Rebels Massacred 150 Whites In Zaire

By ERIK VAN EES

KOLWEZI, Zaire (UPI) — French and Belgian paratroopers captured the mining center of Kolwezi Saturday, rescuing 2,500 trapped Westerners but finding the bodies of about 150 whites massacred by machete-wielding rebels in a bloodbath of terror.

In one particularly gruesome attack, the rebels who held the southern Zairean town for nine days mowed down 34 men, women and children in a tiny room, witnesses said. Several of the cadavers were locked in poses of horror.

In another incident, 40 of the dead were killed in a single massacre at a huge water tower in the eastern part of the town. Zairean government officials said all those killed in the second incident were men.

The rebels, who were retreating toward the Zambian border, grabbed a 16-year-old girl and chopped her head off with one blow of a machete, survivors said. Medics said many of the wounded had machete cuts.

Most of the 150 victims appeared to be French. Both French and Belgian paratroop officers agreed on the figure of 150 Westerners killed.

At one massacre scene, a pile of cadavers were jumbled on top of one another. A man had thrown his arm around a small girl in a futile effort at protection.

In another corner a dead woman leaned against a wall still holding her fingers to her ears as if in expectation of the blasts to come.

French Foreign Legion and Belgian paratroopers occupied the town Saturday and began airlifting the shocked and weeping survivors to Kinshasa.

Zaire officials said the fleeing Soviet-armed rebels took about 60 white hostages with them, and some unconfirmed reports said the captives may already have been killed.

The officials said the rebels, who were believed trained by Cubans in Angola, were fleeing in open rout toward the Zambian border about 30 miles south of Kolwezi.

"It's all over," one diplomat said.

The chaplain for the Belgian paratroopers said he saw several scenes of "carnage."

"I saw in an area of four streets dozens of dead whites," he said. "In some houses the rebels had thrown hand grenades into rooms and then opened fire on whoever remained alive. There were many women and children among them, their bodies riddled with bullets, the walls pockmarked with shrapnel."

The priest buried his head in his hands.

"Oh my God, it was so horrible and awful," he said.

Nearly 1,000 survivors were ferried to Kinshasa, where they were to board Belgian civilian airliners for flights to Brussels.

Of the 2,500 foreign residents of Kolwezi, 1,700 were from Belgium, the former colonial power, and 400 from France.

In Washington, a Pentagon spokesman said a small number of U.S. military personnel are working on the ground at three Zaire airfields several hundred miles north of the war zone, coordinating landings of 18 C-141 Air Force transport planes. No U.S. combat forces are involved, the spokesman said.

A French spokesman said rebel losses "were serious, probably several dozen" and "a very great quantity of arms was seized." One French foreign legionnaire was reported killed.

The first refugees to arrive in Kinshasa brought tales of widespread killings, gun and grenade fights in the streets and daring rescues.

"The last seven days I spent lying on the floor of my home doing a lot of praying," said Harold Amstutz of Portsmouth, Va., who flies aircraft for a Methodist mission.

"Thursday, we had a narrow escape," Amstutz said. "The Katangese came looking for us, shouting 'Missionary, missionary, where are you'. They were looking for me but they went to the wrong house."

"Last night at four o'clock the planes began to fly over and paratroopers billowed out. It was a wonderful sight. They dropped wave after wave of white parachutes.

"More Hercules came over today and more paratroopers dropped on the town.

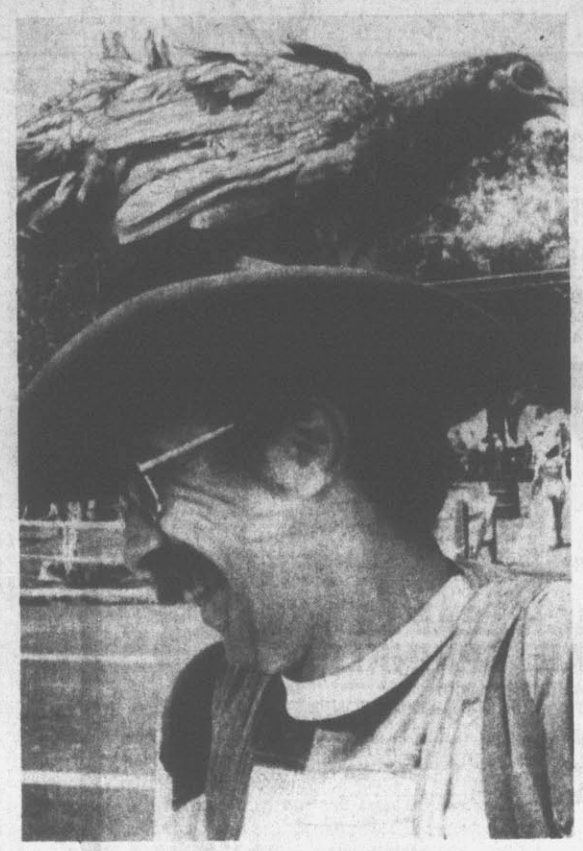

"Then we saw troops moving through the streets. My wife thought they were Katangese and moaned, 'Here they come. We're in for it now.

"Their faces had been blackened. But I saw their hands under their uniforms and said 'They're white. We're saved'."

One unidentified American family reportedly fled their home and drove at high speed out of Kolwezi toward the Zambia border, outstripping rebel units. However, the rebels saw them and gave chase.

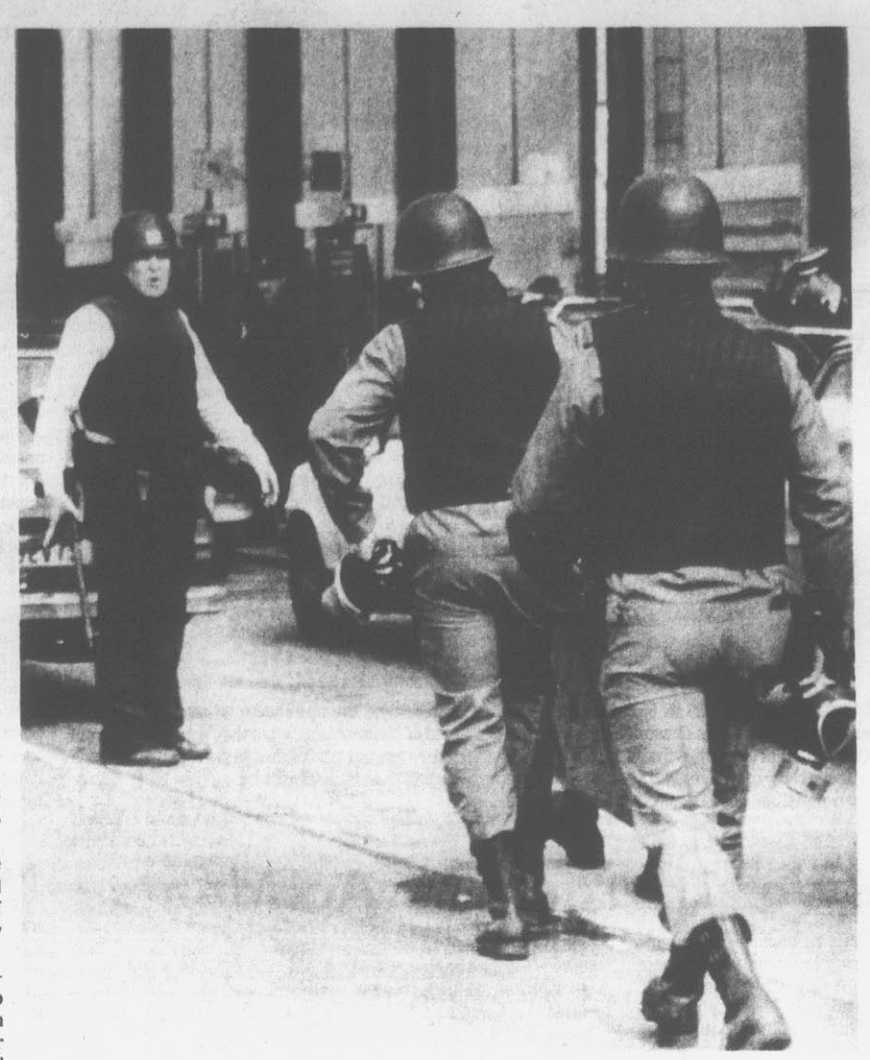

Just as they approached the Zambian border, they came to a heavily manned roadblock. As the rebels closed in from the rear, a helicopter appeared overhead from the direction of Zambia and plucked the family to safety.

The fleeing survivors described how the rebels set up street corner courts to condemn whites to firing squads. Other reports said white women had been raped by the invaders.

Wrong Way Cocoa Cluck

THE WAY HE WENT — Charles Loving of Luckenbach, Texas, had the national champion flying chicken and a place in the "Guiness Book of World Records", but his entry, Cocoa Cluck, in the Bob Evans Chicken Flying Contest Saturday flew the wrong way. Bad luck started with Cocoa Cluck being moved to the wrong flight on the way from Texas to Rio Grande but landing instead in Atlanta, Georgia. (AP Laserphoto)

Two UNC-HEW Viewpoints

WASHINGTON (AP) — An attorney for the NAACP Legal Defense and Education Fund said Friday the federal government has obtained "some good commitments" from University of North Carolina officials in the recently-approved desegregation plan, according to the Washington office of the News and Observer of Raleigh.

Meanwhile, U.S. Sen. Jesse Helms, speaking in Winston-Salem, N.C., said he is dissatisfied with the compromise reached between UNC and HEW concerning desegregation of the 16-campus system.

Helms said if Califano would not change his stance in certain areas, "we may have to try to do something about it on the Senate floor."

Elliott C. Lichtman, a Washington-based attorney representing the Legal Defense Fund, said the organization's initial judgment was that the desegregation plan contains "substantial" commitments by UNC.

Gunmen Hit Orly

PARIS (UPI) — Three gunmen, believed to Palestinians, opened fire with submachine guns on 150 French charter passengers waiting to board an El Al flight to Israel at Orly International Airport Saturday. Officials said the three terrorists and one policeman died in a 10-minute shootout.

Three policemen, a stewardess and a passenger were seriously injured during the gunbattle and several other passengers were slightly hurt by flying glass.

Although first reports said there might have been as many as six gunmen, police official Jean Perier told a press conference, "Nothing permits us to think there were more than three."

At about the same time as the Orly attack, there was a false bomb scare at Paris's other international airport, Roissy-Charles de Gaulle. An El Al plane about to take off for Tel Aviv was evacuated and searched but no bomb was found and the flight left on schedule.

Orly police chief Paul Roux said identification on the bodies indicated the three slain gunmen were Palestinians. They carried Lebanese and Tunisian passports, although the documents were believed to be forged.

Roux said the gunmen were ticketed passengers on a flight scheduled to leave about the same time as the El Al flight. He said they opened fire before reaching the point where they would undergo a routine security search of passengers.

The flight was an El Al charter for 150 employees of a French insurance company who were awarded an Israeli vacation for good work.

An unidentified woman passenger told reporters, "We had just gone through the security search when I heard what sounded like firecrackers. I just had time to hit the floor. I saw this person firing with a submachinegun — 'rat-a-tat-tat.' then the police started firing. We didn't know it was over until the police came and said, 'All right, everybody out.'

Police said the pockets of the slain gunmen were stuffed with grenades.

In Tel Aviv, the managing director of El Al, Mordechai Hod, told the state-run radio the terrorists "apparently did not manage to fire more than one volley, when French securitymen along with ours hit three of them and killed them."

An Israeli radio correspondent in Paris said the gunmen approached the El Al desk, whipped out guns grenades and explosives and started firing indiscriminately.

As Riot Police Battle Leftists

Tokyo Airport Opens

By SHIRO YONEYAMA

NARITA, Japan (UPI) — Tokyo's embattled new airport opened today after a five-year delay but leftist radicals stepped up their guerrilla war to destroy the $2.6 billion terminal, battling riot police and trying to ram the gates with burning trucks.

Hundreds of helmeted youths, throwing firebombs and rocks, tried to break through the main gate in an unsuccessful attempt to storm the airport at Narita, 46 miles north of Tokyo.

Police closed all gates and fought back against the wave of attacks with tear gas and water cannons.

The first plane, a Japan Air Lines cargo jetliner from San Francisco, was scheduled to land at the terminal this morning. A few hours later JAL Flight 446 — the first passenger jet — was to arrive from Frankfurt via Moscow.

But the radicals warned all travelers against using the Narita airport.

"It is a hazard to anyone who uses it," said Issaku Tomura, leader of a dissident farmers' league. "No one can predict what will happen."

The violence came only hours after the airport officially opened with a simple Shinto religious rite attended by Transport Minister Kenji Fukunaga and about 50 airport and airline officials and guarded by 13,000 riot police.

The ceremony capped a decade-long campaign against the airport by radicals and farmers whose land was taken for the facility. The Narita terminal, designed to relieve congestion at Tokyo's Haneda airport, has been finished for five years, but protests and violent attacks kept it closed.

The violence Saturday began when a small gang of radicals broke away from a protest march by 6,600 airport opponents and hurled rocks and firebombs at police, who fired water cannon to turn them back.

About 500 helmeted demonstrators attacked a second time and tried to ram a unmanned truck through the main gate. It got stuck and they fled.

In a third assault, leftists hurled firebombs on police positions and two radar stations but were repulsed by tear-gas fire. Two burning trucks smashed into the gate and erupted in a sea of flames that spread to a nearby house.

Another gang of radicals in Yamada 20 miles to the south attacked the vital Air Route Surveillance Radar station that controls flight operations throughout central and northern Japan. They were driven back after doing only minor damage.

15 Cent Letter Rate

WASHINGTON (AP) — Starting May 29, the cost of mailing a first-class letter will increase from 13 cents to 15 cents in a step expected to bring an additional $1.9 billion a year to the deficit-plagued Postal Service.

The mail agency said it will start selling stamps with no price printed on them. These will be worth 15 cents and are being used because of a shortage of 15-cent stamps.

The boost was approved by the Postal Service's board of governors 5-1 at a secrecy-cloaked meeting Friday.

The new rates were adopted after the board voted 4-2 against seeking to save a so-called citizens' rate.

The Carter administration had sought to retain the 13-cent rate for individual citizens. Under the citizens' rate proposal, the cost of a stamp would have remained 13 cents for individuals while rising to 16 cents for businesses.

Shortly after the board's decision, the new postal rate was challenged in the U.S. Court of Appeals in Washington by the National Association of Greeting Card Publishers, which had supported the citizens' rate proposal.

'Solar Chariot' Demonstrates Easy Use of Solar Energy

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

"A man has to do what he figgers is right — even if he's the only one doing it."

This quote posted in the kitchen area of Ed Walkinstik's motor home, "Solar Chariot," sums up his beliefs that motivate his traveling the United States and Canada demonstrating the benefits and easy use of solar energy now — "not at some far distant time in the future."

The 27-foot living area mounted on the chassis of a 1946 two-ton Chevrolet truck is heated by solar energy. Hot water flows from the kitchen faucet and must be mixed with cold to keep it from scalding the user's hands (It varies from 160 to more than 200 degrees in temperature). And Walkinstik and his companion for this East Coast jaunt, Paul Gack, even cook much of the time outdoors with solar cookers, which are available commercially.

About 30 percent of their electricity is sun-supplied. Utilities costs for the motor home, in which Walkinstik lives year-round, are about $15, he said. He believes the national average for utilities rates will double in the next two years and is relieved — $30 a year doesn't sound too frightening.

His big expense, he said, is for gasoline to convey "Chariot" up and down the roads. A trip across the country from his headquarters in Last Chance Community on the California coast costs a couple of hundred dollars, he said.

"Chariot" is a product of 25 years of personal interest in solar and other alternate sources of energy on Walkinstik's part. He has built 15 other motor homes previously, he said, so the building wasn't difficult. Almost every part of "Chariot" is recycled. The exterior is redwood from a torn down ranch house. Water storage tanks are 30-gallon beer kegs. The indicator panel for monitoring the heating system is the instrument panel from a B-29 bomber.

Water will heat from ambient to more than 200 degrees in 60 to 90 minutes, Walkinstik said. This is on a sunny day, of course. Heat may be stored from three to five days, he said.

The water is circulated by thermal cycle, the physical law that hot liquid or gas rises. Hot water fills the two kegs placed up high and cold stays in the two below. By piping the same water that goes to the faucet down and under the floor, space heating is achieved.

Insulation in the motor home is planned for sufficiency even in the coldest weather (It worked fine in British Columbia, Canada in the dead of this past winter). There are eight inches of fiberglass in the floor; four in the walls and six in the ceiling. Plexiglass inserts may be placed in the windows for added weather protection, but are seldom used. "Usually the problem," Walkinstik said, "is ventilation. We have to open the windows to keep it from being too hot in here."

Walkinstik, who's from Oklahoma and of Choctaw Indian descent, said his only income is a government pension given him because 50 to 60 percent of his hearing was destroyed by "high-frequency, high-intensity energy" — riveters' noise — while he was employed as a Civil Service electrician. When the gas tank and the cupboards get too near to empty, he said, he pulls over to the side of the road and does some art work — mostly bonsai art, done with a welding torch — to sell in the next town.

Asked why the personal sacrifice to spread the solar energy knowledge he's acquired over so many years of study and practice, he said, "Well, people talk about endangered species. The way I see it, man is an endangered species. There's so much free energy available and it's usable NOW, but the government and the research scientists don't make us aware of this. 'Chariot' is proof for the layman that solar energy does work and is within his or her reach. 'Granted it's been several years, but I built her, with two four-by-eight collector plates, for about $2,200."

"I'm not sponsored by anybody," he went on. "I'm an educational service to my fellow man. I don't ask for any money. I go where I'm invited and where I think I can reach the most people with my message. I share all the information I have to whatever degree of detail the person or group wants to hear"

Walkinstik and Gack were invited to the Greenville area by Fran Weiss, a Pitt Countian who met them at the New Earth Exposition in Boston earlier this month. They plan to be in this area from two to three weeks.

From here they'll move on to Hendersonville to be inter-

Changes Announced For O'Berry

GOLDSBORO, N.C. (AP) — The new position of medical director has been created at the O'Berry Center for the Mentally Retarded following an investigation of three deaths there, state officials said Friday.

Officials also announced a series of changes aimed at improving medical practices at institution.

The resignation of staff physician Dr. Vernon Magnum, effective June 30, was announced by Ben Aiken, director of the state's Mental Health and Mental Retardation for the Department of Human Resources. Dr. Magnum served as director of O'Berry until he joined the medical staff in 1973.

The center has been under heavy criticism in recent months from parents of patients and staff members. The center has also been under investigation because of the deaths of three patients there over a three-year period. The deaths have been connected to improper medication.

Aiken said the changes being initiated at O'Berry are based on the recommendations of Dr. Luther Clontz, medical director of Western Carolina Center for the Mentally Retarded, and Dr. Ann Wolfe, deputy director of the state's mental retardation services. Some of the changes have already been put into effect.

The changes include:

—A physician on call must be within a 15-minute radius of O'Berry.

—All deaths at O'Berry will be reported to the state medical examiner, who will determine whether further investigation into the cause of death is needed.

—Negotiations are underway with East Carolina Medical School to explore the possibility of joint physician appointments between O'Berry and the university.

—New policies are being developed to state more clearly actions to be taken in case of a medical emergency.

—Physicians will review each monthly renewal order for medication to determine if it should be renewed. All new orders must come from a doctor and must be accompanied by progress notes on the resident.

Aiken also announced the recent appointment of Dr. Norma Dillon as staff development director at O'Berry. Her husband, Dr. Tom Dillon, serves as director of Castle Center in Kinston and will become acting director of O'Berry Monday.

RED CROSS MEN SLAIN IN RHODESIA — The International Red Cross Committee Friday announced the murder of two Swiss delegates, Andre Tieche, left, and Alain Bieri, right, and their African assistant in Rhodesia. According to the committee, the three were in route to the Mission of Nyamoraopa when they were forced from their car and each killed with a bullet through the head. (AP Laserphoto)

Two Charged In Accidents

Farro Best Jr. of Greenville was charged with driving under the influence of alcohol and driving while his license is revoked after his car collided with a tractor on Memorial Highway Saturday afternoon.

According to a police report, the Best car left the road and struck a tractor being driven by Jessie W. Jackson of LaGrange. Damages were estimated at $700 to the Best car, while the tractor sustained no damages.

Also at 3:25 p.m. Friday, Janie Brewer Harris of Winterville was charged with a safe movement violation after her car struck a vehicle being operated by Hattie Rose Hunt of 208 N. Elm St.

Ms. Harris told investigating officers she was attempting a left turn at the intersection of Twelth and Evans streets when the cars collided.

Damages were estimated at $500 to the Hunt car and $400 to the Harris vehicle.

New Jaycee Head

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — Harold Herring of Mount Olive Saturday was elected president of the North Carolina Jaycees.

The civic group, meeting in Raleigh for its annual state convention, also chose three vice presidents: Roger Allen of Wilson, Larry Mincey of Whiteville and Jerry Wall of Yadkinville.

Little League Supper Set

The annual Greenville Little League luncheon-supper will be held on Wednesday, May 24.

Lunch hours are from 11:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. and supper hours are from 4:30 p.m. to 7 p.m. Plates may be picked up from the trucks at Elm Street Park and will be guaranteed until 6 p.m.

Plates will be available at $2 each for persons who do not purchase advance tickets.

The event is the only fund-raising project for the Greenville Little League. Mrs. Kelly Barnhill is serving as chairman of this year's project.

A double-header is scheduled for Wednesday at the Elm Street field with the Graniteers playing the Moose at 4 p.m. and Lions meeting the Jaycees at 6 p.m.

Dedicating New Complex

A formal ceremony of dedication for the new Recreation and Parks/Library Complex, located at 2000 Cedar Lane, will take place on Tuesday, May 23.

The ceremony will begin at 5 p.m. Tuesday, with Mayor Percy R. Cox on hand to cut the ribbon.

The public is invited to attend the ceremony and the Open House that will follow immediately.

5th Anniversary

Community Club will be celebrating its fifth anniversary at Cherry Lane FWB Church on Sunday at 3 p.m. The Rock Hour Singers will provide the music. Bishop Matthew Best invites the public to attend.

Chaplain Tells Of Horror

By ERIK VAN EES

KOLWEZI, Zaire (UPI) — Rebel troops went into a frenzy of killing and looting in which they massacred at least 150 whites during their occupation of Kolwezi, Belgian and French army officers said Saturday.

French Foreign Legionnaires and Belgian paratroopers occupied the town and later began airlifting out about 2,500 survivors, many of them weeping and traumatized with shock.

I toured the white residential areas of Kolwezi with two French legionnaires and counted 24 bloated corpses lying in the roads, in gutters, outside gates and in shot-up, abandoned cars.

Outside one house, five whites lay huddled together. The leg of a woman had been partly eaten by dogs roaming the streets.

Kolwezi was once a pretty lakeside town, but now the stench of rotting corpses hung heavily on the silent streets.

The Belgian paratrooper chaplain, who asked not to be identified, told of the scenes of "carnage" that he had witnessed.

"I saw in an area of four streets dozens of dead whites. In some houses, the rebels had thrown hand grenades into rooms and then opened fire on whoever remained alive. There were many women and children among them, their bodies riddled with bullets. The walls were pockmarked with shrapnel."

The chaplain sunk his head in his hands.

"Oh my God, it was so horrible and awful," he said..

Inside a small house on the edge of what is called "the new area," I saw a pile of dead whites, knee-deep, all on top of one another.

A man had thrown his arm around a small girl in a futile attempt to protect her. In one corner, a dead woman leaned against a wall still holding her fingers in her ears as if still expecting an explosion.

Soldiers said the whites had been gunned down at point-blank range. There was a pile of spent machine-gun cartridges on the lawn, amid the scattered debris of looted suitcases and automobiles.

Shocked refugees at the Kolwezi airstrip told how in one incident the rebels grabbed a 16-year-old girl and chopped off her head with one blow of a machete.

Medics said many of the wounded had machete cuts. One man came in with 17 bullet wounds, and surgeons battled to save his life.

An American mechanic, Bill Starkey of Boise, Idaho, said several rebels came to his house on Thursday and "cleaned out everything I have including a box of golf balls. Then they told me to get into a car and they drove around a while in the late afternoon as if looking for a specific place.

"Near an open space beside a bombed out school they told me to get out and run. I tried to argue with them but they wouldn't listen.

"Then I ran and when I was about 20 feet away, they fired a single shot which hit me in the lower right side. I ran a bit further and dived into a ditch. Then they just got back into the car and drove away."

Belgian housewife Marie Simeon said of the nine days of terror in which the rebels held the town:

"They came into a home and asked for something to eat or they wanted something to drink. Then they wanted the keys to the car and the people gave everything.

"But when they leave, they kill the people."

The horror left some people numb, others angry.

"All my life I have taught at black missionary schools," said Belgian Richard Muller. "All my life I have taught at black missionary schools, but now I think that the blacks should all be killed."

Some refugees said the rebels did most damage when they first took Kolwezi and when they heard over the radio that the paratroopers were coming in.

Soviets Arrested As Spies

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Two Soviet employees of the U.N. Secretariet were arrested Saturday on espionage charges involving the passing of U.S. Navy secrets to Moscow, FBI Director William Webster announced.

Rudolf Petrovich Chernyayev, 43, a U.N. personnel officer, and Valdik Aleksandrovich Enger, 39, an assistant to the U.N. Under-Secretary General, were arrested while in the process of receiving classified material from an American along a highway in Woodbridge, N.J., a spokesman said.

A spokesman said the American cooperated with the FBI and passed classified documents to the Russians on several occasions. "Most of the meets (where material was exchanged) were along the New Jersey Turnpike and the Garden State Parkway," he said.

In addition, Webster said the complaint named Vladimir Petrovich Zinyakin, 39, an attache in the Soviet Mission to the United Nations, as a coconspirator. Zinyakin was not arrested because he possesses diplomatic immunity, the FBI said.

Peruvian State Of Emergency

LIMA, Peru (AP) — Peru's military government declared a state of emergency Friday night to counter demonstrations against price increases.

Riots continued for the fifth straight day in at least 12 cities, protesting government-decreed hikes in prices of gasoline, food, transport and electricity.

Seven new deaths were reported, bringing the week's total to at least 11.

The Communist-led General Confederation of Peruvian Labor called a strike for Monday and Tuesday to protest the price hikes.

Earlier in the day the government postponed from June 4 until June 18 elections for a constitutional assembly designed to lead the country to civilian rule in 1980.

The National Election Board blamed the strikes and violence for the postponement.

Held After Hijack Attempt

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — An AWOL military policeman was being held on $150,000 bond Saturday following a 30-minute escapade during which he rammed a car through an airport gate, took a ticket agent hostage and wounded an FBI agent before surrendering.

Charges of theft and larceny of government property and assaulting a federal officer were filed late Friday against John Gilbert McCarthy, 21, of Riverside, Calif., an FBI spokesman said. A preliminary hearing was set for May 26 before U.S. Magistrate Robert Murrian in Knoxville.

Authorities said McCarthy, who was armed with an automatic rifle and a pistol, gave himself up after releasing Delta Airlines employee Felix Daniel and driving onto the field at McGhee Tyson Airport at Maryville.

Confirms Nerve-Gas Leakage

DENVER (AP) — The Army has confirmed that a nerve-gas bomb stored at the Rocky Mountain Arsenal near Denver was found to be leaking two months ago.

The leak was the second in a stockpile of 900 of the bombs, known as Weteyes, manufactured about nine years ago and scheduled to be shipped to storage facilities in Utah.

The most recent leak has heightened concern among elected officials about the safety of the proposed shipment from the arsenal, which borders Denver on the northeast, to the Tooele Army Depot, 60 miles west of Salt Lake City.

Judge Warns News Media

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Although District Court Judge George R. Greene acquitted three Raleigh newsmen on charges stemming from a May Day street party which riot-equipped police broke up, he warned the news media about their conduct at such scenes.

Greene noted that police testified in all three cases that the newsmen failed to identify themselves and he warned the news media that in future similar cases if they failed to identify themselves, "you can look to be convicted in my court."

Due At Venus In December

By PAULA SCHWED

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (UPI) — Pioneer Venus 1 blasted off flawlessly and hurtled through space Saturday on a 400-million-mile journey that will put the satellite into orbit around Venus Dec. 4.

The 131-foot-tall and 10-foot-wide orbiter took off only .73 seconds past the scheduled lift-off time of 9:13 a.m.

"I don't remember one with less problems," Dr. George Page, director of expendable vehicles, said of the countdown which began at midnight. "Our biggest problem was keeping people awake at that ungodly hour."

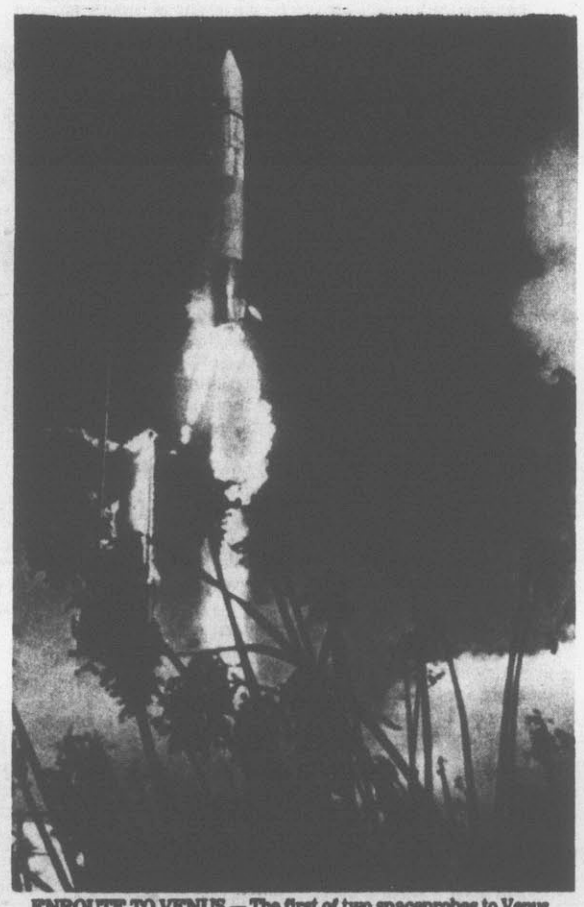

The $250 million Pioneer Venus project is aimed at providing scientists with information about Venus unavailable from telescopes and three previous U.S. explorations. Never before has a spacecraft circled a planet solely to gather atmospheric data.

Pioneer Venus 1 initially traveled at 25,000 mph, trailing behind earth on an elliptical path. The satellite gained steady speed as it was pulled toward the sun.

Venus resembles earth in size, density and distance from the sun, but its total lack of water is puzzling to scientists.

The first satellite will be joined around Venus Dec. 9 by Pioneer Venus 2, which will travel a shorter flight path. It will be launched Aug. 7.

Pioneer Venus 2 will split into five independent space vehicles, which will penetrate the hazy, yellow clouds surrounding Venus. Each will relay data back to Earth while flying down to the Venus' searing hot surface and will almost certainly burn up.

ENROUTE TO VENUS — The first of two spaceprobes to Venus lifts off from Cape Canaveral, Fla., early Saturday morning. The Pioneer Venus I, atop an Atlas Centaur rocket, is shown through reeds surrounding the launch site as it begins its trip. A second launch will take place about August 7th of this year, both spacecraft trying for a detailed scientific study of Venus. (AP Laserphoto)

Wins Suit

By ROSALYN ANDERSON

ANNAPOLIS, Md. (UPI) — Tony Bryant, 11-years-old and black, has won a $29,000 out-of-court settlement from the Annapolis Elks Club in a suit charging the Elks kicked him off their kids' football team because of his race.

The club did not admit the charge, but Tony's lawyers disclosed the Elks had agreed to pay the money and had made assurances no discrimination would occur in their future policies.

The class action suit accused the Elks of violating the youngster's civil and constitutional rights when he was dismissed from the children's football team three weeks after he joined in 1975.

Under the terms of the settlement reached Friday, the club agreed to pay Tony $12,000, his mother Glenna $3,000 and their attorneys $14,000.

In the course of litigation, Thomas Hardesty, the team's coach at the time, said club officials had given him "subtle hints" Tony was not wanted because he was black.

Hardesty resigned in protest, after consulting a priest, and wrote in a diary he kept about Tony's dismissal:

"Never in my life have I had anything hurt me so much, except hearing that my kid brother died in Vietnam.

The diary was part of the court record in the case.

Wants Gas Tax Increase

LEXINGTON, N.C. (AP) — Saying he didn't mean to criticize the governor's position, North Carolina House Speaker Carl Stewart spoke out Thursday in favor of an increase in the state's gasoline tax.

This puts him in direct to Gov. Jim Hunt's position on the subject.

Stewart said the General Assembly and the Hunt administration should develop a plan for increasing gasoline tax revenues by 1979.

District Demos Met Here

By KEITH MILLS

State Sen. Sam Bundy told an audience of Democrats Saturday that in order to keep the country great they must keep the Democrat Party strong.

Bundy was addressing the annual First Congressional District Democratic Convention held in the Willis Building at First and Reade streets.

The senator advised the delegates that the party, as well as the nation, must have direction and purpose. "Our party and nation must not be left to drift," he said.

"A lot of people (within the party) criticize the party, Carter, Hunt: let's quit this destructive criticism and stop finding fault," he said. "A lot of good is overlooked, and we must learn to find something good in each other. It would be good if we could see things as we want to, but we have to see things as they really are."

Bundy further encouraged the delegates to support activities on a local level. "The party is in your precinct," he said, "and not in Raleigh. When you do your job in the precinct, you don't have to worry about the county level, the state level, or the national level. We build upwards, not down."

Rep. Walter Jones, who introduced the guest speaker, prefaced the senator's remarks by saying, "all is not well within the party, but we can consider the options of Nixon, Ford, and Holshouser and think how well off we are."

In other activities, Lattimer Midgett of Dare County was unanimously reelected as chairman of the First Congressional Democratic District.

Two delegates and two alternates were selected to represent the first district at the National Democratic Conference in early December in Memphis, Tenn. Georgia Beasley and Bill Hodges, both of Beaufort County, were selected as delegates, and Joseph George of Craven County and Constance Brothers of Currrituck County were chosen as alternates.

Also, Bud Dixon of Carteret County was elected as a delegate to the nominating committee. Delegates will be selected in June in Raleigh.

Others selected for positions included: Joe Parker, biennial state rules and regulations committee; Carl Bailey of Plymouth, biennial credentials and appeals committee; Larry Pate of Craven County, council of review; and Wendell Hutchins of Washington County, state legislative policy committee.

In other action, George Saleeby of Pitt County, introduced a resolution opposing Nick Califano's "proposal to waste $30 million in an effort to educate people against the dangers of tobacco." The resolution passed unanimously.

On a lighter side, an impromptu motion suggesting that "the Democrat Party aid in getting rid of Jesse Helms" met with overwhelming approval.

Henry Oglesby, Pitt County delegate, entered a resolution honoring the late Jack Holland Spain, former mayor of Greenville, who served a number of years as adminstrative assistant to several North Carolina congressmen in Washington. The resolution was approved.

$210,000 For 3 Queens

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (UPI) — Jack Binion, owner of Binion's Horseshoe Club, stacked $420,000 in $100 bills on the poker table and doled the prize money out to the top five winners in the world series championship of poker.

Half of it, $210,000 was stacked in front of Bobby Baldwin, a mild-mannered Oklahoman in a lime green jogging suit, who had faced down a cigar-chumping Texan, Crandall Addington of San Antonio, with three queens in the final.

The three queens beat Addington's three nines after four hours of the final round. The queens won a $70,000 pot, cleaning out Addington in a game called "Hold 'Em."

In "Hold 'Em" each player is dealt two hole cards which he combines with any three of five cards dealt on the table.

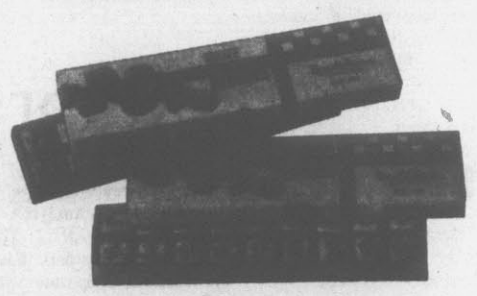

Sitting behind each player were their wives, watching each card dealt with expressions as non-committal as the faces of the players themselves.

One player sipped mineral water, the other just plain water. Addington, 40, sporting a mink Stetson, puffed on a long cigar. Baldwin, 27, an occasional cigaret.

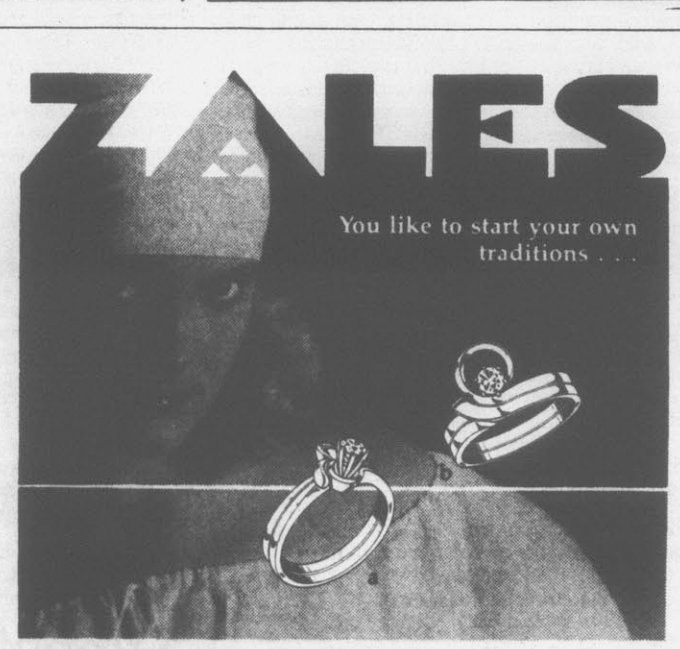

When the moment of truth came Friday night, Baldwin had two queens in the hole. Addington held two nines, and a queen, nine and king showed when the cards were flopped. Then an ace, ten and queen were dealt, giving Baldwin his winning three queens.

U.S. 264 Fight Is Not Over

For those who think the battle is over to obtain an adequate highway to Raleigh along the route of U. S. 264, we would suggest a second look.

Several alternatives are being considered for the dual lane highway, including a limited access route. But also among the considerations are routes which use all or part of the present U. S. 264. If any of these plans are adopted, the state would go to great expense to obtain additional right-of-way alongside the present road to add an additional lane.

If that were to happen we would continue to have a road on which drive ways could be cut in at any point. It would continue to be a highway with dangerous grade crossings. And it would continue to be a round-about route to connect Wilson, Farmville and Greenville.

It is incredible to us that there could even be any consideration of constructing an archaic highway in the U. S. 264 area. Right now the portion of U. S. 264 from I-95 at Wilson to U. S. 64 is under construction as a limited access road. The U.S. 64 bypass around Zebulon is limited access, and U. S. 64 to Rocky Mount and Tarboro is expected to be limited access.

It, of course, makes sense to construct U. S. 264 limited access between Wilson and Greenville by all measures of modern highway planning. And if we don't get that kind of highway Farmville, Greenville and even the towns east of here are going to pay dearly in lost economic development in the future. We would be going up against neighboring towns which have adequate highways, and in the keen competition for industry, highways make the difference.

If we are not to lose out in economic development competition, town boards, county commissioners, chambers of commerce and the U.S. 264 Highway Association must make it clear that a limited access route between I-95 at Wilson and Greenville is absolutely essential.

Rock Ridge Test Set For Memoranda

Gov. Hunt says he is going to apply the Rock Ridge test to future government memorandums in order to get more simplified langugage.

Rock Ridge is the little community in Wilson County that is the governor's home, and Hunt wants memos which would be understood by the average person there.

We wish the governor luck but we expect he is in a losing campaign. After all if average people can understand governmental memos they might just get to wondering why we have to pay those large salaries to the experts who write them.

Push Small Town Needs

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — A key ingredient in North Carolina's industrial development policy for a long time has been dispersal. That idea means that growth will be directed evenly across the state, in small towns, rural, and more isolated areas as well as the more urban.

But sometimes, for various reasons, industries demand a location at an urban center: airports, super-highways, more people to employ, nearness to cultural and educational centers, among others' influence such decisions.

Still, the idea that Tar Heels can find a good-paying job while keeping those roots deep in home soil appeals.

"It will take more than we've been doing to convince some industries to go to the small towns and rural areas, Gov. James B. Hunt admits.

A special team of industrial recruiters is being put into action at the Department of Commerce, headed by retiring East Carolina University Chancellor Leo Jenkins.

Jenkins will be part-time on the job, but Hunt says gauging by his performance in building East Carolina from a small teachers' college to a major university, that should be enough.

Arab Buses

Those familiar yellow school buses built by Thomas at High Point don't draw a second glance on hometown streets. But at Wilmington, some bypassers paused to watch as 41 of them were hoisted high into the air by gantry crane and loaded on a ship.

The freighter Vishua Dharma was bound for Abu Dhabu in the United Arab Emirates as another North Carolina product joined the ranks of State Ports business with Middle East nations.

BILL NOBLITT

More Crime?

Experts continue to be puzzled over the steady increase in prison population in North Carolina despite steps designed to reduce the numbers of inmates.

Latest statistics show this state has the highest rate of prison commitments in the nation: 240 per 100,000 population against a national average of 108 per 100,000.

The state ranks fifth nationally in total prison population: 14,725 inmates, a new record high.

Out-of-State

North Carolina's university system attracts some students from far away places, judging by the latest list of non-North Carolinians enrolled.

More than 8,500 such students are at the 16 campuses, with every state in the Union except Montana represented.

The leading contributor is Virginia, with 1,516 students enrolled here. New Jersey is next with 960, followed by New York with 815.

Florida, Maryland, South Carolina, and Pennsylvania round out the top source of out-of-state students' with Pennsylvania sending 546.

Lowest numbers come from Arizona, Nevada, Alaska, Hawaii, Wyoming, Idaho, Kansas, Nebraska, North Dakota, Oklahoma, Oregon, South Dakota, Utah, and Washington — all ranging from two to eight each.

THE INSIDE REPORT

An Inconstant Sen. Church

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — Just as a trans-Pacific telephone call asked Vice President Walter Mondale's help with Sen. Muriel Humphrey's vote for the Mideast arms deal, Sen. Frank Church was preparing a sudden pro-Israeli shift that stunned his Senate colleagues and threw the administration into disarray.

That rapid sequence of events, culminating in the 8-to-8 Senate Foreign Relations Committee vote May 11, casts a long and ominous shadow ahead for President Carter. It raises nagging questions about the dependability of Church, the 21-year Senate veteran from Idaho, who becomes committee chairman next January with Sen. John Sparkman's retirement.

It was future Chairman Church who served notice that he would support the aircraft package with certain specified changes. It was future Chairman Church who, at a private breakfast with Secretary of State Cyrus Vance and other key senators May 9 in Vance's dining room, gave all present to understand that changes offered by the president satisfied him.

Nothing had been left to chance. Vance, national security director Zbigniew Brzezinski, Mondale and four top-ranking senators — majority leader Robert Byrd, Republican leader Howard Baker, Sparkman and Abraham Ribicoff — had spent hours in private sessions with Church. Their mission: to reshape the president's aircraft deal to Church's specifications.

Mondale, just arrived in Honolulu May 10, was informed from Washington that fellow Minnesotan Muriel Humphrey was wavering and promptly telephoned her. Mrs. Humphrey's vote was essential to give the Church-fashioned compromise a majority vote in the Senate Foreign Relations Committee. Interim Sen. Humphrey decided to stick with the president, despite pressure on her by the pro-Israel lobby which one fellow senator called "brutal."

Church was under similar pressure from Jewish Americans who contributed heavily to his 1976 presidential campaign against Jimmy Carter. He wilted. Lamely explaining May 11 to shocked committee colleagues. Church took refuge in the late Sam Rayburn's explanation for changing his mind about Lyndon Johnson running for vice president in 1960. "I'm a wiser man today than I was yesterday," Church said.

Church's colleagues were not impressed. With his vote, the committee would have given the president a clear 9-to-7 victory. That might have killed the issue once and for all in committee.

On the floor of the Senate shortly before the committee vote, a confident Byrd was counting the ayes and nays with Church. He was surprised when Church complained that he could not get a consensus" for the compromise.

"But," he toldd Church, "I count nine votes for the president." Church said yes, but that would include his own vote and he was going to vote no. Byrd could scarcely believe his ears.

The long road toward a compromise acceptable to Church had started weeks earlier. Two days after Baker told CBS' "Face the Nation" April 16 that he could support F-15 warplanes for Saudi Arabia with a little "tinkering," Church privately informed Senate leaders he, too, could go along if changes were made.

Church wanted the package split up: he asked assurance that the F-15 jets for Saudi Arabia be disarmed for offensive purposes; and he demanded Saudi agreement not to base the plane s near the Israeli border. With those changes, he remarked privately, he could "support these planes for Saudi Arabia in the national interest."

That word was delivered April 21 to Mondale and Brzezinski at the White House. Vance was then in Moscow, but approved Church's changes on April 27 at breakfast with Church, Baker and other senators. But at that meeting, Church raised a new question: could the Saudi shipment of 60 planes be reduced. Impossible, said Vance, but extra F-15s could be sold to Israel. Church appeared pleased.

On May 9, at yet another Vance breakfast, Church

A LITTLE CROSS AND A BIG CROSS

The cross has become an honored symbol throughout Christendom. It crowns the church edifice; it stands upon the altar. Jewelers use the cross as a setting of some of their most beautiful pieces.

We are always willing that the cross be a symbol of God's love, but we are often less willing that it be a symbol of our love. Jesus talked about the necessity of a person taking up his cross daily. There is a way in which it takes two crosses to save us from our sins — one is the large and glorious cross representing the sacrifice by which we are saved from our sins. The other constitutes the thousands of little personal crosses — voluntary renunciations and sacrifices — which we must make every day if we would retain our salvation and deepen it.

It takes the cross of Christ to make us Christian; it takes the daily embracing of the crosses of our own lives to keep us Christian.

Sunday Morning Notes

The seige of cold rainy weather this Spring hasn't been to the liking of the sun worshippers, and there haven't been many days when those seeking a golden summer tan could get outside in their quest.

For farmers, however, the bad weather has been abominable. It has delayed tobacco planting to the point where many farmers are getting desperate, and cut into the potential corn yield.

"A poor start for the growing season," someone commented.

"Yep," answered a farm observer. "Few more days like this and we can cancel the season.

We've never known a growing season to be cancelled on Eastern North Carolina farms and we fully expect this one to play as scheduled.

One farm philosopher commented in years past when there was a similar wet spring, "It will do like every year. It will rain until June when the crops really need it, then it will quit."

Maybe so, but somehow the crops always manage to survive.

Gov. Hunt made it clear at ECU graduation ceremonies recently that he appreciated Leo Jenkins.

"Most particularly I appreciate his not running for governor in 1976," he said with a twinkle.

And Jenkins got in one more plug for the sports program he loved and helped build on the local campus.

Emphasizing a theme that has been his creed, he said,

"We believe in winning at ECU, not just on the football field; we're accustomed to that."

A visiting writer doing an article on a weight reduction program, described Durham as a "dull little college town."

That had folks in Durham — which considers itself as neither dull nor little — chuckling or gnashing their teeth, depending on their frame of mind.

It recalls the slightly paraphrased words of a one-time small town philosopher. "There are no dull little towns; only dull little visitors who find them so."

Other Editors Say: Nature Of Govm't

Rocky Mount Telegram)

California's Senator H.L. "Bill" Richardson tells the joke about a teacher who asked her class of 10-year-olds to write a short story about a poor family. One of the students was a girl whose family was extremely rich.

Her story was as follows: "Once upon a time there was a poor, poor family. The father was poor, the mother was poor, the children were poor, the chauffeur was poor, the gardener was poor," etc. etc.

It's a good little story because it points out that one's surroundings has a lot to do with one's perspective with the real world. The same is true of a full-time legislator.

He tends to lose perspective with the real world. Legislators are continually surrounded by people who have a vested interest in government. Most of these people perceive government as the source of their financial existence.

They all, including full-time legislators, prosper on the structure of government. Most have a vested interest in seeing the government grow larger. The more complicated the structure, the more need for their services.

Hundreds of thousands of governmental workers are daily involved in the dynamics of state, local and federal government. The private sector is a foreign world to the vast majority of those who are deeply involved in government.

In the free market, the daily toil of servicing the needs of customers, the interaction of free trade, the pleasing of a boss or keeping employees happy, worrying about paying suppliers, maintaining good credit, getting to work on time, working overtime to meet a client's needs — all this takes a kind of thought process that is alien to the majority of those associated with government.

Like the little rich girl, those in government service see most things in relationship to their surroundings. Is it any wonder that those who deal daily with regulations come to think in terms of controlling everything? Is it not natural that legislators and government officials offer more laws and restrictions as solutions to all problems?

One can hardly expect those who reside in government and live upon its structure to view themselves as the problem, or perceive that nongovernmental action could possibly be a better solution than intervention.

Lady Is A Smithy

By GREGORY JENSEN

TALSARN, Wales (UPI) — Gwyneth Price, 23, scooped her hands full of coal and lit a fire in the ancient forge where she is a full-time blacksmith.

"I never want to do anything else," she said with a toss of her close-cropped brown curls. "I quite enjoy it."

Miss Price is believed to be the only woman blacksmith in Britain. She is a far cry from the Longfellow image of "the smith, a mighty man is he, with strong and sinewy hands."

Her hands are black, her cheeks are smudged, her working clothes tough and shapeless. But Miss Price is slim and womanly. Her strength as a blacksmith is artistic skill with a red-hot iron.

She said she began messing around her father's forge as soon as she could heft a hammer.

"I used to come here in the school holidays," she said. "I don't know why, but I always enjoyed it. I even had a small fire at home for when I couldn't get to the forge."

Her father and ironmaster, John M. Price, 53, put her through a formal five-year apprenticeship leading to tests at a technical college. She now is a fully qualified welder as well as blacksmith.

Her father, a lifelong blacksmith, has four workers, including his son, David, 19, an apprentice. They will tackle any job from making a church key to repairing broken garden tools and tractor hitches. Price still shoes horses for Welsh farmers on the low green hills around this tiny village 255 miles west of London.

One of their two buildings has a stonebuilt forge, inky with smoke and the soot of 300 years. Its three waist-high fireplaces are fanned by huge hand bellows. The bedrock floor is littered with anvils and tools worn by centuries of use. Piles of used horseshoes fill a room at one end.

Miss Price works in a corrugated iron structure housing modern machinery. There she makes everything from staircase railings to weather vanes.

"I like ornamental work best," she said, "watching something take shape under your hands."

Realtors Cite Over-Regulation

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — The nation's homebuilders have promised to cooperate with government efforts to hold down prices, but their brethren in the real estate business suggest that government itself is the problem.

Meeting in Washington, the National Association of Home Builders said it would seek to limit price increases to a 6 percent annual rate over the next six months, compared with recent 10 percent rises.

The National Association of Realtors, however, quotes "national experts" who claim that prices themselves — not just increases — could be cut as much as 20 percent by eliminating over-regulation.

The over-regulation, it is claimed, exists at local, state and federal levels, adding as much as $9,000 to the price of a new single-family home. Needless laws are on the books, it says, and more may be coming.

In a self-described "think piece" circulated at almost the same time as the homebuilders' promise, the Realtors quote Prof. George Sternlieb of Rutgers University as the source for the $9,000 figure.

Sternlieb, they say, lists these regulations as sometimes exceeding minimum health, safety and welfare considerations:

—Restrictive zoning, in which communities set aside a certain amount of land for new housing and then specify minimum lot sizes.

—No growth, instituted by somecommunities to prevent what they term dense housing situations.

—Building codes which specify unreasonably high minimum standards for materials used in erecting houses.

—Minimum building-size requirements, in which a community sets a minimum in home size that exceeds the standard set by the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

—Subdivision requirements where, for example, a community might prohibit the burning of vegetation to clear land. This would mean bulldozing and hauling, far more expensive than burning of brush.

Bernard Siegan of the University of San Diego Law School is quoted as saying that Houston, which has no zoning laws, demonstrates that market competition can work better than government regulation.

William Shenkel, professor of Real Estate at the University of Georgia, is said to believe the regulation posing the greatest threat is exclusionary, restrictive zoning.

Environmental considerations that demand a park for every block might be nice, but they ignore the greater considerations of employment and housing, Arthur Wright of Texas A & M is quoted as saying.

In short, the Realtors insist that government itself — not just the federal government, but state and municipal units too — can make the biggest contribution of all to cutting costs.

GOP Lacks Votes In '78

By George Gallup

PRINCETON, N.J. — If the congressional elections were being held today, the GOP would gain very few, if any, seats. In any case the change would be far below the average gain for the "out party" of 30 to 35 seats.

If the vote for the House were being cast at this time, survey evidence indicates that Democratic candidates would win 58 percent of the vote nationwide and Republicans would win 42 percent of the vote nationwide, assuming a turnout comparable to that of 1970 and 1974.

The Gallup Poll estimates that the current survey results indicate little if any loss for the Demooratic party if the average historical relationship between shift in vote and seat change prevails.

What Has Happened To 'Coattail Effect'?

Analysis of Gallup Polls over the last four decades indicates that a president who has the popular approval of fewer than 55 percent of the nation's adults finds that his party suffers greater than normal losses in House seats. (The latest approval rating of President Jimmy Carter as reported by the Gallup Poll was 39 percent.)

At present, however, this normal coattail effect does not seem to be operative. One important reason is undoubtedly the fact that the Democratic party currently holds a wide advantage over the GOP as the party voters believe is better able to deal with the high cost of living and unemployment. These two problems are considered by voters to be the top problems currently facing the nation.

By a 32 to 23 percent ratio the Democratic party is seen as better able to deal with the high cost of living (33 percent saw no difference between the parties and 12 percent had no opinion) and by a 39 to 15 percent ratio as better able to handle unemployment (37 percent saw no differenoe and 9 percent had no opinion).

1946 — 'Time For A Change'

While key issues are presently clearly working in favor of the Democratic party, the current race could conceivably develop into a situation analogous to 1946. Voters that year, disgruntled over eoonomic problems and labor relations, decided it was "time for a change" and overturned the 14-year Democratic control of Congress. However, no evidence so far suggests that outcome this year.

Ever since the Democratic party wrested control of the House from the GOP in 1932, the Republicans have been unable to regain control in an off-year election except in 1946.

The Effect Of Turnout

As a general rule, low turnout tends to favor Republican candidates, especially in areas outside the South. Persons most likely to vote generally come from the upper-income levels and from older age groups. Since a higher proportion of Republicans are found in these groups, a low turnout usually favors GOP candidates.

Fewer than half of all Americans take the trouble to vote in off-year elections. The average turnout in the last two offyear elections has been 40 percent of those of voting age. This level turnout has been assumed in developing the figures reported today.

These results are based on the following questions:

"If the elections for Congress were being held today, which party would you like to see win in this congressional district, the Democratic party or the Republican party?"

Those who were undecided were asked: "As of today, do you lean more to the Democratic party or to the Republican party?"

Following are the results of the current survey as well as the division of the vote when those who are undecided are allocated between the two major parties:

Current Vote For House

Democratic	52%
Republican	38
Other	4
Undecided	6

Trend In Vote For House
(Other and undecided allocated)

	Democratic	Republican
TODAY	58%	42%
March-April	57	43
March	58	42
February-March	58	42
February	57	43
January-February	59	41
January	60	40
October 1977-January	60	40
October	61	39
September-October	61	39
1976 election	57	43

The results reported today are based on personal interviews with 2,250 registered voters in more than 300 scientifically selected localities across the nation during the periods April 14-17 and April 28-May 1.

"These took about two weeks," she said. In her father's office is a garden of delicate iron roses she made and elaborate door knockers and one-of-a-kind house signs.

"We find the ornamental work is increasing rapidly," Price said. "We get orders from all over — London, the north of England, all over Wales."

"She was very good at crafts at school, especially embroidery," Price said. "I suppose that's where it started."

With strangers Gwyneth Price is shy and soft-spoken, happier using a welder's torch than words. But she clearly recalled her determination to follow her father's craft.

"I knew when I finished school that this was what I wanted," she said. "I had a word with Dad, and he said I could have a go. He didn't think I'd stick it, but I knew I would."

"I thought it was one of those girl's whims and she would grow out of it," Price said. "But it's been seven years now.

Bill To Benefit Union Bosses Before Senate

By JAMES J. KILPATRICK

WASHINGTON — The pending business in the Senate these days is the bill to benefit union bosses. The bill is not so titled, of course, but that is its sole purpose. A more brazen bid for union power could not have been contrived.

This bill has to be read to be believed. It is known as the "Labor Reform Act of 1978", but if truth-in-labeling laws applied to pending legislation, the measure would never survive a charge of fraud. The whole idea of "reform" is to correct demonstrable evils, but that is not the whole idea of this bill. The whole idea of this bill is to make life easier for the unions and harder for the employers.

The unions have demanded this bill — and they have supported their demands with strenuous lobbying — for this reason: They have been losing many certification elections, and their percentage of the non-farm labor force continues to decline. If this bill is enacted, as Senators Orrin Hatch and S.I. Hayakawa have said, it will represent the fulfillment of every union organizer's wildest dreams.

Consider a few provisions. Section 6 of the existing National Labor Relations Act would be amended to make it even more difficult for an employer to speak to his employees on issues related to union matters. If an employer chats with his workers about such issues during working hours, the union organizer must be extended "an equal opportunity" to talk to workers "in an equivalent manner." This means that union representatives would have free access to wander through a plant, propagandizing workers on the employer's premises, on the employer's time, at the employer's expense.

Consider the new language in Section 9. Here the purpose is to speed up certification elections, though the record clearly demonstrates that only a handful of such elections now encounter long delays. The language is so rigged that unions can get a 45-day hurry-up election as soon as they are certain of a majority within a prescribed bargaining unit; if the organizer is doubtful, he can get 75 days instead.

Section 10 of the present NLRA would be extensively amended. The section deals with unfair labor practices. This is one of the things the new language would accomplish: If the National Labor Relations Board determines "upon the preponderance of testimony taken" that an employer has committed such an offense, the employer is to be blacklisted. This is the procedure: The NLRB is to certify the offender to the secretary of labor; the secretary of labor is to certify the offender to the comptroller general; the comptroller general is to send the blacklisted name "to all agencies of the United States." No federal contracts may be awarded to such person during the three-year period immediately following the date of the secretary's certification.

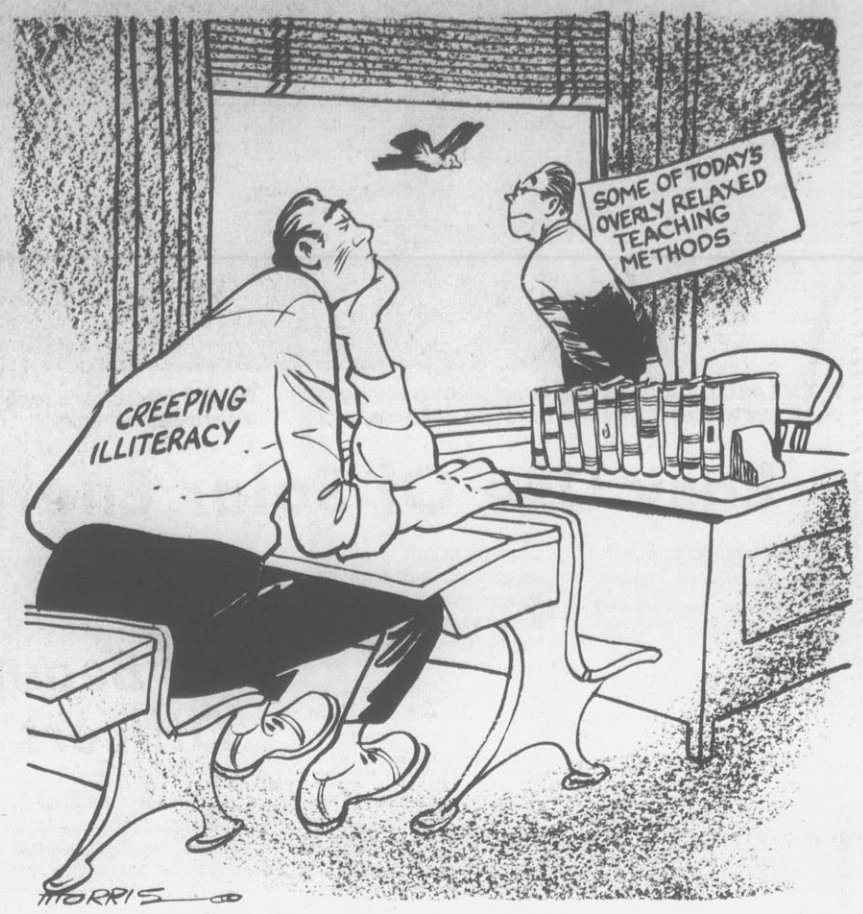

That is a purely punitive provision. Another such intimidating section follows immediately. If a newly organized company does not reach an initial contract soon enough to suit the board, the board "may award employees compensation for the delay in bargaining." Such awards would be based upon wage increases won elsewhere in "major collective bargaining settlements."

The National Labor Relations Board is now composed of five members. Under present law, the board has much discretion to fashion flexible remedies for particular cases. Because of a long tradition of voluntary compliance with the NLRA, most certification elections are run off smoothly and 90 percent of the "unfair" complaints are resolved without formal litigation. The board operates with reasonable efficiency.

Under this bill, two members would be added to the board, thus greatly increasing the circulation of paperwork. The bill would take away much of the board's discretion and replace flexibility with rigidity. By its fundamental alterations of the NLRA, the bill would create a paradise for bureaucrats and lawyers no less than for the labor unions. Tidal waves of litigation would be generated as old precedents and procedures were washed away.

The business community has lobbied against the bill as vigorously as labor has lobbied for it, but Big Labor holds some big IOU's and is calling them in. Only a successful filibuster can prevent enactment of this brutally unfair and imbalanced legislation. Talk on, I would urge the opposing senators. Talk on!

Robin Murphy Says He Found Place To Teach

FLOYD COUNTY, Va. — The natural wood frame house seems to have grown from the mountainside in Indian Valley. It has an air of belonging here just as the forest ferns and wild mountain flowers that form a lush green garden.

Some people may have thought that Robin Murphy was insane when he purchased approximately 30 acres of land at "the end of nowhere" in Floyd County, but now more people envy him.

Murphy built his home from start to finish without assistance from anyone; not only that, but the total cost of the endeavor including furnishings comes to $4,500.

Murphy said when he bought the land in August of 1972 he couldn't wait to move there. Three days later he arrived and set up camp.

"I was in such a hurry that I forgot my tent poles and had to make some," he said.

He lived in the tent for five months through autumn's crisp cool nights and January snows. Meanwhile, his house was going up bit by bit.

"I cleared the land and took the wood to a sawmill two and a half miles down the road," Murphy said. "I had a friend come in with a bulldozer to level it off and I was ready to begin."

With the assistance of a book entitled, "How to Build Your Dreamhouse for $3,500" and some experience as a carpenter's helper in Florida, Murphy began the construction.

"This wasn't the first house I ever built though," he revealed. "I built one while stationed in Thailand when I was in the Air Force."

Murphy's job in the Air Force consisted of driving heavy machinery to cover up excess building materials with dirt. He said he couldn't stand to see all of those materials go to waste so he built something which resembled a tower.

Of course the Air Force wasn't too pleased with his creative ability and told Murphy to tear it down.

"I just couldn't do that so I burned it down," he said, laughing.

But Murphy's current residence hasn't burned down, or fallen down. In fact it is as steady as any house could ever be.

The foundation of Murphy's house is made of locust lumber and he said he had to oil the nails to get them to pierce the hard surface of the wood. The rest of the house is built from pine, oak, poplar and maple.

Although he insulated the house when it was being built, Murphy says it is still hard to heat with the wood stoves he uses in winter.

Murphy lived without electricity for nine months and a year without plumbing.

"I didn't miss the electricity," he said. "I miss the money more."

He cooks with gas and heats his water with gas. His heat is provided by woodstoves and his water is provided by a spring with the help of gravity.

Murphy lives in his five-room house with an irish setter called Blarney and four cats: Elmo, Amy, Otto and Feathers. An Irish flag flies over his home one week and the stars and bars the next.

Of course one of the most unusual features of the house is the Charles Joseph Whitman Memorial Tower.

"I was building the roof on the log room and I noticed that there wasn't a tower already there so I decided to build one," he continued. "Of course, it was all Elmo's idea. He's my main consultant."

Elmo, a huge, long-haired black cat, had come with Murphy from Florida and lived in the tent with him when the house was being built.

The reason for the name of the tower has not yet been revealed, except for a comment, "Why not?"

Murphy graduated from Radford College in 1976 with a bachelor's degree in education. He began to work the day before graduation.

"I am concentrating on my current career as fourth grade teacher at Willis Elementary School," he said. "I sure do like those kids.

"I found so much warmth in this community. I wanted to be a teacher but not a teacher just anywhere. I wanted to be a teacher here.

"I felt that this could be just one way to repay all my friends here in Floyd County, for their help," he concluded. "They have given me advice, food, tools, and friendship. I want to do my part to help them."

raised the bidding. He asked for assurances that the president never again would couple Israel with another country.

Without a flat commitment, Mr. Carter met Church halfway. In his formal letter to Congress asking approval of the sales, he included a written-for-Church "addendum" calling the threenation sale unique. That suggested no repetition.

For one day following that breakfast, Church was an advocate of the arms deal. On May 11, complaining he lacked a "consensus," he flipped back to his old position. But other senators — Baker, Mrs. Humphrey, Charles Percy and John Glenn had been influenced by Church's persuasive arguments two days earlier; they stayed with the president.

That pattern by soon-to-be Chairman Church was the sourest note in a bitterly fought battle.

There's Protection On Both Sides Of A Cage

I've never understood why the makers of baby beds don't extend the principle of protective railings to the top of the bed and make a cage instead. It would certainly be a great deal simpler for us parents of climbers. We could kiss our small charges goodnight and fasten them in, secure in the knowledge that we wouldn't wake up on an impulse at 2 a.m. and find them trying to feed peanut butter to the sofa. Or wandering barefoot through a neighbor's pile of compost. Or peering down from the top shelf of the bedroom closet.

