Art Treasures Of Versailles Bombed

By PAUL TREUTHARDT
Associated Press Writer

VERSAILLES, France (AP) — A powerful bomb planted behind a statue exploded early today in the historic Palace of Versailles, wrecking three rooms of Napoleonic art and damaging seven others in the ornate complex that is in one of the jewels of French culture. A guard was slightly injured. There were no reports of damage to the Hall of Mirrors, where the World War I peace treaty was signed, or to the royal apartments, the opera house and the chapel that are the chief tourist attractions in the vast 17th century palace 11 miles southwest of Paris.

Three militant groups — two leftist and one Breton separatist — claimed responsibility for the 2 a.m. bomb blast. But police gave little credence to any of the claims.

Hubert Landais, director of French museums, said one large painting of Napoleon was almost destroyed and 15 more paintings and wall panels were heavily damaged. He estimated the restoration cost at $1 million — possibly higher if, as feared, an exterior stone wall suffered structural damage.

"Some (paintings) are in ribbons," said Versailles curator Gerald van der Kamp. "They can be restored, but it will be like a jigsaw puzzle."

Seven hours after the 2 a.m. bomb explosion, police were tipped that another bomb was ready to go off in one of the two Trianon palaces in the palace park. Bomb experts searched both the Grand Trianon and the Petit Trianon, and some art works were removed, but the tip apparently was a hoax.

The explosion occurred in the Midi Wing of the main palace, to the left of the front entrance, and wrecked the three-room Empire Suite on the ground floor which was opened to the public May 16 by President Valery Giscard d'Estaing.

"Three of the paintings are reduced to fragments and are irreparable, including a very famous painting of Napoleon awarding the first Legion of Honor medals," Jean Dumont, the chief architect for the palace, told reporters.

"Other paintings are damaged but probably can be restored. The sculpted woodwork of the rooms has been shattered and there is at least six months solid restoration work."

Dumont said the bomb blasted a hole — said by other sources to measure 10 by 12 feet — into the floor of the Gallery of Battles on the second floor. "But there does not appear to be other damage in the Gallery of Battles," he said.

He denied earlier reports that the damage extended to the third floor.

No monetary estimate was available of the damage.

Officials said it was the first such attack they could recall on the palace.

The explosive was hidden in a small room in an alcove behind a statue, Dumont said. It was not known how or when it was placed there, but police noted that a Sunday evening festival had given the public access to the palace grounds until almost midnight.

Dollar Sags

TOKYO (AP) — The U.S. dollar hit new record lows on the Tokyo foreign exchange market today, dropping to 204.50 yen and closing at 206.25.

The day's low in Tokyo was more than four yen below the record set last week. More than $1.3 billion changed hands in heavy trading.

The dollar recovered slightly after the Bank of Japan bought between $150 million and $200 million. "But the central bank intervention did little to stabilize the atmosphere," one banker reported.

American tourists shied away from the costly souvenirs in Tokyo's Ginza shopping district. They were shaken to find a cup of tea costing them the equivalent of $2.70.

"I cashed just enough to take the train from Yokohama where our boat is docked," said Don Williams of Omaha, Neb.

The bank gave Williams nearly three yen less for each dollar than the bottom trading price.

Traders said the dollar-selling spurge was in reaction to pessimistic reports in the Japanese press and rumors of a bigger-than-ever American trade deficit to be announced next week.

'Competent' To Be Tried

WASHINGTON (AP) — A former congressman from Louisiana, Otto Passman, was declared competent today to stand trial on conspiracy, bribery and tax evasion charges arising from rice sales to South Korea.

"Perfect physical and mental health is not required," said U.S. District Judge Barrington D. Parker. "Good physical and mental health is not required."

Rather, he said, it was important that a defendant have a rational understanding of the proceedings and that he be able to assist his lawyers.

Passman, who will be 78 on Tuesday, is charged with one count of conspiracy to defraud the United States, three counts of bribery, and three counts of accepting illegal gratuities. He is charged in a separate indictment with two counts of income tax evasion — failing to report the money the government said he got through the acts charged in the other indictments.

The government says that Passman accepted $213,000 from South Korean rice-dealer Tongsun Park because he helped pave the way for Park to act as middleman in rice sales to Korea.

Before reading his ruling, a process that took nearly 40 minutes, the judge arraigned Passman.

The former congressman, speaking audibly, said, "I'm not guilty, your honor," to each of the indictments. Passman was a congressman for 30 years before a challenger beat him in the 1976 Democratic primary.

The judge had heard testimony from psychiatrists, neurologists and internists for four days last week.

A court-appointed psychiatrist, Dr. Leon Yocheison, said that nothing in the testimony by defense witnesses made him change his opinion that Passman will understand the proceedings and be able to aid his lawyers if proper care is taken so that he is not overtaxed.

Most of the expert witnesses agreed that Passman is suffering from Alzheimer's disease, which involves shrinking of the brain, loss of recent memory and a short attention span.

The major difference between the experts was on the severity of the disease, which claims its victims' lives in an average of 7½ years.

COPTER CRASH

OSLOW, Norway (AP) — A Norwegian helicopter crashed into the sea northwest of Bergen today and all 18 persons aboard were feared killed. Thirteen bodies have been recovered so far.

Anti-Nuclear Protestors Begin Exodus From Site

SEABROOK, N.H. (AP) — Marching to the music of violins and clarinets, anti-nuclear protesters began their exodus today from the Seabrook nuclear power plant site, ending a peaceful three-day demonstration.

More than 6,000 demonstrators, who had camped out on a former town dump, rose at dawn and began marching away side by side, carrying huge backpacks bedecked with anti-nuclear signs, their banners waved in the sea breeze. Two state troopers photographed and videotaped them as they left.

It appeared only a small number, if any, of the demonstrators would stay past a 3 p.m. deadline for ending the rally, and the Clamshell Alliance, organizers of the demonstration, said anyone remaining would be acting on their own.

Thousands of people trained to handle riots, disasters and medical emergencies spent a long, sultry weekend fighting a pervasive enemy — boredom.

Most of the police, National Guardsmen, firefighters, doctors and nurses called upon to stand by during the rally waited in schools, armories and hospitals, although some were allowed to be at home, always within reach of a telephone.

The only contact most had with the big demonstration, which police estimated drew more than 12,000 people on Sunday, was what they saw on television, read in newspapers or heard on radio.

"It's a classic case of planning for the worst and hoping for the best," a state civil defense official said Sunday of the operation that Gov. Meldrim Thomson has estimated will cost $150,000 to $250,000. "It may mean a lot of long hours for a lot of people, but it's the only realistic option."

For 400 police and guardsmen, much of the waiting was done in the sweltering gymnasium and cluttered halls of nearby Winnacunnet High School.

Every eight hours, 200 men guarding the construction site of the $2.3 billion nuclear plant were rotated back to the gym in a convoy of yellow schoolbuses.

Police conceded the school was not as dusty, noisy or buginfested as the 18-acre plot that protesters were allowed to use at the construction site, but said camping in it "was no picnic."

"It's very, very crowded to the point where you've got to stay very friendly with each other," said Earl Sweeney, acting state police director.

Storm Capsized Houseboat In Couple's First Night Aboard

MOORESVILLE, N.C. (AP) — "It was a nightmare," Wayne Hemphill said Sunday, recalling the first night he and his wife, Linda, tried to spend aboard a 40-foot $9,000 houseboat they purchased last week.

The night ended with the boat capsized and the two of them swimming to shore on one life preserver after a storm from a tornado blew up suddenly, on Lake Norman Saturday night. Several other boats capsized but no serious injuries were reported.

The Hemphills' boat capsized several hundred yards from shore during the severe thunderstorm along the lake which also heavily damaged a marina and blew trees across the roofs of a number of homes.

"The wind and rain hit at the same time like an air hose blast," said Hemphill, 37, of Advance. "We got our life preservers on around our necks but didn't even have time to snap them."

The couple felt their way out from the capsized craft but Mrs. Hemphill's life preserver tangled in a railing underwater. Her husband, on the other side of the boat, heard her screams and went to help. The boat sank moments later.

"If the boat had sunk before I got over there, she would have gone with it," Hemphill said. The two shared one life preserver and swam to shore as high waves broke over their heads. Mrs. Hemphill, 34, suffered bruises in the incident.

Bill Jackson of Clemmons was among those who narrowly escaped injury as he and his wife were in a 17-foot boat towing a 45-foot houseboat when the storm developed suddenly about 10:30 p.m.

"We don't know what happened," Jackson said later. "We had no warning whatsoever. We were towing the houseboat when the damndest wind in the world came up. It was wild. It seemed like an eternity, but it must have been 15 minutes."

Jackson, who operates an auto dealership at Winston-Salem, said the lines connecting the two boats snapped "and we were blown, spinning like a top, from the middle of the lake to the bank. It must have been about a mile.

The two escaped injury when the boat crashed into a pier and they climbed onto the pier.

Marina owner, Roy Lambert, said, "I sat there and watched my roof go across up yonder," he said. "We had about 30 to 35 people out here in the boats when the thing (the roof) went down on them... It's amazing nobody got killed." Lambert estimated damage at $75,000 to $100,000.

Don Lambert, a partner in the marina, said the storm destroyed a slip docking 48 boats, all over 38 feet in length.

Formal Opening

WILSON — Gov. Jim Hunt and Secretary of Transportation Thomas Bradshaw will participate in ribbon cutting ceremonies Wednesday for the opening of the newest section of U.S. 264 — the 4.7 mile segment of highway between Bailey and Wilson.

The ceremonies will be held at the intersection of U.S. 264 at Lamm's Crossroads, just West of the Interstate 95 construction, West of Wilson.

The section opening Wednesday, completed at a cost of $4.61 million, will be the east-bound lanes of a four-lane project scheduled for completion in about a year.

An 8.5 mile section of the highway, between Zebulon and Bailey, was opened last year.

The ribbon cutting program is scheduled to begin at 10:30 a.m.

SINGLE ADOPTION

Some time ago Hotline published an item on adoption of children by single persons. We checked then and found that both the Pitt County Department of Social Services and the North Carolina Children's Home Society are willing to assist prospective single adoptive parents.

We have some further information: The Committee for Single Adoptive Parents, Box 4074, Washington, D. C. 20015, has been operating since 1973 as an information service to prospective and actual single adoptive parents.

They provide these and many other pertinent facts: "It takes a little determination, but it can be done — many hundreds of single women and men across the U. S. have adopted children in the last several years. The majority are women, but adoption by single men is not rare and about one in seven correspondents or members of this committee is a man.

"No state legally forbids adoption by single persons, although some limit it by such factors as age of the parent, difference in age between parent and prospective child, and duration of residence.

It is pointed out there is a decreasing number of children available in the U. S., in particular, infants, of course. Single parents often are encouraged to accept the "hard to place" children — those of school age, physically or mentally handicapped, emotionally troubled, of minority groups, or sisters and brothers whom the agency does not wish to separate.

Assistance with adoption across national lines is also given. No children are available from Canada or Europe, it's pointed out, but there are waiting children in Latin America and Asia, though there are also tough laws with which to deal. Those considering adopting from abroad should contact the nearest office of the U. S. Immigration and Naturalization Service about pre-adoption requirements in order to bring a child into this country as an immediate relative.

The Committee publishes a $3 41-page "Handbook for Prospective Single Parents" will provides information on legal requirements, adoptive process, financial costs and benefits, and some of the social and emotional problems to be expected.

Membership, available only to single individuals, entitles one to receive a source list and its up dates, listing agency or direct sources of adoptable children in the U. S. and abroad and briefly describing cost, estimated time and type of children available. Also, names (on request and with a self-addressed stamped envelope) of prospective or actual single adoptive parents in your state, as well as other information, from time to time, of interest to single parents. Annual fee is $5.

Miss Miller, Mr. Pridgen Wed Here

Nancy Ruth Miller of Roanoke, Va., and Joseph Henry Pridgen Jr. of Greenville were married Sunday, 4 p.m. in Our Redeemer Lutheran Church. The Rev. Graham Nahouse officiated at the double ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Susan R. Miller of Roanoke, Va., and Mr. Luther F. Miller of Jarrettsville, Pa. The bridegroom is the son of Mrs. George Gardner of Washington and Mr. Joseph Henry Pridgen of Raleigh.

The bride given in marriage by Douglas Burton Lee, wore a formal gown of bridal satin over peau de soie, fashioned with a Queen Anne neckline, empire waist and long fitted sleeves. The bodice was decorated with re-embroidered alencon lace. The sleeves were of English net and were decorated with alencon lace. The A-line skirt of bridal satin fell from an empire waist and extended into a chapel length train. Matching lace appliques were featured on the skirt and bordered the train. The bride chose a fingertip veil of three tier nylon silk illusion attached to a Juliet cap with re-embroidered alencon lace and seed pearls.

Judith Ann Moon of Salisbury, Md., served as maid of honor. She chose a formal length gown of iced peach knit designed with a cowl neckline, fitted bodice and a silk rose at the shoulder. The waistline featured a trapunta panel fashioned with a self-tie belt with streamers. The sleeveless gown was styled with a full circular skirt. She wore an imported braid crownless garden hat.

Dr. Carolyn Craft, sister of the bride, and Ann Van Dyke, sister of the bridegroom from New Knoxville, Ohio, served as bridesmaids. Their ginger colored gowns were styled to match the honor attendant's dress. They wore matching hats and carried fireside baskets of spring flowers.

Pritchard Gibson Adams, grandfather of the bridegroom of Faison, served as best man. Ushers included Mike Langston and Jerry Carter, both of Greenville.

A reception was held immediately after the ceremony in the church fellowship hall.

After a wedding trip to Jamaica, the couple will reside in Nashville, Tenn.

The bride is a graduate of the East Carolina University School of Nursing. She was recently employed by Duke Medical Center as a pediatric nurse and is presently employed as a pediatric nursing supervisor at Williamson General Hospital, Franklin, Tenn. The bridegroom is a graduate of East Carolina University and is employed as a sales representative for Tennessee and Kentucky with Alderman Reed.

The after-rehearsal dinner was given by Mr. and Mrs. George Gardner at the Brook Valley Country Club for the wedding party and out-of-town guests.

A bridesmaids luncheon was held Saturday, hosted by Mrs. Hoyt Narron and Mrs. Louis Singleton at the home of Mrs. Narron in Greenville.

Dear Abby

Daughter-In-Law: Whose Place Is It?

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1978 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: My husband has three brothers and one sister. He also has an 81-year-old mother who has been a widow for 15 years. She owns her own home, has money in the bank and gets a substantial pension. For the last four years she has been unable to live alone because she has a heart problem, so she has been spending one month at the home of each of her children.

She has never offered to pay anyone for her keep, so her daughter told her (a year ago) to get some money up or she couldn't stay with her. My mother-in-law refused this request, stating that she had taken care of her daughter when she was young, and now it was her daughter's turn to do for her.

Well, my mother-in-law hasn't been to her daughter's home for the last year. Now we sisters-in-law are getting disgusted. Whose place is it to take care of this woman? The daughter's or the daughters-in-law?

DISGUSTED IN ATLANTIC CITY

DEAR DISGUSTED: Obviously, the daughter "owes" her mother more than the daughters-in-law owe her, but it's not uncommon to find many daughters-in-law who do more for their mothers-in-law than their own daughters do.

DEAR ABBY: I hope Carl in Murrysville doesn't claim that his doggerel about Betty Jones ("No hits, no runs, no errors") is original. I heard a version of it in 1925 at the Old Howard, a renowned burlesque theatre in Boston. It went like this:

"Here lie the bones
Of Mary McGinnity
For twelve long years
She kept her virginity
And that's the record
In this vicinity."

BEN IN VIRGINIA

DEAR ABBY: I hope you will select this letter for publication because it contains an important safety message.

Yesterday I was the first to arrive at the scene of an accident after a 4-year-old boy had been hit by a car.

No one knew where the child had come from. A few minutes later, several people walked across the highway from a picnic area to see what all the excitement was about. A man collapsed and a young woman became hysterical when they recognized the child. He was their son, who only moments before had been left "sleeping" on the back seat of their car.

I had to tell these grief-stricken parents that it was too late for a doctor.

Many people left the scene muttering, "I have learned a good lesson."

As the father of two young children, I learned one, too: Don't ever leave children unattended (sleeping or awake) in an automobile.

STILL IN SHOCK

DEAR STILL: Thanks for a very important "lesson."

It's Fashionable: Mix Jewelry

NEW YORK (UPI)—The fashion director of a nationwide firm of fine jewelry departments says more and more women now buy fine jewelry as separates, to mix and match as they do clothing separates.

Marian Ruby says they spend from $15 to about $500 per item. Her list of basics includes slender gold neck chains in short, medium and long lengths, stud earrings, small and large gold hoops, one pair of dressy earrings, a watch, a gold dome or shrimp ring, one or two gold rings with tiny stones, two or three stickpins and a circle pin.

A fall and winter trend, she says, calls for clusters of tiny gold or gold-and-diamond scatter and-or stickpins.

Taylor-Harrison Vows Said

AYDEN—Teresa Lynne Harrison and Harold Anthony Taylor were married Sunday in the Liberty Free Will Baptist Church here. The Rev. Raymond Gaskins officiated at the double ring ceremony held at 3 p.m.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Claude S. Harrison of Rt. 1, Ayden. She is a graduate of Ayden-Grifton High School. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Harold A. Taylor of Rt. 1, Ayden. He is a graduate of Ayden-Grifton High School and is currently serving in the U. S. Army and is stationed overseas.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a formal length gown of white organza over taffeta designed with an open sweetheart neckline featuring a Queen Anne collar. The fitted bodice was fashioned in imported French rosepoint chantilly lace beaded with pearls. The long, fitted lace sleeves featured embroidered lace flared ruffled cuffs. A band of white satin applied in beaded lace accentuated the empire waistline. Appliques of lace trimmed the skirt. A deep ruffle flounce of the imported embroidered lace bordered in chantilly lace edged the hemline and attached chapel length train.

