Slain Aldo Moro's Body Is Found

By VICTOR L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Writer
ROME (AP) — The bloodstained body of former Premier Aldo Moro, shot in the head and his hands and feet chained, was found in a parked car in the heart of Rome today, 55 days after he was kidnapped by the Red Brigades.

Police said they found five spent cartridges in the car, a red Renault bearing Rome license plates and later determined to have been stolen.

The 61-year-old Moro also had several wounds in the body, police sources said.

The body was clad in a blue overcoat, wrapped in a red blanket and dumped on the floor of the Renault's backseat. Firemen who saw it said the face was extremely pale and Moro's 5-foot-11 frame had lost considerable weight.

The discovery ended, tragically, an ordeal that traumatized Italy and transfixed the attention of the world.

In Washington, the State Department condemned the killing as a "cowardly and contemptible act."

The body was found at 1:30 p.m. — 8:30 a.m. EDT — on Via Michelangelo Caetani, a narrow cobbled street of 15th and 16th century palaces running alongside Communist party headquarters and just a stone's throw from Christian Democrat headquarters. It was just two blocks from the busiest intersection in Rome.

Officers went to the area and discovered the body after police headquarters received an anonymous telephone call saying a bomb had been placed in a car parked on Via Funari, a street adjacent to the 200-yardlong Via Caetani.

They found nothing on Via Funari but then checked Via Caetani.

The car apparently had been parked on the street for several hours, police said.

The body was loaded into an ambulance and taken away. Police cordoned off the area. Crowds of weeping Romans congregated on the tiny street.

Police cars with sirens whining sped through the city, deserted as usual during the early afternoon lunch hours. Police said they had received other tips before the discovery of the car and were throwing out dragnets across the city.

Franco Evangelisti, top aide to Premier Giulio Andreotti, made the first official identification of the body.

Via Caetani leads into Via Botteghe Oscure, site of Communist Party headquarters two blocks from the traffic-filled Piazza Venezia intersection.

The Italian Communist Party's directorate went into session immediately, and party official Giancarlo Pajetta said as he entered the meeting, "This is a crime of sadist ferocity."

Moro, president of the ruling Christian Democrat Party and five-time former premier, was kidnapped March 16 in a Rome street ambush that killed his five police bodyguards.

Youth Jobs Survey

WASHINGTON (AP) — High school graduates trained as clerks, secretaries or typists and willing to take starting annual salaries of $5,500 a year stand the best chance of finding permanent work this summer, a government survey shows.

For the better educated, the most abundant openings are for accountants, computer programmers, electrical engineers, guidance counselors, nurses and social workers, the survey indicates.

Compiled by the Labor Department and released Monday, the survey shows low-paying office jobs topping the list of 80 occupations with the most openings for young job-seekers.

Fifty-seven of the positions require a high school education, while the others require additional education — college and nursing or trade schools.

The department said the survey is based on reports of job openings listed by state or federal job placement offices during the first three months of the year. Those agencies place an estimated four million people into jobs each year.

The occupations with the most openings has been distilled from more than 2,500 job classifications listed by the department.

Many of the openings do not require experience, making them suitable for young job seekers who will begin looking for their first permanent work when the school year is over, the department said.

The three positions most available were general office clerks, secretaries and clerical typists, with each job showing more than 10,000 openings a month. Salaries ranged from about $5,900 a year to $10,000 for secretaries and $5,500 to $8,700 for clerks and typists.

Other jobs with the most openings for high-school graduates, according to the survey, were administrative secretaries, accounting clerks, bookkeepers, receptionists and insurance sales people, with each position showing more than 3,000 openings a month. Salaries for those jobs ranged from a low of $5,500 to nearly $12,000 maximum for an insurance salesperson.

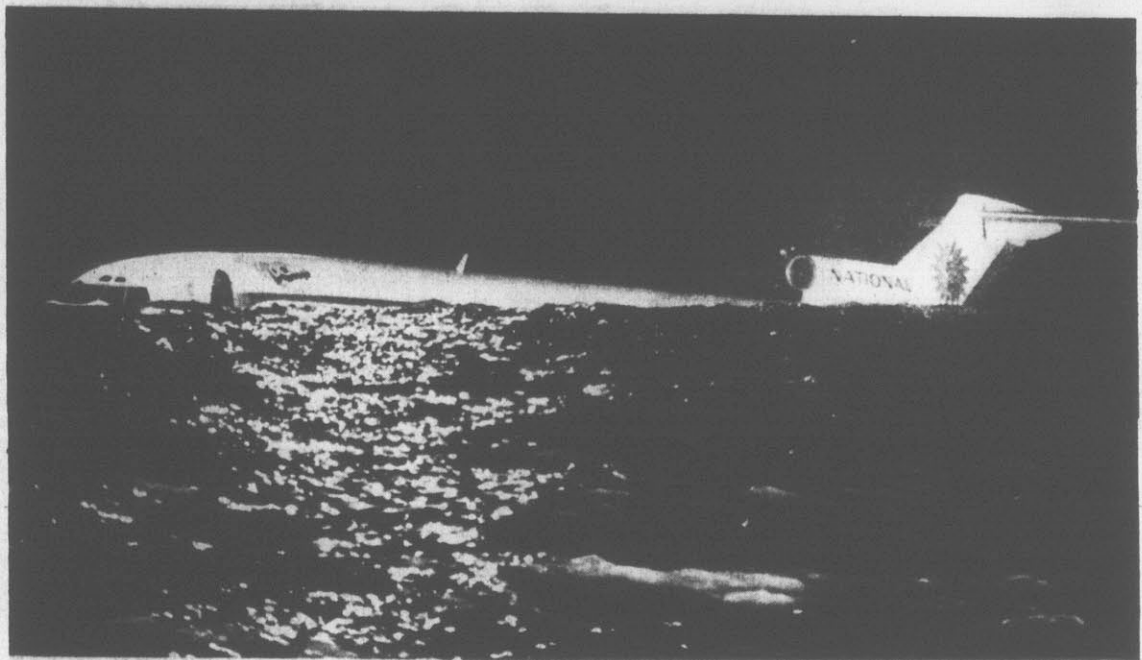

Positions requiring only a high school education that had between 2,000 and 3,000 openings a month included keypunch operators, stock clerks, survey workers, manager trainees and casework supervisors.

Jobs requiring more than a high school diploma that showed 1,000 or more openings a month included: accountants, computer programmers, electrical engineers, electronics technicians, employment interviewers, guidance counselors, industrial engineers, mechanical engineers, nurses and social workers.

Of that group, salaries for licensed nurses were the lowest, ranging from $5,968 to $11,218 a year.

Shore Drive Project Has Finally Gained Close-Out

Airliner Crashlanded In Approach; 3 People Dead

FLOATS IN MOONLIGHT — National Airlines 727 floats on the surface of Escambia Bay after crashing on an approach to Pensacola (Fla.) Regional Airport

PENSACOLA, Fla. (AP) — A National Airlines jet carrying 58 persons crashed into Escambia Bay while coming in for a landing, forcing stunned passengers to scramble out emergency doors into fog and a sea slicked with jet fuel. Three passengers were killed.

Most of the 52 passengers aboard the Boeing 727 were saved because a tugboat captain who saw the crash brought his barge to the rescue. The passengers had no warning that anything was wrong until the plane hit the water Monday night and came to rest about 500 yards from shore, settling in mud about 10 feet below the bay's surface. "We were on our final approach," said Capt. Ronald Gift, a Navy pilot from Carmel, Calif., who was a passenger. "There was no warning, no violent maneuvering, no surging of the engines."

The airline initially listed 55 passengers, but later said three of those had never gotten aboard.

Three bodies were found floating near the plane. Divers sent into the partially submerged craft said everybody was out. But fog and haze hampered rescue efforts during the night, and a thunderstorm that moved over the bay early today churned up the seas as divers searched for the missing. A head count was further confused because passengers were scattered among six hospitals and several rescue stations.

Monday night. The jet was carrying 52 passengers and seven crew members. (AP Laserphoto)

Many were injured in the crash, but dozens escaped safely when tugboat captain Glenn E. McDonald, 41, pulled his barge, the Little Mac, to the plane, tied it up and helped men, women and children clamber aboard.

"If that barge hadn't been there, there's no telling how many would have drowned," Marine Patrol Sgt. William Clenny.

McDonald's wife Janet said her husband, a marine supply shop owner from Gulf Breeze, was in the vicinity of the plane because he himself was lost in the fog.

"He didn't know why he was there, but now he believes he was there for a reason," she said. "He thought it was about to crash down on top of him, but it came down about 300 yards away." After spending the night pulling survivors from the wreck, McDonald went home, slept for two hours and returned to work.

Second Hearing

The second of two hearings scheduled by the City Council on the proposed three-year Comprehensive Community Development Plan will be held on Thursday, May 11 at 8 p.m. at city hall.

The hearing, to be held at the regular May Council session, is aimed at gaining citizen input on a proposal to apply for a multi-year comprehensive Small Cities Community Development Grant for 1978-1981.

Comments received at the hearing will help the city identify and designate Neighborhood Strategy Areas and to assign priority to the strategy areas.

The main area that will be affected by the grant program is the West Greenville section bounded generally by the Tar River on the north, Memorial Drive on the west, and Dickinson Avenue and Green Street.

ASSISTANCE FORMS

I'd like to report a consumer problem to the N. C. Attorney General's Consumer Protection Division, but hate to take time to send for the proper forms. Is there a local source for these forms? F. B.

The local Chamber of Commerce office and the Pitt County Information are two local sources of the "request for assistance" forms. There may be others. Carolyn Hibbard of the Information Center said she'd be glad to send a copy to anyone who calls her (752-1111) and requests it.

CABLE TV

I would like to know if and when cable TV is going to be hooked up in Greenville and if the Reflector is planning to revise the Sunday TV guide to include the new stations that are going to be carried. J. C.

According to Ray Bell, plant manager of Greenville Cable TV, Inc., progress has not been made as fast as he would have hoped because of the bad weather. However, by the end of the month, hopefully the section from Oakdale to Belvedere, as well as from Hooker Road to Smith Waldrop Motors will be ready. The section from Evans Street toward Hastings Ford should also be ready by the end of June. Price of installation is $7.50 and $7.50 per month for service charges. Ten channels will be carried. Subscribers may opt to pay extra for "Showtime," a service which will provide special programs. For more information, call 756-5677.

"The Daily Reflector" is planning to carry the cable TV schedule in the "TV Showtime."

School Board To Reconvene On Budget Study

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

Members of the Greenville City Board of Education on Monday night conducted a three-hour executive session, then adjourned until Thursday when it will reconvene to do further work on the 1978-79 proposed budget.

Superintendent Glenn Cox said after the meeting that the board had carried on extensive discussions on two basic personnel issues — the appointment and reappointment of instructor personnel in the city school system; and consideration of a proposed reorganization of the Central Office staff that he presented.

In the brief period before the board went into executive session for personnel matters, Dr. Charles Coble, president of the Wahl-Coates PTA, appeared, seeking information on why Wahl-Coates was due to receive only $2,350 in funds for furniture and equipment in the proposed capital outlay budget for the coming fiscal year.

