

U.S. Inflation Rate Soars In April

By MICHAEL DOAN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A record increase in beef prices forced consumer prices up 0.9 percent in April, the largest rise in more than a year, the Labor Department said today.

The latest increase meant the annual rate of inflation for the past three months was 10 percent, the department said.

Beef prices jumped 6.6 percent in April, accounting for more than one-third of the 2.4 percent in grocery prices.

The 0.9 percent increase in the Consumer Price Index was the largest since February 1977, when prices rose by the same amount. The increase in beef prices surpassed the record 6.5 percent rise in May 1975.

Food prices have climbed steadily since the start of the year, but the latest report showed they were accelerating even faster. Prices for all foods and beverages were up 1.8 percent in April after rising about 1.2 percent in each of the three previous months.

Prices for fresh vegetables, which declined in March, rose 9.7 percent in April, led by an increase for lettuce. Since then, lettuce prices have started coming down, however.

Prices of pork, poultry, dairy products, sugar, candy and vegetable oils all increased more in April than in March or February. Prices turned downward for eggs, fresh fruit and coffee.

Another big contributor to inflation during April was rising housing expenses, which were up 0.9 percent, costs of home financing, taxes and insurance advanced 1.7 percent, while home maintenance and repair services rose 1.4 percent.

Home-purchase prices increased 0.5 percent and rent was up 0.7 percent.

Charges for natural gas and electricity each rose 1.5 percent in April, the third straight month of big increases.

Also showing sharp rises were furniture and bedding, up 1.1 percent; clothing, 1 percent; medical care, 0.7 percent; and dental fees, 0.6 percent.

The price of new and used cars went up 0.3 percent, and gasoline prices edged up slightly, the Labor Department said.

All figures are adjusted for normal seasonal variations in prices. The 0.9 percent increase in consumer prices followed gains of 0.8 percent in January, 0.6 percent in February and 0.8 in March. However, the prices last month were only 6.6 percent higher than in April 1977 because of a steady inflation picture at the end of last year.

The Consumer Price Index for urban consumers in April was 191.5, meaning it cost $191.50 to buy what $100 would buy in the base period of 1967.

The gloomy April report followed an Agriculture Department estimate Tuesday that consumer food prices will rise 8 percent to 10 percent this year, up from an earlier forecast of 6 percent to 8 percent.

Ingram Scores Upset In Runoff

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina Insurance Commissioner John Ingram turned his sights on Republican Sen. Jesse Helms after his populist campaign scored a stunning upset over Luther Hodges Jr. for the Democratic Senate nomination Tuesday.

"We think we have the people's support and that's all we need," Ingram said at an early victory celebration. "We will campaign on the same issues. We've said that the Democratic Party is strong in support, in finances, in organization and commitment to the people of North Carolina and the people of America."

Ingram won the right to face Helms, the state's first

GOP senator and a darling of the right wing, by overcoming a 14 percent deficit in the first primary.

Hodges led the primary four weeks ago, but was denied a majority. Ingram called for the runoff, although no state candidate had ever won after trailing more than 10 percent.

With complete returns counted, Ingram received 244,695 votes for 54.2 percent, while Hodges won 206,945 votes for 45.8 percent.

Ingram ran on his record in two terms as insurance commissioner, repeatedly battling insurance companies over rate increases. The fights led the state legislature to pass a bill last year that greatly diminished his control over auto coverage rates.

He constantly attacked the "big money-banking-insurance special interests" during the campaign and called Hodges, former chairman of North Carolina National Bank, a tool of those interests.

"The problem is it's not very sexy to be in the middle, to be moderate," Hodges lamented in his concession speech. "The far left and the far right have an answer for everything. But it's just not that easy."

Ingram scored a convincing victory across the state, winning 69 of the state's 100 counties. Hodges won 87 counties in the first primary, an eight-way race, and ran second in the rest. Hodges finished with 55,000 votes fewer the second time, while Ingram gained almost 75,000.

Hodges, without a job since he quit last summer to make his first run for public office, said his future plans were uncertain. "I will continue to serve the people of North Carolina somehow," he said.

The magnitude of Ingram's win shocked many political observers, and caught even Ingram's staff off guard. "I knew the momentum was building, but I thought it would be a little closer than it was," campaign manager Charles Webb said.

The difference was Hodges' inability to hang on to his support in most areas, and Ingram's increased vote from those who went to third-place-finisher Lawrence

Davis, a conservative, and fourth-place-finisher McNeill Smith, a liberal, originally.

Smith's home county of Guilford and Davis' home of Forsyth both switched from favorite sons to Ingram, while Hodges' home in populous Mecklenburg gave him a disappointing 2,600-vote margin.

After the results were clear Tuesday night, Hodges walked half a block from his hotel headquarters to congratulate his opponent in the occasionally bitter campaign. "I wish you well and I'm proud of you," Hodges said.

Gardner Survives His First Runoff

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer

Incumbent County Commissioner B. Alton Gardner survived the first runoff challenge of his career Tuesday as he defeated Walter E. Gaskins for the Fifth District seat on the Pitt board.

Gardner, a veteran of some 24 years on the Board of Commissioners, turned back Gaskins' runoff bid by a margin of 2,572 to 1,850, according to unofficial figures compiled by "The Daily Reflector."

The incumbent, who fell only a few votes shy of winning by a clear majority in the May primary, carried 21 of the county's 24 precincts yesterday as he retained his seat on the governing board.

The victory margin of 1,022 in the runoff compared with 1,751 in the first primary when voting was heavier and a third candidate shared in the overall returns.

Gardner piled up his victory edge Tuesday in several precincts, including Bethel (139-45), Chicod (103-35), Farmville (385-144), Greenville Seven (Elm Street Gym, 254-155), Greenville Eight (Willis Building, 222-156), Greenville Nine (Gardner Fire Station, 214-153), and Winterville (197-101).

Gaskins carried only Arthur (39-36), Ayden (174-163), and Grifton (147-110). The challenger resides at Rt. 1, Ayden.

A farmer and resident of Rt. 2, Ayden, Gardner represents the Ayden, Grifton and Swift Creek townships on the county board.

His election Tuesday gave him a new four-year term of office on the commission. Gardner currently serves as chairman of the six-member board

Pitt Voters With Ingram

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer

Pitt County voters followed the trend set statewide Tuesday as they gave John Ingram a surprising upset victory over Luther Hodges Jr. in the battle for the Democratic nomination to the U.S. Senate.

Ingram, who is currently serving as North Carolina's insurance commissioner, made a startling turnaround from the May primary balloting in both Pitt County and the state as he scored an impressive runoff win.

Based on unofficial tabulations compiled by "The Daily Reflector," Ingram received 2,602 votes in Pitt while Hodges, the son of the popular former governor, trailed with 2,222.

Hodges' who led a field of eight candidates in May but failed to gain a clear majority, carried only a handful of Pitt precincts yesterday as Ingram easily reversed his primary showing.

Ingram, campaigning as the "people's candidate," actually ran third in Pitt County in the May voting as he trailed both Hodges and Lawrence Davis and led in only three or four precincts.

With voting relatively light on Tuesday, Ingram topped the ballot count in 18 of the county's 24 precincts, including six of the nine polling sites in Greenville.

Heaviest support for Ingram was given in Ayden, where he gained a 191 to 144 margin. Greenville Five (American Legion Building), which voted 191 to 147 for Ingram, Greenville Eight (Willis Building), where he secured a 226 to 175 margin, and in Winterville where voters chose him by a 165 to 108 edge.

Hodges carried Chicod (70-68), Greenville Three (West Greenville Recreation Center), 83-38, Greenville Four (old West End Fire Station), 76-56, Greenville Six (Fifth Street Fire Station), 82-80, and Swift Creek, 62-58.

The absentee count also favored Hodges by a 39 to 14 margin.

Ingram, who repeatedly challenged Hodges' "special interests" and campaign spending, has two daughters and a son at East Carolina University.

The commissioner, a statewide winner with 54.2 percent of the overall vote, reported that he spent some $50,000 on his campaign while Hodges, former chairman of the board of North Carolina National Bank, spent over $1 million.

Pitt County voted in the neighborhood of only 4,800 yesterday out of Democratic registration of nearly 22,800.

SIGHT DISTANCE NOT GOOD?

I live on State Road 1521, the Station Mill Road. There is a train track on this road that is continuously creating accidents. Most people have either been hit or have come close to being hit by a train. It is impossible to see unless you come to a complete stop. We are concerned about this. B. H.

Hotline has received several inquiries about this railroad crossing. According to Gerald England, Division Traffic Engineer with the North Carolina Department of Transportation, the intersection will be cleared prior to the opening of school this fall. At the present time, the grass does not block the sight of an oncoming train, he said. England said that this a typical rural railroad crossing that motorists should approach with caution.

The six persons to be employed must be qualified for the CETA program by virtue of their length of unemployment or by being recently discharged veterans. Interested persons should contact the Employment Security Job Service in Greenville.

The Town welcomes assistance in identifying possible beautification projects. Building Inspector H. P. Norman said. Suggestions should be made to his office, 753-5921.

NATO Informally Talks African Security Force

By GEORGE GEDDA
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Key leaders of the Atlantic alliance are informally discussing possible joint action against future Soviet and Cuban actions in Africa, while focusing their formal meetings here on efforts to keep peace with the Communist military buildup in Eastern Europe.

Outside the State Department meeting rooms, North Atlantic Treaty Organization delegates were talking informally about formation of an African security force to combat the estimated 38,000 to 40,000 Cuban troops in Africa.

The two-day summit of NATO heads of state ends today.

Meanwhile, Patrick Caddell, President Carter's pollster, said the only issue that may emerge in this year's congressional elections is "the whole question of foreign policy and national defense. ..." But at this point the issue is "only a speck on the horizon," he said.

Carter set the tone for the informal talks when he emerged from a secret NATO session Tuesday and told reporters: "The general feeling (inside NATO) is that the Cubans have exceeded any bounds of propriety in having massive placement of troops in Africa and this certainly makes their claim to be a non-aligned country ridiculous."

Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance said no specific proposals on the Pan-African force were made but added the concept "is one we would like to consider."

"I certainly wouldn't rule out the possibility of some sort of economic assistance to such a force, but it's much too early to draw any conclusions on it," Vance said.

State Department spokesman Hodding Carter ruled out sending U.S. troops to Africa.

French sources reported that Carter and French President Valery Giscard d'Estaing discussed the force at the White House last Friday.

It came up again at a dinner Monday night of the foreign ministers of the United States, France, Great Britain and West Germany. Carter discussed it with West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt Tuesday morning.

Vance indicated without giving details that the United States has some leverage over the Cubans, who were accused by Carter of training the rebels who invaded Zaire's Shaba province earlier this month.

Officials have said the administration has ruled out withdrawing the U.S. diplomatic mission from Havana.

One idea discussed at the State Department involves U.S. radio propaganda campaign into Cuba to generate popular dissatisfaction with the government's Africa policies.

The campaign would inform the Cuban people of the deaths and illnesses of Cuban soldiers in Africa.

Lovesick Caller Is Put On Hold

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: A co-worker told me that a 23-year-old Philadelphia woman got such a wild crush on a 44-year-old guy who works as a guard at the Montgomery County Prison, that she called him on the phone 1,400 times in three months! She was supposed to have called him at his home 400 times in one week. Then he changed his phone number and she started calling him at the prison! Can you believe this, Abby?

This co-worker says that the guard actually filed a formal complaint against the woman. The judge fined her $300 and put her on probation for three months.

Will you please check this out and see if it's true, or is my co-worker just putting me on?

PENNA. PUT-ON

DEAR PENNA.: It's no put-on. It actually happened. The judge warned the lovesick young woman with telephitis that if she didn't quit calling the guard, she'd be sent to prison—but NOT to the one where that guard was employed.

DEAR ABBY: The daughter of a friend of mine was planning a large August wedding. However, those plans were quickly changed when the bride-to-be discovered she was pregnant.

So now the family has sent out announcements stating that their daughter was married in April—so the big wedding is off.

Under these circumstances, is a wedding gift in order? JUST ASKING

DEAR JUST: If your wedding gift means, "This is in repayment for your wedding invitation," then, of course, no gift is in order. But if it means, "Accept this gift along with our best wishes for your future happiness," then a gift is in order.

Today's Furniture Can Go Either Indoors Or Outside

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures Writer

The idea of moving outdoor furniture indoors at the end of a season has a lot going for it, something to think about when you purchase the pieces.

You don't need to store the bulky things, and you can get some good decorating mileage out of it if it is wisely chosen. It was an idea really begun by young people who couldn't afford the high cost of furniture. With lots of plants and posters and area rugs they could maintain an outdoor look all the year 'round.

Now the long-time-married crowd are planning to move bamboo, wicker and rattan from the patio and the redwood and wrought iron from the lawn to the living room and dining room after the season.

Does one need a $1,000 sofa and a $500 chair to decorate a beautiful home? Or isn't the idea to achieve beauty, comfort and sturdiness at a price you can afford?

One well-known millionaire and his wife did an entire home in painted wicker. A student with limited funds uses a painted wire spool as a table in the corner of a living room, with four director's chairs. In good weather he moves them out the sliding glass doors to his covered terrace.