When Meg was born, we unwittingly solved the problem by putting a latch on the outside of her door in such a way that the door would stay open exactly three inches — just enough for us to hear her. The original idea was to keep the cat out, but we soon found that it had the added benefit of keeping Meg in. And believe me, that was no small accomplishment. The way she could swing down those crib rails before she could even walk steadily made me a firm believer in evolution.

I was perfectly happy with the situation. The worst thing she could do was to climb her dresser drawers and twirl by her teeth from the light fixture, so I never really had to worry about her. But several months ago Phillip decided that locking her in like that might traumatize her. He was adamant. We must leave her door open.

I immediately had visions of her climbing to the top of the linen closet and drinking a bottle of rug shampoo. Fortunately, her response to freedom was not that exotic. Unfortunately, it was still a great deal closer to the major disruption that I had foreseen than to the peaceful transition Phillip had predicted.

The first time we left the door open, Meg came bounding into our bedroom at 5:30 a.m., mistook my stomach for her Wonder Horse, and shouted, "Let's go outside."

I took her back to her bed, gave her three books and a set of blocks, and said sweetly, "If you wake me up again, I am going to tie you in a blanket and stick you in a dresser drawer.

The next morning Phillip stumbled downstairs at 7:00 a.m. and said, "How long have you been up?"

"Since five," I moaned. "I felt something being shoved down my throat and awakened to find your daughter playing doctor. She was using my hairbrush as a tongue depressor."

"Isn't that cute?" he grinned.

"No, it is NOT cute! And this is NOT going to work out. "I'M the one who's being traumatized."

"Well, why don't you just put her into bed with us? Some of my fondest memories are of getting up early and snuggling into my parents' bed."

So the next morning when I awoke to find her merrily resetting the time on the digital clock, I put her between us and prepared to snooze for a few more hours.

She kicked me and giggled.

"Cut that out, "I mumbled." Mommy's name is Gail, not Trigger."

She kicked me again.

"Cut that out, I said."

"But Mommy, I want to play," she said.

"Then play with your daddy. He told me having you in bed with us would be a big kick. So give it to him."

She obliged, but all Phillip did was grunt, pull all the blankets to his side of the bed, and burrow under them.

"I can't play with Daddy," Meg whined. "I can't find him."

"Then settle down and go to sleep."

"No, No, No, NO, NO!' she chanted.

I tried her daddy's trick, but she began walking up and down my back on her knees and singing, "I've been working on the railroad." Phillip kept right on snoring.

I had had it. I pulled the covers off of him, dumped Meg on his back, grabbed my pillow, and stalked toward the door.

"What's wrong, honey?" he asked sleepily.

"I am going to do what I should have done in the first place. I am going to latch MYSELF in Meg's room," I said.

"Why?" he asked as Meg grabbed him by the pajama collar and yelled, "Hyaa! Giddap!"

"Because," I grinned. "This is your fond memory, not mine."

Washington State Tackles Bureaucratic Confusion

By DAVID AMMONS
Associated Press Writer

OLYMPIA, Wash. (AP) — Starting a new business can bring on a gordian knot of government red tape. A potential grocer, for instance, needs 28 different licenses from a dozen separate agencies.

But this state has set out to undo the bureaucratic tangle with, well, another bureau: the Business License Center, an envisioned one-stop shop for budding entrepreneurs.

When the agency reaches full operation next year, a new businessman will only need to make application to it. Then the agency, not the businessman, will undertake the footwork and paper shuffling among other agencies to get the permits and licenses needed.

"I think this is one of the most significant things we have done in a long time for the consumers," said director Saul Arrington.

"In the past, it has been an awful headache getting licensed. The time involved is one thing, but also unless you had a CPA or an attorney, it could be very confusing, what with agencies spread all over the place."

Businessmen agree

"It will substantially reduce the amount of time and energy it takes to wade through red tape," says Dave Gordon, head of the Association of Washington Business.

"Anything we can do to streamline the process leaves that much more time to tend to business. It's good for the business climate."

The bureaucratic maze that has existed for would-be merchants extends through 30 state agencies that regulate business in some way and issue more than 1,000 different permits and licenses.

Until Jan. 16, when the license center opened, a Spokane woman who wanted to start a beauty salon would have had to drive 300 miles to Olympia, the capital. She'd have to wander around town until she found every agency which issues a license she needs — assuming, of course, she knew what was needed.

In her case, the list would include a tax number, incorporation papers and various permits and forms from the Employment Security Department, the Department of Labor and Industries, the Division of Professional Licensing and other agencies.

The maze led state officials "to seriously reconsider whether we are licensing people to protect the public, or simply perpetuating bureaucratic red tape because that's the way we've always done things," says Arrington, who thinks Washington is on its way to becoming the only state with "master" business licenses issued by a single agency.

The full one-stop process for all businesses won't be reality until the fall of 1979, but the license center already provides:

—A toll-free telephone line with licensing experts standing by to help. They won't give advice on financial aspects of running a business, but they'll explain the governmental hurdles that must be cleared.

—Latest information about some of the federal and local requirements for businesses

—A packet available by mail of all information and forms needed so paperwork can be done at home. From there, the applicant mails the forms to the proper agency.

The center will watchdog the process if asked.

The new agency grew out of a pilot program for grocers, who can now make out one application, with which the state arranges the licenses and permits they need. That program, deemed a success, is being expanded to included everything from one-man corner drugstores to Weyerhauser and Boeing operations.

All of the 1,000-plus licenses won't be brought under the license center umbrella. The state now is choosing which ones will be included, and some may be abolished.

Washington State has a new "sunset" law under which the governor and legislature nominate state agencies and government functions for possible extinction. The new licensing idea has "an obvious tie-in," says Arrington.

The legislature appropriated $350,000 for the project — enough to crank up the 23-person office and run it for a year. Some of the employees are transfers from other agencies, and some are new state workers.

Arrington figures he needs another $700,000 to computerize the operation.

"We'll be doing the running around instead of the consumer," he says.

While agencies no longer will be dealing directly with the public in the area of licensing, they will retain licensing powers, he says.

"We will not, for instance, be ruling on whether a business can get a liquor license," Arrington says. "That will still be up to the Liquor Control Board, which will run a full investigation. We will be trying to facilitate."

Pitt Beautification Officers Elected

The Keep Pitt County Clean and Beautiful Committee met at the Three Steers Thursday, May 18. Twenty people attended the meeting and officers were elected. The slate of officers are Steve Evans, president, Sam Uzzell, vice-president, Pete Anderson, treasurer; and Alice Keene, secretary.

Steve Evans accepted on behalf of the membership a check for $27.75 from the conservation department of the Junior Women's Club of Greenville and Katherine Gray. This contribution will be used to further the goals of the committee.

A board of directors was established to help increase membership, develop goals and enhance the functioning of the group. Polly Dail, Phil Morin and Marshall Helms, all of Greenville, Margaret Barnhill of Belvoir, Pete Anderson of Farmville, Karen Collier of Winterville and Nina Phillips of Ayden will serve on the board.

The next scheduled meeting will be Thursday, June 15 at the Three Steers Restaurant at 12 p.m. For further information call Sam Uzzell or Evelyn Spangler at the Pitt County Agricultural Extension Office, 758-1196.

Wet Weather Has Delayed Local Area Construction Projects

By LYNN CAVERLY
Reflector Staff Writer

The past weeks of wet, cold weather have set back the majority of construction projects in the county, according to various construction officials.

Mayo Allen, director of public works for the city of Greenville, stated that "although we don't have any big projects behind schedule, the Greene Street Extension of the Southside project is behind a couple of weeks because it has been too wet."

Allen added that some of the newly dug graves in the local cemeteries have been caving in due to excess moisture.

"Those graves that have been dug in the past month," said Allen, "haven't had a chane chance to compact yet. We have had to haul in dirt to remedy the situation."

North Carolina Department of Transportation divisional engineer C. W. Snell said the weather has just about brought state projects in the area to a standstill.

"In general we are about six months behind schedule," said Snell. "Specifically on the Highway 43 project, we are about 20 percent behind. Estimating, I would say the project is about 30-60 days from being completed. It was due for completion on June 1.

Snell cited drainage problems as creating the most trouble.

The expansion of the East Carolina University football stadium is behind in some areas and ahead of schedule in others, according to inspector on the project Coleman Watts.

"In general we are about three weeks behind," said Watts. "Specifically we were behind in the pile drive operation and the cold weather affected concrete pouring and some steel erections. We have been working week-ends to catch up on those areas in which we are behind."

Alton Warren, chief building inspector, said his office hasn't slowed down issuing building permits, "but I would say that construction at Procter and Gamble and the new shopping center have been slowed down considerably. They are probably bably about a month or so behind after the big rains we have had. It takes about 2-3 days before they can get back in and work."

NEWTON ORDERED TO POST ADDITIONAL BAIL — Black Panther Party leader Huey Newton and his wife, Owen, arrive at the Alameda County courthouse in Oakland, Calif. on Friday, where a judge ordered him to post an additional $75,000 bail. Judge Martin Pulich said charges filed against Newton in connection with a barroom scuffle last week in Santa Cruz County "substantially increases" the potential of Newton fleeing prosecution on murder and assault charges in Oakland. White, Smith Named To Vet Foundation

Sen. Vernon E. White of Winterville and Albert W. Smith of Farmville were among 40 persons named as directors to the North Carolina Veterinary Science Foundation, organized at N.C. State University in Raleigh, Thursday.

The purpose of the foundation is, "to encourage teaching, learning and research in the area of veterinary science," according to officials.

Southport attorney Grover A. Gore was elected president of the foundation which has already received gifts from the Raleigh and Forsyth County Kennell Clubs, 100 acres of land in Moore County from Mrs. W. O. Moss and the late W. O. (Pappy) Moss, and from other organizations and individuals.

NCSU chancellor Joab Thomas said that private support from foundations, "provide the margin for excellence," for the land-grant university, and noted that the projected faculty for the proposed School of Veterinary Medicine at NCSU is a case in which private support would be a necessity.

"The salaries we propose for the faculty are all above the maximum permitted by state law," Thomas pointed out.

Thomas noted that the Council on Education of the American Veterinary Medical Association has already made a pre- construction inspection of NCSU plans for the school and found, "outstanding plans, an outstanding site, and an excellent curriculum."

Pharmacy Graduate

Horace Tripp, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Lee Tripp, of Ayden, graduated from the School of Pharmacy of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

Tripp completed the five-year pharmacy course and will be eligible to take a state examination for registered pharmacist licensure following a period of internship.

Tripp will be employed at Eckerd's in Morehead City. He is a member of Phi Delta Chi, pharmaceutical, fraternity, and received most outstanding senior in the fraternity.

Fifty-seven percent of Turkey's 40 million inhabitants live in the countryside.

W.S. State Graduates

The following students were among the graduates of the 86th annual commencement exercises of Winston-Salem State University.

They are: James Davis, Robert S. Stringfield, Gregory T. Teel and Cynthia E. Williams, all of Greenville.

John Hartford To Be In Two Concerts Here

John Hartford, the young American composer-performer who has done for the Mississippi and riverboats in music what Mark Twain did in words, is coming to Greenville for a two-day appearance.

Hartford will be at the Roxy Music, Arts and Crafts Center, 629 Albemarle for concerts at 9 p.m. on Tuesday, May 30 and Wednesday, May 31. Tickets for the event are priced at $5 if secured in advance, $6 at the door. Tickets for Roxy members are $4. Reservations are being urged for these concerts. The number to call is 752-7483.

"Gentle On My Mind," one of the songs written by John Hartford, has become a modern classic. This song typically displays Hartford's ability to put poetry into the words of his song. It became Glenn Campbell's biggest hit and holds a modern record of being recorded by singers — to date, more than 300 artists have recorded it.

This song, and Hartford's album "Mark Twang" both won Grammy Awards for the artist.

A versatile performer, he sings, plays the banjo, fiddle, guitar and dobro. In the past several years, he has been a guest star on numerous television shows—Mike Douglas, Dolly Parton, The Smothers Brothers, Steve Allen, Mike Douglas; with Glen Campbell, Dick Cavett, on the Hollywood Palace show and many others.

A recording star for RCA, Warner Brothers and Flying Fish, Hartford's dozen albums include "The Love Album," "Iron Mountain Depot," "All In The Name of Love," and "Earthwords and Music."

GENTLE ON MY MIND . . . composer-performer John Hartford will be in Greenville for two concerts on May 30 and 31, both at 9 p.m. They will be at the Roxy Center, Albemarle Street. Tickets are priced at $5 in advance, and $6 at the door.

Farmville Concert This Afternoon

FARMVILLE — Wilson Nichols, Jr. and Mrs. Phyllis Corbett Roberts will appear in concert today beginning at 3:30 at the Chapter House of the Benjamin May Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution.

Sponsored jointly by the DAR and the Farmville Community Arts Council, the concert is dedicated to the memory of Mrs. Haywood Smith, who taught the two performers.

Nichols earned the bachelor and master degrees in music from the School of Music, East Carolina University, and now teaches in Raleigh.

Mrs. Roberts received a bachelor degree from East Carolina University and her master's from Peabody Conservatory, Baltimore, Md.

The program will include music by Handel, Mozart, Brahms, Puccini, Schubert, and Liszt. Nichols will also perform selections from an opera he has composed, "A Child Is Born."

There is no admission charged and the public is invited to attend.

Auditions Scheduled

AYDEN — Auditions are being held by the recently formed Ayden Theater Workshop for three one-act plays — Shaw's "Overruled" (two males, two females); Ionesco's "The Bald Soprano," (three males, three females); and Glaspell's "Suppressed Desires," (one male, two females).

Ages of characters in these plays range from teen-aged to middle-aged.

Auditions will be held on two evenings — Tuesday and Wednesday, May 23 and 24, at 7:30 p.m. in the Ayden Grammar School Auditorium.

All persons interested in being part of a play production are urged to attend the auditions. Persons desiring more information are to contact Joel McLawhorn, 756-7209 or Kim Dale, 746-6603.

Free Concert

RALEIGH — A free concert for the public is being given at 4 p.m. today on the first floor of the N.C. Museum of Art. The N. C. Chamber Players will present a program of works by Brahms and Schubert.

DEMONSTRATION — Bill Joos, a junior at Chaote-Rosemary Hall, Wallingford, Conn., demonstrates how a giant Monopoly game was played at the school recently. The 100-foot square board was set up on the floor of the gymnasium at the school. Joos was the winner of the game which had been completed earlier. (AP Laserphoto)

Hospitality House

Murry Strawbridge

Murry Strawbridge, vice president of the Greenville Chapter of the Full Gospel Businessmen, will be the featured guest on today's "Hospitality House," Kay Currie's personality show on WITN-TV from noon til 1 p.m., Channel 7.

"Man's Search for Happiness" is the theme emphasized by Strawbridge. He will discuss his missionary work in 11 countries, and also talk about his interview on the "Good News" show.

The Rev. John Book of Maitland, Fla., another guest, will talk on the same subject. Book is a regularl speaker on "Christian Viewpoint."

A third guest is Regis Ferruzza, resident-artist at Beaufort Technical Institute. He will play two classical guitar compositions.

Greenville Poets In 'Crucible'

Crucible. The Annual Literary and Art Magazine. Atlantic Christian College. Wilson. 51 pages. Illustrated, drawings and photos. $1.25 ($1 plus 25 cents postage). Available from: Dr. James Hemby, Chairman, English Dept., Atlantic Christian College, Wilson, N. C., 27893.

Poetry is again the mainstay of Atlantic Christian College's annual spring literary and art magazine, "Crucible." Once more, "Crucible" has published some of the finest contemporary talent at work today in North Carolina.

Sally Buckner, teacher at Peace College, is this year's recipient of the first prize in poetry. Her poem, "Strawberry-Picking" is a clear, word-visual evocation of strawberries in May.

"Leaves green as tomorrow, clusters of triplets mesh to a lacy coverlet through which sunlight pours in silver shafts to waiting fruit:
crimson valentines, heavy with juice,
plump as partridges, nesting in yellow straw."

These words paint vivid images of colors, shapes, and the feel of spring sun warming the earth, bringing forth this close to earth fruit.

Greenville Poets

Three Greenville poets — Helen Parks, Claire Pittman, and Jeff Rollins — are represented in the 1978 "Crucible." All are members of the ECU Poetry Forum, and all three have previously had poetry published.

In most of her poems, Montana native Mrs. Parks typically draws on wide vistas of rugged landscapes and hardy people still possessing pioneering characteristics.

However, "And In This Corner," she gives us a Shirley Jackson mood of diabolical twist. A guessing game of who would "go" first is introduced in lines that set the tone of the challenge.

"we was sittin one evenin on Satz's porch
Satz, Pop, Harve, Malcolm,
Cable, Billy "Worms" Tatum and me

laughin low and comfortable like you do when the sun's thick in the air and the blood's runnin strong when somebody, Cable, I believe it was must have been, it's got his print said Hell
I bet a bottle I outlast every one of ya."

And they do all "go" — one by one, victims of some terrible disease or macabre accident, until only one, the narrator, remains. ". . . them sweet boys/ not one knowing it was me that lasted/ me/ alone."

Concise, often philosophic in her poetry, with a marked talent for new reflections of old images, Claire Pittman in her "Crucible" poem this year contrasts stucco birds, now plentiful in local landscapes, with the real blood and feather birds of a more southern clime.

"Heavy-handed farmers
Pass each day and thank the Lord
And local hardware store
For bringing them true beauty:
And over all, Mother Mary
Spreads her plaster cloak
Her white protective wings,
Staring in eyeless wonder
At birds who cannot fly
And never sing."

Mrs. Pittman concludes by showing the other, natural side of the coin —

"Beneath a hotter sun,
Birds twist their necks
In pleasure, lift dainty feet
From water, still and deep . . ."

The youngest of the Greenville trio of poet published in "Crucible" this year, Jeff Rollins, will soon graduate from East Carolina University. He has been acclaimed, deservedly, as one of the best young Tar Heel poets.

A poet of many moods, he creates poetic personalities that are manifestly of today; or, as in "Young Absolom," an effective recapturing of Biblical Old Testament times —

"The pretty ones kiss my neck and play in my hair which is like spun silk
the color of a thin gold coin held to the sun . . .
I, Absolom of the perfect spear
Absolom of moon-psalms
Prince of Wheat
Prince of new singing . . ."

The Greenville poets are only part of the enjoyment afforded by two dozen Tar Heel poets appearing in this issue of "Crucible." R. T. Smith — for the consecutive second year winner of the Sam Ragan poetry prize — for example, expands a quotation from Simonides in "At The Hot Gates."

He uses a modern symbol, "a rented Honda" to convey travel impressions in Greece, a land rich in memories of dead heroes. Seemingly insignificant personal actions become magnified, a framework enclosing ancient scenes summoned to the mind.

"Myriads of gold butterflies swarm Leonidas' helmet. The air shimmers with divinity.
I extract knife and lemon from my knapsack,
split the yellow rind and peel it to crystal.
The first bite is absolute clarity . . ."

Three short stories, including Peggy Payne's prize winning "Early On A Sunday In New York," and about two dozen photographs and line drawings round out this excellent magazine — a very real pleasure for its minimal cost.

Book News

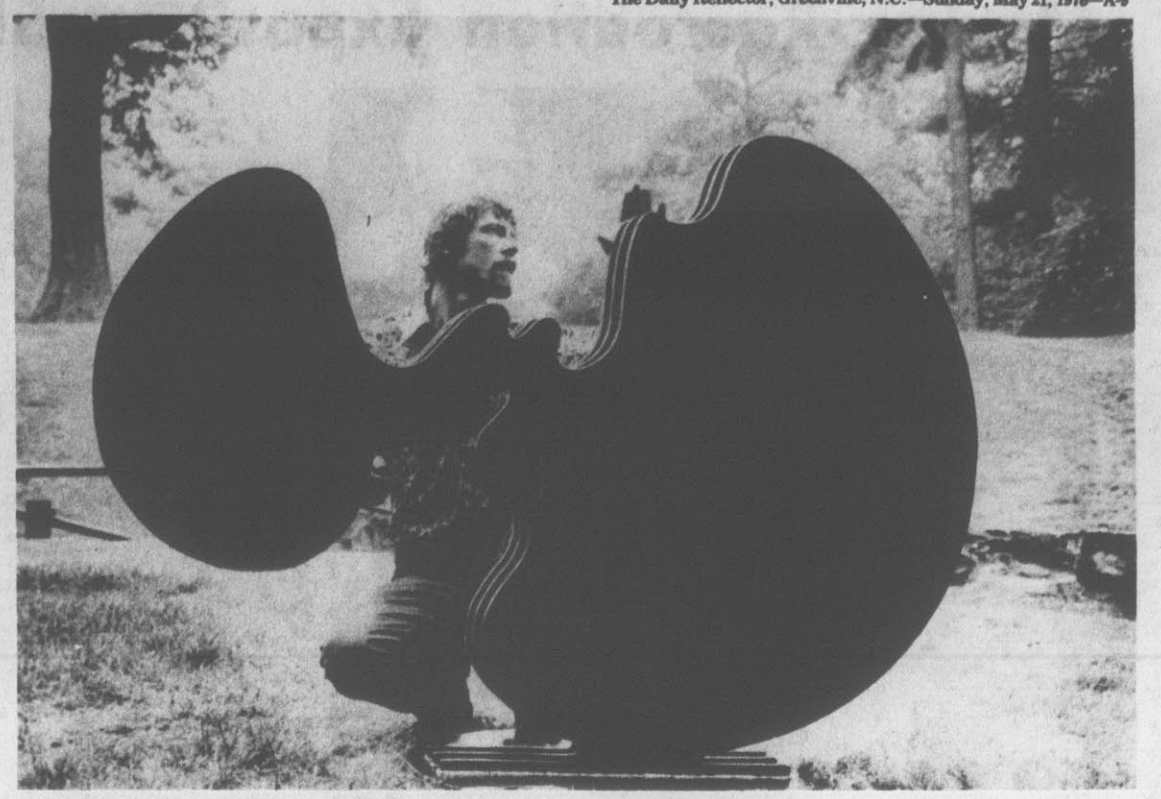

FROM SHEPPARD MEMORIAL LIBRARY

By Margaret Clark

In REX STOUT: A BIOGRAPHY, John McAleer tells the full and wonderful story of the peerless mystery writer and creator of Nero Wolfe. Based on oral and written interviews with Stout, his family and friends, this comprehensive biography captures the warmth and personality of the man. It traces Stout's beginnings as a writer whose range included the lost-world novel and psychological novel, and shows how these laid the groundwork for his famous detective series. McAleer explores parallels between Stout and the key figures in the Wolfe books. He points out that "even as he entertains us with a detective story, he attacks a wide assortment of social evils: facism, communism, racism, censorship, and social pretense wherever found." But above all, the reader comes to see Stout as a multi-faceted personality in his own right, every bit as extraordinary as his creation, Nero Wolfe.

THE TRAIL OF THE FOX by David Irving is a fascinating study of Erwin Rommel, one of the most controversial names in military history. The author bases his biography on original documents, including the lost Rommel diaries and Rommel family papers. He portrays the "Desert Fox" as an officer of extraordinary ambition, pride and vindictiveness. A staunch supporter of Hitler and Nazism, Rommel was nonetheless fearless and resourceful, tactically perceptive on the battlefield, and a singularly clean fighter. Accused of being involved in an assassination plot against Hitler's regime, he ultimately committed suicide on orders of the Fuhrer himself. However, Irving maintains that even though Rommel had come to distrust Hitler's regime and military tactics, he was far too loyal to cheat on his superior.

In another highly readable biography, John Payne has reassessed the life and works of Leonardo da Vinci. Payne paints a convincing picture of Leonardo not only as a giant of his age, but also as a man. Besides dispelling many myths about him, he places his subject in his own time with its wars and sudden upheavals, its unsurpassed artists and architects. Included among the illustrations in LEONARDO are two earlier seldom-seen Mona Lisas.

CONTEMPORARY SCULPTOR — Dennis Kowal, a contemporary sculptor who pioneered the use of carved acrylic as a sculptural medium, will show 20 examples of his work at the N.C. Museum of Art, Raleigh in the Mary Duke Biddle Gallery. The show opens May 28 and remains on view through July 11. The exhibition represents Kowal's work over a 20 year period — 1958 to date. A reception for the artist (shown in the photograph above with one of his works) will be held from 2:30 to 3:30 p.m. May 28. He will give a lecture at 4 p.m. The public is invited to both events, and there is no admission charge. (Photo Courtesy N.C. Dept. of Cultural Resources)

Festival Today

TARBORO — Performers to appear in the annual "Happening on the Common" festival today in Tarboro have been named. Events begin at 2 p.m. and continue until 5 p.m. They are:

— A Storybook Parade," with children dressed in costumes of their favorite storybook characters;

— A concert by the Camp Lejeune Marine Band;

— The Tar River Boys, a Tarboro bluegrass band;

— The Greengrass Cloggers of Greenville;

— Tarboro's Jubilee Singers;

— The Lightbearers gospel quartet of Robersonville;

— The Tarboro High School Music Department's jazz ensemble, directed by David Arnold;

— Skits from the Tarboro High School Drama Department's production of "South Pacific," directed by Lloyd Owens; and — Original plays, skits, and storytelling by two Edgecombe County dramatists, Dean Cudd and Sue Ellen Hall.

There is no admission charge for the festival events to be held on the Town Common, and the public is invited to attend.

Classes Set In Puppetry

Puppetry classes originally scheduled to begin May 18 at the Greenville Art Center have been rescheduled to begin Tuesday, May 23. A total of eight classes will be conducted, from 3:30 to 4:30 p.m. each Tuesday and Thursday, ending June 15. Rachel Whichard is instructor, and fee for the eight classes, including supplies, is $6.50. A limited number of students in the 10-14 age group will be accepted. For enrollment call the Art Center, 758-1946.

Writers To Meet Tuesday

The second meeting in May of the Greenville Writers Club will be held Tuesday at 8 p.m. at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Raynor, 2106 Pendleton Street (near Hooker Road).

All persons interested in any form of creative writing are invited to attend.

Weyer Show At NCMA

RALEIGH — Photorealistic paintings and drawings by German-born artist Brigitta Weyer are now on display in the Collectors Gallery of the N. C. Museum of Art. A reception for the artist is being held from 2 to 4 p.m. today and the public is invited.

She is currently a visiting artist in New Bern at Craven Community College, in the visiting artist program sponsored by the N. C. Arts Council and the N. C. Dept. of Community Colleges.

Cherry Point Open House May 27

By SSGT. KENN BOSS
Joint Public Affairs Office

CHERRY POINT — Visitors to Cherry Point's Saturday, May 27 Open House are in for added surprises this year. In addition to the two main events — performances by the Navy's Blue Angels and an AV-8A Harrier flight demonstration — hobbyists from surrounding communites will add a touch of "village green" atmosphere to military activities.

Car buffs will have an opportunity to return to the nostalgic days of glamour in the auto industry. More than a dozen vintage automobiles, all classics, will be displayed at Cherry Point by members of the Morehead City Antique Car Club.

Shining roadsters and gleaming touring cars such as those seen in the movies exhibit the impressive craftsmanship of Detroit's early cars.

Another featured automobile attraction will be the Carovette display from Jacksonville. Carovettes is a brotherhood of local Corvette owners, and their motorcade plans to park here so that sports car enthusiasts can view their 21 high performance machines.

Yet another civilian attraction will be crafts displays by several Girl and Boy Scout troops. A number of the young people will be on hand to explain requirements for winning merit badges and other awards.

Non-military aircraft will be seen when remote control airplane clubs launch electronically-guided miniature aircraft. Scale model replicas of old and new flying machines are expected to include some barrel rolls and maybe a dogfight or two. Remote controllers will scramble their unmanned aircraft twice during the day — in a 40-minute flight that takes off at 11 a.m. and the afternoon performance at 3:15 following the Blue Angel spectacle.

Preservation Grants

RALEIGH — A total of 80 grants amounting to nearly $625,000 for historic preservation activities in North Carolina have been announced by Sara W. Hodgkins, secretary of the N. C. Dept. of Cultural Resources.

Among the grants are: Chicamacomico Life Saving Station, Rodanthe; Campbell House, Buies Creek; Citizens Bank, Elizabeth City; Williams King House, Windsor; Carteret County Jail, Beufort; Burras House, Jamesville; the town of Murfreesboro; Bonner House and Palmer-Marsh House, Bath; Iredell House, Cupola House (research project), and Mulberry Hill House, all Edenton; Somerset Place, Creswell.

Also, Eagle Tavern, Halifax; Blount House, Tarboro; Harvey Mansion, New Bern.

In addition, grants for inventories, planning studies and publications have been awarded to Pamlico County Historical Association, Bayboro; to the town of Tarboro; the city of Wilson; the city of Washington; and the Downtown Area Revitalization Effort, Inc., Wilmington.

Photographs Criticized

By IRVING DESFOR
AP Newsfeatures

Many great pictures which become photojournalistic classics or win major awards, often become the target of criticism. It seems to be the price of fame — whether a photograph or a person — that when placed on a pedestal, you not only get admiration and praise but also some disclaimers and brickbats.

I recall when Joe Rosenthal won the Pulitzer Prize in 1945 for what has been called the greatest war picture of all time: Marines raising Old Glory on Iwo Jima, Feb. 23, 1945. That, too, ran into flack. A small voice somewhere cried out it was "arranged" and not authentic.

Fortunately, the picture itself speaks loudly and clearly. Its spontaneity and natural action are all too apparent and AP photographer Rosenthal was there to record the peak instant that made it immortal. It remains so.

As an interesting footnote, this was the only picture in Pulitzer Prize history to be awarded the prize the same year in which it was photographed. Normally awards go to the best work of the preceding year. In 1946, no Pulitzer Prize in News Photography was awarded. It had already been given.

Sometimes it takes many years and repeated explanations to set the record straight. Such is the case with Arthur Rothstein, noted photojournalist, lecturer, author and teacher. Two of his most famous depression years photos have been called fakes despite his explanations of ther authenticity.

In the April issue of Camera 35 magazine, Rothstein hopefully has set the record straight for historians and students of photographic art. His article tells the story of the pictures and how the hoax accusations started. Rothstein, as a photographer for the arm Security Administration under Roy Stryker, was one of a noted team of photographers which documented the U.S. Depression era of the 1930s.

In April 1936, he photographed farmer Arthur Coble and his two sons, Milton and Little Darrel, walking in the face of a dust storm in Cimarron County, Oklahoma. With wind howling and dust blowing hard, Rothstein recorded the scene as he saw it to show the tragedy affecting many farmers.

The following month, he was in Pennington County, South Dakota. He came across a cattle skull on the cracked earth of a dried-up water-hole, a common sight in many seasons. Intrigued by the skull's long shadow and the texture of the earth, he made many exposures from different angles.

Both photos were published widely and became recognized as works of art by many museums. They also came in for controversy

New Ballets

HOUSTON — Ben Stevenson, Artistic Director of the Houston Ballet has announced new ballets for the company. These are the world premiere of "Papillon," a "lost work" of Offenbach; John Cranko's "The Lady and the Fool;" and world premieres from American dancer-teacher Norman Walker and the young Chinese-American choreographer Choo San Goh.

Four In Mint Show

CHARLOTTE — The third in a series of Area Artists Exhibition opens at 3 p.m. today in the Round Gallery of Charlotte's Mint Museum.

Four young talents are being featured in this new show — Franklin U. Creech of Dallas, chairman of the Dept. of Art, Gaston College; Barbara E. Harmeyer, also a faculty member of Gaston College; ECU graduate Paul Harcharik, now living in Gaston County and instructing at Sacred Heart College, Belmont; and Dean Johns.

One of the highlights of the show is a set of bronze gates executed by Creech especially for the Mint show. He will also show other pieces of sculpture.

Ms. Harmeyer is exhibiting paintings and prints; Harcharik is showing prints and drawings; and Johns has large textural wall hangings.

The four artists were chosen for this show through competition. A reception is being held from 3 to 5 p.m. today for the public to meet the artists. There is no admission charge and the public is invited. The exhibit will continue through June 25.

Marine Recreation Exposition Slated

MANTEO — Saturday and Sunday, May 27 and 28, are the dates of a two-day Marine Recreation Exposition scheduled at the North Carolina Marine Resources Center on Roanoke Island.

Sponsored by the University of North Carolina Sea Grant Program and the N. C. Marine Resources Center, this is the first such celebration dedicated to an exposition of marine recreation, technology, and safety.

The exposition will open at 9 a.m. Saturday and continue through 6 p.m. Sunday's hours are 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. There is no admission charge and the public is encouraged to attend.

Planned as an inauguration of the summer water recreation season for the Outer Banks area, the exposition is being held for the purpose of "creating an educational awareness of what is available in various aspects of marine recreation," according to Dennis Regan, extension agent for the UNC Sea Grant Marine Advisory Service and coordinator for the program.

Located on the shore of Croatan Sound on the northwest side of Roanoke Island and adjacent to the Manteo Airport, the Marine Resources Center offers 11 acres of display area and demonstrations of water activities in the sound.

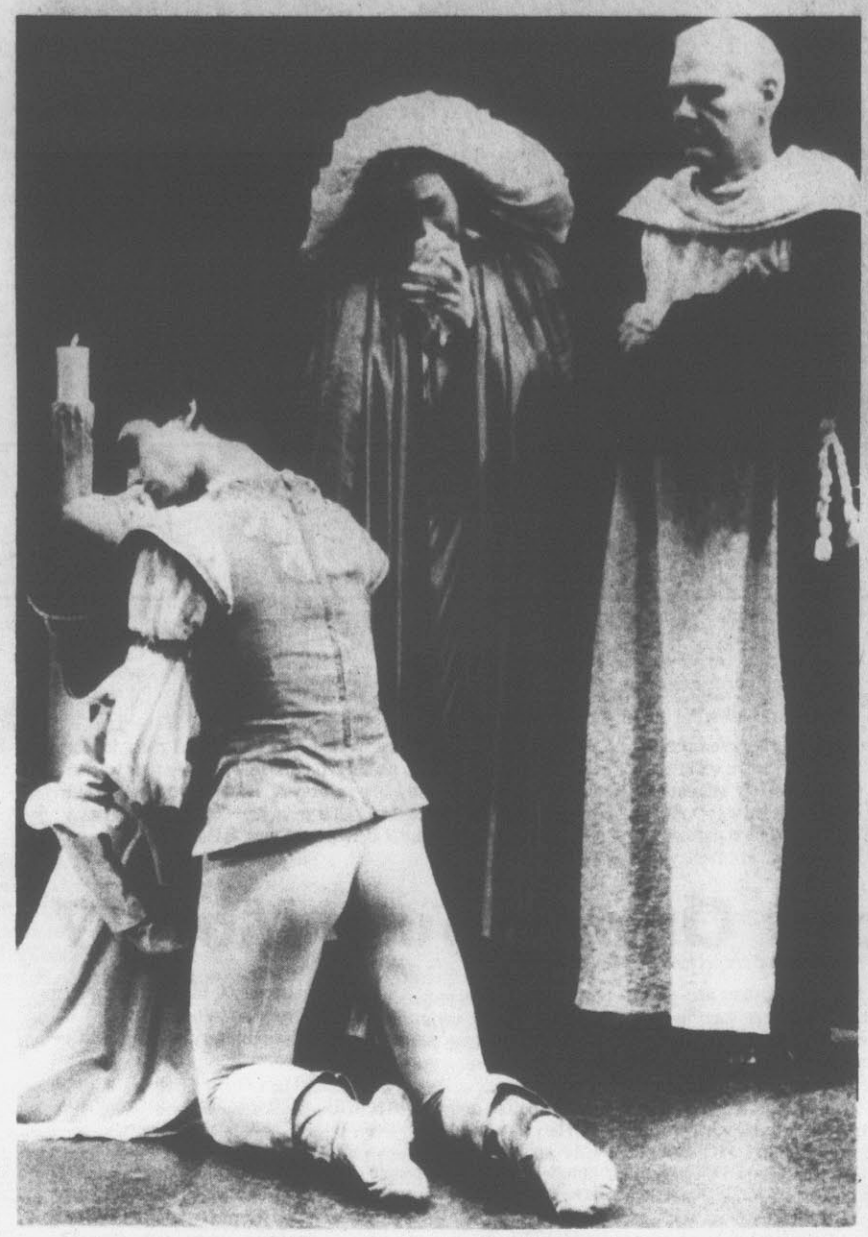

Boating, water skiing, jet skiing, hang gliding, fishing, scuba diving, and wind surfing are some of the water sports to be accentuated throughout the two-day exposition.

Exhibitions of power boats, sail boats, off-road vehicles, fishing tackle and nautical crafts will be shown, and there will also be local marine arts and crafts exhibits.

The Coast Guard will kick off National Boating Safety Week on the Outer Banks during the exposition.

A special feature on Saturday is to be a fish fry beginning at noon, conducted by the Manteo Band Boosters Club with music provided by the Manteo High School Stage Band.

Persons wanting more detailed information on events planned for the two days are to write or call Dennis Regan at: Marine Advisory Service' P. O. Box 699, Manteo, N. C., 27954, telephone 473-3937.

WEDDING VOWS — San Francisco Ballet Artistic Director Lew Christensen makes a rare appearance as Friar Lawrence in Prokofiev's "Romeo and Juliet" as performed by the San Francisco Ballet, to air on Great Performances "Dance in America," Wednesday, June 7 on PBS. Friar Lawrence administers the wedding vows for star-crossed lovers Romeo (Jim Sohm) and Juliet (Diana Weber), as her nurse (Tina Santos) stands witness. The program is sponsored by grants from the National Endowment for the Arts, the Corporation for Public Broadcasting, and Exxon)

Elect Officers

RALEIGH — Mrs. Ferris Chandler of Apex was elected president of the N. C. Symphony Women's Association at the annual meeting held recently. Other new officers are: Mrs. James Caldwell of Chapel Hill, vice-president; Mrs. Horace Loftin, Raleigh, recording secretary; Mrs. John Carmon of Mocksville, corresponding secretary; and Miss Nell Barker, Raleigh, treasurer.

St. Peters Club Among Those In State Meet

RALEIGH — The Piedmont Pioneers of St. Peters School in Greenville is among the Tar Heel Junior Historians Clubs with contest entries submitted to the Tar Heel Junior Historian Association.

The two-day event was held at Meredith College on Thursday and Friday with Gov. James B. Hunt, Jr. and UNC-Chapel Hill basketball star Phil Ford on hand as special guests.

Other clubs from the Washington/Greenville District represented include The Skewarkians, Bear Grass School; Charger Historical Club, Wayne County Day School, Goldsboro; Chief Rockahock Junior Historian Society, Chowan Academy, Edenton; and Ahoskie Middle School Chapter, Ahoskie Middle School, Ahoskie.

Battleship Memorial Service

WILMINGTON — Traditional Memorial Day ceremonies aboard the USS North Carolina Battleship Memorial will be held at 5:45 p.m. on Monday, May 29, Knox M. Barnes, Jr., chairman of the Battleship Commission, announces. Barnes says that although the famed battleship is the official state memorial to the more than 10,000 North Carolinians who gave lives for their country in World War II, the ship serves as a focal point on Memorial Day to honor the memories of those men and women of all wars who made the supreme sacrifice in the defense of America.

Rev. Allen Laymon, pastor of the First Baptist Church, Wilmington, will speak in memoriam. The Second Marine Division Drum and Bugle Corps of Camp Lejeune will furnish music.

The public is invited to attend the Memorial Day service.

Dancers In New Bern

NEW BERN — Dancers Kevin and Gail Judith Allen are to teach and perform in New Bern over Memorial Day weekend in programs sponsored by the Craven Community Arts Council.

The two, currently artists in residence at Coastal Carolina Community College, Jacksonville, will appear in a performance at 2 p.m. Sunday, May 28 in the upstairs ballroom of Ramada Inn. Tickets are priced at $3.50 for adults and $2.50 for those under 18 (at the door) and advance tickets are 50 cents less and can be purchased at van Baars Gallery, Pollock St. or Janet's Craftory, Church Alley.

In addition to the Sunday performances, the two dancers will give classes on Saturday, May 27. For information and prices, contact Carolyn Stevens, 638-8277 or 638-3185.

String Festival

Violinists from Greenville, Kinston, and Washington will appear in a String Festival at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday, May 23. The performance will take place in Room 105 of the A. J. Fletcher Music Center at East Carolina University.

There is no admission charge and the public is invited to attend.

The young musicians appearing in the festival are participants in the ECU String Project, either in beginning violin classes or the Friday afternoon Youth Orchestra program. All are students of Dr. Rodney Schmidt of the School of Music faculty.

Kinston and Washington students study in programs sponsored in their communities by the Kinston Community Council for the Arts and the Beaufort County Arts Council.

Violin Recital

KINSTON — Students of Dr. Rodney Schmidt will present a recital Monday, May 22, at 7:30 p.m. in the upper level of the Community Arts Council Building, Caswell St., Kinston.

There is no admission charge and the public is invited.

Three students from Greenville will join the Kinston students in this performance which will include compositions from the Suzuki Violin School; and pieces by Rieding, Kuchler, Handel, and Mozart.

Affirmed Nips Alydar For Preakness

Cauthen smiles after second win

By ED SCHUYLER JR.
AP Sports Writer

BALTIMORE (AP) — Steve Cauthen and Affirmed played the waiting game Saturday, and it paid off in a Preakness victory that put the chestnut colt on the threshhold of the Triple Crown.

"I was waiting for Alydar the whole race," said Cauthen. "He (Jorge Velasquez) set his horse down at the head of the lane. I set mine down, too, and we beat him."

Affirmed beat his arch rival by a neck to add a triumph in the Preakness to his victory in the Kentucky Derby two weeks ago.

"I've called two," said trainer Laz Barrera, who was confident before both the Derby and Preakness that Affirmed would win. "Now there is one to go."

That one is the 1½-mile Belmont Stakes, the final race of the Triple Crown, June 10 at Belmont Park.

"I was gonna let Believe It set the pace, but nobody was doing anything," said Cauthen. "Track Reward was in front (after the first quarter-mile) and he was coming out so I decided to go ahead and set him on the fence."

Affirmed took the lead and kept it, fighting off Alydar in a stretch duel that had the Pimlico record crowd of 81,261 cheering wildly.

"I saw him (Alydar) at the three-eighths pole," said Cauthen. "He was outside a horse or two."

Alydar was sixth after the first half-mile, 5½ lengths back of Affirmed. He had been 17 lengths off the lead at one point in the 1¼-mile Kentucky Derby.

Before the race, Alydar's trainer John Veitch said: "We can't be that far back this time. We have to be very close turning for home." Alydar was very close turning for home and the race was on.

Down the stretch they came, with both jockeys urging their mounts on and Affirmed was equal to the challenge.

Affirmed ran the final three-sixteenths of a mile in a sizzling 181-5 seconds, tying the fastest final three-sixteenths in the 103-year history of the race. He crossed the finish in 1:54 2-5 to tie 1973 Triple Crown winner Secretariat and last year's Triple Crown winner Seattle Slew for the second fastest Preakness ever.

Canonero II set the record of 1:54 in 1971.

"I was where I wanted to be," said a disappointed Velasquez. "I was right with him at the head of the stretch, but he wouldn't be passed. My horse ran a fine race, we tried, but ...."

The victory got Cauthen off the hook with trainer Laz Barrera who was upset with the 18year-old jockey because he hadn't contacted the trainer until just before the race. Cauthen said he arrived in Baltimore from New York Saturday morning.

Barrera talked to Cauthen in the saddling area and told him: "If the pace is slow, go with the horse. Don't fight it."

Cauthen followed instructions to a T, and Affirmed responded brilliantly to become a millionaire. The winner's share of $136,200 from a purse of $188,700 pushed Affirmed's career earnings to $1,023,227.

Affirmed paid $3, $2.10 and $2.10 in winning his seventh straight race, beating Alydar for the sixth time in eight meetings and running his career record to 13 wins and two seconds in 15 starts.

Alydar, owned by Calumet Farm, paid $2.10 and $2.10. Hickory Tree Stable's Believe It, ridden by Eddie Maple, also third in the Derby, was $2.10 to show.

Completing the order of finish behind Believe It, who was 7½ lengths in back of Alydar, were Noon Time Spender, Indigo Star, Dax S and Track Reward.

"I have to say Alydar is a nice horse. Another horse might have had his heart broken," the wonderboy of racing said in reference to Affirmed's superiority over Alydar on the track. "But he just keeps on trying."

Alydar certainly tried on this sunny day in temperatures in the 80s, and he pushed Affirmed to the limit. It was the duel that was expected in the Derby but never really materialized.

Once Affirmed got into the lead, Cauthen set a pace with Alydar in mind. He completed the first three-quarters in 1:11 4-5, a length in front of Noon Time Spender with Believe It third another head back. Alydar was fourth at this point and moving.

Affirmed completed the mile in 1:36 1-5 and something in reserve when Alydar made his big challenge, the famed devil's red and blue silks of Calumet Farm glinting in the sun.

It was a stirring challenge and an even more stirring rejection.

Maple summed up the growing feeling about Affirmed's superb ability by saying, "That first guy, you just can't get by him."

"We were outgained at the very end," said Alydar's trainer John Veitch. "When we come that close, I ain't afraid of him (Affirmed). We'll catch him someday. We'll try him again in three weeks.

"Jorge rode a perfect race and the horse ran a perfect race. When these two horses meet, there's no telling, you know, who's gonna come out on top."

It's been Affirmed on top in the first two jewels of the Triple Crown and as years go by, people don't remember who finished second.

Cauthen was asked, "Do you think if your rode Alydar, you could beat Affirmed?"

"I don't want to answer that," Cauthen said, then after a pause said, "I have to say Jorge Velasquez rode that horse beautifully."

It was perhaps the only question that Cuathen and Affirmed have not answered.

The attendance broke the record of 77,346 set last year when Seattle Slew stopped here on his way to the Triple Crown.

The money bet on the Preakness also was a record — $1,598,911, bettering the 1976 mark of $1,372,169. The nine race handle of $4,484,405 also was a Preakness day record.

Simons' Birdie At 18 Lets Him Hold Lead

By BOB GREEN
AP Golf Writer

DUBLIN, Ohio (AP) — Journeyman Jim Simons boldly rammed in a 10-foot birdie putt on the final hole and re-established a 1-stroke lead Saturday in the third round of the prestigious Memorial Golf Tournament.

The baby-faced Simons struggled to a 1-over-par 73 and had to make the last-hole birdie to break a tie for the lead with onrushing Bill Kratzert.

Simons, whose only previous victory in seven years of tour activity came last season in the New Orleans Open, put together a 54-hole total of 210, 6 shots under par on the difficult, unforgiving, 7,101-yard Muirfield Village Golf Club course.

The dark, laconic Kratzert, generally regarded by his fellow tourists as one of the most promising young players in the world, holed a sand shot for an eagle 3 on the 15th that highlighted his round of 69.

He was a single shot off the pace at 211 going into Sunday's final 18 holes of the chase for a $50,000 first prize.

Chipper Rod Curl, the little Wintu Indian who has played his last 36 holes in a blazing 135, was another shot back at 212. He had a third round 68.

"I found my game," the 5-foot-5 Curl chirped. "I've been playing just awful so long. But about Tuesday, I found it; found my game. I hope it's the start of a streak. I hope it don't run out."

Jack Nicklaus, the tournament founder, course architect and defending champion, had to rally from a double-bogey 6 on the third hole for a 71 that put him in a tie for fourth at 214, 4 shots back.

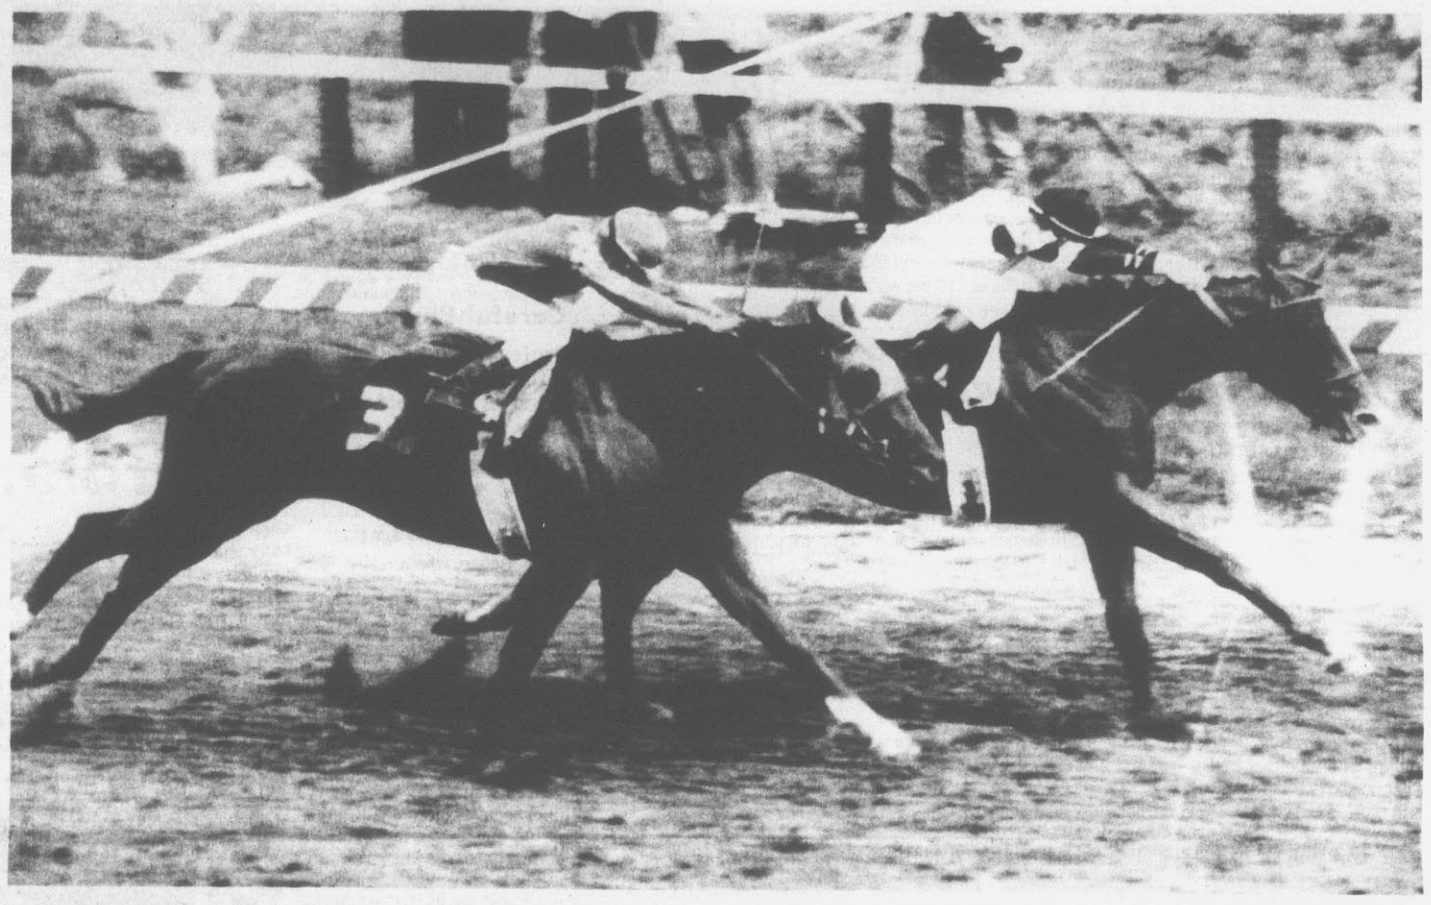

Despite the 9-iron shot that found the water on the third, "it was a pretty good round of golf," Nicklaus said before hustling off to officiate at dedication ceremonies for Francis Ouimet, the 1913 U.S. Open champion being honored this year.

He was tied with South African Gary Player and mustachioed Australian Bob Shearer. Player, who triggered a string of three consecutive victories with his triumph in the Masters, didn't make a birdie in his round of 75. Shearer shot a solid 70 in the hot, windy, overcast weather.

Tom Watson, holder of three 1978 titles and the year's leading money-winner, shot a 72 that left him at 217. U.S. Open

Tom Sneva (202.156) Grabs Indy Pole

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — A.J. Foyt's own error cost him a chance to win the pole position Saturday and could keep the four-time Indianapolis 500 winner out of the starting lineup altogether for the first time in two decades.

"The waste gate was not set right; I usually set it myself," a frustrated Foyt said after his aborted qualification attempt put him at the back of a lengthy line of cars awaiting Sunday's final six hours of time trials.

Twenty cars successfully qualified on Saturday, and all of the original 35 cars eligible for a shot at the pole exhausted their one guaranteed opportunity, keeping Tom Sneva on the inside of the front row for the May 28 race.

The rest of the 33-car starting field will be determined on the basis of Sunday's qualifying speeds.

Foyt's attempt was considered official since he took the green flag. So if he is still in line at the 6 p.m. close of qualifications Sunday — which could be shortened by some expected rainshowers — his string of 20 consecutive Indy starts would be snapped.

There is speculation Foyt might make another attempt in a little-used backup car, but even his crew has doubts whether it is capable of the necessary speed for four laps.

Foyt's primary racer would be behind at least a dozen cars in line on Sunday. He said he pulled off the track because he believed a pressure-relief valve installed by U.S. Auto Club officials was defective. When that happened last year, he was given another ficst attempt and qualified fourth.

"I guess it was my fault," he said. "We'll just be back Sunday. I think we've got the speed. We ran well in the morning (203.666 mph). Like I say, it's the breaks of the game."

Sneva, who became the first driver to earn the pole position two years in a row since Foyt did it in 1974-75, said the race "will be a whole different deal.

"There were four or five cars which had a shot at the pole," Sneva said, "but eight to 10 cars can win it on race day."

Sneva's four-lap average of 202.156 miles per hour broke his own record of 198.884 set last year. But he said he did not feel he did as good a job of driving as he did a year ago.

"I was definitely not smooth on my run," he said. "The wind was really blowing, and I did a lot of slipping and sliding out there. I wasn't the smooth veteran out there that I know I am. But because of the better Penske cars, I was a little faster this year."

Sneva's teammate, Rick Mears, became the fastest rookie qualifier in Indy history with a 200.078 average, earning a start on the outside of the front row. Danny Ongais, the current U.S. Auto Club points leader, took the No. 2 spot with a run at 200.122.

"I was trying to get as comfortable as I could," said Mears, who was also seeking the pole position. "I wanted a 200 average, but I was not going to make a mistake. Now we can concentrate on the race."

The 26-year-old Mears said being with a proven team "really helps you forget all the doubts you have. I'm as quick as people I've looked up to all my life."

Ongais, who went more than 203 mph in practice, said he was just concerned about earning a spot among the leaders.

"I'm just happy to be starting somewhere up front," he said. "We've accomplished what we came here to do."

Ongais was the fastest rookie qualifier last year but finished 20th in the race.

Another two-time Indy winner who had topped 200 mph in practice was Johnny Rutherford, who qualified fourth-fastest Saturday at 197.098.

"It's disappointing, to say the least," said Rutherford, considered one of the potential pole-winners at the start of qualifications.

"The car just didn't seem to run the way it did in the morning. It got slippery out there and I didn't want to get loose and maybe crash."

It was his backup McLaren that Rutherford qualified, because "we began looking at the weather and thinking maybe if we put this car in the back of the line we wouldn't get a chance at all and might miss the race. The rules kind of forced us into this."

Another two-time winner, Al Unser, qualified next to Rutherford in the second row with a 196.474 average.

"It's not as good as I'd like to have it," Unser said, "but I'm in the race and I'm happy."

Gordon Johncock, the 1973 winner, qualified on the outside of the second row at 195.883.

"We're happy with it, really," said Johncock, who had fought for speed all month. "We didn't have a chance at the pole with a four-cylinder (engine), but we're happy to be in the race. With the weather (that washed out the first weekend of qualifications), we might not have gotten a second chance."

Mike Hiss, who qualified Mario Andretti's car in the third row at 194.647, said the Penske racer "is at least 10 mph faster than I am."

Andretti was forced to miss qualifications here in order to compete in the Belgian Grand Prix. Hiss was asked to qualify the car for Andretti, who will have to start the race in the 33rd position.

Saturday's 20 qualifiers averaged 194.083 mph, 2.572 mph faster than the first 20 cars last year.

Alston Wins 200-Meter Run

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. — Calvin Alston captured first place in the 200-meter dash at the Tom Black Relays held yesterday in Knoxville, Tenn.

Alston won the event in 20.91 seconds.

Marvin Rankins of ECU was fourth in the 110-meter hurdles in :14.23, while the Pirate 400-meter relay team finished fourth in 40:30.6.

Rose Travels To Wilmington For First Round Of 4-A Playoffs

Six area baseball and softball teams will enter state playoff action this week, seeking to begin a climb to the state championship.

Rose High School will open play in the 4-A baseball playoffs, traveling to Wilmington to face Hoggard High School on Tuesday.

In the 3-A ranks, Greene Central's Eastern Carolina Conference champs go up against Tarboro on Monday, while in the 1-A lineup, Beaufort-Hyde-Martin champ takes on Manteo on Tuesday. B-H-M runner-up Bear Grass also is in action, facing Creswell on Monday.

In girls' softball, Northeastern winner Williamston will meet Chowan, while ECC champ Conley has a bye until the second round, when it will face the winner of the Division II 4-A race.

Greene Central and Tarboro will hook up at Tarboro Monday at 8 p.m. Jamesville faces Manteo on the Bullets' home field Tuesday at 8 p.m., while Bear Grass travels to Creswell for an 8 p.m. Tuesday game.

Williamston's girls will be at Chowan for a 3:30 p.m. Tuesday game.

Conley has not set a time or date for its play yet. Coach Emmett Koonce said that there was some confusion in the Division II ranks since Wilmington Laney, Wilmington New Hanover and Eastern Wayne all finished in a tie for the title. Koonce said he hoped to play the game on Thursday.

Rose, meanwhile, will face one of the top teams in the state in its opening round game, set Tuesday at 8 p.m. at the UNC-Wilmington baseball field.

The Hoggard Vikings ground out a 20-1 season, losing only in their final regular season game to Fayetteville South View.

The trip to the playoffs is the second straight for Hoggard, which lost to Division I champ Northern Nash, 3-1, last year.

Oddly enough, Hoggard was the first team faced by Rose several years ago when it last entered the playoffs. At that time, Rose was the underdog, but not only won the game, but went on to capture the state 4-A title.

"I'm not going to worry about the draw," Coach Ronald Vincent said. "We'd have to play them somewhere along the line and if we don't beat the good teams now, we can't expect to be able to beat them later."

Vincent said he felt that Rampants were in good shape for the playoffs. "We've been playing some of our best ball recently," he said. "And I think we've been through a very tough conference race."

The Rampants, although representing the conference as the runner-up, actually tied for the Division I title with Rocky Mount. The Gryphons, which face Jacksonville in the first round, got the top berth since they won two of the three meetings between the two teams.

Rose will go to the mound with ace Mike Williams, who compiled an 8-2 record on the season. Hoggard will counter with either righty Mike Dowless or lefty Kenneth Smith. Dowless went into the final week of the regular season with a 10-0 mark, while Smith was 8-0. Brian Thomas, another righthander, rounds out the staff with a 2-0 record.

Pitching has been the hallmark of both clubs, although Hoggard may be a slight favorite in hitting. Rightfielder Tony Hart led the Vikings with a .308 average, while shortstop Tim Whitehead is also just over the .300 mark, and leads the team in stolen bases with 17.

Rounding out the team are catcher Ed Cotton, first baseman Rodney Stewart, second baseman David Price, third sacker Johnny Robinson, left fielder Bill Lloyd, and centerfielder Johnny Odom.

The Rampants are expected to go with Bobby Woronoff behind the plate, Will Sanderson at first, Ronnie Chapman at second, Bill Lee at short and either Joey Mattheis or Skip Topping at third, with either Reggie Spain or Robert Morehead in left, Mike Shank in center and Jeff Aldridge in right.

In each case, the winners continue on in the playoffs, while the losers pack up their gear until next spring.

Mayberry Sparks Yanks

TORONTO (AP) — John Mayberry drove in three runs, two with a fourth-inning homer, and the Toronto Blue Jays broke open a 4-4 deadlock with a six-run sixth inning to defeat the New York Yankees 10-8 Saturday for Dave Lemanczyk's first victory after seven defeats.

The Blue Jays had four hits, a walk and a hit batter and took advantage of three New York errors in the big sixth inning as they sent 10 men to the plate, with Roy Howell making the first and last outs.

Lemanczyk checked the Yankees on 12 hits before needing help from Tom Murphy in New York's three-run ninth. Lemanczyk left after Thurman Munson's run-scoring double and Murphy came on to get the final three outs, although he yielded a home run to Graig Nettles. Ken Clay, 0-2 was the loser.

Toronto loaded the bases in the sixth as Mayberry walked and took second on Clay's wild pickoff attempt. Tommy Hutton beat out an infield hit and pinch-hitter Otto Velez was hit by a pitch from Sparky Lyle, who had come on following Mayberry's walk.

Rick Cerone then sent a bouncer to third baseman Nettles, who threw the potential inning-ending double play ball into right field, allowing two runs to score.

Dave McKay's bloop double gave Toronto its third and fourth runs of the inning and he reached third on a single by Luis Gomez, who took second on an error by left fielder Lou Piniella. Rick Bosetti singled McKay home and Gomez scored on Bob Bailor's sacrifice fly.

Palmer Hurls Bird Victory

By MIKE HARRIS
AP Sports Writer

CLEVELAND (AP) — Jim Palmer, with eighth-inning relief from Don Stanhouse, posted his first victory since April 29 and Lee May and Rich Dauer delivered run-scoring singles in the second inning to lead the Baltimore Orioles to a 2-1 victory over the Cleveland Indians Saturday.

Palmer, 4-4, allowed four hits and an unearned run before Stanhouse came on after a one-out walk on Jim Norris in the eighth.

The Orioles scored off Rick Wise, 2-7, after Eddie Murray doubled with one out in the second. May singled Murray home, moved to third on a single by Rick Dempsey and scored when Dauer followed with a single.

Cleveland broke through Palmer in the seventh with the help of an error by second baseman Doug DeCinces. With one out, Andre Thornton walked and DeCinces made a diving stop on a smash by Ron Hassey, but then threw wildy past shortstop, putting runners on second and third. Thornton scored on Duane Kuiper's grounder.

Baker Riding Mason-Dixon Pole

By LARRY SIDDONS
Associated Press Writer

DOVER, Del. (AP) — David Pearson, helped by a new cylinder head in his Mercury, turned in the fastest speed Saturday during the second session of qualifying for the Mason-Dixon 500 stock car race.

Pearson, looking for his second victory of the National Association for Stock Car Auto Racing's Grand National season, turned in a speed of 134.705 miles per hour on the first of his two qualifying laps.

He will start from the No. 3 spot in Sunday's 500-miler at Dover Downs International Speedway. The first two spots were secured Friday.

Buddy Baker won the pole with a speed of 135.456 mph, while Benny Parsons gained the second position at 135.171 mph. Both Baker and Parsons drive Chevrolets.

Saturday's second-best time was turned in by Darrell Waltrip, in a Chevy, at 133.993. But that good enough for only seventh place in the 40-car starting field, as most of the 16 drivers who tested the high-banked mile Friday chose to stay with their first-day times.

Lennie Pond, in a Chevy, will start in the No. 4 position beside Pearson in Sunday's race. Defending champion Cale Yarborough is in fifth spot in an Oldsmobile and Dave Marcis, in another Chevy, in sixth position. All stuck with their Friday speeds.

Pearson, who had to sit out Friday's session because NASCAR officials said he missed the draw for opening-day qualifying assignments, said his car had been fast enough in practice Friday to have won the pole.

The Wood Brothers' pit crew that cares for the Spartanburg, S.C., veteran's racer found a cracked cylinder head just before qualifying began Friday. It was replaced in time for Saturday's session, although Pearson said he could have run without the repair.

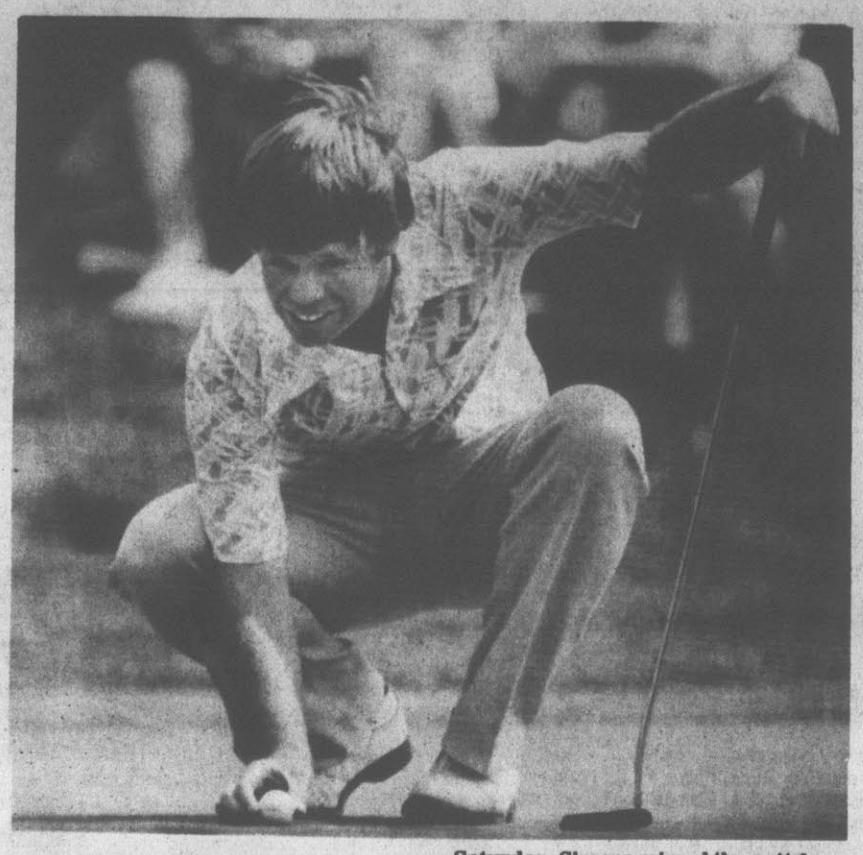

"For qualifying, it would have been all right," he said. "It was just a little bitty thing. We wouldn't have had to replace it, but we did."

Pearson also said that his crew had been on hand Thursday in time for the qualifying draw, "but there was no one there to sign us in. That's the story there.

