Warplane Sale Approved Confirm School But Debate Linger On Budget Action

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate approval of President Carter's three-way Mideast arms sales isn't ending debate about the sincerity of the U.S. commitment to Israel, a relationship that began with the birth of the Jewish state 30 years ago.

Opponents of the $5 billion warplane deal for Egypt, Saudi Arabia and Israel questioned the strength of the commitment, and one senator said it has been severed.

But those arguments failed to overcome intense administration lobbying that led to Monday's 54-44 vote allowing the sales to go through. The senators actually voted to reject a resolution disapproving the deal.

Several senators said they voted against stopping the sales only with great reluctance, but they believed that rejection would harm the Middle East peace process by offending Saudi Arabia and Egypt.

Carter said after the vote that the administration has new confidence in its ability to persuade Egypt and Saudi Arabia to display moderation.

But opponents of the deal saw a grave danger to Israel.

"What we have done is to sever a commitment that had lasted 30 years that the Israelis were going to get what was necessary for their survival," said Sen. Jacob Javits, R-N.Y. "Now there's a condition."

Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, added, "A message goes out to Israel that what heretofore has been an unconditional commitment to Israeli security has given way to a new American policy, namely that we shall supply warplanes of the most advanced character to both sides."

A spokesman for the Israeli embassy said Israel views with great concern the linkage of weapons it has requested with arms requests to nations "maintaining a state of war with Israel."

The Carter sales proposal earmarks 60 sophisticated F-15s for Saudi Arabia, 15 F-15s and 75 F-16s for Israel and 50 less advanced F-5E jets for Egypt.

Sen. Abraham Ribicoff, D-Conn., a staunch supporter of Israel, said he was convinced the administration had made its case and that all three sales are justified. "Saudi Arabia can help bring peace to the Middle East," Ribicoff said. "Cooperating with such a new friend of course brings risks. We must accept them. We do so in our national interest." Opponents and supporters of the Carter plan crossed all party and ideological lines. In all, 33 Democrats and 11 Republicans voted for the (Continued on page 6)

Second Indictment Against An Attorney In Big Heroin Case

GOLDSBORO, N.C. (AP) — A second indictment lodged against former Raleigh attorney John D. McConnell Monday expanded the time covered by the first indictment on charges of conspiring to sell and distribute heroin.

McConnell, who was re-indicted by the Wayne County Grand Jury Monday, has entered an innocent plea to the second charge of participating in a conspiracy to sell and distribute heroin with Leslie "Ike" Atkinson of Goldsboro, members of the Atkinson family and others.

A spokesman for the Wayne County District Attorney's Office said the only difference between the two indictments was the time involved. The first indictment covered a period between May 26, 1976 and March of this year, while the second document expanded coverage of time back to Nov. 1, 1973.

Neither indictment offered details of the charges against McConnell.

In late 1973, McConnell, 37, was an attorney for Atkinson, who was convicted of heading a multimillion-dollar heroin importation ring. McConnell later represented him on other criminal charges in federal courts.

McConnell's bond, set at $35,000 on the first charge, was continued without increase, the district attorney's office said. No date was set for the entry of a plea to the second indictment.

The indictment charged that McConnell engaged in a conspiracy with Atkinson and 14 other persons, most of them relatives of Atkinson, to sell and distribute heroin.

McConnell was released April 15 from federal prison where he served four months of a year and a day sentence for giving perjured testimony during a 1975 New York drug trial.

He pleaded guilty there to four charges of lying about depositing money in secret foreign accounts for Atkinson and North Carolina native Frank Lucas, who is serving a 70-year prison sentence in New Jersey for heroin dealings.

While an attorney, McConnell represented Lucas in land transactions in North Carolina. He told a grand jury in Raleigh in 1976 he deposited between $400,000 and $600,000 in Caribbean banks for Lucas and Atkinson.

Pat Nixon In Hospital Care

LONG BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Former first lady Pat Nixon has been admitted to Long Beach Memorial Hospital for treatment of a lung infection, a hospital spokeswoman said.

Susan Pescar said Monday that Mrs. Nixon's condition was good and that she was "resting comfortably." Her physician, Dr. John Lundgren, said Mrs. Nixon, 66, probably will stay in the hospital until the end of the week.

Although no members of her family were present when Mrs. Nixon arrived at 2:20 p.m., her husband, former President Richard Nixon, visited her in the evening.

The hospital is the same one in which Nixon underwent surgery for phlebitis. Mrs. Nixon was admitted to the facility in July 1976 after suffering a stroke that temporarily paralyzed parts of her left arm and leg. She has made few public appearances since then.

The couple has lived in San Clemente since 1974, when Nixon resigned the presidency.

May Appeal An NLRB Order

WASHINGTON (AP) — J.P. Stevens & Co. may appeal a National Labor Relations Board order that it rehire two men fired from a subsidiary two years ago.

An NLRB administrative judge, in a decision released Monday, said the two were fired illegally for their union activity and for calling a federal safety inspector to their plant. The judge said the firings coincided with efforts by the United Rubber Workers to organize the plant. "It is clear from the evidence" that Stevens discharged the two workers "for their part in union activities and initiating the inspection," said the judge, John M. Dyer. Decisions by two other judges are pending before the full NLRB.

Roll Call

WASHINGTON (AP) — Here is how senators from the southeast voted Monday in the 54 to 44 roll call by which the Senate voted to reject a resolution blocking the proposed sale of jet fighters to Israel, Egypt and Saudi Arabia. Members of the Greenville City Schools Board of Education Monday night took action to reconfirm previous budget decisions by adopting in final form the proposed uniform budget school budget for fiscal year 1978-79.

The proposed budget, totaling $8,525,825, with an appended long-range capital outlay supplement of $4,125,000 now goes to the County Commissioners, who will consider it along with other budget proposals for the county.

The budget proposal is essentially the same as the detailed proposal reported in this paper Friday, May 12, following the special meeting of the board on Thursday, May 11.

Basic categories of funds contained in the 1978-79 budget request are: Local current expense funds, $2,816,859.70 — state public school fund, $3,850,253.06; federal grant funds, $719,946.33; school food service fund, $725,180.14; and capital outlay funds $4,538,586.50 ($413,586.50 current needs and $4,125,000 long-range needs) — for a grand total of $12,650,825.78, of which $8,525,825 is applicable to fiscal year 1978-79.

In a general wrap-up of budget preparation and application of various fund sources, Superintendent Glenn Cox noted "the city school budget is set up in five categories of funds. Of this group, you as a board don't have a lot of control over state funds, federal funds, and school food service funds. These three are basically self-contained, self-supporting, even though we must provide maintenance services, utilities and other expenses related to programs provided for in the funds.

"This leaves us two areas that we are primarily concerned with, the local current expense and capital outlay funds for which we have some element of control.

"These funds," Cox added, "are the heart of the budget. The minimum state support program provides basic needs for minimum education. The local funds are the ones that make our program really go, the money that makes it possible to provide services and personnel to give our children the kind of education we want them to have and the kind they need."

Reorganization
The board also approved a reorganizational structure of the Central Office Staff. The new structure will provide two new positions, a Director of Instruction who will be the overall coordinator of four divisions — the Coordinator of Elementary Instruction; the Coordinator of Secondary Instruction; the Coordinator of Exceptional Child Programs; and the Coordinator of Compensatory Programs.

Evacuation Considered

By The Associated Press

The State Department is considering the evacuation of an estimated 80 to 100 Americans from southern Zaire where insurgents are attempting for the second time in 14 months to take over copper-rich Shaba Province.

Department spokesman Hoddling Carter said there was little first-hand information about the fighting which began late last week. But sources in Belgium said the invasion army of about 4,000 exiled Lunda tribesmen had captured Kolwezi, a copper-mining center 25 miles north of the Zambian border, and Mutshatsha, 60 miles west of Kolwezi, and was advancing on Kamina, site of an army base 150 miles north of Kolwezi.

Diplomats in Zambia confirmed that the rebels had taken Kolwezi and Mutshatsha. But the Zairean Embassy in Brussels said there was see-saw fighting in Mutshatsha over the weekend, and the Zairean army had retaken the town.

There were also conflicting reports about the Kolwezi airport. Belgian sources indicated the rebels had taken the field, but the diplomats in Zambia said heavy fighting continued at the airport Monday afternoon.

There are an estimated 2,800 Belgians and 400 French citizens in the area in addition to the Americans, Carter said. He said there were no confirmed reports that any Americans had been injured in the fighting.

Carter would not say how the U.S. government might go about evacuating the Americans, but he said it would try to coordinate any efforts with Belgium and France.

Most of the Americans in the Kolwezi area are with the Morrison-Knudsen construction company of Boise, Idaho, which is building an electric power project. The company said Monday its workers and their families were unharmed. Other Americans in the area work in remote religious missions, and there was no word on them.

Like the force that invaded Shaba in March 1977, many of the insurgents were reported to be ex-policemen who fled to Angola in the early 1960s when Zaire was the newly-independent Congo. Shaba was called Katanga, and the late Moise Tshombe, the pro-Belgian provincial premier of Katanga, tried to secede. U.N. troops finally defeated his forces.

Last year the Katangans came across Shaba's western border with Angola, 300 miles west of Kolwezi, and were stopped short of the copper mines by the intervention of 1,500 Moroccan troops who bolstered the Zaire army. This year the invaders came across northern Zambia and entered Shaba only 25 miles from Kolwezi.

Zaire's President Mobutu Sese Seko, who has been in power since 1965, has appealed again for help to Morocco, the United States, Belgium, France and China, but so far there has been no response. Last year, in addition to the Moroccan troops, France and Belgium gave him air support and the United States sent communications and transport equipment.

For Parents

A calendar of sessions to acquaint parents of students in Greenville City Schools in interpreting results of the state wide annual testing reports has been announced by Charles Ross, Director of Elementary Education for the Greenville City Schools.

"These sessions are to help parents understand the reports they will be getting on their children," Ross said. "The actual results will not be reported to parents during these sessions, as the reports are not yet in, but are due to be coming in about the first of June and soon thereafter."

During the past year, students in the first, second, third, sixth grades in elementary schools, and ninth grade students in the secondary school level were tested on a statewide basis.

The test given to this year's first graders is not an achievement test, but one designed in helping to determine where to place children. Tests given to students in grades three, six and nine are achievement tests, and will carry general measures of performance levels in the areas of reading, mathematics, and language.

In setting up the schedule, Ross emphasized that if it is not convenient for a parent to attend at the time and place applicable to their child, they are most welcome to attend at another school for a session devoted to the same grade.

The sessions begin tonight and continue through May 25. The reason grade two is included, Ross said, is so that parents of next year's second graders will have an idea of the way in which a determination will be made in placing their child in that grade.

The calendar of sessions are:
— Eastern, Grades 1 and 2, Tuesday, May 23, 8 p.m.
— Eastern, Grades 3 and 6, Wednesday, May 24, 8 p.m.
— Elmhurst, Grades 1 and 2, Tuesday, May 23, 7:30 p.m.

Taking Spaces Reserved For The Handicapped

Some 86 percent of the people using handicapped parking spaces are not handicapped.

This conclusion was reached by Easter Seal volunteers Saturday who observed parking spaces designated for the handicapped at various locations in Greenville.