Another student has a handsome apartment furnished with do-it-yourself plastic and plywood furniture. Do your own thing.

Adding Cheese To Raisin Bread Recipe

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

DEAR CECILY: I'd like a recipe for a yeast bread using a white cheese such as Samsoc which my wife and I usually have in the house to eat with fruit for dessert. So far all the cheese bread recipes I have call for cheddar. Because I have started making bread whenever I have the time and inclination to do so in the evening, it's not convenient — should I decide to bake cheese loaves — to go out then and buy cheddar to put in them. — PROFESSOR.

DEAR PROFESSOR: The following raisin cheese bread recipe was tested with the cheese you mention and with Muenster. It produces two loaves and they are good used with peanut butter, cold roast pork or ham for sandwiches. I also like to use the bread with an old-fashioned sandwich filling; finely chopped walnuts and green olives moistened with mayonnaise. — C. B.

RAISIN CHEESE BREAD
1 1/2 cups milk
1/4 cup butter or margarine

1 package dry yeast
4 1/2 cups (about) flour
1/4 cup sugar
3 teaspoons salt
1 egg
1 1/2 cups loosely packed grated (medium-fine) Muenster or Samsoc cheese
1 cup raisins
Egg yolk wash or melted butter

In a small saucepan heat the milk and butter until hot (120 to 130 degrees). In the large bowl of the electric mixer stir together the undissolved yeast, 1 1/2 cups of the flour, the sugar and salt. Add the milk mixture; beat at medium speed for 2 minutes, scraping bowl several times. Add the egg and 1 cup of the remaining flour; beat at medium speed for 2 minutes. Gradually stir in enough of the remaining flour to make a manageable dough. Turn out on a lightly floured surface and, working in about 1/4 cup more flour if necessary, knead until smooth and elastic — about 10 minutes. Place dough in a buttered bowl and turn to grease top. Tightly cover bowl with plastic wrap. Let rise in a draft-free warm place (75 to 80 degrees) until doubled — 1 to 1 1/2 hours. Punch down; turn out on a lightly floured surface; knead in the cheese and the raisins. Divide in half; shape each half into a loaf; place in two buttered 9 by 5 by 3-inch loaf pans. Cover and let rise as previously until doubled — 1 to 1 1/2 hours. Brush with the egg-yolk wash. Bake in a preheated 400-degree oven, on the rack below the center, until a rich golden brown — 35 minutes. Turn out on racks to cool. Makes 2 loaves.

Exercising In Graceful Way

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures Writer

Exercise and perspiration are not a necessary combination. In fact, if you take it easy, you'll enjoy the graceful feeling that goes with your body movements, well-known exercise teacher Barbara Pearlman, 36, advises women.

She is against the "huffing and puffing calisthenics school." It is not only exhausting but may be discouraging, she points out.

"The body is a miraculous machine and one must learn how to use it to get full benefits," she says. That means treating it kindly and exercising in a graceful fashion, she explained.

Mrs. Pearlman has built her reputation as a teacher by providing individual instruction to people in homes and offices in the vicinity of New York City, "mostly executives who have enough room in their offices and women who can afford instruction in their homes."

The home instruction is a luxury service — $50 for an initial consultation, $25 for a half-hour instruction session after that.

"Some women without discipline and with enough funds want a session each day. Many do it once a week," she says.

She also has a class for working women one day a week.

Because her teaching sphere must be limited, she has put her dance exercises and hand-some illustrations in book form for others to enjoy. The easy-does-it body conditioners are effective for women who will do them 15 minutes a day. The book, "Barbara Pearlman's Dance Exercises," is divided into eight weekly segments.

Some special exercises — yoga, prenatal and orthopedic routines — were earmarked especially for their back-strengthening movements.

A good simple orthopedic exercise is this one that can be done three times with each leg: Lie on your back, knees bent, feet parallel and about 10 inches apart. Clasp your hands around the right knee and pull it toward your chest. Relax leg. Repeat the movement with left leg.

"I was hit by a car and thrown some distance, and I think my bad back injury healed well because I was in such good shape," Mrs. Pearlman says.

Trained as a dancer in ballet and modern dance, she has translated warm-up stretches based on dance into a regimen that is manageable for the non-dancer, providing an aesthetic approach, she says.

She is a lithe 95 pounds and has never weighed much more — in college she weighed 105, which may have been her top weight.

Most of her clients are shapely. She doesn't think overweight women want to get into leotards and face her.

"But one woman was 50 pounds overweight, and determined. I planned an exercise routine and a strict diet for her and I called her every other night to encourage her. She finally realized her goal."

She usually likes to meet people with their physicians and have the doctor approve the diet — she does not claim to be a nutritionist but has acquired a lot of diet knowledge over the years.

"I frequently give diet advice — sort of how to dine out without bulging out — to women who must eat out with their executive husbands five nights a week."

Her book is spirally bound because she likes to be able to open a book and have it stay flat.

"There is nothing more frustrating than trying to follow an exercise regimen in a book that keeps closing, especially if you have your leg up in the air and want to glance at the next step," she says.

("Barbara Pearlman's Dance Exercises" is published by Doubleday.)

Counseling Helps Homemakers Find New Career

By SALLY JACOBSEN
Associated Press Writer

BALTIMORE (AP) — Fran Urban says her last name is spelled just like the first word in "urban renewal." She quickly adds that she's embarking on "a whole new renewal" of herself.

Mrs. Urban, 43, is an alcoholic who two years ago left her husband of nine years when she decided to do something about her drinking problem.

At the first of this year, she decided to do something about another problem — finding a career.

Her search led her to the Maryland Center for Displaced Homemakers, which was set up to help persons — male or female age 35 or older — who, through death of a spouse, divorce or separation, are forced to become the breadwinner.

Most of the women who walk through the center's doors had not held jobs while they were married. Without skills, an employment history or youth, these women find it difficult to get back into the work force.

Many need money, yet find they are not eligible for unemployment compensation, pensions, Social Security or other federal aid provided for welfare mothers and young persons, said Cynthia E. Marano, the center's director.

Marie Parr, 48, a training specialist at the center and a displaced homemaker, had found herself unable to get a single interview when she applied for teaching jobs several years ago.

"When you go out and can't get jobs when you've been used to getting jobs as soon as you go out and become interviewed — I'm talking about many years ago — you look to yourself and you say 'What is it?'" she said. "I'm too old, I'm too fat. I'm too aggressive. I'm not aggressive enough. What's the matter with me?"

"After coming to the center to work, I realized it wasn't me, but the fact that it's a highly competitive (job) market. What we teach women here is how to present themselves to an employer in a tight market."

The center aims to get displaced homemakers ready for jobs by finding what skills they've developed through volunteer work or housekeeping. It also tackles other problems, such as legal and emotional strains stemming from divorce or widowhood.

Participants are offered individual counseling, job-related workshops and seminars on topics ranging from resume writing to auto mechanics, finances and health care.

The center also provides limited funding for coursework or establishing small businesses, and finds on-the-job training for some. Another important factor, the women at the center emphasized, is the backing one displaced homemaker gives another.

"There is such support here," said Mrs. Urban, sitting at a round table in the homey main room of the row house where the center is located. "I've never been so broke in my life and so happy."

There are an estimated 268,000 displaced homemakers in Maryland. Nationwide, some 3 million persons fall into that category. Rep. Yvonne Brathwaite Burke, D-Calif., told a hearing last summer on legislation calling for funding 50 displaced homemakers centers around the country.

The Maryland center, which receives $190,000 a year for three years, was the second of its kind in the nation. At least 15 states have enacted some sort of legislation dealing with displaced homemakers, according to Laurie Shields, coordinator for the National Alliance for Displaced Homemakers in Oakland, Calif.

Though it may seem an awkward title, "displaced homemaker" appears to describe aptly the feelings of many women who suddenly find themselves without a husband, income and the niceties that defined their lives.

"I have heard a lot of women say they have lost their role and their identity because much of their life has been tied up being somebody's wife and somebody's mother," said Ms. Parr, who returned to college to get a degree in education shortly before separating from her husband of 23 years.

"But the displacement is more than just a role. Everything that was comfortable and settled in the past, the fact that you were set for life, is gone."

Hopeful Signs For The East

Joseph Grimesley, secretary of the N. C. Department of Administration, pointed out some hopeful signs for Eastern North Carolina in a talk to Pitt Technical Institute graduates Friday.

He said more people and jobs are locating in the eastern part of the state. The East and West are seeing population growth at the same rate as the Piedmont (for the first time in many years.) And, he said, jobs are being created more rapidly in the East and West than in North Carolina as a whole.

The new growth in the East and West provides opportunities of service for technical institutes.

"The greatest unmet educational needs for North Carolina's work force is at the technical institute and community college level," Grimesley said.

We have sensed that economic improvement was underway here in the East. Graduates leaving technical institutes, community colleges, and colleges and universities should know that it didn't just happen. There has been a lot of hard work and fighting to get Eastern North Carolina on an upward course, and there is still far to go.

It will be up to these graduates to use their energies toward continuing to improve the economic and general quality of life in our area. We are blessed with unparalleled natural resources, but it is the people who are Eastern North Carolina's greatest resource.

How's It Done? Check Liberty, N.C.

Liberty, N. C. only has 2,500 folks, but they will enjoy a tax cut this year for the second consecutive year.

The tax rate was cut by 15 cents last year and the town manager proposes a second cut of five cents this year.

Maybe the federal government ought to name a commission to come down and study the town of Liberty's methods.

Reform For Health Care?

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — One of the biggest unanswered questions for the North Carolina General Assembly as it now convenes the 1978 session is whether lawmakers will come to grips with profound questions in the field of health care.

Several different pieces of legislation are floating about on the assembly agenda, and without careful attention it would be easy to overlook the pattern which these proposals represent.

Tackled one by one, the measures could fail to produce major furor and debate. In total, however, they represent significant reform and will surely draw the fire of health care professionals and other providers, insurers, and governmental leaders at state and local levels.

Despite the intentions of the legislative leadership to hold weighty matters to a bare minimum and concentrate rather on updating and revising the state budget to reflect changing economic conditions, some of the health measures will certainly come under consideration.

Dental Care

One reason for that is the fact that last year the General Assembly chopped money for dental care under Medicaid — a step which has proven ill advised and most unpopular. This year will see action to restore that money. Where, then, can spiraling Medicaid costs be contained?

That is the subject of a special study commission reporting in this session of the Legislature, and some lawmakers are certain that to prevent the Medicaid costs from bankrupting the state treasury, special action is required.

Further, the federal government is making threatening noises about health care funds for North Carolina because the state doesn't have a Certificate of Needs law to provide review and checkoff on any spending on major equipment or health care facilities. So, action is called for on that subject as well.

Meanwhile, some experts see the Medicaid culprit as being extended nursing home care for the elderly, and will come in with proposals to require that all counties provide home health nursing care and home chore helpers so many of the elderly could remain at home — at less cost. But that approach will obviously run into intensive resistance from nursing home operators, and from professionals in health care who maintain that such home care doesn't measure up to the level provided in hospitals or skilled nursing homes.

BILL NOBLITT

Then there is the question whether Health Maintenance Organizations in which groups of people pay into the fund and receive contracted-for health services should replace the present system. The argument goes that with the government or insurance paying without argument, there is no incentive to either the patient or the health provider to try to cut costs.

Group Contract

In a Health Maintenance Organization contract deal, both would benefit from savings by more timely examination, less exotic treatment, and less time in hospital.

While Medicaid payments for the poor triggered the legislative response, study has demonstrated that, in the words of the study commission report, "Medicaid costs cannot be contained without containing all health care costs. Medicaid recipients purchase their services in the same market place as other patients..."

Total Medicaid spending has jumped from $16 million in 1971 to over $91 last year. Health cost is the leading inflationary segment of the nation's economy.

But will this General Assembly attempt to tackle this complex problem which specialists now flatly predict is producing a crisis not only in North Carolina, but nationally?

And What Do You Do?

WASHINGTON — As you have probably read, Washington is a tough town for wives, especially when they go to dinners and cocktail parties. The first thing a woman is asked is, "What do you do?" If she admits to being just a housewife, the person who asks the question immediately loses interest in her.

A friend of mine named Lucy told me she got sick and tired of being asked the question, so she has come up with some replies that really throw the person who asked it.

Lucy said, "It came by accident one night when a man sitting next to me asked, 'What do you do?' I told him 'I'm a paper clip inspector for the State Department.'"

"He said, 'You're kidding me.'"

"I said, 'I am not. They have to be twisted just right or the State Department papers won't stick together, and some of them could get lost. What do you do?' He just blushed and said, 'Nothing.'"

Lucy said, "Ever since then, while I'm dressing to go out, I think of something to say for that moment when the inevitable question comes up."

"Give me some examples," I pleaded.

"Not long ago a woman who thought she was important asked me what I did and I told her, 'I'm a food taster for HEW Secretary Califano.' And at another party, a congressman put the question to me and I told him, 'I design white lines for shopping mall parking lots.'"

"I also told a general once that 'I run a halfway house for FBI informers.'"

"Those are very good," I said.

