More Than Local Option Bill Action

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Although the local option liquor-by-the-drink bill probably received the most publicity of any measure enacted by the 1978 General Assembly, Pitt County's resident legislators are quick to point out that the legislative session handled many other items, including the budget for the coming year.

"The big thing was the budget...the $279 million we had to appropriate," Sen. Vernon White said. "The highlight for me was the fact that we funded the first building for the School of Veterinary Medicine," at N.C. State University.

Both White and House member Sam Bundy pointed to the fact that the Legislature appropriated $1.9 million for the Wahl-Coates renovation project at East Carolina University — the first phase of which will provide improvements to the auditorium used by the Summer Theater and Drama Department facilities.

In addition, the $3.8 million for the bed tower at Pitt Memorial Hospital — a part of the medical school project was retained in the budget, while $225,000 was appropriated for the Eastern Carolina Sheltered Workshop in Greenville as part of the local match for a federal grant for a recreation and housing facility.

ECU also received $5.5 million for continuation of the School of Medicine, Bundy noted.

"I'll say this, the General Assembly worked harder for this 13 days than anytime before. We worked hard this time," Bundy emphasized.

As for liquor-by-the-drink, Bundy noted, "I would say in the eight years I've been in the General Assembly, there was more pressure and raw politics brought to bear to get people to change their votes," on this question than any other. "It's now in the hands of the people in each county or town that has an ABC system," Bundy said.

Saying that ABC stores have been operated in Pitt County since 1935, Horton Rountree, speaker pro-tem of the House, pointed out that the liquor bill passed by the General Assembly was not a vote, for or against liquor. "It was a vote to give counties the opportunity to choose how they wish to dispense it."

All three legislators indicated doubt as to the success of a vote in Pitt for liquor-by-the-drink.

Rountree noted that the liquor bill places a $10 per gallon tax on whiskey sold for by-the-drink sales. Counties would receive $9 of the tax, while $1 would go to the Department of Human Resources for alcohol treatment programs.

The legislators pointed out that some 14 or 15 counties in North Carolina have no ABC system and therefore would not be affected in any way by the legislation.

Less Jobless

RALEIGH, N. C. (AP) — Registering another drop, North Carolina's unemployment rate fell to 3.8 percent in May, the Employment Security Commission reported Thursday.

Not since the pre-recessionary month of August, 1974, when statewide unemployment registered 3.4 percent has the rate of joblessness in North Carolina been so low.

Last month, nearly 103,000 North Carolinians were without jobs, some 4,000 fewer than in April when unemployment measured 4 percent. In May of 1977 North Carolina's jobless rate was 5.6 percent.

The nationwide unemployment rate for May was 5.5 percent, unadjusted, the commission said.

Constitutional Fight Looms

By FRANK CORMIER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter is squaring off for a possible constitutional fight with Congress over its jealously guarded legislative veto authority — a power that presidents since Herbert Hoover have found distasteful.

In a special message to Congress, Carter said Wednesday he believes such vetoes are unconstitutional. And he served notice that generally he will no longer feel legally bound by legislative vetoes "over the execution of programs."

The legislative veto is a device built into laws affecting the operation and financing of the executive branch. It enables Congress to reject presidential proposals without giving him an opportunity to override the lawmakers. Congress, on the other hand — through constitutional authority — can override a presidential veto on a two-thirds vote by both houses.

The first law containing legislative veto authority was enacted in the early 1930s. The power now is an element of some 300 provisions in about 200 laws.

The president's message cited situations in which Congress insists that "each decision or regulation under a program" be delayed for a specified period, during which time "a majority of both houses, or either house, or even a single committee is authorized to veto the action."

Attorney General Griffin Bell told reporters at the White House that if Congress had exercised a legislative veto last month over the $4.8 billion jet warplane sale to Saudi Arabia, Egypt and Israel, Carter "would not be bound, in our view" to accept the rejection as legally binding.

However, Stuart Eizenstat, Carter's chief domestic affairs adviser, said that "as a matter of comity," Carter would continue to abide by any legislative vetoes exercised under the War Powers Act or laws governing foreign military sales.

Rick Neustadt, an aide to Eizenstat, said the message was sent to Congress at this time because some 40 to 50 bills awaiting House action contain provisions for legislative vetoes.

Salonika Quake Toll Hits 20 Counted, And Rising

A SHAKEN CITY — Residents of Salonika camp in open sections of the city after an earthquake left many dead and injured. The aftershocks continue to life and limb in the ancient city. (AP Laserphoto)

SALONIKA, Greece (AP) — The death toll from the powerful earthquake that hit Salonika rose to 20 as six more bodies were found in the rubble of a collapsed eight-story apartment house, police said today.

Police and army searchers said they expected to uncover more bodies. The stench of decomposition permeated the air as temperatures rose to 95 degrees.

Early today, some residents returned home to claim personal belongings while others went to buy food and supplies. Many downtown businesses opened briefly before their owners boarded up smashed windows to return to parks on the outskirts of this industrial city.

Authorities warned that more aftershocks were expected and told residents to remain outdoors and away from high buildings.

Civil engineers toured the old city where buildings built prior to World War II took the brunt of Tuesday's quake. The engineers declared at least five apartment houses unsafe for occupancy because of dangerous cracks.

The government of Premier Constantine Caramanlis continued to airlift tents and medical supplies from military airbases around the country. It said there were no plans to seek foreign aid.

Only a handful of Salonika's public buses were on the road as were taxis. Most hotels were reported near empty as an estimated 50,000 tourists left the city in fear of a stronger tremor.

Of the dead, police said only one was a foreigner, a Yugoslav.

Won't Help

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court today refused to help settle a dispute between California and Texas over the estate of millionaire recluse Howard Hughes.

In a one-sentence order without explanation, the justices refused to exercise the "original jurisdiction" granted to them by the Constitution to settle certain controversies between the states.

At stake in the California-Texas dispute are huge inheritance taxes from the vast fortune Hughes left when he died in 1976.

California, in effect, sued Texas in the Supreme Court. California officials told the justices that only they could pull the states off a "collision course" over the Hughes estate.

In an unsigned order apparently joined by all nine justices, the court today said, "The motion for leave to file a bill of complaint is denied."

It appears now that legal battles over taxes on Hughes' millions will continue independently in both states.

California had wanted the court to decide which state was Hughes' "home" when he died.

Big Labor's Lobby Busy

By DAVID ESPO
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — About 10 members of the Transport Workers Union from Florida filed into the office of Sen. Lawton Chiles late Wednesday afternoon for a little talk about revision of the labor laws.

No reporters were allowed at the session with the Florida Democrat, by vote of the union lobbyists.

"This is so crucial for us, we'd like an opportunity to talk to the senator unencumbered," said spokesman Bob Callahan.

Callahan and his group of flight attendants and airport ground workers each wore a pin that said they were attending an AFL-CIO convention. They were the latest in a long line of lobbyists to meet with Chiles to talk about the controversial legislation, tied up by filibuster since May 16.

With the Senate scheduled to take a sixth anti-filibuster vote today, it appears they might also be the last.

Senate sources indicated privately that if the bill's supporters cannot succeed in choking off the filibuster on this try, the bill will be withdrawn and thus doomed to defeat.

"All the lobbyists in the world don't make any difference now," said one official, adding that what counts is what senators say to each other.

Chiles, who has voted five times previously to sustain the filibuster, was asked after the meeting whether he will change his mind. "I don't anticipate it," he said.

Meantime, Senate Democratic Leader Robert C. Byrd, Sen. Harrison A. Williams, D-N.J., and other backers of the bill were trying to salvage at least a partial victory from the long, bitterly contested fight.

They, too, met privately with aides, administration officials and representatives of organized labor.

It takes 60 votes to cut off a filibuster. The bill's supporters have fallen two votes short the last two times they tried to halt debate.

Efforts to find the votes have focused increasingly in recent days on Sen. Russell Long, D-La., Long met for nearly two hours on Tuesday with Byrd and Williams to discuss possible changes in the bill, and other meetings are planned.

To attract additional votes for the bill, Williams said publicly for the first time he is willing to jettison a provision giving union organizers access to company premises under certain conditions.

This so-called "equal access" provision is one area where Long is seeking changes, according to a spokesman.

The legislation provides stiffer penalties against labor law violators and would give unions new leverage in organizing workers.

Businesses which oppose the measure say it would give unions an unfair advantage over employers in organizing drives.

Backers say the measure would protect workers from unscrupulous employers trying to deprive them of their rights.

PARAQUAT

I would like to know something about that chemical that is said to be sprayed on marijuana in Mexico that's harmful to the lungs. What's it called? M. J.

Paraquat is the trade name of a herbicide which has been sprayed on cannabis (marijuana) plants in Mexico since 1975, according to a "Paraquat Fact Sheet" recently made available by REAL Inc. here. Some of this marijuana has been harvested and shipped to the U. S. Especially if mixed with non-contaminated marijuana, it is difficult for the average user to identify it.

Smoking paraquet-contaminated marijuana causes a buildup of the substance in the lungs and an irreversible lesions in the cells which line the aveoli (air sacs) Scar tissue is formed and the lung portion affected is destroyed.

March 12 of this year the Secretary of H. E. W. issued a statement warning users of the dangers of inhalation of this substance. Use of this herbicide continues in Mexico and no termination date for this program has been announced, the warning indicated.

For more information, one may contact REAL Crisis Intervention, 758-HELP or the East Carolina University Regional Drug Program. Other information may be obtained from the Environmental Protection Agency, Special Pesticide Review Board, Washington, D. Rain Welcome Despite Electrical Problems

By REBECCA BUFFALOE
Reflector Staff Writer

Approximately 1.27 inches of rain fell last night in a thundersorm that caused some problems for electrical customers, but eased the dry farm situation.

Malcolm Green of the Greenville Utilities Commission reported that direct lightning struck around the area of a utility pole at the intersection of Fourth and Elizabeth Streets at approximately 3:30 this morning.

"It hit where three circuits crossed and burned the wires," Green noted. "Power was off from part of Tenth St. to Dickinson Ave., as well as part of Hooker Road for about 45 minutes

In addition, there were scattered incidents, with maybe ten to 12 blown fuses and six to eight transformer problems, according to Green.

"I'd say it was a pretty severe storm, but as far as any major damage went, most everyone with problems was taken care of by 7 a.m.," Green commented.

Leroy James of the Pitt County Agricultural Extension Service, called the situation "a million dollar rain."

"I visited some farmers in Frog Level this morning, and the rain was a welcome sight for them," James said.

The rain helped the corn crop, which was showing some signs of dry patches. Also, the rain was a key factor in helping fertilizer get a good start in the tobacco fields, according to James.

"This rain saved some farmers $10,000-$15,000," James noted. "They were ready to install irrigation systems to help out their crops."

ECU Grants

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Congressman Walter Jones announced the approval of two grants to East Carolina University by the Public Health Service.

Jones said that the grants involved: $97,200 for predoctoral training in family medicine; and $153,834 for a graduate program in community mental health nursing.

The congressman reported that approval has also been given by the Office of Education, Department of Health, Education and Welfare, for the following three grants under the Cooperative Education Program: Pitt Technical Institute, $35,330; Lenoir Community College, Kinston, $34,475; and Craven Community College, New Bern, $10,504.

Cooperative Education Programs are those which alternate periods of fulltime academic study with periods of fulltime public or private employment.

Ties Cut By Chicago Jaycees

CHICAGO (AP) — The Chicago Jaycees have withdrawn from the United States Jaycees because the national organization will not admit women members.

The 350-member Chicago chapter severed its national and state ties Wednesday after delegates to the national Jaycees convention in Atlantic City, N.J., voted to keep male-only membership rules.

A proposed change in Jaycee by-laws which would have permitted women members at the option of state Jaycee chapters was defeated in a voice vote of some 7,000 delegates at the convention.

Begin Serving Life Sentences

KINGSTON, N.Y. (AP) — Anthony "Tony Pro" Provenzano and his associate, Harold Konigsberg, begin serving life sentences today at Dannemora State Prison for the murder of a union rival 17 years ago.

Provenzano, 60, and Konigsberg, 49, were sentenced to life imprisonment Wednesday for their roles in the strangling death of Anthony "Three Fingers Tony" Castellito, secretary-treasurer of Teamsters' Union Local 506 in New Jersey. Provenzano was the branch's president at the time.

Dupree New President Of Sheltered Workshop

James Dupree of Bethel was elected president of the board of directors of the Eastern Carolina Sheltered, Workshop and Vocational Rehabilitation at a dinner meeting Tuesday.

Other elected officers were Howard Haskell, vice president, Mrs. Lorraine Gupton, secretary, Jerry Powell, treasurer, and Eugene Rogers, assistant treasurer.

In other business, a tentative budget of $1,233,684 was approved by the board. The figure included approximately $500,000 in staff salaries, $200,000 in client salaries, $200,000 in subcontract materials, $30,000 in student activities, $55,000 in food, $100,000 in transportation and $150,000 in operation costs, which included utilities and fuel costs, according to Howard Dawkins, executive director.

It was reported that the workshop had been accredited by the Commission of Accreditation for Rehabilitation Facilities. The workshop is the first non-profit center in the state to receive accreditation.

Each year, the workshop selects two outstanding industries, two outstanding citizens and one professional as appreciation of services rendered. The Procter and Gamble Co. and Burroughs Wellcome Corporation, Sen. Vernon White, Rep. Horton Rountree and Miss Linda Ray were selected for their contributions. Charles Stone, outgoing president of the board was recognized with a certificate of appreciation for his leadership.

The following were elected to A three-year terms on the board: Art Gayla, Ed Carter, Les Garner, Bob Martin, Ken Dews, Charles Vincent, Russell Griffin and Eugene Rogers of Martin County. Mrs. Judy Greene and Jerry Powell were elected for two-year terms.

Ellis-Edwards Vows Said On Saturday Afternoon

The wedding of Arlene Edwards, daughter of Mrs. Ann Harrell Edwards and Mr. Archie Lee Edwards of Greenville, and Billy Don Ellis, son of Mr. and Mrs. Billy Clark Ellis of Greenville, took place at 2 p.m. Saturday at Arlington Street Baptist Church. The double ring ceremony was performed by the Rev. E. T. Vinson.

A program of wedding music was presented by Mrs. Louise Hearne, organist, and soloist Angela Langley. Vocal selections included "If," "More" and "The Wedding Prayer" while the couple knelt.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore a formal length gown of white organza over white peau de soie designed with a Queen Anne neckline outlined in sculptured silk Venise lace beaded with pearls. The empire bodice was overlaid in panels of the beaded lace and the full bishop sleeves featured cuffs trimmed in appliques of the sculptured lace. The modified A-line skirt and attached chapel length train were edged at the hemline with the silk matching lace and featured a flounce topped by motifs of sculptured lace.

She wore a walking length veil of silk illusion in a mantilla design edged in lace to complement her wedding gown held in place by a caplet overlaid in miniature Venise lace and offset with strands of pearls that extended down the mantilla between appliques of Venise lace.

MRS. BILLY DON ELLIS

Miss Le Ann Edwards, sister of the bride, was honor attendant. She wore a formal length gown of blue knit designed with a Queen Anne neckline outlined in blue floral silk Venise lace that extended over the fitted empire bodice to the waistline. The short cap sleeves were edged in the blue silk matching Venise lace. The gown was enhanced by a knife pleated skirt.

She wore a blue ruffled brimmed garden hat to complement her gown and carried a cluster bouquet of white and yellow daisies, blue silk flowers, roses and ivy tied with blue satin streamers.

Bridesmaids included Miss Rose Ellis, sister of the bridegroom, Miss Elaine Nichols, Miss Susan Hall, Miss Tami Haddock and Miss Leslie Ward, all of Greenville. Their attire and flowers were identical to that of the honor attendant.

The father of the bridegroom was best man and groomsmen included Gene Bunn, Roy Hudson, Randy Harris, Ray Nichols and Paul Farmer, all of Greenville.

The mother of the bride wore a floor length gown of peach silesta knit designed with a high neckline and gathered cowl collar. The mother of the bridegroom selected a formal length gown of cotillion blue chiffon designed with an asymnetrical neckline, empire bodice and butterfly sleeves. Both mothers wore cymbidium orchids.

Mrs. Kenneth Braxton, grandmother of the bride, and Mrs. H. O. Baldree, grandmother of the bridegroom, were presented corsages of white carnations.

Mr. and Mrs. Ellis presented each mother a long-stemmed red rose after the ceremony.

Mrs. Bonnie Barber, aunt of the bride, presided at the register at the church.

The bride's table was covered with a white lace cloth. An epergne arrangement of mixed spring flowers centered the table. Refreshments were served by Mrs. Faye Goff, Mrs. Jane Edwards and Miss Leslie Harrell.

Mrs. Barber presided at the register.

For a wedding trip, the bride changed into a blue ensemble and wore her mother's corsage. After a trip to Florida, the couple will live in Greenville.

Bridal Policies

A black and white glossy five by seven photograph is requested for engagement announcements. For publication in a Sunday edition, the information must be submitted by 12 noon on the preceding Wednesday. Engagement pictures must be released at least three weeks prior to the wedding date. After three weeks, only an announcement will be printed.

Wedding write-ups will printed through the first week with a five by seven picture. During the second week with a wallet size picture and write-up giving less description and after the second week, just as an announcement. Wedding forms and pictures should be returned to "The Daily Reflector" one week prior to the date of the wedding. All information should be typed or written neatly.

Couple Celebrates Anniversary

MR. AND MRS. L. FOSTER REID

Mr. and Mrs. L. Foster Reid of Greenville were honored by their children, Mrs. Elizabeth Hardee and Mrs. Ann Wilson of Greenville, and R. E. Reid of Richmond, Va., on their golden wedding anniversary Sunday.

The reception was held in the fellowship hall of the Black Jack Pentecostal Free Will Baptist Church.

Mr. and Mrs. Reid and their family greeted guests. Gifts were open and displayed by Mrs. Dorothy Galloway and Mrs. Kathy Riggs.

Mrs. Wanda Hardee and Mrs. Charlotte Mills served wedding cake. Punch was poured by Miss Elizabeth Ann Reid, granddaughter of the honored couple. Mrs. Pauline Sandeford, Mrs. Faye Gay and Mrs. Shirley Smith assisted in serving.

The fellowship hall was decorated throughout with magnolia, ivy and summer flowers. Tables were covered with white lace cloths and held centerpieces of yellow daisies and white mums flanked by gold candles.

Approximately 200 guests attended the reception.

Couple Weds In Ceremony

Angela Mae Kinsaul and Joseph Critz Hillard were married Saturday in the Bell Arthur Methodist Church. The Rev. Henry Hunnings officiated at the double ring ceremony at 3:00 p.m.

