Expelled, Says Izvestia

NOW ACCUSED OF BEING SPY — Martha Peterson, right, sits with U.S. Consul Clifford Gross last year in Moscow. On the table is alleged evidence of espionage that the Soviets claim belonged to Peterson. She left the U.S.S.R. last July, but the government newspaper Izvestia claimed Monday that she was in fact expelled for espionage and that American Ambassador Malcolm Toon had requested at the time to keep the matter quiet. Commissioners Get Requests Of Schools

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Pitt County Commissioners, who have scheduled a public hearing on the proposed 1978-1979 budget for 2 p.m. Friday, yesterday heard representatives from the Pitt County and Greenville City school systems outline their budget requests for the coming fiscal year.

Together, the two school systems have asked for $1.47 million in current expense funds and $926,400 in capital outlay funds over the amount budgeted for the current fiscal year — an amount equivalent to a 26.59 cents per $100 valuation increase in the tax rate.

The city school system, which this year received $2.46 million in current expense money, has requested $2.81 million. The system requested $393,800 for capital improvements as compared with current appropriations of $1.35 million.

The county system, which received $4.56 million this year for current expense spending, has requested $5.11 million. The system received $752,300 this year for capital improvements and has requested $1.24 million.

County manager Reginald Gray has recommended a 10.6 per cent increase in current expense spending for the schools for the 1978-1979 fiscal year — $2.29 million for the city system and $4.67 million for the county.

In the area of capital improvements, Gray has recommended a 33.2 per cent decrease over the current year — $173,100 for Greenville and $329,000 for the county — citing the fact that the Board of Commissioners in September, 1975 told both school boards the the county could not meet the capital outlay needs of both systems on a pay-as-you-go basis and requesting that both boards of education develop a plan for a bond issue for school construction.

Reviewing the city schools current expense budget, superintendent Glenn Cox indicated most of the problem with the recommended budget came in the area of personnel.

Gray, in his budget message to the board, noted that funds were limited because the city school board amended the budget for the current year without the approval of the Board of Commissioners, "in the amount of $181,533."

He explained that the $181,500 balance on hand was used to fund pupil, staff and administrative support services for which state funds were reduced, "because of the reduction of their student average daily membership."

Cox yesterday told commissioners, "there's no argument with the problem. I know where it is."

The city superintendent, saying some $10,000 is needed in the capital expense budget to zone the heating system at Rose High School, in addition to the amount recommended in the proposed budget, told commissioners, "we're in a position we can sit down and talk with some people about a bond issue," now.

Pitt school superintendent Ott Alford, commenting on the county's current expense budget, said, "I cannot disagree at all. He's (Gray) recommended a continuation of the present program."

Alford, however, pointed out several positions the

Another American Held By Soviet Government

By SETH MYDANS
Associated Press Writer

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet government arrested an American businessman in Moscow a few hours after it charged a woman CIA agent formerly attached to the American Embassy with espionage and complicity in murder-by-poison.

An embassy spokesman said P. Jay Crawford, a Moscow representative of International Harvester, was arrested by police Monday night while driving in downtown Moscow with his American fiancee, a member of the embassy staff. It was not known where he was being held.

"Our embassy immediately raised the subject with the militia and the Ministry of Foreign Affairs," the spokesman said.

"We have made several representations to the Foreign Ministry on this subject and will continue to do so until we receive a satisfactory answer, which we have not received as yet."

Crawford's companion was Virginia Olbrish, who works in the embassy's commercial section. She alerted U.S. officials.

A well-informed Soviet source said he believed Crawford had been detained on suspicion of currency violations. He said it would be stretching a point to connect the arrest with the report earlier Monday in Izvestia, the government newspaper, that Martha D. Peterson, a Vietnam war widow who was the embassy's third secretary, was expelled last July for espionage. The report also said she supplied poison to an accomplice who used it to kill "an innocent person who stood in his way."

The accomplice was not identified, although presumably he was a local Russian. But Izvestia said "also implicated in this espionage" was Robert Fulton, the first secretary of the embassy's political section from mid-1975 to mid-1977, and two visitors from Washington in 1975, S. Karpovich and J. Gruener.

Neither the embassy nor the State Department had any comment, but Western sources in Moscow said Miss Peterson was not declared persona non grata until after her departure. Sources in Washington who asked not to be identified said she was a CIA employee who had been working in a cover job in the embassy's consular section.

Izvestia said the charges against Miss Peterson had been kept quiet at the request of the U.S. It said they were being made public now because the U.S. government on June 1 made public its charge that the Soviet government bugged the U.S. Embassy and because of the espionage trial in New Jersey of two Soviet employees of the United Nations.

The government paper gave this account of Miss Peterson's arrest:

On the evening of last July 15, she parked her car in a poorly lit place in Moscow, changed her dress and took a series of buses to a bridge over the Moscow River, where she put "an ordinary-looking stone" into an archway.

She was detained there, the "stone" was opened, and it "proved to be a cache containing cameras, gold, money and instructions, as well as ampules with a poison.

Ruling By Green Delays Senate On Local Option

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The local option liquor-by-the-drink bill drew closer to enactment Monday night when the Senate voted to concur on three House amendments, but it was still at least a day away from becoming law.

A ruling by Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green that one of the amendments was "material" meant the Senate must vote on that amendment again Tuesday and Wednesday before the measure — already approved by both chambers — can be enacted.

Green presided over the Senate as the members voted by a large margin to concur on each of the three amendemnts. House and Senate supporters of the bill said enactment was a virtual certainty.

"I think the votes cast Tuesday and Wednesday will be by the same plurality as today," Sen. Craig Lawing, D-Mecklenburg, said.

"I'd rather it be ratified, but I'm not worried," said Rep. James Morgan, D-Guilford.

Green's ruling applied to the second amendment, which doubled to $10 the tax on each gallon of liquor sold through mixed drinks. Under the state constitution, Green said, the tax amendment must be voted on again on two separate days.

There was confusion in the chamber immediately following the vote, as Green first indicated that the entire bill, not the amendment, would be at issue Tuesday.

"The only thing before the Senate is concurrence on amendment two. The bill itself is not before the Senate," Green said after leaving the chamber.

A leading opponent, Sen. Julian Allsbrook, D-Halifax, asked Green from the floor if he could offer amendments to the bill and was first told he could.

"Well, Sen. Allsbrook can bring up as many amendments as he wants, but I can rule them out of order," Green said later.

Senate Approves N.C. Supplemental Budget Projects

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Efforts to kill the planned veterinary school, state funding of abortions and a new legislative office building failed Monday night as the Senate passed the supplemental state budget.

Supporters of those projects had little trouble defeating amendments aimed at removing each of the controversial items as the bill remained intact and was sent to the House.

The $271.6 million spending package includes $7.2 million to begin construction of the veterinary school at N.C. State University, $1 million to continue state funding of Medicaid abortions and $8.5 million for a state office building behind the Legislative Building in Raleigh.

The appropriations bill, approved by a 48-0 vote on third reading, includes $92 million in capital improvements and $179.6 for continuing projects, bringing the total state budget to $4.4 billion.

A bid to eliminate the state office building, introduced by Sen. Donald Kincaid, R-Caldwell, failed by an 11-to-35 vote. Kincaid said 8,900 new state jobs have been created in two years and added, "the people back home would be furious," if they knew of the growth of government and the new building.

Sen. Harold Hardison, D-Lenoir, chairman of the appropriations panel, defended the building and the vet school. He said the state is paying $1 million a year in rent for office space now.

"It's just good business to be in your own building if you can afford it, and we can afford it," he said. "It's not a legislative office building, although some space may be used by the General Assembly."

Sen. William Smith, D-New Hanover, proposed elimination of the vet school funding, but the move failed on a 3-44 vote. Smith called the vet school "political hogwash" that would cost the state as much as $10 million to operate.

"I say it is not political hogwash, but it's good business practice for this state," answered Hardison.

The vet appropriation would be added to $2 million allocated last year, and would permit the beginning of construction of the first phase. Eventual construction costs have been estimated at $35 million.

Sen. George Marion, D-Surry, introduced an amendment to eliminate state funding of Medicaid abortions. It failed on a 10-35 vote after little debate.

Elsewhere in the legislature Monday night, the Senate banking committee amended a controversial bank records secrecy bill to eliminate the procedure the public or the news media must go through to see non-confidential bank records. The compromise amendment also adds a sunset provision to the bill, expiring next year.

Library Bd. Talks Cuts

Closing down the new East Branch Library and Carver Library, and discontinuing the bookmobile serving Pitt County were among possible actions discussed by the Board of Trustees of Sheppard Memorial Library at a special budget session held Monday night.

Other options considered by the board include reducing the hours of service each week by shortening the number of hours Sheppard Library is open each day, or by opening only on certain days of the week.

A reduction in magazine and periodical subscriptions and fewer purchases of new books were also mentioned as possible ways to curtail expenses.

Several interested citizens attended Monday night's meeting to voice their concern. Bill Gibbs, speaking about Carver Library, said "this library is a lot of things other than book distribution. It is involved in the life of the community, is used for meetings and the RIF book distribution project among other things."

Another citizen, Bill McCumber, questioned whether a user study or survey had been made. Elizabeth Copeland, library director, stated that a study made last year showed that while about one-third of the library cards were issued to non-city residents, an actual use survey indicated that approximately 40 per cent of the users live outside the city limits of Greenville.

The possible curtailment plans discussed by the board are necessitated by recommendations of the city and county managers for the library's 1978-79 budget.

For the coming fiscal year, the library requested a total of $347,531 in local funds. When the proposed budget was reviewed by the city and county managers and presented to the governing boards, the amount recommended for the library was some $61,500 short of anticipated needs outlined in the budget request.

The bulk of the increase funds requested is needed to hire three additional staff members. Also, the increase in utilities, paper supplies, periodical subscriptions and increased purchase prices of new books have all made operations higher than ever before.

Board chairman Anne Frost assured those present that the trustees are trying to resolve the budget differences. "However," she stated, "we must face the very real fact of insufficient funds to maintain the extended services, two branch libraries and bookmobile, which we now have.

"The current staff," Mrs. Frost added, "is pushed to their limit and cannot continue without assistance. If funds to meet this need are not available, then a reduction in services has to be made.

"Priorities must be established and we need to hear from the public as to what they want and need from the library." She urged those present to "talk with other citizens and to let the city council and county commissioners know what your thoughts are on the needs of a public library."

BIKE FIX-UP

Three years ago, Hotline pointed out the need for a local organization to recycle old bicycles that individuals might donate. The Boys' Club of Pitt County Inc. took up the challenge and had very successful projects for two summer, refurbishing many bicycles to be given to foster children of the county through the Social Services Department.

The project is on for another summer! The Boys' Club is prepared to receive any used bicycle or bicycle parts. These may be brought to the Boys' Club, located at 205 W. Skinner Street between 9 a.m. and 6 p.m. Monday through Friday. Or one may have them picked up by calling the Boys' Club during the same hours, 758-4929.

"We at the Boys Club wish to thank the fine people of Greenville and Pitt County for their support of this program," the director, Chet Emerson, said. "This project enables our Boys' Club members to work towards helping others and also teaches them the skills of bicycle repair. This is a fine way to provide several boys something to keep them busy this summer."

Development Plans Of Two Businesses Okayed

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer

The development plans submitted by two businesses in the downtown district were approved Monday night by the Redevelopment Commission.

Taft Furniture Co., located on Dickinson Avenue, offered plans for a "major new addition and renovation" at its existing business.

The furniture business, it was explained, plans to add 11,000 square feet of new sales and storage area on the Sixth Street side of the property and also completely remodel the exterior of the existing 18,000 square foot facility "in order to tie in and match the existing facade with the planned new structure."

A landscaped parking area at Sixth and Evans Street is planned by Taft Furniture to accommodate some 15 customer parking spaces. The firm indicated that work on the new addition and renovation "is expected to commence in the very near future."

Plans were also announced by Carolina Office Equipment Co. for the construction of a 9,700 square foot structure on the southern end of the triangle formed by Green Street and the Pitt-Green Streets connector.

Carolina Office Equipment will utilize approximately three-fourths of the new office building for storage and retail use while the remaining section will be available for rental purposes.

The new COECO facility will actually have two fronts, it was explained, with the main front facing the point of the property toward Dickinson Avenue with an entrance to the COECO store off of the parking lot on the point side. The rental area of the new facility will have an entrance on the Green Street side, according to the plans.

The firm, which also indicated plans to begin construction soon, will provide 15 parking spaces to serve customers.