"My husband thinks I'm overdoing it," Lucy told me. "But he doesn't try to stop me. Once we were at a Georgetown party and all the people were full of themselves, dropping names and quoting VIPs they had spoken to that day. Then someone asked in a very patronizing way, 'What did you do today?' I said, 'I finished carving the last gargoyles on the Washington Cathedral. I thought the wind would blow me off the steeple.'"

ART BUCHWALD

"What did they all say?" "What could they say? After that we were the quietest table in the room."

"Does anyone really get thrown when you tell them what you do?"

"All the time," Lucy replied. "A few weeks ago a commissioner from one of the federal agencies asked me the question and I said, 'I can't do anything for the moment until the grand jury decides whether or not to indict me. I promised to pay back the money, but my lawyer says the Fed's still want to pursue it.' His eyes popped out of his head, and then I added, 'Maybe you can help me. You don't know any judges who can be bought in this town, do you?'"

"What did he say to that?"

Lucy chuckled. "He said, 'May I get you another drink?' And I never saw him again."

She continued, "Newspapermen are the worst. If you're not 'somebody' they refuse to talk to you. Once a columnist who was working a room of an embassy stopped for a moment between ambassadors and asked, 'Who are you?'"

"I told him, 'I'm from Lloyd's of London assigned to watch Elizabeth Taylor's diamond necklace. If anyone makes a move toward it I

THE INSIDE REPORT

More Than Bargained For

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — If Mayor Richard Hatcher of Gary, Ind., accepts a long-standing offer to become a White House aide, President Carter will get not only the emissary to the black community he desired but something else he did not bargain for: chief of the new Africa lobby.

Unknown to senior White House staffers, Hatcher is board chairman of TransAfrica, the new organization frankly modeled after the potent Israel lobby. What's more, Hatcher was considerably less than supportive of the Carter administration's policy when he addressed a TransAfrica fund-raising dinner in Washington May 20.

Hatcher contended the need for the new lobby is shown by "the distorted picture being presented to the public this week of events in Zaire," adding: "We have seen screaming headlines that list the Europeans killed, as if the brothers and sisters (blacks) who are dying were not important." In fact, the French-Belgian rescue operation of whites in Zaire had the blessing of the administration.

Senior Carter aides, unaware of Hatcher's new role, told us the White House job offer to the mayor is still open (though one top Carterite is miffed about the amount of time it is taking Hatcher to decide). If Hatcher comes on board, the administration could have built itself a reputation of the unpleasant incident when Mark Siegel resigned from the White House staff in disagreement with the President's Mideast policy.

Brock Lobbies

Senate approval of F-15 sales to Saudi Arabia, besides being a badly needed triumph for President Carter, was a rebuke to Republican national chairman William Brock by senators of his own party.

Brock lobbied his fellow

Tennessean, minority leader Howard Baker, and several other key Republican senators to oppose the deal.

It failed. Republican senators backed the Saudi sale 26 to 11 — a necessary cushion for the president, since his own Democratic senators opposed him 33 to 28. Such Republican backing puts a hollow ring to Brock's efforts — obviously aimed at the Jewish vote — to contend that the Carter policy is anti-Israel.

A footnote: Anne Wexler, the Connecticut Democratic politician of whom so much is expected as the newest senior White House aide, made a successful debut under fire on the Saudi arms deal. Working indirectly and behind the scenes, she managed to turn some Democratic senators in favor of the arms package.

Strom Soars

In contrast to a series of published reports over the last several months which have had Republican Sen. Strom Thurmond fading in his quest for reelection in South Carolina, his own poll shows him running away from Democratic challenger Charles (Pug) Ravelle.

Arthur J. Finkelstein, a nationally known pollster, interviewed 558 South Carolina voters from April 21 through May 5 with these results: Thurmond, 56.9 percent; Ravelle, 27.3 percent; undecided, 15.8 percent. In his report to Thurmond, Finkelstein makes a statement rarely uttered by a pollster: "Thurmond is in the enviable position of almost being assured reelection."

A footnote: Finkelstein shows job ratings of plus 36.2 for Thurmond, minus 7.9 for Democratic Sen. Ernest Hollings and minus 36.6 for President Carter.

John Tower's Spoiler

Texas Republican leaders are no longer nearly as worried as they once were that Sen. John Tower's bid for a fourth term might be spoiled by the independent right wing candidacy of Grover, Republican nominee for governor in 1972, has failed to attract either money or supporters in sufficient numbers. He has totally struck out in trying to recruit Texas leaders of the 1976 Ronald Reagan presidential campaign, who have forgiven Tower for his aggressive support of Gerald Ford against Reagan.

That leaves Grover depending largely on anti-abortion and anti-ERA forces. Consequently, Republican leaders doubt now that Grover will take away enough votes from Tower to hand victory to Rep. Robert Krueger, the Democratic nominee; in fact, they hope Grover may withdraw.

Other Editors Say Worth A Dime?

(Henderson Dispatch)

Most of those now around will not be here to see it, if it materializes. But the projection was made by G. William Miller, chairman of the Federal Reserve Board.

He told Boston University students in a graduation address the other day that the American dollar may be worth a dime by the years they retire sometime in the far distant future.

Miller himself will not be on the scene when those graduates finish their active years and step aside probably some fifty to sixty years hence. He will not be present to say "I told you so," nor to be chided for his speculation if he were wrong.

Unfortunately, the dollar is headed in that direction. It is even now worth in trade only about a half or little more than it was a generation ago. And the ultimate is not in sight, unless somebody finds a way to halt the runaway trend of inflation. And no one has as yet.

President Carter offered suggestions a few months ago, but his plan received little attention, and certainly is not showing results. One Federal comment was that it would be about a year before it would be effective. But what has not happened in twelve months is not likely to happen at all.

Miller has his fingers on the economy, and by a push button process can to some extent direct the course of events. That doesn't mean, of course, that he has the answer, but in his capacity as head of the Federal Reserve Board he can exert considerable influence.

What things are like half a century from now no one can say. The graduating class which heard his speculation may be rolling in wealth on their own. Even a million dollars, but the Miller fear, would be only $100,000.

Oh well, most of us will not have that worry so far in the future. Maybe the rising generation will be able to pull a rabbit out of the hat somewhere along the way.

Codominium Market Reviving

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — The codominium market is recovering, but don't believe those forecasts of it becoming the dominant form of housing ownership in the future, says the National Association of Realtors.

Prices for condos are now rising at a rate comparable to those of detached single-family units, after lagging for several years because of massive overbuilding in many areas, the Realtors say.

Three years ago, for example, prices in many areas were appreciating at a rate less than one-half that of detached homes, and prices in some locales declined substantially.

Owners seeking to sell their units faced competition not only from other resales but from a glut of unsold new units. Condo promoters went broke and entire buildings stood nearly empty for months.

According to a Realtor survey, a "more reasonable" construction picture prevails this year. It finds "Both builders and lenders now are doing their homework before plunging into the market."

While prices are said to be improving and demand, it is claimed, is up over a year ago, the Realtors seek to disabuse people of the notion that condominiums are going to replace traditional detached homes.

In 80 percent of markets, the association observes, condos account for less than 10 percent of sales. In small and mediumsize towns, mainly in the Midwest and South, they have never gained much acceptance

About 67 percent of American families now live in their own homes, and for the most part, it seems, they prefer a detached unit on its own plot of ground, rather than sharing facilities or structures.

Crane Co., whose industrial lines include building products and plumbing fixtures, may have developed a new source of income — buying shares in other companies and then selling them back to them.

That's what it did with 293,800 shares of Morrison-Knudsen Co., the international engineering and construction company based in Boise, Idaho. And it made a profit any businessman would settle for.

Claims Stir A Spasm

By STAN BENJAMIN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The recent claims that an oil lobbyist got advance drafts of regulations and sometimes influenced them could hardly surprise anyone who has worked in Washington.

Leaking and lobbying are two of the most popular games in town, next to tennis.

But the claims sent a spasm of soul-searching through the Department of Energy.

"This had better not be true," growled spokesman James Bishop Jr., on behalf of Secretary James R. Schlesinger.

Economic Regulatory Administrator David J. Bardin questioned his staff and then turned the affair over to the department's Inspector General for further investigation.

Bardin aide Douglas G. Robinson said department officials were already thinking of putting summaries of private meetings with regulated companies "on the record" for public inspection.

Robinson said in an interview he has already told his own staff to do it.

If Bardin and Robinson succeed in controlling leaks and lobbies their next logical assignment has to be the Agriculture Department, for a total war against crabgrass.

Exchanges of advice, information and executives between government and private organizations are common here.

And whatever a government office does, it invariably "leaks" — trickling out supposedly confidential information and proposals to a favored few who know where to tap the holes.

John F. O'Leary, deputy secretary of energy and a respected veteran of the federal agencies, says a lot of the exchange is legitimate — even necessary — but it can get out of hand.

Thus, the American Petroleum Institute said the activities boasted by "regulatory analyst" John Lannone in a memo to his boss were entirely legal, and part of a legitimate effort to understand and advise Webbs Tobacco Warehouse on Albermarle Avenue burst into flames from an undetermined origin shortly before noon today and within less than 30 minutes the roof had fallen in and the building was completely razed.

J. H. Blount, one of the owners, declared this afternoon that the building would be replaced for use this fall. He estimated the damage at $75,000 and said approximately $35,000 insurance was carried.

Firemen were unable to cope with the blaze and concentrated efforts on saving nearby buildings, none of which were destroyed.

Ninth grade graduation exercises will take place tomorrow morning at 9:30 in the high school auditorium. At this time, 120 ninth graders will be graduated into high schools.

Rev. Lowell Sodemam, pastor of Memorial Baptist Church, will deliver the address.

J. H. Rose, superintendent of schools, will offer the invocation, and V. M. Mulholland, principal, will welcome the graduates into senior high school. —Lynn Caverly

THE REAL PRESENCE

Is God real to you?

Some people seem to have a genius for apprehending the presence of God. Usually they are quite humble people, although sometimes this great mystical gift is conferred upon the learned and upon those in important positions of leadership. But most of us have to strive after that consciousness.

Such things as hatred, avarice, and evil thoughts of all kinds can draw a curtain between ourselves and God.

But on the other hand, the weekly sojourn for an hour to a place of worship, the expulsion of evil impulses from the mind, Bible reading and prayer — these are some of the ways in which we can make God real for us.

We can turn to Him at any time and He will light up a minute or an hour for us in glorious fashion. We can lay our troubles and temptations in His hands, and the relief which comes to our souls will be beyond measure.

Ayden High School Class Has Reunion

A Pig Pickin at the Ayden Country Club was the occasion Saturday night, May 27th, of a reunion of the 1958 graduating class of Ayden High School.

The reunion began with an hour of socializing, reminiscing of old memories, picture swapping and good conversation. Drinks and hors d'oeuvres were served.

Following the social hour, the group gathered around to pick the pig and enjoy a leisurely meal including potatoes, slaw, cornbread, tea and varied desserts.

Kay Dunn presided over a short program following the meal. Old movie films made on various occasions of the class members during the school years were viewed with humor. Gag gifts were given for class members with the most children, oldest child, youngest child, least hair, traveling the longest distance, and the oldest class member.

Booklets consisting of information sheets on each class member were given to all. A moment of silence was observed as tribute to Cloyce "Shot" Braswell and Dan Bateman, both deceased.

The night was completed with music and dancing, with a special rendition of Elvis by Harold Worthington.

Mrs. Louise Little, class advisor, and her husband were special guest of the class.

Class members attending were Barbara Worthington Walker, Irene Stancil Smith, Nelson Cannon, Pattie McCay Dunn, Joanne Edwards Purnell, Brenda Davis Stocks, Leslie Stocks, Jeanette Harris Whiteman, Gwyn Merritt, David

its industry's federal regulators.

But the memo spotlighted a chronic dilemma of those regulators: close contact with the regulated industry is useful and sometimes vital to them, and yet too close a relationship threatens to corrupt the process of honest regulation.

Iannone claimed, "I received draft of Subpart K (a proposed natural gas liquids regulation) two weeks before DOE (Department of Energy) officials."

He said he "worked closely with DOE on gasoline price monitoring and got them to agree to a number of important changes, before the system was released for public comment."

He said he got internal department studies which then "were carefully distributed to members of Congress and were used to discredit DOE's arguments" on behalf of President Carter's National Energy Plan.

Highway Hearing...

underscore the need to proceed rapidly on the four-lane of U.S. 264 from Wilson," but, "strongly emphasize Farmville's desire to have the present five lane section included as part," of the project.

She said use of the present five-lane section would be, "less costly," and would be the, "least environmentally damaging," of the possible routes.

Farmville town administrator Pat Thomas urged the DOT to, "maintain momentum," of the U.S. 264 project, but said after, "thorough consideration of route alternatives," area residents have concluded that the four-lane highway, "need not be designed as a limited access facility."

"Utilization of existing parts of the road," Thomas said, would result in, "faster construction," and "redeem Farmville's heavy investment in community facilities," in the area of the present Farmville bypass.

"Limited access," Thomas said, "is not the answer to our needs."

W. A. Allen of Farmville told the hearing that land is limited and, "I'd hate to see it wasted," by relocating U.S. 264 on a corridor North of Farmville.