Music was presented by Mrs. Allen Letchworth.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Kinsaul of Rt. 1, Greenville, and is a rising senior at Farmville Central.

The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. William George Hillard of Rt. 2, Walstonburg. He is a graduate of Farmville Central and attended Lenoir Community College. He is a self-employed carpenter.

After a wedding trip to the mountains, the couple will live in Marlboro.

Cleanliness Still Leads Loyalty Study

NEW YORK (UPI) — In an annual store-loyalty survey, consumers who were asked to rate supermarkets according to 37 factors put low prices in third place this year, up from fifth last year.

The "Progressive Grocer" study showed cleanliness remained the most important factor. Frequent sales or specials and a good selection of low-priced store brands each moved up two places, to 12th and 17th places, respectively.

"While the 1978 survey shows all shoppers are willing to live with some inconvenience to get lower prices, working women are unwilling to sacrifice either," wrote Jo-ann Zbytniewski in the Update Consumer Watch department. "For example, working women rank convenient store location, well-stocked shelves, good parking facilities and accurate, pleasant checkout clerks higher than did other shoppers. Other services this group rated substantially higher were short waits and the checkout and baggers.

Vinegar Helps Remove Marks

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — Vinegar helps remove old hemline marks from synthetic garments. First wash or dry clean the apparel, treating if necessary with a spot removal product. To avoid watermarks or rings, rub the lines gently with quick, light brushing strokes, using a vinegar-dampened cloth, and iron out the lines or creases with a steam iron and a clean pressing cloth.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

It is rare when adults and children share the same interpretation of a word or phrase.

Thus, water pollution to adults may mean harmful foreign bodies that threaten existence, but to a boy it means "girls swimming in the pool at the same time I do."

Parental brutality is "making me wash my face when I'm not going anywhere."

And incarceration in a penal colony without the advantages of due process of law comes out "summer school."

We've always had a rule in our family. You either get a job or go to summer school. We initiated this ruling when I spent three years with my son one summer listening to him whine, "There's nothing to do."

We don't care what they take so long as they get out of bed, get dressed, leave the house, and get a credit for it.

Our son appeared at breakfast yesterday morning en route to his first day at the summer session.

"Want breakfast?"

"Do I have time?" he snarled. "Or do you want me to get there early and help set up chairs and check people in?"

"Why are you so angry?"

"Hey, am I hostile? Believe me, I'm going to do the same things when I have kids . . . roust 'em out at the break of ten in the morning all summer long and send them off to a military compound where they're experimenting with solar heat in the classroom. There they'll load them down with homework so they can't hear a newborn baby cry, or touch a leaf, or see the sky."

"Then I'll know why I believe," I said, finishing the song. "It'll never make the top ten."

"C'mon," he said, "I don't know what it is with you and Dad. I thought you wanted happy children out of your marriage. All you've got is a sweaty, irritable kid without affection who goes through every summer having anxiety attacks.

"I just finished up an entire year of study, study, study, term papers, notes, quizzes, tests, finals, research, bibliographies, orals, lack of sleep, dates, places. I don't know how much longer I can go on without cracking!"

If he hadn't been taking a summer class in party guitar, he might have gotten through to me.

Special guests present were Mrs. Edna Coniffee of Fayetteville, grand regent of the Women of the Moose, and Mrs. Margaret Bost of Salisbury, a member of the Grand Council, the WOTM governing body.

Appointed officers installed included: Mrs. Melba Hargett, guide; Mrs. Charlotte Ramey, assistant guide; Mrs. Dorothy Fleming, sentinel; Mrs. Betty McLawhorn, argus; and Mrs. Virginia Taylor, pianist.

Chapter Development Committee chairmen installed were: Mrs. Billie Terrell, publicity; Mrs. Lucille Harrell, Mooseheart; Mrs. Linda McKeel, library; Mrs. Marjorie Bailey, social service; Mrs. Katherine Cannon, child care; Mrs. Clara West, hospital; Mrs. Lucille Gertz, membership; Mrs. Marilyn Tucker, Moosehaven; Mrs. Wilma Turner, College of Regents; Mrs. Virginia Morgan, Academy of Friendship; and Mrs. Molly Harris, Star Recorder.

Special committee chairmen are: Mrs. Elizabeth Moore, sick and cheer and scrapbook; Mrs. Ramey, bloodmobile; and Mrs. Barnes, ways and means.

Mrs. Harris, Mrs. Betty Diehl and Mrs. Peggy Jamieson will serve as the auditing committee. Chapter officers will direct the clothing bank and James A. Harris Sr. will be chapter photographer.

Named to serve as escorts for officers were Mrs. Mabel Rivenbark, Mrs. Janie Radford, Mrs. Linda Umphlett, Mrs. Nina Baker, Mrs. Mildred Prebish, Mrs. Ethel Allen, Mrs. Eva Spain and Mrs. Doris Edmondson.

Edwin M. Baldree, Eli Bloom and Harris, members of Greenville Moose Lodge No. 885 and Pilgrims, served as installing officers. Mrs. Etta Bloom was installing pianist and Miss Ellen Heidenreich, chapter guest, was soloist for the evening. Miss Cheryl Clark and Miss Margaret Clark were pages.

Mrs. Barnes was presented a gift from the chapter by Mrs. Daughtridge. Mrs. Beulah Jordan presented Mrs. Barnes the chapter scrapbook.

Mrs. Barnes presented Mrs. Turner with a charm denoting her membership in the College of Regents. She was invested into the WOTM's highest honor group in ceremonies held earlier this month at Mooseheart.

Refreshments were served in the Red Room for chapter members and guests. Mrs. Earline Coghill, Mrs. Ellen Bradford and Mrs. Joann Proctor assisted in serving.

Wins The Game, Loses The Man

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1978 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: I'm an attractive girl who likes sports, and I'm exceptionally good at them. When I compete with a man I usually win, but it's a bitter victory because from then on, the fellow I beat promptly loses interest in me—romantically.

It happens every time, Abby. When a man competes with me and loses, his ego takes a beating, and no man is inclined to get turned on by a woman who's athletically superior to him.

I would like a romance, but I also like to win. Will romance ever bloom if I keep winning? To lose a game or lose a boyfriend—that's the choice. What do you way?

LIKES TO WIN

DEAR LIKES: Always play to win. A real man will enjoy the challenge. And those who would lose interest in you romantically because they lost aren't men, they're crybabies.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I have a 3-year-old daughter whom we adore. We were unable to have more children, so we adopted "A"—a 2-year-old girl who had been in several foster homes before we got her.

The problem is that we honestly don't feel the same about "A" as we do about our own child. "A" whines constantly and seems generally dissatisfied and contrary. (When I'm holding her she wants "down," and when she's down she whines until I pick her up.)

Our own child is always cooperative and lovable. My husband and I feel guilty for our thoughts. Is it natural for parents to favor their own child over one who's adopted? And can parents be blamed for favoring the child who's more cooperative and lovable?

I can't sign this for obvious reasons, but I need to know if other adoptive parents feel as we do? And what can be done about it.

FEELING GUILTY

DEAR FEELING: Whether the child is your own flesh and blood or adopted, the least lovable child is the one who needs your love the most. Don't feel guilty for honest emotions. Ask the agency from which you received the adopted child if they provide counseling for this problem. (It's not uncommon.) Or write to Parents Anonymous, 2810 Artesia Blvd., Redondo Beach, Calif. 90278 for the address of a chapter near you.

Sharing your experiences and feelings with other parents who have learned how to deal with "unlovable children" can bring blessed relief. And please let me know the outcome. I care.

DEAR ABBY: Yesterday at the neighborhood beauty shop which I patronized for years, I was irked by the new operator who did my hair. She did a good job, but when she finished, she said, "That will be $10, plus $2 for the tip."

Is it accepted procedure in some areas to state the tip expected? I have never encountered this before and it annoyed me. Unless you tell me that I am off center here, I plan to speak to the manager about this. Perhaps it's a new policy.

PHILADELPHIAN

DEAR PHILADELPHIAN: Although customs may differ in different areas, I know of no area where it's "accepted procedure" to ask for a tip for ANY service.

Are your problems too heavy to handle alone? Let Abby help you. For a personal, unpublished reply, write: Abby: Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069. Enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Mrs. Bowman Gives Program

The Lake Ellsworth Garden Club held its June meeting at The Scotch Bonnet. A workshop program "Counted Cross Stitch" was presented by Mrs. Carol Bowman.

She instructed members on how to select material for counted cross stitching, how to apply graft to the material and the stitch to use on their project.

Refreshments were served by hostesses for the evening, Mrs. Ruth Rollins and Mrs. Nan Garrett.

Historic School Board Change

A new city school board and a new chairman were sworn into office Monday evening.

It was historic in that the new board included members who were elected. Previously the entire board had been appointive. The partially elected board was decided upon after public sentiment seemed to swing that way. Now six of the members are elected and three are appointed by the Greenville City Council.

The members will serve staggered terms. One appointed member will serve for four years. The top three elected members in the balloting will serve for four years. In the future all new members will serve four year terms with part of the board coming up for election each two years.

Along with the change of board members a new chairman was named. Terry Shank, who was a former member of the board elected to a full term. was named chairman. She replaced Henry Dunn, who was not reelected.

The city schools have had a number of problems in recent years, particularly with facilities and their maintenance. The board members will have to delve in and study the problems facing the school, coming up with solutions which can be carried out in the most economical way. They must remember money alone won't solve all educational problems. We think area tax payers will support the schools financially, but it will be up to the school board to see that every dollar is used wisely.

U.S. Still Has Time, But Must Start

It shouldn't be a surprise that even moderate Saudi Arabia is pushing for an oil price increase in early 1979.

A Saudi Arabia spokesman said moderate increases were needed to avoid sharper increases in the 1980s.

In the United States we still have time to get our energy comsumption under control before exorbitant world oil prices break us. We will have to make sacrifices, but better to start now than to wait until we are squeezed to death.

Focus Is On Personality

By Bill Noblitt

RALEIGH — Do politicians lay their careers on the line with every vote cast when the General Assembly is in session?

Far from it, says State Rep. Carl J. Stewart, Jr., D-Gaston, who is a veteran of 10 years in the Legislature, and speaker of the house.

"Elections are no not won or lost on the basis of how a member of the assembly votes on a particular issue...but on how you get along with the people at home," Stewart believes. A significant point in light of the liquor vote.

Pressure comes from many sources to convince legislators to swing one way or another on particular issues. Letters are pouring in this session on the Equal Rights Amendment up for its third round of debate in the General Assembly.

Do such emotional displays really influence assemblymen? "Not very much. Most are interested in what their people at home think. But the members must also exercise leadership.

Take A Stand

"If they take a stand on a controversial and emotional issue, and explain that position clearly and honestly, then even people disagree will normally accept the position," Stewart said.

What really counts, says Stewart, is how the legislator behaves: if he expresses genuine interest in local problems; if if he relates to the people and keeps in touch; if he doesn't get arrogant and egotistical, letting the position go to his head, then local support will generally remain secure despite particular stances.

But when a legislator begings to feel "above the people," and takes advantage of the position, defeat is imminent, Stewart thinks.

Contact with the home folks is playing an ever more important role in legislative matters. The most effective lobbying organizations have recognized that pressure exerted in Raleigh is not nearly as powerful as subtle influences applied at home...legislators pay more attention to what their friends and neighbors say at church, at the club, at local get-togethers than they do to the professionals hanging around the State House.

BILL NOBLITT

Lobbying

The highly rated League of Municipalities and County Commissioners Association operate through local contacts more and more.

That technique is also coming to the attention of legislative leaders. Stewart said there are efforts to hold critical votes on emotional issues (such as ERA) rapidly; calling in the decisions in one or two days and avoiding weekend breaks during which minds can be changed.

Does the growing tendency to remain longer and longer in Raleigh each session, and to hold sessions each year instead of every two years tend to take lawmakers out of touch with the homefolk; turning them into professional legislators?

There is that danger, Stewart thinks, but that point has not been reached. Even so legislators have ample time (especially given the long weekend breaks from Friday noon til Monday night) to remain in touch with home, he feels.

Stewart also finds little exciting in the financial disclosure statements now required of legislators. He said the Raleigh news outlets focused on those reports, noting that the assembly is largely wealthy and many have close ties to banks.

That comes as no surprise to the people at home, Stewart said. The people already knew who had money and who didn't, and what kind of businesses they are connected with.

Small Blow For Freedom

Bud Shuster struck a blow for freedom in the House the other day. It was a good lusty blow, landed with verve and vigor, and it adds to the evidence that maybe, just maybe, Congress is turning away from the federal paternalism of recent years.

Shuster is the Pennsylvania congressman who has led the fight against the airbag. In case you have come late to this particular controversy, a word of background is in order.

Over at the Department of Transportation, the solicitous nannies who run the safety bureaucracy are obsessed with the device known as the airbag. This is a contraption invented by some latter-day Rube Goldberg. Upon sufficient impact, a firing pin (a) releases a canister of gas (b) which inflates a nylon bag (c) which pops out from under the steering wheel (d), thus preventing the driver (e) from going through the windshield (f).

Airbags have been fairly well tested in real-world experience. They appear to work splendidly in head-on collisions; accidental inflations have been few. After some years of backing and filling, the Department of Transportation last year issued an order binding upon all auto manufacturers: Starting with 1982 model year, cars must be equipped with airbags.

Shuster did his best last fall to overturn this mandate. He rounded up 160 members of the House to join him in a resolution of disapproval, but his resolution got bottled up in committee. Time ran out and the DOT's order took on the force and effect of law.

Shuster and his colleagues surely are not in favor of death on the highways. They are in favor of personal responsibility. They believe in individual freedom. On June 10, when the DOT appropriations bill reached the floor of the House, they packed all their accumulated resentments into a neat little amendment. The amendment, if it sticks in the final bill, will prohibit anyone at at the department from spending any funds in fiscal '79 for "implementation or enforcement" or airbag standards or regulations.

The amendment passed by a resounding vote of 237 to 143.

During the course of a long and heated debate, Silvio Conte of Massachusetts derided the Shuster amendment. "It does nothing," he cried. "It is zilch. Zilch!" But Conte is wrong. There are times when it is imensely useful for the House to send a message to the executive bureaucracy. The vote on June 10 was precisely such an occasion. Secretary Brock Adams, who used to be a member of the House himself, cannot misread the rebuke. He and his safety zealots have crossed the line that separates sensible regulation from a maddening compulsion.

This was a good debate. California's John J. McFall defended the DOT's airbag requirement out of the wispy, well-intentioned liberalism which holds that if the people won't be good, we must make them be good. Because motorists will not fasten their seat belts, he said, "something else has to be done."

Shuster and his allies took the opposite view. Virginia's Robert W. Daniel denounced the notion that "government must be the shepherd and make decisions for us." William S. Broomfield of Michigan had no objection to the government's encouraging the use of safety equipment, "but in the end a free people should be left to make their own decision."

Critics of the airbag re-

Cancer & Dollars

(Greensboro Daily News)

Seven years ago, amid fanfare and promise, Washington launched its heralded "war on cancer." Since then, some notable skirmishes have been won and lives have been prolonged, yet final conquest of the disease has been tragically elusive. Meanwhile, the price tag has totaled almost $1 billion annually.

Last week, two prominent members of the U.S. Senate asked some hard questions about how cancer research money is being spent. That in itself was a sharp departure from the ordinary, since Congress normally rubber-stamps cancer research with generous funding and remarkable little fuss.

But this year, Sen. George McGovern and Sen. Robert Dole, two members of the Senate nutrition subcommittee, criticized the National Cancer Institute for spending too much money on treatments for the disease after it occurs, and too little on trying to prevent it.

Specifically, the criticisms focused on the National Cancer Institute's failure to allocate more money for studying the possible link between diet and cancer. Only one percent of the total research budget is now targeted for such research, despite Sen. McGovern's claim (as well as some scientists') that half of all cancers may be caused by nutritional factors.

The notion that eating habits are directly related to cancer is not a new one. We know, for example, there is a low incidence of colon cancer in societies whose major diet consists of fruits, grains and vegetables. We also know that excess fat in the diet leads to certain forms of cancer.

Yet, major dietary question marks remain, particularly in the category of food additives. These are the chemicals that processors have added to foods for years as preservatives that suppress bacterial growth.

Two additives currently suspect are sodium nitrate and sodium nitrite, both of which are added to processed meats to ward off bacteria. Almost all hotdogs, that good old American staple, contain them. Yet nitrates and nitrites, combined with certain amino acids, have induced cancer in laboratory animals. Food processors claim, however, that meats without these additives are a spawning ground for bacteria that produce fatal botulism.

The dietary question—be it additives, fried hamburgers, or saccharin—is not a simple one, and Senators McGovern and Dole are rightly impatient that it has not been more carefully explored sooner.

Dr. Arthur Upton, director of the National Cancer Institute, last week promised to correct the situation by increasing the $16 million now spent annually on nutrition research to $30 million by 1981.

It's high time this avenue of research was more vigorously examined. Like so many blind alleys of the past that raided false hopes about cancer causes and cures, this one also may lead to a dead end. But it's worth exploring.

Carter Is Not Alone

By FRANK CORMIER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter can take solace in the fact he's not the only chief of state to have problems with translators.

Carter, who experienced much-publicized translation difficulties in Poland last December, was toasted by Colombia's Spanish-speaking president at a state dinner in Panama last weekend.

White House reporters listening to a simultaneous English translation of the toast by President Alfonso Lopez Michelsen were startled to hear the woman translator interrupt herself with the exasperated explanation, "I can't hear this!"

Carter, before offering a toast of his own, was overheard saying into an open microphone — he had trouble with one of those in India, remember — "I'll be briefed in one minute time."

The listening reporters, who were in another building, could not guess at the cause of Carter's comment. However, the U.S. president began his toast about a minute later.

Walking out of Sunday services at the First Baptist Church here this week, Carter was brought up short by a woman's voice behind him saying, "Jimmy, Jimmy."

Pausing and tilting his head, the president responded, "Yes ma'am?"

Reporters got the impression he did not immediately recognize the voice of his wife Rosalynn. Understandable perhaps, because she was not alone in calling out to him.

Carter continues to battle always with success, for clarity and proper grammar in federal documents.

Earlier this month, the president sent the Senate a message urging ratification of an agreement involving North Pacific fisheries "between the United States, Canada and Japan."

A spokesman for the National Security Council, which passed the message to the Oval Office for Carter's signature, acknowledged that the rules of grammar are not suspended in diplomatic usage.

Spokesman Ed Penney said the document obviously should have referred to an agreement "among" the three nations.

