Hunt Airs New Budget Proposals

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A proposal for spending $279 million in extra state money, released today by Gov. Jim Hunt, calls for a 6 percent pay increase for teachers and state employees, beginning construction on the planned veterinary medicine school, and a new building for legislators.

The proposal, for changes in the 1978-1979 state budget is the recommendation of Hunt and the Advisory Budget Commission on spending revenues above the amount counted on by the General Assembly when it approved a biennial budget last year.

The budget would spend $92 million on capital improvements — meaning construction of buildings would amount to 4.9 percent of the state budget, the largest percentage since 1974.

Cost-of-living salary increases for teachers and state workers would cost $104.6 million and would come from $262 million added to the general fund.

Another $16.9 million is counted on in the highway fund, with $12 million of that for pay increases to workers under its jurisdiction.

Among the general construction projects is $8.5 million for a new legislative building, to be built across the street from the current building in Raleigh and designed to provide state senators and representatives with larger offices.

The building — discussed last year by legislators but not included in the budget — won the endorsement of Hunt this year, but could prove a politically touchy issue for some legislators.

In a budget briefing earlier this week, Hunt was less than enthusiastic about the project.

"I think this is a deserving item at the appropriate time," Hunt said. "That's not an unreasonable item in the budget."

In all, the budget would create 769 new jobs, more than half of them teachers in the Department of Community Colleges.

Other major projects in the budget include:

— $17.5 million to be put in reserve for construction of a new medium security prison. Hunt said the site has not been selected, and the unit will house overflow from Central Prison, which will be replaced with money already appropriated.

— $7.28 million, to be put with $2 million already appropriated, for construction of phase one of the vet school at N.C. State University in Raleigh. The appropriation, if approved would signal the go-ahead for the controversial vet school, which is backed by the University of North Carolina Board of Governors but has never been directly debated on the General Assembly floor.

— $42 million for other university construction, including $10 million for upgrading the five predominantly black campuses, which UNC has promised to do in meeting federal desegregation guidelines. Another $5.8 million is budgeted for expansion of the UNC educational television network.

— $1.65 million for the North Carolina Zoological Park to continue construction of its African section. It would be combined with private donations and earlier appropriations to give the zoo $4.2 million over the biennium.

Hunt was to present the budget today to a special meeting of the chairmen of House and Senate appropriations committees and their subcommittee leaders. It will not come as a surprise to most, however, as 11 of the 13 budget commission members are legislators.

Budget analysts say the large amount of new construction is a hedge against a future recession or economic slowdown. Money spent on continuing operations — such as salaries or new state programs — almost always is continued in following years, while capital improvements are one-shot expenses.

"This is a year when we need to put in a lot of capital expenditures," Hunt said. "It's fiscally responsible to do so."

State budget analysts have predicted a continuation of moderate economic growth through the middle part of this year, to be followed by a slowdown through the end of 1979. The growth rate is projected at 3.9 percent for 1978-79, compared with 4.7 percent this year.

New items in the budget that would have to be carried on in future years include $42.1 million in state, local and federal funds to cover increased Medicaid costs. Dental benefits, eliminated by the General Assembly last year, would be re-instated.

Other items include:

— $4.5 million for remedial education for students who fail state competency tests.

— $2.6 million to reduce teacher work loads in junior high schools.

— $3.7 million to reduce teacher-student ratios in community colleges.

—$2.2 million to increase state grants to private college students from $300 to $400 per student.

— $850,000 for legal defense of indigents in capital cases.

— $150,000 to plan for the proposed N.C. High School for Science and Mathematics.

The bulk of highway fund increases will go to pay raises for highway workers and to pay interest on 1977 highway bonds. No money is provided to step up road construction.

Dominican Army Halts Vote Count

By ELOY O. AGUILAR
Associated Press Writer

SANTO DOMINGO, Dominican Republic (AP) — The Dominican army stepped in and halted the vote count in the presidential election early today but denied rumors it had seized control of this Caribbean island nation. The army intervened in the electoral process after challenger Antonio Guzman took a big lead over incumbent President Joaquin Balaguer.

A military communique, broadcast by Dominican radio, said rumors of a coup were false and added, "the armed forces respect the constitution and order." The radio said it was issued by Lt. Gen. Juan Beauchamps Javier, who was identified as secretary of the armed forces. The army gave no reason for its intervention, however.

Military officers invaded the headquarters of the Central Electoral Board, stopped the broadcasting of election results and the vote count, and expelled everyone from the building.

Large numbers of troops were in the streets as tension gripped Santo Domingo.

At the time, Guzman was leading Balaguer 326,076 votes to 218,073 in unofficial returns from the voting Tuesday. This included about one-third of the vote cast in the capital.

Guzman, the 67-year-old candidate of the Dominican Revolutionary Party, was clearly the winner in Santo Domingo and was leading in Santiago, the country's second city, and smaller urban centers throughout the country. But spokesmen for Balaguer's Reform Party kept claiming that a large rural vote for the president would offset Guzman's lead.

Salvador Jorge Blanco, the president of the PRD, called an urgent news conference after the army intervened.

The 70-year-old president was running for his fourth four-year term.

About 2 million of the country's 6 million people had been expected to cast ballots, and officials said the turnout was heavy.

Shooting broke out in Santo Domingo Tuesday night as the polls closed and two persons — a soldier and the mayor of a small town — were killed in incidents in the interior. Several persons were reported wounded and dozens were arrested.

Balaguer was first elected in 1966, after the civil war that followed the military overthrow of President Juan Bosch and the U.S. military intervention that ended the war. Bosch, who founded the PRD but broke with it to run Tuesday on a more leftist platform, was the first popularly elected president in the Dominican Republic after the 30-year dictatorship of Rafael Leonidas Trujillo, who was assassinated.

There were a total of eight presidential candidates, but the race was between Guzman, a 67-year-old landowner and former minister of agriculture, and the 70-year-old president.

Balaguer campaigned on his record of political stability and economic recovery and charged that the PRD would flirt with communism and socialism. Guzman accused him of allowing corruption during his 12 years in office and claimed economic recovery had not reached the masses, who had been hard hit by 20 percent unemployment and 16 percent inflation.

Continuing Rains Delay Planting On Area Farms

By REBECCA BUFFALOE
Reflector Staff Writer

Three Pitt county officials agree the heavy continuing rains have delayed and possibly hurt the area farmer.

David H. Smith, president of Pitt County Farm Bureau said, "Tobacco planting is way behind because the equipment gets stuck in the field."

"Corn yield is reduced one bushel per acre a day past May 1," Smith continued. "It could be a bad situation for tobacco and corn farmers if the weather doesn't clear up."

Leroy James, Pitt County Agricultural Extension chairman, agreed with Smith's views.

"Farmers can't get in the field, and tobacco plants are getting too large to plant," James stated. "The rain is also making the plants too yellow."

James feels the corn situation may be better if the next five to eight days are clear.

"Farmers need to apply nitrogen to the corn crops," said James. "However, the rain washes the nitrogen away."

"North Carolina has never had so much cold and rain. We need to have consecutive warm days, each over 55 degrees, to have an impact," according to James.

J. C. Galloway, Pitt County Farm Bureau state representative and state spokesman for the American Agricultural Movement, says most farmers are at least two weeks behind in transplanting tobacco plants to the fields.

"As people are finishing their planting, they're sharing left-over plants with their neighbors, and that's taking care of the tobacco plant shortage," he noted.

According to Galloway, officials have predicted there will be 30 percent less corn planted nationwide because of the general wet weather.

Recover Body Of Chaplin

LAUSANNE, Switzerland (AP) — The body of Charlie Chaplin, stolen from his village grave the night of March 2, has been recovered and police have arrested the two alleged thieves, a Pole and a Bulgarian, authorities said today.

The two men were arrested Tuesday after allegedly calling police demanding a ransom for the return of the comedian's remains, said Examining Magistrate Jean-Daniel Tenthorey.

He said the body was found near Villeneuve, a small town at the eastern tip of Lake Geneva about 10 miles east of Corsier-sur-Vevey, where Chaplin spent the last 25 years of his life and where he was buried last Dec. 27.

Tenthorey said the body was recovered early Wednesday morning. He said more than 50 police investigators took part in the final phase of the search. He did not say immediately whether other suspects were being sought.

Chaplin's oak coffin weighed 325 pounds, and detectives said it would have taken at least three strong men to drag it some 50 feet from its gravesite in the cemetery overlooking Lake Geneva before loading it into a small van.

Pathologist Contract Okayed By Trustees Of Pitt Hospital

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

A contract between Pitt Memorial Hospital and Pitt Pathologists Inc. was approved last night by the Hospital Board of Trustees.

This would separate the billing for professional services by the pathologists from the hospital, but the group would continue to use hospital facilities. The one-year contract calls for the hospital to pay the group $55,000 for managerial services and for the group to pay the hospital $110,000 for use of the facilities. The amount of bills to the patient should be about the same as before — they'll just be separated, Hospital Director Jack Richardson said. There are stipulations controlling the increasing of prices to patients, he indicated.

A contract with Pitt County Anesthesia Associates also was approved. This calls for the anesthesiologists to employ nurse anesthetists, instead of the hospital hiring them, so malpractice insurance can be more easily obtained for them — plus other benefits.

By a 10-six vote, a contract with Howell, Larson and Associates for long-range planning consultation was approved. Some trustees questioned whether this function, required for all hospitals now, should be done by the administrative staff instead of by a paid firm.

Approval was given for Wachovia Bank, the low bidder, to finance the loan for construction of a parking lot at the hospital. The interest rate offered by this bank is five percent.

It was reported that word came late Tuesday afternoon that Tom Bennett of Morehead City has been appointed a trustee. He replaces Gretchen Deichmann, who resigned last month.

Mildred Indorf questioned whether a trustee should not be a member of the hospital's cost containment committee. The chairman, Henry Leslie, agreed that this should be the case.

A letter of appreciation from Mrs. June Dystra of Greenville, recently a hospital patient, was read and gratefully accepted.

Trustees were urged to attend a Health Services Agency workshop to be held in Williamston the afternoon and evening of July 19.

HANDICAPPED PARKING VIOLATED

This is Handicapped Week, I understand, and I would like for the Greenville Police to more nearly enforce the handicapped parking laws of this state. Also, I would like to appeal to the public to respect these few designated parking places for the handicapped. I have rheumatoid arthritis and walking is painful. Yet I work for a living and reserve my evenings for rest so I can work the next day. I appreciate so much all the merchants who have designated certain close-to-the-door spots for handicapped parking and would like to be able to use them. Yet, time after time, I see cars not displaying the license plates denoting a handicapped driver nor a placard denoting a handicapped passenger parked in these places. A. G.

Greenville Police Chief Glenn Cannon said that his department has the authority to enforce the law prohibiting the parking of a car not displaying either a license plate or a placard marked "handicapped" in both public and private lots. He said the fine is $10 for conviction and he urges the public to have enough self-respect not to use these places unless warranted.

Rescued Most Of Americans

WASHINGTON (AP) — Helicopters and a convoy of trucks rescued most of the Americans endangered by fighting in Zaire's Shaba province today, the State Department said. But 11 Americans were left in the combat area.

Robert Holliday of the State Department said the rescue operation was mounted by Morrison-Knudsen, the Boise, Idaho firm which employed most of the Americans in the area of Kolwezi, a town which has been captured by rebels.

There were conflicting reports about how many Americans were evacuated.

Holliday said the department did not have all the details of the operation. He said the best information he had was that the remaining Americans have not been injured and are not being held captive.

However, a company spokesman, in a telephone call to the Associated Press in Washington early this morning from the Zaire capital of Kinshasa said three of the company's employees were missing.

Meanwhile, a Defense Department source said it is "highly unlikely" that U.S. Army paratroopers, now on alert, will be sent to Africa because "the situation seems to be sorting itself out."

Harriet M. Berry--A Woman Out Of Place

At a time in North Carolina history when a woman's "place" was still very much in the home, Harriet M. "Hattie" Berry was a woman out of place.

Because she was out of place — and insisted on staying there — Hattie Berry wrote a page in the state's history that is rivaled in significance by very few men and even fewer women.

In the foyer of the State Highway Building in Raleigh, a bronze plaque commemorates Miss Berry as "The Mother of Good Roads in North Carolina."

Hattie was an uncompromising and eminently practical advocate of good roads for North Carolina. She was never awed by the obstacles in her path or by the individuals who put them there. She moved with equal ease at the country crossroads in the halls of the General Assembly.

The early decades of the 20th century would bring North Carolina its reputation as the "Good Roads State."

Credit would go mostly to "Good Roads" governors and "farsighted legislators, but it was really Hattie Berry's triumph.

Harriet Morehead Berry was born in Hillsborough in 1877. After graduating from the State Normal and Industrial College (UNC-G) with a brilliant record, she taught school and in 1901, jointed the staff of the North Carolina Geological and Economic Survey. The survey, driven by its executive secretary, Joseph Hyde Pratt and Miss Berry, plunged wholeheartedly into the campaign for better roads.

Before the turn of the century, the state's transportation system was a hodge-podge of rail lines, inland waterways, Indian trails and deteriorating plank roads.

Decisions concerning transportation were governed by immediate needs rather than long-range goals. The planning that went into those decisions was local, or, at best, regional. The greatest hinderance to progress was sectionalism. The state was clearly divided between east and west on most major issues. Transportation was no exception.

State policy was to urge that individual counties meet their own roads needs. The concept of a statewide system existed only in the minds of a few visionary people.

When the N. C. Good Roads Association was formed in 1902, Miss Berry quickly became a force to be reckoned with. She pushed for establishment of a State Highway Commission and in 1915, helped draft the legislation that created that body.

When Pratt entered the Army in 1917, Miss Berry took charge of both the Geological Survey and the Good Roads Association.

Harriet M. Berry

In 1919, she personally drafted what amounted to radical legislation designed to establish and maintain a statewide highway system. Critics called the bill the "most drastic piece of legislation. . .ever. . .attempted" and said it was "too idealistic for North Carolina." The bill was defeated.

In the next two years, Miss Berry carried her campaign into 89 counties, organizing women and adding new names to the Good Roads Association roster. When it was suggested that a man replace her on the arduous campaign trail, she replied, "The weak shoulders of a woman have, for the past 15 years, carried this proposition, and I propose that the weak shoulders of a woman continue to carry it."

When Governor Morrison, in his inaugural address, suggested that the counties pay half the costs of building and maintaining the roads, Miss Berry reminded him that the Democratic Party platform, on which he had been elected, called the state to build the roads. Miss Berry knew the wording of the platform. She had written it the previous year. The governor complained publicly, "If it hadn't been been for that waspish woman, I could have had my way."

When the bill was reintroduced in the 1921 General Assembly, its passage was a foregone conclusion. Still, Miss Hattie was taking no chances. During the debate on the measure, she occupied a seat next to the speaker to answer any lingering questions.

The Highway Act of 1921 was approved. It provided that the state "lay out, take over, establish and construct, and assume control of approximately 5,500 miles of hard- surfaced and dependable highways running to all county seats and to all principal towns, state parks and principal state institutions and linking up with the highways of adjoining states and with national highways. . ."

The expense of construction and repair was to be borne by the state relieving "the counties and cities and towns . . .of this burden." The North Carolina Highway System was born and Miss Berry's dream would become a reality.

Unfortunately, Miss Hattie's drive, her tenacity, her willingness to "slug it out in the trenches," her total commitment to the "good roads" movement, had created enemies.

In 1921, the year of her greatest triumph, Miss Berry was replaced in her post with the Geological Survey. She would return later to help organize credit unions and savings and loan associations across the state, but N. C. roads remained a dominant interest.

She retired in 1937 and died in 1940.

The bronze plaque is a fitting memorial to Harriet Berry. Her real monument, however, is the N. C. highway system, 75,000 miles, the largest state maintained highway system in the nation.

Girlfriend Needs Good Counseling

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1978 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc

DEAR ABBY: I have been going steady for a year with a girl I'll call "Joan," but there is another girl I like better. I don't want to hurt Joan's feelings, but I would like to drop her so I can openly date this other girl that I'm seeing secretly on the side.

Joan is a very nervous girl, and whenever I've even hinted about cooling our relationship, she gets sick. I would appreciate any help you can give me. I am 23 and Joan is 21.

STUCK IN BEVERLY HILLS

DEAR STUCK: I feel sorry for Joan, but I feel sorrier for you if you continue the relationship only because you lack the courage to cool it.

Level with her, gently, but honestly. She may get sick, but she'll survive. And don't stall, or you may find yourself permanently stuck with a woman who "gets sick" whenever she doesn't get her own way. (P.S. Joan needs counseling, and I hope she realizes it.)

DEAR ABBY: A few months ago I discovered that my husband of 16 years was having a torrid affair with a young divorced woman in his office. We agreed to make a serious effort to restore our marriage for the sake of our children.

The young woman agreed to quit her job, but so far she is still working for my husband. He isn't even looking for a replacement, and I will not feel secure as long as they are in daily contact. Human nature being what it is, it would be so easy for them to re-establish the old relationship.

What do you think, Abby? I'm trying to be mature and trusting, but I still feel . . .

THREATENED IN CHICAGO

DEAR THREATENED: No matter how pure your husband's intentions, as long as his current heartthrob remains in his office, the embers are still smoldering.

Tell him that you do not expect superhuman restraint from mere mortals, and if he is sincere in his efforts to restore your marriage, he will send her on her way immediately, with helpful references.

DEAR ABBY: Isn't it true that if two people dance well together it means they are "in tune" and "meant for each other"?

I heard somewhere that if a boy and girl dance well together, they will probably have other things in common and will most likely have a successful marriage. Please confirm this.

LILA IN GAINESVILLE

DEAR LILA: When two people dance well together, it means only one thing. They dance well together. Believe me, it means nothing else. If you are using dancing as a basis for compatibility in marriage, forget it.

CONFIDENTIAL TO BOB B.: No one said it better than Benjamin Franklin: "If a man empties his purse into his head, no man can take it away from him. An investment in knowledge always pays the best interest." Please, hang in there and get your degree.

Who said the teen years are the happiest? For Abby's new booklet "What Teenagers Want to Know," write Abby: 132 Lasky Dr., Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212. Enclose $1 and a long, stamped (24 cents), self-addressed envelope, please.

Strawberry Freeze Pleases

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

No dessert we have made this spring has pleased our tasters more than Strawberry Freeze. Concocted with fresh strawberries, sugar syrup, egg yolks and half-and-half or light cream, it's lighter than old-fashioned strawberry ice cream. Because it's not overly sweet, the true flavor of the berry comes through. Really refreshing! And it's a marvelous candy-pink color.

This recipe was adapted from one in a delightful small cookbook called "Strawberries" by Maggie Waldron with charming drawings by Rik Olson (101 Productions). Years ago, when Maggie Waldron worked under the late Helen McCully in the food department at McCalls, she started creating fine recipes and she's gone right on doing so. Since those magazine days she's had a varied career in the food field, including gaining a diploma from La Varenne, the eminent new cooking school in Paris, France. It's no wonder her book has some welcome surprises.

For example, there's a chapter called "Les Cremes des Cremes." This was included because, as Waldron says, "We tend to think of strawberries and cream in their simple, pristine glory. But there is a whole family of creams — pale, soft, untroubled — that rise to any occasion with strawberries." More than a dozen recipes illustrate Waldron's point. Preserves and other breakfast fare, salads, compotes, frozen drinks and desserts are treated in other chapters.

STRAWBERRY FREEZE

2 pint baskets (4 cups) fresh ripe strawberries
1 tablespoon lemon juice
1 cup sugar
½ cup water
3 egg yolks
2 cups half-and-half or light cream

Rinse the strawberries, hull, mash coarsely; stir in the lemon juice; chill.

In a 1½-quart saucepan over low heat, stir together the sugar and water until the sugar dissolves. Increase the heat and bring to a boil; boil gently until the syrup spins a 2-inch thread when dropped from a fork or spoon (230 degrees on a candy thermometer) — about 20 to 25 minutes.

Shortly before the syrup is ready, in a medium bowl with an electric mixer at high speed, beat the egg yolks until thick and ivory color.

Beat the hot syrup, at high speed, into the egg yolks. Continue beating until cool and thickened — about 5 minutes. Stir in the half-and-half and the chilled strawberry mixture. Chill.

Freeze in a 2-quart churn-freezer, following manufacturer's directions.

Makes about 1½ quarts.

How's The Weather?

WEATHER FORECAST — Rain is forecast today from the northern and western Plains to northern Texas. Showers are expected from Texas along the Gulf states to northern Florida. Rain is also due for the Northeast. Temperatures will be cool over much of the nation with a band of mild temperatures from southern California to the Gulf. (AP Laserphoto Map)

By The Associated Press

Warmer, drier air is on the way to North Carolina, bringing sunshine and warmer temperatures to the state, according to the National Weather Service.

A cold pocket of low pressure, centered over the mid-Atlantic states, is moving slowly northeast. Drier air will begin moving across most of the state today.

Only a few light showers were observed in the mountain and northern counties yesterday, with less than one-tenth of precipitation reported in the mountains. Temperatures yesterday were as much as 10 degrees warmer than Monday but still below seasonal normals. Wilmington reported in with 74 degrees, while at Hickory and Greensboro, the highest temperatures were 63. The mountain region was cooler, with 51 degrees at Boone and 59 degrees in Hendersonville. Grandfather Mountain had a chilly 41 degrees for an afternoon high temperature.

Ingram Finances Running Low

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Recent campaign reports filed with the Federal Election Commission show U.S. Senatorial candidate John Ingram has raised about $27,000 during his campaign through April 17.