Commissioners voted to give the developers of two other downtown parcels until the end of the calendar year to make their final plans and be ready for construction.

Joe Laney, executive director, said that Louis Clark and Clarence Tugwell, who planned to develop the lot at the corner of Third and Washington Streets, have encountered problems in their building plans and have asked for the time extension.

In addition, Farmers Mutual Insurance, which owns a 12,000 square foot parcel just south of the Art Center on the west side of Evans Street, has asked for an extension of the development time in order to pursue plans to build a new structure on the tract.

Under the extension action taken by the commission on the two proposed developments, if finals plans are not ready for the two parcels by the end of the year, the Redevelopment Commission will initiate action to repurchase the property.

In other business last night, commissioners approved the bid submitted by Barfield House Movers of Farmville for the purchase of a house on Third Street behind St. Paul's Episcopal Church. The house is located on part of the property that is designated as the site for the mid-rise housing structure for the elderly.

Kirby Boyd, staff real estate officer, said that Barfield submitted a bid of $3,276.50 for the house and plans to relocate the structure.

Boyd reported that the city had inspected the house and indicated it could be moved and brought up to standards.

Commissioners approved time extensions in the contracts of Calvin Reynolds of Winston-Salem and the firm of Moore and Sauter of Greenville for first and second acquisition appraisals in the South Evans Redevelop-

Johnston County Town Spared Major Disaster

PRINCETON, N.C. (AP) — Windless conditions and the quick arrival of equipment from Seymour Johnson Air Force Base Monday apparently spared this Johnston County town a major disaster.

A truck delivering gasoline to a storage facility touched off an explosion that sent a flash of flame through the area and caused several tanks to explode.

Authorities said the explosions and fire destroyed about a quarter of Princeton's four-block business district, causing damages estimated by Police Chief G.S. Parrish at $500,000 to $750,000.

The only person seriously hurt was Clemon Eason, driver of the gasoline truck involved. He was reported in stable condition at Wayne County Hospital, where he was treated for burns on the face, arms and body.

Parrish said the speedy arrival of two foam-sparying trucks from the air base at nearby Goldsboro and the windless conditions may have saved the entire downtown area from destruction.

Three businesses, a carpet storage warehouse and three wood-frame residences were destroyed.

Fire Chief Jerry Baker speculated that static electricity may have set off the initial flash of fire after Eason had completed his delivery and was shutting off valves on the truck.

"It went like wildfire," he said. "We couldn't get to it. I figured if we could keep it within the city limits, we'd be doing all right."

He said six steel tanks filled with kerosene, fuel oil and high octane gasoline exploded one by one, spraying flaming petroleum hundreds of feet.

A truck from the air base arrived just as the sixth tank exploded, and three men wearing asbestos suits jumped out to spray foam on the remaining container of gasoline.

"If that one had gone, the town could have gone with it," Parrish said.

Students at Princeton High School, a half block away, and people in other buildings were evacuated for about two and a half hours. Volunteer fire departments from 11 communities in Johnston and Wayne counties answered the alarm.

Mrs. Jackie Ragland of Bethel was matron of honor. She wore a full length gown of blue polyester knit, featuring a mandarin collar, with cape sleeves. She wore blue baby's breath in her hair, and carried a nosegay of blue tipped carnations with white and blue pom pons, baby's breath and white and blue bow and streamers.

Mrs. Nancy Harrington and Wanda Carter, both of Greenville, served as bridesmaids. They wore dresses identical to the honor attendant, and carried identical nosegays.

Angela Morris, sister of the bride, of Seagrove, served as junior bridesmaid. She wore a full length dress of cotton and polyester voile, featuring cape sleeves and a stand-up collar which was gathered at the neck with a bow. She carried a nosegay identical to the other attendants.

Jessica Rouse, cousin of the bridegroom of Greenville, served as flower girl. Her dress was identical to the junior bridesmaid's and carried a white wicker basket of white daisies and blue and white pom pons with blue bow and streamers.

David Harrington of Greenville, cousin of the bridegroom, served as best man. Ushers were Dennis Harrington, cousin of the bridegroom, Richard D. Johnson Jr., Mike Benton, nephew of the bridegroom, all from Greenville. Derek Harrington, cousin of the bridegroom of Seagrove, served as junior usher.

The mothers and grandmothers of the bridal couple were remembered with white carnation corsages.

Ms. Sloan Spence presided at the guest register, and Mrs. Wanda Wiseman served as mistress of ceremonies.

The bride is a graduate of Fairfield High School in Fairfield, Ohio. She is presently employed with Eastern Orthopaedic Group Inc. of Greenville.

The bridegroom is a graduate of J. H. Rose High School and holds an associate degree in architectural drafting from Pitt Technical Institute, and is presently employed with Greenville Marble and Granite Works in Greenville.

For a wedding trip to Florida, the bride changed into a two-piece cotton, brown and white dress with matching accessories. Following their trip, the couple will reside in Greenville.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held in the fellowship hall of the church. The hall was decorated throughout with greenery and candles.

The appointed table, covered with an Irish linen cloth, was graced with an arrangement of blue carnations and yellow and white daisies and pom pons.

Guests were welcomed by the bride and bridegroom who introduced them to the other members of the wedding party. Mary Forrest served the guests punch and Betty Gay served the cake.

Following the rehearsal on Friday night, Mr. and Mrs. John Conway Jr. entertained the wedding party, family and out-of-town guests with a formal dinner at the King and Queen Restaurant in Greenville.

Rules Still Is Heirloom

MORGANTON, N.C. (AP) — A District Court judge has ordered Burke County authorities to return a home-built still to a man who maintained it was a family heirloom that had never been used to make liquor.

The still was confiscated by sheriff's deputies earlier this month after Lex Poteet was arrested on charges of possession of property to make liquor.

Poteet and attorney Bob Byrd maintained in court that the still was never used to make liquor — legally or illegally — and pointed out that it couldn't be used since all the parts were not present.

The antique machinery, made of copper with joints galvanized with silver, was encrusted with cobwebs and disassembled when deputies seized it. They reconstructed the still for reporters to view and apparently planned put in on display after the trial.

"There was no proof the still had ever been used in the manufacture of intoxicating liquor," Byrd told District Court Judge Bill J. Martin.

Apparently swayed by arguments that the still was more a family heirloom than a liquor factory, Martin ordered it returned to Poteet.

"Possession of a still, as such, is not illegal," said Bill Wiggins, assistant administrator of the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board. "I would think that the judge dismissed the case because the man showed he didn't have the still with intent to produce non-tax-paid liquor."

Forty-One Hurt In Bus Collision

WELCOME, N.C. (AP) — A chartered bus returning elementary school students from a visit to Winston-Salem collided with a tractor-trailer truck Monday, injuring 39 children and two adults.

The Davidson County Sheriff's Department said the injured were treated at hospitals in the area. All were released after treatment.

The students from Billingsley Elementary School in Charlotte had been to Winston-Salem for a visit to Old Salem.

Authorities said the lead bus collided with the truck on U.S. 52 between WInston-Salem and Lexington. The other bus was not involved.

Challenging Job In Greenville

This week Edward A. (Ed) Wyatt visited Greenville, where he will soon become the new city manager.

Wyatt was employed by the city council to replace James Caldwell, who resigned. The choice of a new city manager was made after an extensive search and a number of interviews.

Wyatt will be coming to Greenville from Morganton where he has served as city manager since 1973. He is no stranger to Eastern North Carolina, however, since he served from 1970-73 as ctiy manager in Washington.

Even with several years experience as a city administrator, Wyatt is still only 36 years old.

The new city manager will be coming to an expanding city as he assumes his post in Greenville. The city has growing pains and, like all municipalies, is looking for revenues to meet its needs.

We feel this will be a challenging position to Wyatt and we wish him well.

An Individual Has The Right To Choose

Over in Goldsboro, the first chapter of a group called the National Smokers' Rights Associatiom, Inc. has been organized.

Ronald L. Flynt, head of the group, said he was getting angry about the whole situation.

"Now they're talking about cutting out all smoking on flights of less than two hours' duration. It's getting ridiculous and somebody's got to do something about it."

Maybe the association is needed in our democratic society. There are too many groups trying to tell other groups what they can't do to "save them from themselves."

Lots of things we do everyday are potentially dangerous, but it is an individual's right to choose.

"You'll rue this day, fools! I took the charts and the compass!"

Clue In Birth Certification

By Bill Noblitt

CHAPEL HILL — Researchers comparing information from birth certificates with later performance by the child have come to a significant conclusion:

Children destined to do poorly in school — and most likely throughout life — can be identified at birth. That gives years of lead time to correct the condition before school failures frustrate the child and compound the problems.

Since 1968, North Carolina has required that birth certificates include information about both the mother and the child.

The mother's highest grade level completed in school, how early in her pregnancy she began receiving prenatal medical care, the number of weeks her pregnancy lasted, the number of her previous children who later died, and the number of children who died before birth are recorded.

Information on the child includes race, sex, weight, and legitimacy.

These facts now routinely recorded on all birth certificates may actually foretell the child's future, an 18-month study by the Frank Porter Graham Child Development Center concludes.

The Study

The study was funded ($67,000) by the N. C. Department of Human Resources, and conducted by the Child Development Institute of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

A team led by Dr. Craig Ramey, director of research at the child development center, studied 1,000 first-graders across the state.

Each birth certificate was examined, while the children were evaluated on four different tests—vocabulary, hand and eye coordination, teacher ratings on classroom behavior, and experiences which prepared the child for school.

The performance of the child by those measures, and the birth certificate facts were then statistically related. Researchers explain that while the performance measures alone do not prove "human capacity," they add up to valuable predictors. If a child does poorly in the measures, Ramey points out, the chances are he will fail in school, and the failures will extend through life.

BILL NOBLITT

Combining test results and birth certificate facts led researchers to conclude that the most important predictors — in order if importance — are race, mother's education, and whether the child attended preschool or kindergarten training.

Specifically: A child who is black, born of a relatively uneducated mother, and lacking in prior educational experiences is much more likely to be behind his classmates in the first grade.

Severity

Researchers continued to analyze the data, attempting to nail down how severe the risk would be of failure, and how other factors relate.

The study determined that between 10 and 16 per cent of all first-graders in the state fall in a "moderate risk" category: likely to be black, born later than their brothers and sisters, underweight at birth, and illegitimate. The mothers were not well educated and began prenatal care late in pregnancy. Those were children who scored in the bottom 16 per cent on one of the tests.

Those who scored at the bottom in all four tests were said to be severe risks—sharing the outlines factors, with two additional: a lack of educational experiences before the first grade, and a brother or a sister who died after birth. Almost three per cent of the first-graders are at severe risk.

Researchers emphasize that the results do not imply that race causes the problems, but that economic and social results of race produce circumstances leading to problems.

Regulation Has A Price

When President Carter asked the Labor Department last week to ease up on the textile industry, the president provoked some criticism he didn't really need, but he made a point that ought to be kept in mind: In terms of federal regulatory activity, there's no free lunch.

The point is often overlooked. We know that it costs a bundle to maintain the bureaucracy required to administer the various rules. Every automobile buyer, for one example, is vaguely aware that he paid something extra for emission control. We tend to forget the costs as a whole.

In a study just published by the American Enterprise Institute, economists Murray L. Weidenbaum and Robert DeFina have undertaken to estimate the annual costs of federal regulatory activity. The administrative cost alone amounts to $3.2 billion. The cost of compliance — take a breath — amounts to an estimated $64 billion a year.

This is not a net cost, of course. No one is contending that compliance does not create certain values. But the expenses of federal regulation ultimately appears in the price of everything we buy.

This was Mr. Carter's thought last week in asking the Occupational Safety and Health Admisistration to step back from the proposals OSHA orginally had advanced to control byssinosis, or brown lung, in textile mills. The debilitating disease is caused by cotton dust. OSHA had proposed to fix a standard of 0.2 milligrams per cubic centimeter of respirable dust as the maximum allowable content. The American Textile Manufacturers Institute responded by demonstrating that it would cost manufacturers $2.8 billion to install equipment required to reach such a level. The sum is three times the annual capital spending of the entire industry.

Even before Mr. Carter suggested that OSHA elevate its sights a little lower, the agency had reduced its demand to an estimated $625 million in capital spending. The Textile Institute was studying that proposition last week. Certain aspects of the problem are now tied up in U. S. District Court, where the textile workers' union, furious at the president, is pushing for prompt and tough regulation.