The project, co-sponsored by the Easter Seal Society and the Department of Transportation of North Carolina, is part of National Handicapped Awareness Week, a public education project of the Easter Seal Society which seeks to promote public awareness of the architectural and attitudinal barriers confronting handicapped citizens.

Beth Wholeas, Cindy Sandeford, Debbie Narron and Kim Fisher, E. B. Aycock Junior High School students, observed spaces designated for the handicapped at the Post Offices on Second and Tenth Streets, K-Mart and Kroger Plaza. The spaces were observed from 11:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. During that time many persons who did not appear to be handicapped used the spaces. The students placed reminders on the windshields of the vehicles which explain Senate Bill 235. This state law, effective Jan. 1, 1978, made it a misdemeanor (punishable by a $10 fine) to park in a handicapped parking space without special license plates or placards that are available from the Dept. of Transportation. Only one person using one of the spaces Saturday had a special placard.

For more information on how to obtain a handicapped placard (for passengers) or license plate (for drivers), one may call the Easter Seal Society or visit the office at 114 E. Third Street.

ROME (AP) — Christian Democratic gains and Communist losses in a backlash vote protesting the murder of Aldo

Moro by the ultra-leftist Red Brigades appear certain to slow the Communist drive to get into the Italian government.
Official returns from municipal elections Sunday and Monday in which about seven percent of Italy's voters voted gave, the Christian Democrats 42.5 percent of the vote and the Communists 26.5 percent, a difference of 16 percentage points.

In the 1976 national elections in the same areas, the Christian Democrats got 38.9 percent and the Communists got 35.6 percent, a span of only 3.3 points.

The Communist percentage was slightly bigger than the 25.8 percent they got in the 1972 municipal elections in those areas. But the Christian Democrats' increase was considerable, from 37.5 percent to 42.5.

"The returns show the maturity of the Italian voters who used the ballot against the gun," said Clelio Darida, the Christian Democratic under-secretary of the Interior Ministry.

However, he made clear that his party does not want the election results to affect its alliance with the Communists which gives Premier Giulio Andreotti's minority government its parliamentary majority.

"I believe the need for national harmony and the reasons that make stability necessary also to fight terrorism is no less stronger, even if debate between the parties may heat up," said Darida.

The Communist Party, which parlayed its 1976 showing into the parliamentary alliance with the Christian Democrats and three other parties in March, admitted: "The terrorist aggression under red insignia has brought about a situation of confusion, provocation and alarm."

It deplored the "illegitimate" use of the Communist label by the Red Brigades who kidnapped Moro, the five-time premier and president of the Christian Democratic Party, on March 16 and left his chained, bullet-riddled body in the center of Rome May 9.

In the seven weeks that Moro was missing, the Communists were unwavering in their condemnation of the Red Brigade and their support of the Christian Democrats' refusal to negotiate on the basis of the kidnapers' demand for the release of 13 imprisoned terrorists. The Red Brigades were just as emphatic in their condemnation of the Communist Party for its alliance with the government.

The Socialists and the other two moderate leftist parties in the government alliance, the Democratic Socialists and the Republicans, also gained over their 1976 showing, with a total of 21.3 percent compared to 15.1. The fascists of the Italian Social Movement dropped from 7.1 percent to 4.5.

The rest of the 2.5 million votes in towns of more than 5,000 people were spread among a dozen smaller groups. The trend was the same in smaller towns in which about 900,000 voted.

Millions Lost By N.C. Farmers Due Aflatoxin

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina farmers suffered losses amounting to about $32 million due to the effects of aflatoxin on the state's corn crop last year, according to a North Carolina State University scientist.

And dealing with the aflatoxins is difficult because it is impossible to predict where the disease will spring up next, Dr. J.L. Apple said.

Apple, chairman of the N. C. Agricultural Experiment Station, told the state Board of Agriculture Monday that aflatoxin levels began to climb in the state's corn last August and September.

Aflatoxins are chemicals produced by a fungus, which is likely to invade corn when moisture levels and temperatures are high, he said.

State Agriculture Department figures show that 48 farms out of the state's about 1,500 farms were sampled when the levels began rising. Farms with corn showing high levels of aflatoxin were taken out of production for three days until livestock could begin receiving clean feed.

Sampling also showed aflatoxin in some of the state's milk but agriculture officials denied the reports, saying no aflatoxin was found in the state's milk.

Apple said studies conducted so far point to several factors which seem to promote aflatoxin growth.

Surveys indicated a direct relationship between a low yield and a high level of aflatoxin. Apple said the better the corn crop, the less chance of finding any detectable levels of aflatoxin.

Surveys also showed the lowest incidence of aflatoxin in the northeast part of the state, Apple said. Survey teams noticed a higher occurrence of aflatoxin in the southeast and Piedmont sections of the state.

"Research teams noticed that the canopy of weeds, or weed covering, in the corn fields seemed to have a direct relationship with the amount of aflatoxin," Apple said. "Last year's drought hit hard in the eastern part of the state, and many farmers didn't use herbicides in the fields. Therefore, the weed covering was heavier last year than average."

He said the weeds created a "moist chamber" around the ears of corn, promoting aflatoxin growth.

Apple said there are only two methods known methods for decontaminating corn infected with aflatoxin: roasting and ammonia treatment. He said roasting was not recommended and the ammonia injections did not have Federal Drug Administration approval.

The length of time corn is in the field, especially during very damp or very hot periods, has an effect on the aflatoxin levels, Apple said.

Plans for dealing with the state's aflatoxin problems this year include setting up a more sophisticated survey system and studying the possible development of a variety of corn resistant to aflatoxin.

Griffin Bell Making It Clear He Is The Boss

ATLANTA (AP) — Attorney General Griffin Bell says unhappy FBI regional directors who claim he is "trying to run the bureau" are absolutely right.

"That's what I was trying to do. I was hoping people knew that," Bell said in an interview with The Atlanta Journal. "The fact is, the FBI is under me. That's why I've got an office over there. I am in charge of the FBI and I don't think certain people like it."

"The morale is low right now, and I think it will be until we can get these disciplinary proceedings out of the way."

"I haven't politicized it (the FBI), except in the sense that I'm a political appointee," he said. "I guess anybody that's a political appointee, you can say he politicized it."

"I don't even let the FBI communicate (directly) with the White House — that was not the story when I arrived in Washington. They have to go through me, and the president has to go through me."

Bell said morale problems vary according to which regional office he visits.

"The day I was in Indianapolis and had that confrontation (with agents protesting indictments of some FBI figures) was really a bad scene," he said. "I couldn't get anybody to look at me. Not even the secretaries would look at me. I went to New Orleans the very next week and I was among friends. So I think it varies from office to office."

"I think the morale is low in some places, high in others, depending on what the line is there in that office," he said. "I'm not sure who puts the line out, but I know there is a very great variance in attitude."

NAACP Plans Youth Branch

The Pitt County Branch of the NAACP will be sponsoring a Youth Branch, according to a report given at a meeting of the group Sunday night at Zion Chapel F.W.B. Church, Ayden.

Youth Work Chairman Mrs. Allie Washington said the Youth Branch will meet for the first time at Mount Shiloh Missionary Baptist Church in Winterville Saturday, June 3, at 1 p.m. "It is believed that this county-wide youth council will help address the unrest that seems to exist among our high school-aged youth," Pitt County Branch Pres. D. D. Garrett commented.

It was reported that the "Mother of the Year" contest of the group will be held at Selvia Chapel F.W.B. Church, Greenville, Sunday, June 4.

A report was given concerning several openings that will come up in the Pitt County Schools staff at the end of this school year.

Beautification Group Meeting

There will be a meeting of the Keep Pitt County Clean and Beautiful Committee Thursday at the Three Steers restaurant.

The meeting, a Dutch treat affair, will begin at 12 noon. Committees will be completed and discussions will be held on new projects.

Georgia Welfare Caseworkers Are Among Many 'Foot Soldiers'

EDITOR'S NOTE — Welfare. For some it's help along the way to a better life. For countless others, it's a way of life. Nationally, it costs $40 billion a year and employs some 300,000 workers. Here's how it works, or fails, through the eyes of caseworkers in one county.

By KAY BARTLETT
AP Newsfeatures Writer
DECATUR, Ga. (AP) — Jennifer Wright, 29, a slight brunette with deep brown eyes, carts an armful of manila folders this Tuesday morning, folders that hold the bureaucratic details of lives that depend on her.

She rides down from the fourth floor of One Calloway Square, a white, sterile building where people come to pick up their license plates, pay their taxes — and get on welfare.

Mrs. Wright, college-educated, married with an 18-month-old son, is an eligibility worker, one of the many foot soldiers who administer this vast system that most taxpayers complain about, that Congress always wants to reform, a system that costs $40 billion a year, a system that doesn't make Mrs. Wright's life easy.

She and the 300,000 like her are the front line of defense against abuse. They are the sympathetic ear, the explainer of forms and regulations, the person who knows what resources are available, the counselor and the paper shuffler.

Mrs. Wright is probably better than most. So is her department, the DeKalb County Department of Human Resources. In 27 states, only a high school degree is required for this complex work. Georgia demands a bachelor's degree, even if it is in music. In 11 states, home visits like Jennifer's are about to make are not required.

This rather affluent county, a bedroom community of Atlanta, is not burdened by the mammoth inner city problems of a New York, Philadelphia or Washington, D.C. It ministers to less than 500,000 people, some 15,000 to 20,000 of whom are on relief.

Jennifer's caseload is under 200. In some states, workers are overwhelmed with twice that. But the problems, the frustrations of this apparatus, are evident, even in the best of systems.

The DeKalb welfare department is run by Louise Purdum, the county director and a 62-year-old widow who's been in the system since 1949. She runs a tight ship for the head office and its four branches, with a staff of about 180 and a payroll of nearly $2 million.

The staff includes supervisors, caseworkers and clerical help in Aid to Families with Dependent Children, child welfare, food stamps and other programs — the AFDC contingent, with 46 caseworkers and seven eligibility supervisors, is the largest — and they decide how $14 million in federal, state, and county monies are spent each year.

Mrs. Wright loads everything into her 1974 gray Toyota and sets off for an average day of seven to eight home visits, something she does twice a week. The other three days she's bogged down in paper work, interviews, emergencies.

Her first stop is a housing project to see a new mother, 13 years old, who's asking for money under AFDC — the program that receives the brunt of the nation's criticism and is synonymous with welfare.

The address is wrong. There's no such street, she's told after wandering around in the red clay, littered with beer cans, pop bottles and toys. Mrs. Wright rechecks the small print from the myriad of forms. She finds the right address, spreads her road map over the hood of her car and recharts her course.

"I hate to waste time like this," she says in her soft Southern accent. "It's the most important thing we have."

She finds the place and meets her newest client. The girl, a seventh grader, is in her robe, hair uncombed, hunched over the dining room table. Her mother has been on welfare and food stamps before.

Mrs. Wright is gentle as she fills out the forms, forms that might make a Philadelphia lawyer cringe, forms that take a caseworker from six months to a year to master.

They are out of the ken of this child-mother, Mrs. Wright, following procedure, asks her among other things to take pen in hand and check off 17 items about real and personal property and 12 more about income. She waives six more about work-related expenses. That's one of a half-dozen forms the client signs this Tuesday (four or five more were completed at the hospital where the baby was born).

The girl signs that she has no prepaud burial contract, turpentine holdings, or railroad benefits. Each time she's supposed to read something for her signature, Mrs. Wright asks if she should read it to her. The answer always is yes.