And according to reports in The Charlotte News Tuesday, all but about $1,400 of the money is already gone — spent on the May 2 primary.

Ingram faces former Charlotte Banker Luther Hodges Jr. in the May 30 primary runoff. The two were top vote getters in the first primary but neither had the necessary majority to take the Democratic nomination.

Federal Election reports from the Hodges' campaign show he has raised about $800,000 thus far compared to Ingram's $27,000. And Republican Sen. Jesse Helms, who will be challenged by the runoff winner in November, has collected more than $3.1 million during the same time.

According to campaign reports, $1,000 of the $26,968 Ingram had collected through April 27 came from outside the state.

A total of $17,968 came in contributions of more than $100; and a total of $9,663 came in contributions of less than $100, according to the reports.

Despite being outspent by Hodges, political analysts said Ingram was able to capitalize in the primary on publicity and name recognition from his frequent battles with the insurance industry.

Ingram's campaign reports show his biggest single group of financial backers are insurance agents and executives.

Together, they have given $3,600 to his campaign, about 13 per cent of his total contributions.

His largest gift has been $1,000 from Bernard Rapoport, board chairman of American Income Life Insurance Co. of Waco, Tex., according to the reports. That contribution is Ingram's only out-of-state money reported.

North Carolina insurance agents and executives have contributed $2,600, reports show. Of that, $500 has come from a group of executives with Home Security Life Insurance Co. in Durham, and $300 from W.C. Shackelford, President of Interstate Insurance Co. of Hookerton.

The rest has come from independent agents scattered across the state.

The only other major bloc of contributors to Ingram has been bail bondsmen, who are also regulated by the insurance commissioner. Together, they have contributed $1,400.

Jokes Greet Build-Up Of Czech Cosmonaut

By ROBERT H. REID
Associated Press Writer

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia (AP) — The government put on a nationwide campaign to build up Czechoslovakia's first spaceman, Vladimir Remek, but it backfired. Remek jokes are the new fad.

The butt of most of the humor is the Soviet Union, not the 29-year-old cosmonaut it sent into space March 2 with veteran Russian cosmonaut Alexei Gubarev.

A sample: Why didn't the Soviets send up two Czechoslovak cosmonauts? Because they would have landed in West Germany.

Another: Remek, who is the son of Deputy Defense Minister Josef Remek, was asked why he returned to earth with red hands.

"Well, up in the spacecraft it was always, 'Don't touch this! Don't play with that!" he replied, making a slapping motion.

Still another jibes at the constant news media coverage: "What's happened to Remek? I haven't heard about him in almost five minutes!"

Remek, the first man in space who wasn't a Soviet citizen or an American, and Gubarev spent a week in space while two other Soviet cosmonauts were setting a new endurance record. Remek and the three Soviet spacemen arrived in Prague April 27 for a tour of the country.

Thousands of posters appeared in Prague shops showing the balding, round-faced Remek alongside Gubarev and the two Soviet reccord breakers. Giant posters of the four spacemen went up to Prague's medieval town hall. Remek was promoted to major.

Remek was born in the southern city of Ceske Budejovice. His father is Slovak, his mother Czech. After graduating from high school in Caslav, he studied at the air force college in the eastern city of Kosice, was commissioned an officer and joined the Communist Party.

In 1972 he enrolled in a four-year training course at the Yuri Gagarin Military Air Academy in the Soviet Union. Following completion of the course, he and Maj. Oldrich Pelcak, were chosen as Czechoslovakia's two representatives in a program of space flight training for the Soviet Union's East European allies.

Must Continue To Do Best

Gov. Hunt told UNC-Chapel Hill graduates Sunday that university achievements stand as proof that North Carolina has not become "benighted and backward."

"You graduate at a time when North Carolina's hard earned and priceless reputation as a progressive state is being brought into some question.

"But I don't accept any theory that North Carolina has been backsliding into a climate of racism, injustice and indifference to the needs of her people. And I think that those who propound this theory have too little understanding of the recent history of our state and too little faith in the good sense and the good will of the people of North Carolina."

There is truly no reason why North Carolina should accept an image of doing too little in the field of race relations, particularly when those who are doing the image making are accomplishing even less.

Our state should continue to do all it can to assure that every citizen has equal opportunity. If we do this, then we can withstand whatever criticism—however misguided and vindictive it may be — and go on to build a better state for all of us.

Should Try To Curb Military Build-Up

The Carter administration won a victory with the 54-44 Senate vote upholding the sale of warplanes to Saudi Arabia and Egypt. The package also includes plane sales to Israel.

Thus in any future outbreak of war in the Middle East, American arms may be used on both sides.

There can be little doubt that the plane sales to Saudi Arabia are related to our dependence on that country for extensive oil supplies.

U. S. relations in the Middle East are complicated, indeed, in a complicated part of the world. Perhaps this deal is in the best interest of our country, but first of all we should be looking for ways to reduce the military build-up in the Middle East rather than help it along.

THIS AFTERNOON

Wants Public To Decide

By Bill Noblitt

RALEIGH — A major crime is committed in North Carolina every two minutes and 32 seconds.

In 15 years the rate for serious crimes has more than doubled, and while cities have the highest crime rate, it is growing faster in the suburbs and in rural areas now.

We have "a terribly long way to go before we can effectively fight crime in North Carolina. There are no easy answers, says J. Phil Carlton, secretary of the Department of Crime control and Public Safety.

One thing is clear to Carlton, however: it will take considerable public pressure demanding more effective law enforcement and a more successful criminal justice system to produce change.

"I believe that the answer must come from the people. I believe that it is the responsibility of those of us in public office to make available the data and see that the issues are debated in the public forum ... Once the people know the facts, I believe they will let us know just what they want us to do in the fight against crime."

No Answers

Carlton confesses that the answers are not readily available, and even after numerous studies and reports, dozens of seminars and millions in grants and research projects, crime continues to increase.

"Politicians respond to the popular notion of their particular time, and legislators simply do not have the available facts ... The answer must come from the people."

A former judge who now heads the state's first centralized crime agency, Carlton is launching a program of public involvement in the decision-making process.

A series of 37 public hearings are being set up to give private citizens a chance to express their views. Plans call for disclosure of a wealth of information to help in that process.

The agency also will push for organization of a task force in each of the state's 100 counties to monitor the courts and local law enforcement "so our citizens can see for themselves just what kind of crimes are being committed and what victims are having to suffer because of it. I believe the results will be suprising and most beneficial," Carlton says.

BILL NOBLITT

The object is to put the fight against crime on a more sophisticated, businesslike footing.

"Even rank amateurs have the benefit of criminal technology because it is just not hard to come by ... it is even readily accessible simply by watching television," Carlton believes. The result is sophisticated, efficient, well-planned crime while law enforcement tries to catch up.

Catch Up

But even as law enforcement improves, so do the criminals who study the market for changes, adapting to societal change.

"We now have to study, plan, evaluate, innovate and do the best we can not only to catch up but to try and get ahead," says Carlton.

Much of Carlton's remarks prepared for use in public appearances around the state concentrate on what he terms the disturbing development that young people commit a disproportionately large share of the serious crimes, while being treated lightly in the juvenile courts. Adult offenders, meanwhile, feel a heavier hand of the law at a time when they are beginning to slack off on criminal activity.

In sum, he is saying, "the best evidence now available suggests strongly that young people, especially chronic offenders, commit a far larger proportion of serious crimes than arrest reports have previously led us to believe; that the rate at which they commit these crimes declines as they get older, but that the chances of being arrested, convicted and incarcerated are higher not when they are young, active offenders, but when they are older and less active."

"First, the GOOD NEWS ... at least it ain't been recalled by the factory ... yet."

Dentist Next In Line?

By WALTER R. MEARS
AP Special Correspondent

WASHINGTON (AP) — It may be time for the dentists to brace themselves. They could be next on President Carter's hit list.

Since his friends, at least in the public opinion polls, appear to be diminishing in number, Carter seems to have gone on the prowl for some enemies.

Nothing personal and, for that matter, not much new — his lectures to lawyers and doctors about their professions and the fees they charge are simply an extension of his familiar complaint about the special interests he blames for assorted woes.

The president made a point of saying that his complaints were with professional associations, not individual lawyers or physicians.

But so far, he has not prodded the dentists, although inflation monitor Barry Bosworth mentioned them along with the legal and medical professions as a target for administration efforts to hold down fees.

One administration aide who, understandably, preferred to remain anonymous, said Carter has sound reasons for sparing the dentists: his photogenic teeth. Without them, the trademark smile would be a disaster.

"Look at it this way," this fellow said. "Everything he is, he owes to modern American dentistry."

Well, maybe not everything.

Teeth aside, Carter seems to be missing some likely targets for lectures in the new phase of his presidency, advertised by his spokesman as being somewhat firmer than has been the case.

While he chewed out lawyers and doctors, more people talk about the prices they've had to pay the plumber.

Ask around and you'll find a dozen stories about the guy who came in to unclog the drain, spent 10 minutes at it and left a bill for $40.

But then, a slap at the plumbers would not be without drawbacks. Carter is still trying to get George Meany to

Averell Harriman Is OK

WASHINGTON — I received a call the other day from the State Department saying they were doing a security check on Ambassador Averell Harriman, who is being considered for a five-week appointment as a member of the U.N. Conference on Disarmament. Mr. Harriman served seven Presidents in every sensitive position this country has ever dealt with but still had to be cleared by State for this job.

At first I thought it was a joke so I called back to see if they were serious. It turned out they were. The man in charge was not there so I never had an opportunity to give my opinion as to whether Mr. Harriman was a loyal American or not. The next day I went out of town so I couldn't get back to the security man, but the time lag got me to thinking.

Should I go out on a limb and say that as far as I know Harriman could be trusted, or waffle on the issue in case there was a skeleton in his closet that I didn't know about? If I vouched for the former governor of New York and they suddenly found a bunch of microfilms in his pumpkin patch, it could hurt me when it was my turn to be considered for an ambassadorship to a UNESCO conference in Paris.

If you look carefully at Mr. Harriman's record there is a lot there to make you suspicious. During World War II he was ambassador to the Soviet Union and knew Josef Stalin personally. That alone should not compromise somebody, but later he also turned up at Yalta with Roosevelt, Churchill and Stalin.

ART BUCHWALD

Then there was the Marshall Plan which Harriman headed up right after the war. It's true he did get Europe back on its feet, but this easily could have been his cover for keeping up his contacts with many socialists who were vying for power at that time.

Money never seemed to be a problem as far as Harriman was concerned. It's true his father left him a small trust fund of over $100 million, but that certainly doesn't explain the lavish dinner parties he threw in Paris. There had to be money coming from somewhere else. I never found out where.

I lost track of Harriman when he became governor of New York State, though I heard through the grapevine that he was still keeping up his relationships with the Soviet leaders.

Then it was back to Washington where he was involved in working out a deal in Laos and becoming a close advisor to President Kennedy, particularly in his dealings with Khrushchev. At the time none of us thought anything of it, but when I looked back on it the pieces of the puzzle started to fall into place. Harriman was for some kind of peaceful coexistence with the Russians, arguing that war was unthinkable, which we now

40 Years Ago Today

May 17, 1938

At least seven persons were killed and scores were injured today in a rear-end crash between two crowded subway trains, creating a wild panic in the underground tunnel under Victoria embankment in London.

The wreck was the worst in the history of the London subway.

Some of the victims were trapped for hours in the wreckage after an east-bound tain smashed into the rear of another between the Busy Temple and Charing Cross station.

Forty firemen and policemen worked two and a half hours to extricate four passengers from the big red first and third class coaches.

Passengers told of the jarring impact of the crash followed by blinding showers of sparks in the pitch black tunnel.

Screaming women and blood spattered victims jostled in the darkness in a mad fight to escape through splintered windows.

Charing Cross station in the heart of London was turned into an emergency hospital.

THE INSIDE REPORT

The Successful General

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — Concern within defense circles over Air Force Gen. David Jones as the new chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff (JCS) was heightened last week when the Defense Nuclear Agency was quietly removed from study of the proposed U.S.Soviet nuclear test ban treaty.

The agency had advised that the treaty banning all underground explosions (favored by President Carter) can be violated by the Soviet Union without detection. If the agency is now cut out of the issue, the JCS will lose its independent source of technical information. Significantly, this could scarcely have happened without at least the acquiescence of JCS chairman Jones.

Decisions of this nature bother many fellow officers about Davy Jones. While nobody questions his executive competence, Jones is criticized for swallowing whole those Carter administration initiatives considered dubious elsewhere at the Pentagon. After failing to oppose such policies in private, he not only embraces but energetically applauds them in public.

Decisions to pull troops out of Korea, cancel the B-1 bomber, suspend neutron warhead production and now push a total nuclear test ban have caused deep dismay in the officer corps dramatized by the forced retirement from the Army of Maj. Gen. John K. Singlaub. But by vigorously supporting such proposals, Jones has reached the top.

Fervent cooperation by Jones did not begin with the Carter administration. As Air Force Chief of Staff in the Nixon-Ford administration, he stirred mixed emotions among his civilian superiors. While appreciative that Jones carried out orders with extraordinary expedition, Pentagon officials were troubled that he extended obedience to the point of no longer being his own man.

This tendency is reflected in a highly unusual message from Jones to Air Force commanders worldwide last Aug. 20, just 10 days after the United States and Panama agreed on the canal treaties. "The Air Force actively participated in the development of all defense-related aspects of the proposed treaties, and fully supports them," said Jones.

Air Force officers were surprised, many of them unpleasantly. They objected not to their chief's support of the President but to his proselytizing the officer corps on an issue about which many

Other Editors Say It's Dead Wrong

(Shelby Daily Star)

The Legislative Governmental Operations Commission — not the least member of which is Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green — has not only been meeting in private, but has been enforcing its secrecy with guards.

The question is: Why?

And that can be put into two categories: Why secrecy when the trend is for the public to demand openness as well as performance from its public officials? And why secrecy at all, unless Mr. Green and the other legislative powers-to-be have some nefarious scheme up their sleeves to spring on an uninformed public?

Either way, of course, it's dead wrong.

It's wrong because whatever the legislators do on taxpayers' time in taxpayers' offices should be shouted from the rooftops, not hidden in secret. It's wrong because if the legislators and Mr. Green, who desperately wants to be governor, are hatching some legislation they are ruining credibility.

Indeed, Mr. Green's participation in such secrecy, as well as his attitude on the matter, suggests one reason why he has not become governor and perhaps why he should not. To use a legislative guard to assure the secrecy is the height of autocracy; it compounds the felony.

Further, the secrecy by the lieutenant governor and the legislative leaders sets a poor example for the public's right to know. And the secrecy suggests further machinations of gubernatorial power, based primarily on Lt. Gov. Green's disdain for Governor Hunt. That feeling is mutual, we might add.

Give us a tobacco farmer like Lt. Gov. Green, and we'll show you that where there's a smokefilled room, there's a fire about to burn the taxpayers.

Public Forum

To the editor:

I am very concerned about the apparent treatment of John Schofield. I do not know the quality or quantity of Mr. Schofield's work. I have attended several sessions of the Planning and Zoning Committee and, at these times, it has seemed to me that he has tried to carry out the plans as set forth by the Planning and Zoning Board and has tried to look at such planning from a long-term viewpoint, rather than from the immediate need and request.

If Mr. Schofield has not been efficient in his job, I would concur with his being released. However, I do question the manner in which he received his orders to be fired. I feel that it is important that the public understand why he was fired so spontaneously and for what reasons. Planning for the growth of Greenville is a very important job. I do not feel that it should be done in a haphazard way or in any other way except to make this as pleasant and convenient town in which to live as possible.

Strength For Today

A NEW MEANING

Is heaven above and hell beneath? In the past many Christians have speculated over the location of these two destinations toward one of which everyone will go.

But actually, what heaven and hell are is much more important than where they are. Expressed most simply, heaven and hell are what you happen to be doing right where you happen to be.

This does not mean that the only heaven or hell we ever experience are right here on earth, but it does mean that both heaven and hell begin on earth. The whole testimony of the Word of God is that heaven and hell are respectively blessed and horrifying realities, the existence of which every living soul must confront. But the only person who ever goes to heaven is the person who has started living a heavenly life here on earth. And we can be sure that those who go to hell were living a life of sin, doubt, and faithlessness while they moved among their fellows.

His Financial Self-Help Book

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — Craig Hall is a modest-appearing, low-key, deliberate author with a full command of his subject matter.

Last year he took a rare vacation, if that is what it may be called, and completed the manuscript for a financial self-help book. At the time he was worth only $6 million.

In the year it took to edit and produce the book, "The Real Estate Turnaround," just published by Prentice-Hall, the writer's assets grew. He's now worth more than $10 million, he said in an interview.

Craig Hall, chief executive officer of 12 corporations, general partner in $70 million of profitable rental properties, joint venturer with Time Inc. in a national racquetball chain, is 27 years old.

And one of the most respected real estate men in the country.

"I have no magic that others don't have; a lot of people have the same ability," he said the other day. He didn't smile; he meant it. "I wrote the book because I wanted to help those who think the same way I did and are unsure of opportunities."

Opportunity for Hall is the presence of poorly managed properties he can acquire and turn into profitable operations, raising both the tenants' living conditions and the new owners assets.

"Hall buys lemons and makes lemonade," said an associate, only partly in jest. Hall actually called his biggest acquisition, a 1,145-apartment complex about 30 miles from Detroit, "Lemontree."

He defines a good prospect for turnaround as a property which meets four essential conditions:

—It is producing substantially less income than warranted by its cost, size and other characteristics.

—The location is fundamentally good.

—The construction is basically sound.

—The owner is ready to admit the financial problems of the property, at least to himself.

When Hall first considered purchasing Lemontree, then called Knob-on-the Lake, bankruptcy seemed imminent, but Hall determined that the construction was superior and its features promotable.

He didn't just acquire and hope. As always, he went into the deal after developing a MAP, or management action plan. He had determined in advance just what was possible. He was ready to move.

He talked creditors out of foreclosing. As always, he surveyed tenants to determine needs, and he catered to them. He improved security. He advertised Lemontree's amenities, such as fireplaces and a golf course.

Appreciative tenants agreed to higher rents in exchange for superior service, a tenant characteristic Hall believes is almost universal. In 17 months occupancy rose to 97 percent from 58 percent.

Responsibility On The Boards

INTERSTATE SECURITIES CORP.

There has been much discussion recently about the competency and responsibility of corporate board members. Two examples come to mind: first, the recent proxy fight over the board at Kennecott Copper. A group of shareholders led by Chairman T. Roland Berner of Curtiss-Wright Corp. proposed an entirely new slate of directors at Kennecott's recent annual meeting, citing the present board's and management's mishandling of the company. Second, the board of Citizens and Southern National Bank of Georgia professed to be largely uninformed about the bank's recent problems.

Shareholders are looking to board members to be more active representatives for their interests in the management of corporations. One of the most sensitive areas where board members might have some success in doing this is the Audit Committee of the board. A recent article in "Forbes" discussed the importance of this committee's function and the ability of the typical board member to serve effectively on it. In 1967, less than 25 percent of large publicly-held companies had audit committees. Now about 90 percent of all companies on the New York Stock Exchange have them and the other 10 percent will be required to follow suit by June, 1978.

The Audit Committee's duties are wide, varied, and growing. For instance, the committee should be the group that outside auditors come to if they uncover questionable practices by management. In addition, board Audit Committees should the overall audit plan and the company's financial statements. There is some question as to whether the typical board member has the technical expertise to do this effectively and avoid shareholders suits brought over unsound decisions by management. Abraham Nad, publisher of the monthly newsletter "Directorship," states, as quoted in "Forbes," "A director is responsible for taking action on things he knows about or should have known about." In other words, the director himself may be liable in shareholder suits.

There are several plans for making directors more effective and informed. One is to require that one member of the Audit Committee, be a CPA. Another is the effort by individual companies and directors to see that board members better understand what is going on in the corporation. This is being accomplished in some instances through seminars for directors scheduled outside the regular board meetings. Board members themselves are beginning to take a more active part in learning about the operations of the company where they serve. In the long run, these efforts should mean better run companies and boards which are more responsible to shareholders.

know was the straight Commie line.

As if that weren't enough, Harriman was sent by President Johnson to meet with the North Vietnamese and arrange a peace conference in Paris. He sold out this country's interests by insisting on a round table instead of a square table, which many people still swear wrecked the talks.

Secretary of State Cy Vance worked with Harriman in Paris, never realizing that Harriman pushed for the round table on direct orders from people who felt a square table would put the United States at a great advantage.

The more I thought about it, the more I decided that I couldn't give the ambassador a clean bill of health. I was eager to get back to the State Department security people and tell them of my suspicions, but by the time I returned from my trip there was a message that Harriman had already been cleared.

Apparently all they asked of his neighbors was if Mr. Harriman drank and whether they knew anything about his sex life. He came out okay on both counts, but what do neighbors know? In 1922, when he was playing polo, there was this girl who lived in Oyster Bay and . . . .

harbored misgivings. Especially unsettling was the message's last paragraph: "It is important that our personnel, particularly our senior people, understand our support for the proposed treaties."

Jones has consistently followed the Carter line. He tamped down Air Force resentment about the B-1 cancellation. He has not reflected the general concern by uniformed officers over the administration's course on strategic arms limitation talks (SALT). When other members of the Joint Chiefs were furious about being misrepresented on SALT, Jones wrote a letter smoothing over the trouble.

No wonder, then, that Mr. Carter passed over more independently minded Army and Navy candidates and picked the second straight Air Force general to head the Joint Chiefs. Adm. James Holloway, Chief of Naval Operations, once favored to be the new JCS chairman, has been fighting the President's reduced shipbuilding.

