Friday, Johnson At Odds On UNC-HEW Settlement

By KATHRYN WHITE Associated Press Writer
CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — The University of North Carolina settled its lengthy desegregation dispute with the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare Friday, with the system's president and the chairman of the Board of Governors at odds over the plan.

plan an excellent plan. I intend to support this plan with all the resources at my disposal," he said. The settlement suspended the decade-long battle between the federal agency and the university system over ways to eliminate vestiges of segregation, but university officials cautioned that further complications could arise.

study of whether unnecessary program duplication exists on traditionally white and black campuses and to incorporate the findings in the 1978 revision of long range desegregation plans.

of four telephone conversations he had with Califano that day. With the backing of Friday, the state's legal counsel and the majority of a special UNC board committee, the proposal was presented to the UNC Board for a vote Friday morning.

UNC President William Friday said the system's Board of Governors maintained its authority and control over the 16-campus system in drawing compromises which forestalled HEW's administrative proceedings to slash federal funds.

"It is the consensus of President Friday and the board that, in due course, we will have to again face the questions of whether actions and motions committees make will meet the requirements of various bodies and agencies, and that if and when they don't, we'll have to deal with whatever legal tacks (are necessary to implement) the plans we might formulate," Johnson said.

The university then must take appropriate steps by the 1979-80 academic year that will result in significant increases in the enrollment of students in unduplicated programs by the 1982-83 year.

The board debated the issue for more than four hours behind closed doors before letting the news media in and voting on the plan.

Gov. Jim Hunt said the plan "effectively maintains the integrity of the university against the threat of unwarranted federal intervention."

In the agreement, the Board of Governors promised to "make good faith efforts" to achieve proportionality in the number of black and white students enrolled in the university system by 1982, without compromising academic standards.

In a news conference, Johnson said the duplication proposal would focus largely on two metropolitan areas where black and white campuses are located near each other.

It was approved, without discussion in the open meeting, by a 19-2 vote on the motion of board member John R. Jordon, a Raleigh attorney.

But Chairman William A. Johnson, who asked to go on record as being against the agreement, said, "I think that we have perhaps put in motion today a course of events which will ultimately come back to haunt us with dire consequences and results."

To reach parity in the percentages of black and white students, the university system would have to increase black enrollment by 1,410 students within the next five years, a goal which the board still maintains is unrealistic.

The schools involved are the traditionally white schools of UNC-Chapel Hill and North Carolina State University in Raleigh and historically black North Carolina Central University in Durham; and the historically white, UNC-Greensboro and the traditionally black colleges of North Carolina A & T State University in Greensboro and Winston-Salem State University.

Dissenting were Laurence A. Cobb, of Charlotte, and Jacob H. Froelich Jr. of High Point. Abstaining was Irwin Belk of Charlotte. Chairman Johnson, who votes in the case of a tie, said he wished to be on record as opposing the plan.

Johnston said he thought the university was straying too far from its original position in agreeing to eliminate some programs which are duplicated at traditionally white and traditionally black institutions in the same geographical areas.

North Carolina also consented to complete by December 4

Board members stressed that the state would retain the right to determine which program duplication was "educationally unnecessary." The plan said, for example, that the existence of two laws schools less than ten miles apart, at N.C. Central and UNC-Chapel Hill, "was acknowledged by the Department (HEW) not to constitute an impediment to the elimination of racial duality."

At the news conference, Johnson said he felt the board approved the plan because it had the strong backing of Friday, because board members felt it was in the best interest of the university, and because members were "tired and worn out" after months of controversy.

Cuban Presence Criticized

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter, in his strongest attack on Cuban military intervention in Africa, Saturday charged that Fidel Castro's troops have been increased in the Middle East, specifically in communist-ruled South Yemen.

White House meeting with representatives of the nation's Hispanic media. His comment that Cuban presence in the Middle East is a new development was later partly corrected by the State Department.

There may be as many as 500 to 600 Cubans, some as civilian advisers, some training paramilitary forces" in the People's Republic of Yemen (South Yemen), said State Department spokeswoman Kimberly King.

The State Department estimated last month there were more than 45,000 Cuban civilian and military advisers, most of them military personnel, in at least 14 African countries. The majority are in Angola, up to 23,000, and Ethiopia, around 17,000.

First Quadruplegic Graduates At ECU

William "Buzzy" Pierce is one of 2,829 persons who graduated from East Carolina University Friday, but he has a distinction among these and all other ECU grads — he's the first quadruplegic to get a degree here.

did it for myself on my own." "I just told him," Mrs. Pierce said in a subsequent telephone interview, "that God doesn't take anything away that he doesn't give much more back — if we're willing to do our part."

Buzzy's father died only a few months shy of this son's graduation — last February. His mother, who's had both legs amputated, said she would not be attending the ceremony Friday, but that all his six brothers and sisters, except one whose job prevented it, would be attending.

Being "severely handicapped," as he's classified by the N. C. Vocational Rehabilitation Division, which has underwritten his educational expense, hasn't been an excuse not to use his brilliant mind, however. An A student in secondary and grade school, he has maintained an impressive average throughout his college years at St. Andrews College and ECU also.

Buzzy has done his academic work in less than four years by attending all but one summer session, since he started college at St. Andrews not quite four years ago. He got a late start because at the time he graduated from high school, there were no state funds available to help with higher education for persons as severely physically handicapped as he is.

St. Andrews was one of the first schools to eliminate architectural barriers and try to attract handicapped persons. East Carolina University has made strides in this area, also, in recent years.

Chancellor's Mother Talks About Happiness At Age 90

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

"Sometimes I wake up in the morning and I wonder — 'Can it really be? Am I 90 years old?'"

These are the words of Mrs. Warren Jenkins of Elizabeth, N. J., special guest at the commencement exercises of East Carolina University Friday. She is the mother of Dr. Leo Warren Jenkins, who is retiring this year as chancellor of this University after 31 years of service as dean, president, and chancellor.

Mrs. Jenkins, interviewed briefly, as she sipped coffee following breakfast Friday morning, was asked if she's pleased that her son is retiring. "He's happy about it," she said. "So I'm happy."

She likes to visit North Carolina, she says, and thinks this state has been good to her son.

Mrs. Jenkins said she has lived in Elizabeth, "a beautiful city," for more than 50 years. She's been a widow for 27 years. "I had a wonderful husband," she said. "He worked for Standard Oil Company."

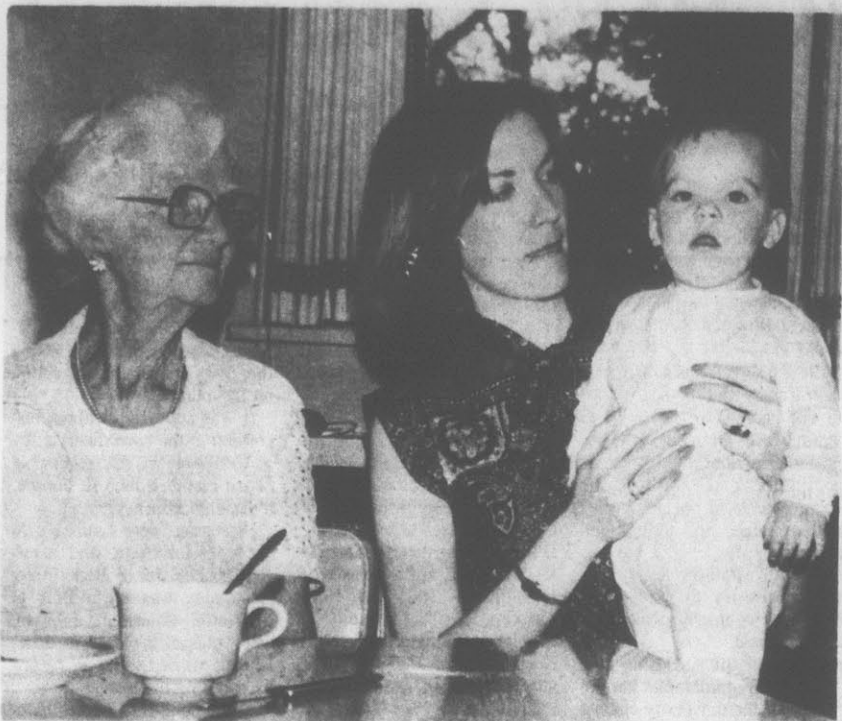

A New Jersey native, she says she has no hobbies. "I think every once in a while," she said, "of doing some needlepoint. I used to do some. But then usually, I think, 'Oh, I don't want to do that. I'd rather go out somewhere.'"

She says she has "lots of lady friends" and spends much of her time visiting with one or another of them.

She says she has never worked a day outside her home, that her time has been filled with family and friends. She has seven grandchildren and nine great grandchildren — "and the list gets longer all the time."

Her health, she says, has always been excellent. She feels she can do just about everything she has always done — "except maybe hear well."

"I'm a lucky woman," she said. "I have a wonderful son and a wonderful daughter ('Bert,' Mrs. Frank Facht of Colonia, N. J.), and I love them and their families very much."

Unusual Accident

An unusual accident near Belvoir Friday afternoon left a Chocowinity woman with minor injuries, cuts, and abrasions.

"It's a miracle she's alive," said Trooper A. G. Wright.

Wright said a car driven by Robert Joseph Toomey of Chocowinity was headed west on N. C. 33 when he rounded a curve. Toomey's mother, Helen, was a passenger in the auto. As the vehicle rounded the curve at about 55 miles per hour, the passenger door came open and Mrs. Toomey fell out of the car onto the roadside.

The trooper said she received minor cuts and other injuries, and was transported to Pitt Memorial Hospital, where she was listed Saturday night as in guarded condition.

Wright said the door latch on the vehicle apparently was faulty and did not catch when the door wasn't completely closed.

"I've been a trooper for 13 years and I've seen a lot of accidents, but not one like this," Wright said.

No charges were made in the 3:30 p.m. accident.

Woman Killed At Lejeune

CAMP LEJEUNE, N.C. (AP) — The wife of a Marine Corps gunnery sergeant died Friday when a parachute failed and a 150-pound load of simulated ammunition burst apart on impact, and fragments of the load struck her as she stood in the landing zone.

Judith C. Land, 31, died of multiple broken bones and internal bleeding in the Naval Regional Medical Center at Camp Lejeune, a Marine official said.

Mrs. Land's husband, Gunnery Sgt. James Land, was the non-commissioned officer in charge of the landing zone for the para-drop.

Fatal Fire

ANKARA, Turkey (AP) — Flames engulfed a five-story commercial building packed with 500 shoppers and at least 33 persons died of burns or jumped to their deaths, authorities in this capital said.

They said 100 persons were injured in the fire Friday night. Firefighters and soldiers continued to battle the blaze today while searching the blackened debris of Ankara's Yiba commercial center for more bodies.

Witnesses said some of those trapped on upper floors of the concrete building leaped to their deaths when they realized they had no way out.

Authorities said the fire broke out in the basement and swept to the top of the 14-year-old building, which housed numerous small shops and a privately owned school.

Charged In Murder

HIGH POINT, N.C. (AP) — A High Point truck driver has been charged with murder in the strangulation death of a 4-year-old boy he allegedly kidnapped from a Head Start center.

Clyde Lovette, 24, was charged with murder Friday in the death of Anthony Jerome McBride. The boy's body was found in a wooded area near here Wednesday, two days after he disappeared from the Head Start center.

Lovette had been arrested after the boy's body was found, charged with kidnapping and trespassing, and held on bond. After the murder charge was added, authorities held him without privilege of bond.

Police Capt. S.T. Myers said an autopsy conducted Friday by the state medical examiner's office in Chapel Hill indicated the boy had been strangled to death.

Italians Mourn Moro

SUNNY GRADUATION DAY — The 1978 graduation exercises at East Carolina University on Friday fell on a fine sunny May day. Many of those attending shielded their eyes from the bright sun

By SYLVANA FOA
ROME (UPI) — A grieving Pope Paul VI, Italian statesmen and dignitaries from 100 nations joined in "The Mother of All Churches" Saturday to honor slain former Premier Aldo Moro in a heavily guarded memorial service held against his last wishes.

Anti-terrorist police cleared all but official mourners from the huge basilica of St. John in Lateran to prevent any new attacks by Red Brigades terrorists who assassinated Moro four days ago.

Hundreds of police and army troops sealed off all roads leading into the vast square around the basilica, halting all traffic and turning away thousands who had come to mourn the slain head of the Christian Democratic Party.

Two police helicopters buzzed over the 4th century basilica and sharpshooters stood poised on rooftops to prevent any new attacks by the Red Brigades terrorists who killed Moro four days ago.

Only government leaders and foreign emissaries — including Health, Education and Welfare Secretary Joseph Califano — were allowed to join more than 250 plainclothes policemen inside the basilica to hear Pope Paul pray for Moro's soul.

Outside, police set up barricades and allowed only a few thousand mourners from labor unions, the ruling Christian Democratic Party and the Communist Party to gather in a light drizzle.

The cathedral was turned into a veritable fortress and tension ran high.

Toward the end of the ceremony, a police barricade inside the church toppled over, its crash echoing through the cavernous structure.

The crash sent many of the participants jumping nervously to their feet and papal aides moved quickly in front of the frail, 80-year-old pontiff until they were reassured about the cause of the disturbance.

Moro's widow Eleonora and his four children boycotted the service and remained in seclusion at home — still bitter over the government's refusal to agree to Red Brigades demands and save the life of the 61-year-old politician.

In pathetic letters written during his 55 days in captivity, Moro accused the government of "ratifying my death sentence" by rejecting a Red Brigades demand for a prisoner exchange.

He ordered government leaders to "stay away from my funeral. I want near me only those who truly loved me."

When the government announced it would hold a state funeral anyway, Mrs. Moro hastily claimed her husband's bullet-riddled body and buried him Wednesday in a private, rain-soaked ceremony in a medieval village outside Rome.

As a gesture of reconciliation with the government, however, Moro's brother and sister attended the service.

At the end of the mass, the brother and sister and relatives of the ex-premier's five slain police guards kissed the pope's hand and the pontiff spoke a few words of comfort to each.

In a specially composed prayer for the former premier's soul, Pope Paul urged Roman Catholics to forgive Moro's killers.

The pontiff alternated with his vicar for Rome, Cardinal Ugo Poletti, in celebrating the mass from the papal altar beneath a Gothic canopy adorned with gilded reliquaries that reportedly held the preserved heads of saints Peter and Paul.

Pope Paul, for years a close friend of the once influential politician, wrote a moving appeal to the Red Brigades gang April 22 begging them "on bended knee" to release Moro unconditionally and unharmed.

Califano, British Lord Chancellor Elwyn Jones, Prime Ministers Leo Tindermans of Belgium and Gaston Thorn of Luxembourg and former Japanese Premier Takeo Miki were among the foreign dignitaries joining Italian statesmen led by President Giovanni Leone and Premier Giulio Andreotti.

Palestinian terrorist leader Yassar Arafat sent a bouquet of red carnations.

NCNB Ordered To Sell Or Overhaul Subsidiary

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (UPI) — The Federal Reserve Board's governors gave the North Carolina National Bank Corp. until Dec. 31, 1980, to sell or overhaul its profitable TransSouth Financial Corp. subsidiary.

The Fed divestiture order came Friday in a board ruling denying NCNB's request to retain the consumer finance subsidiary. TransSouth has 94 offices in North Carolina, South Carolina, Virginia, Tennessee and Georgia.

TransSouth Financial, which earned a record $3.34 million for NCNB last year, is based in Florence, S.C. It is one of the largest finance firms operating exclusively in the South.

No Injuries In N. C. Tornado

WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP) — A tornado struck four businesses, including a crowded restaurant, on the 2100 block of Carolina Beach Road in Wilmington at about 7:30 p.m. Saturday.

Wilmington police reported that no one was injured when the twister struck. Initial reports indicated that some structural damage occurred at Ezell's Breakfast House, Dot's Tavern, Steve's Academy of Self-Defense, and the fourth building, which was not identified.

The self-defense academy was closed, but there were five customers and 10 employees at the breakfast house, according to police, and Dot's was also serving customers.

Says Mrs. Ford Jealous

NEW YORK (AP) — Betty Ford was a jealous and insecure wife whose drinking problem prevented her from outwardly reacting to an assassination attempt on her husband, says former White House press secretary Ron Nessen.

New York Post columnist Harriet Van Horne quotes Nessen in his forthcoming book as saying, "I watched her face intently to see what her reaction would be" when Mrs. Ford was told of the assassination attempt by Sara Jane Moore in San Francisco.

"She never changed her expression. She just kept smiling and took a sip of her drink," the columnist quotes from gallery proofs of Nessen's book.

A Small Turn-Out

ROCKY MOUNT, N.C. (AP) — Less than 20 people turned out here Saturday afternoon for a rally by the N.C. Coalition to Free the Wilmington 10 at the Greater Mount Herman Baptist Church.

The group heard Golden Frinks, national field director for the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, warn that, "We want freedom now for the Wilmington 10 and if we don't get it, we are going to turn North Carolina upside down."

The rally was one in a series held across the state designed to focus on the Wilmington 10 case and the struggle for black liberation in South Africa.

55 MPH Enforcement

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — North Carolina will participate in multi-state drives to enforce the 55 mph speed limit on Interstates 40 and 95 during the Memorial Day weekend, Gov. James B. Hunt Jr. said Saturday.

Hunt said the state Highway Patrol will be "highly visible" on the two superhighways "to maintain efficient movement of traffic and to stop those violating the speed limit and other motor vehicle laws."

North Carolina's effort is part of a drive by the states in which I-95 and I-40 runs to slow speeders through consistent enforcement. The I-95 drive, called "Operation CARE" (Combined Accident Reduction Effort), will be preceded with a mass media campaign.

The movie that won the Oscar in 1940 was "Rebecca."

'Would Not Yield' On UNC Authority

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — It took nine months for the University of North Carolina and the federal Department of Health, Education and Welfare to reach agreement, UNC President William C. Friday said Saturday, "because the university would not yield on the question of the authority of the board of governors to govern these institutions."

Speaking before 500 alumni and friends at the annual alumni luncheon Saturday, Friday said duplication of programs within the UNC system is justified in some cases.

Referring to UNC-Chapel Hill and N.C. Central University in Durham, he said, "No one questions the need for two law schools 10 miles apart. And that makes the point that we do what we ought to be doing in this state — educating more of our youth — duplication is necessary."

Friday said HEW is now an advocate of the desegregation plan, and must argue and support it. He said HEW Secretary Joseph Califano Jr. "called me last night to tell me that this was their intention, and that they will do so with enthusiasm."

UNC and HEW reached agreement Friday regarding racial duality in the 16-campus system.

Many persons, Friday said, mistakenly think that North Carolina was the only state at odds with the federal government regarding desegregation plans in higher education.

Several states now are in federal courts, he said, while others have not received "even their first letter about racial duality."

In negotiating with HEW, Friday told the alumni, he and his associates did "what we believe you, as moral men and women, believe should be done in dealing with the question of racial justice."

News Briefs

Ingram: Nothing Illegal

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Insurance Commissioner John Ingram confirmed late Friday that he had made several trips to Louisiana in an effort to save the All American Assurance Co. but he said he had done nothing illegal or improper.

Ingram was responding to reports in The News and Observer of Raleigh Friday which said he and his family were flown to Louisiana in 1976 and entertained at the expense of the company.

The paper said the company flew Ingram, who is a candidate for the U.S. Senate in the Democratic runoff, and his family in a private airplane from Raleigh to Baton Rouge and New Orleans in late December, 1976. The newspaper said the company spent more than $1,000 entertaining them.

27 Crew Members Rescued

MILWAUKEE (UPI) — As thousands of spectators lined the Lake Michigan shoreline, a helicopter Saturday rescued 27 crew members from a disabled freighter driven aground by high waves and winds of nearly 60 miles an hour.

Six officers of the 450-foot British vessel Photinia remained aboard and U.S. Coast Guard officials said a tug was en route from Chicago to pull the ship into deeper water.

The freighter, which had moored in the lake overnight off Milwaukee, ran into trouble Saturday when a mechanical problem prevented it from getting up full steam and high winds pushed it onto the shoreline, officials said.

Several other freighters were able to ride out the storm. There were no immediate reports of injuries.

Urgent Request For U.S. Fighters

WASHINGTON (UPI) — King Khalid of Saudi Arabia advised President Carter Saturday his nation urgently needs U.S. F-15 jet fighters to combat "communist expansion," and assured Carter the Saudis are dedicated to achieving a "just" peace with Israel.

Khalid's personal letter to Carter, made public in Washington, came only two days before a crucial Senate vote on Carter's Middle East warplane package.

Italians Vote Today

ROME (UPI) — Nearly four million Italians vote today and Monday in municipal and provincial elections seen as a test of public response to the government's firm stand against the kidnapers of former Premier Aldo Moro.

Political observers say much more is at stake than seats on 816 municipal and 2 provincial councils.

The first elections since Red Brigades terrorists killed Moro four days ago are expected to show how Italians feel about the Christian Democratic government's refusal to release jailed terrorists in exchange for Moro's life.

A majority of observers say most Italians support the government's stand and predict wins for Premier Giulio Andreotti's Christian Democrats and the pro-government Communists at the expense of smaller parties.

PRESSED FOR A PLACE — Vice-president Walter Mondale finds a perch on photographers platform to watch singing skit presented by off Broadway players Saturday in New York during a salute to the transformation of a pornography-plagued block near Times Square into a "Theater Row". Roy Park NCSU Speaker

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Roy H. Park, owner of the newspaper and broadcast groups that bear his name, called on American businesses Saturday to increase their support of public higher education to offset federal influence.

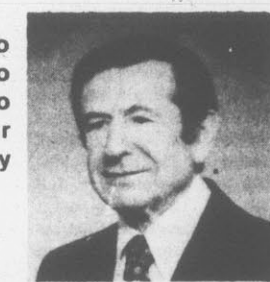

Park, a 1931 graduate of North Carolina State University, made the appeal during the school's 89th annual commencement. Park delivered the principal address and was awarded the honorary degree of doctor of humanities.

Park told an audience of more than 10,000 people that businesses should allocate 2 percent of their pre-tax profits for donations that would ensure that "big government will not completely take over public higher education."

The Dobson, N.C., native said the plan could produce more than $5 billion a year in private contributions to state universities and land-grant colleges.

ANNOUNCEMENT

New Pastor

Mr. Ernest M. Harris, Chairman of the Board of Deacons of People's Baptist Temple, is pleased to announce that the members of the People's Baptist Temple have called Rev. J. M. Bragg as pastor. He assumed the duties of the pastorate on May 8, 1978.

Rev. Bragg has been serving in the capacity of Assistant Pastor and Principal of Greenville Christian Academy for the past 2 years. He and his family came to Greenville from Alabama, where he was an assistant pastor. Rev. Bragg holds a Master of Theology degree from Clarksville School of Theology.

We invite all to come and hear Rev. Bragg's inaugural sermon on May 28, 1978.

Shore Drive Was The First

Greenville passed a major milestone last week when it was announced at the Redevelopment Commission meeting that the Shore Drive Redevelopment project had been closed out.

It takes a long memory to recall when the urban renewal project was actually begun, but it has been 20 years since urban renewal was first discussed here in Greenville. Once the Shore Drive area was decided upon as a slum clearance project, there were four years of debate prior to the beginning of the work.

For those who don't recall, the Shore Drive area was generally by the Tar River, Pitt Street, the ravine east of Reade, and Third, Fourth and Fifth on the south.

At the time the project was initiated much of the area was occupied by intolerable blighted housing, much of it precariously perched on the hill leading down to the river.

The city exchanged all that for wide and properly constructed streets in the area, an extension of the university campus along Reade and modern new private and public buildings throughout the area.

Perhaps best of all, the city acquired the restored Town Common park on the bank of the river, which has already become one of the beauty spots of Eastern North Carolina.

In entering into the agreement to carry out the project with the Department of Housing and Urban Development the city agreed to pay one-fourth of the cost.

Through various grants and work done by The Redevelopment Commission, the city and utilities, the project was actually closed out with a surplus of $113,926.36 which has been turned over to the city government by the Redevelopment Commission. The commission recommended that the funds be used to widen Dickinson Avenue for better access to the downtown area.

The Shore Drive project prompted the city and Redevelopment Commission to pursue other projects — Central Business District, Meadowbrook, Newtown among them.

However, the fight had to be made before Shore Drive could be undertaken, and the success of this project led to many other improvements in our city.

Shore Drive is something in which we can all take pride.

Parking Meter Removal Just A Test

Monday morning, motorists visiting the downtown area will find some changes.

Some 540 of the 619 parking meters will have been removed.

It is part of a trial period to see if parking can be controlled without the unpopular meters. If it works out the meters will not be returned.

It is well to remember that there is still a time limit on parking. After two hours police can tag a parked car and that will mean a $2 fine.

Sensible use of the available downtown parking will mean success for meterless parking.

Back Kids' TV Ad Ban

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — North Carolina has joined the ranks of those pushing the federal government to ban television advertising aimed at children.

The Governor's Advocacy Council on Children and Youth unanimously decided to go on the record urging the U.S. Fair Trade Commission to institute such a ban.

Discussion at the meeting of the group largely skirted the Constitutional issues which opponents of the ban see — infringement of free speech, and intrusion of government into the child-parent relationship.

As to parental responsibility, the council felt that too often parents don't take the initiative to monitor what children are watching, don't attempt to instruct them in what to believe, and cave in to demands and buy the children anything just to shut them up.

Additionally, some members felt, parents don't know any better themselves.

Target

Chief target of the ban would be sugary and non-nutritional foods, and toys which are either harmful or deceptive in reality of performance compared to that shown on the tube.

Essentially, the proposed federal move would ban commercials deliberately geared to young audiences, or designed and scheduled for broadcast during programs which appeal mostly to young audiences.

The federal draft mentions children under the age of eight. The North Carolina advocacy council removed that age limitation and substituted those too young to understand, feeling that many children above eight the state during the school year 1978-79," Alexander has stated.

Local schools originally buy the buses (now numbering 11,869) and the state pays all operating costs and replacements.

Alexander provided statistics tracking the effect of inflation on the transportation program. The buses use some 100,000 gallons of gas daily. If gasoline goes up one penny per gallon, it costs North Carolina $1,000 per day.

Six years ago, gas cost less than 12 cents per gallon (contract rates), and is now over 38 cents.

New buses cost $5,900 in 1971; they now cost $11,465. Cost of tires and tubes has nearly doubled.

Alexander says the special funds are essential "to insure the uninterrupted operation" of the school buses next year.

THE INSIDE REPORT

Reagan Plays Party Man

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — Right-wing challenger Jeffrey Bell awaits his June 6 Republican primary in New Jersey against heavily favored liberal Sen. Clifford Case with diminished hope for 17th hour help from his mentor, Ronald Reagan — a fact with broad implications in 1980 presidential politics.

Bell's political intimates still cannot believe that Reagan will keep his back turned on his former idea man and speechwriter. But that is precisely what Reagan's most important advisers tell him is essential to consolidate his position within the party as a Republican rather than a conservative ideologue.

Reagan's New Jersey neutrality fits the new policy of nonbelligerency toward Republican liberals. Enthusiastic about trying again for President, Reagan covets the role of party unifier in contrast to his unavoidable party-splitting role of 1976. The danger is that, while appealing his liberal enemies, Reagan may weaken his conservative base.

Reagan has always been ambivalent about party unity. While preaching the 11th Commandment prohibiting one Republican from speaking ill of another, he challenged and badly wounded an incumbent President.

The ambivalence showed through during a swing through the East last December. On Dec. 15, in a television interview taped with us for RKO-General, he urged Republicans to stop "giving each other political saliva tests...to find out the degree of our Republican purity."

But two days later when asked over WJZ-TV in Baltimore whether the party should avoid challenging a liberal such as Maryland's Sen. Charles Mathias in the 1980 primary, Reagan replied: "Oh, no." He then hinted that Mathias might well consider switching parties, just as Reagan long ago decided to leave the Democrats. "I'd like to have a talk with him," Reagan said.

Mathias took him up on it during a speaking engagement in California a month later. Reagan invited him to his house at Pacific Palisades where on Jan. 18 Reagan, his wife and Mathias had a pleasant visit and political conversation. There was no talk of primary challenges or party switching. That pleasant chat in California was the first reflection of determination by influential Reagan insiders that his next presidential push should be less abrasive than his last.

This became clear about

BETHLEHEM TO BEDLAM

About 150 years ago a new English hospital was given the name "Bethlehem." As time went on, the hospital was used more and more for mental patients. At the same time, its name was contracted in popular speech to "Bedlam", and thus, in the coming years, was introduced that word into the English language which means "any place of uproar and confusion."

The transformation from "Bethlehem" to "Bedlam" is symbolic of the course of events in the modern world.

Sunday Morning Notes

Leo Jenkins has been a force in North Carolina for many years.

Here in the east he has goaded us, pushed us and cajoled us to improve our lot during all that time, and with sensational results, we think.

Small wonder that stories abound about the man, who saw his final graduation exercise as chancellor of East Carolina University Friday.

At the height of his career, Jenkins was making waves to the point where he was being talked up as a candidate for governor. He didn't discourage the speculation and a Jenkins race for governor seemed a real possibility.

A reporter surveying sentiment for a Jenkins gubernatorial candidacy in the east was said to have asked a farmer at a rural store for his opinion.

"Jenkins for governor?" the man snorted. "What's he want to be governor for when he can be president of East Carolina College?"

The time eventually came after East Carolina College

Docile Until Taxes

ENON, Ohio (AP) — Dairyman Earl E. Chapman says if the government is going to tax property to pay for schools, it ought to tax the knowledge a person gets by going to school.

"I'm a docile dairyman until I get to talking about taxes," said Chapman, 54. "Then I get my dander up."

He bought his farm in 1965 for $45,000 after more than 10 years of running restaurants in nearby Springfield.

"But they say the farm is worth $125,000 now for tax purposes," he said. "That's $85,000 that I have to pay taxes on that I don't have a penny of because it is unearned increment on the land."

Much of what he pays in property tax goes to the local school system.

"I'm being educated to poverty," he said, adding that he's thinking about selling his 100-acre farm and 40 head of milk cows.

He said his 1965 property tax bill was $440, but that by the time a new school tax was approved in 1970, his taxes had gone up to $1,120.

"I only made $4,400 that year before taxes," he said.

That ruffled him enough to organize a petition drive repealing the school tax. But his tax bill has gotten worse instead of better. His farm was reappraised, as required by law, and he said his taxes are now $1,450 a year.

Chapman, who grew up five miles from where he now lives, walked among his Holsteins as he outlined the reasons he considers property taxes for education unfair.

"They are continuing taxes and if we vote them down they go back on the ballot until they pass," he said.

"When the school boards tell teachers and janitors they'll get a raise if the tax passes, how do you think they will vote? When the teachers tell students the schools will close if their parents don't vote for the tax, how do you think the parents will vote?"

Chapman said educated people should be taxed on knowledge they use to earn a living, just as his farm is taxed.

"They bought their education just like I buy my land and I pay taxes on the land, but they don't have to pay taxes on their knowledge and that irks me," he said. "I use the land to earn

Public Forum

Letters submitted for Public Forum must be limited to 300 words.

To the editor:

On numerous occasions I have come home from work and planned an early dinner in order to have my housework done and my children in bed by 9 p. m. so I could settle down to watch a movie that I very much wanted to see, only to find that, at the precise moment the movie was to begin, something else appeared on the screen.

This happens only on WNCT-Channel 9, Greenville. This incident was repeated Apr. 26 as I thought I was going to watch the CBS Wednesday Night Movie, "Seige." I called the station and was told, "It is on Channel 11." I don't get Channel 11 (WTVD, Durham)! I live in an apartment complex that does not allow installation of outside tv antennas and am limited to Channels 7, 9 and 12.

I believe this problem has been reported to "The Daily Reflector Hotline" earlier, and the complaining party was informed this area of responsibility at WNCT belongs to Ed Fields.

When a movie is being shown by the networks that is not of a general nature, they always state, "Viewer discretion advised," not "station manager or program director discretion advised."

If Mr. Fields is going to decide what I should watch, then I think he should be required to carry his editing further and carefully delete all network promotion that is run in weeks prior to a program's being shown. Instead of allowing a listing in the newspaper, "TV Guide," etc., and the network promo to run all week, shouldn't we be advised that we will be denied the right to watch a program? Why shouldn't WNCT have to run a studio slide over the network promo saying, "Ed Fields of WNCT-TV has decided to deny the viewers of this area the right to watch this CBS movie as he finds it offensive and & objectionable."

I believe efforts to complain directly to Park Broadcasting (owner of WNCT) would be futile.

I understand why people in this area have expressed a great interest in Cable TV and I am sure that area viewers, including Mr. Fields, will thoroughly enjoy its benefits.

To the editor:

It seems to me that the "Greenville 400" and the other devoted (and militant) supporters of the proposed Equal Rights Amendment to our Constitution could well sit back and think a while. Women do not get a fair shake in our world, particularly the business world. BUT this is NOT, repeat NOT caused by the absence of laws guaranteeing equal rights.

The real reason why women still get less pay, etc, than men do for comparable effort is custom and the reluctance of most people, men and women, to change.

Until we are willing to change our customs and ways of thinking, and our habits of thought, no law can possibly give everybody equality under the law.

"A" "E" Dubber

Jenkins himself says that he has had a good relationship with the students on campus.

"In fact," he has said, "a lot of them, call me by my first name. Just the other night a car load of students rode by, someone stuck his head out the window and yelled, 'Go to hell, Leo.'"

Jenkins has been a noted speaker and he has given hundreds of high school commencement addresses, reportedly once giving four in two days.

Even his final days as chancellor have been crowded with a whirlwind of talks.

So what happened before he was to give the 1978 ECU commencement address, in effect his farewell talk? Dr. Jenkins developed laryngitis — to the point where he could barely talk to a calling reporter

In typical Jenkins fashion, however, he recovered sufficiently to make his talk on Friday.

Puts Blame On Budget Deficit

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — "What we do in our pricing is not as important as a $60 billion budget deficit," said C. William "Bill" Verity, Jr., chairman of Arco Inc., in response to a question on inflation.

Verity permitted no misunderstanding. In his view, steel pricing was not a cause of inflation but a response to it. The source of inflation, he indicated, was in Washington — in the budget deficit.

His president, Harry Holiday, Jr., agreed. In a conversation earlier, he had commented on the dangers of running such a deficit while the country was at the peak of its most recent economic expansion.

Holiday blamed the situation on President Carter, and said he looked beyond to the day when a more decisive president would recognize that a deficit of such magnitude can only force prices higher.

"We have to balance the budget," Verity said again to the small audience of news people, gathered by Arco for a traditional annual dinner and presentation about steel and the economy's future.

"Washington's solution to everything is to spend more," he continued, after explaining that inflation is the top economic concern of his company. "The people will rebel," he said.

"In fact," he continued, proving by his emphasis that inflation and the budget were indeed of very great concern, "some of our economists tell us the deficit could be not just $60 billion but $80 billion."

Asked how he would correct it, Verity suggested a moratorium on new spending, and a "good look" at existing commitments "until we can get inflation out of the system."

These weren't isolated views, but rather indicative of much business commentary. Business tends to view the budget as the inflation engine, and itself as the hapless victim tied to the railroad tracks.

The view suggests that public support for the President's anti-inflation efforts may be only a practical measure, not in camaraderie with the administration against a common evil.

The evil, business is saying over and over again, is the deficit. To blame business, they say, is to blame the victim for not breaking the shackles and getting off the railroad tracks.

Amendment Is Favored

By George Gallup

PRINCETON, N.J. — Voters of the nation like the idea of being able to pass judgment on proposed national legislation.

A constitutional amendment, described by its sponsors as the Voter Initiative Amendment, would require a national vote on any issue if 3 per cent of all voters in the previous presidential election sign petitions asking for such a vote. This percentage, applied to the last presidential election, would mean that a national vote could be held on any issue when approximately 2.5 million people signed petitions.

By a 57-21 per cent majority, the public in a nationwide Gallup Poll survey expresses approval of this plan. A total of 22 per cent were undecided. Significantly, voters who have attended college approve of the initiative amendment by a vote of 59 per cent to 30 per cent with 11 per cent undecided.

The initiative, a time-honored device for direct citizen participation in the legislative process, is currently authorized in 23 states. And, according to the Library of Congress, in the past 80 years approximately 1,200 issues have been decided in this manner.

The constitutional amendment that would make the initiative federal policy is sponsored in the Senate by James Abourezk of South Dakota and Mark Hatfield of Oregon and in the House of Representatives by James Jones of Oklahoma and Harold Sawyer of Michigan.

Current Support

Support for the federal initiative is found among all major groups of the population.

Interestingly, nearly identical proportions of Republicans, Democrats, and independents agree the initiative is a good idea — an unusual finding on any question of political significance.

Similarly, about equal majorities in the various geographic regions support such an amendment to the Constitution.

This was the question asked:

"The U.S. Senate will consider a proposal that would require a national vote — that is, a referendum — on any issue when 3 per cent of all voters who voted in the most recent presidential election sign petitions asking for such a nationwide vote. How do you feel about this plan — do you favor or oppose such a plan?"

Here are the nationwide results as well as the findings by important population groups:

| | Favor | Oppose | No Opinion |
|------------------|-------|--------|------------|
| NATIONWIDE | 57% | 21% | 22% |
| College | 59 | 30 | 11 |
| High school | 59 | 19 | 22 |
| Grade school | 46 | 11 | 43 |
| East | 55 | 19 | 26 |
| Midwest | 56 | 23 | 21 |
| South | 59 | 19 | 22 |
| West | 57 | 23 | 20 |
| Under 30 years | 59 | 19 | 22 |
| 30-49 years old | 59 | 22 | 19 |
| 50 years & older | 52 | 22 | 26 |
| Republicans | 56 | 25 | 19 |
| Democrats | 59 | 20 | 21 |
| Independents | 56 | 22 | 22 |

Citizen Discontent

Undoubtedly an important reason for the broad support which this amendment receives at this time is the disillusionment experienced by the voters of the nation in the post-Watergate era — disillusionment both with the legislative and executive branches of government.

Those who disapprove of such an amendment generally base their opinion on the fact that the public is not well enough informed on many complex issues to arrive at a sound opinion. Moreover, they point out that the Founding Fathers, in writing the Constitution, intended the nation to be a representative form of democracy and not a pure or direct democracy.

The results reported today are based on personal interviews with 1,536 adults, 18 and older, interviewed in more than 300 scientifically selected localities during the period Jan. 6-9.

A Conservative View

William Simon's Bid For Conservative Impact

By JAMES J. KILPATRICK

WASHINGTON — Eighteen years have passed since Barry Goldwater published his slim little volume, "The Conscience of a Conservative". The book established the Arizona overnight as leader of the conservative movement, and helped to catapult him toward the Republican presidential nomination in 1964. History may be repeating itself.

With his newly published "A Time For Truth", William E. Simon bids for the same impact, the same audience, and perhaps the same heady results. His hard-hitting book is the best popular statement of conservative principles since Goldwater set us to whooping and hollering back in 1960.

Goldwater, of course, ran into a tough combination of events. At the time, he was in his second term in the Senate, but he was not as well known then as Simon is now.

The Republican nomination of 1964 was no particular prize; the country was not about to elect a third president in a span of 13 months. In the end, Goldwater won 38 percent of the popular vote but only six states. For some of us, it was the last campaign to engage us heart and soul.

Simon's position is better in many respects. As a former energy czar and former secretary of the treasury, he enjoys a solid reputation as a no-nonsense guy in government. He will be 51 in November, a likely age for a presidential campaign. If neither Gerald Ford nor Ronald Reagan goes for the nomination, Simon surely would figure in political calculations. The conviction grows that Jimmy Carter can be dumped.

Simon's problem, in one sense, is that he has no official stamp to stand on; he can't make news. But the last major figure with this problem was Jimmy Carter of Georgia.

Unlike Congressman Jack Kemp of New York, whom I was writing about a week ago, Simon is no dark horse. The odds on Kemp would be maybe 45-1. Simon would go to the post 9-5, in a class with such prospects as Dole of Kansas and Baker of Tennessee. If this new book gains the kind of circulation that Goldwater's conservative credo achieved in 1960, Simon might look very good indeed by this time next year.

The two — Goldwater and Simon — have this in common also: Between them, they have all the tact of Billy Martin instructing an erring umpire. Simon regards many members of Congress as lumbagoes, blockheads and nincompoops; this is a fair judgment, but not an endearing one. Certain passages in "A Time For Truth" will win no friends on Capitol Hill. Other passages will make his Republican brothers wince.

But Simon is an angry man. An excess of zeal is a pardonable sin. He is angry at what he sees as the steady erosion of individual freedom in our country; he is angry at the appalling indifference he observes at every hand; he hungers to fight back against the collectivist forces, and he frets that time is wasting.

"The only party with a philosophical heritage which might permit it to be the Liberty Party is the Republican Party. But the Republican Party today is inert — reduced to spineless inconsistency by a half century of compromises on principle... Until the Republicans become a party of principle, aware that a fundamental assault on our freedom is transforming the country, and until its politicians are willing to stand up and fight for that freedom with moral conviction and passion, it has no future... It may even deserve to die."

Simon's purpose is to expound a principled conservative program; to beat the drums for liberty in a dozen manifestations. As a banker-broker-businessman, he believes in the free marketplace; through his experience in the Cabinet, grappling with professional economic planners from the bureaucratic dreamworld, he learned at first hand how the marketplace is imperiled.

There has never been so little freedom before in America to plan, to save, to invest, to build, to produce, to exchange goods and services, to risk, to profit, to grow... Americans are constitutionally free today to do almost everything that our cultural tradition has previously held to be immoral and obscene, while the police powers of the state are being invoked against almost every aspect of the productive process.

"If the trumpet give an uncertain call," asked the Apostle Paul, "who shall prepare himself for battle?" There's nothing uncertain in Simon's trumpet. He is out there blowing "charge!"

Facing South Didn't Have Time To Be Scared Under Fire

NORTON, Va. — He bears the name of the Scottish hero, Robert Bruce, and he dreamed of doing great things. As far back as he can remember, R.B. Crawford wanted to publish a newspaper. "I wanted to influence public opinion in behalf of the common man," he says. He quit school in his senior year to lease the Norton Coalfield Progress. That was in 1912.

In 1915 he returned the paper to its owner and founded his own newspaper, which he named the Norton Reporter. Two years later the long arm of Uncle Sam reached out and temporarily severed him from the newspaper business. After the Armistice ended World War I, he returned home and took up where he had left off. Now he called his paper Crawford's Weekly.

Norton was the seat of a typical southern coal county. As in most of them, virtually everything and everyone belonged to the coal industry, from the tax assessor and the sheriff down to the dwellings of the miners and their families. As a reporter and editor, Crawford observed the political and economic power of the mine owners, but kept his little paper independent and solvent.

In 1920 a new union was attempting to organize the miners of anti-union Harlan and Bell counties, across the state line in Kentucky. Those miners who were still employed — and most were not — were given only one or two days work per week. Their take-home pay was generally less than a dollar a day. The National Miners Union, frustrated in its efforts to negotiate with the employers, called a strike in February 1931.

Desperately trying to survive the Depression, thousands of miners answered the union's call for a walkout. The NMU set up soup kitchens and collected clothing for the ragged miners and their families. The mine owners hired 325 armed guards to break the strike. In a shootout called the "Battle of Everts", four persons were killed and several were wounded. Theodore Dreiser, the famous novelist, came to eastern Kentucky to investigate the situation. He invited other writers and journalists to take part in the investigation. For several days R.B. Crawford was the only other writer to join Dreiser.

Crawford drove across the mountain to Harlan County. "I knew a lawyer there and after leaving my car in the town of Harlan I walked across a wooden footbridge to get to his house. I did not yet know it, but I was under surveillance from the time I reached the county seat. After talking with the lawyer in order to find out what he knew about the situation, I started back across the little bridge. Suddenly, I heard shots. I didn't realize that I was the target of those shots until bullets began to splinter the planks in the walkway of that bridge, right in front of me. I felt a sharp sting. I looked down and saw blood on my sock, just above the ankle.

He found, when he reached the end of the bridge, that sheriff's deputies had been shooting "to scare me away." A town policeman took him to the town hall and questioned him. "The mine owners didn't want anybody investigating in their bailiwick," Crawford says. After being interrogated by police, he went to see a doctor and had his leg bandaged.

As a result of his wound, which he says was "only a scratch", the young editor gained nationwide fame; he received telephone calls and telegrams from all over the East asking about his experience. "It all happened so fast I didn't have time to be scared", he would answer. He became widely known as a crusading country editor. Sherwood Anderson wrote of him that "the country needs more weekly newspapers edited by men like Bruce Crawford", and he received similar praise from the Richmond and Roanoke papers.

He became editor of the Bluefield (Virginia) Sunset News in 1935 and soon gained recognition as an astute observer of the political and economic scene. Then in 1939, he was appointed Director of the Federal Writers Project in West Virginia, which produced an interesting compilation of county histories and "A Guide to the Mountain State". The Guide remained in print for 31 years, longer than any state guide of its kind.

At 85, the Virginia journalist is retired and living with his wife, Kate, in St. Petersburg, Florida, and occasionally he reminisces about his eventful career. "I've got some book manuscripts I've worked on over the years", he says. "Maybe I'll finish them one of these days."

not enthusiastic about his campaign against the Panama Canal treaties.

Despite criticism of Reagan's neutrality by the right-wing weekly "Human Events," his staff says only "about five" critical letters have been received. But that is no true measurement. Grumbling that Reagan, at age 67, is getting out of political touch has been heard among conservatives in the House Republican cloakroom.

How, they ask, can Reagan preach Republican unity after his bold assault against President Ford? What's more, they contend Bell is no fringe candidate but has generated support from such respectable conservatives as ex-Sen. James Buckley, ex-Treasury Secretary William Simon and Reps. Robert Bauman (Maryland), John Ashbrook (Ohio) and Jack Kemp (New York).

Kemp is another former Reagan aide hungrily eyeing a Senate seat now held by a liberal Republican (Sen. Jacob Javits, whose present term ends in 1980). Closely allied with Bell in a national tax-reduction movement endorsed by Reagan, Kemp went to Milburn, N.J., May 7 to address a Bell fund-raiser. While there, Kemp discussed with Bell his intention of telephoning Reagan for a final try to win his endorsement.

To turn down Jack Kemp's last eloquent plea on behalf of Jeff Bell will tax Reagan's toughness. Yet, key advisers, tell him he must do so to cool off Republican passions two years hence. Whether Reagan listens to his head or his heart in 1978 may preview the campaign he can wage in 1980.

my living and they use their knowledge to earn theirs. If the government can tax my investment, then it should tax their knowledge."

Chapman didn't say how this might be accomplished.

Both his son and daughter have some advanced education. "But my daughter doesn't have to pay tax on the knowledge she learned to be a nurse," Chapman said. "If the government is going to tax my investment in this farm, then it should tax her knowledge."

Chapman said the income tax is the only fair tax he can think of.

"A good tax should be a compulsory contribution of your wealth to help the governing body," he said. "If I make money farming, I'm willing to give it in taxes. But I don't want to be taxed on my working capital."

Today In History

By The Associated Press

Today is Sunday, May 14, the 134th day of 1978. There are 231 days left in the year. This is Mother's Day.

Today's highlight in history:

On this date in 1787, a convention was convened in Philadelphia to draw up the U.S. Constitution.

On this date: In 1643, Louis XIV became king of France.

In 1804, Meriwether Lewis and William Clark set out from St. Louis on their expedition to the Pacific Coast.

In 1940, German bombers razed much of the Dutch port city of Rotterdam in World War II.

In 1948, Britain ended its rule in Palestine, and the independent state of Israel was proclaimed.

In 1965, a section of land at Runnymede in England, where the idea of constitutional government started, was dedicated in memory of the late President John Kennedy.

In 1972, the island of Okinawa was returned to Japan after 27 years of American rule.

Ten years ago: President Charles de Gaulle was cheered by hundreds of thousands on a visit to Communist Romania, where he stressed national freedom from any power bloc.

Five years ago: The first U.S. research space station, Skylab, was rocketed into orbit around the earth.

One year ago: The Soviet newspaper Pravda warned the West that any aid given to China would eventually be used to start a new world war.

New Marine Corps Leadership Is Shaping Up

By ROBERT KAYLOR

QUANTICO, Va. (UPI) — They are as starched and squared away as ever, but a new generation of Marine Corps leaders is emerging — some with ideas that would curl even the close-shaven hair of an old-school leatherneck.

Traditionally, the Marines have been the "wait and see" branch of the armed forces on change. The Corps has been conservative and proud of it.

That image has started to bend. It is nowhere more apparent than at the Amphibious Warfare School, where the best and brightest young Marine officers are sent for nine months of boot learning that includes appearances by leading civilian and military officials and seminars on current issues.

Four reporters recently got a chance to witness the process first hand by taking part in a "Media Day" billed as a first encounter for most of the students with representatives of national news organizations. The format was a question-and-answer panel discussion followed by an informal rap session.

Some of the topics aired — such as why are there so many stories in newspapers about "double-dipping" and so few about the growing Soviet military threat — were to be expected in a military group. Others were more surprising.

One captain offered the suggestion that "not all Communists should be treated like leprosy." He said perhaps easing of U.S. policies toward Cuba could make that nation less dependent on the Soviet Union, and therefore less likely to continue taking casualties promoting Russian military aims in Africa.

The view would have been unheard of from a Marine a few years ago. These are mostly officers in their early 30s. All except a few who served as enlisted men were still in college during the Vietnam years and missed that war.

The state of the Marines? There has been courage in being first with some new programs, such as advocating vertical takeoff and landing aircraft despite bad publicity from crashes. But in other areas, said one student, the Corps has lagged behind and "fallen on our faces."

On the Panama Canal treaties there are sharp divisions among the student body, but from some the view that if the treaties had not passed the Senate "it'd be another Vietnam."

"It was the only way out," said a student who doubts the staying power of hard line public opinion once trouble starts.

"My father says we should line our troops up along the border with Latin America and march all the way to the southern tip," he said. "Well, if I was out there in the front rank when the casualties began, he might change his mind."