Mr. Carter's concern was that a stringent requirement would add to the cost of finished textiles and thus add to the cost of living. The president may also have been impressed by the industry's position that byssinosis, an allergenic disease, can be kept under reasonable control by a combination of engineering improvements and medical surveillance.

Whatever the costs of OHSA's final regulation turns out to be, the cost ultimately must be borne by consumers. The cost may be an entirely proper burden in terms of the value to textile workers. Weidenbaum and DeFina make no attempt in their study to fix values one way or another. They do observe that the $66 billion annual cost for administration and compliance amounts to $307 per person; it is twice the total federal budget for health; it is equal to three-quarters of what we spend on national defense. In brief, it is one monstrous chunk of money.

Maybe it is all worthwhile. Perhaps milk consumers are happy to pay an extra 10 percent as the cost of federal regulation of milk. Airline passengers may raise no objection whatever to the $2.7 billion the airlines must spend every year to comply with Civil Aeronautics Board requirements. Much of the activity conducted in the name of "regulation" is doubtless good and constructive.

But is all of this expense necessary? All of it? In 1976 the Environmental Protection Agency imposed compliance costs on industry amounting to $7.8 billion in plant and equipment. Given a choice, consumers might have opted for water a little

Ritual With A Twist

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG

WASHINGTON (AP) — An American jogged through Washington recently and caught his Senate in the act of trying to cloture a filibuster.

Somewhat puzzled by the exotic ritual, the American collared a senator and engaged in the following dialogue:

Q. I thought filibusters were non-stop affairs, droning on through the night in Southern accents with senators catnapping in their offices and in the cloakrooms.

A. That was the old way. We're much more civilized now. We come in around 10 in the morning and go home around 7 at night. Senators still catnap in their offices and in the cloakrooms.

Shcharansky Significance

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — The forthcoming trial of leading Soviet dissident Anatoliy Shcharansky on charges of espionage and treason has now become a dangerous focus for worsening relations between the U.S. and the Soviet Union, with President Carter's prestige in the Kremlin squarely on the line.

The president's personal word last year that the 30-yearold Jewish computer engineer was never a Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) agent would presumably give pause to the Kremlin. To convict him of that charge, in short, would be tantamount to throwing the lie at Jimmy Carter.

In fact, however, no hint of any Soviet change of heart in the Shcharansky case has reached U.S. experts here. That points strongly to an early trial, perhaps starting as soon as next week, followed by a punitive sentence. Precisely such treatment was accorded Yuri Orlov, another leading Soviet dissident sent to jail last month for seven years, with an additional five years in exile, on the charge of anti-Soviet agitation — a meager charge compared to treason.

The Kremlin is fully aware that convicting Shcharansky will have what one top Soviet expert in the Carter administration calls a "profound impact" on U.S. public opinion.

That indisputable judgment, given to us before the president's speech last Wednesday, is now heightened by Mr. Carter's words at Annapolis. In a major departure from his recent mild rhetoric on human rights, the president pulled no punches. He condemned "an abuse of human rights in their own country in violation of the agreements reached at Helsinki" that, he said, "has earned them the condemnation of people everywhere who love freedom."

But even more to Mr. Carter's point, President Leonid Brezhnev was bluntly warned that in the U.S. "public opinion is an integral factor" in the effort to reach agreement on a new strategic arms limitation treaty (SALT) and that "sharp disputes" with Moscow will unquestionably damage the SALT talks.

The Shcharansky case is near the top of the list of "sharp disputes," considering Mr. Carter's personal pledge that Shcharansky has never been an agent of U.S. espionage.

So the stage is bleakly set for another damaging blow to SALT and further exacerbation of relations between the world's two superpowers. It is hard to imagine that President Carter, deeply distressed and angered by the Soviet-Cuban moves into Africa, could have bargained for anything less when he addressed the graduating class at the Naval Academy.

That the script is all but written for Shcharansky's trial has been taken for granted here for weeks, but even more ominous signals of Soviet intentions are now piling up. Vladimir Slepak, one of the longest-term and most impeccably-credentialed Jewish "refusedniks" — Soviet Jews denied emigration visas — was arrested several days ago for hanging a banner from his Moscow apartment with the legend: "Let us out to our son in Israel." He is now in jail on a charge of "malicious hooliganism" and his wife has been notified she will be similarly charged.

Both Slepaks are intimates of Shcharansky. Their arrest is presumed to be connected with the Shcharansky trial; they would be predictable troublemakers for Soviet "justice" during the course of the trial, reminding the world through the Western press corps in Moscow of the Kremlin's human rights pledges in the Helsinki agreements.

Likewise, word has seeped into Washington from dwindling remnants of the once-flourishing Soviet dissident movement that other Soviet citizens suspected of dissident sympathies are losing the non-resident certificates needed to stay in Moscow. Clearing Moscow of potential troublemakers is standard practice before any major political trial.

Given such persuasive indications that Shcharansky's trial is now beyond recall,

Special Treatment

(Goldsboro News-Argus)

Joan Little must be given special treatment as she serves out her time in a North Carolina prison.

Some will disagree — arguing that everyone must be treated the same.

Miss Little is not the same as every other prisoner in our system.

Worldwide attention has been focused on her case. Headline hunters, including Joan Little herself, have made blatantly unfair statements about our prisons and our system of justice.

The libel against this state has been spread by those who have not taken the time to check the facts and make a reasonable appraisal. It has been spread particularly by those who have prospered financially and publicity-wise by her exploitation.

Those who revel in maligning North Carolina and the entire United States would rejoice if something happened to Miss Little in her prison cell.

Miss Little has repeatedly said she would be in danger in a North Carolina prison.

Prisons are not overly populated by products of finishing schools and Girl Scout camps. We have some bad people in our prisons. Things do, indeed, sometimes happen to inmates — usually at the hands of other inmates.

North Carolina, because of the attention her case has caused, must make certain that nothing happens to Joan Little.

She should not be pampered. She should be given the same food and same physical surroundings as others.

But she must be observed more closely.

North Carolina — for the sake of Joan Little and for the sake of this state — must see that no one does anything untoward to her and that she does nothing harmful to herself during her stay.

The News-Leader, Greenville's morning newspaper, was badly damaged by fire and water last night. Cause of the blaze, which broke out in the office, had not been determined.

J. A. Staton Jr., publisher, estimated the loss at $4,000. Mechanical equipment was damaged as much by water as fire, declared Staton, who added that it was partially covered in insurance.

Staton said he hoped to continue publication without missing a single issue.

The fire broke out around midnight and spread rapidly through the papers in the front office and back into the composing room.

Strength For Today

THROUGH A GLASS DARKLY

Anyone living in a house with old-fashioned, blown glass windows knows how these distort the vision. Seen through one of these windows, the roofs of neighboring houses bulge and sag, and the faces of passers-by appear twisted and deformed.

In the same way, our visual powers are just as limited and twisted when compared with the laws of nature. The table which we see as a solid, stationary object is actually a mass of pulsating, whirling atoms. The sky is not really blue but black.

Under these circumstances, religious faith should be no problem for modern mankind. We live surrounded by commonplace objects whose true nature, though partially known to us through scientific explanations, is far beyond our immediate experience.

Is it then remarkable that God's infinitely more complex ways are not always clear to us? At the right time, we will comprehend. As St. Paul wrote, "Now we see through a glass darkly; but then, face to face".

Productivity Usually Ignored

JOHN CUNNIFF

NEW YORK (AP) — Want to reduce inflation, raise the quality of life, lower the foreign payments deficit, improve the cities, solve pressing social problems, create jobs, extend leisure time?

You do, of course, so it follows that you are also for greater productivity, which is a measure of how efficiently we use manpower, materials, machinery and money. We've measured poorly of late.

At hearings scheduled today, members of the Joint Economic Committee of Congress were due to hear again from the experts that our recent poor record is a problem that no longer can be ignored.

That's what they heard years ago too. Meanwhile, the record has worsened. Vital as it is, improved productivity seems to be one of those issues always postponed, if not totally ignored.

During the years since World War Two the rate of improvement has been 3.2 percent a year, but during the past decade it has fallen to just 1.5 percent, and isn't likely to get back to 3.2 before 1990 at least.

While the United States, whose industrial superiority was built by rapid productivity increases, chugs along somewhat wearily, the rates for Japan, West Germany and some other trading partners race ahead.

A report just issued by the nation's productivity center indicates rates in those two countries might average between 4 and 6 percent a year through 1990, while that for the United States lags under 3.

In other words, one could argue, the competitive position of American-made goods can be maintained only by taking a smaller profit or by assistance from the federal government-that is, protectionism.

In the sense that this is a semi—capitalist country, such a turn would bring the end in sight. The spirit of free enterprise that helped spur a productivity surge in the past century might be suffocated.

The alternative—licking the problem and restoring greater productivity—would on the other hand shower the populace with such benefits that one wonders how it can be ignored, as sometimes it is.

George H. Kuper, executive director of the National Center for Productivity and Quality of Work Life, tried to underscore this point in his report, "Thee Future of Productivity."

If it had merely increased over the past 10 years at the same 3.2 percent rate of the previous two decade, he said, "the difference would have meant an additional $100 billion in real GNP...."

GNP is Gross National Product, the total of goods and services, of steel and bicycles and food and vacations and houses and nursing care and daycamps and security and technology and clean air and water.

In addition, productivity increases would have meant more general tax funds, and perhaps enabled us to obtain the tax relief that so many Americans now want but cannot have without a reduction of services.

The ingredients of productivity are perhaps better known to Americans than to any others, because for decades Americans were, after all, the greatest innovaters, the smartest managers, the most daring investors.

Experts Study Restoring da Vinci's Last Supper

By PIERO VALSECCHI
Associated Press Writer

MILAN, Italy (AP) — Leonardo da Vinci's most famous fresco, the Last Supper, is in jeopardy.

After surviving nearly five centuries and the bombing raids of World War II, the smog and humidity of modern Milan — and possibly a mistake by the master himself — the fresco is fading and cracking.

Experts say a fungus caused by smog is one of the elements threatening to wipe away forever the masterwork done some 480 years ago in the supper room of Santa Maria alle Grazie Church in the heart of this busy industrial and commercial center in northern Italy.

A crack is visible at the far right corner and there is a slight hump in the middle of the wall where Leonardo painted the fresco, which is a painting by tradition done on plaster while it is wet.

However, they say the artist, too, is partly to blame.

"He used egg tempera instead of fresco paint," said Carlo Bertelli, fine arts superintendent of the Lombardy region.

"Strangely, Leonardo used tempera, which is good for canvas painting," said Bertelli, who is campaigning to save the fresco. "Results were excellent in the short term but disputable in the longer as tempera deteriorates in humid conditions. This is why Leonardo's fresco has been always subject to studies and restoration."

Today, the colors and outlines appear to be vanishing — especially the apostles sitting at the left of Christ in the painting.

Filippo Vasari, a Florentine architect, writer and painter, was the first to discover the problems created by tempera a few decades after Leonardo painted the Last Supper, between 1495 and 1497.

Restoration and repainting done in the following centuries have preserved the fresco but are causing additional problems because of the many and different pigments used.

Experts who recently discovered the Last Supper's disease say city smog caused the growth of a fungus, which formed a damaging mixture with the pigments.

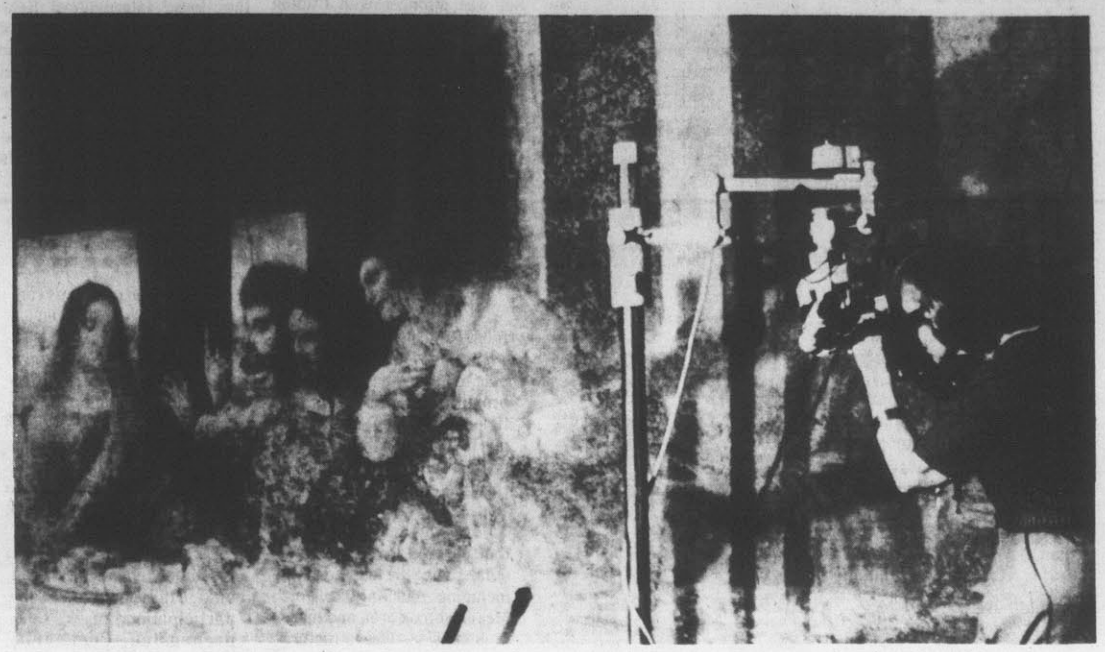

"The mold has been affecting the fresco for years and is gradually eating it up. Some parts already have been lost. Others still can be restored and saved," Bertelli said in a recent interview.