The White House playground has been expanded. First the

THE INSIDE REPORT

Civil Defense Ideas Shift

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — President Carter's reorganization plan taking civil defense out of the Pentagon and putting it in the White House will soon be followed by a secret National Security Council (NSC) study demolishing the arms control lobby's arguments that Soviet civil defense does not matter.

The reorganization plan was fought to the end by Secretary of Defense Harold Brown, a confirmed skeptic about civil defense. The NSC study is passionately opposed by chief disarmament negotiator Paul Warnke, who contends that civil defense is useless. Taken together, the two moves suggest a radical and wholly unexpected shift in Carter administration policy.

However, this is only a beginning. As unconvinced defenseoriented members of Congress point out, there is no money commitment approaching what the Russians spend to protect their people. But Mr. Carter now has the organizational and theoretical base to generate public support for civil defense, if he desires.

Civil defense has been dead in this country for 15 years, killed the last year of the Kennedy administration. Mr. Carter seemed ready to bury it for good March 30, 1977, when he announced U.S.-Soviet plans to "mutually agree on forgoing major efforts in civil defense," Secretary Brown publicly belittled Soviet civil defense and privately muzzled Air Force intelligence officers worried about it.

Intentionally or not, this fit the arms control theology which holds U.S.-Soviet agreements are possible only if erican citizens perceive that civil defense cannot prevent tual destruction. Adam Yarmolinsky, counselor of the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency (ACDA), privately contends that advocates of civil defense are saying "a nuclear war could be no worse than a bad cold."

Change was generated last year from an unlikely source: Bardyl Tirana, a liberal Washington lawyer with no military background who opposed the Vietnam war and supported George McGovern. Named head of civil defense in the Pentagon to his own and the military's consternation, Tirana quickly concluded that Jimmy Carter could not take a position countenancing mass slaughter of Americans in a nuclear war. Thus, Tirana bec e an energetic convert for civil defense.

Simultaneously, NSC staffers, led by former Harvard Prof. Samuel Huntington, began drafting Presidential Review Memorandum (PRM) 32 as a rebuttal to the arms control theology. The preliminary draft for the first time has the U.S., government recognizing the Kremlin's real outlook.

"The Soviets do not subscribe to the view, that mutual vulnerability is stabilizing," says the PRM-32 draft, classified secret. "To the contrary, they believe that deterrence requires, in addition to offensive forces, a credible defense from attack. In their view, a lack of significant damage-limiting capability inhibits the credibility of retaliation."

PRM-32 also argues that the "essential equivalence" of strategic strength between the U.S. and the Soviet Union "must also involve equivalent survivability of the two societies." Therefore, "a civilian defense program directed towards the goal of equivalent survivability is a necessary corollary to U.S. strategic forces policy."

To arms control theologists, this is Martin Luther tacking up his theses at Wittenberg. ACDA Director Warnke "is really screaming," according to one senior official, and will file a strenuous dissent to PRM-32.

As usual, Brown has been subtle, even inscrutable. While not objecting to PRM-32, he has fought backstage against the reorganization plan putting civil defense in the White House. Brown's aides wrote unusually vigorous letters (over Deputy Defense Secretary Charles Duncan's signature) May 4 and May 10 attacking the plan as "unwieldy."

But in opposing the reorganization, Brown has embraced civil defense as never before. Arguing that civil defense "cannot be considered as independent of the rest of strategic nuclear programs," he talked about "its deterrent effect" and "possible effect on reducing casualties."

Advocates of civil defense, suspicious that Brown was changing his tune merely to keep the program under his thumb, backed the reorganization. So did NSC Director Zbigniew. Brzezinski, who on May 23 urged that the new disaster agency's chief be given a seat on the NSC, alongside Harold Brown, when appropriate.

40 Years Ago Today

June 22, 1938

The Greenville Board of Aldermen in a called session last night, adopted a motion to have a resolution drawn and passed providing for docks and landings at Hardee's Creek.

The action came on the heels of Secretary of War Woodrin's announcement that an allotment had been made for dredging a 12-foot channel, 100 feet wide, from Washington to the creek to provide Greenville with waterway transportation.

Mayor M. K. Blount today declared that Greenville now has the possibilities of securing an adequate and up-to-date bus terminal.

He pointed out that the State Utilities Commission and bus line operators have agreed to meet with the Greenville Board of Aldermen for the purpose of dicsussing the possibilities of establishing a bus terminal here.

Those Unanswered Questions

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — Sometimes we shouldn't try to figure out the meanings of what appear to be inexplicable economic problems or phenomenon, not when an "explanation" may lie right before our eyes.

—Why do we often fail to balance the federal budget despite repeated promises from our presidents?

James McIntyre Jr., the president's budget director, provided a sparkling explanation. Presidents, it appears, can be procrastinators. In an interview with U.S. News & World Report, he stated:

"The president remains firmly committed to balancing the budget, and so do I. But if you have to defer it a year or two, that is something we may just have to do."

—Why is it so difficult to bring down the unemployment rate?

Because it is a ratio of the total civilian labor force, which tends to enlarge itself when job prospects improve. This often results in a rising jobless rate while thousands of new jobs are being created.

Do not misunderstand: We, the people are not caught in a diabolical dilemma; the statistics are. And they are because of the way we define the labor force.

A woman, for example, is not part of the labor force if she is not actively seeking work. When the jobless rate improves she might decide to look. If she does not connect immediately, she is "unemployed."

More than 94 million Americans, 59 percent of the workingage population, had jobs in May. Both figures are records. Still, the jobless rate rose to 6.1 percent from 6 percent in April.

—If consumers have been getting more pessimistic, why have retail sales held up? Hasn't it been considered axiomatic that pessimistic consumers consume less?

Well, yes, it had been. Confronted by uncertainty or doubt, it was said, consumers would sit heavily on their folded wallets or keep their pocketbooks clasped. But it has not been happening.

The consumer sentiment index at the University of Michigan has been slanting down for close to a year now and sales have not followed. Wouldn't that seem to fracture the maxim?

The consumer behaviorists claim it does not. They explain it as a temporary phenomenon, characterized by frightened consumers buying in advance of higher prices or of other fears about the future.

But, they insist, the rule still holds. Richard Curtin, director of the survey, says the buy-inadvance syndrome "is inevitably a source of future weakness." That is the downturn has merely been postponed.

Will Supervise Teen Services

By SHARON BOND
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A recent revision in North Carolina law allows doctors and county health departments to give contraceptives to minors without parental consent.

But a state health official says it will take a change in attitude on the part of local health workers and parents before the number of teens taking advantage of this service rises significantly.

According to Jess L. Berman, public health program consultant for the family planning branch of the state Division of Health Services, local health departments throughout the state are seeing an increase in the number of teens asking for contraceptives.

Teens may now ask for some means of birth control without fear of their parents finding out due to a revision in state law last year. The statute says that "the physician shall not notify a parent, legal guardian or person standing in loco parentis without the permission of the minor" unless notification "is essential to the life or health of the minor."

Berman said that even though the law has been enacted, there is a need for education in communities.

"The community must accept the law," he said. "We need to work on community attitudes and standards.

"This is why we have taken a two-fold approach," Berman said. "We must educate the community on teen-age pregnancy and its impact. And once we get over that hurdle, hopefully we will see an increase in the number of teens getting contraceptives."

Included in this education program are the workers at local health departments who might not agree with the letter of the law.

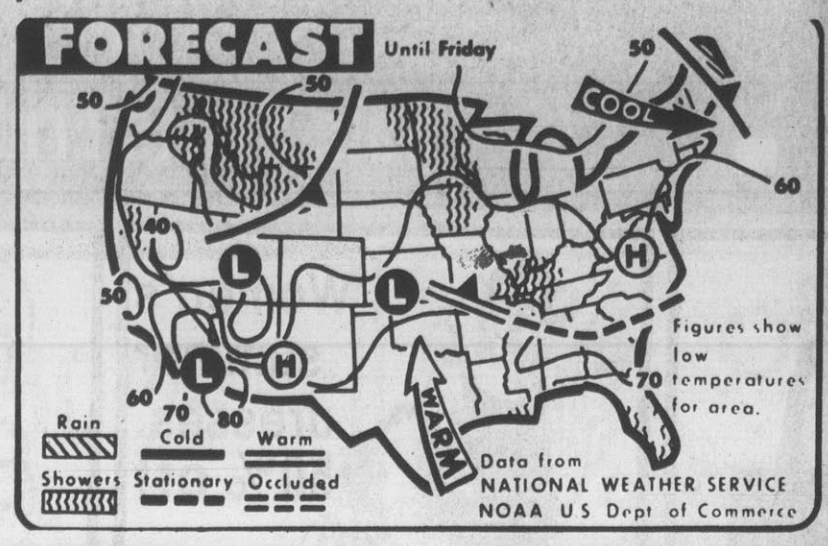
"There has been a reluctance on the part of the some of the local health department staffs in some areas to give contraceptives to teens," he said. "We need to fight this."

Berman said community members who might be opposed to teen-agers getting contraceptives might be more easily convinced if the local health department presents a united front.

Berman said the state had "gone full force" with its education and staff development program with the expectation that this will have an impact on the education and acceptance by the community of the new law on contraceptives.

Also, Berman said that to see an increase in teen services, there needs to be an increase in the size of local staffs providing these services. The federal government has earmarked additional Title X money for family planning services, which will result in an allocation of $516,900 for teen services, in North Carolina in fiscal 1979, Berman said. This compares to the current allocation of $226,900 for teen services.

How's The Weather?



WEATHER FORECAST — Widely scattered areas of showers are forecast across the country today. Mild to warm weather is expected for most of the country. Cool weather is due for northern New England. (AP Laserphoto Map)

By The Associated Press

A cool front moved across the North Carolina mountains this morning, heading toward the coast, while behind it high pressure moving in from the Midwest began to build across the state.

Well ahead of the front, scattered showers and thundershowers broke out across the mountains and Piedmont Wednesday, moving to the Coastal Plain and coastal areas during the night.

Temperatures warmed into the 80s and low 90s Wednesday afternoon, reaching a high of 92 at Fayetteville, 91 at Wilmington, and 90 at Goldsboro, Raleigh, Durham and Rocky Mount.

With the cool front passing across the state, scattered showers and thunderstorms were expected in the east today. Partly cloudy skies were forecast for the west.

Temperatures were expected to warm into the 80s except in the mountains where readings in the 70s were forecast.

High pressure will build across the state tonight and Friday bringing back fair skies except for some lingering cloudiness along the coast.

Lows tonight will be in the 50s across the mountains and in the 60s across the remainder of the state. Highs Friday will be in the 70s across the mountains and in the 80s elsewhere.

The extended forecast calls for partly cloudy skies with a chance of thundershowers Saturday through Monday. Highs will be in the 80s and lows in the 60s to around 70.

Monastery Will Close

ASHEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — The Carmelita Monastery of St. Joseph and the Holy Child will be closed in the next few weeks, it was announced Wednesday.

Monsignor Joseph Showfety, chancellor of the Roman Catholic Diocese of Charlotte, said the monastery is being shut down because of illness and infirmity of the nuns cloistered there.

Dedicated in March 1956, the monastery has operated in a large white two-story house on a walled tract of land adjoining a city golf course in Asheville.

The Carmelite nuns are part of an ancient order in the church. They came to Asheville at the request of the late Bishop Vincent S. Waters of the Diocese of Raleigh.

The nuns are of the Strict Ancient Observance, having taken vows of obedience, chastity, poverty and perpetual enclosure. Showfety said that within the walls of the monastery, the nuns devote their lives to praying for others, meditation and spiritual exercises.

The chapel in the monastery has been open to visitors for mass and prayers.

Showfety said the nuns are being transferred to other places in North Dakota and Pennsylvania.

Contributions To Politicos Defended

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Attorneys for two insurance companies have told a Superior Court judge that a state law prohibiting insurance firms from making contributions "for any political purpose whatsoever" is unconstitutional.

District Court Judge S. Pretlow Winborne ruled in April that the law would be unconstitional if it were interpreted to cover the $500 contributions two insurance executives gave for an inaugural breakfast for state Insurance Commissioner John Ingram in 1977.

The Wake County District Attorney's Office is appealing the ruling to Superior Court, and a hearing is scheduled for later this month.

George H. Talbot, president of Charlotte Liberty Mutual Insurance Co., and Walter B. Clark, president of Mid-South Insurance Co. of Fayetteville, were accused of violating the campaign law in making the contributions to an inauguration-day breakfast for Ingram. The two insurance companies also were charged.

Attorneys for the two firms and their executives have filed briefs maintaining that the phrase "for any political purpose whatsoever" is too vague to alert potential contributors.

"Reasonable men could differ as to (the law's) applicability in a given case," the attorney for Mid-South said. "The law fails to give an unequivocal warning that certain conduct is criminal."

Talbot's brief said he was told by someone that the breakfast for Ingram, now the Democratic nominee for the U.S. Senate, "was not a political function."

It said the campaign law should not "be extended to apply to a non-partisan contribution to an appreciation breakfast for an elected official who was not then a candidate for any political office."

Honor Society Ranked Third

ECU News Bureau

East Carolina University's Beta Kappa chapter of Pi Omega Pi honor society in business education has been ranked third in a national competition for the society's National Chapter Award.

The award is made on the basis of a chapter's contributions to the Pi Omega Pi newsletter, production of noteworthy chapter publications and participation in service projects on local, community and national levels.

In recent years, Beta Kappa chapters has consistently received recognition as one of the nation't top ten chapters and has been a first-place winner.

On June 2, President Carter chose the option calling for the reorganization. He now has a new agency and a new doctrine in PRM-32, but a projected maximum of only $200 million in annual civil defense spending compared with cumulative Soviet expenditures estimated at $65 billion. Although the constrained theory and structure of the past 15 years are gone, it is up to the president whether this is translated into true protection of the nation's citizens, with all that means for global strategy.

quirement made some other points. The airbag will add at least $200 to the price of a new car. The statistical case in support of the regulation is solid in some ways but very flimsy in others. Airbags aren't as effective as seat and shoulder belts anyhow.

It is a long constitutional leap, it seems to me, from the power to regulate commerce among the several states to an order that all auto makers must install airbags in their vehicles. At bottom, this is what Shuster and his colleagues are getting at. The Constitution doe not vest unlimited powers in the agencies of government. The Constitution carefully reserves certain rights to the people; and among these rights, we may suppose, is the right to buy or not to buy an airbag as the individual motorist sees fit. The assertion of the principle may strike Silvio Conte as zilch, but those who believe in freedom will cry hoorah.

Pupil Competency Test Results Said Not Too Bad

Some Officials Doubt Value Of Information

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Some local education officials are questioning the value of information the state Competency Test Commission has asked teachers to report on the education and income levels of their students' parents.

While teachers are asked to fill out reports on education and income levels of the parents, they are not permitted to ask either students or parents for the information.

Officials of the commission say the data is needed to help set the pass-failure cutoff score on competency tests scheduled to be given for the first time next fall.

Since teachers have to guess at the information, officials in some areas say they doubt the value of the data, which state officials say they must have since the backgrounds of students can affect test scores.

"There is a direct correlation in achievement of students and parental education levels and estimated family income," said H.T. Conner, assistant superintendent of research for the state Department of Public Instruction. "The higher the income and education, the higher the scores."

Officials decided to stop asking parents or children for the information because of a concern over invasion of privacy.

Forsyth County education officials have threatened to quit providing the socioeconomic information unless the state develops a more accurate system for gathering it.

Conner maintains the estimates probably won't be too far off because the forms on which the information is submitted only ask that parents be placed in broad categories of education and income.

"There will be some error in it because it is a guess," he said. "But we say it is an estimate which is better than nothing at all. I think it is fairly reliable because of the broad categories."

Teachers and counselors are instructed to leave blank any portion of the questionnaire they feel they cannot estimate with accuracy.

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — An official of the state Department of Education says the results of public school competency tests, a disappointment to many, really weren't too bad.

H.T. Conner, assistant superintendent for research and development for the Department of Public Instruction, said an overall look at the outcome is not nearly as disappointing as some people have indicated.

Results of a trial run of the new competency program were announced May 31 and showed that more than 51 percent of the students in North Carolina failed to answer 70 percent of the math questions correctly and 18 percent failed to answer 70 percent of the reading questions correctly.

"We always hope they (scores) will be better," Conner said. "But 70 percent is not the cutoff score that will be used next year. It was just used in the trial tests as a way to give the state Board of Education and the Competency Test Commission information."

Beginning next year, all high school students will be required to pass a competency test before graduating.

Conner said the test scores were somewhat below par, but he said there are several factors that must be considered before reaching any conclusions.

He said students in North Carolina may have performed worse in math than reading because language arts courses are required through the 12th grade and math is optional after the ninth grade. Secondly, he said, the fact that students did worse on math tests is an indication of inadequacy in both math and reading because students must be proficient in reading to understand the math problems.

A third factor, he said, is the type of problems on the math tests. He said they were practical word problems of the type unfamiliar to many students.

"If you take all these factors into consideration, the scores might not be that bad," Conner said. "You cannot make a judgement without further analysis. It was not purely a math test."

He said the maker of the tests, McGraw-Hill of Monterey, Calif., did not appear to be surprised at the scores.

"If you're going to make comparisons, the Southeast in general has always been below other regions on achievement tests," Conner said. "I think this pattern would hold up on the competency tests."

Will Celebrate St. John's Day

Mount Hermon Lodge No. 35 F. & A. M. observed its annual St. John's Day celebration Sunday at Mt. Calvary Free Will Baptist Church. Worshipful Master James L. Ebron, Jr. was the presiding officer.

Ebron received his master's degree in organic chemistry from East Carolina University in 1972. He is employed by Burroughs Wellcome, Greenville division.

The Rev. David Hammond served as the key speaker. Benefits from the Sunday service went for aid to the Central Orphanage in Oxford.

Prosecutor Is Convicted

GLENWOOD SPRINGS, Colo. (AP) — The chief prosecutor in the trial of French-born actress Claudine Longet has been convicted of two counts of felony embezzlement of public funds and says he will resign his post.

Frank Tucker was cleared Wednesday of two other charges of embezzlement of public funds by a seven-man, five-woman jury.

In a copyright interview with Denver television station KBTV, Tucker said his resignation would come "as soon as we can make an orderly change. I think that would be very soon."

The jury found Tucker guilty of using public funds for phone calls to a young woman in California, Debbie McGuern, who he maintained throughout the trial was a drug informant.

Tucker also was convicted of double-billing Garfield and Rio Blanco counties for expenses relating to a district attorneys convention in Colorado Springs, which he attended in 1975 with Miss McGuern.

At issue throughout the trial was whether Miss McGuern was the undercover drug agent Tucker claimed or whether she was a personal friend as prosecutors contended.

Date for sentencing was not set.

