$136 Billion Loss In Business Tax Shelters

By STEWART POWELL

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Business tax breaks provided by Congress will cost the government $136 billion next fiscal year as part of an entrenched, growing and nearly uncontrolled tax privilege system, a report issued Saturday by Common Cause said.

In a study titled "Gimme Shelters," the self-styled citizens' lobby said Congress wrote 86 tax breaks into law from 1971 to 1976 — many of them without testimony from a single witness and the rest supported mainly by "witnesses with direct financial interests" in the issue.

"These expenditures are expected to cost the government $136 billion in revenues in fiscal year 1979," Common Cause said.

The study described the tax breaks it was reviewing — known technically as "tax expenditures" because they eliminate federal revenues — as "incentives or preferences provided through the IRS Code to the private sector in such forms as tax credits, tax deferrals and special tax rates."

"Our study shows that Congress and its tax committees have irresponsibly abdicated their duty to oversee tax expenditures and determine whether their continuation is justified," Common Cause president David Cohen said in a statement.

"The special interests know that if you want to slip a big spending program past Congress, an almost sure-fire way is to expand an existing tax expenditure or create a new one."

It said nearly 90 percent of the tax expenditure items it reviewed were enacted permanently, with no provision for review.

In the six-year period covered, it said, more that $161 billion was spent in such expenditures "without a single publicly recorded vote by Congress or by its tax writing committees."

The Senate Finance Committee headed by Sen. Russell Long, D-La., and the House Ways and Means Committee headed by Rep. Al Ullman, D-Ore., handle tax legislation in Congress.

"Anyone concerned about inflation in this country," Cohen said, "had better start paying a lot closer attention to the way in which billions of tax dollars are being distributed by the Finance Committee and by the House Ways and Means Committee as well."

The study said the Senate panel recommended creation of 25 tax breaks and increasing existing tax breaks in 39 areas from 1971 to 1976, while the House committee proposed 27 increases and 16 new tax breaks in the same period.

Society To Join Task Force

PINEHURST, N.C. (UPI) — The North Carolina Medical Society Saturday voted to join a task force studying the county health departments' primary care program.

The society's House of Delegates, in its annual meeting in Pinehurst, also rejected a resolution to ban cigarette advertising from the society's journal.

Gov. James B. Hunt Jr. Friday asked the doctors to join the task force and help settle differences in the program, which he has supported strongly. The state Legislature has appropriated $2.7 million for the program, in which county health departments treat illnesses as well as provide preventive medicine.

The society has criticized the program for in effect competing against doctors.

The resolution passed said the society recognizes "a medical care need in underserved areas. The Department of Human Resources is responsive to that need and that same system of care must be made available in such areas."

The society also agreed to submit a list of physicians to Hunt for appointment to the task force, but asked that money to the health departments be held up until after the task force makes its recommendations.

Regarding cigarette ads, the house of delegates decided it could not restrict its journal's editorial freedom by banning the advertisements. Currently, ads for a low-tar cigarette appear only four times in the society's monthly journal.

The doctors also voted to oppose the federal government's elimination of payments for abortions to poor and indigent women, and asked that the state Legislature provide funds in the meantime. The position is the same as one taken by the society's executive council in September 1977.

In response to President Carter's recent criticism of the American Medical Association, the state society praised the AMA.

"Health programs of the nation can be better served by more, rather than less, input from the AMA, provided with less interference from the federal government," the state society said.

Dr. Archie Johnson, chairman of the society's Legislation Committee, Saturday said Carter's remarks were inaccurate and untimely.

The AMA is working with the Carter administration to cut health care costs and provide more care for the poor, he said.

Back Home

RANCHO MIRAGE, Calif. (AP) — Former first lady Betty Ford was back home with her family today after nearly four weeks of hospitalization for addiction to alcohol and medicine.

Must Make A Choice

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (UPI) — A woman seeking a demanding career is going to have to sacrifice her desire for marriage and children, Barbara Walters, co-anchor of the ABC Evening News, said Saturday.

Ms. Walters, in a commencement address at the University of North Carolina at Charlotte, said, "A woman has to make decisions as to whether to have a career first or a family first and a career later.

"There's nothing wrong with making a decision to have a career that is not all-consuming," she said.

Ms. Walters said the women's movement has misled women into believing they could have it all — a career, family and marriage.

UN Condemns Invasion Of Angola By S. Africa

By ALVIN B. WEBB

UNITED NATIONS (UPI) — The U.N. Security Council Saturday condemned South Africa's invasion of Angola and demanded the "immediate and unconditional withdrawal" of Pretoria's troops from the country.

The vote of the 15-member Council was unanimous.

Angolan U.N. Ambassador Elisio de Figueiredo said he was pleased, but that, "I would indeed have liked the wording 'armed aggression' included."

The resolution made no mention specifically of what the United Nations would do if South Africa refused to obey the Security Council order.

South Africa launched a lightning air and ground attack from South West Africa against bases of the South West Africa Peoples Organization Thursday and pushed 160 miles into Angola, to the town of Cassinga.

Figueiredo said 524 Namibian refugees were killed and 224 wounded in the raid. He said 16 Angolan soldiers had also been killed and another 64 wounded.

The United States and other Western powers on the Security Council supported the resolution but said the invasion should not be allowed to jeopardize their plan for the independence of South West Africa, also known as Namibia.

U.S. Ambassador James F. Leonard told the Council "the United States is determined to press forward in the Namibia initiative we have undertaken with our colleagues."

British Ambassador Ivor Richard added, "I hope the members of the council do not lose sight of our main objective. I appeal to all sides to show restraint."

Angola brought the case before an emergency meeting of the Security Council Friday night and charged that five Western powers had set the stage for the invasion by not dealing firmly enough with South Africa's apartheid regime.

The five — the United States, Canada, Britain, France and West Germany — have tried for a year to work out with South Africa a plan that would establish an independent state of Namibia in South West Africa.

Black African states consider SWAPO the "legitimate representative" of the Namibian people.

South Africa said it invaded Angola to put a stop to SWAPO incursions into South West Africa from bases in Angola.

In its resolution Saturday, the Security Council said it "strongly condemns this latest armed invasion," which it called a "flagrant violation" of Angolan sovereignty, and "demands the immediate and unconditional withdrawal of all South African forces from Angola."

It also said the Council would consider "more effective measures" if South Africa refused — but it did not say what those measures might be.

New Invasions Threatened

WINDHOEK, South West Africa (UPI) — South Africa threatened new invasions against Angolan-based black guerrillas Saturday and said it found a Soviet military uniform and documents in the rebel bases it captured Thursday.

An Angolan radio broadcast monitored in Johannesburg quoted Angolan Defense Minister Henrique Carreira as charging that the invasion Thursday killed more than 600 persons and wounded an unspecified number of others.

Carreira said fighting still raged between South African and Angolan troops, disputing reports by Pretoria military officials that all of their troops had left Angola.

Bursts of guerrilla gunfire crackled across the Angola-Namibia border three times Saturday

Boyer In On Negotiations

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — The U.S. Commissioner of Education joined on Friday in negotiations between the University of North Carolina System and the Department of Health, Education and Welfare over desegregation of UNC.

Education Commissioner Ernest L. Boyer refused to comment on the discussions and UNC President William C. Friday downplayed the significance of his appearance.

HEW Secretary Joseph A. Califano has delayed an announced cutoff of federal funds to UNC pending the outcome of negotiations. HEW has rejected a plan by the UNC Board of Governors for desegregation of the 16-campus university system.

Friday said Boyer took part in the talks when he visited Chapel Hill about two weeks ago.

Police Chief Orders Probe

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Police Chief Robert E. Goodwin has asked the State Bureau of Investigation to determine whether criminal charges are warranted against officers who cleared Park Avenue last weekend during a May Day street festival.

City Manager L.P. Zachary gave members of the city council a three-page preliminary report Friday on the police actions and told of the request for an SBI probe.

Zachary also said there was evidence that at least three laws were broken by the crowd at the event.

He said he decided not to conduct an investigation of possible criminal activities because "no supervisor on the scene witnessed any act that called for this type of investigation." He said he is limiting his probe to violations of department policies.

The News and Observer of Raleigh, which has complained of the arrest of two of its photographers and one reporter by police during the incident, obtained a copy of the report by Zachary. Twenty-nine people were arrested on charges including failure to disperse, public consumption of alcohol, assaulting an officer and resisting arrest.

Offers Free Defense

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Attorneys from the North Carolina Civil Liberties Union and at least four Raleigh attorneys have agreed to act as free defense lawyers for many of the 32 persons arrested April 29 during a Park Avenue street party.

Under the agreement, the NCCLU attorneys will defend clients against criminal charges filed by the police. The group is still weighing civil suits alleging civil rights violations from the incidents.

Deborah G. Mailman, one of the four lawyers, met with about 25 people Thursday night to plot strategy for defending those arrested on charges of failure to disperse, public intoxication, resisting arrest and assault on a police officer.

Will Get His Badge

NEW YORK (UPI) — An Eagle Scout badge is on its way to a 23-year-old Boy Scout with cerebal palsy after the National Council of Boy Scouts, caught in the glare of publicity, lifted its age restrictions for the severely handicapped.

"We're obviously very happy about it," said Greg Wittine's father, Ferdinand from the family's Baldwin, N.Y., home Saturday. "I always sort of had a hunch it would work out well."

A mute who is unable to walk, Greg crawled for a mile on his hands and knees, then pushed his wheelchair another nine miles to earn his hiking merit badge.

A scout for 11 years, he earned 24 merit badges — enough to make him an Eagle Scout as far the Nassau County of Boy Scouts was concerned. But the National Council rescinded Wittine's Eagle Scout ranking because his age was over the allowable 18-year limit.

The public, hearing of Wittine's plight, sent hundreds of letters to Scout headquarters in North Brunswick, N.J., protesting the National Council's action.

Equal Job Rules

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter's revised plan for enforcing equal job opportunity rules took effect Saturday and Carter predicted it will replace a "chaotic picture" with "sensible" rules for industry to follow.

The plan, submitted to Congress in February, bolsters the power of the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission and gives it responsibility for coordinating all federal equal employment programs.

The president said the reorganization "will improve enforcement of equal employment opportunities, and reduce the burden of equal employment enforcement on business by consolidating the number of agencies involved.

"It replaces a chaotic picture with a coherent and sensible structure," Carter said in a statement issued by the White House.

The EEOC, established in 1964, becomes the chief federal agency responsible for enforcement of job discrimination laws. It assumes duties now handled by the Department of Labor, including cases of age and sex discrimination as well as those involving race.

Congress had 60 working days to object to the plan. The House rejected a motion to disapprove 356 to 39 last month. No formal vote was taken in the Senate.

Friday was the last day to block the proposal.

Beginning in October, the agency will handle all job discrimination cases involving federal employees. That task currently is handled by the Civil Service Commission, but the administration feels an outside authority should fill the role.

The reshuffle abolishes the Equal Employment Opportunity Coordinating Council, effective July 1, and transfers its duties to the EEOC. The council had been set up to eliminate conflict, duplication and inconsistency in federal programs.

A Beer Can Building

WILLOW SPRINGS, N.C. (AP) — Haywood Dupree hasn't decided exactly what to do with the utility house he is building, but one thing is for sure: He won't need to worry about termites.

Unless, of course, there are termites out there who like beer.

The walls of 12-by-20-foot structure consist of empty beer and soft-drink cans — about 9,000 in all, by Dupree's estimate.

Just what is Dupree trying to prove?

"People said he couldn't build it, so of course he did," said his wife. Dupree agreed: "I was hardheaded, like she said, and went on and tried it."

The beer-can house is next to the Duprees' mobile home in this community 10 miles south of Raleigh. Dupree, who is retired but does odd jobs when he can find them, said the utility house cost him $200 for sand and cement.

The cans were free.

"We drank some and saved the cans," said Mrs. Dupree. "Then neighbors found out about the building and started saving cans. One man had a big pile behind his house and gave them to us."

The house is now complete except for the roof, which will be put on soon.

Aluminum cans were put into the walls with their bottoms pointed out on the two sides of the building that can be seen from the road.

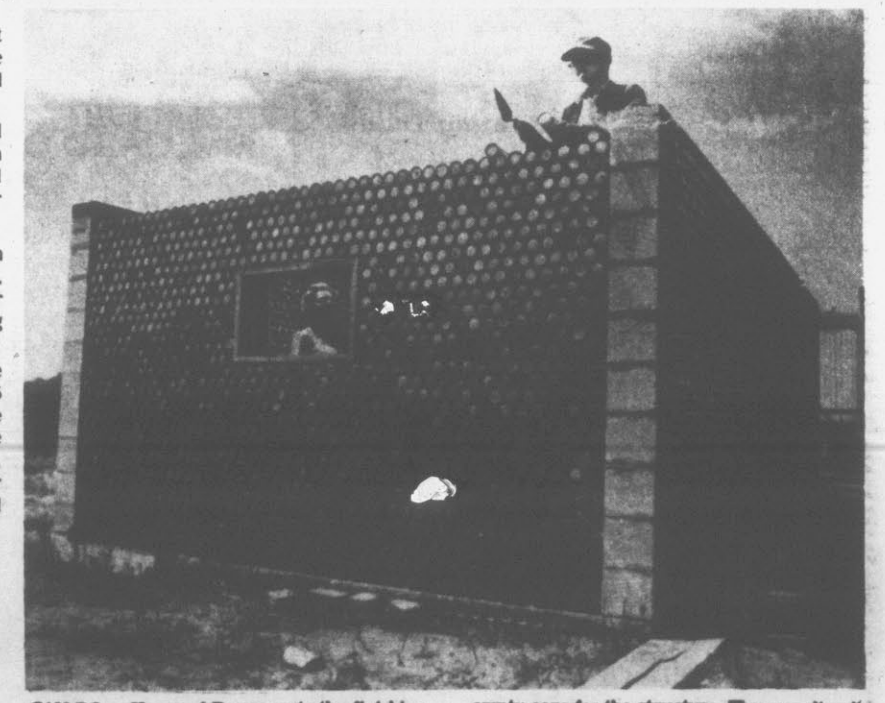

"And they sure are pretty," Mrs. Dupree said. "They look just like glass when the sun shines on them."

Regular metal cans were used for the two walls not visible from the road. The steel will rust out, so Dupree plastered them front and back with cement.

Although Dupree said he wasn't sure what to do with the building, his wife said she planned "to use some of the space for my freezer and my canning."

Mrs. Dupree said the house is provoking a few double-takes.

"People drive by, then whirl to look back as they continue down the road," she said. "I think they are wondering, 'Did I really see what I thought I saw?'"

CAN DO — Haywood Dupree puts the finishing touches on one wall of the utility house he is building out of empty beer and soft-drink cans. Dupree and his wife (in window) collected 9,000 empty cans for the structure. They aren't quite sure what to do with it, however. (AP Laserphoto)

$3 Million Gift

DURHAM, N.C. (UPI) — Joseph M. Bryan, chairman of the board of Jefferson-Pilot Broadcasting Co., has given Duke University $3 million toward a new university center, Duke President Terry Sanford announced Saturday.

Sanford said construction of the $12 million center already has begun and is expected to be completd by the spring of 1979.

"We are doing this because we feel it is the duty of private citizens — whenever they are able to do so — to contribute to the private sector of higher education," said Bryan after the announcement of the contribution made by him and his wife.

"This is the only way to guarantee preservation of a dual system of education that has long promoted our state and national intellect and conscience," Bryan said.

Sanford said the center will be the center of activities on the Duke campus and will provide a meeting place for students and faculty members.

The center will house an experimental theater, cinema, student lounges and other student activity and meeting areas.

Sanford said the Kresge Foundation gave Duke a $1.5 million challenge grant for the center. Other contributors have been R.J. Reynolds Industries, Mr. and Mrs. Norb F. Schaefer Jr. of Indianapolis, Ind., and the Krannert Charitable Trust.

Posthumous Award To J. Curtis Hendrix

The Outstanding Alumni Award, the highest award of the East Carolina University Association, was presented posthumously on Saturday to J. Curtis Hendrix, a Greenville banker and civic leader.

Hendrix's parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Hendrix, accepted the 1978 award on behalf of his widow, the former Mary Alice Cox, and their children, Curtis, Jr. and Alison, at the annual Alumni Day luncheon attended by hundreds of ECU graduates.

Also at the luncheon, retiring chancellor Dr. Leo W. Jenkins made a farewell address and was recognized by the association for 18 years of leadership. Troy W. Pate, Jr., chairman of the ECU Board of Trustees, presented Jenkins with a framed seascape by Carolyn Blish.

New members elected to the association board of directors include Phillip Dixon, Max R. Joyner, and William D. Mitchum, all of Greenville; Baxter R. Ridenhour, Durham, R. Marvin Slaughter, Virginia Beach, Va., and Jeanette McKinnon Wright, Tabor City.

Missing Boys Found Dead

SHELBY, N.C. (AP) — Two eighth-grade boys who had been missing three days were found dead Saturday in a wooded Cleveland County area, authorities said.

The bodies of Ty Stinchcomb, 14, and Kenneth Mellon, 15, were found about 2 p.m. Saturday in an area near Belwood, 25 miles north of here, by two men who were part of a search team that numbered more than 100 persons.

Cleveland County Coroner Bennett Mason said the boys apparently died Wednesday afternoon from injuries sustained in a motorcycle accident. He said the boys' motorcycle apparently ran off the road in a curve, thrusting the boys against trees and breaking their necks. He said each boy hit a different tree, and their motorcycle slammed into a third tree.

Authorities said Stinchcomb, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jimmy Stinchcomb of the Casar area, complained of a sore throat Wednesday and stayed home from school. They said Mellon, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Mellon, went to Burns Junior High School that morning but left at 9 a.m., saying he had to do some plowing for a neighbor.

The youngsters apparently went to a store in Casar about 11 a.m. Wednesday to get a motorcycle Mellon had stored in a barn. Mellon's parents said they had not been aware he had the motorcycle. Mellon's grandfather, Frank Mellon, said he saw the two riding through a field a short distance from their home a few minutes later.

The families and sheriff's deputies had checked out dozens of rumors, including some that they planned to go to Florida or that Stinchcomb wanted to go to New Jersey, where his family lived until last year.

Almost 100 men from the Upper Cleveland Rescue Squad, Casar and Fallston fire departments and the surrounding Casar area combed the countryside on motorcycles, in four-wheel-drive vehicles and on foot after the families notified authorities early Thursday.

Arthur Tyler, 81 Died In Rocky Mt.

ROCKY MOUNT, N.C. (AP) — Arthur L. Tyler, retired board chairman of Belk Stores Services Inc., died early today at a Rocky Mount hospital. He was 81.

Tyler retired in 1970 as board chairman of Belk Stores Services, which at that time had 418 stores throughout the Southeast. The Belk-Tyler department stores in eastern North Carolina bear his name.

A native of Richmond, Va., Tyler spent his teen-age years in Henderson. After a year of studies at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, he came to Rocky Mount to manage a department store.

He joined the Belk organization in 1931 as manager of the Rocky Mount store. At one time, he was vice president of the 16 Belk-Tyler stores.

He is survived by his wife, Elizabeth; one daughter, Mrs. Marie Garner of Rocky Mount; two brothers, James Tyler of Kinston and John Tyler of Thomasville, Ga.; two sisters, Mrs. Marie Gudger and Mrs. William Hunter, both of Asheville; and three grandchildren.

Funeral services will be held today at 2 p.m. ata the Episcopal Church of the Good Shepherd in Rocky Mount. Burial will follow at Pineview Cemetery.

Gas Leak Found

Members of the Eastern Pines Fire Department were called to the Cherry Oaks pool Saturday night when a chlorine gas cylinder developed a leak.

According to pool manager Ray Scharf, the 150 pound tank developed a leak in the vicinity of a valve.

Firemen wearing protective breathing equipment hosed down the area while Eastern Pines Chief Lyman Hardee and Scharf stopped the leak.

Scharf said the gas is used in the pool and he did not know if the cylinder was full at the time of the leak. Scharf added that the tank was left from last year.

A party in progress inside the party house was evacuated when the fumes were first detected. The patrons of the party remained outside for about 45 minutes until the area was clear.

There were no injuries reported as a result of the leak.

No Hike Stand By Saudis

By ELIAS HADDAD

TAIF, Saudi Arabia (UPI) — Influential Saudi Arabia Saturday threw its weight against a mid-year hike in oil prices or abandoning the dollar as a pricing unit as OPEC ministers began a two-day strategy session at this summer resort town.

Venezuelan Oil Minister Valentin Hernandez Acosta, the current OPEC chairman, officially opened the conference of the 13-member cartel and the ministers then immediately went into closed session.

OPEC secretary-general Ali Jaida of Qatar told reporters the conference would center on future oil policy.

He said a balance should be struck between oil supply and demand "in such a way that there would be neither a surplus to affect petroleum prices nor an energy crisis that might hamper world economic growth."

The Iraqi News Agency reported from Taif that Iraqi Oil Minister Tayeh Abdel Karim called for revision of OPEC's oil pricing system and replacing the dollar, at Saturday's session.

In an interview published Saturday in the right-wing Beirut daily Al Bayraq, Saudi Crown Prince Fahd said he expected the value of the dollar to rise next month and that his country was opposed to an increase in the price of oil.

The decline of the dollar on world money markets in recent months has eroded the purchasing power of oil producers because oil prices are posted in dollars.

The losses to OPEC members this year have been variously estimated at between $12 billion and $16 billion. Kuwait claims it is losing a million dollars a day due to the drop of the dollar.

Some producers — notably, Kuwait, Iraq, the United Arab Emirates and Qatar — have argued that oil prices should no longer be posted in dollars and propose switching to a different unit of account.

Pressure has also been building within OPEC in recent months for a compensatory hike in prices at mid-year in order to offset losses due to the slippage in the dollar's value.

However, a surplus of oil on world markets has weakened international demand and limited the ability of the producers to impose higher prices. The surplus is largely due to new sources of supply from Alaska, the North Sea and Mexico.

In any case, Saudi Arabia and Iran, who together account for over half of OPEC's total production, have come out not only in favor of extending the current price freeze until the end of 1978 but also in support of the dollar.

Banks Ordered To Repay Funds

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — A federal bankruptcy judge has ordered three banks to repay about $744,000 they took from accounts of The Washington Group Inc. to cover debts of the firm.

Judge Rufus W. Reynolds ordered repayment by North Carolina National Bank, United Virginia Bank and American Bank and Trust Co. of Pennsylvania, which took the Washington Group money just as the firm filed for protection from its creditors and for corporate reorganization under Chapter 10 of the federal Bankruptdy Act.

A spokesman for the Washington Group said the company was unable to pay its employees or creditors because its accounts were frozen. The firm closed its mills, leaving thousands of employees out of work.

The order by Reynolds said the three banks wrote the Washington Group that its debts were due immediately and the funds were being used in accordance with March 1976 loan agreements.

The Washington Group received a $2 million line of credit from the Northwestern Bank in late July. It used a half million dollars of the money, which it is now repaying, and has not had to borrow any more.

"It is in the public interest that these (Washington Group) funds be returned for the use by the trustee since these businesses, at the time that the offset occurred, employed in excess of 3,400 people," Reynolds said.

NCNB was ordered to return about $280,500, United Virginia about $442,000 and American Bank about $19,500.

The Washington Group said it is negotiating a repayment schedule for its debts and that repaymnets already are being made to NCNB as the result of the sale of the Diener textile plants in Pennsylvania for about $2.1 million.

$23 Million Postage Stamp To Allstate

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A group of Carolina Action members presented a $23 million "postage stamp" to the Raleigh Allstate office Saturday, protesting the company's refusal to notify policy-holders who are in the North Carolina Reinsurance Facility.

The group also demanded a meeting in Raleigh or Durham with the North Carolina Allstate head, Jack Turbidy.

Earlier, Carolina Action members had tried to deliver a letter to Turbidy, but they said an Allstate representative in the Raleigh office refused to accept the letter, told members they were on private property and asked them to leave.

"When CA members in Charlotte met with Mr. Turbidy, he pleaded poverty, saying that the postage cost of notifying policyholders of their high risk status would be too much," said Braxton Jones, a member of the group. "We find that hard to believe when the insurance companies will be making an additional $23 million from the April 1 rate increase."

Member Joe Fish of Durham said the company was telling the group it couldn't pay for a $15,000 mailing to notify people of their high risk, when Carolina Action has learned that the company paid its lobbists a $22,000 bonus.

Carolina Action has charged that 70 percent of North Carolina drivers in the Reinsurance Facility have clean driving records and that the insurance companies should base placement in the facility solely on individual records.

Most of the reinsured drivers are not aware they are in the facility, paying higher rates, said Jones. "And we feel that if people are going to be unjustly penalized through these higher rates, at least they have a right to know about it!"

Chinese Leaving Viet Nam

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — About 15,000 Chinese who lived in Vietnam have returned to China and more are expected, the Yugoslav news agency Tanjug has reported from Peking.

It said authorities estimate that more than 2 million Chinese live in Vietnam, and most of them hold Vietnamese citizenship.

According to Tanjug, many of the Chinese were traders or shop owners who lost their businesses when Vietnam's Communist government began to nationalize private firms.

Carter Says Russians Are Racists

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP) — President Carter, calling the Soviet Union a racist regime,says he has warned the Russians many times that to "maintain peace throughout the world" they must watch their step in Africa.

But Carter did not say what he would do if the Soviets do not heed the warning.

"The Soviets know very clearly how deeply I feel about this. I have communicated directly with (Soviet President Leonid) Brezhnev through private sealed messages," Carter said.

Carter made his strong comments at a town meeting in Spokane, Wash., on Friday as he concluded a four-state, fence-mending tour to the West. The president returned to Washington late Friday night.

Arafat Issues Appeal

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Palestinian guerrilla leader Yasser Arafat has appealed to Italy's Red Brigades terrorists to spare the life of kidnapped former Premier Aldo Moro.

Arafat's appeal, published by all Beirut newspapers today, said:

"On behalf of the Palestinian people, Palestinian revolutionaries and myself, I appeal to the kidnappers of Aldo Moro to release him in the interest of the unity of the friendly Italian people and the interest of democracy in Italy, so that his detention will not be exploited by the enemies of freedom, peace and humanity. I hope from the bottom of my heart that this tragedy will end by releasing Moro also for the sake of his family that is undergoing a state of human sadness, pain and suffering."

The Greek poet Pherecrates invented a meter, known as Pherecratean, which is found in the choruses of Greek tragedies as well as in works of Horace.

Programs Combined

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — Howard N. Lee, secretary of natural resources and community development, announced a program Saturday combining job training and housing repairs.

Lee said a federal grant of $572,000 will be used to improve substandard housing in 13 counties.

In the program, 60 unemployed and underemployed persons from the 13-county area are receiving three months of classroom instruction on carpentry, plumbing and electrical work. The students will then be given seven months of supervised work experience repairing houses, Lee said.

Springtime In The Rockies...

OVERLOADED—A large elm branch lies in ruin at the base of its former home Saturday, the victim of an unseasonable snowstorm that dumped at least five inches of snow on the Denver area between early Friday and Saturday. Another six inches is forecast through Sunday. Throughout the state, the National Weather Service reported between one and two feet of new, unwelcomed snow from the storm. (AP Laserphoto)

Spring Snow Hits Midwest

By The Associated Press

Snow kept coming down Saturday in the central Rockies as an intense slow-moving storm crept through Wyoming, stranding cars and sending snow drifting up to 6 feet.

Travel in southeastern Wyoming was hazardous. Deep snow drifts were accumulating on Interstate 80 between Cheyenne and Laramie. Some of the snow depths at midday Satuday included 17 inches in the Boulder, Colo. area and a foot at Cheyenne and in the western sections of Denver, Colo.

Officials reported that 34 inches of snow had accumulated at the Longs Peak Ranger Station in Rocky Mountain National Park in Colorado.

The storm was drifting to the east, but the snow was expected to continue through Sunday, dropping another 1 to 3 feet in some mountainous areas. Avalanche warnings were posted for a large portion of the Colorado Rockies.

Travelers advisories stretched as far south as northeastern New Mexico and to the east into the Nebraska Panhandle.

Elsewhere, rain and drizzle covered most of the central and southern Plans on Saturday. Strong thunderstorms brewed over Texas and Oklahoma, and a tornado watch was posted for north-central Texas and parts of western Oklahoma.

In the West, sunny skies were over the Pacific Coast states, most of North Dakota, Minnesota and Wisconsin. Also, there was sun over the Tennessee Valley and the southern Atlantic states on Saturday.

Here are some early afternoon temperatures and weather conditions in some key cities around the nation and Canada on Saturday:

Eastern U.S. — Atlanta 78 partly cloudy, Boston 61 fair, Buffalo 42 foggy, Caribou 57 fair, Charleston, S.C., 85 partly cloudy, Chicago 57 partly cloudy, Cincinnati 52 cloudy, Cleveland 48 foggy, Detroit 51 partly cloudy, Indianapolis 60 cloudy, Knoxville 72 partly cloudy, Miami 87 fair, Nashville 70 partly cloudy, New Orleans 83 hazy, New York 48 cloudy, Philadelphia 50 foggy, Pittsburgh 52 cloudy, Richmond 68 hazy, Washington 61 cloudy.

Western U.S. — Bismarck 65 fair, Denver 33 snow, Des Moines 50 rain, Fort Worth 73 foggy, Kansas City 46 foggy, Los Angeles 69 hazy, Minneapolis-St. Paul 61 partly cloudy, Phoenix 70 fair, St. Louis 49 foggy, Salt Lake City 47 showers, San Diego 65 fair, San Francisco 65 fair, Seattle 57 fair.

Canada — Montreal 61 partly cloudy, Toronto 45 foggy.

Trouble For Towns On The Roanoke

HENDERSON, N.C. (AP) — There's rain in the forecast for Sunday, and that could spell trouble for the towns down the Roanoke River from Kerr Lake.

The National Weather Service reported Saturday that the lake, north of here on the North Carolina-Virginia state line, was at 316.9 feet and rising.

The lake, which is actually a reservoir, was expected to crest at 318.5 feet by Monday morning, which is 1.5 feet below maximum flood level and just a bit lower than the record high-water mark of almost 318.77 feet, set in 1975.

Dave Hewitt, a spokesman for the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers state district office in Wilmington, said that if the water rises no higher than 318.5 feet, there will be no threat of serious flooding downstream from the dam at Roanoke River valley towns including Roanoke Rapids and Weldon.

But the reservoir could be swelled by rain from a storm that is expected to move across North Carolina on Sunday. If the maximum flood level of 320 feet is reached, increased releases of water from Kerr Lake will be necessary, posing serious flooding danger downstream, corps officials said.

So far, with the level above 315 feet for more than a week, there has been only minor flooding downstream in low-lying crop, pasture and timber lands.

However, camping and recreational facilities in the area have been under water since last week and about 15 bridges on both sides of the state line have been flooded. All of those bridges are on secondary roads, Hewitt said.

In 1975, when the all-time high-water mark was set, there was serious flooding in the Roanoke Rapids-Weldon area. A Roanoke Rapids sewage plant was flooded and closed for a month despite construction of a 15-foot sandbag dike.

Hewitt said that even if the water level reaches 320 feet, water won't flow over the dam because it can be "put through the gates."

Teacher To Appeal Case

GOLDSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Charles C. Richberg, a junior high school music teacher convicted of using excessive force in paddling a student, says he will appeal the case.

District Court Judge Pat Exum sentenced Richberg to 60 days in the Wayne County jail, with the sentence suspended provided he pay a $75 fine and court costs. He filed notice of appeal to Superior Court.

Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Jones swore out a warrant against the Woodington Junior High School teacher after their 14- year-old son Todd and his cousin, Bernon Kennedy, were paddled.

Major Improvements Sought

The city schools obviously have some big needs in the way of capital improvements.

The Greenville City School Board approved $413,584.50 capital improvements budget for "immediate needs" in a meeting Monday nigbt.

Included in that are property acquisition, high priority construction, equipment, buses and other immediate needs.

A second long range capital improvements budget of $4,140,584.50 was approved. Included were completion of the new Middle School, a Rose High auditorium, athletic facilities, vocational classrooms and a number of major renovation projects within the city school system.

The proposals will be made to the county commissioners, which must then decide how much of it can be accomplished and how the financing can be arranged, keeping in mind that comparable provisions must be made for the county school system.

There is no doubt that some large capital improvements expenditures are going to have to be made in order to bring the city school facilities up to what is needed.

Some of the funds will no doubt come from county appropriations, but sooner or later we will be facing a bond issue for both the city and county school systems.

Vigorous Growth Marks A First Year

Like any youngster at one year old Pitt County Memorial is growing by leaps and bounds. Its mission now is far different from what was envisioned when the initial planning for the facility got underway.

Nothing Wrong In This?

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — "I don't think the public will ever know what we talked about in those meetings, if we all keep our oaths," Lt. Gov. James C. Green says of the executive sessions of his Governmental Operations Commission.

And he doesn't see anything wrong with that. "The people of North Carolina trust their elected representatives to handle their business properly," says Green.

And besides, the commission has been meeting regularly in open sessions without representatives of the press or public displaying interest or attending with any regularity. Why, he wonders, should you make a fuss of it now that some secret, locked door sessions have been held. He raises the prospect of a tradeoff situation — open meetings for the uninteresting dull stuff, followed by closed meetings for the interesting, some observers feel.

A Problem

Lt. Gov. Green was presented this parallel:

Suppose you entered your tobacco warehouse and found your employees in your office, drinking your coffee, going over your books and records and planning significant changes in the way your business operates.

They tell you what they are doing is none of your business, and ask you to leave. As you stand outside pondering this development, a cop comes up and tells you that you are bothering the people inside, and they want you to stop loitering about — — leave.

The lieutenant governor rejects that as an accurate description of what happened, and says he called security police only to make sure no reporters were eavesdropping on the secret meeting.

Nonetheless, the Legislative Building belongs to the people of North Carolina, and those in the meeting were being paid with public funds and drinking coffee purchased with public funds — but somehow they don't consider what was going on the public's business.

Employee Politics

"The business of friends helping friends has to be a two-way street," writes Emmett Burden in the current

Burden proposes "a new role and posture of involvement" among state employees to help "friends" in the General Assembly win re-election.

"This is a must situation ... failure ... can only lead to a continuing lessening of our effectiveness when we need it the most," Burden, himself a former legislator, reports. He is executive director of the State Employee's Association.

Burden calls for "serious consideration" to removing an association rule against active support of candidates, but notes he is not advocating a change. But, he says, "as long as this prohibition stands, there is absolutely nothing or very little at the most that we can do legally for our friends."

What prompted the remarks? "In the past month no less than 10 influential members of the General Assembly have contacted me, at home, and at work, expressing concern about their re-election this May. Each mone, decidedly to the point, has asked what state employees are doing to help make their re-election campaigns successful.

"The gist of most inquiries," Burden reports, were this: For years we supported state employees by consistently voting for rather substantial salary and fringe benefits ... just what is the association and its membership going to do for me ...?

THE INSIDE REPORT

Carter Gamble On SALT

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — A presidential decision has been made for a summer summit here with Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev to sign a new strategic arms limitation agreement (SALT II), a gamble risking Jimmy Carter's leadership at home as well as his command of the West against Moscow's world offensive.

The gamble and risk stem from President Carter's private acknowledgment that he does not now have the votes in the Senate to approve the new treaty. Nevertheless, he is determined to send the treaty to the Senate late this year, without asking for immediate action. He would then seek to mobilize public fear of a nuclear holocaust to build pressure for SALT II in 1979.

What's more, despite increasingly adventurous worldwide conduct by the Kremlin, Mr. Carter has reinforced his policy against any linkage of SALT with Soviet good behavior. Moscow's refusal to reduce its pressure on the Horn of Africa is not relevant to SALT. Nor was last week's Soviet-supported government overthrow in Afghanistan, an intervention officially ignored by the U.S. government.

This anti-linkage, turn-the-other-cheek policy raises some eyebrows in Western Europe. But what really builds fear there is the prospect that Senate refusal to ratify SALT II would grievously compromise Mr. Carter as a leader of the western alliance. Such warnings from this country's European allies are being ignored by the President.

The carefully constructed buildup for the summer summit predates the President's March 17 speech at Wake Forest University. It is now clear that the Wake Forest speech, widely interpreted as a policy switch warning Moscow to mend its ways in Africa, was intended for domestic consumption.

Actually, the crucial Moscow SALT session in mid-April was privately arranged between Secretary of State Cyrus Vance and Soviet Ambassador Anatoliy Dobrynin just before the Wake Forest speech. Special efforts made certain the Russians understood that Mr. Carter was by no means forging a new hardline policy. Marshall Shulman, Vance's Soviet adviser, alerted Dobrynin not to be misled by the Wake Forest address.

Although Vance has said little about his April talks in Moscow, some SALT II disputes were settled there. Except for a few remaining unresolved issues, the agreement is set in concrete.

Acute alarm is spreading through the Western alliance over signing a treaty that, in Mr. Carter's own private opinion, today does not command the necessary two-thirds support in the Senate. A ranking European diplomat told us that failure of the U.S.-Soviet SALT II negotiations would be merely a "setback for detente;" but a treaty defeated in the Senate, he added, "would destroy European credibility in the 'imperial' responsibilities of America."

"Credibility" of U.S. leadership is already in a state of disarray, partly due to Mr. Carter's much-criticized vacillation on the neutron "bomb" and his decision — without getting any Soviet tradeoff — not to put it into production. That is added to previous concern over Mr. Carter's unilateral cancellation of the B-1 bomber, again without responding Soviet concessions.

Now comes Mr. Carter's full-speed-ahead on SALT despite the most intensive and successful Soviet offensive since October 1962, when Moscow placed nuclear missiles in Cuba. This timing, following the B-1 and neutron warhead cancellations, is the source of serious concern in European capitals.

The ambassador of one of this country's most important non-European allies put it this way to us: "The President's refusal to link SALT with Soviet actions in Africa and now in Afghanistan is the answer to a maiden's prayer. There must be rejoicing in Moscow."

That strong sentiment is now being expressed openly here at home by Henry Kissinger and other former high officials. Citing a "presumption" that the U.S. may now be facing "a global geopolitical challenge" from Moscow that cannot be reconciled to "any definition of detente," Kissinger warned in a New York talk April 19 that Senate approval of a new SALT treaty was now questionable.

40 Years Ago Today

May 7, 1938

Dr. N. Thomas Ennett, Pitt County health officer, declared today much interest already has been manifested by citizens in the annual state tuberculosis clinic to be held throughout the county for two weeks beginning May 9.

Appointments are being made through the family physician and through the health department.

Last year only one week was devoted to the clinic in this county and the demand for examinations was so great Dr. Ennett applied for and secured the clinic for two weeks.

Governor Hoey urged elections officials today to make certain that registration and election regulations were strictly enforced during the Democratic primary and the general election.

He made the plea in a statement as North Carolina began its biennial march to the polls to register for balloting this summer and fall.

Sunday Morning Notes

Already there is a generation of school kids who don't even know that there was a school standing at the corner of Fifth and Reide Streets.

And there are many people living in this area who came after the school was demolished as a part of the Shore Drive Redevelopment project.

The school was there, though, and memories of it are fond to thousands of us, now adults, who attended the old Greenville High School and later the junior high school which occupied the location.

It was as a junior high that the building partially burned just before the new Aycock Junior High was scheduled for completion.

The building was scheduled for acquisition in the redevelopment project and eventual demolition. On a slightly moved up schedule that is what happened.

perty, now a part of the ECU campus. Attorney S. B. Underwood happened along and we talked about the old school.

He chuckled and recalled that he swam in the swimming pool located beneath the gym.

Old swimming pool? We didn't recall any swimming pool.

"This went back before the building that was later here," Underwood explained. There was an older portion of the building where the last gym stood. A new classroom section was being built behind it, when the older section caught fire. It burned but the new section was put into use. Later a gym was constructed where the old section stood, but without the interior pool.

Now the site is grass, trees, and shrubbery left over from the old campus that was once Greenville High School. The ravine next to it, which was once all the play ground the school had is growing up in weeds.

So far as we know the pool in the original section of the school was the only one which the city schools ever exclusively owned.

Other Editors Say Would Sacrifice

(Chapel Hill Newspaper)

Pollster Louis Harris, who is a graduate of the University here, recently told a Senate subcommittee on inter-government relations that Americans are willing to take a smaller pay raise and do without some of life's luxuries to help fight inflation. The poll showed that 82 percent of all Americans feel that the number one issue facing the country is inflation. Also by a 54 to 32 margin, these same Americans stated that they would gladly accept smaller pay increases if there was "some assurance that the cost of living was being brought under control."

In the same newspaper that reported Harris' findings there was another report that the average urban family of four needs to earn $17,106 a year to maintain a middle-level standard of living. A total of $10,481 is needed at the hypothetical "lower level" standard of living and $25,202 to enjoy a "higher level" standard. The average American family is satisfied with its income until it starts to spend it. Then it realizes that it is not how much you make but how much your money will buy. The fellow who is making 50 percent more than he was 10 years ago is beginning to realize that the increase in wages has not kept up with inflation. He doesn't have to have a college education to realize that stopping inflation would actually help him more than raising his wages. When his present wages are raised there is more state and federal income tax withheld, and his social security payments soar. His take-home pay is not enough to balance his budget.

Congress should heed a Harris opinion that most Americans are willing to accept change and make more sacrifices than leaders believe. Harris told the subcommittee that confidence in doctors was at an all-time low, while trust in big business, government and other major instiutions continues to deteriorate. This would indicate that the average worker these days has no more faith in his employer than he does in the government.

Voters should turn to those candidates who are willing to fight the inflation battle rather than someone talking about government handouts. If what Harris says is true, the mood of America right now is to stop inflation. That feeling won't continue unless Congress and others make a more serious effort to stop continued rising costs.

Better Choose A Boat

By SUSAN CHADWICK

SEATTLE (UPI) — The only road to the last American frontier is 1,000 miles of mud, dust and gravel, relieved by the occasional appearance of a wild sheep or coyote, some lofty mountain peaks, and perhaps an encounter with a colorful character.

"It's long and tedious and wears a lot on you and your car," said Ned Tuthill, a professional hunting guide and pilot who estimates he's traveled the Alaska Highway too many times.

"Oh, yeah, there's a lot of really beautiful country," he admitted under pressure. "A lot of mountains, and, uh, colorful trees."

"But it's a long road with a lot of turns and long stretches through flat country where there's nothing really to see. The two or three days before Whitehorse are pretty boring."

The Alaska Highway, unofficially called the Alcan Highway, was hastily bulldozed out of the wilderness by the Army Corps of Engineers during World War II as a land supply route for military installations in Alaska.

The rough-hewn road, most of it unpaved, begins at Dawson Creek on the northeast border of British Columbia, a mere 839 miles from Seattle. From there it winds for 918 miles to Whitehorse in the Yukon Territory.

Past Whitehorse the scenery along the two-lane dirt road picks up, said Tuthill, as you pass by Mount Logan in the St. Elias Range, at 19,850 feet the second highest peak in North America.

But it's the mud and dust and gravel that provide the summertime souvenirs of motoring the 2,362 miles from Seattle to Fairbanks.

When it's not mud as high as the top of your license plates, it's dust that fills your car, or flying gravel that punctures your radiator or windshield, said Tuthill.

Govm't Is Business Problem

NEW YORK (AP) — List the various 'publics — customers, employees, unions, government personnel, and so on — you find most difficult to deal with, a sampling of chief executives was asked by a surveyor.

Fifty-four percent named government personnel, four points more than the percentage listing unions, the traditional adversary of corporate management. Only 8 percent named customers.

The same executives were asked "What is the single most important problem facing your company right now, today?" The greatest number of respondents, 15 percent, said government regulations.

The responses, several hundred of them from a questionnaire sent to chief executives by John Arnold ExecuTrak Systems, a Waltham, Mass., management consulting concern, show a basic change in the marketplace.

That change: Government involvement.

Comparisons aren't available, but it hardly seems likely that a decade ago union personnel would have rated lower than government employees on a scale of how difficult they were to work with.

Or that two decades ago sales would have been judged the single most important problem by only 7.5 percent and profitability by just 6.5 percent, while government regulations registered twice as high.

Government, in short, is pushing many executives up the wall, burying them in paper, in testimony, in defending their actions and sometimes, said a chief executive, in "telling us how to run things.

How ironic, exploded this chief, head of a major steel company, that the government, which couldn't run a house if ill repute at a profit, now tells business how to run its affairs.

Another chief executive, head of an automotive company, related in an interview that he now spends about 20 percent of his working time in dealing with federal government matters alone, often in Washington.

More important perhaps than the degree of government involvement in the marketplace, is whether Americans really want it.

The National Association of Manufacturers, sounding militant again, insists Americans didn't ask for big government. It sometimes even suggests the public has been duped and misrepresented.

In the current issue of its monthly journal, "Enterprise," for example, it quotes William Simon, former Treasury Secretary, as saying the bulk of regulation results from lobbying rather than public demand.

"In sum, the Public Interest movement is a lobby, not for the People, but for expanding police powers of the state over American producers," states Simon, who equates it with dictatorship.

But few people, even those angered by the tangle of wasteful paperwork, foolish limitations on competition, and absurd bureaucratic edicts, are likely to ask for a total recission in any area.

Observations From Editorial Columns

State Tags & Public Relations

It may not be so, but some among the fed-up crowd believe that next to the cost of maintaining so many government employees, the second highest cost of government is represented in its rolling stock. To those particularly sensitive to government vehicles which wear "permanent" license plates, there is too much use of public vehicles and no little abuse in places.

Thousands of these vehicles are on streets and roads of North Carolina. Many are specifically service cars and trucks performing services which are hardly ever in question. Many, however, are in hands of roving public employees and bear no markings to identify them as public vehicles other than their silver tax-free tags.

One thing that gets the goat of taxpayers in private pursuits is the flexibility of policies regarding use of these vehicles among elected bodies. One board may be unusually strict and another unusually lenient. A result is that some cautious public servants are unfairly accused of misuse. But another is that public vehicles are not infrequently observed in some unusual places.

This condition results in added and unnecessary poor public relations. It's something the legislature seemingly could correct — by adopting a set of strict regulations and guidelines about how a vehicle equipped with a "permanent" state tag is to be used.

Then, if county or municipal governments desire to provide more latitude to drivers of their public vehicles, they could simply equip them with regular paid-for state tags. — The Laurinburg Exchange

A Risky Attraction

The outspoken opposition of Gov. Jim Hunt should be helpful in offsetting a move to legalize betting on horse races in North Carolina. A legislative committee is expected to recommend legalization on grounds that it would attract more tourists to coastal areas and produce revenue for the state.

In stating his opinion about this proposal, and also in opposing a by-the-drink liquor bill, the governor mentioned his belief that "we ought to stand up for certain principles." However, he made his objection to horserace betting quite specific; he believes it would bring organized crime into the state. That is a reasonable deduction from the fact that illegal gambling traditionally is a major source of criminal income, and it flourishes in states where betting is legal.

As much difficulty as other states, plus the federal government, have in dealing with organized crime, it is doubtful that North Carolina could be kept free of it, even if all the state revenue from legal gambling were spent for that purpose.

This is a "can't" state in regard to legal sale of mixed drinks and legal horserace betting. It also is a "can" state in regard to family tourism. The tourist business has been booming, on the basis of natural attractions. Legalized gambling might attract tourists who are turned on by it, but it also could repel tourists who are turned off by it. Aside from the risk of inviting organized crime, the sanctioning of horserace betting would be a gamble with the state's reputation as a family vacation-land. — The Robesonian

Today In History

By The Associated Press

Today is Sunday, May 7, the 127th day of 1978. There are 238 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On this date in 1945, at the end of World War II in Europe, the Germans signed unconditional surrender terms at Gen. Dwight Eisenhower's headquarters at Rheims, France.

On this date:

In 1833, German composer Johannes Brahms was born.

In 1915, the British liner Lusitania was torpedoed and sunk by a German submarine off Ireland, with a loss of nearly 1,200 lives.

In 1943, Allied forces in World War II won a major victory in North Africa as Tunis and Bizerte were liberated.

In 1960, the Soviet government said an American pilot shot down over the Soviet Union, Francis Gary Powers, would be tried as a spy.

In 1974, West Germany's Chancellor Willy Brandt was succeeded as government chief by Finance Minister Helmut Schmidt after a spy scandal on the Brandt staff.

Ten years ago: The race horse Dancer's Image, who had finished first in the Kentucky Derby, was disqualified the day after the race and placed last because of the detection of a pain killer in his system.

Five years ago: The U.S. consul in Guadalajara, Mexico, Terrance Leonhardy, was released by left-wing kidnappers after being held four days. The Mexican government had freed 30 prisoners and flown them to Cuba to secure the release.

One year ago: A broad general agreement on combating unemployment was reached by the leaders of seven major industrial nations at the first session of an economic conference in London.

strike last summer, many stranded tourists sold their cars and motor homes rather than face the drive back down to the "outside."

"Most people have screen guards in front of the radiator to block the stones," he said. But he added: "You hardly ever see very much traffic on the road. You can drive for hours without seeing another car."

"A lot of places they're working on the highway and we had to go around them," said Tuthill of his latest trip last summer. "They're always working on it continuously. As far as I know they've always been working on it."

He said there are gas stations along the route "with little cafes in them just far enough apart so you can fill up with gas. A lot of these stopovers have hotels and cabins you can rent by the night."

With luck the traveler stopped for rest or repairs might meet some of the interesting people that live up the northern wilderness. "Trappers, bush pilots, a lot of people that live up there have interesting stories to tell about animals and things," said Tuthill, though the subject of mud clearly evoked more feeling.

Tuthill, who makes his home at Anchor Point, Alaska, on the lower Cook Inlet, also recommends the hot springs north of the Liard River in northern British Columbia to soak off the residue of travel. "Everybody usually stops to sit in the hot springs."

The Liard River also marks the boundary between the territory of the magnificent white Dall sheep on the north and the related grey Stone sheep on the south, said the 28-year-old guide. But other than sheep, some coyotes and maybe a wolf or two in the wintertime, "you don't see many animals," he said.

Wintertime is a better time to drive the highway, he said. The road is harder, smoother, and generally plowed out, although temperatures regularly drop to 50 and 60 below and storms sometimes make progress difficult. "You've got to make sure you got good antifreeze."

Overall he recommends that anyone contemplating driving the Alaska Highway consult a travel guide called "The Milepost," available in most book stores.

"If I had the choice and the money, I'd send my car by ferry or barge," he said.

Jack Kemp Could Be Darkhorse In 1980 Race

By JAMES J. KILPATRICK

WASHINGTON — In the horse-racing month of May, when we tend to belabor the bangtail metaphors, let me nominate a political dark horse for the 1980 sweeps: Republican Jack Kemp, member of the House from the 38th District of New York. He could go all the way.

Mr. Kemp is a long shot, but what the heck. The presidential primaries are a long way away. From this distance, the gentleman looks very good indeed.

Consider the prospects. The last time around the track we had only two Republicans competing — Gerald Ford and Ronald Reagan. In his heart of hearts, doubtless Mr. Ford would like to run again; the ignominy of being licked by Jimmy Carter must still rankle. But a dozen reasons argue against a second race: Mr. Ford is now rich, relaxed and respected; he has Mrs. Ford's health to worry about; he will be 67 in the summer of 1980; and the track record of losing candidates ----look at Bryan, look at Dewey, look at Stevenson ---- offers no encouragement. Each of them took a worse beating the second time out.

