

Hunger, Disease Await Returnees To Kolwezi

By SERGE SCHMIDMANN
Associated Press Writer
KINSHASA, Zaire (AP)

Refugees returning to Kolwezi face starvation and epidemics, the command of French forces in Shaba Province says, while rebels were reported retreating through Zambia carrying off many European hostages and loot.

"We are in a dead city," Col. Yves Gras said Tuesday. He told reporters in Kolwezi the city has no water, electricity or food for the flood of returning black refugees, and with the city's vital copper mines closed, no income.

A relief official said there was a serious threat of typhoid and cholera from the hundreds of rotting corpses in the streets of Kolwezi, a city with a normal population of 100,000.

A Red Cross official returning to Kinshasa said all white victims in the town had been identified and their bodies buried, but black corpses remained in the streets. Some foreigners in Kinshasa were angry that the Belgian paratroopers, who also jumped into Kolwezi to aid in the evacuation of an estimated 2,500 foreigners, pulled out before all of the bodies had been buried.

In Paris, President Valéry Giscard d'Estaing told reporters Tuesday night that the French troops will be withdrawn from Zaire as soon as they have traced foreigners still missing.

"The unit of French paratroopers sent to Kolwezi to guarantee the protection of foreign residents will return to its base as soon as it has completed its task of searching for persons who are missing or who may have been taken away as hostages," he said at the end of a meeting between France and 21 African countries.

"The Zaire government will be informed of the date of this withdrawal, so it can draw the necessary conclusions and reorganize the defense of the territory," he said.

A European relief official said as many as 300 white foreigners remain unaccounted for after the week-long occupation of Kolwezi by invading Katangan exiles from Angola. He said it was believed that some foreigners had been taken prisoner by the rebels who were driven out of the provincial capital over the weekend by about 800 French Foreign Legion paratroopers.

British newspapers reported from Lusaka, capital of neighboring Zambia, that hundreds of rebels were fleeing southern Zaire into northwest Zambia on their way back to bases in Angola.

One rebel leader told correspondents in northern Zambia that the retreating troops had "many European hostages," including women and children.

The newspaper reports in London said many of the fleeing rebels, part of the estimated 4,000 rebels who invaded southern Zaire May 12, were seen marching along jungle roads en route to Angola carrying radios, cameras, clothing, household goods and other loot. They said Zambian villagers reported seeing a 100-vehicle convoy, mostly cars and trucks stolen in Kolwezi, carrying heavily armed soldiers in the direction of Angola early Tuesday.

French soldiers operating in the bush outside Kolwezi, 840 miles southeast of Kinshasa, reported finding 20 French women and children hiding from the rebel gang that had killed male members of their families, the French Defense Ministry said. It also said it had received unofficial information that the legionnaires also had found 20 more victims of the rebel rampage at a new massacre site. It was not known if the two discoveries were connected.

There still has been no precise count of the number of foreigners killed in the Kolwezi area, but the ministry spokesman said it may exceed 200. Earlier counts put the toll at about 170.

The 1,200 Belgian troops withdrew from Kolwezi on Monday, but about 600 remained at the government air base at Kamina, 130 to the north. Belgian Prime Minister Leo Tindemans said Belgium "will not maintain forces in Shaba or elsewhere permanently. This is out of the question."

FORMAL CEREMONY... dedicating the recently completed Joint Recreation and Parks/Library Complex at 2000 Cedar Lane took place Tuesday afternoon. Participants in the Joint Recreation , Library Facility Dedicated Tuesday

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

Several weeks after being operational, a formal ceremony was held on Tuesday afternoon dedicating the Joint Recreation and Parks/Library Complex at 2000 Cedar Lane.

Mayor Percy Cox officiated, cutting the deep gold ribbon, assisted by Recreation and Parks Director Boyd Lee; City Librarian Elizabeth Copeland; Recreation and Parks Vice-Chairman Mrs. Wallace Woolees; and Sheppard Memorial Library Board of Directors vice-chairman Mrs. Marjorie Dunn of Winterville.

Among those on hand to witness the ceremony were William Friend, architect who designed the modern one-story building, and J. H. Hudson, general contractor for the building.

"All of us are real proud of this facility," Cox said during the brief ceremony. "I understand it's the first of its kind in the state. Greenville needed a new recreation office and a new library facility. This is a grand building for these purposes and a fine location. I'm really happy that we have this facility in operation for the citizens of Greenville."

"It's great," Boyd Lee commented. "It has turned out to be a very practical arrangement with the two public agencies working together in one facility. I can see it has really great potential."

Miss Copeland remarked "It's good to have this facility to help take care of the expanded population in Greenville. Eastern Branch had long outgrown its old facility and with the new library here, we can provide much better service in a much nicer atmosphere. The library is being heavily used already."

Lee told those gathered at the entrance area outside the building "the cost of the building is $398,000, and plans for it were first put into motion four years ago. One especially good thing about this building, we're able to close off any of the three sections not in use and this is a real economic innovation in saving on energy costs."

Cox added that the joint complex "is a facility made possible by federal revenue sharing funds. This represents money that otherwise would have had to come from local tax funds had the federal money not been available."

Youth Drowns

Greenville Rescue personnel recovered the body Tuesday night of a 16-year-old youth from a pond located off the Old River Road approximately one mile from the airport.

Sheriff Ralph Tyson said that Gary Atkinson of Rt. 6, Box 343, Greenville, was the victim of an apparent accidental drowning late Tuesday afternoon.

Pitt County Medical Examiner, Dr. Jack Wilkerson, confirmed this morning that Atkinson's death was attributed to drowning.

The sheriff reported that Elworth Bradley and Tony Johnson, both of Rt. 6, Greenville, told officers they were with Atkinson at the pond and were riding on a raft built on steel drums with a plywood deck.

Atkinson, they informed officers, dived into the pond from the raft, returned to the surface once or twice and then went under.

Sheriff Tyson, who indicated that deputies found no evidence of foul play, said that the water was an estimated 20 feet deep at some points of the pond.

The incident took place at approximately 6:45 p.m., he said, and Atkinson's body was recovered around 8:40 p.m.

N.C. Tax Refunds Largers This Year

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolinians are getting larger income-tax refunds this year than they did a year ago, but that does not mean state taxpayers are saving money, Revenue Secretary Mark Lynch reported today.

Lynch said 1,269,000 refund checks had been mailed by Tuesday, with amounts averaging $112.79. A year ago at this time, 1,225,000 checks had been processed, and refunds were averaging $98.70, the secretary said.

At the same time, however, the Revenue Department released figures showing an increase of 7.15 percent in state income-tax revenues through the first 10 months of the fiscal year. Adjusting the figures to reflect changes in the income-tax withholding system, the incometax revenues were up 17.77 percent.

Lynch said inflation was the primary factor in both the revenue and refund increases. The processing of refunds will continue through late June, he said.

Meanwhile, Lynch said the state's net general-fund revenues for the same 10-month period, ending April 30, were $1.74 billion, an increase of 14.38 percent over the previous year when adjusted for the changes in withholding.

Those figures reflected a continuing upward trend in general-fund revenues, which Lynch linked to a boost in the state's economy.

"The improvement in the economy has been very fine," he said. "But as far as predicting that trend will continue, I can't do that accurately."

Begin General Debate In Disarmament Talks

By SAMUEL KOO
Associated Press Writer
UNITED NATIONS (AP)

The General Assembly special session on disarmament begins a two-week general debate today, searching for a common strategy to halt the nuclear weapons race and divert to peaceful purposes nearly $400 billion spent annually on arms.

Nearly 130 officials, including 20 heads of government and 53 cabinet ministers from the 149

U.N. member countries, are scheduled to speak.

Vice President Walter F. Mondale sets out the U.S. policy this afternoon in an address that is expected to contain no significant proposals. He will speak after Yugoslav Prime Minister Veselin Djuranovic outlines the views of Third World countries that originally called for the session.

U.S. sources said Mondale will seek to convince the delegates that President Carter's policies aimed at preventing the spread of nuclear weapons are in the best interests of the non-nuclear countries.

He is also expected to discuss ways in which the nations that acquire weapons from the superpowers can help cut back on the multibillion dollar worldwide conventional arms trade.

Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim reported to the assembly Tuesday that significant progress was being made in the second round of U.S.-Soviet Strategic Arms Limitation Talks.

Further SALT negotiations are scheduled in Washington Friday between Secretary of State Cyrus A. Vance and his Soviet counterpart, Andrei A. Gromyko. The talks will center on agreements for lowering limits on long-range nuclear weapon delivery vehicles to replace those set in the 1974 Vladivostok agreement, which permitted 2,400 long-range missiles and bombers.

The assembly began its five-week session on a solemn note, with the assembly president, Yugoslav Deputy Foreign Minister Lazar Mojsov, saying, "history and the peoples whom we represent here will not forgive us if we do not use this opportunity fully."

Waldheim called for an effort of "totally new dimensions" — one that would involve the peoples of all nations and encompass a broader and longer range perspective than any previous attempt.

Office Building Priority 'Low'

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A proposal for a new office building for the General Assembly apparently has little chance of gaining approval during the 1978 legislative session.

Legislative leaders have indicated they believe other needs deserve a higher priority than the plan, included in budget recommendations of the Advisory Budget Commission and Gov. Jim Hunt, to construct the building.

House Speaker Carl J. Stewart Jr. of Gastonia said the building, which would cost $3.5 million, may not be essential and that other needs may have a higher priority.

"I think that it's not critical that it remain in the budget," Stewart said.

Probe Extent Of Dumped Mail

NEW YORK (AP) — Two postal workers were fired after 18 plastic bags full of undelivered mail, most of it politicians' newsletters, were discovered in a Manhattan post office.

The incident has sparked an investigation of whether the dumping is widespread. City Postmaster John Strachan said Tuesday he believes it was just an "isolated incident." Strachan declined to identify the workers who had been dismissed, saying the cases had been turned over to the U.S. Attorney's office for possible criminal prosecution.

Ingram Here; Critical Of Hodges Connections

AT INGRAM RECEPTION... Mrs. Ed Ricks and Miss Jean Ramey talk with U.S. Senatorial candidate John Ingram yesterday.

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

John Ingram, campaigning for the Democratic nomination to the U.S. Senate, attended a reception here yesterday and criticized his opponent in the race — former North Carolina National Bank chairman Luther Hodges Jr. — for having connections to, "special interests," and not facing issues in the campaign.

Ingram, a former member of the North Carolina General Assembly and now the state's commissioner of insurance, said Hodges' campaign has raised $1,034,000, while his own campaign has received only $41,000.

The number of contributors, Ingram said, is about the same, some 2,600 to 2,700. The difference, he pointed out, is "the average of our contributions is about $12," while many Hodges contributors have given $1,000.

Saying that a fourth of Hodges' money has come from out-of-state, Ingram charged that the former banking official has received funds from "Wall Street bankers and brokers," and other interests.

Commenting on reports that Hodges has borrowed almost $400,000 from banks for his campaign, Ingram said his opponent, "explains $400,000 in big money bank loans to his campaign as an investment in his career. It would take a man making $10,000 a year 40 years to earn that much money. That's an entire worker's life time to earn what he says he is investing in a career. That's an interesting investment," Ingram said.

Ingram said, "I have a record of reducing and curbing

OF VALUE?

My child has been clipping price codes stickers from product packages for weeks and taking them to school, where they are supposedly being collected to buy time for a child on a kidney dialysis machine. I have inquired as to who's providing the money to "buy" these stickers, but can get no satisfactory answer. I know this same highly motivated activity is being carried on by hundreds, perhaps thousands, of other children and adults in Pitt County. Who's providing the money, if anybody? B.C.

Hotline has made inquiries for several weeks about this activity. We suspected it was similar to a cigarette-pack saving activity we previously investigated and learned to have no source of money for redemption of the packs. However, we did not want to say so until we were sure.

We're still not absolutely sure and would love to be advised otherwise by a reader, but for the present time must state that we believe there is no source of funds and that the uniform price code stickers are being saved in vain by many persons interested in helping less fortunate person.

The Kidney Foundation of North Carolina has issued a press release that this collection activity "is not valid and brings no benefit to the Foundation." It said that in the past there have been several collection programs of various types (tea bags, gum wrappers, uniform price codes, soup labels, etc.) carried out in a few communities in the U. S. and have been publicized, which may be the reason for the projects now underway. The Foundation urged that those who wish to volunteer time to help kidney patients contact the headquarters in Chapel Hill concerning valid projects and program that might be initiated throughout the state. The address is Kidney Foundation of North Carolina, Box 2383, Chapel Hill, N. C. 27514; phone, 929-7181.

This information was provided us by Tish B. Evans, Renal Social Worker with the Greenville Hemodialysis Center, who says that she, too, has received word of many persons and groups in this area actively involved in saving "so many coding labels for so many minutes of treatment on a dialysis machine for a needy child."

"All of the dialysis centers in North Carolina have the services of a social worker and others who can help individuals contact proper financial resources," she said.

Ammo Belts Inspired Bag Shoulder Strap

By JEANNE LESEEM
UPI Family Editor

Many handbags for the coming fall and winter are so soft you could stuff them with feathers and use them as pillows.

Some are so tiny they won't hold much more than a lipstick, a compact and a couple of dollar bills.

Others are suitcase size. Although classic structured purses with compartments, zippers and snaps are still around for women who demand practicality as well as style, the big newsmakers at the handbag industry's semi-annual show for fashion accessory reporters were soft, squishy bags whose designs and materials mirror clothing trends.

Matching handbags used to mean pairing your purse with your shoes. Today you can match them to accessories as well or, alternatively, to an entire costume. For example, you might carry a web or bandoleer strapped khaki bag with a military-look suit or separates. Or a dainty white eyelet embroidered reticule with a Gibson girl or school girl dress for daytime.

Remember reticules? In grandmother's day, they were tiny soft purses, usually with a drawstring closure. Some contemporary models have extra long straps to sling over one shoulder and down to the opposite hip, as soldiers used to wear their bandoleers, or bullet-filled ammunition belts.

Association director Edward S. Levy said bandoleer straps flopped when they were introduced a couple of years ago on daytime purses, despite the convenience they represented. They leave a wearer's hands free to cope with luggage, grocery bags and the like without worrying about the purse sliding off the shoulder at an inopportune moment.

The strap design was later re-introduced for miniature body bags for disco dancing, and now they're coming back on larger size purses. Lengths on some designs can be adjusted at will by re-knotting the strap at the shoulder.

Textured materials such as suede and synthetic suede, plain or textured like pigskin, are strong trends. So are snake, tweed, corduroy, chenille and quilted canvas, but one trade source predicts leathers will account for 50-55 percent of the women's fall and winter handbag sales this year. He based his prediction on a recent marketing study of 200 leading department stores across the United States.

Structured bags are rigid or have at least some stiffening to keep them from collapsing on their contents. They were shown in leather and vinyls for daytime, fabric or fancy materials such as snakeskin or smoke-toned lucite for evening.

Many American manufacturers now import bags from Italy and other European countries or the Far East. Others continue the time-honored practice of copying foreign designs.

Levy said the industry hopes to alter both trends by helping aspiring young American handbag designers get the necessary training in school and in workrooms. The association has already obtained a federal grant to do just that, and is seeking others.

Barry Hoberman, a former butcher in his family's business, served a two-year apprenticeship with a freelance handbag designer before being hired by Victoria Needleworks, the New York City firm generally credited with making canvas totes and handbags favorites nationwide. The company also employs a handbag design student from the Fashion Institute of Technology work-study program. The institute is a vocational school in New York City's public school system.

FISH A LA KING
Popular in the 50s and still good.

2 tablespoons butter or margarine
1/2 cup finely diced celery
1/2 cup finely diced green pepper

1 canned pimiento, finely diced

2 tablespoons flour

1/2 teaspoon salt

1/8 teaspoon white pepper

1 1/2 cups milk

2 cups flaked cooked white-fleshed fish

In the hot butter, gently cook the celery and green pepper until wilted; add the pimiento, flour, salt and pepper and mix well over low heat. Gradually stir in the milk, cook over moderately low heat, stirring constantly, until thickened. Stir in the fish and reheat. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

Martin Native Named 'Boss Of The Year'

BURLINGTON — J. Dillon Cherry, who once worked on a "rolling store" in Martin County, has been named 1978 Boss of the Year by the Cardinal Chapter of the American Business Women's Association.

The Bear Grass native recalls working in the store on wheels (with Pete Mendenhall), making daily runs over the countryside and stopping for midday meals with farm families.

In those days Cherry said they sometimes would exchange live chickens or eggs for products. Now he handles around three million dollars annually as business manager of the Technical Institute of Alamance at Haw River. His role includes an eight-member business office and computer room staff, maintenance, security and equipment for the institute while currently overseeing renovation of a former Burlington City Schools' building to be used for extension of TIA's campus.

Recently elected vice president of the Association of Community College Business Officers at the state convention, Cherry will automatically elevate to ACCBO presidency in 1979-80.

This follows his Bear Grass High School's graduating class prediction that some day he would be an office manager.

He attended Kings Business College, Raleigh, and graduated from East Carolina University with a major in business. Further studies in business officers management took him to the University of Nebraska at Omaha and the University of Kentucky at Lexington. He was a grant recipient from the U. S. Office of Education for advanced studies at St. Anselm's College, Manchester, N. H.

Cherry is the son of Mrs. Euzelia Harris Cherry of Bear Grass. He was named to "Who's Who in the South and Southwest, 1973-74."

Cherry and his wife, the former Louise Wynne of Bear Grass, have three children.

Club Members Hold Picnic

The Greenville Garden Club held its annual spring picnic Friday at the home of Mrs. R. L. Murphy, Mrs. Ulan Cox, Mrs. S. B. Tucker and Mrs. J. B. Spilman assisted as hostesses.

Mrs. J. C. Galloway, president, conducted the business session. She displayed the red ribbon won the club in the recent flower show. Mrs. R. V. Keel's entry earned a red ribbon and Mrs. H. G. Williams had two entries which earned yellow ribbons.

The club constitution and by-laws were read and discussed. Members voted to renew membership in the Pitt County Mental Health Association.

The District President's meeting will be held Wednesday, May 31, at the Town and Country Restaurant, Williamston. The meeting will begin at 10 a.m. with a dutch luncheon at one o'clock. Mrs. J. Con Lanier, Mrs. Marshal Helms, Mrs. R. R. Forest, Mrs. J. R. Carrington, Mrs. Williams, Mrs. Galloway and Mrs. R. A. Davis plan to attend.

Members interested in attending should contact Mrs. Galloway.

A 'Good' Father Thinks Of Son

DEAR ABBY: How does a father who has excelled in sports all his life adjust to a 14-year-old son who has never shown even a normal interest in sports?

I realize that not all boys can be great athletes, but my son has the build for it, and the coordination, too. He could be really good if he wanted to, but he's lazy, and he isn't competitive in anything.

I have done my best to get him interested in sports ever since he was old enough to hold a ball, Abby, but it never caught on. Believe me, it's not easy to be a good father to a boy like this. Any suggestions?

SAD DAD

DEAR DAD: Yes, lay off. A "good" father forgets himself and thinks of his son. He then encourages the boy to grow in the direction he seems inclined.

DEAR ABBY: The woman signed SICK WITH FRIGHT reminded me of myself not too long ago. I too was afraid to open my mouth in a group because I felt I had nothing important to say.

At age 43, I went back to college and earned a degree in accounting, but I was too shy and self-conscious to stand up and talk in front of a group. Then I joined Toastmasters Club 990 of TRW where I was employed—and still am. Three years later I was elected president of the club!

The first six times I stood before an audience (of only 20), I shook like a leaf. Today, I am calm and enjoy it! Toastmasters is a club where we learn how to listen, think and speak better. There is a Toastmasters Club in nearly every city. Tell SICK WITH FRIGHT to look in the yellow pages of her phone book, or call the Chamber of Commerce. I know she can overcome her fright. If I did it, she can.

EVY IN HAWTHORNE, CALIF.

DEAR EVY: I know you're right. Some of the best speakers I've ever heard were once "sick with fright" but overcame it—thanks to Toastmasters.

CONFIDENTIAL TO "TRYING HARD" IN DENVER: Try harder. If I could recommend a revision of the marriage vows, I would suggest, "LOVE, HONOR AND FORGIVE," instead of "OBEY." I think forgiveness is far more important to a marriage than obedience.

Do you wish you had more friends? For the secret of popularity, get Abby's new booklet: "How To Be Popular: You're Never Too Young or Too Old." Send $1 with a long, self-addressed, stamped (24 cents) envelope to Abby, 132 Laaky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.

DEAR CECILY: My husband likes to bring home the friends he bowls with for beer and snacks. I usually have cold cuts and hot potato salad or franks and hot sauerkraut ready, but I'd like to serve something different once in a while. Any suggestion? — DARING.

DEAR DARING: A recipe I tried recently might just fill the bill once around because apparently your husband's friends like kraut. It's an open-face pie made with loads of kraut, frankfurters and seasonings plus a binder of eggs, milk and Swiss cheese. The binder is similar to that used for quiche. But please don't call this pie a quiche. If you do, those French cooks who take their traditional dishes seriously might call down the wrath of the culinary gods on you. — C. B.

