New School Board Monday

The new school board of the Greenville City Schools will take the oath of office and become active at the regular June meeting on Monday, June 19.

The meeting will be at 8 p.m. in the library of the Greenville Middle School.

Glenn Cox, Superintendent of the City Schools, says the incumbent board will open the meeting, approve minutes of previous meetings, and approve one outstanding piece of business, a policy paper on selection of instructional material.

Following that action, the incumbent chairman, Henry Dunn, will call on Clerk of Court Sandra Gaskins to swear in new members. Dunn will then monitor the new board as it elects a new chairman, and then turn the gavel over to the person chosen for that position.

With the new board in session, the first item on the agenda will be a public expression scheduled to be given by D.D. Garrett on behalf of NAACP.

Agenda items to be considered include personnel items; budget amendments; comments on the status of the 1978-79 budget; and a request for agreement between the board and the city on playground equipment Third Street School. Also, the curriculum for grades K through 6 will be discussed, with action due in July.

Cox will explain personnel and budget procedures to the new board members. He notes too he has asked Mayor Percy Cox to attend the meeting if possible as a special guest.

School principals have also been extended an invitation to provide them an opportunity to meet new board members. The public is invited to attend.

Abandoning U.S. Dollar Debated At OPEC Meet

By JOHN A. CALLCOTT

GENEVA, Switzerland (UPI)

OPEC oil ministers Saturday appeared deadlocked on whether to abandon the U.S. dollar and delegates said the dispute insured the continuation of an oil price freeze until 1979.

The 13 ministers met around a rectangular table in the ballroom of Geneva's Intercontinental Hotel, where they are holding their two-day semiannual meeting under the protection of Swiss guards armed with submachine guns.

Hard-liners in the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, such as Libya and Iraq, are trying to persuade the oil cartel to drop the U.S. dollar as the method of setting oil prices — or else raise prices immediately.

"We are losing money every day and the future of the dollar is so bad," Libyan oil minister Ezzedin Ali Mabruk said. "All our achievements over the past two years have been absorbed by inflation and depreciation of the dollar."

"We are in favor of a unit of account without the dollar to protect our income and future," he said.

It is not clear what would happen to the dollar if OPEC abandoned it, but economic experts fear it would further destabilize the American currency and the world economy. Sharing this fear, Saudi Arabia, OPEC's largest producer and most influential member, opposed any immediate price increase.

The OPEC ministers are not scheduled to meet again until December and delegates told reporters that oil prices would remain frozen until the end of the year. Even radical Libya indicated there would be no oil price increase before 1979.

"The price was frozen at Caracas for 1978," Mabruk said. Caracas was the site of the last OPEC ministerial session in December 1977.

Capsizes

OTTAWA, Kan. (UPI) — An excursion boat with 59 persons and crewmen aboard was capsized Saturday night on Lake Pomona by what authorities suspected was a tornado. At least 15 persons were reported missing.

A Franklin County sheriff's dispatcher said it was believed "some people are trapped under the boat. At least 15 persons are missing."

All available ambulances in the area were dispatched to the scene, about 15 miles west of Ottawa in east central Kansas.

First reports from the scene indicated at least 14 persons were injured. There was no immediate report of deaths.

Shooting Spree

WARWICK, R.I. (UPI) — A man carrying a high-powered rifle went on a shooting spree in a downtown Chinese restaurant Saturday night, killing four persons, including a pregnant woman, police said.

Police said a fifth patron died of a heart attack at the scene.

A suspect was taken into custody shortly after the four were gunned down at approximately 7:30 p.m. in Lee's Cathay Terrace, police said.

Summer 1978 Begins At 1:10 P.M., Wednesday, June 21

THE BEGINNING OF SUMMER — finds people turning once more to the lure of North Carolina's beaches. Surf fishing, swimming, wading, burying oneself in the sand, daydreaming, or like the in-

Festivities, Assurances Marked Carter's Panamanian Visit

By LAURENCE McQUILLAN

FORT CLAYTON, Panama

Canal Zone (UPI) — President Carter Saturday tried to persuade skeptical American Canal Zone workers they need not fear life under Panamanian rule and promised they will enjoy full economic and civil rights.

His message, evidently designed to head off a mass exodus by troubled canal employees, got a tepid reception and a few boos from a crowd of about 3,000 Americans at Fort Clayton, largest of the U.S. Canal Zone military bases.

Most of the sizable U.S. civilian populace of the Zone, boycotted Carter's appearance and a few of those who came wore "Keep Our Canal" T-shirts and waved one or two placards reading, "President Carter — The Best President Panama Ever Had."

Carter left Panama for the return trip to Washington shortly before 3 p.m. EDT, detoured 150 miles to stay well away from Cuba, and arrived back at the White House by helicopter from Andrews Air Force Base at about 7:40 p.m. The president told waiting reporters the journey "was one of the best trips we've ever had."

His task at Fort Clayton was a touchy one. Many of the 12,000 permanent American residents of the Zone consider the canal treaties a give-away of vital U.S. interests and are convinced Panama's takeover will force them out of jobs and into second-class citizen status.

Appealing to their patriotism and expressing sympathy for their fears, the president tried to persuade them otherwise in his speech delivered on a hot, humid soccer field where his helicopter landed. The mostly-military crowd cheered him on arrival but listened mainly in silence.

"The rights of American workers will be protected," Carter said. "The treaties guarantee to employees, first, general terms and conditions of employees no less favorable than they are now. Nothing will be done to decrease your status as employees."

He also said the pacts preserve their "right to collective bargaining as employees" and said Panama had also promised it would safeguard the civil rights of Americans who stay on.

"We hope that as you learn clearly the conditions under which you'll be living that you will decide to stay on," he said. But Carter's message also had a blunt side: Whether the Zonians like it or not, he said, Panama will start taking over the canal next year and a new U.S.-Latin American relationship will be born.

"There's no room for bad faith in that relationship," he said. "I'm relying on all of you to help make this transition as smooth as possible. That is your duty, your responsibility, and the people of both nations expect nothing less."

The audience applauded only twice — once when he made a joke about Army-Navy rivalry and at the end of his address. It also booed him three times, apparently good-naturedly, when he praised the contributions made by the various rival service and civilian groups.

Interviews with members of the audience suggested the president's appeals had changed few minds.

"Carter has really let a lot of people down, because the Zone is all they know," said Mark Ashman, 21, a military dependent.

"There is a lot of hard feeling about the treaties," said Andrea Roos, a nurse and six-year Zone resident. "I can see both sides of the question but the United States should control the canal."

The Zone visits ended on a subdued note a ceremonial trip that began in a wild Latin fiesta of public celebration Friday, when Carter and Gen. Omar Torrijos signed the treaties, exchanged ratification documents and led a public rally attended by an estimated 250,000 cheering, singing, dancing Panamanians.

Carter referred to that gathering Saturday as "the largest crowd that I have ever seen."

Friday's ceremonies made it official that the United States, under the terms of the two treaties narrowly approved by the Senate, will yield full control over the 64-year-old Atlantic-Pacific waterway at noon on Dec. 31, 1999.

It will also retain perpetual rights to keep the canal open by military force if necessary and to move its ships to the head of the line in wartime.

The president rounded out the diplomatic side of his visit Saturday morning in final private conferences with Torrijos and the visiting presidents of Venezuela and Colombia. There was speculation he was trying to enlist their support for his criticisms of Cuban military interventions in Africa.

Afterwards, Venezuela's President Carlos Andres Perez called Cuba's African activities "depressing" but criticized western involvement there as well.

To Ask For Investigation

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Sen. Robert Morgan, D-N.C., is preparing to ask the U.S. Justice Department to investigate gasoline price increases that have been forecast for this summer.

An aide to Morgan said Friday the senator has prepared a letter to Attorney General Griffin Bell about the price situation and plans to mail it Monday.

"I believe it would be to the consumers' benefit if the Justice Department would monitor this situation, especially from the point of view of whether antitrust laws are being violated," a draft of the letter says.

Morgan also expresses concern over the effect an increase in gasoline prices might have on North Carolina's tourism industry and says he has noted rises in prices during holiday periods in the past.

McGovern Blasts Tax Revolt

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. George McGovern, D-S.D., Saturday blasted the sudden nationwide tide of taxpayer revolts, saying such moves that will force sharp cutbacks in government services are "unAmerican... unacceptable."

"Today, the fault for the heavy burden of unfair taxes rests not on liberal programs, but on needless war, a reckless arms race and an unjust tax system designed and continued by selfish special interests," McGovern said.

He warned that if the United States fails to negotiate a new Strategic Arms Limitation Treaty with the Soviet Union, it "would cost us $75 billion over the next five years — 10 times the total property tax cut in California under Proposition 13."

Checking Homosexual Abductions

HARTFORD, Conn. (UPI) — A Connecticut state police spokesman confirmed reports Saturday of a year-long, threestate investigation into allegations that large numbers of homosexuals have been abducted from New York City and taken to New England where they were tortured and slain.

The spokesman said state police in Connecticut, New York and Massachusetts have been checking the reports since June 1977. He said the Police Commissioner Edward P. Leonard ordered the detective division to follow up the allegations.

"We have nothing further to report publicly at this time," the spokesman said.

Library, School Budgets Top Topics At Budget Hearing

By STUART SAVAGE

Reflector Staff Reporter

Increased support for Sheppard Memorial Library and for the public schools were the prime topics commented on at a public hearing on the proposed Pitt County budget for 1978-1979 held Friday afternoon.

Anne Frost, chairman of the library's board of trustees told members of the Board of County Commissioners, "through the combined support of the city and county, we offer library services unequalled in Eastern North Carolina."

"Sheppard Memorial Library is intensely used not only for leisure reading and recreation, but also for education and research," Mrs. Frost said, adding, "nowhere in Pitt County is there another service which cuts across age, sex and educational barriers as does the library. Something can be found for anyone."

Mrs. Frost emphasized, "to maintain this outstanding service, the library is now providing...we desperately need additional staff members..." Without some help, according to Mrs. Frost, "the present staff cannot continue the services they are now providing."

Inflation, she told the commissioners, "almost consumes the $14,000 proposed increase in the combined appropriations of the city and county" for the coming fiscal year.

"As a matter of fact, our estimated rise in utilities is $6,000 — paying that alone would account for all but $189 of the recommended increase from the county," she noted. (In his budget message to the board, county manager Reginald Gray has recommended $96,000 — a 6.89 per cent increase over the current year's budget of $89,811. The library had requested $115,843 from the county — a 29 per cent increase.)

Mrs. Frost said, "anticipating that our budget needs might not be met, the board has examined ways of staying within the funds we have. Elimination or curtailment of some services is the obvious solution."

Several other persons spoke in support of increased funding for the library.

One of them, Bruce Sugg, complemented commissioners on, "the high degree of excellence of all the departments and agencies of this county."

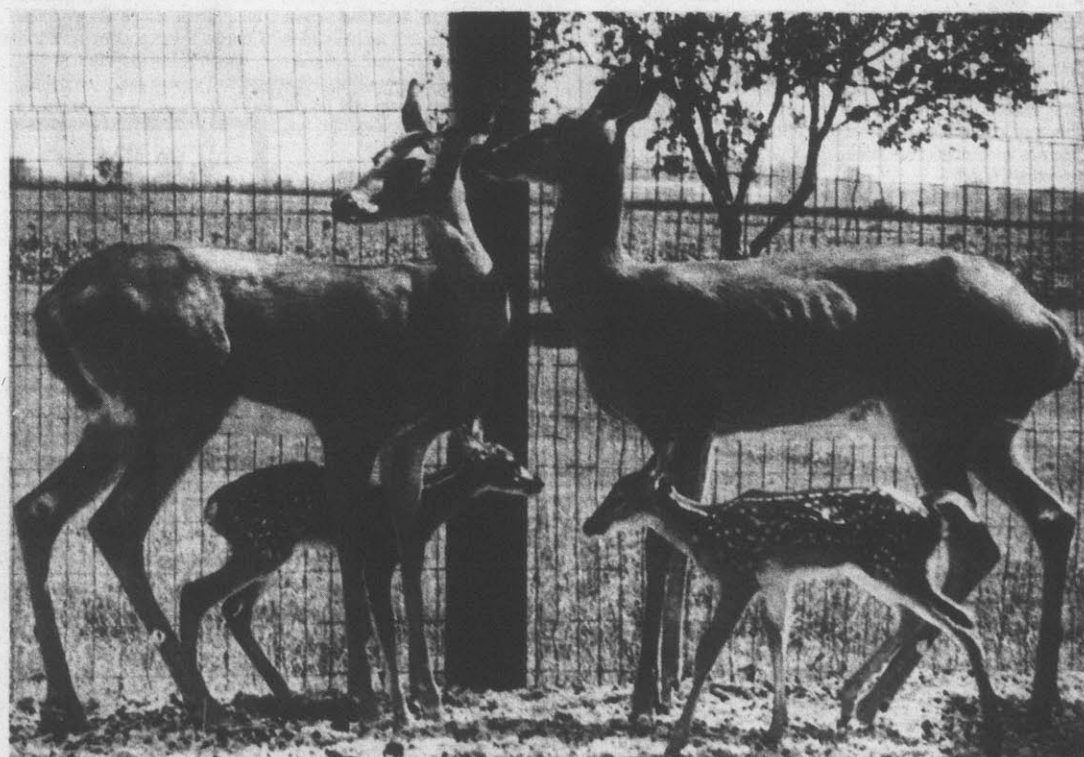

Continuing, Sugg pointed out that industries which have located in the area in the past have all been interested in good library facilities.

"There is one thing every single one wanted to see... the library," Sugg emphasized. "I urge you to give as much consideration as you can to the library request."

Another library supporter, Rodney Schmidt, termed the library, "an important cultural center," and submitted a petition signed by 829 Pitt residents urging a high level of support.

Earlier, in his budget message, Gray noted that commissioners had increased their library budget by 16.21 per cent in 1976-1977, 27.46 per cent for 1975-1976, and 16.1 per cent in 1974-1975. He said Friday that the General Assembly last week appropriated additional state funds for library support, of which Sheppard Memorial would receive about $5,000.

Officials Comment On Chances In Pitt For LBD Referendum

By STUART SAVAGE

Reflector Staff Writer

Liquor by the drink has passed the North Carolina General Assembly but still faces the approval of residents of counties that currently have ABC stores.

Under the local option bill, county voters will have to decide if liquor will be sold in Pitt. Either the Board of County Commissioners can call for a referendum on the question, or 20 per cent of the registered voters can petition for an election.

Pitt County Manager Reginald Gray said that Pitt board members have not formally discussed the matter.

"We have no more than outlines of the bill," Gray said. "So far," he added, "we get more information out of the paper than any other way. I don't know enough about it to make any further comments on it right now."

Greenville Mayor Percy Cox, saying, "It will be up to the County Commissioners to call for a vote," suggested, "chances of getting liquor by the drink in Pitt County will be very slim," initially.

Greenville Area Chamber of Commerce president Charles Burnette said chamber committees would probably meet to discuss the liquor question within a week, but other than that, had no comment.

Ramada Inn manager Ted Moore said, "Naturally we would be in favor of it. It would help our business considerably, and I think help the whole town."

Moore said he thought Greenville residents would approve of liquor by the drink. However, he said, "I don't believe it will pass county-wide," in Pitt.

John Haughn, food and beverage director at the Holiday Inn here, said, "It's about time," indicating he is definitely in favor of liquor by the drink.

He said "It will keep the price of food down and keep the quality of the restaurant up. We're ready for it," he added, pointing out that a new lounge is under construction at the local inn.

"It's being built with liquor by the drink in mind," Haughn said.

Darryl Davis, co-owner of Darryl's restaurant here said from his Raleigh office "We'll have to give a lot of consideration and thought," to liquor by the drink at the Greenville restaurant, "because of the legal age."

Citing Darryl's close proximity to the East Carolina University campus, Davis said "The question is whether or not we can control it...police it so students underage can't get in there to get mixed drinks."

He said it would take, "a very astute checking practice at the door on our part."

According to Davis, "it would help us hold our food prices down," but added since, "75 per cent of our business is students," the question is "whether or not we can control it."

Schools, Libraries, Parks Are First Tax Revolt Casualties

By ROBERT B. GUNNISON
SACRAMENTO, Calif. (UPI) — The first casualties of the California tax revolt are summer schools, libraries and parks. But the next targets are not as clear.

Since the Proposition 13 rebellion broke out of the ballot box 11 days ago, the new $7 billion property tax-cutting law has raised a multitude of questions about California's future.

Waiting for the answers are thousands of teachers, fire fighters, police and other public employees who received layoff notices. Lawsuits seeking to block implementation of Proposition 13 await state Supreme Court action.

Those layers of government that most voters seemed to perceive as most bloated and wasteful have yet to feel the pain as Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. and other politicians must decide what to do before July 1.

Californians made clear they wanted the "fat" stripped from government. But as Brown observed, government fat may be in the eye of the beholder.

"Cutting out fat" — It is a good metaphor, but it is not a very clear guide as to what should go," he remarked. "Less buses? Salaries? People? Policemen? Pensions?"

With the July 1 deadline approaching, uncertainty is aggravated by bickering among the six legislative leaders trying to divide up $10 billion in state surplus funds and remaining local property tax revenue among the 5,000 local government entities and schools.

Democrat Brown, who opposed Proposition 13 and is faced with a rough re-election fight, now vows to implement the Jarvis-Gann amendment as humanely and thoughtfully as possible. "If it's the last thing I do."

The landslide passage of the measure, which rolls back property tax assessments and pegs property taxes to 1 percent of market value, triggered a rapid succession of events:

— Layoff notices were issued to thousands of public employees and more are expected.

— Summer schools in many of the state's 1,046 school districts canceled classes for about 1.5 million students. Many other districts are waiting to see how much money the Legislature provides before deciding whether to hold summer classes.

— Parks, museums, libraries and health clinics around the state prepared to close down.

— A flurry of lawsuits was filed in the California Supreme Court challenging the constitutionality of the Jarvis-Gann amendment.

— Brown proposed budget cuts and freezes on spending special state funds, which together total $715 million, of which $570 million could help local governments directly.

— Among the cuts, Brown suggested freezing salaries of state employees for one year to save $166 million. The outcry was loud from employees' organizations, which vowed a fight.

— The governor also urged that the state's bulging $5.8 billion budget surplus be allocated to local governments for one year to blunt the immediate impact of Proposition 13 while they struggle to establish new spending priorities.

But beyond these immediate problems lurk others, perhaps even more difficult to answer.

California is faced with a loss of $2 billion to the federal government because homeowners and businesses won't be able to deduct as much property tax payments from their federal income taxes.

In addition, the loss of tax revenue at the local level will cause a $60 million net cut to California in federal revenue sharing funds.

Whether the 4,205,396 Californians who voted for Proposition 13 will actually hit their favorite targets in the government is uncertain.

A statewide California Poll issued Friday showed that 62 percent of those questioned listed welfare and public assistance as their favorite choices for cutbacks.

PEDESTRIAN INJURED — Rescue workers and bystanders lift Claudine Tellair Dalton onto a stretcher early Saturday on South Memorial Drive. According to officers, the driver of the car was listed as Louis Howard Washington, of Winston-Salem. Investigators said the pedestrian stepped from the curb into the path of the car, and reportedly received a broken leg and other minor cuts. There were no charges made in the 12:05 a.m. accident. (Reflector Photo Photo by Tommy Forrest)

Fate Of Begin Gov't in Doubt

TEL AVIV, Israel (UPI) — Doubts Minister Menachem Begin's government persisted Saturday on the eve of a major cabinet debate on the future of the occupied West Bank and the Gaza strip.

Despite statements from Interior Minister Joseph Burg predicting "disappointment" for those who expect a crisis at today's cabinet session, analysts said a favorable outcome was far from certain.

The cabinet was meeting to endorse a response to U.S. demands that Israel commit itself to determine the permanent status of the occupied territories and devise a procedure other than a plebiscite to permit the 1.1 million Arab residents there to take part in the process.

Would Welcome Carter Visit

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — Sen. Jesse Helms said Saturday he welcomed the news that President Carter intends to visit North Carolina to campaign for Helms' Democratic opponent, Insurance Commissioner John Ingram.

"I certainly hope nobody talks him out of it," the Republican senator said at the annual North Carolina American Legion convention.

Ingram announced that Carter and Vice President Mondale would campaign for him after meeting with them last week at the White House.

Possible Prosecution

GREENSBORO, N.C. (UPI) — A state audit at North Carolina A&T State University showing illegal use of school funds has been turned over to the Guilford County district attorney for possible criminal prosecutions, according to published reports Saturday.

The Greensboro Daily News said the audit discloses the director of the school's computer center in October 1976 contracted the use of the computer facilities to a private firm, then deposited the fee in his personal bank account. The funds, however, were later sent back to the school and properly deposited.

Rebels Slipping Back Into Zaire

KINSHASA, Zaire (UPI) — More than 1,000 rebels have slipped back into Zaire from neighboring Angola, once again threatening the security of the country's southern Shaba Province, military sources said Saturday.

The sources said the rebels began infiltrating back across the border even before U.S. C-141 cargo planes Friday completed the airlift of French Foreign Legionnaires out of Kolwezi, a key mining center in Shaba.

Mayors Note Urban Ills

ATLANTA (UPI) — The head of the U.S. Conference of Mayors said Saturday the major cities are already "at the wall" financially, and the prospect of a spreading tax revolt makes it imperative that the federal government take over the welfare burden.

Mayor Lee Alexander of Syracuse, N.Y., and host Mayor Maynard Jackson began the five-day convention of mayors with a news conference in which they said President Carter should cut defense spending to help the cities.

Calls For Broadened Services

MYRTLE BEACH, S.C. (AP) — The new president of the North Carolina Bar Association has called on lawyers to broaden their field of service to include low- and middle-income groups.

"We are no longer the high priests of the moneyed classes," Charlotte attorney Clarence W. "Ace" Walker said during his inaugural remarks at the bar's annual convention Friday night.

"The lawyer's services today are being demanded by a much broader segment of the public than ever before," said Walker, a native of Durham. "We must serve not just businesses and affluent individuals but poor and middle-income individuals as well."

Dispute Delayed G.A. Adjournment

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The 1978 General Assembly ended Friday night after settling a dispute between Gov. Jim Hunt and Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green that delayed adjournment for hours.

Green and House Speaker Carl Stewart dropped the final gavel at 8:50 p.m., nearly 7 hours after clocks in the House and Senate were stopped at the appointed hour of adjournment, 2 p.m.

It was the official conclusion of the 1977-78 session, which lasted six months last year and resumed for 13 days this year. Among its accomplishments this year were passage of a local option, liquor-by-the-drink bill and a tax credit to partially offset inventory taxes for certain industries.

Also on their final day, legislators voted a 6 percent pay raise for the governor and a 25 percent pay increase, plus larger benefits, for next year's General Assembly members.

But it was another bill, seemingly innocuous at its introduction, that delayed the session's finale. The measure continued a law allowing taxpayers to check off $1 from their state income tax bill for use in political campaigns.

A dispute boiled when Green, contending the spirit of the original law from 1975 had been violated, insisted that provisions be added requiring the money go directly to candidates. He blocked its passage by bottling it up in the Finance Committee.

Hunt, concerned along with Democratic Party Chairman Betty McCain that $200,000 or more was at stake, met for hours with Green and his aides before a compromise was reached.

The bill worked out Friday afternoon earmarked 50 percent of future collections to candidates and 50 percent to the state party organizations. For money already collected, 67 percent would go to the party and the rest to candidates.

Once details were worked out and the bill was presented after 8 p.m., the Senate approved it on a 37-0 vote. Moments later the House concurred 87-0.

The dispute reflected the disharmony between Hunt and Green that characterized the entire two-year legislative session.

Pitt Landfill To Close On June 30

The Pitt County Sanitary Landfill, located just West of Greenville, on the Allen Road, will close, and the Greenville city landfill site behind Greenwood Cemetery, off East Fifth Street will become the only operational landfill in the county, effective July 1.

The Allen Road landfill will not accept wastes after 4 p.m. June 30, county manager Reginald Gray said.

He explained that landfill operations will be moved to the present Greenville landfill site as part of the county's solid waste disposal plan which takes effect July 1.

That plan calls for the county to operate the city site until that landfill is used up, then resume operation of the county-owned site. The plan also calls for the installation of 40-cubic yard containers on a score of sites throughout the county to provide residents of areas outside municipal limits a place to dispose of their solid waste.

Gray said the city landfill site, beginning July 1, will operate from 7 a.m. until 4 p.m. Monday through Friday, and from 7 a.m. until 12 noon on Saturdays.

He noted that the landfill will accept all solid wastes from Pitt County citizens with no fee being charged after July 1.

Gray explained that ten container sites will be constructed throughout the county during the first year of the program, with additional sites added over the following two years.

Newspaper Workers End Strike

By RANDALL V. BERLAGE

NEW YORK (UPI) — Striking New York Daily News workers approved a new contract Saturday, ending a bitter five-day walkout that closed the nation's largest circulation daily and threatened a citywide newspaper shutdown.

Less than 30 minutes after the contract was approved by voice vote, striking employees began streaming back to work to help management put out a Sunday edition for the paper's 2.8 million weekend readers.

Nearly all the 1,340 editorial and commercial workers in the Newspaper Guild unit at the Daily News approved the three-year contract at a 1½-hour meeting punctuated by applause and chants of "Vote, Vote, Vote."

"It was a good agreement under these conditions," Guild Executive Vice President Harry Fisdell said afterward. "We had a citywide lockout facing us."

A small group of Guildsmen opposed the agreement, however, with one union member calling it "the worst contract the guild ever negotiated."

The union said the pact, reached late Friday night at the end of a marathon 27-hour bargaining session, provides for a three-year, $70 salary increase in the $454-a-week minimum wage now received by veteran newsmen.

The newspaper's early demand that management have the right to allocate three-quarters of the pay rise by merit was not included in the contract.

In addition, the contract includes a provision for a four-day week if management and the union jointly agree.

Road Map Answers Questions

If anyone wonders why extension of U. S. 264 into Pitt County as a fully controlled access highway is so essential, a look at a road map might answer any questions.

The highway is currently being constructed controlled access to I-95 at Wilson. From there westward it ties in with U. S. 64 at Zebulon, which is also controlled access, except for a short four lane stretch which leads to the Raleigh beltline.

The beltline route is controlled access and that leads to the newly constructed I-40. And I-40 is a fully controlled access interstate highway which ties to Asheville; Knoxville; Nashville, Tenn.; Memphis; Little Rock; Oklahoma City; Amarillo; Albuquerque; Flagstaff, Arizona and on to Barstow, Calif. — right across the nation's booming sunbelt. From there other interstate highways carry traffic into Los Angeles.

I-40 also intersects with other interstate highways which carry traffic north to Cleveland and Chicago, or south to Atlanta and New Orleans.

What's more if U. S. 264 is extended fully controlled access it may become the favored route from Pitt County to I-95 and then to the populous areas of the north and south eastern seaboard.

What does that mean for us? It means that prospective manufacturers can depend on highway access to virtually all parts of the nation over interstate standard highways. They can ship with far less likelihood of their goods being held up in traffic jams along the way.

For our highly important farm economy the controlled access U. S. 264 will mean sure routes for shipping farm products to populous sections. We are already an important tobacco and livestock producing area and growing vegetables on a commercial basis may be in our farm future. Rapid shipment of such products could be essential to our farm economy.

The controlled access U. S. 264 will be our gateway to the remainder of the nation.

Project Refutes Concern

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — From time to time governmental projects designed to help relieve a problem find out instead that there is no problem.

Such is the good news in the early stages of a project carried out by the Adult and Community College Education Dept. at North Carolina State University.

The project was to teach young people to have better attitudes toward old people.

"It was expected that the young people initially would express negative attitudes toward the aged — an expectation which was not confirmed," says an assessment of a project called The Development and Evaluation of a Series of Learning Experiences Designed to Effect Changes in Adolescents' Attitudes Toward the Aged.

Adult volunteer leaders worked with Four-H Club members between the ages of 13 and 18. Three different ways of teaching were tested, and tests used to measure attitudes before, during, and after.

More Study

The big question, now, is whether the group involved is truly representative of all (or most) young people in the state.

"If adolescents do, in fact, hold positive attitudes toward the aged, then some of the previous research in the area of attitudes toward the aged will be refuted, or such a finding could indicate that the attitudes of this age group toward the aged is becoming more positive due to increased national attention being focused upon the aged within the past few years," reports an analysis.

To settle those important questions, the university proposes to carry out similar projects in public schools in North Carolina; and eventually nationally.

Hazards

More than 91,500 North Carolina public school pupils face "dangerous or hazardous conditions walking to and from school," according to a statewide survey.

Those students are among the numbers living within one and one-half miles of school, and therefore not eligible to ride the buses.

It would take 1,007 buses added to the present fleet, and another 13,280 miles of travel per day for existing buses to pick up all those children.

CHARLOTTE-MECKLENBURG schools and Gaston schools reported the most pupils walking in hazardous conditions: 7,376 in Charlotte; 6,528 in Gaston. Other high-risk districts were Winston-Salem Forsyth (3,194); Wake (3,282); Wilson (2,105); New Hanover (2,702); Cumberland (3,176); and Fayetteville (1,375).

Of the state's one million-plus students in school each day, 751,907 ride a bus. Living within walking distance of schools are 205,638 pupils.

The survey form sent local schools defines dangerous or hazardous conditions as "situations in which a child's life is endangered anywhere along the walking route; by the necessity of crossing major highways or boulevards; by walking along the shoulder of a road in a high traffic area; by walking through heavy industrial areas; or other situations that would place the child's life in danger."

The General Assembly is now considering a $1.5 million start on this effort.

Buses Wanted

Seventy-eight of the state's 145 local school units reported willingness to buy the necessary buses to transport 66,757 pupils. Eighteen reported no children facing a

Sunday Morning Notes

Mixed drinks will soon be back in North Carolina.

The State Legislature made liquor-by-the-drink referendums legal in the state in action last week.

It will, of course, be up to individual counties to decide whether or not they want it. The guessing now is that populous areas such as Charlotte, Raleigh and Greensboro will be the first to vote.

How soon a vote will come in Pitt County is anybody's guess. It may be years away, and then it may not be approved by the voters.

However it goes, it won't be the first time that liquor could be purchased by the drink in the county.

D. J. Whichard, chairman of the board of "The Daily Reflector," recalls the saloons which were on Evans and Fifth Streets back at the turn of the century.

There were ten or more in the relatively small town of Greenville of that time. Like those in western movies the saloons had swinging doors and patrons could buy a bottle or an individual drink and sit at tables to consume it.

The saloons were generally patronized by a rough crowd. Included was a man who rode into town on weekends, reined his horse into the swinging doors and announced, "Nobody leaves until they have a drink with me."

He would have his drink at the door and no one dared

Overlooking the bootleggers, state package stores is the way alcohol has been sold since.

Whatever happens in Pitt County, it is a sure thing under the new law that the old saloons won't return. There are stringent requirements on mixed drinks which limit them to restaurants that do over 50 percent of their business in food.

The Cherry Point Marine band performed at Sunday in the Park last week and drew a large crowd to the site on Reade Street between Third and Fourth.

There was one more proof that things have changed in the armed services. There were two female members of the military band.

Wearing pants is universally accepted among female civilians these days, but the women members of the Marine Band differed from the men in one respect. The women wore skirts.

We hasten to add that we are all for women members of military bands. Why not? Women have performed quite well in high school and college bands for years.

THE INSIDE REPORT

A Divided Pres. Carter

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — While trying last week to travel both soft and hard paths on Soviet policy, President Carter simultaneously did a similar straddle in the war against inflation — a familiar Carter course over 17 months in office.

Robert Strauss, the president's designated jawboner-in-chief against inflation, after weeks of carefully studying all options, proposed a new presidential council to put muscle into the anti-inflation battle. It would include a dozen representatives of labor, business and government, with Strauss as chairman. Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal and economic adviser Charles Schultze objected, ostensibly because there was just one more committee, in fact, they still were tending off Strauss' emergence as full-fledged anti-inflation czar.

The president appreciated both sides of the argument, leading to this solution: he said no to Strauss on any new official council, but advised him to go ahead and set up a voluntary council. Whether Strauss had a better idea than Blumenthal or Schultze was bypassed.

With some notable exceptions, this has been Mr. Carter's presidential approach. Comfortable in the role of engineer, he carefully considers both sides. But he resists the final stage of decision-making, preferring to live with contradictory alternatives.

"I have the same divided opinions that Carter has," says one sympathetic Democrat with previous White House experience, "but I wasn't elected president." Yet this ex-presidential aide is not sure that a president so inclined to straddle is all that bad in this dangerous world. Indisputably, it means a different kind of presidency.

The difference was displayed in the June 7 Annapolis speech, whose studied ambivalence still confused Washington a week later. While Mr. Carter wrote the first draft himself, he drew from two memos — one State Department (soft), the other National Security Council

Other Editors Say Cut The Sessions

(The Durham Sun)

As state government has grown, so has the amount of time the legislators spend in Raleigh. Some changes are needed.

Experts said the people of North Carolina must decide soon whether they want a General Assembly of "citizen legislators" or of professional lawmakers.

Increased complexity of the government and the huge budget now being handled — over $4 billion a year — require annual sessions of the legislature. Many of the legislators have complained that they cannot afford to spend the time required in Raleigh. Some already have or plan to give up their seats.

Many of the arguments favor professional legislators, who would be paid to concentrate on legislative matters full time.

Professional legislators would be able to devote more time to work on the state's business, but they also would have less time back in their hometowns and regions where they can meet their fellow citizens and listen to their needs and suggestions.

Professional legislators probably would move their homes and families to Raleigh on a permanent basis, losing some of the hometown ties.

A better solution for now would be to cut the amount of time legislators spend working in Raleigh. Gov. Jim Hunt suggested earlier this month the General Assembly consider an amendment to the state constitution that would set limits on the legislative sessions. If the amendment passes, the legislators could depend on the professional staffs to keep them informed back home about the progress of studies and reports.

North Carolina one day may need professional legislators. For now, however, we would prefer to have people with closer ties to their home counties.

Strength For Today

WITH YOU ALWAYS

Phillips Brooks, the great Episcopal Bishop of Boston in the late nineteenth century, once preached a memorable sermon, widely reprinted, on the text, "Aid lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world."

Brooks goes into great detail to show that we can bring the presence and influence of Jesus Christ into every situation in modern life. There is nothing so overwhelming and complicated as to beyond the power of his control. There is nothing so apparently insignificant as to

Panic When Hitting The Skids

By JOHN CUNNIFF

NEW YORK AP) — A company on the skids often continues in that direction, its management either paralyzed into inactivity or panicked into reinforcing the very procedures that began the fall.

It is at that point that the company's financier, or perhaps its lawyers or accountants, calls on firms like Service Resources Corp., once described as a "have hatchet, will travel" operation.

Service Resources goes in and chops away, not it says at the sinew and muscle, but at the fat, which often means nonproductive personnel and hoary procedures. The outraged howls of management are ignored.

The company is trimmed down, refinanced, assigned management priorities and procedures. But, said Morton Sheer, president, "we stay around for a year to make sure they don't fall back into the old habits."