She wore a walking length illusion mantilla edged in chantilly lace to complement her gown. Her bouquet was a cascade of stephanotis, baby's breath, white roses and pink carnations with white satin ribbons.

Angie Whetzell of Clayton, cousin of the bride, was matron of honor. She wore a formal length gown of pastel blue organza over blue taffeta designed with a high neckline edged in ruffled organza. The empire bodice was styled with a bibbed effect of ruffled organza featuring ruffled caplet sleeves. The waistline featured an inset band from which fell the full circular skirt enhanced by a deep ruffle flounce. She wore a matching picture hat tied with pastel ribbon. She carried a bouquet of mixed summer flowers with pastel ribbons.

Bridesmaids were Edna Denton of Greenville, Janet Taylor, Patie Bosley, both of Grifton, Lynn Frye, cousin of the bride from Angier, Tammy Hill and Jan Bagley, both of Clayton. They wore gowns styled identically to the honor attendants in pastel colors of maize and pink. Their matching hats and bouquets were identical to the honor attendant's.

Teresa Wagner of Elon College, cousin of the bride, was flower girl. She wore a formal length dress of white batiste with multicolored flowers designed with a ruffled neckline and matching ruffled flounce. She carried a basket of rose petals.

The bridegroom's father served as best man. Ushers were Timmy Taylor, brother of the bridegroom, Mike Mills, Jamie McLawhorn, all of Ayden, Gary

MRS. HAROLD ANTHONY TAYLOR

Harrison from Fayetteville, Eubanks of Grifton, and Alan Taylor of Hookerton, cousin of the bridegroom.

Nuptial music was provided by organist Mrs. Mac Swanson of Ayden.

The reception was held on the lawn of the bride's parents home. The tables were covered with pastel cloths overlaid with lace. Rice bags and scrolls were given as favors.

The parents of the bridegroom entertained at a rehearsal dinner at a local restaurant in Greenville for the wedding party.

Chicken For Breakfast?

NEW YORK (UPI)—Feed your children chicken for breakfast? "Definitely!" says Ms. Shandy Rothenberg, nutritionist at The New York Institute for Child Development.

"Children who start off the day with a nutritious breakfast often avoid mid-morning slump, which causes short attention span, inability to concentrate and interferes with the child's learning capabilities in the classroom," Ms. Rothenberg said.

A three-ounce portion of chicken supplies 58 percent protein, 30 percent niacin and 22 percent vitamin B2 needed daily. Sugar-coated cereal only supplies about 5 percent of needed protein and almost no vitamins or minerals.

MILLIE OWEN'S
POTATO SALAD

New potatoes are best in this.

1 pound potatoes
3 tablespoons olive oil
1 tablespoon lemon juice or dill vinegar

1 tablespoon minced shallots

2 hard-boiled eggs, finely chopped

1/2 cup finely chopped celery
1 cup chopped cucumbers
2 tablespoons mayonnaise
2 tablespoons sour cream
4 tablespoons chopped dill leaves

Salt and white pepper to taste

Cook potatoes until tender. Cool them only until you can handle them, then peel and slice or dice them into a bowl. Immediately stir in oil, lemon juice or vinegar, and shallots. Toss lightly, and refrigerate until chilled. When you are ready to serve, add remaining ingredients and stir until mixed. Makes 6 servings. From "A Cook's Guide to Growing Herbs, Greens, & Aromatics" by Millie Owen (Knopf, 1978).

Note: When we tried this recipe we substituted 4 thin scallions (thinly sliced) for the shallot called for. — C. B.

Couple Wed In Macclesfield

WILSON — Pattie Avis Miller of Wilson and Cecil Ray Webb of Macclesfield spoke their wedding vows at 3 p.m. Sunday at Peace Free Will Baptist Church here. The Rev. Gordon R. Sebastian officiated at the double ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Mildred Evans of Wilson, and William Edward Miller of Aurora. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Edward Webb of Macclesfield.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a floor length gown with a chapel train of organza and beaded alencon lace. The fitted bodice featured a V-neckline and cap sleeves. The neckline was edged with alencon lace and seed pearls. Lace motifs adorned the bodice and sleeves. The full length skirt extended into a chapel train, with scalloped lace bordering the hemline. The bride chose a waltz length layered mantilla trimmed with alencon lace motifs etched with seed pearls. The veil was attached to a lace Cameiot cap with seed pearls. She chose a diamond pendant, a gift from the bridegroom, and diamond ear studs for jewelry. She carried a bouquet of silk lily-of-the-valley and pink roses tied with narrow pink and white satin streamers.

Mrs. Yvonne Whitley Moss of Rocky Mount was the matron of honor. She wore a long pink polyester gown with matching floral chiffon cape. She carried a long-stemmed pink silk rose with fern and baby's breath, tied with narrow pink satin ribbons.

Miss Peggy Barnes, cousin of the bridegroom, Miss Peggy Cuddington and Miss Cindy Etheridge, all of Wilson, served as bridesmaids. They wore long pink floral print polyester gowns with matching pink chiffon capes. Each carried a long-stemmed rose in a light shade of pink.

Miss Regina Reed, cousin of the bridegroom of Elm City, served as flower girl. She wore a long pink polyester dress trimmed in white lace and a sheer pink pinafore. She carried a basket of pink rose petals.

Michael Reed, cousin of the bridegroom of Elm City, served as ring bearer. Mrs. Carolyn Nagle, organist, and Rollie Nagle, soloist, both of Wilson, presented the wedding music. Mrs. Carolyn Holloman of Elizabeth City, cousin of the bridegroom, presided at the register.

Cecil Webb, father of the bridegroom of Macclesfield, served as best man. Groomsmen included Edward Webb, brother of the bridegroom of Macclesfield, Martin Jones, brother-in-law of the bridegroom of Waistonburg, and Ralph Webb, cousin of the bridegroom of Farmville.

A reception was held in the church fellowship hall, given by the bride's father and step-mother, Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Miller of Aurora. The bride's table was decorated with a floral arrangement of pink and white flowers, as well as pink antheriums, sent by the bride's cousins, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Miller from Ninole, Hawaii. Punch was served by Mrs. Janice Bardin of Garysburg, cousin of the bride. Mrs. Herbert Simmons of New Bern, Mrs. Jack Collier of Bailey, Mrs. Eugene Beaman of Farmville, Mrs. Ralph Beaman of Waistonburg, Mrs. Thomas Coghlin of Greenville and Mrs. Bud Baker of Wilson also assisted in serving. Good-byes were said by Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Roberson of Williamston, cousins of the bride.

The bride is a graduate of N. E. W. Academy and is presently studying real estate. After her marriage, she will be employed by her father's firm, Miller Realty. The bridegroom is a graduate of Elm City High School. He is a supervisor at Firestone Tire and Rubber Co., Wilson. The couple will reside in Greenville.

An after-rehearsal party was given in the fellowship hall of the church Saturday by the parents of the bridegroom. Mrs. Mattie Whitley of Rocky Mount poured punch. Mrs. Jane Reid, sister of the bridegroom of Elm City, said good-byes. The bride presented gifts to her attendants, musicians and director at the party. Approximately 45 persons attended.

Govt. Grade A Fish Good Buy

NEW YORK (UPI) — Buying government Grade A frozen fish products can help you get more for your money. By law, such products must contain specific minimum amounts of fish; similar products not graded may contain less, says the Consumer Education Office of Cornell University's Cooperative Extension Service.

For example, Grade A breaded raw fish portions must contain 75 percent fish, but Grade A breaded fried fish portions, only 65 percent. Grade A breaded raw fish sticks must be 72 percent fish, compared with 60 percent for Grade A breaded fried fish sticks or sea scallops.

No minimum fish content is required for cooked shrimp, cakes, balls, rolls and similar products or batter-dipped sticks and portions.

Brady-Smith Vows Said

WINTERVILLE — The Winterville Missionary Baptist Church was the scene of the 3 p.m. wedding of Beverly Joy Smith of Winterville and James Michael Brady of Asheville. The Rev. Wayne Adkisson officiated at the double ring ceremony Sunday.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Rufus G. Smith of Winterville. The bridegroom is the son of Mrs. Madge Manning of Ayden and Mr. James N. Brady of Burlington.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a dress fashioned of chiffon with Venise lace. The bodice was designed with matching lace with long sheer sleeves. The shoulder length veil of illusion was attached to a lace Juliet cap.

Mrs. Gayle Day of Winterville, sister of the bride, served as matron of honor. She chose a white seersucker with pink floral design sundress. She carried a long-stemmed pink carnation.

Bridesmaids were Diane Smith of Chapel Hill, sister of the bride, Pat Brady of Raleigh, sister of the bridegroom, Lynne Philpott of Durham, cousin of the bride, Libby Stegall of Southport, cousin of the bride, Mrs. Kay McLawhorn of Whiteville, and Madge Dews of Decatur, Ga. They wore variegated shades of pink and white floral seersucker sundresses and carried pink carnations.

Jimmie Manning of Ayden served as best man. Groomsmen included Tim Smith of Greenville, brother of the bride, Randy Dabney of Raleigh, Randy McLawhorn of Whiteville, Billy Baldwin of Waynesville, Dan Careatti of Greensboro, and Barry Wood of Ayden.

Tommy Manning and Pat Byrd presented a program of nuptial music.

A reception was held immediately after the ceremony in the church fellowship hall. After a wedding trip to the Outer Banks, the couple will reside in Asheville.

The bride is a graduate of East Carolina University and is employed as a media coordinator at Bethel Elementary School. The bridegroom is a graduate of Western Carolina University and is a representative with the Internal Revenue Service.

The bridegroom's mother entertained the wedding party Saturday night with a dinner.

Murphy-DeCuzzi Wedding Held

WINTERVILLE — Lorraine DeCuzzi and Kenneth West Murphy were married Sunday at 3 p.m. in the Immanuel Free Will Baptist Church here. The Rev. Alfred Cates officiated at the double ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. E. V. DeCuzzi of Winterville, and Mr. P. J. DeCuzzi of Predazzo, Italy. She is a graduate of D. H. Conley High School and Lenoir Community College. She is presently a legal secretary for White, Allen, Hooten, Hodges and Hines, P. A., Kinston. The bridegroom is the son of Mrs. Ethel Pauline Murphy of Trenton, and the late Rev. Emmett Murphy. He is a graduate of East Carolina University and is sanitarian supervisor for the Lenoir County Health Department, Kinston.

Given in marriage by her brother, Andrea W. DeCuzzi, the bride wore a formal length gown of white a la mode featuring a Victorian neckline of antique lace edged in ruffled cluny lace and Venise lace edging. A bib effect of antique lace outlined in the ruffled cluny lace and Venise lace trim was centered with pearl beads in a scalloped pattern with miniature Venise lace flower appliques centered with pearls. The long, fitted sleeves were beaded with ruffled cuffs of cluny lace trimmed in Venise lace. The natural waistline was enhanced with a band of white satin ribbon. The chapel length mantilla featured tiers of illusion edged in cluny lace attached to a bandeau headpiece of white satin edged in Venise lace. The bride carried a bouquet of daisies with a lift-out corsage of yellow roses.

Maid of honor was Cynthia R. Batchelor of Kinston. She wore a formal length gown of green polyester knit featuring cap sleeves and back-tie sash. She carried a long-stemmed yellow rose.

Bridesmaids were Donna Dickerson of New Castle, Ind., sister of the bride, Arlene Murphy, sister of the bridegroom of Greenville, Alexine DeCuzzi of Winterville, sister-in-law of the bride, Edna M. Reynolds of Kinston, sister of the bridegroom, and Hilda Grady of Farmville. They wore attire identical to the honor attendant's.

Honorary attendants were Judy Hardee, Debbie Morris, both of Greenville, Annanell Worthington of Dunn, Nancy Buck of Winterville, and Linda Hines of Greenville.

J. C. Reynolds of Kinston, brother-in-law of the bridegroom, served as best man. Ushers were Patrick DeCuzzi, brother of the bride from Winterville, Garland Murphy, brother of the bridegroom, Fred Simpson, Louis Tilghman, all of Kinston, Billy Murphy of Spring Grove, Pa., and Buster Murphy of Wilmington, both brothers of the bridegroom.

The bride's mother wore a blue formal length knit gown. The bridegroom's mother wore a pink formal length gown. Both mothers were presented white carnation corsages.

MRS. KENNETH WEST MURPHY

Nuptial music was provided by pianist Judy Teel. Soloist Mattie McLawhorn sang "The Wedding Prayer" and "The Wedding Song." Ms. Allene

Wood directed the wedding. Kim and Rhonda Murphy, daughters of the bridegroom, and Sandy Reynolds, niece of the bridegroom, gave out rice bags. Beverly Brown presided at the guest register.

An after-rehearsal reception was given in honor of the bridal couple on Friday by Mr. and Mrs. Andrea W. DeCuzzi in the church fellowship hall.

After a wedding trip to the beach, the couple will reside in Kinston.

A bridesmaids tea was given Saturday afternoon by Mrs. Edward L. Hardee at her home.

Don't Give Plants An Outdoor Vacation

FAIR LAWN, N.J. (UPI) — Do your houseplants a favor: don't give them a vacation outdoors in the summer.

Plants that thrive under controlled conditions indoors are too tender for outdoor living, even in summer weather, says the environmental lighting director for a Fair Lawn manufacturer.

If your home lacks air conditioning, plants may even grow faster because of increased room temperature.

"Indoors you give the plants the exact amounts of light, humidity, fertilizer and water they need," says Woody E. Bickford. Window screens keep bugs at bay. Windows and air conditioning help keep homes antiseptic.

Outdoors, the soft, pampered succulent tissues of houseplants become easy prey to marauding aphids, airborne disease spores and other predators and diseases. Indoor plants also are unused to being whipped by wind or rain and scorched by the summer sun.

They need little change from daily winter routines, especially plants that usually are kept under fluorescent lights, Bickford said.

But plants kept on window sills may need to be moved during the summer, he added. Some shade-tolerant plants can withstand several hours of full winter sun but may need a more protective exposure in summer, such as one facing north.

He said African violets and other members of the gesneriad family that flourish in the limited hours and light intensity of winter sun can suffer thermal damage in summer sun.

He said plants that can tolerate or use full summer sun indoors include aloe, amaryllis, wax begonia, cactus, chrysanthemum, coleus, gardenia, hibiscus, kalanchoe, geranium, hydrangea, lantana, lily and some orchid varieties.

Make the texture of meals interesting. Use a combination of smooth, crisp, soft, crunchy and chewy foods.

Welcome News In Job Data

North Carolina is enjoying an unemployment rate that is well below that of the rest of the nation. The Employment Security Commission reported last week that the unemployment rate for the state dropped to 3.8 percent for May. It had been August, 1974 since the rate had been lower than that. In addition, the national unemployment rate for May, unadjusted, was 5.5 percent, which puts North Carolina in a favorable position in relation to its sister states. In actual numbers the percentage for North Carolina represents 105,000 persons who did not have jobs for May. Full employment is important to the state's people and also to its economy. Thus it is welcome news that our state's unemployment rate is comparatively low.

Preparedness Is The Name Of The Game

The government unveiled its emergency gasoline rationing plan at a press conference last week. The plan, announced by Sec. of Energy James R. Schlesinger, would be something to fall back on in the event of another oil embargo or other oil emergency. It is "insurance" which the government hopes will never be needed. Under the plan, U. S. motorists could be limited to as little as two gallons of gas per day, which is bound to cause most of us to wince. However, stamps could be purchased from other citizens, giving those who need gas most a chance to obtain more. Administering the plan would be one big headache, but some plan is necessary if we are to avoid potentially long lines at service stations such as happened in 1973.

THIS AFTERNOON The County Commissioner

By Bill Noblitt
PINEHURST—A county commissioner in one of North Carolina's 100 counties is most likely a middle-aged, conservative member of the establishment who has been there a long time, and isn't going anywhere. The commission is more apt to be interested in day-to-day routine such as paving roads, putting in a sewer line, or cutting the budget rather than looking to the future with vision. That less than flattering composite of a county commissioner was produced by a statewide survey carried out by Laurel Gooch of the School of Public Health at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. And Ms Gooch chose a meeting of the North Carolina Association of County Commissioners to unveil the survey results, drawing some rebuttals from the local officials who disagreed with her findings.

like," she told the commissioners at a convention. That composite is based on lengthy interviews with 56 commissioners in 12 counties supposed to be broadly representative of the state geographically, politically, and socially. In addition, county managers, social services directors, mental health leaders, and public health officers were also questioned. None were under 30 years old; half are over 50; all but one is married and all but two have children, although most of those are grown children. One fourth are college graduates, while a fourth have only a high school diploma or less. Over 70 per cent are Democrats; 63 per cent were born in the county where they are commissioners and 75 per cent were raised in the county if not born there. On the social scale, the commissioners rated themselves either conservative (44 per cent) or moderate (44 per cent) with only seven per cent seeing themselves as liberal. The typical commissioner, then, says Ms Gooch, is a protestant member of the establishment, a pillar of the community type, not quick to jump on new ideas or programs; tight with money; a solid county resident; older and stable; a joiner in various civic and social clubs and endeavors; who has lived in the county a number of years, and plans to remain there.