LOADS-OF-KRAUT AND FRANKFURTER PIE

- 1/2 of an 11-ounce package of pie crust mix
- 3/4 pound (6 regular or 4 extra-large) frankfurters, thinly sliced
- 1 small onion, cut in thin strips
- 3 eggs
- 1 cup milk
- 16-ounce can sauerkraut, drained
- 1 cup grated (medium-fine) Swiss cheese
- 1/2 teaspoon caraway seeds

Make up the pie mix according to package directions for a single shell; line a 9-inch pie plate with it, turning under the edge and fluting it. Bake on the rack below the center in a preheated 375-degree oven for 5 minutes. (Leave the oven turned on.) Scatter the frankfurters over the hot pie shell; top with the onion; set aside.

Margie Davis Is New President

Officers for the 1978 year were installed Monday evening at the meeting of the National Secretaries Association (International) held at the Three Steers. Outgoing President Brenda Wilson conducted the meeting and installation ceremonies.

Margie Davis was installed as president. She has had 23 years secretarial experience and has been employed for the past 10 years at the Walter B. Jones Alcoholic Rehabilitation Center. She has served in several capacities for the Secretaries Association including secretary, chairman of Yearbook Committee, Board Contact, Secretaries' Week Committee and has attended several area workshops.

Margie Davis

Other officers are: Janie Radford, vice president; Helen Rollins, recording secretary; Joyce Harrell, corresponding secretary; and Judith Wilson, treasurer. Recent members selected for the Board of Directors were Vicky Peaden, Barbara Evans and Kathy Hunnings.

Guest speaker for the evening was Joyce Pettis, whose topic was "Women — Getting the Job and Getting the Job Done Well." Ms. Pettis is associated with the English department at ECU and plans to begin work on her doctorate in American literature at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill in the fall.

Ms. Pettis gave examples of reasons why women work which ranged from economic need to self-fulfillment. She stated that even if all jobs held currently by women were given to men, there would still be an enormous number of jobs unfilled — thus the need for women to continue in the work force.

Mentioning several women in executive and administrative positions who are "getting the job done" currently, Ms. Pettis closed her presentation by saying women have reason for pride and self-esteem if they are working and doing a good job.

Mrs. Davis and Mrs. Rollins reported on the N. C. Division meeting held recently in Asheville.

Meeting Held By Garden Club

The Lake Ellsworth Garden Club held its meeting Thursday evening at the clubhouse. Hostesses were Mrs. Shirley Jones and Mrs. Shirley Smith.

Mrs. Janice Calfee reported on the neighborhood yard and bake sale held May 6. Projects Chairperson Ramona Ensley reported plans are being made to donate money to the hospital to be used for beautification. Work days were assigned to members to care for the seasonal flowers planted at the entrance to Lake Ellsworth, another club project.

A workshop program on the making of macrame hangers was presented by Mrs. Barbara Sherman, owner of The Silver Thread. Mr. and Mrs. Sherman assisted members in making macrame hangers.

Personal

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Gaskins and Mr. and Mrs. Jerry L. Fleming visited Mrs. Gaskins' son and family, Mr. and Mrs. Eugene C. Fleming, in Overland Park, Kan., for a week.

'Superbabies' Learn Swimming Survival

By CARL D. ROBINSON

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — Six-month-old Christopher DeVeigne can't walk, but he is well on the way to learning how to swim.

Three times a week his mother takes him to a Sydney swimming pool and tosses him in fully-clothed.

It's a heart-stopping event for those who see it for the first time, as fair-haired Christopher sinks to the bottom of the pool, rolls over, slowly rises to the surface and lies there on his back spluttering but apparently all right.

It's all part of a controversial survival course which has brought thousands of suburban mothers and their babies to half a dozen swimming centers around Sydney and which may soon be taken to the United States.

The backyard pool is a much-sought-after status symbol for the middle-class families of Sydney's sprawling suburbs. In New South Wales, Australia's most populous state with about one-third of the country's 14 million people, officials estimate there are about 600,000 private pools.

Until two years ago, an average of 30 children under the age of 5 drowned each year in New South Wales. Officials said this figure had now been halved to about 15 a year. They attribute much of this drop to an increased public awareness of pool safety through government and private programs and survival courses.

A less rigorous state government-sponsored learn-to-swim for preschoolers has attracted nearly 10,000 parents and their children in its first year.

Many housewives at the centers come from homes where there is a pool or one nearby. They all express a common fear of accidental drowning.

So, at the centers, the children — aged between 4 and 12 months — are taught to survive a fall into a pool. Their teachers call them "superbabies."

"I hear a lot of stories about kids drowning in backyard pools," said Christopher's mother, Mary. "I feel safer having little Christopher know how to feel comfortable in the water."

Another mother, Janine Duckett, who brings her 6-month-old son Craig to the center, expressed similar feelings.

"I brought Craig down here so I would feel more secure. We have a pool at home and one on either side of us. I've still got to watch him, but at least he'll know how to survive."

But Christopher and Craig are just beginners. Nearby, 11-month-old Timothy Miller was confidently floating around the pool on his back, fully clothed.

"That fellow is almost ready for the graduated superbaby class," said Alex Bory, 42, who pioneered the survival method with his wife.

"He is at the point where we are simulating an accident situation. The object now is to keep him in contact with the water. Keep him feeling comfortable. Then we can teach him how to swim."

Bory and his wife Eva, 40, came to Australia as champion swimmers on the Hungarian team in the 1956 Melbourne Olympic games which coincided with the abortive revolution in their home country. About half the 110-member team defected in Australia and the couple found themselves looking for work.

After a few years of coaching and teaching, the pair opened their first swimming center in 1967.

Bory said the object in the course was for the babies "to learn a respect for the water, to feel at home and relax." Much of the fear of water, Bory said, is planted into children by their own parents.

Bory and his wife said they'd never had a superbaby who didn't learn how to float. "Some children take three weeks, others six weeks," Bory said. "But we offer a guaranteed 100 percent result."

The Borys' program is not without its critics, however, who say that throwing a youngster into a pool can permanently traumatize a child from ever wanting to swim. They also say the program gives a false sense of security to parents, especially around unheated pools in the cold winter months.

The superbabies go through three half-hour sessions a week for 10 to 13 weeks and then move on to the graduated class, a once-weekly program to keep up the child's confidence, including floating around fully clothed.

Over the years, the Borys have expanded to eight centers around Sydney and Melbourne, many in suburban shopping malls. In the past 10 years, the centers have taught more than 15,000 Australian children to swim, at an average of $7 a lesson. The Borys are now scouting out the possibility of opening up similar schools in the United States.

"In many ways, it's what you'd call a swimming supermarket," Bory said. "We are ready to supply any kind of swimming — from the youngest to the oldest."

Boil Jerusalem artichokes, peel and slice. Add to a cream sauce flavored with grated Romano cheese; sprinkle with a little more of the cheese and broil until golden brown.

How To Provide 'Due Process'

David Berkowitz, who has admitted killing six people in New York, threw his appearance for sentencing into turmoil when he went wild in the courtroom Monday.

The proceeding was cancelled and further psychiatric examination was ordered for Berkowitz.

The question is again before society of how to provide due process of the law for a defendant and still protect society from such creatures as Berkowitz.

He may well be insane, but nevertheless he should never be allowed to roam the streets freely again. Society can have compassion for the mentally ill, but still demand that a menace be confined.

Require Time To Test UNC-HEW Plan

A NAACP Legal Defense and Education Fund official reportedly has said some "good commitments" were obtained from the University of North Carolina by HEW in a new desegregation plan.

And a new study of duplication of programs between six university campuses is expected to get underway within weeks.

Hopefully all concerned will give the recently approved desegregation plan a chance to work before there is any further litigation in the matter. If this is done, then everyone who is affected could come out ahead.

THIS AFTERNOON

The Bulk Is For Personnel

By BILL NOBLITT
(2nd of Two Articles)

RALEIGH — People are the biggest cost of government: those who get services, and those who provide them.

Revisions in the state budget for spending $278.9 million in additional funds for the coming fiscal year prepared by Gov. James B. Hunt, Jr. prove that the governmental bureaucracy will continue to grow, and to cost more each year.

A total of 769 new jobs are created at a cost of more than $5.6 million per year in the proposal which will go to the General Assembly when it convenes next week. That increased number of employees almost precisely offsets the numbers of jobs sliced from the bureaucracy by the governor when he took office nearly two years ago.

More than half of the new jobs are in education, with the bulk going to the 57 community colleges or technical institutes to lower classroom size back to the level it was before the General Assembly changed the ratio as a money-saving move during the recession.

A total of 364 jobs are in fields other than education, with 198 of those in public safety or direct patient care jobs.

Decline

One agency reflects a downward trend. The Department of Public Instruction shows an overall decrease of 91, largely due to declining student enrollment in kindergartens across the state. That situation results from a decreasing birth rate which took planners by surprise.

The governor's office is adding five people: a special assistant in science and technology and another for general use; a staff aide, and two secretaries.

Human Resources is adding 115 people, concentrated in health, therapy, teaching, and counseling posts. Justice is adding 73, with the majority being 58 fingerprint experts to extend that service to local police agencies more fully.

But aside from creating new positions, about half of the spending increase will go for salary hikes and other benefits for state employees and teachers. A six per cent raise will cost $116.6 million. Another $6 million is for hospitalization insurance for retired teachers and state employees. Other funds are committed to providing a 10 percent increase to state employees when they travel. Presently the rate is 15 cents per mile when a personal car is used, and $25 per day for room and board. That will go up to 17 cents per mile and $27.50 daily.

BILL
NOBLITT

Nearly $35 million in the increase package is for implementing programs for handicapped children in the schools, prisons, or state institutions.

An item pushed strongly by the state's organization of school principals is also included $2.6 million to reduce the student-teacher contact ratio in junior high schools from 165 to 159.

Testing

Results of the competency test in high schools are expected to demonstrate a need for remedial services for those who fail. The budget calls for $4.45 million, with the stipulation that more can be gotten quickly if needed to serve larger numbers of failing students.

School pupils who live too close to school to qualify for a bus ride, but who face hazardous walking conditions, would get relief from a special $7.5 million fund.

And college students who are North Carolina residents attending private colleges or universities would find the tuition grant program increased from $300 to $400 per year.

Gov. Hunt said he carefully avoided restoring to the budget any items previously trimmed by legislators and likely to create controversy. He hopes this year's assembly will move smoothly and speedily, leaving for 1979 the major battles.

THREE MEN ON A HORSE!

By ART BUCHWALD

A Whole New Ballgame

WASHINGTON — A small news item in the papers a few weeks ago caught my attention. A young man named Tom Hansen, 25 years old, decided to sue his parents for $350,000 damages because he thinks his family failed to rear him right. He claims that, because his father and mother failed to raise him in the correct manner, he may have to have psychiatric treatment for the rest of his life.

Hansen's lawyer in Boulder, Colo., John Taussig Jr., said the suit alleges that the parents were guilty of willful and wanton neglect.

"Basically what we are doing is bringing a suit of malpractice of parenting," Taussig said.

All over America children will be watching the outcome of the suit. If Hansen wins in court, it will open up an entire new legal situation, and may force most parents to take out very expensive malpractice insurance at the moment they produce a son or daughter. This would raise the cost of bringing up a child even higher than it is now, and it may discourage young couples from having children.

Many kids, when they reach puberty, blame their parents for everything that has gone wrong in their lives, but most of them get over it when they grow up. But if the verdict goes in favor of Hansen, they will be encouraged to seek out a lawyer and demand damages for cruel and unusual punishment, which might include making them come home at a certain time, requiring them to clean up their own rooms, do the dishes, and inflicting lifelong traumas by forcing them to do their homework.

Phillip Colburn, who lives in Los Angeles, is terribly concerned about the problem and told me on the phone, "If children are permitted to sue their parents for malpractice in parenting, why can't parents sue their children for mental anguish, misappropriation of family funds, slander and misuse of the family car?"

I told him it sounded fair to me.

He said, "Most parents have aspirations and unfulfilled dreams about their children. During the teenage years of their offspring, many fathers and mothers are forced into going to a psychiatrist. Others become permanently deaf from their son's or daughter's stereo systems. Many parents suffer ulcers and nervous disorders waiting for their children to come home from a school dance. Still others go into deep depression when they discover pot in their children's pants' pockets. If our kids are going to sue us for what we've done to them, then we should be allowed to seek damages for what they've done to us."

"It could be a class action suit," I suggested. "That way we could all save on legal costs."

"Parents don't ask too much of their children when they grow up... maybe an occasional telephone call to tell us they're okay, a kind word when they come home for a visit, a few grandchildren to bring us joy in our old age. If they can't do that, then I think we should bring legal action against them."

"You better believe it," I said. "There are a lot more disappointed parents in this country than there are disappointed children."

"I also believe that if we've sent them to college, and paid $40,000 out of our own pockets to educate them, they should be able to read and write or else give us our money (Continued on page 5)

Seven Born Again

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN

RIDGEFIELD, CONN. (AP)

Well, they've made it. The gates of hell have not prevailed against them.

The seven little hellions who pushed open my gate every Thursday to prepare for their first Holy Communion are born-again Christians, ready to take up the struggle against the powers of darkness.

And I miss them. I miss the disputatious torrent that raged in our kitchen every Thursday afternoon over cookies and juice, the thunder of theological debate and lightning flashes of insight and innocence as these mini-divines pondered mysteries like:

Will God make me a little brother next time?
What does the Holy Spirit do on Halloween?

Why do the girls always get to take the cookies first?

If we were sent there to help others, what were the others sent for? (I always suspected this one was a put-up job by an older brother or a doubting Thomas of an uncle).

Are we having a party next week for the last class?

The mystery of the Holy Trinity, the co-equal partnership of Father, Son and Holy Spirit, completely confounded them, as it has learned doctors of the church down through the ages. Each Thursday the tiny delegation was polled and, despite heavy lobbying from the chair for the epiphanic nature of the triumvirate, God The Father always emerged "more all-powerful" than the others — or what's a father for? — and sometimes got confused with an Italian heavy played by Marlon Brando.

For their final examination, my wife, asked each to compose a prayer.

Six beseeched the Lord to bless Mommy, Daddy, brothers and sisters and a long litany of relatives, schoolmates, babysitters, dogs, cats, hamsters, and one snake — even an occasional teacher.

Seven-year-old John, making his debut as a Little League outfielder, sought help from on high for a more immediate goal:

"Dere God,
"I want our tme to win agait the Yankes.

"Thy will be done."
Alas, the Angels (of course), John's team, were destined to be fallen angels, 9-1, agit the Yankes, to use his prayerful prose, and it took mighty act of Hail fell again yesterday afternoon on Pitt County crops, leaving heavy damage in some sections.

Residents and persons travelling in the Grimesland section reported the wind was so strong traffic had to be halted at times.

While the Grimesland section might have been the hardest hit, it was by no means the only area to suffer damage. Reports of hail came from various sections of the county, Black Arthur, Black Jack, Simpson, Ballard Cross Roads and across the river from Greenville along the Bethel highway.

Hail storms have been unusually frequent this year, farmers having suffered damage on several occasions.

THE INSIDE REPORT

Begin's Sudden Reversal

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — A last-minute switch by Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin to a tough, no-compromise stand against the U.S. package of warplanes for Israel, Egypt and Saudi Arabia may account for the equally sudden switch of two key senators believed ready to approve the package deal with minor changes.

Begin's switch was signalled in a short statement by Israeli Ambassador Simcha Dinitz hand-delivered to the desks of senators on May 11. That was the day the Senate Foreign Relations Committee voted, on an 8-to-8 tie vote, to send the issue to the full Senate without recommendation.

Rejecting a Carter administration compromise offer as inadequate for Israel's "defense requirements," Dinitz informed the senators: "Under these circumstances, we continue to oppose the supply of aircraft as submitted in the proposed package."

Some senators were angry at this private-channel effort of a foreign ambassador to undercut the U.S. president.

But what really made Dinitz's direct appeal to the senators so surprising was its implicit contradiction of Begin's own words on NBC's "Meet the Press" the preceding Sunday, May 7. Asked if Israel would "prefer" to get Israel's share of the planes even if the Saudis got theirs, Begin said: "I would prefer Israel should get them. That is my choice. I don't have any other choice."

Thus a policy switch took place between May 7 and May 11. It was in that time span that Sen. Frank Church, the veteran Democrat who will become chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee in January, was moving toward approval of the compromise package deal in negotiations with the State Department. As one high Carter administration official told us: "The conditions he (Church) laid down appeared to have been met." Yet, after arguing for the compromise deal on May 9, Church stunned fellow committee members and turned against it on May 11. Another senator who had indicated he would support the deal with the administration changes was Sen. Jacob K. Javits, longtime leader of the American-Jewish community. Javits also turned against it — at the same time Dinitz reported Begin's own change of heart.

A footnote: Dinitz's heavy lobbying here, although scarcely novel given the intimate relationship of the U.S. and Israel, angered high Carter administration officials. One told us: "If I were president I would have PNG'd Dinitz for gross interference in our political affairs." "PNG" stands for "persona non grata" — diplomatic verbiage meaning please go home.

Juanita's Plait

Commerce Secretary Juanita Kreps was livid when she learned that President Carter's decision to cut back his tax-reduction bill had been made 36 hours before she delivered a gung-ho speech backing the original $25 billion cut before a blue-ribbon North Carolina audience of bankers May 12. In a typical display of the administration's right hand not knowing what its left hand was doing, Mrs. Kreps pulled out all stops to rally the North Carolina Bankers Assn. behind the president's original tax-reduction program. This is no time to "draw back" from a tax cut that will stimulate "prudent growth," she said, adding: "Now is no time for waffling on taxes." In fact, the Secretary of Commerce had been rudely, inexplicably ignored altogether in the decision, privately reached on May 11, to trim the tax cut back to $19.4 billion. That decision, announced five hours after Mrs. Kreps' speech, was made without informing her — showing the low priority that the Carter White House gives the once-prestigious Commerce Department.

Lawyers And Newsmen
Amid President Carter's growing displeasure with the press, a senior aide, defending the president's attack on lawyers, pointed to White House press corps approval.

That defense came from presidential domestic policy chief Stuart Eizenstat May 10 before the Democratic National Committee's finance council. Near the end of the question-and-answer period, one member of the council — a lawyer — rose to ask: Stu, just where is the president going with this criticism of lawyers?

The normally cool-tempered Eizenstat bridled. He defied the questioner to point out one inaccurate statement contained in the president's Los Angeles County Bar Assn. speech May 4 in which he assailed lawyers.

Then Eizenstat delivered his clincher: all the reporters traveling with Mr. Carter on this Western swing commended the anti-lawyer speech.

That brought another finance council member — also a lawyer — to his feet, fire in his eyes, ready to make this statement: Mr. (Continued on page 5)

To the editor:

The S. O. S. — Save Our School committee wishes to thank all the voters who expressed their views at the polls May 2. The turnout in Grifton was over 50 percent, an extremely high percentage for a primary election in which neither governor nor president was running. And the vote was more than three-to-one for candidates endorsed by S. O. S.

The Ayden voting was also solidly for advocates of community involvement in decision affecting the schools.

For 20 months, some of us have been saying that the people of southern Pitt County have strong feelings about keeping their fine schools in the Ayden and Grifton communities because our research has shown that nothing would be gained and much would be lost, educationally, financially and emotionally, by removing children of pre-high school age from their communities unnecessarily.

We have been accused of being a small group of reactionary troublemakers.

The privacy of the polling booth has proven otherwise. No one was forced to go to the polls. No one was forced to vote as they did.

And the people have given a resounding vote FOR community schools by voting overwhelmingly AGAINST the two incumbent Pitt County Board of Education members who were on the ballot.

Will anybody on the Board recognize this?

Oddly Silent Over Initiative

By FRANK CORMIER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter is losing some highly-placed blacks from his executive office staff even as he continues his effort to recruit a prominent black for his personal senior staff.

Against this backdrop, it seemed a bit strange last week that the White House passed up a chance to do some tub-thumping to promote a new presidential initiative on behalf of women and minorities.

On May 15, at an hour when relatively few reporters were at the White House, the office of Press Secretary Jody Powell handed out, without explanation or elaboration, the text of an executive order dealing with panels Carter created to recommend nominees for vacant federal circuit court judgeships.

Only a line-by-line comparison of this document with a similar order Carter issued a month after taking office revealed that the only difference between them was the addition of the following sentence in the 1978 version:

"Each panel is encouraged to make special efforts to seek out and identify well qualified women and members of minority groups as potential nominees."

As president, Carter has nominated 10 circuit judges. None was a woman. Three were members of minorities.

Inquiries revealed that the president wanted to emphasize his quest for more women and minority judges because Congress is expected to pass legislation to create 35 additional circuit judgeships.

In response to a question, Carter's deputy press secretary, Rex Granum, suggested no special effort was made to call attention to the order because the president had made a one-sentence reference to it in his much-publicized May 4 Law Day speech in Los Angeles.

