Atlanta. Valentine's homer came off Phil Niekro to cap a three-run sixth.

"The homer was on an inside knuckler," said Valentine. "It was just floating around waiting to be hit. I'm a zone swinger on knuckleballs. I swing in a zone and hope the ball floats into it."

Red Sox 8, Twins 1

Jim Rice clouted a pair of triples and knocked in three runs to help Dennis Eckersley notch his first victory in a Boston uniform as the Red Sox beat Minnesota. Eckersley, 1-1 in his sixth start of the year, scattered four hits.

The Call Is Safe

Los Angeles Dodger catcher Jerry Grote (9) reaches with the tag as Chicago Cubs' Ivan DeJesus crosses the plate during the eighth inning of Thursday's game in Chicago. DeJesus was safe on Greg Gross' fly to left field. Making the call is umpire Lee Weyer. Los Angeles won 4-1. (AP Laserphoto)

Old Derby, Young Jockey

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Trainer Laz Barrera describes jockey Steve Cauthen as being almost as old as the Kentucky Derby. That 3-year-old classic turns 104 on Saturday while Cauthen only recently turned 18.

"Cauthen's 100 years old," says Barrera of Cauthen, who does indeed have poise and experience beyond his tender years. Cauthen, who has been riding in New York this week, makes his Derby debut on Affirmed, the 7-5 early second choice for the 1¼-mile event, which has attracted a field of 11 3-year-olds.

Cauthen, the top jockey in winners and purse earnings last year, is no newcomer to the Churchill Downs track, having got his start here several years ago. However, he became Affirmed's regular rider last year only after veterans Angel Cordero and Laffit Pincay could not devote full time to riding Affirmed, owned by Harbor View Farm.

The first leg of racing's Triple Crown, worth $239,400 if all go with a first prize of $186,900, boils down to a four-horse race with Calumet Farm's Alydar the early line favorite at even money, and Top of the Marc Stable's Sensitive Prince the third pick at 6-1 followed by Hickory Tree Stable's Believe It at 8-1.

Affirmed and Alydar, each unbeaten in four starts this year, meet for the first time this year. As a 2-year-old, Affirmed beat Alydar in four of their six meetings, but because of sentiment and impressive victories in the Blue Grass, Flamingo and the Florida Derby, Alydar is expected to go off as the favorite with Jorge Velasquez in the saddle.

In the draw for post position Thursday, John Veitch, trainer of Alydar, got his wish by landing an outside post position, No. 10. Affirmed, winner of the Hollywood and Santa Anita derbies, will go from post No. 2.

Alydar would seem to have drawn the more favorable spot because he is in a good shape to avoid a traffic jam at the start.

Sonics Meet Nuggets Tonight

DENVER (AP) — The Seattle SuperSonics, who started the National Basketball Association season by losing 17 of their first 22 games, meet the Denver Nuggets tonight in the opening game of a best-of-seven series for the Western Conference championship.

The winner of the series will meet the winner of the Washington-Philadelphia series for the NBA championship.

For two of the Sonics, center Marvin Webster and forward Paul Silas, tonight's game will be a homecoming of sorts. Both played for the Nuggets last year before being sent to Seattle in the trade which brought guard Bobby Wilkerson to Denver.

"I didn't really want to go there, because I wanted it to be all over with Denver," said Webster Wednesday night after learning the Nuggets had beaten Milwaukee in the seventh and deciding game of their quarter-final series.

Seattle defeated defending NBA champion Portland to make it into the series.

"The game is going to build up around myself and Paul returning to Denver," said Webster. "But you can't, as professionals, go out there and take revenge. That can hurt the team, and I'm not going to do anything like that."

Seattle won three of four games against Denver during the regular season, and Webster said he sees that as the key to the playoffs.

"I really think we'll beat them 4-1 or something like that. I'm not underestimating them, but I just have that much confidence," he said.

Washington-Philadelphia

The injury jinx has struck the Washington Bullets again, jeopardizing their chances against the Philadelphia 76ers in the National Basketball Association playoffs.

Center Wes Unseld and guard Kevin Grevey are considered doubtful performers tonight when the two clubs resume their best-of-seven Eastern Conference championship series at the Capital Centre in Landover, Md., tied at one victory each.

Injuries slowed the Bullets throughout the regular season, but they were all apparently healthy at the end of their 4-2 victory over San Antonio in the conference semifinals. Then, they started anew.

Wes Unseld sprained his ankle near the end of regulation time in the first 76ers game — which the Bullets won 122-117 in overtime — and didn't play as Philadelphia won 110-104 Wednesday night. Both were played in Philadelphia.

Workshop Wins Game

The Eastern Carolina Sheltered Workshop basketball team gained a 59-52 victory over the North Pitt EMR team yesterday in a game at Elm Street Gymnasium.

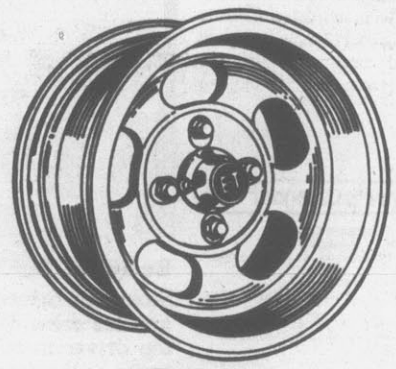

The win avenged an earlier loss to North Pitt.

Jeffrey Brown led the Workshop with a game and career high of 45 points, while Tony Cannon added 10 points.

Dent, Palmer Seek To End Droughts

DALLAS (AP) — Jim Dent is tired of driving for show and making no dough.

And Arnold Palmer, playing perhaps his best golf in over a year, quickly adds an amen.

Dent, a non-winner and one of the longest drivers on the PGA Tour, showed Thursday what can happen when he adds a putting touch to his prodigious 290-yard drives.

He made six birdie putts ranging from 10 to 100 feet and, coupled with a bogey, it gave him a 5-under-par 65 over the 6,993-yard, par-70 Preston Trail Golf Club course to take a one-shot lead in the Byron Nelson Classic.

Palmer, lashing his irons to the flag all day, was one shot behind with a 66 that he called "about as high as I could shoot...my best playing round in over a year."

Dent, who lost his exempt playing status and must struggle to qualify each week, said: "I stopped working on my driver and started working on my putting. Do you think Gary Player just made all two-footers in that winning string? No matter how good you play you have to be able to chip and putt."

The 36-year-old Dent, whose best finish this year was a tie for 24th, had to withdraw last week at New Orleans when his mother died.

"I felt I would accomplish something just by playing," he said. "It (death in the family) is something we all have to face and something you have to get over just as soon as you can."