Outwardly, the students are younger carbon copies of the ramrod straight senior officers who instruct here.

There's not a wisp of long hair in the bunch, but they're willing to question policies and add suggestions of their own, even to the point of talking about it to generals who visit the school.

The instructors, some of whom regard that latitude as a slackening in the iron discipline that has been a Marine way of life, admit to some discomfort.

But some also allow it may not be too bad a thing at a time when critics have suggested the Marines are attuned to an earlier era and may have outlived their mission and their usefulness.

Alas, Mother Never Did Meet Television Image

Anyone who has ever watched television or read a woman's magazine knows that mothers are one step below the saints in their credit ratings. Personally, I cherish a mental picture of Jane Wyatt running her household prettily and efficiently while Robert Young sits in the living room dispensing advice. Others may prefer Olivia Walton or Ma Ingalls or the Geritol lady. It doesn't really matter though — they're all made from the same basic mother mold.

That's why I always felt deprived. My mother never fit the mold. For instance, mothers aren't supposed to sweat.

But mine did. And mothers are supposed to react calmly whenever their little angels paint the bedspread with lipstick. They are NEVER supposed to scream.

But mine did. Mothers are supposed to bake cookies for afternoon snacks.

My mother was convinced that sweets ruined the teeth. Mothers are supposed to be cheerfully available whenever you think you need them.

My mother would drag in after working a full day, collapse in a chair, stare at the ceiling with glazed eyes, and beg, "Leave me alone."

Mothers aren't supposed to cry except during the Late Show.

But when Mother ran over the family pet, she cried louder than all the rest of us put together.

Mothers are supposed to organize and supervise a variety of play experiences designed to stimulate their children's creativity.

Mother's idea of organized activity was "Play outside till dinner and don't fall in the creek."

Mothers are never supposed to threaten.

Mine did. And she always carried through.

Mothers are supposed to keep up with all the latest theories on child-rearing.

But the only theory with which my mother was acquainted was "Spare the rod and spoil the child."

Mothers are supposed to put their feet down with their teenagers and earn immediate, though grudging, gratitude.

My mother put her foot down all right — and I sulked in my room for six years.

Mothers are never supposed to experience guilt because they just naturally know the right way to act in every situation.

My mother raised two happy, well-adjusted daughters, and she STILL feels guilty.

Mothers are supposed to be perfect.

But mine is human.

And I love her anyway.

Demo Women Workshop

By LYNN CAVERLY
Reflector Staff Writer

The First Congressional District Democratic Women held their annual workshop Saturday morning at the Ramada Inn. About 40 persons attended.

Ann Burks, director of the First District Democratic Women, greeted the women and Mayor Pro-Tem Charles Vincent gave a welcoming address urging increased strength of the party.

The group was addressed by two guest speakers. The first was Priscilla Hartle, special assistant to Governor Hunt. Speaking on "Democratic Women: The Strength of the Party", she emphasized the fact that "sometimes we forget how strong we really are. Through our lobbying power and hours of telephoning, licking envelopes, registering voters and other volunteer efforts, we have proven that women are good organizers. It is time for democratic women to become more vocal about their accomplishments.

Hartle informed the group that more and more women are being appointed to state boards and commissions.

Dr. Lawrence Wheeler, assistant secretary of the N. C. Department of Cultural Resources, was the second guest speaker.

Approvals By City Council

Several additional items of business were taken care of by the City Council at Thursday night's meeting.

The Council scheduled public hearings for June 8 on three matters, including: request for rezoning property on 14th Street Extended from RA-20 (residential-agricultural) and R-9 (residential) to R-9 and R-6; rezoning of the South Evans Redevelopment Project; and the proposed floodway regulations.

Other business included:

- Approval of a request by the Greenville Jaycees for a fireworks display at the upcoming Fourth of July celebration;
- Approval of a request by William L. Tingen and Mildred M. Tingen that the city repurchase two single grave lots in Greenwood Cemetery;

- Approval of an application by Mike's Colonial Station at 1204 Dickinson Avenue for an off-premise beer privilege license;
- Approval of an application by J.J.'s Pantry, 100 E. Greenville Boulevard, for an off-premise beer and wine privilege license;
- Approval of Barrus Construction Co. as the low bidder ($11,822.30) on the Stratford Subdivision improvements (L. A. Reynolds Co. offered a bid of $12,214.40, while Barnhill Contracting Co. submitted a $17,635 bid); and

- Scheduling of a public hearing on June 8 on a request by Walter Murrell for a special use permit to operate a private club at 1311 W. Fifth Street.

City School Bd. Meets Monday

The regular meeting of the Greenville City Board of Education will be at 8 p.m. Monday, May 15 in Elmhurst Elementary School. Principal agenda items are completion of the 1978-79 school budget and discussions on curriculum for grades one through six.

Accountants Meet Monday

The Eastern Carolina chapter of the National Association of Accountants will hold its meeting Monday at the Beef Barn.

The technical meetings are actually training dinners with professional speakers covering subjects related to accounting.

The speaker will be Dr. John M. Howell, vice-chancellor for academic affairs at East Carolina University, giving the topic, "Changing Trends in Education."

Anyone interested in the Association may call Danny Symkowiak at the Eaton Corporation, 752-2121.

Receives Degree

Keith Martin Joyner, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lindburgh Joyner, recently completed requirements for the B.A. degree in Fine Arts from James Madison University, Harrisonburg, Va. Joyner is a 1974 graduate of J. H. Rose High School, where he was an honor student and recipient of a Stillman trophy.

ville are those as a member of the Citizens Advisory Committee to the Board of Education during the time of strife at Rose High; former chairman of the Greenville Human Relations Council; and former director of the Pitt County Neighborhood Youth Corps. He is also on the Pitt County Alcoholic Advisory Council.

Phillips has been a candidate for the city council on two occasions and ran for mayor in 1971.

"Commenting on being appointed, Phillips said, "I am quite surprised and of course honored to receive the nomination and appointment. Education for the kids is something I've always been interested in. I plan to observe and do some research before taking definite stands on specific issues."

"One thing I do hope to do," he added, "is to establish communications between the grass roots level people and the board of education."

The third member appointed by the city council, Jack Wall, was a close contender in the recent school board elections — he was 102 votes behind the sixth successful candidate.

A Raleigh native, Wall is currently a sales representative for Honeycutt Beauty Supply, and has lived here since 1967.

He is married to the former Linda Grady of Kinston, and they are the parents of two young children — a son Steve, 11, and a daughter, Kelly, 9.

Wall is a graduate of Raleigh's Needham Broughton High School and of the School of Business, East Carolina University. He is a former member of the Greenville unit of the National Guard and is a member of St. Paul's Episcopal Church.

Active in many fields, he is a former member of the Greenville Planning and Zoning Board, a past president of the Greenville Jaycees, and serves on the South Greenville PTA.

A sports enthusiast, Wall is an avid golfer and tennis player and is on the Board of Directors of the Pirate Club.

"Civic involvement was always been exciting and challenging to me," Wall said, "and I look forward to giving my support to helping make the Greenville City School system the finest anywhere."

Once he's working, Buzzy says, he'll start on a master's degree, which he hopes will be in rehabilitation counseling. This is what he wants to do with his life. He has already done some speaking before groups of handicapped persons. "They have to pay a little attention when I tell them that they can do it if they want to strongly enough," he said.

He gives special credit to Richard Heath, his present N. C. Voc Rehab counselor, and to Horace Lawrence, a former counselor of his. "These two guys motivated me the most," he said. "Whenever I've needed either of them, he was there."

Lawrence calls Buzzy "the most highly motivated quadruplegic I've ever known."

Through his college years he's been provided by V. R. with a roommate-assistant to help him with grooming and other personal needs. In his electric wheelchair, he could go to class alone. He calls John Shroyer, his present assistant, "one of the best I've ever had — a good friend."

Buzzy has been a member of the House Council of Slay Dormitory, where he has lived at ECU, and has served on the Housing for the Handicapped Committee. He belongs to two honor societies, Psi Chi for psychology students and Phi Sigma Tau for philosophy students.

During his time at St. Andrews, he participated in a semester-abroad political science program in Hawaii. He loves Hawaii, he said, and hopes to go back there and to many other places throughout the world. "I'll do it, too," he said. "You can do anything if you want to and work to enough."

Pressures Continue For Tax Relief Measures

By EDMOND Le BRETON
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter's decision to scale down his tax reduction proposal is being praised by key members of Congress, but pressures continue both for larger and smaller measures of tax relief.

The White House announced Friday that Carter was lowering his objective from a $24 billion net tax reduction to a range around the $19.4 billion figure favored by congressional budget writers.

Reduced unemployment and stubbornly continuing inflation were cited as the reasons. It was evident, however, that the administration also was reacting to widespread opposition in Congress to a tax cut that would greatly swell the deficit and to indications the Federal Reserve would crack down on monetary policy unless the deficit were kept within bounds.

Rep. Al Ullman, D-Ore.,

chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee which is handling the tax legislation, applauded the change. But he said he still thinks the net tax reduction should not exceed about $15 billion, including any scaling down of the Social Security tax increases scheduled for next year.

"More people are interested in reducing the deficit than in reducing taxes," Ullman said. "Inflation now is the No. 1 problem."

But Rep. Barber B. Conable of New York, spokesman for Republican ways and means committee members who are seeking tax cuts up to $38 billion with accompanying spending restraints, said they were not giving up.

He said Carter "has a different fiscal policy every day," but is basically in error by concentrating on taxes without considering spending curbs.

The conference committee now reconciling the tentative House and Senate budget drafts agreed to make room for a $15 billion tax reduction during the year beginning Oct. 1.

The tax cut, however, would begin only on Jan. 1, 1979 — reflecting another concession by Carter — and so would apply for only three quarters of the fiscal year. On an annual basis, the cut would therefore be in the $19.4 billion range Carter agreed to.

In a joint statement, the chairmen of the two budget committees, Rep. Robert N. Giaimo, D-Conn., and Sen. Edmund S. Muskie, D-Maine, said Carter agreed at a meeting

Thursday that the deficit should be reduced.

The House had projected a $57.9 billion deficit, the Senate $55.6 billion. With the scaled-down tax cut, the chairmen said, the red ink figure could be reduced below these levels. The conference committee was to continue work Monday.

Kreps On Tax Cut

PINEHURST, N.C. (AP) — On the same day President Carter was scaling down his $24-billion tax-cut proposal, his commerce secretary, Juanita Kreps, told North Carolina bankers that "this is no time to waffle on a major tax cut."

Mrs. Kreps, speaking Friday to the annual three-day convention of the North Carolina Bankers Association here, said "the consumer needs the cut, business needs the consumer and the recovery needs both."

The former Duke University economics professor also said a "substantial tax cut and progress against inflation are compatible objectives."

Soviets Refuse U.S. Plea

WASHINGTON (AP) — The State Department and scores of congressmen have pleaded with Soviet authorities to allow 7-month-old Jessica Katz to come to the United States for life saving treatments not available in Russia.

But so far the pleas have been to no avail.

Jessica, who lives in Moscow, suffers from a rare condition known as malabsorption syndrome. American doctors say her system cannot digest the nutrients needed for growth and life.

Jessica is Jewish and Soviet authorities have refused to allow her and her parents, Boris and Natalya Katz, to come to the United States where doctors have developed treatments for the disease.

Settlement With TVA Reached

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — A settlement has been reached between the Tennessee Valley Authority and one of three firms it sued over delays in completion of the Raccoon Mountain Pumped Storage Plant in Chattanooga.

Charles Wagner, a TVA attorney, said Friday details of the settlement with the Allis-Chalmers Corp. still have to be hammered out Monday before it can be approved by the government utility's board of directors Wednesday.

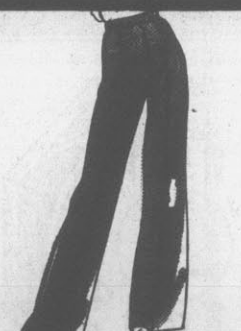

TVA sued Allis-Chalmers, Luken Steel Co. and U.S. Steel Co. in federal court in Chattanooga last February over delays in completing the $310 million plant.

Explanation Not Satisfactory

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — China is not satisfied with the Soviet explanation of the intrusion by Soviet soldiers into northeast China, the Yugoslav news agency Tanjug reported from Peking today.

"The Soviet explanation does not reflect reality. We are not satisfied," the agency quoted a Chinese foreign ministry official as saying.

Two days ago Yu Chan, the deputy Chinese foreign minister, presented the Soviet Embassy in Peking a sharp note protesting "the intended military provocation" on Tuesday along the Ussuri River, which forms the Soviet-Chinese border about 1,000 miles northeast of Peking.

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Teachers and state employees, united in seeking a 10-percent cost-of-living pay raise this year, will face a legislature later this month that appears determined to limit that increase to 6 percent.

Top legislative leaders who put together the Advisory Budget Commission proposal for fiscal 1978-79 say the 6-percent figure provided in it is firm.

"I think 10 percent is probably a little bit high," said Rep. Ed Holmes, D-Chatham, chairman of the House Appropriations Committee and a member of the budget commission. "I think they deserve it. But with all the other deserving needs, we just can't afford it."

"A compromise could turn out in the 6-percent range," said Sen. Harold Hardison, D-Lenoir, chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee.

Gov. Jim Hunt has already gone on record against a 10-percent increase, citing other state budget needs and President Carter's urging that salary increases be kept below inflationary levels.

State budget analysts figure that every percentage point of increase will cost taxpayers about $18 million. John Williams, state budget officer, is predicting this year's revenue surplus will amount to something over $200 million.

"If you give them 10 percent, it'll take $180 million, and you can just forget doing anything else," said one legislator who asked not to be named because the budget has not been released.

The lobbyists note that inflation is estimated to be 6.6 percent for this fiscal year by the time it ends in July. They contend an increase of greater than that amount is needed because no increase was granted in 1975, when state revenues ran short.

Last year's legislative session granted a 6 1/2-percent increase, and the year before that teachers and state workers got a combination of 4 percent plus $300.

But there is also evidence that leaders of those groups, while keeping up their request for the larger amount, are becoming resigned to 6 percent.

"We'll be glad to take anything we can get," said Lloyd Issacs, incoming executive secretary of the N.C. Association of Educators, which represents teachers, principals and school superintendents. He added that his group is also asking for 10 percent.

"It's really not all that bad," said another lobbyist.

And still another member of the Advisory Budget Commission, asking not to be named, confided last week. "Their folks have told us themselves that 6 percent is all they're really after now."

Whatever figure the General Assembly decides on, many employees and teachers are likely to eventually receive more than that.

Already figured into the budget are increases for merit — with enough money for as many as two-thirds on the payroll — and additional "longevity" increases for those with over 10 years of service.

The merit increases amount to pay hikes of roughly 4 or 5 percent, according to Linda Powell, legislative fiscal analyst. They are granted in yearly increments for up to seven years of service.

Longevity pay translates to increases of roughly 1 1/2 percent, she said, and goes to all employees after 10 years of service. An employee could thus receive a cost-of-living raise, a merit increase and longevity pay, for a total increase of 12 percent or more.

"It's a rare employee that'll just get a 6 percent raise," said Hunt's press secretary, Gary Pearce.

Attended Council

Fifteen area high school students participated in Youth Involvement activities Wednesday, May 10 in Raleigh.

The students took over the jobs of key state government officials and spent the day serving in the positions. The "real" directors and department heads worked alongside the students performing activities of a normal work day.

This was the fifth annual Youth Involvement Day sponsored by the N. C. State Youth Council of the Youth Involvement Office Department of Administration. Open to all youths in the state age 14-19, the program's purpose is to teach students about how government works and also to keep government officials in touch with the opinions of today's youth.

Trial Set For Sophia, Ava

ROME (UPI) — An Italian court Saturday set a June 24 trial date for actress Sophia Loren, her husband Carlo Ponti and film stars Ava Gardner and Richard Harris on charges of illegally exporting cash and valuable art works from the country.

The court took the action on the request of state prosecutor Paolino dell'Anno, who last month charged the four and almost two dozen others with financial misdealings and tax evasion.

Miss Loren is accused of illegally exporting art works worth an estimated $3.45 million and maintaining bank accounts abroad without declaring them to Italian tax officials.

The charges against Ponti, Miss Loren, Harris and Miss Gardner carry a possible penalty of one to six years in prison on conviction.

Members of the Echinoderm family include the sea urchin, the starfish and the brittle star. The word "echinoderm" is a Greek term which means "prickle-skinned."

Three Named To N. C. Mental Health Council

Three area residents have been named to the N. C. Mental Health Advisory Council, Governor Jim Hunt announced Thursday.

Rebie W. Crandol, Myree Dunn Hayes and Dr. Philip Groesbeck Nelson, who was named chairperson of the council, will be part of the 35 member group that works with the Division of Mental Health and Mental Retardation Services on state mental health plans and sees that the division meets federal guidelines.

Crandol, presently a counselor at North Pitt High School, received her bachelor's degree from St. Augustine's College and her master's degree from North Carolina Central in Durham. She has also attended Penn State University, the University of Maryland and East Carolina University.

Hayes is an assistant professor of psychology at ECU. She received two master's degrees from ECU, one in education and one in clinical psychology. She did postgraduate work at Duke University.

Dr. Nelson received his medical doctor degree from Catholic University of Louvain in 1954, having previously attended Princeton University. He served in the American Field Service and the American Red Cross during World War II. He is presently associate clinical professor for the ECU School of Medicine.

Guerrillas Bomb Station

TOKYO (UPI) — A band of urban guerrillas firebombed a communications station near Tokyo's controversial new international airport Saturday despite the presence of 8,000 policemen at the unopened facility.

The group of six or seven men overpowered a guard at the radio relay station by throwing insecticide into his small guardhouse.

Airport officials said the sabotage would not have affected aircraft landing even if the airport had been open because standby transmitters were working.

The transmitter was quickly repaired.

Earlier Saturday, Japanese police increased bodyguards for cabinet ministers and announced they would seize 36 buildings controlled by urban guerrillas in preparation for the airport's opening.

National Police Director Seitaro Asanuma said the measures were part of a new policy of "mobile warfare" against the radicals, who have delayed the opening of the airport at Narita for several years.

They stormed the control tower in mid-March, smashing up computer equipment with axes to postpone a scheduled March 20 opening.

The government of Prime Minister Takeo Fukuda later set May 20 for dedication of the $2.5 billion terminal 41 miles northeast of Tokyo. The guerrillas swore to keep the facility closed.

Emergency legislation allowing police to seize any leftist-controlled building within 1.87 miles of the airport was hurriedly passed by parliament Friday.

Radical organizations control an estimated 36 structures — ranging from crude huts to the three-story concrete "Fortress No. 1" near the south end of the runway — in a security zone around the airport.

Most are built on the lands of farmers opposed to the facility and have been used as living quarters, hospitals and weapons factories, officials say.

A special task force of 450 officers searched 13 of the buildings Friday and a police spokesman said they would begin seizing all of them Sunday.

They also said they were increasing security for government ministers to guard against possible terrorist assassinations or kidnappings as the date of the official opening drew near.

Seven guards were assigned to Transportation Minister Kenji Fukunaga, the man directly in charge of airport operations. He previously was protected by two detectives.

15-Cent Stamps In Short Supply

TWO-CENT POSTAL INCREASE — The postal Rate Commission on Friday in Washington threw out President Carter's suggestion that private individuals be spared the next postal rate increase, and cleared the way for a new, 15-cent postage stamp for first-class mail. It will be the fifth increase in postal rates in 10 years. Pictured are stamps of different rates from 1967 through a 15-cent stamp of today. At top is a 1967 space walks set at a five-cent rate. Second from top, six and eight-cent stamps, one commemorating Apollo 8 from 1968 and the other an American flag issue, from 1971. In 1974 stamps celebrating the Bicentennial era carried a ten-cent rate. A three-cent postal increase brought about the issue of the Liberty Bell 13-cent stamp. At bottom right is a current 15-cent issue of Oliver Wendell Holmes. (AP Laserphoto)

By JEFFREY MILLS
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — You had better stock up now on 15-cent stamps — the Postal Service says its present inventory amounts to just over 1 percent of one day's supply.

The Postal Rate Commission on Friday recommended a 15-cent rate for first-class letters, and the Postal Service is expected to put it into effect on either May 28 or June 4.

But postal officials had anticipated approval of a 16-cent rate for businesses, who send most of the mail, and 13 cents for private individuals. So, the Postal Service printed hundreds of millions of 16-cent stamps.

According to Postal Service figures, there are 650 million 16-cent stamps on inventory, but only five million 15-cent stamps. Mailers use about 400 million stamps at the first class rate daily.

"The 15-cent stamps are not going to last long," said John Jay Daly, a Washington consultant who advises businesses on postal matters. "Anybody who wants them should buy them now."

After they're gone, you'll have to buy two different types of stamps to use together, such as a 13-cent and a 2-cent stamp or a 10-cent and a 5-cent stamp.

Don McDowell, director of stamp development for the Postal Service, said Friday that plans on stamp production in view of the commission's decision are still being formulated. One option is to issue a stamp with no price on it. McDowell declined to comment on whether such a stamp is already being produced.

Already available, though in small quantities, is a 15-cent stamp bearing a picture of famous jurist Oliver Wendell Holmes.

Soviets Convinced There's A Sasquatch

VANCOUVER, British Columbia (UPI) — Criticizing their Western colleagues for harboring doubts about the legendary Sasquatch, two Soviet scientists say they are convinced the hairy, seven-foot ape-man exists.

"That there is a Sasquatch is as valid and obligatory to us as the fact that the world is round," wrote Dimitri Bayanov and Igor Bourtsev of Moscow's Darwin Museum in a paper delivered Friday at a conference on the creature at the University of British Columbia.

Bayanov and Bourtsev were unable to attend, but sent a 60-page paper in which they said they believe film and footprint evidence of a Sasquatch encounter at Bluff Creek in Northern California is authentic.

The 1967 film was made by Roger Patterson and Robert Gimlin, who were in the mountains hunting for the creature, also known as Bigfoot. It purports to show a seven-foot female Sasquatch that left 14½-inch footprints.

Agriculture To The Rescue Of N.C. Art

By LORI COOKE
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — At first glance, North Carolina's arts and agriculture might seem to have little in common.

But when North Carolina Museum of Art Conservator Cathy Leach was looking for a way to store the museum's collection of French and Flemish tapestries, agricultural technology came to the rescue.

Engineers at the Engineering Research Institute at North Carolina State University immediately thought of agricultural irrigation pipe as a great medium to wrap the tapestries around.

Ms. Leach said the tapestries must be stored because there isn't enough room in the present building to display all of them. They can't be exhibited constantly anyway, she said, because light fades them and eventually breaks down the fibers.

The collections of 17th century Flemish Brussels tapestries and 18th century French Gobel hangings are valued in the tens of thousands of dollars, according to Ms. Leach.

They're handmade of linen, wool and silk. The Flemish tapestries depict scenes from the Trojan Wars, which the French show what Ms. Leach described as "French Rococo scenes of aristocratic life — pastoral things like people picking cherries, birds nesting, that sort of thing."

For the past few years, they have been rolled up and piled on shelves when they weren't on exhibit. Storing them that way can mean that creases and folds in the material eventually get set in the tapestry, Ms. Leach said.

At the Engineering Research Institute, which specializes in manufacturing prototype scientific instruments, Dr. Robert Stoops and graduate student Wade Griffin provided 12-foot long aluminum irrigation pipes, the largest four inches in diameter, with supports at each end to hold them six feet off the ground.

The tapestries, which are 12 feet high and between five and 20 feet wide, are then rolled very tightly around the pipes — "there's a knack to it," Ms. Leach explained — and can be stored safely and conveniently.

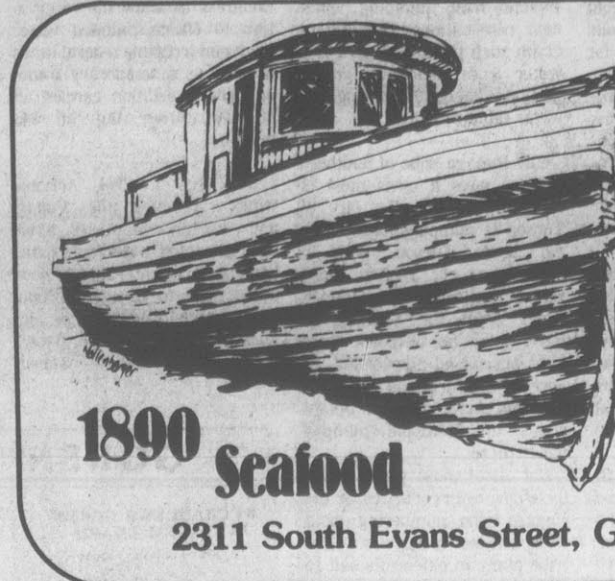

The pipe method of storage also means the tapestries can be moved very easily — an important point since the museum hopes to move into a new building by 1980.

Ms. Leach said she thought about trying cardboard, plastic and carpet tubes before she searched through the North Carolina State directory looking for someone who sounded like they could help. As it turned out, she said, she found the right people the first time.

Water Rights Pose Problems

By HERB SURRETT
PHOENIX, Ariz. (UPI) — It might be hard to convince a Southern Arizona housewife that a rare desert fish in Nevada has a direct bearing on whether she will always have water for her flowers.

There may come a time when that housewife won't be able to afford water for such "luxuries," because the water doesn't belong to her and her fellow urban dwellers. Her drinking water will probably be purchased from a neighboring Indian tribe.

Indians are claiming rights to most of the water in the arid Southwest, and their claims have generally been upheld in the courts.

The gravity of the problem was underscored by former Arizona Gov. Raul Castro last year when he predicted Arizonans "will be buying water from the Indians" within 5 to 10 years. He said the state must realize that Indian water rights are prior legal rights backed by the federal government through a number of court rulings dating back to 1908.

The ramifications of the Indian water rights controversy are staggering.

Similar disputes are in progress in nearly every Western state. And federal legal authorities believe the time will come when some Eastern tribes will lay claim to waters now used exclusively by non-Indians.

The primary case delineating the rights of Indian tribes to water was Winters v. United States in 1908. It established the principle that when the United States reserved a tract of land adjoining a river for the benefit of a tribe of Indians, it necessarily reserved the right to water the Indians would require in future years for development of the reservation.

The Winters decision specifically gave Indian claims priority over those of non-Indians who might have appropriated the water beforehand, and use of the water was not limited to agricultural development.

Although the Winters case applied to surface waters, the Indian rights to underground water also have been affirmed indirectly in another case. That's where the rare desert pupfish in Devil's Hole National Monument swims into the picture.

The late President Harry S. Truman issued an executive order setting aside the Devil's Hole area to protect the unique and endangered pupfish. An injunction later was obtained to prevent nearby ranchers from pumping groundwater and lowering the level of the lake where the pupfish lived.

The U.S. Supreme Court, in Cappaert v. United States, subsequently upheld that injunction. It said that "since the implied reservation of water doctrine (Winters) is based on the necessity of water for the purpose of the federal reservation, we hold that the United States can protect its water from subsequent diversion, whether the diversion is of surface or groundwater."

This ruling, in effect, extended reservation Indian water rights to groundwater, with the result that some Arizona tribes are now suing to prevent non-Indians from pumping water near reservations. The Indians claim such pumping is drawing water from their own underground supplies, lowering the water table drastically.

The Papago tribe of Southern Arizona says it owns most of the water which the city of Tucson is pumping for municipal uses. Tucson, with a population of 300,000, once relied entirely on pumped water from the Santa Cruz River basin, but in recent years has purchased thousands of acres of farmland in the adjacent Avra Valley to obtain rights to additional pumped water there.

But all of those water rights have now been contested by the Papago tribe, numbering about 9,000 on the reservation. The tribe plans to extend its suit to other areas.

Realizing the Papago claims could be upheld, Tucson interests, state and federal governments, and numerous other parties are attempting to negotiate a settlement.

The Ak Chin Indian Community near Phoenix has contested the pumping of water on adjacent non-Indian lands. Bills have been introduced in Congress to allow the reservation to obtain pumped water from non-irrigable federal lands nearby, as a temporary trade-off. The legislation carries an ultimate price tag of $43 million.

The five Central Arizona tribes, including the Papag and Ak Chin community, have been allocated water under the Central Arizona Project now being built to bring Colorado River water to the Phoenix and Tucson areas. But the tribes claim they were short-changed and have vowed to pursue their claims to water that supplies most of the state's population in the Phoenix and Tucson areas, as well as most of the agricultural lands.

Some tribes have never had any water rights adjudicated. They include the huge Navajo reservation which borders or straddles hundreds of miles of the Colorado and its tributaries. The Navajos contend that under the Winters doctrine, they could be entitled to millions of acre-feet of water from the Colorado, perhaps even as much as the river delivers to the Lower Basin states of Arizona, California and Nevada.

GACOC Drive Tops Goal

The Membership Committee of the Greenville Area Chamber of Commerce exceeded its goal to recruit 78 new members during its Membership Blitz Day Wednesday when 96 new members were recruited.

According to Larkin Little, executive vice president of Home Savings and Loan and membership committee chairman for the Chamber, the new 96 members bring the Chamber's total to 711.

Eighteen volunteer GACC members worked all Wednesday recruiting new members. They called on prospective members, issued information about the Chamber, and then took members to the Chamber office where they met the staff, toured the building, and were interviewed by WNCT radio.

The top three salesmen and their prizes were: Larkin Little, top salesman, $100 gift certificate; Don Collier, second place, $75 gift certificate; Anne Duffus, third place, $50 gift certificate.

A special "Chamber Pot" was given to low salesman, John Grier, Grier Rental Agency.

Other volunteer members were as follows: Brenda Abbott, Bank of North Carolina, N. INAUGURAL USE — The ceremonial mace shown above, nearly four feet long and weighing about 16 pounds, of which 13 pounds is sterling silver, will be used for the first time today to lead the academic procession for the 86th graduation ceremony at UNC-Greensboro. The mace, featuring the state seal and the university's seal, is a gift to the university from the graduating class of 1926.

Dr. Gibbs To Be Honored

GREENSBORO — Dr. War-mouth T. Gibbs, president emeritus of A&T State University, now living in Greensboro, will be honored in Fort Des Moines, Iowa, as one of the two survivors of the first trained groups of black Army officers serving in World War I.

Gibbs, now 85, recalled "There had been a few black officers in the Civil War and the Spanish American War, but the experience at Fort Des Moines was the first time that blacks were trained as a group to be officers."

A native of Baldwin, La., Gibbs took an examination while he was a student at Harvard University in 1916 to get into the officers' training program. Records indicate that some 600 black officers were trained at the fort beginning June 15, 1916.

Gibbs took his final exams at Harvard early and entered the officers training in April, 1917. "Even though the Army was segregated, Gibbs comments "I was willing to go. We, the black officers, felt that we had lots of reasons to go."

After receiving his commission, Gibbs was assigned to train enlisted men at Camp Upton, Long Island, New York.

In 1918 he went to France with the predominantly black 82nd Battalion. Gibbs and his unit saw battle in Argonne Forest and Alsace Lorraine, before returning to the states in 1919.

Out of service, Gibbs returned to Harvard for added degrees before coming to A&T as a teacher in 1926. In 1956 he succeeded Dr. F. B. Bluford as president of the school, and retired in 1960.

Dr. Gibbs will be honored, along with others who served in those early years, with a monument to be erected at Fort Des Moines, and by a display at the Iowa State Museum. The projects are being sponsored by the Tau Eta Chapter of the Omega Psi Phi Fraternity.

Pitt County Grads At N.C. State U.

Seventeen area graduates of North Carolina State University received their degrees in the largest commencement exercise held in the history of the University on Saturday, May 13.

More than 3,200 students were awarded degrees by Chancellor Joab L. Thomas. The commencement address was given by Roy H. Park, radio, TV and newspaper entrepreneur from Ithaca, New York, and a 1931 alumnus of N.C. State.

Those receiving degrees from Pitt County include the following:

Scarecrows Scarce

BOSTON (UPI) — They have become an endangered species — a part of our heritage that over the years has slowly disappeared from the farms and gardens along the backroads of New England's towns and villages.

They are victims of modern times, a voiceless minority harking back to a less sophisticated age when they played a vital role in the life of the American farmer.

Scarecrows. There just are not many left in New England anymore.

In towns where scarecrows once stood sentinel in every cornfield and vegetable patch, today only a handful remain. No, each spring, fewer and fewer scarecrows can be seen.

They are a controversial character — praised by some, laughed at by others, but always humble in appearance as they stand uncomfortably perched in the middle of a field under a hot sun, doing a chore no ordinary farmhand would welcome.

"I can't deny that they are a vanishing breed. I can remember that it wasn't long ago, when it seemed that just about every other field in town had a scarecrow. I guess it was just part of the way things used to be around here in the old days," said Mrs. Hollis Magoon of Fremont, N.H.

The Magoon farm, off Rte. 111, which passes through a small town of less than 1,000 inhabitants, is one of the few farms in the area which still "employs" a scarecrow to stand guard over the crops.

"I really can't understand why they are disappearing," says Irving Potter, a farmer in Berwick, Maine. "I've always used one and I can say truthfully they've always done the job for me. Sure, sometimes you get birds like the red-wing blackbird, who won't pay as much attention to the scarecrows. But hell, they don't always pay attention to me."

"I think one of the reasons people have gotten away from scarecrows is that they have found that most birds are smarter than you think and it won't take them long to get used to the scarecrow," said Professor Robert Young of the University of Massachusetts College of Food and Natural Resources.

But Thomas Lane, who works a small field across from his uncle's farm on Rte. 4 in Billerica, Mass., says the scarecrow is as good a method as any.

"When those crows go after the crop, you've got to do whatever has to be done. We tried using chemicals and soaking the seeds in oil, but we still couldn't keep the birds away. You might not believe it, but we haven't had any problems since the scarecrow took over."

Like so much American folklore, the scarecrow's history is intertwined with fact and legend.

The practice was common in England and other European countries before the time of the colonists. In fact, the scarecrow is referred to in the pages of William Shakespeare's Henry the IV, which dates back sometime around the 16th century.

The actual origin of the scarecrow is believed to have come down through the ages from the time of early Greek mythology, when the scarecrow was worshipped as the God of the field and protector of crops.

Historians trace the scarecrow back to well before the time of Christ, where in the Greek village of Lampsacus, Mysia, the scarecrow was believed to have had divine qualities because of its ability to keep birds and other creatures away from the crops.

But it was the early American colonists who introduced to our culture the scarecrow as we know it today.

Over the years farmers have believed the most effective scarecrows are those which are as lifelike as possible — those which actually appear to be a man or woman busy at work in the middle of a field.

But studies of various birds show that in truth, it doesn't really matter how realistic that scarecrow looks.

"You could have the most elaborate scarecrow in the world," said James Baird, director of the natural history department at the Massachusetts Audubon Society, "but as soon as the birds catch on to him, that scarecrow might as well not be standing out there at all."

TAR HEEL BANDELEADER — Rocky Mount's Bo Thorpe, bandleader of Bo Thorpe and his new Generation II Orchestra, will broadcast live on television from the Ed Sullivan Theater in New York City on May 20. The orchestra will be featured throughout the five hour, prime time extravaganza on the program "Danny Thomas and His Friends." The band is now playing a two week engagement at the Riverboat in New York City.

Rose High Choral Concert Thursday

Two staged choruses from Scott Joplin's opera "Tremonisha" are to be the featured music on the Spring Concert to be presented by the choral department of Rose High School on Thursday, May 18 at the Rose High gym.

The concert, with performers from the Advanced Ensemble, the Concert Choir and the Girls Glee Club, is under the direction of Patricia Hiss. Members of the Stage Band directed by James Rodgers will accompany the singers. Soloists are Debbie Joyner, assisted by Lavine Smith and Crystal Barnes.

Another part of the program will be performances by a Renaissance group for three pieces for recorders and percussion played by members of the Advanced Ensemble. Henrietta Smith, Angela Morris and Barbara Wheeler will be the echo trio in Di Lasso's "Echo Song."

Special accompaniment for J. S. Bach's "Wir Eilen mit Schwachen doch emsigen Schritten" will be provided by Linda Davis, piano and James Kittrell, cello.

Other selections on the program will include "Beautiful Savior" with soloist Cornelius Satterwhite, "The Way We Were," and "It's A Grand Night For Singing." and the public is invited and encouraged to bring children.

Annual String Camp Scheduled June 12-13

The annual String Camp sponsored by the School of Music, East Carolina University, has been set for the period June 12-23.

A comprehensive curriculum of music instruction is being offered. This includes orchestra, music theory, sight-singing and ear-training, music literature, class piano, and violin and chamber music performance. The String Camp faculty is drawn from the regular faculty of the School of Music from those specializing in music education for the young.

Camp directors are Dr. Rodney Schmidt and Dr. Rosalie Haritun.

The camp is open to children from kindergarten through the ninth grade, including those without prior musical instruction. Emphasis is placed on learning to hear and sing musical pitch, basic concepts of aural and visual relationships, reading music proficiently, learning complicated rhythmic structures, music fundamentals, simple music composition and instruction on individual string instruments.

Further information on the camp and application forms are available at the School of Music, East Carolina University. Deadline for application is May 30.

Hollerin' Contest

Humans imitating frog croakin' is the "in" thing this year for the 1978 annual National Hollerin' Contest to be held in Spivey's Corner.

The contest takes place on Saturday, June 17, with the First Annual Frog Craokin' Contest being one of the featured events of the day.

Other events will be the regular Hollerin' Contest, a Ladies Callin' Contest, a Junior Hollerin' Contest, a conch shell and Fog Horn Blowin' Contest, and a Whistlin' Contest.

Also of interest is the Third "Ham Holler-In" known as WATCH (We Are The Community Helpers).

All events will be held on the football field at Midway High School, Spivey's Corner. A gospel sing at 8 p.m. will conclude the day's activities.

Persons interested in competing are to write to: Ermon Godwin, President, National Hollerin' Contest, First Citizens Bank and Trust Co., Dunn, 28334.

Kinston Arts Festival May 19-20

KINSTON — The annual Kinston Spring Arts Festival has been announced for Friday and Saturday, May 19 and 20 at the Kinston Art Center.

Professional and amateur artists and craftsmen are invited to submit works in oil and acrylics, watercolor and pastel, drawing and graphics, mixed media, photography, weaving and handmade pottery.

Over $1,500 will be awarded prize winner, including the best in show award. In addition to prizes, several purchase awards are to be made by Lenoir County businesses and individuals.

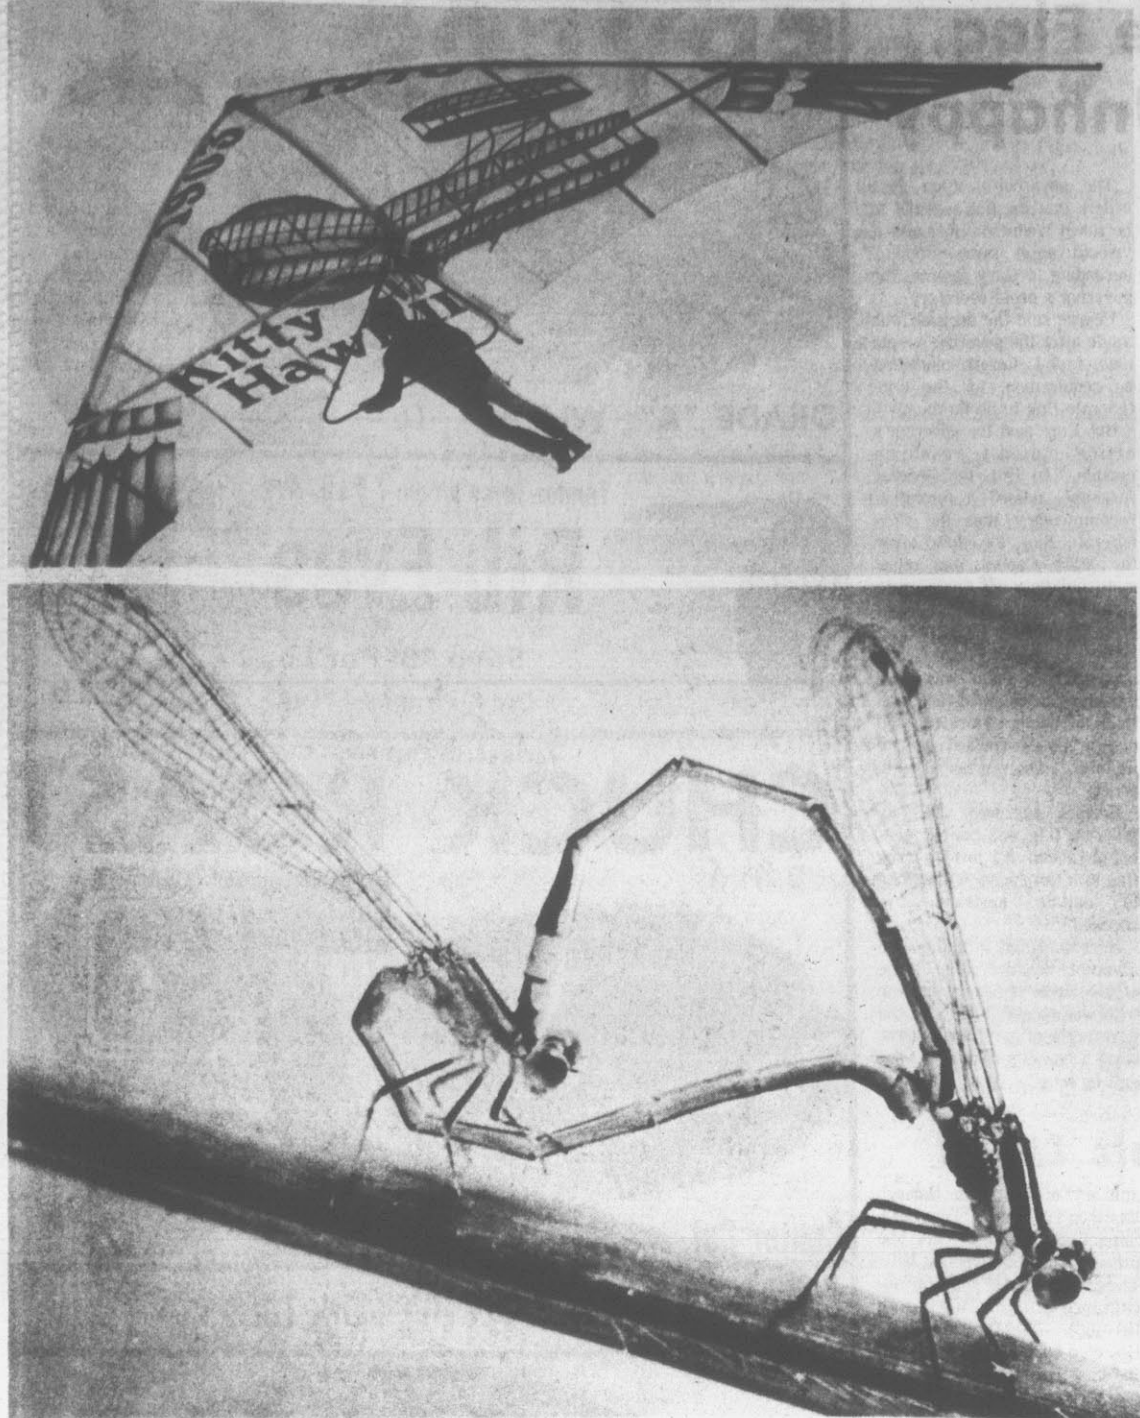

Entries will be received at the Art Center from noon until 9 p.m. on Thursday, May 18. A maximum of three works may be entered upon payment of a $5.00 entry fee. Only original work completed within the last two years and not previously shown in a Springs Arts Festival will be accepted. Paintings must be dry, framed or stripped and ready to hang. Graphics, drawings, watercolors and photography must be matted and framed or protected with acetate and be ready for hanging.

Judges for the show will be Norbert W. Irvine, Associate Professor of Art, Atlantic Christian College, Wilson; Sara Edmiston, chairman, Design Department, East Carolina University School of Art; and Bob Mitchell, professional photographer of Raleigh.

Reception

A reception is being held from 3 to 5 p.m. today at the Greenville Art Center honoring a new student show, that of Pitt County Schools students of kindergarten through the eighth grade. The public is invited.

The Kinston Art Center is located at 111 E. Caswell Street in downtown Kinston. This year the festival is being sponsored by "The Kinston Daily Free Press" newspaper, the Downtown Kinston Association and the Community Council for the Arts.

THE TRANSPARENCY OF WINGS — The gauzy, delicate beauty of wings is evident in both man-made and nature's gift of wings. In the top photo, John Harris practices for a demonstration of an engine-powered glider, "Kitty Hawk II," he will fly this weekend in observance of the 75th anniversary of the Wright brothers' first successful flight. The event is the Nags Head Hang Gliding Spectacular. In the bottom photo, two Narrow Winged Damselflies form an almost heart shaped pattern as they carry out one of nature's functions of laying eggs. The pair was photographed in the Florida Everglades. Estate Given To State HALIFAX — The Ivey Hill Home Place, a historic estate in Halifax County, was donated on Monday, May 8 to the state of North Carolina by its present owner, Champion International Corporation.

The ceremony transferring the property took place at the home place on the Ivey Hill property. Sara W. Hodgkins, secretary of the N. C. Dept. of Cultural Resources, said the state will act to assure its rehabilitation and preservation.

Ivey Hill, also called the Matthews Place, is near Medoc State Park in Halifax County. The home place actually consists of two structures. The first, built around 1800, is in late Georgian style. The second is a Greek Revival sidehall addition, built around 1847.

According to documents, the home was "probably built for Isham Matthews and his son Thomas."

Most historic properties acquired by the state in the past have been converted into state

Tarboro Event May 21

TARBORO — Sunday, May 21, from 2 to 5 p.m. is the date and time of the annual artists and craftsmen show on the historic Town Common in Tarboro.

Known as "The Happening," the annual event is sponsored each year by the Friends of the Edgecombe County Library and the Tarboro Recreation Department.

A festival that draws bigger numbers of visitors each year, the 1977 festival had over 125 artists and craftsmen from eastern North Carolina and attracted over 10,000 persons.

In addition to arts and crafts, there will be three hours of non-stop entertainment by various eastern North Carolina musicians, dancers and dramatists.

The Tarboro Town Common, established in 1760, is one of the finest in the South, shaded by two-century old oaks and with a long open space carpeted in grass.

Book News

FROM SHEPPARD MEMORIAL LIBRARY

By WILLIE MAE GIBBS

James Haskins, author of more than 20 books for adults and young adults, has chosen the complex Barbara Jordan as the subject of his most recent book. Ms. Jordan, a woman used to making history, has been the first black woman to become a Texas State Senator, the first black woman to represent a southern state in the House of Representatives, and the only black woman to sit on the House Judiciary Committee during impeachment proceedings against a president. As the first woman and the first black to give the keynote address, Ms. Jordan electrified the 1976 Democratic National Convention and millions of television viewers with her inspiring words and commanding presence. Her powerful intellect and personality—the subject of intense speculation among journalists and other Washington-watchers—has made her a political force to be reckoned with. BARBARA JORDAN, by James Haskins is a fascinating up-to-the-minute account of her short but spectacular career. Based on interviews with relatives, friends, and colleagues, it is a penetrating study of the fast-rising political figure who has captured the attention of the American public.

In a biography called PRINCE AMONG SLAVES, Terry Alford tells the incredible story of Ibrahima. Born in 1762, to Sori, King of the Fulbe, Ibrahima spent the first 26 years of his life as royalty before being captured and sold into slavery in Mississippi. As a slave was nicknamed "Prince" by his master of 19 years because of the unlikely story he tells about his royal heritage. When his story is substantiated by a white man, Ibrahima embarks on a difficult and fascinating struggle to regain his freedom. PRINCE AMONG SLAVES, written and researched over a period of seven years, traces Ibrahima's life from his birth, to his capture and trip across the Atlantic in a British slaver, to his years as a slave and his determined fight to regain his freedom. More than the biography of Ibrahima, Prince of the Fulbe, Alford's book is a close study of American slavery, and one man's extraordinary triumph over it.

A new book called THE STARS AND SUPERSTARS OF BLACK MUSIC spotlights the greatest black stars in rock from Fats Domino to the Stylistics, from rock and roll to Philly Sound, from Aretha Franklin to the Pointer Sisters, from Stevie Wonder to the Jackson 5. It tells their stories, shows the contributions they have made to a developing music form and chronicles the history of the labels that encouraged their rise. Produced by Jeremy Pascall and Rob Burt, this book includes a roll-call of creators, innovators and artists who have made black music preminent.

Creative Writing Workshop Set

ST SIMONS ISLAND, GA. — Dates have been announced for the 18th annual Creative Writing and Inspirational Workshop of the Dixie Council of Authors and Journalists, Inc for 1978.

The workshop this year will be June 11 to 18 in Epworth-by-the-Sea on St. Simons Island on the coast of Georgia. Harold R. Random is director. Classes are scheduled daily Monday through Saturday from 8:15 a.m. to 12:15 and again from 1:15 to 2:30 p.m. Recreation tours, beach trips and similar events will be held from 3 to 5 p.m. daily; and 7:30 to 9 p.m. will be devoted to evening sessions, panels, and special events. Evening sessions are open to enrollees and to visitors without charge.

For those attending classes, there is a tuition fee of $55 for the week on a full time basis, or $9.25 per day for part time or day students.

Writers conducting daily classes will be: Dr. Dozier Cade, journalism. Dr. Cade is Director of the School of Journalism, University of Tennessee; Ruth Tucker Herbert, author of a mystery novel, fiction; Doris Buchanan Smith, author, juvenile writing; Dr. James C. Bryant, chairman of the Div. of Humanities, Mercer University, Atlanta, non-fiction; Edith Blicksilver, professor of Literature at Georgia Institute of Technology, technique and textbook publishing; Violet Moore, columnist for the "Macon Telegraph," feature writing; and Marel Brown, author and poet, inspirational writing.

Special programs participants will be: William J. Ahlfeld, banquet speaker; Jeanne Perkins Harman; Harry E. Harman, III; Celestine Sibley; and Richard A. Ray.

