

French Are Pulling Out Of Kolwezi

PARIS (AP) — French Foreign Legion paratroopers began their withdrawal from southern Zaire today, less than a week after recapturing the city of Kolwezi from invading rebels and aiding in the evacuation of trapped foreigners, the Defense Ministry announced.

Word of the withdrawal came on the heels of a Belgian proposal for an all-African peacekeeping force to ensure an uninterrupted flow of Zaire's mineral wealth to the West.

A Defense Ministry spokesman said the French garrison in Kolwezi would be replaced by Zairian army forces "reinforced by about 100 Moroccan troops."

The 600 legionnaires parachuted into Kolwezi Friday and Saturday. Four of them were killed in fighting with the rebels who overran the city nearly two weeks ago, the Defense Ministry said.

The French troops abandoned their pursuit of fleeing rebels Wednesday night, although five or six companies of rebel forces equipped with heavy weapons remained in an area about six miles west of Kolwezi, the spokesman said.

"Maintenance of security in the Kolwezi area from now on is up to the Zaire army," he said.

The paratroopers will spend about three days withdrawing by road to Lubumbashi, the capital of the province, where they will be allowed to rest before being flown back to France, the spokesman said. Lubumbashi is about 200 miles southeast of Kolwezi.

Meanwhile, Belgium urged the creation of a Western-supported all-African peacekeeping force to prevent another attack into Zaire's Shaba Province and guarantee the continued flow of ore from the mineral rich region.

N.C. Tax Refunds Larger But Plenty Left For State

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Although state income tax refunds have been larger on the average so far this year, Revenue Secretary Mark Lynch says the General Assembly should have plenty of money left when it moves next week to begin revising the state budget.

Lynch said Wednesday that state income tax refunds are averaging $112.79, up from $98.70 last year, but the higher refunds for the most part reflect inflation. He said the state's net income tax revenues also are rising.

He said 1,269,000 refunds had been processed through Tuesday and it likely will be late next month before handling of refunds is complete.

Revenues from the income tax were up by 17.8 percent for the 10 months ended April 30, Lynch said. Receipts from all state taxes during the 10-month period rose by 14.4 percent when compared to the corresponding period of the previous fiscal year.

The figures, adjusted to reflect a change in accounting practices in income tax withholding, were contained in a monthly report by the Revenue Department.

The increase in tax revenues is consistent with the most recent legislative projections, according to David Critts, a fiscal analyst for the General Assembly.

Critts said the legislative forecast called for a 13.9 percent rise in tax revenues during the fiscal year ending July 30.

"The current growth rate is a little higher than our forecast but the forecast still seems prudent," he said.

Critts said a 10.1 percent increase in tax revenues is needed to balance the 1977-78 budget as approved by the General Assembly during its 1977 session. Revenues above that amount, expected to total $68.7 million, may be used by legislators to supplement the general fund budget for 1978-79.

Coupled with other revenue sources in the general and high-way funds, the surplus is expected to amount to $278.9 million.

Lynch said during a news conference that increased revenues partly reflect an improvement in economic conditions.

"The improvement in the economy has been very fine," Lynch said, adding, "As far as predicting that trend will continue, I can't do that accurately."

The Revenue Department figures showed that sales and use taxes made up one of the largest increases in receipts. They were up by 13.6 percent in the 10-month period ended April 30, showing a 14.6 percent rise in April compared to the same month in 1977.

Implied Threat By Committee To S. Korea

WASHINGTON (AP) — Leon Jaworski didn't get what he wanted, but he says a watered-down threat to cut off U.S. economic aid to South Korea will "do the job" in getting testimony from a former ambassador about cash payoffs to congressmen.

Jaworski, special counsel for the House ethics committee, made that assessment after the House International Relations Committee voted 31-0 on Wednesday for a resolution that warns rather than promises to cut off aid if South Korea does not allow former ambassador, Kim Dong Jo, to testify under oath to House investigators.

In Seoul, the resolution was criticized by both the ruling and opposition parties. The ruling Democratic Republican Party expressed "disappointment and indignation" at the "irrational pressure and threat" and said the resolution was a violation of an international agreement on diplomatic immunity. The opposition New Democratic Party said it regretted the passage of the resolution.

Jaworski reportedly told ethics committee members he has classified information that eight or more current House members may have received envelopes stuffed with $100 bills from the former ambassador.

Members said Jaworski told them at a meeting last week he could not release the names of the congressmen or the source of his information.

Jaworski would not talk about a report by the Cleveland Plain Dealer on Wednesday that he has cables traffic between the former ambassador and Seoul that was intercepted by a U.S. intelligence agency.

Jaworski refused to comment on his information in a telephone interview except to indicate that the only ethics committee people who know its source are himself and two staff people.

Craven County Sheriff Bruce Edwards said the women were taken to Craven County Hospital, but their condition was not known.

France's Turn To Offer Proposals

By WILLIAM N. OATIS
Associated Press Writer
UNITED NATIONS (AP)

President Valery Giscard d'Estaing of France today called for creation of a new world disarmament body and endorsed a U.S. offer to provide early-warning systems to detect attacks.

Speaking at a special U.N. disarmament session, he said a world institute of disarment, attached to the United Nations and patterned after the International Monetary Fund, should be established.

Giscard d'Estaing also proposed a meeting by all participants in the 35-nation Helsinki security conference on disarmament in Europe to achieve "a genuine reduction in weapons within the geo-strategic complex of Europe from the Atlantic to the Urals."

A third proposal called for studies on creation of a satellite monitoring agency for effective supervision of disarmament accords.

France for years has boycotted the 31-nation Geneva disarmament committee out of dislike for the Soviet-American co-chairmanship. The new organization Giscard d'Estaing and his government is calling for would have 30 to 40 members with a chairman elected for two years from among all the members except the big powers.

The Geneva disarmament committee, established by the United States and the Soviet Union, is linked only informally with the United Nations. But France says the body it wants established should be responsible to the main political committee of the General Assembly, sitting as a disarmament commission.

Vice President Walter F. Mondale told the General Assembly Wednesday that the United States was ready to be the "eyes and ears of peace" in areas of possible conflict by providing the countries involved with monitoring services like the aerial photography and ground detection devices now working between Egyptian and Israeli forces in Sinai.

Mondale said countries wanting such help should submit joint requests, preferably through regional organizations or the United Nations.

He also charged that the Warsaw Pact nations had built up an almost 340-1 advantage in tanks in Europe over the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

Preliminary Plats OK'd

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer

The Greenville Planning and Zoning Commission gave its approval to five preliminary plats and one final plat Wednesday night while the joint city-county board failed to gain a quorum for its meeting.

Vice Chairman E. E. Howell, who presided, announced that the joint board will meet Tuesday, May 30 at 8 p.m. in a special call session to consider business originally scheduled for last night's agenda.

Meeting in one of its shortest sessions in recent months, the city members approved the preliminary plat of Gully Field, located west of and adjoining River Bluff Road, east of the Nell Skinner property and north of the McPherson property.

Commissioners, in approving the preliminary drawing for the development, urged the developers to consider another name.

A spokesman for the developers pointed out that the natural contours and slope of the land will be maintained in placing houses on the property with structures built on the slopes. The spokesman said that the concept should add to the landscaping scheme.

City Engineer Charlie Holliday said that part of the property is located in the flood plain and some fill would be required in order to develop. The land is zoned for R-6 usage, it was mentioned.

The preliminary plat of Northgate Center, located east of Memorial Drive, west of Gum Road and north of Airport Road, received commission approval.

Holliday reported that the property is zoned for Unoffensive Industry use with lots in the 15,000 square foot range planned. One entrance to the development is planned on NC 11, the official added.

Holliday noted that the same property was considered several months ago but approval was not granted for the development at that time because the planned street widths were not adequate. He said that street widths meet the guidelines in the new plat.

Approval was also given to the preliminary plat of Evans Co. property at the southeast corner of Elks Street and McClellan Street.

Holliday said that the plat indicated two lots are involved with the zoning (R-6) calling for residential use. Water and sewer is available, it was added.

The preliminary plat of West End Shopping Center Subdivision, located west of and adjoining West End Shopping Center and the lone Marshburn property, gained commission approval.

A spokesman for the petitioners noted that a change in ownership of the 4.94 acres is planned with the owner expecting to maintain the property in its current state.

The property is currently zoned for RA-20 and Shopping Center use, it was noted, but a petition to have the whole tract zoned for RA-20 use is expected to be filed.

Commissioners agreed to consider the preliminary plat involving Tract I of Whichport Development, located east of Nichols Shopping Center, west of Seaboard Coast Line Railroad and south of US 264 Bypass. The development was originally scheduled for consideration by the joint board but Kenneth Whichard, the developer, said that he intended for only Tract I of the development, which is in the city limits, to be considered.

Approval was given to the preliminary plat and a motion to also consider the final plat at last night's meeting died for lack of a second. A great deal of discussion has taken place in recent months regarding consideration of both preliminary and final plats at the same meeting.

Whichard had earlier obtained approval for the preliminary and final plats but revisions were necessary. He asked the board to consider both plats last night and noted that a 30-day wait would be expensive for the developers.

In a final matter on the city agenda, approval was given to the final plat of Woods Subdivision, located west of Hooker Road and south of and adjoining Green Mill Run.

Holliday, pointing out that the northern part of the property is in the flood plain of Green Mill Run, said that a finished floor level of 46.2 feet would be required when the flood plain section is developed.

The property, involving 9.6 acres, is zoned for R-6 use, according to Holliday. The preliminary plat indicated that 15 lots were planned in the tract, which is located across Hooker Road from the Winslow property.

Neighborly

An observant neighbor led to the arrest of a 17-year-old youth on breaking, entering and larceny charges yesterday afternoon, Chief Glenn Cannon reported today.

Cannon said Curtis Lee James of 100 Woodside Dr. was taken into custody about 1:40 p.m. and jailed under $500 bond for allegedly entering a dwelling at 600 Greenfield Blvd. and taking $1.25 from the home.

According to Cannon, a neighbor saw the youth enter the house through a window, then come out and start walking down the street.

After calling police, the neighbor got into his car, stopped James and asked if he wanted a ride, then flagged down the responding police investigators and turned James over to them.

Timberlake-Vinson Vows Solemnized On Sunday

MRS. ROBERT EMMET TIMBERLAKE

ZEBULON — Pamela Vinson and Robert Emmet Timberlake exchanged wedding vows at four o'clock Sunday afternoon at the Zebulon United Methodist Church. The Rev. Lowell R. Aills performed the ceremony.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Battle Vinson of Zebulon, and Dr. and Mrs. Robert Wilburn Timberlake of Bethel.

A program of classical and baroque music was presented by Christopher Jenkins, organist, Fairya Mellado, violinist, and Daniel Mellado, cellist, before and during the ceremony.

Given in marriage by her parents and escorted by her father, the bride wore an original formal gown of satin polyester, princess design featuring a scoop neckline, capelet sleeves and collar with a sash flowing from the bow in back into a partial train.

Her veil of imported silk illusion, bordered with alencon lace, was attached to a modified Camelot cap accented with seeded pearls. The bride's jewelry consisted of her own creations of matching pearl choker and bracelet. She carried a bouquet of white georgiana orchids with white and yellow rosebuds.

Ushers were Bill Timberlake of Madison, and Paul Timberlake of Boone, brothers of the bridegroom.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held in the church fellowship hall.

After a wedding trip to Florida, the couple will live in Greenville.

The bride graduated from Ravenscroft and attended East Carolina University. She is now employed at Fashion Fabrics, Greenville. The bridegroom graduated from Bethel High School and is attending East Carolina University.

The couple was honored at a rehearsal dinner Saturday at the Carolina Country Club, Raleigh, given by the parents of the bridegroom.

Today's Women Gaining In Labor Force

By PATRICK J. KILLEN
WASHINGTON (UPI) — Putting off marriage and children longer, today's women are gaining an ever-increasing share of America's jobs and now make up 41 percent of the total labor force, the Census Bureau reported Saturday.

Profiling the U.S. population, the bureau said the labor force topped the 100 million mark for the first time in 1977 with a gain of nearly 14.7 million workers in the period from 1970 to 1977. Women accounted for 57 percent of that growth and now hold 41 million jobs.

In 1960, the bureau reported, 38 percent of all American women were employed while in 1977, 48 percent of the women had jobs. During the same period the proportion of men working dropped from 83 to 80 percent.

The ratio of males to females in the civilian labor force declined from 2-to-1 in 1960 to 1.44-to-1 in 1977.

The bureau said the number of working wives continued to increase, rising from 40.5 percent in 1970 to 46.4 percent in 1977.

Young women are delaying marriage and childbearing longer. About 43 percent of the women married in the 20-24 age group in 1977 had not borne children, compared to 36 percent in 1970 and 24 percent in 1960.

The number of women in their early 20s who have not married went from 36 to 45 percent between 1970 and 1977.

Based on interviews with some 53,000 households interviewed monthly, the report pulls together assorted population figures mentioned in earlier surveys. Items:

An estimated 1,914,000 unmarried adults of the opposite sex were living together in assorted population figures mentioned in earlier surveys. Items:

An estimated 1,914,000 unmarried adults in 1977 but was still below the peak of 11.0 in 1972. The number of marriages in 1977 was 2,176,000, nearly twice the number of divorces, 1,097,000.

About 38 percent of the first marriages of women in their late 20s may eventually end in divorce, the bureau estimated. It said women in the same group with an incomplete college education were more likely to be divorced, 49 percent, than those with exactly four years of college, 29 percent.

The average size of an American household has declined from 3.14 persons in 1970 to 2.86 in 1977.

Median or mid-point family income in 1976 (the only figure available) in constant dollars, was $14,960, about $500 higher than in 1970, and was 3 percent higher in 1976 than in 1975.

White families had a median income in 1976 of $15,540, black families $9,240 and Spanish origin families $10,260. Families headed by females had a median income of only $7,210 compared with a husband-wife family whose median income was $16,200.