Dent birdied four holes in a row and it all began with a 100-foot snake for a birdie three on the 393-yard, par-4 No. 12.

Dent played his round in the wind and cold of the morning and wore two sweaters and rain pants to keep warm.

"It must not have been too bad for he wouldn't have shot 65," said Palmer, who toured the course under a bright afternoon sun.

Palmer, who hasn't won a tour event since 1973, said, "I 3-putted and missed numerous short putts. I putted well but not good. I played as well as I have in quite sometime."

Followed by a huge crowd, Palmer saw a share of the lead get away on the final hole when he rimmed a 5-footer.

"I hit all the greens," said Palmer whose longest putt was a 20-footer for a birdie on the 470-yard, par-5 10th.

Four sophomore Barry Jaeckel, Orville Moody, and Steve Melnyk each shot 3-under-par 67 to stay close.

Jaeckel played behind Palmer and spent as much time watching one of golf's legends as he did his own fine play.

Player, who won three consecutive tournaments before he tied for fifth at New Orleans, struggled to a 75.

The most Dent has ever won was $48,486. He was 64th on the tour last year with $48,411. First place in this tournament is worth $40,000.

Not A Bad Day At All

Veteran golfer Arnold Palmer, although just missing an 18th-hole birdie (actually the ninth hole on the course), seems quite pleased with the day's results as he finished the first round of the Byron Nelson Classic in second place with a four- under-par 66. Record Entries For Indy 500

By STEVE HERMAN
AP Sports Writer

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Less than two weeks after seven key officials of the U.S. Auto Club were killed in an airplane crash, registration of drivers and technical inspection of cars for Saturday's start of Indy 500 practice were proceeding smoothly.

A record 92 entries were received by the Indianapolis Motor Speedway. As of Thursday, the paperwork for about 15 cars had been cleared through USAC and the vehicles lodged in their Gasoline Alley garages. About 75 individuals, including drivers and crew members, also had been registered.

Other cars, like the Wildcat racer purchased for Janet Guthrie from George Bignotti, still remained in other garages in Indianapolis.

As a steady rain greeted the arrivals at the track, USAC continued with perhaps its two most critical staff positions filled.

The racing organization, which earlier appointed Jack Beckley as technical chairman, named Bob Cassaday as registrar-coordinator Thursday.

Cassaday succeeded Stan Worley, one of the April 23 crash victims, although he won't start his job with USAC until May 16. Registration for the May 28 Indy 500 will have been completed by then, so his first race will be at Mosport on June 11.

Cassaday, 50, was with the Firestone Racing Division for 18 years before Firestone dropped its racing program in 1974. On Wednesday, USAC named Beckley to succeed Frank DelRoy. None of the other five vacant staff positions have been filled.

The car owned and driven by Larry Cannon was the only one that had completed all phases of technical inspection as of Thursday. Cannon, a veteran of three Indy races, was waiting at the office when the 1978 entry blanks were mailed out and returned the first entry.

Another car entered by the Bill Freeman Racing team had completed inspection but could not be certified because no driver was named. Another six cars were in various stages of inspection.

Guthrie took possession of her new car at Bignotti's garage Thursday and said everything was in good order except for having no place to store the racer.

Guthrie, who finished 29th in her first Indy start last year, was without a ride until Texaco stepped in with $100,000 and bought the car from Bignotti. As he does with every car he sells, Bignotti refitted the car's interior specifically for Guthrie.

Credibility Of Witness Under Attack In Report To Investigators

WASHINGTON (AP) — J. Brant Clark, the former NCAA investigator who told Congress that the collegiate sports association routinely used bribes to obtain information about its members, has been descibed as a "misleading and deceptive" witness.

Rep. Norman F. Lent, R-N.Y., a member of the House investigaions subcommittee, released a confidential memo and a 42-page staff report on Clark's 3-month-old testimony which, he said, is "devastating to the credibility of Clark."

"As I read the report, I must conclude that J. Brent Clark was a misleading and deceptive witness who cavalierly utilized such terms as 'bribery' and 'flesh peddling' to besmirch the reputations of innocent individuals who, as yet, have not had an opportunity to present their testimony before the subcommittee," Lent said.

In Shawnee Mission, Kan., NCAA executive director Walter Byers issued a statement in which he said: "We welcome the report of the staff investigators. Mr. Clark's media interviews as a subcommittee staff employee prior to his testimony contain substantial false statements and information as did his testimony as a subcommittee witness. We do not consider the matter to be closed."

In its six-week investigation, during which they conducted 30 interviews, the three staff members concentrated on three specific examples used by Clark to substantiate his charge that NCAA investigators use bribery to obtain information.

In one example, Clark said an NCAA investigator called off his inquiry of the University of Mississippi after an Ole Miss athlete provided him with "the services of a young lady."

The staff report said James Delany of the NCAA did date a female friend of Ole Miss player James Jordan. But, the report said, corroborative evidence indicates Delany never told Mississippi Coach Ken Cooper he would not turn in evidence on Ole Miss because the football player had something on him, as charged by Clark.

"Delany, by accepting a date with Jordan's female friend, was not offering any consideration to the student athlete in exchange for cooperation or information," the report said. "In short, there was no quid pro quo flowing from the investigator to the student athlete. If anything, the situation, put in its worst light, can be viewed as a student athlete attempting to ingratiate himself with the NCAA investigator rather than vice versa."

May Try New Sites

ATLANTA (AP) — Ted Turner, the colorful owner of the Atlanta Braves, said Thursday he is investigating the possibility of playing some Braves' game next season in Washington, D.C., and New Orleans.

"Nothing has been done yet," he said. "We are simply looking into it. We're discussing it as a kind of desperation move."

Such a decision would require approval of the National League and NL President Chub Feeney said: "I've heard rumors about that. Certainly there's nothing official yet, and I don't think he could do it with the present lease the Braves have at their stadium."

"It's not a big deal," Turner said. "We're not close to anything. We're just investigating the possibilities."

Turner has expressed concern about sagging attendance at Atlanta games, down almost 97,000 from last season over the first 13 home dates. The team attracted about 114,000 during that span this year.

Holbrook To Furman

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — Furman University's new head basketball coach will be Eddie Holbrook, who has won 84 percent of his games in 14 seasons at Gardner-Webb College in Boiling Springs, acccording to a Columbia newspaper.

The State said Holbrook's appointment is expected to be announced soon, possibly today.

Holbrook, who coached pro basketball stars Artis Gilmore and John Drew at Gardner-Webb, would replace Joe Williams, who resigned after eight seasons at Furman to become head coach at Florida State.

Holbrook, 38, is a native of Elkin, N.C., and a graduate of Lenoir-Rhyne College.