"We could have won the pole, the way the car was running yesterday (Friday). Today, the track's a good half-mile an hour slower. It's hotter, and the track is heavier, slicker, than yesterday."

Richard Petty, like Pearson ineligible for Friday's opening session, continued to have trouble with his new Dodge.

The stock car superstar, who is running for county commissioner in his hometown of Randleman, N.C., had Saturday's sixth-fastest speed at 131.295 mph. But that was only good enough for 15th spot in the starting grid.

Careful Placement

Professional golfer Jim Simons carefully replaces his ball on the ninth green at Muirfield Village Golf Club Saturday. Simons missed the putt for a birdie, but saved par and eventually hung onto a one-stroke lead in the Memorial Tournament Saturday.

Simons' Birdie...

champ Hubert Green had a 76-221.

Scoring, generally, was much, much higher. For the first time in the tournament, the ball was being played as it lay. For the first two rounds, players were allowed to lift, clean and place the ball in the fairway.

Arnold Palmer got caught by the change. Accustomed to lifting the ball in the fairway, he put his hands on his drive in the sixth fairway, then jerked them away as if the ball was hot. But it was too late. It cost him a stroke penalty. He made double bogey on the hole and finished 75-223.

"When you play the ball down, it's a different golf course," Nicklaus observed.

The scores bore him out. Eight men in the field of 73 of the world's best players failed to break 80. And some of those who broke it were considerably less than enchanted.

Ed Sneed, for example, was only 2 shots off the lead at the end of 36 holes but took himself out of it with a 40 on the back nine.

And that was the side that destroyed so many. Andy Bean, also 2 back after 36, played it in 41. Craig Stadler had a score of 9 on the 11th hole. Dr. Gil Morgan was challenging for the lead until he made the same score on No. 14. John Schroeder had 11 on the 15th. Schroeder and Stadler shot 79s, Bean 81 and Stadler 76.

Kratzert was well off the pace through the first 11 holes but rapped in a 25-foot par-saving putt on the 12th, birdied the 13th from 20 feet and holed the 30-foot trap shot with an easy swing on the 15th.

At about the same time, Simons was making bogey from a bunker on the 12th. That cut his lead to one shot. He dropped back into a tie when he bogeyed the 16th, missing the green, then regained it with the fast-moving putt that hit the back of the cup on the final hole.

Norris, Heels Rips Foe, 15-1

AUBURN, Ala. (AP) — Pitcher Greg Norris struck out four, walked two, giving up four hits to lead North Carolina to a 15-1 victory over East Tennessee in the opener of the NCAA South Regional baseball tournament playoffs Saturday.

Auburn faced Memphis State in the second game of the double elimination event Saturday night which continues Sunday.

Norris shared the mound with Bill Musser who came on the seventh and Monte DeRall coming in relief in the eighth to finish the game.

The win was Norris' 13th of the season against no losses.

Catcher David Barnett and first baseman Jim Rouse had three hits each for North Carolina, runnerup in the Atlantic Coast Conference.

Behind Norris, the Tar Heels jumped on the Buccaneers in the second inning for two runs. They added four in the third and two in the fourth for a commanding lead.

Robbie Ivey and the designated hitter-relief pitcher Zane Goodrich led East Tennessee with two hits each.

Buccaneer Coach Charley Lodes said of the defeat: "We showed folks how not to play baseball — with eight errors. UNC got ahead big and could afford to run and gamble. That worked against us."

Tigers Nip Bosox, 6-5

By LARRY PALADINO
AP Sports Writer

DETROIT (AP) — Butch Hobson snapped a 5-5 tie with a run-scoring single in the ninth inning Saturday to give the Boston Red Sox a rain-delayed 6-5 victory over the Detroit Tigers.

The hit made a winner out of Bill Campbell, in relief of Dennis Eckersley. It was the first appearance for Campbell, 2-3, since April 30 when he went out of action with an elbow injury.

Carl Yastrzemski opened the ninth with a single off Steve Foucault, 1-4, the third Detroit pitcher. Carlton Fisk sacrificed and Fred Lynn was walked intentionally before Hobson lined his single to center.

The Tigers took a 1-0 lead in the opening inning on a double by Steve Kemp after Rusty Staub doubled and Jason Thompson singled. The Red Sox got the run back in the second off Jim Slaton on Dwight Evans' fifth homer of the year, a blast high into the upper deck in left.

Jim Rice opened the Boston third with his 100th career homer and 13th of the year. After center fielder Ron LeFlore made an over-the-shoulder catch of Yastrzemski's smash at the 440-foot mark, Fisk doubled and scored on a single by Lynn.

Detroit tied the score 3-3 in the fourth when Phil Mankowski followed Tim Corcoran's single with a homer into the upper deck in right.

After a rain delay of an hour and 38 minutes, the Red Sox scored twice in the sixth, once on a double by Rick Burleson and the other on a single by Rice. Kemp doubled in the bottom of the inning and Milt May tied the score, for the third time, with his seventh homer.

Gross' HR Leads Oakland

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Wayne Gross led off the bottom of the ninth inning Saturday with his fourth home run of the season, giving Oakland a 4-3 victory over the Chicago White Sox and snapping the A's four-game losing streak.

Gross' homer came off Chicago relief ace Lerrin LaGrow, who replaced starter Ken Kravec in the seventh inning.

The winning pitcher was Rick Langford, who retired all seven batters he faced after replacing starter Alan Wirth in the seventh inning.

The White Sox had built up an early 3-0 lead against Wirth, but the A's rallied to tie the score in the seventh when pinch hitter Jeff Newman greeted LaGrow with a three-run homer. Kravec walked Gross and Jim Essian and Newman hit LaGrow's first pitch deep into the left field bleachers.

LaGrow retired the nexth three batters and also got the side out in order in the eighth before Gross connected in the ninth.

Carner Takes LPGA's Lead

By GARY MYERS
Associated Press Writer

JAMESBURG, N.J. — JoAnne Carner fired a blistering 5-under-par 66 Saturday to take a 2-stroke lead over Pat Bradley after two rounds of the $100,000 LPGA Classic at Forest Gate Country Club.

Carner shot an even-par 71 in Friday's first round for a two-round total of 137. The eight-year veteran veteran recored seven birdies for a new course record.

"My short-iron game was the difference," said Carner. "I hit three shots from the fairways that I thought had a chance to go in the hole."

Carner bogeyed the first hole after landing in the bunker on her second shot, but then birdied the fourth, sixth, eight and ninth holes to make the turn in 3-under-par 33 over the 6,056-yard course.

"On the fourth hole, I hit a wedge within two feet of the hole that almost went in. The same thing happened on the sixth," she said. "On No. 8, I bounced a 7-iron off the pin and it stopped three feet away."

On the par-5, 457-yard ninth hole, Carner hit a 3-iron to the fringe of the green on her second shot and chipped to within three feet and tapped in for a birdie.

Johnson Sparks Phillies To Victory

NEW YORK (AP) — Dave Johnson's tie-breaking two-run pinch single highlighted a five-run 11th inning that carried the Philadelphia Phillies to a 9-4 victory over the New York Mets Saturday.

Dale Murray, 1-2, just acquired from Cincinnati and making his debut with the Mets, yielded a leadoff single to Bake McBride in the 11th and Larry Bowa beat out an infield hit. After retiring Mike Schmidt on a shallow fly ball, Murray uncorked a wild pitch that moved the runners up.

He issued an intentional walk to Jerry Martin but Johnson, batting for winning pitcher Tug McGraw, 2-2, slapped a single to right field. When right fielder Bruce Boisclair threw over catcher John Stearns' head, Martin also scored and Johnson wound up on second. A single by Garry Maddox delivered Johnson and the Phillies added a fifth run on a double by Tim McCarver, a walk and a sacrifice fly by Bob Boone off Kevin Kobel.

The Mets grabbed a 3-0 lead in the first inning against Steve Carlton when Lenny Randle doubled and Lee Mazzilli doubled and Steve Henderson hit his fifth home run.

The Phillies got two runs back in the second inning against Mike Bruhert. With one out, Maddox singled, stole second and scored on a single by McCarver, who advanced on a grounder and scored when Carlton singled.

They tied it in the third when Bowa opened with a single, stole second and scored on a single by Greg Luzinski, who broke an 0-for-16 slump.

Both teams scored their fourth runs in the seventh inning.

McBride tripled and Bowa doubled to give the Phillies a 4-3 lead. Bowa's hit chased Bruhert in favor of Mardie Cornejo.

In the bottom of the seventh, pinch hitter Elliott Maddox walked, went to second when Randle beat out a bunt and scored on a single by Mazzilli which caromed off the third base bag into left field. However, Randle was cut down by Luzinski when he tried to go to third, killing a potentially big inning.

Relievers Ron Reed, McGraw and Gene Garber held the Mets to one hit over the final 42-3 innings. Meanwhile, the Phillies battered six New York pitchers for 19 hits, including two singles and two doubles by McCarver and a double and three singles by Bowa.

The setback snapped the Mets' three-game winning streak and gave them a 3-7 record in extra-inning games this year.

Homers Lead Cubs

By JOE MOOSHIL
AP Sports Writer

CHICAGO (AP) — Dave Kingman and Dave Rader slammed two-run homers Saturday to lead the Chicago Cubs to a 10-2 victory that sent the slump-ridden St. Louis Cardinals reeling to their ninth consecutive defeat.

Kingman blasted his ninth homer of the season off loser Pete Falcone, 0-2, in the third inning after Gene Clines singled and Rader belted his first to cap a three-run seventh.

St. Louis' two runs came on homers by Mike Tyson and Jerry Morales off winner Woodie Fryman, 2-4, who was pressed into service when starter Dennis Lamp injured his shoulder attempting to bunt in the second inning.

Manny Trillo put the Cubs ahead in the first with a run-scoring single. Tyson hit his third homer in the top of the third before Kingman broke the tie in the bottom of the inning.

Chicago made it 4-1 in the fourth on a triple by Rader and a sacrifice fly by Fryman and Morales hit his third homer in the fifth.

Stargell Leads Bucs

MONTREAL (AP) — Willie Stargell slammed two home runs, driving in five runs, and Bert Blyleven fired a three-hitter to lead the Pittsburgh Pirates to a 6-0 victory over the Montreal Expos Saturday.

The homer gave Stargell a career total of 407 home runs, tying him with Duke Snider for eighth place on the National League's all-time list. Snider, who played with the Brooklyn and Los Angeles Dodgers, the New York Mets and the San Francisco Giants, is a broadcaster for the Expos.

Stargell slugged a two-out, three-run homer off loser Wayne Twitchell, 2-4, in the first inning after a triple by Omar Moreno and a walk to Dave Parker. Then, he hit a towering two-run shot halfway up the second of Olympic Stadium's three decks in the fourth inning after a leadoff single by John Milner. It was his sixth homer of the year.

Blyleven, 3-4, gave up a two-out single to Dave Cash in the third inning and one-out singles to Ellis Valentine and Tony Perez in the seventh. He walked three and struck out eight.

Little League

Coca-Cola 12, Jaycees 8

Coca-Cola rolled out to a 12-0 lead, then had to hold on to take a 12-8 win over the Jaycees Saturday in the North State Little League.

Coke scored six runs in the second inning to take the lead. Darryl Perris singled and Mike Sasser reached on a hit. Lee Allen then walked, loading the bases for Jay Wynn, who cracked out a grand-slam home run.

Richard Pace got it going again with a single, and he moved up on a wild pitch. Jimmy Smith walked, and both advanced on a passed ball, and and error let both of them score.

Coke added two in the fourth and four in the sixth for their 12-run total.

The Jaycees put on a rally in the bottom of the sixth. Jody Barnes opened up with a walk, and David Hammond also walked. David Lee walked, loading the bases. Maury Harris reached on an error, scoring Barnes. Brian Hicks walked, scoring Hammond. Evan Hause singled in two runs, and Jordy Smith singled in Hicks. A wild pitch scored Hause, and a double by Toby Fisher brought in Smith. Fisher scored the final run on an error.

Pace, Smith, Paul Goodson, and Sasser each had two hits for Coke, while Smith had two for the Jaycees.

Exchange 8, Moose 6

The Exchange pushed over two sixth inning runs to nip the Moose, 8-6, in Saturday's Tar Heel Little League play.

The Exchange pushed ahead with two in the first inning. Joe Hobgood singled and was sacrificed up. He took third on a passed ball and Hunter Bost walked. The two pulled a double steal, scoring Hobgood. Bost took third on a passed ball and scored on Billy Michel's sacrifice fly.

The Moose came up with a run in the first. That came on Eric Woodworth's solo home run.

Exchange added two in the third, but Moose countered with two of their own. Two more exchange runs came in the fifth, but the Moose came back with three, including a homer by Billy Godley, to tie it at 6-6.

Then, in the sixth, the Exchange got two to win it. Doug Bray walked and moved to third on wild pitches. Bost also walked, and Tim Norris singled, scoring Bray. Michel grounded out, but Bost scored on the play with the insurance run.

Michel led the Exchange hitting with two, while Woodworth had three to lead the Moose.

Prep League

Dr. Pepper 7, Cox Realty 6

Dr. Pepper pushed over a run in the eighth inning to nip Cox Realty, 7-6, yesterday in the Prep League.

Dr. Pepper took the lead with a run in the first. Rudy Stalls singled, stole second, and scored on Louis Fletcher's hit.

Cox came back with two in the bottom of the first. Bill Johnson singled and Mont Carter also got a hit. Both scored on Tony Burroughs' single.

Both teams added single runs in the third, and both scored twice in the fourth. Dr. Pepper tied it up with one in the fifth, and both added runs in the sixth for a 6-6 tie.

Finally, in the eighth, Dr. Pepper pushed over the winning run. Chip Cayton walked, stole both second and third and scored on Steve Holloman's single.

Stalls had three hits and Curtis Evans had two for Dr. Pepper, while Johnson and Burroughs each had three. Lance Searls, Randy Warren and Carter each had two for Cox.

Graniteers 6, Auto Specialty 5

The Graniteers with three last inning runs, nipped Auto Specialty, 6-5, in the Prep League yesterday.

The Graniteers pushed into the lead with one in the first. Jonathan Langley walked and stole both second and third, scoring on Roderick Harrell's sacrifice fly.

The Graniteers then added two more in the third for a 3-0 lead.

Auto Specialty came back with five in the fifth to take the lead. Scott Stallings reached on an error and Mark Harris was safe on a fielder's choice. Jody Forbes tripled in both runners, and scored on Troy Hudson's double. Terry Smith doubled in Hudson, and scored when Kenny Goodwin singled.

But the Graniteers came up with three in the seventh to win it. Landley walked and with two outs, Harrell doubled. Horace Barrett doubled in both runners and then stole both third and home, ending the game with the latter.

Hudson led Auto Specialty with three hits, while Smith had two. David Woronoff had two hits to lead the Graniteers.

Babe Ruth

Wachovia Bank 8, Home Builders 1

Wachovia Bank pushed over seven runs in the first inning to take an 8-1 win over Home Builders in Babe Ruth League play yesterday.

Home Builders got its lone run in the top of the first. Jeff James singled, getting the lone hit off Steve Hall for the day. He stole second, moved up on an out, and scored on a passed ball.

Wachovia came back with seven in the bottom of the inning. Sam Hodges singled and stole second. Jeff Wilson walked and both scored on Mark Sasser's double. Scott Southerland singled, and a wild pitch scored Sasser. Ed Frazier walked and Raynor Casey doubled in Southerland, with Frazier scoring on an error. Burney Carraway walked and stole up, with both Casey and Carraway scoring on Hodges' hit.

The other run came in the sixth.

Hodges, Sasser and John Dubber each had two hits to lead Wachovia.

Pepsi-Cola 3, Planters Bank 1

Pepsi-Cola scored single runs in three innings to take a 3-1 win over Planters Bank in Babe Ruth Play Saturday.

Pepsi got its first in the third. Jeff Heath walked and stole second, scoring on Ricky Ullman's hit.

The run that proved to be the difference came in the fourth. Junior Neal reached on an error, stole second and took third on a passed ball. He scored on Ricky Owens' sacrifice fly.

The other run came in the fifth.

Planters' only run came in the seventh. Mike Pollard singled, stole second, moved to third on an out, and scored on Jimmy Hardee's hit.

Pollard had two hits to lead Planters, while no one had more than one for Pepsi.

Tanana's Fog Gives Him Seventh Win

By KEN RAPPOPORT

With Frank Tanana, it used to be smoke. Now it's fog.

Once one of the hardest throwers in baseball, the California Angel left-hander has slowed down a bit since an injury to his throwing arm last year.

But he's still winning, thanks to a deceptive change-of-pace that is beclouding the hitters' eyes.

"I've changed my style of pitching because I'm not blowing anything by anybody," Tanana said after his sleight of hand tamed the Milwaukee Brewers 7-1 Friday night. "The injury has forced me to be fine with my pitches and keep my head in the game."

Tanana's victory was his seventh in eight decisions this year — making him the top winner thus far in the major leagues. The start is reminsicent of last year when his exploding fastball had him out in front of everybody until he injured a muscle.

In the other American League games, the New York Yankees whipped the Toronto Blue Jays 11-3, the Detroit Tigers stopped the Boston Red Sox 7-5, the Chicago White Sox turned back the Oakland A's 6-2, the Minnesota Twins tripped the Kansas City Royals 5-3, the Cleveland Indians outscored the Baltimore Orioles 7-5 and the Seattle Mariners beat the Texas Rangers 6-5 in the first game of a doubleheader before losing the nightcap 4-2.

Tanana scattered nine hits while mystifying Milwaukee. He got more than enough support from Carney Lansford, who doubled in two runs in a four-run sixth inning. Throwing mostly breaking balls, Tanana struck out eight and lost a shutout when Sixto Lezcano hit a homer in the sixth.

Yankees 11, Blue Jays 3

Chris Chambliss knocked in four runs, including three with a fourth-inning homer, to lead New York over Toronto. The Yankees touched three Toronto pitchers for 14 hits as well as collecting seven walks and one hit batter.

Chambliss' homer came on a pitch from Mike Willis and was preceded by a single by Willie Randolph and a walk to Thurman Munson. Bucky Dent hit Willis' first pitch of the fifth inning for his first homer of the year.

Tigers 7, Red Sox 5

Detroit scored four runs in the third inning, two on a homer by Rusty Staub, and went on to beat Boston in a showdown for first place in the American League East. The Tigers put the game away with a three-run eighth as Tim Corcoran delivered an RBI single and Alan Trammell a two-run double.

The teams began the game in a virtual tie for first, with the Tigers on top by 20 percentage points. The Tigers now own a one-game lead over Boston.

White Sox 6, A's 2

Wilbur Wood allowed eight hits in eight innings and Henry Cruz hit his first homer of the season as Chicago defeated Oakland.

Wood, winner of four of his last five starts, struck out a season-high seven batters during his stint before Jim Willoughby took over in the ninth for the White Sox. Cruz' homer came off loser Pete Broberg in the seventh.

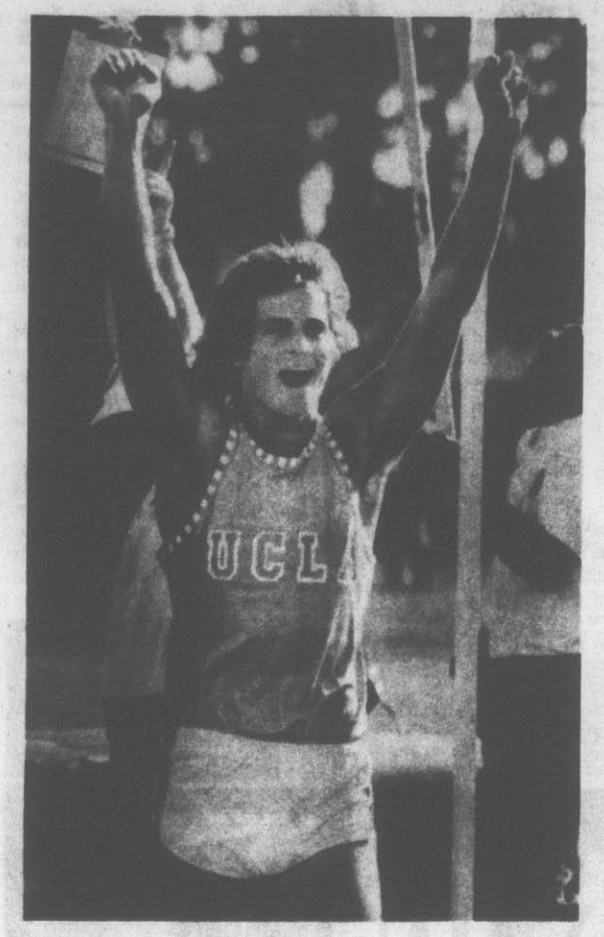

Twins 5, Royals 3

Bombo Rivera stroked three singles and a solo home run, leading Minnesota past Kansas City. Rivera tagged reliever Marty Pattin with a 400-foot shot in the eighth inning after Dan Ford had tripled and scored on a sacrifice fly by Jose Morales to give the Twins a 4-3 lead in the seventh.

Roger Erickson, after surrendering two runs in the Royals' first, settled down to even his record at 3-3.

Mike Tully Breaks World Mark In Pole Vault In Pac-8 Meet

CORVALLIS, Ore. (AP) — Mike Tully's perfect day of pole vaulting ended in confusion, but when the air had cleared, the UCLA senior had broken the world record set two years earlier just 40 miles down the road from here.

World Record Vault

Mike Tully of UCLA celebrates after clearing 18-8¾ for a new world pole vault record. He made the height in his first attempt. Tully's mark betters the previous one of 18-8¼ set by Dave Roberts in 1976. Officials at the Pac-8 meet first ruled the record not valid because of a misunderstanding of how the measuring of the bar should be handled. Later it was declared good. (AP Laserphoto)

Tully's mark of 18 feet, 8¾ inches in Friday's Pacific-8 Conference championships topped Dave Roberts' world mark set in Eugene, Ore., in the 1976 Olympic Trials by onehalf inch.

The 21-year-old native of Long Beach, Calif., had a brisk breeze blowing at his back and he never missed starting at 17 feet, and progressing through 17-8, 18 feet and, finally, over the world record height on his first try.

"The wind helps you run faster and it relaxes you," he said.

It also nearly cost him the world record.

After Tully had cleared the bar, the wind blew the bar to the ground. When officials replaced it and measured it, the height was only 18-8 — onequarter inch short of the record.

However, international rules require a measurement only before the attempt, so Tully's record apparently will stand.

Some were calling it the best series of vaults ever, because Roberts missed three times when he set the record in 1976. After clearing 18 feet to clinch first place, Tully had the bar raised for the world record attempt.

"Conditions were perfect," he said, "but the officials could have been sharper."

He said it was apparent that Oregon State had not hosted many big track meets. He criticized the officials for taking too much time to measure the bar.

"They changed the bar on me," he said, "then measured the bar after it had blown off by putting the zero (of the tape measure) at the bar and measuring down. I've never seen that before."

It was the 18th time that Tully, who set the world indoor record at 18-5½ in March at the NCAA Championships in Detroit, had cleared 18 feet. Only Poland's Wladyslaw Kozakiewicz has cleared the 18 foot barrier more times. He has done it 33 times.

As for 19 feet, Tully said he possibly could reach it at the NCAA championships in two weeks at Eugene.

"They have a new runway there, so who knows?" he said. "If it's a good day, and I'm feeling good it could happen."

Little League

Graniteers 14, First Federal 13

The Graniteers pushed over a run in the bottom of the sixth inning to win a 14-13 slugfest against First Federal in the Tar Heel Little League Friday afternoon.

First Federal took the lead in the second inning, scoring five runs. Ricky Outlaw doubled and moved up when Tyrone Barrett and Leon Moore walked. Mont Brown singled in both Outlaw and Barrett and Moore scored on an error on the play. Brown then scored on a wild pitch. William Waugh singled and stole his way to third, scoring on an error.

The Graniteers got on the board in the second with two runs. Jimmy Bishop started it with a solo homer. Terrance Warren reached on a two-base error, moved to third on a wild pitch and scored on Lark Wetherington's single.

Three more Graniteer runs crossed in the third, but First Federal rallied for five in the fourth for a 10-5 lead. The Graniteers came back to score eight in the fifth, taking a 13-10 lead, but First Federal scored three more, on a home run by Brown, to tie it up in the top of the sixth.

In that inning, First Federal opened the inning batting three hitters down the line from where they should have started, but the Graniteers failed to notice.

In the bottom of the sixth, however, the Graniteers got the winning run. Traye Fuqua walked, as did Jon Whichard. Tommy Warren singled to load the bases, and with one out, Carlton Wilson singled, scoring Fuqua with the game-ending run.

Brown led First Federal's hitting with five in as many trips, while Outlaw was 3-4, and Waugh and Barrett were both 2-4.

Tommy Warren was 3-4 for the Graniteers, while Wetherington, Whichard, Cedric Hines, Wilson and Bishop each had two hits.

Lions 12, Union Carbide 3.

The Lions romped to a 12-3 victory over Union Carbide in the North State Little League yesterday.

The Lions got all they needed in the first inning, scoring four times. Kevin Pace opened up with a walk and David Jester reached on an error. Marc Gatlin singled in Pace, and an error on the play let Jester score. Tony Taylor single to score Gatlin and Taylor scored when Chris Evans reached on an error.

Union Carbide got its first run in the second. Ken Waters singled and Bill Messick got a hit. A wild pitch and an infield out brought Waters in.

The Lions came back to score four more in the second, as Gatlin hit a grand-slam home run. The other two Union Carbide runs scored in the third.

The Lions added three more as Patrick Rand homered in the third, and finished it off with one run in the fifth.

Gatlin led the Lion hitting with three, while Rand and Taylor each had two. No one had more than one for Union Carbide.

Aycock In Final Win

WINDSOR — E.B. Aycock Junior High School closed out its 1978 baseball season with a 2-1 victory over Bertie Junior High Friday, but it took nine innings to accomplish it.

Roger Williams got the victory, tossing a one-hitter, but he needed help in the ninth from Billy Dough to preserve the win.

No one for Aycock was able to get more than one hit.

The win gave Aycock a final 11-2 record for the year.

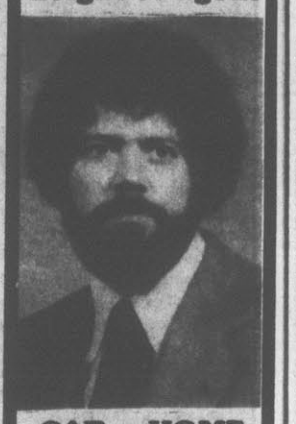

No Area Qualifiers

No one from the Pitt-Martin-Greene area qualified for state track competition during the regionals at East Carolina University Friday.

Two Farmville Central competitors were involved in the meet, Horace Williams in the pole vault and Rufus Mayo in the triple jump, but neither qualified.

Tarboro took first place in the meet, picking up 37 points, while Cary was second with 20. Farmville scored one point in the meet.

Summer Camp For Two Sports

Pace Academy will hold a summer soccer and gymnastics program during the summer, with instruction in both.

The soccer program is open to youths six to 18 years old. Two 5-week sessions will be held. The first will run June 19 to July 21, and the other from July 24 to August 25.

Tom Jamieson will serve as instructor for the course. Two different times will also be observed during each camp, 9-10 and 10-11 a.m. Monday through Thursday.

The program will emphasis personal development, fun, and good sportsmanship. Cost of each five-week session is $35 which includes uniform and insurance.

The gymnastics portion of the program will be a ten-week summer camp. Pat Kinlaw will serve as instructor.

The program will cover basic work on various apparatus for beginners, as well as instruction for advanced individuals.

This program, too, is open to 6 to 18 year olds.

It will include work on the uneven bars, the balance beam, the rings, the horizontal bar, the mini-trampoline as well as floor exercises.

Several times periods are being held for this program each week. They include 8:15 to 9:15 a.m., 9:30 to 10:30 a.m., and 10:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m., with the latter reserved for advanced students.

Students may sign up for as long a program as they wish. The cost is $3 per hour, or if a student takes more than 20 hours, it will be $2.75 per hour.

All activity will be held at Pace Academy.

Registration will be held at Pace on Sunday, May 28 from 1 p.m. Informational pamphlets may be picked up at the school any time during the week.

Hagan Golf Is Set In June

The Pitt County Walter Hagan Memorial Golf Tournament will be held Friday, June 2, at Brook Valley Country Club. The tournament, which is hoped to become an annual affair, is being sponsored by the Brook Valley Men's Association.

The tournament honors the memory of Walter Hagen, Sr., who died of cancer, and raises money for the American Cancer Society.

Twenty-five four-man teams will complete in a scratch or handicap division with individual handicaps limited to a high of 18. All handicaps must have an active USGA handicap card. The entry fee for each team is $100 which may be paid by a sponsor or by the entering team. The Brook Valley Men's Association is trying to arrange for local businesses to sponsor teams and thus far a total of 15 have been sponsored. Sponsors have the opportunity to select the team they wish to represent them.

Winners at the local level in both scratch and handicap divisions will compete for the state title in Pinehurst in September. Winners there are invited to participate in the national finals in both divisions at Walt Disney World in December.

Competition as either a scratch or handicap team gives every participant a chance to compete on an equal basis.

Dr. Spencer Raab, Chief of the Division of Cancer Chemotherapy at the School of Medicine of East Carolina, is serving as co-chairman of the tourament, along with Dr. Wally Wooles and Brook Valley associate pro Dave Martin.

Anyone interested in sponsoring a team or donating a prize should contact Martin at Brook Valley.

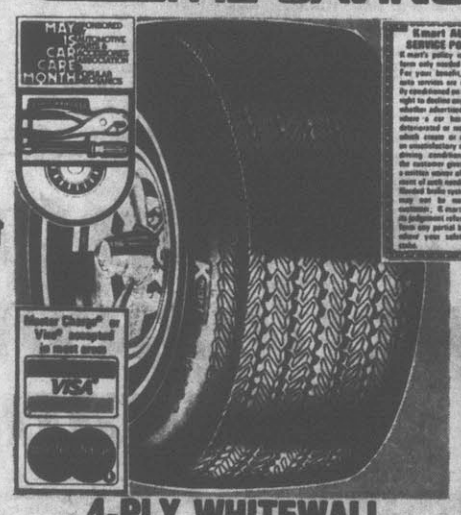

ASSORTED TROPHIES

SHAWNEE MISSION, Kan. (AP) — There are 57 different trophies up for grabs each football season in games between Division I teams. At least 52 additional trophies are battled over by Division II and III clubs and by non-members, according to a survey by the NCAA.

Greene Central Downs Vikings; Clinches ECC Baseball Title

SNOW HILL — Greene Central gained a 6-3 victory over D.H. Conley Friday, capturing the Eastern Carolina Conference baseball title.

The Rams will now meet Tarboro in the first round of the 3-A State Playoffs, to be played by Tuesday.

Greene Central struck for the lead in the first inning, getting a run. Mike Chase singled and stole second. He scored when Jay Carraway reached on an error.

Conley came back with a run in the second to tie the game, 1-1. Curtis Spencer reached on a fielder's choice and Dale Bailey singled him to third. The two pulled a double steal, with Spencer scoring.

Conley then took the lead with another run in the third. Micah Dixon reached on a fielder's choice and Nuggie Worthington walked. Ben Wilson singled, scoring Dixon for the 2-1 lead.

But the Rams came right back in the bottom of the third to score four runs and put the game away. Jimbo Fulghum, Scott Davenport and Greg Holmes all walked, loading the bases. Russell Brann then cracked a grand-slam home run, pushing Greene Central into a 5-2 lead.

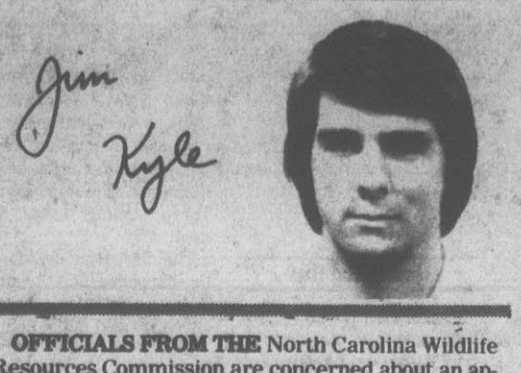

The Rams added another run in the sixth, when Brann again homered, this time with no one aboard.

Conley got another run in the top of the seventh.

Conley ended the season with a 9-5 Eastern Carolina record and a 12-8 overall mark. The Rams ended up at 12-2 against conference competition. The Rams are 16-7 overall going into the playoffs.

OFFICIALS FROM THE North Carolina Wildlife Resources Commission are concerned about an apparent outbreak of canine distemper among some wildlife species. Canine distemper is a virus which is common in some animals and is often caught and spread by domestic dogs.

According to the Commission's Division of Game, six cases of distemper have been found recently among various species fo wildlife. Red and gray fox, raccoons, skunks, coyotes and mink are all susceptible to the disease. Infection usually results from direct contact with an infected animal.

"We're finding sporadic outbreaks of distemper throughout the South," said Dr. Victor Nettles, head of the diagnostic section of the Southeastern Cooperative for Wildlife Disease Study. "Right now, we're finding a lot of cases in northwest Georgia, particularly in foxes. The outbreaks usually occur sporadically in different areas. A lot depends on whether the animals in a particular area have built up an immunity to the disease from a previous outbreak. The spread of distemper outbreaks could be introduced into the wild through an infected domestic dog."

THE SYMPTOMS OF distemper can be extremely variable. Dogs and foxes will often display a marked thirst and have a dry, hot nose. The animal will also become listless and show no interest in feeding. In later stages of the disease, there will often be a discharge from the eyes and nose, the animal will cough, breathing will be labored, and the fur will have an unkempt appearance. The animal usually dies in convulsions

Among foxes and raccoons, one of the main signs of distemper is the animal will show a lack of fear and will demonstrate other abnormal behavior.

"The best protection for pet owners against distemper is to get their dogs vaccinated," Nettles commented. "Dogs can get their first vaccination shots when they're about six weeks old.

Although no cases of rabies have been reported recently in North Carolina, the symptoms of that disease are strikingly similar to those of distemper. Anyone encountering a wild animal that appears to be listless and displays no fear of man should leave it alone. Anyone finding a dead animal that appears to be diseased should also avoid direct contact with it. In both cases, report the incident to the N. C. Wildlife Resources Commission immediately.

Hybrid Bass Program Shows Results

The effects of a hybrid bass project are beginning to appear in some areas of the state. A creel survey showed some 460 hybrids caught and reported in Oak Hollow Lake in High Point last year.

The fast-growing hybrids, produced by crossing striped and white bass, were originally stocked in Wadesboro City Lake and Oak Hollow in November, 1976. In June, 1977, Lake Higgins near Greensboro and Lake Fisher near Concord each received from 2,000 to 3,000 fish. The hybrids are basically an open-water species, and thus do not compete with largemouth bass.

Sampling of the other lakes in the program will also be carried out this spring. It is hoped that the hybrid project will be expanded so other suitable lakes in the state can be included in future years, if current efforts prove successful.

Coastal Fishing Report

Blues and spot continued to be the mainstays for pier and surf fishermen along the coast as fishing improved considerably with the clearer weather last week. King mackerel were being caught in greater numbers when the water is clear.

Gulf stream fishermen are doing will with dolphin, blackfin tuna, wahoo and large kings. Billfish are said to be scarce.

Motta Won't Underestimate

SEATTLE (AP) — Dick Motta doesn't want to be guilty of underestimating an opponent — at least, not publicly.

"Seattle has great balance," said the Washington Bullets' coach. "Their starting five all play defense and all score. You can't sag off on any of those guys."

The Eastern Conference champions, wound up preparations Saturday for today's first game of the best-of-seven National Basketball Association final series, have to be alert to beat the SuperSonics, according to Motta.

"Seattle's a good defensive team," Motta said. "They funnel everything into (center Marvin) Webster, and he's a great shot-blocker."

Webster sparked the Sonics to a 123-108 victory Wednesday night over the Denver Nuggets, clinching the Western Conference championship. That was Seattle's 20th consecutive victory on its home court.

The Sonics will lose something of their home-court advantage in the finals because a mobile home show has been booked into the Seattle Center Coliseum next week. Thus, the second game of the series will be played at Landover, Md. instead of Seattle on Thursday night. Game 3 also will be at Landover, with Game 4 back in Seattle — but at the Kingdome instead of the Coliseum.

Motta feels the switch in sites for the second game could be crucial.

"That can make all the difference," he said. "It's a big plus for us. When a team gets the home-court advantage, it gets the first two at home. Now they've lost that edge. If we can win the first game in Seattle, we'll be in the driver's seat."

The Bullets were on the other end of a similar situation in the playoff finals three years ago. They lost the series opener at home to Golden State, then lost the next two games on the road and eventually were swept in four.

This is the Bullets' 10th consecutive playoff appearance. Last year they were knocked out in the second round, but Motta attributes this year's improved showing to three factors:

"The addition of Bob Dandridge, his ability to play both ends of the court and to take the pressure off Elvin Hayes.

"The growth and development of Kevin Grevey. We wouldn't be where we are today if he hadn't stepped in and filled the void when (Phil) Chenier was injured," Motta said.

"The acquisition of Charlie Johnson, who has given our team a new personality." Johnson, a veteran guard released by Golden State, joined Washington in January after Chenier was injured.

Dandridge, with an average 19.3 points per game, was second to Hayes, who averaged 19.7 during the regular season, while Grevey scored 15 points a game.

Asked if Seattle was a running team or a pattern club, Motta replied: "They do both. They like to run, but they have confidence in their offense. They're young, they're talented and they believe.

"Now they really believe."

Tigers Nip Miami

MIAMI (AP) — "I went with a guy I thought could throw strikes," said Clemson Coach Bill Wilhelm after his relief pitcher Paul Schmitt preserved an 8-5 victory over Miami in the NCAA Atlantic Regional baseball tournament.

The victory sent Clemson against Marshall University Saturday, following an afternoon loser's bracket contest between Miami and Florida State. Marshall defeated FSU 4-0 Friday in the opening game of the double-elimination regional.

Miami had whittled at a big Clemson lead Friday night until the Tigers led just 6-5 in the sixth inning.

"We needed somebody with poise and fortitude," said Wilhelm. He inserted Schmitt, who held the Hurricanes scoreless the last three innings.

Miami took a temporary 1-0 lead when Wes Robbins sacrificed Richard Pazo home in the third inning. But in the fourth, Clemson broke loose for six runs in an outburst keyed by Bill Schroeder Robert Bonnette.

Pete Peltz started the onslaught with a walk, then Bonnette and Schroeder followed with singles. When Miami's Pazo threw wildly, Peltz scored.

Schroeder scored on a throwing error by Randy Guerra. Billy Weems, who moved to second on the same error, went to third on a single by Dave Buffamoyer singled and scored on Robbie Allen's single.

Buffamoyer scored when Miami second baseman Howie Shapiro overthrew trying to cut Buffamoyer off at the plate on a double steal. Allen moved to second, then scored when Neil Simons doubled.

Miami reliever Jeff Morrison gave up a double to Tony Masone that scored Simons to end the Clemson rally.

In the Miami fourth, Guerra singled and later scored on a fielders choice to make the margin 6-2. In the fifth inning, Ron Batter was safe on a wild throw by Clemson's Bonnette and scored as Guerra doubled. Guerra then scored on a fielder's choice by Tony Brewer.

Miami closed to 6-5 in the sixth when Pazo was safe on an error by Peltz and scored as Shapiro double to deep right field. After that Schmitt put the clamps on.

Clemson padded its lead in the eighth when Schroeder homered to left. In the ninth, a walk, wild pitch and a single by Bonnnette scored Masone.

The victory left Clemson with a record of 39-12 while Miami is 44-10.

Schmitt's record is 2-1. Miami starter Augie Ruiz dropped to 11-3.

For Marshall, it was Albie Young's hurling that made the difference. "A fabulous game," said Marshall Coach Jack Cook. "It was one of the gutsiest performances I've ever seen."

Florida State's Woody Woodward said, "They just outplayed us."

Marshall first scored when Dave Ramella reached base on an infield hit in the first inning and scored as Randy Rosiek hit into a fielder's choice.

Marshall pressured DeLoach again in the second inning, loading the bases with just one out on two walks and an error. Reliefer Joe Nichols gave up a run on Harry Severino's ground ball out that scored Rod Butler. Then Glen Lewis slipped home on a wild pitch by Nichols.

The final run came in the fifth when Severino doubled to right center and scored as John Rulli drilled a single to the same spot.

Coach Chuck Knox has won Western Division titles in the National Conference of the National Football League in each of his first five years as skipper of the Los Angeles Rams.

The Higher They Go

Montefusco Teaches Dodgers How To Lose

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

San Francisco pitcher John Montefusco says the Los Angeles Dodgers don't know how to lose...so he's trying to teach them.

"They can't lose gracefully," the Count of Montefusco said Friday night after pitching 7 2-3 innings and striking out 10 — including six in a row — as the Giants held off the Dodgers 10-7 for their eighth consecutive triumph.

The setback dropped the Dodgers into third place in the National League West — the Giants lead Cincinnati by two games, Los Angeles by 2½ — and, according to Montefusco, the playoffs might as well start right now.

"I'm telling you, this is a one-team race — us," he said. "The Dodgers are battling for second. I'm sick and tired of hearing (Dodger Manager Tom) Lasorda talk, just like I'm sure he's sick and tired of hearing me."

In other NL action, the New York Mets edged the Philadelphia Phillies 4-3, the Cincinnati Reds nipped the San Diego Padres 4-3, the Houston Astros blanked the Atlanta Braves 6-0, the Pittsburgh Pirates defeated the Montreal Expos 5-3 and the Chicago Cubs downed the St. Louis Cardinals 6-2.

The Giants-Dodgers slugfest had a little bit of everything — a pair of three-run homers by LA's Rick Monday, two solo shots by SF's Darrell Evans and a three-run blast by Bill Madlock of the Giants; a near brawl between LA outfielder Reggie Smith and Giants coach Jim Davenport ... even a protest.

The Giants played the game under protest — it became moot, of course, when they won — because Los Angeles used pitcher Mike Garman, whose trade to Montreal was announced before the game.

"I just hate these guys," Montesfusco said. "Dusty Baker thought I was throwing at him. Reggie Smith was mad because we protested ... they just don't know how to lose."

Monday's second homer in the sixth inning tied the game 7-7. The Giants broke the tie against Bobby Castillo in the top of the seventh when Larry Herndon walked, Johnnie LeMaster sacrificed and Mike Sadek singled him home. Sadek eventually scored on a single by Madlock, his fourth RBI.

Mets 4, Phillies 3

Willie Montanez' bases-loaded bouncer over the head of Philadelphia reliever Tug McGraw with one out in the ninth inning scored Bruce Boisclair with the winning run. Boisclair opened the inning with a pinch double on which right fielder Bake McBride barely missed a shoestring catch, and took third as Lenny Randle beat out a bunt which McGraw inadvertently touched while attempting to let it roll foul. One out later, Steve Henderson was intentionally walked before Montanez' delivered his game-winning infield hit.

Reds 4, Padres 3

Consecutive two-out solo homers in the seventh inning by Joe Morgan and George Foster brought Cincinnati from behind. Foster connected off Rollie Fingers, who had not allowed a home run in 28 previous innings this season, after Morgan tied the game with a blast off Bob Owchinko, who took over for Randy Jones at the start of the seventh.

Astros 6, Braves 0

Floyd Bannister scattered seven hits for his first victory of the season and slump-ridden Enos Cabell drove in three runs with four singles. Bannister struck out six and walked only one while pitching the Astros to their sixth triumph in the last seven games. Bob Watson contributed a two-run triple for Houston, which scored all its runs against Dick Ruthven.

Pirates 5, Expos 3

Dave Parker, Phil Garner and Steve Brye homered off Montreal's Rudy May as Pittsburgh scored all its runs in the fourth inning. Rookie Don Robinson recorded his fourth consecutive victory with ninth-inning help from Grant Jackson and Kent Tekulve.

Parker followed a leadoff fourth-inning walk to Omar Moreno with his seventh home run. One out later, Manny Sanguillen singled and Garner and Brye followed with home runs.

Cubs 6, Cardinals 2

Greg Gross ripped a pair of triples and Ivan DeJesus homered as Chicago saddled St. Louis with its eighth consecutive loss. Dave Roberts of the Cubs made his first start of the season and scattered six hits in seven innings before Willie Hernandez finished up.

Sports Briefs

By The Associated Press

EDINBURGH, Scotland (AP) — Don't get drunk, leave your switchblade knives at home and remember the sentries are instructed to open fire if orders are disobeyed.

This was some of the advice the British foreign office gave in a special booklet published Friday for Scottish soccer fans headed for the World Cup contest in Argentina.

Scotland is the only British team left in the contest. The team flies to Argentina next Thursday and its first World Cup game is against Peru on June 3.

SEATTLE (AP) — Texas Ranger shortstop Bert Campaneris will be sidelined about a week after suffering a cracked middle finger on his right hand during the first game of a double header Friday night with the Seattle Mariners, a club spokesman said.

Capaneris was attempting to put down a sacrifice bunt in the second inning of the American League baseball contest when he was struck by a pitch thrown by Seattle right-hander Dick Pole.

TOKYO (AP) — Big Hawaiian-born sumo wrestler Jesse Kuhaulua, or Takamiyama, a No. 3 maegashira, easily beat No. 7 maegashira Banryuyama to pick up his sixth victory against eight losses today, the 14th day of the 15-day Tokyo summer sumo tournament.

The 400-pound Jesse pushed the 322-pound Banryuyama out of the circle after sidestepping his opponent's initial charge.

Hawaii's junior wrestler, Reid Asato, or Wakayashima, lost his last bout to Takanomine, who lifted him out of the ring.

Germans Discriminate Against U.S. Servicemen

MUSEUM REACHES DESTINATION — Two huge cranes transfer a sagging 80-year-old former U.S. life saving station from a barge to the beach at Race Point on the tip of Cape Cod in Provincetown, Mass., Friday. The wooden, shingled building was lifted onto the barge from Chatham last November and sailed to Provincetown harbor where it waited through the winter. The building will serve the National Park Service as a Life Saving Service Museum. (AP Laserphoto)

By DAVID MINTHORN
Associated Press Writer

BONN, West Germany (AP) — A black U.S. Army general, who was denied entry to a discotheque until someone mentioned his rank, is leading a drive to stop German innkeepers from barring American soldiers.

Brig. Gen. Harvey Williams, commander of the 15,000-member U.S. military community in Augsburg, said American GIs "of all races, but primarily black" are turned away at the doors of 10 night spots in the Bavarian city.

Williams, 47, of Durham, N.C., said he decided to test admission policy at one Augsburg disco several months ago "to get a first-hand glimpse of the kind of thing that was going on."

He dressed in a sports coat and tie, but was stopped at the door and told it was a private club. When a companion mentioned his rank, the owner dropped the membership requirement, Williams said.

The incident was widely reported in West German newspapers after the general told about his experience during a news conference last week to publicize Augsburg's "Good Will Action" to end discrimination against soldiers.

"I only mentioned it to show we weren't dreaming up these cases," Williams said in a telephone interview with The Associated Press.

After Army officials documented numerous cases of discrimination over a period of several months, Mayor Hans Breuer promised the city's full cooperation in ending the practices.

Breuer told reporters that 500 local restaurants and discos will be asked to post bi-lingual signs pledging admission for all persons who meet acceptable standards of dress and behavior.

"We won't shrink from taking legal actions to suspend business licenses if discrimination doesn't stop," the mayor said.

He and Williams warned at the news conference that GIs might react violently if discrimination persists, German newspapers said.

The Augsburg prosecutor has already filed suit against one local disco which turned away a group of well-dressed black and white soldiers, including several senior enlisted men, who decided to challenge the entry rules.

"This test didn't just happen. We'd repeatedly been told to get documented evidence. And the soldiers decided among themselves to do it," Williams said.

Cases of discrimination against American soldiers occur wherever troops are garrisoned in West Germany, even though the West German constitution outlaws bias because of "origin, race, language, homeland, beliefs, religion or political stance."

The Army has put some bars and restaurants off-limits to all GIs after German authorities failed to act on complaints by black troops that they weren't admitted.

Stuttgart Mayor Manfred Rommel, son of the late Erwin Rommel, the German army's Desert Fox of World War II, criticized local cab drivers in 1975 for refusing rides to black soldiers. The cabbies said it was a self-defense measure following several assaults on drivers blamed on GIs.

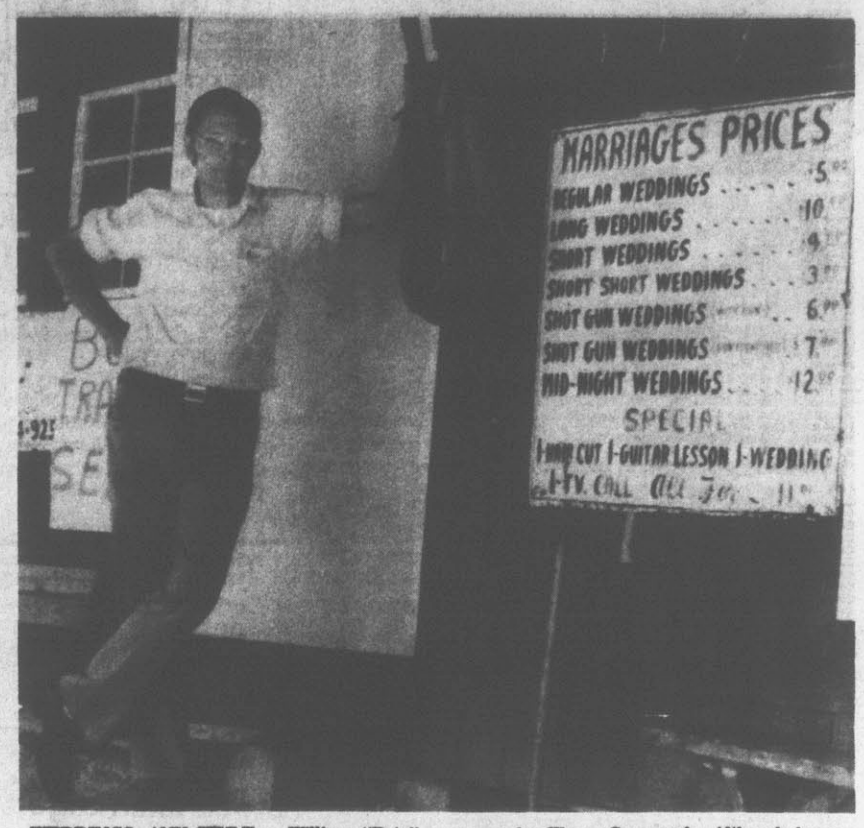

In the early 1970s, the Army organized a command-wide Housing Referral Agency for GIs seeking private apartments for their families. German landlords who refused to rent to blacks were placed off-limits to all military families.

In Augsburg, the disco owners have evaded laws against discrimination by claiming they operate private clubs for members only. They say soldiers are barred because they don't meet dress rules and are disorderly.

"On some nights when there are sufficient Germans to fill the place, the club member rule goes into effect. But on slow nights almost everyone can get in. Then when it's not quite full, the white soldiers are admitted and the blacks kept out," Gen. Williams said.

He said the mayor's goodwill campaign is low-key and aims to persuade the innkeepers rather than antagonize them. "There's been no name calling. We hope to win them over and not antagonize them," he said.

Williams acknowleged that eight of the 10 establishments are "places I wish the soldiers would avoid because of high-priced drinks and other rip-off tactics. But it's not up to me to decide where the soldiers go."

Former Tar Heel Sentenced

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — A Criminal Court jury deliberated nearly seven hours before finding a former North Carolina man guilty of second-degree murder and sentencing him to 25 years in prison.

The jury returned its verdict Friday against Ronald Mayfield, 21, in last June's strangulation of Robert Christian, 27.

The prosecution had asked for a first-degree murder conviction which carried a maximum penalty of death by electrocution.

Christian was found slain in his Memphis apartment on June 11, 1977, by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Christian of Tupelo, Miss., who came to check on their son after failing to hear from him for several days.

The prosecution argued robbery was the motive.

Defense lawyers said, however, that Mayfield, under Christian's influence, had participated in the sale of drugs and that Christian lured their client to his apartment June 7 to discuss a $300 debt. While at the apartment, the defense lawyers said, Christian threatened Mayfield with an 18-inch knife and a gun.

The two men struggled and Mayfield killed Christian in self-defense, the lawyers said.

Mayfield subsequently fled to Hendersonville, N.C., authorities said. He was arrested near Johnson City, Tenn., on June 16, nine days after Christian's death.

Retiring Pilot Celebrates, Aloft

NEW YORK (AP) — Capt. Henry Stuart was retiring after 31 years as a pilot, so he threw a party for himself — at 17,000 feet. He chartered a Boeing 707 for $5,000 and took 125 guests for a spin.

The American Airlines pilot paid the cost of the flight out of his own pocket, stocked the bar with liquor, filled the larder with sandwiches, relishes and fruit and, at 11:30 a.m. Friday, lifted the plane off the runway at Kennedy International Airport.

"Friends have always asked me, 'What goes on in the cockpit?' so I thought I would let them see for themselves before I retire," said Stuart, who reaches the mandatory retirement age of 60 next Wednesday.

A native of Seattle now residing in Greenwich, Conn., Stuart learned to fly under the GI Bill after serving in the Navy during World War II as an aeronautical engineer. Since then, he has flown all over the Western Hemisphere: to Guadaloupe, Martinique, Puerto Rico and Barbados.

But Friday's flight began and ended in New York. After a half-hour delay on the ground, the plane took to the sky, and Stuart's guests reacted with an ovation.

Midge Costanza Moving Office

WASHINGTON (AP) — Midge Costanza is moving from her prestigious office just down the hall from President Carter to new quarters and reduced responsibilities.

Ms. Costanza, the administration's controversial liaison with minorities and women, said Friday she will head a new interdepartmental task force on women.

"When the president called me into his office, he said I was being spread too thin," said Ms. Costanza, whose formal title is assistant to the president for public liaison. She quoted Carter as saying he had to respond to demands for more emphasis on women's issues.

She said her staff of nine would move with her out of the White House, but that she would maintain a small office and a secretary in the White House. She said she "negotiated" with Carter and his chief aide, Hamilton Jordan, on where she would be located.

"I was more concerned with the symbolic placement of the issues I represent," she said.

She said she hoped to move to an as yet undetermined federal agency by June 1.

Collectors Snap Up Ten Cent Postcards

QUINCY, Mass. (AP) — The U.S. Postal Service enjoyed a brisk opening-day market for its new John Hancock post card even though it cost a penny more than other postal cards.

The new 10-cent card made its debut at first-day ceremonies here Friday and stamp collectors snapped up 5,500 cards in the first two hours. The card attracted special attention because it was printed without a price, the first such card ever issued by the post office.

It took a special call from postal authorities in Washington before the sales could be started. Officials here had to wait until the Postal Service's board of governors officially raised the price of postal cards from nine to 10 cents. The increase takes effect May 29.

Many buyers were collectors who purchased batches of several hundred in the hope they could resell the rare issue at a profit.

The collectors said they expected a relatively low print order for the cards lacking a denomination.

The cards carry in their upper right-hand corner a stamp of Revolutionary era patriot John Hancock, who was born in what is now Quincy. On this first day of issue, the cards were on sale in the United States only in Quincy.

Kuanda Honored

ATLANTA (AP) — Zambian President Kenneth Kaunda received the Martin Luther King Jr. Nonviolent Peace Prize during an emotional ceremony at Ebenezer Baptist Church that brought tears to the African leader's eyes.

Kaunda, whose last visit to Atlanta in 1960 was to visit with the American civil rights leader, was forced to stop several times during remarks to a packed sanctuary Friday when his own references to King apparently struck emotional chords.

He dabbed his eyes several times and drank from a cup of water at the podium.

"I wasn't here when you put to rest the man I call my friend, so I'm partly emotional," he explained.

Behind Kaunda at the front of the church were King's widow, Coretta Scott King; King's father, the Rev. Martin Luther King Sr., and U.N. Ambassador Andrew Young, who marched beside King during the civil rights struggle.

Youth Group For Hodges

The Luther Hodges U.S. Senate campaign is establishing a statewide Hodges Youth Steering Committee to assist the candidate's efforts in reaching young North Carolinians of high school and college age.

The committee, composed of high school and college students, will help organize and get out the youth vote, assist in issues research and participate in campaign barnstorming tours for Hodges during Memorial Day weekend.

Local members of the committee are: Kevin McCourt and Gigi Branch.

Davanzo Elected

Robert Davanzo of Greenville has been selected for Phi Beta Kappa, the national honor society recognizing scholastic achievement. He is a student at the University of Virginia.

Davanzo is one of 122 UVA students named to the honorary society.

Sailor As Politician

CHICAGO (AP) — Seaman Apprentice William A. Raymond, 20, spent most of Friday with a mop and pail, swabbing floors at the Great Lakes Naval Training Center.

But earlier this month, "politician apprentice" William A. Raymond was nominated, with five other Republicans and six Democrats, to run for West Virginia's House of Delegates.

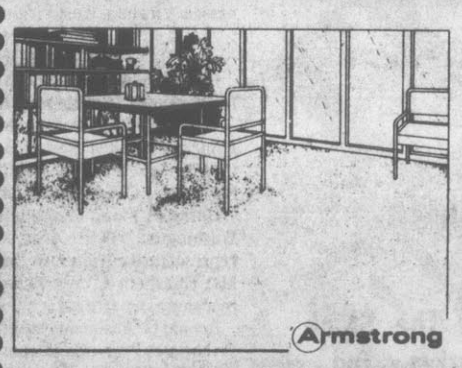

Raymond thinks he can win one of six seats from his legislative district in the general election — but only if the Navy lets him campaign. He applied Friday for inactive status.

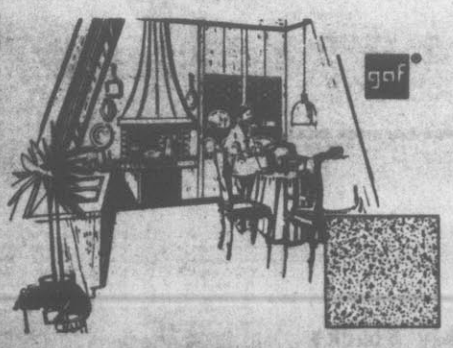

Navy regulations prohibit active-duty personnel from campaigning, said Marine Col. W.A. Bloomer, special assistant to Navy Secretary W. Graham Claytor in Washington.

Navy attorneys say requests for inactive status are considered on a case-by-case basis. A decision in Raymond's case could come in a few weeks.

"I didn't expect to win the nomination," said Raymond. "I figured I'd be too honest or too poor."

TRAINING PROGRAM

Powell T. Speight of Winterville has returned from Kansas City, Mo. where he completed the commodities training program at the Commodities Educational Institute in preparation for the National Commodity Futures Examination.

The two-week course involved lectures and workshops with subjects covered including commodity exchanges, Commodities Futures Trading Commission regulations, order writing, the art of customer-registered representative communications, charting and other fundamental and technical aspects of commodities.

Speight is president of Speight Investment Co. at 3205 S. Memorial Drive here.

NEW HIGH

North Carolina's savings and loan associations recorded a new high for the month in savings growth during March and continued to set new record highs in lending activity, according to information reported to the Federal Home Loan Bank of Atlanta.

Net savings inflows amounting to $141.5 million set a record for the month of March, as gross inflows totaling $363.5 million were partly offset by withdrawals of $222 million, it was noted.

Lending activity during the month, continuing the general monthly pattern of the past two years, again set a new record for March. Mortgage loans amounted to $206.4 million compared to $174.2 million in March of last year.

COMPLETED COURSE

Betty Akin and Theresa Van Auen of Fuqua's Carpets & Interiors here were among 400 retailers attending a Drapery and Decorating School in High Point.

The school was conducted for retailers from across the country by Norman's of Salisbury, national manufacturers of custom window and bed coverings.

Upon completion of workshops in various aspects of custom window and bed service and participation in seminars on merchandising, creativity and fashion, the retailers received qualification as Norman's specialists.

PROFILE AWARD

Cooper Division, Burroughs Wellcome Co. of Greenville, received a Profile Award from Blue Cross and Blue Shield of North Carolina, and Radio Station WPTF for outstanding contributions to the industrial growth and development of the state.

The plaque was presented to the division by Lloyd Rhodes, Blue Cross representative in the Greenville office, following the company's appearance on the Profile radio program on WPTF recently.

The purpose of the Profile broadcasts is to assist in the campaign to attract new industry to North Carolina and to develop greater public appreciation of industry already located in the state.

ANNUAL MEETING

Two state senators, a sales promotion specialist, and an associate justice of the State Supreme Court, will be featured speakers at the 76th annual meeting of the N.C. Merchants Association scheduled for May 28-29 in Charlotte.

The speakers are State Senators Craig Lawing of Charlotte and Marshall Rauch of Gastonia, Mike Pekarek of Dayton, Ohio, and Associate Justice I. Beverly Lake.

500TH UNIT

Shoney's Inc., Nashville-based franchisor of Shoney's Big Boy Restaurants, Captain D's Seafood Restaurants and a group of specialty restaurants, announced the opening of its 500th unit.

The restaurant, a Memphis, Tenn. Captain D's, is a franchised operation of Shoney's South Inc. of Memphis, it was reported.

Shoney's Inc., which reported sales of $117,640,000 in 1977, currently operates 211 company-owned and 289 franchised restaurants in 20 states.

NEW MAIN OFFICE

Construction is underway for the new main office of First-Citizens Bank and Trust Co. in Williamston, according to Fred Oglesby, assistant vice president and city executive.

The new office, located at the corner of Elm and Main Streets, will replace the bank's present office on the Highway 64 and 13 bypass.

Oglesby said that construction of the facility, which will contain some 3,000 square feet, should be completed by late summer.

ELECTED TO POST

Duke Power Company's board of directors elected Linwood C. Dail as vice president-design engineering. Dail was formerly chief engineer of the civil and environmental division

A native of Pitt County and son of Mrs. Henry Dail of Winterville, he received a bachelor's degree in civil engineering from North Carolina State University in 1949 after attending college there and at Penn State University. Dail joined Duke Power in 1953.

Dail is married to the former Sallie Frazier of Franklin County and they have four children. The Dails live at Rt. 1, Huntersville.

MEETING SET

The annual meeting of shareholders of Bancshares of North Carolina Inc. will be held May 26 in Raleigh, it was announced by James G. Lindley, president of Bancshares and its principal subsidiary, Bank of North Carolina, N.A.

The meeting, which will begin at 10 a.m. will be held at the Raleigh Civic Center.

PAYMENTS NOTED

The Prudential Insurance Company of America's payment to policyholders and beneficiaries in North Carolina amounted to over $58.9 million during 1977, the company announced.

John D. Buchanan Jr., CLU, senior vice president of Prudential's south-central home office in Jacksonville, Fla., said that life insurance in force in the state was $3.7 billion by year end.

'Buy America' Bug Hits Foreigners

By KRISTIN GOFF
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Although foreign investment in the United States dates back to the founding of the colonies, the "buy America" bug is experiencing a new wave of enthusiam among foreign companies.

Within the past few years, there has been a dramatic increase in the number of foreign owned operations opening plants in the United States, or buying into U.S. companies. Real estate purchases also appear to be on the rise.

Purchases of farmland are particularly sensitive and difficult to track because foreign investors sometimes work through third parties to avoid the hostility of farmers who worry that prices will sky-rocket and the land will lay idle.

In one such case, near Wichita Falls, Texas, wealthy Arabs reportedly purchased a tract of land for $1,000 an acre last year when the going price should have been around $350 an acre, according to David Edwards who is researching a book on international financing.

Some states are considering, or already have laws, to limit foreign ownership of land or other property. But in other areas foreign investors are being actively woed because new businesses mean new jobs.

The State of Pennsylvania, for instance, was jubilant when Volkswagen chose New Stanton as the site for its first U.S. production plant. So far about 1,200 new jobs have been provided and officials estimate that eventually will grow to 5,000.

Because there are no reporting requirements for foreign investment, no one knows the total amount or types of investment and purchases.

But Richard Apcar, a Commerce Department economist, notes it "has very definitely gone up in the past 10 years."

In other business developments this past week:

—The cost of mailing a letter will be going up on May 29 to 15 cents, two cents higher than the current first class letter rate.

—The total of wages, salaries and other personal income jumped sharply in April, in what economists saw as a sign that spending will remain strong and continue to spur the economy.

—The White House proposed a government tax credit program for private businesses who hire poor young workers. Government officials say the plan could result in nearly two million jobs for economically disadvantages workers under age 24.

—Profits of corporations declined in the first quarter of this year, the government said. But Commerce Department officials predicted a rebound in the spring quarter. After tax profits in the first three months slipped 2 percent to $102.9 billion after rising 1.3 percent in the previous quarter.

—The Commerce Department also revised its earlier report on Gross National Product in the first three months, but it still showed a decline. The revised figure showed GNP fell at an annual rate of .4 percent instead of the .6 percent decline it initially reported.

Conservation May Prevent Shortage

SEA ISLAND, Ga. (AP) — Serious conservation may prevent the energy shortage from hampering economic development in the United States during this century, according to C.C. Garvin, chairman of the board of Exxon Corp.

"I do not believe energy problems will necessarily constrain economic development in the United States and the rest of the free world during the remainder of this century," Garvin said in remarks prepared for delivery to the annual meeting of the South Carolina Textile Manufacturers Association.

"I say this assuming that the strong thrust toward conservation will continue — as I think it will — and that a variety of alternatives to oil and gas will be developed in timely fashion, as I hope they will be," he added.

Garvin said that by 1980, conventional domestic gas production will be down by more than a quarter "from our current annual output of roughly 20 trillion cubic feet."

He also predicted that the National Energy Plan by itself will not solve our energy problems.

"For example, the goal of reducing oil imports to seven million barrels a day by 1985 does not seem realistic to me particularly if we want to have a growing economy," he said.

But Garvin said the plan creates a "sense of national purpose."

In another speech, Robert S. Small, the president of the American Textile Manufacturers Institute, said present textile tariff levels need to be maintained.

"We are convinced that tariff cuts would create serious problems for the industry, ultimately causing a significant loss of jobs," Small said in prepared remarks.

He said the textile apparel trade deficit increased a "staggering 39 percent in the 12 months ended in March. And that was with constant tariffs and a sharply devalued dollar, to boot."