"Greenville folks," Allen said, "haven't given much consideration to Farmville," by seeking a four lane limited access route which would bypass the town.

Allen said a new route North of Farmville would, "upset a lot of good cultivated property," and "it would be wasteful...to eliminate this stretch of road," referring to the present U.S. 264 section.

Tom Bradshaw, secretary of the Department of Transportation explained that a draft environmental impact study is under way and emphasized that public hearings will be held on the question of a corridor for the highway after the study, due in August, is completed.

Bradshaw noted that, "more than one corridor will be presented." Adding that there is, "a real strong feeling for controlled access," the official emphasized "the public has not been bypassed."

Bradshaw stressed that the U.S. 264 improvement, "is a very high priority project."

The DOT secretary said, "We want to listen and share what your feelings are on the highway improvement program," and give local officials and citizens a chance to speak out on, priority needs for your city, county and region. Share with us what your priorities would be."

Although there was much discussion about the U.S. 264 project, it was not the only project requested at yesterday's session.

Pitt County attorney W. W. Speight, representing the Board of County Commissioners, urged that, "planning begin promptly for a Western loop at Greenville to tie in properly with the four-laning of U.S. 264."

Speight told the hearing that Pitt commissioners also recommend the widening of the 18-foot wide portion of N.C. 43 West of Greenville to 24 feet, constructing a 5.7

mile N.C. 121 bypass of Falkland to the Edgecombe County line, build a five-lane section of N.C. 43 from the U.S. 264 bypass to Bells Fork, five lane N.C. 33 from U.S. 264 to SR 1626, and widen N.C. 903 to 24 feet from Stokes to the Martin County line.

Singleton, outlining urban projects in Greenville, requested the DOT to four-lane Evans Street from Tenth Street to U.S. 264, four-lane 14th Street from Charles Street to U.S. 264, and extend Arlington Boulevard with four lanes from Memorial Drive to U.S. 264, then on to the Stantonsburg Road and N.C. 43.

Bethel Mayor James Dupree urged DOT to include the four laning of U.S. 13-N.C.11 from N.C. 903 to Bethel as soon as possible. Saying the project is scheduled for right-of-way acquisition in 1983, Dupree said the improvements are needed as soon as possible and would provide a, "direct link between U.S. 264 and U.S. 64."

Farmville officials requested the four-laning of Field Street, a bypass route for U.S. 258 on the Western side of the town, the four laning of N.C. 121 from Duke Drive to the Stantonsburg Road, and improvements to reduce congestion in the area of the three schools along U.S. 264A and Grimmersburg Street.

Fred Williamson, executive director of the Carteret County Chamber of Commerce made a plea for a, "fixed span, medium level bridge," across Core Sound, linking the mainland with Atlantic Beach.

Williamson said the present draw bridge handled 23,000 cars April 15, and will handle 35,000 cars a day during the summer months.

He noted that the bridge last year opened 6,655 times for an average of seven minutes each time, resulting in the bridge being opened a total of 32 days during 1977.

A third bridge linking the mainland and Core Banks, Williamson suggested, would relieve the severe traffic congestion and provide better access by emergency vehicles.

George Harper of Kinston, a member of the Board of Transportation, presided at yesterday's session. Board member Joe Thomas of Vanceboro also attended the hearing.

Community Center Feasibility Study

By KEITH MILLS
Reflector Staff Writer

A marketing study to assess the feasibility of locating a civic-community center in the Pitt County-Greenville area is being conducted by the Regional Development Institute of East Carolina University.

The announcement came early today from Reid Hooper, chairman of the Pitt County Civic Center Task Force, operating under the auspices of the Greater Greenville Area Chamber of Commerce.

Hooper said a civic-community center for the area should occupy approximately 22,000 square feet and should seat between 1,200 and 1,500 people. Because of rising building costs, cost estimates are not available, he said.

Such a center would provide one large room for accommodating sizeable groups but could be partitioned off by electronically operated sliding walls to provide facilities for several smaller groups or for breaking one large group into various components.

Following the feasibility study, and other planning steps, the concept could be presented to the city and county for approval, in the late fall he said.

The civic center concept was inspired by a recent trip to Roanoke Rapids by members of the task force to gather impressions of that town's community center.

"We were impressed with the center in Roanoke Rapids," Hooper said. "A few of the things they have in their center are fund raising events, senior citizens meetings on a regular basis, junior high and high school dances, art shows, weddings and wedding receptions (a lot of wedding receptions). But they do not allow political or religious events, although they do allow church administrative meetings. The closest thing to a religious event would be a wedding."

Hooper said the center is a "beautifully planned 16,000 square foot structure," with one large room for seating up to 700 people. This larger room can be divided into four smaller ones, with the largest of the four seating approximately 600 people. The rooms are divided by electronically operated walls.

However, the Roanoke Rapids Community Center serves strictly the city and was built from revenue sharing funds. The estimated cost was $1 million. In contrast, a civic-community center in the Greenville area would serve both the city and county, attracting conventioners from outside the state, across the state, the region and the area, he said.

Some Surprises Marked Yesterday's Local Voting

By KEVIN P. McKENNA
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — John H. Baker Jr., seeking to become North Carolina's first black sheriff, scored a decisive victory in a Wake County Democratic runoff primary over the man who has served as chief deputy for the past 12 years.

But black candidates for sheriff in Bladen and Granville counties went down to defeat in Tuesday's voting.

In New Hanover County, Democratic voters turned their incumbent sheriff out of office, but Wilson County Sheriff Rob Pridgen, whose department has been under investigation, was returned to office by a sizeable margin.

Cumberland County Democrats nominated a candidate for coroner who wants to abolish the office, and voters in mountainous Yancey County overwhelmingly rejected a series of ballot questions that would have legalized beer and wine sales.

All told, 38 of the state's 100 counties had at least one local race.

Alex Brock, state elections director, said those counties tended Tuesday to have higher voter turnouts than others because "people always respond to local races in a more spirited way than they do statewide races."

In Wake County, where Sheriff Robert Pleasant is retiring after 32 years in office, Baker won the right to meet Republican Clyde R. Cook Jr. in November.

Baker, a former professional football player and aide to U.S. Sen. Robert Morgan, D-N.C., received 22,414 votes. Chief Deputy Lester Kelly, got 18,923.

In the Bladen County sheriff's race, a black deputy, Joe N. Kelly, was defeated by a white deputy, Earl Storms. Storms, who will oppose Republican Bob McDuffie in the general election, tallied 4,354 votes to Kelly's 2,357.

A black candidate for sheriff in Granville County, Henry E. Royster, was defeated by the incumbent, William A. Jenkins. Royster led a five-man race in the first primary, but lost to Jenkins in the runoff, 4,191 to 2,757.

New Hanover County Sheriff H.G. Grohman lost a Democratic runoff by Thomas A. Radewicz, who resigned as a sheriff's lieutenant to challenge his boss.

Radewicz, who will face Republican James Kerr in the general election, garnered 6,366 votes in the runoff, while the incumbent received 5,235.

In Wilson County, where the sheriff's department has been linked to a federal probe of alleged prostitution and gambling, incumbent Pridgen defeated Gene Pearson, a former deputy, 3,521 to 2,097. No Republicans are seeking the post.

Norma Currie, a registered nurse, won the Democratic nod for Cumberland County coroner over Earl Britt, a barber. She had 5,807 votes to Britt's 2,161.

Mrs. Currie's goal is to have the position abolished, and she has promised to serve without pay if it is not. She will oppose Republican James E. Hall Jr.

Yancey County residents, by an average margin of 2½ to 1, voted down a ballot initiative that would have legalized beer and wine sales. They followed the lead of neighboring Mitchell County, which rejected a similar ballot issue May 2.

Elsewhere, District Court Judge Frank Freeman Sr., who tried to withdraw from his runoff race after leading the first primary, lost by a 2-1 margin.

Freeman was defeated by Assistant District Attorney Jerry Cash Martin in the Democratic runoff in the 17th Judicial District, which includes Caswell, Rockingham, Stokes and Surry counties. Martin had 10,406 votes to Freeman's 5,298.

Since there is no Republican candidate, Martin is assured of election. Even if Freeman had won, he would have been forced to leave office after nine months of the new term, upon reaching the mandatory retirement age of 70.

Durham County Sheriff W.H. "Bill" Allen, who was appointed last year after the death of his predecessor, won a full term by defeating Democratic runoff challenger Jess J. Bowe. Allen will have no GOP opposition in November.

The incumbent received 8,348 votes to 6,386 for Bowe, the director of the criminal-justice program at North Carolina Central University.

Vance County's new sheriff will be Bobby Lee Hamm, a former chief deputy, who defeated William H. "Billy" Hughes and faces no Republican challenger.

Hamm won the Democratic runoff by a margin of 4,179 to 3,049 over Hughes, a former county commissioner who is under indictment on an embezzlement charge.

IT'S NOT EVERY DAY YOU CAN MAKE A SHORT-TERM INVESTMENT LIKE THIS.

Then again, it's not every day banking regulations change this radically.

The new law, effective June 1, allows us to offer a fully insured, fully guaranteed six-month Certificate of Deposit.

Planters calls it the Money Market CD. And for the short-term investor with $10,000 or more, it has some very interesting possibilities.

Consider this. The annual interest rate is based on the current week's going rate for Treasury Bills, established every Monday via auction.

Which means you can call us anytime for a given week's going rate, make your investment and be guaranteed that same high rate for the full six months.

In effect, you're playing the money market. But without the risk, since you know the rate before you buy. And that's the kind of investment that doesn't come along every day.

NOT AT RATES LIKE THESE.

Benign Ambassador Reluctant To Reply To Cubans

By SAMUEL KOO
Associated Press Writer
UNITED NATIONS (AP) — U.S. Ambassador Andrew Young is counseling silence to Cuba's attack on President Carter's African policy, contending a sharp reply would take attention away from the General Assembly's special disarmament debate, diplomatic sources say.

Young, who has taken a more benign view of Cuban involvement in Africa than the White House and the Pentagon, did not use the 15-minute rebuttal time he was entitled to Tuesday after Cuban Vice President Carlos Rafael Rodriguez told the assembly Carter's charge that Cuba trained and equipped rebel invaders of southern Zaire was "absolutely false...based on impudently repeated lies."

However, an American official said the White House or the State Department might comment on the Cuban attack today.

Rodriguez followed up his assembly speech with a nationwide TV interview in which he told Barbara Walters of ABC that Zbigniew Brzezinski, Carter's national security adviser, is an enemy "of all the progressive people of the world."

The vice president charged in the interview that the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency is providing Carter with the kind of false information he said led to U.S. involvement in the Bay of Pigs invasion of Cuba and the Vietnam War. He said this sort of CIA work was being done by people like Brzezinski.

Rodriguez challenged the U.S. government to produce evidence of Cuba's involvement in Zaire's Shaba Province.

"Cuba is not responsible for what has been happening in Shaba," he declared. "We have not sent troops or even isolated men. We have not given them equipment and are not even linked politically with the group that took responsibility for this."

He added that President Fidel Castro "is very angry about what is happening because he feels that we have been unjustly treated."

Brzezinski recently delivered a series of sharp criticisms of the Soviet Union and Cuba. He called for "an international response" to Soviet and Cuban military activity in Africa and said that, in this regard, the United States and China, Moscow's main adversaries, have "parallel interests."

Rodriguez's hour-long speech to the assembly was greeted by 35 seconds of thunderous applause. It was the biggest ovation of the week-old session, exceeding in length and intensity the applause for French President Valery Giscard d'Estaing, Vice President Walter F. Mondale, Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko and Chinese Foreign Minister Huang Hua following their speeches.

Summing up Third World sentiment about the U.S.-Cuban dispute, Nigerian Ambassador Leslie O. Harriman said it was "ludicrous" to believe that the presence of Cubans in Angola and elsewhere in Africa was a threat to Africa.

"The Cubans were invited there after some multifarious activities by Western agents, and the Cubans in Angola stabilized the situation there," he said.

Westerners Of Hong Kong Rent Live-In Mothers

By RUTH YOUNGBLOOD
HONG KONG (UPI) — Renting apartments, furniture, appliances and even fish tanks is commonplace in the British Crown Colony of Hong Kong. Some weary parents also rent mums.

The mums are, in effect, live-in surrogate mothers who stay in a household 24 hours a day. But the business run by two British women is not a glorified baby sitting service, they said in interviews.

Rent-a-Mum caters to the transient Western community. Although such residents represent less than two percent of the colony's largely Chinese population of 4.5 million, new arrivals unable to communicate with native help have found the service a blessing in family emergencies when mother has been hospitalized or for parents on business trips or who simply want a quiet holiday alone.

Mavis Barrett and Linda Rose operate the service. Miss Rose arrived here with extensive personnel experience and the desire "to do something that was really needed, a business I could sink my teeth into and build up."

Mrs. Barrett, who has two children, knew from experience the frustrations a transferred wife faces trying to apart a I could sink my teeth into and build up." Mrs. Barrett, who has two children, knew from experience the frustrations their normal routine is not upset, when the woman in charge can easily communicate her affection for them in their native language and also cope with problems as they arise.