Sheer and his partner, Robert Rosen, claim they are unique in the New York area, in that they make a living by personally turning around poorly managed companies, sometimes resisted by management.

Some might call them ruthless, because they do things from which others shrink, such as firing unproductive workers. They see it differently: a profitless company, they say, endangers many more jobs.

"While it is very nice to be considerate of eight or nine unneeded supervisors," they told a concern losing at the rate of $200,000 a year, "the livelihood of a couple of hundred people is at stake."

The company, they said, "must take any steps required, no matter how untasteful they are, in order to become profitable." The elimination of those jobs alone, they said, would save $120,000.

Poorly conceived management procedures and absurd financing practices also are very common contributors to red ink, they say.

Poor production creeps in by doing things the same way for 40 years, they say. Some officers simply do not know what is going on, they find. Reduced to a cliché, said Sheer, "management doesn't manage."

And it resists change. "They know the problems. They know they haven't been producing," said Rosen. "They want to fight you."

The same stagnation hampers financing. "The businessman comes to think of his financier as the devil," said Rosen. "He's afraid to come to work. He's afraid of the problems."

Sheer and Rosen, both in their 40s, both trained in economics and finance, both with long experience in industry, claim they've never lost a case or even had to close a company division.

But there's an explanation: They won't accept a client unless certain they can help and until they have a guarantee of cooperation, that is, that the boss will actually let them run the company.

Each contract to rebuild a company is for a minimum of one year, but a typical one runs 2 to 5 years, based on an annual retainer paid monthly, and an incentive based on increased profitability or cost reduction.

Letters to the editor must consist of 300 or fewer words. Please include a phone number or numbers for easier confirmation by our staff.

To the editor:

"Learn always. Labor hard. Laugh often. And love much." Those are the words uttered to the 1978 graduation class of Lake Taylor High School by the ex-country lawyer from North Carolina, the Hon. Sam Ervin.

Frequently in this life we are overly involved with making that dollar or with our own goals and aspirations and we condemn others since our view has been dimmed by our toil. We are so busy that the extra energy we could use to analyze one another's position clearly has been exhausted by our labors.

Sen. Ervin has prescribed a remedy for all of us who desire to make the most of this life. Each of us, regardless of age, race, sex or religious preference, must increase our intellect and knowledge through observation of others, reflection of other people's thoughts and through diligent study. Each of us must work hard. As we instruct students daily throughout the school year, "There will never be a substitute for hard work, mental exercise or physical labor."

Each of us must learn the art of laughing at ourselves occasionally. A good, hearty laugh is "toddly for the body."

Each of us must learn to love others. There are imperfections and shortcomings in us all, but we should never lose the vision of "keeping a little love in our hearts."

Condemnation of others, put downs of people remind me of a comment that the great basketball "Wizard of Westward," John Wooden, made when a writer asked him of the way in which he treated Bill Walton, the catalyst of two consecutive NCAA Championships whose political commitments were tantamount to his (Walton's) professional basketball injuries and ailments. "I never questioned his feelings; just his judgment."

To the editor:

I agree 100 percent with your editorial headline "An Individual Has the Right To Choose." However, Flynt, you and others have overlooked a major point — that smokers take away the right of choice from everyone around them. Only when smokers find a way to keep their smoke out of the noses, eyes, hair, clothes and environment of others who choose differently, should they exercise this type of personal choice freely.

It is "ridiculous" that smoking was ever allowed on airplanes in the first place. Airplanes are a particular place where there is no escape from smoke if it exists on the plane at all. The minute a cigarette is lit, its odor and fumes invade the entire plane. To the nonsmoker, the effects can range from mild irritation to disastrous physical consequences.

Restrictions of smoking may benefit the smoker indirectly — but they are being passed in increasing numbers to protect nonsmokers from the physical and material abuse from which they have been suffering far too long. The only hope for smokers to turn this tide is not to get MORE obnoxious, but to realize that their privilege is one which may be granted only through the consent of others. Discretion about when and where to smoke, plus the polite question, "Do you mind," will go further than anything else in prolonging tolerance of smoking in public places.

Edith S. Summey, Ed. D.

To the editor:

It is inconceivable that our state legislature could be so irresponsible as to include three expensive, non-essential, unnecessary items in the budget. 1. Veterinary College — $7.3 million (1st phase) Why? Haven't they heard that soon there will be an excess of veterinarians? We have already committed our taxes ($100 million) for an unneeded medical school. 2. State Office Building — $8.5 million. We are already up to our ears with state and federal property — non-taxable. 3. Abortions — $1 million — financially unneeded, and why should our taxes pay for the sexual life of any person?

Again, it proves our legislature has more money than it needs and cares less about how they spend OUR money.

Do our very able legislators know that 23 states have called for a constitutional convention to pass an amendment banning federal deficit spending? I asked Sen. Vernon White last year why North Carolina didn't do something about it and he said to get in touch with Congressman Walter B. Jones. Why? Wouldn't this be a very excellent project for them?

We, too, need Proposition 13 in North Carolina to eliminate extravagant public school and college programs, welfare and many more unnecessary programs.

"We're stronger on voluntary codes of practice than all-out bans on things," said Janice Upwood of The National Federation of Consumer Groups. "We tend to go along with a trade practice as long as it isn't downright unethical. But I still think we've been pretty successful."

"It's pretty thriving," said Jo Dobry of the Consumers' Association. "People are infinitely more aware of their rights than they were 20 years ago."

"And we're working from the inside, constantly pushing up the standards of products," she said. "Which?" has laboratories that evaluate consumer goods for the magazine.

Still, most experts admit British consumers are not as interested in the quality of goods — or their rights if goods prove faulty — as they are in price. A great outcry occurs each time the price of bread goes up, but no one says much about the lack of ingredient labeling on bread wrappers.

Bureaucracy Entangled In A Trifling Matter

BY JAMES J. KILPATRICK

There are times, working in Washington, that one longs for a modern-day Jonathan Swift to satirize the lunacies of our times. We cried out for Swift the other day in the matter of the Great Brigham Young Memorandum of Sexual Settlement.

The question will not go away: How in the world — how in the name of the Founding Fathers, the Fourteenth Amendment and the Commerce Clause — how in the dear name of limited government do we get involved in idiocies such as this? The answer, I suppose, is that only the Lord and the liberals know.

This marvelous affair originated in July of 1976 when an unidentified female undertook to rent an apartment in Provo, Utah. The landlord said, sorry, but the only vacant unit was in a wing of his building reserved for single men under the terms of his agreement with Brigham Young University. The unidentified female went off in a huff and filed a formal complaint with the U. S. Department of Housing and Urban Development. In the spring of 1977, HUD bucked the complaint to the Department of Justice.

Brigham Young University is sponsored by the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. The Mormons impose strict standards of morality upon those who accept the discipline of the church and share in its undertakings. One of the rules of the university is that single men and single women, if they choose to live off campus, must live in facilities segregated by sex. About 13,000 of the university's 18,200 students do indeed live off campus, and until the one disgruntled female came along two years ago, the rules had caused no problems worth serious notice.

But one trouble with bureaucracy is that it rarely evidences any sense of proportion. There is a sensible maxim in jurisprudence, "de minimis non curat lex," but it's often ignored. The maxim teaches us that the law does not concern itself with trifles, but the trifling matter is one of the things bureaucracy is all about.

The Justice Department took the female's squawk very seriously. It dispatched an ominous letter to Brigham Young University, alleging that the school's requirement for sexual segregation in off-campus housing was a violation of the Fair Housing Act of 1968, 42 U.S.C. Section 3604(a), and that unless the violation were ended forthwith, if not sooner, it would be hoops-coopus, mandamus, schmandamus, and possible jail terms for the president, the elders, and the alto section of the Mormon Tabernacle Choir.

Brigham Young's president, Dallian H. Oaks, responded to this intrusive and peremptory assault with a spirited letter of his own, defending the university's right to impose residential rules upon its unmarried students. Oaks pointed out something that Justice had overlooked: Even the Education Amendments of 1972, prohibiting sex discrimination in programs receiving federal financial assistance, allow for separate men's and women's housing units on and off campus.

Justice responded coldly that the Housing Act of 1968 treats discrimination by sex in the same class with discrimination by race. It would be unthinkable for Brigham Young to say that single blacks and single whites could not live in the same wing of an apartment house. Therefore, ipso facto, post hoc, and Humptus-Dumptus, the school's policy as to single men and single women could not prevail.

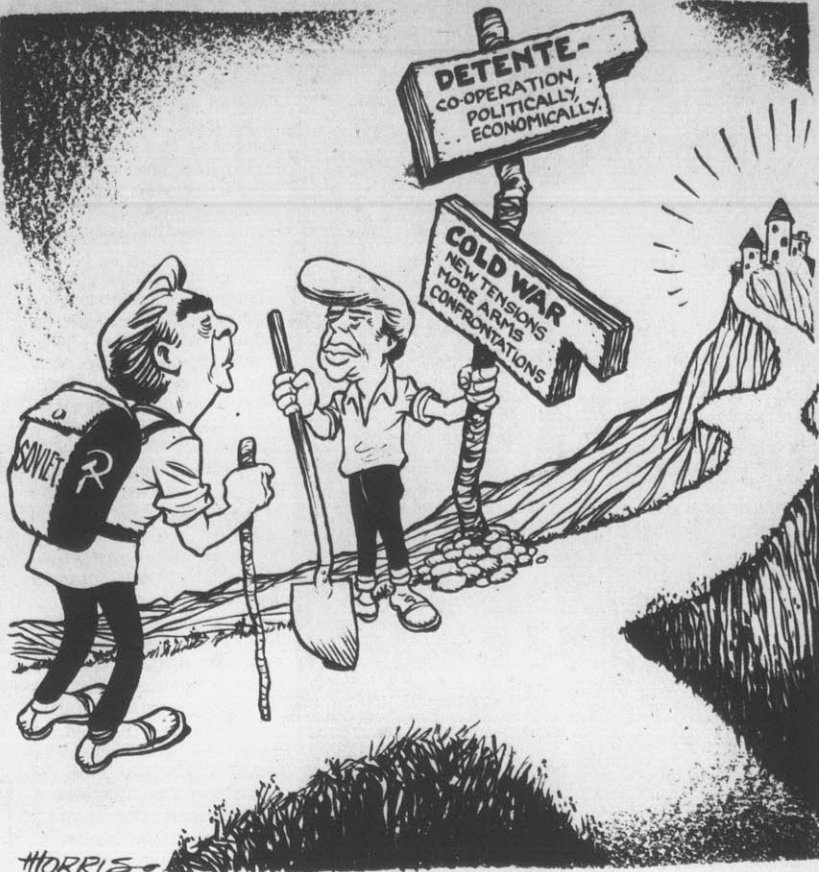

To make a long and ridiculous story short, the government and the university negotiated for nearly 14 months. On June 8, in the fashion of Oriental potentates executing a treaty of mutual accord, the parties entered into a seven-page memorandum of formal agreement.

Brigham Young conceded, though no concession was truly required that its rules for students could not be imposed upon non-students. The department conceded that although the Fair Housing Act prohibits sex discrimination in all circumstances, the act does not prevent sex discrimination in every case. You may read that sentence again slowly whenever you have the time.

Henceforth and hereafter, in saecula saeculorum, Provo landlords who choose to rent to students may set aside buildings or wings of buildings for male students only or female students only. Non-students may not apply. The Justice Department is pleased. It is wonderful, believe me, what victories our government can achieve when it tries. It might be more wonderful still if victories such as this one never were sought.

MAKING SURE HE KNOWS WHERE HE IS GOING!

By GAIL MICHAELS

At One Point, Moving Had Seemed So Simple

Moving is always difficult, but I was sure that I had myself psyched up for this move. I had the date we had to be out of our house firmly set in my mind, and although I wasn't happy about it, I felt that I could live with it. I knew everything I had to have stored, cut off, cut on, or paid up and by what date. And I was plodding through the morass without undue anxiety.

I was, that is, until Phillip came home last week and announced that the movers were coming five days earlier than I had expected.

"What do you mean — they're coming Wednesday?" I gasped. "I couldn't get the bedroom ready by Wednesday, much less the whole house!"

"Well, you're going to have to," he said. "It's the only day next week that they can schedule us."

"It's absolutely impossible. I can't do it. Just call the man who bought the house and tell him the deal's off."

"You don't seem to understand, Gail. We've already closed. It's his house. We're just leasing it from him."

"But it's not fair!" I cried. "I didn't want to move so early in the first place, but WEDNESDAY is ridiculous! I need another week."

"Well, you don't have it, so let's start packing."

I moaned and screamed, but it did no good. I finally had to give in and start looking for boxes. And, believe me, this was no easy assignment. Not only do most of the stores incinerate boxes as soon as they are unloaded, but there must be 300 other people in Greenville who are moving right now. The same woman and I played tug-of-war at three different stores. The men at the ABC store started hiding when they saw us coming.

I began to take extreme measures. I got pretty proficient at hooking my feet over the side of the Dempsey Dumpster and bobbing for boxes. I accepted anything — a crate with one side out, a box of broken syrup bottles, an overused cat carrier, or a chicken coop — I could find something appropriate to put in all of them.

But, still there were not enough boxes to hold all our junk. By the night before the move, I was getting hysterical.

"A power greater than I is occupying this house," I told Phillip.

"Why do you say that?" he asked.

"Because I've never seen some of this stuff before. It must have been willed here. For instance, where did this Parcheesi game come from?"

"You bought it at a yard sale last year. And it's missing four pieces."

"I hate pragmatists," I shouted. "Just tell me where we got 42 tennis balls! We don't even play tennis!"

"Calm down, Gail. Hal and Janie give Meg their dead ones."

"Good grief, look," I shrieked. "That doll just gave birth to twins before my very eyes!"

"Miracles never cease," Phillip said. "Now get back to work."

"All I needed was another week," I mumbled. And I continued to mumble all that night as we packed and all the next day as the movers carried our furniture around us. When the phone rang at five o'clock, the house was empty, my feet were swollen over the sides of my flip-flops, my hands kept flexing over imaginary balls of newspaper, and I was still mumbling.

"That was the man who bought the house," Phillip said as he hung up the phone. "What did he say?" I managed to ask.

"He and his wife have changed their plans," he sighed. "They won't be here for another week."

Clothes Doctor Keeps The Customers Happy

NORFOLK, Va. — The sign outside says "L.T. Teague — Clothes Doctor."

The clothes doctor is always in. His operating room is a small alcove beneath a hotel — fading yellow light, goose-necked lamps hovering over old sewing machines, ironing boards with covers as old and crinkled as mummy wrappings.

L.T. Teague, wearing his ever-present white jacket, a ruler in the right pocket, was pressing a brown suit coat when I visited him. The iron fizzed with water flicked to its surface by his fingers.

He couldn't remember exactly when he entered the tailoring profession. "All I know is I've been poor all my life," he said. He was born near Greenville, South Carolina, over 70 years ago, and recalls that as a child of eight he would push the pedals of his mother's old Singer with his feet and hands. Ruckeeta...ruckeeta...ruckeeta.

"I was sort of a sissy. I wore long hair down to my shoulders. I enjoyed that sewing machine. The children all called me 'girl' because I liked to sew," he said.

At the age of 10 he made his own clothes. "I made my shirt out of flour sacks. We were poor. We never threw anything away. And, I made my pants, too. Out of corn meal sacks. They were hard times. I'll tell you."

When he was older he interned in Greenville with a pair of tailors — one Jewish, the other Irish. He had good "patients," too. Hart Schaffner and Marx suits from a fancy men's store.

The tailors taught him to use beeswax. He still uses it. He plopped a yellow, greasy puck on the counter.

"Now that's beeswax," he said proudly. "I run every thread I use through that there beeswax. It makes the thread three times stronger. Did you know that?"

Some of the doctor's most delicate surgery is on zippers. He repairs broken zippers. Not many tailors are doing that these days.

For zipper surgery he uses a tiny pick, a punch and a pair of pliers. He inserts the tiny gold sliders, straightens the teeth. Whatever. Costs you 75 cents. Tops.

"Man wants a zipper fixed, he doesn't need a new one. But nobody repairs zippers around here except me. It's honest work. Why not?" he asked.

The clothes doctor always wears the white jacket when he works. And no fewer than three watches. Two wristwatches. Another watch is pinned to his pocket so that it can be viewed while ironing.

"Time is everything in this business. You have to know the time. If you promise a man something at a certain time you have to be finished by then," he said, rubbing his back with his hand. His back is stooped from years of sewing and ironing. "You have to be conscious of time," he repeated.

During World War II he stayed very busy. He worked in the basement of the Navy Y.M.C.A., a haven for pink-cheeked swabbies who trucked in the ballroom to "Bell Bottom Trousers," piped in by phonograph loudspeakers.

"One afternoon I turned out 170 white uniforms for sailors. Did it between the hours of four and nine. And I put the ratings on 'em too," he said.

He never saw the sailors again. He wondered how many might have drowned wearing those white uniforms.

Now he doesn't work so hard. Instead, when his eyes get tired — the yellow irises matching the hue of the cloth on the ironing board — he sleeps.

He crawls up on a workbench in the rear of the shop. His gnarled fingers clutch an old comforter to his neck. His feet nearly touch the black sewing machine at his toes.

And he says, he dreams of the days when he was a child in South Carolina...of his mother smelling like new soap, of the ruckeeta of that old sewing machine.

The shop's old, black fan swivels back and forth as he sleeps. The calendar flutters on the wall. The stale, warm air is pushed over the faded carpeting, gentling the green drapes hanging from a rod over the dressing room's entrance.

Then a click of the door latch summons the clothes doctor. A customer walks in.

"If I promised it today, it's ready," the clothes doctor shouts hoarsely, rising to his feet. He shuffles to the counter, tucking a ruler into his white coat pocket.

Americans Oppose A Separate Quebec By 4-1

By George Gallup

PRINCETON, N.J. — More than a century ago the United States was a divided nation. Now the possibility arises that America's neighbor to the north, Canada, may also soon become two nations.

The issue facing Canada is whether the predominantly French-speaking province of Quebec should become independent. Canadian Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau opposes independence for Quebec while provincial Premier Rene Levesque leads the separatist movement. In fact, Levesque has promised to hold a province-wide referendum on the issue sometime next year.

Despite the potential upheaval just north of the border, only about half of Americans, 52 percent, have even heard or read about the possibility that Quebec province might separate from the rest of Canada and become an independent nation.

Among those who have heard or read about the issue, however, opinion is more than 4-to-1 against an independent Quebec. About half the aware group, 51 percent, oppose independence while 12 percent are in favor. The remaining 37 percent are undecided on the issue.

Awareness Varies

Awareness of the issue among the American public varies significantly from group to group.

Predictably, the college-educated are among the best informed. Men are a great deal more likely to have heard or read about the situation than are women. And older people (50 years of age and more) are better informed than those younger than 50.

Regionally, there is little difference in awareness except in the South where a smaller percentage report having heard or read about Quebec's bid for independence.

Little Support

Opinion in the United States on the part of those aware of the issue is uniformly against an independent Quebec although some differences do exist by demographic groups.

Young people are a good deal more likely to back independence for Quebec (23 percent support the movement) than are their elders. Similarly, non-whites are proportionately about twice as likely to back independence as are whites.

In any case, with only half the public even aware of the possibility Quebec might separate and about one-third of those who are aware undecided on the issue, American opinion can hardly have been said to have jelled.

It is not surprising that Americans would oppose the separation of Quebec. The United States, after all, shares its longest common border with Canada. And in addition to questions of business, trade and investments, there are also important defense considerations and how an independent Quebec would fit into common defense arrangements if at all.

Here is the question asked of those aware that Quebec might separate from the rest of Canada:

"Would you favor or oppose having Quebec separate from the rest of Canada and become an independent country?"

The following table shows the percentage of those aware and, within that group, opinion regarding the question of separatism:

Should Quebec Become Independent?

	Aware group	Favor independence	Oppose independence	No opinion
NATIONWIDE	52%	12%	51%	37%
Men	60	11	56	33
Women	44	12	45	43
College-educated	74	14	59	27

High school	45	10	46	44
Grade school	33	10	43	47
East	53	14	51	35
Midwest	56	12	52	36
South	42	9	47	44
West	59	10	53	37
Under 30 years old	44	23	39	38
30-49 years old	50	9	55	36
50 years and older	58	7	55	38

Canadian Outlook

For their own part, Canadians are also against the Quebec separatist movement. The latest Canadian Gallup Poll reading on the issue (conducted in April) shows that of the total Canadian public, just 15 percent back an independent Quebec while 71 percent are opposed. Even in Quebec itself, opinion is opposed to becoming an independent nation by a 62-20 percent margin. Current nationwide and province figures are substantially the same as those recorded at the outset of the year.

Furthermore, Canadians are relatively unconcerned about the separatist issue. Only 10 percent cite it as the most important problem facing Canada (well behind the 46 percent who name inflation high prices and the 38 percent who say unemployment). And only 26 percent think it's likely Quebec will eventually split from the rest of the country while 64 percent think this possibility is unlikely.

The American results reported today are based on personal interviews with 1,508 adults, 18 and older, in more than 300 scientifically selected localities across the nation during the period May 19-22.

Newspaper Article Praised Local Man

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Sunday Editor

A tribute to a Pitt County senior citizen, the late John Gideon Taylor, which appeared in the now defunct "Greenville News-Leader," is a fitting example of a "roses for the living" type of praise appropriate on Father's Day.

In a column "Pitt, Our County," carried by the "Greenville News-Leader" under the dateline of Tuesday, August 6, 1935, the writer, F. M. Wooten, focused on the then 85-year old Pitt County native.

"Mr. John Gideon Taylor, a native of Pitt County, is blessed to reach the mature age of 85 years," the article begins. "His entire life has been spent at and near his birthplace within the county. By his own life and accomplishments he has made himself a monument of value eighty-five years in height and strength."

The article enumerated his early life as a member of a farm family who also worked as a house builder, a saw mill hand, all the while "enduring the hardships and lack of education prevailing at the time of his youth and young manhood."

Taylor married Miss William Amanda Whichard, daughter of William G. Whichard. "They made their home on a farm inherited by Mrs. Taylor of her father. Their home on this farm stands today as one of the substantial homes of Pitt County and is occupied by their son and his family."

Referring to the couple's "family of splendid children," Wooten noted "Their eldest son attained distinction as a physician in the United States Navy. The others are successful farmers and farm owners in the neighborhood in which they were born."

After becoming a family man, Taylor "... served as member of the Board of County Commissioners ... and as a member of the Board of Drainage Commissioners of Pitt County Drainage District No. 2."

Another achievement credited to Taylor concerns road building. "Those of you who travel to Bethel are indebted to Mr. Taylor for the location of the road, Route No. 11, from the branch leading to Stokes to the Moore Farm, six miles of Bethel. From Mr. Taylor's personal income was contributed a large part of the expense of clearing and constructing the original road, for more than two miles."

"In his early days Grindle Creek was a vast swamp. Visions of a drained area guided him to promote the drainage of that creek. In this he was successful."

The writer notes "According to my recollection his part of the

Duke Endowment Gave $25 Million During 1977

DURHAM — The Duke Endowment Fund, one of the ten largest trust funds in the United States, made grants and appropriations during 1977 amounting to $25,637,444.

In the foundation's annual report, just released, an account is given of grants made to educational institutions, hospitals, churches and child care programs in North and South Carolina.

In these grants, trustees authorized $2.7 million more than was granted in 1976.

Archie K. Davis of Winston-Salem, chairman of the trustees, emphasizes the continuous involvement of endowment trustees and staff with the beneficiaries selected by James B. Duke more than half a century ago.

"The endowment strives first to be a wise custodian of its philanthropic funds, and second, to be alert to any situation where its personnel can render special assistance and encouragement to a worthy cause," Davis comments.

Duke University, the major beneficiary of the Duke Endowment, received $9,207,079 during 1977. Other educational beneficiaries in 1977 are: Furman University, $899,165; Davidson College, $899,073; and Johnson C. Smith University, $841,159.

Nonprofit hospitals in the two Carolinas received $11,282,078 for buildings, equipment and operating purposes.

Child care institutions and programs related to these institutions were granted $1,168,859 over the 12-month period; and rural United Methodist Churches (classified as those located in areas with populations of less than 1,500) — received $1,064,068.

A little more than $275,000 went to Methodist ministers who retired from the two North Carolina Conferences and to widows and dependent children of deceased ministers.

Grants from the Duke Endowment are limited to specific beneficiaries in North and South Carolina by the terms of the indenture by which James B. Duke established the endowment in 1924.

Grants to Pitt Memorial Hospital for the period October 1, 1975 to September 30, 1976 (reported in the 1977 annual report) total $17,648. Of this amount, $12,648 was for hospital administrative services and professional activity study; and $5,000 went to the programs for access to health care.

Grants made to all beneficiaries since the endowment was established in 1924 have totaled $466,248,830, as of December 31, 1977.

The foundation report shows that the current market value of the Duke Endowment Foundation is $422,744,195.

Airport Manager Guided Lost Pilot

MANTEO, N.C. (AP) — Larry Swain, manager of the Manteo Municipal Airport, says some luck and cooperation among several people were responsible for the rescue of a student pilot lost over North Carolina.

Swain has been presented a citation by the state Aeronautics Council and the Department of Transportation for his role in the mission.

James Gladwyn of Woodbridge, Va., a teen-aged student pilot, left his hometown near Washington June 5 on a 10-hour cross-country flight that is required to test the navigational skills of potential pilots.

He flew to Lynchburg, Va., east to Newport News and began what was to have been a return flight to the Washington area. However, he turned the wrong direction and headed south into North Carolina.

As Swain was about to close the Manteo airport for the evening at 9 p.m., he heard a distress call from Swain.

"Actually, it was just by luck that we happened to be working late," Swain said. "We were fixing to close the doors when I heard him calling for help."

Figuring that the lost pilot was in the area south of Lake Mattamuskeet and learning that he was low on fuel, Swain notified the Federal Aviation Administration. He helped coordinate efforts by the FAA's New Bern Flight Service Station and the Washington Air Route Traffic Control Center to locate the lost plane.

"First, we had to get him high enough to get him on radar," Swain said. "Then I took instructions from the stations and relayed them to Gladwyn. We got him down by triangular interception. It took us about an hour to get him down."

Swain then sent pilot Dave Smith out to locate Gladwyn and guide him back to the Manteo airport.

"When he (Gladwyn) landed, he had about 10 to 20 minutes of fuel left," Swain said. "Four gallons."

Educators Give G.A. Mixed Reviews

By LORI COOKE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The 1978 session of the General Assembly closed down to mixed reviews from education officials, who were glad they got the money they did — but wanted more.

Officials in the state Department of Public Instruction said they were generally satisfied with the funding they received. But a spokesman for the North Carolina Association of Educators said the state's contribution to education is still "inadequate" to meet the needs of North Carolina's public school children.

Funding for certain areas, particularly for special education, seemed to be in jeopardy when the legislature convened. The Division of Public Instruction had asked for a $15 million supplementary appropriation for special education, but the Advisory Budget Commission instead recommended $6.4 million.

Parents and educators mounted protests and eventually, $9.9 million was appropriated for special education.

"We got more than it looked like we would get," said Public Instruction department spokesman Tom I. Davis.

Ted Drain, a spokesman for the exceptional children section of the department, said more important than the increase in funding was the language of the appropriations act, which will allow budget transfers from other departments in Public Instruction if more funds are needed for special education.

The funds needed will depend to an extent on how many students are identified as needing special services. Drain said funds will be available for testing students who are identified as possibly having special needs.

The availability of funds for testing had been a particular concern of parents and teachers who pressed for more special education funds from the legislature.

Drain said Gov. Jim Hunt has pledged to seek more funds from the 1979 legislature in January if it is needed for special education.

Davis said the supporters of further funding will "try again next year" to present the General Assembly with the projects they feel need more money. But he said the $9.9 million appropriation "means we can do more in the upcoming year than we're doing this year."

But Lloyd Isaacs, incoming executive director for the NCAE, said the funding provided by the legislature "is inadequate to meet the needs of public school children."

Isaacs said he was glad the General Assembly increased the appropriation for special education, "but we need much more."

"We're attempting to give equal educational opportunities to all children," Isaacs said, "and unless we do, everyone is going to suffer."

Isaacs also said teachers are bitterly disappointed that they didn't get the 10 percent salary increase they asked for. Instead the General Assembly approved the 6 percent increase recommended by Gov. Jim Hunt and the Advisory Budget Commission.

Parole Process Speeded Up

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The chairman of the state Paroles Commission says a streamlining of the parole process is speeding up the release of qualified inmates from prisons.

Chairman James C. Woodward said the state granted 4,522 paroles during fiscal 1976-77 and that the total for the current bookkeeping year is likely to exceed 6,300.

Following the hearing, commissioner Ed Warren pointed out that there are some 37 libraries in Pitt County that are supported with city or county funds.

They include 20 Pitt County school libraries, nine city school libraries, a library at Pitt Technical Institute, three libraries in Greenville as well as libraries in Farmville, Bethel, Ayden and Grifton.

Total county funding for libraries in the city and county schools and Sheppard Memorial this year totaled some $516,000, while municipal funding for the libraries in Greenville, and the four other communities amounted to $296,400 this fiscal year. State and federal funds going to Pitt Tech and the Greenville City school libraries totaled $163,500 this fiscal year.

Greenville City Board of Education member Ed Carter, and superintendent Glenn Cox spoke briefly in support of increases for the city schools.

Carter said, "thank you for your cooperation," in the past in meeting the needs of the schools, and urged commissioners to, "do your best," for the coming fiscal year.

Cox noted that, "education is the most important aspect of the total county budget," and asked the board's "thorough consideration in assessing county-wide priorities," with the hope of increasing funding for the schools.

Charles Johnson, speaking for parents of students at Chicod Elementary School, asked the board's special consideration for a cafeteria at the school. He noted that according to a State Department of Public Instruction survey, the present cafeteria at the school has the capacity to handle only 61 per cent of the students at the school.

Margaret Wirth, speaking for the Greenville-Pitt County League of Women Voters, said, "first let me congratulate the commissioners and the Pitt County School Superintendent for their cooperative efforts in creation of our new county recreation program," with Community School Act funds."

She then said the League wished to endorse, "full funding," for the Pitt County juvenile and crime prevention officers, an administrative assistant for the county manager's office, and, "the planning grant for Pitt County."

Saying, "there is no question but that the schools always need more money," Mrs. Wirth noted that the League endorses the salary requests, a school psychologist and job employment counselor for the Extended Day Program requested by the Greenville Board of Education, as well as four assistant superintendents positions for the county schools.

She also urged, "reevaluation of the county's proposed allotment," for the library.

"The league strongly recommends that the city and county give consideration to a percentage arrangement based on a library users survey for future budget allocations for Sheppard Memorial Library," Mrs. Wirth noted.

Several speakers urged commissioners to hold the line on spending.

The prime spokesman for the group was J. C. Galloway, who termed Pitt County, "a disaster area agriculturally."

Saying Pitt had, "a disastrous crop last year," Galloway noted that, "over half of the tax you people are about to divide up comes from the rural area," of the county.

Adding that the present property tax system is, "kind of antiquated," and saying, "there is no way that property can continue to carry the whole load," Galloway urged commissioners to, "hold the line on tax this year."

"Think of the farmers out here who will be asked to carry half this load."

Airport Development Discussion On June 27

WILLIAMSTON — Recommendations for airport development in Pitt, Beaufort, Martin and a dozen other Northeastern North Carolina counties will be discussed at a Department of Transportation public meeting to be held here June 27.

The 2 p.m. meeting will be held at the Martin Community College main building on Kehukee Park Road and will consist of presentations on various airport system alternatives and recommendations by representatives from DOT.

A primary goal of the plan, according to Larry Sams, chief of systems planning for DOT, is, "to stimulate balanced economic growth through the sensible development of our airports. This is a form of transportation which can mean a great deal to our state and local communities because it provides an attractive incentive to industries who are considering relocation in North Carolina," he noted.

Persons desiring information about the meeting may contact George Ramsey, Community Planner, N.C. Department of Transportation, P.O. Box 25201, Raleigh, N.C. 27611, or call (919) 733-2804.

in the Park programs.

Today's fare is a musical bouquet of 35 lively, memorable, Cole Porter songs — favorites in American popular music going back to as long ago as the late 20s — songs like "Night and Day," "Begin the Beguine," "In the Still of the Night," "Blow Gabriel Blow," "Easy to Love," "My Heart Belongs to Daddy," and "So In Love."

The review of Porter's showcase songs is written and directed by Carole Lindsey and runs a little more than an hour. Ms. Lindsey is Supervisor of Performing Arts for the Greensboro Recreation Department. Bob Overman is music director.

The accompanist, Joseph (Joe) Lupton, Jr., is the son of former Greenville residents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Lupton, Sr., now living in Roanoke Rapids.

The young performers add col-

As usual, the Sunday in the Park event will be held on the grassy slope between Third and Fourth Streets, east of Reade Street. The public is invited and there is no admission charge.

Performance will begin at 7 p.m. and mode of dress for attending is casual. Sunday in the Park concerts are sponsored by the Greensboro Recreation and Parks Department and the City of Greenville.

Visions Of Courtly India Opens Today At NCMA

RALEIGH — The color and mystique of India are represented in an exhibition of 80 miniatures going on view today at the N. C. Museum of Art, downtown Raleigh.

"Visions of Courtly India: The Archer Collection of Pahari Miniatures" is a special show of works selected from the comprehensive collection of William G. Archer, Keeper Emeritus of the Indian Section of the Victoria and Albert Museum in London.

The exhibition is being shown under the auspices of the International Exhibitions Foundation, Washington, D. C., supported by a grant from the National Endowment for the Arts.

Dr. Archer began his collection in 1941, when he was assigned to the Indian Civil Service as a District Magistrate. In his introduction to the exhibition catalog, Archer describes his initial impression: "It was as if I had stumbled on a collection of Elizabethan lyrics and was discovering for the first time the mainstream of English love-poetry. The language might not be modern, but it expressed with matchless elegance the tender nuances of romantic passion."

Dr. Archer's introduction also presents a full history and critical analysis of the art of the Indian miniature. (The catalog, printed by the Meriden Gravure Company, includes 12 color plates, and its publication has been subsidized by a grant from the JDR third Fund.)

The works in "Visions of Courtly India" were chosen by Dr. Archer to illustrate the development of the individual Punjab Hills art styles, to demonstrate their interaction, and to relate their contribution to Indian art as a whole.

There is a rich variety in the paintings, ranging from the bold style and strong color of some of the earliest examples to the delicacy and charm of the story paintings from 1750-1850, most of which were never shown in the U.S. prior to the organization of this exhibition.

The show will be at the Raleigh museum through July 16. There is no admission fee charged for viewing the show.

A MESSENGER IS DISPATCHED — This Indian miniature painting, from the Kahlur (Bilaspur) region of India, of the 1670-1680 time period, is one of 80 works included in "Visions of Courtly India."

FROM SHEPPARD MEMORIAL LIBRARY

By Joe R. Stines

Sheppard Memorial Library is being used more for reference and research daily. Professional tools used by teachers, librarians' and parents who are promoting reading are in great demand. New titles or new editions of old titles within this subject area are being added to Sheppard's collection monthly. The following works are a few of these additions.