Miss Longet was convicted last year of criminally negligent homicide in the shooting death of Vladimir "Spider" Sabich. She served a 30-day sentence in the Pitkin County Jail.

Airstream Set Gathers At Annual Rally In Iowa

By MICHAEL HOLMES
Associated Press Writer

AMES, Iowa (AP) — Jim Brearley worked 30 years as a New Jersey jail guard and warden. Then he joined the Airstream set, traveling 12,000 miles a year in a silver, streamlined, cigar-shaped trailer.

"Before I retired eight years ago they were always asking me what are you going to do with your time? I said I didn't think it would be a problem. Now, I don't know how I found time to go to work."

Just in from Glassboro, N.J., the 70-year-old Brearley leaned back in his easy chair and said it's the very best kind of life. And for a hundred yards in every direction, there were others who agreed.

Airstream owners have been rolling into Ames all week. Some 500 trailers sat in an Iowa State University parking lot today. By June 28, opening day of the week-long 21st annual Airstream rally, 4,000 trailers and 13,000 people are expected.

"Wally Byam, the man who invented the Airstream, had the wanderlust," Brearley said. "We've all got it. That's one reason we're here."

Officials of the Wally Byam Caravan Club International say 26,000 Airstream owners belong to their organization.

Once a year they hold a convention to play bridge and checkers, dance and listen to bands and swap stories of life on the road.

"Wherever you want to go, wherever your fancy takes you, that's where you're headed. Me, I'm from New Jersey, Florida and points east. We've been Airstreaming for 10 years now," Brearley said, sweeping an arm across the living room of his 31-foot-long trailer.

"We've got all the conveniences of home right here — air conditioning, two TVs, hot water, heat, our own sewage system. We summer in New Jersey, winter in Florida. We've been west to Montana, north to Canada."

A few trailers away in the Airstream city, Tillie Means of Union, Mo., sat in the sun writing a letter.

Mrs. Means said she and her husband have many friends among the far-flung trailer owners, some of whom will come from Canada and Mexico for the convention.

"When you all get together like this, it's just great. It's like a big family reunion," she said.

His Presence Is Birthday Gift

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — City Councilman Jack Kelly tried on his new formal tails and high hat that he'll wear at next week's wedding of his niece, Princess Caroline of Monaco, to French businessman Philippe Junot and called them "just perfect."

"What kind of girl goes with that suit?" a reporter asked Kelly, a former Olympic rowing champion who is known to prefer blondes.

"My daughter, Maura," said Kelly, whose sister, Princess Grace, is the bride-to-be's mother. "The trip is going to be her 21st birthday present."

Hunt Two Men In Rape Report

Greenville police today are hunting for two men who allegedly raped a 23-year-old woman near the intersection of Fourth and Nash Streets last night.

Chief Glenn Cannon said the incident was reported at 12:04 a.m. The victim told investigators the two attackers confronted her as she walked home from the West Greenville Recreation Center.

The chief noted that the woman was kicked in the face and hit on her shoulders by the men.

Close Isolation After Deadly Virus Mishap

By MICHAEL PUTZEL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A station wagon pulled up near a gleaming white jet at a Georgia Air Force base and two young men stepped out onto the tarmac. Slipping into hospital gowns and masks, they lay down on military stretchers to be carried up the ramp to the plane.

Neither man looked sick.

Aboard the Air Force hospital plane, they were placed in a special section and the air they breathed was electronically filtered before leaving the plane. When the aircraft landed an hour later, the men donned respirators and shoe covers, were loaded into an Army ambulance and whisked to a small military hospital that few people even knew existed.

They have been there for nearly two weeks.

The men live locked in separate rooms with individual changing rooms and showers: their little suites connected only by a common anteroom occupied at all times by a gowned and masked attendant.

They can't see each other but share a party-line phone and a "squawk box" they can use to communicate with their keepers and the world outside.

The two men, who work on the frontier of modern medicine, were experimenting with a deadly African virus when the top of a test tube accidentally came off and exposed the pair to lassa fever, a little-understood disease for which there is no sure treatment or cure.

On Wednesday, the 16th day after the accident, neither man had developed any of the symptoms of the disease.

They can see — but not touch — visitors through windows of darkened glass with venetian blinds.

There are color televisions in the rooms. "It's nothing but a wasteland of reruns," said one.

And they have typewriters and books, but they don't get much done. "The atmosphere isn't really conducive to work."

The telephone is their most important asset. They can talk to friends, who try to keep their spirits up.

Officials at the Center for Disease Control in Atlanta, where the accident occurred, said they have reason to hope the danger is over.

"They're past the usual incubation period," said Dr. John H. Richardson, the center's safety officer. "They're probably out of the woods."

But the disease was discovered only recently, leaving scientists wondering just how much they know about its behavior. So they're taking no chances.

This weekend, officials said, they'll decide when to open the doors.

WHERE'S MOM? WHERE'S LUNCH? — Two baby egrets peer hungrily from their nest of twigs in a rookery pond near Fort Gaines, Ga., in expectation of a returning mama egret with lunch. Their hopes were dashed, however, when mom turned out to be a photographer hunting for their picture. (AP Laserphoto)

Dr. Reith On Interview Show

ECU News Bureau

Dr. Louis Reith of the East Carolina University library services department will be the July 4 guest on Twelve at Noon," an interview program broadcast by WCTI-TV, Channel 12, New Bern.

Reith will be interviewed by program host Craig Weber on the "Great Decisions" series, an annual national public discussion series sponsored in eastern N.C. by ECU.

Topics of this year's "Great Decisions" series were such current foreign policy issues as the Panama Canal treaties, Israel and the Arab states, human rights in world politics and U.S.-Soviet Union relations.

Reith served as a resource person for a local "Great Decisions" program on the role of the public in foreign policy-making.

Abandoned Cemeteries A Genealogical Source

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Rep. Gordon Greenwood, D-Buncombe, says he hopes a committee authorized by the General Assembly this month will help North Carolina preserve its history and assist individuals tracing their ancestry.

In one of its less-heralded acts, the legislature adopted a resolution setting up a 16-member committee to study ways to find and preserve thousands of abandoned cemeteries around the state.

Greenwood sponsored the resolution, saying he discovered the need for such a study as he was researching his family's history.

A retired college official who lives at Black Mountain, Greenwood said research led him to the homesite of Samuel Greenwood, who served with George Washington at Valley Forge, on the south bank of the Yadkin River in Yadkin County.

"We have never been able to find any of the family cemeteries at all," he said. "They have just disappeared."

Rep. Claude DeBruhl, D-Buncombe, joined Greenwood in introduction of the resolution setting up the committee, which had been sought by Larry E. Tise, director of the state Division of Archives and History.

The resolution says there are thousands of family cemeteries "which have been abandoned, which are being vandalized and which are being lost." It also says headstones in the cemeteries contain valuable historical information and maintains that present laws and practices "actually discourage rather than encourage the preservation and care of cemeteries which have been created and subsequently abandoned through a period of more than 300 years."

The committee will be composed of representatives of local governments and patriotic and historical groups.

It will study "the need for a comprehensive statewide program for the location, identification and proper care of abandoned cemeteries."

An inventory of abandoned cemeteries in each county "could be a great value to North Carolina in preserving our state history" and to individuals tracing their ancestry, Greenwood said.

He said he has received numerous letters from across North Carolina from individuals supporting the program.

Attorney Avers 'Somebody Else'

MASON, Mich. (AP) — It was "somebody out there" and not biochemist Rosetta Reusch who dumped noxious chemicals in homes and cars of prominent music instructors and their pupils, Mrs. Reusch's attorney says.

Mrs. Reusch, 47, is accused of breaking and entering the home of Duane Smith with the intent to commit a felony — causing physical harm to the Lansing School District music coordinaor and his family.

Following a two-day preliminary examination, Ingham County District Judge Robert H. Bell said Wednesday he was taking the case under advisement, and would decide in about 10 days whether Mrs. Reusch should stand trial. She has not entered a plea in the case.

The Smiths and about 20 other families in the university town of Okemos have been victimized since 1976 by someone sprinkling their property with chemicals that made their eyes water and stomachs churn.

Lab analysts testifying Wednesday said powder found in air vents of Smith's car contained mercury, arsenic, lead and zinc. All are toxic, especially with repeated exposure, said Dr. Edgar W. Kivela, chief toxicologist for the Michigan State Police.

Smith, who reported almost a dozen chemical incidents to police, said mercury levels in his blood are too high, and he still suffers from nausea.

According to testimony, Mrs. Reusch had access to and knowledge of noxious chemicals used in the attacks. She holds a doctorate in chemistry and is employed as a biochemical researcher at Michigan State University.

She was acquainted with all the victims through recitals, and through her sons who performed in the Okemos High School orchestra.

But her attorney, George Tesseris, said while his client stands accused, "somebody out there" is the true culprit.

He said only 5 milligrams of powdered mercury was found in Mrs. Reusch's car after her arrest March 17, not unusual for a chemist.

Set Hearing On Juvenile Code

KINSTON — The Farmville area hearing concerning a new North Carolina juvenile code will be held in the City Hall here Monday from 2-5 and 7-9 p.m.

The Juvenile Code Revision Committee will hold ten such hearings across the state to receive input from citizens and juvenile justice professionals. Many aspects of the prospective code are to be discussed at the hearings.

For more information, contact Sarah F. Patterson at 733-5013, or write the Division of Crime Control, P. O. Box 27687, Raleigh, N. C., 27611.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market inched upward today in moderate trading following two days of declines.

At noon, the Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks had climbed 1.56 to 826.49.

Among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues, advancing issues outnumbered those dropping by a 6-5 margin.

Volume on the Big Board came to 12.19 million shares in the first two hours, against 13.69 million in same period the day before.

After the Dow Jones slipped by as much as 6 points before Wednesday's closing, analysts began to detect a slight late turnaround. The slight upswing continued into today as the troubled dollar began to recover some lost ground on foreign exchange markets, apparently on reports President Carter may raise oil-import fees to discourage petroleum consumption unless Congress enacts his oil-tax plan.

But analysts also were waiting for the Federal Reserve's weekly money supply report, scheduled for release after the 4 p.m. NYSE close, to see if new credit-tightening moves might be indicated. Stock prices fell Tuesday and Wednesday partly on fears of higher interest rates; a possible ¼-point jump in the prime rate to 9 percent was anticipated for Friday.

As has been the case in recent days, speculative activity in gambling-related issues provided most of the excitement on Wall Street.

Ramada Inns, which owns 7 percent of casino operator Del E. Webb, moved ahead ¼ to 8⅝. Del E. Webb was up ⅜ at 22¼ and Playboy Enterprises added 1⅝ to 22⅜. Harrah's rose 1¼ to 28¼. On the American Stock Exchange, Resorts International class A was among the most-actives at 73, up 4.

Among actively traded NYSE issues, Sony was up ¼ at 8. Arlen Realty advanced ⅛ to 4⅛ after announcing a $110.9 million fiscal-year loss, against a loss of $48.7 million the year before. Federal National Mortgage was unchanged at 17½.

Retailing issues were mixed, with Jewel Companies unchanged at 20½, Sears Roebuck down ⅛ at 23 and Woolworth up ⅛ at 18¼. Woolworth projected an improvement in second-quarter earnings over the 32 cents a share net in the first three months of the year.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks added .08 to 53.99.

Legislature....

Citing a controversy over funds appropriated for a new state office building to provide space for the General Assembly, Rountree said the Legislature would use only about 20 per cent of the space in the new facility. The other 80 per cent would be used to house other government offices.

Another controversial action, Rountree cited, was a pay increase for General Assembly members.

He noted that the House Speaker's salary was increased from $9,000 to $12,000 a year, with an increase in expenses from $200 to $300 per month, while the salary of the president pro-tem of the Senate and the minority leaders salaries were increased from $6,000 to $7,500 a year, with an increase in expenses from $150 to $200 per month.

Other General Assembly members salaries were increased from $4,800 per year to $6,000 a year, with monthly expenses increased from $100 to $150.

Rountree too, cited the tax check-off bill— which will permit taxpayers to designate on their income tax returns $1 to be paid to the political party of their choice — and the inventory tax bill, as accomplishments of the legislative session.

Under the inventory tax bill, manufacturers whose inventories exceed 15 per cent of their total production costs will receive a credit on their state income tax, beginning in 1980.

Rountree said the inventory tax bill should help the state to attract industry.

Anticipation

The anticipated impact never came Wednesday as Poland's Adam Nawalka soared over the attempted sliding stop by Brazilian defender Tohinho during a Brazil-Poland World Cub soccer match in Mendoza, Argentina. Brazil won the match 3-1 and will meet Italy Saturday to determine who holds third place. (AP Laserphoto)

Pitt Wins 12th Straight

By JIM KYLE
Reflector Sports Writer

Three runs in the eighth inning enabled Pitt County to finally seal its 12th victory of the season last night, a 9-4 win over Wayne County.

Post 39 led the whole way, but was unable to put the visitors away until late in the game. Earlier in the year, Pitt County had beaten the same team 27-2.

"I thought our boys played a good ballgame; they played good defense," said Post 39 coach Ed Hooks after it was over. "We scored a few runs so we could stay on the offensive, but they (Wayne County) did a nice job. I think they're a much-improved ballclub."

Hooks had individual praise for Kevin Adams, who had two hits and knocked in three runs, and Ronnie Chapman, who also had a pair of hits.

Peter Pace, making his second start, was the winning pitcher. His record is now 2-0. He was not without his troubles on the mound, however, giving up eight hits and four bases on balls. But, backed by excellent defense, Pace left eight Wayne County runners stranded during the ballgame.

The visitors used two pitchers. Starter and loser Kevin McRoberts lasted only 1⅓ innings and gave up six runs before being pulled in favor of Bob Rose. Rose was very effective until two walks and a double by Adams in the eighth.

Pitt County's runs came in three's. The home team got three in the first, three in the second and the final three in the eighth. Wayne County got two in the second, one in the third and one more in the seventh.

After putting Wayne County down in order in the top of the first, Pitt County grabbed the lead in the bottom of the frame. Nuggie Worthington led off with a walk and Chapman, trying to sacrifice him to second, laid down a perfect bunt past the pitcher towards the second baseman, beating it out for a single.

Mike Shank tried the same thing and he reached when his bunt was erred by the second baseman, loading the bases. After an out, Greg Lee walked to push Worthington in and Will Sanderson hit a sacrifice fly to score Chapman. That left Shank on third and Lee on first, and the pair pulled off a double steal for the team's third run.

In the top of the second, the visitors cut the lead to 3-2. The first batter, Randy Jones, waited out a base on balls and Bobby Singleton followed with a fielder's choice with Jones getting put out at second. Pace struck out the next batter and appeared headed out of trouble, but walked Mike Burrell and Tim Cottle to load things up. McRoberts then hit a single to center field, scoring Singleton and Burrell before Pace could get the third out.

The bottom of the frame saw three more Post 39 runs come across. Roy Briley led off with a walk and was sacrificed to second by Skip Topping. Worthington got a base on balls and Chapman singled to right to plate Briley. Kevin Adams then came up with a two-run single up the middle, making it 6-2.

David Searles scored in the third to cut the margin by one for Wayne County. He led off with a base hit to center field and reached second on a passed ball. Ray Thornton's infield out allowed him to go to third and Jones knocked him in with a single to left.

Neither team scored again until the Wayne County seventh, although Pitt County had men on second and third in the fifth. Lynn Beamon led off the top of the seventh with a hit to right and he went to second on an infield out by Searles. Thornton got a base hit to put Beamon on third and he scored on a sacrifice fly by Jones. Singleton then got a single which bounced off the mound to send Thornton to second, but Pace forced the next batter to hit a fielder's choice.

In the Pitt County eighth, Worthington and Chapman walked with one away and Adams hit a double to score Worthington. Chapman and Adams came in when Greg Lee reached on an error. Worthington and Chapman each had three runs in the ballgame.

Pitt County ended the game in the top of the ninth with a double play.

The winners are now 12-0 overall and 10-0 in Eastern Area I. They play at Williamston tonight and a victory will clinch at least a tie for the league championship.

Williamston Nips Wilson

WILLIAMSTON — Williamston's American Legion baseball team scored three times in the first inning, then held off Wilson the rest of the way for a 3-2 victory.

Williamston climbed to a 6-4 record in the Eastern Area I race, while Wilson slipped to 4-8.

Russell Holton hurled the victory for Williamston, scattering six hits. He struck out 18 batters, while walking only three. Holton raised his record to 2-1 for the season.

Williamston got things going in the first inning, scoring all it way to need. Anthony Latham led off with a single, and went all the way to third on an error on the play. Trent Ange brought him in with a single. Cliff Keel then homered for the 3-0 lead.

Wilson came up with one run in the second. That came on an inside-the-park homer by Jeffrey Davis.

The other Wilson run came in the eighth. Donnie Price doubled and scored on a two-bagger by Tony Pollock.

Prince led the Wilson hitting with three in four trips, while Latham was 3-for-4 for Williamston.

Brants Turns From Goat To Dutch Hero

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — For a man who makes a monkey of himself, it's always nice to come back and be the hero — especially when the whole world is watching.

Ernie Brandts, the Dutch soccer star, made one of the blunders of his career Wednesday and thought he had cost his team its chance of winning the World Cup. But later he made one of the plays that sent Holland into next Sunday's final against Argentina.

In a vital game against Italy, Brandts tried to stop ace forward Roberto Bettega from scoring and accidentally sent the ball rolling into his own net.

In scoring against his own team he crashed into his goalkeeper, Pieter Schrijvers, and put him out of the match. Schrijvers was carried off and a substitute took his place.

"This kind of thing doesn't usually happen to me," Brandts said. "I only looked at the ball and didn't realize Schrijvers had come out of his goal so far. I was shocked by what happened."

In the 49th minute the world suddenly looked a bright place again for Brandts. With an Italian challenging him on either side, he took aim from about 100 feet and sent a wonder-shot flashing into the top corner of Italy's net.

"This never happened to me before either," the red-haired Dutchman said. "I don't normally score goals. That is the job of the forwards. But when I saw that one go in it was the greatest thrill of my life."

Arend Haan completed the good work for Holland by firing one in from 120 feet and the Dutch downed Italy 2-1.

In the other Group A match, Austria downed West Germany 3-2, and in Group B, Argentina swamped Peru 6-0, and Brazil beat Poland 3-1.

The two spectacular Dutch goals were as good as anything seen in the 3-week-old tournament.

But for Argentine soccer fans — and at this feverish time that means the whole nation — the goals that mattered most were the six scored by Argentina over Peru.

Under the complicated scoring rules of the tournament, Argentina needed to win by at least 4-0 to overhaul Brazil and reach the final.