The service is not advertised because word-of-mouth praise from satisfied customers gives the partners all the business they can handle without lowering its standards, they said.

The women they place are carefully screened by Miss Rose or Mrs. Barrett. Most have all the warmth of a Mary Poppins and one advantage the fictional governess lacked. They have raised families of their own.

"We have a responsibility that we don't treat lightly," Miss Rose said. "This is a people business, a highly personalized one. The person we send to our clients, the parents, has to be able to keep a household running smoothly and know what to do should anything unexpected arise."

Wives whose own offspring are in boarding school or grown particularly enjoy doing what years of family life taught them.

Parents pay the service a commission for matching them with an acceptable woman, and prospective mums are sent for interviews until everyone is satisfied.

The women's salaries range from $14 to $20 per day, depending on length of employment, responsibilities involved and the number and ages of children in the household.

Women Filling Church Roles

NEW YORK (AP) — A report shows that of 58 women ordained in the Lutheran Church in America since it opened its ministry to women in 1970, 40 of them are currently serving in parishes, 31 of them as the pastor in charge. Nine are assistant or associate pastors.

Of the others, four are serving as chaplains, three as campus pastors, two on seminary faculties, one on the denomination staff, one on the staff of an ecumenical organization, the rest in other jobs or on leave.

Tirana is the capital of Albania.

said both their client and prospective mum files are continually expanding. Mums range in age from 20s to 50s. Having one's own child is a plus, but qualified single women are eligible.

"Occasionally I'm asked what qualifications I have to interview since I'm single," Miss Rose said. An attractive blonde in her mid-20s, she responds: "I love children. To make sure I know what is involved."

I'm occasionally a rent-a-mum, too." The single women usually approved of her mid-20s, she responds:

"I love children. To make sure I know what is involved, I'm occasionally a rent-a-mum, too. involved," Miss Rose said.

"No one can tell me that being a full time mother is not a personally rewarding but demanding job."

Murmansk Fondly Remembers WWII Allied Seamen

By EMIL SVEILIS
MURMANSK, U.S.S.R. (UPI) — On a barren, windswept, Arctic hill high above the city there is a small but spotless roadside cemetery where 25 allied naval war heroes of the terrifying "Murmansk Run" of World War II lie buried beneath polished light brown granite gravestones.

Among the seamen are 3 Americans, 14 Britons, one Canadian and 7 of Arabic origin who sailed under the British flag. The youngest, J.B. Andersen, a British steward's boy on the SS Indiana, was only 16 when he died.

All those buried here plied through the sub-zero polar night or the midnight sun in one of the most daring supply operations of World War II — that of bringing desperately needed war goods to the Soviet Union through the German U-boat infested waters of the Barents Sea.

Many times during their journeys, these British and American freighters were like sitting ducks due to the lack of armed escorts in the crucial days of 1942-1943 and convoys sometimes lost up to half of their ships to the waiting Germans before reaching Murmansk.

According to Soviet authorities, the 25 graves are but a symbol to all the allies killed in trying to reach the beleaguered city 200 miles above the Arctic Circle in vessels loaded with tanks, planes, ammunition and food. "Hundreds of them went down before even getting here," remembered one.

The little cemetery is kept free of snow drifts in winter and the city government periodically places a red-ribboned wreath on a small monument whose inscription honors "the perished warriors of the British Commonwealth and the United States bringing help to the Soviet Union during the great patriotic war."

Sergei N. Dimitriev, 65, now retired, was a port worker during the height of the Nazi bombardment. "At the beginning of the war they bombed us all the time and we could do nothing. We did not have our own air force to protect us. The only thing we had were anti-aircraft guns."

Dimitriev said the first 50 foreign ships arrived in Murmansk in early 1942. "At the time we had 5,000 people working in the port trying to unload them," he said. "The Germans soon discovered this and staged 64 air raids in April. In just one of those attacks 16 people were killed and 20 wounded."

"We were not experienced," he said. "Although the U.S. sailors were fatigued after their long journey, they helped us unload and we worked together like brothers."

Because Murmansk was mostly constructed of wooden buildings, the city was 75 per cent destroyed by the Germans. Its population of 118,000 either went to war, worked in the port, were evacuated, or were killed.

"When the city was burned there was no place to live," remembered Dimitriev. "We took to the hills, dug holes in the ground and 5,000 people existed like moles. We worked 12 hours a day on the docks and after that, we worked another 4 hours repairing the damage done by the Germans."

Ivan Tupitin is 77 and long since on a government pension, but during World War II he was a longshoreman at the port.

"One incident I remember clearly was when we unloaded high explosives from an allied ship and transferred them to railroad cars," he said. "One of the cars began to burn and all the people ran in different directions."

"I took a foreign fire extinguisher in my hand and began to run toward the car, but I did not know how to operate it. I quickly found a foreign seaman who showed me how and I put out the fire."

"Specialists later said it was sabotage. If I had not put out the fire the resulting explosion could have blown up the whole port."

Tupitin said he remembered about 16 convoys entering Murmansk with about 70 ships to a convoy containing more than 2 million tons of cargo.

Dimitriev said most of the time Soviet escort vessels tried to meet the convoy outside the Kola Gulf entrance to what is now the world's largest city above the Arctic Circle with 390,000 residents, "but many times signals got crossed and the allied ships had to come in through the open sea without any protection."

Anastasia Maltseva was just 21 when she worked as a crane operator during the war. "We had very little equipment and very little experience," she recalled.

"An American sailor saw that our people were very inexperienced," Mrs. Maltseva, now 57, said. "He helped us as much as he could and taught us how to operate the machinery."

"When there were air attacks on allied ships he also helped by manning a gun and trying to shoot the Germans out of the sky."

She said she remembered an incident when a submarine commander asked for the "best man to help stow torpedoes in the hold. This is a tricky job," she said.

"When he saw me as the 'crane expert' he took a double take," she said. "I was small and the commander of the sub was astounded at this so-called crane expert. I did it though. I put the torpedoes into the hold very quickly without any incident."

She said that sitting on top of a crane did not give her much time to get to a shelter when air raids were sounded. "Once I hid under the crane before I got up enough courage to run for it."

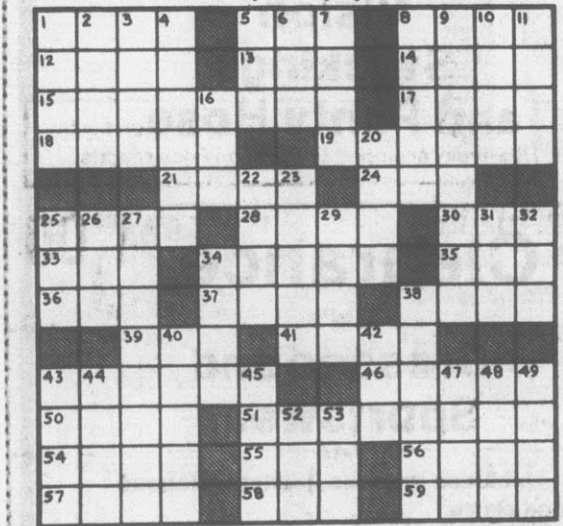

"I ran over two seamen who were laying down protecting themselves. I thought about joining them, but decided to head for the shelter. When the raid was over both of the sailors had been killed."

Mrs. Maltseva also remembered an ironic incident. "Once, while running for a shelter, I bumped into an American sailor. He gave me a little present which I quickly stuffed into my pocket."

"After several hours I put my hand in my pocket and found that it contained melted ice cream. You can imagine how I felt. I had not eaten ice cream in years."

Today's Crypticquip clue: Z equals L

The Crypticquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

'Flexitime' Adding To Its Supporters

By ELMER W. LAMMI
WASHINGTON (UPI) — "Management likes it, labor likes it, the Democrats like it, and the Republicans like it," says Rep. Stephen Solarz, D-N.Y.

"It" is "flexitime," a new concept in work hours.

A huge success in West Germany, flexitime has spread to Great Britain, Switzerland, Canada, and — to a lesser extent — the United States.

The idea is to let workers decide, within certain limits, what hours to work.

A bill to induce government agencies to try flexitime was approved last week by the House on a 288-57 vote. Now it's up to the Senate.

Flexitime is already being used by some federal agencies, but its wider use is hampered by existing laws requiring payment of overtime to government workers who put in more than eight hours in one day.

However, the House bill would lift that requirement for three years and, for example, let a government employee work six hours one day and 10 the next. An employee could juggle his hours as he wished, provided he is on the job during certain "core hours" and puts in his full 40 hours for the week.

Sponsors of the legislation, such as Solarz and Rep. Patricia Schroeder, D-Colo., think it's a good idea whose time has come.

"Flexitime is one of those ideas which benefits virtually everyone and harms practically no one," Solarz said. "Whenever it has been tried it has resulted in an increase in productivity and in a decrease in tardiness."

The general public benefits, he said, because federal offices normally open from 9 to 5 can open earlier and stay open longer because some workers will be willing to work at those odd hours.

Mrs. Schroeder said earlier experiments with flexitime by the Social Security Administration have already shown positive results by "virtually eliminating tardiness and increasing employee morale."

The legislation, she says, is needed to provide a better test of flexitime.

Just One War Crimes Case

By DON McLEOD
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The case of Frank Walus, a 55-year-old retired Chicago laborer who is losing his citizenship because he was found to have murdered 24 Jewish women and children, is only one of 169 war crimes cases the government is investigating.

But Immigration and Naturalization Service records show just one person, a former Brooklyn housewife, has ever been returned by the United States to Europe to stand trial for alleged war crimes. And she had voluntarily given up her citizenship before that action, making Walus the first U.S. citizen to lose that right and then face deportation for World War II crimes.

Walus, ordered Tuesday by federal judge Julius Hoffman to surrender his certificate of naturalization by June 9, still may appeal his case in a deportation hearing before the immigration service. His wife, Celina, said an appeal is planned.

Another Nazi, a 78-year-old former Croatian interior minister now living in California, has successfully resisted deportation for 26 years.

The difficulty in rooting out former Nazis and their collaborators now living in this country has brought congressional complaints, but a study released by the General Accounting Office earlier this month ruled out organized delays by prosecutors.

The GAO said most of the trouble stems from the passage of time and the difficulty of proceedings under immigration and nationality laws.

Some of the pending cases involve deportation efforts by the immigration service of aliens accused of war crimes. The service also is trying to revoke the citizenship of alleged war criminals who have become U.S. citizens.

The Supreme Court has ruled that deportation or citizenship revocation is legal only under "clear, unequivocal and convincing evidence." Since the alleged offenses occurred three decades ago, proof is difficult to develop.

The service said this spring that of 252 war crimes allegations received against U.S. residents since the end of the war, 83 have been ruled out for various reasons.

New Bern Viking Ship Is Returned; Battered

NEW BERN, N.C. (AP) — After a brief stint in the movies, New Bern's Viking ship has been returned looking a little worse for the wear. In fact it looks as though the film battles were very real. Estimates are that damages to the boat total nearly $2,500.

"The damage is mostly cosmetic, really," said Ed Sumrell, president of Tidewater Marine Co., Inc. where the 61-foot vessel is being repaired.

"The movie company sand-blasted the inside of the boat and beat up the seats and other parts of the inside," Sumrell said. "Most of the things were done for an aging effect."

"They also lost control of the boat at one point during a storm and came up on shore." Then there was the ship's role in the film, "The Norsemen," which involved it in a battle with Indians.

Sumrell estimates damages at $2,500. Much of that figure will go for crane and trucking fees to return the ship to its display site at Union Point, he said.

"I was a little shocked at the condition of the boat," Sumrell said. "They (the movie company) didn't tell us they were going to do all that to the boat. They just threw everything inside the boat and sent it back."

The Charles B. Pierce Film Production Co. of Shreveport, La., borrowed the ship from the city of New Bern in January and took it to Tampa, Fla. for filming.

The Pierce Co. will be solely responsible for all repair costs, said City Manager J.C. Outlaw.

Kidnap Case Bond Is Cut

VIRGINIA BEACH, Va. (AP) — A Navy wife charged with abducting an infant from a church nursery Sunday has been released on $5,000 personal recognizance bond.

Juvenile and Domestic Relations Court Judge Frederick B. Aucamp agreed Tuesday to lower the bond from $50,000 to $5,000 for Mary Henderson, 34, on the condition she be admitted to the Portsmouth Psychiatric Center.

Mrs. Henderson is accused of abducting 4-month-old Jason Jordan of Gates, N. C., from a nursery at the Rock Church on Kempsville Road about 10:30 a.m. Sunday while his parents were attending services.

Acting on a tip that Mrs. Henderson was showing a new infant to neighbors, detectives safely recovered the baby from her Navy housing project apartment about 1 a.m. Monday.

Juvenile detective G. B. St. Amand said Mrs. Henderson told him she had given birth to a stillborn son in Detroit in January.

She apparently led her husband, who has been at sea in the Mediterranean since September, to believe the boy was alive, St. Amand said.

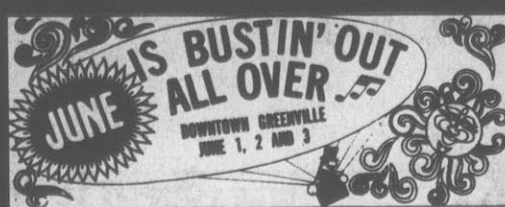

But her neighbors in the Benmore Navy housing project on the outskirts of the Norfolk Naval Station said she told them a different story.

