Mayor Reminds Citizen Requests Increase Taxes

By TOM BAINES Reflector Staff Writer An unusually large gathering was on hand Wednesday afternoon for the City Council's public hearing on the proposed 1978-79 city and Greenville Utilities budgets.

Mayor Percy Cox explained to the audience that the Council began its work on the city budget with a ten cents per $100 valuation tax increase proposed for consideration.

Cox reported that the Council is now proposing a five cents tax increase that would bring the local rate up to 69 cents per $100 valuation.

Spokesmen for the library cause were out in full force and Cox reported that Sheppard Memorial, in requesting some $59,000 more funding than last year, is only being cut some $31,000 from the requested amount.

Ann Frost, chairman of the Sheppard Memorial board of trustees, told the Council that the library director and board members "reviewed the budget numerous times, looking for savings. With few exceptions, it is our opinion that funding the library's budget as presented is the only way in which adequate services can be maintained."

approximately half of the requested funding increase is for three additional staff positions, asserted. "Being a city-county agency, the library is placed in double jeopardy. It must compete for funds with departments in two separate governing authorities, the result often being that when the budget cuts on the two sides are combined, the effect is disastrous."

board reviewed the recommendations of the city and county managers, it became apparent that if adequate funds were not available to maintain services at their present level, then the only alternative is elimination or curtailment of the services we are now providing."

shortening the hours of service each week; and curtailing purchases for the library's collection of books, recordings, and other like material.

Large Legislative Pay Raise Readied

By WILLIAM M. WELCH Associated Press Writer RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) - State legislators would get a hefty pay raise, amounting to better than 25 percent, under a measure tentatively approved by a House and Senate appropriations subcommittee Wednesday.

1978-79 fiscal year budget, tentatively approved the move on a voice vote. If ultimately approved by the General Assembly, legislators would have their annual salary increased from $4,800 to $6,000 under the proposal, with an increase from $100 to $150 in monthly expenses.

The action was expected to draw fire from leaders of teachers and state employees, who sought a 10 percent cost-of-living increase and received a 6 percent hike. But House Speaker Carl Stewart, who was not on the panel, said he believed some type of increase was in order.

resolution is being drafted calling for adjournment of the session Friday at 1 p.m. He said a number of bills can't be acted on by then, and the legislature will have to decide if they are important enough to warrant returning to finish up next week.

Panama City Is Scene Of Carter Protest Violence

By TOM FENTON Associated Press Writer PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP) - At least one student was killed and nine others were wounded in a three-hour campus gun battle over the new Panama Canal treaties and President Carter's visit this weekend as the Torrijos government prepared a gala welcome for the U.S. leader.

Government sources put the casualty toll at two killed and 10 wounded, but the two additional casualties could not be confirmed. An explosion during the battle blew the roof off a one-story student center, another university building was burned, and others were sacked, their contents strewn outside.

Students opposing the treaties object to the delay in transferring the canal to Panama until the year 2000 and to the stipulation by the U.S. Congress that afterward the United States can intervene militarily to keep the waterway open.

Several hundred students marched through downtown Panama City earlier Wednesday, painting "Carter Go Home" on walls and vehicles. Carter spends Friday night at the hotel after addressing a public rally in the city's Fifth of May Plaza. Gen.

City Plans Ask Federal Grant

The City Council meeting Wednesday, authorized the submission of an application to the Urban Mass Transportation Administration for a federal grant to upgrade and expand the city transit system.

Staff Planner Ben Shiver explained that the grant request involves an 80 percent federal participation and ten percent by both the state and city. The total grant of $630,130, he said, would involve a federal share of $504,104, a state share of $63,013, and city participation of $63,013.

The capital facilities and equipment for which the federal grant is desired include: six 17-25-passenger transit vehicles; one ten-passenger modified van with lift; one service vehicle; nine fareboxes; one base radio station and tower with eight mobile unit; ten bus shelters; 40 bus stop benches; 300 bus stop signs; one six-bay maintenance garage with bus washer and administrative shop; and shop and garage equipment.

Mayor Percy Cox pointed out that the funds would go towards replacing some of the equipment that the system now has.

Farmville Will Retain Its 55-Cents Tax Rate

By CAROL TYER Reflector Staff Writer FARMVILLE - The Town of Farmville will maintain its 55 cents per $100 valuation, which has been in effect for several years, according to the tentative budget adopted by Town Commissioners here.

Town Administrator Patrick A. Thomas said ad valorem tax revenue ($222,846) constitutes only 18 percent of General Fund revenues. He said there have been declining receipts from federal revenue sharing and intangibles tax and fair growth in state-distributed receipts from utilities franchise tax and sales tax.

Large, increasing contributions from the water-sewer ($150,729) and electric fund ($400,879) funds constitute 43.6 percent of all General Fund revenues. The water and sewer fund has been significantly increased ($120,958), augmented by "significantly increased" sewer use charge revenue due to new rates implemented in April, 1978.

Liquor Facts

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) - Here is a list of key provisions in the local-option liquor-by-the-drink bill approved by the North Carolina General Assembly: -Mixed-drink sales are not legal anywhere in the state yet. The new law permits counties having Alcoholic Beverage Control systems to hold referendums on whether to permit the sale of mixed drinks in qualifying restaurants and clubs.

She Finds Farming And Feminism Mix

WATKINS, Minn. (AP) — Farm life and feminism may seem like strange bedfellows, but not to chicken farmer Marianne Brueshoff.

Ms. Brueshoff, who raises 2,000 to 3,000 chickens in addition to helping with other farm duties and canning 1,000 quarts of vegetables, jams, fruits and pickles a year, has left home three times since last fall to represent rural women in busy urban centers.

In November, she attended the National Women's Conference in Houston as a Minnesota delegate. In February, she was in Washington for a government-sponsored conference on rural women.

In March, Ms. Brueshoff was back in Washington as an appointee to the International Women's Year continuing committee, set up to implement the national plan of action adopted by the women's conference.

Ms. Brueshoff, who grew up on an egg produce farm in Long Lake, Minn., said she, her four sisters and one brother were raised in an atmosphere of equality. The Cold Spring Granite Co. She started the poultry business eight years ago.

However, Ms. Brueshoff, who is an avid reader, said she became incensed when she began running across material that pointed out the discrimination faced by women. That meant her two daughters might be restricted from doing anything they wanted.

"I'm offended by the assumption that men are the responsible members of the human race," she said.

Ms. Brueshoff wrote a letter nominating herself as a delegate to the National Women's Conference while watching her daughter Laurie, 21, rebuild an automobile motor.

"I looked out the window and all I could see were bare feet sticking out from the car," she said.

Ms. Brueshoff, whose involvement in women's rights has not been popular with many in her community, said she found the meeting reassuring because it helped erase her feeling of isolation as a rural feminist.

"I've always thought I wasn't marching along to the mainstream of society," said Ms. Brueshoff, whose husband is sympathetic to her feelings.

"Your wife is a part of your life," he said. "She's half-partner in your business ... You might say it's kind of dirty the way some women are treated."

Ms. Brueshoff says she has tried to instill a non-authoritarian gentleness in her two sons and has brought up her daughters to be self sufficient — "that they shouldn't have the idea of getting married to have somebody to take care of them."

The Brueshoff children have not shown an interest in farming. "The kids are still remembering the hard work," Ms. Brueshoff said.

But for Ms. Brueshoff rural life is just fine, especially since she has become acquainted with other women who share her views.

"I not only love it, I need it," she said. "It's just the only place I can imagine living."

Marianne Brueshoff

"We were expected to assume family and business responsibilities, and it never occurred to my parents or to us that there was any distinction in ability," she said.

After Ms. Brueshoff was married, she helped run the family farm, considering herself a partner with her husband, Hilton, who also works at

Engagements Announced

Mr. and Mrs. John H. Kirkland of Lebanon, Ky., announce the engagement of their daughter, Carolyn G., of Lexington, Ky., to Joseph Loyd Horton III, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Loyd Horton Jr. of Greenville. The wedding will take place July 1.

Mr. and Mrs. Carl L. Speight of Ayden announce the engagement of their daughter, Lorrie Ruth, to Rodney Vernon Wilkins, son of Mr. and Mrs. Vernon M. Wilkins of Greenville. The wedding will take place June 23.

Miss Price Weds In Goldsboro

GOLDSBORO — Miss Susan Leigh Price and Worth Browning Wilson Jr., both of Raleigh, exchanged their wedding vows in a double ring ceremony Saturday, June 3, at three o'clock in the afternoon in St. Stephen's Episcopal Church.

The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Peter C. Robinson.

Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Price of Rt. 2, Sleepy Creek, Dudley, are parents of the bride. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Worth Browning Wilson of Rt. 1, Raleigh.

Given in marriage by her parents, the bride wore a formal gown of ivory silk organza over peau de soie featuring a square neckline, natural waistline and sheer Queen Anne sleeves. The bodice was enhanced with a flounce bordered with chantilly lace. Matching lace adorned the sleeves and the circular skirt. A sash of chantilly lace accented the waist and formed a bow in the back. A flounce with lace decorated the hemline and a chapel train.

Her fingertip veil of nylon illusion, bordered with chantilly lace, was attached to a headpiece covered with matching lace. She carried a bouquet of silk iris, calla lilies, baby's breath and forsythia.

Miss Bonnie Price, sister of the bride, was maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Miss Lynn Wilson of Raleigh, sister of the bridegroom, Miss Betty Mabe of Durham, Mrs. Susan Holden Dixon of Greenville, and Miss Carolyn Mickey of Greensboro.

The father of the bridegroom was best man and ushers included John Asa Price, brother of the bride, Greg Fulghum of Burlington, Neil Fulghum and Jim Beacham of Raleigh, and Doug Doyle of Greenville.

After a wedding trip to the coast, the couple will live in Raleigh.

The bride is a graduate of Southern Wayne High School, Dudley, and East Carolina University. She is employed by The Associated Press, Raleigh. The bridegroom was graduated from Sanderson High School, Raleigh, and ECU, where he was a member of Lambda Chi Alpha fraternity. He is employed in the marketing division of Occidental Life of North Carolina, Raleigh.

Following the ceremony, the bride's parents gave a reception in the church parish hall.

A bridesmaids luncheon was held Saturday at the home of Mrs. Phillip Kemp. The parents of the bridegroom and Mrs. Margaret C. Garner, his grandmother, were host and hostesses at a rehearsal dinner held at the Goldsboro Country Club.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

Did you read the story about the man in Connecticut who commended the police radar squad for ticketing his wife for speeding?

His letter read in part: "Last Saturday, you stopped my wife and issued her a citation for going 66 mph in a 55 mph zone."

"Unfortunately, she inherited a genetic mutation from both her parents that has not been overcome until our meeting with you ... that is, a lead foot!"

"After we left you, we continued to Milford at a pace which I considered gratifying and pleasant. I actually saw the state in its clear form and not as a blur."

Frankly, if it had been my husband who wrote that note, he would have been lucky to be riding at all. One word and I'd have used him for a hood ornament.

It's always amazing how simple it is to serve up justice when you're the waiter and not the customer. That whole dreary story reminded me of an incident a few years back when I put my car in reverse one afternoon and prepared to leave a parking spot at the hospital where I had been visiting a friend.

Without any warning, the parked car on my left jumped right in front of my right fender. Within 30 seconds, there were 15 people, two barking dogs, and a policeman with the warmth of Pontius Pilate taking down my statement.

"I saw the entire thing, officer," said a man. "She threw the car in reverse and without so much as checking the rear view

Color Choices Preferred

DALTON, Ga. (UPI) — Color and texture are the two predominant reasons consumers give for their carpet choices. Psychologist William D. Sarnoff theorizes that everyone has intrinsic color affinities that govern their acceptance or rejection of what they see. Sarnoff told the annual convention of carpet and rug manufacturers in Hollywood, Fla. people's color preferences fall into two classifications. One group prefers blues and reds and accepts magentas. The other prefers red and yellow combinations and all hues that blend with them.

mirror or rolling down her window she backed out of there like a Batmobile."

"Did she attempt to leave a note on the windshield?" asked the officer.

"She said she didn't have a pencil. In that handbag she can barely lift, she said she didn't have a pencil."

"How close would you say she was parked to the car that was struck?"

"She couldn't have gotten a gum wrapper between them."

"May I have your name, sir?"

"Sure, she's my wife."

The meetings of genetic mutations are always interesting. But none quite so sweet to contemplate as my lead foot making contact with his lead bottom!

Strawberry Honey As Topping

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

There's never been a better berry than the strawberry to use for preserves. We say this after a batch of Strawberry Honey was made in our test kitchen. With five half-pint jars of this preserve in the freezer, a cook can feel secure: used as a topping for bread or rice pudding or custard, it makes these desserts irresistible. It also makes a fine filling for fine layer cakes.

This Strawberry Honey is made in an electric blender in one batch. The blender will be extremely full, but don't worry. Covered tightly and whirled as directed in the recipe, everything works out well.

- STRAWBERRY HONEY
1 quart (about) fully ripe strawberries
4 cups sugar
¼ cup domestic kirsch (clear cherry brandy), .96 proof
¾ cup water
1 1½-ounce package fruit pectin

Rinse strawberries; hull. Put just enough of the berries in an electric blender to cover the blades; cover blender and turn control from off to low several times until the fruit is thoroughly crushed but not pureed. Remove from blender to a measure and continue crushing all the berries this way. Measure 2 cups and return to the blender. With a long narrow rubber spatula, gradually stir the sugar into the fruit; cover blender and turn on control until thoroughly blended. Add the kirsch; stir with the spatula and let stand for 10 minutes.

In a small saucepan stir together the water and pectin; stirring constantly, bring to a boil and boil 1 minute. With the spatula, gradually stir the pectin mixture into the fruit mixture; cover blender and turn on control just until mixed—about 30 seconds. At once pour into sterilized wide-mouth ½-pint jars; cover with caps and screw bands. (Do not use jars larger than this size.) Let stand at room temperature until set—usually 24 hours. Label and store in the freezer. If a jar is to be used in a couple of weeks, it may be stored in the refrigerator. Makes five ½-pint jars plus about ½ cup.

Never place hot pots or pans directly on ceramic tile counter-tops. The thin glaze covering the tile will crack and discolor when exposed to high heat.

Bride Facing An Ultimatum

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1978 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: Your advice is desperately needed if my wedding, which is two months off, is to be a happy occasion.

My father is dead and my mother insists that I have my only brother walk me down the aisle and give me away. Abby, my brother is a foulmouthed, ill-mannered, chronic alcoholic who spoils every gathering he attends with his drunkenness. I rarely see him for this reason.

I am marrying a fine man. Members of his family who live out of town are coming to our wedding. I suppose every family has a skeleton in their closet, but I don't want to put mine on display. I am paying for my own wedding and don't want it spoiled.

My mother has made excuses for my brother all his life, and she has given me an ultimatum: If I don't have him give me away, she won't attend. I want my mother there. What should I do?

SOMETHING BLUE (ME)

DEAR BLUE: I think your mother is being grossly unfair by issuing such an ultimatum, but why not issue her one? Tell her that if she will assume the responsibility of keeping her son sober on your wedding day, fine. But you will have someone else waiting in the wings to do the honors—just in case. (P.S. Your brother might rise to the occasion and surprise you—and I sincerely hope he does.)

DEAR ABBY: This is probably just like a million other letters you've received from women who have had affairs with married men. But this one contains a piece of advice that hasn't been emphasized nearly enough.

Last year I started seeing an absolutely fantastic guy from work. I knew he was married, but we played it cool and thought we could handle it. It was terrific while it lasted, but it had to come to an end. (The old story: We got too serious. He didn't want to hurt his wife and kids. Then he got "noble" and told me he couldn't allow me to invest any more time in a man who couldn't marry me.)

I'm not blaming anybody but myself. I'm a mature woman and should have known better. The moral to this story is: If you must have an affair, don't choose someone you will see at work every day. When it's over, the daily contact is torture.

STILL HURTING

DEAR STILL: You seem to have overlooked another "moral" or two: "Thou shalt not commit adultery" and "Thou shalt not steal."

DEAR ABBY: For the man who promised his wife on her deathbed that he would never marry again and then, broke his promise and felt guilty, I urge him to heed these wise and lovely words from the Talmud:

"Man shall be called to account for all the permitted pleasures he failed to enjoy."
Sign me . . .

"IN LOVE AT 60 IN BURBANK"

DEAR IN LOVE: I knew about the "sins of omission," but that a person shall be called to account for all the permitted pleasures he failed to enjoy is joyous news indeed!

Couple Weds In Lawn Ceremony On Saturday

The marriage of Teresa Manning, daughter of Mrs. Graham C. Whiteford of Grifton, and C. E. Manning Jr. of Greenville, to Carroll Griffin, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph C. Griffin of Farmville, took place Saturday afternoon in a garden ceremony at the home of the bride's mother in Country Club Hills.

The bride, attended by her father, wore an ivory peasant styled gown with an empire waistline and a bodice covered with Belgian lace which formed the train. Her garden hat was covered with Belgian lace to match her gown and she carried a bouquet of pink roses and baby's breath.

Miss Frankie Taylor of Farmville, maid of honor, was dressed in a pink gown covered with white lace. Miss Lora Manning of Grifton was her sister's bridesmaid and was dressed in pink floral. Miss Allison Manning of Grifton, sister of the bride, was junior bridesmaid. The best man was Jerry Rackley of Farmville.

Immediately following the ceremony, a cake cutting was held at the home.

After the traditional cake cutting, guests were served by Mrs. Leroy Jones of Greenville and Mrs. Ronald W. Wilmot of Asheville, aunts of the bride. Mrs. Wilmot directed the wedding.

Mrs. Griffin is a graduate of Farmville Central High School.

The bridegroom is currently attending N. C. State University where he plans to continue his education in the fall.

After a wedding trip to unannounced points, the couple will live at Rt. 8, Greenville.

Lord's

Now It's Up To Communities

After years of dominating debate in the North Carolina Legislature the local option liquor-by-the-drink bill is now approved.

The Senate acted on amendments which the House had approved the week before. The path of the bill which was finally approved was most difficult. It was approved by the Senate last year and brought up before the House at this year's session. The bill was first voted down in the House, then brought back up for another vote when it finally won approval. Then only final concurrence on amendments was needed from the Senate to make the bill law.

However any individual feels about mixed drinks, it has to be a relief to most citizens that the matter appears finally settled.

Frequently the mixed drink issue shaped up as a fight between rural and metropolitan areas, with the populous sections feeling their right to decide the issue for themselves was being denied.

Once Virginia went for mixed drinks and then South Carolina it became likely that the pressure would continue to build in our state. In short the issue was not going to go away.

It will now be up to voters in the communities to decide whether they want to legalize mixed drinks for their areas.