In 1976, about 25 million persons or 12 percent of the population were below the poverty level with blacks making up 30 percent and Hispanics 11 percent of the poor people. The elderly accounted for another 13 percent.

There were 24.5 million blacks in the population in March 1977, representing 11.5 percent of the total. Persons of Spanish origin numbered 11.3 million. Their total included 6.55 million persons of Mexican

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

In church the other Sunday, I watched a phenomenon take place that has been going on since the beginning of time but has probably set Motherhood back a hundred years.

I call it the nine-year-old mother syndrome. It occurs when there are several children in the family and the mother relinquishes the responsibility for the younger children to an older child.

Actually, it's a thankless job. No pay. No respect. No training. No future. And no Mother's Day cards.

It includes taking little brother (or sister) to the bathroom when they don't want to go. Washing their faces when they don't want them washed. Wiping their noses when they don't want them wiped. Restraining them from following their "real" mother when they don't want to be restrained.

With no guidelines or experiences of their own to follow, these Midget Mothers discipline their younger brothers and sisters as they think they see their mothers do it.

The incident in church was quite revealing. First, the child grabbed the hymnal and began to lick the pages.

Midget Mother slammed the book shut on her fingers. The child ran down the aisle toward the altar.

Midget Mother added two inches to her right arm by dragging her all they way back to her seat.

The child stood on the seat and hummed the Mouseketeer theme.

Midget Mother clapped a hand over her mouth so she could not breathe.

The child emptied her mother's purse on the seat and began to sift through credit cards and letters.

Midget Mother pinched her until a white, then red welt appeared. To alleviate the screaming, she then hoisted the child on her hip and took her to the vestibule.

Upon her return, the child slapped and blew bubbles two inches from Midget Mother's face. Pushed to the brink of her patience, Midget Mother socked her down on her lap and locked her arms about her like a strait-jacket.

At this point, the mother put down her prayer book, gave a piercing look at Midget Mother and pulled the small child on her own lap lovingly.

I wondered if Midget Mother would ever have children of her own. Or get married for that matter. Or even date! Or shake hands. Or go to the park? Or have a puppy.

Lifestyle Should Dictate Hat Choice

By JOY STILLEY
AP Newsfeatures Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Tom Hann raises peacocks at his country home, but he is quick to point out that he doesn't use their feathers to trim the hats he designs.

However, he has plenty of other ideas for trimming the hat collections he has been creating ever since he landed his first job designing hats for French couturier Molynieux in Paris.

"I studied engineering at the University of Maine, but that was the career my parents had decided on," the 49-year-old Hann, just back from his semi-annual trip to Paris, said in an interview. "But when I got out of the Army I knew I wanted to do something in fashion."

He went to a fashion school in Paris and took a course in millinery, where he designed and made his first hat — a confection he still vividly remembers.

"It was about 100 layers of tulle, cut in circles, which had to be all stitched so it held together. It took days to make it. You couldn't find the labor to produce it today," says Hann, who notes that there is a shortage of labor today for millinery handwork.

Back from Paris, he went to work for Lily Dache in New York.

"Then I heard about wholesale, where there's less glamour and more money, and that's where I've been ever since," adds the designer-owner of Kurt, Jr., a firm that caters to 2,000 stores.

Hann, tall and slim and quiet-spoken, gets his ideas "from watching Seventh Avenue (New York's garment district), walking the streets, going to museums. I keep looking and looking and something happens."

He has to work six months ahead and must stay in touch with the fashion forecasts to make sure his hats will go with the clothes trends, he points out.

"You don't do floppy hats with tailored clothes. Now clothes are soft, and hats have to have freedom to go with them."

Hats must be functional and a woman's lifestyle should be taken into consideration. For instance, most women drive automobiles and don't want a huge-brimmed hat, says Hann, who considers comfort of major importance.

"It has to fit and to feel right on the head," he says. "If the brim doesn't sit right and you put on a coat, the hat would climb up. I always have a customer stand up and see how the hat looks in back."

"If you wear glasses, choose the profile silhouette — brim up on one side and down on the other," he advises. "It cuts the straight line of glasses across the face."

"A tall woman can wear a big hat; a small woman, a more modest brim. It's all balance."

Young people today have made a "look" out of hats, picking up the cap, the sailor, the tweed, influenced by movies such as "Annie Hall," he says.

As for Hann, his favorite is "a tailored, slick hat, I'm from Boston and that's probably influenced me."

The designer spends weekends in his country home in Woodstock, N.Y., where he has rebuilt a barn, laying the brick floor in the patio himself, and where he enjoys the sight of his 12 peacocks.

"I saw some once and thought they'd be fun to have," he says. "You hope they'll be walking along in the yard when guests come, but instead they're usually just sitting in the trees."

And when their feathers fall out, Hann's caretaker makes fishing flies out of them.

Poached eggs are delicious served on a bed of cooked fresh spinach seasoned with butter, salt and pepper. Melba toast is a good accompaniment because it adds texture contrast.

'Irresponsibility' Fits Scene

One has to wonder what in the world the city council of the District of Columbia is thinking in considering a boycott of North Carolina goods over the Wilmington 10 case.

Both, so news reports tell us, are to be voted on Tuesday by members of the council.

Here is the District of Columbia which thrives off conventions, meetings and visitors from every state in the union, talking about boycotts of the states. Rep. Stephen L. Neal, D-N. C. called it irresponsibility. That is as good a word as any. Obviously there are not very many deep thinkers on the District of Columbia city council.

Saving Expense Of A Special Election

The Pitt Technical Institute board of trustees has voted to ask the county commissioners to set a referendum on community college status for November along with the general election.

pense of a special election. Also, large numbers of voters can be expected to turn out that day and a good reading on public opinion can be obtained.

A November referendum on community college status seems logical to us.

Meanwhile, other art activities have begun attracting national attention. The North Carolina Symphony has played at Carnegie Hall and more recently at Kennedy Center to national acclaim.

ERA Plays Dirty Pool

By JAMES J. KILPATRICK
WASHINGTON — The long-simmering fight over the Equal Rights Amendment boiled up anew on Capitol Hill last week. In a desperate effort to salvage a lost cause, proponents of the amendment moved in both House and Senate for a seven-year extension of the ratification period.

THE INSIDE REPORT

Why Wallace Dropped Out

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
HUNTSVILLE, Ala. — As he has done throughout the past six years, George Corley Wallace stifled the tragic and courageous overtones that enveloped him when he appeared here May 18, just two nights after his stunning withdrawal from the U.S. Senate race.

U.S. senator No. 100 is just a cover story. The real reason is brutally simple: the assassination attempt of May 15, 1972, at a Laurel, Md., shopping center has belatedly removed George Wallace from the mainstream of politics.

Wallace on the eve of a possibly losing Senate campaign: distraught because of his recent divorce, physically haggard and deafer than ever, living in the past rehashing his famous triumphs in national politics and showing little interest in current affairs.

Wallace says, he would have been on the 1972 ticket, for vice president if not president. Even if that went wrong, he believed that a mobile Wallace would have won 1976 primaries in Massachusetts and Florida.

Watchword Is Preparedness

By JOHN CUNNIFF
NEW YORK (AP) — The concept seems to be right out of the Boy Scout manual, but corporate chief executives are articulating it differently. "Be prepared," say the scouts. "Anticipate," say the chiefs.

Senate negotiators reached an accord on the natural gas portion of the plan late Wednesday, voting 10 to 7 to accept a proposed compromise that lifts price controls from newly found gas in 1985.

House negotiators broke a six-month deadlock Tuesday when they approved the natural gas measure on a 13-12 vote.

Carter and the House wanted to keep price controls on gas, but the Senate had voted for deregulation after two years.

The compromise is a middle ground which congressional analysts say will cost consumers some $9 billion between now and 1985 in higher heating costs.

The deal was framed in lengthy informal negotiations among key conferees and Energy Secretary James R. Schlesinger.

The negotiators will meet again June 6 to take up 33 relatively minor but unresolved issues on the gas legislation.

Lawmakers hope to get the gas compromise to the Senate floor — where it goes first — as soon as possible.

"We want to send a signal to the American people that we have accomplished something," said Sen. Pete Domenici, R-N.M., one of three Republicans on the conference panel who voted for the compromise. The others were Sens. Mark Hatfield of Oregon and James McClure of Idaho.

But, Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich., a top House negotiator, said getting it to the floor could take "six to eight weeks" because of drafting difficulties.

And there is also the possibility the gas proposal will be filibustered when it reaches the Senate — by liberals who oppose deregulation, conservatives who don't think the compromise goes far enough, or by both at the same time.

Kilpatrick...

two-thirds; the original resolution of 1972 required two-thirds. It is hard to understand how an amendment could get by with less.

This debate would be only the beginning. The Senate leadership would be out of its mind to invite one more filibuster by bringing the proposed extension to the floor, but suppose an extension somehow is approved. What would the effect be on the 35 states that have already ratified? On the four states that have rescinded? The extension would take us to March, 1989. How can that date possibly be "contemporaneous" with March of 1972?

Put the legalisms aside. The substantive purposes of "women's equality" are being achieved without the risks and uncertainties of this very dubious amendment. It would be pleasant, truly it would, to let the ERA quietly expire, and to stop yelling at each other for awhile.

Drug Awareness Conference Held

A four-week Drug Awareness Conference has been completed at the Agnes Füllilove Extended School Program.

The purpose of the conference was to provide students with information which would make them aware they have a personal choice as to whether to become involved in drugs and to attempt to instill in students the attitude and knowledge for choosing appropriate alternatives.

Weekly topics included alcohol — an overview; drugs and the law; drugs and health; and drugs and alternatives.

Help with the conducting of the course was provided by the Pitt County Mental Health Clinic, the Greenville Police Department, the Pitt County Sheriff Department, family court counselors, adult probation officers, two Greenville attorneys, the N. C. Dali Suit Says 'Exploitation'

NEW YORK (AP) — Salvador Dali has filed a $3 million suit against a Chicago firm he claims is engaging in the "commercial exploitation" of one of his original designs.

The artist-sculptor, now living in Spain, said in papers filed Wednesday in federal court in Manhattan that under a 1972 contract with Lincoln Mint Inc., the Easter theme design could be used only on plates and platters of precious metals.

Dali charged Lincoln Mint with violating the contract by using his design in an unauthorized manner on other items it manufactures for commercial use. The items include pendants, medallions and dinner bells, said Michael Ward Stout, the artist's lawyer.

poine and floor events.

Introducing Autovest. The first lease plan to blend the advantages of buying with advantages of leasing while substantially cutting your total obligation.

Introducing Autovest. The plan that estimates a car's future value, deducts it from the selling price now, and cuts the amount you pay.

Autovest begins by recognizing that a two year old car is still worth a lot of money.

And instead of requiring you to pay the full selling price, much of which you'd get back eventually in trade, Autovest allows you the use of that money.

You shop for the car you want.

You negotiate the best price you can.

You arrange the amount you can pay up front. Either cash or trade.

Then Autovest takes over. They estimate the car's future value, we call this the Guaranteed Purchase Option Price, and immediately deduct that from the selling price.

Autovest, thus, can cut the amount you pay.

And that's something no conventional finance plan can accomplish.

How Autovest works.

The book you see above is the Autovest Guide.

Every Autovest dealer has one.

It contains the minimum future value, in two years, for every car sold in the U.S.. Along with the amount that key accessories will add to that value.

And nobody is in a better position to accurately predict future values than Autovest.

Autovest has, on computer, the resale value history of every make and model sold in the U.S. since 1950.

With it, they can estimate the future value of the car you want and give you the use of that money now.

Afford the car you couldn't.

Let's say you're used to driving a fairly expensive, well-equipped automobile.

But today you're faced with a selling price of, perhaps, $5,400 on a car that used to cost around $4,300.

And let's also say your present car is worth $1,300 in trade. Here's how Autovest can help fit that car back into your budget.

Selling Price	$5,400
Advance Payment (cash or trade)	1,300
Principal Balance	4,100
Less Guaranteed Purchase Option Price	2,650
Payments Based On	1,450
Autovest Charge (On $4,100)	984
Total Commitment*	$2,580.48

Monthly Lease Payments* 107.52 (24 mos.)

*State and local taxes, if any, and insurance not included.

It's important to note here that, not only are your payments low, the term is shorter.

Three Autovest options.

At the end of two years, you're in a better position to exercise intelligent control over your automobile costs than ever before. You have three Autovest options that cover every possibility.

1. Trade the car (or sell it). If the price you get exceeds the Autovest Guaranteed Purchase Option Price, you keep the profit. Since that Guaranteed Purchase Option Price is purposely set below anticipated market value, normally there's enough equity for the next down payment.

2. Keep the car. If you really like the car and want to keep it, you pay the Autovest Guaranteed Purchase Option Price and applicable sales tax. If you qualify, we'll spread the balance over another couple of years.

3. Walk away. At the end of your Autovest agreement based on the return guidelines* you can simply leave the car with Autovest and walk away. If it's worth less than the Guaranteed Purchase Option Price, Autovest takes the loss.

In order to give you these three options, Autovest retains title to your car unless you choose Option 2.

Meanwhile you enjoy the practical advantages of ownership, without the financial disadvantages.

*The return guidelines are simple. First, no unreasonable damage (Autovest allows for normal wear and tear). Second, if you exceed the mileage your Guaranteed Purchase Option Price is based on (36,000 miles on a two year plan), you'll be billed just three cents a mile. REMEMBER: these guidelines only apply to option 3.

Drive new, spend less.

Keeping an older car running, with the cost of maintenance and repairs skyrocketing, can be prohibitively expensive. Actually it might be more expensive than driving a new car.

A recent U.S. Government study* has shown that there is a turning point when the variable costs of ownership (depreciation, maintenance and repairs) can actually be higher per mile in the third and fourth years of a car's life than in the first two.

For a standard size car, it's about 10% higher. (Lower depreciation being more than offset by everything from the replacement cost of tires, battery and exhaust system, to the skyrocketing cost of repairs.)