Bowling Meetings

The Greenville Women's Bowling Association will hold two open meetings this coming week, one for the presentation of awards, and the other to hear a national field representative from the Women's International Bowling Congress.

The first meeting will be held Sunday at 3 p.m. at Hillcrest Lanes. The election of vice-president, secretary and the board of directors will be held during this meeting.

In addition, city tournament tropies and bowler of the month trophies will be presented. New 200, 225 and 250 game, and 500, 550 and 600 series pins may be picked up by those who have earned them.

On Thursday, May 11, Miss Joyce Bird of the WIBC will meet with local women in a 7:30 p.m. meeting at Hillcrest Lanes.

She will be available to answer a variety of questions on WIBC memberships, and in assisting in better procedures and record keeping systems.

Industrialist Favors A Back-To-Farm Movement

By LeROY POPE

NEW YORK (UPI) — Although thousands of American small farmers are having a tough time, the country actually needs more well-run small farms, says William C. Norris, chairman of Control Data Corp., the big Minneapolis computer manufacturer.

Norris, who sometimes talks like an industrial maverick (he recently chided business school graduates for stifling innovation and initiative in industry) says a back-to-the-farm movement would go a long way to solve some of the nation's worst unemployment situations. He says a reversal of the drift of people from the land to the cities could alleviate many social evils.

Proper farming of more small tracts could greatly increase the nation's food supply and curb rising food costs — might reduce them, Norris says.

A back to the land movement also would help conserve natural resources and would afford greater environmental protection to the whole populace, he believes, while "at the same time providing a greater availability of a life style that is growing in popularity."

Norris added that "the present highly centralized, highly capital equipment-intensive, fossil fuel dependent and environmentally destructive farming methods employed in America" have reached the point of diminishing return. He told UPI these methods "should give way to the more decentralized approach of smaller farms that use alternate forms of energy."

This disparagement of bigness and of the present state of efficiency in the ultra-rationalization and mechanization of agriculture that has brought American farm output to heights undreamed of in the past sounds like heresy when voiced by a computer manufacturer who might reasonably be expected to have somewhat technocratic views.

But Norris isn't the first thoughtful observer to say the great American agricultural takeoff of 40 years ago has flattened out and the modern, vast factory farm approach is reaching its outer limits of production and efficiency.

Norris is well informed about farming. He grew up on corn, hog and cattle farm in Nebraska.

"We almost lost the family farm in the depression and drought year of 1934," he recalls, "along with many other farmers. We couldn't feed the fine herd of Herefords it had taken years to build up and we couldn't afford to sell them at the prevailing starvation prices either."

Then one hot summer afternoon, young Norris, called home from his engineering studies by the sudden death of his father, found the answer.

"The hot dry fields what wouldn't yield enough feed grains, were filled with lush, green Russian thistles. I suddenly remembered that, as a boy, I had seen cows eating young, immature thistle plants, even picking them out of the green alfalfa."

So Norris decided to cut and harvest the thistles before their prickly heads matured and dry them into hay. He says neighboring farmers thought he was crazy but the idea worked, the prize Herefords lived mainly on the baled thistles that winter and survived.

Norris still manages that farm, mainly by telephone from Minneapolis. The incident with the thistles taught him that timely and sensible innovation is a key to success in any activity. And he thinks it is time for American farming to become innovative again. But this time, the innovation should be in the direction of smaller farms, more human labor, and particularly of the employment of forms of energy other than petroleum — wind power to generate electricity and solar heating for farm homes and farm buildings for example.

But one temptation should be avoided, he said. "There can be no nostalgic return to horse and mule power on the small farm. Animals are the most inefficient of all forms of energy in the modern world, they eat when they are not working and they consume much too big a share of the crop."

He said that if it's a good idea, as it may well turn out, for the farmer to grow replaceable sources of energy, growing corn and oats to feed horses and mules is the wrong way to go about it. A better way probably would be to grow something that could be converted into low-grade alcohols as a substitute or supplement for petroleum.

Norris is convinced that present trends not only favor a back-to-the-farm movement and a decentralization of agriculture, they will compel it. The principal pressures to compel it, he said, are the inexorably rising cost of energy, decreasing availability of both fossil fuels and fossil based fertilizers, growing scarcity of water, environmental degradation of the soil with consequently reduced yields as a result of the big factory farm methods, and the rapidly rising cost of machinery.

"I simply don't believe the people who say the small farmer is going to become extinct," he said. "The future cannot replicate the past in many areas. We must be innovative and manage to deal with new conditions." For example, in addition to wind and direct solar power as alternatives to petroleum for farm energy, he proposed a combination of solar power and refuse converters. "Mirrors collecting sunlight and reflecting it on stored refuse materials could produce heat that could be converted into electricity," he explained.

Norris also said industry and the government should speed development of nitrogen fertilizer production by means not dependent on oil or coal. "We need a synthetic nitrogen fixing process using renewable resources," he said.

And we need a lot of research on the more efficient use of water. Experiments in the United States, in the Soviet Union, in Israel and elsewhere have shown that crop yields can be raised very greatly by pre-treatment of irrigation waters. He said Russian scientists have found that treating irrigation waters with laser beams can raise some crop yields 50 percent. The Israelis discovered that heated water ripened cucumbers a month early. The Russians also discovered that furnace ash from power stations makes good fertilizer.

All these are things that could be used efficiently on the small farm, Norris said.

Not surprisingly, Norris believes the computer has a role to play in his proposed back to the small farm movement. He said it can rapidly provide the small farmer with weather information, market information and information about farming methods. It also can help the small farmer to manage his accounting and sell his crops to best advantage. "It is perfectly feasible now," he said, "for a relatively little group of small farmers to lease or own a videoterminal and have access to a computer to do this kind of work. He said Technotec, a worldwide computer based communications informations and technology transfer system already is building a large agricultural information data base.

PLATO CBE, a data system for training and education, has courses available to small farmer groups on farm management, animal breeding, genetics, milk marketing and other subjects.

Norris believes the back-to-the-farm movement will be worldwide. He said the conditions favoring it are observable in most industrialized countries.

But if Americans are to benefit fully from the movement, there must be tax incentives and other motivational help from government.

Prices of farmland started falling from their abnormally high peaks in the United States in the latter part of 1977, but Norris said prices are still so high many families who would like to be small farmers can't afford to buy and can't see any way of making a small farm pay at present land costs.

Norris said the Minnesota Legislature passed a law to ease the purchase of small farms and in 1976, Norris said tax incentives also are needed to motivate the development of new farming technologies that are less dependent on fossil fuel energy.

Oil-Hunters' Hopes Raised

By MARTIN MERZER
AP Business Writer

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — The exploratory oil drilling operation in the Atlantic Ocean off New Jersey has found "very promising" rock formations, a drillng expert said today.