Coble pointed out that based on pupil population that amount equated to $4.23 per child, while at all other elementary schools the amount equated to $10.00 and more per pupil.

Board members responded they had scrutinized the requests and needs of each individual school in approving the proposed capital outlay budget, and that the age and needs of each school had been considered — including funds to replace stolen audio visual equipment at several of the schools.

Cox also cited the fact that an appropriation of $100,000 for equipment had been allotted to Wahl-Coates at the time it opened in 1972.

The board directed Cox as a follow up procedure to prepare an additional review type paper on school equipment needs, to forward a copy to Dr. Coble and to have a copy to present the board.

Prior to the board meeting, board members and their wives met for dinner and the presentation of awards to school board members. Chairman Henry Dunn termed the event "a final hurrah for the appointed board." Dunn presented certificates of appreciation to each board member.

The board's guest, Mayor Percy Cox, presented Dunn his certificate and thanked the board for its work as an appointed board.

Cox noted that the City Council has been working on appointing three members to complete the board membership and would further consider this at Thursday night's council meeting. "I can tell you," he said, "in retrospect the council now wishes it had decided on a full elected board. Believe me, it would have made our task much simpler."

N.Y. Court Orders Joan Little Return To N.C.

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — The state's highest court today ordered fugitive Joan Little returned to North Carolina to complete her prison sentence for housebreaking, but gave her lawyers 10 days to appeal.

Miss Little became nationally known when she was acquitted on charges of killing a North Carolina jailer who she said had attacked her sexually. She escaped from prison in Raleigh, N.C., late last year and was recaptured in New York City in December.

She has said that she would "rather die" than return to North Carolina, where she claims her life would be in danger.

The unanimous decision in the state Court of Appeals exhausts Miss Little's chances in New York courts. Her only remaining avenues of appeal would now be in federal courts or North Carolina courts.

The court noted that the U.S. Constitution makes extradition mandatory if the governor of one state requests it of the governor of another state.

The unanimous, unsigned opinion said that Miss Little should press her case in the North Carolina courts.

"The courts of this state may not routinely sit in judgment over acts performed by officials in our sister states, nor may they give sanctuary to a fugitive of another state without compelling cause," the court said.

"The only contention here is that (she) will be subjected to unconstitutional treatment by the demanding state," the court said, adding that to determine whether or not such treatment will actually occur, "is not within the competency of the New York courts."

At the North Carolina governor's office in Raleigh, Gary Pearce, Gov. Jim Hunt's press secretary, said, "We're pleased with the ruling." He added, however, that "she's not going to be returned anytime soon — not immediately, anyway."

Pearce said the state fully expected the ruling to be appealed by the 24-year-old woman's attorney, William Kuntzler.

Arrest 2 More

Two other men were arrested yesterday in connection with a Greenville Police and State Bureau of Investigation undercover drug investigation which resulted in the arrest of 20 individuals here last week on 79 counts.

Chief Glenn Cannon said Robert Gerald Jones Jr., 22 of Williamston, and Edwin Bailey Dunlap, 21 of 27 River Bluff Apts. were taken into custody yesterday.

Jones, according to the chief, was charged with two counts of possession and two counts of selling LSD, while Dunlop was charged with possessing and selling MDA to SBI undercover agents.

SBI spokesmen today said the purchase price of the drugs bought during the undercover investigation — which included LSD, MDA, cocaine and phenobarbital — totaled $7,478.

Missourian Is 'Junior Miss'

MOBILE, Ala. (AP) — The new America's Junior Miss, Kim Crosby of Springfield, Mo., says she is used to her knees shaking.

She and her family are active in little theater productions, she said Monday night, adding, "I think the experience in the theater helped a lot. It gave me self-confidence going on stage."

Miss Crosby, a senior at Kickapoo High school, won the title after performing a lively vocal medley from the musical "Cinderella."

When her name was called as the winner on the nationally televised finals, she said, "It was overwhelming. Then it was all a trance."

File Suit To Bar Hospital

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — Tulsa-area hospitals have filed suit in District Court seeking to stop construction of the City of Faith Hospital by Oral Roberts University.

The Tulsa Area Hospital Council appealed from the Oklahoma Health Planning Commission's decision allowing construction of the hospital. The suit filed Monday asks the court to halt work on the hospital until the appeal is heard.

A hearing was set for May 24 on the request to stop work but the appeal itself probably will not be heard for three to six months.

The commission approved a certificate of need for the hospital on April 26, approving construction of 294 hospital beds and permitting construction of a building large enough to eventually house 777 beds.

The university, founded by evangelist Oral Roberts, immediately began construction of the hospital.

Dr. James Winslow, vice provost for medical affairs at ORU, declined comment on the suit until university attorneys have a chance to review it.

Korff Hunting Sadat Scholars

CAIRO (AP) — Rabbi Baruch Korff, spirited defender of former President Richard Nixon, is in Egypt to find candidates for "Sadat Peace Scholarships."

Korff, who met here in December with President Anwar Sadat, said in an interview Monday that the Washington-based U.S. Citizens Congress Education Fund will help finance 200 young Middle Easterners in jobs with U.S. congressmen.

Korff is the founder of the conservative group, which he said has 50,000 active members and is an outgrowth of the ad-hoc Committee for Fairness to the (Nixon) Presidency.

Costa Rica President Bans Return By Vesco

By TOM FENTON
Associated Press Writer
SAN JOSE, Costa Rica (AP) — President Rodrigo Carazo fulfilled a major campaign promise following his inauguration Monday and barred fugitive American financier Robert Vesco from returning to Costa Rica.

Vesco, wanted in the United States on charges of embezzling $224 million, left Costa Rica April 30 for a business trip around the Caribbean, his attorney said at the time. He is believed to be on the island of Grenada, off Venezuela.

Carazo made an election pledge to kick Vesco out and fulfilled it at a session of his Government Council of nine cabinet ministers immediately after he was sworn in as Costa Rica's 36th president.

"Wherever he is, let it be known that he cannot come back to Costa Rica," Presidency Minister Jose Rafael Cordero said in announcing the decision to reporters.

Although Vesco has a citizenship application pending before one Costa Rican tribunal and the government is appealing a court ruling in his favor in another case, the legal basis for the ban was not announced. But officials said it cannot be appealed. A presidential spokesman said all ports of entry have received instructions to refuse Vesco re-entry if he attempts to return.

A local newspaper said Vesco's wife and the couple's three youngest children left the family's $500,000 home on the outskirts of San Jose three weeks ago and went to New Jersey, their former home.

Government sources would not say what might be done about Vesco's holdings in Costa Rica, estimated at $60 million. He is estimated to have another $50 million invested in the Bahamas.

The 43-year-old financier is accused in the United States of looting Investors Overseas Services, Bernard Cornfeld's bankrupt mutual fund which Vesco took over, and of illegally contributing $200,000 to President Nixon's 1972 re-election campaign. The Internal Revenue Service is also seeking $1.1 million in taxes it says he owes.

Vesco moved to Costa Rica in 1972, and successive U.S. requests for extradition were blocked by President Jose Figueres, to whom he loaned $2.15 million, and his successor, Daniel Oduber, to whose campaign Vesco contributed heavily. Figueres and Oduber were leaders of the National Liberation Party, which Carazo defeated in an upset Feb. 5.

SBI Denies Police Probe

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — State Bureau of Investigation Director Haywood Starling said Monday he is denying a probe of the Raleigh police handling of a May Day festival April 29 by the agency because the Wake district attorney doesn't think it is necessary.

Starling said before the SBI can make an investigation, "our policy requires the district attorney of the appropriate jurisdiction request such investigation."

And Riley said he didn't think an SBI investigation necessary because his office has received no complaints about the incident.

"No one's sought to talk to a magistrate about charges against an officer," he said.

Raleigh Police Chief Robert Goodwin had asked for an SBI investigation into the department's handling of the incident to develop all the facts. Twenty-nine persons were arrested in a May Day street party after police dressed in riot gear moved in to break up the crowd. Charges included failing to disperse, resisting arrest and public consumption of alcohol.

There were complaints of excessive use of force and arrest without cause.

While the SBI has no plans to investigate the incident, an FBI agent said his agency was "monitoring" the police department's internal probe of the matter.

Glenn Sott, an FBI spokesman in Charlotte, said the final police department report will be sent to FBI officials in Washington along with all news articles about the April 29 case. That information will be turned over to lawyers in the civil rights division of the U.S. Justice Department, who will determine if an FBI probe is needed, Scott said.

Holding Final PTA Meeting

The Sadie Sautler School PTA will hold its final meeting Wednesday in the all-purpose room at 7:30 p.m.

The 1978-79 slate of officers will be presented for approval.

A musical program will be presented by the school's strings, band and chorus.

All parents are invited to attend.

Emission Test Results Poor

ECU News Bureau
Results of an "auto emission clinic" sponsored by an East Carolina University student group and the Eastern Lung Association indicate that 1977 automobiles generally show poor results on pollution control performance tests.

The clinic was held April 22 at Berne Square, New Bern. Tests on 86 automobiles were conducted by members of the ECU Student National Environmental Health Association. Purpose of the clinic was to determine the levels of carbon monoxide and hydrocarbon in the exhaust.

An infra-red exhaust emission tester was used which indicates the efficiency of the engine and the effectiveness of a car's pollution control equipment.

A total of 170 items were tested during the clinic, and among these items, 42 failed to reach the emission standards issued by the Environmental Protection Agency—25 percent of the total items checked.

Results also showed that among all the model years represented among the automobiles tested, the 1977 models have the worst records.

According to Dr. Y.J. Lao, faculty sponsor for the student group, 50 percent of 1977 cars checked failed to pass EPA standards.

Taxes Unpaid?

Floyd Little, city tax collector, announced that all unpaid real taxes will be advertised by the city as required by law in the listing person's name as of Jan. 1, 1977.

According to Little, the first advertisement of taxes is scheduled for May 15.

The tax collector said that if citizens have transferred real property and have any doubt of the taxes being outstanding, they may call the tax collector's office at city hall at 752-4137.

Inquiries should be made prior to Thursday, May 11, he added.

management for speaking out about authoritarian management practices and preferential treatment for favorites.

Elliott said decisions were not made capriciously or based upon favoritism.

The report cited "a rapidly developing rift" between health care technicians and professionals. It said the rift "was escalated by inequities in treatment" and the feeling among technicians that professionals had not demonstrated professional-level skills in working with residents and in directing programming activities of the technicians.

Elliott acknowledged that such a schism existed, but said some dissension between professionals and technicians is common at almost all institutions.

The review committee, made up of professionals in the field of mental retardation and parents, interviewed over 200 employees and examined numerous documents provided by the administration in February before compiling its report.

"In my opinion, the number one criteria for evaluating a facility like this is the delivery of services to the residents, both in quality and quantity," said Elliott. "The parts of the report that directly or indirectly spoke of this were those that dealt with interviews with parents (of patients), community agencies, and work done prior to placement of residents, during placement of residents in the community and in the follow-up. On all of these items, I think we got an excellent rating."

"The remainder of the report, while important, would be secondary to the actual delivery of services," he said.

The report said the attitude among parents about the quality of care at the institution "was generally positive," and that "good communications and relationships" between Murdoch and programs in the community existed.