BILL NOBLITT

"Asked where they see their county going, few have a real plan...ideas for future improvements...steps which need to be taken. "Usually, a single response was given, such as they were not thinking much about planning or the future; or that responsibility of commissioners is to what is happening right now rather than thinking about where we are going," Ms Gooch reported. Who do commissioners respond to? The survey found they turn to neighbors, local newspapers, their county managers, and other influential people for information and advice; seldom counting on fellow commissioners or other county department heads; and certainly not members of the community who attend the board meetings. County boards were found to be harmonious in their work with few disagreements, and those usually settled quietly; board meetings were generally said to be very peaceful and cordial. To which several commissioners responded that the survey either missed their counties, or didn't get some honest responses.

Stability

Over half say they will run for re-election to the Board of County Commissioners, and a mere handful indicate interest in seeking a higher elective office. The post is not, she concludes, a stepping stone. But from the survey, she isolated the conflict between stability and the ability of a community to prepare for change. "I did not get a future vision of idealism...of what would be good for the county. Rather, the concern seems to be with schools, roads, sewerage."

Roses Rarely Reply

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN
AP Special Correspondent
RIDGEFIELD, Conn. (AP) — "A rose garden is a very special place — it's a flower that needs to be visited," advised the gardening columnist in one of the big metropolitan dailies last week. Intrigued, I read on. The centerpiece of the essay was an interview with a country gentleman who not only regularly visited her 250 rose bushes but talked to them. "Roses need your shadow," the lady said, apparently with a straight face. "If you are going to have a rose garden, make love to it. Even talk to them." Ever since William Booth penned the line, "feather-footed through the plashy fen passes the questing vole" before going on to become the model for all foreign correspondents in Evelyn Waugh's "Scoop," I have always been a sucker for that kind of bucolic prose. After dipping into the sports page and the gossip columnists, I always drop in on the peat moss and fertilizer cribblers to learn what new insights on life they have gained from a worm's eye view of creation. This time, I figured, they must be onto something; a bedside manner for the rosebed. The idea seems to be catching on. Just this morning a car went by with a bumper sticker: "Have You Talked To A Plant Today?" Well, yes, I have, on the strength of all this, and frankly we don't seem to have much to say to each other. I didn't really know how to begin. There was my shadow, "right over our two rather limp looking tea roses and a few ragging buds, and words failed me. How do you strike up a conversation with a rose bush? And how long should a visit last? The only words that had passed between us previously were "ouch" and a few rhetorical vulgarities when I embraced a thorn in snipping a boutonniere to cut a more dashing figure in the periodontist's waiting room. Should I try poetry for openers? "Flower in the crannied wall, I pluck you out of the crannies, I hold you here, root and all, in my hand..." Perhaps I should just get in there and give them the old top sergeant's chewing out. You know, "All right, you sad sacks, you ought to be ashamed to call yourself roses. Look at them dandelions. Look at the ragweed. You don't hear them crying out for food and conversation all the time. This is your last chance to make this outfit. Shape up or be snipped out." It might be better, like the lady said, to speak to them of love, a little verbal cooing and billing. I have a sneaking suspicion that if the roses could talk back, this is what they'd say: "Hey, fiasco, cut the jabber and stop blocking the sunlight with your shadow. If you want to talk our language, get some pyrethrum extract or nicotine-sulphate down at the toolshed and go to work on these plant lice. We have enough parasites to put up with, without listening to you all morning!"

By ART BUCHWALD The Family Conference

WASHINGTON — The White House Conference on Families, scheduled for 1979, has been postponed until 1981. The reason was a family fight in the Administration. Ms. Patsy Fleming, who works for Health, Education and Welfare Secretary Joseph Califano, resigned as chairperson because some people objected to the fact that she was divorced and had three children. Califano, who denied he was bowing to pressure, said he would appoint a Catholic father from an intact family as co-chairperson to balance the program. This didn't go down too well with happily married Protestant and Jewish people who felt they should have as much to say as Catholics about the role of the family in American society.

The only reason the conference was scheduled in the first place is that President Carter, in a rash moment of the campaign, promised to hold one if he were elected. I suspect President Carter would like to forget about the whole thing, but he's stuck with it. I have a solution to the President's problem that would cost the taxpayers no money and keep the conference from turning into a religious, ethnic and sociological brawl. Every day, lined up around the White House, there are at least a thousand tourists waiting to get in. They include a cross section of Americans from every state — middle-class people, poor people, white people, black people, Chicanos, Indians and Orientals. Some are families with both mothers and fathers in attendance; others are divorced people with their children; still others are grandparents. Everyone in line has a family of some sort or they wouldn't be there. On a rainy day, which would not be announced in advance, the line, instead of moving through the public rooms and then being shuffled out into the street again, would be escorted into the East Room of the White House. There they would be given badges by Hamilton Jordan and then seated in gilt chairs. Califano would come out and announce that he was swearing them in as delegates to the White House Conference on Families. (Continued on page 5)

Public Forum

Letters submitted for Public Forum must be limited to 300 words.

To the editor:
Once again city and county officials are planning to increase our property taxes. Most of the time I'm part of that great mass of middle class Americans who keep plugging along trying to get ahead while silently paying ever-increasing taxes. But at this point, I've had it. I have news for you middle class. Taxes are never going to stop increasing unless we stop them. The citizens of California were the first to realize this. They finally convinced their public servants that taxes must start decreasing. As expected, the politicians and public employees threatened the public with all kinds of terrible consequences, starting with big cuts in fire, police, school, and health services. Much to the politicians' surprise, the California citizens said — cut the services. We will get along, Amen! There have always been apparently good reasons to increase services in the so-called public interest or because some special interest group wants a particular service. Personally, I'm not willing to pay for more. No matter how attractive or useful the new or expanded service is, I am not willing to pay more taxes. If it is necessary to cut services to avoid tax increases, and it likely is, then cut them! Of course, any public servant with an average amount of common sense knows, without doubt, which services the public wants to be the very last to be cut — fire and police protection, schools and health services. There are many other less important government services that must be cut deeply before these critical services are cut at all. Our public servants and politicians deserve part of the blame for our ever-increasing tax burden. Too many times they have taken the easy way out. But we the public, and especially the middle class, deserve most of the blame. It is time to wake up. (Note to editor: I really appreciate your coverage of the various budget proceedings. It is a real public service. But I ask that you clearly state the percentage increase in taxes being considered, in addition to the increase in cents per $100 valuation! The cents per hundred figure simply does not tell the story.)

THE INSIDE REPORT Brzezinski's Chinese Card

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
WASHINGTON — President Carter decided to link strategic interests of the U.S. and Communists China at a hush-hush luncheon May 16, when his national security advisers reversed a ban on sales of airborne scanning equipment to Peking. This secret decision was agreed to by Secretary of State Cyrus Vance, Secretary of Defense Harold Brown and national security adviser Zbigniew Brzezinski. The move was withheld from the bureaucracy because Brzezinski wanted secrecy, enabling him to break the news himself when he arrived in Peking four days later. The decision permitting the sale of the formerly circumscribed technology opened the door for a Carter administration policy move of global proportions, referred to in Washington as "playing the China card." Besides its effect on U.S.-Soviet relations, there are domestic implications: a common U.S.

Chinese stance against Moscow is intended to convince conservatives in Congress that formal diplomatic ties with Taiwan should be abandoned in favor of Peking. The scope of the Peking talks, much broader than was publicized, included the following: Item: Brzezinski specifically raised with Chinese leaders, including Chairman Hua Kuo-feng, his hope that China would use its influence with black Rhodesian guerrilla leader Robert Mugabe to support the Anglo-American settlement. Mugabe, who has intimate political connections with Communist China, is by no means committed to free elections as desired by London and Washington. Item: Brzezinski raised the hope that Peking would encourage Mozambique's Marxist leader Samora Machel, to deny Rhodesian guerrillas their bases along the Rhodesian-Mozambique border.

Item: For the first time since the warming trend started in Sino-American relations, the president authorized Brzezinski to conduct counterpart talks with Chinese experts in two fields: science-technology and military. The U.S. military expert accompanying Brzezinski was Morton Abramowitz, deputy assistant secretary of defense for international security and subsequently named the new U.S. ambassador to Thailand. That choice for the U.S. embassy in Bangkok was itself symbolic. Abramowitz, a Far Eastern expert, is regarded in Peking as uniquely suited for a post in a nearby Southeast Asian country not susceptible to Soviet pressure. China's nightmare is "encirclement" by vastly superior Soviet power — a principal topic in Brzezinski's world strategy talks with China's new leadership. The U.S. team was particularly impressed with Chinese recitation of Soviet machinations in unified Communist Vietnam. Emigration from Vietnam of hundreds of thousands of ethnic Chinese has resulted from political and cultural persecution which Peking believes has Moscow's strong backing. Brzezinski found Chinese perceptions of Soviet world objectives close to his own and those now developing elsewhere within the administration. While obsessed over alleged Soviet encirclement of China, Chairman Hua and his men showed great distress also over Soviet penetration of Africa and Afghanistan. They perceive Cuba's Soviet-backed role in Angola as another play for Soviet control of a belt of southern African states from the Atlantic to the Indian Ocean. Zaire is the gap in that belt; if closed, the Soviet belt would cut off Rhodesia and South Africa from the rest of Africa. Accordingly, Chinese leaders listened sympathetically when Brzezinski suggested that Peking do in Angola what the U.S. Congress forbids the U.S. from doing: strengthen Lucas Savimbi's Angolan guerrillas now fighting a civil war against Agostinho Neto's Soviet-backed regime. The sweep of these U.S.-Chinese talks was breathtaking, once the decision to clear that airborne scanning technology for China symbolically opened them. They were also helped when Brzezinski let it be known in Peking the U.S. would now encourage its European allies to sell defensive — but not offensive — weapons to China. Left unresolved by the Pek (Continued on page 5)

Strength For Today

THE DIFFERENCE
Religion becomes significant only when it begins to speak to us as individuals. Someone has said that the heart of religion is in its personal pronouns. The God we worship notes the fall of a sparrow and numbers the very hairs on our heads. If we take the personal pronouns out of religion we have only philosophy left. Everything that gives the gospel its unique characteristic — the good news — evaporates and disappears. The fundamental teaching of our faith is that God cares, and that He cares not just for humanity in general, but for you and me in particular. God from the philosophical standpoint is the object of mankind's contemplation and speculation. From the religious standpoint He is the beneficent Father. From the distinctly Christian standpoint He is the Savior who has redeemed us from ourselves and our sins through Jesus Christ.

Personal Price Index Offered

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer
How does your spending stack up against the norm? Are your bills rising faster than the government's economic indicators would seem to indicate? Analysts at Citibank, the nation's second-largest commercial bank, have developed a step-by-step system you can use to determine your "Personal Price Index" — PPI — by using the figures in the Labor Department's Consumer Price Index — CPI. It takes a little time and effort to measure your spending statistics, but it can help you keep track of where your money goes. If your index is higher than the government's, for instance, you probably are spending more than average on goods and services whose prices are rising faster than average. Budget cuts in those areas will save you the most money. You don't have to figure out your Personal Price Index every month; two or three times a year is enough to let you compare your rate of inflation with national and regional averages. Start with your financial records for a given period — say the first four months of the year. A pocket calculator, while not essential, will make the arithmetic easier. Get a copy of the government's Consumer Price Index for your area. Call or write the regional office of the U.S. Department of Labor's Bureau of Labor Statistics and ask to be put on the mailing list for its free CPI releases. (Note: Regional indexes for most areas are issued only once every two months.) The CPI breaks spending into seven categories: food, housing, transportation, medical, entertainment, apparel and other. You should do the same thing, rounding off the figures to the nearest dollar to make calculations easier. Do NOT include income taxes, Social Security, retirement planning, life or income insurance, gifts or savings. (These items are not included in the government index, so it doesn't really measure the actual cost of living, but only provides information on what is happening to prices of selected items.) Remember to include all beverages, alcoholic as well as non-alcoholic, in the food category and count spending at home and away. Housing includes rent or home ownership expenses like fuel and property taxes. It does not include the part of your housing bill that goes to pay the mortgage itself; that is considered savings. Add up your spending and divide each category by the total. That gives you the percentage or weight for each category. Suppose, for example, you spent $4,000 in the first third of 1978, with $640 going for food. Divide and you get 16 percent. Multiply 16 percent — .16 — by the April food index for your region to get your personal weighted index. Make the same calculation for each spending category and add the results. That gives you your Personal Price Index for April. Make the same calculations when the regional indexes for August come out, and you can compare the percentage of increase or decrease in your personal index with the change in the government figures.

New-Car Buyers 'Ravenous' In Face Of Makers' Price Policy

By DONALD WOUTAT
Associated Press Writer
DETROIT (AP) — New-car buyers have turned ravenous in the face of a "nibble, nibble" pricing policy by U.S. automakers, but analysts are at odds over whether the surge is a feast for the industry or a harbinging of hard times.

Six months ago, the nation's bellwether industry had everyone nervous as it struggled through an unexpected winter-long slump. But on "some magic day in March," as one analyst put it, auto sales took off.

Americans bought more cars in May than in any month in history, and two straight 10-day sales records have been set so far in June. Auto sales are running at a remarkable 12 million-plus annual rate.

Everybody agrees it cannot last, and that some motorists are grabbing up new cars to beat future price increases. But there is less agreement on what that means for sales next fall or in 1979.

Richard Haydon, auto analyst for the Goldman, Sachs investment firm, says it is no coincidence that sales started to soar after U.S. automakers decided to institute periodic small price increases rather than one big boost with the introduction of new models in the fall.

"The frequency of the increases reinforces in the consumer's mind that today's prices will be lower than tomorrow's prices," Haydon said. "I believe there has been some pre-buying. It's going to have an adverse effect, but it's impossible to quantify."

Other analysts note that price-conscious consumers buying cars late in the model year to avoid fall price increases is not new.

"The question is whether more people are pre-buying this year, causing an unseasonal bulge in sales that must be paid back later. The answer is not known," says a Ford Motor Co. analyst who asked anonymously.

David Healy of Drexel, Burnham and Co. predicts a quick drop in sales for the fourth quarter. But he rejects the argument that the present situation is like the buy-in-advance psychology of the summer of 1974, which preceded a severe auto industry slump that helped lead the nation into a recession.

"The idea's the same but (1977) is a hell of a lot milder," he said.

The Ford analyst is even more optimistic. He argues that the sales figures closely correspond to increases in non-farm employment and the Gross National Product more than a year ago and that the latest buying splurge has merely canceled out the winter losses.

'Unwanted' Avoid Pets

ELLSWORTH, Kan. (AP) — Roger Peterson, the Ellsworth County attorney, doesn't have to resort to legal tactics to get rid of unwanted house guests.

His solution is much more simple: He brings out Fluffy and Snick.

Fluffy is a 7½-foot reticulated python. Snick is a 4½-foot rainbow boa constrictor.

And then Peterson casually mentions there also is a 3½-foot common boa wandering loose somewhere in the house. That one, still unnamed, hasn't been seen for a month or so.

"But," grins Peterson, "he'll show up when he gets hungry."

Some of his guests can't quite understand that the snakes, although large, are non-poisonous and tame, said Peterson.

"I think the frightening thing is that they're so very quiet. They just suddenly appear," he said.

Peterson, who said he caught bullsnakes as a boy on a farm, received one of the boas from his wife as a birthday present, although "she isn't overly fond of snakes."

ing talks was the Taiwan question. Some U.S. officials are certain that early next year Mr. Carter will begin disengaging from Taiwan — thereby triggering a battle not to be confined to Capitol Hill.

To prepare for that, administration strategists are quietly briefing key congressmen — including staunchly conservative Republicans — about the administration's new linkage with Communist China on global strategy. The hope: affinity with Peking in containing Soviet power will override passionate conservative support for Taiwan.

Skepticism about playing the China card is intense among the conservatives wooed by Brzezinski and his men. But their tacit cooperation may be essential to carry forth into practice the bold talk between Brzezinski and Hua in Peking.

Magician Convention Like Weekend 'College'

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Most of them are amateurs. They come to these conventions to learn the tricks of their trade. Literally. For they are magicians. And about 200 of them gathered here over the weekend for a magicians' convention, which one described as

"like going to college for the weekend."

The convention, which ended yesterday, is sponsored by Ring No. 144 of the International Brotherhood of Magicians, a Piedmont organization of about 60 members.

It was billed as a workshop, where ideas were shared and skills, ranging from sleight of hand to juggling and fire eating were honed. But during the evening, the magicians went public and put on a show.

One of the part-time magicians who attended the convention is John Paul Middlesworth, who describes himself as a serious, reflective fellow most of the time. He's been practicing magic for eight years, which means the art has consumed nearly half his life. Middlesworth is 17 years old.

He has magical performing roles of Professor Middlesworth and Mr. Amazing. He says these might be his biggest tricks since he temporarily steps outside his serious, reflective self long enough to soak up the ego-satisfying attention, which he said was the reason for amateurs getting hooked on magic and remaining weekend magicians for the rest of their lives.

"I've analyzed it," he said, "and I realize I hunger for attention. It's like my acting in school and being in the drama club. The big thing with a lot of magicians is they want to be noticed, rather than actually fool someone."

Middlesworth is a rising senior and president-elect of the student government at West Iredell High School in Statesville. He performs before civic groups, clubs and at parties. He charges $7 or $8 for a half hour.

He said performing before scout troops is particularly tough because kids are alert and often at least one will know how to do a trick. And such a person is like a thief, according to Middlesworth, because he takes away the act's suspense.