Installation of de-humidifying and air filtering equipment is considered the first step necessary to halt deterioration of the fresco. Actual restoration work could then begin in about a year.

Still another question mark, however, is the strength of the walls of the supper room, which was bombed and nearly destroyed in 1943. The wall with Leonardo's fresco, bolstered by sandbags, was one of the few left standing.

In addition to the crack and the humb in the middle of the work, "street cars passing close to the church may cause damaging vibrations. Experts are studying this, too," the superintendent said.

A steady flow of tourists inside the small Romanesque church is another point to investigate, but Bertelli ruled out any possibility of banning visitors.

Africa LNG Shipment Reaches Savannah Port

SAVANNAH, Ga. (AP) — The first shipment of liquefied natural gas to reach the Southeast from Africa was in the harbor today, and officials prepared to unload the highly volatile fuel into an Elba Island storage facility.

The 920-foot-long El Paso Sonatrach was carrying 125,000 cubic meters of liquefied natural gas from Arzew, Algeria, when it arrived at the $145 million terminal Monday afternoon.

The Coast Guard inspected the safety features of the tanker before allowing it into the harbor, according to chief dispatcher Ellison Council.

All mariners were advised that the ship would be coming up the Savannah River and the waterway was closed to shippers along the El Paso Sonatrach's path until it was safely berthed.

The liquid fuel — kept at 260 degrees below zero — will be unloaded into storage facilities, then warmed to its normal gaseous state and shipped through pipelines to heat homes and businesses throughout the Southeast this winter.

When completed, the Elba Island facility will have the capacity to hold 326 million cubic feet of natural gas, which will be pumped through a $30 million network of pipes to Southern Natural Gas Co. customers in Georgia, South Carolina, Alabama, Mississippi, Florida, Tennessee and Louisiana, a spokesman for Southern said.

By early next year, enough LNG should be arriving at the Savannah terminal to meet 15 percent of the needs of Southern Natural's customers, said Joel Anderson, project director for the Elba facility.

The gas, which will be arriving aboard a fleet of nine tankers, comes from reserves below the Sahara in Algeria.

It was piped 300 miles to the coastal city of Arzew, where it was cooled, compressed to one-600th of its volume and liquefied. The El Paso Sonatrach is similar to a huge vacuum bottle which keeps the gas cold.

By the time the Elba Island facility is in full operation early next year, supertankers will arrive weekly, Anderson said.

Although there are 158 LNG facilites in operation or under construction, Elba Island and the Cove Point facility in Maryland are the two largest in the world, officials said.

The first shipment reached Cove Point on March 13 and two others have arrived there since, one delivered by the El Paso Sonatrach.

OK Application

WASHINGTON, D. C. — Congressman Walter B. Jones announced Monday that the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, Office of Education, has approved the application of the Greenville City Schools for federal assistance for current expenditures under Title One of Public Law No. 874, as amended, which provides financial assistance for schools in federally affected areas.

A sum of $6,492.32 has been certified for immediate payment out of the tentative entitlement of $64,573 for fiscal year 1978.

DEAR ABBY: My mother won't let me get my nose pierced. It's really not dangerous—it's no more dangerous than piercing your ears. All my girlfriends are doing it and I think it looks neat. Some of the guys have even done it.

Nose piercing has been done for hundreds, maybe thousands of years in Egypt and Africa. You wear a little gold ring through the hole.

How can I get my mother to let me get my nose pierced? I know a lady who will do it for $5, but you have to have your mother's permission.

WANTS NOSE PIERCED

DEAR WANTS: Sorry, I can't help you do something I think you'd regret. If you want to wear a ring through your nose, get the type that clips on, but you don't need another hole in your head. (P.S. When girls got bored, back in the Stone Age when I was young, we used to make fudge.)

DEAR ABBY: Last year, the manager of our son's Little League baseball team screamed, yelled, jumped up and down on his cap and turned purple in the face every time one of the boys made a mistake. I've seen him get so worked up I was afraid he'd have a heart attack. He constantly belittled the boys, and I've seen him humiliate some to the point of tears. Most of the kids are afraid to get near him when he's angry.

I don't think 8- and 9-year-olds should be subjected to this kind of tension and abuse, do you?

I told my husband that I didn't want our son to play in Little League with that manager anymore. My husband says there is good and bad in all sports, and since we can't change the manager's disposition, we should accept it and let our boy play.

How do you (and others) feel about this?

INDIANA MOM

DEAR MOM: I think you should have a meeting with the parents of the other boys in Little League and discuss it. You may not be able to change the manager's disposition, but you can change managers.

DEAR ABBY: I am marrying a man who has three daughters (5, 7 and 9) by a previous marriage. My fiance wants his daughters to attend our wedding, and I don't think they should. The girls live with their mother, who will not be at my wedding, so my fiance will have to look after them during the ceremony. Perhaps I should mention that his daughters are ill-mannered and boisterous; they fight among themselves and don't obey their father, and I'm afraid they might disrupt the ceremony. This is my first wedding and I want it to go smoothly, Abby.

Also I don't know whether the girls' mother has poisoned their minds against me, but they don't seem to like me very much, which makes me uncomfortable.

Please don't use my name, initials or town, just tell me how to handle this. Thanks.

GETTING MARRIED

DEAR GETTING: In order for a marriage to succeed, candor and communication are essential. Start now by telling your fiance exactly how you feel about his daughters attending your wedding. If you can't be completely honest with him now, prepare for some very difficult times ahead.

Are your problems too heavy to handle alone? Let Abby help you. For a personal, unpublished reply, write: Abby: Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069. Enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

busterers to the point of exhaustion, how do you force them to stop talking?

A. You invoke cloture.

Q. What's cloture?

A. According to Webster's it's "the parliamentary procedure by which debate is closed and the measure under discussion put to an immediate vote."

Q. How do you invoke cloture?

A. When 60 senators vote to invoke it.

Q. What happens if you don't get 60 votes?

A. You try again.

Q. But if a senator votes against cloture the first time, why would he change his position later?

A. You're a stranger here, aren't you?

Q. O.K. As soon as you get cloture, the filibuster is over, right?

A. Wrong.

Q. But Webster says you vote right away.

A. Webster didn't write the rules of the Senate. After cloture, every senator gets to talk for one hour. That's 100 hours, so at 10 hours a day, we could use up another 10 days. Then, someone might demand roll call votes on each of the 596 amendments. There are lots of other ways to use up time, like quorum calls and forcing the clerk to read the journal of the previous day's proceedings.

Q. Then cloture doesn't end the filibuster?

A. What's your hurry?

Dog days in the energy conference.

One of the questions that recently engaged the attention of House and Senate energy conferees was whether to give manufacturers of animal feed a higher priority for access to natural gas than other industrial users.

Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, said the provision intended to benefit manufacturers of feed for farm livestock, also would give special privilege to the dog and cat food industry.

"It's an absurdity to give them such high priority," said Metzenbaum who moved to exclude cat and dog food from the provision.

Whereupon, Sen. Clifford Hansen, R-Wyo., moved to amend Metzenbaum's amendment to include a special exemption for sheep dogs.

Sen. Wendell Ford, D-Ky., offered a similar exemption applying to hunting dogs and Sen. John Durkin, D-N.H., wanted to include sled dogs.

The result was a decision to scuttle the Metzenbaum amendment.

less pure in exchange for prices a little bit lower. The users of prescription drugs pay what amounts to a 4 percent tax as the price of federal regulation. Half as much regulation might well suffice.

Mr. Carter's recommendation on textiles may be right, or it may be wrong. Brown lung disease is a bad business, not to be minimized. But the president's basic thought is valid. At some point, enough regulation becomes too much regulation. My own thought is that in many areas we reached that point long ago.

something in the nature of a miracle would be needed to avoid a new confrontation between Carter and Brezhnev. The record here does not yield a case in which a legal charge against a "dissident" Soviet citizen has been reduced once the trial has started, or for a finding of innocence once the judge has heard the "evidence."

On all these facts, President Carter surely must have been informed. That explains the anxiety now afflicting administration officials emotionally tied to pursuit of detente at almost any price; and the buoyancy of those who feel the time has come to draw the line.

River Salmon See Comeback

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Atlantic Salmon, which disappeared from the Connecticut River in George Washington's time, appears to have made a comeback, Fish and Wildlife officials said Saturday.

The service, which has been working for almost 10 years with New England states to restock the river, said wildlife officials captured 44 salmon for breeding stock in two weeks well upriver near Windsor Locks, Conn., and at the Holyoke fish lift in Massachusetts.

"More are expected to be caught and many more are believed to be below the lifts," said a Fish and Wildlife spokesman.

Peace Committee Held Monday Rally

The Greenville Peace Committee sponsored a rally at the Main Post Office here yesterday afternoon to call on the United States government to reverse its arms buildup.

The action was planned in correlation with the Special Session on Disarmament being held at the United Nations in New York and with a sit-in being held the same day at the U. S. Mission to the U. N. fo by Mobilization for Survival.

The International Religious Convocation for Human Survival noted, "Many heads of state have pledged to attend, but it is world public opinion that will be decisive in determining the session's success."

Eleven of the persons taking part in yesterday's rally here were among the 15,000 people from all over the world who marched to Dag Hammerskjold Plaza May 28 on behalf of disarmament. They were Victoria Casey, Patrick O'Neill, Debbie Toppings, Carolyn Hodges, Stephen Kennedy, Jim Lawler, Sisters Jane Paris and Happy Shondell, Father Charles Mulholland, and Carroll and Edith Webber. Also included was Joe Felmet, a candidate during the May Democratic Primary for U. S. Senator from North Carolina.

Displayed yesterday was a five-by-six-foot banner with North Carolina in seven-inch black letters. This banner was displayed during the New York March by the North Carolina group, 27 strong.

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market pushed lower today in moderate trading amidst uncertainties over interest rates and inflation.

The noon Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks was off 5.37 at 851.35.

Losers outweighed gainers among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues by better than a 2-1 margin.

Analysts said continued moves by the Federal Reseve to push interest rates upward as a means of fighting inflation might begin to choke off economic expansion.

"The Federal Reserve is getting tougher, and the market is adjusting to that," said William E. Gibson at Smith Barney Harris Upham & Co. Inc.

The Fed has maintained a tight-money policy "longer than the market had anticipated, and the market is in a process of coming to grips with that. Confusion is the name of the game today," said Gibson.

There also was some confusion over inflation forecasts. Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal on Monday said inflation this year wouldn't go below 7 percent, in line with earlier predictions, but Fed Chairman G. William Miller said in Zurich today that inflation would decline in 1978. Miller, who didn't give a specific forecast, also said the United States was deeply committed to mantaining a strong dollar.

Federal National Mortgage led the NYSE's most active list at 18⅛, off ⅛. Sears Roebuck was down ⅜ at 23½ and Orange Co. gained ⅜ to 9¼.

The NYSE's composite index of more than 1,500 stocks lost 0.32 to 55.57. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was down .28 to 149.02.

Volume on the Big Board in the first three hours totaled 12.54 million shares, down from 11.88 million in the comparable period Monday.

Caesar's World, which announced it plans to spend $30 million to renovate a hotel and casino in Atlantic City, N.J., opened after a delay at 21¼, up 1⅜. AMAX, the mineral and natural resources developer, was unchanged at 34¼ after predicting second-quarter earnings would be double those of the first three months of this year.