Next year liquor by the drink shouldn't be an issue in the Legislature and the lawmakers can put their time on other things which are important to our state.

Must Plan Now For Greater Population

Federal officials see North Carolina's population by 1990 at 7,419,000 and state officials predict 7,220,000 by that time.

Either way forecasters expect more population growth for our state in the decade of the 1990s.

That may mean more taxpayers, but it will definitely mean more users of government services.

Government units must plan now for meeting the needs of new population, which will be thrust upon them, without getting into big tax increases.

THIS AFTERNOON

Jobs-School Link Is Seen

By Bill Noblitt
RALEIGH — Labor supply is the single most important determining factor to an industrial prospect looking around North Carolina for a place to build a new plant.

So much has been said about the supply of labor in the context of "cheap" labor that few people bother to look beyond the running debate about unionism and right-to-work laws.

But state officials feel attention needs to be given to labor supply in terms of people who are trained to work, well educated, and have a good attitude. That is what they mean by labor supply being critical to landing new industries, say state development experts.

Commerce Secretary D. M. (Lauch) Faircloth and Gov. James B. Hunt, Jr. both feel there are sections of the state where entry level jobs (so-called cut-and-sew) are needed to help people move into industrial jobs for the first time.

Trained to Work
They see such operations training people to work, and helping to develop a labor pool which will eventually attract more sophisticated industrial operations into which the employed workers will move at higher wages.

For other areas of the state where the labor supply is already well educated and well trained, the state will use an aggressive approach to industrial recruitment: targeting specific firms which appear best suited for certain areas; seeking to disperse industry to small town and rural settings so people can remain "at home" and still find jobs; pushing North Carolina as a state with a favorable business climate and a popular "Sun Belt" location.

But running through all of the developmental approaches is one constant theme: the need for educational advancement to upgrade the labor supply. At all levels of the educational community, and among industry hunters, this is a recurring theme.

The need lies behind Gov. Hunt's constant attention to reading, testing, and competency measures; it undergirds efforts by the Community College System to bring new directions to adult basic education—broadening that field to include more than simple literacy. There is, studies show, a direct link between education and income.

BILL NOBLITT

Studies by the Research Triangle Institute and state are being used to demonstrate that relationship. The state's low level of educational achievement among residents is seen as both a result of the low per capita income in the state, and a reason for it.

No Success
Accepting the proposition that industry must be assured of trained or trainable workers, there are some areas of the state which could not attract modern, sophisticated plants at this time say the experts.

North Carolina consistently ranks at the bottom in per capita income and in industrial wages paid. She also ranks at or near the bottom in median school years completed (10.6 years), and near the top in numbers of people with less than five years of school. Ten per cent of the population fall in that category. Nationally, more than half the people have a high school diploma. Here, putting us 48th, slightly more than a third are high school graduates.

In other measurements, the state's high school dropout rate is high (one third of the entering ninth graders never graduate), and Tar Heels rank fifth in the nation in numbers of men who can't pass the tests for military service.

State officials see other relationships between school and jobs: school dropouts are likely to be job dropouts; discipline problems may show up in resentment of supervisors on the job; tardiness and absenteeism set patterns for later years.

One of the goals in the state's reorganized economic development program is to pull together activities of the public schools, community colleges, Department of Labor, and Employment Security Commission to help educate a labor supply which will help attract higher paying industry.

The Capacity For Anger

The California landslide of June 6 demonstrated one aspect more heartening than all the rest: Our People have not wholly lost their capacity for anger. I was beginning to think the characteristic was gone for good.

It is a curious thing. In the stereotyped view, Americans are cast as volatile, hot-tempered fellows in the same way that Scots are cast as skinflints and Latins as laudable lovers. Perhaps in the days of the six-gun shootout it was so, but it has been a long time since the capacity for sustained, unquenchable anger has been seen on our shores.

We saw it in California on the 6th. The docile, unoffending, easy-going, taxpaying sheep suddenly turned upon their shepherds and stomped them silly. I loved it. These are my kind of folks.

Other Americans ought to follow California's example in other areas. Incidents constantly come along that should provoke us to white-hot, red-eyed rage—the kind of gut anger that cannot be contained by appeals to civility or expressed in parliamentary speech.

Let me provide a recent example. About a month ago, the House Committee on Education and Labor reported an outrageous little bill. The measure provides a perfect example of the arrogance, the extravagance, the pure unbridled insult that fomented Proposition 13 in California. The measure is known as the Domestic Volunteer Service Act Amendments of 1978. It's doubtful that you ever heard of the bill, but it's the kind of madness we of Washington live with all the time.

The bill's purpose is to revise, reorganize and expand the "domestic volunteer services" programs that were authorized by Congress in 1973. It was true of the 1973 act, as it is true of every such act, that the intentions were ostensibly good. Help the volunteers! Who could object? Considering the billions that have been spent over the years by ACTION and its predecessor agencies, it would be astonishing if at least some good had not been accomplished.

But the programs have turned into a gigantic ripoff, by which money is taken from ordinary taxpayers—the same kind of taxpayers who revolted in California—and sloshed into the hands of radical activists, hardcore bureaucrats, blue-eyed dreamers, professional grantmen, and street-wise con artists who know the gravy train is running when they hear the whistle blow.

The "University Year for ACTION (UYA)" is typical. Read the next sentence slowly: The program "is designed to encourage the involvement of student volunteers and utilize the resources of educational institutions in community efforts to eliminate poverty and poverty-related human, social, and environmental problems." Now read the sentence again. The sentence is hogwash. The sentence conceals one of the cynical blood vessels of the body politic that produce hemorrhage in the Treasury.

There is to be a brand-new $40 million Title V "Urban Volunteer Program" that will require an additional 270 bureaucrats to administer. This new program was railroaded through a compliant committee without one hour of hearings. Ike F. Andrews of North Carolina, chairman of the subcommittee on economic opportunity, has acknowledged that ACTION Director Sam Brown, the old radical, could not answer questions about his own program. Never.

Other Editors Say True Budget Size

(Rocky Mount Telegram)

Depending on how you look at it, the federal budget deficit for fiscal 1979 may be $65 billion rather than the $59.6 billion figure commonly used by the Office of Management and Budget and reported in the press.

What's more, federal outlays in 1978 will be closer to $75 billion than to the $499 billion now estimated in the official budget. The differences are accounted for by the two different ways of counting federal receipts and expenditures: the unified budget concept, currently in use, vs. a gross transactions concept, which some fiscal experts regard as a more accurate indication of the size, scope and impact of federal government transactions.

The OMB currently prepares the budget according to the unified budget concept recommended in the 1967 report of the Commission on Budget Concepts. This commission was set up by Pres. Lyndon Johnson to "undertake a thorough review of the budget and recommend an approach to budgetary presentation which will assist both public and congressional understanding of this vital document."

After initial criticism, particularly from Congress, the unified budget concept has gained general acceptance and has generally been adhered to. But certain government activities are not fully reflected in the unified budget. Some are placed in an "off-budget" status, excluded by law from budget totals.

If all governmental transactions with the public were included in the budget, and if all budget receipts and outlays were strictly reported as such, the total budgetary transactions would differ significantly from those now reported in the unified budget.

Such a method of reporting would also provide a measure of the gross impact of federal budgetary transactions with the public.

So it may well be, as Will Rogers used to say, that all you know (about the budget, for instance) is what you read in the papers. Which is probably what the government wants you to know.

THE INSIDE REPORT

Schlesinger Now Involved

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
WASHINGTON — During the first week of June, Secretary of Energy James Schlesinger hand-carried a top secret letter to President Carter's office that for the first time injected him squarely into the turmoil over arms control and national security within the administration.

Schlesinger's letter to the president aligned him with the Joint Chiefs of Staff (JCS) against the proposed five-year "zeroyield" nuclear test ban treaty—a ban on all underground explosions, including the 150-kiloton tests now permitted. As head of the department assigned the duty of certifying the nation's nuclear arsenal, Schlesinger warned Mr. Carter that nuclear testing is essential to maintain warhead reliability. If asked or directed to testify before Congress, he would say just that.

This gave the uniformed military a badly needed cabinetlevel civilian to help slow the rush to a total test ban. In a broader sense, it reintroduced a seasoned bureaucratic disputant into the debate over how many national security risks can be taken for the sake of arms control.

Schlesinger's courageous though indiscreet advocacy of higher arms spending in 1975 ended with President Ford firing him as Secretary of Defense. As the only Republican in the Carter cabinet, discretion has been Schlesinger's watchword. He says nothing publicly about national security, and nobody has ever heard him utter one critical word, on or off the record, about Jimmy Carter (in contrast to his sometimes pungent off-duty remarks about Richard Nixon and Gerald Ford when he was a cabinet member for them).

But in fact Schlesinger has been distressed by national security policy, particularly by chief disarmament negotiator Paul Warnke's operations. Schlesinger is perceived by some defense-oriented Democrats in Congress as Mr. Carter's ultimate salvation, whom he eventually will call upon to pick up the pieces. But to do this, Schlesinger must establish a record of having warned the president that present policies lead to disaster.

How can this be done unless Schlesinger throws discretion to the winds and trespasses directly into national security? The answer is that the legal jurisdiction of his new Department of Energy includes the nuclear-testing laboratories formerly under the old Atomic Energy Commission; Schlesinger has the duty of certifying the reliability of the national stockpile.

Schlesinger's experts at the Energy Department began early security advice abstract Warnke's push for quick negotiation of a zero-yield test ban treaty. With atmospheric tests barred by the 1963 treaty and underground tests limited to 150 kilotons by the 1974 treaty, the national laboratories say it is already difficult to certify reliability of the stockpile; with no testing it will be impossible. As for the Soviets, only continual on-site inspection could verify compliance with a zero-yield ban, and Moscow flatly rejects it.

Such misgivings by both Department of Energy and JCS experts led to their exclusion from hush-hush Anglo-American talks here in mid-April. Nor were they consulted before Mr. Carter signed Presidential Decision Memorandum 38 on May 20, calling for a five-year "comprehensive" (presumably zero-yield) treaty with the Russians.

Schlesinger concluded that certain high officials—Warnke and to a lesser degree Secretary of State Cyrus Vance—had forced this pro-

Strength For Today

TOLERATION & CONVICTION

It is hard for us to realize today that for so many centuries no one regarded religious toleration as a virtue. One of the first apostles of religious toleration was Roger Williams, an independent-minded Puritan minister who founded Rhode Island. Williams believed that a person has a right to believe what his conscience, training, and experience indicate to him is the best and truest way of life.

Today such a position is commonplace with us. But toleration does not mean that we believe one religion is as good as another. Every truly religious person believes that his or her religion is the best in the world. But a person who truly loves his own religion can have no animosity for a religion quite different from his own, even though he disagrees with it strongly.

Religions tend to disagree on authority, but to converge in matters of practical morality. Therefore, when we are intolerant, we are led to violate our own religion.

China Trade Role Emphasized

By JOHN CUNIFF

WASHINGTON (AP)—We have badly misunderstood China's desire for normal diplomatic relations with the United States, says Christopher Phillips, America's unofficial business ambassador to that nation.

Phillips, who heads the National Council for U.S. China Trade, made up of 400 companies involved in business with China, believes the consequences could be serious to trade and other American interests.

Saying it was a matter of leadership, he criticized President Carter for failing to bring the facts and issues before the American people, and said "nobody less than the President can do so."

Phillips, former deputy United Nations ambassador, feels an erroneous notion persists that the People's Republic, the Peking government, is not pressing for a resolution of the Taiwan issue.

While the United States agreed in the Shanghai Communiqué of February 28, 1972 that only one China existed, it has continued to officially recognize the government of Taipei, Taiwan, rather than Peking.

Phillips, preparing for his fifth visit to the mainland since 1973, claims the issue is far more emotional to the Chinese than we seem to realize, and that it represents a serious misunderstanding.

"It is as important symbolically as it is practically," he said. "In a sense, we continue to take a stand on their civil war."

By delaying, he continued, "we may make difficult the steps we're eventually going to have to take," that is, recognition of Peking. "If not done within two years there might be a retrogression," he said.

If the People's Republic decides that its policy of closer ties with the United States is bearing no results, Phillips feels, they could turn elsewhere, with adverse consequences to the United States.

Already, he maintains, the United States has benefitted, for example, because the Chinese no longer attack the U.S. presence in Japan, and because of their cooperation in helping to stabilize Korea.

If the Chinese additionally felt the United States wasn't standing up to the Soviet Union, it could seek an accommodation with its Communist neighbor, Phillips feels, allowing the Soviets to put pressure on NATO. Provoking emotions in the United States is that recognition of the People's Republic would

Living Day At A Time

By SAMUEL O. HANCOCK
MURPHYSBORO, Ill. (UPI)—With apologies to fellow poet Henry Wadsworth Longfellow, the Deal brothers do much of their blacksmithing under a spreading sycamore tree.

For the Deals, Jim, 81, and Ben, 71, blacksmithing is a way of life they have no immediate plans of abandoning.

"I'm going to try to make it to 100. If I make it, I'll give up and let someone else have it," Jim said.

"I'm trying for 99," said Ben. The brothers, born on a farm near Macon, Miss., have been operating at the same location for 40 years. Their father, James, farmed and operated a sawmill until the family moved to Murphysboro in 1922.

"We came up bit by bit, and I arrived on Christmas Eve," said Jim. "I went to work at a blacksmith shop owned by George Henry Boettner for $2.50 a day and by the middle of June he had raised my salary to $6 a day."

Jim has owned a blacksmith shop since 1933. The one he and Ben have operated since 1938 spills out onto the sidewalk and terrace along N. 17th St. For a pastime, they write poetry.

The brothers can fish around under any pile of steel and come out with what they are looking for, sometimes a finished job with the price tag scrawled in soapstone crayon.

They repair lawnmowers, weld clothesline poles, repair farm harrows and disks, fix bent snowplow blades and rusted-out pickup tailgates and replace axhandles, to name a few general repair jobs.

They are on the job six days a week from, as Jim put it, "7 a.m. until I give out at night."

"If I do something that takes only a minute or so, like drill a hole, I may charge only 50 cents," said Jim.

"One fellow came in and needed something done right away on his truck axle. It took me 15 to 20 minutes and when he asked me what he owed, I

Dr. John L. Winstead of Greenville was elected commander of Pitt County Post No. 39, American Legion, at the regular monthly meeting of that organization last night. Winstead succeeds W. J. Bundy.

Ray Hardison of Stokes was elected first vice-president; Rev. Worth Wicker of Greenville, second vice-president; and Asa Moore of Winterville, third vice-president.

It was brought out at the meeting that the post now has a total paid-up membership of 202.

Dr. E. L. Henderson spoke briefly regarding Boy Scout work. The post sponsors one troop in Greenville.

The Greenies got down to business yesterday afternoon in Ayden after having lost eight straight ball games and played the full nine innings without a "bobbie and won at 9-1.

Every man in the Greenville line up with the exception of Pitcher King, secured at least one safe hit. Ayden was held scoreless until the ninth inning, but the one run came after Greenville had already piled up an average of one run each inning.

C-of-C Has Maps Of Pitt

David Nichols, Chairperson of the Membership Services Committee of the Greenville Area Chamber of Commerce, announced today that the Chamber has received 20,000 new Greenville-Pitt County maps.

The new area maps feature Pitt County and Greenville including detailed layouts of East Carolina University, Farmville, Ayden, Grifton, Winterville, Bethel, Fountain and Grimesland.

The map information includes a brief analysis of Greenville and Pitt County as well as notes for newcomers.

According to Nichols, a new addition to the map this year, is the Classified Business Location Index. This index lists various businesses according to their type of business, including the firm's name, address, telephone number and map coordinates, which makes it easier to locate the firms on the map.

The Greenville-Pitt County map may be purchased at the Greenville Area Chamber of Commerce Office for 50 cents.

Set Bond On Bank Bandit

SMITHFIELD, N.C. (AP) — A federal magistrate set bond at $25,000 Wednesday for a 26-year-old man accused of robbing a branch bank and fleeing on a 10-speed bicycle.

U.S. Magistrate Logan D. Howell ordered Jeffrey Arland Estep, an unemployed truck driver, held in the Wake County Jail.

Authorities said a man, apparently unarmed, went into a branch of the First Citizens Bank and Trust Co. Tuesday, leaped over a door to the tellers' cages and stuffed an undetermined amount of cash into a bag.

The bandit grabbed the cash bags of Seymour Taylor, an insurance man who was entering the bank to make a deposit, and pedaled away on his bicycle, witnesses said. They said Taylor pursued the bandit and saw him get in a car.

Taylor flagged a taxi, and driver Wilson Creech joined in the case, relaying information to police about the location of the bandit, who was quickly pulled over by a Johnston County sheriff's deputy.

His Day In Any Language

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — The man honored on Father's Day may be called dad, pop or papa in English, but he answers to a variety of names in other languages. Hallmark researcher Sally Hopkins points out.

These include abba in Arabic; ama in Tagalog; baba in Turkish and Greek; pap in Dutch; da in Gaelic; far in Scandinavian; fadir in Icelandic; pae in Portuguese; fatat in Russian; padre in Italian; pater in Latin; pere in French; popi in Spanish and vater in German.

Certain South Pacific tribes refer to pop as tama, which means "my mother's husband," Ms. Hopkins adds.

Brown has made no pitch against it. In closed-door testimony before the Senate Armed Services Committee last week, he conceded the difficulties of verification but offered the questionable argument that the treaty would discourage nuclear proliferation.

Thus, Schlesinger decided to hand-carry his letter to the president. Its distribution was limited, with copies outside the Energy Department going only to Brown and national security adviser Zbigniew Brzezinski. However, Schlesinger wanted publicly to disclose his views; he was prepared to do so a few days later on "Meet the Press" but the question was not asked.

With the president repeatedly on record for banning all nuclear tests (that is, zero-yield) and having signed PDM-38 nearly a month ago, the debate would seem to be over. But few decisions are ever final in the Carter administration, particularly when the persuasive Schlesinger makes a serious move.

With both the Joint Chiefs and Schlesinger now on record against a zero-yield test ban, a potent threat has been raised to the grand strategy of the arms control lobby: to push a test ban treaty ahead of SALT II on grounds it would be harder to oppose and would improve the climate for the broader treaty.

The re-entry of Jim Schlesinger into national security affairs, if only narrowly, transcends the test ban treaty. For 16 months some national security policymakers have been congratulating themselves that Schlesinger's intellect and combativeness were safely harnessed to the daily drudgery of natural gas pricing. Now that he has stepped out of that harness, congratulations of a different sort may be in order.