Other special participants covering various fields of writing, communications and publishing are: Herb Bridges, Frances Patton Statham, Dr. Ronald G. Killion, Nelle McFather, Rodney Random, Genevieve Holden Pou, David Ogletree, Josephine Millichamp, and Dr. Charles T. Waller.

Persons wanting additional information are to write to: Harold R. Random, Director, 4221 N. Shallowford Rd., No. 7, Chamblee, Georgia, 30341.

Welborn To Spoleto Festival

Jan Welborn, a graduate student in the School of Art, East Carolina University and a candidate for the MFA degree, has been selected to attend Spoleto Festival 1978 in Charleston as an apprentice in visual arts.

Welborn leaves for Charleston

May 18 and is scheduled to return to Greenville on June 15. Festival dates for the second annual Spoleto Festival in Charleston are May 25-June 11.

Founded by composer Gian Carlo Menotti as an expression of his personal appreciation for success in his career, the Spoleto Festival for 25 years was presented annually in the historic town of Spoleto, Italy. The festival involves music, drama, opera, dance, film ballet and the visual arts.

Last spring, the Festival added an American season, choosing Charleston from a number of cities considered for the event.

Associate Director

RALEIGH — Kenneth Martin Beam of Norfolk, Va., has been appointed associate director for administration of the N. C. Museum of Art. Prior to his appointment, he served as administrator of the Chrysler Museum, Norfolk.

No Confederate Flag, DAR Members Unhappy

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The United Daughters of the Confederacy are not happy about the fact that Gov. Jim Hunt's office decided not to fly the Confederate flag over the state Capitol on Confederate Memorial Day May 10.

One of the UDC leaders said the governor's office ignored both tradition and a legislative recommendation by not flying the flag.

And Secretary of State Thad Eure said Frances Hoffman, honorary president of the N.C. Division of the UDC, was right.

"When the General Assembly makes a recommendation, it means something," said Eure who had received a number of phone calls protesting the omission.

Traditionally, the flag has flown next to the Stars and Stripes on May 10 in honor of Confederate Memorial day. The day is the anniversary of General T.J. "Stonewall" Jackson's death. The day is a public holiday in North Carolina, but state employees do not get the day off.

The governor's office gave orders that the flag was not to be flown Wednesday because it "would upset some groups," according to Gary Pearce, the governor's press secretary.

Pearce said the decision was made after the governor's legal aide, Jack L. Cozort, could find no requirement for the Confederate flag to be flown.

But Eure said the governor's office "didn't research enough." In 1961, the General Assembly passed a resolution recommending that the Confederate flag "be flown over the state Capitol and other state buildings on Confederate Memorial Day and on other appropriate days."

Mrs. Hoffman's request had been refused only twice previously — once when the Capitol was being renovated, and once when the request went to an official who was not a southerner.

Besides, she said, the Confederate flag was "not a symbol of racism. It's just a sacred flag of a lost cause. It's nothing to agitate anybody. I'm shocked."

Eure said that in addition to a number of phone calls, "some of the sweet ladies visited me with watery eyes." He said the governor's office "didn't know what a hornet's nest they were getting into."

$35,000 For Love

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Millionaire sports magnate Fitz Eugene Dixon bought LOVE for $35,000.

Dixon, the Philadelphia 76ers owner who paid $3 million for Julius Erving and once purchased $1 million worth of flowers for his suburban Philadelphia estate, purchased the bicentennial sculpture LOVE Friday and gave it to Philadelphia.

The sculpture, a 10-foot stone pedestal topped with the letters L-O-V-E in enameled steel, put on loan to the city in 1976 and placed on John F. Kennedy Plaza — in the heart of the city, so to speak.

The administration of Mayor Frank L. Rizzo, however, decided it did not want to purchase the sculpture and it was loaded into a van Monday and taken back to the New York studio of sculptor Robert Indiana.

But it was evident almost immediately that many Philadelphians didn't want LOVE leaving town.

"From the time the story broke until its happy conclusion, Mayor Rizzo and I have been dealing with offers of help," said City Representative Joseph LaSala.

Dixon called LaSala Friday morning saying he would foot the bill.

LaSala said he contacted Rachel Chodorov, Indiana's agent, who told him the price was reduced from $45,000 to $35,000.

"I reduced the price by $10,000 because it was for the city," she said.

The Quaker Export Packaging Co. then donated its services to bring the sculpture back from New York. It is expected back on Kennedy Plaza sometime next week.

Trevino Squeezes Into Colonial Lead

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — It's a subdued Lee Trevino who is facing the possibility of another shootout with Tom Watson in Sunday's final round of the $200,000 Colonial National Invitation Golf Tournament.

"Playing here in front of all my family, all the kids, all my friends, you can't throw those temper tantrums like you do in Westchester or Worcester," Trevino said after a solid, 2-under-par 68 had lifted him into sole control of the third-round lead Saturday.

"It helps, gives you a lift, having all those people out there pulling for you," said Trevino, who has recently moved back to nearby Dallas, his original home. "But it kind of hurts, too. Everybody is out there yelling at you, 'hey, you got to start making those putts'."

"Sometimes I want to turn around and say, 'what the hell do you think I'm trying to do?'"

He had many opportunities Saturday, but couldn't get anything going until the run down the stretch. "I think I was trying to wish the ball in the hole," he said.

A couple of them found the cups on the 15th and 17th, lifting him in front of Steve Melnyk and setting up the potential of another duel with Watson, the man who beat him last week in Dallas. Tom was only three shots back after a 68.

"I'm still in the hunt," he said. "I'm hitting the ball better; actually pretty good. I'm making some mistakes, but I'm scrambling good enough to cover them. My bad shots aren't that bad. I could win, but I'd have to have a very good round to do it."

Trevino felt the same way.

"I'm going to have to shoot in the 60s to win," he said.

Trevino, who birdied two of his last four holes on the tough, unforgiving old Colonial Country Club course, had a 54-hole total of 202.

That was eight shots under par on the rose-bordered layout on the Trinity River and a single shot in front of Melnyk, who bogeyed the final hole to drop out of the lead for the first time in the tournament.

"I got just what I deserved, a five," said Melnyk, who pullhooked his drive on the 18th and finished with a round of par 70. "It doesn't make me happy and it kind of gives me a bad taste in the mouth, but that's exactly what I deserved."

He had a 203 total in the quest of his first title in eight long years of tour activity.

Jerry Heard, who started the hot, humid, sunny day in a tie for the lead with Melnyk, dropped back to 204, two shots off Trevino's pace, with a 71.

"I didn't putt well, but I played well enough not to take myself completely out of it," he said. "I'm still confident. I don't feel like it's a mistake for me to be in this position. I can still win."

Tom Watson, who claimed his third title of the year and the leading money-winning spot with his victory over Trevino last week, got in position with a 68 and a 205 total.

"I'm still in the hunt," said the gritty redhead, who won 1977 Player of the Year honors. "I like my position if I can shoot a good round tomorrow."

Tom Purtzer was next at 206.

Tied at 207 were Fuzzy Zoeller, Jerry Pate, Tom Kite and Danny Edwards. Zoeller, who has three eagles in as many days, made double-bogey 6 on the last hole for a 72. Edwards holed an approach shot for eagle 2 on the ninth and had 72. Kite shot 70 and Pate 71.

U.S. Open champ Hubert Green, a two-time winner this year, managed a 69-211. South African Gary Player, winner of three consecutive events earlier in the year, 4-putted the fourth green and had a 74-216.

Melnyk started birdie-bogey, saved par with an 18-footer on the fifth and got to one under for the day with another putt of about the same distance on the seventh.

"I'm kind of mad at myself," he said. "I had a very good chance to separate myself from the field. I had good birdie chances on the 11th through 14th holes, and didn't make any of them."

He had to make a pair of great saves from bunkers on the 16th and 17th, then bogeyed the last.

And while he was having his troubles coming home, Trevino was making his move to the happy encouragement of a vast, stampeding mob of fans.

"I think," Melnyk said dryly, "there may be a couple of Texans out there rooting for Trevino."

NBA Playoffs

Denver At Cliff's Edge

SEATTLE (AP) — Three straight defeats have pushed the Denver Nuggets to the edge of the cliff in the National Basketball Association playoffs. But it's the winning coach, Seattle's Lenny Wilkens, who thinks he has to explain himself.

"We don't have over-confidence. I'm tired of that suggestion," Wilkens said after the SuperSonics dispatched the Nuggets 100-94 Friday night to take a commanding 3-1 lead in their best-of-seven Western Conference championship series.

A victory Sunday in Game 5 in Denver would propel the Sonics into the NBA finals for the first time in their 11-year history.

Friday night, the Sonics played some of their best defensive basketball of the season in the second half in a comeback triumph.

"I don't think we've ever played a better two quarters," said Sonics center Marvin Webster. "To hold a team to 18 points in each quarter and 36 points in a half is tenacious defense."

"You know when you're down and the offense isn't going well, the coach says you can always play good defense and rebound. If you do that, eventually you can catch up."

That's exactly what Seattle did. Said Denver Coach Larry Brown: "They keep coming at you, hustling and rebounding all the time. And they are getting good bench support. You look down at our bench and we don't have some players that can give us offense."

"It's tough being down 3-1. If we play well on Sunday, I'll hope we'll be back here in Seattle (for a sixth game Wednesday night) ... The only thing I ask of this team is to work hard and try a little harder. You can't hope and wish shots in."

Seattle guard Dennis Johnson pumped in a career-high 31 points Friday night and did a yeoman's job on defense on the Nuggets' most dangerous weapon, David Thompson.

For 46 minutes the 6-foot-4 Johnson, a second-year pro from Pepperdine, confronted the 6-4 Thompson. By game's end, Thompson, Denver's leading scorer in the regular season, who entered Friday's game shooting just 39 percent in the series, had 21 points. But he hit just 10 of 27 shots and was held to only 8 points in the second half.

Johnson scored 11 points in the fourth period and Fred Brown, Seattle's designated gunner off the bench, scored all 11 of his points in the final quarter. It was the Sonics' 19th straight victory at home, including seven in the playoffs.

Sixers Break Promise

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The Philadelphia 76ers broke their promise.

After Portland won the National Basketball Association title last year, vanquished Philadelphia promised the fans, "We owe you one."

Now, thanks to the Washington Bullets who nipped the Sixers 101-99 Friday night in Game 6 of the best-of-seven NBA Eastern Conference championship series, the debt's up to two.

Philadelphia's dream of making up for last year's loss fell apart Friday night with Wes Unseld's tip-in with 12 seconds left.

So what happens now to the $2 million super-duper glitter team? "Yeah, I anticipate a major trade now. Basketball is a game people play to win," said Sixers' Lloyd Free after directing words of wrath to Friday night's referees.

"But I don't think this team could ever consider itself losers. People came to see us that never thought about seeing a basketball game," Free said.

When he fired Gene Shue and hired rookie coach Billy Cunningham early in the season, Sixers' owner F. Eugene Dixon said, "All I'm interested in are the results."

Two weeks ago on television he said: "I won't be disappointed if Portland doesn't reach the finals. I'll only be disappointed if we're not in the finals."

The fella who bankrolls Julius Erving and Company has got to be disappointed.

"I think if we had made it past this game, we'd have made it past Sunday, we'd have won the championship," said Pat Williams, the Sixers' general manager.

"We're like a guy who has learned to play golf, then learned to reach par, then learned to break par. All of a sudden we can't break par," Williams said.

Collins, who scored 29 of his 33 points in the first half, a team playoff record, offered this explanation: "Maybe the character of this team is such that things come too easy for us, and in the end that hurts us."

"It's like a rebounder who rebounds well because he's a great leaper, not because he plays position or blocks out. Maybe that applies to all of us, taking a shorter step, whatever, forgetting that you have to do it the right way if you're ever gonna get the most out of what you have."

"There's no magic switch, not even on a team with all the talent we have. You can't just turn it off, turn it on. Sometimes, if you think you can do that, it's the other team that's busy turning it on," Collins concluded.

Final Series Set

NEW YORK (AP) — If Seattle beats Denver Sunday, the SuperSonics will host the Washington Bullets Friday night in the opener of the National Basketball Association championships, the league said Saturday.

Seattle finished the regular season with a 47-35 record to Washington's 44-38, thus gaining a prospective home-court edge in the finals.

If the Sonics close out the series Sunday in Denver, they'll open the finals with home games Friday night, May 19 and Sunday, May 21. The third and fourth games would be in Washington Thursday night, May 25, and Sunday, May 28. The remaining three games, if necessary, will be played May 30 in Seattle, June 2 in Washington and June 4 in Seattle.

If Denver wins Sunday's game to remain alive in the Western finals, the championship round will begin Sunday, May 21.

Bosox Take First Place

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (AP)

— The Boston Red Sox almost fumbled their way out of a victory Saturday but instead ended up in sole possession of first place in the American League East.

Fred Lynn, who earlier had hit a solo home run, dropped Willie Norwood's fly in the eighth inning with the Red Sox ahead 3-2, then made a bad throw to the infield. But Jerry Remy's relay peg to Carlton Fisk got the streaking Norwood at the plate and helped preserve a 4-2 victory in the nationally televised game.

"It was just a bad play all the way around," admitted Lynn. "This one just went our way."

Norwood hit a high, wind-blown fly ball to center with one out in the eighth. He never hesitated rounding third after Lynn dropped the ball near the fence.

Lynn's throw was poor and Fisk said Remy's relay "wasn't the greatest, either," but it was good enough to nip Norwood at the plate.

"I was surprised he was coming, but I guess their third base coach (Karl Kuehl) decided to send him when he saw the bad throw by Freddie," said Fisk. "I didn't think we'd get him when I saw the throw, but I knew I had him when I made the tag."

Mike Torrez and Tom Burmeier combined to stop Minnesota on seven hits as the Red Sox posted their ninth triumph in 10 games.

Torrez, 5-1, was touched for a run in the first inning when Willie Norwood singled, stole second, took third on an infield out and scored on Rod Carew's double. The 31-year-old right-hander allowed just two hits over the next five innings before giving up a home run to Mike Cubbage in the seventh.

Torrez, who won his third straight game, struck out five batters and walked only one. He was relieved by Burmeier after giving up a leadoff single to Carew in the ninth.

Geoff Zahn, 2-2, gave up just five hits in eight innings and suffered the loss. He gave way to Tom Johnson in the ninth.

Boston took a 2-1 lead in the second inning on a run-scoring single by Butch Hobson and a bases-loaded walk to Rick Burleson. Lynn drilled a 420-foot homer to dead center to lead off the fourth and give the Red Sox a 3-1 lead.

The Twins narrowly missed tying the game in the eighth when Norwood was thrown out at home after hitting a long fly ball to center which Lynn dropped for an error. Lynn's throw was relayed by second baseman Jerry Remy to catcher Carlton Fisk in time to nip the sliding Norwood at the plate.

Boston got its final run in the ninth on singles by Fisk and Lynn, a walk to Dwight Evans and Bob Bailey's sacrifice fly.

Boston went ahead 2-1 in the second inning with the aid of an error by Twins shortstop Roy Smalley and Zahn's brief wildness.

Carl Yastrzemski led off with a pop fly double which dropped between three Minnesota defenders in shallow center field and reached third when Smalley booted Fisk's grounder. After Zahn walked Lynn, Hobson lined a single to left to score Yastrzemski and two outs later Burleson worked Zahn for a base on balls to force in Fisk.

Minnesota, which lost for the 17th time in its last 21 games, tried to rally in the ninth but was cut short by Boston's third double play.

Free Agent Stars Signed

By The Associated Press

The fishing season isn't even open in parts of the National Basketball Association free-agent pool, yet the stock is being rapidly depleted.

The recent signings of David Thompson by Denver, Scott Wedman by Kansas City and Campy Russell by Cleveland removed three of the most attractive names from a rather slim list of about 25 players becoming free agents this summer.

Marvin Webster, whose pivot play helped Seattle knock out defending champion Portland on its way into the playoff semifinals, is the most attractive player on the list. He's a young, agile, 7-foot-1 intimidator around whom a club can build. The New York Knicks, among others, are known to be interested.

Webster will not become a free agent until his team completes the playoffs, so any formal contact before then could be construed as tampering. In any case, Sonics owner Sam Schulman, basking in his team's success, recognizes that Webster has been a major factor in that success and is not going to let him go without a fight.

"I'm worth $40 million," said the exuberant Schulman. "If it's a matter of money, nobody is going to outbid me."

With Rick Barry reportedly having reached agreement on a new contract with Golden State, the best names on the free agent list — besides Webster — are guard Earl Monroe of New York and forwards Kermit Washington of Boston and Dan Roundfield of Indiana.

Monroe's advanced age and even more advanced salary puts him beyond the realm of practicality for most NBA teams, while the Celtics went out on a limb to get Washington from Los Angeles this season. Both can be expected to remain where they are.

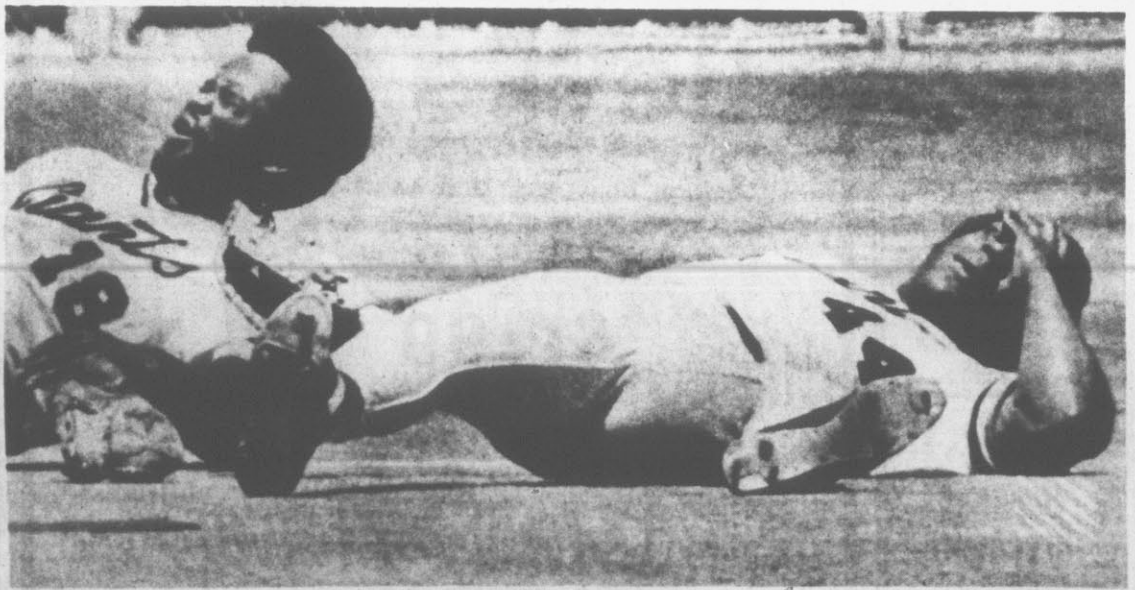

Roundfield is another matter. The Pacers are having their annual money problems, despite having operated in the black last year, and may not be willing to meet the demands of both Roundfield and their high first-round draft choice, whoever that turns out to be.

Most of the others in this summer's free-agent pool are players of marginal ability for whom few clubs would be willing to risk losing something valuable in compensation. For these players, free agency may turn out to mean unemployment.

An unusual case is that of Brian Taylor, the guard who jumped the Denver Nuggets in midseason claiming he was a free agent because the club had violated terms of his contract. Even though Taylor has been unhappy on three teams in the last three years and an arbitrator ruled that any team signing him must pay the Nuggets compensation, there is likely to be at least some interest in a big guard who can play defense the way he can.

Sources say Los Angeles and New York both have been negotiating with Taylor and his agent, Abdul Jalil, and a signing could take place soon.

A's End No-Hitter; Gain Win Over Tigers

DETROIT (AP) — The Oakland A's, held hitless by Dave Rozema for seven innings, broke loose for three runs in the eighth and edged the Detroit Tigers 3-2 Saturday.

Mario Guerrero led off the Oakland eighth with a bad-hop single off the body of third baseman Phil Mankowski, breaking up the no-hit bid. Then Dave Revering erased Detroit's 2-0 lead with a home run into the upper deck in right field.

Rozema, 2-1, who hadn't pitched in 13 days because of a stiff arm and a sore throat, walked the next two batters. They moved up a base on a sacrifice, Gary Thomasson was walked intentionally to load the bases and Dwayne Murphy drove in the winning run with a sacrifice fly.

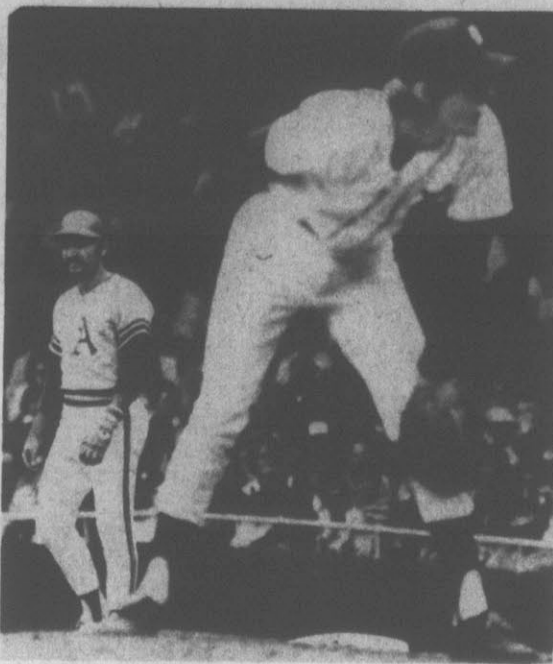

Bob Lacey, 3-0 was the winner in relief of Matt Keough. Detroit's runs, both unearned, came in the third inning. Keough gave up just three hits but walked six before being relieved by Lacey with two out in the seventh.

Ron LeFlore opened the third with an infield single. Lou Whitaker hit a routine grounder which second baseman Mike Edwards fielded but threw wild to second, allowing LeFlore to race all the way home.

Ivie's Three RBI's Lead Giants To Win

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Mike Ivie, a replacement for the injured Willie McCovey, drove in three runs with a double and a sacrifice fly to lead the San Francisco Giants to a 7-6 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals Saturday.

Jack Clark drove in two runs with a triple and a single as the Giants maintained their lead in the National League West by winning for the 11th time in 14 games.

St. Louis reached winning pitcher John Montefusco, 2-2, for three runs in the first on singles by Lou Brock and Tony Scott, an RBI double by Keith Hernandez and a two-run single by Ken Reitz.

Singles by Clark, Larry Herndon and Mike Sadek and a throwing error by catcher Ted Simmons gave the Giants two runs in the fourth. They added two more in the fifth on Bill Madlock's double, Terry Whitfield's walk, Ivie's sacrifice fly and Clark's single.

The Cards tied it at 4-4 in the sixth on Mike Phillips' run-scoring single, but San Francisco broke the tie against reliever Mark Littell, 1-3, with three runs in the seventh. Ivie hammered a 400-foot double to center for two runs and scored on a triple by Clark.

Mariners Defeat Blue Jays

TORONTO (AP) — Leon Roberts homered and Ruppert Jones hit a two-run double as the Seattle Mariners defeated the Toronto Blue Jays 9-6 Saturday, handing Toronto starter Dave Lemanczyk his seventh loss in as many decisions.

The Mariners collected 11 hits and eight walks off four Toronto pitchers in the game which was delayed three hours, 18 minutes in starting because of rain.

Seattle scored three runs off Lemanczyk in the first inning. Steve Braun singled home Julio Cruz with the game's first run and Jones followed with his two-run double as the Mariners reached Lemanczyk for three hits and three walks in only one-third of an inning.

The Mariners added a run in the second on a ground-rule double by Bill Plummer and a single by Craig Reynolds, and another in the fourth on Roberts' fifth home run of the season.

Seattle struck for three more runs in the fifth, sending nine men to the plate. Bill Stein's triple scored one run and the other two came across on bases-loaded walks.

Dick Pole, 3-4, got the victory although he gave up five runs on seven hits. Rico Carly belted his seventh homer of the season off reliever Byron McLaughlin in the seventh for Toronto's final run.

Indians Win 4th Straight

CLEVELAND (AP) — Andre Thornton's two-run single in the sixth inning carried the Cleveland Indians to their fourth straight victory, a 2-1 decision over the California Angels Saturday.

Rick Waits, 3-2, gave up seven hits and was helped out of three different jams by Cleveland double plays. The loser was Chris Knapp, 4-3, who gave up just five hits, four of them in the sixth.

The Angels took a 1-0 lead in the fifth. Carney Lansford led off with a single and went to second on a wild pitch. Brian Downing struck out, but Lansford scored when Rick Miller's bounce to first went through Thornton's legs for an error.

Ron Hassey led off Cleveland's sixth with a single. He went to second as Rick Manning bunted for a hit, but was out at third on Jim Norris' fielder's-choice bunt.

Buddy Bell fied out deep to right, with Manning going to third on the play. Norris then stole second and Thornton followed with a soft liner that just eluded shortstop Dave Chalk's gasp and brought both runners home.

Vikings Blank North Pitt

BETHEL — D. H. Conley's Randy Edens pitched a 10-0 shutout victory over North Pitt yesterday afternoon.

Edens helped his own cause with a 2-4 hitting performance, while brother Mike was 3-4. Jeff Hines was 3-4 and Carl Knight 2-3 for the Panthers, who had six hits. Gary Brock got things started off for Conley with a run in the second. He reached on a single and scored when Mike Edens tripled.

The Vikes scored five runs in the fourth. Mike Edens singled and moved to second when Nuggie Worthington received a base on balls. Arnell Credle got a safety to knock Edens home and Worthington followed on a passed ball.

Ben Wilson singled in Credle, and after Curtis Spencer got on via a North Pitt misplay, Wilson crossed home on a passed ball. Brock then walked and Spencer scored the frame's final run when Mike Phillips reached on an error.

The Vikes added another run in the fifth and three more in the seventh to raise their record to 9-7 overall and 6-4 in the Eastern Carolina Conference. North Pitt is now 3-16 and 2-13.

Conley pitched 9 1/3 innings, striking out 10 and allowing only one run, one hit and one walk. Edens and Spencer, Hines, Briley and Wilson.

Junior Team Loses Match

The Greenville Recreation Department's junior tennis team lost its final match of the season to Wilson yesterday by an 8-3 score.

Wilson won six of seven singles matches to clinch the match before it entered doubles competition. The Greenville team compiled a 4-2 record this year, second in the conference to Wilson.

Summary:
John Lowe (W) d. Bert Singleton, 8-2.
Tom Benson (W) d. Raynor Casey, 8-3.
Walter Blake (W) d. Tom Messick, 8-6.

NFLPA: Free Agent System Is Not Working

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — The National Football League Players Association will argue before the 8th U.S. District Court of Appeals in Minneapolis Tuesday that the current free agent system is not working and should be returned to the courts for further investigation.

According to Ed Garvey, NFL Players Association executive director, this action was taken because "it is now apparent that the NFL clubs, with one or two exceptions, are not engaged in serious bidding for free agents under the new bargaining agreement."

"Only six players of 93 received offers this year, and objective people must conclude that something is wrong," Garvey added. "We believe we have discovered the reason why it is not working. The clubs are taking the position for the first time that they have a perpetual option on free agents who fail to get offers from other teams."

"We vigorously oppose their interpretation of the agreement and want to bring this new development to the court's attention."

On Feb. 1, 126 players became free agents. Thirty-three received no qualifying offers from their old clubs and were totally free to sign with other teams.

An additional 22 players resigned with their old clubs and another 15 either are expected to retire or not pass physicals.

Of the remaining 56 players, only six were signed by new clubs, and, according to the NFLPA, therein lies the problem.

"Why not?" asks Garvey. "First, several teams did not enter the bidding at all, and several more talked with only one or two players. This indicates bad faith on the part of the management."

Those players who received no offers could become free June 1 if their old team makes them no qualifying offer. But if the team makes a qualifying offer before then (at a 10 percent raise over the 1977 salary), the player must sign with the old team.

Thus, the NFLPA is saying that owners may not be playing the game correctly; perhaps deliberately not signing players in order to protect their own investments.

"You're really not a free agent," said Minnesota's Phil Wise, who received no offers from other clubs and was given a renewal offer by the Vikings. "You're kind of tainted merchandise."

In Wise's case, he could sit out the 1978 season, or sign and become a free agent all over again next Feb. 1.

"But by then you're another year older and deeper in debt," said Wise.

Garvey, who admits that the free agent system wasn't designed to help the superstar, says, "in a monopoly like the NFL it won't work if the teams are negotiating in bad faith."

Astros Hold Off Mets

NEW YORK (AP) — Enos Cabell drove in three runs with a single and a double as the Houston Astros jumped on rookie Mike Bruhert for seven runs in the first three innings and held on for a 7-4 victory Saturday over the New York Mets.

Bruhert, 1-3, entered the game with the second-best earned run average in the National League, 1.80, but allowed 10 hits and committed two-base errors in three innings.

After the Astros made it 2-0 in the first with Cabell's single and Cesar Cedeno's double driving home runs, they erupted for four runs in the second. Joe Ferguson singled, Roger Metzger doubled, pitcher Joe Niekro and Terry Puhl each delivered RBI singles before Cabell drove home two more two a double.

Houston made it 7-0 in the third on Ferguson's double after Art Howe reached second when Bruhert threw away his grounder.

The Mets bounced back for three runs in the third as Willie Montanez, Steve Henderson, and John Stearns each collected RBI singles. Niekro, relieved in the sixth inning by Joe Sambito, snapped his personal three-game losing streak and is 2-4.

Expos Top Braves

MONTREAL (AP) — Steve Rogers tossed a three-hitter and Gary Carter homered Saturday as the Montreal Expos beat the Atlanta Braves 3-0.

Rogers, 4-3, struck out five and walked two on the way to his third complete game of the season.

Phil Niekro, 2-6, who fanned Ellis Valentine in the fifth inning for the 2,000th strikeout of his career, was tagged for two runs in the third. Andre Dawson was hit by a pitch with two outs, Niekro walked Carter, Tony Perez then singled Dawson home and Valentine singled to score Carter.

Babe Ruth

Wachovia 7, Coca-Cola 5

Sam Hodges scored three runs and Willie Moyer two to lead Wachovia to a 7-5 victory over Coca-Cola in Babe Ruth baseball yesterday.

Coke scored first in the ballgame when Kelly Lee reached on an error and stole second. Sam Hodges scored on Steve Hall's infield out.

But Wachovia came up with a pair in the third. Moyer reached on an error and stole second. Sam Hodges received a walk and Moyer came in on a wild pitch. Hodges followed on a walk.

Chapman, Tom Brown and Dwayne Fisher scored for Coke in the fourth, but Wachovia got runs from Steve Hall, Moyer, Hodges and Jeff Wilson in the bottom of the frame to take the lead for good. Coke scored its final run in the fourth when Chapman crossed, while Hodges scored again for Wachovia in the sixth.

Hodges was 2-3 for the winners, while Chapman was 3-4 for Coca-Cola.

Home Builders 9, Planters Bank 0

Scott Galloway and Lloyd Jackson combined for a one-hitter for Home Builders yesterday afternoon to lead their team to a 9-0 shutout over Planters Bank.

Galloway also paced Home Builders at the plate with a 4-4 hitting performance. He scored once and drove in two runs.

Barry Tyson scored the first two RB runs. He came across in the second, and again in the fourth.

Home Builders added runs by Roger Williams and Dan Woods in the fifth, while Shelton Wilson, Galloway and Woods each scored in the sixth. The final two runs came in the seventh when Art Pittman and Jeff James came across.

Wilson and Johnson each had three hits for Home Builders. Williams had a pair of RBIs.

Kirkland and Fletcher all came across in the bottom of the frame to make it 7-1.

Jeffery Wilson pulled the Graniteers to 7-2 when he tripled and scored on an error in the third, but DP came up with the winning runs in the bottom of the fourth.

Kirkland led off with a base hit and went to second when Fletcher reached on an error. Both runners advanced on a passed ball and Kirkland came home when Curtis Evans reached on a fielder's choice. Fletcher was thrown out on the play. Evans stole to third and Chip Cayton walked. John Parnell tripled them both in.

The Graniteers had two in the fourth, two in the fifth and one more in the sixth. Dr Pepper got three runs in the fifth and five in the seventh.

Auto Specialty 7, Jeanette Cox 6

Scott Stallings scored in the tenth inning to put an end to a marathon Prep League game and give a 7-6 victory to Auto Specialty.

AS scored first in the ballgame with three runs in the opening inning. Kenny Goodwin and Jody Forbes singled and moved up on a wild pitch. Troy Hudson reached on an error to score Goodwin and Forbes scored when Brian Hill got on by a misplay. Hudson came in on John Catlett's base hit.

Cox got a pair in the third. Bill Johnson singled and Mark Cutter got a base hit. Both scored on an error.

William Alwood scored for Auto Specialty in the fourth, while Tony Burroughs and Jesse Atkinson came across for Jeanette Cox in the bottom of the frame.

AS added runs in the fifth and sixth, while Cox scored in the fifth and Mont Carter tied the game with a run in the seventh to send it into extra innings.

Little League

Pepsi 19 Exchange 0

Mike Kinley pitched a one-hitter and scored four runs to lead Pepsi-Cola to a 19-0 victory over the Exchange Club in Little League baseball yesterday.

Kinley was 4-5 at the plate, including a home run, in the one-sided affair. Teammate Raju Singh was the game's leading hitter. He went 4-4 and belted two round-trippers. Clark Stallings and Kendall Phillips were each 2-4 in the contest, while Jeff Stallings was 2-5.

Pepsi scored four runs in the first, three in the second, six in the third, four more in the fourth and two in the sixth.

Singh scored five of the tallies, while Jeff Stallings matched Kinley's four-run production. Clark Stallings had a total of three trips across the plate.

In the first inning, Clark Stallings led off with a single and Jeff Stallings followed with a two-bagger. Singh loaded things up with a walk and Kinley plated Clark Stallings with a base hit. Jeff Stallings and Singh scored on Phillips' double, while Kinley came across when Joey Hallow reached on a fielder's choice.

Coca-Cola 6, Kiwanis 5

Coca-Cola built up a 4-1 lead and then held off a Kiwanis rally in the fifth to gain a 6-5 Little League victory.

Kiwanis scored first in the game on Van Alston's run in the top of the first, but Coke got four tallies in the bottom of the frame.

Mike Smith led off the Coke first with a single and Richard Pace followed with a base hit. Jimmy Smith singled to load the bases and Paul Goodson knocked a safety to score Mike Smith. Aaron Smith's base knock plated Pace and Jimmy Smith followed on an error. Goodson scored on a balk.

Jimmy Smith scored again in the third when he walked and moved all the way around on passed balls. Errors allowed Ed Farley and William Smith to score for Kiwanis in the fourth and cut the Coke lead to 5-3, but Mike Smith reached on a walk and scored on Paul Goodson's double to pad the Coca-Cola lead in the bottom of the frame.

Two Kiwanis players tallied in the top of the fifth, but Coke was able to preserve the victory. Calvin Bradley singled and William Smith reached on an error. They both scored on Coca-Cola misplays.

William Smith was 2-3 for Kiwanis, while Goodson was 2-3 for Coke.

First Federal 13, Big Value Drugs 4

William Waugh scored four runs and hit a three-run homer yesterday to pace First Federal in a 13-4 romp over Big Value Drugs.

First Federal scored three runs in the first, but Big Value tied things up in the top of the second. FF added four runs in the bottom of the frame to regain the lead and scored three more in the third and three in the fifth. Big Value came up with its final tally in the sixth.

In the first, Waugh singled for First Federal and went to second on Leon Moore's base hit. An error allowed Waugh to score and Mont Brown to reach second. Moore scored on Phillip James' infield out, while Brown came in when Ricky Outlaw got a base hit.

Scott Key singled in the Big Value second. He went to second when James Taft reached base and Eric Jarman followed to load things up. Singles by Matthew Saieed and Scott Irwin scored all three runners.

In the bottom of the frame, Todd Buck and Brian Joyner walked. Tyrone Barrett knocked Buck in and Waugh followed with his three-run shot.

Waugh was 4-4 for First Federal, while Saieed was 2-3 for Big Value.

Optimist 10, Union Carbide 4

A big five-run third inning allowed the Optimists to come from behind and defeat Union Carbide 10-4.

UC scored a run in the second when Dwight Smith reached on a walk and moved all the way around on wild pitches.

But the Optimists turned things around in the top of the third. Doyle Kirkland walked and went to second on a wild pitch. He moved to third on Mike Iaboni's single and Brett Dye walked to load the bases.

Andre Wooten reached on an error to score Kirkland and Darrell Dunn walked in Iaboni. A base on balls to Kelly Barnhill allowed Dye to make it home and Wooten and Dunn both scored on an error.

Iaboni scored three times for the winners, while Kirkland and Dye both came across twice. Iaboni was 3-4 at the plate and Ken Waters was 2-4 for Union Carbide.

Exchange 5, Graniteers 4

Exchange came up with a run in the bottom of the fifth to break a 4-4 tie and gain a victory over the Graniteers in a Friday game.

Exchange built up a 4-0 lead, but the Graniteers scored four runs in the fifth to tie things up.

The first Exchange run came in the first. Jeff Whittington walked, went to second on a wild pitch, and scored on a base hit by Billy Michel.

In the second, Steve Childes, Jim Hall and Joe Hobgood all came across to give Exchange a 4-0 lead. The Graniteers tied things up in the fifth, however. Cedric Hines reached on an error and walks to Tommy Warren and Robert Moyer loaded the bases. Terrance Warren got a base on balls to score Hines and a single by Lark Wetherington brought in Tommy Warren and Moyer. Terrance Warren scored on an error.

The winning run came in the bottom of the inning when Michel led off with a home run. He had three hits for the Exchange Club, while Tim Norris had a pair. Wetherington led the Graniteers with two hits.

Lions 10, Coca-Cola 6

In another Friday game, David Jester scored four runs to lead the Lions past Coca-Cola 10-6.

Coke got out to a big lead with four runs in the bottom of first inning. They came after Jester and Patrick Rand scored for the Lions in the top of the frame.

Mike Smith led off the bottom of the first with a single and Richard Pace followed with a base hit. Mike Smith went to third on an error and scored on a passed ball, while Pace stole around to third.

Jimmy Smith and Paul Goodwin walked and a base hit by Aaron Smith plated Pace. Jimmy Smith scored when Mike Sasser walked and Goodson came in on a walk by Bruce Gee.

Jester got his second run in the third to make it 4-3 and he, Rand and Marc Gatlin gave the Lions the lead in the fifth.

In the top of the sixth, Chris Evans led off with a double for the Lions and Tripp Williford reached on an error. Williford was caught stealing as Evans came home.

Stephen Garrett and Kevin Pace walked and Jester was hit by a pitch to load things up. Garrett scored on Rand's out, while Gatlin doubled in Pace and Jester.

Jester and Gatlin had three hits each for the Lions, while Mike Smith and Aaron Smith each had a pair for Coke.

Announce Olympic Site On Thursday

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — Los Angeles, bidding alone to stage the 1984 Olympic Games and arguing over terms, will know its fate Thursday. It has only a 50-50 chance of success.

According to Olympic sources, there is a strong possibility that the International Olympic Committee, at its 80th session here, will reject the California city and invite new bids.

Los Angeles wants to stage the Olympics in its own way to avoid collecting the kind of huge debt that hangs around the neck of Montreal, the last host city. It is sending a four-man team to Athens to bargain with the IOC over television revenue and other matters. The IOC has its own formula for the Games and insists on sticking to it.

This is an awkward time for any independently minded city to face the IOC. This self-elected, traditionally super-national body feels its authority is being challenged. Its constitution is to be examined by the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization in Paris later this month.

The IOC must play a strong hand to protect its independence. That is one reason why Los Angeles, pushing ideas of its own for the Olympics of 1984, may be playing a dangerous game.

Lord Killanin, president of the IOC, met Los Angeles officials in Mexico City last month and warned them their truculent replies to a questionnaire could cost them the Games. They had proposed, among other things, that they keep closer control of television contracts than previous host cities.

Los Angeles agreed to revise some of its replies and sent a new draft to IOC headquarters at Lausanne, Switzerland. The IOC consulted its lawyers and said this version was still unacceptable.

Some IOC members were offended by the original replies from Los Angeles, feeling their authority was being challenged. But they are far more seriously worried by what might happen at the UNESCO meeting.

The Russians and the African countries have campaigned for years for a more democratic set-up for running the Olympic games, and UNESCO has taken notice.

The IOC never was very democratic. It perpetuates itself, chooses its own members to be its ambassadors in their countries, and is answerable to nobody. The founder of the modern games, the late Baron Pierre de Coubertin, believed that was the best way to protect the Olympics from political interference.

Killanin has always quietly and firmly defended the IOC and its constitution.

"We are not in the least ashamed of being a self-elected body," he said. "That is quite normal for a board of trustees."

UNESCO sent a questionnaire to all sports bodies around the world in which it spelled out some of the objections to the IOC. One ominous question read: "Do you feel that the IOC and the international sports bodies should redefine their structures?"

Valkyries Gain Win

SPRING HOPE — D. H. Conley's softball team remained on top of the Eastern Carolina Conference with a 5-1 victory over Southern Nash Friday.

The Valkyries gave up a run in the first, but scored two in the fourth and three in the fifth.

Nancy Berg, Angie Roberson, Lori Garris and Gail Cates each had two hits for the winners, Garris hitting a home run. Lexanne Keeter pitched the victory.

Conley is now 12-2 overall and 10-2 in the conference. The team plays Tuesday at North Lenoir.

'Skins Get Win In Final Game

ROANOKVILLE — Roanoke's baseball team rolled over Williamston 13-0 Friday night, but received some bad news after the game. North Johnston beat Elm City Friday night to wrap up the Eastern Plains Conference title and leave the Redskins in second place.

The game, which raised Roanoke's overall record to 18-4 for the year, was the last for the Redskins. They finished 10-2 in the league.

Anthony Latham pitched a three-hitter to the Tigers and helped out his effort with a 2-4 hitting performance, both home runs. Cliff Keel was 2-3 with a homer for the winners, while Street Lee and Jesse Matthews were also 2-3.

The Redskins jumped out to a big lead early with five runs in the first. Ken Gurganus reached on an error, Glenn Cargile singled and Charlie Smith moved them up with a sacrifice.

Keel then knocked a three-run homer. Latham followed with a solo round-tripper and Lee scored the frame's final run on Matthew's base hit.

The 'Skins scored six in the third and one in the fifth and sixth.

Rampants Shut Out Knights

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Rose High School's Rampants took another step closer to clinching a post-season playoff berth with a 4-0 victory over Northern Nash Friday afternoon.

It marked the second straight shutout win for Rose over Northern Nash in two days. This time, Skip Topping did the damage to the Knight batters. He allowed just four hits, struck out six and walked two. He got into trouble only twice during the game, and both times was able to get out of the jam without allowing a run.

The victory moved the Rampant record to 8-5 in Division I play. Northern Nash, in losing, fell to 5-7, and was eliminated from any hopes of a playoff berth.

Rose, with two games left, need win only one of those should Wilson lose one of its remaining games, and Bertie also fall in their contests left to be played.

"But we would rather win both of our games left," Coach Ronald Vincent said. "We can't wait around for someone to win it for us. We've got to do it ourselves and the best way to do that is win both of the games we have left."

Vincent was extremely pleased with the pitching effort he received from the Rampant staff this week.

"We had three great games this week," he said. "I don't think we gave up an earned run in those three games. Our only trouble was with the bat." The Rampants lost one of those contests, a 3-1 defeat at the hands of Bertie, on a no-hitter.

"I'm really pleased with the way we played these last two (against Northern Nash). We just need to start hitting the ball more."

Rose got only six hits against Northern, but they proved to be enough.

Northern offered a big threat in the second when, with one out, Randy Shackelford walked, Mike Thomas singled and Dwayne Prigen reached on an error. But a strikeout and a foul fly ended the threat.

In the third, the Knights put men on first and second on back-to-back singles to right, but again, a strikeout and a fielder's choice ended that.

Finally, after seeing 12 straight Knights go down, Northern offered one more threat in the seventh. With one away, Prigen walked and Steve Proctor singled. After a strikeout, Raeford Long was hit by a pitch, loading the bases, but a short fly to shortstop ended the game.

Rose didn't get a man to second until the fourth inning, but made that pay off. Mike Shank led off the inning with a single to left. He was sacrificed up, and scored when Topping helped his own cause with a single to center.

In the fifth, the Rampants added two more runs. With one down, and a runner on, Mike Williams reached on a fielder's choice that got the lead man. Ronnie Chapman followed with a double down the left field line, scoring Williams. Shank hit a hard liner to third that was knocked down, but relayed too late to first. Chapman, who had come to third on the play, went on home, sliding under the throw from first.

Finally, in the sixth, Rose got one more run. Jeff Aldridge singled, and Robert Morehead replaced him on the bases. He stole second, moved to third on a fly to center, and scored on a balk.

The Rampants, now 13-6 overall, have two games left in the regular season. They play host to Wilson Fike on Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. at Guy Smith, then travel to Northeastern of Elizabeth City on Thursday for a 4 p.m. contest.

Slew Making Comeback

NEW YORK (AP)—The colt is a 4-year-old and in his last start, July 3, 1977, he finished fourth, beaten 16 lengths. He's entered Sunday in seven-furlong allowance race for horses who have not won two races of $6,800 since Sept. 15.

The colt is Seattle Slew.

Yes, he's coming back to the races at Aqueduct—the winner of nine of 10 career starts and $735,720, the Triple Crown winner and Horse of the Year in 1977.

"He's ready to run," co-owner Mickey Taylor said Friday after entering Slew against six other 4-year-olds and up, for the return many people thought would never happen. The colt almost died from a virus he contracted while preparing to return to the races in Florida this past winter. His breeding potential is a veritable gold mine which makes every race, every workout, every gallop an extreme risk.

The race will be televised live by NBC, as will the $50,000-added Withers Stakes, on Sports World which runs from 4:53 p.m. EDT.

Nine 3-year-olds were entered for the Withers, with at least two of them, Star de Naskra and Forever Casting, bidding for starting berths in next Saturday's Preakness at Pimlico.

"It sure is good to get him back to the races," said Doug Peterson, who replaced Billy Turner as Seattle Slew's trainer late last year. "You work months and months and you like to get results."

Seattle Slew's last win came in the Belmont Stakes last June 11. His last start was a fourth-place finish in the Swaps Stakes July 3 at Hollywood Park which was won by J.O. Tobin. He breezed three-quarters of a mile in 1:13.5 in deep mud last Sunday at Belmont Park and galloped out seven-eighths in 1:14. "We never asked him to run," said Peterson.

Peterson is using Sunday's race as prep for the one-mile Metropolitan Handicap May 29 at Belmont Park, which is one of two summer races planned for the colt who will retire to stud next year under a world-record $12 million syndication.

Carlyle Lancaster's Star de Naskra, winner of two of three races including the Penn Treaty Stakes, with a second in the Hirsch Jacobs, this year, was made the early 5-2 favorite for the Withers. William S. Farish III's Forever Casting, winner of two of five and third in the Rebel Handicap this year, was next at 3-1.

Vikings Down Southern Nash

HOLLYWOOD — Arnell Credle scored three runs and Ben Wilson hurled a four-hitter as D. H. Conley defeated Southern Nash 4-1 in a high school baseball game Friday.

The Firebirds scored in the top of the first inning, but Conley came up with one run each in the first, third, fifth and sixth frames. Wilson was also his team's leading hitter with a 2-3 performance.

In the top of the first, Jeff Strickland walked and advanced on a passed ball for Southern Nash. Stuart Griffin's infield out allowed Strickland to go to third and he scored on a ground ball by Wayne Grady.

Credle got his first run in the bottom of the first. He walked and came around on Wilson's double. He scored again in the third with a single, Nuggie Worthington's double and Wilson's infield out.

Credle recorded his final run in the fifth. He walked, stole second, went to third on an error, and scored when Worthington reached on an error.

Randy Edens scored the Vikings' final run in the sixth. He walked, went to third on a base hit by Gary Brock, and scored on an error on a pickoff attempt.

The win raised the Conley record to 8-7 overall and 5-4 in the Eastern Carolina Conference. They play host to North Lenoir on Tuesday.

Farmville 'B' Team In Win

WILLIAMSTON — Farmville Central's "B" baseball team defeated Williamston 5-4 on Friday.

Timmy Barnes was the winning pitcher, while Robin Worthington had a double to pace the game's hitting.

Pant-HERS Nip Hawks

BETHEL — North Pitt won its first Eastern Carolina Conference softball game Friday with an 8-7 victory over North Lenoir.

The Pant-HERS victory was pitched by Mary Pippins. The leading hitters for the winners were Daria Singleton, Barbara Morning and Paula Morris with two apiece.

North Pitt is now 1-10 for the season. The team will play Monday at Ayden-Grifton.

Sports Briefs

HONG KONG (AP)—Indonesia's top-seeded Atet Wijono beat seventh-seeded Tau Luu of Hong Kong 6-4, 6-3 Friday to advance to the semi-finals of the Hong Kong International Invitational Tennis Championships.

In an upset, unseeded Randall King, a Chinese-American from Portland, Ore., who is representing Hong Kong, defeated second-seeded Takao Yamamoto of Japan 6-3, 1-6, 6-2.

In the women's singles quarter-finals, China's top-seeded Yu Li Chiao beat Pia Tamayo of the Philippines 4-6, 6-4, 6-4.

Seattle Sounders have acquired defender Les Parodi from the Southampton team in England, the North American Soccer League team announced Friday.

Parodi, 24, played in Bournemouth from 1972 to 1976. He was with the South Hampton reserve team last year, scoring two goals in 20 games.

Rams Hold Off Chargers For 6-5 Victory

By JIM KYLE
Reflector Sports Writer
 LITTLEFIELD — Greene Central set up a Tuesday showdown for the Eastern Carolina Conference title by defeating Ayden-Grifton Friday night 6-5.