Aiken said the state had offered Elliott a job as psychiatrist-physician at a state psychiatric facility, but the facility had not been determined.

Elliott, who has worked at Butner for 20 years, said he was considering seeking employment at Dorothea Dix Hospital in Raleigh, John Umstead Hospital in Butner, and mental health centers within commuting distance.

Ms. Lawler had submitted her resignation, effective Aug. 31, before the division asked her to step up the date to June 5.

Sorry For Moms In Nursing Homes

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1978 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: When Mother's Day approaches and I see all those ads reminding us to "remember Mother on HER special day," I want to scream!

For 10 years I have been conducting arts and craft classes in one of the finest homes for the aged in this area. Lovely surroundings, a hospital on the premises, good food, attendants around the clock—but in each room two strangers who have nothing in common are cooped up for the rest of their lives in one room barely large enough for two beds, two easy chairs and two small chairs for "company." (I suppose the chairs for company are adequate because nobody stays more than 20 minutes.)

One of my pupils told me, "When my daughter finds time to visit me, she asks, 'How do you like it here, Mama?' 'Fine,' I tell her. What am I going to say—that I cry myself to sleep every night?"

Happy Mother's Day to all the mothers who have been put away in homes by their children!

CONN.

DEAR CONN. All mothers in nursing homes are not necessarily there by their children's choice. Some older people need more care and attention than can be provided at home. And many homes, and the lifestyles of the families occupying them, make the addition of an aging parent impractical. I agree, it's sad. But it's also true.

DEAR ABBY: About four months ago I attended the wedding of a girl I work with. My husband and I had sent her a silver and crystal wine decanter that was not inexpensive.

Three months later, I realized that I had not received a thank-you note, so I wrote to her asking if she had ever received it.

A month passed, and still no word from the bride, so when I saw her, I asked her in person if she ever got the decanter.

She said she had, and she'd also sent me a thank-you note, and I had a lot of nerve nagging her about it. Then she said, "I'll return it to you tomorrow. I don't feel like keeping it now!"

I told her that I didn't mean to "nag" her, but since I had heard nothing, I just wanted to know if she had ever received it.

Abby, was I wrong to mention it to her? If I was, I will ask God—not her—to forgive me.

ALICE

DEAR ALICE: Save your apologies. I think your inquiry was justified.

DEAR ABBY: There is an older woman in our town who is a very strange character. She lives alone on some sort of pension. This weirdo likes to get all dressed and go where people are.

Well, she must think her church membership entitles her to attend all the social functions that take place in the social hall of her church, because she never misses one. The fact that she's not invited doesn't seem to bother her.

She attends all the teas and receptions, mingles with the guests, helps herself to all the refreshments, and has a good time.

Isn't it the minister's place to tell her she should stay away? He sees her at all the gatherings and surely knows she hasn't been invited.

SMALL TOWN

DEAR SMALL TOWN: If anyone is to discourage an uninvited guest, it should be the hostess. The poor woman is probably lonely. And if she causes no harm and enjoys herself, what's another glass of punch and a few cookies amid the socializing?

Regional Meet Plans Discussed

The Greenville Alumnae Chapter of Delta Sigma Theta Sorority finalized plans for a regional meeting during its monthly meeting held Saturday afternoon at the home of Brenda Teel.

Pres. Gladys Sanders presided. The regional meet of the South Atlantic Region of Delta Sigma Theta will be held at the Four Seasons in Greensboro May 26-28. The theme of the conference is "Agenda for Change: Mental Health." Dr. James Comer, professor of psychiatry at Yale University will be the keynote speaker. At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

President Carter, and I are the only two people in this country I know who work from our home. He's got the best of it. Surrounded by all that security, having a desk that locks, and no one ringing his chimes in the middle of the day to tell him pastry brushes and lip gloss.

Oh sure, he has his share of interruptions, but does he ever lift his phone and discover someone has entwined a popsicle stick in the cord? Does he ever get involved in a high-level phone conversation and have to excuse himself to turn the timer off on the ham? Is he ever in the midst of drafting a piece of legislation that will change the history of the world and hear a yell from the other end of the house, "We're out of toilet paper!"

The big problem with working from your home is no one treats you like a professional. Pest control men shuffle in and out spraying insecticide on my feet, children draw faces on my calendar and color my roll of stamps yellow, and at least once a day my husband calls with instructions to, "Go to the garage. Turn the power mower over on its back. On the bottom, just under the right rotary blade, is a serial number. Copy it down and call it in to the repair shop so they'll know what they're dealing with." When you're out picking up my cleaning, you can pick up the part."

As a humor writer I can only reflect on the flashes of wit that might have been had I only had a typewriter with set margins, paperclips that weren't strung into a "necklace," a dictionary with all the vowels, and a pen and pencil by the phone for messages.

Sometimes, I torture myself by wondering what it must be like to fill a wastebasket you don't have to empty, and the peace of not having to let a dog in and out 175 times a day.

But the real kicker is convincing your friends and family you are really working. The telephone calls that begin, "You busy? So, what's happening? Still working for that crazy lady who won't let you go to lunch or play tennis? So, let her fire you. Ha. Ha."

Like President Carter, I too have my Camp David. It's calm, serene, and private. I tell no one I'm going there. I just slip off with my work and sometimes just a few hours makes all the difference in the world. When I return, things are in perspective, and I am once again ready to do battle with the steady stream of interruptions.

The IRS is questioning my expenditure of a new shower curtain for my office, but what do they know?

Hopeful Note On Employment

Analyzing monthly government figures is tricky, but there is some optimism to be gained from the most recent report on national unemployment.

The government said last week that the unemployment rate had fallen to six percent, the lowest it has been in 3½ years.

As of April total employment nationally stood at 93.8 million, and the employment figure had risen by 535,000 last month.

The worst of the unemployment was in October 1974 when, in May 1975 the rate was 9.1 percent. April a year ago the rate was 7.1 percent.

However, the optimism was tempered somewhat by another statistic. The total work force — those working or looking for work — rose by 370,000 in April.

A high unemployment rate is the most distressing thing about a soft economy. The figures represent people who are ready and willing to work but are unable to find jobs. If they can't find jobs they aren't producing nor are they carrying their share of the tax load.

So it is good news that the unemployment rate is coming down.

Change Rules And Dump Deadbeats

Administration officials have reported that there are federal employees making up to $50,000 annually who never come to work.

It is claimed that they aren't fired because the process for getting rid of them is too involved and time consuming.

Well, let's change the rules which allow these deadbeats to stay on the public payroll and draw their salaries from our tax dollars. They reflect badly on dedicated and hard working public servants, and our country should not be saddled with them.

THIS AFTERNOON

Tradeoffs Now Underway

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — After all else is considered, the single most important element in making a government like ours work in compromise.

Nobody can have everything his own way. You get something here, and you give something there. That process is already underway for the 1978 session of the General Assembly.

The continuation of the 1977 regular session is loosely termed a budget session, following the recent practice of meeting every year to update the state's spending program based on a fluid revenue pattern.

Members of the session convening May 31 will be the same lawmakers who made up the 1977 session. Those chosen, or nominated to run, in the May 2 party primaries will not be sworn in until the 1979 regular session, and will serve two-year terms.

Lame Duck

As a result, this will be — in the recollections of experts — the first lame duck session of the General Assembly in modern times. Many of the legislators will either be nominated without opposition, running without opposition, or already defeated or retiring.

This could flavor the proceedings, giving the assembly sufficient numbers without political headaches to make more independent judgments. Backers of the controversial liquor-by-the-drink measure are counting on that factor to a considerable degree in lining up support for their local-option measure.

So it is easy to see that while money matters will occupy much of the assembly's attention, the more time-consuming and controversial measures on the schedule will almost certainly mean that the session will run considerably longer than the two weeks earlier predicted.

There are 99 measures hanging fire from last year, thereby eligible for action. Eliminating duplicate proposals will trim that to 80, and while many of those are budgetary in nature, even then some argument is anticipated.

State pay raises, for example, will require considerable compromising. The associations representing teachers and other employees are demanding 10 per cent. At the rate of $24 million per point, it isn't likely any such figure will be awarded.

BILL NOBLITT

Already written in is a six per cent hike with the blessing of Gov. James B. Hunt, Jr. and legislative leaders. The tradeoff, however, will be an increase in car mileage and living expense allowances for traveling state employees — up to 17 cents per mile from 15; and up to $27 daily for room and board. Also, no accounting is required, so if meals and lodging can be found more cheaply, the employee profits.

Other Items

Other possibly lengthy items will include mandatory jail terms for drunken driving, repeal of criminal law on public drunkenness, a measure to tax manufacturers to fund a litter program, and limited repeal of the manufacturer's inventory tax.

Two new items will also be taken up if two-thirds of the membership agree to consider them: a rewritten open meetings law for governmental agencies, and a certificate of need law governing construction of health care facilities. The latter will require an amendment to the state Constitution before becoming legal.

Much of the heavy new spending — other than salary raises — will go to fund new or expanded programs put forth by Gov. Hunt, including $15 million for remedial work with students who fail required tests in school, or in health areas.

Beginning May 17, legislators will begin getting hard data on the upcoming session. Chairmen and vice chairmen of spending committees will meet for three days; then the full appropriations committee will meet May 23 and the rest of that week, followed by convening of the session on May 31.

"Wow! You're gonna be a sure-fire winner...uh...when I get y'harnessed!"

Sharing 1st Amendment

WASHINGTON — Under the Supreme Court's recent decision in the Massachusetts case, corporations may now exercise a right of free speech they never knew they had. The idea takes a little getting used to, but on balance, the public interest will be well served.

The case arose in the summer of 1976. Massachusetts had scheduled a referendum for November of that year on a state constitutional amendment. The object of the amendment was to let the state legislature impose an individual income tax. The First National Bank of Boston, in common with other banks and corporations, strongly opposed the proposition and wanted to mount a campaign of paid advertising against it.

Such a campaign would have violated a Massachusetts law making it a crime for any corporation to make expenditures "for the purpose of influencing the vote on referendum proposals". The statute specifically prohibited expenditures on the issue of an income tax, and generally limited corporations to paid advertising on referendum "materially affecting" their own business. The First National Bank and other plaintiffs, sought an injunction to prohibit prosecution under the law, but the Massachusetts Supreme Court upheld the statute.

A few days ago, the U.S. Supreme Court, by a 5 to 4 vote, reversed. The effect is to nullify the Massachusetts law, and by extension to nullify similar restrictive statutes in 30 other states.

Speaking for the court, Mr. Justice Powell drew a clear distinction between elections and referenda. Elections involve candidates; referenda involve issues. The Court's opinion grants no new rights to corporations in the area of campaign contributions. But when it comes to issues, corporations no longer can be denied the liberty to speak their corporate minds.

The question, said Mr. Justice Powell, is not whether the corporations have First Amendment rights that are coextensive with individual rights of free speech. The question is, rather, whether the Massachusetts law abridges the liberty of expression the First Amendment was intended to protect. "We hold that it does." The speech proposed by the plaintiffs corporations, in opposition to a proposed tax, "is at the heart of the First Amendment's protection."