Area Paraplegic Off To Defend Sports Records

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer
 Richard Hudson of Greenville holds a full-time job, is completing work on his master's degree and holds and defends regional and national sports records in two sports — weight lifting and shot put. He also competes in discus throwing and javelin throwing.

And every other day, "just to keep in shape," he does a mile around the East Carolina University track — in his manual wheelchair.

Hudson, a Tarboro native, has been a paraplegic for the past five years. But the automobile accident which took away the use of his legs has not prevented him from continuing work on his undergraduate degree, from holding lucrative and meaningful jobs, from entering his chosen career field — rehabilitation counseling — and from excelling in several sports. His course was altered by the disabling event in two little ways — he was delayed a little and he changed colleges and study fields.

Before the accident July 21, 1973, Hudson was an N. C. State University student majoring in parks and recreation administration. His education was interrupted, but only until June, 1976 when he entered St. Andrews College in Laurinburg where he earned a degree in literature. In the meantime he had continued to take correspondence courses and to begin work in "wheelchair sport to build the functional part of his body to the greatest degree possible."

He competed in the Regional and National Wheelchair Games for the first time in 1974, doing well enough in the regionals to qualify for the nationals but "bombing out" in the nationals. In the regionals, held in Fishersville, Va., he lifted 280 pounds.

In 1975 he placed second in shot put and second in weight lifting and competed, also in discus and javelin throwing.

He lifted 320 pounds that year.

Medical complications forced him to lay out in 1976.

In 1977, in the regional games, he placed first in both shot put and weight lifting. He set a new regional record of 365 pounds lifted, then topped it himself in the national games in San Jose, Calif., lifting 380 pounds. He set a new national record in shot-put, also, 28 feet, 10 and three-fourths inches.

specially adapted sports wheelchairs for participants. Hudson said he already has his own, since he played wheelchair basketball at St. Andrews.

The team expects to play teams in Charlotte, Winston Salem, Greenville, S. C. and Raleigh, to begin with. Eleven persons have come out so far and others, men and women, are welcome.

Hudson's master's thesis premise is that there is a correlation between achievement in sports and achievement on the job for wheelchair-bound persons.

Of his own job, he says, "I like it. I've done other things" (including working as a media specialist for Planter's Bank in Rocky Mount), "but I like rehabilitation counseling best."

"I hope to combine counseling and recreation therapy as a career."

In response to the suggestion that those he counsels must realize that he knows whereof he speaks, he said, "Sometimes... but handicaps vary so much. A stroke patient who's affected in many ways wouldn't think my lack of use of just my legs is such a big problem, you know. The truth is that each person has to internalize it that you've got to rehabilitate yourself. No counselor or loved one or anyone else can do it for you."

An avid reader of poetry and "good novels," Hudson has excelled in literature, as well as sports. He has "a beautiful collection of rejection slips" for his short stories and poetry, he says, but also had had four poems published in three different literary magazines.

RICHARD HUDSON

Nationals Begin Today

Today through Sunday Hudson will be in Fishersville, Va., where the 22nd National Wheelchair Games nationals are being held this year at the same place regionals are always held, Woodrow Wilson Rehabilitation Center. He will be defending last year's records, of course, but will be moving to a new weight-lifting division — light heavyweight. He's gained about four pounds since the regionals, when he competed in the middleweight division. The weight-lifting competition is Friday night, the shot put Sunday morning and finals Sunday afternoon. His mother, Mrs. Barbara Pullen of Rocky Mount will be accompanying him for the first time, as it's the first time the nationals have been close enough that she felt she could go.

Hudson works out with weights in his apartment here which he shares with two "able-bodied" friends. He says a work-out session takes from an hour to an hour and a half and he warms up with 225-pound weights. He does the weight lifting only every other day because he understands that the body requires the off-day to rejuvenate after a work-out. This he does year-round.

Shot put, he practices "out behind his apartment" for about three months before competition, though he says he may increase his training during the coming year.

His "miles around the track" are done on the days he doesn't lift weights. Asked his opinion of electric wheelchairs he said, "You couldn't chase me down and give me one."

Hudson is one of several persons in the community now forming a wheelchair basketball team. Sponsors of the team, so far, are the Greenville Parks and Recreation Department, the Easter Seal Society and Union Carbide Company. Companies and individuals in the area are being asked to help out with the costs, including the buying of several

Legal System's Confusion Cited

MYRTLE BEACH, S.C. (AP) — Tarboro attorney Herbert H. Taylor Jr. charged Wednesday night that all three branches of federal and state governments are contributing to a maze of confusion and uncertainty in the nation's legal system.

Taylor, president of the North Carolina Bar Association, told the bar there are too many laws that are unclear, too many court decisions that are difficult to understand and apply and too many confusing regulations.

"These things add greatly to the complexities and uncertainties of the practice of law, and consequently place a heavier and more costly burden on the public," he said.

He cited the federal Tax Reform Act of 1976 as an example of ill-conceived and poorly drafted legislation, saying it was a legal nightmare that required more than 1,000 technical amendments during the first year it was in force.

Turning to the judicial branch, Taylor said the U.S. Supreme Court sometimes hands down decisions that "intentionally avoid rather than provide guidance to lawyers and lower courts."

"It is not unusual for plaintiffs and defendants to rely upon and cite the same passages from an opinion in support of their opposing contentions," he said. "The era of clear, concise and understandable expression and common-sense reasoning seems at times to have vanished."

Taylor, who is finishing a one-year term as president of the bar, said lawyers should not be afraid to speak out on problems facing the legal system.

"If further lashes are to be inflicted on the legal system, then to the extent that those responsible fail to aid in reducing the confusion, they should bare their backs and accept their share of the lashes."

The boundaries of Quebec, Ontario and Manitoba were extended in 1912.

 Funds totaling $25,000, an unrestricted gift by Procter and Gamble of Cincinnati, Ohio, will be used to enrich the Lillian J. Jenkins Scholarship Fund at East Carolina University over the next five years.

Procter and Gamble officials presented the first annual check in the amount of $5,000 to ECU Chancellor Leo W. Jenkins Tuesday. The scholarship fund for which the money will be earmarked was established in Mrs. Jenkins' honor in 1975 and has grown steadily.

Robert Griffin, P&G's Greenville plant manager, and Art Galya, P&G Employee Relations manager, conveyed a letter of transmittal to Jenkins from B. J. Nolan of Cincinnati, vice president of the Procter and Gamble Fund.

As one method of expanding support of educational institutions, Nolan said the Procter and Gamble Fund will "recognize those schools which make a substantial contribution to the quality of life in communities where Procter and Gamble has a significant number of employees."

The ECU gift is among the first by the Procter and Gamble Fund to a public institution.

Previously, officials said, the Fund has administered an extensive program of support which included four-year, privately controlled colleges and universities selected for a variety of reasons, among which was their value as a continuing source of personnel for P&G.

Griffin and Galya noted that ECU was recognized for its contributions to the quality of life in this area. P&G operates a large plant in Greenville with 400 employees.

Nolan's letter said, "We ask that it (the grant) be used in a way that will benefit the immediate community."

The gift by P&G is believed to be the largest single contribution to the Lillian J. Jenkins Scholarship Fund since its inception three years ago. Earlier this spring, women in the ECU community contributed $1,600 as an expression of esteem for the wife of the retiring ECU chancellor with the hope that it would provide impetus toward perpetuation of the Scholarship fund.

At present, the scholarship fund is assisting two students per year toward their education at ECU.

Intelligence Reports Support Cuban Role Charges

By ROBERT PARRY
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The White House, facing Fidel Castro's repeated denials that he abetted the Katangan invasion of Zaire, is outlining secret intelligence reports to back up its charge that Cuban troops accompanied the rebels almost to the moment of the attack.

The release of the summary of the highly classified reports came as President Carter reiterated his charge at a news conference Wednesday that the Cubans were deeply involved in the rebel invasion of copper-rich Shaba province last month.

Carter cited a list of steps Castro could have taken to block the invasion and contended that the Cuban leader's failure to stop the attack was, in effect, proof of Cuba's complicity.

The administration's summary, outlined to some of the news media on Wednesday, was described as similar to the intelligence material furnished to several congressional committees. It claims that Cuba had been assisting Angola-based Katangans as early as 1975 and at least until last month's invasion of Zaire.

Some members of Congress have described the administration's evidence as inconclusive although others have said they are convinced that the president is correct about Cuban involvement.

A senior White House official, who asked not to be named, said the president was not disturbed by lingering doubts over his claim that Cuba was involved in the attack.

"The president sees it as a legacy of what has gone on before," the official said, referring to what he called widespread public distrust of other recent administrations.

"It (the doubt) comes from a time when more credibility was given to other governments than our own no matter how spotty that country's record (for honesty)," he added.

The official said the administration's summary was based on "reliable intelligence sources," but — to protect the sources — they were not identified even in general terms.

The summary contends that Cubans helped reorganize Katangan troops in Angola as early as 1975 and provided equipment and planning for an abortive invasion of Zaire in March 1977.

After that invasion failed, the summary says, Cubans trained Katangan troops at five bases in northeastern Angola and accompanied them to the launching point for last month's attacks.

However, the summary does not contend — and neither has the administration — that Cubans actually took part in the incursion into Shaba, formerly known as Katanga. The invasion was driven back by French, Belgian and Zairian troops.

The summary also says Cuban and Soviet advisers asked Angola's Marxist government in 1976 to permit raids into Zaire. Cuba has an estimated 20,000 soldiers in Angola and, the administration contends, has considerable influence on the Angolan government.

The summary adds that early this year Katangan leader Nathaniel M'Bumba was claiming Angola's support for his effort to overthrow the government of Zaire.

Castro has said that Cuban forces had helped the Katangans but stopped two years ago. He insists that Cuba has rejected more recent requests from the rebels for support.

Castro also reportedly told a U.S. diplomat in Havana several days after the invasion that he tried unsuccessfully to head off the attack by contacting Angolan leader Agostino Neto.

At his news conference, Carter disputed that claim, contending that since Cuba effectively controls Angola's transportation system, Castro could have stopped the attack had he wanted.

"The fact is that Castro could have done much more had he genuinely wanted to stop the invasion," Carter said.

"He could have interceded with the Katangans themselves ... He could have notified the Organization of African Unity. He could have notified the world at large that an invasion designed to cross and to disturb an international border was in prospect. And he did not do any of these things ..."

"So there is no doubt in my mind that just on the basis of these facts alone my statement is true."

Carter also suggested that Castro and the Angolan government pledge to halt future assaults on Zaire from Angola.

Meanwhile, Rep. Stephen Solarz, D-N.Y., who interviewed Castro in Cuba three days ago, claims the Cuban leader said he would "reluctantly" use his forces to prevent another Katangan invasion of Zaire.

Solarz and Rep. Anthony Beilenson, D-Calif., who participated in the Castro interview, said Carter's call for Castro to restrain the Katangans was a proper suggestion.

Sen. George McGovern, D-S.D., a vocal skeptic of Carter's claims about Cuban in-

Haldeman Must Wait

LOMPOC, Calif. (AP) — H.R. Haldeman, former chief of staff to President Richard Nixon, will be paroled a few days before Christmas.

The Dec. 20 release date was set Wednesday by the U.S. Parole Commission, which acted on recommendations of examiners.

Haldeman will have served 18 months of a four-year sentence for perjury and obstruction of justice in the Watergate cover-up.

The commission could have paroled Haldeman as of June 20, but no explanation was offered as to the December date.

Haldeman, 51, who wielded enormous power as Nixon's closest confidant, was described as a model prisoner at the minimum-security facility near Los Angeles.

In his recent book, "The Ends of Power," Haldeman suggested Nixon was involved in the cover-up "from Day One."

Although he was originally sentenced to a 2½- to 8-year term, U.S. District Judge John J. Sirica cut Haldeman's sentence after hearing taped statements of contrition.

"I'm sorry for what I've done and for what I've been responsible for."

PWP Plans Announced

Budget Hearing.....

the local funds, but also in building ownership responsibilities and grounds maintenance."

She added, "A survey last year showed that non-city residents constituted approximately 40 per cent of the library's users. Based on this, perhaps a 60-40 arrangement could be negotiated with the county commissioners."

Cox said, "I think you are in the wrong meeting." He added that the county commissioners should be approached.

Several persons said that they would rather see their taxes raised to support the library rather than face the possibility of loss of library services.

Rodney Schmidt of 609 Elm Street said that he would prefer to see his taxes increased to support the library. He called the program "one of the most outstanding" assets to the community and said that he would like to see the full budget request supported by the Council.

Cox said that with the proposed library funding, he did not see how services would have to be curtailed.

Linda Sundwall of 1701 River Drive said that according to state standards for libraries, the local facility should have a staff of 12 rather than six and she mentioned that the staff was "stretched to the limit." She urged the Council to give as much support as possible to the library.

Helen Moseley of 524 Longmeadow Road contended that dollar for dollar, the library provides more service to Greenville than any other agency. She said that she would like to see funds left in the budget for the library and have an increase in taxes.

Cox reminded the spokesmen that not only did the city provide budget funding for the library in the 1977-78 budget, but during the year other funding requests from the library were met in an amount totaling nearly $37,000.

Ennis Chestang, chairman of the board of Operation Sunshine, said that he hoped the library's branch operations would not have to close since the Operation Sunshine program utilizes the Carver branch in its activities.

Chestang said that as a citizen, he would prefer to have taxes raised "for the purpose of increasing and maintaining literacy than anything else."

Andrew Hahn of 307 N. Sylvan Drive said that his children used the Carver library and he would rather for them to be there than "getting into juvenile things." Hahn said he would rather see an increase in taxes than close Carver.

As a spokesman for the Greenville-Pitt County League of Women Voters, Margaret Wirth said that the league's greatest disappointments in the budget are the loss of the juvenile officer position and budget recommendations for Sheppard Memorial.

She said that the League suggested two things for Council consideration regarding the library: that a portion of the $50,000 budgeted for street resurfacing be considered for library use and that a percentage arrangement based on the library users survey could be used to determine future city-county funding for the library system.

The Rev. B. B. Felder of 701 W. Fourth Street expressed his concern regarding the continued funding for the library and he mentioned that it would be worth the money to keep the Carver branch open.

Cox questioned Felder as to who said the Carver branch would be closed. He asked Mrs. Frost if the Council did not give the library the additional money requested, would the Carver branch have to be closed. Mrs. Frost said that the matter would be a decision of the board of trustees.

"I don't think anyone has suggested that...close Carver," Cox added.

Mrs. Frost said that the library requests were "simply to maintain services we have now." She said that the library hopes it will not have to close a branch but the possibility was raised as a proposed way of cutting expenses.

Tom Johnson of Beaumont Drive complimented the Council on its efforts to meet and negotiate with the County Commissioners for the benefit of the citizens. He urged the Council to continue the joint meetings.

Charles Burnette of 2001 Fairview Way pointed to the work of the two juvenile officers and said that he understood the position of Mrs. Jackie Alexander was proposed for elimination. He said that he would like to see the position remain in the budget "so that our children can be helped when they need it."

Cox explained that it was understood that if the federal funding stopped for the juvenile officer position, the post would be dropped. The city funded 73 per cent of the position held by Mrs. Alexander during the current fiscal year, it was noted, and 100 per cent funding would be required this year to maintain the position.

Burnette said that as a taxpayer, he would be willing to pay the increased tax. He added that he felt the citizens would be willing to pay for services as long as they had those services.

Richard Morin of West Haven Road questioned the funding arrangement involved in the juvenile officer's job. Cox said that as of July 1, the city would be asked to pick up 100 per cent of the salary.

The female juvenile officer was recommended for full funding in the initial budget proposal submitted by City Manager Charlie Holliday but in efforts by department heads to make cuts, the position was one of those recommended for discontinuation.

Ms. Wirth, speaking on behalf of the League of Women Voters, pointed out that Mrs. Alexander is one of four women officers in a force of 60 men at the Police Department. She said Mrs. Alexander is the only woman officer trained to handle rape cases.

SURRENDERS IN FRAUD CASE—Barbara Jean Thompson, 33 (left), who authorities say allegedly collected $240,000 in welfare overpayments, is accompanied by officials in Los Angeles Wednesday. Police in suburban Compton booked her and described it as perhaps the biggest welfare fraud in history. They said she claimed 47 children for the overpayments and received checks at eight different addresses. (AP Laserphoto)

"The League hopes the Council will reconsider this budget cut and include full funding for the second juvenile officer position," she added.

Eve Rogers of Rt. 6, Greenville also offered her support of Mrs. Alexander and she added that as chief court counselor of the Third Judicial District, she has seen a decrease in the number of juvenile cases coming to court since the juvenile officer positions were created.

She said that the reduction in cases is due partly to the efforts and capabilities of the juvenile officers.

John B. Smith, assistant principal at E. B. Aycock Junior High School, mentioned that Mrs. Alexander provides a "valuable service" and he said that she has contributed to the total well-being at the school.

Smith said that he had worked closely with Mrs. Alexander on juvenile matters at the school and he did not see "how we can do without her."

Travis Duncan of 1811 Battle Street read a letter from Dave Bumgarner, assistant principal at Rose High School, in support of Mrs. Alexander's work and recommendation to keep her position in the budget.

Duncan said that he has seen how effective Mrs. Alexander is in "dealing with students."

Felder also offered his support of the juvenile officer's position.

Councilman Clarence Gray said that he worked with Mrs. Alexander while he was at Rose High School and she was "quite helpful." He said that the position is "noteworthy."

Gray asserted that some things need to be cut around, not cut out.

Mr. Wirth offered the League's support of several items in the budget, including: full funding of the police attorney; purchase of the two-door pickup truck for the Animal Control Division; proposed funding of the containerized truck with reach-out capacity for the Public Works Department; continued funding for the public transit system; and inclusion of the bikeway-greenway program.

In the Greenville Utilities segment of the budget hearing, Mr. Wirth suggested that

Deputy Sees ECU Continuing Ed Third Probe Personnel Promoted

ASHEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Federal officials have launched a third probe of allegations that a Buncombe County sheriff's deputy was ordered to work at an election polling place during the May 2 Democratic primary. Former Deputy Robert G. Warlick, now an employee of the Asheville Police Department, has charged that he was ordered by Chief Deputy Herbert DeWeese to work a precinct on the day of the election last month.

Warlick was hired as a deputy under the Buncombe County Employment and Training Program under funding from the federal Comprehensive Employment and Training Act (CETA).

Lawrence Gilliam, administrator of the county employment program, told county commissioners Wednesday that an investigation by his office turned up no evidence that DeWeese or Sheriff Thomas Morrissey did anything wrong.

The Personnel Advisory Board of the sheriff's department had cleared DeWeese after a hearing into the allegations earlier this week.

However, an official of the U.S. Department of Labor, which oversees the CETA program, arrived Wednesday to begin another investigation of the allegations by Warlick.