And that's one of the key ideas behind Autovest.

Autovest makes it easier for you in the short run (with lower payments) to lower your car costs in the long run (by driving new).

By making the turning point a decision point, Autovest gives you tools to make the smartest possible decision at that time.

*Cost of Operating an Automobile, U.S. Department of Transportation, 1974.

The future today.

We think Autovest makes so much sense for so many people, that it's the wave of the future.

For a complete explanation of the plan, contact your authorized Autovest dealer.

If you qualify, just decide on the model you want, agree on a price that's right, and let Autovest take it from there.

With Autovest, you can afford that new car that seemed out of reach.

Steady Hand Required In Taxidermy

By RICHARD LOWE
Associated Press Writer
NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Like woodcarving, taxidermy requires a steady hand, long hours and years of practice. It's Jim Sharber's hobby and he says that it, like whittling, is a backwoods art on the wane.

"Growing up on a farm, there weren't a lot of social things to do," said Sharber, a state environmental planner. "I started reading library books and began with pigeons. It's been a satisfying hobby ever since."

It only costs about $10 to get started, Sharber said, adding that the real investment is in patience and time.

"I think it was a more popular hobby at one time," he said. "But it appears we live in a faster-paced life and there's not a long stretch of time between things we have to do and things we want to do. And, there aren't many stopping places once you get started."

Mounting a wood duck takes Sharber about eight hours, non-stop. The skin is removed intact. Feathers are washed with a light detergent for separation. Legs and tail are cut and wings clipped, remaining with the skin, which is worked down the body. The skull is detached.

"What you have is the body of the bird with the appendages detached. You can still cook the meat and corn meal absorbs the blood and juices," Sharber said. "But if you want the mount to last, you have to remove all the fatty tissue from the skin."

Muscles are cut from the legs and tail, and skin is washed in borax to protect it from bugs.

Then, from drawings or study of the carcass, Sharber molds an artificial body with a fiberglass material. Muscles are replaced with wax and clays, the head is cleaned out and glass eyes are inserted. Wires are run along the wing bones in the skin, through the legs and in the neck. The neck wire is wrapped in cotton and the body incision is sewn up.

"What you have looks like a big mess," he said. "You have to preen the feathers with forceps and shape the bird until you get it in a natural pose. That's what takes all the time."

Sharber has been mounting small game and waterfowl for more than 20 years, but success came with time.

"I thought I had really done something the first time. But it was probably three or four years till I was totally satisfied with something," he said. "I'll stay up till 4 a.m. just to try to get something right. I'm pretty critical of my work."

But Sharber says the long hours are worth it because, "you get a little sense of accomplishment when you complete something that takes time."

"It was a rural boy's pastime years ago, but the popularity of taxidermy has been cut down by other forms of recreation and hobbies, like watching color television."

Approach To Stability By Indonesians

BY CHARLES BERNARD

JAKARTA, Indonesia (UPI) — A survey of expert banking and diplomatic opinion indicates that Indonesia, with a lot of help from its friends, is moving toward economic stability from the chaos of the Pertamina scandal three years ago.

Statistics gleaned from interviews here show that the government's cool-headed belt tightening brought a satisfactory 7 percent economic growth rate in 1977 and that inflation was held to about 11 percent from the 20 percent of only 2-1/2 years ago.

Oil production and exports were at a record high with an average daily output of 1.7 million barrels and successful restructuring of $1.1 billion in overseas loans has been accomplished at significantly lower interest rates.

The projected 1978 budget of $11.6 billion was backed by a favorable balance in payment funds of $1.19 billion compared with near bankruptcy in 1975.

Despite the emergence of a defiant student movement calling for faster reform and president Suharto's resignation, Suharto is firmly in control of the 920-member MPR (People's Congress) and it elected him to a third five-year term on March 11.

Indonesia's most recent economic crisis was born in scandal that is still being investigated for corruption — the 1975 financial collapse of the state-owned oil company Pertamina, through which all of Indonesia's oil investment, exploration, production and exports are managed.

The company was allowed to operate virtually independent of other government controls and branched out into such fields as steel manufacturing, real estate, agriculture and what turned out to be a disastrous tanker building program.

Pertamina was directed by Gen. Ibnu Sutowo, a highly influential finance ministry budget director who during his tenure with the state-owned firm perused financial and other favors to supporters of the government.

He was dismissed by Suharto in April 1976 after the discovery that Pertamina had run up a $10.6 billion debt. It also could not remit $1.1 billion collected in oil revenues to the government or pay back huge loans and interest overseas to finance its seemingly endless list of ambitious projects.

Suharto moved to dig Indonesia out of the Pertamina scandal. The government guaranteed to cover all of Pertamina's legitimate debts or negotiate them down to mutually acceptable terms.

With the help of an international consortium of bankers led by Morgan Guaranty Trust and a 14-nation organization known as the Intergovernment Group for Indonesia, the Pertamina crisis has been largely resolved — but at great expense to the nation's previously projected economic development.

Indonesia's major trading partners — primarily the United States and Japan — increased imports of oil, rubber, tin, palm oil, timber, coffee and supplies from Indonesia's growing natural gas fields.

A U.S. Embassy economic report describes Indonesia's 1977 export performance as "bullish," but expresses disappointment over the lagging development of the domestic economy.

The report, seconded by banking and other diplomatic circles, said that Indonesia would be hard pressed to maintain the 1977 export pace. It noted that oil exploration necessary to maintain growth and production was resumed only recently after two years of virtual idleness.

The American report also said that a forecast for an 8.2 percent increase in non-oil export income was "highly problematical, depending as it does on world markets and particularly on the Japanese and U.S. markets."

Graft and corruption in all sectors during the 10 years of Suharto's rule have caused an immeasurable drag on the economy and the government's credibility. While the president has never been linked with such activities, there is a constant underground whispering campaign naming his wife, many other relatives and friends as major violators of the public trust.

THEATER DEDICATION — Pictured at the dedication of the J. Curtis Hendrix Theater at East Carolina University are Dr. Leo Jenkins, Mrs. Hendrix, Alison

Campus Theater Is Named In Honor Of J. Curtis Hendrix

The 760-seat theater in Mendenhall Student Center at East Carolina University has been dedicated to the memory of the late J. Curtis Hendrix of Greenville and the theater will bear his name.

Hendrix, a bank executive and alumnus of East Carolina, was "a doer" who had "love for and trust in his fellow man," said Julian R. Vainright, ECU Business Manager, who delivered the dedicatory address Wednesday.

Hendrix, who died last year, was one of ECU's most distinguished and loyal alumni, and this spring was honored posthumously as recipient of the 1978 Most Outstanding Alumni award. The ECU Board of Trustees voted earlier this month to establish a memorial to Hendrix by naming the theater in his memory.

Ashley B. Futrell of Washington, vice chairman of the board of trustees, accepted a portrait of Hendrix to hang in the theater's foyer, a gift made possible by Hendrix's fellow workers in the bank. Futrell said the occasion was "to recognize the living contribution" Hendrix made: as a man who "every day of his life...pumped a little more water into the well than he took out."

The portrait was unveiled by Hendrix's children, Alison and J. Curtis Hendrix, Jr. Hendrix's wife, the former Mary Alice Cox of Raleigh, and other family members also attended the dedication. ECU Chancellor Leo

W. Jenkins presided and a large gathering of family and friends attended.

Vainright, a close friend and classmate in grammar school, high school and in college here, was chosen by the family to deliver the dedication. In paying tribute to Hendrix's life and work "as an integral part of the community," Vainright also noted that the theater is one of the most heavily used facilities on campus. In four years, more than 280,000 persons have attended cultural, intellectual and entertainment events.

He noted that Miss Cynthia Mendenhall, for whom the student center is named, also was a close friend of Curtis Hendrix and "would be proud to know" of the tribute of naming the theater in his honor.

A reception at the home of the Chancellor and Mrs. Jenkins followed the late afternoon dedication ceremonies.

PWP Meets On Friday

Greenville Chapter No. 1058 of Parents Without Partners Inc. will hold a discussion meeting at Jarvis Church here Friday at 7:30 p. m.

Addressing the group will be Dr. Ken Lewis, Associate Professor of Social Work at East Carolina University. He will talk about the problem of non-custodial parents kidnapping a child from the parent having legal custody, legal problems arising in such situations, and methods of retrieving the child. Members and courtesy card holders are invited.

Memorial Day the group will hold a family games and picnic afternoon at the Jaycee Park. Activities will begin at 2 o'clock and the picnic at 4. Members and courtesy card holders are reminded to take their own soft drinks and side dishes with the chapter providing the meat to charcoal.

To be eligible for PWP, one must be single and the parent of a living child. Custody is not a factor. For more information, one may call 752-1674 or 758-9954 evenings.

Seek Sidetrack Ad Campaign

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — County commissioners are trying to sidetrack a plan for a national advertising campaign to draw homosexuals to a newly refurbished, downtown hotel.

Kenneth Bray, owner of the Grand Central Hotel, said he plans to have a disco, lounges and boutiques in the 112-room hotel. But Orange County Commission Chairman Lamar Thomas wrote Mayor Carl Langford to express concern and offer county assistance "in discouraging this distasteful operation."

No SBA Aid To Bertie Company

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A request by Bertie Industries of Windsor for permission to re-enter a federal program designed to help small businesses procure government contracts has been denied by the U.S. Small Business Administration. The company, owned mostly by blacks, operates a cut-and-sew plant in the Bertie County town. It was founded in 1966 by a group of citizens who wanted to provide jobs for unemployed and unskilled laborers, but it has suffered a series of financial problems over the years. A spokesman for the Atlanta regional office of the SBA said Bertie Industries was informed by letter earlier this month of the denial of its request for re-entry into the program, known as 8(a).

signing a contract with the Defense Department but later deciding it would lose $65,000 on the deal.

Sues Eight At O'Berry

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Jack E. McGee, father of a 16-year-old Raleigh girl who died at the O'Berry Center for the Mentally Retarded at Goldsboro, has filed suit against eight employees of the state institution and one former employee.

The death of Anne Cecile McGee at the hospital March 8 was one of three drug-related deaths there.

The suit, filed Wednesday in Wake County Superior Court, charged that actions of the defendants before the girl's death were "grossly and wantonly done and involved conscious neglect of duties imposed by law and necessary for the safety" of the O'Berry resident.

An autopsy report said Miss McGee had not been given proper medication for a seizure she suffered. An autopsy report March 3 on the exhumed body of another O'Berry patient showed death was from a drug overdose and an autopsy on a patient who died in June 1977 showed a drug overdose.

Named as defendants in the suit are Dr. Vernon Mangum, head of the hospital's infirmary; Dr. Yedda B.R.P. Raju, a staff physician; Jean Rhodes, Willie Patterson, Carol Everette and Betty James, all registered nurses; Ava Price and Edna Hamilton, licensed practical nurses; and Dr. Jose M. DeVarona, who resigned as director of O'Berry in February.

Class Outings In Thanatology

WELLINGTON, Ohio (AP) — Field trips in Lois Norton's class include visits to a funeral home, cemetery, mausoleum and crematory. The class is on thanatology — death and dying.

Mrs. Norton, an English teacher at Wellington High School, also is a licensed funeral director. About 20 juniors and seniors take her course.

Animal Studies By Space Agency

HOUSTON (AP) — Space agency engineers are developing containers to house animals for surgical experimentation onboard what could be the forerunner of a space age Noah's Ark, a Johnson Space Center engineer says.

Cletis Booher, an engineer in the Life Sciences Project Division, said Wednesday that the experiments may include checking the effects of weightlessness on animal tissue. The preliminary containers would house up to three dozen rats, and later larger animals.

NEW YORK (AP) —
 The stock market stemmed its recent selling tide in early trading today as prices stayed about where they were at the end of Wednesday's session.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial blue chips was unchanged at 837.92 after the first hour of trading. The closely watched average fell 17.50 Tuesday and Wednesday. Stocks that gained value held a slight edge over those that lost and about one-third of the issues were unchanged. Trading was active, has it been for more than a month.

Leading the most-active list on the New York exchange was Reliance Group, which rose 1/4 to 32 1/2. Teledyne jumped 2 1/4 higher to 102 1/2.

Gambling stocks continued to be bullish today, a reflection of interest in legal gaming at Atlantic City. Caesar's World was up 1/2 to 20 and Bally Manufacturing, a maker of slot machines, was up 1 1/4 to 34 1/4.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks rose .03 to 54.39.

Scoring Difficult During Indy Running

By JERRY GARRETT
AP Motorsports Writer

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — A.J. Foyt wouldn't be going for his fifth victory in the Indianapolis 500 this Sunday if someone hadn't caught an official scoring error made last year while he was going for No.4.

At one point during his drive to the unprecedented victory — no other driver in the 61-year history of the race has won more than three — the scoring pylon showed Foyt one lap down. Some confusion followed; the scoreboard was finally adjusted, putting Foyt back up with the leaders.

The reason for the change was not announced. No error was acknowledged.

However, personnel changes resulted immediately in the timing and scoring crew. Prior to this year's race, it was announced that the chief of that division, Dick Sauer, was also being replaced.

No reasons were given.

The net result is a wider role this year for regular timing and scoring officials of the U.S. Auto Club, the sanctioning body for racing at Indianapolis.

That's both good news and bad news for some members of the racing community.

The regular crew should help in identification problems; it's harder to read the numbers on cars going by at 220 mph if you're unfamiliar with the cars in the first place. Identification is expected to be more of a problem this year because there are so many cars that look alike and are painted similarly (dark colors and blues are very popular).

The regular crew also scores two other 500-milers during the year, as well as a variety of other races. It's a regular business with them.

But there have been complaints about USAC scoring this season. In fact, results of three of the four Indianapolis car races so far in 1978 have been disputed. Protesters include the Penske team and Interscope Racing, whose cars comprise the front row for Sunday's $1 million race.

Two-car or three-car teams seem to cause the most problems.