Despite his magical skills, Middlesworth says he will probably become an engineer because he's mechanically inclined. But for now, magic satisfies his "constant quest for attention."

Dogs Inspire Boys' Job

DENVER (AP) — The owners of a new company here, the Tootsie Roll Patrol, report business is "picking up all the time."

And indeed it is. For a monthly fee of $12, Bill and Disa Van Orman will service a client's backyard three times a week, cleaning up where Fido left off.

Their 50 regular customers include entire condominium complexes and involve about 180 canines of all varieties. After six months in the business, the team say they pick up some 200 to 200 pounds of the stuff every week.

They also get the business from friends, says Van Orman, "but there are some pretty nice things about the job, too."

Among the benefits of their profession, the Van Ormans list flexible hours, working outdoors and the fact they work together, accompanied by their 14-month-old daughter.

Then there are the drawbacks: the effects of hot weather on the material they gather, an occasional ill-tempered German shepherd and the drive to the city dump in the family station wagon after a long day's work.

"We have to keep the windows down, even in the winter," Van Orman says.

Arrest Suspect

WILSON, N.C. (AP) — Murder charges have been filed in the death of a 65-year-old woman whose partially burned body was found Friday night in her burning home.

Police identified the victim as Ossie Belle Williams whose great-nephew was arrested Sunday in the case. Officers said the woman had been beaten about head.

Police arrested Abraham Brooks, 26, and charged him with murder, first degree burglary and arson of an occupied dwelling. Brooks was held without bond.

Crude Oil Tax Hike 'Possible'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's energy chief says there's a "lively possibility" that Congress will approve President Carter's proposed crude oil tax — because the alternatives of import quotas or import fees are worse.

Energy Secretary James Schlesinger told a television interview show Sunday if Congress fails to act this year to reduce oil imports, the president will be forced to act on his own. Schlesinger said some congressional progress is needed on the energy program to make next month's economic summit meeting in West Germany a success.

Progress On Project

SIMPSON — Work is progressing on a community development project here, including street improvements, housing rehabilitation and relocation.

Officials said drainage work has been completed and paving should begin anyday in the project area.

About 16 homes are scheduled to be improved under the housing rehabilitation program.

Work on six homes is under contract, while estimates are being secured for work on three additional homes. Work on three more homes is just about complete.

Relocation of residents in substandard housing should be underway by August, officials noted.

The work is being carried out under a Federal grant.

Simpson has also applied to the Department of Housing and Urban Development for $410,000 in Community Development funds for the coming year for housing rehabilitation and relocation.

Boy Kills Two

HYATTSVILLE, Md. (AP) — A 15-year-old traffic suspect grabbed a policeman's service revolver at a police station in this Washington suburb early today and shot and killed two Prince George's County policemen, authorities said.

Police spokesman John Hoxie said Officers James B. Swart, 25, and Albert M. Claggett, 26, brought two teen-agers to the station after stopping the two during a traffic check in nearby Bladensburg, Md.

During a fingerprinting session, the 15-year-old grabbed Claggett's service revolver from his holster and began shooting, striking Swart and Claggett, Hoxie said. A third officer disarmed the youth, whose name was not disclosed because of his age.

Swart was pronounced dead on arrival at Prince George's General Hospital and Claggett died on the operating table there, authorities said.

A clerk who witnessed the shooting also was hospitalized with shock. She was reported in good condition.

Wet Storm System Hits Broad Area Of Midwest

By The Associated Press
Parts of Indianapolis remained without power early today following a devastating storm system that spawned tornadoes and dumped heavy rain and hail in the Ohio Valley and other parts of the Midwest.

The National Weather Service said two tornadoes touched down Sunday night in Indianapolis, causing extensive damage, and one hit at Pittsboro, northeast of the capital city.

The Indianapolis Fire Department said it sent trucks on "hundreds of runs" while the storm battered the city for almost two hours. Dispatchers had to use telephones to route the trucks when sophisticated electronic equipment blew out.

At least 25 people were treated for injuries at Wishard Memorial Hospital, which reported that its basement emergency rooms were flooded as a result of the 5 to 7 inches of rain that fell on the city. Methodist Hospital reported treating 10 people for storm-related injuries.

Mayor William Hudnut said city employees were mobilized today to speed the cleanup effort. Hudnut said no estimate of citywide damage was available.

Elsewhere, a thunderstorm dumped hail and 4 inches of rain in southwestern Michigan, causing an earthen dam to collapse, flooding an apartment complex, washing out roads and forcing the evacuation of about 100 homes.

In South Dakota, Gov. Richard Kneip declared four counties disaster areas after at least nine tornadoes touched down Saturday and a thunderstorm accompanied by winds of up to 100 mph hit Sunday.

Indianapolis police said one twister struck two large apartment complexes on the northwest side of town, causing minor injuries for several residents.

Damage at the Camelot complex forced more than 100 residents out of their apartments and into emergency shelters. The powerful winds shredded several of the frame apartment buildings and sent debris crashing into cars parked in front of the structures. The tornado also caused heavy damage at the nearby Oakbrook Village.

A second confirmed touchdown, near downtown Indianapolis, ignited a fire in a combination storefront-apartment building.

The severe weather did not directly cause any deaths, but police said Jerry Smith, 16, of Indianapolis was killed Sunday night when he stepped on a fallen power line.

The Indianapolis Power & Light Co. said it suffered "extensive system damage" during the storm. Emergency repair crews were still trying today to restore electricity to scattered areas of the city.

Intersections throughout Indianapolis were flooded. Waist-deep water was reported in lower spots and dozens of motorists were forced to temporarily abandon their vehicles until the water receded.

The heavy thunderstorms were weakening today over the lower Ohio Valley, the weather bureau said, but flash flood watches remained in effect for central and southeastern Indiana, the northeastern third of Illinois and extreme northwestern Ohio.

A flash flood warning was in effect for the upper Illinois River and for rivers in northeastern Illinois.

A line of heavy thunderstorms stretched from north-central Kansas and over eastern Nebraska, and a severe thunderstorm watch was in effect for portions of Kansas, Nebraska, Missouri and Iowa.

Other thunderstorms ranged over Wisconsin and Michigan and from Nebraska through the eastern Dakotas, northwestern Iowa and southwestern Minnesota.

Elsewhere around the nation, the weather bureau reported that 3 inches of snow fell Sunday on Lima, in southwestern Montana.

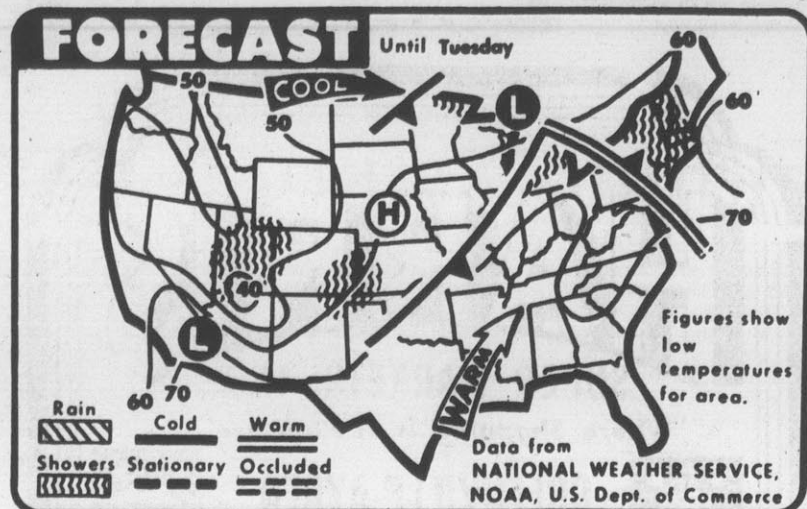

Otherwise, hot weather continued from the southwest deserts across New Mexico, the South and central Plains and into the mid-Mississippi Valley. Temperature readings reached well above 100 degrees in southwest Kansas.

How's The Weather?

WEATHER FORECAST — Warm weather is forecast today for most of the country. Cool weather is expected in the northern Plains,

By The Associated Press
A warm front, coming up from the south, began moving through North Carolina today. With it came a broad flow of southwesterly winds that have given Texas temperatures well up in the 90s for the last several days.

Scattered mainly afternoon and evening thundershowers were expected to develop with the passing of the front. Thundershowers also are predicted for Tuesday afternoon and evening.

The forecast calls for temperatures ranging in the high 80s today and probably in the 90s Tuesday.

One of the warmest spots in the state Sunday was the Raleigh-Durham Airport where the mercury reached 89 degrees. Thundershowers also developed in the southern Piedmont area.

Youngsters Taste-Test Future School Lunches

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — Hoping to cut waste while making school lunches tastier, dieticians sought help on planning next fall's menu from a panel of experts — seven elementary school children.

Armed with rating forms, sharpened pencils and their appetites, the youngsters sat in the school system's central kitchen recently, eagerly eyeing a 25-foot-long table laden with fruit juices, coleslaw, potato salad, vanilla pudding, sandwiches, plate lunches and their favorite — pizza.

Meatloaf No. 5 drew an "ugh" and the green beans were described as "icky," while Salisbury steak and pizza-burgers drew raves.

"They were not very happy with the barbecue beef," said Mary Filko, director of the schools' kitchens. "So I don't think I'll use that one at all."

The youngsters' opinions will help Mrs. Filko decide which bids from food contractors to accept.

A few years ago, she said, the low bidder on the pizza concession came in about a penny a slice below the competition. That penny represented big money, because the system serves pizza as often as once a week.

But Mrs. Filko was not sure the children would like the less expensive pizza, so she arranged a pizza eating contest among some youngsters. They refused to eat the less expensive variety, and the company offering the higher-priced pizza got the contract.

She also hopes the taste tests will reduce "plate waste," a polite term for the mounds of food that children refuse to eat and must be thrown away each day.

The final ratings showed the youngsters preferred the pizza served last year to that provided by any of the competitors seeking a contract with the schools this year.

They turned thumbs down on last year's orange juice, saying it was too watery.

The experiment could rebound on some of the testers, however. Scott Harter said he liked nearly everything he sampled at the test, even though his mother said he often grumped about the fare last year.

"You won't be able to complain next year," she told him.

Police Hunting A Missing Safe

Greenville Police today are looking for a safe and the thieves that removed it from Kentucky Fried Chicken at 2905 East Fifth St., Saturday night or Sunday morning.

Chief Glenn Cannon said the 2½-foot square safe was removed from the building through a rear door by thieves who gained entrance to the fast service restaurant by cutting metal strips from a window vent.

The theft was reported at 10:02 a.m. yesterday.

Cheerleaders Capture Plaque

The Greenville Christian Academy cheerleaders captured several honors at a cheerleading clinic held at Tennessee Temple College, Chattanooga, Tenn., recently.

They were awarded a plaque for being the third most outstanding squad, four first place ribbons, three third place ribbons and one honorable mention for their efforts.

The Greenville squad competed against 25 squads from across the nation.

Norfolk Paper Says CIA Used Albemarle Sound Training Base

HERTFORD, N.C. (AP) — A Norfolk, Va., newspaper says the Central Intelligence Agency has used a Navy ordnance testing facility on Albemarle Sound nearly 20 years as a secret paramilitary training base for operations in Africa, Cuba, Latin America and Southeast Asia.

In its Sunday edition, the Virginian-Pilot quoted former CIA and Defense Department officials who asked not to be identified as saying the base was activated in 1960 as an equipment staging area for the ill-fated 1961 Bay of Pigs invasion of Cuba.

The CIA since then has trained its officers, mercenaries and foreign troops at the base, an isolated leftover from World War II, the paper said.

It was chosen because of its solitude, its proximity to Norfolk and convenient water, an airstrip and a rail line.

The paper said the 1,200-acre installation of U.S. 17 has been named Harvey Point Defense Testing Activity and has been used as an extension of the CIA's basic training school at Camp Peary near Williamsburg, Va.

A number of former CIA agents have identified Camp Peary, a 10,500-acre facility on the York River, as the agency's basic school for junior officers.

"The CIA used Harvey Point as a kind of annex of Camp Peary for demolitions training," the paper quoted one of its sources.

The Virginian-Pilot said it was told by the sources that trainees arrive secretly at Harvey Point by bus, some with windows blacked out, or by airplane, also with blacked-out windows in the passenger compartment.

Residents of the area said they hear loud explosions and regularly see cars going into the base on trucks. They said the same cars are carried out on trucks, but the vehicles have been destroyed in various fashions by explosives.

One resident said a relative whose fishing boat swamped in Albemarle Sound washed up on the Harvey Point property, was immediately taken into custody by armed guards and questioned several hours before being released.

The paper said official spokesmen say little about the base except to confirm that explosives are the big attraction.

The Virginian-Pilot said one of its reporters was denied access to the facility by armed guards. It said an officer came to the gate and said the Defense Department tests conventional ordnance at the facility. But the paper said he declined to give further details.

A spokesman for Rep. Walter

B. Jones, D-N.C., in whose 1st District the base is located, declined comment other than to say Harvey Point was a top secret installation.

The paper quoted spokesman for U.S. Sen. Robert Morgan, D-N.C., as saying he had no knowledge of the base, although he noted there had been rumors circulating for years of CIA involvement.

Abandoned after World War II, Harvey Point was reactivated for a jet seaplane project in 1958. The project lost several million dollars and failed a year later.

Mosquito Is Really Little-Known By Its Victims

OUT OF MY WAY! — This is a larger-than-life view of a common summertime pest, the mosquito. The 500-time enlargement with an electron microscope shows the front end of the pest: the tiny balls are the insect's eyes, the antennae come out of the head and extend to the right and left, while the "stinger" extends down out of the picture. Only the female mosquitos bite. (AP Laserphoto)

By BRIAN SULLIVAN
AP Science Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — The mosquitoes are coming! The mosquitoes are coming!

Yes, with the first really warm summer days, comes that almost imperceptible hum, followed by the seemingly inevitable bite.

The mosquito — maddening on a summer evening, dangerous when carrying disease — but really little known by its scratching victims.

Consider this: only the females bite.

The male is the Ferdinand the Bull of the insect world, eating only the nectar of flowers, the sap of plants, fruit juices.

The female bites because she needs a "blood meal" to provide protein to nourish her eggs. After her first batch of 50 to 200 eggs, she must have blood for each successive batch. She will lay perhaps 10 batches in her lifetime of several weeks.

Attempts to control mosquitoes have been going on for years. The latest research is on use of hormones, bacteria and predator mosquitoes, all of which would interfere with growth before the mosquito emerges from its tiny shell as a full-grown insect.

Mosquitoes live in water, and each type — there are about 2,500 species — has its own preference for fresh, salt or brackish water. They don't swim relatively still.

The ones that bother people the most generally live around houses — in the old days in the rain barrel, now in tin cans or old tires, in an unused toilet tank in a spare bathroom, in a basement sump pump, even in ivy placed in a jar of water to root.

So one of the best protections is to eliminate these breeding places. If you live near a salt marsh, that may be difficult.

And that can be more than just a question of controlling a nuisance that stings and makes you itch — if the mosquito is carrying the infectious agent for such diseases as malaria, yellow fever or sleeping sickness, which is an inflammation of the brain.

Actually, only a few types of mosquitoes prefer to feed on man, according to Alice Gray, scientific assistant in the department of entomology at the American Museum of Natural History. They prefer birds, dogs, horses, all sorts of animals.

"There are a few females who have the bad taste to prefer frogs," says Miss Gray.

As for the male, he has extremely bushy antennae used for hearing. These resonate in response to the wing beat of the female. The wing beat causes the mosquito's hum, and the female's slower — and lower pitched — wing beat is recognizable to the male.

From the eggs, which the female lays in the water, hatch mosquitoes that go through metamorphosis, from egg to larva to pupa to adult. Like all insects, the mosquito grows by changing the external portion of the skin. This is called molting.

In the final stage, the outer shell splits a last time and the adult steps out onto the surface of the shell, as if on a raft, and is ready to fly — and, if female, to bite.

Do mosquitoes really attack certain people? Yes.

"Human beings differ markedly from one another in their attractiveness to mosquitoes," is the textbook explanation in "The Physiology of Mosquitoes."

"This is a great mystery," says Miss Gray.

A number of factors appear to play a part in making one person a favorite on the mosquito menu. The insect seems to follow the scent of the person until coming within sight; then colors that contrast with the background seem to attract.

When the mosquito gets closer, body temperature helps it locate the exposed skin. Some people exude carbon dioxide from their bodies rather than just exhale it, and they may be more attractive. The odor of sweat and of blood circulating through capillaries of the skin also may be important.

One other thing, the textbook says: "Certain observations suggest that the presence of mosquitoes on the skin of a host may make it more attractive to other mosquitoes."

And when the mosquito bites, it can drink its weight in blood at a single meal. National Geographic notes.

The remarkable structure of the insect's mouth allows her to pierce and draw blood and at the same time inject salivary secretion. The secretion produces the allergic reaction that causes the itching.

The proboscis consists of six blade-like objects that do the piercing, sucking of blood and injection from the salivary glands.

So what good are mosquitoes? Well, they constitute a major part of the diet of some animals, such as fish and birds, Miss Gray says.

"Yes, they have their place in the economy of nature," she says. "Of all the animals, the one I would willingly consign to extinction is the mosquito, but I'm not sure that's a good idea."

This year may not bring in other general soybean insect outbreak, but you need an insect control strategy, just in case.

Will insects strike soybeans in 1978 in the devastating number of '77?

Probably not, but you still need to be ready to deal with the leaf and pod feeders that do reach economic thresholds in your fields this year.