"Ever since she came here in February, she said she had a baby boy in Detroit. But he had kidney damage so bad that he couldn't be moved. We never saw the son, so we got suspicious of her story," one neighbor said.

Sees Threat Of New Paganism

NEW YORK (AP) — The president of the Rabbinical Alliance of America, Rabbi Abraham B. Hecht, says the campaign for "gay rights" in the United States threatens "a reversion to the abominations of pagan civilization."

The Orthodox Jewish leader says his group is not "against the personal rights of individuals to practice perversion in privacy. But we cannot stand by quietly as society legitimizes homosexuality as a viable and acceptable social norm."

were buying on the theory that the market already had taken the news into account with last week's decline of more than 15 points in the Dow Jones industrial average.

Carter Administration officials went out of their way last week to warn that the April figure would bring more bad news on the pace of inflation.

Royal Dutch Petroleum led the active list in the early going, off 1/4 at 56 1/4 in a 30,000-share block trade.

On Tuesday the Dow Jones industrial average rose 2.51 to 834.20.

Advances outnumbered declines by a 7-6 margin on the NYSE.

Big Board volume came to 21.04 million shares against 21.41 million in the previous session.

The NYSE's composite common-stock index rose .16 to 54.30.

At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up .09 at 144.39.

How's The Weather?

FORECAST

Until Thursday

WEATHER FORECAST — Showers and rain are forecast today in the northern Plains and upper Great Lakes. Sunny, cool weather is due in the West. Warm weather and partly cloudy skies are scheduled for the East. (AP Laserphoto Map)

By The Associated Press
Good weather is indicated for North Carolina for the remainder of the week, according to the National Weather Service, with high temperatures generally ranging in the 80s in the west and in the low 90s in the east.

A sampling of 90-degree readings gave the feel of mid-summer to some areas Tuesday. Rocky Mount recorded a 92, and Goldsboro and Raleigh had 91 degrees as the day's high. Wilmington reported 90 degrees while some mountain areas reported highs in the comfortable 70s.

Today's forecast called for mostly sunny around the state with nice weather for outdoor activities through Thursday. Looking ahead, Friday and Saturday are expected to be very warm and humid with some thunderstorms developing late Saturday. It is expected to be partly cloudy and less humid on Sunday.

Tractor Is Lost In Fire

An early-morning fire at the end of Ford Street destroyed an $8,000 Kenworth tractor, fire and police officials said this morning.

Chief Glenn Cannon said the truck, owned by Donnie A. Dixon of Greenville, burned about 5:15 a.m.

Investigators said the truck apparently rolled down an embankment at the end of Ford Street yesterday when the brakes on the 1970 model vehicle failed.

An investigation is under way to determine the cause of the blaze that destroyed the tractor this morning.

Officers noted that the fuel tanks on the rig reportedly had been leaking and there had been some problem with the vehicle's electrical system also.

Bullets Rally By Sonics; Even Series In Overtime

SEATTLE (AP) — Whether you're rooting for the Washington Bullets or the Seattle SuperSonics, big leads spell big trouble for your team.

"I really don't think big leads are that important," said Bullets Coach Dick Motta, who watched his players dig themselves out of a 15-point third-quarter hole and climb past the Sonics 120-116 in overtime Tuesday night in Game 4 of the National Basketball Association championship series.

"I said it earlier in the series, it's difficult to keep a 15-point lead. That 24-second clock dictates that you have to keep playing," added Motta, whose Bullets learned that lesson the hard way in Game 1 when they saw a 19-point third-period lead evaporate into a four-point Seattle victory.

Tuesday night's game, which had a record crowd of 39,457 in the Kingdome on the edge of their seats throughout the final frantic minutes, ended the best-of-seven title series at two games apiece. Game 5 is set for Friday night in the Seattle Center Coliseum.

The Sonics appeared headed for a runaway victory after rookie forward Jack Sikma's three-point play gave them a 85-70 lead with 2:22 left in the third quarter. But suddenly, the Sonics stopped running, began taking bad shots and the big lead slowly began to dwindle into a big disappointment.

"We played the last quarter and a half like we had played the last playoff series against Philadelphia," said Motta, referring to the Bullets' upset of the Philadelphia 76ers in the semifinals.

"We'll come back and play harder Friday and we'll win," said Seattle guard Dennis Johnson, who scored a career-high 33 points and blocked a Bobby Dandridge shot in the final moments that assured an overtime session.

"We let them off the hook," said Sonics Coach Lenny Wilkens. "We had it and we just weren't patient. We didn't execute down the stretch."

Down the stretch is where Washington played its best.

The Bullets tied the game midway through the final period, in which they outscored Seattle 28-19, and led 106-104 after forward Bobby Dandridge hit a three-point play with 20 seconds to go.

But clutch-shooting guard Fred Brown sent the game into overtime with a jumper from the right corner with 14 seconds on the clock.

"I thought we had it won in regulation," said Motta, "but Seattle executed that play to Freddie very well, and then DJ (Dennis Johnson) came out of nowhere, like he has all series, to block Bobby's shot."

Guard Charles Johnson, who had scored just eight points in regulation time, took command in overtime for the Bullets, scoring the first basket on a fast-break layup, then beating Seattle's defense downcourt for a jumper that made it 110-106 with 3:35 to go.

The Bullets led the rest of the way.

Detroit Minnesota Gain Wins

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

Detroit rookie Steve Baker says he doesn't like to face the same team twice in a row and you can imagine how the Texas Rangers feel about their second straight fruitless run-in with Minnesota's Geoff Zahn.

Baker, a 21-year-old right-hander pitching in only his second major league game — both against Baltimore — held the Orioles to three hits in seven innings Tuesday night as the Tigers snapped a seven-game losing streak with a 5-2 victory. "I kinda like being a stopper," said Baker. "It's a challenge to go in there and try to break a losing streak."

Meanwhile, Zahn and Mike Marshall combined to shut out Texas for the second time in nine days, both by 2-0 scores.

Baker, called up last week from Evansville of the American Association had a 4-0 record and 1.88 earned run average, held Baltimore to one run in 61-3 innings in his debut last Thursday in a game eventually lost by reliever John Hiller.

Twins 2, Rangers 0

Zahn, who pitched 72-3 shut-out innings in beating the Rangers in his last outing May 22, allowed five hits in eight innings in extending his shutout string against Texas to 152-3 innings.

Red Sox 4, Blue Jays 0

Dennis Eckersley, backed by solo home runs from Rick Burleson and Dwight Evans, pitched an eight-hitter for his first shutout in a Boston uniform, his fifth triumph in six decisions and the Red Sox' eighth consecutive victory. It was the anniversary of the no-hitter he pitched last year for Cleveland against California.

Indians 5, Yankees 1

Rick Wise pitched a four-hitter, Buddy Bell and Wayne Cagle rapped consecutive RBI singles in the sixth inning off Dick Tidrow and Andre Thornton delivered a pinch two-run single off Sparky Lyle in the eighth. Wise gave up singles to Mickey Rivers and Thurman Munson in the first inning and then retired 18 consecutive batters until Chris Chambliss homered in the seventh.

Brewers 2, A's 1

Mike Caldwell scattered eight hits and Don Money singled home Charlie Moore with the tie-breaking run in the seventh inning. It was Caldwell's fifth victory, matching his total for all last season, and his fifth complete game.

White Sox 6, Angels 2

Chet Lemon and Lamar Johnson hit consecutive home runs in the third inning off Frank Tanana.8-2, as the White Sox posted their fourth straight triumph while the Angels lost their fourth straight for the first time this season.

Missing when the tournament begins Thursday morning will be Jack Nicklaus, who has played the Kemper on only two occasions. Also absent will be Tom Watson, Hubert Green and Mac McLendon. The latter two are playing in a benefit tournament staged by blind golfer Charley Boswell in their home state of Alabama.

Preceding the tournament today was a pro-am featuring crooner Perry Como.

Walt Atkins Named As New Pirate SID

Walt Atkins, assistant sports information director at North Carolina State University for the past six years, was named today the new sports information director at East Carolina University.

Atkins replaces Ken Smith, SID at East Carolina the last four years, who resigned to enter a management position with Sporttime Racket Club in Greensboro.

A graduate of the University of Maryland with a B.S. in journalism in 1972, Atkins brings impressive credentials to his new Pirate position. Atkins has worked five football bowl games, the NCAA basketball finals, the NIT basketball tournament, several regional basketball tournaments, five ACC basketball tournaments, and numerous other ACC, regional and national championship events in several sports.

Prior to joining N.C. State, Atkins served as a student assistant at the University of Maryland from 1968 to 1972. During that period, Atkins also worked numerous NCAA championship events, including basketball, wrestling, track and field, soccer and lacrosse finals.

Atkins received national recognition for brochures in wrestling at Maryland in 1972 and swimming at N.C. State in 1973 and 1974.

In addition to working events and editing brochures, Atkins edited news and feature releases and handled various special projects while at N.C. State. Among his special projects was the writing and editing of the script for a 25-minute "David Thompson Era" highlight film.

The 28-year-old Atkins graduated from Thomas Jefferson High School in Alexandria, Va., and is a native of Atlanta, Ga.

He is married and has one daughter.

Atlanta Champ Heard Guns For Kemper Win

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Jerry Heard, winner of the Atlanta Classic Sunday after bouncing back from injuries that had taken him off the pro golf tour for months at a time, has history behind him in gunning for two victories in a row at the Kemper Open this week.

Shooting for a $60,000 first prize in the $300,000 tournament that runs Thursday through Sunday at Quail Hollow Country Club, Heard joins a field that features all but about a dozen of the top 100 money winners this year.

Tom Weiskopf, three-time winner and defending champion, tops the lineup that also includes such stars as Gary Player, Lee Trevino, Arnold Palmer, Ray Floyd, Hale Irwin, Ben Crenshaw, Lanny Wadkins, Miller Barber, Lou Graham and 1978 PGA tournament winners Jay Haas, Bill Rogers, Gil Morgan, Barry Jaeckel, Lon Hinkle and Jim Simons.

Heard, noted for his wisecracking nature and for whistling on the golf course as he works, has played well in the Kemper. He is the fifth leading money winner in the tournament.

Pitcher Hurls One-Hitter In First Game

By BRUCE LOWITT
AP Sports Writer

If Silvio Martinez is looking for a pitcher to emulate, Juan Marichal is certainly a better choice than Bobo Holloman. Silvio, a 22-year-old righthander for the St. Louis Cardinals, making his first major league start Tuesday night, held the New York Mets hitless for six innings. Three more and he would have matched the feat Holloman achieved way back on the night of May 6, 1963 — a no-hitter in his first big-league start. Holloman did it for the St. Louis Browns, a 6-0 victory over the Philadelphia Athletics. But in the seventh inning, leadoff batter Steve Henderson pounced on a Martinez pitch and sent it far over the left field wall. End of no-hitter and end of shutout. Eventually the Cards won 8-2 — but Henderson's hit was the only one the Mets managed. It could be a better one than if he'd pulled a Holloman.

Marichal went on to become a consistent all-star, chalking up 243 career victories...which is to say 240 more than Holloman, who vanished after one year and a 3-7 record in the majors. The Cards scored twice in the second off Jerry Koosman on Ken Reitz's single. RBI singles by Garry Templeton in the third and Mike Tyson in the fourth made it 4-0, then they blew it open against reliever Butch Metzger with four runs in the seventh, three on George Hendrick's homer, his fourth of the season and the first since being obtained last Sunday from San Diego.

needed. Carlton hurled a five-hitter. Expos 7, Cubs 4 Montreal's outfielders, Ellis Valentine, Andre Dawson and Warren Cromartie, homered in the Expos' victory over Chicago. The Cubs' NL East lead was shaved to 1 1/2 games over the Expos and Phillies. Valentine's two-out homer in the fourth off Rick Reuschel broke a scoreless tie. Dodgers 10, Padres 2 Rick Rhoden's four-hitter and homers by Steve Garvey and Lee Lacy carried Los Angeles past the Padres. The Dodgers blasted Eric Rasmussen off the mound in his first start since being obtained from St. Louis, scoring seven runs off him in the first two innings. Braves 4, Reds 3 Gary Matthews' leadoff homer, a first-pitch rocket over the center field fence off Cincinnati relief star Doug Bair, gave Atlanta its 10-inning triumph. Bair, who entered the game with an 0.60 earned-run average, left it at 0.89.