A PARENT'S GUIDE TO CHILDREN'S READING (4th edition) by Nancy Larrick is a layman's approach to children's literature with many useful bibliographies. Interested parents will find this source exciting. The author covers such topics as television and children, and language in early childhood, poetry, the audio visual bridge to reading, buying books and building a home library. Maska Rudman's CHILDREN'S LITERATURE: AN ISSUES APPROACH (Heath, 1976) provides alternative answers to special problems through children's literature. This easily used tool examines, selects and gives ways of utilizing books dealing with contemporary social problems and conditions for children through age 12. May Hill Arbuthnot's CHILDREN'S BOOKS TOO GOOD TO MISS (6th ed.) is a highly selective list with critical appraisals of 260 books of outstanding merit. It discusses criteria for evaluating children's books and offers a "best of the best" list recommended for building home collections for children. The selections represent the judgement of a group of specialists who, having had long experience working with children and children's literature, have tried to determine which of the old children's books have significance for today and which of the new ones measure up to the same standards of excellence.

CREATIVE DRAMA AND IMPROVISED MOVEMENT FOR CHILDREN by Janet Goodbridge is a handbook providing practical suggestions for using creative drama in schools to make the printed word come alive. The source will also help teachers select and develop appropriate material for playmaking and improvised movement. Goodbridge shows that creative drama is an extension of the ways children express themselves naturally at play; it includes action, movement and speech.

'Ballo Liscio' Rocking Italy

By VICTOR L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Writer

ROME (AP) — Italians are packing ballrooms in a revival of the waltz, tango and polka, producing Saturday night fever with a different beat. One expert says it's a flight from terrorism and other harsh realities.

In the major northern Italian cities such as Milan, Turin and Bologna, discotheques alternate shakes with "ballo liscio" — "smooth dancing" — and many teenagers have now learned to waltz.

The heartland of ballroom dancing is the Emilia Romagna region of central Italy, where local halls run weekly contests often pairing grandmothers with younger men.

It is also the home of Raoul Casadei, the king of Italian swing, whose orchestra tours Italy booked solid all year.

The "Ca del Liscio" in Castelbolognese and "Il Picchio" near Oaranello, the site of the Ferrari sports car factory, each has three different dance floors and can accommodate up to 5,000 persons. They are sold out Saturday and Sunday nights.

"What with all the crime, terrorism, pollution, people like to escape from the present day reality and this is why many are choosing ballo liscio instead of rock," said Casadei.

"They are also in need of human contact."

To meet the demand, the Casadei orchestra has built its own $5 million "Ballo Liscio House" south of Bologna, ringing up $2,000 to $3,000 a night.

The ballroom craze has also swept up tourists, mainly Germans and French, crowding the beaches of Romagna and new dance halls have gone up on the coast.

However, the fad has failed to catch on in Rome, where trendy discotheques are packed each night of the week but the beat is rock.

In the capital, at least, said writer Marco Cianca, Hollywood-style "Saturday night fever" has become epidemic.

Hospitality House

Summer fashions for younger men is the theme of the first part of "Hospitality House," Kay Currie's WITN-TV show airing over Channel 7 from noon until 1 p.m. today.

Guest Peter Baker of Chocowinity also demonstrates the frying of fish, shrimp and scallops.

The second portion of the program is dedicated to grandfathers, with two over-90 guests. Dr. R. G. Jolly, minister, editor and lecturer from Chester Springs, Penn., discusses his travels in South America and Europe. He is scheduled this summer to lecture in Poland, France and Britain. Also, Kay will re-play the interview with Captain Fred Gillikin made recently on his 100th birthday.

Reynolds Gives To Museum

WINSTON-SALEM — R. J. Reynolds Industries has made a $280,000 contribution toward construction of the public lounge and gallery area in the new North Carolina Museum of Art building at Raleigh.

That section of the new building's entrance level will be named in honor of the diversified worldwide corporation.

J. Paul Sticht, president and chief executive officer of Reynolds Industries, in announcing the gift, said "North Carolina is one of only two states in the country that supports its art museum with public funds. RJR is proud to underscore that cultural commitment by playing a leadership role in the new museum's private sector endowment."

RJR has been a consistent patron of arts within North Carolina. The company helped establish the North Carolina School of the Arts and supports, through direct grants and community leadership, such groups as the Winston-Salem Arts Council, the Southeastern Center for Contemporary Art, Piedmont Repertory Theater and the N. C. Shakespeare Festival.

Last year, Reynolds Industries sponsored the statewide North Carolina Artists Competition in connection with the dedication of its new World Headquarters Building in Winston-Salem. The competition drew about 4,000 entries, from which Reynolds purchased 139 works of art for its headquarters.

The Open

North Rolls In Birdie For One-Stroke Lead

DENVER (AP) — Andy North, serene despite pressure that sent some of golf's great names reeling in bewilderment, calmly birdied the final hole for a 1-stroke lead over Gary Player in Saturday's third round of the U.S. Open Championship.

North's dramatic birdie, his second in as many days on the toughest hole on the course, finished off a round of par 71 that left him with a 211 total for three trips over the 7,081 yards of subtle terrors that compose the Cherry Hills Country Club layout.

That put him 2 shots under par and one in front of the gallant, gritty little Player, so determinedly stalking the title he wants more than any other in the world.

Player, shrugging off the potentially ruinous effects of 3 consecutive bogeys with a birdie of his own on the final hole. He finished off a hard-won round of 70 and sent him into Sunday's final 18 holes of the chase for the American National championship with a 212 total.

"I want this more than any other 15 titles in the world," said Player, who needs another American Open to join Jack Nicklaus as the only men to complete two career sweeps of golf's Big Four championships. The 42-year-old Player won the Masters earlier this season. The other Big Four events are the British Open and the PGA.

It was 2 shots back to J.C. Snead and Dave Stockton, one of the game's happiest warriors, tied for third at 214. Snead 3-putted the final hole for a 72 while Stockton, a two-time PGA champ and one of golf's greatest scramblers, came out of near-constant trouble for a 70.

"I'm having a real good time," he said after saving pars with putts of 15, 45 and 25 feet.

Johnny Miller, the troubled man who once was the best in the game, fired the best round of the tournament, a 3-underpar 68, that put him at 215 and very much in contention for the title he won in 1973.

"I've really been miserable with my golf the last two years," said Miller. "It's nice to be able to control the game and not have the game control me."

Miller has played his last 36 holes in 137. He was tied with Spain's spectacular Severiano Ballesteros, the 21-year-old who has ruled European golf for the past two seasons, and Andy Bean, winner of the last two American tour titles. Each matched par 71 in the mild, sunny, breezy weather of the third round.

At 216, 5 strokes back, were Tom Kite, Bill Kratzert and a deeply disappointed Jack Nicklaus.

Kite and Kratzert shot 70s. Nicklaus had a 3-over-par 74 that may have taken him out of the chase for the title he has won three times. He had scored eagle-3 on the 11th hole and was very much in the chase. But on the 13th, perhaps the easiest hole on the course, Nicklaus put his second shot in a ditch in front of the green. He dropped out of the hazard, flew the next over the green into a bunker, came out to 12 to 15 feet and lipped out the putt. It was a triple-bogey 7.

"I hit it fat," he said of his second shot. "I just didn't have my mind on what I was doing. It seems I lost my concentration a couple of times," he said.

"I'm not all that excited about being 3 over par. But this is the U.S. Open. A lot of funny things happen. Five shots isn't impossible to make up."

But he wasn't alone in his dismay. Lee Trevino was in contention when the day's play started. A spectator walked across the front of the tee while Trevino was in his backswing. He got it in the woods, took a while to get out and eventually dropped a 12-foot putt for double bogey. He never recovered and finished with a 75-218.

And then there was Mark Hayes, who once shared the lead. He played the last five holes bogey-bogey-bogey-triple bogey and finished with a 76-219. Hale Irwin, who had rallied to within 3 strokes of the lead, bogeyed four of the last six holes and appeared positively shocked.

"I just let it get away. I had it but I couldn't hang on to it. It got away," he said after a 75-218.

And then there was Player, who appeared to be flirting with the same sort of disaster.

He'd chipped to eight feet for a birdie on the 11th and took the lead alone with a 25-footer on the 13th, which prompted him into a tip of his little, white jockey's cap.

But he dove into the right rough and bogeyed the 14th. He got it in a bunker and bogeyed the 15th. He hit a 1-iron in the rough on the 16th and bogeyed again, for the third time.

It took his 1-iron shot to the 18th, which stopped some seven feet from the flag, for his closing birdie.

"It was an unusual round in that I never got away with anything," he said and shrugged. "You have to accept what comes."

North twice surrendered the lead but never let himself fall apart. He made 4 bogeys — and followed each of them with a birdie.

"I never let myself get behind the 8-ball," North said.

He watched from the 18th fairway while Player was making his birdie to put the tournament in a tie. North's approach was some 40-50 feet from the flag. Needing that stroke to go ahead, he calmly stroked it home.

Pitt Nips Rocky Mount

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Mike Shank cracked the first pitch of the bottom of the ninth inning over the fence in left field for a game-winning home run last night as Pitt County rallied to defeat arch-rival Rocky Mount, 7-6.

The victory kept alive the unbeaten streak of Pitt County, running their total wins to nine in a row, eight of them Eastern Area I contests.

Rocky Mount dropped its third defeat in eight contests with the loss.

It was not one of the prettier games of the year for Pitt County, as the locals committed six errors and spotted Rocky Mount a 5-0 lead before charging back to finally take a 6-5 margin in the seventh. Rocky Mount tied it up in the eighth, before Shank's leadoff blast finally ended it in the ninth.

"We were very fortunate to win," manager Ed Hooks said. "We lost some of our concentration, yet we showed real character in coming back."

Hooks added that pitcher Mike Williams made some early mistakes that seemed to infect the rest of the team.

"I just hope this will put us over the hump. We were real nervous tonight about this one. Now that it's over, maybe we can play well the rest of the way."

For a long while, however, there was some doubt as to whether the winning streak had not come to an end.

Rocky Mount opened up with two runs in the first inning. Linwood Silver lined a double down the first base line and Greg Clark walked. With one down, Alan Gay walked to load them up and a single by Jeff Newsome drove in both Silver and Clark.

Rocky Mount threatened again in the second, loading the bases on two errors and a walk, but failed to score. They left a man in scoring position again in the third.

The fourth, however, saw three more runs cross as Rocky Mount boosted its lead to 5-0.

With one out, Clark reached on a single off Williams' glove. David Wells doubled up the right field

Morgan Caps Reds' Comeback

CINCINNATI (AP) — Joe Morgan, the wheels of Cincinnati's Big Red Machine, is rolling again — after some friendly advice "woke me up."

Emerging from his worst slump in seven seasons in Cincinnati, Morgan, capped the Reds' ninth-inning rally Saturday with a two-out, run-scoring single for a 6-5 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals.

Morgan, whose average slipped to .236 two weeks ago, said he was pressing after the road trip to Chicago 10 days ago.

"I went out to dinner with some friends and after I brought up how bad I was going, they reminded me I didn't have to prove anything to anyone," recalled Morgan.

"That woke me up. Maybe I was trying to say people were wrong when they booed me," said Morgan, who recently heard from Riverfront Stadium fans when he committed a rash of errors after establishing a major league fielding record.

"It bothered me because of my track record here. I've been one of the most consistent players around. Since then, I just relaxed and decided to play my game," said Morgan, who said part of his problem stemmed from breaking in a new glove.

He went 2-for-5 Saturday and drove in a run in the eighth inning when the Reds scored twice to tie the game at 5.

It was Cincinnati's fourth straight victory. Morgan saw it as a sign that the Reds are making a move.

"This is the time each year when we start getting hot. I look for us to put together a streak of 40 out of 50, like we did in 1975. When we get ahead no one is going to catch us," he said.

Morgan thinks the slump is over.

He drove in Pete Rose with the winning run Saturday. Rose had singled with one out and stolen second for his fifth theft in six attempts.

The Reds rallied from a 5-2 deficit after starter Bill Bonham was forced out of the game in the second inning when struck on the pitching hand on Steve Swisher's line drive.

A two-run homer, by Keith Hernandez put St. Louis ahead

3-2 in the third and the Cards added two runs in the seventh.

Morgan's game winning hit came off reliever Buddy Schultz, 0-2. Pedro Borbon got the victory with two shutout innings.

Cesar Geronimo started the Cincinnati rally with a solo homer in the seventh and Ken Griffey led off with a triple in the eighth. He scored on Morgan's single, making it 5-4 before stealing second and scoring on Mike Lum's single.

St. Louis had fallen behind 2-0 in the first on Dave Concepcion's bases-loaded single.

The Cardinals, ended the string of 11 consecutive hitless innings in the second when Ken Reitz singled after Hernandez walked with one out. Swisher then hit a drive back to Bonham that glanced off his fingers and into center field, allowing Hernandez to score.

St. Louis added two runs in the seventh when Mike Tyson singled, and went to second on a sacrifice bunt by Vuckovich.

Blalock Holds Lead

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Tour-wise Jane Blalock opened up a 3-shot lead Saturday over Nancy Lopez and feels confident she can end the rookie's Ladies Professional Golf Association winning streak.

After shooting a 5-under-par 68, the 32-year-old veteran said, "I'm not going to get excited tomorrow with Lopez behind me."

"I've had Judy Rankin and JoAnne Carner behind me before. I'm not going to get excited. That's maturity."

Blalock, winner of 19 LPGA titles in 10 years, stood at 142, 4 under par after two rounds in the $75,000 stop at Locust Hill Country Club.

Lopez, seeking an unprecedented fifth consecutive victory, took a double-bogey 6 on the final hole for 73. Her 145 total left her third behind Alex Reinhardt, who shot a second consecutive 7 for 144.

She 3-putted the 18th hole from 10 feet. "I'm mad," she said. "I don't like to finish that way. I usually shoot well when I'm mad."

Asked if the pressure and attention she's drawn in recent weeks were getting to her, Lopez said, "I'm a little tired. But that's not the reason I 3-putted the last hole."

"The more people watching me makes me feel more confident," she said.

Reinhardt has not won in three years on the tour, and lost her card after the 1975 season for poor play. She qualified again in 1977.

Blalock used deft putting to fire 6 birdies against a single bogey. She took only 28 putts on the fast greens.

Nancy Lopez: Rookie Sensation Of LPGA Tour

MASON, Ohio (AP) — Mickey Wright remembers the first time she played golf with Nancy Lopez.

"She shot 80 and had back-to-back double bogeys," recalled Wright. "But you would never have known it by her composure."

Wright, 42, is the all-time Ladies Professional Golf winner with 82 victories. Her charm and class have matched her talent.

And now she was sizing up Lopez, the 21-year-old record-shattering rookie of professional golf.

"I'm not given to raving much, but she impresses me as the best young lady ever to come on tour. She's not flakey by any means. She's so much farther ahead of me at this stage. She has more poise, better control, little emotion."

Lopez, with five weeks to play in her rookie campaign, already is the winningest newcomer ever in the professional sport, either men or women.

The former Tulsa University national collegiate champion had won six times going to the Rochester stop this week. Bob Murphy and Jerry Pate share the men's record of two victories. Several LPGA rookies had won a single tournament.

Since joining the LPGA last July, Lopez's earnings have surpassed $142,000 — nearly $119,000 this season. She needs less than $12,000 to topple Pate's all-time rookie record of $153,000.

No first-year player in golf's history had peeled off four straight victories, a feat Lopez accomplished with her first major crown, the LPGA Championship last week.

Her success is unspooling. Older rivals are accustomed to winning. Lopez is stealing their glory. Still, they refuse to bad mouth her.

JoAnne Carner, one of the big names of the women's sport, has twice lost leads to Lopez in the last few weeks.

Carner knows why. "Perhaps more than anything, she's the best putter ever on our tour. I would put her against Ben Cramshaw, any of the men."

After finishing second to Lopez last week, Amy Alcott said, "I've never met a person who accepts what they do with so much humility."

Even the media melts under her charm, heightened by a big, easy smile on her dark, pretty face.

"She's just too good to be true," snarled one veteran columnist during the LPGA Championship.

Ray Volpe, who as commissioner has built the LPGA tour into a 38-week, the $3.4 million operation, loves the Lopez image.

"She's Arnold Palmer and Lee Trevino rolled into one player. She has the sex appeal of Palmer, the charisma of Trevino. I shouldn't even use commercial words, media words, about her. But I think she'll be our household word," said the commissioner.

Why is Lopez dominating the tour? No rival has won more than once in 1978.

"Mentally," she replied, "I feel very strong, really strong. I'm very confident. You have to be out there with a clear mind and a clear conscience to play well."

"I'm just a stronger competitor than when I started on tour. My game's just better with all the competition, concentration and the practice balls I hit."

Her personal habits are as good as her golfing talents. Lopez neither drinks nor smokes. "Oh, I like strawberry daiquiris. But you can't get drunk on those."

Certainly, said a probing writer, Lopez must have some faults. She thought, paused and replied, "I sucked my thumb when I was little. And it cost daddy a lot of money. He had to put braces on my teeth."

Her strong faith may be behind her success, too. The two daughters of Roswell, N.M., auto shop owner Domingo Lopez are deeply religious. So is their dad. So was their mother, Marina, who died in September.

Delma Guevara, her 33-year-old sister, remembered a long distance telephone call she placed after Lopez's victory at New Rochelle, N.Y. "I said to her, 'Oh, Nancy, look what God has done for you. He loves you.'"

"I can't believe it. She's been good at everything she tried. She just has it in her."

Delma showed off a gold necklace and a gleaming ring. "Nancy bought these for me when she was golfing overseas. Aren't they nice? She's so loveable."

Bernie and Delma Guevara flew all night from Los Angeles to watch Lopez win her first major title along with her dad and boyfriend, Ron Benedetti, a former Tulsa University pitcher and now a Houston salesman.

Lopez relishes their presence. "I worry about daddy when he's home alone. And Delma really gets excited when they ask for her autograph. She tried golf. She didn't like being in the sun so much."

At one time, Lopez and Benedetti were engaged. Now they are just good friends.

"When I get married, I want to settle down and before, if he married me, he didn't want me to settle down. My success changed things. I'm not ready to get married."

"He's very understanding. It could work out later on. Ron said he wouldn't take my name (such as Richard Kertzman did for Karolyn Kertzman, another LPGA tourist). And I don't want two names either. It would either be Nancy Lopez or Nancy Benedetti."

Current LPGA members are more aware of their physical appearances. The day of the big, hefty players has all but disappeared.

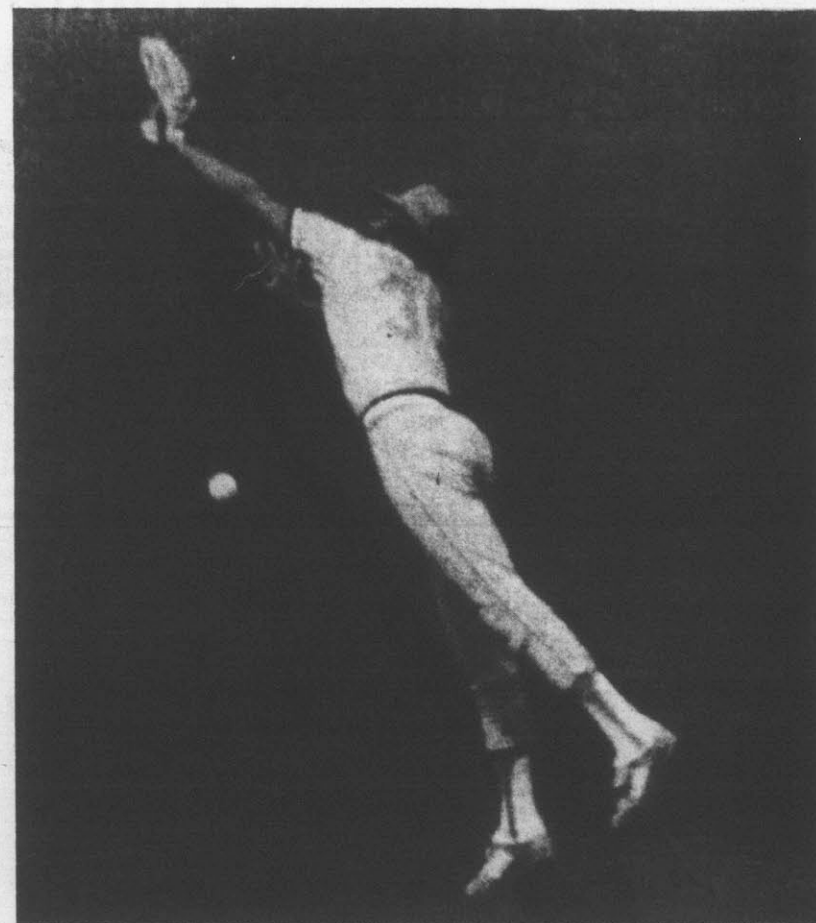

Lopez is no exception. "I've never been fat, just pleasantly plump," she said of the 170 pounds she carried on her 5-foot-7 frame as a Tulsa freshman.

By eating fish, chicken and no bread, she has shed almost 20

Yastrzemski's Hit Caps Red Sox Rally

By DAVE O'HARA
BOSTON (AP) — Carl Yastrzemski grounded a bases-loaded single through a drawn-in infield to cap a two-run, ninth-inning rally Saturday as the Boston Red Sox edged the Seattle Mariners 5-4 and extended their winning streak to nine games.

While boosting their home record against American League West rivals to 16-0, the Red Sox handed Seattle its 10th loss in a row.

The Mariners moved into a 4-3 lead on Leon Roberts' solo homer in the eighth inning, but Butch Hobson opened the Boston ninth by lining a single to left-center.

Pinch-batter Carlton Fisk lined out but Rich Burleson grounded his fourth single, sending Hobson to third. Jerry Remy grounded to Julio Cruz, but the Seattle second baseman's throw to the plate was wild with Hobson scoring. Burleson going to third and Remy to second on the error.

Jim Rice was walked intentionally to fill the bases before Yastrzemski wrecked the strategy by grounding his sharp single to right, scoring Burleson with the game-winning run.

John Montague of Seattle suffered his third loss without a victory. Bob Stanley, who relieved starter Allen Ripley at the start of the ninth, collected his fifth victory in six decisions for Boston.

Seattle spotted the Red Sox single runs in the first two innings before going ahead 3-2 on singles by Bill Stein, Bob Stinson and Julio Cruz and a pop double by Dan Meyer in the third.

Boston pulled back into a tie as Dwight Evans hit his 15th homer, a tremendous shot over the screen atop the left-field wall in the sixth.

Berry Signs 2-Year Pact With Rockets

HOUSTON (AP) — Rick Barry, a basketball superstar for 12 years, signed a two-year contract with the Houston Rockets of the National Basketball Association Saturday, prompting a team official to say the signing was one of the proudest moments in the 11-year history of the franchise.

Barry, 34, became a free agent at the end of the past season, his eighth with the Golden State Warriors.

"Basketball is a business just like everything else," Barry said at a news conference.

"My business managers put calls in to several other ball clubs and Houston showed the most interest," he said. "I wanted to go to a team that would be competitive, could win a championship and I wanted to go to an area where I would enjoy living."

None of the financial terms of the contract were announced.

"It's a new life for me and a tremendous opportunity," he said. "I'm not upset with the Warriors in any way, shape or form."

Scotty Stirling, the Warriors' general manager, said after hearing of the signing that Barry twice brought his terms to the Warriors but did not sign. Barry later advised the team he wanted to become a free agent.

Barry, the only player ever to lead the NCAA, the NBA and the defunct American Basketball Association in scoring, said, "I was very impressed with the way the negotiations progressed. I weigh less now than I did at the end of the regular season and will do whatever Coach (Tom) Nissalke wants me to help make Houston a championship team."

Nissalke said he has been impressed by Barry's capability of being able to play the game and to know what's going on around him at the same time.

"There are very few players in sports who have presence and Rick is one of them," Nissalke said. "He has amazing overview and this club needs somebody with that kind of talent."

The Rockets slipped to a 28-54 record last season after losing to Philadelphia in the Eastern Conference final playoff series the previous season.

Barry probably will be teamed with forward Rudy Tomjanovich, who was sidelined early last season after suffering severe facial injuries from a punch thrown by Kermit Washington, then with the Los Angeles Lakers.

Rockets General Manager Ray Patterson said his club would negotiate with the Warriors in good faith concerning the question of compensation for Barry, but added that the decision to sign Barry had been discussed for months.

"We decided we would be a better ball club no matter who they (the Warriors) take," Patterson said.

Barry, a 1965 graduate of the University of Miami, was San Francisco's first draft choice in 1965. He averaged 25.7 points per game and was the NBA Rookie of the Year.

His NBA career scoring average is 25.6 points per game and he had an average 30.5 points in the ABA, where he played for the Oakland Oaks, Washington Caps and New York Nets.

Newton, Stadler Lead

By LARRY PALADINO
AP Sports Writer

GRAND BLANC, Mich. (AP) — Jack Newton overcame the flu and Craig Stadler mastered the use of a couple of unfamiliar clubs Saturday to become co-leaders heading into Sunday's final round of the $100,000 Buick Open Golf Championship.

Australian Newton, 28, fired a third-round 70 for a 7-under 209 for the 54 holes at the par-72, 7,001-yard Warwick Hills Country Club course.

Stadler, 25, a former U.S. Amateur champion from La Jolla, Calif., also had a 70 Saturday for his 209 total.

The winner of the tourney will take home $20,000.

Powers, Newton, Stadler and Stan Lee were the leaders after Friday's second round. Lee shot a 74 Saturday to join six others at 213, including Michigan golfers Randy Erskine of Battle Creek and Gary Groh of Bridgman.

"I didn't feel like I played that well today," said Newton, who tied Tom Watson for the British Open title two years ago only to lose in a playoff.

"I had the flu," Newton said. "A couple times I bent down to line up a putt and felt dizzy. I've been to the doctor twice and have been taking antibiotics."

Newton had birdie and two bogeys on the front side, then came back with a 33 on the back with three birdies.

Stadler said the best part of his game was his putting and he used a putter borrowed from friend and fellow pro Woody Blackburn.

Stadler had to use another strange club — his own pitching wedge — for a couple holes in place of his sand wedge which he lost.

"It got left on the range somewhere," Stadler said. "My caddy went back and couldn't find it. Somebody finally found it and drove it to me in a cart."

"I'm happy today because I didn't play well," said Stadler, sounding much like his co-leader.

Newton said, "I'd like to play a little better tomorrow. I made a few silly mistakes clubwise today."

He and Stadler both complained about the swirling winds which caused them to choose the wrong club on several occasions.

South African Cole, who won the tournament last year when it was at the Flint Elks club nearby, said he feels "slightly more confident I can win since I won last year." But, "I'm not playing with the confidence tee-to-green that I was last year."

He said he thought a 10-under would win Sunday, but Stadler said, "If it's a perfect day I'd say 11 or 12 under will do it. If the weather is like today I'd say 10."

Besides the wind, there was a downpour late in the day. It has rained some all three days.

Lee Returns To Bosox

BOSTON (AP) — Veteran southpaw Bill Lee ended his one-day walkout on the Boston Red Sox Saturday, rejoining the club less than 24 hours after calling management "gutless" for selling his friend, outfielder Bernie Carbo, to the Cleveland Indians.

General Manager Huywood Sullivan said Lee had been fined an undisclosed amount. But the fine probably was a day's pay in his reported $120,000 per year salary.

Asked if everything was all right again, Sullivan laughed and said: "I can't say that. All I know is that he's back in uniform."

The Red Sox, although obviously stung by Lee's bitter comments while AWOL, went out of their way to protect him upon his return. They cleared the clubhouse of visitors and barred the doors before a game against the Seattle Mariners Saturday.

Lee visited the clubhouse Friday, talked with Carbo, then packed his belongings and left.

He refused to acknowledge Sullivan's repeated phone calls, heatedly saying, "When they bring back Bernie Carbo, I'll be back."

Sullivan conferred with American League President Lee MacPhail and others before wiring a demand that Lee get in contact with him immediately.

Lee, colorful but often controversial for outspoken opinions during his 10 years with the Red Sox, missed the official team picture early Saturday, something which he had helped arrange, as the club's player representative.

However, he slipped into Fenway Park and met with Sullivan for about a half-hour. They then met with Manager Don Zimmer for another half-hour.

When the clubhouse was cleared, Lee met privately with teammates, many of whom had criticized the 31-year-old left-hander for his action.

Lee, however, was not available for comment before the game because of the closed clubhouse. He reportedly sat in front of his locker reading a book while the team prepared to take the field.

Neither Sullivan nor Zimmer, who had called Lee a "quitter" Friday night, had any comment on the pitcher's return.

At his home in nearby Belmont Friday night, Lee said: "They can do anything they want to me, but if they come over here they'd better do it with gloves because I want to fight somebody."

Lee called the Red Sox' management "gutless" for not notifying Carbo of the deal with Cleveland before he left the park following Thursday night's game.

Sullivan said the deal was made just before the midnight trading deadline because Carbo was playing out his option "and we wanted to get something for him."

At his home, Lee called Zimmer "a gerbil, a no good s.o.b." He was even tougher on Sullivan, a new part owner of the club.

"I'd like to punch his head off," Lee said of Sullivan. "I've never been so angry for such a long time in my life. I really thought I wanted to kill him."

While Lee was AWOL, Zimmer said "he can go ahead and quit. I don't like quitters."

"It won't disturb this ball club," Zimmer said. "I hope he has another job. If he can get a better one, let him. It won't hurt this ball club one damn bit."

"I think it was a little selfish," catcher Carlton Fisk said after Lee missed Friday night's game. "Getting sold or traded is all part of the game. Best friends or not, people have to part because of deals all the time."

Lee won 17 games for three consecutive years until suffering a left shoulder injury in 1976. However, he appeared to bounce back this season, compiling a 7-3 record with a 2.82 earned run average. Then, he was felled by the tender shoulder again, taking a cortisone injection last Tuesday night. He may be sidelined for 10 days.

The Optimists scored a run in the eighth inning to nip Union Carbide in a game that was suspended on May 31 after seven frames.

The score was tied at 8-8 when play was suspended and the Optimists put Union Carbide down in order in the top of the eighth yesterday.

In the bottom of the inning, Will Heath singled and George Iaboni walked. Both advanced on a wild pitch, and after Jason Boyd got a base on balls, Heath came in on a balk to win it.

Union Carbide was held to three hits in the game, no one with more than one. Andre Wooten had three hits for the Optimists, while Mike Iaboni, Darrell Dunn and Heath had two each.

Big Value 3, First Federal 2

A trio of runs in the third inning enabled Big Value to slip past First Federal yesterday afternoon.

First Federal scored, first in the opening frame when leadoff batter Tyrone Barrett singled, stole second, went to third on a passed ball and scored on Derek Dickens' base hit.

Brian Walsh led off the decisive third inning with a walk for BVD and Jeff Austin reached on an error. Steve Wall singled to load the bases and Walsh scored when Sterling Edwards got on via a fielder's choice. Wall was thrown out on the play. Austin came in on Scott Irwin's double and Edwards scored on an error.

Dickens scored the final FF run in the bottom of the third. Wall, Edwards and Michael Walsh each had two hits for Big Value, while Brian Joyner had a pair for First Federal.

Optimists 15, Union Carbide 5

The Optimists made it two in a row over Union Carbide by defeating UC in a game immediately after the continued contest.

The Optimists scored twice in the first inning. Doyle Kirkland led off with a walk and Brett Dye was hit by a pitch. Three passed balls allowed both runners to score.

Kirkland reached again in the second, this time on an error, and Dye got on by a fielder's choice which saw leadoff batter Jason Boyd thrown out. The pair advanced on a wild pitch and scored on Darrell Dunn's double. Dunn moved to third on a wild pitch and Andre Wooten singled to score him. Wooten moved up on a wild pitch and scored on Will Hester's double. Hester advanced on a passed ball and came in on an error.

The Optimists added two runs in the third, five in the fourth and one more in the sixth. UC scored all of its runs in the sixth.

Dunn had four hits to lead the Optimists, while Dwight Smith paced Union Carbide with a pair.

Dan Woods led off the fifth for Home Builders, reaching on an error. Jeff James and Roger Williams walked and Woods and James scored on Barry Tyson's double. Tyson and Williams came in when Bobby Hopkins followed with a two-bagger.

Mike Thurber scored the lone Pepsi run in the bottom of the frame with a leadoff home run.

Marshall Rand pitched a one-hitter and got good backing at the plate from his teammates as Dr Pepper rolled past Auto Specialty in a shut-out.

Dr Pepper got on the scoreboard in the second inning. Curtis Evans singled and stole second and Chip Cayton got a base hit. Evans scored on an error and Cayton stole around to third. Tommy Shirley was hit by a pitch and he stole second. Both runners scored on John Parnell's single.

Dr Pepper added four runs in the third, including a homer by Evans, and the winners scored four more in the fourth. Evans had three hits and Parnell two for Dr Pepper.

Jeannette Cox 14, Graniters 4
Lance Searl triggered a 10-run third inning with a three-run home run to lead Jeannette Cox past the Graniters.

Cox got on the scoreboard with a pair of runs in the bottom of the first inning. Searl singled and Randy Warren picked up a base hit. Searl scored on an error, while Warren followed on Mont Carter's single.

The Graniters tied the game in the top of the third as Roderick Harrell slapped a solo homer and Horace Barrett singled and scored on a base hit by Ernest Brannon.

But in the bottom of the frame, Warren, Carter and Tony Burroughs all singled and scored. Tracy Roscoe and Jessie Atkinson then walked and Searl knocked his round-tripper. Bill Johnson got a base hit and Warren tripled. Carter walked and Burroughs got a base hit, scoring Warren. Keith Stocks and Marty Rudford scored Carter and Burroughs with a pair of safeties.

Cox added runs in the fifth and sixth, while the Graniters scored a pair in the fourth. Warren had three hits and Carter and Burroughs two each for Cox. Harrell and David Priestly each had two for the Graniters.

Eleven-Season Dream Finally Comes True For Reds Hurler

By NORM CLARKE
AP Sports Writer

CINCINNATI (AP) — For 11-plus seasons, Tom Seaver was deprived of a dream. After five 20-victory seasons, three Cy Young Awards, a World Series championship ring and five one-hitters, only a no-hitter had eluded him.

No more.

"If you pitch long enough with good enough stuff, you are bound to pitch a no-hitter sooner or later," said the 33-year-old Cincinnati right-hander, who celebrated his one-year anniversary with the Reds by tossing the first no-hitter of his luminous career.

His 4-0 gem came at the expense of the St. Louis Cardinals, a club that has skidded to rock-bottom since making history when Bob Forsch no-hit the Philadelphia Phils April 16.

"It's been my philosophy, 'If it happens, it happens,'" he said. Seaver made it happen without his usual overpowering stuff. "I got better at the end. I didn't have the good fastball, so it was a case of a little of this and a little of that. I had a good sinker early and good control all night."

It was his seventh straight victory, since stumbling to the worst start of his career.

The subject of a no-hitter had come up earlier in the day, when Seaver and teammate Bill Bonham were driving to the ballpark. "We were talking about it on the way into town when we heard Joe Wallis was traded," said Seaver, whose closest no-hit bid was broken up by Wallis on a two-out, two-strike count in the ninth against the Chicago Cubs in 1975.