The forms completed, Mrs. Wright asks to see the baby. "I just love to see new-born babies," she says. Nobody would know that Mrs. Wright is required to make sure the infant is living in this house.

The baby is perspiring under layers of blankets. Mrs. Wright takes off one blanket and suggests that maybe the baby is too warm.

The baby is cleared for AFDC — $66 a month (the national average is $108). The infant's mother isn't eligible, because of her own mother's income.

Duncan Cottrell is anything but gentle that day in talking to a woman in the foodstamp program. She says she doesn't know the landlord of her building. Cottrell says the telephone cross directory for Decatur lists her as the landlord's wife, that the landlord's brother confirms she is the wife, and that Cottrell has a deed showing the property is in her name.

"I don't understand that," he says with sarcasm.

"I don't either," the woman replies, face frozen. After she leaves his office, Cottrell dials the number she had given as her own and asks for the man in question. A teenager answers that he isn't home from work yet.

Cottrell, member of a three-man fraud unit, is delighted. "I hope you enjoyed that as much as I did," he tells a visitor. What will happen to the woman?

"It's petty," says Cottrell. "She probably won't apply for food stamps again. She's been on to the system a long time, and it's time she got a good scare."

At the office, caseworker Dixie Wade is doing intake this rainy, foggy morning and because of the weather, business is slow. Intake is the first step. A lot of questions have to be asked. In this case, of a pregnant teen-ager.

Name of the father? The 17-year-old gives it and says he's living in a common-law marriage and has a child. She also says he's boasted about fathering five children by five women.

"He says it isn't his baby," she mumbles.

"Are you sure it is?" asks Mrs. Wade.

"Yes."

"You didn't have relations with anyone else during that time?"

"No."

"I'm sorry I have to ask all these questions, but the feds require it. I'll have to try to locate this man. He's legally responsible for support. Can you get him to sign the birth certificate?"

"I don't think so."

The interview is conducted in a cubicle this day. When things are busier, the questioning is out in the open amidst a sprawl of pea green desks, ringing telephones, unruly children and perhaps an irate client threatening mayhem if money is cut off.

The young girl is no fount of information. She has no address for the father, no place of employment, knows his mother's whereabouts but not her name, nor the name of his common-law wife.

"You're not making this easy for me," Mrs. Wade says, but while bad memories are sometimes just convenient, she believes this girl really doesn't know. The father's name turns up in the cross files. At least one of the five women he claims children by is on AFDC.

Caseworker Linda Porter, on a busier day, works her way through eight applicants, which take about an hour each plus two hours of paperwork on each application later.

Mrs. Porter, a tall blonde with a Farrah Fawcett-Majors cut, tells one girl, "You've been pregnant for nine months. What plans have you made for the baby?"

"I planned to go on welfare."

"Some of these kids look on welfare as the end-all," says Chris Jones, a 30-year-old caseworker. "With $66 a month they can be pretty high rollers. They don't think of food and housing. They just think of that check."

On one home visit, he interviews a 17-year-old who lives in a $30,000 suburban split level. The girl is getting welfare for her baby although, Jones says, the teen-ager's parents could easily foot the bill.

The child's father is in college, the mother, a high-school senior, plans to go to college — but she'll be eligible for welfare so long as her parents pay the college bills directly and put no money into her hands.

Caseworkers find this a big frustration. "For those who really need it, the money isn't enough," says one. "But those who really don't need it get the same amount."

Rates under AFDC vary by state. The national average is $291.50 for a family of four. Georgia's basic grant is $141 a month. Chauncey Alexander, of the National Association of Social Workers, says the national fraud rate is less than 1 percent, but it's certainly there.

How To Start A Cooking School

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor
What do you do when you are 59 years old and your long-time marriage suddenly ends in divorce?

If you are Malvina Kinard you certainly don't head for a rocking chair. Instead you make a gratifying life for yourself in a corner of the business world.

Mrs. Kinard had brought up two daughters — with the meal-getting and party-giving that entailed. She had managed a fairly large Connecticut house and had done a good deal of entertaining in connection with her husband's activities and their club memberships. Behind all this were the high standards of hospitality she had grown up with in her family's Southern home.

A chance remark of a friend, "I would gladly pay you for lessons if you could teach me how to cook as well and as easily as you do," set Mrs. Kinard on her way. She signed up for cooking courses in New York City and kept an eye out for how they were run. Then, as luck would have it, she was sent to a garden-club conference in Honolulu and she arranged to travel farther. From Hawaii she went to Tokyo for Japanese cooking lessons, to Beirut for instruction in Middle Eastern cuisine and to Athens for Greek pastry-baking techniques.

"After this food safari," Mrs. Kinard says, "I spent several months perfecting my recipes and menus and planning my classes. I then sent out 100 letters to acquaintances (not friends) and received only eight affirmative replies. I was discouraged, for at that time I knew nothing about the low percentage of return you can expect from a mailing. But I took a long deep breath and opened my first class in my home. After that I never had to do any promotion. Word of mouth kept my home classes full."

Work on a cookbook, travel in Europe and study at culinary schools in France came along in due time. So did searching out worthwhile cooking equipment for her students. Eventually, that interest led Mrs. Kinard to open "Cook's Corner," her kitchen-equipment shop and cooking school in Westport, Conn.

A while ago I spent a day at "Cook's Corner" and tasted the cooking that went on. Each and every dish, including the Swedish Pears, whose recipe follows, was a delight. Malvina Kinard's enterprise and energy have certainly contributed to her success — but so has her fine taste in food.

- MALVINA KINARD'S SWEDISH PEARS
- 3 or 4 large firm Anjou pears
 - 5 tablespoons butter, melted
 - Sugar
 - ¼ cup water
 - 3 large eggs, separated
 - 2-3rds cup ground blanched almonds
 - Dash of nutmeg
 - 1 cup heavy cream, whipped
 - Pare, halve and core the pears. In a large heavy skillet over low heat stir together 2 tablespoons of the butter with 2 tablespoons sugar and the water until the sugar dissolves. Add the pears in a single layer; simmer, uncovered and basting, just until tender; do not overcook.

In the small bowl of an electric mixer, beat the egg whites until they hold soft peaks; gradually beat in 5 tablespoons sugar; continue to beat until whites hold stiff peaks.

Without washing the beater, in the large bowl of the mixer, beat the egg yolks with 5 table-

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

A woman once wrote to me and asked, "What do you think about toilet training?"

I answered her, "Frankly, I'm for it."

To me that portion of child-raising was one of the most frustrating I ever encountered. I did everything wrong. There wasn't a day went by that I didn't engage in a series of "dialogues" with my trainee. Some of my more colorful lectures included:

"The humiliation of being listed in the Guinness Book of Records under the longest recorded case of terminal diaper rash."

"The expense of Scotchgarding the entire house."

"The physical harm to be inflicted on them if they unrolled another roll of toilet tissue."

"The ramifications of drilling holes in every seat in the house, including their bicycle and the back seat of the car."

"The option of either becoming trained or learning how to tread water."

"The threat of permanent creases on their bottoms from sitting on the stool that only surgery would remove."

And on bad days, my trump threat of "rubbing their noses in it."

That is why I anxiously thumbed through a new book that reached my desk this week — "Toilet Learning: The Picture Book Technique for Children and Parents," by Alison Mack.

I skipped over the chapter, "The Benefits of the Toilet." I know that and pressed on to the Age of Understanding. The author contends there is a new technique which now stresses the child's point of view with the emphasis on learning — not training.

For example, they don't turn on every faucet in the house and show slides of Lake Erie over the bathtub anymore. They show you in 48 pages of pictures the advantages of plumbing (theirs and the ones in the house).

They don't threaten you with a rainbow that follows you around if you don't get to the bathroom on time. They try to impress on you how wonderful it feels being dry.

And another innovation is that toilet learning has become an equal opportunity employer. Dad is involved as much as mother.

I suppose there is still camaraderie between the trainer and the trainee, but nothing to equal the closeness of my son and me. Every time we hear "The Impossible Dream" he says, "They're playing our song."

Mrs. Starkey Is Patient Circle Speaker

Why Some Women Take The Bus

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1978 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: My husband is not what you'd call "handsome." He's middle-aged, a little on the flabby side, and he's losing his hair. But he's a bus driver, and Abby, I don't think you know how crazy some women are for bus drivers. It must be the uniform, because the women fall all over Bill as if he were a marine captain or something. Bill says that most of the women on his run are mental cases. They have tried to tip him, give him their phone numbers, and they fight for the seat right behind the driver so they can blow on his neck. One lady even PINCHED him.

Should I ask Bill to get into some other line of work? Or should I let him stay on that bus with all those crazy women?

THE DRIVER'S WIFE

DEAR WIFE: Men who meet the public (in uniform and out) will be tipped, tempted, and even pinched occasionally. Give him lots of love. And trust him. If a man is happy at home, he won't look left or right.

DEAR ABBY: The teacher called me for a conference because of an essay my daughter had written as part of a class assignment. It was titled "My Father," and it went like this:

"My father is the worst father in the whole world. I am ashamed of him. He left us when we were small and my mother had to work to feed us. I hate him like poison." Abby, my daughter was 4 years old when her father left us, but she seems to have built up a terrible hatred for him. In fact, she hates most men. My other children seem much better adjusted.

This teacher suggested I take my daughter to a psychiatrist. I don't believe too much in psychiatry. I saw one after my husband left me, and all I got out of it was the advice that I should "adjust" to the situation and make the best of it.

I don't want an emotionally disturbed child on my hands, but I can't afford to pay a psychiatrist just because a teacher says she thinks my child needs one. What should I do?

TROUBLES IN BALTIMORE

DEAR TROUBLES: Ask your family doctor (or the school counselor) for recommendations, after explaining the background. Far better to investigate psychiatric help for your daughter and be told she doesn't need it, than fail to seek it when she does.

DEAR ABBY: I love my wife, Paula, and she loves me. No problems whatsoever. However, after 32 years of married life, I still believe Paula has an attractive figure. She may be a little flabby in spots, and flat in others, but I'm no Tarzan-built fellow anymore.

Over the years I have bought Paula several beautiful nightgowns to wear in our privacy, but she has never worn any of them. Some have been in their original boxes for 20 years!

I don't think there's anything wrong with me, Abby, but I would like to see my little darling in a "turn on" nightie once in a while. Especially now, for it might pick up my interest a little when I need it most.

I wonder if other husbands have this problem? If so, perhaps if you were to advise me in your column, you could help us all.

PAULA'S MAN

DEAR MAN: I can't speak for husbands, but many wives have a "save-it-for-later" complex. Simply tell your little darling that it is later than she thinks!

Do you wish you had more friends? For the secret of popularity, get Abby's new booklet: "How To Be Popular; You're Never Too Young or Too Old." Send $1 with a long, self-addressed, stamped (24 cents) envelope to Abby, 152 Lucky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.

Awaiting Bureaucracy's Word

The University of North Carolina announced Friday that it has reached an agreement with the U. S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare concerning the university's plan to eliminate vestiges of segregation within the system.

The agreement wasn't unanimous, and its opponents included William A. Johnson, chairman of the board of governors.

University President William A. Friday said the plan means, "We have maintained the basic guiding principles we have supported all along. There has been no erosion in control of the Board of Governors or its authority over the governance of the university."