U.S. WW II Cemeteries In Europe Draw Crowds

By ALINE MOSBY

SAINT LAURENT-SUR-MER, Normandy, France, (UPI) — The American Military Cemetery for World War II was having a busy day.

A group of Belgian schoolgirls stared at a memorial statue to that war fought when their parents were young. Three busloads of American tourists pulled up next to a car from Germany and members of a French widows' club walked among the graves.

The cemetery director, American Merlyn Grove, watched the stream of visitors and said, "I've seen over the last couple of years renewed interest in the war, particularly among youth, wondering what this war was all about."

Thirty-three years after the guns fell silent across Europe, the battlefields, cemeteries and other grim sites of World War II are being overrun by new armies — this time of tourists from throughout the world.

From the D-day invasion beaches here in Normandy to Adolph Hitler's hideaway in the Bavarian Alps of southern Germany, operators of World War II monuments say tourist curiousity has been sharpened, particularly among youth unborn when the world's future was being shaped at these sites.

Groves said the U.S. cemetery welcomed a half million visitors in 1977 and "I'm looking for 750,000 in 1978."

The cemetery's French guide, Michel Ramonson, added that the number of tourists is soaring even more this year because of the January visit of America's Prsident Jimmy Carter and French President Valery Giscard d'Estaing that was televised in North America and Europe. He thinks the TV and other news coverage jogged the memories of those who lived through the epic and stimulated interest among the young.

"The other day we had 27 busloads of tourists from Belgium, Sweden, Norway, Holland, France, the United States, Yes, Germany, too", he said. "Several people mentioned the TV show."

One of the French widows viewing the cemetery, Mrs. Anne-Marie Prior, said, "We decided to come after we saw the photograph in the newspapers of President Carter here on his knees. We came to give thanks to those boys who died for us. Now we're off to see a chateau," and she tied a plastic cap over her white hair against the Normandy drizzle.

The history class from the Mater Dei girls' school in Brussels examined with giggles the beach below the cemetery, named Omaha beach by the Canadian, U.S. and British armies who landed on D-Day, June 6, 1944, to liberate France from four years of Nazi German rule.

But American tourist Thomas Carr of Plymouth, Mich., and his wife looked with sadness on the still emotionally shocking scene of 9,385 simple white Christian crosses and Jewish Stars of David, row after row after row, on the cliffs above Omaha beach. The bodies of 14,000 other Americans killed on the Normandy beaches were sent home.

"It's our generation burried here," said Carr. "I was in the war in Japan."

Tour buses coming from Paris stop first at the World War II museum at nearby Arromanches which shows models, a diorama and film of the gigantic naval and aerial invasion. On a clear day rusting hulks of some of the thousands of ships and planes that came from England still loom above the sea.

After visiting the U.S. cemetery the tour buses continue to the British, Canadian and German cemeteries. The other day some young Germans had stopped their car and were examining the pyramid monument in the German cemetery dedicated to the 7,358 boys their age who died in Normandy.

Up the coast is Utah beach, scene of more D-Day carnage. A museum on the beach shows a film of the invasion. In the nearby village of Saint-Mere-Eglise, U.S. paratroopers floated from transport planes during the night before D-Day. Off the village square a museum shows details of that parachutists' operation immortalized in the film "The Longest Day".

American Philippe Jutras from Ainesbury, Mass., who landed on Utah Beach on D-Day, came back five years ago to Sainte-Mere and wed the town fabric shop owner. He serves as museum curator.

A sign on a tree outside the museum where a GI once landed in his parachute says, "This is the place where Pvt. William K. Tucker of the 505th parachute infantry entered into the battle June 6 1944."

Inside the museum Jutras pointed to his new display cases: "Here's some combat boots donated by one veteran. A former Red Cross girl sent us those uniform insignia patches she had collected. A Frenchman brought in this U.S. field telephone he found 30 years ago and a Dutch tourist donated this German rifle. A German sent us those 1944 front pages from the American army newspaper Stars and Stripes."

In another case are gifts handed out by GI's to the natives — American cigarettes and chewing gum carefully preserved by a French family. Another family brought in one of the 5,000 dummy "paratroopers" that U.S. planes dropped in another part of Normandy to confuse the Germans.

"Almost every month some veteran comes by to look for the field where he landed," Jutras said.

The little 11th century church where German snipers hid still displays bullet holes. Two new stained glass windows depicting the paratroopers replaced those destroyed in the shooting.

Enthusiastic tourists are storming, too, Berchtesgaden in West Germany where Hitler lived in his "Eagle's Nest" retreat, now an inn run by the German Alpine Club. Special hill-climbing buses operated by the West German postal service take tourists from the postoffice up the winding road to the dictator's former tea house.

Another popular war memorial is Dachau, also in Bavaria, where the Nazis built their first concentration camp, mainly to gas tens of thousands of Jews, in 1933. The death camp now is a Christian-Jewish memorial, visited by 544,000 tourists in 1977.

One monument so far little known to tourists is the "little red schoolhouse" in Reims, France, where Nazi Germany surrendered to Britain, the United States and the other allies on May 7, 1945.

The room, in a technical secondary school for boys, served as Supreme Allied Headquarters. Everything in the room remains exactly as it was a third of a century ago. The yellowed maps on the walls show the exact positions of Allied and Nazi armies at the moment of surrender.

The surrender was signed on the scarred oak table in the center of the room. The chairs are the same. The only addition is signs showing where the Alied and German leaders sat.

Near Compiegne, France, the railway car where the French signed a surrender to Hitler on June 22, 1940, drew 200,800 visitors in 1977, up 10,000 from the year before.

Hitler insisted on using the same railway car built during the reign of Napoleon III in which defeated Germany had signed the World War I armistice Nov. 11, 1918. Hitler then shipped the railway car to Berlin where it was destroyed. The car now on display is another Napoleonic car furnished like the original.

World War I monuments also are rising in popularity. Near Verdun in eastern France tour buses cruise through the battlefield of the bloodiest fighting in the annals of modern warfare. Some 18 divisions each of French and German troops fought each other for 500 days and 500 nights beginning February 1916.

The evenly-matched battle see-sawed on and on at an impasse until some 400,000 French and 400,000 German soldiers died in the mutual slaughter. Only when the British and French launched the battle of the Somme in 1917 did the deadlock end at Verdun.

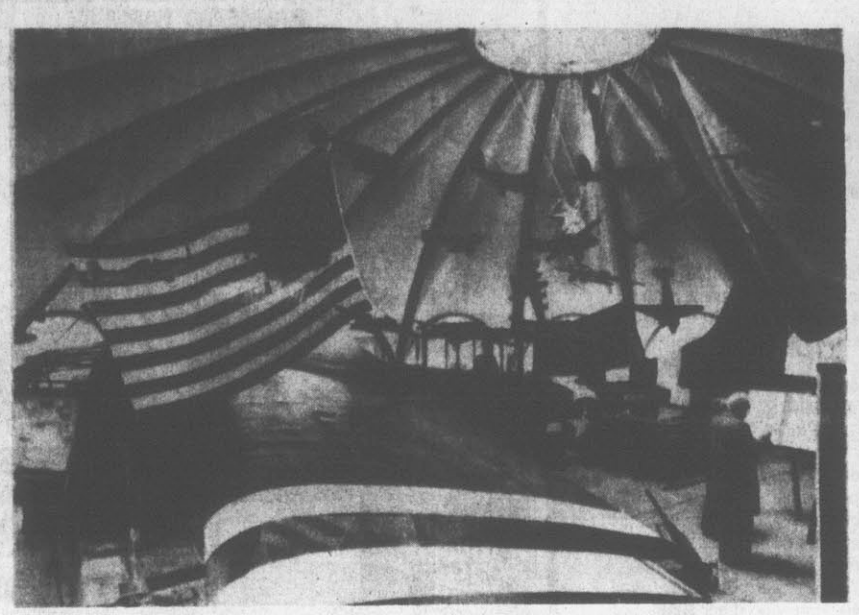

Today the rolling battlefield has been kept by the French to look as it did in 1916 — bomb craters filled with rainwater, a row of rusted bayonets protruding from the scarred earth where two companies of French Inantrymen were buried alive during a German bombarment.

At Sainte-Mere-Eglise, museum curator Philippe Jutras is one monument operator who hopes tourists draw a lesson from the sites of the world wars.

In a souvenir booklet for an American visitor, Jutras wrote, "Let us hope that the leaders of tomorrow understand the true meaning of the word Love, in order to preclude the repetition of such events."

TOURISTS pause at a grave in the American military cemetery near the Omaha Beach landing site of D-Day, June 6, 1944. The cemetery had a half million visitors in 1977. (UPI Photo)

Susan Tells GOP What's Going On

By IRA ALLEN

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Susan Alvarado has a key job and works in a special place in Washington — at the back door of the Senate telling Republican members what is going on.

Many senators, tied up in committee or home state business, don't know what they are to be voting on when they rush to the Senate chamber in response to roll call bells. Both parties keep staff members in the cloak rooms to prompt arriving members.

Ms. Alvarado is one of the three persons always watching floor proceedings on behalf of Republican members. And when a roll call is underway, she is there to whisper a few key words in the ear of any of the 38 GOP senators who ask for information.

She is GOP whip Ted Stevens' legislative assistant, the first woman to hold a Senate leadership staff position.

She seems especially proud of her rapid advancement at the age of 23.

"I'd like to be judged on ability. It's not my fault members of my sex have been abused over the years," she says with a quick smile.

This is her third year with Stevens, the Alaska Republican, and her second as chief "floor watcher" for the Republicans. As whip, or assistant floor leader, Stevens is responsible for keeping track of individual GOP senators' requests for speaking time and for protecting Republican interests on the floor.

Ms. Alvarado says her job is to "watch the floor when Senator Stevens is not there. Beyond that I'm there for Republican senators and staff members. I'm available for any questions."

In that capacity, she knows more than almost anyone else about what's going on in what some call "the world's greatest deliberative body."

When Stevens was elected GOP whip in January, 1977, he promoted Ms. Alvarado from his office staff to the floor watcher job.

At first, she says, she was given a hard time — from her own Republican staff colleagues, GOP secretary William Hildenbrand and his assistant, Howard Greene. And she still doesn't have the full confidence of the GOP senators she is trying to keep informed.

Ms. Alvarado says her early dealings with Hildenbrand and Greene — who are elected by all the Senate Republicans — was like "an initiation rite."

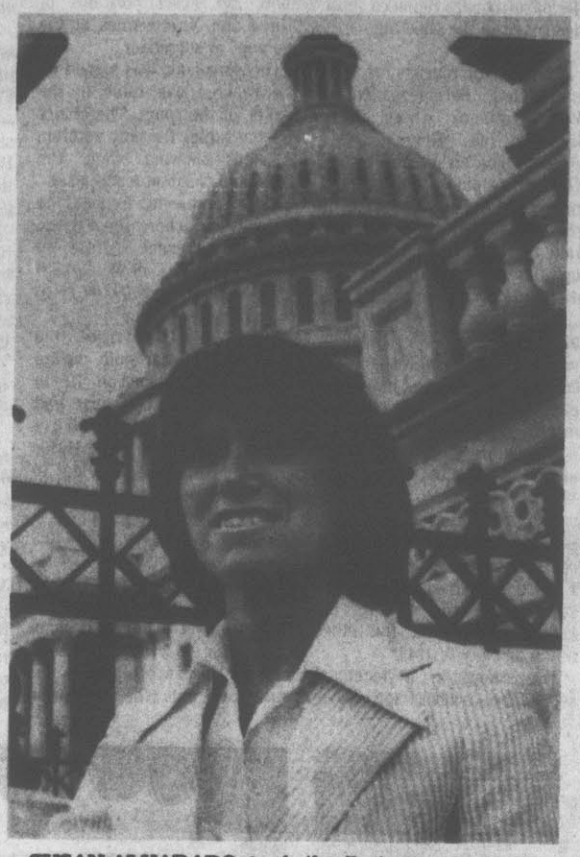

"Initially they had to get used to the third person being a woman. First of all, I was a female and then I was an unknown quantity, so why should they trust me? So there was a little bit of resentment," she says with no trace of bitterness.

"There were hard times for me but any woman who is pioneering in an area has to put up with that. Now they trust me and we work together."

Hildenbrand says he doesn't recall any specific incidents of hazing but does concede "there was a period of adjustment for her to learn the roles and responsibilities" of the trio.

Hildenbrand says he hasn't seen any evidence of bias against Miss Alvarado because of her sex and says he never had any hostility toward her.

Out of force of habit he did refer to her as "the whip's man on the floor."

SUSAN ALVARADO, 2., is the first woman to hold a Senate leadership staff position as legislative assistant to Republican whip Ted Stevens. (UPI Photo)

Hildebrand agrees with Ms. Alvarado that they work well together. He says she has "an important role" in the smooth functioning of the Senate Republican minority.

The Republican senators are still not altogether willing to rely on her advice, especially when only a few seconds remain on a roll call and they need a quick consultation.

"Some senators don't have the confidence in me. They're used to Bill (who is 55) and Howard (who is 35) and maybe they're just used to talking to males. I don't offer, as a rule, advice without being asked.

"In all honesty, some never come to me when it's a last-minute situation. I would say there is a hesitancy on the part of some members to get to know me because I'm a woman," and it's mostly the older ones, she says.

However, she says, "The fact that I'm a woman may help me because most men would rather talk to a woman."

In her office, the $24,000-a-year floor-watcher keeps an ear on what is happening in the chamber by means of a loudspeaker. The only book on her wall shelf is "The Managerial Woman."

One of seven children in an Air Force family, she was a varsity tennis player at Ohio State and spent a year traveling and skiing before joining Stevens' staff in 1976. She says her rapid advancement was due to her competitive instinct and her performance under fire as a new "l.a." specializing in military affairs.

One day Stevens gave her a copy of the 1,500-page Tax Reform Act of 1976.

"He dropped it on my desk and the desk practically caved in," she recalls. "He said, 'Get to know this bill and look for things of interest to Alaska.' I thought my world would end, and it was a real moment of self-doubt. I finished school in three years and I wondered what am I doing with this when I could still be in school?"

Eventually she mastered the bill "in an organized fashion" and provided Stevens with the expertise he needed during two months of floor debate.

"The fact that he had confidence in me gave me the adrenalin to say, 'OK, I can handle it."

"He is the type of person to whom ability counts. Obviously appearance and personality come into play but ability is the key. If I couldn't do the job I'd be out of here in no time flat."

The recent Panama Canal debate enhanced her status, she says, as she became involved in policy and strategy discussions.

But there also was the time Sen. Pete Domenici, R-N.M., was in the middle of something and "he recognized me and asked me to run down and get him some cigarettes. I didn't take that as a condescension. The next minute I'm involved in a high level policy discussion, so you can't have a big ego or you can really be flattened."

She describes herself as a political "moderate" and says she is not "a strong women's libber" but believes firmly that "ability counts first."

Ms. Alvarado says she has plenty of opinions and will supply them freely when asked. But she will not offer unsolicited advice, particularly on matters outside her role on the floor.

She says "I'm not about to" approach someone like 81-year-old Sen. Milton Young of North Dakota "and say 'you should vote this way.' I'm there as an information source. My opinion (on other matters) is worth nothing. I may be in a position to do that but I'm not going to."

Young, in fact, is one of the senators who seeks out Miss Alvarado for the rundown on a vote he is unfamiliar with.

As a young Senate staff member three years ago, Miss Alvarado was awed, like most people, at the history of the Senate and the famous people who sit there. No longer, she says, does her head turn when a Jacob Javits or a Ted Kennedy passes.

Game Series #CK35

1. Get a FREE CASH KING Collector Card at the checkout counter or store office. Get a FREE Game Ticket every day you visit a participating store. Limit one ticket per family per visit. No purchase necessary. Adults only eligible. (18 yrs. or older)

2. HOW TO PLAY: Simply punch-out the perforated portions of your Game Ticket. Each Game ticket has four CASH KING markers. Each Marker corresponds to a square in the Games on your Collector Card. Some Game Tickets will contain a Saver Disc. Place the Saver Disc in the space provided on your Collector Card. If you get 10 Saver Discs, they may be exchanged for 10 FREE Game Tickets, giving you additional chances to win. Some Game Markers will say "You Win $1.00!" This is an Instant Winner marker and you can collect your prize immediately from authorized store personnel.

3. Place markers in the corresponding die-cut squares on your collector card. EXAMPLE: If one of your markers is a "Jack of Clubs" in the $1,000 Game, insert that marker in the corresponding "Jack of Clubs" square in the $1,000 Game on Collector Card. If you obtain all four markers which match the four corner squares in the $1,000 Game you can win $2,000. All winning combinations are described on The Cash King Collector card. Markers may only be used to win in one combination in the $1,000 and $2 Game.

4. WHAT TO DO IF YOU WIN: Submit all claimed winning markers to Store Office for verification. All Markers in a winning combination must be initialed by customer in the presence of authorized store personnel before submission will be accepted. $2,000, $1,000 and $100 Winning Markers must be initialed in the presence of two (2) authorized store persons and approved by the general office. When a winning combination has been verified by authorized personnel you will be awarded your prize after furnishing your name and address.

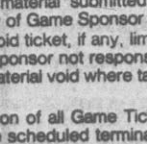

5. All game materials will be rejected and judged void if not obtained from and verified by authorized personnel or if any part of any of the game markers is illegible, altered, mutilated, miscut, misregistered, defaced, tampered with, forged, contains printing or other errors, or is irregular in any way. All game material submitted for verification becomes the property of Game Sponsor and cannot be returned. Liability for void ticket, if any, limited to replacement of ticket. Game Sponsor not responsible for lost or stolen tickets. Game material void where taxed or prohibited by law.

6. Game will end upon distribution of all Game Tickets which may be before or after the scheduled termination date. Valid winning submissions must be presented within two (2) weeks after termination of game or prizes are forfeited. The offer to exchange ten (10) Saver Discs for ten (10) FREE Game Tickets expires immediately upon termination of Game. When and if verified claims for prizes in any category equal the number of prizes advertised for that category, then game, as it relates to that specific prize category, shall immediately terminate without notice and any unverified claim submitted at or after that time shall be automatically rejected.

7. Only CASH KING game materials with series #35 valid for this game. Employees (and their respective IRS dependents and immediate family members) of Winn-Dixie Raleigh, Inc. and affiliates thereof, or of suppliers or any other company engaged in the development and production of Cash King are not eligible to play. State, federal and other taxes imposed on any or all prizes are solely the responsibility of winners.

PLAN YOUR HOME

By Jerry Bishop

With living room and dining room joining it via sliding glass doors, the covered patio in the Holmdale, a three bedroom design, seems to double the total amount of living space. In addition, the bedrooms are substantial, with two over 16 ft. in length, and the result is a spacious, airy design.

Even on the exterior, the steeply sloping roof, vertical siding, and tall chimney emphasize size. Inside, rooms are large, closets pentiful, and windows used liberally.

Entry is into a long, elegant foyer, which, unlike most foyers, features a front-facing window. At right, the 20-ft. living room highlights a fireplace that is visible from the foyer so that a mood of warm welcome is set at once.

Both the living room and adjoining dining room are connected to the patio by sliding glass doors. The dining room also merges with the kitchen for an informal activity center, and the kitchen shows a wealth of counter and cabinet space.

For convenience, a half bath and closeted laundry room are combined and set next to the foyer. Again, a window is used.

Three bedrooms and two full baths make up the second level. Each of the bedrooms is large and well-closeted, and the hallway offers a linen and large storage closet. The master bedroom merits ample space and a private, windowed, bath with shower.

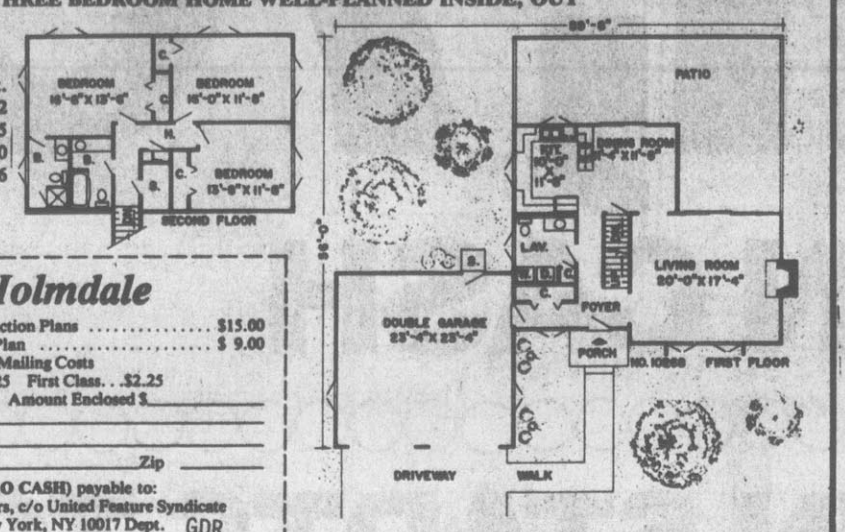

Featured in the design is a large double garage with entry to the rear yard or directly into the foyer, a bonus in inclement weather. A basement is provided.

ON THE HOUSE

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

"The only good examples in residential architecture," says Egil P. Hermanovski, "are the homes designed by architects for themselves."

This Latvian architect, a naturalized American citizen since 1952, doesn't accept conventional concepts of house design. It is his belief, backed up by many award-winning homes and buildings, that a house can be built in any form or shape for no more than a conventional rectangular dwelling of the same size.

"It isn't that some architects don't have imagination and original ideas," explains Hermanovski, "but what happens between those ideas and the final result is always a compromise with the home owner, who is always conventional and conservative. If the architect has courage, as a few do, he uses his originality in his own house."

In his youth a three-time national slalom ski champion of Latvia, Hermanovski gravitated naturally to architecture, since his father, Theodor, also was an architect. Actually, Theodor Hermanovski was better known as a statesman and generally acknowledged to be one of the three founders of the free state of Latvia, now in the Russian camp. Once Egil turned to designing, his progressive style in both architecture and art (he also is an artist whose work has been exhibited in several galleries) so annoyed the Nazi regime that he was imprisoned in 1944.

Most of the renderings of the designs in a book Hermanovski is just completing appear to be of houses that have been sculptured. "They are," he says, "for people who want individual homes. Not everybody will like all the designs. I can only hope that some people like some of them."

What does Hermanovski, a resident of Long Island, see for housing in the future?

"In not too many years, there will be no need for architectural designs for houses. Everything will be mass produced, manufactured and delivered on the site after being selected from a catalogue. This might not be a bad idea if the manufacturers of prefabricated houses would give designers the freedom to use their talents, because if prefabrication is done with originality, it could produce excellent results in residential architecture. What I am afraid of is that the good architects will specialize in non-residential building. If this happens, it will be difficult to find talented architects in the home construction field. And eventually only a handful of architects will be needed in the entire United States."

One encouraging note seen by Hermanovski is that solar energy for heating and cooling may change design concepts and prevent the loss of individuality he otherwise foresees.

GARDEN CLINIC

N.C. State University Answers Timely Gardening Questions

Q. My neighbor says growing cucumbers on a trellis or stake is the best way. Is this true? (Mrs. L.N., Charlotte)

A. Your neighbor is absolutely right. Try it. You'll like it. (George Hughes, extension horticulturist)

Q. What are some good fast-growing screening plants for my cottage on the coast? (C.M., Ocean Isle)

A. There are several shrubs that are tolerant of salt and beach conditions. Among them are Pittosporum, Podocarpus and a native shrub, Wax Myrtle. (Kim Powell extension landscape horticulturist)

Q. My pine trees have large swellings on the branches that have suddenly turned yellow and powdery. What could be causing this and how do I control it? (G.B., Durham)

A. This is probably one of the rust diseases that occur on several types of pines. Fusiform rust is most common on loblolly and slash pines while eastern gall rust is common on Virginia and shortleaf pine. If the swelling occurs on a branch, prune it off. If the disease occurs on the lower part of the trunk, it can weaken the tree and cause it to break off during a high wind. Therefore it is best to go ahead and remove the tree. (R.K. Jones, extension plant pathologist)

Q. Is there any such thing as warm season lettuce? If so, please provide me with information about it. (R.P., Siler City)

A. Lettuce is a cool season crop and can be grown in both spring and fall. Buttercrunch and Grand Rapids are two loose leaf types of lettuce that will tolerate some heat. However, no varieties will grow satisfactorily in mid-summer. (George Hughes, extension horticulturist)

Energy-Saving Tips For Home

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures

Tallying the high cost of last winter's fuel may be the only reminder for some people that an energy crisis still exists. Many people have replaced concern with apathy, as they continue a lavish use of energy.

They are only postponing the day of reckoning by ignoring the problem, points out Isaac Asimov, the well-known science-fiction writer, who has long studied the fuel problem.

"If we take a little trouble, endure a little discomfort, the price we must pay in a few decades will diminish substantially," Asimov believes.

But energy sources must be used sparingly during the transition period, he cautions. If not, our children will pay the price, and the under-40 set may well live to pay also.

Asimov, who wrote the fantasy, "Nightmare Life Without Fuel," assisted the York Division of Borg-Warner, the heating and cooling people, in preparing the facts for a booklet they are distributing, "Energy in Your Home."

Pointers from the booklet might provide a new perspective on saving energy?

Solar Energy: It is not now economically practical as a major source of energy in the home, it costs $8,000 to $10,000 or more to put it into a single family house. As costs drop, and fuel prices rise, these systems will move northward, however.

We will be able to make use of solar energy and nuclear fusion for billions of years along with subsidiary sources — with running water, tides, ocean warmth, Earth's internal heat, even coal, Asimov reminds us.

Meanwhile, we must be frugal in our use of fuel.

There are low cost heating plans available. The University of Illinois has designed such a house and people building a new home have a great opportunity to cut energy costs.

For example, two-by-six studs may be used which allows 5½ inches of insulation in walls. Little or no extra lumber expense is entailed, because the studs are set 24 inches apart instead of the usual 16 inches.

The design of the house and its orientation on the site can be fuel savers. South-facing windows can be solar collectors in winter. On other sides windows should be at a minimum, for views and daylight.

Savings can be made, too, by locating living areas on the south and east sides, bedrooms on the north.

Many new windows come with triple glazing, a double pane and a movable storm pane, other energy savers. Heat loss may be cut down by tightly woven or lined draperies, Venetian blinds or roller shades.

Common heating and cooling systems are explained:

These include forced warm air heat which can provide cooled air in summer; forced hot water heat which can be zoned with separate thermostat fields; electric baseboard heat which is used where electric rates are low; newer heat pump systems, "an air conditioner that reverses itself in winter when it extracts heat from outside air — even if it is 20 degrees — and delivers it inside." Supplementary heat may be required.

Cutting down on the use of hot water is one good way to cut fuel bills. Fifteen to 20 percent of total energy expense goes to heat water and keep it hot for 8,760 hours per year. In fact 75 to 90 percent goes for heating, cooling or hot water.

Cut down on some pleasurable experiences now, and the future may not be too grim. Asimov has envisioned a time when we may take lukewarm sponge baths, heat the house only in the morning and use lights sparingly.

Information on sources to contact on energy savings is also provided.

(The free booklet may be obtained from York Division, Borg-Warner, Dept. 14, Box 1592, York, Pa. 17405.)

Here's the Answer

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

Q. — I have often read instructions about one aspect or the other of refinishing a piece of furniture, but what I would like to see is a complete start-to-finish schedule of such an operation. I have a reason, of course. I am about to refinish an old bureau that is otherwise in excellent condition. It appears to be made of some kind of hardwood, although I don't know too much about that subject. Can you give me full instructions on how to proceed? I'd like to use a stain on the wood.

A. — Space reasons preclude all details in the replies to all questions selected, but here's an attempt to give you most of what you want. The first thing to do is to rub down a small section of the bureau with denatured alcohol to be certain that it really needs a refinishing. Sometimes all it requires is a cleaning. If it does need attention, use a varnish remover to take off the old finish. There are several varieties on the market, so be certain to follow the manufacturer's directions in every respect, including what to use and how to use it in rinsing the wood after the finish is removed. If the remover takes out all the color in the wood, fine. If not, try sanding, but don't overdo it, since the previous stain may be deeply imbedded and impossible to remove. In that event, you'll have to use a commercial bleach of the kind sold in hardware and paint stores, again carefully following the instructions on the container. Apply a coat of sealer. After 24 hours, put on the stain. Wait another 24 hours, then apply a second coat of sealer. When that is thoroughly dry, you are ready for whatever material you have chosen for the final finish. Since you have elected to stain the wood, you want a clear finish, in which case you might consider one of the synthetic varnishes. After that, decide on whether the finish is smooth enough. If it isn't, a light sanding with a wet-or-dry sandpaper is in order. Or you can rub down the finish with powdered pumice, followed by a similar treatment with powdered rottenstone. That's about as much detail as space will allow, but several paragraphs could be devoted to the application of each material and the sanding and rubbing procedures, which might carry us right on through this newspaper to the back page.

Q. — We intend to sell our house within the next year. We have lived in it for 15 years and know that we will get a tax break on the profit because of our age. However, while I am 66, my wife is only 60. Does the tax ruling apply to our house, which is in both names?

A. — Yes. Only one of the co-owners need be 65 or older in order to qualify.

Afghanistan is located between Soviet Central Asia and the Indian subcontinent.

Find Mixed Picture On Rights Of The Mentally Ill

EDITOR'S NOTE — President Carter recently received a report from his Commission on Mental Health. Here's a look at one of the issues — the constitutional rights of the mentally ill.

By MARC WILSON
Associated Press Writer

CHICAGO (AP) — "Lunatic Record ... In the matter of the alleged insanity of Mary Lincoln."

A jury ruled her insane and committed her to an asylum 10 years after the assassination of her husband.

The former first lady's involuntary commitment was an early seed in a war over the constitutional rights of the mentally ill that blossomed during the civil rights movement of the 1960s. Mrs. Lincoln's dilemma was resolved — 100 years after her trial — but it left the rights of thousands of other mentally ill in question.

Mrs. Lincoln's lunatic record said she did "not manifest either homicidal or suicidal tendencies." In 1975 the U.S. Supreme Court ruled such commitments unconstitutional.

"A finding of 'mental illness' alone cannot justify a state's locking a person up against his will and keeping him indefinitely in simple custodial confinement ...." the court ruled in O'Connor v. Donaldson.

Today if Robert Lincoln — or any other son — asked that his mother be locked away he would have to prove her dangerous as well as mentally ill. But who determines who is dangerous to whom? That is now the key constitutional battle.

In most states a person can be committed against his will if he can be proved "potentially dangerous" to himself or others. But some states — California, Pennsylvania and Michigan — have adopted laws restricting involuntary commitment to those who show they are dangerous by "overt act."

A similar law has been proposed in Illinois by a commission chaired by Circuit Court Judge Joseph Schneider of Chicago. Schneider, who also heads a commission studying mental health law for the President's Commission on Mental Health, presides in the courtroom where Mrs. Lincoln was committed 103 years ago.

A framed copy of her lunatic record hangs in his 17th-floor office, and he gives copies to anyone who asks.

"Mary Lincoln was deprived of her liberty because she was thought to be mentally ill," says Schneider. "Today a person can be deprived of liberty if he is found to be mentally ill and potentially dangerous. How can we deprive someone of liberty on the supposition that he might be dangerous?"

"... Who's to say who is potentially dangerous?" adds Paul Friedman, director of the Washington-based Mental Health Law Project. "Studies have shown that psychiatrists are only 50 percent accurate in their predictions of who is potentially dangerous. That's like flipping a coin in the courtroom. How can we take away somebody's liberty based on a coin toss?

"The power and prestige of psychiatrists have been struck a terrible blow by the crusade for rights for mental patients, and they're becoming terribly offended by the efforts to protect patient rights."

But, says Dr. Alan Stone, professor of law and psychiatry at Harvard University, "No one, including psychiatrists or judges, can predict with 100 percent certainty who will become dangerous. But waiting for a person to commit an overt act simply won't work. If we just wait until someone has already committed a crime, we'll just collapse the civil commitment procedure into the criminal justice system. Mentally ill persons will have to be treated as criminals."

In addition to the "overt act" provision, the state commission Schneider chairs has proposed that mental patients be read their rights before they are examined by a doctor and that they be given the right to refuse treatment once they are committed — rights that already exist in a few states.

"Who says they have any such rights?" asks Stone. "The Supreme Court has never ruled on it, and there is substantial case law saying persons who are mentally ill and potentially dangerous aren't covered by the Constitution. And society has a proven right to be protected from dangerous persons."

The Illinois Psychiatric Society also opposes the changes proposed by Schneider's commission.

Dr. Alex J. Spadoni, the society's immediate past president, says the overt act provision would require a person to commit a crime before he could be involuntarily committed. "Murders, suicides, rapes and assaults have increased in states where this provision has been adopted.

"The key to helping someone recover from mental illness is to treat him as early as possible, not after he's killed or hurt himself or someone else ... The idea of making doctors read patients their rights would destroy needed rapport between the doctor and patient and would turn doctors into policemen.

"And to give a patient who has been declared dangerous the right to refuse treatment once in the hospitals is ridiculous. That would simply turn hospitals into prisons and doctors into wardens."

Two years ago Wisconsin adopted a law similar to the one proposed in Illinois. But in mid-February the Wisconsin Legislature rescinded the law and returned to one that makes it easier for the state to commit a person against his will.

Dr. Darold A. Treffert, director of the Winnebago (Wis.) Mental Health Institute, helped prepare the new law. He says the 1975 law forced policemen and courts to charge and convict mentally ill persons with minor crimes and then commit them to mental hospitals as criminals.

"Mentally ill persons should not have to deteriorate to the point of dangerousness when it is obvious that they are in need of treatment and would predictably respond to treatment," he says.

The federal government may end up setting the standards for each state. Already federal courts have ruled — in 1972 in Wyatt vs. Stickney — that states must provide adequate care and security for institutionalized persons; and in the 1975 Donaldson ruling that non-dangerous persons can't be locked away against their will.

Congress is considering a bill that would enable the Justice Department to file civil lawsuits against a state, county or city if they are "subjecting persons residing in any institution to conditions which deprive them of any rights, privileges or immunities secured or protected by the Constitution or the laws of the United States."

The bill, introduced by Rep. Robert Kastermeier, D-Wis., has been approved by the House Judiciary Committee. Committee staff counsel Tim Boggs says the bill should pass Congress this year. "The federal government has been frustrated in the past in efforts to guarantee constitutional rights for persons in mental hospitals and hospitals for the mentally retarded. This bill should help the Justice Department and the Civil Rights Commission get the job done."

Former mental patients also have begun efforts to protect the rights of institutionalized persons.

"Psychiatrists want it so anyone who doesn't fit the norm can be declared potentially dangerous and locked away," says Tanya Tempkin of the Network Against Psychiatric Abuse in San Francisco. "We want hospital inmates and the public made aware that the Constitution covers everybody."

Although California has one of the most liberal mental health codes, Ms. Tempkin says, "Most of the rights can be denied for so-called good cause, and that may be anything. People in mental hospitals aren't in a good position to stand up for their rights."

A Few Schools Give Troublemakers New Chance

EDITOR'S NOTE — Kids who don't fit into the classroom routine often are kicked out or hang on until they can drop out. But there are some schools that cater to these incorrigables. The price may be high, but the results are good.

By BARBARA RIEGELHAUPT
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Fernald Scool is a small, private institution in a secluded, tree-shaded corner of the UCLA campus. But it's far from idyllic.

Most of the 65 or so kids who attend would make many teachers shudder. Most were kicked out of public school. They're the troublemakers, the unmanageables, the class dunces who are given another chance at Fernald, a research and training center for UCLA's psychology department.

Ingrid, 18, came from seventh grade in the public schools where she was reading at an elementary level, and she says, "Had a lot of fights."

Jimmy and Keith, 9-year-old twins, confounded their interviewer on their initial visit to Fernald. After they left, he walked out of the conference room in disbelief. "They took apart the chairs."

The school was started in 1921 by psychology professor Grace Fernald, who wanted to help but not psychoanalyze youngsters classified as delinquents.

"Some people talk about education as if reading, writing and math are the only things it's about," says Howard Adelman, Fernald director and UCLA associate professor of psychology. "They are certainly integral. But there are some other important skills, such as learning to function autonomously, to structure time. Some of these kids are explosive. They don't learn by someone saying 'You have to work on reading or math.' That's what's been said to them for years. That's why they're here."

Fernald offers fulltime classes from elementary grades through high school, though no one graduates. Most students spend two years there before returning to public schools. Some older students "graduate" by taking the high school equivalency exam.

In addition to the fulltime program, children with less serious problems may come for after-school tutoring. Parents and children also may come in for referrals to other schools or programs.

Fernald does not admit children who are clearly emotionally disturbed or retarded. But many of the students have been classified as hyperactive or dyslexic.

"People wonder how Fernald can bring so many 'problem' kids together without turning into an armed camp," Adelman says. "People also remark on how 'normal' the kids look. Well, most of them are normal. Most kids with so-called learning handicaps are simply not geared to the type of instruction offered at public schools."

Fernald has no one type of instruction. The school's environment is part fundamental, part open-classroom. Students are not given the freedom to stay away from classes, but they are given many choices for ways to spend their time.

In the discovery lab, a cheerful classroom decorated with student artwork and house plants, students are allowed to work on projects in subject areas that interest them — electronics, black studies or astronomy, for example.

"From here, we are starting to see the kids bring a certain attitude back to the regular classroom," Adelman says. "A kid who's building a model sees he needs to be able to read the directions, so he goes back to the classroom for the chance to pick up the basic skills."

For traditional learning, students are divided by age into four classrooms, with a teacher and teacher's aide in each. UCLA undergraduates in a Learning Problems course spend time at the school as a laboratory exercise; Ph.D. candidates do field work there.

Despite a tuition of $2,900, Fernald has cut across economic lines because the state diverts public funds for children who can't get standard services offered by their local school.

The youngest children at Fernald start their day on the playground, using the excess energy that caused many of their problems in public school. And some may attend school for only one or two hours a day.

"Some kids simply can't function in the classroom," says Linda Taylor, assistant director and UCLA assistant psychology professor. "We have two boys now who arrive late in the day and work with an adviser, doing some academics and talking about what is needed for them to get back into the classroom. That's their whole day right now. These kids are not interested, they are angry and there's nothing they want to learn."

BETTER TWO WET FEET THAN FOUR — Lee Aldredge, 12, finds the going rough, but his buddy, nine-year-old Scott Tart, enjoys a high and dry ride as the two short-cut across a creek during an afternoon's play near Phenix City, Alabama. (AP Laserphoto)

Caterpillar Infestation Said Worst In Decades

By CHARLES S. TAYLOR

ATLANTA (UPI) — Filmy white webs attached to the crotches and limbs of trees mark the worst infestation of the eastern tent caterpiller in 10 years.

Agriculture officials say the onslaught of the caterpillar is worse in the eastern states, particularly the Southeast, but the insect's habitat reaches to the Rocky Mountains.

Motorists traveling along the interstates can see caterpillar webbs by the thousands in the trees. Their high visibility and their invasion of home orchards has touched off hundreds of phone calls to agriculture officials.

The caterpillar is dark, almost black in color, with a white stripe down its back. The stripe is bordered with a reddish orange color. Agriculture officials say they are sometimes confused with the voracious army worms that caused widespread destruction of crops last year.

Fortunately, the eastern tent caterpillar does not represent a serious danger to farmers' crops, according to Carl Scott, director of the entomology division of the Georgia Department of Agriculture.

Their favorite food consists of the leaves of the wild cherry tree, he said, "but they do get into peach, plum and apple trees."

The caterpillar strips the trees of leaves, which later grow back.

Scott said the infestation this year is the worst in 10 years and that reports he has received indicate the problem is as bad in other eastern and southeastern states as it is in Georgia.

He said the biggest threat they pose is to home orchards and the messy situation caused when they leave their webs and crawl all over carports and shrubbery around residences.

"They run in cycles of about 10 years," said Jack Gilchrist, of the Georgia Department of Agriculture's public information office. "This looks like a tremendous year for them. They are everywhere."

"They have created a tremendous amount of interest. Our phones have been jumping off the wall." He said, however, that farmers "don't pay much attention to them."

Scott said weather conditions were just right for the caterpillar this year. "We had an early spring. The trees leafed out early, giving them something to feed on."

After the caterpillars mature in about three or four weeks, they leave the tree and attach themselves to some nearby object, spin a cocoon and develop into a reddish, brown moth. The female deposits her eggs on twigs for next year's generation.

Scott said the agriculture department is suggesting that the insecticide sevin be used to kill the caterpillar. He said it should be sprayed on the webs in the late afternoon, when the caterpillars return from a day of feeding on the tree leaves. Some people also burn them out, he said.

Brown-Middleton Vows Spoken

HENDERSONVILLE — Myra Florinda Middleton and Travis Lee Brown Jr. were married Saturday in the Brunson Memorial Chapel of the First United Methodist Church here in a 2 p.m. double ring ceremony performed by Dr. H. E. Peacock.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence B. Middleton of Hendersonville. She is a graduate of East Carolina University and will be employed by Nash General Hospital as assistant manager of the medical records department. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Travis L. Brown of Hendersonville. He is a graduate of East Carolina University and is manager of McDonalds, Greenville.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a long empire gown of white qiana with long tapered sleeves and a sweetheart neckline accented with imported silk Venise lace and appliques with a chapel length train. She wore an elbow length veil of imported silk illision trimmed in matching lace attached to a modified Camelot cap and carried a bouquet of cascading yellow rose buds and baby's breath.

Maid of honor was Mary B. Gallagher of Charlotte. Bridesmaids were Gloria M. Wagner, Velma P. Middleton, both of Hendersonville and sisters of the bride, and Kathie J. Brown of Monroe, sister of the bridegroom.

The attendants wore gowns of yellow in an empire style with a tie in the back and long cowl necks in front. They each carried a nosegay of yellow and white daisies and wore a comb of flowers in their hair.

Virginia D. Wagner of Hendersonville was flower girl. A niece of the bride, she wore a long yellow dress with attached white apron in front. She wore a headband of yellow and white daisies and carried a white basket of yellow and white daisies.

Gary R. Cassedy of Wilmington, Del., was best man. Ushers were Dennis Hart of Raleigh, Marshall Kirby of Spartanburg, and George Brown of Hendersonville, brother of the bridegroom.

Ring bearer was Ronnie D. Wagner of Hendersonville, nephew of the bride.

A reception was held following the ceremony in the church parlor.

After a wedding trip to St. Thomas, Virgin Islands, the couple will reside in Greenville.

Miss Hatcher, Mr. Stanley Exchange Vows

GARNER — Miss Rhonda Lee Hatcher and Michael Leon Stanley exchanged wedding vows Saturday afternoon at four o'clock in the First Baptist Church here.

The double ring ceremony was performed by the Rev. Charles Tanner. A program of organ music was presented by Kathie Blackwood of Garner. Ron and Debbie Wilkins of Garner sang "Evergreen," "Time in a Bottle" and "The Lord's Prayer."

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Aubrey Lee Hatcher Jr. and Mr. and Mrs. Leon C. Stanley, all of Garner.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a formal gown of white chiffon and reembroidered alencon lace. The empire bodice of English net, appliqued with lace and bridal pearls, featured a scoop neckline and chiffon capelet sleeves. Layers of chiffon formed the chapel train skirt.

She wore a fingertip veil of imported silk illusion bordered with alencon lace and accentuated with lace appliques. The bride carried a cascading bouquet of yellow roses, stephanotis and baby's breath. She wore an opal necklace, a gift of the bridegroom.

The bride graduated from ECU in the School of Social Work and Correctional Services. The bridegroom graduated from ECU in the School of Accounting and Finance.

The honor attendant was Diane Hatcher Aldridge of Raleigh, sister of the bride. Bridemaids were Carolyn Hatcher Pleasants of Rt. 2, Garner, sister or tne bride, Donna Williams, cousin of the bride, Gail Stanley, sister of the bridegroom, and Susan Wilson, all of Garner.

The attendants wore green voile gowns fashioned with an empire bodice, bertha of white chantilly lace and A-line skirt. They carried bouquets of mixed spring flowers and wore a spray of baby's breath in their hair.

The father of the bridegroom was best man and ushers included Steve Stanley of Cerretos, Calif., brother of the bridegroom, David Barfield and Mike Moore, both of Garner, and David Daniel of Knightdale.

The ring bearer was John Aldridge III of Raleigh, nephew of the bride.

A reception was held following the ceremony in the church chapel.

The refreshment table was centered with a five branch silver candelabra decorated with yellow roses and mixed spring flowers. After the traditional cutting of the four-tiered wedding cake, Mrs. Catherine Williams, aunt of the bride, and Mrs. Phyllis Woodard served cake. Mrs. Sandra Poindexter and Mrs. Rose Marie Cobb, cousins of the bride, poured punch.

Lynne and Sarah Poindexter, cousins of the bride, presided at the guest register. Mr. and Mrs. Willard Atkinson said good-byes.

Honored guests included Mrs. Nora V. Hanson, maternal grandmother of the bridegroom, and A. L. Hatcher, paternal grandfather of the bride.

Following the reception, the bride's parents entertained at a champagne party at their home for the wedding party and guests.

A yellow and white color theme was used through the house including a champagne fountain and white doves.

For a wedding trip to Gatlinburg, Tenn., the bride changed into an apricot two-piece suit complemented by a corsage of daisies.

The couple was honored at a rehearsal dinner Friday at the Hickory House Restaurant, Garner, given by the parents of the bridegroom.

The bride was remembered with a corsage of spring flowers.

A unity candle was used during the ceremony. The bride presented each mother a long-stemmed red rose after leaving the altar. The couple planned their ceremony including passages from "The Prophet" and the traditional wedding vows.

Couple Weds Saturday In Chapel Hill Rites

CHAPEL HILL — Olin T. Binkley Baptist Church here was the scene of the Saturday wedding ceremony of Susan Montgomery Sanderford and Dennis Dale Bercini of Greenville.

Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Lyon Sanderford Sr. of Chapel Hill, the bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore a gown of qiana trimmed in Guipure lace fashioned with an empire bodice, traditional sleeves, Victorian collar and chapel sweep train. Her picture hat was trimmed in matching lace.

The high noon ceremony was performed by Dr. Robert E. Seymour Jr. A program of organ music was presented by Mrs. Robert E. Seymour of Chapel Hill.

The bridegroom is the son of Mrs. Delores Congelli of Sanford.

The honor attendant was Ms. Kathy McKee of Atlanta, Ga. Her ensemble of green polyester was designed with an empire bodice and short sleeves.

The ushers were Paul Carter of Sanford, brother-in-law of the bridegroom, and Jim Sanderford of Chapel Hill, brother of the bride.

The bride and bridegroom are both graduates of East Carolina University.

After a wedding trip to the coast, the couple will live in Greenville.

Immediately following the ceremony, the bride's parents entertained at a reception at the Horace Williams House, Chapel Hill.

A rehearsal dinner was held at the Holiday Day, Chapel Hill, Friday. Hosts and hostesses were Mr. and Mrs. H. R. Sanderford of Whiteville, Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Johnson and Mr. and Mrs. Ted Johnson of Rowland, Mr. and Mrs. John Church of Henderson, Mr. and Mrs. Jim Sanderford Jr. of Chapel Hill and Jerry Johnson of Rowland.

Couple Marries Saturday In Wares Chapel Church

WASHINGTON — The wedding ceremony of Kimberly Michele Randalls, daughter of the Rev. and Mrs. Robert Francis Randalls, and Gardner Craig Smith, son of Mr. and Mrs. Erwin Gardner Smith of Fairfield, was solemnized Saturday at 3:00 p.m.

The Rev. Richard T. Commander performed the double ring ceremony in the Wares Chapel United Methodist Church. A program of wedding music was presented by Mrs. Carolyn S. Harris of Swan Quarter, organist, and Miss Bettina Smathers of Candler, soloist.

The bride was given in marriage by her parents and escorted by her father.

The maid of honor was Bethany Randalls of Washington, sister of the bride. Miss Kimberly Smith of Fairfield, sister of the bridegroom, Miss Bettina Smathers of Candler, cousin of the bride, and Mrs. Vicky Cutrell of Swan Quarter were bridesmaids.

The father of the bridegroom served as best man and ushers included Joshua Randalls, brother of the bride, and Stevie Cutrell, both of Swan Quarter, and Charles Sears of Fairfield, uncle of the bridegroom.

The flower girl was Leigh Anne Smathers of Candler, cousin of the bride, and the ring bearer was Marcus Moore of Lumberton, nephew of the bride.

Junior ushers were Andrew Randalls of Washington, brother of the bride, and Daryl Smith of Fairfield, brother of the bridegroom.

The bride wore a formal gown of candlelight silk organza over peau de soie. The bodice was accented with Venise lace medallions bordering a high neckline. The full bishop sleeves and A-line skirt were fashioned with chantilly lace. The Venise lace medallions bordered the edge of the chapel length train and flowed down the skirt.

Her chapel length veil was attached to a crown of pearlized beads with illusion puffs. The bride carried a cascading bouquet of bridal roses, coral tinted statice and ivy tied with candlelight streamers of satin ribbon tied in love knots.

The honor attendant was wearing a formal coral dress of crepe backed satin fashioned with a gathered neckline that fell into an elbow length cape. The dress featured a cummberbund effect waistline which tied in the back. She wore a silk apricot bow accented with a matching flower and streamers and carried a nosegay of coral tinted pom pons and statice tied with candlelight streamers.

The attendants were dressed like the honor attendant and carried nosegays of white pom pons and coral tinted statice tied with candlelight streamers.

The flower girl's dress was styled similar to the attendants' in a coral, yellow and green floral. She wore a matching headpiece and carried a basket of petals and wore a wrist corsage of tinted pom pons.

After a wedding trip to unannounced points, the couple will live in Farmville.

The bridal couple are both graduates of Mattamuskeet High School. She is a graduate of Pitt Tech and is employed by Pitt County Memorial Hospital. The bridegroom is a graduate of Pitt Tech and is employed by Pfizer Genetics, Farmville.

A reception was held in the church fellowship hall.

The bride's table was adorned with an arrangement of mixed coral flowers and burning coral tapers in a epergne with ivy and statice. The bride's book was placed on a table which also featured the bridal portrait and a coral taper. The tables were covered with floor length cloths and an overlay of coral net.

Mother Shocked By Teen's Letter

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1978 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: I am so upset I hardly know how to start this letter. While straightening up my teen-age daughter's room, I came across a letter from a friend of hers in another state. I read it, partly out of curiousity, and partly to determine if it was something that could be discarded.

I was horrified at the filthy language, and also at the girl's delight in having found a theater that shows only dirty movies!

This letter also described family possessions and "vacations," but Abby, I know the girl's parents and correspond with them, and this girl was writing lies.

What should I do? Now I suspect that my daughter must be responding to these letters in equally filthy language, and since this girl is my daughter's best friend, I must assume that my daughter's tastes run toward dirty movies, too.

Don't these kids know that filling their minds and mouths with garbage will do them no good?

Should I write to this girl's mother and tell her to talk with her daughter? Should I talk with my daughter and tell her what I've learned? Or are we too late to shape our children's morals once they've reached their teens?

CONCERNED MOTHER

DEAR CONCERNED: If you have done your best to shape your daughter's morals, you need not consider yourself a "failure." Some teenagers feel "big" and grown-up using gutter language, exaggerating and even lying a little for effect, but that doesn't mean they are "no good." If they have been properly brought up (and even the best-reared children sometimes go through this stage), they will outgrow it.

At the appropriate time, subtly warn your daughter that mucking around in the lower registers of speech and entertainment can be habit forming. In the meantime, keep the avenues of communication open between you and your daughter, and don't shake her confidence in you by letting her know that you were snooping. You were, you know.

DEAR ABBY: I am new in this community and have made many lovely new friends. I met a lady at church and invited her to my home for coffee and cake. It was then that I discovered that she is either a thief or a kleptomaniac, for when I went into the kitchen for a moment, and suddenly returned, I saw her open her large purse and drop my silver spoon and fork into it.

You can't imagine how shocked I was! Now I do not want to make a big issue of it by preferring charges against her, but I do want my silverware back as those pieces are sterling silver and are part of my set. Do I dare ask her to return them? And if so, how? I have told no one and do not intend to.

NEW IN TOWN

DEAR NEW: You are considerate, compassionate and wise. Telephone the lady and tell her you saw her take your silverware and would appreciate her returning it. Then tell her that you know there are people who have a compulsion to take things, which is an illness, so you "understand," will tell no one, and hope that she will seek professional help.

Do you wish you had more friends? For the secret of popularity, get Abby's new booklet: "How To Be Popular; You're Never Too Young or Too Old." Send $1 with a long, self-addressed, stamped (24 cents) envelope to Abby, 132 Lasky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.

On The Local Scene

by Rosalie Trotman

Extensive travel throughout the world and working in education, teaching, counseling, advertising and free lance writing in Japan and various countries are some of the things Donna Roberson has been doing since living in Greenville.

She began work at "San Diego Magazine" Feb. 23, 1976. She quickly rose to the position of most productive account executive-advertising sales — handling the major accounts within all categories in Metropolitan San Diego.

Within a year she was promoted to assistant advertising director in charge of local sales. In this capacity, she assumed additional duties of training sales people, motivating and trouble shooting problem areas.

In November, 1977, she was again recognized and chosen to head the magazine's new office in Solana Beach, Calif., as advertising manager. This was the magazine's first branch office and it services all of North County — the primary growth area of San Diego County.

"San Diego Magazine" is published monthly and its format is in general family living areas. It's circulation was listed at 32,500 at the end of last year.

Every month subscribers look to the magazine for advice on where to dine, what plays and movies to see, where to travel and what to buy. The magazine also gives analyses of what goes on in the government, financial, real estate, industrial, business and cultural world of its region.

Donna, who lives in La Jolla, Calif., does some modeling and has her California real estate license. Some of her interests are traveling, music, photography, outdoor sports, interior decorating and sailing.

She is a graduate of Rose High School and East Carolina University. Her parents are Mr. and Mrs. Irving Roberson of Island View Shores, located near Bath. Her sister, Christy, lives in Greenville.

ADAP Clients Honored At Dinner By Chapter

A picnic dinner with the clients from the ADAP Center ended the month for the Alpha Omega Chapter of Epsilon Sigma Alpha.

The main course was prepared and served by Alpha Omega and the clients from ADAP served dessert made by Mary Porter and Leigh Galloway, who learned to prepare the pies through special training at the ADAP Center. During the dinner, several clients told of their planned trip to High Point for the Special Olympics.

A business meeting followed the dinner at the home of Mildred Hecker. President Louise Spain read a letter of thanks from State Vice President Jean Long. Ways and Means Chairman Shirley Westbrook reported on the recent hog dog sale. Proceeds will be used for chapter philantropic projects.

Philanthropic Chairperson Joan Robinson announced medicine bills had been paid for an indigent person from special funds. She was praised for her services as chairperson. Nellie Taylor, scholarship chairperson, reported proceeds from the bake sale had been sent to the state scholarship fund. Social Chairperson Barbara Zicherman reported on a special founder's day brunch held jointly by Alpha Omega and Gamma Delta Chapters of ESA.

Mrs. Ruebell Goin, president of Gamma Delta Chapter, gave a program reminding sisters of their heritage. The chapters will jointly sponsor a new ESA Chapter for young women of ECU. Frances Cassick and Mrs. Goin of Gamma Delta and Shirley Westbrook of Alpha Omega will steer the committee. Mrs. Zicherman told of the "spring fling" held last week for husbands and wives at the Colonial Inn, Farmville.

President Spain announced Mr. and Mrs. Woody Peele, Mr. and Mrs. Jim Woods, Mr. and Mrs. Hubert Westbrook, Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Spain, Mrs. Dorothy Wells and Mrs. Zicherman will attend the state convention to be held in Wilmington May 26-28.

The installation of new officers will be held June 15 at the Three Steers. The meeting ended with a social hour and secret sisters were revealed.

Eastern Motifs Make Comeback

ST. PAUL, Minn. (UPI) — Wovens matched with prints and Oriental and Eastern motifs are making a strong comeback on upholstered furniture for fall, says Mary Lou Rooney, consumer education specialist for a manufacturer of fabric protector products.

Until now, she said, Persian, Thai, Chinese and Japanese motifs have been used largely to bridge contemporary and traditional looks. Reviewing a recent fabric market, Ms. Rooney said the appeal of wovens represents a movement toward easy fabric care and maintenance. She said mills are treating more fabrics with chemical finishes that resist watery and oily based spills as well as dirt.

She said prints run the gamut from delicate florals to bold, dramatic scenics.

For good flavor slowly heat canned black-eyed peas with a bay leaf, a sprig of dried thyme, a whole clove and several sprigs of parsley. Add lots of black pepper and serve with corn bread made without sugar.

SOY BROWN BREAD

Moist and delicious.

1 cup fine wholewheat flour
1 cup soy flour
½ cup all-purpose white flour
2 teaspoons baking soda
1 teaspoon salt
2 cups milk blended with 2 tablespoons lemon juice
½ cup molasses
1 cup raisins

Generously butter the entire insides of four tall round 16 or 17-ounce cans from fruit or vegetables. In a medium bowl stir together the flours, soda and salt. Add the milk mixture and the molasses; beat gently just until dry ingredients are moistened; stir in the raisins. Turn into the prepared cans, filling each about two-thirds full. Place directly on center rack of a preheated 350-degree oven and bake until a cake tester inserted in the center comes out clean — about 40 minutes. Let stand on a wire rack for about 10 minutes; loosen edges and turn out. Serve warm. Makes 4 loaves.

Cooked chopped broccoli tastes particularly delicious when it is added to a cheddar cheese sauce.

Couple Weds In Lawn Ceremony

KINSTON — Carol Anne Hodges became the bride of Marvin Keith Rosemond at two o'clock in the afternoon Saturday on the lawn of her parents' home.

Claude Barrett, former Methodist minister, officiated the double ring ceremony before a white lattice background and altar with wicker baskets filled with spring flowers.

The bride was given in marriage by her parents. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fodie Harding Hodges of Kinston. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Franklin Rosemond of Hillsborough.

The bride wore a formal gown of white eyelet. The gown was sleeveless and featured a scoop neckline with a wide bertha collar. The fitted bodice with an empire waistline had an overlay skirt and attached chapel length train. The collar, overlay, skirt and train were embroidered. Her bouquet was of pastel colored rosebuds, white daisies accented witb baby's breath and pastel ribbon streamers.

The maid of honor was Betsy Hodges, sister of the bride, and Julia Rosemond of Hillsborough, sister of the bridegroom, was bridesmaid.

The father of the bridegroom was best man and Stephen Rosemond of Hillsborough, brother of the bridegroom, was usher.

The bride is a graduate of Kinston High School, Peace College, University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill and has done graduate work at ECU. She is a teacher of art in the Pitt County Schools.

The bridegroom is a graduate of Hillsborough High School and attended the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. He is a planning technician at Orange County Planning Department.

After a wedding trip to unannounced points, the couple will make their home in Hillsborough.

A reception following the ceremony was given by the bride's parents.

A wedding breakfast was given for the bridal party, family and out-of-town guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. O. A. Ritch Jr.

Hosts and hostesses were Mrs. B. E. Dale, Dr. and Mrs. F. Payne Dale, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Davenport, Mrs. W. L. Fay, Mr. and Mrs. Herman C. Moore Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Roland L. Paylor Jr., Mr. and Mrs. A. S. Proctor and Mr. and Mrs. O Ritch.

A rehearsal dinner was held at a local restaurant by the parents of the bridegroom following the Friday rehearsal.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

When I am recycled and come back into this world, I want to come as one of those people who are ahead of their time before it's fashionable.

You know the ones I'm talking about. The ones who are the first to deplore a war . . . who played tennis before it was "in" . . . who predicted their U.S. Senator would end up serving time before he won . . . who bought property along the beach when it was $1 an acre . . . who predicted 20 years ago that New York would go broke.

Some people are just meant to be pacesetters. Me? All I ever see is the rear end of a trend going out.

I never got to the "Islands" before they were open to "anyone."

I was the last to discover white wine.

The last to wear my sunglasses on top of my head.

The last to read "Roots."

The last to "get in touch with my feelings."

In fact, I don't know how I'm going to feel about anything until a bumper sticker comes out on it.

At a cocktail party the other night, I engaged in conversation with a physical fitness freak.

"Pound this stomach," he instructed, his entire body constricted.

I hesitated.

"Go ahead. Punch it with your fist! Is that a solid wall of muscle?"

I had to agree.

"I hope you're keeping your body in shape," he admonished.

"Oh, I am. I have this thing that hooks over the doorknob that I limber up on."

"You're kidding. That's passe."

"Actually, it belongs to one of the kids. I personally have a book on Air Force exercises . . ."

"Air Force! What do they know about fitness?"

"Which is exactly why I threw the book away. I'm into bicycling now and . . ."

"Bicycling was good in its time."

"I couldn't agree more. That's why I changed to tennis."

"Which is on its way out," he said. "Nothing does it as far as I'm concerned like jogging. It gets the old juices going. I want to see you out there tomorrow morning as if your health depended on it."

The next morning I wheezed and panted my way down the street in front of my house. At the turn I could see about 50 bodies kicking up the dust as they took a lead on me. I wondered if I was seeing the rear end of another trend . . . or was that just wishful thinking?

Cooking Is Fun

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

DEAR CECILY: I'm thinking of buying one of the new electric ice-cream machines you can put on a counter and use whole ice cubes and regular salt in. I like the idea of choosing my own ingredients and experimenting with different flavors. Do you think such an appliance is worthwhile? — ADVENTUROUS.

DEAR ADVENTUROUS: We tried the most reasonably priced of these ice-cream machines and it worked well. We liked the fact that it is simple to assemble, its parts are easy to wash and dry and it's a convenient size.

Because you mentioned your interest in experimenting, we did just that. The recipe we tried is an unusual combination of coffee and almond flavors — with the almond taking over. Two of our tasters were British, another from New Zealand. They enjoyed the pronounced almond flavor because it reminded them of the thick marzipan frosting that covers sumptuous fruit cakes in their homelands. A couple of French tasters thought the ice cream deliciously creamy but the almond flavoring didn't go over with them — they said they would prefer all-coffee. Chacun a son gout! — C. B.

COFFEE ALMOND ICE CREAM

1 pint heavy cream
1 pint light cream
1½ teaspoons vanilla extract
1 teaspoon almond extract
1 cup sugar
2 tablespoons instant coffee
¼ teaspoon salt

Assemble an electric countertop ice-cream machine according to the manufacturer's directions. Pour both kinds of cream and the extracts into the cream can. In a bowl stir together the sugar, instant coffee and salt; add to the cream mixture and stir until dissolved. Process according to manufacturer's directions. Makes about 2 quarts.

DOWNTOWN

FORECAST FOR SUNDAY, MAY 21, 1978

Your Daily HOROSCOPE
from the CARROLL RIGHTER INSTITUTE

GENERAL TENDENCIES: The oncoming Full Moon is not good for you to take any chances now. Do not allow yourself the luxury of having any uncompromising views for if you do, you can easily estrange others and have a difficult time in later reconciling any separations.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Try not to commit yourself to any further expense, but pay pressing bills instead. Avoid arguing with mate, loved one. Concentrate on whatever is charming and beautiful. Think positive.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Your partners are not in a good mood today, so be with others until they are feeling better. Do not get into any arguments where a civic matter is concerned. Be most careful when out driving.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Get work done alone without expecting help from others, but don't overdo. Take time for pleasant visits. Get home fixed nicely so that you are proud of it.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) If you are courteous and charming to others, you avoid arguments and can have a pleasant day. Don't overspend for pleasure, but stay within your budget.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Don't bring up any controversial subjects at home, where tempers are apt to be short. Study into a new venture but don't jump right into it, as yet. Be wise.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Use particular care in driving since others might be careless. Go after data you need in a quiet way from dependable sources. Avoid one who has an eye on your assets.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) A good time to instil economy measures, whether you think you need them or not. Don't take chances but listen to what a bigwig has to suggest. Think along more constructive lines.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) You have ideas that could get you into trouble, so forget them now, and don't be forceful with others. Steer clear of a group affair where arguments could arise. Home is best bet.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Although you may feel limited, this is no day for you to rant and rave, but to plan quietly how to better your lot in life. Clear the deck for action later.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Your pals are in no mood to be helpful today so get things done on your own. Plan how to become more independent in the future also. You have more ability than you think.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) You have to be particularly cautious in the handling of worldly affairs now. Don't jeopardize your position with bigwigs by wrong words, actions. Be careful of your reputation.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to March 20) Not a good time to get started on a new interest or you meet with failure. You have made new contacts that can be good for you in the future. Forget those who have been drawbacks to you.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will show ability at trouble-shooting and should have the education slanted along such lines. Teach to be objective and give an opportunity to solve problems. Your progeny will have the ability to get at the truth of any situation and this can lead to much success and fame, and is one who can bring order out of chaos.

FORECAST FOR MONDAY, May 22, 1978

GENERAL TENDENCIES: You can easily make some definite changes for the good, especially where your philosophy of life is concerned, so be alert to a new set of circumstances under which to operate in the future.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) You want to engage in something appealing but be sure to first obtain more data regarding this interest. Avoid trouble.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Study how to handle responsibilities more efficiently which can help you advance in your line of endeavor. Express happiness.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Listen to what a good pal has to say about a mutual interest and how to improve it. Follow the advice of a loyal friend.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Be sure not to make any investments at this time. Take steps to reach a better understanding with fellow workers.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Get in touch with congenials and make early arrangements with whom you want to participate in fun activities later in the day.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Be sure not to criticize family members or real trouble could result. A new technique can make your efforts more profitable.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Go to the right sources for the data you need. Come to a better understanding with loved one. Be more kind with everyone.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Your thinking about finances is accurate at this time and you can do much to improve your position in life. Be logical.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Don't be hasty in going after your aims at this time since a quiet, measured pace brings in more benefits. Be wise.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) You have to plan carefully now if you wish to achieve your aims. Be more thoughtful of your mate and get better results.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) You have to use tact with your friends today if you are to gain their assistance. Take steps to safeguard you health.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Study your career and civic affairs well and contact higher-ups who can help you with them. Handle a business matter wisely.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will be interested in world affairs and will want to do a great deal of travelling during lifetime, preferably for business purposes, so direct the education along such lines. Make sure that religion is taught early in life.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to YOU!

Batman's Tips On Getting Rid Of Bats

By ELAINE APOSTOLA

AUGUSTA, Maine (UPI) — Forget Bruce Wayne. Bob Martin is Batman.