The last no-hitter by a Cincinnati pitcher came in 1969, when Jim Maloney stopped the Houston Astros. Seaver joins Ken Holtzman and Rick Wise as no-hit authors at Riverfront Stadium.

John Denny, who tossed no-hit ball for four innings, was the victim. Now 6-5 for the season, he gave up a two-run double to Pete Rose in the fifth and a run-scoring double to Joe Morgan.

Seaver, 8-4, struck out three, walked three and permitted baserunners only in the second and ninth innings. The closest scare came when Jerry Morales hit a chopper to third to lead off the eighth. Ray Knight, who had just replaced Pete Rose, narrowly nipped Morales at first.

Other than two hard grounders by Keith Hernandez — fielded by shortstop Dave Concepcion and second baseman Joe Morgan — there were no other close plays.

The final out, on Seaver's 118th pitch, came when George Hendrick, a .223 hitter, grounded to first baseman Dan Driessen, who raced to the base as bedlam broke.

Seaver Hurls His First No-Hit Victory Over Cardinals Friday

By FRANK BROWN
AP Sports Writer

It was catcher Don Werner, not Johnny Bench, who called for the final pitch. It was third baseman Ray Knight, not Pete Rose, who made a game-saving play at third base.

But it was the same old Tom Seaver.

The 33-year-old right-hander, who had tied a National League record by collecting five one-hitters, pitched the first no-hitter of his career Friday night with a 4-0 thriller over the St. Louis Cardinals.

He threw all 118 pitches at Werner, who has caught the last 18 games since Bench was disabled by a back injury.

The 24-year-old catcher had other things on his mind when he came to Riverfront Stadium — a .162 batting average, for example.

"I thought I was going to have to lose 20 pounds to hit my weight," said the 185-pound native of Appleton, Wis., who contributed a fifth-inning single to the three-run fifth inning that gave Seaver all the support he needed.

Knight kept the no-hit bid

alive in the eighth — moments after entering the contest as a defensive replacement for Rose. When the Cardinals' Jerry Morales chopped a high bouncer to third, the 25-year-old Knight calmly threw the runner out in the game's closest play.

The next inning, 38,216 fans were screaming and everyone knew why. Seaver walked pinch-hitter Jerry Mumphrey, got Lou Brock on a fly ball to left, induced Garry Templeton to force Mumphrey, then teased George Hendrick into bouncing out, ending the game.

"In the ninth, the pressure was all on Seaver," said Werner. "A catcher is more like a spectator in a situation like that."

Before the game, he was more like a prophet. Looking for something, anything, to raise his spirits, Werner had a chat with himself.

"I had been feeling down," he recalled. "So I said, 'Seaver's going to throw a no-hitter tonight.'"

He may not hit much, but Werner makes predictions with the best.

Seaver had a prediction of his own about the future of the game-winning ball. The five-time 20-game winner, owner of three Cy Young Awards, mused that he'd give it to his daughters.

"A month from now, it will be covered with tape," he said. "I can hear it now: 'Sarah, where's that ball I brought home last month?'"

"Oh, it's in the pool, daddy..."

Elsewhere in the National League, Philadelphia blanked San Diego 5-0, Pittsburgh beat Atlanta 9-4, Chicago trimmed Houston 7-6 in 13 innings. Los Angeles nipped Montreal 2-1 and San Francisco rallied to overpower New York 7-4.

Phillies 5, Padres 0

Two other Cy Young Award winners did battle, with Philadelphia's Steve Carlton pitching a five-hitter to beat San Diego's Randy Jones.

Two errors by Padres third baseman Bill Almon helped the Phillies to three unearned runs.

Pirates 9, Braves 4

Ed Ott drove in three runs with a home run and a single to help power Pittsburgh past Atlanta.

Third baseman Bill Horner — the first player picked in last week's amateur draft — slugged a 20-run homer in his major league debut for the Braves.

Cubs 7, Astros 6

Bill Buckner's 13th-inning sacrifice fly scored Ivan DeJesus with the winning run to lift Chicago over Houston and give the Cubs their eighth victory in 10 extra-inning games this season.

Houston outfielder Cesar Ceno cracked an RBI single in the fifth inning but strained ligaments in his left knee while trying to reach second on the play. He was hospitalized for observation.

Dodgers 2, Expos 1

Dave Lopes broke a tie in the fifth inning with sixth home run of the year to give Los Angeles its seventh consecutive victory.

Underwhelming offensive support was no surprise to Expos starter Steve Rogers, 7-7. In his last seven losses, Montreal has scored seven runs and Rogers hasn't allowed more than three runs in any start this season.

Giants 7, Mets 4

Ninth-inning home runs by Heity Cruz and Jack Clark completed San Francisco's comeback from a four-run deficit and paced the Giants' seventh consecutive victory.

Bill Madlock and Mike Ivie also had home runs for the Giants. The Mets, winners just once in their last eight games, jumped to a 4-0 lead but fell victim to San Francisco's power attack.

No Insurance For Olympics

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The city won't be able to obtain insurance to protect against financial liability for the 1984 Olympic Games, according to findings of a special committee of insurance men.

Attorney John C. Argue, head of the Olympic organizing committee appointed by Mayor Tom Bradley, said Friday he had received a letter detailing the committee's negative findings.

At a recent meeting with the International Olympic Committee in Athens, Greece, Bradley and other members of the city's delegation said Los Angeles would be willing to host the games if an insurance policy could be obtained to protect the city against financial losses.

Argue said the committee of six Los Angeles insurance executives concluded that Olympic organizers would have to seek a surety bond, not an insurance policy, to protect themselves against financial losses.

But the committee added that no surety company would be in a position to issue a financially unlimited policy. The special committee also determined that it would be a problem to develop the net worth necessary to secure even a limited bond and that the premiums on such a bond would be "quite expensive."

Finally, no single surety company would have the capacity to issue such a bond, the committee concluded.

pounds since January. She now weighs less than 140 and said, "My muscles weigh more now."

Lopez's climb to stardom is not an overnight thing. She started playing competitively when she was 13. She won the Western Junior when she was just 15. She spent three years on her putting alone.

Her father took $40,000 from his auto body shop to feed Nancy's habit when she was a rising amateur star. "I tell Nancy this place got you where you're at," he said of his business.

And it was more than his money that contributed to her success. "No. 1, he never put any pressure on me to practice and play good. He told me, 'Well, if you play bad, I still love you.' He never made me feel like I was no good."

A Hot Streak

Cincinnati Reds pitcher Tom Seaver wipes the sweat from his face as he takes a moment to himself in the late innings of his no-hitter against the St. Louis Cardinals in Cincinnati Friday night. The no-hitter, on a muggy night which Seaver said made his pitching tiring, was the first of his career. (AP Laserphoto)

Aaction Movers 7, Wachovia Bank 1

Aaction Movers rolled to a 7-1 victory over Wachovia Bank in the Babe Ruth League Friday night.

Aaction scored all it needed in the fourth inning, pushing over four runs. Ken Barnes got it started with a walk, and Jaime Byrd also got a free pass to first. Arthur Fletcher walked, loading the bases. A passed ball let Barnes in, and Donnie Daughtridge sacrificed Byrd over. Bert Singleton walked, as did Carl Woodworth, reloading the bases. A double by Chris Joyner plated Fletcher and Singleton for a 4-0 lead.

The other three Aaction runs came in the seventh.

The lone Wachovia run came in the fourth. Raynor Casey walked and Steve Hall singled. Ed Frazier reached on an error, scoring Casey.

Planters Bank 19, Coca-Cola 8

Planters Bank exploded for 11 runs in the third inning and went on to take a 19-8 victory over Coca-Cola Friday night in Babe Ruth play.

Coke took the early lead with a run in the first. Paul MacMillan led off the game with a single and Jimmy Jones also got a hit. Mitchell Brann singled, scoring MacMillan.

Coke added a second run in the third. Jeff Porter singled, stole second and scored on a hit by Johnny Williams.

Then, in the bottom of the third, Planters blew the game open with 11 big runs.

Crowell Pope got it started with a single and a stolen base. He scored when Gordon Douglas singled. Keith Phillips walked, and Mike Pollard hit a three-run homer.

Ted Gartman kept it going with a single and Larry Talbert got a hit. Both stole up and Bobby Gantt singled in Gartman. Jim Whitehurst singled in Talbert, and a wild pitch let Gantt score.

Pope, back up, singled in Whitehurst, and moved all the way to third on an error on the play. Douglas reached on an error, scoring Pope, and was safe at second on another error on Phillips' grounder. Both moved up on a passed ball, and Pollard reached on an error, scoring Douglas. A balk let Phillips and Pollard advance, and Talbert reached on an error, scoring Phillips with the final run.

Two more scored in the fourth, and six were added in the sixth.

Coke got its remaining six in its half of the sixth. MacMillan, Jones, Brann and Williams each had two hits for Coke, while Pope had three and Phillips had two for Planters.

Putters Hold 1st

WILSON — Hosting Wilson took first place in the Eastern Regional Putt-Putt match Friday night.

Wilson downed Rocky Mount by 32 strokes, and gained a 35-stroke margin over Greenville.

Greenville, however, continues to lead in the overall standings in the chase for the $500 first place money in the event with one match remaining.

The final match will be held in Rocky Mount on Monday night. Greenville leads Rocky Mount by 27 strokes and holds a 35 stroke lead over Wilson.

Quincy Scarborough led Greenville with a 94 Friday night, while Bobby Ippock had a 100. Tim Manning had 100 and Rob Ericson and Robert Stancill carded 103's.

Little League

Graniteers 9, Exchange 2

The Graniteers romped past the Exchange, 9-2, Friday, to further tighten up the Tar Heel Little League race.

The Exchange, Pepsi-Cola and Moose are all tied for first place with 7-5 records, and each have just three games left to play. And all six teams in the league still have a bona-fide chance at the title.

The Graniteers pushed over two runs in the fourth to take the lead. Carlton Wilson singled and moved up on a wild pitch and a passed ball. Jon Whichard walked and stole second. Tommy Warren followed with a double, scoring both runners.

The Exchange came back with a run in its half of the third. Billy Michel singled, stole second and was sacrificed to third. He scored when Monty Atkinson reached on an error.

The Graniteers then broke it open with seven runs in the fifth. Terry Warren reached on an error, as did Traye Fuqua. Jimmy Bishop singled, loading the bases. Cedric Hines reached on an error, scoring Warren, and Carlton Wilson brought in Fuqua with a sacrifice fly. Whichard reached on a fielder's choice, scoring Bishop, and Warren walked, loading the bases. Russell Vines walked, forcing in Hines. Warren singled in Whichard, and a single by Lark Wetherington brought in Warren and Vines.

The other Exchange run came in the sixth. The Exchange got only one hit, that by Michel, off Wetherington. Wetherington led the Graniteer hitting with two.

Coca-Cola 4, Lions 1

Coca-Cola took a 4-1 victory over the Lions Friday and moved into sole possession of first place in the North State Little League race.

The two teams had been tied for first going into the game.

Jay Wynn hurled a one-hitter at the Lions, giving up only a run-scoring single in the fifth inning.

That came after Steven Garrett had walked, moved up on an out and had taken third on a wild pitch. Tony Taylor got the lone hit to score Garrett.

Coke had already scored all it was to need, getting three in the third. Mike Smith singled and moved up on a passed ball. Richard Pace walked and a hit by Jimmy Smith scored Mike Smith. Aaron Smith singled, driving in Pace and Jimmy Smith.

The other run came in the fifth.

Mike Smith and Aaron Smith each had two hits to lead Coke.

Snow Hill Squeezes Past Wilson, 4-3

SNOW HILL — Snow Hill's American Legion baseball team got a game-winning hit from Allan Moore for the second straight game Friday night as it beat Wilson, 4-3.

The victory moved the Snow Hill record to 4-2, and tied it with Rocky Mount for second place in the Eastern Area I standings.

Wilson fell to 2-7 in the league with the loss.

Snow Hill opened the scoring in the fourth inning, getting a single run. Jay Carraway reached on an error and stole second. Another error on the throw-down moved him to third. Russell Brann then got the team's first hit of the game, a single off the pitcher's leg, scoring Carraway.

The second Snow Hill run came in the seventh. Carraway singled and moved to third when a pickoff attempt was errored. He scored when Bill Wilder grounded out.

Wilson, which had been hitless for the first five innings, came up with two in the eighth to tie the game. Robert Wells reached on a two-base error and was batted to third. He scored on Cary Griffin's sacrifice fly. Donnie Price then singled and Jeffrey Davis walked. A hit by Tony Pollock scored Prince.

Snow Hill came right back to move ahead again with one in the bottom of the eighth. Ronnie Chapman reached on an error and was sacrificed to second. A wild pitch put him on third and he scored when Mike Chase singled.

Wilson again tied it up with one in the top of the ninth. Les Renfrow walked and moved up on an out. He scored on Griffin's single.

The winning run came over for Snow Hill in the bottom of the ninth. With two outs, Collyn Beaman singled and Chapman followed with a hit. Moore then got his run-scoring, game-ending single to score Beaman with the winning run.

No one had more than one hit for either team.

After a game at Washington Saturday night, Snow Hill was to entertain Edenton this afternoon.

ROCKY MOUNT — Williamston pitcher Marty Evans threw a three-hitter as his team shut out Rocky Mount 5-0 in an Eastern Area I American Legion baseball game Friday night.

Williamston got on the scoreboard in the first inning when Trent Ange reached on a fielder's choice as Anthony Latham was thrown out, stole around to third and scored on an error on a rundown.

Four Williamston players came across in the fifth inning. Glenn Cargile and Hank Edwards singled, while Latham reached on an error to load the bases. Ange got a base hit to score Cargile and Charlie Smith's double plated Edwards and Latham. Cliff Keel hit a sacrifice fly to knock in Ange.

A COOPERATIVE RESEARCH project is underway on Lake Phelps to determine the effect of the installation of a fish ladder on the fish population in the lake. The research will assess the fish population before and after the installation of a fish ladder to allow river herring to enter the lake.

The project is part of a cooperative effort between the N. C. Wildlife Resources Commission, the N. C. Division of Marine Fisheries and the N. C. Division of Parks and Recreation and is designed to increase the forage base for game fish in Lake Phelps and to enhance the existing herring industry.

Lake Phelps, a 16,000 acre natural lake, is connected by canals to the Scuppernon River, which supports a large spawning run of river herring. By opening the lake to the herring, fisheries experts hope to increase the spawning habitat for the fish.

"Herring were once present in Lake Phelps; and with the installation of the fish ladder, they should return to the lake," according to Pete Kornegay, a Commission fisheries biologist. "This will not only help the commercial fishermen, but the herring should provide additional forage for largemouth bass, white perch and other predator fish in the lake."

The fish ladder will be built by the Division of Marine Fisheries in cooperation with the Division of State Parks, Kornegay said. It will be located on Bee Tree Canal at the entrance to the lake. The lake is a state park and the ladder will be built on state park land.

THE RESEARCH PROJECT, being conducted by Kornegay will assess the forage fish population in the lake before and after the installation of the ladder to determine its effect. "We will study the food habits of piscivorous (fish-eating) species, as well as growth rates of the principle game fish, namely largemouth bass, white perch and bluegill," Kornegay said.

To carry out this effort, Kornegay is using trawl nets at 20 sampling stations. He is also using electrofishing equipment to sample the population, as well as studying catches taken by anglers. He also said there is a possibility of some fish stockings on Lake Phelps to improve fishing there.

"If the forage base is adequate, we will consider stocking Lake Phelps with striped bass or a striped-white bass hybrid," Kornegay said that striped bass fry of about one inch in length were stocked in the lake once before, but apparently they didn't survive. He feels that by stocking larger fingerling size fish, two to three inches long, success should improve.

"It is hoped if the lake is stocked, it will provide a new facet of high-quality angling," Kornegay concluded.

Record Sum For Canada

The Ducks Unlimited Board of Trustees last month approved a record $11.1 million in Canadian money to be transferred to DU (Canada) for 1978. The funds will be used to tackle a total of 202 projects throughout Canada involving some 300,000 acres of critical wetland breeding habitat, one-third of which will be newly developed.

Also announced at the recent Ducks Unlimited International Convention in Winnipeg, Canada last month was the commitment of nearly $250,000 for the development of wintering waterfowl habitat in Mexico.

Allison Hangs On To Win Qualifier

CAMBRIDGE JUNCTION, Mich. (AP) — Pole position starter Bobby Allison, leading the last 30 miles, held on for victory, while Cale Yarborough's slingshot attempt fell a hood length short in Saturday's 100-mile qualification race for the 1978-79 International Race of Champions series.

Donnie Allison and Neil Bonnett each were less than a car length back in third and fourth, the only finishers in the field of eight who will advance to the final two races. Only .84 of a second separated first place from last at the checkered flag.

Those who failed to qualify were Benny Parsons, David Pearson, Dave Marcis and Darrell Waltrip. Waltrip, who crashed, was the only non-finisher.

"That was a real lucky lap, wasn't it?" said Bobby Allison of his sprint to victory. "I thought Cale ran a good race. He helped both of us, really, to stay up front. But I felt like I could beat him to the line if I had to."

"Actually it was more important to just be in the first four. I stayed there as long as I could."

Allison was near the front most of the race even though there were 30 unofficial lead changes in the 50-lap race around Michigan International Speedway's high-banked two-mile oval. Yarborough, however, fluctuated from front to back, and nearly was knocked out of the race when he and Waltrip touched wheels on the third lap.

Waltrip backed into the guard rail, heavily damaging his car.

That was the only serious mishap of the race, but as is the custom with the IROC racing in identically prepared Camaros, there was a lot of incidental fender banging.

Pearson lost his chance for the final two laps from the end when he and Marcis got together. Pearson saved his car from spinning out, but both drivers had to back off.

Bonnett and Donnie Allison traded hits twice in the last five laps battling for third.

Murray Night Like These Headaches

By JOHN NELSON
AP Sports Writer

Baltimore Orioles first baseman Eddie Murray is giving opposing pitchers headaches — granted. But now, he says, maybe he should be giving them to himself.

After he drove in four runs and scored three times with two home runs and a double Friday night, sparking Baltimore to a 6-0 victory over Oakland, Murray was a little short-tempered in the locker room.

He now has 13 homers and 39 runs batted in, leading the Orioles in both categories, and has hit five home runs in the past five games. He was asked to what he attributed his recent success.

"I'm seeing the ball, that's all," he snapped, then wandered away.

Later, he explained that he had had a headache since before the game started, adding wryly: "I think I'll arrange for a headache tomorrow."

Murray, last year's American League Rookie of the Year when he hit 283 with 27 homers and 88 RBI, got off to a slow start this season. He complained that he was seeing a lot more junk at the plate, and earlier in the year was waiting for the fastballs that never came.

Now, he said, he's being more aggressive, and it's paying off with seven home runs and 14 RBI in the past 12 games.

Dennis Martinez, 6-3, scattered nine hits for Baltimore for his first major league shut-out and only his second complete game in 16 starts.

"This is what I've been waiting for," said the 23-year-old right-hander. "We have the best starting four in the league, and they've been waiting for me."

In other American League games, Boston clobbered Seattle 6-3, California whipped New York 10-7, Minnesota downed Detroit 5-2, Kansas City nipped Chicago 2-1, Milwaukee got by Cleveland 8-6 in 10 innings and Toronto swept a pair from Texas, 8-3 and 5-2.

Martinez stranded three runners in scoring position through the first four innings and worked out of a no-out, bases-loaded jam in the sixth. Baltimore pitchers have now thrown 16 complete games and eight shutouts, including three in a row against Oakland.

The victory was the 16th in the past 18 games for Baltimore, which had a 13-game winning streak broken Thursday, and since May 20, the Orioles have gone 22-6.

Red Sox 6, Mariners 3
Fred Lynn drove in three runs, two with an eighth-inning, tie-breaking double, to lead Boston to its eighth straight victory and hand Seattle its ninth consecutive loss.

Red Sox starter Dennis Eckersley blanked the Mariners on two hits through seven innings before he yielded three unearned runs in the eighth. Bill Campbell, 4-4, got the victory in relief.

Boston scored twice in the second on Lynn's infield hit and a ground single by George Scott, and the Red Sox added unearned runs in the third and the eighth, capping a three-run inning.

Angels 10, Yankees 7
Don Baylor and Ron Fairly smacked homers on consecutive pitches off Andy Messersmith in California's five-run eighth inning, and the Angels withstood a six-run rally in the final two innings by New York.

Don Aase, 3-3, had a five-hitter through seven innings. Jim Spencer homered in the fifth for New York, which exploded for three runs apiece in the eighth and ninth innings.

Reggie Jackson, who had four hits, had a two-run triple in the eighth and an RBI single in the ninth.

Twins 5, Tigers 2
Minnesota left-hander Darrell Jackson, making his first major league appearance after only 10 games of Class AA experience, scattered seven hits in 7-1 innings to stop Detroit. The 22-year-old Jackson struck out seven, a season high for the Twins, and walked four before Mike Marshall relieved him.

Rod Carew went 2-for-5 and had a run-scoring double in the third, and Mike Cubbage and Bombo Rivera doubled home runs for Minnesota in the seventh.

Royals 2, White Sox 1
Rookie Clint Hurdle scored one run and singled home another as the Royals won their fourth straight and ended a five-game Chicago winning streak.

Larry Gura, 3-1, got the win with relief help from Doug Bird and Al Hrabosky, who got his eighth save. Wayne Nordhagen singled home Chicago's only run in the sixth.

Brewers 8, Indians 6
Robin Yount sacrificed home

one run and Charlie Moore singled in another in the top of the 10th inning to give Milwaukee its ninth straight victory. Bob McClure, 2-2, relieved Larry Sorensen in the ninth and got the win, and Bill Castro got his third save, pitching the 10th.

Milwaukee tied it 6-6 in the ninth on pinch-hitter Dave May's single after Buddy Bell's two-run homer in the eighth had sent Cleveland ahead. Johnny Grubb had a three-run homer for Cleveland, and Larry Hsieh and Gorman Thomas homered for Milwaukee.

Jays 8-5, Rangers 3-2
Toronto exploded for six runs in the ninth inning of the opener, sparked by consecutive doubles by Rico Carty and John Mayberry, and the Blue Jays jumped on Texas starter Roger Moret for four runs in the first two innings of the nightcap.

Tom Underwood, 3-7, was the winner in the first game after giving up just one run through seven innings, and Jesse Jefferson, 5-6, and Tom Murphy combined for a six-hitter in the second game.

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Green Speed pushed his lifetime earnings over the $800,000 mark Friday, winning the $35,000 invitational trot at the Meadowlands.

Green Speed, driven by Billy Haughton, finished the mile in 1:56.8 and returned $3.20, $3 and $2.80. Petite Evander, finishing three lengths behind, paid $7.20 and $4.60. Superlou paid $6.60 to show.

TOKYO (AP) — An American women's volleyball team visiting China defeated the Shensi team in Peking 3-2 Friday to post its first victory since arriving. The Hsinhua news agency said.

The set scores were 6-15, 15-17, 15-5, 15-12, 15-10.

The American women, now 1-1, were led by playmaker Debbie Green.

After losing the first two sets to the faster and more offensive-minded Chinese, the Americans turned the tide by tightening up defensively. They continually returned the Shensi team's smashes and blocked the net effectively.

Trouble In Paradise: Hawaii Cool To Immigrants

By JUNE WATANABE
Associated Press Writer
HONOLULU (AP) — "Aloha ka kuu. Komo mai."

"Welcome and come in." The words on the stately koa wood doors to the office of Hawaiian Gov. George Ariyoshi reflect the tradition of friendliness and hospitality of the 50th state.

But there is serious talk of extending that "aloha" only to free-spending tourists, not to new residents.

Ariyoshi's proposal to limit the population is reminiscent of the much-publicized stance taken in the early 1970s by former Oregon Gov. Tom McCall, who welcomed visitors so long as they didn't stay.

Talk of keeping out those seeking the sweeter life of the islands is ironic because Hawaii's economy depends on tourists, some 3 million annually who pump more than $1.5 billion into the state, and because many island residents trace their roots to immigrants only one or two generations removed.

But as more and more groves of coconut trees and fields of sugarcane give way to housing, as the hillsides are flattened and paved, as good jobs become scarce, the question for Hawaii is "What price aloha?"

Ariyoshi says to ensure that Hawaii will have enough jobs, enough housing, enough beaches to keep residents happy, the almost absolute freedom of Americans to travel between states will have to be lessened and the flow of immigrants dammed.

Ariyoshi, 52, is the nation's first Japanese-American governor. His father, a former sumo wrestler from Fukuoka, Japan, came to Hawaii during a period when immigrants were a welcomed labor force.

Now he says immigrants are the core of Hawaii's problems — primarily young marriageable Americans straining the education system and poor Asians burdening the welfare program. These are the costliest items in the state's budget.

Ariyoshi's solution is to halt the influx of new residents through laws requiring bona fide residency for state and county jobs and state unemployment programs, tightening liberal welfare programs, planning the orderly development of tourism and agriculture and discouraging urban encroachment of agricultural lands.

He has aroused protests of unconstitutionality, even racism, by suggesting special taxation of newcomers.

But Ariyoshi also has started debate on planning for Hawaii's future and has managed to get some of his proposals through the Legislature.

A bill was passed to prohibit welfare aid to able-bodied adults under the age of 55 without dependent children and to those who are not bona fide residents of the state. That will save the state more than $3 million annually and reduce general assistance rolls by more than 1,100.

Also approved were general residency requirements for those applying for state unemployment programs and studies on the impact of population growth and on ways to legally collect data on people entering and leaving the state.

Despite criticism that his is a "no growth" policy, Ariyoshi, a Democrat, emphasizes he is not anti-business or anti-growth.

He hopes that incentives for new industry and business to relocate in the "neighbor islands" will help disperse the heavy concentration of people on Oahu. The neighbor islands, lacking jobs and activities, have been losing young people to Oahu, the hub of Hawaii's governmental, social, cultural and recreational activities.

The aim, Ariyoshi says, is "to seek the kind of growth for our economy, in tourism, agriculture and other commerce which will not encourage immigration, but rather will provide jobs for our own people."

The state's economy is sluggish, with the sugar and pineapple companies slowly phasing out production and the booming real estate transactions of the late 1960s and early 1970s winding down.

Inflation is high, good jobs are scarce and housing is costly.

Even more staggering is Hawaii's population growth since it gained statehood in 1959. There were 622,000 residents then. Now nearly 895,000 people live on Hawaii's seven populated islands, meaning the nation's fourth smallest state in land area ranks 15th in population density.

What especially alarms Ariyoshi and many legislators is that this increase is not due to resident birth rates, but to immigrants from the other 49 states (about 40,000 annually since the early 1970s) and from Asia and the Pacific (now about 7,000 annually).

By the year 2000, Hawaii's population is expected to increase by 600,000 — 400,000 from the outside.

Ariyoshi was thwarted in one of his early efforts to control the state's growth. He persuaded the Legislature to pass a controversial one-year residency requirement for state and county jobs, which account for 12 percent of all jobs in the islands.

But U.S. District Judge Samuel P. King ruled the law unconstitutional.

Among Ariyoshi's most vocal critics is Honolulu Mayor Frank Fasi, Ariyoshi's strongest political rival. Fasi, 57, an also-ran in the 1974 Democratic gubernatorial primary, is branded the front-runner in this

Davis Heritage Is Not Always Easy

By TIM O'NEIL
Associated Press Writer
WOODVILLE, Miss. (AP) —Jefferson and Bertram Hayes-Davis, the great-great-grandsons of the Confederacy's only president, have not always been comfortable with their heritage. There were years when the two found Jefferson Davis' powerful legacy unsettling, if not downright burdensome. Their grandfather, Jefferson Hayes-Davis, spoke often of the Confederate cause. But the stories seemed distant to two boys who grew up 100 years later in Colorado Springs, Colo., far from the battlefields where blood was shed. They rebelled; Jeff, he says, by avoiding it and Bert by quitting studies at the University of Alabama. "Back in high school, I did things like play hockey. I was Bert," the younger brother said. "But when I moved South, a lot of people would say, 'This is Jeff Davis' great-great grandson.' They made a big deal of it. And they had it the other way around. I was Bert first."

"It was rammed down my throat. It was all I heard," Jeff said of his childhood. "But that has changed. It has become very important to me."

Now, the two are making a belated trek back to their heritage. Jefferson Hayes-Davis III, a 38-year-old accountant in San Francisco, has joined Confederate societies there and is working to get Davis' papers published. Bert, 28, will graduate from the University of Alabama this summer and plans to stay in the South by moving to New Orleans. Their commitment showed two weeks ago when both of them appeared here, for the first time together, at a reunion that attracted about 150 distant relatives to Jefferson Davis' boyhood home. Rosemont, a two-story white plantation home, was built in 1810, when Davis was 2 years old. He was the youngest of 10 children and his descendants are scattered throughout the South and as far away as California, Idaho and New

RARE FIND — This recently acquired portrait of an aging Jefferson Davis was made two years before his death in 1889. The owner, Michael Dayries Wynn of Lafayette, La., describes it as "an original, previously unknown and unpublished" photo discovered in a pile of papers in Chicago. (AP Laserphoto)

York. Davis and his wife, Varina, had six children, but only three reached adulthood and only one married. That child, Margaret, married Addison Hayes, a Memphis banker. Hayes moved his family to Colorado Springs when he contracted tuberculosis. Their son, Jefferson, got the Mississippi Legislature to change the name to Hayes-Davis, and the family has been in banking in Colorado under that name since. Davis' descendants vary widely in the degree of interest they take in their ancestor. Beulah Smith Watts, 84, of nearby St. Francisville, La., and Lena de Grummond of Hattiesburg take it very seriously indeed. The latter has written a book about Davis' youth. For other descendants, the heritage is just a genealogical enrichment or social feather in the cap. Many of the youngsters don't think much about it at all. But Jeff recounts a story that occurred in San Francisco that revealed for him the emotional strength of the heritage. "I was at a meeting of Confederate buffs and got into an argument with a descendent of Robert E. Lee. It got hot, and he said, 'Well, at least we didn't run,' a reference to Davis' evacuation of Richmond when the city fell to Gen. U.S. Grant in 1865. "I was furious," Jeff said. "Before I knew it, I burst out and shouted, 'But we didn't surrender the sword.'" "What do you do about that?"

CALL ME GRANDMA — Susie Gubatayao says to call her "grandma". The 99-year-old is the oldest living native Alaskan in the continental U.S. During the frontier era she had a grizzly as a pet and fondly recalls her youth on the Tlingit Indian hunting grounds. (AP Laserphoto)

Gang Crime, Vandalism In Old Glasgow

By ED BLANCHE
Associated Press Writer
GLASGOW, Scotland (AP) — Glasgow's young hoodlums, marauding gangs of deprived and despairing kids, with bizarre names like the "Baltic Fleet," the "Spur," and the "Shettleston Tiger," form a violent sub-culture in Britain's third largest city.

Their mindless vandalism costs hard-up Glasgow authorities at least five million pounds ($9.25 million) a year. And in a city with a critical housing problem, many people refuse to live in ground-floor apartments, because they're so vulnerable to the packs of vandalizing youngsters.

They're part of a Scottish crime wave spawned by the worst unemployment since the Depression, mounting alcoholism and other social ills that are most striking in the sprawling Strathclyde industrial belt around Glasgow.

The youngsters, some of them 10-year-olds, are the latest generation of gangs that have plagued Glasgow's slums and "new town" housing developments for decades.

This tradition of violence, fueled by the Scots' reputation as hard, suicidal drinkers, has run through life in Glasgow for the past 100 years and earned the port city the title of "cancer of the British empire."

"These kids are the inheritors of a century of gang warfare and the victims of today's urban poverty trap," an angry young welfare worker said.

In the tough districts of Barrowfield, Maryhill, Drumchapel and Easterhouse the gangs aerosol their names on the grimy walls of tenements and high-rise blocks to mark out their territories.

Rival gangs often fight pitched battles among the crumbling, graffiti-covered tenement blocks that still scar the city's notorious East End, described by planners as one of the most deprived areas in western Europe.

"The most disturbing aspect of the problem is the kids' casual approach to violence," a social worker said. "Carving up innocent passers-by for no reason at all doesn't bother them."

Police said they know of about 180 gangs in Strathclyde who fight with knives, razors, meat cleavers and even swords. Police have warned that some now pack shotguns.

Many gangs have their own junior league. The 10-year-olds start off in the "todder teams" and progress up through the "tiny teams" and the "young teams" to the "big teams."

Crime in Strathclyde, in which half of Scotland's five million population lives, has soared as the region suffered grievously in Britain's economic recession.

One worker in 11 is jobless. Scotland has 20 percent of Britain's under-18 unemployed.

Major efforts have been made in the past 25 years to erase the squalor that spawned the old gangs. Slum districts like the notorious Gorbals, once likened to New York's Hell's Kitchen, have been torn down.

But urban renewal has bogged down in administrative chaos and political squabbling. The unimaginative "new towns" on the city's outskirts, where whole slum communities were transplanted but given few social amenities, have become a breeding ground for the gangs.

Problem-plagued city authorities are reluctant to discuss the crime wave. The hard-pressed and undermanned police believe they are containing the problem through tough street action and patient community work.

But official statistics show Strathclyde's killing rate sometimes is as high as that in strife-torn Northern Ireland. In 1976, there were 71 murders in Glasgow compared to 48 the year before. Crimes of violence have risen more than 200 percent in the past 20 years.

Exercise Brain, She Says

By Patricia Moore

"This God-given brain of ours is something you need to exercise as much as your body." At least, that's what Maggie Stroud believes.

Through her shell and stamp collections, the 84 year old widow can still exercise her mind, thought a radical mastectomy, a shattered right shoulder, and automobile injury have curbed physical activity.

Simply accumulating objects is not her purpose, however. It is the thirst for knowledge that attracts her to her hobbies.

"You cannot be interested in something without wanting to know all about it," she says of her collectibles. "You go someplace, you see something you can add. When you get it home, it becomes not only a source of interest, but of entertainment and of education."

When she says "source of education," she means exactly that. Take her stamps, for example. They are not dead postage to her.

"My stamps are alive," Mrs. Stroud says. "I am a great lover of history. Every stamp that has been issued commemorates some historical event, or place or personage, and I like to develop this topical aspect."

Looking at a particular stamp, she asks herself, "Who is this man and that man?" She finds out by researching not only who the person was but what he contributed to history, how and why. "By the time I have correlated all this, I have learned a great deal," the Greenville widow says.

Obviously, the Bicentennial stamps were a "must" for her collection. She also has every stamp depicting the madonna the U. S. Postal Service has issued. Each stamp is a work of art, reproduced from an original design, often by a well known artist.

Since 1974, she has obtained first day covers with autographs from the governors of every state in union, except for Jerry Brown of California. "But I have Ronald Reagan," she counters. She also has first day covers from Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands and Guam.

She would be the first to admit that stamp collecting is not for everyone. "If you don't like history, you won't like stamp collecting unless you are in it for the money," she says.

If love of people and history attracts her to stamps, what, then, attracted her to the shells she gathered ardently for 20 years?