As each goal went in, Argentines watching the game on television throughout the land became more frenzied. The center of Buenos Aires became a seething mass of noisy revellers.

Brazil, three-time winner of the trophy, was the only team among the 16 starters that went through six games without being defeated — and yet it didn't make the final.

Brazil beat Sweden 1-1, was 0-0 against Spain and downed Austria 1-0 in the first round, and in the second round defeated Peru 3-0, tied Argentina 0-0 and was 3-1 against Poland.

It was goals that counted in the end. Brazil and Argentina were even in points, and it was a matter of which team scored most. Leopoldo Luque and Mario Kempes, the Argentine goal aces, each claimed two in the night's triumph.

No Plans To Trade

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Officials of the Kansas City Kings say they are not interested in any possible offers to trade away All-America guard Phil Ford of North Carolina.

Joe Axelson, president and general manager of the NBA team, said recently that he told representatives of several teams during the annual league meeting that "the door is closed" to any trade involving the 6-4 guard.

"Ford is our property from now until a year from June 9 (the day of the NBX draft), come hell or high water," Axelson said.

Ford, the all-time leading scorer for North Carolina, was Kansas City's No. 1 pick in the recent NBA player draft. He has mentioned the possibility of playing in the NBA, participating in an Italian league or becoming an assistant coach.

"Now that there is no longer an ABA, agents have to use different ploys in order to get more money for their clients," Axelson said. "We will not make any shouts or yells. Ford will get a great amout of money, as did Otis Birdsong, who was picked in the same position last year."

The San Francisco Giants led the National League in pinch-hitting by a club in 1977 with an average of .283.

Weaver's Birds Might Sneak In

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

While New York and Boston, the two rich kids on the block, are whaling away at each other over the shiny marbles that represent the American League baseball pennant, there's a sneaky ragamuffin peeking around the corner, ready to pick up the spoils.

Don't sell him short. His name is Earl Weaver. He is manager of the Baltimore Orioles, considered by many the best strategist in baseball. While the Yankees and Red Sox are slugging it out, Earl and his overlooked minions could take it all.

The Orioles, who lost millions of dollars worth of talent in the free agent draft and made no effort to enter the high-bidding sweepstakes, have assembled a young, aggressive team intent on destroying the legend that championships can be purchased.

Through Tuesday's play, they had won 17 of their last 18 games and moved into second place in the AL race, behind the fence-rattling Red Sox and ahead of the feuding Yankees, the defending world champions.

How have they done it?

"No mirrors," insists Weaver, a puckish, round-cheeked dugout wizard whose genius is compared with that of the late Joe McCarthy. "Just good pitching and defense."

There is another factor strongly in the Orioles' favor. Except for pitcher Jim Palmer, a three-time Cy Young winner, there is no recognized superstar on the squad. What other gilded talent the Orioles had socked away in the closet was gobbled up in the free agent draft.

In the past two years, such highly-prized baseball flesh as Reggie Jackson ($2.9 million), Wayne Garland ($2.3 million), Bobby Grich ($1.2 million) and Ross Grimsley ($1.3 million) has been plucked from the Orioles by the game's big spenders.

This has produced advantages that apparently overshadow the disadvantages.

For one thing, the Orioles aren't beset with a flock of malcontents as in the case of the Yankees, or racial tensions, which outfielder Jim Rice recently said existed with the Red Sox.

Absence of multimillionaire draftees has negated any prima donna influence on the Baltimore squad. You don't have a manager refusing to communicate with the players. You don't have the manager and key players swapping poison darts 20 paces away from each other in the dressing room after a bitter defeat. You don't have a star outfielder saying he is discriminated against because of the color of his skin.

Weaver, in his 11th year as manager of the Orioles, is one of the most underrated field generals in the business.

When he was winning three American League championships and five divisional crowns in the space of six years, starting in 1969, he was repeatedly passed over for the Manager of the Year award, the writer voters shrugging him off with, "Who couldn't win with that kind of talent?"

But when he started taking inferior material — as he did last season — and still giving the gold-plated favorites a run for their money, critics began to take another look.

Long Wait Was Worth It To Machemer

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

It took Dave Machemer seven years to reach the major leagues and more than a week to get in a game, but when he finally did it was well worth the wait.

California's 27-year-old rookie infielder, called up from the minors early last week when Carney Lansford was injured, was the first batter of the game Wednesday night.

He lined a 3-2 pitch from Minnesota's Geoff Zahn just inside the left field foul pole, becoming the 46th player in major league history to homer in his first at-bat. Don Baylor added a two-run homer in the first inning, his 17th, and the Angels went on to defeat the Twins 5-2.

Elsewhere in the American League, the Cleveland Indians beat Kansas City 4-2, slicing the Royals' lead over California in the AL West to one-half game; the Boston Red Sox crushed the New York Yankees 9-2, the Milwaukee Brewers cooled off the Baltimore Orioles 5-3 and the Detroit Tigers outlasted the Toronto Blue Jays 10-8.

Indians 4, Royals 2

Paul Dade's checked-swing grounder scored Jim Norris with the tie-breaking run in the seventh inning and newly acquired Dan Spillner hurled three innings of one-hit relief. Spillner, acquired last week from San Diego, replaced Don Hood with the bases loaded and two out in the fourth, retired Pete LaCock on a fly ball and did not give up a hit until Fred Patek's one-out single in the seventh.

AL Roundup

Red Sox 9, Yankees 2

Carl Yastrzemski and Carlton Fisk keyed a six-run third inning with consecutive doubles and Butch Hobson, Fred Lynn and George Scott homered as the Red Sox whipped the Yankees behind the six-hit pitching of Dennis Eckersley.

The victory, Boston's 11th in the last 13 games and 21st in 27, enabled the Red Sox to take the rubber match of a three-game series in their first 1978 showdown with New York's defending world champions, who are in third place in the AL East, eight games behind Boston.

Brewers 5, Orioles 3

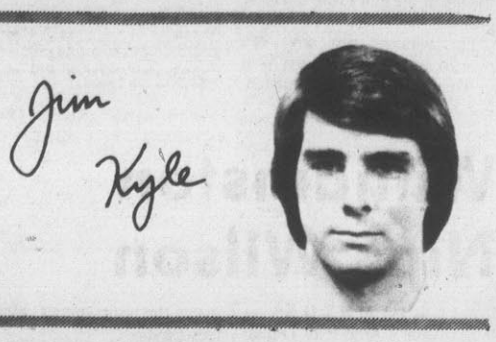
Larry Hisle slapped a two-run single in the third inning and Buck Martinez drove in the decisive run with a sixth-inning sacrifice fly as Milwaukee ended Baltimore's four-game winning streak. Winner Lary Sorensen took a 5-0 lead and a three-hitter into the eighth but was chased when the Orioles scored three times on five consecutive singles and a sacrifice fly.

Tigers 10, Blue Jays 8

Alan Trammell's solo homer triggered a five-run sixth inning for Detroit that erased a 6-5 Toronto lead. After Trammell's homer, consecutive singles by Lou Whitaker — his third hit — and Ron LeFlore plus a double by Steve Kemp chased Don Kirkwood, who had taken over in the fifth from starter Tom Underwood. Jim Crawford got the win in relief of starter Jack Billingham, who gave up four runs on six hits in the first inning. Jason Thompson also homered for Detroit while Otto Velez connected for the Blue Jays.

Golfing Comedy Show

Arnold Palmer (r) and Lee Trevino kept fans laughing Wednesday during a practice round for this week's Canadian Open at Glen Abbey golf club in Oakville, Ontario. As the two discussed putting on the 10th tee, a fan behind Palmer asked him to turn her way for a photo. To which Trevino quipped that Palmer was already showing his "best side." (AP Laserphoto)



ONE OF THE KEYS to the great success of Pitt County's American Legion baseball team this season has been the phenomenal hitting of second baseman Ronnie Chapman. Chapman, a rising senior at Rose High, was hitting at a .524 clip to lead the team going into last night's game against Goldsboro.

As a team, Post 39 has been hitting the ball well this season, but Chapman's statistics stand out. Through the first 11 games, all victories, he got 22 hits in 42 at-bats. And he has hit with power. Half 10 of those hits have been for extra bases, including two triples and a home run. His slugging average is .881.

Chapman hit a peak against Wilson four games ago when he went 4-4. The previous outing he was 5-6 and the Wilson game raised his average over .600 to .607. Post 39 coach Ed Hooks credit's Chapman's fundamental knowledge and overall athletic ability with his success at the plate.

"Ronnie just has a lot of ability. I think, fundamentally, he follows the proper techniques of hitting — he handles the bat real well and doesn't try to overpower the ball." Hooks added that Chapman has lately been hitting with the pitches and this has helped his average.

"He's got real good speed and this allows him to beat out bunts and slow hoppers. That makes it tough for the opposition to play him. They just about have to play him straight and that opens up some gaps," Hooks said.

THE PITT COUNTY team spends a lot of practice time on hitting, according to Hooks, especially the fundamentals. "You've got to master your fundamentals if you're going to be successful," he said.

"In order to learn to hit better, the person just has to hit and hit and hit. We try to make batting practice enjoyable and keep it moving." Hooks said Post 39 can get in two rounds of batting practice quicker than many teams can do just one.

Chapman said he has made some changes in his swing which could account for his high average, up over 300 points from what he batted for the Rampants this past year. "I had a lot of talk with my father and worked out on my own. Gradually, it formed together."

He said his swing remained basically the same, but he opened up his stance to get his hips around quicker.

TEAM LEADERSHIP HAS been another of Chapman's attributes this season, Hooks said. "He's given us some good, positive leadership. He has a good knowledge of the game and he's gained in maturity through his high school playing.

"Ronnie and I have worked together for four years, two years in Babe Ruth ball and last year and this year in American Legion. We've always had a good relationship. I respect him as a player and I think he respects me as a coach. "I think he has seen the situation as one of learning to use his ability. He hustles and works hard."

Both Hooks and Chapman agree that Post 39's success is due in a large part to the team's unity. "Our boys work together as a unit. We have a lot of togetherness, pride and respect," according to Hooks.

Chapman added, "It's the whole team. There's no one big man we play together. Everything's cool."

So cool, in fact, that Post 39 is rolling along at 12-0 and in definite command of the Eastern Area I race.

Rocky Mount Tops Snow Hill

ROCKY MOUNT — Rocky Mount came up with six runs in the third inning and went on to record an 11-7 victory over Snow Hill last night in American Legion play.

The win lifted Rocky Mount to a 5-4 record, while Snow Hill dropped to 7-3. Rocky Mount kept its slim title hopes alive by winning, while Snow Hill crept closer to being eliminated.

Any combination of two Pitt County wins or Snow Hill losses would wrap up the title for Pitt County. One is the magic number for eliminating Rocky Mount.

Snow Hill jumped into the lead in the first with one run. Philip Gordon singled and moved up on a wild pitch. He took third on an out and scored on another wild pitch.

In the third, Snow Hill upped its lead to 2-0. Mike Butler walked and was sacrificed up. Mike Chase brought him home with a double.

Rocky Mount then exploded in the bottom of the third for six runs and a 6-2 lead. Bruce Rhodes started it with a single and Steve Whitley walked. Both were sacrificed up and scored when Allen Gay singled. Randy Schakleford walked and Linwood Silver singled in Gay. Tommy Tucker walked and a hit by Steve Stutts brought in Schakleford and Silver. Rhodes reached on an error, scoring Tucker with the sixth run.

Snow Hill got a third run in the top of the fourth, with Brann reaching on a hit, moving up on a walk and scoring on a wild pitch.

In the bottom of the fourth, Rocky Mount added two more for an 8-3 lead. Greg Clark singled and stole second. He scored when Schakleford doubled. Jeff Newsome then brought in the second run with a single.

Snow Hill added two in the fifth and two more in the seventh, but never caught up, despite having the chance. Rocky Mount capped it with three more in the eighth.

Gordon led the Snow Hill hitting with three, while Brann and Chase each had two. Gay had three for Rocky Mount, while Silver and Newsome each had two.

Snow Hill plays host to Wayne County on Friday, while Rocky Mount is at Wilson tonight.

Lee Trevino Thinks Canadian Open Good Place To Start Wins

OAKVILLE, Ont. (AP) — Lee Trevino, the happy collector of national titles, would like to start a third sweep this week in the $250,000 Canadian Open Golf Championship.

"I've won two Canadian Opens, two U.S. Opens, two British Opens, two Mexican Opens," Trevino said before teeing off today as the defending champion in the Canadian National championship. "This would be as good a place as any to start a third time around."

And, he said, his chances are very good.

"It's a long course. There aren't all those lay-up holes like last week (in the U.S. Open). They won't be standing up there with irons in their hands. They're going to have to pull the driver out of the bag.

"And they're looking at a lot of rough. If they get in the rough, they're going to lose a shot. That's fine. That's the way it's supposed to be. And that gives me an advantage, 'cause I can hit it as straight as anybody."

George Knudson heads a 21-man Canadian contingent.

In addition to Trevino, top entrants are Jack Nicklaus, who designed the 7,096-yard, par-71 Glen Abbey course that will serve as a permanent site for this national championship, plus two-time Canadian champ Tom Weiskopf, South African Gary Player, newly-crowned U.S. Open champion Andy North, and J.C. Snead, who chased him to the title last week in Denver.

Other standouts include big Andy Bean, a two-time winner, Hubert Green, former U.S. and Canadian champion Jerry Pate, Jim Simons, Bill Rogers, Arnold Palmer and Bill Kratzert.

Youth Has Jr. Lead

MONROE, N.C. (AP) — Troy Haynes of Raleigh fired a 5-under-par 67, including a course-record 30 on the back nine, Wednesday to grab the lead after the opening round of the 16-and 17-year-old division of the Carolina Junior Golf Championships.

Haynes birdied the first four holes and finished with birdies on the final two holes of the Rolling Hills Country Club course.

Bill Plyler of Monroe and Rhett Adams of Columbia, S.C., were tied for second with 71s.

Larry Griffin of Charlotte held the lead in the 14-and 15-year-old division with a 2-over 74.

Brian Sanford of Clover, S.C., was in first place in the 12 to 13 division with a 77 and Brison Folkes of Charlotte led the Pee Wee Division with a nine-hole total of 40.

About 170 golfers from North Carolina and South Carolina are participating in the 54-hole tournament, which runs through Friday.

Halicki Stops Seaver

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

Tom Seaver's winning streak finally came to an end — only because Ed Halicki started a mean streak.

"I just decided to go out there with hate," said Halicki after pitching the San Francisco Giants to a 3-0 victory over the Cincinnati Reds and their ace pitcher Wednesday night. "I decided no more buddy-buddy stuff."

Halicki was in the right frame of mind for the Reds after the kind of sorry work he's done against them in the past — a 1-7 lifetime record and inauspicious 6.53 earned run average.

Plus, he had the added incentive of facing Seaver, an illustrious pitcher who had won seven straight games, including a no-hit beauty his last time out against the St. Louis Cardinals.

Another classic performance was not in the cards this time for the fancy right-hander. Seaver gave up a second-inning single to Jack Clark to break up any no-hit intentions he might have had, then he allowed three runs in the fourth.

It might have been a 1-0 game had not a fourth-inning drive by Roger Metzger gone between center fielder Cesar Geronimo and right fielder Ken Griffey.

"When the ball went up I thought it would be caught," said Seaver.

So did the two outfielders, but each thought the other would make the catch.

Elsewhere in the National League, the Pittsburgh Pirates edged the Chicago Cubs 2-1; the Montreal Expos defeated the New York Mets 2-1 in a game shortened by rain in the seventh inning; the Atlanta Braves blanked the San Diego Padres 2-0 and the Los Angeles Dodgers nipped the Houston Astros 5-4 in 11 innings. The Philadelphia-St. Louis game was postponed by rain.

NL Roundup

Halicki allowed leadoff batters to reach base in four innings, but no Cincinnati baserunner got past second. He walked just one batter and struck out four.

Pirates 2, Cubs 1

Frank Taveras hit a tie-breaking, two-out single in the ninth inning to back the six-hit pitching of John Candelaria and lead Pittsburgh over Chicago.

Loser Ray Burris was locked in a 1-1 tie with Candelaria going into the Pirate ninth. But with one out, Phil Garner singled. Candelaria followed with a sacrifice bunt and Garner raced all the way to third as nobody covered the base. Taveras, batting near .400 the past 10 days, lined his single to left to bring Garner home.

Expos 2, Mets 1

Steve Rogers, hardly supported by Montreal bats the last eight times he has pitched, drove in the winning run with a fifth-inning single to lead the Expos over New York.

The game was held up three times, the last in the bottom of the seventh inning after a delay of one hour and 21 minutes. There were Mets on first and second with one out in the seventh when the game was called.

Braves 2, Padres 0

Gary Matthews collected three hits and drove in two runs and Adrian Devine and Gene Garber combined on an eight-hitter to lead Atlanta over San Diego. Devine gave up six hits, struck out five and walked one before needing relief help from Garber in the eighth. Bob Shirley absorbed the loss.

Dodgers 5, Astros 4

North led off the inning with a double off loser Joe Sambito, took third on a sacrifice bunt by Jerry Grote and came home on Yeager's single.

Bob Welch, the fourth Dodger pitcher, earned his first major league victory as he pitched two innings, giving up one hit and striking out four.

Spinks Caught Without License In Jacksonville

JACKSONVILLE, N.C. (AP) — For the third time this year, heavyweight boxer Leon Spinks has been fined for driving without a license.

Spinks, who holds the World Boxing Association's version of the heavyweight crown, paid a fine and court costs totaling $52 Wednesday after he was stopped by a Jacksonville policeman.

The officer said he pulled Spinks over about 2:50 a.m. Wednesday after noticing the car he was driving had expired license plates. Spinks was charged with driving without a license and operating a vehicle with an expired registration.

The 24-year-old boxer was arrested at St. Louis in April and charged with possession of one hundredth of a gram of cocaine and a small quantity of marijuana and driving without a license. The drug charges were dismissed later and he was fined $50 plus court costs on the traffic charge.

He was charged in March with driving without a license and driving the wrong way on a one-way street in St. Louis. A judge fined him $60.

And Saturday in Beaufort County, S.C., a highway patrolman ticketed Spinks for speeding as he was driving a van to his Hilton Head Island training camp from Atlanta.

Spinks defeated Muhammad Ali for the heavyweight title Feb. 15 in a split decision. He has agreed to a return match Sept. 15 in New Orleans.

The World Boxing Council stripped Spinks of its version of the title because he decided on the rematch with Ali rather than a promised bout with Ken Norton. The WBC crown is held by Larry Holmes.