Last year the combination of an unusually early spring and drought helped bring on the hordes of pests that descended on soybeans earlier and in greater number than many growers and entomologists could remember.

Spring and the first generation of worms came three to four weeks earlier than normal. That multiplied pest numbers by two or three generations.

The drought also dried up normal food supplies for grass feeding insects such as fall armyworms and grasshoppers. In some areas, those pests moved into soybeans, compounding the problems from disastrous numbers of beet armyworms, velvetbean caterpillars, and soybean loopers already there.

Less than an estimated 10% of U.S. soybean acreage requires early insecticide treatment and only a very small part of the treated acreage needs more than one application. That's largely due to the efficiency of beneficial insects in controlling pests at no cost to the grower.

Many producers don't realize that a population of beneficial insects including damsel big-eyed bugs, spiders, and ground beetles, can cut drastically the number of pests in a field. For example, beneficial insects

At Least Nine Died In Traffic

By The Associated Press

At least nine people were killed in highway traffic accidents in North Carolina over the weekend, according to the state Highway Patrol. The deaths bring the state's fatality toll for the year to 626, compared to 656 at this time last year.

A 7-year-old Hertford County girl was killed Sunday when she walked into the path of an oncoming car, the patrol said. Katrina Y. Lassiter died in the accident, which occurred about 10 miles west of Ahoskie.

A Camp Lejeune man was killed Saturday night when the car in which he was riding ran off the road and overturned near Jacksonville. The patrol identified the dead man as Nelson Perez, 20.

Diana Lee Woody, 16, of Burnsville died Saturday night near Mars Hill when she fell out of the back of a moving truck.

A two-fatality crash near Blowing Rock Saturday night resulted in the deaths of Blanco General Perry, 80, of Zionville and Tom Stanley Ward, 65, of Patterson, who were fatally injured in a head-on collision on U.S. 321 less than a mile south of Blowing Rock late Saturday night. Eight others were injured.

A pickup truck driven by Perry crossed the center line and collided with a car in which Ward was riding, officers said.

David D. Carroll, a 4-year-old Garland boy, was killed Saturday night when he walked in front of a car on North Carolina 210 three miles north of White Lake, the patrol said.

Other weekend traffic victims were:

Over $1 Million In Church Collection

KIRKLAND, Wash. (AP) — The faithful at Overlake Christian Church rendered unto God in a big way — pouring $1.6 million into the collection plate, their pastor said.

Twenty off-duty sheriff's deputies were on hand Sunday to guard the offering and an armored car hauled it away.

The Rev. Robert Moorehead said the total — taken in two collections — was within $100,000 of the church's goal for a new building, after a contractor stood up at the end of the service and offered all the labor for the foundation.

"We just challenge them (the congregation) to step out on faith and trust," Moorehead said.

Some people in the generally well-to-do congregation mortgaged their homes and yachts to raise money, he said. Others signed pledges to pay during the next few months.

The construction plan calls for building a new 2,000-seat auditorium, a chapel and classrooms to handle the church's fast growing membership. The church has grown from 13 members to 1,800 members in eight years, Moorehead said.

"Some brought their diamond rings, deeds to property and some sold their cars and homes," Moorehead said. "We even had some people devote their year's salary."

Set Limits On Credit Report

WASHINGTON (AP) — A credit reporting agency says consumers asking to see their credit files will no longer be asked whether they're divorced, the number of dependents they have and their approximate worth, among other questions.

The American Service Bureau of Chicago, which prepares reports on consumers for insurance companies, agreed to stop asking the questions in a consent order signed with the Federal Trade Commission. The bureau, one of the largest credit reporting agencies, did not admit wrongdoing.

Arrest Suspect In Break-In

Elson Strickland of Goldsboro was charged early this morning with attempted breaking and entering, communicating threats, damage to real property and interfering with a telephone line following investigation of a 6:30 a.m. incident at 304 South Oak St.

Chief Glenn Cannon said Strickland allegedly pulled the telephone wires from the house and attempted break open the rear door, after threatening the occupant, Virginia Brooks.

NEW YORK (AP) — Gambling issues held the spotlight again in a generally sluggish stock market session today.

The noon Dow Jones average of 30 industrials was off 2.16 at 820.86. Losers outnumbered gainers by close to a 2-1 margin among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Gambling stocks and related issues continued to surge ahead in a feverish wave of speculative buying that has followed last month's opening of the first casino in Atlantic City, N.J.

Caesars World gained 1 1/2 to 29; Bally Manufacturing rose 1/2 to 38 1/2, and Allegheny Airlines, which operates flights in and out of Atlantic City, added 1/2 to 11 1/2.

The class A shares of Resorts International, operator of the Atlantic City casino, climbed 8 to 91 1/2 on the American Stock Exchange.

Some other stocks in the group were delayed in opening because of order influxes.

The rest of the market was quiet amid widespread forecasts that the Federal Reserve might soon raise the discount rate—the charge it makes on loans to its member commercial banks.

There was also considerable speculation that the bank prime lending rate, now at 8 3/4 percent, would soon climb to 9 percent.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks slipped 17 to 53.73. On the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was off .32 at 146.95.

Volume on the Big Board came to 11.32 million shares at noontime, against 12.99 million at the same point on Friday.

FIELD DAY OPERATIONS — Members of the Brightleaf Amateur Radio Club sit by their "rigs" listening for contacts during the 11th annual field day competition held Saturday and Sunday on the campus of Pitt Technical Institute. The field day is sponsored by the American Radio Relay League, and is designed to test the amateurs in case of local or national emergencies. Both code and voice transmissions were used for the event. Also in operation was a station designed for communication from the "Oscar 8" satellite that was launched in March, 1978. The photo at right shows operator Gary Ambert preparing for a transmission. The satellite is in orbit around the earth at an altitude of 500 miles. It relays transmissions of other amateur radio operators back to earth. About 1,000 contacts were expected to be made during the 24 hours of operation. (Reflector Photos by Tommy Forrest)

Resigns Skokie Shared 'Beautiful Day'

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — President Salem Robaye All of South Yemen, the only Marxist-governed republic in the oil-rich Arabian Peninsula, resigned today after a day long air bombardment of his palace in Aden by army rebels, the Iraqi news agency reported.

SKOKIE, Ill. (AP) — Instead of facing a rally by brown-shirted, goose-stepping American Nazis and a potentially violent counter-demonstration, residents here shared tears, prayers and laughter. "It's a beautiful day in the village of Skokie," Mayor Albert K. Smith said Sunday as he and some 300 other people gathered at a synagogue to pay tribute to victims of Nazi concentration camps.

NO TRACE OF GIANT SHARK
NEW YORK (AP) — Searchers in more than 50 boats crisscrossed the waters off Long Island's Montauk Point looking for a great white shark that local fishermen say towed a 40-foot wooden boat some 20 miles. The shark got away Friday when it broke the 1,650-pound nylon line after a 14-hour struggle.

Jetliner Ran Off Runway

TORONTO (AP) — An Air Canada DC-9 jetliner plowed off the runway and into a ravine on takeoff at Toronto International Airport today, injuring at least 45 of the 107 persons aboard, airline officials said. Unconfirmed reports said between two and five persons were killed.

Air Canada spokesman Brock Stewart said the jetliner, on a domestic flight, lost power in one of its two engines and the pilot had to abort the takeoff. He was unable to stop on the runway and the plane ended up with its nose in a ravine.

One witness said the plane broke into three pieces. Stewart said the tail section, where the engines are mounted, broke off and the wings were damaged. But he said there was no fire.

The flight, No. 189, had arrived from Ottawa and was taking off for Winnipeg and then was to continue to Vancouver. It carried 102 passengers and five crew members.

Ambulances summoned from surrounding areas to the airport in suburban Mississauga, 12 miles northwest of downtown Toronto, were delayed by major traffic tie-ups during the morning rush hour. The accident occurred at about 8:15 a.m.

The injured were taken to various hospitals in the area.

Favor Cutting Welfare Cost Deny A Special Access Right

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — If the readers of The Sacramento Union had their way, the forced economies of Proposition 13 would come first out of welfare and last out of law enforcement.

The newspaper said in a poll published Sunday that 1,367 readers completed questionnaires listing their funding priorities for 18 local programs. Recommended for the biggest budget cuts after welfare were new construction and management personnel. And recommended for the least cutting, after law enforcement, were fire protection and public schools.

VACATION HOME AND TAXES

If you build or buy a vacation home, you can let it help your annual tax bill and still enjoy it for your family's pleasure. However, with the 1976 tax reform bill, (effective 1/1/77) there have been changes restricting some of the deductions under certain conditions.

For starters - whether you use it for yourself or not, there are always the usual deductions for mortgage interest and property taxes. The interest deduction can be considerable during the early years of the loan.

There are other deductions that also may be taken - just as you would if you owned an apartment house for an investment: depreciation, maintenance, utilities, insurance, etc. In order to take these deductions the total cannot exceed the amount of rental income (less taxes and interest) and the home cannot be occupied by the owner for more than two weeks or 10% of the rental use. However, rents are not taxable if the house is rented less than 15 days.

If there is anything we can do to help you in the field of real estate, please phone or drop in at BLOUNT & BALL REALTY CO. 201 E. Arlington Blvd., Greenville, Phone: 756-3000. We're here to help!

Canadian Winner Will Set Goals For Himself

OAKVILLE, Ont. (AP) — Bruce Lietzke has some adjusting to do, some goals to set. "This was a big, big stepping stone in my career," Lietzke said Sunday after he'd hung on with a 2-over-par 73 to score a 1-stroke victory in the Canadian Open Golf Championship.

"I'm going to have to do some mental adjusting. I've never been a goal-oriented person. After winning those tournaments last year, I kind of put it on cruise. I've gone for more than a year without a goal in mind."

"Now I'm going to have to set some goals for myself, perhaps try to have a better season than I had last year."

He's less than halfway there. Last year Lietzke blitzed the early part of the season, winning two quick titles. He was second in two other tournaments and won more than $204,000. With his victory in the 1978 Canadian national championship, the tall, cross-handed putter had won one, been second in one and collected $85,393.

"Winning this golf tournament means more to me than winning any of the others," Lietzke said. "It tells me last year wasn't just a streak. It tells me I can win when I'm not playing at my absolute peak." He wasn't at his absolute peak, but, then, neither were his major challengers. "I gave it away," said a disgruntled Lee Trevino. "It's my own fault. I lost my composure. When you bogey three of the last six holes, that's giving it away. I had him. I was doing just what I wanted to do and I gave it away."

Lietzke finished with a 283 total, 1 under par and the only man able to break standard figures on the Glen Abbey Golf Club course Jack Nicklaus designed as a permanent home for this national championship.

Trevino once shared the lead during the final round but drifted back with his bogey-par-bogey-bogey string in the stretch run and let rookie Pat McGowan come on with a last-hole birdie and take second alone at 284. McGowan had a closing 72.

Trevino and Ben Crenshaw were next at 285, each missing a medium-range birdie putt on the last hole. Trevino matched par 71 over the last round while Crenshaw shot 72.

Ray Floyd, George Burns and Mike McCullough were next at 186. Floyd shot a closing 69, Burns 70 and McCullough 71.

Nicklaus never got in the chase. He closed with 72-289. U.S. Open champ Andy North was 76-297. South African Gary Player ended his long, 15-tournament swing around North America 76-294. Arnold Palmer shot 68-287.

Two Losses End Streak

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Pitt County's American Legion baseball team, after wrapping up the Eastern Area I League championship, dropped a pair of games this weekend.

Pitt lost its first of the season Saturday night in Washington, 3-2, then fell to Snow Hill Sunday afternoon in Greenville, 9-6.

"I don't think we didn't have our minds on the games," Coach Ed Hooks said. "Snow Hill hit the ball out a couple of times and that put us in a hole. But we stayed in there."

"Still," he added, "it's hard to say if we might have been taking both of them light since we already had it wrapped up. Then, today, we played a lot of people since we wanted to give everyone a chance."

Hooks said he didn't view Sunday's game as that important to the team since the title was won.

"We wanted to win them all, but we realize that you don't do things like that."

Pitt County will end up the regular season on Tuesday at Edenton, and Hooks feels they'll be definitely ready for that one. "We want to win there to have some momentum going into the playoffs," he said.

Pitt, as the regular season champ, will meet the eighth-place team in the first round, a best-of-three series.

Saturday night, Pitt had its chances to top Washington, but was unable to pull it out.

Pitt scored first, getting a run in the third inning. With one out, Skip Topping doubled, and after a second out, took third on a passed ball. Ronnie Chapman then singled him in.

Washington got all three of its runs in the fifth inning, two of them unearned. David Waters singled after one out and Oc-tavius Wallace singled him to third. Wallace then stole second. Pete Lee struck out, but the third strike was a wild pitch, and he reached with Waters scoring. An error on an attempted double steal let Wallace score. Drew Roberson then singled to score Lee with the run that proved the winner.

Pitt County, after threats in the fourth, came back to score once in the eighth. Chapman walked to open the eighth and moved up on a wild pitch and an out. Kevin Adams singled him in.

Pitt then loaded the bases on two walks, but a double play ended the threat.

In the ninth, Pitt again loaded the bases, but this time failed to score.

Sunday, Snow Hill started the scoring in the second frame, getting two. With one out, Allen Moore reached on an error. Then, with two away, Curtis Shirley cracked a home run over the fence in left center for a 2-0 lead.

Snow Hill added two more in the third. Mike Chase reached on a hit to deep short and with one down, Russell Brann added the second Snow Hill homer.

Two more crossed in the fifth inning. Chase singled and stole third, and Jay Carraway singled to left. Brann got a hit to left, scoring Chase, and an infield out by Philip Gordon brought in Carraway, boosting the score to 6-0.

Pitt County, which had put only one man as far as second base through the first five innings, finally broke the ice in the sixth, scoring four times to close the gap to 6-4.

With one down, Chapman singled and Mike Shank walked. After the second out, Greg Lee walked, loading the bases. Will Sanderson then hit a line drive down the right field line for a triple, scoring all three runners. Topping then singled to score Sanderson, but the rally ended there.

Snow Hill came back with another run in the seventh. With one down, Brann reached on an error and Gordon singled. Al Murray singled, and an error on the play let Brann score.

Greenville again closed it to two with one in the eighth. Sanderson walked as did Topping. Peter Pace singled to right, and a high-hopper to third by Jeff Aldridge was beaten out for a hit, scoring Sanderson.

But once more, Snow Hill came back, scoring two more in the ninth. Brann singled and Gordon doubled to left. Then, with two outs, Moore singled to left, scoring both runners.

The final Pitt run came in the bottom of the ninth. Kevin Adams doubled and scored when Lee singled, but again, Pitt was unable to rally further.

The regular season ends Tuesday at Edenton, with the playoffs to follow.

Unser Adds To Victory List

MOUNT POCONO, Pa. (AP) — Al Unser's victory in the $400,000 Schaefer 500 earned him just about enough money to buy another race car, but he may have to stand in line with a few other customers.

"Eric Broadley makes them. They're a customer car. Anyone can buy one if he comes up with $100,000," Unser explained of his dirt-nosed Lola.

With victories in both the Indianapolis 500 and Sunday's Schaefer, for almost $380,000 in winnings over the two races, Unser's success is bound to spur the interest of rival teams.

"We need another one first," Unser said. "We've only got one. With only one, my crew has to double up and work overtime to do the work getting the car ready for each race.

When I crash the car, like I did at Texas and Mosport, it really creates problems for them."

Unser destroyed the first Lola model ever created for Indianapolis style racing when he slammed into a wall at Texas World Speedway in April at more than 200 mph.

The crew went to work on the backup car, which Unser said wasn't nearly as good a car, and got it ready for Indianapolis. After a storybook win there, Unser crunched the car up at Mosport, Ontario.

"That really set us back. The crew worked one solid week just to get the car ready for Milwaukee last week," Unser said. "It wasn't really right there, and it was still off in our qualifying here."

"We made some changes, and that did it. I was running laps in the race as fast as I qualified and that shouldn't happen."

Unser's rivals must have been saying that too as he sped away from them without a hitch.

"It was a typical hard day at work," he said modestly. "Although not too hard, or obviously I couldn't have won the race."

The pattern was much the same as at Indianapolis, where Danny Ongais, the pole position starter here, ran in front the first 300 miles then broke. Unser was in command most of the final 200 miles.

Woody Pele

For a man who has just passed his 40th birthday, Williamston's Gaylor Perry appears to be rolling comfortably along with another fine season in the major leagues.

Friday night, Perry recorded his seventh victory of the season, against just two losses. The victory Friday was his second straight shutout win, and gave him his 50th major league shutout, a milestone.

Earlier in the season, Perry passed two other milestones. He won his 250th game, and he moved into third place on the all-time strikeout list.

He already holds another major league distinction, that of winning 100 or more games in both leagues. Only one other pitcher can share that honor.

About the only question that still pops up is how much longer he can keep going. That's probably a question that only Perry can answer. He likes the game, so our guess is that this season won't be his last.

What About Petty?

While Perry keeps rolling along, the name of another North Carolinian has been absent from the winner's circle for some time—that of Richard Petty.

The "King" would seem to have abdicated his throne to Cale Yarborough during the past season.

The familiar red and blue Petty machine hasn't seen a victory lane celebration in so long that fans are beginning to wonder if it will ever be there again.

Perhaps, if things don't change, Richard might be seen driving a different make of car next year.

But then again, maybe he's going to be like golf's Arnold Palmer. He'll remain the favorite of the crowd, but just never seem to be able to quite come home the winner.