"They are God's creatures," she says. "I see God more in shells than in flowers. There is a sheer wonder of these little animals that live in the water and die and leave their skeletons—the shells."

Her interest in shells was kindled 36 years ago when she and her late husband, furniture dealer Lawrence Stroud, visited Melbourne Beach, Fla. While he sat, confined to a folding beach chair, she filled her time by picking up shells. It didn't take long for her to notice the variety lying on the beach and to wonder how many different kinds there might be.

She learned that building a respectable shell collection means buying and trading as well as finding your own specimen. "The choice shells are hard to come by," she explains. "Divers have to go way out into deep water to find them."

Her quest for shells led to some interesting friendships, such as one with the owner of a Key West, Fla., saloon. She called on him because she had heard about his extensive collection. Though he reacted to her initially with skepticism, he finally was convinced that she was a true sheller and he consented to show her his collection.

It was not easy to get to, Mrs. Stroud found. She and the collector spent hours climbing over boxes of liquor to get to boxes of shells. "He kept his choice shells and liquor in the same place," she recalls with a smile.

Years after her husband died, Mrs. Stroud began cataloging and numbering each of the shells she spent 20 years collecting. This process brought back the memories of how she obtained each shell, and looking at it, she can tell you the circumstances or the people associated with the "find."

She can tell you historically how various cultures have used shells and the folklore associated with them. She can tell you about the beautiful but deadly South Pacific cone shells that kill if touched in the wrong place. She can relate how the oyster drill penetrates a live oyster's shell like a machine until it reaches the animal inside and devours it. Though knowledge gained from her hobbies would put a Ph.D. to shame, Mrs. Stroud isn't ready to sit back and give her brain any rest.

Looking towards the future, she says, "I have so much yet to learn."

THE SPINY OYSTER SHELL... is one of Mrs. L. A. Stroud's choice specimen. Because it has so many projecting points, which are easily broken, a perfect one is a prize. (Photos by Patricia Moore)

Tea Party," which her grandson had framed for her.

DEDICATED CONCHOLOGISTS... obtain their shells from all over the world which means buying and trading as well as finding shells on a beach. The latter frequently are too worn by sand and surf to include in a collection. Some of Mrs. Stroud's shells are in a display case, shown here.

Agencies In Court Tiff Over Models' Contracts

By LeROY POPE
UPI Business Writer

NEW YORK (UPI) — A flock of lawsuits over the contracts of some of the nation's most glamorous high fashion models reveals that the business has grown up into fancy figures.

For decades, modeling was a vocation in which hundreds of girls and a few men made a bare living. There was a tiny corps of high fashion models and cover girls who might make $20,000 a year. There were only two important agents, John Robert Powers, who systematized the business and introduced sound training and marketing methods, and Harry Conover, who specialized in cover girls in an era when no editor would dare put anything on the outside of his magazine but an artist's portrait or an art photo of a beautiful girl.

Today, many models make $40,000 a year and do so for years. A fair number rather easily earn $2,000 a week and the bigger agencies have a few stars paying them commissions on fees of upwards of $200,000 a year.

The volume of the agency business in the United States runs between $35 million and $50 million a year and that doesn't include the pay of full time mannequins who work for clothing manufacturers and in the wholesale garment districts of New York, Los Angeles and a few other cities.

So, the business has plums worth fighting over and those plums are the subject of the recent lawsuits, all aimed at John Casablancas, the Johnny come lately from Paris whose Elite Model Management Corp., not yet two years old, has made some stinging inroads into the business of such top New York agencies as Ford Models, Inc., and Wilhelmina Models, Inc.

Ford is run by Eileen Ford and her husband, Gerard. "Jerry handles the money," Eileen said, "all I know about money is how to spend it and I'm remarkably good at that."

Wilhelmina is run by Wilhelmina Cooper, who used to be a model herself. Wilhelmina also is married to her business manager, Bruce Cooper, a once and perhaps future TV personality.

Eileen and Jerry Ford started the legal battle a year ago with a suit accusing John Casablancas of tampering with their models when Casablancas opened the new New York branch of his Paris-based agency. The suit was handled by Roy Cohn, one of New York's more flamboyant lawyers, and when a state supreme court judge ordered Cohn to refile it because of a technical error, Casablancas assumed the suit was dismissed and put out a news release to that effect.

Meanwhile, Charles Haydon, lawyer for Wilhelmina, filed three suits against Casablancas charging Elite with stealing five of her best models including Iman, a statuesque Arican girl from Kenya with a most un-African ponytail and features remarkably like those of Egypt's queen Nefertiti. A story had been put out that the 22-year-old Iman had been discovered herding cattle in a remote Kenya bush area. Testimony in court showed, though, that she is the well educated daughter of one of the managers of the Nairobi Hilton hotel. Wilhelmina was granted an injunction to stop Iman from working for Casablancas or anybody but her, but meanwhile Iman announced she is now five months pregnant and that by the time the baby arrives, her contract with Wilhelmina will have expired.

Among the other top models Wilhelmina accuses Casablancas of luring away are Dottie Sowell and Leslie Klatt and a male model, Matt Collins.

Casablancas, who stirred up this hornet's nest, is a handsome dark-haired Catalan, still in his thirties, with quite a background. His father was a successful banker in Barcelona who fled Spain because he was politically opposed to General Franco. The Casablancas family moved around a lot, living in Argentina, Mexico, Switzerland and the United States. John Casablancas is an American citizen.

Despite his youth he has held some important jobs. He was a marketing executive for Coca-Cola in Brazil, for example, and was traveling public relations man for a big architectural and engineering firm based in Barcelona.

He got into the modelling business by falling in love with a young Parisian model who felt the agency she was working with wasn't doing a good job.

"The modelling business fascinated me, so I decided to go in it myself," he explains. His agency was an immediate success but came a cropper when the French government proclaimed a new law requiring agencies to pay models up front, as is the custom in the United States, instead of waiting to collect from the clients. "I approved of that but I wasn't financed for it, so I had to shut down until I could find partners with adequate funds," he explained.

He then built his agency very rapidly into international prominence by going after only the cream of the business and the cream of the talent.

Since invading New York, he has gathered about 110 models on each side of the Atlantic. He expects the New York office to gross $5 million this year, which will give it about half the $10 million the Fords gross. Jerry Ford confirmed the $10 million figure for his agency. Bruce Cooper said Wilhelmina should gross about $8 million this year.

Casablancas and Bruce Cooper put the same estimate on the volume of the model business in the United States — $50 million, $30 million of it in New York City alone. Jerry Ford was more conservative, $25 million for New York and under $40 million for the country as a whole.

Los Angeles and Chicago are the other major American modeling centers but Houston, Dallas, Phoenix, San Francisco, Boston and Philadelphia have some. Worldwide, Paris is second to New York as a modeling center with London, Milan, Hamburg and Tokyo also important.

Television has produced one of the biggest changes in the business. Women and men who model fashion garments, costume jewelry and cosmetics or pose with a vast range of products from automobiles to detergents have to be able to speak and gesture and move dramatically and to project an appealing personality. This also brings them under the jurisdiction of either the American Federation of Television and Radio Artists or the Screen Actors Guild. That means division of responsibility and fees between the model agents and dramatic talent agents. But the fees for appearing in TV commercials are much fatter

Engagements Announced

MISS NANCY KAY GORDON... is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William T. Gordon of Ayden, who announce her engagement to Michael Gerald Letchworth, son of Mrs. Lyman R. Letchworth of Winterville, and the late Mr. Letchworth. The wedding will take place Aug. 20.

MISS BRENDA SUE LEWIS... is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Mack Gilbert Lewis of Rt. 6, Greenville, who announce her engagement to Herbert Roy Brown Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Roy Brown Sr. of Bethel. The wedding will take place Aug. 26.

Miss Jo Ann Eastwood Weds On Friday

Miss Jo Ann Eastwood became the bride of Micheal Gilbert Lewis Friday in a 7 p.m. double ring ceremony. John Williams performed the ceremony held in the Kings Cross Roads Free Will Baptist Church.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James E. Eastwood of Rt. 4, Greenville. She is presently employed with Hollowells Drug Store and is a graduate of North Pitt High School. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Mack Gilbert Lewis of Rt. 6, Greenville. He is engaged in farming with his father and is also a graduate of North Pitt High School.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a formal length gown of white silkened organza over white peau de soie, designed with a high neckline of rashaal lace. A yoke on the bodice was styled with rows of lace and pearls. The entire yoke was outlined in ruffled rashaal. The shepherdess sleeves were enhanced by lace at the top with the fullness applied in Venice lace motifs, beaded with pearls.

The modified A-line skirt and attached chapel length train were complemented by a deep ruffled flounce of rashaal lace at the hemline. Appliques of Venice lace beaded with pearls were scattered over the skirt and train.

She wore a three tiered illusion veil edged in rashaal lace held in place by a Camelot cap overlaid in matching lace beaded with pearls. She carried yellow roses and greenery with satin streamers on a lace covered Bible.

Debbie Eastwood of Greenville, sister of the bride, was maid of honor. She wore a formal gown of shrimp knit designed with an open V-neckline, gathered empire bodice and a full, circular skirt. The sleeveless gown was complemented by a walking-length floral drape of contrasting colors in shrimp, ginger, gold and white. She carried a nosegay of mixed summer flowers.

Bridesmaids were Donna McLawhorn, cousin of the bride, Lynn Gray, Tammy Peaden, all of Greenville, and Robin Eastwood of Farmville, cousin of the bride. They wore gowns and carried flowers identical to that of the maid of honors.

Angela Manning of Greenville, niece of the bridegroom, served as flower girl. She wore a gown similar to the other attendants and carried a basket of mixed summer flowers.

The father of the bridegroom served as best man. Ushers were Jerry and James Lewis, brothers of the bridegroom, Bobby Manning, brother-in-law of the bridegroom, and James Eastwood Jr., brother of the bride, all of Greenville.

The mother of the bride chose a formal gown of light blue knit. The mother of the bridegroom chose a formal length gown of blue knit designed with chiffon rippled sleeves. Both mothers were remembered with a corsage of baby red roses.

Nuptial music was provided by organist Terry Nelson of Greenville, and soloist Patsy Manning of Greenville, sister of the bridegroom. Vocal selections included "If" and "Wedding Prayer."

Following the ceremony, a reception was given by the parents of the bride at the church. Assisting at the reception were friends and relatives of the bride. Following a wedding trip to unannounced points, the couple will reside at Rt. 6, Greenville. Pre-nuptial events included an after-rehearsal party honoring the bride couple, wedding guests and special guests, given by the bridegroom's parents. Two bridal showers were given. One was held at the home of Mrs. Bobby T. Manning, given by friends and relatives of the bridegroom, and the other was held at Kings Cross Roads Free Will Baptist Church, given by friends and relatives of the bride.

But A Rose Is Still A Rose

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1978 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY:

Remember when "hippie" meant "big in the hips"? And a "trip" involved travel in cars, planes and ships? When "pot" was a vessel for cooking things in, and "hooked" was what grandmother's rugs would have been?

When "fix" was a verb that meant "mend" or "repair," And to be "in" meant merely existing somewhere? When "neat" meant "well-organized, tidy and clean," And "grass" was a ground cover—normally green? When "groovy" meant furrowed with channels and hollows, And "birds" were winged creatures like robins and swallows?

When "fuzz" was a substance real fluffy—like lint, And "bread" came from bakeries—not from the mint? When "roll" was a bun, and "rock" was a stone, And "hangup" was something you did with a phone? When lights (not people) were turned on and off, And "the pill" was something you took for a cough? And a "swinger" was someone who swung in a swing, And a "pad" was a soft sort of cushiony thing? When "far out" meant distance—a long way away, And no one thought twice when you said they were "gay"?

Very truly yours,
LAKE CHARLES, LA., READER

DEAR ABBY: With all this hullabaloo about Women's Lib and Equal Rights, I don't see why women should expect special privileges they aren't willing to give men. Example:

At the office where I am employed as a male among several females, one of the women frequently pats me on my stomach area. Although I am not fat, I do have a moderate protrusion in the mid-section. Now, Abby, if she feels free to pat me on my protrusion, why am I not equally free to pat her on HER protrusions?

BLACK MOUNTAIN, N.C.

DEAR BLACK MOUNTAIN: Regardless of how "free" she feels to pat you on your protrusion, she should keep her hands to herself. And so should you!

DEAR ABBY: There is a new assistant clergyman at our church who is very well liked by everyone—especially the young people. I was shocked and disappointed last Sunday to see him standing out in front of the church after services smoking a cigarette.

This bothered me so much that I wrote him a note telling him I thought he was setting a bad example for the young people, and if he had to have a smoke, he should at least wait until he could do it behind closed doors. He telephoned me and told me that he wasn't "proud" of his smoking habit, but he had it bad, and he would be more ashamed sneaking a smoke in private than smoking in public. What is your opinion?

OPPOSED TO SMOKING

DEAR OPPOSED: I admire the young clergyman's honesty, but I deplore his weakness. Pray that his future doesn't go up in smoke.

NEW YORK (UPI) — Barbecue manufacturers predict at least a 20 percent increase in unit sales this year over last. "HFD Retailing Home Furnishings" says gas grills and all types of middle range barbecues are expected to account for much of the dollar increase. It said most of the business is expected to be in step-up, replacement models.

Couple Weds In High Noon Ceremony

The long sleeves ended in points over the wrists and were fastened with satin covered buttons, which were also used down the back of the bodice. The bride wore an heirloom emerald locket worn by her mother at her wedding. The locket was the bride's maternal great-grandmother's. A cathedral length veil of imported French illusion was tucked in the bride's hair and surrounded by baby's breath. She carried long-stemmed calla lilies.

Mary Lorah and Martha Brockington Gibson, sisters of the bride of Sanford, served as maids of honors. They chose long seafoam colored gowns with blouson bodices and draped scarfs. Both attendants carried mixed summer flowers with interspersed greenery.

Their gowns and flowers were identical to those of the honor attendants.

Honorary bridesmaids were Miss Dena Gail Lewis, sister of the bridegroom of Farmville, Miss Julia Smith Joyner, cousin of the bride of Greenville, Mrs. Thomas Frank Styers of Farmville and Mrs. Eugene Gardner Chewing of Greenville. They

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

In noting that today is Father's Day, my husband wondered why they devote seven days to National Pickle Week and only one to the observance of fathers.

I told him if fathers could add zest to a meal, retain a good color when pickled and improve with age, they'd get a week too. To make the most of these few hours, I should like to pay tribute today to the father of my three children.

As an equal opportunity parent, I used to stress his authority by telling the children, "Wait till your father gets home and you'll get what-for," but he worked late and by the time he got there, their what-for was fast asleep.

He rarely tossed a football with them because they played better ball than he did—even at the age of six.

He never wrestled with them, crawled around under their cars, or helped them build a tree house in the backyard because he slipped a disc loading "their" garbage cans on a truck one night and figured children could than most other kinds of advertising.

Another big change is that photography has captured nearly all magazine editorial and advertising illustration and much catalogue illustration from the artist who draws and paints. This greatly increased the demand of the advertising business for live models and made it possible to raise the hourly fees of good models.

Newspaper advertising, on the other hand, still sticks to artists' drawn and painted illustrations done from imagination and with the use of the ideal beauty standards worked out by ancient Greek artists 2,500 years ago, because it's a lot cheaper than photography with live models.

The shift to photography and live models for high fashion advertising hasn't changed the ancient Greek standards. Girls and men who want to do this kind of modeling or who want to display garments at fashion shows in the most sophisticated stores simply must have the physical measurements demanded by Phidias and Praxiteles in ancient Athens.

Casablanca also said the model agency business still is plagued by the activities of some shady small agents who are using it as a cover for recruiting people to appear in pornographic films and photos, or as call girls. He said young people interested in modeling should be extremely careful in selecting agents to approach.

Engagement Announced

Mrs. Robert Silas Weeks of Bethel announces the engagement of her daughter, Deborah Staton, to William Robert Pinner of Greenville, son of Mrs. Joe Pinner of Crestview, Fla., and the late Mr. Pinner. The bride-elect is the daughter of the late Mr. Weeks. The wedding will take place June 30.

Big No-No's For Sporty Types

It matters not whether you win or lose — but how you dress or don't dress, for your favorite sport.

The June edition of "Redbook" magazine has these tips to offer:

Tennis — Two big no-no's are black tennis shoes and racket presses. "Haven't you ever watched the way we carry our rackets?" asks Billie Jean King. "We carry them under our arms, with the covers on but no racket presses. They're not useful — and they have no class."

Golf — Don't wear alligator shoes and a fancy country-club symbol on your shirt.

Don't carry a bag with your name on it.

Swimming — Wear a one-piece racing suit, just like the pros. (Real swimmers can't chance losing part of a bikini.)

Cycling — White an'lets, believe it or not, and black cycling shoes and shorts are de rigueur.

Running — A Pierre Cardin sweat suit is good for openers, but it must look like "salty." And, the experts say, put petroleum jelly between your thighs to prevent chafing, and gauze bandages on your nipples to prevent friction.

On The Local Scene

by Rosalie Trotman

"The glamour that one sees is from the audience only. In my opinion, the rest is hard work. The people who are stars worked to get there," said Conwell Worthington of New York City. Worthington is a stage manager-production supervisor for the Music Fair Office and Theatre.

He is currently working at the Uris Theatre where "The King and I" is playing. Two of the stars of the show are Yul Brynner and Constance Towers.

"I am responsible for all the artistic elements of the show including technical aspects, actors and actresses. When the show is first put together, the director explains to the actors what he wants them to do and they in turn follow his directions. Also during this period of time, the director meets with stage managers, lighting designer, scenic designer, sound engineer, costume designer and property designer. In this meeting, the director tells what he wants from all departments and in turn the stage managers see that everything is carried out accordingly.

"Once the show opens the stage manager is then responsible for the elements remaining as the director left them — for instance, that the light cues remain the same, that scenery shifts smoothly and stays in repair and that the actor does exactly as he was told to do and not try to improve on his role. In a nutshell, we are totally responsible for everything — musicians, stage hands, electricians, property men, wardrobe and the health and well-being of the actors. We do nothing physically, mentally everything. We are responsible for a multi-million dollar production," said Worthington.

"When I do production supervisory work, I do all the above plus hire an entire staff which includes all types of crews and the artistic staff and secure leading names to appear in the show. I do the structure of the entire program from the opening number, including musical numbers, dialogue and closing," he added. His most recent show of this type was a testimonial dinner for Walter Cronkite at the Waldorf Astoria which featured such names as Carol Channing, Danny Kaye, Ertha Kitt and

Day Camp Is For Learning

NEW YORK (UPI) — Summer day camp should be more than a holding pattern for children until school starts again in the fall.

It should teach children new skills in arts, crafts and sports, and culturally through field trips, says Dr. Reinaldo A. Ferrer, health commissioner for New York City.

The health department's Bureau for Day Camps and Recreation suggests using these criteria in choosing a camp:

- A camp director with a college degree or its equivalent and a sound background in camping;
- Counselors aged 18 or over and well-trained;
- No more than nine children per counselor in a group of 6-8-year-olds and no more than 12 in groups of 12 years and up;
- A nurse on the staff if the camp enrollment is over 100, and a written arrangement with a hospital, clinic or private physician to treat child campers in emergencies;
- Meals should be nutritious and food handling practices should meet city health code requirements.

Casino Gambling Has A Foe In Florida Governor

By BARBARA FRYE

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (UPI) — Lame duck Florida Gov. Reubin Askew, who expects to go on to foreign affairs missions for President Carter, wants to keep casino gambling out of Florida as the "last hurrah" of his administration.

In the twilight of his elected political life, he also has taken on a battle to abolish the popular elected cabinet system which has served the state for nearly a century and to give Florida an all-powerful governor.

"It's going to be a busy fall," he said in an interview, scoffing at reports he's bored and plans to sit out the last seven months of his eight-year administration.

A non-drinking, non-smoking, non-cussing Presbyterian elder who turns 50 in September, Askew considers casino gambling an evil that must be kept out at any cost. He calls it his number one priority.

A well-heeled campaign, supported by some of the people who got casinos approved for Atlantic City, is underway to bypass the legislature and put the issue to the people in November, confining the casinos to Miami Beach.

"I can't think of anything more counter-productive to the Florida economy and future as an international trade and financial center than casino gambling," he said.

"If we can kill it this time, it should end it," Askew said. He is convinced gambling will bring organized crime figures en masse to Florida, driving out legitimate businesses.

The symbol of the "antis" is an Xed-out red rosebud, similar to one Marlon Brando wore as the mob chief in The Godfather.

After his successor is seated, Askew plans to go back to being an attorney, probably with a large Miami firm practicing international law. He has been offered a cabinet post in Washington. As chairman of the committee that helps Carter select foreign ambassadors, Askew said he's sure he could qualify for such a job, but is not interested. He would prefer, instead, to do special missions overseas for the government on a non-paying basis.

Askew has led three trade missions to Europe and Japan, served as chairman of the Southern and National Governor's Conference and delivered the keynote address to the 1972 Democratic Convention.

In Japan, he sneaked away from a $72 a plate fancy luncheon and opened a package of instant grits and mushroom soup for a hotel room meal.

One of the new breed southern governors, he supported George McGovern in 1972 when Florida wanted Richard Nixon, and Sen. Henry Jackson in 1976 when Florida expressed a preference for Jimmy Carter. He switched to Carter and campaigned for him when Jackson gave up. He and Carter since have become fast friends.

His immediate need, he said, is to earn a good salary, make some good investments and build a modest fortune. He's been in government for two decades, most of it as a state legislator and is so fearful of a conflict that he would not even buy bank stock or real estate.

He doesn't own a home, furniture or a car. His total assets amount to about $100,000, most of it in cash and insurance. Daughter Angela, 17, will graduate from high school in January and wants to go to college and son Kevin is 15.

Askew and his wife, Donna Lou, who attends religion classes at Florida State University, are very private people. They shy away from parties, junkets and other fringe benefits of the office.

They are, say friends who mean it as a compliment, supersquares.

Mrs. Askew would like 'Rube' to be president of a small university or religious college. She hates the limelight and never wanted him in politics. Their entertaining is mostly back yard hamburger cookouts and small dinners for their minister and church friends.

Askew schedules regular time with Donna Lou and the children, accompanies Angela to horse shows and girl scouts, bowls with Kevin and works on scout projects.

He had to send a substitute to make an education speech for him once because he was tied up with Kevin making a toothpick replica for scouts of an ice machine. It took 30 hours and won a prize.

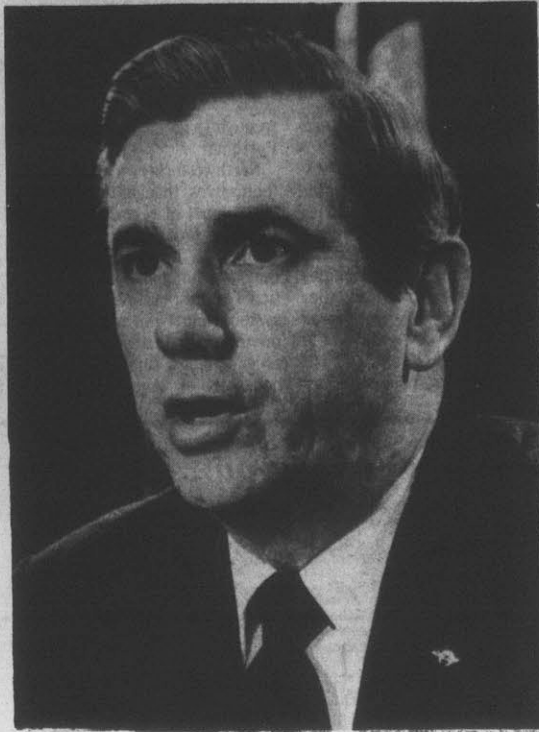

"Thanks to Donna Lou, we lead a fairly normal life in the mansion," he said. They vacation in the mountain hideaway of the governor of North Carolina, swim and play tennis on the mansion pool and courts.

The 6 foot 2 1/2 inch, 192 pound Askew, who has a bad back from his days as a paratrooper in the Korean War, does deep knee bends and pushups before breakfast and often walks the six blocks to work.

He seldom goes to bed before midnight. He takes work home and his favorite television programs are The Waltons, Grizzly Adams and Police Story.

He has become virtually inaccessible to the press, holding only three to four formal news conferences a year. But reporters can grab him at the biweekly cabinet meetings and he pitches when the governor's office plays the press in an annual softball game.

GOV. REUBIN ASKEW, of Florida, considers casino gambling an evil that must be kept out of Florida. (UPI Photo)

Northwestern States Do Not Want Any Settlers

EDITOR'S NOTE — There's a lot of rain. There's a lot of suicides and alcoholism. Property doesn't come cheap. Who'd want to live in a place like that? The folks already there. And they hope that by telling you the perils of their paradise, you'll stay away.

By MARY KOCH
Associated Press Writer
SEATTLE (AP) — The folks who live in the Pacific Northwest would rather you didn't. Visit, yes. Settle down, no. So the kind of national publicity that would be welcomed in most states only depresses them.

They've had much grounds for depression lately. An article in Atlantic magazine described the region as "God's country" and proceeded to prove it.

The shock hadn't worn off in the couple of years since then when Washington's governor, Dixy Lee Ray, made the cover of Time magazine last December. And Town and Country wrote glowingly about Seattle, the "all-American city" everybody dreams about and almost nobody finds.

If those glowing media references keep up, more and more people will be looking, and that's what bothers the people who are already there.

They especially fear what they call "Californication" — urban sprawl.

"Oregonians are paranoid about Californians moving in and Californication Oregon," Oregon Secretary of State Norma Paulus quipped recently. "I thought about getting unemployed people in Oregon together and we'd go to Southern Oregon and throw rocks at the Californians moving in. But I found that most of the unemployed were ex-Californians and they might be afraid of hitting a relative."

Oregon's Motor Vehicle Division counted 31,991 black and gold California license plates exchanged last year for Oregon's yellow and blue.

In Idaho, where Sun Valley is developing into a second Palm Springs with a 38 percent population growth each year, state studies show that one in 10 immigrants comes from California.

Idaho, the most sparsely populated of the three corner states, has yet to develop the strong anti-growth philosophy rampant in Oregon and Washington.

Former Oregon Gov. Tom McCall was a pioneer in an unabashed, visit-but-don't-stay inhospitality movement. The three states are proposing to spend $463,000 in federal money during fiscal 1978-79 for a combined program to lure tourists to the Pacific Northwest.

On the other hand, Seattle Post-Intelligencer columnist Emmett Watson urges readers to, "fight 'em off, do your part" by advertising the region's persistent "keep-em-away rain."

Though national publications began ballyhooing the Northwest in 1975, 1977 was the big publicity year, prompting Seattle Mayor Charles Royer to fret publicly about a magazine-cover jinx.

New West magazine, for example, declared Seattle the best big city in the West during 1977. Time's cover story said Seattle "has none of the hassles and almost all of the amenities of many bigger American cities ... Seattle is a city that works ... and works very well."

Seattle doesn't always win the nicest-city honors. They frequently go 185 miles south to Portland.

Northwesterners can console themselves, though, that not every snippet of reporting on the region is laudatory.

The Wall Street Journal noted that Washington has the nation's "most regressive" tax system, and Town and Country mentioned that Seattle has the second-highest suicide and alcoholism rates. And newspapers delighted in quoting Oregon's Mrs. Paulus, who said, "As for Idahoans, I didn't think they had anything anybody wanted."

And the Los Angeles Times, in an article on Seattle "immigrants" a while ago, came up with an advertising executive who wished he'd stayed in New York.

"Seattle is like a beautiful, completely empty-headed girl," the Times quoted him. "New York is like being with the most exciting girl in the whole world. Unfortunately, she doesn't bathe ... You find yourself wishing you were back with the exciting girl ..."

Again Offer Scuba Class

ECU News Bureau
The popular non-credit evening course in scuba diving offered by East Carolina University will be repeated this summer, on Tuesdays and Thursdays, July 6-August 1, 7-10 p.m.

Students will be trained to react favorably to both normal and adverse conditions on the surface and under water. All class dives will take place in the Minges diving tank except for three additional open-water checks to be held at a coastal location after the eighth class session.

These deep dive checks are generally held off Radio Island, Morehead City.

Each student must supply flippers, mask and snorkel, and all other equipment, including air, may be rented by arrangement with instructor Robert Eastep.

Further information about the course is available from the office of Non-Credit Programs, Division of Continuing Education East Carolina University, Greenville, telephone 757-6143.

Take The Good With The Bad

SAN JUAN (UPI) — There is good news and bad news about rum. First, the good news. Manufacturers of rum on the Caribbean islands have learned to cope with the poor quality of their water.

Water is important in rum. Even 90 proof rum contains more than half water, and the water must be clear, soft, and contain no iron or chlorine. The manufacturers have achieved that by using advanced water treatment techniques, reports the Water Quality Association.

Now for the bad news. Having achieved high quality water, rum manufacturers don't know what to do with the impurities they extract in their purification processes. Once they might have dumped them in the ocean. Today, that is called pollution.

OIL EXPLORATION
LAGOS, Nigeria (AP) — Romania will help explore for Nigerian oil, and 300 Polish technical experts will work here under agreements signed during Lt. Gen. Olusegun Obasanjo's recent visit to Eastern Europe, the government has announced.

Sexual Revolution Ran Into Limits From Society

By JOHN BARBOUR
AP Newsfeatures Writer
BLOOMINGTON, Ind. (AP) — Thirty years ago in this quiet college town, America took its first bite of the apple — and lost its sexual innocence.

But a new report from Alfred Kinsey's Institute For Sex Research, due this year, indicates that some conservative bells are sounding in the American mind.

There will be continued openness in sexual discussion. The divorce rate will climb. There will be more premarital sex, until perhaps nine out of 10 will enter marriage no longer virgin.

Yet there is a strong vein of conservatism underlying all of this, says Dr. Paul Gebhard, the scholarly 60-year-old director of the institute, who has been engaged in sex research since 1946.

"We asked how they (Americans) felt about different varieties of sexual behavior, and we discovered that the great majority are against extra-marital intercourse. They are strongly down on prostitution. They violently disapprove of homosexuality."

Some of this is disguised, Americans questioned by the institute agree that homosexuals should have jobs. But what kind of jobs? They may be musicians, actors, florists, interior decorators — but not judges, public officials, policemen, physicians, teachers.

Marriage and the nuclear family are not threatened, but Gebhard says: "I think society will be much more tolerant about living arrangements than they are now. Our present living-together phenomenon is for all practical purposes accepted. Who knows? Maybe even the government will accept it and allow unmarried couples to file joint tax returns."

"Most of the young people living together have ended up getting married. I've asked them why, and it's funny because they can't give you any really rational reason. They both continue working. Everything is exactly the same, except they've gotten married."

The institute itself has hit some bad times which have made it more difficult to produce its reports. The current study, for instance, was started in 1970. The staff numbers only 25, and most of that is help from Indiana University students.

The first Kinsey report 30 years ago unhinged the American mind with such underground facts as one in three American males has at least one homosexual experience to orgasm, half of the females interviewed had premarital intercourse, one in 10 married women never had an orgasm even after 15 years of marriage.

From that year on, like a genie let out of the bottle, sex seemed to rise to any whim — something old, something new, something borrowed, something blue.

Kinsey didn't start it. Sexual habits had been getting more liberal for years. But his reports revealed the gap between the way Americans talked about sex and the way they practiced it.

What astonished Gebhard was "the rapidity with which censorship just collapsed."

There were deep forces at work on the nation's sexual consciousness, Gebhard explains. There was an increasing demand for personal freedom. There was the continuing emancipation of women demanding to be treated like human beings who had their own sexual needs and rights. There was the waning power of conventional religion with its requirement of blind, fundamentalist faith.

Offers Law School Test

ECU News Bureau
The Law School Admission Test, required of candidates for admission to most American law schools, will be given at East Carolina University Oct. 14, 1978; Dec. 2, 1978; Feb. 3, 1979; April 21, 1979 and June 23, 1979.

The test, administered by the Educational Testing Service under the policy direction of the Law School Admission Council, was taken last year by more than 130,000 persons whose scores were sent to 200 law schools.

Since many law schools select their first-year classes in the spring preceding entrance, candidates for admission to next year's classes are advised to take the test in October or December.

Further information about the test and test registration materials are available from the ECU Testing Center, 105 Speight Building, or directly from Law School Admission Services, Box 944, Princeton, N.J. 08541.

Buying Tips On Choosing RV

GOSHEN, Ind. (UPI) — If a recreational vehicle is on your shopping list, a Goshen manufacturer says there are advantages to both campers and travel trailers.

A camper, low in height and lightweight, is easy to tow and store, can be pulled with a small car, even a compact, and consequently is a fuel saver, the manufacturer says.

But a travel trailer is ready to use at all times. It needs no setting up, has better insulation for cold weather trips, built-in cooking, refrigeration and water heating equipment and needs no electric or water hook-up.

Mini-motorhomes combine some advantages of travel trailers with the convenience of a self-powered or motorized RV.

A more extensive guide to choosing an RV is 25 cents from Starcraft Co., 2703 College Ave., Goshen, Ind. 46536.

Worthington works most days from 8:30 to 1 a.m. doing several shows at once. His wife, Millie, works five days a week as administrative assistant for the New Jersey School of Ballet. "Due to our working schedules, we treasure our time together — Sunday nights are special in that we are together to stay at home," he said.

He has worked as production manager in shows starring Gloria Swanson, Robert Horton, Bernadette Peters, Betsy Palmer, Shelly Winters, Milton Berle, Douglas Fairbanks Jr., Dennis Day, Gig Young, Mickey Rooney and Ann Miller, to name a few.

He attended East Carolina University, majoring in music. "After my third year, I discovered that I was happiest in drama with management. After many discussions with Edgar Loessin, department chairman, and prayer I changed to drama. This was a very trying period because of the uncertainty of the field. During my two and a half years, I stage managed 13 Playhouse productions, one season in Summer Theatre as assistant stage manager and two seasons as production stage manager," he recalled. Upon graduation, he had secured his first job in New York at the Paper Mill Playhouse.

His mother is Mrs. Cassie Worthington of near Greenville.

"In the near future, I plan to move more in television and eventually devote all of my time in the field and then produce. The only thing bad about my work is that it takes me away from my family in North Carolina," he said.

Cut Oil Shipping Cost By Guatemala Pipeline

By RAUL GONZALEZ

GUATEMALA CITY (UPI) — Guatemala may someday become a land bridge for transporting Alaskan oil from the Pacific to the Atlantic Coast, where U.S. refining facilities are more adequate to handle it.

The government is considering two projects for an oil pipeline to carry Alaskan crude — one submitted by the U.S. company Intermare, and another by the Guatemalan state railway, Fegua.

Both projects envision a pipeline that would move Alaskan oil from the Pacific, where there is an oversupply of petroleum, to the Caribbean for transshipment to the larger refineries on the U.S. East Coast.

The Intermare plan foresees a 237 mile, 36 inch pipeline that would run from a port near San Jose on the Pacific to Santo Tomas de Castilla on the Caribbean, at a total cost of $600-800 million.

With supertanker and storage facilities at both ends, the cost of transporting a barrel of oil from Valdez, Alaska to Houston, Texas, would be $1.83 — more than 17 cents less than the cost of shipping it through the Panama Canal.