Jones privately has expressed worry about Mr. Carter's proposed total nuclear test ban. But fellow officers doubt he will do anything about it. Such doubts were reinforced by last week's close-out of the Defense Nuclear Agency.

The overriding question involves proper conduct by professional military men in an administration whose policies they believe are wrong.

After Gen. Singlaub was relieved from command in Korea a year ago following his criticism of the troop pullout, President Carter wrote a critical Sen. Orrin Hatch of Utah that "we will not stifle dissent" from "military experts." When Singlaub resigned under pressure recently after additional criticism of Carter policies, Hatch wrote Mr. Carter that "the administration seems to be so thin-skinned about its controversial policies that it must in fact resort to 'stifling' the military leaders of this nation."

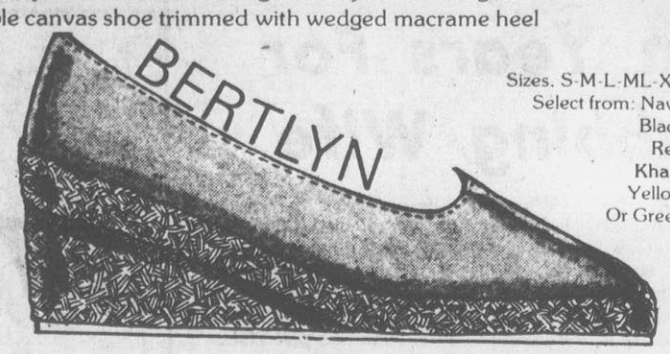

Jones has informed congressional critics that if he ever cannot support the administration's policies, he will take off his uniform and go to the public. That begs the question, however, of what he does and says in uniform without going to Singlaub's extreme.

Meantime, the fate of Davy Jones and John Singlaub, born one day apart nearly 57 years ago, teaches an inescapable lesson to ambitious young officers. Which route leads to early retirement and which route leads to supreme career success is clearly marked.

Benefit Air Show Will Be Staged On Sunday

A free to the public benefit air show, being held in conjunction with National Transportation Week (May 14-20) and sponsored by ALFA Aviation, will be held Sunday afternoon, May 21, at the Pitt-Greenville Airport.

Half a dozen flight connected events are to be seen in the ALFA Aviation Air Show, which will begin at 1 p.m. with the final event scheduled to start at 4 p.m.

The show opens with a skydiving exhibition at 1, and there is also the added attraction of airplane rides for spectators with rates for the ride established on the weight of the individual passenger — at two cents a pound.

At 1:45 p.m. a fly-by demonstration will be carried out by ALFA pilots; and at 2:15 p.m., there is to be an exhibition of radio-controlled airplanes.

A second skydiving exhibition is slated for 3 p.m., with an air aerobatics show set for 3:15 p.m.

The day's agenda of events will conclude with a final skydiving exhibition set for 4 p.m.

Parking will be provided in the Pitt County Fairgrounds, with shuttle buses provided to the ALFA facility. Airplane parking for those wishing to fly in will be provided by ALFA.

Other activities will include display of the Cougar aircraft, the Grumman American Corporation's new aircraft used by ALFA, and area corporate aircraft will be displayed.

In addition, The Petticoat Pilots, a local women's pilot organization, will be represented.

Refreshment stands will be set up to serve the public, and proceeds realized from the sale of refreshments will go to the local Heart Fund Association. ALFA Aviation, headquartered at the Pitt-Greenville Airport, is now five years old. Originally headquartered in Kinston with one Aerostar 601 plane and one pilot, Duane Eisenhauer, ALFA Aviation now employs over 20 full time personnel, including full and part-time pilots, mechanics, line service technicians, instructors and administrative personnel.

After more than a year of negotiations, ALFA entered into a lease with the Pitt-Greenville Airport Authority and began construction of its present 8,475 square foot maintenance hangar and administrative building. In March 1977, ALFA opened for business in Greenville.

Ten Years For Stabbing Wife

MONROE, N.C. (AP) — Atieh Elhawa, described as a man who worked two jobs and faithfully brought his paychecks home to his wife, was sentenced to 10 years in prison Tuesday for the stabbing death of his pregnant wife, Sandy.

The 28-year-old Jordanian, in a statement to authorities, said when his wife told him that she loved his father, Darius Elhawa, he stabbed her three times with a butcher knife in their mobile home Feb. 28.

His court-appointed attorney submitted a plea of guilty to second-degree murder after several prosecution witnesses had already testified.

"He loved her too much," Mrs. Marie Belk, the dead girl's mother testified Monday.

Mrs. Belk said her adopted daughter told Elhawa that his father was the father of her second baby. She said Elhawa had worked two jobs for more than two years and brought both checks straight home to his wife.

Union County Sheriff Frank Fowler testified he had known Elhawa for the pasts four years and had been asked on several occasions to talk with his wife about returning home to her husband.

"The court awarded custody of their daughter to the grandmother, Mrs. Marie Belk, after finding that the mother had abandoned the child, and a part of the court order was that Mrs. Elhawa was not to go about the home of her father-in-law," Fowler said.

"When we arrived at the scene of the stabbing, Elhawa was crying and said he loved his wife and didn't mean to kill her," Fowler said.

His attorney told the court that Elhawa had only a third-grade education and had been in this country since 1971.

Bee Gees Give Song To UNICEF

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The Bee Gees, who soared to the top of the pop record world with their "Saturday Night Fever" album, are donating a song to the United Nations Children's Fund.

"We hope this is only the beginning," said Bee Gee Robin Gibb, who joined brothers Maurice and Barry at a Tuesday news conference jammed with about 300 squealing teen-age fans.

The Australian group's contribution is the first to a new project called "Music for Unicef," which will be launched officially in January when the International Year of the Child begins. The Bee Gees also will participate in an internationally televised concert in January to benefit UNICEF.

agree with him on something, and the venerable leader of the AFL-CIO used to be a plumber.

The AFL-CIO chief said he wants to cooperate on inflation control, but that he is not going to ask unions to voluntarily hold down wage demands when they negotiate contracts.

Perhaps other targets for presidential rebukes would be television repairmen or automobile mechanics. People are always griping about them.

Or politicians. They aren't very popular, as Carter demonstrated when he got his campaign start as a critic of the political establishment in general and the Washington establishment in particular.

Now Carter and his people are the Washington establishment, or at least the most visible part of it.

Eunice Shriver Says Teddy Will Not Be Running

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — Sen. Edward Kennedy will not run for president in 1980 and will not separate from his wife, says his sister, Eunice Kennedy Shriver.

Mrs. Shriver, who arrived in the Colombian capital Tuesday for a three-day sports event for retarded children, said she had been told by her brother's wife, Joan, that the couple would not separate.

"There is no separation and there will be no separation," she said at a news conference. "I talked to Joan this morning on the telephone before coming here and she told me that."

There have been reports recently that the Kennedy marriage was foundering. Mrs. Kennedy has moved into an apartment in Boston, and the senator has been linked to skier Suzy Chaffee. All of the parties have denied the rumors of a Kennedy-Chaffee romance.

Chicago Dramatist Gives Lawyers Acting Lessons

TEACHES COURTROOM ACTING — Joseph Guastaferro, of DePaul University's School of Drama, appears in his office where he tells how he teaches lawyers to act properly in the courtroom. (AP Laserphoto)

SUE SHELLENBARGER
Associated Press Writer

CHICAGO (AP) — Most lawyers are bad actors likely to fail before juries who expect a Perry Mason to cajole them into a verdict, says a Chicago dramatist who gives acting lessons to attorneys.

Many suffer from "pure stage fright," said Joseph Guastaferro.

"Their hands get clammy, their legs shake. It's almost comical," he said. "If you worry about yourself like that, you're not going to be able to concentrate."

Guastaferro, 34, a teacher and director at DePaul University's Goodman School of Drama, gives private acting lessons to about 15 attorneys. He also works with several other actors at the Court Practice Institute, a Chicago organization that has offered seminars in various trial skills to about 900 lawyers in the last 4½ years.

Although diction, presence, projection and movement are critically important to success as a trial lawyer, many attorneys begin practicing law knowing almost nothing about them, Guastaferro said.

Arnie Saks, 28, a film director who coordinates the acting skills portion of the institute's program, said that many lawyers do a disservice to their clients by failing to inject feeling into their arguments.

"Say you have a case of a dog biting a mailman, and the mailman sues the owner of the house," Saks said. "The attorney is likely to feel that it's no big deal. But he can't show that feeling...We tell him to pretend that this dog bite case is the most important thing, perhaps that the dog bit off the mailman's leg."

Guastaferro teaches his students to use physical movement.

"A nervous lawyer frequently will pace the floor, and the rate and tempo of his own movement will add to the nervousness of the witnesses," Guastaferro said.

"Under cross-examination, if he wants the witness to flounder and flutter, he can pace the room," he said. "On the other hand, if it's his own witness, he might remain still, to make his witness look as good as possible to the jury."

While some question the relevance of acting to the practice of law, Guastaferro is not defensive. "I don't work miracles with people who don't know what they're about in the courtroom. They have to have the law already well under control," he said.

"There are people who have rejected my approach as outside the law, as having nothing to do with the pristine intellectual nature of their work. Fine. I'm just trying to help those who want to do a better job."

No Senate Bid By Geo. Wallace

By SCOTT SHEPARD
Associated Press Writer

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — George Corley Wallace, once a feisty symbol of segregationist resistance and four times a candidate for president, has ended his political career with a surprise announcement that he will not run for the U.S. Senate.

On Tuesday night in Mobile, after days of reflection at the gubernatorial retreat at nearby Gulf Shores, the Alabama governor told the Alabama League of Municipalities:

"Having thought all day yesterday, and last night and today ... I want to make this announcement to you. I've decided ... I will not be a candidate for the United States Senate.

"Although I feel I could win the U.S. Senate seat, my conclusion in the last few days is to retire," he concluded.

His stunned audience stood and applauded. The governor smiled slightly as he shook hands with well-wishers.

The announcement shocked even some of his closest aides for the 59-year-old Wallace had been considered the Democratic frontrunner in the race for the seat being vacated by Sen. John Sparkman.

The decision, assistant press aide Elvin Stanton said, means Wallace will retire from the political wars when his current term as chief executive ends next January. By law, he cannot succeed himself as governor a third straight time.

However, one person who refused to write his political obituary was his second wife, Cornelia, divorced from Wallace last year after a widely publicized marital dispute.

Mrs. Wallace said Tuesday night that her former husband was not "the George Wallace of old." But she added:

"Let's face it. This is a man who likes the roar of the crowd."

GEORGE WALLACE

During 16 years in state and national politics, Wallace was called savior, devil, reformer, bigot and buffoon. But he was never ignored.

Wallace burst onto the national political scene in 1963. In January he stood on the steps of the state Capitol to give his inaugural address, crying, "Segregation now! Segregation tomorrow! Segregation forever!"

In June, he stood in a schoolhouse door to block two black students from entering the University of Alabama.

He parlayed that defiance of a federal desegregation order into three terms as governor and runs for the presidency in 1964, 1968, 1972 and 1976. He became a symbol of Dixie-styled convervatism.

Wallace made his impact on the national political scene — he once campaigned on a vow to "shake the eye-teeth" of the bureaucrats in Washington — as a symbol of defiance: his own defiance of big government, the troubled parent's defiance of court-ordered school busing, the conservative voter's defiance of promises made by the two major political parties.

In 1968, running under the banner of the American Independent Party, he carried five states and won 46 electoral votes. He captured 13.5 percent of the popular vote, the largest showing by a third party candidate since 1924.

But while campaigning in 1972 at a Laurel, Md., shopping center, Wallace was cut down by a fusillade of bullets fired by Arthur Bremer. His wounds left him partially paralyzed and in constant pain.

It was the assassination attempt — "the shooting" as Wallace now calls it — that numbered his days as a factor in presidential politics.

Although confined to a wheelchair, Wallace made one last run for the presidency in 1976. By then, however, his "too much bureaucracy" theme had been pre-empted by another southerner, Jimmy Carter.

As his presidential hopes faded in 1976, Wallace came to realize the effect his paralysis had on "the faithful."

"All they see is the spokes on my wheelchair," he complained. "You've got a man standing up saying, 'Big government is eating you up.' And you got a man in a wheelchair, all humped over, saying the same thing. It's hard to beat."

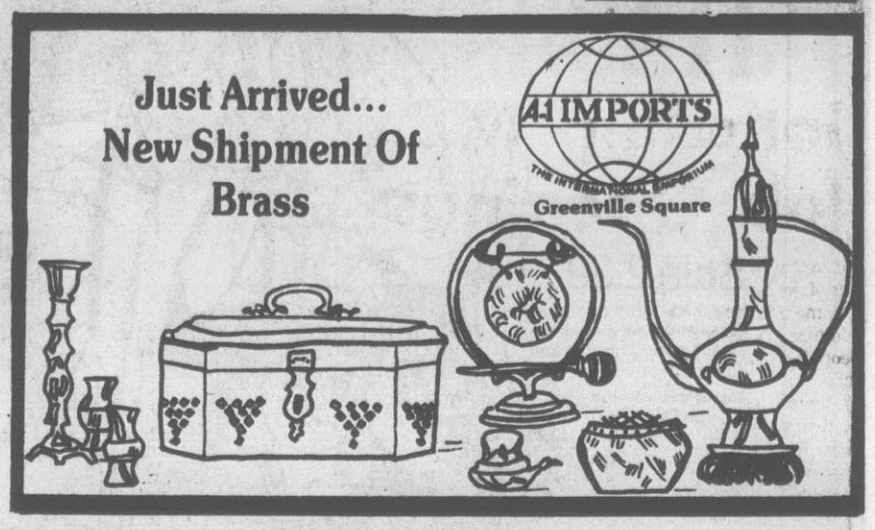

Wallace, who moderated his segregationist stand in recent years, seemed a political question mark in the Senate race because of his paralysis and his marital problems.

Wallace was first elected governor in 1962, campaigning hard as a segregationist. At the time he was unable by law to succeed himself, so his first wife, Lurleen, ran and won the governorship in 1966. She died of cancer two years later.

Wallace came back and won the governor's office again in 1970, and again, while crippled, in 1974. The law had been changed to allow a governor to succeed himself once.

In the meantime he made periodic forays onto the national political scene, a barnstorming and defiant figure at first. He admonished "pointy-headed bureaucrats." He railed at young protesters and their demonstrations as "acts of treason." He criticized federal courts and promised to "get the federal government out of the business of busing little boys and girls halfway across a city" to achieve racial balance. As an independent in 1968, he said there is not "a dime's worth of difference" between the major party candidates. He drew wild crowds.

Busy Week For Most Prolific Tar Heel Historian

By Dr. H.G. JONES
For the Associated Press

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — For North Carolina's most prolific historian, last week was busy.

On Monday he received an honorary doctorate from Campbell College. The next day he presented autographed copies of his newest book to Gov. Jim Hunt, and for the remainder of the week he was figuring grades for some 300 students.

However, William S. Powell is accustomed to such a schedule. He always has several projects under way simultaneously. Last year, for instance, he published three books, continued writing on several others, and taught more than 500 students.

The Campbell College degree was in recognition of his contributions to the literature of North Carolina and to the promotion of the study of the state's history.

The catalog cards under Powell's name in the University of North Carolina Library measure more than an inch in thickness.

On Tuesday, representatives of the American Association for State and Local History and the National Endowment for the Humanities joined Hunt in honoring Powell for his authorship of "North Carolina: A Bicentennial History."

In observance of the 200th anniversary of independent America, the AASLH selected an outstanding observer of the history of each state and commissioned him or her to write an essay describing its past and present character. Emphasis was on interpretation, not a mere recitation of fact.

It has been said that "at no other point in the Nation's history has there been a time when such a large group of leading writers and historians in America joined forces all at once not merely to describe but to interpret this country's experience in all its diversity."

The volumes, funded by the endowment, have been rolling from the presses for more than a year, and the histories of 37 states have now been released.

The North Carolina volume, accompanied by photographs by Charlotte's Bruce Roberts, has been recognized as the best one-volume inerpretive history of the state.

Only 205 pages, it weaves into a lean narrative a generous sprinkling of significant but previously obscure facts providing a freshness seldom found in state histories. For example:

—Only Arizona, Colorado, New Mexico and Oklahoma have larger Indian populations than North Carolina

—In 1790, only Virginia and Pennsylvania surpassed North Carolina in population.

—Lewis Shirley of Caswell County moved to Kentucky, then to Texas, and is credited with introducing thoroughbred horses.

—Old Trap in Camden County was named for a local grog shop.

William Powell has been called a "historian's historian" — one who filters through masses of source material and publishes valuable information not previously available in printed form.

For instance, his "North Carolina Gazetteer" listed thousands of place names in North Carolina; his "North Carolina Fiction" annotated nearly 700 titles of fiction with a North Carolina setting; and his "First State University" provided a popular illustrated history of the University of North Carolina.

Recently, however, he has increasingly produced narrative histories. Last year he wrote "John Pory," a biography of the Englishman who described the Chowan River area in 1622; and his "When the Past Refused to Die," a history of Caswell County, won a Peace Award for the best history of a North Carolina county.

Powell's most ambitious project is now in progress: a multivolume biographical dictionary of North Carolina for which he has tapped the assistance of more than 500 other contributors throughout the country.

Soliciting N.C. Job Openings

The Greenville Job Service office of the Employment Security Commission is actively seeking summer job openings for young people in the area for the summer.

"We are all familiar with the statistics on youth unemployment," James Hannan, ESC manager commented. "North Carolina is no different from the rest of the nation in that joblessness among young people is currently about twice as high as that for the total population."

Hannan cited figures for March 1978 which reveal an overall statewide jobless rate of 4.5 per cent. Unemployment among Tar Heel young people in the 16 to 19 age group for that month is 12.8 per cent — or almost triple the total work force rate of joblessness.

"On top of this," Hannan said, "more than 100,000 students and graduates will be entering the state's labor force in late May and June, searching for permanent and summer jobs. As the public employment service in this area, our task is to try and match applicants with jobs. But right now it looks like the demand is exceeding the supply.

"To assist us in this problem, however, we have a staff member assigned to work with the youth of Pitt County, to help them in locating employment."

To offer the broadest range of possible work, the Employment Security Commission has teamed up with other state government agencies, including the Governor's office, and the Departments of Commerce and Natural and Economic Resources, to launch a coordinated appeal for jobs from employers.

"The theme of our effort is simply that we are seeking job opportunities for youth, and we appeal to area employers to list any openings they might have with the ESC.

"We hear commencement speakers on the one hand lauding our young people as leaders of tomorrow," Hannan commented, "while some social critics condemn juvenile idleness on the other hand. The answer in nearly every case is jobs," he added.

Employers who wish to submit job orders are to contact the Job Service Office, 3101 Bismarck Street in Greenville.

ACPE was organized in 1922 for the purpose of providing colleges and universities, both state and private, innovative approaches and programs in the field of continuing education.

Bailey, a native of Thomasville, served as a principal in schools in Lenoir and Pitt counties from 1948 until he joined the then extension division of East Carolina as an assistant director in 1965.

Heavy Bonds For Kidnap Charge

MYRTLE BEACH, S.C. (AP) — A Myrtle Beach city judge has set bonds of $170,000 for three Ohio men arraigned in the kidnapping of a foreign businessman from the parking lot of a restaurant Sunday.

Charged with kidnapping, conspiracy and assault and battery with intent to kill were Avram Bendoly, 33, of University Heights and two Russian-born residents of Cleveland — Aleksey Vainbrum, 20, and Alexander "Sasha" Okner, 23.

Judge J.M. "Bud" Long added $1,000 to the bonds of Vainbrum and Okner, who were also charged with violating the South Carolina firearms law.

During a half-hour hearing before Long, all three entered pleas of not guilty. Vainbrum translated for Okner during the proceeding.

Long said he was disturbed by accounts of the kidnapping of 37-year-old Joseph Riess contained in police reports and warrants.

"This kind of thing frightens me," said Long. "There is a sickness or illness all over the world. People are kidnapping people, killing....We need to do everything we can to stop it."

Bendoly's attorney, Paul Joseph of Myrtle Beach, told Long, "I don't think we are dealing with the Red Brigades," referring to the Italian terrorist group. "This was not an act of political terrorism. It appears to me this is some kind of personal grievance."

He said the suspects "are not a menace to the community at large."

In an earlier interview, Riess said Bendoly, who operates a chain of discount stores in Cleveland, became upset after Riess refused to take him as a partner in his solar heating business in Spain. However, a possible motive for the abduction was not discussed during the hearing.

The suspects were being held at the Horry County Jail in nearby Conway.

Reiss, an Israeli native who operates a solar heating business in Valencia, Spain, told police he was was beaten, handcuffed and later locked in the trunk of a car by several men wearing dark wigs and sunglasses.

Police were alerted to the kidnapping by persons who witnessed the abduction. One suspect was arrested at the Myrtle Beach jetport. The other two were taken into custody and Riess was released when police stopped a car that had fled the airport.

Reiss said the three had threatened to kill him. He also told Long that Bendoly had told him in Hebrew before the hearing that "he is going to kill me if he gets released."

Bendoly denied the charge.

Convict 'Professional Patient'

MOCKSVILLE, N.C. (AP) — A man, described as a "professional patient" by the State Hospital Association, has been convicted in Davie County District Court of fraudulently obtaining credit at Davie County Hospital.

Talmadge Harper Jernigan, 54, who lives with relatives in High Point, is wanted by several hospitals for allegedly gaining admission, then leaving the premises at night a few days later without being released or paying his bills.