If individual persons wanted to buy advertising space to take sides on a referendum, "no one would suggest that the state could silence their proposed speech." Corporations may be artificial persons, but even so, they have "at least the liberty to discuss publicly and truthfully all matters of public concern without previous restraint or fear of subsequent punishment." Such speech "is the type of speech indispensable to decision making in a democracy, and this is no less true because the speech comes from a corporation rather than from an individual."

Carter Refinds Party

By FRANK CORMIER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter, just in time for the 1978 campaign, has rediscovered the Democratic Party.

The president, who spent most of 1976 running against the organized political establishment, warmly embraced Democratic officeholders and party functionaries during his four-state Western tour last week.

The president's calculated effort to identify himself with his party and its stalwarts was in marked contrast to his behavior in 1976, when he only occasionally acknowledged the existence of fellow Democrats running on the ticket he headed.

As recently as last year, Carter cast himself in something close to a nonpartisan role during his travels around the country, save when he appeared at party fund-raising events.

But the situation is different now. As Carter visited Colorado, California, Oregon and Washington, fellow Democrats were much in evidence and the president went out of his way to praise them and boost their campaigns.

Sometimes, Carter's praise bordered on the extravagant, as when he told Denver Democrats that their embattled senator, Floyd Haskell, in many ways "is a national treasure."

And the president did not shrink from reminding his audience that Haskell — "one of the great senators of all time" — is in sharp disagreement with key farm policies of the Carter administration.

In Spokane, Wash., Carter similarly made public note of his differences with Democratic Rep. Tom Foley, who faces a strong Republican challenge this year.

Foley denies he urged Carter to stay away from Spokane on grounds the president might be a liability in the local campaign.

Even if he did, chances are Foley would think differently now. After all, the president pictured the congressman as an independent-minded legislator before the largest crowd of the trip, variously estimated at 20,000 to 60,000.

THE INSIDE REPORT

The Marxist Professor

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — What is in danger of becoming a frivolous public debate over the appointment of a Marxist to head the University of Maryland's department of politics and government has so far ignored this unspoken concern within the academic community: the avowed desire of many political activists to use higher education for indoctrination.

The proposal to name Bertell Ollman, professor at New York University, as department head has generated wrong-headed debate. Politicians who jumped in to oppose Ollman simply for his Marxist philosophy have received a justifiable going-over from defenders of academic freedom in the press and the university. Academic Prince Valiants seem arrayed against McCarthyite know-nothings.

But neither side approaches the central question: not Ollman's beliefs, but his intentions. His candid writings avow his desire to use the classroom as an instrument for preparing what he calls "the revolution." Whether this is a form of indoctrination that could transform the real function of a university and transcend limits of academic freedom is a concern to academicians who are neither McCarthyite nor know-nothing.

To protect academic freedom, that question should be posed not by politicians but by professors. But professors throughout the country troubled by the Ollman nomination, clearly a minority, dare not say a word in today's campus climate. This fact alone suggests that freedom is relative in academia.

While Ollman is repeatedly described in news accounts as a "respected Marxist scholar," he is widely viewed in his profession as a political activist. Amid the increasingly popular Marxist movement in university life, he is distinct from philosophical Marxists. Rather, he is an outspoken proponent of "political Marxism."

He twice sought election to the council of the American Political Science Assn. as a candidate of the "Caucus for a New Political Science," and finished last out of 16 candidates each time. Whether or not this represents a professional judgment by his colleagues, as some critics contend, the verdict clearly rejects his campaign pledge: "If elected...I shall use every means at my disposal to promote the study of Marxism and Marxist approaches to politics throughout the profession."

Ollman's intentions become explicit in "On Teaching Marxism and Building the Movement," his article in the winter 1978 issue of New Political Science. Most students, he claims, conclude his course with a "Marxist outlook." Ollman concedes that will be seen "as an admission that the purpose of my course is to convert students to socialism."

That bothers him not at all because "a correct understanding of Marxism (as indeed of any body of scientific truths) leads automatically to its acceptance." Non-Marxist students are defined as those "who do not yet understand Marxism." The "classroom" is a place where the students' "bourgeois ideology is being dismantled." "Our prior task" before the revolution, he writes, "is to make more revolutionaries. The revolution will only occur when there are enough of us to make it."

He concludes by stressing the importance to "the Movement" of "radical professors." If approved for his new post at Maryland, Ollman will have a major voice in filling a new professorship promised him. A leading prospect is fellow Marxist Alan Wolfe; he is notorious for his book, "The Seamy Side of Democracy," whose celebration of Communist China extols the beneficial nature of "brainwashing."

Ollman's principal scholarly work, "Alienation: Marx's Conception of Man in Capitalist Society," is a ponderous tome in adoration of the master (Marxism "is like a magnificently rich tapestry"). Published in 1971, it does not abandon hope for the revolution forecast by Karl Marx in 1848. "The present youth rebellion," he writes, "helping to change the workers of tomorrow" will, along with other factors, make possible "a socialist revolution."

Public Forum

Letters submitted for Public Forum must be limited to 300 words.

To the editor:

On Friday, John Schofield, a city employee for nearly five years, was asked to resign his position as City Planner. No information was provided as to the reasons for the resignation. As a concerned citizen and taxpayer, I felt I deserved an explanation from city officials for this action. As I called City Council members, I was literally appalled at the insignificant information they seemed to have. The following questions and answers bear truth to this. 1. Why was Mr. Schofield asked to resign? 2. Was Mr. Schofield given any warning prior to this action? 3. Was Mr. Schofield informed of this meeting and given an opportunity to appear before the Mayor, City Manager and City Council? Not one of the City Council members I talked with had or knew the answers to the above questions.

After receiving no information from the Council members, I then tried to meet with Mayor Cox. But due to his prior commitments, he was unavailable to meet with me.

How can we, the citizens of Greenville, expect to hire city officials that are talented, capable and diligent if elected members of our city government can make or break their careers at their own discretion?

I feel the City Council concurred with this action too readily and without any definite information or proof.

I request a thorough and open investigation as to the motives surrounding this decision, with whom it originated, and, moreover, a fair and just result to those slandered.

Houses Compete With Stocks

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — The securities industry is paying a lot of attention to housing these days, not just because of housing stocks but because of the competition from housing as well.

Yes, some people are buying houses instead of stocks, and the stock market is feeling it. It helps explain, to some extent the absence from the securities industry of the so-called little guy.

Goldman Sachs, a securities firm, states flatly in a current report that "homes have replaced common stocks as the most important major component of consumer wealth," and concedes they make good investments.

Business Week magazine features a special supplement in its current issue on "Do-it-yourself investing in Real Estate," citing examples of business people who are dabbling in rental housing.

It concludes that "increasing numbers of smaller investors, leery of the stock market and seeking high profits, are going in for an expanding array of do-it-yourself deals."

One attraction, of course, is the rising price of houses, an ascent that one small securities firm equates with a balloon filling with air beyond its capacity. It forecasts a collapse — and a return to stocks.

Goldman Sachs and several other firms disagree. Analyzing the prices of single-family houses, it concludes that on the average they appear to be reasonably valued in relation to incomes. It maintains that demographics, tax benefits, the price-income relationship, the rental return (or the rent saving if owner-occupied) support the $56,300 average price of a new single family home.

While homeowners seldom analyze values with the same professional detail of Goldman Sachs, they apparently reach the same conclusions, based on the amount of money they have invested.

Ten years ago, the securities firm observes, the value of one-to-four-family homes represented 28 percent of consumer wealth.

At the end of 1977, however, the $84.5 billion of real value in such homes represented 35 percent of the $2.42 trillion total of real financial assets. Stock holdings amounted to $635 billion.

Some of the change results from the rapid price appreciation of houses. New home prices in the 1970-1977 period rose at an annual compound rate of 10.7 percent. Existing homes rose at 9.3 percent.

Still, Goldman Sachs relates, prices are below the home price-income relationship that prevailed in the early 1960s. The suggestion exists, therefore, that home prices still are within budget limits.

What the study doesn't show are some of the non-financial aspects of home ownership, such as the sense of security provided by a roof over one's head, a security unobtainable with a stock certificate.

When market analysts ask where the little guy is — and millions of his kind have abandoned the stock market since the late 1960s — the literal truth may be that he's at home, living in his security.

How's The Weather?

WEATHER FORECAST — Clear skies are forecast today for most of the nation. Temperatures will continue cool in northern states but warmer along the southern tier from California to Florida. (AP Laserphoto Map Laserphoto Map)

By The Associated Press

More showers and thunderstorms were forecast for North Carolina today but a cold front bearing drier air also was expected to sweep across the state later today and tonight. This new air mass will bring an end to the wet weather during tonight and Wednesday, with the showers and thunderstorms ending first in the mountains. The clearing weather then will spread to the remainder of the state.

High pressure will be building over the state Wednesday and Thursday, bringing back sunny skies and temperatures in the 70s.

Meanwhile, warm moist air near the ground cooled by colder air above produced dense and widespread fog this morning over the southern Piedmont section. At one point visibility was reduced to less than half a mile at Charlotte's Douglas Municipal Airport.

Heavy fog also developed Monday night in eastern sections of the state with the advance of a warm front which left overnight low temperatures this morning generally in the 50s and 60s.

drew a strong dissent from Mr. Justice White, who objected to the whole idea of corporations using their wealth "to acquire an unfair advantage in the political process." He saw no reason under the Constitution why a state could not prohibit corporate expenditures for ideological purposes.

The decision will serve one useful purpose in correcting the imbalance that now exists in many states. Labor unions have been free, of course, to use their funds in supporting or opposing referendum questions. Corporations will now have the same opportunity to shape public opinion for or against.

Mr. Justice White, in an extravagant phrase, feared that corporations might use their freedom "to consume" the states. So large an apprehension has small support. Corporations have no particular monolithic view, even on issues affecting their own business. Insurance companies are divided on no-fault insurance; auto companies have different views on the air bag; United Airlines supports deregulation while other airlines oppose it; supermarket corporations split on the Agency for Consumer Advocacy. And so on.

Banks and other corporations depend for their survival on a healthy social and economic climate. Even when public issues do not directly affect their profits, these issues may indirectly affect them in all kinds of ways. In the absence of any good reason to gag them, they ought to have a right to speak out.

Series Of Five Traffic Accidents On Monday

An estimated $7,800 property damage resulted from a series of five traffic collisions investigated yesterday by Greenville Police.

Officers reported heaviest damage resulted from a 4:39 p.m. mishap at the intersection of Fourth and Summit Streets.

Police said cars driven by Sharon Gail Coburn of Route 8, Greenville and Clarence Ray Cannon of 110 North Warren St. collided, causing an estimated $2,500 damage to the Coburn car and $2,000 damage to the Cannon auto.

Cannon was charged with failing to yield the right of way in connection with the mishap.

Cars driven by Mary Patricia Lacoste of 1400 Willow St. and Bobby Ray Mzingo of Route 1, Ayden collided about 2:30 p.m. at the intersection of Greene and Dudley Streets, causing an estimated $1,500 damage to the Lacoste car and $350 damage to the Mzingo auto.

Phate Edwards Hodges of Route 5, Washington was charged with failing to see his intended movement could be made in safety following investigation of a 4 p.m. mishap on Memorial Drive, 500 feet South of the Village Drive intersection.