But few headlines on that occasion dealt with the planned order. The big news was Carter's scolding lecture to the legal profession.

Meanwhile, White House aides say the president remains hopeful that Richard G. Hatcher, the black mayor of Gary, Ind., will agree to join the White House senior staff. There now are two women on the senior staff but no blacks.

Coincidentally, five blacks holding staff positions within the Executive Office of the President have quit or are about to leave. At least two of them are known to be unhappy about life in the Carter administration, but some others are getting better jobs.

Lawrence A. Bailey, a deputy assistant to Carter who worked with Cabinet Secretary Jack Watson, quit to go with the First African-Arabian Corp. He was displeased about limited opportunity to influence policy.

Dennis O. Green, a former aide to Detroit Mayor Coleman Young, will leave his post as an associate director of the Office of Management and Budget next month. Reportedly unhappy over Carter's budget for urban spending, Green will become a Ford Motor Co. executive.

Kurt Schmoke left Carter's domestic policy staff early this month and is rumored in line for another post. Two other blacks lost their jobs as part of a staff reorganization.

Strength For Today

A HIGHER POWER

Jehosaphat, King of Judah, had been attacked by two nations, Moab and Ammon. Things looked bad for the king and the people when suddenly the Spirit of the Lord descended upon the prophet Jahaziel. He preached a powerful sermon to the king and the people. The text was, "Fear not... for the battle is not yours, but God's."

The upshot of the matter was that Moab and Ammon were soundly defeated and their cities despoiled. The soldiers of Judah went into battle confident that they would win, and they did. They relied upon powers higher than their own. They trusted so completely in the power of God that they rejoiced and thanked God for the victory before the battle was fought.

This is the kind of faith which can move mountains. All of us, when we face some problem that seems too big for us to handle alone, might ponder the words of Jahaziel: "Fear not... for the battle is not yours, but God's."

Keeping 'Young' In Club Name

SEATTLE (AP) — They're not exactly fooling anyone, but members of the Young Men's Republican Club would just as soon keep "young" in their name.

The club has tried several times to delete the word "young" from the name, but the 270 or so members, many of whom will never see 50 again, keep rejecting the proposals.

"When some of our members first joined, they were young," explained one member. The club was founded in 1900, and its oldest member is Philip Weiss, 83.

On Monday, the club had an 87th birthday party for its treasurer, Harold Anderson.

Local ESC Office Is Again Award Winner

The Greenville office of the Employment Security Commission has again received the top award in North Carolina in the category of larger offices for outstanding service to veterans.

Kendrick (Ken) Taylor, Veteran Employment Representative in the Greenville ESC office, was recognized for his achievement at the International Association of Personnel in Employment Security Commission meeting held in Charlotte. The association has membership in more than 20 countries, including a membership of over 1,000 in North Carolina.

The award this year marks three times the local office has received it in the last four years.

"We are all proud of the achievement that has been possible in the Greenville office," Taylor remarked. "This has been in large part due to the fine efforts of employers in the area to employ veterans whenever possible."

The record shows that during the first two quarters of the current fiscal year, the Greenville office processed 630 new and renewed applications on veterans. Of that total, 240 individuals were placed in gainful employment; 168 were counseled; and 334 job development contacts were made when no suitable job opportunities were available for applicants.

"Services and opportunities for veterans in the Greenville area have greatly improved in the past few years," Taylor noted.

Koch's Cook 'Threatened'

NEW YORK (AP) — Mayor Edward Koch's cook is in hot water, and it has nothing to do with the garlic she puts in his pea soup.

Rozanne Gold, 24, has been threatened with dismissal because Koch saw her chatting with a reporter about the meringue cookies he likes.

"She's paid to cook, not to give interviews," said Koch's press aide, Maureen Connelly, who delivered the threat. "A person is entitled to privacy in his own home."

In the interview she gave, back in February, Miss Gold said she enjoyed her job and disclosed that Koch "loves Chinese food, chopped liver and anything with garlic, especially pea soup."

However, she was just a bit critical of his eating habits, saying, "I think he may be one of those people who will eat everything."

Since then, all requests for interviews with the $200-a-week cook have been turned down, and she could not be reached for comment on the threatened sacking.

Mail Early, Save Money

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — You can beat the government and the holiday crush if you take the advice of two radio station workers who are advising listeners to mail Christmas cards early — before the end of May.

Reporter Larry White and disc jockey John Lee Hooker of station KELI in Tulsa began a campaign Tuesday to get their listeners to mail their 1978 Christmas cards before a postal rate increase takes effect next month.

The increase will boost the cost of mailing a first-class letter by two cents, to 15 cents.

"This will do three things," White said. "People will save money, it will show the post office how many people protest the increase and it just might get the Christmas cards to people on time."

White said the station has received numerous phone calls of support from people who say they will mail their holiday greetings this week.

The idea is apparently catching on elsewhere.

In Duluth, Minn., Harold Bach, executive vice president of Inter City Oil Co., has suggested that his company mail its Christmas greeting cards before the rate increase takes effect.

Leg Amputated High On Broken Bridge

By JIM McKAY
Associated Press Writer

PITTSBURGH (AP) — For three hours workers tried to free Ralph Winner's shattered leg from collapsed bridge girders. Then as a light rain fell, a surgeon perched on a 2-foot-wide beam high above the Monongahela River and cut off the screaming ironworker's right leg.

"I have never had to make a decision to do what we did today," said Dr. Ronald Stewart, head of the Presbyterian-University Hospital emergency crew who ordered the amputation Tuesday. "I hope I never have to make it again."

It was either take Winner's leg or risk collapse of the shaky bridge, officials said.

Winner, although sedated with morphine and shock-stemming fluids, remained awake during the ordeal on the 126-foot-high bridge that he had been helping prepare for demolition.

Paramedics said it took less than five minutes for Dr. Joseph Young to cut off Winner's leg at the knee.

"We thought we were losing him. We were just running out of time," said Glenn Cannon, director of the city's medical emergency team.

Winner, 48, of suburban North Hills and employed by Martin's Explosive Corp. of Anchorage, Alaska, was listed in good condition late Tuesday at Presbyterian Hospital after more than two hours in the operating room there.

River traffic below the bridge stopped during the three-hour rescue effort. About 200 people watched silently from a bridge 10 feet away and heard Winner shout while physicians worked.

"Up until nearly the end, he was all right," said an unidentified ironworker. "He knew what he was saying. He just kept saying how he wanted the steel off of his leg."

Winner was using a power saw to cut a hole in a beam to make room for an explosive charge designed to drop part of the bridge into the water below. The 67-year-old bridge, which was closed two years ago, shifted, and Winner slipped into the hole he was cutting.

His right leg was cut three-quarters of the way through and his left leg was trapped when heavy steel girders slammed together.

Cannon said three vertical beams had held the bridge from collapsing. But when the bridge shifted, one broke loose and a second was cut away to free Winner's left leg.

"That left one vertical plane holding the bridge together, and that's where his right leg was caught," Cannon said.

Bridge experts from the state Department of Transportation and the American Bridge division of U.S. Steel Corp. were lifted by crane to the top of the span to check its stability.

"They said if we did any more moving or cutting that bridge was going to come down," Cannon said.

LOSES LEG — Rescue workers ease Ralph Winner to a ladder from the top of the old Brady Street Bridge over the Monongahela River in Pittsburgh Tuesday. Winner, 48, a steel worker, was part of a demolition team that was in the process of razing the span and he was trapped for three hours when the bridge shifted and trapped his leg between two steel plates. A surgeon removed his trapped leg. (AP Laserphoto)

Report Anita Is Offered Post

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Singer Anita Bryant has been asked to accept a nomination for a vice presidency of the Southern Baptist Convention, a religious news organization reports.

Miss Bryant, who is a Southern Baptist, has not yet decided whether to accept the Baptist offer, the Baptist Press reports. In separate interviews, the singer and her husband, Bob Green, agreed it would be an honor for the entertainer to be nominated. But Miss Bryant was quoted as saying she knows little about the position and doesn't want to become part of anything in which she cannot be active.

Green, who manages his wife's career and appearances, said the request for her to accept a nomination came "many weeks ago," according to Baptist Press. He said he couldn't recall who made the request.

Miss Bryant is to address the Southern Baptist Pastor's Conference on June 11 in Atlanta prior to the convention's annual meeting in that city.

The singer and her husband were unavailable for comment Tuesday night.

W.C. Fields, public relations director for the Southern Baptist Convention, said:

"Any Southern Baptist messenger has the right to nominate any other messenger, whether the person they wish to nominate is a pastor or a church member. There is no nominating committee and no screening process."

The convention has two vice presidential posts.

Miss Bryant has been the focus of protests by the homosexual community since her much-publicized campaign against a gay rights ordinance in Dade County, Fla. A protest by several groups is anticipated during her upcoming Atlanta speech.

Charge Assault And Rape Intent

Thomas Earl Reddick, 17 of 807C West 14th St. was arrested early today on charges of assault with intent to commit rape, according to Chief Glenn Cannon.

Cannon said Reddick was taken into custody about 3:45 a.m. in connection with an incident that allegedly occurred before midnight last night in the area of Tenth and Clark Streets.

The chief noted that Reddick, who was placed under $5,000 bond, allegedly attempted to rape a young woman in a parking lot.

High Priced Oil Reserves

WASHINGTON (AP) — New estimates of world oil reserves outline "hundreds of years of oil supplies" but at high prices, an official of the World Bank says.

Efraim Friedmann, in making his assessment Tuesday, said that while getting at new oil will be costly, some experts estimate that oil reserves could total five trillion barrels instead of the two trillion barrels thought to exist previously.

Minor Morning Fire At Plant

"A very minor workbench fire" was reported at Grady-White Boats Inc. in the Greenville Industrial Park this morning at 4:20.

Plant Manager Wiley Corbett said the fire was extinguished by the plant's sprinkler system and that only a small amount of damage was sustained. The cause is undetermined. The Greenville Fire Department responded to the call.

Arrest Man On Robbery Count

Jerry Coward, 20 of 609 Ford St. was arrested by Greenville Police yesterday on charges of common law robbery.

Chief Glenn Cannon said the charge resulted from investigation of a May 11 incident on Hudson Street.

Coward was placed under a $1,500 bond pending hearing of the case in court.

Homosexuals Set Back In Oregon Vote

EUGENE, Ore. (AP) — The vote margin was smaller but the impact for homosexuals was no softer as this university city followed the lead of three other U.S. communities and repealed an ordinance banning discrimination against gay people.

In what many had expected would be a close election, final unofficial returns late Tuesday showed 22,898 votes in favor of repeal and 13,427 opposed. The count represented 50 percent of the registered voters in the city, Oregon's second largest.

The margin, however, was not as sweeping as the recent vote in Wichita, Kan., where a 4-to-1 tally threw out a gay rights ordinance there. Voters were also overwhelmingly against similar laws in Dade County, Fla., where the margin last June was 7-to-3, and in St.

Paul, Minn., with a 2-to-1 margin last month.

"If they couldn't win in Eugene, they can't win any place else, except maybe San Francisco," said Larry Dean, director of the successful repeal drive by Volunteer Organization Involved in Community Enactments.

"There will be more referendums and I suspect we'll see these gay rights laws falling one by one across the country," Dean said.

But gay rights supporters, who had spent more than twice as much as their opponents on the campaign, vowed to keep fighting discrimination.

Gay rights activists estimate that about 40 U.S. communities still have laws banning discrimination against homosexuals in jobs and housing.

About 250 disappointed supporters of gay rights held a candlelight march Tuesday night. The group formed a large circle in front of the courthouse and holding hands sang "We Shall Overcome."

"Gay people are not going to go away and we don't want anything less than our rights," said Douglas Huneke. "Keep your minds straight on that freedom or that peace, whether it is in the courts, in the streets or in the Legislature."

Another member of Eugene

Citizens for Equal Rights said the group was discussing the possibility of seeking relief in the courts.

Tuesday's vote repealed an amendment which had added sexual orientation to the kinds of discrimination protected by the city's human rights ordinance. The City Council adopted the amendment last November, but it never took effect because signatures were quickly gathered to put it to a popular vote.

The anti-gay rights group shunned the Bible-quoting campaign styles of previous gay rights referendums. Instead, it argued that homosexuality was a choice and should not be protected by the same civil rights guarantees as race and religion.

Dean said his group was not gloating about the victory. He said he respects the sincerity of gay rights advocates and thinks people should have more compassion and understanding of homosexuals.

"My personal opinion is that people voted this way because they see a breakdown in our country of morals and finally they are saying enough, no more," he said. "This ordinance represented to the community an endorsement of homosexuality and they didn't want to have their families and children exposed to that. There needs to be more understanding of the gay lifestyle, but not legal approval."

SALT At Climactic Stages

By ROBERT B. CULLEN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Nearly five years after they started, the United States and the Soviet Union appear to be moving into the climactic stages of the search for a second Strategic Arms Limitation Treaty.

Secretary of State Cyrus Vance and Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko will meet in New York and then in Washington this weekend to discuss three stubborn issues that so far have defied solution — the Soviet Backfire bomber, qualitative restraints on new weapons and the definition of a heavy bomber that can carry cruise missiles.

"We're not prepared to change our basic position on those issues," said Paul Warnke, the chief U.S. SALT negotiator, at a breakfast meeting with reporters on Tuesday.

But, Warnke said, there are "parallel ways" in which the two countries might try to arrive at a compromise.

Apart from that oblique hint, Warnke would say nothing about the American negotiating strategy for the weekend. Nor would he disclose anything the United States knows about possible Soviet positions.

In a separate interview with The Associated Press, Warnke said "it's impossible to tell" whether there will be a breakthrough in the forthcoming crucial round of talks.

But Warnke said he was certain of one thing — that the proposed new treaty, "on the basis of its own merits, is a substantial contribution to American security."

Anticipating an intense domestic political fight over the treaty, Warnke said: "I think we can demonstrate conclusively on the merits of the agreement that we are not making all of the concessions.

The Soviet Union has made very, very substantial moves to accept our position."

The new SALT treaty, if approved by the Senate, would replace the arms limitation agreement that U.S. and Soviet leaders signed in Moscow in 1972.

Nominated To Joint Chiefs

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter's nominations for upcoming vacancies on the Joint Chiefs of Staff are expected to be approved easily in the full Senate. The Senate Armed Services Committee sent the nominations to the Senate floor by approving them unanimously Tuesday.

Air Force Gen. David Jones is in line to succeed Gen. George Brown as chairman. Gen. Lew Allen Jr. would move up to succeed Jones as Chief of Staff of the Air Force and Adm. Thomas B. Hayward has been nominated to succeed Adm. James Holloway as chief of naval operations.

Celebrate 11th Women's Day

FOUNTAIN — The Women's Auxiliary of Reid's Chapel Missionary Baptist Church celebrated its 11th annual Women's Day.

Mrs. Millie Johnson of Bellarthur Free Will Baptist was the speaker for the occasion.

The Rev. Walter Atkins, pastor, gave a short sermon.

Different members were recognized for their contributions. Miss Gail Morgan and her co-worker brought in the highest proceeds. Mrs. Brenda Baker of Tarboro was first runner-up. Mrs. Margie Johnson of Farmville was second.

Other participants were Mrs. Peggy Hart of Fountain, Mrs. Marie Jones of Wilson and Mrs. Patricia Moore of Farmville.

How's The Weather?

Senate Talkathon Is Organized

WEATHER FORECAST — Warm weather is forecast today for the eastern half of the nation and cool weather is expected for the western half. Rain is due for the northern Rockies and part of the northern Plains. Showers are expected on the Atlantic coast from South Carolina to southern New York. (AP Laserphoto Map)

By The Associated Press
Warm and humid air, and haze, appear to be locked over North Carolina and because of a nearly stationary wind pattern in upper levels of the atmosphere this kind of weather situation is likely to be around for several days.

Triggered by high humidity and an upper level trough, thunderstorms were likely to sweep across the state from west to east during the afternoon and this evening.

The forecast called for temperatures to climb into the 80s under partly cloudy and hazy skies before arrival of the thunderstorms.

A warm front moving up from the south passed through the state during the night, touching off a few thunderstorms along the way in the mountains and scattered showers in the foothills and Piedmont. Nearly an inch of rain fell in some areas.

The forecast calls for fair and humid Thursday with afternoon temperatures ranging from the mid 70s to the mid 80s. The outlook is for fair and warm Friday through Sunday.

By DAVID ESPO
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — If this is Wednesday, it must be Bob Dole's turn to lead the filibuster.

Opponents of proposed labor law revisions are running what amount to senatorial relay teams on and off the Senate floor to make sure they keep the bill bottled up.

At the end of the day, one team captain hands the figurative baton to another, whose team carries it the following day.

The team captains, all Republicans, are Dole of Kansas and Sens. John Tower of Texas and Malcolm Wallop of Wyoming.

There was a suggestion, as yet unheeded, that the teams select nicknames. "We tried to get them to adopt some, but no one has yet," said Mark Lubbers, an aide to Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind.

A "Daily Opposition Bulletin," published by Lugar's staff, informs senators when they are supposed to take their turns on the Senate floor.

Today's lineup:
Dole was scheduled to speak from the beginning of debate until 11:30 a.m. Then Sens. Pete Domenici, R-N.M.; William Scott, R-Va.; James McClure, R-Idaho, and Jesse Helms, R-N.C., have stints of up to two hours before Dole gets a second turn.

Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, leading the opposition, spends several hours a day on the floor.

So far, according to Lubbers, each team captain has found enough teammates to fill up the day.

"This week it looks like we're going to go to our bench strength a little more than we have," he said, as some senators leaving Washington in advance of the Memorial Day recess that starts Friday.

Opponents hold the floor for much of the day. At least one backer of the bill, usually either Sen. Harrison Williams, D-N.J., or Jacob Javits, R-N.Y., is always present.

While senators on the two sides occasionally engage in a real debate, more often one lawmaker reads a prepared speech to a chamber nearly empty except for aides.

The first attempt to end the filibuster is scheduled June 7. Opponents of the bill remain hopeful they can keep the filibuster going indefinitely, but supporters say they will prevail some time after the first vote.

Pigeon Ban Stirs Town

CHINA GROVE, N.C. (AP) — Some feathers are being ruffled in this Rowan County town, with the issue the burning question of whether pigeons should be allowed to fly loose or be kept cooped up all day.

A handful of pigeon owners is upset over a proposed ordinance requiring pigeons to be kept locked up 24 hours a day, and they plan to argue before the Town Board at a June 6 public hearing.

"Birds got wings," says pigeon fancier Robert Calloway. "They're supposed to fly and it's downright indecent to keep 'em from doing that."

Some other townspeople, however, already have told town officials they want pigeon control, says Town Clerk Steve Luther. Their gripe is about droppings from some 300 pigeons kept as pets by five bird lovers.

But pigeon owners such as Kent Mishak, who owns 130 pigeons, says he would bet his best birds that pigeons don't cause nearly the problems of dogs and cats.

"I haven't had one bird to turn over a trash can or sit on a porch during mating season and 'meow' half the night," he said.

Calloway says he lets his birds out every day, "and they just circle around till they get tired and they don't cause nobody no trouble that I can see."

Keeping them penned up would be the same as killing them, he said.

Pitt Tech Graduation Excercises This Friday

Pitt Technical Institute will hold its spring graduation exercises for the 1977-78 school year at McGinnis Auditorium on the East Carolina University campus, Friday at 8 p.m.

For the first time, 28 students who have received their North Carolina High School Equivalency Diplomas will join the 204 PTI graduates in the exercises.

Joseph W. Grimsley, secretary of the North Carolina Department of Administration, will be the speaker for the event. Grimsley, a 1961 Fulbright Scholar, received his bachelor's degree from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill in 1961, and his master's degree from George Washington University in 1964. A Wilson native, Grimsley worked in several administrative positions with the Peace Corps from 1963-68, when he returned to the state as the assistant field director for the Coastal Plains Regional Commission. He joined the Administrative Department in 1970.

Mrs. Kay Whichard, vice chairman of the PTI Board of Trustees, will introduce Grimsley. Dr. William Fulford will introduce the candidates for the degrees, and Clifton W. Everett, Sr., chairman of the board, will confer the degrees.

Bearish Sentiment Was Overwhelming

Interstate Securities Corp.
Since early March the stock market has experienced one of its most impressive advances in history.

The recent 120 point rally in the Dow Jones Industrial Average has come at a time when interest rates were rising, inflation was showing no signs of abating, and the general economic background was no better than in recent months when the market was declining. Thus, one may ask why is the market rallying?

It is possible that the market, as it so often does, is forecasting better times ahead. It is also possible that the entire change in psychology is due more to technical factors influencing the market.

A good case can be supported for this advance being a result of the changes in the internal dynamics or technical aspects of the market. At the end of March, major institutional participants in the market had built up major cash reserves. For example, mutual fund liquidity stood at ten percent. This means that ten percent of their assets were in cash or cash equivalents. This was double the percentage of a year earlier. The April short interest rose to a record forty million shares. Both of these factors indicated that bearish sentiment was overwhelming.