Jernigan was tried on a charge which specified he was admitted to Davie County Hospital last July 14, remained there for three days and left without being discharged, leaving an unpaid bill of $432.75.

Anne Stiller, director of nurses, told the court that Jernigan was brought to the hospital in an ambulance from Davidson County. She said he complained of shortness of breath and pains in his chest around his heart, and he requested medication for relief of the pain.

A state Hospital Association spokesman said Jernigan has gained admission to several other hospsitals in the state over many months, always complaining of pains that would require Demerol or other kinds of sythetic narcotics.

At the close of the state's evidence, Jernigan's attorney, Wade Leonard, moved to dismiss the charge. As he dismissed the motion, Judge Preston Cornelius said the evidence would not allow a dismissal.

Cornelius asked Jernigan, "How many hospitals have you been admitted to?" And Jernigan replied, "Several."

"Have any of those bills been paid?" Cornelius asked.

"No, your honor," Jernigan said.

Cornelius deferred sentencing until June 26, and he advised Jernigan "to come up with some way to pay this money" to Davie County Hospital. He also directed authoritiies to determine how many hospitals Jernigan has been in.

The charge against Jernigan is a misdemeanor for which the maximum punishment is a $500 fine or six months in jail or both.

Though Jernigan has admitted that he has numerous unpaid hospital bills all over the state, the warrant issued against him in Davie County was the first such charge filed against him.

A Hospital Association spokesman said there are no figures available to indicate how much money Jernigan owes hospitals in the state.

"That would be hard to determine," the spokesman said, "because he is not the only professional patient at large in the state. Last year alone we received 56 reports of this kind of activity. More than one man was involved."

these physicians. He said a "bonus" of Dr. Kopelman's coming here is that his wife, Loretta, who's in philosophy, is an expert on medical ethics and will greatly enhance the medical care scene here.

Dr. Laupus said there are about 30 medical residents here now, with more expected. There are 19 "mutuals," so far, he said — persons who have been accepted as ECU Medical School students who have indicated they will attend.

A resolution was passed indicating the hospital will engage in "voluntary cost containment," as recommended by the American Hospital Association.

County Commissioner Charles Gaskins, chairman of the building committee, reported that a subcommittee has been named to negotiate a contract with Freeman and White Associates, the same Charlotte architectural firm which built the hospital, for an additional bed tower.

Director Richardson reported that visiting hours have been "loosened," and are now from 9 a. m. to 9 p. m. He said this plan, which has been under consideration since the hospital opened, is being tried and "seems to be well received by staff and patients and their families alike."

Variety Offered In Town Names

By DENNIS MONTGOMERY
Associated Press Writer

From Frog Jump to Wartburg is an easy stretch of the imagination, but like an old wives' tale's logic, the drive is a bit circuitous.

A motorist must meander across Tennessee to make the connection, through two-thirds of a state chock-full of singular signposts. From Arp to Glimp, from Bucksnort to Skinem, in these parts, towns with head-turning handles are thicker than a pond in tadpole season.

Difficult lies hard by Defeated, Golddust near Giltedge, and Royal Blue not far from Dukedom. Prosperity is within striking distance of Enterprise. But it's a long hard trek from Miser Station to Needmore — more tedious than a trip from Dull to Spot.

Allowing for a respite in Pillowville, a weekend tour of Tennessee's anatomy can ramble from Skullbone to Lightfoot to Finger and Oral. Sunday drivers can putter from Tabernacle to Bible Hill to Brick Church.

For traveling salesmen there are Commerce, Sale Creek and Farmers Exchange, and a banker's holiday might take him to Dollar or Greenback. If gardening is your game, there are Bean Station, Cherry, Sugar Tree, Nut Bush, Hanging Limb and Soddy-Daisy. Outdoorsmen may be interested in Turtletown, Ducktown, Bucktown, Owl City, Leapwood or Hornbeak.

Everyone's welcome in Friendship, but if it's relaxation you're after, consider Reverie. Stylish folk may find Chic worth a try and honeymooners, Bride.

If none of those catch your fancy there are Bell Buckle, Carlock, Christmasville, Curve, Chalk Level, Duplex, Evensville, Factory, Flippin, Fly, Gift, Glass, Guys, Liberty, Ozone, Readyville, Reliance, Rudderville, Shooks, Topsy, Wetmore, Weakly, Wind and Yankeetown.

And behind each name there lurks an explanation. Wartburg historian Ethel Freytag, 66, told an inquirer the community's name has nothing to do with the amphibians below town in Bitter Creek. German George Gerding founded the community in 1846 and stocked it with countrymen. To attract immigrants he chose a name that sounded not quite so far from home. "Wartburg," she said, "is named for the castle where Martin Luther hid from the Pope after he wrote his thesis against the Catholic church."

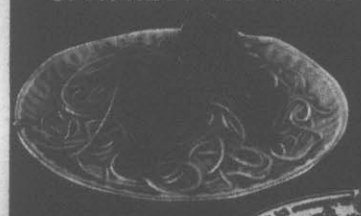

Frog Jump, a hamlet of 30 souls, a cash grocery and a cotton gin, has a less imposing pedigree. Gibson County historian Fred Culp, 50, said, "You know it's lowland, marshy and wet over there. Well, originally it was Davis Springs and someone making a joke in the early 1900s — a visitor — called it Frog Jump and Lightning Bug Hollow. It got shortened but the name just stuck."

Frog Jump gin manager Fred Rice, 51, says folks take the jest in stride. Why, he remembers when a fellow carried a frog, a stick and a board up to some old timers idling outside. Dropping the stick on the ground and the board across it, he put the frog on one end and jumped on the other. "That frog really jumped," he said. "It really tore 'em up."

U.S. Maritime Industry Sees Disaster On Horizon

By MARNA PARKASH

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The nation's ailing maritime industry is seeking new federal help to avoid what it sees as an impending disaster threatening the "economic equivalent of a Pearl Harbor."

With business losses caused by rising costs and increasing competition, industry leaders foresee a loss of more than 45,000 jobs — mostly minorities in chronic unemployment areas — in the next 10 years.

Thirty years ago, according to James M. Barker, chairman of the industry-sponsored National Maritime Council board, 4,000 U.S. merchant ships carried nearly 60 percent of the nation's foreign trade. Today 557 American ships carry barely 5 percent.

"It's as if this nation were waiting for the economic equivalent of a Pearl Harbor before taking action," Barker said in a speech.

The industry, which has had federal financial assistance for a number of years and in fiscal 1978 is ticketed for nearly $560 million in construction, operating and other subsidies, sees a glimmer of hope from both the White House and Capitol Hill.

President Carter recently ordered a six-month study of the industry, and several bills in Congress are aimed at easing some of the problems.

The industry sees its major problem as competition from foreign government-owned and sponsored carriers. They have been steadily strengthening their position on traditional American flag trade routes, especially in commerce with Third World countries.

Industry spokesmen express particular concern with the "Russian threat" — a Soviet fleet with four times as many ocean-going vessels as its U.S. counterpart, ranking eighth in the world. The U.S. fleet is tenth.

Speaking of the Soviet fleet, a House committee spokesman said "It doesn't have to make a profit," and regularly cuts freight rates by as much as 40 percent.

Barker, in an interview, predicted the United States "will be strategically dependent on the Russians for general cargo shipping services in five to ten years."

Heavy competition also comes from flag of convenience ships, which some industry members refer to as "flags of necessity". These are ships owned by American interests, registered in foreign countries such as Liberia and Panama and sailing under their flags.

By registering ships abroad, American owners are not subject to U.S. taxes, pay scales or licensing, construction, maintenance and safety standards.

Under these conditions, industry spokesmen claim, they can compete better with government-owned carriers. Liberia, through flag of convenience arrangements, has the world's largest merchant and tanker fleets, one-third American-owned.

But unlike U.S. flag ships, American-owned flag of convenience carriers may not always be subject to U.S. foreign policy mandates. This was shown during the 1973 Arab-Israeli Yom Kippur war when Liberia tried to ban ships flying its flag from serving the combatants. At the time, the United States was making strenuous efforts to resupply Israel.

President Carter's order for an interagency overview of the maritime industries' problems has been received with relief by industry members and federal departments with maritime interests.

"It's coming at an extremely important time in the history of merchant maritime affairs," Barker said, "and it's about time for a complete policy reorganization, not from the bottom in piecemeal fashion (but) from the executive branch."

The bills submitted in Congress include a House measure on "closed conferences," agreements which limit other flag fleets' participation in regular U.S. trade routes.

The United States permits shipping companies worldwide to operate in its routes in a free competition atmosphere, Barker said, setting no limit on the tonnage — cargo carrying capability — other countries can inject into the U.S. market.

"There has been rampant overbuilding in the shipping world, so we've become the dumping ground for all the world to put into our trades," he said.

"We will eventually have to reach closed conferences or establish more bilateral (country-to-country direct exchange shipping) agreements to put restrictions on third flag fleets — ships from countries not directly involved in the trade exchange — but the bill as now presented will receive opposition from the Justice Department."

A Justice Department spokesman confirmed the agency's opposition to the bill, saying closed conferences are tantamount to cartels, creating monopolistic situations.

Rep. Paul N. McCloskey Jr., R-Calif., said before the ills of the U.S. shipping industry are treated, the necessity of its revitalization shostic situations.

Rep. Paul N. McCloskey Jr., R-Calif., said before the ills of the U.S. shipping industry are treated,ough he continues to support the U.S. fleet "for strategic purposes", he feels it will be useful militarily "only in limited conflicts".

"Any upcoming (major) conflicts will be nuclear, although we are obviously doing our best to avoid such a contingency," he said in an interview. "In such a situation, we won't have the necessary three years' warning to build ships for troops, weapons, and supplies transport. We'll be lucky if we have three minutes."

Charging government subsidized maritime concerns with "gross mismanagement", McCloskey noted the U.S. industries will receive federal construction funds in the 1979 fiscal year totalling $157 million and operating funds of $262.8 million.

Of the 10 major subsidized operations with regularly scheduled trade routes, three are in poor financial condition, and one, Pacific Far East Lines, declared bankruptcy Jan. 31, despite $120 million in direct subsidies over the last five years, including a $1 million "bail out" loan in December, 1977.

Transportation Secretary Brock Adams said it seems "before the end of this century we will be unable to afford all the maritime promotional policies currently contemplated by some segments of the industry."

He said these policies, if adopted, would make nationalization of the industry "inevitable".

"I would hate to see Conrail joined by 'Conwater'," Adams said in a speech.

To increase the U.S. fleet, McCloskey suggested buying up existing overtonnage in foreign fleets to "save ourselves time and tremendous sums of money, even if we have to spend relatively a few dollars to upgrade the vessels."

But industry spokesmen opposed the idea because it would "undermine the shipyards in the U.S."

"What if we find we can do with fewer shipyards in the future?" McCloskey asked. "And what if those people have to find other jobs? We didn't subsidize blacksmiths when their industry was ousted by the automobile."

White House spokesman William Johnston, who is expected to head the executive review of the maritime industries, said the study is now in the organizational stages. The six-month study will call for input from all 19 federal agencies with interests in maritime affairs.

"When the new Congress is in session, it will have a full executive policy on maritime industries affairs presented for review and approval," Barker said. "The timing couldn't be more perfect."

Recognition By HAS For Pitt Memorial

Hospital Administrative Services (HAS) has awarded Pitt County Memorial Hospital a certificate of recognition on behalf of the American Hospital Association.

This certificate says PCMH has voluntarily participated in a management information program designed to contain costs and monitor productivity. Hospital Director Jack Richardson said, "The HAS program provides the type of data I require to formulate future management decisions. We have taken part in HAS for 11 years and find the quantitative information extremely valuable. We not only receive information based on our internal operation, but also are able to participate in comparisons with other institutions of like size."

The HAS program was begun in 1959 and now has more than 3,000 institutions participating.

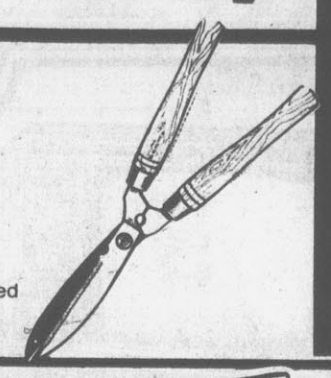

SMALL BUT POWERFUL — Surinder Krishna, leader of a General Electric research group, examines an electronic device the size of a quarter which is the world's most efficient high-power transistor. Developed by a group of scientists and engineers at the GE Research and Development Center in Schenectady, N.Y., the Darlington transistor is capable of switching 400 volts and 350 amps on or off in less than one-millionth of a second. The device, which requires only one-tenth amp for activation, will find one of its first applications in a pair of experimental vehicles that GE is developing under a U.S. Department of Energy contract. Old Boomtown Going Bust With Changing Times

EDITOR'S NOTE — It's a boomtown of the 19th century going bust with the changing times. Left over from the heyday are old buildings, old factories, old people. For the latter, though, there's a new idea — the Geriatric Authority.

By DANIEL Q. HANEY
Associated Press Writer

HOLYOKE, Mass. (AP) — Like any boomtown, Holyoke got old all of a sudden. The buildings are old, the businesses are old, the people are old.

Holyoke grew up in a rush three-quarters of a century ago to make paper out of rags. This industry is gone now, and so are many of the young people. But the older people, like the grim brick factories, linger.

Almost everything in Holyoke is old except the spirit of innovation that found a way to take care of these elderly citizens.

Holyoke came up with a plan to shelter and comfort the people who have lived here since the town was young. It is an autonomous agency called the Geriatric Authority of Holyoke that floats its own bonds and builds its own nursing homes, clinics and apartments.

The strategy is a mixture of traditional health care, brassy politics and bright ideas.

The centerpiece is an 18-acre "geriatric village" on the outskirts of Holyoke. The authority has built one nursing home and refurbished another. A clinic teaches disabled old people how to take care of themselves at home. Soon, construction will start on apartments for the elderly.

Downtown, about 30 old people get meals, baths and companionship at the authority's adult day care center.

Holyoke has 47,000 residents — 11,000 of them over age 60. This proportion — 23 percent — is twice the national average.

So many old folks live in this city near Springfield that they are both a problem and a power, but they are not ignored. The geriatric authority is Holyoke's way of paying attention. It is the only municipal authority in the United States set up to tend the elderly.

"We're probably the only municipality that has made a commitment to providing long-term care to its elderly," says director Joseph Paul.

Many of these old folks are poor, and the authority tries to help them with basic care, whether it's a meal and a haircut or 24-hour nursing. But its goal is to keep them out of the nursing home and on their own so long as they are physically and mentally able.

"We're interested in the rehabilitative approach," says Dr. Burritt Haag, an endocrinologist and chairman of the authority's seven-member board. "We're trying to change the image of the traditional rest home — a flight deck for that great nursing home in the sky. We want to build a complex that will give people a reason to live."

The authority's two nursing homes have 240 beds. The newest also has a beauty parlor and a pub where the old people gather around cocktail tables for a late-afternoon happy hour.

And for those disabled by strokes or other illnesses, the authority runs an occupational therapy clinic, teaching such basic tasks as how to tie their shoes, make their beds and cook meals so they can live at home.

In a year or so, the authority plans to open 100 apartments for the elderly. The tenants will be able to use the nursing home next door for health care or meals but still live independently.

Another service is a storefront day care center for people too lonely or tottering to stay home alone. In a building laid out like a large living room, they weave baskets, eat meals and play games. Some get baths and haircuts; others exercise and chat with friends.

"It's great here, the people are marvelous," says Ceil Kirkpatrick, 72, a retired nurse disabled by a stroke.

"If I wasn't here, I'd be watching TV and doing nothing. Last year I was thinking of going to a nursing home. I was so depressed. I needed somebody to talk to."

What prodded this mill town to get into the elderly services business? Social conscience, says William Dwight, the authority's treasurer. "We feel we have a responsibility to the less affluent elderly. I'm damned if I know what would happen to them if we didn't have this. I guess some people would die younger."

Dwight's wife, Maria, thought up the idea of a public authority about 10 years ago. Until then, the city nursing home was run by the local welfare board. But the state took over administration of welfare, and the time seemed right to reshape responsibility for the elderly.

One goal was to remove the nursing home from politics. The local welfare department had been a ripe source of patronage for the city's Board of Aldermen, and at first the aldermen opposed the authority.

After what director Paul calls "a godawful power struggle," and with approval of the state legislature, the authority took control of the city nursing home in 1971. Its services have been growing ever since.

Being one of a kind is not always easy, especially when asking the federal government for money.

"Our uniqueness has caused a lot of problems in dealing with the bureaucracy," Paul says. "They have a little niche for everything, and we don't always fit. They are confused about our eligibility for programs."

The nursing home now has a waiting list of about 100 people. Those who can afford it pay $40 a day, but 90 percent of the patients are supported by government aid programs.

So far, the authority has financed its construction with a $3.9 million, 20-year tax-free bond. Instead of the city having to help pay the authority's expenses, the authority pays the city $95,000 a year in lieu of property taxes.

Holyoke was built over a 30-year span beginning about 1890. It made paper from Massachusetts lumber and cloth produced by the textile plants in neighboring towns.

Gradually, in the 1940s, the mills began to close. Some small manufacturing moved in, but Holyoke was never the same.

"It isn't unique that people here care about the elderly," says Dwight. "What is unique is that it's the community that's doing something about it."

Hard Life In Siberia Rail Construction

By DOUGLAS STANGLIN

BLACK CREEK, Siberia (UPI) — Lyda Bessolova came to Siberia 18 months ago and was aghast.

"I didn't think I could stand it," she said. "Now it's getting better."

For thousands of workmen and their families, life in the isolated settlements has been a period of adjustment.

Many workmen came for the construction of the Baikal-Amur railroad across the wild countryside. This project has drawn Soviet citizens from as far away as Moscow and the Ukraine.

The money is good — in some cases, five or six times the national average. Workers also get as much as 36 days of vacation a year and a free trip annually to any city in the Soviet Union.

For many the lure is a special coupon after three years of work that gives them top priority for buying a new car.

Mrs. Bessolova's husband, Vladimir, came as head engineer for the tunnel construction.

"It's not the money, it's the challenge," she said of him. "He's fond of his work. I don't understand it ..."

The Bessolovas live in a two-story wooden house in Neznean-garsk, a three-year-old community of 2,500 on a hillside on the north of Lake Baikal.

For Mrs. Bessolova, who is in her 20s and attended a teachers school in Moscow, life in the Siberian mountains can be tedious.

She said she misses her city friends and the theater.

She said women who came with their husbands to Siberia call themselves "Decembrist wives," after the women who made the long journey to Siberia in 1825 with husbands exiled by the Decembrist uprising.

Tanya Yakimenko is a "Decembrist wife" from the Ukraine.

She and her engineer husband, Vyacheslav, left their 5-year-old son with her mother in Voroshilovgrad. They live in a two-room wooden house in Black Creek, a bumpy three-hour bus ride from Neznean-garsk.

Mrs. Yakimenko said the cabin has no running water. Once a day, she goes to a common collection point to get water that is trucked in to the settlement.

The house is sparsely furnished. A single bed stands in a kitchen corner, but Mrs. Yakimenko said she finds the facilities satisfactory.

Trained as a teacher, she plays the piano in the settlement club and works with children.

The Yakimenkos plan to send for their son soon.

Most of Black Creek's cabins are scattered throughout the 1,300-member settlement, providing a lot of privacy. The community's center is a store and a club house that contains a theater and auditorium for the settlement's drama group.

New films are brought in every three days, even before they are shown in Moscow.

There is little other entertainment aside from skiing and hunting. Beer and liquor are tightly controlled.

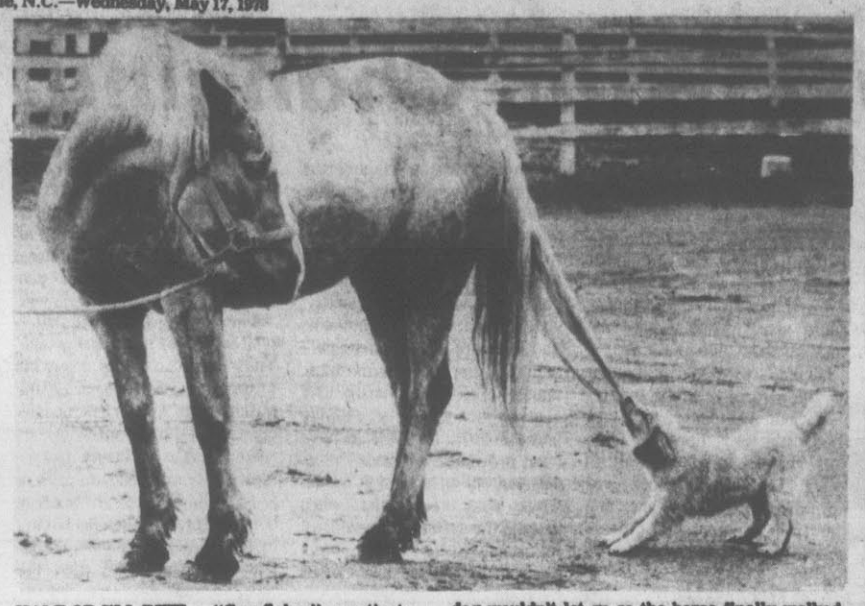

Single men live three to a room in a 50-man hostel and share a community kitchen.

Local officials say the community gets a steady supply of meat, fish and milk — items often hard to find outside Moscow.

Although officials say many of the young people settling in Siberia will stay even after the railroad is finished, many find the living hard to take.