See No Request For Free Hand

By JIM ADAMS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A House study concludes that despite President Carter's complaint that Congress has tied his hands on foreign policy, neither the president nor the State Department has requested repeal of any congressional restraints.

The report was made to Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill, who had asked Rep. Clement J. Zablocki, D-Wis., chairman of the House International Relations Committee, for a study of Carter's complaint. An ad hoc group appointed by Zablocki made its report in a memorandum to O'Neill on Friday.

At the same time, Zablocki and senior members of his committee told Carter in a letter that "we need considerable clarification."

"While Congress is being accused of imposing restrictions," the letter said, "there has not been any specific request from the executive branch to repeal or modify any provisions."

Presidential press secretary Jody Powell said Monday the White House was arranging meetings in the next few weeks between administration officials — possibly including Carter — and members of Congress on Carter's foreign policy.

Powell said the meetings, which had been under consideration for at least a month, would be "helpful to Congress in understanding the complexities of foreign policy problems."

Powell did not comment directly on the Zablocki letter to Carter, but the issue of congressional restraints on presidential foreign policy is almost certain to surface at the meetings.

The House study group interpreted a recent Carter news conference statement on the issue as meaning that he does not want any congressional restraints repealed after all — but wants no new ones imposed.

Congressional leaders emerged from a breakfast with Carter on May 16 — three days after the Katangan invasion of Zaire began — saying Carter was upset that congressional restraints kept him from helping such friendly countries as Zaire.

House Republican Leader John J. Rhodes said then that Carter had made no specific request for repeal of congressional restraints, but added it was clear that one was coming.

The ad hoc group's memo to O'Neill said the State Department followed up Carter's complaint by listing 56 laws affecting presidential conduct of foreign policy, but that it did not request repeal of any of them.

ment Project.

The appraisers were not able to begin their work in the project area as soon as anticipated, Laney explained, due to a delay in the approval process of the project as a result of 14th Street discussions.

Boyd told commissioners that seven parcels were acquired since the last meeting, including four in the West Meadowbrook area and three in Southside. One structure was removed in Meadowbrook, he added, and six were removed from the Southside section.

He said that one relocation was handled in the West Meadowbrook area while five relocations took place in Southside.

Ed Cobb, rehabilitation officer, reported that one rehabilitation grant was completed in Southside and a grant-loan combination is expected to receive approval this week for another Southside rehabilitation project.

Inspectors are working on rental property in Southside now, Cobb said, and will then move into the Meadowbrook area to finish inspections.

Commissioners adopted a resolution endorsing Greenville Utilities Commission's participation in a Comprehensive Community Energy Management Program being sponsored by the U.S. Department of Energy.

Greenville Utilities plans to apply for a grant from the Department of Energy to establish a model energy program that will analyze energy sources and uses and possibilities for conserving energy.

Board of Education would like to see funded that were not recommended.

He did ask for special consideration in the capital outlay area, however. "Two years ago," he pointed out, the county board agreed to a smaller share of the capital outlay funds, "to help bail the city out," (referring to increased appropriations for the city to renovate Third Street School and repair other buildings after city building inspectors condemned the Third Street facility and said repairs to other buildings were needed).

Citing a facilities survey conducted by the State Department of Public Instruction as part of a fact-finding study of the city and county school systems as part of a merger study, Alford said, "every cotton-picking dollar," for capital improvements, "ought to go to the county schools."

According to the study, there are 25 substandard spaces, mostly classrooms, in the city system as compared with 172 substandard spaces in the county system. The city, according to the report, has 19 temporary spaces, such as mobile units and/or frame buildings while the county has 90 such spaces.

The survey also indicates the city has no condition four facilities as compared with the county's 7, and 7 condition five facilities to the county's 17.

Alford explained that condition four facilities are thoes that, "if you can get out in five years we would do well to do so," while condition five facilities he said are those that if, "we could get out now, it would be in the best interest to do so."

He described the home economics building and agriculture shop at A. G. Cox school as condition five facilities.

The facilities survey also showed the city has three schools which are over capacity (Sadie Saulter, 10 per cent; Third Street, 5 per cent; and Wahl-Coates, 10 per cent), while the county has 13 such facilities (ranging from 4 per cent at Belvoir, to 26 per cent at G. R. Whitfield, 33 per cent at North Pitt, 39 per cent at W. H. Robinson and 47 per cent at Stokes).

Six of the city schools are operating at under capacity, according to the report (ranging from four per cent at E. B. Aycock to 15 per cent at Elmhurst), while only six of the county schools have less students that they can accommodate (from 2 per oent at Chicod to 32 per cent at Falkland).

Sam Ervin Gives Grads An Old-Fashion Talk

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — Former North Carolina Sen. Sam Ervin gave Lake Taylor High School graduates Monday night the "rule book" for successful lives.

"Learn always. Labor hard. Laugh often. And love much," he advised.

Ervin, 81, is a self-styled country lawyer from Morganton, N.C., who became a celebrity when he headed the select Senate committee that investigated the Watergate scandal.

He received standing ovations before and after his 14-minute talk.

Ervin was introduced by Johnny Chug-Liang Wong, 17, the class valedictorian, who described Ervin as a "great American, a symbol of honesty and integrity and a dear family friend."

Ervin told the crowd, "one of the finest services I ever performed was making it possible for Johnny Wong and his family to become American citizens."

At a news conference earlier, Ervin had explained that while in the Senate members of his staff learned that Johnny's father, Zee Yng Wong, a waiter in a Washington Chinese restaurant, was paying a lawyer a "huge sum every year" to keep from being deported back to Communist China.

Ervin said he introduced special legislation every year to keep Wong in America until immigration laws were changed to allow him to remain permanently.

The Wongs, who operate a restaurant, moved here four years ago.

"When Johnny Wong called me and asked me to speak at graduation, I told him I would if he could get permission from his principal. So his principal called me and I said I'd come," Ervin said.

Known for his colorful stories, Ervin said he decided to give "an old-fashioned commencement talk" because "people need fundamental things to get through the world in a joyful state."

Mini-Park Is Dedicated

AYDEN — Approximately 50 persons attended the dedication of the Barwick Street Mini-Park last night.

J. J. Brown, mayor pro tem, led the crowd in a dedication ceremony, then introduced Gil Davis, Ayden recreation director.

According to Davis, the mini-park is the first in a probable series of mini-parks for Ayden citizens. A concrete basketball court for the park is planned for the near future.

Jerry Cox, director of community development, said the project was funded through 1976 program year community development monies.

Attending officials included Carl Speight and Dr. Elliott Dixon, both of the Ayden Board of Commissioners, Ray Avery and Mrs. J. R. Lowry of the Ayden recreation committee, and Mrs. Evelyn Wilkins, representing the Ayden Chamber of Commerce.

Arrest Man For Break-In

SIMPSON — A Simpson man was arrested by Pitt deputies this past weekend and charged with first degree burglary in connection with an early Saturday break-in at a home here.

Sheriff Ralph Tyson said that Jesse Ray Andrews, 18, was arrested around 3 p.m. Saturday at his home and charged with breaking into the Geraldine Tucker residence on Jefferson Street.

Mrs. Tucker told officers she woke up around 2:35 a.m. Saturday and saw a man standing over her bed. She reported that the man, who attempted to pull the bed covers off of her, fled when she screamed.

The woman told the deputies that three children were asleep in the room with her when the incident took place.

Andrews, who is being held without privilege of bond on the first degree burglary charge, was scheduled for a first appearance hearing today in District Court in Greenville.

Stokes Ruritan Hosted Guests

STOKES — A county commissioner, the county manager and a Martin County mayor were guests of the recent monthly meeting of the Stokes Ruritan Club held in the Stokes Community Building.

Commissioner Edward Warren, County Manager Reginald Gray and Robersonville Mayor J. R. Crandell were the three attending the meeting as guests of club president William A. Crandell and members Sam Gray and J. B. Congleton.

Sex Bias Testimony Is Given At ECU Hearing

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

A formal hearing got underway yesterday to hear the alleged grievances of five East Carolina University students against the school's athletic department. The five have charged sex discrimination in athletic policies by the school.

The five students, Donna Pendley, Debby Newby, Jill Vaughn, Mike Healy and April Ross have charged that the university has discriminated in seven different areas as far as women's athletics is concerned.

Yesterday's session, before a hearing committee of Armemus Kares, chairwoman, Dr. Ione Ryan and Dr. Robert Barnes, heard testimony presented by the students and their attorney, Charles L. McLawhorn Jr. Today's session is expected to hear evidence offered by the university, if any, along with closing arguments by the two sides.

In the early going of the hearing, Dick Blake, administrative assistant to chancellor Dr. Leo W. Jenkins, said that the administration wants to hear the complaints of the students and give serious attention to them.

Dick Farris, representing the university as the Title IX officer, said that the university would accept specific charges brought forth by the students without cross-examination, if a 20-day continuance would be given by the committee.

McLawhorn, however, said he would rather get the full testimony out now, and the committee agreed to hear the evidence before ruling on the continuance request.

Farris then suggested that the guidelines for informal hearings on the grievance had not been met by the students, but on hearing testimony by Newby, the committee ruled that all steps had been taken, and testimony began.

McLawhorn said the group would attempt to show that discrimination existed in seven areas in the athletic department. These include scheduling of games and practices, publicity, locker room, practice and competitive facilities, assignment of coaches and pay, travel and per diem allowance, provision of supplies and equipment, and scholarships.

Under Title IX provisions, there are ten areas used as criteron for compliance. The seven challenges take up all but three of those. Under Title IX, the HEW ruling which forbids sex discrimination in education, which includes its athletic programs, schools were given until July 25, 1978 to come under compliance.

Practice and Schedules

Ross, a member of the basketball team, testified that her team practiced from 5:30 to 8 p.m. nearly every time during the past two years. She said that the ideal time would be 3 to 5:30 p.m., and that this time is usually reserved for the men's basketball team. "We usually eat about 9 p.m., study from 10 to 12:30," she said. She added that this interfered with normal study times.

Catherine Bolton, former women's basketball coach, testified that she had talked with Athletic Director Bill Cain, Farris and ECU attorney Dave Stevens, during the spring of 1976, requestion an alternating practice time with the men, and had been left with the impression that such a program would be worked out. "There were no guarantees, but it was to be considered," she said.

But there was no follow up, she added, and she had another meeting with Cain prior to the start of the 1977-78 season, again asking for alternating practices. Nothing was done, she said, by the time practice began, and she again requested the alternation for the second semester, and this, she said, was finally denied.

"There were a few times when we could practice early when the men were out of town," she said.

Under scheduling, she said that use of the Minges Coliseum has been on a first-come-first-served system. "The men's basketball schedule is usually made up two years in advance and mine a year in advance. Last year, with the men leaving the Southern Conference, however, there were some late changes in the schedule. Some of the men's games were scheduled at the same time as my schedule, without checking it, and I was not advised that my games were at the same time," Bolton said.

She said the same problem had existed from time to time with the wrestling program. "I'm not certain that this is a sex discrimination or just an oversight," she said, "but we were more subject to it than the men."

Steveda Chepko, the women's gymnastics coach, said that when she was swimming coach for the women, they had to practice after the men, from 6 to 8 p.m., even when her team was in season (in the fall) and the men weren't. "I was told the men had first priority." She acknowledged that the two teams now practiced together since men's coach Ray Scharf now coaches both the men and the women.

Chepko also pointed out that when she reserved the gym, through channels, for the state gymnastics meet, she later learn that the wrestling team was holding the Southern Conference meet at the same time (in the 1977 season). "I learned about the wrestling from a student, not through channels," she said.

The conflict was worked out, but presented difficulties. The gyming equipment had to be moved from Memorial Gym late at night following the first round of the wrestling tournament, and this was done by Miss Chepko and students, not completed until around 3 a.m.

"It's not so much the mistakes and problems we run into in scheduling," she said, "but the attitudes." She also noted that the gym team could use extra money to provide maintenance help in moving equipment from Memorial Gym, where the team practices, to Minges, where meets are held.

Publicity

Newby testified under the publicity section, that there was no real way to measure publicity, but that a lack of staff in the sports information office hurt the women's sports more than the men's. She said it was her opinion that more releases on women's sports would help attendance at the women's events.

Carolyn Fulghum, associate dean of student affairs, and advisor for women's athletics, testified that a brochure was to be prepared for recruiting purposes by the SID office for women's sports. This was to have been ready in late September or early October, 1977. However, it was in February before it was delivered, and that this late delivery hurt the women's recruiting for the year. Fulghum said she had to contact Cain and Farris before finally getting the booklet published.