Legion Does Well

Pitt County's American Legion baseball team won 13 straight games before finally bowing for the first time Saturday night in a 3-2 loss to Washington.

It didn't make any difference in the league standings since Pitt County had wrapped up the title without playing on Friday when Snow Hill, the only team left with a chance to catch Pitt lost and bowed out of the race.

Coming up next week, however, it all starts again in the playoffs. Pitt will be hosting the last place team in the first game of the best-of-three series, and the third, if needed.

Best bets would seem to make that team either Goldsboro, Washington or Edenton. All three are struggling to get out of the cellar.

So far, the schedule has fallen pretty well for Pitt, with their shallow pitching staff. But when the playoffs begin, the true test arrives.

If they keep winning then, well, that's something.

Warren Farm Supply 3, Kiwanis 2

Warren Farm Supply gained a 4-2 victory over the Kiwanis Saturday night in the Senior Babe Ruth League.

Warren fell behind in the second when the Kiwanis got the first of their two runs. Chris Ross walked and stole both second and third, scoring on an error.

Warren came back to tie it up in the third. Jeff Hines singled and moved to second on an error. A passed ball and a wild pitch brought him around.

Warren then took the lead with two more in the fifth. Lee Andrews singled and stole second. He moved to third on an error. Mickey Hines walked and Jay Bedsworth singled in both runners.

The other Warren run came in the sixth, while the Kiwanis got their other in the seventh.

No one on either team had more than one hit.

Clifton Insurance 13, Ayden-Grifton 12

Clifton Insurance knocked Ayden-Grifton out of a tie for first place in the Senior Babe Ruth League Saturday night. Winterville, which got a forfeit win over Farmville, took over the lead with a 7-1 record. Ayden-Grifton is now 7-2.

Ayden-Grifton took the lead with three in the first. Harold Edwards reached on an error and so did Ed Coley. Chayton McLawhorn also reached on an error after striking out, scoring Edwards. Wayne Newton tripled in both Coley and McLawhorn.

Clifton came up with its first run in the bottom of the first. Joe Mattheis singled and Mark Shank walked. Patrick Wilson singled in Mattheis.

Ayden-Grifton added four runs in the third while Clifton came up with seven. Ayden-Grifton added three more in the fourth, but Clifton struggled back with one in the fifth and another in the sixth, tying it at 10-10.

Ayden-Grifton finally pushed over two more in the eighth for a 12-10 lead, but Clifton fought back once more, this time to win.

In the bottom of the eighth, Mike Campbell reached on a three-base error. He scored on Mattheis' ground out.

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP)—It was Mardi Gras. Oktoberfest and New Year's Eve all wrapped into one as Argentina began a four-year reign today as the world's soccer champions.

The country's 25 million soccer fans poured onto the streets and cheered their hearts out after the team took the final match and the World Cup title in a drama-packed 3-1 overtime victory over Holland.

The win meant more to Argentina than just a sports title. Through four years of effort, $700 million in stadium investments, and a vibrant young team, Argentina changed part of its image abroad not only as a soccer power but as a developing nation.

It took the Argentines seven games to reach the final of the month-long tournament. And the last match, played over the roar of 77,000 spectators, was fittingly the most dramatic.

At the end of a championship marked by defensive play and few individual stars of the magnitude of Pele or Johann Cruyff, the Argentines squared off against the goal-making machine of Holland.

The Dutch had scored more goals than any other team and had a roster that included eight veterans from their luckless 1974 Cup final against West Germany.

But Argentina came through with the goals when they counted and finally provided a hero to a tournament which had none.

His name was Mario Kempes, a husky 23-year-old with a shaggy black mane of hair, whose gift is to score with his left foot.

Kempes booted in two of Argentina's three goals. His technique: to slither through the defense on the front edge of the goal area and force in cannonball shots.

If the goalie punches them out on his first try, Kempes comes back for more, scooping up the ball for a second attempt.

Kempes gave Argentina the lead in the first half when his low kick got past Dutch goalkeeper Jan Janbloed.

The Dutch tied it with only nine minutes remaining in regulation time when substitute Dirk Nanninga beat Argentine keeper Ubaldo Fillol.

Kempes scored the game-winner for Argentina midway through the 30-minute overtime period and Daniel Bertoni added the clincher late in the required overtime session.

Cesar Luis Menotti, the Argentine coach who rebuilt a team which was known as the "Animals" for their rough play in the 60s, would not give all the credit to Kempes.

"Look," he said to a packed news conference after the 120-minute game. "This was a team performance. Argentina is a team, not individuals. We have no prima donnas. We play for each other."

"Today we showed that we could win the World Cup by being a team. That is what soccer is all about."

Menotti, who played in the great Brazilian team of Santos when Pele was aboard, and in the United States when soccer was still an unknown sport, kept his modesty through the frenetic celebrations.

Asked if Argentina was now the best team in the world, he replied: "Tonight we feel that. Yet, we have not played every country. Let's keep a sense of perspective amid the jubilation."

"Argentina has worked hard. We have rebuilt the team, restored its character. But most important of all we have forwards who can score goals," he added.

Menotti was asked whether he would retire, as he had threatened during the tournament.

"I was asked to continue today," he replied. "I just don't know if I'd have the energy to go through it all over again."

But the Argentines did, as the celebrations hit a fever pitch.

At the stadium, thousands shouted to Kempes in unison. "Kempes, no se va," a plea for him to stay. It was a reference to the star's career in a Spanish soccer club which lent him to Argentina for the Cup. There his goal scoring ability has earned him the nickname of "El Matador."

In downtown Buenos Aires, streets were so clogged that ambulances could not move through the throngs of flag-waving fans. Persons who were treated for fainting had to be evacuated by subway.

Happiness is what I sell!

Giants Split With Braves

By BRUCE LOWITT
AP Sports Writer

Not too long ago, the only people really high on the San Francisco Giants were the Giants themselves. The real scramble, everyone else said, would be between the Cincinnati Reds and Los Angeles Dodgers.

Well, here it is, the last week in June, barely two weeks shy of the All-Star break, and the Reds and Dodgers are, indeed, scrambling — to try and avoid falling too far behind the Giants in the National League West.

At the moment the Dodgers, the league's defending champions, are third, 3½ games behind Cincinnati and six behind the Giants. The Reds' 5-4 victory Sunday had something to do with it. Cincinnati is just 2½ back only because the Giants couldn't sweep Atlanta. They won 9-3 in the first game but lost 8-4 in the 11-inning second game.

In the rest of the NL, Philadelphia took a two-game lead over sagging Chicago in the East with a 4-2 victory. Pittsburgh blanked New York 4-0, St. Louis shaded Montreal 7-5 and, in another twinbill, San Diego swept Houston 6-1 and 7-4.

Giants 9-4, Braves 3-6
The Giants' magnificent pitching — mainly reliever Randy Moffitt — fell apart in the 11th inning of the second game. Dale Murphy singled and, after a sacrifice and an intentional walk, Cito Gaston singled, loading the bases. Jerry Royster's two-run single to center, Rowland Office's run-scoring single and Gary Matthews' two-run double sent Moffitt to the showers and the Giants down to defeat.

Phillies 4, Cubs 2
Greg Luzinski's two-run homer in the first inning off sore-armed Chicago pitching ace Rick Reuschel and Larry Christenson's seven-hit hurling gave Philadelphia a four-game sweep of their series with the Cubs.

Pirates 4, Mets 0
Pittsburgh's John Milner, who had a grand-slam Saturday against his former New York teammates, had another homer Sunday, a two-run shot in the seventh inning to support Bert Blyleven's five-hit pitching.

Cardinals 7, Expos 5
Garry Templeton of St. Louis gaveth and then took away. In the top of the seventh inning he turned Warren Cromartie's two-out grounder into an error which enabled Montreal to tie the game 5-5. In the bottom of the inning, though, he followed Steve Swisher's single with a tie-breaking double. Templeton then stole third and continued home on catcher Ed Herrmann's wild throw.

Padres 6-7, Astros 1-4
Dave Winfield and Oscar Gamble teamed to drive in seven runs in San Diego's twinbill sweep. Winfield had a bases-loaded single and Gamble a two-run double to highlight the five-run fourth inning in the opener, more than enough for Bob Shirley, who hurled a four-hitter.

Breaking Things Up
The Giants' Johnny LeMaster rolls into Atlanta shortstop Pat Rockett, breaking up a third inning double play in the second game of a doubleheader Sunday at Candlestick Park. Braves second baseman Jerry Woyster is in the background. San Francisco split the twin-bill with the Braves. (AP Laserphoto)

Red Sox Do It Right And Win; Mariners Do It Wrong And Win

By FRANK BROWN
AP Sports Writer

The Boston Red Sox did everything right at home and won. So what else is new? They've won 14 of their last 16 games, 24 of their last 30, and sport a 33-6 record at cozy Fenway Park.

For contrast, we have the Seattle Mariners, who did almost nothing right on the road Sunday ... and won anyway.

While the Red Sox have been making a runaway of the American League's East Division race, Seattle has been running away with the bottom spot in AL West. But Sunday, the Mariners overcame seven — count 'em, seven — errors in recording a 10-8 victory over the Milwaukee Brewers for their sixth victory in the last seven games.

Shortstop Craig Reynolds made three of the six miscues by the Seattle infield, with one each by second baseman Larry Milbourne, third baseman Bill Stein and first baseman Dan Meyer.

In other AL games, Texas blanked California 7-0, Oakland beat Kansas City 6-3, New York downed Detroit 4-2, Minnesota swept Chicago 8-5 and 9-6, and Toronto topped Cleveland 2-1 before losing the second game 3-2.

"They battled back after seven errors and scored 10 runs," said Brewers left-hander Bill Travers, speaking of Seattle. "We might not have scored without the errors. Give them credit."

Everyone is giving the Red Sox credit for their 50-21 start and their 8½-game lead over the Yankees. Boston's 4-1 victory over the Baltimore Orioles Sunday completed a sweep of the weekend set and marked the 11th triumph of the year for Mike Torrez.

Rangers 7, Angels 0
Mike Hargrove's three-run double and Toby Harrah's tworun single capped a six-run Texas fifth inning and backed a seven-hitter by Doc Medich as the Rangers moved into first place in the AL West.

A's 6, Royals 3
Tony Armas cracked a tiebreaking home run in Oakland's two-run seventh, then added an insurance RBI in the two-run ninth that cemented the A's victory over Kansas City and knocked the Royals from the top spot in the West.

Yankees 4, Tigers 2
Thurman Munson drove in two runs while Graig Nettles and Chris Chambliss had RBI singles in the two-run fifth that broke a tie and led New York past Detroit.

Twins 8-9, White Sox 5-6
Roy Smalley hit a home run and two doubles in Minnesota's opening-game triumph, then added a grand slam homer to help the Twins win the nightcap and complete a double-header sweep of Chicago.

Blue Jays 2-2, Indians 1-3
Roy Howell's RBI single capped a two-run Toronto eighth inning and carried the Blue Jays to victory in the opener. Then Rick Wise helped pitch Cleveland to victory in the nightcap to achieve the distinction of having beaten every team in the major leagues at least once over his career.

Bradley Wins Keystone Open; But Lopez Keeps On Smiling

HERSHEY, Pa. (AP) — Still smiling, rookie Nancy Lopez turned to her caddie on the 18th green and whispered: "At least we got a standing ovation. That makes it worthwhile."

The darling of the Ladies Professional Golf Association tour had just failed in her bid to win an unprecedented six straight tournaments, but "Nancy's Navy," her pastel swarm of followers, was clapping simply because she was there.

Lopez bowed Sunday to the limits of perfection and fatigue, finishing 15 strokes behind Pat Bradley, who fired a 10-under par 206 to win the $50,000 Lady Keystone Open.

"I told her coming in from the green, 'Don't worry about it, this wasn't a tournament, this was a media event,'" said her caddie, Roscoe Jones. "All the fuss over her record was just enough to dull the sharp edge she needed to win. Damn, I've never seen so many reporters. She's mentally exhausted."

Since turning pro last July 29, Lopez has won $156,266, the most ever by a professional golf rookie, man or woman. Her golden swing and her pearly grin have lifted the fortunes of women's golf, and she's paid the price of fame.

"I really feel if Nancy had been rested, it would have been a different story," said Bradley, who picked up $7,500 in prize money for her first LPGA victory of the year and her third ever.

Joked Lopez to reporters after it was over: "I'm going to dye my hair blonde next week so you won't recognize me. No, I'm really glad this week is over."

Lopez, a native of Roswell, N.M., has been a pro less than a year but already is closing in on the $190,000 that Hall of Famers Patty Berg and Louise Suggs each amassed during their entire careers.

Last weekend, Lopez broke the LPGA record for a victory streak, beating out veteran Jane Blalock at Rochester, N.Y., for her fifth straight triumph.

The old mark was held, among others, by Mickey Wright and Kathy Whitworth. Blalock finished second here Sunday, forging a 67-72-71 over the 6,398, par-72 Hershey Country Club West Course.

Bradley Wins Lady Keystone

Pat Bradley raises her hand as she makes a birdie putt on the third hole to go six under and take the lead in the Lady Keystone Open Sunday. Bradley finished ten under par for the 54-hole $50,000 LPGA Tournament, and her victory snapped Nancy Lopez' streak at five wins. (AP Laserphoto)

Three Have Perfect Marks

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — James A. Sellers of St. Petersburg, Fla., won the final race of the Tar Heel Regatta in near-record time Sunday. He was one of three drivers who produced perfect records in the two-day event on Lake Wheeler here.

Sellers, in the 850 cc class, Millard S. Wilson Jr. of Wilmington, Del., in the 145 cubic inch class, and Earle G. Hall of Hampton, Va., in the 2.5 litre class, each captured the four they entered in the American Power Boat Association meet.

Sellers' closest competition was more than 35 seconds behind when he crossed the finish line in the near record run. He averaged 76.271 mph in covering the five-mile, three-lap race in 3 minutes and 32 seconds.

Borg Goes For Third Straight

LONDON (AP) — Bjorn Borg, the ice cool Swede who defends his Wimbledon title for the second time this year, gives the impression of being entirely free from emotion, but he says it's not true.

On court, Borg — who takes on American Vic Amaya in the opening match of the 1978 championships today — gives no clue to his feelings.

Yet Borg, only 22 and aiming to become the first man in 42 years to win three consecutive Wimbledon title, says he is a perfectly normal guy off the court. "Of course I have emotions," he says. "I just don't want to show the other guy that I have them."

More than anything else, Borg wants to retain his Wimbledon title.

"It was the happiest moment of my life when I won for the first time," he said. "When I was a kid, I dreamed of winning Wimbledon. When you win that last point you feel so happy. I want that feeling again this year."

But Borg realizes it will not be easy. "If I can survive the first two rounds I will be more confident," he says.

His main rival, according to all the experts, is American Jimmy Connors, who meets young New Zealander Jeff Simpson today.

The pundits here are finding it harder to look any further than Connors, back in superb form after a recent illness, or Borg, to win the men's singles. Not so in the women's event.

Chris Evert, the No. 1 player in the world, is favored for the title. But she was beaten in a tremendous battle by Martina Navratilova — second seed at Wimbledon — in the final of the Eastbourne international tournament on Saturday. Evert had two match points in the final set before Navratilova won 6-4, 4-6, 9-7.

Defending champion Virginia Wade, who has the benefit of playing in front of her home crowd, cannot be discounted — even though she is out of form at the moment.

Wade was beaten by Australian Wendy Turnbull at Eastbourne and Turnbull must be another player with a chance.

Two players who have had their fair share of titles are Billie Jean King and Australia's Evonne Goolagong.

King, looking for a record 20th title at Wimbledon, could be more likely to achieve that aim in the doubles, but Cawley can never be overlooked.

The women's competition doesn't begin until Tuesday, but some of today's matchups are Brian Gottfried vs. Briton John Lloyd; Guillermo Vilas of Argentina vs. Stan Smith; Roscoe Tanner vs. Ismail el Shatefi of Egypt; Ilie Nastase of Romania vs. John Yuill of South Africa, and Dick Stockton vs. J.M. Marks of Australia.

Sports Briefs

CLEVELAND (AP) — Shortstop Phil Lansford, the Cleveland Indians' top pick in the recent major league baseball amateur draft, will join the club's Class A farm team in Batavia, N.Y., this week.

The signing of Lansford, 18, of Santa Clara, Calif., was announced Sunday.

Lansford, a 6-foot-2, 195-pounder, is the brother of California Angels' rookie third baseman Carney Lansford. The youngster was the 10th pick in the first round of the summer draft.

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Olympic gold medalists Lanny Bassham of San Antonio, Texas, and Lones Wigger of Ft. Benning, Ga., will lead the United States team in the 42nd World Shooting Championships in Seoul, South Korea, in September.

The National Rifle Association announced the names Saturday of the 30-member rifle and pistol team chosen at the U.S. International Championships June 11-23.

TAIPEI (AP) — The South Korean national basketball team scored the only basket in overtime to defeat Whittier College of the United States 86-84 in the William Jones Cup basketball tournament here.

The Koreans now lead the standings with 11 points (5 wins and one loss). But undefeated Brewster Heights, another U.S. team, has a 5-0 record with one game to play.

Brewster Heights upset the Korean team 85-81 on Saturday.