Although Vernon Goodwin, the drilling foreman for Continental Oil Co., stressed that no oil had been found yet, he said the drilling operation has encountered a sandy rock formation that often sits on top of oil reserves.

"It's very promising," Goodwin said. "There's a lot of sand out there and that's a great bucket for holding oil."

Goodwin's statement was the first public assessment of progress in the search for oil or gas in the Baltimore Canyon.

Several oil companies have been drilling for about a month in an area about 60 miles east of Atlantic City.

Experts have estimated that as much as 1.4 billion barrels of oil and 9.4 trillion cubic feet of gas mab be located in the Canyon, which begins south of Long Island and extends off New Jersey to Delaware and Maryland. But similar estimates have been made for other offshore areas where subsequent drilling failed to find significant quantities of fuel.

Goodwin said Continental's well, which is targeted for 12,000 feet, is about one-third complete and should be finished in about 42 days.

Continental officials estimate that the drilling is costing about $60,000 a day. If the first hole is completely drilled within the scheduled 60 days, the cost will be about $3.6 million.

Smallest Of Quads Died

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — The smallest of quadruplets born to a Fayetteville couple last more than a month ago died Thursday at the Duke Medical Center Hospital.

Doctors attributed the death of the infant, Lolita Roura, to severe intestinal hemorrage followed by kidney failure.

The infant weighted 2 pounds, 6 ounces when the quads were born at Duke March 25 to Dailio and Rebecca Roura. Doctors said she had been the least well of the group.

Hospital officials said the three surviving babies appear to be recovering well from earlier respiratory problems common to premature infants and no longer require artificial assistance in breathing. The quads were born eight weeks premature.

Carolina, the largest of the quads at 3 pounds, 10 ounces, was transferred from Duke to Cape Fear Valley Hospital at Fayetteville April 20. Another, Diana, was moved to the hospital in Fayetteville later. She weighed 3 pounds, 7 ounces at birth.

Rebecca, who weighed 3 pounds, 5 ounces at birth, remains at Duke.

A memorial service will be planned for Lolita but arrangements were incomplete Thursday.

Passing Car Fired At Bus

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — About 25 passengers scrambled to the floor of a city transit bus Thursday afternoon after two shots were fired into the vehicle from a passing car, police said.

Authorities said they believed two men were responsible for the shooting.

The only injuries were minor cuts suffered by one passenger on the bus.

Bus driver Margaret McCullough said a car pulled up beside the bus and the driver blew his horn. She said two shots were then fired, breaking two windows on the bus.

"All I could do was just fall on the floor because I did not know where it was coming from, and I couldn't see where it was coming from," said Margaret Massey, a passenger on the bus.

Asked what others on the bus did, she said, "They all did the same thing because glass was flying everywhere. So everybody just tried to get to the floor of the bus until she got it to a complete stop so they could get out."

For AP Newsfeatures

Can you imagine dividing a photograph into more than 2 million tiny mosaic-like bits, treating the bits to improve the picture, and then reassembling the lot into a finished 8x10 print?

Well that is what happens these days in one of the most dramatic developments to hit the news picture transmission business in decades.

The device that does all this is The Associated Press' Electronic Darkroom. In every sense of the word, it takes the dark out of darkroom by asking a computer to perform the magic once relegated to the dim recesses of the photographer's domain.

The Associated Press daily transmits hundreds of news pictures on its incredibly complex picture network. That's how this newspaper gets pictures in minutes from the news spots of the world.

In the transmission of these pictures some photographic damage can be done, however. Electronic scratches, loss of density, loss of sharpness, loss of photographic saturation or perhaps oversaturation are just a few.

Now comes the Electronic Darkroom. The picture AP transmits is transferred into a series of numbers each representing a specific shade of gray in the original. This is called digital information.

The digits representing 2 million squares from the picture are entered into a computer. The computer will hold some 100 pictures in this form.

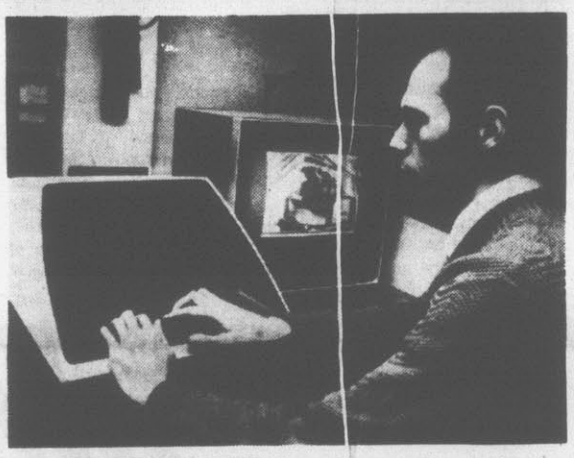

An editor then calls up the picture on a TV screen and orders the computer, or the Electronic Darkroom, to sharpen the picture, or crop it a different way, or improve the photo saturation, or whatever. The editor can even rewrite the caption.

Working with each of the 2 million mosaics, the computer quickly handles its assigned task and then, at the editor's direction, sends the picture on its way. That may be to your newspaper, or to a paper in Tokyo, or in Istanbul, or anywhere on the AP's far-flung picture circuit.

All this is done in three or four minutes.

Still in the development stage is another device which will scan a photographer's original 35mm or 120 negative, record the picture information digitally and then send the picture on its way to its destination in print form. All of this happens in minutes, with excellent photographic quality and without the benefit of darkroom handling.

The Electronic Darkroom is just now being installed in AP's New York picture headquarters. But by the summer it should be in full operation.

AP PICTURE EDITOR Grant Lamos sits at visual display terminal as he types up commands that will instruct computer of AP's Electronic Darkroom how to properly treat picture shown on TV screen at center.

"You'll never get rich sellin' wood to George Dickel!"
Bear Ferguson, logger, 1873

"It's not that George doesn't use a lot of wood in the makin' of his Tennessee Sour Mash Whisky—he does. But he's so durned persnickity.

"Like only wantin' winter-cut sugar maple that's not all sappy for his charcoal mellowin'. Then he picks over the lot like a hen eyein' a corn morsel.