If there is a more attractive gentleman in public life than Ronald Reagan, I have not met him. But the former governor of California is getting a little long in the tooth. If he were nominated and elected, he would be 70 at his inauguration. The odds are against his mounting a fresh challenge for the office.

Who else? Assume for the moment that neither Mr. Ford nor Mr. Reagan makes a bid. The futurity book lists a dozen names. Senator Howard Baker of Tennessee seems to have mortally offended a number of party conservatives. Senator Bob Dole of Kansas has problems of negative image. Such other senators as Danforth (Mo.), Laxalt (Nev.) and Garn and Hatch (Utah) are vice-presidential hopefuls. Congressman Phil Crane of Illinois has a strong conservative following, but would have to broaden his appeal if he really wants to run for the roses.

Outside Washington, one thinks of John Connally of Texas; of such governors as Thompson of Illinoi and Ray of Iowa; of such able men as former Treasury Secretary William Simon and former Senator James Buckley of New York. They are possibilities.

Perhaps Mr. Kemp should be viewed now in the same light, as merely a possibility for 1980, but look at the form chart. He will be 45 in the summer of 1980, and will have served ten years in the House. Those are good numbers. He has a lovely wife and four attractive children; a family man. He is identified with business: He formerly was attached to the Marine Midland Bank of Buffalo. He is also identified with labor: He was a co-founder and president of the American Football League Players Association, and as a former TV-radio commentator, he still lists his membership in the National Association of Broadcasters, Engineers and Technicians (AFL-CIO).

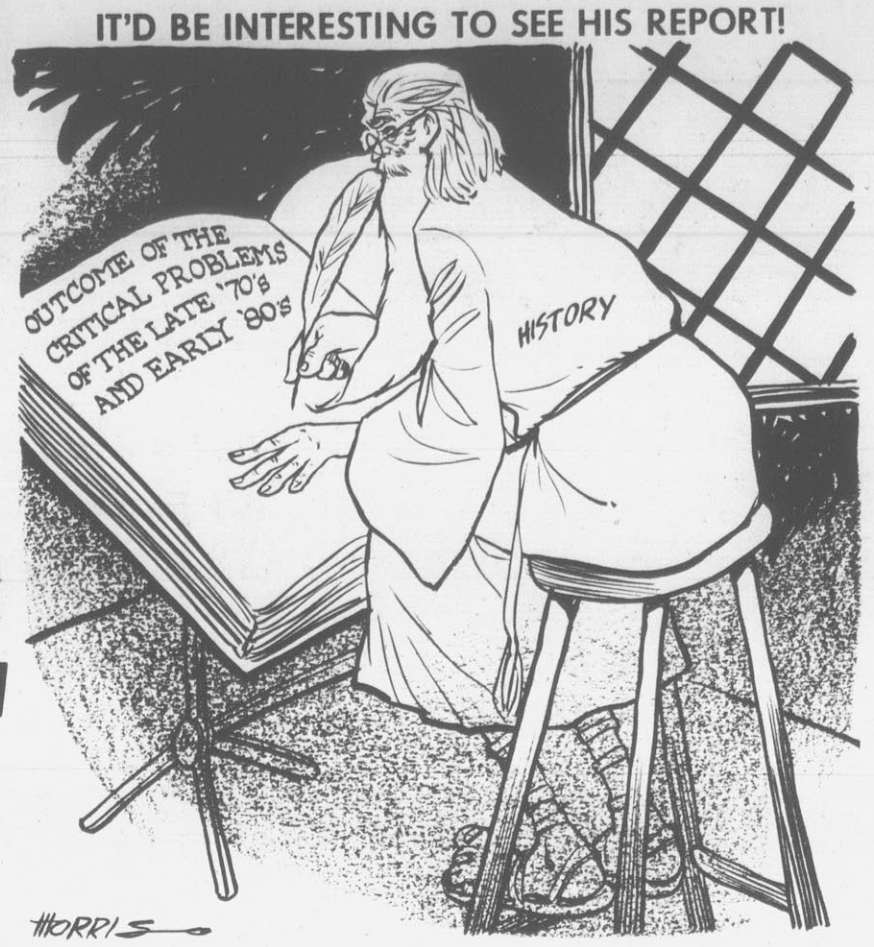

Keep looking. In a nation of football nuts, Mr. Kemp might have great appeal: he served for 13 years as a pro quarterback, and was AFL's player of the year in 1965. He is a handsome dog, a powerful public speaker, an energetic advocate. He is a force. He exudes a sense of command.

Jack Kemp is a philosophical concervative. He rates 93 with American Cause and 90 with the American Conservative Union, a miserable 10 in the eyes of Americans for Democratic Action. But he is not the New Right's darling. Last month he deliberately campaigned for liberal Republican John Anderson in Illinois because he regards Anderson as a man of integrity. This month he will be campaigning for conservative Jeffrey Bell in the New Jersey senatorial contest because he believes in Bell's conservative ideas. He has been asked to lend a hand in 40 congressional districts, and will do what he can. His own re-election seems assured; he won in 1974 with 72 percent of the vote and in 1976 with 78 percent.

Mr. Kemp's principal effort these days involves the bold and imaginative tax reduction bill he has jointly sponsored with Delaware's Senator William Roth. Back in March, when he tested the waters by offering his bill as an amendment to the Humphrey-Hawkins bill he won an astounding 194 votes in the House. The gentleman is a leader.

Other GOP prospects doubtless will emerge as the conviction grows that Jimmy Carter can be dumped. At his remove, it would be foolish to name a favorite. But if in January, 1981 the White House goes from a Jimmy to a Jack, remember you read it here first.

IT'D BE INTERESTING TO SEE HIS REPORT!

Facing South

The One-Man Band Will Travel And Entertain

MOUNT OLIVE, N.C. — NOW MAKING PERSONAL APPEARANCES, reads the coffee-stained flyer. EDDIE "DOC" FLAMINGO, WORLD'S GREATEST DISC SHOW. HE BRINGS THE RECORDS TO REAL LIFE. His photograph is there, showing him seated at his drums, wearing a plaid jacket, a bow-tie and a smile.

Doc Flamingo is a self-styled "one man band". He travels out of this eastern North Carolina hamlet in a road-seasoned Chevrolet panel truck, making one-night stands all over the South. His equipment includes a three-speed turntable, two speakers a microphone, a set of drums, a siren, and at least 2,000 phonograph records — so many, he says, "that I don't even bother to count 'em anymore."

He performs anywhere, from country clubs to family reunions. "Alright", he says into the mike, "we're gonna go back a ways and listen to little Elvis Presley (or Fats Domino, or Eddy Arnold, or Peggy Lee, or the Anita Kerr Singers). And we're takin' requests, so let me know your favorites." The worn, scratchy 45-RPM record begins to spin and Doc interjects an occasional comment or a turn of his siren as he feels moved to do so, hammering away all the while with a lively drum accompaniment to the music.

He's been doing that for over 30 years, ever since he got out of the Navy in Jacksonville back in the '40s. "I did it in the Navy, too", he recalls. "I used to be a band drummer. I was with Fats Domino for awhile. That picture of me was made when I was with Fats."

The picture is of a younger Doc Flamingo. He is, he calculates, 67 years old now: "I was born in 1911, but I've turned the clock back. Age don't mean nothin' to me."

Flamingo came to New York from his native St. Thomas in the Virgin Islands in 1929, and lived there for ten years before joining the Navy. "When they turned me loose in Jacksonville", he says, "I just decided to stay in the South." He has a daughter who lives in Jacksonville now, but no other family. Most of the time, he's on the road.

"I play all kinds of music for all ages", he says. "I play whatever the people want, 'cause that's how I make my living. I've got just about any old tune you can think of, right here in my truck. One time at a dance out in Texas, a man gave me $20 to play "Dixie", and when it was over, another man said I was favorin' the South, so I flipped the record over and played "Yankee Doodle", and the second guy gave me $10. I made $30 off that record — and it only cost me 15 cents."

That accommodating manner has paid off for Flamingo, and kept him out of harm's way in his adopted South. "Where I'm from," he says, "we have a different attitude about black and white than I've met up with in this country. The way I see it, a man is a man. I've learned to feel at home in the South, though, especially in recent years. All I ask is that people treat me right, the way I treat them — and most of 'em do. You have to be free within yourself, and get along. Freedom costs, though — and if you ask me, this country is all messed up."

On the Saturday before Labor Day, Doc Flamingo set up his makeshift bandstand at the baseball park in Salter Path, N.C., and played 11 hours without a break for the crowd at the town's annual mullet fry. They danced and sang along, and at the end they filled a plate with collected bills. Doc casually them away in his pocket, without counting them. "I didn't expect to make much on this gig", he explains. "It's more like advertising — a way to get some good bookings in the future."

As the day's festivities were winding down, this exchange took place between two Salter Path residents:

"Who's the colored guy who brought all the music?"

"Nobody knows. He just showed up here early this morning and asked if he could play. Said he'd read about the homecoming in the paper. Nobody knows who he is or where he come from — but ain't he great?"

Into the gathering dusk, the one-man band played on. "Got a request here for Dick and Mary", said Doc Flamingo, the music man, the entertainer. "They wanta hear 'The Anniversary Song'. So here it is, and we wish 'em many more happy ones....." — By John Egerton, free lance, Nashville, Tenn.

praisal of chances in the Senate. Without the support of Kissinger, which he had in full measure during his nip-and-tuck battle over the Panama Canal treaties, Mr. Carter could not count on even a small percentage of the Republican Senators who made Panama ratification possible.

Still, the President has made his irrevocable decision to bring Brezhnev here, then take his chances by appealing to the country over the Senate's head.

Being Always Prepared Is A Constant Strain

One of the worst things about trying to sell a house is trying to keep it clean. Now this may not seem like such a big deal to those scattered few who have full time maids. But the majority of us don't have that kind of help.

Of course, I do have help — full time, in fact. The only problem is that one of them is a male Phyllis Diller and the other is a female Dennis the Menace. With help like them, the only other help my house could hope for would be the healing powers of Oral Roberts praying over it three times a week.

I do have to admit that my fellow occupants have tried to clean up their acts. Phillip no longer leaves a trail of dirty clothes from the front door to the bedroom when he comes home at night, and Meg regularly pulls off half a roll of toilet tissue, dips it in the commode, and proceeds to spruce up the bathtub with it. Her neatest trick, though, is helping me clean the sliding glass doors — with the palms of her hands.

Naturally, both she and her father think I'm over-zealous when I protest. Or when I cry because Meg steps on a cracker in the middle of the living room rug. Or when I hyperventilate because she uses a banana to clean the upholstery on the sofa. So the other night when we were sitting around the table eating pork n' beans and sardines from the can, I expected some ugly crack — and I got it.

"This is ridiculous," Phillip said. "I am positively at the end of my rope. When are we going to start acting like normal human beings again?"

"I didn't realize that we ever did," I answered.

"C'mon, you know what I mean. For instance, when are we going to start using dishes again?"

"When we sell the house."

"That's crazy!" he shouted. It might be two or three months . . ."

"Or it might be tonight. Someone could walk in off the street right now and say, 'Gee, what a clean sink. I think I'll buy the place.' Whereas if they walked in and saw our dinner dishes stacked all over the place they might think . . ."

". . . that someone lives here," he snorted. "Face it, Gail. You've got to let up. The world is not going to cave in because Meg dumps cereal on the kitchen floor."

"Oh, yeah? That's because YOU don't have to drop everything and clean it up. Do you know what it's like to be up to your elbows in furniture polish and to realize that Meg is painting an oatmeal mural on the kitchen cabinets and that if you don't stop right that minute and clean them off that the doorbell is going to ring? I'll tell you," I sighed miserably, "I have a heart attack every time I see food in that child's hands."

"You just THINK that you're having a heart attack. Why don't you try relaxing, honey? The house is going to sell eventually — even if you DON'T sign into Butner as a scrubbing bubble."

"But you don't understand," I moaned.

"I do," he protested.

"No, you don't!"

"I DO TOO!"

I was beginning to lose hope of his ever understanding when, all of a sudden, Meg decided to use a jelly sandwich to wash the kitchen wall that Phillip had painted only two weeks before. He gasped and turned white.

"Don't worry, sweetheart," I said. "You just THINK that you're having a heart attack."

Sen. Kennedy Is Top Choice Of Demos For 1980

By GEORGE GALLUP

PRINCETON, N.J. — The greatest threat to Jimmy Carter's reelection may not necessarily come from his eventual Republican opponent, but from within the ranks of his own party.

An early assessment of nationwide Democratic sentiment and the 1980 election indicates it is not Carter but Sen. Edward Kennedy who is the first choice of party members to be the 1980 standard-bearer. Kennedy is not only the first choice of Democrats from a list of six possible Democratic nominees in 1980, but the Massachusetts Senator holds an even more impressive lead when paired against Carter alone.

When asked to name their first choice for the 1980 nomination from a list of six prominent Democrats, 36 per cent select Kennedy while 29 per cent pick Carter. California Gov. Edmund Brown Jr. is third on the list with 12 per cent of the vote, followed by Vice President Walter Mondale (8 per cent), Sen. Henry Jackson of Washington (5 per cent) and Rep. Morris Udall of Arizona (3 per cent).

When Democrats in the survey are asked whom they would prefer if the 1980 convention narrowed down to a choice between Kennedy and Carter, Kennedy wins the showdown by a healthy 53-40 per cent margin.

This question was asked first in the survey:

"Here is a list of people who have been mentioned as possible presidential candidates for the Democratic party in 1980. (Respondents were handed a card with six names listed). Which ONE would you like to see nominated as the Democratic candidate for President in 1980?"

Democratic Choices For 1980 Nomination

Edward Kennedy	36%
Jimmy Carter	29
Edmund Brown Jr.	12
Walter Mondale	8
Henry Jackson	5
Morris Udall	3
Undecided	7

Kennedy Strength

Only once before in the 43-year history of the Gallup Poll has an incumbent President eligible for reelection been defeated in a showdown test of strength.

In September 1967 Sen. Robert Kennedy was the choice of 51 per cent of Democrats for the 1968 nomination while 39 per cent preferred then-President Lyndon Johnson.

Also attesting to Kennedy's strength are the findings by region. In Carter's native South and his stronghold in the '76 election, Kennedy holds the President to a standoff, winning 46 per cent of the vote compared to 44 per cent for Carter. Outside the South, however, Kennedy is a clear 56-38 per cent winner.

That Kennedy should make such a strong showing, even against an incumbent President of his own party, is not a total surprise. He has long been a favorite of Democratic voters, and was their top choice even after he declared that he would not be a candidate.

In fact, as late as January 1976, Kennedy was an easy first choice among Democrats for the nomination, winning 32 per cent of the vote. Sen. Hubert Humphrey of Minnesota was the Democrats' second choice with 20 per cent of their vote.

How Brown Fares

Because of recurring speculation that Brown will run for the nomination if he succeeds in winning reelection as governor of California, the survey also sought to gauge his current strength against the two Democratic front-runners.

Results show Brown losing to both Kennedy and Carter in one-to-one contests of strength. Kennedy defeats Brown by a 64-27 per cent margin while Carter holds a similar 63-30 per cent lead.

This question was asked to test the three men in head-to-head contests among Democrats:

"Suppose the choice for President in the Democratic convention in 1980 narrows down to Jimmy Carter and Edward Kennedy. Which one would you prefer to have the Democratic convention select?" (The same question was asked pairing Carter against Brown and Kennedy against Brown.)

SHOWDOWNS FOR 1980 NOMINATION (Based on Democrats)

Kennedy	53%
Carter	40
Undecided	7
Kennedy	64%
Brown	27
Undecided	9
Carter	63%
Brown	30
Undecided	7

The results reported today are based on personal interviews with 686 Democrats out of a total sample of 1,574 adults, 18 and older. Interviewing took place in more than 300 scientifically selected localities during the period March 31-April 3.

Rats Plague Prison

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Some inmates at Central Prison have had some visitors lately that they would rather not see.

According to a letter filed with the Inmate Grievance Commission, prisoners on one ground-floor cellblock of the maximum-security prison have awakened at night to find rats as big as 10 inches long in their beds.

Tommy West, the inmate who wrote the letter, told grievance examiners he has sat up at night with a slingshot trying to get rid of the intruders, who apparently came from behind shower walls on the floor.

One of the grievance examiners, George Arseniu, said West reported that guards are aware of the rats and have tried to catch them without success.

West filed a grievance about the rats some time ago, officials said. The grievance commission investigated and was assured by corrections officials that the problem had been taken care of by exterminators.

In his letter, however, West declared, "The state is being cheated because (the exterminators) are not doing the job." West said he would take his complaints about the rats to Gov. Jim Hunt and state health officials.

"This is a health problem and something has to be done about it," he wrote.

Fred Morrison Jr., executive director of the grievance commission, said his staff talked Friday with Warden Sam Garrison and was assured that prison officials would begin "taking care of the problem"

Arseniu said Garrison told him that prison personnel would set traps in an effort to eradicate the rodents, but that rat poison could not be used because of a federal law prohibiting its use in prisons.

Saftey Council Officers

Dr. Earl Trevathan of Greenville Pediatrics Inc. addressed the Pitt County Safety Council during a noon meeting Wednesday. He spoke on the leading causes of death in children, saying that over half the deaths of small children can be attributed to accidents, and that half of those accidents occur in automobiles. The other half are caused by drownings, burns, falls, poisonings and electrocutions.

Dr. Trevathan also put out a special warning about farm chemicals and children being poisoned from those sources.

The enactment of laws requiring "child proof" caps on bottles of prescription and non-prescription drugs have drastically reduced poisoning.

Trevathan further stated that among school aged children he felt there should be emergency medical teams in schools especially trained to handle accident victims until professional medical attention can be obtained.

Another area of concern for parents is the fact that bicycles and skateboards cause many permanent head injuries among the youth of our country, he added.

John Watson

In other Safety Council business, a slate of officers for the coming year was elected. They include John Watson, president; H.P. Norman, vice president; and Polly Dail, secretary.

Young Man Bit Snake

MORGANTON, N.C. (AP) — Naomi Anderson showed up in District Court Friday with her pet boa constrictor, Daniel, in a blue pillowcase, but the man accused of biting off the tip of Daniel's tail failed to appear.

Spurling is accused of biting a half inch off the tail of Daniel, a 48-inch snake Miss Anderson has owned for two years.

Miss Anderson caused a flurry of excitement in the courtroom when she pulled the snake out of the pillowcase so photographers could take a picture of her and the pet.

She said she, a friend and Daniel were in a car by Lake James April 22 when Spurling walked up, began petting the snake and and asked if it would hurt him.

"Next, he picked the snake up and took a little bite out of its tail," she told reporters. She said she wants to recover the $25 it cost to to have Daniel's tail sewed up and hopes the court will administer "some justice."

"I want to show that boy that he can't do that to me," Miss Anderson said.

Refuses Dismissal

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Superior Court Judge Donald L. Smith refused Friday to dismiss a request by the News and Observer Publishing Co. of Raleigh for access to an investigataive report on the state Banking Department.

Hew gave the publishing company five days from the filing of its motion for release of the report to have a summons served on the State Bureau of Investigation and granted the SBI 30 days to respond to the request.

Although he denied the company's motion to obtain a copy of the report, attorney William C. Lassiter said the firm may ask again for the report once the SBI's response has been filed.

Attended Luncheon Here

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green and Attorney General Rufus Edmisten attended an informal Dutch luncheon here Friday, sponsored by friends of the two state officials.

Dick Blake, assistant to East Carolina University chancellor Leo Jenkins, presided at the gathering and said the luncheon was held, because Green and Edmisten were scheduled to be in the area. The two attended a banquet in Jacksonville Thursday night honoring Jenkins.

Jenkins, who will retire as chancellor June 30, said Green and Edmisten, "have been our friends for a long time. East Carolina University would not be where it is today without their cooperation."

The ECU official noted that Green, "never turned away from us," during the long battle for a four-year medical school at the university, and told the Attorney General, a Western North Carolina native, "you're not a hick."

Speaking briefly, Green told the 60 people gathered, "I am deeply appreciative," of the luncheon.

"You're progressive in Greenville and Pitt County," Green said, emphasizing, "it takes that," to make North Carolina the great state it is.

"North Carolina is great today because of leaders...who love this state...and work to make it a better place," Green commented. "We have good government in this state," he said' "and are going to continue to have good government.

"If it is responsible and responsive to people such as you, we can be better leaders. You have to stay involved...have to talk to us...have to communicate," Green emphasized.

Edmisten, who complimented Jenkins by saying, "nobody can say enough words about Leo," added, "Leo doesn't need to have words said about him. He's done it."

The attorney general, who earlier told newsmen that he will ask the General Assembly for 25 new drug agents, also recognized Pitt County Sheriff Ralph Tyson.

"If there is a better sheriff in this state, I don't know about it," he said.

"There are some very mean, vicious people," Edmisten said. "I for one am very glad to have the death penalty. Let's use it," he suggested, to help reduce violent crime in North Carolina.

Prior to the luncheon, ECU athletic director Bill Cain presented Jenkins with lifetime passes for he and Mrs. Jenkins to all East Carolina home athletic events.

Clarification

A photograph cutline in Friday's edition stated that flooding waters from the Tar River were lapping at the foundations of apartment buildings on Stancill Drive. While there is flooding in Langston Park, Stancill Drive is relatively free of water.

Greenville Rotary Club Pays Tribute To Sylvester Green

DR. SYLVESTER GREEN

The Greenville Rotary Club has honored former member Dr. C. Sylvester Green by naming him a sustaining member of the Paul Harris Foundation, the Club's international scholarship fund.

Dr. Green, who was executive director of the Pitt County Development Commission, wrote a history of 57 years of Rotary in Greenville. He moved to Statesville several months ago. "While in Greenville, Sylvester was the driving force in our Club," Greenville Rotary Pres. Dr. John L. Wooten said.

The award was made during the regular Tuesday meeting of the Statesville Rotary Club by Greenville Rotarian Jack Edwards. "Instead of getting Sylvester to come back to Greenville," Edwards said, "we decided it would be more meaningful to honor him before the Statesville Club."

In order to surprise Dr. Green, arrangements were made with his son, Charles, who is administrator of Davis Hospital in Statesville. Edwards, a pilot, reserved a plane four Tuesdays ago to fly to Statesville. Weather conditions prevented the flight that day and the following Tuesday.

A week ago Tuesday, Carl Woxman Jr., an instrument pilot, was scheduled for the flight, along with Woxman Sr., Edwards and Kurt Ficking, all of Greenville. When the group left Greenville, there was an 800-foot ceiling in Statesville. By the time the flight arrived, the ceiling was down to 200 feet and the landing had to be aborted.

"We could hear you up there," Charles Green said later, "but we couldn't see you." Statesville Rotarians were at the airport to meet the flight to no avail. The secret was still kept.

Last Monday Edwards left by car for Statesville with his wife, Rachel. When he arrived at 10:30 a. m., he called Dr. Green. "Sylvester," he said, "I'm passing through town and I'd like to see you."

"Fine," Dr. Green said, "Today happens to be our Rotary day. You can meet with us at lunch."

Edwards was introduced at the 12:30 meeting as a visiting Rotarian, along with several others. After announcements were made, just before the regular program began, the Club president said, "Jack, you're the visiting Rotarian who came from the greatest distance. Would you like to say a few words?"

Edwards then made the presentation of this highest of Rotarian honors. "Sylvester was overwhelmed," he said.

Disagrees With Carter

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The president of the state Bar Association has dismissed President Carter's criticism of lawyers as an attempt to "whip up a little populism support in California."

Attorney Woodrow Teague said he disagrees with comments by Carter in Los Angeles earlier this week that there are too many lawyers and that they are able to keep the well-to-do out of jail.

"In the past 10 years, there's definitely been an awareness, especially among young lawyers, to defend the downtrodden," Teague said. "I think the situation is completely different from what he (Carter) said."

Calls For Health Task Force

PINEHURST, N.C. (AP) — Gov. Jim Hunt called Friday for creation of a task force of doctors and public health officials to study North Carolina's primary care program.

Hunt said in a speech to the state Medical Society that doctors in private practice and non-physicians who run health departments apparently are not communicating as well as they should.

"To prevent those communications breakdowns, we need to build in a permanent mechanism to make sure that local health departments are working hand-in-glove with their local medical societies," the governor said.

Hunt's speech centered on the $2.7 million primary health care program approved by the General Assembly in 1977.

Honor Society Members

Twenty Rose High School juniors were inducted into the Haskett Chapter of the National Honor Society at the annual junior inductions ceremony held at St. James United Methodist Church Thursday night.

For the occasion, the school's principal, Frank Davenport, Jr. was the keynote speaker. Others taking part in the ceremony were Anne Middleton, SGA president; Kenny Jenkins, Suzanne McGee, society president; Grace Wilkins, society treasurer; Kim Mills, society secretary; and Tom Johnson, society vice-president. Curtis Ebbs introducted the speaker.

The juniors inducted into the Honor Society are: Ann Banks, Thomas Chenier, Sharon Connolly, Bonn Correll, JoLindy Daniels, Nina Diaz, Rebecca Dixon, Quention Eaton, Caren Hix.

GACOC Membership Chairman

Larkin Little, Executive Vice-President of Home Savings and Loan Association of Greenville has been selected to serve as Membership Chairman of the Greenville Area Chamber of Commerce.

The Membership Committee will sponsor a one-day Membership Blitz Campaign, Wednesday, May 10, in an effort to obtain at least 50 additional memberships for the Greenville Area Chamber of Commerce.

LARKIN LITTLE

Approximately 15 volunteer Chamber members will donate their services for one day to help generate new memberships for the Chamber.

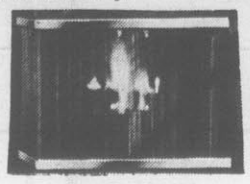

The Chamber of Commerce has been working for the promotion of the Greenville community for the past 42 years. This organization presently has 615 members with an estimated 700 volunteers working to promote the Greenville area and solve community problems including the areas of education, government, economic development and industrial development.

Anyone who is interested in further information about membership in the Chamber of Commerce or the Membership Blitz Campaign should call the Greenville Area Chamber of Commerce at 752-4101.

Need For Transitional Service Cited

A group of federal and state officials recently met in Greenville to conduct an on-site evaluation of the Pitt County Mental Health Center.

William D. Wright, director of Alcohol, Drug Abuse, and Mental Health Programs in Region Four, said the Center "has made excellent progress in its first full year of federal funding, and we are impressed with the high standards of clinical treatment being sought by the Center staff."

However, the officials cited a major deficiency to be the lack of required transitional services, which is a halfway home designed to assist persons discharged from a mental health in-patient facility in their adjustment to independent living in the community.

Dr. Robert B. Dick, regional representative of the Public Health Service, strongly urged that the local program develop and provide the required transitional services by December, 1979.

Dr. Stephen K. Creech, area director of the Center, said, "We agree with the reviewers in their recognition of this need. The Pitt County Area Mental Health Board is well aware of the lack of a halfway facility in our community. The problem is money. Additional funds for new services are extremely tight. We are actively seeking ways to provide this service."

The officials, after a day and half evaluation of the center's services, cited improvements in the quality of services at the Center, particularly in emergency services and patient care continuity.

The outreach orientation of service for the elderly, the high qualification of staff, and the quality assurance program were some of the areas cited for commendation, as well as the provision of transportation services in the partial hospitalization program. The visit team supported the Center's intent to open satellite centers in other areas of the county, as funds become available.

Bill Safriet, Children Services Specialist, noted significant improvement in the diagnostic skills and children treatment services.

George Adams, director of the Eastern Region Office, praised the Center's relationship with community agencies. He also noted that most of the deficiencies cited in last year's review had been corrected.

Bill McDonald, chairman of the Pitt County Area Mental Health Board, said, "We are pleased with the overall report. The Center was already in the process of addressing the few deficiencies noted in the report."

41.7 Per Cent Voted

Margaret Register, Pitt Board of Elections supervisor, reported that 41.7 per cent of the total voter registration in the county visited the polls Tuesday.

Miss Register said that a count of the total vote revealed that 11,429 citizens out of an overall registration of 27,343 exercised their voting privileges in the primary.

The 11,429 figure included Democrats, Republicans and unaffiliated voters, she said, noting that Republicans and persons registered as unaffiliated were eligible to vote for the board of education posts.

According to the vote count, 15,914 registered citizens did not vote on Tuesday.

According to Miss Register, 5,319 citizens voted in the Greenville School Board race, which was conducted on a non partisan basis.

Annual Picnic

The Greenville Chapter of the North Carolina Civil Liberties Union will hold its annual picnic at 12:30 p.m. today at Jaycee Park, south end of Cedar Lane.

Anyone interested in civil liberties, regardless of affiliation, is invited to attend. Please bring a picnic lunch or dish for potluck.

The state of Delaware is named for Lord De La Warr, an early governor of Maryland. The name was first applied to the river, then to the Indian tribe, also called Lenni-Lenape, and later to the state.

Dale Panaro Assigned As Pitt County 4-H Associate

A Bath native recently returned east from western North Carolina has been named Associate Extension Agent for 4-H in the Pitt County Agriculture Extension Office.

Mrs. Dale Panaro replaces Mike Davis, who is leaving to continue his education.

As Associate for 4-H work, Mrs. Panaro will coordinate programs and activities of the approximately 20 clubs in Pitt County which now number a total membership of about 400 boys and girls. "The membership is about equally divided between boys and girls," Mrs. Panaro stated.

She noted that of all the things she will be responsible for "my primary field of concern will be to emphasize leader training in the clubs."

With summer coming up, 4-H programs are becoming increasingly active, with summer camps, a forestry camp, a horse riding camp, and a field day all scheduled in the near future.

Mrs. Panaro explained that 4-H Club members are divided into two categories, "the juniors, who are members in the nine to 13 age group, and seniors, those 14 to 19."

In this county wide work, Mrs. Panaro is assisted by Mrs. Jean Johnson, 4-H Club Program Assistant.

In her high school days at Bath, Mrs. Panaro was for three years the Beaufort County champion in a project of raising Rhode Island Red chickens. She is a graduate of Western Carolina University, Cullowhee, where she majored in home economics. For the past several years she has been with the Madison County Agriculture Extension office located in Marshall. There she specialized in 4-H Club work.

Mrs. Dale Panaro

14 Inducted Into Honor Music Group

Six juniors, five seniors, one graduate student and a faculty member of the School of Music, East Carolina University, were recently inducted into the Beta Zeta Chapter of Pi Kappa Lambda.

Juniors selected by the School of Music faculty were Katherine Bearinger, Anita Bowman, Susan Cheston, Michael McDonald, Laurie Nicholson, and Donna Roman.

Mario Gaetano was the graduate student selected for induction, and faculty member Mrs. Rosemary Fischer, a teacher in the area of special education and music therapy was invited to join the society.

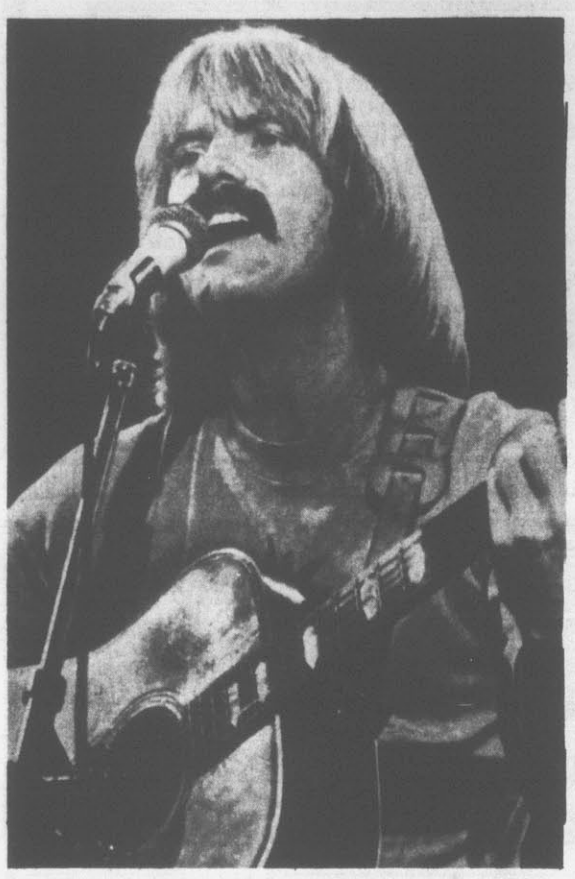

For the first time this year, the Beta Zeta Chapter initiated an honorary member. Norman Luboff, noted conductor of the Luboff Choir, was initiated in absentia.

Lower level music students were honored with special certificates. These went to Michael Elliott, pianist and a freshman; and to sophomore Mary Jo White, a flutist.

Retiring teachers honored were Elizabeth Drake, Eleanor Toll, and Catherine Murphy.

Guest speaker at the banquet was Dr. William S. Newman, piano pedagogist from UNC-Chapel Hill.

SPECIAL FARE — When it first started three years ago, public television's "Austin City Limits" received a lukewarm reception. But it has jumped to prime time viewing, and national acclaim for its special fare of country music, featuring such singers as Micheael Murphy, above. (AP Laserphoto)

Another Student For Governor's School

Rose High School junior Clyde P. Owens, Jr., has been notified this past week that he has been selected to attend the Governor's School this summer.

Owens, son of Mr. and Mrs. Clyde P. Owens, Sr. of Greenville, was previously a first-alternate and was chosen as an additional student to fill a vacancy.

He will be going to the Governor's School at Salem College in Winston-Salem, and was selected for his achievement in the field of art.

Owens is president of the Rose High Art Club, a member of the Jewelry Club, the Inner-Club Council, and was a nominee to Boys's State last year.

Clyde P. Owens, Jr.

La Leche Meeting Set

La Leche League of Greenville No. 1 will begin a new series of four monthly meetings Monday at 10 a. m. at the home of Sheila Johnson.

This month's discussion will be "The Advantages of Breastfeeding to Mother and Baby."

These informal meetings give mothers and mothers-to-be a chance to talk with other expecting or nursing mother, share their experiences and receive advice on breastfeeding. Children are welcome. For more information, one may call Mrs. Johnson at 756-3144.

'Arsenic And Old Lace' Play At Ayden-Grifton

AYDEN — Joseph Kesselring's 1941 play, "Arsenic And Old Lace," now considered a classic in the field of lighthearted mysteries, will be on stage at Ayden-Grifton High School for three evening performances, Wednesday through Friday, May 10-12. Curtain time is 8 p.m. Mary Lou Holoman, a teacher, directs the play.

For the newly organized Ayden-Grifton High School Drama Club, this is the premiere production and is being produced through cooperative arrangements with the Dramatist Play Service, New York, N. Y.

It is a tale of two elderly ladies who poison lonely old men in what they feel is an act of kindness.

Shirley Warren and Phyllis Dixon star as the two central characters, Abby and Martha Brewster. Patrick Riggs has the role of Mortimer; Mitchell Whaley is the drama critic, Jonathon; and Marcus Carraway is cast as the third nephew, Teddy, who thinks he is Theodore Roosevelt.

Others in the cast are Urian Edwards, Rev. Dr. Harper; Pam Smithwick and Hilda Corey, as officers Brophy and Klein; Tina Cannon, Elaine Harper; Greg Ellis, Mr. Gibbs; Al Boswell, Dr. Einstein; Jenny Artis and Teresa McCotter, Officers O'Hara and Rooney; and Brian Edwards, Mr. Witherspoon.

Tickets are priced at $1.50 for adults and $1 for students and children. They can be purchased in advance or at the door prior to performance. For information on tickets, call 746-4183 or 524-5489 between 8 a.m. and 4:30 p.m. daily.

Bess Abell Honored

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — Bess Abell, known for her support of the American arts during five years as White House social secretary under the Johnson administration, was guest of honor April 28 at the North Carolina School of the Arts.

Actress Helen Hayes presented Mrs. Abell with a special award during dedication ceremonies for the school's $3.8 million studio and rehearsal building, The Workplace.

Mrs. Abell received gifts representing North Carolina arts and crafts at a luncheon in her honor.

Pilot Strings Concert At 3 This Afternoon

Student musicians from the local area will be featured in performance when two String Project Youth Orchestras and a Suzuki Ensemble present a concert at 3 p.m. today in Wright Auditorium on campus at East Carolina University. The program is open to the public and there is no admission charge.

Children from grades one through six, members of The Intermediate Orchestra, will play two pieces — Philip Gordon's "Two Tone Pictures For String Orchestra" and Gordon's arrangement of the "Air" from J. S. Bach's "Peasant Cantata."

The Youth Orchestra, which includes students from grades four through high school, will perform a movement from William Boyce's "Symphony No. 8," the Rondeau and Badinerie from the Bach "Suite No. 2 in B minor: and the Rondeau from Henry Purcell's "Suite from Abdelazer."

The Suzuki Ensemble, young musicians who began instruction in ECU's annual String Camp and continued their studies the following year in weekly classes at the ECU School of Music, will perform pieces from the Suzuki literature. These range from "Twinkle, Twinkle" to Robert Schumann's "Two Grenadiers."

The String Project in Greenville began 11 years ago with an institutional assistant grant to the School of Music from HEW. It is a cooperative venture of ECU and the Greenville City Schools.

Stalactites are formed when water seeps out of cavern ceilings and leaves a mineral trail in tubular shape. A continuous drip, however, causes droplets to fall to the floor and the result is a stalagmite which grows upward.

Sexauer Prints

Three intaglio prints by ECU faculty artist Donald Sexauer have been accepted for exhibition in the 15th Annual Piedmont Graphics Competition in Greenville, S. C. The exhibit is on view May 6-28.

Dance Festival Calendar Listed

The full calendar of dance performances to be held between June 17 and July 29 by the American Dance Festival has been published.

The festival, being held this year for the first time at Duke University, will feature performances at Page Auditorium on the Duke campus.

Established dancers and companies, as well as newly emerging dance talent will be represented in the nearly 30 performances scheduled.

Nine New Craft Members Selected

CRAFT WORK BY NEW MEMBER . . . A steel rivet and steel egg spatula with walnut handle are by Jan Brooks Loyd, a newly elected member to the Piedmont Craftsmen, Inc. of Winston-Salem. Loyd and Greenville artist Charlotte Purrington were among nine selected for membership in the crafts organization.

WINSTON-SALEM — Greenville craftswoman Charlotte Purrington is one of nine persons selected to membership in the Piedmont Craftsmen, Inc. The nine were chosen from a field of 161 applicants, the largest number ever to apply for membership in the prestigious craft guild.

Six of the new members are from North Carolina; two are from Virginia; and one from South Carolina. The largest number of the nine — six members, were selected for work in fibers, including Ms. Purrington. Two are potters, and one is a silversmith.

As exhibiting members, they can sell work in PCI's Craft Shop in Winston-Salem and at the Craft Fair held annually the first weekend in November at the Winston-Salem Coliseum.

Exhibiting craftsmen members are limted to practicing craftsmen residing in North and South Carolina, Virginia, Tennessee, Alabama, Georgia, Florida and Maryland.

Work of the new members will be on display at The Craft Shop, 300 South Main Street, beginning May 12 and continuing through May 31.

New Art Acquisitions For N.C. Museum Of Art

By MICHAEL MATROS
N. C. Museum of Art, Raleigh

RALEIGH — "Never before have we had so many excellent contemporary works assembled for one meeting," announced N. C. Museum of Art Director Moussa Domit as the state Art Commission gathered recently to approve new acquisitions for the museum's collection.

Meeting in a small gallery of the museum, the commission was surrounded by a new selection of art, but one piece dominated the scene—"Greek Vision," an acrylic painting by North Carolina native Kenneth Noland. The painting is 20 feet in length, with thin even lines of color against a background of subtle, uneven tones of tan. The work is on loan from commission member Gordon Hanes and his wife, of Winston-Salem. But Domit said it will be converted to a gift at a later date, probably at the opening of the new building when larger exhibition spaces will be available.

"We've been looking for a Noland like this for four years," Domit said.

Another loan from the Hanes couple is a large triptych, each section measuring about three by six feet. By Belgian artist Pierre Alechinsky, the untitled work is in red and lavender ink on rice paper. Alechinsky recently was the first recipient of the Andrew W. Mellon Prize, awarded by the Carnegie Institute Museum of Art in Pittsburgh to artists "who do not enjoy the worldwide recognition they deserve."

Among the most impressive purchase was a Louise Nevelson sculpture, "Black Zag CC," fashioned of a complex arrangement of frames and compartments filled with abstract forms, all painted the flat black that has been recognized as a Nevelson characteristic. The work was purchased with funds provided by the N.C. Art Society and the National Endowment for the Arts (NEA).

Art Society and NEA funds were also used to purchase a large acrylic painting, "Amarillo," a montage of unfocused spots of color merging into each other. The artist, Howard Mehring, was one of the founders of the Washington Color School. Another Mehring, "Center Split," was a gift of Vincent Melzac of Washington, D.C. Acrylic on canvas, the painting is an example of the artist's later hard-edged style and is executed in bright primary colors.

Also accepted by the commission was "Breeched Beaver Dam" by realist painter Neil Welliver, the gift of Lee and Dona Bronson of Beverly Hills, California, in honor of Edwin Gill.

With the purchase of a "Florida Jay" aquatint, the museum brings its collection of original Audubon hand-colored prints almost to completion. Domit announced at the African masks and an African hunting tunic from Mr. and Mrs. Lewis W. Pate of Uruguay; a North African reading-table cover from William Kanof of Silver Springs, Maryland; a Spanish Ark Hanging offered as an anonymous gift; and a traveling spice container from late 19th century Germany given by Abram and Frances Kanof of Raleigh. A group of five ancient pottery oil lamps was purchased from the museum's Judaic Art Fund.

Hospitality House

"National Hospital Week" is one of the topics on Kay Currie's "Hospitality House" today. The show airs from noon til 1 p.m. over WITN-TV, Channel 7. Guests include Dr. Ted Larkin, chief of staff, Beaufort County Hospital, John Davis, administrator and two special people — Mrs. William Waters, first child born at the hospital, and Horace Lee, the hospital's first patient. The occasion is the 20th anniversary of Beaufort Hospital.

Other guests are Dr. Ted Labuza, professor of food, science and technology at the University of Minnesota and author of "Nutrition Crisis;" country singer and composer Adriene Velasco, who will sing her new Nashville recorded song, "Tell It Like It Is;" and Washington poet Taylor Koonce, who will recite some of his poems.

FROM SHEPPARD MEMORIAL LIBRARY

By LINDA M. STANCILL

Biographies of people from all walks of life are among the new additions to the library's collection.

HALT! I'M A FEDERAL GAME WARDEN by Willie J. Parker depicts the amazing career of "the toughest game warden of them all." People either loved him or hated him throughout his career as a game warden in his native Tennessee. The way he performed his duties among citizens who were unfamiliar with the game laws and were far from eager to learn about them, led to his career as an agent for the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service. As a federal agent Parker became known not only in the areas he served, but also nationwide. In Virginia and Maryland where high officials from Washington, D.C. were accustomed to hunting without heeding the law, Parker ingnored the social or political status of violators, arrested them, and faced up to the often painful consequences. Parker's story of long hours under the toughest weather conditions and often against armed and dangerous game-law violators is a combination of detective story, outdoor adventure and quiet heroism.

Olga Ivinskaya, Boris Pasternak's model for the unforgettable heroine of DOCTOR ZHIVAGO, tells the remarkable story of their time and their love together in A CAPTIVE OF TIME. She reveals an intimate portrait of an extraordinary romance, which flourished amid the intrigues and repressions of postwar Russia. Filled with unprecedented insights into the man and his work, she offers the first detailed account of the systematic harassment suffered by Pasternak and those close to him at the hands of the Russian bureaucracy. She also recounts the much misunderstood events surrounding the refusal of the Nobel Prize for literature in 1958. When Olga first met Pasternak in 1946, he was a world-famous poet, married to another woman, and out of favor with the Soviet regime of Joseph Stalin. Her love for the dissident writer earned for her, before and after Pasternak's death, 12 years of prison sentences, many of them served in brutal work camps. Through all their trials and struggles, Olga managed to support and inspire the man she loved, typing his manuscripts, handling his literary affairs, and collaborating on numerous translation projects. Olga's memoir is the record of a triumph, not only an authentic document of daily life in Russia under Stalin and Khrushchev, but also one of the truly great love stories of all time.

Adela Rogers St. Johns portrays Hollywood and its stars in LOVE, LAUGHTER AND TEARS. She describes Hollywood as "a place, a symbol, a people, a state of mind and heart, an Art, an Industry, a legend second only to Camelot itself. A kingdom like Oz, a glory that was Greece and a grandeur that was Rome, a gilded slum with tinsel covering the drama and heartbreak, a center of the beautiful and damned." Her stories of a variety of stars range from true love, to high comedy, to high tragedy, sometimes the ingredients all mixed into one life. Often called the Mother Confessor of Hollywood, Adela Rogers St. Johns has written her portrayal of Hollywood and its stars emotionally and sensitively, for she was a star too, a vital part of the scene.

Grandfather's Tales Might Try To Shock

American Gold. By Ernest Seeman. New York, Dial Press, 1978. 283 pps., $8.95

What was it like to grow up in the tobacco lands of North Carolina? Suppose you had a crusty old grandfather to tell you, one who wouldn't gloss over the unpleasant parts and who might even try to shock you to keep the story interesting. The result would be a book like Ernest Seeman's American Gold.

Seeman, a native of Durham, wrote several novels in the thirties and forties. American Gold is the first of this group to be published. Seeman lost his job with Duke University Press in the 1930's because of "his outspoken opinions," some of which he has included here.

The author is obviously the Johnny Anders of his story, a young man who grows up in post Civil War North Carolina and makes his way into the publishing business. In a loose and episodical way, the story covers local history of this area from about 1865 to 1923, stressing the rise of the tobacco industry.

Seeman's characters say things like "what the dadslapped-dingbang-tarnal - boggered-walleyed dickens did it matter" or even "holy hoptoads and bilge water." There is little surprise in the way any of them acts and little surprise in anything that happens either, though the narrator throws in racial prejudice, religious hypocrisy, employers who exploit employees, society ladies who lust after a Chinese laundryman, and even a grisly murder to spice things up. When pressed for a description, the author, more often than not, sticks to a cliche.

Yet Seeman is obviously a born storyteller with a wide-reaching imagination. He can put the reader in the mind of a young circus girl or a Civil War general. Of the circus girl, Anna, who has just come to earth in a hot-air balloon he writes:

"Clutching Molly, she blew hard on the whistle that was to notify the rescue crew where she was and lead them to her. Though the limb she sat on was not exactly soft as peavine hay, she would be patient and do her part of the job, which was to keep awake and to keep tootling. She knew that finding her after dark was like hunting for a needle in a haystack, but they had always located her sooner or later. She could see them in her mind's eye: they would be carrying lanterns, like for possum hunting, and be shouting every little while, and then stopping and cocking their heads to listen."

The style of the novel is conversational, and though you may be tempted to say "Please, grandfather, not another of your stories," or, "not that one again," you'll find some entertainment along the way to finding out how America made its gold.

Kellers Reception

BELHAVEN — Adam and Bettie Keller, artist and musician, will be honored at a reception this afternoon at EEii's little KORNERS of the World to mark the opening of an exhibition of paintings by Adam Keller. Mrs. Keller, a concert harpist, will play selections on the harp during the afternoon.

Keller's paintings, mostly of the sea, are in oils and acrylics.

Natives of California, the Kellers now make their home on the Pamlico River near Aurora. Before retirement, Keller was an aeronautical design engineer who traveled and lived in Japan, Alaska, California and Florida.

Mrs. Keller, a Hollywood native, was a harpist with Paramount Pictures. She is also one of the first musicians to receive a teacher's certificate after studying the Japanese koto in Tokyo.

One of the Kellers' sons, Norman Keller, is living in Greenville and is a sculptor and faculty member in the School of Art, East Carolina University.

New Art Class

A new class in painting is being formed at the Greenville Art Center. To begin on Wednesday, May 10, with hours from 9:30 to 11 a.m., the class will be taught by Wes Crawley. Cost of the course is $20.

Greenville Elementary School Students Exhibiting At The Art Center

A Dragon Of The Wrong Color

Through every door and archway a treasure of children's art

But such non-conformity is a big part of the way children are utterly captivating in their creativeness. Anyone wanting to see the proof of this statement need only to take in the exuberant, imaginative, and riotously colorful show by children of the Greenville Elementary Schools now on view at the Greenville Art Center.

Another picture is of birds, some smugly smiling, others seemingly alarmed as part of the flock flies east, part west to what seems an inevitable collision of the worst kind.

Any viewer studying Chuck Buck's marvelous collection of rubbery, elongaged faces will long remember the amazing diversity a third grader is capable of.

Fish have square scales, or ones diamond shaped; birds have striped legs, and monsters look more frightened than menacing. There is also a kangaroo with antennas, and a drooping hen scolding a chick who nonchalantly ignores the chastisement.

Except for oils and heavy metal, nearly every conceivable material that can be used to create art work is represented in this show. Acrylics and kraft paper bags, string and felt, beans and wire, feathers and clay, egg cartons and wall paper, water paints and crayon; and something from long ago, vases filled with crepe paper flowers in blazing hues.

Art work fills the walls, the arches, it sits on boxes and on radiators, hangs from the wall, and pieces stand on the floor begging not to be overlooked.

Every children's show that comes to the Greenvile Art Center is an entertainment of the first order. This show, however, carries an extra impact. It is a minor miracle demonstrating the innate talent that is the gift of every child.

May Is Racing Month

By The Associated Press

If April was festival month in North Carolina, then May is racing month. Tar Heels can meet challenges on land, water and air across the state this month.

The competition was to start today with the Rotary Run in Wilmington, a 10-mile "River to the Sea" race along the Cape Fear River to the Atlantic Ocean. The Wilmington Rotary Club is sponsor of a 10,000-meter (six-mile), 5,000-meter (three-mile) and a one-mile race.

The North Carolina C-2 Championship Canoe Race was also scheduled for today along the Tuckasegee River in Cullowhee.

Some 75 sails are expected to rise to the challenge of wind and water at the statewide Hobie Cat Regatta at Morehead City on May 13-14.

At the other end of the state, the thrill of competition will be stronger than ever as North Carolina's largest spectator race, the World 600 NASCAR Grand National, gets under way at the Charlotte Motor Speedway on May 28.

A series of races of a different kind are the Wheelchair Olympics held on May 12-13 at St. Andrews Presbyterian College in Laurinburg.

There will be three tournaments in North Carolina this month. The most spectacular will be the Kemper Open Golf Tournament at the Quail Hollow Country Club in Charlotte beginning begins on May 29.

At Wrightsville Beach, the annual Cape Fear Marlin Tournament will take place May 21-27 with $5,000 prize money and additional cash prizes and trophies. On May 12-14 hang gliders will be soaring from the peaks of Jockey's Ridge at Nags Head as they compete in the sixth annual Nags Head Hang Gliding Spectacular. Over 50 pilots will be judged on duration-target events and distance trials.