In such an environment, it is

Show 'Chariot' Again Thursday

The solar-heated motor home, "Solar Chariot," will be on display at Nichols Department Store Parking Lot Thursday from 10 to 4 p.m.

Its owner and builder, Ed Walkinstik, likes to share information with others about how they, too, can put solar energy to work. The Chariot's on display till 5 o'clock today at the North Carolina National Bank, corner of Green and First Streets. The motor home was featured in this past Sunday's "Daily Reflector."

FUND-RAISER

GRIFTON — The Grifton Volunteer Fire Department is having a barbecue dinner in the Town Lot Saturday from 11 a.m. until to raise additional funds. The public is invited to attend.

Today's Cryptquip clue: U equals G

The Cryptquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Will Speak At Services

MRS. REBECCA MOORE

The annual Woman's Day will be held at the Triumph Missionary Baptist Church Sunday at 11 a.m. according to the Rev. C. B. Gray, pastor.

The guest speaker will be Mrs. Rebecca E. Moore of Weldon. She received her B.A. degree from Shaw University, Raleigh, and graduated from the Jcoson Fashion School of Angeles, Republic of the Philippines. She has studied at the Riverside Junior College, Riverside, Calif., Chapman College, Orange, Calif., the University of Maryland and the Ryukyu Classical Musical Academ, Okinawa, Japan.

During her 25 years of travel with her husband, the Rev. John B. Moore, she served in various positions in community and church activities. While living in Adana, Turkey, she was elected as a delegate to the 11th annual Training Conference, sponsored by the European Council of Protestant Women held in Berchsgaden, Germany.

The public is invited to attend the service.

Steinburg Art Now On Display

NEW YORK (AP) — An exhibit of more than 250 works by Saul Steinberg, which covers 30 years of his career, is now on view at the Whitney Museum of American Art here through July 9.

The retrospective of the Romanian artist's works will travel to the Hirshhorn Museum in Washington, D.C., where it will be on display from Oct. 13 through Nov. 26. It will also be on view at London's Serpentine Gallery and the Fondation Maegh, St. Paul de Vence, France.

Shortage Of Physicians

WARRENTON, N.C. (AP) — Warren County is facing a cut-back in services at its only hospital unless it is able to recruit more doctors soon, officials of 37-bed Warren General Hospital warn.

The county-subsidized hospital operated with four doctors until last fall, but one of the physicians died and another left the area — leaving only two doctors.

"It's an intolerable situation," said Col. Herman S. Anderson, administrator of the hospital. "We've come close to shutting down several times. If we lose another doctor, I just don't see how we could continue to operate."

"All we're offering now is basic, general medical care," he said.

Officials said the two doctors are working 80 to 90 hours a week and the hospital is unable to offer surgery.

Both the remaining doctors — one a general practitioner and the other a surgeon — are on emergency call 24 hours a day, seven days a week.

"I've expanded to fill the void," said Dr. D.R. Coffman. "I'm going to keep doing all I can to help, but I think we definitely need a couple more (doctors)."

Coffman said two physician's assistants and a nurse practitioner help in his private practice but that he spends at least half his time at the hospital.

Anderson said the hospital may be forced to close its emergency room, as it did its delivery room three years ago, unless more doctors are recruited.

Princess Margaret And Lord Snowden Divorced

LONDON (AP) — Princess Margaret's 18-year marriage to Lord Snowden, the former Antony Armstrong-Jones, ended in a divorce that took just a few seconds today.

Her special procedure "quickie" divorce, one of a batch of 27, went through without hitch and it took Judge John Willis one minute, 53 seconds to dispose of the cases.

None of the divorced couples was required to be present in the court in the Gothic-style Law Courts at the end of London's Strand.

The divorce was granted by consent on the grounds the couple had been separated for two years.

Among the other 27 couples simultaneously getting decrees were Westminster office cleaner Laura Knowles and former Dragon guardsman Michael Farr.

Most of the spectators in court were journalists.

The princess announced May 10 that she would divorce Lord Snowden.

Although brewery heir Roddy Llewellyn, 30, has been the 47-year-old Margaret's constant companion since she and Snowden, 48, separated in March 1976, a household spokesman said at the time of the announcement that Margaret does not plan to remarry.

The royal divorce was listed 20th in the batch of 27 as "H.R.H (Her Royal Highness) the Princess Margaret Rose, countess of Snowden v Armstrong-Jones A.C.R., Earl of Snowden."

As soon as the judge took his seat on the bench his assistant read out the names on the list.

The judge then said: "Is there any party or any person present to show cause why a decree should not be pronounced?"

There was no reply, and the judge asked whether there was "anybody to say anything on costs."

Again there was no reply, and the judge announced: "Very well. I pronounce decrees nisi in accordance with the respective registrars' certificates."

There was silence in court and immediately the judge began talking about the next cases in his list. One, in private, related to an agreement about the future of the two roy-

Seniors Set Outing Plans

The Town and Country Senior Citizens' Club held its May meeting and luncheon Thursday at the St. Paul's Episcopal Church fellowship hall, with 75 members attending.

Members planning to go on the bus trip to the North Carolina Zoo in Asheboro, June 13, were requested to be at the church parking lot at 7 a.m. All members must bring a box lunch.

There are still available seats on the bus. Interested members should contact Mrs. Ashton before May 25.

John Williams, a student at East Carolina University, gave a magic show to the group.

Members on the luncheon committee included Mrs. Mamie Roper, Mrs. Louise Ward, Mrs. Sadie Worthington, Mrs. Fannie Gilbert, Mrs. Ruth Harris, Mrs. Alma Letchworth, Mrs. Ruby Parkerson and Mrs. Sallie Reagan.

There will be no June meeting. The next meeting will be the third Thursday in July. The meeting place will be announced at a later date.

In divorce cases, no details are ever announced about provisions for any children. In this case, there is little doubt that both the princess and Snowden have already amicably agreed about financial provisions and access to their two children, Viscount Linley, 16, and Lady Sarah Armstrong-Jones, 14.

24-HOUR STRIKE

ROME (AP) — Most Italian rail traffic was halted by a 24-hour strike after the government failed to agree on workers' wage demands. The walkout was to end this afternoon.

Want Congress Skip Pay Boost

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress is eligible for annual cost of living increases in federal salaries but a House committee wants its members and other high government officials excluded from the automatic pay boost.

The House Appropriations Committee voted Tuesday to include the prohibition in a $922.5 million money bill that now goes to the House floor.

PROPOSED AMENDMENT TO FINAL COMPREHENSIVE ANNUAL SERVICES PLAN UNDER TITLE XX THE DEPARTMENT OF HUMAN RESOURCES STATE OF NORTH CAROLINA PROGRAM YEAR OCTOBER 1, 1977 TO SEPTEMBER 30, 1978

Changes in service definitions and service delivery proposals have necessitated the amendment of the Final Comprehensive Annual Services Plan for social services under Title XX of the Federal Social Security Act. Following are brief descriptions of the changes:

- Information on client service levels and estimated expenditures has been revised to reflect current data on county and state administered services.
- Transportation was added as an optional component to six services in order to make the services more accessible to clients with incomes between the 65% and 80% levels. The services affected are: Services to Meet the Special Needs of Alcoholics and Drug Addicts—Non-Residential Day/Night Treatment, Services to Meet the Special Needs of the Emotionally Disturbed—Day Treatment, Services to Meet the Special Needs of the Aging, Disabled, and Handicapped—Community Living Services, Health Support Services, Family Planning Services, and Services to Meet the Special needs of the Mentally Retarded—Community Living Services.
- To expedite the payment process for family planning claims, the Division of Health Services will be responsible for the public portion of the Family Planning Program. The county departments of social services will still be responsible for the purchase of Family Planning Services from private providers.

PROPOSED EFFECTIVE DATE of the amendment is July 1, 1978.

PUBLIC COMMENTS on the proposed amendment will be accepted in writing during the period from May 24, 1978, through June 22, 1978, at the office listed below. All comments will be available for public inspection in the same office.

THE PUBLIC MAY REVIEW the proposed amendment at any county department of social services Monday through Friday, from 9:00 a.m. to 4:00 p.m.

The proposed amendment may be obtained free of charge by calling 1-800-662-7030 (toll-free) or by written request from the office below.

Nearly A Third Of $1 Million Raised For Art Museum Fund

Nearly one third of the $1 million dollar private sector fund goal for the building fund of the new North Carolina Museum of Art has been raised by the North Carolina Art Society.

This achievement has been reported by Mrs. Elizabeth Fen-tress, administrative officer for the art society.

As of April 30, the most recent date of fund and pledge compilation, a total of $314,918.18 has been received in cash or pledges.

"Of this amount," Mrs. Fentress said, "$15,596.63 has been contributed by school age children in 32 different counties of the state."

One example of student work has been that of 200 junior high school students from Belmont, who had a contest that resulted in raising $1,000 on behalf of the museum.

The art society's share of the $5 million needed to complete the new museum construction is $1 million. Mrs. Fentress noted, despite having reached nearly one third of the goal, that "it is still too early to report on the status of the overall campaign."

"We have received numerous tentative pledges and commitments from major North Carolina corporations toward the $5 million goal," she said, "but we hesitate to announce a figure because some of our larger potential contributors are waiting to see what the rest of the business year holds in store."

Students at Pitt Technical Institute were also praised by Mrs. Fentress in conjunction with the campaign. They contributed an architectural model of the new museum.

"The students did a beautiful job on the model," she commented, noting that potential contributors, "have been interested in looking at the model. 'I only wish we could have provided projects students for each of the classrooms in the state,'" Mrs. Fentress said.

Benefit functions, according to Mrs. Fentress, have been instrumental in raising funds. Two counties, Pitt and Robeson, have already surpassed their goals through benefit functions.

"In both counties," she noted, "benefits raised more than $10,000 in cash."

SET THE DATE — A smiling King Hussein of Jordan listens Tuesday as his fiancée Elizabeth Halaby, answers newsmen's questions at Basman Palace in Amman. The couple held the news conference

Sues Her For Breaking Date

By NADINE JOSEPH
Associated Press Writer

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A 30-year-old accountant, angered by his date cancelling at the last minute, has sued her for $38, saying he won't take being stood up lying down.

Tom Horsley said he filed the suit in small claims court against Alyn Chesselet as a matter of principle, because she broke an "oral contract" to have dinner with him and see the musical "The Wiz" earlier this year.

Ms. Chesselet, 30, a waitress at the Vesuvio Cafe in San Francisco, said Tuesday that Horsley was "nuts" to think she would pay.

"He's blown everything out of proportion and he's just doing this to bug me," said Ms. Chesselet, who met Horsley eight years ago at Lone Mountain College.

"Most guys would be just as angry," said Horsley, who claims he spent time, money and energy to plan the date. "If I win in court, I'll feel I was right in principle."

Horsley, who lives and works in Campbell near San Jose, wants to be paid for two hours of driving to and from San Francisco at his minimum rate of $8.50 an hour as a certified public accountant and 17 cents a mile in car expenses for the 100-mile round trip. His claim is for $34 plus a $2 filing fee and $2 to serve court papers.

"She had 10 days to call me and cancel our date," Horsley said Tuesday. "And she promised to pay" his costs after she broke the date, he said.

Miss Chesselet said she had to cancel her date because of a sudden change in her work schedule and that she tried to reach him to let him know.

Neither seems to have learned from the past. Eight years ago, Horsley stopped dating Miss Chesselet after she broke a date to a University of California football game.

"She did it in such a nasty way, by sending me a Halloween card announcing that she wouldn't go out with me again," he recalled.

As for Miss Chesselet, she said she had almost forgotten how jealous, stubborn and persistent Horsley was when they last dated. She vows she will never make another date with him.

The two are scheduled to meet in court July 24.

N.C. Jobless Rate Drops

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina's unemployment rate dropped last month to 4 percent, the lowest it has been since September 1974.

The Employment Security Commission reported Tuesday that there were about 107,000 people without jobs in April, 12,000 less than in March, when the jobless rate was 4.5 percent.

The state's unemployment rate for April compared to a national rate of 5.8 percent.

The ESC said more than 2.5 million Tar Heel residents held jobs in April, a gain of more than 33,000 from March. More than half the increase, 17,000, was in agriculture. The number of retail trade jobs rose 3,700, service jobs increased by 3,300 and construction jobs were up by 1,800.

The state's average hourly wage rose three cents to $4.37 and the average weekly wage climbed 32 cents to $13.49 while the typical work week dropped 12 minutes to 39.7 hours.

The ESC said it paid out $9.7 million in unemployment claims in April, down $3.4 million from March.

Special Lore Surrounds Climbing Of Mt. Everest

By BHOLA RANA
KATMANDU, Nepal (UPI) — Twenty-five years ago, when lanky New Zealand beekeeper Sir Edmund Hillary climbed Mt. Everest, the conquest of the world's highest peak was an epic feat that stirred the world. "We have knocked the bastard," he said to Tenzing Norkay, his Sherpa guide, shortly after they reached the summit on May 29, 1953.

They were the first men to stand atop the 29,028-foot Himalayan peak. For Hillary, it was meant to commemorate the coronation of Britain's Queen Elizabeth II.

All told there have been 62 known Everest summiteers. All have been invited by the Nepalese government to attend a week of celebrations, featuring symposiums and exhibitions, beginning May 29.

Americans first scaled Everest in the spring of 1963, and the feat was repeated two years ago to honor the U.S. Bicentennial. At least six of the Americans who have climbed Everest are expected here for the 25th anniversary celebrations.

Everest is named for Sir George Everest, the British Surveyor General of India who discovered it in 1855. Until then, Mt. Kanchenjunga on the Nepal-Sikkim border was considered the world's highest peak.

In 1921 a British team made the first real reconnaissance of Everest, from the north side in Tibet. In 1924 British climbers George Mallory and Andrew Irving were killed not far from the summit.

After the end of World War II and the emergence of Nepal from two centuries of virtual isolation, the landlocked country was opened to foreigners.

In 1950 Americans Charles Houston and Bill Tilman brought news to the outside world after an assault on Everest that the treacherous Khumbu Icefall, the only approach from the Nepalese side, was not negotiable and that chances of ascent from the south were negligible.

Other reconnaissance attempts followed but no one succeeded until Hillary and Tenzing.

Teams which followed over the years included, besides the British and Americans, expeditions from China, Japan, South Korea, India, Switzerland and Austria. All were national teams. Fifteen expeditions in all have reached the Everest summit.

The American conquest in 1963 was one of the more notable efforts in the struggle between man and mountain. Besides putting six climbers atop Everest in three separate assaults, Dr. Willy Unsoeld and Tom Hornbein climbed it for the first, and since unrepented, time through the west ridge. They then made a traverse, also the only recorded feat, by coming down the southeast ridge.

The latter was the route Hillary and Tenzing had taken to the summit.

Tenzing's nephew, Nowang

Gombu, is the only man to have climbed Everest twice, once with Americans and again with the Indian team.

Japan is the only nation to make three successful attempts on Everest and in 1975 put the first woman, housewife Mrs. Junko Tabei, on the peak. The only other woman to reach the top was from China.

The Italian conquest of 1973 was one of the more controversial. The team, financed by an Italian tycoon, used helicopters to ferry supplies to its second camp. This prompted a comment from Hillary that the climb was "not a mountaineering expedition but an army exercise."

Some mountaineers also doubt that the Chinese actually climbed Everest in 1960 because they never produced adequate evidence to prove it. The latest conquest was made by three Austrians and their Sherpa guide who reached the summit on May 3 with the use of oxygen — the first team to climb the peak in the Silver Jubilee year.

A British team headed by Chris Bonington holds the record for the fastest climb — 32 days after establishing a base camp — through the rocky southwest face.

A Japanese, Y. Miura, skied down the slopes of Everest from the South col from an altitude of 24,000 feet, an accomplishment which was filmed and won an international award.

One thing is clear: adventurers will continue for years to attempt the feat of conquering Everest. It is "booked" until 1982.

SIU Planning Ethnic Studies

CARBONDALE, Ill. (UPI) — Southern Illinois University is developing a program to teach students from different ethnic groups about their cultural heritage and prepare them for careers in ethnic services.

The ethnic studies unit, projected to start in a year or so, would replace the university's 9-year-old black American studies program.

"The experience we've had with black studies in the last 10 years is that it creates a gap between the black community and the rest of the country," said Arnold J. Auerbach, a professor in the social welfare department.

Suggests Using Paid-For Ads

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — A Dallas advertising executive told a Southern Baptist consultation that churches interested in getting their message to people who watch television and listen to radio should use paid advertising on prime time — even though the shows themselves do not appeal to church people.

The objective is to reach "people outside the church," said Jim Goodnight, and "to do that you must go where they are."

Omnibus Energy Bill Is Stirred By Conferees

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter's omnibus energy bill, stalled in Congress since December, seems to be on the move again with apparent acceptance by House-Senate energy conferees of a compromise on natural gas pricing.

The compromise, calling for deregulation of newly discovered gas in 1985, is up for expected approval today by Senate members of the conference committee working on the energy legislation.

Barring the unexpected, they will approve the plan on a 10-7 vote, clearing the way for final action by both houses. Seven Democrats and three Republicans are expected to make up the majority.

The compromise, which took nearly six months of delicate negotiations between key conferees and Energy Secretary James R. Schlesinger, was approved Tuesday by House conferees on a 13-12 vote.

That vote was viewed as the critical one by conference leaders, because support for the month-old plan among House conferees had been far more fragile than in the Senate.

A coalition of House Republicans and liberal Democrats almost managed to wreck the compromise on Tuesday but failed by one vote. The GOP members want quicker deregulation and the liberals say any form of deregulation will be a burden on consumers.

OK Contract For Salter Path Road

ATLANTIC BEACH — The North Carolina Board of Transportation last week approved a $2.7 million contract for construction of an improved Salter Path Road.

The contract, awarded to Propst Construction Co. of Concord, calls for grading, drainage and paving the road from Atlantic Beach to the Indian Beach city limits, West of Salter Path.

The project, which may get under way next month, is scheduled for completion by September 1979.

The Salter Path Road project is part of a program to improve the road linking Atlantic Beach and Emerald Isle at the Western end of Core Banks. Part of the project East of Emerald Isle is already under construction.

Deregulation is intended to provide industry with enough financial incentive to explore for new supplies of gas for interstate shipment.

Gas shipped in interstate pipelines has been under federal price controls since 1954.

Completion of action on natural gas pricing would free four parts of the president's five-section energy program — which he submitted in April 1977 — for final action by both houses.

However, conference leaders say they expect it will take four to six weeks to put the complex legislation into final form, meaning there probably will not be floor votes until some time in July.

And the gas price proposal also faces a likely filibuster in the Senate floor, possibly led by a coalition of oil-state conservatives and liberals who are hardcore opponents of deregulation.

The fifth part of Carter's plan — energy taxes — will be handled separately.

ing inflation while he has fueled and increased inflation by being part of a system that raided your pocketbooks by charging excessive rates."

"I'm the only candidate in this race that has a legislative record. I am the candidate that has saved the citizens of this state millions of dollars," through reduced insurance rates. I have a record of saving people money.

"While I've been standing up for the people," Ingram continued, "he's been standing up for the insurance companies and banking industry."

Ingram, during his campaign, has voiced support for developing alternate sources of energy, seeking a balanced federal budget, maintaining a strong national defense, and proposed a health insurance program through free enterprise, "that will guarantee the people health care coverage from the insurance company of their choice without fear of unfair cancellations."

Ingram has also indicated support for legislation to "end the insurance industry's special interest exemption from the nation's anti-trust laws."

According to Ingram, "the insurance industry is the only multi-billion dollar industry exempt from our nation's anti-trust laws."

The candidate has also said he favors programs that would give farmers a fair profit for their products, and programs that would take persons able to work off the welfare rolls.

Speaking of Your Health...

Lester L. Coleman, M.D.

Why Anticipate Illness?

When I wake, my hands are numb. It takes me a few minutes to get the sense of life back into them. I'm worried because my father had a stroke when he was 60 years old. I'm 31. Does it mean that I'm heading for the same thing? — Mr. H.B., Neb.

Dear Mr. B.: By a quick calculation, that gives you 37 years to worry about a condition that you will probably never have. That's a long investment in fear about the unrealistic relationship between the numbness in your hands and your father's stroke. How much wiser it would be to have a thorough examination and learn, once and for all, the facts surrounding your own condition.

A temporary sensation of numbness or tingling is always due to some interference with the blood circulation. The fact that it occurs when you arise suggests the possibility of poor sleeping posture. Some pressure on the large blood vessels under the arms could be responsible.

Tingling of hands and feet, cramps, numbness and coldness may result from spasm of the blood vessels due to tobacco. There are other causes, of course. These can be quickly determined by the many tests for circulation that now can be made so accurately.

Even more important than confronting the medical aspects of your problem, is the need to have your anxiety assuaged so that you will not spend fruitless years of your life waiting to be affected by a "hereditary stroke" which probably will never happen. Far too many people spend their lives "dying" of diseases they will never get. There is nothing more destructive than to live with the albatross of fear over your destiny.