Asked if she plans to settle down there permanently, Lyda Bessolova said: "Te shutish?"

Translation: "Are you kidding?"

For Sale In Cairo: Slightly Used Camels At The Market

By NICOLAS B. TATRO

CAIRO (AP) — Suleiman Ali walked his camels 12 hours a day for 75 days from his home in eastern Sudan to sell his herd in Cairo's bustling camel market, where an animal with 1,000 miles on the clock is a bargain at $500.

Inspecting the ship of the desert for quality and condition consists of swatting its rump with a stick and opening its gurgling mouth for a look down its throat.

Ali and hundreds of other trail drivers like him make the 1,000-mile trek from Khartoum to Cairo twice a year, usually leaving Sudan in January and September to take advantage of the cooler weather.

"We came through the mountains and the desert," said Ali, a 21-year-old herder dressed in white robe and turban. "It is a very rugged journey and many of the weak camels died."

Ali's 60 camels were part of a caravan of about 500 from El Fasher in eastern Sudan. They were driven through the desert to the start of the Darl El Arbain (40 days' trail), an ancient caravan route said to be thousands of years old. Herders follow the trail from Omdurman near Khartoum to the Egyptian city of Isna on the Nile River, where the camels are inspected and shipped on to Cairo by truck.

Hamed Abdel Aziz, the rotund and bearded head of the market, estimated 60,000 camels a year are traded in the dusty market in the Cairo suburb of Imbaba.

"This is the last camel market in Egypt," said Abdel Aziz as he squatted on a low wall with his worry beads and shouted orders to his assistants.

"A good camel sells for more than $500, depending on his weight and size."

Most of the camels are sold for meat, which is very popular among the poor because it costs about half as much as beef. Camel steaks sell for 70 cents a pound compared to $1.27 a pound for beef.

Camel gourmets say the meat is a bit dry but quite tasty if ground up and served with rice in a traditional dish called koefte.

Smaller, less meaty camels are sold to farmers as work animals. Camels can be seen throughout the Nile Valley sharing the harness with water buffalo behind the plow or pushing water wheels.

A few of the very best camels are bought by the Egyptian army for the camel corps, which still patrols Egypt's northern coast and its border with Libya to guard against smugglers. Still others are sold to replenish the riding stock at the Pyramids and other tourist sites.

"The riding camels are few and always go fast," noted Abdel Azia.

Traders dicker over the various models in a sandy arena, where the camels are gathered in bunches around their owners. Each camel is branded on the neck and a number is sometimes written near its hump in red dye.

After their long trek, many of the camels stretch out in prayer-like sprawls to sleep while the younger, more rambunctious ones stand hobbled with a rope tying back the front foreleg.

Ahmed El Nil, a leathery herdsman dressed in desert white and carrying a snakeskin whip, said the camel trade was not as prosperous as it had once been.

"Profits are much lower," he explained. "There are fewer camels and the price is higher in Sudan now because more and more people are eating camel meat."

Abdel Aziz said the government got ten cents for each camel sold and the trader paid five cents to the market.

Nearly all the camels traded in Egypt come from Sudan.

"We used to get two-humped camels from Somalia and others came from Libya, but because of wars and politics we just don't get many any more except from Sudan," one trader said.

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market was mixed in heavy trading today, running into selling pressure at its highest level in eight months.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials dropped 2.43 to 851.87 in the first half hour.

Gainers and losers were about evenly balanced in the over-all count of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Brokers noted selling by traders cashing in on the market's spring rally and by investors skeptical about its ability to continue.

"There is reason to believe that, even after a near-100-point rally on the DJIA, a significant number of money managers continues to view this 13-14 percent rally as nothing more than a bull trap, a rally in a bear market, or the prelude to a deluge..."

Texaco was the early volume leader among NYSE issues, unchanged at 25⅛.

On Tuesday the Dow Jones industrial average climbed 7.54 to 854.30, its highest close since it finished at 856.81 last Sept. 16.

Advances outnumbered declines by a 9-5 margin on the NYSE.

Big Board volume came to 48.17 million shares, the fourth heaviest total in exchange history.

The NYSE's composite common-stock index rose .35 to 55.53.

At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up .91 at 143.83, hitting a new high since 1973 for the 12th straight session.

Rose Tops Titans; Gains 4-A Playoffs

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Rose High School pushed over four runs in the bottom of the sixth inning to take a 5-1 victory over Wilson Fike last night, insuring the Rampants of a post-season 4-A playoff berth.

The Rampant win, combined with Rocky Mount's 4-3 win over Northern Nash, and Northeastern's upset of Bertie, 3-0, left Rose and Rocky Mount tied for first place with 9-5 league marks, and gave both a two-game lead over the rest of the pack. Both have just one game left.

Since two teams qualify for the state playoffs from Division I, the only thing left to settle is which team will be seeded first in the conference, and which second. Rose travels to Northeastern on Thursday, while Rocky Mount faces Wilson. The only way Rose can take the top seed, since it lost twice to Rocky Mount, would be for the Rampants to win Thursday and Rocky Mount lose.

"I'm very glad to have the opportunity to get into the playoffs," Rose Coach Ronald Vincent said. "I think we playing as well as anyone else in the league right now, so I think we deserve it."

The Rampants had a 24-inning scoreless streak broken when Wilson scored its lone run in the fourth inning last night.

"I'm real pleased with the way the guys are playing right now," Vincent said. "They're working hard and hustling. And our baserunning has helped us a lot in the last few games."

Mike Williams hurled the victory for the Rampants, but he had problems with the Titans. Although he allowed only two hits, and struck out 11, he threw a lot of pitches and got out of the inning without a baserunner only once. He walked just four, but three errors behind him hurt too.

Wilson offered a threat in the third when Jeff Harris walked with one down, and reached second on an out.

In the fourth, with two away, Williams issued walks to Bert Ferrell and Greg Wilson and David Bland reached on an error to load the bases, giving the Titans their first runner on third.

But the Titans broke the ice for a run in the fifth. Harris reached on an error to open the inning and Robert Wells singled. After one strikeout, Williams fanned another batter, but the ball got away from catcher Bobby Woronoff, and the runners advanced to second and third. Then, Williams unloaded a wild pitch, scoring Harris to knot it at the time, 1-1.

Rose had a chance in the first, when Mike Shank walked and stole second and Jeff Aldridge reached on a two-out error. A walk and a bunt single put a man in scoring position in the second, but nothing occurred.

In the third, Rose had another big chance. With two away, Aldridge singled and Skip Topping doubled. Will Sanderson was intentionally walked, but a fly ended it.

Finally, in the fourth, Rose scored. Reggie Spain walked and stole second. He scored when Ronnie Chapman bounced the ball off the right field wall for a double.

After another threat in the fifth, the Rampants broke it open in the sixth. Spain led off with an infield hit and Robert Morehead's grounder to third was played to second, but not in time to get Spain.

That brought Titan Coach Gilbert Ferrell out of the dugout to protest the call. Then, minutes later, he came back out to protest calls on balls and strikes while Chapman was at the plate, and all he got for his troubles was the thumb from the umpire.

Chapman then walked, loading the bases. Mike Shank grounded to second, forcing Chapman, but Spain scored on the play. Greg Lee then laid down a bunt on the suicide squeeze, scoring Morehead, with everyone reaching safely. Aldridge singled to score Shank, and Topping followed with a hit, driving in Lee with the final run.

Rose now will face Northeastern at Elizabeth City on Thursday, then move into the first round of the state playoffs next week.

Bonds Goes To Rangers

ARLINGTON, Texas AP—The horestradin' Texas Rangers have swapped off a large chunk of their future for Bobby Bonds-a soon-to-be free agent they are counting on as the key to this year's World Series.

The Rangers traded 23-year-old outfielder Claudell Washington, already a four-year major league veteran who is tagged as a "can't miss" star, minor leaguer Rusty Torres and a player to be named later to the Chicago White Sox on Tuesday night for the much-traveled Bonds.

"We're getting a 32-year-old superstar and we're giving up a 23-year-old budding star," Rangers owner Brad Corbett said Tuesday night.

"I felt it was in the best interest this year for Texas to get Bobby Bonds, who is a legitimate superstar. Claudell will be a great player."

Bonds, the only major leaguer ever to compile 30 home runs and 30 stolen bases in four different seasons, was traded to Chicago in the off-season from California.

He is playing out his option and will become a free agent-most likely a very expensive free agent-at the end of the season.

Conley Nips North Lenoir

HOLLYWOOD — D. H. Conley came up with a run in the bottom of the seventh inning to slide past North Lenoir for a 7-6 high school baseball victory yesterday afternoon.

The Vikings fell behind early in the game by a 5-0 margin, but scored two runs in the third and four in the fourth to take a 6-5 lead. North Lenoir tied things up in the fifth, but the Vikes got the winning run in the seventh.

The Hawks' first run came in the second. Ronnie Chapman singled, stole second and went to third on an error. He scored on Pete Davis' sacrifice fly.

Four North Lenoir runs came across in the third. Craig Pate walked and Gary Sullivan singled. Both runners stole and scored when Stevie Tripp reached on an error. Jeff Davis moved Tripp up on an infield out and Chapman walked and stole second. Theodore Davis walked and Pete Davis singled in Tripp and Chapman.

The Vikes got on the scoreboard in the bottom of the frame. Arnell Credle singled and Ben Wilson tripled. Wilson came in on Mike Edens' base hit.

In the fourth, Mike Phillips walked and Dale Bailey tripled. Micah Dixon walked and stole second, while an error allowed Bailey to score. Nuggie Worthington singled in Dixon and followed him home on an error.

Worthington scored the winning run the seventh. He tripled and came in on Curtis Spencer's single.

The Vikings are now 8-4 in the Eastern Carolina Conference and will play today at Greene Central.

Wheeler Speaks At D.H. Conley

HOLLYWOOD — D.H. Conley will honor its athletes on Wednesday, May 24, with the annual All-Sports Banquet.

The event will be held at 7 p.m. in the school cafeteria.

George Wheeler, defensive line coach at the University of Missouri, will be the featured speaker for the evening. Wheeler, an East Carolina University graduate, served as head football coach at Conley following his college career. He moved on to coach at Albemarle High School before entering the collegiate field.

He served as an assistant coach at North Carolina A & T, then was at the University of Arkansas prior to taking his present position with the University of Missouri.

Sherri Singleton, the winning pitcher, had three hits, while Terri Hopkins, Sharon Speller, Valeria Barnhill, Jean Rogers, Kristi Rogerson and Myra Martin had two each.

The second game was a bit closer, but the Tigerettes still won easily. Singleton pitched the win, while Jo Anna Lilley and Hopkins each had two hits.

Lady Rams Take Win

PIKEVILLE — Greene Central kept its girls' softball title hopes alive with a 17-4 victory over Charles B. Aycock yesterday.

The win boosted the Lady Ram record to 10-2 in the league and 15-2 overall. The Lady Rams face D.H. Conley today and must win that game and their other, against Aycock, to win the title. Should Conley win today, the Valkyries would win the crown.

Greene Central got five in the first, while Aycock scored four times. But the Lady Rams held Aycock scoreless the rest of the way, while added four in the second, and two each in the third, fourth, sixth and seventh.

Lynn Shackleford was the winning pitcher.

Geraldine Hooker led the Lady Ram hitting with two, both triples. Iris Pridgen also had two, one of them a double.

Valkyries Keep Close

WHEAT SWAMP — D. H. Conley's softball team defeated North Lenoir 11-5 yesterday to raise its Eastern Carolina Conference record to 11-2.

The win sets up today's game against Greene Central as the deciding tilt in the conference race. The two teams are tied for the league lead.

Lexanne Keeter pitched the win, while Nancy Berg, Pam Manning, Gail Carter and Tee Mills had two hits each. Mason had three hits and Rogers two for North Lenoir.

EBA Gets Revenge

E. B. Aycock's baseball team nipped Nash Central 5-4 yesterday to raise its record to 10-1 on the season.

Billy Dough pitched the win for the Jaguars and also got three hits. Mitch Brann had a pair of hits for Aycock, while Carter led Nash Central with two hits.

Aycock will host Washington today.

Cathy Andruzzi New ECU Coach

East Carolina University filled the vacancy of head women's basketball coach today with the appointment of Cathy Andruzzi to the position.

Andruzzi, 25, has been head coach at Wagner College in Staten Island, N.Y., for the past two seasons. This year, Wagner was invited to the Eastern AIAW Small College Regional Tournament for the first time in school history. The team compiled a final 15-12 record.

Andruzzi replaces Catherine Bolton, the only head coach in East Carolina history since women's basketball evolved from a club sport only to a sanctioned athletic department team.

A 1974 graduate of Queens College in New York, Andruzzi has a B.A. degree in health and physical education and 30 hours credit on the graduate level in health education at Montclair State College.

While at Queens, Andruzzi was an outstanding player on teams that finished fifth (1972), second (1973) and seventh (1974) in the AIAW National Tournament. Queens was second in the regional tournament in 1972 and 1973, while winning the championship in 1974. In 1972 and 1973, Queens won the New York State AIAW tournament championship.

Ironically, the 1973 team at East Carolina advanced to the National AIAW Tournament at Queens, during Andruzzi's junior year, as she played guard for the national runner-up.

A native of Staten Island, she attended Staten Island Community College in 1971, playing for a team that won the junior college championship of the area.

As an undergraduate, Andruzzi was named the Outstanding Woman Athlete at Staten Island Community College in 1971, received the Queens College Alumni Award for outstanding contribution to life of the college in 1972; and was named honorable mention in the Outstanding College Athlete of American Hall of Fame in 1974.

A veteran speaker at basketball clinics and camps, Andruzzi has spoken to clinics and camps in 17 states and Canada over the last three years. Among those were the Kodak Women's National Basketball Coaches Clinic in 1976 and 1977; the Pat Kennedy Invitational Camps in 1976 and 1977; the Pocono Invitational Basketball Camp in 1973 through 1977, and her own Cathy Andruzzi Basketball Camp the last two years.

She was recently appointed chairperson for Region I-A for the Wade Trophy Player-of-the-Year Award, one of ten representative for the award throughout the United States.

Andruzzi replaces Bolton, who resigned at the end of the current season. Bolton compiled a 113-54 record in nine years with the Lady Pirates, including a 20-11 finish this past year, the first 20-win season in ECU history.

Jaguars Grab 3-1 Win Over Chargers

By JIM KYLE
Reflector Sports Writer

FARMVILLE — Starting Farmville Central pitcher Don Holloman relinquished the mound in the top of the fourth inning, but sparked a Jaguar rally with a bloop single and a run in the bottom of the frame and Farmville went on to take a 3-1 victory over Ayden-Grifton.

Holloman, who hadn't had a decision as a pitcher all season, started because he is a senior and wanted to pitch in his final home game, Jag coach Linwood Woodard said. He pitched himself out of trouble in each of the first three innings, but walked two batters and gave up three hits, and the only Charger run, before Woodard yanked him in favor of Hackney Yelverton.

Yelverton held Ayden-Grifton hitless the rest of the way and notched his fifth victory in six tries. Starting hurler Harold Edwards was the loser, dropping to 1-3 on the year.

The game was one between two teams that "are not very good," Woodard said. The Jaguars are a young team and have not been playing as alertly as they should. But, Woodard added, he is pleased with the fact that his team has a chance to finish in second place in the Eastern Carolina Conference. (The Jags could actually end up in a tie for first.)

"Yelverton is really doing a good job for us," Woodard noted. "Our pitching has been really good lately, but our hitting....we're just not doing anything." Farmville had five hits in the ballgame and Ayden-Grifton had six.

The Chargers had runners in scoring position in each of the first three innings, but were unable to push them across. They broke the ice in the fourth when they scored their only run of the game.

Jolly Dail led off the inning with a base on balls. He went to second when Clayton McLawhorn singled to left. Wayne Newton followed with another base hit to left to load things up. That brought up David Smith, who hit a fly ball to center field. Allen Moore, after making the catch, threw to Jaguar shortstop Billy McLawhorn, who fired home to peg Dail for a double play.

Edwards loaded the bases again with another hit and Paul Setliff plated Clayton McLawhorn with a base on balls. Yelverton came in with a 2-0 count on the next batter and forced him to pop up for the final out.

The Ayden-Grifton lead was short-lived. Holloman led off the bottom of the inning with a bloop single over the third baseman. Scott Evans then tried to sacrifice him to second, but an error allowed Evans to make it all the way to third as Holloman crossed home. Phil Gordon's fielder's choice enabled Evans to cross the plate.

The fourth inning marked the end of Ayden-Grifton's offense as Yelverton gave up nothing more than one walk the rest of the way. He struck out two.

Edwards began to lose his control in the fifth. He walked three batters, but ax double play prevented the Jags from scoring. With no outs and a man on first, Billy McLawhorn bunted. He was thrown out at first and Farmville first baseman Mike Teachey caught the runner off of second, throwing him out at third after a rundown.

Two more batters walked in the frame, but a ground ball to short ended the danger.

The final Farmville run scored in the sixth. With one away, Edward Hines singled to left. Tony Eason got a hit up the middle to move him to second and pinch hitter Lewis Yelverton came up with an infield hit to load the bases. Hines scored when Clark May walked. Eason was thrown out at the plate after a fielder's choice to third and the final batter hit back to the box. David Smith pitched to the last two batters.

The Jaguars are now 9-3 in the Eastern Carolina Conference and 13-7 overall. They play at D. H. Conley tomorrow. The Chargers, now 5-8 and 7-14, play at C. B. Aycock today.

BETHEL — Southern Nash scored five runs in the sixth inning to defeat North Pitt by a 7-2 score in a high school baseball game yesterday.

The Panthers scored runs in the second and fourth innings to take a 2-1 lead, but the Firebirds tied things up with a run in the fifth. They then put the game out of reach with a five-run sixth inning.

North Pitt's first run came in the second when Roy Briley doubled and came home on Carl Knight's single. But Southern Nash tied the game in the third as Wayne Grady walked, stole second, and crossed home on Stacy Overman's base hit.

In the fourth inning, Bob Hemingway walked and scored on Knight's double. The Firebirds tied the game in the fifth as Jeff Strickland singled, stole second, moved to third on an infield out and came home on Grady's sacrifice fly.

Roger Strickland started off the Southern Nash sixth with a single and Randy Wilder doubled. A safety by Harry Dunn loaded the bases and Neal Stallings' walk plated Roger Strickland. Jeff Strickland got a base on balls to score Wilder, while Grady singled home Dunn. Overman reached on an error and Stallings and Jeff Strickland scored.

North Pitt is now 3-17 overall and 2-12 in the Eastern Carolina Conference. Yesterday's game was the season finale for the Panthers.

Under Watchful Eye

Former president Gerald Ford (r) blasts from a practice trap Tuesday while Jack Nicklaus watches. Nicklaus, host and defending champion of the Memorial Tournament, gave the former president a few pointers on the use of the sand wedge. The Memorial Tournament begins Thursday. (AP Laserphoto)

Finally One Thing Jack Couldn't Do

DUBLIN, Ohio (AP) — There's this one little item Jack Nicklaus couldn't control at the Memorial Tournament.

He's done everything else.

He created the tournament. Then he won it.

He designed and built the golf course. He shaped the format. He arranged the financing and the tournament dates.

He's supervised every detail — selecting the type of sand for the bunkers, the placement of trees and mounds, the moving of hundreds of tons of earth, even selected the type of sandwiches sold during the four days of the ambitious event that begins Thursday.

But even Nicklaus — the game's greatest player, the man who promotes silence from rowdy pros when he enters a locker room, who is held in awe by his fellow touring pros — even he couldn't handle the weather.

His pro-am tournament got rained out.

With former President Gerald Ford and Bob Hope ready to play, tournament officials announced Tuesday that the pro-am was off. A night-long rain made unplayable Nicklaus' pride and joy, his dream course, the tough, 7,101-yard, par 72 Muirfield Village Golf Club layout.

The weather, however, was expected to improve. Clearing was forecast for today's practice round for the select, invitational field of 102 pros who will be chasing about $225,000 in total prizes with further improvement for the Thursday-through-Sunday tournament dates.

And, even though he is vitally concerned and somewhat distracted by the myriad details of conducting a tournament. Nicklaus remains the favorite.

He kept his mind on the game well enough to win the second Memorial last year.

Aycock Slips By Rams, 5-4

SNOW HILL — C.B. Aycock stalled Greene Central's claiming of the Eastern Carolina Conference title last night with a 5-4 win over the Rams.

The loss dropped Greene Central to 11-2 in the conference, with one game left to play, a game with Conley today. A victory in that would give the Rams the title. A loss would drop them into a two or three-way tie, depending on how Aycock and Farmville Central finish the season.

Aycock pushed over two runs in the first inning. Ben Beaman walked and Randy Jones reached on a bunt single. Bobby Singleton reached on an error, scoring Beaman, and Jones scored when Rex Pennington grounded out.

Greene Central tied it up with two in the second. Al Murray singled and Jeff Scott got a hit. Jimbo Fulghum doubled in Murray and an error on the relay let Scott score.

Aycock moved back ahead with one in the third. Beaman walked, Jones again bunted safely, and Pennington walked to load them up. Greg Hare reached on a fielder's choice, scoring Beaman.

The Rams came back with one in the fourth to tie it once more, 3-3. Murray reached on an error, stole second and took third on an out. He scored when Scott reached on an error.

The Rams got the lead at 4-3 in the fifth. Greg Holmes singled and was sacrificed up. He scored when Russell Brann singled.

But Aycock rallied for two in the top of the seventh. With one out, Jones reached on an error and Singleton doubled. Penning then singled to score both of them.

The Rams are now 15-7 overall and close out with Conley today.