If the thrill of competition begins to pall, there are still a few festivals in May. The first is the Big Ivy Ramp Festival at Barnardsville today.

Those who prefer coastal seafood to pungent-tasting ramps will have to wait for the Spring Seafood Feast at Manteo on May 26.

The Sanford Brick Festival is the weekend of May 19-20, and Pender County will hold a Spring Festival at Burgaw on May 20. That same weekend Winston-Salem is sponsoring a Rose Show at Hanes Mall.

UNC-Faculty Show

WINSTON-SALEM — "UNC Faculty — East" is the title of an exhibition now on view at the Southeastern Center for Contemporary Art (SECCA) at 750 Marguerite Drive in Winston-Salem.

The new SECCA show features art by faculty members from the eastern branches of North Carolina's consolidated university system. Schools represented are: East Carolina University; NCSU; N.C. Central University; UNC-Wilmington; UNC-Chapel Hill; Fayetteville State University; Pembroke State University; and Elizabeth City State University.

About 60 artists will be represented by one work each in all media except the areas of applied design.

Also on view at this time at SECCA are raku ceramics by Jamie Davis of Anderson, S.C., an exhibition "Art on a Small Scale," featuring the art of four southeastern artists — Scott Belville, Frank Fleming, Jean Thickens Francis, and E. George Lorio.

Other artists being exhibited at SECCA now are Jack Breit of Brandon, Florida, photographs; Gay Hanna of Chesapeake, Va., stone and marble fountains, and Paul Munson, Radford, Va., sculpture of natural materials.

SECCA hours are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday, 2 to 5 p.m. Sunday. The gallery will be closed on Sunday during the summer months of June, July and August.

All shows are open to the public and there is no admission charge.

Institute Announced

ATHENS, GA. — Applications are now being accepted for the Arts Administration Institute being conducted by the University of Georgia Center for Continuing Education. The institute begins July 24 and continues through August 4.

The course is designed for people with arts administration experience, particularly at the local level; for students desiring to move into the arts administration field as professionals; and for people who serve as volunteers and trustees of arts organizations.

Full details on admission and costs are available by writing to: Arts Administration Institute, Center for Continuing Education, The University of Georgia, Athens, Ga., 30602.

Cauthen, Affirmed Gallop To Victory

By ED SCHUYLER JR.
AP Sports Writer

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Many things are new to Steve Cauthen — he's just a smooth-faced 18-year-old -- but Churchill Downs was truly his "Old Kentucky Home" Saturday, thanks to Affirmed in the Kentucky Derby.

Cauthen came home Saturday to the track where he opened his riding career by finishing last on a 136-1 shot named King of Swat on May 12, 1976. But on this sun-drenched spring afternoon, he won the biggest one of them all aboard a sleek Florida-bred running machine.

Affirmed moved into the lead for good in the upper stretch. Alydar, who was eighth with a half mile left, was moving past horses and the chase was on.

Down the stretch they came, with Cauthen going to the whip to keep Affirmed's mind on the business at hand. Alydar charged down the stretch, swerving in to bump Believe It in the final sixteenth of a mile. Then it was over and it was Affirmed by 1½ lengths. Believe It was another 1¾ lengths back.

They thundered Cauthen's name as he brought Affirmed back for the famed blanket of roses and waved at him, many in the crowd of 131,004 jumping to get a glimpse of the kid and the colt who dominated the 104th Derby.

Others were downcast, losers at the window and in the sentimental sweepstakes that were dominated by Calumet Farm, a horse-racing legend, especially in Kentucky, which was trying to win the Derby for the ninth time with its homebred Alydar.

"We can run five miles and it's gonna be the same result," said trainer Laz Barrera who watched his Harbor View Farm colt beat Alydar for the fifth time in seven meetings.

The distance was 1¼ miles ... and at the end of that distance Affirmed was the best.

"He looked like he came from the beauty parlor," Barrera said of the handsome chestnut. But if he looked pretty, Affirmed was as tough as a stevedore once the gate sprang open and sent the 11 3-year-olds on their search for glory.

Cauthen looked like a kid who knocked down all the milk bottles at a carnival, smiling broadly as he brought Affirmed back to the winner's circle.

"Thanks so much to the Wolfsons (Louis and Patrice Wolfson who race as Harbor View Farm), to trainer Laz Barrera and to my parents who came to see me today," said Cauthen.

"I wasn't nervous at all. I'd been thinking about it all day. And when it was over, it was the biggest thrill of my life," said Cauthen.

But though Cauthen is young, he is not naive. Asked about his reception by the Derby crowd, the native of Walton, Ky., said: "I won, so it was pretty good."

It was a tough loss for Admiral and Mrs. Gene Markey, the aging owners of Calumet Farm and their 32-year-old trainer John Veitch and jockey Jorge Velasquez who was trying for the fifth time to win the Derby.

"He did fine," said Veitch of Alydar. "He just got beat."

He said he telephoned the Markeys at Calumet Farm in Lexington and that they seemed more concerned about how he felt than about losing.

Affirmed was in the thick of things right from the start while Alydar was back in the back until the real race started on the final turn.

"Steve Cauthen — he ride that horse perfect," said the Cuban-born Barrera who won the Derby in 1976 with Bold Forbes.

Affirmed broke well and was second behind Raymond Earl after the run past the stands the first time. At the end of the first half mile, he was third behind Sensitive Prince and Raymond Earl and those three maintained that order through the next quarter.

But Believe It's lead was short-lived. Affirmed quickly regained command and responded to Cauthen's urging. The crowd noise increased as the track announcer informed them that Alydar was on the move, carrying the devil's red and blue silks of Calumet into contention. But Affirmed held him off, reaching the wire in 2:011-5, tying Lucky Debonair, 1965, as the fifth fastest Derby winner. Secretariat set the record of 1:592-5 in 1973.

"This horse had a tough time early," said Velasquez of Alydar's Derby journey. "He really wasn't getting with it and I had to start working on him going into the first turn to try to get him to pick it up. I tapped him on the shoulder with the whip but it didn't help. I didn't plan to be that far back, but he didn't have running on his mind. We got bumped by Believe It past the eighth pole, but it didn't matter — the winner was gone."

Affirmed, the 1977 2-year-old champion, paid $5.60, $2.80 and $2.60 in remaining unbeated in five races this year and earning $186,900 from a purse of $239,400. Alydar returned $2.60 and $2.40, and Believe It was $2.80 to show.

Darby Creek Road finished fourth, another 4¼ lengths back of Believe It and was followed by Esops Foibles, Sensitive Prince, Dr. Valeri, Hoist the Silver, Chief of Dixie, Raymond Earl and Special Honor.

Cauthen, who was 18 last Monday, is not the youngest winning Derby jockey. The three youngest winning riders were Alonzo Clayton, 15, who rode Azra in 1892; James "Soup" Perkins, who rode Halma in 1895, and Bill Boland, 16, who rode Middleground in 1950.

Homecoming Was Happy One For Wonder Boy Cauthen After Win

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — "I was just sittin' there waiting for the other horse to come at me," 18-year-old Steve Cauthen said Saturday after his Kentucky Derby victory on Affirmed.

He was referring to the favored Alydar, pride of Kentucky's Calumet stable, who finished second in this 104th Run for the Roses.

"But he never came at me, so I let my horse go," Cauthen said. "From then on in, it was just a gallop. He perked his ears up once, and I hit him four or five times with the whip. But I never felt in trouble."

The son of a Walton, Ky., blacksmith, riding sensation of the 1977 season, looked like a baby on the big chestnut colt. But he won the race like a man.

The kid who they said was too young and inexperienced to challenge Alydar, unbeaten Sensitive Prince and fast-coming Believe It in the classiest Derby field in two decades, mastered the situation with tremendous poise.

He never seemed to have a nerve in his body.

Given a rousing ovation by the crowd of some 130,000, young Cauthen got his most satisfying salute when he ran into the Churchill Downs jockey room after seeing a garland of roses placed over Affirmed's sweating neck and after speaking excitedly to a national television audience.

"You are the greatest," said 57-year-old Robert L. Baird, old enough to be Cauthen's grandfather, who rode early leader Raymond Earl to a 10th-place finish in the field of 11.

"There's no telling how many more Derbies this boy will win," the veteran jockey added. "He is one of the coolest and sharpest riders I have ever seen."

All of the other jockeys had undressed and were beginning to don street clothes when Cauthen ran like a sprinter into the jockey room, his riding cap and whip in hand amd his pink silks glistening.

Eddie Maple, who rode Believe It, and Mickey Solomone, who was astride the unbeaten Sensitive Prince, rushed up and threw their arms around him.

Fighting his way through mobs of newsmen, Cauthen ran into an adjoining room, plopped himself on the floor, and watched the last rerun of the race on television.

Rising, he was mobbed by reporters.

"My mouth is dry — do you mind if I get a drink of water?" he said in a small voice.

The teenage riding wonder shucked off his silks and talked soberly about the race just as a kid might have discussed a trip to the drug store for a package of bubble gum.

"Were you ever in trouble?" was one of the first questions shot at him.

"When Sensitive Prince came by me early in the race, my horse ducked out," he replied. "I was a little uneasy for just a moment, but my horse settled down and everything was good the rest of the way."

Chris McCarron, a fellow jockey, said that two of the speed horses — apparently referring to Sensitive Prince and Raymond Earl — had pinched off Affirmed at one of the early stages of the race.

"Steve really impressed me. He didn't use the horse at all in bringing him back and getting him out of possible trouble," McCarron said.

"Yes, it was touchy, there, for a while, but my horse did pretty good."

Maple said: "He is super. He's as good as any jockey I have seen."

This was the first Derby for Cauthen, who scored 487 victories for more than $6 million in prize money last season and was voted almost unanimously not only the best jockey but the best male athlete in the United States.

Cauthen, who was reared in northern Kentucky, near the Ohio state line, witnessed his first Derby as a tot of 3. He began riding when he was 7 and received his riding license in 1976.

Cauthen rode his first winner at River Downs in Cincinnati on May 17, 1976, winning on a horse named Red Pipe, which paid $8.

Watson Grabs Nelson Lead

By BOB GREEN
AP Golf Writer

DALLAS (AP) — Tom Watson, working hard and fighting a hook, salvaged an erratic round of par 70 with a birdie on the final hole that broke a fiveman tie and lifted him into sole control of the third round lead Saturday in the $200,000 Byron Nelson Golf Classic.

"The round was up and down for me today," said Watson, a former Nelson champion and a close friend and student of the Hall of Famer. It was less than an overstatement. He had 5 bogeys and as many birdies.

"I got a lot out of the round," he said. "It could have been terrible. I made some bad mistakes early, but those three birdies in a row brought it back.

"I'm not striking the ball the way I'd like to, but I'm in position to win the tournament."

So are a host of others.

Lee Trevino, "Ol' Sarge" Orville Moody, chipper Joe Inman and big Jim Dent are a single shot back of Watson's pace-setting 54-hole total of 206, four shots under par on the 6,997-yard Preston Trail Golf Club course.

There were four more players only two strokes back going into Sunday's final round, with two more another shot behind.

"I'm in the hunt and that's where I want to be," chirped Inman, who closed up with a 65.

"It looks like it's going to be a dogfight to the end," drawled Dent, who birdied the final hole in a drizzling rain for a 71.

"I'm playing well enough to win, but I'm not sure about my putting. You don't win anything if you're not putting," said Moody, who's trying to win his first official title since the 1969 U.S. Open. He shot a 67.

"I could win. I'm playing good enough to win. But there must be 15 guys in the fight, maybe more," said Trevino, who had a 68.

Trevino, Dent, Inman and Moody all were at 207 and all shared the lead until Watson dropped his three-foot birdie putt on the final hole. At one time or another on the mild, misty day, nine men either led or shared the lead.

The group at 208, only 2 shots back and very much in contention for the $40,000 first prize, were big Andy Bean, Steve Melnyk, Ed Sneed and Jay Haas, the 25-year-old winner of the San Diego Open earlier this year. Bean had a 66, Sneed 71, Melnyk 72 and Haas 71.

Veteran Don January shot a 67 and Dave Stockton a 65 — despite missing four putts of eight feet or less — and were at 209. Defending champion Ray Floyd holed a 5-iron second shot for an eagle in his 67 that put him at par 210.

That put a cozy group of a dozen locked within four strokes of each other going to the final 18 holes of play.

Watson, Trevino, Melnyk, Sneed, Dent, Haas, Moody, Inman and Bean all led or shared the lead at one time or another. Without exception, all found their difficulties under gray, threatening skies that leaked occasional drizzle over the finishing holes. Watson emerged as the sole leader when he was proved himself best able to handle the problems.

A two-time winner this season, along with a runner-up finish in the Masters, the 1977 Player of the Year and the current British Open champion, Watson started the day in a three-way tie for the lead. But he quickly backed up and actually disappeared from the leader board with bogeys on four of six holes on the front side.

But he fought his way back with three birdies in row on the homeward side. He dropped a 10-footer on the 13th, flew an iron only 3 feet from the flag on the 14th and scored from 15 feet on the next hole.

But he bogeyed the 16th after his approach flew into the gallery and hit a woman spectator in the forehead. "I was very worried about her," Watson said. "Everybody else moved, but she just stood there. I've been told she's all right. I'm going to try to see her later today."

He was still locked in a massive group of players going to the final hole, but lofted an 8-iron approach some three feet from the wet and drooping flag and tapped in the putt that left in front alone.

Moody, trying to win his first official title since the 1969 U.S. Open, also had it at 4 under until he 3-putted for bogey on the 17th.

The revamped 16th, a dogleg, water-guarded par 4, struck down most of the challengers. Trevino bogeyed it when his second shot was short and in deep rough. Haas bogeyed it from a bunker.

Trevino, who has played very well in the last five weeks, had to save par on the 18th after getting a drop away from the stands.

Only Inman was able to escape the subtle troubles that trapped the others. Playing well in front of the other leaders, the fast-talking Inman said he made his round with three superior saves on the middle holes, dropping par-saving putts of 10, 10 and six feet on the ninth, 10th and 11th.

"That really made my round," he said. "But that's what happens when you shoot 65. I'm back in the hunt, and that's the place to be."

Virginia Tech Halts Bucs, 3-2

BLACKSBURG, Va. — Virginia Tech put an end to just about any post-season playoff hopes East Carolina University might have had left yesterday, gaining a 3-2 win over the Pirates.

The game was a pitching duel throughout the contest, between East Carolina's Mickey Britt, who gave up only two hits through the first five innings (both home runs) and Jim Puglisi of Tech, who allowed only two hits in the first five innings.

The Pirates were able to hit the ball hard a number of times during the day, but few of their balls fell in, as they recorded only four hits. Twice the Pirates hit into double plays.

The defeat for Britt was only his third in 13 decisions. He gave up seven hits, walked three and struck out five.

The Pirates were handicapped during the week by not working out for a couple of days, due to the week-long layoff, and then rain halted drills for a couple of games.

Then, first baseman Robert Brinkley, one of the top hitters, was unable to make the trip due to exams, and Raymie Styons, the catcher, suffered from vision problems because of his contact lenses.

All that combined to quiten the Pirate bats for Puglisi and his relief man.

Virginia Tech took the lead in the third inning with the game's first hit. That was a home run by Eric Keller.

The Pirates tied it up with a run in the top of the fifth. Bobby Supel walked and Styons singled. Hardison reached on an infield hit and Mike Sage was safe on an error, scoring Supel.

But Tech came right back with another home run to regain the lead at 2-1. That blast, like the first, came after two were out, as Steve Dodd put it out of the park.

At the time, it was only the second hit allowed by Britt.

The Pirates again tied it up in the sixth. Billy Best bunted his way on and stole second. He scored on Pete Paradossi's base hit.

But once more, Virginia Tech rose to the occasion, scoring the go-ahead run in the bottom of the sixth. Mike Preisser singled and Andy Aldridge hit a shot down the right field line that Sage barely missed grabbing. The hit went for a double, scoring Preisser.

The loss dropped the Pirate record to 27-17 for the season, while Virginia Tech climbed to 23-13.

Tech, which earlier lost twice in Greenville, will seek to even the mark this afternoon, in a 2 p.m. game.

Stargell Sparks Pirate Victory

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Willie Stargell singled home two runs during a three-run first inning and the Pittsburgh Pirates held on to defeat the Los Angeles Dodgers 3-2 Saturday behind the eight-hit pitching of John Candelaria, Kent Tekulve and Grant Jackson.

Candelaria, 2-4, who had been ineffective in his last three outings, gave up only two harmless singles until the seventh inning when Ron Cey, Dusty Baker and Rick Monday singled to break up the shutout bid. Candelaria had retired 11 straight Dodgers before Cey's singled.

Pinch-hitter Lee Lacy opened the ninth with a home run, chasing Candelaria. Jackson struck out pinch-hitter Teddy Martinez with runners on second third to end the game.

The Pirates jumped on Don Sutton, 2-3, for four hits and all their runs in the first inning. Frank Taveras led off with a double. Omar Moreno walked and Bill Robinson's one-out single scored Taveras. Stargell then lined a single to right-center to score Moreno and Robinson, who had taken second on the throw to third.

San Francisco Wins In Twelve

CHICAGO (AP) — Vic Harris drew a bases-loaded walk with two out in the 12th inning to force in the winning run Saturday and give the San Francisco Giants a 2-1 victory over the Chicago Cubs.

Johnnie LeMaster led off the 12th with a single off loser Willie Hernandez, 2-1. Skip James bunted and LeMaster was safe at second when Hernandez threw late.

Bill Madlock sacrificed and Terry Whitfield was given an intentional walk to load the bases. Darrell Evans then popped up before Harris, batting for winning pitcher Randy Moffitt, 2-1, drew the decisive walk.

The Cubs took the lead in the first inning when Ivan DeJesus singled, went to second on an infield out and scored on a single by Bill Buckner.

Chicago starter Rick Reuschel held the Giants scoreless until the seventh when they knocked him out and tied the score on singles by Larry Herndon, Marc Hill and LeMaster.

Bruce Sutter took over with men on first and third and fanned pitcher Bob Knepper, retired Madlock on a liner to second and ended the inning when Whitfield grounded out.

In A Cloud Of Dust

Seaver Gets First Win For Reds

CINCINNATI (AP) — Tom Seaver won his first game of the season and Pete Rose had two more hits to move ahead of Roberto Clemente on the all-time list with 3,002 as the Cincinnati Reds stopped the Montreal Expos 6-2 Saturday.

Seaver, winless in six previous starts and a loser three times, pitched six shutout innings before giving way to Pedro Borbon after yielding three hits in the seventh, including a two-run homer by Larry Parrish. He was tagged for nine hits.

Seaver drove in Dan Driessen with a suicide squeeze bunt when the Reds roughed up Expos starter Rudy May, 2-2, in a four-run second inning.

Rose, who reached the 3,000-hit milestone Friday night, moved into 12th place in career hits with a run-scoring double in the second inning.

Dave Concepcion opened the second with a double and scored on Driessen's double to make it 2-0. Driessen was sacrificed to third and scored on Seaver's bunt. Rose's double scored Seaver to make it 4-0 and Morgan added a run-scoring single.

Cincinnati added its final run in the eighth when Rose beat out a bunt, was sacrificed to second, stole third and scored on Morgan's sacrifice fly.

Conley Girls Top Jaguars

FARMVILLE — D.H. Conley's girls' softball team gained a nine-inning, 11-2 victory over Farmville Central yesterday to hold onto its share of second place in the Eastern Carolina Conference race.

Conley scored first in the game, getting two runs in the fourth. Farmville Central came back to tie it up in the bottom of the seventh with two.

It stayed that way until the ninth, when the Valkyries exploded for nine runs.

Lexann Keeter was the winning pitcher.

Lori Garrish and Tee Mills each had three hits for Conley, one of Garrish's a home run. Linda Payton, Nancy Berg, Pam Manning, Angie Roberson, Tammy Streeter and Keeter each added two.

Conley is now 9-2 overall and 7-2 in conference play. Farmville Central is 5-5.

Heels Win Carmichael

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina has captured its second consecutive Carmichael Cup in the 17th annual competition for overall sports achievement in the Atlantic Coast Conference.

The Tar Heels, in winning the coveted award for the seventh time, finished the year with 71½ points to runner-up North Carolina State's 65 in the final tabulation announced by Commissioner Bob James.

Maryland, the only other school in history to win the award, finished third with 59 points. Clemson, which led after the fall season, was fourth with 55, followed by Duke and Virginia with 43 each and Wake Forest with 21½.

North Carolina finished on top in the regular-season basketball race, won the football title and shared the tennis crown. The Tar Heels also finished second in soccer, swimming, wrestling, golf and baseball.

The Wolfpack claimed championships in swimming and wrestling, tied for the tennis crown and picked up second place finishes in cross country, indoor track, lacrosse and track and field.

Pam Higgins Pulls Into Tie With Stephenson At Hilton Head

By DAVID MOFFIT
UPI Sports Writer

HILTON HEAD, S.C. (UPI) — Veteran Pam Higgins, a slender blonde playing in her first tournament in more than a month, posted a steady 2-under-par 70 for the second day in a row Saturday to move into a tie with Jan Stephenson in the Women's International golf tournament.

Higgins, who left the LPGA tour for four weeks because she "didn't feel like playing," sank a 14-foot birdie putt on the final hole of the second round to wind up at 4-under 140 for 36 holes.

Stephenson, a shapely Australian who held a two-stroke lead at the end of the first round, held a one-stroke lead going into Saturday's final hole but put the ball into the rough and then two-putted from 20 feet for a even-par 72.

Debbie Austin, a five-time winner last year, was also at 4 under going into Saturday's final hole but suffered a double bogey to wind up with her second straight 71 and, at 142, tied for third with amateur Beth Daniel, a Furman University senior who had a 69.

Beth Stone had a second-round 68 and was tied at even-par 144 with Amy Alcott and Judy Rankin who had 69 and Carol Mann who had a 73.

"I hate this game at times," said Stephenson. "It's so frustrating. Just when I thought I had this golf course under control, it jumped up and bit me."

Higgins, whose only two wins on the LPGA tour came back in 1971, was 5 under after 12 holes Saturday after sinking birdie putts of 15, 25 and 40 feet. But she then posted back-to-back bogeys at the 15th and 16th holes when she went into bunkers both times.

"It was a perfect day for scoring, but I didn't take as much advantage of it as I should have," said Higgins. "I was going for low putts until I messed up and started hitting some greens."

Beverly Klass, a sister Californian, set an LPGA record Saturday when she had only 19 putts — one-putting 17 greens. The previous record was 20 putts.

Stephenson, who lost by one stroke two years ago when the Women's International was played for the first time and tied for fifth last year, said she plans to play aggressively in Sunday's third round. "I'm going to let it rip tomorrow," she said. "Enough of this holding my lead. I want a low score to win. I don't lead very often, usually I have to chase them.

"When I had a two-stroke lead, I guess I blew that," said Stephenson. "I've got to learn how to handle the lead."

Defending champion Sandra Palmer had a 74-150 Saturday to stand 10 strokes off the lead. Sally Little, the South African who nipped Stephenson two years ago by sinking a 75-foot sand shot on the final hole, stood at 71-145 — five strokes back.

Janet Coles, who received a last-minute invitation after winning last week's Lady Tara Classic, had planned to go home this week to visit her boyfriend in California. The way she has played the past two days -77-80—157 — she might as well have done just that.

Bando Paces Brewer Win

By MIKE O'BRIEN
AP Sports Writer

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Sal Bando crashed a game-tying three-run homer in the ninth inning and Gorman Thomas drew a bases-loaded walk to force in the winning run as the Milwaukee Brewers stormed back for a 4-3 victory over the Kansas City Royals Saturday.

Kansas City starter Paul Splittorff, who hasn't lost to the Brewers in more than five years and has beaten them eight consecutive times, blanked Milwaukee on three hits through eight innings. But Splittorff was relieved by Doug Bird after Paul Molitor singled and Dick Davis walked to start the ninth.

With the Royals' infield expecting a bunt and charging the plate, Cecil Cooper blooped a single over the glove of second baseman Frank White to fill the bases. Thomas then walked on a 3-1 pitch to send the Royals to their fifth consecutive defeat.

The Royals scored in the second inning on a wild relay by shortstop Molitor, in the fifth on White's squeeze bunt and in the seventh on a home run by Darrell Porter.

Rice Leads Boston In Sweep Of Chicago White Sox

By DAVE O'HARA
AP Sports Writer

BOSTON (AP) — Jim Rice belted his eighth home run of the season and drove in five runs Saturday as the Boston Red Sox swept a doubleheader from the Chicago White Sox, winning the opener 6-4 in 10 innings and taking the second game 3-0 behind the pitching of rookie Jim Wright, who was making his first major league start.

The Red Sox rallied to win the first game on Dwight Evans' two-run homer with one out in the 10th.

Wright, a 27-year-old right-hander, scattered seven hits in the nightcap for his first major league victory as a replacement for veteran Mike Torrez, sidelined with a bad back.

Rice, the American League's RBI leader, drove in three runs in the first game with a pair of singles and a double. In the second game, he hit a two-run homer off Francisco Barrios, 1-2, in the fourth inning and later added a double. His five runs batted in pushed his total for the year to 30.

Rice's double in the eighth inning of the opener was his 600th hit in just his fourth full major league season. His two-out single in the ninth drove in the tying run, setting the stage for Evans' game-winning liner into the left-field screen following Carlton Fisk's single.

Evans, who entered the opening game in the eighth inning as a replacement for ailing center fielder Fred Lynn, hit his second homer of the season in the seventh inning of the nightcap as Wright struck out three and didn't issue a walk in outdeulling Barrios.

Reliever Bob Stanley was the winning pitcher in the opener, retiring the White Sox in order in the 10th after coming in for starter Bill Lee, who gave up 11 hits and six walks in the first nine innings.

Carl Yastrzemski had two singles in the first game and a double in the second, moving into 31st place among baseball's all-time greats with 2,751 hits. His four total bases gave him a career total of 4,475, breaking away from a 20th place tie with Hall of Famers Paul Waner and Nap Lajoie.

Texas Bombs Yankees

NEW YORK (AP) — The Texas Rangers parlayed Jim Umbarger's eight-hit pitching and a tie-breaking five-run sixth inning, highlighted by Bump Wills' two-run double, into a 9-5 victory over the New York Yankees Saturday. The loss snapped the Yanks' five-game winning streak.

With the teams tied 1-1, Richie Zisk triggered the Rangers' five-run sixth with a one-out single off Dick Tidrow, 1-3, and stole second. Tidrow walked John Lowenstein and then surrendered RBI singles to Toby Harrah and Thompson.

Sparky Lyle relieved Tidrow and Jim Sundberg beat out a squeeze bunt to make it 4-1. After Bert Campaneris flied out, Mike Hargrove walked and Wills followed with his double.

Umbarger, 1-1, fell behind in the first inning when Willie Randolph walked, stole second and scored on Thurman Munson's single. He then blanked the Yankees until they scored twice in the seventh on another walk to Randolph and singles by Reggie Jackson and Lou Piniella and a double by Chris Chambliss.

Jackson hit a two-run homer in the bottom of the ninth after Texas jumped on Ken Clay for three runs in the top of the inning.

Tidrow allowed the tying run when Lowenstein doubled, went to third on an infield out and scored on a sacrifice fly by Bobby Thompson.

Tigers Cool A's, 6-0

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Left-hander Bob Sykes, making his first start of the season after being recalled from the minors, pitched a four-hitter as the Detroit Tigers cooled off the Oakland A's 6-0 Saturday.

Sykes, who was called up from Evansville of the American Association on Friday, struck out nine and walked three in ending the A's five-game winning streak.

Jason Thompson homered and Ron LeFlore stole three bases as the Tigers collected 15 hits off five Oakland pitchers.

Oakland starter Alan Wirth, 1-3, a last-minute replacement for Rick Langford, who has a back injury, gave up three runs on four hits in the first inning.

Dave Heaverlo yielded two more runs in the fifth on a leadoff homer by Thompson, a single by Steve Kemp and a double by Alan Trammell.

The A's had their best scoring chance in the second inning when Mario Guerrero and Dave Revering singled with one out. But Wayne Gross struck out and Jim Essian bounced back to Sykes to end the threat.

Roanoke Bombs Jamesville, 11-2

ROBERSONVILLE — Roanoke High School romped to an 11-2 victory over Jamesville High School Saturday afternoon.

The 2-A Redskins had little trouble with their 1-A cross-county rivals after Glenn Cargile provided a 4-0 lead with a grand-slam home run.

The action came in the second inning. Street Lee singled and Jesse Matthews walked. Ken Gurganus walked loading the bases for Cargile, who whacked the ball out of the park for the 4-0 lead.

The Redskins added another run before the inning was over. Charlie Smith walked, as did Cliff Keel and Anthony Latham. Smith scored when Wayne Council grounded out.

Jamesville got the first of its two runs in the top of the fourth. Trent Ange singled and came around to score on errors when Glenn Ellis singled.

Roanoke came right back with six in the bottom of the fourth. Latham walked and Council singled. Lee reached on an error loading the bases. Walks to Steve Wallace and Matthews brought in Latham and Council. Gurganus singled in Lee, and both Wallace and Matthews scored on Cargile's hit. After Keel walked, Latham hit into a fielder's choice, scoring Gurganus.

Jamesville got its other run in the seventh.

Keel held the Bullets to only two hits. Cargile and Gurganus each had three hits, while Council had two for Roanoke.

INNER TENNIS

NEW YORK (AP) — "Inner Tennis," anyone? A book called "The Inner Game of Tennis" is said to be catching on among both instructors and students of the game. The point it makes is that the opponent inside a player's head is more formidable than the one across the net.

Dr. Pepper came back with two in the fecond to take the lead. Chip Cayton singled and Louis Fletcher tripled him in. Mike Livingston singled to score Fletcher.

Another run came over in the fifth. Livingston walked and moved to third on errors. Steve Holloman singled him in.

Auto Specialty then came up with four in the top of the seventh for a 5-3 lead. Kenny Goodwin singled and Jody Forbes got a hit. Hudson doubled them both in and Troy Fleming walked. Alan Dickens singled in Hudson and Brian Hill singled in Fleming.

Dr. Pepper got one more in the seventh.

Forbes had three hits, while Hill and Hudson each had two for Auto Specialty. Rudy Stalls had two for Dr. Pepper.

Cox Realty 5, Graniteers 0

Cox scored twice in the fourth. Lance Searl singled and moved up on a balk. Randy Warren tripled him in. Mont Carter grounded out, scoring Warren.

Three more came over in the fifth. Jessie Atkinson walked and Searl singled. Carter doubled in Atkinson, and Searl, and Keith Stocks singled in Carter.

Searl had two hits to lead Cox. No one on the Graniteers had more than one, as Carter limited them to only four hits.

Babe Ruth

Wachovia Bank 16, Action Movers 8

Wachovia Bank opened the Babe Ruth season with a 16-8 win over Action Movers Saturday morning.

Wachovia pushed over two in the first. Sam Hodges singled and stole second. Mark Sasser singled, scoring Hodges. An error and a passed ball moved Sasser up, and he scored on John Dubber's out.

Wachovia got another in the third, then added two in the fourth. Action came up with five in the sixth to take a 6-5 lead.

But in the top of the seventh, Wachovia came up with 11 big runs to put the game out of reach. Scott Southerland doubled and Steve Hall walked. Ed Frazier singled, scoring Southerland, while Burney Calloway singled in Hall. Sam Hodges got a hit to score Frazier, and Jeff Wilson reached on an error. Sasser singled in Carraway and Hodges, and Southerland walked. Walks to Dubber, Hall and Allan Hudson brought in more runs, with hits by Frazier and Carraway ending the scoring.

Sasser, Frazier and Carraway each had three hits, while Hodges and Southerland each had two for Wachovia. Chris Joyner and Carl Woodworth each had two for Action.

Coke 10, Planters Bank 9

Coca-Cola came up with a run in the bottom of the seventh to nip Planters Bank 10-9 yesterday.

Planters took the lead with one in the first. Crowell Pope walked and moved up on a wild pitch. Mike Pollard singled him in.

Coke took the lead with three in the second. Steve Chapman walked and Tom Brown reached on an error. Elvy Forrest reached on a fielder's choice. Mitchell Brann walked to force in one, and Jimmy Jones reached on a fielder's choice, scoring another run. Kelly Kee grounded out, scoring the final run of the inning.

Both teams scored one in the third, with Planters getting one in the fourth and four in the fifth. They added two in the sixth r a 9-4 lead.

But Planters came back to score five in the sixth, tieing the score. Then, in the seventh, Coke got the winning run.

Rocky Mount Stops Rampants By 4-2

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

There's something about Rocky Mount High School's baseball field that just makes Rose High School baseball coach Ronald Vincent cring.

"You know, I don't know how long we've been coming over here to play," he said following Friday night's 4-2 defeat at the hands of the Gryphons, "but I can only remember one victory we've had here. There's just something about this ballpark that gets us every time."

The Rampants hit the ball hard against the Gryphons, but were limited to only six hits. "It seemed like every time we hit it, someone was right there waiting for it. Their shortstop (Billy Merrifield) did a great job for a sophomore, and their left fielder (Greg Clark) made the play that really killed us," Vincent said.

That play came in the top of the sixth when the Rampants were trailing 4-2 with a runner on second base with just one out. Will Sanderson hit a fly ball to left that Clark made a diving catch of. It robbed the Rampant first-baseman of a sure extra-base hit, kept a run from scoring and killed the hopes for the inning.

"Sanderson hit the ball hard three times, and didn't get a hit out of it at all," the coach said.

The game was also filled with arguments between the two school's coaches and the umpires.

Three times furors erupted, all three times when the Gryphons were at the plate.

The first argument came in the first inning. Dee Whitley had opened the inning with a single for the Gryphons, and with one down, Jeff Newsome doubled to deep left, apparently scoring Whitley. But the runner missed home plate and was called out on appeal. That sent Rocky Mount coach George Kelly to the plate, trying to argue the runner was safe.

Then, in the fourth, Rose catcher Skip Topping picked Timmy Tucker off first base. The field umpire pumped Tucker out, and then when Kelly and assistant coach Walt Wiggins argued, he reversed his call. That brought Vincent out, who agrued that the ump (who claimed he really didn't have that good a view of the play) had called him out, then asked for help from the plate umpire. "Once he had called him out," Vincent said, "he was out. If he had any question, he should have asked the plate umpire for help first, then made his call."

Eventually, the umpires agreed with Vincent, and Tucker retired to the dugout.

The next incident came in the fifth when Jake Lassiter swung and missed at a third strike, only to get another chance when the umpire' both lost the count on the batter, giving him a fourth strike. This time, Vincent's protests fell on deaf ears.

But the Gryphons came right back to score one in the bottom of the first. After Whitley had been called out on appeal after Newsome's double, Merrifield singled courtsey runner Ricky Lancaster to third. The two then worked the double steal attempt, with Lancaster scoring before Merrifield was chased down in a rundown.

The Rocky Mount team added two in the third for a 3-1 edge. Billy Luther singled and was safe at second when William Lawrence's sacrifice bunt attempt was throw over second base. Newsome then cracked another double to deep left, scoring both runners.

It wasn't until the fifth that another run scored. Ronnie Chapman was hit by a pitch with two outs, and Mike Shank singled. Greg Lee singled in Chapman, and both he and Shank moved up a base when the ball was mishandled. But after Aldridge was intentionally walked, a ground out ended the threat.

Rocky Mount got its insurance run in the bottom of the fifth. Whitley singled to deep short, then stole both second and third, the last time moving without a throw to the plate. He then scored on a two-out high hopper to third by Merrifield.

The win returned Rocky Mount to at least a share of first place in the conference with a 13-6 overall mark and a 7-4 Division I record.

Rose fell to 11-5 overall and 6-4 in the conference, a half-game back.

The Rampants travel to Northern Nash on Monday, then go to Bertie on Tuesday night for two important games.

Diamond Darlings Add Sparkle To East Carolina's Home Games

The biggest hit of the 1978 baseball season at East Carolina University was not made by any player. The Pirate fans who came to Harrington Field this season are in almost total agreement that the biggest hit and the most pleasant surprise were the 1978 ECU Batgirls.

As in their fictional counterpart who shares the same title, these girls are experts at their jobs. In fact, there are several similarities between the ECU Batgirls and the fictional counterpart.

The girls can track down a wayward foul ball as the other would track down a wanted criminal. They venture on dangerous missions through the stands to retrieve the baseballs that go into the madding crowd.

They can make the rounds of the stadium gates handing out game programs as if they were handing out an arrest warrant. Should a spectator make it through the gates without picking up the program, a search will ensue until that person has program in hand.

Solving mysteries is also a part of these girls' duties. Ask any one of those who have worked in the press box, and they will surely tell of the many mysteries associated with that assignment. Each of the girls at least once in the season was assigned guard duty. The job was to guard the dugouts against unwanted intruders. Loitering was not allowed by the dugouts, and any bats that were noticed lying unattended in that area were promptly picked up and carried off to their proper place in the bat rack.

At least twice during each home contest, the girls would make a "clean sweep" of the infield. The bases would be brushed off, as would any umpire who happened to be in the general vicinity.

Loyalty to the team was not required, but it was definitely given. Miles of travel would the batgirls undertake in order to be at their stations when the cry of "Play ball" rang out.

As the song states, "Diamonds are Forever," and in hearts and minds of ECU baseball fans, the 1978 batgirls are and always will be true "Diamond Darlings."

Martin In 12-1 Win

EVERETTS — Martin Academy rolled to a 12-1 victory over Ablemarle Academy Friday, ending the regular season for the Pioneers.

Martin scored twice in the first inning. Jeffrey James walked and stole second. He scored on Wiley Keel's single. Keel then came over when Durwood Leggett singled.

In the second, Martin added six runs. Cliff Haislip singled and walks to Ricky Simpson and Bill Falvo loaded the bases. Haislip scored on a passed ball and James walked, again loading the bases. Keel walked, scoring Simpson. Tim Gardner then cracked a grand-slam homer to make it 8-0.

Martin added one in the fifth, another in the sixth and two in the seventh. Albemarle got its only run in the third.

Martin is now 7-3 in league play and 8-6 overall.

Keel led the hitting with three, while James and Haislip each had two.

Durwood Leggett hurled the victory, allowing only one hit. He struck out 11 and walked two.

The first All-Star baseball game was played in Chicago in 1933 with the American League beating the National, 4-2.

Jaguars Down North Lenior

SNOW HILL — Farmville Central kept pace with Greene Central in the Eastern Carolina Conference baseball race with a 6-2 victory over North Lenoir yesterday. The game was played on the Greene Central field due to conditions at the Jaguar field.

Farmville Central scored three runs in the bottom of the first for all they would need. Billy McLawhorn singled and took second on an error on the play. He was sacrificed up and scored when Alan Moore reached on an error. Edward Hines walked and both runners advanced on a passed ball. Don Holloman singled in Moore and Tony Eason got a hit scoring Hines.

In the second, the Jaguars got another run. McLawhorn walked, stole second and moved to third on a passed ball. He scored on Moore's single.

North Lenoir broke the ice in the fourth. Wayne Jackson s hit by a pitch, stole second and moved to third on a sacrifice. He scored on T. Davis' errored grounder.

North Lenoir got another in the fifth to close it to 4-2. Pansini singled, stole second and took third on a sacrifice. He scored on a passed ball.

The other two Farmville runs came in the fifth. Scott Evans walked and Moore doubled. Hines singled in Evans and Holloman singled in Moore.

Farmville is now 6-1 in the conference and 10-5 overall. They were to face Ayden-Grifton Saturday night, then meet Greene Central in a fateful game Tuesday night.

Five Qualify For Regionals

Bennett won the high jump with a sectional record of 5 feet, 3 inches. He also placed third in the triple jump with a leap of 33 feet, 5½ inches.

Teammate Vanessa Brown also placed in two events. He was fourth in the shot put at 32 feet, 9 inches, and won the discus with a heave of 106 feet, 7 inches.

Two teammates also qualified. Vanessa Brown won the discus with a throw of 106 feet, 7 inches, while Cindy Brown tossed the shot 32 feet, 9 inches to pace fourth.

Farmville's Rosa Tyson was second in the 880-yard run in 2:32.1. Rose High School's Elizabeth Johnson was fourth in the triple jump with 32 feet, 9½ inches.

The five move on to regionals next week.

Raleigh Broughton won the team title with 46 points, while Oxford Webb was second with 42. Edenton was third at 23, followed by Williamston with 17. Farmville finished with four, and Rose had three.

Conley Near-Perfect In 4-0 Victory

By JIM KYLE
Reflector Sports Writer

LITTLEFIELD — D. H. Conley was nearly perfect in every phase of the game Friday night as the Viking baseball team scored a 4-0 shutout victory over Ayden-Grifton.

It marked the first time this season that Conley has put together a complete game, with good pitching, defense and hitting, said a happy Viking coach Walter Claybrook. Winning pitcher Jeff Allen held the Chargers to three hits in 6⅓ innings, the team played errorless defense and outhit the Chargers 5-3.

"We finally played a complete game," Claybrook said. "It's the first time this season we've put it all together. The defense played real well, we got real good pitching and our hitting came through in the end.

"It just feels good", he said of the win. "Tonight, I was real pleased. I am happy for the guys because they've been trying real hard."

The visiting Vikings scored one run in the second, another in the fourth and finished up with two in the seventh. The Chargers made some threats late in the game, and had the bases loaded in the seventh, but couldn't come up with the key hits.

Allen was responsible for all three Ayden-Grifton hits, he walked five and struck out five in collecting the win. His pitching was very effective until the seventh, when he obviously tired. After walking three batters, Allen was replaced by Ben Wilson, who collected the final two outs. Allen is now 3-1, while Wilson was credited with a save.

The Charger pitching was nearly as good. Loser Jolly Dail gave up just five hits, but the Vikings sacrificed effectively, took advantage of two Ayden-Grifton errors and got a key double from Curtis Spencer to ice the victory. Dail, who went the distance, is now 0-1.

Wilson scored the game's first run in the second when he reached on an error, was sacrificed to second by Spencer and was plated by Randy Edens' base hit to right.

Spencer led off the fourth with a walk in the third, and he stole second. He made it to third on Mike Phillips' infield out and scored when Mike Edens reached on a fly ball that got lost in the lights.

The Vikings left three men on in the top of the fifth, while Ayden-Grifton had its first threat in the bottom of the inning. Conley quelled it, however, with a double play.

Micah Dixon, who was the leading hitter in the game with a 2-3 performance, led off the seventh with a single up the middle for the Vikings. Arnell Credle then sacrificed him to second. It was Credle's third sacrifice of the game.

After another out, Wilson was intentionally walked for the second time of the evening. That brought up Spencer, who doubled to the wall in left center, bringing both runners in to just about sew things up.

But the Chargers had other ideas. Taking advantage of Allen's tiring arm, two of the first three Ayden-Grifton batters in the bottom of the seventh waited out bases on balls. After Allen delivered two more balls to Wayne Newton, Claybrook brought Wilson from right field to the mound.

Wilson ended up walking Newton, but he struck out the next batter for a second out and the following Ayden-Grifton batter grounded to second.

The victory raised the Conley record to 6-7 overall and 3-4 in the Eastern Carolina Conference. The Chargers are now 6-10 and 4-4. The two teams play again Tuesday as Conley travels to North Pitt and Ayden-Grifton goes to C. B. Aycock.

Leggett Promoted To Assistant AD At ECU

Earline Leggett, business manager for athletics since 1972, has been named Assistant Athletic Director for Business, Bill Cain, East Carolina Athletic Director, has announced.

Mrs. Leggett's appointment marks the first time that a woman at East Carolina, or at any school within the state, has been named to the position of an assistant athletic director for an entire athletic program.

While the significance of a female being named to such a position is obvious, Leggett down-plays that element.

"I don not think equal rights or Title IX had anything to do with my getting this position," she said. "But I do feel that this proves a woman can move into this type position with hard work and a desire to want it bad enough. It does prove it can be achieved as a woman.

"I'm just extremely honored and very grateful for the opportunity given to me back in 1972 by Coach Stas (late athletic director Clarence Stasavich) and (Cliff) Moore (ECU vice-chancellor for Business Affairs) when they had confidence in me to name me business manager."

Earline Leggett

A non-college graduate and the athletic department employee with the most longevity, Leggett's background paints the picture of success from hard work and loyalty. Her motto in life follows those principles.

In 1963, Leggett joined the athletic staff as personal secretary to Stasavich. But from the beginning, it was more than just being a secretary. Her work included keeping the books, writing grants-in-aid, equipment orders—the standard work of a business manager.

But it was not until 1970 that a business manager position was created at East Carolina, with Bill Cain, the current athletic director, receiving that position. In 1972, Cain moved up to assistant athletic director and Leggett was pomoted to the business position.

A Williamston native, Leggett attended Farm Life High School, and later graduated from Baker Business School in Greenville. She worked for Olin Mathieson Corp. in Williamston for 12 years prior to coming to East Carolina.

At the time, she was the only woman employd by the athletic department, and was alone as a woman there for two years.

"You know, I don't really feel any different about this position or my responsibilities than I did before," she said. "I feel I was as dedicated years ago to the job as I am now, and I feel I would have continued to work and strive to do the best job possible without the new title. But it is a nice reward for the long years and hours put in."

Cain, in making the appointment, said that Mrs. Leggett's abilities and her devotion to her job played the key role in her new appointment. "Equal rights or Title IX had nothing to do with it. Her being a woman was incidental."

Greene Central Downs Panthers

SNOW HILL — Greene Central scored an 8-4 victory over "hosting" North Pitt Friday in the Eastern Carolina Conference baseball race.

The game, a home contest for North Pitt, had to be moved to Greene Central because of field conditions.

The Rams scored once in the top of the first. Jimbo Fulghum walked and scored when Jay Carraway doubled.

North Pitt came back with one in the bottom of the first to tie it up. Ron House reached on a fielder's choice and scored when Vic Evans reached on an error.

In the third, the Rams pushed over three more runs for a 4-1 margin. Mike Chase doubled and scored when Fulghum tripled. Russell Brann singled in Fulghum, then scored when Al Murray doubled.

North Pitt got another run in the third. Jeff Hines singled and stole second. He scored on Tim Corey's hit.

The Greene Central team got another run in the fourth. Jeff Scott singled, stole up and scored on Walt Tyndall,s hit. The fifth saw another run score. Brann reached on a fielder's choice and advanced on Murray's hit. Colyn Beaman singled him in.

North Pitt closed out its scoring with two in the fifth. House reached on an error and Evans walked. Roy Briley doubled them in.

The Rams added two more in the seventh.

Fulghum, Scott, Beaman and Murray all had two for Greene Central, while Hines had two for North Pitt.

The Rams are now 9-1 in the Eastern Carolina loop, with a 13-6 overall mark. North Pitt is 2-8 in the conference.

Jamesville Rips Pantego

JAMESVILLE — Jamesville's league-leading Bullets added their eighth straight Beaufort-Hyde-Martin Conference victory to their list Friday night, downing Pantego 13-0.

The Bullets were held to only four hits in the game, but took advantage of four errors and a number of walks to do the trick.

Jamesville took the lead with two runs in the second inning. Glenn Ellis singled and stole second. He moved to third on a passed ball, and scored when Danny Lilley's sacrifice attempt was errored. Lilley stole second, moved to third on an out and scored on a passed ball.

In the third, five more Bullets crossed the plate. Alan Frazier walked as did Toby Holliday. Both were sacrificed up and scored on a two-base error on Trent Ange's sacrifice attempt. Ellis walked and Dan Lilley reached on an error that allowed all three runners to score.

In the fifth, two more scored. Frazier walked, stole second and moved to third when Jeff Holliday reached on an error. Ange reached on another error, scoring Frazier. Ed Lilley was safe on another error, scoring Holliday.

Lilley hurled the victory, allowing only one hit, a leadoff single by opposing pitcher Carawan in the sixth. He struck out eight and walked three.

Ellis led the Jamesville hitting, getting two of the four hits.

Jamesville is now 8-0 in the Beaufort-Hyde-Martin Conference and 15-2 overall. They were to face Roanoke on Saturday on the road, then host Chocowinity on Tuesday.

Pitt Net Event Set

The Greenville Tennis Club is sponsoring the first Pitt County Tennis Tournament on May 17-21.

The tournament is open to any Pitt County resident, regardless of whether he is a member of the Greenville Tennis Club or not.

Competition will be in Men's single and doubles, and in women's singles and doubles. The tournament will be played at the tennis courts adjoining Minges Coliseum on the East Carolina University campus.

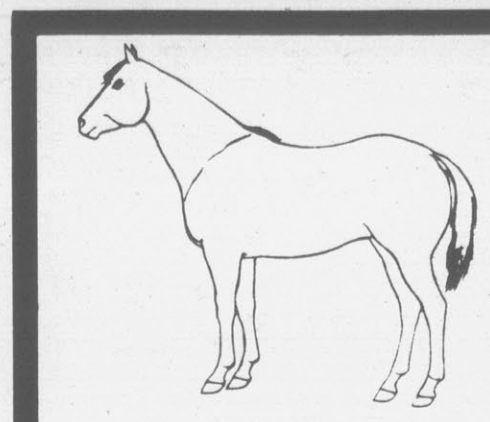

Entry blanks are available at the Greenville Recreation Department and from local sporting goods stores. They may also be obtained by contacting John Eatman, 203 N. Harding St., Greenville, 752-8996.

"It is hoped that this event will prove popular enough to be expanded in future years, and become an annual event with additional categories of competition," Eatman said.

Rose Sets Sights On Musial's Mark

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

Pete Rose has so many hits it would make Murder, Inc., jealous... and now he has a contract out on Stan Musial.

"I'm going to get 3,630 hits. I've already got my mind set on it," Rose said Friday night after becoming the 13th player in major league history to reach the lofty 3,000-hit plateau.

Musial is third on baseball's all-time hit list with 3,630, most in the National League.

Friday night's other NL action was overshadowed by Rose's achievement, but the Los Angeles Dodgers downed the Pittsburgh Pirates 7-2, the Philadelphia Phillies whipped the New York Mets 9-4, the San Diego Padres edged the St. Louis Cardinals 2-1 and the Atlanta Braves beat the Houston Astros 5-2. The San Francisco Giants and Chicago Cubs were rained out.

It didn't have quite the impact of Babe Ruth calling his shot in the World Series, especially since Rose's Cincinnati Reds lost to the Montreal Expos 4-3, but the 37-year-old third baseman predicted what was coming when he asked home plate umpire Jerry Dale to check the baseball before coming to bat in the fifth inning.

"I knew it was going to be in the Hall of Fame and I wanted to be able to read Chub Feeney's name on it," Rose said, referring to the NL president. "I told Jerry, 'Get me a good ball because I'm going to get a knock.'"

Rose then jumped on a fast ball from Steve Rogers and lined a clean single to left field for the milestone 3,000th hit. Two innings earlier he got No. 2,999 with a high chopper that Rogers was unable to handle.

The almost 38,000 fans were standing even before Rose, a local boy, came to the plate at Cincinnati's Riverfront Stadium in the fifth inning. And when he singled, they stood and cheered for a full five minutes.

After the game, about half the crowd stayed to listen to a radio interview with Rose that was piped throughout the stadium.