I was absolutely flabbergasted when I was told that I had tuberculosis in a small part of one lung. I'm sure a lot of your readers will doubt, just as I have, that tuberculosis happens any more. Wouldn't that be a good column for you to write about? — Mr. D.L.L., Tenn.

Dear Mr. L.:

Thank you for helping me shake the public out of their complacency that tuberculosis no longer exists. Many times I have written that this is not true. TB is a treacherous disease that is still high on the list of communicable infections. It is true that there has been a progressive decline in the frequency and severity of this disease. Antibiotics, specific anti-tuberculosis drugs, better nutrition and working conditions are responsible.

Any chronic cough must be investigated because the early recognition of its cause determines the speed and success of recovery.

FCC Closes His Radio Station

KERNERSVILLE, N.C. (AP) — A homemade FM radio station which apparently had been operating for more than a year has been shut down by the Federal Communications Commission for broadcasting without an FCC license, the commission announced Wednesday.

Officials said the station, identifying itself as FM 90.1, had been playing rock music for about nine hours daily since April 1977, transmitting from a small but "intricately designed" studio and a homemade 50-foot antenna.

Charles McGee and Bill Sheppard of Winston-Salem and Keith Ebert of Kernersville were identified as owner-operators of the station. They face a maximum penalty of a $10,000 fine and up to one year in jail.

Rampants Bow To Hoggard In Ninth

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

WILMINGTON — Johnny Robinson lined a single through the drawn-in Rose High School infield with the bases loaded last night to give Hoggard High School a 1-0 win in the first round of the State 4-A Playoffs.

The two teams battled through eight and a half scoreless frames before a walk, and three straight hits ended the Rampant hopes for advancement in the march to the state championship.

It was a classic pitching duel between Rose's Mike Williams and Hoggard's Mike Dowless. Both of them bent during the evening, but neither of them really broke. Both teams had chances to win it, time after time, and most of the time, it was the Rampants who were banging on the door.

Dowless fanned 15 Rampant batters as he limited Rose to only two infield hits. Only once, in the ninth inning did the Rampants get the ball out of the infield against him. Dowless walked four. The win was his tenth against no losses.

Williams, until the ninth, also allowed only two hits, but grounders up the middle that barely reached the outfield. He struck out nine and walked six, but aside from the third inning was never in trouble until the ninth. Then, it was a combination of things that got him into trouble.

"We were told that we could beat them if we bunted on them," an extremely disappointed Rampant Coach Ronald Vincent said. "But we just couldn't put the ball on the ground the whole evening. If we could have, we would have won it before the ninth even came close."

In fact, the Rampant coach felt his team should have had a run in the third inning, when they first threatened.

With two away, Robert Morehead reached on an error and on the hit and run, went all the way to third on Ron Chapman's infield hit. Chapman then broke for second on the steal as Dowless paused in his windup. The pitcher seemed startled, then turned and started to throw to second as Chapman pulled up in the basepaths in anticipation of getting caught in a rundown, with Morehead hopefully getting home in the meantime.

No play was made, however, and Chapman reached second easily. Vincent, however, protested that Dowless had moved his front foot before his back, and thereby balked. But the umpires disagreed, and a strikeout ended the first of the Rampant threats.

Rose followed by putting two on in the fourth, on a single and a walk, then moving them up on a passed ball. But again, the Rampants were unable to get the ball down and strikeouts ended the threat.

In the fifth, Reggie Spain reached on an error and attempts to move him up again failed, although he did reach second on an infield out.

Again in the sixth, Rose had their chance, as Greg Lee walked and stole both second and third with none out. But again, bunt attempts failed as two strikeouts and an infield out ended the threat.

One last time, Rose had a chance, in the eighth. Chapman walked and stole second. But on an attempted hit and run, a strikeout and a throw-down to third got him in a double play.

Two double plays helped Rose keep the Vikings off the basepaths most of the evening. Only in the third did they offer a real threat. That came when Williams walked three batters, loading the bases with just one out. But he struck out the next two to get out of trouble.

Then came the ninth. With fog creeping over the outfield fences and obscuring the outfielders, Bill Lloyd opened the bottom of the frame with a walk. Tom Whitehead then laid down a bunt that Rose was slow handling, and everyone was safe. Tony Hart followed with a grounder to short that died in the dew-wet grass, allowing him to reach, loading the bases.

And Johnny Robinson followed with a single through the infield, which was drawn in for the attempt to get a man at home, and the game was over.

Rose ends the season with a 15-7 record, while Hoggard moves into the second round of the playoffs with a 21-1 mark.

McKeon Takes Over Athletics; Comes In The Way He Went Out

By BRUCE LOWITT
AP Sports Writer

The Oakland A's lost their manager Tuesday night.

Not so unusual. Happens all the time out there in Charlie Finley Land.

What was unusual was that Bobby Winkles left voluntarily — and with the A's in first place, no less.

Winkles, perhaps unwilling to wait for the A's to plummet from first place in the American League West — or unwilling to wait for Finley to hand out yet another sheaf of walking papers, pulled the old "You can't fire me; I quit" routine.

Last June 10 he replaced Jack McKeon. And when Winkles bade the A's goodbye a few hours before Tuesday night's game, McKeon, the third base coach, assumed the managerial reins once more.

And he came in the way he went out — a loser. The A's literally kicked away their game against Milwaukee, falling 3-2 and slipping within a game of second-place California.

"I'm sorry to see him go," Finley said of Winkles. "I think he made a mistake. It is obviously something that doesn't meet the eye. It came as a surprise to me."

"My speculation on why he quit is that the team is on top and he wanted to get out while he was looking good," said Finley, who has had 16 managers — three of them twice — since buying the A's back in 1961. "If the team took a nosedive, then he'd look bad. But that's only my opinion ... I had no differences with him about who he was playing. If I wanted to make out the lineup, I would. But that was not the difference."

Finley said Winkles and he had met earlier Tuesday and that Winkles asked for the rest of his 1978 salary. And when Finley said no, Winkles asked for severance pay of perhaps $15,000, Finley said.

"I told him if he was quitting, I wouldn't give him a damn cent!" the controversial club owner related.

Twins 5, Rangers 2
While Oakland was losing a manager, Minnesota's Rod Carew was losing his coveted .400 batting average and Jim Sundberg of Texas was losing his hitting streak at 22 games. Glenn Borgmann got the Twins' big hits, driving in two runs

DING-DONG TROPHY
LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Victory Bell which goes to the winner of the Southern California-UCLA football game each fall once adorned a Southern Pacific locomotive.

It once figured in a bellnapping. In 1941, members of a Southern Cal fraternity stole it. A year-long search was needed to find it and even the Los Angeles Police Force got into the act. There also were some raids by UCLA partisans. Finally, the Southern Cal students gave it up on the condition that it would become a permanent trophy.

with a homer and a single. And Dan Ford added a homer for Minnesota.

Yankees 10, Indians 1
Ron Guidry's 11-strikeout, five-hit pitching, home runs by Graig Nettles and Chris Chambliss and a seven-run seventh inning carried the Yanks to their 18th victory in the last 24 games. Chambliss singled for two runs and Nettles doubled for two in the seventh.

Orioles 2, Tigers 0
Mike Flanagan pitched a two-hitter and Rick Dempsey broke up a scoreless tie with a fifth-inning home run in the Orioles' victory.

But the big play was center fielder Larry Harlow's leaping catch that robbed John Wockenfuss of a second-inning home run.

Blue Jays 2, Red Sox 1
Tim Johnson led off the 12th inning for Toronto with a walk, raced to third on Luis Gomez's double down the right field line and scored on Rick Bosetti's single to left to beat the Red Sox.

Angels 5, White Sox 4
Rick Miller of California doubled with two away in the sixth inning and came home on Ken Landreaux's pinch single to center field with the run that beat the White Sox.

Mariners 4-3, Royals 3-5
Successful run-scoring doubles by Lee Stanton and Ruppert Jones in the sixth inning vaulted Seattle to victory in the opener, but the Royals rebounded in the nightcap on rookie Clint Hurdle's three runs batted in.

Carolina Takes 11-9 Victory

AUBURN, Ala. (AP) — North Carolina scored three runs in the bottom of the eighth to beat Memphis State, 11-9, and win a berth in the NCAA's College World Baseball Series in Omaha in June.

The Tar Heels trailed 8-3 before tying the game with two runs in the bottom of the sixth inning.

Mike Fox reached base on an error to give Carolina its first base run in the eighth inning. Roy Clark followed with a single to put two men on base. Jim Atkinson singled to right field, but the ball got by Terry Pressgrove and went to the fence.

Clark and Fox scored to put Carolina ahead. Atkinson score on an infield hit by David Barnett.

Pitcher Greg Norris tossed nine innings for the Tar Heels, giving up nine runs on 11 hits and struck out 14 Memphians.

Mike Graves took the loss, the third Memphis State pitcher. He entered in the sixth.

James Davis cracked a homer in the top of the ninth for Memphis State. After that Jeff Robinson walked and the potential tying run came in a play with Doug Granger. But he hit to fielder's choice to end the game.

No Early Heroics For Guthrie; She Looks For A Strong Finish

By HANK LOWENKRON
Associated Press Writer

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Janet Guthrie has confidence in her car and crew, but the first woman to drive in the Indianapolis 500 isn't thinking about making a mad dash for the lead Sunday when she starts in the race for the second time.

"Starting in the middle of the pack, you're not going to see any first lap heroics from me," the 40-year-old Guthrie said Tuesday.

"I'll have exactly one thought, say for the first 50 miles and that is to stay out of any problems that may develop. A lot of my stock car races have been based on an easy start and a strong finish."

Guthrie, who qualified with a speed of 190.325 miles per hour, will be starting the 33-car race on the outside of the fifth row, once Mario Andretti is placed in the car Mike Hiss qualified for him.

Although Guthrie won't admit it, the race may be critical to the woman who failed to qualify in 1976 and finished 29th last year.

"I was surprised I had so much trouble getting a sponsor," she said. "A lot of people listened to my proposals, but most said they had planned their budget and to come back some other time. I'd been working on getting a sponsor since December. And Texaco came through at the 12th hour on March 31."

"We had to get going then in order to be ready for this race."

Guthrie's deal with her sponsor is for this race only. She said the company would own the car after the race.

"That was part of our deal, which was my idea. However, if we remain happy with each other we could work something out," she said.

The University of Michigan physics graduate, who started competitive racing in 1963 and has been involved in it at many levels since, also is looking for a sponsor in the NASCAR circuit.

"My stock sponsor said it is cutting its budget," she said. "But unless I win this race here, I don't feel I have anything to prove. My record speaks for itself."

Sunday, Guthrie will be driving a Wildcat-SGD, built by George Bignotti, who has built four cars that have won the Indy 500.

"The car is a good predictable one. I believe it will be easy to drive fast for 500 miles. I believe it will be much easier to drive fast for 500 miles than some of the Lightnings in the race," she said.

"The car really talks to you. It tells you what it is going to do. It gives you plenty of time to take appropriate steps if it is going to do something you don't like."

This month has been much quieter than were the previous two Mays for Guthrie, who spent most of her time in the pits last year while completing only 29 laps.

Little League

Optimists 3, Coca-Cola 2

The Optimists scored early to take a 3-2 victory over Coca-Cola in the North State Little League yesterday.

The Optimists scored twice in the first inning. Doyle Kirkland reached on a three-base error and scored when Brett Dye doubled. Mike Iaboni reached on an error, as did Andrae Wooten, scoring Dye.

The other run came in the second, and proved to be the winning one. Kirkland singled, moved up on Dye's hit, took third on a wild pitch and scored when Iaboni singled.

Coke got its first run in the third. Jimmy Smith walked, as did Paul Goodson. Mike Sasser was hit by a pitch, and Lee Allen walked, scoring

Smith

The other run came in the fourth. Richard Pace reached on a fielder's choice, and Smith walked. Goodson singled and an out by Aaron Smith scored Pace.

Dye and Darrell Dunn each had two hits for Optimists, while no one had more than one for Coke.

Exchange 5, Big Value Drugs 2

The Exchange gained a 5-2 victory over Big Value Drugs in the Tar Heel Little League yesterday.

Exchange scored its first run in the third inning. Monty Atkinson singled and moved up on a passed ball and a wild pitch. He scored when Joe Hobgood grounded out.

The next two came in the fourth, giving Exchange all it needed. Hunter Bost singled and scored when Billy Michel cracked a two-run homer for a 3-0 lead.

In the sixth, two more runs came over. Bost walked and Tim Norris singled. Both moved up on a wild pitch and scored on Tim Clark's single.

Big Value got both of its runs in the bottom of the sixth. Steve Wall reached on an error and scored on Scott Irwin's double. Irwin moved up on an out and scored on Les Turner's hit.

Sterling Edwards had two hits for Big Value, while no one else had more than one.

Cardinals Are Rolling—But In The Wrong Direction—Down

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

The St. Louis Cardinals continue to roll — only they're rolling in the wrong direction.

"Things have a way of snowballing, I guess," says Manager Ken Boyer, bemoaning the major league's longest losing streak this year, and the longest for the Cardinals since 1929.

The negative streak reached 11 Tuesday night with a 4-1 loss at home to the Montreal Expos.

"I'm trying to figure out some way to get us hitting, primarily," said Boyer. "We played real well defensively the last time we were home."

The manager shook his head.

"You've got to keep putting your best people out there," he said. "But maybe it's got to the point psychologically where I'll have to stick a couple of new people in the lineup. (Montreal Manager) Dick Williams told me tonight when he handed in his lineup card that he'd been through it himself. He said, 'I don't have any answer other than just going through it.'"

Rain postponed the Philadelphia-Chicago game.

Montreal left-hander Rudy May scattered seven hits, surrendering the lone St. Louis run in the fifth before departing in the seventh following one-out singles by Jerry Humphrey and Mike Tyson. Mike Garman finished for Montreal, recording his first save of the season.

Giants 3, Astros 2

Bill Madlock's two-out, run-scoring single in the bottom of the ninth capped a three-run rally as San Francisco beat Houston. The Astros entered the ninth with a 2-0 lead behind the pitching of rookie Tom Dixon and reliever Joe Sambito.

Padres 3, Dodgers 2

Tucker Ashford's two-run single in the eighth inning sparked San Diego over Los Angeles. After Dave Winfield singled and Gene Tenace walked, Rick Sweet grounded out to first base before Ashford drilled his single to right field off loser Tommy John. Rollie Fingers was the winner in relief of Randy Jones.

Braves 6, Reds 4

Unbeaten rookie Preston Hanna weathered a 1-hour, 13-minute rain delay and solo home runs by Johnny Bench and Mike Lum in posting his third victory as Atlanta beat Cincinnati. Hanna managed to check the Reds on five hits.

Mets 7, Pirates 3

Doug Flynn and John Stearns drove in two runs apiece to lead New York over Pittsburgh in a game marked by three rain delays. Nino Espinosa earned his third straight victory for New York with two innings of relief help from Skip Lockwood, who got his seventh save.

The Mets broke a 3-3 tie in the eighth when Flynn smashed his fourth hit, a double, to drive in Stearns, who had singled off losing reliever Grant Jackson. Jackson then yielded a pinch single to Joel Youngblood that brought Flynn home. Stearns singled with the bases loaded for two more runs in the ninth.

Next Move Is Up To Motta

LANDOVER, Md. (AP) —

The chess game that is playoff basketball is in full swing, with the next move up to Washington Coach Dick Motta.

His Seattle counterpart, Lenny Wilkens, made the first move on Sunday, bringing 34-year-old Paul Silas off the bench in the second half to play against Washington's Elvin Hayes after the Big E had outplayed Seattle rookie Jack Sikma in the early going.

The move paid off as Silas effectively neutralized the Bulls' high scorer, limiting Hayes to just two baskets in the second half. Meanwhile, Silas grabbed 12 rebounds as Seattle dominated the boards, enabling the Sonics to rally from a 19-point third quarter deficit to a 106-102 victory in the opening game of the National Basketball Association championship series.

With the second game of the best-of-seven playoff finals to be played here Thursday night, it is now up to Motta to counter Wilkens' move.

"Silas was a big factor in the opener, no question about it," said Motta. "We were worried about him, and I guess it was with good reason."

Motta does not expect Hayes to fade from view on Thursday. "We can correct the things we did wrong," he said, without delving into specifics. "We have adjustments we can make."

One would be to make sure Washington's playmakers are more conscious of getting the ball into Hayes, something that rarely happened when the Sonics were making their comeback on Sunday.

Hayes complained about that on Tuesday.

"Some people are saying I didn't work hard enough to get the basketball, but that is wrong," he said. "I was open and if I get the ball, I'm going to score. The guards can't take all the shots."

But Motta defended his guards, who took his team's final eight shots on Sunday and 16 of the last 22.

"I think we got it inside enough. When you get it inside, you have to put up the shots," he said. As for Hayes' comments, Motta warned, "We can't start bickering and having words."

Winkles Quits A's In Surprising Move

By ERIC PREWITT
AP Sports Writer

OAKLAND (AP) — Charlie Finley has another recycled manager, Jack McKeon, who says, "At least I know what's expected of me."

Bobby Winkles walked out as manager Tuesday night with his team in first place, and third baseman Wayne Gross later called it, "Just another day in the life of the Oakland A's."

He added, using a line that's been said before by members of baseball's most unpredictable team, "As the clubhouse turns."

McKeon is back as manager, moving into the dugout from the third base coaching spot less than a year after Finley fired him as manager and named Winkles to the job. He's the third manager — along with Hank Bauer and Alvin Dark — who has been fired and rehired by the A's owner.

Winkles called Finley, who was home in Chicago, about three hours before Tuesday night's game against the Milwaukee Brewers and told him he was resigning. McKeon and the other coaches, at Finley's request, tried to change his mind but Winkles stood firm and left Oakland Coliseum more than hour before game-time.

"He didn't give us any concrete reasons why he was leaving, but he had his mind made up and we couldn't change it," said McKeon.

"He just pulled out and that was that," said rookie pitcher John Johnson who, like the rest of the players, learned of the managerial change through a printed statement of Finley's handed out 20 minutes before the game, which Oakland lost 3-2.

Brewers Manager George Bamberger, who met McKeon instead of Winkles in the pregame meeting at home plate, said, "Sure, I was surprised. It's a shame. Bobby was doing a good job, a real good job."

Winkles could not be reached for comment. He reportedly left the Oakland area Tuesday night.

"It is obviously something that doesn't meet the eye," Finley said in sizing up one of the strangest of the 15 managerial changes in his 18 years of operating the A's.

But he added, "My speculation on why he quit is that the team is on top and he wanted to get out while he was looking good. If the team took a nosedive, then he'd look bad."

Milwaukee's Sal Bando, the former A's captain who has had many verbal bouts with Finley, said with a snort, "That sounds like something Charlie would say."

"I know Bobby well and if he quit, he quit for a good reason. He's no quitter. He's basically his own man and I don't think he could take all of Finley's prying."

Mississippi State Forfeits 19 Contests

By DOUG TUCKER
AP Sports Writer

MISSION, Kan. (AP) — The NCAA has ordered Mississippi State to forfeit 19 football games, but withheld a decision on a similar case involving Minnesota and all-American basketball player Mychal Thompson.

Citing the seldom-used "Restitution Provision," the National Collegiate Athletic Association Council decreed Mississippi State, for playing defensive lineman Larry Gillard, must forfeit all but the first two games of its 1975 season, and every game in 1976 and 1977.

Mississippi State was placed on probation and Gillard declared ineligible for the 1975 season by the NCAA Infractions Committee, which found he had been provided clothing at a discount not available to other students.

But Mississippi State joined Gillard in a court battle against the NCAA and Gillard continued to play. The school won in a state court but lost on appeal in the Mississippi Supreme Court.

In the Minnesota case, Thompson, David Viney and Phil Saunders were declared ineligible for parts of the 1976-77 season. The Infractions Committee found the Big Ten school guilty of more than 100 violations, including Thompson's admitted selling of complimentary tickets.

Minnesota also allowed the ineligible players to compete while it pursued the matter through the courts, winning on the state level but losing on appeal in the Eighth U.S. Circuit Court in St. Paul, Minn.

William B. Hunt, director of enforcement, said the 18-member Council voted to take the action against Mississippi State during its spring meeting here last month.

"Minnesota raised some questions and the council needed some additional information," Hunt said, "and voted to postpone consideration until additional information was developed."

Hunt said the Minnesota case will be decided at the Council's next meeting, scheduled for August in Dallas.

The Restitution Provision was voted by the NCAA membership at its January 1975 convention and invoked once before, against Oregon State.

The provision holds that when an ineligible player competes under a court order that is subsequently overturned by the courts, the school is subject to further penalties.

"The provision was adopted...in the interest of fairness to institutions forced by court order to compete against teams including an ineligible student-athlete," J. Neils Thompson, NCAA president, said in an NCAA news release Tuesday. "The provisions are designed to eliminate any competitive advantage or profit an institution might gain while permitting an ineligible student-athlete to participate under a court order which is eventually overturned."