What the long range effects of the agreed upon plan will be on the university system remains to be seen. There are two important immediate effects for the university system, however.

First the HEW action to cut off funds to the university system will be ended. Since millions were involved here, and the cut off might have been the basis for a North Carolina legal action, the effect of removing this shadow from the system should be very positive.

The second immediate benefit from the settlement is HEW Sec. Joseph Califano's agreement to defend the plan before the U. S. courts. Since HEW is under federal court order concerning the North Carolina university situation, this is an important concession indeed.

The main problem now is what will happen to the plan once it settles back down into the bureaucracy of HEW. So far, HEW's record of dealing with North Carolina on this matter has been wretched, with what was to be required seemingly changing from day-to-day. If the plan is to go back to the same people in HEW we could see harsh new guidelines not envisioned in this agreement.

If that occurs again we can only rely on an appeal to Sec. Califano, and his sense of duty to abide by his agreement.

Big Brother In Action

WASHINGTON — With its proposal to ban certain children's advertising on TV, the Federal Trade Commission has charged off on a new crusade. The venture raises an old question: In terms of the role of government in a free society, how in the world did we get this way?

The FTC's notice, dated April 27, calls for hearings in November and December on a series of proposals having to do with banning or restricting TV commercials aimed at children up to the age of 11 or 12. Generally speaking, these are commercials for sugared products. The theory is that these products cause tooth decay; tooth decay is bad; therefore the advertising should be prohibited or strictly regulated.

The commission's staff takes what might be termed a dim view of the suspect commercials. Such advertising, it is said, is deceptive, disturbing, false, harmful, immoral, injurious, misleading, offensive, oppressive, unconscionable, unethical, unfair and unscrupulous. It aims at the child who is defenseless, gullible, naive and trusting. On the average, says the staff, a child 2 to 11 years old watches 3 hours and 40 minutes of television every day; the child is bombarded by 20,000 commercials a year.

Thus mesmerized, children become fat little monsters. Denied their morning Gooney-Wooney bar, they throw temper tantrums. They hold their breath, pop their eyes and turn purple; they scream bloody murder. They nag their mamas to the edge of insanity. Parents are too shiftless, spineless or dumb to resist. The children gorge themselves on sugar; their teeth fall out. Obesity, apoplexy, bankruptcy, heart disease and premature death follow in the order named.

Other Editors Say Warm Hands Way

(Gastonia Gazette)

There is a doctor over in Durham who says that if you have warm hands then you are less likely to have stress.

Therefore, all you have to do is keep your hands warm. And you can do that psychologically, he says.

Think warm. Think warm hands. Say to yourself, "My hands are in something warm ... my hands are in something warm". Now, see how warm your hands are?

Dr. Patrick Boudewyns, chief of psychology at the Veterans Hospital in Durham, says that this is a no-drugs therapy that takes only seconds of your time. It can get you through the day without stress, anxiety or headaches.

"Finger temperature is a pretty accurate measurement of the emotional state of your mind", the doctor said. He has found that in situations of stress blood flow to the fingers is reduced and they become cold.

But when you are relaxed, he said, they become warm. And if you can raise the temperature of your fingers, you can promote a feeling of relaxation, he added.

So, you tell yourself about your hands getting warmer, getting warmer. And, for best results, you should do this every morning, rather than waiting for a stress situation to arise.

If you do it on a regular basis, it definitely will help present anxiety symptoms. So said the doctor.

Don't expect overnight results, however, he warned. It takes from four to eight weeks for most people to learn the technique. He has tried it on some 300 patients and had about 90 percent success.

The method has been successful with migraines or headaches caused by muscular contractions. The Menninger Foundation says that it has used the therapy with considerable success with 600 people.

So there you have it. Start each morning saying "My hands are in something warm ... my hands are in something warm ... my hands are in something warm ..."

Just be careful and don't go back to sleep.

WW II Claims Pushed

By ROBERT BARR
Associated Press Writer

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Whether it is 55 cents for a banana tree or $5,000 for the death of a young relative, Pacific islanders who were caught in the World War II cross-fire between the United States and Japan are still seeking full compensation.

They are especially irritated with Japan, which "washed its hands" of the matter after contributing $5 million, a member of the Congress of Micronesia told the United Nations Trusteeship Council on Monday.

"It is our firm belief that Japan has both a moral and legal responsibility to accord full restitution to aggrieved Micronesians," said Raymond Setik, a legislator from Truk atoll, which was once a major Japanese naval base.

40 Years Ago Today

May 16, 1936

The Supreme Court ruled today that working men who strike as a result of an unfair labor practice by their employer are entitled to protection by the National Labor Relations Act.

This decision was given in upholding an order by the National Labor Relations Board directing the Mac-Kay Radio and Telegraph Company to reinstate five employees who had gone on strike in San Francisco.

Justice Roberts, who delivered the decision, asserted that the strikers remained employees under the labor act "and were protected against unfair labor practices denounced by it."

And Now, Look For 15-Cent Stamps

Those who are still wondering what happened to the three-cent first class stamp will soon be wondering what happened to the 15-cent stamp.

The Postal Rate Commission has approved an increase in first class mailing to 15 cents. The Postal Service board of governors is scheduled to meet on the new postal rates, and hardly anyone is betting that the 15 cent stamp won't soon be with us.

The cost of mailing continues to spiral, yet the postal service is mired in red ink. More efficient operations could reduce these costs, but they aren't forthcoming.

Two-Track System Flaws

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — Our approach to criminal justice may be in reverse: we slap stiff sentences on older people because they have a record; but let young people off lightly.

The result might well be that adult prisoners feel the system is unjust, while youthful offenders find it irrelevant. J. Phil Carlton thinks.

The heart of the problem is a "two-track" system in which those under 16 are handled in juvenile courts where procedures and record-keeping are lax. Then as adults, the weight of the law gets heavier; just at a time when the individual is beginning to slack off on criminal activity.

"We have to decide whether we want to continue to favor the juvenile and prevent his record from being seen by the adult courts, and continue to prevent his being fingerprinted and photographed. We certainly need to take a new look at our sentencing procedures".

Carlton is telling people in his public appearances around North Carolina.

Sentencing

The former judge and current head of the state's Dept. of Crime Control and Public Safety has prepared a report on the situation which he is using in his appearances, and which will be part of the material presented to people at a series of Public hearings on crime.

"I suggest we have to take a hard look at our approach to sentencing youthful offenders."

"We have always given special treatment to young people on the belief that special procedures for handling them would serve their special needs, facilitate rehabilitation and prevent further criminalization.

"There is reason to doubt that now," he feels.

Suppose, Carlton suggests, that you are 17, despite straight society, live by your wits, steal a lot, and are arrested from time to time. "But not much happens even though you are an active criminal. Your record has not caught up with you. You do not feel unjustly treated; rather, you feel contemptuous of the system that claims to enforce the law

BILL NOBLITT

"You feel you can beat that system ... it deserves no respect ..."

Then, as an adult and after years of crime, nearly burned out, you are about to retire and find yourself facing five or 10 years in prison.

Punish All

"Now I don't ... suggest that we start letting the older criminals off and start locking up every youngster who comes in court. But I do believe that we have to take a new look at what we are doing," Carlton thinks. "Certainly we ought to ensure that some significant punishment befalls all offenders.

especially young ones, who commit a serious crime."

As a judge, Carlton speculates, suppose you decide to give a stiff sentence to every offender with three or more prior convictions and to put on probation those with two or fewer prior convictions. "You will be imprisoning offenders who account for only about 20 per cent of all crimes committed, and assuring the freedom of those who commit the other 80 per cent."

In real life people grow older one year at a time. In the Criminal Justice system each person "has two entirely separate lives ... one as a juvenile ... another as an adult," Carlton says.

Studies have concentrated on adult crime. A new look suggests that "juvenile crime is even more serious than thought; that adult and juvenile courts are often working at cross purposes... decisions (need to be) based on the entire criminal career and not simply on the juvenile or adult component of it." THE INSIDE REPORT

Impact By Candid Words

By ROWLAND NOVAK and ROBERT EVANS

WASHINGTON — Despite overwhelming approval by the Senate, the administration's proposal to ban all electronic surveillance for national security without a court order is in trouble in the House, partly thanks to candid, though highly secret, warnings from the nation's spy chiefs.

The outlook was changed by testimony behind closed doors May 10 before the House Intelligence Committee. Appearing were Adm. B. R. (Bobby) Inman, chief of the National Security Agency (which handles communications intelligence) and Adm. Stansfield Turner, director of the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA).

Under intense questioning, they departed from total support of the administration's hard line, with Inman courageously taking the lead. The hard line imposed by President Carter would require a judicial warrant for routine intelligence gathering by electronic intercept, even against suspected foreign agents.

For example, a court warrant would be needed to intercept communications between the Soviet embassy and another Communist embassy here — or for messages from Communist delegations in the U.S. to their home governments. Power to authorize the warrant would be vested in a special panel of federal judges to be named by Chief Justice Warren Burger.

An avowed purpose of this new control apparatus is to protect U.S. citizens. But as both Inman and Turner testified, no U.S. citizen could possibly be touched in communications between foreign embassies over "dedicated lines" — communication facilities beyond the reach of the public.

Their testimony raises the probability that the House committee soon will vote to modify at least that part of the administration's stringent prohibitions. House strategists trying to rewrite the new plan are led by Rep. Robert McClory of Illinois, the committee's senior Republican.

A footnote: McClory would like to go much further than merely permitting warrantless taps of communications solely between foreign powers. But his hopes of keeping overall wiretap authority with the President rather than the courts run into intense political fear spawned by wiretap excesses of past years. The administration and Congress, trying to escape responsibility for permitting taps on their own, want to toss that hot potato to the courts.

FORD STIRRINGS

Gerald R. Ford is showing ever more interest in the 1980 presidential election, but with neither the determination nor organization of arch-rival Ronald Reagan.

Stu Spencer, the Los Angeles political pro who was mainly responsible for holding off Reagan's challenge against then President Ford in 1976, has conferred with Ford several times about early planning for 1980.

But those conferences lag far behind the 1980 program being drafted in the Reagan camp. Nor has Ford matched Reagan's eagerness for renewing their old struggle.

Moreover, there are signs that Ford underestimates the difficulty of denying Reagan the 1980 nomination.

Strength For Today

ESSENCE OF GENIUS

What is genius? Bach's Passacaglia and Fugue in C Minor is nothing but a variation of an eight-bar theme which Bach took from a French composition of the sixteenth century. Shakespeare borrowed most of his plots from others. Hamlet had been played in various forms, and so had Macbeth ... Macbeth long before Shakespeare appropriated the two stories. Goethe's great play, Faust, was the re-working of a legend which had been enacted hundreds of times for several centuries before Goethe's birth.

Geniuses are people who take the common things of life and raise them to uncommon levels. They make masterpieces out of themes and stories with which others have dealt in mediocre fashion.

Even Jesus built on the past. Most of his teachings are found in the Old Testament, but he gave ancient doctrines a new and divine turn so that mankind has found a sublime element in them throughout the centuries.

Changes In Women's Lives

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — People sleep more, watch more television, spend less time at work and are involved less with family chores than they were a decade ago, a scholarly study indicates.

Some of the results must be measured further, said Prof. John P. Robinson, but he claims one conclusion already amounts to a major surprise — that women are devoting less time to household chores.