"You people really got me going," Rose said. "You fans have been so great to me, I'm glad I could get it here and get it over with."

"With a couple of strong seasons in the next two-three years I can do it," Rose said. "With 162 games, you've got to have a goal, you've got to have personal things to keep you going."

Dodgers 7, Pirates 2

Dusty Baker slammed a two-run homer as Los Angeles jumped on Bert Blyleven for five runs and six hits in the first inning and coasted behind Burt Hooton's seven-hit pitching. The inning included Bill Russell's single, a double by Reggie Smith, Steve Garvey's sacrifice fly and a run-scoring single by Rick Monday before Baker homered. Lee Lacy then singled, advanced on a wild pitch and scored on Jerry Grote's single.

Phillies 9, Mets 4

Rookie Jim Morrison socked three hits and drove in a run, Mike Schmidt homered and Greg Luzinski picked up two RBI with a grounder and a double to lead Philadelphia to its fifth triumph in the last six games. Leading 2-1, the Phillies kayoed Nino Espinosa with a five-run fifth inning, triggered by Schmidt's fifth home run of the season.

Braves 5, Astros 2

Pitcher Tommy Boggs belted his first major league home run and also recorded his first National League victory. He worked seven innings, allowing five hits, before being relieved by Buddy Jay Solomon. Atlanta broke a 2-2 tie with two runs in the sixth. Dale Murphy walked and was trapped off first but made it to second when no one covered for Houston. Rod Gilbreath doubled to score Murphy and Pat Rockett followed with a run-scoring single.

Padres 2, Cardinals 1

San Diego's Mike Champion singled home a run in the second inning and Oscar Gamble tripled home another in the third while Randy Jones hurled eight strong innings. Jones needed help from Rollie Fingers in the ninth after Keith Hernandez opened with a double. The veteran relief ace retired Ted Simmons on a fly ball and struck out Jerry Morales and Roger Freed to end the game.

Bear Grass Slips By Bath

BEAR GRASS — Bear Grass High School kept its title hopes alive in the Beaufort-Hyde-Martin race with a 2-1 victory over Bath High School Friday night.

The Pirates of Bath got their lone run first, scoring in the third for a short lead. David Waters walked and Wayne Waters singled. Pete Lee then reached on an error, scoring David Waters.

The Bears came back to score two runs without lifting the bats off their shoulders. Joe Harrison, Dwayne Baker and Jackie Harrison all walked, loading the bases. Walks followed to William Roberson and David Bowen, forcing in Harrison and Baker for the 2-1 lead that held the rest of the way.

Frank Hawkins had two hits and Wayne Waters, three for Bath. Bear Grass got only three hits, all scattered.

The victory raised the Bear Grass record to 4-2 in league play and 4-9 overall. They play host to Aurora on Tuesday.

Charges Denied

Athletic Director Bill Cain has denied charges that East Carolina University discriminates against athletic programs for women and does not provide adequate funds for them.

He said four women and one man, all students at ECU, will meet with university officials next week to plan a hearing on the accusations.

"We have no intention of depriving any program of funds it is entitled to," Cain said Friday. He said each sport is considered on an individual basis.

She said women's sports receive about $58,500 of approximately $290,000 raised from student fees for the athletic program even though 55.1 percent of the students are women.

"Since there are more women, we are entitled to at least a larger share," Miss Pendley said. "We should be able to get half of the fees."

She said the athletic department has a budget of about $1.4 million.

Cain refused to divulge figures on the athletic department's budget, saying the information will be presented during the grievance process.

Under a federally mandated grievance procedure, the complaint will be heard by a three-member committee made up of representatives of the students, the administration and a third party. The panel will make recommendations to the university.

Miss Pendley said the grievance alleges that women's programs are not given equal consideration in provision of supplies and equipment; game and practice schedules; travel and per diem allowances; locker room, practice and competitive facilities; assignment and salaries of coaches; publicity; and athletic scholarships.

Pete Not Ready For Hall Of Fame

By NORM CLARKE
AP Sports Writer

CINCINNATI (AP) — Pete Rose wasn't ready for Hall of Fame talk.

"I'm not through yet," said the Cincinnati Reds' star after his latest milestone — a testimony to his toughmindedness.

With two singles off Montreal's Steve Rogers, baseball's all-time switch-hitter reached the 3,000 hit mark, a feat achieved by only 12 other major leaguers. Nine of them are already in the Hall of Fame and the other three — Henry Aaron, Willie Mays and Al Kaline — are surefire selections.

But Rose, 37, preferred talking about more seasons and more hits after 37,823 fans rocked Riverfront Stadium with standing ovations.

His most immediate goal?

"Another divisional title and a world championship. Winning the World Series two years in a row is still the greatest satisfaction," said the 11-time All-Star.

One golden milestone burns inside him: Stan Musial's National League record of 3,630.

"With a couple of strong seasons in the next 2-3 years, I can do it," said Rose, who has nine 200-hit seasons in his last 15 seasons. He and Musial both reached the 3,000-hit plateau in their 16th years.

The evening ended on a low note for Rose, who was plainly embarrassed to be interviewed on radio at home plate after the 4-3 loss to Montreal.

"Here at Cincinnati, we don't want to be on 'Star of the Game' if we lose," he said.

A day earlier, Rose predicted he would get the historic hit Friday night so he "wouldn't upstage the Kentucky Derby." Then, after getting his first hit — a high chopper back to the mound in the third inning — he called his shot in the fifth.

"The man knew he was going to get it," said Rogers, who scattered six hits while striking out 10.

Approaching the plate, he asked home plate umpire Jerry Dale to inspect the baseball.

"I knew it was going to be in the Hall of Fame and I wanted it to be clean. I wanted to be able to read Chub Feeney's name on it," he said, referring to the National League president, whose name is stamped on game balls.

"The longer they cheered, the more choked up I got. It was a great feeling, something you can't explain. I was close to tears."

At first base, he was bear-hugged by Tony Perez, a long-time teammate who was traded to Montreal two years ago.

"I felt like I was him. I wanted to be here when it happened," said Perez. Rose's Cincinnati teammates swarmed on the field with congratulations.

Rogers felt no shame. "Somebody gave up 2,998 before me. It wasn't any big challenge to me. Beating a powerhouse like the Reds is the challenge."

Rampants Defeated

ROCKY MOUNT — Rocky Mount High School gained a 6-3 victory in tennis over the Rose High School Rampants Friday afternoon.

Fred Matney and Brian Kilcoyne picked up the only wins for Rose, both winning their singles matches, and combining for a doubles victory.

Summary:

Bob Allsbrook (RM) defeated David Daniel, 6 4, 6 1.
Cliff Barnes ( ) defeated John Farley, 6 3, 6 3.

Chargers Top Conley

LITTLEFIELD — Ayden-Grifton's girls' softball team gained a 14-7 victory over D.H. Conley Friday to pull into a tie for second place in the Eastern Carolina Conference standings.

Both teams have now lost twice in the conference, and trail Greene Central, which has only one loss.

Ayden-Grifton scored three times in the bottom of the first, but Conley came back with five in the second. The Chargerettes tied it up with two in the third, and both teams scored twice in the fifth.

Ayden-Grifton then pushed over seven in the bottom of the sixth to take the win.

Marie Lewis led the Ayden-Grifton hitting with four, while Shanda Brock, Pam Fulford, Irene Lewis, Sandi Fulford and Karen Haseley each had two. Irene Lewis had a two-run homer in the fifth.

Pam Manning, Lori Garrish and Tammy Streeter each had two hits for Conley.

THE PLANNED SALTWATER fishing club mentioned in this column a couple of weeks ago has gained an excellent response, according to Bob Fowle, who came up with the idea.

Fowle said the club will be named the "Greenville Saltwater Fishing Club" and has its first meeting scheduled for next Saturday, May 10, at 7 p.m. at Parker's Restaurant. The meeting will feature a dutch treat dinner.

Preliminary plans call for bi-monthly club meetings during the peak fishing season, Fowle said, to organize fishing trips and exchange information and tips. Fowle said interest ranged from trout to blue marlin fishermen.

Interested persons can attend the meeting Saturday night or contact Fowle at 756-3176.

Family Camping Month

Governor James Hunt has proclaimed the month of May as Family Camping Month in North Carolina and the state's Department of Natural Resources and Community Development is taking the opportunity to encourage camping in N.C.

There are more than 300 private campgrounds scattered from the mountains to the coast in North Carolina and over 60 public ones. The total number of campsites is somewhere over 20,000.

Three of the four National Forests in North Carolina accomodate campers, as do 18 of the over 30 State Parks, and both of the designated Wilderness Areas. The state boasts of the most-visited National Park — The Great Smoky Mountain — the most-traveled National Parkway — The Blue Ridge — and the first National Seashore — Cape Hatteras. All have camping facilities.

Regardless of the degree of altitude sought — from the mountains sea level to the ocean — the camper in North Carolina will never be far away from historic exhibits or structures, museums, attractions, and an infinite view of nature.

The Department of Commerce is currently distributing a booklet on camping in the state, "North Carolina Outdoors". The guide provides information on both the public and private campgrounds available in North Carolina and is available by writing the Travel Development Section, Department of Commerce, Raleigh, N. C. 27611.

Non-Game Tax Proposed

A new non-game bill calling for excise taxes to fund a national non-game conservation program has been introduced in the U. S. House of Representatives. The bill is identical to a bill introduced in the House earlier, except for the program-funding mechanism.

Instead of providing for authorizations from the general treasury, the most-current bill calls for an 11 per cent excise tax on birdseed, feeders, baths, and certain types of binoculars and spotting scopes.

The bill is similar to the Pittman-Robertson Act, which taxes sporting arms and ammunition. It is expected to raise between $20 and $30 million annually to fund non-game wildlife management and research.

Mariner
Is Here To Take On Eastern N.C. Waters.

Buy a rugged, dependable Mariner outboard.
Mariner may be new to America, but in the past several years they've built a reputation for trouble-free performance all over the world. In the remote waters of places like Venezuela, Asia, and Australia where an engine failure can be a lot more serious than unexpected paddle to the dock.
Mariners run longer because they're designed very simply and built very strong. Built for easy starting and hundreds of hours of hard running without major tune-ups or serious service.
Mariners are available in 14 models from 2 to 140 horsepower. Before we sell them, we thoroughly test them. Just to get to your dealer, they had to be good.
Summer is far too short to own an engine that sits in the shop. Own a Mariner instead. They're built for boating, not breaking.

Amazin' A's Win Fifth Straight Game

By ALEX SACHARE
AP Sports Writer

John Johnson may be too young to be nervous about pitching in the major leagues.

"I just go out and do it," says the Oakland A's sparkling 21-year-old rookie. "I have no fear of getting beaten."

Johnson, one of seven players obtained by Oakland when it dealt Vida Blue to the San Francisco Giants this spring, pitched a four-hitter Friday night to lead the amazin' A's to their fifth consecutive victory, a 5-1 decision over the Detroit Tigers.

The matchup of the American League's surprising division leaders drew a paid attendance of 14,612, the second-largest crowd of the season at Oakland Coliseum.

Johnson, a 6-foot-2 left-hander who was 27-4 in the minor leagues the past two years, has picked up right where he left off. He's 3-1 with a brilliant 1.19 earned run average, helping the A's to a 19-5 start, the best record in the majors.

Elsewhere in the American League, the California Angels blanked the Cleveland Indians 5-0, the Baltimore Orioles edged the Minnesota Twins 2-1, the New York Yankees topped the Texas Rangers 5-2, the Milwaukee Brewers whipped the Kansas City Royals 9-0 and the Seattle Mariners beat the Toronto Blue Jays 9-1. Chicago at Boston was rained out.

Angels 5, Indians 0

Nolan Ryan, who had a two-hitter last time out, pitched the sixth one-hitter of his career and struck out 12 in shackling the Indians. The only hit — spoiling his bid for a record fifth no-hitter — was a single sliced to the opposite field, just inside the third base line, by .193 hitter Duane Kuiper in the sixth inning.

Orioles 2, Twins 1

Baltimore's Mike Flanagan and Minnesota's Geoff Zahn were locked in a scoreless pitching duel until the Orioles tallied a pair of runs in the eighth on a run-scoring double by Billy Smith, who later scored on an infield single by Gary Roenicke.

Yankees 5, Rangers 2

The Yankees stretched their winning streak to five games and snapped Texas' seven-game winning streak as Thurman Munson had three hits and drove in two runs. RBI singles by Munson, Reggie Jackson and Chris Chambliss in the third inning broke it open.

Brewers 9, Royals 0

Mike Caldwell pitched a four-hitter to hand Kansas City its fourth straight defeat and its first shutout in 119 games. Sixto Lezcano sluggled a pair of home runs, driving in three runs, and Ben Oglivie slammed a two-run homer to lead Milwaukee's attack.

Mariners 9, Blue Jays 1

Steve Braun drove in four runs for Seattle while Rick Honeycutt stopped Toronto on four hits. Honeycutt yielded an unearned run in the first inning but then handcuffed the Blue Jays, retiring the final 19 batters in posting his first complete game in the majors.

Thompson Leads Nugget Victory

DENVER (AP) — David Thompson hit three crucial jump shots in the final three minutes and the Denver Nuggets overcame foul problems to defeat the Seattle SuperSonics 116-107 Friday night in the opener of their National Basketball Association playoff series.

Game 2 in the Western Conference finals will be played here Sunday, with the next two contests scheduled for Seattle.

The Sonics, who fell behind by as much as 13 points early in the second half, kept things close by hitting 47 of 62 shots from the free throw line.

Thompson was called for goal tending at the opposite end of the court, but then hit two straight field goals and tacked on a free throw to give the Nuggets a 109-100 edge with 1:34 left.

Seconds later, Bobby Wilkerson took a pass from Thompson and hit a stuff shot. Another basket and free throw by Wilkerson helped pad Denver's lead to 114-103 with 31 seconds left.

Denver center Dan Issel, who scored eight of the Nuggets first 12 points in opening up the big third-quarter lead, paced Denver with 25 points despite picking up his fourth foul midway through the quarter and his fifth foul with six minutes to play.

76ers-Bullets

Meanwhile in Landover, Md., the Philadelphia 76ers wowed the fans with a pregame dunk show and then flexed their awesome muscles when play began.

But the underdog Washington Bullets, playing a team game which even the 76ers recognized, scored a 123-108 victory Friday night and took a 2-1 lead in the National Basketball Association's Eastern Conference finals.

The 76ers shot only 37.8 percent while being outscored 48-34 in field goals, but dropped in 40 of 55 free throws. Even without center Wes Unseld, who missed his second game with a sprained ankle, the Bullets were outrebounded only 48-44.

Qualifying, Practice Times Make Rest Worry About Cale

TALLADEGA, Ala. (AP) — Cale Yarborough proved in qualifying for Sunday's Winston 500 Grand National stock car race that he had the fastest car. But what about after qualifying? What about the race?

Veteran drivers say qualifying doesn't always mean as much as the last practice session before the race.

That's when the teams make their final adjustments. The special "qualifying setups" are gone. The cards are on the table.

Since Yarborough was also quickest after practice ended Friday afternoon, competitors now believe they have legitimate cause for concern.

"Cale's half a second faster than anyone else out there," said Herb Nab, Yarborough's former crew chief. "He's running about like Benny Parsons was here last year."

"When Cale and Benny were hooked up together out there today (Friday) somebody got the watch on 'em at 194.6 miles an hour," Nab said. "Not too many can keep up with that kind of pace."

Yarborough won the pole position at an average speed of just under 192 mph; it's not unusual, however, for cars running together to push themselves along at faster speeds than they were able to qualify at while running alone.

Yarborough notes that his Oldsmobile has been running very well all season, despite the fact the only race he's won in nine previous starts was the season opener.

"It's just been a combination of circumstances that have kept us from winning. I feel the car has been capable of winning most every race," he said.

For instance, Yarborough was leading the Virginia 500 two weeks ago when his car caught fire during a refueling stop.

"Things like that," Yarborough said, "are what we hope to have behind us Sunday."

If they are, it's a good bet Yarborough will finally have his first career victory at Alabama International Motor Speedway, one of the few tracks on the Winston Cup circuit where the two-time national champion has yet to win. Sunday's race is scheduled to start at 1 p.m. CDT.

Today's schedule includes a 300-mile sportsman race.

Central America Adventure On Pan Am Highway

By CAROL COOK

MEXICO CITY (UPI) — There are faster and easier ways to drive from Laredo, Texas to Panama City, but the 3,000 mile long Pan American Highway is still one of the most picturesque and adventurous routes.

The Mexican and Central American section of the highis part of the 12,000 mile Pan American Highway System, which will link Canada with the southern tip of South America when the missing Darien Gap segment between Panama and Colombia is finally completed.

Work on the route began in 1925, after the First Pan American Highway Congress approved the project, brainchild of the First International Congress of American States, which was the forerunner of the Organization of American States.

The route runs through the desert of northern Mexico through the precipitous Sierra Madre Oriental down to Mexico City, then south to the Indian country of southern Mexico and Guatemala, and through Central America's tropical farmlands to the Panama Canal.

The Mexican segment of the highway was financed and built entirely by Mexico. The United States paid two thirds of the cost in the poorer Central American countries and helped with the construction.

Driving it — without sightseeing stops — takes about 15 days. All of the highway is paved, but much of it is mountainous, and flooding during the rainy season sometimes makes driving treacherous.

The 756 miles from the Texas border at Laredo to Mexico City can be driven in about 19 hours, or two and a half days. Motorists take Mexico highway 85 from Laredo to Monterrey — Mexico's second largest industrial center — and then start climbing through the spectacular cliffs of the Sierra Madre to Ciudad Victoria.

Average speed on this road, famous for its hairpin curves, is about 35 miles an hour. Drivers less interested in mountain views prefer the newer highway 57, which cuts at least six hours off driving time to Mexico City.

Those who stay on the Pan American road can branch off it close to Mexico City to visit the ancient Toltec city of Tula or the Pyramids of San Juan Teotihuacan, or tour the silver mining center of Pachuca on their way in to the crowded capital.

South of Mexico City, the Pan American Highway becomes Mexico Highway 190. It runs through the colonial city of Puebla, famed for its tile-domed churches. Then it climbs to 8,000 feet and dips south to Oaxaca, where the descendants of the Zapotec and Mixtec Indians still turn out some of Mexico's most colorful textiles and pottery.

Near Oaxaca, archaeology buffs can visit the archaeological zones of Mitla and Monte Alban before climbing into the Sierra Madre del Sur for more rugged driving down to the tropical Isthmus of Tehuantepec. Then it winds up into chilly peaks again to San Cristobal las Casas, and the surrounding Mayan Indian villages.

Crossing the Guatemalan border, motorists enter the Rio Selegua Canyon, called El Tapon, meaning "the plug." Plagued with landslides, this was once the Pan American highway's worst bottleneck, and remained unpaved for many years. It has still not been completed to its full width. Motorists are advised to check on conditions before crossing the border. In bad weather, the Pacific Highway provides an easy alternate route.

After emerging from El Tapon, more mountainous driving — with landslides a possibility during the May to September rainy season — is in store as the road climbs from Huehuetenango into the Sierra Madre. It reaches 9,750 feet between the cities of San Cristobal and Nahuala.

Guatemala is home to some four million Mayan Indians who still wear the colorful costumes of their ancestors and live much as they did when the Spaniards conquered them five centuries ago.

Travellers on the Pan American Highway can branch off it visit their villages along the shores of Lake Atitlan and the larger Indian centers of Chichicastenango and Quetzaltenango.

Just a few miles from Guatemala City is the Guatemala's colonial capital, Antigua, being restored after the devastating earthquake of 1976.

From Guatemala City to San Salvador, capital of El Salvador, the smallest and most thickly populated of the Central American nations, is a distance of just 108 miles.

El Salvador was the first country in Latin America to finish paving its section of the Pan American highway, which runs through gentle hills covered with coffee plantations. The Cuscutlan Bridge across the Lempa River is the longest suspension bridge in Central America.

From San Salvador it is less than 90 miles to the Honduran border, closed since the 1969 war between El Salvador and Honduras. Citizens of other countries may cross, but there may be delays.

The Honduras section of the highway — also called the Inter-American Highway in its Central American section — is only 94 miles long. To get to the capital, Tegucigalpa, motorists leave the highway for a 57 mile trip from the Jicaro Galan junction.

Driving from there to Managua, capital of Nicaragua, the route runs by a several recently active volcanoes. Some of the sections of the highway are being rebuilt and may be treacherous during the rainy season.

From Managua to San Jose, Costa Rica, the highway skirts Lake Nicaragua and more volcanoes. It crosses the Continental Divide about 11 miles from San Jose, Costa Rica, and motorists can see huge earthen dikes thrown up to control mud slides from the Irazu Volcano's eruptions in 1963-65.

From the Costa Rican border to Panama City, a distance of about 300 miles, motorists pass banana plantations and lush tropical vegetation before reaching the Panama Canal. Crossing the Canal on the Thatcher Bridge in Balboa, the highway ends 34 miles later at Chepo in the Darien Gap, the uncompleted link with Colombia.

Pupils Are Entertained

The children at Belvoir Elementary School were entertained May 4 with a spring program, presented by various children, grades kindergarden through fifth, under the direction of Miss Kathy Jennings.

The program opened with the kindergarden classes' singing, "I'm Not Small," "ABC Nursery Rhyme Song," and "Billy Boy."

Eight first graders did a creative dance to "Little Duck."

Three songs, "Magic Penny," "Supercalifragilisticexpiadocious," and "America, the Beautiful," were sung by the third grade.

Over $98 Billion In Private Foreign Investments

By JOHN F. SIMS
UPI Business Writer

NEW YORK (UPI) — Foreign investment in American manufacturing companies is up and increasing. But the invasion of Arab petrodollars that had been expected, or feared, has not occurred.

No. It is the Old World of western Europe that finds the New World's investment climate so attractive.

Latest estimates put direct foreign investment in U.S. business at more than $33 billion. The Commerce Department qualifies direct investment as being ownership of 10 percent or more of voting stock in a company.

But much of that investment is longstanding and sometimes surprising.

Who would think, for instance, that the fashion house of Anne Klein is wholly owned by a Japanese company, as it is?

The direct investment does not include the many foreign billions invested on the New York Stock Exchange and in Treasury issues.

The overall total of pivate foreign investment, according to the Commerce Department, is about $98.1 billion.

The surplus petrodollars that came out of the quadrupling of crude oil prices in 1973 are here, but most of them are in passive investments.

David Toufic Mizrahi, editor of MidEast Report, told UPI that Middle East investment in the United States is extensive.

"It is very large, running in the billions," he said. "According to recent estimates, investment in U.S. Treasury bonds and notes as well as stocks totals about $7 billion.

"In addition, bank deposits exceed $41 billion. These are all government investments. The extent of private investment is more difficult to determine, but it is quite large."

Mizrahi said the main investors are Saudi Arabia, Iran and Kuwait — "They have confidence in the American economy."

But he discounted fears they might manipulate their investments to attain political goals.

"It is possible, but unlikely," he said. "They can dump their stocks on the market, causing a chain reaction, but they have been pretty conservative economically."

In any case, Mizrahi said, the United States has an effective counter-weapon.

"Don't forget, the Arabs fear that the United States might impound — nationalize, if you will — their investment or seize their property," he said.

According to investigations by congressional subcommittees, foreign central banks currently hold more than $62 billion worth of Treasury notes and bonds. Of this, about $13 billion is being held by Mideast oil producing countries.

According to the Conference Board, a business research organization, the number of announced foreign investments in the United States last year was a record 274, up from 254 in 1976 and 161 in 1975. Dollar figures were announced for 150 of the 1977 investments and totaled $2.9 billion.

West Germany accounted for 53 of the foreign investments with Canada a close second making 49 new investments. Britain accounted for 37 investments and Japan for 36.

Most of the investments involved acquisition of existing firms and plants.

In recent years, for instance, France's Societe Imetal paid $210 million to acquire 67 percent of Copperweld Corp., a Pittsburgh-based specialty steel manufacturer.

Sandoz Ltd., of Switzerland, acquired Northrup King and Co., an agricultural chemical producer in Minneapolis, for $190 million.

David Bauer, an economist at the Conference Board, explained: "The increase in foreign investment last year was only partially due to the weakness of the dollar and a soft stock market.

"A more fundamental reason is the desire of foreign firms to acquire already existing marketing, technological and administrative expertise. This is reflected in the large number of 1977 takeovers in which U.S. management was retained.

"There is another factor as well: many foreign firms believe economic growth in the United States will be more rapid than in other major countries over the next several years," Bauer said.

Another reason often cited by foreign investors is the businessmen's fear of socialist policies restricting their activities in such countries as West Germany, Britain and Italy.

A Bank of America survey pointed out advantages to the United States that arise from the foreign investments.

"Such investment expands the domestic economic base," it said. "By year-end 1974 it had created 1.1 million jobs and $11.4 billion in wages within the domestic economy ...

"It can assist the U.S. balance of payments. Presently, about 25 percent of U.S. exports are attributable to subsidiaries and affiliates of foreign-owned companies," it said.

The foreign investment in America, extensive as it may seem, still does not compare with the more than $50 billion U.S. companies have invested overseas.

Projections for the future point to still more foreign investment. Economists predict the United States will lead the industrialized nations of the world in growth of the next five years.

The recent decline in the value of the dollar has made investment more attractive, to be sure, but there are other reasons.

— The United States remains the biggest single market in the West.

— U.S. businessmen complain about interference from regulatory agencies but Europeans often find them less restrictive than their own home-grown variety.

— U.S. labor costs, after being the highest in the industrialized west for years, now are competitive or even lower than those in Canada, Sweden, West Germany, Belgium and Holland.

Real estate and farmland have become prime areas for investment. Jack Shaffer of mortgage bankers Sonnenblick-Goldman estimates foreigners spent $1 billion on U.S. land and properties in 1977.

Proclaims Nat'l Hospital Week

"Pitt County Memorial Hospital wishes Pitt County well this week and all other 51 weeks of the year," says Jack Richardson, Director, in announcing this week as National Hospital Week.

Mayor Percy R. Cox has designated it National Hospital Week in Greenville, also.

National Hospital Week is an annual observance sponsored by the American Hospital Association and its member hospitals to show appreciation for the work done by hospital employees and to encourage hospital-community interaction.

This year's theme is "Hospitals Wish You Well."

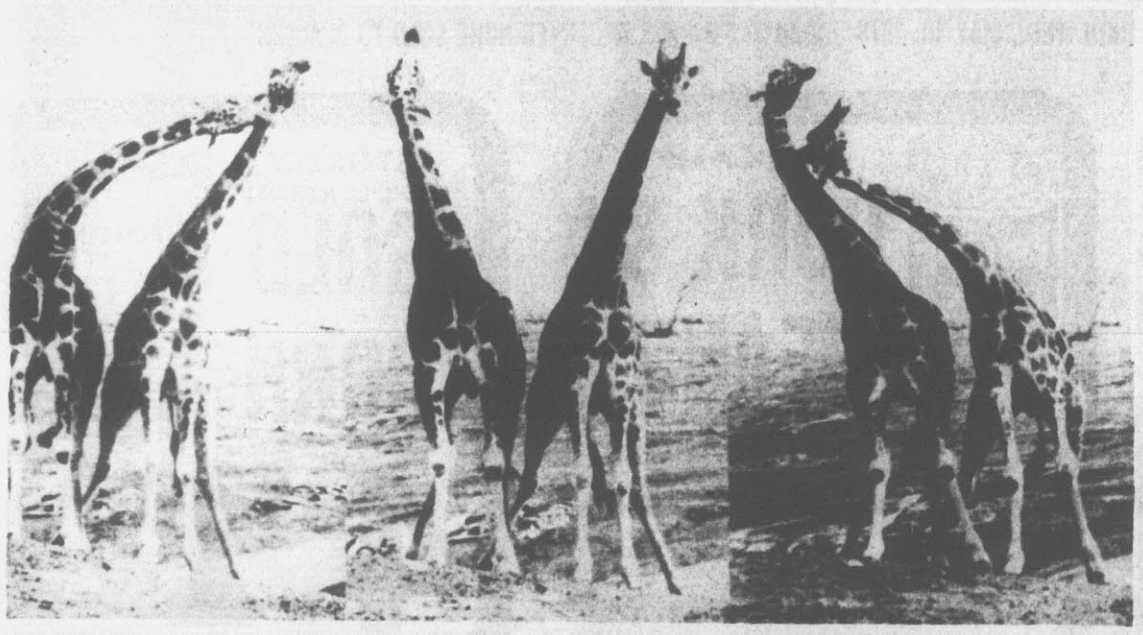

"We'd like to make this an occasion to remind people that good health doesn't just happen — it takes effort," Richardson said. "We hope that National Hospital Week will signal the need to change unhealthy lifestyles — smoking, eating or drinking to excess, getting too little rest or exercise, or not having the routine medical care recommended by one's doctor. National Hospital Week is an appropriate time to start doing what one can to stay out of the hospital."

Robt. Strauss, Presidential Jawbone

By ARNOLD SAWISLAK
UPI Senior Editor

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Bob Strauss is the Don Rickles of American politics. Nothing gives him more pleasure than to greet an old friend with some such greeting as "You're doing a damn fine job, despite what everyone says."

This is the man the United States sends to places like Geneva and Tokyo to negotiate the complex and immensely important issues of international trade. And, by all accounts, he's doing a damn fine job despite what anyone thought when Jimmy Carter picked him for it.

Testimony to that comes from Carter himself in Straussian terms. After Strauss returned from Japan with an agreement better than many thought was possible, the president was quoted as telling the cabinet "Bob Strauss brought home a C-minus trade agreement which he has talked up to an A-plus all around town."

Now Carter has chosen Strauss to be his "jawbone" in trying to keep business and labor from aggravating inflation. On the basis of his track record to date, this would seem to be a good choice. If Strauss does anything well, it is persuading people to do things they really don't want to.

During the four years (1972-76) that Robert Schwarz Strauss was chairman of the Democratic National Committee, political reporters tried to explain what makes this flamboyant Texas lawyer-banker tick. Since Carter appointed him Special Representative for Trade Negotiations with the rank of ambassador last year, diplomatic and economic correspondents have taken up the challenge.

The consensus appears to be that Strauss is one of those immensely bright and hyperactive people who always surfaces when a mean job needs doing and who seems to require little reward beyond the undivided attention and unqualified adoration of everyone around them.

Strauss' work in getting the Democrats to pull up their socks after the McGovern disaster of 1972 sometimes is described in terms usually reserved for such events as the Miracle of the Loaves.

Actually, the decline and fall of Richard Nixon and the opportunity that presented to put a Democrat in the White House probably contributed more to the Democrats' 1976 unity than any single thing Strauss did. But it was the chairman, who replaced McGovern-selected Jean Westwood by only a handful of votes in the winter of 1972, who kept the party together enough to profit from the Republican misfortune.

Strauss arrived on the scene sensitized to the charges that the Democratic Party had been subverted by an overdose of elitism: New Politics reformers claimed old-line bosses had frozen out the rank-and-file; political professionals and elected officials complained that amateur do-gooders and overeducated theoreticians had driven practical politics out of the party.

So instead of trying to circle the wagons, Strauss opened the circle. He brought entirely new power blocs into the party's ruling councils: governors, mayors, congressional leaders, liberal labor leaders, political scientists and representatives of George Wallace's then-feared political operation.

Once he got this mix together, Strauss was able to lead because no group could dominate. He used his position to force them all to face a reality that had been lost in all the ideological squabbling — that a political party has to win elections to survive.

As Nixon's troubles mounted, Strauss' argument made increasing good sense to the Democratic leaders. And they quit fighting long enough to nominate and elect a president for the first time in eight years.

Strauss gave no indication after the election that he wanted a plum out of the freshly-baked election pie. He was asked, but claimed no spoils and none were offered. After the inauguration, he turned over the national committee to former Gov. Kenneth Curtis of Maine and returned to private law practice.

But as comfortable as life in the firm of Akin, Gump, Strauss, Hauer and Feld may be, Strauss, in the words of his long time secretary, Vera Murray, "missed the action."

Two months in private life and he was back in harness as the president's trade representative, so proud of his ambassadorship that he bragged, in the super-Texan hyberbole he loves: "Of course I love this 'Your Excellency'' stuff. I even make Helen (his wife) stand up when I walk into the room."

The job Strauss took is not exactly a high visibility Washington post (William Eberle and Frederick Dent were his predecessors). Those who had watched Strauss operate in the political spotlight wondered if he could endure the shadows of economic diplomacy.

But as it turned out, Strauss was stepping into a high profile situation: trade talks with Japan at a time when the United States was spending $14 billion more a year on Japanese steel, cars, motorcycles, TV sets and the like than that country was buying in U.S. food, lumber, coal and other goods.

Strauss adapted political tactics to trade diplomacy, keeping clear of the lengthy and tedious technical discussions (for which he had little experience and less patience) and swooping in at critical times to push the American case.

In the Japanese negotiations, he played the hard-nosed bargainer: while State, Treasury and Federal Reserve officials took the soft line, Strauss, his face reddening, declared the initial Japanese offers were "totally unacceptable." For backup, he called in Senate Finance Committee Chairman Russell Long, D-La., who was quoted in a recent article as bluntly telling the Japanese "if they wanted import quotas on cars and television sets, we could get 'em in a week."

These tactics scared some administration officials and even impelled Carter to ask Strauss if he was pushing too hard. But Strauss hung tough and the Japanese agreed to buy $2 billion more in U.S. goods next year to help reduce the trade imbalance.

Strauss impressed the opposition: "He understands the problems on both sides," said Nobuhiro Ushiba, the head of the Japanese delegation. Strauss' reaction was typical — he still wasn't happy, but was going along on the promise of more headway next year.

He played an entirely different role in negotiations with Europe. Most European nations have the same kind trade problems as this country and were nervous about demands that might breach the protection that the Common Market now provides European farmers.

Strauss quietly assured the Europeans that agriculture — involving about 70 percent of the trade negotiations — was safe. This broke a logjam in the negotiations last fall and they are now moving ahead at a steady pace.

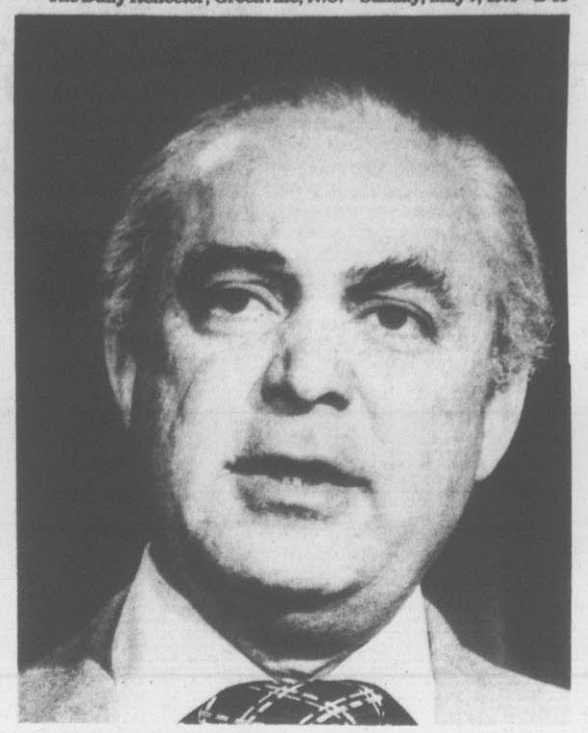

In all of this, Strauss was under the gun on Capitol Hill. There was a rising tide of congressional sentiment for protectionist legislation to keep steel, TVs, shoes and other imports out of the U.S. market.

It is likely that Strauss' greatest value to Carter is dealing with this problem: he has a knack for getting along with members of Congress that goes back to his early days as a demon Democratic fundraiser and the period when he was plastering the party back together after 1972.

Inasmuch as the economy of the United States is a part of a seamless worldwide web, Strauss also gets involved in domestic issues, such as the long coal strike.

Without a lot of fanfare he played a key behind-the-scenes role in getting mine owners, who in a number of cases just happened to be steel companies that have been trying through Strauss to get some import relief, to give ground when the coal negotiations hit a snag.

He also has been described as "a great telephone man" — a rare talent who can really negotiate, mediate and persuade almost as well on the phone as he can in face to face discussion. So it came as no surprise, when photographers were admitted to take pictures of the president and the labor secretary receiving the news of a tentative settlement, there was Ambassador Robert Strauss, in shirtsleeves, talking on the telephone.

ROBERT STRAUSS now has been chosen by President Carter to be his "jawbone" on anti-inflation policies. (UPI Photo)

JOINS FIRM

Greenville native Lee Folger III has joined Sterling Management Co. of Charlotte, an investment management firm with offices in the NCNB Plaza.

A Charlotte resident, Folger formerly was an assistant vice president and account executive with Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith for 15 years.

A 1958 graduate of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, Folger entered Wake Forest University law school in 1974 and received his JD degree in 1977. He practiced law in Fayetteville for eight months prior to joining Sterling.

PASSED $12 BILLION

Pilot Life Insurance Co. passed the $12 billion mark of life insurance in force during the first quarter of 1978, according to H. H. Howard, Greenville Home Service Division district manager, and H. L. Groome Jr., local Ordinary D ivision unit manager.

Insurance in force with the company has more than doubled since the end of the first quarter six years ago, they reported, jumping from $5.9 billion to slightly more than $12.1 billion.

Life insurance sales for the first quarter of 1978 for the company totaled $486.6 million, an increase of $32.1 million over the corresponding period of 1977.

CREDIT ROSE

According to weekly figures released by the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond, bank credit at 27 large commercial banks in the Fifth Federal Reserve District rose $54,370,000 in the week ended April 26, raising bank credit outstanding to a level of $24,104,104,000.

Net loans, adjusted — total loans exclusive of loans to other banks and loan valuation reserves — increased $72,883,000, while total investments decreased $18,513,000.

RECORD HIGHS

Black and Decker Manufacturing Co. announced that record highs in sales and net earnings were achieved for the second quarter and six month periods which ended March 26.

Sales for the quarter were up 14 percent to $246.5 million from $215.8 million last year, while net earnings rose 29 percent to $18.3 million from $14.2 million.

For the first six months, sales were $484.9 million, a 15 percent increase from $421.6 million in the previous year. Net earnings increased to $33.7 million, a 26 percent gain over the $26.8 million earned in the comparable period last year.

OFFICIAL NOMINATED

C. C. Hope Jr., vice chairman of the $1.6 billion deposit First Union National Bank of Charlotte, has been nominated for election as president-elect of the 14,000 member American Bankers Association.

Voting by the membership occurs at the annual ABA convention scheduled for Oct. 21 in Honolulu. Hope is the only candidate slated for the president-elect position.

EARNINGS INCREASE

Consolidated earnings from operations of Jefferson-Pilot Corp. for the first quarter of 1978 showed a gain of eight percent or six cents per share, it was reported by W. Roger Soles, president.

Jefferson-Pilot directors declared a quarterly dividend of 26 cents per share, an increase of 13 percent over the previous quarterly rate. The dividend will be payable on June 2 to shareholders of record at the close of business on May 12.

Combined first quarter earnings of Jefferson-Pilot's two life insurance subsidiaries — Jefferson Standard Life and Pilot Life — were reported at $17,107,000, three percent greater than for the first quarter of 1977.

CONVENTION QUALIFIER

Five members of Pilot Life Insurance Company's Greenville Home Service Division district qualified for participation in the company's 1978 convention held recently in Washington, D.C.

Some Ideas On Who Takes Wage Bite

By KRISTIN GOFF
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The White House "voluntary" wage and price restraint program, aimed at controlling inflation by persuading business and labor to do their part, has come up with some interesting ideas lately on who should be taking the wage bite.

Barry Bosworth, who as director of the Council on Wage and Price Stability is the president's chief anti-inflation jawboner, has suggested, for instance, that top corporate officers should be asked to to make sacrifices along with unions.

If they followed the suggested guideline of holding to a 5 percent increase in compensation this year, that would mean that Henry Ford II, chairman of Ford Motor Co., would have to toe the line at just $1,041,600 in 1978.

Steven J. Ross, the chairman of Warner Communications, would be limited to $1,039,500 if his salary and bonus increases were limited to just 5 percent of this year's compensation. And Harold S. Geneen, chairman of International Telephone & Telegraph Corp. would have to squeeze by on $1,035,300.

Business Week magazine, which annually surveys executive salaries, lists McCardell as the highest paid executive in the United States in 1977. McCardell collected $1,496,000 in 1977 but that included a $1 million bonus paid when he became president of International Harvester, switching from his former job as president of Xerox Corp.

Asking corporate executives to hold to a 5 percent limit on pay raises could get rather tricky, as the survey in Business Week's latest edition indicates. For instance, if stock options and other types of compensation are included, Ford, Ross and Geneen—who all fell into the $900,000 area in salary and bonuses for 1977—don't come out at the top of the heap in the listing of the most highly paid corporate officers.

Behind McCardell, the magazine lists Elton H. Rule, president of American Broadcasting Cos., as the second most highly paid executive. Including $584,000 in gains from exercising stock options, Rule collected $1,234,000 in 1977. The chairman of ABC, Leonard H. Goldenson, came in just a shade below that at $1,113,000. He was paid more but made just $313,000 on stock options.

While Bosworth promised to seek wage restraint from corporate executives and such professionals as doctors and dentists, where fees have been going up about 9 percent a year, he made it clear that the real success or failure of the administration's voluntary anti-inflation plan would depend on labor unions that represent millions of workers.

Among the most crucial, he said, would be the "high visibility" unions representing truckers, steel and auto workers and railroad employees. They would have to cut back on the 9 to 10 percent annual increases that have been in some contracts in recent years, he said.

"In my view, if these contracts again approach the range of 30 percent (over three years) we might as well forget talking about decelerating inflation anytime in the near future," he said in a speech to the American Newspaper Publishers Association this past week.

By comparison, Business Week reports that in companies that made a profit, top executive pay jumped 26.6 percent in 1977. But corporation heads had problems at firms that weren't profitable. Compensation declined 23.9 percent in those firms. Overall, the survey said, executive pay increased 12.4 percent in 1977.

While Bosworth was promising to carry the administration's wage-restraint efforts to the top of the income ladder, a former government official came up with some interesting candidates for the inflation sacrifice as well.

Arthur Burns, the former chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, suggested in a speech in Long Beach that the President and Congress take 10 percent pay cuts.

That would mean Carter's pay would be cut to just $180,000 and the average congressional paycheck would fall to $51,750.

In other business developments this past week:

—The unemployment rate dropped to 6 percent in April for the first time in 3½ years, the government reported. The Labor Department said the number of people who had jobs rose by 535,000, bringing the workforce to 93.8 million. But the government said about one quarter of the increase represented striking coal miners returning to work.

—Food prices continued to climb at a sharp pace at the wholesale level, and that is likely to mean increases at the grocery store within a fairly short time. The consumer goods sector of the wholesale price index climbed at a seasonally adjusted rate of 1.9 percent, up sharply from 0.8 percent the previous month. Overall wholesale prices of finished goods rose 1.3 percent, the largest jump in more than three years. But the Commerce Department said part of that was because prices of jewelry jumped sharply following a rise in gold prices in recent months.

—The Carter administration acknowledged that inflation looks worse this year than it originally thought. Charles Schultze, chairman of the Council of Economic Advisors, revised his estimates of inflation this year to 6¾ to 7 percent. Earlier, the White House estimate was for inflation in the 6 to 6¼ percent range.

—The U.S. merchandise trade deficit hit a record $11.2 billion in the first quarter, the government said. The trade figures, calculated on a balance-of-payments basis, were well over the previous $9.9 billion deficit in 1976. The Commerce Department said the rate of imports increased by 6.2 percent, or $2.46 billion, to $41.78 billion in the first three months of the year. Exports increased at a slower 3.9 percent rate, which in dollars amounted to a $1.15 billion rise to $30.58 billion.

THESE CITIZENS SUPPORT BEAT THE PEAK

And we're very grateful. The names below are just a few of the almost two thousand Greenville and Pitt County residents who have volunteered to help BEAT THE PEAK so that EVERYONE will benefit from reduced electric power costs.

We wish that space permitted us to list all of our BEAT THE PEAK volunteers because we very much appreciate the cooperation and support of our customers.

Thank you for making the first year of the BEAT THE PEAK program a big success.

Adopt-A-Pet

This part-Persian female is about a year old. She "took up" with a local couple recently and is being sought a good home by the Pitt County Humane Society.

Also being sought homes are an orange female Persian, another gray tabby Persian female; an orange and white male cat; and six puppies that will be large when they're grown.

A female Afghan dog has been found and is being boarded until her owner is located.

Anyone wishing to adopt or place an animal for adoption may call the Humane Society number, 758-PETS, which will be answered at Helen's Grooming World weekdays and from 3 to 6 p. m. Sundays. This is a message service and animals should not be brought to this business place, it was emphasized.

Oregon's Incentive To Save Energy

EDITOR'S NOTE — Oregon, long a leader in ecology, is moving forward on another vital front: energy conservation. The legislature has provided incentive to homeowners in low-interest loans and tax relief. Officials say it's one alternative to more power plants.

By ROBERT LOCKE
Associated Press Writer

SALEM, Ore. (AP) — Monty C. King is putting solar collectors on the roof to help meet hot water needs and is adding storm windows and some extra insulation to keep the warm air in and the winter wind out of his Salem home.

"I want to get out from under the electric company as soon as possible," King says. "They've got this new law and the money's available ... so that's how I'm getting it done. I wouldn't have had enough money otherwise."

King, a 28-year-old state employee and parttime college student, is financing the $3,000 project with a loan — at 5.9 percent interest — and should get back at least $125 in state tax credit. In addition, he says, "I'm expecting all this to pay for itself in less than 10 years" through reduced utility bills.

King is one of thousands of Oregonians who are cashing in on what state officials call the most comprehensive energy conservation program in the country. The package of nearly a dozen laws was approved by the 1977 Legislature and became fully effective last Oct. 4.

No one is predicting how much energy the program might save. But officials note that conserving energy adds to the pool of available power just as effectively as building new power plants. The biggest difference: conservation is cheaper, quicker, easier on the environment and takes nothing from dwindling energy supplies.

In addition to low-interest loans for residential energy projects, the laws also require utility companies to provide free home weatherization inspections, recommend insulation needs, estimate costs and help arrange contracting and financing.

The low-income elderly are given property tax or rent refunds to offset spriraling utility rates. Many also are being reimbursed for the full cost of insulating their homes.

Any homeowner may deduct from his state income tax bill 25 percent, up to $125, of the total cost of new insulation and other weatherization work.

And a half-dozen state agencies are linked into a Consumer Weatherization Protection Network to deal with consumer complaints, monitor advertising claims and oversee the insulation and solar energy industries.

Bill Sanderson of the Oregon Energy Department says about 25 tax credits were approved in the first six months for alternate energy systems, most of them solar.

A year ago, he says, "There were fewer than two dozen solar homes in the entire state."

A homeowner, with approval of the Energy Department, receives a tax credit of 25 percent of an investment in alternate energy, up to $1,000.

Rano Ellertson of Salem, a designer and distributor of solar equipment, says business is booming. "I can hardly believe it. It's really been building momentum."

Ellertson says most involves people who have been considering solar energy for years and "now that they're going to get some money back ... they're actually doing something about it."

The state revenue department says about 700 requests for weatherization tax credits were among the first batches of tax returns. The department says it has paid a total of $256,000 to 1,085 elderly residents who have taken advantage of the plan and almost 60,000 elderly have received a total of $3 million in refunds under the utility rate relief program. To qualify for the $50 refund, a resident must be 60 or older and have an annual household income of less than $5,000.

The public utility commissioner's office is setting guidelines to govern electric and gas utilities' part in the conservation program. The PUC's Al Jasso says most utilities "have their own conservation programs in operation right now and they're reacting positively to the whole thing."

Seattle Disco Has Jazz, Classic Fare

SEATTLE (AP) — The strains of Mozart's "Eine Kleine Nachtmusik" reverberate over a powerful sound system throughout the long narrow room.

Appreciative customers sip good wine and munch free cheese and crackers as Jim Wilke queues up another record in the sound booth.

"Welcome to Masterworks Theater," he jokes.

The response is a low, collective chuckle from the patrons of the Space Place Tavern, a discotheque which occasionally allows pirouettes and plies to replace the bump and hustle.

The run of the music mill at the Space Place is still the conventional disco fare, but on Tuesdays, Wilke plays jazz, and on Sundays, his two-hour program features classical music.

Co-owner Joe Canavan says his best beer and wine sales, next to the busy weekend nights, come during Wilke's offbeat shows. He says jazz and the classics have drawn some new dance customers to a disco that is among the city's largest and most unusual.

Seattle may not have the frenzy of New York or other major East Coast disco scenes, but there's probably as much variety.

The disco at Sunday's imposes a dress code, banning jeans and requiring sports jackets for men. Men and women dress to the nines there and at Vancouver's Discovery, where the waiting line on weekend nights can be an hour or more.

Manning-Mayo Vows Said In Afternoon Ceremony

ROCKY MOUNT — Miss Susan Kaye Mayo and Charles Harold Manning were united in marriage Saturday at 3 p.m. at the home of the bride's parents. The Rev. George A. Grissom officiated at the double ring ceremony.

Mrs. Dianne Mayo Quillen, pianist, and Mrs. Karyl Lu Mayo Batchelor, guitarist and soloist, presented the wedding music. Mrs. Benjamin F. Mayo directed the wedding.

Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roy O. Mayo of Rocky Mount, the bride graduated from the University of North Carolina at Wilmington last year. She is employed by Phillip Management Group, Greensboro.

The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Julus Harold Manning of Ayden. He is a 1974 graduate of the University of North Carolina at Wilmington and is employed by M. Hoffman, Inc.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. Miss Amy Batchelor, niece of the bride, was flower girl, and Miss Polly Estelle Mayo was her sister's maid of honor.

On Saturday at 11:30 a.m., a wedding luncheon was given at the Carlton House Restaurant. Hosting the luncheon for the wedding party and out-of-town guests were Mrs. Roy O. Mayo Sr., of Rocky Mount and Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Mayo of Savannah, Ga.

The attendant's luncheon was held on May 4 at the Batchelor's home in Stokes.

Mrs. Mary Cavney, state president, was to attend the meeting set for Goldsboro. Mrs. West, Mrs. Alice Moseley, Mrs. Margaret Angstadt and Commander and Mrs. Leon Evans were to attend from here.

Mrs. Mary Lucy Taylor, Americanism chairman, reported on the presentation of a flag to Third Street School. She was accompanied by Mrs. Margaret Brown, Mrs. Moseley and Mrs. West.

Officers nominated were: Mrs. Moseley, president; Mrs. Rosa Lee Williams, senior vice president; Mrs. Verna Whitehurst, junior vice president; Mrs. Brown, treasurer; Mrs. Myrtle Meeks, conductress; Mrs. West, chaplain; Mrs. Merle Austin, guard; Mrs. Taylor, three-year trustee; Mrs. Genes Boyd, secretary.

The auxiliary will send a child from O'Berry Center to Camp Caroline.

Mrs. Doris Harris reminded members to bring books and magazines to the next meeting as the auxiliary would be giving a birthday party at the VA Hospital, Fayetteville, in the future.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

I have always prided myself on the ability to live with my mistakes.