"I'm glad I don't study rats. Batman is a lot nicer than Ratman," says Martin, a University of Maine at Farmington biology professor and a recognized authority on bats.

Martin, who has studied bats in more than 40 countries, is an adviser to a set of Maine state government officials who protect bats from people and people from bats.

"When traveling in Venezuala my students showed up with four Spanish version Batman comic books and stuck them in my sleeping bag," said Martin.

Donald F. Mairs and Robert Batteese of Maine's Department of Agriculture Pesticide Control Board, and Frank Gramlick of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service's Wildlife Assistance Division are the state's experts on bats.

Martin helps both the state agency, which tried to protect humans from the possible misuse of pesticides sprayed to control troublesome bats, and the federal office, which acts more as a protector of the mammals which they say are useful and needed.

Bats are not as dangerous as people think, Martin said. Of the seven species of bats found in Maine, two — the large brown and small brown bats — dwell in houses. He said the large brown bat is big and can bite people.

"People have a vampire complex about bats," Mairs said.

"And there is the rabies scare," Martin adds. "But there have been only 14 cases in all of history of a man dying from being bitten from a rabid bat." Gramlick said in his 12 years of working with bats in Maine he knows of only one person who had even been bitten by a rabid bat. He said there is a greater risk of being bitten by a neighbor's rabid dog or being struck by lightning.

They said a colony of about 100 bats took up residency in the State Capitol at one time. Since state employees are not usually around at night, nobody paid much attention until one was found asleep on a sofa in the office of Gov. James B. Longely.

The creature was caught and set free outdoors, and talk turned to exterminating the colony. It was decided that such a move would cost too much and bats are said to still occasionally coast up and the down the halls of power.

Martin said bats seem to come out more this time of year because of the change in weather "or when the rhetoric in the Statehouse gets too high."

Gramlick said bats are beneficial and play an important part in eliminating insects, especially certain types of moths harmful to state forests.

"If you like mosquitoes and black flies then you should go around killing bats," Martin said.

"But a lot of people don't like sharing their house with 300 bats," Mairs said.

Batteese said the quickest way to get rid of bats is by using pesticide, but warns that this solution might be expensive and not always effective.

Before using peiticides, exterminators must get a permit from the state. Gramlick said many exterminators prefer the speed of using the chemical Rozol, the only known effective chemical elimination treatment of bats. But he said it could cost several hundred dollars for an exterminator to solve a bat problem.

Officials agreed the only method of permanent control is by shutting up their entrance to the structure. "Tightening up a house is cheap and usually permanent," they said.

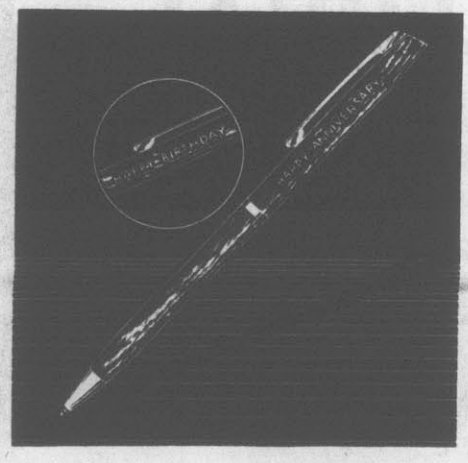

Gramlick said this can be done at dusk when most bats leave a building. Once the entrance is blocked the bats will move on to another location.

Corruption Rationalized By Indonesia

JAKARTA, Indonesia (UPI) — Getting a piece of the action, as it is known in the West, is so much a part of the Indonesian way of life it may never be fully eradicated.

The national attitude helps account for — if it does not fully explain — allegations of government graft and corruption that formed part of an unsuccessful university student campaign to get President Suharto to step down as the only candidate for the next five-year term in elections held in March.

There are many reasons why what would be considered graft, corruption or misuse of power in the West are more acceptable practices in Indonesia.

These range from "speed-up" money for getting the job done, to the teachings of a Javanese form of mysticism which says its practitioners have a divine right to give and receive gifts — even munificent ones — but not to grasp for them.

An American banker said it is difficult to determine how much graft and how much corruption make up financial abuse of power in Indonesia. He defined grafts as "getting something big or small from somebody who would be doing it in the normal way of things but not as speedily."

Corruption he defined as "getting something from somebody for doing something you shouldn't do." He said he believed most malpractice in Indonesia falls under the graft category.

"In terms of Javanese mysticism, practiced by many persons in high government including President Suharto and his family, it is good to extend and receive favors as long as it is with good heart and intentions and for the good of the community," a journalistic source said.

"This could even be stretched within the mystical rules to see no ill in, say, Mrs. Suharto helping a new enterprise get started by using her influence to get it favorable loan treatment at the bank and then accepting in return a share in that enterprise comparable to the effort she made," he said.

A former newspaper editor now in private industry said there was little doubt Mrs. Suharto and members of the family had helped businesses and industries in various ways.

"How much of the profit has been accrued by them personally, or whether in accepting trusteeships in these endeavors most of the profits were set aside for the benefit of the general community, is something that is just impossible to discover under our present system," the former editor said.

Suharto said recently he and his family had control of as much as $150 million but added that it was all held in taust in various foundtions for the good of the people.

"Government officials have access to special information on what development is coming up and where," the former editor observed. "They can obtain in many cases the land involved by buying it cheaply before the project is announced and selling it later at great profit to the eventual user. They don't have to take a single bribe or milk the treasury to accumulate riches."

The government, which re - cently acknowledged thao abuses have occurred und are continuing, has re-instituted a drive under the nation's security chief to root out corruption and misuse of power — an exercise dubbed "mission impossible" by one publication, meahning the drive always stops short of top offenders.

"The present ruling circle is tinted with an aura of mysticism," said a Wester diplomat. "Many of them, including the Suharto family, take guidance from a group shadowy figures known as Dukun, who would be called gurus in other parts of 'the world."

The diplomat said the Dukun often are de facto personal assistants to government leaders including Suharto, who is said to consult with two of them particularly.

Probably the best known case of a high echelon official emerging virtually unscathed from a corruption probe is that of Lt. Getn. Ibnu Sutowo, former sdirector of the national oil monopoly organization, Pertamina. Until a 1976 scandal and shakeup, Pertamina was operated as an almost independent fiefdom outside government control by Sutowo, who not only controlled every phase of its oil operations but branched out into a variety of non-oil projects in which other generals and officials were given lucrative posts.

The company eventually almost collapssed under Sutowo's command, suffering losses of almost $11 billion and more than $2 billion in unpaid debts the government had to pay.

So powerful was his position among the elite that Sutowo was given a year to clean up the mess. Suharto finally dismissed him and placed him under house arrest pending an investigation of his entangled affairs.

Today, Sutowo is still officially under house arrest but is frequently seen on golf courses around Southeast Asia and at social functions in Jakarta. And there has been no report on the probe into his affairs.

Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Skateboard Makers Gross Big With Zooming Market Growth

By STEVE CAPPS

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — "We're doing a million dollars a month and we're just getting started."! Not an idle statement by an overzealous promoter, but reality in the skateboard business.

Similar statements — and the gross sales figures to back them up — lend credence to success stories that sound like he American dream come true.

Steve McAnlis, vice-president of Hobie Skateboards in Orange County, is the one who said he's doing a million dollars a month and he expects the company's gross sales will continue to climb.

Hobie, which began manufacturing surfboards in the early 1950s, first seriously entered the skateboard business in 1976, although it had made some models during the initial "boom" in the early 1960s, McAnlis said.

Gross sales of Hobie skateboards in 1976 were $400,000, McAnlis said. They climbed to $6 million in 1977 and McAnlis matter-of-factly predicts sales to 0reach the $12-to15 million range this year.

David McIntyre, an executive of Gordon and Smith plastic products manufacturers, said his company has also experienced phenomenal growth in its skateboard division.

The San Diego company was formed in 1958 and made its first skateboard in 164.

But, like other manufacturers, sales durig tha time were short-lived. While innovations were made in the design of boards, the wheel and trucks that supported them were not much different from those found on skates.

"I can remember my first skateboard," McIntyre said. "If you rode down the sidewalk and hit a little pebble, you were dead."

But the introduction of the softer urethane wheels in the early 1970s gave skateboards a new smoothness of ride, even on rough surfaces, and the industry began its second — and current — "boom."

Edward LeCocq, a spokesman for Torque Skateboards, said the industry is continuing to advance technologically.

"What we're doing with high performance boards today is phenomenal," he said. "The technology wasn't even available when skateboards first came out. That's why those were toys and these are pieces of sporting equipment."

The advanced technology has resulted in a wide variety of boards, wheels and trucks, allowing skaters to build their own boards by buying individual components to fit their tastes and skills.

Gordon and Smith manufactures and sells the components to 1,200 retail outlets throughout the country and reported gross sales in 1976 at $2.4 million and $5 million the following year.

This year, according to McIntyre, the company expects its sales to reach $10 million.

He said the company is also finding new markets in Europe and the sport has "caught on exceptionally fast over there."

Martin Mazner, publisher of Skateboard Industry News, said he expects the industry to keep growing but not at the same rate it has over the past three years.

"Sure, there are people who are doing 300-to-400 percent growth per year," he said. "But the first growth has already taken place for most people. The industry should grow in 1978 from 45 to 50 percent."

Skateparks are another reason the industry continues to expand, Mazner said, and park developers have been quick to capitalize on the popularity.

Mazner said there are about 150 parks throughout the country and several developers have expressed interest in building indoor parks in the eastern United States so skaters there can enjoy the sport year-round like Californians.

One of the largest outdoor skateboard parks just opened in San Diego.

Oasis Skatepark is located under an interchange of Interstate 805. The builder, William Hanson, has leased four acres from the state government under a program where nonusable highway right-of-way is offered for lease to private firms.

Hanson said he spent $300,000 on the project — not an unusual amount, according to Mazner. One-fifth of that went for the concrete that forms the various "courses".

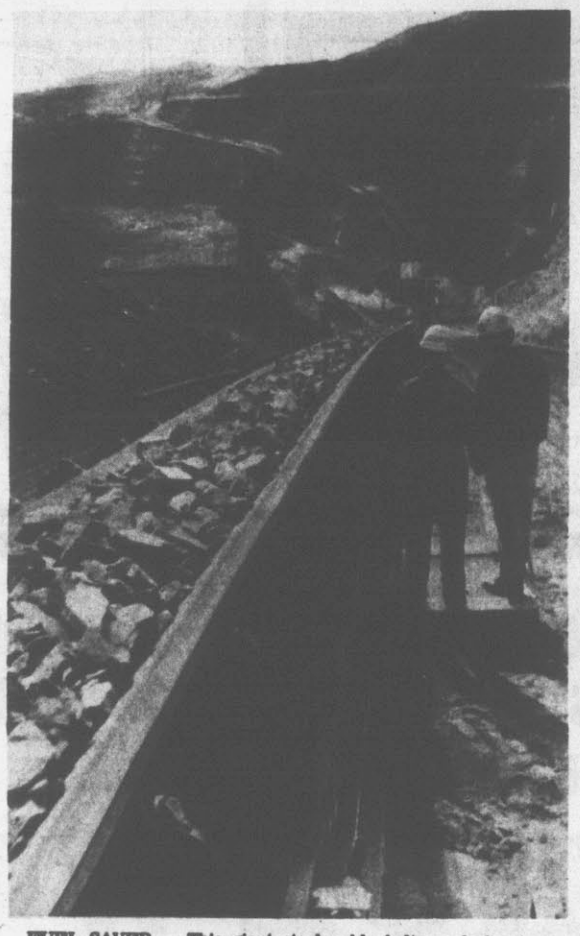

The park, said Hanson, is similiar to most in the types of features offered — half-pipes, pools and straightaways — but is unique because it provides six different courses so skaters of all abilities can enjoy the park safely.

"Little kids go out there (other parks) and they try to skate and there's just no way they can do it," he said. "But anybody till be able to skate here."

Like other parks, saftey gear is required to be worn at Oasis and if a skater doesn't have it, he can rent it for 25 cents an item. Hanson also rents skateboards.

Hanson, a retired building contractor, said he does not ride skateboards and doesn't plan on taking up the sport.

"Yeah, I think we'll make money," he said. "At least I hope so. We've got a few bills to pay around here."

FUEL SAVER — This giant steel cable belt, made by the Goodyear Co., part of a giant conveyor system at the Duval Sierrita copper mine near Tucson, Ariz., does the job of a dozen 120-ton trucks. The belting can move up to 6,400 tons of ore an hour and, according to Duval, will result in a $31 million savings over the next 10 years. (AP Laserphoto)

Sees Threshold Of Big Revival

CHAPPAQUA, N.Y. (AP) — North America "is on the threshold of a major religious revival," writes David Kucharsky, the new editor of the Christian Herald, now marking its 100th anniversary.

Citing an upsurge of evangelism, prayer and Bible study groups, religious books sales, Christian broadcasting stations, recordings and other indications, he adds: "It is once again 'respectable' to talk about religion."

Kucharsky became editor of the magazine at the turn of the year after previously being managing editor of the fortnightly Christianity Today.

A FACE SAD AND SENSITIVE . . . Lorraine Moore, an eighth grader at G. R. Whitfield School is the artist of this portrait of a young man with large, sad eyes. The portrait is done in crayons.

LIKE A YOUNG MATISSE . . . Ayden Grammer School eighth grader Josie Braxton is the artist responsible for this effectively simple study of five figures — one down and four standing — made with black paper cut-outs pasted to an off-white background.

The Eternal Appeal Of Children's Art

Text And Photographs By Jerry Raynor

The current show of children's art at the Greenville Art Center—in this case that of students from kindergarten through grade eight in 16 Pitt County Schools—is one more revelation of the instinctive ability children have to create fascinating works of art.

Drawings, paintings, sculpture, constructions reveal the way children feel about the bigger people and the physical world about them—in moods that are tender, pensive, comical, and occasionally, in being frightened by what they see of the adult world.

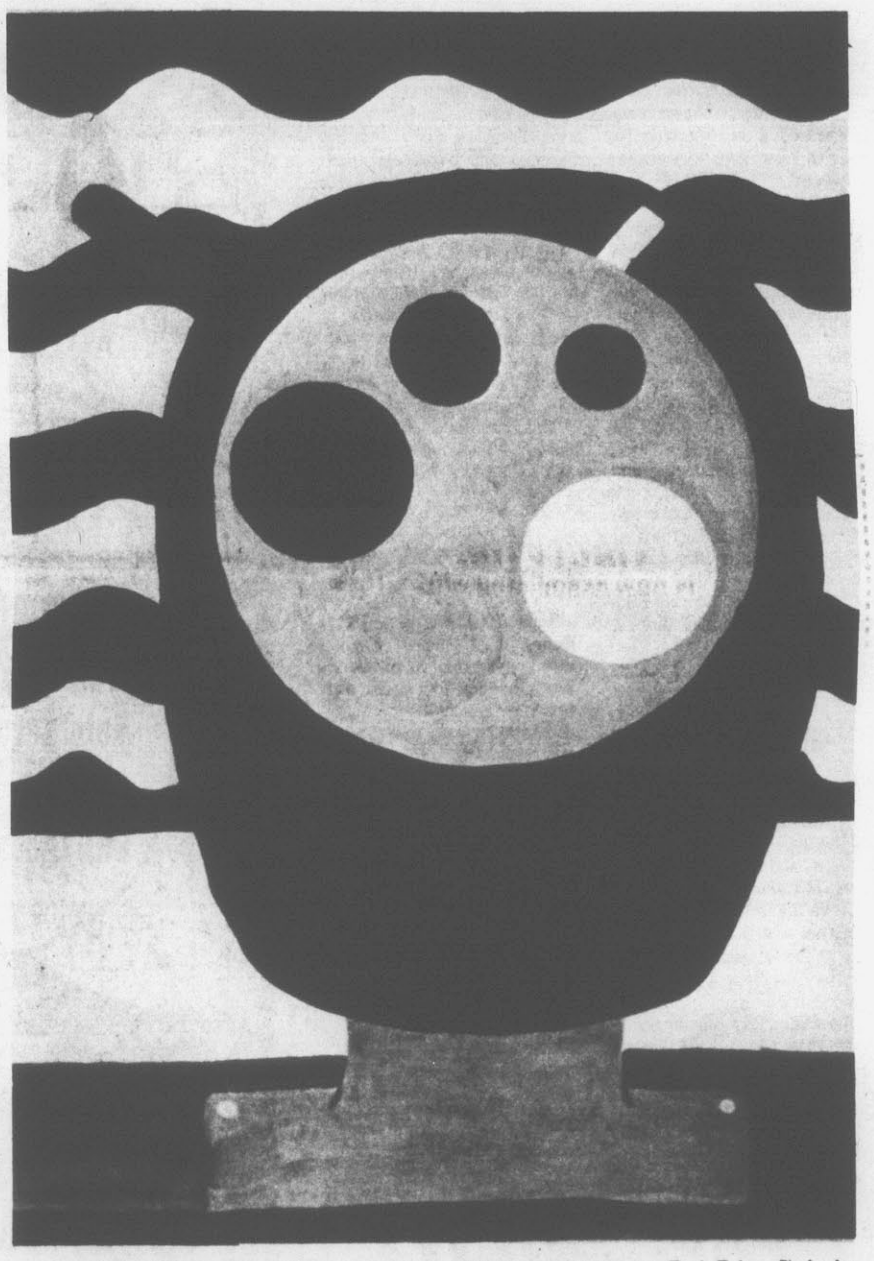

As young artists facing the challenge of expressing themselves in their responses to people and in reactions to objects, they have the wonderful knack of disregarding established precepts that later will funnel their artisitc abilities into more restrictive channels. For now, they happily combine colors, form, patterns, relying on their intuition.

Altogether, the visual and emotional impact is one that deeply conveys the eternal appeal and vitality of a child's capability to express himself in creative terms.

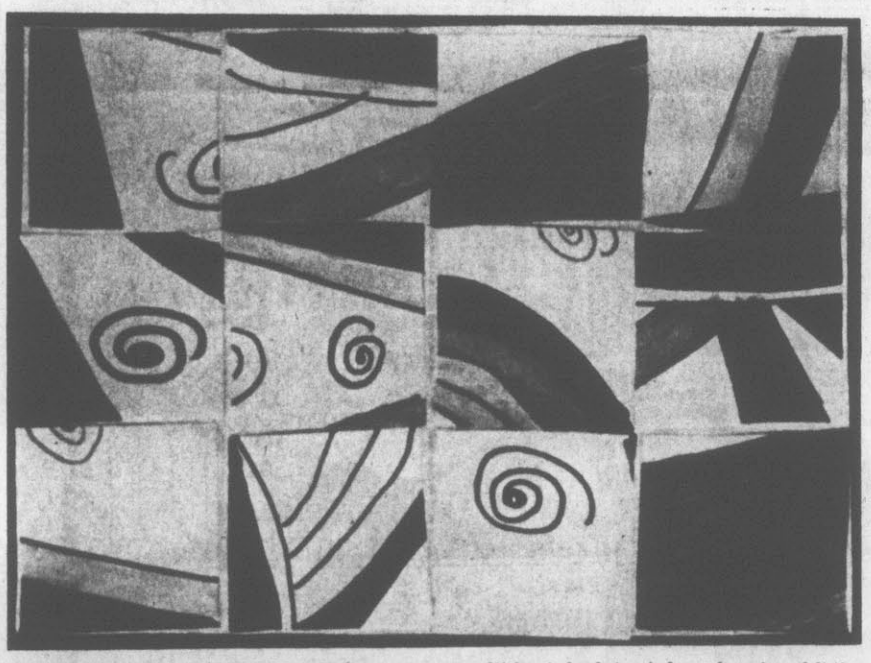

This superb show of children's art will be on view for a few more days only—through Wednesday, May 24, and possibly for an additional day on May 25.

Like it's preceding counterpart, the show by elementary students of the Greenville City Schools, it is a magnificant spring entertainment, rich in many unexpected rewards.

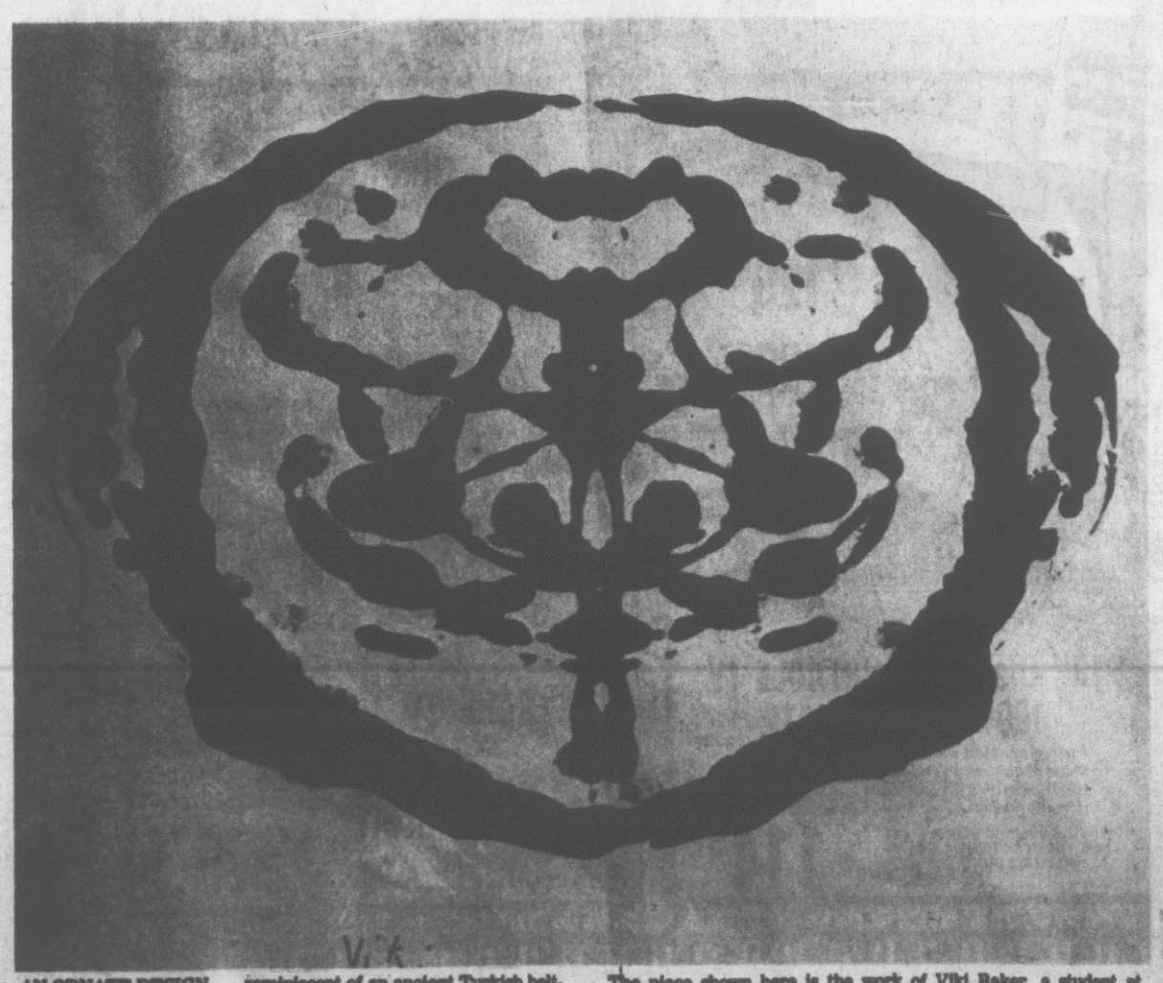

Art Center hours are 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. daily. Area people wanting a touch of bright color in this rainy season will do well to see what these Pitt County young people have achieved.

A SIMPLE OBJECT . . . A pencil sharperner is the model for this bold, expressive art work by Grifton's eight grader Toni Price. It is in tempera and acrylic.

ABSTRACTION IN MINIATURE . . . Sixth grade student Tammy Matthews of Bethel Elementary School is the artist who created this fine small multi-faceted abstracted work using felt-tip markers

AN ORNATE DESIGN . . . reminiscent of an ancient Turkish belt-buckle is a tempera controlled accidental design made by spreading color on a sheet, then folding it to duplicate the design. The piece shown here is the work of Viki Baker, a student at Falkland Elementary School

A PUDDLE PAINTING. . . Obviously inspired by the contemporary weather in Pitt County, Sam Bundy School second grader used colored papers and crayons to create this delightful "puddle picture" — with a small child's happy disregard for the fact reflections are larger than the object being reflected.

Belfast's Sister Kate Treats All Of The Wounded

EDITOR'S NOTE — Kathleen O'Hanlon is oblivious to whether they're terrorist or bystander, Protestant or Catholic. When they're delivered to her, her only concern is that the worst get treated first. She's an emergency room nurse, extraordinaire.

By TED BARTIMUS
Associated Press Writer

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — To ambulance drivers in Belfast she's simply "Sister Kate," the woman waiting at the door for the victims.

Her christened name is Kathleen O'Hanlon. She can't watch a gory TV show because it makes her sick to the stomach, but she's one of the best emergency room nurses in the world.

"If someone hands me a blown-off leg or arm it doesn't bother me to stand there holding it awhile," says the petite woman with a handshake like a wrestler and the step of a birthday child.

During Northern Ireland's nine years of terrorism this nursing sister — a British colloquialism meaning senior nurse — has held more than a few mangled limbs while surgeons fought to save lives of bomb, gunshot and fire victims.

Queen Elizabeth II, defender of the Protestant Church of England, has recognized the expertise of this Irish Catholic colleen and singled her as a Member of the Order of the British Empire.

The Royal Academy of Nursing has paid tribute to her frontline cool by making her chairman of its Accident and Emergency Room Forum.

The casualty room staff at Royal Victoria Hospital speaks of her skill and humor, student nurses flock to her lectures, and one ambulance driver who's seen it all calls her "one tough cookie but a great lady."

At 47 and with no immediate family nearby, Sister Kate spends most of her time working, with time off for sleep and some television "and maybe a trashy book, some kind of silly novel." Once in a while there's a day to get away from it all, walking the wild and windy Northern Ireland coastline.

Her savings go toward an occasional visit to the families of her 20 first cousins living in the Boston area. She always takes along her Norton High School football jersey to wear when she roughhouses with the kids.

"I love it here, we have such a good team at this hospital," she says. "People say to me 'Why do you stick with it?' But I don't see why all the decent people should have to leave just because of a violent few. This is my home. I was born here, and I'm not afraid to live here."

Royal Victoria Hospital is a concrete octopus with glass tentacles splayed over acres of barricaded no-man's land dividing Roman Catholic and Protestant strongholds at the top of Falls Road, the neighborhood where Kate O'Hanlon was raised.

Its formal entrance is brooded over by a statue of Queen Victoria dressed in grime. Inside it has become renown for treating burn and blast victims. Its reputation attracts specialists from dozens of countries, including Rhodesia and South Africa, to watch new techniques for dealing with trauma cases.

Through all the internal warfare which everyone in Northern Ireland calls "the troubles," Sister Kate has listened for the insistent claxons which have become Belfast's anthem — those ambulance sirens heralding more mutilation on her sterile doorstep.

Stationed at the swinging doors leading to the underground driveway, Sister Kate makes the first instant medical judgments on casualty cases without, she says, moral judgment.

"The minute those people come through the door they cease to be instigator or victim. They become patients, and the ones who need treatment the most get the highest priority."

She says her sense of humor and love of a joke, plus years of seasoning and training, help her cope with the pressure.

"I keep calm. If I lose my head then everyone else around me is going to lose theirs. We've had up to 150 people in shock come through those doors in an hour. This isn't a job where you can flap about and say 'Oh dear, oh dear.'

"Yesterday we had a young (British) soldier come in here with a gunshot wound and he was dead when we got him. That was yesterday. Today it's a part of history. You go on.

"But you never get used to it. When it's happening you're okay. But that night you can't sleep.

"You always know when you've had enough. You've got to get completely away for two or three days."

One of her most poignant memories of "the troubles" is of a policeman blinded by a bullet and a soldier whose lower jaw had been shot off. The two were great friends and were placed side-by-side in the hospital.

"They felt the need to communicate, so the soldier who couldn't talk wrote notes and I read them to the policeman who couldn't see."

Micro Records Adding Sound To Printed Page

By JAMES J. DOYLE

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — A Bible that preaches, bird cards that chirp, an encyclopedia that teaches language — all new ways of learning by adding sound to the printed page — are being developed for sale in the near future.

David Hackman, president of Microsonics Corp., says the various products all rely on miniature phonograph records, about the size of a quarter, and a hand-held player device.

Microsonics has licensed several applications of the concept, including a series of talking books for children called "Adventures Through the Alphabet" to be put out by Encyclopaedia Britannica.

The talking books are designed to teach English to Japanese, Spanish, Italian and Arabic students.

There is another talking books idea being marketed by Fisher-Price Toys, a children's encyclopedia edited for audio use. The toy concept was introduced at the American Toy Fair in New York City earlier this year.

Hackman said Fisher-Price, which has the rights to Disney and Sesame Street, was introducing a series of 18 books initially.

"The toys will sell for about $22," Hackman said. "That includes a player and one book. The Britannica language program is about $150, including four books and a player for each module, a beginner, intermediate one and two, and advanced.

"Each book has about 200 records in it and instructions in the book are in the native language of the user."

The toys are to be released for the 1978 Christmas buying season. But ready for release now, Hackman said, are sets of full-color bird picture cards designed for members of the Audubon Society.

Each set contains pictures of different species of North American birds, a painting of the bird, text, and a microrecord which describes the species and a bird call.

The bird calls were furnished by the Cornell University Laboratory of Ornithology. The package retails for about $38.95.

Pamphlets that teach health and medical techniques are currently being used by John Rich, director of health careers education at Kuskokwim Community College in Bethel, Alaska.

He has been teaching Eskimos with less than an eight-grade reading level medical and life saving techniques with the microsonic concept.

"It simplifies the lessons because the audio messsage is right next to the text and may be repeated as many times as necessary," he said. "Plus, in anatomy and physiology there are many Greek and Latin phrases that need to be pronounced for these students."

The concept behind the talking books is a transparent microrecord and a phonograph held in the hand which is placed against the disc. With the push of a button 45 to 90 seconds of sound will come through a tiny speaker.

"This was invented by Rey Johnson," Hackman said. "He was for years the leading inventor at IBM. In fact, he invented the disc memory. He's now a senior fellow at IBM and retired.

"Several years ago he had this idea of being able to put short segments of sound on a printed page. We acquired it from Rey and his associates."

Hackman feels the microsonics concept will give the thriving casette industry a run for the money.

Currently the talking books are being made in Japan which is expected to be the firm's biggest market. A massive retail program was being planned for Japan this year, he said.

The next step in the microsonic concept is a small pocket unit which plays a card inserted into it. A record is laminated onto the card, about the size of a business card. One side will have a picture, the other text and the record.

Vote Deadline

Margaret Register, Pitt Board of Elections supervisor, reminded voters that the deadline for obtaining absentee ballots for the May 30 runoff primary is Wednesday, May 24 at 5 p.m.

Miss Register urged persons with questions regarding absentee balloting to call the Elections office at 758-4683.

The runoff primary will involve only one local office, the Fifth District seat on the Pitt Board of County Commissioners, with incumbent B. Alton Gardner facing a second primary challenge from Walter E. Gaskins.

The statewide runoff will involve U.S. Senate candidates Luther Hodges Jr. and John Ingram.

Arthur Fiedler: A Boston Institution

By STEPHEN KRAUSE

BOSTON (UPI) — Arthur Fiedler is entering his 50th year of delighting music lovers and irking purists with his "smorgasbord" concerts presented by the Boston Pops.

Nearly a half-century ago, Fiedler, then a young, dashing figure with a military moustache, founded the Charles River Esplanade concerts on the banks of the river separating urban Boston from the academic city of Cambridge. And since that time in 1929 patrons have been able to line up on the lawn adjacent to the Charles River basin to see the maestro lead the Pops through a musical potpourri of classics and popular tunes, free of charge.

His July 4 outdoor concerts have been a source of pleasure and wonderment for Boston's citizens, but the city is starting to look upon them with alarm.

For the 1976 Bicentennial celebration Fiedler led the Pops through a bombastic rendition of Tchaikovsky's "1812 Overture," complete with cannons from the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company and bells from a nearby church.

Nearly 250,000 lined up for the concert-fireworks display in 1976 and the attendence swelled to 400,000 a year later.

The bulge in the crowd had city officials fearing that a concert of serious music, combined with fireworks, would hamper the 83-year-old Fiedler's 50th anniversary celebration. So the city has decided to cancel the fireworks this year.

Fiedler doesn't agree and is disappointed with the decision.

"One goes along with the other," he said when informed of the city's decision. "I think it's a tragic decision. What would July 4 be without fireworks? I think they should have both."

The Metropolitan District Commission, which runs the Esplanade, fears increasingly rowdy crowds will throw a damper on what should be a dignified concert.

"I don't agree with that," Fiedler said. "Wherever you go, you always find some people who are disruptive."

Fiedler is known as a feisty director and one with a lot of color. Besides being a conductor, he is an honorary fire chief in several cities from Boston to Tokyo. He has also "jammed" with trumpet player Al Hurt in New Orleans, conducting Hirt's six-piece band in at least one Bourbon Street salon.

This is in keeping with the man whose one aim as Pops conductor is to see that people enjoy themselves at his concerts.

The Pops and Symphony Orchestra are separate enterprises, even though some of the same musicians perform for both. The orchestra originally was established by a 19th century conductor to keep the musicians in peak form over the summer.

When Fiedler took over the Symphony Hall program in 1930, the concerts were known as "Musical Promenades," later, "Popular Concerts," then simply, "Pops."

And Fiedler, while known primarily as the Boston Pops director, has conducted other orchestras around the world.

He's been criticized by some for the variety in his performances and lauded by others for trying to bring the classics to the masses.

Fiedler has the definitive answer for both.

"I am not and never have been a man to carry a flag and lead great masses of people on to great music," he said once. "My aim has been to give them a good time."

The attitude has enabled Fiedler to transcribe the rudimentary sounds of the Beatles into pieces scored for a symphony orchestra. It has also allowed Fiedler to bring guests like Joan Kennedy and Julia Child to narrate "Peter and the Wolf" and "Tubby the Tuba."

At the same time, he's been able to lure the Boston Ballet into Symphony Hall to perform scenes from the opera "Carmen," and laugh while "PDQ Bach" does a parody of a mad musician.

A member of a musical family, Fiedler was a handyman musician for 15 years with the BSO. But he always wanted to be a conductor, because he said he loved the power and majesty of the orchestra. And he respects his audiences.

"My 15 years as a member of the Boston Symphony Orchestra has done that for me, at least," he said when he took over the Pops. "And my Esplanade concerts added to that respect and to my knowledge concerning mass appreciation of music."

Fiedler, a Boston institution and a showman, is serious about his craft and maintains people react in their own way to music.

"The world doesn't yet quite understand its artists," he said in 1930. "Silly people who never really understand music at all are responsible for much that is false concerning the public opinion of music and musicians.

"They roll their eyes and tell each other, and all of the world that will listen, how deeply they were moved by some piece of music or another," he said. "It isn't so. Music didn't move them. Their own emotions did it ... why blame the music."

The once jet black hair has become long and snowy. But the military moustache remains. And while he has sharply curtailed his appearances, he still leads a vigorous life which would tire men half his age.

And he won't think about retiring.

"I'll die with my boots on," he says.

Proclaims May 'Poppy Month'

Mayor Percy Cox proclaimed May as Poppy Month and Saturday, May 20, as Poppy Day and urged local citizens to "join me in the wearing of this memorial flower as together we remember the sacrifices of so many in defense of our freedom."

In his proclamation, Cox explained that the American Legion and American Legion Auxiliary adopted the poppy as its memorial flower in 1919.

He said that by wearing the poppy, citizens "pay tribute to these war dead, and aid the living by assistance to veterans and their families in time of need."

According to the mayor, the Poppy Day program contributions are used soley for the programs of child welfare and rehabilitation in the community and state.

Washington Girl Receives Award

WASHINGTON — Miss Renee Mills was crowned Miss Foxy Brown at the Mod Affair Dance sponsored by the Les Girls Club, May 13, at the Elite Club.

Miss Mills is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charlie Mills and is a senior at D. H. Conley High School.

She wore a black blazer and blouse, black on white tailored skirt, black accessories and a white flower in her hair.

The theme for the annual show was "The Lady Is Foxy, The Lady Is Black."

Foreign Lobbyists Spend $100 Millllion Every Year

By DAVID L. LANGFORD
UPI Senior Editor

WASHINGTON (UPI) — In the Universal Building, where Florida Avenue meets Connecticut Avenue in America's capital, a chunk of shrapnel rests on the desk of John P. Richardson, lobbyist.

It's a fragment of a cluster bomb, imbedded with ball bearings. It was dropped by Israeli planes on a U.N. vocational training school in Damascus, Syria in 1973.

It was made in the U.S.A.

In the Pennsylvania Avenue offices of Edelman International, lobbyist John Meek keeps a symbol of a less bloody cause, a model of the Concorde supersonic jetliner.

It was made in France.

Down in Georgia, in President Carter's hometown of Plains, they are building an Oriental Garden. It will feature two stone lions, gifts from Plain's "sister city" of Kaohsiung.

The statues were made in Taiwan.

A bomb. An airplane. A garden.

War. Trade. Goodwill.

To sway the sympathies of the Americans toward one or the other, foreign interests are spending $100 million a year in an influence peddling industry that employs 15,000 persons, mostly U.S. citizens.

It embraces cloak room lobbying and propaganda milling, junketeering and cultural exchanging, trade missioning and "sister city" programming.

It's slick Madison Avenue-style public relations, is sometimes tainted by Korean-style bribery.

John Meek is a pro in a pinstripe suit who knows his way around Capitol Hill. Perhaps he is typical of the American lobbyists working for overseas interests.

Meek registered as a "foreign agent" when he was taken to court by the Justice Department during the Concorde debates. One of his big projects at the moment is to get the Turkish arms embargo lifted.

He chuckles at the mention of Tongsun Park, the Korean rice merchant who gave the lobbying business a bad name by spreading around $1 million in bribes.

The greasing of palms may work well overseas, but in this country it's not considered good form.

"Besides," sniffs Meek, "That's the last country on earth that ought to come in here and try to buy this town. A lot of us fought a war for them."

Meek was forced to register under the 1938 Foreign Agents Registration Act because he was lobbying (with eventual success) to allow a noisy foreign-made plane to land at American airports.

By contrast, the chief Washington spokesmen for combatants in the dangerous Mideast conflict are registered only as "domestic" lobbyists.

If weapons of war and foreign aid dominate their interests, they claim to represent only their own countrymen — either Jewish Americans or Arab Americans — and they are not in the employ of foreign principals.

Be that as it may, Israel — long considered to have the heaviest clout of any foreign government in Washington — is best served by the American Israel Public Affairs Committee (AIPAC) and its director, 41-year-old Morris Amitay.

AIPAC, with an annual budget of $700,000, has a well-oiled public relations machine that can deliver policy statements to every congressmen within hours. It maintains a library on the Mideast so complete it is often consulted by the State Department.

Amitay, who took over the post from the aging lobbyist-emeritus Isiah "Si" Kenen, is often criticized by congressmen and reporters alike for his abrasive, pushy style. It was not surprising that he refused to talk to UPI about "foreign" lobbying.

"Mr. Amitay doesn't like interviews," an aide said. "Besides, we're not engaged in foreign lobbying, like the Arabs."

Nonetheless, the influence of the Jewish lobby in Congress has led to more than $10 billion in U.S. aid to Israel over the past five years.

Counterpoint to the Israel lobby is the National Association of Arab Americans, which was founded just six years ago. The association is much smaller than AIPAC. It has a budget of $200,000 and a full-time staff of four.

"N-triple-a," the operator answers.

John Richardson, hired as NAAA's public affairs director just last September, was eager to talk. Like Amitay, he is not registered as a foreign agent.

"I'm not a water boy for the Arabs," Richardson says at a meeting in his office.

He sits underneath a picture of a bombed-out Palestinian refugee camp.

"Hell, I'm not even an Arab," he adds.

Born in California 39 years ago of Norwegian and English stock, Richardson got interested in the Arab cause while working on a masters dissertation at George Washington University.

He learned that at the time of the breakup of the Ottoman Empire following World War I, Jews comprised only 10 per cent of the population of Palestine. That gave him a new perspective on Zionism.

"The more I learned, the more astounded I became," Richardson recalls. "I said, 'Wow, look at this.'"

Later, Richardson would spend five years in the Mideast, working with Palestinian refugees.

At his desk, Richardson picks up the fragment of one of the cluster bombs which rained on a school run by the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Agency during the 1973 war.

"What the hell are these Israelis doing, with our blessing and with our backing?" he asks.

Today, however, Richardson feels the pendulum of public opinion is swinging toward the Arabs, both on The Hill and on the streets. Recent polls substantiate that view.

"All of a sudden a new political vocabulary is developing," Richardson said. "While those who disagreed with the Israel lobby once were branded as anti-Semetic, that threat is just not working anymore.

"There is a willingness to see a come-uppance here."

While NAAA is the sounding board for some 2 million Americans of Arab descent — whose views vary from that of conservative Lebanese to Palestinians just off the boat — several Arab states are lining up their own high-powered lobbyists.

Notable among them is Frederick G. Dutton, a Washington attorney and former counselor to such Democrats as Robert F. Kennedy, George McGovern and Jerry Brown. He is now registered as a foreign agent for Saudi Arabia and its state oil company.

Dutton's entry in the field becomes especially intriguing when it is remembered that he long associated himself with the cause of Israel as he went about raising money for Democratic candidates from Jewish benefactors.

In registering with the Justice Department, Dutton described his position as a provider of "legal and other services." Much of his work is routine, involving the the drafting of petrochemical contracts or briefing Arab ambassadors on the workings of American politics.

But Dutton admits the job "pays very well." His bill to the Saudis for the first half of 1977 was $270,490.

As a representative of Arabian interests, Dutton is in the company of such disparate political figures as J. William Fulbright, Clark Clifford, Bert Lance, Spiro Agnew, Richard Kleindienst, and Gen. Brent Scowcroft.

After losing his Arkansas senate seat, Fulbright, the former chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, was hired to perform legal services for Saudi Arabia and the United Arab Emirates. He got a retainer of $50,000 a year.

Clifford, the former secretary of defense and confidant to Democratic presidents, is an adviser on "foreign relations between Algeria and the U.S.," according to his statement at the Justice Department. His law firm got $75,000 from Algeria last year.

Scowcroft, President Ford's national security adviser, presently works for American and Middle East firms doing business abroad.

Now foreign lobbying is a perfectly legitimate business. Some of the practitioners of the trade are downright idealists.

Hill & Knowlton, the prestigious public relations firm with a number of overseas clients, dumped its Korean account when the operation began to look shady.

John Meek of Edelman International, while in the thick of the dispute between Greece and Turkey, refuses to do business with South Africa for philosophical reasons.

The peace initiative of Egyptian President Anwar Sadat won friends for the Arabs, while many Americans were repulsed at the violence of Israel's March invasion of southern Lebanon in retaliation for a PLO terrorist raid on a bus.

There is also growing disenchantment Prime Minister Menachem Begin's hard-line stand on Israel's occupied territories.

Care for Your Car

THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Care for Your Car

SUNDAY, MAY 21, 1978

Get your car in shape for the summer.

AAA calls tune-up vital service

Proper care and maintenance of your car can mean significant reductions in fuel consumption.

Start out by having your car's engine thoroughly tuned. AAA motor club tests show that even minor tune-ups can improve mileage by 10 per cent. Other tests have shown that tune-ups can result in an immediate 9 to 15% improvement in gasoline mileage.

- Check spark plugs. Make sure yours are clean and all firing properly.
- Then check distributor points if your engine requires this.
- Replace clogged and dirty air and oil filters.
- Check for proper functioning of the automatic choke — a sticking one will waste gas.
- Be sure the air-fuel mixture of the carburetor is precisely adjusted.
- Change oil regularly. Use the correct weight oil as recommended in your car-owner's manual. A heavier weight oil will force the engine to use more fuel to overcome the heavier oil's resistance, while an oil too thin may not provide enough protection to prevent engine damage.
- While you're getting your car tuned, check to see that the tires are properly balanced and wheels properly aligned. If they're not, they can create drag, forcing the engine to use more power — thus, more gasoline — while shortening tire life drastically. A bent frame could have the same effect.
- Check tire pressure on your car frequently. Underinflated tires increase rolling resistance and cut fuel economy. But don't over-inflate by more than two or three pounds. This could cause rapid wear and cut tire contact with the road, causing a safety hazard. Follow the manufacturer's recommendations.
- An often overlooked item of car care is the radiator thermostat. A defective one can increase fuel consumption by increasing engine warm-up time in cold weather. Automatic brake adjusters also should be checked for improper operation which can create brake drag and increase fuel consumption.
- Once you've had your car tuned, don't forget about it. Keeping a car operating at peak performance and at peak fuel economy requires constant care. A car needs to be tuned at least twice a year, spring and fall, or as recommended in your car-owner's manual.
- When you fill up with fuel, choose the correct octane for your particular car. Using the wrong octane might cause engine problems, spark plug fouling and reduced gasoline mileage. Avoid a higher octane fuel than required. You'll be wasting money. Ask the attendant not to fill your tank to the brim. This can cause overflow if the car is parked on an incline, and fuel expansion in hot weather can lead to overflow even when the car is parked on level ground. Make sure your gas tank cap is on tight — a loose one can allow gas to leak out.

Vacation season intensifies nation's thirst for gas

Well-maintained car best way to get most for your fuel dollar

Like Mark Twain who found it simple to quit smoking because he had done it so many times, the American motoring public is apparently finding it easy to live with the energy crisis. The attitude seems to be ignore it and it will go away. Business and pleasure as usual is the practice.

However, if the prophets are correct in their warnings, this nation is headed for trouble of wartime proportions if attitudes and habits are not changed.

At the heart of the energy problem is the precarious nature of our supply of petroleum and its cost to import, And one important aspect of that problem is the nation's thirst for gasoline.

Last summer, despite presidential pleas to curb gasoline usage, American car owners consumed an all-time record gallonage. (Of some comfort to the administration perhaps is the fact the consumption did not match the levels some experts predicted it would.)

From all appearances the American driving public stands on the brink of a situation that could threaten our freedom of movement.

The possibility of gas rationing or other restrictions of our right to drive as we wish looms large. Certainly none of us as individuals can uncover new sources of petroleum or solve political dilemmas that could affect our energy supplies.

But we are not totally helpless.

The most direct action one can take to make sure his car is energy effiicient is to keep it maintained.

Merely making sure the tires are properly inflated, an action that costs nothing but a few moments of time, is also a certain fuel saver.

Other fuel conservation measures recommended by maintenance experts include making sure your engine is running at the proper temperature and going easy on use of air conditioners.

Cars that are in need of tune-up waste an average of more than two gallons of gasoline for every 20-gallon tankful.

Installing fresh spark plugs alone can save an average of a half gallon of gas per tankful.

Still another aspect of the energy problem is the energy it requires to manufacture cars and components. Enormous quantities of electricity, coal and other energy resources are expended to make tires, car bodies or windshield glass.

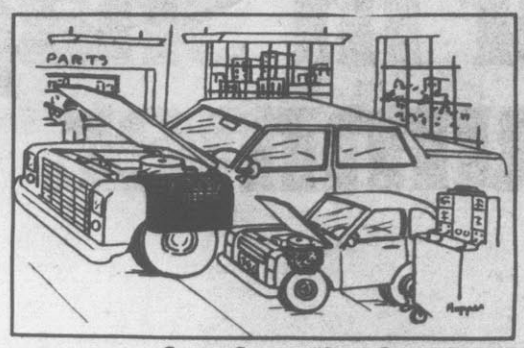

Since our energy supply is finite, a more determined effort to conserve our resources must be made. Allowing car bodies to rust out due to neglect is no longer tolerable. Letting suspension systems, steering components and shocks deteriorate to the point of ruining good tires is both dangerous and wasteful.

Obviously, a well-maintained car will last longer and thus delay the time when it must be replaced.

This section is devoted to providing information on how to make your car more fuel efficient and long-lived. We hope this and regular visits to your favorite automotive service technicians will help make your car a good soldier in the energy saving battle.

Millions of car-borne city dwellers hit the highways to visit beaches, mountains, and other attractions. As a result, the demand on the nation's fuel supply is enormous. Making sure vehicles are in good operating condition is one sure way to cut down on gasoline consumption. (Photo courtesy of New York Daily News.)

This sign, becoming a familiar sight at more service outlets across the nation, is a motorist's assurance that a skilled mechanic is available.

Sign of times assures good mechanic for auto

Yes, there is a way to find a good auto mechanic. The National Institute for Automotive Service Excellence will have certified over 150,00 mechanics following their spring test series this year.

Employers of these mechanics usually display a sign reading: "We employ mechanics certified by NIASE . . . let us show you their credentials." The orange and blue sign features the NIASE gear which will soon become familiar to motorists.

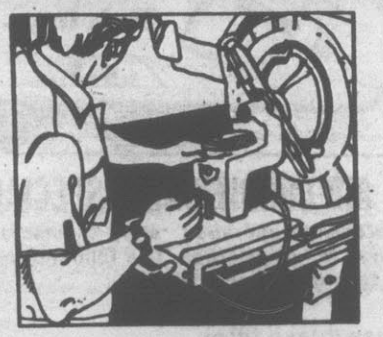

NIASE is a non-profit independent organization dedicated to automotive service excellence. Their tough written competency tests are developed and administered by Educational Testing Service, the same people who conduct the College Board exams, but the Institute provides technical imput from the industry.

A mechanic may become certified in one or all eight of the Institute's areas of specialization. The important thing to find out: is the mechanic certified in brakes, if he's repairing your brakes, or is he certified in automatic transmission, if he's working on your transmission?

To identify certified mechanics, look for the sign, gear shaped shoulder patches, or ask for certified mechanics' credentials.

The Institute will send you a free state listing of employers of certified mechanics who have registered with NIASE. Just send a stamped self-addressed envelope to NIASE, 1825 K Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20006. Send check or money order for $1.95 to the same address for a bound national listing entitled "Where to Find Certified Mechanics For Your Car."

How to keep your car going through heat and cold: TLC

Your car has been outside all day in egg-frying temperatures.

You slip behind the wheel of your car, snap on the seat belt and turn the key.

It starts . . . just as it did a few months ago when it was at the curb all night in sub-freezing weather.

Amazing?

Not at all, but perhaps it should be because your car — if typical — has received much less care than it deserves. Recommended service intervals too often are ignored by many motorists, the same people who would never think of letting a week go by without vacuuming all the carpeting in the house or following a schedule for watering their plants.

Outstanding machine

The automobile is truly an outstanding machine, says the Automotive Information Council. Not only is it expected to function under such a wide range of weather conditions, but it is subjected to road salt, chuckholes, careless and hard driving and indifferent maintenance.

"I can't think of another product that has to do so much under so many adverse conditions," said Ronald H. Weiner, president of the Automotive Information Council.

"We have come to rely on the proper functioning of an automobile to the point where we never make a time-allowance in case the car should fail to go," Weiner said. "We just expect it to start up and move out and, fortunately, that's what happens almost every time. But the isolated instance causes the owner to forget the many hundreds or thousands of times the car started without a problem.

Simple tune-up

"And chances are that the problem resulted from neglect. A simple tune-up, adding water to the battery, cleaning the battery terminals, a lubrication, using a carburetor cleaner: All of these minor items can go a long way in keeping a reliable product even more reliable."

Tires, too, are neglected, even though the air is free.

The car has become so dependable that people tend to take it for granted and to ignore even the greatly lengthened intervals for preventative maintenance. In the 1950s the car had lubrication-oil change intervals of 1,000 to 2,000 miles. The interval for those two services now is 6,000 to 10,000 miles, and even further reductions are being planned by the auto industry.

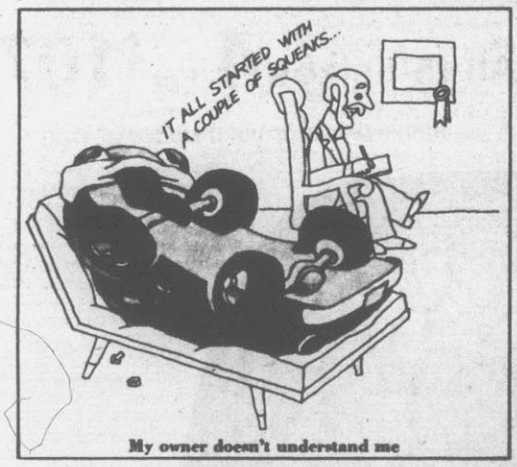

Car more complex

At the same time, the car has become far more complex, with the great growth in use of air conditioning, power steering and brakes, cruise control, air-emission systems and others.

Today's automobile contains some 15,000 parts and about 5,000 of them are in motion. This results in some staggering statistics. In an average V-8, going 10,000 miles a year, the spark plugs fire 15 million times, distributor points open and close 120 million times and the pistons travel more than 3,000 miles going up and down the cylinder walls, while the carburetor mixes 666 gallons of gasoline with 2.8 billion cubic feet of air.

"To expect all of those functions to operate at peak efficiency without some maintenance is asking the car to defy the laws of friction," said the AIC executive.

"Give your car just a little tender loving care and it should last you more than 100,000 miles with great convenience and very few problems," he said.

My owner doesn't understand me

Adventures of driving kept alive by car clubs

Only 33 drivers can qualify for the "Indy 500," but growing numbers of Americans are taking part in competitive events by belonging to sports clubs. Newest form of competition is the fuel economy run.

There is a Walter Mitty in all of us. James Thurber's retiring character daydreamed himself in all sorts of heroic roles. And so do most ordinary people as they imagine swatting a bases-loaded homer in the World Series or playing a torrid movie scene with Robert Redford.

When it comes to driving, only a handful can actually take part in events like the Indianapolis "500" or the Grand Prix of Monte Carlo. But a growing number of Americans are fulfilling their urge to compete in events sponsored by local sports car clubs around the nation.

The sports car club helps keep alive the period when owning a car was an adventure. The sports car rally, an event that tests navigational skills, is a throwback to the earliest days of motoring when roads hardly existed and road maps did not. Thus the way to grandmother's house was a sketchy set of instructions that read:

Rallies today test drivers' ability and vehicle condition as contestants prove their way around an unknown route at prescribed speeds.

Other sports car club favorites that set drivers against their own skills include gymkhanas, autocrosses, slaloms and field trials. These track meets for cars are the most popular form of motorsport in the country.

These close-coursed time and maneuverability events place an emphasis on the skill of the driver and the condition and agility of the cars. A group of cars dodging tricky obstacles on parking lots, open fields and even frozen lakes in winter is a common weekend sight.

A fairly recent activity of sports car clubs is the fuel economy rally which probes the driver's ability to maneuver a rally course with the most efficient use of fuel.

At sports car club events, careful attention is paid to the condition of the car. At club races, each car is checked for soundness of all safety equipment as well as wiring, suspension and firewalls. In non-speed events, items like tires, brakes, seat belts and brakes are inspected before cars can compete.

With 100 independently chartered regional clubs and more than 20,000 members, the hub of activity is the Sports Car Club of America. SCCA conducts hundreds of races, hill climbs and rallies annually.

For information about clubs contact SCCA, Box 22476, Denver, Colo. 80222.

Common sense combats woes

Making the most of your gasoline dollar this vacation season can be simple. All the motorist needs to do is practice good driving techniques, keep the car in tip-top mechanical condition and use some common sense in planning vacations by auto.

And the money saved can be used for more pleasurable recreational activities.

The American Automobile Association's GAS WATCHERS program is designed to help drivers save fuel in painless ways. Their sensible suggestions — when followed faithfully — can cut gasoline usage considerably.

To get more from your gasoline budget, AAA suggests the following guidelines for planning a motoring vacation:

- Consider a vacation spot in a large city or a beach or mountain resort where you won't have to use your car as much to get around.
- Budget the mileage you want to spend on pleasure traveling, and then check out all possible recreation sites within it. This method, which AAA calls the "radius travel concept," may unearth some delightful spots you wouldn't have been aware of otherwise.
- Vacation carpools? What about those special friends you're often too busy to see as much as you like? Why not suggest a vacation with them?
- Travel light! Weight increases gas consumption — every 100 pounds costs about a tenth of a mile per gallon. In a small car with a smaller engine, it costs as much as one-half mile a gallon.
- Start your trip early in the morning. This way, you'll avoid heavy traffic and, if the weather is hot, reduce the need for your air conditioner which contributes to fuel usage.

And while you're driving, don't forget that good driving techniques have perhaps the largest impact on fuel economy. Studies conducted by one AAA club showed that gasoline efficiency could be increased by as much as 44 per cent when driving habits were improved.

AAA says that jack-rabbit starts are greedy on gas — utilize smooth footwork at all times, braking gently, too.

Driving slowly for a mile or so will save fuel and help your engine warm faster when starting out.

Chronic lane-changing is also a fuel-waster and a hazardous practice that rarely gets you to your destination any faster.

Maintain a moderate, steady speed, and remember that unnecessary idling can consume gas at the rate of a half-gallon per hour.

Finally, and well before you're on the road, AAA urges you to make certain your car's engine is thoroughly tuned and all vehicle components are in tip-top shape.

PLAN VACATION NEEDS

When packing for a vacation, plan your needs carefully to avoid carrying items you won't use. They increase the gasoline dollars you spend.

Facts on fuel economy

In a nationwide fuel economy test program, cars adjudged to be in need of tune-up were tuned to manufacturers' specifications. The average post tune-up improvement in fuel economy was 11.36 per cent.

On this basis a car in need of tune-up and traveling 200 miles per week will consume $7.22 worth of gas (based on averaging 18 miles per gallon and gasoline selling at 65¢ per gallon).

To compare before and after tune-up consumption:

BEFORE tune-up usage: 11.1 gallons per week (based on 18 m.p.g.) — Weekly cost, $7.22.

AFTER tune-up usage: 9.8 gallons per week (based on 20.5 m.p.g.) — Weekly cost, $6.37 or an annual savings of $44.20.

In terms of distance traveled, a car with an engine in good tune can drive 63 miles farther a week on the same amount of gasoline. (Based on the use of one 18 gallon tankful per week.) Over the course of a year, a car with engine in tune could travel 3,276 more miles on the same amount of fuel. (Based on using an 18 gallon tankful of gas per week.) That's nearly the distance between Seattle, Wash. and Miami, Fla.

AIR CONDITIONING SPECIAL

For efficient operation and satisfactory performance in hot weather. The following air conditioner tune-up is suggested.

1. Clean intake filter
2. Clean condenser fins
3. Pressure check system
4. Adjust drive belt tension
5. Check anti-freeze /coolant
6. Tighten compressor mounts
7. Tighten condenser and evaporator mounts
8. Inspect system for leaks
9. Partial charge system

Hauling heavy load? Keep transmission cool

A husky trailer hitch behind a car indicates an owner who gets double use from his vehicle. He probably pulls a boat, camper or travel trailer. Double the pleasure but, in some cases, double trouble if that car or truck is not properly serviced for the added burden.

Most vulnerable part of the trailer towing car is the automatic transmission. Car Care Council reminds trailering motorists to have automatic transmission fluid and filter changed before setting out for a summer's fun. Be sure necessary adjustments are made, too.

Routine transmission service costs less than $30 on most cars, a small fraction of the cost of an overhaul, says the Council.

And if the load you're pulling is anything greater than a lightweight boat or camper, consider installing a transmission cooler, an accessory that can pay for itself many times over.

Number one enemy of the automatic transmission is heat, much of which is developed inside the transmission's torque converter where all of the engine's power is delivered to the rear wheels through oil.

Like two fans facing each other, one turned on and the other spinning free, the driving blades or vanes in the torque converter direct the oil against the driven blades.

The "shearing" action of the oil under heavy load produces temperatures high enough to cause the oil eventually to break down and lose its lubricating qualities.

So to avoid transmission repair bills, keep it cool and clean.

Your car feels 'good' after having a tune-up

Ask a dozen auto mechanics their definition of an engine tune-up and you'll likely get a dozen different answers. Virtually all would mention changing spark plugs and most would list checking timing.

But one way to describe a tune-up should satisfy everyone. A tune-up should include any service necessary to return the engine to manufacturers' specifications. Or to put it differently, a tune-up should restore the car's performance as closely as possible to the time when it was new.

So an investment in a tune-up can yield a return greater than its price. For example, national studies show a tuned engine will save on the average of more than two gallons of gas per tankful.

Other tune-up benefits may not be as rewarding in money saved but they are equally important. For example:

Tune-up is the best protection against recurring starting trouble. In a nationwide survey it was discovered that the most effective way to cure starting problems is tune-up. Motorists who sought to correct starting woes by servicing the battery had more than twice the rate of repeated "can't starts" as those who tuned their engines.

In addition, tune-up helps improve the nation's air quality. A tuned engine emits less than half of the carbon monoxide and hydrocarbons as an engine in need of tune-up, according to governmental and private studies.

Perhaps the most noticeable example of a tune-up's benefits is the performance it restores. In tests measuring engine power, a tuned engine gained on average about 10 per cent more thrust than the same engine overdue for tune-up. As a result, distances required to pass on highways are about 10 per cent less for tuned cars.

Current recommendations for purchasing tune-up: get one at least once a year.

BE A GAS WATCHER

An automobile engine that's idling is using gasoline without providing any transportation. A good rule of thumb is to turn off the engine if you know you'll be waiting a minute or more.

It takes less gas to start the engine than to idle it for 30 seconds or more.

Be a GAS WATCHER — make five gallons do the work of six.

Electronic ignition still requires periodic tune-up

Electronic ignition systems standard equipment on most late model cars, were designed to help keep emissions low. But they still require periodic maintenance, according to Champion Spark Plug Company.

Largely due to requirements stemming from emissions control, the car makers began using the electronic ignition systems to provide more voltage to fire a wider-gapped spark plug.

The new systems eliminate breaker points and condensers and replace them with magnetic components that trigger the system for secondary voltage. However, many of the components of the electronic system are the same as in conventional ignitions and maintenance requirements are not too dissimilar, Champion says.

The condition of the coil, distributor cap and rotor must still be checked. Correct timing is critical to proper operation. Spark plugs are still subject to fouling from contaminent present in the combustion process such as carbon, calcium, barium, etc. And ignition wiring can still deteriorate or suffer damage, causing misfire.

Therefore, an annual ignition system service is still recommended by Champion, electronic system or not.

PROPERLY WORN BELTS HELP SAVE GAS

Wearing combination seat and shoulder belts is a good safety idea for motorists, and can help save gasoline.

Properly worn belts help assure a correct posture, thus making it easier for you to keep a light foot on the accelerator.

Your car seat should be adjusted so your foot rests gently on the accelerator.

OFFICIAL NORTH CAROLINA STATE INSPECTION STATION

Seattle finds annual checkups save gas

Seattle runs its police patrol cars through the city's vehicle-maintenance shops four times a year. Tuning and spark plug replacement are important aspects of the city's program to achieve lower fuel consumption and save dollars. (Photo courtesy of Seattle Times.)

Seattle's 4,100 city-owned vehicles, including 307 police patrol cars and police special-operation vehicles, have succeeded in achieving a 22 per cent savings in fuel costs over a five-year period.

Gary Bloomquist, director of general services in charge of the city's vehicle-maintenance program, said the fuel improvement was accomplished by buying smaller cars and making sure every vehicle in the fleet has a "full scope test" and exhaust-emissions test at least once a year.

Many of the city's vehicles are sent to the shop for maintenance and inspection more often than that. Police cars are in the shop four times a year for tuning, lube, maintenance and a thorough safety check.

"I think there's much more involved than just the savings to city taxpayers," said Mayor Wes Uhlman before he stepped down after eight years as Seattle's chief executive.

"Petroleum," he said, "is a non-renewable resource that is vital to the nation. If we, as a nation, are to conserve that resource and make the wisest possible use of it, then government at every level has a responsibility to set an example."

Seattle's city government, he said, "has demonstrated that we are serious about doing our part in reducing gasoline usage. I'm proud that the General Services Department (of the city) has led the way, and that all city departments and city employees have been willing to work together toward this essential goal."

Program successful

The program to reduce fuel consumption of city vehicles has been so successful, Bloomquist said, that his department is writing up its results so that the Seattle report will be available as a model for other cities to follow.

Bloomquist compared Seattle's periodic vehicle-maintenance program with the report of a major city of comparable size in the Pacific Southwest. That other city, he said, requires 50 per cent more mechanics, equipment servicers and machinists to handle about the same number of vehicles.

4,100 vehicles

He said Seattle takes care of 4,100 vehicles with 114 mechanics, equipment servicers and machinists while the other city services 3,800 pieces of equipment with 164 mechanics and servicers.

Seattle runs five locations in the city to tune, lube, change oil and complete a 25-item safety check on all of the city's vehicles at specified intervals.

By the end of 1977, after a five-year period, Bloomquist said, the police and water departments had saved 23 per cent on fuel costs, and the engineering department reduced its fuel consumption by 20 per cent.

The dollar savings over the five years was in excess of $661,000 because 1.3 million gallons of fuel were saved, Bloomquist said.

Every vehicle receiving the tests is tuned to the standards that go with the vehicle for that model and year. They are the same standards used by the Environmental Protection Agency.

Spark plugs replaced

Spark plugs are replaced at intervals ranging from 6,000 miles to 12,000 miles. The plugs are automatically replaced at 12,000 miles, but if the inspection shows a problem at 6,000 miles, they are replaced at that time. If even one spark plug is not firing, the exhaust analyzer is thrown off the scale and replacement is necessary for efficient engine performance and to promote clean air for the city.

Improvements in Seattle's city-vehicle fuel consumption began showing up in 1973 when gasoline consumption was reduced by 80,000 gallons in the first half of the year. This was due largely to better tuning, but other efficiencies also accounted for the improvement.

Seattle's police patrol cars usually are worn out after two years of service when the odometers show about 60,000 miles. Then the vehicles are sold at auction.

Those vehicles operate three shifts with a lot of idling time, Bloomquist said. And Seattle is a hilly city, which is hard on cars.

Seattle gradually is replacing its 1975 and 1976 Dodge Darts and is buying new Dodge Aspens with automatic transmissions, 318-cubic-inch engines and heavy-duty front-end suspensions.