Foyt and teammate George Snider have almost identical orange Coyotes.

Spike Gehlhausen and John Mahler start side by side in twin blue and yellow team cars.

The worst are the three Penske cars. All matching red, white and blue, their numbers are 1, 7 and 71.

A's Fall From The Lead

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

Another funny thing happened to the Oakland A's Wednesday night...they fell out of first place in the American League West.

Maybe Bobby Winkles knew something when he quit as manager of the amazing first-place A's Tuesday, because they continued a slide that has seen them lose 12 of 17 games, the latest a 7-1 decision to the Milwaukee Brewers.

Coupled with California's 4-1 victory over the Chicago White Sox, it pushed the Angels into first place, five percentage points ahead of the A's, who had been on top since April 25.

The Cleveland game at New York was rained out.

Chris Knapp hurled a four-hitter and Don Baylor and Bobby Grich homered to lead the Angels over the White Sox on the field and over the A's in the standings.

The A's lost for the 12th time in their last 17 games when Milwaukee's Mike Caldwell pitched a six-hitter and Robin Yount drove in three runs for the Brewers.

Caldwell gave up a double to Mitchell Page in the first inning and didn't allow another hit until the sixth. He lost his shutout bid when Page homered in the ninth.

"We have to juggle and hope we're lucky," said Jack McKeon, who took over when Winkles quit. "We've seen two pretty good pitchers the last two nights (Caldwell and Jerry Augustine). Left-handers are going to give us trouble."

"There isn't any pressure on us," said Page. "We're not supposed to be a first-place club. We just hope we finish higher than we did last year."

Royals 6, Mariners 5

The Royals pulled it out with two runs in the ninth on Tom Poquette's bases-loaded grounder and Hal McRae's sacrifice fly. Kansas City erased a 4-0 deficit in the fifth on Amos Otis' two-run homer and Clint Hurdle's two-run double, but the Mariners took a 5-4 lead in the bottom of the fifth on Juan Bernhardt's homer.

Rangers 3, Twins 2

Al Oliver, who singled home the first run in the opening inning, singled home pinch runner Bobby Thompson in the 11th as Texas ended Minnesota relief ace Mike Marshall's string of successes. In his previous five appearances since joining the Twins last week, Marshall had earned a win and four saves.

Pinch hitter Craig Kuskick tied the game for the Twins in the bottom of the ninth with a two-out home run off Paul Lindblad.

Red Sox 6, Blue Jays 21

Jack Brohamer and Carlton Fisk hit two-run homers and Mike Torres tossed a seven-hitter for his sixth victory as the Red Sox moved into first place in the AL East, one game ahead of Detroit and New York. Dwight Evans also drove in two runs with an eighth-inning single.

Tigers 3-0, Orioles 2-1

Andres Mora's first home run since being recalled from the minor leagues May 15 and Jim Palmer's six-hit pitching highlighted Baltimore's victory in the nightcap. The Tigers, who had lost 11 straight games in Baltimore since July 31, 1976, won the opener on a ninth-inning single by Aurelio Rodriguez.

ANALYZING COLLEGE BASKETBALL recruiting is an inexact science at best, but it can provide an insight into the future strength of major college basketball programs.

Every year, there are a number of high school senior cagers considered "blue chippers" by a consensus of college scouts and other observers. These are players who, though they might not be able to "turn a program around", could provide one of the keys to a championship season.

A recent article in the "Greensboro Daily News" lists 50 of the top prep players from the past season and where they will be next year. It's plain to see that the rich get richer and the poor get poorer.

Four of the top 50 are underclassmen, three juniors and one sophomore. One of the juniors is Gastonia Ashbrook's James Worthy, a 6-8 performer considered by many to be the top player in the state this year. He is reputed to be high on North Carolina, but that could change next year as the recruiters start beating a path to his door. There may be some tense moments for Dean Smith.

Of the 46 seniors, eight have chosen to attend Atlantic Coast Conference schools. Wake Forest leads the way with three signees, while Maryland has two, and Duke, Carolina and Clemson one each.

WAKE'S THREE PICKS are 6-10 James Johnstone of Youngstown, N. Y., 6-8 Guy "The Sky" Morgan of Virginia Beach, Va., and 6-6 Alvis Rogers of Washington. Maryland copped 6-7 Buck Williams of Rocky Mount and 6-4 Reggie Jackson of Philadelphia.

Duke signed 6-5 Kevin Stallings of Collinsville, Ill., UNC inked 6-9 Chris Brust of Babylon, N. Y., and Clemson nabbed 6-10 Bill Ross of Lake Placid, Fla.

Many of these players will figure immediately into their team's plans. A projection predicts that five freshmen will start in the conference next season, three of them from the top 50 list.

Both Williams and Jackson are expected to start for the Terrapins next season, while Morgan could start for the Demon Deacons. Johnstone could also figure prominently in Wake's success due to a recent serious operation on senior center Larry Harrison's knee which could affect his play next year.

ONE CAN SEE the effect of successful recruiting on a college basketball program when the top recruiting teams are compared with the actual top 20.

Over the past four years, the years a player would have to have been recruited to be eligible for the past season, Notre Dame ranks tops among all schools in terms of talent signing. The Irish signed 10 top 50 players during that span and finished in the final four of the NCAA tournament last season.

Indiana, unranked at the end of the season, and Kentucky, the national champion, each signed nine. UCLA, which was ranked second before the NCAA tournament, signed seven, while Auburn, Maryland and North Carolina each signed six. Duke, last year's runner-up, had three top signees, while Arkansas, also in the final four, had two or less.

Arkansas is, of course, the exception that proves the rule — a team that relied on players who were not considered among the nation's best in high school, but who blossomed into championship material in college.

AS FOR THE FUTURE, Indiana, Kentucky, Notre Dame and UCLA will all put nine "blue chippers" on the court next season. Maryland and Carolina will have six each; Kansas, Louisville, Michigan, Minnesota and N. C. State five; Duke and Wake Forest four. Besides Wake Forest and Maryland, Minnesota, Kentucky, Louisville, Kansas, Michigan and San Francisco are thought to have had outstanding recruiting years last year.

It's easy to see, the top players don't usually take chances. They go to schools with established and successful programs, making it tough for the less-established schools to make any headway against the top teams.

Montgomery Transfers

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — North Carolina State, runnerup to Texas in the National Invitational Tournament, has lost one of its players to the Longhorns.

Freshman Ken Montgomery, a 6-foot-6 reserve who was the second highest scorer in Indianapolis high school history, is transferring to Texas and will be eligible for the 1979-80 season.

Montgomery played briefly at the end of the Wolfpack's 101-93 loss to Texas in the NIT championship at Madison Square Garden and missed two free throws.

Montgomery broke Oscar Robertson's high school career scoring record with 1,926 points in 94 games but fell 153 points short of George McGinnis' Indianapolis-area record for 94 games.

Southern Pitt Play

Bethel rolled to a 17-7 victory over the Little Sluggers of Winterville in the Southern Pitt Little League yesterday.

Chris Ayers was the winning pitcher.

David Keel led Bethel with three hits, including a homer, while Victor Grimes also had two, and also homered. W. Sumerlin led the Sluggers with two hits.

Wadkins: Stay Patient

By ED SHEARER
AP Sports Writer
ATLANTA (AP)

doesn't take but two or three good ones and you are back in business," says Lanny Wad-kins, the 1977 PGA champion. "I guess you have to be patient," he added. "I'm just not playing well. The only consolation is there is plenty of the year left."

Wadkins, who ranks only 63rd on this year's PGA money list with $23,702, hopes to turn around his game today against an elite field which begins play in the $200,000 Atlanta Golf Classic.

Hale Irwin, winless this year but one of only eight players with more than $100,000 in earnings this season, is one of the top contenders for the $40,000 first prize.

Irwin won this event in 1975 and 1977. There was no Atlanta Classic two years ago.

Other strong challengers include Jack Nicklaus, Masters champion Gary Player, U.S. Open winner Hubert Green and Tom Watson, this year's leading money winner who is seeking his fourth victory of the season. Player also has won three titles this year, all in a row.

Irwin set the tournament scoring record in 1975 with a 17-under-par 271 on the hilly, 6,883-yard Atlanta Country Club course.

Nicklaus also owns consecutive Atlanta Classic victories in 1973 and 1974 and he won on the first Tournament Players Championship. Nicklaus lost this title in a playoff with veteran Gardner Dickinson in 1971, so it is a course on which the game's top player has enjoyed considerable success.

Irwin is confident. "You like to feel you can win any tournament you play," he said.

"In a situation like this, you come in knowing you can win," he added. "That's not to say you will win. But you know you can. And that is important."

Wadkins isn't brimming with confidence. He simply is not the same player he was last year when he earned more than $244,000, his career best.

"Everything kind of came together for me last year," he said. "I was consistent even though I'd won only two tournaments. I was in a position to win others. That's the kind of golfer I know I am, not the one folks are seeing this year."

"I guess I'm going through something a lot of us have to go through," Wadkins said. "I've had more good years than bad. I'll get back. I just have to be patient."

Staubach Doesn't Like Role He's Been Given

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent
NEW YORK (AP) — "He Runs, Passes and Walks on Water."

Roger Staubach, quarterback of the Super Bowl champion Dallas Cowboys, acknowledged that headline on the cover of a sports magazine.

"I don't know why they should try to make me out as being some sort of a kook just because I don't fit a certain mold," he added in an informal yet introspective dialogue this week after receiving a trophy as Pro Quarterback of the Year.

"I see no point in categorizing us on the basis of our life styles. We quarterbacks are all different, yet we have much in common. Competitive instincts, for instance, and dedication — you don't get to be a quarterback in the National Football League without working hard."

To Staubach, there are no such animals as strict Mr. Cleans or inveterate hell-raiders although he is realistic enough to admit that football heroes, as other sports stars, are more than mere competitors. Because of wide television exposure and outlandish salaries, they also are show business personages thrust into the public domain.

Joe Namath, for instance, becomes Broadway, Joe the swinger who walks barefoot on llama rugs and makes the Hollywood scene with a sexy doll on each arm, while Oakland's Ken Stabler is the "good ol' boy" who spends idle hours swinging and swinging in the seamy neighborhood honky tonks.

"I don't resent that at all," Staubach said. "I think quite a bit of what we read and hear of these off-the-field activities are greatly exaggerated. They make good stories."

Staubach said: "I just don't believe you can be a full person until you've given yourself over to Christ. I know that I have reasoning power, and that reason just naturally tells you that there is something higher than all this...so I try to live the kind of life that will get me there."

The former Heisman Trophy winner from the U.S. Naval Academy said he felt that his comments were treated with cynicism and ridicule and he was given the image of being a fanatic.

"I was compared with Charlie Huggers of the 'Mary Hartman, Mary Hartman' show," Staubach said. "I am not ashamed of my religion. I am not ashamed to expound on it."

Little League

The Lions are now 5-0, while the Jaycees are 1-4.

Lions 3, Jaycees 2

The Lions pushed over three runs in the second inning, then held off the Jaycees to claim a 3-2 North State Little League win yesterday.

The Lions got all they were to need in the second. William Ward singled and moved up on a wild pitch. Chris Evans reached on a fielder's choice, as did Stephen Garret, loading the bases. Tripp Willford singled in Ward, and an error let Evans score. David Jester then singled to score Garret.

Both of the Jaycee runs came in the sixth. Evan Hause doubled and Maury Harris singled. Scott Pollard reached on an error, scoring both runners.

Jordy Smith had two hits to lead the Jaycees, and was the only hitter in the game with more than one.

Moose 7, Graniteers 4

After spotting the Graniteers the lead, the Moose came back to take a 7-4 win in the Tar Heel Little League yesterday.

The Graniteers took the lead with three runs in the third inning. Carlton Wilson walked and stole up. With two away, Tommy Warren also walked and Traye Fuqua doubled in Wilson. Jon Whichard reached on an error, scoring Warren, and Jimmy Bishop also was safe on a miscue, scoring Fuqua.

The Moose got to the scoreboard with two in the fourth. Eric Woodworth singled and moved up on a wild pitch. Peter Kallweit walked and both advanced on an out. A passed ball scored Woodworth, and an error let Kallweit score.

After the Graniteers added a run in the bottom of the fourth for a 4-2 lead, the Moose tied it up with two in the fifth.

Then, in the sixth, the Moose pushed over three more runs to win it. Greg Jones singled and Rob Deyton got a hit. Billy Godley provided the winning punch with a three-run homer that propelled the Moose to their 7-4 lead that held.

Woodworth and Jones each had two hits for the Moose, while the Graniteers were held to just three hits by Woodworth.

The Moose are now 2-3, as are the Graniteers.

Opening lead: Four of ♠.

Here is a chance for you to test your declarer play. Cover up the East-West hands with your thumbs and see if you can make four spades after a heart lead.

North has a difficult response to make. The hand really doesn't have enough in high cards to qualify for a jump raise, and a leap to game, despite the wealth of strength in the side suits, is a practical solution to a difficult problem.

When we saw this hand played, declarer played a low heart from dummy at trick one and captured East's queen with the ace. A diamond to the queen was ducked. West won the diamond continuation and returned a heart. Declarer won in dummy and since he had no quick entry to his hand to discard dummy's club on a high diamond, he was forced to lead a trump, won by East's king.

East shifted to a club, and declarer's queen was topped by the king and ace. When East gained the lead with the ace of trumps, he cashed the jack of clubs for down one. Where did declarer go wrong?

The mistake occurred very early in the play, at the time when more errors are committed than at any other. Have you spotted it?

When West leads a heart at trick one, declarer must play dummy's jack. Whether or not East covers, declarer is assured of a fast reentry to his hand. If East covers, declarer forces out the ace of diamonds and can then cross to the ten of hearts to discard dummy's losing club on the high diamond. If East plays low, the ace of hearts will be declarer's entry back to his hand. "Waste not, want not" is sound enough advice. But there is a difference between wasting and hoarding, which the successful declarers have learned to overcome.