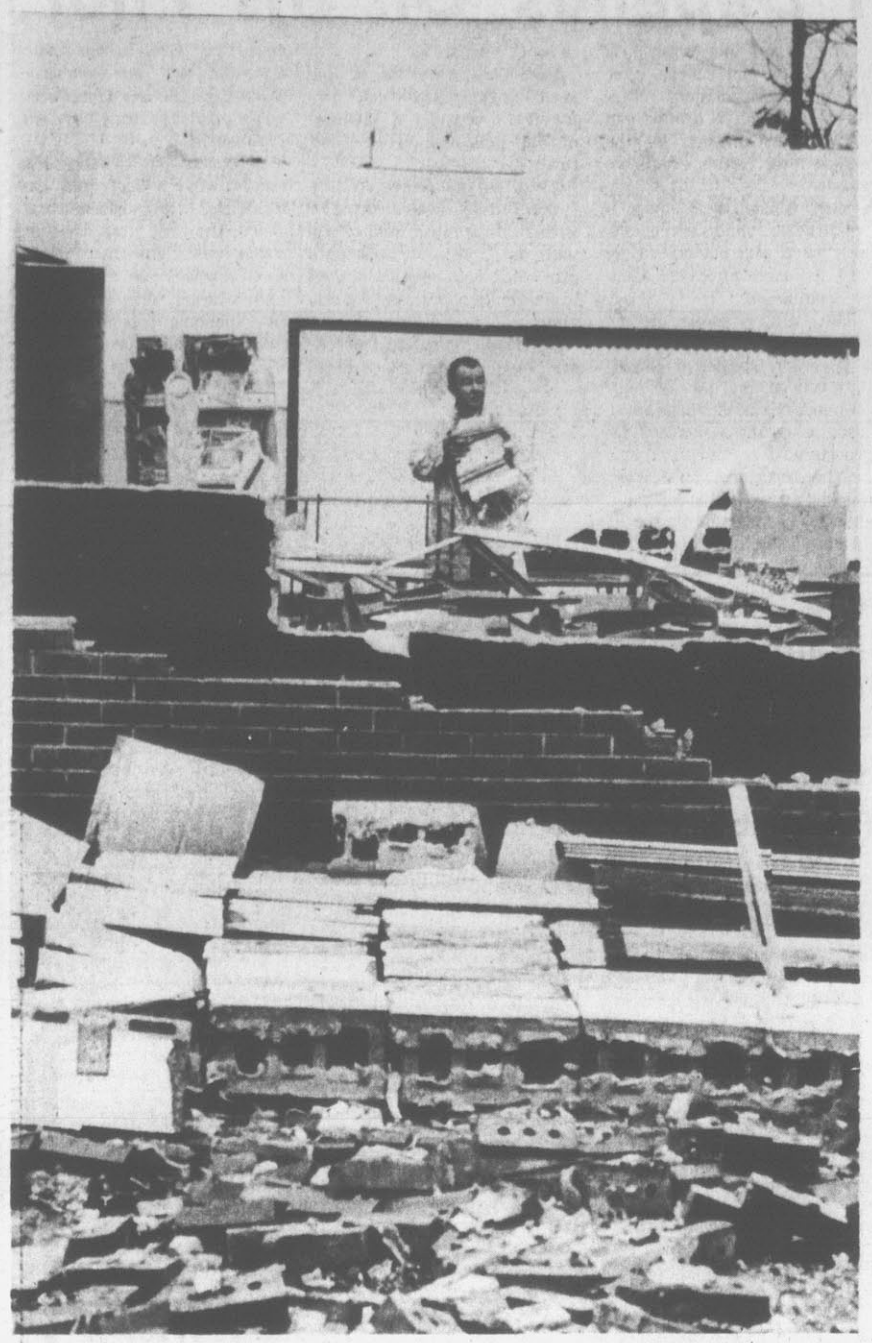

"Times like that I most always end up sittin' on a cord of wood he's turned down, sippin' his whisky."

Florida Tornado Levels School, Kills 2 Children

TORNADO KILLED TWO — A workman sorts through books after a tornado ripped through High Point Elementary School Thursday, killing two and sending at least 100 people to hospitals. (AP Laserphoto)

Associated Press Writer

CLEARWATER, Fla. (AP) — Chocolate chip cookies and a new red bike are tragic reminders of a birthday party wiped out by a tornado that leveled an elementary school and killed two kindergarten boys, including one who had just turned 6.

Ninety-four others were rushed to hospitals Thursday after the twister, striking without warning after a morning of thunderstorms, screeched through the 650-pupil High Point Elementary School, sucking up brick walls and steel girders.

The twister shredded the roof like cardboard, demolished two of eight classrooms and shattered windows. Walls, chairs, tables, metal, trees and even cars in the parking lot swirled through the air.

Fourteen pupils, four of them in critical condition, and two teachers remained at five area hospitals today. Many youngsters were treated for cuts and bruises and released.

"It was lunch time and a lot of kids were in the cafeteria and that saved a lot of lives," said Pinellas County Sheriff Bill Roberts.

But the storm claimed two young victims: John Timothy Duval Jr. and his classmate, Gary Staly, 5, who were hit in the head by falling debris as their classroom was shattered by the funnel cloud.

Thursday was Timmy's birthday. His mother Susan, 28 and four months pregnant, delivered the cookies to the school two hours before disaster struck. She planned to return later for a classroom party.

The banana-seat bicycle sat in a garage of the modest home where Timmy lived with his mother and his father, Timothy Sr., a mailman.

The Duvals went into seclusion but an aunt, Joan Duval, said, "It's kind of hard to send your child to school one day then find out that he'll never be coming home again."

Both Timmy and Gary were in the class of Elizabeth Lovely. Before the tornado struck out of a sky grown ominously black, Mrs. Lovely said she tried singing as a distraction.

"We were singing like mad, songs about the rain and such. I had the record player going and everytime the lightning struck the children would holler. I would say, 'Mrs. Lovely would take care of you.'

"I don't know what I am going to do," said the 58-year-old teacher, who was hospitalized with leg and foot injuries. "I don't know why it couldn't have been me. I've lived my life."

Teachers ordered youngsters to lay on the floor to try to escape the twister's fury. Children wailed in panic.

When the whirlwind subsided, volunteers from a nearby vocational school rushed to the site and pulled bricks, tables and chairs off bleeding children.

Sobbing parents sprinted or drove to the school or hospitals and shelters hunting their children.

The Rev. Cary Howe was among the rescuers. He said he pulled the Duval boy and another 6-year-old from the rubble.

"I took the two that seemed the worst off and drove them myself to the hospital. Both children had been hit hard by the collapsing roof," he said.

"Timmy didn't cry," the minister said. "He didn't say anything. I prayed for him, touched him and tried to comfort him. He stared straight ahead. I assumed he was in shock."

How's The Weather?

WEATHER FORECAST — Showers are forecast today inland from the western Gulf and changing to snow flurries over the western Plains. Cloudy skies and seasonably cool temperatures are expected for most areas. Mild weather is forecast for the Gulf Coast and the Southeast. (AP Laserphoto Map)

By The Associated Press

The rain appears to be over in North Carolina for the time being as the low pressure system which brought the stormy weather heads out to sea off the Delaware-Maryland-Virginia coast.