Lockers and Facilities

Cain, called to testify under the question of locker rooms and facilities, said that there were two and a half locker rooms in Minges for men and one and a half for women. No facilities for women are available in Scales Fieldhouse, where football uses two locker rooms, baseball and men's track use one each. Cain said there were plans for the completion of Harrington Field, which would include dressing facilities for baseball, track and softball.

Bolton said that the one women's locker room in Minges was crowded, and that she had requested some renovations to help the situation. She said she had expected these to be done during the pre-season for basketball, but they were not begun until the end of the basketball season.

Dianne Leigh Sumner, a member of the field hockey team, said that the field hockey team practiced and played in the area just beyond Harrington Field, "a half-mile away" from locker facilities. She said that there were restroom facilities in the field

Could Watson Be Heir-Apparant To Nicklaus As Golf's Ruler?

By BOB GREEN

DENVER (AP) — Tom Watson is the heir apparent to Jack Nicklaus as the ruler of world golf.

He has it all — style, strength, intelligence, courage, ability.

If there's one knock on Watson, it's his go-for-broke, aggressive attitude and style of play.

But that will be played down, kept under control this week in the U.S. Open championship.

"The Open is the hardest tournament in the world to win," said the freckle-faced Watson, whose red hair and boyish appearance belie a fiercely competitive, ambitious personality.

"It's the toughest to win because it places such a premium on self-control," Watson said.

The 1977 Player of the Year, the 1978 leading money-winner was doodling on a paper placemat in the grill area off a tour locker room and quickly began sketching in an illustration of his point.

"The green's here (a lopsided circle) and it slopes this way (some contour lines) and there's a couple of bunkers here (two little ovals) and the pin (a little flag) is here. Now, there's one place you don't want to be. It's here. (The pen tapped repeatedly on the bunker.)

"With the green sloping away from you, no green to work with, you've got very little chance to get down in two. You can get in those bunkers going for the pin. But the price is too high. It's not the percentage shot.

"So you go for the fat part of the green and take it from there. You play the course. You try to avoid the mistake, particularly mental mistakes and let the other guy make the mistake."

And Watson, winner of three 1978 titles and more than $200,000 already this year, is a prime candidate for the American national title in the 78th U.S. Open that begins Thursday at the Cherry Hills Country Club course. As usual at an Open course, the rough is up, the fairways are narrow, the greens are fast and the premium is on accuracy off the tee.

Despite his gaudy record, Watson has had some difficulties in that area earlier this year. But it's coming around.

"You can tell when you're playing well," he said. "Like last year at the British Open (where he beat the mighty Nicklaus in one of the greatest confrontations the game has ever seen). I knew I was playing well going into that tournament. I'm not at that level now, but I'm getting there."

Italians, Dutch Draw Approval

By GEOFFREY MILLER
AP Sports Writer

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — Many soccer fans believe Italy will win the World Soccer Cup. But Enzo Bearzot, manager of the Italian team, thinks it could be Holland.

"The Dutch are the No. 1 team in our group in the second round," Bearzot said.

"The Dutch can play any game. They know how to attack, and they know how to slow down the game to keep it under control. If they need a tie, they stack up their players in midfield and sit there for 90 minutes."

Italy, Holland, West Germany and Austria are in Group A, playing for a place in the finals, scheduled for Buenos Aires' River Plate Stadium June 25.

The other finalist will be the winner of Group B, comprising Argentina, Brazil, Peru and Poland.

The professional know-how of the Dutch team, praised by Bearzot, took it to second place in the World Cup of 1974, even without Johann Cruyff, the superstar of that tournament who has now retired. Holland showed many of its 1974 qualities in the first round here.

Many critics believe Holland's best soccer in Argentina is still to come. The Dutch played all their first-round games at Mendoza, on a soft field pitted with holes.

In the second round, they will play twice at Cordoba and once at River Plate — both firm fields which should suit their speedy style.

"On that field at Mendoza, you need to play with a square ball," Dutch Coach Ernest Happel quipped.

The eight teams still in contention have two days of rest in which to treat injured players before starting the second round Wednesday.

Italy is one of the worst hit teams. Mauro Bellugi, a defender, has a leg injury and is very unlikely to play against West Germany at River Plate. Five other stars — defender Gaetano Scirea, midfielder Romeo Benetti and forwards Roberto Bettega, Paolo Rossi and Franco Causio — are nursing injuries. Leopoldo Luque, star Argentine striker, has his arm in a cast and may not be able to play again for the rest of the championships. He will cetainly miss the game against Poland at Rosario Wedesday.

Brazil's veteran midfield star Rivelino is another doubtful starter. He missed the last game Saturday when Brazil overcame Austria 1-0 for its frist win of the tournament.

Wednesday's games: Group A — West Germany vs. Italy at River Plate; Austria vs. Holland at Cordoba. Group B — Argentina vs. Poland at Rosario; Brazil vs. Peru at Mendoza.

Williamston Downs Wilson

WILSON — Williamston scored five runs in the ninth and five more in the 11th to defeat Wilson 13-8 in an American Legion baseball game last night.

Williamston trailed 6-3 going into the ninth inning, but came up with five runs for an 8-6 lead. But Wilson put two across in the bottom of the inning to tie things up and force extra innings.

Hank Edwards singled for Williamston in the ninth and Anthony Latham followed with a base hit. Charlie Smith then cleared the bases with a triple. He scored on Cliff Keel's singled and Jack Curlings homered.

In the bottom of the frame, Carey Griffin singled for Wilson and Donnie Prince hit a triple. Jeff Watson reached on an error to score Prince and tie the game.

Latham singled to get things started in the 11th inning. Brady Pinner and Keel both got hits, with Latham scoring on Keel's safety. Curlings then doubled in Pinner and Ellis singled to plate Keel. A trio of errors allowed Curlings and Ellis to score.

Curlings was 4-6 with a home run to lead Williamston, while Keel and Hank Edwards were both 3-6. Prince was 2-5 and Larry Deans 2-6 for Wilson.

Williamston is now 3-2 for the season. The team will host Washington tonight.

Holtzman Chalks Up Save In First Appearance As Chicago Cub

By TOM CANAVAN
AP Sports Writer

The vacation may be over for Ken Holtzman, but the newest member of the Chicago Cubs isn't complaining.

Holtzman, a forgotten man during the past two seasons with the New York Yankees, returned to action Monday night, pitching three innings and chalking up his first save of the year in the Cubs' 3-2 victory over the Cincinnati Reds.

"I feel young again," the left-hander said after combining with Rick Reuschel on a four-hitter.

"I got into it for the first time in a long time. It felt good to have the game on the line," said Holtzman, who had not pitched in four weeks and appeared in only five games with the Yankees before being traded to the Cubs over the weekend.

"I'm going to put that behind me and start fresh," the 32-year-old veteran said. "The last couple years weren't pleasant."

Holtzman relieved Reuschel in the seventh after the big right-hander's arm stiffened up. He allowed two runs, including a solo home run to George Foster, as he made his first appearance in a Cubs uniform since 1971.

"I didn't think Herman (Chicago Manager Herman Franks) would use me this early," Holtzman said. "But I guess his philosophy is for a player to get his feet wet right away ... and I couldn't be happier."

In other National League action, Houston edged Pittsburgh 6-5, Los Angeles nipped Philadelphia 6-5, San Diego clipped New York 3-2, San Francisco shaved Montreal 1-0 and Atlanta scalped St Louis 2-1.

Astros 6, Pirates 5

Cesar Cedeno's two-out, three-run single capped a six-run eighth inning as Houston overcame a club-record seven errors in defeating Pittsburgh.

Giants 1, Expos 0

Right-hander Ed Halicki pitched a one-hitter and teammate Jack Clark rapped a run-scoring double in the sixth inning to give San Francisco its victory over Montreal and hard-luck pitcher Steve Rogers.

The only Montreal hit off Halicki was Ellis Valentine's single leading off the second inning.

Braves 2, Cardinals 1

Jeff Burroughs' sixth-inning home run broke a 1-1 tie and Mickey Mahler fired his first career complete game, a seven-hitter, as Atlanta edged St. Louis.

Dodgers 6, Phillies 5

Dusty Baker crashed a grand slam home run and Rick Monday added a solo shot, leading Los Angeles over Philadelphia and offsetting a pair of homers by the Phillies' Greg Luzinski.

With the Dodgers trailing 2-1 in the sixth inning, Baker connected off Phillies starter Jim Lonborg to give Burt Hooton his fifth win in 10 decisions.

Padres 3, Mets 2

Fernando Gonzalez's single to center field scored Dave Winfield from second base as San Diego rallied for two runs in the bottom of the ninth inning to defeat New York.

Guidry's Record Richest

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

With all those gold-plated arms on the New York Yankee pitching staff, a player who is earning less than any of them has emerged as the diamond of the bunch.

Ron Guidry doesn't command the lofty salary of, say, a Catfish Hunter, Don Gullett or Sparky Lyle. But he currently sports the richest record in the major leagues.

"He's the best we've seen in the American League," Oakland Manager Jack McKeon said Monday night after the unbeaten Guidry won his 10th straight game with a 2-0 triumph over the A's. "He was overpowering."

Guidry has been as flawless as you can be of late — winning 20 of his last 21 decisions in games dating back to last season. His victory string this year marks the quickest start of any Yankee pitcher since Atley Donald went 12-0 in 1939.

"Everybody wonders what it would feel like to go through a real good stretch," said Guidry after his classy three-hit, 11-strikeout performance. "In 30 years, I'll be able to say I went through one."

Red Sox 10, Angels 9

Carlton Fisk's single with the bases loaded in the ninth led Boston over California. Dwight Evans drove in four runs with a homer and a double and Fred Lynn hit a three-run homer in helping the Red Sox offset five errors.

Rangers 6, Royals 5

Bobby Bonds, celebrating a new five-year contract, drove in three runs and Al Oliver slugged a tie-breaking home run leading off the eighth to propel Texas over slumping Kansas City.

Orioles 5, Mariners 4

Larry Harlow singled home the tie-breaking run in the seventh inning to lead Baltimore over Seattle for the Orioles' 11th straight victory.

Brewers 7, Tigers 4

Gorman Thomas, Dave May and Larry Hisle drove in two runs each while rookie Paul Molitor went 4-for-5 to pace Milwaukee over Detroit. Thomas hit a two-run homer in the second inning, May hit a two-run double in the fourth and Hisle singled in a run in the third and drove in another with a groundout in the sixth.

Indians 1, White Sox 0

Ralph Garr scored an unearned run in the first and Ken Kravec and Jim Willoughby combined on a six-hitter to lead Chicago past Cleveland.

Sex Bias Testimony...

hockey area, but that on a few occasions, this had been locked, but this was not normal.

She also said that the field had not been kept up as it should be. She also admitted that there were no closer locker rooms for either men or women.

Lu Ann Davis, of the softball team, said that practice had to be done for her sport on the soccer field, which is unlined for softball and really not adequate. No softball field for the team exists at this time. Games had to be played at Evans Park, and transportation there was provided by each member of the team and not by the university.

Pendley, a gymnast, said that some members of her team dress at home, since the locker facilities in Memorial are rusty, and generally in poor shape. None of the girls leave their clothes in the lockers, but bring them into the gym room with them.

Coaches' Pay

Under pay for coaches, Newby pointed out that in most cases, the male coaches receive higher supplements. According to budget figures, men's basketball receives $35,600 in salaries, while women's basketball receives $,950 (1977-78 figures), as an example. She did admit that some of the women received more. Women's tennis received $1,000 while men's got $847.

Chepko said she received only $100 for coaching gymnastics this past year, in comparison to $5,635 the year before. She said that she had been transfered to the physical education department, and was now paid by them. She added that she had been teaching all along, and acknowledged that overall she had received a $1,500 raise over the past year. "But I don't understand why the men's swimming coach now gets $2,300 to coach the women, when he makes more than I do in teaching, and I get $100 to coach gymnastics."

According to budget figures, Chepko received $5,635 additional while coaching swimming for the women in 1976-77.

Travel and Per Diem

Under travel and per diem, Newby testified that there was a difference between the men and women. Basketball for men for $150, women got $2,800 for travel and per diem. Baseball received $2,500 while softball got $1,400. Swimming showed $3,000 and $1,000 figures, while wrestling got $2,026 and gymnastics got $900.

Ross testified that the women's teams usually traveled in university vans, some of which had broken heaters in them, causing several girls to get sick during the season. She said that the men's basketball team usually traveled by chartered bus.