Bus Accident Kills Seven

OSLO, Norway (AP) — Seven American tourists were killed and four seriously injured when a load of lumber broke free from a truck and sliced through their bus in the mountains of central Norway, police reported. The victims' names were not immediately available.

Witnesses said the truck skidded into the bus on a twisting mountain road Wednesday and that the wood broke free and rammed through the left side of the bus. They said the bus driver was able to keep the bus on the road, preventing it from plunging into a river bed below.

Police said the group, made up of 14 American couples, was headed for Tyn, a lake resort town about 100 miles northwest of Oslo. The accident occurred near Ljosemoen in the Sogn district of western Norway.

The Americans left the United States May 18 and stayed in Copenhagen before traveling to Norway, officials said. They said the tour was arranged by a Norwegian tour group called "Winge Tours" in association with the Boston-based firm "Selective World Tours."

Advise Cut In Funds For Handicapped

The State Advisory Budget Commission on Wednesday recommended a $9 million cut in the $15.4 million request submitted by the State Department of Public Instruction as new funds for the state's handicapped children. The commission's action met an immediate response from advocates of the new funds. Herb Stout, president of Parents and Professionals for Handicapped Children, at a press conference termed the action "callous," citing the cut in handicapped funds at the same time it recommended approval of a new $8.5 million legislative office building. Several state officials, including Lt. Governor James C. Green and state Representative McNeil Smith, along with other state legislators, attended the Stout conference as sign of support for efforts to have the budget cuts restored.

Governor James Hunt also met later in the day with representatives of the parents and professional group, and told them he would meet today with people from the State Department of Public Instruction and budget officials.

Hunt said in these meetings he would attempt to determine realistic estimates of what needs exist for exceptional children and the number of such children the state can reasonably expect to provide services for.

Stout warned that state agencies may face the possibility of lawsuits to force them to provide adequate funds if the proposed budget cuts are not restored by the General Assembly when it convenes next week. State and federal legislation requires free and appropriate education to all children with special needs by September 1, 1978.

The law also includes gifted and talented children among those who qualify for special needs.

Governor Hunt, while pledging moves to provide full educational service to all children in North Carolina, cautioned about putting money in the budget above what can be spent during the year to meet actual needs.

The governor was referring to a survey which shows that 18,000 children statewide qualify for special services which are not now available; and that another 50,000 await testing to determine eligibility for special needs.

In Greenville, Mrs. Ann Frost, president of the Greenville Chapter of the statewide PAGE organization (Parents for the Advancement of Gifted Education), commented on the commission's proposed $9 million cut from the budget request.

"I feel extreme concern to know that while the educational needs of all children cannot be met, the state can attempt to justify expenditures for such things as additional parking lots at the state fairground and a new $8.5 million building.

"These are valid needs, I realize, but so long as our educational needs are not met, I cannot conceive of expending state funds for some of these other needs. Education has to be the number one priority."

Referring to the status of tested and untested children for special needs, Mrs. Frost said, "There are children in Greenville who have been tested and are in need of services that cannot now be provided. As an example, only children in grades four through six in Greenville have the opportunity for enrichment programs. There's not such a program available for children in kindergarten through grade three."

WEATHER FORECAST—Showers are forecast today for most of the country from the Rockies to the Midwest, for the Pacific Northwest and for Florida and the Georgia and Carolina coasts.

By The Associated Press
A cold front moved off the North Carolina coast this morning and high pressure began to build behind it, heralding a period of good weather around the state.

The fair weather is expected to continue through the Memorial Day weekend, although it will become increasingly warm and humid.

Temperatures were expected to range generally in the 70s and 80s today and by next Monday — Memorial Day — they may be ranging in the 80s and low 90s.

With the increasing heat and humidity it is possible that some afternoon thundershowers might develop in some areas during the weekend, but they will be the exception.

The weak cold front that moved off the coast this morning triggered a few thundershowers in the eastern part of the state. Hail was reported in some of the storms along with high winds, but there were no reports of injuries or property damage.

Says Ingram Relies On Innuendo

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Spokesmen for Luther Hodges Jr. reacted sharply to comments by Democratic Senate opponent John Ingram Wednesday, saying Ingram had misrepresented Hodges' position on a number of issues.

"He's appealing to people's fears and frustrations and dividing the party," Hodges' campaign manager George Autry said, referring to Ingram. "He's campaigning out of acute desperation on innuendo and untruths."

Ingram, who faces Hodges in a runoff for the Senate nomination next Tuesday, rapped Hodges on economic issues Wednesday while on a four-city flying tour. Ingram accused Hodges of cancelling debates between the two, said Hodges supported an increase in Social Security taxes and said Hodges

"has no record of supporting a balanced budget."

Ingram also questioned how Hodges had been able to secure personal loans to use in his campaign, although he is unemployed since resigning his job as chairman of North Carolina National Bank.

"I am the candidate who has saved people money," Ingram said. "He is the candidate who has cost people money."

Hodges press secretary Paul Bernish said Ingram, state commissioner of insurance, was deliberately misstating Hodges' positions. "It is a tragic and misguided ploy and the voters of North Carolina will recognize his deplorable tactic for what it is, a desperation move," Bernish said.

Hodges, campaigning in the western part of the state, said he did not favor an increase in Social Security taxes and supports President Carter's recommended general tax cut to offset the recent rise in Social Security taxes.

Ingram and Hodges will meet Friday night for their fourth televised debate during the runoff, and Hodges denied cancelling any other debates. Autry later said Hodges had declined one offer for debate time in Greensboro, since other debates were scheduled at High Point and Winston-Salem stations in the same viewing area, but had cancelled none.

Ingram also said he opposed deregulation of natural gas while Hodges favored it. Hodges has said he opposes immediate deregulation but supports gradual deregulation.

In his prepared statement, Ingram repeated his theme that Hodges is tied to the banking and insurance industries. "He is attacking me just like the banking and insurance industry has been attacking me the last five years," Ingram said. "This shows his colors and connections with these industries." Bernish said the loans questioned by Ingram, amounting to $350,000, were secured with Hodges' net worth. Federal spending records show Hodges has not obtained any loans from NCNB.

At his first news conference here, Ingram said he planned a series of 30-minute television shows in five cities this weekend. Aides said there would also be a number of short commercials shown between now and the election.

Ingram, who has reported spending a little more than $40,000 compared to $1 million by Hodges, said he may take out personal loans to cover late expenses.

Recall Order On Products

WASHINGTON (AP) — The federal government says it's recalling 14.1 million Carnation brand Breakfast Bars and Slender Diet Meal Bars because some may contain pieces of wire.

While some of the products may still be on store shelves, all of them have been reclaimed from warehouses, the company said. The Food and Drug Administration said Wednesday it had not confirmed the company's report and the recall was still in effect.

A spokesman for the Los Angeles-based company, George Wilkins, said, "We do not believe there is any significant health hazard."

He said the wires, "about a quarter-inch long and the thickness of a paper clip," apparently got into the processed bars through a contaminated shipment of raw material.

FDA spokesman Wayne Pines agreed that the wire "is not likely to cause adverse health consequences."

The agency identified the recalled products as 4.3 million Carnation breakfast bars in chocolate crunch, chocolate chip, peanut butter and granola flavors and 9.8 million Carnation Slender Meal Bars for Weight Control in chocolate, vanilla and cinnamon flavors.

The breakfast bars bear the code: KC806 through KC810, KC813 and KC814. The diet bars bear the codes KB821 through KB826 and KC801 through KC804.

Wilkins suggested that consumers return these products to the place of purchase.

PTL Network And 'Moonies' Join In Challenging State Law

By MONTE PLOTT
Associated Press Writer
CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — The PTL Television Network and the controversial Unification Church, whose followers are often called "Moonies," are partners in a challenge to a state law dealing with solicitation of donations.

But it is a strained alliance between two wealthy religious organizations, especially in the eyes of PTL officials. As one lawyer said at a court hearing last week, it is "a marriage of convenience which has not been blessed by either church."

The two organizations, which both rely almost entirely upon donations for income, are challenging the constitutionality of a state law that requires a license for organizations to seek money from non-members.

PTL is a Charlotte-based organization that syndicates religious television programs throughout the United States and several foreign countries. Last summer, PTL said it was getting an average of $1.5 million monthly in donations.

The Unification Church, which some critics say is a cult that brainwashes its members, is headed by the Rev. Sun

Myung Moon, a Korean who lives on a sprawling estate in Tarrytown, N.Y. The government is investigating allegations that the church may have links to the South Korean government, but church officials deny those allegations as well as charges that the church engages in brainwashing.

Lawyers for both organizations and the state argued their cases at a hearing in Charlotte last week, and Superior Court Judge Sam Ervin III promised a ruling by next week.

Officials of PTL, which originally filed suit challenging the law last year, mince no words in expressing their unhappiness that the Unification Church was permitted to join the suit.

"We are not happy in being placed in this situation with them," PTL vice president Bob Manzano said after the hearing last week.

"We don't share any of their philosophy or beliefs. We're not comfortable in this situation."

PTL fought the Unification Church's joining in the suit. After a judge ruled in November that the church had as much at stake as PTL and could join the action, Manzano said the Unification Church's intervention "only muddies the waters" and could affect the credibility of PTL's action.

Kevin McCarthy, state director of the Unification Church in North Carolina, said Wednesday that he's sorry PTL officials feel that way but "there's no reason to. I don't feel uncomfortable with them."

"If we are all people that believe in God, we should be concerned about each other. Maybe our theology is a little different, though," McCarthy said.

The Unification Church, which claims about 100 members in North Carolina, entered the PTL's legal action because of concern over infringement on religious freedom, according to McCarthy.

"I haven't communicated very much with PTL but I catch their drift every once in a while," he said. "I know they're a little upset. I guess they think we're trying to jump on their bandwagon but we're not. If we had tried to file a suit on our own, we would have been told that one was already going on in Charlotte. So I guess to save taxpayers money, they (court officials) let us join together."

PTL officials have said they would prefer to separate from the Unification Church in their legal action, and McCarthy said his organization may take that route if PTL's legal action bogs down over the definition of church membership.

"We're anxious to go our own way," he said. "PTL is trying to attack (the law) on two issues — that membership issues don't apply to them and that it's unconstitutional. We're only interested in constitutionality."

"We'd be more than happy to take the burden of that case on our shoulders," McCarthy said.

Active U.S. Role In Africa Pondered

By LARRY HEINZERLING
Associated Press Writer
JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Two outgunned African movements are fighting a lonely struggle against Soviet arms and Cuban troops in an attempt to topple the Marxist government of Angola. U.S. officials have discussed the possibility of sending aid to the two guerrilla forces but President Carter has not yet decided whether to ask Congress to repeal a prohibition against any such action. White House spokesman Jody Powell said Wednesday in Washington.

Together the two guerrilla groups claim the political-tribal support of roughly half the six million people of one of black Africa's potentially richest nations.

They are the loosely allied National Union for the Total Independence of Angola, known by its Portuguese initials as UNITA, the stronger of the two movements; and the National Front for the Liberation of Angola.

They oppose President Agostinho Neto's Popular Movement or the Liberation of Angola which took power in a three-way civil war in 1975 with massive Soviet military support spearheaded by Cuban troops. The war broke out after Angola gained independence from Portugal.

Once the jewel of Portugal's African empire, "revolutionary" Angola today is in economic shambles despite vast wealth in oil, diamonds, iron and other minerals and a once booming coffee crop. There have been recurring but unconfirmed reports that Neto is in poor health with either a heart condition or cancer. He is 55.

UNITA is led by Jonas Savimbi, 44, who enjoys the strong support of his fellow Ovimbundu tribesmen in south-central Angola. The estimated two million Ovimbundu are the largest ethnic group in the tribally torn country, comprising about 33 percent of the population.

The National Front, UNITA's ally of convenience, is the oldest liberation movement in Angola, founded by Holden Roberto in 1954 and then called the Angolan People's Union. It was initially formed to advance the interests of the estimated two million Bakongo people in northern Angola, which remains Roberto's political stronghold.

The Bakongo overlap into neighboring Zaire and the Congo Republic and are descendants of the largest tribal kingdom in pre-colonial Africa.

Neto's Popular Movement draws most of its support from the estimated 1.5 million Mbundu people of north-central Angola stretching from Luanda, the capital, eastward.

The Popular Movement clings to power thanks to the estimated 19,000 Cuban troops and some 6,000 Cuban, East European and Soviet advisers helping his Marxist regime.

Western intelligence sources recently described Neto as "desperate" but unwilling to seek a political solution to what is essentially a tribal war now in its third year.

Western analysis say UNITA has destabilized much of the southern third of the country. There also have been recent reports of heavy fighting in northern Angola.

At one point in the civil war in 1975, U.S. arms supplied by the Central Intelligence Agency were reaching UNITA and the National Front via Zaire, which provided bases for Roberto's movement. Savimbi insists on operating inside Angola without external bases.

UNITA also received direct South African military support for a period in 1975.

Savimbi and Roberto are believed to be still receiving secret support from South Africa, France and Zaire.

Savimbi has repeatedly called for Western aid in the form of arms to match the firepower of the Soviet-supplied Popular Movement.

"No one can assure us that tomorrow (the Soviets and Cubans) will not intervene in another independent country," he remarked two years ago. "The face Russia is showing in Angola should be a warning to the continent."

Water Wiggles No Big Health Hazard

BOONE, N.C. (AP) — Look closely in that glass of water. See anything?

Some Boone residents are scrutinizing their water these days because tiny baby waterflies have been floating into town from Boone's 15-acre municipal reservoir.

Every spring and fall, adult waterflies — mosquito-like insects that don't bite — deposit their eggs in the 40-million-gallon lake. Last fall's egg crop turned into larvae a few weeks ago.

Because Boone doesn't have a water filtration system, the larvae — about twice as big as a pinhead — have been getting into sinks, bathtubs and glasses of drinking water.

"They're a common problem," said Charles Apperson, N.C. State University entomologist. Waterfly larvae turn up in reservoirs across North Carolina, and there's really nothing to get excited about, he said.