Fegua's project is more economical, costing $550 million to $600 million. The Fegua pipeline would run along the railway from San Jose to Puerto Barrios, a distance of 273 miles.

The railway company owns port facilities in San Jose, and no land purchases or building of access roads would be necessary under the Fegua scheme. But the Fegua project would require more pumping stations and be built at a higher altitude than the Intermare line.

Both pipelines would have a capacity of about 1-1.5 million barrels a day.

Nothing is likely to be decided, however, before the inauguration of President-elect Romeo Lucas Garcia July 1.

Another pipeline — this one to move Guatemala oil from fields in the north of the country to the Caribbean coast — was recently approved by the economy minister. This line will be built by Shenandoah Oil, which has been exploring and pumping oil in the area of Rubelsanto and Chinaja. The wells struck there have an estimated potential production capacity of 8,000 barrels a day.

The 10-inch line will run from the oilfields to Puerto Barrios, at a cost of $25.5 million. About 75 percent of the financing will come from a French banking consortium and the rest from a eurodollar loan.

LIVING ROOM OVERLOOKS PRIVATE GARDEN

RANCH STYLE HOME OFFERS SPACE, EXTRAS

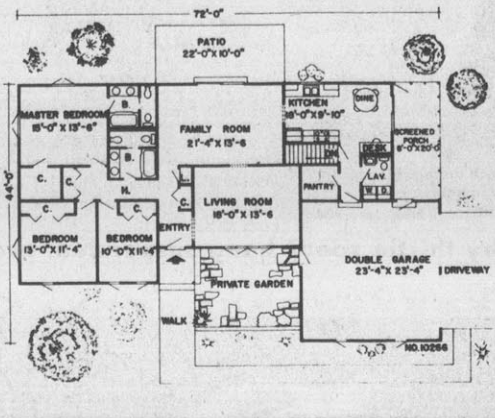

By Jerry Bishop
Formal and informal living areas are each given maximum attention in the Wincasset, a three bedroom ranch style. For the formal occasions, the living room is zoned for quiet and favored with a view of the private garden, while for more casual moments, the plan offers a family room, patio, screened porch, and eat-in kitchen. Vertical siding layers the exterior, and careful planning sets the garage doors to the side to maintain the clean lines. The foyer, lined with two closets, allows guests direct entry to the 18-ft. living room where a series of windows look out over the front garden. Beyond the living room, the family room answers the needs of an active family with more than 21 ft. in length. A sliding glass door enlarges the living area to the patio at rear. The kitchen complex combines a compact corridor kitchen with a substantial dining area that opens to the long screened porch for bug-free barbecues. Also featured is a planning desk opposite the dining area. Plans call for a large, walk-in pantry and a handy laundry/half bath combination.

Bedrooms occupy the left wing of the home, with baths and hallways used to buffer living area noises. Well-supplied with natural light, the master bedroom also enjoys a walk-in closet and compartmented bath. Another similar bath, with double sinks, serves the remaining bedrooms. Closets, in bedrooms and hallways, are plentiful.

Included in the plan is a double garage, with entries to garden, porch, and kitchen. A basement is also specified.

Big Trailers Not For 1980 Car

By JEFFERY L. SHELTER
UPI Auto Writer

DETROIT (UPI) — Travel trailer enthusiasts should think twice before trading away the old family car unless they see a truck or a van in their future.

The auto companies say the smaller, lighter and more fuel efficient cars of the 1980s won't be able to pull the weight of today's typical heavy-duty trailer.

By 1985, they say, it will take a truck or a van to tow anything over 4,000 pounds — the weight of a normally equipped 18-foot unit.

"We can safely predict that the days of towing travel trailers weighing more than 6,000 pounds with the family car are numbered," said Robert C. Honke, recreational vehicle sales manager for Ford Motor Co.

Honke said this is the last year Ford will offer its 460-cubic-inch engine in the standard size Ford LTD — the firm's most popular trailer-towing passenger car. Other automakers also are phasing out their big V-8s.

Within seven years, nearly 70 percent of all passenger cars sold in the United States are expected to be equipped with gas-slingy 4-cylinder engines with maximum towing capacity of 1,000 pounds.

That would rule out all but the lightest tent or "pop-up" trailers which currently range in weight from about 500 pounds to 2,000 pounds.

As a result, vans and trucks are likely to become increasingly popular towing vehicles as owners of big, luxury laden trailers begin to see the handwriting on the wall. But as trucks and vans come under stricter government fuel economy standards, they too will grow smaller and lighter in the coming years resulting in a reduction of their trailer-towing capabilities.

That could mean trouble for the trailer and recreational vehicle industries which so far have all but ignored the downsizing of the U.S. auto.

While cars and trucks are shrinking, trailers have been getting bigger and heavier in recent years as manufacturers load them up with more and more luxury equipment.

"They're putting in bigger stoves, bigger refrigerators, freezers — all the conveniences of home, and all these things add weight," Honke said.

William Garbow, a spokesman for the RV Industry Association, said trailer manufacturers "have not in the past paid a tremendous amount of attention to weight reduction because it hasn't been necessary."

"Our biggest sellers have been the biggest units we could make. But now with the towing vehicles becoming smaller, there will have to be some changes."

Representatives of both industries have formed liaison committees to advise each other on weight reduction programs and future towing requirements.

"Some RV manufacturers already are looking at ways to reduce weight and wind resistance to make towing easier," Garbow said. "The units probably will become smaller, lighter and more compact, but I don't see it happening immediately."

If trailer manufacturers are worried about the industry's future, their sales predictions don't show it. Garbow said industry projections show sales

Jar-Maker Has A Baby Market

WASHINGTON (AP) — Three million babies eat approximately one-and-a-half billion jars annually of prepared meats, fruits, vegetables and juices, reports John B. Carroll, vice president of the Closure Committee, Glass Packaging Institute.

Beginning in the 1960s, a pop-top safety cap has been on all jars of prepared baby foods. It makes a "popping" sound when first removed, indicating release of the protective vacuum seal.

Summer Course In Upholstery

CHICAGO (AP) — Students will learn the basics of upholstery at upholstery classes for adults being offered this summer by the City Colleges of Chicago's Daley College.

The class will start with an unfinished footstool frame and build it into a finished piece during a five-week course, which includes webbing, tying springs, batting, fabric selection and upholstery, blind stitching and trimming.

this year will hit 580,000 and will climb to 700,000 by 1981, with lightweight tent campers, small trailers and van-type motor homes experiencing the most dramatic gains.

Pop-up campers are expected to become especially popular because of their weight, roominess when opened and low profile when folded down for travel. Even the smallest subcompacts are capable of towing them.

Detailed information on towing capabilities of current model cars and trucks is available from most auto dealerships.

Storm Windows Aid In Summer

YORK, Pa. (AP) — You can help save energy and lower the cost of cooling your home this summer by using the same storm windows that helped keep your house warm last winter.

"When storm windows are left on windows not needed for ventilation, they help keep cool air in a home and warm air out," says John P. Farrell, York heating and air conditioning specialist. "By doing this, you ease the amount of work your air conditioner must do and lower operating costs. Wise use of shades and drapes to block summer sun also helps reduce cooling energy and costs."

Gardening Questions

Q. Will planting hot and sweet pepper side by side make the sweet pepper hot? (T. R., Stony Point)

A. No. You could possibly have some mixing the following year if you save seeds from hot and sweet pepper grown side by side.

Q. Can I plant runners of a grape vine to get new plants? (R. D., Monroe)

A. Runners or canes can be layered to produce new plants. To layer a grape vine, select a long cane, bend it to the soil, cover about six inches of the cane with soil, and put a brick or rock on that covered section of the cane to keep it from pulling back up. The cane will develop roots by fall at which time the new plant is severed from the mother plant and planted in a new location. (A. A. Banadyga, extension horticulturist)

Q. I've heard that male cantaloupe flowers produce the sweetest melons. Is this true? (R. E., Apex)

A. It is impossible for a male flower to produce a melon. Only female flowers or perfect flowers — those with both male and female parts — produce fruit. (George Hughes, extension horticulturist)

Q. Can carnations be grown as an outdoor flower in North Carolina? (P. D., Wilmington)

A. Let me answer your question by first giving you some background information on carnations. Dianthus is the genus for garden pinks, annual Dianthus and florist carnations. "Pinks" are generally assumed to refer to the perennial flower. Dianthus to the flowering annual and carnation to the florist cut flower. All can be grown outdoors. However, the florist carnation is subject to many diseases and may not be hardy. It is tall and would not serve as a bedding plant — only as a garden flower to cut. (Joe Love, extension horticulturist)

THE PRODUCT — Auto adhesives that can be used for general repairs throughout the home and the garage. Manufacturer's claim — That this line of adhesives is now available in convenient, easy-to-use tubes...That some types joins plastics, metals, glass, rubber, wood and other materials in seconds...that another is especially suitable for vinyl strippings, emblems and letters...and that a third is an epoxy adhesive which dries in minutes at room temperature and is excellent for binding plastics, glass and metal.

(Do-it-yourselfers will find much valuable material in Andy Lang's handbook, "Practical Home Repairs," available by sending $1.50 to this paper at Box 5, Teaneck, N. J. 07666.)

Here's the Answer

Q. — I have heard considerable discussion about whether or not felt underlayment should be placed on a wood deck prior to the installation of the asphalt shingles. Should the underlayment be used? If so, what is the purpose of it?

A. — In new construction, you may occasionally run across a roofer who says that the underlayment is unnecessary. It is. It has a number of purposes. One is to insure that the shingles will be applied over a dry roof deck, thus minimizing the danger of buckling and distorting of shingles caused by application over a wet deck. Another is to prevent the entrance of wind-driven rain onto the deck in the event that the shingles are lifted up, damaged or torn by abnormally high winds. Still another is to prevent direct contact between the shingles and resinous areas of the wood deck which, because of chemical incompatibility, would damage the shingles. Failure to provide adequate ventilation in the attic space under the deck is another probable cause of trouble. This can be done with louver vents or exhaust fans placed high in the gables. A cupola also can be used. When there isn't enough ventilation, condensation and buckling problems are likely.

Q. — Can we reroof with asphalt shingles over wood shingles?

A. — Yes, if the old roof is in reasonably good condition, with special emphasis on the soundness of the roof deck or supports. Loose or protruding nails must be removed and missing shingles replaced. Rerail loose shingles and those that are warped. If it appears that the entire roof is in need of this kind of treatment, you are better off to remove the old shingles.

(To get a copy of Andy Lang's "Guide to the Selection of Quality Roofing," including an asphalt shingles color guide, send 35 cents and a long, STAMPED, self-addressed envelope to Know-How, P.O. Box 477, Huntington, N.Y. 11743. Questions of general interest will be answered in the column, but individual correspondence cannot be undertaken.)

Q. — We have an asphalt shingle roof that is about 25 years old. It looks to be in pretty good condition, but a man we hired to clean the gutters on our house says the shingles are not in good shape. Is there some way we can tell whether he is right?

A. — An on-the-roof inspection by a professional roofer is required to be sure. But there are some signs that will give you a clue, such as an excessive loss of protective mineral granules and cracked, blistered, curled and missing shingles. Check the base of downspouts for signs of granule loss. While it is unwise to go up on the roof to inspect the shingles, you can sometimes make a fairly good inspection from the ground by using field glasses.

'Ose' Ending Is Sweetness Key

LINCOLN, Neb. (UPI) — Label-reading can be tricky if you are trying to identify products with a high sugar content.

The law says a manufacturer must list ingredients in descending order by weight. A pre-sweetened cereal that lists sugar as the first ingredient contains more sugar than anything else. But some manufacturers get around this rule by identifying sugars by type so they won't have to put the all-inclusive word, sugar, at the head of the list, says consumer education specialist Janet Wilson of the University of Nebraska-Lincoln. As a key, she suggests looking for words ending in "ose." Maltose is malt sugar, dextrose and glucose are corn sugar, sucrose is the familiar cane and-or beet sugar, fructose and levulose are fruit sugars and lactose is milk sugar.

Pleasant Living At An Affordable Price!

Our Low-E houses are designed from the ground up to be the most energy-efficient you can buy. Purely and simply, what we have done is combine all the existing energy-saving techniques with some innovative building methods. The result is a home that can cut heating and cooling costs up to 65%. The Arkansas Power and Light Company reports that homes built to Low-E specifications in their areas are averaging a 65% savings when compared to homes built to FHA minimum property standards. The Arkansas results are actual meter readings of a 2-year period . . . no gimmicks, no guesses . . . but actual metered results! Imagine what that means to you in dollars-and-cents terms. A Low-E Homestead® represents energy savings wrapped up in one beautiful structure.

Not a pre-fab. Not a shell house. Each energy-efficient Homestead® is a complete materials package necessary to build the home of the future . . . today . . . on your lot from the foundation plate up. Construction labor costs not included.

You provide the construction labor, lot, and foundation; we provide the materials to complete — from the foundation plate up — the interior and exterior of these homes according to plans and specifications. The materials furnished will meet or exceed the national minimum property standards of FHA. Any changes required to meet local or state codes may alter the price accordingly. Lowe's quotes you one price for all the materials, so you know before you start, your total cost.

Designed from the ground up to meet the demands of a changing world. Here's how!

We obviously can't go into complete detail here—we've got a 14-page brochure to do that. But, briefly, we began by doubling the standard amount of insulation used: to 12" in the ceiling and 6" in walls and floors. We used 2 x 6 studs with post and beam construction, 24" on center, in the walls to accommodate 6" insulation and specially designed trusses for 12" insulation in the attic. An electrical raceway at the bottom of the wall studs allows application of insulation flush to the walls, while the electrical cable in the attic is strung above the insulation. We also cut window area down to 8-10% of the floor space, used caulked double-paned windows and insulated metal doors with magnetic weatherstripping. We caulked between the sole plate and the flooring, with insulation between the sill plate and foundation wall. A vapor barrier is used next to the sub-flooring and in the walls and ceiling. The design also allows enough roof overhang to shade windows and a light-colored roof to reduce heat in summer, with natural air flow throughout the attic. Finally, polyethylene was applied to the ground in the crawl space to greatly reduce moisture accumulation.

Can cost no more to build than a minimum property standard home having similar features.

Does that sound too good to be true? Well, believe it! We've utilized some innovative building techniques to really trim labor costs. And our homes require fewer board feet of lumber, which reduces construction costs even more. Even better than that — studies have shown that a Low-E Homestead® is as structurally sound as a conventionally built one.

Interested? We've got a beautiful brochure that tells the complete energy-efficient Low-E story. It's yours for the asking — just drop this coupon in the mail and we'll send you the brochure.

Festival Honors A Pioneer Explorer

PORT CLINTON, Ohio (AP) — "We want that bunch of phony descendants of the Mayflower to know who was here first," says Ottawa County Common Pleas Judge Don Wargowski.

He is founder and honorary chairman of the Toussaint Founders Club, which maintains that Frenchman Etienne Brule discovered and claimed an area just west of here Nov. 1, 1615 — five years before the Pilgrims landed on Plymouth Rock.

Wargowski wrote the song, "Vive Le Grand Brule," years ago when he was reading history voraciously and discovered Brule's story. He has also written "Hail to You, Oh Toussaint."

Seven years ago, he helped organize a three-day Toussaint festival on the banks of the river by that name 12 miles west of here. The area is unincorporated but has two saloons, a few houses, the Toussaint River and the Davis-Besse nuclear power plant. Wargowski grew up there.

"Brule was 17 years old when the explorer Champlain brought him to Canada from France to learn about the Huron Indians," Wargowski said.

Brule led an expedition across the lake in canoes and discovered the Toussaint River and the marshes it drained. He discovered it on All Saints Day and named it Toussaint, which means All Saints.

The celebration, which is always held on the weekend closest to Nov. 1, has been growing since the first one, which "just sort of fell together," Wargowski said. "We emphasized wine, because Brule was French, and food, fun and song. 'I had written those songs and when someone suggested we have music, I said we'd have the Toussaint symphony. That was my wife, who played concert accordion. But we gave her a crash course in the 'Beer Barrel Polka,' and she's been doing it every year since."

"Last year we had thousands. What we do is hold French and Indian games — archery, dog retrieving, arm wrestling and canoe races."

Ecuador Artist's Work Takes Flight Of Fancy

ARTY AIRPLANE—The colorful "Galapagos" design by Ecuadorian artist Edmundo Mena Franco enlivens an Ecuadoriana Boeing 720

at Miami International Airport. Mena designs are flying around on three other Ecuadoriana aircraft.

By MALCOLM GIBSON
Associated Press Writer

MIAMI (AP) — Ecuadorian artist Edmundo Mena Franco may not be as well known as Picasso or Michelangelo, but he's completed at least four works that would sell for millions of dollars apiece.

It's not because the colorful paintings are particularly rare, but that the four Mena "canvases" are huge jet aircraft.

He uses bursts of blues, reds, greens, oranges — a rainbow of radiance — on the airplanes of Ecuadoriana, the government-run airline of Ecuador.

The splashes of color and images are broken only by the airline's "E" logo on the tails, its nameplates on either side of the aircraft just aft of the cockpit and the necessary identification numbers. But even those fixtures often are incorporated as part of the design.

"The designs represent certain regions or geographical areas of Ecuador," said Camilo Rodriguez, the airline's regional sales manager at Miami, Ecuador's rivers, mountains and sunny islands are part of the paintings.

"The planes are painted in Tel Aviv," added Marco A. Nardi, district sales manager at Miami, who said that Israel also has the contract for the airline's major maintenance operations.

The artist creates the design, which is then duplicated by Israeli painters on the aircraft's outer skin, he said.

Small by international standards, Ecuadoriana operates five aircraft — three Boeing 720s and two 707s — on its international routes. Four of its aircraft are passenger planes; one 720 is outfitted for use as a cargo carrier.

The airline links Ecuador with Panama, Colombia, Mexico, Peru, Chile, Argentina, the Bahamas and the United States — Miami, Los Angeles and New York — on a regular basis.

One of the most colorful of Mena's works is "Galapagos," painted in a flurry of designs to mirror the artist's view of the islands made famous by biologist Charles Darwin.

And there's the "Guayas" with blue-green wavy patterns on the plane's underbelly and a sunburst above separated by a thin wildly spirited strip of greens. The design represents one of Ecuador's largest rivers.

The "Napo," named after the river and region in western Ecuador, is one of Mena's more subdued designs — a white cargo aircraft with bursts of dark green and lime foliage sprouting in whirlwinds from the aircraft's underbelly.

His fourth design — the "Imbabura" — is another kaleidoscopic creation representing a region and mountain in the country's north-central reaches.

Nardi said the Imbabura also honors the man who formulated and pushed the arty ideas for the aircraft — Gen. Luis Leoro, president of Ecuador and native of the Imbabura area. Leoro once headed the airline.

The airline's fifth artistic aircraft, the "Chimborazo," joined the fleet in mid-March. This

More Than Weather In Soviet Farm Troubles

By CHARLES M. MADIGAN
KIEV, The Ukraine, U.S.S.R. (UPI) — Boris Alexandrovich Runov waved his hands as he lectured the Western reporters riding with him on the Aeroflot plane far above the wheatfields of the Ukraine.

"You want to criticize farmers here, then let me tell you this," he said. "You aren't down there trying to grow the food you are putting in your mouth. Before you criticize farmers, think about the food in your mouth."

Runov is deputy minister of agriculture for the Soviet Union, and he knows all about Western press criticism of Soviet agriculture. Ask him what the Soviet Union wants from the United States to improve its farming.

"I'll tell you what the Soviet Union needs. I'll tell you what we need." There is a pregnant pause as he a set of steel blue eyes on you. "We need your weather."

To be sure, weather is one of the big headaches plaguing Soviet agriculture. It doesn't rain when it should, and it rains when it shouldn't. It's too cold, too hot, too dry and too wet all in the same season.

But it is far from the only problem the Soviet Union faces, and will continue to face as it battles to improve the average diet and decrease dependence on foreign imports of grains. Financially, Soviet agriculture had five boom years between 1970 and 1975 during which annual capital investment climbed by 9.6 per cent a year. The increase has been smaller recently.

In 1977, capital investment in farming totaled $45.4 billion. That is $1.1 billion over the 1976 figure.

Much of the money went toward constructing and rebuilding livestock facilities. Another huge chunk went into a plan to make poultry the most available meat in the Soviet marketplace.

The results are evident in food consumption figures. Per capita meat consumption reached 142.5 pounds in 1977, up 5 pounds from 1976.

As impressive as the figures may seem, they are overshadowed by thoughts of what could have been during 1978.

The grain crop flopped last year, forcing the Soviet Union to import wheat, corn and soybeans from Australia, Canada and the United States to meet its projections.

The vegetable crop also was down last year, 23 million tons — 8 per cent below the good crop of 1976 and four million tons below the plan.

And for the fourth year in a row, the potato crop was disappointing. It totaled 83 million tons, almost 18 million tons below the plan for an item that is a staple of the Soviet diet.

In many cases, the setbacks could be directly traced to weather. In other cases, the problem can be traced to a central planning system that is so rigid it cannot cope with the fluidity demanded of modern agriculture.

And the system has gremlins that are unique to Soviet agriculture, the kinds of inefficiency that would infuriate an American crop grower.

Fletcher Pope Jr., a specialist for the U.S. Department of Agriculture, outlined some of the difficulties in a "Review of 1977 and Outlook for 1978" updated in April.

"Every year, the Soviets reap 12 to 13 percent of their tractor fleet, suggesting an average life expectancy for a Soviet tractor of around eight years," Pope wrote.

"The agricultural sector receives more than 350,000 new tractors annually, but around 300,000 tractors are discarded, sharply reducing the possible increases in the size of the tractor park."

re not of the proper mix, which means the crop is not as large as it could be. In addition, "the Soviets estimate that losses amount to 10 to 12 per cent of production between the producing plant and the field.

"This would be around twice as high as estimates of losses in U.S. agriculture," Soviet planners are trying to cope with that problem by investing $3.02 billion in storage facilities over the next five years.

For the time being, the Soviet Union appears to be mounting a scattergun-type approach to solving the problems.

Runov outlined some of the plans, which included:

- The rapid development of poultry production. Poultry is considered much more economical because it takes less grain, and less time, to grow a chicken than it does a bull.
- Intensive research on new varieties of grain. Western specialists have said the Soviet Union has had success in adapting various grains to fit difficult weather conditions.
- Heavy capital investment in opening new lands to agriculture, including the non-black soil zones in the European parts of Russia. Much of the investment will be used for drainage.

And while Runov talks about wanting the weather of the United States, the Soviet Union is also clearly interested in two more practical U.S. exports — technology and more grain.

Speaking of Your Health...

Lester L. Coleman, M.D.

The Danger of Hyper-lipidemia

My father and three of his brothers died at an early age, all of heart attacks and all less than 50 years old. The doctors agreed that there is a hereditary factor of cholesterol. I'm 23 years old and in good health so far. I haven't confessed my concern to my mother, but I'm definitely worried. How would you suggest I go about trying to prevent an early heart attack? — Mr. T.H., Ga.

The premature deaths of your father and uncles may be related to a condition known as "hyper-lipidemia." This would mean that there is an increased amount of fats in the blood stream. Both cholesterol and triglycerides are recognized as being risk factors in the development of coronary heart disease.

Two other factors are considered important. Unrecognized and untreated hypertension (high blood pressure) and cigarette smoking add to the risks of premature heart disease. Familial problems such as yours have been the target of study by many doctors all over the world. Much information has been accumulating about the value of reducing lipids (fats) in the blood, in an effort to prevent early heart attacks.

There now are some excellent hospital centers which have developed specific programs for hereditary lipidemia. In your very state, in Atlanta, such a program exists. You would be wise to enroll in it. Long-term testing and treatment, special dietary regimens and the elimination of tobacco are all part of this program. You will benefit from this constant supervision. In addition, there will be great alleviation of the anxiety you now feel.

We are sticklers for cleanliness. Our home is immaculate. Consequently, it came as a terrible surprise to learn that one of our children has a pinworm infection. Why were we under the impression that this comes from unsanitary conditions and in tropical climates only? — Mrs. D.S., Maine.

Contrary to general knowledge, pinworm infestations occur rather frequently even in northern climates. It is estimated that it exists in about 20 percent of the general childhood population. In camps, schools and other institutions it may run as high as 70 percent.

Pinworms, or enterobiasis, are caused by a tiny worm that deposits its eggs around the rectal opening. This accounts for the fact that the symptoms are persistent irritation and itching.

The diagnosis is definitely confirmed by finding the worm or the eggs by the microscopic study of the stool specimen. Scrupulous hygiene, coupled with new drugs, are effective in completely eradicating this parasitic problem.

MARKETED IN NICARAGUA — Two green iguana lizards, their front feet tied over their backs with cord, are shown in a Nicaraguan market where they are sold for food. The International Fund for Animal Welfare, a Massachusetts-based wildlife conservation group, has appealed to the Nicaraguan government to ban the commercial hunting of the reptiles, though not the subsistence hunting of them, and stop all cruelty to the lizards such as the way those shown are tied. Rob Reiner's Concept Was 'Aging' In Preparing For Dual Comedy Role

Through the wizardry of Emmy Award-winning make-up designer Stan Winston, Rob Reiner appears here as 80-year-old Joseph Bresner, the patriarch of an immigrant family in ABC-TV's new comedy series "Free Country," premiering Saturday, June 24 (8-8:30 p.m.).

At one time or other in their lives, just about everyone has fantasized about how they'd look when they grew old.

Rob Reiner found out as he prepared for his dual role for his new comedy-drama series "Free Country" (premiering Saturday, June 24, 8 to 8:30 p.m., on ABC-TV).

When Reiner, who is co-creator of "Free Country," set his mind on becoming an elderly character named Joseph Bresner, he called in a man many believe to be the best in the business, Emmy Award-winning special makeup designer Stan Winston.

Before design work even began, Winston and Reiner met for several hours to discuss the concept of the series and the special personal characteristics Bresner would embody.

Step two was a life-mask cast in plaster of Rob's face, which Winston studied at length at his Hollywood studio. From that impression, Winston then furnished the foam rubber prosthetic appliances that would transform Reiner from himself to an entirely different human being — aging him more than 50 years in the process.

When he first saw his new persona — the final stage of which took four and a half hours to achieve — Reiner was astonished.

"I could tell that I was still me," he said. "The resemblance was still there. But, at the same time, I was really somebody else."

"My father (multi-talented actor-comedian Carl Reiner) was even more stunned. He took one look at me and said, 'My God, you look just like your grandfather.' And, you know, I did."

A good deal of the success of Reiner's startling transformation rests in the unique qualifications of makeup designer Winston, who is also an accomplished actor, painter and sculptor.

"My job," Winston said, "was not to age Rob Reiner but to create a new person — to build a character without losing the actor."

The final comment on Winston's handiwork and Reiner's idea came from the actor's wife, actress Penny Marshall (co-star of "Laverne and Shirley").

According to Rob, "Penny took a long hard look at me as Joseph Bresner and said succinctly, 'You should look so good when you're 89.'"

Van Patten Is Named TV's Father Of Year

Dick Van Patten, star of ABC-TV's "Eight Is Enough," has

Horror Time Again

Host Christopher Lee, of horror movie fame, and the Not Ready for Prime Time Players get things off to an appropriately chilling start with a series of "Horror Trailers" on "NBC's Saturday Night Live" June 24, 11:30 p.m. to 1 a.m.

Musical guest on the program is Meat Loaf. Comedian Richard Belzer also appears. The Not Ready for Prime Time Players are Dan Aykroyd, John Belushi, Jane Curtin, Garrett Morris, Bill Murray, Laraine Newman and Gilder Radner.

Selections by Meat Loaf are "All Revved Up With No Place To Go" and "Two Out of Three Ain't Bad." Belzer does a comedy monologue.

been named National Television Father of the Year by the National Father's Day Committee.

The award was presented to Mr. Van Patten recently at the National Father of the Year Awards presentation luncheon in the Imperial Ballroom of the Americana Hotel, New York.

This marks the 43rd year that the Father's Day Committee has chosen outstanding representatives from different industries and professions to promote respect and dignity for fatherhood.

Van Patten is married to dancer-choreographer Pat Poole, a former member of the June Taylor troupe who now does choreography for Disney Studios. The couple have not only carved a very successful show business career for themselves, but they have raised a show business family as well. Their youngest son, Vince Van Patten, is an actor. He played the title role in "The Bionic Boy," an episode of "The Six Million Dollar Man," and starred in two television series, "Apple's Way" and "Three for the Road." Their middle son, Jimmy, appeared in "Freaky Friday" with his dad, and eldest son Nels (named after the character Dick was playing in "I Remember Mama" at the time of his son's birth) is a professional tennis player.

A one-time child actor billed as Dickie, Van Patten is currently celebrating his 42nd year as a performer. The native New Yorker, who made his Broadway acting debut in 1935 in "Tapestry in Gray," is noted for his versatility.

He played numerous juvenile roles in plays, and during the heyday of radio he starred in several series before returning to the stage as the teenage telegraph boy in "The Skin of Our Teeth," with Tallulah Bankhead.

'Dickie' became 'Dick' in 1946 when he signed to appear with the Lunts in "O Mistress Mine," an engagement that lasted three years. For the next nine years, he played Nels in the TV series, "I Remember Mama."

Van Patten's nine films included "Westworld" and "Soylent Green," and he has left his imprint as guest star or co-star in many television series.

Shirley MacLaine Stars In Emmy Award Special

Dean Martin once said that Shirley MacLaine has "the greatest legs in show business — they start at her shoulders."

They seem to, at that. You can check it out when Miss MacLaine's Emmy Award-winning special, "Gypsy in My Soul," a joyful musical, comedic and dramatic special celebrating the theatrical chorus ("gypsies," in theater jargon), is rebroadcast Sunday, June 18, 10 to 11 p.m., on CBS-TV.

Aesthetic appeal aside, Shirley MacLaine's legs have held her in good stead since she was a 2-year-old taking tap lessons in her home town of Arlington, Va. She didn't start dancing, though, with dreams of becoming an Ann Miller, tap-tapping her way into America's heart. Truth is, there was something wrong with her feet, and her parents thought dancing might help correct it.

It did. Dancing also revealed that she was a girl with talent; unbridled, and desperate to break free. By the time she was 16, she was going up to New York City to take dancing jobs. After finishing high school, she became a hoofer in a dozen Broadway shows, before getting into "Pajama Game," in which she was in the chorus and understudied one of the show's leads for $75 a week.

With that pay, she could hardly afford the greatest of digs.

Home was a two-room apartment with three roommates.

Hardly a posh duplex, but the girl from Ol' Virginny had abundant talent and indefatigable energy. Even if Lady Luck hadn't stepped in and sent her on stage one night for an ailing star.

Shirley MacLaine stars in the Emmy Award-winning "Gypsy in My Soul," special celebrating the theatrical chorus members ("gypsies"), to be rebroadcast Sunday, June 18 (10-11 p.m.) on CBS-TV.

Sheep's World Explored

Host Hal Linden explores the world of the sheep in art, literature, history, legend, mythology and in the ecology, on "Animals Animals Animals," Sunday June 18, 11:30 to 11:55 a.m., on ABC-TV.

"Animals" goes to the American southwest where wild, desert bighorns can still be found along the shore of Lake Mead in Nevada. Dr. Charles Douglas of the University of Nevada and Chip Leslie, a graduate student there, explain that the bighorn is giving up its habitat to new housing developments.

A fable, "Elizabeth the Lamb and the Silver Fleece," comes to life in colorful animation and tells the story of a sheep named Elizabeth whose silvery fleece so dazzles her shepherd that he makes Elizabeth his pet. Unfortunately, Elizabeth is spoiled by her beauty and thinks herself above the rest of the flock. At shearing time, however, Elizabeth learns to her dismay that beauty is academic among bald sheep.

University Is Featured

Xavier University in New Orleans is the only predominantly black Catholic university in the Western hemisphere, and its unique role is the subject of "Special Mission, Special Purpose" on "Look Up and Live," Sunday, June 8, 10:30 to 11 a.m. on CBS-TV.

Founded in 1925 by Mother Katharine Drexel, a member of a wealthy Philadelphia family who devoted her life to blacks, Indians and other minorities, Xavier has an enviable record of some 8,000 graduates who have not only achieved success in their careers, but have established a tradition of serving their communities.

Of the 1,900 students now enrolled, 33 percent are non-Catholic, 15 percent white, and most receive some form of financial aid. "It's not how the students come here," one professor remarks on the broadcast, "but how they leave"

Among the Xavier graduates heard on "Special Mission, Special Purpose" are New Orleans Civil Court Judge Joan Armstrong and the city's recently elected mayor, Ernest Morial.

"The black community still needs help," one student says, and part of Xavier's attempt to help is the "Urbanvolve" program designed to get students out of the classroom and into the community, helping residents of places like Gert Town, a poor area adjacent to the university.

Musical Comedy Airs

Burt Reynolds, Madeline Kahn, Cybill Shepherd and the songs of Cole Porter star in Peter Bogdanovich's musical romance, "At Long Last Love," a tuneful portrait of the 1930s making its television debut as "The ABC Sunday Night Movie," June 18, 9 to 11 p.m. on ABC-TV.

One of the rare movie musicals of recent years, the 1975 film features some of the best-known Porter standards, including "Just One of Those Things," "It's De-Lovely," "I Get a Kick Out of You," "You're the Top," "Well, Did You Evah?" and the title song.

The movie also highlights some of the lesser-known songs, beloved of Porter buffs: "But in the Morning, No," "Find Me a Primitive Man," "Let's Misbehave," "Most Gentlemen Don't Like Love," "I Loved Him (But He Didn't Love Me)" and "A Picture of Me Without You."

In the light-hearted story, Burt Reynolds plays bored New York Millionaire Michael Oliver Pritchard III whose boredom ends with a sudden romantic meeting with stage music star Kitty O'Kelly (Miss Kahn) who had mistaken his limousine for a taxi. Meanwhile, society girl Brooke Carter (Cybill Shepherd), having discovered she is nearly bankrupt, gambles away the last of her money at the race track in an attempt to restore her resources. Instead, Brooke meets an apparently wealthy young Venetian, Johnny Spanish (Dulio Del Prete).

The two couples meet at the theatre where Kitty is performing, beginning a round of romantic adventures.

The physical production of the film is beautiful, with Bogdanovich's main stylistic convention taking the form of predominantly black and white costumes and interiors so that flesh, grass and an occasional flower add virtually the only intended color to the movie.

Burt Reynolds stars in the musical romantic drama "At Long Last Love," airing as the "Sunday Night Movie," June 18 at 9 p.m. on ABC-TV.

Disaster Film Returns

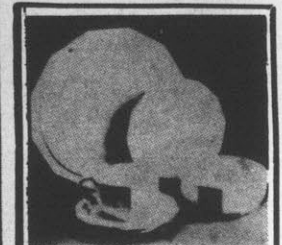

Spectacular special effects and an exciting plotline make the destruction of Los Angeles a believable disaster in "Earthquake," to be rebroadcast on NBC-TV's "The Big Event" Sunday, June 18, 8 to 11 p.m.