Before its departure, the weather system had dumped more than three inches of rain at Greensboro, more than two inches at Hickory, and an inch or more at Raleigh, Goldsboro and Elizabeth City.

The rains have brought moderate flooding along eastern North Carolina rivers—the Lumber, lower Neuse and lower Tar — and minor to moderate flooding along the lower and middle Roanoke, Dan and Haw rivers.

Most of the severe thunderstorm activity Thursday was concentrated in the southeastern section of the state. Fog and drizzle lingered over much of the state this morning, but partly cloudy skies were expected later in the day.

Temperatures were expected to range today from the 60s in the mountains to the upper 70s and low 80s along the south coast. Saturday is expected to be fair to partly cloudy with temperatures generally in the 70s and low 80s.

There is a chance of rain Sunday and Monday, with clearing Tuesday.

The feats of Trump Coup Tommy had become a legend at his bridge club. So much so that his opponents dreaded picking up more than two cards in Tommy's trump suit. They were all aware of his uncanny knack of transposing from one of the world's all-time hackers to a master of technique at the table—a veritable Jekyll and Hyde of the pasteboards—whenever trumps broke badly.

Tommy's bidding was a model of restraint. He realized that he was showing a six-card suit by rebidding hearts over his partner's one spade response, and he was delighted to hear his partner raise him to game.

West led a low diamond. When dummy came down the contract appeared so simple that the kibitzers were already looking for ways whereby Tommy could butcher it.

Dummy's eight of diamonds was allowed to win—it gave Tommy a trick he did not need. Tommy led a trump and the whole complexion of the hand changed when East discarded a club. Tommy inserted the seven, West won the ten and exited with a spade.

Declarer won the ace of spades, crossed to the ace of diamonds and led a low club. West grabbed the king to lead a second spade, taken by the king. Declarer came to his hand with a diamond ruff, cashed the ace of clubs and ruffed a club in dummy.

Now declarer had to guess which suit to ruff to return to his hand. Mindful of West's queen of diamonds on the last diamond trick, declarer elected to shorten himself by ruffing a spade. When West followed, the contract was home.

Tommy was left with the ace-jack-nine of trumps while West was down to the king-queen-three. Tommy simply exited with a low trump, and West was forced to end play himself. After winning the queen, he had to lead from his king-three into declarer's ace-jack tenace. Tommy had managed to hold his losers to two trumps and a club.

Jack Albertson Ready For New Series; It Depends On His Pilot

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Television Writer

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — With "Chico and the Man" exiting NBC after four seasons, one might think the Man, Jack Albertson, would like to loaf a while, rest on his residuals. Nope.

He says he's ready to do a new series, an hour-long one at that. Whether he will depends partly on how his NBC pilot fares in the ratings when NBC gets around to setting an air date for it.

It's "Grandpa Goes to Washington." Albertson, the crusty old garage owner in "Chico," now plays a crusty old college professor who, forced to retire because of age, becomes a U.S. senator.

"Hate that Grandpa thing, wish it were something else," he groused.

At 67, Albertson is a year older than the character he essays, but four years younger than the real-life citizen it will be likened to — Sen. S.I. Hayakawa, R-Calif., ex-president of San Francisco State.

Jack, Hollywood's distinguished delegate from Malden, Mass., by way of vaudeville, burlesque and theater, was asked why he'd rather face weekly work again than goof off and golf.

"I don't know," he mused. He loves golf, has outstanding invitations to putter about in six tourneys, "and that's fun. But fun is doing something I feel has a reason for being."

The new show, he added, "offers us the opportunity to deal with some subjects dear to the hearts of the American people," such as inflation, aging, energy and unemployment. About his pilot:

The old prof, put on geriatric waivers by his college after passing the mandatory retirement age of 65, is drafted into a winning campaign for the Senate after certain events occur.

Such include the incumbent's withdrawal amid revelations he's loved well but not wisely with a Fannie Foxe-type name of Boom-Boom.

The draft-Grandpa efffort comes after the senator's rival, a governor, speaks at Grandpa's college, and the old man off-handedly calls him a crook when asked for a comment by reporters.

"The reporters chase after me and say, 'That's a serious charge.'" Albertson grinned. "And I say, 'Well, he's a serious crook.'"

As fate would have it, the "Grandpa" pilot was directed by actor Richard Crenna, last seen as a conservative Washington columnist in CBS's now-defunct "All's Fair."

Doesn't the failure of that series suggest people don't care for D.C., consider it a hamlet of odd folk and odder statistics?

"With all due respect to Dick, I don't think people identified with him as much as they will with me," he said, meaning a crusading columnist as opposed to an accidental, crusading senator.

Albertson did opine that voters have grown sour about those they elect to run America: "Oh, God, yes, ever since Watergate, the feeling has been that politicians aren't trustworthy."

He doubts that'll change. His theory why: "What with the terrorists, the violence and crime, the indications are that nobody really cares very much about anybody else.

"It's largely due, I'd say, to an expanding population. Because the more people there are, the less intimacy there is."

Hunting Home For 'Moby Shad'

GRIFTON — The Grifton Shad Festival is looking for a home for "Moby Shad", the 38-foot fish built by Cox Trailers for exhibition during the last two festivals.

Cox wants to donate "Moby" to future festivals, but a shelter approximately 40 feet long, eight feet wide and 12 feet high must be located before the festival committee can accept.

Anyone who has the adequate space to keep "Moby" safe and dry, may contact Shad Festival chairman, Tommy Wilson, 524-5147 or Janet Hasely, publicity chairman, 524-4356.

Prestigious Award To All-'A' Student

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Mark Lumsden, an all "A" student at the University of North Carolina-Greensboro, is among a select group of students across the nation chosen for Danforth Graduate Fellowships.

Lumsden already had been notified he was a recipient of a James B. Duke Fellowship for graduate school at Duke University when he was awarded the prestigious Danforth fellowship recently.

Almost 3,000 students from across the nation applied for the Danforth fellowships, which provide tuition, fees and an annual stipend of up to $2,400 for four years of study in preparation for a career in college teaching. The Danforth Foundation of St. Louis awards 100 fellowships each year.

After receiving a bachelor of arts degree in biology from UNC-G May 14, Lumsden will begin work on a master's degree in biology at Duke, where he plans to concentrate on the study of genetics.

"Hopefully, after I finish work on my doctorate, I will be able to teach and do research in genetics at a college or university," Lumsden said.

Danforth fellowships are awarded on the basis of non-academic as well as academic factors and each applicant must submit to a series of personal interviews. Lumsden had the support of Dr. Bruce Eberhart, head of the UNC-G biology department, in his bid for the fellowship.