Near the end of 1977, Seattle's departments had 45 new Aspens and planned to order more. The city expected to add about 50 new compact police cars to replace older and larger cars in the fleet in 1978.

Subcompacts

Eventually, the city's "general-use" vehicles will be subcompacts the size of the Chevette, Fiesta, Honda and Rabbit.

The city also will replace about 346 pieces of equipment used for various purposes by a number of departments.

City vehicles, in addition to police cars and motorcycles, include aerial man lifts of the lighting department, back hoes for digging pipe and wire trenches, dump trucks, fertilizer spreaders, curb saws, jet grouting machines, fork lifts, mowers, graders, paving rollers, air compressors, eductors, sweepers, asphalt pavers, medic units, vans and cars in the motor pool.

Mayor Uhlman instituted the vehicle-maintenance program in 1973 when he advised all departments to cut gasoline consumption by making use of the fuel-management program in the city's shops.

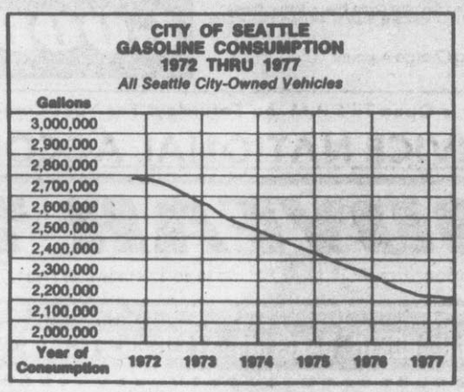

Program easy

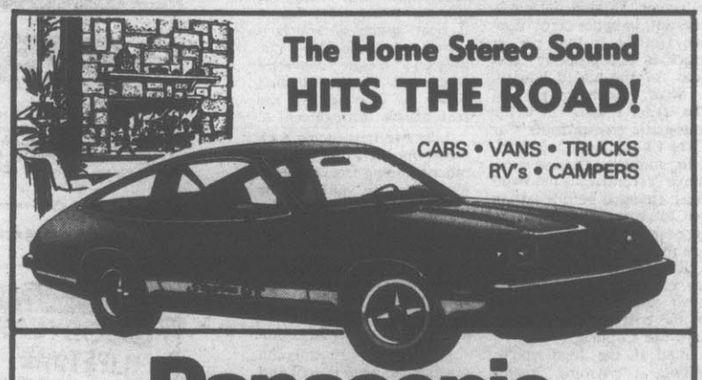

"This program is easy to do," Bloomquist said, "because people get to be enthusiastic. It is easily turned into dollar savings."

He said the city produces a monthly fuel report to every department to show fuel consumption now compared with the base period of 1972 and every year in between.

The fleet coordinator in each department receives the report and determines if the department is meeting its goals or sliding.

Washington State's Department of Ecology has praised the city for its excellent control of engine emissions on city vehicles, even before tune-up. A byproduct of the emission-control tests is cleaner air for Seattle.

Keep cooling system in working order

Maintenance of three areas most important

Some cars or components, when they fail, cause the engine to stop at once. The ignition system is a good example. Others, like the braking system, create hazardous situations. And electrical trouble, at best, is inconvenient when the car won't start.

Failure in other areas, such as the engine lubrication or cooling systems, can be destructive. These are the main safeguards of the engine. Without oil or coolant the engine can seize up, with possibly major damage as a result.

The latter system is relatively easy to understand and check, says the Automotive Cooling System Institute. In addition to the anti-freeze/coolant, you'll be concerned with the condition of belts, hoses and clamps, thermostat, pressure cap and radiator.

Main components

These are the main components involved in a cooling system tune-up. They should be checked as follows:

1. BELTS. They drive the fan and water pump as well as other engine accessories. Look for frayed, glazed or cracked belt surfaces that might cause the belt to slip or break. If you find one belt worn, look closely at the others. They're probably ready for replacement too.

If the belts look okay, check the tension. A belt should deflect no more than a half-inch to an inch when depressed half way between the pulleys.

2. HOSES. Squeeze them hard to be sure they are not getting brittle, mushy or otherwise deteriorated. Do this when the engine is cold; your test might cause a bad hose to let go, with resultant hot anti-freeze all over you.

A hose of dubious condition should be scrapped, and, as with belts, the failure of one hose may indicate the imminent failure of others. Replace any that look marginal, to prevent the possibility of expensive and inconvenient failure.

Most mechanics replace the clamps when installing new hose. It's a wise investment whether you are a do-it-yourselfer or have it done.

3. THERMOSTAT. A sticking thermostat will cause too hot or too cold engine operations. You will recognize this by the obvious signs of engine overheating or by little or no heat from the heater. In either case, a new thermostat is needed.

When in doubt, have your mechanic check it for you.

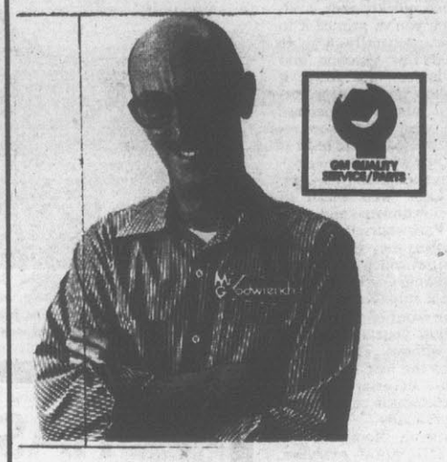

Finally, when you are sure everything is tight and leak proof, you come to the final step in your cooling system tune-up: flushing the system and installing new anti-freeze/coolant. If it has been a year or more since you last changed it, drain the old, flush the system with a good chemical cleaner and install a fresh 50/50 solution of permanent anti-freeze, technically known as ethylene glycol.

For more information on maintaining your cooling system, write for Automotive Cooling System Institute's free booklet, "A Quick Course in Car Care." Their address: 222 Cedar Lane, Teaneck, N.J. 07666.

When checking radiator hoses, be certain the engine is cool. Should a hose be so deteriorated that it breaks, you're apt to get an unwanted bath of scalding radiator coolant. Checking hoses is just one step to take when making sure system is okay, says the Automotive Cooling System Institute.

Plan your trips, drive wisely to obtain better fuel economy

One of the major causes of poor fuel mileage for many drivers is poor driving technique and poor planning. Studies conducted by one AAA club showed gasoline efficiency could be increased by as much as 44% if driving habits were improved over a typical stop-and-go commuter route.

Driving techniques

Good planning is the best introduction to good driving techniques:

- If you own more than one car, use the more economical one for as much of your driving as possible, particularly for commuting to and from work, or local stop-and-go driving.
- Plan your driving routes to avoid local bottlenecks such as extra-long lights and congested streets. Use less-traveled roads and free-flowing highways whenever possible, relying on traffic reports over your car radio for assistance.
- On long trips, start early in the morning to avoid heavy traffic and — in hot weather — minimize the need for use of your air conditioner. Time your driving to avoid rush hour traffic in urban areas, or plan your meal stops to coincide with these peak traffic periods.
- Unnecessary extra weight in your trunk will cut fuel economy. So keep baggage to a minimum when taking a trip. Packing baggage on a roof rack also creates fuel-robbing air resistance.
- Never carry spare cans of gasoline in your car trunk — that's extra weight you can definitely do without.

Driving execution

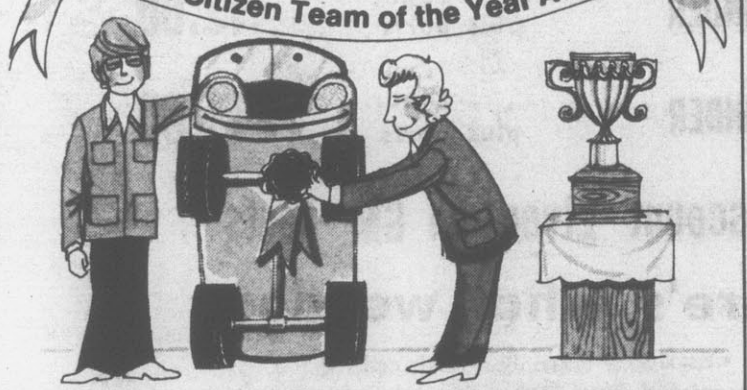

After good driving planning comes good driving execution:

- Avoid extended warm-ups when starting a cold engine. It may be necessary, on cold mornings, to depress the accelerator once to set the automatic choke — any added pumping of the accelerator will only waste gas. Check the owner's manual for proper procedure.
- As soon as your car is drivable, accelerate gently and drive slowly for a mile or so — your engine will warm up faster and you'll save fuel. If your car is equipped with a manual choke, push it part way in as soon as the engine is running, then push it all the way in as soon as the car is safely drivable.
- Avoid unnecessary idling — which can consume gas at the rate of a half gallon per hour.
- Don't rev up the engine and then quickly shut it off, thinking you've primed it to re-start. Actually, you've dumped raw gasoline into the cylinder walls where it may wash away the protective oil film and increase engine wear when you re-start. It's also a waste of fuel.
- Even while you're driving you should still be planning. Look well ahead to spot slowdowns and red lights. Pace yourself to reach them when they turn green. A car uses much fuel when accelerating quickly from a complete stop. Keep a good space in front of you so you can adjust your speed gradually without closing the gap on the car ahead. If stops are necessary, release the accelerator early and brake gradually.
- Smooth "footwork" is crucial to good gasoline mileage. You'll get the best fuel economy by smooth, steady accelerator pressure for cruising conditions. Gradual acceleration and braking are also helpful. Hard acceleration pours more fuel into the engine for more power, but the fuel is incompletely burned and mileage suffers.

Best fuel economy

- You'll get the best fuel economy by traveling at moderate speeds. High speeds require more gasoline to overcome greater air resistance. Each car's engine has a speed at which it operates most efficiently, depending on axle ratios, tire diameter, vehicle size and weight and other factors. Generally, this ideal speed is under 55 miles per hour and corresponds with the speed in top gear at which the engine produces peak torque.

Car Care Quiz

You don't have to paint it red, white and blue or have its horn sound the first few notes of "America the Beautiful" to boast to the world your car is a good citizen. Instead, your automobile can attest to the fact that it has the nation's welfare at heart by operating with fuel economy, low emissions and safety. Since it is you, the owner, who takes care of the car, test yourself on how much you know about achieving gas savings, controlling pollution and avoiding accidents through proper maintenance.

1. An engine in need of tune-up wastes how much fuel on average?
   A. Two per cent
   B. About 10 per cent
   C. Almost 30 per cent
2. The same engine emits how much more pollutants?
   A. About 12 per cent
   B. Closer to 33 per cent
   C. Around 50 per cent
3. When your car pulls to the side when braking it's a sign that:
   A. Brakes need adjusting
   B. Tires are overinflated
   C. Engine mounts are loose
4. Underinflated tires wear more quickly and:
   A. Burn excessive oil
   B. Hamper stability
   C. Waste gasoline
5. High among the causes of excessive hydrocarbon emissions is:
   A. Fouled spark plugs
   B. Unleaded fuel
   C. Electronic ignition
6. For better road stability shock absorbers should be replaced:
   A. With every other oil change
   B. With installation of new tires
   C. About every 25,000 miles
7. Which of these statements is true?
   A. 70 m.p.h. is the most gas efficient speed because getting there quickest uses least fuel
   B. The slower you go the more fuel you'll save
   C. The most efficient fuel-saving speed is generally around 45 m.p.h.
8. A common cause of high carbon monoxide reading is:
   A. Faulty choke
   B. Overaged oil
   C. Radiator leaks
9. Minimum safe tire tread is about:
   A. 1/32 of an inch
   B. 3/16 of an inch
   C. 1/4 of an inch
10. The only state that checks all cars both for safety and low emissions is:
    A. Michigan
    B. Rhode Island
    C. New Jersey

Options affect amount of gas your car uses

How your car is equipped affects fuel consumption

- You might want to consider installing a dash-mounted vacuum gauge calibrated in fuel economy ranges. Such gauges allow the driver to monitor fuel use and engine condition while driving.
- Such options as air conditioning and — to a lesser extent — even electrical accessories such as heaters, defrosters and radios use more gasoline. When air conditioning is not in use fuel economy improves by 5 to 14% or more. Air conditioning also adds weight — about 100 pounds — to a car, increasing fuel consumption even more because of the extra weight. If you have it, use it sparingly.
- An automatic transmission can be a gas-using option. Manual transmissions generally use less gas, particularly in small cars, although this may not hold true in situations where frequent shifting is required.
- Power steering also uses a bit more fuel.

Some options can help conserve gasoline:

- If you want air conditioning, for example, a light exterior car color combined with light interior upholstery will reduce heat build-up and keep your air conditioner from having to work so hard. Tinted glass also helps.
- Fuel injection usually saves gasoline by more uniformly and efficiently distributing the fuel than do carburetors.
- Top quality radial tires usually will result in a 5 to 10% fuel saving because rolling resistance is reduced. Steel-belted radials generally are even better than fabric-belted radials.
- If you'll be doing a lot of open-road driving, a cruise control option may be worthwhile.

Vital services being ignored by car owners

If you're looking for a good reason to keep a safe distance from cars you share the road with, consider a recent study conducted by the Motor and Equipment Manufacturers Association (MEMA).

According to MEMA, of original owner vehicles (average age 3.86 years) more than 40 per cent of the maintenance jobs recommended in the owner's manual had not been performed once.

The report continued, " . . . among five-year old cars nearly 23 per cent had maintenance outstanding. Among cars 11 years old and older nearly 11 per cent of the maintenance functions still had not been done."

Among the most neglected items are components that affect safety. Nearly 54 per cent of all cars 3.86 years old have never had brakes replaced. With the normal recommendation of 25,000-mile shock absorber replacement, 57.7 per cent of all cars still have original shocks after nearly four years of driving.

Anti-emissions equipment now improved

Tampering with devices hurts performance, cuts fuel economy, increases pollution

There's a lot designed into today's automobile engines that make them the cleanest ever on the road. But it takes some work on the part of the owner to keep them that way.

The automobile engine provides motorists with a good combination of performance, economy and low emissions, says the Motor Vehicle Manufacturers Association of the United States, Inc.

"If you attempt to change any one of those functions, it will be done at the detriment of at least one and possibly the other two," says Harry B. Weaver, manager of the Environmental Activities Department for MVMA.

Most of the people who tamper with the engine or emission controls are attempting to get better performance, more "guts and go." Motorists may get the performance boost, but they will pay the penalty of poorer fuel economy and possibly an upsurge in pollutants coming from the tailpipe, Weaver says.

Controls work

But there really is no need to tamper with the anti-pollution equipment because today's pollution controls work, they do not hurt performance and they do not hurt fuel economy. In fact, the latest emission equipment has enabled automotive engineers to improve fuel economy.

"Drivers of late-model cars could not be more wrong if they think that a few simple adjustments to today's emission control equipment can increase their car's performance and fuel economy," Weaver says. "The best advice is to follow the service manual and keep the car in good running order to maintain peak fuel economy, high performance and low emissions."

Regular inspection and maintenance of a car's pollution controls improve gas mileage, produce better car performance and help meet clean air standards. The cost to the car owner is recovered in great part through improved fuel economy.

Motorists who think that tinkering with the engine of their late-model automobile will improve their performance probably remember the early days of anti-pollution equipment, basically adjustment modifications to the engine.

Drivers of 1973 and 1974 cars in particular became aware of a double drawback — poor fuel economy and poor driveability because automakers were relying to a great extent on changes in fuel mixture and spark timing. Pollutants were burned up, but so were drivers over the performance of their vehicles.

Catalytic converter

The advent of the catalytic converter on most automobiles built since the start of the 1975-model year — a technological revolution — enabled automotive engineers to retune engines to achieve that good combination of fuel economy, performance and clean air.

The catalytic converter actually is a small chemical factory, taking hot exhaust gases, hydrocarbons and carbon monoxide, and passing them through and around platinum and palladium to change noxious gases into carbon dioxide and water.

One of the developments being tested today is the three-way catalytic converter which also helps control emissions of oxides of nitrogen.

Equipment in use today has allowed automakers to reduce the amount of hydrocarbons from today's automobiles by 89 per cent from uncontrolled models of 1960 vintage. Carbon monoxide emissions have been cut by 82 per cent and nitrogen oxides by 51 per cent. Future developments promise even greater reductions.

Tune-up best test

"Servicing today's modern anti-pollution equipment is best left to an experienced mechanic," Weaver says. "The emission controls on the newest cars are highly complex systems that require adjustment by competent mechanics since they are built into the engines themselves. For an amateur to fool with them would be folly."

The tune-up is the best assurance motorists can have that their cars are nursing the most miles possible out of a gallon of gasoline, are operating at the highest performance level and emitting the fewest pollutants.

Tests have shown that owners who maintain their cars for the best fuel economy also are the ones driving the least-polluting or "cleanest" automobiles.

Motorists won't be able to service most of the anti-pollution equipment themselves but mechanics, in the course of a tune-up, will make sure that the car is both fuel efficient and non-polluting.

What can go wrong

Here are some of the things that can go wrong and foul up your car and the air at the same time:

- A clogged air cleaner not only reduces fuel economy because the engine can't get enough air to maintain a proper air-fuel ratio, but the output of carbon monoxide also is greatly increased.
- Misfiring caused by faulty spark plugs or distributor points hurts performance, can cause the catalytic converter to overheat, cuts into fuel economy and lets more unburned hydrocarbons foul the air.
- Faulty timing not only makes a car sluggish or hard starting, but increases pollutants in the exhaust.
- A delay in changing oil and oil filter past manufacturer's recommendations hurts the general efficiency of the engine. A well-running engine will last longer and operate at its best for a longer period.

"Keeping your car in good working order makes good sense," says MVMA's Weaver. "It's also worth dollars and cents in your pocket."

The main difference between electronic ignition systems and their predecessors is the elimination of the breaker points in favor of a "wheel," which directs voltage to the spark plugs. Here, a service technician tests the distributor on an American Motors engine. This innovation in spark ignition, however, contrary to what many motorists believe, is not maintenance-free. Periodic care and checking of this system remains as important as it was on breaker point systems.

CHECK WELL BEFORE USING

Before take-off a pilot must make a series of checks on his plane. It's the law.

Motorists, too, should inspect their cars periodically, especially those who patronize self-serve gas stations. Steering, tires, lights, wipers and exhaust are critical to safety. Be alert to performance of the engine and transmission.

A quick check can save inconvenience, money, fuel and lives. A booklet on simple checks you can do on your car has been published by National Car Rental in cooperation with Car Care Council. For your free copy, send a stamped self-addressed envelope to Car Care Council, 17000 Executive Plaza, Dearborn, Michigan 48126.

JUST 55 REASONS TO DRIVE 55

When the 55 mph speed limit became law, the rationale was obvious. Once considered limitless, our supply of fuel was drastically reduced. Our mobility deeply endangered.

This threat to our mobile lifestyle, although less obvious now, still exists. And slowing down still conserves the fuel that is still running out. But as an added bonus, we are saving lives and reducing accidents. It would seem that something that helps to preserve our lifestyles and possibly our lives would be easy to sell. But it is necessary for the N.C. Highway Patrol to remind us that 55 mph is all the law allows.

Proper inflation is key ingredient of tire care

While you're taking vacations and weekend trips for relaxation this spring and summer, your tires are working full time. To do their job effectively, they need proper care.

The most important part of tire care is air and the best part about air is it's free, points out The Firestone Tire & Rubber Company.

Even though air is free, a surprising number of motorists neglect their tires when it comes to inflation. For example, consider the experience of a Cleveland, Ohio, television newsman who made a recent tire pressure survey of eight cars — of the 32 tires checked, only one had the correct air pressure.

Pay attention to air

The point is, more people should pay more attention to the air pressure in their tires on long trips, short trips or any trip.

Too much air — overinflation — and too little — underinflation — mean the tire is not carrying its load properly. Both conditions can cause uneven tire wear. Underinflation is likely to shorten the life of the tire.

Underinflated tires also waste fuel because they put needless drag on the engine. How much fuel? Up to one gallon out of 20 gallons of gasoline, according to Firestone.

Long trips increase the possibility of underinflation because of the added weight of luggage and people. This additional weight combined with sustained high-speed turnpike and interstate driving means more air is needed.

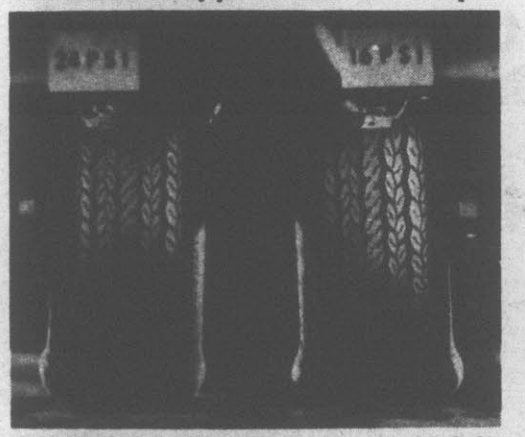

Increase air pressure

Before leaving on this type of trip, increase the air pressure four pounds over the car manufacturer's recommended cold tire pressure, but not over the maximum inflation limit shown on the tire's sidewall.

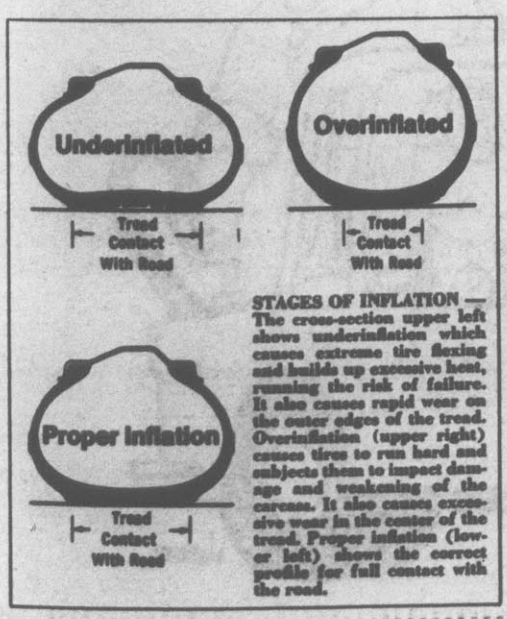

Make your inflation checks before starting out because tires give higher inflation readings after they have been run a few miles. Never bleed air from hot tires because this increase in pressure is normal. Recommended "cold" inflation levels take this increase into account.

Wheel balance and alignment also should be checked before a long trip. Both affect tire wear.

Finally, don't forget to check the air in the spare.

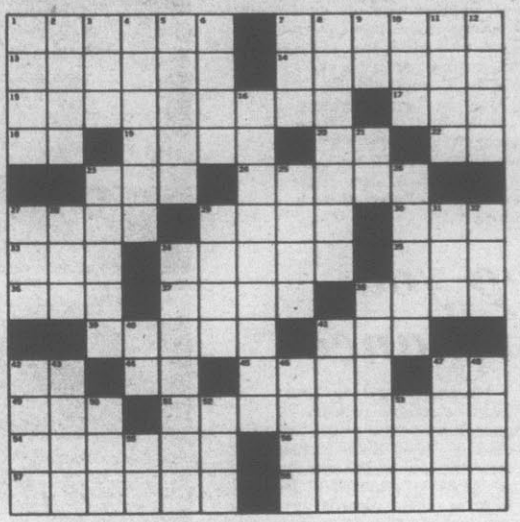

TIRE SAVINGS — Although the tire on the right looks almost identical to its neighbor, the tire may wear only half as long because, at 16 pounds pressure, it is underinflated by 33 per cent. When radial tires were first introduced on American automobiles, car owners were told that the bulging sidewall is a built-in characteristic of the tire. Now that the bulge has become so familiar, motorists may be "checking" radial tires by sight instead of with a gauge and running on underinflated tires that will wear out faster and possibly fail. Photo courtesy of Firestone Tire & Rubber Company.

STAGES OF INFLATION — The cross-section upper left shows underinflation which causes extreme tire flexing and builds up excessive heat, running the risk of failure. It also causes rapid wear on the outer edges of the tread. Overinflation (upper right) causes tires to run hard and subjects them to impact damage and weakening of the carcass. It also causes excessive wear in the center of the tread. Proper inflation (lower left) shows the correct profile for full contact with the road.

Europeans neglect cars, too

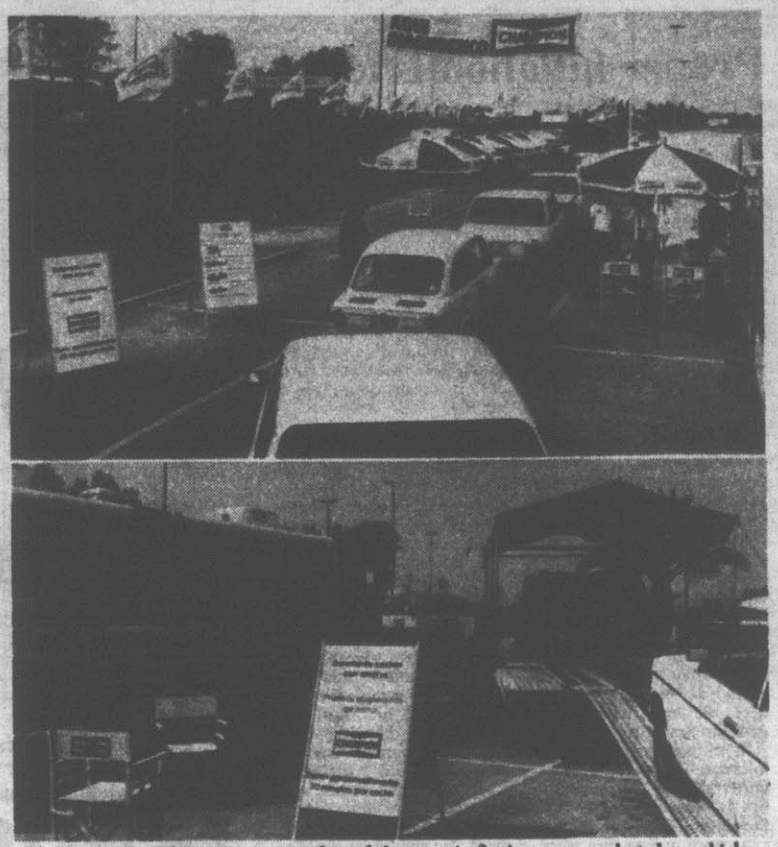

Surest signs of growing affluence in Western Europe can be detected from results of fuel economy and emissions tests recently completed in six nations.

Only a generation ago, car ownership in Europe was still a relative rarity, and so those who had automobiles maintained them carefully. Yet the test program conducted by Champion Spark Plug Company indicates that car owners in England, Germany, Italy, France, Spain and Belgium are no more faithful to car care than are Americans.

Approximately 6,000 cars were tested in Europe, close to the number Champion looked at in the United States in its Mobile Proving Grounds (M.P.G.) tests. In some test areas more than nine cars in every 10 showed at least one maintenance defect that affects fuel economy or emissions. In similar U.S. tests about 80 per cent of the cars showed such defects.

Other European findings paralleled American experience as well. In tests conducted in 27 U.S. cities, cars judged to be in need of tune-up averaged an 11.36 per cent improvement in fuel economy once they were tuned. Roughly the same fuel savings are being averaged by European cars.

Also, in both locations, hydrocarbon and carbon monoxide emissions are reduced by about 50 per cent after tune-up in cars engineers judge in need of such service.

Fuel economy and emissions tests showed that cars in Spain are as neglected as vehicles in the U.S. and other European locations. About 6,000 cars were tested in Europe as part of a world-wide Champion Spark Plug Company program.

'Auto log' helps keep you up to date on maintenance

It may never rival the excitement of the H.M.S. Bounty's or the U.S.S. Caine's, but keeping a log on your car's maintenance may be the wisest thing you've done for your transportation needs.

Keeping logs or detailed records of every shipboard activity has been a long-standing tradition on the sea. And aircraft maintenance logs must be carefully kept as an FAA requirement.

But the idea of keeping a log on car maintenance is a new idea, prompted by the facts of motoring life today. Some reasons to keep careful records of maintenance performed include:

With extended recommendations for performing vital maintenance procedures, it's easy to forget to do them at all. For example, some manufacturers recommend changing oil every 7,500 miles. Under former oil change intervals of 1,000 miles or so, it became a monthly habit. Now half a year can go by before an oil and filter change is in order. Unless a reminder is available in the form of a maintenance log, an owner is likely to forget the vital service.

Self-service gasoline stations also became a factor. The absence of service personnel to tell customers of items like tires with low pressure, worn windshield wipers or battery deterioration makes it important for the owner to record replacement periods.

With the rise in used car prices, trading in an old car can become increasingly lucrative. Anyone who can show a well-kept log of faithful maintenance to a prospective used car buyer can expect to get hundreds of dollars more for the car.

Naturally, any log could include careful records of gasoline consumption, including how many miles were traveled on the amount of gasoline purchased. By keeping such records one can instantly notice when his miles per gallons decreases and take necessary steps to correct the cause.

Maintenance logs can be as simple as a small spiral notepad kept in the glove compartment. Several more formalized car maintenance logs are available at auto stores such as NAPA.

Automated inspection stations will be operated in California as that state joins those requiring vehicles to undergo emissions tests. Inspected will be cars that change ownership and those coming into the state.

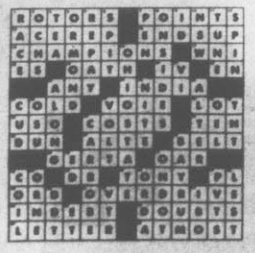

Calif. checks HC, CO

California will join the gradually increasing number of governmental units requiring inspection of vehicles for emissions. Beginning in January 1979, 17 inspection facilities with 45 automated lanes will check cars and other light-duty vehicles for emissions in Los Angeles and five adjacent counties.

To be checked are vehicles changing ownership and those from other states being registered in California for the first time. Between 1.3 and 2.2 million vehicles are expected to be inspected during the first year.

California's inspection stations will use computers to analyze vehicle emissions and decide whether they comply with state-established air quality standards. These automated lanes will handle more than 25 cars an hour.

California has been conducting emissions inspections in the southern counties on an experimental, voluntary basis.

If your car seems to need a little more gas these days, maybe you need fresh Champion spark plugs.

What do plugs have to do with mileage?

Quite a bit. A spark plug is what starts the gasoline burning in your car's engine. The better the burn, the better your mileage. Or to state it another way, if your plugs are worn or fouled, they will be wasting gasoline every time they fail to fire. Before long, your car is using more gas than it should. And you get to pay.

How can you tell when it's time for fresh plugs?

Plug wear is a slow, steady process. So there's no drastic jump in gas consumption to give you the word. However, we have found that motorists can be money ahead by changing their spark plugs once a year.

CHAMPION

You can't buy a better plug.

So fill 'er up with Champions.

They've won more races than any other brand. They're made just right for your car. They're the world's No. 1 selling spark plug. Besides, they paid for this message to help you save money. And fair is fair.

Coburn Stars In Six-Hour Movie 'The Dain Curse' On CBS-TV

James Coburn stars in Dashiell Hammett's "The Dain Curse," a six-hour motion picture to be broadcast on three consecutive nights, Monday, May 22; Tuesdays, May 23; and Wednesday, May 24 (9 to 11 p.m. each evening), on CBS-TV.

The film also stars Hector Elizondo, Jason Miller, Jean Simmons, Paul Stewart and Beatrice Straight and introduces Nancy Addison as Gabrielle. Ellis Rabb appears as Joseph Haldron.

The compelling and complex tale begins as Hamilton Nash, a worldly man who believes there are no innocent people, is assigned by the Dickerson National Detective Agency to pursue the facts on a diamond robbery at the wealthy Leggett home, on behalf of an insurance company.

Even with the eventual aid of his friend, Owen Fitzstephan (Jason Miller), a noted mystery writer with a penchant for the bizarre, who functions as his confidant, the pragmatic private eye finds himself involved with a series of strange murders, and a score of clues, the sum total of which never offers Nash a reasonable explanation of what's going on as the case grows more curious.

The young and beautiful Gabrielle Leggett is convinced she carries the deadly "Dain Curse" inherited from her mother's family. Everyone who comes close to her dies. Nash refuses to believe the Dain Curse theory, even though Fitzstephan is convinced the girl is mad and there is the strong possibility the curse is real and is an explanation for the currently unending stream of deaths.

The cast of characters who cross his path, and in most instances threaten his life, includes Alice Dain Leggett (Ms. Straight), Gabrielle's mother; Ben Feeney (Elizondo), a small-town sheriff; and Joseph Haldorn (Rabb) and Aaronia Haldorn (Ms. Simmons), who lead a strange religious cult holding sway over young Gabrielle.

What begins as a routine insurance company investigation races to an unexpected conclusion and explanation of what the Dain Curse is, with all the plot twists that made Dashiell Hammett the premier mystery writer in American literature.

Writer Robert Lenski adapted Hammett's 'Dain Curse' as a six-hour film, and says that "Hammett was, himself, a field operative with the Pinkerton Detective Agency for eight years."

He also noted that there was no name for the detective depicted in the book. "He was referred to as the Continental Op, and was a figure Hammett fashioned from his own experience as a paid detective.

"When I began work on the script, I had to give the guy a name, and came up with Hamilton Nash. It has the sound of Dashiell Hammett in it."

James Coburn stars as private detective Hamilton Nash and Jean Simmons stars as Aaronia Haldron, a mysterious woman associated with a strange 1928 religious order, in Dashiell Hammett's "The Dain Curse," a six-hour motion picture adapted from the classic mystery thriller, to be broadcast in its world premiere on Monday, May 22; Tuesday, May 23 and Wednesday, May 24 (9-11 p.m. each night) on CBS.

Valerie Perrine Felt Stardom In 'Ziegfield'

Valerie Perrine had never before really felt like a movie star.

She had co-starred in a big movie called "Lenny" with Dustin Hoffman and had won a lot of critical acclaim. She had played opposite Rod Steiger in "W. C. Fields and Me" and co-starred with Jeff Bridges in "The Last American Hero."

But still she didn't feel like a real movie star. Not until she made "Ziegfeld: the Man and His Women," airing Sunday, May 21, on NBC-TV's "Big Event," 8 to 11 p.m.

"I'll never forget it," she says. "There's this scene staged in a huge soundstage where I play a Ziegfeld star descending a giant staircase with 15,000 balloons that are attached to me as a skirt.

"At one point I get on a pedestal and it raises me into the air. Here I am in a gorgeous costume, all made up and the music is so grand and I turned around the chorus girls in the number and said, 'This is like being a star.'

"It's not being nominated for this or that or getting an award or good review. It was all these balloons on this old Busby Berkely stage on this huge set with the huge staircase. It was like making movies back in the 1940s again.

"I told the girls, 'I wish that each one of you could be standing right here because this is really fantastic!

"I had never in my life felt like a movie star. But just for that one second I did. Can you imagine having 15,000 balloons attached to YOU?"

The flamboyant Florenz Ziegfeld was a great connoisseur of feminine beauty and it is through the eyes of the many women in his life — his mother, Rosalie (Frances Lee McCain); his two wives, Anna Held and Billie Burke (Barbara Parkins and Samantha Eggar), two of his mistresses, Lillian Lorraine and Marilyn Miller (Miss Perrine and Pamela Peadon), and his daughter, Patricia (Tara Talboy) — that the complex personality — a man who at heart was a gambler, who loved beauty, women and luxury.

BIG NUMBER — Valerie Perrine says she never really felt like a movie star until doing her big production number with thousands of balloons swirling around her in "Ziegfeld: the Man and His Women," an NBC World Premiere movie to be presented Sunday, May 21 (8-11 p.m.) on "The Big Event."

'The Bastard' Is Two-Part Drama

"The Bastard," volume one of the American Bicentennial Series-The Kent Family Chronicles, airs Friday and Saturday, May 26 and 27, at 9 p.m., on Channel 3W. The eight novels comprising this series carry the story of an American family from its beginning in Revolutionary times to the 200th anniversary of the republic.

The adaptation of John Jakes' towering best-seller features a star-studded cast, including Noah Berry, Peter Bonerz, Tom Bosley, Buddy Ebsen, Ike Eisenmann, Lorne Greene, Olivia Hussey, Cameron Mitchell, Harry Morgan, Patricia Neal, Eleanor Parker, William Shatner, Barry Sullivan and Keenan Wynn.

Starring in the title role is Andrew Stevens. The Bastard is actually a young Frenchman, Phillipe Charboneau, who seeks to claim his rightful inheritance as the son of a British nobleman. Literally in flight for his life from the nobleman's family, he sails to Colonial America where he becomes involved in the struggle for independence, and changes his name to Philip Kent in the process.

In the span of just one year, the career of Andrew Stevens has skyrocketed to the point where he is now one of the hottest young actors in Hollywood.

In addition to his starring role in "The Bastard," Stevens has "The Boys in Company 'C'" and "The Fury" in current motion picture release. He also had a continuing role in last fall's short-lived TV series, "The Oregon Trail."

The role of Philip was a demanding role for the handsome young actor, and some of the most exciting moments of filming took place during the dramatic sword fighting scenes.

"I fenced for two years when I was 11 and 12, and I picked it up again a couple of weeks before we started shooting with a fencing coach and a stunt coordinator. There's a very nice fencing sequence around a courtyard in the first two hours, and then in the second two hours there's a very grand duel to the death with my character's half brother. It's terrific," he says with a grin.

Stevens admits the role was "challenging," and describes Philip as "an underdog who is constantly striving for survival, and he is a hero, an Errol Flynn and Douglas Fairbanks in a younger form whose cause eventually becomes American Independence."

'NEVERTHELESS....

During a recent appearance on "The Tonight Show," correspondent David Brinkley remarked to Johnny Carson, "Washington, D.C. is not show business, but it's funny nevertheless."

Sibling Rivalry Absent

Sibling rivalry seems to be a nonexistent commodity in the Charleson family. Leslie Charleson, the stunning blonde who plays the pivotal role of Dr. Monica Webber in ABC-TV's "General Hospital," has finally enticed her little sister, Kate, away from the New York theater, and now the sisters are castmates on the West coast-based serial.

"I made my television debut working with my sister Leslie," says Kate, "and I owe it all to her. First, she convinced me it was time to come to Hollywood, and then she helped me to get the job." Kate is now playing a new character to the show, Gloria Roberts.

For the past five years, Kate has been appearing professionally in off-Broadway and dinner theatre musical comedy productions, but a television career and the call of the West Coast's warm weather was enough to turn her head. "I was reluctant to leave my stage work in New York. Leslie offered to help me get settled and find work," Kate continues, "But I have to admit this past winter was a strong argument in favor of the move."

Even for sisters, Leslie and Kate are extra close, and the success of one is a source of pleasure to the other. Kate's first day in her first television role was an extra special occasion for them both. "It was great sharing it with a friend," Leslie said, "because Kate is also my best friend."

Leslie started her career as the lead player in the daytime serial "Love Is a Many Splendored Thing." When the show ceased filming, she traveled to the West Coast where she quickly accumulated such nighttime televison series credits as "Cannon," "Medical Center," "Mannix," "The F.B.I.," "Ironside" and "Marcus Welby, M.D.," among many others.

Dynamic Duo Saved Life

Batman and Robin's crimefighting and lifesaving activities are usually limited to their animated fantasy world on Saturday morning television. A couple of weeks ago, the Dynamic Duo was responsible for saving the life of young Mary Moros, a fourth-grader from Minneapolis, Minnesota.

During a teacher's absence from their classroom, Mary began choking on a piece of candy, and was aided by her friend Susan Budde, who performed the Heimlich Maneuver, an innovative first-aid technique for people who are choking, and the action saved Mary's life.

Interviewed on ABC's "Good Morning America," Susan related how she had learned the revolutionary lifesaving technique from watching Robin perform the maneuver on Batman, on the Saturday morning children's program, "The All New Superfriends Hour." Health and safety tips for young viewers are a regular part of that program. After Mary began choking and some slaps on the back failed to alleviate the problem, Susan remembered the technique, and, wrapping her arms around Mary's chest from behind with hands forming a single fist, succeeded in dislodging the candy.

Also on hand for the interview with the two girls was Dr. Henry Heimlich, who gave a demonstration of his technique.

For her quick thinking and positive action, Susan is being awarded a certificate by the National Red Cross on May 23, and she is the youngest person ever to receive that prestigious commendation.

Batman and Robin won't be able to attend the award ceremony due to some important crimefighting business elsewhere, but they will continue to offer their health and safety tips to youngsters on the network's all-new "Challenge of the Superfriends," premiering this fall.

In addition to all the other things sisters have in common, Kate (L) and Leslie Charleson are professionally united, for they have just become castmates on ABC-TV's "General Hospital." Kate has landed the newly created role of Gloria Roberts, while older sister Leslie, who convinced Kate to take the job, has been playing the pivotal role of Dr. Monica Webber. "General Hospital" airs weekdays, from 3 to 4 p.m.

"HEE HAW" SERIES SLATED TO BE FILM

"Hee-Haw," the country music-comedy TV show, which enters its 10th year in June, will become a feature film, according to John Aylesworth, the series' executive producer.

"We have been talking a 'Hee Haw' feature, and now may be the right time," he stated recently, referring to the show's decade on the air. "In fact, we're working on a treatment now. We would use the same cast."

The Jaguar Is Star Of Disney Adventure

One of nature's fiercest competitors is the jaguar, the beautiful spotted cat inhabiting tropical South America.

A unique look at its inhabitants and eternal battle for survival highlight "The Wonderful World of Disney" Sunday, May 21, 7 p.m., when Walt Disney's last True Life Adventure, "Jungle Cat," airs on NBC.

More than two yars in the making, "Jungle Cat" was filmed entirely in Brazil along the waterways emptying into the great Amazon River. Here, a spotted female and her burly, black mate forage for food and raise their young.

Survival is a constant battle for all jungle creatures, and no animal is more keenly aware of this than the jaguar. His mighty claws and lightning-like speed make him the prince of predators. Weighing between 200-300 pounds, he cunningly attacks all adversaries. Fearlessly he outmaneuvers his arch rival, the crocodile. Stealthily he stalks the treacherous boa constrictor. And in a brilliant piece of fishing, he enters the jungle waters to land an 8-foot pirarucu, the strange burping fish.

But all activity in the rain forest is not violent and destructive, because the two cats must raise their young. In true life scenes, the Disney cameras capture intimate moments between parents and kittens as the newborns are initiated into the ways of nature. Their curiosity quickly acquaints them with neighbors like the frightful-looking, but harmless, giant lizards; the pencil-nosed anteater and the colorful macaws, toucans and parrots. Treetop monkeys add their own chatter to the cacophony of sounds in the jungle while the kittens get their first lessons in swimming, a necessary ritual for the preservation of the species.

Will Rogers Jr. Stars In Playlet

"The Hostage," an anti-war playlet, perhaps television's first treatment of the subject, will be broadcast as part of "...Behold Wondrous Things — 1956," Sunday, May 21, 10 to 10:30 a.m., on CBS-TV.

Starring Will Rogers Jr. as The Collector, who holds the children of two hostile villages as hostages against the threat of war, "The Hostages" was aired on Armistace Day 1956, soon after the Hungarian Revolution had been crushed by Soviet tanks. As Charles Collingwood notes in his introduction to the broadcast, this "allegory about the tensions of the cold war" was also played against a background of a hot war in the Middle East, as Britain and France fought to reoccupy the Suez Canal Zone, and Israel marched into the Sinai Desert.

The controversial playet — it provoked calls of "communist" and "pacifist" against its principals, including writer Howard Rodman and producer Pamela Illot — emphasized the tension between mankind's natural abhorrence of war and his equally natural belief in its inevitability. "We're not idiots," one character protests, "we detest war. But some circumstances demand violence." Even The General marching the children to war is resigned. Wars, he says, "happen, so soldiers are necessary."

Linden Hosts Special

"Sweden's Royal Command Circus" sends in the clowns, jugglers, acrobats, trapeze artists and a breaktaking collection of other major circus acts from all over the world in a colorful special hosted by Hal Linden, airing Sunday, May 21, 7 to 8 p.m., on ABC-TV.

Filmed during a live performance at Stockholm's Circus Building before an audience that includes King Carl Gustav and Queen Silvia of Sweden, the international performers provide thrills, beauty and laughs ranging from a triple somersault on a flying trapeze to the precision timing of a master juggler to the stunts of a collection of musical clowns.

Other highlights include: the massive dignity of trained elephants; a father-daughter balancing act; a beautiful and graceful palamino and an Arabian stallion who jumps rope; Italian acrobats; a lovely trick cyclist from Japan; a highwire walker from New York; gymnastic trapeze artists from Italy, and a deceptive clown in a business suit, outsmarted by a donkey.

Hal Linden and his wife, Frann, will also take viewers on a brief sight-seeing tour of Stockholm.

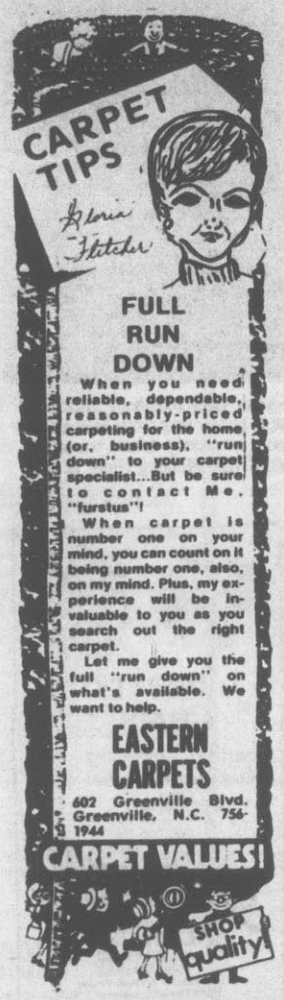

Linden seems to be popping up all over the place these days. He stars in the title role of "Barney Miller," one of television's classiest comedies, and he also hosts "Animals Animals Animals," an entertaining and educational nature show primarily directed at children. He is not identified or introduced as the actor who plays Barney.

He has guest-starred in two TV spectaculars this season, singing and ice skating with Dorothy Hamill in her special and playing the clarinet and cutting up with the Captain and Tennille on their special. In addition to this, he recently hosted the 21st annual America's Junior Miss Pageant.

One wonders why Linden is involved in so many aspects of entertainment. When asked about this he replied: "Let me say I love the series. But if you get caught in only one area of your career, say in a situation comedy like 'Barney Miller,' you can find it difficult to get back to other areas."

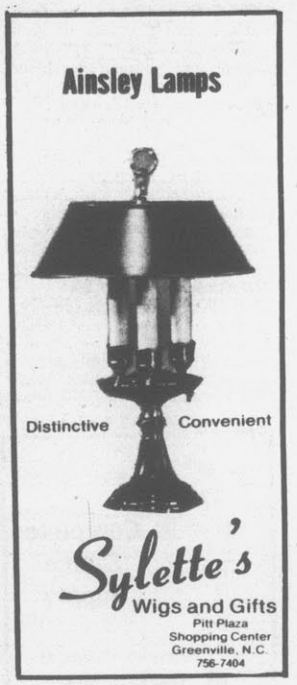

Queen Silvia of Sweden welcomes Hal Linden to the thrills and excitement of "Sweden's Royal Command Circus," a lively children's special, airing on ABC-TV, Sunday May 21 (7-8 p.m.)

Weather Hazards Are No Hassle

Louise Lasser may be the only person in the country totally happy about two of the worst weather situations of this past winter — the record New York City snowstorm and the most torrential downpour in Hollywood since 1884.

The New York storm hit just as filming was to begin on Lasser's "Just Me and You" (airing on "NBC Monday Night at the Movies" May 22, 9 to 11 p.m.), and the crew was, to put it mildly, apprehensive.

As it turned out, the snow was a delightful addition to the "look" of the film and Lasser, who is both author and co-star — with Charles Grodin — of the comedy, is beaming.

"It was wonderful to hear the sound effect of our feet crunching in the snow in the opening scenes," she said after watching the film being edited.

"It was hard for the cameraman to keep Chuck Grodin and me in frame, because the snow varied from crunchy to slushy and we'd break through in spots and sort of bob up and down. But it added to the New York look we wanted. I think it's just wonderful to see something kind of different.

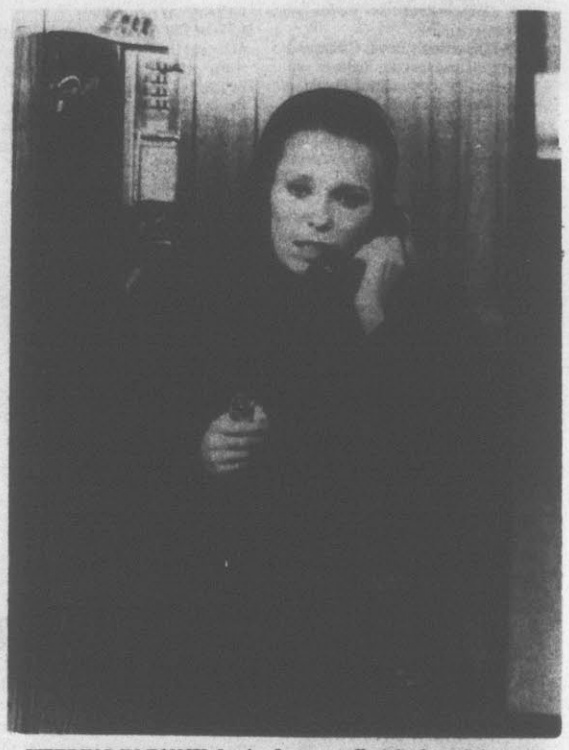

"The story takes us from New York where I answer an ad for a rider-driver to California, so we shot in Manhattan and over in Newark and in a lot of places in Southern California — such as El Centro and Joshua Tree — that I had never seen before.

"A lot of people were unhappy with all the rain and the gray days we had in California in February and March, but it was terrific for what we wanted. Because it rained, we were able to use locations in California for some Midwest scenes, since winter in the Midwest is often overcast and kind of gray at times. One thing for sure, it didn't look like anyone's idea of sunny California, with the rain beating down and the mist and everything."

In the final scenes, the couple reaches the West Coast, and they decide to go swimming in the ocean with all their clothes on. Needless to add, in California in February, that's a bit chilly.

"At least the sun came out," Louise recalls. "We wore wet suits under our clothes, but I think we made it look like fun, and warm, and wonderful.

"Shooting on location in all these offbeat places adds a whole lot to the script — at least I hope it does. You know it's really exciting when they add the music and you think 'Gee, that's part of me up there on the screen— something I wrote, something I thought, something I acted, even in the snow.'"

KEEPING IN TOUCH–Louise Lasser calls telephone information just to let them know that she is on her way from New York to California in "Just Me and You," a comedy drama based on Lasser's script to be colorcast on "NBC Monday Night at the Movies," May 22 (9-11 p.m.).

Candy Was Dandy In 'Little House'

A casting director who is part psychologist and part candy dispenser came in handy for at least one segment of "Little House on the Prairie."

Casting director Susan Sukman, who had to find juvenile actors to play young Charles and Caroline Ingalls for an upcoming episode, is well prepared for dealing with juveniles. Having been a child performer herself she's sensitive to just what a young actor goes through.

"The first thing you do is use some psychology by relaxing them. Talk to them about their interests and if that doesn't work there's always candy," Susan explained. "If you don't relax someone you don't get a good performance and that goes for adults as well."

The fruits of her efforts resulted in Matthew Laborteaux playing young Charles Ingalls and Kathy Kurtzman playing young Caroline in "I Remember, I Remember," to be rebroadcast Monday, May 22 (8 to 9 p.m. on NBC), in a touching, romantic tale of Charles and Caroline's first meeting as youngsters.

Two important considerations — besides the ability to handle a lead role — helped narrow the field during Susan's search.

"The physical characteristics of both Michael Landon and Karen Grassle played an important part in our search — I saw only actors with the right coloring," she said. "Blonde girls for Karen's character and dark-haired boys for Michael's character.

"One other important consideration was finding someone with a creative sense," she continued. "The way Karen portrays Caroline, there's a serene gentleness about her and Katy must know how to get that across."

For young Charles, Susan looked for a child with Landon's "sensitivity, beaming smile and sparkling eyes.

"When you look at Matthew you know that's how Michael looked and reacted as a youngster," Susan said.

Matthew and Katy were chosen from more than 50 child actors. Susan's task involved seeing children after school — ten a day for one week — then narrowing the candidates to the best five or six for producer-director William F. Claxton and Landon to see.

Ironically, Susan's toughest assignment was trying to find young Charles' father...and this time she couldn't use candy.

Late Comedy Film Is Sophisticated

Academy Award-winning actress Glenda Jackson and George Segal star in "A Touch of Class," a sophisticated comedy about a divorcee and a married man who have an affair, airing as "The CBS Late Movie" Monday, May 22, at 11:30 p.m.

Miss Jackson won her second Oscar as Best Actress for her performance in the Brut Production. (Her first was for "Women in Love" in 1970.) "A Touch of Class" was nominated for Academy Awards as Best Picture and for Best Story and Screenplay.

Critical acclaim for the film included: "The first-rate comedy belongs to Segal and Miss Jackson; and it is genuinely touched with class" — (Charles Champlin in The Los Angeles Times). "...A funny, touching and compassionate romantic comedy" — (Judith Crist in New York magazine).

Actress Joins Captain

Actress Nancy Morgan joins the Captain in an episode taped recently at Marine World and Africa USA in California, and guests Mimi Hines, Nancy Dussault, Lucie Arnaz and James Whitmore and his wife, Audra Lindley, join in the fun on rebroadcasts of "Captain Kangaroo" during the week of May 22-26 (8 to 9 a.m.) on CBS-TV.

Monday, Miss Hines stars in Mr. Green Jean's story of "How the Mermaid Got Her Tail," and the Captain reads "The Red Horse and the Bluebird."

The Captain's Place Players present Mr. Moose's story of "The Prince and the Plumber," starring guest Nancy Dussault Tuesday. The book the Captain reads is "One Dragon to Another."

ESTHER ROLLE RETURNS TO "GOOD TIMES"

Esther Rolle, after one season's absence, will return this fall to her starring role as Florida Evans on "Good Times."

During the past year, Miss Rolle starred in a New York stage production of "Macbeth" and has just completed "I Know Why the Caged Bird Sings," a two-hour motion picture for television.

"We are all delighted to welcome Esther back to 'Good Times,' and we look forward to sharing with her another successful season," said executive producer Norman Paul, who is also returning to the series after two seasons as co-executive producer of "One Day at a Time."

TV Goes On Trial

Special guest stars Jimmy Dean and Ronnie Milsap, along with 14 other country music headliners, join hosts-performers Tennessee Ernie Ford and Charley Pride in "Country Night of Stars," a two-hour musical taped at the home of country music — the Grand Ole Opry House in Nashville, Tenn. The special will air Tuesday, May 23, at 9 p.m. on NBC.

Also starring in the program are: Bill Anderson, Bobby Bare, Dave and Sugar, Freddy Fender, Tom T. Hall, La Costa, Barbara Mandrell, John McEuen, Anne Murray, Johnny Paycheck, Jeannie C. Riley, Gary Stewart and Conway Twitty.

There will be salutes to four legendary personalities in the Country Music Hall of Fame — 'Uncle' Dave Macon, Tex Ritter, Merle Travis and Red Foley.

Pride is host of the first hour and opens it with singing two of his big hits. Paycheck sings his current best seller, and he's followed by Barbara Mandrell.

The salute to the last Macon includes rare film footage showing him in performance, then Bare sings "Marie Laveau" and Pride returns with "Someone Loves You Honey." Dean presents the salute to Tex Ritter, singing a Ritter medley, "Green Grow the Lilacs," "Boll Weevil" and the Academy Award winner, "High Noon."

Stewart sings "Little Junior"; the vocalist La Costa offers her hit; Dave and Sugar perform "Gotta Quit Lookin' At You Baby." Pride concludes his portion of the program with a medley of hits.

Ford opens the second hour with some of his many hits, then Hall takes the spotlight with some of his songs. Banjo artist McEuen plays a medley which includes "Grandfather's Clock" and parts of a Bach fugue, the "Hallelujah Chorus" and "Dueling Banjoes." Next, Anderson sings "Po' Boys," "I Love You Drops" and "Still."

Ford presents a salute to Merle Travis, singing a Travis song which became a big hit for Ford, "Sixteen Tons." Ronnie Milsap sings "Let My Love Be Your Pillow" and "Only One Love in my Life." Canada's Anne Murray sings "Snowbird" and "You Needed Me." Twitty sings "Woverton Mountain" and "The Grandest Lady."

For the finale, Ford offers a salute to Red Foley, singing a medley of hits.

This show will be followed by another country music extravaganza, "Country Night of Stars Part II" (hosted by Crystal Gayle and Eddy Arnold) Tuesday, May 30.

TRADED POLITICS FOR CROWN

Susan Perkins, Miss America of 1978, was employed as a legislative assistant in the Ohio State legislature before she won her crown.

Miss Perkins will crown her successor on NBC's live telecast of the annual Miss America Pageant Sept. 9.

BOSLBY'S WIFE SUCCUMBS

Jean Eliot, 45, professional dancer and wife of actor Tom Bosley ("Happy Days") died recently after an extended illness.

In addition to her husband, she is survived by a daughter.

COUNTRY MUSIC HOSTS–Tennessee Ernie Ford (L) and Eddy Arnold are hosts and performers for separate country music specials on NBC-TV. Ford hosts a one-hour segment of "Country Night of Stars," Tuesday, May 23 (9-11 p.m.) and Arnold hosts one half of "Country Night of Stars Part II" on Tuesday, May 30 (9-11 p.m.).

'The CBS Family Film Classics'

"The CBS Family Film Classics," a series of popular movies with family appeal, will premiere Tuesday, May 23, 8 to 9 p.m., with Part I of the award-winning favorite, "The Yearling."

"The Yearling," a heart-warming motion picture, is the story of a young boy's attachment to an orphaned fawn who relieves the loneliness of his harsh life in the Florida wilderness.

Starring are Gregory Peck, Jane Wyman and Claude Jarman Jr., who won a special Junior Academy Award for his role as the youngster. The film, nominated for eight Oscars, is based on the Pulitzer Prize-winning novel by Marjorie Kinnan Rawlings.

Peck and Miss Wyman portray Penny and Ma Baxter, a couple desperately trying to scratch a living from the land in Florida's scrub country just after the Civil War. The harsh, lonely life they lead particularly effects their young son Jody (Jarman).

While hunting for a marauding bear that has killed Ma's calf, Penny is bitten by a rattlesnake. To save his own life, Penny kills a doe to use its liver as an antidote. Young Jody discovers the doe's newly orphaned fawn and decides to raise it as a pet.

The relationship that the boy develops with his pet is complicated by the cruel necessities of frontier living. Jody must learn to accept difficult decisions; as a result, growing into manhood with a better understanding of and rapport with his parents.

Both Peck and Miss Wyman were nominated for Academy Awards for their performances in "The Yearling." The film won three Oscars for art direction, interior decoration and cinematography.

In the following weeks, such family-oriented classics as "Charlotte's Web," "Tom Sawyer," "The Little Prince," "Where the Lillies Bloom" and "National Velvet" will be broadcast as part of the movie series. They will be presented in two parts on consecutive Tuesdays.

"Charlotte's Web" is a sprightly animated musical based on E.B. White's parable about an unselfish spider and her animal friends; "The Little Prince" tells of a small angelic child from a distant asteroid who learns a lot about the good and bad sides of human nature during a visit to Earth; "Where the Lillies Bloom" is about four orphaned children who attempt to stay together, and "National Velvet" stars the radiant teenage Elizabeth Taylor as a young English girl.

Claude Jarman Jr., who won a special Junior Academy Award for his portrayal, stars as a lonely young boy growing up in the Florida wilderness who adopts an orphaned fawn, in "The Yearling," to be rebroadcast in two parts on "The CBS Family Film Classics," Tuesday, May 23 (8-9 p.m.) and Tuesday, May 30 (8-9 p.m.) on CBS.

Coburn Discusses Flint And Nash

His teeth are as famous as his beer commercial. He possesses the magnetism of a Hollywood movie star, which he is, and his name is James Coburn.

With a face now lined by experience, topped by salt-and-pepper hair, and boasting an acting technique honed by years of appearances in television dramas and in feature films, Coburn returns to the television screen in "The Dain Curse," currently airing on CBS-TV.

"I was not a Hammet fan until I began work on this project," states Coburn. "I was familiar with Hammett because of timeless films like 'The Thin Man' and 'The Maltese Falcon,' but I didn't really understand this man's point of view until now.

"Hammett was the great master, and perhaps the true inventor of modern detective fiction; the creator of the private eye, the isolated hero in a world where treachery is the only norm.

"In a couple of successful feature films, 'In Like Flint' and 'Our Man Flint,' I played a character who was what I term a practicing individual. He was the complete American. The ideal individual, because he was a free man, responsible to himself. He lives his life the way he wanted to live it.

"As Hamilton Nash, I portray a man at a different point in time — the '20's — who has his own unique sense of moral judgement. He is a private eye who is attracted by this so-called 'Dain Curse' and he cannot give up the pursuit of it until it makes sense to him.

"Nash is compulsive about this case," Coburn continues, "and simply cannot give up on it. His callousness is the only thing that saves him. He's involved with the innocent Gabrielle, and everything seems so contaminated; yet, she remains pure. She survives the drugs she's addicted to and the ordeal of strange circumstances, and Nash finds himself caring for her a great deal.

"Without giving away too much of what happens, sooner or later everyone tries to get me, and every clue leads to another one. Just when it all makes sense, there's another twist of plot.

"We eventually explain everything and at the fade out I walk down a dark street, wrapping it all up by saying, "I'm a detective. Fair enough?"

Kate Heads West

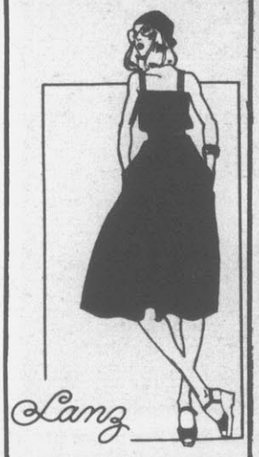

Suzanne Pleshette, as a turn-of-the-century investigator, goes west to capture a gang of outlaws led by the charming and debonair Don Meredith, in "Kate Bliss and the Ticker Tape Kid," a comedy-western airing as "The ABC Friday Night Movie," May 26, 9 to 11 p.m.

Also starring are Tony Randall, Harry Morgan and Burgess Meredith.

Meredith, in a change of pace from his "ABC's NFL Monday Night Football" assignment, plays Clint Allison, a Texas-style Robin Hood. He leads a band of dispossessed ranchers in harassing Lord Devery (Randall), a land baron who has cheated them out of their property. Devery hires Kate Bliss (Ms. Pleshette), ace operative of a detective agency headed by William Blackstone (Burgess Meredith) to find out who is stealing his cattle and robbing his banks.

Kate swiftly learns that life in Texas can be very interesting. She falls off a train after it has been robbed by Clint and his men and is taken to his hideout. Romance blossoms.

Play Features Women Grads Of Mt. Holyoke

"Each year the colleges produce women who are persons in their own right: uncommon women who as individuals have the personal dignity that comes with intelligence, competence and a sense of responsibility," explains an anonymous male voice during the opening of "Uncommon Women and Others," a play about several such women who graduate from Mt. Holyoke, and who meet seven years later to reevaluate their lives. The play will air on "Great Performances" Wednesday, May 24, 9 to 10:30 p.m., on PBS.

"This is a play of choices," explains playwright Wendy Wasserstein. "A play which shows what is available to women, and what they have done with the things they are taught." At the beginning of the play, we meet five women in their late twenties who have gathered at a restaurant for a reunion. Kate (Jill Eikenberry), a successful corpration lawyer; Samantha (Ann McDonough), a conventional house-wife-mother; Holly (Alma Cuervo), the perennial student; Muffet (Ellen Parker), an insurance seminar hostess; and Rita (Swoozie Kurtz), a would-be writer who can't actually get herself to write anything. As they talk and reminisce about their college days, the scene shifts to the campus of an all-women's school in New England...a campus where "uncommon women" were groomed.

If is on this campus — in the dorm bedrooms, in the communal living-room, and most particularly during afternoon tea-and-sherry — that we get to know the students. We learn of their ambitions and of their individual dreams which are slowly but surely being twisted into shape by the strict form of their education. The young women, some conformists, some rebels, are always in sharp contrast to their prim stereotype housemother, Mrs. Plumm.

Autos--1920's Style

In the make-believe world of films there is a need for some specific services, supplied by experts who know their craft well and can produce, on very little notice, everything from a trained seal to a space ship.

Jules Duda is a "car man," and he had to delve 'way back — to 1928 — for "The Dain Curse," airing this week on CBS.

"This was a big project," says Duda. "I had to locate the expensive luxury cars of the 20's, and specifically 1928: a black Rolls-Royce, a seven-passenger Lincoln sedan, a Buick coupe, a Nash touring car, a Hupmobile, a Packard Dual Cowl, and a beautiful cream-and-orange Pierce Arrow. Oh! That was a honey.

"Logistically, these things can be a nightmare. I located a 1922 Nash touring car owned by a Reggie Nash in Richmond, Va. There are clubs across the country, and a lot of antique car owners' magazines, where I find leads. Nash put his Nash on a flatbed trailer and drove to Shelter Island, N.Y., where we were filming. He got lost near Kennedy Airport. Only due to the help of a police officer did he find his way — a day late — to our location."

Duda feels whatever trouble is encountered is worth the effort, when it adds to the authenticity of the film.

"I cannot emphasize how important the cars were to this project. We had great location sites. And when you mask the 1970's elements — the yellow parking stripes on curbs, the modern street signs and street lights — and have actors in period clothes entering a 1928 yellow-and-black taxicab, the magic is complete."

In 1968, Duda found a Lincoln Zephyr in a garage in New York City's Queens County. It had 16,000 miles on it. He paid $1,000 for it and drove to Dearborn, Mich., from his home in Huntington, Long Island, for the Fiftieth Anniversary of the Lincoln Motor Company.

Snoopy Proves His Cool

Charles M. Schultz is putting Snoopy on ice.

That fate would serve to put the freeze on almost any hot dog, except the eternally ebullient beagle of the "Peanuts" cartoon world.

For Snoopy, it's just another chance to prove his cool. He turns the situation into an hour-long ice-skating special, of which he is, of course, the reigning star.