Babe Ruth

Pepsi-Cola 6, Aaction Movers 4

Pepsi pushed over two runs in the first inning to take the lead. Junior Neal walked and Billy Dough singled. An error on the play let Dough move to third as Neal scored. Dough scored on an infield out.

Aaction rallied for four in the bottom of the first to take a 4-2 lead. Ken Barnes walked as did Arthur Fletcher. Ricky Sutton singled, scoring Barnes, but Fletcher was thrown out. Chris Joyner walked and Jaime Byrd singled. An error on the play let Sutton and Joyner score and moved Byrd to third. He scored when Brian Dye singled.

Pepsi tied it up and regained the lead with three in the third. Neal singled and Dough reached on an error. Both scored when Emmett Walsh tripled. Walsh scored when Bost grounded out.

The other Pepsi run came in the fourth.

No one had more than one hit for either team.

Home Builders 3, Planters Bank 2

Home Builders gained a 3-2 victory over Planters Bank in the Babe Ruth League last night.

Planters scored first, getting a run in the top of the first. Larry Talbert reached on an error and scored when Mike Pollard hit a triple.

Home Builders came back with one in the bottom of the first. Shelton Wilson doubled and moved up on an out. He scored when Barry Tyson reached on an error.

The Builders got another run in the fifth. Jeff James singled, stole second and came around on two wild pitches.

Planters tied it up with one in the top of the sixth. Keith Phillips reached on a fielder's choice and again Pollard brought the run in, this time with a double.

But in the bottom of the sixth, Home Builders got the winning run. Dan Woods singled and moved up on an error. A wild pitch put him on third, and he scored on a hit by Chuck Allen.

Pollard led the Planters hitting with two, while no one had more than one for Home Builders.

Little League

Coca-Cola 6, Union Carbide 3

Coca-Cola held onto its one-game lead in the North State Little League yesterday with a 6-3 victory over Union Carbide.

Coke, 9-4, is a game ahead of the Optimists and Lions, both 8-5. Each team had two games left to play.

Coke scored first, getting two in the second. Lee Allen walked and moved up on a passed ball. Mike Sasser singled, scoring Allen, and advanced on an error. He scored when Mike Smith doubled.

Union Carbide came back with one in the fourth. Ken Waters singled and stole second. Dwight Smith walked and Duane Roeser singled. Billy Hall walked, forcing in Waters.

Coke came back with four in the bottom of the fourth to win it. Jay Wynne reached on a fielder's choice and Allen and Sasser both walked, loading the bases. Smith doubled in all three runners, and scored when Richard Pace sacrificed.

The other two Union Carbide runs came in the sixth.

Bill Messick had two hits for Union Carbide, while Smith had three to lead Coke.

First Federal 10, Exchange 7

First Federal upset Exchange and knocked their victim out of a share of first place in the Tar Heel Little League yesterday, 10-7.

First Federal came up with three runs in the first inning. Tyrone Barrett opened things up with a home run. Leon Moore followed with a single and Greg Savage doubled him in. Mont Brown singled to score Savage.

Exchange came back with two in the bottom of the first. Joe Hobgood singled and moved up on a passed ball. Hunter Bost reached on an error and he and Hobgood pulled a double steal, with Hobgood scoring. Bost moved up on a wild pitch and scored on an out.

Both teams scored single runs in the second and third innings, with Derek Dickens getting a homer for First Federal. That gave First Federal a 5-4 lead going into the fourth.

In the fourth, First Federal broke it open with five more runs. Brian Joyner doubled and Barrett reached on an error, scoring Joyner. Moore reached on a fielder's choice, scoring Barrett. Moore stole second and took third on a passed ball. He scored when Savage reached on an error. Brown also reached on an error and Dickens on a fielder's choice, loading the bases. William Waugh reached on a fielder's choice, scoring Savage, while an error let Brown score the tenth run.

Exchange added three more in the fifth.

Brown and Joyner each had two for First Federal while Timmy Norris had two for Exchange.

Tots Deaf Since Birth Taught To Communicate

BOY FISHING — The simple phrase, boy fishing, does not seem to be too significant unless you haven't been able to hear since birth. Patricia Worley, 3, left and Andrew Wahab 5, listen through specialized earphones and watch the lips of their instructor and then search their book for the picture that matches the phrase.

TOOT-TOOT — Sister Marianna holds a microphone connected to a special electronic amplification system directed to the earphones on Patricia Worley's head. The system amplifies the sound of the small air horn Patricia squeezes and helps the child learn to identify sounds she has never heard.

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP)—A word is worth a lot of pictures to three pre-school children who attend a special class sponsored by St. Joseph's Hospital.

They have been deaf since birth, but through the magic of electronics they are learning to distinguish certain amplified sounds and imitate them in a beginning form of verbal communication.

"They are very, very eager to communicate," said Sister Marianna McLinden, who instructs the children. "Their frustration comes when they are not able to communicate, so when they learn a word to make known their wants, it is a great thing for them."

After months of training, one little girl has learned to distinguish the sounds of a bell, a horn, a toy piano and a halloween popper. When she first began using the headset which connects her to the electronic amplification system, she heard sounds but could not distinguish one from the other, said Sister Marianna.

"They have never heard a human voice to emulate...so their speech is kind of a mechanical type of speech through imitation, vibration and amplification," she said.

The children are taught to read the lips of other persons, and eventually they learn the elements of sound which can be composed into speech. In one exercise, in which Sister Marianna mouths a sentence and the children find the picture that fits her words, a little girl embellishes her response by pointing to the bandage on the toe of a boy pictured fishing from a dock and saying aloud, "OW!"

The electronic equipment was donated last October by the Sisters of St. Joseph at St. Joseph's Institute in St. Louis, and the Augusta hospital provides facilities on the hospital campus. Parents of the youngsters pay a fee to help supplement the salary of Sister Marianna, who plans to expand the class to six next fall.

THAT'S A TURKEY — Lisa Duffie, 5, describes a paper cutout of a turkey held by Sister Marianna McLinden in St. Joseph's Hospital in Augusta. Sister Marianna is the instructor in a new program at the hospital which teaches children like Lisa and Patricia Worley, right, how to speak although they have been deaf since birth.

FEELS LIKE A COOL SOUND — Lisa Duffie feels the lips and cheeks of Sister Marianna in order to learn the shape she must make to pronounce an oooh sound. Lisa, deaf since birth, must learn to identify sounds by touch and through the use of special equipment. (AP Laserphotos)

Begin Work In July On Chicod Creek Project

Work on the Chicod Creek Watershed Project in Pitt and Beaufort Counties is expected to begin during July, according to Soil Conservationist Jesse L. Hicks.

"Clearing and snagging" (removal of fallen trees and other debris) along three miles of stream will be the first work to be done.

A project agreement has been signed by local sponsors and the USDA-Soil Conservation Service, and advertisements for contracts are now being placed.

A compromise consent agreement signed by Federal Judge John Larkins was the final step toward the project. The agreement ended the lawsuit brought by the National Resources Defense Council and other groups against local sponsors and the SCS.

According to Hicks, during the first phase of the project, sediment traps, areas of water flow where the stream is deepened and widened, will be provided at frequent intervals. Small equipment will be used in order to prevent damage to trees and shrubs in the area.

The balance of the work on the two-county project will progress later on in 1978, after flood prevention and actual work contracts are signed.

The Soil Conservation Service is responsible for maintaining high engineering standards. Local sponsors are to obtain land rights and quality maintenance upon completion of the entire project.

Mayors Urge State Governments To Share Wealth

MAYORS IN CUBA — A delegation of 17 U.S. mayors are shown arriving at Jose Marti airport in Havana yesterday after conclusion of the U.S. Mayors conference in Atlanta, Ga. The delegation was led by Mayor Paul Soglin of Madison, Wis. Delegates to the mayors' meeting in Atlanta shelved resolutions criticizing the trip and a statement declaring the trip was not intended to indicate approval of the castro regime or Castro activities in Africa. (AP Laserphoto)

ATLANTA (AP) — The new president of the U.S. Conference of Mayors is urging state governments to share their wealth with local communities threatened with financial woes as a result of the taxpayers' revolt against property taxes.

Mayor William H. McNichols of Denver called for the in-state revenue sharing as the annual meeting of the mayors' conference ended Wednesday.

Commerce Secretary Juanita Kreps warned the mayors that a tax rebellion triggered by California's Proposition 13 could generate panic that might destroy the nation's cities. Proposition 13, overwhelmingly approved June 6, would cut property taxes in California by 57 percent.

McNichols specifically urged states to share their income tax revenue with municipalities, which traditionally rely heavily on property taxes.

Some states, he said, "are so jealous of this (income) tax they refuse to share it, in which case they could at least enact a statewide state-collected sales tax which would be returned to the point of collection."

Atlanta Mayor Maynard Jackson agreed, saying local governments are being forced to pay for state-mandated programs.

"If the states are going to say, 'Cities, do this and do that and do that,' states ought to give the cities the means with which to do those things," Jackson said.

The mayors adopted a resolution endorsing property tax reform but pledging to work to insure that future tax-cut initiatives, such as Proposition 13, include means for replacing lost revenue.

Mrs. Kreps said she hopes the tax revolt will encourage states to assume a larger share of the cost of urban services and thus reduce the dependence of local governments on property taxes.

Should the tax rebellion force a reduction of essential city services, she warned, "panic out-migrations of firms and residents" will result, "further diminishing the tax base and further reducing the ability of affected cities to meet minimum needs."

"It is potentially the most vicious of cycles," she said.

In another resolution, the mayors sidestepped a showdown between "sunbelt" and "snowbelt" cities over the distribution of federal dollars — an issue that had been simmering throughout the five-day conference.

President Carter's urban policy calls for focusing federal aid on areas with the most need, rather than spreading it around evenly.

Some mayors voiced concern that the criteria for funneling the federal aid might be so narrow that their cities would be denied assistance.

In their resolution, the mayors suggested that unemployment statistics, as well as under-employment figures, be used to determine how the federal dollars are allocated.

McNichols told reporters he intends to create a task force to study the problems of "sunbelt" cities "that have, indeed, problems that are as acute as those of the so-called 'horror stories' — New York and what have you."

He said the conference should "recognize that some programs are for cities that are on the verge of being bankrupt. Other programs are for cities that have the wisdom and the will ... to keep from being bankrupt"

Members of the conference's ERA task force announced Wednesday they will campaign for an extension of the ratifiying deadline for the Equal Rights Amendment.

"We, as mayors, recognize that the ERA is not a women's issue or a man's issue but concerns the equality of all persons under the law," said Mayor Lila Cockrell of San Antonio, Texas, who heads the task force.

She told reporters that task force members plan to write letters to members of the House and Senate judiciary committees seeking a seven-year extension of the March 22, 1979, ratification deadline.

Mayors who belong to the conference also will be urged to support the extension drive, she said.

And, Mrs. Cockrell said, the task force plans to "lend assistance to the efforts to achieve ratification" in states that have not approved the ERA.

The mayors' conference has come under fire for holding its convention in Georgia, which is among those states that have not ratified the Equal Rights Amendment. About a dozen mayors boycotted the meeting because of its location, a spokesman for the conference said.

Other members of the ERA task force are Mayors David Vann of Birmingham, Ala.; Richard Carver of Peoria, Ill.; Jackson of Atlanta; Frank Logue of New Haven, Conn.; Henry Maier of Milwaukee; Carole McClellan of Austin; Thomas Moody of Columbus; Charles Royer of Seattle, and Coleman Young of Detroit.

As the conference came to an end, the delegates shelved a resolution criticizing a trip by 17 mayors, other city officials and conference staff to Cuba.

The delegation, led by Mayor Paul Soglin of Madison, Wis., departed immediately after the end of the meeting.

Mayor Clay Shaw of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., a city with a large Hispanic population, first offered a resolution calling for the trip to be cancelled, but he later withdrew it.

He then offered a second resolution declaring that the trip was not intended to indicate approval of the Castro regime or of Cuban activities in Africa.

That resolution was shelved after several mayors argued that it might embarrass them.

Aquarium Trainer As Fascinated By His Job As Marveling Public

By JULES LOH
AP Special Correspondent

MYSTIC, Conn. (AP) — Anybody who has ever tried to housebreak a puppy, and tried and tried and tried, can only marvel at what Curt Horton accomplishes.

Horton is a trainer of whales and dolphins and seals, wild creatures made to do as he commands. He is as fascinated with his job as all who watch in awe as he does it.

"I got into this work by accident," he said. "Now I know it's what I want to do. I can't imagine ever getting tired of it."

Mystic is a salty old coastal village, a restored whaling port. Tourists climb aboard antique whaling ships, built in an earlier day for the killing of sea creatures, then walk down a cobbled street to the aquarium, built for the care and study of them.

Several times a day Horton puts his charges through their paces. At the touch of a finger to a fin, or at the sound of a whistle, dolphins jump through hoops, seals catch balls, whales leap and cavort.

"It isn't quite right to say that what we do is teach an animal to do a trick," Horton said, "although they indeed do tricks. What we do, technically, is called behavior modification.

"It takes a lot of time and a lot of patience and it is based simply on rewarding them when their behavior is what you want it to be and withholding reward when it isn't."

When the creatures get good at it, according to Horton, they take on a certain independence, like pampered movie stars.

"Take Sassy, for instance. She's a dolphin. She has four behaviors and she knows I call for them in a certain order and give her a nice fat fish after each one.

"Sometimes, just to be ornery, she will do all four in succession without stopping, as if to say 'Let's get it over with.' When there are people watching it can be embarassing.

"That's nothing compared with Kimo. Kimo is my favorite dolphin.

"There will be a big crowd, and I have to talk to them, explain the behavior I'm going to demonstrate. Kimo will hear me begin and will go down to the bottom and not come up for five minutes, six minutes, seven minutes, leaving me up there trying to ad lib. Yes, he does it on purpose, sort of telling me to kiss off."

Horton, who is 28, began working with sea mammals — he corrects you if you call them fishes — six years ago when he answered an ad for a curator at a small Cape Cod aquarium.

"I didn't know what a curator was so I applied. I found out that a curator was somebody who cleans fish tanks."

Vacation Mail

Greenville Postmaster Lloyd Mills has offered suggestions that he says will help patrons and the post office in mail handling during the summer vacation season.

Two systems of mail handling during vacation are available. One is to ask the post office to hold mail or forward it to a vacation address. Mail can be held by the post office for a period of up to 30 days.

Another method is to make arrangements with a friend or neighbor to check mailboxes daily and hold mail until vacationers return.

"An overflowing mailbox can be an open invitation to burglars," Mills commented. "Letting mail or newspapers pile up is advertising the fact that a house or apartment is empty and unguarded."

Mills also offers other suggestions for persons going on vacation. He advocates purchasing a sufficient supply of stamps before leaving town as vacationers may not be conveniently near a post office during vacation.

As a reminder, new postage rates are: Postcards, ten cents — Letters, 15 cents for one ounce or less, with an additional 13 cents for each additional ounce of postage.

Serious Approach Is Welcomed

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Boy, what a difference a markedly slower pace, eviction of rampant cuteness, a serious approach to news and the installation of Hugh Downs as host has had on "20-20."

ABC's new contender to CBS's "60 Minutes" looks good now. It's made a 180-degree turn from its June 6 opening show, which not only was roasted by critics but also proved a ratings dud.

Gone is the whizbang mix of chills, tragedy and brittle humor presided over by former magazine editors Harold Hayes, a chap of down-home demeanor, and Robert Hughes, a jaunty Australian.

They're also gone, yanked after Show No. 1, and replaced by Downs, the 57-year-old former host of "Today." He's not a reporter, but at least is a serious, intelligent, responsible man of taste.

That ABC's Tuesday newsmagazine show had been revamped for the better was apparent in its June 13 edition.

It had no fripperies, no snickering tone and was downright sedate, with four long, well-done pieces ranging from unnecessary Caesarian operations to a look at sequel-sharking in "Jaws 2."

Last Tuesday, suspecting all this a devious plot to temporarily still baying critics, we checked out "20-20" again to see if it had resumed its errant ways. By neddies, it hadn't.

The serious approach remained in two out of three long stories aired — one a study of antibiotics put in cattle feed with ominous results and the other about auto safety, or the lack thereof.

The latter story, by former CBS staff member Sylvia Chase, took the Ford Motor Co. over the coals again for auto gas tanks that burst into flame in rear-end collisions at speeds above 30 mph.

The subject made headlines last fall, courtesy of San Francisco's Mother Jones magazine, and got another look two weeks ago in a lengthy "60 Minutes" report.

CBS's story didn't credit Mother Jones, but Downs graciously did and even declared the "60 Minutes" once-over "an excellent summary report" before Ms. Chase offered her findings.

Her report included a sad, grim look at a woman horribly burned when her 1965 Mustang erupted in flame after a rear-ender, and hard shots at Ford with its own collision and gas tank studies.

She emphasized the danger of gas tanks so close to the rear bumpers of Ford cars, noting that nearly all experts say the safest place is over or in front of the car's rear axle.

One flaw: She never asked why the tanks weren't so positioned.

The only forgettable piece was yet another profile of the Rolling Stones, the rock group that defies both time and taste. It was by Geraldo Rivera, keeper of the mod concession at ABC News.

Otherwise, it was a good show. It indicates, praise be, that "20-20" is on the road to recovery from what seemed sure disaster.

FORECAST FOR FRIDAY, JUNE 23, 1978

Your Daily HOROSCOPE
from the CARROLL RIGHTER INSTITUTE

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Increased activity in communication matters prevails today. Use your best judgment and inspired ideas to make an excellent impression on others. Be more optimistic.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Figure out which of your friends can be of assistance to you now and contact them early. Strive to be more sociable.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) You can become more efficient in your career work by showing more initiative. Use your imagination more for best results.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) You have good ideas which need more study before putting them in operation. Keep busy with plans in the evening.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Plan just how to have more harmony with your mate and make your life happier. Strive to be more successful.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Using good judgment now can improve your business operations considerably. Endeavor to be more cooperative with associates.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Use new appliances that can help you to do your work more efficiently. Take no chances with one who has an eye on your assets.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Make those appointments early for the recreation you desire later in the day. Take time to make your surroundings more comfortable.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Figure out what should be done to improve your surroundings and then get busy and do it. Be more cheerful.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Excellent day for coming to a better understanding with close ties. Use positive methods to gain your aims.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Study your assets well and see where to make any needed improvements. Strive for more harmony at home.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) You are able to handle personal affairs intelligently now and get good results. Show that you are a fun-loving person.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) By combining the best of the past with the best of the modern, you come up with fine ideas that can be profitable. Be wise.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will be most gregarious, so be sure to have many friends around early in life, of all ages, and there will be no difficulty when dealing with others at maturity. There's a natural at sports in this chart.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to YOU!