The list is rather extensive and includes an underachiever dog, white carpet in the living room which the underachiever dog thinks is snow, amber lamps in the bathroom that make me look sick when I am well, lawn furniture for which the canvas replacement is sold only in a country under siege, bed pillows that smell like a wet dog on a register, and a feathered wig that the saleswoman promised me was going to come into style next week (That was in '74).

Call it loyalty. Call it courage. Call it strength. Call it cheap. Whatever, I tough out what I buy. That includes a pair of tan play shoes.

They cost $24 ($5 more than I paid for my husband's wedding ring) and more than I ever paid for a pair of play shoes in my entire life. They had no heel, two straps of leather and a thin sole.

In the store they felt terrific. It's what I imagined heaven felt like when you ran barefoot through a cumulus cloud.

The first hour I had them on at home, my right toe turned red, then purple, and a blister appeared.

The second hour, the blister broke, became infected, and caused pain to shoot all the way to my hip.

We all know shoes are like horses that throw you. You get right back on them to let them know who is in command. I mounted those shoes every day for three months. Finally, one day my husband said, "Do your feet hurt?"

"Why do you ask?"

"You walk like Quasimodo. I've never seen your right shoulder touch the floor before when you walked."

"It's the shoes. I'm breaking them in."

"They don't look new."

"That's because I've been wearing them for three months."

"If they hurt your feet, why don't you throw them away?"

"And leave all that good sole? Don't worry. I'll know when it's time to throw them away. I'll get a sign."

"Why don't you ask Shirley how she stands 'em? She has a pair just like them."

I steadied myself against the wall. "Shirley has a pair of shoes just like these? In the same color?" I slipped them off and threw them in the back of the closet.

You don't have to strike me with lightning!

Couple Weds Saturday Afternoon In Ayden

AYDEN — Gladys Marie Jones and William Lane Jones were married Saturday in the Elm Grove FWB Church here by the Rev. Gary Bailey at 7 p.m. The Rev. Gordon Hart said the wedding prayer for the double ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Lee Jones of Ayden. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Jones of Columbus, Ga.

The chancel of the church held a fifteen branch candelabra with twenty branch cnadelabra on each side. Seven branch candelabra and standards of jade greenery completed the decorations. Hurricane pew markers marked the honor pews.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a formal length gown of white silk organza over peau de soie, designed with a high neckline encircled with raschel lace. The empire bodice was enchanced by a yoke of alternating patterns of raschel lace separated by rows of bridal pearls and edged in ruffled cluny lace. The top of the Queen Anne sleeves were of raschel lace trimmed in ruffled cluny lace and the sheer fullness featured appliques of Venise lace beaded with pearls and the cuffs were banded in cluny lace. The waistline was encircled with white satin ribbon with a bow and streamers in back and beaded appliques of Venise lace at center front. The modified A-line skirt and attached chapel length train were complemented at the hemline by a deep ruffled flounce of raschel lace topped by a row of cluny lace.

She wore a walking length illusion veil edged in cluny lacy held in place by a Camelot cap overlaid in matching lace beaded with pearls. A bridal cascade of roses and baby's breath centered with a yellow throated orchid.

Matron of honor was Nona Sweeden of Fayetteville, sister of the bridegroom. She wore a formal length gown of floral organza in shades of pink, coral and green designed with an open portrait neckline. The empire fitted bodice was styled with miniature rolled straps and an off-the-shoulder gathered ruffle. She carried a sheer pink parasol edged in pink voile.

Vickie Oakley of Ayden, sister of the bride, was maid of honor. She wore a formal length gown of blue floral organza styled as the matron of honor in shades of blue, orchid and green and carried a blue voile parasol.

Bridemaids were Karen Mills of Greenville, Miriam B. Jones of Ayden, sister-in-law of the bride, Susan B. Radford of Rocky Mount, cousin of the bride and Kim Sammons of Fayeteville, niece of the bridegroom. They wore gowns sytled identically to the honor attendants in rainbow shades of maize, apricot, coral, pink and blue and carried parasols in shades of sheer voile to match their gowns.

Flower girl was Lori Monteith of Greenville. She wore a formal length gown of blue floral organza styled as the bridesmaids in shades of blue, orchid and green and carried a wicker basket of petals.

Leonard Monteith of Greenville was best man. Ushers were Jeff Jones of Ayden, brother of the bride, Pat Radford of Rocky Mount, Bill Sweeden of Fayetteville, brother-in-law of the bridegroom, Tom Shell of Greenville and Jessie Baldwin of North Wilkesboro.

Robert Jeffrey Jones Jr. of Ayden, nephew of the bride, was ring bearer.

Lisa Jones of Ayden, niece of the bride, and Donald Gerald Lee of Kinston, were miniature bride and bridegroom.

Wedding music was provided by organist Mrs. Joan Briley, and soloist Rev. Bruce Jones, both of Ayden. Songs included "After the Loving" and "Hawaiian Wedding Song."

Following the ceremony, a reception was given by the parents of the bride, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Beddard and Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Radford in the church fellowship hall. Guests were greeted by Mrs. E. F. Dennis and Mrs. Esther Mae Gibson. The bride's table was covered with a white bridal cloth and centered with a four-tier wedding cake encircled with greenery and bridal nosegays. The serving table was covered with a white lace cloth over blue and centered with a multi- colored floral arrangement flanked with silver candelabras. Miss Joyce Dudley served the cake after the bride and bridegroom cut the traditional first slice. Good-byes were said to Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Wade.

After a wedding trip to Jekyll Island, Ga., the couple will reside in Ayden.

The bride is a graduate of Ayden-Grifton High School and Lenoir Community College. She is presently employed at Brody's Inc. in Greenville.

The bridegroom is a graduate of Jordan High School in Columbus and Columbus Tech. He is employed with North Electric in Greenville.

Following the rehearsal, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Jones entertained at the Three Steers for the bridal party and out-of-town guests.

MISS WANDA KAYE UMPHLETT. . .is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. E. Umphlett of Elizabeth City, who announce her engagement to Michael Collins, son of Mrs. Myrtle Collins of Rocky Mount, and the late Mr. Marvin Collins. The wedding will take place Aug. 6.

College Reduces Rates

EDITOR'S NOTE — While parents groan about the high cost of a college education and Washington argues whether some of it should be tax deductible, one private college has done something about it: reduced rates for families.

By CAROLE FELDMAN
Associated Press Writer

RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Education is a family affair at Fairleigh Dickinson University.

A child, his parents, grandparents can attend undergraduate classes at any of the private college's campuses — all for the price of tuition for one. If more than one child attends, the first pays full tuition, the others half.

Robert Chonko, coordinator of financial aid, says the program was developed in 1974 to help families cope with the high cost of a college education, but other benefits are by-products.

"It seems to bridge a lot of communication gaps," he says. "Parents are able to understand their children a lot better, and the children feel proud that their parents are able to do the work. It brings families closer together."

Barbara Fishbein, daughter Linda and son Jonathan all attended Fairleigh Dickinson's Madison campus last semester. Mrs. Fishbein, who was graduated in December with a degree in psychology, and Jonathan commuted from their Westfield, N.J., home. Linda lived on campus.

Both Jonathan, a junior in accounting, and Linda, a senior majoring in political science, liked having their mother on campus.

"It was rather neat," says Jonathan. "It was an experience not too many people had ... I thought it was really good because it was one more common interest we had to share."

Says Linda: "We didn't see each other every day, but we would make plans to meet and I would see her a lot more."

Mrs. Fishbein says there was no academic competition among the three. "Professors were aware of the family relationship, but I don't think anyone ever abused it."

Under the plan, what would have cost the Fishbein family $255 a credit hour, actually cost $127.50 — one full tuition, one half tuition and one free.

The plan was the idea of Dr. Jerome Pollack, school president, who sought a financially feasible way "to get parents to begin thinking about the educational needs of the entire family."

Parents who attend classes with their children are required to meet all university entrance requirements and may enroll in any course so long as space is available.

Chonko says there were 268 dual enrollments in 1974-75, the first year of the plan. The number grew to 369 the following year and to 396 in 1976-77.

"For the present," he says, "we're projecting 400 each year. We realize that after about a four-year period there will be a leveling off of participation ... There is just a limited number of eligible families attending college at the same time."

Chonko says while parents are taking advantage of the program, he knows of no grandparents who have enrolled.

Taking part in the family plan doesn't exclude students from other forms of financial aid, Chonko says. "Many students do get other forms of aid to pay for dormitory costs and the difference in tuition."

Mrs. Feary Is New Regent

A meeting of the Daughters of the American Revolution was held Tuesday for the purpose of organizing a new chapter in Greenville. The Organizing Regent, Mrs. Jane B. Feary announced the appointment of officers that will serve the chapter through organization and for approximately one year or until the first formal elections are held.

The officers are: Vice-Regent, Mrs. Doris Ballangee; Secretary, Lou Jenkins; Treasurer, Mrs. Margaret Mellon; and Registrar, Dr. Mildred Southwick.

The Organizing Regent stated the organization of the chapter will be in October. This will give all of the women an opportunity to complete their geneological research and forward their applications for membership to the National Society for acceptance.

A suggestion for visits to historical sites in North Carolina was made and Mrs. Margaret Oehrli and Dr. Diane Fogelman are gathering information for these historical trips.

The next meeting is set for June 15 at 7:30 p.m. Dr. Mildred Southwick will be hostess.

Installation Held Wednesday

The Winterville Jaycettes held its annual installation meeting at the Three Steers Wednesday evening.

Bev Herring, president of the Mt. Olive Jaycettes, conducted the installation. Officers are President, Ellen Avery, Vice President, Peggy Harris, Secretary, Patsy Kittrell, Treasurer, Sandra Hazelton, Chairman of the Board, Mary Vincent, and Alexine Dews, board member.

Patient Circle Meeting Planned

The Patient Circle of the King's Daughters will meet Wednesday at 3 p.m. at the home of Miss Annie Turner.

Mrs. J. B. Cutchins will be the assisting hostess. The program will be given by Mrs. M. L. Starkey.

On The Local Scene

by Rosalie Trotman

Burlington native Mrs. Mattie C. Walker has been named "Alamance County's Senior Citizen of the Year." She is the mother of Linda Walker Peele of Greenville.

Sponsored by the Community Council of the United Fund, a special luncheon was held this past week at the Holiday Inn, Burlington.

Special guests at the luncheon were Mrs. Walker's husband, J. T., her 90 year-old-mother, Mrs. W. A. Clapp, and her five children, Clara W. Phillips, Harvey Walker, Dr. Joel Walker, Mrs. Peele and Nancy W. Fogleman.

Mrs. Walker has 14 grandchildren and three great grandchildren.

She is an active member of the First Associate Reform Presbyterian Church, Burlington, its church school and Women's Society.

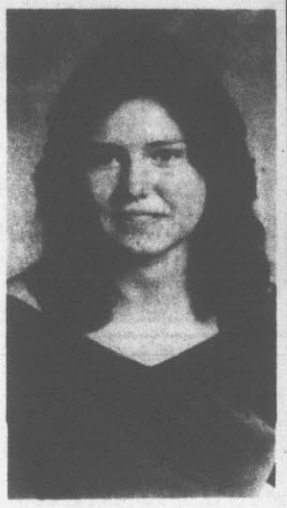

The Walkers celebrated their golden wedding anniversary in 1975. Mrs. Walker is a homemaker and cares for her mother. She aids neighbors, who are disabled by doing their grocery shopping and driving them to appointments.

Mr. and Mrs. LeRoy Hardee of the Portertown community returned home Wednesday night after spending two and a half weeks vacationing in Hawaii.

The Hardees were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Bob Coward, Mrs. Hardee's brother and sister-in-law. Mrs. Hardee also visited Mr. and Mrs. James H. Pott, who reside at the Lutheran Retirement Home at Waikiki Beach. Pott is the brother of Dr. Walter H. Pott of Greenville.

The Hardees saw the arrival of the USS Aircraft Carrier "Enterprise" and her escorts. Arriving at the same time in Pearl Harbor was the Australian Aircraft Carrier HMAS "Melbourne" and her escorts. The joint naval task force had been participating in "Operation Orange" exercises in the Pacific.

Their visit also included a dining-in ceremony with the ambassador of Chile and the Protocal Staff of the Pearl Harbor Command at the Pearl Harbor Makalapa Officers Club.

'Cow Town' Offers One Of Finest Art Centers

By PAT REMICK

FORT WORTH, Texas (UPI) — Though art lovers and architects travel across continents to see it, most north Texans do not know that one of the world's special museums is located in the city called "Cow Town."

Outsiders see it as ironic: one of the world's finest museum collections in a building that has won every major architectural award, but located in a southwestern city known best for its stock shows.

But Dr. Richard F. Brown, director of the Kimbell Museum, describes the attitude as "some sort of perverse provincialism" involving the image of Texas and "the effete East."

And while he maintains the Kimbell has gained a "very dedicated and interesting audience" in its five short years of existence, he admits local residents do not make up much of that audience. He believes that will change in time.

They, he says, are "the very people we want to reach so they can understand some of the values we stand for." Those include, he said, the emotional, intellectual and esthetic values of art.

"People here can't possibly realize how well-known the Kimbell is internationally and in art circles," says museum publicity director Shirley Speickerman. "These groups come in from all over the world and say they've heard of the Kimbell, but people down the street don't even know about it."

The thing that usually puts art museums in the headlines — money — is not a problem for the privately endowed Kimbell.

"We do have the money to make acquisitions and maintain the highest level of quality we can while most museums in the country are going in the hole just trying to keep their doors open," Brown notes.

Neither does the Kimbell announce prices paid for art works, although Brown concedes "millions" have been spent since the museum opened to add 64 objects to the collection, which ranges from the prehistoric to early 20th century, with the only native work being pre-Columbian.

Brown says to reveal the financial worth of the works of Rembrandt, Rubens, El Greco, Picasso and other great masters is "an absolute perversion of what we stand for."

So while a Rembrandt recently sold for $3.25 million, another painting by the Dutch master in much better condition and more well-known — and ostensibly worth more — was quietly added to the Kimbell collection.

"The minute you talk about money, that's the thing that lands in the headlines," said Brown. "What we are trying to do is get as many people as possible to focus on the real value of art — the esthetic, not the financial."

The Kimbell is able to remain free, although Brown estimates it costs the facility $5 for each of the 19,000 monthly visitors, because of a self-made millionaire's love of art.

Kay Kimbell, a Fort Worth industrialist who headed 70 corporations before his death in 1964, left his entire fortune from milling, food processing, petroleum, insurance and real estate to the Kimbell Art Foundation. His widow, Velma, later enhanced his bequest, which only required that the foundation build a museum of the first class in Fort Worth to house and expand his collection.

Do You Need 'Gam-Anon'?

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1978 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR READERS: Gambling is not simply a "weakness"—it's an illness for which treatment is available in Gamblers Anonymous. And for the family and close friends of the compulsive gambler there is a group called "Gam-Anon."

The following questions may help you to decide whether you are involved with someone who is a compulsive gambler:

1. Are you haunted by bill collectors?
2. Is the person in question often away from home for long, unexplained periods of time?
3. Do you feel that he or she cannot be trusted with money?
4. Does he or she promise faithfully to stop gambling; beg, plead for another chance, yet gamble again and again?
5. Does he or she borrow money to gamble with or to pay gambling debts?
6. Have you noticed a personality change in the gambler as his or her gambling has progressed?
7. Have you come to the point of hiding money needed for living expenses, knowing that you and the rest of the family may go without food and clothing if you do not?
8. Do you search the gambler's clothing or go through his wallet when the opportunity presents itself, or otherwise check on his or her activities?
9. Does the gambler hide his or her money?
10. Does the gambler lie sometimes compulsively, avoid any discussion of his or her debts, or refuse to face the realities of the situation?
11. Does the gambler shift the responsibility for his or her gambling upon you, or try to make you feel guilty?
12. Do you attempt to anticipate the gambler's moods, or try to control his or her life?
13. Do you feel that your life together is a nightmare?

If you have answered "yes" to six or more of these questions, I urge you to contact Gam-Anon. It's free, and there is nothing to "join." It's simply a fellowship of men and women who are relatives and close friends of compulsive gamblers. There you will learn effective ways of coping with the gambling problem from those who have lived through it.

For more information about this wonderfully supportive group, write to: Gamblers Anonymous, P.O. Box 17173, Los Angeles, Calif. 90017.

It is a non-profit group, so please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope for their reply.

Help For The Hyperactive

NEW YORK (AP) — Children who are overly cautious or totally fearless of heights could have a learning-disability, according to the chief therapist of a national center specializing in the diagnosis and treatment of hyperactive and under-achieving youngsters.

The child who must hold onto a handrail or who walks down the stairs backwards or one step at a time may do so because he doesn't know where the steps begin and end, or he cannot judge the distance between them, says Darral C. Chapman of the New York Institute for Child Development.

A child with such problems will also bump into walls, knock things over and have trouble with small ball sports like baseball, tennis and handball. These disorders may also cause the child to have problems in school in such subjects as spelling and math. For example, he may reverse letters in words or be unable to line up columns of numbers, Chapman points out.

Sensorimotor exercise therapy has been designed to help children with these problems, Chapman says, and the NYICD has developed a checklist giving over 100 warning signals of learning disability which parents can look for.

Canal Treaties Make It Easier

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Several Southern Baptist leaders say that ratification of the new Panama Canal treaties will make for a better atmosphere for work of foreign missionaries there.

"I think they'll give us a better hearing now," says the Rev. Jackie B. Cooper, a missionary in Arrijan, Panama. He says that while Panamanians generally are open to the gospel, U.S. control of the canal has had a "somewhat cooling effect" on missionary work.

The Rev. Jimmy Allen, president of the Southern Baptist Convention, says ratification of the treaties "brings a new mutuality of respect to our relations" with the Central American country.

FORECAST FOR SUNDAY, MAY 7, 1978

Your Daily HOROSCOPE
from the CARROLL RIGHTER INSTITUTE

GENERAL TENDENCIES: There will be delays in plans you have made, so use self-control. Utilize the time to get matters better organized.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) You have good ideas for adding to present security so get busy making concrete plans to put them in operation although you cannot contact a backer just yet.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Straighten out your personal affairs before you get into new activities. Accept a social invitation. Dress well and make a fine impression on others.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Take care of chores that will gain you favors from others. Try to please your closest tie more and show you are conscientious, thoughtful.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) There may be some delay where a personal plan is concerned, but be patient and all works out fine later. Not a good time for the social side of life, either.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Don't discuss a private affair with others until you are more sure of your facts. Not a good day to either plan or take a trip which would not bring right results, either.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) You want to get out to new ventures but ber sure to use right principles for best results. Take time to improve health and forget career matters for now.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) You have a responsibility to handle, even though it may not be too much to your liking. Show more thought for a loved one who may be depressed.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Try to go along with the ideas of close ties and have more harmony. A worldly situation is hardly to your liking, but there is nothing you can do about it. Relax.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Try to please those who have been good to you in days gone by. Show consideration. Spend some time to get abode looking more charming.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Recreational activities would not work out well. Spend the time disposing of accumulated tasks. Try to help friends who are in trouble.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Use tact at home where there is apt to be depression or you make matters worse. Avoid situations that lead to tension.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) The planets are not favorable for visiting with friends and kin. Study any written material for errors.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will be practical-minded and have both feet firmly on the ground. Teach to reach decisions more quickly since there is a tendency to mull things over too much and this could ruin the success possible here. Not much interest in sports in this chart.

Japanese Bring U.S. Beef Into Homes

BY SHIRO YONEYAMA

TOKYO (UPI) — After their arrival at Tokyo's international airport from New York, Akira Kiyosawa and Takayuki Kuroda went to the Animal Quarantine Service counter instead of the regular customs clearance desk.

"We were told the taste of American beef is very good," explained Kiyosawa, president of a Japanese trading company, as he helped a quarantine inspector unpack several packages of frozen sirloin steak he brought with him.

Kuroda, an aide to Kiyosawa, also bought several cases of beef in New York. "You can't buy these quality beef steaks for such cheap prices in Japan," he said.

To Kiyosawa, Kuroda and a growing number of Japanese travelers returning from the United States and Australia, packages of frozen or chilled beef steaks are replacing cartons of cigarettes and bottles of Scotch whisky as the hottest commodities brought back from abroad.

In fact, the foreign meat's popularity has proved so great that the airport's Animal Quarantine Service, a branch of the Agriculture ministry, has been swamped by the huge volume of beef brought back by returning travelers.

"Look," said chief quarantine inspector Yoshiro Kishimoto as he showed a visitor a daily log of incoming beef. "Travelers to America and Australia brought home a total of 696 kilograms (1,531 pounds) of beef on January 7 alone."

That, Kishimoto said, was a record for any single day since the Agriculture departments of Japan and the United States signed an agreement in August of 1976 that simplified procedures for the inflow of beef-as-souvenirs to Japan. To prevent manipulation of the Japanese domestic meat market, the agreement set a maximum limit of 50 pounds of beef per person.

House Museum For Bowlers

GREENDALE, Wis. (AP) — For the time being at least, Greendale is to bowling what Cooperstown, N.Y., is to baseball and Canton, Ohio, is to football.

Since 1973, the National Bowling Hall of Fame and Museum has been located here.

Now the museum and hall of fame is expected to move. The building has gotten too crowded. In addition to housing bowling memorabilia, it is also headquarters for the nation's 9½-million league bowlers, members of the American Bowling Congress, the Women's International Bowling Congress and the American Junior Bowling Congress.

"We wrote to mayors and chambers of commerce to let people know the hall of fame is sort of up for grabs," said Ed Marcou, manager of the museum and hall of fame.

Solar Heating Idea Popular In Hawaii

By HOLLY KURTZ
Associated Press Writer

HONOLULU (AP) — Residents of Hawaii are soaking up the sun in more ways than one as solar energy projects sprout in increasing numbers across the islands.

Government and private sources spent $2.5 million on solar demonstration projects in Hawaii last year, compared to $160,000 for 1975 and 1976, according to a state government report.

Nearly 2,000 solar-operated water heaters have been installed in homes and businesses across the state in the past three years, a Hawaiian Electric Company survey showed.

Sales may jump if a federal tax credit for solar energy devices is approved. Local residents are waiting to determine the tax credit, said Tom Brennan, Pacific representative of the federal Department of Energy.

Hawaii residents are already entitled to a state tax credit of 10 percent of the cost of a solar energy device.

The islands' position near the Equator allows them to receive intense radiation since the sun is directly overhead for part of the year.

With government dollars and pleas for energy conservation adding incentive, the number of firms installing solar heating units has grown from eight to nearly 30 in one year, according to the State Energy Office.

In using the sun's rays for energy, collectors placed on rooftops absorb the rays. They are used to heat water, to heat or cool indoor air, and to produce electricity. Of the various uses, solar water-heating is the most economically feasible now, according to federal and state officials.

Among the businesses adding solar collectors are four Waikiki hotels, which won Department of Energy grants totaling more than $1 million.

"Hawaii was fortunate. We got almost one-third of the grant money," said Robert Stern, Hawaii liaison for the Department of Energy.

The federal government has also subsidized solar water-heaters for single family residences in low-income areas and for public housing projects.

The solar water-heating system installed last August at Banyan Street Manor, a 55-unit Honolulu apartment building, provides up to 66 gallons of hot water daily for each unit.

Mounted atop the three wings of the apartment building are 164 solar panel collectors, each about three feet wide by six feet long. The sunlight is absorbed by the collectors, which heat water in copper tubes.

The system saves from $8 to $22 on tenants' monthly electric bills, said Banyan Manor manager Eleanor Lisenbee.

Hawaii Electric Company estimates that hot water heating accounts for 40 percent of a household's electric bill, and that a solar heater will save a family up to $15 on its electric bill.

But the cost of repair and maintenance is an unknown factor, said Hawaiian Electric spokesman Van Beazlie.

Even if every possible household converted to solar water-heating, said Beazlie, the saving would be only about three percent of the basic fuel needed to produce electricity on the island of Oahu.

Stern estimates the saving at about 8 percent.

Solar heating devices for single-family homes cost an average of $2,500, but pay for themselves in utility bill savings in about seven years, said Michael Bean, solar division manager for the firm that designed Banyan Street Manor.

Today's Cryptoquip clue: F equals M

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Ancient Sumerians Told Of Star Rivaling The Sun

By KENNETH R. CLARK

NEW YORK (UPI) — Even before the pyramids of Egypt, there were the Sumerians — a mysterious super race of people who invented astronomy, writing, the wheel, engineering and mathematics.

Yet, for millennia, they were lost to history — consigned even in the last century to a shadowy mythology by scholars who doubted their existence and never dreamed that for a while, their sky blazed with twin suns.

It took George Michanowsky, reading things long overlooked in a tiny clay tablet bearing information at least 6,000 years old, to find the dazzling star they worshipped, and uniquely to affirm that the Sumerians still are very much on the scene.

Michanowsky is an explorer, archeologist and just-published author of "The Once and Future Star" (Hawthorne Books — New York) in which he reveals his discovery of an event so stupendous that it may have been the first labor pain in the birth of civilization. And with that discovery came the roots of customs, ideas, symbols and beliefs still used almost daily with no popular concept of their origin.

"This whole occult explosion that we have today — in its more responsible aspects — harkens back to ancient Mesopotamia," he said in an interview at his Manhattan apartment. "It's a Sumerian revival by people who never heard of the Sumerians."

Michanowsky, who reads Sumerian cuneiform script as casually as the average subway commuter reads his daily newspaper, made the sensational discovery that a gigantic supernova actually had been observed and recorded by the Sumerians who made it the central source of their astro-mythology and creation legends. About 10 years ago, radio astronomers pinpointed the collapsed remnant of that titanic explosion in the far Southern constellation of Vela.

Just as his book was ready to go to press, optical astronomers in Australia discovered it still is emitting light — fulfilling a prophecy recorded on yet another cuneiform text.

The clay tablet that proved to be the key piece of evidence in Michanowsky's research had been read by scholars before, but until he probed it, no one understood its most critical message. Its wedge-shaped cuneiform marks — supported by passages in other texts — told of a gigantic star that rivaled the sun and bathed the earth in a seemingly supernatural radiance. Since Michanowsky's pulsar still is radiating light in the visible spectrum, astronomers label it a relative youngster in cosmic time, dating it to what Michanowsky believes was the star-birth of civilization.

That star — "MUL NUN-KI" to the Sumerians who witnessed it and its eventual passing — became the cornerstone of a cosmology that catapulted them almost instantly in historic terms to the invention of writing, the pioneering of astronomy and creation of mathematics.

Above all, the Sumerian religion clung to one unshakeable point of faith — the great star, which blazed, gave hope and knowlege to mankind, then vanished, would return some day to herald a golden age on earth. Every major religion since has echoed the theme, and Christianity is scored with it.

Michanowsky cites the Christ theme of miraculous birth, death, resurrection and anticipated second coming in Sumerian astro-mythology.

"You have the constellation 'NIN-MAH,' or 'exalted lady' — mother goddess of the cosmos — literally giving birth if you will to a great star that eventually vanished but will return again and whose return is anxiously being awaited," he said. "You can draw your own conclusions, but this is a basic theme in ancient Near Eastern religious thought."

An Old Testament story had Moses raising a "brazen serpent" on a pole as a means of healing Israelites snake-bitten in the wilderness.

"Serpent symbolism played a very very important part in the life of Moses," said Michanowsky, "and the Sumerian word for serpent is 'MUSH' — derived from a pictograph of a snake sacred to a 'Lord of the Good Tree.' And this god was a god of healing."

In a sense, it still is, though the average doctor whose license plate carries the serpent-twined staff of the caduceus probably has no idea that the logo of his profession is rooted so deeply in time.

Other biblical themes with Sumerian origins include Noah's Ark and the Book of Job.

Of the former, Michanowsky said a Sumerian legend had "a friendly god — E-A of the great Vela star — tipping off a pious king that humanity, because of its sins, was going to be wiped out with a flood and telling him to build a ship to save himself and his family so that humanity might be perpetuated."

As for Job and the story of his legendary patience, the Sumerian texts told it as "The Tale of the Righteous Sufferer."

"It's clearly a forerunner of Job," said Michanowsky. "The Book of Job is replete with very challenging astronomical references, such as 'when the morning stars sang together (Job 38:7).' The idea of a star being able to sing — there's nothing more Sumerian than that.

"The theme is ... he is a righteous man, all kinds of awful things happen to him and he begins a dialogue with the deity, and in the end, he comes out all right. A very typical Sumerian concept is the idea that there can be a dialogue between man and the deity."

Other Sumerian touches familiar to the 20th century:

— The fish-tail on the goat Capricorn in the Zodiac.

— The Atlantis legend, based on the great star that faded, or in disappearing below the horizon, "sank into the sea."

— Reference to death as "the Grim Reaper" from two stars in the tail of the constellation Scorpio which Sumerian astrologers called "all reaper" and "all crusher" in the belief that the tail of the scorpion was the ultimate instrument of divine retribution.

— The X-mark almost universally used to delete or cancel, from the cuneiform symbol "NU" of the same shape which meant "No."

Michanowsky's grin lights the room when he's asked if he, like the Sumerians of his life's study, believes the great star will shine again.

"In a sense, it already has begun to," he said, adding that the rediscovery of the star's existence — though it cannot be seen today with the naked eye — is a fulfilment of the prophecy of renaissance.

"A lot of astronomers have become very excited about this ... because to them it's a sort of new dimension in the history of science — in the history of their own astronomy. The Lord works in mysterious ways and in a very mysterious way, the reappearance of the great star has already occurred."

The rediscovery, and the knowlege that has come from it, he said, are a part of that renaissance.

"You wouldn't be here to ask me that question if it hadn't reappeared," he said.

Hard Times For Brick-Breaker

SEATTLE (AP) — Billy Corbett, who broke bricks with his bare hands for charity, is nearly destitute these days. Two industrial accidents forced the showman brick-basher into the wings.

Instead of appearing before large gatherings in loose-fitting karate robe with black belt and turning bricks into cement dust, the 47-year-old Corbett paints oil pictures of Indians and frets about his future.

"Sometimes the Indians in the paintings are the only people I talk to," Corbett said. "At night I hurt so bad."

He got a doctor's permission to exercise his hands, and, with the determination of a concert pianist practicing intricate scales, Corbett sits in his Renton backyard, pounding on a building block with his fist.

"I've got to get back and do something for kids," he said recently. "I've got to help them. I want to break 10,000 bricks and raise money for the Children's Orthopedic Hospital."

Corbett was an orphan and almost lost a leg in osteomyelitis. He became a boxer in the Navy and then a professional boxer. He took up karate, opened a self-defense school and worked at raising money for charities, breaking bricks for kids. The Northwest Kidney Center, Children's Orthopedic Hospital and others have benefitted at his hands.

He broke world records and sometimes his hands. In Alaska, he broke 5,000 bricks with his bare hands.

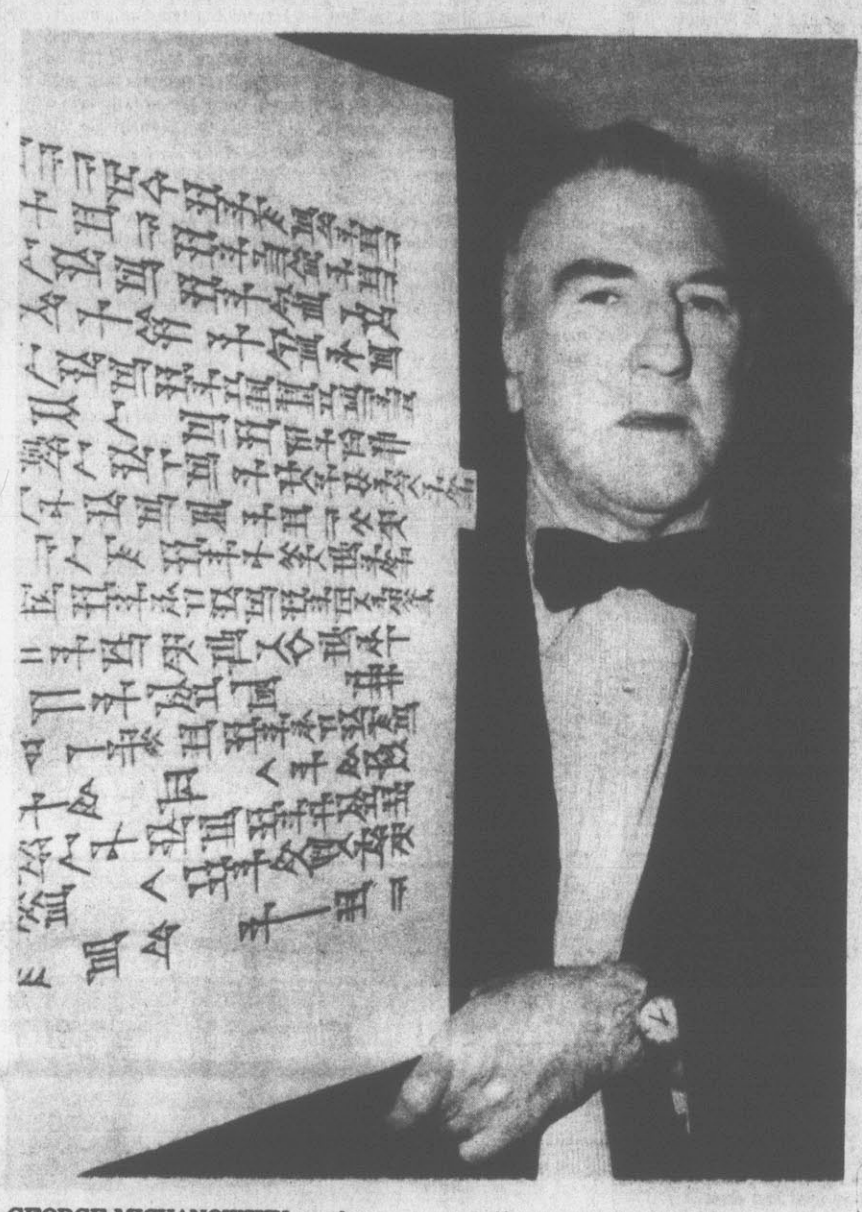

"It's been tough before, when I was a kid, but never this tough," Corbett said.

In 1975 when he worked for a drydock company, he suffered an accident that aggravated an arthritic condition. Later he went to work for a shipyard and last fall suffered a second accident, requiring a new hip joint. He has been unable to work since.

The federal Labor Department ruled Corbett's injuries were job-related and that he is entitled to disability compensation. But two insurance firms disagree over which of them is responsible.

So Corbett has been without money for his rent or food. His mother, almost 80 and living in a nursing home, suffered a heart attack when she learned of his condition, Corbett said.

"Sometimes I lay on my couch in pain and I didn't even eat," he said. "If it wasn't for my neighbors, I'd have starved to death. They fed me. Through God's help, I'll make it. I pray, boy, I'll tell you."

Increase Thirst On Sea Voyage

NEW YORK (UPI) — Maybe it's the salt air, but apparently there is nothing like a sea voyage for raising a thirst, according to a ship line that specializes in long cruises.

A typical cargo of spirits for 500 cruise passengers aboard the M.S. Kungsholm for 90 days at sea, says Flagship Cruises, would include 18,000 bottles of wine, 66,000 bottles of beer, 20,000 bottles of mineral water, 1,700 bottles of Scotch, 1,030 bottles of Bourbon, 940 bottles of gin, 235 bottles of rum, 330 bottles of brandy, 225 bottles of liqueurs, 950 bottles of vodka and aquavit.

SUPER HOSIERY

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (UPI) — During 1977, supermarkets led in unit sales of hosiery among all retail outlets, with 20.6 percent of total scales. Discout stores followed, with 20.3 percent, and department stores came third.

Britons Holld Tight To Port Industry, Tradition

By ANDREW TORCHIA
Associated Press Writer

OPORTO, Portugal (AP) — "If I should die," wrote Rupert Brooke, "think only this of me: That there's some corner of a foreign field that is forever England. There shall be in that rich earth a richer dust concealed..."

This near northern corner of Portugal, where the rich earth brings forth a bounty of grapes, is haven to the latest of six generations of Englishmen who rule the port wine industry and measure their lives by English time.

For the 350 British, the cobbled streets, the camelia-covered courtyards, the tiled roofs, the Douro River and the lodges where port wine ages in oaken casks taller than a man, this is and has been home.

But they send their children to school in Britain, retain their British passports, speak English at home and cope with Portuguese only when necessary at the office.

The center of their social world is the Oporto Cricket and Lawn Tennis Club, an oasis among high-rise apartments, so conveniently sited that a wine executive, perhaps vaporous from a day of sipping port, can run it off for an hour on Portugal's only squash court before driving to his country home.

There is a sensitivity here to the dangers of remaining aloof and elite in a nation now dedicated to social equality. But the gap between the shrilling fishwives, the textile workers, the grape pickers and wine pressers and the British in their sceptered isle is wider than the distance from London to Lisbon.

"Sometimes it is difficult for people like ourselves because we are integrated and yet are still foreign. We are involved but we really have no right even to express an opinion," says Robin Reid, managing director of Croft and Co.

"Our club has 40 percent British members. We don't want more because if there were more than 50 percent foreign membership, we might one day lose the club."

Every Wednesday, British shippers and their guests meet near the docks for lunch in a musty 200-year-old building called the factory house.

On a table near the granite staircase is a current copy of The Times of London. Next to it is a library copy of the Times of the same date 100 years before.

Portraits of the ancestors of the shipping families line the walls. The kitchen with its rows of polished brass pots and ovens large enough to cook a whole pig on a spit is preserved but not used.

The Wednesday lunch became customary because formerly no mail arrived from London on that day and the traders were thus spared from correspondence in the afternoon.

But if there is anything that is the epitome of England in this vaunted hall, it is the once a year, member's only, treasurer's dinner.

"After dinner we have a sip of tawny port to help us survive the journey to an adjoining candlelit room where the table is laid with linen and silver," explains David Delaforce, a taster, marketing director and the fifth generation of his family in Portugal.

"There we sit in exactly the same places and taste the vintage port."

The menu is British, too, stilton cheese and salmon flown in.

The shipper's association membership is virtually all British. There is one Portuguese associate member because he is a director of a British company.

"We had a Spaniard in the trade, but he would accept full membership or nothing. So it was nothing," a member said.

"This is one of the most expensive clubs outside New York," explains Ian Sinclair, director of Sandeman and Co. "But it is good to get away from the telexes and telephones to a more leisurely style of life."

The uninitiated who passes the port from left to right is met with disapproving stares, as is anyone who thoughtlessly smokes before the toast to the British throne.

The error is not in disrespect for the monarch, but disrespect for the wine which must be tasted before the palate is spoiled by smoke.

Port was a British discovery, and so it may seem right that it sustain this small community. The British have been hereabouts for a while. Wellington defeated Napoleon's troops south of Oporto in 1810.

The wine is made from the grapes of the upper Douro Valley, about 60 miles east of Oporto. The dry, white port is drunk before dinner. The sweet red and tawny ports after.

But it is more than wine. Britain began importing wine from Portugal in the 17th century when its battles with France cut off its usual supplies. Only trouble was the wine often turned to vinegar before it got to Britain on ships bucking stormy seas.

So shippers began adding brandy to the casks to stop fermentation and keep the wine sweet. Port was born with natural preservatives.

Britain was nearly the total importer in the 19th century, both for the rich and the workingmen's pubs. They still remain at the heart of the industry, but France now imports almost 40 percent of the production, twice as much as the British. A bare 1 percent goes to the United States where domestic producers age their own blend of port.

Other things are changing besides British tastes, which forced Oporto traders to find new markets after World War II and made some firms merge to stay in business. It cut the number of firms in half, and today 21 Britons in six companies, including three family firms, control more than half the wine exports.

In 1977, things looked good. Exports were 48.6 million liters valued at $63.4 million, up from 41 million liters and $57.3 million the year before. It was also the fifth best year since the first shipment to Britain was recorded 300 years ago.

Things are changing, however, for the thin red line of heroes. The 1974 Portuguese Revolution led to tripled wages and worker absenteeism, new regulatory powers over the trade and threats of nationalization.

Other things, perhaps more important things, are changing too.

"There is beginning to be more intermarriage with the Portuguese than before," says Robin Reid, whose wife is Portuguese and whose family dates back almost to Wellington's victory.

What doesn't change is that it takes two years to age ordinary port in the cask, and vintage port is aged five to 10 years in the bottle.

What doesn't change is the upland grown varietal grapes, the art of wine-making and the Englishman's conception of himself, wherever he is — "A pulse in the eternal mind, no less gives somewhere back the thoughts by England given... And laughter, learnt of friends; and gentleness in hearts at peace, under an English heaven."

Cattlemen Turn To Feedlotting

By R. MICHAEL PATTERSON

HEREFORD, Texas (UPI) — On a cloudy spring morning that held a winter chill, Walter Lewis drove his gleaming white pickup through a network of steel cattle pens.

A cowhand, on horseback, worked a herd of young steers toward feed piled across a pen. Lewis, manager of the Hereford Feed Yards, chatted with the cowboy briefly and then turned back to business.

"The public has gotten used to this grain fed beef and it would be hard to return to grass fed beef," he said.

When taken in the context of the sweeping history of the cattle business, Lewis with that sentence summarized the latest change in the cattle business on the High Plains, a change which has produced as significant a revolution as barbed wire ending the era of the open range.

Lewis, dressed in western clothes topped with a straw stetson, represents the new breed of cattlemen. They earn their living fattening somebody else's cattle for slaughter.

The industry that has evolved, often by large jumps, is called cattle feeding, long established commercially in the Midwest, but still a relative youngster in West Texas.

In 1976, the average American afe 95.4 pounds of beef, compared to 66.2 pounds two decades earlier. And they are spending more for that meat. The 1956 diet would have cost $43.29 at the checkout counter; it cost triple that two years ago.

Most cattle spend part of their life in a feed yard eating carefully prepared diets of grains, vitamins and hormones to stimulate growth. In this area of Texas, plus a handful of counties in neighboring Oklahoma and New Mexico, 4.3 million head of cattle were fed out last year in a thick concentration of feeding factories.

In fact, some economists predict by 1980 there will be enough fed beef in West Texas alone to supply 40 million persons a year. Still other experts credit the feeding industry as the only way to raise the amount of beef demanded by shoppers.

"Grassland is incapable of producing the tonnage that the American people desire," said Joe Wood, market analyst of the Texas Cattle Feeders Association in Amarillo.

The economics of cattle feeding are simple. A steer that goes into the feed yard weighing 700 pounds will be ready for butchering four months later weighing 1,100 pounds. The same steer would graze for two years on grasslands before putting on the same amount of gain, and the quality of the meat would never be achieved.

"You can't get enough growth and you can't finish with the desirable flesh that the consumer desires," Wood said. "You couldn't put the fat cover on, and if you did, you'd end up with a ... not too palatable piece of meat. Grain adds the flavor."

The beginnings of the feeding industry in Texas occurred in this century and were keyed to three developments: the switch from the longhorn to the hereford, development of a grain hybrid which would grow in Texas, and irrigation.

The taming of the West coupled with the East Coast demand for improved beef tenderness and taste forced cattlemen to switch to herefords. Early attempts to establish feedlots failed, but in the mid-1950s boom times loomed with development of a grain sorghum hybrid which thrived on the High Plains and with discovery of fields of low cost natural gas to drive irrigation pumps.

Bill Nelson, formerly of the Grain Sorghum Producers Association and now executive vice president of the Texas Wheat Producers Association in Amarillo, explained through statistics. In 1956, he said, Texas produced 124 million bushels of grain sorghum; by 1957, with the prolific hybrids, production jumped to 244 million bushels.

"Accompanying that was a surplus," said Nelson. "As a result the price dropped from $3 per hundred (pounds) to $1.50 in 1957. The cattle feedlot industry actually developed as a means to develop (markets) for the surplus."

Except for a handful of small feedlots, however, Texas cattle were being hauled to huge yards in California, Arizona and the Midwest. And grain grown in Texas was being shipped along with them.

In 1959, the GSPA and West Texas Chamber of Commerce organized trainload promotions to Illinois, Iowa and the West Coast. Billed as a goodwill gesture to "visit our customers," the underlying purpose was to stimulate interest in establishing commercial feed yards in West Texas.

The trips caused a lot of talk, but there was little action until a University of Nebraska graduate named Paul Engler arrived in Hereford in 1960. He watched as grain sorghum and cattle were loaded on the same train for shipment west.

Engler and a small group of investors started Hereford Feed Yards in 1961 with a capacity of 5,000 head. Now the capacity is nine times that.

The yard was a tremendous success. Soon hundreds of people with extra money tried their luck. Calves birthed in East Texas and the South were bought in the early 1970s for up to 80 cents a pound, and sold at a profit even after expensive feeding.

The bonanza lured the nation's largest packers to open branches practically in the back yard of the lots. The TCFA says by 1974, 196 feedlots operated within a 250-mile radius of Amarillo, with the cattle on feed valued at between $1.5 billion and $2 billion.

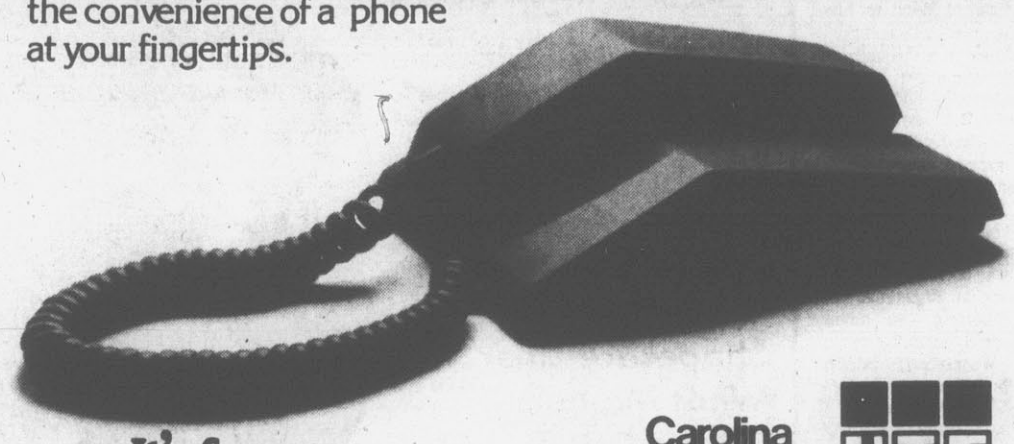

But in 1973 the Arab oil embargo precipitated inflated energy costs; the Russians, faced with large wheat losses, drove the price of grain up with their U.S. purchases, and the cattle population exploded.

The price for cattle after feeding fell to 40 cents a pound. By late 1973, cattlemen who had made $20 a head profit were losing $200 a head.

Following a short period of optimism generated by Nixon adminstration price controls, the bottom fell out. It is now called the "wreck," the "crash" or the "bust."

Dilemma Is Raised Over 'Leak' Cases

By DANIEL F. GILMORE

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A Senate Intelligence Committee staff study has concluded "there is a major breakdown in the administration of the criminal espionage statutes in leak cases" and apparently no way to repair the situation.

It said no present U.S. statute can effectively be enforced against "leaks" of classified information and it is unlikely that one could be drafted which would solve the problem and be constitutionally valid.

"We have been unable to identify a single successful prosecution of an individual who leaked classified information to a publication," the staff of the Intelligence Subcommittee on Secrecy and Disclosure said.

"This record was found despite the nearly unanimous assessment that at least some leaks cause serious harm to our national security."

After almost a year of research, the staff made its report during March hearings. Dossiers were obtained from the CIA, Defense Intelligence Agency and the National Security Agency representative of classical espionage cases in which intelligence was passed covertly to a foreign power and examples in which intelligence found its way into the public media — either by intentional or accidental leaks.

The files, the staff said, may represent "the most comprehensive compilation of such information in either the Executive branch or Congress."

The studies showed action taken, "or not taken as is frequently the case," by the relevant agency or the FBI and disciplinary measures against those responsible.

The subcommittee began its work last year under the chairmanship of Sen. Joseph Biden, D-Del., on the assumption that new criminal sanctions might be desirable for unauthorized disclosures revealing sources and methods of intelligence gathering.

"However, as the inquiry proceeded," the report said, "we were soon driven to the surprising conclusion that no present statute can be effectively enforced against 'leaks' and that it was unlikely that a constitutional criminal statute could be drafted which would solve the enforcement problems."

"In fact, we discovered that the nation's strictest statutory safeguard against unauthorized disclosure, Section 798 of Title 18, the U.S. espionage statute which most closely affords the protection enjoyed by the British under the Official Secrets Act, does little to deter either classical espionage or leaks. Our files reveal several cases in which violations of even this statute are neither prosecuted nor investigated."

At the heart of the problem, the report said, is "a very deep-seated conflict between the interests of the intelligence community on the one hand, and the Department of Justice on the other over the enforcement of the espionage statutes."

To prosecute, Justice needed to know details of the security information involved; the intelligence agencies did not want further disclosure.

"The conflict arises over whether the Director of Central Intelligence, Secretary of Defense or the Attorney General will prevail in controlling the use of classified information necessary to conduct the investigation and to proceed with the prosecution," the report said.

The staff said the cases it studied showed "problems created by classified information also hamper many prosecutions, including perjury, extortion, bribery, narcotics violations and possibly even one murder case."

In summary, the report concluded "there is a major breakdown in the administration of the criminal espionage statutes in leak cases."

Sierra Club To Gather Monday

Native wildflowers of eastern North Carolina will be the topic featured at the May meeting of the Sierra Club on Monday, May 8. Dr. Christine Helms, professor emeritus of biology at East Carolina University, will present photographs. Dr. Helms has a wildflower garden and takes a special interest in endangered species of flowers.

The club meets at 8 p.m. in the First Presbyterian Church, corner of 14th and Elm Streets. Visitors are welcome.

Ageless Bronco Still Too Tough

By STEVE ANDRIST
Bismarck Tribune

FLASHER, N.D. (AP) — The Satchel Paige of bucking broncs is taking it easy on the grasslands of southwestern North Dakota, but he's still too tough to tame.

Like Paige, the ageless baseball pitching wonder, this famous gelded pinto isn't looking over his shoulder and nobody dares sneak up on him.

Old Pump Handle Pete is Ternes' prize possession. He's been a rodeo bronc ever since he was 2 years old, quite a few years considering he's about 26 or 28 years old, which makes him somewhere between 78 and 84 by human terms.

"He still bucks off some of the best NDRA (North Dakota Rodeo Association) cowboys," said Ternes.

What Ternes does know about the horse is that he got him when Pete was 2 years old from a well driller named Pete Miller.

"Miller was gonna slaughter him, so I traded for him," said Ternes. "Everybody called him (Miller) Pump Handle Pete and the name just kinda stuck with the horse.

"Several guys have rode him now and last year a guy won the money riding him at the Grant County Fair," said Ternes. "But he's bucked quite a few good cowboys off, too."

Ternes said his prize saddle bronc is very disciplined.

"He never refused to buck like some horses do, and he's never come up lame," he said. "After he bucks a rider, he'll just quit right now, but he'll never quit as long as somebody is on."

The elderly pinto is also different from other saddle broncs because he is very tame until he sees daylight.