Officers reported the Hodges car collided with an auto driven by Henry Earl Hardee of Route 1, Stokes, causing an estimated $400 damage to the Hardee car and $200 damage to the Hodges auto.

Ernest Edgar McIntyre was charged with failing to yield right of way following investigation of a 5:02 p.m. mishap at the intersection of Chestnut Street and Manhattan Avenue.

Police reported the McIntyre car collided with an auto driven by William Thomas Smith of Route 3, Ayden, resulting in an estimated $250 damage to the McIntyre car and $200 damage to the Smith car.

A 5:35 p.m. collision at the intersection of Memorial Drive and Farmville Boulevard involved cars driven by Johnnie David French Jr. of 109 Tripp Ave. and Ocalas Randolph of 207 Nasfi St.

Police, who charged Randolph with driving under the influence and failing to see his intended movement could be made in safety, set damage at $300 to the French car and $100 to the Randolph auto.

Farmer Hates DST Policy

By TOM FRIEDMAN
Rock Hill Herald Writer

CHESTER, S.C. (AP) — Farmer John Henry "Jack" Chappell hates daylight-saving time.

"I tell you, there's nothing gained by it. ... Just because the sun comes up a little early doesn't mean the rooster is going to keep quiet," he explains.

For 12 years, Chappell, 86, has refused to move his watches and clocks an hour ahead when DST starts.

He says, "On my place we work by the sun and don't let politicians tell us what to do." His place is a 2,700-acre cotton farm in northern Chester County.

Chappell also operates four cotton gins, a country store and sells coal.

His attitude sharply contrasts with that of his 77-year-old wife, Eva, who abides by DST.

But Chappell says, "My wife fusses half the year about time. I've told her to follow my time, farmer's time, but she don't listen. Why, she's got three clocks using that darn fast time, don'tcha know."

At his coal yard, he says, "I open at 8 slow time (9 a.m. EDT). The help, they want to start on this slow time. They say they got to get the chaps to school."

"And, don'tcha know, they want to get off at 6 fast time (5 p.m. EST)."

He adds, "My farm help were raised to go to the fields from sunup to sundown. Now they go to work by slow time and leave by fast time. They're just like the boys down at the coal yard."

"Half the year, I get along real well with 'em, then this fast time thing starts and we get to arguing. I tell 'em the most important times on a farm are startin' and eatin' dinner at noon."

Continued Drop In River Level

The National Weather Service in Raleigh this morning said the Tar River here should drop below bankfull — 13 feet — by tomorrow.

The Tar reached 18.3 feet Friday, but by 8 a.m. today, according to the Greenville Utilities Commission weather station, had fallen to 14.0 feet.

Rainfall for the 24-hour period ending at 8 a.m. today totaled .63 inches, the GUC weather station reported.

The temperature yesterday reached a high of 67, while the low was 49 degrees. The temperature at 8 a.m. stood at 71 degrees.

Very few campaigning House members see crowds of that size, and it's safe to assume they did not show up just to see Foley.

The president's fresh embrace of fellow Democrats is no accident, of course. Carter knows the party occupying the White House traditionally loses ground in off-year elections, and he wants to hold losses to a minimum, if only because a major November setback might reflect poorly on him.

Perhaps equally important, the president will be needing party support in a lot of cities like Spokane if, as expected, he seeks re-election.

Carter, in calling attention to differences with Haskell and Foley, was consistent with advice he gave some 30 first-term House Democrats who visited the White House on May 1.

CIVIL RIGHTS OR MORALITY? — Rev. Ron Adrian, right, campaigning to repeal a Wichita, Kan. anti-discrimination law that protects homosexuals, says he is raising a "conservative voice for moral decency." Robert Lewis, left, co-director of the Homophile Alliance of Sedgewick County, says "Civil Rights is the issue." Today, Wichita voters will decide in a special election whether or not to repeal the law. (AP Laserphoto)

Such pamphleteering is hooted at by one political scientist in a major Eastern university, whose scholarship and reputation as a liberal are well known. "Ollman has no status within the profession, but is a pure and simple activist," he said. Would he say this publicly? "No chance of it. Our academic culture does not permit the raising of such questions."

"Such questions" would include these: what is the true measurement of Ollman's scholarship? Does he intend to use the classroom for indoctrination? Will he indeed be followed by other Marxist professors? Could the department in time be closed to non-Marxists, following the tendency at several English universities?

Even if "such questions" cannot be raised by the faculty, they certainly should not be raised by politicians.

While dissatisfaction with pragmatism by many liberal professors has renewed interest in the comprehensive dogma of the Marxists, there is little tolerance for confronting the value of this dogma. Here are the makings of an internal crisis which, to protect its integrity and true academic freedom, academia itself must resolve.

Redevelopment...

The commission chairman reported that, "Over 20 acres of real estate, with an estimated value of $1 million was dedicated to the city...including the historic Town Common and street right-of-ways throughout the project."

In addition, GUC provided $415,000 in improved modern underground utility distribution systems, it was noted.

Laughinghouse said in his letter that the Redevelopment Commission provided some $830,000 in site improvements, including the bulk head along the Tar River, street improvements, and storm drainage throughout the project area.

"The Housing Authority constructed 225 units of low rent public housing with a development cost of $2.8 million for the low income families displaced from the area," he continued.

The chairman told Cox in the letter that all of the cleared land in Shore Drive was sold by the commission "with proceeds of over $665,000." The program, he said, produced $450,000 in excess credits that the city may use towards its share of the remaining redevelopment programs.

"There is no doubt that this project and the Central Business District program have made a dramatic change in our downtown area," Laughinghouse stated.

According to the commission spokesman, the "current improvement of Cotanche Street between Eighth and Tenth Streets removes the last bottle neck on that street between the downtown and the bypass. Evans Street will be widened this year to Tenth Street as a part of the CBD project and it is hoped that in the future, Evans Street will be widened through to the Norfolk Southern Railroad as a part of the South Evans Community Development Program."

Laughinghouse added, "In view of these factors, it is recommended that the City Council apply the $113,926 surplus towards a future CD project to widen Dickinson Avenue from Eighth to Tenth Street which will greatly enhance access to the downtown area."

The surplus returned to the city from both the Shore Drive and Newtown housing project, he observed, exceeds the original $272,000 cash payment by the city. Some $162,320 was "turned over to the city from the close-out of the Newtown project."

Commissioners approved the letter for presentation to the mayor.

In other business, staff rehabilitation officer Ed Cobb, reported that two rehabilitation efforts were completed since the last meeting, involving property at 807 Fourth Street where a 312 loan was secured, and at 704 Douglas Street where a Section 115 grant was used to help the property owner.

Cobb said that two grants will be closed in Southside this week and the staff is working on securing two grant-loan combinations.

Cobb told the commissioners that Mary Knox, who resides at 908 Douglas Street, lives outside the area designated for rehabilitation work during the next year but her house is in real need of repairs. The commissioners concurred that Cobb should help her with her rehabilitation work in view of her hardship status.

Southside project manager Faye Brewington reported that seven relocations were handled in the project area since the last meeting and one in CBD. She added that one acquisition was completed in Southside, four vacant parcels were acquired in West Meadowbrook, and two acquisitions were closed in CBD.

Mrs. Brewington noted that two demolitions took place in Southside, while one demolition was completed in the West Meadowbrook section. No demolition work took place in the CBD since the April meeting.

The staff disposed of two parcels in Southside, she said, and one in the CBD section.

Mrs. Brewington introduced a new staff member, Terry Claiborne, who will be involved in relocation work for the commission.

Extension

First district congressman Walter B. Jones announced today that he had been assured by the Federal Crop Insurance Corporation that an extension of time would be granted to North Carolina tobacco farmers.

The May 10 cutoff date has been extended 14 days. This time is for listing of insurable acreage.

The May 20 cutoff date has also been extended 14 days for specific types of tobacco for designation.

The final part of the program with a cutoff date of June first will be extended if conditions warrant.

Jones stated that this extension would be of assistance to tobacco farmers throughout the state.

Railroad spokesmen said the engines, which were for Poseidon missiles, were enclosed in special vans. No damage estimate was available, and military authorities have refused to comment on the accident.

Airline Fare Cut Approved

WASHINGTON (AP) — If you're a businessman who found flying first class too expensive, there's relief on the way.

The Civil Aeronautics Board on Monday approved reductions of 13 to 20 percent in domestic first class fares, effective May 19. The airlines requested the move, complaining that many businessmen switched from first class to discount fares.

The ruling sets first class fares at 130 percent of normal coach fares, compared to the current range of 150 to 163 percent, depending on distance traveled.

A one-way New York-Boston ticket will decrease from $57 to $49 and the New York-Los Angeles price will drop from $359 to $286.

Apparently No Aid For Peru

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States apparently has no plans to intervene with financial aid to help Peru forestall a default on its $5.5 billion national debt.

After Peruvian Foreign Minister Jose de la Puente held what he described as "fruitful" talks on Monday with Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance, U.S. officials said privately there was little the United States would do until Peru adopts austerity measures prescribed by the International Monetary Fund.

Truman Honored On Birthday

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Harry S. Truman "didn't wait until he was shown that the litmus paper of public opinion would show no acid reaction" before he made a decision, former Vice President Nelson Rockefeller said at an observance of the late president's birthday here.

Rockefeller, 1978 recipient of the Harry S. Truman Good Neighbor Award, told 400 luncheon guests Monday that Truman was so decisive in 1947-48 that "it appeared to many that Harry would rather be right than be president."

In Jerusalem Monday, a street was dedicated to the late president for his decision to ignore his advisers and recognize Israel. The unveiling of plaques and a symposium on the Truman presidency were part of Israel's observance of the 30th anniversary of its independence, which falls this year on May 11.

Team Play

Bullets One Game Away

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The Washington Bullets, one game away from winning their National Basketball Association semifinals, are beginning to convince people they are for real.

"I've said all along that we're the better team because we play better together," Coach Dick Motta said after the Bullets beat the Philadelphia 76ers 121-105 Sunday in their best-of-seven series. It resumes here Wednesday night.

"This isn't over yet. We respect their talent, but we play the game better as a unit," Motta insisted.

"We have totally taken away from them what they wanted to do," said forward Elvin Hayes, Sunday's top performer with 35 points and 19 rebounds. "We're making them do what we want them to do."

"They came into this as the running, watch-my-flash and that trash team and we took all that away from them," Hayes continued. "We wanted to get them into a game where they walk up the floor. Now, we're the team that's running — and they're still walking."

The Sixers weren't walking in the first quarter Sunday, as star forward George McGinnis scored 11 of their first 15 points, guarded Hayes and dropped back to get defensive rebounds.

But McGinnis, who scored 22 points and had 10 rebounds, disappeared in the second quarter as the 76ers lost an 11-point lead.

"We just lost our composure," McGinnis said. "We had opportunities on the break. But we made errors. We had people open, but we lost the ball, threw it away."

The Bullets ran off 17 straight points to turn a 48-37 deficit to a 54-48 advantage for Washington at halftime. "I hated to see the half end," said Motta.