A game that should decide it all. "It all boils down to Tuesday night, I guess," Ram coach Jim Fulghum said after watching his team hold off the Chargers in the bottom of the seventh for the win.

added one more in the seventh for a 6-3 edge, but the Chargers scored a pair in the bottom of the frame and had the tying run at third and the winning run at first before the final out.

Fulghum praised the three pitchers he used in the ball game. "He said starter Dwight Butler did well until he lost it in the third. Relief man Jerry Goff then came in and retired ten

Greene Central built an early 3-0 lead only to see Ayden-Grifton push three runs across in the third to tie it up. The Rams then scored a pair in the fifth an straight batters, seven on strikeouts, before walking two and giving up a hit. Fulghum then called in Donald Wooten to finish up with the final three outs.

"I thought Goff did a great job. Maybe he got a little tired; that's the longest he's pitched in a month. And I always have confidence in Wooten."

Fulghum was also pleased with his team's bat work. "I thought we hit the ball well up and down the order." The Rams had a total of 11 hits in the game to just four for the Chargers.

The only Ayden-Grifton threats were in the two innings that they scored runs. In the other five frames, the Chargers went down in order.

But they made a game of it in the final inning, and looked as if they might pull it out until a final strikeout.

The Rams put their first runs across in the second. AJ Murray led off with a single up the middle, but was thrown out at second when Collyn Beaman hit a fielder's choice to short.

The Chargers caught two runners stealing to end the Ram seventh.

In the bottom of the inning, Paul Setliff walked, McLawhorn singled and Newton walked to load the bases. Wooten came in with two balls on Newton.

He retired the first batter he faced with an infield fly. Coley then grounded to short and Setliff scored on the throw to the bottom of the frame, however. Clayton McLawhorn led off with a single and Wayne Newton walked. McLawhorn went to third on David Smith's fly to right and Newton advanced on the throw.

Ed Coley knocked both runners in with a shot up the middle and went to second on the fielder's choice. An error allowed him to get to third, where he scored on a wild pitch.

After two more walks, Goff came in and struck out the final batter. Over the next two frames, he whiffed five in a row.

The Rams regained the lead in the top of the fifth with a pair of tallies. With one away, Russell Brann reached on an error. Murray hit a ground rule double to move Brann to third. Beaman's ground ball to second allowed Brann to score and an error on the second baseman brought Murray in.

The final Greene Central run came across in the seventh. Brann singled and went to third on Murray's base hit. He scored on a suicide squeeze by Beaman.

North Lenoir Rally Defeats North Pitt

WHEAT SWAMP — North Lenoir rallied with four runs in the seventh inning to tie the North Pitt and then defeated the Panthers, 8-7, with a single run in the second extra inning Friday.

The Panthers had broken a 3-3 tie with four runs in the sixth inning, and looked in good shape for a victory. But the Hawks got four walks and a hit batter in the seventh to help tie the game up. They won it with an unearned run in the ninth.

North Pitt outlived North Lenoir 9-5. Ronnie House led the way, going 3-4. Roy Briley was 2-5, including a home run, while Jeff Hines was also 2-5.

In the sixth inning, Melvin Howard walked for the Panthers and advanced on a passed ball. Hines singled and also moved up on a passed ball. Both of them scored on House's double and Briley followed with a homer to give North Pitt a 7-3 lead.

In the bottom of the seventh, Mike Jones walked and made it to third on a passed ball. Steve Tripp got a base on balls and Jones scored on a passed ball.

Terry Hoffman and Wes Jackson both walked to load things up and Tripp was forced home when Pete Davis was hit by a pitch. Craig Pate's fielder's choice scored Hoffman and Jackson.

In the ninth, Hoffman walked. Grimes reached on an error and Terry Davis hit a fielder's choice. Hoffman was thrown out on the play. Pete Davis loaded the bases with a walk and the winning run scored when Pate reached on an error.

The Panthers are now 3-15 overall and 2-12 in the Eastern Carolina Conference. They host Southern Nash on Tuesday.

Wild Things Occur In American League

Just when you think you've seen everything, it turns out you ain't seen nothin' after all.

And if you live long enough, you might witness another night like Friday in the American League.

Item: Chicago's sore-kneed Wilbur Wood was credited with the win in the White Sox' 4-3 victory over the Milwaukee Brewers although he only pitched 41-3 innings as the starting pitcher.

Item: Kansas City's Amos Otis circled the bases with a two-out, two-run homer in the bottom of the ninth inning when two New York outfielders crashed together, giving the Royals a 4-3 triumph over the Yankees.

Item: The amazing Oakland A's rallied for seven runs in the top of the ninth and beat the Detroit Tigers 10-4.

Item: Rookie Ron Hassey slammed his first major league home run off California's Nolan Ryan and it turned out to be the winning run in the Cleveland Indians' 4-3 victory over the Angels.

Item: Juan Beniquez, who brought a .179 batting average into the game, rapped out two singles and two doubles and drove in three runs to lead the Texas Rangers over the Baltimore Orioles 9-3.

Item: The Toronto Blue Jays equaled the longest winning streak in their two-year history — three games — by trouncing the Seattle Mariners 8-3.

The Boston-Minnesota game was rained out. Who knows what would have happened there?

Lamar Johnson slammed a three-run double in the third inning and scored on a double by Wayne Nordhagen to provide the White Sox with their victory over Milwaukee in a game called after 4 1/2 innings because of rain.

A's 10, Tigers 4

Gary Alexander went 4-for-4 and ignited a seven-run Oakland rally in the ninth inning with a leadoff double.

LOCAL ANGLERS Michael Grimsley and Randy Britt had an amazing run on largemouth bass last Friday May 5. The pair were fishing in an area farm pond when they landed nine fish in 15 minutes.

The streak started at about 10 a.m. as the two fished with large minnows. The fish ranged in size from one pound to 3 1/2 pounds.

Good Spring In Canada
Returning Atlantic Flyway waterfowl should find conditions in Canada to their liking as they return for the nesting season, according to Ducks Unlimited.

The organization reports good spring weather has provided good nesting conditions in the Maritime Provinces, Quebec and Ontario.

DU plans a number of construction projects this year, with the most concentrated efforts in the Maritime Provinces.

Visual Distress Signal Proposed
The U. S. Coast Guard has proposed a regulation which would require most recreational boats on coastal waters to carry visual distress signals.

Under the proposed rule, boats 16 feet and longer would have to have day and night distress signals at all times while under way in coastal waters. Boats less than 16 feet, and manually propelled craft, would be required to carry night visual distress signals only between sunset and sunrise.

A 120-day comment period has begun. Those wishing to express their opinion on this regulation may send their comments to Commandant, U. S. Coast Guard, Washington, D. C., 20590.

Written comments should include the docket number (G)CGD-183 to identify the proposal. The proposal may be changed in light of comments received before final action is taken.

Coastal waters in North Carolina which would be affected by the proposed regulation include: Currituck Sound, Albemarle Sound, Roanoke Sound, Croatan Sound, Pamlico Sound, Core Sound, Bogue Sound, and portions of the Intracoastal Waterway, Alligator, Neuse and Pamlico rivers.

Coastal Fishing Report
The bad weather which plagued the North Carolina coast has finally come to an end, and fishing was reportedly getting better late last week.

The Cape Lookout area noted improvement with lots of blues, a number of flounder and some king mackerel.

Spots and whiting were being taken at Atlantic Beach, while Topsail Beach had good reports on spots and blues.

Farther down the coast, Long Beach reported the first king mackerel of the year, a 17-pounder, along with a 13-pound blue.

Relief Pitcher Slams Winning Astro Hit

By ALEX SACHARE
AP Sports Writer

"Relief pitchers don't get many chances to hit," said Tom Dixon of the Houston Astros. "so we have to make the most of our opportunities."

Dixon, as well as the Chicago Cubs' Donnie Moore, did just that Friday night.

Dixon hit a run-scoring single in the 14th inning, his first hit in the major leagues, to give the Houston Astros a 5-4 victory over the New York Mets in a 4-hour, 21-minute marathon, the longest game in the National League this season.

And Moore, who had three hits last year, drove in a pair of runs with his second hit in three times at bat this season, a single that was the key blow in a six-run third inning that carried the Chicago Cubs to a 9-7 triumph over the Los Angeles Dodgers.

In other National League games, the Cincinnati Reds blanked the Philadelphia Phillies 3-0, the Montreal Expos beat the Atlanta Braves 5-3, the San Francisco Giants defeated the St. Louis Cardinals 9-3 and the San Diego Padres trimmed the Pittsburgh Pirates 6-4.

New York took a 2-0 lead into the ninth before the Astros tied the score on four walks and a hit batsman. Enos Cabell's two-run homer in the 11th gave Houston a 4-2 advantage, but the Mets rallied to tie in the bottom half of the 11th on RBI singles by Willie Montanez and John Stearns.

Cubs 9, Dodgers 7

The Dodgers knocked out Chicago starter Ray Burris with five runs in the second inning, two of them on a double by Ron Cey and two on Steve Garvey's fourth home run of the year.

Reds 3, Phillies 0

Cincinnati's Bill Bonham and Paul Moskau combined to stop Philadelphia on six hits. Bonham, in his first outing for Cincinnati since straining his right elbow on April 17, worked 61-3 innings, giving up all six hits, striking out two and walking only one as he raised his record to 4-0.

Expos 5, Braves 3

Montreal erupted for five runs in the sixth inning to beat the Braves. Run-scoring doubles by Larry Parrish and Warren Cromartie highlighted the outburst. Ross Grimsley, 6-1, got the victory with the help of three innings of shutout relief by Stan Bahnsen.

Giants 9, Cards 3

Vida Blue, who lost his first start of the year, posted his fifth consecutive victory as San Francisco defeated St. Louis. Bill Madlock and Terry Whitfield hit consecutive home runs in the fourth inning and Tom Heintzelman homered in the seventh for the Giants.

Padres 6, Pirates 4

Gene Richards singled up the middle through a drawn-in infield with the bases loaded in the eighth inning to drive in two runs and give the Padres the victory over Pittsburgh. Richards had three hits and drove in three runs in the game.

Chargerettes Top Lady Rams

SNOW HILL — Greene Central kept pace with D.H. Conley in the Eastern Carolina Conference softball race with a 13-7 win over Ayden-Grifton Friday afternoon.

Ayden-Grifton opened the game with four runs in the first, but Greene Central came back with five in their half of the first, then added four in the second. The other four Lady Ram runs came in the fourth.

Ayden-Grifton got its other three in the third.

Lynn Shackelford was the winning pitcher.

Irene Lewis had two hits to lead the Chargerettes, while Bright, Sutton, Pridden, Hooker and Hardison each had two for Greene Central.

Ayden-Grifton is now 8-4 in the conference, while Greene Central is 9-2.

Ayden-Grifton hosts North Pitt on Monday, while Greene Central goes to C.B. Aycock on Tuesday.

Farmville Ties Aycock For 2nd

PIKEVILLE — Farmville Central's baseball team moved into a tie for second place in the Eastern Carolina Conference with C. B. Aycock Friday night by defeating the Falcons 13-8.

The Jaguars took advantage of eight Aycock errors to score their 13 runs on just six hits. The victory gives them a 7-3 ECC record, identical to Aycock's. Greene Central, which plays Aycock on Tuesday, leads the league with an 11-1 mark.

The game was tied at 3-3 after the first two innings, but the Jaguars got a trio of runs in the fifth to take the lead and added five runs in the top of the sixth. Aycock also had five runs in the sixth, but the Jags added two in the seventh to pad the victory.

In the Farmville fifth, Chuck May walked, Billy McLawhorn reached on a fielder's choice and Don Holloman singled to load the bases. Scott Evans doubled home May and McLawhorn. Phillip Gordon walked and Allen Moore followed with a triple to clear the bases.

Holloman was 2-4 and Tony Eason 2-5 for Farmville. The Jaguars host Ayden-Grifton on Tuesday.

Super Stars Event Slated

The Greenville Recreation Department will once again sponsor a Super Stars competition this spring. The competition will feature such events as the 100-yard dash, mile run, swimming, tennis, golf, basketball, exercises, and an obstacle course to determine Greenville's Super Stars.

Applications can be picked up, beginning May 17, from the Elm Street Gym, West Greenville Gym, H. L. Hodges, Bond's, or at the Recreation Department office. Registration closes June 1.

There is no charge for residents of Greenville. Trophies are to be awarded to the winners at the conclusion of the last event, the obstacle course. For further information, contact the Recreation Department office at 752-4137, ext 262 or 263.

Chicod Gets 2-Game Sweep

CHICOD — Chicod swept a pair of junior high ballgames from G. R. Whitfield Friday, winning the softball game 27-4 and the baseball game 12-2.

Annette Manning pitched the softball win and led her team in hitting with four hits, including a pair of home runs. Zina Harrington had three hits, including a homer, while Laura Ellison had two hits, one of them a homer, for Chicod.

Chris Buck hurtled the baseball win, and helped his own effort with three hits. Roy Lassiter had three hits for the winners' while Dixon Page had a pair. Keith Gatlin and Myron Daniel each had two hits for Whitfield

Williams No-Hits RM

E.B. Aycock Junior High School got a second straight no-hitter from Roger Williams Friday afternoon. The Jaguars downed Rocky Mount in the game, 3-0.

The victory marked the third straight no-hitter tossed by an Aycock pitcher. Williams started it last week, and Billy Dough added a perfect game after that. Williams then came back Friday with his second straight no-hitter. He fanned seven in the game and walked two.

Mitch Brann and Jeff Porter each had two hits to lead Aycock at the plate.

The Jaguars are now 9-1 and play host to Nash Central on Tuesday, seeking revenge for their only setback.

Robert Byrd-Butcher, Welder And Senate Leader

By NICHOLAS DANILOFF
WASHINGTON (UPI) — Shy young Robert Byrd pumped gasoline, cut meat and welded ships. He dreamed of becoming an architect and spent 10 years earning a law degree. Now he is the man who, if anyone, "runs" the U.S. Senate.

There is no way to avoid a Horatio Alger tone in describing the early life and public career of the junior senator from West Virginia, elected leader of the Democratic majority and the key figure in the epic struggle for ratification of the Panama Canal treaties.

A few days after the successful conclusion of the treaty battle, Byrd sat down in his Capitol office to talk about his journey from the "grinding poverty" of a coal town boyhood to his present position of national power.

Seated under a portrait of Gen. Stonewall Jackson, the 60-year-old senator recalled his ease with algebra and trigonometry in high school and said: "I wanted to become an architect or engineer where I could use my math."

Byrd graduated first in his class in 1934. Politics was the farthest thing from his mind: "I gave the valedictorian's address and I was so scared I couldn't remember afterward what I had said. I was trembling too. Speaking was not my forte."

Byrd was born in North Wilkesboro, N.C., Jan. 15, 1918, the year of the great flu epidemic. It killed his mother before he was a year old and the boy was reared by his aunt and her coalminer husband.

"Times were very, very hard. My foster parents were poor. My foster father was a coal miner who toiled from daylight to dark. Earned $2.50 a day.

"We lived on company property, used the company doctor, bought at the company store, and more than once were in debt to the company at the acted." "After the war there was interest in my running for public office. But I couldn't run for Congress. I was too poor. I had no great name in West Virginia. My father was not a judge, or public figure. But I did seek out advice and decided to run for the House of Delegates."

Byrd vividly remembers advice a friend gave about the violin he had learned to play as a child: "Take that fiddle, and make it your brief case. Use that fiddle. That will be your entree. Get yourself a speech. Study up. And once you get in, tell them what you stand for."

He was elected in 1946 and served in the legislature until 1952.

When the United Mine Workers, a powerful political force in the state, sought his vote on the election of Speaker during his first term, Byrd refused to abandon a previous commitment.

"At the next election, they (the UMW) went all out after me. I took it to the people. I said they had tried to dictate to me, and I didn't agree. The people liked this. The miners stayed with me."

His troubles with the UMW continued after he went to Congress in 1952. John L. Lewis, authoritarian president of the UMW, sent word in 1958 that "we'll support you if you run for re-election to the House," but not for the Senate.

"I'll let you know," Byrd replied. He promptly announced for the Senate and won.

When he got to Congress, Byrd had further plans — to become a lawyer. He decided that after someone at a political rally gave him a surly introduction as a "butcher and a fiddler."

He had college credits earned when he was in the West Virginia legislature but no degree. He found a law school dean in Washington willing to waive that requirement.

The dean at American University told Byrd "I admire your tenacity ... If you can complete the course with no lower than a B average, we'll recommend you for an LL.B. (law) degree."

"It was terribly tough," Byrd said. "When I was in the House I could study only every other year because I had to run for re-election every other year. When I got into the Senate it was easier. I tried to hide the fact I was a senator from the other students, and I worried I would be called on and wouldn't be able to remember the cases. There would be times when I wanted to go for a drive on weekends with my family, but I just couldn't."

Byrd got his law degree in 1963 on the day President Kennedy received an honorary doctorate. "I remember," said Byrd. "Kennedy quipped to me: 'It took you 10 years to get your degree, and I got mine in 30 minutes!'"

Byrd voted against civil rights legislation in 1964 and 1965. He believed the discrimination it sought to prohibit was the constitutional province of the states.

"As I look back," he said, "I have come to the conclusion that for the most part it was a good law, and I should have voted for it. If the states had acted in time, it would never have become a federal issue."

"Morally something had to be done. It was morally wrong from the standpoint of principle that some people could travel all day, with young children, be tired and hungry, and not be welcome in a public establishment and be forced to go on because of their color." "I should have looked at it from the standpoint of what was right." He voted for the extension of the laws he had opposed.

He was a member of the Ku Klux Klan in the late 1940s. Byrd winced uncomfortably as he talked about it:

"My foster father was in the Klan, some of the most upstanding people I knew in those days — so I heard — were in the Klan."

"I thought it was a respectable organization which stood for American ideals, like a lot of fraternal organizations. I wasn't aware that it did anything hurtful. And once I joined, I acted as I did with anything else and worked at it with enthusiasm: went out and recruited members."

"It was a mistake. 'And I can't go back now and change the pages of history.'"

In the Senate, Byrd worked quietly and hard on organizational matters. In 1967, he was elected secretary of the Senate Democratic conference; in 1969 he ousted Sen. Edward Kenedy, D-Mass., from the second ranking job of Whip.

Although he had the votes to win, the thorough Byrd secured the proxy of Sen. Richard Russell, D-Ga., dying at Walter Reed Hospital, in case of need.

When Sen. Mike Mansfield, D-Mont., retired in 1976, Byrd ran for, and won, the post of majority leader against the challenges of Sen. Russell Long, D-La., and Fritz Hollings, D-La.

"It's a tough job: a lonely job in many ways. I don't have the accoutrements of power that go with some jobs. I can't fire 99 senators."

"They have long memories and I have to think that a senator who is not with me on this issue, may be with me on the next."

"But I like it. I've grown into it. It's like developing your muscles. You build up to it; take on more and more."

Of the canal treaties, he said: "Seldom does the majority leader have the responsibility of getting out front too far. Usually, it's the committee chairmen who deal with the substance.

"But this was a great national issue. These were the treaties which were going to have a profound effect on our relations with Latin America, and they were treaties which were not supposed to be ratified."

Byrd said he was always cautiously optimistic the treaties would be ratified, but he conceded his optimism was based partly on faith and his own intuitive sense of the Senate.

"When the chips are down, and the votes are cast on a matter of this importance, the Senate is going to do the right thing," he said.

Senators on both sides of the treaty battle gave Byrd high marks.

"He was completely cooperative and helpful, extremely cordial. He was very competent and totally dedicated," Sen. Paul Laxalt, R-Nev., an opposition leader, said. Sen. Paul Sarbanes, D-Md., one of the treaty managers, commented: "He took it seriously. He made careful and thoughtful decisions; used all the skills that he has."

end of the day."

He tended the family's pigs and kept an account of the housewives who gave him scraps to feed them. "When we butchered the pigs in November or December, I'd take them round a 'mess' of fresh pork. You should have seen the joy they got from that fresh pork."

What he learned about cutting meat helped when he quit his first job out of high school, $12.50 per week at a filling station, to work in the company store.

"I got a manual on cutting meat, and would study it at night," he said. When a chance came to become "head meat cutter" at $110 per month, Byrd was ready.

"Later on I met a man, an expert welder, who wanted to learn meat cutting. I agreed to teach him, if he would give me welding lessons."

During World War II, Byrd moved his wife Erma Ora and family to Baltimore where he worked as a first class welder on Liberty ships.

"It was during that time that my interest in world affairs developed more and more. And I must say my suspicions developed too as I watched how our ally, the Soviet Union,

Week For Handicapped Proclaimed Over Land

The fourth annual National Handicapped Awareness Week is being observed in Greenville, in Pitt County and throughout the nation beginning today and continuing through Saturday, May 20.

The awareness week is designed to focus public attention on the abilities of handicapped persons as well as their problems in coping with man-made architectural barriers and the attitude of the public.

Physical Handicapped Awareness week was launched in 1975 as a concentrated, one-week effort to heighten public awareness of difficulties encountered by the handicapped as the first step to achieving public commitment to help solve some of the problems. The week of observance is sponsored by the National Easter Seal society.

The observance in Greenville is being marked by a series of programs and events. The public is being encouraged to attend those events of a spectator nature.

Mayor Percy Cox, in his proclamation, notes "the City of Greenville recognizes that public awareness is the key to achieving a barrier-free environment so that handicapped citizens will have equal access to employment, education, transportation, housing, recreation, public buildings, and services.

"I call upon all citizens to join in breaking the barriers which confront our handicapped neighbors so that they may participate with dignity in all aspects of life in Greenville," Cox added.

The initial event in observing National Handicapped Awareness Week locally took place on Saturday, when students from E. B. Aycock Junior High School volunteered to monitor handicapped parking spaces from 10 a.m. until 3 p.m.

Other events scheduled for the week include an exhibition basketball game in wheelchairs with the Greenville Steelwheels versus WOOW Wizards. The game will be at 7:30 p.m. on Thursday, May 18 at E. B. Aycock. Admission is 50 cents per person.

In addition, a number of local public figures have agreed to spend time at their regular duties, working in wheelchairs in order to know first-hand the problems confronting those who live in this manner day by day.

Those who have volunteered for this are and the time they will be wheelchair participants are:

— Monday, May 15 — 6 a.m. Slim Short on his TV program; 10 a.m., Charlie Holliday, City Manager; and 10:30 a.m. Mayor Percy Cox.

— Tuesday, May 16 — 9 a.m.,

Jack Richardson, administrator, Pitt Memorial Hospital.

— Wednesday, May 17 — 10 a.m., Pat Dye, head football coach, at Scales Fieldhouse.

— Thursday, May 18 — 10 a.m., Julian Vainright, business manager, East Carolina University; and — Friday, May 19 — 10 a.m., Dick Petree, Employment Officer, Personnel Division, Pitt Memorial Hospital.

Adopt-A-Pet

These are only two of nine kittens being sought homes this week by the Pitt County Humane Society.

Also in need of homes are an orange and white male cat one and a half years old; a female orange Persian; and four puppies that will grow up to be large dogs.

An old medium-sized shaggy dog, black and white with a brown head, has been found. He is exceptionally well-trained, an excellent pet. If not claimed soon by the owner, he will be placed for adoption, Humane Society Pres. Jeanette Fiore said.

Anyone wishing to adopt or place an animal for adoption may call the Humane Society phone number, 758-PETS, which will be answered at Helen's Grooming World weekdays and from 3 to 6 p. m. Sundays. This is a message service and animals should not be brought to this business place, it is emphasized.

Syrup Industry Is Modernized

By CHRISTINE McKNIGHT
Associated Press Writer

WEST CHAZY, N.Y. (AP) — The state's $3.5-million maple syrup industry has been undergoing a quiet revolution in modernization. Hundreds of New York producers, faced with rising fuel and labor costs, have gradually streamlined the way they get their product from the tree to the breakfast table.

It has eliminated some of the old-fashioned aspects of the harvest, but producers say the taste and quality of the final product remain the same.

Earl R. Parker, for example, whose sugar house here in northeastern New York produces an estimated 2,000 gallons of syrup annually, now uses plastic pipelines exclusively to collect sap from about 10,000 taps.

About 50 percent of the state's total flow is now handled by plastic lines. And 75 percent of the state's 1,500 producers have replaced galvanized metal buckets with a tube collection system in all or part of their sugar bush in recent years.

"I have about 20 buckets on trees to show school kids what they're like, but that's all," said Parker, one of the top 40 producers in the state.

Parker said that before he began experimenting with plastic tubing in 1965, he hung 2,200 buckets, which had to be hand-collected every day. Now, 20 miles of tubing is strung through Parker's 200 acres of sugar bush.

The water-like sap flows by gravity to huge collection vats, which are emptied several times daily by a portable, gasoline-powered pump.

"When I used 2,200 taps, I needed five men to gather the sap and two men in the sugar house. Now, with 10,000 taps, I only use two men in the woods because they have tubing."

Maple sugaring is big business in New York, which last year turned out 320,000 gallons of syrup and is second in production only to Vermont. Together the two states account for 62 percent of the nation's production.

Parker, like many other producers, especially the larger ones, has also switched from horses to tractors to gather the sap from 1,500-gallon collection tanks placed at key locations on his sugar bush. To boil the sap down into syrup, he abandoned wood for fuel oil in 1971 when he built a new $10,000 sugar shack.

Market Center Draws Tourists

NEW YORK (AP) — The Market here is a new international shopping and dining center that is quickly becoming one of New York's popular tourist attractions.

Inside The Market, at Citicorp Center, visitors can dine at restaurants featuring specialties from Greece, Scandinavia, Italy, Great Britain, Switzerland, France and the United States. Shoppers can browse among European home furnishings and kitchenware, international cookbooks, imported cigars, candies, teas and coffees — all under one skylit roof.

Citicorp Center, a development of Citibank, is located between Lexington and Third Avenues and 53rd and 54th Streets. The Market occupies three levels of a low-rise seven-story building at the center. The other elements in the complex are a 50-story office building and St. Peter's Lutheran Church.

City School Lunch Menu

Lunchroom menus for the coming week at the Greenville elementary schools have been announced as follows:

Monday — Hamburgers, pears, french fries, peanut cookie, cinnamon crispy, milk;

Now You Can Drive Around South America

By JOHN REICHERTZ
BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (UPI) — It started out as the dream of an Illinois congressman in 1883 — a Panamerican Railway that would take people from Alaska to the southern tip of South America.

Automobiles replaced railroads as the most popular form of transportation and the dream turned to that of a Panamerican Highway running along the entire west coast of North and South America.

About all that is left of the railway dream is a one-way, cobblestoned, car and train tunnel cut through a two-mile thick rock in the heights of the Andes mountain range.

The dimly-lit tunnel, water dripping from its bare rock sides as in a cavern, is the main pass between Argentina and Chile. The border is midway through it.

The railroad tracks sticking up through the rough pavement are what would have been a key pass in the great Panamerican Railway proposed by U.S. Rep. David Davis of Illinois in 1883 — 9,300 miles of roadbed reaching from Fairbanks, Ala., to Ushuaia, Argentina, the southernmost town in the Americas.

The Panamerican highway is much more close to realization. All that remains is the Darien Gap, the 250 miles of swamp and rugged hills in Panama and northern Colombia, that is the only stretch of land interrupting the road's north-south trajectory.

The original dream changed even further in South America where the idea of a north-south highway grew to that of a system of highways that would connect the capitals of all the continent's nations.

In 1978, the Panamerican system of highways, dirt roads meets this goal except with the capital of Brazil, futuristic Brasilia rising out of the nation's vast backland.

"It's like an encyclopedia," said Jean Paspere, a road rally organizer who has been across most of the roads of the system.

"There are roads winding through mountains, crossing jungles and plains of wheat, stretching across deserts and running along the oceans," Paspere said. "They cross almost every kind of terrain you could imagine."

Between Bolivia and Paraguay the road is an unmapped maze used by smugglers, he said. Those who do not know the way would probably get lost.

Six months ago, a stretch of road between Brasilia and Venezuela was united in the Brazilian jungle above the Amazon River and the equator, completing a system of roads circling the continent.

"You can't do that," a Venezuelan told a man traveling with Paspere after they had emerged from the Amazon jungle via the new road and had told him that they planned to drive around the continent. "That's not possible," the Venezuelan said.

Driving at a break-neck pace, without stopping for rest, Paspere made it around the continent that is twice the size of China in 34 days.

To mark the completion of the circular route the Automobile Club of Argentina has planned a major international road rally around the continent.

The rally will begin in Buenos Aires Aug. 17 with the drivers covering 18,200 miles of roadway before returning to Buenos Aires Sept. 24.

The last major rally in South America was sponsored by the automobile club in 1948 shortly after the road along the Pacific Ocean — the original Panamerican highway — from Buenos Aires to Caracas, was opened.

"To demonstrate that 30 years later you can also drive the Atlantic side of the continent, is no heroic deed," Jorge Carroso of the club said. "But it is helpful and had to be done."

Only the bravest motorists with sturdy vehicles are advised to make the trip on the Atlantic side. It has some of the worst roads in the whole Panamerican system.

South of the Amazon River for approximately 500 miles the road crossing Brazil is unpaved and turns into impassable mud during the rainy season, January through April.

With the dry season the mud turns into a light dust. The road, however, is separated by five rivers and ferry boats shuttle cars and trucks across them. The new section of the road runs from Manaus, on the Amazon River 1,000 miles upriver from its mouth to Boa Vista, the capital of the northern Amazon territory of Roraima. It cuts through an Indian reservation.

Passage through the reservation is made in convoys, traveling from settlement to settlement only during the daylight hours. Signs along the way warn travelers to not stop "to feed the Indians," who are considered wild and not particularly friendly.

Most of the traffic on the road is commercial, with approximately 95 percent of the vehicles being trucks.

Occasionally, planes use the highway cutting through the Brazilian backlands as a landing strip to wait out tropical storms. In at least one spot along the road the wreckage of a plane that made a not-so-smooth landing lies entangled in lush green vegetation.

Manaus also can be reached by taking the trans-Amazon highway from Joao Pessoa on the Brazilian coast until it intersects with the Porto Velho to Manaus highway, approximately 1,000 miles inland.

In Venezuela the road improves substantially except for a section that winds through the "lost world" terrain of the plateaus and mountains near Angel Falls, the world's highest waterfall.

Motorists may be baffled, however, when they go to gas stations to refill their car's tank. The Venezuelan gasoline jockeys push a homemade product that comes in seven different octane levels.

The original Panamerican highway from Buenos Aires to Caracas along the Pacific, unlike the Atlantic route, is paved for the most part and in many areas is heavily traveled.

Maj. Julio Saldivar of the Paraguayan army and his wife recently made a trip from Asuncion to Caracas to visit two daughters over the Christmas holidays and traveled the road in a diesel-engined Peugeot pickup.

To keep themselves awake during the long hours of driving the Salvadors took along a thermos filled with terere, a cool drink made of the mate plant.

The 7,800-mile trip took 13 days.

"Generally, the whole route is transitable," Saldivar said. "Only in some sections, especially in the mountains, are the roads somewhat narrow, having very sharp curves and no guardrails between the asphalt and steep cliffs."

Saldivar picked up the Panamerican highway south of Cordoba, Argentina 440 miles west of Buenos Aires — one of the ends of the original highway. From there he traveled west on a well-paved and straight road bordered by the vast expanse of the Argentine pampa to the Andes.

From Mendoza, a town at the foothills of the Andes known for its red wines and large Italian population, the climb into the Andes becomes steep.

Valleys valed by peaks of bare rock and creased with mountain streams lined by weeping willow trees, provide a path for the road that 18 miles before the border with Chile turns to dirt.

Traffic over the road is halted at night and during the South American winter — June, July and August — it is often blocked by up to 30 feet of snow.

Once through the international tunnel the road, which throughout Chile is paved, drops sharply towards the Pacific and Santiago with a spectacular series of hairpin turns.

The trails of the famous Portillo ski slopes pass over the road by way of a ramp specially constructed for that purpose.

At Santiago, the road heads north into the desolate and dry region of northern Chile.

"The Atacama desert of northern Chile has the longest stretch of road without service stations along the whole route to Caracas," Saldivar said. "For more than 120 miles there are no people and the land is arid. All you see is sand, salt, small whirlwinds and the blue sky of the horizon."

The highway in this region is pockmarked with potholes that can tear a vehicle apart if hit at high speed.

Stretches are immense and travelers will run into numerous military roadblocks where credentials are checked. The bulk of Chile's crack army units are stationed in this area due to tension with neighboring Peru and Bolivia.

Side roads often lead to lonely, deserted towns much like ghost towns of the American far west.

The towns flourished and withered away with the coming and the going of the nitrate boom in Chile during the late 19th and early 20th centuries.

By the end of the first day of driving Saldivar passed into Peru and the next morning headed north to Lima, the capital, arriving in the first hours of the morning of the following day.

"In the 800 miles of this stretch we were slowed down considerably because of the high mountains and rough roads," he said.

Experienced travelers say it is not wise to drive at night because it gets misty and there are no marks on the high, narrow and curved road to help the driver stay on the right track.

Going north, stops are recommended at Arequipa — a colorful city with colonial buildings — at Nazca, the site of mysterious desert drawings, and at Tmacma, where good and cheap wines are sold.

The greatest danger that a tourist driving along the Panamerican highway can face is the Peruvian drivers themselves, especially those truck drivers who do not mind pushing one off the road.

"From Lima, going north along the Pacific Coast, we crossed an extensive region of desert that is rich in oil, with oil rigs at each curve in the road taking the precious mineral from the depths of the earth," Saldivar said.

The road passes the equator in Ecuador.

A traveler can drive on a highway system in Colombia from the extreme south to the northwestern Caribbean coast and to the northeastern Caribbean coast where it runs into the Venezuelan border.

The southern part of the highway begins at Ipiales on the Ecuadorian border and goes 750 miles to Medellin. From Medellin one can either go to Turbo on the northwestern Caribbean coast or northeastward on a highway that goes through Bogota up to the Venezuelan border.

Only about 50 percent of the highway is paved but most of it can be crossed in conventional automobiles.

Saldivar said the lack of proper traffic signals and the bad condition of Colombian roads which run through an endless series of mountains makes it very difficult to keep up a regular pace.

The Venezuelan stretch of the highway reaches from Sakiantonio on the border with Colombia to Caracas, 584 miles to the northwest.

As the road winds down out of the snow-capped Venezuelan Andean range 140 sharp curves provide contribute to many road accidents. The last 120 miles of the highway, however, is modern, well-signaled and maintained.

"Colombia and Venezuela have the strictest surveillance of highways, which according to what we were told, is there to prevent drug traffic and the contraband of imported products," Saldivar said.

A measure of the unusual character of Saldivar's trip is a comment made by Venezuelan officials who said that it was the first time they had seen a Paraguayan car in their country.

"As we went further north, covering Argentina, Chile, Peru, Ecuador, Colombia and Venezuela, gasoline, diesel fuel and oil became much cheaper," Saldivar said.

"In general, all of the security, immigration and customs officials in the six countries we crossed were polite," he said. "But in Ecuador, especially at its border with Colombia, we had a few problems because of the distance of the border crossing offices from the border and also because they did not seem to worry very much about keeping their hours, causing long and tedious periods of waiting."

"No, it's not impossible to travel around South America on highways, it just takes some money and a lot of time."

Former Manson Family Member Now Preaching

By STAN METZLER
SAN LUIS OBISPO, Calif. (UPI) — Charles "Tex" Watson says he spent the first 23 years of his life chasing the all-American dream and the next five chasing after the devil.

Watson is the former Texas farm boy and high school football star who joined Charles Manson's crazed family and then shot, stabbed and beat the seven victims of the Tate-LaBianca murders in 1969. He has another pursuit now.

"I'm free in Jesus," Watson, 32, said in an interview in an office behind the chancel of Plazaview Chapel at the California Men's Colony. It is the office of the assistant pastor and, as an inmate, he serves in that capacity.

"The Spirit of God has broken the bondage of my life to sin and now I'm free to rejoice and share his goodness and love with others.

"My life now is working for the Lord and being used for the Lord."

He says years went by after the killings before he felt any remorse over his bloody deeds. Now, with religion, he says there is remorse, and he suggests that out of the same Christian belief there should be forgiveness for him from the public.

"People are going to have to forgive," he said. "Whether the Tates or Labiancas or whoever, the families have to forgive not only me, but everybody, or they're not going to be forgiven.

"I don't want to make too much out of telling the public to forgive me or else, but I feel that if you're going to be Christian you've got to forgive your Christian brother."

Watson, his speech sprinkled with Biblical references and Christian colloquialisms, spends his time in the maximum-security prison in coastal hills about 175 miles north of Los Angeles.

His office — a cubicle stacked with Bible commentaries, sermon tapes and Jesus posters — is his base for preparing sermons, counseling other inmates and directing witness and worship programs at the unusual prison church built around Chaplain Stanley McGuire's conviction that convicts have the same spiritual needs and abilities as any other Christians.

"I feel the Lord has started a revival here," Watson said. He says Baptist-styled chapel services are attended with enthusiasm in a world confined by walls and controlled by guards.

Watson, who was raised in a small Methodist church but was not religious in his youth, counts himself a chief part of that revival.

His enthusiasm was evident at a Thursday night praise and prayer meeting, when he preached an extemporaneous sermon to a group of 50 who had spent nearly an hour singing, clapping hands and praying together in the wood-paneled chapel fronted by a mural of the Lord's Supper painted by another inmate last December.

"I'm always going to be Tex Watson that murderer in the eyes of society," he said in a down-home pulpit voice that rose in intensity with each phrase.

"But to God I'm going to be a child of the King." He paused momentarily for a few Amens that increased in number and volume as he continued.

"I'm a child of the King and I'm headed to Gloryland. That's where I'm headed — Praise God!"

Earlier that day, Watson gave a similar but quieter appraisal of his past and future.

One of the first things that changed after his conversion experience three years ago — "when I just repented of my sins and gave my life to the Lord" — was his consuming drive to get out of jail.

"If I sit here and want to get out and work to get out and do this and that and connive to get out," he explained, "I think I'd just get out of the will of God.

"Of course I'd like to get out of prison, but that's not my No. 1 priority any more. Now the Lord is No. 1 and getting to know Him better.

"If God wants to use me here, then I want him to use me here. If he wants to use me on the outside, then He'll use me on the outside.

"But someday I believe God will put me out in the streets again, and when He does I will continue to live in the will of God and witness. Once I do get out I just want to be able to testify for the Lord."

Watson has written a book recounting his life with the Manson Family and his role in the Tate Murders, that went on sale this month.

The book's title, "Will You Die for Me?", is the question Manson asked him several months before the grisly slayings while holding a knife to his throat at the Spahn Movie Ranch.

"Sure, Charlie, you can kill me," Watson replied.

He meant it, he insists, because he had completely given over his emotions and his actions to Manson's control. He also suggests that the man he once idolized was, and may still be, possessed by demons.

"I feel Manson was possessed," Watson said, "and I think I was possessed by the same spirit that Charles Manson was possessed by.

"The psychiatrists call it a shared madness. That is, we were all one in the devil. And we did what the devil said to do.

"I'm not blaming it on him, of course, or on evil spirits. I yielded myself to it so I take the blame. I was giving myself completely to him and doing what he wanted me to do. And the result of that was death — all those murders, and I got destroyed as well.

"At the time I thought I was doing the right thing. I thought I was doing it for a cause that would lead to peace and happiness in the bottomless pit — eternal life."

Watson, who felt himself strangely drawn to Manson for sometime after the slayings, says he is no longer attracted or terrified by the man he once followed slavishly.

"As the Spirit leads me," he adds, "I pray for Charles Manson."

Watson says he has no direct contact with former family members, though he does receive a form letter sent out by Susan Atkins, another born-again family member who has written a similar book, "Child of Satan, Child of God."

Watson realizes there are doubts about his new religious convictions.

"I find that people have to be with me and get to know me, so the Spirit can bear witness that we're Christians," he says.

IT MUST BE SUMMER — Todd Denny and his dog, Kaiser, lay back and take advantage of Denver's summer weather and near-80 temperatures. Just 6 days ago the metropolitan area was hit by a foot of snow, but now things appear to have stabilized and summer is well on its way. The pair were floating on a raft in the lake in Rocky Mountain Park, a city park. (AP Laserphoto)

What The Stock Markets Did

NEW YORK (AP) - The Dow Jones average closed at 940.70 Friday, up 11.61 from the week prior. Analysts said the rise represented favorable response to news the Administration was toning down tax cut proposals. (AP Laserphoto)

Business Notes Welcomes Trend In Interest Rates

CREDIT ROSE

According to weekly figures released by the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond, bank credit at 27 large commercial banks in the Fifth Federal Reserve District rose $47,489,000 in the week ended May 3, raising bank credit outstanding to a level of $24,151,593,000.

Net loans, adjusted — total loans exclusive of loans to other banks and loan valuation reserves — increased $139,576,000, while total investments decreased $92,087,000.

Included in the district are North Carolina, South Carolina, Virginia, Maryland, the District of Columbia, and most of West Virginia.

OPTION GIVEN

The Black and Decker Manufacturing Co. confirmed that an option has been given to Federated Reinsurance Corp. of Houston, Texas to purchase the 2,216,931 shares of McCulloch Oil Corp. stock held by one of Black and Decker's subsidiaries.

The company announced that Federated Reinsurance Corp. has exercised the option as to 1,000,000 of the shares for an aggregate cash purchase of $3.5 million.

CONTRACT SETTLEMENTS

Vermont American president Lee Thomas Jr. announced that three-year labor contract settlements have been reached at the company's Northeast Tool and Vermont Tap & Die Divisions, both in Lyndonville, Vermont.

Thomas said that a strike, called by the International Association of Machinists & Aerospace Workers, District No. Eight (AFL-CIO), is in progress at the company's Marshall Steel Division in McCook, Ill. Some 80 employees are involved, he said.

According to the official, the Marshall Steel plant, which manufactures precision ground tool steel, is currently being operated by salaried employees and management personnel. Vermont American operates a plant here.

REGULAR DIVIDEND

The Integon Corp. board of directors declared a regular quarterly dividend of ten cents a share, payable June 9 to shareholders of record May 26.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market's recent rally has put Wall Street in the unusual position of welcoming a rising trend in interest rates.

Normally, an increase in the discount rate like the one announced last Thursday by the Federal Reserve is considered a severe market depressant.

But this time it helped ignite a sharp rally that carried the Dow Jones average of 30 industrial up more than 18 points in two days.

For the past week the average gained 11.61 to 840.70, more than offsetting the previous week's 8.29-point setback.

The New York Stock Exchange composite index picked up .88 to 54.85, and the American Stock Exchange market value index, setting new 4 1/2-year highs daily, climbed 2.68 to 142.57.

Big Board volume came to 181.80 million shares. The past four weeks have been the first, second, third and fourth busiest, in that order, in NYSE history.

Under the traditional Wall

Street scheme of things, rising interest rates are bad news for stock prices for several reasons.

First of all, they increase companies' borrowing costs, thus squeezing profits and exerting upward pressure on the ultimate price of goods being produced.

In addition, they increase the attractiveness of bonds and other interest-bearing investments which compete with stocks for investors' favor.

And right now interest rates are clearly on the rise. Twice in recent weeks the Federal Reserve has moved to push open-market money rates higher. Then, on Thursday, it raised the discount rate—the charge it puts on loans to its member commercial banks—from 6 1/2 to 7 percent.

"This is the year the rules changed," said Robert Stovall at Dean Witter Reynolds Inc.

"In the past stock prices and interest rates were like buckets in a well. It was almost a mechanical relationship. When one went up the other went down."

Stovall and other analysts say a couple of factors seem to have scrambled the usual equation this time—inflation, and the dollar's problems in foreign exchange.

A rise in interest rates tends to help the dollar against foreign currencies by making U.S. interest-bearing investments more attractive to overseas investors.

In addition, brokers say, the Fed's tightening of credit has helped give foreign investors more confidence that the U.S. government is making a meaningful bid to control inflation.

Beyond those explanations, brokers say investors just seem to be in a different mood of late, choosing to see events in a favorable light and more or less ignoring their negative aspects.

This flip-flop in attitudes is further underscored by recent developments in President Carter's tax-cut proposal.

Under most circumstances, a tax cut would seem to be bullish in that it would stimulate economic activity, and the bigger the tax cut the better.

This past week, however, stocks gained ground when the President scaled down his proposed tax cut from about $25 billion to less than $20 billion.

Analysts said the news was greeted as a signal that the Carter administration was adding fiscal-policy measures to the Federal Reserve's campaign to subdue inflation.

They noted that a smaller tax cut would tend to reduce the federal budget deficit, which is regarded on Wall Street as a primary source of inflationary pressures.

Charles Schulze, the President's chief economic adviser, also made the point Friday afternoon that the decision to tone down the proposal should "significantly strengthen the credibility of the rest of the President's anti-inflation program."

Waiting To See About Union Efforts

LENOIR, N.C. (AP) — An organizer for the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America, AFL-CIO, said Friday he should have more of an idea Monday whether efforts to organize furniture workers here will be abandoned.

The carpenters' union lost an election 247-99 at Bryon Hill Furniture Industries Harper plant, the third loss in the Lenoir area this year.

The union had filed election petitions for a total of 15 plants in Caldwell County, but withdrew 12 of them because of eroding support from workers.

"I talked to my boss, a district representative in Atlanta, and he said to hang loose until we hear from the general office in Washington," said Herbert L. Thomas. "We should know a little bit more by Monday."

Paul Broyhill, chairman of Bryon Hill Industries, said company officials were pleased with the victory.

"Our people realize that the owners and managers of the business in Lenoir are more concerned about their welfare than outsiders who are primarily interested in union dues."

The AFL-CIO's industrial union is gearing up another drive to organize furniture workers in North Carolina, including some plants in the Lenoir and Hickory areas.

A union push at Thomasville Furniture Industries' 17 plants in North Carolina and Virginia was announced in March by the AFL-CIO. The two Thomasville plants in the Lenoir area and one in Hickory employ about 600 workers, according to Ted Davis of the Industrial Union.

Davis said he did not think the carpenters' defeat in the area would affect the drive by the industrial union.

Utah Moves To Deter Horse-Rustling Epidemic

By SUSAN STEEVES
SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — Horse rustling! The word conjures up visions of grizzled men in 10-gallon black hats stealing a herd and sweating over a hot fire to change the brands.

But the thieves have it easier today. Trucks and trailers have replaced the horses and lariats once used to round up stolen animals. And horse owners help out the rustlers by taming their mounts and not branding them.

Dr. Robert L. Poulsen, assistant Utah state veterinarian, said horse rustling in Utah and other western states is a lucrative business — although he can't say how exactly many horses are stolen each year. Most of the cases are handled by local sheriffs and many thefts are never reported.

But it has become enough of a problem that he has persuaded the Utah Legislature to enact some tough horse registration laws. He has also instituted a rustling prevention program to educate horse owners on how to keep their pets from being carted off to dog food plants.

"People have trained horses to be easy to rustle. They have taught them to be easy to catch, easy to load," said Poulsen, who is also the state brand supervisor. "There are cases where fences have been cut and the horses just go right along."

Rustlers now usually simply sell the animals to packing plants in California, Washington, Arizona or Nebraska. They get a high price for the meat, about 30 cents a pound, with horses usually weighing 900 to 1,200 pounds each. That works out to about $300 per horse.

Salt Lake County Sheriff's Det. Ned Franson, a part-time brand inspector who investigates many of the rustling cases, said lack of identification marks is a major problem.

"Some people shy away from brands because they say it makes the horses look bad," Franson said. "They say the horse will get marked down in a show. I think it makes them look good. You should brand them right out there where everyone can see it."

He said there were about 25 cases of horse rustling in Salt Lake County during the past year. Some of them were just horses picked up as strays after they wandered out of a pasture or youngsters let them loose. But often the horses disappeared for good. They were sold at auction.

"Typically the rustlers just pull up to a field, catch the horses and load them," the detective said. "They seldom take a whole herd at one time and only about 30 percent of the thieves are caught."

"The rustlers are usually horse people. They know a lot about horses. How good the horses are depends on what they want them for."

One ingenious rustler thought he'd found a way to take some horses from Utah to Colorado by smuggling them in a vacation house trailer. But someone saw him loading the animals. When sheriff's deputies stopped him south of Salt Lake City, he had three horses in the trailer.

A horse thief who plagued farmers north of Salt Lake City used a different method. Robert Reddish stole and modified horse trailers by repainting them and changing the shape of their windows. He then used them to haul animals to California.

Reddish, who was suspected of stealing 26 horses, was finally caught and sent to prison after someone recognized one of the trailers and tipped off the Davis County sheriff's office. Deputies traced some of the stolen horses to a California auction where they were bought for packing plants.

"The animals were pets," said Deputy Davis County Attorney Rodney Page. "People were upset. It was a very personal thing. One old palomino, owned by a truck farmer, was specially trained to stay in the furrows."

Franson said spring and summer are the times when most of the rustling occurs. Usually horse thieves won't steal a horse during winter because they might get stuck feeding the animals until spring.

There used to be a lot of rustling during the fall deer season when people took their mounts across state and county lines for the hunt. Franson said. But much of that illegal transporting has stopped because of a new horse inspection law and checking stations set up by the state and county.

Under the new statute, Utah horse owners must have a brand inspection card to move an animal interstate or intrastate. If the owner is caught moving his horse without the card he can be charged with a misdemeanor.

Moving someone else's horse is considered rustling and in Utah that's a felony.

In 1976, Utah's brand inspectors checked 17,500 horses. The figure jumped to more than 20,000 by last year.

Utah's brand inspection system is recognized in every western state, but interstate rustling problems increase because some states don't have their own systems.

Inspections are not mandatory in California and Texas. There are none at all in Oklahoma and Arkansas. The western half of Nebraska has brand inspection, but the eastern half doesn't.

Besides brands, inspection papers and breed registration, several other identification methods are available, according to Poulsen and Franson.

One of the oldest registration numbering systems is used for quarterhorse and thoroughbred race horses. The horse's registration number is tattooed on the inside of the upper lip.

Freeze branding is an unalterable mark placed under the horse's mane which uses a registration number, year of birth and breed. A new technique is using the chestnuts, fever blisters on a horse's legs, like a fingerprint.