PBS Defers Fall Season Blast

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP)—ABC, NBC and CBS just finished touting their fall wares to 90 TV critics here and will launch their new seasons in September amid heavy, costly ballyhoo. And public TV? It's holding off until Oct. 1. Why? Simple. PBS's new and returning shows would have little chance with viewers against the September banza charge of the networks. "We think we've got a better shot then," says Chloe Aaron, PBS's programs chief. "We won't have to compete with all the promotion dollars the networks will be throwing around in September." PBS's fall lineup has eight new shows, two on film, another critiques of film and the rest ranging from religion to a single news topic studied each week in economic terms.

Ms. Aaron now is drafting a proposed national program schedule for the fall. It will be made public in Dallas this week at the annual meeting of those running the nation's 200 PBS stations.

Now, NBC, under its new boss, programs whiz Fred Silverman, already has revamped its announced fall lineup, postponing "Coastocast" and moving five shows to new times. CBS and ABC are expected to make similar shifts before the new season begins.

Is there any evidence this frantic schedule-shifting before and during each season has so fuddled and disgusted viewers they are increasingly trying public TV, if only in frustration?

"It's the kind of evidence I'd love to have, but I don't," Ms. Aaron sighed. "We're kind of going on hunches."

"But I think by the time the networks have kicked off their new seasons, with all that press attention to what's new, much of the stuff already will be changed."

"And there'll be lots of stories about why various shows were yanked. We're going to benefit from that come Oct. 1." She also feels gripes about the light, sexually oriented content of many network entertainments will help public TV gain more viewers.

"I think probably one of the things working to our advantage right now is that critics and journalists are so dissatisfied with commercial television, as well as public interest groups..." she said.

"That kind of reaction seems to be becoming a public reac-

Small City Orchestras In Rural Culture Boom

By MICHAEL WAGNER
Associated Press Writer
CHICAGO (AP)—They may not have the reputations, resources and repertoires of big-city symphonies, but orchestras in Walla Walla, Wash., Keeweenaw, Mich., and 600 other smaller cities are leading a rural cultural boom, two music experts say.

"No longer are the arts alive only in big cities," says Ralph Black, executive director of the American Symphony Orchestra League. "Americans everywhere are realizing there's more to life than refrigerators, cars and poverty."

"Symphonies have come down off their snobbish mount."

Black called the Chicago Symphony's director, Sir Georg Solti, "a modern folk hero—he's on the cover of the damn phone book! And if Arthur Fiedler were to run for emperor today, he'd probably win by a landslide. People know and trust him because he feeds their hearts."

He said a new wave of enthusiasts is keeping the Walla Walla, Wash.-sized symphonies from suffering Chicago Symphony-sized financial worries. More than half the symphonies with less than 100 musicians are now out of the red. Ten years ago, more than half had deficits.

The symphony serving flood-ravaged Johnstown, Pa., for example, ended its 1977 season with a $132 surplus and $38,000 increase in its budget. A June flash flood there killed 77 people and left three missing.

"After the flood, we considered canceling the whole season because it might seem morally wrong," said manager Patricia Minot. "But it was morally right—and by golly, we had quite a symphony!"

Partly responsible for the success of the Johnstown and other symphonies with fewer than 100 members is the financial support given them by local businesses. Symphony managers say businesses contribute for a good reason—to keep residents from leaving town.

American Symphony Orchestra League spokesman Zane Knauss says symphony leaders "finally realized that they cannot hold themselves above the universe. They're learning they must appeal to a much broader-based audience or they're not going to survive."

He claims a popular marketing strategy including T-shirts, TV commercials and bumper stickers is responsible for the boom.

"Being popular doesn't demean the symphony," he said. "Many have hired advertising agencies. I've even seen pins nominating the Chicago Symphony for president."

Studying Changes In School Lunches

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP)—Many changes could be in store in the daily fare fed to North Carolina students. Or so the director of food services for the state predicts. And one of those changes might be the elimination of desserts from school lunches.

Ralph Eaton told the N.C. School Food Service Association meeting in Charlotte last week that providing 850,000 school lunches can be a tricky business. Not only do the tastes of the students have to be satisfied but the parents, schools and the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

As for desserts, Eaton said, "We're emphasizing the fruit pies and fresh fruits in the line every day. But it would break my heart to see the day when we eliminate all desserts."

The required basic lunch menu includes two ounces of animal protein, two servings of vegetable or fruit, bread and milk.

terias have recently installed salad bars "because salad bars are the 'in' thing."

Fast foods are also having an impact on what is offered to students for lunch. "I think we're going to be seeing a movement to a fast-food line," he said. "Eating habits have changed. They (students) are more interested in fast-food items—hamburgers, french fries... It concerns me greatly."

In an effort to change food habits, the N.C. School Food Service will get $14 million over two years for a statewide nutrition education program.

"Down the road, if nutrition education continues to get the necessary emphasis and the dollars, we will see a change back to the basics in nutrition," Eaton said.

Eaton said he foresees the need for a university school lunch program in the next few years. Under such a program, no child will pay directly for his meal. All the meals will be paid for by federal taxes.

GOREN BRIDGE

BY CHARLES H. GOREN AND OMAR SHARIF © 1978 by Chicago Tribune

Q.1—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠AJ6 ♥3 ♦J976 ♣AQJ82
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♠ Pass 1 ♠ Pass
2 ♠ Pass 2 NT Pass
? What action do you take?
A.—Your singleton heart weighs heavily against a no trump contract. But you cannot take a preference to spades with only three-card support, for partner probably has only a four-card suit. You can get both these messages across to partner by rebidding three clubs.

Q.2—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AJ10763 ♥Q95 ♦KJ6 ♣5
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♥ Pass 1 ♠ Pass
2 ♥ Pass 3 ♠ Pass
3 NT Pass ?
What action do you take?
A.—Since partner has bid three no trump under pressure, his club stopper might not be all that secure. Your hand is suit-oriented, so we suggest you show your heart support by bidding four hearts. If partner has only a four-card suit, he can always return to spades—he knows you cannot have more than three hearts on this sequence. Even five diamonds might be preferable to three no trump.

Q.3—As South, vulnerable with 60 on score, you hold:
♠AQJ ♥QJ1087 ♦K10752
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♥ Pass 1 ♠ 2 ♦ ?
What do you bid now?
A.—With such good support for partner's suit and the 60 partial, it seems natural to raise to two spades. However, that action might prove shortsighted. At this vulnerability you should anticipate further bidding from your opponents. Therefore, it is wiser to bid three clubs now, intending to support partner's spades next if the opposition gives you a convenient opportunity. That should enable you to get your best spot.

Q.4—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠1094 ♥Q852 ♦Q7 ♣KJ92
The bidding has proceeded:
West North East South
1 ♠ Dble. Pass 2 ♥ 2 ♠ Pass Pass ?
What action do you take?
A.—In support of a vulnerable takeout double, you have quite a fair hand. Therefore, we would be reluctant to sell out to two spades. The normal action is to show your second suit—bid three clubs.

Q.5—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠K93 ♥K6 ♦J106 ♣KQ872
The bidding has proceeded:

What do you bid now?
A.—Your most probable game is in no trump, but if you jump raise to three clubs, either partner could pass, in which case your side could miss a game, or he might declare three no trump, and the lead would come through your kings. A more sensible response is two no trump, to protect your holding from a damaging lead if you end up playing a no trump contract.

Q.6—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♥983 ♦K872 ♣KQ10953
Partner opens the bidding with two no trump. What do you respond?
A.—This hand could produce a grand slam in clubs, even diamonds, yet there are combinations that partner might hold where even game would not be a certainty. Since there is no scientific way to discover exactly what partner holds, we would be inclined to take our shots at six clubs, and we would bid it right away to give away the least information.

Q.7—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠J8 ♥AJ5 ♦J1073 ♣KJ105
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♠ Pass 2 ♠ Pass
2 ♥ Pass 2 NT Pass
3 ♥ Pass ?
What do you bid now?
A.—Partner's auction has shown a minimum opening bid with six spades and four hearts. Therefore, you should give preference to three spades even though your heart support is better. There is no need for more drastic action—you have already made two forward-going bids.

Q.8—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠KJ954 ♥A83 ♦752 ♣93
Partner opens the bidding with one heart. What do you respond?
A.—Two hearts. In support of hearts your hand is worth 10 points—the maximum for a single raise. If you respond one spade, you would be faced with a difficult rebid over partner's next action. A preference to hearts would be an underbid, while a jump preference would be a decided stretch.

Find Fossil Of 'Oldest' Fish

WASHINGTON (AP)—He's called Anatepis and he existed more than 500 million years ago. The U.S. Geological Survey scientist who discovered his fossil remains says he's probably the world's oldest fish, about 40 million years older than his nearest rival. The remains were discovered last summer as part of a Geological Survey probe in Crook County, Wyo. Dr. John E. Pepetski, a survey paleontologist, said the fish probably was one to three inches long and lacked movable jaws.

Fewer Rule Out War Between Hanoi, China

By ALAN DAWSON
 BANGKOK, Thailand (UPI) — Until the Communist victory in South Vietnam in 1975, China and North Vietnam were "as close as lips and teeth."
 Now, a scant three years later, lips and teeth are bared in undisguised snarls. And Vietnam and China are closer to war than at any time in the last 200 years.
 For the moment, the former allies are content to score their subtle and unsubtle propaganda points. But the memories of 2,000 years of recorded warfare lies just beneath the surface.
 Less than three months ago, already deteriorating relations went from unsatisfactory to troublesome. The dispute threatens peace in the area at least. At worst, there could be nuclear war.
 For at its root, the dispute also involves the Sino-Soviet split, the most dangerous continuing battle in the world.
 Relations between Peking and Hanoi have been touchy ever since the Communist victory in Vietnam three years ago, but it is only since April it has become public and has grown to its present dimensions.
 One thing is clear through all the smokescreens of propaganda from both capitals: Events have been organized by one government or both.
 Early this year, at about the time Vietnam began communizing southern businesses by seizing private shops, tens of thousands of ethnic Chinese residents — mostly from North Vietnam — began fleeing to China.
 The vast bulk of those leaving were farmers, fishermen and poor workers, according to diplomatic reports. Chinese propaganda, however, has directly linked the economic crackdown in Saigon to the exodus.

 Slow to react to the Chinese charges, Hanoi first denied them, then blamed "bad elements" and rumor-mongers for causing the mass flight. But Vietnam was just warming up.
 Since then Vietnam has charged that the Chinese Embassy in Hanoi directed the exodus; ordered Cambodian attacks against Vietnam; and, in the latest charge, sought hegemony in Southeast Asia.
 Chinese statements have accused Vietnam of kowtowing to the Soviet Union. In background briefings for reporters, Chinese officials have described Vietnam as "the Cuba of Southeast Asia."
 China ordered boats to Haiphong and Saigon, and officials of the two nations have been debating who will leave on the boats since the beginning of last week.
 Vietnam has said the first to go should be 20,000 ethnic Chinese who fled Cambodia in 1975 and who have had severe problems assimilating in Vietnam.
 China, for the obvious reason that accepting those persons would implicitly criticize Phnom Penh, has refused.
 Instead, Chinese officials in Hanoi have argued the Saigon evacuation list should be drawn from ethnic Chinese "victimized" by the March 23 seizure of private shops.
 A sticking point here is that Vietnam claims most ethnic Chinese in Saigon are Vietnamese citizens. China has rejected this, pointing out that Vietnamese citizenship was forced on Saigonese in 1956 by the anti-Communist government of Ngo Dinh Diem.

 Most Indochina watchers believe the two sides will move closer to breaking relations.
 Vietnamese consulates in China have been closed, and the Chinese ambassador to Hanoi is receiving "treatment" for what most believe is a "diplomatic" illness back in Peking.
 Some believe it will go further.
 "Vietnam does not fear China militarily," said one analyst. The two countries last fought in the mid-18th century, not counting the 24-hour battle between Peking and Saigon in 1974 for the Paracel Island group in the South China Sea.
 The analyst believes the public split between Peking and Hanoi could remove the political fetters that had restrained Vietnam somewhat.
 For example, after identifying Phnom Penh with Peking, as Hanoi now is attempting to do, Vietnam might support an attack by Vietnam-trained Cambodian rebels to take over Cambodia.
 And careful diplomats have not ruled out the possibilities of major war, perhaps arising from an attack into Cambodia or a local battle involving the Chinese ships or cross-border evacuation.
 "If Russia backed Vietnam against China and Cambodia, the possibilities are rather frightening," said a diplomatic source.
 Few are yet predicting war. But the China-Vietnam dispute is tense enough that even fewer are ruling it out.

High Court Shook News Media

By IRA R. ALLEN
 WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Supreme Court's "Stanford decision" stirred a panic in the journalism profession and is prompting a flurry of activity by a Senate subcommittee.
 The court ruled in a case involving the Stanford University student newspaper that the Constitution does not forbid police searches of newsrooms — or private homes — if a judge issues a warrant seeking information on criminal activity, even though the subject of the search is not a suspect.

Most news people fear that raiding police could rummage their files for information irrelevant to the case at hand and, worse, dig up the names of confidential sources. Small town newspapers could be particularly vulnerable targets.
 "Think what that easily issued warrant means to officials who might want to harass and disrupt a news operation." CBS news director William Small asked the Senate judiciary subcommittee that began an assault on the court ruling last week. "They could really be the bull in the china shop."
 The panel, headed by Sen. Birch Bayh, D-Ind., is considering several bills to protect the news media by requiring state and federal officials to get a subpoena for notes, tape or film rather than a search warrant.
 The difference is that lawyers can fight a subpoena before it is ordered, but warrants can be issued without hearings upon the application of a local police chief to a local judge.
 "The chief, after all, does have to obtain a warrant. True enough," testified Grant Dillman, vice president and Washington manager of UPI. "But often there is an empathy between the local courts and local law enforcement officials that would make such approval almost automatic."

 As a result, he said, the decision would be felt most by the journalist in smaller cities, because without the high-priced legal talent available and the instant access to influential public opinion commanded by a big outfit such as the New York Times or CBS, "his temptation may well be to cave before the police chief rather than risk an expensive and time consuming confrontation."
 "The existence of this power is inherently abusive and could produce 'open season' on journalists in many communities," said Paul Davis, vice president of the Radio Television News Directors Association. "I'm convinced we will see more newsroom search warrants in the near future and that — sometimes unintentionally, sometimes intentionally — abuse will come as quickly."

 The Justice Department's arguments before the Supreme Court were in support of its eventual decision, but Assistant Attorney General Philip Heymann told the Bayh subcommittee the department is considering new guidelines to make sure the power is not abused.
 "What we are trying to do is quiet the fears (of journalists) because in this case the fears are as important as reality." The reality, he said, is that there has never been a case of a federal search of a newsroom and the Justice Department has no plans to change that policy.

 Under the current system, he said, when the Justice Department wants information from a journalist, prosecutors must first try to get the data from other sources. If that fails, it must negotiate with the reporter for voluntary compliance, and finally, any subpoena must be approved by the attorney general.
 "Fine," said Small. "But will future attorneys general be as respectful of the First Amendment? And what about the 50 states and all the counties, cities and towns and villages that don't expect the Justice Department to determine their actions?"

Mows Lawn Easier Way

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (UPI) — George Stoltz hates to mow his yard, so he ties his lawn mower to a gadget he made from a stove pipe and the machine winds in circles, cutting the grass while he stays cool inside his home.
 The lawn mower cuts most of his sloping yard — making increasingly smaller circles as the rope wraps itself around the cylinder. He uses his invention in two spots in his tree-less front yard and one in the back.
 "I've only got one tree in the back. Trees would mess up the idea," he said.
 Stoltz says laziness inspired him to invent the device.
 "I hate to push a lawn mower, so I came up with this idea. It's easy to make the thing, it takes hardware pieces," he said.
 Stoltz, who has perfected his lawn-mowing technique during the past 10 years, said he uses a second mower to cut the corners and trim under the shrubs.

Speaking of Your Health...

Lester L. Coleman, M.D.

Obesity: An Age-old Plague

I know of no one who is not battling the problem of overweight. I've often wondered why we can't be like our grandparents and great-grandparents. They were able to enjoy rich foods without worrying about it. — Mrs. E.E.R., R.I.

Dear Mrs. R.:
 They probably didn't worry about it because they didn't know that obesity was a severe nutritional problem that interferes with optimal health and decreases longevity. Osteoarthritis, high blood pressure, gallbladder disease, heart and vascular disorders, arteriosclerosis, diabetes and strokes are all related, directly or indirectly, to obesity. And these represent a fraction of the interplay between all the organs of the body as they are altered by excessive weight.
 No, obesity is not a disease of modern civilization. But its recognition as a disease reflects the wisdom of modern civilization.
 The Biblical texts of Leviticus and Deuteronomy contain definite references to the causes of overweight. In the Scriptures it states, "He begins by riding high, then he overeats sweets and fats. To this is added sheep's milk, fat lamb's meat, juicy wheat kernels, kidney fat and delicious wine from the juice of blood-red grapes."
 More than 3000 years ago, three basic forms of obesity were described. The first noted, "His skin became greasy and waxy and he became fat all over." The second stated, "He became blown up, pasty and swollen." The third added, "He became covered with overhanging folds of fat."
 Finally, it was astutely stated in the Bible that "He became disgusting before the Lord."
 This is a pretty good profile of all the physical, chemical, nutritional, emotional, social, metabolic and psychological implications of overweight and obesity. Incidentally, there is a difference between the two. Overweight is excessive, burdensome weight. Obesity suggests corpulence and the accumulation of excessive fat.
 Perhaps years ago, there were no socially stigmatizing effects of obesity. Today, because of our awareness of good health standards, everyone wants to maintain an ideal weight. When your great-grandmother downed a portion of delicious homemade banana-cream pie and a cup of hot chocolate topped with whipped cream, she had no qualms about it. It never occurred to her that those extra calories were contributing to her high blood pressure.
 Today we know better. And this accounts for the fact that everyone you know is battling the problem of overweight. It's a battle worth winning, no matter how hard the struggle. Your very life may be at stake.
SPEAKING OF YOUR HEALTH... Emotional exhaustion must always be considered in the understanding of body fatigue.