"Some horses will wear themselves out in the shoot," Ternes said. "But this guy will just sit and look over the gate all day long, until he sees that daylight. Then he goes!"

Ternes said he had a son who's a pretty good saddle bronc rider, but Pump Handle Pete "bucked him right down."

"I've never been on him," Ternes admitted. "And I never will be either."

Expert Suggests How To Avoid Jogging Injuries

By FRED T. FERGUSON
United Press International

Dr. Robert Israel feels there is a big increase in injuries among the thousands of joggers taking up the sport for the first time.

"No question about it," says Israel, orthopedist and chief of sports medicine at New York's Hospital for Joint Diseases.

Hard statistics are hard to come by, he says, but "just on the basis of my own practice — the number of runners that come in now compared with a few years ago — there has been a tremendous increase."

Is he down on running because of this?

Far from it. "I run about four miles a day when I can.

"I think it is great, psychologically and physically. It keeps me in shape. It's inexpensive. It's easy to do. It's probably one of the best protections against heart disease.

"I can't afford to play squash — three hours a day is just too much time. But most of all, running just makes me feel great."

So he recommends running to others.

He is, however, concerned about the growth in injuries, particularly because "a lot of patients come in with injuries that can be prevented."

Trouble is, he said, they postpone seeking help, thinking the pain or sprain will go away on its own. And they come to him, he says, when the injuries have progressed to the point where they are more difficult to treat.

By then, he said, a minor strain or sprain may lead to other injuries or running problems.

"It's hard to come up with any set rules for avoiding jogging injuries," he said. "You just can't generalize."

But one thing runners should know, is to seek medical advice, as he puts it, "when the symptom is starting."

He feels each runner must find his or her own best style and be willing to modify it to correct problems or stresses that start. Some expert advice is the key here.

Dealing with each case of a strain or sprain — the injuries most common among novice joggers — depends on the individual. In addition to seeking medical advice early, Israel suggests going to a physician who is knowledgeable in the whole range of related problems from the foot to the hip.

"Dizzy Dean, they say, stubbed his toe and had to give up pitching," he said, to illustrate the chain effect that can come from a minor stress injury.

There are some things the beginning jogger should consider:

Running shoes

There is no easy answer. Scores of makes have come on the market. Some that are good for one running style are not for another. Many are designed to correct a single problem and, according to Israel, may in the process create others.

Israel suggests looking for three things: cushioning, flexibility and support, particularly for the arches.

"Like shock absorbers on a car, they help dissipate the effect of the foot continually striking a hard surface, receiving shocks — what we call repetitive impact loading."

Israel is reluctant to recommend any specific shoe. But he says he has found the more expensive shoes tend to be better. "You get what you pay for."

As one of his department's projects, he is trying to design a shoe that more successfully combines cushioning, flexibility and support.

Conditioning

The runner needs to employ stretching exercises before jogging. "Unlimbering," athletes have always called it.

Israel has five of these that he favors, although there are perhaps 70 that can be used, depending on preference. Only a few minutes are necessary. These exercises are simply a means of stretching the muscles to better receive the shock of running.

Equally important: warm up slowly — do eight to 10 minutes of light jogging.

"As the body warms up, it has an increased facility to adapt," Israel said.

Too many new runners try to achieve a full running pace when they start. Take it easy. Allow the muscles to stretch some more and then increase your running gradually. Too many try to run too fast too far too soon.

Too many run when fatigued. "When someone gets fatigued, instead of putting the foot down, they jam it down."

Many experts now recommend joggers run "heel, side of the foot and off on the toe." Whatever style is used, Israel said one key to avoiding injuries is muscle control. "Instead of jamming the foot down, put it down."

"We talk about a controlled motion as opposed to uncontrolled. Looking at movies of runners, I've been struck by the fact so many people run very flat footed, especially when they're tired."

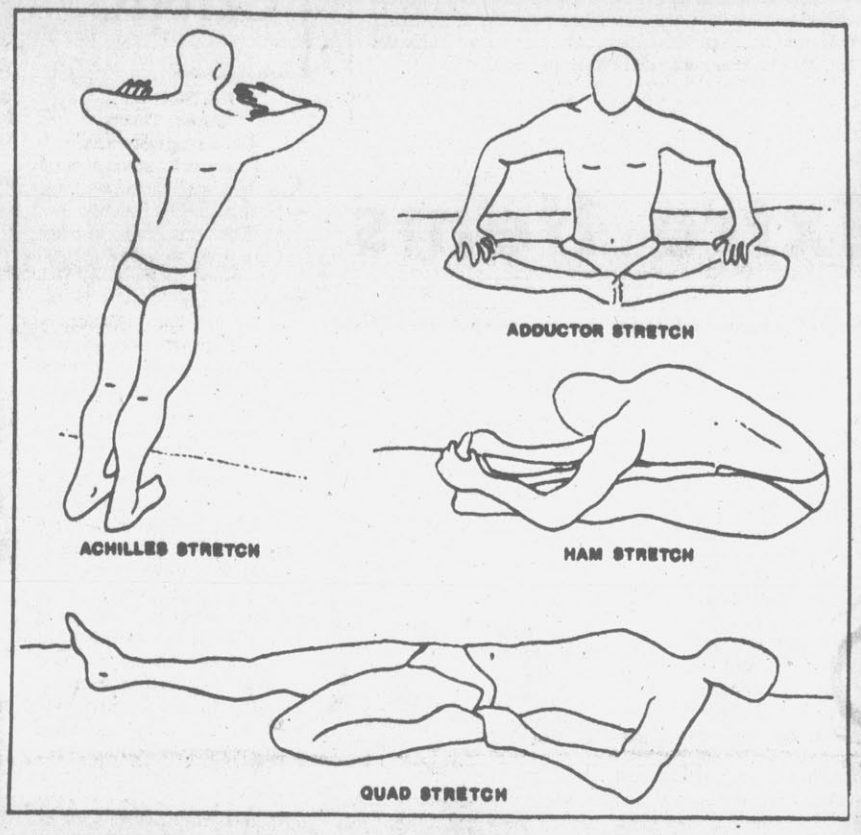

Running straight-legged is at least as bad and usually results in a flat-footed stride. Coming down with the knee bent is best. Like so many coaches say, "pick 'em up and put 'em down."

A straight back can avoid back trouble. "People who develop back problems usually are running leaning forward."

A runner's alignment of the body best described as a "straight forward pace" is typically best although, as Israel puts it, "alignment has to be individualized."

It's out of the area of the orthopedist, but Israel notes some women have developed breast problems. Some of them foolishly run braless. The remedy is obvious.

One of the best ways to correct some of the problem-causing habits, Israel said, is simply "realizing it when you're doing it."

Prescription For Doctors In Rural Practice

By DEBORAH FRAZIER

DENVER (UPI) — Rural communities competing with cities for doctors often lose because rustic comforts pale next to fat salaries, access to recent scientific discoveries and more freedom, a University of New Mexico Medical School professor said.

Dr. Martin Kantrowitz, a former rural practitioner, has advised hundreds of restive "docs" about to leave small community practice and is researching the factors leading to physician transiency under a federal grant.

"We know there is a widespread physician dissatisfaction with rural practice, but we aren't sure why," he said at an American Medical Association conference on rural health.

Kantrowitz has formulated a list of 16 variables which he believes contribute to satisfaction in a rural practice.

"Some are amenable to change and others are not. But if a doc is less than happy in rural practice, he or she should look at these elements and decide what is changeable, if they want to make the changes or leave," he said.

First on the list is compensation, not because money is always the major issue, but because "it's better to get it out in the open," he said. The issue takes in salary, vacations and fringe benefits.

"A lot of docs go into rural practice for altruistic reasons and say they will be happy if there is enough money to get along on. Well, the honeymoon ends and while the doctor may not like to admit it, money can be a problem."

A bargaining session with the community can solve the money issue, he said, but he warned against use of federal grants for remuneration because the funds tend to dry up after a few years.

The next three components — colleagues, consultation on cases and continuing medical education — are benefits physicians derive from urban practice and are sorely missed by practioners starting out alone in rural areas.

"Even if a doctor comes from a small town, he has been in a big city for probably 11 years. You get all kinds of expectations, professional and personal, from that and it poses adaption problems," said Kantrowitz.

The remedy Kantrowitz recommends is "getting plugged into a medical system" such as a university which offers traveling seminars, a telephone consultation service and regular communication with specialists.

Competence and confidence are two related factors which also can be cured by "plugging in." He said the two tend to be vague feelings which dissipate when the isolated physician has professional contact with other doctors.

Kantrowitz said dissatisfaction with clinic facilities takes in the variables of equipment, space and staff. The ninth component, compatible staff, ties in as well.

"Some doctors can get along with anyone and see a rundown facility as earthy and positive. But if it's a problem, facilities are relatively inexpensive to fix compared to the cost of finding another doctor," he said.

Coverage, which involves care of patients while the physician is away, was described as a "biggie" by Kantrowitz because of the distance between doctors in rural areas and the need for practitioners to "go fishing when they need to."

"If the doctor feels he cannot get away because of the coverage problem, he will eventually fall apart. Coverage has to be set up whether it involves physician extenders or the community doing without for a week," he said.

The component of clinical spectrum works both ways, he said. Some doctors dislike performing the full range of specialties from surgery to dermatology while others find the frequency of trauma and delivery cases limiting.

Common goals, communication and community encompass the physician's rapport with the people served and spill over into the next to last element — captivation with the practice, said Kantrowitz.

"It's a catch-all. Some doctors stay in rural practice for 40 years and they are still captivated. Others lose the thrill after a certain time. They either leave or make changes to get it back," he said.

Control of self is the final issue and encircles the other 15 because the physician must be able to assess the situation, his or her own needs, and make decisions based on those facts rather than feelings.

"What is most important varies from case to case, just as every community has its own unique situation. But a doctor should sit down before he starts rural practice or before he is too unhappy and think about all these things," he said.

Cite 'Rival' To Congregations

ST. LOUIS (AP) — The "electronic church," the description applied to the expanding Christian radio and television stations, is becoming a major rival to local congregations, says the Rev. Dr. Martin E. Marty, church historian of the University of Chicago.

In an article in Perspectives, published by Evangelical Lutherans in Mission, he says the modern-style, broadcast packaging of "old-time religion" competes for supporters with the disciplined, pastoral life of the church.

"We should worry about members of the completely private, individual, 'invisible', do-it-yourself religion that competes against the Biblical faith wherein Christ exists for us today in communion, in the members of the Body he heads."

ELEGANT MASTER BEDROOM MARKS DESIGN

By Jerry Bishop

Contemporary in accent, the Creekstead, a four bedroom design, spotlights those bedrooms and lavishes the master bedroom in particular with plenty of square footage and a sumptuous bath.

The exterior impression is one of brick and glass angled an fused to create a unique structure. Inside, the focus is on living and the result is plenty of space for doing just that. Bedrooms are large, the family room measures 21-ft. in length, and the plan offers a 12-ft. dining nook in addition to the dining room.

Double doors lead to the expansive entry, where high windows admit light and create a pervasive feeling of space. At left, the family room, which might also be used as a formal living room, contains a substantial amount of floor space and climaxes in a wood-burning fireplace.

Doors open to the adjoining gameroom, well-furnished with closet, wet bar, and sliding glass doors to the breezeway. Powder room and combination laundry /utility room separate the gameroom from the sizable kitchen and dining nook. Most notable in the kitchen is a wealth of counter space, while the dining nook opens to the patio via sliding glass doors.

Featured on the main level is the master bedroom, measuring more than 15 x 16, with a bath complex nearly as large. The bath and dressing room is indulged with double sinks, double closets, and a lavish tub in addition to the shower.

A second bedroom and full bath are included on this level, and a third and fourth bedroom and another full bath is shown on the second level. Favored with sliding glass doors to a balcony, the upper level gameroom can also function as guest room or sitting room.

ON THE HOUSE

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

The "House of the Waterfall," which has attracted more than 250,000 Florida visitors in a year's time, has competition as a tourist attraction — the "House of the Fountains."

The new "dream" house makes extensive use of wood, glass and water, blending them with the natural surroundings. Like its predecessor, a product of the same building team, it's an eye-catching structure that simply isn't for everyone. But for someone with a taste for the dramatic, an affinity for water and a good-sized pocketbook, it can transform everyday living into a luxurious experience. Meanwhile, it is expected to be viewed by thousands of persons every week at its site in the Sugarmill Woods community in Homosassa, Fla.

As you approach this unusual house, you note large areas of tinted glass rising from reflecting moats to support massive wood-beamed triangles. To enter the house, you must walk across a wooden bridge that seems to float over a moat with fountains on either side. Once inside, the living room, anchored at one end, features a huge semi-circular fireplace. You immediately are aware that, no matter which window or glass area you look through, reflective pools can be seen.

From then on, it's one impressive feature after another. Among them are:

—A master bath with a circular shower stall and a sunken tub surrounded by smoked mirrors.

—And, among many other unusual items, a private collection of antique carpentry tools displayed in a workshop. These tools, not for sale and not a part of the house, are owned by Wayne Goff, a key executive in the development of the community and creation of the fountained house.

Goff says that one of the ideas of building the house was to test public reaction to the various features, most of which he believes are practical even if a bit spectacular.

(Do-it-yourselfers will find much valuable information in Andy Lang's handbook, "Practical Home Repairs," available by sending $1.50 to this newspaper at Box 5, Teaneck, N.J., 07666.)

Disposing Of The Extra Items

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures

A retired couple moving to a small apartment or condominium may have little use for 90 percent of their possessions.

Even a young couple moving up the corporate ladder may have that problem — they want better objects than they now enjoy.

To unload excess furnishings, time is necessary and a plan should be worked out. Often a good closing date on a house does not provide enough time. More time may be required and even years may be needed to clear the house if it is large and has been occupied a long time.

One elderly couple lost a good sum, they've decided, by waiting too long to clear their home. They sold things in a hurry for a pittance just when they needed cash.

But another elderly couple figured out a plan so that they could sell some things early, leaving things in view that enhanced their home, making it look attractive to prospective buyers.

"We decided to sell hidden things in closets, cupboards, basement and attic," they said.

For example, in an old pine cupboard they had a dozen antique oyster plates that had never been used. Originally purchased as a can't-let-a-bargain-go-by auction item for $15, they brought much more when sold.

In that same cupboard also were a number of old plates, tea sets, crystal goblets, odd silver pieces, table lighters, and a pair of Staffordshire cats.

The couple decided to sell these things to a dealer. It was too much trouble to organize a tag sale, and they would have to pay the operators commission which would cut the profit by 25 percent perhaps. The dealers' offers were almost as good.

After that, drawers were emptied of linens and offered to the local PTA thrift shop which consigned them at one-third commission.

Kitchen cupboards had too many dishes and more than needed cookware, casseroles, electric appliances. They kept only a normal range of cooking utensils, pie tins, cake tins, the yogurt maker and a few favorite cookbooks that were weeded out of a collection of 150. The left-over books were divided — some sold by advertising and the others given to their children and to the local library.

They had accumulated more glasses than they could use in decades — even if they broke them regularly — so their children took the excess.

The basement was a real problem. Through the years, the neat arrangement on shelves and floor had become a disaster. Children had tossed albums, books and trunks willy-nilly. There were old tires and bicycles, basketball hoops and the like cluttering the area. Along with other old things on the shelves, these things were put on an open outdoor deck and a sign was put in front of the house advertising the big bargains.

Old doors and windows and some building materials were included in the lot. This proved a good way to get rid of basement excess. Neighbors and passers-by wended their way to the deck at the back of the house. An awning over the deck protected the sale items so that they could be available until they were sold, even in rainy weather.

Closets were emptied of old clothing — most of it went to the local charity box. Only useful items were kept.

A month before this couple will move, and after the house is sold, they will decide on what they need in the new house and sell the remainder of the visible things.

Most houses sell faster when they are kept furnished. With clutter removed, a house can look especially attractive and clean.

Giving yourself time also gives you a good chance to choose your house market. Real estate in most areas seems to be continuing an upward climb so nothing may be lost by waiting to sell the house.

But timing is very important in the over-all scheme.

GARDEN CLINIC

N.C. State Univ. Answers Timely Gardening Questions

Q. I can't get a stand of okra. I've tried soaking the seed and everything. (H.F., Raleigh)

A. The first rule in okra culture is to wait until the soil has warmed to plant it. This would be after May 1 in the Raleigh area. You might also try seeding your okra in a container and then gransplanting it to the garden. (George Hughes, extension horticulturist)

Q. The Hosta plant is growing in popularity as a border plant. Can this plant be divided like lirope to make several smaller plants? (H.H., Kernersville)

A. Yes. This plant can be divided into smaller clumps in the spring. It is a popular plant and given a rich soil and light shade it will continue to thrive for several years with very little care. (Kim Powell, extension landscape horticulturist)

Q. How can I control scale insects in a hobby greenhouse? (K.F., Kannapolis)

A. Spray with a summer oil at the rate of five tablespoons per gallon of water. Apply two applications at 10 to 14 day intervals. On ferns use two tablespoons of summer oil and one teaspoon of malathion per gallon of water to avoid damage to the plants. (J.R. Baker, extension entomologist)

Q. My peach tree is loaded. I counted one limb 12 inches long with 28 little peaches. The tree is eight years old. Will it grow that many big peaches? (C.C., Wadesboro)

A. No way. A tree that age might have two bushels of peaches. If thinned, they might be the size of baseballs. If not thinned, they might be the size of walnuts. Hand-thin up to the time you can't cut the green peaches with a sharp knife. Thinning does little good once the pit (stone-seed) is hard. Leave the fruit at the top one-third of the tree four to six inches apart, the middle one-third six to eight inches apart, and the lower one-third, eight to twelve inches. Leave the largest and best fruit, and remove doubles, hail damaged fruit and so forth. (Mel Kolbe, estension horticulturist)

Here's the Answer

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

Q. — Several weeks ago I fixed a leak in a water pipe by wrapping around the pipe a piece of rubber cut from an old inner tube and then using friction tape to keep the rubber in place. No water has come through since then, but a neighbor says it is only a question of time before the leak occurs again. Is he right? If so, what can I do about it?

A. — A patch of that kind will often hold indefinitely. The danger is that, if it doesn't, you may be out of the house some day or perhaps on a vacation, only to return to a flooded condition that can cause a lot of damage. A more permanent repair can be made by using a pipe clamp. There are several varieties. One embodies the same principle employed in your homemade repair. It is made of metal lined with rubber. When tightened, the rubber clings to the area of the leak and is effective for all but very large pipe openings. Most hardware stores and all building supply and plumbing dealers carry such clamps.

Q. — Some cracks have developed in the outside walls of our stucco house. They aren't very wide or very deep, but I'd like to fix them before any leaks develop. What should I use to fill the cracks?

A. — Ready-mixed mortar will do the job. Sometimes it is wise to make the cracks a little wider so the mortar will hold better. An even firmer grip can be created by undercutting the openings so the bottoms are wider than the surfaces. The mortar then can be locked in. After the repairs have been made, wet down the patched areas once or twice a day for several days. This will prevent the patches from drying out too quickly.

Q. — I recently took up wood finishing as a hobby, specializing in the clear types of finishes. I constantly read everything I can get my hands on about this subject, but sometimes get very confused. Different authorities say different things about the correct way to finish wood. Isn't there any standard method that a beginner can follow?

A. — There are general procedures, but they differ in certain minor respects. It is these differences that make wood finishing so fascinating. Once you have learned the fundamentals of applying the various types of finishes, you can experiment to your heart's content in an effort to get individual results. That's the hobby part of wood finishing; once you have achieved a certain satisfactory result, you can utilize it on pieces of good furniture.

(The techniques of applying varnish, shellac, lacquer, stain, bleach, etc., are detailed in Andy Lang's booklet, "Wood Finishing in the Home," available by sending 35 cents and a long, STAMPED, self-addressed envelope to Know-How, P.O. Box 477, Huntington, N.Y., 11743. Questions of general interest will be answered in the column, but individual correspondence cannot be undertaken.)

Reading Habit Learned Early

NEW YORK (UPI) — Childhood exposure to newspapers establishes newspaper reading habits for adulthood. A new report on newspaper readership shows 70 percent of the adults who recalled having a paper at home during childhood are frequent readers today, reading a paper on four or five of the past five weekdays prior to their interview.

Sixty-seven percent said they were newspaper subscribers. Among those who did not have a paper at home during childhood, only 56 percent described themselves as frequent readers and 49 percent as subscribers. The report developed by the Newspaper Advertising Bureau, Inc. was based on a study in a nationwide program to increase newspaper circulation and readership.

GOT MORE INSULATION QUESTIONS?

HERE ARE MORE HONEST ANSWERS.

Q. In an existing house, frame or masonry, how can you insulate sidewalls without tearing them up?

A. Good question. With many materials, it would be impossible. But with Homefoamers® foam it's quite simple to insulate any type of house — wood, brick, metal-sided or stucco. We install our foam through holes in your outside walls.

On wood and metal sided homes, we make these holes beneath the siding where they will never be seen. In brick homes, we drill small holes between some of the bricks. Occasionally it's necessary to remove a few bricks, then pump in our foam. It flows into nooks and crannies, around pipes and wires to form an efficient, lasting thermal barrier.

When we're done, we replace the siding or patch and conceal any holes we have made so that you can hardly tell where we've been.

Buying Grass Seed? Reading Label Is Important

MARYSVILLE, Ohio (UPI) — Reading a grass seed label is as important as reading a food label to make sure you're getting the best buy for your money.

Knowing what to look for can mean the difference between a fine, thick lawn that lasts for years or a poor quality one that develops hard-to-control problems, says Dale Kern, president of Seed Technology, Inc., a major independent seed-testing company.

Regulations governing seed labels were written mainly for farmers' needs, Kern said, not lawn owners. Further confusion results because the quantities listed on labels are in terms of weight, not volume.

Because some seeds are much larger than others, the size of the box or bag is not a reliable guide to the quantity of seed contained. For example, one seed of ryegrass weighs as much as five seeds of Kentucky bluegrass.

The top line on every label is required to state the percentage of pure seed and the type of grass or mixture of grasses the package contains.

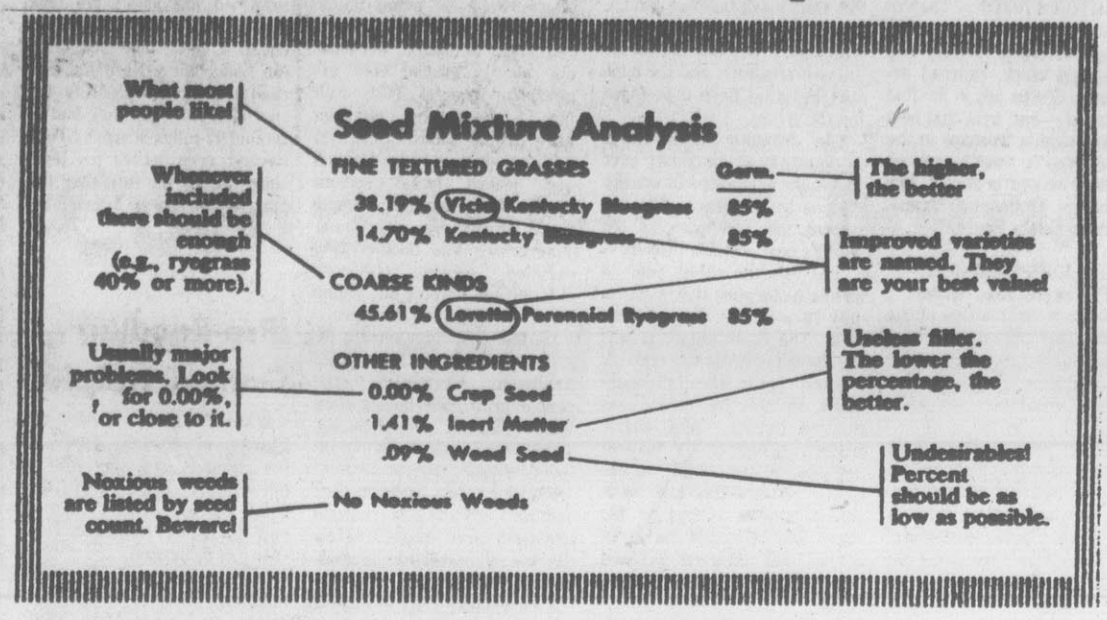

The listings under "Other Ingredients" should be read with extra care, Kern said. He recommends avoiding any seed described as "Crop." That word applies to plants such as timothy or brome or turf grasses. Chemicals that destroy timothy or brome also kill the grass. Turf grasses, which are different in color and texture from lawn grass, cannot be wiped out with standard weed controls, he said.

Kern also recommends avoiding mixtures that list:

— A high percentage of "Inert Matter" — chaff, ground corn cobs, leaves, even sand;

— Anything above a fraction of one percent of weed seeds by weight. Kern said some mixtures contain non-problem weed seeds mixed in with grasses harvested in Washington and Oregon, where much United States grass seed is grown. He said they wouldn't last long in a lawn because they cannot tolerate mowing.

Kern said the best value guides for a consumer are a good guarantee on the label, a brand whose quality the consumer is familiar with and a listing of the number of square feet the contents will cover.

Virgil Meyer Likes His Job: Just Watching Grass Grow

By TIM MILLER

COLUMBUS, Ohio (UPI) — Virgil Meyer's job is about as exciting as sitting and watching grass grow.

In fact, that is a good part of Meyer's job. He doesn't think it's boring at all.

He is a research specialist for one of the world's largest producers of grass seed and lawn care products, O.M. Scott and Sons of Marysville, Ohio.

His job is seeing that the seed customers buy does indeed grow into beautiful, lush green grass, not weeds.

Meyer says two major problems face the lawn grower: "Getting the grass to grow and then keeping it growing."

Lawn care experts tend to downplay the difficulties. But Meyer says there can be problems:

"There are hundreds of varieties of seed and there are hundreds of chemicals that can be used to help grow seed or to combat weed growth. "The trick is finding the right combination of seed and chemicals."

The first step is selecting the seed. Although hundreds of species of grass exist, only a few will grow well in turf areas. Each species has its own texture, color, growth rate and maintenance characteristics.

Some grasses do well in sunshine, others in shade, Meyer said. Some grow fast, others do not. Most seed packets are a mixture and are clearly labeled as to their characteristics.

"The important thing is to buy a high quality seed," he said. "A 'clean' seed packet, one that contains few weeds and good quality seed is well worth the price. If you seed in weeds you'll have problems that will be difficult to solve."

Meyer said a homeowner's best bet is to consult a garden store expert.

"He should be aware of what grows well in your area and he can advise you on what to expect from certain seeds. The same is true if you have a problem with dying grass or with weeds.

"Sometimes only a soil anaylsis can solve a problem. County extension agents can help, or garden experts. Most varieties of seed are disease resistant, but if you do have a problem it can be difficult to determine what it is without digging up a soil sample and having it analyzed," he said.

Meyer spends a great deal of time trying to improve existing varieties and develop new ones.

About 90 percent of the seed sold in the United States is grown in the Pacific Northwest.

"The weather is perfect there," says Meyer. "It's wet almost all of the time except for May and June when the seed is harvested.

"What you try to do is get a hardy blend, one that will result in the greatest growth with the least possible effort. And also one that will provide years of beauty."

He said work also is done on special strains, such as bentgrass that is used primarily for golf course greens.

Scott has a toll-free number in each state for lawn care questions from consumers. Fred Sweet and his staff of seven in Marysville stand by to answer them and handle mail-in service.

The mail-in service is just that — homeowners can mail in their weeds for analysis and advice for solving the problem.

Even a beautiful lawn that is the envy of the neighborhood has to be mowed.

Meyer may soon solve that problem, too.

"We're working on a variety of grass that doesn't grow very fast," he said. "Our aim is to cut the number of required mowings to as few as possible. We think that maybe by the year 2000 we may even be able to seed a lawn that never needs mowing."

Cover Drugs Spectrum

By CAROL DEEGAN

MIAMI (AP) — Lawrence and Linda Young are the parents of two children who will some day be making choices about the recreational use of drugs.

"We found no source that we were happy with in terms of providing drug information to our children, so we set out to solve the problems on a lay level," Lawrence Young said.

The result is a book, written with three other people, entitled "Recreational Drugs." It attempts to provide detailed, lay-level descriptions of 89 categories of drugs ranging from alcohol and caffeine to nutmeg, coleus, marijuana, cocaine and PCP.

"Our book does not attempt to take a position on drug use. Neither pro nor con," Young said. "Yet we do realize one thing: drug experimentation and use is booming. The likelihood that the trend will lessen in the months and years ahead is virtually nil."

He says our society today is probably the most intoxicant-oriented of any that has ever existed.

"When we say a great portion of our population uses recreational drugs, we're really talking about the fact that we have 100 million people in this country who consume alcohol. They're certainly consuming it for recreational purposes.

"We have 55 million Americans, including 9 million teens, who smoke tobacco, another recreational drug. Americans consume 50 percent of the caffeine — coffee — in the world. And the list goes on and on.

"It's estimated that 45 million Americans have experimented with marijuana, an illegal substance; about 8 million have experimented with cocaine, and if I went on about each and every drug and began to add up the figures, the cumulative total is an impressive percentage of our population," he said.

Young said teen-agers seemed to be using more drugs than ever today — perhaps because of affluence, perhaps because drugs are more available in school from other children.

"The source of a lot of illicit drugs is not only the street market, but very often their parents' medicine cabinets and places around the house. Parents tend to keep medications such as Valium very handy around the house, and that makes it easy for the kids to get at those," he said.

"And the family liquor cabinet has always been accessible to many students," he added.

The National Institute on Drug Abuse says children are now entering the drug culture as early as 10 years of age — although 15 is the more typical age.

"What children should be doing at an early age is being exposed to more drug education at a very early age," Young said. "And that's probably from the time they enter school, on.

"It's a little late to begin teaching about drug education in junior high when we know the median drinking age is 11 at this point," he said.

Small Disaster Team Rushes To Accident Scenes

EDITOR'S NOTE — They're disaster experts, plowing through wreckage of every major airline crash, railroad derailment. Their job is to find the cause — and from that help prevent similar mishaps in the future. They're weak in number but their record is strong, this 200-man National Transportation Safety Board.

By JOHN BARBOUR
AP Newsfeatures Writer

Nothing stems the flow of the nation. Americans on the move. Not ticket lines, security frisks, costly gasoline, toll booths, blowouts, insurance. Not even death.

The log records 220 million airline passengers a year, 2.5 billion aircraft miles, 100 million cars traveling more than a trillion miles, seven million motorcycles, four out of five Americans over 16 licensed to drive, 325,000 miles of railroad track, 28,000 locomotives, 1.7 million railroad cars.

The cost was more than 10,000 railroad accidents a year, more than 4,500 private airplane crashes, more than 44,000 dead on streets and highways, more than the mind can tolerate, and a potential for a lot more.

In the blur of coming and going — with the detachment of a tennis pro who isolates the stroke from the game — a crew of some 200 experts dissects the failure of metal and men in microscopic detail and examines the pathology of disaster, the autopsy of blame.

This is the staff of the National Transportation Safety Board, a creature of Congress. Its "Go-Teams" jet to the scene of crashes, explosions, derailments in hours.

They pick through the remains, the twisted metal, the human debris. They reconstruct what they can of the accident from aircraft tapes, skid marks, broken rails and ruptured pipe.

They plumb the horror in the eyes of witnesses, the dark sounds heard in the night, the jumbled events in the disorder of shock and memory. From this they patch together a high-speed vehicle from its trail of wreckage. They do this in the interest of safety, and the hope that the dead have a message for the living.

The dramatic improvement in domestic airline safety over the years is credited to investigations by this group that has earned the reputation of the world's best accident probers.

1976 was the safest year in airline history for U.S. airlines, only 28 accidents, four of them fatal. The death toll of 45 was the lowest since 1954 when 42 persons died in three fatal accidents. In 1977, the record was marred by the worst airline tragedy in history, the take-off collision of two 747s in the Canary Islands that killed 582. Board experts rushed to the scene and recreated the weird events that involved fog and misunderstood tower instructions.

Many of the dead, the board's experts found, would have lived if they had moved promptly to emergency exits. Instead they sat tight and burned in their seats.

It irks James King, board chairman, that people should accept the inevitability of accidental death and injury. He and other board members point to airplane safety as an example of what can be done. "I think now in safety it's second only to the intercity bus," King says.

King likens the fatalistic notion that accidents will happen with similar notions about poverty or disease. "That's nonsense. Nobody has to die of smallpox today. My father had diphtheria. I never had it. I had scarlet fever, mumps, whooping cough. Not one of my children did. We are not condemned to certain things."

The board is approaching new horizons, new hazards to test its capability. Prime among them are railroad derailments involving hazardous chemicals and highway deaths.

The railroads bring perils to smalltown America. Every day railroad cars full of dangerous cargo roll through a thousand downtowns. The potential for disaster is enormous.

In one February weekend, one of 24 derailed cars exploded in Waverly, Tenn., killing 12 and setting downtown afire; near Cades, Tenn., 24 cars on another train derailed and leaked lethal sodium hydroxide, forcing 100 people from their homes; and near Youngstown, Fla., another train derailed, spewing poisonous chlorine gas into the air, killing eight and sickening 67 others.

In the first two months of 1977, 10 derailments involving dangerous materials forced people from their homes from West Virginia to Michigan. There are some 7,000 derailments a year.

Board experts estimate that one-third of all U.S. railroad accidents are preventable by the use of current regulations and know-how.

King expects rails to have a renaissance, but that will mean wholesale repair of decaying road beds and track.

The solution might be to have the federal government take over maintenance of the right-of-way which railroads have ignored because of their financial condition. The railroads would be responsible for maintenance of their rolling stock.

In one rail accident in Florida, the release of dangerous materials could have been prevented, the board found, by installing extra metal shields on the front of tank cars, so that when coupling devices slip, the tank would not be punctured.

That could prevent 85 percent of the punctures at the cost of a few thousand dollars per tank car. King says. "Now that isn't cheap I know, but looking at the Louisville & Nashville railroad accident in Pensacola, the cost was $800,000. They had to rebuild 12 miles of track...They haven't even settled the legal suits yet. By the time they finish, it's going to be astronomical."

King thinks the board can convince railroads that safety is more profitable than living with accidents.

Same thing for truckers. To meet overall length regulations, truck cabs are getting smaller and trailers longer. The cramped cabs add to driver fatigue. At the same time truck schedules argue against the 55 mph speed limit, and trucks are going faster.

"For every truck driver you hear killed, they kill 40 people in cars," King says with outrage. "The automobiles are getting smaller and the death toll is going to get higher."

The responsible federal agency is the Bureau of Motor Vehicle Safety, Department of Transportation. The board has oversight responsibility for the bureau, which has only 128 people to monitor the nation's vehicles.

"We started to issue a report saying you're not doing your job," King says. "Then we stopped. It wasn't fair. It's like me sending you down with a bucket into the hold of the Titanic and then telling you the ship sank because you didn't bail out fast enough."

Instead the board sent a supporting letter, promising to back a bureau request for more people.

The inequities of the road that lead to death aggravate King and other board members. King wonders if the board shouldn't pressure the Interstate Commerce Commission to get after trucking firms.

"Here's a corporation," he explains. "They put a truck on the road, a lease job. But they knew the truck. They never kept maintenance records because that would show prima facie evidence of neglect...The truck driver came over a hill and killed eight people, injured 27. His brakes failed. He's now in jail for 20 sears on negligent homicide.

"But the guys who put him on the road, in the corporation, are all sitting back in the board room. That's wrong."

The ICC, King says, could keep track of trucking firms "and make sure they never pull that sort of business again."

He points to the pipeline construction in Alaska as a remarkable safety record under difficult weather and terrain situations. They hired bush pilots but they made them live by the safety book or get out.

"They flew more people, more dangerous materials in difficult weather, met their schedules and had an incredible safety record," King says. "Why? It was profitable to be safe."

When you're only 200-strong, King explains, you have to be selective. The board's experts, ranging from meteorologists to metallurgists, from old railroad men to pilots, investigate some 800 civil aviation accidents a year, some 400 railway accidents and various other catastropic surface events including highway, pipeline and marine incidents. It also reviews nearly 4,000 accident investigations by the Federal Aviation Administration.

The board can only recommend action, but with the weight of Congress behind it, its recommendations are generally followed by the agencies over which it has review — the FAA, the Coast Guard, the Federal Highway Administration, the Federal Railway Administration among them.

Pre-Reading Games Helpful

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Playing pre-reading games a few minutes each day with a pre-schooler helps when the child reaches school, says a new pamphlet from the U.S. Office of Education.

One game it suggests: keep magnetic letters on your refrigerator door. Show your child a letter on a card, the first letter, for example, of his or her name, and ask the child to pick the letter's twin from the door. When this becomes easy, ask the child to find the same letter in advertisements or newspaper headlines.

This and other reading games are described in Teaching Your Child to Read, available free from the Consumer Information Center, Dept. 644F, Pueblo, Colo. 81009.

Unexplained Dizziness

When I lie down or when I make a sudden change in position, the room turns, I get dizzy, and feel faint. I don't have high blood pressure, which is what worries me. What else can cause this? — Mrs. K.R., Vt.

Dear Mrs. R.:

These transient episodes of dizziness and faintness, with or without nausea, can be caused by rapid changes of position. Many people whose blood pressure is normal may have what is called "relative low blood pressure."

It has been commonly observed that such people frequently complain of these momentary feelings of dizziness. Most often it is associated with poor eating habits, especially with long intervals of no eating.

A careful physical examination can rule this out and also rule out the possibility of low blood sugar. The blood circulation, the condition of the inner ear, the heart and lungs, too, can be explored as possible factors in the production of these uncomfortable moments.

In the meantime, try to avoid making rapid changes of position. Lying down should be a slow process. Similarly, when you arise in the morning, get up slowly so that your blood circulation to the brain can accommodate itself. In addition, you might try increasing your protein for breakfast with cottage cheese or similar cheeses.

Try to limit your salt and fluid intake moderately. Before embarking on such a regime, a telephone call to your doctor will give you added assurance.

Why aren't there laws against tattoo parlors? My son is 23 and foolishly allowed himself to be tattooed along with two other friends. Can these tattoos be removed? — Mr. L.L., Ind.

Dear Mr. L:

Many tattoo parlors in the United States have been ruled as being illegal. In some areas where they are still permitted, tattooing is under constant inspection by the local boards of health. For there are constant dangers to health in tattooing. Hepatitis and even syphilis have been reported in people who had been tattooed with infected needles.

Unfortunately, many young people fall into the trap of being pressured by their friends to join them in being tattooed. Almost always they regret it immediately thereafter. But regretting is not a technique for eradicating these marks on the skin.

The armed forces constantly point out the hazards of tattooing, warning the men that eventually they'll be sorry for having had it done. The warnings are apparently not sufficient dissuaders.

Plastic surgeons have devised all kinds of techniques for removing tattoos. None of the methods are nearly as effective as staying away from a tattoo parlor.

Christy Moller Went Completely Blank As America's Junior Miss

"My mind went completely blank. I couldn't believe I had won," she says.

Hal Linden will host the special when Christina Ellen Moller passes on her crown to her successor, on "America's Junior Miss Pageant," Monday, May 8 (8-9:30 p.m.) on CBS.

Christy, who was born in Alabama and raised in Arkansas, represented the latter in the 1977 competition. This year, she will be on hand to crown her successor on "America's Junior Miss Pageant," Monday, May 8, 8 to 9:30 p.m. Hal Linden and Vicki Lawrence will co-host the live broadcast from Mobile, Ala.

It all started for Christy when she entered the Northeast Arkansas regional Junior Miss competition. A high school teacher, who had been involved in the program, encouraged Christy to enter.

"It wasn't clear to me what the pageant stood for then. I thought of it as a beauty contest," Miss Moller recalls. "It turned out to stand for a lot of the things that I've always felt were important — primarily scholastic achievement, as well as high personal standards and service to the community."

She says she felt honored simply to be representing her county in the state pageant.

"I couldn't believe it when I found out that I would be going to the national finals. I'd always watched it on television and it really excited me to know that I would actually be there in Mobile."

Christy says that the talent presentation was the "scariest" part. She performed a ballet. "I'm not a serious dancer by any means," she says. "I just enjoy it, and I had been taking lessons at the time." She discovered that the contestants are not judged on professional skills but "on what you do with what you've got: originality and creativity are stressed."

Still, she found herself a little more nervous during this segment of the contest. "For the other on-stage portions you can draw on the strength of the other girls. Here you're out on your own. I just hoped I wouldn't fall."

Beyond the excitement of this year — traveling cross-country and meeting countless numbers of people — stands the impact of the $15,000 scholarship Miss Moller received. "The former Junior Misses I've spoken to remember the friends and fun but said that it was the scholarship money that really changed their lives," Christy says.

Network Stars To Test Prowess

Twenty-four of the top stars of ABC, CBS and NBC entertainment shows test their athletic prowess in head-to-head competiton on ABC Sports' "Battle of the Network Stars: Net-War IV," airing Sunday, May 7, 9 to 11 p.m.

Pepperdine University in Malibu, Calif., provides the beautiful setting as the three network teams square off against each other. The teams, each consisting of eight celebrity-athletes, are led by Gabriel Kaplan, Debby Boone and model Cheryl Tiegs for ABC; Tony Randall, Jimmie Walker and Mackenzie Phillips for CBS; and Dan Haggerty, Arte Johnson and Jane Curtin for NBC.

Howard Cosell will host the program, along with Suzanne Somers and Bruce Jenner.

In the three previous competitions, ABC teams have won twice and NBC once.

The complete lineups shape up as follows:

CBS: Tony Randall of "The Tony Randall Show," team captain; Kevin Dobson of "Kojak"; James MacArthur of "Hawaii Five-O"; Denise Nicholas of "Baby, I'm Back"; Mackenzie Phillips of "One Day At a Time"; Victoria Principal of "Dallas"; Bo Svenson and Jimmie Walker.

NBC: Dan Haggerty of "Grizzly Adams," team captain; Rhonda Bates of "rollergirls"; Denis Dugan of "Richie Brockelman, Private Eye"; Melissa Gilbert of "Little House on the Prairie"; Arte Johnson, host of "Knockout"; Lance Kerwin of "James at 16"; Larry Wilcox of "CHiPs" and Jane Curtin of "Saturday Night Live."

The teams compete against each other in seven events: swimming, kayak rowing, frisbee, obstacle course, running relay, pass and catch football and tug of war. There's $360,000 in prize money at stake. The eight members of the winning team receive $20,000 each, the runners-up $15,000 each, and $10,000 goes to each member of the third-place team.

Remick, Hudson Star In 10-Hour TV Novel

Lee Remick and Rock Hudson, who star in the 10-hour Novel for Television, "Wheels," found their roles to be considerably more than 'just another character' to portray.

The drama is based on Arthur Hailey's best-selling novel about America's richest industry — automobile manufacturing — and the lives of the high-ranking executives who run it and their diverse employees. It will be colorcast Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, May 7,8 and 9; and Sunday and Monday, May 14 and 15 (9 to 11 p.m. each night).

Hudson stars as Adam Trenton, ambitious executive in National Motors, whose marriage to Erica Baxter Trenton (Ms. Remick) is floundering because of his devotion to his job and his efforts to develop a commercial new auto.

"This role means a lot to me," says Ms. Remick, "because I play a very complicated lady with many problems — marital problems, mother problems, romance problems, loneliness problems. It involves the growth and the ultimate demise of a woman at a particular time of her life. She's truly been a fascinating character to deal with."

Hudson, who didn't read Hailey's novel before production began ("I was told not to, because there were so many changes"), he says: "The automobile industry is, of course, the setting of the story, but it really is the story of a family. It's more a story about people than about 'wheels.'"

As "McMillan," in his last outing with television, Hudson says he was "more-or-less like a card-board cut-out," but—where Adam Trenton is concerned — it's been a different scene. "With this role I get a chance to really sink my teeth into a portrayal. To really get going with it."

So intense was Hudson on his portrayal of Adam, that he said: "Many times the director would come up to me and say, 'Hold back a little bit. You're going too far.'"

Other 'key' people in the drama are Erica's jealous father, board chairman Lowell Baxter (Ralph Bellamy), who favors Adam's greatest rival at National Motors — 'hatchet man' Hub Jewiston (Tim O'Connor); Adam's widowed sister, Teresa (Adele Mara) whose inheritance is coveted by the unscrupulous Smokey Stevenson (Anthony Franciosa); advertising copywriter Barbara Lipton (Blair Brown) with whom Adam has an affair, after Erica has deserted him to follow race driver Peter Flodenhale (John Beck).

DISPUTE SETTLED

James MacArthur has settled his contract dispute and will be back in his co-starring role in "Hawaii Five-O," which will begin its 11th year on CBS this fall.

MacArthur will also go to Indochina in August to host-narrate a television documentary titled "Murder of a Gentle Land."

Drama Examines Prejudice

"As the Twig Is Bent," a dramatic examination of the emotional, social and economic roots of prejudice, and its effect on a young American family, will be rebroadcast as part of "...Behold Wondrous Things — 1955," Sunday, May 7, 10 to 10:30 a.m., on CBS-TV.

In 1955, a black woman named Rosa Parks refused to move from her seat at the front of a segregated bus in Montgomery, Ala. That small act of open defiance, which helped spark fundamental changes in American society, is the backdrop for the drama.

Introduced by correspondent Charles Collingwood, the drama focuses on a middle-class father who turns away a child, named Willy, from his daughter's birthday party. Willy, he says, is "All right in his place, but he's not our kind of people." Whether it is race, religion or class prejudice which motivates the father's behavior is purposefully left ambiguous, but it nevertheless ends up poisoning the attitudes of, and relations between, father, daughter and mother. Indeed, the father even cautions his daughter that she had better "learn to discriminate" in picking her friends.

After the playlet, Dr. Lyman Bryson, the program's moderator, speaks with Dr. Liston Pope, Dean of Yale Divinity School, who says that the father, by implanting prejudice in his daughter's mind, "prepares the child badly for a future in which prejudice will be outmoded."

"As the Twig Is Bent," the seventh in a retrospective series of special broadcasts marking the 30th anniversary of "Lamp Unto My Feet," was written by Claire Roskam. It stars John Beal, Helen Craig and Bonnie Sawyer.

First...He Married Her

On-camera, she is a sensuous beauty who plays Edna Thornton on "All My Children," and he, tall and handsome, portrays Seneca Beaulac on "Ryan's Hope."

Off-camera, they are Mr. and Mrs. John Gabriel, parents of two young daughters and apartment dwellers in New York City.

At the time John and Sandy met, John was working in a talent agent's office in Los Angeles. Sandy walked in, searching for an agent. John introduced himself and promptly promised to "make her a star."

But first he made her his wife. Sandy returned to New York, and she and John became engaged through the mail. After a few months of postal courtship, they were married, and although she's had several roles on nighttime series, Sandy has devoted most of her time to caring for John and their children.

All that has changed now, and John has made good on his promise of stardom.

Sandy landed a guest spot on "Ryan's Hope," and it was actually John who first approached the series' producer on her behalf. A story was written for her (she was Jack's therapist), and she did so well that she was kept on for five more shows.

When the "All My Children" casting people saw tapes of her performances, they knew they had the person to play exotic Edna Thornton.

For John Gabriel, television roles are not a new experience. He played Teddy Holmes in "General Hospital" and Link Morrison in "Love of Life."

As the only husband-and-wife acting team appearing on different daytime series, John and Sandy Gabriel render back-to-back performances when "Ryan's Hope" (he's Seneca Beaulac) and "All My Children" (she's villainess Edna Thornton) airs weekdays (12:30-1 p.m. and 1-2 p.m., respectively) on ABC-TV.

Johnny Cash And Wife Pay Tribute To Spring

Johnny Cash stars in "Johnny Cash: Spring Fever," a musical celebration of the season, with guests June Carter Cash, Jessi Colter, The Carter Family, plus two of the most popular musicians on the music scene today, Ray Charles and Waylon Jennings. The hour-long musical special, to be presented Sunday, May 7, 10 p.m., on CBS, also marks the television debut of Johnny's daughter, Roseanne Cash.

Taped before an audience at Nashville's famed Grand Ole Opry, Johnny and his guests perform some old favorites and introduce us to some new compositions. Everything from rock to country, to gospel to popular music is represented on this festive hour of music with Cash and family and friends.

Johnny follows the familiar tradition in country music by introducing his 23-year-old daughter, Roseanne, in her TV debut. A back-up singer for her father, occasionally, this is Roseanne's first solo on television. She sings the 1950's rock-and-roll classic, "So Fine."

"I've got great hopes for her," Johnny said. He talked about how she just signed a major recording contract and he was quick to point out that Roseanne was not just a singer, but also "a very fine songwriter."

Roseanne, who thinks her father may be just a bit prejudiced, said, "Actually, I consider myself a songwriter first." Her new album is made up of a number of original compositions and there's another song in the album of some interest. Called "Understand Your Man," it was recorded by— Johnny Cash.

"When I played it for him," Roseanne said, "he didn't even recognize it until halfway through the song."

If Johnny didn't recognize it, it certainly would not have been because Roseanne lacks any skills as musician. Rather, the opposite would have been true. A music and English major in college, Roseanne has the skill and talent to arrange the song so as to present it in a new and different manner.

Johnny and June Carter Cash team for entertaining musical moments, on "Johnny Cash: Spring Fever," musical special to be broadcast Sunday, May 7 (10-11 p.m.) on CBS.

Elvis Swings Back

Elvis is often thought of as the creator of rock-and-roll. Although the music actually predated his rise to fame, the transformation wrought by the swivel-hipped performer certainly rightfully earned him the title of "King of Rock-and-Roll."

The King's concert special, taped during his concert tour last summer, will be rebroadcast Sunday, May 7, 8 to 9 p.m., on CBS.

Before Elvis, the youth of America had discovered a new music based, like many of its immediate predecessors, on the black music of the time. It had a driving, infectious beat and incorporated new vocal tricks. But the first rock-and-roll music that found favor with the mass teen market was only a pale copy of the black originals. The singers and record producers were afraid of straying too far from the pop music stream and greatly toned down and homogenized the rhythm, vocal inflections and lyrics of the originals.

As to the image of the performers, they seem eager to contradict the charges by outraged parents that they and their music were subverting culture. The early rock bands looked more like college glee clubs than like the outrageously costumed, exaggeratedly sensual young rebels who have since come to represent rock.

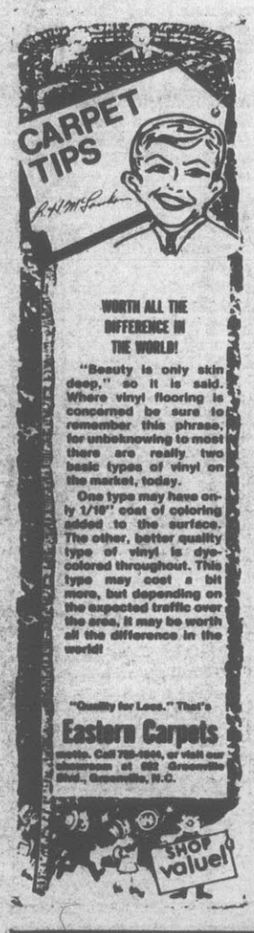

Elvis changed all that. The first of the rock-and-roll superstars, Elvis rocked and swayed with the best of his black contemporaries. It was an all-out assault on established musical tastes.