"I could see them talking back and forth — you know, bickering," said the Bullets' Mitch Kupchak, who got 19 points and eight rebounds as he again filled in for the ailing Wes Unseld. "I wouldn't like that if I was on their team."

"They have the superstars, the newspaper players, the big money players," said Hayes. "All we got here is good people who like each other — and a team that just keeps going out and playing the game."

Hayes said all the Bullets have to do is keep the pressure on and they are home free.

"We're still a team that can beat them," he said. "We've got to believe that."

Asked if he thought the Bullets' bubble would burst Wednesday night, McGinnis replied: "I don't know if it's a bubble or not. I think at this point, they're for real."

Ali's Business Plans

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Muhammad Ali says his only real goal now is recapturing the heavyweight title he lost to Leon Spinks, but the former champ has made some retirement plans.

Ali announced at a press conference Monday that he will join a business venture that includes some Saudi Arabian royalty when he retires from the ring. He would not say, however, whether he plans to quit fighting after his September rematch with Spinks for the World Boxing Association heavyweight title.

"I've announced three times that I was retiring, then unretired the next day," he said. "I'm not going to commit myself now."

Ali did say that he had made a commitment to the First African Arabian Corp., an international marketing firm.

"I have been offered so many 'big' business deals that it got confusing," he said. "When these people approached me, I told them to show me some sheikhs."

Three Saudi Arabian princes, Khalid Al Saud, Abdullah Al Saud and Mohammed Al Saud, are involved in the corporation and attended the press conference.

Khalid Abdullah Tariz Al Mansour, an attorney for the First African Arabian Corp., said the company's ventures would include marketing a soft drink in the Mideast, possible Muhammad Ali housing projects in Africa, world-wide paint factories and machinery supplies.

He implied Ali would receive a percentage of the company's profits.

"One thing we hold foremost," said the lawyer, "is that Ali can do whatever he thinks is best for himself. If he wants to fight, he can fight; if he wants to retire, he can retire."

"Money will no longer be any consideration for Ali."

Nutritionist Aids Sonics

SEATTLE (AP) — Denver Coach Larry Brown may regret the day he discovered Elaine Busse.

Because Mrs. Busse, a nationally known nutritionist and massage therapist, has turned into one of the Seattle Super-Sonics' secret weapons.

Her regime of large doses of vitamins and mineral supplements, loads of natural fruit juices and vegetables, correct breathing, massage and exercise is credited with helping Sonic Marvin Webster recover his playing strength after a bout with hepatitis.

Brown asked her to help Webster when the latter was with the Nuggets, but her loyalties followed Webster to the Seattle camp after he was traded a year ago.

"Because Marvin is with Seattle, they have to be my first love and Denver is second," the Denver resident said in a telephone interview.

Before Sunday's 121-111 Seattle victory over Denver evened the teams' best-of-seven National Basketball Association playoff series at 1-1, she also set to work on Dennis Johnson's dislocated finger. Fred Brown's flu and John Johnson's swollen arm.

Brown scored 26 points in Sunday's game, while Dennis Johnson had 22 and Webster blocked Denver shots when it counted.

The two teams move to Seattle on Wednesday night for Game 3 of the NBA semifinal playoff. Game 4 will be Friday night in Seattle.

The Nuggets will be trying to stay out of foul trouble in Wednesday's game. In both of the previous playoff games, played on their home court, the Nuggets were whistled for a rash of personal fouls.

In the series opener last Friday, Seattle went to the line 62 times and hit a record 47 free throws. Sunday the Sonics hit 35 of 49 to Denver's modest 21 of 26.

"It's been real strange the last two games," said Denver's David Thompson. "We seemed to have a disadvantage as soon as we took the floor. We had to play twice as hard."

Forward Anthony Roberts added, "We can't play the game with everyone fouling

The Coaches

Denver's Larry Brown; Seattle's Lenny Wilkens

out. It was okay for the refs to let Marvin Webster block every shot but there should have been some fouls called. In Seattle, we need to stay out of foul trouble."

Sonic Coach Lenny Wilkens says his team won't ease up now that it has the home court advantage.

"They (the Sonics) know this is a good team so they'll be up for them," said Wilkens. "There are no weak teams left at this point of the season."

Stephenson Claims Victory

HILTON HEAD ISLAND, S.C. (AP) — Five pieces of toast with peanut butter and 5 strokes under par have worked wonders for Jan Stephenson.

The blonde Australian won the third annual Women's International Golf Tournament Monday and picked up $12,000 by coming in with a 72-hole total of 283. That was 4 strokes better than amateur Beth Daniel was able to score over the Devil's Elbow course at Moss Creek Plantation.

Wearing a green T-shirt proclaiming, "I'm on a diet," the already-svelte Stephenson said she deliberately gave up a heavy breakfast in hopes that it would help her game. Maybe it did, but she still came perilously close to losing the tournament to Daniel, the current women's amateur champion from Charleston, S.C.

Daniel also had a 74, 2 over par, in the final round and ended up 4 strokes behind Stephenson. But Daniel was only one stroke away from catching up after Stephenson bogied three holes.

However, Daniel bogied the 12th hole and Stephenson sank a 15-foot putt for her first and only birdie on the 15th to move out of danger. Daniel had 4 bogeys and 2 birdies for a fourround total of 287.

Daniel, 21, a Furman University senior who will turn pro in the fall, said she thought she could have won the tournament and was more "disappointed than happy" that she came in second. Even so, hers was the best finish for an amateur since Nancy Lopez was runner-up for second place in the U.S. Open in 1975.

Stephenson won the Australian Open in March 1977 but had not won an American tourney since 1976. She was presented two cans of Australian beer by tournament officials after her victory Monday. Normally a non-drinker, she said she intended to tie one on to celebrate, "and I need something with the least amount of hangover."

She also gleefully received the latest bouquet of red and yellow roses which have been sent to her each day of the tournament by Atlanta Falcons quarterback Steve Bartkowski.

She backed off on her "I hate golf" statement made after the two previous days of play.

"Oh, I love golf," she said Monday. "When you win, you feel so good."

Tied for second among the pros with 288 totals were Penny Pulz, Donna Caponi Young and Pam Higgins. Next were Jane Blalock, Judy Rankin and Kathy Postlewait.

Musial Pokes Fun At Himself

ATHENS, Ohio (AP) — Stan Musial ranks as one of the greatest performers in National League history, a seven-time batting champion and a Baseball Hall of Fame selection among other things.

Musial, now 57, pokes fun at himself today.

"One record of mine few people know about," said Musial at a speaking engagement. "I had 3,630 hits and batted 11,000 times, but I hold the record for making the most outs, 7,000. If anybody can make 7,000 outs and get into the Hall of Fame, everybody's got a chance."

Musial, who retired in 1963, credits fellow Hall of Famer Ty Cobb with giving him unusual advice on extending his career.

"Cobb told me he'd seen me play that day and said my legs looked pretty good. He asked me if I smoked or drank. I didn't smoke. But occasionally I enjoyed a couple of drinks before and after dinner."

"He told me to try wine. I did and darned if I didn't play five more years."

The toughest pitcher for him to hit?

"Curt Simmons of the Phillies," Musial replied without hesitation.

Simmons may have been an exception. The left-handed hitting Musial tagged other south-paw pitchers well, including the great Warren Spahn.

Musial batted .314 and rapped 14 home runs off Spahn. "He was the only batter I ever inentionally walked with the bases loaded," the former Braves' pitcher said of the St. Louis Cardinals' hitting star.

Musial, from Donora, Pa., recalled he almost went to the University of Pittsburgh on a basketball scholarship. "I was a pretty good basketball player, but my first love was baseball."

"I was only 17. The baseball scout came to my home three different times trying to sign me."

Royals Worried About Wrong Man

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

Jim Rice got plenty of respect from the Kansas City Royals, but it turned out they were worried about the wrong man.

It was Carl Yastrzemski who did all the damage.

While the Royals pitched around Rice and even went so far as to use a four-man outfield against the Boston strong man, Yastrzemski's bat caused the Kansas City plans to backfire Monday night.

The honored veteran of the Boston team knocked in four runs, three with a homer and another with a sacrifice fly, to power the Red Sox to an 8-4 victory at Fenway Park.

"Yaz did just what he's done against other pitchers," said Al Hrabosky, victim of Yastrzemski's seventh-inning homer that put the game out of the Royals' reach. "I should have gotten him out and kept us in there, but I didn't. I could have thrown the ball in a little better, but he wanted to hit the ball — and he did."

Prior to Yastrzemski's game-clinching blast, Kansas City Manager Whitey Herzog had ordered an intentional walk to Rice, the American League leader in home runs and RBI.

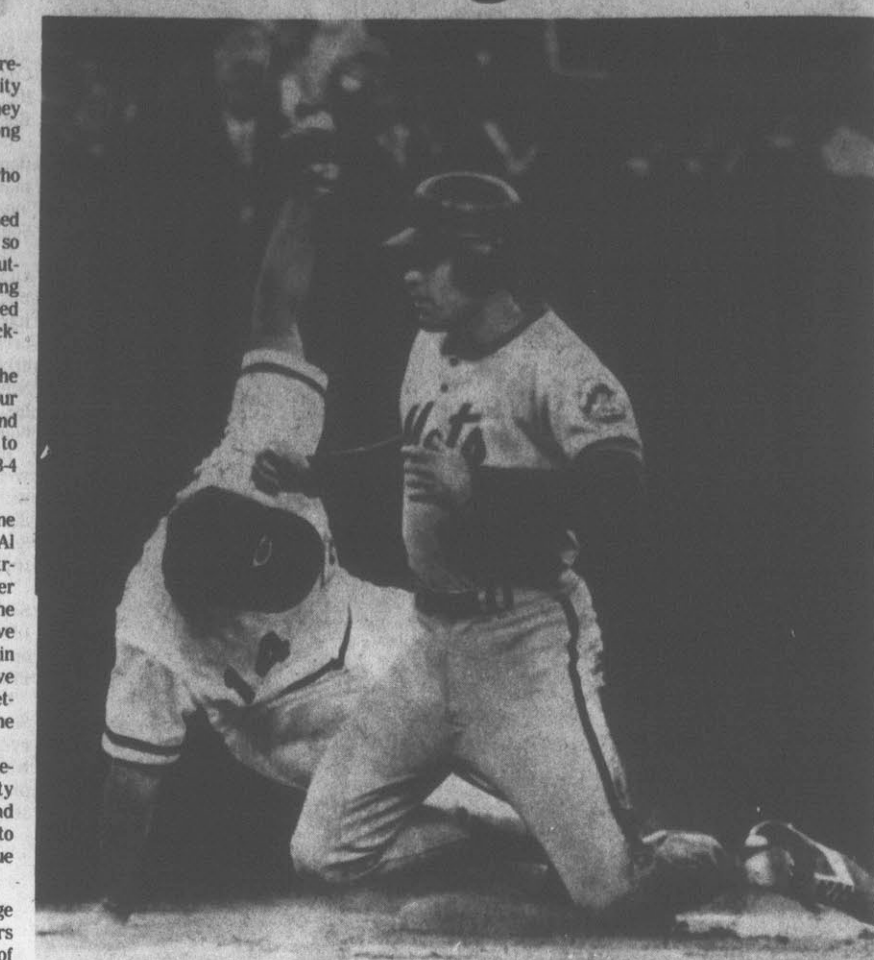

"It was the right percentage move to walk Rice," concurs Yastrzemski. "They had one of the best left-handed relief men out in the bullpen in Hrabosky."