Junior Miss Rhododendron

BAKERSVILLE, N.C. (AP)— Donna Lynn Hursey of Wilmington was named Junior Miss Rhododendron Wednesday night.

The 8-year-old girl was picked from a field of several youngsters for the title. Elizabeth Carolyn Kim, 9, of Hickory was first runnerup.

The Senior Miss Rhododendron pageant opens tonight, with the winner to be chosen Saturday evening.

Plane Trouble Grounds Sinatra

HUNTINGTON, W.VA. (AP) — Airplane troubles grounded entertainer Frank Sinatra's concert at Huntington Civic Center Wednesday night. But promoters said he would make up the concert tonight.

Civic Center manager Bill Lillyman said some 8,000 tickets sold for the Wednesday concert would be honored at tonight's concert.

Lillyman did not learn of Sinatra's transportation problems until a few hours before the singer's scheduled appearance. He immediately locked the doors at the civic center and made the announcement outside, using a police cruiser's amplified speaker.

Show-Revision Proved Asset In Ratings War

NEW YORK (AP) — ABC's revised "20-20" newsmagazine jumped 22 places to 17th in the ratings, and the impressive performance helped the network win the week's battle for the prime time television viewer, A.C. Nielsen Co. figures show.

The show's premiere the week before was No. 39 in the ratings, and took plenty of heat from the television critics. Between installments, ABC dumped the program's two hosts in favor of Hugh Downs and changed portions of the format.

The resulting "20-20" did better in the ratings for the week ending June 18 than CBS' consistent hit, "60 Minutes." The CBS version, composed mostly of rerun segments, was No. 28.

CBS did have reason to cheer. The network's "One Day at a Time" was the most-watched TV show for the second week in a row, and two other shows finished high in the ratings — "M-A-S-H," No. 2, and "Lou Grant," No. 4.

ABC's "Three's Company" was No. 3 for the week.

Nine of the week's Top 10 shows, in fact, were reruns, and movies fared well in the ratings. "The Lords of Flatbush" on ABC was sixth, "Love is Not Enough" and "Earthquake" on NBC 12th and 13th, and "Play it Again, Sam," on CBS 15th.

ABC finished the week with a rating of 15, followed by CBS at 14.2 and NBC at 13.6. The networks say that means in an average prime time minute, 15 percent of the homes in the country with television were watching ABC.

The rating for No. 1 "One Day at a Time" was 23. Nielsen says that means of all the homes in the country with TV, 23 percent saw at least part of the show.

Three of the five programs at the bottom of the week's ratings were on CBS — "The Bob Newhart Show," No. 57; a news special Thursday night on the tax revolt, No. 58; and "Baby I'm Back," No. 59. NBC's news special on the tax revolt the next day did worse, No. 60, and ABC's "Hardy Boys" was No. 61.

Here are the week's Top 10 shows:

"One Day at a Time," with a 23 rating representing 16.8 million homes, and "M-A-S-H," 22 or 16.6 million, both CBS; "Three's Company," 22.1 or 16.1 million, ABC; "Lou Grant," 21.7 or 15.8 million, CBS, and "Charlie's Angels," 21 or 15.3 million, Sunday Movie, "Lords of Flatbush," 20 or 14.6 million, "Carter Country," 19.8 or 14.4 million, all ABC; "Laverne and Shirley" and "Starsky and Hutch," both 19.7 or 14.3 million, both ABC, and "Barney Miller," 18.5 or 13.5 million, ABC.

The next 10 shows:

"Happy Days," ABC; Monday Movie, "Love is Not Enough," Big Event, "Earthquake," and "Quincy, M.E.," all NBC; Tuesday Movie, "Play it Again, Sam," and "Good Times," both CBS; "20-20," ABC; "Little House on the Prairie," NBC, and "Alice" and "The Jeffersons," both CBS.

PLAY BASED ON KAFKA

BERLIN (UPI) — Peter Weiss' stage play "Der Prozess (The Trial)" recently had its East German premiere at the Rostock municipal theater. The play is based on the novel of the same name by Franz Kafka.

DIRECTOR DIES

LONDON (AP) — Mark Robson, 64, film editor, director and producer, died Tuesday of a heart attack, the U.S. Embassy here reported. Among films he directed were "Valley of the Dolls", "Von Ryan's Express", "Bridges at Toko-Ri" and "Earthquake".

China Has Phone Book In English

HONG KONG (AP) — Three years ago, when Julie Munro arrived in China together with her journalist husband, she found one frustrating aspect of life there. There wasn't an English telephone directory available.

She's now changed this, publishing a 130-page booklet, The China Phone Book and Address Directory, which lists 2,500 telephone numbers, a collection of cable and telex addresses, and some personal opinions on business establishments gathered during her stay there.

"I decided on this project when I heard many newly arrived foreigners talking about the same problems I had when I first arrived in China," Mrs. Munro, 31, a Canadian from Thunder Bay, Ontario, explained.

"No one had a complete listing of trading corporations, restaurants or government offices. I personally worked off two dozen sheets of paper listing numbers for a long time."

The directory covers Peking, Shanghai, Canton and 36 other Chinese cities and includes the telephone numbers and addresses — in English and Chinese — of foreign diplomatic missions, Chinese government agencies, airline offices, restaurants, churches, dry cleaners, hairdressers and a market in Peking where customers can have turnips carved into the shape of flowers.

China publishes its own telephone directory but it's in Chinese and is generally considered unsuitable for most foreigners.

Mrs. Munro printed 1,000 copies of her directory and offered them for sale at 25 U.S. dollars each. Although the cost may seem high and the directory's appeal is believed restricted to China traders and China watchers, Mrs. Munro already is planning a second printing to meet requests for the booklet.

She also plans to update the directory next year, when she hopes to add new numbers and other information gathered from foreigners who've been allowed to visit Chinese cities long off limits to outsiders.

Mrs. Munro is the wife of Ross Munro, a correspondent for the Toronto Globe and Mail. They left China in January after the Chinese government refused to extend Munro's visa, apparently because of a series of critical articles he wrote on human rights there.

They now live in Hong Kong, where Munro, on a leave of absence from his newspaper, is writing a book on politics in China between 1974 and 1977. This period includes the deaths of party chairman Mao Tse-tung and Premier Chou En-lai and the ouster from power of a radical clique led by Mao's widow, Chiang Ching.

Telephone service in China generally is good, Mrs. Munro said, but she has included a few tips on telephone etiquette Chinese-style in the introduction of her directory.

"When one makes a phone call in China, one seldom hears the person answering the phone identify himself, or the office he belongs to," she reports. "They simply answer 'wai' ('hello') and it's up to you, the caller, to confirm that you have called the correct number."

Some foreigners, she reports, have had conversations of only two words. "Wai", "wai", wai?", "wai", "WAI"; then finally "cuo-le" (wrong number).

Anniversary For Richard And Pat

SAN JUAN CAPISTRANO, Calif. (AP) — Richard Nixon and his wife, Pat, celebrated their 38th wedding anniversary at a restaurant in this city of the swallows.

Linda Jenkins, an employee at the El Adode de San Juan Capistrano restaurant, said the Nixons were accompanied Wednesday night by their eldest daughter, Julie Nixon Eisenhower, and her husband, David. The couple are expecting their first child soon.

It was believed to be the first public appearance for Mrs. Nixon since recovering from what her doctor described as acute viral asthmatic bronchitis. The illnesss hospitalized her for four days last month.

Ms. Jenkins said the Nixons often eat at the El Adobe, and had been there last to celebrate Nixon's 65th birthday on Jan. 9.

'Human Rights' Theme Raised In China

By EDITH M. LEDERER
Associated Press Writer

HONG KONG (AP) — China's new leadership is reviving legal institutions and talking favorably of "human rights" in what one American legal expert says is a campaign to convince millions of Chinese that speaking out won't mean arrest and torture as before.

Professor Jerome A. Cohen, associate dean of the Harvard Law School, said the campaign's ultimate aim is to get all China's people to participate in making the country a modern power by the year 2000.

Cohen, director of Harvard's East Asian legal studies department, just returned from China, where he met officials of the new institute of law of the Chinese Academy of Social Sciences and saw a criminal trial in Shanghai.

In an interview with The Associated Press, he said China's leaders realize that to get the enthusiastic participation of the masses, they must develop a legal system "with some kind of minimum security and order so that people will have confidence that they will not be subjected to arbitrary deprivations or sanctions by the state."

Modern China's 29-year history has witnessed vast pendulum swings with periods of relative freedom followed by periods of severe repression.

Cohen said the country's intellectuals, scientists, educators and professionals — desperately needed now in China's modernization plans — were the hardest hit by these "pendulum swings" and are most wary about speaking out again.

"People aren't taking part in the current movement to speak out," he said. "They're just waiting because previously, people who did speak out regretted it later.

"They feel a deep resentment against the state and how it acted to them and their families. They feel they're really being asked to build an unjust society — that they may be arrested, dragged away at any time, held indefinitely, not know the charges against them, be subjected to torture," he added.

"They feel they can't put forth any ideas, make any innovations, articulate any genuine criticism without a month or a year later suffering severe consequences for what they were asked to do."

To overcome this, Cohen said, the Chinese leadership has recognized that the country needs a complex legal system to ensure that there is "a population of specialized and talented people who feel good enough about the state to enthusiastically participate in its development.

"For this reason, they're using the term human rights again and they're using it in precisely the terms we mean it. Now they're talking about political and legal rights — not economic and social rights."

He said the People's Republic of China is still a Communist dictatorship but it "is trying to moderate the worst excesses and go back to the degree of freedom that existed in the 1950s."

Opening lead: Jack of ♡.

The contract seemed so easy that declarer did not take the time to study his line of play. As a result, he paid the usual penalty.

Looking only at the North-South hands, a grand slam is an excellent proposition. But since South was void in diamonds and North void in his partner's second suit, it is understandable that both were reluctant to explore the full possibilities.

This is perhaps just as well, for the 4-0 trump break placed even six spades in some jeopardy. West led the jack of hearts, and South was a bit agitated that his side had missed a "cold" grand slam. To get the hand over with quickly, declarer ruffed in dummy and led the ten of trumps. East's hearts discard was a rude awakening. Suddenly it dawned on declarer that he would be unable to use dummy's diamond suit because West's trumps were longer than dummy's, and there was no entry to the table outside the trump suit.

Declarer tried to cash some diamond tricks, but West ruffed the second diamond and simply led another heart, and no matter what declarer did, he could not avoid going down.

Declarer's line was correct if he were playing a grand slam. However, since he was only in six spades, he could have afforded to guard against the remote possibility that West had all four missing trumps.

As happens so often, declarer's error was at trick one. All he had to do to ensure his contract was discard from dummy. East can win the ace of hearts, but no return embarrasses South. Assume East shifts to a club. Declarer rises with the ace, cashes the king of spades and enters dummy with a trump to the ten.

Now, to protect against the possibility of a 4-1 diamond split, declarer ruffs a low diamond with the queen of trumps, then uses the ace and jack of spades to draw West's last trumps. The diamond suit is now established, and dummy's long suit takes the rest of the tricks.

Appeals Verdict Over Paddling

FAYETTEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — A Sunday school superintendent who used a two-inch-wide paddle to spank a 21-month-old child in a church nursery says he is appealing his conviction on an assault charge.

Randall O. Grill, an Air Force dentist, was given a 90-day suspended sentence and fined $100 this week after telling a judge he was taking the Bible's advice on the disciplining of children when he spanked the youngster.

"It's a church-state issue," Grill, a captain in the Air Force, said Wednesday. "What the judge ruled was that churches do not have the same ... authority the schools do. That's why we have to carry it on."

Grill described the Bible as "just a wealth of information on raising children" and said it teaches that to spare the rod is to spoil the child.

He is appealing the conviction before District Court Judge Sol Cherry to Superior Court.

Patsy A. Rench said her son, William Stewart Rench, was crying when she picked him up at the nursery of the Manna Church kindergarten following Sunday morning services May 21. She said an older daughter discovered bruises on the boy's buttocks and lower back and that she and her husband took him to Womack Army Hospital.

Grill testified that he was called from the church service by a kindergarten teacher and found the child having a "temper tantrum."

Deciding that the toddler needed a spanking, he said he carried him outside the church, "pulled down his Pampers and hit him three times" with a paddle two inches wide and about a quarter inch thick.

When the boy continued to whine after being taken back to the kindergarten, Grill said he took him outside again and "made some loud noises on his Pampers."

He added that he is even more stern with his two daughters, ages 16 months and three years.

Ripples Of 'Proposition 13' Spread Across Land

By JONATHAN WOLMAN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Tip O'Neill knows which way the political winds are blowing, and he seems apprehensive about the one that blew Howard Jarvis into town this week.

Jarvis, the blustery California tax-cut crusader, took a triumphant two-day tour of Washington on Monday and Tuesday, creating ripples of "Potomac panic" in the $500 billion federal establishment.

His message, a California political warning that is bolstered by national public opinion polls, is clear and simple: Government collects too much in taxes and spends too much money.

"If you had time, you could make a list of 25,000 things that the federal government ought to get out of tomorrow," says Jarvis, who led the successful California referendum which cut property taxes by 57 percent and put a lid on their future increase.

O'Neill, the House speaker and a blustery character himself, is afraid Jarvis will fan the flames of California's tax revolt to Washington. O'Neill is a staunch believer in government spending to help people. His main concern now is the future of a $3.4 billion foreign aid bill before the House this week.

O'Neill wasn't keen about embracing Jarvis.

"I don't know of any reason that I should talk to Mr. Jarvis," the speaker told reporters Monday morning. Not much later, Jarvis was escorted into O'Neill's office for a long session with the House Democratic leadership.

"I don't think anyone could have had a more courteous, cordial reception," said Jarvis. "I had a marvelous hour and 45 minutes of the scheduled 15 minutes with the House Democratic leadership."

Jarvis said O'Neill told him: "Don't go away thinking that you convinced me," and Jarvis told O'Neill, "If I didn't, maybe the people will."

Take Alan Cranston, the Senate majority whip, a California Democrat and a prominent liberal. An early opponent of Jarvis' California tax-cut measure, Cranston escorted Jarvis on his Monday excursion to Capitol Hill. He now is riveted to the Jarvis bandwagon, saying the people have spoken.

He took Jarvis to see Sen. Floyd Haskell, another liberal Democrat. Haskell is facing a tough re-election race in tax-conscious Colorado this fall. He hopped aboard the Jarvis bandwagon.

Cranston introduced Jarvis to Sens. Charles Percy, R-Ill., and John Glenn, D-Ohio, and Mark Hatfield, R-Ore., and Frank Church, D-Idaho. Sen. Russell Long, D-La., a powerbroker of O'Neill's stature, went by to say hello.

"Victory works wonders for your popularity," Jarvis said Tuesday as he met reporters at the Washington Press Club.

President Carter avoided Jarvis, ignoring the Californian's desire for a brief talk. He was greeted with the most enthusiasm by Republicans.

Republicans have been trying to cut federal spending for years and see Jarvis as Moses come down from the mountain, not with tablets, but with public opinion surveys and one very loud, very dramatic election victory.

Jarvis says tax activists in 40 states are seeking his help in engineering tax-cut campaigns. If there is a string of successes at the state level, the fever will surely spread to Washington.

"They were clobbering the hell out of us with taxes, but it was hard to get people excited," he says, adding in a speech later, "I was just a little farmer from Utah, wandering around the state saying, 'for God's sake, get off your duff and do something.'"

He believes it won't take 15 years to mount a successful tax-cut campaign in Washington where federal spending has reached the $500 billion-mark.

It might not even take 15 months. Already, in the wake of the California vote, Washington is responding. Not only with sudden respect for Jarvis, but with spending cuts for federal agencies.

Because of Jarvis' successful Proposition 13, Congress has pared the budgets of the departments of Health, Education and Welfare, Labor and Justice as well as some money for public works.

House Republican Leader John Rhodes says the Washington reaction to Proposition 13 amounts to "panicsville on the Potomac."

On Monday, as Jarvis was making his rounds on Capitol Hill, the House finally put its foot down in front of a spending cut proposal.

After approving the slight cuts in agency appropriations last week, the House rejected efforts to trim the already small — by Washington standards — Department of Housing and Urban Development spending package.

Meanwhile, there is a lot of talk about legislation promoted by Republican Rep. Jack Kemp of New York that would reduce income tax rates by an average of about 33 percent over three years. Even Jarvis found it tough to endorse that broad a cut.

Senate Republican leader Howard Baker of Tennessee has put his staff to work trying to develop a workable and winnable legislative proposal that would clamp a lid on federal spending.

Jarvis is the stalking horse for the movement to cut federal spending. He's sounded the charge, but he isn't leading the troops. Not yet.

Consumers Will Be Consulted On Labeling Decree

By MICHAEL J. CONLON

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Government experts have decided the labels on most foods on store shelves are not really helping American consumers become shrewder shoppers or wiser eaters.

As a result, the Food and Drug Administration, the Federal Trade Commission and the Agriculture Department will hold hearings across the country later this year to ask consumers what they want on labels.

The hearings could lead to a major revision of labeling laws and new attempts to disclose nutrition information in a meaningful way in advertising.

Tim Hammonds, a researcher for the Food Marketing Institute, an industry group, reported recently on a survey that shows some of the problems. Among other things, the poll disclosed:

— While interest in nutrition is high, most people don't want to bother to become experts on the subject.

— Only 25 percent of the population pays a lot of attention to nutrition and ingredient information currently on labels. The remaining 75 percent use the data only some of the time, or not at all.

— Efforts to use graphics, colors, charts and so on to simplify the information don't work.

— People definitely appear to want disclosure of ingredients by percentage of the total product, as consumer groups have been urging for years.

Hammonds also says the amount of information now on labels is probably adequate but needs to be reorganized. He also says consumers do not want labels that editorialize about what's good. He says they would rather make up their own minds.

The FDA, USDA and FTC hearings are scheduled for Aug. 22-23 in Wichita, Kan.; Sept. 18-19 in Little Rock, Ark.; Sept. 27-28 in Washington, D.C.; Oct. 12-13 in San Francisco; and Oct. 25-26 in Boston.

FDA officials say a special effort will be made to get consumer opinion through publicity and direct contact with various groups.

The questions to be asked include:

— Does the word "imitation" really mean anything any more? The FDA originally required its use to penalize manufacturers selling something other than the real thing. But consumers have come to identify the word with low-calorie products and it has become an advantage.

— Should symbols be used on labels to give consumers an at-a-glance notification that certain ingredients, sugar for example, are present.

— Under current law, artificial color is permitted in butter, cheese and ice cream without any mention on the label. Should that exemption be lifted?.