At the same time, he said, a slight increase has been observed in the amount of time men give to household duties, although such activities continue to be demarcated sharply along sexual lines.

That is, he said, men continue to handle such jobs as mowing the lawn while women remain in charge of most childrearing responsibilities.

Before this, said Robinson, who authored an earlier study, "How Americans Use Time," it was observed that women continued to set apart the same amount of time to housework even if other responsibilities grew.

"It could be that they're more efficient or it might be that they've just decided not to do certain things," said Robinson, a Cleveland State University professor. Whatever, it's a surprise, he said.

He offered the personal opinion that "some things seem not to be as important as they used to be" in trying to explain the time-usage change in women's lives. "Maybe they feel they can just let go."

Robinson's findings are contained in a paper, "Changes in Americans' Use of Time: 1965-1975. A Progress Report." His earlier research was partly in conjunction with the Michigan Survey Research Center.

Another significant change discerned by Robinson was in the decreased time spent at work or in work-related activities, such as commuting, by all categories in the study.

In 1965, married men worked 51.3 hours a week, but in the 1975 updating the number had fallen to 47.4. For single men, the decline was even more marked, from 51.4 hours to just 40.

Employed women also spent less time involved with work. Married women worked considerably less in 1975, their hours dropping from 38.4 to 30.1. Single employed women dropped only slightly, from 39.8 to 38.8.

In the 1965 study, a scientific cross-section of more than 1,000 people were given diaries to record each minute and even second of activity. Personal interviews were conducted in the 1975 updating.

In 1965, Robinson found married housewives slept 53.9 of the week's 168 hours, setting aside 50 hours for family care. In 1975 the sleep hours had risen to 56.8, and family care hours had fallen to 44.3.

During the same period, the amount of free time rose from 41 hours to 44.4, but of even greater interest were changes in the use of free time. "Social life," including visiting, fell 2.5 hours, for example.

However, the amount of time given over to "media" rose from 15.3 hours in 1965 to 20.4 hours in 1975, making it by far the largest consumer of free time, more than double that of social life.

While the media category includes newspapers, books, magazines, recordings, and motion pictures, Robinson suspects — but has not yet proved — that much of the increase was in television viewing.

While the numbers vary for each category studied, single and married employed men, single and married employed women, and single and married housewives, many of the trends are pervasive.

Sleep, for example, rose for all categories but single housewives, although they slept the longest, 58.6 hours a week. The biggest sleep increase was for single employed men, to 54.1 hours from 50.6.

Media activity also rose for all groups, consuming close to 19 hours of the employed man's week, between 14 and 16 hours of the married housewife's week, and 27.2 hours of the single housewife's time.

The greater time spent sleeping, in free time activities and in media involvement — and the simultaneous decline in work time — would seem to be at odds with highly publicized increases in two-income families.

However, Robinson believes the other trends are strong enough to offset such influences.

Union Bosses Say Who Can Be Hired At Ports

By The Associated Press
Officers of the union locals at Wilmington and Morehead City, rather than state personnel officials, decide who fills vacancies among the state's 183 dockworker positions, according to William A. Greene, executive director of the State Ports Authority.

"The identity of permanent employees is determined by the union," Greene said. "It sticks in my craw that a taxpayer in Raleigh can't come down here and get a job because he isn't a union man. That's why we're fighting for right-to-work."

Dockworkers are now the third week of a strike against the state's two ports.

Greene said state-employed dockworkers unionized under the International Longshoremen's Association have operated under a virtual closed shop at the ports for more than three years even though the state's right-to-work law forbids union membership as a condition of employment.

Gov. Jim Hunt and other state officials have insisted that compulsory union membership for ports employees is not negotiable. However, it is permitted

The Trusteeship Council opened hearings Monday on U.S. administration of the 2,141 islands which comprise the last U.N. trust territory. The central Pacific islands include some of the bloodiest battlegrounds of the war: Majuro, Kwajalein, Peleliu, Saipan.

It was not until 1969 that the United States and Japan agreed to contribute $5 million each to settle war claims, but the Japanese government insisted that its share was a gift. It did not acknowledge any legal obligation to pay.

In 1971, Congress established a Micronesian claims fund of $10 million for war claims and an additional $20 million — entirely funded by the United States — for post-war damages.

The Micronesian Claims Commission, which completed its work in 1976, approved claims for $34.3 million in war damages and $32.7 million for post-war damages.

Legislation passed this year provided $24.8 million more for the claims, but $12.2 million cannot be released until Japan matches it.

However, an official of Japan's American affairs bureau in Tokyo said today that the 1969 agreement was "complete and final" and that no further payments would be considered.

Do I exaggerate? Not by much. The commission's order of April 27 is based upon a 350-page staff report that appeared in February. The report quotes with approval from various authorities who hold the sugar-product commercials take a toll on the parent-child relationship. The exploitation of children encourages confrontation and alienation on the part of children toward their parents. Conflicts are exacerbated when the child can't have his way.

The staff report anticipates an objection: "One might ask why parents do not shield their children from these and similar themes presented in televised food advertising." A good question. The answer is that parents suffer from "profound feelings of helplessness." Parents are unwilling to intervene for fear "that if they deny their children so pervasive a childhood experience as children's programming, the children will become 'social outcasts or social isolates.'"

We learn from the staff report that tooth decay results from "between-meal snacking on candies, pastries and other foods that stick to the teeth." Notwithstanding the special hazards of snacking on such sugared foods, "much of the advertising in question specifically promotes stickiness, chewiness, and the length of time that a candy lasts in the mouth."

Very well. Back to my rhetorical question. How in the world did we get this way? How did the power vested in Congress to regulate commerce among the states get twisted into a power to control our diets? Something has gone woefully awry, or so it seems to me, when the whole might and majesty of the federal government is marshaled to smash the insidious cupcake.

In my own old-fashioned view, it simply is no business of the federal government if children nag their parents, or parents capitulate to their howling brats. The federal authority has no writ to cure every imperfection in society. Some obligations ought to be left to individuals, for good or ill, if personal responsibility is not to be fatally undermined.

The FTC's proceeding is far more destructive than the evil it seeks to prevent. Once government becomes the one great nanny of us all — protecting us, guiding us, loving us, scolding us, holding our hands and wiping our runny noses — once we surrender to the idiot notion that Bib Brother knows best, we have abandoned the basis of a free society. The fabric rots. Yes, we ought to be concerned about tooth decay, but tooth decay is not the decay that matters most.

President said one element in his favor is the probability that two-thirds of the 1976 delegates who nominated him would again be delegates in 1980.

That, Ford was quickly informed, is no advantage. Many delegates who voted for Ford were covert Reaganites — especially from Ohio. The Ohioans did not tell Ford their private opinion that Reagan today would be an overwhelming favorite against Ford in an Ohio Republican primary.

NO TRUCKS FOR LIBYA
The inconsistency of President Carter's human rights policies was pointed up again when the State Department barred a truck sale to Libya, which annually sells billions worth of oil to the U.S.

The Commerce Department originally approved the sale of $60 million worth of flatbed trucks produced by the Oshkosh (Wis.) Truck Corp. But the State Department intervened, claiming "human rights" considerations.

Those considerations involve Libya's role in training Palestinian guerrillas and harboring hijackers. Behind the scenes, the pro-Israel congressional bloc campaigned to block the trucks, claiming they could transport tanks, not just oil rigs.

But Libya's long support for the Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO) did not prevent 1977 U.S. purchases of $3 billion in crude oil — almost one-tenth of all U.S. imports. The same year saw $313 million in U.S. exports to Libya.

A letter from Wisconsin's Sen. Gaylord Nelson to the President was hand-delivered asking his intervention on grounds that blocking the trucks was inconsistent with increasing U.S. Libyan trade. By the time the decision came May 9, Nelson had received no answer.

under a federal law that supercedes the state statute.

In explaining the state's rejection of union wording of an automatic dues deduction clause, Hunt said it would have been "tantamount to a closed shop" by putting employees under "duress to agree to a checkoff and join."

"When someone applies, we've still got to send him to the ILA because under federal law, they have jurisdiction," Greene said.

Greene said when a prospective dockworker fills out his state employment application form, personnel officials send him to the local union hall where he is approved or rejected by union officials. Only those who join the union are approved for hiring, Greene said.

Gary Pearce, Hunt's press secretary, said the governor is unaware of the specifics involved in hiring and the extent of union control under a 1974 federal court decision placing state dockworkers under the National Railway Labor Act. The decision names the ILA as the bargaining agent for the dockworkers.

ILA locals announced when negotiations began last October that closed shop and dues checkoff provisions were their major demands. But they dropped the closed shop provision just before the talks were broken off.

BACK TO PRISON — Patricia Hearst is hustled through a crowd of reporters at Santa Rita, a minimum security prison facility at Pleasanton, Calif. (AP Laserphoto)

By TONY LEDWELL
Associated Press Writer
SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Patricia Hearst, convicted accomplice of the terrorists who kidnapped her, is back in prison to fill out a seven-year sentence for bank robbery after 18 months freedom on $1 million bail.

Accompanied by her four sisters, a priest and a bodyguard, Miss Hearst surrendered Monday at a federal minimum-security prison in Pleasanton, 30 miles east of San Francisco, just five minutes before a court-imposed deadline.

She fought her way through swarming reporters to enter the prison administration building, once almost being knocked off her feet.

With credit for time already served, Miss Hearst, who had been free during an appeal, will be eligible for parole in 14 months.

Miss Hearst, 24, was described as "extremely depressed" at the prospect of returning to prison. Her parents, Randolph and Catherine Hearst, issued a statement saying they were "devastated."

They also assailed what they called the court's lack of leniency. Alluding to their daughter's 1974 kidnapping by members of the Symbionese Liberation Army, the Hearsts said: "She started out a victim because her name is Hearst and it appears to us that she is ending up a victim because her name is Hearst."

U.S. District Judge William Orrick Jr., who passed sentence on Miss Hearst, had agreed in November 1976 to release her on $1 million bail pending appeal. On March 24, the U.S. Supreme Court refused to review the conviction.

Orrick, in an order signed April 26 but kept secret until Monday, refused to reduce sentence. On May 1, Miss Hearst signed a voluntary surrender statement pledging to turn herself in "by 4 p.m., PDT, on May 15."

Shortly after a picnic lunch at the family home in Hillsborough, 30 miles away, Miss Hearst arrived at the prison, where she was met by a federal marshal and a probation officer.

Miss Hearst was convicted in March 1976 of joining her kidnapers in a 1974 holdup of a residential branch of the Hi-berna Bank in San Francisco.

And any one of them could increase the value of your home by more than the money you spend.

Improved insulation, storm windows and doors can cut down on utility bills.

In many cases, making the home you're in now better fit your needs can cost a lot less than moving to a new one.

So come see us at NCNB. We'll work out the loan that works best for you.

Maybe a Home Improvement Loan. If you're making a big investment, it could be an NCNB Homeowner Loan.

It lets you use the equity in your home to borrow more than you expect — and make lower monthly payments than you expect, as you can see by the chart.

The range of costs for improvements and additions depends on the extent of the job you want done. Estimates are for the finished job, including labor. These are average figures; the location, size and age of your house might mean higher or lower estimates.

Either way, we can set up payments that work for you. If you like, we can arrange automatic transfers from your NCNB Checking Account.

Whatever you need money for, the NCNB people who make loans will do more than help you out with credit; they'll help you manage the situation.