Clyde's First Start Is A Winner

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

Tuesday's crowd of 3,737 in Cleveland was almost 32,000 less than the one that witnessed his heralded major league debut in Texas five years ago, but they saw another bonny performance by David Clyde.

Clyde was only 18 years old, the nation's No. 1 draft choice and less than a month out of Houston's Westchester High School when he took the mound for the Texas Rangers against the Minnesota Twins on June 27, 1973.

The ballyhooed bonus baby walked the first two batters he faced but fanned the next three, went five innings, allowed one hit — a two-run homer — and emerged a 4-3 winner in a game that has been voted the big moment in Rangers' history.

That was the best of times. After that, things deteriorated to the worst of times and Clyde spent the last three years in the minors, undergoing shoulder surgery two years ago to relieve an entrapped nerve. The Rangers finally gave up and traded him and his 7-18 major league record to Cleveland this spring, where he became the personal reclamation project of Manager Jeff Torborg and pitching coach Harvey Haddix.

On Tuesday, Clyde made his first 1978 start after three solid relief appearances and 7-18 became 8-18 when the left-hander fired a four-hitter and struck out seven as the Indians turned back the Oakland A's 3-2.

In other American League action, the Boston Red Sox nipped the Kansas City Royals 3-2, the New York Yankees whipped the Chicago White Sox 8-3, the Detroit Tigers outlasted the Seattle Mariners 4-2 in 16 innings, the Toronto Blue Jays shaded the California Angels 5-4, the Milwaukee Brewers edged the Texas Rangers 4-3 and the Minnesota Twins pounded the Baltimore Orioles 8-1.

Red Sox 3, Royals 2

Dwight Evans belted a tie-breaking home run in the seventh inning and unbeaten Bill Lee scattered nine hits for his sixth victory. Loser Paul Splittorff nursed a 2-0 lead into the fifth but the Red Sox tied it on a walk, a single by Evans, Bob Bailey's sacrifice fly, a sacrifice bunt and a single by Rick Burleson. The Royals got two men on in the ninth but Lee retired the next three hitters.

Yankees 8, White Sox 3

Seldom-used Ken Holtzman, with perfect 11-out relief from Rich Gossage and backed by a 14-hit attack, gained his first victory since May 1, 1977. The veteran left-hander, making only his third appearance of the season and first since April 19, gave up eight hits and three runs in 5 1-3 innings. Chris Chambliss drove in three runs for the winners. Bobby Bonds homered for the losers and was traded to Texas after the game.

Tigers 4, Mariners 2

Lance Parrish blasted a two-out, two-run homer in the bottom of the 16th inning off Shane Rawley to end a 4½-hour marathon. Steve Foucault and John Hiller combined to pitch 9 2-3 innings of shutout relief for the Tigers, who sent the game into extra innings with a run in the bottom of the ninth on Jason Thompson's double, a wild pitch and a sacrifice fly by Steve Kemp.

Blue Jays 5, Angels 2

Dave McKay tripled home the tying run in the eighth inning and scored on Otto Velez' pinch double. The rally started when Tommy Hutton drew a one-out walk off loser Don Aase. Velez' blow came off Dave LaRoche.

Brewers 4, Rangers 3

Sal Bando drove in a pair of runs with a grounder and a double and scored the winner on Sixto Lezcano's eighth-inning sacrifice fly as Lary Sorensen outdueled Doyle Alexander.

Twins 8, Orioles 1

Minnesota's Dave Goltz won his first game of the season and rookie Hosk drove in five runs with his first major league homer and a single. Goltz, a 20-game winner last season, hadnt pitched since April 21 after suffering cracked ribs in an April 22 brawl with the Angels in Anaheim. He pitched six innings.

Butch Wynegar hit a two-run homer for the Twins.

Clint Clowns

Kansas City Royals' rookie first baseman Clint Hurdle tries to improve his defensive play by using shin guards and a goalie's stick while clowning with other members of the Royals before their game with the Boston Red Sox on Monday. Hurdle borrowed the hockey stick from the coach of the Kansas City Red Wings who "threw" out the first pitch with it. (AP Laserphoto)

Chargerettes Down Lady Jags

LITTLEFIELD — Ayden-Grifton's girls romped to a 22-6 victory over Farmville Central in Eastern Carolina Conference softball yesterday.

Farmville pushed over four runs in the top of the first, but Ayden-Grifton came back to score six in their half of the inning. The Chargerettes added three in the second and two more in the third.

Then, after Farmville Central got another run in the sixth, Ayden-Grifton exploded for 11 runs to put the game far out of reach. Farmville got one more in the seventh.

Karen Haseley hurled the win, and also added two hits including a home run. Marie Lewis led the Chargerette hitting with four, while Irene Lewis had three. Ann Strong and Pam Fulford each had two.

Diana Gordon had two to lead Farmville.

Ayden-Grifton closed out the year with a 10-4 league mark and a 12-5 overall record.

Seaver Wins Second Game

By JOHN NELSON
AP Sports Writers

To Tom Seaver, it looked like the same old story. Three batters, three singles, "and I started thinking that maybe the roof was falling in again."

The building in which Seaver fashioned his second victory of the season is still standing, however.

After giving up a run in the first inning on three consecutive singles, the Cincinnati Reds "ace" held the Montreal Expos scoreless on seven hits, one walk and 13 strikeouts for his first complete game in nine starts and a 5-1 victory Tuesday night.

"It's a step in the right direction," said Seaver, who's now 2-4. "I've had a history of having trouble in the first inning. No matter how long I warm up, I have trouble.

Joe Morgan drove in four of Cincinnati's runs with a three-run homer in the fifth and an RBI double in the first. Ken Griffey drove in Seaver, who had walked to lead off the fifth, with the other Reds' run. Pete Rose had three hits — two of them doubles — and scored twice.

In other National League contests, Houston beat Philadelphia 6-1, San Francisco nipped Chicago 4-3, San Diego downed St. Louis 7-5 and Los Angeles edged Pittsburgh 3-2. Atlanta at New York was rained out.

Astros 6, Phils 1

Terry Puhl scored one run after tripling in the Astros' three-run first inning and hit a solo homer in the eighth, giving Houston its fourth straight victory.

Steve Carlton, 4-4, absorbed the loss, only his ninth in 31 career decisions against Houston, and Mark Lemongello, 3-4, got the win after working 51-3 innings.

Giants 4, Cubs 3

Larry Herndon drove home the winning run in the eighth inning with a bloop double, and Bob Knepper, 5-1, scattered six hits as Western Division-leading San Francisco won its sixth straight.

Cubs outfielder Dave Kingman had tied the game in the top of the eighth with a booming home run, his fifth in three games.

Padres 7, Cards 5

Gene Tenace drove in three runs with a triple and a bases-loaded walk off reliever Mark Littell to pace San Diego. The Padres scored four runs in the first, highlighted by Tenace's two-run triple off the left field fence. Left-hander Bob Owchinkco, 3-2, got the win while John Urrea, 2-5, took the loss.

Dodgers 3, Pirates 2

Don Sutton, 3-4, got his first victory in three weeks, and Los Angeles scored all its runs in the first inning to beat Pittsburgh.

One of the Dodgers' runs scored on a bases-loaded balk by Pirates starter John Candelaria, 2-6. The others came home on Steve Garvey's ground out and Dusty Baker's single.

Jump Balls Leave ACC

MYRTLE BEACH, S.C. (AP) — Jump balls are a thing of the past in Atlantic Coast Conference basketball as a result of action taken by the league during its spring meeting.

In the past, each half of a game started with the referee tossing the ball up and a player from each team trying to tip it to a teammate. The same procedure was used when the officials could not determine who last touched the ball before it went out of bounds.

Beginning next season, the visiting team will open the game by putting the ball in play from beneath the home team's basket and the teams will alternate bringing the ball in afterward.

"If it's the end of the game and it's tied, and it's the other team's turn, you've got to live with the decision," conference information director Marvin "Skeeter" Francis told reporters Tuesday at the end of the four-day meeting.

ACC Commissioner Robert James said the Southwestern Conference did away with tossups last year and has asked the National Collegiate Athletic Association rules committee to do the same next year.

ACC athletic directors "don't seem to think there'll be any problem in getting it approved. It's more or less just a matter of notifying the rules committee," Francis added.

The conference will continue using three officials in basketball games and officials from other conferences in tournament play, the ACC officials said. They said the ACC will seek an exchange of officials with another conference for tournaments.

Three officials were first used this past season and the March tournament was the first time officials from another conference were used.

Also, the conference will return to a three-day tournament, with three games on Thursday, two Friday and the championship Saturday. This year the games were on Wednesday, Thursday and Saturday.

Faculty representatives chairman J.W. Sawyer and William Sangster, a faculty representative from Georgia Tech, signed documents Tuesday making Tech the eighth member of the ACC effective July 1, 1979. The conference announced recently that Tech had been selected for membership.

Sawyer said Tech will be included on ACC teams' basketball schedules and eligible for the championship in the 1979-80 season.

It has not been determined when Tech will be eligible for the league football title. The Yellow Jackets play one ACC team, Duke, this fall. Conference rules now require ACC teams to play a full league schedule.

James also announced the regular season baseball champion will represent the ACC in NCAA post-season play since the conference has decided to drop its baseball tournament beginning next spring. He said the tournament conflicted with final exam schedules of member schools.

ACC championships will be held for women in cross-country and swimming this year, the officials said. A women's volleyball championship will be developed later. Tennis and basketball championship meets are already held.

James also said Greensboro Coliseum, rather than a university, will be the site of the league's 1980 indoor track meet.

Here is the schedule of ACC championship events, except football, for the coming year as announced Tuesday:

—Women's cross-country, at Wake Forest Oct. 28.

—Men's cross-country, North Carolina State Nov. 4.

—Women's swimming, North Carolina State Feb. 15-17.

—Men's swimming, Duke Feb. 22-24.

—Wrestling, Clemson Feb. 23-34.

—Indoor track, Maryland Feb. 24.

—Fencing, North Carolina State Feb. 24.

—Women's basketball, North Carolina State Feb. 8-10.

—Men's basketball, Greensboro, N.C., March 1-3.

—Men's tennis, Virginia April 13-15.

—Outdoor track, North Carolina April 20-21.

Dates and sites for women's tennis and men's golf will be set later.

Chicod In Sweep

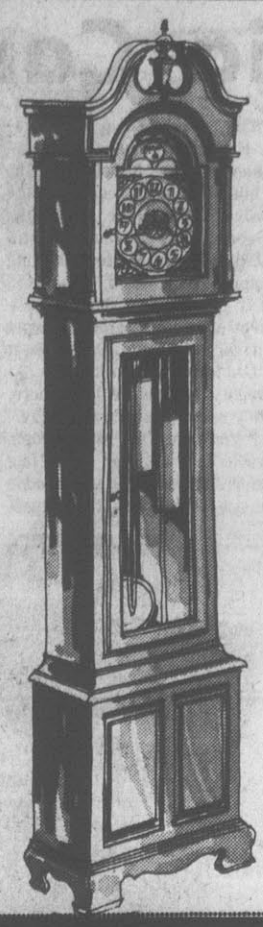

CHICOD — Chicod swept a pair of junior high ballgames from Farmville yesterday with a 13-2 softball victory and 4-1 baseball win.

Annette Manning was the winning pitcher in the softball game. Laura Ellison, Diane Roach and Cathy Joyner each had two hits for Chicod, while Strickland had a pair for Farmville.

Roy Lassiter hurled the baseball victory. Randy Brown had two hits, including a home run for Farmville, while none of the Chicod batters had more than one hit.

PROPHECY OFF

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Before meeting Arkansas in basketball in 1978, Texas coach Abe Lemons said the Razorbacks couldn't be beaten with their five starters in the game. Texas did win, 75-69, to give Arkansas its first defeat of the season.

Millionaires Plentiful In Georgia Carpet Town

By CHARLES S. TAYLOR

DALTON, Ga. (UPI) — There's gold in the north Georgia hills, and if you don't believe it, ask the 75 millionaires in Dalton.

It's not the kind of gold found in the ground; this wealth comes rolling off tufting machines in 12-foot widths at an incredible volume.

But like the gold rush days of the century past, the burgeoning tufted carpet industry has made a boomtown of Dalton, population 23,132, creating millionaires of both native sons and Yankees attracted to the area by the astounding growth of tufted carpeting.

There are some 300 manufacturers in the carpeting industry and approximately 175 are located in the Dalton area, 90 miles north of Atlanta and 30 miles south of Chattanooga. The Dalton plants account for more than 60 per cent of total U.S. production. They employ 14,000 workers, and have a payroll in excess of $102 million annually.

Ninety-seven per cent of all carpets manufactured in the United States are of the tufted variety (like a tuft of grass) with only 3 per cent woven. A few years ago the figures were the reverse.

Gib Watts, president of the First National Bank of Dalton, the city's largest, estimated the number of millionaires in the city, 11 more than a few years ago. Watts said sales of tufted carpet climbed to $3.5 billion last year, with $2 billion of that amount coming from plants in Dalton and surrounding Whitfield County.

The Carpet and Rug Institute, the promotional arm of the industry, is located in Dalton, housed in a building where even the walls are covered with carpet. Partitions between offices are made of carpet, and the steps of the building down to the parking lot are carpeted.

"We have some very wealthy people who live in this town," said Ned Hopper, director of consumer affairs for the institute. "People come here, they make their money and they live here. They blend right into this town."

Dalton is the technological center of the tufted carpet industry, according to Hopper, and is the place that others who want to enter the business come to learn the know-how, including the Japanese.

"This is one product in the United States that we make faster and better than Japan. We are keeping ahead of them in this line."

He said that last year the plants in Dalton turned out about 10 per cent more carpet than the year before and economic indicators point to another good year in 1978.

Motorists on nearby Interstate 75 know they are in the Dalton area when they begin to see retail stores selling carpet remnants. Hopper describes this as a $19 million annual business. The stores buy remmants from manufacturers who have parts of carpet rolls left from their wholesale transactions.

Hopper says these stores — there are 157 in the area — sell both first quality carpets and seconds. "We get very few complaints from this area about the quality of the carpets," he said.

Hopper says that if a visitor is looking for carpet and just passing through the area, "yes, it's probably worth your while to stop in Dalton and buy some carpet, but not if you have to make a special trip."

Exxon Chemicals, which supplies carpet backing to the Dalton plants, recently published a brochure about the Georgia city. "You can still strike it rich in the carpeting capital of the world," it said.

It quoted Tom Jones, president of one of the large carpet firms, as saying Dalton is a "Cinderella community — mighty few people leave here, they come here and they stay.

"You take what many people would call a 'small town' like ours and see what we've done to an industry. In the biggest growth years our country has seen, 1950 to 1975, we've managed to reduce the wholesale cost of carpeting by almost 40 per cent — from $6.26 a square yard in 1950 to about $3.90 in 1975. I'd say that's a pretty good performance."

The millionaires of Dalton readily give credit for the birth of their lucrative industtry to Catherine Evans Whitener, who made the first tufted bedspread in 1895 by using a needle and thread to sew a locked stitch that looked like a tuft of grass. A bronze plaque commemorating Mrs. Whitener, who died in 1964, hangs in the institute building.

Mrs. R.E. Hamilton, widow of one of Dalton's pioneers in the tufting industry, described the early tufted bedspread business as a woman's industry. Bedspreads were made in rural homes all over the north Georgia countryside, she said. U.S. 41, called the Dixie Highway then, became known as "bedspread boulevard."

In 1950 machines capable of sewing goods 12 feet wide were constructed and the modern broadloom, or tufted carpet industry, was born.

'Darien Gap' Obstacle To The Pan-Am Highway

By RAFAEL BERMUDEZ
With Tomas A. Cupas in Panama City and Clifford Krauss in Mexico City

BOGOTA, Colombia (UPI) — The Darien Gap is a 250-mile stretch of jungles, swamp and hill country inhabited by primitive but friendly Cuma and Choco indans.

It is rugged, to say the least. The swamp portions are the worst. Some have called them impenetrable except by river. Others say it is, in some respects, no worse than some parts of Louisiana and Florida.

To the north and south of the gap, there are roads of varying quality fulfilling the 89-year-old dream of a Panamerican highway from Alaska all the way to the southern-most tip of South America.

But in the gap construction now awaits the end of the rainy season. Work has been done on parts of this last incomplete link in the Panam. But it hasn't even started on one section, about 50 miles in Colombia.

For now, anyone trying to cross this area encompassing much of southern Panama and a section of northern Colombia must face foot-long spiders, stinging ants, poisonous snakes, electric eels, malaria and cholera, among other things.

"Even with a horse it would be rough crossing it. The only way you can cross it by land now is by foot," says Earl Schneider, a U.S. official assigned to Bogota. "You can cut down a certain type of tree that grows there and it will grow back three to four feet in a week."

It has been crossed on foot, however. A British Army task force of 235 crack troops and support personnel set out to do it in 1972. Most didn't make it. But about 100 did. Since then, others have made the trek.

Until the Darien Highway is completed, south-bound travelers must load their cars on ships in Panama and unload at any of several ports in Colombia in order to get around the swamp.

"If all funds were available we could complete it in seven to eight years," said Schneider, whose job with the U.S. Federal Highway Administration is to spearhead U.S. interest in the Darien Highway.

"Engineering-wise we're convinced we can do it," he told UPI in an interview.

But a Colombian official said lack of funds could delay completion of the highway until the next century. Overall cost estimates range from $100 million to $180 million and more.

Also holding up construction is the fear of the spread of hoof and mouth disease which, although virtually erradicated in North America, persists in areas of Central and South America. Colombia has cited these fears as a reason for delay.

But for three years, until this March, work was stalled for another reason. Environmentalists filed suit in Washington in 1975 and won an injunction against construction. The suit contended the highway would disrupt the ecological balance of the Darien Gap and pervert the primitive cultures of those who live in the jungle region.

Lower courts ruled in favor of the environmentalists but in March a District of Colombia Circuit Court reversed prior decisions allowing the highway to be built.

Schneider said some of the claims regarding the ruggedness of the Darien Gap have been exaggerated, but he said the area does present some unique problems.

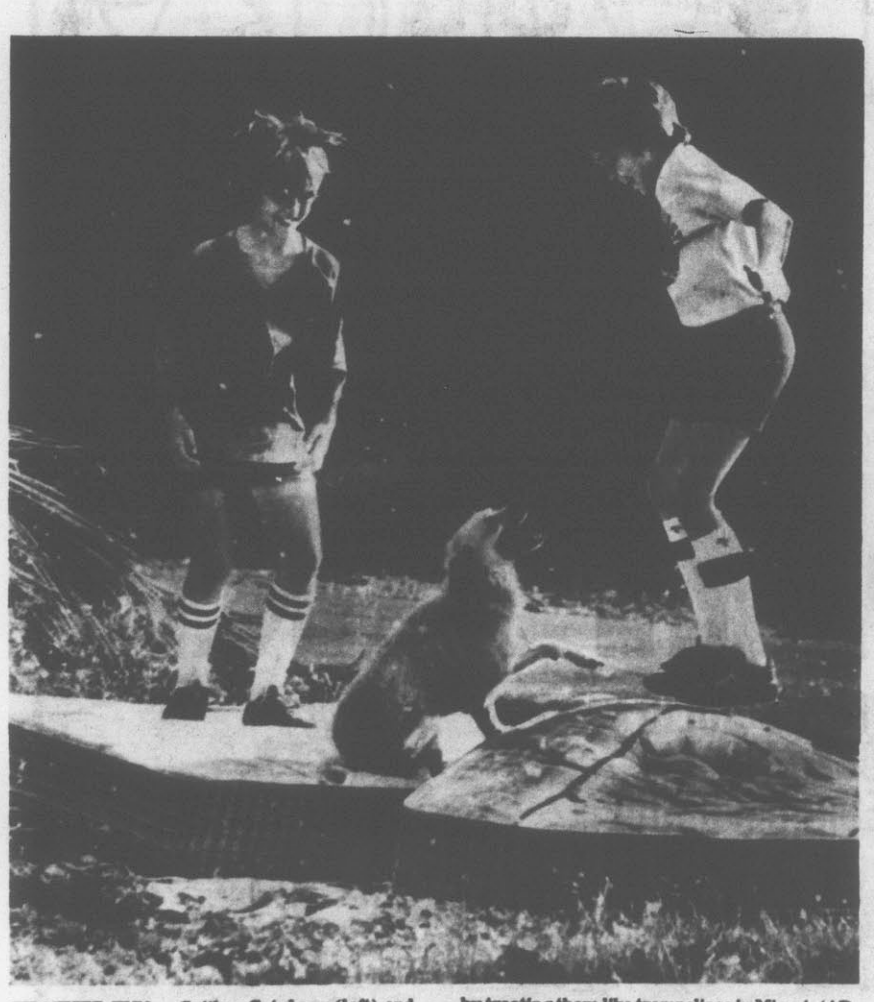

Schneider believes mud in parts of the swamp may reach as deep as 140 feet. The roadbed would probably have to be built nine feet high.

Actually, much work has been done in Panama. Much of $100 million the U.S. Congress authorized to Panama and Colombia for the highway was allocated for construction of 130 bridges over rivers, lagoons, and mountain passes.

Schneider remains optimistic about the remaining work. He says the highway across the swamp should not be much more difficult than construction of roads through similar terrain in Florida and Louisiana.

One of those who has crossed the gap, Bernard Diederich, a correspondent for Time magazine, remains awed by the difficulties the builders face. He particularly cites lack of solid bottom in the swamps.

"You can hardly find the bottom of those things," he said in Mexico City. "They're worse than the jungles. I don't know how the hell they're going to do it."