Guillermo Vilas Is Gunning For Bjorn Borg In French Open

PARIS (AP) — Argentina's Guillermo Vilas says now that he's proved he can win the big ones, he wants to dispel another myth: that Sweden's Bjorn Borg is invincible. "Everybody thought I had a complex about winning the big tournaments but last year I won them," said Vilas, who last year won the U.S. and French open tennis championships. "It's time to end this talk about a complex." The short, stocky 25-year-old from Mar del Plata, Argentina, polished off new Zealand's Onny Parun 6-0, 6-4, 6-0 Tuesday in his opening match in the $400,000 French Open at Roland Garros Stadium. Afterward the defending champion said he had no qualms about facing the cool 21-year-old Swede, who is seeded first here and won the French open in 1974 and 1975. Borg won the Italian open last week. "If I were afraid of anybody, I just wouldn't play tennis," said Vilas. No. 2 seed. "Our games are very similar. Borg might be a little faster, but I am stronger." Borg plays his opening match on Wednesday against France's Eric Deblicker. In other action Tuesday, Italy's Adriano Panatta rallied from behind to register a 3-6, 6-2, 6-3, 6-1 victory over Czechoslovakia's Jiri Granat. Americans Harold Solomon, Brian Gottfried, Arthur Ashe, Eddie Dibbs and Billy Martin also advanced into the second round field of 64. No. 8 seed Solomon, always a contender here, kept Britain's John Feaver pinned to the baseline with an endless onslaught of driving topspin, to win 6-2, 7-5, 6-2. Ashe appeared confident, despite heel surgery last year, in brushing aside Australia's Phil Dent 6-4, 6-1, 6-2. Ashe, 34, is unseeded, having returned to tournament play only recently. Gottfried, last year's runner up here, dumped fellow American Bill Scanlon 6-2, 6-2, 6-0. No. 5 Manuel Orantes had a long, drawn out battle with Holland's Tom Okker, finally winning 3-6, 6-3, 6-2, 6-2. No. 4 Eddie Dibbs crushed Spain's Antonio Munoz 6-1, 6-3, 6-1. In the only upset of the day, France's Gilles Moretton eliminated countryman Francois Jauffret 6-7, 6-3, 6-3, 6-4.

Tar Heels To Face Oral Roberts

By ELLEN HADDOW
Associated Press Writer
OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Arizona State and Southern California have been here before — in fact, many times before. But for Oral Roberts, it's the first time the Oklahoma college has qualified for the College World Series. "We think it's the best baseball team we've ever had," Oral Roberts Athletic Director Bob Brooks said Tuesday. "We went to the regionals in 1973 but didn't make it out. This team didn't lose a game the month of May." The Titans were ranked third this week by Collegiate Baseball, behind top-ranked Southern California and defending champion Arizona State. Ranked fourth was Miami of Florida, followed by Michigan, Baylor and North Carolina — all College World Series teams this year. Non-qualifiers Memphis State and Arizona were tanked eighth and ninth, respectively, while St. John's of New York, the eighth team in the CWS, was ranked tenth. Oral Roberts, a 10-year-old college in Tulsa, Okla., will bring a 44-10 record to Omaha. The Titans have won their last 18 games and played all but four of their entire schedule against Division I teams, Brooks said. They'll meet North Carolina, the South regional winner, in the first round. Arizona State, making its 10th appearance in the CWS, is back to defend its title. And Southern Cal has qualified 17 times, winning the national title in its last appearance in 1974. The Trojans have won 63 College World Series games — many more than any other NCAA institution playing in the CWS.

Firemen Are Given Assist By Satellite

By KRIS MORTENSEN
STOCKHOLM, Sweden (UPI) — Within a couple of months a computer in Cleveland, Ohio, will become the newest staff member of the fire department in the southern Swedish city of Malmö.

The computer is presently being fed with vital information about 400 companies in the Malmö area — items such as the location of emergency exits, power and water cutoffs, the number of employees in a plant and where any poisonous or flammable materials may be stored.

The fire department needs that information at a moment's notice when answering an alarm.

The computer will be linked by satellite to the companies' automatic alarm systems via the fire department's alarm center.

At the same time an alarm sounds in the station, the computer will be signaled to call up the relevant information and reproduce it on two teleprinters in the station at 1,200 words-per-minute, fast enough for the firemen to rip off a copy to take with them when answering the call.

"We must have the information within 60 seconds of an alarm," Fire Chief Bengt Lindell said. "We can do this with the computer."

Malmö chose to rent time in a computer at Honeywell Bull in Cleveland instead of at home because, Lindell said, "When we started, no company in Sweden could give us 24-hour priority."

The fire department does not need the computer for this particular job. Station personnel can manually pull information about any of the 400 companies fast enough from fire house files.

"But we had to start somewhere," Lindell said. "After the 400 companies we can start programming information about the special needs of handicapped people living in Malmö. That will be the next step we take. We can't do this manually."

Lindell said the inspiration for using the computer hook up came from reading about similar systems in trade papers and discussing them at conferences in Europe.

"We saw one in Glasgow, Scotland, where they have their own mini computer. We're smaller, so the time-sharing system is cheaper for us," he said.

"We went to Honeywell because it's their system in Glasgow. They were easy to talk to because they knew the problems."

The cost to Malmö taxpayers will vary depending on how much the system is used. Beyond the $13,000-15,000 start up cost, the fire chief reckons initial charges will average about $7,800 annually.

"That's not so much when you consider the fire brigade's budget is 42 million kronor ($9 million) a year," Lindell said.

There have been questions raised about the desirability of having information about several hundred Swedish companies collected and stored in a foreign computer.

"Ideally, it would naturally be better if such a system could be kept within the country," said industry federation director Gunnar Vinge.

"But if that isn't possible, one must weigh the improved fire protection which can be created with the disadvantages which occur in connection with having the computer abroad. When it comes to the possibilities of, for example, unauthorized tapping of the data system for information, it can just as well happen in Sweden," Vinge said.

Former Stray Is 'Number One'

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Tramp, a 9-year-old former stray belonging to Patricia Walters, has been named Franklin County's No. 1 dog in a contest sponsored by the County Animal Control.

Miss Walters was one of about 350 dog owners who, in 25 words or less, described why they felt their dogs were tops. Her entry read: "He snuggles at my feet each night. He's there when I come home. He listens to my problems. Thanks to Tramp, I'm not alone."

Tramp was four months old when he showed up at an elementary school here. Teachers there found owners for the pup three times, but due to unforeseen circumstances, each owner brought him back.

Finally, Miss Walters, a third-grade teacher, agreed to adopt him.

To Excavate A Lost City In Old Egypt

By RALPH C. WAKLEY
SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — University of Utah archaeologists say they will return to Egyafiyah, in December. Hammond said. "The evidence showed it was an occupied site from about 400 B.C. to about 700 A.D."

The team used proton magnetometers and soil resistivity instruments to scan for evidence of ancient occupation remains beneath the surface.

"The raw data showed probable evidence of structures," the professor of anthropology said.

He said recent excavation of a water canal through the site left a great deal of debris on the surface. "We had the rare opportunity of dating the main occupation periods by analyzing pottery fragments."

"Our surface findings indicate that the site may have been associated with the Nabataeans, an Arab people who controlled some of the most important trade routes in the ancient world."

He said the surface material included stamped handles from large wine jars exported from the Isle of Rhodes, luxury dinnerware from Asia Minor and Italy, and large quantities of coins. He said the finds also included some stone tools "which may date back to the middle Paleolithic period, 65,000 to 35,000 years ago."

"More than 1,000 sites in the vast area from the Dead Sea to the Sinai border of Egypt bear the marks of Nabataean occupation," Hammond said.

He said Shuqafiyah became a major city under the Ptolemaic Dynasty. Macedonians who helped Alexander the Great occupy Egypt. It was also a Roman site, "and thus possibly also a Nabataean trade center on the major caravan route through Sinai from Persia and India to Egypt."

"We believe it may have been an important center for carrying on Nabataean culture after their capital of Petra fell to the Roman legions in 106 A.D."

He said the university will take 20 students to Petra, about 180 miles south of Amman, Jordan, for a six-week excavation from June 17 to July 28, and then take another 20 students to Shuqafiyah from Aug. 6 to Sept. 16. The students will be drawn from universities across the United States.

Ulster Eyes Tourist Rise

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (UPI) — Some 50,000 American tourists are expected to visit Northern Ireland within three years, assuming a gradual return to normality, says Don Concannon tourism minister.

The minister was speaking at a reception to welcome the first group of U.S. travel agents to visit the province for 10 years. A second party of U.S. travel agents will visit Northern Ireland in August.

"This is the first organized visit of its type since 1968 and is regarded by the Northern Ireland Tourist Board and my Department of Commerce, which has overall responsibility for tourism, as a major breakthrough in the redevelopment of the American market," said Concannon.

He said that in 1968 about 50,000 American tourists visited Northern Ireland, and last year the figure was estimated at 21,000. The Tourist Board hopes to see a return to the 1968 level.

It is estimated that 25 to 30 million U.S. citizens have their roots in Ulster. The tour program is aimed largely at the Scots-Irish societies and the Ulster associations throughout the United States.

Interest in genealogy has grown in America, Concannon said, and the Northern Ireland Tourist Board has been active in the development of an American heritage trail within the province.

Hidden Asset In Crankcase Oil

BARTLESVILLE, Okla. (UPI) — Waste in motor oil from car crankcases may prove to be a "hidden asset" in obtaining better use of our natural resources. Phillips Petroleum has devised a method of re-refining used motor oil cheaply and efficiently, while producing a product comparable to "virgin" motor oil. The company notes used motor oil can be re-refined over and over again to ease the demand for "virgin" oil feedstocks.

Pass Pass
Opening lead: Four of ♥.

Bridge would be such an easy game if partners simply could tell each other what to play. Yet, with proper carding, that is exactly what they can do in a number of cases. Observe how East and West managed to communicate with each other on this deal.

Despite his 14 points, North's hand is a doubtful opening bid because it is aceless. However, that did not affect the final contract. Even had North passed, South would have opened one spade and four spades would still have been reached.

West led his fourth best heart. The normal procedure would be for East to win with the king and then cash the ace. However, East wanted to communicate to his partner that he held only the two high hearts and no other, so he reversed the procedure and won the first trick with the ace and then cashed the king.

West took note of his partner's departure from standard practice, and got the message that East was trying to convey. It was obvious to West that he had to get in quickly to return a heart. If declarer was allowed to obtain the lead he would draw trumps and the heart ruff would go away. Therefore, it was imperative to indicate to East that West's entry was in diamonds and not in clubs.

He achieved this by following suit to the second trick with the nine of hearts. East knew that his partner had to have lower cards in the heart suit. West's play of a high heart had to have lead-directing implications—it asked for a return of the higher-ranking side suit. (Had West wanted a club return, he would have followed with his lowest heart.)

Trusting his partner, East shifted to a diamond. West grabbed the ace and reverted to a heart, and East's ruff was the fourth trick for the defense. Declarer was down before he even started playing.

Your play to the first trick could decide the fate of the contract! A writer once remarked: "There's no such thing as a blind opening lead, only deaf opening leaders!" Justice Marshall Delays Extradition Processes

WASHINGTON (AP) — The extradition of North Carolina prison escapee Joan Little has been delayed until at least Thursday by U.S. Supreme Court Justice Thurgood Marshall.

Marshall, acting on a request by Miss Little's attorneys, ordered the extradition delayed until at least Thursday.

The court's nine justices will study Miss Little's request for a longer postponement of her return at their closed conference Thursday. Further word could come after that meeting.

Previous attempts by Miss Little to avoid extradition had failed in New York state courts, a federal trial court and the 2nd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals. Miss Little escaped from the Women's Correctional Center in Raleigh, N.C., last October where she was serving time for breaking and entering. She was recaptured in New York in December.

Since then she has sought to block her return to the state. Her attorneys have argued that "there is a plan or conspiracy on the part of various officials of the state to murder her should she be returned..."

GALLERY TO OPEN — A statue by Aristide Maillol overlooks the central courtyard of the National Gallery of Art's East Building in Washington as preparations continue toward

President Carter officially opening the $94.4 million building on Thursday. A mobile by Alexander Calder swings overhead. (AP Laserphoto)

The lawyers say they should be allowed to present evidence to back up their contentions. Miss Little "is not asking that her serious and shocking allegations be accepted at face value by this or any other court," lawyers William Kunstler and Jerry Paul said in their request for Supreme Court intervention.

'Why I choose to smoke'

"Why kid anyone? I smoke because I enjoy it. I'm the kind of guy who gets pleasure out of a cigarette. But I'm not deaf to what's being said about tar.

"So I searched out a cigarette that would give me taste with low tar. And two years ago I found it in Vantage. Vantage has all the taste I enjoy yet, surprisingly, much less tar than my old brand.

"Why did I choose Vantage? Because I like it."

Sees Bitter Business War

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (UPI) — An economic war between the Sun Belt and the Snow Belt threatens America, warns a Missouri commerce official.

Steven R. Hurst, director of Missouri's Department of Community and Economic Development, reports that "a bitter battle is being waged over regional dominance of our economy."

The fast growth of the South and Southwest regions of the U.S. has promoted back, and sometimes retaliatory, response from the North. Hurst notes that 17 North and Midwest states from Maine to Minnesota — backed by 200 Congressmen — have banded together to form the East-Midwest Coalition.

Competition between states for new business, Hurst says, is at an all-time high.

Works Of Art Are Restored

NEW YORK (AP) — Paintings, sculpture, furniture and folk art are among 75 works of art from the New York Historical Society's collection which were recently restored and now are on exhibit at the society through Dec. 31.