Had Mississippi State accepted the NCAA ruling, Gillard would have been eligible his junior and senior seasons. Minnesota's Thompson would have missed only seven games during 1976-77.

If the council rules against Minnesota the same way it did against Mississippi State, the Gophers would forfeit all 1977-78 basketball games.

Pearson's Car Draws Attention

By MONTE PLOTT
Associated Press Writer

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — The familiar red-and-white Mercury of David Pearson was only one of several cars that rocketed around the Charlotte Motor Speedway in practice runs Tuesday, but that Mercury drew more than its share of attention.

With pole qualifying for Sunday's $350,000 World 600 NASCAR event set for today, the question was whether Pearson could maintain his string of pole positions on the 1.5-mile banked speedway.

For the past nine races at the track, Pearson has been on the pole. After a few practice laps Tuesday, the 43-year-old grandfather said he was ready to go for it again.

"We've taken the pole here so many times I guess some people already think I'm going to get this one. Sometimes that helps — it's an edge for me," Pearson said.

"But I wonder if the odds aren't building up against us. It might be about time we lost one."

Pearson led drivers in practice runs Tuesday by turning an unofficial speed of 159.292 mph on one lap. Grand National newcomer Harry Gant of Taylorsville, Benny Parsons and Cale Yarborough were close to Pearson's speed Tuesday.

Pearson, who won last year's World 600 pole by going better than 161 mph, is among drivers who try to qualify with special engines built for quick speed.

"We'll try awful hard to get the pole as long as that much money is at stake," Pearson said, referring to the $15,000 prize for the World 600 pole winner.

At most stock car races, qualifying is based on the faster of two laps. But for Sunday's 600-miler, the longest event on the NASCAR circuit, qualifying will be based on a new system of an average speed over four laps.

It will provide a better show for spectators, but it will also open a greater opportunity for mishaps by drivers.

"Yeah, four laps is a long time to qualify," Richard Petty said Tuesday. "We used to do it all the time, years ago, but there's more of a chance of messing up some equipment."

Darrell Waltrip had a different opinion.

"This is the way qualifying ought to be," the Chevrolet driver said.

"Anybody can go out there and play kamikaze through one lap. But you've really got to set up for four laps."

Forty-six cars were scheduled to make runs for the 15 spots open today. Drivers drew for qualifying order Tuesday and, ironically, Pearson got near the bottom of the list at 44 and Harry drew 46.

More qualifying is scheduled for Thursday and Friday.

Paper To Be Best In Atlanta Tourney

By BOB GREEN
AP Golf Writer

ATLANTA (AP) — Gary Player is the little man who almost wasn't here.

"As you know, I really hadn't planned on playing here," the tough little South African said. "But, since I am, I'll do my very best to win the golf tournament. That, of course, is the object."

The globetrotting Player, who has played in 10 consecutive American tournaments — and won three of them — had planned to compete this week in the British PGA. As a member of the American tour, however, he needed a release from both Tour Commissioner Deane Beman and the Atlanta sponsors. Beman gave his approval. But Atlanta didn't.

That meant Player was prohibited from competing in any other event this week. He didn't have to play here, but he couldn't play anywhere else. And, since he had promised to play in Memphis, Tenn. two weeks from now, he decided to stay in this country.

And, instead of taking a break, he decided to play.

"I'd like to take some time off," he said, "but, unlike American players, I don't have a home to go to. Since I'm going to be in this country anyway, I thought I might as well compete."

Brown Will Fire Again

SEATTLE (AP) — Fred Brown, the Seattle SuperSonics' trigger-happy reserve guard who ambushed Washington in the opening game of the National Basketball Association championship series, says he'll open fire on the Bullets again — if he has to.

"I just go in and see what the situation is," explained Brown, whose 16 fourth-quarter points Sunday highlighted a spectacular rally in Seattle's 106-102 victory that left the Bullets wondering what hit them.

"I'll be shooting if it's needed because I do it very well," con-

And he would be less than human if he didn't place a particular emphasis on winning the $200,000 Atlanta Classic that begins Thursday on the hilly, 6,883-yard, par-72 Atlanta Country Club course.

His chief rivals in the strong, 150-man field are Jack Nicklaus and Hale Irwin, who have won the last four tour events on this difficult course.

Irwin won the Atlanta Classic in 1975 and 1977. (The event was not held in 1976). Nicklaus won in 1973 and took the Tournament Players Championship on the same layout in 1974.

Both have their credentials in order. Nicklaus has won twice, been second twice and is second on the year's money winning list. He was challenging for the title in his own Memorial event last weekend until falling victim to a double bogey on the 17th hole.

Irwin hasn't won this season but he was second in the Heritage, has been third in four events and is one of a half-dozen players to win $100,000 this year. He has a habit of playing his best on the more difficult courses — and this is one of them.

Other major contenders for the $40,000 first prize include U.S. Open champion Hubert Green, PGA titleholder Lanny Wadkins, and Tom Watson, the 1977 British Open champion, winner of three 1978 titles and the year's leading money winner with $188,364.

Also on hand are such 1978 tournament winners Tom Weiskopf, Lon Hinkle, Miller Barber and Barry Jaeckel, along with Jerry Pate, Mark Hayes and Johnny Miller.

Tigerettes Top Chowan

EDENTON — Williamston High School romped to a 27-14 victory over Chowan in the first round of the State Girls' Softball playoffs here yesterday.

Williamston pushed over seven runs in the first inning, while Chowan got three. Williamston added four in the second to one for Chowan for an 11-4 lead.

The Tigerettes then put it out of reach with five more in the third. Both teams scored five in the fourth, with Williamston adding four in the fifth and two more in the sixth for their 27 run total. Chowan got give more in the bottom of the seventh.

Sheri Singleton was the winning pitcher.

Alisa Robertson led Williamston's hitting with four, including a triple. Jan Rogerson, Teri Hopkins and Kristi Rodgers each had three, while JoAnna Lilley, Myra Martin, Singleton and Ginger Edwards each had two.

Denise Jordan had three hits, including a homer to pace Chowan. Jeanette White also had three, while JoAnn Perry and Evelyn Privette had two each.

Williamston, now 14-2, travels to Bath on Thursday for a 4 p.m. game in the second round of play.

Red Sox Sold For Record Sum

CHICAGO (AP) — Haywood Sullivan, a former catcher, and Buddy Leroux, a former trainer, were instrumental in purchasing the Boston Red Sox for $20.5 million, the largest sum ever paid for a major league baseball franchise.

Helping swing the deal Tuesday was the money of Jean Yawkey, widow of Thomas Yawkey, who owned the club from 1933 until his death in 1976.

American League owners, who last December had turned down another group headed by Sullivan and Leroux, needed only five minutes to approve the sale, and, according to one owner, "four minutes more than were needed."

The deal includes $15 million for the team and $5.5 million for Fenway Park and related real estate.

Sullivan, executive vice president and general manager of the team, and Leroux, vice president in charge of administration, will join Mrs. Yawkey as general partners in ownership of the club. There also are nine limited partners.

When the owners turned down Sullivan and Leroux in the Hawaii winter meetings, they were not satisfied with the financial structure of the deal which included bank backing. This time, the deal was for straight cash and missing from possible owners were the names of Ernest Dade, a retired manufacturer, and Pat Groper, a former furniture executive whose partner was murdered.

"We are pleased to have the ownership well accredited," said Lee MacPhail, president of the American League. "I do feel now the new ownership is in a stronger position than the previous application which was rejected because of its financial structure."

Sullivan, a former catcher with the Red Sox, said, "I'm happy to announce our presentation was approved unanimously. Only one vote was taken and it's needless to say how elated we are."

Leroux, once a trainer for the Red Sox, called the difficulties of acquiring the team "a great education. There have been a few heartaches but the ultimate result speaks for itself."

Leroux and Mrs. Yawkey also are listed among nine limited partners.

The owners also discussed the situation of Gabe Paul, president and chief executive officer of the Cleveland Indians, who still owns stock in the New York Yankees, a team with which he was formerly connected.

"My stock is close to being sold," said Paul. "There are legal and technical details which require time."

George Steinbrenner, major stockholder in the Yankees, has the right of final refusal on the sale of Paul's stock.

Skipjack Tuna Dispute Spreads Through Pacific

By ROBERT C. MILLER
HONOLULU (UPI) — Around a fish fished to perpetual travel swirls a controversy that has set Pacific Islanders shopping for cannon, threatens the protein supply of food-hungry Japan, and jeopardizes America's tuna industry.

The Egyptian pyramids could probably have been rebuilt with the man hours spent futilely seeking a solution to what seems like a simple question: Does everyone have the right to kill skipjack?

The acceptable answer, if ever found, might deserve a nomination for the Nobel Peace Prize, for the skipjack question has broken more friendships than the reading of a rich uncle's will.

Nor is the international cleavage along the lines of the traditional have and have-not nations. This is because, so far, no one has decided who are the haves and who are the have-nots.

The cause of the ruckus is the biological fact that the skipjack dies if it stops moving. Water must always pass through its gills. This makes the skipjack the Gulliver of the aquatic world whose migratory travels take it everywhere, and sends those seeking its flesh to as many as three oceans in a season of fishing.

The tuna-fishing nations claim the skipjack is a stateless citizen, one of the few free-living creatures left in the world whose constant travels cover the earth's waters. The Pacific Islanders say that when the skipjack, or any other fish, transit their waters they become their property.

Western Samoa's minister of justice, U. Niko, said fish are the only resource of the Pacific Island peoples, and he called upon "our rich and powerful friends to help us police and protect these fisheries which are so vital to our existence."

"The sad, but true facts are that we can't buy fish from the canneries except after the fish have been processed and sent back to Western Samoa at a 300 percent price increase."

The Americans lighted the fuse to the explosive situation two years ago when they exempted skipjack and other varieties of tuna from the Fisheries Conservation and Management Act which established American jurisdiction 200 miles from its shores.

The American explanation was that tuna are migratory fish and not residents of any country's waters.

The migratory aspect didn't occur to the framers of the Fisheries Act until it was called to their attention by the fisherfolk of Southern California where the catching and canning of tuna is a multi-million dollar industry employing thousands of politically sensitive and vocal voters.

They pointed out to Washington that if every Central and South American country followed the U.S. example and imposed a 200-mile limit on tuna fishing, it would so hamstring American tuna fishermen that they would be unable to compete with foreign producers.

But the Pacific Islanders want tuna included in their 200-mile fishing restrictions, and say any fishing fleets working inside their 200-mile limits should either pay for the privilege or go elsewhere.

The Yapese in the Micronesian islands between Guam and Palau even went so far as to appropriate $16,000 for the purchase of a cannon which they planned to install atop Yap's highest mountain to command a little respect from what they considered the illegal fishermen working the waters off their islands.

The idea was abandoned, however, when no one could be found who could fire the artillery piece, and no assurances could be given that rounds fired at would-be poachers would clear the coastal villages.

To the Pacific Islanders the problem is very simple: Fish are an essential part of our diet. Foreign fishermen take these fish from our waters. They should either pay us for the right to fish in our waters, or be punished for fishing without our permission.

"We are crying out for someone to help us keep these people from coming and taking away our fish," said Tuvalu's delegate to the South Pacific Conference, Alesana Seluka. "Our friends are draining our resources."

But R.E. Kearney, who heads the skipjack research program of the South Pacific Commission, says that if restrictions are placed on the foreign fishing fleets, or if they are required to pay uneconomical license fees to fish such waters, "then the fishery could well cease, or be greatly reduced."

That, explained Kearney, would result in a loss to the world of 322,000 tons (based on 1974 figures) of tuna to a world vitally in need of protein foods.

"At a time when world fisheries production is inadequate to meet the increasing needs of a growing population, such a decrease in total production must be avoided," Kearney said.

Tuna fishing in the Pacific is no bent pin business. The Pacific Tuna Development Association estimates the potential skipjack catch at 800,000 tons a year. Skipjack prices today are about $800 a ton.

One California tuna clipper working New Zealand waters recently unloaded a cargo at the Star Kist cannery in Pago Pago valued at $1 million.

Directly and indirectly the Americans have spent millions attempting to involve the Pacific Islanders in tuna fishing; it has been a waste of time and money.

"We have tried to get the local people to participate," said Les Toy, manager of an American Samoa cannery. "But so far only the Asians seem willing to put forth the sustained effort required for Pacific commercial fishing."

The "sustained effort" means weeks and months at sea cooped up in a fishing boat, working long hours under dangerous, uncomfortable conditions. Every year dozens of boats are wrecked or just disappear while fishing the remote areas of the Pacific.

The majority of the boats working the Pacific today are Japanese, Korean and Taiwanese. If driven out of their Pacific fishing grounds by a forest of "no fishing" signs, or exorbitant licensing costs by the island nations, Asia would be deprived of an essential source of protein.

"The more 'no trespassing' signs that are posted, the harder it is for the ships to make a living here," Toy said, "and the more likely they are to move onto other areas, the most likely being the Indian Ocean."

"You just can't afford to operate when you have to pay fantastic sums for licenses; that is why the U.S. excluded tuna from the 200-mile limit law. If we had to buy licenses from each and every Central and South American country, it would be impossible to operate," Toy said.

Even if the 12 nations of the South Pacific Forum imposed fishing restrictions on the waters 200 miles from the shores of their islands, none has yet figured a way of enforcing their "no fishing" laws.

Few of the island nations have the patrol boats or clout to haul an alleged violator into port even if they caught him. The islanders reply that the confiscation of the catch and imposition of stiff fines would deter any poachers.

Kearney suggests a more rational approach. He believes the only solution would be a common licensing policy by all forum members to cover the operations of the foreign fishing fleets. And he emphasized that the fees should be reasonable.

"If Japan is unable to negotiate fishing rights which allow production to be maintained at present levels, it will be forced to import fish or other high protein foods to feed its population," Kearney said. "In such a case it is highly probable that the present level of Japanese fishers' exports will be severely reduced — or cease altogether — in order to meet local demand."

German-Americans Ask Impartial View

By KATHY OSOBA
Associated Press Writer
CHICAGO (AP) — German-Americans have to begin pressuring local school boards to adopt textbooks and lesson plans that impartially interpret Nazi Germany, the president of the German-American National Congress says.

A renewed national interest in Nazi history and the Holocaust has caused an anti-German prejudice that must be combated, Theodore Wattenberg said Sunday.

"Let's grab this opportunity," Wattenberg urged at a meeting of about 200 German community leaders. "This thing is not going away. It's violence and it appeals to people. And it appeals to the teachers because it's different."

Holocaust survivors have been urging school districts to teach a series on Holocaust history prepared by the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith. The catalyst for the campaign was a planned march by neo-Nazis in the largely Jewish suburb of Skokie. The march has been delayed through a series of legal maneuvers.

Wattenberg said intense interest in Nazi Germany also caused by the television miniseries "Holocaust" presents an unprecedented opportunity for German-Americans to unite and exert influence on local school boards.

He said the series has caused German children to be taunted in school and that German shopkeepers have been criticized by customers for Nazi war crimes simply because of their ethnic background.

Career Croupier Theorizes: To Win, Must Battle

By IRA KAUFMAN
FREEPORT, Bahamas (UPI) — Paul Gibbons couldn't keep the shiny sphere from flying off the wheel.
Twice before he had tried to whirl the steel ball around the lip of the roulette wheel, and both times it had spun out onto the floor. Gibbons' sweat-soaked hands shook. Bettors waited impatiently, their chips on the board.
"This time, I gave it everything I had," said Gibbons, "but I gave it too much. I remember the ball spinning out, and as I saw it whizz by I heard a thud. I didn't want to look up but I had to."
"As I looked at this guy at the far end of the table, I saw his glasses slowly separate from his face. The ball had hit him squarely on the bridge of his glasses and broke them in two."
Gibbons spoke from a rear booth of an English pub in Freeport, Bahamas, where he works six days a week at El Casino as a blackjack dealer. Gibbons, 23, claims the roulette incident — which occurred in his native England three years ago — was only one of many embarrassing incidents in his four years as a croupier.

Born in Birmingham, Gibbons took up photography at 18, but wasn't raking in any chips. An ad in the local paper offering to train croupiers provoked instant excitement. "I felt a certain degree of mysticism involved with dealing, although I had only seen casinos in pictures."
ROLE FOR BOONE
HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Richard Boone will play Adm. Matthew Perry in "The Bushido Blade," the first major motion picture to be made about the feudal Shogun period of Japan.

After 3½ years in various English casinos, Gibbons applied to Freeport's El Casino — one of the larger gambling houses on this side of the Atlantic. "The climate here is ideal and I wanted to get away from England."
At El Casino, Gibbons was trained to deal blackjack. Now he works a 40-hour week, dealing for 40 minutes and resting for 20 when he's relieved by another member of El Casino's rotating dealer stock. He likes the money — $165 per week plus $115-175 in tips, but is annoyed at the weekly $50 fee he pays to the Bahamian government for his work permit.
"The job is boring and mechanical... It's the people who make the job interesting," he says. "I try to make it more than a card game, and you can tell quite quickly whether people are there for a good time or just to make money. Time really goes by much quicker with a good group."

Gibbons has seen enough gamblers walk in and crawl out to form his own theory on the art of winning casino money.
"If you're going to win, you gotta battle, you gotta have guts." In four years of dealing he's seen many fierce battles, and many gamblers who lost more than their wallets.
"In England, every Friday night this guy used to come in Highfield (casino) with his wage packet (70 pounds). Every week he'd lose his entire week's wages — he lived on his wife's money. One night, by 3 o'clock he's up 35,000 pounds (approximately $70,000). By 4 o'clock the casino is closing and he's trying to borrow taxi fare home. The guy was compulsive, nothing was ever enough: if he had every chip in the casino, he'd play for the chandeliers."
"I've seen a guy who bet number 29 in roulette every spin of the wheel. One night, as a last chance to get even, he bet 2,000 pounds on number 29 and the number comes up. The dealer mistakenly announces 'all bets lose,' and as the guy stands up out of his chair to demand his money, he drops to the floor with a heart attack."
"His wife, seated behind him, looks up without flinching and carries on his argument. He always backs that number," she screams to the croupier, while her husband is writhing on the floor. She got paid but her husband died."

Gibbons plans to deal for a few more years before going into some other field. "I love people," he says, lifting his beer glass as if to toast his customers, "and I have a lot of fun with them."

Africa Sending

Missionaries

MONTREUX, Switzerland (AP) — Churches in Africa, once the "object" of missionary activity from other countries, are now sending missionaries themselves, says the Rev. A. Mwakisuga, a Tanzanian pastor and Africa secretary of the Lutheran World Federation.
He says "partnership" is the key for modern mission activities in Africa.

Modern Skateboarding Far Cry From Beginnings

By STEVE CAPPS
SAN DIEGO (UPI)—Shortly after its birth in the 1960s, skateboarding was suspected of being a fad that would fade as soon as its practitioners passed puberty.

But 15 years later, it appears to have found a permanent home in the hearts of enthusiasts — and in the bank accounts of businessmen.

Example: Robin Logan, 18, dropped out of high school this year to pursue something he feels is more meaningful: professional skateboarding. And when she isn't competing in national contests, she earns extra money in the family business — Logan Earth Ski of Encinitas — which manufactures 5,000 boards a week.

Example: Four years ago, R.L. Levor was an employee at DuPont. One afternoon he fashioned a skateboard for his son and the enterprising lad sold it for $40 that evening.

"The next day I quit my job and was in the skateboard business," Levor said. His firm expects gross sales to climb to about $4 million this year.

Skateboard parks, enclosed areas where skaters can silently skim over concrete without fear of inattentive motorists or irate pedestrians, are being built throughout the United States. At last count there were 150, with several more in the construction or planning stages.

One park, billed as the world's largest, just opened in San Diego and will feature six separate courses on four acres directly underneath an interstate freeway interchange.

Manufacturers continue to report sales doubling and tripling annually and they see no sign of the trend slowing. In San Diego County, often referred to as the "birthplace" of the sport, four manufacturers expect gross sales to exceed $4 million this year, and the leader expects its sales to reach $15 million.

All agree that modern skateboarding bears little resemblance to the sport that began 15 years ago on the sidewalks and driveways of Southern California.

Back then, all a kid needed was an old pair of skates, a piece of plywood, and a few nails, and he was in business.

That same kid today had better have a part-time job or a savings account to finance the board, the safety gear, his subscriptions to several national magazines and admission to the local skateboard park.

Martin Mazner, publisher of Skateboard Industry News, estimates there are about 14 million skateboarders in the United States. And, he said, the sport is just getting started in Europe and Australia.

He said a recent nationwide survey conducted by several distributors showed 62 percent of males between the ages of 8 and 18 who live in metropolitan areas already own skateboards.

Among girls of the same age, only 15 percent own boards, Mazner said, and he smiled at the thought. "Girls are the new frontier for the skateboard industry," he said.

Robin Logan, already a professional, agreed. She says that more female professional skaters will result in larger purses.