Earlier in the game, the Royals showed a rare amount of respect for Rice in the third inning, setting up a four-man outfield by sending third baseman Jerry Terrell to left and moving left fielder Tom Poquette to left-center. Ironically, Rice hit a pop fly that dropped for a single in the infield.

Rice shook his head when he saw the alignment.

"I just tried to hit the ball like any other time," he noted.

In the only other major league game Monday night, the New York Mets edged the Cincinnati Reds 3-2 in 10 innings in the National League.

Rain caused a wholesale washout of other contests. Four were rained out in the American League, including a doubleheader between Chicago and Baltimore and the Minnesota-New York and Oakland-Toronto contests. Two games were rained out in the National — Houston at Philadelphia and Montreal at Atlanta.

Boston was leading 5-4 on

Fred Lynn's fourth homer of the year when right-hander Dennis Leonard intentionally walked Rice. Herzog then brought in Hrabosky, his relief ace, who surrendered Yastrzemski's second homer of the season.

Mets 3, Reds 2

Bruce Boicclair's 10th-inning pinch single off the glove of shortstop Dave Concepcion scored Lenny Randle from second, leading New York over Cincinnati.

After the Mets had rallied with a run in the ninth to tie it at 2-2, Randle drew a leadoff walk in the 10th from reliever Pedro Borbon and went to second on Lee Mazzilli's sacrifice bunt, setting the stage for Boicclair.

Mike Bruhart, winner Skip Lockwood and Mardie Cornejo limited the Reds to four hits.

Olympic Bill Passed By Senate

WASHINGTON (AP) — Early action is expected by the House on a bill to make the U.S. Olympic Committee the national coordinating body for all sports played in the Olympic and Pan-American Games.

The bill was passed by the Senate by voice vote without dissent Monday.

It is to be introduced in the House today by Reps. Norm Mineta, D-Calif.; Jack Kemp, R-N.Y.; Robert Michel, R-Ill., and former Olympian Ralph Metcalfe, D-Ill.

The four congressmen, along with the Senate sponsors — Ted Stevens, R-Alaska; Jim Pearson, R-Kan.; Richard Stone, D-

Fla.; John Culver, D-Iowa, and Howard Cannon, D-Nev. — were members of the President's Commission on Olympic Sports. The commission recommended the proposal in its final report in February 1977 after studying amateur athletics for 18 months.

The measure would give the USOC authority to spend $30 million in the 12 months beginning Oct. 1. Eighteen million dollars would go to the sports governing bodies for development programs and $12 million to the USOC for Olympic training centers and a sports-medicine program.

The measure would give the USOC the power to recognize eligible amateur sports organizations as national governing bodies for any sport included on the program of the Olympic and Pan-American Games.

It also would empower the American Arbitration Association to settle questions of athletes' rights and hassles between groups seeking recognition as national governing bodies in specific sports.

An Original Drama Just Might Find Buyer In "Hall Of Fame"

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — So you've an original drama for family viewing, but don't know where to send it? Don't expect miracles, but NBC's "Hallmark Hall of Fame" may be the place. Be warned, though, that: For legal reasons, you need an agent or producer to proffer your goods. Without same, you're just wasting your postage. Because "Hall" averages but five shows a season and hopeful authors are competing with experienced pros, a rookie's odds of success are so thin they'd be marked absent if turned sideways.

All this comes from executive producer Ron Hobin. He studies all potential scripts at his office in Chicago, at Foote, Cone & Belding, an ad agency that's represented Hallmark for years. Though he works mainly with the top teleplayers of Hollywood and New York, he says "we are always open to new writers if they're aiming at the same kind of quality programs that we have." And, he says, "the fact someone hasn't been done before wouldn't stop us from doing a show if we like the material." Why the unusual receptiveness to rookie TV dramatists?

Hobin explains it this way: In TV's so-called Golden Age of the 1950s, there were many young writers "particularly interested in doing good, original drama for television" as opposed to routine series scripts. "But a lot have gone on to movies. And there doesn't seem to be a developing pool of that kind of writer these days." Another woe: "Hall," he said, once could draw from those wet T-shirts. "I think they sort of bend themselves out of who'd written for New York theater. But the new breed tends to do stuff thought too strong for network TV even in this day and age. And the philosophy of the show ever since the program's start in 1951, always has been to do dramatic programs suitable for viewing by the entire family, the producer said. Hobin, whose "Hall" opens its 28th season next fall with "Return Engagement," starring Elizabeth Taylor, was asked about a different, non-literary kind of problem: ratings. Most "Hallmark" shows get critical praise but middling to low ratings. Do NBC moguls grouse about the show's Nielsen?

They say that those who can, play; those who can't, write. That is not true about bridge. Many of the game's finest exponents are also leading writers. Some have virtually given up playing to concentrate on writing about the game, to the loss of all concerned. Among those is Albert Dormer, editor of the International Bridge Press Association Bulletin, who is rarely seen at the table. But when he does make an appearance, he shows that he has lost none of the ability that made him a star almost 30 years ago at a very tender age. Note his technique on this deal.

While purists might consider the North hand a point light for his no trump overcall, North upgraded his spade values because of West's opening bid. When his partner showed a strong hand by jumping, North was delighted to raise to game in view of his excellent heart support.

In the hope of finding a club tenace in dummy and the queen with his partner, West underled the ace of clubs. Dormer won in hand with the jack as East started an echo with the nine. It seemed that declarer had ten tricks—five trumps, four clubs and the ace of diamonds. So Dormer cashed the ace and queen of hearts, and West's discard was now in jeopardy.

If declarer drew a third trump and then led a club, West would win the ace and shift to a diamond. When he regained the lead, he would be able to give his partner a club ruff, which together with a diamond trick and the ace of spades would have spelled down one. And there was no quick entry to declarer's hand to draw the fourth trump. Dormer's solution was simple and elegant. He led the jack of trumps and overtook with the king, setting up a trump in East's hand. Now he led a spade. West rose with the ace and shifted to a diamond, but it was too late. Dormer won the ace in dummy, discarded his diamond loser on the king of spades and continued with the ten of clubs. No matter what the defenders did, they could score no more than their two black aces and one trump.

$75,000 Suit By Erin Fleming

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Erin Fleming, who served as the late Groucho Marx's live-in manager, has filed a lawsuit claiming she is entitled to $75,000 that she says Marx wanted her to have.

Miss Fleming, who became entangled in a court battle with Marx's family just before he died, says in her suit that the Bank of America National Trust and Savings Association, executor of the comedian's estate, rejected her claim.

She based her claim on two 1972 contracts with Marx, one naming her as his personal manager for seven years and the other making her associate producer in connection with a record he made.

Ron Rolnick, attorney for Miss Fleming, also said she is seeking $69,132 in legal fees spent in her losing battle to remain Marx's conservator.

Marx's son, Arthur, had claimed that Miss Fleming abused his father and took advantage of him in the six years she was with him.

The geographic area of Albania is 11,100 square miles, slightly larger than Maryland.

Latin America Seen Growing Market For U.S. Farm Sales

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — State Commissioner of Agriculture James Graham says North Carolina has exported more than $500,000 worth of purebred livestock to several Latin American countries since 1973.

In a recent North Carolina State University agricultural report, U.S. Department of Agriculture officials say that Latin America will become an increasingly important market for U.S. farm commodities in the future.

But state agriculture officials say North Carolina has already found Latin American nations receptive to swine and cattle exports.

"The U.S. Department of Agriculture has given export credits to farmers in some Latin American countries," Graham said. "This enables the farmers to import livestock from North Carolina. Most of the Latin American farmers are interested in importing our breeding cattle to build up their ranches."

Graham says North Carolina livestock has gone to Ecuador, Venezuela, Costa Rica, Guatemala and the Dominican Republic.

"In about four years, we have made 19 shipments to Latin American countries, which is about 1,400 head of livestock," Graham said. "If I had to put a monetary value on the livestock we've exported, I would say the total would be close to half or three-quarters of a million dollars. Farm exports are definitely important to the state's economy."

According to NCSU extension economists, agriculture makes a net contribution of about $12 billion a year to the U.S. balance of payments position. Farm exports total about $24 billion and imports $12 billion annually.

Graham said North Carolina has one of the strictest animal health programs in the nation, which makes state livestock attractive to other nations.

"We have tried to make the animal health standards in this state far superior to those in other states," Graham explained. "And these top standards really help state farmers when it comes time to export livestock. Our livestock is choice, and other countries want to import our breeding animals."

Graham said in addition to shipments made to Latin American countries, North Carolina recently sent a shipment of cattle to Spain, and a shipment of yearling bulls to Greece.

Recent USDA reports have indicated that growing populations in many Latin American nations will make farm product exports necessary. The reports show that the population growth rates will put pressure on food supplies, and that the nations will find the demand for farm products outstripping production.

Graham said he believes farm product exports will play an important role in the future of the U.S. economy and the balance of payments.

Berkowitz Sentencing Is Scheduled For May 22

Convicted Mass Killer Granted New Trial; Attorney Criticized

By TONY LEDWELL
Associated Press Writer
SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Accusing his lawyer of being more interested in selling a book than in defending his client, the state Court of Appeal has granted convicted mass killer Juan Corona a new trial.

However, the court said Monday in its 71-page decision that circumstantial evidence of Corona's guilt in the machete hacking deaths of 25 transient farm workers was "overwhelming" and suggested that his only defense is insanity.

It said defense lawyer Richard Hawk was "in gross neglect of his basic duty" for not offering an insanity defense.

Corona, now 41, was convicted in 1973 and is serving a life sentence at Soledad State Prison.

His current court-appointed lawyer, Alan Exelrod, said a counselor told Corona of the decision and said Corona was "very happy."

Corona, a labor contractor who recruited transients and supplied them to growers in the Feather and Yuba River valleys, was taken into custody after a search of his Yuba City home turned up an assortment of edged weapons.

After his arrest, Corona was described by his priest as "an exemplary father and a fine Christian," who neither smoked nor drank. It was learned later that he had been a mental patient years before, suffering from paranoid schizophrenia.

The court said Hawk's conduct "constituted not only an outrageous abrogation of the standards which the legal profession has set for itself ... but also rendered the trial a farce and mockery."

It said Hawk acquired all literary rights to Corona's life story and trial in lieu of salary, hired writer Ed Cray to sit at the counsel table during the trial and wrote an afterword in Cray's book.

Such an agreement was a conflict of interest on Hawk's part and suggested he was more interested "in his own pocketbook" than in Corona's legal rights, the court said.

Hawk, reached at home, denied the court's contention that he was negligent and described the decision as a personal attack on him. "If the question is, 'does it hurt me,' hell yes it hurts," he said.

Hawk said all profits from the book went to pay for Corona's defense. "That case cost me a minimum of $150,000 of my own money," he said.

Expressing "delight" with the reversal, Hawk said there "was no psychiatric support for an insanity defense."