— Foods now are listed on labels in order of predominance, but some consumers may not realize that. Should the label say right out that the first listed ingredient is the most predominant, etc.?

Biologists Are Speaking Here

ECU News Bureau

Dr. Michael Felder of the University of South Carolina biology faculty and Dr. Frank Schwartz of the UNC Institute of Marine Sciences, Morehead City, are scheduled to speak at East Carolina University seminars this month.

Dr. Felder spoke on "The Genetics and Biochemistry of Alcohol Dehydrogenase in Peromyscus" Wednesday, and Dr. Schwartz will speak on "Cownose Rays — World Engmas" June 27.

Both programs are scheduled for 1 p.m. in the ECU Science Complex and are part of a series of seminars sponosred by the ECU Department of Biology.

Claire Yaffa's exhibition at the Hudson River Museum in Yonkers, N.Y., is an example of how photographic talent can develop and mature in a dozen years. Her subjects are the children of the Leake and Watts Children's Home, a private, voluntary child-caring agency in Yonkers founded in 1831. They are troubled children from families with problems or homes that are broken.

The photographs, on display through July 9, reveal her sympathetic rapport with her subjects, a warm sense of understanding and friendship that touches the viewer as well.

It isn't easy to establish that initial basis of reciprocal trust with people who have problems, young perhaps even more than old. Claire built that foundation of friendship slowly, by making many visits and getting to know the children before she started taking pictures. Then, when she returned, she always brought prints to give to her subjects. That made them feel special.

Tania was a typical example of the early session. "Man," she said to Claire, "what you want my picture for?" "Because you are beautiful!" Claire replied. Tania was delighted and became a willing subject. Each chose their favorite spot, corner or room to be photographed in and whatever possessions they wanted to be shown with.

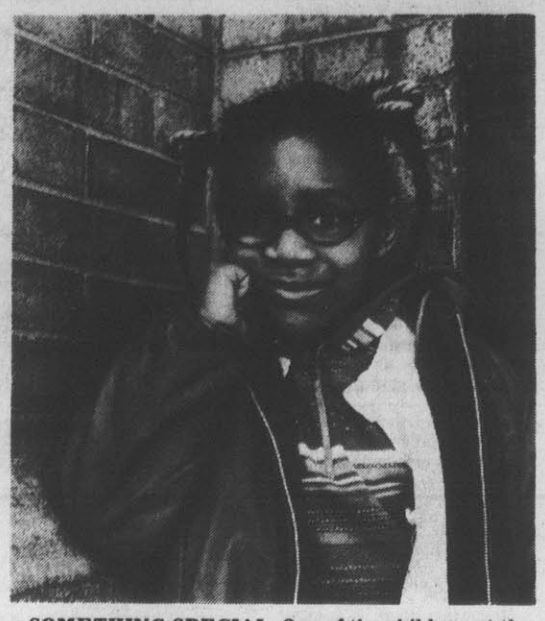
Recalling those first of many months of picture taking, Claire says she tried to make the children feel important, to make them feel they were special.

"I wanted to give these children something — and then found I had gotten something for myself, too. I started to put my heart into it and the photographs revealed a new sensitivity and perception that others began to notice."

Among those who noticed and gave further encouragement on this particular project were Sean Kernan, noted photography teacher and Cornell Capa, director of the International Center of Photography.

But then Claire Yaffa has a long list of important photographic personalities who played substantial roles, she feels, in her development as a photographer. It all started in 1966, the year she had the first of her two children. She and her husband had dinner with a group of friends, among them Ken Lieberman, an executive with Berkey, K & L Custom Labs. Later he took them to the lab where he was putting together a photographic exhibition for the Museum of Modern Art.

"When we left," Claire remembers, "Ken gave me a batch of extra work prints he no longer needed. On the drive home, I carried them in my arms, cradling them like a baby. I told my husband that night, 'I've found what I want to do. I want to be a photographer!'"



SOMETHING SPECIAL. One of the children at the Leake and Watts Children's Home in Yonkers, N.Y. is made to feel important by Claire Yaffa, of Harrison, N.Y. Her photo is in the exhibition at the Hudson River Museum, and that's something special.

She enrolled in a workshop with Josef Schneider, famous baby photographer, and used her own infant as her first subject. It took several years but she wound up with a reputation as a photographer of children in the Westchester area of New York City where she lived. Her photographs appeared in the local newspapers and magazines and then she went on to do photo essays of the region.

She also studied with George Tice, Philippe Halsman, Lisette Model and Gene Smith, absorbing their criticisms along with their wisdom and philosophy. With this foundation, it isn't surprising that she became photography editor of Westchester Magazine. It also led to her selection as photography co-ordinator for the International Women's Arts Festival, sponsored by the United Nations.

Another career milestone was being chosen to head one of the largest photographic shows of women photographers in the United States: Chairperson of the Breadth of Vision Exhibition at the Fashion Institute of Technology in New York City in 1975.

Mrs. Yaffa's photographs have been exhibited previously at the Bridge Gallery in White Plains and the Neikrug Gallery and the Witkin Gallery in New York City, and have been acquired in private collections.

But of them all, she feels most gratified with the added infusion of understanding and heart which found expression in the photographs from the Leake and Watts Children's Home picture-taking project. It is even more gratifying to learn that her acquaintance with that institution began when she volunteered her services and donated her photographs for one of their annual reports.

Her contribution enriched her own photography. She also made another personal discovery at the same time.

"Photography," Claire Yaffa says now, "is something I HAVE to do, not just something that I want to do."

FISH-SHAPED

HAYWARD, Wis. (AP) — The National Fresh Water Fishing Hall of Fame, a museum complex being developed here, will have a new building in the shape of a muskie rising from a bubbling pool of water.

The glass fiber, steel and concrete structure will be 140 feet long and four stories high and cost over a quarter million dollars.

Major Assist To Genealogists

By KAREN SOUTHWICK

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — Genealogists, who have made their search for "roots" one of the three most popular hobbies, have received an exciting new aid.

The world's largest genealogical library has been linked to hundreds of local outlets.

The Mormon genealogical library in Salt Lake City has 1.5 billion pages of vital statistics microfilmed from all over the world. It contains more than 1 billion names. The 949,000 one-hundred-foot rolls of microfilm contain the equivalent of 4.5 million volumes of 300 pages each.

Nearly 300 local church wards (parishes) across the country are now hooked up with the Salt Lake City facility. The branch genealogical libraries, of which Pittsburgh is one of the latest, make the church's vast records available to the general public.

Local genealogists in western Pennsylvania heralded the Pittsburgh branch library as the greatest resource they could have.

The Salt Lake City library "is the biggest and best in the world," said Ginny Guttendorf, outgoing president of the Western Pennsylvania Genealogy Society. "We have been waiting for this (linkup) for months."

The branch libraries either contain copies of the microfilmed records themselves, or an index to the Salt Lake City holdings, which can be mailed to local patrons.

"For the price of postage all we have to do is order what we want," Mrs. Guttendorf said. "It saves people a lot of traveling time and money having this available through the library here."

"I'm more excited about this than anything else in the field that's happened around here," agreed Helen Harriss, founder of the western Pennsylvania society and a certified genealogist. "This opens all kinds of doors that have been closed."

To duplicate the Salt Lake City library's records, "you'd have to have a private plane and travel everywhere," she said.

"People are going to be standing in line to use these since the records aren't available anywhere else in the United States," Mrs. Harriss predicted.

After the television movie "Roots," Church spokesman Jerry Cahill said usage of the Salt Lake City library more than doubled from 2,000 researchers a day to 4,200. He said spot checks indicate a similar increase at branch libraries.

Cahill said the church is budgeting to add 30 to 50 more of the branch libraries each year in meeting houses all over the world. Local church members apply for the branch library and put up 30 percent of the funds while the national church pays the rest.

The libraries vary in size depending on local needs, but most have a basic set of microfilmed records from major areas, primarily Europe and North America.

A typical branch, such as Pittsburgh, has four microfilm readers, but the largest branch in Los Angeles has 90 readers.

"As is true of the main genealogy library in Salt Lake, anybody can use them," Cahill said, adding that approximately 50 percent of the patrons are non-Mormons with the percentage in some areas ranging up to 70 percent to 90 percent. The only charge is for mailing the microfilm.

The church gathers records in 36 different countries, including some behind the Iron Curtain. The microfilming is done by a team of photographic experts who may spend years collecting the information, explained Kimball Erdman, western Pennsylvania regional director of libraries for the church.

The Mormons' deep commitment to genealogy is the result of its emphasis on the eternal nature and importance of the family, Erdman explained. Mormons perform temple ordinances for their dead relatives who did not learn of the church.

"One of the key temple ordinances is the sealing of family units to last through eternity. This pertains both to living families and those of our ancestors," Erdman said.

Hopeful News in Medicine

Two doctors in different parts of the country studied the relationship between jogging and a sense of emotional depression. They each independently studied a large group of students and patients and concluded that "jogging a few times a week may be just as effective as psychotherapy for treating moderately depressed patients."

Dr. John H. Greist, at the University of Wisconsin and Dr. Robert S. Brown, at the University of Virginia, both psychiatrists, came to the conclusion that regular running can alleviate moderate depression and be of value to the psychoneurotic.

Most doctors would suggest the value of seeking psychological guidance for very distressing emotional symptoms. Exercise, in conjunction with psychological direction, is probably an ideal combination.

The boom in the use of mobile homes has brought with it a problem of significance. It has been found that many of the occupants of these mobile homes complained of drowsiness, headaches, nausea, irritation of the eyes and nose and, sometimes, difficulty in breathing.

Dr. Peter A. Breysse, of the University of Washington, investigated this problem and came to the conclusion that "excess formaldehyde emitted from building materials, plywood, particle board and chip board, commonly used in such homes" may be responsible for some of these symptoms.

He also said that urea-formaldehyde foam, used as insulation in conventional homes, can also be responsible. He came to an interesting conclusion that "all patients improve when they leave home for weekends or vacations. In many cases, patients have been treated for years and have seen several doctors with little success, since neither patient nor doctor were aware of formaldehyde exposure."

Federal health agencies and doctors interested in environmental health are pursuing this problem. Those mobile home owners suffering from vague, unexplained symptoms should bring this possibility to the attention of their doctors.

An interesting study made in the United States and in Finland should be of interest to pregnant women. It was suggested by these research teams that sauna bathing during pregnancy should be limited to just a few minutes. Even tub bathing in very hot water for a protracted period of time should be avoided.

Almost every conceivable angle to further the safety of the unborn child is being studied in an effort to reduce to a minimum disorders in the newborn.

FIRST ACROSS THE LINE — The 67-foot sloop Circus Maximus is the first yacht to cross the finish line in the Newport-to-Bermuda yacht race late Tuesday in Bermuda. The boat was co-skippered by John Raby of New York and Don Ritter of Short Hills, N.J. It could not be determined immediately how well the boat would fare within its division. Some 150 yachts were in the event which has been run biennially for 62 years. (AP Laserphoto)

Family Business Tries Survive

By CHARLES S. TAYLOR

DILLARD, Ga. (UPI) — Business is good at the Dillard House in the North Georgia mountains, famed since the turn of the century for its excellent food and family-style service.

Hungry motorists and locals are still served — all on the table at once in big dishes — three meats and a wide array of vegetables. The tab remains low compared with big city restaurants.

But the winds of change are blowing through Rabun Gap, home of the Dillard clan, and John Dillard is rallying family members in a battle for economic survival.

John, 33, is trying to bring to bear modern business methods in the operation of the family enterprises. He also is in the middle of a pitched fight between two factions — one that wants the picturesque mountain valley to remain an area of small farms and businesses and the other that seeks all-out development and the jobs that go with it.

Dillard is near the North Carolina border, deep in the Georgia mountains. The nearest interstate is over 50 miles away.

There are 35 Dillards in Rabun Gap, most involved in the Dillard enterprises, which have diversified to meet competition.

"I'm trying to build it into a large enough business so that we can make as good a living here as on the outside," said John, general manager and president of the corporation.

It apparently is not an easy job. The Dillard operations were once handled by brothers and sisters, but now there are many cousins involved in the business.

"Cousins don't get along as well as brothers and sisters do," Dillard said.

The basic concept of the Dillards' success in past years has not changed — country-style food and service and family-type lodgings (no alcohol and plenty of recreational facilities for children.)

"I think there are not enough (family-oriented) places where a man can take his kids and eat good vegetables," Dillard said.

The Dillard House Farms include the dining room and restaurant, with sales of $750,000; the Dillard Motel, $200,000; a ham-curing plant, $400,000; and a 600-acre farm, $150,000. Stockholders in the Dillard House Farms are James, Henry, Earl and Louise, brothers and sisters, all of whom own 25 percent.

According to John, the family made a modest profit of $60,000 last year on sales of over $1 million. He anticipates an even better year in 1978 and is adding 30 motel units to handle the increase he expects in tourists this summer.

Last summer as many as 1,400 people were served at the Dillard House in a single day. There were many days when some had to be turned away from the dining room and also the motel for lack of space.

The Dillard House is only one of two of the old north Georgia "boarding houses" still surviving. These houses flourished in the mountains between 1935 and 1950, attracting visitors with their country-style food and service.

But in the 1950s, according to Dillard, "costs went up and people began demanding larger rooms than those provided in the boarding houses."

To survive, the old wood cook stoves had to go. But by using some modern cooking methods and making other changes, the Dillard House was able to survive.

The Dillards settled in Raburn Gap following the Revolutionary War. The original Dillard House, which still stands but is no longer used, probably was constructed in the late 1800s.

Some of the earliest guests to sample the Dillard food were Thomas Edison, Henry Ford and Harvey Firestone. According to local history, the three men stopped by for a drink of water. Mrs. A.J. Dillard gave them water, along with some fried chicken and biscuits. Other guests have included the late Walt Disney, Fess Parker and Burt Reynolds.

Henry Dillard remembers that before World War II the Dillard children "used to have to go out and sleep in the barn when visitors came to the house and wanted to spend the night. But we didn't mind. Before long the big house was full all summer and after the war we started building motel rooms to accommodate the overflow."

Things have changed drastically in the last 10 years, says John. A carpet mill moved into the valley, along with several other manufacturing plants. Sky Valley, a $3 million resort, featuring the southern-most ski slopes, opened in the late 1960s.

The new developments have touched off a battle between those who want to keep the area rural and the big city developers.

John Dillard is trying to take a middle ground. "What I'd like to see is long-term growth but at a moderate pace," he said. "People can't make a living here the old way. But there is danger of over-development."

Co-Author Of Article

ECU News Bureau

Dr. Donald R. Hoffman, associate professor of pathology at the East Carolina University School of Medicine, is co-author of an article appearing the June issue of the Annals of Allergy.

"Diagnosis of Honeybee Venom Allergy" is the result of Hoffman's collaborative study with a group of three practicing allergists from southern California.

The article compares the reliability of skin test with bee venom to laboratory tests. Both tests are shown to be equal in sensitivity, but each misses some patients found "positive" by the other.

The paper concludes that both tests should be used for diagnosing allergic reaction to honeybee venom.

The article is significant because it establishes diagnostic standards for honeybee allergies and provides two methods for maximizing the reliability of testing procedures.

Pollution Effects Of Volcano Under Study

By ROBERTA ULRICH

BEAVERTON, Ore. (UPI) — Living near a volcano may be hazardous to your health even if you avoid being in the path of the lava.

Dr. Reinhold A. Rasmussen wants to find out for sure. So he and his team of scientists from the Oregon Graduate Center travel to exotic spots with equally exotic equipment to find out what's in the air after a volcano blows its top.

So far, data from Hawaii indicates volcanoes may spew out chemicals similar to the fluorocarbons which some scientists believe may be destroying the earth's ozone layer.

That doesn't mean every volcano acts like a can of hair spray, however. Rasmussen said "there is a fantastic variability among volcanoes" in the materials they emit.

It has been known for years that volcanoes emit sulphur. Now studies are showing "a whole host of chemicals in the emissions," Rasmussen said. "In gases coming off cooling lava flows we observed things we have never observed before ... more sinister things."

There were reports that fluorocarbons were detected in eruptions in Guatemala in the 1960s but these were not confirmed. Last year Dave Miller, owner of Makiki Electronics in Hawaii, found that some gases from the Hawaii volcano Kilauea registered on a device he uses to detect leaks of fluorocarbon coolants from refrigerators.

That led to investigations by a husband-wife team of University of Hawaii professors, Sanford and Barbara Siegel, and to studies by Rasmussen and his wife, Lois, of Kilauea and Mauna Loa volcanoes.

"In the samples Miller collected we did not find elevated fluoride levels," Rasmussen said. "We did find organic halogens — methyl chloride and methyl iodide. The toxicology of these compounds is of considerable concern."

Chlorine, iodine and fluorine are known chemically as halogens.

"If any halogen becomes the more complex halocarbons you may have fluorocarbons," Rasmussen said. "These are usually not long-lived in the atmosphere."

Presence of the other halocarbons in the volcanic emissions suggests that fluorcarbons "must have been lost in the atmosphere," he said.

That possibility raises the health issue for persons who live near volcanoes, Rasmussen said. In some places, such as Hawaii, residents may be exposed to volcanic eruptions on an average of once every 2½ years.

Worldwide there are about 10 major volcanic eruptions a year and many smaller ones, including 100 or so in Japan, he said.

Global concern over possible destruction of the ozone layer already has led to efforts to ban the use of fluorocarbons, most commonly used as propellents for sprays. Oregon has banned products using the fluorocarbon propellents and similar proposals have been made in other states and in Congress.

The Siegels also found "very high levels of mercury in the atmosphere in volcanic emissions." Mercury, Rasmussen pointed out, "has known health effects."

Rasmussen already is involved in one study of world atmospheric conditions and has made trips to Antarctica to study volcanoes there.

Two stations in the world study, in Ireland and on the island of Barbados in the Caribbean, will be managed by Dr. J.E. Lovelock and Dr. P.G. Simmonds of Great Britain. Rasmussen will manage stations at American Samoa and Cape Grim, Tasmania.

He wants to extend his studies of volcanic gases, their movements through world air currents and their potential effects on both those who live in the areas of volcanoes and on the earth's atmosphere. He is seeking a $150,000 National Science Foundation grant to moniter volcanic emissions as eruptions occur throughout the world.

"The question is whether these chemicals have a local or regional basis or a global basis in their impact on air chemistry," he said.

COAL STUDY

NEW YORK (AP) — A study comparing coal with other energy options available to the nation over the next 20 years will be conducted by a group of 20 scientists and scholars.

The study, which will be directed by Hans Landsberg, an economist, is funded by a $600,000 grant from the Ford Foundation to Resources for the Future, a non-profit organization in Washington, D.C.