Caviar From California

By DICK WEST
WASHINGTON (UPI) — There at the table, before reporters, photographers and everybody, stood Sen. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina scoffing down generous dollops of genuine California caviar. How times have changed!

It wasn't so long ago that the roe of sturgeon could be political poison to Southern congressmen. The folks down home were distressed if the good ol' boys they sent to Congress started putting on airs. And consuming caviar was as much a symptom of "Potomac fever" as a kidney-shaped swimming pool was a symbol of "going Hollywood."

Dixie delegations were mindful of what happened to Sen. Cameron Morrison of North Carolina in the 1932 campaign. Robert Rice Reynolds, Morrison's opponent in that depression-year election, went about the state telling voters the senator was "up there in Washington having red Rooshian caviar and you can't even afford catfish."

After Reynolds' victory, southern lawgivers who fancied the delicacy generally became closet caviar connoisseurs. Senators from certain other parts of the country had to be circumspect, too, but for those from "Bible Belt" areas where prohibition was still in force, caviar could be a double whammy.

Thurmond, chatting with reporters over a shimmering mound of black, BB-sized, $3.75-an-ounce sturgeon roe, explained why.

"A lot of people used to think that caviar was some kind of drink," he said.

Changing cultural attitudes aside, there was another reason Southern senators would feel safe partaking of this caviar in public.

Not only was indulging in salted fish eggs formerly regarded as some kind of foreign debauchery. Worse yet, most of the stuff came from Russia, which automatically made it suspect.

But the fresh roe in question came from the ovaries of 100 percent America sturgeon.

California, the wonderful state that brought you Proposition 13, is now in the early throes of bringing you domestic caviar.

Through a program of aquaculture, popularly known as fish farming, the University of California at Davis is striving to rehabilitate the white sturgeon that once abounded in West Coast rivers, but, like other species elsewhere in the world, has fallen on hard times.

In the process, Sergei Doroshov, a Russian emigre who directs the research, hopes to establish caviar as a major new industry.

The university is seeking a $400,000 federal research grant. And toward that end, California's senators sponsored a champagne-and-caviar reception in the Capitol to introduce their colleagues to the product.

Although some California caviar is available for about $60 a pound, the crunchy little globules that Thurmond and others were scooping up on toast points is not yet produced in commercial quantities.

If and when they are abundant, the worldwide shortage of naturally occurring caviar could make the aquaculture harvest a bonanza.

Business Notes

PROMOTION NOTED

Greenville native Steve L. Wilkerson has been elected senior vice president of Carolina & Southern Processing Corp. of Gastonia, the firm announced.

Son of Mr. and Mrs. S. L. Wilkerson, he is a graduate of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill and has been associated with Carolina & Southern since 1965. He resides in Gastonia.

Carolina & Southern is a subsidiary of Kane-Miller Corp. of Tarrytown, N.Y.

BW APPOINTMENTS

Burroughs Wellcome announced several appointments at the Greenville facility.

They included: Howard E. Lee to technical area supervisor in the Chemical Manufacturing Division; John M. Johnson to section head in the Bacteriological Control Laboratory; Mrs. Annie Smith to supervisor in the General Packaging Division;

Charles E. Ibele to section head of Automation and Minicomputer Software Support; David N. Rusch to Development Scientist III in the Analytical Development Laboratory; Mrs. Carole H. Allen to benefits administrator here;

Michael Baer to validation manager, a newly-created position; David J. Fraade as technical assistant to the division head of Computer Services; Jerry Whitehurst to head of the Data Processing Operations Department; and William H. Underwood to section head in the Bacteriological Control Laboratory.

MANAGER SEMINAR

Henry Groome Jr., Greenville unit manager for the Ordinary Division of Pilot Life Insurance Co., completed a three-day unit manager seminar conducted at Pilot's Greensboro home office. Groome participated in work sessions dealing with underwriting, pensions and business insurance.

EXPANSION NOTED

A construction project designed to expand trunk cable pairs between the Fifth Street and Hooker Road central offices here will begin soon, according to Don Collier, district commercial manager for Carolina Telephone.

Collier, who noted that the expansion will cost some $37,634, said that the proposed cable facilities will allow an additional 100 trunk pairs to be established for growth requirements. The proposed cables are sized to meet the forecasted ten year requirements for their respective serving areas, he added.

DIRECTORS REELECTED

All 11 directors previously serving on the board of Collins & Aikman were reelected at the company's annual meeting to serve for the ensuing year.

Stockholders also approved amendments to the corporation's salaried employees' pension plan and the hourly employees' pension plan providing increased benefits under both plans. Collins & Aikman operates a plant in Farmville.

CREDIT ROSE

According to weekly figures released by the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond, bank credit at 27 large commercial banks in the Fifth Federal Reserve District rose $125,157,000 in the week ended June 14, raising bank credit outstanding to a level of $24,462,876,000.

Net loans, adjusted — total loans exclusive of loans to other banks and loan valuation reserves — increased $90,470,000, while total investments increased $34,687,000.

Included in the district are North Carolina, South Carolina, Virginia, Maryland, the District of Columbia, and most of West Virginia.

DAIRYMEN ELECTED

The East Carolina Milk Producers Association announced the election of three Pitt County dairymen to top posts in the association.

Charles McLawhorn of Winterville was elected president, it was announced, while Roscoe Barnhill of Rt. 5, Greenville was elected vice president and Johnny Radford of Greenville elected secretary-treasurer.

The association, it was noted, is a group of independent dairy farmers in eastern North Carolina providing Carolina Dairies Corp. 100 percent of its fluid milk requirement.

PAST PRESIDENT

J. T. Williams, president of Azalea Mobile Homes of Greenville, became immediate past president of the North Carolina Manufactured Housing Institute.

Williams election took place during the recent 11th annual convention of the Institute.

Railroad Sets Coal Records

NORFOLK (AP) — Norfolk and Western Railway is piling up records as well as coal.

The company announced it has topped Hampton Roads and company records for loading a vessel.

The M.V. Kildare sailed for Japan Tuesday after N&W employees loaded 124,881 net tons of coal. That figure tops the previous Hampton Roads record for loading coal on one ship — set six weeks ago by the Chessie System — by 1,671 tons.

N&W workers unloaded the 1,437 coal cars required to fill the vessel in less than 56 hours.

The railroad also topped the Hampton Roads harbor record for loading a single ship and a company tonnage record set a little over two years ago.

DEATH PENALTY

AMMAN, Jordan (AP) — King Hussein's government has approved a death sentence in absentia against two West Bank Arabs who sold real estate there to Israelis.

Old Foes In Philippines

GLADSTONE, Ore. (UPI) — Zoeth Skinner and his houseguest, Ryujo Kotaki, are spending a lot of time going over maps of World War II battlefields in the Philippines and comparing dates.

Thirty-six years ago they were viewing the Tarlac battlefield from opposite sides.

Skinner, 55, a gunsmith, was a private in an American Army tank unit. Kotaki, now a Buddhist priest, was a captain in the Japanese Army.

Skinner was captured when Bataan fell to the Japanese in 1942 and spent three years as a prisoner of war. "I came out of prison with a good deal of hatred," he said, "but I came to terms with those feelings. For 20 years I wouldn't even own a Japanese-made fishing reel, but I have one today."

Skinner spent 14 years in the military service and said, "A professional soldier comes to see the whole thing as something like a ball game."

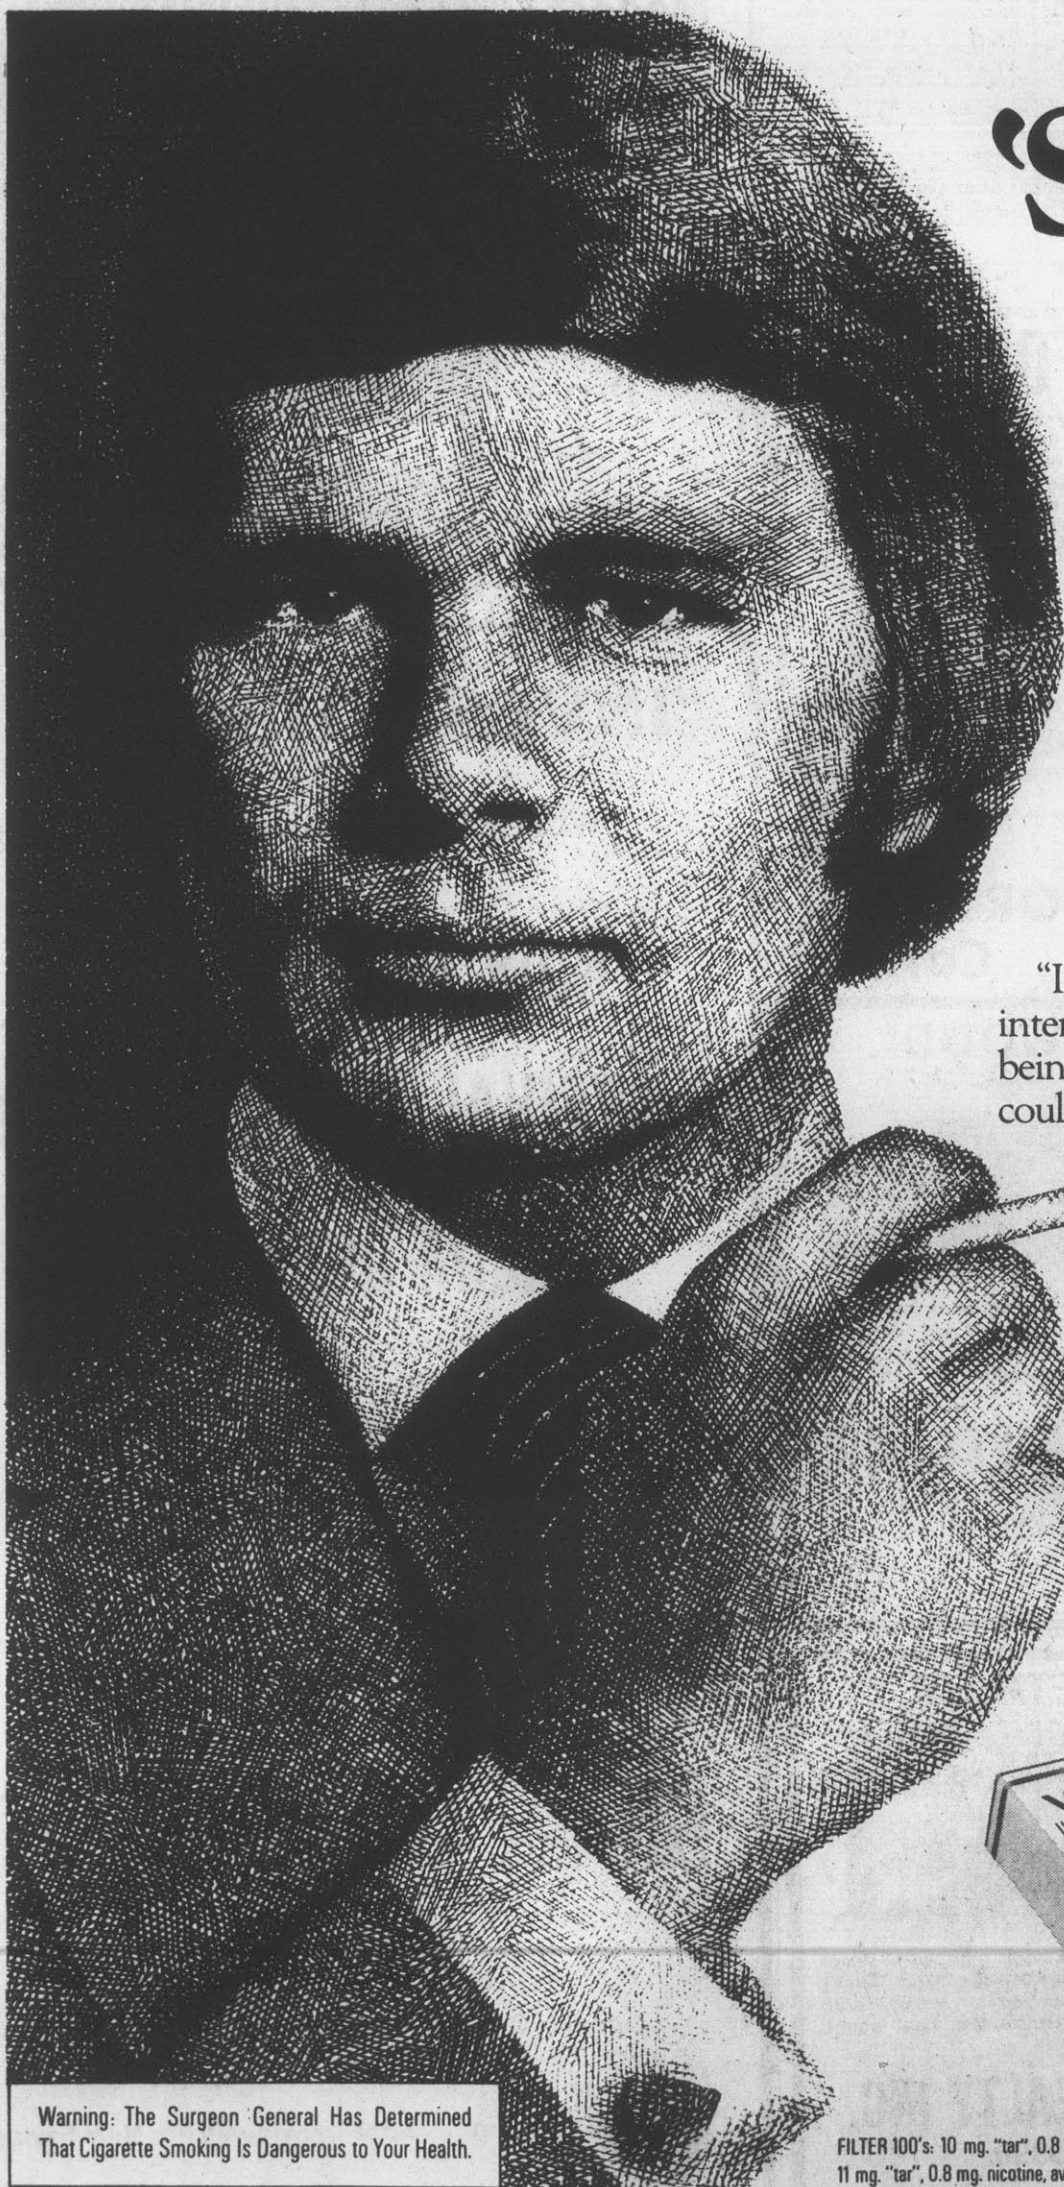

Kotaki and Skinner met on a personal basis for the first time in 1976 when Skinner went to visit the Philippine Army for "nostalgic reasons" and Kotaki was with a group searching for the bones of Japanese war dead.

Skinner said the Filipinos were hesitant when he said he wanted to meet the former Japanese soldier. "They were afraid we would have a confrontation but there were no problems when we met," he said. "I asked him if he remembered the American tanks at Tarlac and he recalled the battle immediately."

Kotaki stopped in the Portland suburb of Gladstone to visit Skinner on his way home from Brazil, where he took part in the celebration of the 70th anniversary of Japanese immigration to that country.

"Ryujo and I are friends now," Skinner said.

ALLOWED TO GO HOME
BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — Former President Isabel Peron and about 35 members of her administration will be returned to their homes under house arrest by July 15, the newspaper La Nacion reports.

'Smoking. Here's what I'm doing about it'

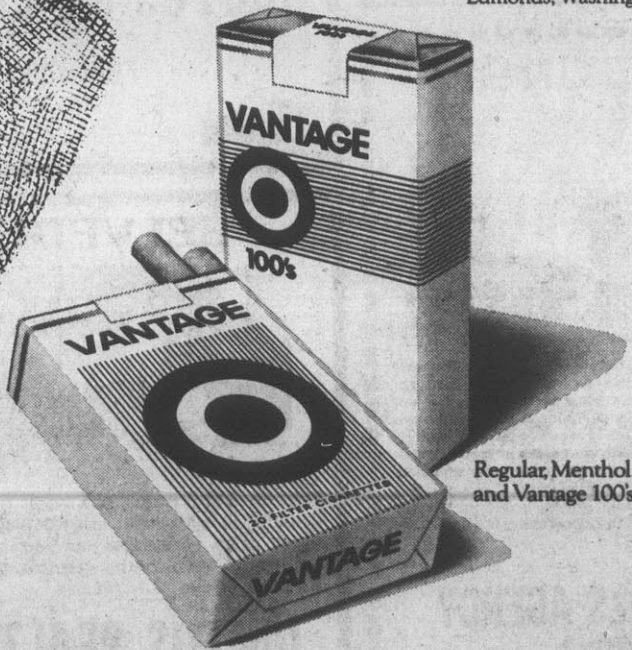

"I like the taste of a good cigarette and I don't intend to settle for less. But I'm aware of what's being said. So I began searching for a cigarette that could give me the taste I like with less tar.

"I found Vantage. A cigarette that really gives a lot of taste.

And with much less tar than what I'd smoked before.

"What am I doing about smoking? I'm smoking Vantage."