"Some people may be allergic to them — insect fragments — but they don't carry any diseases," Apperson said.

The larvae that didn't get swept into the town's water system are hatching into adult waterflies and eventually all the larvae will either hatch or be carried off.

Boone water superintendent Jack Austin and county and state health officials say there's nothing to worry about.

"Most people don't spend time inspecting their water. And these things are so small, most people couldn't see them anyway."

He acknowledged that a few residents have noticed something funny in the water and he shot a double-dose of chlorine into water processing tanks to kill the bugs.

Two Collisions Here Yesterday

An estimated $1,275 property damage resulted from two separate collisions involving three cars on Tenth Street, 100 feet West of the Monroe Street intersection yesterday.

Police reported cars driven by Jill Alfreida Ebron of River Bluff Apts. and Wilber Hardee of 1207 Franklin St. collided about 5:53 p.m., causing an estimated $425 damage to the Ebron car and $525 damage to the Hardee vehicle.

At 6:10 p.m., officers said, a car driven by Thomas David Haigwood of 953 Shady Ln. collided with the Hardee car which was stopped on the roadway awaiting a wrecker to pull it from the scene of the first mishap.

Damage from the second collision, investigators reported, was set at $50 to the Hardee car and $275 to the Haigwood vehicle.

Spoletto USA Launches Its 2nd Season Today

CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP) — Spoletto USA opens today for a second season — one that will cost nearly twice as much as last year's premiere and one its supporters say will be of even higher artistic quality.

The arts festival opens with ceremonies at noon at the College of Charleston. What follows will be two and a half weeks of operas, plays, concerts, and other cultural activities.

Last year, conductor Gian Carlo Menotti expanded his 20-year-old arts festival from Spoleto, Italy, across the Atlantic Ocean to Charleston.

The cost for the 12-day debut was $884,000. This year, the festival will run six days longer and cost $1.5 million.

Almost 100,000 visitors are expected to witness this historic port city during the festival.

"Menotti said last year he brought Spoleto to Charleston. This year, he said, Charleston has brought Menotti and Spoleto to itself," said Theodore S. Stern, chairman of the Spoleto USA Steering Committee, during a news conference Wednesday.

A labor dispute which had threatened to cancel the festival's opening was resolved only last week when the National Labor Relations Board announced that Spoleto and the American Guild of Musical Artists had reached an out-of-court settlement.

The guild had put Spoleto on its "unfair list," asking that none of its members appear at Spoleto, because the non-union Westminster Choir of Princeton, N.J., was scheduled to perform.

The guild wanted Spoleto to drop the choir, but Menotti said he would cancel the entire event rather than yield to the union's demand.

Details of the settlement were not released. The Dance Theatre of Harlem canceled their performance because of the labor dispute. The Phe Zulu Theatre Company of South Africa will appear instead.

This year's Spoleto has been plagued by cancellations, perhaps most notably that of Leonard Bernstein. Eight-thousand persons had pressed for 1,200 available seats at the Bernstein concert. But the conductor had to back out six weeks ago because of the critical illness of his wife. He has been replaced by duo-pianists Anthony and Joseph Parratore.

Jazz singer Mel Torme canceled in a contract dispute and Geraldine Page backed out of her appearance in Tennessee Williams' new play, Creve Coeur.

Despite the cancellations, the festival still has an impressive lineup of artists, such as pianists Emanuel Ax and Rudolf Firkušny. The Netherlands Dance Theatre, Ella Fitzgerald, and performances, such as Verdi's La Traviata, Samuel Barber's Vanessa, Ballets Felix Blaska, a two-day celebration of music of Leos Janacek and a Menotti-directed production of two of his shorter operas — Martin's Lie and The Egg.

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Like the weather, everybody talks about the shortage of good writers for television but nobody does anything about it.

Until now, Danny Hanold, executive producer of ABC's "Barney Miller," is making a small effort.

"Good writers are tough to find, and because I've been lucky with some students I thought it might help to give out some scholarships for comedy and dramatic writing," said Arnold.

He is setting up five $1,000 annual scholarships for students who will be selected from the 72 universities that offer theater arts programs.

"Television needs some people who have a little adrenalin flowing and are willing to work as hard as you have to to keep the quality high," said Arnold, who himself labors night and day over the hit comedy.

"The level of television is determined by a writer's enthusiasm, his creative energy and the work he is willing to put into it."

Working with Arnold are two 27-year-old writers he has developed, Tony Sheehan and Kenhold Weege. Sheehan is now producer and Weege is associate producer.

Arnold also has an arrangement with ABC to try out new writers. They are given assignments, and if it doesn't work out ABC picks up the cost. If the scripts are useable, Arnold pays for them.

Television's enormous appetite for material demands a regular influx of writers. Yet, neither the networks nor the studios seem to be willing to develop programs to encourage new writers. The writers Guild of America does have such a program for minorities.

"I don't think the major organizations are that interested in finding writers because their policy-making boards are interested in selling a product," said Arnold.

"They're not concerned with what it takes to make that product, although they will put a successful writer under contract."

Arnold said young writers feel discouraged by the industry's attitude, he said. "The kids in college feel the business is not interested in them and that the doors are closed. I've tried to disabuse them of that idea."

Another discouraging factor is that television pays less than movies, the average TV writer makes between $40,000 and $50,000 a year, which is only one-fourth to one-half of what a movie writer gets for one script.

"The economics of TV is such that if you write a pilot that you don't reap the bonanza at the box office," he said. "And if you write a pilot that becomes a hit series you don't make any real money unless it stays on at least five years."

Ramblin' Raft Race Is One Big Party

ATLANTA (AP) — "Truly, it's just one big drunk party. That's all it is," said a four-year veteran of the Annual Ramblin' Raft Race on the Chattahoochee River north of downtown Atlanta.

Between 300,000 and 400,000 turned out last Saturday to watch or participate in the 10th annual free-for-all down a nine-mile stretch of the river, with Cobb County District Attorney Tom Charron watching closely. Charron had threatened to seek a court order against future events because of litter, environmental damage, fighting, drugs and drunkenness. The beer and tequila flowed, some injuries occurred at a bridge construction site and a few tempers may have gotten lost in the heat and frenzy, but Charron said the rafters' performance this year eased his concern somewhat.

"We had a lot of overdoses, stubbed toes and things along this line," he said. But he added, "Most of the kids were very happy, very tired and very cooperative."

Lisa Sharpe and Bob Roarty were there for more than rafting. In a contest sponsored by radio station WQXI, they won the privilege of being married aboard a raft at the Powers Ferry Landing.

Veteran rafter Michael R. Nolan commented, "It's almost getting too big. But it's still beautiful. It's a real mellow trip to go down the river. It's a good feeling here — one of the few things left where all these people can get together and have some fun."

THEY DID — A couple recited their marriage vows afloat a raft in the 10th Annual Ramblin' Raft Race Saturday on the Chattahoochee River. The couple, aboard the raft at left, was selected from a group who entered a radio station's contest to select a couple willing to be married floating down the river. The bride and groom wore traditional wedding attire with the exception of sneakers for better footing on the raft's deck. (AP Laserphoto)

Find School Costs Soar

WASHINGTON (AP) — School costs rose 56 percent in the United States from 1971 to 1976, with the bills climbing even in the 36 states that experienced declines in enrollment, a government study says.

"States with declining enrollment exhibited virtually the same percentage increase in per student expenditures as states with rising enrollment," said the study by the National Institute of Education.

It said this resulted from four factors: rising prices, a 6.8 percent increase in the number of classroom teachers, fixed charges and the traditional ways the public schools deliver services.

The number of pupils in public schools during these five years, from 45.9 million to 44.7 million. The only states where enrollment grew were: Alaska, Arizona, Colorado, Florida, Idaho, Massachusetts, Montana, Nevada, New Hampshire, New Mexico, North Carolina, Texas, Utah and Virginia.

The cost increases ranged from a high of 95.2 percent in Alabama to a low of 16.4 percent in Hawaii, according to the report on "Declining Enrollments: The Challenge of the Coming Decade."

Speaking of Your Health...

Lester L. Coleman, M.D.

The Young Alcoholics

A significant letter from an unidentified teen-ager highlights some of the dangers of adolescent drinking. He said: "I first tasted beer when I was 12 years old. I hated it. By 13 I loved it. I drank it a lot. I couldn't get enough of it.

"My parents didn't know where all the beer in the refrigerator disappeared to. I did. They drank so much beer themselves it was hard to keep track of it. By the time I was 15, they began to wonder why the vodka bottle was empty so quickly. They didn't know, but I did."

This is only a fragment of the story of a youngster who didn't believe it could happen to him. He really didn't think it was that easy to become "hooked" on alcohol. He found out.

So have almost one million teen-agers in the United States, grade school and high school students, who are considered hard-core alcoholics. And that ominous number is rapidly rising.

Parents, doctors and sociologists now recognize that alcohol in all its forms is the new drug that threatens the lives and happiness of teen-agers and young adults in high schools and colleges everywhere.

This newer drug craze (and alcohol is a dangerous drug) has crept up slowly, until it has become a major health hazard. It's not difficult to see why, for alcohol is easily available. Even children too young to buy it can get it in ingenious ways. Usually, the home bar is not difficult to tap. That's for starters.

Alcohol is relatively inexpensive. A few chipped-in dollars can buy enough beer, cheap wine or liquor to "bomb" a whole class at a school gathering.

This is as good a time as any to mention the many automobile fatalities, broken bones and fractured skulls suffered by "fast drinkers" on their way home. These do not include the thousands of innocent victims who are killed or injured by drunks, old and young, by the lethal weapon of the irresponsible automobile driver.

It is absolutely essential that all adults, parents, doctors and educators, combine their energies and their talents to make the teen-ager knowledgeable about the damage that can be caused by uncontrolled alcohol intake. Liver disease, brain damage, heart disease and stomach ulcers are only a few of the possible aftereffects of excessive drinking.

It has been shown that more than 94 percent of illicit drug users also had been beer, wine and hard liquor drinkers.

Promising careers and productive lives can be demolished if teen-agers are allowed to succumb to the temptation of alcohol. We owe them all our efforts to interrupt this mass epidemic.

Hairdresser, Bartenders In Special Course

By BOB RAST
Associated Press Writer
EL CAJON, Calif. (AP) — Workshops are springing up nationwide to train bartenders and hairdressers as on-the-job counselors to steer troubled patrons away from depression and suicide toward professional help.

There was a time when bartender LeRoy Sundquist preferred not to lend an ear to his customers' woes. And cosmetologist Kathy Spiller used to come home each night with her head ringing with her customers' personal grief. Now they both are willing listeners.

It's partly because of a program that has trained about 115 Southern California hairdressers and about 20 bartenders in counseling skills enabling them to handle crisis situations.

The workshop was launched in 1976 with a $35,000 state Department of Health grant to Crisis House in the San Diego suburb of El Cajon. Participants are now applying their paraprofessional talents in beauty salons and bars throughout California.

"It's easier to just sort of pacify them (customers) by listening," said Sundquist, 25, of La Mesa and manager of a San Diego bar.

Many of the problems he hears involve domestic problems, says Sundquist, and most of those relate to money or fights with a spouse.

Andy Thompson, 33-year-old director of Crisis House's Community Training Program, said in a recent interview that bartenders and beauticians are trained not to give advice or engage in any form of moralizing or preaching.

Instead, they are taught to listen and, when appropriate, refer troubled patrons to community service agencies dealing with drug and alcohol abuse, mental health counseling, suicide intervention and family or divorce counseling. Cosmetologist Spiller says that before she took the course, her customers "were fighting to solve their problems and I was fighting to solve mine — nothing was being accomplished."

Participants are trained to recognize various suicidal symptoms, including low self esteem, general depression and negative outlook.

"I had a couple of people who were really on the verge of suicide," the hairdresser said. "But they talked it through and decided there was a lot left to life."

Paraprofessional counseling training for bartenders and beauticians started in Wisconsin in 1974 as part of a program by the Mental Health Association of Racine.

"A tavern is a non-threatening setting for people who have problems," said Ruth Weyland, then director of the agency.

"Bartenders hear more problems than a minister does. It boils down to them doing what they've done for years — but being a little more aware."

Thompson says he knows of similar programs in at least eight states, including Wisconsin and North Dakota.

He hopes to spread the idea when he explains paraprofessional counseling to delegates to a beauty salon administrators and owners convention in Colorado early this summer.

Drug-Solicitor Is On The 'Up And Up'

PULLMAN, Wash. (AP) — Dr. Don Galpin solicits street drugs from around the country, but it's all on the up-and-up.

The associate professor of pharmacy at Washington State University is coordinator of the university's street drug analysis laboratory.

Students in Galpin's classes have analyzed over 308 illicit drug samples annually for the past five years as part of their education.

The lab gives students an idea of what is sold on the street and how to approach the drug problem, Galpin said. All correspondence with the college is confidential. Anyone who wishes to have an analysis done on a one-dose sample of any drug can send the sample to Galpin with a serial number from a dollar bill, and within a week call the lab and learn the results of the analysis by identifying the serial number.

Donors are asked to submit some information along with the drug. It helps students know what the drug is supposed to be, the physiological effects, the method of administration, the street value and where the drug was purchased.

Galpin said most of his "clients" are dissatisfied drug users who have been disappointed by the effect of a drug they purchased.

"So we're probably not getting a true representation of what's really on the street," he said.

Many of the drugs received by the lab come from a similar lab at the University of Washington in Seattle. Others have come directly to Pullman from as far away as Pennsylvania.

A majority of the drugs tested turn out to be amphetamines or speed, Galpin said.

Cocaine samples have increased recently, Galpin noted, indicating a rise in the popularity of the drug. He said most of the LSD samples examined in the lab have been genuine, and most of the marijuana has been unadulterated.

The lab may soon be able to test marijuana for herbicide contamination.