Robin began skating when she was 6 years old. She got expert instruction from her brother, Bruce, 27, who was the world champion in 1975 and 1976.

She turned pro in 1975 and has entered six major competitions since then. Like most professional competitors, she belongs to the International Skateboarders Association.

Her most noteworthy — and profitable — accomplishment came earlier this year when she entered television's "Challenge of the Sexes" and beat 21-year-old Ernie Martin of New Jersey to take home the $2,500 prize money.

Robin has a reputation for her versatility and enjoys competing in all the major skateboard events, including the slalom, freestyle, high jump and barrel jump.

Slaloms, she explained, are similar to skiing competition. The concrete course weaves through markers and the skater with the fastest time who makes it through all the gates wins.

The high-jump event is much like its namesake in track and field competition. The competitor skates toward a raised bar, jumps, and if everything goes according to plan, lands on the skateboard as it rolls underneath to the other side.

Two boards are needed for the barrel jump, she said. The second board is left at the end of a row of barrels and the skater uses the first one to build up the momentum to jump the length.

Robin said she enjoys the sport not only for the excitement but because "you can meet so many really neat people like when I was in England on tour. Plus, it's really healthy for you. It keeps your body in shape."

Once, however, it put her body out of shape. She suffered a severely broken wrist after a fall and was forced to wear a cast for nearly a year.

Injuries, of course, have been the greatest drawback of the sport. Industry officials said there is no accurate report of the number of skateboarders injured but admit that more than 15 have died.

But, they said, injuries can usually be attributed to skateboarders — or motorists — violating accepted safety guidelines.

Also, complete safety equipment — gloves, helmets, and knee and elbow pads — are now available and most skateboard parks require that they be worn.

Robin laughs at her injury, however, and said it has not affected her love of the sport.

She expects skateboarding's popularity to continue growing and said skateboard parks have had a lot to do with the increasing number of skaters.

About 35 miles north of San Diego is the Carlsbad Skatepark, site of the Hang Ten World Professional Championships held in 1976. Even on a weekday, a visitor can see skaters ranging in age from sub-teens to mid-20s riding the sides of the "pools" and "drag racing" on the straightaways.

"It's just something to do," said Johnny Anderson, 9. His sister, Sheri, 14, added, "We skate every day from when we get home from school until it gets dark."

She said they pay the $3 all-day admission fee at the park because "it gives you a chance to let people notice you." Her brother complained, however, that "I always fall on my hip."

Victor Sharp said he brings his 12-year-old son Richard to the park every weekend. "He has pride in his skateboard," the elder Sharp said. "And he should. I've got over $100 invested in it!"

Town Reduced Use Of Power

By BRENDAN RILEY
Associated Press Writer
WESTWOOD, Calif. (AP) — When residents of this eastern California town pulled the plug on their power company for a week, they figured the stunt might help curb spiraling electric bills and resolve other hassles with the firm.

That it did, to a degree. But besides that, the blackout last February showed many residents how easy it is to get along without gadgetry like electric can openers and even seemingly irreplaceable items like electric stoves.

The protest against California-Pacific Utilities Co. also caught the attention of people around the world, because of widespread media coverage. The letters and phone calls are still coming in.

There have also been some small rate decreases. And the state Public Utilities Commission conducted an investigation into the Westwood case.

In the weeks since the protest occurred, more and more wood-burning stoves are being hauled into kitchens. The hunt is on for gasoline or diesel-powered electrical generators and even battery-powered television sets.

Some simple ways of cutting power consumption are in use. Paulette Benner, who helped start the blackout, froze milk cartons of water and stashed them in her freezer. Now the freezer doesn't run as much. She and her husband, Richard, also got a generator.

Pauline Ausmus just packed the food in her freezer with snow. She also bought a wood-burning stove and a generator.

In Sharon Bowen's house, the hot water heater was hooked up to a wood-burning stove in efforts to cut power consumption. Albert Hintz made a wood-burning furnace out of oil barrels to heat his house.

It's a big change for a slow-moving town, where locals can get their own coffee refills at the Lumberjack restaurant downtown — filling cups with their own names on them — and talk things over a bit before heading off to work in the morning.

This same restaurant has a sign on the wall proclaiming "we the unwilling, led by the unqualified, have been doing the unbelievable so long with so little, we now attempt the impossible with nothing."

That's how some of the 2,500 citizens of Westwood, located at about 5,200 feet elevation in Lassen County, look upon their blackout and its consequences. "We stirred up a lot of hornets they (CPU) were sure we could never dig out," says Mrs. Ausmus. "I think we put into words the things that people have been wanting to say for a long time."

She adds that the methods now being used to cut the power bills are not so much energy-conservation efforts as they are "a self-preservation thing. It's a case of taking control, taking hold and saying 'we're the boss, like it or not.'"

CPU officials have some strong views of their own about the blackout and claims from various residents about skyrocketing bills, power surges allegedly damaging appliances, billing errors and other complaints.

James Driscoll, CPU corporate communications manager, said that "as can be expected of media events of this type, truth was an early casualty." He presented a long, detailed account of customer complaints and their actual bills, in efforts to counter the complaints.

Lee Berk, manager of CPU's Lassen division which takes in Westwood, is philosophic about the incident. He said it had "drawn attention to our energy problems. The conservation is a good byproduct."

During the blackout electrical consumption dropped about 22 percent. Berk said it was going to be tough to tell immediately whether the long-term efforts would mean a continued reduction.

The weather's warmer now, he explained, so power use is dropping off anyway.

Mrs. Benner said there should be a drop in bills because townsfolk are "looking into more conservative ways of living."

She isn't sure if people who inquire about the blackout will follow suit. "But I hope so," she said. "People have to take things into their own hands."

Check Car For Frame Damage

NEW YORK (UPI) — When test driving a new car, a prospective buyer can check for frame damage by wetting all four tires and driving the car in a straight line for a short distance. Two lines of tire tracks show the frame is still in line, advise specialists for Hertz, but four tracks may indicate a bent frame.

Fears Big Gap In Our Photographic Heritage

By MIKE FEINSILBER

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Eugene Ostroff, curator of photography for the Smithsonian Institution, worries about those snapshots you'll be taking this summer.

People have just about quit taking black and white film, he says, and the trouble with color pictures is that, sooner or later but inevitably, the image fades and nothing is left.

"What sort of photographic heritage are we going to be left with?" Ostroff wonders.

The chances are, he says, future generations will have a better photographic record of the 1940s and 1950s — the heyday of the black and white snapshot — than of the 1970s.

Photographs from the past are Ostroff's red meat. If you have some in an old cigar box, he would like to hear about them — the older the better.

To you they may just be snapshots. To him, "They're important historical documents."

In 1975, Ostroff put together an exhibition called "photographing the frontier." It was put on display at the Smithsonian's Museum of History and Technology, with additional copies sent on tour. The touring exhibit has visited 70 places and is scheduled to keep traveling through 1979.

He looked at tens of thousands of old photographs in Arizona, Utah and Oregon and plucked out those that told something of everyday frontier life.

These weren't amateurs' snapshots. The early photographer had to be a professional — he needed a wagonful of equipment.

It was not until 1888 that George Eastman put photography in everyone's reach, with the slogan, "You press the button, we do the rest" and a box camera which his customers bought for $25. The customer took 100 exposures and sent the camera and $10 to Rochester, N.Y. Back came 100 prints and the reloaded camera.

Of frontier photography, Ostroff says, "The early cameras in western America enabled us to inspect miners panning for the riches of gold, homesteaders relaxing from the back-breaking job of land-clearing and entire families working together in the field planting crops or sharing the happiness of a bountiful harvest."

"Photographs allow us to inspect the arrangement of streets and storefronts, clothing, workers with their tools, goods arranged on store shelves, the spartan quality of new towns, the magnificence of unsettled territories ..."

For all his interest in photography, Ostroff says he rarely takes a picture. His interest was aroused when he was 11. An uncle gave him a box camera and a photo processing outfit. Ostroff went outside and started taking pictures on the streets of Brooklyn, N.Y.

He studied photography at Los Angeles City College and photographic engineering at Columbia University and worked in medical photography while becoming knowledgeable about the history of photography. "I never get tired of looking at pictures," he says. "After all, every one is unique."

Toscanini Series Stays

By WILLIAM GILLEN
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — National Public Radio's first Arts Month comes to an end in a few days, but one weekly program that began in May will continue for another 11 months.

"Toscanini — the Man Behind the Legend" is a 52-week series recapturing many of the outstanding performances that the conductor Arturo Toscanini and the NBC Symphony Orchestra gave every week, for the national radio audience, between 1937 and 1954.

Those performances later became part of an NBC radio series in the early 1960s on the life and work of Toscanini, and are now offered for national rebroadcast by the South Carolina Educational Radio Network.

William D. Hay, director of educational radio for the six-state network, secured the programs from the late composer-writer Don Gillis, who had produced the NBC Symphony Broadcasts and later retired to South Carolina. Gillis died last January.

Hay described production of the series, which has involved remastering the original tapes, as a personal commitment to "bring Toscanini to this generation."

Besides performances, the series also includes readings from some of Toscanini's private correspondence and reminiscences by many of the maestro's friends and associates. The interviewer on the program is the late Ben Grauer, who for many years was the broadcasts' announcer.

The Toscanini series has been described by NPR President

Frank Mankiewicz as "the kind of program you can't hear anywhere else but on NPR stations. It is the keystone of our effort in Public Radio Arts Month."

NPR and its more than 200 member stations, in cooperation with the National Endowment for the Arts, will have presented more than 80 hours of arts and entertainment programming this month, or more than five times the amount of time ordinarily devoted to cultural programs.

Among the programs offered was a revival of George and Ira Gershwin's 1924 classic musical "Lady, Be Good," the first musical produced for network radio in more than 25 years. The musical, the first Broadway hit for the Gershwins, was produced in coordination with Belgian Radio and Television.

Both Mankiewicz and Livingston Biddle, chairman of the National Endowment for the Arts, said they hope the month-long arts programming, which Mankiewicz called NPR's "most exciting sustained programming effort," will be the first of more joint ventures.

FORECAST FOR THURSDAY, MAY 25, 1978

Your Daily HOROSCOPE

from the CARROLL RICHTER INSTITUTE

GENERAL TENDENCIES: This is a day when many persons are in an argumentative frame of mind and you would be wise to maintain poise and self-control so you will not be affected by this general condition.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) A higher-up will be a bit peeved today, but it's of short duration, so keep smiling. Exercise extreme caution in motion.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) You are interested in new ventures now but it is best to finish whatever you have started. Be wary of a troublemaker.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) You have many duties that require careful attention now so get an early start and improve business affairs. Be practical.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Don't take an associate to task or an unpleasant argument could start. Show that you are a good citizen.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Don't resent doing an extra share of the workload or your personal progress could be stymied. Harmony brings advancement.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Don't take any foolish chances that you could later regret. Contact influential persons who could be of assistance to you.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) The situation at home could be tense, so be sure you remain calm. Come to a better understanding with loved one.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) You have to be most careful in motion today to avoid a possible accident. A thoughtless word could bring trouble.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Be sure to keep a cash reserve in case of any emergency in the near future. Take needed health treatments.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Be more controlled and don't criticize closest ties, but be helpful instead. Put business affairs in better order.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Be sure to handle personal affairs in a most correct manner now. Make plans to engage in favorite hobby with congenials.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Keep busy at practical affairs and forget the social at this time. Study business conditions and take steps to improve them.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will be one who has the wisdom to solve difficult problems, so be sure to give as fine an education as you can afford. Give good religious and ethical training early in life and encourage participation in sports.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to YOU!

Hijackers Shot By Czech Guards

MUNICH, West Germany (AP) — Czechoslovak border guards shot three gunmen who hijacked a school bus carrying 45 children and attempted to force it across the border into West Germany, officials said today.

Czechoslovak soldiers, using at least one armored vehicle, killed one of the gunmen and wounded the other two in a gunbattle near the Muehlbach border crossing point, said a spokesman for the Bavarian State Interior Ministry. A young girl in the bus was slightly injured.

The spokesman said Czechoslovak authorities told their German colleagues the three men hijacked the bus at gunpoint at a dam near the city of Cheb while its young passengers were picnicking.

The children, from a small village outside Prague, apparently were on a school excursion when the hijackers surprised them.

HOSPITALIZED — Jimmy Durante, 85, has been admitted to St. John's hospital in Santa Monica, Calif., for treatment of an upper respiratory infection. The comedian was reported in "satisfactory condition". (AP Laserphoto)

Offer Services To Adolescents

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — The Center for Early Adolescence, a facility dedicated to improving services for a class of youngsters neglected in many other programs, has been set up at the University of North Carolina.

Dr. Joan Lipsitz, director of the center, said it will offer training and technical assistance and serve as a national information clearinghouse for professionals who work with children ages 10 to 15.

"These are the children whom we understand the least and, as a society, care for the least," Ms. Lipsitz said. "These are the children whom we stereotype in our media and whom we often fear."

She said the center is developing two programs focusing on health care implications of early adolescent development and special needs of black adolescents in southern schools.

Officials will send reports on activities at the facility to professionals across the country. "We already have a large network of field contacts," Ms. Lipsitz said. "We will have to start where there are already strengths and build on these strengths."

Judges, teachers, social workers and doctors are aware of their failure to understand early adolescence, she said, adding that only 12 schools of education in the United States provide specific training for junior high or middle schools. "People just don't know yet what to do with these kids," Ms. Lipsitz said. "We have segregated this age group, put them on hold. We say 'We'll get back to you when we like you and when you're ready for the job market.'"

She recently finished a two-year research project at the Learning Institute of North Carolina and wrote a book, "Growing Up Forgotten," that identifies young adolescents as the most overlooked and underserved age group in the nation.

Many Americans and the media have reconciled their neglect and avoidance of the development and needs of adolescents by viewing the youngsters as "silly kids with silly problems," Ms. Lipsitz said.

Many Telephone Cancer Queries

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — About 12,000 people have called the Duke Cancer Information Service during the past two years with questions about diagnosis and treatment of cancer, ways to quit smoking, the relationship of substances such as marijuana to cancer and dozens of other related topics.

The center, one of 19 information offices around the nation founded by the National Cancer Institute, has compiled a five-inch-thick book of answers and calls on a network of specialists in North Carolina and elsewhere for consultation. Dr. Diane McGrath, director of cancer control at the Duke Comprehensive Cancer Center, said breast cancer concerns the largest number of callers. Other topics, in order of frequency, are skin cancer, lung cancer and colon cancer.

"We don't get a lot of calls about environmental links to cancer," she said. "That's surprising, considering the attention the media give to the environment."

Typical questions include: "I have a discharge from one of my breasts. Does that mean I have cancer?" "What are the symptoms of rectal cancer?"

"How can I get medical treatment if I don't have health insurance?"

"I want to quit smoking and I'd like some help. Can you send me something?"

A health educator in Pitt County called to pass along a question asked by students about the relationship between use of marijuana and cancer.

In less than a minute, information specialist Karen McCrory read from the loose-leaf binder: "It's thought that smoking marijuana does not increase a person's risk of developing cancer because it is usually smoked in very small amounts. The danger of smoking large amounts of marijuana may be greater but no studies on this subject have been done."

Residents of North Carolina may call the information center toll-free at 1-800-672-0943 and people living in Durham, Butler and Creedmoor may dial 286-2266. The number for residents of surrounding states to call, at their own expense, is 1-919-286-2266.

Ms. McGrath said her main goal is "to destroy the widely held notion that cancer means death. We know that some cancers are chronic diseases. People have them and they're getting along just fine."

Saigon Omitted From Directory

WASHINGTON (AP) — Saigon is gone and Ho Chi Minh City is being accepted officially by the United States Board on Geographic Names. A board official said Tuesday that the names board, which standardizes federal usage, is going along with the name given Saigon by Communist Vietnam after what had been South Vietnam fell in April 1975.

Joan Little Wins New Delay On N.C. Return

NEW YORK (AP) — A federal appeals court has continued a stay of extradition in the case of Joan Little, pending a decision on a motion to block the return of the fugitive to North Carolina.

The 24-year-old woman's attorney, William Kunstler, argued in the U. S. Court of Appeals Tuesday that he could produce a North Carolina official who would say she would face harm if returned to the North Carolina Women's Prison in Raleigh where she escaped last October while serving a 7-10 year sentence for breaking and entering.

Kunstler did not identify the "high state official," and he said that person and two other witnesses preferred not to reveal their identities before appearing at a hearing.

Kunstler asked the appeals court to order an evidentiary hearing in state court on his contention that Miss Little would be killed or brutalized if sent to North Carolina to finish serving her sentence.

North Carolina officials have consistently denied there was any special threat to Miss Little's safety in North Carolina prisons. They have termed Kunstler's allegations as ridiculous.

State corrections Secretary Amos Reed said this week that Miss Little would be protected and that any danger she might be under would come from other inmates and not from prison system employees.

Miss Little was captured here last December after her escape. She became a cause celebre for black and civil rights organizations and the women's movement when she was tried in 1975 for the ice pick slaying of her jailer who, she maintained, was trying to rape her. She was acquitted, but still had to serve out her breaking and entering term.

Kunstler said two witnesses he can produce are prison inmates in North Carolina who fear for their safety there if their identities became known.

Helman Brook, an assistant district attorney in Brooklyn, said Kunstler was making "sweeping emotional allegations" while providing "no factual showing" that Miss Little's life would be in jeopardy. He also argued that such complaints belonged in North Carolina courts and not here.

The Circuit Court jury returned to the courtroom Tuesday after deliberating three hours, deadlocked over whether the 46-year-old Nelson should be the third man to be sentenced to the electric chair under a new state law.

Nelson, convicted Monday, showed no emotion when the judge declared a hung jury at the sentencing hearing.

Judge John Ghent set a pre-sentencing hearing for Friday, at which time he will announce a sentencing date. Under the state's 1977 capital punishment

Four Traffic Mishaps Reported On Tuesday

An estimated $11,260 property damage resulted from a series of four traffic collisions investigated yesterday by Greenville police.

Heaviest damage, according to investigators, resulted from a 6:20 p.m. mishap at the intersection of 14th Street and Myrtle Avenue involving trucks driven by Roy Stancil of 519 Ford St., and Audro Barrett of Route 1, Greenville, and a car driven by Alice Harrison Bell of 2104 North Village Dr.

Police, who charged Stancil with failing to yield the right of way at a stop sign, estimated damage at $1,500 to the Stancil truck, $4,000 to the Bell car, and $10 to the city-owned truck driven by Barrett.

Mrs. Bell and a passenger in the truck driven by Stancil were reported injured.

An 11:20 a.m. collision on Greenville Boulevard, 1,500 feet North of the Tenth Street intersection involved a car driven by Elaine Gaynor of Washington, and a truck operated by Willie Vernon Sower of Route 2, Snow Hill.

Officers, who charged Sower with failing to see his intended movement, could be made in safety, estimated damage at $500 to the Gaynor car and $2,000 to the Sower truck.

Lloyd Durwood Cratch of Route 3, Washington was charged with failing to stop for a stop light following investigation of a 3:55 p.m. collision at the intersection of Tenth and Elm Streets.

Investigators reported the Cratch truck collided with cars driven by Shelby Vann Bullock of 1309B East Second St., and Barbara Wallace McMillon of 2719 Webb St., causing an estimated $400 damage to the Cratch vehicle, $500 to the Bullock car and $500 to the McMillon auto.

Marianne Williams of 2501 Madison Cir. was charged with failing to see her intended movement could be made in safety following investigation of a 10:56 a.m. mishap on Tenth Street, East of the Heath Street intersection.

Officers said the Williams car collided with a vehicle driven by Lucy Daniel Jones of 801 West Fourth St., causing an estimated $350 damage to the Jones car and $500 damage to the Williams auto.

Jury Split Over A Sentence Of Death law, a judge may impose only a prison sentence if a jury does not decide unanimously to impose the death penalty.

Public Defender Craig Peterson said Nelson was relieved. "He expected the death penalty but he did not want it," Peterson said.

$400 Million To Train 150,000

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter wants $400 million channeled to private employers for training and hiring about 150,000 unskilled workers who have no jobs.

The president told a group of mayors and business leaders Tuesday that the need for assisting these jobless men and women is urgent. Labor Secretary Ray Marshall, in unveiling the program, said it "will provide for the private sector to become full partners" in the government's battle against unemployment through councils to be established in 34 regions.

NOTICE OF PROPOSED NON-BANKING ACTIVITIES TO BE ENGAGED IN BY A BANK HOLDING COMPANY DE NOVO
PURSUANT TO SECTION 4(c) (8)

of the Bank Holding Company Act and Regulations of the Federal Reserve Board (Regulation Y) 12 C.F.R. 225.4(a) (6) (i) and 12 C.F.R. 225.4(a) (6) (ii) and 12 C.F.R. 225.4(a) (3). SECURITY PACIFIC CORPORATION, a bank holding company, whose principal place of business is Los Angeles, California, proposes to engage through a subsidiary known as Security Pacific Leasing Corporation in the following activities:

The financing of personal property and equipment and real property and the leasing of such property or the acting as an agent, broker or advisor in the leasing and/or financing of such property, where at the inception of the initial lease the effect of the transaction (and, with respect to governmental entities only, reasonable anticipated future transactions) will yield a return to the total cost of financing the property over the term of the lease, and the servicing of such lease, and ancillary services, is authorized by the Federal Reserve Board under Regulation Y and The Bank Holding Company Act.