Maybe 10,000 'Bag Ladies' Roaming In New York

By JANE SEE WHITE
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The bent, rag-wrapped women are creatures of the streets. Clutching tattered, bulging shopping bags, these haunting specters dwell at the misty edge of the urban mind.

They huddle on subway trains and park benches. Their legs swathed in rags against the cold, they pick deliberately through garbage cans. Passersby plot a cautious course around them as they doze in doorways.

They are sometimes called "shopping bag ladies," and they somehow have gravitated to their impersonal purgatories in the larger cities. In New York, some estimate there may be 10,000 of these aimless, homeless derelicts. No one knows.

A stout woman, she sits on a concrete floor, cross-legged, chewing absently on an apple. It is warm in the subway station, but she wears a dirt-streaked gray coat, gloves, trousers, rubber boots. Insulation from the world? Shopping bags are heaped in the corner behind her. Pillows.

Another huddles on a milk crate in a sheltered cranny of Penn Central Station. A frayed gold blanket is draped over her head and around her body. Only a think, scowling face is exposed. Her eyes dart after the commuters scurrying by.

"Every so often, her family hauls her away, gets her committed. After a few days, she's back," the flower vendor says, shaking his head ruefully. "Don't try to talk to her. She'll just scream at you."

There are comforting, sometimes fictional captions, to explain their disturbing presence. There are crossed wires under their matted hair. They are there by choice. They are gripped by paranoia that compels them to flee human warmth. They are really eccentric matrons who live on Sutton Place or Beacon Hill, donning rags daily to sally into the streets, a bizarre alternative to bridge club.

"It's sort of like trying to classify pedestrians. Everyone's different," says Louise Riskin, a New York social worker. "It's impossible to generalize about them because they're all there for different reasons."

Which may explain why experts who deal with them disagree on whether most are former psychiatric patients or not, whether they are alcoholics or not, whether they are shrinking from public gaze or thrusting themselves upon it.

The most widely-held theory is that these women have somehow slipped through the fabric of the mental health establishment. Many believe they suffer from a form of paranoid schizophrenia.

Many of those who do talk with the women find them prone to tell what seem to be tall tales: "Separating truth from fantasy is almost impossible," says Dr. Alan Beck, a city official who last year supervised a study of street dwellers in Greenwich Village.

Dr. Richard Reich, New York City Human Resources Administration psychiatrist, tells of one bag lady who claims to be an illegitimate daughter of Britain's Queen Elizabeth. "They usually have some fantastic story of abuse or mistreatment or involvement with famous people," he says.

Ms. Riskin says there's little aid available because the bag ladies have been written off as contented crazies. "Everybody has a story to explain them, but nobody knows anything about them," she says. "You don't have to do anything if you decide they don't want help."

Ms. Riskin has spent the last three years befriending bag ladies, asking them their needs and digging into her own pocket to help. She says they want help, and need it — urgently.

"They do die on the street. They do pick up diseases. They are, for the most part, starving," she says. "The problem is that no one asks them what kind of service they want."

What they want varies, she says, but few want the kind of programs available — those that schedule their activities into a tidy, compartmentalized day.

One of Ms. Riskin's theories is that transient hotels offering cheap single-occupancy rooms "are so awful that the ladies feel safer on the street."

Beck says one bag lady lives in an SRO but takes a bus daily to Herald Square, 30 blocks south, where she squats all day on a streetcorner, accepting handouts with a quick nod of thanks.

She comes to Herald Square, she told him, because it isn't safe to sit on the corner in the neighborhood where she lives.

"Shopping bag ladies choose their lifestyle. Obviously they're paranoid — they live outside, they resist the options," says Ed Geffner who works with the Bowery Project.

During the course of his study, Beck has come to agree. "It's not poverty that brings them into the streets; there's a real mental break with reality. This may be the urban equivalent of hermitism. It's not easy to be a hermit in New York City, but they are lone wolves, totally asocial."

Among 53 street people Beck and colleague Philip Marden observed, none made regular use of soup lines and other food programs. Two found all their food in trash cans.

"If you go to a soup line, you have to sit next to someone, you have to ask that the ketchup be passed," Beck says.

The women Beck studied developed survival networks not unlike a small protective community — they came to know shopkeepers who hand out food, neighborhood residents who regularly offer dimes or quarters.

Father John McVean of the Church of St. Francis of Assisi, like Beck, believes many of the bag ladies he's tried to help are mentally ill. He's convinced that their numbers are growing because of the Department of Mental Hygiene's policy of releasing mental patients to the community if they no longer acutely need hospital care.

System Stops Back Injuries

PHOENIX (AP) — Since Phoenix adopted a one-man mechanical refuse collection system, the city has seen personal injuries drop to almost zero, an official says.

Previously, there were a number of back injuries, although still average for the industry, according to William C. McSpadden, assistant director of the department for maintenance and sanitation here.

Morale improved also, McSpadden said, because the operator now works in an enclosed cab in the truck. Hydraulic arms on the side of the truck grab standardized garbage cans, lift the container, empty it and return it to the ground.

Chagall Museum Has Rere Show

NICE, France (UPI) — The Marc Chagall museum will display beginning July 8 an exhibition of ancient sculpture lent by the Augustins Museum of Toulouse.

The 60 statues and columns of the 12th and 13th centuries represent more than six tons of fragile stone that must be brought from Toulouse to Nice.

ALPINE HIKING

VIENNA, Austria (UPI) — Tourists traveling to Austria this summer will be able to choose from 250 different hiking excursions through the Austrian Alps. The routes will be available in book form.

DEER, OH DEER! — Peter, a 150-pound buck deer, trots nervously away from helping hands at the home of his owner near Rome, N.Y. He stayed beyond reach for five hours despite all efforts. Finally, police put him to sleep with a tranquilizing dart gun so that the drinking pail could be eased off his antlers. (AP Laserphoto)

FORECAST FOR THURSDAY, MAY 18, 1978

Your Daily HOROSCOPE

from the CARROLL RIGHTER INSTITUTE

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Not a good time to work out association or partnership arrangements with other persons. Do those things yourself that require neat touch and precision. Wait until another day for conferring and making arrangements with other persons for a more harmonious relationship.

ARIES (March 21 to Apr. 19) Partners are apt to buck where your ideas are concerned, so use diplomacy and they soon come around to your way of thinking. A situation arises that will need some time to straighten out. Don't act hastily.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Get at all that work ahead of you and don't be dependent on others and you accomplish a good deal. Remain poised so that you do not ruin your nervous system. Take it easy.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Do not indulge in recreation that is too expensive for your pocketbook and show you are wise. Be more willing to cooperate with loved ones. Make life together more ideal.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Avoid a tendency to argue at home and try to establish greater harmony instead. Get rid of tension. Plan a trip that can bring good results, whether of a personal or business nature.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Use much care in driving, walking, since both you and others are apt to make mistakes. Use care in speaking also, sinced tempers incline to be short.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Be careful in handling financial affairs since you could make serious errors otherwise. Make improvements to real estate and other holdings so that you feel more secure.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) You feel dissatisfied and want to make new connections, change your way of living. Wait for a better day before getting started. Analyze financial position well.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Be careful in making loans or giving other favors, since they might not all be bona fide. Listen to advice given you by an intelligent friend.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Not a good day to see friends since they are preoccupied with their own affairs. Study fondest aims and how to best gain them. Have a plan for living.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) This is not a good day to get much done where credit matters are concerned, so postpone until tomorrow. Be alert to any changes within your community. Go along with the best of these.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) You want to make radical changes, but think them over carefully before you take action. Get your work done in a more up-to-date fashion instead and get good results.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Do what others expect of you and don't waste time foolishly. Try to please good friends more. Evening fine for personal happiness with loved ones.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will have the ability to be of great help to others and solve heavy problems that are difficult for them. Slant education along lines of law, medicine, psychiatry or any profession that means using the fine artistic abilities here, also. One who will want to live a cultured and charming life, be a boon to humanity at large.

The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to YOU!

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♡	Pass	2 ♡	Pass
4 ♡	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Jack of ♠.

The development of the play can be truly fascinating. On this hand declarer reached a three-card end position where East-West held a winner in every suit including the master trump. Yet they could score only one trick!

South's decision to jump to four hearts, not vulnerable, is a slight stretch. However, it is quite likely that a trial bid in a minor suit would have resulted in the same contract.

West led the jack of spades, won by the ace. The declarer, Tom Griffin of New York, who is returning to tournament play after an absence of four years, decided that his best chance was to ruff diamonds in dummy. As a precaution to prevent a heart return from East, declarer first cashed one high trump, then exited with a low diamond toward dummy.

West realized that if East was allowed to win the first diamond trick, he would have no safe return, so West rose with the queen of diamonds and returned a low spade. Dummy's nine forced East's king and declarer ruffed. The queen of clubs lost to the ace, and the club continuation was taken by the king. On the queen of spades declarer discarded his remaining club, then he ruffed a club in his hand and a diamond in dummy. He returned to his hand with the king of hearts, to bring about this position:

♣ 9

♠ 10 ♣ 7
♡ Q ♡ —

◇ — ◇ A J
♣ J ♣ —

Declarer had already taken eight tricks, and despite the fact that the defenders controlled every suit, they were helpless to prevent him from collecting two more for his contract. Declarer led a diamond. If West ruffed, declarer would score his trumps separately; if West discarded, declarer would ruff in dummy and then ruff whichever black suit West retained.

Rubber bridge clubs throughout the country use the four-deal bridge format. Do they know something you don't? Charles Goren's "Four-Deal Bridge" will teach you the strategies and tactics of this fast-paced action game that provides the cure for unending rubbers. For a copy and a scorepad, send $1.00 to "Goren-Four Deal," c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 259, Norwood, N.J. 07648. Make checks payable to NEWSPAPERBOOKS.

Today's Cryptoquip clue: V equals T

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Prosecutor Waged Three-Year Fight

By MONTE PLOTT
Associated Press Writer

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — For three years, while his office sifted through reams of paper and fought for indictments concerning alleged political funds within Southern Bell Telephone Co., Mecklenburg County District Attorney Peter Gilchrist III politely declined to talk publicly about the case.

During the past two years, Gilchrist's indictments against 16 current or former Southern Bell executives were dismissed, the company dodged a jury trial by pleading guilty in a negotiated bargain and the only individual to come to trial was acquitted.

But with the acquittal last week of former Southern Bell vice president John Ryan, the case closed for local prosecutors and Gilchrist ended his silence.

"I have a feeling of definite success," the bespectacled 39-year old prosecutor said in an interview Tuesday.

"We took the world's largest corporation and convicted one of their subsidiaries of a serious criminal offense."

Southern Bell, an arm of American Telephone and Telegraph Co., was charged in Charlotte with 25 counts of fraud and embezzlement in connection with political contributions. In February, prosecutors accepted a guilty plea to one count of misapplying funds, and the company was fined $310,712.

Prosecutors also agreed that no further indictments would be sought against company executives.

"The company didn't negotiate a bargain. The company pled guilty and the judge imposed his sentence. We had some problems with the case in that certain individuals that we would have liked to have prosecuted were immunized as a matter of law. And I think that hurt us," Gilchrist said.

Indictments against four company officials, including Southern Bell President L.E. Rast, had been dismissed earlier because of a state law which blocked prosecution for anything they told investigators.

"We had gone about as high up the corporate ladder as we could have gone. There were a number of individuals that we had called to testify who, in the corporate hierarchy, were far below these that had been charged," Gilchrist said.

"I don't think, as a matter of justice, after the men at the top had gone free that we should have gone back in and indicted the lower echelon ones who, in my opinion, were less culpable than those further up the line."

Ironically that left only Ryan — who blew the whistle on Southern Bell political funds in 1975 and put Gilchrist's office on the case by telling reporters he managed such a fund in North Carolina — to face trial on charges he took company money for personal use.

Gilchrist is quick to point out that Ryan faced charges not directly connected with political slush funds, and that indictments stemming from those funds were dismissed against him along with other Southern Bell officials.

But Gilchrist knows that, in the eyes of the jury, there was only one man who was facing jail and he was the whistleblower.

"I think there's no question about that (having an effect on the jury)," Gilchrist said.

"In view of all the circumstances, I think the jury may have reached a proper verdict."

He elaborated by saying, "our founding fathers may have had the foresight to realize there may be situations where the jury may say 'the guy's guilty, but for other reasons we're going to find him not guilty.'"

Gilchrist said he had other matters pending and did not prosecute the Ryan case, leaving that to Assistant District Attorney Joe Dozier. The 29-year-old Dozier and Gilchrist concentrated on the Southern Bell case for three years, which Gilchrist said left a "tremendous drain" on his 18-man staff.

"I feel he handled the case as well as anyone could have. It was very tough," Gilchrist said.

While Ryan was on the witness stand, he launched into elaborate explanations of political funds within Southern Bell.

"We suspected there was certain information which only Ryan possessed. And to put him in the position to bring this out was — I don't know that that was an intent — I felt that would be a by product of the trial."

In three years, the local district attorney's office compiled stacks of paperwork relating to the case and, on one occasion, received a steamer truck full of papers requested from Southern Bell. The case, Gilchrist said, has given him the opportunity to "look at a big corporation, at the amount of resources which it had at its disposal, which it could bring to bear on anything it wanted to."

And, he said he is satisfied that all has come out that should have been revealed, "with respect to what occurred in this jurisdiction.

"The implication to me, and I think, strengthend by the testimony which Ryan gave in his defense, was that similar plans had occurred in other jurisdictions in the Bell system," Gilchrist said.

"As a citizen, I'm interested in it."

Two Recognized By School Board

Two Greenville school students, Rose High senior Virginia Lynn Kimbrell and Elmhurst sixth grader Frances Woods, were recognized and congratulated by members of the Greenville City School Board at its Monday night meeting.

Ms. Kimbrell, a Rose High participant in the Industrial Cooperative Training (ICT) program, was recently named state winner of Job Interview Contest at the competition held in Asheville.

As state winner, she will go to Birmingham, Alabama on June 26 and remain there until June 30 to compete in the national level Job Interview competitions.

She is a dental assistant with Dr. Richard Evans in the ICT program. When asked by a school board member what she thought contributed most to her state victory, Ms. Kimbrell said "all I know is that I smiled a lot."

Frances Woods, earlier announced as the winner in the joint Pitt County-Greenville City School competition for a poster design on handicapped persons, with the theme "Make Life Accessible," has been notified that her poster has been selected as the best in the state

On May 26, Ms. Woods will go to Raleigh for a banquet honoring winners where she will receive recognition from Governor James Hunt.

Merit Scores Important Victory!

High tar smokers report low tar MERIT delivers flavor of leading high tar brands

Are the toughest "critics" of low tar cigarettes satisfied with the taste of MERIT vs. leading high tar brands?

Read the results from a new nationwide research effort.

Results Confirm Breakthrough

Confirmed: Majority of high tar smokers rate MERIT taste equal to—or better than—leading high tar cigarettes tested! Cigarettes having up to twice the tar.

Confirmed: Majority of high tar smokers confirm taste satisfaction of low tar MERIT.

And in detailed interviews conducted among current MERIT smokers?

Confirmed: 85% of MERIT smokers say it was an "easy switch" from high tar brands.

Confirmed: 9 out of 10 MERIT smokers not considering other brands.

First Major Alternative To High Tar Smoking

MERIT has proven conclusively that it not only delivers the flavor of high tar brands—but continues to satisfy.

This ability to satisfy over long periods of time could be the most important evidence to date that MERIT is what it claims to be: The first major alternative for high tar smokers.

Saved Sword Of John Paul Jones

By PETER J. SHAW

DUMFRIES, Scotland (UPI) — The gold-hilted sword of John Paul Jones, father of the U.S. Navy, might never have reached America had his Scottish heirs not squabbled over its fate.

Better known as the town where Scotland's national poet Robert Burns drank heartily and died, Dumfries also claims a slice of John Paul Jones' history.

His will, written on the day of his death in Paris in 1792, left all his property to his two married sisters, Janet and Mary Ann, who lived in Dumfries. Jones was born at neighboring Arbigland in 1747.

Early in 1793 Janet and her brother-in-law went to Paris and returned with Jones' personal belongings, including the dress sword given him by the King of France following one of the most famous naval engagements of history.

Already one of his adopted country's naval heroes during the American Revolution, Jones heightened his fame on Sept. 23, 1779 off Scarborough, England.

Commanding the 42-gun USS Bon Homme Richard, Jones led a squadron including three smaller ships that intercepted Britain's Baltic merchant fleet under convoy of the 54-gun HMS Serapis and 20-gun HMS Countess of Scarborough.

Jones engaged Serapis by moonlight and for three and one-half hours the two ships lay yardarm to yardarm with the 36-gun Alliance, a U. S. frigate captained by an unruly Frenchman, twice circling them and firing indiscriminately into both.

Serapis was on fire when she struck her colors and Bon Homme Richard was about to sink.

"No action before was ever, in all respects, so bloody, so severe and so lasting," Jones later wrote. The carnage was so great that neither Jones nor Richard Pearson, commander of Serapis, ever issued a complete casualty list. One of Jones' junior officers estimated the dead and wounded on Bon Homme Richard alone at 302.

King Louis XVI, whose own plans for invading Britain had just ended badly, gave Jones a gold-hilted sword and made him a chevalier of France.

But the hero's luck turned sour in later life and Jones' body, preserved in alcohol in a lead coffin, was buried in an unmarked grave in a Paris cemetery for more than a century.

Patriotic Americans found it in 1905 and returned it to the United States with an escort of American warships.

His remains were placed in a marble mausoleum at the U.S. Naval Academy in Annapolis, Md. The gold-hilted sword, the most cherished of his honors, was put on display nearby.

The sword had been the object of bitter argument among his sisters' families over who should have it.

The problem was resolved when the sisters finally agreed it should not be sold but sent to America for posterity. In 1795 they dispatched the sword, in its black leather scabbard and packed in its original wooden case, to Robert Morris of Philadelphia, a statesman and trusted friend whom Jones in his deathbed will had named as his sole executor.

Morris gave the sword to Commodore John Barry to be subsequently passed on to the senior officer of the U. S. Navy. But Barry instead bequeathed the sword unconditionally to a friend, Capt. Richard Dale, who two months before the date of Barry's will had resigned his commission.

The sword remains in the Dale family, which has lent it to the Naval Academy.

In the 1790s one of Jones' nieces, Jean Williamson, established Dumfries' County Hotel in a private house the retreating Bonnie Prince Charlie used as his headquarters in 1745.

The hotel today retains the original dark wood panelling of the room in which the "Young Pretender" held war councils.

Like her illustrious uncle's, Mrs. Williamson's fortunes went bad.

Around 1814 she became bankrupt and was sent to jail.

How Tar Heel Representatives And Senators Voted

ROLL CALL REPORT

WASHINGTON—Here's how area Members of Congress were recorded on major roll call votes May 4 through May 10.

Budget

BUDGET CUT — Rejected, 195 for and 203 against, an amendment to cut the fiscal 1979 budget across-the-board by two per cent. It was proposed to H Con Res 559, the congressional budget resolution by which Congress sets "target" levels that restrict the amounts of later appropriations bills. The amendment sought to reduce the $501.4 million in outlays and the $568.2 billion in budget authority proposed for fiscal 1979, which begins in October. The House later adopted the resolution, with those figures intact, and sent ti to conference with the Senate.

Rep. Joseph Fisher, D-Va., the sponsor, said "there is no way we can convince people in this country that we cannot cut the budget by that amount...."

Rep. Norman Mineta, D-Calif., an opponent, said: "This seemingly innocuous two per cent cut could have drastic ramifications, depending on where it fell."

Members voting "yea" favored the budget cut.

Reps. Walter Jones, D-1, L. H. Fountain, D-2, Stephen Neal, D-5 Richardson Preyer, D-6, W. G. Hefner, D-8, James Martin, R-9, James Broyhill, R-10, and Lama Gudgar, D-11, voted "yea".

Rep. Charles Rose, D-7, voted "nay."

Reps. Charles Whitley, D-3, and Ike Andrews, D-4, did not vote.

TUITION TAX CREDITS — Adopted, 227 for and 136 against, an amendment in support of a federat tax credit to defray tuition costs at colleges, post-secondary vocational schools and private elementary and secondary schools. The amendment merely made room in the fiscal 1979 budget for any later enactment of tuition tax credit legislation. It was attached to H Con Res 559, the fiscal 1979 budget resolution (see vote above). Parents' maximum tax saving would be $150 annually against college tuition and $100 against elementary and secondary school tuition.

Rep. Thomas Luken, D-Ohio, the sponsor, said the tax credit would benefit families that are "too poor to afford the costs of a college education, yet too well off for federal assistance."

Rep. Paul Simon, D-Ill., an opponent, said that under the tax credit "between 30 per cent and 55 per cent of the benefits will go to the top 20 per cent, income-wise, in the U.S., and that, it seems to me, is clearly not good public policy."

Members voting yea favored the tuition tax credit.

Jones, Fountain, Andrews, Neal, Preyer, Hefner, Martin, Broyhill and Gudger voted "nay."

Whitley and Rose did not vote.

KOREAGATE — Rejected, 146 for and 254 against, an amendment to cut $56 million from the proposed fiscal 1979 budget, in hopes of bringing about increased South Korean government cooperation with the House's investigation of the Koreagate scandal. The cut would have been in spending for Food-for-Peace, the federal program whose rice transactions were related to the alleged bribery of a few House members by South Koreans. The amendment was proposed to H Con Res 559, the congressional budget resolution (see votes above).