A private business, Equine Services in Denver, has come up with a computer gun which records the markings of the chestnuts, one on each of the horse's legs.

A method is also being tried of identifying horses by taking imprints of hair swirls. Experts claim that like the chestnuts, no two hair swirls are alike.

Poulsen suggests that when anyone buys a horse they get a bill of sale and, if the animal is a specific breed, all the registration papers.

But rustlers still seem to get around roadblocks set up to check horse identification.

"Last year during deer season, we stopped everyone going up the canyon, but none of them had stolen horses," said Utah County Sheriff Mac Holly. Still 15-20 horses were reported stolen in his county last year.

Miss Scott, Mr. Creech Wed Saturday Afternoon

SMITHFIELD—Lou Rochelle Scott and Ritchie Wayne Creech were married Saturday in the First Christian Church here in a double-ring ceremony at 2 p.m., officiated by Billy Adams.

The bride is the daughter of Commander and Mrs. Bobby J. Brown of Four Oaks. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Earl Creech of Smithfield. Both are students at East Carolina University.

Given in marriage by Commander Brown, the bride wore a formal-length gown of ivory quiana over ivory peau de soie, designed with a high neckline encircled with ivory re-embroidered alencon lace beaded with pearls. The empire fitted bodice was enhanced with an overlay in a bib effect of re-embroidered beaded alencon lace over imported English net. Self-fabric covered buttons extended down the back of the gown from the neck to the waist. The waistline was encircled with a miniature rolled sash of quiana. The long, fitted sleeves repeated the sheer overlay of re-embroidered alencon lace insert, beaded with pearls, with covered button closings at the cuffs. The full, circular skirt fell softly to an attached chapel-length train. She wore an ivory imported braid garden hat overlaid in English net embellished with beaded re-embroidered alencon lace with the crown encircled with ivory illusion accentuated with a Dior bow at center back and fingertip-length streamers.

She carried a cascade bouquet of yellow sweetheart roses, stephanotis and georgiana orchids with dracaena foliage. Matron of honor was Mary Lou Cane of Indian Head, Md., Maid of honor was Nancy M. Wiseman of Marietta, Ga. Bridesmaids were Sharon L. Senhowr of Washington, D. C., Lou-Anne Jeffords of Smithfield, and Lyn Brown of Four Oaks, sister of the bride.

The attendants wore formal-length gowns of floral voile in shades of apricot and blue on a peach background designed with an open neckline encircled with miniature ivory lace. The empire bodice was styled with a panel of petit floral print outlined in the ivory lace and featuring a closure of silk cording. The full bishop sleeves were trimmed at the cuffs with ivory lace. Matching lace overlays were at the waist with a self-tie belt in back. The full skirt featured panels of contrasting voile print and was enhanced with two deep ruffle flounces topped by ivory lace. They wore braid garden hats in an apricot color. They carried golden rapture roses.

The father of the bridegroom was best man. Ushers were

MRS. RITCHIE WAYNE CREECH

Richard A. Brown of Orlando, Fla., brother of the bride, Jim Barbee and Tommy Corbett, both of Smithfield.

Vows were spoken before a background of traditional greenery and nine-branched candelabra holding cathedral candles centered within an arrangement of white and yellow gladioli, daisies, chrysanthemums and carnations.

Immediately after the ceremony, the parents of the bride entertained at a reception held at their home. The house was decorated throughout with spring flowers and green plants. The refreshment table held an arrangement of multicolored snapdragons, miniature carnation, roses, shasta daisies and baby's breath in a silver bowl.

After a wedding trip to Myrtle Beach, the couple will reside in Greenville.

On The Local Scene by Rosalie Trotman

"I reckon I was about 14 years old when I first started making baskets," said 91-year-old Leon Berry of Huntersville.

Berry, who learned basketmaking from his father, is one of the nearly 300 traditional crafts and tradespeople, musicians, storytellers, cooks and dancers selected to participate in the 1978 N. C. Folklife Festival July 1-4 at Durham's historic West Point on the Eno Park.

One of the few basketmakers still practicing his trade in North Carolina, Berry weaves baskets with long thin strips of wood from young white oak trees.

"First you got to carry the tree out of the forest. You take a stick about six inches wide and six inches square and bust it in half. Then you got to take that half and bust it into quarters. Then you got to bust them down again and keep splitting that stick till it gets down where you want it. And then you got to trim it down to making splits." Once the wood splits are finished, they must be soaked in water until pliable before weaving can be started.

"If you ain't got good patience, you ain't gonna fool with it," Berry said. Most of the baskets he makes are designed for utilitarian purposes such as catching fish, transporting picked cotton and holding livestock feed.

A celebration of such unique family and community traditions will be the theme of the festival. Its focus, emphasized director George Holt, is on "living folk traditions handed down through generations but still practiced in communities today."

Sponsored by the Office of Folklife Programs of the North Carolina Department of Cultural Resources, the festival will feature a wide variety of the state's folk traditions.

Participants from the northeastern area of the state include Matthew Salter of Bayboro, netmaking, Adrian Watson, Lowland, whittling, Mr. and Mrs. George Williams, Mapleton, turtle-catching, Mrs. Ernest Smith, Eure, pine needle basketmaking, Terra Ceia community members from Beaufort County, Dutch cooking and music, Roosevelt May, Scotland Neck, blues harmonica, Elester Anderson, Tarboro, blues guitar, Frank Robertson, Jamesville, water-driven fish bailer, and George Williams, Winton, turtle-catching and use of eel pots.

Ticket and parking information will be announced in the near future.

Grape Juice Basis For Drink

By TOM HOGE
AP Newsfeatures Writer

For more than a century, grape juice has been a favorite of kids and adults in America and has also served as an ingredient in countless sauces, salads, frostings and sweet fondues.

The versatile juice was first developed back in 1869 when Dr. Thomas B. Welch, a young dentist who served as communion steward of the Methodist Church in Vineland, N.J., cast about for a non-alcoholic substitute for the traditional wine used in Sunday communion.

The dentist pored through the works of Louis Pasteur and decided he'd try to pasteurize the juice of the American Concord grape. The experiment succeeded and the grape juice was preserved so that it could be served the year round. The drink was called "Dr. Welch's unfermented wine" and served at communion.

It wasn't long before grape juice was being served in homes from Maine to California as people became enamored of its fragrance and mellow taste.

Today, grape juice is not limited to the classic purple drink, which did a lot to popularize the Concord grape, a member of the native Lambrusca family. There is also red grape juice, made from a blending of the Concord with European or Vinifera varieties.

Today, more than 350,000 tons of Concord grapes alone are grown in various parts of the United States, including the southern shore of Lake Erie and the Finger Lakes of New York.

I have always found pure grape juice a little cloying, but it makes a fine base for a tall cool drink, especially if you use the softer red juice. The next hot day, try this recipe for summer fruit punch.

One quart plain iced tea
Two bottles red grape juice (about 38 ounces)

1 pint strawberries, sliced
2 oranges, sliced thin
2 lemons, sliced thin
2 cups canteloupe balls, small 1 pint orange sherbet
Fresh mint (optional)
Place the tea and juice in a punch bowl over ice. Add the fresh fruits and mix well. Add scoops of sherbet and allow to melt slightly before serving. Decorate with small bunches of mint, if desired, and serve. Makes about 16 servings.

Norton-Jackson Vows Exchanged On Saturday

NEW BERN — Carolyn Louise Jackson and Timothy Alan Norton were married Saturday at 2 p.m. in the Gethsemane FWB Church here in a double-ring ceremony officiated by Rev. Lonnie Mann and Rev. Earl Glenn.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Tull Jackson of New Bern. She is a senior at East Carolina University. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. David Charles Norton of Charlotte. He attended East Carolina University and is now employed with Brown-Wood Pontiac.

Escorted by her father and given in marriage by her parents, the bride wore a chiffon gown with re-embroidered Venise lace outlining the Queen Anne neckline and bodice. The sheer bishop sleeves were overlaid with lace appliques. The full chiffon skirt was enhanced with a train that flowed chapel length. She wore a matching lace headpiece attached to a three-fourths length, two-tiered illusion veil edged with Venise lace and carried a bouquet of silk flowers.

Maid of honor was Agnes White Jackson of New Bern, sister of the bride. She wore a dress of pink polyester with an eyelet embroidered waist trimmed in lace at the neck and sleeves. The full, gathered skirt was bordered at the hem with tiers of tiny ruffles. She carried a nosegay of silk flowers.

The father of the bridegroom was best man. Ushers were David Randolph Norton of Charlotte, brother of the bridegroom, and William Tull Jackson of New Bern, brother of the bride.

Wedding music was provided by pianist Mrs. Susan Lambert, and soloist Mrs. Rebecca Hill.

A reception was held following the ceremony in the fellowship hall of the church.

After a wedding trip to Virginia, the couple will reside in Greenville.

Romance May Bring A Legal Snag

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. (AP) — Despite the move toward equality between the sexes, "alienation of affection" laws are still very much alive, according to The Research Group Inc., of Charlottesville, a legal research and analysis service for attorneys.

To date, it reports, only 14 states have abolished the law by statute and two more have done so via court rulings.

Most other courts have declined to rule, saying that state legislatures should decide the issue. Therefore, in most states it appears that an alienation of affections lawsuit may still be pursued, the research organization says.

The 16 states that have struck from the books the "Heart-Balm Statute," as it is called, include: Alabama, California, Colorado, Connecticut, Florida, Illinois, Indiana, Maryland, Nevada, New Jersey, New York, Pennsylvania, Wyoming, Louisiana, Washington and Michigan.

Miss Broderick, Dr. White Speak Vows

GREENSBORO — Lorraine Joan Broderick and Dr. C. Kenneth White pledged their marriage vows at 4:00 p.m. Saturday at Christ Lutheran Church here. The Rev. Henry J. Boschen officiated at the double ring ceremony.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William L. Broderick. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. White of Kerrville, Tex.

The bride wore a candlelight taffeta dress with long sleeves. The bodice was adorned with alencon lace, matching the lace of the hem. A net veil was attached to a lace trimmed headpiece. A bouquet of orchids and lily-of-the-valley was carried by the bride.

The bride was attended by Amy McCallister of Auburn, Ala., maid of honor, Vivian Buzard of Philadelphia, Pa., Barbara Fry of New Orleans, La., Ann Martorelli of Westtown, Pa., Wendy Wilson of Namust, N.Y., and Marjorie White of College Station, Tex.

The maid of honor wore a light blue dress styled with long sleeves and square neckline edged with lace. She wore a white hat adorned with lace and blue flowers and carried a nosegay of pom poms, daisies, and baby's breath. The bridesmaids' dresses and hats were blue.

The father of the bridegroom served as best man and ushers included Geof Broderick of Greensboro, and Keith Broderick of Clemson, S. C., brothers of the bride, George McCoy of Chapel Hill, Bob Turnage of Greenville, and Chuck Wolfmuller of Kerrville, Tex., cousin of the bridegroom.

A program of wedding music was presented by Mrs. Marian Jackson, organist, and Lionel Johnson and Dr. David MacInnes, vocalists.

A reception was held immediately after the ceremony at the church. A dinner reception was held Saturday evening at the Albert Pick, Greensboro. Music was presented by the Tony DiBianca Band.

Members of the wedding party and guests were entertained at a rehearsal dinner Friday at the Le Chateau, Greensboro, following the rehearsal.

Jaycettes Hold Newcomers Party Wednesday

The Greenville Jaycettes held its yearly newcomers party Wednesday at the Jaycee Building.

The 12 members who have joined during the past year were honored and given a gift from the club including: Debbie Callow; Nancy Harrington; Billie McDowell; Irene Murray; Felice Parent; Ludie Smith; Mary Jane Sisk; Elaine Taylor; Vicki Hudson; LuAnn Rice; Eileen Foley; and Louise Perry.

The event was a "Roaring Fifties" costume party and board members entertained the group with a humorous version of life as it was then. Special events for the evening included appearances from Elvis (Charles Asbell) and the Fonz (D. Harper Taylor).

During the meeting, outgoing president, Sylvia Measemer, presented Presidential Awards to the following members who have done an outstanding job on one or more club projects the past year: Linda Asbell; Wanda Bonds; Susie Clark; Betty Cox; Ann Griffin; Donna Hatcher; Brenda Little; Pat Messick; Cindy Stack; and Donna Tripp.

Pat Messick, the incoming president, will be installed May 26 at the annual installation banquet. She gave the member challenge for the coming year.

Mrs. Asbell and Mrs. Janice Hardee, membership co-chairmen, coordinated the night's activities.

to do with a washer that devoured six pairs of socks.

Why, we could get so exclusive that after awhile we'd take Wednesdays off and not make house calls.

It goes without saying, we'd censure our own. If a woman was caught saying, "I don't work. I'm just a housewife," she'd be stripped of her Pillsbury bake-off medals and would be required to turn in her spatula.

Miss Gore Speaks At Meet Of Homemakers

May is National High Blood Pressure Month said Miss Addie Gore, extension home economics agent, as she presented the program to the Red Oak Homemakers Club.

More than 6,000 Pitt Countains are affected by hypertension and don't know it, said Miss Gore. She cited the importance of periodic checks of blood pressure.

President Mrs. J. T. Manning Jr. welcomed Mrs. Dale Panano, the new 4-H agent, as a special guest and recognized Mrs. Amos Evans as having won a ribbon in the recent flower show.

Mrs. Evans, home beautification leader, gave a report on "Ground Covers."

The theme for the Pitt County Fair "The Best is Yet to Come" was announced by Mrs. Manning and the club voted to sponsor a fair booth.

Miss Gore announce May 24 is the date for the County Council meeting and a Family Living Seminar will be held in Raleigh June 8. She also gave canning tips.

Mrs. Lucy Hannaford was hostess for the meeting.

they are. As it stands now, anyone can be a housewife. Without so much as a speck of training, they walk right in off the streets, are issued a marriage license and the next thing you know they're into windows and floors.

For starters, we thought there should be a competency test. Anyone passing it would be required to take a Hypocritical Oath to focus on domestic ethics:

Career wives (those planning on staying in it until retirement) would be required to take a Hypocritical Oath to focus on domestic ethics:

If my husband comes home for lunch, I will move.

If he refuses to stop for food on vacations and says he is looking for Mrs. Tucker's Inn, I will relieve him of his command at the next gas station.

I will not engage in fads like hot meals, bed making, dusting and balancing checkbooks.

Ovens should be cleaned every year whether they need it or not.

Any wife over 12 shall not receive an "allowance" but will share equally in the profits.

In times of severe, inclement, and confining weather, I will do what I can with a can of pumpkin, a small jar of pimentos and five gallons of frozen milk.

This oath alone should weed out the faint-hearted—especially the part about ovens.

Organization could be of great benefit to housewives. We could call ourselves the American Motherhood Association and have the initials AMA on our license plates with perhaps a plunger as a symbol.

We could wear little electronic beepers to parties and be interrupted during the main course to go to the nearest phone and answer a question from a woman who doesn't know what

Adoptive Mother Says 'Thank You'

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1978 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: It is very late but something is compelling me to write this letter.

After several years of marriage, and nearly as many miscarriages, my husband and I heard of an unwed mother-to-be who was willing to give up her unborn baby. We were thrilled, but didn't dare to get our hopes up, in case something went wrong. Well, everything went fine. We now feel that we lost our babies because God in His infinite wisdom was preparing us for the most precious gift of all—having a chosen child. He is now 8 months old, and we have never known such happiness!

When our son is old enough to understand, we will tell him of his real mother's love for him. I doubt if I could have been as unselfish as she was. Although I don't know her personally, I pray for her daily. I hope that this letter eases the aching in just one unwed mother's heart, for it expresses the gratitude all adoptive parents feel.

NEW MOTHER IN NEW YORK

DEAR NEW MOTHER: I agree. To give up a child for its own good is the ultimate in unselfishness. God bless those mothers who did.

Thanks for a most appropriate item for Mother's Day.

DEAR ABBY: National Poison Prevention Week (March 19-25) deserved more attention than it received. Everyone thinks it can't happen to them, yet last year over 600,000 loved ones (mostly children) were poisoned.

The following are a few suggestions that might save a life. I hope you will think they are worth printing:

1. Never place poisons, paints, solvents, bug sprays, etc. in pop bottles, cups or other containers customarily used for food or drink.

2. Destroy outdated medicine, chemicals or other products by flushing them down the toilet. Don't simply place them in a wastebasket where they can be retrieved by children.

3. Never refer to medicine as "candy." Children may decide later to get more "candy" on their own.

4. Avoid taking medicine in front of children. Children like to imitate adults and might decide to help themselves to some medicine. (P.S. Always turn on a light when taking medicine at night to avoid making a mistake.)

5. Keep all cleaning fluid, soap powders and medicine including aspirin and vitamins, out of the children's reach, and preferably locked up.

Other valuable information can be obtained free by writing to National Poison Prevention Group, P.O. Box 1543, Washington, D.C. 20013. Also ask your local pharmacist what to do if your child is poisoned.

PAUL IN K.C.

DEAR ABBY: Our cat is about to have kittens. My wife and I disagree on whether our boy, 5 years old, should witness this event.

We consider the child to be above average in intelligence and reasonably well-adjusted. He has already asked where babies come from. We would appreciate your opinion.

ON THE FENCE.

DEAR ON: I see no reason why the boy should not witness this event. One picture is worth 10,000 words.

If you put off writing letters because you don't know what to say, get Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters For All Occasions." Send $1 and a long, stamped (24 cents) envelope to Abby: 132 Lasky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.

Three Year Project At School Is Nearing End

FARMVILLE — Farmville Middle School nears completion of the first year of a three year, federally funded program entitled Project PROMISE.

The project's purpose is to establish a media production program to enable students to produce a variety of visual aids as part of their curriculum studies.

Production activities provided through the project make it possible for students to learn new facts while strengthening many language skills related to reading, writing, and oral expression.

A major aspect this year has been a staff development program provided for teachers.

Farmville Middle School staffers and other Pitt-County school personnel underwent a series of four workshops concerning media production during the spring.

The workshops were designed to familiarize participants with techniques in producing slides, film strips, transparencies, and other visual aids.

Teachers are now providing instructional activities for their students in media production directly related to their study of various content areas.

Response from sixth, seventh, and eighth graders at Farmville Middle has been very positive. Students have produced many types of material such as a slide set on the Middle Ages, transparencies on space technology, and film strips on Canada.

Project staffers are beginning to plan now for the second program year, which will focus on simple photography and super eight millimeter movie production.

Scheduled visitation will be possible during the 1978-79 school year. Contact Vivian Humphrey or Lorraine McNally at the school after August for visitation.

Conley High Honor Lists

D.H. Conley Principal J. R. Carraway announced the honor roll and principal's list for the past marking period.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Take time to study a new venture that appeals to you and could mean added income in the days ahead. Relax at home tonight.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Visit places where you can elevate your consciousness and enjoy life. Concentrate on the pleasant side of life.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) A good day to reflect your philosophy by attending the services of your choice. Express true happiness.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Go after those personal longings that are strong within you and get excellent results. Take time to visit good friends.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) A time when you can benefit from philosophical teachings. Have a long talk with mate and come to a true understanding.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Good day to seek the company of friends you truly like and express happiness together. Make this an ideal day.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Engage in activities that will improve your standing in the community where you live. Express happiness with family members.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Allow time to plan a new course through which you can advance faster in the future. Relax at home tonight.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Find an improved way of handling your obligations in the future. View the future with increased hope and confidence.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Study new ways to make your life richer and more satisfying. Do something thoughtful for those who have been good to you.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Think of new ways that could help you have greater abundance in the days ahead. Allow time to engage in favorite hobby.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will be able to gain much success provided you give as fine an education as you can afford. Give praise for any good work done. Teach to be more objective since there is much sensitivity in this nature. Give good ethical training.

FORECAST FOR MONDAY, MAY 15, 1978

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Spend the early part of the day deciding how to improve your lot in life. Later, put into motion a course of action to achieve these aims.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) A good time for creativity and for specific work connected therewith. Plan some recreation with friends for the immediate future.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Talk over with kin how to have more harmony at home and then enjoy recreations with them. You know what your basic aims are and can go right after them. Avoid one who is unreasonable.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Good day to go after right facts and figures so that you can be more successful in some project that means much to you. Handle that vital communication well. Then relax.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Monetary matters, reports and statements are best handled early. An expert can be helpful with any problem. Come to a better understanding with neighbors.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Handle personal matters early and then get into the practical side of your existence. Have a necessary, though friendly, talk with a good friend. Make sure you come to right decisions.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Contact a trusted adviser and solve a problem that has been bothering you. Finish off odds and ends of important work before socializing.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Know what it is that will please good friends and then follow through with your ideas. Clarification of some vital aim should be handled first. Avoid one who is not thinking straight.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Take care of a community matter before you dash out for amusement. A good time to balance your budget.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) You have new ideas you want to push early but first study them more carefully, get information you need. A new contact can prove very helpful to you.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Keep promises you have made before looking into a new project. Have more accord with a loved one. Don't go flying off the handle.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Use your best judgment in some association affair and then get busy at your part of the work involved. Use tact in handling a problem that suddenly arises.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) First finish work you promised to do and then come to a fine understanding with partners. Have a meeting of minds with co-workers.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will need to be praised for any good work done so that he or she will do even better and feel happy. Help formulate a wise course for his lifetime by providing with a good education.

College Guard Also A Dedicated Poet

MARTIN, Tenn. (AP) — You'll seldom find Darrell Simmons without a good word. And Simmons, a University of Tennessee at Martin security officer, has put those words to good use in his poems, short stories, plays and song lyrics.

"I haven't sold anything yet, but one day I will," Simmons said.

Simmons, 26, the sixth of 15 children, has been writing since he was a child in Humboldt.

In the eighth grade he wrote a poem about wisdom. He followed that with one about President Johnson.

"During that time I was just beginning to learn about civil rights, and it seemed like he was going to do something about it," Simmons recalled.

Simmons at one time considered becoming a minister, but he opted for a career in criminal justice. He graduated last spring from UTM with a degree in criminal justice, but religion still plays a big part in his work, especially his recurring theme of concern for the other person.

"You can't be a religious person and turn your back to the problems of people around you," he said. "You can't have Christianity without humanity." Simmons, who said his writing had been influenced by poets such as Langston Hughes, has long since abandoned what he calls the "immature style" of rhymed verse which he wrote as a youngster.

Instead, he now writes poetry in blank verse, saving rhyme for song lyrics — some of them rock or soul and others religious.

The words can begin flowing at any time, he said.

"I can be in the cafeteria at 12 o'clock when it's packed. I can be at my table looking out the window and be in my own world," he said. "I go over it in my head first. If it doesn't make me smile, usually I won't put it in print."

While in school, Simmons said, his writing often proved a hindrance.

"My books came second until I finished a piece I was working on."

Now that he has more free time to devote to his writing, he's been using it to do research for a historical novel about The Crossing, an area in Humboldt.

Although he enjoys his present job he dreams of becoming a full-time writer. "Maybe after the novel," he said.

Time Is Not Merely Just What The Clock Reads

By SID MOODY
AP Newsfeatures Writer
BOULDER, Colo. (AP) — "Time," said Albert Einstein, "is what a clock reads."
 Like much of what Albert Einstein said, it's not that simple.
 For instance, what time is it? Take your pick. You can have sidereal time, solar time, Greenwich Mean Time, daylight time, Ephemeris Time, local time, Coordinated Universal Time, not to mention good, hard and Early times.

Most Americans couldn't care less so long as they get to the church on time. But time, today, is of the essence. Without precise, split-second time, power blackouts could proliferate, TV screens would look like unraveled sweaters, phone calls would be gibberish and computers would talk garbage.

To make sure that doesn't happen, the Time and Frequency Division of the National Bureau of Standards spends $3.5 million a year. It keeps the country on time with a $300,000 atomic device that is accurate to within one second in 370,000 years and is kept up to date by a staff of 60 including 20 Ph.D.s.

The device not only tells time but broadcasts it. For the best of times you can dial (303) 499-7111 and check your clock against one of the most remarkable radio stations in the world, WWV in Fort Collins 50 miles north of here. In Hawaii, it's WWVH on Kauai (808) 335-4363.

WWV, in a very real sense, is the heartbeat of the United States.

Yet, as often as not, there's no one at the transmitter except for a rabbit which likes to roost under a bench by the front door. The time announcer, one of the world's most listened to, has never been to the station and lives in Atlanta. The station reaches 40 percent of the globe but hasn't sold all its commercial time.

As we said, time isn't so simple. To explain requires a trip back in time.

Philosophers have spent considerable time trying to define time. Of St. Augustine it has been said: "He knew perfectly well what time was as long as he didn't have to explain what it was he knew." Einstein, considering two clocks passing each other at high speed in space, decided time curves.

Time, if you think about it much, can get out of hand very quickly.

The main trouble with time — clock time — is that it is based on the spinning of the earth on its axis and around the sun. But the earth wobbles as it spins and it doesn't spin at a uniform rate. It speeds up in the summer and slows down in the winter. The wobble moves the poles as much as 15 meters — not enough to confuse Santa Claus but enough to throw clocks off by as much as 30 milliseconds or thousandths of a second. This adds up.

Furthermore, the earth is slowing down. In 600,000,000 B.C., a day was 21 hours. Only 1,000 years ago the workaday world had 16 fewer milliseconds to do its business.

Because the earth takes slightly more than 365 days to orbit the sun — 365.2422 currently — calendars get out of whack. That's why we have leap years. And that's why in 1582 Pope Gregory XIII reformed the calendar and decreed that the day after Oct. 4 would be Oct. 15 to make up for lost time.

Earth, in a word, is not a very reliable timekeeper.

It didn't use to matter much. Time was relative — Einstein again. Crusaders didn't have to catch airplanes, serfs didn't punch time clocks and bed time was when it got dark.

Even for those few who cared, time was a hassle. Sundials didn't work on cloudy days. Water clocks froze in winter. Early mechanical clocks were so inaccurate some didn't bother with minute hands.

But as he began roaming about his planet, man learned more about time. When Juan Sebastian del Cano in 1522 completed the circumnavigation begun by Magellan, he thought it was Sunday and wondered why the church bells ashore weren't ringing. He overlooked that he had gained a day on the sun, a miscalculation shared by Phineas Fogg in "Around the World in 80 Days."

Early explorers steered pretty much by guess and by God because they lacked accurate timepieces to tell them longitude from the predictable movements of the stars. When John Harrison finally invented an accurate clock, the chronometer, in the 18th century, a grateful British government gave him 20,000 pounds. Clock-making reliability leaped ahead, and in 1889 a pendulum clock was made that was accurate to one one-hundredth of a second a day.

By then trains were crossing continents where each town kept local time based on the noon passage of the sun. There were some 300 different local times in the United States alone. Travelers had to constantly reset their watches.

Common sense asked why not divide the country into four time zones of about 15 degrees of longitude each, the distance traversed by the sun in an hour. Common sense prevailed, and at noon Nov. 18, 1883, the U.S. Naval Observatory telegraphed the time of its master clock to major cities across the country. We were thence on zone time to the horror of farmers who predicted cows would stop giving milk and hens would stop laying eggs. Daylight time came along during World War I to save fuel.

Since it doesn't help much to tell time without telling it to the people who use it, the National Bureau of Standards, those folks who tell us how long a yard is and how much of a pound weighs a pound, opened WWV in Washington in 1923 to announce the hours, minutes and seconds in accord with a master clock.

Why? Because crusaders now were beginning to catch planes. Serfs were punching time clocks. Being "on time" — for school, work, movies, trains — was important. Time had become money. It became that and more as technology burgeoned.

Today, power grids feed electricity to each other at 60 cycles a second. If the cycles aren't precisely in phase, ruinous surges can develop. Keeping the cycles in strict cadence also means your electric clock keeps correct time.

TV stations need calibration of their frequencies as precise as one part in 10 billion to keep neighboring channels from interfering with each other's picture, producing spaghetti-like chaos. Phone cables carry multiple calls that have to be timed like eye-blink traffic lights to keep words from smashing into each other. Computers can't do their split-second thing without a master Toscanini timing their thinking. Without finely tuned navigational systems, an Air India flight, say, might end up in Swaziland instead of Bombay.

The earth, however, insists on marching to a different drummer what with the wobbling and all. Earth time, also called Universal Time, also varies too much to keep "60 Minutes" from blipping into "Charlie's Angels."

This error, however, can be measured by predicted movements of celestial bodies. This is Ephemeris Time, but it takes observations over a nine-year period to make it accurate to within 0.05 seconds. Too much time to get the right time. What the world needed was a better second, the basis of time.

Simple math shows there are 86,400 seconds in a day. But with the earth spinning so erratically, some seconds are longer or shorter than others. So in 1956, by which time UT was some 30 seconds behind ET since 1900, science came up with the Ephemeris Second. This was adopted at an international conference, international because it makes no sense to know the time in New York if it isn't also the time in Paris. The Ephemeris Second is based on the so-called tropical year which is about 20 minutes shorter than the sidereal year which will only confuse you, but don't say you weren't told.

But what sort of clock would tick off perfect Ephemeris Seconds, tropical year in and tropical year out? One that had neither main spring nor wobbling earth as its base but something in nature well respected for its being on time.

Since the 1920s, scientists had been studying the natural frequencies emitted by atoms and molecules under particular circumstances. Anything that does this is a potential clock, which is, after all, but a dial attached to something that pulses or ticks in a regular cadence. Einstein, yet again.

So NBS developed such a "counter" using atoms of cesium. The "bureaucrats of time" held another international meeting in 1967. These are learned men from such earthly bodies as the International Polar Motion Service and the Consultative Committee for the Definition of the Second as well as the top dog of all time, le Bureau International de l'Heure (BIH) in Paris which, mes enfants, began beaming radio time from la Tour d'Eiffel in 1910.

The world's clockwatchers thereupon determined that a second would be the time it took a cesium atom to make 9,192,631,770 oscillations which a cesium atom will do every time if you treat it right. We now had Atomic Time (AT).

Tougher Course Loads At West Point

By DON HOLLOSCHUTZ
WEST POINT, N.Y. (UPI) — George Storck says West Point cadets like Leslie Szabolcsi and Carol Barkalow have a tougher course load and less time to "fritter" away than he did when he went to the academy nearly 25 years ago.

Of course, 25 years ago, there wouldn't even be a Carol Barkalow at the U.S. Military Academy since women were not allowed until July 1976.

"The cadets today have a much heavier academic load than I did in my time," says Storck, a member of the class of '54 and assistant director of the West Point intercollegiate sports program.

"The world has changed so much, there is so much more information now. I had much more time to myself so we had more fun at being cadets," Storck said in an interview at the academy. "We could fritter away a couple of hours each day and not get behind in our work."

The basic outline of the cadet's day has not radically changed in 25 years.

According to Storck and the two cadets, a typical cadet day will begin about 6 a.m. with the morning and early afternoons devoted primarily to classes.

The late afternoon is set aside for athletics, either intramural or intercollegiate.

The 5-foot-8-inch Miss Barkalow plays "center or forward" for the "Sugar Smacks." West Point's all women's 18-5 basketball team.

Szabolcsi, 25, of Cincinnati is president of the class of 1978 and is a regimental commander.

Evening hours are mainly for studying. "Taps" for Storck was at 10 p.m. but it is now 11 p.m. Miss Barkalow, a sophomore, says she will study until 11:30 p.m. and Szabolcsi will stay with the books until 1 a.m.

West Point cadets have slang words for all their courses like "dirt" for soils class and "juice" for electrical engineering, according to sophomore Joan Zech, 20, of Enumclaw, Wash.

She says the arrival of women at the academy gave rise to new slang.

"Before (male) plebes were called 'beans', now women plebes are 'beanettes' or 'sugar smacks', she said. "A sophomore was a 'yearling' or 'yuck' but we are 'dearlings' or 'yuckettes'."

"A junior is a 'cow,' but we don't have a name for women. We haven't gotten to that year yet."

The women live two in a room in the same barracks as the men.

"Everybody has to be decent in the halls now, you know, like wearing a robe," she smiled. "I think before we came there was a tendency to streak in the hallways."

And what would life be without pranks and escapades?

"The night before finals, anyone close to deficiency in academics will sneak out of the barracks after midnight in full dress with a rifle and go up to the Sedgwick monument (John Sedgwick, a Civil War major general) and spin his spurs for good luck," said Szabolcsi.

Miss Barkalow, 19, of Laurel, Md., recalls how the plebes "last spring took all the dinner plates from the dining room and laid them out on the Plain (the academy parade ground)."

Col. James Anderson, head of the academy's physical education department and a member of the class of 1956, says cadets would bring in baby alligators from Florida, "plug up the showers in the barracks and put the alligators in a little pool of water."

"Then they would wait until someone came along put his foot in there and run out screaming."

Col. Edward Saunders, head of the Physics Department and a graduate of the class of 1946, remembers the "airborne" guinea pig division when he was an instructor at the Point in the early 1950s.

"They called this 'jump qualifying,'" he recalled. "The cadets would keep guinea pigs in the barracks, which was against the rules. They would drop them (the guinea pigs) out the fourth floor window, each with a little parachute."

Saunders said that "one of the guinea pigs was killed making a jump so the cadets gave it a full military funeral."

WEST POINT, N.Y. (UPI) — The U.S. Military Academy has revamped its curriculum in one of the "most comprehensive changes" in West Point's history.

"There must be a strengthening of the cadets' attitude towards academics," said Lt. Gen. Andrew Goodpaster, the academy superintendent. "There has been some loss of that over the past years. We need a tightening of standards in that area."

Under the curriculum revision, starting with the academic term in September, the academy's core curriculum will be changed from 42 courses with six electives to 30 courses with 10 electives.

"I would call it one of the most comprehensive changes in the history of the academy," Col. Kermit Henninger, special assistant to the academy superintendent for policy and planning. He said it will allow cadets to "go into greater depth in each subject."

"The courses will have more detail and we will expand the time for more studying so that cadets will study two hours for every hour in class," Henninger said. "Now it varies from about one to one and a half hours."

For the first time in the academy's history, the core program's emphasis will be more on the humanities than on the hard sciences — 54 percent to 46 percent — but one officer said, "there was no attack on the MSE area, so they can go as far as they could in the old curriculum."

The emphasis now is 51 percent hard sciences and 49 percent humanities.

Since World War II the academy has increased the emphasis on humanities "to give cadets a balanced education."

"The academy will still present the bachelor of science degree to its graduates."

Henninger and other officers say it will take anywhere from one to four years or possibly more to see whether the curriculum and other changes will work. He said more changes will be made quickly if any problems arise.

The changes stem from a study made last year by three generals that said the Point is plagued by poor morale, a lack of supervision and planning, "intellectual inbreeding of the faculty," resistance to change, negative attitudes toward learning by cadets and a pervasive lack of humor.

Some of the 596 faculty members, most of whom are Army officers, are disturbed over the curriculum revision.

Col. James Anderson, head of physical education, feels the revised curriculum may take away time from the physical education and military training programs which were not altered.

"We are talking about time," he said during a recent interview at his office in the academy's gymnasium. "How much time of the cadet's time will be devoted to intellectual development, how much time will be for military development, how much for moral and physical development."

"The question is what is the proper balance?"

THANK YOU!

We would like to take this opportunity to express our sincere appreciation to the individuals, businesses, civic organizations, and clubs that participated in "Beautification Week."

Those working directly with the Beautification Committee are The Lakewood Pines Garden Club, which planted azaleas, camellias, ground plants and a large dogwood, did an outstanding job on the central courtyard at E.B. Aycock Junior High School. The students demonstrated the pride in their school by planting 1,000 tulip bulbs.

We feel that the Westhaven Garden Club and Lyndale Garden Club did an excellent job beautifying their entrances.

When traveling in the area of the ADAP Center, the endeavors of the Grass Roots Garden Club is easily recognized. The geraniums these ladies planted are lovely.

The ever beauty of the Greenville Art Center continues due to the efforts of the Home Pride Garden Club. The ladies put in several hours of hard work to maintain that fresh, manicured appearance. The Women's Residence Council and the Alpha Delta Pi Sorority of East Carolina University are two concerned groups of ladies that tackled a major clean-up of the Fifth and Tenth Street Entrances of the University. Other major clean-up projects were conducted by the Pitt County Boy's Club and Boy Scout Troop 452. The Boys Club asserted themselves to areas on the 264 By-Pass, Evans Street, and The Greenville Square Shopping Center. McDonalds showed their appreciation by treating the boys to lunch at McDonalds and furnished the trash bags for the clean-up. The Boy Scouts concentrated their efforts on Tenth Street and were treated by Burger King.

We are thrilled at the success of "Beautification Week" and are overwhelmed at the community pride shown last week. We can only hope that this letter has stirred the community pride in our readers. Beautification Week is more than a one week event each year-it should continue 52 weeks a year. We look forward to spending some time with our citizens on April 27 and 28, at the Greenville Art Center when the Lyndale Garden Club sponsors their annual flower show and as beautification continues.

Sincerely yours,
Kurt Fickling, Chairman
GACC Beautification Committee

Active Mother Of Five Girls Has Many Ambitions

CERAMIC-MAKING... is one of Mrs. Lederfeind's many delights. She and her daughter, Shari, "work up" some clay.

"Mommy's About 87 And A Half"

"How old do you think Daddy is?" I asked the children as they gathered 'round me years ago while I led their father's birthday cake.

"Oh, about 16," one of them answered, and the others nodded in agreement. That made me feel good. "Wow," I thought, "they see us really young!"

"And how old do you think Mommy is?" I inquired after a few minutes.

An answer was longer in coming, but soon one of them said, "About 87 and a half."

"87 and a half — it's been my age ever since a time shortly after that cake-decorating session when I'd had time to mull over the many appealing possibilities of being 87 and a half."

"When you are 87 and a half, no one tells you what to do. If you do anything at all, few people are going to tell you how much better you should've done it."

"If you can move around at all, you're doing great, in your estimation and others."

"But most of all, you realize the impermanence of life and consider each day and each person you meet a gift."

"I decided then and I still feel that being 87 and a half is just great and it's the only age I ever want to be."

—Linda Lederfeind

NOW, HENRY!... Mrs. Lederfeind chides after a disparaging remark from her one of her puppet friends.

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

Greenville resident Linda Lederfeind tells her 87-and-a-half story in an appealing, jesting manner, but one senses truth.

Age seems to mean nothing to her. She's the "happily divorced mother of five daughters and a recent graduate of East Carolina University's School of Art."

Her first two years of general college were obtained at Southeastern Community College in Whiteville, where she graduated "with high honors" with an Associate of Arts degree. This was while her older children were teenagers and her younger ones were in grade school.

She and her family moved to Clarkton, near Whiteville, in 1951. A native of Marathon, N. Y., which had "a population of 1,200 counting the cemetery," according to her, she also loved art. "My mom loves to tell," she said, "that when a relative asked why I went to kindergarten, I replied, 'because of the art teacher.'" In high school, too, she concentrated on art and was fortunate to be in an early centralized school which had a very strong art department.

It was during high school, though, that she and her mother were told she was going to go blind. "I had had an extremely large loss of vision over a period of two years," she said, "and my doctor assumed that it would be progressive."

"So I began to prepare myself mentally as best I could to be blind. I decided that if I couldn't draw and couldn't read, something else I dearly loved, I'd be a musician. I joined the band and learned all the instruments I could."

"My vision didn't get too much worse, though, so I decided to give architecture a try and began taking drafting courses at Syracuse University."

After two years of college, she married a graduate student and didn't go back to school. The five daughters arrived in quick succession.

The marriage faltered, she said, years before she and her husband were separated. "I kept trying, though," she said, "because this is what I'd always been taught. When you make a promise, you keep it if it kills you."

Finally, she said, the deterioration of the relationship was great enough that she, with the approval of her children, left her husband and moved to Greenville.

At the time of the move, two of her daughters were

East Carolina University students. These two now live together in San Francisco, where both have jobs. "The two of them take care of each other," she said. "Linda has lupus erythematosus, a strange potentially fatal disease in which the body seems to start to reject certain of its own organs. She started with it when she was 17. "Difficult problems for persons with this condition are sunlight and changes in the weather. San Francisco has become a haven for them, because it is overcast there so much of the time and the temperature is so nearly the same all year 'round." Edie went with her sister when the family decided that it was best that Linda go there, and both seem to be very happy there, their mother says.

Here with their mother are Lucy, 14, Shari, 17, and Terry, 23. Any of the three will tell at the slightest provocation what a great Mom they have and how proud they are of her continuing of her education and of the art works she's done in recent years.

Mrs. Lederfeind finished work for her degree in art education in March of 1977, but she stayed in school until August of the same year to do something she felt she must. She insisted on getting reading certification, though this is, of course, not a requirement for an art education major. "I feel so strongly," she said, "that art is communication and reading is communication and that every teacher of any subject should also know how to teach reading. Without good reading skills, a person just cannot be educated."

Mrs. Lederfeind, who uses the signature "Leedy," on most of her work, does everything from paintings to ceramics to large sculptured pieces to detailed pen and ink and charcoal drawings. Much of her work is sold at "The Mushroom" gallery here.

She loves puppeteering, a hobby she developed while working with senior citizens in a community action program in Whiteville. "Henry and Charlie can get people to open up and share quicker than most 'humans' would dream of," she said.

She's also done such diverse things as get her First Aid certification, refinish store window mannequins, write poetry, and write and illustrate a children's book.

"Living is art. Art is living," she said. "Some people let life be such a chore. I can honestly say that I have enjoyed my life so far, even with its trying times, and that I have enjoyed my children. I have never felt they belong to me, and I hope I will never hold them back from anything they feel they must do. I just hope they'll continue to grow and be the kind of people I'll like."

As for her ambitions, she says she'd like to fill more of her time with teaching art, to continue to turn out new and varied art pieces, to eventually work on her Master's degree in art, to sketch more, learn more about woodworking, learn more about astronomy... her list goes on and on.

Many Considerations Apply To Raising The Ironclad 'Monitor'

RALEIGH — What can be learned from a rusted metal plate? Much, according to underwater archeologists. These experts will take one of the first steps in the determination of the future of the U.S.S. "Monitor," which has been called "the little ship that launched a modern navy."

Several small samples will be cut from a 200 pound bottom plate recovered from the hull of the sunken "Monitor" and sent to different laboratories around the country for analysis.

The ironclad "Monitor" which has rested upside down in deep water off the coast of North Carolina since it sank 116 years ago, was located by a research team in 1973. Since then its future has been vigorously debated by historians, scientists, underwater archeologists and maritime preservationists. Observing from the sidelines are Civil War buffs, "Monitor" enthusiasts and the public.

A national conference on the "Monitor" was held in Raleigh in early April bringing together scientists from all over the United States and from as far away as Sweden to try to decide the best course for the "Monitor's" remains.

The National Oceanographic and Atmospheric Administration has jurisdiction over the "Monitor" site, since, for its protection, it was designated as the first "marine sanctuary" in 1975. The state Division of Archives and History under an agreement with the federal agency, is responsible for reviewing proposals for exploration of the site and for conducting a management program of the site.

Brief History
The "Monitor's" history is brief but monumental. Designed by Sweden's Captain John Ericsson, the ironclad was launched January 30, 1862, as controversy raged over her innovative design. Her historic encounter with the South's scourge, the "Merrimack" occurred March 9, 1862.

In December, 1862, the "Monitor" was enroute to Beaufort to join in a land and sea attack against Wilmington when she was lost in a storm off Cape Hatteras — the "graveyard of the Atlantic" claiming one more.

Initial Recovery Efforts

Four years after the initial discovery of the remains, in August, 1977, the 36 by 64 inch metal plate, dislodged from the wreck during photographing operations, was recovered. The plate's location had been previously documented with underwater cameras, so the recovery was not too difficult, according to Gordon Watts, underwater archaeologist with the state Division of Archives and History.

A brass ship's distress lantern, probably the last thing visible before the "Monitor" went down, was recovered at the same time and is undergoing preservation and treatment at the Smithsonian Institution.

Cutting By Laser

Cutting the plate will most likely be done by laser, Watts thinks. "As some of the samples will come from inside the plate, the laser offers the advantage in that cutting can start at any point on the plate," he said. "As there is some indication that the plate will be used for display following analysis and preservation, this is more appropriate and desirable than mechanical cutting."

Ten small — two by eight inch — samples will be cut from the plate. Six will be analyzed by Archives and History; two sent to Dr. Harold Edgerton of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology; and two sent to Dr. Robert Sheridan of the University of Delaware for tests.

Extensive Analysis

Extensive analysis of the plate, according to Watts, will be conducted by personnel from the Naval Research Laboratory and the Francis L. LaQue Laboratory in Wrightsville Beach. Testing and analysis will include evaluations of the metal strength, extent of contamination, extent of deterioration, concretion composition (rust buildup) and accumulation, and composition of the metal.

Watts estimates the time for all the tests at the various laboratories will take 12 to 18 months.

After the examinations and processing, a wax coating will be applied, and the plate remains and the sample strips will be suitable for display. Preservation will take place at the Texas Archaeological Research Laboratory in Austin, Texas.

Two Questions

After the plate's analysis, Watts reiterated the two major questions which need to be considered regarding the historic ironclad. "The first," he said, "is to define the value of the remains of the "Monitor." This will require a comprehensive examination of the remains from all perspectives, such as historical, technological, archaeological, educational, recreation.

"The second major consideration involves the most appropriate ultimate disposition of the remains. To answer this question, we will need to examine the merits of leaving the wreck in its present location, recovering portions of the wreck, recovering all of the remains, and many other options. In addition, we will need to examine each of these options in light of the value of the site, existing technology, potential funding, preservation and other considerations.

Many federal, state and private groups also are reviewing the options for the "Monitor's" future. Archives and History has been given the task of submitting a master plan for the ship.

Warning

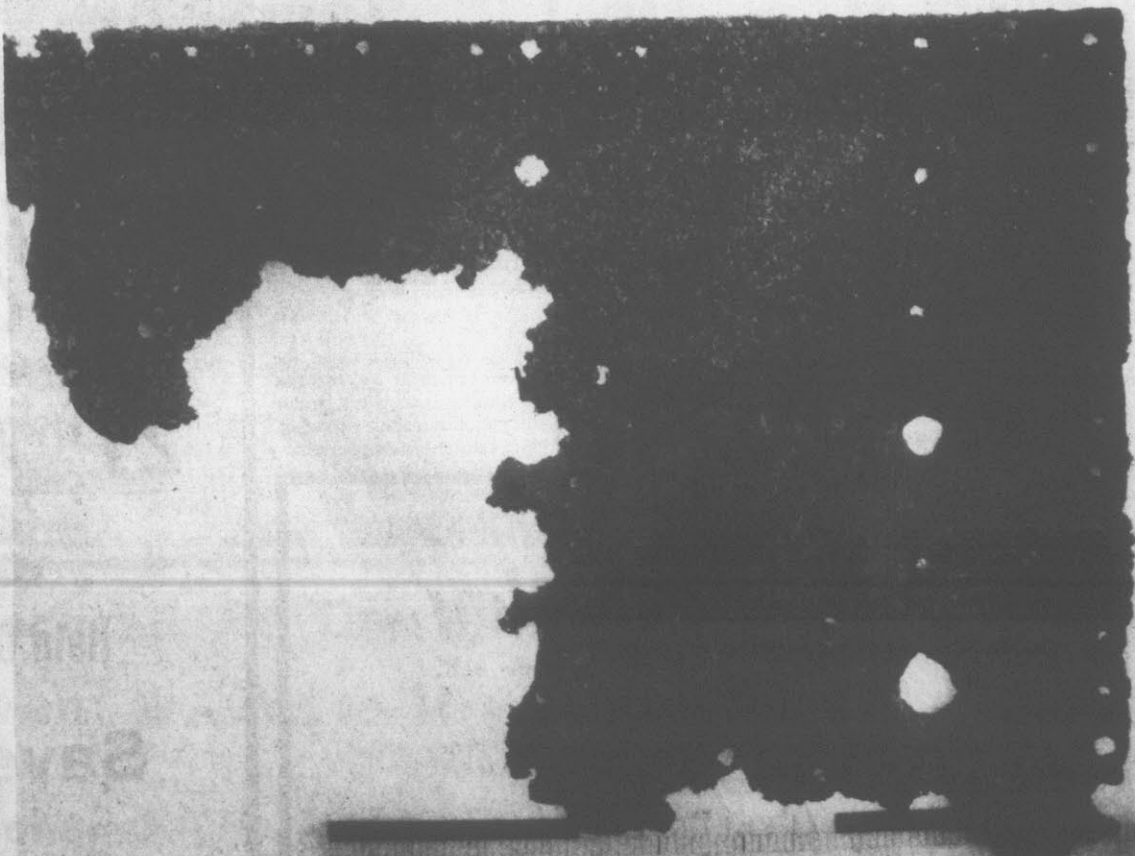

Researchers warn, however, that the "Monitor," which went down in the cold Atlantic on New Year's Eve 1862, will not be the same ship which is raised, if, indeed, it is ever raised. Time and the sea have taken their toll.

So, the small parts of the metal plate to be examined, along with the recovered distress lantern — all that have been removed for public study from one of the most important warships built in the last two centuries and one that foretold the end of the wooden warship — will be the first steps in the long series of operations designed to determine the best future for the "cheesebox on a raft."

New Bridges Will Span The Danube

SLENDER SPAN—The simple new Reichsbrücke Bridge over the Danube won't compete for attention with Vienna's new U.N. Center rising in background. It replaces the bridge that crumbled in August 1976.

By ROLAND PRINZ
VIENNA, Austria (AP) — A local joke says that when a Viennese raises two fingers of one hand, making it look like Winston Churchill's "V" for victory in World War II, he means "we still have two bridges."

The landmark Reichsbrücke, or Empire Bridge, collapsed on August 1, 1976. It was termed a miracle that the cave-in took only one life, a motorist whose car was thrown into the Danube.

Shortly thereafter, the so-called Floridsdorfer Bridge upriver from the Reichsbrücke had to be closed because it was in bad shape. It left Vienna with only two fully operational road bridges over the Danube.

This is an embarrassing situation because the new U.N. Center on the Northern bank of the Danube is to be opened in the second half of 1979. The Reichsbrücke was to have linked it with downtown Vienna. The new Reichsbrücke cannot be finished by the time the U.N. Center is to open.