The GUC budget be prepared the same way as the city budget in order that it be more easily interpreted.

GUC director Charles Horne explained that the format used for budget preparation is established by the Local Government Commission.

Cox told the gathering that the recommendations and suggestions offered at the budget hearing would be taken into consideration by the Council at its workshop sessions.

Assistant Deans Garland Bailey and James McGee and faculty member Karl Rodabaugh of the East Carolina University Division of Continuing Education have received promotions in rank.

Bailey and McGee are being promoted to the rank of professor. Rodabaugh, now an assistant professor of history in the Division, is being promoted to associate professor.

Bailey is a native of Thomasville, with BS and MA degrees from ECU. He has done additional study at Duke and New York Universities.

Before joining the East Carolina staff in 1965, he served as principal in Lenoir and Pitt County schools. He is current president-elect of the National Association for Continuing Professional Education.

McGee, a member of the East Carolina staff since 1964, has BS and MA degrees from Appalachian State University, with additional study at Wake Forest and N. C. State Universities.

McGee has been supervisor of a marine advisory program for the N. C. fishing industry, as part of the state's Sea Grant program, and has served on a state-federal committee for the development of North Carolina's marine resources.

He is a native of Wilkes County.

Rodabaugh, a native of Oberlin, Ohio, joined the ECU continuing education faculty in 1970. He has degrees from Southern Illinois University, has done additional study at Ohio Northern and Miami University and is a candidate for the PhD degree from UNC-Chapel Hill.

A specialist in Southern U. S. history, Rodabaugh is the author of several articles in professional journals and of a book-length study of the Farmers' Revolt in late 19th-century Alabama.

In 1976, he directed a continu-

Southern Baptists Broaden Aim

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

ATLANTA (AP) — After long hesitation, Southern Baptists are headed into a new, broader arena to fight social injustice and human oppression at home and abroad.

Their stance was seen as a clear strategy shift by the nation's largest Protestant body, which generally in the past has shunned political ills, concentrating on personal morality and saving souls.

It is "the first comprehensive commitment to human rights" by the 13 million-member denomination, said the Rev. Floyd Craig of Nashville, Tenn.

In the denominational convention's action Wednesday, its 35,000 local churches were urged to be "boldly involved in championing justice for the oppressed" and seeking "changes in those laws and systems which abuse the poor."

"Christians are obligated... to deal in a forthright and corrective way with social structures which abuse and violate human rights," the convention said, adding that this includes oppression abroad and the rights of women, blacks, the poor, aged and abused "in our midst."

Although most mainline denominations have long spoken out on social conditions, seeking to apply Biblical ethics to them, Southern Baptists only recently have begun venturing into this area.

The new step was the most extensive yet, but promulgating belief in Christ still remains an overarching concern, as was highlighted in a dramatic program Wednesday night on plans for evangelizing the world.

The record-breaking 22,294 "messengers" registered were asked to skip a meal and to contribute its price to world hunger programs.

A brief flurry occurred when the Rev. Clennon King, the black militant minister who two years ago was barred from President Carter's hometown church in Plains, Ga., appeared, wanting to speak.

After an argument with security officers at the foot of the stage, he slumped to the floor and was carried out. He was ordered not to return, and extra guards were posted to prevent it.

Convention officials said attempts had been under way to arrange a three-minute spot for him on the agenda today, but he demurred. King said he had wanted to explain that the Plains events were intended to "help bring black and white Americans closer together."

Meanwhile, unable to sell enough $12.50 tickets for a scheduled appearance Friday by President Carter, officials opened the bulk of the seats to the public free on a first-come basis.

The denomination's social concerns agency, the Christian Life Commission, issued a study pamphlet, aimed at helping Southern Baptists to stand firmly against the "sin of homosexuality."

Several moves were afoot to affirm support for the anti-homosexual rights crusade of entertainer Anita Bryant, who was defeated in a bid for the convention's first vice presidency.

In New York, leaders of the National Gay Task Force said they "are heartened" by her defeat, and called her efforts against homosexual rights laws "inconsistent with Christian moral principles."

SOMETHING TO CHIRP ABOUT — If it were Thanksgiving and this were a turkey, then the bird on the stump might be chirping its last prayer. She Said Yes 33 Years After First Question

CHICAGO (AP) — In 1944, Irving Signer asked Joan Harris to marry him. She said no. Thirty-three years later he proposed again. She said yes.

They got their marriage license Tuesday at City Hall after Joan flew in from Sydney, Australia. The wedding date is yet to be set.

It was in Australia that Signer, then a Army Air Force lieutenant on a month's furlough from a New Guinea B-24 bomber base, first met the "shy" Australian woman.

Although she married an Australian Army captain and had two daughters, Joan kept a picture of the uniformed Signer throughout the years. And he carried her picture.

Joan, now 54, eventually was divorced. Signer, 61, never married. He said he had a sick brother and took care of him, and later cared for his aging parents.

With his mother dead and his family obligations over, Signer decided to return to Australia to visit old friends and, maybe, find Joan Harris.

Joan and "Sig" had stopped exchanging letters years ago, when she wrote him of her engagement and rejected his marriage proposal.

The pair first met in Sydney at the boarding house of Annie Townrow, who always welcomed American soldiers. One night while everyone gathered around the piano and sang "Waltzing Matilda," young Signer met the beauty shop worker who had temporarily given up her rented room when Signer and three other officers arrived for their furlough.

"She was a good-looking little doll," he said. "A shy thing from the country. I liked her from the first time I saw her."

They dated, but then it was time for Signer to return to duty. He called her from the airport to say goodbye. "I promised him I'd write. And I did," she said.

The war ended. Signer returned to Chicago, still thinking about the Australian woman, still keeping her picture, but knowing she had married. He did not know she had kept his picture, too.

When Signer decided to follow his memories back to Sydney, he said, "I wanted to see Mrs. Townrow again and visit Bondi Beach, and I wondered whatever happened to Joan Harris and all the people I sang 'Waltzing Matilda' with."

"... I rummaged through my things and found an old name and address. I wrote a letter and said, 'I don't remember who you are or how I got this address, but I am coming to Australia and I am looking for Mrs. Townrow and a girl named Joan Harris.'"

A couple of weeks later in Sydney, the recipient of the letter telephoned Joan and said, "I've got a letter from America here, and the man's name is Sig. He is looking for Mrs. Townrow (who had died two years ago) and for you."

When Signer got off the plane in Sydney, Joan was waiting for him.

"When we started talking, it was like we'd never been apart," Joan recalled.

"We hit it off right away again," said Signer.

This time, when he asked her to marry him, she said yes.

Hold Suspect In Torture Inquiry

By ARNOLD ZEITLIN
Associated Press Writer

WEST SPRINGFIELD, Mass. (AP) — A burly, bearded pawnbroker with reported Nazi sympathies is sitting in jail today, suspected of luring young homosexuals from New York's Greenwich Village to torture sessions with leg irons and chains.

Out behind his tarpaper shanty, a backhoe is ripping through a tiny yard looking for bodies — perhaps as many as seven, according to one published report.

Kenneth Appleby, 27, whose friends described him as a "gentleman" and the "greatest human alive," was held on $100,000 bail on a charge of kidnapping.

Today police resumed their digging, bringing in a second backhoe to continue their painstaking search for bodies.

"We found nothing," police Capt. Richard Kulig said Wednesday after 10 hours of digging.

"We're looking for one specific body in particular, and there may be others," Matthew Ryan Jr., Hampden-Berkshire district attorney, said Wednesday.

The New York Daily News reported today that five informants, acknowledged homosexuals, believed as many as seven Manhattan teen-agers who were taken to Appleby's house "never returned to the city."

Quoting a spokesman for Manhattan District Attorney Robert Morgenthau, the News said the five informants each had been picked up on Greenwich Village streets and driven to West Springfield.

The informants told investigators that Appleby, when he picked up young men, was always armed and accompanied by another man who blindfolded and handcuffed the victims before the drive to Massachusetts, the paper said.

The Appleby shack was described by the informants as "a chamber of horrors," Morgenthau aides told the News.

A spokeswoman for Ryan said Wednesday: "There is sado-masochism and homosexual evidence. Of the Nazism, I wouldn't rule it out."

Police found chains, leg irons and whips in the house on Tuesday.

Offers Reward In Slaying Case

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Gov. Jim Hunt has announced the offer of a $5,000 state reward for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the person responsible for the slaying of a Lumberton woman last fall.

The governor's office said Geneva McNeill was found stabbed to death on the bedroom floor of her home Nov. 8. No arrests have been made in the case.

New Commander At Cherry Point

CHERRY POINT, N.C. (AP) — Brig. Gen. Keith A. Smith was scheduled to take over today as commanding general of the Marine Corps Air Station at Cherry Point.

Smith, who has been a Marine for more than 27 years, succeeds retiring Maj. Gen. Victor A. Armstrong during a 2:30 p.m. ceremony. He previously served as assistant wing commander of a Marine unit on Okinawa.

During a career of more than 35 years in the Marine Corps, Armstrong served as the senior presidential helicopter pilot for former presidents Dwight D. Eisenhower and John F. Kennedy.

Refund Policy

FARMVILLE — The Town of Farmville has a new policy of refunding utilities deposits to customers with two consecutive years of good payment history.

The Farmville Commissioners approved refund of the actual amount of the deposit only — with no interest to be paid. Previously water and electric deposits have been returned only upon termination of service.

It was emphasized that the customers of the town's water and electric system will not receive the refunds immediately. Examination of account histories will take place over the next several months. Some customers who have been on the utilities systems for many years do not have deposits. Any incidence of late payment or a returned check will call for reinstatement of a deposit, with return only after two more years pass.

Utilities customers are requested not to make inquiries about refunds at this time.

How's The Weather?

Savings And Loan Feud Flares

WEATHER FORECAST — Warm, sunny weather is forecast today for most of the country. Temperatures in the east are expected to range from mild in most areas to cool in New England. (AP Laserphoto Map)

By The Associated Press
Clear skies and mild temperatures prevailed over North Carolina today and, thanks to high pressure centered over the mid-Atlantic states, this kind of weather is expected to continue on into the weekend.
However, as the high pressure drifts eastward both temperature and humidity will continue to rise.

Temperatures generally ranged up into the 70s Wednesday, with exceptions at Asheville in the mountains where the high was 80 and at Jacksonville in the eastern part of the state where the high was 81.
Temperatures during the night dipped to the 50s generally, but there were some lows in the 40s in the mountains and in the 60s near the coast.
High temperatures today were expected to range mostly in the 70s. It should be a little warmer Friday as temperatures climb to a range from the mid 70s to the low 80s. And by the weekend the highs will be in the low 90s except for the 80s in the mountains and along the coast.

Report Card For Pearl Bailey

WASHINGTON (AP) — All her life, 59-year-old Pearl Bailey has read reviews of her performances, but this was a first.
There in front of her were four B's and an A. Probably the tersest critique of her illustrious career.
And not bad either, considering they were marks for her first semester as a French major at Georgetown University here.
The woman who has sung to presidents and starred in "Hello Dolly" began her freshman year in January, 40 years after she dropped out of school to pursue a show business career.
Her one A was in religion, to which the beaming Ms. Bailey said, "As long as you have A's with God, honey, that's all that matters."

Former Senator Weds Widow

NEW CANAAN, Conn. (AP) — Former Missouri Sen. Stuart Symington, who is 77, has married the 59-year-old widow of a grandson of IBM's founder.
Symington, who served 24 years in the Senate before retiring in December 1976, said "I do" Wednesday to Anne Hemingway Watson, who he met last year in California where both were visiting Bob Hope.

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A battle between savings and loan associations and banks flared in a House committee Wednesday in a dispute over how stock-owned savings and loans should be taxed.

The House Finance Committee, after hearing three days of debate on the measure, voted 15-18 against a motion to approve a bill that would have removed the intangibles tax on deposits held by the stock-owner-held institutions.

The bill also would have placed the new type of associations under state tax laws applying to mutual savings and loans, rather than taxing them as a corporation. The result would have been a tax break for the stock-owned institutions.

But supporters got the committee to adjourn before opponents could actually kill the bill, and backers said it could be revived today. Meanwhile, another bill was introduced in the Senate that would make a different change in the tax procedure for stock-owned savings and loans.

Its sponsor was Sen. James Garrison, D-Stanly, who serves on boards of a bank and of a mutual savings and loan. "It's a compromise bill," he said.

A number of legislators said lobbyists for the state's banks had applied pressure to defeat the House bill. Some mutual savings and loan representatives said they favored the measure because if it passed, their association would convert to stock and thus increase assets.

"The only expression I've heard on it is from the banks, and they're against it," said Rep. J.T. Pugh, D-Randolph, who voted with the majority.

No bank representatives spoke against the bill. But Rep. Mark Short, chairman of the committee, said he believed banks opposed it because they feared increased competition for investments by the new form of saving and loans.

Stockowner-held savings and loan associations were legalized last year by the General Assembly. Since then, 14 have been chartered in the state, and seven are now operating. At least five members of the General Assembly now own stock in a savings and loan.

Under current law the stock-owned institutions are taxed like corporations and their deposits are subject to the intangibles tax — at 25 cents per $100. The intangibles tax is paid by the depositor, and the corporate rate results in higher taxes paid by the institution also, banking experts told the committee.

Deposits in mutuals are not subject to the tax, but deposits in banks are subject to it at a lesser rate.

The House bill, sponsored by Short, would eliminate the intangibles tax for deposits in stock institutions, and lower the institutions' state tax bill. Garrison's bill would apply the lower rate — 10 cents per $100 — and permit a stock association to pay the intangibles tax for its customers, if it wanted.

Seek Identify Woman's Body

HENDERSONVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Henderson County authorities are trying to determine the identity of a young woman whose nude body was found Wednesday in a wooded area near Hendersonville.
Sheriff Albert Jackson said the woman, whose body was found by a contractor checking the area as a possible construction site, appeared to have been in her late teens or early 20s.
The body was sent to the state medical examiner's office at Chapel Hill for a ruling on the cause of death.

Economist Speaks At Monthly Meet

Dr. T. Everett Nichols, Jr., agricultural extension economist, was the guest speaker at the monthly meeting of the Pitt County Agri-business Association.

According to Dr. Nichols, the number of people supplied food and fiber by one farm worker has increased dramatically, although the number of farms has decreased.

"Future farms will be larger, more specialized and more like a business with extensive record keeping and better decision-making," Nichols predicted.
"Crop production will continue to increase with demand, primarily as a result of an increase in yield per acre rather than an increase in acreage," he said.

Livestock production in North Carolina, specifically hogs and poultry, will continue to expand as noted by Dr. Nichols.

The future of American agriculture depends on production efficiency, foreign trade, population growth and government regulations according to Dr. Nichols.

Stock And Market Reports

By MARK POTTS
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market, showing the effects of profit-taking and fears about a credit crunch, dipped in active trading today.

The noon Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks was down 3.82 at 850.74, gaining back some of the losses it sustained earlier in the day.

Declines outnumbered advances by a little better than 2-1 among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Investors seemed to be continuing a wave of profit-taking spurred by the gains recorded by the market this spring. There were also fears of a further tightening of interest rates by the Federal Reserve Board.

The Fed has been raising short-term interest rates in an attempt to stem inflation, but last week's money supply figures showed a large jump in the nation's cash supply after several weeks of declines. The latest money supply figures are due later today.

Caesar's World led the most-active list, falling 1 1/2 to 25 1/2. The casino operator is the subject of a lawsuit over its intention to lease the Howard Johnson's hotel in Atlantic City.

A rival investment group claims its lease of the hotel had been unfairly terminated by the owner and given to Caesar's World.

The NYSE's composite index of more than 1,500 common stocks gave up .21 to 55.67. On the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was off .22 at 151.10.

Volume on the NYSE reached 12.6 million shares at midday, compared to 17.8 million Wednesday.

Other casino-related stocks were also active, with Playboy Enterprises holding steady at 17 1/2 and Bally dropping 3/4 to 35 1/2.

One analyst said heavy profit-taking in the red-hot gambling issues was causing the rest of the market to stagnate. "When you get such intense speculation, it draws attention away from the rest of the market," he said.

Chrysler, which is disputing Consumer's Union charges that the company's Omni and Horizon subcompact are "unacceptable," fell 3/4 to 11 1/2. First Charter Financial Corp. fell 1/4 to 17. McDonnell Douglas slipped 1/4 to 32 1/2 and Abbott Laboratories picked up 1/4 to 34 1/2.

Hogs
RALEIGH (AP) (NCDA) — The overall trend on the North Carolina hog market was mostly steady, instances of .25 higher today. Wilson, 49.75; Rocky Mount, 49.00-49.50; Clinton, Fayetteville, Dunn, Pink Hill, Chadbourn, Ayden, Pine Level, Laurinburg and Benson, 50.00; Tarboro and Bethel, unreported; Salisbury, 47.00; Spivey's Corner, unreported.

Poultry
RALEIGH (AP) (NCDA) — The North Carolina f.o.b. dock broiler market today was steady, supplies adequate, demand good, weights desirable. The dock weighted average price for this week is 50.33. Estimated slaughter today 1,448,000.

Mr. Andrews was a native of Pitt County, but had made his home in New York for the past 23 years. He was a member of Christ Temple Baptist Church. Survivors: his wife, Mrs. Mary Battle Andrews of New York; one son, Alton Andrews of New York; two daughters, Miss Carrie Andrews of New York and Ms. Edna Barnes of Greenville; his mother, Mrs. Carrie Lee Council Andrews of Route 1, Stokes; three sisters, Mrs. Velma Blakey and Mrs. Dorothy Hardy, both of Charlotte and Mrs. Ann Sherrod of Brooklyn, N.Y.; three brothers, Fred Andrew, Jr. of Tarboro, Richard Earl and Benjamin C. Andrews, both of Brooklyn, N.Y.; one grandchild.

The body will be taken to Flanagan Chapel, Robertsonville, Friday, 7 p.m. Family visitation will be from 8-9 p.m. Friday.

Barfield
FARMVILLE — Mrs. Marjie Ree Ellis Barfield, Lang Crossroad community resident, died Wednesday in Raleigh at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Leona Barfield Barrett. Arrangements are incomplete at Joyner's Mortuary, Farmville.

Jones
The time for graveside services for Mrs. Jannie Jones has been changed to 5 p.m. Friday in the Brown Hill cemetery, Greenville.