Which is probably why, in one way or another, more people borrow from us than any other bank in North Carolina.

The other new position will be that of a General Administrative Service Officer, who will have charge of policies papers, public relations, reports, calendar, textbooks and certifications. These fields are now being farmed out to a number of personnel. "Such a position will take some of the burden off people in other areas," Cox said, "and this represents a position we have been in real need of establishing for several years."

Another matter the board approved is an audit bid of $4,300 to audit all school accounts for fiscal year 1977-78. The bid was submitted by J. C. Proctor Co., accountants.

Cox, in response to a question from member Miles Frost, said "this is not a competitive bid, but is set up on an assignment basis. This arrangement is approved by the Local Government Commission."

In review and acceptance of the curriculum for grades kindergarten through the sixth grade, the board adopted two series of textbooks submitted by the state.

One is a language series of four textbooks, the other a social studies of three series. Both series have been studied during the past year by a citywide textbook committee and by consultants for textbook selection.

A policy paper on "Policies and Procedures for Selection of Instructional Material" was reviewed and will be considered for final action at the June meeting of the board. Several minor wording changes were suggested by board members for incorporation to more clearly define certain requirements and responsibilities.

A date of Sunday, May 28 has been set as the official dedication date for the new Middle School. The hour and other details will be worked out within the next few days.

At Least Seven Died In Tennessee Hotel Fire

JELLYCO, Tenn. (AP) — An early morning fire ravaged a downtown hotel and two nearby businesses early today, killing at least seven persons, a hospital official said.

"I've just been told we have seven now," Dan Sanderford, administrator of Jellico Community Hospital, said in a telephone interview.

Sanderford said a temporary morgue was being set up in a locker room at the hospital. He said all bodies of the fire victims were being brought to the hospital.

It was impossible to identify the bodies or even to determine whether they were male or female, he said.

"By looking at them, you cannot tell," the administrator said. "They're all in body bags."

Rescue workers were searching the fire site for any other victims, Sanderford said. Fire officials said they had contained the fire by 8 a.m. (EST).

The fire raged through the Jenkins Hotel, destroying the three-story brick structure. A reporter at the scene said the fire heavily damaged Braden's Auto Parts store and a Trailways bus station, located in the same block. Damage estimates were unavailable.

A reporter observed firemen carrying residents of the hotel down ladders from windows. One resident was reported to have been hospitalized after jumping from a third-floor window to escape the flames.

Officials said the hotel listed about 20 residents at the time of the fire.

Jellico Fire Department dispatcher Arnold Overton said the cause of the fire was uncertain. He said a caller reported the blaze at about 2:10 a.m. (EST).

Overton said in a telephone interview that the hotel housed mostly older persons. "Most of them were elderly retired people living on pensions and so forth," he said.

Fire departments from nearby La Follette and Williamsville, Ky., also responded to the fire, he said. A Campbell County deputy said fire units from as far south as Oak Ridge were represented.

Jellico is located along the Kentucky border in a rural area of northeast Tennessee.

disapproval resolution. Twenty-eight Democrats and 26 Republicans voted to reject it.

In a statement after the vote, Carter appeared to go out of his way to address critics, many of them fellow Democrats, who contend his endorsement of a major arms sale in the Middle East directly contradicts his campaign pledge to oppose such sales.

He said the sales do not violate U.S. arms limitation policy because the United States "stands ready to provide needed assistance when unrestrained arms sales by other nations pose a threat to the security of our friends and allies."

Many of the 45 senators who spoke during the 10-hour debate saw the issue in terms of oil.

"The Saudis have us over a barrel — an oil barrel," said Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan., who voted against the proposal.

"Are we going to trade integrity or energy?" asked Sen. Robert Packwood, R-Ore.

Other senators said the sales are needed because Saudi Arabia is threatened by radical, Soviet-backed Arab states and by Soviet-supported Cuban forces in Africa and the Middle East.

Sen. Muriel Humphrey D-Minn., whose late husband Hubert was a strong supporter of Israel, said she was convinced that the Carter position was consistent with an "unshakable" commitment to Israel.

Tucson 'Mayday'

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — "I want to report a ship at sea in distress. I've just picked up its Mayday signal," Dallas Peyton told an unbelieving Pima County Sheriff's Department radio dispatcher.

"Buddy," the dispatcher replied, "this is a desert town. There isn't a major waterway within a hundred miles of here."

But Peyton was not to be put off.

He told the deputy that he had picked up the call for help Monday on a citizens band radio and urged that he check it out.

The dispatcher relayed the information to federal officials in Tucson, who contacted the Coast Guard in Key West, Fla.

A few minutes later, the word came back: "Confirmed message. Thanks Tucson. We're on the way."

The Coast Guard reported later that it had spotted and taken into tow a 30-foot pleasure boat, the Timberlane out of Marathon, Fla., that had begun taking on water with three people on board.

"We didn't hear the Mayday message at all," a Coast Guard spokesman said in Key West.

"We got two calls from people in Tucson and one of the callers talked to people aboard the ship for awhile until the signal faded."

Attorney-Training Program Proposed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Chief Justice Warren E. Burger today called for an "experiment" in legal education aimed at improving what he termed the law profession's greatest weakness — lawyers' courtroom incompetency.

In remarks prepared for delivery to the American Law Institute, Burger urged the organized bar to provide in at least three law schools legal intern programs offering training not unlike that received by would-be lawyers a century ago.

Returning to a subject that led him to a showdown with the American Bar Association in February, Burger said his much-publicized complaints about the adequacy of U.S. trial lawyers had served some good.

"It helped focus attention on the problem," he said. "The task now is to keep attention focused as we look for solutions."

Burger drew heated responses from some lawyers after contending that half of all U.S. trial lawyers inadequately represent their clients.

At the ABA's convention in New Orleans, Burger refused to back down from his estimated statistic but said that even if the percentage were lower, the level of courtroom advocacy is a "serious problem."

Today, Burger offered a specific solution — "that at least three law schools begin pilot programs in which students would receive traditional training for their first two years but during their third and final year would become legal interns."

"The third...year of legal education would not be the traditional 8 or 9 months but a full 12-month period roughly comparable to a medical internship, devoted to involvement in every phase of the litigation process," Burger said.

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Acting like any other tourist, Jackie Kennedy Onassis spent some time in Israel touring the sites, particularly the Roman ruins at Caesaria, north of Tel Aviv.

Unlike most other tourists, Mrs. Onassis drew a swarm of photographers Monday, particularly when she went for a dip in the Mediterranean.

Mrs. Onassis, on her first visit to Israel, also joined Israeli President Ephraim Katzir and world Jewish leaders in dedicating the new Museum of the Jewish Diaspora at Tel Aviv University. The museum traces 2,500 years of Jewish life around the world.

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Senate-passed tentative budget of nearly one-half trillion dollars faces attack in the House from liberals who want to cut defense spending and conservatives who want to cut everything else.

The compromise $498.8-billion budget passed the Senate with ease Monday night, by voice vote.

But because the original version of the budget cleared the House last week with only three votes to spare, leaders fear the compromise might be scuttled on the final vote, which is expected on Wednesday.

Sen. Edmund S. Muskie, D-Maine, chairman of the Senate Budget Committee, called the compromise "a signal to the American people, American business and the world community that...we are serious about controlling inflation."

Sen. Harry F. Byrd, I-Va., who voted against the compromise, said, "The American people are going to suffer very dearly from the inflation caused by this budget."

The budget for fiscal 1979, the 12 months beginning next Oct. 1, anticipates a deficit of $50.9 billion. Mainly because President Carter agreed with congressional leaders last week to scale back his proposed tax cut in an effort to reduce inflation, the deficit is considerably below the $60 billion that was projected in Carter's budget.

The compromise would allow a tax cut of $19.4 billion during the calendar year. But during the fiscal year, the value of the reduction would be only $15 billion, compared with the $25 billion originally proposed by Carter.

The budget makes no recommendation on whether the entire $19.4 billion should be used to cut income taxes, or whether some of it might go to reduce Social Security taxes.

The budget-writing committees left it to Congress to decide whether a tax credit or an expanded federal college grant is the preferred way of extending education assistance to middle-income families.

The preliminary budget will serve as a guide for congressional committees as they consider spending and taxing bills during the next 4½ months. Starting Oct. 1, the final figures will become binding, and spending will not be allowed to rise higher nor taxes to fall lower than outlined in the budget.

Marshall Makes Triumphant Return

Living A Fantasy

Kansas City, Royals' rookie pitcher Rich Gale shouts after defeating the Boston Red Sox with a two-hitter. Gale, who grew up in New England,

By KEN RAPPOPORT

Mike Marshall has been away from the major leagues for a while, but has lost neither his velocity nor his vitality.

"He was like a young colt out there," enthused Minnesota Manager Gene Mauch after watching Marshall's triumphant return to baseball in a Twins' uniform Monday night.

The 1974 Cy Young Award winner was signed Monday afternoon by the Twins and a few hours later helped them win a 9-6, 10-inning decision over the Baltimore Orioles.

Marshall, who last pitched for the Texas Rangers last June, hurled 12-3 innings of hitless ball while striking out two and walking one. He retired the side in the top of the 10th before Willie Norwood hit a three-run homer for Minnesota in the bottom of the inning.

Marshall appeared to be finished with baseball after injuring his knee with the Texas

Rangers last year.

In other American League games, the Kansas City Royals beat the Boston Red Sox, 3-1; the New York Yankees turned back the Chicago White Sox 4-1; the Texas Rangers trimmed the Milwaukee Brewers 8-6; the Oakland A's edged the Cleveland Indians 3-2; the Detroit Tigers stopped the Seattle Mariners 4-2 and the Toronto Blue Jays outscored the California Angels 10-6.

Royals 3, Red Sox 1
Rookie Rich Gale worked out of some early-inning jams and pitched a two-hitter to lead Kansas City over Boston. After surrendering a run in the third, the 6-foot-7 right-hander retired 13 batters in a row before Bernie Carbo drew a two-out walk in the seventh.

Clint Hurdle's two-run double in the fourth provided all the runs Gale needed.

Yankees 4, White Sox 1
Lou Piniella extended his hitting streak to 12 games with three singles and Bucky Dent singled in two runs to cap a three-run fourth inning and lead New York over Chicago.

Rangers 6, Brewers 6
Juan Beniquez and Toby Harrah each knocked in two runs in a 13-hit Texas attack and Ferguson Jenkins gained his fourth straight victory in beating Milwaukee. Beniquez stroked a double and a triple and Harrah collected two RBI with a sacrifice fly and a single.

A's 3, Indians 2
A sacrifice fly by Dwayne Murphy capped a two-run sixth inning that carried Oakland over Cleveland. Joe Coleman gained the victory with three innings of one-hit relief and Elias Sosa notched his sixth save.

Tigers 4, Mariners 2
Milt May hit a three-run homer and Jim Slaton pitched his first complete game in a Detroit uniform as the Tigers defeated Seattle. Slaton scattered five hits in winning his fourth game in five decisions.

Blue Jays 10, Angels 6
Held to four hits over the first six innings, Toronto scored nine runs in the seventh in a rally keyed by Sam Ewing's two-run single to defeat California. The Blue Jays sent 14 men to the plate in their big inning and touched three California pitchers for seven hits and four walks.