The skating extravaganza, "Snoopy's Musical on Ice," also starring Peggy Fleming, Charles Schultz and a host of skating headliners, will be broadcast Wednesday, May 24, 8 to 9 p.m. on CBS.

It is billed as a fantasy salute to "Snoopy's favorite things." But that's not the whole story. There are a lot of Charles Schultz's favorite things in there, too, not the least of which is the whole world of ice and skates and crystal palaces of frost and icicles and pretty people gliding across the rink to the strains of beautiful music. One of Schultz's favorite sports hobbies, is ice hockey, which he plays and also referees at his own arena.

Both Snoopy and Schulz come by their ice fantasies honestly and logically. Schulz was born and raised in the chill winters of Minnesota, where an ice cube, if it pays attention, can last for about eight months out of the year. And Snoopy, although he has gone somewhat soft with the luxuries of his carpeted doghouse and room-service meals in Peanutsland, traces his ancestry to the same hearty north country natives. He was created in the image of Schulz's own boyhood canine companion, a dog named Spike.

Large-as-life Snoopy (Judy Sladky), the famous Peanut beagle, is joined on the ice by his creator Charles M. Schulz (L) and Olympic Gold medal winner Peggy Fleming, in "Snoopy's Musical on Ice," musical-variety special, Wednesday, May 24 (8-9 p.m.) on CBS.

AN 'INVITE' FROM AMY

Teen-age actress Kristy McNichol has a summer luncheon date at the White House — not with President Carter — but with his daughter, Amy, who thinks Kristy's the greatest in the "Family" television series.

'Crosby: His Life And Legend'

The personal and performing life of Bing Crosby, from childhood through nearly five decades of one of the most illustrious careers in the history of American show business, is saluted through filmed scenes of great performances, "home movies" and interviews with family, friends and colleagues in "Bing Crosby: His Life and Legend," a two-hour celebration airing Thursday, May 25, 9 to 11 p.m., on ABC.

The retrospective tribute, narrated by William Holden (who co-starred with Crosby in "The Country Girl"), sheds new light on the surprisingly complex man whose public personality was always one of "amiable nonchalance." Woven through the program, richly highlighted with scenes from his movies, his television shows and extremely rare personal film from the Crosby archives, are insightful — and candid — interviews with 25 personalities who were associated with him.

In alphabetical order they are: Fred Astaire, Frank Capra, Mary Carlisle, Ken Carpenter, Rosemary Clooney, Gary Crosby, Mary Frances Crosby, Alan Fisher (the Crosby butler), Ella Fitzgerald, Princess Grace of Monaco, Bob Hope, Danny Kaye, Fred MacMurray, Dean Martin, Mary Martin, Ethel Merman, Merle Oberon, Donald O' Connor, Norman Panama, Al Rinker (last of the Rhythm Boys)' Dinah Shore, Twiggy, Jimmy Van Heusen and Jane Wyman.

"Bing Crosby: His Life and Legend," conceived by executive producer Franklin Konigsberg and Kathryn Grant Crosby, the star's widow, spans the Harry Lillis Crosby years from his early boyhood in Spokane, Washington, to his last Christmas special, which aired last December, following his death on Oct. 14, 1977.

Throughout the special, memories of the beloved entertainer are revived through recollections and film clips of Crosby as recording, radio, TV and motion picture star; his personal life is revealed as that of tender father and private man, sportsman and humanitarian.

Bing Crosby's life and career went through many changes and many styles, but one thing was always the same — the warmth and humor of Bing himself. "Bing Crosby — His Life and Legend" will rediscover all the elements of the beloved crooner in a special two-hour presentation airing Thursday, May 25 (9-11 p.m.) on ABC.

Cheryl Tiegs Signs With ABC

Cheryl Tiegs, America's top model and one of the world's most photographed women, has been signed to an exclusive contract by ABC-TV, it was announced recently by Anthony D. Thomopoulos, President of ABC Entertainment.

"Cheryl Tiegs represents a style that reflects ABC," said Mr. Thomopoulos. "She is attractive, talented and energetic and will be of invaluable help to us not only in representing ABC, but also in reaching that part of young America that is interested in self-improvement and in the sheer joy of better living."

Ms. Tiegs will be involved in a variety of broadcast activities including a recurring role on "Good Morning America," where she will discuss health, beauty and fashion news. She will also participate as a member of the network's team on "Battle of the Network Stars," which will air in early May. In addition, Ms. Tiegs will make guest appearances on various TV specials and series episodes.

Special Effects Success

It was just another day for Richard Albain. All he had to do was ram a huge tree branch through an apartment window, pour hundreds of gallons of water into a living room, create winds up to 60 miles an hour through the broken window and cause walls and ceiling to collapse, falling on several people, wiping out a group of party guests.

In a nutshell, Albain was to create a natural disaster for "Hurricane Hunters," "The CBS Late Movie", airing Thursday, May 25 at 12:00 a.m.

Albain is one of Hollywood's rare and valuable behind-the-scenes breed — the Special Effects expert. He creates movie magic by making people fly, sit in midair and appear or disappear in a puff of smoke. For this film, which includes a great deal of actual storm footage, his task was to whip up a hurricane of his own.

"Hurricane Hunters" is the story of a storm that slams into the Mississippi coast and its effect on the lives of the people who track the storm, the people who prepare for it and the people who ignored the warnings.

"My job was to effect the storm from a small squall to a howling turbulence of winds and rain" said Albain.

For the task, he brought in six wind machines, capable of creating winds up to 75 mph, nine rain towers in the foreground, giving a big crop effect, and additional towers and hoses in the background for a mist effect which — through the camera lens — looks exactly like pouring rain as far as the eye can see."

Pike's Peek

By Charlie Pike, TV Showtime staff writer.

HOLLYWOOD — Kate Jackson can make news the strangest ways! She just retained a hair dresser for special at-home care, which may not seem like any big thing until one realizes that it's the same hair dresser Farrah Fawcett-Majors has been using for a number of years! And what's that mean? These two women don't like to have anything in common!

Those folks in Hollywood who analyze the networks' new schedules each year are greeting the lineups with about as much enthusiasm as one does the warning of a tornado! ABC is being accused of being complacent, CBS of renewing wornout properties and not taking a big enough gamble, and NBC of being too risky! Well, you can't please everybody all the time!

Henry Winkler and bride Stacey wanted to have as much privacy at their wedding as possible, thus their decision to keep it a guarded secret until the very last moment. It won't be the least surprising if a year from now they have their first child, since both adore children and Henry is anxious to be a proud papa.

While Lindsay Wagner continues to hob-nob around town on the arm of rock star Peter Frampton, her estranged husband Michael Brandon now has attractive Tina Sinatra as his regular companion.

Jaime Lyn Bauer of daytime's "The Young and the Restless" has offered a simple statement regarding her marital status. "We have separated and I have filed for a divorce," which obviously leaves the young actress with the responsibility of raising her infant son, Damien.

It came as quite a surprise that Esther Rolle will return to "Good Times" next season, knowing that she and the show's creator-producer, Norman Lear, had no love lost between them when she departed season before last.

The most eye-opening renewal for next Fall, however, was "Wonder Woman," while the biggest disappointment, at least among TV observors, was the cancellation of "Julie Farr, M.D."

Tony Randall is one of the loudest stop-smoking advocates in Hollywood, and yet, he had to smoke a cigar for the TV movie, "Kate Bliss and the Ticker Tape Kid" that will air this week. Says Tony, "I did it for art's sake," before he adds, "but I did enjoy it, as much as I hate to admit it!"

Don Meredith Is Multi-Talented

What does an ex-Dallas Cowboy do on his 40th birthday?

"This one rides John Wayne's horse and makes a movie," is the way Don Meredith put it.

Meredith reached the Big-Four-Oh while filming "Kate Bliss and the Ticker Tape Kid," a comedy-western airing as "The ABC Friday Night Movie," May 26 (9 to 11 p.m.).

He plays the leader of benevolent outlaws who harass a Texas land baron (Tony Randall) because he has slickered them out of their ranches. Suzanne Pleshette portrays a private investigator hired by Randall to find out who is tormenting him. Suzanne falls in love with Don when she realizes he is the good guy and her employer truly is the bad guy.

And the horse, Dollar, is a sturdy mount ridden by Wayne in recent movies.

Wedding bells promise anything but bliss for Suzanne Pleshette, but Don Meredith (L) doesn't seem interested in preventing her unwelcome wedding to Tony Randall (R) in "Kate Bliss and the Ticker Tape Kid," a western comedy-drama airing on "The ABC Friday Night Movie," May 26 (9-11 p.m.).

"He's a big horse, which both John Wayne and I need," says the 6'3" former NFL quarterback. We'd both look silly riding a cow pony."

If 40 is the time to reflect, Meredith can look back with satisfaction on his earlier life. He left the small Texas city of Mount Vernon to enjoy great football success, first at Southern Methodist University, then with the professional Cowboys. A man of easy grace and charm and flat-out honesty, the handsome blue-eyed Texan moved deftly into broadcasting and, in recent years, to acting.

Meredith impressed filmmakers with his appeal in several "Police Story" segments and gains new dimensions— and possibly his niche in films — in western togs.

Don, who enjoys life in Beverly Hills with his lovely blonde wife, Susan, and three children, Mary, 17, Michael, 10, and Heather, 9, says that at 190 pounds, he's about 12 under his former playing weight. "But I'm in lousy shape," he adds with his refreshing candor. He tries to stay even by playing tennis, bicycling and taking long walks.

With his demanding broadcasting commitments, a weekly TV series is out of the question for Meredith. "I'd like to do about two movies a year," he says. "I've learned a lot doing 'Kate Bliss.'"

This assures a listener that Don Meredith's future game plan is sound.

'Colorada C. I.' Airs Friday Night

John Elerick and Marshall Colt star as brothers Mark and Pete Gunnison, members of the elite, statewide force of plainclothes specialists who investigate major criminal cases which cross city and county lines, in "Colorado C.I.," Friday, May 26, 10 to 11 p.m. on CBS.

Also starring in the hour-long detective-adventure drama is L.Q. Jones as their father, Hoyt Gunnison, a former law enforcement officer, and Laurette Spang, as a lab technician with the Colorado Criminal Investigation unit.

Guest starring are Christine Belford, David Hedison, Bill Lucking, Chris De Lisle, Van Williams, Randy Powell and Lou Frizzell.

The Gunnison brothers are called on to investigate an abandoned car containing a body in its trunk. The trial leads to a world-famous architect living in a Denver suburb (Hedison); his fiancee, Piper Collins (Miss De Lisle); her friend and alibi, divorcee Carla Winters (Miss Bedford); two salesmen and the owner of a land development company, and a pair of menacing strangers. The climax of the investigation takes the Gunnisons on a mad helicopter ride over Colorado's snow-covered hills in a chase which ends with Pete taking to skis to save the life of Piper.

Elerick has been seen on television in such series as "The Bionic Woman," "Hazard's People," "Three's Company," "McNaughton's Daughters" and the made-for-television movie "Dark Victory." Marshall has appeared in television in "The Streets of San Francisco," and the movies "The Making of a Mistress" and "Once an Eagle." His motion pictures have been "The Fury" and "The Enforcer."

Veteran performer L.Q. Jones has appeared in some 500 television shows and fifty motion pictures, including running roles in "The Virginian," "The Man From Shiloh," "Gunsmoke" and "The Big Valley." His theatrical features have included "The Wild Bunch," "The Young Lions" and "Standing Tall."

Miss Spang has been seen in recurring roles in the "Lou Grant" and "Happy Days" series, as well as in guest roles in "Having Babies," "The Love Boat" and "The Streets of San Francisco."

"MOVIN'ON," SAYS BLAKE

Robert Blake says he is leaving "Baretta" after three seasons because, "once you've climbed a mountain, it's time to move on."

Blake, who effectively portrayed an off-beat cop in the series, indicated that he was tired of TV for the time being and wished to stay away from that medium for a while.

He hopes to make a few feature films, and his immediate plans call for him to star in an upcoming film, "The Border."

Buffalo World

Hal Linden, star of "Animals Animals Animals," explores the world of the buffalo in art, history, legend and mythology in the program airing Sunday, May 21, 11:30 to 11:55 a.m., on ABC-TV.

In Moose, Wyoming, 'Animals' visits with Reginald Laubin, a white American who is an honorary Sioux and who with his wife has devoted his life to the study and preservation of the American Indian's traditions. Laubin explains the significance of the buffalo to the first Americans and performs a Plains Indian buffalo dance. He points out that it is very important for the dancer to mimic the movements of the buffalo as well as the gestures of the hunter.

Strong Men Highlights Featured

Highlights of the Professional Karate Association's World Welterweight Championship, featuring newly crowned champion Ernest Hart Jr. and his undefeated challenger Robert Ryan, will be featured on "CBS Sports Spectacular," Saturday, May 27, 4:30 to 6 p.m.

Also scheduled are highlights of a competition between eight of "The World's Strongest Men," which was presented as a continuing series on "CBS Sports Spectacular" last fall. This will mark the first time these highlights will be broadcast in one showing.

In addition, Jack Whitaker will present one of his timely commentaries, and Christine Craft will have news about "Women in Sports" that day.

Ernest Hart Jr., recognized as one of the greatest technicians professional full-contract karate has known, is also one of the sport's most colorful athletes. His exciting ring performances and intimidating tactics are fashioned after Muhammad Ali's style.

Just 22, Hart won the PKA Welterweight Championship last October by upsetting New Jersey's Eddie Andujar, in a bout broadcast on CBS. Andujar has since retired, as have several others after beatings by Hart.

The 5'8" Hart, who hails from St. Louis, Mo., has a professional record of 13 victories, one loss and one draw.

Robert Ryan has stepped up in weight class from where he previously held the New England Lightweight Championship. Only 19 years of age, Ryan enters this title match with a 9-0 record as a professional, with seven KOs.

While Hart is a technician in the ring, Ryan just methodically destroys his opponents. The 5'10" scrapper has never been knocked down.

Last summer, Brent Musburger was in Los Angeles, Calif., to describe a two-day grueling test of strength between eight of the strongest men in the world.

Those competing included John Cole, holder of several American and world weightlifting records; Mike Dayton, holder of 41 physique titles, including "Mr. America 1976"; Lou Ferrigno, a former "Mr. America" and "Mr. Universe," who stars in "The Incredible Hulk"; George Frenn, who has been the National AAU hammer throw champion the past 10 years; Ken Patera, who was an NCAA shot put titlist and NCAA weightlifting champion; and Bruce Wilhelm, who at 330 pounds, won a silver medal in the 1976 Olympic games at Montreal in weightlifting.

Television Goes 'Bonkers' With The Hudson Brothers

Did you know that even dictionaries have waiting lists?

Well, while "bonkers" is waiting to get into Funk and Wagnall's tome, the word is being given legitimacy with the new half-hour television series — titled "Bonkers!" — starring the Hudson Brothers.

Random House also has the word wait-listed, but has already included "bonkers" in their unabridged dictionary as meaning: "Mad, crazy."

The word first surfaced in 1948, conceived during World War II and given birth in England. If you happened to get a "bonk" (bang) on the "bounce" (head), you might go slightly mad; hence "bonkers."

Jack Burns, the producer of "Bonkers!," the new series to be telecast next fall, says, "you won't have to be bonkers to watch "Bonkers!," but it will help." The Hudson Brothers went into a silent movie routine when asked to comment on Jack Burns' comment. Co-star Bob Monkhouse was too busy to comment on Jack Burns' comment. He was furiously protecting the side of the dressing room he shares with The Hudson Brothers and the series' guest stars.

These aforementioned guest stars — Valerie Harper, Paul Williams, Diahann Carroll, John Ritter, Rita Moreno and Sandy Duncan have been signed to date — all will share the same on-air dressing room with the continuing stars.

Michele Will Tell

TO M. BROKER, ALTAVISTA, VA: "The Secret Storm," a daytime series that ran on CBS-TV from 1954 to '74, depicted dramatic incidents centered around the Ames family. Some of the 70-odd cast members who got their start in the 'soap' are Cliff de Young, Troy Donahue and Laurence Luckinbill.

TO D. WILLIAMS, HICKORY, N.C.: Joseph Bottoms (Rudy Weiss on "Holocaust"), 24, is one of four acting Bottoms brothers, including Timothy, 26, Sam, 22 and Ben, 16. Joseph is an admitted activist and environmentalist. He lives in Santa Barbara Ca., and is single. Write to him in care of NBC-TV, 3000 W. Almeda Ave., Burbank, Ca. 91505.

TO F.W.T., LYNCHBURG, VA.: Peter Simon left his role as Scott Phillips on "Search for Tomorrow" to pursue a career in theater and broaden his acting experience in other mediums. He was replaced by Peter Ratray, who you might remember as Quentin Ames on "Another World."

TO A. WILLOUGHBY, DARLINGTON, S.C.: You're right, that is Francesca James back on "All My Children." This time around she's playing Kelly Cole, Kitty's twin sister no one knew existed until now.

TO J.A.L., LAKE WACCAMAW, N.C.: Bob Cummings, now in his 60s, is busy with theater work. Richard Egan, 57, does TV guest roles, and Randolph Scott, 75 devotes his time these days to his financial investments.

TO C. JACOBS, HARLAN, KY.,: Nicholas Hammond, "Spiderman," is the son of an Army Colonel, an English major at Princeton, and speaks French fluently. Although the bulk of his theatrical experience has been in the theatre, he's had guest roles on "Hawaii Five-O," "Family" and "Nancy Drew." He was also Friedrich Von Trapp in "Sound of Music."

A Film For Children

"Little Pig," a film specially written by children's novelist Sylvia Sherry for the Stories Around the World series and set against the colorful bustle of Hong Kong, will be rebroadcast on "The CBS Saturday Film Festival," May 27, 1:30 to 1:56 p.m.

Anna Home produced and directed the film, which is woven around a Chinese girl's efforts to gain acceptance in an environment she does not fully understand.

LIFESTYLE NOW FITS SERIES

"The Young and the Restless" series star Jaime Lyn Bauer is now 'young and the restless' herself. She's recently filed for a divorce from psychologist Richard Goldstein after 11 months of marriage and a two-month-old son.

JONES TAKES 'HOME' WITH HIM

Singer Jack Jones will have all the comforts of home this fall on his British tour. He's in the process of shipping his lavish mobile home all the way from Hollywood to England for his 13-city tour.

Indy Time Trials Telecast

Memorial Day is fast approaching and, as race fans everywhere know, that is synonymous with the approach of the Indianapolis 500. The major motor car race in the United States, if not the world, is one of the legends of American sports.

On Sunday, May 21 (6 to 7 p.m.) ABC Sports will televise the Indy 500 Time Trials. The drivers will be attempting to qualify for the Memorial Day classic and will be pushing themselves and their machines in an effort to run on May 29.

The Time Trials represent an annual happening at Indianapolis. It might be anyone, defending champion A.J. Foyt, Gordie Johncock, Bobby Unser, or Mario Andretti. It will be all of them and others at some point in time during the month of May at Indy. They will all be sandbagging.

Suddenly, certain drivers are able to induce speeds out of their cars which none of the other runs had indicated the vehicle possessed. It is usually the most obvious on the first day of qualifying, when some cars eat up the track at speeds between 4 to 10 miles-per-hour faster than they had been running during the practice laps. This is called sandbagging.

It's used to camouflage the actual speed which a certain vehicle is capable of. Such cars actually had been running faster in practice than the unofficial time indicated. The driver merely eases off at certain points in the track so that no one lap is run as fast as it might.

Say a driver has been consistently running at 185 mph. So everyone in the pits thinks that is all that the particular driver can get out of his car. The trick is that he may have been running at 190 most of the time and did not want any of the other teams to know about it. He wants to lull the others into a false sense of security about his potential rather than stir them into frantic efforts to improve their own machines.

Whatever the strategies might be, Indianapolis is always fascinating. Men and machines pushing 200 mph in their quest for victory. That is what the Indianapolis 500 is all about. The Time Trials are just a section of the overall spectacle of the Indy 500.

Janet Guthrie will be vying for one of the 33 starting spots in the Indianapolis 500 Time Trials on Sunday, May 21 at 6 p.m.

Elvin Hayes Leads Bullets In Finals

The "Big E," Elvin Hayes, has truly been playing up to his potential in this year's NBA Playoffs. He led Washington to an early upset of division champion San Antonio. Then, playing probably the best basketball of his life, Hayes led the Bullets to a huge upset over the heavily favored Philadelphia 76ers.

On Sunday, May 21, at 1:30 p.m., CBS Sports will present live coverage of the first game of the NBA Finals. Elvin Hayes will lead his Bullets against the Western Conference winner, Denver-Seattle.

Elvin has been an All-Star every year since he entered the league in 1968. Despite his obvious talent, a label has been pinned on Hayes. That label has branded the "Big E" as a perennial loser.

What makes the pain of losing even more unbearable is how close Elvin has led his team to victory in the past. While a student at the University of Houston, the "Big E" led his mates to a super upset win over Lew Alcindor's UCLA Bruins, before the biggest crowd ever to watch a college basketball game. Yet, in the NCAA semi-finals that same year, UCLA routed Houston and shut down Elvin Hayes.

He was never with a contender during the early part of his NBA career. Hayes was said to be moody and a gunner, and was traded to the Bullets in 1972.

In 1975, it appeared as if Hayes would finally taste ultimate victory. That year Washington reached the NBA Finals, only to be destroyed by the underdog Golden State Warriors in four straight games.

Evonne Back On Tennis Scene

Women's tennis is fast approaching the popularity which had previously been preserved only for the men of the game, and many new faces are appearing on the scene to challenge Chris Evert's reign over women's tennis. Evonne Goolagong is not exactly a new face in tennis, but she has been away for quite a while, and she is perhaps the most serious threat to Evert.

ABC Sports presents the World Invitational Tennis Classic at 2 p.m. on Sunday, May 21, from Hilton Head Island, South Carolina. Featured this week is a women's doubles match pitting Evonne Goolagong and Kerry Melville Reid against Diane Fromholtz and current Wimbledon Champion, Virginia Wade.

Marriage and motherhood have recently interrupted Evonne's tennis career but she has made a strong comeback since she returned to the sport. She has won two Virginia Slims events, including a three-set triumph over Chris Evert at Boston.

Goolagong, who gave birth to a daughter, Kelly, on May 12, 1977, warmed up in Australia before coming to the American tour. She entered four tournaments, winning all of them, including the Australian Open.

"I had to start from scratch after delivering Kelly," said Evonne. "My body was weak. I had lost a lot more weight than I should have. I think I lost too much after Kelly because I kept playing tennis through my fifth month. I finally got back into shape last December.

"Tennis is a lot more fun for me now with a family, so I think I should be mentally better prepared for the major tournaments," she said.

If this is the case, Evonne's opponents probably wish she'd stayed single. Always considered one of the quickest and most graceful female tennis players, she is also renowned for her periods of lack of concentration. Goolagong calls it the "walkabouts," and it is nothing but a delight to her opponents. If Evonne has now developed a tougher mental attitude towards the game, she will be a consistently tougher tennis player.

Come to think about it....it seems as if Evonne has never really been away.

A 'FIRST' FOR CHICAGO BULLS

The Chicago Bulls recently retired jersey No. 4 in honor of one of their great players — Jerry Sloan — in recognition of all that he had done for the club's franchise. It was the first such ceremony in the team's history.

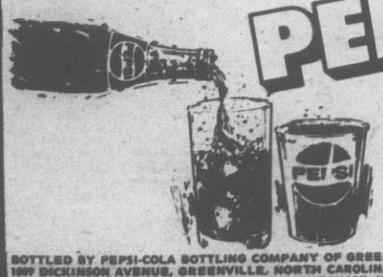

Sloan's contributions to the Bulls was difficult to measure as it included brilliant defensive instincts, great rebounding for a 6-5 player and an incredible ability to come up with the loose ball.

BOWL GAME INTERCEPTED

NBC Sports, which already has contracts for the telecast of the Rose Bowl and Orange Bowl games, has grabbed the Fiesta Bowl away from CBS and will carry it on Christmas Day.

According to Chet Simmons, President, NBC Sports, last year's Fiesta Bowl — telecast by CBS — drew a 55 percent share of the audience, and he rates it just behind New Year's Day's Rose, Orange, Cotton and Sugar Bowl games in importance.

Vince Trades Tunic

Back in the '60's, Vince Edwards starred as the scowling chief resident in neurosurgery at a large general hospital in "Ben Casey." The series was a hit, and was followed by "Matt Lincoln" in which Edwards played a psychiatrist. This series was short-lived, however, and the networks were reluctant to give the rugged actor a third try.

Now Edwards has traded his doctor's tunic for a military uniform and is starring in "The Power and the Passion," airing May 27 on "NBC Saturday Night at the Movies," 9 to 11 p.m.

The drama is centered around an Air Force base where new aircraft is tested, and depicts the pressures, excitement and suspense of such an operation. Intertwined around the basic plot are the personal relationships among the people involved, their families and their friends.

Edwards scripted "The Power and the Passion," a pilot for a possible series, and says the idea came to him as a result of his portrayal of a military officer in the television movie, "The Rhinemann Exchange."

"Someone said I looked good in the uniform, so I decided to write my own vehicle."

Edwards plays Col. Joe Agajanian, Deputy Commander of Operations at fictional California Air Force Base which is similar to Edwards Air Force Base where new aircraft undergo tests and test pilots are trained.

After so many years away from a TV series, why is he hoping for another try? "In this show I'm the boss," he explained. "I didn't want to do someone else's series."

Should the show find a regular slot on NBC's schedule next fall, Edwards expects to be contributing story ideas.

Bronson In Comedy

The Old West is the setting for a sophisticated comedy about how legends are born, in "From Noon Till Three," starring Charles Bronson and Jill Ireland, airing as a "CBS Special Movie Presentation" Saturday, May 27, 9 to 11 p.m.

The story begins with the arrival of Graham Dorsey's (Bronson) gang at a majestic house just outside a small town whose bank they intend to rob later that day. Determined to requisition a new horse to replace his lame one from the young widow, Amanda Starbuck (Ireland) who lives there, Dorsey -- who dreamt that the bank job would result in a massacre — contrives to remain behind. Amanda, quelled at gunpoint, is none too happy about the intruder, but as the hours tick away from noon until 3 p.m. (when the gang is due back to pick up Dorsey), Dorsey's well-honed ability to play upon female loneliness and passion melts her resistance. Spinning wild fabrications about his past outlaw glory, he captivates her body and soul, and all is sublime until word comes that his gang is being decrimated by lawmen. Amanda, her head full of romantic visions, forces Dorsey to risk certain death by aiding his comrades; through he manages to survive by a clever ruse which lands him in jail for a year under an assumed name, an unfortunate soul wearing his clothes is buried and Amanda decides to perpetuate an increasingly heroic myth.

By the time Dorsey returns from jail, Amanda's 'true-life account' of the gloriously romantic desperado has been novelized, dramatized and revered, her house having become a tourist mecca and Dorsey's memory an industry.

Following his release from jail Dorsey confronts Amanda, only to have her refuse to accept him as the 'real' Dorsey — he, she says, is too short, too ugly and too coarse — and his unwelcome visit has overwhelming consequences for all.

Journey Is Great

The strange, wonderful journey of the Seattle Supersonics through the 1977-78 season reached its latest apex recently as Seattle stunned Denver and the rest of the NBA by winning the Western Conference Playoff and reaching the NBA Finals. The Sonics initially surprised Los Angeles and then injury-riddled Portland before taking on the formidable Denver Nuggets. These were the 'nuggets' of Dan Issel, Bobby Jones and the wondrous David Thompson. Seattle threw Marvin Webster, Jack Sikma and Dennis Johnson at the Nuggets and emerged victorious.

On Sunday, May 21, at 1:30 p.m., CBS-TV will present live coverage of Seattle's bid to pull one of the great comebacks as they take on the Philadelphia 76ers-Washington Bullets from the Spectrum-Capital Center.

LARRY O'BRIEN: "WHAT MAKES A WINNING TEAM"

THE SUPREME COURT: HOW IT AFFECTS YOU

HEART SURGERY— WHO REALLY NEEDS IT?

ASK THEM YOURSELF

Send the question, on a postcard, to "Ask," Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave., New York, N.Y. 10022. We'll pay $5 for published questions. Sorry, we can't answer others.

He first worked with dance bands.

FOR WALTER CRONKITE

How did you become interested in broadcasting? —S.G., Asbury, N.J.

● It happened in 1926, in Kansas City, when we got our first crystal headset — with one listener at a time. I still remember when my dad came home one day with an adapter for the set, so two could miraculously listen at the same time. My interest heightened after we moved to Houston. We got a marvelous aluminum gadget, like a tea kettle with earphones, that fitted over little rubber plugs on the side of the set that enabled it to broadcast into the whole room. That was the year we got our first Atwater Kent cathedral radio. We picked up the late-evening broadcasts of the Coon Saunders orchestra and the Nighthawks from the Muehlbach Hotel in Kansas City. My first broadcasting jobs were with dance bands. I was 15 or 16 and much too young, of course, to be working in a hotel nightclub.

FOR THE "ASK" EDITOR

Just how ill is Laurence Olivier? I recently saw him in The Betsy and was shocked at how sick he looked. —L.P., Casper, Wyo.

● In recent years, Olivier, 71, has overcome bouts with thrombosis and dermatomyositis (a muscle-tissue disease). His last setback was kidney surgery, which he claims knocked the stuffing out of him. His lack of physical strength is compensated by his emotional drive. His next film is an adaptation of Ira Levin's best seller, The Boys From Brazil. In it he has the demanding role of a Nazi hunter. When it was finished Olivier finally heeded the pleas of his family to take a rest. "I suppose I do need one," he conceded. "I've been working nonstop since 1976." Olivier, son of a clergyman, started acting in school plays at 10, won an Oscar for Best Actor in 1948 for Hamlet and was made a Lord in 1970 by Queen Elizabeth, the first actor to be so honored.

Olivier and wife Joan Plowright.

FOR JOAN MONDALE

What kind of family training did you have to prepare you for being the Second Lady? —S.B., Yuma, Ariz.

● My close relationship with my mother helped in many ways. She provided me with a strong religious foundation. She taught me the importance of the family spirit. By cleverly using special occasions we always seemed to be in close touch. My early experience in community involvement also came from my mother. Finally, from Mother I heard, "You must have a career. You must be self-sufficient."

FOR BEN VEREEN, singer and actor

Aren't you ashamed that once you became successful you gave up religion, since you got your start singing gospel? —B.K., Meridian, Miss.

● No, I never turned my back on God — and never will — because I'm convinced we are all His instruments. I guess you're referring to the fact that I once studied for the ministry. I started out singing the gospel, and I know that's the way I will end up. I include it in my acts whenever I can. I believe that without religion our lives are meaningless.

FOR RAY MARSHALL, Secretary of Labor

Which of the world's countries suffers most from unemployment; which the least? —M.L., Rye, N.Y.

● Unemployment data comparable to that used in the U.S. are available for only eight other industrialized countries. Among them, the U.S. and Canada have had the highest jobless rates, while Sweden has registered the lowest rate in recent years. However, these figures do not tell the whole story as reasons for unemployment differ markedly from country to country and depend on many factors.

FOR KATE JACKSON, star of Charlie's Angels

Are you from the old school that believes in marriage or from the new one that doesn't? —I.V., Rome, Ga.

● I believe in marriage — and I'll prove it during the next couple of years. My ambition is to be a successful wife and actress at the same time. (I have someone in mind, but since I'm not sure he knows, I don't want him to find out about it on this page.) My ideal man must have a terrific sense of humor (as does this man whom I've known for a long time). Since I'm 5'7½", my man also must be tall and preferably dark.

FOR MELANIE, recording star

I came close to you at one of your concerts and think I admire your complexion as much as I do your singing. Let me in on the secret.—B.H., Salinas, Calif.

● I feed my face, not my mouth. If you have dry spots under your eyes (or even if you don't), smear on mayonnaise. It's a cure, also a preventive. Herb tea bags and a slice of cucumber are great for puffy eyelids. Try my favorite facial — mix together grated cucumber and egg whites, spread on, let dry for at least 15 minutes, then wash off with tepid water.

FOR EVE ARDEN, actress

What's the difference between working on TV now and in Our Miss Brooks, which you made years ago? —S.M., Elgin, Ill.

● We had great autonomy in 1952, when the series was first shown. Maybe the reason was no one around really knew what the medium was all about. Seems too many fingers are in the pie now, which doesn't give performers a chance to prove themselves. And we probably worked harder. We shot 39 shows a year. Today they usually do 22 to 25.

PRO AND CON

Should Patients Have Unrestricted Access To Their Medical Records?

PRO Sylvia A. Law, associate professor of law, New York University

Yes, simply because those records concern a patient's health and life. Evidence shows that when patients are allowed to see their records they are better able to cooperate in treatment and are more likely to be satisfied with the care they receive. In a mobile society, patients should be able to carry their records with them as they move. Sometimes patients may notice misinformation or significant omissions in their medical records and can point out these things to the doctor. That patients may not be able to understand everything in their records is no excuse for refusing them the right to see them. Patients can seek information from the doctor or nurse to better understand their situations.

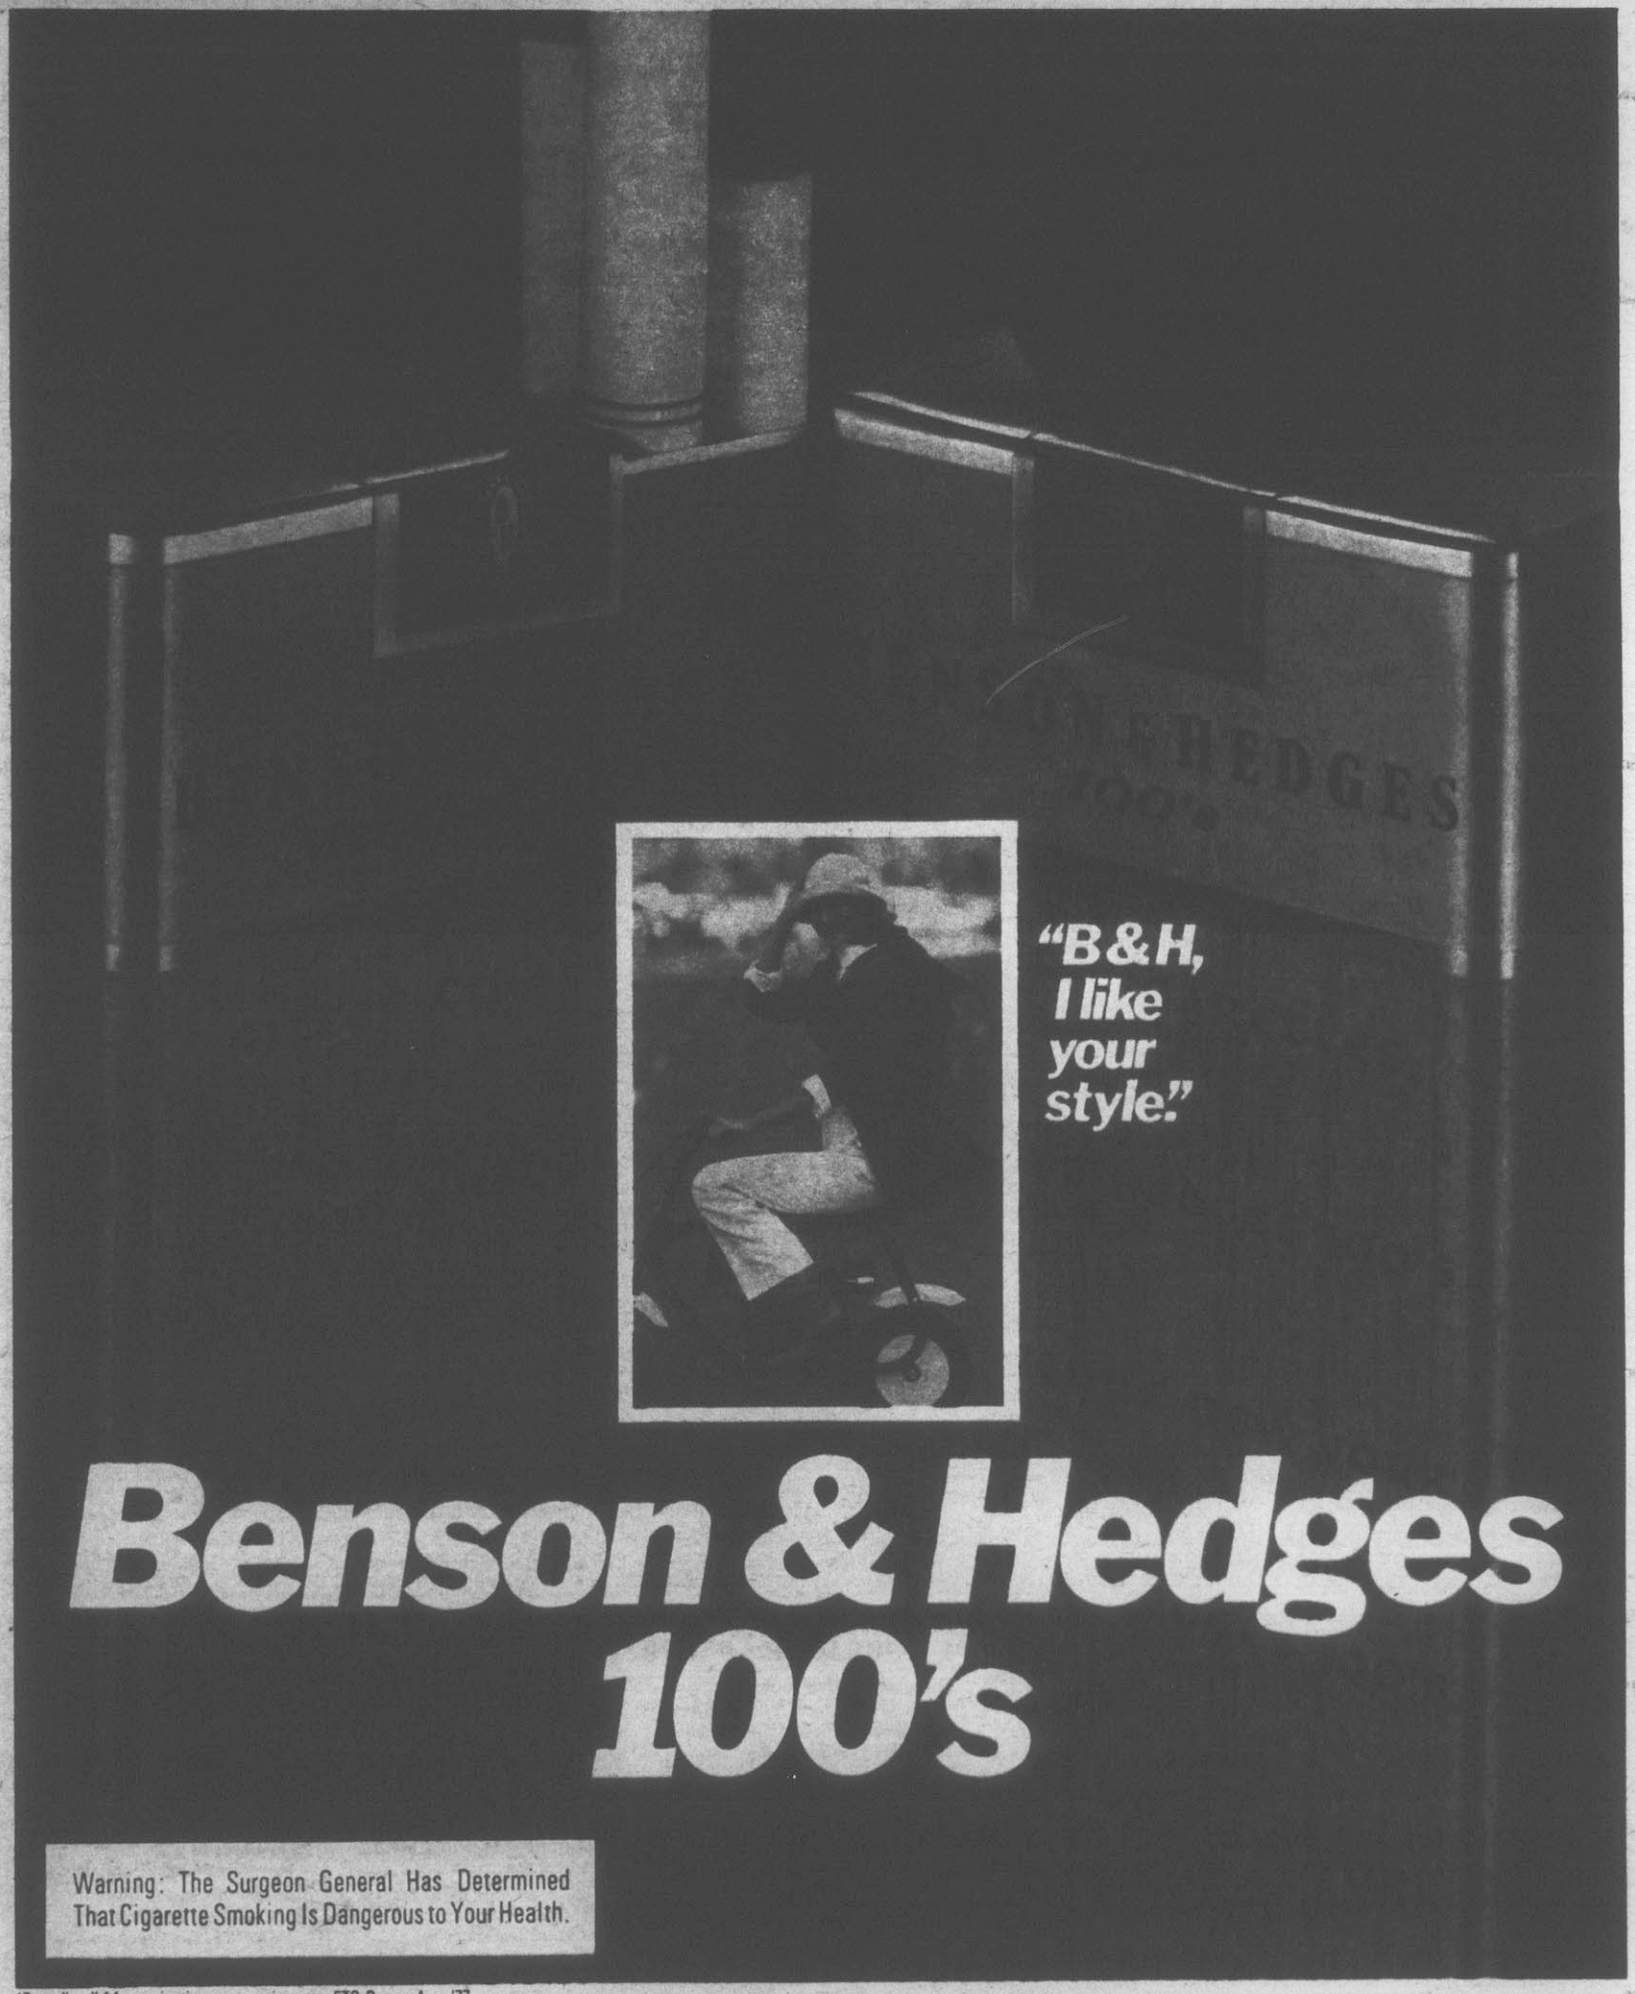

Illustration by Hal Just

CON John H. Budd, M.D., president American Medical Association

Under the appropriate circumstances the patient should have access to pertinent information contained in his or her medical records, but only after the records have been screened by the doctor. The concern of physicians in allowing unrestricted access to medical records is due to the possibility of harm to the patients in reading material that is covered in technical terms and abbreviations that is understood only by trained personnel. For example, a psychiatrist must make some basic evaluations of a patient — this knowledge could be very harmful to an already troubled person. Furthermore, the patient may become confused and apprehensive without a physician's explanation of the raw data in the records.

AN INSIDE VIEW OF THE SUPREME COURT

Since virtually every public problem in America eventually reaches the Court, the nine Justices are among the most powerful — yet least visible — men in the country.

By Nina Totenberg

What is probably the most secret meeting in the United States is held each week in a small room on the second floor of the United States Supreme Court building. What happens in that room profoundly affects the country.

Virtually every public problem in America — busing, capital punishment, abortion, property taxes, pornography, Watergate — eventually reaches the Supreme Court. The nine Justices of the U.S. Supreme Court are among the most powerful — yet least visible — men in the country.

Most Americans have little, if any, idea how the Court makes its landmark decisions. For example, after the Justices heard arguments in the celebrated Bakke case on affirmative action last fall, most people expected a quick ruling. But that's not how decisions are made at the Court. The process is slow and often agonizing and painful.

A former Supreme Court law clerk recently wrote: "Judicial decision-making involves at bottom, a choice between competing values by fallible, pragmatic and, at times, nonrational men engaged in a highly complex process in a very human setting."

The setting for that decision-making process is the oak-paneled conference room where the Justices meet each week, usually on Fridays, to discuss their work. They arrive at 9:30 A.M. and usually pour themselves coffee from a silver urn. Then they shake hands, as has been the custom since 1888, and sit down. They sit around a massive mahogany table, each Justice in a high-backed chair. They are surrounded by about 25 carts wheeled in beforehand from each Justice's chamber. The carts carry briefs, transcripts, memos — everything each Justice thinks he will need for each case that may come up during the exhausting, all-day session.

Only Justices are permitted in the room. The Chief Justice presides, and the most junior Justice goes to the door if any messages must go in or out.

The conference basically has two functions. The first might be called deciding to decide. Each year about 5,000 cases come to the Court for review, but only about 150 are chosen for full consideration. It takes the votes of four Justices to grant full review of a case. All remaining cases are either rejected for consideration or disposed of in some quick way.

Once a case is granted a full review, the Court schedules "oral arguments." At these public arguments, lawyers for each side receive exactly equal time to present their case. And the Justices often pepper the attorneys with questions. Each side also files lengthy written briefs and records.

After the case is heard at oral argument, it goes back to the conference, where a tentative decision is made. After discussing the case, the Justices vote. If the Chief Justice is in the majority, he assigns one Justice to explain in writing the Court's decision. That written decision is known as an opinion of the Court. If the Chief Justice is not in the majority, the senior Justice in the majority decides who will write the opinion. The dissenters usually agree among themselves who will write their opinion.

But agreeing in principle and agreeing in writing are entirely different things. As one Justice observed, "To write a Court opinion, you have to sew a big enough umbrella for five guys to get under, and that can require some pretty fancy sewing."

Sewing is a genteel way to put it. The Justices agonize, bicker, horse trade and lobby, and sometimes there is even sort of a quiet revolution. That's what happened in the case of O'Connor v. Donaldson.

The way the Justices reached a decision in the Donaldson case is fascinating; and what they decided is particularly timely, as across the nation mental patients, if they are not considered dangerous to themselves or others, have begun to be released from institutions as a result of this decision.

Kenneth Donaldson was committed against his will to the state mental institution in Chattahoochee, Fla. He had never tried to commit suicide or been dangerous to anyone else. And he got no psychiatric treatment to speak of in the institution. There were offers for him to live on the outside, but neither Donaldson nor his parents, who committed him, were told about them.

Finally, after 15 years of appealing to various state and

The Next Few Years May Bring Long-Lasting Changes In The Court

Years after President Eisenhower appointed Earl Warren Chief Justice of the United States, Eisenhower said it was "the biggest damn fool mistake I ever made."

John Adams, our second President, said of the man he appointed Chief Justice, "My gift of John Marshall to the people of the United States was the proudest act of my life."

Today the Supreme Court is often referred to by lawyers as "President Nixon's legacy." Four of the nine Justices now on the Court were appointed by Nixon. Only six Presidents have appointed more. Nixon's appointees are all, to one degree or another, conservatives. The two thought to be the most conservative are Chief Justice Warren Burger and William Rehnquist. Slightly to the left of them are Harry Blackmun and Lewis Powell.

The appointment of these four men has transformed the Supreme Court from an activist institution to a basically passive one. Where the so-called liberal Court under Earl Warren seemed eager to jump into the social issues of the times, the Burger Court prefers to avoid controversies if possible.

Where the Warren Court was anxious to use the power of the Federal courts to right perceived wrongs, the Burger Court seems anxious to keep the Federal courts out of as many sticky cases as possible.

But while President Nixon through his appointments to the Court transformed the in-

Nina Totenberg, legal affairs correspondent for National Public Radio, has covered the Supreme Court for 10 years, including five at the National Observer. She twice won the American Bar Association Silver Gavel Award for coverage of the Court. Last year she broke the sensational story that the Court was about to reject the Watergate appeal.

Federal courts, Donaldson won his release and sued the superintendant of the mental hospital, Dr. J. B. O'Connor. Donaldson won, and a jury ordered Dr. O'Connor to pay the former mental patient both compensatory and punitive damages.

O'Connor appealed to the Supreme Court, and on January 15, 1975, the Justices heard the oral argument. According to Court sources, Chief Justice Warren Burger assigned himself to write the opinion for the Court. And here a subtle power struggle began. Burger sent around a draft of his opinion, but the other Justices did not immediately join it. Potter Stewart wrote a memorandum indicating he wished to write a separate concurring opinion.

For months Burger circulated more drafts without much success. Meanwhile, the three law clerks assigned to each Justice were busily finding out what each Justice was privately thinking. They realized a potential revolution was in the air if Stewart risked incurring the Chief's wrath by stealing the opinion from him.

A lot of plotting and worrying was going on in the other Justices' chambers, too. They had been told by their clerks what was afoot. For some time, they had been angered about Burger's tendency to assign opinions when he was not in the majority. But as one Court source put it, "There was a lot of hesitancy by the Justices. After all, you don't want to join an unsuccessful revolution."

Finally, late in the Court term, Stewart circulated his opinion. Burger, realizing he was in danger of losing his majority, began lobbying to keep it. Court sources report that he even lobbied his old friend, Harry Blackmun, while they sat in the steambath at the Court.

But it was too late. Once Stewart had sent his opinion to the other Justices, they quickly joined him and deserted Burger, ignoring established procedure. Then, when the critical fifth Justice joined the opinion, Court sources say that William Brennan visited the ailing William O. Douglas in the hospital. Douglas, as the senior Justice in the Stewart group, which had now become the majority, would have the privilege of assigning the writing of the Court's decision. Court sources described how Brennan took to the hospital the necessary assignment order, and how the next day Douglas's chambers circulated a memo noting that Stewart's concurrence now had a majority of the Justices and that it should be designated the majority opinion.

Burger reportedly offered to alter his opinion, but the other Justices stuck with the Stewart opinion. Finally, on June 26, 1975, in a hushed courtroom, Justice Stewart summarized the opinion of a unanimous Court. His opinion did not decide the issue of damages or the question of whether a patient in a state mental hospital has a right to treatment. His opinion was narrow but clear: a state cannot lock up a person against his will and keep him in mere custodial confinement if that person is dangerous neither to himself nor to others. The damage award was sent back to the lower court for reconsideration. (Donaldson later settled out of court with O'Connor's widow and others for $20,000.)

Burger joined Stewart's opinion in the end. The opinion Burger originally wrote as the majority opinion he filed, instead, as a concurring opinion.

As Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes once wrote of the Court, "We are very quiet here, but it is the quiet of a storm center." FW

Great news from Litton!

New low price range with microwave, too!

ONLY $629*

More for your money. A microwave and a range, all in one.

Introducing the Litton microwave range value of the year, the exciting Model 621, Combination Microwave Range. The range that cooks conventionally, with microwave only, or with a combination of both conventional heat and microwave at the same time.

Cooks three ways.

Bake or broil conventionally, as you always have. For greater speed and convenience, you can cook with microwave only. Quickly heat leftovers, vegetables, sauces or prepare meals right from the freezer. Cook in combination with both microwave and conventional heat. Microwaves penetrate the food and cook quickly; conventional heat browns in crispness. You'll get better taste, better results in up to one-half the time of conventional cooking alone.

A great range value.

Come see the Model 621 Combination Microwave Range, one of a full line of time and energy-saving ranges that cook with microwave, too. For the name and address of your Litton dealer call us, right now, toll free, 800-328-7777. In Minnesota call 612-553-2354.

SUPREME COURT

Continued

Important Judicial Terms

Precisely because the Supreme Court decides difficult cases, negotiation and compromise are necessary as five Justices try to agree to the same thing. The majority opinion that emerges decides the legal issues; issues of fact are decided in the lower courts. Justices who write dissenting opinions hope these may someday become rallying points for overturning the majority view with which they are disagreeing. In a concurring opinion, a Justice agrees with the conclusion, but for different reasons. Each decision forms a precedent for future decisions, so that even when the Court tackles new issues, it has continuity and a solid base of legal reasoning upon which to establish new precedents.

stitution, it is unclear how long the transformation will last. Three of the Court's Justices are over 70 — Burger, Powell and William J. Brennan Jr. Two more are almost 70 — Blackmun and Thurgood Marshall. Indeed, only two of the Justices are under 60 — Rehnquist and John Paul Stevens.

So three of Nixon's conservative appointees are over 69 — Burger, Powell and Blackmun. And the two holdovers from the liberal Warren Court — Brennan and Marshall — are getting on in years, too.

Clearly, President Carter may have an opportunity to reshape the Court. His nominees almost certainly would not be as conservative as Nixon's. But judging from Carter's approving remarks during the campaign about the Burger Court, it also seems clear that Carter is not about to load the Court with flaming liberals.

Whether Carter can change the political makeup of the Court also depends on who vacates the bench. Two of the elderly Nixon appointees, Burger and Powell, seem to be in good health. The third, Blackmun, underwent a cancer prostate operation some months ago but seems to have recovered.

Indeed, the two men most likely to leave the Court soon are liberals Marshall and Brennan. Even if they were replaced by liberals, little would change, since Brennan and Marshall are routinely outvoted.

Marshall's friends expect him to retire within about a year, as soon as he has served on the bench long enough to qualify for his full pension.

If Marshall, the first and only black member of the Court, were to retire, it seems a certainty that a black would be named to replace him. The most likely candidate is Solicitor General Wade McCree, a respected former Federal Appeals Court judge. Carter insiders long for a black woman to be put on the Court. The two mentioned most often are HEW Secretary Patricia Harris and Rep. Barbara Jordan. Neither, however, is considered a favorite of the President.

Brennan is the other possible candidate for retirement soon. He is 72, the oldest member of the Court, and underwent treatment this year for cancer of the throat. If Carter replaces Brennan or Marshall or any other member of the Court, the President will be under heavy pressure to name a woman, though his personal favorite is said to be Attorney General Griffin Bell.

The woman most often mentioned as best qualified is Shirley Hufstedler, a highly respected Federal Appeals Court judge from California.

In addition, since Abe Fortas resigned in 1969, a Jew hasn't been on the Court. Indeed, throughout its history the Court has been a remarkably male, white, Protestant institution. One hundred of the 101 Justices have been white. Ninety have been Protestant. Six have been Catholic, five Jews. All have been male.

SHOULD YOU HAVE THAT BYPASS OPERATION?

Some doctors say yes, others no, so if you suffer from coronary artery disease, it's vital that you thoroughly understand both sides of medicine's hottest debate.

By Paula Dranov with Michael Halberstam, M.D.

About four million Americans suffer from coronary artery disease. About half get the ominous news when an unfamiliar pain grips the chest signaling unmistakably that something is wrong. The medical name for the pain is angina pectoris, and it serves as a warning that blood isn't flowing freely to the heart through the coronary arteries. One or more of the arteries is narrowed — clogged with deposits of fat built up over the years. If the arteries close off completely, keeping blood from reaching its destination, the result is a heart attack.

Until about 11 years ago, doctors couldn't do much about the disease, although such drugs as nitroglycerine did relieve the angina pain. There wasn't, and still isn't, any way of unclogging the arteries. Today, however, there is literally a way of getting around the problem with surgery. The coronary bypass operation introduced in 1967 is simple in theory: take a vein (not an artery) from another part of the body and attach it to the artery above and below the obstruction so that blood can flow around instead of trickling through the narrowing blood vessel.

That takes care of that, or it should. After more than 10 years' experience with the operation, all doctors know for sure is that in most cases the bypass banishes pain. They also feel confident that in severe cases having the operation is less risky than not having it. But the big unanswered question, the one that's causing heated controversy, is whether the bypass operation actually prolongs life.

Most physicians agree that a bypass is necessary for patients crippled with angina that gets no better with medication and for those with severe forms of coronary artery disease. Most of the 70,000 patients who undergo bypass surgery each year fit into one of these two categories. But there's much debate about whether the operation is the best way to treat mild cases when drugs do relieve angina. Do these people need an operation that can cost anywhere from $8,000 to $20,000? Won't less drastic treatment with drugs, diet and exercise work just as well?

The latest round in the ongoing debate was touched off last fall when a group of Veterans Administration hospitals published results of a study showing little difference in survival rates between patients who had bypass operations and those who were treated with drugs, diet and exercise. The patients studied had "chronic stable angina," meaning that the condition was under control with medication. No one with severe coronary artery disease or angina that isn't relieved by drugs was included.

The results were published in the New England Journal of Medicine, a highly respected journal for physicians. The findings were accompanied by an editorial by Dr. Eugene Braunwald of Harvard Medical School, who set out the dilemma posed by the the bypass operation. If it can be proved, Braunwald wrote, that the bypass does indeed prolong the lives of patients with mild forms of coronary artery disease, then it would be logical to examine all the millions of Americans with a high risk of coronary artery disease (men over 40) and to perform bypasses "on the many hundreds of thousands in whom such disease would surely be discovered." On the other hand, if it can be proved that patients do just as well on drugs and with diet and exercise, there would be no need to go to the phenomenal expense of screening millions of people and performing hundreds of thousands of operations.

Many surgeons argue that the number of VA patients who died during or soon after surgery was higher than average. Hospital after hospital produced statistics showing that a greater percentage of their own bypass patients survived the surgery, even the ones with worse forms of the disease than the VA patients.

Then there's the argument that the survival rate among the nonsurgical patients would have been higher if they had been treated with drugs introduced after the study had begun.

Dr. Frank C. Spencer, director of the department of surgery at New York University Medical Center, says the bypass operation usually "works like a light switch" to banish pain. He and his colleagues have recently checked 1,111 of their patients who survived surgery at NYU during the past eight years and found that the death rate among them was no higher than it is among the same age group in the general population. What pleases Spencer so much is that just about all the patients operated on at NYU have severe coronary artery disease — more than one of their arteries are blocked.

Still, disturbing uncertainties persist about the operation. First, there's the surgical risk itself. Over the years, as operative techniques have improved, the risk has dropped to between 1 and 2 percent at most hospitals, although it can be considerably higher at hospitals with little experience in bypass surgery. After the operation, there's no guarantee that another artery won't become blocked, nor can a patient be certain that the bypass will remain open, although most don't close up. There's not even a guarantee that the operation will relieve angina, although in the overwhelming majority of cases it does. In fact, angina seems to be relieved even when the bypass does become blocked, suggesting that the pain relief isn't solely or even primarily due to the delivery of more blood to the heart. But be that as it may, there's no guarantee that the angina won't subside and then recur if another artery becomes blocked. Today most surgeons bypass not just the most severely clogged arteries but others where blockages are developing.

Given these questions, doctors can promise little to anxious patients considering bypass surgery. The operation is so new that there hasn't been time for the long-term follow-up that someday should show statistically how many years a bypass operation can add to a patient's life. Most cardiac surgeons and many nonsurgical cardiologists agree that the operation is being performed without statistical proof of its ultimate effectiveness. But they feel a controlled trial or research study period is not justified for patients severely disabled with angina.

If questions remain unanswered about how effectively the bypass operation prolongs life, similar doubts exist about the long-term benefits of less drastic treatment. New drugs like propranolol have improved on nitroglycerine in relieving pain. No one knows for sure, however, how much good exercise and diet do. In theory, eliminating cholesterol and other fats from the diet should slow or stop the buildup of fatty deposits in the coronary arteries. In theory, exercise should enable the heart to develop "natural" bypasses so that unclogged vessels will be better able to carry the load for the blocked artery. While these measures should work, there's no way of knowing that they will in individual cases. The only way to know for sure what's going on is with an angiogram, a procedure that involves injecting a dye into the bloodstream and then looking at the heart and the blood vessels that serve it under a fluoroscope.

Without an angiogram, the best indication that disease is lurking in the coronary arteries is the warning angina offers or the results of an exercise electrocardiogram or "stress test."

As matters now stand, it's not likely that patients with mild forms of the disease will be rushed into surgery. The usual procedure is to prescribe drugs for the angina, put the patient on a low-fat diet and an exercise program and wait. If, after six months, the angina is no better or has worsened, it may be time to think about a bypass. FW

BEAUTY SURVIVAL GUIDE FOR SUMMER

Jacqui Morgan

Here's how to look cool, beautiful and collected despite the heat and humidity.

By Roberta Addams

Whether or not you're an outdoor woman, summer makes its own special grooming demands. Here are timely tips to help you live up to your good-looks potential.

Sun Care

If your skin is particularly sensitive to the sun, you know that you have to cover up as well as use a sun block or strong sun-screen formula. For those who tan normally, a sun screen is just as important because overexposure to the sun can, at the very least, cause premature aging. So be sure to protect all exposed skin at all times with a sun-screen product. Or else it's a good idea to stay out of the sun. If you are on medication, you might be in for a painful experience, since some drugs cause increased sensitivity to sunlight. Check with your doctor about this. If you want to hold onto your tan, the secret is to moisturize after your shower or bath.

Makeup Mileage

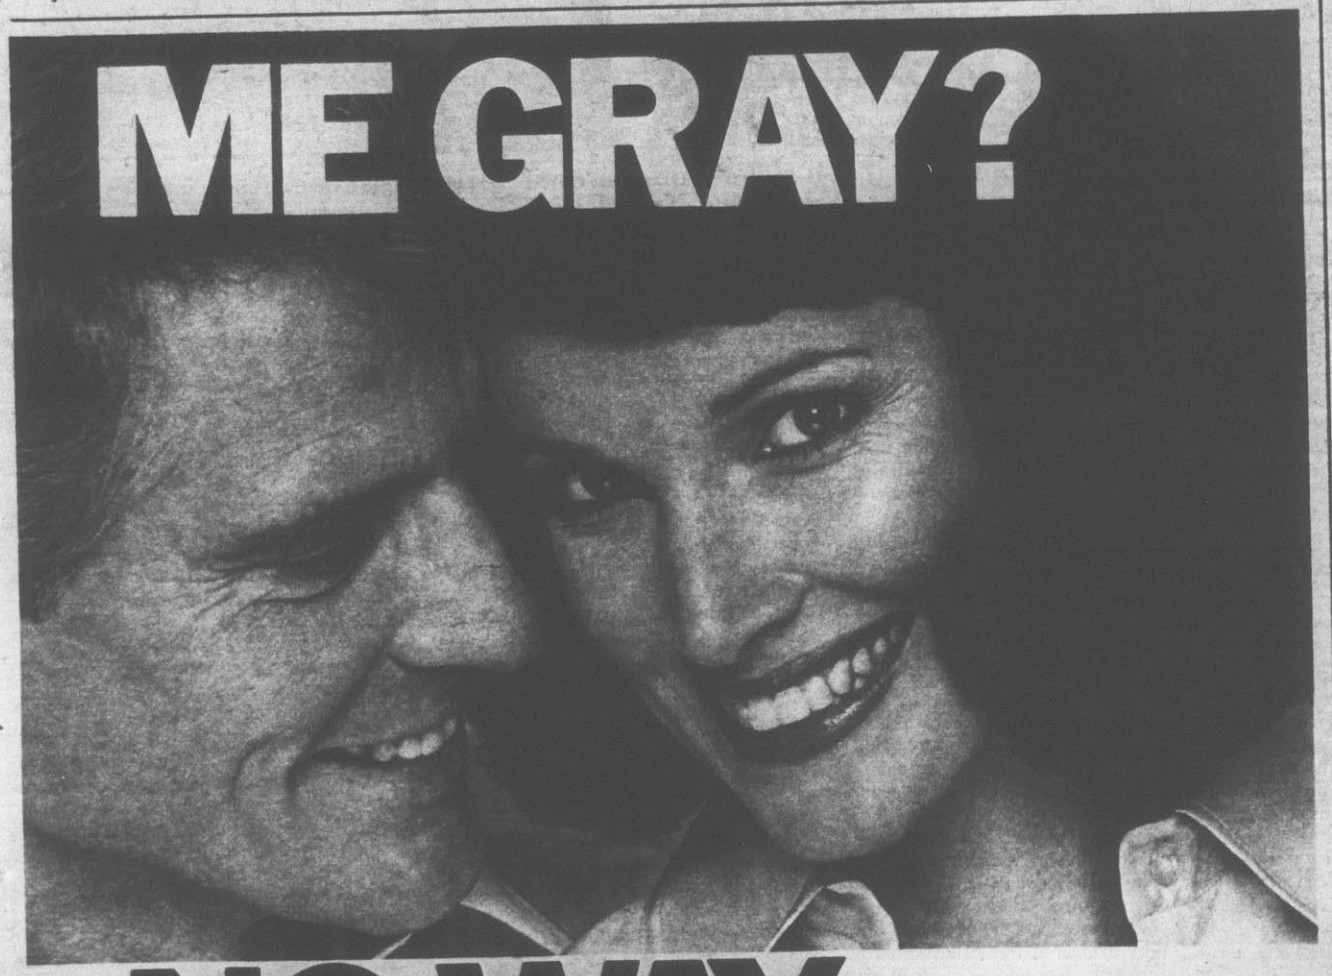

How do you get your makeup to last in wilting weather? Look for waterproof cosmetics, particularly in eye makeup. Whether you're swimming or perspiring at tennis, they can solve annoying makeup drip without sacrificing glamor. Such cosmetics are easily removed. In summer it also helps to switch to a lighter, textured makeup with a water base. If your makeup still runs, set with a sheer, translucent powder.

Hair Savers

Leslie Blanchard, hair-care and color expert, advises more frequent shampooing in summer followed by a moisturizing conditioner, especially after swimming and active sports. If you color your hair, you may shampoo often if you use a mild shampoo and a long-lasting conditioner that you don't wash out. By all means cover your hair when under the sun, but wear a straw hat or cotton scarf, which allows hair to breathe. Synthetic fabric coverings only lock in the perspiration. Another hair saver: never comb hair when wet. First, towel dry, then use a wide-tooth comb. Since hair tends to grow faster in summer, you might consider a short wash-and-wear-cut. Get a body perm to hold in the style if your hair is bone-straight.