Langston
C. E. (Ted) Langston, 61, Greenville district manager of Charlotte Liberty Mutual Life Insurance Co., died Thursday in Pitt Memorial Hospital. Funeral services will be held Friday, 4 p.m., in the Wilkerson Funeral Home by his pastor, the Rev. Willis Wilson. Burial will be in the Pinewood Memorial Park. Mr. Langston was a native of Pitt County and attended the Greenville City schools. He had lived in Newport News, Va. and Miami, Fla. before returning to Greenville in 1963. He was a member of Reedy Branch Free Will Baptist Church. Survivors include: two sons, Charles E. Langston III of Hollywood, Fla. and Richard Martin Langston of Miami, Fla.; two brothers, Don and Jimmy Langston, both of Winterville; two sisters, Mrs. Jean L. Worthington of Winterville and Mrs. Peggy L. Baker of Washington, Ill.; eight grandchildren.

The family has suggested that those desiring to make memorial contributions consider the Reedy Branch F. W. B. Church building fund or the Pitt County Cancer Society, P. O. Box 377, Greenville.

The family will receive at the funeral home from 7-9 tonight, and will be at the home of a sister, Mrs. Jean Langston Worthington, 514 E. Cooper St., Winterville.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Soviet war of nerves over arrests of each other's citizens is escalating after a dramatic confrontation between an angry Andrei A. Gromyko and Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance, a U.S. official reports. The Soviet foreign minister reportedly threatened retaliation for the highly publicized arrest outside New York City of two Russian nationals on spy charges and told Vance, "Two can play at this game."

Gromyko's warning late last month, disclosed by the official Wednesday night, apparently was carried out in two separate incidents Monday. First, the government newspaper Izvestia claimed that Martha D. Peterson, at the time third secretary in the U.S. Embassy, was expelled last July after she allegedly supplied a spy with poison that was used to kill an "innocent" Russian. Then Monday night, U.S. businessman Francis J. Crawford was yanked from his car in Moscow and driven away by police who charged him with smuggling. "It's clear the Soviets telegraphed their punch," said the official, who asked not to be named, in referring to the Gromyko warning.

The arrests in New Jersey and Moscow ended for now a practice by both countries of quietly sending home suspected spies with a minimum of publicity. American businessmen in Moscow were stunned by the arrest of Crawford, the Moscow representative of International Harvester, and wondered who among them might be next. While Crawford remained in Lefortovo prison, more than 40 Americans discussed the situation Wednesday with high-ranking members of the U.S. Embassy. "Clearly these people are uneasy with good reason," the official in Washington said.

The Russian nationals referred to by Gromyko worked at the United Nations Secretariat and were arrested in Woodbridge, N.J., on May 20 on espionage charges. The two, Valdik Aleksandrovich Enger and Rudolf Petrovich Chernyayev, pleaded innocent and were ordered held in lieu of $2 million bail.

The size of the bail reportedly had Gromyko especially upset during his discussions with Vance in New York, where the two men were primarily discussing prospects for a strategic arms treaty. Western observers in Moscow expect the Russians will offer to release Crawford, 38, of Mobile, Ala., in exchange for the two Soviet nationals.

The war of nerves also included the announcement by U.S. officials late last month that sophisticated Soviet espionage equipment was found inside the U.S. Embassy in Moscow. Izvestia then said it would document cases of extensive U.S. espionage in Moscow.

Club Invited To Help Officiate
Members of the Coastal Carolina Track Club are invited to help officiate at the Junior Olympics Regionals to be held at the East Carolina University Track beginning at 10:30 a.m. Saturday.

The Track Club Fun Run will be held at 8 a.m. Saturday at the track. It is expected that a large number of Coastal Carolina Club members will take part in the Seymour Johnson AFB five-mile run at the same 10:30 a.m. hour Saturday. Those wishing to go to Goldsboro should meet at the ECU Track at 8 a.m.

The Atlantic Beach 10,000-meter run will take place Saturday, July 22. She said her mother told of deciding to begin a new life for herself after the death of her husband. She remarried and had two other daughters, who are now 18 and 22 years old.

It was only a few days ago that Mrs. Holsapple contacted her mother-in-law to learn the whereabouts of her two children. Mrs. Kaminske talked by phone with her half-sister and said she was amazed how much they had in common. She said she talked for an hour with her mother, learning about her life over the last 25 years and telling her she has three grandsons.

She said she hopes to meet her mother and half-sister, but it will be some time before she is able to make a trip to Minnesota.

Edward Johnson, a Canadian-born tenor, was appointed general manager of the Metropolitan Opera in New York in 1935.

For Ingram Has Located Her Mother

NEWTON, N.C. (AP) — Yolanda Kaminske's lifelong search for her mother is over.

Mrs. Kaminske, a 26-year-old mother of three, recently received a telephone call and a letter from the mother she has never known, Jerri Holsapple of Hibbing, Minn.

Mrs. Kaminske, who lives near Conover, said her father was killed in a car accident in Denver when she was 1 year old and her brother was 4. She said their mother left them with their paternal grandparents in Tucson, Ariz., and dropped out of sight.

Asked whether he thought Carter, whose popularity as measured by a recent poll has been slipping in the South, would be an asset to his campaign, Ingram said: "We feel he will be a great help."

Budget Hearing
Mrs. Mills was the widow of the late Goldman Mills. She was born and raised in the Vanceboro community, but lived in the Haddock Crossroad community several years before making her home in New York for the past four years. She was a retired farmer and member of St. Peter Free Will Baptist Church.

Survivors: three brothers, John Frank of Vanceboro, Grover C. and Thomas W. Smith, both of Brooklyn, N.Y.; four sisters, Mrs. Gannie S. Edwards of Kingston, Mrs. Leila S. Bryant, Mrs. Zella Smith Gardner and Mrs. Catherine S. King, all of Brooklyn, N.Y.

The body will be at the Norcott Memorial Chapel, Ayden, from 7 p.m. Thursday until carried to the church one hour prior to services. Family visitation will be held from 8-9 p.m. tonight. The family will be at the home of Mrs. Mills near Haddocks Crossroad.

clude addition of capacitor banks, new oil circuit breaker, change in primary point of whole power delivery and rerouting of downtown primary distribution lines. The employee pay plan would be adjusted six percent to help offset cost-of-living increases, a change equal to the Pitt County and State employees' planned adjustments.

Revenue sharing funds are designated primarily for reserve items including future fire truck and station, streets sweeper and accounting equipment. A current transfer is made for lease-purchase of a sanitation packer.

Reserve budgeting for major capital needs is continued. Some of the larger items for which funds are being reserved are a Southside fire station, municipal complex development, water and electric system extensions, and an electric derrick-digger truck.

Other appropriations items are finance $320,078; fire, $57,925; rescue, $22,762; code enforcement, $34,750; streets, $173,975; nutrition, $3,942; and non-departmental, $55,680.

Thomas said the increase in basic debt service is due to bond payments on the waste water treatment plant. The town's debt position is excellent, he said, with only $120,958 debt service, compared to statutory limit of $3 million-plus for Farmville.

Water and sewer operations costs are up significantly due to assignment of energy costs and costs of operating the new sewage plant, planned to begin in September or October. Major objectives include the buying of a new high-volume water well, completion of system inventory and mapping and start-up of the new treatment plant, he said.

Wholesale power costs have increased, resulting from the December, 1977 increase from Carolina Power and Light Company. System improvements planned in-

Will Again Try Curb Preference
WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration still favors a proposal to reduce the lifelong preference veterans now get in competing for federal jobs.

The Senate Governmental Affairs Committee voted 9-7 Wednesday to scrap a plan that would have limited veteran preference to one-time use. But Civil Service Commission Chairman Alan K. Campbell said the administration will try to have the measure reinstated on the Senate floor and battle for it in the House.

Flays Permit To Export Oil
WASHINGTON (AP) — Government issuance of a license to the Tesoro Petroleum Corp. to export 200,000 barrels of refined oil from Alaska to Japan is "a clear and outrageous violation of congressional intent," according to Sen. John Durkin, D-N.H.

Durkin told the Energy Department the issuance of the license violates the spirit of a 1977 law barring the export of Alaskan crude oil.

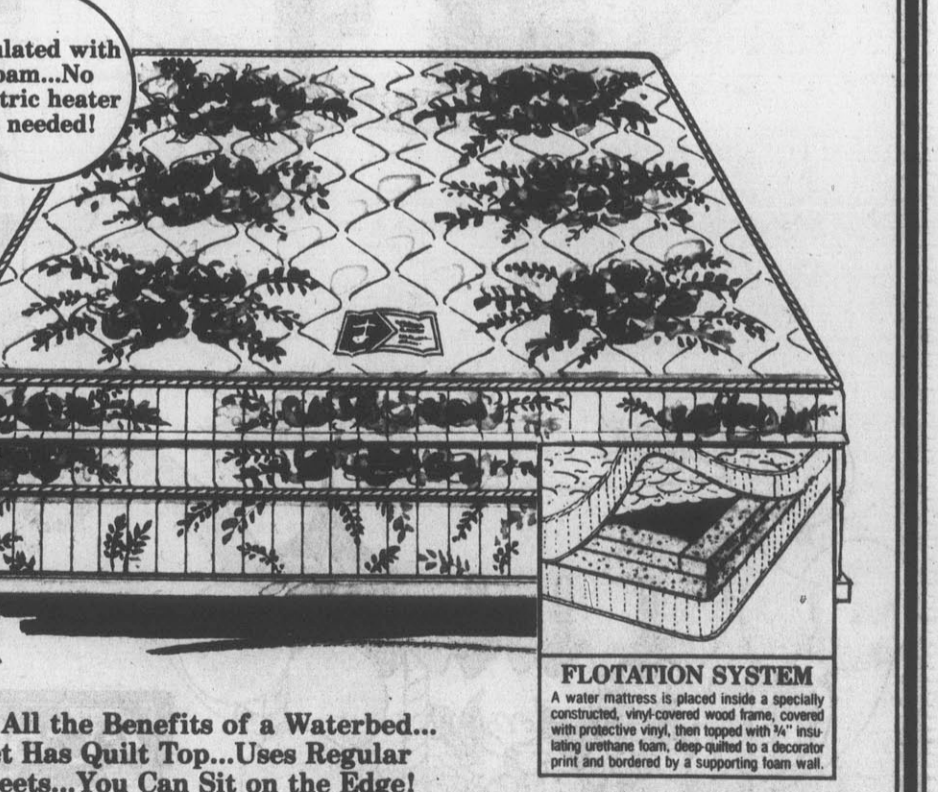

First To Call For Referendum
SOUTHERN PINES, N.C. (AP) — Southern Pines became the first reported locality to call for a referendum on liquor by the drink Thursday.

In a special session at 8 a.m. today, the Town Council passed a resolution asking the Moore County Board of Elections to hold an election on the sale of mixed beverages at the earliest possible date.

The resolution was then presented to the board of elections, but a board spokesman said he didn't immediately know what the earliest date would be.

The resort town has its own Alcoholic Beverage Control system. Under a new state law passed Wednesday, cities and counties with ABC systems can hold local referendums to determine whether to sell mixed drinks in social establishments and restaurants.

Big Value Drugs 9, Graniteers 6

Big Value Drugs pushed over three runs in the bottom of the fourth to break a 6-6 tie with the Graniteers and gain a 9-6 win in the Tar Heel Little League yesterday.

The Graniteers pushed over two runs in the first inning. Lark Wetherington singled and Trayve Fuqua got a hit. Both moved up on an error on the play. Jimmy Bishop reached on an error, scoring Wetherington, and Cedric Hines was hit by a pitch, loading the bases. Carlton Wilson singled, scoring Fuqua.

Big Value came back with three in their half of the inning. Steve Wall singled and Sterling Edwards reached on an error. Scott Irwin was safe on a fielder's choice, scoring Wall. Les Turner walked and Michael Walsh reached on an error, scoring Edwards. Irwin scored when Kevin Lang reached on an error.

Big Value added three more in the second for a 6-2 lead, but the Graniteers came back with one in the third and four in the fourth as Fuqua hit a two-run homer and Bishop followed with a solo shot to tie it at 6-6.

But in the bottom of the fourth, Big Value got three more to win it. Edwards was hit by a pitch and moved up on a passed ball. Irwin reached on an error and another error let Edwards score. Turner singled and Walsh walked. A hit by Lang brought in Irwin and Michael Gavigan reached on an error, scoring Turner with the final run.

Wilson led the Graniteers with four hits, while Fuqua had three and Wetherington and Bishop each had two. No one had more than one for Big Value.

The Optimists pushed over a run in the bottom of the sixth to steal a 5-4 upset of the Lions in the North State Little League yesterday.

The Optimists pushed over one run in the bottom of the first. Brett Dye doubled, took third on a wild pitch, and scored when Mike Iaboni singled.

The Lions came back with four in the fifth to take a 4-1 lead. Kevin Pace singled and Tripp Williford walked. Tony Taylor singled, loading the bases. David Jester was hit by a pitch, plating Pace. Patrick Rand singled, scoring Williford. Taylor went out at home when Marc Gatlin grounded back to third, but a hit by Chris Evans scored Jester and an error let Rand score.

The Optimists came back with three runs in the bottom of the fifth to tie it up. Jason Boyd reached on an error, as did Doyle Kirkland. Dye was also safe on an error, and another on Iaboni's hit scored Boyd and Kirkland. Another error let Dye in.

The winning run came in the sixth. Darrell Dunn reached on an error, as did Andrae Wooten. Gary Scott then sacrificed Dunn over with the game-ending run.

Evans had two hits to lead the Lions, while Dye had two for the Optimists.

Babe Ruth

Coca-Cola 1, Aaction Movers 0

Coca-Cola pushed over a run in the seventh inning to crack a pitching duel and take a 1-0 victory over Aaction Movers in the Babe Ruth League last night.

Coke got only five hits off Donnie Daughtridge in the contest, but they proved to be enough.

Jeff Porter limited Aaction to just two hits, but was hurt by four errors behind him that kept Aaction in the game.

After battling for six inings without a score, Coke finally pushed in the game's lone run in the seventh. Porter led off with a single and stole second. Kelly Kee then followed with a base-hit, scoring Porter with the run that won it.

Porter had two hits to lead Coke and was the game's lone player with more than one.

Wachovia Bank 12, Home Builders 8

Wachovia Bank rallied from a 7-0 deficit to take a 12-8 victory over Home Builders last night.

Home Builders pushed over seven runs in the second inning to establish the lead. Bobby Hopkins walked and so did Shelton Wilson. Both were sacrificed up, and both scored when Lloyd Jackson reached on an error. Dan Woods doubled to score Jackson. Jeff James got a hit, scoring Woods and moved to third on the relay. He scored on a wild pitch. Roger Williams walked, stole second and Barry Tyson walked. Hopkins walked and Wilson singled to score both Williams and Tyson.

Wachovia came back with one in the third. Scott Southerland singled, stole second and moved to third on a walk to Jeff Wilson and a hit batsman in Raynor Casey. A passed ball then scored Southerland.

Two more came over in the fourth, and five scored in the fifth, putting Wachovia ahead, 8-7, for good. In the fifth, Casey led off with a walk and Steve Hall followed with another. Mike Tucker also walked, loading the bases. Ed Frazier walked, to score Casey, and Mark Sasser walked, scoring Hall. Tucker was sacrificed in by Sam Hodges, and a wild pitch scored Frazier. Sasser came in when a wild pitch lodged in the screen.

Wachovia added one in the sixth and three more in the seventh, while Home Builders got its other run in the seventh.

Southerland led Wachovia with three hits, while John Dubber had two. Williams and Wilson each had two for Home Builders.

Mike Pollard of Planters Bank led the league in hitting through Tuesday night's games with a .500 batting average. Mitchel Brann of Coke was second with a .457 mark. Roger Williams of Home Builders was third at .448, closely followed by Emmett Walsh of Pepsi-Cola at .444. Crowell Pope closed out the top five with a .419 average for Planters.

The second five included Scott Southerland of Wachovia at .414, Junior Neal of Pepsi at .407, Barry Tyson of Home Builders at .400, Billy Branigan of Pepsi at .364, and Mark Douglas of Pepsi. Jeff James of Home Builders, Jim Jones of Coke and Kelly Kee of Coke all tied at .333 for the tenth spot.

BILLIE JEAN'S TASK

"For me to play and win today," she said, "I have to play a lot better than I did 10 years ago when I was on top. The youngsters coming up have played so much more tennis than I did as a kid. Why, I bet Tracy Austin has hit more balls already than I have in my entire life."

HEAVYWEIGHT BOXING CHAMPIONS have become almost as commonplace as Triple Crown victories, and those of us who grew up in the Muhammad Ali and pre-Secretariat era are having to reassess our beliefs that such landmark feats occur only every 10 years or so.

Ali has been the dominant force in boxing since his upset victory over Sonny Liston gave him the heavyweight crown in 1964. Even after the World Boxing Council and the World Boxing Association stripped him of his title for refusing induction into the Army, he was still considered the champ by many.

Ali finally regained his title by defeating George Foreman with an eighth-round knockout in 1974 and successfully defended it until dropping a split decision to Leon Spinks earlier this year. His controversial split decision over Ken Norton notwithstanding, it was the first time Ali had lost in a defense of his crown.

But now there are two heavyweight champions, and no doubt that Ali is nothing more than a ranking contender. Spinks lost his WBC title for not scheduling his first defense against the top contender Ken Norton. Norton, in turn, lost a split decision to Larry Holmes in his first title defense Friday night. The fight was one of the best heavyweight title bouts to come along in a good while.

Thus, after years of stability with Ali at the top, the boxing world is now more or less turned upside down with two different champions. Spinks' first bout as WBA champion will be a rematch against Ali this fall. After that, perhaps the WBC and WBA title-holders can meet to establish a consensus champion.

AS FOR TRIPLE CROWN winners, it's beginning to seem as if every season will produce a new one. When Secretariat won the honor in 1973, there hadn't been a Triple Crown winner for 25 years, since Citation took it in 1948. Now, there have been three in the last five years and two in a row, something that has never before happened.

A total of 11 horses have won the Triple Crown, starting with Sir Barton in 1919. No horse won the Kentucky Derby, Preakness and Belmont between 1900 (the first year all three were run) and 1919.

Affirmed, ridden by 18-year-old jockey Steve Cauthen, the youngest to ever win the Triple Crown, was greatly tested in all three races this year by Alydar. Alydar finished second each time by a total of 1 1/4 lengths in the trio of outings. The Belmont, which Affirmed won by a nose, was by far the best race of the three, a classic two-way battle almost from gate to finish line.

For 15 years, the world had no Triple Crown winner, and now there have been two in a row. But, who knows? There might not be another one for 15 more years.

Yanks' Guidry Is Red-Hot

Of all the stars on the New York Yankees baseball team, none is hotter than pitcher Ron Guidry. Guidry recorded his first shutout of the season Tuesday night by beating Oakland 2-0, his tenth victory of the season against no losses.