For this reason, and for its modest design, the new Reichsbrücke has become a topic of discussion. Its builders say that unlike the old Reichsbrücke, which had a landmark look, the new one should not compete for attention with the impressive U.N. Center.

There is a temporary road bridge over the Danube at the site of the Reichsbrücke, but it has traffic only in one lane in each direction.

As to the Floridsdorfer Bridge, it is hurriedly being rebuilt by three Austrian steel and engineering companies for 940 million schillings (about $63 million).

A spokesman for the builders said that after a record 18 months' construction work, the new Floridsdorfer Bridge would be opened in mid-October 1978.

The builders had to agree to a penalty payment of over $16,000 for each day they delay completion of the steel bridge beyond Oct. 13, 1978. This reflects the eagerness of the Vienna city fathers to get the bridge finished as soon as possible.

Half a mile downstream, where the new Reichsbrücke is to span the "blue Danube," things are more complicated, and in fact more embarrassing. However fast workmen do their job, the 38-month schedule cannot be cut short.

Some time before the bridge is finished, the two U.N. organizations already based in Vienna — the International Atomic Energy Agency and the U.N. Industrial Development Organization — and other groups may move into what is locally known as "U.N. City." The makeshift bridge for vehicles and another for streetcars are considered inadequate to cope with the traffic.

Following an international competition, a group of five Austrian firms won the $43-million contract for the construction of the new concrete bridge, in which prefabricated parts are also used.

"We got the contract because we had the intriguing, yet obvious idea of packing the north-bound line of the future Vienna subway into the bridge, and because we were cheapest," Wolfgang Huber, the construction site manager, said.

"We would have needed the hollow concrete tube under the road surface anyway — so why not use it for the subway," he told The Associated Press.

Huber said that "the only disadvantage I can see is that for several seconds future subway passengers will speed through a kind of tunnel running under the bridge instead of having a full view of the Danube underneath."

Huber's team of 20 technicians and 200 workmen have a big task ahead of them. "Our work can be roughly subdivided into three phases," Huber said. "First, we have to remove the remaining chunks of the collapsed bridge, including the old piers. Then we must re-route traffic flowing on the old approaches and across the makeshift bridges. Only afterwards can we start construction."

The new Reichsbrücke is a self-supporting concrete structure. It measures 785 feet and rests on piers without traditional suspension.

From an architectural point of view, Huber said, planners avoided making the bridge a dominating structure, as the old Reichsbrücke was. Anyway, Huber said, the new bridge was expected to be open to traffic some time in fall 1981.

Golden Straws To Sip Beer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Beer drinkers of ancient Mesopotamia sipped their beverage through reeds or tubes, reports Philip C. Katz, senior vice president of research services, United States Brewers Association.
One golden straw, belonging to Queen Shu-bad of Mesopotamia, is now on exhibit at the University of Pennsylvania Museum in Philadelphia. During her reign, brewing, a highly-respected profession, employed women as master brewers. Today, in the United States the brewing industry employs some 50,000 men and women with a total aggregate salary of $800 million annually.

"... to uncover and preserve forgotten photographic archives and to present them to the public ..."

That was one of the founding aims in the birth of the International Center of Photography (ICP), New York City's mecca for photography and photographers. That purpose has been more than fulfilled with the current exhibition, "Spontaneity & Style: Munkacsi," on view at the museum's landmark building on upper Fifth Avenue. The display will run through May 21st.

The name and fame of Martin Munkacsi have faded into oblivion gradually these past three decades. But back in 1934 Munkacsi exploded into view as the top high-fashion photographer and he remained its leading light for almost 10 years. He earned more than $100,000 a year — an incredible sum for that time — owned a lavish triplex apartment in mid-Manhattan and an estate on Long Island with a stable of horses, a collection of guns and a sumptuous pool. His models were out of Society's Blue Book and glamorous celebrities such as Greta Garbo, Marlene Dietrich and Katherine Hepburn. The way he directed and pictured them in the pages of Harper's Bazaar was reflected and imitated by women around the world.

The retrospective ICP exhibit parades 150 examples of Munkacsi's photography from his start as a sports photographer in his native Hungary in the 1920s, to his photojournalistic era in Berlin, and finally to the peak of fashion world success in America.

And behind the exhibit, Munkacsi's personal story is a fascinating one of rags to riches although the ending is sad. When he died at age 67, he was barely getting by and had a series of heart attacks, which made his life, both professionally and socially, difficult.

Carmel Snow, newly-appointed editor at Harper's Bazaar in 1933, first invited Munkacsi to America. She recognized the need for a new approach to fashion photography and he had achieved fame as a photojournalist in Europe. His response to Carmel Snow's challenge was revolutionary at that time but seems basic today. He took fashion photography out of the stuffy studio with its painted backdrops and artificial props and put it into the open arena of life. He imbued his models with zest and animation in expressions and in action poses — and that simple fundamental changed the course of fashion photography.

SPONTANEITY & STYLE were brought together by Hungarian photographer Martin Munkacsi to revolutionize high fashion photography in America starting in 1934. Here's an example of his photography in Europe around 1930. Years of research have made possible an exhibition of Munkacsi's photography at the International Center of Photography.

fashion world's recent giants, acknowledges his debt to Munkacsi in this tribute: "He brought a taste for happiness and honesty and love of women to what was, before him, a joyless, loveless, lying art. He did it first, and today the world of what is called fashion is peopled with Munkacsi's babies, his heirs."

Munkacsi's health and fortune began to change after his first heart attack in 1943. Assignments became less lucrative and he turned to films and writing but the glamorous days were over. When he died in 1963, many of his best negatives were thrown out by his landlady along with some of his belongings.

The ICP exhibition is the result of investigative research in Europe and America. It began in London with Colin Osman, editor of the English magazine, "Creative Camera." In 1971, while studying old photographic yearbooks, he was struck by Munkacsi's work and realized it was a forgotten treasure. On a trip to America, he tracked down former Munkacsi associates and a famous fellow Hungarian photojournalist, Andre Kertesz. The latter led Osman to Munkacsi's daughter, Joan, who had some of her father's old prints, writings and some negatives in cartons and suitcases.

Osman's next stop was Budapest where he found tearsheets from the publications Munkacsi had worked for in the early 1920s. Then on to Berlin where he searched through archives of the Ullstein publications for Munkacsi pictures starting in

The arduous research led to a 32-page portfolio of Munkacsi's work in Creative Camera's 1977 Yearbook.

Meanwhile, in New York, another investigation had begun by Hungarian-born Cornell Capa, director of the International Center of Photography. Through an aunt, he tracked down a Mrs. Sinclair who had been married earlier to Martin Munkacsi. She was storing some of daughter Joan's cartons in her apartment and she revealed that a Londoner, Colin Osman, was also interested in Munkacsi. Capa went to London to see Osman and they joined forces and began planning the Munkacsi exhibition.

The continued search for more photographs was aided by a grant from the National Endowment for the Arts. Capa's director of the exhibition at ICP, William Ewing, sought further help from two former editors of Harper's Bazaar, Nancy White and John Esten. They went through old archives and bound volumes of the magazine and their efforts revealed some of Munkacsi's best published images. These were turned over to Scott Hyde, a specialist in copying techniques, to produce exhibition prints.

It took teamwork and tedious research to make "Spontaneity & Style: Munkacsi," a successful exhibition. It has revitalized the name of Martin Munkacsi, revived his photography and reminded us that fame and fortune may not be as permanent as the pictures they leave behind.

Offering Free Fire Inspection

The Greenville Fire Fighters Association in conjunction with the Greenville Fire Department is now conducting home safety and fire inspections. This service is free to any citizen of Greenville and is done by off-duty To make an appointment, call 752-2554, between 5 and 10 p.m. any day during the week.

The association will also present a demonstration and slide show on smoke detectors and the use of fire extinguishers to any group or organization within the city.

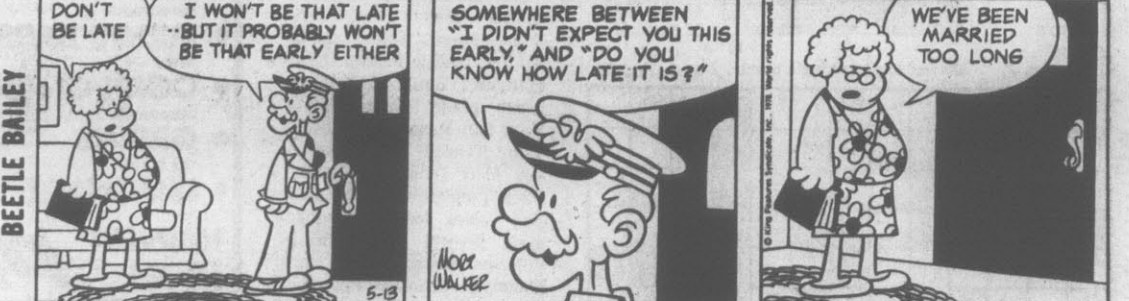

Chilled Candles Burn Longer

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (UPI) — Refrigerate candles if you want them to burn longer and drip less, says Travis Land, a spokesman for Hallmark, a candle manufacturer. Candles should be wrapped in foil or some other airtight material to keep them dry. Only a few are enough to last through even a severe power shortage, Land said. He said three-inch diameter rounds will burn about 11 hours for each inch of height. A six-inch round could burn more than two and a half days. Votive candles have 8-10 hours burn time and a 12-inch taper will burn about six hours, he said.

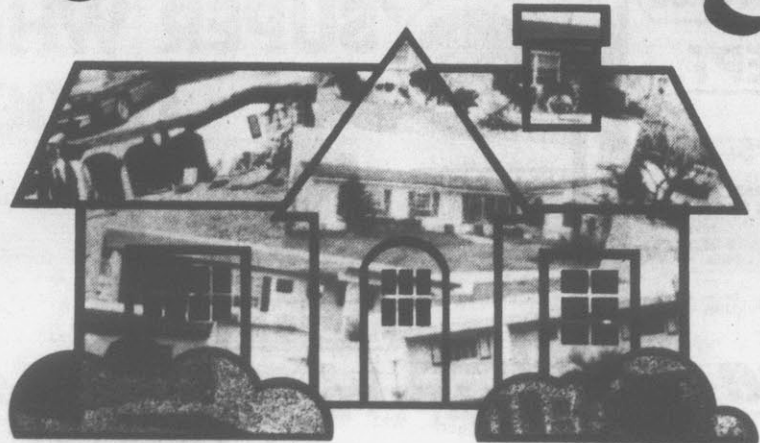

MOTHER? — A mother cat belonging to Mr. and Mrs. Bill Nelson of Ada, Okla., moved her four new kittens into the family's hen box and the hen promptly adopted them. She allows the mother cat into the box to feed the kittens, but then resumes sitting after she leaves. The kittens are about three weeks old. (AP Laserphoto)

AIRCRAFT MAINTENANCE OPPORTUNITIES IN IRAN

Sure you can do what everyone else does... but why should you?

Bell Helicopter International has immediate openings in IRAN for ambitious individuals. We are seeking people with aircraft maintenance skills to train Iranians in the establishment of their Army Aviation. The following positions are available:

- HELICOPTER MECHANICS • AIRCRAFT MECHANICS
- DYNAMIC COMPONENT MECHANICS • AVIONICS TECHNICIANS • ARMAMENT REPAIRMEN • AIRCRAFT FIRE CONTROL TECHNICIANS • RECORDS CLERKS
- G.S.E. MECHANICS • AIRCRAFT TECHNICAL INSPECTORS • PRODUCTION CONTROL CLERKS
- JIG & FIXTURE BUILDERS • TEMPLATE & FORM BLOCK BUILDERS • MATERIAL BONDERS

Qualifications include solid background in either military or civilian aviation manufacturing environment. Experience in OJT training is desirable in the maintenance areas. The ability to train on a one-to-one or one-to-several person basis is required.

BHI offers excellent compensation and benefit programs as well as relocation and transportation expenses. Additionally, we offer a housing supplement and cost-of-living allowance. We provide an intensive transition course for most of the above positions. For those with children, BHI has opportunities in major cities in Iran with good schooling and medical facilities and for those without children... remote assignments with additional bonus incentives.

FOR IMMEDIATE ATTENTION, direct your correspondence in confidence to:

'OLIVIA' Takes Musical Journey To Land Of Innocence And Dreams

MUSICAL TREATS ON ABC—"The Carpenters: Space Encounters" (8-9 p.m.) starring Richard and Karen Carpenter with special guests Suzanne Somers, John Davidson and Charlie Callas performing their universally-loved music from a galactic setting will be followed by "Olivia" (9-10 p.m.) starring Olivia Newton-John and her guests, Andy Gibb and the singing group ABBA Wednesday, May 17.

Two musical presentations featuring some of today's most popular recording artists will air back-to-back Wednesday, May 17, on ABC-TV. Karen and Richard Carpenter host "The Carpenters...Space Encounters" from 8 to 9 p.m., and Olivia Newton-John takes viewers on a musical flight into fantasy in "OLIVIA" (9 to 10 p.m.), a special visit to the land of innocence and dreams.

When the Carpenter's universally loved music resounds from a galactic setting, you'll see laser beams, robots, celestial beings, spaceships and stellar guest stars.

"We just worked about two months on our other two TV specials," Richard said. "But this one has really taken a lot of work. Jerry Weintraub, our producer, contacted us about six months ago, and we've worked on it ever since."

Both Karen and Richard are excited over hosting the first 'space-oriented' special on TV, "even though it did take us 82 hours to tape it...a one-hour show!" he exclaimed.

There were many difficult aspects of the taping, and most of the difficulty, says Karen, centered around the laser (actual) beams. "It wasn't easy for Richard to play the piano with those beams dancing around his head...shooting in front of him and on either side. And the camera men had a terrible time," she laughed, "because the camera crane kept running into the beams."

Karen and Richard's guest stars are Suzanne Somers, John Davidson and Charlie Callas. "Suzanne's a real delight to work with, and so is John," said Richard. "And Charlie Callas is crazy!" Karen interjected.

Olivia Newton John's special guests are young singing sensation Andy Gibb, The James Cleveland Choir, and ABBA, the internationally famed rock group from Sweden.

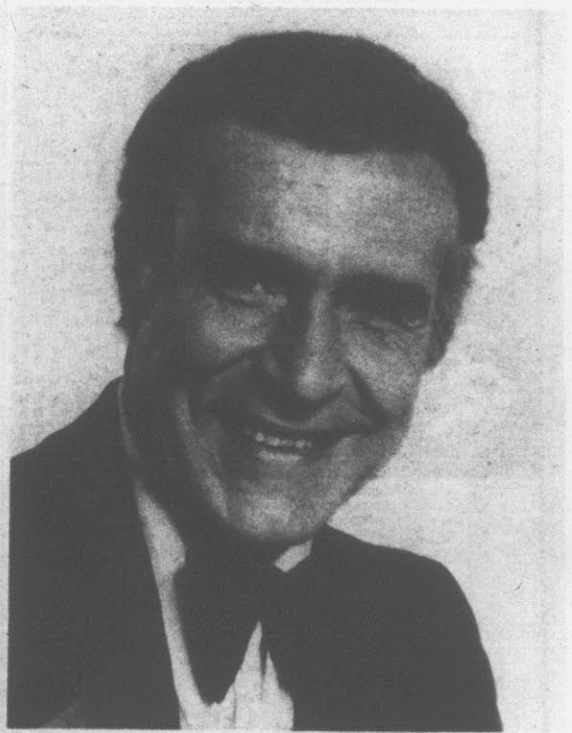

The lure of the old schoolyard takes Olivia and her guests back to the delights of childhood, where "everything in the world seemed possible — as long as it was less than four feet off the ground." There, through the magic of the cameras and a child's imagination, life becomes a giant board game as their songs and comedy lead them from birth through high school (with a film scene of Olivia and John Travolta in "Grease") and on to the quest for success, the mating game and children of their own.

Talk About A Charmer

Mention the name Ricardo Montalban and several descriptive words come to mind: handsome, masculine, talented, intelligent, charismatic and charming. Talk about a charmer. Montalban, exuding all these qualities, will be starring as special guest host on "Festival of the Stars: Mexico," airing Thursday, May 18, 9 to 11 p.m., on CBS-TV. Sharing the hosting duties with Ricardo will be Suzanne Somers and John Ritter.

His trek to Mexico to host this special is really a homecoming for Montalban, who was born in Mexico City. He received his early education there, then emigrated to the United States to be with his older brother. He finished his schooling in Hollywood, and it was there that he attracted the attention of studio talent scouts. Immediately following high school graduation, he was offered an MGM screen test.

Ricardo Montalban is special guest host for "Festival of the Stars: Mexico," two-hour musical-variety entertainment special taped in locations throughout Mexico, to be broadcast Thursday, May 18 (9-11 p.m.) on CBS.

Bradford Portrays Booth

Bradford Dillman stars as John Wilkes Booth, the accused assassin of President Abraham Lincoln, in "The Lincoln Conspiracy" — a historical drama focusing on events surrounding the tragic death of the Civil War leader — to be colorcast on NBC-TV's "The Big Event" Tuesday, May 16, 8 to 10 p.m.

New and documented evidence recently uncovered by researchers reveals all of the startling facts pertaining to the President's assassination. The story, based in part on this research, suggests that Lincoln's unpopularity with various political factions in Washington led to several attempts on his life. On April 8, 1865, the day before Lee surrendered his lattered Confederate troops at Appomattox Courthouse, one of his country's best known actors, John Wilkes Booth, registered at the National Hotel in Washington, D.C. From that moment, a series of extraordinary events, culminating with the assassination of Lincoln, were set in motion, and they have been shrouded in secrecy and mystery until now.

A cast of more than 40 is featured in "The Lincoln Conspiracy," and there are original and authentic sets, as well as colorful period costumes.

Crane's World Explored

Hal Linden, star of the young people's magazine series, "Animals Animals Animals," explores the world of the crane in the segment airing Sunday, May 14, 11:30 to 11:55 a.m., on ABC-TV.

In Baraboo, Wisconsin, "Animals" visits the International Crane Foundation, a non profit organization dedicated to preserving the cranes of the world. George Archibald explains, "Of the 15 pairs of each of the endangered species. This will serve as a species bank to begin new populations in areas from which their species has been wiped out."

"It's just during the past 100 years," Archibald continues, "That many specials have been brought to the brink of extinction. The problem is that they require great expanses of wetland for breeding, and man has drained those wetlands for his own use. We know we are helping one of the most beautiful groups of birds ever to evolve to survive during this critical period in history. It is because of this rare status of many of the world's cranes that the Crane Foundation exists."

The program includes a look at the beautiful annual migration of the Sand Hill Cranes across the Platte River in Nebraska. There is a brilliantly animated poem about a crane, a duck, a goose and two "beautiful things," and a fable about how the Crowned Crane happened to get his crown.

Linden points out that 6,000 years ago a crane was painted on the wall of a cave in Tajo Segura in Southern Spain. A European Crane and a Demoiselle Crane are found in the Tomb of Ti in Saqqara, Egypt. A painting of cranes walking between slaves exists in the funeral temple of Queen Hatshepsut.

MRS. FORD PLANNING PRODUCTION

Kaye's Special Dream

In many ways, Kaye Stevens' real life hasn't been all that different from the life of Jeri Clayton, the character she plays on NBC-TV's "Days of Our Lives." Life for Kaye has been a struggle, from her poverty-stricken childhood to her nightclub days when she would spend 335 days a year on the road.

But Kaye Stevens had something many people never had, something that's kept her spiritually intact even when she's been physically ill, emotionally exhausted, psychologically bruised. This "something" is a special kind of love. And this love has given her a very special dream.

The dream is that someday — no matter what — she wants to adopt a group of children and spend the rest of her life with them.

"I have a rapport with children because I truly love them and I care about them," she says. The children she spends most of her time with are from juvenile detention centers all around the country. "Whenever I am in a major city, I always plan a few days to visit these homes."

Kaye's interest in underprivileged children began a few years back. Home in Florida to spend the Christmas holidays with her mother, she had a strong sense of how blessed she had been by life. She wanted to do something for someone else, and she also felt the missing ingredient from her holiday was a child. So she asked the governor of the state to supply her with a built-in family.

The children arrived to share Kaye's home and Christmas dinner, and there has been a steady stream of what she calls "my kids" ever since.

Kaye Stevens portrays Jeri Clayton in the popular daytime series "Days of Our Lives," airing Monday through Friday (1:30-3:30 p.m.) on NBC-TV.

So advanced, it's simple.

Hudson Was Two-Futon Sleeper In The Orient

Rock Hudson returned to the United States from Japan earlier than planned for two reasons:
 1) He wanted to be on hand when "wheels" would be telecast on NBC-TV. He stars in the five-part miniseries as automotive executive Adam Trenton.
 2) Hudson — for the Orient — is too tall.

 Invited to serve as co-host for the first Japanese "Oscars" ceremonies, the six-foot-five Hudson shared the honors with diminutive Japanese film star Toshiro Mifune, who also served as his translator. Rock says the contrast in stature amused Japanese audiences.
 In his hotel room, Hudson found they had to put together two Japanese beds (actually mats called futons) to accommodate his height. It was a wonderful trip, he says, and an interesting one, but he began to think fondly of his home, which is structured to his size.

Asked if he had any advice for over-six-footers planning to visit Japan, Hudson said with a grin, "Just tell the hotel before you get there how tall you are so they can bring an extra mat to accommodate your feet. Other than that, watch your head when you go through doors. They say today's Japanese kids are growing up much taller, but the door frames haven't caught up with them yet."

As a final word of advice, Rock says, "Whatever you do, don't let being tall keep you away from Japan. You never knew such hospitality in your life."

Zerbe Is Good At Playing Bad

"It's all in the eyebrows."
 So says actor Anthony Zerbe about his success as one of the screen's most diversified villains. In a colorful career of criminal characters, he's traded bullets, barbs and blows with the likes of John Wayne, Paul Newman, Robert Mitchum and Charlton Heston.

His latest in a long line of roguish roles is that of Amory Timmons, a drunken caretaker bent on revenge in Walt Disney Productions' special two-hour movie for television, "Child of Glass." The telefilm premieres on "The Wonderful World of Disney," Sunday, May 14, at 7 p.m. on NBC.

 Since his early days playing different heavies ("all with the same accent") in five "Mission Impossible" shows, the native Californian's career has blossomed as a baddie. In "Rooster Cogburn," he was a hired gun sent to kill John Wayne; "Judge Roy Bean" found him rolling Paul Newman in a drunken brawl; in "Farewell, My Lovely," Zerbe portrayed a slick gangster trying to deceive Robert Mitchum, and Charlton Heston was the victim of Anthony's attacks in both "The Omega Man" and "Will Penny."

Ritter Stars In First Dramatic Role

A free-spirited college athlete is cut down in his prime but, with the help of a beautiful young woman, learns to live again and win again in "Leave Yesterday Behind," a moving drama starring John Ritter and Carrie Fisher, which will air as "The ABC Sunday Night Movie," May 14, 9 to 11 p.m.

Buddy Ebsen, in a marked departure from "Barnaby Jones," rounds out the all-star cast, portraying a crusty country doctor.

In "Leave Yesterday Behind," based on a true incident, Paul Stallings (Ritter) is a happy-go-lucky veterinary student. In his senior year, he leads his school to a national championship in polo but a tragic accident leaves him paralyzed for life. Alone and withdrawn, Paul meets Marny Clarkson (Miss Fisher), a young woman who is suddenly torn between the man her father wants her to marry and her growing love for Paul. With Marny's help, Paul slowly begins to triumph over his handicap.

Ritter considers this role, his first major dramatic role, to be the most challenging part he's had in his young career.

"I don't think that anyone can truly know what it must be like to be paralyzed unless it has happened to that person," Ritter commented while sitting in a wheelchair on location in Northern California. "To research this part I spent three entire days in this wheelchair to try to understand what it would be like. But I always knew that I could get out of it any time I wanted to. I have nothing but admiration for those men and women who are in wheelchairs for life but still manage to have a bright outlook on life."

An accident on the playing fields leaves John Ritter sentenced to a wheelchair, but his soul is free to run in "Leave Yesterday Behind," a love story of determination and courage airing on "The ABC Sunday Night Movie," May 14 (9-11 p.m.)

WORTH ALL THE DIFFERENCE IN THE WORLD!

"Beauty is only skin deep," so it is said. Where vinyl flooring is concerned be sure to remember this phrase, for unknowingly to most there are really two basic types of vinyl on the market, today.

One type may have only 1/16" coat of coloring added to the surface. The other, better quality type of vinyl is dyed-throughout. This type may cost a bit more, but depending on the expected traffic over the area, it may be worth all the difference in the world!

Landon's Energy Limitless

Michael Landon is one of those rare specimens who is held in high esteem by his peers as an actor, a writer and a director, as well as a human being. Yet, even more impressive is the fact that despite the demands and pressures that wearing so many hats so well brings, the personable Michael never runs short of energy for all four facets of his life. He does, he says, because he enjoys his work. "The only time I ever feel any pressure is really right in the beginning of a new season, which is where we are now with 'Little House on the Prairie,' because you're looking at a lot of blank pages," he says with a smile and a whistle. "And you know you have to fill them up. "Once you get rolling, everything works," he exclaims, even this past season that was repeatedly interrupted by Southern California's torrential rains. It also works because, even as Michael's talking, he is taking anti-biotics for strep throat, has devoted an entire morning to a series of interviews, and his afternoon will be filled with two lengthy production meetings. Still, for Michael, it's fun. "It's like messy weather, real bad, tough times when you're out on location and the weather's bad and your trucks are stuck in the mud," he said. "It's almost like camping, like roughing it, and all of a sudden everybody's knee deep trying to push out a truck. "Well, nothing gets a bunch of guys feeling better about each other, as long as everybody's doing it, me and everybody involved, than getting good and sloppy and laughing and just having a hell of a good time." Naturally, Michael sets the tone as any series star does, but unlike some of his peers who do their job and go home each night without knowing anyone else on the set, Mike knows everybody. "I can't be that way. It isn't my nature," he says simply. "You never let anybody be put in a position, at least not in this company, where someone ridicules someone else. There's nothing worse than to have someone fear they'll get fired if they speak up, and that doesn't exist here." It doesn't because of Michael's reflection as a person — not as an actor, director or writer. And that's what makes 'Little House' enjoyable not only for himself, but for everyone.

MANY ROLES—Michael Landon is not only a star of "Little House on the Prairie" on NBC-TV, he is also the executive producer and frequently writes and directs episodes. This season the show is telecast Mondays (8-9 p.m.)

Family Turns Back On Civilized Life

An angry mother cougar, a pack of wolves and a grizzly bear are the new neighbors for a modern pioneer family who turn their back on civilization to build a new life in the wilds of the Northwest in "The Adventures of the Wilderness Family," a true story making its television premiere as the "ABC Monday Night Movie," May 15 (8-10 p.m.)

raccoon and a pair of motherless bear cubs instead of electrical appliances.

The family's idyllic new life is free of smog but not free of problems; the weather turns nasty and so does a cougar whose cubs the children have adopted. A rockslide threatens their home, the little girl's fever sends her father down the rapids in search of a doctor. A pack of wolves and a man-eating grizzly prove to be very unfriendly to the new neighbors and Pat Robinson begins to wonder if the beauties of nature are really worth the risks.

Skip and Pat Robinson, (Robert Logan and Susan Shaw) fed up with the smog, pollution and hazards of city life, sell everything they own and pack their two children, Jennifer (Hollye Holmes) and Toby (Ham Larsen), and their golden retriever into a helicopter to head for the more natural hazards of the unsettled Pacific Northwest.

The Los Angeles Times had this to say: "The reason that 'The Adventures of the Wilderness Family' is such a super movie is that it touches the heart of children's fantasies about family togetherness....Nothing mars the beautiful scenery, exceptional wildlife footage or sunny depiction of a family having fun together."

The helicopter trip is the last of the modern conveniences for this Hardy family; once they reach their destination they quickly clean up their new log cabin home and stock it with a

COMEDY TEAM SUBJECT OF FILM

Lou Costello's famous cry, "heyabuuu!" will be recreated when Harvey Korman and Buddy Hackett, as Bud Abbott and Lou Costello, star in the NBC World Premiere movie "Bud and Lou." Red Buttons will portray the comedy team's manager, Eddie Sherman. George Lefferts' script, based on 'Bud and Lou,' the book by Bob Thomas, deals in part with the behind-the-scenes feuding between the two comedians. Korman and Hackett will recreate Abbott and Costello's classic routine, "Who's On First?"

Role Was 'Sweet Change'

Linda Blair has very successfully "suffered" for her art. At the ripe, old age of 19, the talented actress has experienced a lifetime of soul-searing agonies. In her first three motion pictures, she has portrayed a child possessed by a demon, a girl subjected to the horrors of prison life and a teenage alcoholic. She now feels, however, that her fourth film has helped change that image.

"Sarah T.: Portrait of a Teenage Alcoholic," were big audience favorites, but the focus in all the roles was on frightened and desperate youngsters. Many of her initial fears about "Sweet Hostage" were dissolved by her co-star, Sheen.

In this movie, "Sweet Hostage," Linda stars with Martin Sheen, and it is a bizarre drama about a young woman kidnapped by an escaped mental patient. The film, to be rebroadcast as "The CBS Late Night Movie" Monday, May 15 (11:30 p.m.), has serious overtones, but it becomes a gentle love story — a first for Linda Blair.

"I knew everything was going to be all right on the first day of filming," she said. "Martin made me feel very comfortable and allowed me to work at my own pace. He was patient, and if I felt I needed some extra rehearsal he would gladly work with me. After a while I began to relax and enjoy myself. For the first time, I found that acting can be fun."

"I'd never done a movie like this before and I was very scared at the start," she said. "It wasn't the size of the part that bothered me as much as the fact that I'd never had a leading man before and really wasn't sure how I would be able to do the story."

The "Sweet Hostage" audience saw a new Linda Blair when the movie first aired. However, Hollywood doesn't ignore proven success. Linda was subsequently signed to star in "Excorist II" for a price few actresses could turn down.

Her first three films, "The Excorist," "Born Innocent" and

Madcap All-Star Comedy To Air

A motley collection of top film comedians frantically race to a hidden fortune in the antic comedy. "It's a Mad, Mad, Mad, Mad World," to be rebroadcast on "The CBS Tuesday Night Movies." May 16, 8 to 11 p.m. Spencer Tracy, Milton Berle, Sid Caesar, Buddy Hackett, Ethel Merman, Mickey Rooney, Dick Shawn, Phil Silvers, Terry-Thomas, Jonathan Winters, Edie Adams, Dorothy Provine, Peter Falk and Jimmy Durante head the cast.

The Three Stooges. The frenzy begins when several motorists crossing the California desert on their way to Las Vegas come upon a mortally injured man whose dying gasp is a clue to where $350,000 in stolen loot is stashed. The germ of greed infects them all, and in a collection of updated variants of classic chase sequences, filled with outrageous clowning and colliding cars, they make a mad dash for the hidden cash.

The film was released theatrically in 1963 by United Artists.

'Geographic' Film Presented On PBS

Noted wildlife photographer Wolfgang Bayer is the man behind the cameras for the National Geographic Special, "The Animals Nobody Loved," which airs Tuesday, May 16, at 8 p.m. on PBS.

Bayer filmed the dream-like sequence in which a sidewinder rattlesnake grace-fully moves across a shadowed desert. He also caught newborn coyote pups emerging from their den to taste a springtime that could be their last, and the wild mustang's frantic stampede toward freedom.

Since leaving his native Austria 15 years ago to come to America, Bayer has concentrated on wildlife and nature photography. He originally planned to be an electrical engineer but decided that such a career would be "dry and boring." A job taking still photographs for the Austrian school system led him into film photography. Bayer's camera work is marked by infinite attention to detail and ingenious use of various lenses. Before beginning a photographic assignment he spends weeks researching his subjects and searching for the exact lens needed.

In "Animals Nobody Loved," Bayer's challenge was to photograph animals whose existence threatens human beings, either economically or physically. These animals, the coyote, the wild mustang, and the rattlesnake are suspicious of all humans — including photographers.

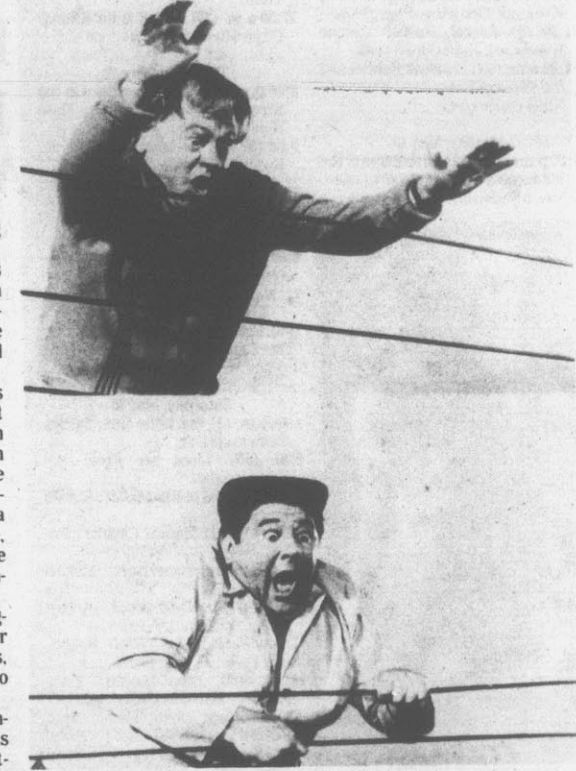

Bayer, interviewed at his home and film lab in Jackson Hole, Wyoming, says the first requirement for nature photography is patience, and after that — stamina.

To film the wild horse scenes in the special, Bayer had to wait motionless for two days near an old abandoned mine shaft in Wyoming. Each morning before daybreak, Bayer and his assistant lugged their cameras into a blind and sat in absolute silence, hoping that human patience would outlast wild animal instinct.

While filming the coyote struggle for survival in winter, Bayer camped near elk carcasses, waiting for the hungry coyotes to appear.

Bayer says he wasn't enthusiastic about one part of his assignment — filming rattlesnakes hibernating in a remote cave.

"You don't get too involved with snakes," he says. "Snakes lack the individual appeal of coyotes or mustangs."

Mickey Rooney (top) and Buddy Hackett are among the stars of "It's a Mad, Mad, Mad, Mad World," zany comedy about a group of people greedily racing to find a hidden cache of stolen loot, to be rebroadcast on "The CBS Tuesday Night Movie," May 16 (8-11 p.m.)

'Funny Girl' Returns

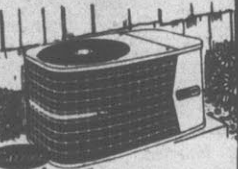

"Funny Girl," the film that established Barbra Streisand as an authentic movie star and an Academy Award winner, returns to television as the "Tuesday Movie of the Week," May 16, at 11:30 p.m. on ABC.

Based on the long-running Broadway hit, the musical film presents Miss Streisand as Fanny Brice, with Omar Sharif starred as Nick Arnstein. Most of the Jule Styne-Bob Merrill songs from the original — including "People Who Need People" and "Don't Rain on My Parade" — are a part of the film along with three new songs by that team and two classics — "My Man" and "I'd Rather Be Blue" — which were identified with Miss Brice. Isobel Lennart, who wrote the stage version, also wrote the screenplay.

When the movie opened, film critic Judith Crist said, "Barbara Streisand's star qualities need no iteration and it is not surprising to have her emerge as a superstar in the Technicolor-Panavision milieu of the screen... She creates, on screen, a person rather than merely a personality. She is a clown and a tragedienne, a combination of waif and nice-Jewish girl, of gamine and galumpher; she is that contemporary enigma, the beautiful ugly who defies classic form."

The story follows Fanny Brice, who overcame a series of heartbreaks in her life while becoming one of America's most beloved stars, from her beginnings on the Lower East Side of turn-of-the-century New York through her triumphs with the "Ziegfeld Follies," and her final separation from Nick Arnstein after he was released from prison.

Armstrong Makes New Debut

"My first day went like this: first I was tipsy, then I was sober, then I was kissing a man I'd met only minutes before."

An impressionistic nightmare? A Kafka short story? No, just a television actress' first day as a film actress.

Bess Armstrong, star of "On Our Own," was describing the novelty of working in film. In the theater and on her videotaped series, Miss Armstrong has always worked in chronological sequence. But as the star, along with Richard Thomas, of "Getting Married," she was working in a movie — with scenes shot out of sequence — for the first time.

"Getting Married," airing Wednesday, May 17, 9 p.m. on CBS-TV, is a zany comedy in which Miss Armstrong is pursued by Thomas and Mark Harmon, star of "Sam."

"When I was offered the part, my inexperience in film made me a little nervous," Miss Armstrong admitted. "But I decided that sometimes you have to jump off the deep end."

She portrays a television newscaster making final arrangements for her marriage, unaware that a secret admirer, a production assistant (Thomas) on her news program, has decided to make an all-out effort to change her mind.

Miss Armstrong found working in film an exhilarating experience, in part because it made her work against her usual acting approach and training.

"Normally, I'm a very methodical person," she explained. "In 'Getting Married' I was forced, instead, to work on instinct. We have three days to rehearse 'On Our Own,' and then we perform it like a stage play. In films, I've discovered, we're lucky to have three minutes to rehearse a scene. It's very different, to put it mildly."

Her stage experience was some help, however. She arrived on the set the first day knowing the script cold, making it easier to shift gears when the production jumped from one scene to a radically different one elsewhere in the script.

She was also helped by having a stellar cast backing her up, including, beside Thomas and Harmon, Audra Lindley, Van Johnson, Katherine Helmond and Vic Tayback.

Not everything about film production was to her liking. "Those work calls at six in the morning," she said. "I don't think I'll ever learn to like that."

Key West Provides Adventure

The locale seemed like the setting for a romantic tale: a small subtropical isle bounded by the Atlantic Ocean on one side and the Gulf of Mexico on the other; bright, sandy beaches; lush, stately trees; warm, clear and inviting waters; and a brilliant sunset — a tourist attraction in itself.

Literally thousands of visitors go to Key West, Fla., to play. Yet, earlier this year, at the height of the tourist season, one of the major hotels was nearly filled with a group that had come to work; they were often up at seven in the morning.

For several days, the crew of "Hunters of the Reef" — to be colorcast Saturday, May 20, 9 to 11:07 p.m. on NBC-TV — worked at an inactive Naval Base.

The project involved the talents of a number of creative people especially heralded for their previous work in filmed sea adventures.

Peter Benchley, the writer who parlayed "Jaws" and "The Deep" — into blockbuster motion picture hits, created the concept for the project.

Veteran producer Ben Chapman had for years been involved with "Flipper," the family-oriented television series about a young boy and a unique pet who swam.

Second unit director Ricou Browning, who filmed a great deal of the underwater sequences, had established himself as the coordinator of the spectacular battle scene shot in waters near Miami for the James Bond thriller, "Thunderball."

But for most of the cast members, portraying characters in a story about the race to locate a sunken wreck for salvage, it was a new and enjoyable experience.

A startled bride (Bess Armstrong) and her groom (Mark Harmon) share the astonishment of the minister (Bryan O'Byrne) when their wedding ceremony is interrupted by a persistent screwball comedy to be broadcast in its world premiere on "The CBS Wednesday Night Movie," May 17 (9-11 p.m.).

Romantic, Screwball Comedy Airs As Movie

Richard Thomas, an Emmy Award-winner as John-Boy on "The Waltons," and Bess Armstrong, star of "On Our Own," a movie about a persistent suitor and the baffled object of his love-crazed attentions, to air Wednesday, May 17, 9 to 11 p.m., on CBS.

Dena Dietrich, Mark Harmon, Katherine Helmond, Van Johnson, Mimi Kennedy, Audra Lindley, Fabian and Vic Tayback guest star.

Michael Carboni (Thomas), an aspiring young ghostwriter who works as an assistant director in a television newsroom, has another aspiration — to marry the station's attractive newscaster, Kristy Lawrence (Miss Armstrong). There are certain obstacles. Up to now, Michael has lacked the nerve to tell Kristy of his intentions and, more pressing, Kristy has made plans of her own to marry someone else (Harmon) in less than a week. Convinced that "love conquers all," Michael summons up his courage and his most outrageous ingenuity to capture Kristy's attention and heart.

A crazy romantic battle ensues with Michael, his parents

(Tayback and Miss Dietrich) and friends (Fabian and Miss Kennedy) on one side; and Kristy's fiance and his mother (Miss Helmond) on the other; while the baffled Kristy and her divorced parents (Johnson and Miss Lindley) are not quite sure what to make of the persistent suitor's amorous antics.

Quips Fly At Roast

It has been said, "You gotta love somebody a lot to give him the needle," which is what George Burns gets when he is roasted by a host of stars as Man of the Hour on NBC-TV's "Dean Martin Celebrity Roast," airing Wednesday, May 17, 9:30 to 11 p.m. Some of the top names in the entertainment world have plenty to say when they roasted Burns at the taping in the MGM Grand Hotel in Las Vegas.

Dean Martin: "Last month he sang 'The Star Spangled Banner' at a ball game...and the crowd sat down."

Milton Berle: "You look just like you did 40 years ago — old."

Abe Vigoda: "George, at our time in life, we have to forget about trying to recapture our youth... You even have to forget about recapturing your middle age!"

James Stewart: "George and I were both at MGM Studios at the same time, 1938. In those days I was a romantic juvenile and in those days, George was an old man...and it's really amazing that now, 40 years later, we're both still at... only now I'm the old man, and George is the romantic juvenile."

Tom Dreeson: "George is an inspiration to me. He's had tough times but he's stuck with it. Sometimes he's played to an audience of just two people — Adam and Eve!"

Red Buttons: "Why are we giving this ancient comedian a dinner when Rip Van Winkle — who said when he awoke from sleeping 20 years, 'After lunch, I think I'll take a nap' — never got a dinner!"

Jack Carter: "He's already ordered a Honda pacemaker."

Ronald Reagan: "On his last birthday, before he could light the candles on his cake he had to get a permit for an indoor barbecue."

Now in his seventh decade in show business and busier than ever, George Burns won an Oscar as Best Supporting Actor for his performance in "The Sunshine Boys" in 1975. Today he continues as a headliner in clubs and theaters and as a guest on top TV variety shows. His performance in the current film, "Oh, God!" has been acclaimed by critics, and the veteran showman says, "I intend to keep working as long as people want to see me."

Western Was 'Perfect'

How does an actress who loves nature and acting find a television series that's right for her?

First, she tries to find a good script, with a character she likes, who grows during the story.

Second, with some luck, it'll be a script that gives her some practical — though harmless — stunts to do beside dramatic acting.

And third, she has to be a fast learner.

Actress Kathleen Lloyd has found just such a role in an NBC-TV development project. Starring with Debra Feuer in "Lacy and the Mississippi Queen," a light-hearted western to air Wednesday, May 17 (8 to 9:30 p.m.). Kathleen is doing her second western which she hopes will give her and Debra a permanent job this fall.

The actress, whose first western role was as the female lead in "Missouri Breaks," was raised in a bucolic environment in coastal areas of Northern California. She got hooked on westerns after "Missouri Breaks," and then along came "Lacy." With it came the part of Kate Lacy, a real cowgirl with excellent qualities.

"I like my character — she has lots of energy; she's strong, direct, and there's a naivete about her, as well as a sense of humor," Kathleen explained. "I thought the entire script was well written."

In "Lacy" Kathleen rides, ropes, and shoots a gun. It reminds her of her childhood when she enjoyed playing cowboys and Indians.

"We lived on a turkey ranch in the hills and I ran around with my bike," she recalled. "I tied a rope on my bike for reins and played all sorts of games. I would feel at peace with nature. There were 150 acres of trees and many hideouts."

LASSOING LASS—Actress Kathleen Lloyd, who starred as Jack Nicholson's girl in "Missouri Breaks," stars in her second western as a lassoing, sharp-shooting, hard-riding cowgirl in "Lacy and the Mississippi Queen," a 90-minute development project on Wednesday, May 17 (8-9:30 p.m.) on NBC.

Lynley Is Not Fond Of Camels

Carol Lynley believes it may be a first for an actress. And as far as she's concerned it will be a last.

"I gave a camel mouth-to-mouth resuscitation in one scene," she says with the attitude of one who would have preferred, say, playing the scene with Robert Redford.

The scene with the camel was for her starring role in "The Beasts Are In the Streets," an NBC World Premiere Movie to air Thursday, May 18, 8 to 10 p.m.

Lynley portrays a veterinarian at a wild animal park. She is attending the birth of a camel when the animal is born not breathing. So she puts a respiration tube into the camel's mouth and starts breathing into it until the calf is breathing.

"During my career I've kissed Robert Wagner, Oliver Reed and Kirk Douglas but this is ridiculous," says Carol. "A camel's breath is just the worst. And it stays with you, too."

Carol, a New York-bred actress whose previous encounters with wild animals was at the Bronx Zoo, gets to work with all sorts of beasts in the drama about wild animals panicking a large area when they escape from the animal park.

Besides the camel she worked with lions, tigers, elephants, chimps, rhinos and ostriches.

"The trainers we worked with impressed on me the fact that any wild animal is potentially dangerous," she said. "I learned to approach the camels with caution — or maybe with fear — because they can be very nasty — kicking and biting."

"And very quickly I got respectful of the big cats with the sharp teeth."

"Stay on the side of him opposite where his feet are," the trainer said. "That way he's got to get up to get you."

"I can't tell you what a comfort that is to know," she said retreating slightly.

YOUNG LION—Carol Lynley enjoyed working with some of the animals, such as this lion cub, but not some of the more dangerous ones while making "The Beasts Are In the Streets," an NBC World Premiere movie to be presented Thursday, May 18 (8-10 p.m.). Carol stars as a veterinarian in the drama about dangerous animals escaping from a wild animal park and terrorizing a wide area.

Sommers, Ritter Host CBS Special

Suzanne Somers and John Ritter host "Festival of the Stars: Mexico," a colorful two-hour music and comedy special starring special guest host Ricardo Montalban, on Thursday, May 18, 9 to 11 p.m. on CBS.

Taped in Acapulco, Mexico City and Guadalajara, the entertainment special is a salute to our southern neighbor as each star performs against the exotic background of some of Mexico's most beautiful locations. The program stars: Steve Allen, Roy Clark, Gary Collins, Bert Convy, Jaime Lee Curtis, Barbara Eden, Freddy Fender, Mary Ann Mobley, Rita Moreno, the mime troupe Mummenschaug, Samantha Sang, Jerry Stiller and Anne Meara, and Rip Taylor.

Guest artists from Mexico include the Ballet Folkloric Ballet of Guadalajara, the Mariachis of Guadalajara, the Mexico State Symphony Orchestra and the Rondalla Feminina.

Pike's Peek

By Charlie Pike, TV Showtime staff writer.

HOLLYWOOD — Dianne Kay, the pretty blonde co-star of TV's "Eight Is Enough," has called off her marriage to long-time boyfriend Kevin Inch. No, it's not that they broke off the romance, it's just that they've decided to postpone the wedding indefinitely. They remain very much together and just returned from a Canadian vacation. Dianne says she announced her marriage plans after getting wrapped up in the excitement of two other cast members' wedding announcements — Grant Goodeve and Susan Richardson.

It's now official. Jaime Lyn Bauer will remain in her popular role on daytime's "The Young and the Restless" through September. It'll be then that she'll probably depart the serial.

Johnny Mathis drew quite a crowd at L.A.'s Marina Del Rey when he provided the bubbly and christened the 32-foot yacht owned by his manager and public relations representative, Johnny, by the way, will continue starring in syndicated TV specials rather than going the network route, just as he avoids those big Vegas hotel offers. It keeps his life simpler that way.

Dennis Weaver took time out from his busy filming schedule of TV motion pictures, "Ishi" and "The Islander," to return to school. Dennis devoted a day speaking to students in the ninth grade at a school near his home about choosing the right career endeavor.

Lee Majors need not worry about his "$6 Million Man" getting the axe from ABC. When he resigned from the show a year ago, he guaranteed himself $1.5 million from Universal Studios, series or not! Of course, having his wife Farrah go back to work on "Charlie's Angels" won't hurt the couple's income for the year either.

Isn't Dennis Cole, Jaclyn Smith's beau, entered into litigation over the publication of some photographs taken of him in rather scanty attire? That's the scuttlebutt, and apparently it's very true, despite the fact it seems as if it's usually the feminine gender who have such problems. In fact, further rumor has it that Suzanne Somers will be confronted with such a decision in the very near future because of some early career pictures she posed for in the all-together.

Phil Foster, 'Laverne's' father, is recovering nicely from by-pass surgery and should be back at work when production resumes in a couple of months.

WHO SOLVES RON'S PROBLEM? RON!

Ron Howard co-wrote (with his brother Clint Howard) a two-hour NBC World Premiere movie, "Cotton Candy," now in production in Dallas, Texas.

Clint appears in the movie, which Ron is directing.

One scene in the film, about a high school rock band, calls for Clint to have a minor traffic accident with a highly recognizable rock star. Ron was unable to get a rock star — or any other kind of highly recognizable star — for the cameo role on short notice.

Someone in the production company came up with a remarkably simple solution: why not have Ron do it? He did.

When asked to compare his approach to playing Rooster Cogburn in the television extension of "True Grit" to the performance that won John Wayne his Academy Award for the 1969 Western film, Warren Oates brandished his script and said: "This is an excellent script and the one I'm dealing with. I couldn't compare it with the original."

Such comparisons are odious to actors but inescapable, unless you can parry like Oates, a youngish old pro. But it was plain to see that the grizzled ex-lawman with the eye patch is a character dear to Oates. Oates' interpretation of Cogburn will be seen in the all-new "True Grit," airing as "The ABC Friday Night Movie" May 19, 9 to 11 p.m.

"Rooster is a guy in his well-used forties," Oates said. "He's wise and a little weary, but he still has the right survival moves and intuition. I can identify with that. He's a character, that is easy to play."

Oates went from the hills of Kentucky to Broadway via the University of Louisville to launch a career that has escalated steadily in plays, motion pictures and television. His vast experience enables him to spot young talent with that extra something that can lead to stardom.