"Mark has assisted in microbiology and vertebrate-physiology laboratories," Eberhart said. "He has been a very valuable resource person as a student teacher."

Rarely Show Up To Work

WASHINGTON (AP) — Those nasty rumors are true. Our taxes do pay civil servants big salaries — as much as $50,000 a year — to do little or nothing, say administration officials who claim some high-salaried workers haven't been seen in the office in years.

The reason? It's easier to leave imcompetents on the payroll but pushed out of sight than it is to fire them.

"We found $50,000 welfare cases. We were paying them to stay away. One person on a very high salary hadn't been seen there for years," William Drayton, assistant administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency, told the Senate Government Operations Committee on Thursday.

Drayton was one of several administration officials to complain about the complicated procedure for firing civil servants. President Carter is proposing a simpler method in his planned shake-up of the system.

Drayton said administration officials began looking at bureaucratic waste when Carter took office — seeking out sandbagging workers for dismissal. But he said department and agency managers discovered they were spending about 30 percent of their time on dismissal preparations only to find it wasted because of minor procedural errors.

In one case, Drayton said, he found a $40,000-a-year bureaucrat performing at the level of a $10,000 worker.

"I told him to look for another job. He said he wouldn't. He knows we won't do anything about it because we can't spend the time."

Barbara Blum, EPA deputy administrator, joined in the complaining, primarily about civil service hiring practices that give veterans lifetime preference.

She said a test score bonus given veterans is thwarting her attempts to hire women and minorities.

As the system works now, agencies needing a worker are given three names by the commission. Usually, the candidates all are white men because of the point bonus, she said.

"If those three veterans are not as qualified, we have to go back to the Civil Service Commission with each veteran to explain why they are not qualified and then we have to go to the next veteran on the list," she told the committee.

She said the procedure can take a year or longer and, by then, the minority candidate has been hired by a private employer.

Carter wants to cut veterans' lifetime preference to 10 years, except for disabled former soldiers.

Ten Years For Hit-Run Deaths

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — A man described by his attorney as a chronic drinker was sentenced Thursday to 10 years in prison for the hit-and-run deaths of two Louisiana women outside the gates of Elvis Presley's home last summer.

Treatise Wheeler III was sentenced by Judge William Williams of Criminal Court after Wheeler, 19, pleaded guilty to two counts of second-degree murder. Charges of reckless driving, driving while intoxicated and leaving the scene of an accident were dropped, officials said.

In an unusual move, Williams later convened a jury to determine if Wheeler's sentence was fair in light of the circumstances. The jury agreed after a brief deliberation that the sentence was justified.

Williams said later he wanted the jury's guidance because the case had "international impact."

Police said they arrested Wheeler the morning of Aug. 18 moments after his car slammed into a group of mourners outside Graceland mansion, killing Alice Marie Hovatar and Juanita Joanne Johnson, both 19-year-olds from Monroe, La. Tammy Baiter, 17, of St. Clair, Mo., was also struck and seriously injured, officers said.

Hundreds of people had gathered in the early morning hours outside the gates on the day of Presley's funeral in hopes of being admitted to the mansion for a glimpse of his body.

Danny Ferguson of the Shelby County public defender's office, Wheeler's attorney, said Wheeler had attempted suicide the night before the accident and chronic drinking had damaged his brain. He compared Wheeler's condition with that of an elderly alcoholic.

"Treatise was a very disturbed young man the night this occurred and even the night before," Ferguson said.

Police said Wheeler's 1963 Ford Fairlane had run two red lights on Elvis Presley Boulevard before swerving into a center lane, striking the girls. The car continued for almost a block down the street after the accident, officers said.

Title One Sums Are Approved

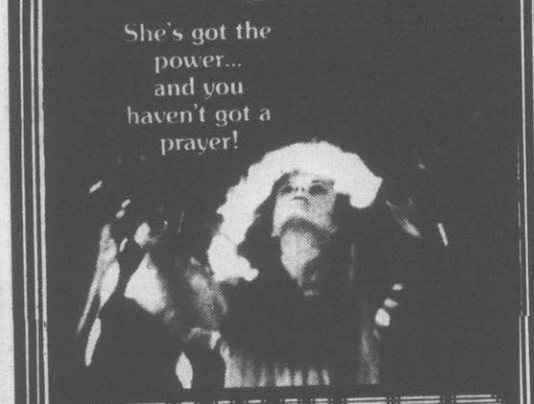

Congressman Walter B. Jones announced Thursday that the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare, Office of Education, has approved the following applications for federal assistance under Title One, which provides financial assistance for schools in federally affected areas.

Pitt County schools were awarded $4,288.82, certified for immediate payment and $37,712 as a tentative entitlement for the fiscal year 1978.

The Martin County Board of Education was awarded $1,372.34 for immediate payment, and $19,161 for the fiscal year 1978.

Lutheran Rift Is Assessed

ST. LOUIS (AP) — "Sad and unfortunate, certainly — but minimal compared to the dire predictions ... made a few years back," the Rev. Dr. J.A.O. Preus, president of the Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod, said in assessing a report on the recent split in the church.

The report of 1977 statistics for the denomination showed that 152 congregations left the denomination in protest against pressures to enforce uniform, literalistic interpretation of the Bible.

Americans Simply Trying Maintain 'Status Quo'

By JOHN F. SIMS
UPI Business Writer

NEW YORK (UPI) — America is changing. Through the end of the century the nation will experience a renaissance or, in the view of some pessimists, the end of the American Dream.

The United States and the world have been slow to recover from the recession of 1974-75.

But as confidence returns and the economy revives, Americans are finding that changes in lifestyle imposed by the slowdown have become permanent.

Housing, education and medical costs are soaring out of reach; cars are getting smaller, more married women are working, there are fewer jobs for graduates; the hopes and aspirations of the middle class have been eroded; unemployment is so persistent there are 30-year-olds who have never been employed.

Economists are predicting the United States is moving into a no-growth economy; that could mean even more drastic changes in lifestyle in the coming decades. The experts hope that with foreknowledge, planning, and preparation the nation will be ready to adjust to a NEW American Way of Life.

In the meantime Americans are bending their efforts to simply maintaining what they have.

Major studies indicate the American family no longer expects constant upward mobility, an improvement in its standard of living each year.

When a wife goes out to work it is not necessarily to improve a family's standard of living but often is aimed merely at keeping the same quality of food on the table.

A study of the American family, sponsored by General Mills and conducted by Yankelovich, Skelly and White, said: "According to many experts, the United States has become so accustomed to affluence and economic growth that many families may be unprepared, and even unwilling, to face up to the threat of austerity and sacrifice presented by today's uncertain economy...