The display, called "New Life for Old Objects," includes documentation and photographs which illustrate the process of revitalizing works such as Thomas Cole's "Course of Empire," the "Peale Family Portrait" and an 18th-century silk parade banner.

Diversity Is The Hallmark Of David Frost Show

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) —
When you have such diverse types as John Travolta and the

Bee Gees of "Saturday Night Fever" sharing the bill with ex-CIA chief Richard Helms, it's likely David Frost is behind it all.

He is. And tonight, "Headliners with David Frost," a one-hour show he calls a "fopical mini-series," starts a six-week NBC tour, mixing pop
and hot poop with a few jokes, gossip and a "song of the week."

While the British interviewerentertainer is hosting the effort live from the same New York studio whence "Saturday Night Live" comes, all of tonight's interviews are on tape.

Travolta spoke of his life.
Frost said, while piloting the DC-3 he owns above Southern California. The Bee Gees spoke
and hot poop with a few jokes,
gossip and a "song of the
week."

The last chat may prove of interest to reporters, predicted
Frost, who last year aroused similar interest with his exclusive interviews of former President Richard M. Nixon for five television shows.

He said Helms, CIA boss during the Johnson and part of the Nixon administrations, will discuss such things as Watergate, assassination plots against Fidel Castro, drug-testing and the CIA in Chile.

Helms also offers opinions of the man eventually named to run the CIA during Nixon's second term — William Colby, coincidentally the main interview in the July issue of Playboy magazine.

Interestingly, while such Watergate folk as Nixon, John Dean and H.R. Haldeman got many bucks for their accounts of White House life, Helms is getting naught for tonight's show, not even union scale.

But it's at Helms' request, added Frost, who paid Nixon $600,000 plus 10 per cent of net profits for the latter's TV interviews.

"He's (Helms) not receiving a penny," he said by phone from New York. "He felt, following publication of the books by Nixon and Haldeman, that the time had come for him to speak."

"But he positively requested — and we agreed — that he receive no remuneration."

He agreed this seems odd, considering that almost every major Watergate figure has achieved a healthy bank account by writing, talking, or both about what happened.

"It's refreshing, I must say," he mused. "In that sense, he puts himself into a very different category by that very act."
Frost's "Headliners" shows, in addition to light and heavy interviews live and taped, also will feature gossip columnist
Liz Smith, studio debates and questions from a studio audience.

All this makes sort of a blend of "60 Minutes," "Your Hit Parade," Dick Cavett and Rona Barrett, does it not? Frost, recently signed to a 3½-year contract with NBC, laughed.

"I might not necessarily lay the same emphasis on the last part of your categorization," said the 38-year-old star.

"I just hope it'll be as unredictable and spontaneous as possible, and concerned with what's happening right now in America."

possible, and concerned with what's happening right now in America."

Will Confer On Sports Injuries

CHICAGO (UPI) — Physicians will learn the latest methods of treating athletic injuries at the American Medical Association's 20th Conference on Medical Aspects of Sports.

The conference will be held Saturday, June 17, in St. Louis (Stouffer's Riverfront Towers) in conjunction with the 127th Annual Convention of the AMA.

Col. James L. Anderson, director of physical education for the United States Military Academy at West Point, will report on the integration of the new young women cadets into the Academy's rigorous physical training program, which resulted in stress fractures at an incidence rate 10 times as high for the women as for the men.

States Moving For Simpler Consumer Contracts

By CAROL DEEGAN
NEW YORK (AP) — Teri Rosen believes consumers should be able to understand the leases, loan forms, retail credit agreements and other consumer contracts they are asked to sign each day.

"There is a growing awareness on the part of consumers of the right to be able to read what we sign," said Mrs. Rosen, 28, "and an awareness on the part of business that it makes good sense to communicate to people in a language they can understand."

In addition, several states, including the state of New York, are adopting legislation that makes mandatory the simplification of certain consumer contracts.

So, Mrs. Rosen has become founder and president of a consulting firm that helps business and professional people write clearly.

"We help take the mystery out of contracts, leases, insurance policies and other business forms that say 'sign here,'" she said. "We help create written materials that are technically correct, legally sound and, at the same time, easy to read."

Mrs. Rosen said more easily readable contracts can help the consumer — and business.

"Consumers are aware of the fact that they have practically a God-given right to sue. I don't like what my landlord does. I'm going to take him to court," she said.

"Well, that's fine, except the courts are backed up with people like this because they do not understand what their responsibilities are and what happens if they don't keep their responsibilities."

The first three pages of a lease agreement may contain a description of the apartment building, with building codes and many other kinds of information.

"Yes, it's important information, but not to you. You want to know which apartment do I have, how much do I have to pay for it and when? And how often do I get a paint job and whose responsibility is it to pay for the electricity? That's what we want to know," she said.

Mrs. Rosen tells her clients to get to the point of their document right away. Tell people in the first sentence and, if possible, in big letters, what they have to do.

Do landlords, insurance companies and others deliberately write their forms so that the consumer will not be able to understand what he is reading?

"You know, I have to admit that when I first started doing this, I expected there would be a kind of conspiracy afoot to deliberately make the language obscure and all that," she said.

But, she added, it has been her experience that businesses are open to suggestions to simplify their documents; that often they don't realize just how obscure their documents are.

"It saves time and money in the long run, it's good public relations, and so the response has been favorable," Mrs. Rosen said.

Staff members of the firm, Wordwright, have rewritten a booklet for Equitable Life, making insurance easy to understand, she says. They also have rewritten the parking violation forms for the New York City Department of Consumer Affairs, among other projects.

The staff includes writers, lawyers and public health specialists. And they do more than just simplify vocabulary.

"We look at the logic of the document, whatever it is, and try to figure out what the audience it's intended for wants to know. And we tell them as clearly as possible," Mrs. Rosen said.

Mrs. Rosen's personal background includes a master's degree from the Department of Language Reading Development of the University of California at Berkeley; a teaching assignment in Rome; and a job as executive editor in charge of testing and readability at a major publishing company in New York City.

Her future plans include perhaps a book, and definitely some articles for people in business. And she would some day like to create a new readability formula, a general guide that would be geared toward business correspondence.

Giving Exhibit Of Embroidery

NEW YORK (AP) — "Embroidery Through the Ages," a show that runs from June 6 through Sept. 2 at the Cooper Hewitt Museum here, combines pieces from the Musee des Arts Decoratifs in Paris and a group from the museum's own collection of fine and rare embroideries.

The French exhibition contains over 200 items spanning six centuries of hand and machine embroideries. Included are bed hangings, towels and other domestic pieces; clothing and accessories; and "white work" embroidery on clothing, parasols and other items, done by women as piecework at home.

Adequate Rural Health Care Is Liked To Money

By DAN CHISZAR
DENVER (UPI) — There is no question that most doctors would rather practice in cities than in rural America these days. The question is why.

The answers given are many: county living is boring, lack of intellectual stimulation, poor quality of schools, remoteness from medical mainstems.

Dr. Amos Bratrude, a second generation country doctor who runs a small hospital in Omak, Wash., likes to come to the point. It is money, he says.

"But it has always been dirty to talk about money," Bratrude said recently at the American Medical Association's 31st National Conference on Rural Health.

"Somehow the rural area was purer than the rest of society and money didn't matter to those who deliver rural health care. Well, I have news for you: money does matter."

Bratrude doesn't deny that doctors aren't attracted to rural practice for reasons other than income, but he has taken up the task of showing up at AMA conventions and saying: "Money ain't everything, but it's a lot."

Some statistics tossed out by Bratrude illustrate his point:

— The average annual payments for Medicare benefits for an elderly person in a city such as Los Angeles in 1972 were $425 compared to $296 for a recipient living in a non-metropolitan area.

— 50 percent of the poor people in the United States live in non-metropolitan areas, but only 30 percent of the Medicaid funds go to those areas.

— Medicare patients paid $67 for coverage in 1972. Rural Medicare patients received $56 back in benefits. City patients got back $160 in benefits.

"Pure and simply put, the patient in the rural area is receiving substantially less of the health care dollar than the health care patient in the city," said Bratrude.

"So no matter what else we look at, one of the reasons, and I feel the major reason, that we have a problem in the delivery of rural health care, is that we aren't spending the money there."

"Every other place in our society we have the philosophy, you get what you pay for. I'm sure it applies to the rural area as well. We are getting what we are paying for."

Doctors have to eat too, says Bratrude, not one to mince words, and money counts a lot in their decision to practice in rural areas.

"In the past, the rural family doctor had the privilege of working long hours, seeing lots of patients and performing lots of technical things — surgery, obstetrics, etc.," he said.

"These all combined to make his income pretty good, regardless of the fee schedule. The old doctor also had the privilege of working so hard he often ended up with a bad heart, a bad family life and certainly a demanding, difficult practice."

"There is no way to sell that life and that practice to the young doctor coming out today."

"Today, the family practice counterpart in the city has a lower patient load, less on-call time, and a less stressful practice. In addition, the counterpart has a higher income. Where would you choose to live and practice?"

Bratrude argues for serious altering of our present health care systems to give rural regions a fair shake. But before that, he would like to see the myriad federal programs in rural health care studied and coordinated.

For Bratrude, it adds up to this: a more equitable financial structure for those who receive and provide rural health care.

"Let us try paying the people who are delivering care in the rural area the same as we pay for that health care in the cities," he said.

"We are increasingly demanding and receiving quality care in the rural area. Let's not punish the people who choose to be there: let's pay them the same as we would pay their counterparts in the city."

PATIENCE in zoo photography is rewarded with a photograph that usually shows some unique expression, an off-beat posture or an interesting interaction between two or more animals—or hopefully, a combination of all three. This photo is by Walter Chandoha.

By WALTER CHANDOHA
For AP Newsfeatures

This is the time of the year when photographers get spring fever. They're itching to get outdoors to start shooting pictures again — this spring especially, considering the bad weather experienced by most of the country.

How about the zoo? Just as photographers get "cabin" fever and are fed up with being indoors all winter, so are animals. And when they are permitted to go outdoors after being inside for months they are lively and energetic — which makes for good pictures.

Every zoo, no matter how big or how small it is, has at least one exhibit or one animal that is outstanding from a photographic viewpoint. However, some days this outstanding photographic subject may be hiding his talents. Like people, animals have moods. Some days they are jubilant and happy, yet on other days they have the blahs. This is especially true of the big apes — the chimps, orangutans and gorillas.

So when you go to the zoo, first make a complete circuit of all of the exhibits to get an idea of what type of animals are available and how the light falls on which exhibits at what time of the day. Then plan to spend some time at the exhibit that you feel is most promising. You'll get good pictures if you're patient. And patience is the first ingredient necessary for good animal photographs.

Equipment is the next essential ingredient. A 35mm single-lens reflex camera is an excellent camera for zoo photography. And if at some point in the future, an African safari is a possibility, much the same equipment can be used. Telephoto lenses are essential.

Probably the most versatile is an 80 to 200mm zoom lens. Animals move about in their enclosures and with a zoom they can be kept tightly framed. In some zoos, however, the maximum focal length of the zoom will be just a little too short so the next choice should be a 300mm telephoto.

Both the 300mm and the zoom can be hand-held when shooting at a shutter speed of 1-500th of a second or faster. At slower speeds I would recommend shooting off a tripod, unipod or photo clamp if circumstances permit their use. If not, then at least use a fence post, guard railing or a friend's head or shoulder to steady the lens.

I have made needle sharp pictures at 1-30th of a second, but I've also made a lot of fuzzy ones at the same speed, and at 1-60th, and at 1-125th and even at 1-250th. So believe me when I say use a tripod or a shutter speed of at least 1-500th.

Film? Any one you are currently using. Flash? Forget it. Filters? Forget them. Exposure meter? By all means. A built-in meter on the camera if it works properly is OK. Maybe even a backup, hand-held exposure meter would be a good idea — every professional I know always has a backup meter.

And guess what we use to back up the backup meter? The paper exposure table that comes packed with every roll of film. It's always a good idea to refer to these tables to verify the readings indicated by the exposure meters. I know that for ASA 64 film, the exposure for bright sunlight is f-8 at 1-250th of a second. The paper guide tells me the same thing. If the meters tell me something different, I believe the piece of paper and my experience.

That's it — an SLR camera, a telephoto lens or two, a tripod and you're all set for zoo photography. Most important is that vital ingredient — patience.

The $25,000 Nestegg.

Are you sitting on a $25,000 Nestegg?

You're richer than you think you are.

If you bought your house in the last seven years, it could be worth 50% more than you paid for it. And you could be sitting on a $25,000 Nestegg.

Commercial Credit can make you a Second Mortgage Nestegg Loan of eight, twelve—even twenty-five thousand dollars (if you need that much) based on today's real estate values.

And how you use the money is your business. For home improvement, to consolidate bills, buy a new car, whatever.

The chart below shows how little the monthly payments can be on Nestegg Loans to twenty-five thousand dollars. Look it over, check out the present value of your house, then fill in the Loan Request on the back page.

Or, if you're in a hurry, call the Commercial Credit office nearest you. We have thirty-three in North Carolina to serve you. They're listed on the back page also, along with telephone numbers and addresses.

Come on in, let's talk. We find ways to help North Carolina's business, industry and good neighbors like you.