Rose Hosts Wilson

Rose High School's Rampants close out their home season tonight at 7:30 p.m. at Guy Smith Stadium, playing host to Wilson Pike's Titans.

The Rampants, currently tied for first place in the Division I race, will be seeking to eliminate the Titans from any hopes of a playoff berth, as well as enhance their own chances for one.

Rose is currently 8-5 in the league, while Wilson is tied for third with a 7-6 mark. The Rampants close out their season Thursday at Elizabeth City's Northeastern High School.

Norton: Title No Mistake

GILMAN HOT SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — Ken Norton would rather have won the heavy-weight boxing championship in the ring, but he vows to prove that the World Boxing Council did not make a mistake in stripping Leon Spinks of the title and giving it to him.

"The most important thing about my fight with Larry Holmes is to win it," the 32-year-old ex-Marine said intently.

Training at this Massacre Canyon site for his June 9 defense in Las Vegas against the undefeated Holmes, Norton shows his pride, some frustration and determination to uphold the WBC's action.

"Damn it," he almost shouted when he slipped during a sparring session with ranking heavyweight Stan Ward. And he kicked a water bucket when Ward eluded him in a corner.

Norton drives a Lincoln Continental to his workouts, but from then on, he is a man in grueling training for a battle to prove himself.

He thinks Muhammad Ali will beat Spinks, the 1976 Olympic champion, and regain the World Boxing Association version of the championship, but fears Ali wants no more of Norton.

"I hope he does, but I don't think he will," Norton said. "I don't think Ali wants to put his heart into it any more."

The WBC champion terms Holmes, of Easton, Pa., "a cheap imitation of Ali" and bristles when it is suggested that the 26-year-old Holmes might have the best left jab in their fight.

"You wait and look," he said.

"Basically, what I'm working on is my jab to nullify his jab. I think he is a very good fighter with a very fluid jab. I think mine is harder. I'm working on cutting the ring in half. I'm working to make him fight more. I'm working on my power."

"Basically, I'll use the same techniques I used against Ali. I've been fighting that way too long now to change. I can alter a few things, but in the heat of battle, you revert to what you know best."

Rampant Net Star Fred Matney Sets Sights On State Berth

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Around most high school sports events, sophomores are to be heard and not seen. They are supposed to sit on the sidelines, cheering on the upperclassmen.

For a sophomore not only to compete in the finals of the sectional tennis tournament is not only rare, for him to win is just about unheard of.

But last week, Rose High School's Fred Matney not only competed in the finals, he won the sectional title, a feat believed to have been accomplished by a sophomore for the first time.

Matney went into the sectionals seeded third, and wound up beating the top seed in the semifinals. He then went on to win the finals and will be highly seeded in this week's regional tournament in Kinston. There, he will have to win only his first match to assure himself of a berth in the state high school tournament.

He began his tennis career by following in the footsteps of his sister, who last year was the number one seed on the girls' tennis team at Rose.

"I just went out with (Serena) one day when I was about 12, and she got me playing. We played a lot together over the past few years, but not any more." Brother finally surpassed sister in ability, and sister also got involved in other things.

"Tennis is really about everything to me right now," Matney said.

From the novice ranks, he went on to take some lessons locally, then began commuting to Greensboro for weekend lessons from Dean Mathais, recognized as one of the best teaching pros around. "He later moved to Richmond, and I continued to go up to Richmond for lessons," Fred said.

Coming into his sophomore year, Matney said he wasn't surprised to attain the number one seed on the Rampant team. "I had practiced all winter, and I don't think the rest play as much as I do. Overall, there's not really that much interest in tennis as I have."

During his first varsity year in tennis, Matney lost only four matches, two of them to Wilson's Rob Edmondson, who became the top seed in the sectional tournament.

When Matney went into the sectionals seeded third, he wasn't surprised by that lofty perch. "Coach (Lanny) Peters and I had checked over the other records in the section, and we felt that I'd be about third."

While beating Edmondson in the semifinals was a big match, Matney said it wasn't the biggest. "That was in the quarterfinals, when I had to beat David Frazier of Roanoke Rapids. He had beaten me the last time we played, and I had to win that match to get into the regionals. After I won that match, I had no pressure on me at all. I just wanted to play to my potential and give (Edmondson) a good match."

followed the Red Sox and wondered how it would be to pitch against Carl Yastrzemski with the bases loaded. He had the chance Monday in the Royals' 3-1 victory. (AP Laserphoto)

Matney said he felt that since Edmondson had beaten him twice, he may have felt he had no problem. "I stayed with him to 4-4, then broke service on him. He started to lose some of his confidence, and I think that put the pressure on him."

Matney doesn't know how he'll be seeded in this Wednesday and Thursday's regionals. That will be done tonight, but he admits that the competition will be a lot tougher. "I just want to do well and get to the state."

He has plans for further down the road too. This summer, he wants to compete as much as possible, and hopefully become ranked among the top 15 in his age group. "I think I can do it," he said. And by the time he's a senior, he'd like to entertain thoughts of winning a state title. "That's a long way off, however, so I really don't think much about it."

Matney admits that his own age group is one of the tougher around in the state, so he works on his game a lot. "I don't do much off the court except just lay back and take it easy."

Are there pro thoughts ahead? Fred isn't sure. "That's a long way off too. I'd like to think I could get a scholarship to college to play, then I'd have to see how I was doing then. I guess everyone who plays would like to think about being a pro, but to do it, you have to play the price. It's a lot to think about."

That's a long way ahead, however, and Matney's sights are now on the regionals...and hopefully, the state next week.

North Lenoir Tops Chargers

LITTLEFIELD — North Lenoir rallied for five runs in the top of the seventh inning to drop Ayden-Grifton, 11-8, last night.

North Lenoir opened the scoring in the first inning, getting a single run. Steve Tripp singled and Jeff Davis doubled, scoring Tripp.

Ayden-Grifton came back with three in the bottom of the inning to take the lead, 3-1. Ed Coley walked and Brady Quinn singled.

Chris Phelps brought both of them in with a triple. Mike Teachey and Harold Edwards both walked, and Paul Setliff hit into a fielder's choice, getting Phillips at the plate. An error on the attempt to double up the Chargers allowed Teachey to score.

Both teams scored a run in the third, and North Lenoir pushed over two in the fourth and two more in the fifth to take the lead, 6-4. Ayden-Grifton then scored twice in the bottom of the fifth to tie it again, 6-6.

But in the top of the seventh, the Hawks rallied for five to put it out of reach. Theodore David singled and scored on Tony Graham's double. Pete Davis reached on a two-base error, scoring Graham. Richard Repeats Act

By HERSHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

When Houston's J.R. Richard fired a four-hit, 11-strikeout masterpiece to beat Philadelphia 5-1 last week, Richie Hebner of the Phillies quipped that "he's so big out there that when he throws he ball you could almost smell his breath."

Monday night, the 6-foot-8 right-hander breathed down the Phillies' necks again, this time with his second two-hitter of the season as the Astros rolled to a 5-0 triumph.

In the only other National League game, Reggie Smith's two-run double in the ninth inning enabled the Los Angeles Dodgers to edge the Pittsburgh Pirates 7-6 while Jerry Turner's bases-loaded single in the 14th gave the San Diego Padres a 4-3 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals.

The only Philadelphia hits off Richard, who struck out nine, were consecutive fifth-inning singles by Hebner and Garry Maddox. After the runners advanced on a wild pitch, Richard retired Bob Boone on a soft liner to shortstop and Bud Harrelson on an easy fly ball.

"I had better stuff the last time out," Richard said. "They hit the ball hard early in the game, but I was just lucky that they were hitting it in the right spots. I had to pitch better tonight than I did the last time because I didn't have my real good stuff. I had to kick my own tail a few times to get my rhythm back."

Richard received offensive support from Bob Watson, who hit a two-run homer, and Cesar Cedeño, who collected two singles, stole two bases and scored three runs.

Dodgers 7, Pirates 6
Smith's two-run double capped a three-run ninth inning against Bert Blyleven that included pinch-hitter Manny Mota's bunt single, Vic Davalillo's infield hit and Bill Russell's RBI single before Smith delivered the game-winning hit. Smith also hit a two-run homer in the seventh inning after the Pirates had taken a 6-1 lead in the top half.

Pittsburgh's Willie Stargell belted a two-run homer and moved ahead of Roberto Clemente into second place on the Pirates' all-time RBI list with 1,307.

Padres 4, Cardinals 3
Turner's bases-loaded single with two out sent the Cardinals to their fifth consecutive defeat. The Padres took a 3-1 lead off Dave Hamilton in the seventh inning on a two-run homer by Gene Tenace and a solo shot by rookie Rick Sweet. The Cardinals tied it in the eighth on Jerry Mumphrey's single, a walk, an RBI single by Ted Simmons and a throwing error by San Diego right fielder Dave Winfield.

Sonics Must Play Their Game: Webster

SEATTLE (AP) — Marvin Webster knows what the Seattle SuperSonics must do Wednesday night — play their game simply and effectively.

"The name of the game is go out and do it," said Webster, Seattle's 7-foot-1 center, referring to the sixth game in the Sonics' best-of-seven National Basketball Association semifinal playoff series against the Denver Nuggets.

"I thought the whole team started slow," he said of Sunday's Sonics' loss, which left Seattle with a 3-2 lead in the series.

"We'd beat 'em three straight. It's awfully hard to beat a team four straight," he said. "We came out flat ... there's no question about that. Wednesday? There's no question about that either."

Sonics Coach Lenny Wilkens says his team will be playing with more intensity in Wednesday's game on Seattle's home court.

"We'll start from the beginning of the game," he said. The Nuggets, who regained their shooting touch in posting a 123-114 victory Sunday, don't appear worried even though the Sonics boast a 19-game home-court winning streak.

"They got to win one more game before they can open that champagne," said Nuggets rookie forward Anthony Roberts. "We got to win two. Don't count us out yet."

A seventh game, if necessary, would be played Friday night in Denver.

The winner of the series meets the Washington Bullets in the championship round, which begins next Sunday at the home of the Western Conference champion.

The Denver trio of David Thompson, Bobby Wilkerson and Ralph Simpson mounted a scoring resurgence Sunday, making amends for poor shooting in the earlier games of the series.

Thompson had hit just 39 percent of his field goal attempts in the first four games against Seattle, while Wilkerson had managed 34 percent and Simpson 35 percent.

Sunday, however, things were different. Thompson broke loose for 35 points, Wilkerson hit five of 11 shots and scored a personal series high of 13 points, as well as handing out 10 assists.

day night — play their game simply and effectively.

"The name of the game is go out and do it," said Webster, Seattle's 7-foot-1 center, referring to the sixth game in the Sonics' best-of-seven National Basketball Association semifinal playoff series against the Denver Nuggets.

"I thought the whole team started slow," he said of Sunday's Sonics' loss, which left Seattle with a 3-2 lead in the series.

"We'd beat 'em three straight. It's awfully hard to beat a team four straight," he said. "We came out flat ... there's no question about that. Wednesday? There's no question about that either."

Sonics Coach Lenny Wilkens says his team will be playing with more intensity in Wednesday's game on Seattle's home court.

"We'll start from the beginning of the game," he said. The Nuggets, who regained their shooting touch in posting a 123-114 victory Sunday, don't appear worried even though the Sonics boast a 19-game home-court winning streak.

"They got to win one more game before they can open that champagne," said Nuggets rookie forward Anthony Roberts. "We got to win two. Don't count us out yet."