"Many less affluent families, suggested the experts, may be losing faith in the American dream of an abundant future. Simply meeting today's problem may be undercuttiness affluent families, suggested the experts, may be losing faith in the American dream of an abundant future. Simply melly secure retirement."

Another study, by a research team at the City University of New York, asked families how they are coping with inflation. Half of those questioned said they were cutting food spending and about the same percentage said they were cutting down on entertaining and eating out. Forty-five percent were spending less on clothing and 34 percent spending and about the same percentage said they were cutting down on entertaining and eating out. Forty-five percent we family's standard of living. Families in which there is only one breadwinner are in a minority.

There is a trend, according to some studies, away from the old dream of home ownership and acquisition. Instead, money is spent on "experiences"; on living today against favoring the future.

Part of this may be making a virtue of necessity.

Dr. Norman Young, executive vice president of General Development Corp., is in the home construction business but commented: "The old dream used to be to own two homes, one in town and one in the country. With prices the way they are, I don't see how young people can afford to buy even one."

Cunningham & Walsh, a New York advertising agency, conducted a study of young American families and found that inflation was their first concern. And there was a general pessimism about the situation ever improving.

One man told the pollsters: "I wish I had something set aside for my kids to go to college. But this doesn't fit into my personal financial plans right now. I cannot afford to tie the money up."

He added: "I literally can't afford to buy the house I used to live in."

Just to show the kind of inflation we're talking about, the Census Bureau reported earlier this year that median income of American households increased 7.5 percent to $12,686 in 1976 for the first gain after two years of inflation-and recession-induced declines.

Despite the increase, median household income adjusted for inflation was still lower than the estimated $13,466 of 1973.

Inflation-adjusted income dropped to $12,925 in 1974 when the oil exporting countries increased petroleum prices 400 percent. Income dropped to $12,481 in the depths of the recession in 1975.

The bureau estimated inflation at about 6 percent in 1976 which left the "real" income gain at about 2 percent for the year. In dollar terms, the median household had a $886 income gain from $11,800, of which all but $205 of the gain was eaten by inflation.

And another Census Bureau report indicated the way America has changed.

Youths and children live in a more unstable, impersonal and violent America than their parents and older brothers and sisters did, the Bureau reported.

But the bureau said modern youths have more years of schooling and earn higher incomes than young people of a decade or so earlier.

Toddlers are twice as likely to have working mothers and be enrolled in pre-schools as their teen-age siblings did, the bureau said.

Teen-agers are more frequent crime victims than adults are now or were during their youthful years, it said.

The bureau said murder is the second leading cause of death among Americans between the ages of 15 and 24. And two of every five high school students are victims of violent crimes including robbery, assault and murder.

Experts predict a time of stress, especially between generations.

The Congressional Committee warned, "The under-employment of college-educated manpower is likely to persist ...

"A strong case can be made that today's glut of young graduates will not be completely absorbed even by several years of recovery from recession. The result of such an oversupply is not unemployment for college graduates but rather a process of 'bumping' some people down the ladder of job status ...

"Many of today's young graduates, therefore, will meet disappointment in their aspirations for advancement. This 'clot' in the age structure of the highly educated will mean relatively few opportunities for new graduates through the year 2000.

"Such compression of pay differentials and disappointment of job aspirations could result in a sharp decline in college going by young people in the 1980s and could comprise a major source of social discontent, unless steps are taken to utilize the productive potential of college-educated workers more fully."

A corollary problem is Social Security payments for America's growing body of senior citizens.

Currently there are 3.2 wage earners for each beneficiary of the Social Security system. Demographic studies indicate that in the first quarter of the next century the ratio will drop to 2 to 1, raising fears the burden placed on the younger worker will become intolerable.

Raising the compulsory retirement age from 65 to 70 will allow many older persons to continue productive employment. So although the extended employment of the aging may create some problems at the lower end of the scale — opening fewer jobs for the young — one helpful change will be reduced pressure on the social security system.

It is in this bleak soil that the seeds of the future are being planted.

The Joint Economic Committee of Congress, in a report on America's long-term economic growth prospects, said in a summary: "Several participants in the Committee's deliberations stated categorically that the United States is 'entering a new era' in its economic development, with circumstances fundamentally different from those of the past.

"Among the characteristics of this new era are the persistent slowing of labor force growth foreseen for the 1980s, slower gains in the contribution of higher education, rising real costs of acquiring raw materials, a maturing of major postwar industries and, possibly, shifts in popular values to place less emphasis on economic growth."

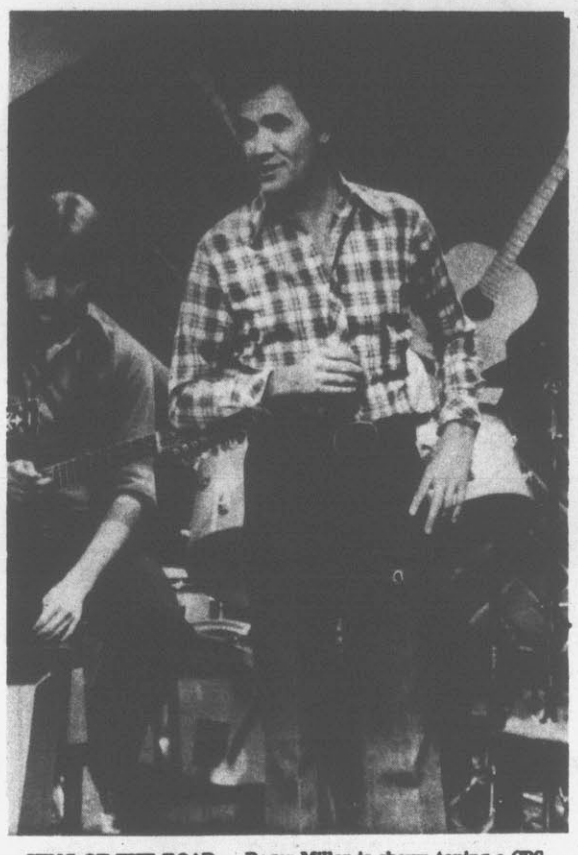

Thus a challenge is thrown to the government and to industry to prepare for these changes, to seek alternatives to perpetual growth.

Historian Arthur Johnson told the Joint Congressional Committee: "The nation is clearly in a state of transition that challenges assumptions about the organization and goals of economic activity ...

"It may well be that we are entering one of the periods of great discontinuities comparable in the history of western civilization to those of the Renaissance and the Reformation," Johnson said.

But both of those watershed periods in history were accompanied by wrenching changes that slashed the fabric of society.