Charlton Heston and Ava Gardner head a large cast including Lorne Greene, Genevieve Bujold, George Kennedy, Richard Roundtree, Marjoe Gortner and Barry Sullivan.

The NBC-TV version of "Earthquake" features 22 minutes of new and original footage not seen on theater screens, including a sequence in which an airliner lands just as the earthquake begins and attempts to gain speed to take off from the buckling runway.

Monday Movie Stars Majors, James Stacy

Lee Majors stars as Vietnam veteran Frank Logan, who tries to rehabilitate his best friend — bitter and withdrawn after being maimed in war action he feels Logan could have prevented — in "Just a Little Inconvenience," to be rebroadcast on "NBC Monday Night at the Movies" June 19, 9 to 11 p.m. James Stacy and Barbara Hershey co-star.

Frank Logan undertakes to teach the embittered Kenny Briggs (Stacy) to ski again despite the loss of an arm and a leg. Logan hopes this will snap Briggs out of his depression and return him to a useful and happy life.

At the ski lodge, Briggs falls in love with Nikki Klausung (Hershey), a vacationing school teacher, but the romance is complicated by his lack of self-esteem.

As viewers will clearly see, there's more to "Just a Little Inconvenience" than just a touching story of friendship. Stacy, in real life, is badly maimed, a result of a near-fatal motorcycle accident a few years ago. A drunken driver hit the young actor and the severity of his injuries necessitated the removal of an arm and a leg. Because of the prevailing laws in the state of California, Stacy was subsequently paid over a million dollars by the bar that had served liquor to the driver.

But money is not enough to compensate the loss of limbs, and Stacy's adjustment to the tragedy is a testament of courage and determination. Perhaps his background unwittingly gave him the strength and 'toughness' to overcome his adversities: as a child he was known as 'the toughest kid in Burbank (Calif.)', and he drifted aimlessly around the world when he was in his teens.

Finally, a Pepsi commercial gave him some roots and direction — acting. His first TV series was "Lancer," in which he played the title role. It was a 'natural' because Johnny Lancer was described as being "a drifter, outcast, rebel and a nonconformist" — a description that aptly fit Stacy in real-life.

Descended from Syrian caliph named Ya-Ja, it is not surprising that Stacy finds personal reward in reading the works of Buddhist philosopher Jiddu Krishnamurti whose basic tenet is: "To have a guru is a good thing, but it is following, and to follow is doing someone else's thing rather than your own."

A TRUE FRIEND — James Stacy stars as an embittered Vietnam veteran who meets a young teacher on a trip to a ski resort where he is attempting to overcome his handicaps in "Just a Little Inconvenience," a drama to be telecast on "Monday Night at the Movies," June 19 (9-11 p.m.) on NBC-TV.

Susan Clark Portrays Athlete

"Well, I was beat. I have aches and pains and muscles I never knew about," actress Susan Clark beamed, "But I couldn't have been happier about it."

Miss Clark, who stars as champion golfer and athlete Babe Didrikson Zaharias in "Babe," (encoring as the "CBS Late Movie" Monday, June 19, at 11:30 p.m.) was reflecting back to the physical aspects of the role.

"I felt all used up — in the best sense," the hazel-eyed actress relates. "There's nothing we didn't do, from track and field to playing golf, to singing and dancing. But that's the kind of woman Babe was, and we wanted to show all her talents."

Miss Clark undertook three months of grueling training for her role as the exceptional woman athlete Babe Zaharias.

"I wasn't an athlete, although I like to think I'm coordinated," Miss Clark admitted, "but training to play Babe actually became enjoyable after my body got over the first shock. When I was completely exhausted, I just told myself I'd never get another role like this one, so I had to give it 100 percent."

Miss Clark put in 10 weeks of daily golf lessons and six weeks of track-and-field coaching in preparation.

Documentary Updated

Is has been a quarter of a century since Julius and Ethel Rosenberg were executed in Sing Sing prison on the evening of June 19, 1953, while a crowd kept vigil in New York City's Union Square, hoping until the last for a reprieve. Reverberations from the highly publicized atomic-espionage trial have never entirely subsided.

On Monday, June 19, at 9 p.m. on PBS, "The Rosenberg-Sobell Case Revisited" producer Alvin H. Goldstein updates his award-winning 1974 documentary, "The Unquiet Death of Julius and Ethel Rosenberg." Files about the case which were unavailable to Goldstein in 1974 have since been opened. For the updated program, a new prologue and epilogue will be based on these findings.

Michener Returns To South Pacific

James Michener returns to the South Pacific in a PBS special airing on PBS Tuesday, June 20 at 8 p.m. From the vast, sun-drenched area he knows so well, Michener takes a "last glimpse at a diverse and unique corner of the planet before it plunges headlong and irretrievably into the mainstream of the modern world."

Author of three books on the Pacific — the Pulitzer Prize-winning "Tales of the South Pacific," "Return to Paradise" and "Hawaii" — Michener concentrates on the wide variety of cultures scattered throughout these farflung, spectacularly beautiful islands.

Extending halfway around the world, the regions of Oceania — Melanesia (Fiji, the Solomons and New Guinea); Micronesia (the Gilberts, Marshalls and Carolines); and Polynesia (Hawaii, Tahiti, Easter Island and New Zealand) — cover a third of the earth's surface. They support eight million people who are subject to some 20 different forms of government and who speak in 1,200 languages.

From New Guinea's warring tribes to the genteel civility of New Zealand, Michener's personal impressions of this most romanticized and stereotyped regions reveal civilization's steady advance.

New Guineans, in somewhat seedy sites at the jungle's edge, smoke American cigarettes, listen to the radio and go to the movies. With the advent of international oil companies and timber interests, new concepts of time, money and work are also being introduced. Inland swamp dwellers who had never seen an airplane just a few

Jaclyn Smith Escapes Makeup In TV Drama

The arresting beauty of Jaclyn Smith appears with little makeup, for the most part, when she stars as the terrorized wife of a modern southwestern Texas political czar in the made-for-television film, "Escape From Bogen County," to be rebroadcast Tuesday, June 20, 9 to 11 p.m., on CBS-TV.

Miss Smith, one of television's "Charlie's Angels," is usually seen in carefully lighted scenes, her hair beautifully styled and her makeup meticulously applied. But that's not the case with her role in this suspense film.

"In 'Charlie's Angels' we're all made up and carefully combed," she noted recently. "But in this movie I'm sunburned, wind-blown, with much less makeup. I had a hot, natural look that's entirely in keeping with a woman living in the Southwest, who's being given a hard time by her husband, Mitchell Ryan."

"I was pushed, shoved, treated with contempt, and thrown in jail on a trumped-up charge," she continued, "and I loved it. This script was definitely a stretch for me, no mistake about that. And believe me, from the dozens of scripts that are sent to me, there aren't that many good roles for women, and fewer still if you're looking for 'good girl' roles."

Miss Smith admits that she's discriminating about what she will do in films. "I don't mind looking windblown, hot and sweaty, thoroughly terrified and disheveled, but just plain bad behavior is out."

In "Escape From Bogen County," Jaclyn Smith stars as Maggie Bowman, the young wife of Ambler Bowman. Maggie runs away, only to be caught and brought back, a virtual prisoner of her husband's power and his desire to completely dominate her.

Jaclyn Smith stars as the wife of a political czar who uses his power to harass her, in "Escape From Bogen County," a made-for-television film to be broadcast as "The CBS Tuesday Night Movie," June 10 (9-11 p.m.).

Portrays Scott Joplin

Billy Dee Williams, who played the lover of Billie Holiday (Diana Ross) in the movie "Lady Sings The Blues," stars in the title role of "Scott Joplin: King of Ragtime," an NBC World Premiere movie on "The Big Event" Tuesday, June 20, 9 to 11 p.m. on NBC-TV.

The movie details Joplin's unsuccessful efforts to get recognition during a richly creative but frustrating lifetime.

Oscar winner Art Carney (Best Actor, "Harry and Tonto," 1974) co-stars as John Stark, the music publisher who believed in Joplin's music and brought such works as "The Maple Leaf Rag" and "The Entertainer" — which became enduring hits — before the public.

The musical drama traces Joplin's life: from childhood prodigy to honky-tonk piano player to serious composer. As a black composer at the turn of the century, he finds that the white musical establishment does not readily accept him or his strange new music.

Joplin's music was arranged and performed for the film by Richard Hyman. An original song, "Hang Over Blues," was written by Harold Johnson.

HAGGERTY STARS

Dan Haggerty will co-star with Susan Saint James in "Desperate Woman," slated to air on NBC-TV later this year.

A NOTED COMPOSER — Billy Dee Williams stars in the title role of this World Premiere drama about a young man's rise from prodigy to honky-tonk piano player to serious composer, in "Scott Joplin: King of Ragtime" on "The Big Event," Tuesday, June 20 (9-11 p.m.) on NBC-TV.

Janssen Writes Song Lyrics

David Janssen's friends noticed he was acting a bit strangely. During lunch, at the races, in the local pub, he was constantly writing things down on little scraps of paper and stuffing them into his pockets.

Finally, someone asked him what he was doing. "Writing lyrics," he replied. That's right — lyrics. After two decades as a television and motion picture star, David Janssen recently developed into a budding songwriter.

"I've written the lyrics for nine or ten songs and three of them have sold so far," Janssen said.

Carol Connors, a close friend and successful song-writer, composes the music, and the couple collaborated on the theme for "A Sensitive, Passionate Man," to encore June 24 (9 to 11 p.m.), on "NBC Saturday Night at the Movies."

'NOVA' Explores Origins

A whispering trace of energy left over from the theoretical "big bang" billions of years ago may now be telling us, quietly, about the origins of the universe. NOVA takes a look at one theory of the universe's beginnings in "A Whisper from Space," Wednesday, June 21 on PBS. In 1965, Arno Penzias and Robert Wilson, two radio astronomers at Bell Telephone Laboratories, discovered faint, but ever-present, microwave signals in space — the most ancient and most distant signals detected by man; the oldest 'fossils' in the universe. Their observations launched the current surge of cosmological discovery and continue to aid scientists in their "cosmic archaeology" of digging into the history of the universe.

Money Was Duplicated For 'Brink's' Filming

How do you duplicate $1,119,000 in cash for the camera without having it look fake?

In "Brink's: The Great Robbery," it is done with a combination of real and 'play' money. And, to ensure that there would be no repetition of the rip-off which is the central theme of the drama, an armed guard was close by to keep a secure eye on the real stuff during the filming.

'Brink's,' the dramatization of the planning, actual robbery, and subsequent investigation by the Federal Bureau of Investigation of the 1950 heist of more than $2,750,000 from the Prince Street, Boston, facility of Brink's Incorporated by a group of armed, masked men, airs as "The CBS Wednesday Night Movie," June 21. The feature will be broadcast from 9 to 11 p.m. and stars Leslie Nielsen, Carl Betz and Stephen Collins as FBI agents, and Darren McGavin, Cliff Gorman, Burr DeBenning, Michael Gazzo, Art Metrano and Bert Remsen as members of the gang.

Soon after the successful robbery, the gang met to divide their loot. It was this scene which provided the movie's personnel with their big headache: how to make $1,119,000 look real. The problem could have been worse — the gang had to destroy $90,000 in brand new bills and over $1,500,000 in thousand-dollar bills, which could have been instrumental in their apprehension if they were ever used.

The money in the scene was in $10,000 bundles. The inside of each bundle was fake, but 238 real hundred-dollar bills faced each bundle — $23,800 for the worried film-makers to keep track of. To compound the possibility of any getting lost, the scene was filmed on location in a Hollywood suburb, with the attendant curious bystanders adding to the hazard. Hence, the armed guard playing nursemaid to the "props."

Both he and the film's production manager breathed that legendary sigh of relief when the scenes with the real and bogus money were completed — the fake bills heading back to the studio prop room and the real bills returning to the bank from which they had been borrowed.

"All the way to the bank I worried about what would happen if I had somehow mixed one of the fake bills in with the bank's money when I separated the bundles," prop man Julian Gordon recalls. "Imagine, being arrested for trying to pass play money to a bank."

The bank would probably have called in the FBI.

Film About 'First Love'

A 13-year-old girl learns a lesson in life when she falls deeply in love with a handsome singer with a rock'n'-roll band, in "Sooner or Later," a two-hour NBC World Premiere movie conceived by the husband-and-wife team of Bruce and Carole Hart, whose numerous credits include writing the original "Sesame Street" program.

Ruth Gordon, the peppery actress of stage, motion picture and television, is one octogenarian who is too busy working to know what being old is.

The 80-year-old actress, a 1969 Oscar winner for her supporting role in "Rosemary's Baby," not only acts, but is a screenwriter, magazine writer and authoress.

She has a guest-starring role in "Try and Catch Me," a "Columbo" special to be rebroadcast Friday, June 23, 8:30 to 10 p.m., on NBC-TV.

"I play an authoress, a cross between Lillian Hellman, for class and culture, and Agatha Christie, for writin' one hit after another," the actress said.

Despite the fact that Miss Gordon plays a role she is familiar with in real life (a writer, not a murderess), her character is a spunky old gal who shows no inclination to retire her typewriter. Miss Gordon shows no inclination to retire anything.

Tabitha Is A Big Girl

The daughter of Samantha (the beguiling witch of the "Bewitched" series) has grown up to become a delightfully bewitching and mischievous California career girl in "Tabitha," airing Friday, June 23, 8 to 8:30 p.m. on ABC-TV.

Lisa Hartman stars as Tabitha Stephens, a bright, fun-loving production assistant for a television station. Her older brother and fellow employee is Adam, a conventional guy who has none of his sister's powers. In fact, Tabitha's habit of using witchcraft to solve little problems upset the heck out of Adam, played by David Ankrum.

Robert Ulrich stars as Paul Thurston, the station's handsome but not-too-bright "star" newscaster. When Thurston pulls professional rank and puts Tabitha in an embarrassing spot, Tabitha wiggles her nose and zaps Paul into line without his knowing what happened.

Also starred are Mel Stewart as Tabitha's boss, Marvin Decker, and Karen Morrow as Minerva, Tabitha's devilishly "witchy" aunt. Barry Van Dyke guest stars as Roger, Tabitha's devoted but colorless admirer. Co-starred are Eric Server as Andy Collins and Timothy Blake as Sherry.

While Lisa's father, bass baritone Howard Hartman, belted out a song in cabarets throughout the state of Texas, the four-year-old tot would tug at the manager's pants leg until she was allowed to join her father on stage.

However, Lisa's attention was diverted to modeling, appearing in television commercials and performing in children's theater productions as a youngster and it was not until the age of 16 that she resumed her singing in pursuit of an acting-singing career.

While attending Houston's High School of the Performing and Visual Arts, Lisa landed her first professional job as a singer with a rock group. After singing with several other bands, she formed her own group, Lisa Hartman and Four Grand, and performed in the Houston area.

The 21-year-old actress-singer prefers commercial, country-pop and disco music.

Lisa Hartman, as Tabitha, sings as well. Viewers of "Tabitha" can hear her, since it is her voice on the show's theme song, entitled "It Could Be Magic."

Joe Namath Stars

Football star Joe Namath teams with Ann-Margret in the hard-hitting story of a motorcycle gang, in "C.C. and Company," to be rebroadcast as the "CBS Late Movie" Friday, June 23, at 11:30 p.m.

C.C. and his gang rescue Ann, a fashion magazine writer, when her limousine breaks down on the road. C.C. then has to save the girl from the members of his gang when they try to force their attentions on her. This widens a split in the gang that had been increasing because of C.C.'s grandstanding, which isn't helped when he rides in a tortuous European-style race and wins. Although the gang respects his skills and wants to capitalize on his winnings, when C.C. refuses to comply with the group, the leaders kidnap Ann and threaten to seek revenge on C.C. through her.

Track, Field Championships Air

The NCAA Track and Field Championships have a distinctive international flavor to them this year. With each passing year, more and more coaches are recruiting foreign athletes for their programs. Texas El Paso and the University of Southern California are the odds-on favorites to contest this year's crown and the U.T.B.P. is loaded with foreigners, particularly Kenyans.

On Saturday, June 24, at 3 p.m., ABC Sports will present coverage of the NCAA Track and Field Championships from Eugene, Oregon.

One of the stars of the show figures to be UCLA pole vaulter Mike Tully. Tully just recently set the world record at the Pacific 8 Championships, and the curious thing about his record jump is that it was a world record without being an NCAA record. The problem was that the wind blew the bar off and it had to be reset and remeasured, causing a discrepancy in height.

Tully now owns a considerable reputation and is expected to lead the United States team into the 1980 Olympics at Moscow.

"I'm not thinking about it right now, but I'd like to be there," he said. "If I'm at the Olympics, I say, 'Hey, it's an extra bonus,' but I can't look at it like I trained for four years and didn't make it, or did real bad. That's ridiculous."

Tully is an amazing technician when it comes to his vaulting. Some say he is technically perfect.

"I think my strong points as a vaulter are my acceleration, plant and takeoff," said the Long Beach native. "I can manipulate in the air—I know what I'm doing—and I can save jumps. A lot of vaulters don't know where they are...can't see things."

Tully is one of the relatively few American favorites in the NCAA meet. The Kenyans have a lack on the distance races and this is why Texas El Paso and Washington State are among the favorites, along with Southern California and UCLA for the team championship.

USAC pole vaulter Mike Tully hopes to break another record in the NCAA Track and Field Championships, airing Saturday, June 24, at 3 p.m. on ABC-TV.

Canadian Film To Air

"That's My Name — Don't Wear It Out," a contemporary Canadian film about a troublesome, but sensitive, adolescent who befriends a deaf youngster in a way that benefits both, will be rebroadcast on "The CBS Saturday Film Festival," June 24, 1:30 to 1:56 p.m.

The film, directed by Don Thompson and selected for the 1977 Seventh Annual Film Festival on the Exceptional Individual, University Affiliated Program, Children's Hospital, Los Angeles, proves such topics as how to treat a handicapped child and what constitutes true friendship.

The story unfolds as the deaf child, handicapped from birth but exposed to the advantage of special schooling and a secure home, is forced to reach beyond his limited world in dealings with a young delivery boy who has no physical disability but has been scarred by a disruptive home environment through which he has developed an outward hostility that conceals his vulnerability.

Betsy Aaron And Christopher Glen To Co-Edit News Magazine For Kids

CBS News Correspondents Betsy Aaron and Christopher Glenn have been named co-editors of "30 Minutes," CBS News' new magazine series for young viewers, which premieres in September.

Aaron joined the network in November, 1976, assigned to the Atlanta bureau, and was named a Correspondent in July 1977.

She is based now in New York.

Glenn has served as reporter and narrator of "In the News," CBS's series of informational reports for children, since September 1971. He was also the anchor-reporter for several editions of "What's It All About?," a series of broadcasts for young viewers. In addition, he has been an anchor of several hourly news broadcasts on radio.

Before joining CBS, Ms. Aaron had been a correspondent for ABC, based in Chicago. She came to ABC as an associate producer in 1972, a position she held until she was named a Correspondent in November 1975.

A graduate of American University, Ms. Aaron started her journalism career as a reporter with WFIL-TV in Philadelphia (1962). She became a freelance producer for Talent Associates and Kaiser Broadcast, then joined WABC-TV in New York in 1970 as a writer-producer.

Glenn joined CBS in March 1971 as a producer for radio special events broadcasts. He was named a reporter in January '72, and a correspondent in Feb. '76.

Previously, Glenn was managing editor of the Metromedia News Network in Washington, D.C., and was a reporter, editor and documentary producer with WNEW Radio in New York City.

A native New Yorker, Glenn received a B.A. degree from the University of Colorado in 1959.

Suzanne Confronts Dilemma

Come September, Suzanne Rogers' contract for the role of Maggie Hanson on daytime's "Days of Our Lives" will be up for renewal, and candidly the Colonial Heights, Va., native isn't sure what the future will bring in that regard.

Perhaps her indecision is the result of another important decision she anticipates she'll have to make before summer's end, whether or not say 'yes' to her boyfriend's marriage proposal.

At any rate, cordial and attractive Suzanne agrees when it's suggested that she's at an important crossroad in her life.

"I've been doing the show for five years," she explains, "and now I'm faced with the decision of whether or not I should stay or leave. Right now, I feel it's 50-50 that I'll stay, but I really don't know."

There is the inevitable questions in Suzanne's mind that every soap actor or actress must try to answer once they've been part of steady employment and a regular routine for such a long period of time. Should she leave now and venture into other aspects of her career, and if she doesn't, will she be locked into the soap for what could be very fruitful years ahead?

One thing that's certain in her mind is that her career is very important to her.

"I spent a large amount of money when I first started out as a dancer," she says honestly, "and then when I really made the commitment to start vocal and acting lessons I spent even more. So I've invested quite a bit of money into my career and you can't just slough it off. After all the money invested, and all the years you've spent on a career you can't just say, 'I love you and let's get married, and I'm going to give it all up.'"

She's not suggesting that this is what boyfriend Sam Groom wants her to do, but after a three-year courtship, marriage is a topic they're contemplating. "I find myself saying, 'I'm not sure.' You hear most about the marriages that don't work and very little about the good ones. And right now I'm living in a kind of safe area and I don't want to hurt anyone else.

Major Events Covered

The National Elite Women's Gymnastics Championships (Part 2), the USAC midget auto race and the 77th running of the Coronation Cup horse race at historic Epsom Downs in England will provide viewers in divergent areas of international sports on "SportsWorld," Sunday, June 18, 4 to 5:30 p.m., on NBC-TV.

The gymnastics competition (taped) from Nassau Coliseum, Long Island, N.Y., will zero in on several women who are generally considered to be prospects as possible members of the United States gymnastics team in the 1980 Olympic Games in Moscow.

The competition, based on individual events, will draw from a stellar field including 18-year-old Kathy Johnson, a freshman at Centenary College who recently finished first in the all-around competition of the United States Gymnastics Federation.

Johnson, who has been competitively involved in gymnastics for the better part of the last seven years, has piled up most of her points by way of an unusual strong showing in the floor and balance beam events.

A Good Pinch-Hitter Is A Must

There are many things a good baseball team must possess, as is clearly evident to viewers of ABC-TV's "Monday Night Baseball," which will feature another outstanding game June 19 at 8 p.m.

The pitching staff must have four or five starting pitchers and an able relief crew in the bullpen. A position which is generally overlooked but does win ball games is the role of the pinch-hitter. The pinch-hitter must be an unusual athlete for he must sit throughout the game and then enter the contest in a tight situation. Most importantly, he must deliver, and pinch-hitters have indeed delivered many famous blows.

The best pinch-hitter is baseball history is Smokey Burgess, who collected 144 pinch-hits during his eighteen-year career. Burgess managed his 144 hits in 507 at bats as a pinch-hitter, while hitting .286.

Manny Mota is in second place on the pinch hit list with 122 hits in 418 at bat. Mota is still active and, although nearing forty years of age, he has an outside shot at the record. He is now with the Dodgers after doing most of his playing with the Pirates.

The Pittsburgh Pirates own claim to the fact that the four leading pinch-hitters of all times played for the Bucs at one time or another. Following Burgess and Mota are Jerry Lynch and Red Lucas on the list. Mota leads the quartet in average as he has compiled a .292 average.

Burgess, however, is the king of the pinch-hit brigade. That was his major claim to fame as a major leaguer and it extended his playing career several years.

Smokey, now 51-years-old and a car dealer in Caroleen, North Carolina, was often kidded because of his un-athletic physique. If he was seen walking around on a street, he might be mistaken for most anyone. Put bat in the man's hand, though, and he was only one thing — hitter. If the designated hitter rule had come into effect earlier he might still be hitting line drives in the Major League.

"ABC's Monday Night Baseball" will be zeroing in on the key major league games throughout the season with telecasts of two or more regional contests each week. ABC Sports' baseball coverage will include the mid-season All-Star Game and both the American and National League Championship series in October. "ABC's Monday Night Baseball" airs on Mondays at 8 p.m.

Watson Is One To Watch

The United States Open is one of, if not the most, prestigious golf event in the world. It is an event which is always played on a championship golf course and contested by the best golfers in the world. Tom Watson is certainly one of the best golfers in the game today, and he will bear watching in this year's Open.

On Sunday, June 18, at 3 p.m., ABC-TV will present live, final round coverage of the 1978 U.S. Open from Cherry Hills Country Club, just outside Denver, Colo.

Tom Watson presented the ultimate challenge to Jack Nicklaus in 1977, and Watson came away the winner. Watson closed out Nicklaus in both the Masters and the British Open in head-to-head duels. Watson was also the leading money winner in 1977, amassing over $310,000 in earnings as he won five tournaments and finished in the top ten in 17 of the 23 tournaments he entered. Small wonder that Watson was dubbed everyone's "Player of the Year."

Watson has been described as a "Huck Finn in cleats, created by the pen of Mark Twain with his freckles and tousled hair."

He appears that way on the surface, but this 28-year-old native of Kansas City, Missouri, is a tough-minded young man with a strong sense of values. He is dedicated to becoming the best golfer he can possibly be, but the fame is not an obsession with him, obscuring all else.

"Golf is a major part of my life," he says, "but if I don't win, I know within myself that I tried, that I gave my best. I've lost more tournaments than I've won. Part of it is maturity within your swing, confidence that you can do the job. I feel I've grown and matured as a professional player."

Watson is off to another hot start this year. He was going full blast during the early part of the year but has cooled off recently.

Watson believes he has conquered his biggest enemy of the past — his driving. "I've been hitting the driver as well as I've ever hit it, and probably even better," Tom said.

He must drive well at Cherry Hills because a golfer is severely penalized if he is erratic from the tees in an Open. The fairways are tight, and the rough is thick. To score well, driving is a key and, if Watson can drive well, he can win this year's U.S. Open.

Crew Now In Kentucky

The cast and crew of NBC-TV's "Centennial," the 25-hour television adaptation of James A. Michener's best-selling novel, are in Kentucky continuing the filming on the first five hours of production after two months in Colorado locations.

The move involved flying some 100 crew members to the area, where they were joined by another 25 workers who had transported camera equipment, a huge Chapman crane (on a tractor), special effects gear, and other material.

A second unit preceded them to Kentucky for production of the project, which will be longer than "Roots" and "Rich Man, Poor Man" (12 hours each) combined.

While based at Lexington, Ky., the company travels daily to sites along the Ohio River where Universal Studios' workers constructed a set to resemble St. Louis, Mo., in the 1790s.

Raymond Burr, as the German merchant Bockweiss, and Sally Kellerman, as his daughter, Lise, join Robert Conrad and Richard Chamberlain, who star respectively as Pasquinel, the French-Canadian coureur de bois, and Scot fugitive Alexander McKeag.

Executive producer John Wilder adapted the script from Michener's book, a critically acclaimed novel which sold more than 3,000,000 copies.

"Centennial" will open the 1978-79 season of NBC-TV's "The Big Event."

'Free Country' Premieres

Young immigrant Joseph Bresner's joy at the arrival of his wife in the United States turns to panic when a bureaucratic regulation and a double-dealing relative threaten her with immediate deportation on "Anna's Arrival," the premiere episode of ABC-TV's new dramatic comedy series, "Free Country," Saturday, June 24, 8 to 8:30 p.m.

Rob Reiner stars as Joseph Bresner in a unique dual role portraying him as a young man seeking a new life in America, and, in cameo, as he would be today, a cantankerous but warm-hearted senior citizen of 89. In

the turn-of-the-century immigrant community of New York City's Lower East Side.

Anthony Quinn Stars

Anthony Quinn, Anna Magnani and Virna Lisi star in "The Secret of Santa Vittoria," Stanley Kramer's production of Robert Crichton's best-selling novel, to be rebroadcast Saturday, June 24, 9 to 11:15 p.m., on CBS-TV. Hardy Kruger, Sergio Franchi and Giancarlo Giannini also star in the film.

In Santa Vittoria, a mountain village in northern Italy, the only thing that really matters is the annual grape harvest and the bottling of its luscious vino. In the late days of World War II, Italo Bombolini (Quinn), the town fool — and mayor — learns the Germans are coming to confiscate Santa Vittoria's most precious possession: its 1,184,611 bottles of wine.

deep religious faith. He feels he would be weak if he let his personal problems cloud his trust in God. Father is 78, and although retired from the Ebenezer Methodist Church in Atlanta, travels extensively in the U.S. and abroad, preaching. His tight calendar takes him to the pulpit, college campuses and civic meetings.

FOR CHRISTINE FARRIS, daughter of Martin Luther King Sr.

With the tragedies your father has faced, where has he found the strength to continue, and what is he doing now? — I.W., Fond du Lac, Wis.

● My dad has a simple explanation: "I have faith in God." In crises, he is the first one to offer hope, saying, "We must go on and see what the end is going to be." Father believes that God orders everything that occurs in the universe and that it is not our place to argue. This is where my two brothers and I got our inspiration. There is nothing magic in the way he has kept going. He's a man of

FOR THE "ASK" EDITOR

Is Cary Guffey, the kid in Close Encounters of the Third Kind, going to make any more films? What kind of youngster is he? — G.M. Dover, Del.

● Cary's next movie is Growing Up, which he'll be starting soon. According to those in Atlanta, where Cary, 6, lives, he is definitely not spoiled. In spite of the tremendous demands heaped upon him, Cary's parents adhere as closely as possible to their old routine — including Cary's naps in the afternoon. Family togetherness has not been usurped by overnight fame. Cary is outspoken, but he was before he was plucked by Steve Spielberg (director and writer of Close Encounters) from 150 youngsters. During one recent interview, Cary, bored, announced, "I'm tired," and promptly went to sleep. When he saw the final print of the movie, he echoed the gripe of many adult actors: "They cut my best scenes."

Definitely not spoiled.

FOR TONY LO BIANCO, actor

In your TV movie next Sunday, The Last Tenant, you play the oldest son in a family deciding the fate of their 76-year-old father, who can no longer live alone. When your time comes, would you rather live with your children or in a home? — C.S., Dothan, Ala.

● I have three girls, and if one of them will have me, I'll go! I'm trying to lay the foundations now. For as long as I can, I'll try to keep out of their lives. Yet I'm also working on a close relationship that will bind us together.

FOR JACKIE BISSET, star of The Greek Tycoon

Did your father approve of your acting career? — N.K., Ventura, Calif.

● Dad told me, "I don't mind what you do as long as you're happy. But don't tell me crazy acting stories." He'd then quiz me when I came home to see how far removed from the "real" world I'd become. Once he asked, "Who won the Masters?" When I said, "I don't know," he shot back, "I knew it! You've lost touch with the important things in life." Now Dad loves my stories.

FOR ANNE MEARA, actress and comedienne

I'd like to know how your father reacted when you married out of your faith? — M.J., Fort Smith, Ark.

● At the start, Father was upset. Not because Jerry [Stiller] was Jewish but because he was not Catholic. So I told him, "Dad, there are very few Catholic Jews around." My dad and Jerry's mom hit it off right away. They took one look at each other and decided, without words, that we were both crazy. It took awhile for Dad to get used to the idea, but as soon as he did, everything was fine.

FOR FRANK GIFFORD, ABC sportscaster

What's the most outstanding childhood memory you have of your father? — S.B., Yuma, Ariz.

● When I was 5, I desperately wanted a new bike, but Dad couldn't afford to buy me one. It was during the Depression, and things were tough. So he bought a couple of wheels and a frame and the rest of the parts and made me one. I was entranced as I watched my bike slowly take shape. It was the best bike I ever had, and it lasted for years.

FOR MAC DAVIS, singer and composer

Has your son made up his mind yet if he wants to be a singer like you? — R.C., Kankakee, Ill.

● Scotty is 13, and the only thing he has decided on is what he does not want to do — compose and sing. Last time we talked, he was interested in marine biology. He's bright and a good athlete. He'd be brighter if he applied himself. What he does best is keep his mouth shut about his private life. He's not in the least bit spoiled and works for every nickel he gets — just as I did.

FOR LORNA LUFT, Judy Garland's daughter

I've heard so much about your relationship with your mother, but what about your father, Sid Luft? — M.M., Pontiac, Mich.

● Dad, as well as being a parent — and sometimes my manager — is my friend. We do have screaming fights (we're both argumentative and tough) but always wind up embracing each other. I think part of our closeness is due to the fact that even after Mom and Dad were divorced they still loved each other.

PRO William A. Carnahan, deputy commissioner and counsel, New York State Office of Mental Health

The insanity plea persists through an often false assumption that mental abnormality associated with criminal activity can be treated and cured. In reality, many mentally abnormal criminal offenders are not amenable to treatment and yet must be confined for the protection of society. A recent study in New York has found that the use of the plea is increasing markedly, is not uniformly applied and tends to be used as a guilt-avoidance device. Legal professionals report problems with vague legal definitions, lack of understanding by juries and superficial psychiatric testimony. The plea should not excuse criminal activity since it often results in inappropriate hospitalization rather than appropriate imprisonment.

PRO AND CON Should The Insanity Plea Be Eliminated As A Legal Defense?

Illustration by Hal Just

CON Steve Asin, staff attorney, Legal Aid Society

The insanity defense is a necessary part of the American system of law. At the core of that system is the principle that a person can be found guilty of a crime only if he intentionally and knowingly did wrong. A defendant with a mental disease or defect that renders him incapable of understanding the nature and consequence of his action is in need of treatment, not punishment, for an offense he does not even know he committed. Persons acquitted by reason of insanity are not a danger to the community. Under the current law of most states, such persons are indefinitely detained until such time as a court can be shown affirmatively that they are not dangerous to themselves or to others.

WOMEN ALCOHOLICS: A TRAGEDY NOBODY WANTS TO TALK ABOUT

"Several studies have shown they connect their heavy drinking with such crises as divorce, death of a family member, a child leaving home, miscarriage, abortion and menopause."

By Paula Dranov

- More than four million women alcoholics live in the United States. That's half the nation's alcoholics.

- In 1958, 45 percent of American women drank. In 1974 (the year of the last study) 61 percent did.

- Death rates among women due to alcoholic psychoses, alcoholism and alcoholic cirrhosis of the liver have markedly increased — from 6.3 per 100,000 in 1968 to 7.09 per 100,000 in 1974.

- Alcohol affects the unborn. One recent study found that children born to women who drank heavily during pregnancy were nearly three times as likely to be born with an abnormality than children of women who did not drink or drank only moderately.

- Alcoholism can strike anyone — young or old, rich or poor, single or married, housewife or working woman. One prominent example is Betty Ford, who several weeks ago courageously acknowledged her addiction to alcohol and drugs.

No one really understands the nature of alcoholism among women, its causes, its course, how it differs from alcoholism in men and why it is on the rise. But there's no doubt about how society regards women alcoholics, the problems they face in getting help and the pressures that frequently drive them to drink. Mary X, a 33-year-old librarian and an alcoholic who hasn't had a drink in more than three years, sees herself as typical of many women alcoholics and talks candidly about why she drank, what alcohol did to her and how she stopped.

Causes

"I didn't think I could have a social life without alcohol, but when I drank, I had no control."

Like many women, Mary X drank to feel at ease in social situations. Some studies have found that alcoholic women say they feel more feminine after two drinks and that, for them, traditionally feminine goals and lifestyles are far more important than to nonalcoholic women.