"Lisa Pelikan, as the prim and demanding teenager who hammers on Rooster's conscience, is wonderful," he said. "Her intelligence, her love of life and the way she brings this girl to life, with all the morality and ethics of the time (1880) is a pleasure to watch."

"And there's a handsome young newcomer named Jeff Osterhage, who many connected with the film say could be the 'find' of the season."

Sandor Stern, the executive producer of the film, wrote the screenplay, which, says Oates, "is about the fantasies of a young girl in that time of idealism and puritanism when electric lights were just coming on. She's Rooster's most vocal detractor, but also his greatest booster. It suddenly dawns on her that he's all the 'family' she's got left."

"We use dialogue and phrases of the period, with no modern slang terms, yet it isn't stilted. The film is loaded with action played against the beautiful slopes of the Colorado Rockies. It was a pleasant and interesting experience."

Jeff Osterhage, Warren Oates and Lisa Pelikan (l to r) look mild enough, but they're a tough team to cross in "True Grit," the world premiere of the further adventures of Rooster Cogburn, airing on "The ABC Friday Night Movie," May 19 (9-11 p.m.)

'The Bomb That Fizzled' Looks At Over-Population

Are there too many of us? Or are the world's problems — caused by something other than over-population? Ben Wattenberg suggests that the "population crisis" is turning out to be "The Bomb That Fizzled," on "In Search of the Real America," airing Friday, May 12, at 10 p.m. on UNC-TV.

This program is the first part of a trilogy, "The Enemies of Growth," examining several aspects of a complex question. This week, Wattenberg takes on what he calls the Population Explosionists, and says, "If Americans believe the horror stories about population growth, we're going to be spending a lot of time looking in the wrong places for solutions to real problems — problems like hunger, poverty, and congestion."

Professor Roger Revelle of Harvard, one of Wattenberg's guests, asserts that the earth has more than enough agricultural capacity to feed growing numbers of people.

Dr. Jonathan Freedman, author of "Crowding and Behavior," says congestion does not cause mental illness, neurosis, or unhappiness; studies show city dwellers aren't any more prone to neurosis or depression than their country cousins.

And Wattenberg says, "Actually, the number of children per family has not only been declining in America for the past 20 years, but for the past 180 years! The Baby Boom, it turns out, was nothing more than a blip in an otherwise steady trend toward smaller families."

Guest critic Judith Kunoosky, president of Zero Population Growth, counters with "Despite what is widely believed, the United States has not reached zero population growth. If current trends continue, our population may never stop growing, and we might reach 300 million Americans by the year 2025, compared with 217 million today, which is quite a substantial increase."

Harvard's Dr. Roger Revelle says, "nobody on Earth suffers from malnutrition or the deficiency of food — if he has enough money." So the problem is poverty. But is that caused by the runaway population growth? "The Bomb that Fizzled" provides lively controversy — and a provocative view of the "population explosion."

Cycle Jumpoff To Rebroadcast

Daredevil Rex Blackwell and six other international-class competitors will compete in the North American Motorcycle Jumpoff, to be broadcast on "CBS Sports Spectacular," Saturday, May 20, 5 to 6 p.m.

The competition will take place the previous day at Charlotte Motor Speedway in Charlotte, N.C., and will offer a total of $20,500 in prize money. In addition to the jumpoff, Jack Whitaker will present one of his timely commentaries.

Blackwell won the initial motorcycle jumpoff competition held in 1977 at the Houston (Texas) Astrodome, when he out-pointed young Gary Wells in a special bonus jump of 106 feet.

Since then he was out-scored, in a head-to-head match, by England's Eddie Kidd in Long Leat (90 miles from London), and finished seventh (after receiving a major penalty for hitting the safety ramp) in a competition last October in California.

The seven competitors will be jumping for more than just distance in this event, sanctioned by the American Motorcycle Association. They will be judged for take-off, in-air control, landing accuracy, and overall technique.

Two jumps will be attempted, at the minimum, by each man. The first will be over a row of automobiles at a distance of 101 feet. The second will be over 111 feet. After the second jump, the competitor has the option to try only that jump again for a better score.

The winner will also have the opportunity of going for an A.M.A. record of 121 feet and an extra $2,000 in prize money on a bonus jump. In case of a tie after the first two jumps, those tied will attempt the 121-foot distance, with the best scorer getting the bonus money. The list of the other six competitors includes:

- Dick Stone: 33, from Sacramento, Calif., third at Houston and fifth at Orange County last year. Married, he often performs at county fairs.
- Karl Soucek: 31, originally from Pacov, Czechoslovakia, and now residing in Ontario, Canada. Started as moto-cross rider in 1962 and has been jumping cycles for five years. Other interests include skydiving and piloting planes.

Jeff Gutierrez: 21, from Baton Rouge, La., now in his third year as a pro.

Ken Mackow: From Round Lake, Ill., specializes in trick called "Tunnel of Fire."

Larry "Hurricane" McLean: 23, from Toronto, calls himself Canada's best jumper.

Dave Townsend: Now living in Chicago, Ill., best known for "Slide for Life" trick. Does much charity work.

Memories Are Put To Use

Seldom does an adult have an opportunity to relive his childhood and — at the same time — share it with millions of youngsters — with everbody laughing.

But that's exactly what happens each Saturday when "Fat Albert and the Cosby Kids" airs (12-noon to 12:26 p.m. on CBS-TV). For the past six seasons, actor-comedian Bill Cosby has brought to animate life several pals he grew up with in the urban sprawl of Philadelphia — friends like Mushmouth, Weird Harold, Rudy, Dumb Donald and, of course, Fat Albert.

"Fat Albert and the Cosby Kids" has been much more than a memory trip for Cosby, because it is strong evidence of his all-out personal commitment to the use of television as a medium of instruction — especially for children.

Fat Albert's the vocal character and he, along with the people from Cosby's juvenile world — Bill included — share a learning experience in their peers. Each animated segment shows how the "Cosby Kids" tackle problems faced by all children: having to go to the doctor, exposure to drugs, cigarettes and alcohol; being caught in a fib.

The stories, on a level children can readily understand, give guidance in solving these problems. There's no readin', ritin' or 'rithmetic. Just good, solid 'lessons' geared to the development of judgement and moral values.

Another highlight of the series is the original music heard throughout. Songs relating to the story's theme are played by the most 'far-out' combo with the most bizarre instruments — bed springs, garbage can covers, rusty pipes and broken rakes.

An 11 member panel of experts representing a diversity of academic specialties from both East and West Coasts assists Bill Cosby and the show's producers in choosing central themes and reviewing the content of the animated stories.

Memorial Tourney To Be Televised

As if Jack Nicklaus had not won enough golf tournaments in his amazing career, he invented a new tour event in 1976 which was to be played on a golf course which he had designed. Naturally enough, Jack officially dedicated his own tournament in 1977 in true Nicklaus fashion — he won.

On Saturday, May 20, at 3:30 p.m., CBS-TV will present live third-round coverage of the Memorial Tournament from the magnificent Muirfield Village Country Club in Dublin, Ohio.

The Memorial Tournament is a first-class event, played by an outstanding field, on a golf course which is fast becoming known as one of the outstanding golfing layouts in the country. The designer was Nicklaus, and he had several goals in mind when he mapped out the course.

According to Jack, "To the best of my knowledge, there has never been a golf course like the Memorial Course. Only two factors dictated the design and they did so equally: the quality of play for members and Memorial Tournament contestants, and the quality of viewing for Memorial Tournament spectators."

Jack has seen enough golf courses in his career to know what he wanted, and he has won nearly every golfing honor there is to win. Nicklaus has many admirers who claim that without a doubt he is the finest golfer to ever play the game.

Last year he defeated Hubert Green by two strokes in capturing the $225,000 event. Nicklaus finished the event at seven-under-par for his first Memorial Championship.

There will be 105 top players, including the outstanding amateurs who have qualified for the event. Going beyond the established stars of the American PGA Tour, every major foreign association has been contacted to recommend its top player based on the eligibility rules of the tournament. The attractive international flavor was one of the highlights of the 1977 field in which champions from many countries came to Muirfield.

Despite all of these great golfers, Jack Nicklaus is the magic name at the Memorial Tournament. It is his course and he is the defending champion. He sums up his feelings about the tournament by saying: "I'd like to think that the Memorial course is a reflection of what has happened in my life, of what golf means to me. I guess you'd have to say it's my mark, or at least closer to it than anything else I've ever done. In other words, it's what I feel the game of golf should be all about."

Presents 103rd Preakness

One of the most difficult feats in all of sports is to capture the Triple Crown of Thoroughbred horse racing. The first real test for a Triple Crown winner is the Preakness, because at that time there will be only one horse that has any chance of winning all three. The pressure will be extreme as nearly everyone focuses their attention on the winner of the Kentucky Derby, for he alone can sweep to the Triple Crown.

On Saturday, May 20, at 5 p.m., ABC Sports will present live coverage of the 103rd running of the Preakness Stakes from Pimlico Race Course in Baltimore, Md.

The second jewel in racing's triple crown is as steeped in history and tradition as any sporting event in this country.

Started in 1875, the Preakness is two years older than the Kentucky Derby and six years younger than the Belmont Stakes. The name of the race originates from the 1870 spring meeting at Pimlico — Preakness.

The $500,000 Woodlawn Vase goes, in name only, to the winner of the Preakness. The Woodlawn Vase was created by Tiffany and Co. in 1860 as a challenge cup for the now defunct Woodlawn Racing Association of Louisville. The trophy, 34 inches high and weighing 29 pounds, twelve ounces, is the most valuable trophy in American sports. Tiffany maintains that it is impossible to reproduce the Woodlawn Vase for the simple reason that there are no silversmiths remaining who are capable of executing such delicate work.

The sponsoring Maryland Jockey Club dating back to 1743, is the country's oldest racing organization. Its legend supports Pimlico's claim that the percentage of winning Preakness favorites is greater than either of the other two Triple Crown races, which could be evidence that this race is the best indicator of the relative ability of America's finest three-year-olds.

This year's Preakness should be quite a battle as there are three horses who are thought to have Triple Crown potential. Alydar, Affirmed, and Sensitive Prince are all highly rated and are expected to run at Pimlico. Of course, this does not preclude the possibility that a "dark horse," such as Canonero II did, might surprise everyone.

Ali-Spinks Rematch Live On ABC

ABC Sports has reached an agreement to televise live and exclusive coverage of the scheduled 15-round rematch between Muhammad Ali and titleholder Leon Spinks for the World Heavyweight Boxing Championship.

The World Boxing Association-sanctioned title fight will take place Friday, Sept. 15, and will be televised live from the Superdome in New Orleans, La., as the main event of a boxing triple-header from 8 to 11 p.m.

Along with the World Heavyweight Championship, two more world championship fights in other weight divisions will be presented on the same telecast.

Muhammad Ali will attempt to become the only man in history to win the heavyweight title three times when he climbs into the Superdome ring. He and Floyd Patterson have both held the crown twice. After winning an Olympic gold medal in 1960, Ali first won the World Championship in Feb., 1964, by stopping Sonny Liston. Stripped of his crown in 1967, he regained the title by knocking out George Foreman in 1974.

Ali, a native of Louisville, Ky., is 36-years-old. He's had 58 fights in his 18-year professional career, winning 55 and losing three. Thirty-seven of his victories were by knockouts. The 6'3" Ali weighed 224 pounds for his last fight, against Spinks. This will be his 24th Heavyweight World Championship fight, second only to Joe Louis' total of 27 title bouts.

Leon Spinks came from virtually nowhere as a professional fighter to score one of the greatest upsets of all time when he outfought Ali on Feb. 15 of this year to earn a split decision in Las Vegas, and with it the World Heavyweight Championship.

The 103rd running of the Preakness Stakes from Pimlico Race Course in Baltimore, Maryland, will be televised on Saturday, May 20 at 5 p.m. on ABC-TV.

Newcombe Is Featured

Busy on the come-back trail is John Newcombe, one of the featured players participating in the "World Invitational Tennis Classic, taking place at Sea Pines Plantation on South Carolina's Hilton Head Island.

ABC-TV camera will be on hand to cover the 11-week series which will be telecast Sundays, beginning May 14, at 2 p.m.

If Newcombe is determined to make it back as only Newcombe can be when he has his mind made up about something, then it will happen. It's as simple as that. A skiing injury suffered on a Vermont mountain curtailed Newc's latest comeback bid, but he's now ready to find out what he has left at age 33.

John Newcombe's record in tennis stands alongside the greatest in the history of the game. A three-time Wimbledon singles champion (1967,70-70), the U.S. Open titlist in 1973, the WCT Dallas victory over Bjorn Borg in four sets in 1974; five doubles titles at Wimbledon with countryman Tony Roche, four Australian and four Italian championships, three French championships, three U.S. Open Championships, two turtle doves and a partridge in a pear tree.

Newcombe began playing tennis when he was six years old, and soon his mother arranged for him to have lessons with Vic Edwards.

Raquel Welch Stars

Raquel Welch stars, as a woman in the Old West who seeks vengeance for her husband's death, in "Hannie Caulder," to be broadcast as a special movie presentation, Saturday, May 20, 9 to 11 p.m., on CBS.

Emmett, Frank and Rufus Clemens (Ernest Borgnine, Jack Elam and Strother Martin) unsuccessfully attempt a bank robbery, and to make their getaway must steal fresh horses. The owner of the relay station catches them, however. The brothers kill him and rape his wife, Hannie Caulder, before making their escape.

Hannie, swearing revenge, takes off after them. In pursuit, she meets a bounty hunter, Price (Robert Culp), who she persuades to teach her how to shoot. He takes her to a gunsmith, who makes her a special handgun, and she is soon a crack shot.

Price and Hannie follow the Clemens brothers. After one confrontation, Price is killed by Frank. Hannie now has another score to settle — and she does settle with two of the brothers. Only Emmett is left, for a final confrontation with Hannie.

DYAN CANNON STARS IN FILM

Dyan Cannon will star in "Lady of the House" as Sally Sanford, a San Francisco ex-madam and one-time mayor of Sausalito, Calif.

The movie, now being filmed in San Francisco and Sausalito, will air on NBC.

Veterans Are Not Yet 16

"I usually do my own stunts. I've fallen off a horse, been thrown off a pier and had to take punches."

The speaker is a veteran actor with eight years of professional experience, but Moosie Drier, who stars as Mike in "Hunters of the Reef," to be colorcast on "NBC Saturday Night at the Movies" May 20 (9 to 11:07 p.m.), loves exciting challenges.

Drier, who stars with Michael Parks, has yet to reach his 16th birthday, but has been acting since age 5. In this adventure drama and program development project filmed entirely on location in Key West, Fla., he enjoyed his first experience in deep sea diving.

Drier portrays the teenage brother of the owner of a salvage boat who encounters unexpected peril off the Florida coast as he races a competitor to locate a sunken wreck. The feature is based on an original concept by Peter Benchley, author of the two best-sellers, "Jaws" and "The Deep."

The program captures the beauty of working underwater, but the dangers are also an integral part of the story. Still, Drier took it all in stride.

"I did about 90 percent of the swimming myself," he said. "We were given lessons in diving by two men on the crew."

The role was just one of many for Drier, who has been among the most active child actors in this generation.

He appeared on the original

"Laugh-In" for over two years and had a recurring role in "The Bob Newhart Show." In addition, he has appeared on such series as "Phyllis," "Doc," "Police Story," "Adam-12," "Emergency!," "Marcus Welby, M.D." and a number of afterschool and Saturday morning programs. His feature film credits include "Oh God!" and "American Hot Wax."

While Drier relished his first experience working underwater,

Buck Henry Rides

"NBC's Saturday Night Live" closes out its 1977-78 season of original shows May 20 (11:30 p.m.-1 a.m.) with the hosting chores handled, fittingly, by someone who has contributed more than his fair share to the program's comedy output — none other than Buck Henry.

Henry will be in the host's spotlight for the sixth time, his eighth overall "Saturday Night" appearance. He last appeared on the show December 17, 1977, when he introduced the winner of the "Anyone Can Host" contest, Mrs. Miskel Spillman.

Henry will be joining Dan Akroyd, John Belushi, Jane Curtin, Garrett Morris, Bill Murray, Laraine Newman and Gilda Radner — the Not Ready for Prime Time Players — who by now have come to regard him as practically a member of the company.

he was exempted from first-person contact with the sharks who also played a prominent role in the film. When he filmed another television movie, "It Happened in Lakewood Manor," however, Drier met a challenge head-on.

"This was one of those disaster films," he said, "and, they actually covered me with ants. Then I had to fall off a building, but I'm here. So you can see that I survived."

Apart from his association with "Saturday Night," writer-performer Henry's TV credits include several guest appearances on "The Tonight Show Starring Johnny Carson." He wrote the pilot for the TV comedy series "Quark."

GLEASON IN "IKE"

Paul Gleason, who portrays David Thornton on "All My Children," has started filming the TV special, "Ike." Paul is playing the role of Col. Tex Lee, General Eisenhower's right hand man.

Location shooting for the three month schedule includes London as well as several sites in the U.S., such as Camp Pendleton and Los Angeles.

Robert Duvall is playing Eisenhower, and Lee Remick plays his beautiful chauffeur, Kay Summersby.

ASK THEM YOURSELF

Send the question, on a postcard, to "Ask," Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave., New York, N.Y. 10022. We'll pay $5 for published questions. Sorry, we can't answer others.

From Mom — a love of learning.

FOR ELLA T. GRASSO, Governor of Connecticut

What did your mother teach you that helps you in your work today? — S.B., Danbury, Conn.

● My mother gave me two special gifts — a love of people and a love of learning. I remember how her soft brown eyes would reflect pain and sorrow as she observed suffering and cruelty, how she would stand up (all five feet of her) in protest against every wrong and how she would personally bring comfort and solace to help heal every wound of body or spirit. She believed that learning was a special key to living. Even now, as I look at discount books in five-and ten-cent stores and in bargain basements, my heart turns over with excitement when I see One Hundred Favorite Poems or The Great West purchased by children with their precious dimes and nickels — and how these books were my "open sesame" to a whole new world.

FOR THE "ASK" EDITOR

I'm a new mother and would like to know how Mother's Day began. — V.S., North Platte, Neb.

● The origin is shrouded in mystery. Some records indicate its roots lie in the eons-old spring festival of yore, consecrated to Cybele, the Mother Goddess. Another version refers to the fourth Sunday in Lent, known as Mothering Sunday in medieval England, when children, sent away from home to be apprentices-in-trade, came back to visit their mothers, usually bearing presents. Earliest note of Mother's Day in the U.S. can be traced back to 1890. That's when a Kentucky woman had the idea of how nice it would be if all the country's mothers were honored on one special day each year. Her proposal was ignored. Credit for popularizing Mother's Day (proclaimed a national holiday on May 9, 1914, by President Woodrow Wilson) should go to Anna M. Jarvis, who died, unmarried, at 84, in 1948.

Bettmann Archive

Woodrow Wilson made it official.

FOR CY COLEMAN, composer of Broadway's On the Twentieth Century

Did your mother get on your nerves by fussing over you when you became successful? — M.B., Gary, Ind.

● Quite the contrary. She was more impressed with the tickets I'd give her for shows and concerts than she was with the fact I was at last getting somewhere. Mom finally realized her little boy was amounting to something when I told her I was writing a show [Wildcat] for Lucille Ball. Seriously, though, I owe what I am today to Mom.

FOR NANCY FRIDAY, author of My Mother/My Self

As the years go by, I get closer and closer to my mother. Is this normal? — V.W., Aurora, Ill.

● You cannot say getting closer to your mother is or is not "normal." It depends on the woman. Many women spend their time before they marry in a kind of rebelliousness. This is exciting, but it is anxiety-making, too. With marriage comes a sigh of relief; the girl feels she may have broken mother's rules in the past, but now she is a success and is the good daughter her mother always wanted.

FOR IRMA BACHARACH, mother of composer Burt Bacharach

Do you have a favorite story about your granddaughter, Nikki — S.U., Pocatello, Idaho

● Six years ago, when Nikki was 6, my daughter-in-law, Angie [Dickinson], came to the airport to pick me up. Nikki, sitting up front with her mother, announced, "I want to sit in the back with Nana because I like her better." I was so thrilled at hearing I'd moved up on Nikki's popularity list that I asked, with a big smile, "Better than what?" That smile soon left my face at Nikki's honest answer: "Better than I used to."

FOR VALERIE BERTINELLI, star of One Day at a Time

How does your mom compare with Bonnie Franklin, your mom on the show? — C.O., Ventura, Calif.

● As ladies, they're much the same — both great and terrific. As moms, it's a bit hard to compare. My mom is strict; Bonnie is more easygoing. I guess Bonnie is more of a friend than my mom because as much as you love and worship your parents, which I do, you can never be completely open and honest with them. There are some things you just can't talk about. And that's where Bonnie comes in.

FOR POLLY BERGEN, actress and TV personality

I know you divorced your second husband, Freddie Fields, after 18 years of marriage, and I see your name linked with other men. How did your kids react when you first started dating? — P.L., Anniston, Ala.

● Peter, 18, kept his hostility inside, ignoring anyone I dated. PK [Pamela Kerry], 20, oozed with friendliness and flashed dazzling smiles. Then, when she won the man over, she devastated him with one-liners. For a year, neither child was overly gracious to anyone I went out with.

FOR VIDAL SASSOON, hairstylist

Did your mother play a role in your decision to become a hairstylist? — L.T., Grand Junction, Ohio

● When I was 14, Mom told me in no uncertain terms, "You're going to learn a trade," and dragged me to a beauty parlor in London's East End. On hearing the price of an apprenticeship, $500 (which we didn't have), I was so delighted at my "reprieve" that I doffed my cap at the manager on our way out. He was so impressed that he called us back and said, "Young man, start Monday — and forget the fee."

PRO Rep. Robert Carr (D.-Mich.)

There is no denying that a good deal of Congressional travel is for pleasure. These trips should not just be curtailed; they should be cut off completely. On the other hand, many trips are taken that are essential for a member of Congress in doing a complete job. These 435 people make decisions that affect the lives of hundreds of millions of people. Those decisions should be based on as much information as possible. The problem is in getting Congress to distinguish between learning trips and vacation-like trips. Last year I introduced two bills to put some controls on Congressional travel — simply to bring into the open what the trips are for and how the money is spent. One was badly defeated. The other has been buried in committee.

PRO AND CON

Should Congressional Junkets Be Curtailed?

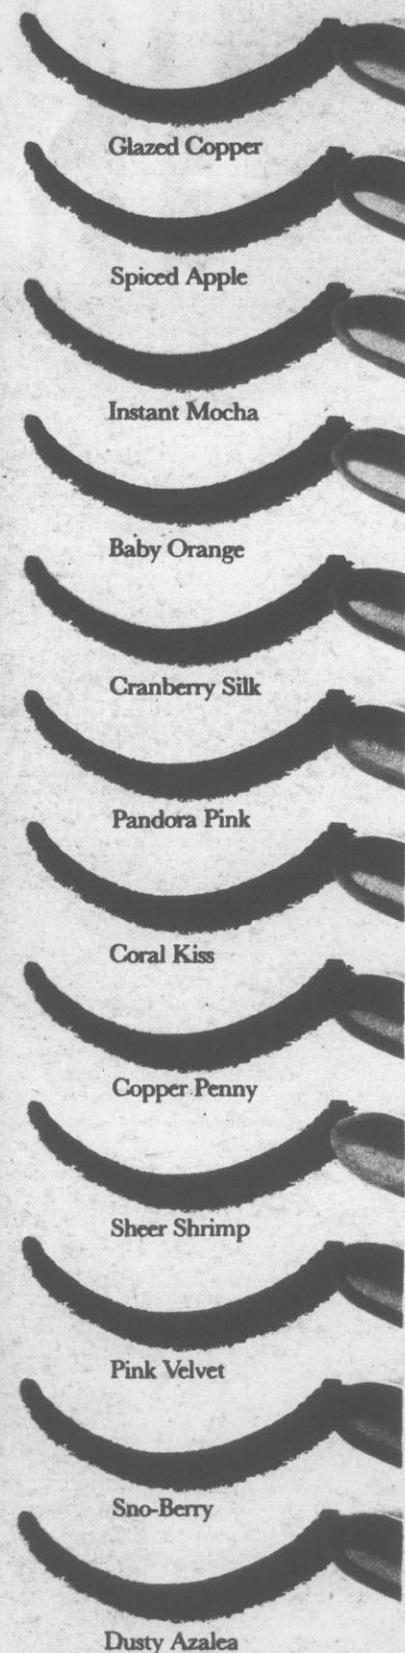

Illustration by Hal Jost

CON Rep. Edward J. Derwinski (R.-Ill.)

Travel on official business is a Congressman's responsibility and should not be curtailed. It is legally authorized, fully reported and, in my experience, seldom abused. Many decisions I have made on bills before Congress were based on information obtained in foreign travel. Congress cannot legislate on major diplomatic, economic and military issues without an up-to-date knowledge of world conditions obtained by firsthand contact with foreign officials. We cannot remain abreast of world developments by reading State Department reports. Visiting Congressmen are valuable assets to our ambassadors. All doors are open to us in foreign countries, where the importance of our Congress is well known to their leaders.

MOTHERS: THEIR WARMTH, WIT AND WISDOM

God could not be everywhere, so He created mothers. — Jewish Proverb

By Liz Smith

Top Secret From Ike

Two decades after the end of World War II, a collection of Pentagon files originally marked TOP SECRET was restamped as DECLASSIFIED. Among them was a directive dispatched from the headquarters of the Allied High Command in May 1944, shortly before the D-Day invasion of France. The order, on official yellow message paper, called for sending a Mother's Day greeting to Mrs. Ida Eisenhower in Kansas from her son Dwight, supreme commander of the Allied Forces.

High Anxiety

The wearing of glasses on the job has been a subject of long-standing debate between CBS television newscaster Lesley Stahl and her mother. This disagreement hit a new peak on the night in 1972 when Lesley made her very first appearance on the full CBS network. Mrs. Stahl called up her daughter after the broadcast and said: "Forty-nine million Americans saw you on television tonight. One of them is the father of my future grandchild, but he's never going to call you for a date because you wore your glasses!"

Matthew's Granny

One of the continuing delights of Mary Martin's life is that wherever she goes, she meets people who remember seeing her onstage as Peter Pan. Frequently, they ask her to "crow" for them as Peter did. One day, she heard a knock on her bedroom door at six in the morning; it was her grandson Matthew. "May I bring some friends to meet you?" he asked.

Determined to be a wonderful grandmother, Miss Martin inquired cheerily, "When, darling?"

"Now," said Matthew. "They're here."

A bunch of little boys then marched into the bedroom. Miss Martin sat up straight and tried to smile while Matthew extended his arm in her direction and made the introduction:

"Meet my grandmother, Peter Pan."

An Explanation

Kaye Ballard, in her night-club act, expounds her theory on why all mothers have the same stock answers to their children's questions: "They all go to a school for mothers and have to take a final. All those who fail become aunts."

John's Mimi

Beatle John Lennon was raised by his Aunt Mimi, his mother's sister. In the 1960's, at the height of Beatlemania, he persuaded her to leave her home in Liverpool and move into a luxury bungalow he bought for her in the seaside resort of Bournemouth. He also presented her with the M.B.E. medal awarded to him by Queen Elizabeth and a large, engraved-to-order plaque. On the plaque is the phrase Aunt Mimi addressed to John almost every day of his adolescent life: "The guitar's all right, but you'll never earn your living with it."

"Later John took his medal back to return it to the government as a political protest, even though at the time of the investiture, Paul McCartney had described the Queen as being "just like a mum."

A Free Ladybird

Many people assume, says Lynda Johnson Robb, that her mother, Lady Bird, the wife of LBJ, the thirty-sixth President, "lived in his shadow, to do his bidding." Definitely not so," asserts Lady Bird's daughter. "No one owns Mother. Behind her velvet eyes is a determination to need no one. She allows herself to be viewed as a soft and lovely lady, but I have seen her tell Daddy 'No' when few others would."

This sense of being her own person, Lynda says, extended to the pocketbook as well as other aspects of the Johnsons' marriage. Amazed to hear that Lynda and her husband had a joint checking account, the independent Lady Bird told her daughter, "I wouldn't have a joint checking account with the angel Gabriel!"

The Ladies' Home Journal

Mother and Dr. Freud

Mildred Newman, who has been a kind of high-powered mother to the adult me and has changed my life infinitely for the better, tells of the first day she was ever to treat a patient in private psychiatric practice. She was terribly nervous and excited, but the last thing her mother said to her as she went to the appointment was, "Now don't you go getting those poor girls to hate their mothers!"

Mrs. FDR: Always the Mother

James Roosevelt, the eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Franklin Roosevelt, states in his book, My Parents, that despite Eleanor Roosevelt's busy public life, "she never stopped being a mother." He recalls one night sitting on the dais with her at a formal dinner in her honor. The glowing tributes of the speakers didn't keep Mrs. Roosevelt from noticing that her son wasn't eating much. "Though I was by then in my early fifties," writes James, "Mother leaned over and whispered an order: 'James, eat your peas!'"

From Moon to Mother

The son-to-mother communication transmitted over the longest distance was the birthday greeting sent on December 28, 1968, by astronaut James Lovell to his mother. At the time of its transmission, he was 140,000 miles out in space on his way to the moon.

Universal

When Liberace met England's Queen Mother for the first time in London in 1972, she, like many another celebrity he meets, asked him about his mother. He explained that she had just celebrated her eightieth birthday, and the trip to England had seemed too much for her. "But," he added, "she sends her love to you. She loves everybody who is nice to me."

Replied the Queen Mother: "That's the way all us Mothers are."

Softy

Elizabeth Taylor once confessed why a week-long fishing expedition to Baja ended up with her catching nothing: "I suppose that I'm too softhearted. After all, fish have mothers."

ABOUT OUR COVER

The painting on our cover, Mother Sewing, is by the American artist Mary Cassatt. The 1902 oil, which hangs in New York City's Metropolitan Museum of Art, is one of Cassatt's many paintings of mothers and children.

Born in Pittsburgh, Pa., in 1845, Cassatt was an expatriate for most of her life and died in France in 1926. She was strongly influenced by the French Impressionist painter Degas and was the only American asked to exhibit with the Impressionists.

Cassatt's works hang in many of the world's outstanding museums, including the Louvre in Paris and Washington, D.C.'s National Gallery of Art.

INSTANT MILLIONAIRES!

"One out of 900 Americans is a millionaire. . . . And since the early 1970's, state lotteries have been the largest single contributor to the millionaire pool."

Paul McNabb after hearing the good news. He's still a baker in a doughnut shop.

By Robert P. Bomboy

If there is a millionaire anywhere who doesn't seem like one, it is Dennis Holland of Hagerstown, Md. He and his wife Sue make monthly mortgage payments. They have a listed telephone number they haven't bothered to change since winning their million last October in the Maryland lottery. They still shop carefully for whatever they buy, and Dennis is getting ready to paint his house this spring, just as he would have before the man whom they laughingly refer to as "John Beresford Tipton" came to visit.

Tipton, the fictional philanthropist in the 1950's television series The Millionaire, has visited the Hollands and 270 other Americans in the guise of state-operated lotteries, which have grown to maturity in the 1970's. Nine lotteries (in Connecticut, Illinois, Ohio, Maryland, Massachusetts, Michigan, New Jersey, New York and Pennsylvania) award million-dollar prizes.

One out of every 900 Americans is a millionaire, according to tax records. And since the early 1970's, state lotteries have been the largest single contributor to the millionaire pool. In fact, a Cleveland TV personality, Don Webster of WEWS-TV, boasts that as emcee of the Ohio lottery's televised game show he has given away more than $40,000,000 in the past two and a half years. He is applying to have that feat recorded in the Guinness Book of World Records. "The difference between me and John Beresford Tipton," says Webster good-naturedly, "is that the money I give away is real."

The fictional Tipton bestowed his millions on young and old from every walk of life and then watched carefully to see how they were affected by wealth. If he were to look in on the Hollands and many other lottery winners today, he would find that the million dollar prizes have not made great changes in their lives.

Millionaire artist Arthur Hoener still teaches at Hampshire College in Amherst, Mass.; millionaire William Inman is still on the Peoria, Ill., police force; Stanley Sapinsky, who won his million in the New Jersey lottery, still mixes the ingredients for jelly rolls in a Clifton, N.J., food-processing plant; and Massachusetts millionaire Robert Taylor, a milkman for 19 years, still sets his alarm clock for 3:00 A.M. and goes off to work at New England's largest dairy.

"By and large," reports H. Dennis Smith of the Ohio Lottery Commission, "the profile of our millionaire winners is such that we haven't encountered anyone yet who's gone out and set the world on fire." To every rule, of course, there are abounding exceptions. A man in New Jersey did $20,000 worth of damage to his Trenton hotel room celebrating his first night as a millionaire. At least one unmarried winner bought a huge new home and now takes turns sleeping in her five bedrooms. Ohio's latest million-dollar winner, 51-year-old Andrew Yannai, vowed: "I'm going to go out and buy a six-pack and have a good time. And tomorrow morning I'm going to go to work and quit." And that's just what he did.

Dennis Holland, the Maryland winner, also quit his job as a $16,000-a-year auto parts salesman. "The taxes were really why he quit," confesses Sue Holland in dismay. "It doesn't pay to work." The Hollands owed $14,000 in income taxes this year.

They bought Sue's father an 18' motorboat, and they have five cars. ("But," adds Sue mischievously, "we had three before we won the million.") The Hollands bought new living-room and dining-room furniture and a new piano for their daughters Tiffany and Stefanie. ("We must have looked at 80 million of them," Sue concedes. "Being poor so long, I still shop around.") They also flew down to Disney World in Florida for a 10-day vacation.

"I found out one ironic part; money can't buy everything," says Dennis. "We were getting so deeply in debt three years ago that we cut up all our credit cards. And now that I'd won a million dollars, we were planning a trip to Disney World, and I found we couldn't go without two major credit cards. It was difficult to rent a car without them. We had to return to the plastic world."

The Hollands also were astounded to discover that their notoriety as lottery millionaires didn't bring them unwanted mail and annoying phone calls. Dennis believes they went untouched because they live in a small country town. They have had only three investment proposals, one from a pushy real-estate salesman and the other two from insurance agents.

"The real-estate man called and asked if we were going to stay in that dump," Sue Holland recalls indignantly. She and Dennis have lived in their 60-year-old brick and frame farmhouse for the past eight years. And they intend to stay. "We have a great old porch that we like to sit on," says Sue. "It was our very first house after we got married. We bought it on a terribly tight budget."

Other lottery millionaires have encountered more unpleasantness. Paul McNabb, a 34-year-old doughnut baker who still works behind the counter of another man's shop, has changed addresses several times since winning his million in 1973 and even today won't tell strangers where he lives.

"My life was like a road map," says McNabb, who fainted when his prize-winning lottery number was announced. "That's the only way I can describe it. One minute it was one way, and the next it was like someone put a big freeway through it. It all came too sudden."

An evangelist asked McNabb for $500; a filmmaker wanted help so that he could finish a motion picture about prisons; an elderly couple who had been cheated out of their savings requested "anything you can send"; a California woman offered the services of her son, an investment counselor; and one man simply demanded $5,000 to help himself get out of debt.

The same thing happened to 80-year-old Gus Coscarella, a retired Philadelphia barber. For a while, he no sooner would put down the telephone than it would ring again. "Fifty dollars to $25,000 they want," Coscarella protests. "They want my car, they want my place, they want my business. Everything."

"I had phone calls from Texas, from Georgia, from all over the country. They'd say, I ought to know them because I had cut their hair when they were kids. They were kids then; now they're grandfathers. I hadn't seen them in between."

Four months later, Joe and Leota Mazzacane of Connecticut pose in their home. A teacher of retarded children and mother of four, she won $1,000,000.

The state lotteries pay Coscarella and the other million-dollar winners in $50,000 annual installments. The nine lottery states that award million-dollar prizes all buy annuities guaranteeing full payoffs to the winners or their heirs.

Doling out the money over a 20-year period protects the winners against the $700,000 tax they would have to pay if they were given their millions all at once. But the $50,000 annual payments — which are about equal to the salaries of business executives, top-level government bureaucrats or physicians in general practice — all but reduce the lottery winners to “paper millionaires.” They find, for instance, that they can’t go to a bank and lay down their million-dollar winnings as security for the sizable loans required to start a business or buy into an existing one. “If I wanted to buy a small company, it would have to be pretty small,” says Dennis Holland.

The state lotteries also award guaranteed annual incomes that will make some of their winners millionaires two or three times over. One example is Carol Joyce, 23 of South Boston, Mass., who won the Massachusetts lottery’s $1,000-a-week-for-life prize and will collect nearly $3 million if she lives out her full life expectancy.

As many as 90 million Americans a year buy lottery tickets. With the million-dollar prizes as their big attractions, state lotteries last year took in $1.5 billion. Of that amount, more than $600 million was plowed back into state programs. Today lottery revenues are an important factor in balancing state budgets. In most of the 13 lottery states (Delaware, Maine, New Hampshire and Rhode Island don’t offer millionaire prizes) earnings go to the general treasury, a policy endorsed by the National Gambling Commission in 1976. Lottery windfalls have given Pennsylvania’s senior citizens property-tax rebates and free bus service. New Hampshire, New Jersey and New York earmark lottery income for the support of local school districts. Says Senator John A. Durkin (D.-N.H.), who represents the state where the first modern lottery began in 1963, “The lottery has had an extremely fine record and has provided millions of dollars for education in the State of New Hampshire.”

Lottery states have been criticized for pilfering the pockets of their poorest citizens. In Maryland, for example, it has been estimated that every man, woman and child in the state spent $63 a piece last year on the state lottery and its phenomenally successful legalized numbers games.

But lottery officials there and elsewhere say the criticism is groundless. “As far as lotteries taking money off the table and starving the children and making them go without shoes,” concludes Ralph F. Batch, who has directed the New Jersey, Illinois and Delaware lotteries, “it’s a cliché that’s been applied to gambling for nigh onto 5,000 years, and there’s no truth to it.”

State lotteries are building up their own folklore of colorful characters and implausible situations, nevertheless, including legends of big spenders and plungers equal to the stories told about horse-racing by Damon Runyon. There was the winner in the Michigan lottery who walked out of the drawing that had made him a millionaire and found that he didn’t have bus fare to get home. There was the Pennsylvania couple last year that put their life savings and every dollar they could scrape together into lottery tickets in the hope of winning a million dollars. They invested $12,000 and won $14,000 — but not the million they were hoping for. And earlier this year, there was 72-year-old Henry Hoffman of Baltimore, who bet $11,000 on a number that didn’t come up. “It’s only money,” he said.

Lottery plungers also have bet thousands on macabre and bizarre hunches. After Elvis Presley’s death, newspaper photographs of the funeral procession showed the hearse’s license number. It was a big bet — and an even bigger loser — the next day.

But more than a few strange hunches have paid off. And some, after fizzling once, have come through the second-time around. State lotteries were flooded with bets after millions of TV viewers saw an episode of Baretta that depicted illegal numbers runners. The number picked that time didn’t win. But when the episode was rerun last year, another number favored by the numbers players on the show broke the bank in the Maryland lottery. If at first you don’t succeed. . .

Observations

Doomsaying. What’s wrong with America? Ask the question at your next dinner party, and chances are it will keep the conversation lively until the last guest leaves. Because, like it or not, negativism has become a national way of life. As one observer puts it, “for more than a decade, America has treated itself to a rancid feast of condemnation.”

Strong words. This sharp comment on how Americans perceive themselves and their country is by Ben J. Wattenberg, author of the best-selling The Real Majority, and former aide to President Lyndon B. Johnson. Wattenberg challenges the prevalent tendency to apologize for America, saying it’s caused at least in part by a growing body of social fiction which distorts the view of America and its future.

“Fred says it’s America, but I think it’s partly Fred.”

Crippling philosophy. This national preoccupation with imagined failure, Wattenberg says, hobbles America’s ability to deal confidently with the problems and opportunities which lie ahead. After all, how can a nation which believes it hasn’t done anything right in the recent past hope to do anything bold or creative in the future?

Positive thinking. To overcome this obsession with negativism, Wattenberg takes a hard look at the critics—and also at what’s right with America, in a 13-part television series, “In Search of the Real America,” which has its premiere this Thursday evening on Public Broadcasting Service stations across the nation.

Knowledgeable guide. Author Wattenberg is well suited to the task of helping us put to rout some time-worn stereotypes. Big business, for example, is frequently labeled as self-perpetuating and insensitive to the needs of the people. Wattenberg buries this myth, by taking the viewer through the fog-shrouded graveyard of defunct corporate giants that went out of business—simply because they failed to respond to people’s needs and desires. Demographer and political analyst, Wattenberg looks at the nation’s real strengths and imagined problems with a practiced and professional eye and presents his findings with clarity and wit.

Satisfying Search. Beginning May 18, plan to join Ben Wattenberg “In Search of the Real America” every Thursday evening at 8:30 p.m. on your local PBS television station. It will make you feel good about the country again—for a lot of very good reasons.

Sour Cream-Onion Biscuits
Spiced Ambrosia
Coffee Tea Milk

PAPRIKA CHEESE BALL

- ½ teaspoon dry mustard
- ½ teaspoon water
- 12 ounces shredded sharp Cheddar cheese (3 cups)
- ½ cup butter or margarine, softened
- ½ teaspoon onion powder
- ½ cup finely chopped walnuts
- 1 tablespoon paprika

1. In a medium bowl, combine mustard with water; let stand 10 minutes for flavor to develop. Add cheese, butter and onion powder.
2. Mix until smooth with an electric mixer. Stir in walnuts. Wrap in waxed paper or clear plastic wrap.
3. Refrigerate for at least 2 hours. Shape into a ball; roll in paprika. Decorate with walnut halves, if desired.
4. Serve with celery ribs, sliced cucumber, carrots and crackers, if desired.

Makes 1 ball

BOLOGNA-CHEESE WEDGES

- 1 can (3 to 4 ozs.) whole mushrooms
- ½ cup bottled Italian dressing
- 1 pkg. (8 ozs.) cream cheese, softened
- 2 tablespoons freeze-dried chives
- 1 teaspoon oregano leaves, crushed
- 1 pkg. (8 ozs.) sliced bologna

1. Drain mushrooms, place in small cup, cover with Italian dressing. Cover and marinate at least 2 hours.
2. In a small bowl, mix cheese, chives and oregano. Spread on all but 2 slices of the bologna. Make two stacks of the cheese-spread bologna.
3. Wrap tightly and refrigerate until serving time, at least 1 hour. Cut each stack into 8 wedges. Insert toothpick into 1 or 2 drained mushrooms; stick into each bologna wedge as garnish.

"Christ turns me on but..."

"Christ turns me on but the Church turns me off!" It's a nice phrase. And no doubt many use it sincerely.

But the idea that Christ can be split from the Church is totally false. Christ is the Head, the Scriptures assure us, and the Church is His body. Anyone who divides them, therefore, is wrong about Christ. And wrong about the Church.

So, maybe it's time to put away the nice phrases. Time to ask ourselves if it is the real Christ we are serving. If it is the real Christ who turns us on. Or is it our own romantic version of Christ, cut down to comfortable size?

One way to see through the fog is to go back to the Scriptures and rediscover how the Church is foreshadowed in the Old Testament and realized in the New, and how Christ is at the very heart of the Church both in shadow and in reality. Look into this today. As a start, send for our free pamphlet: "God's Church in Prophecy and Fulfillment." No one will call on you.

8 tablespoons butter or margarine, melted

1. Line two shallow baking pans with foil. Rinse chicken and drain. Measure flour, sesame seed, salt, paprika, garlic powder and black pepper into a plastic or paper bag; shake to mix.
2. Dip a few pieces of chicken at a time in milk, then shake in bag until well coated. Place in baking pan. Drizzle with butter.
3. Bake in a preheated hot oven (400°F.) until golden, 45 to 50 minutes, turning once.

Makes 8 servings

SOUR CREAM-ONION BISCUITS

- 2 cups unbleached all-purpose flour
- 1 tablespoon baking powder
- ½ teaspoon baking soda
- 1½ teaspoons onion powder
- 1 teaspoon sugar
- 1 teaspoon salt
- ½ cup butter or margarine
- 1 cup dairy sour cream

1. Into a medium bowl, measure flour, baking powder, baking soda, onion powder, sugar and salt; mix well. Cut in butter with pastry blender or two knives used scissor-fashion until mixture resembles coarse crumbs.
2. Add sour cream, stirring only until mixture is moistened. Turn dough onto lightly floured surface. Knead about 10 times to form a soft, smooth dough.
3. Gently roll out dough from center to ¾-inch thickness. With floured 2½-inch biscuit cutter, cut straight down into dough, being careful not to twist cutter. Place on ungreased baking sheet.
4. Bake in a preheated, very hot oven (450°F.) until raised and golden, about 10 minutes. Serve hot.

Makes 10 biscuits

SOUTH AMERICAN SALAD BOWL

- 8 tablespoons vegetable oil
- ½ teaspoon salt
- ½ teaspoon ground cumin
- ¼ teaspoon oregano leaves, crushed
- ½ teaspoon ground black pepper
- 1 tablespoon lemon juice
- 1 tablespoon cider vinegar
- 2 ears cooked fresh corn
- 1 ripe avocado
- 1 head (1 ¼ lbs.) romaine lettuce
- 2 tomatoes, cut into wedges

1. In a small bowl, combine oil, salt, cumin, oregano and black pepper. Let stand at least 1 hour.

Add lemon juice and vinegar; mix well.

2. Cut kernels from corn (makes about 1 cup). Peel and slice avocado. Wash and drain romaine; tear into bite-size pieces.
3. Place half of the romaine in a large salad bowl along with half of the corn, avocado and tomato. Add remaining greens.
4. Arrange corn, avocado and tomato over greens. Just before serving, thoroughly mix dressing. Pour over salad and toss.

Makes 8 servings

BAKED HERBED FETTUCCINE

- 1 pkg. (12 oz.) fettuccine noodles or medium-width egg noodles
- 1 pkg. (10 oz.) frozen peas, thawed
- 3 egg yolks
- 1½ cups half-and-half or milk
- ¼ cup butter or margarine, melted
- ¼ cup grated Parmesan cheese
- 1½ tablespoons parsley flakes
- 1½ teaspoons basil leaves, crushed
- 1½ teaspoons onion powder
- ½ teaspoon ground black pepper

1. Cook noodles according to package directions. Drain and place in a large bowl. Add peas and set aside.
2. In a small bowl, beat egg yolks; add cream, butter, cheese, parsley flakes, basil leaves, onion powder and black pepper. Stir in noodles, then mix well.
3. Pour into a 3-qt. shallow baking pan. Cover tightly with greased foil. Bake in a preheated moderate oven (400°F.) until hot, 20 to 25 minutes.