Such activities will be conducted through offices located at 4208 Six Forks Road, North Hills Office Mall, Suite 206, Raleigh, North Carolina 27609.

Persons wishing to comment on this proposal should submit their views in writing within 30 days of the date of publication of this notice to the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond, Virginia.

Pinball Craze Has Revival Underway

Chicago (UPI)—The revival of the pinball craze of the 1930s has attracted more than 20 million players of all ages, according to the pinball industry which is busily installing the flipper-type machines in better class restaurants and bars, shopping malls, laundromats, and even homes.

For the ordinary flippers who would like to become wizards at the game, pinball machine designer Anton Kraemer of Williams Electronics, Inc., a top manufacturer, has some sage advice. Kraemer plays pinball about 100 times daily in the course of test-checking new machines. He says:

— Read the instruction card. It explains which targets give bonus points or extra balls and if they have to be made in sequence, so that you will know where to aim to make your ball count.

— Nudge gently. Nudging is not cheating, nor is kicking, hitting or lifting, but if you hit too hard you activate the "Tilt" signal, automatically canceling the score for that ball's play.

— Work the flippers individually. Beginning players see the ball moving toward the outboard and panic, pressing both flipper buttons at the same time in hope that one will hit the ball. Instead, the ball usually goes between them and out of play.

The technique to avoid this is using flippers in quick succession to deflect the ball from one to the other, hold it back until it's correctly aimed, or whack it solidly to the opposite side of the playfield.

— Keep your eye on the ball. Like any sport where the object is a fast-moving ball, concentrate completely on the game. Talk with friends and onlookers after the game.

PUT $2000 IN YOUR POCKET

IT'S FUN FREE, EASY!

1. Get a free Cash King Collector Card at your checkout counter or store of choice. No purchase necessary. Each Card contains Cash King Games worth $2, $5, $10, $100, $1,000 and $2,000!
2. Each time you visit the store pick up a free Cash King Game Ticket (with four markers).
3. Punch out the perforated markers on your game ticket and match them to the squares on your collector card. Just follow the easy rules on the back of your collector card. You could be the next big winner!

Check very carefully on number of game tickets you obtain. The more tickets you collect the better your chances of winning.

Preparing History Of TV War

By MIKE FEINSILBER
WASHINGTON (UPI) — Bombing pauses and body counts, "hearts and minds" and the "light at the end of the tunnel." Hamburger Hill and the DMZ — events, places and concepts almost forgotten — preoccupy Lawrence Lichty. He is a professor of broadcasting history and he is writing a history of television coverage of Vietnam. "the first television war." For 11 years, Lichty has been watching, cataloging and analyzing network television coverage of the war. It has been, he admits, almost an obsession. Sometimes during the war, after the evening news ended, he would work into the night transcribing what he had tape recorded, thinking he was onto an important moment in broadcasting history.

The next morning he'd realize it wasn't that much — not even a footnote in the book he is just now beginning to write.

As a first chapter, he wrote 50 or 60 pages "to explain three minutes and 30 seconds of television film" — the famous story filed by Morley Safer of CBS in 1965 showing a Marine, using a Zippo lighter, setting fire to a hut of Cam Ne village.

A few weeks ago, Lichty discovered the Marines had written a report on the impact of Safer's coverage of the Cam Ne incident. He hopes to get it declassified so he can include the Marine viewpoint.

Lichty, 40, teaches at the University of Wisconsin. His interest in broadcasting began in high school when he was a part-time disc jockey in Indio, Calif., where he grew up, the son of a grape and date farmer. In 1967, a student asked him to compare radio coverage of World War II with television coverage of Vietnam.

For the answer, Lichty made two trips to Vietnam, Hong Kong and Tokyo and interviewed about 200 television reporters and military men.

Between Aug. 20, 1965 and Aug. 20, 1970, for its own purposes, the Pentagon made daily kinescopes of the networks' Vietnam coverage.

These used to be flown to Saigon and shown on Thursdays after the "Five O'Clock Follies" news briefing to an interested audience of television correspondents.

Lichty has watched them all.

From 1970 on, in Madison, Wis., he watched Vietnam coverage on the three evening news shows, sometimes switching between two television sets.

On a computer, he cataloged the 9,199 Vietnam war stories carried by the networks during the war.

Now he is on a Woodrow Wilson Fellowship at the Smithsonian, winding up his research.

He thinks he probably will write two books, one for the public and a more scholarly study for the academic world.

Many people think television shortened U.S. participation in the war — think Americans tired of seeing violence and death on their screens every night.

But some think television hardened viewers to the brutality of war and made them indifferent.

Some military leaders say television was the chief factor in causing the United States to withdraw without winning.

Of all this, Lichty is not so sure.

He says, "I make my living talking about television, so I'm supposed to say it's an incredible force. I think it is a force, but it may turn out that it is a neutral force."

He feels television focuses public attention and reinforces opinions. But he doubts that television creates opinions. Watching the same story, hawks become more hawkish, doves more dovish, he suspects.

Certainly, he says, television gave official Washington a platform to justify their war decisions.

Of 1,200 network programs dealing with the war, including the Sunday interviews, two-thirds reflected no point of view, Lichty says. Of the rest, twice as many supported the administration view as opposed it.

Only toward the end, did war opponents on television outnum-

Zoarite Town Now Monument To Past

ZOAR, Ohio (AP) — A Swiss medium once prophesied that the village of Zoar would "prosper, but would last only as many years as a man's age."

Indeed, the village went broke after 75 years.

But the medium did not see all of the future. The heart of this once-thriving religious community of German Separatists still exists on the banks of the Tuscarawas River.

White picket fences border the Garden of Happiness, a symbol of the religious life in Zoar, which was founded in 1817 and went broke in 1892.

A spruce tree at the center of the garden is said to represent everlasting life; a hedge around it signifies Heaven and 12 junipers stand for the Apostles. Twelve walks were put in to denote the ways to heaven and intersecting paths recall worldly wanderings of those not saved.

Thirty-six original village houses are still occupied, some by descendants of the Zoarites. Many of the structures have been restored by the Ohio Historical Society.

A restored greenhouse produces the same oranges and lemons that made the community famous over a century ago.

Several buildings on the 5,500-acre site are open to visitors. They include the home of Joseph Baumbach, the Zoarite leader who brought 300 religious refugees here from Wuertemberg, Germany, where they had been persecuted for opposing the official Lutheran Church.

Bright white fences lining the shady streets, lawns, brick walks and gardens create a tranquil setting in this community 10 miles south of Canton.

At one time the community produced its own food, farm tools, stoves, wagons, pottery, tile, lumber and woolens.

Advent of the railroad made many young Zoarites envious of the world outside their village, and so many left that the community failed.

It now exists largely as a historic site for visitors who roam the streets and view life as it was in another era.

Safe Drinking Water Possible

WASHINGTON (UPI) — "Consumers are being short-changed by the failure of government to recognize that bottled water and home water treatment devices have the potential for providing water that meets all national safe drinking water standards," Donald E. Porth told a meeting sponsored by Resources for the Future.

"If consumers in Boston want lead removed from their water, it can be done now with home water treatment devices," he said. "If consumers in Nevada want arsenic removed from their water, it can be done now. If consumers in Illinois or Iowa want radioactivity removed from their water, it can be done now. It can be done today without bond issues, without huge construction projects, without delay and without obsolescence."

Porth is president of the Water Quality Research Council, a non-profit group devoted to research and education.

Detroit's Zoo To Double Size

DETROIT (UPI) — Detroit's Children's Zoo, located on Belle Isle, is expanding to accommodate larger animals such as the Michigan Bear, Formosan deer, llama and buffalo. Elephant and camel rides are part of the expanded attractions.

The zoo will double its size to 28 acres and will add a "Goat Island" and an elevated tree-house from which visitors can view the whole animal area. Zoo expansion is part of Belle Isle's $10-million renovation program, which includes a nature center, new fishing docks and lighted tennis courts.

George Romney Today Preaching Citizen Activism

By PAUL VARIAN
BLOOMFIELD HILLS, Mich. (UPI) — George Romney, 70, drinks chocolate milk with his lunch, trots around the globe preaching citizen activism and the Mormon religion and talks ominously of impending national disaster.

Though long divorced from any active role in politics, the silver-haired former auto industry executive, Michigan governor, Republican presidential aspirant and Nixon cabinet member maintains the travel schedule of a whirlwind campaigner.

His demeanor, as always, is that of the frustrated prophet — the man whose prematurely timed warnings on such divergent threats as the "gas-guzzling dinosaur" and escalation of the Vietnam war went unheeded.

A political doomsayer, Romney feels that government has lost its ability to combat such economic bugaboos as inflation, urban decay and dwindling energy supplies — problems he says may be impossible to solve without a major societal disruption.

"There have only been two periods in our history when we adopted the kinds of reforms that we need now," he said. "One was the Civil War. The other was the Great Depression."

"That's why I feel we're headed for a disaster. We are unable, as a society, to achieve basic fundamental reforms without one."

Taking a break from a hectic travel schedule that included stopovers in such far-flung locations as Salt Lake City and Moscow, Romney, who now has 19 grandchildren, sandwiched an interview between a morning round of golf and an afternoon tennis match.

Dressed in casual slacks and an open-necked shirt, he relaxed over a lunch of grilled cheese and chocolate milk in the den of his tree-enshrouded suburban Detroit home.

The discussion kept drifting back to Romney's favorite subject — his 6-year crusade to mobilize citizen activists into a public lobbying coalition strong enough to take on Washington's "Triple Alliance" — the special interest groups, government's burgeoning bureaucracy and an immobile Congress.

It is these forces, Romney said, that have rendered presidential leadership a thing of the past.

"If I had been elected president," Romney said chuckling, "I would have undertaken to do things that would have been so opposed by the special interests that they would have chopped me into little pieces."

Romney first came into the public eye in the 1950s as chairman of fledgling American Motors Corp. where he became the auto industry's foremost small car innovator, declaring war on the "gas guzzling dinosaurs" offered by Detroit's "Big Three" and introducing compact cars to the marketplace.

In 1961, he coordinated a classic grassroots citizen drive to adopt a state constitution in Michigan and rode the campaign all the way to the governor's office — still the only non-incumbent Republican elected to that post since 1948.

Having weathered such crises as Detroit's bloody 1967 riot, Romney was regarded prime GOP presidential timber in 1968 until he charged that he had been "brainwashed" by Pentagon officials during a fact-finding tour of war-scarred Vietnam.

The remark, the first criticism of the nation's war involvement by a major political figure, sparked a public furor that forced Romney to drop out of the race.

"It was a good example of being right too soon on a political issue," he said.

Romney later became housing and urban development secretary in the first cabinet of Richard M. Nixon, but quit following the 1972 election, frustrated over the administration's lack of commitment to the cities and its refusal at that time to address the problems of skyrocketing wages and prices.

Romney now says that prior to his resignation, Nixon confided that it would be politically impossible for his administration to deal with either of those problems.

"Nixon was a crook, but he was no dummy," Romney said. Romney, who grew up in Utah and Idaho heavily reared in Mormonism, has long been active in the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. He currently is the church's regional representative in Michigan, home for approximately 40,000 Mormons.

His extensive travels are dictated primarily by church duties and his post on the public review board of the Arthur Anderson International accounting firm, which frequently takes him overseas.

Romney's campaign to mobilize concerned citizens is carried out under the auspices of the National Center for Voluntary Action, which he founded after his departure from government.

Romney is critical of the nation's only successful citizens' lobbying group, Common Cause, because it has focused on political reforms and ignored the fundamental economic changes needed to restore the stability of the middle class.

"In 1969, over 50 percent of the people in this country could afford to buy a house," he said. "Today, it's less than 25 percent. And that's because of inflation."

Government efforts to stem inflation invariably fail, Romney said, because of opposition from the special interest groups.

"The basic problem in this country today is that all the special interest groups are organized and active politically. And there's nothing in existence that can organize for the public interest.

"... the political parties are both too weak. Too few people are taking an active part in either party."

In effect, he said, "the people of this country are getting the kind of government they deserve."

Romney, still the loyal Republican, now maintains only limited involvement in party politics. Since his departure from government, he has twice been touted as a possible candidate for the Senate — once in Utah and once in Michigan — but neither flirtation got to the courtship stage.

He sees Jimmy Carter as a one-term president unless there is a dramatic change in the performance of his administration between now and 1980.

"His support of conflicting policies has been damaging to him," Romney said.

"I don't think he comes across too well. He doesn't have a staying quality. He doesn't grow on you. He just doesn't come across on the tube as a forceful individual."

Phone Firm Has Personal Touch

WAWINA, Minn. (AP) — The repair report filed with the Minnesota Public Service Commission by the Wawina Telephone Co., was short and to the point: "We ain't had none."

The unorthodox report, filed by proprietor John Riddell on a postcard, was typical of the way he operates his firm, which he says is the smallest sole-proprietorship telephone company in the nation.

Riddell, 31, ripped apart his first phone at age 3 and built his first switchboard with a peach crate and six wires at 13.

So when the tiny township 50 miles west of Duluth in north-eastern Minnesota put its telephone company on the block in 1970, Riddell jumped at the opportunity.

Riddell's company has 41 subscribers. He is one of them, with seven extensions in his tiny trailer home.

"I go by the theory of reach, don't run," he explained. "You can never have too many telephones."

Asked whether his system included pay phones, Riddell responded indignantly. "Of course! We may be small but we're not totally backward."

Though he is owner, president, general manager, head repairman, sales representative and accountant for his telephone company, Riddell also works full time as a teacher at nearby Floodwood.

The telephone listings for Wawina cover only a page of the Grand Rapids directory. Riddell doesn't have a directory in his office, but says he knows who's calling whom just from the sound of the switches.

Riddell's favorite story is about the time he accidentally put the entire system out of commission one afternoon.

"Not one phone was working for two hours and do you know that not one person noticed!" he laughed.

Riddell said he hasn't bothered to incorporate his company because it isn't worth the effort. PSC regulations are so complex it would cost about $4,000 to have a rate increase approved, he said.

As for the quarterly reports on service repairs, Riddell's cryptic postcard messages seem to suffice.

A few binders keeping track of inventory and a cardboard box containing customer records are Riddell's accounting system.

He believes in the personal touch, visiting each customer at least once a year when he delivers the directory and the October bill.

"Sometimes I'd like this operation to be a little more impersonal," he lamented. "People here are no better and no worse than anywhere else when it comes to paying the bills."

Ban On Holding Office Upset

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Supreme Court has abolished as unconstitutional Tennessee's ban on clergymen holding public office. The state was the last one to retain such a restriction.

It was thrown out in a decision that upheld the right of the Rev. Paul A. McDaniel, a Baptist minister from Chattanooga, to retain his seat in the legislature.

NIXON HOUSE MAY BITE THE DUST — One of the houses in former President Richard Nixon's Key Biscayne, Fla. compound, shown in a March photo, has been purchased by a Ronon to psychiatrist for $455,000. The four-bedroom, ranch-style house, used by Nixon primarily for working and entertaining guests, may be leveled to make room for a luxurious waterfront home for the new owner. (AP Laserphoto)

Things to celebrate this summer with Guestware disposable plates.

There are lots of great things worth celebrating this summer with friends. And when you have your party, make sure you invite Guestware.

Guestware is the disposable plate made with three tough layers of plastic.

Which makes Guestware sturdy, soakproof and even cut resistant. You can carve food without carving up Guestware.

What's more, Guestware's unique construction prevents heat from transferring to your lap.

CAMERA Angles

By IRVING DESFOR
AP Newsfeatures

Just two years ago, early in 1976, a deceptively simple photo contest originated to interest the country's amateur photographers. The idea was to invite all Americans with a camera to submit snapshots — not formal portraits — of friends, relatives, or even strangers, in 12 different categories from babies to grandparents. A panel of judges would then select the most representative face in each category to form a symbolic photographic "great American family."

No one at that time visualized the national enthusiasm that the Great American Face Photo Contest would generate. Who could have predicted that it would become an official Bicentennial project of the U.S. Government and that it would be lauded by Senator Hubert Humphrey in the Congressional Record?

No originator foresaw that the 12 national winners — ordinary people like you and me — would wind up as subjects for professional portrait assignments by Arnold Newman, renowned photographer of the world's leading personalities.

Or that an estimated ten million viewers would see the Great American Faces Exhibition from coast to coast, at the United Nations in New York, at the National Visitors Center in Washington, D.C., as well as at museums, galleries, libraries, schools, state fairs and shopping centers.

Or that major cities would proclaim Great American Face Days to promote the project. And that it would inspire a popular song and lyrics.

Or that, two years later, "FACES U.S.A." would still be exhibited under the auspices of the United States Information agency in 125 countries on six continents.

And finally, that its complete story would make a compelling book.

Now that, too, has taken place with the current publication by AMPHOTO, Garden City, N.Y., of "FACES USA" by Arnold Newman, with a foreword by Thomas Thompson (paperbound, $5.95).

It's all on record. We realize now that it was a unique contest, ingeniously attuned to the spirit of the nation as it celebrated its 200th birthday. Its appeal was at the grassroots level, asking people to get involved with their neighbors and themselves. The contest sought a mirror image of Americans with a rich variety of ethnic cultures and an individual emphasis on qualities of character, personality, strength, warmth and humanity. The country was taking its own family portrait with a self-timer.

As the contest gathered momentum with its mass appeal and public spirit, its continued success was assured by the low-key profile maintained by its sponsor, Kinney Shoe Corp., and the integrity and professionalism of Ruder & Finn, its guiding hand in the communications area. Their awareness of the larger purposes of the Great American Family concept, as it evolved, produced a contest that became a remarkable achievement for both photography and the American people.

Is it strange that a collection of amateur photos of ordinary Americans should capture the public's imagination? That interest became evident from the very first simultaneous exhibitions of "Faces" at New Jersey's Morris Museum of Arts & Sciences and at the California Museum of Science & Industry in Los Angeles. And audiences in other countries who have seen the USIA-sponsored exhibit also reacted, and are reacting, with similar fervor.

The key may well be in the high degree of self-identification that these photos stimulate. The faces are of ordinary people, like "you and me." We see in these photo families the parents and grandparents we were familiar with, the children we knew, the boy and girl down the street. We see ourselves. The response is different when we look at photos of famous personalities, however. There is an invisible barrier or gulf because we are separated by the differences of wealth, position, talent and distance. We can't identify with them personally. But "FACES" can be part of our own family albums.

When Arnold Newman — who photographed seven U.S. presidents, kings, celebrities, Nobel prize-winners and headline personalities — photographed the dozen "ordinary" Americans, he found they were not ordinary at all. Their achievements have a special yardstick. Their accomplishments are in living their own full, rich lives with integrity and dignity. And that is in itself a memorable accomplishment.

In addition, Newman achieved just as great a sense of personal satisfaction with the photographic results as any attained when photographing the most famous celebrity.

Today, the 1976 Bicentennial and its celebrations have faded from the American scene but some rewards remain. Among them we count the Great American Faces project and its exhibitions. And one of its dividends is the book, "FACES USA."

Casual Dress By Lobbyist

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — With his long, blond curls and his cowboy boots, the governor's lobbyist looks more like a country musician — which he is.

Nelson Biddle has been tromping around the Tennessee Capitol in blue jeans for the past four years, keeping Gov. Ray Blanton's bills moving in the General Assembly and winning legislative friends.

This year, Biddle says, 97 percent of what Blanton presented to the Legislature was enacted.

"It always has been my contention that what counts is what's up here," Biddle said, tapping his forehead with his right forefinger, "not the way you look."

He went to work for the state in the policy planning office in 1969 under the late Gov. Buford Ellington, a Democrat, quit after two years to try to make it as a guitarist, and rejoined the state on the staff of former Gov. Winfield Dunn, a Republican.

Partly because of his appearance, he was kept behind the scenes. In 1975, his first year with Blanton, Biddle still was the inside man. But in 1976, he moved out front. Part of his job has been to write veto messages.

Among the reasons for his success, Biddle believes, is the help he's given legislators. "I've drafted bills for them. I've told them the administration can't support a bill in one form but worked out amendments so it would be acceptable — and that sort of thing."

"In the long run, that's a lot more effective than giving away bridges or highways in return for votes. But I've done that, too."

Biddle, 32, who was graduated from Vanderbilt University, was going to law school "when my services were required to keep the Communists away from our shores," and he went to Vietnam. He joined Dunn's administration after discharge.

His attire, which sometimes includes a ragged T-shirt under a denim jacket, still provokes comment.

"When I first went to work for the state, I dressed this way because I didn't have any other clothes and I couldn't afford any others. But, gradually, I found out that the legislators recognized me. You know, somebody would say, 'He's the one who looks like a hippie.'"