His won-lost record is by far the best in the major leagues, as is his 1.57 earned run average. He is second in the American League with 86 strikeouts. The 27-year-old southpaw won eight of his last nine regular season games last season, so he now has a streak of 18 wins in 19 games.

Yankee manager Billy Martin, who will coach the American League all-star team this year, is already hinting that Guidry will be starting on the mound in the game. "It would be awfully hard to deny a guy who's 15-0 by that time, wouldn't it," Martin said after Tuesday night's game.

Catfish Comments On Reggie Bar

Now that Reggie Jackson has finally gotten a candy bar named for him, Yankee pitcher Catfish Hunter says he won't eat it.

Hunter, who is a diabetic, often has to eat candy to increase his blood-sugar level. But, commenting on Jackson's candy bar, Hunter said he was afraid to try it because it is probably full of mustard, being that Jackson is somewhat of a hot dog.

Mr. J. M. Jones will be back in Greenville, N.C. again Friday, June 16, 1978. Now is the time to act on this great opportunity. Every man and woman now losing hair should take advantage of this FREE CONSULTATION.

GUARANTEED
You will be given a written guarantee on a pro-rated basis from the beginning to the end.

Naturally we could not give you such a guarantee if it didn't work.

CANT HELP
Male pattern baldness is the cause of a great majority of cases of baldness and excessive hair loss, for which no method is effective. Ebb Hair Specialists cannot help those who are slick bald after years of gradual hair loss.

But, if you are not already slick bald, how can you be sure what is actually causing your hair loss? Even if baldness seems to "run in the family," this is certainly no proof of the cause of your hair loss.

Many conditions can cause hair loss. No matter which one is causing your hair loss, if you wait until you are slick bald and your hair roots are dead you are beyond help. So, if you still have hair on top of your head, and would like to stop hair loss and grow more hair... now is the time to do something about it before it's too late.

FREE CONSULTATION
Just take a few minutes of your time on Friday, June 16, 1978, and go to the Holiday Inn, U.S. 13 Memorial Dr. in Greenville, N.C. between 1 p.m. and 8:30 p.m. and ask the Desk Clerk for J. M. Jones, room number.

Blue Finds He Has Help; Perry Wins

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

When Vida Blue was pitching for the vastly depleted Oakland A's in recent years, the running wisecrack was usually, "Blue, then who?"

Now that he's pitching for the San Francisco Giants these days, nobody asks such questions.

The Giants have one of the best staffs in baseball and those infrequent times when Blue is in hot water, there's usually someone efficient like Randy Moffitt to bail him out.

Like Wednesday.

"That was a super job, just beautiful," said Blue after the Giants' ace relief pitcher preserved a 2-1 victory for the Giants over the Philadelphia Phillies.

Blue was aiming for his first National League shutout before running into trouble in the ninth. Pinch-hitter Dave Johnson doubled and scored on Jerry Martin's single and after Martin was moved to second base on a sacrifice, Moffitt came into the game.

Moffitt didn't waste any time, striking out two dangerous batters in Mike Schmidt and Greg Luzinski on a total of seven pitches.

In other National League games, the Cincinnati Reds defeated the Chicago Cubs 3-1, the Los Angeles Dodgers stopped the New York Mets 5-3, the Pittsburgh Pirates whipped the Houston Astros 6-4, the Atlanta Braves downed the St. Louis Cardinals 7-1 and the San Diego Padres took a doubleheader from the Montreal Expos, 6-2 and 1-0.

Reds 3, Cubs 1

Manny Sarmiento, making only his third start of the season, teamed with two relievers on a four-hitter to lead Cincinnati over Chicago. Sarmiento, one of the Reds' most effective relievers this year, struck out four and walked two in five innings of two-hit ball. Dave Tomlin and Doug Bair blanked the Cubs the rest of the way with Bair recording his 11th save.

Dodgers 5, Mets 3

Bill Russell's two-run, tie-breaking double in the seventh triggered Los Angeles over New York. Steve Garvey belted two home runs off loser Jerry Kossman, his second homer tying the game in the sixth inning.

Pirates 6, Astros 4

Dave Parker slammed a three-run homer and reliever Ed Whitson gained his first victory of the season as Pittsburgh rallied from a four-run deficit to beat Houston.

Braves 7, Cardinals 1

Jeff Burroughs and Dale Murphy belted home runs to power Atlanta over St. Louis. Adrian Devine, making only his second start of the year, stopped the Cardinals on five hits before giving way to reliever Rick Camp in the eighth inning.

Padres 6-1, Expos 2-0

Gene Tenace knocked in two runs and Dave Winfield hit a solo homer to pace San Diego's first-game victory over Montreal. Eric Rasmussen pitched 61-3 innings to gain the victory while John D'Acquisto finished up for his third save of the year.

The Padres completed a sweep in the nightcap behind Gaylord Perry's four-hitter and Winfield's RBI single.

Streaking Is Popular Among American Loop Clubs These Days

By BARRY WILNER
AP Sports Writer

Streaking may not be very popular these days elsewhere, but it's the craze in the American League.

Actually, the streaking by the Baltimore Orioles, Milwaukee Brewers, Chicago White Sox and Boston Red Sox has been done fully clothed and with the approval of everybody in the league except their opponents.

The Orioles remained unbeaten in June by taking their 13th straight game and 12th this month, a 5-2 decision over California Wednesday as Jim Palmer won his sixth in a row. Palmer, 34, hasn't been scored on by anyone except the Angels since May 20 and has a 0.30 earned run average since then.

Despite their triumphant ways, the Orioles have gained just 3 1/2 games on first-place Boston in the AL East.

The Red Sox increased their latest winning streak to six with a 9-0 whitewashing of Oakland, while Milwaukee extended its victory skein to eight with a doubleheader sweep of Toronto, 7-5 and 5-0, and the White Sox won for the fourth straight time and the 16th in 18 outings with a 4-1 beating of Texas.

At the other end of the streaking spectrum, Seattle dropped its seventh in a row, an 11-9 10-inning loss to the New York Yankees, Cleveland's David Clyde saw his four-game win string snapped by Minnesota, 8-2, and Kansas City stopped Detroit 7-1 to edge into first place in the AL West by .001 percentage points.

Red Sox 9, A's 0

Oakland's winless skein reached seven as the A's slipped from the top in the West. The Red Sox used Luis Tiant's four-hitter and homers by Jim Rice and Carl Yastrzemski to capture their 16th victory in the last 20 games.

Brewers 7-5, Blue Jays 5-0

Milwaukee swept Toronto with Gorman Thomas smashing his 14th homer of the year in the Brewers' opening-game victory and Sixto Lezcano getting three hits to back the shutout pitching of Jerry Augustine and Randy Stein in the nightcap.

White Sox 4, Rangers 1

The White Sox moved to within 2 1/2 games of the top spot in the West even though they are two games under .500 at 28-30. Ron Schueler and Jim Willoughby combined on a threehitter and and Alan Bannister drove in two runs apiece for the White Sox, who have advance from 12 1/2 games back on May 27.

Yankees 11, Mariners 9, 10 innings

Seattle looked as if it was about to win for the first time at Yankee Stadium, taking a three-run lead into the eighth and then grabbing a 9-7 edge in the 10th on Leon Roberts' pinch-hit homer and Ruppert Jones' sacrifice fly.

It was Paul Blair, however, who ended a negative streak and gave New York the game. Blair had been 0-for-23 against right-handers when he hit a three-run homer off Enrique Romo with his team down 9-8 and two out in the 10th.

Twins 8, Indians 2

Clyde, 4-1, was beaten for the first time this season after returning from the minor leagues as Dan Ford hit a two-run home run and rookie Roger Erickson, 7-4, went the distance.

Royals 7, Tigers 1

Paul Splittorff tossed a nifty four-hitter and Amos Otis hit a two-run homer to boost the Royals ahead of Oakland and into first place in the West.

Trevino Wants Course Hot

DENVER (AP) — Although the temperature during practice rounds had climbed unseasonably and uncomfortably into the 90s, Lee Trevino said he hoped it would get to 100 for the 78th U.S. Open Championship, which was scheduled to get under way today.

The heat was good for his back, now almost fully recovered from surgery in November 1976. Trevino's game, meanwhile, already was sizzling.

There was no mistaking the confidence of this two-time Open winner. And, while this year's event had no clear-cut favorite, it was hard to overlook the stocky Trevino as a top choice.

"I'm playing the best golf of my life right now," said Trevino following a practice round Wednesday. "I've won $160,000 and the Open is just starting. I haven't done that in 12 years.

"I feel very confident. That 65 I had last week really gave me a boost. I almost stole that tournament," he said, referring to his final round in the Danny Thomas-Memphis Classic which vaulted him into the lead for a while. He finished second, losing to Andy Bean on the first hole of the playoff.

Cherry Hills is the longest Open course ever at 7,083 yards. But the thin air at Denver's mile-high altitude has afforded the players 7 to 10 percent more carry on their shots, whittling the course down to something more like 6,400 yards. Because of its relative shortness, as well as the narrow fairways and treacherous rough, the players planned to use irons off the tee on many of

U. S. Taxpayers Turning Their Anger Into Action

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

American taxpayers are turning anger into action, spreading the tax-cutting gospel of Proposition 13 with petition drives and legislative proposals.

Private gripes are now public demands. Politicians, from President Carter down, say they are listening. "It is time for a full-scale holy war on taxes," said a gubernatorial candidate in Texas.

An Associated Press survey showed that new proposals to limit taxes or spending emerged in 16 states in the week after California voters approved Proposition 13, a constitutional amendment slashing property levies by more than 50 percent. In all, the AP survey showed, the taxpayers' tea party has spread to 29 states.

Carter said Wednesday that the California vote was "obviously a message that has been well received."

And Georgia's Democratic Sen. Sam Nunn, who on Wednesday became the first member of his party in the Senate to endorse a Republican plan to cut individual federal income taxes by an average of 33 percent, said, "Clearly, the message with respect to levying taxes is: Like shearing sheep, you stop when you reach the skin."

In Delaware, Rep. Gerard H. Cain, a Democrat, introduced legislation on Tuesday to require voter approval of all tax increases or new taxes. "This came about because of Proposition 13," he said, although his plan is different. It deals only with future taxes and would not roll back existing levies, as Proposition 13 does.

A South Dakota store owner, Danielle Samuelson, was kept up to date on the California campaign by her brother, who lives there. On the day after the election, she started collecting signatures in an effort to get the tax-limitation issue on the 1980 ballot.

Rhode Island taxpayers' groups met Wednesday to plot strategy. John Assalone, head of the Concerned Parents and Taxpayers of Coventry, said the California measure may be too drastic for Rhode Island. "But there is definitely room in the budget for cuts," he added.

Some of the tax proposals are well on their way to a vote. Others are in the planning stages. All seem to have exposed a raw nerve.

"The time is ripe now," said Pennsylvania Rep. Lee Taddonio, a Republican, as he reintroduced a previously unsuccessful plan to limit state spending and freeze tax levels.

Already pending in the Pennsylvania Legislature is a measure, proposed by state Sen. John Stauffer, also a Republican, to eliminate the property tax as a means of financing public education and replace it with a 1 percent boost in the state income tax. "The taxpayers of this country are fed up with excessive taxes and bloated government spending," said Stauffer. "The victory in California ... should send a smoke signal across the nation."

In some states, like Pennsylvania, taxes and spending were an issue long before the California vote, although supporters say the West Coast victory gave them new impetus. In other states, like Virginia, the June 6 election touched a previously unresponsive chord.

The AP survey found proposals directly or indirectly spawned by Proposition 13, also known as the Jarvis-Gann amendment after its sponsors, in Delaware, Florida, Hawaii, Massachusetts, Missouri, Nevada, New Hampshire, New York, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, South Dakota, Texas, Utah, Virginia and Washington. Tax or spending limitations also are an issue in Arizona, Colorado, Idaho, Illinois, Kansas, Maine, Michigan, Minnesota, Montana, Nebraska, Oregon, South Carolina and Tennessee.

Both political parties are jumping on the tax bandwagon. "There is a revolt and it's long overdue," said Republican national Chairman Bill Brock. "We want to make it a major Republican issue."

John White, head of the Democratic National Committee, said tax reform "is a major initiative" of the Carter administration.

Federal Budget Director James T. McIntyre said Wednesday that the rebellion has been building for some time. The California vote, he said, was the "loudest single shot fired so far in what some people insist is a taxpayer revolt. But it was hardly the first."

"I would remind you that the citizen discontent over taxes, bureaucracy and red tape is directed at the federal establishment as well as other governments," he said. And McIntyre warned that Washington is not going to take up the slack and pay for services trimmed from state and local budgets.

At his nationally broadcast news conference Wednesday, Carter echoed the remarks of his chief budget adviser:

"... We have no inclination to seek out California for special treatment just because they have lowered property taxes."

To which California Gov. Jerry Brown responded:

"While we're not running to Washington with our hat in our hand, I would say that if the president wants to have a balanced program, he should give matching funds not only for state and local spending, but for state and local tax saving and right now the federal program is the reverse."

Brown announced earlier Wednesday that he was cutting $715 million from his proposed budget for 1978-79. He also ordered a freeze on state employees' salaries for one year. "I want to respond to Proposition 13," he said. "I want to do so in the most humane way possible."

Meanwhile, representatives of 30 public employee unions in California met in Washington Wednesday and formed an emergency committee to consider launching mass strikes or work slowdowns in the state to protest anticipated layoffs due to approval of Proposition 13.

Spokesmen for the unions, which represent 2 million federal, state, county and city workers, said the panel also will map strategy to counter tax revolt movements spreading throughout the country.

N.C. Social Service Division Plans To Hunt Welfare Fraud

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The state Division of Social Services, responding to expressions of concern by taxpayers, is planning a statewide crackdown on welfare fraud.

Officials say social workers will be trained to detect fraud and instructed to warn potential welfare recipients of the penalties for fraud. Applicants also will be instructed on how to provide accurate information.

The program is similar to one used by the Guilford County Department of Social Services.

Robert Ward, director of the state Division of Social Services, said North Carolina does not have a serious welfare fraud problem, with a low incidence of fraud and error occurring in the Aid to Families with Dependent Children (AFDC) and food-stamp programs.

State quality-control analysts found that 96.5 percent of participants in the AFDC program were eligible under federal guidelines during the last six months of 1977. Only 3.5 percent were ineligible, and 1.7 percent of the errors committed by clients were judged to be due to misrepresentation of facts.

"I dare say there may be a higher percentage of fraud with the Internal Revenue Service," Ward said. "We have a constant battle trying to give a realistic view of the welfare recipient to the public."

He said he hopes the increased efforts to detect and prevent fraud will change the public's attitude about the welfare system.

Citizens responding to Gov. Jim Hunt's "North Carolina Tomorrow Survey" listed as the state's No. 3 major problem a supposed ripoff of public funds by "loafers and cheats who drive Cadillacs to the grocery store and buy beer and wine with their food stamps."

State, local and federal governments contribute to the $130 million spent annually in North Carolina under the AFDC program, which is supervised by the state and administered by counties.

All counties will be required to participate in the crackdown, which was approved last month by the state Social Services Commission. Thirty of North Carolina's 100 counties currently have special fraud programs.

Employees of county agencies will undergo fraud training in August and AFDC recipients will be given pamphlets on fraud and its penalties in September.

The state also is working with the Employment Security Commission this month to match AFDC recipient files against employment records to reveal names of any recipients who have been working and reporting earnings.

Officials said the joint effort will become a permanent part of the fraud program if it proves to be worthwhile.

Wins Long Battle To Have Bridge Replaced

KING, N.C. (AP) — Charles Jones, whose 16-year-old daughter was killed in a traffic accident on a wooden bridge in Stokes County last December, has won his battle to have the bridge replaced.

Jones refused to pay a $434.29 bill sent him by the state for repairs to the Town Creek bridge following a crash in which Lisa Dawn Jones died. Instead, he charged that the bridge was unsafe and demanded that it be replaced.

Officials of the state Transportation Department say the bridge has been found to be substandard and that a large culvert will be installed in its place.

Ken Horton, a division engineer for the state Highway Commission, said about $43,000 is being put aside for the project, which may be completed by the end of this year.

"It needs to be done, and to be done as soon as possible," Jones said. "I realize it can't be done immediately, but a year is plenty of time. If they will go ahead with their commitment, I'll get off their back."

Accusing Transportation Department of being insensitive by sending him a bill, Jones threatened to erect a plaque on the grave of Lisa Dawn Jones blaming highway officials and the Stokes County Board of Commissioners for her death.

The teen-ager's car skidded on ice as it approached the bridge, crashed through the timbers and plunged into the creek.

Transportation Secretary

Thomas Bradshaw Jr. apologized for the bill, but Jones still has not learned whether he is expected to pay for the damages.

Jones said 600 students from King cross the bridge twice a day on their way to and from South Stokes High School. Lisa was on her way to school when she was killed.

Hydrologists must study the creek basin above the bridge to determine the size of the culvert needed, said Robert Glenn, bridge maintenance supervisor for a 10-county area.

Officials have recommended that curves on both approaches to the bridge be straightened and that the grade of the approaches be reduced. The road descends a steep hill on one side of the bridge.

Carter Slipping In Georgia Poll

ATLANTA (AP) — Even in his home state of Georgia, Jimmy Carter's popularity is slipping, according to a poll released Wednesday.

In a random telephone survey of 501 adults, conducted June 6-7 by Darden Research Corp., 51.7 percent of the respondents listed his overall performance as president as "fair," "poor" or "very poor," while 43.7 percent gave Carter a score of "very good" or "good."

The remainder was undecided.

That compares to the 65 percent "very good" or "good" rating Carter received in a similar poll conducted by Darden in May 1977, said Claiborne H. Darden Jr., president of the private research firm.

The polls were sponsored by the Darden Corp. When asked, "Overall, has President Carter lived up to the expectations you had of him?" 53.3 percent of those surveyed answered "no," while 38.3 percent said "yes."

However, 57.5 percent of those who were surveyed and who voted in the 1976 presidential election said they would vote for Carter, as opposed to former President Gerald R. Ford, if they could recast their ballots. Ford was the choice of 34.6 percent in the hypothetical contest.

Carter received 66.9 percent of the Georgia vote in the 1976 presidential election.

Carter, governor of Georgia from 1970 to 1974, also suffered

Savvy Policemen Dread Calls To Family Quarrel

By VICTORIA GRAHAM
Associated Press Writer
It's a 418-F in San Francisco, a 10-52 in New York, a 430 in Chattanooga. In Dallas they call it a Signal Six. In Detroit it comes crackling over the police radio: "family trouble." It happens all the time, the family beef, the lover's quarrel. It can end in handshakes or gunshots, but you don't know until you get there. There's not a policeman with savvy who doesn't dread the call. The family quarrel is hazardous to his health, frequently more so than chasing bank robbers. With them, police know where they stand. In a family argument, a complaining wife might suddenly side with her husband, who might just be carrying a gun.