A seventh game, if necessary, would be played Friday night in Denver.

The winner of the series meets the Washington Bullets in the championship round, which begins next Sunday at the home of the Western Conference champion.

The Denver trio of David Thompson, Bobby Wilkerson and Ralph Simpson mounted a scoring resurgence Sunday, making amends for poor shooting in the earlier games of the series.

A Classy Study Of The Jobs For White House

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Up for mind exercise? See public TV's "Some of the President's Men," a classy study of how four ex-White House spokesmen view their jobs and are viewed by two of the press.

The men: Ron Ziegler and Ron Nessen, George Reedy, Pierre Salinger, the respective voices for Presidents Nixon, Ford, Johnson and Kennedy. The press: New York Timesman Sy Hersh, and Liz Trotta, late of NBC.

PBS emits it tonight, but check local listings. And don't think it's another of those talking-head yawners from Washington, D.C.

Made by KCTS and KPSP of Seattle and Spokane, Wash., "Men" is crisply edited, never boring and narrated with more than a dash of insight by producer-interviewer Mike Kirk of KCTS.

The four ex-fugelmen and the newshawks were recorded in April when in Spokane for a college symposium on the relations, if any, of White House press secretaries and White House reporters.

The hour is full of surprises, as illustrated when Hersh, who got the Pulitzer for his My Lai reports, says he finds it hard to believe that White House spokesmen never lie for the president.

Elucidating, he recalls his four-month stint in 1968 as press secretary for presidential contender Eugene McCarthy.

"And one of the things that amazed me about the job is, I was stupified by the fact I was lying so much. Just little lies ... it was the easiest way to deal with a problem."

Another surprise, that Ziegler, who once called Watergate a "third-rate burglary" and was proved a bit wrong: The White House press corps should poke around more for stories.

"I don't think they probe for stories as much as they should," says he, but adds that the daily frenzy of their jobs — Hersh calls them a sort of "paid stenographer" — leaves them scant probe time.

One would expect all the verbal fire to dwell on Ziegler's defenses of Nixon amid the uncovering of the Watergate cover-up. Indeed, as Hersh says in an interview with producer Kirk:

"He's in a tough position. He's either a criminal or the all-time classic dupe ..."

But Ziegler, at the symposium, makes many, mea culpa for Watergate words later shown to be "incorrect," says he wasn't given the straight poop, is "a victim ... of the Watergate cover-up."

He refuses to criticize Nixon, blames unspecified colleagues for having "mised" him, says he should have probed matters more, and with all this defuses his Nixon work as Topic A at the symposium.

All of it makes for a fascinating look at the men Kirk calls "a complex mixture of presidential mouthpiece and reporter" who assault and are assailed by those at White House press briefings each day.

A good show, this "Some of the President's Men," and you really should watch it.

NBC Fall Programming Sees Host Of Prime Time Changes

By TOM JORY
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — NBC has unveiled a fall schedule that barely resembles the network's layout for last season. Seven hours of new prime time programs have been added, and six of the network's regulars last season, including "Police Woman," fell victim to low ratings.

Of NBC's 1977-78 lineup, only "Little House on the Prairie," "The Rockford Files" and "Wonderful World of Disney" were left in their current time slots. The network also said Monday that "Operation Runaway," "Project UFO" and "CHiPs" would be back in the fall, but at new times.

NBC was the last of the three commercial networks to announce its fall programming, and the major overhaul is designed to step up competition with ABC and CBS. NBC was last in the networks' weekly ratings competition 17 of the 30 weeks between Sept. 12 and April 9.

The fall schedule — NBC's season will begin with CBS's on Sept. 18: ABC announced it would start Sept. 10 — presumably was drafted without assistance from Fred Silverman, who will take over as the network's president and chief executive in June.

Silverman generally has been credited with putting together the entertainment programming that put ABC into first place in the networks' battle for the prime time audience.

The upcoming season, NBC said, will feature three hours of new comedy programming, including "The Waverly Wonders," starring former pro football quarterback Joe Namath (8-8:30 p.m. EDT Wednesdays); "Grandpa Goes to Washington," with Emmy-winner Jack Albertson (8-9 p.m. Fridays); and "Coastocast," about the adventures of two airline stewardesses (9-10 p.m. Thursdays).

"Legs," a half-hour comedy created by Garry Marshall, who produces the ABC hits "Happy Days" and "Laverne and Shirley," will be aired Wednesdays between 8:30 and 9. The show is set in Las Vegas.

Other new programs in the NBC schedule are "Live from Hollywood with Dick Clark" (9-10 p.m. Wednesdays); "Sword of Justice," a modern-day swashbuckling adventure (10-11 p.m. Wednesdays); "W.E.B.," about a female TV executive (10-11 p.m. Thursdays); and "Capra," a classic whodunit (10-11 p.m. Sundays).

The network said, in addition, its "Weekend" newsmagazine would move to prime time in the fall, beginning Sept. 10 at 10 p.m., and that "Big Event" and miniseries formats would be continued.

The big event in NBC's "Big Event" series will be a 25-hour adaptation of James Michener's novel "Centennial." NBC scored its biggest triumph of the past season with a nine-hour miniseries based on another novel, "Holocaust."

The winners will be chosen in secret balloting by about 400 representatives of all branches of the theatrical profession and will be announced June 4 in a CBS telecast.

Liza Minnelli, nominated for "The Act," will try for her second Tony award, going against Madeline Kahn who has already left the cast of "On the Twentieth Century." Eartha Kitt of "Timbuktu," and Frances Sternhagen of "Angel," which lasted only five performances.

Miss Minnelli won a Tony in 1965 for her performance in "Flora, the Red Menace." Actresses nominated for their performances in dramas were Anne Bancroft of "Golda," Anita Gillette of "Chapter Two," Estelle Parsons of "Miss Marguerite's Way," and Jessica Tandy of "The Gin Game."

The nominations for actors in musicals went to Eddie Brackner of "Hello, Dolly!," John Cullum of "On the Twentieth Century," Barry Nelson of "The Act" and Gilbert Price of "Timbuktu!"

Hume Cronyn in "The Gin Game," Bernard Hughes of "Da," Frank Langella's "Dracula" and Jason Robards in "A Touch of the Poet" were named the top performances by dramatic actors.

Jaguers To Ask Divorce

LONDON (AP) — Saying they no longer find satisfaction in their seven-year marriage, rock singer Mick Jagger and his wife, Bianca, have begun divorce proceedings.

The breakup of one of the world's most publicized marriages follows reports that Jagger, lead singer of the Rolling Stones, has a new companion — Texas model Jerry Hall.

Bianca, 33, is in the United States. She filed suit in the London divorce court through her London attorneys, who initiated proceedings on Monday. If Jagger decides not to defend the case, it could be heard before August.

The Jaggers were married in St. Tropez, France, in 1971. They have a 6-year-old daughter, Jade.

London gossip columnist Nigel Dempster recently reported that Jagger has amassed a $7.28 million fortune and now has homes in New York, France, London and Berkshire in the English countryside.

Locally, Nixon Book Sale Slow

By LYNN CAVERLY
Reflector Staff Writer
A check of local book stores and libraries revealed that only about four copies of Richard Nixon's memoirs have been sold in the Greenville area.

The 1,120 page, four pound book went on sale last week and Central News and Card Shop manager Irving Ertis reported he had about 25 copies, four of which he has sold.

"A lot of people are disturbed that Nixon is going to make money off of it," said Ertis, giving a reason for the sluggish sales.

Grace Smith, manager of The Book Barn, said she feels reluctant to order any copies of the book until "we get a lot of response for the book." Quoting the selling price of $19.95, she felt it was just too expensive to order without a prior demand.

"We have a three-day order lead time," said Smith, "so if we do get a demand for the book, we can have it in a relatively short time."

Sheppard Library isn't going to order a copy until they get a demand for it, said head librarian Elizabeth Copeland.

"It costs too much to purchase," said Copeland, "especially when there is no demand for it. We haven't even had a single request for it."

Joyner Library, East Carolina University, has had a request for it and has ordered the book, said Myra Farrow, assistant librarian in acquisitions.

"I have seen a request slip for it and it is on order," said Farrow, "but I don't know when it will arrive."

Published by Grosset and Dunlap, Nixon is reported to be receiving $3 million for all publishing rights of "RN: The Memoirs of Richard Nixon."

Today's Cryptquip clue: A equals R
The Cryptquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

South bid aggressively to reach a good six spade contract. Fortunately, he had the playing skill to back up his boldness in the auction.

Despite the fact that, in terms of point count, South had only a smidgeon more than a minimum opening bid, he felt that his distribution and key card in his partner's suit merited a "high reverse" rebid of three diamonds. When South learned that his partner had spade support and second-round diamond control, he barged into slam on the strength of his singleton club.

West led the king of clubs and continued with the ace. Declarer ruffed and all seemed to be plain sailing. But declarer realized that a bad break in diamonds could endanger his contract, so he planned his play to allow for the possibility of a 4-1 break.

Declarer drew trumps in three rounds and then cashed the ace and queen of diamonds. Had both defenders followed to these two tricks, declarer would have claimed his slam. But when West discarded a club on the second diamond, declarer's foresight in leaving the king of diamonds in dummy was about to bear fruit.

It was now essential for declarer to establish dummy's hearts to make his contract. With nothing to guide him, the percentage play is to cash the king and ace and then ruff a heart. This would succeed whenever either de-

Seek Extend Losing Runs

WASHINGTON (AP) - Passenger trains that the Transportation Department wants to eliminate starting in July, 1979 would operate at least until Oct. 1 of that year under legislation before the full House.

The bill sent to the floor Monday by the Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee attempts to postpone the department's planned elimination of one-third of the 27,000-mile Amtrak system.

Secretary Brock Adams says Amtrak can prevent huge deficits by eliminating the routes, including one that passes through the Keyser, W. Va. hometown of the commerce committee chairman, Democratic Rep. Harley O. Staggers.

Staggers said the bill would allow Congress more time to study the costs and benefits of each route.

The measure would require that the House and Senate approve the transportation secretary's final recommendations before they go into operation. The recommendations are due by next Dec. 31.

The House bill would give Amtrak $618 million in subsidies for the next fiscal year compared to the present $510 million. The measure also provides for $130 million in capital improvements.

A Senate bill would authorize $510 million for Amtrak and $120 million in capital improvements.

The differences may eventually be settled in a House-Senate conference committee.

Every day the front page of almost any newspaper tells the story. Declining petroleum reserves. Coal problems. Rising inflation. The threat of mandatory energy cutbacks. Billions of American dollars spent on foreign oil.

It's obvious the energy crisis isn't going away. If anything, it's getting worse. That's why it's so important that we all save energy in every way possible.

So read our reminder notes. If they can help you conserve this summer, cut them out and put them up around your house. These are the things you can do to help save energy and keep your electric bill in line.

What's Vepco doing to help?

Among other things, our nuclear units are providing the lowest cost energy available in our area. And every kilowatt-hour of electricity they generate helps us save on the more expensive coal and oil that would otherwise have been used. As part of our balanced mix of generation, nuclear power is seeing us all through some tough times.

Together we'll make it through this energy situation. If you help conserve, and if Vepco can continue to build a balanced power supply, neither of us will be wasting our energy.

Vepco

America is a powerful idea. Let's keep it that way.