NANCY WALKER PLAYS GOD IN MOVIE

Nancy Walker, "Rhoda's" TV mother, Billy Crystal of "Soap" and Pamela Sue Martin, formerly "Nancy Drew," will star in "It Could Happen to You," an NBC World Premiere Movie slated to air next season.

Walker will portray God, who sends a special emissary (Crystal), disguised as a mortal, to Las Vegas to find six righteous people. The emissary then falls in love with a mortal (Martin), whose aim is to uncover the angel's real purpose in Las Vegas.

Filming is scheduled to take place at Los Angeles and Las Vegas locations and at Paramount Studios.

'All-Star Family Feud Special'

The casts of hit comedy shows — "Eight Is Enough," "The Love Boat," "Soap" and "Three's Company" — will join host Richard Dawson in a celebrity competition for charity when daytime's number-one game show has a special prime time showing on the "All-Star Family Feud Special," airing Monday, May 8, 8 to 9 p.m., on ABC.

On the program, five "Eight Is Enough" cast members will compete against a team from "The Love Boat." "Eight is Enough" will be playing for cash to be donated to a trust fund for Zachary, the four-year-old son of the late Diana Hyland, and "The Love Boat" cast will play for money to fight sickle cell anemia. The winning team will have a chance to play for an additional $5,000 in cash in the "Family Feud" 'Fast Money' portion.

Next, five members of the "Soap" cast will play for the Motion Picture Fund against members of the "Three's Company" cast, who will play for the Retinitis Pigmentosa Foundation. Again, the victorious team will have a chance to play for an additional $5,000 in cash for its charity.

Also, the winner of the "Eight Is Enough" vs "The Love Boat" competition will play a round against the winner of the "Soap" vs. "Three's Company', competiton for additional cash for its charity. The team winning the playoff then competes in a special bonus "Family Feud" 'Fast Money' round for an additional $10,000 in cash.

The "Eight Is Enough" team consists of Dick Van Patten, Grant Goodeve, Lani O'Grady, Lauri Walters and Susan Richardson. Playing for "The Love Boat" are Gavin MacLeod, Fred Grandy, Bernie Kopell, Ted Lange and Lauren Tewes. The "Soap" team is comprised of Diana Canova, Jennifer Salt, Jay Johnson, Sal Viscuso and Dinah Manoff. Representing "Three's Company" are John Ritter, Joyce DeWitt, Norman Fell, Audra Lindley and Richard Kline.

Richard Dawson was born in England. The unsettled conditions in wartime Britain forced him to leave school at 14, and he went to sea for three years as a merchant seaman. When he was 18, he began acting in a repertory company.

He came to the U.S. in 1962 and during a nightclub appearance in Beverly Hills, he was seen by Carl Reiner, who created a guest spot for him in the original Dick Van Dyke series. In '65, Dawson began what became a six-year role in the "Hogan's Heroes" series.

Richard Dawson (foreground) is in his familiar role as host of "Family Feud" when the casts of ABC's hit comedy series "Eight Is Enough," "The Love Boat," "Soap," and "Three's Company" compete to benefit charity on the "All-Star Family Feud Special," airing Monday, May 8 (8-9 p.m.).

Stars Salute Israel

A spectacular all-star cast has been assembled for "The Stars Salute Israel at 30," a gigantic entertainment gala celebrating the 30th Anniversary of the State of Israel, airing Monday, May 8, 9 to 11 p.m., on ABC.

The event will be presented under the auspices of the American Committee to celebrate Israel's 30th Anniversary. Vice President Walter F. Mondale is Chairman of the Committee and the event.

'Turnabout' Explores Military Policy

The Pentagon recently asked Congress to consider legislation which would end the long-time ban on women in combat — allowing women in the Armed Forces to assume unprecedented roles: flying attack planes, volunteering on most Navy ships and working in the infantry.

"Turnabout" explores the "About Face" in military policy Monday, May 8, at 8:30 p.m. on PBS.

Women's participation in the military has increased tenfold since 1945. Now, with the all-volunteer Army and resulting manpower shortages, job opportunities for women are expanding. Before 1972, only 35 per cent of Armed Forces jobs were open to women; now 80 per cent are available, with combat positions as the only current exceptions.

Who does bar the responsibility for defending and, possibly, dying for our country? The Air Force already has ten women pilots and are training more. In the event of war, these women might be in the front lines of the fighting, although now women are barred from combat duty.

"I'm not all that crazy about people taking pot shots at me," says Vicky Crawford, the first woman to pilot the Air Force equivalent of a Boeing 737 jetliner. "But, at the same time, you've got to take your responsibilities seriously and I feel I've got to do my share."

"Turnabout" spends the day at West Point, talking with cadets about their views on the prospects for women in combat.

"I don't know if society now is really ready to accept the thought of a female coming back from war in a body bag," comments Russ Quirici.

Cadet Lillian Pluke says, "The whole institution is geared so much toward training combat leaders. I personally wouldn't mind going into combat at all."

'The Alamo' Rebroadcasts

Richard Widmark, left, and Laurence Harvey star as Jim Bowie and William Travis, respectively, two of the legendary heroes who fought the famous battle recounted in "The Alamo," to be rebroadcast on "The CBS Tuesday Night Movie," May 9 (8-11 p.m.).

The epic saga of the legendary fight to the death of 180 Texas volunteers against a 7,000-man Mexican army, "The Alamo," will be rebroadcast on "The CBS Tuesday Night Movies," May 9, 8 to 11 p.m.

In the year 1836, Texas, then the northernmost province of Mexico, rebels against the government of the Mexican general and President, Santa Anna, and declares itself a republic.

Gen. Sam Houston (Boone) must try to raise and train an army for the war that is certain to follow.

In the sleepy little town of San Antonio, which lies between the headquarters of the opposing generals, Col. William Barret Travis (Harvey) waits with a force of 25 men to establish the first line of defense against Santa Anna.

Col. James Bowie (Widmark), also on the side of Texas independence, joins Travis in San Antonio and a rivalry develops between the two strong-willed men that is kept under control through the efforts of Col. David Crockett (Wayne), who has traveled more than 1,500 miles with his own troops to join the fight.

With tremendous odds against them, the troops gathered by Gen. Houston prepare to fight Santa Anna's 7,000 soldiers at the site of a crumbling Spanish mission called the Alamo.

Special Highlights Black Entertainers

"Komedy Tonite," a special starring an emsemble comedy company of acclaimed black performers — Clevon Little, Paula Kelly, Marilyn Coleman, Marion Ramsey, Shon Vaughn and Charles Valentino — will be presented Tuesday, May 9, 8 to 9 p.m., on NBC.

A number of television favorites are guest stars: Lawrence Hilton-Jacobs ("Welcome Back Kotter"), Danielle Spencer ("What's happening") and Todd Bridges ("Fish".) Comedy headliner Paul Lynde is special guest star. In addition, a 14-member black female dancer troupe is featured.

The program is a musical comedy which highlights energy-packed performances by some of the nation's most talented black entertainers. The wide-ranging performances, from fast-stepping song-and-dance routines to the variety of characters portrayed in the comedy sketches, spotlight the versatility and talent of the ensemble company and its guests.

Geoffrey Holder, noted choreographer, director and costume designer whose Broadway credits include the current "Timbuktu" and "The Wiz," describes the costumes worn in the special as "elegant."

"I hate ugliness," he said. "I'm from the old-fashioned school of gorgeous women and handsome men. I'm tired of leotards and blue denim.

"Elegance is back. Ugliness is out."

PBS Presents Willa Cather

Willa Cather, whose novels presaged the "coming of age" of American literature, is the subject of a sensitive one-hour television documentary portrait by noted film critic Richard Schickel. "Willa Cather's America" will be seen Tuesday, May 9, at 8 p.m. on PBS.

Distinguished actor Hal Holbrook narrates the special and Ms. Cather's words are read by actress Gena Rowlands.

Following the settings of her books, the film uses the red grass of the Nebraska prairie from "My Antonia," the sculptured canyons of New Mexico from "Death Comes to the Archbishop," and the grey canyons of New York as backdrops to Cather's unforgettable prose and unique personality. Using photographs and memorabilia, producer Schickel evokes the smell of the good earth in which Cather's art remains forever rooted.

Willa Cather was born in Virginia in 1873, a generation before Hemingway and a decade before Sinclair Lewis. She was nearly forty when she published her first major novel, "O Pioneers," a story that grew out of her early fascination with the pioneering immigrants who were breaking land on the vast prairies around Red Cloud, Nebraska, where she spent much of her girlhood.

Cather had three aims in life: to make it in a man's world, to create art and to be a Virginia lad like her mother. After graduating from the University of Nebraska, she made her way to New York City, where she rose to the position of Managing Editor of McClure's Magazine at the height of its fame. In the midst of her journalism career, she came under the influence of another distinguished woman writer, Sarah Orne Jewett, whose example and counsel led her to abandon journalism for literature.

Conn Makes Television Debut

Widely acclaimed for her role in "You Light Up My Life," and her co-starring role in the upcoming film version of "Grease," pert and pretty Didi Conn comes to the smaller screen of TV as the potential victim of the CBS movie, "Murder at the Mardi Gras," airing Wednesday, May 10, at 9 p.m.

"It has the look of a big motion picture," Didi exclaims in her ever-present bubbly manner. "When we filmed the movie it was Mardi Gras time in New Orleans, and— for the first time in I don't know how many years — they had to call off the major parade because the weather was so bad. It was so cold, and the wardrobe was all these little dresses. I was freezing, and it was like 30 degrees."

It was also hailing, Didi said, which caused considerable concern since a lot of filming was to be done during the parade. Fortunately, however, a good bit of filming had been done ahead of time, and Didi was pleased with the final result. "It really looks terrific!" she commented.

The film is basically about a young woman whose husband was killed in an accident while on leave from the Army, enroute home from Vietnam, Didi continued, "which is interesting, because there are a lot of women about my age who became widowed at a time when they're not young girls anymore. But they're not 40 either.

"At any rate, she's lived a fairly isolated life, never really coming to grips with the fact that she is now on her own. But she wins a contest for this free trip to the Mardi Gras, and she takes this as a symbol that now the pendulum is swinging the other way for her."

While taking home movies of the festivities, she witnesses a murder, and what follows is a combination of joy — as she involves herself with the celebration — and mystery, as she's stalked by the unidentified murderer. Naturally, there's a good sprinking of romance throughout the film. "I don't know if I'd say it's got a happy ending," the actress says teasingly, "but it's got a positive ending, a hopeful ending. And all I can say is that the climax of the film takes place up in the rafters of the Superdome! I became trapped on a catwalk at the top of the Superdome, and that's really me up there.

"And that," she exclaims, "was as exciting to do as it is to see, especially since I don't do too well at heights. But getting the crew and the equipment up there...that's what I mean when I say it's got the feel of a real motion picture. It's authentic!"

Those who have previewed the film will also agree that Didi's authentic in portraying the frightened woman.

Didi Conn stars as a hash-house cashier from Cleveland who finds romance and intrigue in New Orleans, in "Murder at the Mardi Gras," to be presented on "The CBS Wednesday Night Movie"" May 10 (9-11 p.m.).

'Ironside' Couple Is Together Again

Barbara Anderson, Emmy-winning for her role in the "Ironside" series, and her police officer partner, Don Galloway, are together again "You Lie So Deep, My Love," the "CBS Late Movie" Monday, May 8, 11:30 p.m.

For Galloway, the ingenuous boy-next-door cop of "Ironside," his role in the film is a convertible car-coat kind of part with the velvet lining worn on the outside. Galloway is a smoothie married into the Blue Book environment, with an eye on his wife's wealth, and a blonde mistress — not necessarily in that order.

For Barbara Anderson, who plays the wealthy wife and lovely lady in jeopardy, it is a dressy part that displays a wide range of one-of-a-kind creations which fill a rich woman's wardrobe. And the emotional range of the role is just as varied — from wide-eyed innocence to disbelief, then doubt, fear and rage as her husband's schemes are revealed.

David Lowell Rich, producer-director of the film, says, "Don's charming and handsome as the husband. A rugged breed of animal on the outside, with the instincts of a shark inside. You know the kind — the lovable guy with murder on his mind.

"Barbara is warm and appealing as the wife. In the scenes where Don is setting her up for the payoff, they have a beautiful romantic rapport in the genre of a young Joan Fontaine and Cary Grant. They worked well together as a romantic team. I think the word is sexy," he smiled.

Appearing with Barbara and Don are Walter Pidgeon and Angel Tompkins. Pidgeon, a leading romantic actor of his day, is perfectly cast as Miss Anderson's faithful uncle and protector who warns her against the adventurer and adulterer, Galloway.

"You Lie So Deep, My Love" has all the elements of the classic gothic novel — a beautiful woman in jeopardy. She is a woman with brains and ability. She is in no way a detective.

'Wheels' Problem Solved On The Set

What do you do when you have to film assembly line scenes set in a huge automotive plant in the 1960s and you don't have an automotive plant, an assembly line, or an idea where to find either one?

There is an assembly line, shiny 1960 autos, parts and tools looking remarkably like those in photographs of the era.

The art department was stumped for a location until one of the studio drivers suggested looking into a concrete pump plant he knew about in the San Fernando Valley. The owner said if it met their needs, they could film there at night, once his workmen had departed for the day.

By now the driver and crew members were taking a proprietary interest in the set, scouring auto salvage yards to find 1960 parts. They boast: "Maybe if you worked on a car assembly line in the 1960s you wouldn't think our set is perfect, but we think it looks darned good. The art department did a terrific job using all that stuff we dug up. Of course, most of it they built themselves."

According to producer Robert O'Neill, "It would have been impossible to go into a 1978 automotive plant, right at the height of the season, to film a 1960 movie. Assembly line equipment now is much more automated and they wouldn't have had room for the extra parts."

Jimmy Stewart Takes Turn On Martin Roast

Jimmy Stewart, who has several times been a roaster of his fellow headliners, changes to roastee status for a special two-hour "Dean Martin Celebrity Roast" Wednesday, May 10, 9 to 11 p.m. on NBC.

The veteran film star will be ribbed by — in order of appearance — Milton Berle, Lucille Ball, Sen. Barry Goldwater, Ruth Buzzi, June Allyson, Mickey Rooney, LaWanda Page, Janet Leigh, Henry Fonda, George Burns, Greer Garson, Foster Brooks, Eddie Albert, Red Buttons, Tony Randall, Rich Little, Jesse White, Don Rickles and Orson Welles.

All the personalities on the dais agreed that Stewart is a nice guy, easy going and square — and those were exactly the traits they attacked when he was honored as Man of the Hour. Here is a sampling of what they had to say:

Martin: "I don't know of a nicer guy than him. He's the only person I know who would interrupt an orgy to ask if anyone wanted coffee and cake."

Lucille Ball: "He's such a thoughtful and considerate neighbor. In order not to disturb anyone, he has his New Year's Eve party at 2:30 in the afternoon, in July."

Sen. Barry Goldwater: "We are both pilots and aviation enthusiasts. In fact, this year is kind of an anniversary for Jimmy. Fifty years ago Jimmy made his first airline flight across the country and last week they delivered his missing luggage."

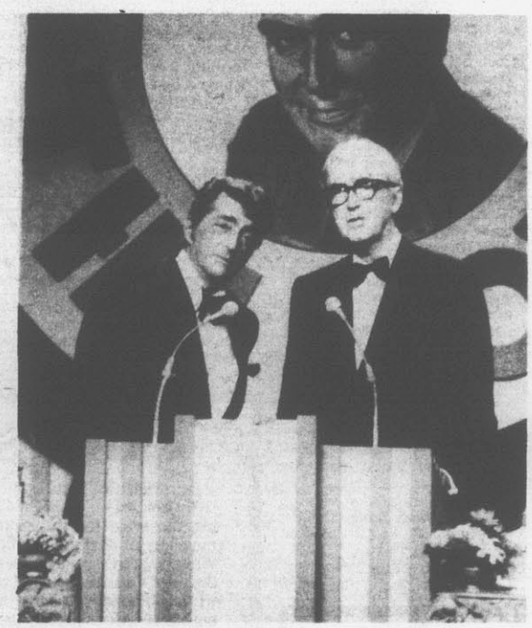

June Allyson: "We've been married so many times, when they re-run our old movies...I don't get residuals... I get alimony"

Henry Fonda: "Jimmy and I arrived in Hollywood 43 years ago...each of us so skinny we could ride in a buggy in the whip socket and between the two of us we only cast one shadow."

Greer Garson: "His career proves that 'He who hesitates is found.' Here is a perfect case of a man who brought glammer to the drammer with a stammer."

Eddie Albert: "We're both organic gardeners. His vegetables are prize examples...he raised a tomato so juicy a gopher bit into it and was drowned."

Don Rickles: "I'm in awe...to see the great Jimmy Stewart here. Just wonder how long he will be able to stay awake!"

JIMMY'S TURN—Jimmy Stewart (right), who has on many occasions joined in the roasting of others, gets his night in the hot seat Wednesday, May 10 (9-11 p.m.) on NBC, when host Dean Martin presides over the merriment on the "Dean Martin Celebrity Roast" of Stewart.

'Nova' To Examine Laser Possibilities

The laser has come a long way since its starring role as a ray gun in James Bond's "Goldfinger." Today, lasers play a significant part in a growing variety of fields: dentistry, medicine, construction, communications... The list goes on and on. "Nova" examines lasers and how they will affect our lives in "The Light of the 21st Century," Wednesday, May 10, at 8 p.m. on PBS.

When first invented 18 years ago, lasers were called "a solution looking for a problem"; nobody could think what to do with them. In fact, research scientists immediately began to exploit the laser's pure colors and near-perfect focusing ability. Today, lasers have grown into a billion dollar business.

One of the first practical applications was in surveying. The laser's narrow beam made an ideal levelling device, which is now used extensively in the construction industry.

Industry has seized on the laser as a precision welder; it can toughen metal surfaces by selective heat treating and form new metal alloys directly on the surface.

Lasers are used in dentistry and medicine to excise tumors and cancerous cells, attach retinas and to perform sterile, bloodless surgery.

And in the clothing business, lasers are being used to cut 50 suits at a time — with no frayed edges.

Provocative Drama Airs

Edward Fox and Denholm Elliott are featured in David Mercer's "Shooting the Chandelier," a provocative new drama set in April, 1945, just as the Czech people paused in limbo between the excesses of Nazism and the prospect of socialism. The play airs on "Great Performances," Wednesday, May 10, 9 to 10:30 p.m., on PBS.

Somewhere in the Czech countryside, a young girl (Felicity Dean) emerges from a bomb shelter with her nurse (Doris Hare) to find that the war has finally passed her home. She is deranged by the war, and the sole survivor of a liberal, wealthy family. At the same time, further down the road, Lieutenant Semyon Rusakov (Denholm Elliott), suffering from a hangover, is struggling out of a ditch when Colonel Nikolai Schotkin (Edward Fox) and his driver (Alun Armstrong) pull up in their jeep. Before the war, Rusakov was a history professor — the Colonel's teacher at the university. The two men are diametrically opposite, and find themselves enmeshed in a battle of wills.

Davis Hosts Musical Special

Composer-singer-recording star Mac Davis, who was named Artist of the Year by the Country Music Association (1975), will be joined by the phenomenal KC and the Sunshine Band, singing sensation Donna Summer, and Oscar Winner Art Carney, on his special airing Thursday, May 11, 10 to 11 p.m., on NBC.

Davis's specials have consistently attracted large audiences. His last Christmas special (Dec. 7, 1977) garnered a 22.9 rating and 33 share, according to the Nielsen Television Index.

Carney, who won the Oscar as Best Actor for his starring role in "Harry and Tonto" (1974), is currently starring in "House Calls," with Walter Matthau.

Disco queen Donna Summer has five gold albums and two gold singles to her credit, including her current two-record album, "Once Upon a Time." Her other gold albums are: the provocative "Love to Love You Baby," "A Love Trilogy," "The Four Seasons of Love" and "I Remember Yesterday." Her two gold singles are "Love to Love You Baby" and "I Feel Love." (A gold album represents sales of 500,000 records or tape equivalents, while a gold single represents a minimum of one million records sold.) Summer is also co-writer of the theme from "The Deep" film score and will make her motion picture debut starring "Thank God It's Friday."

KC and the Sunshine Band's current album, "Part 3," features four consecutive hit singles, "Shake Your Booty," "I'm Your Boogie Man," "Keep It Comin' Love" and "Wrap Your Arms Around Me." A new album, "Who Do You (Love)?", will be released soon.

The first songs Mac Davis wrote were titled "Mau-Mau Mary," "I Got a Flea on Me," and "I Don't Mess Around with Sally Brown Anymore." The first song he sold was "The Phantom Strikes Again," for which Sam the Sham's producer paid $2.42.

His price has gone up but his philosophy hasn't changed. "I don't think most people like music with hidden meanings. They don't want to ponder the songs. I just come out and say what I have to say as simply as possible."

Mac's reasoning must be right because it works for him. In addition to writing hit songs for himself, he has written many songs that have become hits for other performers.

POINTING THE WAY—Guest Donna Summer points something out to Mac Davis during rehearsals for "The Mac Davis Special," to be presented on Thursday, May 11 (10-11 p.m.) on NBC.

CBS Journey Goes Inside The Brain

"The Body Human: The Vital Connection," a dramatic informational special which explores the brain and the nervous system through unique photographic techniques, will be broadcast Thursday, May 11, 8 to 9 p.m. on CBS. Based on a visual concept which enables the viewer to see himself from a totally unique perspective and through the utilization of electronic photography, "The Vital Connection" embarks on a journey inside the human brain, where 20 billion nerve cells interconnect at 10 trillion junctures which store over 200 billion memory bits.

In exploring the universes of sleep, memory, motion, meditation and speech, never-before-seen photographs depict human nerve cells which send tiny microelectrodes that translate brain impulses into intelligible messages.

Using high-speed photography, of a magician's sleight-of-hand technique, the brain's capability to continually coordinate muscles and fine movements is demonstrated.

And, for the first time on television, the evolution speech and correlative brain activities as shaving, swallowing and punching an elevator button are shown as examples of the workings of the brain centers responsible for their control.

WELCOME BACK, 'KOTTER' AND 'BARNEY'

ABC-TV has renewed "Barney Miller" and "Welcome Back, Kotter" for next season, with both planning to resume production in July.

Pike's Peek

By Charlie Pike, TV Showtime staff writer.

HOLLYWOOD — It appears that Jaime Lyn Bauer is paying the price for the sudden exit of two other cast members of daytime's "The Young and the Restless." With the arrival of her new son, Damien, Jaime notified the show's producers that if she returned to the serial, she wished to remain for only two and a half months. Several high-level meetings later, indications are she'll be back for seven months, a decision agreed upon under some pressure from the network and the producers. Apparently, there was deep and understandable concern that Jaime's departure so soon after Trish Stewart and Tom Hallick's might be too disruptive for the show's followers.

As for Trish and Tom (Chris and Brad to soap fans), the former's contract expired and she decided she simply needed a change, although the door has been left open for her return. On the other hand, Tom has signed a contract with NBC and definitely is gone from the 'Young and Restless' scene. Neither role is being recast at this time.

Cher Allman always finds someway to catch some attention, even when she doesn't realize it! Cher and new beau Gene Simmons (lead singer of rock group KISS) went out shopping at the Lina Lee Boutique in Beverly Hills recently, and Mrs. Allman dropped $3,000. Among her purchases were two raw-silk T-shirts with hand-painted suede trim, $375 each; tight pink silk pants with a hand-painted bright silk tunic, $600, and some scarfs. But doesn't everybody?

Pretty Deborah Raffin, who captured fame for her role in the film, "Once Is Not Enough," is joining the crowd of celebs who market their popularity via pin-up posters. But conservative Deborah's will not be a bikini cheesecake picture, but rather, as her husband describes it, sexy innocent. She wears silk boxer trunks and a Mickey Mouse T-shirt in the picture taken by Susan Ford..the one who used to live in the White House.

In what promises to be one of the most heart warming stories on network TV this upcoming new season, Melissa Sue Anderson, who portrays the blind Mary on "Little House on the Prairie," will fall in love and marry. Michael Landon tells us that that's just one new development planned for the new year.

"Laverne and Shirley" captured the number one spot in the Nielsen ratings for the 30-week TV season, with "Happy Days" second, "Three's Company" third, and "Charlie's Angels" fourth.

'Futureworld' Is A Taut Drama

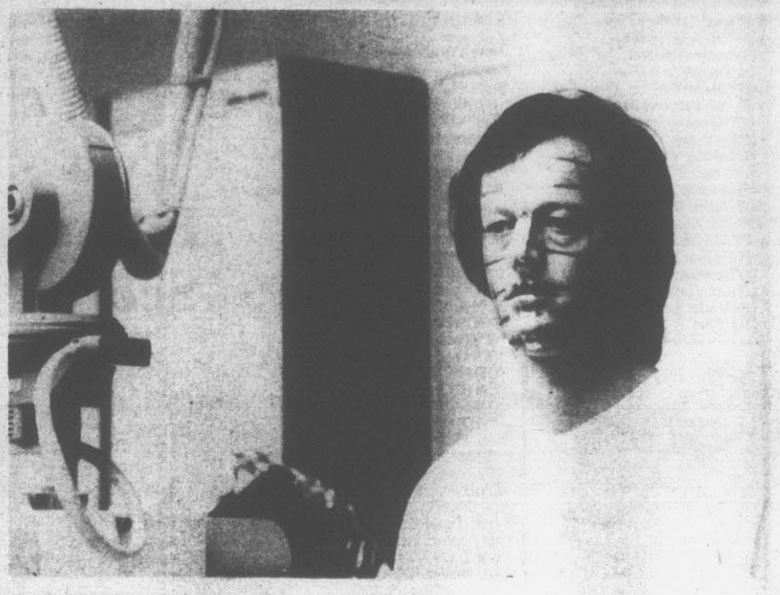

A world of perfect pleasure turns into a perfect nightmare when a newspaperman and a woman television reporter are stalked by robot duplicates of themselves in "Futureworld," the suspenseful drama of an amusement park gone mad, airing as "The ABC Friday Night Movie," May 12, 9 to 11 p.m.

Peter Fonda and Blythe Danner star as the two reporters, competing for the same story until they are drawn together when the story threatens to destroy them. Yul Brynner is also featured as The Gunslinger, a deadly robot with an irresistible allure for women.

Delos, a giant amusement complex which was closed down after "human" robots killed guests they were programmed to entertain, invites the news media to cover the reopening of the fantasyworld, which now has enlarged premises and new "fail-safe" robots. Chuck Browning (Fonda) and Tracy Ballard (Blythe Danner) arrive as guests of the management to report on the improvements, but Chuck has grave doubts about the legitimacy of the enterprise, particularly when he discovers that a terrified man who was murdered while trying to bring him a message was a former Delos technician.

The complex proves to offer all it promises, including sensual and challenging visits to the Middle Ages, Ancient Rome and the world of the future, but both reporters are disturbed by the fact that the center's chief scientist has placed incredibly lifelike robots in control of the realistic playgrounds.

Their doubts turn to terror when, after escaping the murderous assault of three robot samurai, they encounter two new, hidden robots — exact recreations of themselves.

Peter Fonda is marked by a machine that will recreate him in exact duplicate in "Futureworld," a suspense thriller of science run amok making its television premiere on "The ABC Friday Night Movie," May 12 (9-11 p.m.).

Elizabeth Taylor Stars

Elizabeth Taylor (winner of two Best Actress Academy Awards) will make a rare TV dramatic appearance in a 90-minute drama, "Return Engagement," to be presented during the 1978-79 season.

Co-starring with Miss Taylor will be Joseph Bottoms, acclaimed for his portrayal of young Rudy Weiss in "Holocaust."

The play will mark the first time Ms. Taylor has appeared in a full-length TV drama taped in Hollywood. She will portray a professor of ancient history at a small college who had been a musical stage star until she was deserted by her husband-partner.

Taylor's costumes will be designed by Hollywood's famed Edith Head. (She designed costumes for the 1976 production of "The Disappearance of Aimee.") Boris Leven will create the sets.

Ms. Taylor won Best Actress Academy Awards for her performances in "Butterfield 8" (1960) and "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?" (1960).

This is the first TV drama commitment since "Holocaust" for Bottoms, whose other television credits include "Stalk the Wild Child," an NBC movie. He made his theatrical motion picture debut in "The Dove" (1974) and appeared in the film, "Crime and Passion."

Walters Receives Award

ABC News Correspondent Barbara Walters has been named the recipient of the prestigious Overseas Press Club of America's Edward R. Murrow Award for "best TV interpretation of documentary on foreign affairs" for her history-making joint interview with Egyptian President Anwar Sadat and Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin.

Ms. Walters conducted the first joint interview of the two leaders after each addressed the Knesset during Sadat's historic visit to Israel in November. Major subjects discussed during that interview were the sovereignty of Jerusalem, the prospects of Israeli and Egyptian ambassadors exchanging views and possible solutions to the Palentinian problem.

Presented annually since 1940, the Overseas Press Club Awards are the only award recognizing excellence in the reporting of developments overseas to Americans.

The Edward R. Murrow Award is one of many honors Ms. Walters has earned by developing breaking stories in interviews with world leaders. Those honors include her being named "Broadcaster of the Year" by the International Radio and Television Society in 1975 and receiving an Emmy Award the same year from the National Academy of Television Arts and Sciences.

In addition to reporting regularly on the "Evening News With Harry Reasoner and Barbara Walters," covering special news events for the network and appearing on "Issues and Answers," Ms. Walters also host several prime time specials each year.

Don't Count Ben Crenshaw Out

The state of Texas has produced many legendary golfers in years gone by. Ben Crenshaw is making a determined effort to become the next truly great golfer to come out of Texas. Crenshaw has been flirting with stardom since he joined the professional ranks in 1973, but he has been unable to achieve the many great things which were expected of him.

On Saturday, May 13, at 4 p.m., CBS-TV will present live third-round coverage of the Colonial National Invitational Golf Tournament from the Colonial Country Club in Fort Worth, Texas. Ben Crenshaw is expected to be on hand to defend his title against a strong field. Coming from behind in last year's tournament, he beat John Shroeder by a single shot while going eight under par for the four-day event.

Crenshaw entered 1978 with four tour titles under his belt, with his most prestigious victory to date coming in the 1976 Bing Crosby Pro-Am. '76 was Ben's biggest year as a professional, capturing three tournament victories while earning in excess of one quarter of a million dollars.

Fresh from the University of Texas and three consecutive NCAA championships, Crenshaw was hailed as the heir apparent to Jack Nicklaus. He added credence to that prediction by winning his very first professional outing, The San Antonio Texas Open. Then Ben Crenshaw went into a mysterious slump.

"I went more than two years without winning again," Crenshaw said. "I began to wonder when I would win....if I would win." At the age of 24, Crenshaw was wondering if he had lost the key to his game.

Then came his memorable 1976 season as he set the tour on fire. He had a good year in 1977, winning $123,000, but after his victory at Colonial last year, he has gone practically another full year without a win.

Crenshaw needs a victory to restore confidence in his ability to win. A golfer with as much talent as Crenshaw cannot be expected to go winless but for so long. Don't bet against his breaking out of his slump in this year's Colonial Invitational, down-home in his native Texas.

Two Films Score

"Wax Works" and "Airborne," two films in the "Chipmates" series which follows the adventures of a group of British children and their unpredictable pet chimpanzee, Alice, will be presented on "The CBS Saturday Film Festival," May 13, 1:30 to 1:56 p.m.

Alice goes a bit ape in a factory dedicated to the creation of delicate wax figures, in "Wax Works," but emerges a hero by inadvertently helping to capture a thief who is trying to steal some of the treasures.

The chimp tries to make monkeys out of a group of British Air Scouts when she decides to board a glider, in "Airborne," causing everyone to fly out of hand.

Both films were shot at locations in England, including Bath and Harefield, for "Wax Works," and the Lesham Gliding School in Hants.

McARDLE TO PORTRAY GARLAND

The early years in the life of the legendary Judy Garland will be dramatized in "Rainbow," a two-hour NBC movie to go into production this summer.

Music will be pre-recorded in May in London, where McArdle is starring in "Annie," and production will start July 5 at Southern California locations.

That's the problem facing Pru Miller, a spirited teenager in "The Escape of a One-Ton Pet," a three part "ABC Weekend Specials" presentation on successive Saturdays, May 13, May 20 and May 27 (12-noon to 12:30 p.m.).

Pru is a high-spirited Northern California girl who raises a motherless bull she helped to bring into the world, confident that the animal will grow into a prize-winner and a champion breeder.

The bull, called Percy (for "perseverance"), wins a blue ribbon, but when lab tests indicate that he can never father calves it appears that Pru's pet is headed for the butcher shop.

Determined to avoid that fate at any cost, Pru sees only one solution — she loads her beloved Percy onto her father's truck and takes to the open road.

Starring in "The Escape of a One-Ton Pet" are Stacy Swor as Pru, Kenia Borell as Celly Montez, James Calahan as Dusty Miller, Richard Yniquez as Stino, Roxanne Bonilla-Giannini as Angela, Michael Morgan as Jamie, Susan Adams as Jill Weston and Julio Medina as Martin.

Thompson Plays Halfcourt

Wherever David Thompson has played basketball, his team has usually come out on top. On Sunday, May 7, at 1 p.m., on CBS-TV, Thompson will try and lead a very unusual type of team victory. The game is Three-on-Three basketball, and on Thompson's team will be former NBA great, Jerry Lucas (New York Knicks) and singer Pat Boone. Furnishing the opposition will be the Washington Bullets' Phil Chenier, ex-NBA star Zelmo Beaty, and soul singer Marvin Gaye.

This is an extremely interesting matchup. Both Beaty and Lucas are former centers and both possess the dexterity to score from the outside, as well as under the basket.

Chenier is a high-scoring guard with excellent shooting range and fine one-on-one moves. He will have more than his hands full in trying to stop the truly unstoppable David Thompson.

Don Nelson, the coach of the Milwaukee Bucks, calls Thompson "inch for inch the greatest player in the NBA." He rates Thompson, on this basis, better than Julius Erving or Kareem Abdul-Jabbar. That is traveling in rather fast company, but it is nothing new for David. At six foot and four and one-half inches, he has been asked to measure up to men larger than himself on many occasions, and seldom has Thompson come up lacking.

In his efforts, he was named the 1974 College Player of the Year, beating out Bill Walton for the honor. Thompson then repeated the honor his senior year. As probably the best player ever to compete in the Atlantic Coast Conference, David was the NBA's number one draft pick. Thompson, however, chose the clean air of Denver and the ABA to the too few dollars of the NBA's Atlanta Hawks.

Many people credit the $3-million signing of Thompson as the wedge which, along with Julius Erving, allowed the ABA to merge with the NBA. As a rookie, Thompson disappointed no one as he finished second in the league in scoring and led the Nuggets to the best record in basketball.

Thompson finished second in scoring average to George Gervin for this season. Capping the regular season with a league-high 73-point performance, Thompson now leads the Nuggets into the playoffs. Without David, Denver would probably be an also-ran, but with him they might wind up in the NBA finals. He's a good teammate, whether it's the NBA Playoffs or CBS's Three-on-Three. It makes no difference.

David Thompson of the Denver Nuggets is joined by Jerry Lucas and Pat Boone in a three-on-three contest against Phil Chenier, Zelmo Beaty and Marvin Gaye. CBS-TV will televise the contest beginning Sunday, May 7 at 1 p.m.

Raymond Floyd Defends Title

Golf is a very humbling sport which few people ever really master. Consistency is perhaps the mark of the truly great golfer. In 1945, Bryon Nelson set a record for consistent excellence which will probably never be equalled. He won eleven consecutive Professional Golfer's Association events that year. For the year in total, Nelson collected eighteen titles while shooting nineteen straight sub-twenty rounds and averaging a phenomenal 68.33 strokes per round.

On Sunday, May 7, 3 to 5 p.m., ABC Sports will present live final-round coverage of the Bryon Nelson Classic from the Preston Trail Golf Club in Dallas, Texas.

Last year's champion, Raymond Floyd, will be back to defend his title. Expected to battle Floyd for the $40,000 first prize will be Gary Player, the 1978 Masters Champion and currently the hottest player on the PGA Tour. Also expected to compete is this year's leading money winner Tom Watson, as well as such established stars as Ben Crenshaw, Tom Weiskopf and Lanny Wadkins.

The Preston Trail layout is as tough a golf course as the professionals like to see. This year, the 6983-yard course will play to its customary par of seventy-one.

Ray Floyd came out of a third-round tie last year for the lead with Ben Crenshaw to take the Bryon Nelson Classic. Floyd closed with a final round of 69 to finish the tournament at 276, eight shots under par and two ahead of Crenshaw.

The win at Preston Trail helped Floyd crack the million-dollar mark in career earnings, while he topped $163,000 in earnings for the 1977 campaign. Floyd has been at the top of his game since 1974, averaging more than $135,000 a year and adding the 1977 Masters Championshp to his collection of tour titles.

FLORIDA CITRUS MOVES

Directors of the Florida Citrus Open have announced the move of the tournament for 1979 from Rio Pinar Country Club to Arnold Palmer's Bay Hill Club.

RECORD MEANS A LOT

Kevin Potter set an NBA record with 29 assists when the Nets defeated Houston, 126-112, late in the season. "The record means a lot to me," Porter said afterwards. "The most I ever had before was 21."

Indianapolis 500-Mile Race Time Trials Air

Forty-two cars with eight-cylinder engines, exactly twice as many as a year ago, are included on the record-breaking entry list of 92 for the 62nd annual running of the Indianapolis 500-Mile Race on Sunday, May 28. This is two more than the previous high of 90 in 1967.

Only 38 drivers, however, a surprisingly low number, were assured of cars when entries closed at midnight of April 15.

ABC Sports will cover the action of the Indianapolis 500 Time Trials Saturday, May 13, at 5 p.m.

The veteran contigent is headed by six former Indianapolis winners who have accounted for 10 victories here in the last 11 years. A.J. Foyt, Jr., will be trying for an unprecedented fifth triumph; and the others are Al and Bobby Unser, Mario Andretti, Johnny Rutherford and Gordon Johncock.

Two others sharing the spotlight will be Tom Sneva and Danny Ongais.

Sneva set the one-lap and four-lap qualifying records of 200.535 and 198.884 miles an hour respectively last May, finished second in the race and went on to win the USAC-CITICORP national championship. Ongais, whose average speed of 192.678 miles an hour on lap 42 was the fastest ever recorded during an Indianapolis race, has won two of the first three USAC races this season and is leading in the national championship point standing.

All eight will be using v-8 engines this year.

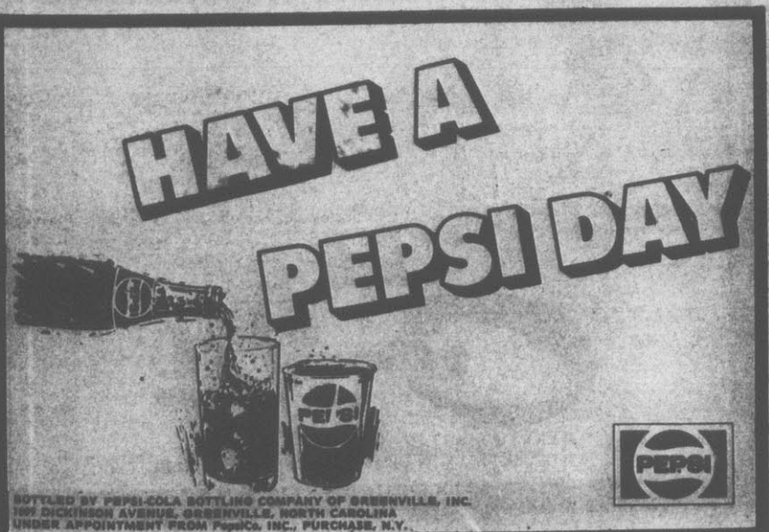

Janet Guthrie, who qualified well last May at 188.403 miles an hour to become the first woman ever to earn a starting position here — but was eliminated early by mechanical trouble — also is among the other 15 returning from last year's Race Day lineup. . Ten of the 33 still are "shopping for rides," including such favorities as Bill Vukovich, Lloyd Ruby, George Snider and Mike Mosley.

Only seven rookies have been assured of cars at this time and the two expected to attract the greatest amount of attention are Rick Mears and Tom Bagley.

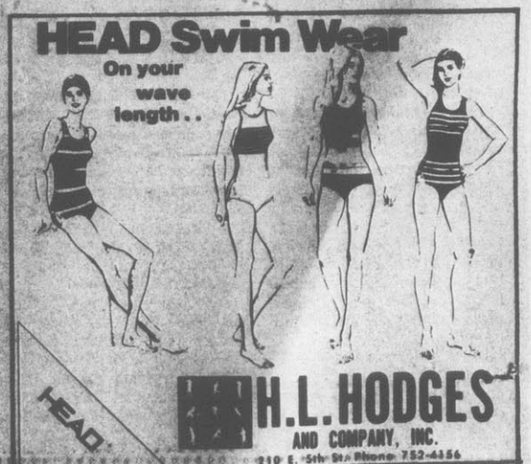

The chasis list shows 17 different makes including 23 Eagles, 14 McLarens, 11 Lightnings, nine Penskes, eight Wildcats and four Coyotes.

The track will be available for daily practice beginning May 6 and official time trials have been scheduled for the week-ends of May 13-14 and May 20-21.

(11) Curious Kaleidoscope

Star Hosts Show

Richard Dreyfuss, whose portrayal of a struggling actor in Neil Simon's romantic comedy "The Goodbye Girl" has just earned him the Best Actor Award, will be the host of "NBC's Saturday Night Live" May 13, 11:30 p.m. to 1 a.m.

He will join the Not Ready for Prime Time Players — Dan Akroyd, John Belushi, Jane Curtin, Garrett Morris, Bill Murray, Laraine Newman and Gilda Radner.

Dreyfuss will be making his first appearance on the Emmy Award-winning program which in this, its third season, is enjoying its best ratings to date, averaging, in the first quarter of 1978, a 10.4 rating and 32 share, a 25 percent increase over the same period a year ago (according to Nielsen Television Index).

Prior to his Oscar-winning performance, the New York-born Dreyfuss achieved star recognition in "American Graffiti," "The Apprenticeship of Duddy Kravitz" and the box office smashes "Jaws" and "Close Encounters of the Third Kind." Other films include "The Young Runaways" and "Inserts."

He is currently appearing as Cassius in Shakespeare's "Julius Caesar" at the Brooklyn Academy of Music. On television he has had roles in such series as "The Big Valley," "Room 222," "The Bold Ones," "Judd for the Defense" and "Mod Squad."

GET READY!!

Francesca James, ex-Kitty Tyler on "All My Children," is back in the daytime series in the role of Kelly Cole. Kelly is Kitty's twin sister that no one knew existed until now.

Charles Bronson Stars

Charles Bronson stars in a western mystery, "Breakheart Pass," to be rebroadcast as a special movie presentation Saturday, May 13, 9 to 11 p.m.

With his portrayal of John Deakin in "Breakheart Pass," Bronson seems to have settled into a comfortable new persona that first surfaced in "Hard Times" and continues in this film with excellence; the temperate man of action who doesn't particularly enjoy violence but sure knows how to lay it on when it's necessary.

Deakin is an enigmatic, clumsy card shark who contrives to have himself arrested and placed on an armed troop train heading toward an Army fort, supposedly in the grips of a diptheria epidemic.

As the train sets out on its way, it isn't long before some very peculiar things begin to happen, most of them decidedly fatal. No sooner have a pair of officers disappeared into thin air, than a tropical disease expert is punctured to death with a surgical probe, and the engineer's assistant is thrown from a trestle bridge and two rear carriages packed with soldiers are derailed and completely smashed.

Old-guard Bronson fans expecting the gut-crunching pace evident in his prior movies may be surprised to find a lot more attention devoted to clever plot logistics than to the amount of potential gore in the storyline. Bronson, who predictably starts out as everyone's suspect, gradually begins making like a frontier Sherlock Holmes and eventually catches on to the fact that far from being in the grips of an epidemic, the fort is actually being beseiged by outlaws, and the 'medical supplies' are stolen armaments the Secret Service has sent him to track down.

Academy Award-winner Ben Johnson, Richard Crenna, Jill Ireland and Charles Durning co-star in the film, adapted by Alister MacLean from his novel.

Deadly Scheme Stumps Columbo

Clive Revill, who starred as Fagin in "Oliver!" on Broadway, guest-stars as a charming Irish poet whose verse belies his deadly scheme for homicide and arms-smuggling, in "The Conspirators," a two-hour "Columbo" drama on "NBC Saturday Night at the Movies" May 13, 9 to 11 p.m. Peter Falk stars as Lieutenant Columbo.

Also guest-starring in the suspense drama are Jeanette Nolan, L.Q. Jones, Albert Paulson and Bernard Hehrens.

While fronting for an Irish peace group, poet Joe Devlin arranges a clandestine meeting with illicit arms dealer Vincent Pauley. When Pauley tries to pull off a doublecross, Devlin slays him even though it means eliminating his only source of illicit arms for Irish rebels.

Lieutenant Columbo attempts to link Devlin with Pauley on a few flimsy clues, but the happy poet tries to sidetrack the detective with his Irish charm, whiskey and a competitive game of darts at his favorite pub. In time, Columbo realizes the only hope he has of nabbing Devlin is to link him with the arms-smuggling caper.

ASK THEM YOURSELF

Send the question, on a postcard, to "Ask," Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave., New York, N.Y. 10022.
We'll pay $5 for published questions. Sorry, we can't answer others.

FOR JAMES SCHLESINGER, Secretary of the Department of Energy

The most frustrating thing about the energy problem is that people who conserve know others are wasting. How can the President ask a homeowner to decrease his or her use of energy and suffer discomfort when countless people around the country are wasting fuel? — S.G.S., Eastchester, N.Y.

● The President is not asking homeowners to do such things as lower thermostats to the discomfort level. And most homeowners and businesses are cooperating and doing many things to conserve energy; not solely because of the President's appeal, I am sure, but also because rising energy costs have made it economically desirable to do so. It is preferable for everyone to voluntarily cut energy consumption. However, if we do not conserve enough energy voluntarily, it may become necessary to take steps toward mandatory conservation.

FOR THE "ASK" EDITOR

Why is Hal Linden judging the 1978 America's Junior Miss Pageant in Mobile, Ala? —B.C., Norwich, Conn.

● Hal Linden, star of TV's Barney Miller, was reluctant at first. That's why, when he was invited to M.C. the pageant (to be aired Monday night on CBS), he reacted negatively: "I thought it was just another beauty contest. Then I learned that instead of perfect measurements this competition is based on accomplishment." Sponsors of America's Junior Miss Pageant stress academic pursuits, leadership and imagination. Local pageants are held in more than 1,000 cities or 4,000 communities. Approximately 25,000 high-school girls are selected to compete from the 300,000 who apply. Asked whether he'd approve of his daughters entering (he has three — 17, 15, 12) Linden laughed, "No chance of that. Problem is, contestants must have an A average. If my girls qualified, I'd be thrilled.

Linden, Chris Moller, Vicki Lawrence.

FOR DON WILLIAMS, country singer

Is your shy stage personality part of your act or is it really you? — V.J., Rapid City, S.D.

● It's all me. I guess I must be a show-business misfit because, although music is my world, I really don't enjoy the exposure that goes along with it. I get a bigger kick from being at home on my Nashville farm than being the focus of attention on stage or at a business meeting. Quite frankly, stardom frightens me. When I started out, all I wanted to do was make a living at singing or composing.

FOR JANE PAULEY of NBC-TV's Today show

Does anything faze you? — I.O., Trenton, N.J.

● I'm afraid of horses, even though I love them and would give anything to have a Flicka or a Trigger — one that would alert me to rattlesnakes and die for me, if necessary. It all goes back to when I was 9 and riding with my mother and sister. Mom was on a gigantic horse in front of me. My pony did not know her horse and bit him. Mom's horse reared up, and all I could see were those menacing legs over me. I've been on horses since then but always with a lot of reservations.

FOR RUTH CARTER STAPLETON, author of The Experience of Inner Healing

How did your preaching career begin? — I.L., Rye, N.Y.

● When my four children were off my hands, I did what I'd always wanted to do, teach. Hired for 10th- and 11th-grade English, my big aim was to introduce my students to the Master Teacher. At the end of my first year, the principal asked me point-blank, "Before your contract is renewed, I must know what your intention is: to teach or preach." That's when my teaching career ended and my preaching career began.

FOR ARTE JOHNSON, actor and comedian

Were you telling the truth on a recent talk show when you said you did needlepoint? — C.I., Cumberland, Md.

● Yes. Ten years ago I carried my work in a briefcase, and when I took it out on a plane or in a waiting room, I got funny looks. Guys did double takes. Gals moved to other seats. I was labeled a weirdo and a Hollywood freak. It didn't bother me. During the time I've been stitching away, my wife, Gisela, who taught me, and I have covered our dining-room chairs and filled the house with wall hangings and pillows.

FOR DICK BUTLER, supervisor of umpires for the American League

My son thinks he wants to be an umpire. I'm trying to dissuade him because I think it's a rotten job. What would you do in my place? — R.T., Dover, Del.

● First, I'd explain the difficulty of the job: the schooling he must go through, the long periods away from home, the abuse, the low salaries, the extreme odds against ever becoming a major league umpire. If he still wanted to be an umpire, then I'd help him become one.

FOR RAQUEL WELCH, actress

I'm dying to know what happens to your old clothes. — R.H., Santa Ana, Calif.

● I give away a lot; my sister has first choice. If I can't find any "takers," I put them up at celebrity auctions for charity — one dress, I hear, raised $500. My wardrobe has a life span of not more than a year because styles change so quickly, and I like to keep up with them. When I get something new, I wear it constantly, then get sick of it. And because I can afford the luxury of being able to restock, I buy new stuff to boost my morale.

PRO AND CON

Should The District Of Columbia Be Given Full Voting Representation In Congress?

PRO — Walter E. Fauntroy, delegate, District of Columbia

The three-quarters of a million American citizens of the District of Columbia have no voting representation in the U.S. House of Representatives or the Senate despite the fact that residents of the District pay over a billion dollars annually in Federal taxes, that the per capita tax payments for District residents is $77 above the national average (a payment higher than that of 43 states), that the population of the District of Columbia is larger than that of 10 states, that of the 19 Federal districts in the world, only two other than Washington, D.C., are not represented in their national legislatures — and those are under dictatorships. There is no constitutional prohibition against providing full voting representation.

Illustration by Hal Just

CON — Rep. Charles E. Wiggins (R -Calif.)

The very name of this country describes its structure — a union of states. The Constitution created a small district "not exceeding 10 miles square," apart from this union of states, as a site for the Federal Government. To place the District of Columbia on a voting par with the states in effect would admit it to the Union, thereby distorting the basic structure of our Federal system. To oppose representation for the District is not to oppose representation for its residents. Fairness requires such representation to be equal to that of other Americans. However, representation of the District in the Congress would afford to residents of one city greater representation than that enjoyed by all others.