Chepko said that because of her limited budget for travel, she was unable to take all of her team (11 members) to her out-of-town meets. She added it was difficult to schedule gymnastics close since only four schools in the state had the sport. "I spent one-third of the budget going to a meet in Georgia where we stayed in the home of one of the team members."

She added that the team drove to Boone for a meet with Appalachian State University, competed, and then drove straight back due to lack of funds to spend the night.

She added that at times, she had had to spend her own money to help the team, but added, "The men had to do this too, I'm sure. But if they have trouble with $1,800, how can I work with $900."

Supplies and Equipment

Newby then testified on the money allocated for supplies and equipment. She pointed out that men's basketball received $3,000 this past year, while the women's program got $1,500. Men's track got $3,500, while women's got $1,212. Swimming showed $1,500 and $400.

"I think the figures speak for themselves," McLawhorn told the committee.

Scholarships

Under scholarships, Newby noted a $37,000 allowance for men's basketball, with $2,000 for women. Baseball gets $16,000, while softball received $500. Men's tennis got $2,103 and women's got $1,320. Men's track got $12,000 and women's received $2,000.

Pendley testified that only two of the 11 gymnastics team members receive any grant money. She said to her knowledge, no woman receives a "full" athletic grant. (There is a slight difference between an allowable men's grant under the NCAA, and the women's, as allowed by the AIAW.)

McLawhorn said afterwards that he would present a closing argument today, and turn in a written request for means of righting the situation.

Farris did not say whether he would call witnesses for the administration, or what evidence he would submit, if any.

"Anything in writing will not be released to the public unless the committee wishes it released," he said. "This is the law on this matter, and not my decision."

The committee, if it brings the hearing to a close today, would be given three working days to submit its finding and recommendations to the Dean of Student Affairs, who would be in charge of releasing the findings.

Declarer indulged in a trick-reduction play at his five diamond contract, only to discover that it was a trick he could not spare.

West's jump overcall was of the weak variety that is increasingly becoming in vogue. North expressed doubts about West's ability to make his contract, and East decided that any spot was likely to be better than two spades doubled, so he ran to three clubs. South did not really want to defend any contract, and he showed his good suit by rebidding it at the three-level. North's jump to game closed the auction.

West led the top of his spade sequence and, without a moment's thought, declarer covered with dummy's king. East ruffed and shifted to a club, and declarer still had to lose a club and a heart for down one.

Before he played to trick one, declarer could count eleven tricks in top cards. It made no difference to him in which order he took those tricks. Therefore, he should have realized that West almost surely had six spades for his preempt, and that East's ruff was a near certainty. By covering with the king, declarer simply telescoped his eleven top tricks into ten.

The winning play is not difficult to spot. Declarer should simply play a low spade from dummy at trick one, and another low spade when West continued the jack of spades. That gives the defense their book, but they will not be able to score another trick.

If West continues with spades, declarer again follows low from dummy and ruffs in his hand. If, instead, West shifts to a heart, declarer rises with the ace. In either case, he will then be able to draw trumps and, once East's fangs are extracted, declarer can use dummy's ace-king of spades to obtain two discards—his club and heart losers. By postponing winning the ace-king of spades until he is ready, declarer can score the eleven tricks to which he is entitled.

Rubber bridge clubs throughout the country use the four-deal bridge format. Do they know something you don't? Soap Opera Emmy Winner Says Prime-Time Career Handicapped

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Nancy Addison, a cheery, pretty lady, is asked how life is going nowadays. She takes a deep breath and says: "Well, I'm between two characters now, Frank and Seneca.

"They're both in love with me. It's the same old triangle, and I still have Frank's child (born out of wedlock, it seems). But Frank has no time for me. He's running for the Senate."

This is no case for Dear Abby, though. It's just the woe of Jill Coleridge, the sensitive lawyer Miss Addison essays five days a week on ABC's Emmy-winning soap opera, "Ryan's Hope."

Miss A., who does the series in her native New York, has been triangling in the show for nearly three years now.

She broke into soapdom six years ago, after studies at New York University and Boston's Fisher College. She began her acting career in a play, "The Impossible Years," with Tom Ewell.

Her soap-opera start was as a schizophrenic in "Guiding Light."

How did she wind up in this daytime angst arena? Simple, she said by phone from Fun City: "My agent just sent me over, the same way you go up for theater auditions, for 'Guiding Light.'

"I did that a while, then this (the Coleridge) part came along. I'd told my agent I didn't want to do another soap unless it's really interesting, something I can identify with."

It was, and so she joined the 15-character caperings of "Ryan's Hope," a modern saga set on New York's Upper West Side — where she lives, incidentally — and involving three families.

While it's quite rare for a daytime star to do nighttime TV, Miss Addison last month appeared in her first major prime-time role — as a morphine addict — in CBS' "The Dain Curse."

Question: Does the fact you are on the tube in the daytime hamper efforts to secure roles on evening TV shows, do the prime-time moguls dismiss you as just another soaping star?

"Well, unfortunately that happens sometimes," she conceded. "This kind of work involves the most pressure. You have to put out a product, the scenes, each day after a very short rehearsal time.

"But I did 'Dain Curse,' so I guess somebody thought I was good enough to do that." Did "Curse" get you blessed with more Hollywood offers of work in evening TV shows? The actress laughed.

"People have called, but nothing solid yet," she said. "I'm in negotiations now for another year here, anyway. But I'm hoping somebody calls me out there to do work now and then."

It-Must-Be-Summer Note: We're advised the cast of ABC's "Carter Country" competed this weekend with police from Plains, Ga., at the annual Luckenbach World's Fair in Fredericksburg, Texas.

Their event: The First Intergalactic Chicken Flying Contest, where they see how far a chicken can fly. Results aren't here yet, somebody ate the carrier pigeon, but we will keep you posted. Honest.

Jack Gilford Says Secret Is Survival

JACK GILFORD

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Actor Jack Gilford has been surviving for a long time, but he won't say how long.

"I will admit that I am getting older," says Gilford, who won't reveal his age. He is old enough to have been trained in vaudeville.

Gilford, perhaps best known for his stage and film versions of "A Funny Thing Happened on the Way to the Forum," survived the entertainment industry blacklist of the 1950s. He joked in a recent interview that his son's first words were "Mama," "Papa" and "Fifth Amendment."

"We did everything openly," Gilford recalled. "I supported causes like getting black people into baseball, getting black people into television.

"Everything was white in those days. I remember being at an actors' meeting when a black actor got up and said, 'I want to work at my profession while I still have my hair and my teeth.' His name was Sidney Poitier."

Gilford survived by doing summer theater and Broadway shows at very small salaries.

Now he is busier than ever. He is repeating his Broadway role in "Sly Fox," appearing with George C. Scott this summer at the Shubert Theater in Century City. By day, Gilford will be acting as a regular cast member in the new Norman Lear television series for ABC, "Apple Pie."

Answer to yesterday's puzzle.

CRYPTOQUIP 6-13

Yesterday's Cryptoquip — UNINTERRUPTED TALL TALE TRAPPED INTREPID LIAR.

© 1978 King Features Syndicate, Inc.

Today's Cryptoquip clue: V equals M

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Says Thousands To Block Nazis

SKOKIE, Ill. (AP) — Jewish militants say they will put thousands of marchers in the streets of Skokie to block a planned Nazi demonstration that has gotten clearance from the U.S. Supreme Court.

But a Nazi leader said the Supreme Court's action is a step toward cancellation of the demonstration because two of three demands the Nazis said would get them to call off the June 25 rally have been met.

With Monday's Supreme Court ruling and the Illinois Legislature's refusal to limit or ban the demonstration, the only unmet condition is removing a $60,000 bond requirement for a rally on July 9 in Chicago's Marquette Park, said Richard Tedor, spokesman for the National Socialist Party of America. A federal court hearing challenging the regulation is scheduled for June 20.

Tedor said the demonstration in Skokie, home to several thousand Jewish survivors of Hitler's World War II death camps, was designed to call attention "to the fact that Nazis are being denied their free speech rights in Chicago. (Nazi leader) Frank Collin says we're using Skokie as a tool. If we get our rights back in Chicago, we'll forget Skokie.

"If we can march in Marquette Park, we won't go to Skokie," said Tedor. "If it's not decided by June 25, we'll go into Skokie."

Shortly after the Supreme Court's decision was announced without comment by Chief Justice Warren Burger, the Midwest coordinator for the militant Jewish Defense League, Stu Feiler, said his group would blockade all streets leading to the village hall — the planned site of the Nazi rally.

"We'll have between 3,000 and 5,000 people in the streets and there'll be no way the Nazis can get through. If they turn around and go back, there will be no violence. If they get through, there will be bloodshed," Feiler told reporters.

Skokie Mayor Albert Smith, saying he was "very disappointed" by the high court ruling, said at a news conference that the village of 69,000 now has no other choice but to let the Nazi rally take place.

Picketing Anita Bryant

WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP) — While Anita Bryant entertained an audience of 3,000 inside, about two dozen gay rights activists peacefully paraded Monday night in front of an auditorium on the campus of the University of North Carolina at Wilmington.

Miss Bryant, leader of a crusade against homosexuals, presented an hour of songs, small talk and audience participation during the program sponsored by the Wilmington Shrine Club.

Her husband and business manager, Bob Green, told the audience of the beginning of the anti-homosexual campaign in the Miami, Fla., area.

"We had to take a stand," he said. "Homosexuals in Dade County wanted to be able to teach in our religious schools and offer themselves as role models for our children.

"When the mayor of Miami asked them to cite an instance in which they had been discriminated against in the last 10 years, they admitted that there was no discrimination in jobs or housing," Green said. "They were looking for social acceptance. And that's one thing they will never have."

C.N. Long, chief of the UNC-Wilmington security force, said he allowed the demonstrators to march outside the auditorium even through they did not have a permit to picket. He said the group acted in good faith since it initially thought a permit was unnecessary.

He said the picketers agreed to walk 15 feet apart in single file and to end the vigil by 9 p.m. In return, he told the group he would protect the marchers from harassment.

On Dean's List At Duke Univ.

DURHAM — Three Greenville residents have received class honors at Duke University.

Donald Hugh Tucker Jr., a rising sophomore, has been named to the dean's list and Timothy Caspar, a rising sophomore, and Joseph L. Howell, a rising senior, to the honors list.

Class honors signify that the student has achieved at least a 3.3 grade-point average out of a possible 4.0 for the year. A student is included on the dean's list on achieving a 3.0 average.

Tucker is the son of Dr. and Mrs. Donald Tucker; Caspar, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Myron Caspar; and Howell, the son of Mr. and Mrs. John M. Howell, all of Greenville.

NEW YORK (AP) — The Rt. Rev. Harold L. Wright, the first black bishop in the nearly 200-year history of the Episcopal Diocese of New York, died Sunday of an apparent heart attack. He was 48.

Giant Python Will Be Guest Of Honor

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The State Museum of Natural History is throwing a housewarming party this week.

The guest of honor, a 15-foot Burmese python named George, is moving into a hexagon-shaped glass enclosure outfitted with a drinking pool, climbing tree and automatic temperature control.

Officials of the City of Raleigh discovered Monday that George, long a favorite of children and tourists visiting the state museum, actually belongs to the city.

The state has been providing living quarters for George for the past 14 years, and most city officials weren't even aware Raleigh was the owner of the 150-pound reptile until plans to move him (her?) into the new quarters were being made.

But Jimmy M. Chambers, former city parks and recreation director, told Mayor Isabella Cannon Monday that a Vietnam veteran gave George to the city, which believed at the time that it might build a zoo around the snake. Since the city had nowhere to keep George, the state agreed to take custody.

Mrs. Cannon instructed an attorney, Thomas A. McCormick Jr., to give the state title to George.

"Who's George," McCormack wondered aloud. After being told the story of the snake, he complained, "I never wrote a deed for a snake before."

The state Agriculture Department, which operates the museum, issued a news release later Monday in which Agriculture Commissioner Jim Graham announced the housewarming for George.

The news release said George "has grown to love and respect the museum staff, including herpetologist Bill Palmer, director John Funderburg and particularly Jim Graham."

No Shakeup By New NBC Prexy

NEW YORK (AP) — Fred Silverman, whose arrival at NBC as its new president was preceded by speculation that he would shuffle the network's management, apparently has no shake up in mind — at least for now.

Silverman said Monday that the network's drive for higher television ratings "is not going to be a one-man show."