Rep. Robert Walker, R-Pa., a supporter, said that if the House rejects the amendment "it is going to be a clear signal to the South Koreans that as far as the House is concerned, we are no longer interested (in investigating Koreagate) and the issue will go away."

Rep. B. F. Sisk, D-Calif., an opponent, said he is "getting totally fed up with all of these charges about coverups...It is totally ridiculous to be here debating this silly, asinine issue, which has no place in connection with the handling of the budget..."

Members voting "yea" favored the amendment.

Jones, Andrews, Rose and Broyhill voted "nay."

Whitley and Martine did not vote.

CIVILETTI — Confirmed, 72, for and 22 against, the nomination of Benjamin R. Civiletti as dupty attorney general of the U.S. Much opposition to his becoming the second-ranking official in the Justice Department centered on the firing last year by the Carter Administration of Republican David Marston from his post as U.S. attorney in Philadelphia.

Sen. James Eastland, D-Miss., a supporter, said the 17 days of confirmation hearings on Civiletti "prove beyond any preadventure of a doubt that (he) is an outstanding attorney who has given up a lucrative law practice to serve the U.S. government."

Sen. Malcolm Wallop, R-Wyo., an opponent, cited the Marston affair and called himself "troubled" by Civiletti's "perpetuation of a contemporary morality of justice which connotes a double standard where politically expedient or convenient."

Senators voting "yea" favored confirmation.

Sen. Robert Morgan, D, voted "yea."

Sen. Jesse Helm, R, voted "nay."

REVOLVING DOOR? — Failed, 20 for and 75 against, to send back to committe — and thus reject — the nomination of Lynn R. Coleman as general counsel of the Department of Energy. Failure of this motion resulted in the confirmation of Coleman, whose nomination was opposed because he once belonged to a Houston law firm representing major oil companies and had been Washington lobbyist for Houston Natural Gas Co.

Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, sponsor of the motion, said the American public would dislike Coleman coming "directly out of the oil and gas industry, following the revolving door principle, to become the regulator of that very industry that he has been representing and is representing as of this moment."

Sen. John Tower, R-Tex., an opponent of the motion and backer of Coleman, called the nominee "a very fine lawyer who will bring to the new Department of Energy broad knowledge and experience in energy law."

Senators voting "nay" favored Coleman's confirmation.

Morgan and Helms voted "nay."

ABSENTEEISM — Rejected, 16 for and 48 against, an amendment changing Senate rules to require that at least 25 senators be present on the floor before legislative business may be conducted. It was proposed to S Res 219, later adopted.

Sen. Carl Curtis, R-Neb., the sponsor, said the rules change "would bring back...the traditional role and the necessary role of the U.S. Senate as a delibertative body....We will have better laws if we have better debate."

Sen. Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., an opponent, said: "To say that a senator can be ubiquitous as well as loquacious is stretching the imagination. It is impossible for a senator to be out on the Capitol steps meeting with the school groups, downtown representing his constituents at an agency, in his office... in committees...and also be on the Senate floor — all at the same time.

Senators voting "yea" favored the rules change.

Helms voted "yea."

Morgan did not vote.

New Action To Protect Ocean Life

By ANDREW WARSHAW

MORGES, Switzerland (AP) — Since the turn of the century, no less than 65 species of mammals under the sea are believed to have become extinct, as well as scores of underwater reptiles and countless sea birds.

Today, more than 12 species of whales, dolphins and porpoises, nine seal species, all coastal crocodiles, all marine turtles and 30 sea and coastal birds also face the danger of extinction.

It is the daunting task of Mats Segnestam and his team of scientists, conservationists and researchers to try to prevent these creatures and all others from joining the ranks of extinct animals and becoming mere legends of a thriving, exciting underwater world.

"People look at the oceans as one enormous sink — what many don't realize is just how much life goes on underneath," said Segnestam, a Swede.

Segnestam is the administrative brain behind the biggest individual conservation program ever undertaken by the International Union for the Conservation of Nature and Natural Resources (IUCN).

Named "The Seas Must Live," the program is financed by the IUCN's Morges partner, the World Wildlife Fund (WWF), which hopes to raise $10 million over the next three years to fund each of more than 100 IUCN conservation projects.

The program was launched in 1977 with at least 100 projects scheduled for investigation and ultimate conservation.

"The program is the best organized we've ever launched," said Segnestam in an interview with The Associated Press. "It is the first time we have embarked on a comprehensive study of all the extinction problems under the sea and identified plans of action."

Although Segnestam says it is too early to talk of "major successes," some 25 projects are already under way, manned by more than 150 experts.

Already, the effort is yielding results: a species of dolphin of Pakistan has been protected from extinction, a turtle species in Oman has been identified as endangered and experts have just finished the first phase of a project attaching harmless tags on to whales to track movements and identify nesting and traveling habits.

Early projects will be restricted to five stretches of water: the Caribbean, the Mediterranean, the South Pacific, the Red Sea and the Southern Indian Ocean. But by the time all $10 million is raised, Segnestam believes that not one stretch of water will be left unresearched.

Rough Winters For Crews Sailing Gulf Of Alaska

EDITOR'S NOTE — Life aboard an oil tanker can be one of monotony, broken only by a paint brush or a poker hand. Or it can be a sleepless battle to keep the ship from breaking up in high seas. Winters are the worst for both extremes in the Gulf of Alaska, and the crew looks to better days.

By WARD SIMS
Associated Press Writer

ABOARD THE SS ARCO JUNEAU (AP) — The Gulf of Alaska is a meanly capricious tyrant.

Sure, man may drill deep into the earth to extract oil to serve his needs. Sure, he may build mighty ships to carry it to distant places.

But when those ships put out from Valdez, Alaska, and leave Prince William Sound, the tyrant Gulf calls the tune. It may be benevolent, a peaceful lake without shores. But from October through April, the Gulf turns savage, the roughest waters in the world.

The log of Atlantic Richfield's 883-foot tanker Juneau:

"Ship working heavy in rough seas and swells, taking seas and spray over the bow ...

"Ship rolling deeply."

A floodlight on the foremast, 37 feet above the waterline, is torn away. The clapper of the ship's bell, fastened by a 1¼-inch bolt, snaps off. Metal fittings on the bow and deck are ripped free. That February voyage was one of the worst in the memory of the veteran crew.

Yet, the ship set out again the same month from Cherry Point, Wash., for Valdez, and back again in March to Puget Sound with 813,484 barrels of crude oil. The skies were bright, the seas gentle, and the crew was busy sprucing up the ship.

"Painting outside in March in the Gulf of Alaska? Unheard of," said Bosun Paul Farrenkopf of Philadelphia.

"It's one of the few times you'll ever see the sun in the gulf this time of year," said Capt. Emery A. McGowen of Huntington Beach, Calif. "I've seen seas 40 to 50 feet high many times in this gulf."

A tankerman 41 of his 60 years, McGowen thought back and said, "When you get weather like that, you stand your watch and try and rest — and you don't get much of that."

"You can't really rest. You just hang on," added Mike Ames of Matinicus, Maine, the third mate and, at 22, one of the youngest crewmen aboard.

"When the seas are running, you don't dare go out on deck," said second mate Justin Raymond of Somers, Mass. "There is blue water over everything, four to six feet deep. All of the watertight doors are kept closed, right up to the captain's deck."

The captain's deck is 45 feet above the waterline. McGowen remembers seas that smashed windows on the bridge 57 feet up.

"How do you rest? You get used to it, after a fashion says chief engineer Walt Olsen of Conroe, Texas. "I wedge myself into bed with pillows."

There is rarely talk of danger.

"Oh, you hear someone say 'I'll be glad when this is over,' or something like that," says Olsen. "But that's primarily the inexperienced. Look at the size of this ship. It's hard not to feel safe."

"It's always something out here during the winter months," said seaman Jim Hines of Los Angeles. "Fog, wind, rain. You name it."

Hines, who has been sailing since he was 16, is 56 now and one of the old hands aboard the 120,000-ton Juneau.

The ship is equipped with the latest in electronic navigation gear, including a computer which can plot the course and speed of as many as 40 other vessels in a 48-mile radius.

Every critical piece of equipment has a backup.

The ballast tanks are segregated; there is never oil in them. If ballast water is pumped into the cargo tanks, it is pumped ashore to remove all oil before it is returned to the sea.

And all of the ship's waste — from the galley garbage to the oil-streaked water of the bilges — goes into a slop tank which, when the ship is docked, is pumped into shoreside waste treatment facilities.

"Nothing is pumped over the side while we're at sea," McGowen said. "We want to see clean water just like everyone else, and we'd never do anything deliberate to pollute."

The walls are clean, the floors are waxed and the woodwork is polished. Inside and out, the paint is fresh.

Even in calm seas the ship rolls and pitches slightly. The neophyte measures the motion by watching sunlight from a porthole dance up and down on the wall. But the stomach begins to dance too, and that's enough of that.

On the steel deck, there is always a sound like that of rushing wind. It's oil sloshing back and forth in the cargo tanks below — some $10 million worth of crude.

The replacement value of this 4-year-old ship plus its cargo comes to about $70 million. Yet the crew numbers a mere 29.

The seagulls play an endless game of king-of-the-hill for the right to the three prime fish-watching perches of the ship, atop the foremast and the two king posts amidship.

The beat of the engine and the vibration of the ship's huge propeller blots out all other sound in the deckhouse.

It takes only 81 revolutions per minute for the five-bladed prop — 27½ feet in diameter — to drive the ship along at its cruising speed of 16 knots fully loaded.

Dress is informal. The skipper wears slacks, a plaid shirt.

Four hours on and eight hours off. Junior officers and the unlicensed crew have time to kill every trip.

Recreational opportunities are limited. Food takes up the slack. It is solid, varied and unlimited fare. Crewmen order as much as they want from every menu.

Art And Music Play A Big Part In U.N. Life

By WILLIAM N. OATIS
Associated Press Writer

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — There is a world of culture at the U.N.

The greatest musicians perform at concerts in the General Assembly hall on U.N. Day, Oct. 24, and Human Rights Day, Dec. 10.

The greatest painters and sculptors have their work on constant display in the U.N. complex, itself a benchmark in the history of architecture.

The U.N. secretariat arranges the concerts. Governments from among the 149 member countries bring most of the works of art here as gifts to the organization.

The U.N. staff union and 57 clubs organized among the 5,800 or more U.N. employees at headquarters present live performers and moving pictures from many countries.

And the U.N. Postal Administration is a patron of artists, paying them to design stamps.

The first of the concerts was on Human Rights Day in 1949, first anniversary of the assembly's adoption of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights. It was in Carnegie Hall because the United Nations had not yet moved here from Lake Success, Long Island.

Human Rights Day was observed by concerts at the New York Metropolitan Opera House in 1950 and the Palais de Chaillot in Paris when the assembly was in session there in 1951.

There were no concerts in 1952 and 1953. Norwegian Trygve Lie's last two years as U.N. secretary-general. But in 1954 Lie's culture-conscious successor, Dag Hammarskjold of Sweden, revived them, and they continued under Secretaries-General U Thant of Burma and Kurt Waldheim of Austria.

Two of the most striking art objects here are tributes erected to Hammarskjold after he was killed in a plane crash in Africa on Sept. 17, 1961.

One is a stained glass window designed by Marc Chagall, a French painter of Russian Jewish background, and donated by the artist and U.N. employees in memory of Hammarskjold and 15 others who died with him.

The glass panel, 15 feet wide and 12 feet high, stands in the lobby of the secretariat building, lit naturally from behind through a window on the East River. Against its blue background are bright-colored pictures seeming to symbolize mother love and crucifixion.

The other piece, standing 21 feet over a fountain in front of the same building, is an abstract bronze sculpture by Barbara Hepworth, a British artist whose work Hammarskjold admired.

Three valuable relics of antiquity are among the 100 or so gifts from governments, organizations or individuals scattered around the 16-acre headquarters area.

One, presented by President Habib Bourguiba of Tunisia, is a 1,700-year-old Roman mosaic found there. Eleven feet square and mounted on a wall near the delegates' lounge, it shows a nude youth personifying the spirit of the year surrounded by four others representing the seasons.

Another relic, sent here by President Anwar Sadat of Egypt, is a 2,700-year-old gilded bronze statuette of the god Osiris 19 inches tall, a delicately fashioned figure with crown and scepters, in a case outside the assembly hall.

The third, nearby, a gift from Peru, is an intricately woven rectangular length of red and black cloth vacuum-sealed in a 6-by-10-foot picture frame and described as a ceremonial mantle found in that country and dating back to 1,000 B.C.

U.N. secretaries-general through the years have decorated their offices and homes with paintings borrowed from New York art museums.

Waldheim has in his office a Hamburg port scene by the Austrian artist Oskar Kokoschka, a flower picture by Emil Nolde of Germany and a painting by Andre Derain of France, among others. Down the hall are four paintings by the American Alexander Calder in high colors on white.

U. N. headquarters, when completed in 1950, was the first New York example of the international style of Le Corbusier, a Swiss architect practicing in France who was on the board of design consultants.

The 41-story glass-and-marble secretariat building, typical of that style, became the forerunner of innumerable New York glass-and-marble buildings with the recently-built twin-towered New York Trade Center the culmination of this style.

New Strife For Tokyo Airport

By ANDREW HORVAT
Associated Press Writer

NARITA, Japan (AP) — Tokyo's new international airport, a 2,600-acre expanse 41 miles north of the city, is an idea whose time had come seven years ago and which still is struggling to arrive.

The often-deferred opening is now set for May 21, and the Japanese government has grimly pledged to go through with it. If this sounds more like the relief of an embattled fortress than an occasion for bunting, ceremony, and heady rhetoric, it fits the realities.

Narita isn't just a $2.6 billion airport, badly needed because the old Tokyo Bay field is overcrowded. It is an ideological issue, a cause of strident opposition that has cost five lives, much treasure, and much loss of face for the government.

Rows of riot police guard the perimeter. Entry points are fortified with barricades, and fences and barbed wire loom at strategic spots to keep demonstrators in check.

"Japan's international credibility is at stake," says Yasuhiro Nakasone, a leading official in the ruling Liberal Democratic party.

It is not a persuasive argument to the loose alliance of farmers, students, left-wing radicals and assorted dissidents who have fought the airport through the years: the farmers at first because they didn't want to yield their lands, the radicals because they saw it as a powerful anti-establishment issue after others, like the U.S.-Japanese security treaty and the Vietnam war, had vanished.

Four extreme left-wing groups joined the farmers holding out against Narita: The Chukakau, the Fourth International, the Proletarian Youth League and the Battle Flag, all dedicated to the violent overthrow of capitalism.

A leader of the "Chukakau," who would not be identified, told a reporter: "We first arrived here in 1968 and the farmers have made us feel welcome. At first they didn't see the fight as a struggle against imperialism, but they've come to see our point of view."

So far, the only attack involving the airport was launched by radicals who broke through police security March 26, got into the control tower, smashed essential electronic gear, ransacked files and forced the latest postponement — the 12th — in opening the field.

Some critics blame the government for letting the Narita affair get out of hand over the years. Officials didn't really try to explain things to the farmers until opposition had hardened, they say.

"It's an example of what happens when the bureaucracy doesn't get off on the right foot," says Dr. Shigeto Tsuru, professor emeritus at Hitotsubashi University.

Most of the 1,000 landholders have made their peace with the airport authority, but the Anti-Airport League remains — an umbrella organization of about 20 diehard farm families, 1,000 or more radicals, and thousands of students and labor unionists who commute to Narita for demonstrations.

As the government announced its determination to put Narita into service, Issaku Tomura, chairman of the Anti-Airport League, threatened to step up the violence.

One policeman died from burns after a gasoline bomb attack on a police box near the airport last year. Three other riot policemen were beaten to death in 1971. A demonstrator was killed last year.

Narita airport was conceived 16 years ago with visions of rail links to the capital by 125 mph trains and underground pipelines bringing in jet fuel from nearby ports. The government correctly foresaw today's congestion at Haneda airport, where just under 500 flights arrive and depart each day. Some planes have to park a quarter of a mile from rundown terminals.

The plan for the new airport hit turbulence as early as 1965. Farmers from Tomisato Village, the first site for the new airport, refused to give up their land. Original plans for an airport somewhat larger than New York's John F. Kennedy had to be scaled down to half. The location was changed to Sanrizuka Village, where Emperor Hirohito owned a 1,300-acre ranch. The airport authority relocated two-thirds of the imperial pastureland to another prefecture and used the property to build the only Narita runway completed so far.

While far less farmland had to be acquired at the new site, the farmers were no less militant. Their hostility has prevented a start on the two other runways.

Many of the farmers in Sanrizuka settled there after the American occupation of Japan split up an 8,600-acre imperial estate in a broad land reform meant to help Japan's tenant farmers.

One farmer, Hajime Atsuta, received title to 1½ acres on what now is scheduled to be a second runway.

"At last I thought I was no longer a tenant, and then less than 20 years later the government comes and says I should give my land back," he complains.

Atsuta is deputy action chief of the diehard group. He was arrested Feb. 6 with five others inside a large tower apparently built to block test flights on the runway.

Chairman Tomura of the Anti-Airport League stresses that "our campaign is not aimed at getting more compensation. Neither do we seek alternate lands. This is a struggle against state power."

Sanrizuka's farmers compare the forcible sale of land to build a public facility to the draft of the militaristic government during World War II.

"Ours is the best farmland in Japan," the league says in its literature. "In a democracy, no government tells farmers to move."

New Generation In Design Ahead

NEW YORK (AP) — A "new generation" of commercial buildings, incorporating energy-saving designs and features, was predicted at the recent Energy Conservation Awards presentation here.

In a keynote address, Charles E. Peck, a vice president of Owens-Corning Fiberglas Corp., said that one event which will help produce this new generation of buildings is: large financial institutions, which provide mortgage money, will begin to insist that the commercial buildings on which they hold mortgages are energy-efficient. Statewide building codes will begin mandating higher levels of energy conservation, he predicted.

The Energy Conservation Awards competition is sponsored annually by the corporation, and honors energy-efficient construction as a means of encouraging improved energy savings in all forms of construction.

Find Sea Life At Blast Site

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Marine wildlife, victim of an oil tanker explosion in December, 1976, has returned to the ocean bottom in Los Angeles Harbor near the site of the blast that filled the water with oil, a team of divers reported recently.

However, they also reported finding "a lot of oil" in pools as deep as 6 inches.

The divers were under the direction of the University of Southern California Institute for Marine and Coastal Studies.

The institute has been monitoring the marine damage ever since the oil tanker Sansinena exploded, killing nine men and dumping thousands of gallons of bunker fuel into the water.

The divers said they found marine life "happily living around the oil pools." Some even found small creatures living on silt sediment atop the thick globs of oil.

WILL PREACH SUNDAY

Elderess Rosella Jones will preach Sunday at Holy Temple, accompanied by the junior choir and her pastor, Elder B. R. Barnhill, all of the New Hope Fellowship Tabernacle Holiness Church.

STRAWBERRY DUST BOWL — Strong, gusty winds have swept into the Sacramento Valley causing soil erosion in the newly-plowed fields in the Redding area. This field is part of a large nursery operation which grows young strawberry plants for transplanting to the berry producing fields in the lower part of the state. The first crop of plants has just been harvested and the field plowed and leveled for the next planting when the winds hit, causing huge dust clouds to swirl over the region. (AP Laserphoto)

Archeological Find In Boeotia

By KERIN HOPE

ATHENS, Greece (UPI) — U.S. designers, engineers and builders managing the construction of an aircraft maintenance complex in the rich farmlands of Boeotia have uncovered a vast ancient necropolis.

The Tanagra plain, where a major Greek air base is already located, was chosen by the government for a new $150 million Hellenic Aerospace industry, contracting with the Austin Company for planning, design and construction management.

Lockheed Aircraft Corp. will provide management and systems. Westinghouse the electronics and General Electric an engine overhaul facility for the industry, destined to become one of the largest aviation facilities in the Mediterranean region.

No sooner had the bulldozers started than archeologists had to be called in. It wasn't quite unexpected.

Some 2,500 years ago, the Tanagra region was, by ancient standards, densely populated and intensively farmed.

"When we moved in to clear the site, the local villagers said there were ancient remains in the area. It was just a few days after breaking ground that a bulldozer exposed part of a burial area," said Ted Robinson, Austin construction manager.

The Greek Archeological Service deployed a team of skilled excavators around the 450-acre site. They move in whenever topsoil stripping reveals remains and carry out rescue digs before construction goes ahead.

"Sometimes we were literally following a pace or two behind the mechanicial excavator stripping the topsoil," said Effie Ligouri, a scientific assistant.

"It is a huge cemetery, extending beyond the limits of the aerospace site in several directions," she said.

Some 400 graves have been unearthed in the last 16 months. They were arranged in clusters and dated from the 6th to the 3rd centuries B.C.

Their occupants were the people of ancient Tanagra, a prosperous city on a low, fortified hill about three miles south of the necropolis and its surrounding villages.

Angeliki Andreameinou, antiquities official for Boeotia, said the ancient people used a variety of burial practices ranging from simple earth pits to covering the bodies with a few clay tiles to using jars and more elaborate clay coffins and stone graves.

"One family for example, perhaps wealthy farmers, were buried in a family plot of stone graves aligned along a specially built wall adjoining the ancient road that ran through the necropolis," she said.

The excavators found quantities of fine pottery and a collection of small clay animals, but most graves had been looted by tomb robbers who systematically plundered ancient cemeteries in the area at the turn of the century in search of Tanagra figurines.

The delicate, naturalistic figurines of painted terracotta, found in 4th century B.C. graves, are especially prized by connoisseurs of ancient art.