"We're trying to get set up for paraquat analysis, but I'm afraid that if we do, we'll be swamped with requests," Galpin said.

When a donor calls to check on a sample, lab workers are prevented from making any qualifying analysis of the drug.

On a marijuana sample, for example, Galpin's students can identify the drug as marijuana, indicate if it was mixed with any other substance and advise on the danger of the analyzed drug.

"But we won't say if it's high quality marijuana or not," Galpin said. "We don't intend on becoming somebody's quality control lab."

Another common donation to the lab is phenylcyclidine, or PCP, a drug originally intended to be an animal tranquilizer.

"People just don't know how much of this stuff they're getting," Galpin said. "We had one sample in here intended as a single dose for a human being that would be more suitable for a horse."

Some choose to hand carry the samples to the university, Galpin is noted for his integrity.

"I may talk to them personally, but I won't take any names down, only the serial number of a bill. My purpose is scientific. I'm not interested in working for the police, and I will not go to court against someone," he said.

"The drug culture thinks it's great. Of course, some people think if drug users are going to break the law then let them take their chances, but no one has voiced any strong objections," he said.

Pole Vaulter's Travel Problem

By BUCKY ALBERS
Dayton Journal Herald

DAYTON, Ohio (AP) — Airline reservation agents cringe when they see Larry Jessee coming. So do cab drivers and bellhops.

It's not that Jessee has a bad temperament. Or bad breath. It's the baggage he brings with him.

Jessee is a pole vaulter. The primary tool of his trade doesn't fit in a gym bag. He must carry his poles wherever he competes.

When some airline people see those 16½-foot poles, they treat Jessee as though he's John Ringling North trying to check one of his circus elephants.

Often they are absolutely right. A 16½-foot item won't fit in a 15-foot compartment without some encouragement.

While most passengers are concerned only about what time a plane departs when they check the timetable, Jessee must examine the fine print. He has to be concerned about what kind of plane he's on.

"If it's not one of the big ones, a 747, a DC10 or an L1011, it's gotta be a stretch 727 or a 707," he said on a visit to his parents in Miamisburg, Ohio.

"The poles won't fit on the smaller planes."

Making a reservation on the proper aircraft doesn't always solve the problem for the 26-year-old, globe-trotting Jessee.

"What happens sometimes is that you're sitting in the airport and they announce: 'We've had an equipment change.' That's when I go crazy," he said.

But getting the poles aboard airplanes is just half the battle for the El Paso, Tex., resident, last year's national AAU indoor champion.

Since the poles won't fit on your basic baggage conveyor, Jessee usually finds them at some place other than the usual baggage claim area ... with the bicycles, dogs, surfboards and sousaphones.

Transporting them by car is yet another hassle.

At home, Jessee hooks them on the side of his car. But that doesn't always work either.

"Two weeks ago, I dropped them while I was going down the main street. Six cars ran over them. Three of the poles broke," he said.

Cab drivers always don't react favorably to a 16½-foot pole.

"Most of the cabs in Europe have racks on top, but here, in the United States, we have to wrap towels around both ends of the poles and close the hood and trunk lid on the ends of the towels. Some cab drivers don't like to do it. They're afraid we're gonna get a ticket," said the vaulter.

Can you imagine a bellhop trying to maneuver the poles through the revolving front door of a hotel? Obviously, Jessee can't take the poles to his room. Not on the elevator, anyway.

Back To Prison For Mitchell

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ending five months of freedom, former Attorney General John N. Mitchell is scheduled to return to prison in Alabama on Friday.

Since his release last Dec. 28 from Maxwell Air Force Base prison near Montgomery, the 64-year-old Mitchell has undergone operations twice — to repair a weakened artery in his abdomen and for hip surgery.

Mitchell is serving a sentence of one to four years for his involvement in the Watergate cover-up and for lying under oath to a grand jury. He becomes eligible for parole June 20.

Julian Bond To Seek 3rd Term

ATLANTA (AP) — State Sen. Julian Bond, who was a major figure in the civil rights movement during the 1960s, has decided he would rather remain a politician than become a television commentator.

Bond, 38, who had said earlier this year that he was negotiating with ABC television for a job as a host on a projected magazine-type program, announced Wednesday that he will seek a third term in the Georgia Senate.

"I look forward to an exciting campaign," Bond said.

Rural Hospital Ensnarled In Gov't Red Tape

By DAN CHISZAR
DENVER (UPI) — No one knows better how government red tape can ensnarl a small rural hospital than Dr. Mario Ramirez of Rio Grande City, Texas — population 5,720. Ramirez once owned a 21-bed hospital in Roma, Texas — population 1,400. For 10 years, it was the only hospital for three counties with a total combined area of 3,350 square miles and a population of about 27,000 persons. "Then came Medicare and Medicaid and government regulations," said Ramirez. The doctor was told his hospital must have registered nurses on duty around the clock. It needed a registered pharmacist, a dietitian, a graduate record librarian. Ramirez had to find a certified public accountant. The payroll tripled. Federal regulations did not take into account patient bad debts.

Ramirez was told the century-old stone building needed an outside metal fire escape, fire doors, a fire sprinkling system, a new power generator, humidifiers and a defibrillator monitor for the operating room. The hospital closed.

Had Ramirez been like most rural physicians encountering such problems, he would have moved. But Ramirez family had lived in Starr County for 200 years. "I never considered any other career except medicine; I never thought of practicing anywhere else except there," he said. So, Ramirez got himself elected county judge. "I realize the only way we could build a county hospital for our community was through personal political involvement," he said April 6 at the American Medical Association's 31st National Convention on Rural Health.

"One of our first official projects was to appoint a committee from all political factions and with wide area representation to help work on a plan for a new county hospital."

The county got a state grant for 90 percent of the money needed, and Ramirez and his committee convinced the community to vote in favor of establishing a hospital district.

A 50-bed hospital in Spanish architecture opened Feb. 15, 1975 three miles west of Rio Grande City, 10 miles from the old hospital. The new facility has been operating successfully ever since. Ramirez, who served on the AMA's Committee on Health Care for the Poor for nearly five years, still feels the sting of government regulations causing his old hospital to close. "In this case, government regulations were counterproductive to cost containment and to patients' access to health care," he said at the conference in Denver.

His assessment of the old hospital: "I felt that we were providing better than adequate care," he said. "Our maternal mortality during its entire existence was zero, and our infant mortality was less than half that of the state. Our overall morbidity and mortality was completely comparable with state averages."

Ramirez said the national guidelines for health planning, especially an 80 percent occupancy requirement, would have closed 200 small hospitals in Texas alone.

"As originally proposed, health care in rural areas would have suffered greatly," said Ramirez. "Many persons would have been forced to go to urban centers for basic services that should be provided at home. Physicians would probably have followed the migration of the hospitals to urban areas and thus aggravated the shortage of physicians in rural areas. "Fortunately, public outcry was such that the regulations had to be remanded," he said. "The new revised guidelines still pose some problems. There are many smaller communities that are going to require exception to the 80 percent annual occupancy standards and although they probably will qualify, the red tape required will be enormous."

What does Ramirez recommend to save the small rural hospitals in America? Certainly not more federal regulation. He disagrees with advocates of a national health service, consumer control over a health care system, replacing medical fees with salaries for physicians, and other suggestions advocating a major reorganization of the nation's health care delivery system.

"How much more taxation can the people of our country endure?" said Ramirez. "Statistics have shown that bureaucratic control rarely improves quality or efficiency and that costs usually soar."

"These advocates propose to kill private incentive and initiative. They want to use rural America as a testing ground and a stepping stone. Certainly there are many inequities now between metropolitan and rural health services. Much needs to be changed. But would it not be best to improve on our present system than to destroy it?"

Pioneer Space Satellite Helps Communication

By RONALD P. GALLAGHER
ROTTERDAM, N.Y. (UPI) — When he comes to work on wind-swept Crawford Hill each day, Jim Lewis tunes in the West Indies, Antarctica and National Aeronautics and Space Administration stations dotting the world.

His office looks a little like a golf ball perched atop a concrete-block cube. Lewis works at General Electric's Radio-Optical Observatory, an unpretentious one-story building known to radio experimenters around the world as GE-1. Atop it is a round, white balloon that houses two dish antennas and a spiral one that looks like a ray gun from "Star Wars."

Inside the cube is a tangle of dials, meters, do-dads and gadgets strung together with cables and labeled with plastic tags. It is one of a group of sophisticated experimental stations that are leading the way into a new era of satellite radio communications.

When it's fully developed, the system will provide a network of instant communication that will allow, say, an ambulance attendant to converse with a doctor at any hospital or put every trucking or bus company in touch with its vehicles anywhere in the nation.

While the limitations vary, it's generally true that conventional mobile radio systems cannot be used reliably past line-of-sight range — seldom more than 100 miles.

Vivid Colors In Plant's Interior

MILWAUKEE (AP) — At a plant which manufactures buried cable closures for the telecommunications and power industries, the outlook is bright.

What may sound like a financial forecast actually is a description of the interior of the plant here. Gone is the institutional gray of heavy presses. In its place are "gogo gold" and "honey yellow." A hydraulic press is amber here and beige there. Heavy shears range from royal blue to scarlet.

A new employee is permitted to select his or her favorite hue and the machinery is repainted.

"Don't forget, our workers spend most of their waking lives in this plant," said Kenneth Huff, company president. "We try to stress the fact they are not computerized clock number to us."

The 30-year-old company employs about 300 workers here.

But with satellites stationed above the equator relaying hundreds of broadcasts simultaneously, vehicles equipped with relatively low-power radios can talk to a ground receiving station connected by phone line to anywhere on the earth.

"What we're trying to do is develop ways to apply satellites to find solutions to real human problems," Anderson said.

The latest experiments involve a very human, life-or-death situation — emergency medical care.

In the last 10 years, ambulance paramedics in urban areas have increasingly been equipped with radios for transmitting reports and electronic data about a patient's condition so a doctor can relay instructions on the use of life-saving drugs and apparatus.

But on the winding highways of New York's Adirondack Mountains, in boats on the Gulf of Mexico and in other remote areas, the victims of accidents often receive no help because radio communications are cut off.

GE-1, NASA and other systems may change that.

In one recent demonstration, Anderson and Lewis in their hilltop radio shack served as the link between a specially equipped ambulance in Speculator, N.Y., and state health officials in Albany.

It could just as easily have been a link to a hospital emergency room, with a doctor reading an electrocardiogram from a patient on a mountain-side and sending back treatment instructions during the crucial first minutes of a heart attack.

In another experiment, a Coast Guard helicopter carried a paramedic from Mississippi 30 miles out over the Gulf of Mexico to bring help to a simulated patient. On the other end of the satellite link was the paramedic's regular hospital in Hattiesburg, Miss.

A third experiment involved a federal Drug Enforcement Administration car that roamed the United States, sending signals to Crawford Hill by satellite. To demonstrate the system's pinpoint tracking capability, Anderson's people found the car's location on a map and then radioed the agents what they would see if they looked to the left.

Doctors Attempt Keep Up With Jogging Patients

By JOAN I. DUFFY
NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — Fat has turned the health food, spa and book industries into billion-dollar businesses.
 Now office workers, housewives and executives running marathons and crowding tennis courts are susceptible to the same elbow, knee and foot ailments that plague Chris Evert and Pete Maravich.
 Housewives and office workers have more trouble finding a family doctor qualified to treat them.
 "It's the evolution disease," says Dr. Fred Allman, director of the Sports Medicine Clinic in Atlanta. "In the days of manual labor, everyone was forced to exercise, then with automation this suddenly ceased, and it's taking a while for the medical profession to change to the alternate lifestyle."
 Allman, a former University of Georgia football player, met with nutritionists, physical therapists and other sports doctors at a clinic on athletic medicine during the Southern Surgical Congress in New Orleans.

 "Just 15 years ago it was rare to see a jogger running along the street," he said. "Now you can't go to any city without seeing them all over the place. It's a healthy change in the lifestyle, but medical education is lagging."
 He said doctors need post-graduate training to give advice on training and nutrition for their newly athletic patients.
 "A woman after giving birth needs a specific exercise routine with plenty of activity to return to the abdomen and pelvic muscles," Allman said. "But obstetricians won't admit their lack of knowledge in the area and end up telling most women they'll get enough exercise keeping house and looking after the baby."

As interest in fitness grows, Allman said doctors may have to be familiar with sports equipment — for example, what kind of track shoe best cushions tender Achilles' tendons or what cleat formation will help prevent knee wrenches.
 Allman also suggested physicians learn enough about common sports to do a little amateur coaching. Doctors with a knowledge of tennis forehands could help treat — even prevent — tennis elbow by checking a patient's swing.
 "For a long time patients were telling doctors that running hurt their knees," he said. "They no longer can use 'stop running' as a prescription."
 He said some medical schools are beginning to do courses relating to athletic injuries and exercise, but many doctors already in practice lack the knowledge to deal with patients who want to jog their way to health.

 Allman said heart specialists have learned a gradual increase in physical activity for heart attack victims can rehabilitate patients and strengthen the damaged organ.
 "My father had a heart attack years ago and was kept flat on his back for six months," said Dr. Mary Williams Clark, rehabilitation director of Children's Hospital in New Orleans. "Now in six days, they begin mild exercise and heart attack victims are jogging all over the place."
 Both doctors stressed the need for gradual, mild buildup in activity, for heart patients as well as the average flabby American.
 "No one should begin an activity they wouldn't mind doing at least three times a week for the rest of their lives," Dr. Clark said.
 Exercise may be the cure for the neophyte athlete's weight problem, but it won't happen overnight with one four-mile jog, she said.

 "The first six to eight weeks are the hardest, but if you can stick it out — and by that time you'll see some results — you'll be addicted," she said.
 Without proper conditioning, she said would-be jocks could end up with tennis elbow, shin splints, stress fractures and enough aches and pains to make them hang up their sneakers for good.

 "A gradual increase in stress — that's what produces results and the result is fitness," she said.