"There's no doubt in my mind that this is the team that will be taking NBC to the preeminent position in broadcasting," Silverman told affiliate stations in a closed-circuit hookup after weekend meetings with network executives.

"I must stress the word team," said Silverman, 40, whose programming strategy during his two years at ABC helped boost that network to its No. 1 position in the ratings.

How's The Weather?

WEATHER FORECAST — Showers are forecast today for the Northwest, north-central and south-central regions and for much of Florida. Temperatures are expected to be warm for most of the nation. (AP Laserphoto Map)

By The Associated Press

Cooler air fanned out over the Southeast today, scattering a few thunderstorms around North Carolina ahead of it but promising some cooler, drier weather in its wake.

The leading edge of the cold front entered the North Carolina mountains early this morning and was expected to reach the coast by late afternoon. Cool nights are forecast through Friday.

Thunderstorms associated with the front broke out in the mountains just after midnight and showers moved across the north central portion of the state later in the morning.

High temperatures were expected to reach the 70s in the mountains and 80s elsewhere today, but the forecast called for fair and cooler tonight and Wednesday. Lows tonight were expected to range in the 40s to near 50 in the mountains and in the 50s to near 60 on the coast.

High temperatures Wednesday are expected to range from near 70 in the northwest mountains to near 80 along the south coast.

Abundant Gasoline For Summer

By MARTIN MERZER
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — With the busy summer driving season under way, oil-industry officials say motorists should have no difficulty finding gasoline. In fact, an abundant fuel supply appears to be limiting price increases.

"Assuming no unforseen developments, we think the industry supply of motor gasoline this summer will be adequate to meet demand," E.J. Hess, vice president of marketing for Exxon, said Monday.

Other industry officials suggested the supply already was more than adequate.

"The gasoline inventories are high, there's plenty of crude oil available and refineries aren't even running at capacity," said one industry spokesman, who asked not to be identified. "And this is all after the busy Memorial Day weekend."

In addition, newly released statistics show the average price for regular, leaded gasoline is actually lower than it was at this time last year and unleaded fuel has shown only a minimal price increase.

According to Dan Lundberg, a Los Angeles-based gasoline-marketing expert, the national average price for regular gasoline last month was 60.3 cents per gallon, down from 60.4 cents in May 1977.

The national average price of unleaded gasoline was 64.4 cents last month, up only one-half cent from May 1977, according to Lundberg, who publishes the Lundberg Letter, a gasoline marketing newsletter.

Oil companies and service stations generally increase the price of gasoline as the busy summer driving months approach. Last year, the price of unleaded gasoline increased by three cents per gallon between January and May.

But this year, large inventories and a slower than expected growth in demand have forced the firms to hold the line on prices. Unleaded gasoline increased in price by only one-half cent per gallon between January 1978 and last month.

Industry officials attribute the encouraging supply picture to various factors, including the recent glut of crude oil, high inventories of gasoline resulting from aggressive oil refining during the cold winter months and the increased fuel efficiency of new cars.

Southern States' Economy Is Outperforming Rest Of U.S.

LAKE BUENA VISTA, Fla. (AP) — Population, employment and personal-income growth have unshackled the South's economy in the past decade, and southern states should outperform the rest of the country well into the 1980s, says an economic researcher.

E. Blaine Liner, executive director of the Southern Growth Policies Board, says the only serious concern is a "Sunbelt" versus "Snowbelt" feud over federal policies and spending patterns that could deemphasize southern development in favor of northern "distressed cities."

But, Liner told a four-state conference of federal land bank associations Monday, the southern economy's basic strength will outlast any temporary government policies.

The 15-state South, from Maryland to Texas, has outperformed all other sections of the country by every economic measurement since 1970, Liner said.

"The reason for our growth is jobs. The reason for the jobs is the surge in economic activity," Liner said. He emphasized that all economic indicators showed a structural shift in the South's economy, not just a boom cycle.

"We're not just making and selling more of the same old product, we're into entirely new areas that diversify and stabilize the economy — insulating it more and more from recessionary downturns," he told directors and presidents of the associations from Florida, Georgia, North Carolina and South Carolina in this Disney World village.

The turning point into a self-sustaining, job-creating growth has been unheralded, Liner said.

"The economy has changed its structure for the better, but few have observed it. We are producting goods that require different raw materials and different processes than in past years. There is a healthier balance among the sectors of the economy.

"In fact, the Southern economy, for so long the stepchild of the national economy, is now almost a mirror image of the national economy."

The 15 Southern states increased in population by 9.8 percent between 1970 and 1976, while the country increased by 5.5 Percent, he said.

And most of the new growth has been in the higher-paying, higher-skill services sector.

Florida receives the most metropolitan-type growth, while Mississippi's is the most rural. South Carolina has the most balanced pattern between metropolitan and rural areas.

Florida grew the fastest of the Southern states in personal income, doubling between 1970 and 1976, he said statistics show. Arkansas, 91 percent, and Texas, 93 percent, were the next highest. The slowest growing states were Georgia, 78.7; North Carolina, 78.3, and Maryland, 74.9.

Every Southern state exceeded the U. S. rate of growth in that period.

Non-agricuultural employment in the South has been growing at a rate nearly double that of the country, he said, but the South's rate of decline in agricultural employment is greater than the national rate.

Guitar Classes Begin June 15

The Greenville Recreation and Parks Department announces the offering of guitar lessons to the public. Classes will begin Thursday, June 15 and will continue through the summer until August 31.

Ayden Board Discusses Housing Authority Fate

By REBECCA BUFFALOE
Reflector Staff Writer

AYDEN — The Ayden Board of Commissioners discussed the closing of the Ayden Housing Authority as a separate entity at a meeting Monday night.

A deed and bill of sale from the authority has been drawn, according to Robert Booth, board member and Jerry Cox, director of the authority. As of June 15, the authority will be directly under the Town of Ayden.

The board discussed the possibility of using a motorcycle for the Ayden Police Department. According to the department, a motorcycle would be less costly to operate and would facilitate in apprehending traffic offenders.

The police department has had a motorcycle made available for a week's use. The board agreed for it to be used on a trial basis.

Michael Finney, director of utilities, brought before the board a tentative agreement to be signed by electrical contractors working within city limits. The agreement would apply to those in the Pitt County Electrical Contractors Association and other licensed contractors. The board approved the agreement.

Finney also reported a $1,117.98 figure from the tax lien sale on unpaid real property taxes held Monday.

In other business, the board approved:

— Rezoning of the Patsy Mills property from RA-20 to a commercial status.

— Resolution setting a public hearing on the closing of an alley on the property of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Spruill for July.

— Proposed work to be continued on the drainage problem on Edgewood Street.

One Judge Said 'Son Of Sam' Deserved To Die

By RICHARD T. PIENCIAK
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — One of three judges who sentenced David Berkowitz to six consecutive 25-year-to-life prison terms for the Son of Sam murders says Berkowitz deserves to die.

Justice Joseph Corso told reporters after Monday's sentencing that Berkowitz, who said demons caused him to kill six people and wound seven in a year of random shootings, was a "sly, cunning individual" with a sexual problem.

Corso said he would have sentenced Berkowitz to the electric chair if New York had capital punishment and that he hoped the legislature would pass a law prohibiting parole in murder cases.

"I think if we had capital punishment, it would have been a deterrent to the absolutely senseless killings that come into my courtroom," the state Supreme Court justice said.

However, defense attorney Ira Jultak contended the testimony of psychiatrists at two hearings would be sufficient proof that the so-called ".44-caliber killer" was not competent to stand trial, enter guilty pleas or be sentenced.

"We feel he's an incapacitated person," Jultak said, arguing that Berkowitz should be in a mental hospital, not a prison. He said he would begin an appeal.

"On the basis of the testimony before me in the competency hearing, I have no doubt that my decision will stand up under any appellate scrutiny," Corso said.

Subdued under what his attorneys characterized as the influence of tranquilizers, the pallid former postal clerk was sentenced to serve more than 500 years consecutively on charges including murder, attempted murder and assault. Under New York law, however, Berkowitz will be eligible for parole in 30 years.

Shires Speaks To Students

East Carolina University journalism students held a press conference Monday with William A. Shires, director of the News Bureau and public relations at the university.

The conference was part of an introductory media Course. Shires is a former news manager for United Press International and was manager of the N. C. Association of Afternoon Dailies before coming to ECU in 1970. He spoke about professionalism in journalism and gave hints on good reporting. He said he feels that television is the most timely of the media, but that newspapers offer greater depth in coverage. Hard news, combined with local advertising, society and sports material, and syndicated features and columns make newspapers more useful to the consumer, he said he believes.

Kangaroos come in several sizes and can range anywhere from 180 pounds to 16 inches in height.

PEPSI-COLA HAS YOUR TICKET TO GREASE™

PEPSI
Plus...A Tribute to LYNYRD SKYNYRD

ADMIT TWO FOR THE PRICE OF ONE ADULT TICKET!

HERE'S ALL YOU DO:

Collect 10 bottlecaps from any size Pepsi or Diet Pepsi. Get a "Grease" admission form at your participating foodstore displays of Pepsi and Diet Pepsi bottles and cartons. Present admission form plus bottle caps at the ticket booth of your participating local theater where "Grease" is playing. You then get one free admission to "Grease" when accompanied by a full paying adult for the 1st showing of the day, Wednesday, Thursday, Friday or Saturday. Also showing will be a bonus film short starring the Lynyrd Skynyrd rock group. Don't let the show pass you by! Get your official entry form at displays of Pepsi and Diet Pepsi at participating food stores.

OFFICIAL RULES

1. Pick up a Grease entry form at the special Pepsi display at your participating grocery store and fill it out. To be eligible for the free admission, the entry form must be fully completed prior to presentation at the box office as described below.
2. Collect 10 bottle caps from any size bottles of Pepsi-Cola and/or Diet Pepsi. Present the completed Grease entry form with the requisite 10 bottle caps, accompanied by a person purchasing an adult ticket, at a participating theatre for one of the matinee performances described in Rule 3 and you will be admitted to that performance without charge. See your local newspaper for the list of participating theatres in your area. Admission is dependent upon availability of seats at the theatre. (See Rules 3 and 4 below). One free admission per adult ticket purchase per entry form per 10 bottle caps.
3. This offer is good for only the first performance of the day at each participating theatre each Wednesday, Thursday, Friday and Saturday during the three week promotion period commencing on Wednesday, June 28,1978 , and ending after the first performance on Saturday, July 15, 1978. In the event that you appear at any of the above performances at a participating theatre (other than the final Saturday performance) and you are unable to gain admittance because of unavailability of seats, you may gain admittance by appearing at one of the aforementioned matinee performances at a later date; however, entrance at the subsequent performance is again conditioned upon your having appeared early enough to secure a seat prior to all seats in the theatre being filled. There will be no reserved seats for any of the eligible performances. With respect to unavailability of tickets at the final Saturday performance at the end of the three week promotion period at a participating theatre with the completed entry form and Bottle Caps, accompanied by a person prepared to purchase an adult ticket, who is unable to gain free admission to this performance because all seats have been filled will receive a Grease poster.
4. Any person appearing at the final Saturday performance at the end of the three week promotion period at a participating theatre with the completed entry form and Bottle Caps, accompanied by a person prepared to purchase an adult ticket, who is unable to gain free admission to this performance because all seats have been filled will receive a Grease poster.
5. In addition to being unable to guaranty a seat to any of the specified performances, Pepsi-Cola Company is also unable to guaranty that the movie Grease will be shown in your area during the entire period of the promotion. We believe that Grease will be run in each area the full length of the three week promotion period; however, we have no control over the movie theatres and, therefore, the period during which the show will run in your area. Should Grease not be shown in at least one participating theatre in your area for the entire three week promotion period, you may then obtain a Grease poster by mailing the completed entry form to the Public Relations Department, Pepsi-Cola Company, Purchase, New York 10577. This poster offer is only effective in the unlikely event that Grease is not being shown at some participating theatre in your area during the three week period identified in Rule 3 above.
6. This offer expires after the 1st performance of the day at each participating theatre on Saturday, August 19, 1978.
7. This offer is void in Wisconsin and any place where prohibited, restricted or subject to a tax other than a sales or use tax on the free tickets provided to consumers participating in this promotion. All taxes on tickets are the responsibility of the consumer.
8. The completed entry form must accompany each submission of the ten bottle caps at the theatre box office and such entry form may not be duplicated, mechanically or physically reproduced or copied and it may not be altered, mutilated, forged or tampered with in any way.

Hurry, offer begins June 28, 1978 and expires July 15, 1978