Good Grooming

If you're embarrassed because of superfluous hair on legs and you're tired of shaving, you might treat yourself to a professional waxing at a beauty salon. Most waxing enthusiasts says it's a relatively painless procedure that leaves the skin smooth and hair-free for about six weeks. You also can try a cream depilatory at home, but follow directions on the package. Generally, you should do a skin-patch test first to determine whether you're allergic in any way. Don't leave depilatory on legs longer than the recommended time. Remove with a cool or warm wet cloth, not one that's hot, and never with soap. If skin feels a little chafed afterward, a medicated powder can be applied. FW

NO WAY.

My gray looked so awful, it made me look older than my husband.

I'm too young to look old. But no way did I want to use haircoloring. Until I found Loving Care® Color-Lotion.

It's not like most haircolorings. It's gentler. Because Loving Care has no peroxide. And no peroxide to me, means it's not forever.

It comes from Clairol. (And nobody else has anything like it.) It's so simple and easy. All I do is wash away my gray and wash in my own natural color. And I look like "me" again.

But that's not all the good news. My hair's in super shape now. It's got body. And shine. I can't believe how full it is. Loving Care is actually good for my hair.

My hair's never looked better. My hair's never felt better. And neither have I!

You're too young to look old.*

O'Brien "bailing out" the four former ABA teams that were floundering financially at the end of the 76-77 season. The clubs had joined the NBA under the merger hammered out by O'Brien but found themselves squeezed by debts they had agreed to in their eagerness to join the NBA. O'Brien worked out a new financial arrangement to keep the teams on their feet.

LARRY O'BRIEN: "WHAT MAKES A WINNING TEAM"

"There's no substitute for teamwork. It applies to politics, government, sports, life and is the ultimate bottom line between victory and defeat."

By Pam Lambert

National Basketball Association commissioner Lawrence O'Brien has always been a team player. During almost two decades of public life, he's been a member of several winning teams, helping to pilot John Kennedy's political career from his first run for Senator in Massachusetts to his capturing of the Presidency. He became Postmaster General in Lyndon Johnson's cabinet, then campaign manager for Robert Kennedy's aborted quest for the Democratic nomination for President.

Other roles followed, including manager of Hubert Humphrey's 1968 Presidential campaign against Richard Nixon and chairman of the Democratic National Committee. During his life in politics, O'Brien was always in the midst of the action — he was in the motorcade in Dallas, and it was his offices that were broken into by the Watergate burglars.

A native of Springfield, Mass., the birthplace of basketball, O'Brien has been NBA commissioner for almost three years. He and his wife, Elva, have one son, a tax lawyer with the Treasury Department in Washington, D.C., and two grandsons.

Here are some of O'Brien's thoughts on his involvement in politics and sports — and what makes a winning team in either arena.

FAMILY WEEKLY: What made you accept the post of NBA commissioner after spending most of your life in the political arena?

O'BRIEN: When I first got a phone call at my office in Washington asking if I were interested in the job, I wasn't. I had no sports experience or background. I was simply another American sports fan. I had a particular love and affection for the game of basketball, but that was it.

But I was at the point where I had finished my book, No Final Victories. And in looking back over my two decades in politics and government, where during a substantial period I was at the highest levels in terms of my associations and responsibilities, you ask yourself what do you go on to next? What I went onto next would probably have been in the corporate sector somewhere. But to me the elements in the world of sports — the excitement, the challenge, the quest — are of much more interest and provide a much more challenging and meaningful area of activity than if I were in a corporate entity somewhere counting widgets.

Now perhaps we could sell more widgets next month; perhaps we could project two years, five years down the road how many widgets we could sell, but somehow they would always be widgets to me. There wouldn't be any blood, sweat and tears.

FW: How did you initially become so interested in basketball?

O'BRIEN: I think it was a combination of things. I was born and grew up in Springfield, Mass., which is the city where basketball was invented and where the Hall of Fame of basketball is located. But even more than that, the YMCA was located at the end of the street, and once I was old enough to participate, I became a habitué of the gym and acquired a high interest in basketball.

I was never a good basketball player, but I loved it. I participated on the YMCA teams and was on the junior-varsity squad of the high-school team. I was never able to break through, primarily because I insisted on doing a lot of shooting. I've been a lifelong fan of the NBA. Making the 100-mile trip between Springfield and the Boston Garden to watch the Celtics play was not unusual for me.

FW: Do you watch games differently now that you're commissioner?

O'BRIEN: Yes. When I held a season ticket to watch the Knicks back in 1969, one night I found myself sitting across the aisle from the then commissioner, Walter Kennedy. Like most fans, I was an ardent and vocal supporter of my own team, but Kennedy sat stony-faced throughout, and I thought to myself that was probably a part of the job.

Since I've been commissioner, I've attended a number of games in the Garden sitting in the same seats that Walter Kennedy and his party used to occupy and find that I sit there stony-faced, too. I'm keenly interested in the conduct of the game but am neutral in terms of a winner or loser. I'm always wondering whether some result of that game will be on my desk the next day.

So, I must say that one detriment of the job, probably the only one I can think of, is that I just don't enjoy the basketball games in the way I used to.

FW: When you were conducting the negotiations that ultimately led to the merger between the two basketball leagues, did you find your role similar to some of your experiences in political life?

O'BRIEN: Yes. I had been in intensive negotiations in a variety of ways over a good deal of my adult life, whether it was attempts to secure delegates' support for a candidate for President or attempts to enact a legislative program or an attempt to bridge the great differences within the Democratic party.

So I found that the basketball negotiations were not a new experience. Even though you were negotiating in a hotel suite across the table, it was basically the same environment. The doors were locked, or closed at least, and the room might be filled with smoke, so it was a smoke-filled room in the traditional sense. There also were times when one side of the table would decide to terminate the discussion and you would be making efforts to keep people talking.

FW: What qualities make a winning team, whether in sports or in politics?

O'BRIEN: The nitty-gritty goes to the development of a team. Going all the way back to the first campaign I was engaged in on a statewide level, which was in Massachusetts in 1952 when Jack Kennedy ran against Henry Cabot Lodge, teamwork was paramount with us — how could we maximize the potential of the staff and volunteers we had?

In the NBA, the problem is how do you maximize your potential in a sports context. Is it a team or is it a group with a couple of superstars that play their own game? When you analyze it, success in the NBA is invariably the result of a team effort. Every one of the great Boston Celtic teams that won 13 championships played as a team.

You can look at the Portland Trail Blazers, last year's champions. If you look at the sports pages going back to the playoffs last year, they constantly say that the Blazers probably don't match up player for player with some other teams in the league, but their success is due to the fact they play as a team.

I don't think there's any substitute for that. It applies to politics, it applies to government, it applies to sports, it applies to life. The ultimate bottom line that makes the difference, and probably it's just a hairline difference, between victory and defeat is the effectiveness of that entity as a team.

FW: What about leadership?

O'BRIEN: Then the leadership aspect comes in. You have to have a leader. He's the one who has to be sensitive to the team, with the ingenuity and creativity to be involved all the way from the development stage to the enactment stage, or the championship stage if it's a sport. And I don't see any difference in that in what I observe here and what I observed in other roles.

It all goes to persuasion. Can the coach or the captain or your leader persuade you and motivate you? If that's there and you have the innate qualities, the capacity to develop into a team, and the leader can give you direction, then that's the best you can achieve.

How to Achieve Total Financial Freedom

"Millionaires Are Not 100 Times Smarter Than You, They Just Know The Wealth Formula"

Millionaires are not 100 or even 10 times smarter than you. But it is a fact that millionaires are making 10 to 50 and even 100 times more than you.

Are these wealthy people working that much harder than you? No way!

If you are working only 20 hours a week, it would be physically impossible. (There are only 168 hours in a week, no one gets more.)

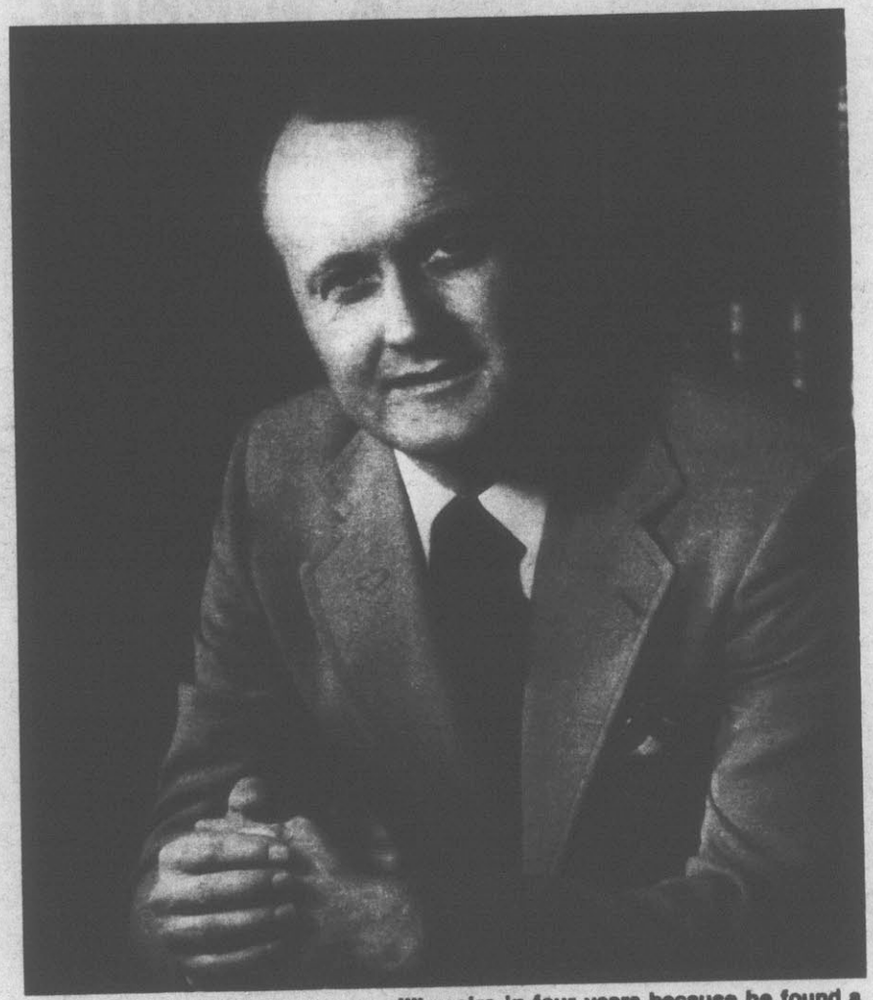

These questions used to really stump me. That was just a few years ago.

My wife and I then lived in Denver, Colorado, at 2545 South High Street. We paid $135 a month rent for a cramped, tumbled down house. My wife was expecting our second child and we were flat broke. I felt desperate and forced into a corner. I had to borrow $150 from my father and another $150 from my father-in-law just to buy the groceries and pay the rent. If that wasn't enough, I was several thousand dollars in debt.

Things are much different now. Last year I could have retired and lived off the income of my one million dollars in real estate holdings. (Incidently, almost all of the income from the real estate is tax free).

Since I had worked 20 to 40 hours a week, I know that I didn't work even 10 times longer or harder than you. And with my C-average from Ames High School (located in Ames, Iowa). I'm quite certain that I'm not any smarter than you.

I did a little better later on but I soon realized that a salaried job was not the way to become financially free. If you'll stop and think, you'll realize that millionaires do not work 10, 20, or 50 times harder or longer than you.

Mark O. Haroldsen became a millionaire in four years because he found a way to harness inflation to his benefit. Now it's your turn! "I've found" says Haroldsen, "that most people just need a specific road map to follow...they can do what I've done."

If hours, efforts, or brains are not what separates the rich from the average guy who is swamped with debts and very little income, then what is?

I learned the answer to that question from an old fellow in Denver. This fellow worked in a drug store stocking the shelves. Very few people knew that he had $200,000 in the bank, all of which he had earned starting from nothing.

Within a year after meeting him, I was told and shown the same thing by a young man who had recently earned over a million dollars. By this time, I began to realize that what I was being shown was truly a remarkable and workable way to grow rich.

I began to apply the principles and methods I had been shown. The results were amazing. I couldn't believe how easy it was, in fact it seemed too easy.

But then I met an elderly lady (83 years old) who although not very smart, has made $117,000 using the same formula.

I then figured my beginning wasn't luck.

For three and one half years, I worked hard to refine and improve on the formula that I had been shown, so that it would be easy to get quicker results.

As I did this, my assets multiplied very rapidly (160% per year) to the point that I didn't have to work any longer.

I guess I am bragging now, but I did start spending alot of time in our back yard pool, traveling around the country, and doing a lot of loafing.

Then one day a friend asked me how he could do what I had done.

So I began to outline the formula that I had improved to show him really how simple it was, and how he could do the same thing.

By the time he approached me, I had written almost a complete volume on the easy way for him to copy my results.

I wrote this in simple, straightforward language so anyone could understand it.

This time my friend's questions were very specific. (He had already begun buying properties with the formulas I had been giving him). Now he had a property he wanted to buy, but was out of cash. How could he buy it?

I not only showed him how to buy without cash, but by the time the deal was complete, he had $5,000 cash in his pocket to boot.

I also showed him how to buy a $26,000 property for $75 down.

You, or anyone, can do exactly what I did, or my close friends have done/ in fact, you may well do it better. (I began doing this in my spare time only).

It doesn't matter where you live or the size of your town or city, my formula will show you exactly how to:

- Buy income properties for as little as $100 down.
- Begin without any cash.
- Put $1,000, $10,000, or even more cash in your pocket when you buy (without selling property).
- Double your assets regularly and consistently.
- Legally avoid, reduce or postpone paying federal or state income taxes.
- Buy bargains at a fraction of their market value.

When you send me a check or money order for $10, I will send you all my formulas and methods, and you are free to use them anywhere and as often as you would like.

Now, if you were a personal friend of mine, I know you would believe me and not need any kind of guarantee that you will be completely satisfied and that my formula will work for you if you apply it. I will back up that guarantee by not cashing your check for 30 days, and if you for any reason change your mind, let me know and I will send your uncashed check back.

You may ask, why am I willing to share my formula for wealth? Well, simply because those of you who order my material will be helping to increase my net worth.

You shouldn't care if I profit as long as you profit. I guarantee that you'll be satisfied that my methods will help you or I'll send your money back!

To order, simply take any size paper, write the words "Financial Freedom", and send your name and address, along with a check for $10.00 to Mark O. Haroldsen, Inc., Dept. G-373, Tudor Mansion Bldg., 4751 Holladay Blvd., Salt Lake City, Utah 84117.

If you send for my material now, I will also send you documents that will show you precisely how you can borrow from $20,000 to $200,000 at 2% above the prime rate using just your signature as collateral.

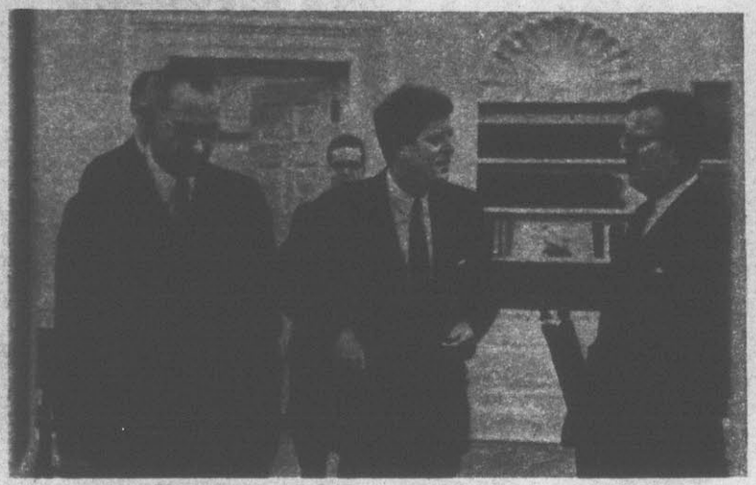

By the way, if you feel a little uneasy about sending me a check or money order for $10.00, simply post-date it by 30 days which will completely eliminate your risk. If you would like to check a financial reference, I have listed one below:

O'BRIEN Continued

O'BRIEN: There cannot be success without real dedication, a commitment. For example, you must have tremendous inherent drive to be involved in the political process. There has to be a willingness to almost — and it causes disaster in personal terms at times — divorce yourself from every other aspect of the normal conduct of your life. Your eyes must be on a certain goal, exclusively and totally overriding even eating, sleeping, family and all the rest.

Any number of talented athletes never achieve success because they don't have the drive, the dedication, the willingness to go through the blood, sweat and tears, the torture of the long march to achieve a high degree of success. I suppose there are those rarities whose natural talent is so great beyond others that they can ride it out with a minimum of personal dedication and sacrifice and achieve this top level of success. But I think that's rare.

FW: You were with John Kennedy from his first campaigning for Senator to the day he was shot in Dallas. Do you have any favorite anecdotes about him?

O'BRIEN: I found when I was doing my book that with all the years I was associated with Jack and the relatively few years I was associated with Lyndon I had a helluva lot more Lyndon stories than Jack stories. I guess it was the nature of the two guys.

It dawned on me that Kennedy thoroughly enjoyed being on the receiving end. He enjoyed the stories one of his associates, Dave Powers, used to tell so much that he was always pushing Powers into the limelight. Jack would listen to the stories Dave had told a hundred times, and he'd laugh just as heartily the 101st time.

FW: What was Hubert Humphrey like?

O'BRIEN: Ebullient, outgoing. I'd say that Hubert was the warmest human being I ever knew, in or out of politics. He was completely open, devoid of guile. I don't think I've ever met a person who had such a great love affair with his fellow human beings as Hubert, and to his detriment at times. He was absolutely incapable of adjusting a staff or letting someone go or bringing someone on the carpet. He might do it occasionally, but you'd know his heart wasn't in it.

My wife and I went to see him in the hospital the last time he was here in New York. When we got to his room, he wasn't there — he was down with the children on the floor below. When he had his legs under him he'd go down and visit with them, send them flowers. We spent two hours talking and reminiscing until the doctor finally had to come in and ask us to leave. He said, "I know you're having a good time; I can hear the laughter, but..."

Hubert was really convinced that he had the disease licked. He was amazing.

FW: Why didn't you run for political office yourself?

O'BRIEN: I suppose if I were to be totally honest with myself, I probably never got up the guts to do it.

I found that I could put a lot of effort into supporting a candidate or a cause; I really could break my butt — and I did. But I thought to myself, I don't really feel I'd have the personal drive to go out and do for myself what I've done on behalf of others. FW

GARY PLAYER: 42 AND GOING STRONG

"They'll say I'm too old to win the United States Open again, but they said that before the Masters, too."

Wide World

Reward for his third Masters win: kisses from daughter Jennifer and son Wayne.

By Barry Abramson

One of the most widely held misconceptions about professional golf is that it takes a big guy with plenty of strength to win a major tournament. The tough courses that the pros compete on demand booming drives, and, supposedly, little guys can't bring that off. Gary Player of South Africa has knocked that theory into a cocked hat. At 5′ 6″ and 150 pounds, he has won more than 100 tournaments in 15 countries during a 25-year pro career.

His most dramatic victories to date came this past April when he captured the Masters and the Tournament of Champions on successive weeks. In both he made up seven strokes on the final day, firing a 64 at the Masters and a 67 at the T of C. Golf veterans say they can't recall a player winning two events in a row from so far back on the final day.

"My big goal now is to win the U.S. Open in June," he says. "A victory there would put me even with Jack Nicklaus, who is the only golfer to have twice won the 'Big Four' [the U.S. Open, the British Open, the PGA Championship and the Masters]. They'll say I'm too old to win the U.S. Open again, but they said that before the Masters, too. Player had just turned 42 when he won this year's Masters, making him the oldest player ever to win the tourney.

The knock against Player before the Masters was not only his age but also the weight-lifting he had been doing to build up his strength. Robert Trent Jones, the noted golf-course architect, said Player's weight-lifting would tie up his muscles and kill any chance of his winning. "Can you imagine a man with a stomach out to here talking about physical fitness?" Player said angrily. "I weighed 150 when I was 16, and I weigh 150 today. That's because I've conditioned myself by running and exercising every day. A man who looks after himself can play golf as well at 50 as he did at 25."

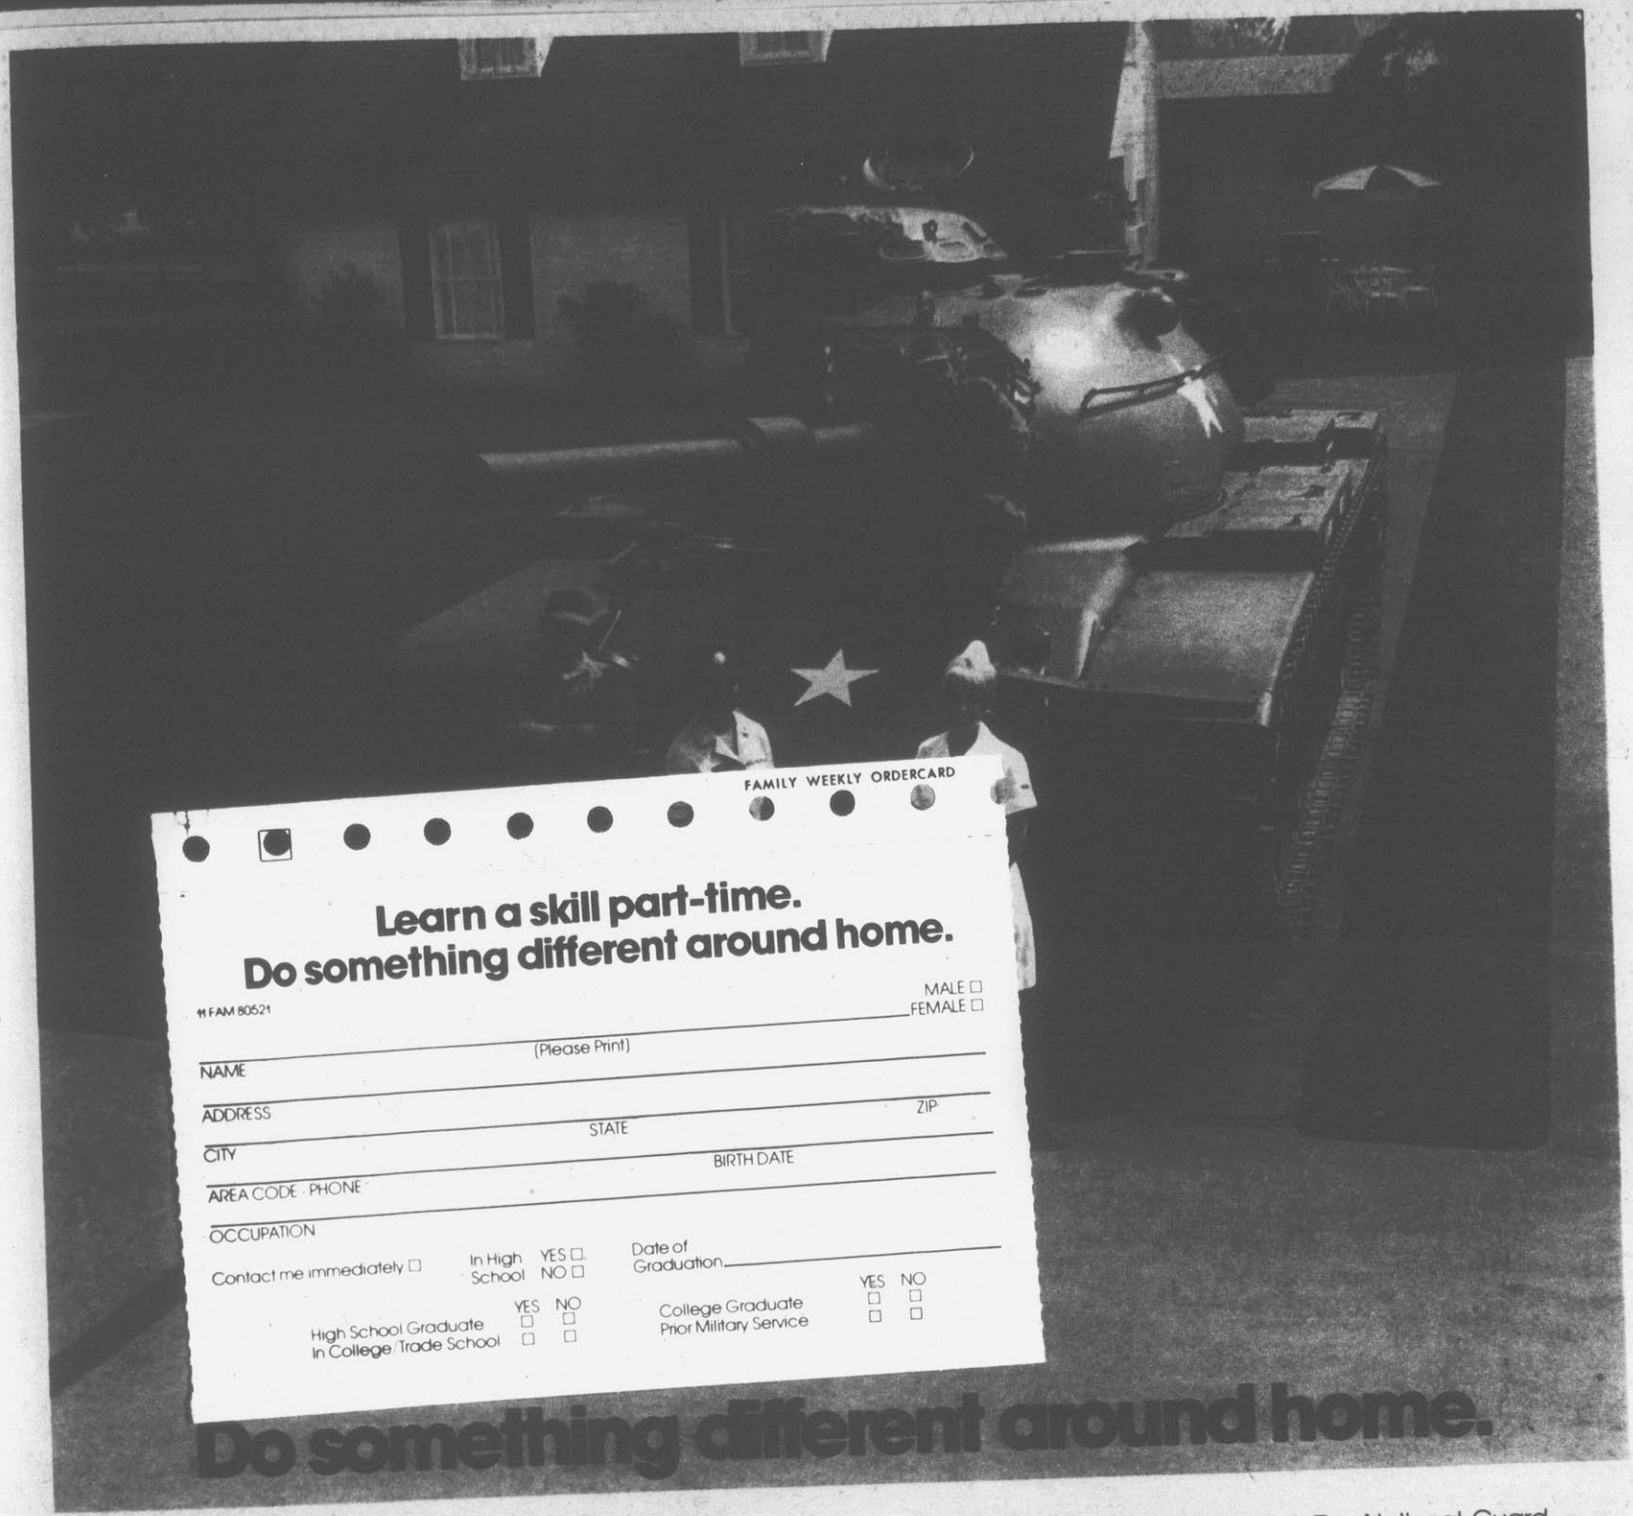

The South African star points out that he has a special problem competing on the pro tour that none of his rivals has to face. "I would like to see Jack Nicklaus make the five 20,000-mile round trips between South Africa and the United States as I did last year," he says. "It still takes 33 hours by jet to cover that distance, and it takes a lot out of you."

He is also a target of special abuse. Opponents of the South African apartheid policy have demonstrated against him, and prior to one tournament he received a threat against his life. Policemen in plain clothes walked the tournament with him. "I love my country, but I disagree with some of the Government's policies," he says. "I can't understand why some people should want to hold me responsible for something that is not my doing."

Player may be considered a conservative by some standards, but he is definitely liberal insofar as South African customs and laws are concerned. He has gone out of his way to befriend blacks in his country and is generous to blacks who caddy for him. A few years ago, he arranged for Lee Elder, the best-known American black golfer, to join him on a golf tour in South Africa.

Because he is so intense when he plays, Player sometimes ignores fans who come up to him. So many think he is cold. Actually, he gets very hurt if he thinks people dislike him. Fellow golfers say that if he hears one person boo him in a crowd he will seek out that person and ask, "What do you have against me? If I've offended you, please let me know what I did."

Player's home in South Africa is on a large farm where he and his wife, Vivienne, raise horses. The couple has six children. "Wayne, my 15-year-old, is a real golf bug," says Player, "and I'm advising him to follow me as a professional golfer. If I didn't think it was a wonderful life, I certainly wouldn't be encouraging him." FW

ROY COOPER: HE'S A COLLEGE EDUCATED RODEO STAR

But as a boy he was asthmatic, allergic to horse hair and a runt.

By Kathryn Morris

Roy Cooper, a 22-year-old New Mexico cowboy, is typical of an increasing number of college educated young men now making a business of rodeo competition. But he's more successful than most. He earned over $100,000 during his first two years as a professional.

Roy grew up on a ranch established in 1905 by his grandfather near Monument, N.M., and attended Southwestern State University in Durant, Okla., on a rodeo scholarship.

Roy was a champion before joining the Professional Rodeo Cowboys Association, which sanctions the only shows in which performances can be counted toward professional championships. Last year at the American Junior Rodeo Association finals, he received the Alvin Davis Founder's Award as the "outstanding individual in 25 years." In 1976, his first year of PRCA competition, he won the calf-roping championship, was Rookie of the Year and took the roping crown at the National Finals Rodeo in Oklahoma City. He was the first rookie to take the championship and won more money than any rookie in history.

He repeated his PRCA win in 1977, but not his performance at the national finals, where he captured third place and $5,733. This year he is well up among the top competitors in calf-roping.

As a boy Roy was asthmatic, allergic to (of all things) horse hair and a runt. But he had a determination to win that he has never lost. He began roping at age 5, and he practiced diligently. Even on cold winter afternoons, he'd come home from school and head for the corral to flank calves. Then he'd sit by the fire at night and "tie his feet" using fast "two wraps and a hooey."

Roy's lariat travels true, his long legs cover distance quickly, and he has been described as having "possibly the fastest hands in the business." Toots Mansfield, seven-time world champion calf roper, says, "Roy has perfected the art of roping and tying a calf about as far as it can be perfected."

The rodeo cowboy makes an investment every time he enters a show. Each man pays an entry fee of up to $400. Fees are augmented by "added money" put up by sponsors to lure good competitors.

In olden days, entry fees made up the principal of the fund at which cowboys aimed, but with the spiraling popularity of rodeo as a spectator event, inducements have increased enough to make the arena attractive to young "businessmen" like Roy. FW

JACKIE GLEASON: WHY THE GREAT ONE IS GREAT

"He's a perfectionist who would do everything — all the acting, writing, directing, producing — if he could."

Viani Navarrete

Sidekick Art Carney is bemused by his old buddy's antics.

By Andy Rosenblatt

The Great One is back. But he's not the man he used to be. Sure, Jackie Gleason still growls when he's on stage. But the big man is gentle and gracious when he's at home. Gone are the all-night parties, the women, the drinking, the nightclubs. Today he cooks for his wife, goes over the homework of his stepson and rarely drinks anything stronger than milk.

Sometimes, he also works.

With the grace and finesse of a member of the German High Command, Gleason paces the stage as he prepares two Honeymooner specials for television. It's only the second time he and the Honeymooners have rehearsed together in the last five years.

He worries about camera angles, the music, the props, the lights and the script. He's a perfectionist who would do everything — all the acting, writing, directing, producing — if he could. He can't, so he does the next-best thing. He makes sure everything is done his way. "Jackie's very specific about what he wants," says Ed Waglin, producer of the Honeymooners for the last 15 years. "He seldom gives you a suggestion that can be interpreted more than one way."

On stage, Gleason remains compulsive, moody, funny and loud. Off stage, he's a different man. Some of the changes have come with age; others with a new family.

The Great One is 62. That doesn't make Gleason an antique, but it has made him more mellow and mature. His friends say he also is becoming settled. For years, Gleason had been a troubled man. Now he has a new wife and a 14-year-old stepson. Gleason spends much of his time playing golf and reading — mostly about psychic phenomena, religion, mysticism and life after death.

Two years ago, Gleason's life began to change. It started with a phone call and a dinner date with a beautiful, lithe blonde. Her name was Marilyn Taylor Horwitch. She was June Taylor's sister. She and Gleason had dated when she danced on the Great One's variety show. They had fallen in love then, but their romance was never complete. Gleason was married and the Catholic Church wouldn't permit a divorce. He finally got one under New York's liberal divorce law, but not until 1969. Marilyn Taylor was married to Chicago businessman Robert Horwitch by that time. Horwitch died in 1971; Jackie and Marilyn renewed their ties three years later and married in 1975. "We were in love for 25 years," Gleason says. "There were troubles, but it ended with a Warner Brothers finish."

With his new marriage came a renewed interest in work. Gleason produced a 25th anniversary Honeymooners special and began appearing in movies again: first Mr. Billion and then Smokey and the Bandit. He has been asked to appear in sequels being planned for Smokey and The Sting. Gleason also has agreed to appear in a Broadway play for the first time in 20 years. He is now touring in a new production of Sly Fox.

Gleason doesn't think much of television anymore. He pans its "bureaucracy" and says all the situation comedies are the same. He only watches sports.

His friends say when Gleason talks work, he talks about the movies. They believe he needs another challenge, dramatic parts such as the ones he had in The Hustler and Requiem for a Heavyweight.

But the Great One claims he's not interested in challenges. Nor is he interested in crusades: "I'm no prophet, I'm not out to save the world. I'd be happy if I could save this street." FW

BURNS AWAY MORE FAT EACH 24 HOURS THAN IF YOU RAN 14 MILES A DAY!

Incredible "Crash-Loss" Breakthrough Reported in Leading American Magazines Works So Fast You Can Actually Measure the Difference In Your Waistline In Just 24 to 48 Hours!

Yes, LOSE up to 6 POUNDS the first 48 HOURS — LOSE up to 12 POUNDS the first 7 days — LOSE up to 4, 5, even 7 POUNDS MORE the next 7 days — and continue to burn away as much as 7 to 9 pounds more fat every 2 weeks thereafter, (if you still need it) . . . until you've finally lost 50 — 70 — 100 pounds OR MORE . . . without fasting, without constant willpower, without constant pangs of hunger or a single moment of body-rocking exercise!

Recommended by the U.S. Government's very own doctors to members of Congress who want to lose weight fast . . . Hailed as the weight-loss "breakthrough of the century" by leading medical journals . . . here at last is the most effective NO-DRUG program for FAST — INSTANT — PERMANENT LIFETIME WEIGHT-LOSS ever made available to the public without a prescription!

WORKS SO FAST THE FIRST WEEK ALONE YOU LOSE AS MUCH AS 1½ TO 2 POUNDS OF BOTH FLUID AND FAT EVERY 24 HOURS!

Direct from the pages of medical journals and leading American magazines come reports of an incredible "fat burning" breakthrough by medical researchers at one of Boston's foremost medical schools! Reports of a new "crash-loss" program (featuring a remarkable natural substance) that safely yet surely steps up FAT-BURNING METABOLISM . . . forces your system to ATTACK bulging pockets of fat . . . and starts to shrink and burn that fat in just a matter of hours!

Yes, from one of New England's leading medical centers comes the new SUPER FAT-BURNER way to turn up your "inner furnace" . . . unlock those clinging pockets of fat . . . break them down SO FAST . . . you burn off excess bulge at the unbelievable rate of up to 6 POUNDS of both fluid and fat GONE the very first weekend alone!

Think of it! You actually burn away more fat each 24 hours than if you ran 12 to 14 miles a day! Lose more inches each week than if you did 300 sit-ups each morning and 300 push-ups each night! Actually LOSE as much as A FULL SIZE THE FIRST 7 DAYS . . . and from 3 to 5 inches off your waistline the very first month!

That's right! Weight-loss results and inches-off wonders that absolutely stagger the imagination. Just look:

U.S. ARMY OFFICERS LOSE WEIGHT 3 TIMES FASTER THAN EVER BEFORE!

Case History #1: When medical researchers in Boston, New York, Philadelphia and Los Angeles first tested this new hi-amino concept on a scientific weight-loss program . . . they reported astonishing results of as much as 12 POUNDS LOST IN JUST THE FIRST 7 DAYS! — 16 to 18 pounds gone by the end of week number two — and most mind-boggling of all — U.S. Army Officers actually losing weight 3 times faster than ever before! As much as 50 POUNDS GONE, like that!

WAISTLINES SHRINK UP TO 3 INCHES IN 7 DAYS — A FULL 5 INCHES SMALLER IN A SINGLE MONTH!

Case History #2: When first rumors of this medical breakthrough leaked out to professional actors, actresses and celebrities . . . they immediately rushed to the offices of America's leading weight-loss specialists to get their hands on this "magic compound"; and no wonder! Because the first week alone they carved away as much as 2 pounds a day . . . 13 pounds a week . . . were forced to take in their belts 3 notches smaller in just 10 days!

DOCTORS REPORT: AVERAGE LOSS — 57 POUNDS!

Case History #3: But most significant of all . . . when universities, hospitals and medical schools, (such as New York's Leading Medical School and Cleveland's largest hospital) tested this newly discovered "crash-loss" program on patients who all their lives had been hopelessly overweight . . . they reported astonishing losses of as much as 2 pounds a day at the start . . . 20 to 30 pounds a month . . . as much as 70 pounds lost over a single summer season! — by simply stepping up their fat-burning metabolism and burning, melting, stabilizing 50, 70, 100 pounds of hard-set fat . . . FASTER, SURER than they had ever dreamed possible!

WORKS LIKE "POWDERED HEAT" — MAKES YOUR INNER FURNACE BREAK DOWN BODY FAT!

What is this wondrous new development that helps safely stimulate fat-burning metabolism and shrink your body's fat cells the moment it starts working in your system? It is a totally new concept in the war against fat. An ANTI-FAT WEAPON unlike anything you've ever seen, or tried in your life. A FAT-BURNING aid that helps you convert body fat to body fuel AUTOMATICALLY . . . and EVAPORATE excess pounds and inches starting the very first day!

Think of it! A medically proven formula that in such an effective reducing aid . . . that when combined with the food you eat on this "crash-loss" program . . . burns off as much fat each 24 hours as if you jogged up to 14 miles a day . . . or played 3 hours of tennis in the most brutal heat!

The name of this wondrous amino formula is "THERA-SLIM-100" and here is precisely how you use it to win the body and figure of your dreams as you:

- LOSE UP TO 4 TO 6 INCHES OFF YOUR WAISTLINE
- LOSE UP TO 2 TO 6 INCHES OFF YOUR HIPS
- LOSE UP TO 3 INCHES OFF YOUR THIGHS
- LOSE UP TO 4 INCHES OFF YOUR BUTTOCKS
- LOSE UP TO 4 INCHES OFF YOUR STOMACH

and as we've said before, starting not in weeks, but in mere days.

HELPS YOUR BODY CONVERT STORED UP FAT TO BURNED UP ENERGY! At this very moment — having read this far — you are but one short step away from LIFETIME IMMUNITY TO FAT! Now comes your FINAL GIANT STEP into a whole new world of LIFETIME SLIMNESS.

Of course, there is one thing you must keep in mind. With the "THERA-SLIM-100" way to LIFETIME SLIMNESS you cannot gorge yourself on all sorts of fattening foods, candies and desserts. Not that you'd ever want to, because with "THERA-SLIM-100" — due to your new, stepped up metabolism — besides enormous weight-loss you also experience a loss of hunger. Which makes it one of the easiest ways to lose weight fast. Now here's how simple it is:

STEP #1 — YOU EAT

In addition to the wide and tasty selection of food you enjoy morning and night, (all scientifically programmed to help maintain a high level of FAT BURN-OFF) . . .

STEP #2 — YOU TAKE "THERA-SLIM-100" hi amino compound.

Once a day, you take "THERA-SLIM-100" in a glass of water, (just like refreshing fruit juice). This hi-amino intake helps keep the fat-burning chain-reaction going ALL 24 HOURS OF THE DAY — NON STOP!

STEP #3 — YOU HAVE AUTOMATICALLY STEPPED UP YOUR FAT-BURNING METABOLISM — SO YOU AUTOMATICALLY BURN OFF EXCESS WEIGHT!

In virtually no time at all, you make your inner furnace accelerate fat burn-off. Safely, gently, yet surely you cause a gradual change in your fat-burning metabolism as you "rev-up" that inner furnace.

The result: Your body begins to eliminate stored-up fat and fluid at a rate so incredibly fast, the very first weekend alone YOU DRAIN AWAY AS MUCH AS 5 OR 6 POUNDS!

In short, with the "THERA-SLIM-100" weight-loss program you force your body to automatically convert body fat to body fuel . . . automatically shrink fatty cells . . . drain off excess flab . . . flush it right out of your system ONCE AND FOR ALL!

Never before has medical science offered you a surer, faster, more effective weight-loss method, (short of total fasting) than this super fat-burning breakthrough developed at one of Boston's Leading Medical Schools.

THE FACTS ARE IN! THE RESEARCH IS DONE! THE INCREDIBLE WEIGHT-SLASHING RESULTS HAVE BEEN PROVEN BEYOND A SHADOW OF A DOUBT BY MEDICAL SCHOOLS — HOSPITALS — DOCTORS — AND SCORES AND SCORES OF OVERWEIGHT PATIENTS! NOW THE FINAL STEP IS UP TO YOU!

REMEMBER: You must see dramatic results in just 24 hours — results you can measure with both your scale and your tape measure . . . you must lose:

up to 6 lbs. the first 48 hours up to 12 lbs. the first 7 days up to 7 lbs. more the next 7 days or it costs you nothing! Simply return within 10 days for full refund (except postage and handling, of course). Act now!

IF YOU READ NOTHING ELSE — READ THIS!

What you see on this page is the announcement of the latest breakthrough by medical science in the war against fat. Developed at one of Boston's leading medical schools, the incredible weight-loss results this new "crash-loss" program delivers are so astonishing (average loss 57 lbs.) it has been featured in every leading medical journal . . . given headline coverage in the medical news columns of many major newspapers. Aside from — ABSOLUTE STARVATION — there is no surer, faster, more effective way to slash away pounds and inches than with this Boston Medical School discovery.

However, before starting we advise you to consult with your physician to be sure you are in normal health and your only problem is excess weight. Individuals with gout, heart disease, diabetes or pregnant women should not use it at all. As a matter of fact, we insist that you show this entire program to your family physician . . . have him check you regularly to make sure you're not losing too much, too fast . . . and advise when you've lost enough. See if he doesn't agree that the "THERA-SLIM-100" road to Lifetime Slimness, including the recommended progressive daily tonnage, isn't by far the most effective approach to the disposal of excess weight ever developed by medical science.

ARMOUR'S ARMORY

STUDY DOES IT

Some think my thinking's rather muddy,
But I've a room that's called my study,
And there, away from all distraction,
I get my mental satisfaction.

I may just sit, stare into space,
Or daydream in that study place,
Or I may lie upon my sofa
And sleep until my nap is ofa.

It's true I don't devote each minute
To what's called study while I'm in it,
But even if I'm ineffectual,
"Study" sounds quite intellectual.

HOLDS DENTURES FIRM WITHOUT DAILY "FIXINGS"

Snug Cushions hold dentures comfortably tight for weeks

No more "fixings" every morning with messy powders or creams. Even if dentures need "fixing" after every meal, here's important news. Snug cushions restore dentures' holding power so dentures stay comfortably tight for weeks. Snug, the soft, effective temporary aid, forms a "comfort bond" between dentures and gums. Sticks to dentures, not to gums. Rinse, scrub or soak Snug fresh and clean. Easy to remove, but won't wash off or flake away. So, end daily "fixings"! Use Snug to hold dentures comfortably tight for weeks.

How Family Weekly Affected My Life

"YOU HAVE BEEN THE GREATEST THING EVER TO HAPPEN TO ME."

By Rosalyn Abrevaya

We often receive reader mail that we think would be inspiring or helpful to share. An extraordinary response to one feature prompted this interview.

It started as a trickle, then came an avalanche of letters and contributions to John Carpenter, whose ranch for handicapped children was the subject of an article titled "The Heartwarming Story of a Man Who Loves Kids" in our December 25th issue.

"You have been the greatest thing ever to happen to me," Carpenter told us.

Since the article he has received almost $13,000 from FAMILY WEEKLY readers. He now has a fan club in Laredo, Texas ("Almost the whole town"), organized by a man who read the article and canvassed every conceivable person for donations. Here are excerpts from a few of the letters.

"I was s'pposed to put this in Sunday school [four pennies taped to the inside of an envelope], but my mama said God would allow me to send it to you in His name." From a six-year-old in Taos, N.M.

"It was very nice to read about people like yourself in FAMILY WEEKLY. We don't all have your courage. I'm enclosing a check. I'm afraid I can't say it was as hard to earn as your work is to do." Boise, Idaho.

"Please accept this check to honor a truly loving person. I read in Sunday's paper a little of your life and a great deal of devotion to unfortunate children. I wish you good health and continued compassion in an age when we are too selfish." Alamo, Calif.

"My husband and I read your story. Please accept the enclosed check. Thank you for allowing us to plant a seed for such a worthwhile cause." Naugatuck, Conn.

"May God bless you for your work with these special children. Somehow God will keep your efforts from failing for lack of funds. I hope this helps." Waco, Texas

"The name of your ranch is Heaven on Earth, and I thought sending this memorium, to honor a young boy who has died, would make it seem as if he were still with us on earth." Owatonna, Minn.

"With tears in my eyes I read the story in FAMILY WEEKLY about a man who loves kids. Many years ago I had a dream to do just what you are doing, and I hope that I can someday." Phoenix

Carpenter has since been named Citizen of the Month by the Los Angeles City Council and received a Human Rights award from the Bahai religious movement.

John Carpenter, who likes to be known as "the cowboy who cares," has one endearing wish — to leave a legacy behind, so that when he's gone his dedicated life's work and the ranch might continue. He doesn't know yet how this will take place. But given his indomitable will and strong faith, he will certainly be shown the way. FW

Choose from 5 colors: Black, Camel, Green, Blue or Red.

We named this jumper "Eve" because it changes into a new fashion personality with every blouse, sweater and jacket in your closet! It's casual over a turtleneck sweater, sporty over a shirt, dressy over a soft tie blouse or cowl. Or wear it "as is" under a jacket or cardigan (just add a scarf for flare). It's so beautifully cut you can wear it alone as a party dress, bare-armed with a load of bracelets.

You'll love the nice things this jumper does to your figure with its slim princess line and flare-out skirt. And it's so comfortable. The side way stretch of the double knit polyester fabric breathes when you breathe, never binds or rides up.

Just one jumper will give you a versatile wardrobe for any occasion. Buy two... the sky's the limit!

WHAT YOUR DOLLAR REALLY BUYS

Believe it or not, in most cases wages have gone up even faster than the prices of many common items.

By Rochelle Jones

If you think prices go up every time you shop, you are probably right. But if you think things are costing more, you could be wrong.

In fact, even with rising prices and new Social Security taxes taking a bigger bite out of your take-home pay, your dollar in many ways is stretching further than it did 20 years ago. Many common items cost less in real dollars in 1977 than they did in 1957.

The clue is the Consumer Price Index, which is used by the Government to measure changes in the price of consumer goods and services and the difference between prices and cost. In the last 20 years the Consumer Price Index went up 115 percent. That means it took $2.15 to buy in 1977 what $1 bought in 1957. In slightly different terms the dollar in 1977 would have been worth 46 cents in 1957.

The catch is that wages have gone up even faster than prices. Although prices have risen, it probably takes less of your income to purchase many things, so the cost is less.

Charles Steffans, an analyst in the Office of the Consumer Price Index, recently computed for FAMILY WEEKLY the difference in price of 26 common items between 1957 and 1977. (The items were selected at random, and 1977 was used to compare prices because the 1978 figures are not yet available.) Steffans found that the prices of 16 of these items had gone up slightly or not at all since 1957.

Most food items surveyed fell into this category. A loaf of bread, for example, that cost 19 cents in 1957 cost 38 cents in 1977, an increase of 107 percent, or 8 percent less than the rise in the overall Consumer Price Index. A pound of center-cut loin pork chops that sold for an average 87 cents a pound in 1957 was advertised by a national supermarket chain for $1.69 a pound in 1977, an overall increase of 111 percent.

There were exceptions, of course. A pound of coffee which cost $1.02 in 1957 has risen 250 percent, and the 115 percent rise in sugar has helped to drive up the cost of a two-ounce chocolate bar 211 percent.

Wage increases, which have helped to keep the cost of some items steady, also have helped to push the price — and cost — of many services to levels unimagined in 1957. At the top of the list are hospital rates. A semiprivate hospital room has gone up an astounding 519 percent.

Listed below are the price increases of 26 items since 1957 and how those increases compare with the rise in the overall Consumer Price Index. FW

AT LAST A "WATERBED" FOR YOUR ACHING FEET!

- You literally walk on water!
- Instant relief from pressure on painful warts, calluses, bunions!
- No more hot, tired, sore foot misery!

Here's the invention millions and millions of aching feet have longed for! Aqua-Stride innersoles are soap-and-water washable, strong, transparent vinyl, with water actually sealed into each of 9 orthopedically designed compartments. These water-cushions conform to every part of your foot, just as a waterbed does to your body! Each of the six critical zones of your foot receives individual protection and support: TOES, METATARSAL BONES, PHALANGE JOINTS, BALL, ARCH and HEEL. You can wear Aqua-Stride innersoles with dress shoes, boots, sneakers, jogging shoes, slippers — even women's backless or open-toed shoes, because they're transparent, and covered up by your feet. Won't move, shift, or ride up because they come with self-stick adhesive on the bottom to hold them firmly in place. Try them risk-free for 2 weeks! If your feet trouble you, if you must be on your feet a lot walking or standing, Aqua-Stride may be the closest thing to a miracle you'll ever experience! But don't take our word for it — try "walking on water" at our risk — and if you're not thrilled, pleased, comforted and completely ecstatic, shoot them right back within 14 days for a full refund (except postage and handling), even though they've been worn every day! Hurry — give your aching feet a real break. Mail coupon now.

Genuine Porcelain, Trimmed in Real 22 Karat Gold!

1978 Edition

The Supreme Collector's Item!

American Treasury Proudly Presents

ONLY $5.98

THE PRESIDENTIAL PLATE

Honoring All 38 Presidents of the United States in Full Color! Imagine this magnificent gold trimmed plate, over 10 inches in diameter, and depicting every Chief Executive Officer from George Washington to Jimmy Carter, hanging in a place of honor in your home! Picture it proudly displayed on a hutch or shelf to attract every eye! This oversized genuine porcelain commemorative is not only a triumph of the platemaker's craftsmanship, it's a valuable historical reference as well, for it gives each President's dates in office beneath his portrait. And in the center, the American eagle, holding the olive branch of peace and the arrows symbolizing America's defensive might, bears the Latin Motto "E Pluribus Unum" (one out of many) in its beak, as a reminder that this one united nation was created from many individual states.

Order quickly, because we expect a flood of orders. You may inspect and admire your Presidential Plate in your home without risk. If you are not delighted in every way with its beauty and value, you may return it within 14 days for full refund (except postage and handling, of course.) Mail the coupon now!

TWO IDEAS FOR SUNDAY ENTERTAINING

Traditional Sunday Dinner

The delightful spring months are perfect for having friends drop in for a meal.

By Marilyn Hansen

Cranberry Fizz Cooler
Roast Loin of Pork with Prunes
Carrot Rum Puree
Green Beans Almondine
New Potatoes with Parsley
Strawberry Gelatin Pie
Coffee — Tea

CRANBERRY FIZZ COOLER

- 4 cups cranberry juice, chilled
- 1 cup ginger ale, chilled
- 3 tablespoons lemon juice
- ½ pint lemon or orange sherbet

1. In pitcher, combine cranberry juice, ginger ale and lemon juice. Add ice cubes.
2. Pour into 6-oz. glasses and top with a small scoop of sherbet. Serve promptly.

Makes 8 servings

ROAST LOIN OF PORK WITH PRUNES

- 5 -lb. loin pork roast, chine-bone cut and tied, chops lightly cracked
- 16 ready-to-eat pitted prunes
- 2 teaspoons salt
- ¼ teaspoon ground black pepper
- ½ teaspoon thyme leaves
- Boiling water
- 3 tablespoons flour

1. Preheat oven to 325°F.
2. Have butcher cut off chine bone, replace and lightly crack chops; tie roast securely with cord.
3. Insert prunes between chops. Rub roast with salt, pepper and thyme.
4. Place roast fat side up in roasting pan and insert meat thermometer in fleshy part of meat in center of roast away from bone and fat.
5. Roast, uncovered, 30 to 35 minutes per pound or to 170°F. on meat thermometer.
6. Remove pork to heated platter; remove meat thermometer. Cover lightly with foil.
7. Pour pan juices and drippings into measuring cup. Skim off fat; measure 2 tablespoons into roasting pan.
8. Stir flour into fat smoothly. Add boiling water to drippings in measuring cup to make 1¾ cups. Add to flour mixture, stirring rapidly with wire whisk until mixture thickens and boils. Taste; add salt and pepper if desired. Serve hot gravy with pork.

Makes 6 to 8 servings

CARROT PUREE AU RUM

- 1 lb. carrots, peeled and sliced
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1 cup boiling water
- 2 tablespoons butter or margarine
- 2 tablespoons heavy cream or evaporated milk
- 2 tablespoons golden rum
- 2 tablespoons brown sugar

1. Cook carrots in salted, boiling water until tender; drain well.
2. Place carrots in food processor and process until very smooth. Clean sides of processor and process again.
3. Add butter; process. Add cream, rum and sugar; process again. Heat if necessary.

Makes 4 to 6 servings

STRAWBERRY GELATIN PIE

- 1 pkg. (3 ozs.) strawberry or strawberry-banana flavor gelatin
- 1 cup boiling water
- ¾ cup cold water
- 2 cups fresh strawberries, sliced
- 1 baked 9-inch pie shell, cooled
- 1 cup frozen whipped topping, thawed
- 1 banana, sliced

1. Dissolve gelatin in boiling water. Add cold water and chill until thickened.
2. Add strawberries and spoon into pie shell. Chill until firm, about 3 hours.
3. Garnish with spoonfuls of whipped topping and banana slices.

Makes 6 to 8 servings

"Let's Have A Brunch"

Assorted Juices Celery Sticks Olives
Chicken à La King
Big Baking Powder Biscuits
Tomato Pudding Favorite Coleslaw
Pineapple Wedges in Cinnamon Syrup
Champagne Coffee

CHICKEN A LA KING

- 1 (2½-lb.) broiler-fryer, cut up
- 1 qt. water
- 1 stalk celery with leaves
- 1 onion, stuck with 2 cloves
- ½ carrot, sliced
- ½ teaspoon salt
- ¼ teaspoon peppercorns

Sauce:

- 6 tablespoons butter or margarine
- 1 cup sliced celery
- 1 cup sliced mushrooms or 1 can (3 or 4 ozs., drained)
- 6 tablespoons flour
- 2 cups chicken broth
- 1 cup milk
- 1 teaspoon salt
- ⅛ teaspoon ground black pepper
- 2 tablespoons chopped pimiento
- ½ pkg. (10-oz. size) frozen peas, thawed
- Cooked white or brown rice or split baking powder biscuits

1. Place chicken, water, celery, onion, carrot, salt and peppercorns in large saucepan. Heat to boiling, reduce heat and simmer 30 minutes until chicken is very tender.
2. Remove chicken and cool. Strain broth and reserve for sauce.
3. When chicken is cool enough to handle, remove skin and bones and cut into bit-sized pieces; about 3 cups.
4. Make sauce: in large saucepan or Dutch oven, melt butter. Stir in celery and mushrooms and cook, stirring 3 minutes.
5. Blend in the flour smoothly. Add 2 cups chicken broth and 1 cup milk. Heat to boiling, stirring.
6. Add salt, pepper, pimiento and peas. Heat to boiling, reduce heat and simmer 5 minutes.
7. Serve hot over cooked rice or split baking powder biscuits.

Makes 6 servings

TOMATO PUDDING

- 2 cups tomato puree
- ¼ teaspoon salt
- ¾ cup packed light brown sugar
- ¼ cup sugar
- 1 cup boiling water
- ½ cup butter or margarine, melted
- 3 cups toasted bread cubes

1. Preheat oven to 350°F. In medium saucepan, combine tomato puree, salt, brown sugar, sugar and boiling water.
2. Heat to boiling, stirring until sugar dissolves; reduce heat and simmer 5 minutes, uncovered.
3. Pour melted butter over bread cubes. Stir in tomato mixture.
4. Bake for 40 to 45 minutes until puffed and bubbly.

Serves 6

PINEAPPLE WEDGES IN CINNAMON SYRUP

- 1 fresh Hawaiian pineapple
- 2 cups water
- 1 cup sugar
- 1 cinnamon stick
- 4 tablespoons brandy, optional

1. Cut top off pineapple; discard. Cut pineapple in half. Cut pineapple shell from inner fruit; discard. Cut fruit into wedges, lengthwise. Cut off inner core.
2. In large skillet, combine water, sugar and cinnamon stick. Heat to boiling, stirring until sugar dissolves. Reduce heat and simmer 5 minutes, uncovered.
3. Add pineapple wedges to syrup; return to boiling. Reduce heat and simmer 10 minutes, uncovered, or until tender.
4. Remove from heat; stir in brandy. Chill.

Makes 6 to 8 servings

BUTTERMILK BISCUITS

- 2 cups unsifted all-purpose flour
- ½ tablespoon baking soda
- 2 teaspoons baking powder
- ½ teaspoon salt
- ½ cup shortening
- ⅔ cup buttermilk
- 2 tablespoons shortening, melted

1. Preheat oven to 450°F.
2. Combine flour, baking soda, baking powder and salt into large mixing bowl.
3. Add shortening and cut in with pastry blender or two knives until mixture is mealy. Add buttermilk and stir until well mixed and dough cleans side of bowl.
4. Turn mixture out onto floured board and knead lightly 5 or 6 times. Roll dough to ½-inch thickness. Cut out biscuits with 2½-inch round cutter, dipped in flour before each cutting.
5. Place biscuits on ungreased baking sheet. Brush top of biscuits with melted shortening. Bake 12 to 15 minutes until light golden brown. Serve hot with butter.

WHAT IN THE WORLD

Films Rated "Rx"

Millions of employees are now being encouraged to watch films while on the job — films on health education and health care, that is. By showing the films, companies hope employees will learn how to take better care of themselves.

The films cover dozens of health topics, including high blood pressure, alcoholism, peptic ulcers and stress. Some employers select films relating to a health problem prevalent in their industry. A telephone company, for example, showed its operators a film on low back pain.

What's the payoff for the companies that pick up the tab? Less absenteeism and fewer medical bills to foot.

A New Look At Premenstrual Symptoms

If you're one of the many women who suffer from premenstrual bloating, cramps or irritability, relief may be in your mind, not in your medicine cabinet. Although these symptoms are real enough, a new study by Diane N. Ruble of Princeton Univ. suggests that many women experience these problems primarily because they expect to suffer them.

For the experiment, Ruble, an asst. prof. of psychology, selected 44 students. Unknown to them, the women were scheduled for the "test" 6 or 7 days before their periods were due.

After the "test," the women were given varying information about the expected date of menstruation. They were then given a questionnaire asking which symptoms they had experienced in the last few days.

The women who had been told they were premenstrual reported significantly more bloating, pain and change in eating habits — although they were as far away from their periods as the others.

Is There A Uniform In Your Future?

Uniform wearers are in step with the times. One of every 10 working Americans wears a uniform, and in the next decade that number could double as more businesses join the ranks.

Why the move to uniforms in a country where people prize their individuality? According to Howard A. Wolfe, exec. dir. of the Nat'l. Ass'n. of Uniform Manufacturers, "The uniform projects an image of the corporate entity. When you see a uniform, you feel the people are professionals."

Wolfe also foresees more creative uses of uniforms. He says colors might be used to identify what people do, just as we currently identify chefs and nurses by their clothing.

In the uniformed future, gardeners might wear green, fruit sellers orange and bartenders olive. If that's enough to make you think nostalgically of gray-flannel suits, Wolfe hastens to point out that they also are uniforms, of sorts.

"Reading Fever" Sweeps Idaho

Educators in Idaho have developed a new approach to promoting reading skills — they're asking parents to read to their children 15 minutes a day. Since the program's start in Oct. '76, reading fever has swept the state to the extent that radio and TV personalities are likely to ask, "Have you read to your child today?"

Elizabeth Schlaefle, dir. of "Right to Read," says the program is a way of strengthening family life as well as promoting reading. "Anyone who's ever been read to remembers those as special times," she says. "Even if they couldn't understand all the words, they felt loved."

Schlaefle says interested families can start their own reading program if they keep a few suggestions in mind.

First, set aside a specific time for reading every day. Next, find suitable reading materials, ones that will interest the entire family. Schlaefle recommends asking your local librarian for suggestions.

Finally, don't forget the reading period is a time for the family to be together, so everyone can share the experience and discuss what they've read.

For more information about starting a reading program, request a free copy of Reading in the Home from Diane Janes, Scholastic Magazines, Dept. FW, 50 W. 44th St., N.Y., N.Y. 10036.

Quick Takes

Where are Americans moving these days? A major national moving company analyzed its 176,000 moves last year to find out. Their report says the state with the highest percentage of inbound moves is Ark., and the state with the highest percentage of outbound moves is N.Y. Why are people moving to Ark.? The company attributes the influx to corporate expansion in the state.

Most visits to the doctor's office aren't serious, reports the Health Insurance Inst. It reports that doctors surveyed described almost ½ of their office visits as "not serious." Only 1 out of every 50 office visits resulted in a hospital admission.

People in cold climates make more telephone calls than people in warmer areas according to a survey by AT&T. Swedes made an average of 2,215 phone calls each during the year ending last June 30 compared with the average American, who made fewer than 1,000 calls.

Four of every 10 American women work outside their homes during pregnancy says a study by the Nat'l. Survey of Family Growth. According to information collected by the Nat'l. Center for Health Statistics, young women are most likely to work during pregnancy. Almost ½ of all pregnant women aged 15 to 24 worked during the 9 months before they gave birth.

The best-selling items in drugstores aren't drugs. The top 10 drugstore sellers include flashcubes and three brands of film.

Now . . . the cover collection for every American who loves Norman Rockwell and treasures historic stamps!

Norman Rockwell Classics and Historic American Stamps

Mail Delivery Stamp First Issued Washington D.C., Oct. 26, 1963

Norman Rockwell's classic 1922 Post painting of an inquisitive postal clerk above goes perfectly with the accompanying 1963 Mail Delivery stamp.

In each case the stamp so perfectly complements the Rockwell painting that the result is a cover collection of unsurpassed beauty, meaning, and importance.

Cover shown smaller than actual 7¾" x 4" size.

© Saturday Evening Post 1978

Imagine owning many of the century's most colorful, fascinating, and significant official U.S. postage stamps ... Imagine, too, owning a collection of 100 classic Norman Rockwell paintings ... Now imagine the two combined in a cover collection of unsurpassed beauty, meaning, and importance.

For more than half a century, Norman Rockwell has captured the spirit of America—especially in his paintings for The Saturday Evening Post. Not surprisingly, official U.S. postage stamps have commemorated many of the same subjects and themes as these classic Norman Rockwell paintings. Now, at last, great Rockwell paintings and related historic stamps are coming together! The result is a cover collection that honors America as it pays tribute to our nation's best-loved artist.

Just look how the paintings and stamps combine in perfect harmony!

For instance, Norman Rockwell's cherished portrait of President Kennedy with the 1964 stamp issued in Kennedy's honor . . . "Memories," a World War I Rockwell classic, with the 1945 stamp honoring the U.S. Navy . . . "Between Trains," with the 1950 stamp honoring the Railroad Engineers of America.

As you've noticed, many of the stamps are quite old; they are rarely seen today outside private collections.

Each classic Rockwell painting will be beautifully engraved and lithographed.

Each of the 100 covers will be richly engraved and lithographed in full color on specially crafted paper—to faithfully capture every nuance and subtle detail of the Rockwell original.

Important Anniversary Postmarks.

Each cover in the collection will be officially postmarked on the precise anniversary date of the stamp's First Day of Issue, at the original Post Office of First Issue. These important postmarks will certify that this limited-edition collection can never be duplicated.

Guaranteed Price. Convenient Acquisition Plan.

The covers will be issued at the convenient rate of three per month. The favorable original issue price of just $3.50 per cover is guaranteed for the entire collection. There is no need to send any payment now; you will be billed with each month's shipment.

Reservation Deadline: June 30, 1978

Reservations can be guaranteed only until June 30, 1978. The total number of collections to be issued will be strictly limited to the exact number of reservations postmarked by that date.

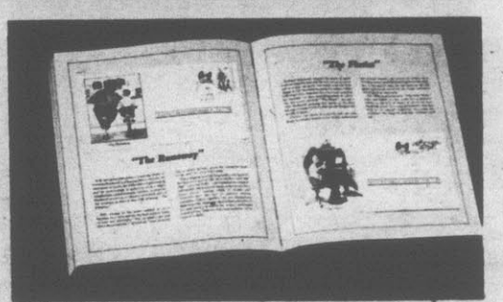

Rockwell's John F. Kennedy, "The World Remembers"... with 1964 U.S. John F. Kennedy Memorial stamp.

Rockwell's World War I sailors, "Memories"... with U.S. Navy stamp of 1945.

Rockwell's sleeping trainman, "Between Trains"... with U.S. Railroad Engineers stamp of 1950.

This Collector's Album will be given to each subscriber, at no extra cost.