FROM MIGRANT WORKER TO SUPERSTAR

"When we first married, we was so poor we didn't know where the next meal was comin' from a lot of days." — Loretta Lynn

Bob Noble / Globe Photos

Tony Korody / Sygma

By Joseph N. Bell

For one of the few times in her life, Loretta Lynn, America's most famous country music singer, was at a loss for words. She was in Hollywood to dedicate a bronze star with her name on it.

The beautiful star had just been implanted among the greats of the entertainment industry into the sidewalk of Hollywood Boulevard. And Loretta — author of a best-selling book entitled Coal Miner's Daughter and a perceptive, thoughtful, outspoken woman who has probably been seen and heard by more people than most of the persons "immortalized" in that star-strewn sidewalk — was thinking of the day, 17 years earlier, when she first had seen this famous street.

"I was sure I was gonna see a movie star," she remembers, "so my husband let me outta the car at the corner of Hollywood and Vine. I was barefoot in blue jeans with my hair up in curlers, and I went down through that walkway of stars lookin' at everybody's name and a hollerin' and yellin'. I had just started singin' then. And now, they've put me there. Think of that. In all my life, I never had that big of a dream. I always dreamed simple things."

Later this year, Universal Pictures will make a film of her life. Loretta, who won't appear in the movie, explains her absence this way: "The movie's gonna be better if I'm played by an actress who ain't gonna worry about what she does. If they put me in the movie, there'd be places where I'd say, 'Hey, I'm not gonna do that!' — like my weddin' night, for instance. [She was 14 and hadn't been informed on the subject of sex.] I know they take the idea and exaggerate on some things, and I figured it'd be better if I didn't have to think about doin' it myself."

She pauses a moment, then adds, "I'll tell 'em how I felt so they can put theirself into whatever is happenin' in the picture. I can't tell you any more because they wouldn't tell me. They said if they did, I'd blow it — and I would."

She's right. Loretta Lynn has got to be the most up-front lady in the entertainment business. She washes over a jaded listener like a cup of cool water — no affectation, no dissembling. "If you don't lie," she says in the marvelous straight-line thinking that characterizes all her conversation, "you don't have to lie again."

Loretta was in Hollywood doing a run of television shows before heading for two weeks in Las Vegas, then a long bus ride to Texas for a series of concert dates. ("It ain't that I don't like to fly, but you just get one chance in the air, and if the bus turns over, it might do that three or four times without anything happenin'.") She has the green Irish eyes and aristocratic high Cherokee cheekbones and coal-black hair of the ancestors on both sides of her family.

Since Loretta can't read music, she does all her song-writing and rehearsing on a tape recorder. When she composes ("The title always comes first; I have to think of that before I start writin'"), she sings the melody to a tape that is converted to paper for her by a professional musician. "I can tell in songs things I'd like to say and can't," she says. "So I sing them."

The story of Loretta's rise from a backwoods cabin in Kentucky coal-mining country to the Queen of the Country Singers (a recent Gallup poll also placed her among the 20 most-admired women in the nation) has been told many times, not only in Loretta's book (more than two million copies have been sold) but also in numerous magazine articles and from concert stages where Loretta does a biographical musical sketch as a part of her act.

At 14 she married Doolittle Lynn, a neighbor six years older than she, had four children in four years and began singing professionally when her husband prodded her to audition before a country band in the State of Washington, where Loretta and Doo were working as laborers.

It took almost 10 years of checking the children with relatives and living out of the family car before Loretta made a hit record ("I'm a Honky Tonk Girl") that got her an audition in Nashville. There, her prodigious talents for composing and singing and her earth-mother simplicity came across with a smash on television. Since country music was becoming respectable about the same time, Loretta quickly became an international star, playing as many as 300 concerts a year and turning out hit records one after another.

The year Loretta first became a grandmother — at 32 — she had twin girls of her own, rounding out a family of six children. She's been away from home during much of their growing-up and admits this has caused her both guilt and some anxious moments: "When Doo is with me on the road, I start worryin' about the kids after two or three days, but I don't worry about 'em when he's home. So even when I'm home, the kids will always ask their daddy if they can go here or there."

The first serious problem with the children came when Loretta's oldest daughter, Betty Sue, announced she wanted to marry. She, too, was 14. Her father was strongly opposed, but Loretta felt it would be hypocritical to deny her daughter and signed the permission papers against Doo's wishes. The marriage lasted just long enough for Betty Sue to make Loretta one of the world's youngest (and most exotic) grandmothers.

Loretta says she learned her lesson from that experience: "When one of the twins told me she thought she'd get married at 14, too, I said, 'No way.' I learned a lot by lettin' my older daughter upset me enough to sign those papers for her."

Roseanne Rubenstein

Since she went on the road a decade ago, Loretta has spent about nine months of every year away from home, while her husband was raising the children and attending to family interests — principally a highly successful dude ranch that backs on the Lynn homestead at Hurricane Mills, Tenn. (Other family properties now include a chain of Western apparel stores, two music-publishing companies, a talent agency and a home in Mazatlan, Mexico, and another in British Columbia.) Loretta insists she's going to start cutting down on her travel — "to six months, maybe four months; the promoters don't like that, but it's gotta start somewhere" — but there's a note of uncertainty in her voice that makes a listener wonder.

Now that she's playing Las Vegas several times a year, Loretta could shorten her schedule without sacrificing income, and she says she is looking in that direction. "It doesn't bother me to work in Las Vegas," she adds, "even though it's hard to find anything in the daytime to do. I certainly ain't gonna gamble away the money I work for. I'm not wasteful with money 'cause I didn't have any when I was growin' up, and when we was first married, we was so poor we didn't know where the next meal was comin' from a lot of days."

Loretta — who could buy and sell most people in Hollywood — still comes on like a tourist, gawking at movie stars, especially Gragery (sic) Peck, whom she calls her "favorite male actor." She was introduced to him a few years ago, and now she visits his set whenever she's in town and he's working. That conquest behind her, she has one more profound desire in Hollywood: to meet Loretta Young.

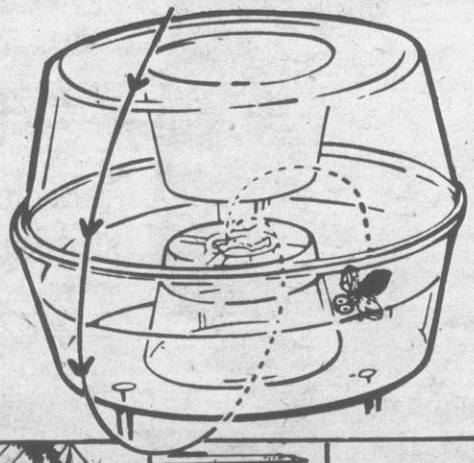

"I was named after her," Loretta explains. "Mommy always papered our cabin in Butcher Hollow with movie magazines, and two weeks before I was born, she covered the walls with Loretta Young and Claudette Colbert, and then she'd lay across the bed and look at those pictures and say, 'If it's a girl, I'm gonna name her after one of 'em.' Well, she finally decided that Loretta Young was so pretty she wanted a girl that looked just like her. So that's what she named me — and I'd really like to meet her."

Maybe she will some day, and that will be a room filled with two Lorettas, both with class and charisma. FW

"Smoking. Here's what I'm doing about it."

"I like the taste of a good cigarette and I don't intend to settle for less. But like a lot of people I'm also aware of what's being said.

"And like a lot of people I began searching for a cigarette that could give me the taste I like with less tar.

"I thought there would be a lot of brands to choose from. There were. Until I tasted them. Then I knew there was no choice at all. I either had to stay with my high-tar cigarettes. Or suck air.

"Then I found Vantage. It's everything the ads say it is. A cigarette that doesn't give you just a lot of promises. What it really gives is a lot of taste. And with much less tar than what I'd smoked before.

"What am I doing about smoking? I'm smoking Vantage."

REMODELING

DO YOUR KITCHEN IN TWO STAGES

Updating a kitchen needn't be paid for all at once. The cost can be spread out by renovating over a period of time as needs require.

By Rosalyn Abrevaya

A narrow kitchen gains added space and a new look by knocking down one wall, adding streamlined appliances and building a divider-counter. New creamy almond-colored G.E. appliances blend well with the bright counters and striking kitchen carpet, "Precious Stones," by World, tufted in rugged Anso nylon fiber.

Illustrations by Dolores Bego

Planning in detail, then following a two-stage approach is the easiest way we know to redo a kitchen when time and money are at stake. A basic rule of thumb is to get the messy, structural changes done first. Then the simple replacement and updating of those components that are not being renovated can be completed as your budget allows.

ANALYZE YOUR NEEDS

Who uses the kitchen, when and for what purposes? What are your work habits, your food preferences? A family round-robin of ideas may uncover some much needed additions or reshape your thinking entirely. For instance, if most of your food dollars go toward barbecue and fast foods, why not invest in a new range with snap-in grill or griddle attachments? Or perhaps a center-island counter with a wet bar may provide the best solution to your needs.

No matter how little or extensive the renovation, be prepared to draw up lists of everything, both major and minor.

PLAN YOUR KITCHEN LAYOUT

Before beginning, study your present kitchen layout with special attention to constricting traffic patterns, poor storage, wasted "dead" space, inadequate lighting, awkward work areas. You also should determine which of the basic kitchens you already have and which you might prefer to have. The U-shape utilizes three walls. The L-shape includes two walls, which usually would be lined with appliances and counters and an eating area. The corrider-type consists of two walls and may be long and narrow. The four-wall plan is the most desirable and often may be achieved by simply knocking out an adjoining wall and combining dining space into a family-style kitchen.

Kitchen planners say an ideal arrangement features a work triangle from the center of the sink to the refrigerator to the range and back. To minimize steps during meal preparation, the combined length of all the sides of the triangle should be between 13 and 22 feet with no single side shorter than four feet six inches or longer than seven feet three inches. Storage should be near the back or entry door and serving near the area where most meals are enjoyed.

Continued

ESTIMATING THE COST

After analyzing your layout and coming up with a new plan, you probably will want to know how much the renovation will cost. A rough estimate can be arrived at by adding the price of the sink, refrigerator and other appliances, then multiplying by three to allow for cabinets, flooring, labor and decorating costs. This figure can be reduced if you do as much of the work as possible yourself. Many large home centers can supply kits and detailed instructions for installation of cabinets, flooring and even ceilings.

Of course, depending on the luxury items you want to include, the cost can escalate accordingly.

FLOORING

Flooring is one of the most important background areas in your kitchen, not only in terms of function but also as a springboard for your entire decorating plan. There are many self-stick tile, vinyl and linoleum products designed for do-it-yourself installation.

If energy conservation, acoustics and safety are uppermost in your mind, you may want to consider the new breed of carpet engineered especially for rugged kitchen use. Generally made of durable nylon fiber in soil-masking prints and colors, these soft-surface commercial-grade carpets can provide easy maintenance and comfort underfoot if you tend to work long hours on your feet. The combination of a dense, tightly tufted pile and the essentially nonabsorbent nature of synthetic fibers serves to discourage actual penetration of the surface by spilled liquids. Instead, they tend to bead up on top of the fabric, waiting to be blotted up with a sponge.

Generally, kitchen carpets have their own built-in cushioning, which simplifies installation. They retail for less than $10 per square yard.

LIGHTING

Lighting may be included in the first phase of renovation, whether you decide to install a dropped, luminous ceiling of fluorescent panels or simply replace your existing fixtures. Luminous ceilings are ideal for small, narrow corridor kitchens or windowless rooms and should be planned for at the start with other structural changes. Simpler lighting ideas might include special "grow" lights to create a greenhouse environment for your herb garden or modern track lighting with several spots beamed directly at important work areas. For tight budgets, a woven basket suspended over a bare bulb can be effective.

DECORATING TIPS

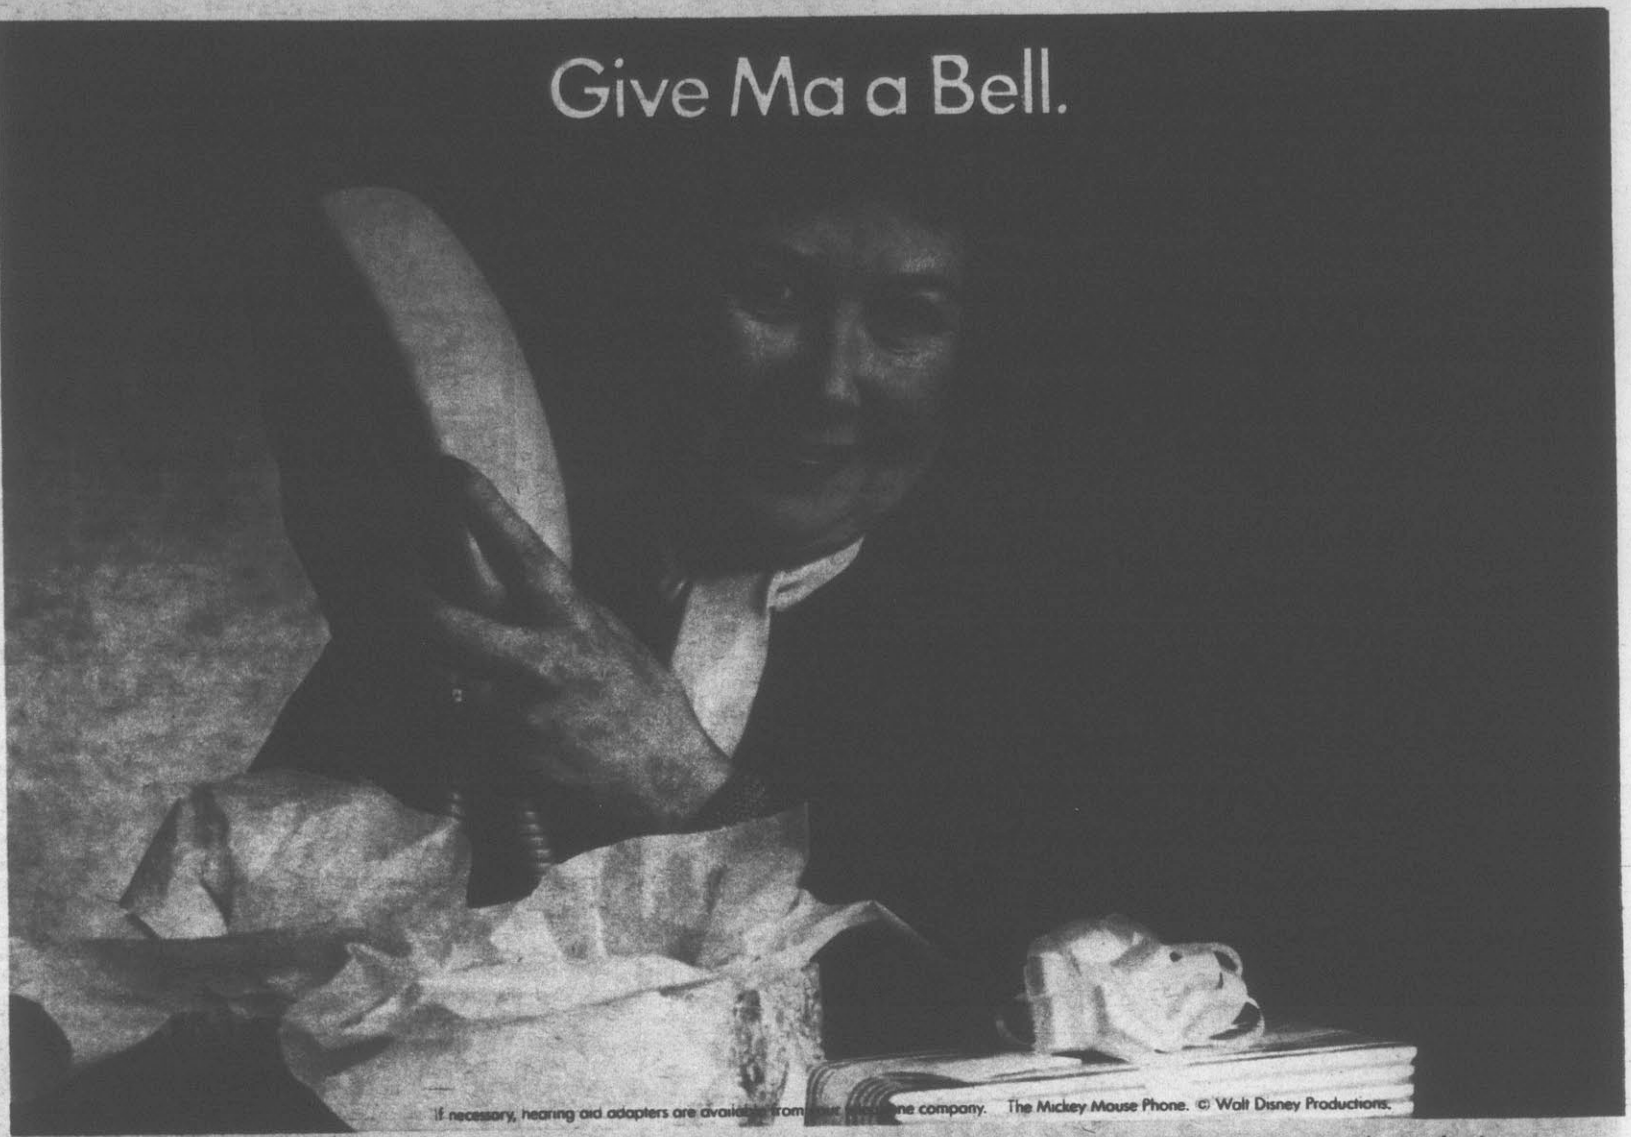

There are many other shortcuts in planning a new kitchen. Old cabinets needn't be replaced. New paint or hardware can provide an instant "face lift." Plastic laminate counter tops come in a variety of hues, including authentic-looking simulations of butcher block, slate and other natural materials. In some cases, counter tops are available in precut sizes to aid do-it-yourselfers.

Borrowing a note from your local restaurant, you can make use of overhead space, which is becoming increasingly popular for both decorative and practical reasons. Overhanging pot racks or stemware, hung between two wood strips, can create a rustic country look as well as keep much-used items within easy reach.

Finally, don't overlook neglected storage spots such as the backs of cabinets or the insides of closet doors. Handy plastic racks, magnetic hooks and pegboard can be used to hold all manner of utensils and clean-up supplies. Slide-out shelves and food cannisters are designed to exploit wasted space under kitchen cabinets.

NEW APPLIANCES SAVE ENERGY, TOO

REFRIGERATORS

Electricity-saving switches on some models control cabinet "sweating" with a minimum of energy. Most 100-percent frost-free models feature heater strips around the freezer-door opening. Their purpose is to minimize condensation that can form outside the cabinet when warm or hot humid air comes in contact with the cold cabinet. In many parts of the country, energy can be saved during periods of low humidity by setting the electricity-saving dial on low, turning the heater strips off.

Improved rotary compressors in some models make them 6 to 7 percent more energy efficient than before, helping to hold down operating costs.

Special low-energy models are constructed by the manufacturer to use from 21 to 30 percent less electricity than standard models of the same capacity.

Manual defrost versus frost-free: A national nonprofit consumer-testing organization advises that the energy you'll save by using one of the manual units now available rather than a frost-free model is "negligible."

RANGES AND OVENS

Pilot lights have been eliminated in some new gas ranges and water heaters, saving unnecessary fuel dollars. These models substitute energy-saving electric or electronic ignition systems similar to those in gas clothes dryers.

Some electric ranges feature convection ovens that can save time and money. An oven blower circulates heated air from the heat element down over food. Because all the heat is used, no preheating is necessary and cooking time is shortened.

One manufacturer features a three-in-one power-saver surface unit that lets you adjust to the size of the cooking utensil you're using. You can select eight-inch burners for 100-percent wattage, six-inch burners for 65-percent wattage or four-inch burners for 25-percent wattage.

A word about preheating. Manufacturers advise that you cut down preheating time or eliminate it all together, as it can eat up valuable fuel dollars.

Oven windows available in conventional, self-cleaning and microwave ovens cut down energy consumption by allowing you to check on food without opening the oven door.

DISHWASHERS

Most manufacturers have introduced new models that are more energy efficient than previous models, using less hot water than before. Some have added a switch that cuts off the hot-air drying cycle and permits natural, nonenergy-consuming, air-drying.

Short wash (light soil) cycles have been added that require less time, water and energy than the normal cycle. Use for lightly soiled or dusty dishes.

WASHING MACHINES

HOW TO BUILD AN OUTDOOR DECK

It's not that difficult — all you need are a few tools, some ambition and a desire to save money.

Building a deck is probably the simplest of any large-scale do-it-yourself home-construction project. But it does have a potential complication in that most towns require you to file your plans with the building department. So before you can drive a nail into wood, you'll have to go through a certain amount of red tape.

But let's start at the beginning: you've been thinking of a place in the backyard to entertain, barbecue, sun bathe or corral the kids. A patio comes to mind, but that possibility involves heavy labor, heavy equipment and outside help. There's got to be an easier way — a wooden deck.

LOCATION

Logically, we pick a spot by a rear entrance, side door or kitchen door. Maybe we're lucky and have a patio door.

Most houses are built with foundations extending one to two feet above grade. If that's true in your case and the yard is level, you have the easiest circumstances. You would want to construct a "low" deck.

If your foundation is well up out of the ground, you'll have a bit more work, but you'd build a "high" deck.

FOUNDATION

A satisfactory foundation can be achieved by using a post-hole digger to make three-foot-deep holes at the points from which you have determined the girder should be supported. Try to widen the holes a bit at the bottom. Fill these holes with a "gravel mix" of concrete to a height of at least four feet above grade by using a simple wooden frame which you may place on the ground surrounding the hole. Make all your foundations finish at the same "level." Sometimes a bolt or a "post anchor" is cast into the wet concrete. Remove the wooden frame after concrete has hardened.

DESIGN AND STRUCTURE

Size is probably your first design consideration. The average-size deck for a small family home is about 12 feet by 16 feet or more. After dimensions have been decided upon, your next consideration is structural. Just as the floor in your home rests upon floor joists, and those joists bear upon girders, posts and a foundation, so must the floor of your deck. Now those floor (deck) joists need a girder for support away from the house and a stringer (piece of lumber) attached to the house frame. Where the joists meet the stringer, joist hangers must be nailed to the stringer to engage the joists.

The girder may be a solid beam or a "built-up" beam. When built up, two or three members are spiked together. To create a length greater than that which you may purchase in one piece, each member should overlay the joints created by the others. This girder must now be supported by a foundation. In the case of a low deck, the girders may be in direct contact with the foundation. A high deck requires posts between the foundation and the girders.

Since a girder has a great deal of strength, it typically requires supports only at each end and at increments up to about eight feet. Therefore, a 16-foot girder would need only three points of support.

The floor of the deck should not be flush with the inside floor. To keep rain from splashing in, construct the deck a few inches lower.

RAILINGS AND STAIRS

When the deck is established, it's wise to erect a protective railing around the perimeter. Upright posts may be secured to the most convenient surrounding part of the deck, such as the joist or girder. Posts should measure at least two inches by four inches, placed about four feet apart and about three feet in height above the deck. Two- by four-inch or two- by six-inch material may be applied to the tops of the posts and as cross members at a lower level. Seating may be built into the railing arrangement. The stairs should be built much like cellar stairs, and the stringers should rest upon cement blocks, a cement slab or a large flat stone. Of course, hand rails should be a part of the stairway.

MATERIALS

The cement for the foundation can be prepackaged, and the holes described here each will require a bit more than one cubic foot of cement. The framing material may be spruce, hemlock, fir or redwood. Since these materials are continually exposed to the elements, clear grades of the less-expensive woods are important for long life. Redwood, which is the most expensive wood to use, is all right in structural grades. In any event, all wood should be well treated with clear Woodlife or Cuprinol and then stained or painted if you like.

Two-penny common galvanized nails may be the only nails needed for the entire project. If you feel the need for longer nails, 16-penny is fine. But only galvanized nails should be used so as to prevent rusting and to give long life. Set nail heads below the surface of all exposed boards. (A swimsuit-clad body smarts when it comes in contact with nail heads in the heat of direct sun.)

You will be required to draw a plan of your deck to get a building permit. A building inspector will advise you as to the correct dimensions for your joists and girder.

IF YOU NEED TO BUILD UP YOUR BLOOD DON'T COUNT ON VITAMINS

Iron poor blood is the most widespread nutritional ailment in America today. And taking vitamins can't help, because vitamins don't contain iron.

Take Geritol, every day. Geritol is so rich in iron, each tablet contains more iron than even a pound of calf's liver. Plus vitamins important to your health.

Geritol's iron will actually build your blood back to normal. That's what makes it different from just plain vitamins—and so important to you.

TUTANKHAMUN

We could have built a pyramid to hold these treasures but we preferred an art book to hold them. Here it is.

Keep for yourself these treasures from the exhibition that has created such a furor throughout the country.

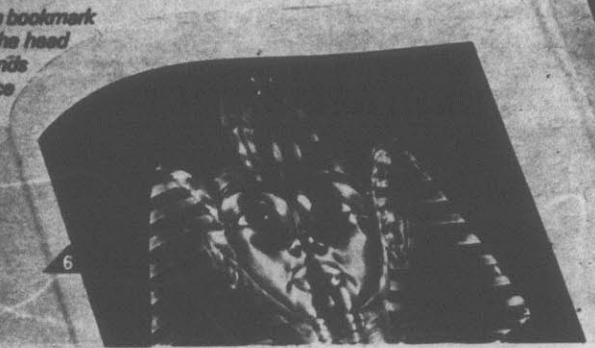

This book is a jewel box of treasure :

- 56 unpublished full-color plates present the treasures of the young king : his weapons, his fan, a model down model of one of his boats - all made from the richest materials : ivory, quartzite, ebony, bronze, alabaster, gold.
- An appendix to the plates. Did you know that the famous death mask of Tutankhamun portrays the king's features so faithfully that an easy examination of the mask discloses only one irregularity : a difference in thickness corresponding to the scar on the Pharaoh's cheek !
- A bibliography
- A table of contents

MONEY SAVING STRAWBERRY BARGAINS
TWO TOP PRODUCING VARIETIES
FROM HOUSE OF WESLEY
BLOOMINGTON, ILLINOIS 61701

Special-By-Mail Offer
QUINAULT EVERBEARING STRAWBERRY PLANTS
10 FOR ONLY $1.95

25 Plants $3.95 — 50 Plants $6.95 — 100 Plants $11.95 — 200 Plants $20.95

OUTSTANDING NEW VARIETY

Treat yourself to the biggest, most luscious-tasting strawberries you've ever had a chance to pop into your mouth. These are Quinault Everbearing berries and they grow as big as tea cups! They are a firm, deep red berry - - a mouth-watering delight for desserts, preserves, freezing and eating fresh.

QUINAULT EVERBEARING STRAWBERRIES ARE LONG BEARING, AND HEAVY PRODUCING. You begin harvesting these big, sweet beauties in June, only 6 to 10 weeks after planting. They continue to bear all summer until a killing frost in the fall! The Quinault is an excellent home garden variety. It is hardy and drought resistant. It was developed in conjunction with Washington State University. When tested in 13 states and Canada it was found to have an excellent performance record for size, taste, plant growth and freedom from disease. This outstanding berry could well become the most popular strawberry ever developed.

INCLUDE STRAWBERRIES IN YOUR GARDEN

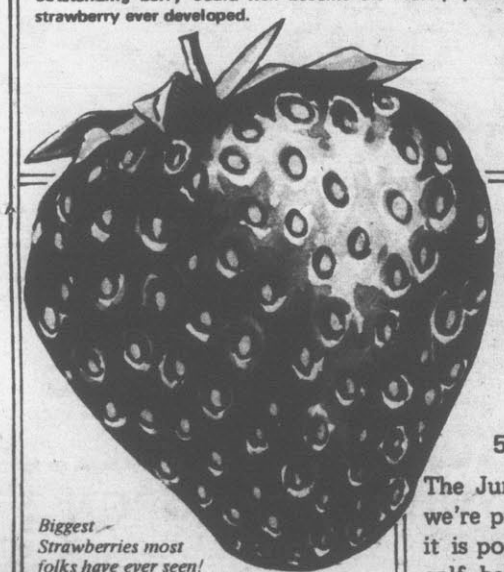

Even if you don't raise a garden - - you should grow strawberries if at all possible. They are not hard to grow. Yet they produce the greatest all around fruit for family eating enjoyment. Imagine eating fresh, juicy strawberry shortcakes, jams - - or fresh with cream and sugar! In these days of high food prices a strawberry patch is an especially good investment. And you don't have to wait years to begin harvesting this fruit crop! Strawberries are especially nourishing. They provide even more Vitamin C than an equal weight of orange juice!

WHAT TO DO WHEN YOU ARE SHORT OF SPACE AND STILL WANT STRAWBERRIES

A small space - - as little as 9' X 12' - - will produce all of the berries that an average sized family will need. Even if you don't have a few feet of space you can still have strawberries. Drill holes in a small nail keg. Fill it with dirt and put plants in the holes. This is a decorative and good way to grow many delicious berries in a very small space. Trellises and strawberry pyramids can also be used when space is limited. Or simply plant strawberries along the front of your flower bed for an interesting and productive edging.

CAUTION — The most frequently noted "complaint" we have on these marvelous berries is that most people just didn't think to order enough! Honestly - - you will want at least 50 of these plants to start even for smaller patches. ORDER PLENTY. You receive strong, well-rooted, field-grown plants from virus-free stock which means superior fruit, double yields and increased plant vigor. ORDER NOW — — ENJOY ALL THE STRAWBERRIES YOU CAN EAT THIS SUMMER.

Biggest Strawberries most folks have ever seen!

JUNE BEARING

50 Plants $4.75 — 100 Plants $8.95 — 200 Plants $15.95

The June bearing Giant Robinson strawberry is another berry we're proud to offer to our customers. One of the top berries, it is popular wherever it is grown. These berries grow as big as golf balls. They are bright red, sweet-tasting and juicy. They ripen very fast and produce lots of new runners to give you a bigger bed every year. These wonderful strawberries make mouth-watering desserts and jams. They are excellent fresh or frozen. Order now and receive strong, healthy plants with well-developed crowns and roots. The Giant Robinson is a highly drought-resistant and winter hardy berry. Don't compare this exceptional variety with ordinary varieties.

WHAT OUR CUSTOMERS SAY ABOUT GIANT ROBINSON STRAWBERRIES

". . . . I have never seen anything like them! (Giant Robinson Strawberries) I have to take issue with you on one thing. You advertised that they grew as big as a golf ball. Many of them were as big as 2 golf balls. In all my years growing strawberries I have never raised so many lovely berries on such a small patch. They are the greatest. Thanks for selling me."

White House China
The Abraham Lincoln Plate

• An authentic reproduction of the china pattern used in the White House by President Abraham Lincoln.

• The first in a series of 12 re-creations of historic White House china patterns to be issued in a serial-numbered limited edition by the Danbury Mint.

You can now obtain a beautiful collector plate which reproduces the White House china pattern actually used by President Abraham Lincoln.

White House China

There exists, in closely guarded rooms within the White House, a collection of the china used by our Presidents over the centuries. Think of your own special thrill in not just seeing this White House china, but actually owning a collector's set of twelve historic Presidential plates.

Included in this collection will be 7¾" dessert/salad plate re-creations of the china patterns used by George Washington, John Adams, Abraham Lincoln, and nine other American Presidents. The Abraham Lincoln plate, the first to be issued, is available now in a serial-numbered limited edition. By acquiring it, you will be eligible to purchase (if you wish) each of the remaining eleven plates in the White House china collection, which will be offered one every 2-to-3 months at the same price.

Authentic Re-Creations

Naturally, the plates used by our Presidents represent the finest products of the china maker's art. These authentic re-creations and adaptations will be produced in Europe, as was so much of the Presidential china throughout our history. The time-honored techniques of old-world artistry will be combined with the best of modern technology to create a truly magnificent plate collection for your home.

Collector Plates You Can Use

Many collector plates are intended primarily for display. However, in this instance, great care has been taken to provide you with collector plates that also can be used on special occasions.

24kt Gold Decorations

As you might expect in official Presidential china patterns, many of these plates are lavishly decorated with gold! In every case, 24kt gold has been hand applied to authentically recreate the original patterns.

PEOPLE QUIZ / By John E. Gibson

Do extroverts have better memories than introverts? Are women better than men at recalling people's names?

WHO REMEMBERS WHAT AND WHY

Michelle Horwitz

• TRUE OR FALSE?

1. Your ability to remember accurately what was said in an important conversation depends on your personality type.

2. The extrovert may lead a fascinating life, but he doesn't remember things nearly as well as the introvert does.

3. If you're middle-aged, you probably wouldn't recognize most of your high-school classmates if you met them now.

4. The way you're asked about something can cause you to "remember" things that aren't true or events that never happened.

5. Women are better than men when it comes to remembering people's names and connecting them with the right faces.

ANSWERS

1. True. In University of California studies, men and women subjects were scored on their ability to recall correctly what was said in a conversation in which they had participated. Each was then subjected to personality tests. Findings: poorest showings were made by subjects who had a strong need for social approval and were concerned with making a good impression. Also, discomfort during the conversation was related to difficulty in remembering what was said. Subjects who made the best scores were "independent-minded, displayed confidence in their values and tended to argue strongly for their points of view. They were best able to recall a conversation objectively and completely."

2. True. Psychological studies at the University of London showed that introverts possess a greater ability for recalling past incidents and a "more durable memory storage" than extroverts.

3. False. In an Ohio Wesleyan University study, 392 men and women of various ages were tested on their ability to recall and recognize their high-school classmates. The subjects recognized a surprisingly large number, regardless of how many years had passed. "Even those who had finished high school 40 years before still recognized 75 percent of their classmates."

4. True. University of Washington studies have demonstrated that this phenomenon frequently happens in eyewitness testimony in accident cases and the like. Examples are cited of how the phrasing of a question tricks a person's memory and results in false recall. The study showed that "simply changing 'a broken headlight' to 'the broken headlight' can lead witnesses of a film to be certain that they saw a headlight broken when, in fact, they did not. And when subjects estimated speed at the time of a collision, use of the verb 'smashed' instead of 'hit' in the question increased both the speed reported and the tendency to 'remember' nonexistent broken glass a week later."

5. True. In studies conducted by California State University and San Diego State University behavioral scientists, who tested men and women undergraduates on their ability to match people's names with their faces, women made significantly better scores than men. Since this ability often can assume crucial social importance — the easiest way to slight a person you've met is to forget who he is — it is suggested that "females may be more socially oriented than males, probably because of society's differential role expectations." WHAT IN THE WORLD

How To Succeed In Business

Starting your own business may turn out to be more than you bargained for says a teacher who operates 2 businesses of his own. Donald W. Looft, a guest lecturer at the Purdue Univ. School of Management, points out, "Willingness to sacrifice money, time and friends and perhaps put a strain on your family relationships is the first decision you must face."

Looft, who runs 2 Ind. restaurants, says few people are aware of the tremendous amount of time required to get a new business off the ground: "You can count on working 12 to 14 hours a day for many weeks at a time during the first two years."

Another problem is underestimating start-up costs and expecting the business to turn a profit immediately. Looft says that, ironically, many businesses fold just as they are about to become profitable because the owners simply don't have enough money to hold on a few months longer.

"Statistics show that 7 of 10 small businesses begun this year will fail," continues Looft, "because the proprietor chose the wrong employees or because the location was wrong or because the financial staying power was lacking or any combination of these and other factors.

Weight Gain During Pregnancy

Trying to limit weight gain too severely during pregnancy is potentially harmful to your baby says the Am. College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists. The doctors maintain that severe weight restriction during pregnancy can result in abnormally low birth weights and risk serious developmental problems for the newborn.

Total weight gain during pregnancy should be at least 22 to 26 lbs. The increase will be minimal during the first 12 weeks but should be about a lb. a week thereafter.

Importance of Parent-Child Play

Youngsters can benefit from playing with adults in ways they can't by just playing with other children. Robert Strom, a prof. of education at Arizona State Univ., says playing with an adult may increase the child's vocabulary, teach him important values and boost his ego.

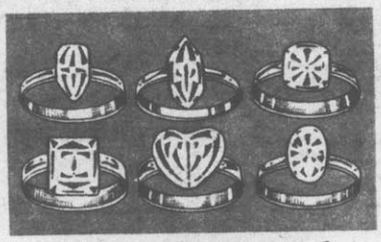

Despite these potential benefits, Strom recognizes that many parents feel silly trying to play with their small children. But he says this apprehension can be overcome by keeping a few hints in mind.

"Many adults have difficulty staying interested in play," Strom says. He advises starting with short play periods of 10 to 12 minutes to prevent boredom.

Strom, author of Growing Together: Parent and Child Development, believes a good way of getting involved in your child's play is simply to watch: "Observation can be reinforcing to children. It says that what the child is doing is important."

Don't be embarrassed to play fantasy games with small children advises Strom. If you are playing a skill or board game with young children, recognize that they may become impatient waiting for their turn.

Strom adds that often the outcome of the game is much less important to children than to the adults playing with them. So, if the child loses interest, don't feel that you must finish the game.

Ring May Reveal Facets Of Your Personality

You may be able to tell a lot about a person by the shape of his or her diamond ring, says gem consultant Saul A. Spero.

What's your favorite shape? If you picked round, the most popular shape, Spero says you're likely to be home- and family-oriented and easy to get along with.

According to Spero, people who prefer the marquise are likely to be aggressive and always on the go. Those who prefer pear-shapes are basically home- centered but more ambitious than those who prefer the round variety.

People who like emerald cuts are probably disciplined and organized. They tend to be somewhat conservative.

Lovers of oval shapes are likely to be disciplined but not rigidly so. They can be highly creative as well. A preference for a heart shape also indicates a creative person, but one who is a romantic.

Students Plan Own Menus

If Milwaukee schoolchildren don't like their school-lunch menu, they have no one but themselves to blame. That's because in Milwaukee a 68-member student committee taste-tests and selects all the food served in the school.

Carol A. Schlenzig, asst. dir. of food services for the Milwaukee school board, says the students are demanding testers. They insist on real meat and on-the-spot food preparation and turn thumbs down on frozen foods. Among their favorite meals are tacos, breaded fish, homemade pizza and beef chuck on a bun. "They don't go for just burgers and hot dogs," explains Schlenzig; "they like combinations of food like garlic bread with Italian dishes."

Schlenzig believes the plan has had payoffs for the school system as well as for the students. According to her, Milwaukee's food-waste figure is only 1%, compared with a nat'l. average of 15%.

Quick Takes

A man's place is in the home according to an increasing number of men. Business Week magazine reports the number of "househusbands" has increased 70% over the past 9 years. The househusbands neither hold nor seek jobs but are at home cooking, cleaning and taking care of children — while their wives bring home the bacon.

Religious broadcasts are booming. The Christian broadcasting industry now includes 325 radio stations, compared with 20 radio stations just 10 years ago. In addition to these stations, a few strictly commerical radio stations show signs of "converting" by carrying more religious programs to attract additional listeners.

Poodles are still top dogs nationally, but Doberman pinschers have nosed out German shepherds for 2nd place according to Am. Kennel Club figures. Other breeds that gained in popularity last year were cocker spaniels, Labradors and golden retrievers, all of which are among the 10 most popular breeds.

Why do marathoners drop out at the 20-mile mark? "They no longer have enough strength to hold up their arms," says Fla. osteopath Russell Wright. "Most marathoners practice so their legs are in good shape, but unless you've done special exercises, your arms will start hanging down and close your chest so you can't get enough air."

Gentlemen: Beware the Runaway Inflation! If you think you may be needing some good new executive slacks soon for business or vacation, GRAB THIS VALUE and be sure you have your full supply before rampant inflation blows prices up again! Haband, the mail-order people from Paterson, N.J., have a huge inventory of over 50,000 pairs of top grade made-in-U.S.A. Executive Dress Slacks in stock now. In your exact size and color choice, at the lowest cost they'll ever be made again!

100% NO IRON Permanent Press WASH & WEAR

TWO Pairs for $17.95

HOW CAN SUCH A PRICE POSSIBLY BE?

Haband is one of America's biggest, most important distributors of executive clothing. We control extensive contracts for top quality 100% polyester DoubleKnits made BEFORE the big price increases. Since Haband prices are based on these pre-inflation costs, you will see an important difference in what we charge. Compare our slacks with what you would have to pay in your local haberdasher. You save on the original price! You save on Cleaner's Bills! And you save wear and tear on your more expensive clothing!

Organize And File A Year's Financial Records only $3.99

- Lets You Keep Records All In One Handy Place For Years!
- Replaces A Whole Bulky File Case!
- Ends Hours of Searching For Lost Receipts, etc.
- Makes Bill-paying, Budget-planning Faster, Simpler!

You've seen it advertised for dollars more! It's the same handy money organizer idea... and is it ever a welcome one! Now all your financial records are at your fingertips. Never again chance costly and embarrassing errors because of a misplaced receipt or charge slip.

Our amazing "Money Manager" holds a full year's worth of important records and puts 'em all in one handy, readily accessible place! Cancelled checks, charge account records, whatever—now you can store them all neatly tucked away in a desk drawer (the "Money Manager" takes up no more space than a folded newspaper!) instead of bulging file cases, and creating endless clutter!

The "Money Manager" opens into three spacious sections with labeled pockets to hold a month's bank statements and cancelled checks, various receipts, payment book—even has room for a calendar, pen and memo pad (not incl.). Luxury brown vinyl. Personalized if you desire with 2 gold tone initials. Order "Money Manager" (#P-22459) @ $3.99 plus 75¢ postage & handling. BE A COMMANDER AND CAPTURE A PIECE OF HISTORY!

COMMANDER'S CAP ONLY $6.99

- An exact replica of the hat designed exclusively for our Apollo Astronauts!
- Hand-embroidered golden "scrambled eggs" visor
- Two commanding colors: Blue and Red

If ever a cap could make you look and feel the part as you take command of the situation—on the water, on the fairway, or wherever—this is it. The exact replica of the Commander's Cap. Designed specifically for America's Astronauts.

Remember how great those Astronauts looked wearing this cap as they stepped down from the recovery helicopter? Remember how impressive those legendary Army and Navy commanders of World War II looked with those golden "scrambled eggs" on their visors?

Along with its authentic shape, your Commander's Cap has the same hand-embroidered decoration. It's a quality, American-made cap. In two great American colors, blue and red. With a 6-position, adjustable back tab so you can customize it to fit your exact head size. Made of a carefree 65/35 blend of cotton and polyester to keep you cool and comfortable. Take command ... give your order now! Only $6.99.

SYNOMETRICS...an Olympic Champion's Discovery!

Turn Belly Fat into a Rock-Hard Lean Stomach

"I'm over 50 and I thought my fat and flab was with me for life...SYNOMETRICS "burned" it off in only 7 days. In fact results came so fast I had to cut my daily 7 minute workout to 5 minutes to slow down the slimming process. It's the most amazing method I've ever tried...and I've tried just about every gadget and gimmick I've seen in magazines and TV."

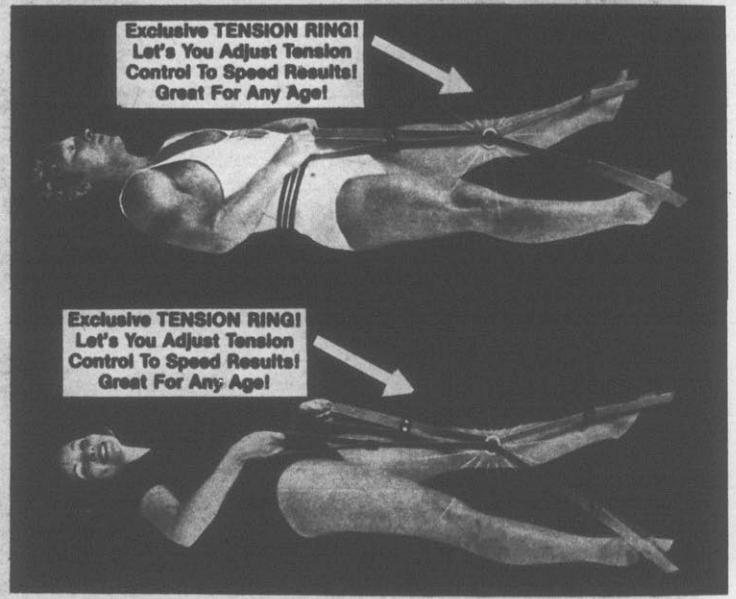

Ike Berger Today.

Introducing IKE BERGER Olympic Champion

Olympic Gold medal winner (U.S. team) weightlifting • World Champion (three times) • Pan American Games Champion (twice) • National Champion (12 times) • Elected to Hall of Fame.

IN JUST 7 SHORT MINUTES A DAY with the "miracle" of SYNOMETRICS (scientific concept of ISOMETRIC + ISOTONIC) ...the fantastic new discovery for speed shaping away ugly, embarrassing fat and flab...to reveal a brand new rock-hard, lean, trim, handsome body!

IKE BERGER explains SYNOMETRICS™...the new EASY speed method for figure beauty

What is SYNOMETRICS? You've probably heard about the Isotonic and Isometric principle of body dynamics for years. Each method has its own believers and supporters. I used BOTH methods in my daily training. Finally, I developed a special exercise unit that employed BOTH methods AT THE SAME TIME in one device. The effect was simply amazing. I was able to keep in trim, slim shape in only a fraction of the time I previously needed!

The Science of SYNOMETRICS

I later learned the scientific reason for this amazing result. It's called SYNERGISM—meaning that when you combine two methods the result is greater than the both of them separately. I now called my new discovery SYNOMETRICS and developed a special exercise unit I call the SPEED SHAPER. And that's just what it is...a speed method to give you results in minutes, NOT hours! Now...build yourself a "fantastic looking body" with the incredible SYNOMETRICS—the invention that works on the exciting new scientific concept of ISOTONIC + ISOMETRIC.

What is the SPEED SHAPER?

Ingeniously designed, in an amazingly compact slimming & shaping discovery. • No doorknobs needed • Adjust tension to your own needs, for any age • Slip into pocket or purse (5 oz.)—fits anywhere!

Iron Clad Money Back Guarantee

In just a few days you must actually begin to see measurable real results...or your money back promptly and without any question.

SEND TODAY! Complete kit only $9.95

SPEED SHAPER, INC. Dept. RS-3374

Does For Your Face What A Good Girdle Does For Your Figure

Our skin is nature's girdle, designed to hold us in—in all the right places. But unfortunately, as we get older, our skin—like any girdle—begins to loosen and sag. And lines and wrinkles form.

Our bodies can no longer supply our skin with the youthful-elastic-strength it so desperately needs. But now, thank heavens, Science has provided a second source of strength. A special dermatological formula that renews your skin with the youthful-elastic-strength it needs to hold your complexion in—in all the right places. All day or all night long.

This miraculous feat of dermatology is called Elasta 29. And unlike ordinary face creams and makeups, it works on the principle of dermalastic action. In other words, instead of trying to fill in and cover up the lines and wrinkles with some substance other than your skin . . . Elasta 29 actually does for your face what a good girdle does for your figure. It supplies your skin with the natural-elastic-strength that your body hasn't been able to.

Instantly those flabby spots get firmed up! And all those little telltale wrinkles and age lines get flattened out!

You not only look at least 10 years younger, but your skin feels great too. Soft. Smooth. Wrinkle-free. This safe gentle non-greasy lotion has actually become a part of you. Its Dermalastic action is so effective, even the puffiness under the eyes is gone! (A fact that has thoroughly impressed some of America's finest Doctors at one of our most prestigious medical institutions).

Elasta 29 is 100% safe. Contains no harsh chemicals. No hormones. No animal proteins. It's never greasy or sticky. Will not clog up your pores. You can put your makeup on right over it. But you may not even want to wear any. That's how great you'll look and feel with Elasta 29 holding your whole face in beautiful shape. This product is also a 100% safe investment, as you have full 90 days within which to ask for your money back if not completely satisfied.

All over America many thousands of women are raving about Elasta 29. Here are just a few quotes from letters which were never asked for: "Your wrinkle remover has done wonders for me. I really do look 10 years younger." Andrea Moss, New York City.

"It has been a god-send to me as I have scars from an accident also wrinkles and it works beautifully." Mrs. Dorothy K. Combs, Lakewood, Colo. "I only use it on a frown wrinkle on my forehead—but it seems almost unreal to put on a drop of this 'Miracle' liquid and watch the wrinkle disappear before your very eyes." Edna Jean Walze, Kingston, Tenn.

If you'd like a chance to become just as enthusiastic as these ladies are about Elasta 29, you may order the product as follows. If you have any important questions regarding Elasta 29, feel free to call me: Mrs. Lauren Hudson. (212) 490-2501.

ONLY ELASTA 29 OFFERS THIS 10 YEARS GUARANTEE

Unless you agree completely that Elasta 29 does indeed take 10 years, or more, off your looks . . . we want you to have every penny back. And though it should only take a few minutes to prove it to you once you've received your supply of Elasta 29 . . . we'll give you 90 days in which to make up your mind. If you don't feel as enthused about Elasta 29 as the people in this advertisement, simply return the unused portion and we'll promptly refund your money in full.

ELASTA 29, DEPT. RS-3373
521 Fifth Avenue, Suite 803, New York, New York 10017

Gentlemen, please rush me the non-surgical, temporary wrinkle cream that does for my face what a good girdle does for my figure: Elasta 29 with Dermalastic. Guaranteed to take at least 10 years off my looks. Or I get every penny back. (And I have a full 90 days to prove that this is the wrinkle cream I've always wished someone could make. Within that time, if not satisfied for any reason, I may return the unused portion for a full and prompt refund). All prices include postage & handling:

Our Story: THEY MEET SIR LAUNCELOT AND THE TWO PARTIES JOIN FORCES ON THEIR WAY TO BENWICK. LAUNCELOT SAYS HE IS RETURNING FROM SPYING ON KING CLAUDAS, THEIR HEREDITARY ENEMY. "WE WISHED TO SEE IF HE WAS ONCE MORE READY TO ATTACK BENWICK."

AS THEY NEAR THE TOP OF THE HILL VAL GLANCES BACK. A TROOP OF HORSEMEN WEARING THE UNIFORM OF KING CLAUDAS ARE FOLLOWING AT A GALLOP.

"RIDE SLOWLY TO THE TOP OF THE HILL. SAVE YOUR MOUNTS AND LET CLAUDAS' MEN CHARGE THE SLOPE," COMMANDS LAUNCELOT. "THEIR HORSES WILL BE WINDED WHEN THEY REACH US." THEN THE LADIES ARE HIDDEN IN THE WOODS BEHIND.

IT IS FOOLISH TO CHARGE UPHILL, BUT HIS MEN FEAR CLAUDAS MORE THAN HIS ENEMIES. THEN LAUNCELOT AND VAL SET THEIR LANCES AND CHARGE. WHEN THE LANCES SHATTER, SWORDS ARE DRAWN.

AT THE SOUND OF HIS CHILD'S YOUNG VOICE VAL TURNS TO SEE ONE OF KING CLAUDAS' MEN MAKING HIS WAY THROUGH THE WOODS TO WHERE HIS FAMILY IS HIDDEN. GALAN SEES HIM TOO AND WHEELS HIS PONY IN PURSUIT.

NEXT WEEK— Galan to the Rescue!