On Monday, one policeman was fatally shot, another critically injured when they answered a family disturbance call in Chattanooga, Tenn. Police say the husband was an ex-convict who shot before the two officers could draw but was killed by the felled officers.

"The family disturbance is one of the most dangerous calls we get because you never know what to expect," said Sgt. Bob Sivley of the Chattanooga Police Department, adding that 60 percent of all calls his department gets are for family disturbances.

"You don't know if you're going to find someone with a weapon or if they're going to use it. You just have to assume it's a dangerous call, think trouble and be alert."

Chattanooga claims but a small part of national domestic warfare and police everywhere know its danger. In New York, Officer Robert Shack says, "I always assume the man is armed."

The battlefields across the country encompass all economic and social levels; they are tenements, penthouses and suburbs. The combatants are husbands and wives, boyfriends and girlfriends — and sometimes police.

According to FBI statistics, about 40 times a day a police-

Art Restorer Fighting Ravages Of Man, Time

By DALE SINGER
ST. LOUIS (UPI) — The fine hand of Clements L. Robertson is present everywhere at the St. Louis Art Museum, but few visitors realize it — and Robertson likes it that way.

Robertson is the museum's conservator, the man who gives face lifts to works that have fallen victim to time, the elements and man. He is an artist and a scientist, a plastic surgeon and a mind reader, dedicated to making works of art convey what the artist had in mind.

In an attic area he converted into a combination laboratory and studio 15 years ago, Robertson said in an interview his field is an ancient one that has used science to join the modern age.

He fights various enemies — rather and pollution, ultraviolet light and weapon-wielding vandals, second-rate restorers and clumsy custodians — but the goal is always the same.

"Your greatest contribution to the culture is the prevention of damage before it occurs," he said. "We have a cliché in the field — there's more damage from the hand of man than from the hand of time — and it's a very true statement."

After serving an apprenticeship at the Nelson Gallery of Art in Kansas City, Robertson came to St. Louis in 1963.

He found a museum that burned coal for heat — "Black soot was over everything" — and stored priceless works in a room where the temperature was over 90 and the humidity was under 10 percent. He helped correct some of the worst conditions, then set priorities for what works needed restoration.

To Robertson, there is no routine job, and that's why he won't give advice over the telephone.

"I never give any general tips to people. There are too many things involved to make recommendations. I get calls like that every day, and I tell them if they value it at all, seek professional advice. Tips to people over the phone are taboo."

Typical of the problems presented to Robertson are a hole punched in a canvas, cracking or peeling paint, a buildup of varnish that mutes the true color of a work or the inept attempts of earlier restorers.

"Many times," he said, "you're just astounded at what you've been looking at for all these years, compared with the real beauty underneath."

Robertson's field includes some of what could be considered detective work, but he doesn't like the word. "It isn't a matter of being a detective, just some intelligent observation."

That observation saved the museum embarrassment and money several years ago when tests showed that a painting allegedly done by the Spanish artist Francisco de Zurbaran was actually painted after his death. A similar picture by the real artist sold for $3 million.

Robertson said the still life was painted on top of an older work about 200 years later than Zurbaran's time in the 17th century. He discovered the fraud when he found that the top layer of paint on the canvas had not come into use until the middle of the 19th century.

More recently Robertson, who said he has uncovered five major fakes while restoring more than 250 works of art, has worked with statues retrieved after burglaries. Two small bronzes, "Hope" and "Prudence," suffered minor scratches in the thefts.

Robertson said they could be fixed up with a little "wax, spit and polish." Besides, he said, damage to sculpture has never been considered as offensive as damage to paintings.

"With sculpture, you can get by with an arm or a nose knocked off, because it's always been the philosophy that you can exhibit it that way. With pictures, you can't do that, because you destroy the illusion."

"A painting has to be an illusion. If you have even one white speck in the background, your eyes go right to that spot, and it destroys the illusion of color and depth."

There is no place for a large ego in conservation. "My skill, if it's properly done, shouldn't be noticed at all. I get my greatest kick when these old objects have a healthy glow. You have to approach this work with sensitivity. If you don't have it, you're a hack — and you better get into something else."

Transit Card Is Problem-Solver

By JOANNE D'ALCOMO
Associated Press Writer

BOSTON (AP) — While an exasperated schoolteacher waits for change at a subway fare booth, Stephen Elman, flashing a wallet-size card, runs past the turnstiles and catches the departing streetcar they both take home from work.

The card, carried by Elman and 26,000 other commuters, is a pass to the network of buses, subways, trolleys and trains that crisscross the metropolitan area.

Again, the pass has spared its possessor one of the frustrations that often discourage commuters from taking public transportation.

For a flat fee once a month deducted from his paycheck, Elman, an employee of a local university, receives a pass that entitles him to unlimited rides on the trolley system.

For a few dollars more, he could take countless rides on longer routes on any of the Boston area's subways, buses or commuter trains.

The pass program, which is operated by the Massachusetts Bay Transportation Authority with the help of employers, is the first of its kind in the country.

Started four years ago, the program attracts riders by promising reduced fares and convenience. Pass program officials also are trying to make the pass more appealing by making arrangements with local museums and other attractions for discounts to passholders.

While ridership on transit systems in many other cities is declining, the MBTA boasts its numbers are going up. It is estimated that people rode the area's transportation system a million more times than the previous year. About 90 percent of the additional rides is attributed to the success of the pass program. Ernest Deeb, pass program administrator, says about 26,000 of the estimated 250,000 people who use the system daily now have a pass.

The large participation translated into a drop in revenue for a while because passholders get a discount, but Deeb says the program now is breaking even.

The cost of a monthly pass equals 18 round-trip rides on the route used by the commuter. This gives most commuters a free ride on two days a month. For people who use the transit system on weekends or after work, the pass becomes a big bargain.

Nearly 600 employers in the Boston area now participate in the pass program, and the staff can barely keep pace with the new applications, Deeb says.

"The response is overwhelming. We get letters in the mail almost every day," says Deeb. Other transit systems have copied the idea, but Boston's system remains the largest, he says.

The list of firms that participate in the MBTA program includes some of Boston's biggest employers, such as the John Hancock Company where almost 1,000 of the company's 1,400 employees have passes.

The transit pass, meanwhile, is joining the list of benefits provided by some employers.

Cambridge Systematics, a consulting firm, started paying for its employees' passes after one worker pointed to the number of free parking spaces provided for people who drove to work.

Chrysler Stung By Criticisms

By DONALD WOUTAT
Associated Press Writer
CHELSEA, Mich. (AP) — Chrysler Corp., stung by safety criticisms of the best selling new cars it has ever built, says attacks on its Omni and Horizon subcompacts are based on "unreal, abnormal" tests.

"It's kind of a maneuver or a stunt," Chrysler engineering vice president Sidney Jeffe said Wednesday of the steering test that prompted Consumers Union to label the twin Dodge and Plymouth models as "not acceptable."

The nation's No. 3 automaker defended the Omni and the Horizon, which except for body trim and minor differences in body styles are virtually identical, as "the car of the future" and said they are perfectly safe.

The first front-wheel-drive small car built in this country, the Omni-Horizon model was dubbed "Car of the Year" by Motor Trend magazine and given high marks for handling by trade publications.

But the non-profit Consumers Union, publisher of Consumer Reports magazine, said an upcoming article on the two cars will be titled "Most Unfortunate Car of the Year."

At news conferences in New York and Washington Wednesday, Consumers Union said the cars were unacceptable because of their steering and handling — which Chrysler touts as their strong points.

Consumers Union said tests in which the steering wheels were suddenly deflected at highway speeds showed that the cars do not recover adequately unless the driver's hands are on the wheel.

"Without aid of the driver, most cars straighten themselves with a minimum of wavering from side to side and return close to their previous course," said Mark Silbergeld, head of Consumers Union's Washington office.

In its attempt to refute the allegations, Chrysler repeated the test for more than 50 reporters and photographers Wednesday. Although the Dodge Omni appeared to remain in control, the demonstration was difficult to interpret because no other makes were tested for comparison.

Omni and Horizon so far are the most successful cars Chrysler has ever introduced, with 91,171 sold since their introduction in January. They gave Chrysler its first entry in the subcompact market and had a lot to do with edging Chrysler ahead of its 1977 sales pace for May. Each has a base sticker price of $3,976.

Police List 2 Accidents

An estimated $2,100 property damage resulted from two traffic collisions investigated yesterday by Greenville Police.

Officers reported heaviest damage resulted from a 2:11 p.m. mishap at the intersection of Dickinson Avenue and Truman Street involving cars driven by Ruby Hardy Edwards of Grifton, and Diane Vaughn Childs of Glendale Court Apts.

Investigators, who charged Mrs. Childs with failing to see her intended movement could be made in safety, estimated damage at $800 to the Edwards vehicle and $700 to the Childs car.

Derek James Holloman of Route 2, Walstonburg, was charged with failing to see his intended movement could be made in safety following investigation of a 1:30 p.m. collision on Memorial Drive, 75 feet South of the Chestnut Street intersection.

Officers said the Holloman car collided with an auto driven by Thomas R. Smith of 341 Olde London Inn, causing an estimated $300 damage to each of the two cars.

Brain Damage By Alcoholism Is Believed Partially Reversible

By WARREN E. LEARY
AP Science Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Brain damage suffered by chronic alcoholics, long thought to be permanent, may be partially reversible with abstinence from liquor, researchers say.

The new Canadian findings indicate some damaged brain cells may rejuvenate and regain some of their function when alcoholics stop drinking.

And the University of Toronto researchers say this could help explain why many severe alcoholics who quit drinking gradually recover some of their impaired memory, coordination, and abilities to reason abstractly and learn new tasks.

"This is the first time anyone has shown reversible cerebral atrophy (wasting) in adult human beings," Dr. Peter L. Carlen, one of the chief investigators, said in an interview Wednesday.

In a report in the journal Science, the researchers say they are not suggesting that entire brain cells, called neurons, regenerate and grow. It is generally believed that these nerve cells do not reproduce in adult mammals.

But they theorize that tiny threads called dendrites, which carry impulses to nerve cells, can recover and possibly grow if not damaged too badly by alcohol. Along with dendrite growth, there also may be increases in other nerve fibers, supporting tissue and small blood vessels, they add.

The researchers base their theory on a series of special brain X-rays taken of eight chronic alcoholics treated at the Addiction Research Foundation Clinical Institute of Ontario. The patients, all with more than 10-year histories of heavy drinking, received no special treatments. As part of the study, six patients stopped

The first X-ray scans, which electronically recreate cross-section brain slices, showed a loss of cerebral tissue and large cavities in the brains of four abstaining subjects.

Scans taken months later show smaller cavities and what appears to be more nerve tissue, the study said.

The two subjects who continued to drink showed no changes between brain scans.

However, no changes were noted in the two other abstaining subjects either. But the researchers said both showed marked improvements in function tests before the first scan was done and it is possible changes that would have been detectable occurred before the first scan.

Carlen said there were no data to show if alcoholics with brain damage who drank less or for a shorter period of time were more likely to recover some impaired mental function

Cites Impact If Train Service Is Abandoned

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The vice chairman of the Texas Association of Railroad Passengers says if the Southern Railway abandoned its Southern Crescent passenger service, it would have a "devastating impact" on the train route west of New Orleans.

Perry S. Huntoon of Beaumont, Texas, told an Interstate Commerce Commission hearing Wednesday that loss of the line would leave a major gap in the transcontinental route between New York and Los Angeles. James Selzer Jr. of Slidell, an admitted train buff, said he had no use for alternate methods of transportation.

He called riding a bus "cruel and unusual punishment." He said he didn't like to drive his car for personal business because he drives 25,000 miles a year in his work. And he said it's hard to get to the airport from Slidell.

The Crescent "does everything perfect, but the problem is that no one knows about it," said Robert J. Hammett of New Orleans.

Jeffrey Diket of New Orleans said: "Man is bombarded every day on the radio by messages to 'fly, fly, fly.' But you never hear a word from Southern."

The hearing, which concludes today, is the 19th and last in a series that the ICC started May 12 in Washington and has moved down the line to New Orleans.

The Southern Crescent, one of the few passenger lines in the country that wasn't taken over when Amtrak was created, runs daily from Washington to Atlanta and three times a week between Atlanta and New Orleans.

Southern says the Crescent, once a money-maker, now faces mounting deficits that hit $6.7 million last year. The railroad has asked the ICC for permission to discontinue the train and has been negotiating for a takeover by Amtrak. The ICC has ordered the railroad to continue service through Aug. 6.

Transportation Secretary Brock Adams wants Amtrak to take over the line, but officials said Wednesday that Amtrak wouldn't be able to do so before May 1, 1979.

Southern witnesses presented prepared statements reiterating views which they expressed at previous hearings. Several business officials supported discontinuance of the Crescent.

FORECAST FOR FRIDAY, JUNE 16, 1978

Your Daily HOROSCOPE

from the CARROLL RIGHTER INSTITUTE

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A good time to coordinate your efforts better with those with whom you have special projects and make important decisions. You have the vital energy and determination to put such plans across so that they work in the future.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Talk over mutual affairs with associates and then follow through with the work that has to be done by you. A better understanding with loved one is possible now.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Take care of chores so you have more free time with partners. Come to a better understanding with co-workers also.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Make social plans for later and then get busy at the tasks ahead of you. Be more cooperative with fellow workers. Show more thoughtfulness for loved one.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Handle matters at home diplomatically and wisely. Early evening is best for recreation with close friends.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Study bills, statements for accuracy. Handle family affairs intelligently. Make sure the basic structure of your life is on a more firm basis.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) A good time to handle financial affairs now that you are thinking clearly. Get ideas across to others well also. Spend some time visiting with good friends.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Plan early how to gain your personal aims and then get into business dealings wisely. Take health treatments you may need.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Study what you don't understand so that later it's full speed ahead with your work. Find a new way to please mate, loved one.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Put that plan to work that will bring your personal aims closer. Try to assist a good friend who is having trouble. Get all the facts first.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Get backing you need from a bigwig. Show you are receptive to what others have to say. Make the most of this information.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Get the information you need so that you get a new ingenious interest started. Plan that trip you have in mind before you start your work.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Sort out bills and pay the most pressing ones. Making new contacts is best in the evening. Much can be accomplished now.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will have much ability and will cooperate with others. Teach early to listen carefully to what others have to say. A good sport in this chart, too.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to YOU!

Spokesman Assails Black Community

By JAY SHARBUTT
 AP Television Writer
 LOS ANGELES (AP) — The late Ernie Pyle gained considerable fame and respect in World War II with his brilliant reports on the common soldiers, sailors and airmen fighting in the war.

Now, Arthur Holch, a documentary-maker, is taking the same approach 33 years after the war's end with a new syndicated series airing this fall.

The show is "World War Two: G.I. Diary."
 "I don't think we could ever top Ernie Pyle, but that's the direction we're going," says Holch, whose series, made for Time-Life Television, already is bought by TV stations in 79 markets.

"Diary" consists of 25 half-hour shows, all narrated by actor Lloyd Bridges. It blends combat footage from World War II with recollections of those who actually fought in the war.

"We're going from personal interviews with the people who have stories to tell," Holch said by phone from New York, where he began the project last October.

"But it's not the kind of documentary where you have a strategic overview of the war as told by generals." Instead, those sent by the generals into combat are the "stars" of each show.

He says the combat veterans whose tales are told in "Diary" were tracked down through various wartime reunion groups, veterans' organizations and with aid placed in military publications.

Holch has no estimate of how many vets were interviewed, "but our office has been literally inundated by people with stories to tell. Our file cabinets are bulging with letters and photographs."

Each "Diary" averages three stories. The series covers every major wartime theater, from China to North Africa, Italy and Europe.

Citing examples, Holch said one show is about Christmas ville, mother of two men recently sentenced to life in prison for rape and robbery, asked the NAACP for help in getting new trials for her sons. The Legal Redress Committee was asked to check into new evidence and the possibility of retrial.

Purvis Cohen, vice president for Region 2, Greenville, was welcomed back after being absent for several weeks the result of a heart attack.

"Every black church congregation in Pitt County," he said, "ought to have a life membership in NAACP. I am ashamed that there are less than 500 card-carrying members in Pitt County. Black people need to belong, not just when troubles arise, but now. Whether educators or laborers, it is time for blacks to get into action."

Mrs. Pearl Joyner of Farm-

"We know from book sales there's a tremendous upsurge of interest in World War II," the producer said. "It's possibly because that war had clearly defined good and evil, and the good guys won."

"Vietnam was a different situation altogether. World War II was the last of the great romantic wars. And people seem to want some anchor point like this to recall."

Much of the combat footage acquired from the military and the National Archives is in color, he adds, most of that by Navy and Marine photographers "who shot almost nothing but color."

Holch thinks "Diary" will be well-received, particularly by World War II veterans and their kids. And he doesn't think the sour taste left by the Vietnam War will prompt rejection of the series.

 Opening lead: Seven of ♠.

Declarer was on the right track when he tried for an end play to bring home a risky slam. Unfortunately, he was a little careless in his execution.

South had the values for an opening no trump bid, but with so much strength concentrated in the black suits, he preferred to open one club. North made a waiting bid of one diamond, causing rebid problems for South. Now South elected to temporize with one spade, and North revealed his true colors with a jump raise in clubs. South showed his diamond support, then leaped to slam when North responded with a cue-bid in hearts.

West led his top heart, and when dummy came down, declarer saw that he would have no problem if trumps were 2-2. Therefore, he won the queen of hearts and cashed the ace and king of clubs. When West showed out, declarer was faced with a sure trump loser and now had to avoid losing a diamond to make his slam. His only hope was to strip the hand of major-suit cards and then throw East in with his master trump, hoping that East would have to lead away from the king of diamonds or yield a ruff and sluff.

Declarer started by cashing the ace, king and queen of spades. Unfortunately, East ruffed the third spade and exited with a heart, and declarer could not avoid losing a diamond trick for down one.

Declarer was careless. Since he held five hearts and six spades between the two hands, he should first have cashed his top heart tricks, discarding a diamond from his hand. If East is short in a major suit, it is more likely to be in spades than in hearts. After the two hearts go through, declarer can cash his spades.

It does not help East to ruff the third spade, for then he would be forced to lead away from the king of diamonds. But discarding simply delays the fatal moment. Declarer now exits with a trump, and after winning his master trump, East must commit havi-kiri no matter what he does.