Cherry-Full Michigan Expects Bountiful Crop This Season

By MARCELLA S. KREITER
TRAVERSE CITY, Mich. (UPI) — Cherry lovers can expect another bountiful crop in Michigan this year, even if growing conditions have been the pits.
 "We expect a sizeable crop," said George McManus, a spokesman for the Agricultural Extension Service.
 He said a number of new sweet cherry trees were expected to come into production this season and could boost the sweet cherry crop to 50 million pounds.

 The size of the crop depends largely on a number of factors, he said, such as last year's drought and the severe winter.
 "What effect did last year's drought have on this year's crop? We don't know yet. There aren't a lot of buds on the trees. Less bloom can mean a smaller crop."
 Budding usually occurs after one year's crop is harvested. Because of last summer's drought, not as many buds as usual set, especially on farms where there was no irrigation.

 That isn't all bad though, McManus said, adding that usually buds are too thickly set for all of them to come into bloom anyway.
 Bill Harmon and his wife, Judy, who run a 200-acre cherry farm just northeast of Traverse City, expect a sizeable crop this year but some of their neighbors won't be as lucky.
 Harmon said severe storms destroyed a lot of cherry trees. He lost about 50 — that's half an acre — but he said many neighbors lost more.

Because of unseasonably cool weather so far this spring, this year's crop was not in bloom until about May 15. In other years, the crop has bloomed as early as mid-April.
 Few Michigan cherries find their way to the fresh fruit section of the grocery despite the fact the state is the biggest cherry producer in the nation. California, Oregon and Washington are the next largest producers.
 Almost all of the 55,000 tons produced annually in Michigan are canned, frozen or brined for use as maraschinos.
 The Michigan cherry crop represents 15 percent of all the fruit grown in the state. Total fruit production is valued at $78.2 million, with the cherry crop providing 34 percent of that figure, $26.8 million.
 "We grow our sweet cherries under a humid climate," McManus said. If the sweet cherries were allowed to ripen on trees for market, he said, they would split because of the humidity. So, they are picked early.
 "The only sweet cherries in Michigan are sold at roadside. We ship almost none for fresh market."
 The first cherry tree was planted west of Traverse City in 1911, but the industry didn't get off the ground until 1917 when the pitter was invented.

the biggest growth period right now," McManus said.
 Most of Michigan's cherries are sour Mont Morency. About 30 percent of the crop is several varieties of sweet cherries — Napoleon, Emperor Francis, Windsor, Schmidt and a number of lesser types.
 The maraschino cherry is used to top ice cream sundaes and float in a cocktail. It is this variety that has suffered from the Food and Drug Administration's ban on the use of Red Dyes Nos. 2 and 4.
 "The public expects a red cherry," McManus said. "Red 40 is too pink."
 McManus said the industry is experimenting with natural dyes, including juices from some sour cherries, but natural dyes tend to break down in light. "You can imagine what would happen if those cherries set on a grocery store shelf for a week or more," he said.
 Cherry growers have branched into other areas, McManus said. At least two wineries have opened within the last few years.
 And, he said, cherries have boosted tourism in the Traverse City area.
 "We think the cherry industry lends a lot to the environment, especially when the trees are in bloom."

Ingram Supports Tobacco Farmer

ROCKY MOUNT—Democratic United States Senate candidate John Ingram, campaigning in the Second Congressional District, said the tobacco stand of Secretary Joseph Califano of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare would wreck North Carolina's economy.
 "Not only would he destroy the Tarheel State's economy, he would wreck the national economy by disturbing the delicate balance of payments," said Ingram.
 Califano has proposed a massive anti-smoking campaign, including a $23 million advertising budget.
 "Califano make a bad mistake when he attacked the North Carolina tobacco farmer," said Ingram.
 "The government receives seven times as much as farmers earn from their tobacco crops," he said.
 Ingram said he would introduce a bill to cut the HEW Budget if he is elected to the Senate. "HEW is amassing too much power over our everyday lives," he said.
 Ingram said he would continue to work as hard for the people in the Senate as he has as State Insurance Commissioner. He has saved the people of North Carolina millions of dollars by disapproving rates and cutting rates—mobile tobacco barns by one-half and uninsured motorists by two-thirds.

Loneliest Diplomat In U.S.: From The Transkei

By JOHN F. BARTON
WASHINGTON (UPI) — Ngondi L. Masimini, minister at large for the Transkei in southern Africa, is the loneliest diplomat in the United States.

None of the nearly 140 countries represented in Washington has diplomatic relations with the Transkei except South Africa, which granted it independence October 26, 1976. And that link ended when the Transkei broke relations with South Africa recently because of a boundary dispute.

Consequently, Masimini is ignored by diplomats here, including some black envoys who know he has fought for some of their causes.

Since the United States doesn't recognize his country, he lives here modestly in a resident alien status, without the expensive frills and lavish life of his fellow diplomats.

Larger than Switzerland or Denmark, with a population of nearly three million, the Transkei has been shunned by the rest of the world in the belief — mistakenly, Masimini says — it is only a pawn of South Africa.

He blames pressure from Third World leaders for the Carter administration's failure to recognize the Transkei to date.

Black African leaders regard the Transkei as a child of South Africa's policy of granting independence to black enclaves so they can be denied South African citizenship.

Masimini strongly denies such charges, declaring the Transkei existed as a recognized territory long before the Republic of South Africa was formed in 1910.

Relaxing in his National Press Building office during a recent interview, the lanky, genial Transkeian produced maps of British and German origin — some from the Library of Congress and all dated in the 1800's — which clearly identify the area as the Transkei.

"We are not the creature of the apartheid homeland policy," he said in forceful English. "Unlike the others, we existed before as a nation, and they know it. We have proof."

Masimini spends his days trying to convince U.S. officials to recognize his country and American businessmen to invest in his land, which has abundant raw materials and several ports along its lengthy Indian Ocean coast.

Such action, he feels, would free the Transkei from South Africa's economic grip and convince other black Africans that majority rule can be achieved peacefully.

"You could help peaceful change in Africa by helping to make us a real showplace," he said. "It would enable us to be economically free, and prove that peaceful change works."

"Maybe we were too peaceful," Masimini said. "Perhaps if we had killed some whites we would have gotten a lot of world publicity, and everybody would recognize us now. Violence is the only thing that seems to get any attention."

"But we are not that way. We got our independence peacefully, and we want to stay that way," he said.

The Soviet Union and China have indicated some interest in the Transkei, Masimini said. But he said the Transkei would encourage them only as a last resort.

"We are much more oriented to the West. All our foreign associations, our education, our political institutions are rooted in the West."

"The apartheid system would crumble," if industrial powers would transfer their industries from South Africa to Transkei, Masimini said. Black laborers would move to the Transkei, and people would have an alternative to buying South African goods.

Masimini said jealousy is the real reason Third World leaders discredit Transkeian independence. "They fear Transkeian officials would rival their world reputations black leaders," he said.

"Who among them knows better than us what it is like to live under the South African pass laws?" Masimini asked. "Who knows better than us what apartheid is?"

Masimini bitterly resents charges the Transkeians should not have accepted independence under auspices of the homeland policy. "What would they have had us do? Stay under South African rule? We took our independence anyway we could get it."

"We are criticized for being economically dependent upon South Africa," he said. "Yet, these same people who criticize us will not help us develop so we don't have to be dependent upon them."

At 70 She's Built Two Houses; Plans A Third

INTERNATIONAL FALLS, Minn. (AP) — Sixteen years ago, a year after her husband's death, Bern Minter started building her first house.

Now, at age 70, she is completing her second home and making plans to build a third.

"I've liked working with wood ever since I was a kid," Mrs. Minter said. "Even when I was 10 or 12 years old, I'd build playhouses, furniture and things. I guess I really never stopped."

Mrs. Minter and her husband, Jack, were caretakers for Camp Koochiching near International Falls until his death in 1961. She started building her first house the following spring with the help of her son, John, and son-in-law, Buck Johnson.

"It grew from a 20-by-22-foot building in three stages to 1,400 square feet during the next 15 years," Mrs. Minter said. "I was the architect for the whole thing."

"I did everything I could to the house, including tearing out walls and putting in new doorways. When I got it all done, I still had ideas that I couldn't incorporate into that house. It meant that if I was going to use those ideas, I would have to build another house."

So she decided to build on the empty lot next door and drew up a house plan.

"It started out to be 26-by-30, and then I changed it to 30-by-30," she said.

The house has a basement with a woodworking shop, a recreation room and lots of storage areas. The first story has a complete living area with kitchen, bedroom, bath, utility, dining room and living room. Upstairs there are two bedrooms, a bathroom and a storage room.

Mrs. Minter designed the house, which sits on a rock overlooking Jackfish Bay and Rainy Lake, to take advantage of the winter sun.

"I missed that in the other house, so now I have all my big windows facing south," she said.

There is a lot of work left to do on the house — painting, shelves to be built, wallpapering, stairs and trim left to finish. Mrs. Minter laid her own oak flooring, tiled the kitchen, bricked in a hearth and did a lot of painting. She also makes her own rugs and

Pre-Pullman Sleeping Car

WASHINGTON (AP) — Although the railway sleeper car is still known as a Pullman, it was actually originated by another "sleeper" in the field of invention.

Theodore T. Woodruff, of Wauertown, N.Y., was granted patents for a special railway seat and couch in 1856. The next year — two years before George Pullman — Woodruff built a sleeping car with backing from friends, according to Intellectual Property Owners, Inc. (IPO), a non-profit group dedicated to strengthening the patent system to encourage innovation and creativity.

At first, the railroads were not interested, says IPO. Then, the New York Central allowed him to try his car on the New York-Buffalo night express, charging 50 cents for each of the 12 sleeping sections. With orders from the Pennsylvania Railroad in 1858, Woodruff began his operation in Philadelphia. He obtained additional patents, but sold his interest in the business in 1862.

On May 2, 1892, at the age of 81, Woodruff was killed by a speeding express train, long after Pullman had won a near-monopoly in the sleeping car business, says IPO.

drapes, does her own upholstery, strips and refinishes furniture and loves to do landscaping.

"I'm a person who likes to create something out of everyday, ordinary things, using materials that someone else would throw away," she said.

"I'm not a perfectionist and I'm proud of it. All the little imperfections in things give them more character."

Mrs. Minter says she has reached the point where she is "pretty well satisfied."

Trucking Couple Looks To Future Partnership

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — When Jackie and Rich Rosenbush get up in the morning they see each other, but the rest of the scenery changes nearly every day.

The Rosenbushs, 28-year-old trucking partners who move furniture all over the country, are part of the growing number of husband-and-wife trucker teams that is slowly changing the image of trucking as a job for hard, tough men.

Jackie was working in public relations when she and Rich were married seven years ago, but decided to give up that career so the two of them could work together.

"He told me if we don't do it together, we won't be together," she said. "I don't know of any other business where the divorce rate is higher. You can be gone for a month to six months, especially if you're a young driver.

"They might send you to L.A., and you'll be there for a while and then they might route you back through New York, with several other moves on the way back."

The Rosenbushs also said the money is good — a couple with their own truck can gross $60,000 in a year.

And the Rosenbushs haven't given up all of the luxuries of life. They have a stereo set and a color television set in the back of their truck, along with a double bed.

They say working together has made them depend on each other and appreciate each other for their individual skills.

Rich does all the driving because Jackie never learned to shift the gears on the shiny white truck with its chrome exhaust stacks and bumpers, 18 chrome hubcaps and polished aluminum gas tanks.

Jackie reads the maps. Rich, along with other men he hires, does the hard labor. While he carries, Jackie takes inventory and tags the furniture. She handles all the paperwork. He handles the labor problems and she specializes in the family problems.

Because wives are often left at home alone when the movers come, it's a comfort for them to have another woman around who knows what it means to pull up roots and move everything and everyone away, the Rosenbushs said. The wives are nervous and excited and confused, and that doesn't make for a smooth move.

"So I try to distract them and get their minds off moving by talking about the landscaping and the kids and things like that," Jackie said.

The working partnership also has brought the couple closer together in their marriage, Jackie said.

"Before we began driving together, we each used to do our own things on weekends," she said. "He'd hunt or fish and I'd shop and go to museums, and that was fine. But in a truck, we were forced to be together and we had to build a real marriage."

"And because of that we became very dependent on one another. We had to lean on each other when things got bad. It's not like you can just stop and say, 'Where should we go for dinner?' because you're there in a 6-by-8-foot cab and if tension builds up and you have an outburst, you can't run off to the bedroom and you have to resolve it then and there.

"Before this, it was harder for me to say 'sorry,' but we've both learned now."

However, the Rosenbushs don't plan to remain on the road the rest of their lives. They bought and moved into a house overlooking the Apple River, just north of Amery, Wis., about six months ago.

They say they eventually want to build a life with friends and neighbors and places to go and with some good hunting and fishing for Rich and a small business they can both run.

They don't know yet what that business will be, but they do know that they'll still be partners.

Big Savings By Nuclear Plant

OYSTER CREEK, N.J. (AP) — The nation's first large-scale commercial nuclear plant for generating electricity has saved the utility's customers more money than the original cost of the plant.

The 650-megawatt nuclear generating station, placed in operation here in 1969, cost $110 million to build. The savings in fuel costs since that time, as compared with the cost of oil, comes to about $300 million, reports William G. Kuhns, chairman of General Public Utilities Corporation, owner of the plant here. He points out that these fuel savings are automatically passed on to customers through the energy adjustment clause.

Yellow Pages Help Seniors

NEW YORK (UPI) — A major but little known section of the Bell System Yellow Pages lists organizations, clubs and programs geared toward senior citizens. Among them are local service centers, housing and apartments, lunch clubs, medical consultants, Salvation Army residences and daytime centers for the elderly.

But for questions about Social Security benefits and other federal, state and city programs, the places to look are under "Government United States" and the name of the state or city in which the seniors live. Most major city directories also list a Federal Information Center under the U.S. government heading. The centers' staffs answer questions and refer those they cannot handle to the proper agencies.