He said he refused to claim insanity because Corona "insisted he didn't do it, and I believed him, and I still believe him."

Ted Hansen, district attorney for Sutter County where the bodies were buried, said he expected the state attorney general to appeal the reversal. "The problems in trying any case as old as this are extensive," he said. "It would be extremely difficult for anybody to prosecute."

It was unclear whether Corona, married and the father of four children, would be granted bail during an appeal. Michael Mendelson, Exelrod's partner, said it was premature even to discuss bail.

By RICHARD T. PIENCIAK
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — David Berkowitz confessed to the six Son of Sam killings because he dearly wants people to like him and, anyway, "a good Christian can't plead insanity," he says.

The 24-year-old former postal clerk — who has told psychiatrists that he hopes to answer God's calling to be a minister while in prison — calmly pleaded guilty on Monday to six counts of second-degree murder and some two score other crimes committed during a 12-month reign of terror in three New York City boroughs.

Defense attorneys said that following sentencing on May 22 they would appeal a judge's finding of competency, which enabled Berkowitz to reject their insanity defense and plead guilty to the crimes.

It is expected Berkowitz, who will remain at Kings County Hospital until sentencing, will receive the maximum allowable concurrent terms, making him eligible for parole in 30 years at the earliest.

In a major surprise announced to the heavily guarded 260-seat courtroom, Bronx District Attorney Mario Merola disclosed that Berkowitz has claimed responsibility for 2,000 fires in a four-year period under the alias of "The Phantom of the Bronx."

It was revealed that a diary detailing some 1,411 of the fires was among the materials seized when police arrested Berkowitz at his Yonkers apartment last August.

Authorities in the Bronx, where the overwhelming majority of the diary notations were from, promised a full investigation into whether Berkowitz was an arsonist or simply a fire buff.

As a result of the guilty pleas to the murder charges, state Supreme Court Justice Joseph Corso, one of three judges to accept the pleas, released the transcript of a closed competency hearing held in Brooklyn last month.

At that hearing, court-appointed psychiatrist Daniel Schwartz outlined 19 reasons why Berkowitz felt he had to plead guilty, including a desire to satisfy the revenge instincts of the victims' relatives.

But for many of the survivors, jail is no satisfaction. "He should go to the chair, like he's supposed to," said Michael Lauria, father of the Son of Sam's first victim.

Other reasons Berkowitz gave for the guilty pleas were that God had given him a mission to become a prison minister, that to plead innocent would be cowardly, that to go to trial and use an insanity defense would stir the demons against him, and that no one would believe him about the demons anyway.

Changes Damage Penal Reform

WASHINGTON (AP) — Unions have brought about job improvements for prison guards, but the changes aren't good for penal reform, according to a new federal study.

A two-volume report by the American Justice Institute of Sacramento, Calif., said prison employee groups have opposed work-release and community-based programs. It said guards regard community correction programs as a threat to their jobs because they could close institutions, and have opposed work-release because they contend it leads to a greater amount of contraband smuggled into prisons. The study concludes that correctional officers "have resisted efforts to give prisoners adequate due-process rights in disciplinary matters."

Giving Kidney

CONYERS, Ga. (AP) — Little Allen Conner will undergo his fourth kidney operation Wednesday, and this time he has a good chance of getting well. This time his older brother Todd will be donating a kidney to the 2½-year-old child.

"They said we matched perfect ... that we were just like twins, so I thought it'd be the best thing," said Todd, 16, who will miss two weeks of school at Heritage High School for the operation, scheduled at the University of Minnesota hospital in Minneapolis.

The boys' mother, Carolyn Conner, said she and her husband Perry have been told the operation has a 95 percent chance of success. "They'll take the kidney from Todd and give it to Allen," she said.

"It'll be good," said Todd, a 10th grader. "It'll be part of me in him."

The Conners and their two sons came home last weekend for the wedding of their daughter, 18-year-old Laurie Ann.

The visit home was their first in six weeks. The family has rented an apartment about 10 miles from the Minneapolis hospital where they take Allen every other day to be connected to a dialysis machine, which purifies his blood much as a functioning kidney would.

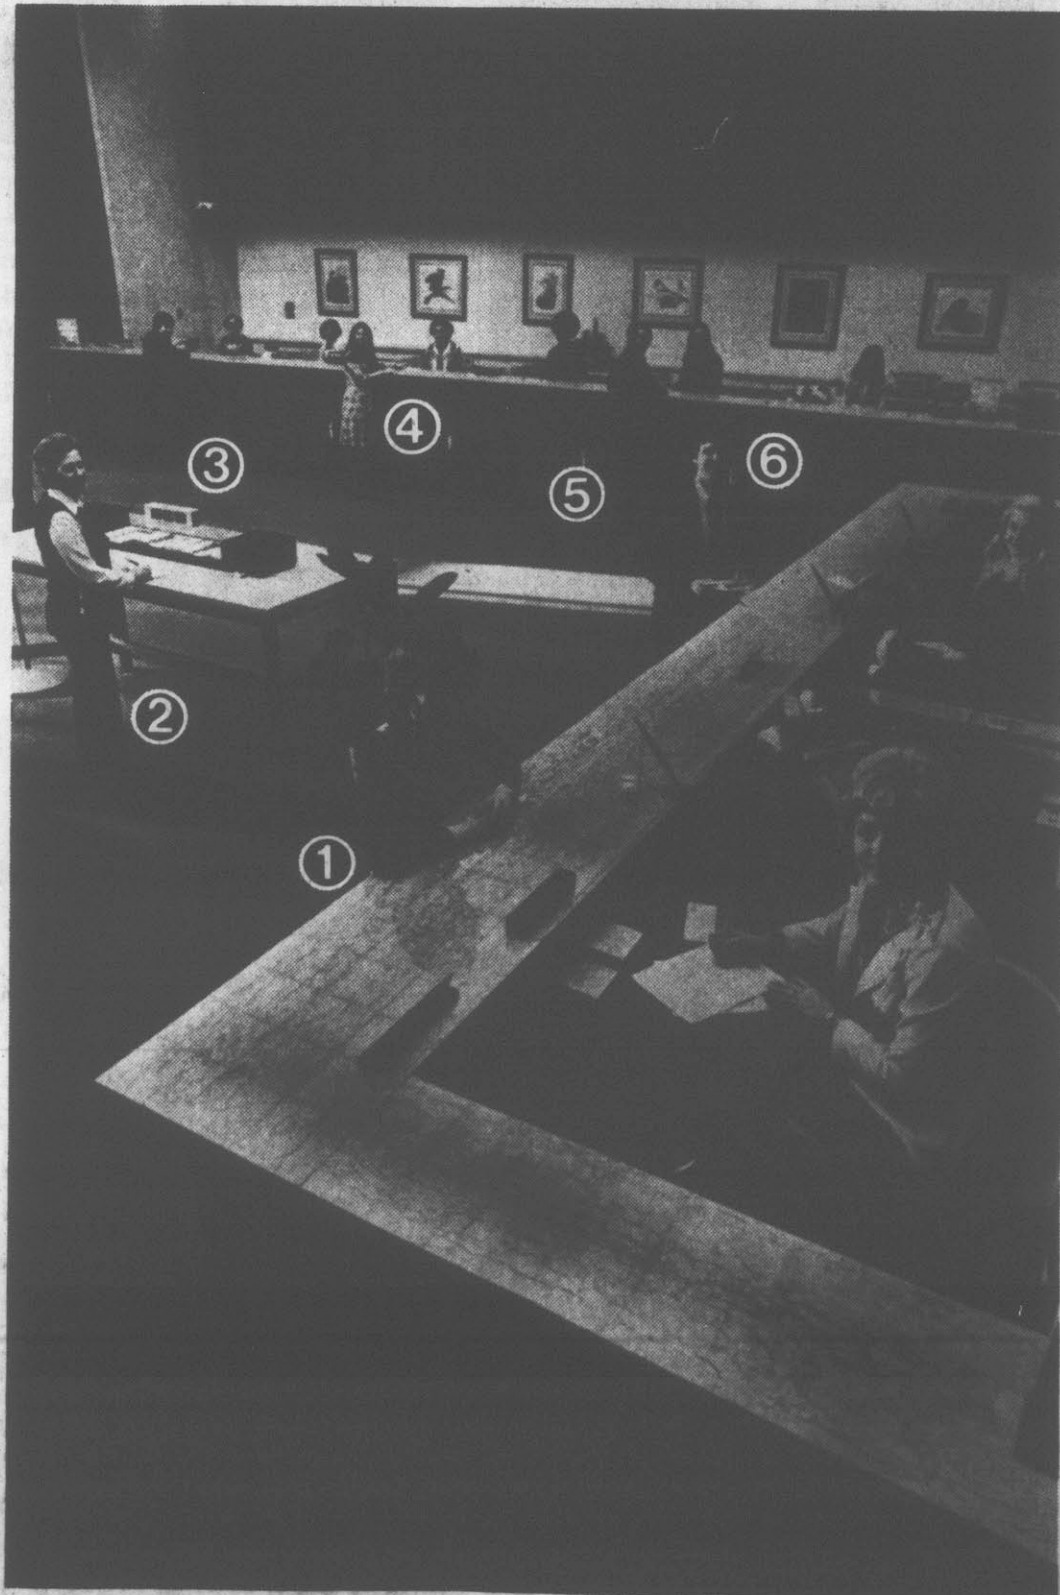

Allen was born with only one kidney, which never matured. He was first operated on when he was six weeks old and underwent major surgery when he was 14 months old. Five weeks ago he had another operation.

Todd was told that the operation would be painful and probably would prevent him from participating in spring football practice.

But he told a psychiatrist, who examined his feelings about his brother, that he wanted to participate in the operation.

"We get along pretty good," he said.

Six ways to beat the high cost of checking are better than one.

Over a year, checking account service charges could come to $30, $40, even $50.

Which is probably why most banks have a plan to avoid those charges. But they usually offer you just one or two ways. In other words, it's on the bank's terms—not yours.

But, at NCNB, we've developed six ways, designed to fit almost any financial situation.

- 1) Say you're starting a savings program. With Triple Option #1, you just let us transfer $25 or more each month automatically from checking to savings. So you're saving service charges and building up your savings at the same time.
- 2) Maybe you already have some savings. With Triple Option #2, all you have to do is keep a $100 average balance in regular savings. So, you earn interest while you save service charges.
- 3) Or maybe you'd like to have the advantages of a loan without paperwork. Qualify for Option #3, an "open-line-of-credit" built into your checking account.
- 4) If it's more convenient, you can avoid service charges by keeping a $200 minimum balance in your checking account.
- 5) Or, if it suits you better, keep an average monthly balance of $500 in your checking account.
- 6) Finally, there's what we call "the best bank account in North Carolina": NCNB Deluxe Banking. If you keep $2,500 in a Regular Savings Account, you get a checking account with no check printing charges, no service charges—no charges of any kind. Plus special rates or no charges on almost every other banking service you're ever likely to need.

For all the details, come see us. Soon. Why settle for just one way to beat the high cost of checking when you can have your choice of six?

VOWS TO COMPETE — U.S. Steel Corp. will build plants overseas if necessary in order to compete with foreign steelmakers, chairman Edgar B. Speer said Monday.