Ironically, the traditional role women occupy in society — that of wife and mother — may present the very pressures that drive some to drink. Several studies have shown that women alcoholics connect their heavy drinking with such crises as divorce, death of a family member, a child leaving home, miscarriage, abortion, hysterectomy, menopause and postpartum depression — all of which are related to the traditional feminine role.

Predisposition

I started drinking regularly in high school. I used to drink a quart of beer in my room on Sunday afternoons while I listened to music. No one thought anything of it. My mother drank two quarts a day."

While some generalizations can be made about why women develop drinking problems, there's no way to predict which women will. Although a family history of alcoholism, ethnic background or marriage to an alcoholic may predispose a woman to alcoholism, the disease itself is no respecter of age, income or education. It's estimated that 70 percent of the men and women alcoholics in the United States hold steady jobs, live with their families and maintain ties with the community.

Recognition

"I had an illegitimate child and gave her up for adoption. But no one — my family, my doctor — suggested to me that I was an alcoholic."

The reluctance of families and physicians to face up to alcoholism in women is not unusual. The symptoms, however, are not that difficult to spot, although a medical diagnosis of alcoholism isn't as clear-cut as a diagnosis of, say, diabetes. This situation may change soon, though. The first specific blood test to detect chronic alcoholism has just been developed, and it offers the potential of more precise diagnosis.

Symptoms include physical health problems, difficulties with interpersonal relationships or the inability to function on the job due to the chronic excessive use of alcohol. A woman may begin to suspect that she is an alcoholic when she begins to worry about her drinking and attempts to control it. Then comes the recognition that she is using alcohol as a drug and the efforts to conceal how much she is drinking from herself. Soon the alcoholic finds that she can't keep promises she makes to herself about drinking. ("Tonight I'll have only one.") Then, in the advanced stages, comes the alcoholic blackout.

Social Attitudes

"Society told us we were particularly rotten when we drank because we rocked the cradle and were consigned to that damn pedestal."

That bitter comment comes not from Mary X but from actress Jan Clayton who played the mother on the television series Lassie and is a recovered alcoholic. The alcoholic woman always has been regarded with scorn and often is seen as promiscuous or even "unnatural."

The big difference between men and women alcoholics is that women are less visible. Because society frowns so on her drinking, the alcoholic woman is likely to be a secret drinker. Rather than trying to help her, her family tries to shield her. This misguided form of chivalry often extends to both the legal and the medical profession. The National Institute on Alcoholism and Alcohol Abuse (NIAAA) reports that law-enforcement officials will drop charges stemming from alcohol-related offenses more readily for women than for men.

As for doctors, they frequently shy away from diagnosing alcoholism in women. Instead, they may treat an alcoholic woman patient for depression or other emotional problems and prescribe tranquilizers like valium and librium. These drugs only compound the problem.

Treatment

"I used to go into a bad depression about twice a year. The year before I stopped drinking, I wound up in bed for five days as a result of the depression. It was then that I called the therapist. That was in June. In November I had my last drink, but it wasn't until the following February that my therapist said I was alcoholic."

Here, again, Mary's experience is typical. Although women are much more likely to seek help for their problems than are men, they often tackle things related to alcoholism rather than the alcoholism itself.

For many alcoholics, treatment may be as simple as joining AA. For others, however, it is more complex and may include individual or group therapy. Some patients may need a rehabilitation program that combines education in alcoholism with counseling. Some women who always have been dependent on a man may need a halfway house.

and there's a woeful shortage of those. Only 30 of the 600 halfway houses in the country are for women.

Fortunately, however, it now seems that the alarming increase of alcoholism among women may result in more prevention efforts and treatment programs for women. Senate hearings have been held on the subject, and such Government agencies as NIAAA have been giving more attention to women. AA also has recognized the special needs of women and has established a program designed for them.

But no matter how much help is available, the battle against alcoholism is still an individual one. In this regard, Mary X was lucky. She was smart enough and tough enough and desperate enough to find help and make it work for her.

WHAT OUR CHILDREN NEED FROM US

"There is a Heavenly Father,' Dad wrote. 'Religion is real; there is a plan and a purpose in our being here.' Part of that plan is to always be there for our children."

Maureen and David: the goal is to prepare their children for life.

For years David thought of Father's Day as a son. Now he understands it as a parent.

By David Hartman

Father's Day three years ago was a special day for my wife, Maureen, and me. At 9:10 that night we had our first baby. A boy. He was supposed to have arrived a few days earlier, but like so many first babies, he decided not to rush things. After 16 hours of working his way out, we started our new adventure together. Maureen looked up at me at that glorious moment of birth and said, "I waited a few days to give you a really terrific Father's Day present."

Last October we had another boy, so after 42 years of considering Father's Day only as a son, I now have two wonderful reasons to think about what the day means as a parent. What did my father pass along to me and what do I want to pass along to my boys?

Cy Hartman, my dad, was the youngest of six sons of a Pennsylvania Dutch Methodist preacher. He was a bull of a man: 6'2", 205 pounds, an athlete, a writer and a booming speaker. And he had enthusiasm. "Enthooosiasm," he called it, for almost everything, mostly people and ideas.

"An idea is the most powerful thing in the world," he would say. "One person can take an idea and change the world."

But he wasn't too preoccupied with ideas to cope with the ups and downs of little boys. When my brother and I cried, he cried with us. When we laughed, he laughed with us. And he made us toe the mark. "Work hard, then play hard," he would say, over and over. You always knew where he stood. His values were crystal clear, stern and steady and full of love. I hope I can pass those values along to my boys.

In 1938 I was 3 years old and went to nursery school for the first time. In a letter marking my graduation from college 18 years later, he sentimentally recalled that day: "Little David, apprehensive, going alone into the world for the first time, probably wondering if you were being deserted. The chick was leaving the roost. You started leaving the day you were born. We almost lost you at age 1 because of strep throat, and we wanted to hold on to you and protect you but knew you had to go if you were going to see the world from our shoulders."

"To see the world from our shoulders." Mom and Dad worked every day to make sure we could do just that. My mom, Fannie Hartman, was also a six-footer — a gentler version of Dad but every bit as dynamic. And she shared his all-out approach to life.

When I was 2, we went to San Francisco. Dad had business there and went ahead by train. Mom and I and my 5-year-old brother followed by car. Mom drove, and, mind you, this was 1937 when cars weren't nearly as comfortable as they are now and when there was no network of freeways, motels, highway restaurants or convenient rest stops. Yet with two little people Mom drove us from Taunton, Mass., to San Francisco. Now that is spirit. When we arrived I showed my appreciation for her efforts by disappearing for nearly an hour in the lobby of the Fairmont Hotel. They found me nestled in the pot of a palm plant where I was contemplating the performance of a cocktail-hour violinist.

This was one of many trips we took together. We even missed a few days of school, but Mom and Dad knew we could make up the work and that traveling, meeting people and experiencing the country would help us to "see the world from their shoulders." We went to the rocky coast of Maine; to Pennsylvania where the Pennsylvania Dutch eat scrapple and say things like "throw me down the stairs my hat"; to clambakes in Rhode Island; to Florida, again by car, during World War II, where we saw the wreckage of American ships sunk by German U-Boats; to Chicago and Toledo and Washington and Philadelphia with Dad on business trips. Dad would say, "We can't live your life for you, but we can help you get ready for what you're going to find out."

Until age 13 or so, I was "Butterball," round, lazy, sitting around with my mouth open. My older brother was a doer, but I was a dreamer. In the early 40's we farmed a few acres in Connecticut. Dad worked in New York City during the week and on weekends came home and worked our land almost around the clock. We grew whatever we could put in jars for the winter, including raspberries. The idea was to can some and sell some at my brother's and my roadside stand. But the aggressive spirit of commercial enterprise had not touched me, and I was not at all turned on by the thought of picking raspberries all day in the hot sun. So I loafed. Loafing, when you were supposed to be working, was a violation of my father's vigorous creed, but he forgave my inertia and understood it in a long-term context: "Now's the time to dream. Later, you can make your dreams reality."

How? By working. "You can do anything with your life," he said, "but you will have to do it. We can't do it for you."

"Yes." That was a big word in our house. "Yes, you can." We knew we wouldn't master everything, but we could try, and fail, and try again.

Try, succeed; try, fail; try, learn. Failing wasn't bad — it was the way to knowledge. And the whole process could be fun. Not fun like going to the movies, but fun as in mobilizing your energy and curiosity, doing something today you couldn't do the day before.

"You are unique," Dad would say. "There is no one like you." He didn't just say things like that conversationally. The words rang through the house. Sometimes I was skeptical, but when you live around so much robust positivism, it starts to sink in. He was exposing us to a great idea — potential. We had it, he told us, but it was up to us to develop it.

At age 6, I asked if I might take violin lessons. Our home had been full of music: both of my parents sang well and played the piano. They loved everything from oratorio to Count Basie.

"Learn violin? Yes, but you will do the practicing and you will go to all the lessons," Dad said. After eight years of study, we found my "uniqueness" did not lie in playing the violin. But I had been taught some discipline and found that I, too, loved music.

Dad found a redeeming purpose in every task. He cherished the story of the three hod carriers at a construction site. Asked what they were doing, the first replied, "Breaking my back carrying these bricks." The second said, "Helping put this wall up." The third said, "I am building a great cathedral!" Dad applied the lesson to my job driving a forklift at a bakery supply house in Denver for two months after my college graduation. "What kind of work are you doing, son?" he asked. "Driving a forklift," I said. It sounded more like "breaking my back" than "building a cathedral," but by the time he had analyzed it, I was overwhelmed with positive purpose — inspired to be part of America's great capacity to feed its people and lucky to have the experience. We laughed together at the way he had enhanced the job — from forklifting to uplifting — but, in fact, I did go at the job with purpose as a result of his enthusiasm.

Dad also guided me through some of the wrenching experiences of growing up. At least once, he did it by mail. While always with me at what he called the "giant moments" in my life, he would also write down his thoughts for me to keep. The letters were filled with his personal philosophy, feelings and humor. These letters help prepare me for my sons' "giant moments."

During my senior year at Duke University, our choir director, J. Foster Barnes, died suddenly. He had been a great friend and teacher. I was shattered and inconsolable. It was the first time I'd confronted the irreversible 'reality that someone I knew and loved was gone. I wrote home in anguish. The following was the last paragraph of Dad's reply: "The recuperative powers of the human spirit defy description. It takes a heap of everything to make a man: success and failures, joys and tears, heartbreak and elations. 'Sorrow comes to stretch out a place in the heart for joy.' Edwin Markham. Love, Pop. 2/14/56."

He couldn't carry the burden of my grief, but he could give me the strength to carry it myself.

What a valuable gift.

The phone calls, letters and telegrams always arrived at the right moments — at the high points, the low points or just to share what they knew was to be an exciting experience.

All this sharing and teaching was to prepare their children to "see the world from their shoulders." And our responsibility, when we had grown up, was to see to it that our children should see the world from our shoulders. "There is a Heavenly Father," Dad wrote. "Religion is real; there is a plan and a purpose in our being here." Part of that purpose is to always be there for our children.

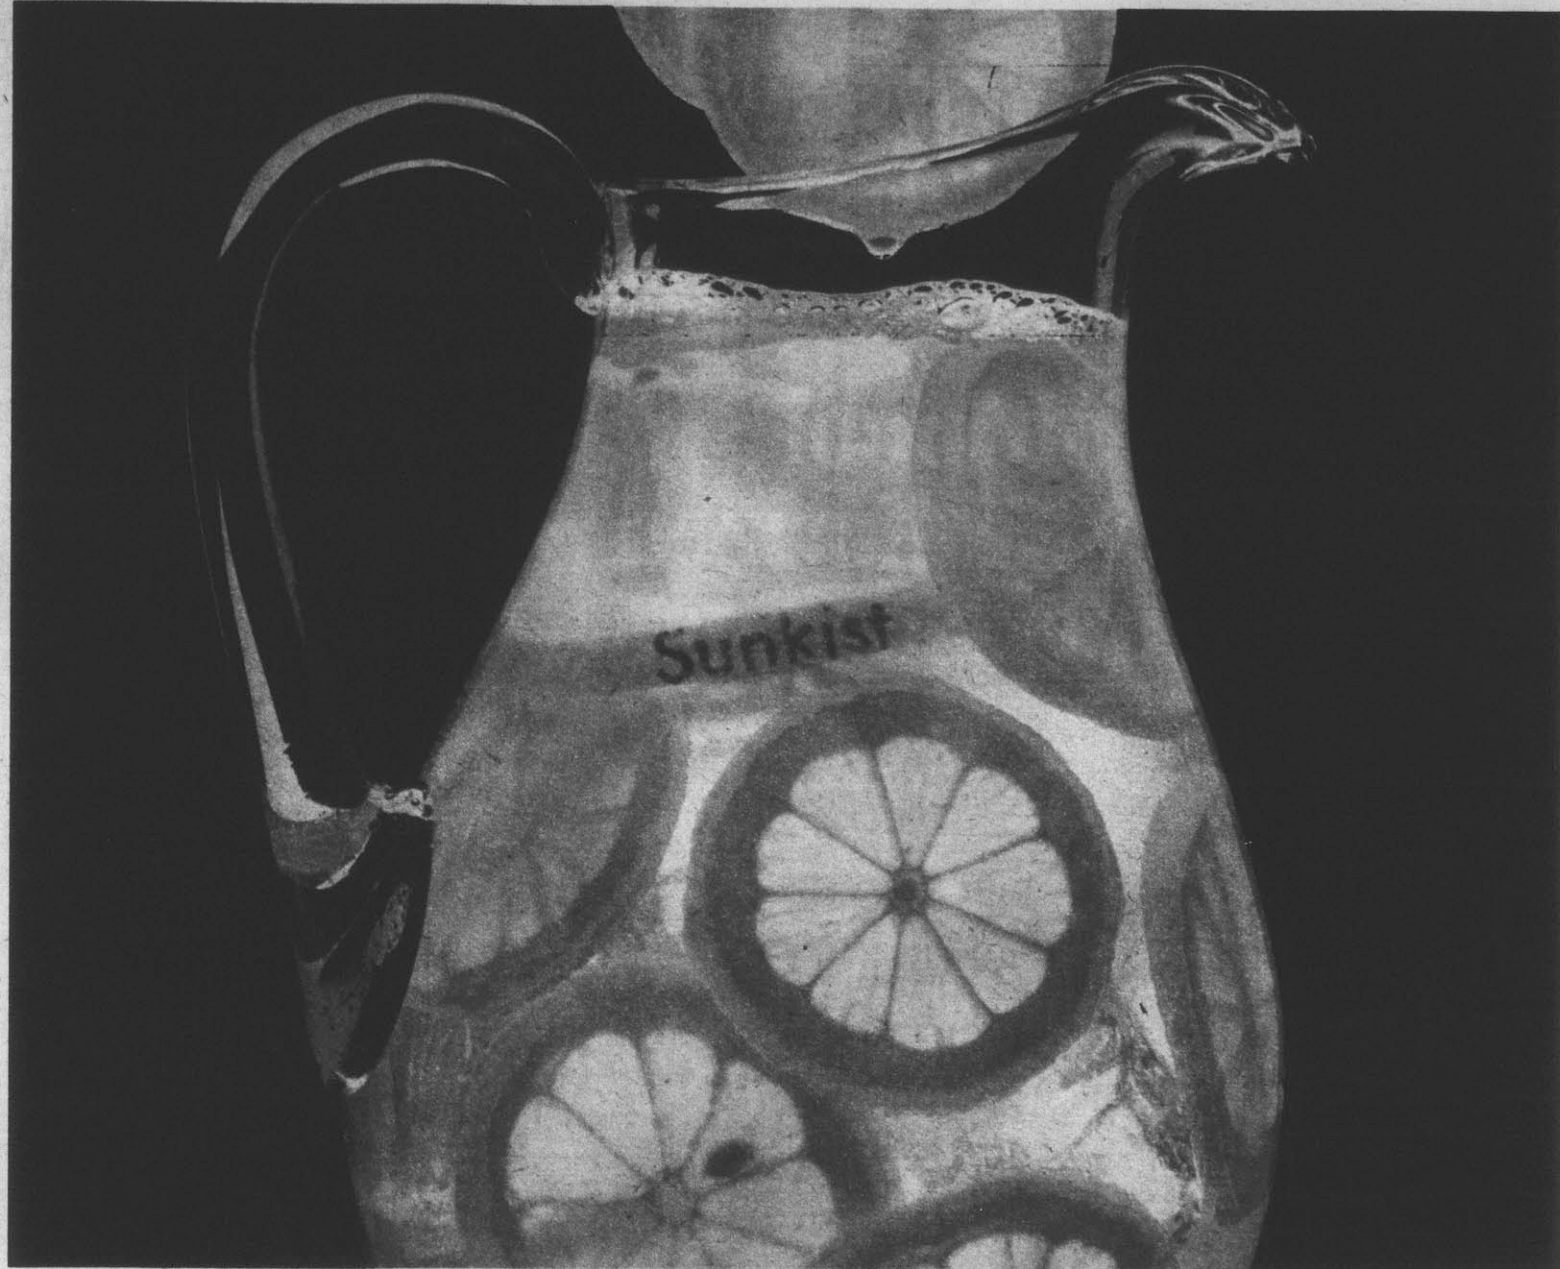

When Maureen and I experienced those giant moments when our boys were born, I wondered whether I could prepare them for life as I had been prepared. A wise friend told me that parenthood is the most difficult profession in the world, and the one for which we are least prepared. But I think my recollections of my own parents are a kind of lesson. I learned that every day my children need love and encouragement. They need to know they can "build a great cathedral." They cannot be shielded from grief, but there should be someone there to comfort them. They need to know they can fail and try again. They need to be told there is a plan and purpose in their being. They need to be reminded that they can fulfill their potential. Only they can live their lives, but I can help them see the world from my shoulders by always being there.

My mother died in 1963: my father in 1968. As I was writing this piece, my 3-year-old came racing past my chair on his toy car. "What are you doing, TaTa?" he asked.

"I'm writing," I said.
"Can I write, too, TaTa?"
"Yes, you can."

Father's Day. A special day? It depends on what we do with it.

You also can easily make either of two kinds of birdhouses. A small traditional style is inexpensively built with craft sticks and cardboard or plywood. The other is a mod-style, which can be made from a dipper gourd you buy at the vegetable store or grow in your own garden.

Would you think that worn auto tires could be used as decorative ornaments for the yard? Well, they can. With just a touch of the creative, you can turn worn tires into unique planters. Each planter requires one tire, a discarded wheel rim and some outdoor paint. Once completed, nobody would guess its lowly origins.

PEOPLE QUIZ/By John E. Gibson

Are you born with the ability or is it acquired?
Can your physical condition be a factor?

WHAT DECISIONS TELL ABOUT YOU

TRUE OR FALSE?

1. The ability to make good decisions is something you're born with.
2. The best decision makers share specific characteristics.
3. Good decision makers differ from others not only in their attitude toward the achievement of goals but also in their outlook toward life itself.
4. How much confidence you have in your decisions reveals a lot about your personality.

5. Anyone can significantly increase his decision-making ability.

ANSWERS

1. False. Psychologist Russell N. Cassel sums up the findings of leading studies in his treatise The Psychology of Decision Making: "Decision-making is not something we are born with; it is learned through carefully planned educational experiences. It represents a psychological process whereby an individual is able to examine different choices available for action to determine the degree to which they will work before they are used." Russell also points out, however, that too often the process is not really learned and that people live a trial-and-error kind of existence rather than a planned and deliberate one.

2. True. The University of Michigan School of Business Administration reports the findings of a study of top corporate executives and independent businessmen, which show that the best decision makers have the ability to quickly reduce complex situations to their essentials, distill the problems or opportunities out of them and then go straight to what seems the obvious course of action. They also were found to possess the ability to sense "core issues" in a given situation and to reconstruct the facts in usable form "at such speed as to defy recognition of the process."

3. True. The Michigan study also showed that good decision makers are generally "positive thinkers" as opposed to those who have an ineffectual or mediocre track record. The latter, the study found, tend to think more negatively, to perceive new ideas primarily in terms of the problems and risks involved. The positively oriented decision makers, on the other hand, perceive new ideas "in terms of their profit potential or opportunity impact."

4. True. University of California studies showed, for example, that persons who displayed justified confidence in their decisions made the best personality scores, were the most self-reliant and intelligent and were the best balanced emotionally. Persons who were overconfident about their decisions often had a narrow range of interests, lacked originality and insight into their motives and behavior, aroused hostility in others and were blustery, dogmatic and defensive. Persons who lacked confidence in their decisions tended to be self-centered, much given to "soul searching," poorly adjusted socially, self-abusing, given to feelings of guilt, shy, unambitious, absent-minded and high strung.

5. True. Tests show you can give yourself a substantial edge in the decision-making department simply by keeping physically fit. Studies at Tel Aviv's Wingate Institute have demonstrated that when it comes to functioning under the pressures of mental tasks, such as important decision-making, "the physical fit person has a definite advantage." FW

MARTINA NAVRATILOVA: SHE'S READY TO MAKE A RUN FOR NO. 1

By Marion Dunn

This year's dominant player is healthy and slim (at last) and hungry for a Wimbledon title.

Martina Navratilova, who defected from Czechoslovakia during the 1975 U.S. Open, was the hottest player on the professional women's tennis circuit this winter, and every move she makes takes place in the spotlight. That's good news right now, but it hasn't always been that way.

Navratilova was only a teenager when she asked for asylum in the United States, and she adapted quickly to one phase of American life — junk foods, good cars and good times. And in 1976 a shoulder ailment crippled her game. She gained weight and the American public, ignoring the shoulder ailment but paying attention to the stories about her eating habits, the car and the good times, wrote her off as a good-time Charlene who would never make it to the top.

In 1977 the shoulder healed, she lost weight, and her game picked up. She finished the year as No. 3 in the world, behind Chris Evert and Billie Jean King. Still, the public, the press and some of her friends refused to believe what they were seeing.

In an interview, Martina said: "When I was heavy they said I couldn't be No. 1 because of my weight. Then when I lost weight, it came out that I played golf and couldn't be No. 1 because of that. I play golf no more than once a month, and then I just play nine holes. Evonne [Goolagong] plays 10 times as much golf as I do."

After a slight letdown near the end of 1977, Martina was blazing hot during the first five months of 1978. She won eight tournaments on the Virginia Slims tour (the most since the circuit was consolidated in 1975) and smashed all Slims records when she won seven in a row and 37 straight matches.

Then came a major breakthrough. She captured her first major championship by defeating Goolagong in the Virginia Slims finals in April.

"I've played so well the whole year," says the 21-year-old, "that I was the favorite. But then people would say, 'Martina's never won a big one. Can she do it?' That's what I kept asking myself all week.

"Obviously, this is my best year. Winning the Virginia Slims finals was the high point of my career, and now I can concentrate on Wimbledon knowing that I have won a major championship."

When she mentions concentrating, Martina reveals another secret of her amazing turnaround. In those first months following her defection, she might have overdone the good life, but not any longer. Today Martina is disciplined and practices self-denial with almost a religious zeal.

To keep sharp and dedicated, she has come up with a formula for winning. "This year," she explains, "I took a few weeks off to start the year, and I was able to plug myself in and regenerate the energy I was missing late last year. I found out that since I usually get to the late rounds, I got stale after three weeks. I started playing three weeks then taking one week off. That helps me stay sharper. Motivation is such an important thing in tennis. You can play only so much and stay motivated. You have to get away."

LET THE SUNSHINE DO YOUR COOKING

Just in time for your backyard barbecue, a solar cooker costs little to construct, makes delicious food and saves energy, too.

By Carolyn Jabs

The backyard barbecue is a summertime ritual for millions of Americans. This year, why not give your picnic an energy-saving twist by cooking in a solar oven?

The oven described here is adapted from plans developed by Volunteers in Technical Assistance, 3706 Rhode Island Ave., Mt. Rainier, Md. 20822.

To build the oven, start with a box — an undamaged cardboard carton or, for a more durable oven, a box made of plywood or sheet metal. Whatever the material, the box should measure approximately 28 inches long, 18 inches wide and 14 inches tall. Other supplies include a sheet of rigid two-inch fiberglass insulation, a pane of thermal glass, duct tape and glue. (Cost to build using cardboard, about $5; with plywood or sheet metal, $7 to $10.)

Begin by cutting away the bottom and one end of the box. Now draw diagonals on two sides of the box, extending from a point one inch from the bottom corner of the open end to a point on the top of the box, 12 inches from the closed end (see diagram). Trim on that line and cut off the flap from the top of the box. When the box is properly trimmed, it should resemble a scoop without a handle.

Next, trace the sides of the box on the insulation. Use a linoleum knife to cut out slabs that fit precisely on the side and back walls of the oven. Glue them in with aluminum foil pressed against the box. Now cut slabs of fiberglass that match the front and top of the oven and extend one-half inch beyond the edge of the box. These pieces must fit snugly to minimize heat loss. After gluing the insulation to the top and back of the oven, paint the interior with flat black paint to absorb extra heat. When the paint is dry, fit a precut pane of thermal glass over the front of the oven. Trim the fiberglass that extends over the edge of the box at an angle so the glass panel will sit evenly on it. Then tape the glass securely over the opening with duct tape.

Now, the oven, needs a base. Start with a piece of plywood two inches wider and longer than the oven itself. Build a two-inch rim on all sides of the base and place a two-inch runner down the center for support. Fill the empty spaces with insulation and cover with a sheet of gypsum cut to size. Paint the gypsum board flat black. When the oven sits on the base, it should press into the gypsum so heat won't escape. If it does escape, add a rim of weather stripping.

At this point, the oven could be used in the tropics. In North American latitudes, however, reflectors improve the oven's heating capacity. To make reflectors, cut out four pieces of cardboard the size of the glass panel plus two inches on one side. Crease the panels so the two-inch tab can be attached to the oven, and cover with aluminum foil, shiny side up. Glue the panels to the side of the oven and use straightened coat hangers to prop them at a 120-degree angle with the face of the oven.

At last, it's time to start cooking. Choose a sunny day and try to cook shortly after noon when the sun's rays are most intense. (Depending on latitude and care in construction, the oven should reach between 200 and 300 degrees, so select a dish that does well with slow heat.) Recipes adapted for crock pots are good choices as well as traditional picnic fare, such as burgers, baked potatoes and franks and beans.

Place the oven base on a table facing the sun. Put dinner in an ovenproof dish, set it on the base and cover it with the oven itself. Now stand back.

To become better acquainted with the oven, place a thermometer inside. Adjust the reflectors to direct the sun's rays into the oven. As the sun moves, shift the oven to keep shadows out of the box. If you think heat is escaping, add insulation where the base meets the oven.

Some cooks find they achieve higher temperatures by adding more reflectors or installing a second panel of glass. Experiment and have patience. Remember, solar energy is still in the age of exploration. With this oven, you can be one of the pioneers.

Announcing The Official State Flowers Bell Collection

- For the first time . . . 50 exquisite little bone china bells portray all of America's official state flowers.

America the Beautiful is blessed with magnificent flowers. A carpet of color and fragrance that stretches from sea to shining sea — reminding us of the bounty that nature has bestowed upon our nation. And of all the lovely flowers that flourish on our native soil, the very favorites have been named the official flowers of the 50 states.

Now, at last, all 50 of these official state flowers will be faithfully portrayed on exquisite little bells of fine bone china — an unprecedented artistic tribute to our 50 states . . . a joyous celebration of our love for the land we live in.

Fine Bone China — The Perfect Art Medium for This Unprecedented Collection

The special qualities of imported fine bone china are perfect for portraying these beautiful flowers. Bone china is renowned for its pure ivory-white color and remarkable translucence — qualities which enhance the vivid colors of each flower. Fine bone china is also famous for its light weight and delicate appearance — qualities which perfectly correspond with the delicacy of the flowers themselves.

Very few china makers in the entire world have mastered the necessary skills to produce bone china. This is why bone china is found only in a few countries — and why it is treasured by collectors on every continent. It is rare to find an exclusive, privately commissioned bell collection in fine bone china — and rarer still to find a collection consisting of fifty exquisite little bone china bells.

Original Paintings by One of America's Most Distinguished Nature Artists

To create the original art that appears on each of these bells, a special commission was awarded to the prominent American nature artist, Jo Polseno, whose work has been shown in leading galleries and has appeared in Audubon Magazine. Working in fields, plains, and mountains across America, Polseno has created a striking series of original floral watercolors expressly and exclusively for this collection. These paintings have never been seen before — and will never appear again in any form.

The flowers include the sweetly scented Massachusetts Mayflower, beloved of the Pilgrims . . . the Mississippi Magnolia, fabled flower of the Deep South . . . the vibrant California Poppy . . . the lovely pink and yellow wild rose of Iowa. In all, 50 lovely flowers . . . authentic down to the most minute detail . . . vibrant in all their natural colors.

Each Bell a Handcrafted Work of Art

To create a bell collection worthy of our official state flowers and the fine bone china, a specially designed bell shape was created. To produce this unique shape, each bell will be individually cast by hand. Then the original Polseno watercolors will be transferred to each bell using techniques involving many separate colors. As a crowning touch of luxury, each bell will be hand decorated with precious 24 Kt. gold applied to both the handle and base. Each bell will also bear the name of the state and its official flower, as well as the Danbury Mint hallmark.

Display Accessory at no Additional Cost

A custom designed display unit will be furnished at no additional charge. This beautiful unit may be placed on a table or book shelf (as shown below) or hung on a wall — to display all 50 bells to best advantage.

WHAT IN THE WORLD

Baby Care Hotline

Can you overfeed a baby? What kinds of games can you play with your baby to help his or her development? Now, a baby-food manufacturer has recorded answers from experts to these and other commonly asked questions about infant care and has made them available to consumers on a toll-free hotline.

Among those answering questions are pediatrician and FAMILY WEEKLY contributor Alvin Eden, child-development authority Burton White of Harvard Univ. and nutrition expert Seymour Halpern of the N.Y. Medical College.

The hotline is in operation Mon. through Fri. from 9:00 A.M. to 4:00 P.M. (EDT). The number is 800-523-6633 (in Pennsylvania, call 800-492-2384).

Preventing And Handling Insect Stings

Insect stings are potentially more dangerous than many people realize says the Health Insurance Inst. Although only 8 in 1,000 victims develop reactions that can be fatal, according to allergist Dr. Claude A. Frazier, other people suffer less drastic but troublesome effects.

To help prevent stings:

- Don't run barefoot in the summer. Shoes provide good protection from insects that nest in the grass.

- If you see a yellow jacket or wasp nest, never try to remove it yourself.

- Hairsprays, cosmetics, bright colors, suede, bright metal objects and motion all attract stinging insects.

- If a stinging insect is hovering over you, stand still until it goes away.

If you are stung, prompt action can help relieve or prevent some of the more troublesome effects. Frazier advises looking for the stinger as soon as you've been stung. If you find it, scrape it away with a fingernail. However, do not try to remove a honeybee stinger.

To reduce swelling, apply cold compresses. Elevating or keeping the affected area level can help except in the case of a swollen leg, when lying down is best. If there are any signs of hives, wheezing, itching eyes, sneezing or constriction around the throat, get medical help.

Jumping Your Way To Fitness

Jumping rope is no longer kids' stuff. Taking a tip from boxers, who've used jumping rope as part of their conditioning regimen for years, increasing numbers of adults are beginning to jump their way into shape.

Sidney Filson, author of Jumping Into Shape (Franklin Watts), says 15 minutes of jumping a day provides a good workout with minimal space and equipment. All you need are a jump rope and a pair of good running shoes to provide necessary padding on the balls of the feet. Women should wear a tight leotard or athletic bra for support. If you're over 40, have a stress test before starting to jump.

Now you're ready to begin. Instead of counting jumps, Filson suggests you put on a favorite record. When the side is finished, your 15 minutes are up. To prevent jarring, do not jump with both feet at the same time; use a "running step," landing on the balls of your feet. This should also help prevent noise. "If you can hear yourself, you're not doing it right," says Filson.

Try to keep your arms as still as possible, using only the wrists to turn the rope. Don't try to jump 15 minutes the first time; when you're tired, rest by bending over and putting your palms on the floor. Expect your calves to hurt at first.

Management Training — At Home

You may feel as if you're "just a housewife," but according to 1 college professor, the work you do running the house is developing management skills that you might later be able to apply in the business world. Dr. Hazel Ezell, dir. of the MBA program at the Univ. of Alabama's Graduate School of Business, says, "Many women sell themselves short. They don't realize that they've been exercising the kind of skills employers are looking for in managers."

Housewives use many management skills daily says Ezell. Among these are managing time, delegating responsibility to other family members and planning activities. "A successful housewife who has some business knowledge can legitimately add these skills to her résumé," says Ezell.

What does it take to make the transition from managing a house to running an office? Ezell says if a woman has had some business background that she is willing to update with business courses, then her "on the job" experience should help her on the road to management.

House Calls Are Their Business

Nowadays it seems as if the only people who make house calls are repairmen. But it is still possible to find doctors who do. Believe it or not, some travel as far as 30 miles and don't expect their patients to pay them or even say "thanks." They're the veterinarians in Purdue Univ.'s Large Animal Clinic, and their patients are mostly horses, cattle and pigs and an occasional elephant or camel.

The head of the clinic, Dr. Edwin H. Page, says the clinic vets make more than 3,000 "house calls" a year. Page adds that most visits deal with disease prevention rather than treatment of animals that are acutely ill.

Quick Takes

Working mothers tend to be more lenient with their very young children and tougher on their school-age children than their strictly homemaking counterparts reports a new study. The 2 researchers, who are themselves working mothers, theorize that early latitude may be partially due to working mothers' guilt over their absence from the home. But once the youngsters start school, working mothers seem to expect children to perform in ways that reflect the mothers' own self-discipline and motivation.

If it's true that you are what you eat, Americans are saturated with fat, sugar and salt — the three elements which, when taken to excess, may contribute to heart disease, obesity and stroke. The U.S. Senate Select Committee on Nutrition reports that, in 1976, the average American consumed about 125 pounds of fat and 100 pounds of sugar.

Thefts and smuggling account for only a fraction of the booming illegal traffic in prescription drugs according to the General Accounting Office, which says that most of the abuse "results from false prescriptions, illegal sales and over-prescribing." Studies conducted by the Justice Dept. indicate that 12% of doctors sampled were overprescribing, and 56% of the pharmacies were filling forged prescriptions. In many cases, physicians actually sold controlled substances to patients for additional profit.

THE LADY MAUD, A WIDOW WHOSE HUSBAND WAS KILLED IN BATTLE, NOW BEFRIENDED BY THE QUEEN, HAS BECOME A LADY-IN-WAITING.

SHE TURNS AWAY ANGRILY AND ALMOST BUMPS INTO GOOD-NATURED SIR MAXWELL. "OH, SIR MAXWELL, WOULD YOU WEAR MY SCARF IN THE TOURNAMENT AND BE MY GALLANT KNIGHT?"

THE LADY MAUD HAD HOPED SIR MAXWELL WOULD CARRY HER GAGE. WELL, TWO CAN PLAY THAT GAME..... SHE SEEKS OUT VAL AND HE, JEALOUS, ACCEPTS HER SCARF. SO ANY BRAVE DEEDS HE ACCOMPLISHES WILL BE IN HER HONOR.