Makes 8 servings

SPICED AMBROSIA

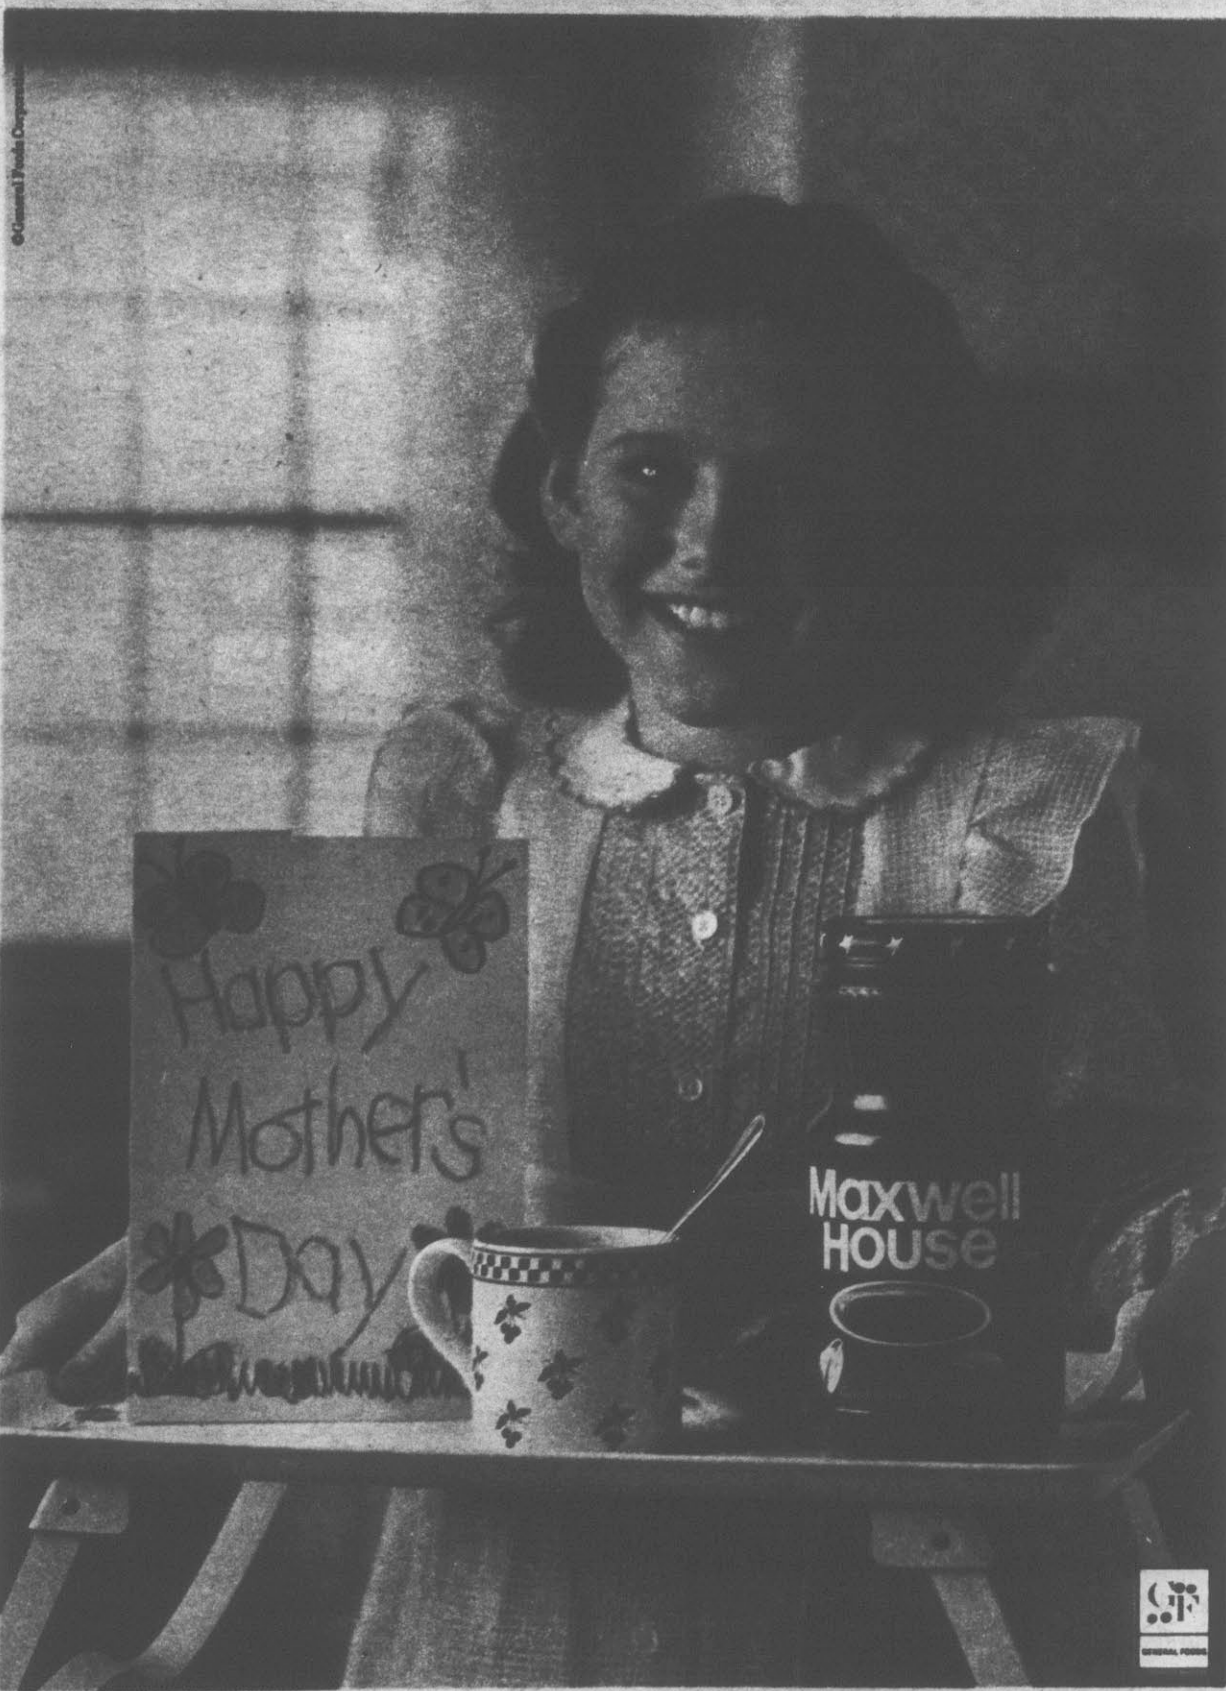

- 1 can (17 oz.) whole plums
- 1 can (29 oz.) sliced peaches, drained
- 1 can (18 oz.) apricot halves, drained
- ¼ cup firmly packed light brown sugar
- ¼ teaspoon ground cinnamon
- ½ teaspoon ground nutmeg
- ½ cup orange juice
- 2 tablespoons butter or margarine, melted
- ½ cup shredded coconut

1. Remove pits from plums; cut into halves. In a 2-qt. baking dish, layer peaches, plums and apricots.
2. In a small bowl, mix sugar, cinnamon, nutmeg, orange juice and butter; pour over fruit. Sprinkle with coconut.
3. Bake in a preheated moderate oven (350°F.) until fruit is heated through and coconut is lightly brown, about 15 minutes. Serve warm with cookies, if desired.

Makes 8 servings

Barbara Fiore

and tapioca; sprinkle over stew ingredients.
3. Pour tomatoes and water over all. Cover and turn heat to low and cook 5 to 7 hours or until meat is tender.
Makes 4 to 6 servings

SEVEN-LAYER SALAD

½ medium head iceberg lettuce, shredded
½ cup coarsely chopped celery
½ cup coarsely chopped red or green pepper
¼ cup coarsely chopped Spanish onion
½ pkg. (10 ozs.) frozen green peas, cooked, drained
1 cup mayonnaise
1 tablespoon sugar
1½ cups coarsely shredded mild Cheddar cheese
4 strips bacon, crisp-cooked and chopped or ¼ cup imitation bacon bits

1. In large salad bowl, arrange lettuce, celery, peppers, onion and peas in layers.
2. Spread mayonnaise evenly over peas. Sprinkle with sugar, then with Cheddar cheese.
3. Cover and refrigerate at least 4 hours or overnight. Sprinkle with bacon just before serving.
Makes 6 servings

ITALIAN BREAD

4½ to 5½ cups unbleached all-purpose flour
1 tablespoon sugar
1 tablespoon salt
2 pkgs. active dry yeast
1 tablespoon butter or margarine, softened
1½ cups very warm tap water
Commeal
Vegetable oil
1 egg white
1 tablespoon cold water

1. In a large bowl, thoroughly mix 1½ cups flour, sugar, salt and undissolved yeast. Add margarine.
2. Gradually add tap water to dry ingredients and beat 2 minutes at medium speed of electric mixer, scraping bowl occasionally. Add ¾ cup flour.
3. Beat at high speed 2 minutes, scraping bowl occasionally. Stir in enough additional flour to make a stiff dough.
4. Turn out onto a lightly floured board and knead until smooth and elastic, about 8 to 10 minutes. Cover with plastic wrap, then a towel. Let rest 20 minutes.
5. Divide dough in half. Roll each half into a 15-by 10-inch oblong. Beginning at wide side, roll up tightly; pinch seam to seal. Taper ends by rolling gently back and forth.
6. Place loaves on greased baking sheet sprinkled with commeal. Brush dough with oil.
7. Cover loaves loosely with plastic wrap. Refrigerate 2 to 24 hours.
8. When ready to bake, remove from refrigerator. Uncover dough carefully. Let stand at room temperature 10 minutes. Make 3 or 4 diagonal cuts on top of each with razor blade or sharp knife.
9. Bake in preheated 425°F. oven for 20 to 25 minutes. Remove from oven. Brush with egg white mixed with cold water. Return to oven; bake 5 to 10 minutes longer until golden brown.
Makes 2 loaves

The Sunnyside Drive Canning Company declares a dividend.

Sue Bishop gave away more green beans from her garden than her family ate.

Sally Finster discovered a bargain in the farmers market on fresh carrots.

Aunt Elaine remembered how her mother canned fresh vegetables, and the Sunnyside Drive Canning Company was born.

Three neighborhood ladies who bought a Presto® canner and had a great time all summer, bargains all winter.

Sue's extra beans went into the cupboard for winter eating. Those once-a-summer bargains from the farmers market became family treats in January. Aunt Elaine insisted their canner be Presto because that's what her mother used.

With 70 years of experience to share, Presto made it easy. Full instructions, step by step, and the confidence of Presto quality.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture recommends pressure canning as the only safe method for low acid foods. Presto pioneered this method of home canning.

The Sunnyside ladies bought a second Presto canner this year.

Start your own canning company with your neighbors, or — go it alone. It's a sure investment with big dividends in money and delicious food for your family.

Plant Now...Stop Back...and Watch Out!

Imagine! A Magnificent Shade Tree That Soars Up to 2 Stories High IN JUST ONE YEAR!

— and keeps on zooming to a towering 30, 40, 50 — even 60 FEET OR MORE in less time than most trees even nudge themselves a few feet off the ground!

That's the kind of wonder-results reported by U.S. Government Landscapers . . . Botanical Gardens . . . and University Plant Scientists on what is undoubtedly the most fantastic shade tree ever introduced in America . . . the incredibly beautiful Ulmus Pumila . . . perhaps the most spectacular super-hardy, super-growing shade tree in all of nature!

A ROOF-HIGH TOWER OF BEAUTY IN JUST ONE SINGLE YEAR!

Yes, one of the most exciting introductions by U.S. Plant Science — this sensational super-growing shade tree actually grows higher than even a full-grown English Hawthorne IN JUST ONE SINGLE SEASON! Actually grows higher than even a full-grown Star Magnolia IN JUST ONE SINGLE YEAR! In fact, it grows so fast, so quick, you can literally measure the difference in height from week to week!

PLANT NOW — REACH OUT AND TOUCH ITS LUSH GREEN BRANCHES FROM YOUR SECOND STORY BEDROOM WINDOW — BY NEXT SUMMER!

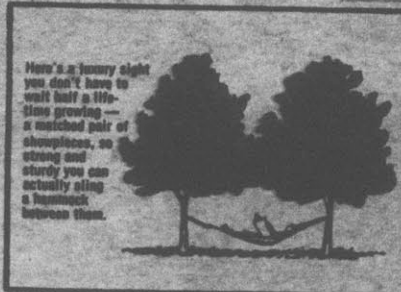

Who says you have to spend a small fortune for a beautiful shade tree — and then spend half a lifetime waiting for it to grow? That's the way it used to be — BUT NOT ANY LONGER! Not since we've finally tracked down the one single tree in all of nature that hoists itself so high, so fast you can literally measure its incredible rate of growth week by week . . . or for even more dramatic proof, take a yardstick and measure the difference in feet month to month!

GROWS MORE IN JUST ONE MONTH THAN MOST OTHER TREES GROW IN AN ENTIRE YEAR!

Yes, here is a dream come true . . . everything you've ever hoped for or wished for in a tree. Here is a miracle of nature that hoists itself higher than even the most treasured weeping willow . . . that reaches out wider than even the most graceful English maple . . . that lifts its symmetrical branches over your grounds and gardens with a splendor, and beauty few trees can match!

SPECTACULAR BEAUTY ALL 4 SEASONS OF THE YEAR!

Yes, here is one of those rare gifts of nature that not only thrusts itself to towering heights in record time . . . that not only drapes itself in lush green foliage from Easter time to way past Labor Day . . . but for a real "magazine cover effect" lavishes its branches with delicate clusters of beautiful flowers starting in spring . . . and then in fall and early winter transforms its

MATTER OF CHOICE

Some like dogs for pets,
While others cats prefer.
With one you have a bark,
With one you have a purr.

A dog is good to walk with,
No walking with a cat.
A cat in lap can snuggle,
A big dog can't do that.

Think hard and choose with care,
And when your choosing's done
It may be dog or cat
Or both — or neither one.

THE DOCTOR AND YOU

How To Avoid Heat Stroke

fection before deciding on heat stroke as the diagnosis.

Treatment for heat stroke is rapid cooling. One method is to put the patient in a cool-water bath and then to add ice cubes to chill the water as rapidly as the patient can tolerate. The water, however, should not be cold enough to make the patient shiver because shivering slows down heat loss. To keep the blood vessels dilated so that the arms and legs give off heat, the extremities should be rubbed continuously while the body is in the bath.

No drugs are effective against heat stroke. Medicines such as aspirin which reduce fever are not helpful because they depend on the patient having the ability to lose heat.

Prevention is usually simple: keep the patient cool. Keep him in air-conditioning or with a fan and, if outdoors, in the shade. Have him drink enough water to prevent sweating. If he can urinate a bit every few hours, he is adequately hydrated. Use a minimum of clothing.

Although old folks suffer from heat more than the young or the middle-aged, anyone, including infants, can have a heat-stroke attack. So if during a prolonged hot spell, you see someone with dry, hot skin and a fever, regard the problem as a medical emergency. Call a doctor and take measures to cool the patient.

—Irwin J. Polk, M.D.

With the first heat of summer, heat stroke brings hundreds of people to hospitals suffering from its effects. But the problem is preventable.

Heat stroke is most prevalent during the first hot spell of summer because the body needs time to adapt to heat. Outbreaks of heat stroke usually occur when the temperature has been more than 90 degrees for two days or longer and the relative humidity has been 50 to 75 percent.

Signs of heat stroke are a body temperature of 103 degrees coupled with lack of sweating, lethargy, stupor or even coma. Infection can cause these symptoms, too, so doctors must evaluate the patient for in-

'Most People Are Too Busy Earning a Living to Make Any Money'

I used to work hard. The 18-hour days. The 7-day weeks.

But I didn't start making big money until I did less—a lot less.

For example, this ad took about 2 hours to write. With a little luck, it should earn me 50, maybe a hundred thousand dollars.

What's more, I'm going to ask you to send me 10 dollars for something that'll cost me no more than 50 cents. And I'll try to make it so irresistible that you'd be a darned fool not to do it.

After all, why should you care if I make $9.50 profit if I can show you how to make a lot more?

What if I'm so sure that you will make money my Lazy Man's Way that I'll make you a most unusual guarantee?

And here it is: I won't even cash your check or money order for 31 days after I've sent you my material.

That'll give you plenty of time to get it, look it over, try it out.

If you don't agree that it's worth at least a hundred times what you invested, send it back. Your uncashed check or money order will be put in the return mail.

The only reason I won't send it to you and bill you or send it C.O.D. is because both these methods involve more time and money.

And I'm already going to give you the biggest bargain of your life.

Because I'm going to tell you what it took me 11 years to perfect: How to make money the Lazy Man's Way.

O.K.—now I have to brag a little. I don't mind it. And it's necessary—to prove that sending me the 10 dollars... which I'll keep "in escrow" until you're satisfied... is the smartest thing you ever did.

I live in a home that's worth $250,000. I know it is, because I turned down an offer for that much. My mortgage is less than half that, and the only reason I haven't paid it off is because my Tax Accountant says I'd be an idiot.

My "office," about a mile and a half from my home, is right on the beach. My view is so breathtaking that most people comment that they don't see how I get any work done. But I do enough. About 6 hours a day, 8 or 9 months a year.

The rest of the time we spend at our mountain "cabin." I paid $30,000 for it—cash.

I have 2 boats and a Cadillac. All paid for.

We have stocks, bonds, investments, cash in the bank. But the most important thing I have is priceless: time with my family.

And I'll show you just how I did it—the Lazy Man's Way—a secret that I've shared with just a few friends 'til now.

It doesn't require "education." I'm a high school graduate.

It doesn't require "capital." When I started out, I was so deep in debt that a lawyer friend advised bankruptcy as the only way out. He was wrong. We paid off our debts and, outside of the mortgage, don't owe a cent to any man.

It doesn't require "luck." I've had more than my share, but I'm not promising you that you'll make as much money as I have. And you may do better; I personally know one man who used these principles, worked hard, and made 11 million dollars in 8 years. But money isn't everything.

It doesn't require "talent." Just enough brains to know what to look for. And I'll tell you that.

It doesn't require "youth." One woman I worked with is over 70. She's travelled the world over, making all the money she needs, doing only what I taught her.

It doesn't require "experience." A widow in Chicago has been averaging $25,000 a year for the past 5 years, using my methods.

What does it require? Belief. Enough to take a chance. Enough to absorb what I'll send you. Enough to put the principles into action. If you do just that—nothing more, nothing less—the results will be hard to believe. Remember—I guarantee it.

You don't have to give up your job. But you may soon be making so much money that you'll be able to. Once again—I guarantee it.

The wisest man I ever knew told me something I never forgot: "Most people are too busy earning a living to make any money."

Don't take as long as I did to find out he was right.

I'll prove it to you, if you'll send in the coupon now. I'm not asking you to "believe" me. Just try it. If I'm wrong, all you've lost is a couple of minutes and a postage stamp. But what if I'm right?

Learn Nature's Good Luck Secret

How to cash in on your built-in luck by using your personal Biorhythm Analysis to discover your multi-high jackpot days

By Paul Vanderwist

You are going to experience at least 5 multi-high jackpot days in the next two months. Your total will have reached 31 jackpot days by the end of the year.

But chances are, you won't collect a single one of the jackpots you have coming to you. Why? Because although Mother Nature built these jackpots into you, up until now, she has kept the way to collect them a closely guarded secret.

But a scientific discovery has finally cracked "Nature's Good Luck Secret." What is the discovery? Scientists call it Biorhythm.

Biorhythm is currently drawing enormous public attention. As a copywriter, I decided to look into it. My investigations centered around the research being conducted by the Biorhythm Research Association.

The Association has developed a two part theory. First, at birth Mother Nature built good luck into each one of us. She intended for us to enjoy success and happiness in our loves, finances, and careers.

Second, in order to cash in on your built-in luck, you must simply make the right little decisions on your multi-high days. But before I tell you about their research, let me quickly explain what Biorhythm multi-high jackpot days are.

Jackie met John Kennedy on a mental and emotional Multi-High Jackpot Day.

Alfred Mayle won $10,000 by buying a lottery ticket on a Multi-High Jackpot Day.

three Life Beats (Biorhythm Cycles). 1. A 23 day Physical Cycle, governing energy and sexual stimulation. 2. A 28 day Emotional Cycle, governing love and happiness. 3. A 33 day Mental Cycle governing money and career. These three Biorhythm Cycles flow throughout our entire life. They alternate between high and recharge cycles. (See photo at upper right.) When at least two biorhythm cycles are on high, you experience a multi-high jackpot day. When three cycles hit high on exactly the same day, you experience a Triple High Super Jackpot Day. When all three cycles are on recharge, you have a relax day.

CELEBRITY RESEARCH

With this explanation in mind, let me continue to describe the Association's research. To prove part two of their theory, that extraordinary luck can be achieved by making the right little decisions on Biorhythm multi-high days, they studied a group of celebrities. All of the celebrities had one thing in common. They were leading ordinary lives, when suddenly they were skyrocketed to wealth, success and fame. Here are their findings on just three of the many celebrities they studied.

When the Olympics opened in the summer of 1976, a 14 year old Nadia Comaneci experienced a Triple High Jackpot Day. Nadia went on to capture the first perfect score in Olympic Gymnastic history, seven perfect scores overall, and a total of 3 gold medals. In addition, Nadia's physical Biorhythm Cycle was very high every day of her performance, and peaked the day she won the gold medal on the uneven parallel bars.

Remember the pet rock craze? The man who conceived the idea was a Californian named Gary Dahl. On April 19, 1975, his Biorhythm Chart indicated a mental high jackpot day. It was on this day that Dahl had his pet rock brainstorm. Ultimately, this venture made him a million dollars in less than 90 days.

Jackie Bouvier was an unknown reporter from the Washington Times Herald. On May 8, 1952 her mental and emotional cycles both reached high points. It was on this day that she met and began interviewing John F. Kennedy. They were soon married and later she became the youngest First Lady in the 20th Century. Today, Jackie is probably the most famous woman alive.

The Association also studied people who were not famous but had experienced extremely good luck.

During the week of August 13th, Pat Carnes, a Canton, Ohio housewife, had an incredible luck

When your three Biorhythm Cycles hit high on exactly the same day, you experience a Triple High Super Jackpot Day.

At the moment of your birth, 3 Biorhythm Cycles begin to flow. They alternate between high cycles and recharge cycles throughout your entire life. Multi-high jackpot days occur when at least 2 cycles are on high at the same time. Relax days occur when all three cycles are on recharge.

a research blank which will offer you cash incentives to simply tell the Association all about the unbelievable luck, love, wealth, success and happiness your Biorhythm Analysis has brought you. Your success story will prove part one of their theory.

HOW IS AN ANALYSIS PREPARED?

A Biorhythm Technician will process your birth information. Your keypunched card will be fed into a giant IBM 370-145 computer. The computer will then complete the complicated the job and accelerate advancements. Profitable times (intellectual highs) to make career and investment decisions will be pinpointed.

Your analysis will notify you when to be on the lookout for hidden talents which may be surfacing. It will then point out the best times to develop these talents.

By knowing the best times to do things, and when to relax and recharge, you'll do everything better than you have before. You can use your Biorhythm Analysis to begin an all around program of self-improvement.

Biorhythm has been thoroughly tested. Over 5,000 companies worldwide use Biorhythm. Many American airlines use Biorhythm. Biorhythm has been covered by most major newspapers, magazines and has recently been featured on "To Tell The Truth" and "Monday Night Football."

HOW CAN YOU ORDER YOUR PERSONAL BIORHYTHM ANALYSIS?

If you are interested in immediately cashing in on all of the built-in luck, love, wealth, success and happiness you have coming to you, then simply do this:

Send the name, current address, date, month, year and place of birth for each person on a piece of paper along with the $3.65 plus 30¢ postage & handling (cash, check or money order) for each one year Biorhythm Analysis (365 days for 1¢ a day). Make checks payable to Biorhythm Research Association. If you have Master Charge or VISA, you may charge your purchase by sending the following information: A. name of card B. credit card number C. card expiration date.

Mail your orders to BIORHYTHM RESEARCH ASSOCIATION, Dept. D-16, 401 Market Ave. N., Canton, Ohio 44750.

You take absolutely no risk when you order. Your Biorhythm Analysis is covered by a one year - 365 day - full money back guarantee. If your luck does not dramatically improve in all areas of your life, simply return your analysis. You will receive every penny of your money back - no questions asked.

The Association's research project may not last much longer. But right this minute you can have your personal one year Biorhythm Analysis individually prepared for just 1¢ a day! If you have any questions, call me, Paul Vanderwist, at (216) 455-1390. I'll be happy to talk with you.

"Once you have your personal Biorhythm Analysis prepared from your birth date you can begin to enjoy luck, love, wealth, success, and happiness."

WHAT IS BIORHYTHM?

The word Biorhythm is derived from the Greek words 'bio' meaning life and 'rhythmos' meaning regulated beats. There is considerable evidence that we all have streak. Ironically her luck began on Friday the 13th when she won her company's check pool for $69. Friday night, Pat won $145 playing Bingo. Saturday, she hit the superfecta at the racetrack for $850. Sunday, she won 5 times at Bingo and was embarrassed to keep raising her hand. Wednesday, she hit both the trifecta and the perfecta for a total of $930. Unknown to Pat, during this week her Biorhythm chart had registered six Multi-High Jackpot Days in a row.

Omar Watts was a 59 year old nightwatchman struggling to support a wife and five children. On October 27, 1974 his Biorhythm Analysis indicated a Triple High Jackpot day. It was on this day that Omar chose to quit his job as a nightwatchman. His purchase of a 50¢ ticket had just won him Ohio's first million dollar lottery.

As you can see from the above examples, it was the little decisions made on multi-high days, which led to luck, love, wealth, success and happiness. This proves part two of the Association's theory.

Now the Association is conducting a nationwide research project to prove part one of their theory: that everyone, regardless of age or ability, can dramatically improve their luck with the help of their personal Biorhythm Analysis. If you send them your birth date, they will individually prepare your one year - 365 day Biorhythm Analysis. Along with your Analysis, you will receive calculations to determine the positions of your Biorhythm Cycles every day for the coming year. Your Biorhythm Analysis will not be preprinted. The computer individually prepares each analysis just like a man would. But the computer's tremendous speed enables the Association to prepare reports for the public at low costs.

WHAT CAN BIORHYTHM DO FOR YOU?

With your personal 15 page, 3000 word Biorhythm Analysis, all of the following benefits can be yours:

- Your luck can instantly improve. Your Analysis will point out your multi-high jackpot days. These lucky days are the best times for you to enter lotteries, drawings, raffles, play bingo, go to the races, play cards, or try any game of chance.
- Your Biorhythm Analysis can make you lucky at love. You'll be told when your Physical (sexual) and Emotional (romantic) high days will occur, so you can take full advantage of them. When you know ahead of time you'll be at your best, your self-confidence will improve. Members of the opposite sex will sense this and be attracted to you.
- You will reach a new level of self-understanding with Biorhythm. You will follow a more natural lifestyle and be completely comfortable in your new skin.
- Your analysis will help you perform better on

PEOPLE QUIZ/ By John E. Gibson

Does laughter have a positive physiological effect on us? What does the way you react to a joke reveal about you?

WHAT YOUR LAUGH REALLY MEANS

TRUE OR FALSE

1. Laughter has a positive physiological effect on us.
2. Laughter invariably communicates what we feel to the other person.
3. Most things we laugh at aren't funny.
4. Laughter is frequently used as a weapon.
5. The way a person habitually laughs reveals a lot about him.

ANSWERS

1. True. Dr. James J. Walsh, a pioneer researcher in this field, has summed up his findings in Laughter and Health: "There seems no doubt that hearty laughter stimulates practically all the large organs, and by making them work better through the increase in circulation that follows the vibratory massage which accompanies it, heightens resistive vitality against disease." Dr. Samuel Kahn, who explores the physiological effects of laughter in his treatise Why and How We Laugh, concludes that laughing actually causes beneficial changes in the chemistry of the body and "is conducive to health, relaxation and prolongation of life." Finally, The Psychology of Humor, which is the work of behavioral scientists from Temple University and the State University of New York, cites the findings of other studies showing laughter and humor to have a salutary effect on the body "because they restore homeostasis, stabilize blood pressure, oxygenate the blood, massage the vital organs, stimulate circulation, facilitate digestion, relax the system and produce a feeling of well-being."
2. False. Though laughter sometimes can communicate far more than our words do, psychiatrist Joost A. M. Meerloo finds that laughter also can be used to withhold communication. He notes that parents with ambivalent feelings often do so. When a child brings up a subject parents don't feel like going into, they just pass it off with a laugh. And as for social usage, no more effective smoke screen has ever been invented. ("What did the boss say when you tried to pin him down on that question?" "He just laughed and changed the subject.")

3. True. Laughter expresses complicated conscious and unconscious meanings. A person may laugh under many conditions that have nothing to do with amusement, such as being embarrassed, fearful or apologetic. Also, as psychologists from Britain's University of Wales Institute of Science and Technology point out, we often use social laughter, which "occurs in the absence of any specific humor stimulus and is a means of gaining social approval, maintaining the flow of interaction in our daily encounters, filling in pauses in our conversations and maintaining the attention of our conversational partners." The psychologists conclude that we use laughter for these social purposes much more frequently than we use it in response to humor.

4. True. As the Wales Institute study observes, in some social situations laughter is used as a weapon to ridicule others. This type is termed "derision laughter" and can be employed with devastating effect. "It may take the form of a controlled chuckle following a sarcastic or derogatory remark," the study points out. "Skillful users of derision laughter know that a victim who shows offense always can be countered with the claim that the remark was merely meant in jest."

5. True. According to a University of Illinois study, the man who laughs effortlessly and spontaneously is likely to possess a sense of well-being, sound health and security in social situations. Such laughter is contrasted with the voluntary, nervous laugh or the laugh of the practical joker, the back-slapping "life of the party." The latter, observes the study, "may actually be a lonely person whose actions reflect an overwhelming need to appear part of every social situation. His constant tricks and boisterous laughter are enacted voluntarily and do not constitute a reflexive expression of real joy."

My Feet Were Killing Me...Until I Discovered the Miracle of Hamburg!

It was the European trip I had always dreamed about. I had the time and money to go where I wanted—see what I wanted. But I soon learned that money and time don't mean much when your feet hurt too much to walk. After a few days of sightseeing my feet were killing me.

Oh, I tried to keep going. In Paris I limped through Notre Dame and along the Champs-Élysées. And I went up in the Eiffel Tower although I can't honestly say I remember the view. My feet were so tired and sore my whole body ached. While everybody else was having a great time, I was in my hotel room. I didn't even feel like sitting in a sidewalk cafe.

The whole trip was like that until I got to Hamburg, Germany. There, by accident, I happened to hear about an exciting breakthrough for anyone who suffers from sore, aching feet and legs.

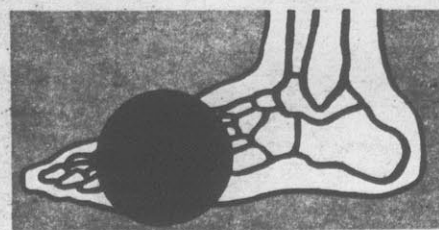

This wonderful invention was a custom-made foot support called Flexible Featherspring. When I got a pair and slipped them into my shoes my pain disappeared almost instantly. The flexible shock absorbing support they gave my feet was like cradling them on a cushion of air. I could walk, stand, even run. The relief was truly a miracle.

And just one pair was all I needed. I learned that women also can wear them—even with sandals and open backed shoes. They're completely invisible.

Imagine how dumbfounded I was to discover that these miraculous devices were sold only in Europe. Right then I determined that I would share the miracle I discovered in Hamburg with my own countrymen.

Today thousands of Americans including those who have retired—many with foot problems far more severe than mine—have experienced this blessed relief for themselves.

Here's why Feathersprings work for them and why they can work for you. These supports are like nothing you've ever seen before. They are custom fitted and made for your feet alone! Unlike conventional devices, they actually imitate the youthful elastic support that Nature originally intended your feet to have.

Whatever your problem—corns, calluses, pain in the balls of your feet, burning nerve ends, painful ankles, old injuries, backaches or just generally sore, aching feet, Flexible Feathersprings will bring you guaranteed relief with every step you take.

Don't suffer pain and discomfort needlessly. If your feet hurt, the miracle of Hamburg can help you. Write for more detailed information. There is no obligation whatsoever. Just fill out the coupon below and mail it today.

WHAT PEOPLE SAY ABOUT THE MIRACLE:

Received my wife's Feathersprings two days ago. They are super—neither of us can believe the results. She has had terrible feet for years; already no pain. Incidentally, her sore knee is much better. As a retired physician, this result is amazing.

KEEPING WATCH OVER PLANET EARTH

Illustration by Jacqueline Adato

An oil spill off Alaska...a volcanic eruption in Japan...fireballs...caterpillar swarms...snake migrations — all are studied by the Center for Short-Lived Phenomena.

By Larry Simonberg

Loud booms are heard up and down the East Coast. A woman in Georgia is horrified to see swarms of caterpillars overrunning her backyard. A spectacular fireball is seen flashing through the night skies. A volcano suddenly erupts in Japan. Seals and sea otters die when oil is spilled off the Alaska coast.

What do these unconnected events have in common? Two things: they reflect natural or man-made changes in our environment, and they were all tracked and reported by an organization called the Center for Short-Lived Phenomena.

The center, also known as CSLP, was founded in 1968 as part of the Smithsonian Institution. Two years ago, it became an independent, nonprofit organization. Its headquarters are in Cambridge, Mass., near Harvard and MIT. And its mission? To keep watch over planet Earth.

"We try to give science an immediacy and relevance to the public that it usually lacks," explains Richard Golob, the center's 27-year-old director, who studied biochemistry at Harvard. He describes the five-member paid staff as investigative reporters who gather information on all sorts of biological, geological, astronomical and environmental events noted anywhere in the world.

Once information about an earthquake, for instance, is gathered and verified, it's made available quickly to scientists, government officials, journalists and others who may be interested. The idea is to publicize a phenomenon while it's still going on or as soon after it has ended as is feasible. That way, investigators have a better chance to study and explain it.

"Through our network of sources, we can stay up to date," says Golob. Hundreds of these ple involved in some research project, notify CSLP when an event is reported in their part of the world.

And what happens to the information once it's reported to the center? Staffers go to work trying to verify details by contacting witnesses, reading newspapers and querying scientists and officials. When they're convinced they have an accurate account of an important event, the staffers issue an Event Notification Report.

Issuing hundreds of these reports, which are actually small cards sent to subscribers with details of one happening or another, is the main business of CSLP. For example, one card reported that a meteorite the size of a walnut fell in Stratford, Conn., on May 27, 1974. Another report said deadly plutonium had leaked from a laboratory in Miamisburg, Ohio, in early 1974. And a card issued on Jan. 11, 1978, reported that Dr. Michael R. Voorhies of the University of Nebraska had found the fetal skeleton of a prehistoric rhinoceros.

Whatever the event, the center's job is to report the facts, not to take sides, not to advocate any particular solution, not to support any policy. The center is committed to keeping watch over the earth, but its services are used by oil companies, reporters, universities, schools, libraries, museums, the United Nations, such government agencies as the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, and environmental groups of all stripes. These institutions don't always agree on what's best for the planet or on how to protect an endangered species. "Our goal is for the Cousteau Society to regard our information as highly as Mobil does and vice versa," Golob declares.

The center does not rely solely on professional scientists. It welcomes phone calls and written messages from anyone who thinks he has something worth checking out. "The idea of increasing our eyes and ears in the field obviously would help us to do our job better," Golob explains. "Amateur observers are very much involved in what we do." It may be a gas-station attendant eager to report on a snake migration or a radar operator in Alaska who's in good position to observe volcanoes erupting. "The idea is to bring the general public in," Golob continues, "to make a cadre of 'barefoot scientists.'"

Enlisting public participation fits in neatly with the center's plans to expand its activities. "Now, we're not solely interested in just collecting information for the sake of information," Golob says. "Now we're much more interested in using the information for applied ends." The idea is to develop "useful" services beyond the Event Notification Reports and answering reporters' questions. In that regard, Golob would like to start a newsletter to keep track of all major oil spills anywhere in the world. At the moment, the center can only report on a small percentage. He also would like to create an environmental publication for children that doesn't preach. And he likes the idea of an "earth-almanac." CSLP is also working on plans to distribute its reports to schools on teletype machines.

How much the center gets to do will depend on money. It is supported mainly by subscriptions to the Event Notification Reports. Rates vary, and the center will be happy to quote prices depending on what category of reports is desired and whether the subscriber is a profit-making organization.

So, the next time a whale is stranded or fire destroys a forest or chemicals foul a stream, you'll know where to report it. The Center for Short-Lived Phenomena wants to know.

REGGIE JACKSON: HE BACKS UP HIS BOASTS WITH HIS BAT

"We learned that he's a sensitive guy who wants terribly much to be liked and admired. His compulsive talk is a kind of insecurity." —
"Catfish" Hunter

By Barry
Abramson

Mitchell B. Reibel / F.O.S.

"I am the best in baseball. This may sound conceited, but I want to be honest about how I feel."

That's Reggie Jackson talking about Reggie Jackson. He is a big man with a big bat, a big paycheck and a big ego. He has described himself as a player who always will be No. 1 on any team he plays for, who creates excitement and who operates with the precision of a surgeon when he cuts up the opposition.

Yankee owner George Steinbrenner seems to agree with Reggie's assessment of himself: "His performance against the Dodgers in the final game of last year's Series [three home runs] was one of the greatest feats in baseball history. He showed us he was worth every penny of our investment." That investment was considerable. Jackson got a $3 million, five-year contract after becoming a free agent at the end of the 1976 season.

He has been called "the black Babe Ruth," and a number of similarities exist between him and baseball's best-known hero. Ruth was a rugged physical specimen and Jackson, a 200-pound six-footer, is, too. Babe also had a large ego, displayed a flashy style, won huge salaries after contract fights and spent lavishly. His social life was as busy as Jackson's until marriage tamed him. The Babe became the first player to hit three home runs in a Series game. His homers were the fifth, sixth and seventh of his Series career, he went three for three at the plate and scored four runs. Jackson's homers in the 1977 Series were the fifth, sixth and seventh of his Series career, and he also went three for three and scored four runs. Moreover, both were 31 when they performed these heroics.

Realizing there is a candy bar called Baby Ruth, Jackson once remarked that if he ever got to play for New York, a candy bar would be named after him. His prediction has come true, for a candy company is bringing out a chocolate-and-nut bar named Reggie, Reggie, Reggie.

During his nine years with the Athletics, who signed him after his sophomore year at Arizona State, some players resented the way he proclaimed himself to be No. 1, constantly referred to his high IQ and gave chapter and verse on his profitable investments, but in time the Oakland players overcame their resentment. "We realized a lot of things Reggie said he didn't really mean," says Jim "Catfish" Hunter, who was Jackson's teammate on the A's and also went the free-agent route to the Yankees. "We learned that he's a sensitive guy who wants terribly much to be liked and admired. His compulsive talk is a kind of insecurity."

Yankee catcher Thurman Munson and manager Billy Martin were not tuned in to Jackson's complex personality, and when he made remarks early in the '77 season that seemed to put them down, they showed their resentment. The year ended on a happy note, however, as Jackson rediscovered his skills and desire. He now talks of his first Yankee season as "the most difficult of my life. I wouldn't wish it on anybody, but it strengthened my character and humbled my personality. It was good to go through such an ordeal."

Those close to Jackson say the strength of his character has been demonstrated by his generosity. He finances a home for delinquent boys in Arizona and supports Chicano and Indian community organizations. He quietly picks up the medical and dental bills for friends who he knows are having the financial shorts and is planning a retirement home in the Southwest for players from the old Negro leagues who have hit hard times. He's even arranged for some of the royalties from the Reggie candy bar to go to organizations like the Muscular Dystrophy Association.

A devout Methodist who organizes informal Sunday chapels while on the road, Jackson says, "Religion to me is doing things for friends and neighbors. If you've got something, you should spread it around."

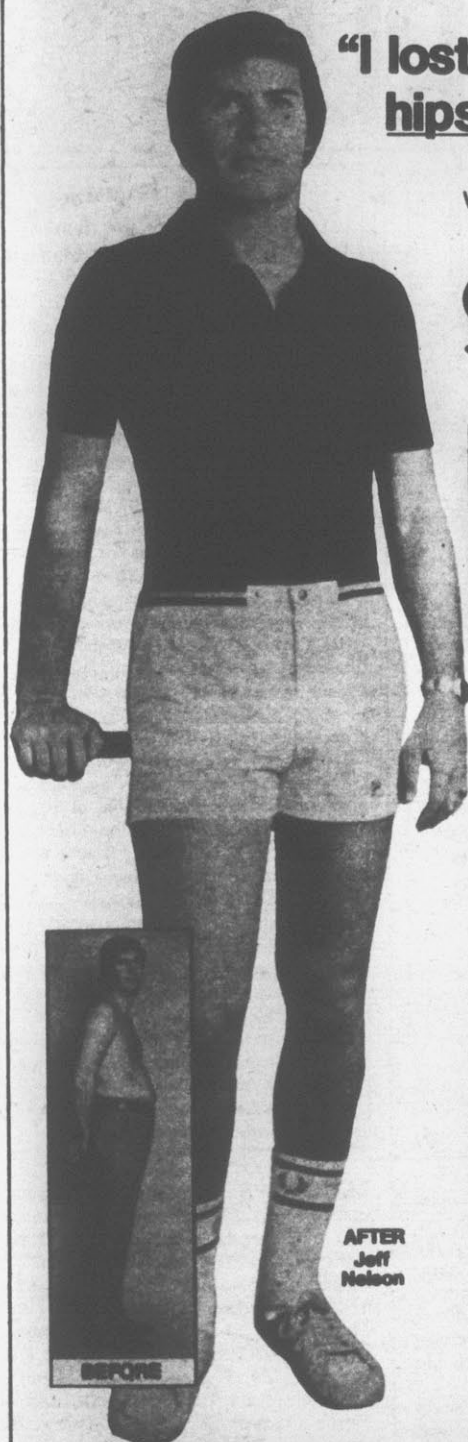

"I lost over 12 inches from my waist, tummy, hips and thighs in just 25 minutes" says Allegra Ward

WITH THE ALL NEW, MOST PHENOMENAL SLENDERIZER EVER CONCEIVED:

Jeff
Nelson

...THIS MAN LOST OVER 16 EXCESS INCHES WITH SLIM-SKINS!

Jeff Nelson: "Looking good—feeling good—with the world's fastest inch trimmer. In just three 20-minute sessions with the remarkable Slim-Skins—and with no dieting—I lost over 16" from my waist, abdomen, hips and thighs and improved my overall appearance beyond belief. For anyone with inches to lose, here is the ultimate answer."

Developed in Europe—an absolute sensation—the Slim-Skins have burst upon the slenderizing world like a time bomb; they can take off more inches, more easily in minutes—than other reducers can take off in weeks or months! In one day, two days, three days, women and men alike are achieving inch losses that have simply never happened before—results like these:

Sandra Morton: "The very first time I used the Slim-Skins I lost over 13 inches—and in just 3 days I lost every excess inch I owned. Those stubborn inches from my waist, tummy, hips and thighs simply vanished—and have never come back. For me this is the world's most totally effective reducer!"

Suzie Richards: "It took me months to accumulate all the inches I had, but the Slim-Skins got rid of most of them in just one day and all of them in just 3 days. I still can't believe it. I lost over 3" from my hips, over 3" from my waist, over 3" from my tummy, and over 2 1/2" from each thigh. I didn't have to diet and my figure has never looked better."

THE INCREDIBLE NEW SLIM-SKINS—GUARANTEED TO BE THE WORLD'S MOST EXCITING, MOST EFFECTIVE SLENDERIZER.

Using this newly developed method of slenderizing the Slim-Skins combine with your own vacuum cleaner to create a super new inch reducer that is infinitely faster and more effective than any reducing method known! Just step into the Slim-Skins, which cover the body from ribcage to knees, snap the attached hose to your vacuum with the universal adapter—which fits any make vacuum cleaner—and turn on your machine. Instantly you will experience a sensation so remarkable that it must be believed. The second you turn on your vacuum the Slim-Skins, which are made of a special, non-porous, sheer clinging material, seem to come alive—to cling and mold themselves to your body like a second skin—to exert a vigorous, subtle totally delightful reducing action on every single inch of your body from beltline to knees, to produce inch losses with a speed and ease never before possible! Not every user may experience the same degree of inch loss as Allegra and Jeff but you must lose a total of 9 to 15 inches from your waist, abdomen, hips and thighs in just 3 days or your money back.

The incredible "Money Back Guaranteed" Slim-Skins and complete "Permanent Inch Reduction" program—Thousands sold at $14.95... Now Only $9.95!

Nursery In A Nursing Home

Residents of Heritage Home in Winthrop, Maine, have no shortage of young visitors — the nursing home runs its own daily nursery school. Richard Merrill, admin. of the home, says that since the program was started 2 years ago to solve the problem of "how to get children in here," it's become a hit with both the residents and the children.

The 30 youngsters who attend the nursery school participate in many activities with their older friends, including baking cookies and cakes and doing exercises. "Kids don't know how to do some of the things but are enthusiastic," says Merrill, "and the older people get enthusiastic about teaching them."

He believes that one of the chief benefits of the program for the residents is that "they're no longer turning in on themselves. They're not just sitting here working on their own problems; they're thinking about what to do with the kids."

NAIAD

Myths About Working Moms

Do working mothers shorthandle their families? No, says human-relations specialist Dorothea Cudaback — but misconceptions about the effects of working can cause problems.

Cudaback, who is affiliated with the Univ. of California's Cooperative Extension, recently spent 6 months reviewing more than 200 studies on the impact of maternal employment with graduate student Janine Sagert. Cudaback says the reports they reviewed revealed that several popular beliefs about the effect of a mother's working on the family are not substantiated. Among these are the notions that many homes will be broken up because of hardships caused by the mother's working, children of working mothers suffer social and educational setbacks, and mothers who work will lose the love of their children.

Cudaback adds, however, that working mothers do have problems caused by the misconceptions themselves: "These misconceptions make mothers feel guilty and torn about their work, and their guilt may come across to their children." Cudaback maintains that to prevent this anxiety it's important for women to have their families' support for their work: "Women who feel fairly satisfied with their job and position in life, whether they work outside the home or not, are likely to be the most successful parents."

Traveling With Pets

Traveling with your pet can be fun — if you've planned ahead. You'll have to consider such questions as which motels permit animals and which sight-seeing attractions might have to be passed up because pets are not allowed, says the U.S. Travel Service, an agency of the U.S. Dept. of Commerce.

According to the USTS, trip-planning should begin with the pet itself — is the pet emotionally suited to travel? Some dogs and cats travel well while others become nervous or motion sick or refuse to eat. To find out whether your pet should travel, try a series of short excursions by car and get the pet used to being inside a portable kennel or on a leash.

Try to arrange travel during the cooler morning or evening hours. Plan on frequent rest stops to allow pets out of the car. Give them water while traveling, especially during hot weather, and don't leave them alone in closed cars on hot days (even with the windows open a bit). Pets run the risk of heat stroke, which can lead to permanent injury or death.

If the trip is a major one, a pretrip exam by a veterinarian is advisable. The vet also can tell you whether your pet will need a health certificate or any vaccinations.

Cats should be kept in carriers with good ventilation and visibility on long car trips; a nervous cat could lead to an auto accident. For either cats or dogs, molded plastic containers are recommended. Pets may chew up fiberboard carriers.

If you'd like a directory of motels and hotels across the country that welcome guests with pets, send a check or money order for $1 to Gaines TWT, PO Box 1007-Dept. FW, Kankakee, Ill. 60901.

Quick Takes

Doctors' incomes are rising at a faster rate than the incomes of any other occupational group and are, on the average, "unjustifiably high by established economic standards," says the President's Council on Wage and Price Stability. The Council reports physicians' fees rose 9.3% last year, 50% more than other consumer prices. In 1976 the median income of doctors was $63,000, a level the report termed "substantially above what is required to elicit an adequate supply of physicians."

More management-level employees change jobs for advancement opportunities than for high salaries reports Nat'l. Personnel Associates, a nationwide network of personnel firms. Apart from salary, other reasons for dissatisfaction are insufficient responsibility or freedom, being behind a slow-moving superior and a personality clash with a supervisor.

Joggers and automobile drivers are having an increasing number of run-ins. As the number of joggers increases, so does the amount of opposition by drivers who say they're being run off the roads. "Mixing joggers and cars is dangerous business," says a spokesman for the Am. Automobile Ass'n. Some of the many confrontations between runners and drivers are ending up in court. One Colorado Springs, Colo., runner was arrested for running on the wrong side of the street, and authorities in Ithaca, N.Y., charged the driver of a pickup truck with reckless endangerment after he repeatedly buzzed runners in a local marathon.

HI, JUS... ANY LUCK LANDIN' A JOB?
 NAW, AND I'M SURE SORRY, TOO!
 CIRCUS EMPLOYMENT OFFICE
 HOW COME?
 THEY SAID, "SORRY, WE'VE GOT ALL THE CLOWNS WE NEED..."
 "AND YOU CAN TAKE OFF THE FUNNY NOSE NOW!"
 QUIET DOWN! WHAT'S ALL THE EXCITEMENT?
 THE CIRCUS IS IN TOWN, MISTER WEATHERBEE?
 BIG DEAL? THIS WHOLE SCHOOL IS A CIRCUS?
 BUT THE CIRCUS IS FUN! CLOWNS... ELEPHANTS... CANDY...
 ACT YOUR AGE! YOU'RE HIGH SCHOOL STUDENTS!!
 WOW! HE SURE IS CRUMPY!
 LATER... GREAT SEATS? OH, HERE COME THE CLOWNS!
 LISTEN TO THAT LAUGHTER! HE'S SURE ENJOYIN' HIMSELF!
 HA! HA! HA!
 HA-HA-HA! ER... CH-H!
 HI, MISTER WEATHERBEE... HAVIN' FUN?

FLASH GORDON

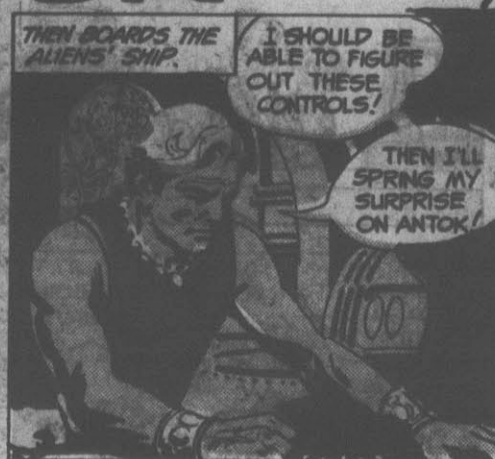

by DAN BARRY

BY AN UNDERGROUND WATERWAY, FLASH ESCAPES THE DEATH PIT, BUT HIS COMPANIONS ARE STILL IN ALIEN HANDS!

ANTOK HAS POSTED A LONE GUARD OUTSIDE THE TEMPLE... FLASH DISPARAGES HIM QUIETLY.

THEN BOARDS THE ALIENS' SHIP.

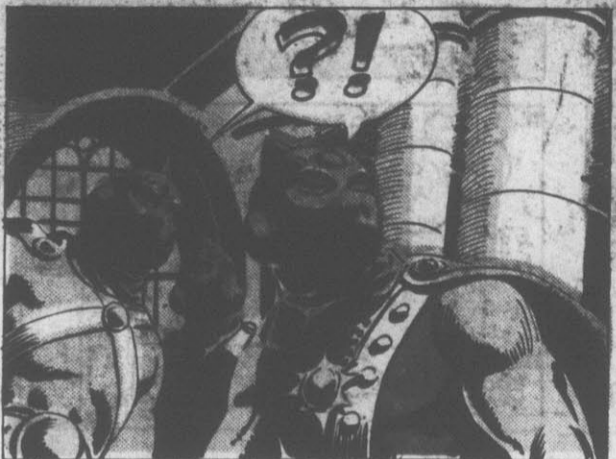

I SHOULD BE ABLE TO FIGURE OUT THESE CONTROLS!

THEN I'LL SPRING MY SURPRISE ON ANTOK!

MOMENTS LATER, THE SHIP'S ENGINES ROAR! AND AS IT LIFTS OFF...

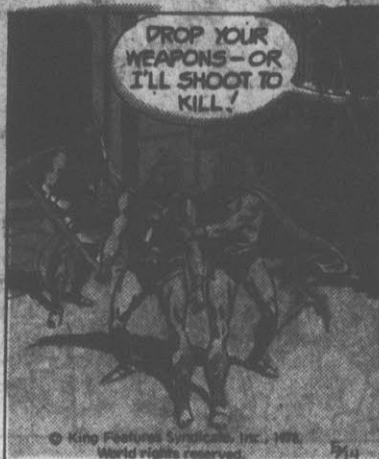

IT'S TIME FOR ME TO LEAVE!

OUR SHIP IS TAKING OFF! HOW?

DROP YOUR WEAPONS—OR I'LL SHOOT TO KILL!

IT'S HIM!

BUT HE DIED IN THE PIT!

AN ACT OF THE GODS! HE RETURNS FOR VENGEANCE!