Age-Old Problem For Russians Good Teachers Create Climate

By CHARLES M. MADIGAN
MOSCOW (UPI) — More than 1,000 years ago, as the story is told, St. Vladimir offered an assessment of a problem that has been an age-old curse for Russia.

"It is Russia's joy to drink. We cannot do without it," he reportedly said.

It is February in Tyumen, the biggest town in the Soviet Union's vast Western Siberian oil producing region. At 10:30 p.m., it is so cold that the wind cuts through four layers of clothing.

Four teenagers stand on a street corner across from a park, their wool coats opened to the wind and cold. The weather doesn't seem to bother them, and the reason for their invisible insulation becomes apparent to a passing Western reporter.

"Say, what region are you from," one of the boys calls to the reporter. He and his friends are swaying like saplings in a changing wind. They are sharing what is left of a clear glass bottle of vodka.

It is a scene often repeated across the Soviet Union.

The government long ago recognized it faced a national drinking problem. Hardly a year has passed that has not included another attack against the age old devil recognized by St. Vladimir centuries ago.

The Soviet Council of Ministers opened the latest offensive in April, approving a series of measures designed to educate Soviet society about alcoholism, and failing that, to scare drunks back into line.

Six of the 11 measures against alcohol fall into the educational category. The remainder fall into the legal category, and they indicate Soviet police will be cracking down on public drunks.

It is difficult to pinpoint the extent of the problem in modern Soviet society because the government keeps secret its figures on hospitalization and treatment for alcoholism.

It also denies there are sociological causes for alcoholism in the Soviet Union — at one point offering the explanation that there were more alcoholics because people had more free time to drink and more money to spend on vodka.

Western analysts reject that argument, pointing to a study in Gorky which showed that more than half of the city's heavy drinkers had family incomes of less than $43.20 a month.

The Soviet press is one of the best indicators of the extent of the drinking problem. Cases of alcoholism that reach the publicity stage are generally intended to serve as warnings to the general public.

The magazine Young Communist reported in 1975 that alcohol caused more than half of the suicides, accidental deaths and crimes that took place in the Soviet Union.

It quoted research showing that in one rural region of central Russia, the average child first drank alcohol at the age of 11 and one-half. Drunkenness was cited as the cause of 71 per cent of all divorces in the region.

Nationally, the data is more difficult to pinpoint. The Soviet Union stopped publishing the annual consumption figures in the early 1960s.

However, Harvard University's Russian Research Center estimates the average Russian drinks about 6.3 quarts of alcohol a year compared to 4.75 quarts for the average American.

Other Western specialists have concluded that there are 26 alcoholics for every 1,000 Soviet citizens, which would put the figure at 6.5 million based on 1973 population reports.

An epidemiological study conducted last year among 12,475 Soviet citizens showed that, of those queried over age 15, 94.6 per cent drink, 11.6 per cent are alcoholics and 19 per cent are heavy drinkers.

"From a social point of view, the highest incidence of alcoholism was found among male urban blue-collar workers and among people who work for services and have a supplementary income," an analysis of the study said.

"Alcoholism among white-collar workers, the intelligentsia and the establishment was usually more covert and controlled."

The Soviet Union would certainly not agree with the Western figures, but its own campaigns against drinking have shown that alcoholism is viewed as a serious, expensive and difficult problem.

In its severest form, the campaign has included at least one execution order. Moscow City Court in January sentenced a drunk driver to death by firing squad for causing an accident which killed eight persons and injured seven others.

Other penalties for drunkenness range from a night in a sobering up station, where drunks first face humiliating lectures and then a fine of up to $43, to more progressive methods in which the system tries to rehabilitate alcoholics.

In 1969, the director of a glass works plant initiated a special program for on-the-job treatment — a recognition that the drinking problem is also viewed as an economic hindrance.

A hundred beds were set aside at the plant for alcoholics. An analysis in the Soviet press later indicated the program was being expanded.

The factories turned 40 per cent of the alcoholics' salary over to the clinic to help defray operating costs. The rest was either paid to his family, or directly to the worker when he was discharged from the program.

It is impossible to estimate the economic loss to the Soviet Union because of alcoholism. However, some factory managers have reported that up to 30 per cent of the work force is unable to function after the weekend, either because of hangovers or continued intoxication.

But there is a twisted kind of logic to back an argument that

The Soviet Union actually has an economic gain because of the volume of alcohol consumed.

In a parallel to many of the "control" states in the United States, the Soviet Union has slapped a heavy tax on each bottle of vodka and cognac, up to 80 per cent of the price, which can total $5 for a pint of vodka.

In 1972, the tax brought $25 billion in revenues to the Soviet treasury.

Western critics have compared the situation to Czarist times, when government financing was so dependent on alcohol taxes it lived on what were labeled "drunk" budgets.

Good Teachers Create Climate

STILLWATER, Okla. (AP) — Distinguished teachers are enthusiastic, businesslike, clear and precise. They use various teaching methods, create a warm classroom climate and ask questions involving judgment.

Even though such teachers crack jokes, their students know they have to study to get on in those courses.

These are among findings in a dissertation, "Instructional Behavior Patterns of Distinguished University Teachers," by Lea L. Ebro, who completed her Ph.D. at Ohio State University.

"Such teachers are in command of their classes," she said. "They get their students to interact with them and they respond immediately when students ask questions or give answers."

Dr. Ebro did the research to improve her proficiency as a teacher. Now an associate professor at Oklahoma State University here, she hopes to continue similar research to find if teachers selected as distinguished at one university behave the same as those at another.

Besides working with graduate students and with curriculum in food, nutrition and institution administration, she directs the OSU administrative dietetic internship program.

To gather data for her research, Dr. Ebro sat in on classes of 17 Ohio State University faculty members who had been awarded the Alumni Award for Distinguished Teaching from 1972 to 1976.

She discovered their working patterns by coding their teaching behavior at five-second intervals. Some common characteristics she found were initiating, seeking clarification, explaining, responding to student questions, using media and non-verbal actions.

She found all the teachers initiated the information but students were free to interrupt at any time. Those classes had much laughter because the teachers introduced humor spontaneously and students were encouraged to do the same.

Following the giving of information, teachers asked questions. After a student responded, these teachers immediately responded, either with a judgment of correctness, a request for clarification or additional supplementary information.

The teachers lectured or did outright giving of facts only 4 percent of the time. The rest of the time, they interpreted, translated or expanded on something.

Besides walking around as they talked, most of the teachers used gestures often. The most common non-verbal behavior was looking at students to see if they were ready for the next topic.

Her research is considered among the first to record the nature of teaching events.

Missionary To Speak Sunday

WINTERVILLE — Missionary Tazzy Carmon will speak Sunday at 11 a.m. at the Soul Saving Station here.

Missionary Viola Clark will preach Tuesday and Wednesday nights with music by the Noah Oak Choir. The services will begin at eight o'clock.

The pastor, Elder Ella Prayer, invites the public to attend.

Bible School Is Set June 19-23

AYDEN — Vacation Bible School will be conducted at Community Baptist Church, here June 19-23.

Children ages two through seven years old will meet from 9-11:30 a.m. under the direction of Mrs. Ann Butler and Mrs. Janice Cannon. Children, ages eight through teenagers, will meet from 7-9 p.m. under the direction of Mrs. Diane Butler and Mrs. Larue Mumford.

The VBS will include Bible lessons, mission and gospelgrams, Bible memory, handcrafts, refreshments and a wiener roast Friday. The closing program will be presented at 7:30 p.m. Sunday, June 25.

Pastor Stan Wingard and the congregation invite the public to attend.

PROTEST VISIT — Panamanian students erected signs protesting the visit of President Carter on a church yesterday in downtown Panama City, across the street from the hotel where Carter will stay. A student picks up a sign reading, "Carter go home" from the sidewalk to mount on the front of the church. Police later made the students take down the sign. Carter is due in Panama on Friday. Speaking of Your Health...

Lester L. Coleman, M.D.

Honoring a Medical Pioneer

Sir William Osler has long been recognized as one of the world's great doctors and philosophers. He illuminated the horizons of modern medicine. His credo was: "We are here not to get all we can out of life for ourselves, but to try to make the lives of others happier..." Scientific creativity is the philosopher's stone which transmutes all the base metal of humanity into gold."

Such an admirable concept can well be applied to Dr. George Papanicolaou who has recently been honored by the issuance of a United States memorial stamp that bears his likeness.

Some readers will hardly recognize the name until we identify it as the doctor who created the "Pap" test, an advance in modern medicine now familiar to women everywhere.

Thousands of women can attribute their health and longevity to this remarkable test which aids in the early diagnosis of cancer of the cervix. And, since early detection means early treatment, and early treatment means a greater chance for complete recovery, the test stands out as one of the great contributions in gynecological medicine. The use of the test has now been effectively extended to the early diagnosis of cancer of the lungs, breasts, bladder and esophagus. People of all ages all over the world are the beneficiaries of Dr. Papanicolaou's scientific originality.

Dr. William G. Cahan, of the Memorial Sloan-Kettering Cancer Center, a friend and colleague of the late Dr. Papanicolaou, was one of the active forces in the planning of this great man, one that will perpetuate both his memory and his accomplishments.

This was first conceived when Dr. Cahan visited the island of Kos, in the Aegean Sea, in 1966. He stood beneath the boughs of the very tree where Hippocrates created and taught the oath that symbolizes the ideals of medical practice.

Dr. Cahan brought a tiny seedling from that tree to the United States. He felt that the transposition of a part of this famous tree would be a fitting and everlasting tribute to another worthy physician of Greek ancestry, Dr. Papanicolaou. The seedling was carefully nurtured; it survived and flourished. Now an 18-foot tree graces the compound of the New York Hospital Cornell Medical Center.

Young doctors, taking the oath of Hippocrates as they graduate from the medical school, are each given a leaf from this tree as a symbol of the humility and greatness of Dr. Papanicolaou who, along with Hippocrates, felt that "to make the lives of others happier" is the ultimate in one's own life.

DR. COLEMAN welcomes letters from readers. Please write to him in care of this newspaper.

Early Reaction To N.C. Local Adoption

By The Associated Press
A school for bartenders. Requests for law enforcement funds. A shift in the scene of the battle for drys. All those notions popped up Wednesday as the North Carolina Senate gave final legislative approval to the state's new local-option liquor-by-the-drink act.

In Charlotte, former bartender Rick Hooven said he's been waiting for years to set up a school for bartenders — and now he's wasting no time getting it going.

"I've had the idea since I moved down here four years ago," he said. "It's been building in the back of my mind."

The 30-year-old Hooven said he was a bartender in Philadelphia and manager of two bars in Boston. He began running a classified ad for his school in Charlotte newspapers on Tuesday, when passage of the mixed-drink bill seemed a certainty.

Leaders of those opposed to the sale of liquor by the drink aren't ready to concede the fight; they see only a shift in the battlefield from the General Assembly to the city and county level.

"You can expect a fight in Mecklenburg," said the Rev. Coy Privette, a longtime leader of anti-liquor forces.

Several leading drys have said they fear a vote for mixed drinks in Mecklenburg County, likely to be one of the first areas to hold a referendum on the matter, might have a domino effect.

"All 100 counties will be focused on Mecklenburg," Privette said. "Just think what would happen to that liquor balloon if we defeat it in Mecklenburg."

In Raleigh, state agencies said they need more than $300,000 from the General Assembly to handle the additional workload created by approval of the liquor-by-the-drink bill.

Officials said the Alcoholic Control Board and the Alcohol Law Enforcement agency will have to hire 15 additional staff members and buy new equipment at a cost of $316,664 to enforce the new law.

Martin Speight Jr., chairman of the three-member control board, said the agency plans to move quickly to adopt regulations to govern the sale and consumption of mixed drinks.

"At this point, I think a lot of stuff will be copied from ... Virginia, because it's worked so well up there," he said.

Delays Hit Rec Building

GRIFTON — The Grifton Summer Recreation Program will not start as scheduled next week, due to an unexpected delay in materials and money for the roof of the new Town Park Building.

Plans are for beginning the program a week later, on June 26, according to Recreation Commission member Bobby McLahorn, who is heading up the building project with the Jaycees. It is hoped that pledges and donations from area citizens and groups who have used the park in the past, and who hope to enjoy the new building in the future, will come in this week to assure the financing necessary to purchase the roof trusses needed to put up the roof.

If a roof can be put up right away, crafts will be available each day at the Recreation Program as scheduled. If the roof is delayed, only games and sports will be offered, according to co-director Mrs. Fay Bollinger.

Anyone who can donate even a few dollars for the roof in contact the following Jaycees: Bobby McLahorn, 524-4565; Jim Brown, 524-5123; Tommy Wilson, 524-5147; or Summer Recreation Directors Fay Bollinger, 524-5379; Brenda Gentry, 524-5415; or Recreation Commission chairperson Janet Haseley, 524-4356; or the Town Clerk, 524-4141.

Yesterdays Cryptiquip — INTRICATE TRAIN SCHEDULE ELUDES UNHAPPY LADY.
©1978 King Features Syndicate, Inc.
Today's Cryptiquip clue: O equals P
The Cryptiquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Robert Edwards 756-8652

"They're the only ones that I will smoke. I'm satisfied, and that's the most important thing."

—Mrs. Marion E. Carpenter
Shinnston, West Virginia

"MERIT Menthol is cool but not overwhelming. It has a mild, pleasing taste."

—Mr. William J. Ehmer, Jr.
Alexandria, Virginia

"I love their taste—better than the much higher tar and nicotine cigarettes I used to smoke!"

—Ms. Nancy K. Harrison
Cambridge, Massachusetts

"I like MERIT Menthol just as well or better than my previous brand. They're a very satisfying cigarette."

—Mrs. Don Feeney
Ft. Lauderdale, Florida

"I tried them all but could not find one that could satisfy me. That is, until Merit came along. Merit truly delivers true rich tobacco flavor and, in fact, compares favorably to high tar brands."

—Mr. Neal DiLieto
Staten Island, New York

"MERIT truly has 'Enriched Flavor'. Thank you for a product that lives up to its advertising."

—Mr. Perry E. Cristiano
Kew Gardens, New York

"I like them. MERIT was the best of the brands I tried."

—Mr. Dennis Jones
Bath, South Dakota

"I like them because of the taste and because they're low in tar."

—Mrs. A. P. Neumeister
Keokuk, Iowa

"I not only switched to Merit, I talked my brother and husband into switching also."

—Mrs. MaryAnna M. Thompson
Olympia, Washington

"I liked the taste because of the menthol."

—Nancy Kifer
Garland, Texas

"Of all the low tar cigarettes I've tried—and I've tried a number—MERIT has the best taste."

—Mr. Robert E. Johnson
Brockport, Pennsylvania

"A friend recommended them. She said MERIT Menthol was a good low tar cigarette. We tried them, liked them. So we've stayed with them."

—Mrs. J. Bivens
Richmond, Indiana

"I have tried a lot of different brands, but I find 'MERIT' the best brand that I have ever had."

—Mr. Thomas C. Monak
Lakeside, Ohio

"I am writing this letter to praise your Merit Filter 100's cigarettes. A friend had a pack. I tried one and the next day I bought a carton."

—Kathleen Smith
Ridgway, Pennsylvania

"MERIT is fine. Excellent flavor. I'm really sold on the merits of MERIT."

—Emily Hay
Ocean City, New Jersey

"I like the Merit low tar and I like the rich flavor of Merit."

—Janice Wiles
West Columbia, South Carolina

"Thank you for giving me a low tar cigarette that I can enjoy."

—Miss Cherylee A. Bell
Phoenix, Arizona

"I like MERIT Menthol very much. I wouldn't smoke any other."

—Mrs. Julie T. White
Johnson City, Tennessee

"I'm sorry I didn't buy Merit when they first came out. They are the best tasting I've ever smoked and believe me I've smoked them all!"

—Mrs. Tillie Terminesi
Waterford, Connecticut

"We all switched because we like the taste and the low tar and nicotine MERIT has."

—Miss Valerye M. Ross
Genesee, Pennsylvania

"Just dropping a friendly note to let you know how much I enjoy your MERIT cigarettes. Congratulations on a fine product."

—Diane M. Salvata
Oceanside, New York

"I would like to commend you on your new cigarette 'Merit.' You have really produced a fine cigarette."

—Mr. Michael W. Brunson
Columbia, South Carolina

"MERIT Menthols are about the best as far as low tar cigarettes go."

—Mr. Michael P. Walsh
New Palestine, Indiana

"For a low tar and nicotine brand it's the most manly of any brand."

—Miss Hazel Maisano
Detroit, Michigan

"I smoke 'em 'cause I like 'em. I tried the others and didn't care for them. MERIT satisfies me."

—Mr. Gerald L. Vermillion
Indianapolis, Indiana

"I love them. Truly a fine cigarette."

—Mrs. Virginia B. Esberg
Meriden, Connecticut

"We saw an 'ad' for a cigarette Merit. Size, tried it. Really good."

—Mr. Joseph E. Kiefer
Virginia Beach, Virginia

"I just a little 'thank you' for Merit cigarettes. I bought a right after they came out and I enjoy them."

—Mr. Joseph E. Kiefer
Virginia Beach, Virginia

"My husband said I should smoke MERIT instead of the other. I do now. I'm not sorry."

"I like them. MERIT is a light, fresh, good tasting cigarette."

Haverhill, Massachusetts

"I enjoy your new cigarette, MERIT regular. They are one of the best tasting cigarettes I've ever had."

—Mr. R. Pangrese
Portsmouth, New Hampshire

"I have tried many cigarettes, but I think of, and MERIT is the first one which I can get enriched flavor with less tar."

—Miss Mary Benefiel
Terre Haute, Indiana

"You've really got something here—and I'm switching to MERIT Menthols."

—Miss Nancy Narel
Cary, Illinois

"Your MERIT Menthols are great; taste just like my old brand but with half of the tar and nicotine."

—Miss Pat Southern
Keene, New Hampshire

"I have tried other low tar and nicotine cigarettes but nothing compares to MERIT."

—Miss Beverly Dickmeyer
Winfield, Missouri

"MERIT Menthol is better than all other cigarettes I've tasted."

—Mr. Ellis R. Fox, Jr.
Chambersburg, Pennsylvania

"My wife and I enjoy Merit and Merit 100's. We both have smoked them ever since they were on the market. Don't ever stop making them."

—Mr. Robert L. Lewis
Columbia, South Carolina

"I tried them, I liked them, and I've stayed with them."

—Sally S. Hapenny
North Bridgton, Maine

"I was attracted to your magazine ad about MERIT filter cigarettes and have been smoking them since. Thank you for more enjoyable smoking."

—Mr. W. W. Hedgepeth
Henderson, North Carolina

"At last a low tar cigarette that really tastes good!"

—Mr. John Saunders
Minneapolis, Minnesota
