Bakke Ruling Poses An Uncertain Future

By RICHARD CARELLI
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Allan Bakke's long wait is over, but what the future holds for U.S. race relations is far less certain in the wake of his momentous Supreme Court victory.

The quiet California civil engineer, described by his lawyer as "a private man who felt he had been dealt with unfairly," will enter medical school in September — four years after he charged he was denied admission because he is white.

The only comment from Bakke, who works at a space agency research center at Mountainview, Calif. was that "We are pleased with this decision."

A deeply divided Supreme Court ordered the University of California on Wednesday to dismantle a special admissions program at its medical school at Davis and to admit Bakke, who at 38 may be older than some of his future instructors.

In a 5-4 decision, the court ruled that the school went too far in considering race when it set aside for blacks, Hispanics and Asian-Americans 16 of the 100 seats in its entering classes the two years Bakke was refused admission. He was turned down in 1973 and rejected again in 1974.

By the same 5-4 vote, however, the court said some more limited consideration of race in college admissions policies may be tolerated under the Civil Rights Act of 1964.

Justice Lewis F. Powell Jr., who wrote the main opinion straddling both views, provided the crucial fifth vote for each of two distinct court factions.

The message appears clear for all colleges and other institutions receiving federal money and therefore falling under anti-discrimination provisions of the 1964 law: affirmative action programs aimed at helping minorities may not include fixed racial quotas or rigid racial goals.

What the court's 154 pages of six separate opinions mean for the hundreds of affirmative action programs now in effect in government and private business produces no such clarity.

Initial reaction by government officials responsible for enforcing those programs suggests that nothing will change. "The status quo was maintained in private employment cases," said Attorney General Griffin B. Bell.

That view was echoed by Eleanor Holmes Norton, chairman of the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission, which handles 80,000 job discrimination complaints annually in enforcing compliance in private enterprise. She said the court "clearly believes that race-conscious remedies are necessary and constitutional."

Dozens of "reverse discrimination" lawsuits — filed by whites who claim they are victims of illegal or unconstitutional racial bias — already are in the legal pipeline and may provide some answers. That could take years, however.

Lawyers for those complainants and attorneys for the minority civil rights movement will pore over the Bakke decision in search of clues to the high court's view of other forms of affirmative action.

Wednesday's splintered ruling will make the task an arduous one. The Bakke decision, in terms of complexity and sheer verbiage, provides a stark contrast to the court's 1954 decision which changed the course of American life by outlawing racial segregation in public schools.

That ruling was announced in a single, unanimous opinion of 11 pages.

But there was no question, as Justice Thurgood Marshall observed, that Wednesday's Supreme Court decision would rank with only two or three in the past century in their profound impact on the course of the country's troubled race relations. In an impassioned dissent, the court's only black justice expressed concern that the court was turning away from

City-County Planning-Zoning Commission Again Fell Short

By KEITH MILLS
Reflector Staff Writer

For the second month in succession the Joint Planning and Zoning Commission failed to gain a quorum for its regular monthly meeting last night, while the Greenville commission met as expected and approved three zoning requests, five final plats and a preliminary plat.

Expressing frustration with the city-county board's recent inactivity, Mrs. Ruth Trevathan, a board member, suggested that the county commissioners should consider appointing members willing to participate in the board's activities. Other members, who were present for the city meeting, expressed concern also, citing "vacations" as the malefactor.

In lieu of the issue, a special call session of the joint board was announced for Wednesday, July 5, at 8 p.m. to consider business originally scheduled for last night's agenda.

Meeting in a relatively short session, the city members considered two rezoning requests simultaneously because of their proximity to each other and, in separate votes, recommended approval by the city council, waiving the 30-day waiting period.

The first request recommended for approval was from Wilson Rhodes and Beacon Piano Company seeking a change from R-6 to Highway Commercial for 2.5 acres located on the east side of Hooker Road, just south of Cambridge Subdivision.

The second item involved a request from Woodrow Haddock for a change from R-6 to O&I and Highway Commercial for 34 acres located on the east side of Hooker Road, also just south of Cambridge Subdivision.

In a third rezoning request, the board recommended for approval a change from CS to RA-20 for 7.87 acres, owned by Grover C. Maxwell, adjacent to the west of West End Shopping Center. The 30-day waiting period was waived.

Final plats recommended for approval include:

— Whichport Development, Section I, located south of Greenville Boulevard and east of Nichols Shopping Center.

— West End Shopping Center property located in the western section of West End Shopping Center.

— Twin Oaks Development, Section III, located northeast of Fourteenth Street and south of Reedy Branch.

— Bryton Hill Subdivision located west of River Bluff Road and north of N.C. 33. The preliminary plat of this subdivision was considered during last month's meeting under the name of Gully Field, which met with disapproval from board members.

— David Evans property located in the southeast

Senate Asks For Diplomatic Break With Castro Cuba

By RICHARD PYLE
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate is asking President Carter to break diplomatic relations with Cuba while at the same time saving him from a severe new restriction in making foreign policy decisions.

In dragged-out debate Wednesday over a $1.9 billion foreign operations authorization bill, the lawmakers voted to urge a severing of the low-level ties established with Havana last year until Cuba removes its military forces from Africa.

Tacked onto the bill as an amendment by Sen. Dewey Bartlett, R-Okla., the demand was virtually identical to a pending House-Senate resolution that condemns Fidel Castro's government for its Soviet-supported military actions in several African countries.

Over the objections of Sen. George McGovern, D-S.D., who called the move "cutting off our nose to spite our face," the Senate first turned back a move to kill the proposal, then approved it by a surprising 53 to 29 margin that crossed party lines.

The measure is not binding on Carter but merely expresses the "sense of Congress" that "all economic and diplomatic relations" with Cuba be ended. Even so, said one Senate aide, "it clearly shows the feelings in Congress about Cuban actions in Africa."

The United States and Cuba agreed to set up official "interest sections" in each other's capitals last September, and McGovern said that even with its limited size and mission, the U.S. presence had paid dividends for U.S. citizens and their families in Cuba, while serving as a useful source of information.

The bill finally passed on a voice vote and went to conference for resolution of differences with the House-passed version.

Of greatest concern to the White House was a provision under which the Senate would have reserved for itself a right to decide whether any arms sale or other foreign agreement made by the president was a treaty.

That restriction would have given the Senate a stronger voice in foreign policy because under the Constitution, treaties are considered by that body alone and require a two-thirds vote for passage.

Other agreements need only majority approval of both houses. Some lawmakers contend that presidents in recent years have made improper use of this method to circumvent the Senate treaty role.

On the other hand, Uarther has complained of being hobbled by Congressional restrictions on executive branch prerogatives in foreign affairs, such as arms aid.

The treaty proviso threatened still further erosion of those powers and administration officials supported an amendment to eliminate it from the bill.

When it appeared likely to be approved, sponsors of the proposed restriction agreed to what Sen. John Glenn, D-Ohio, called a "fallback, fallback, fallback" compromise, asserting only that the White House must consult in advance with senators on whether an agreement would be submitted as a treaty. The compromise passed by voice vote.

Also added was an amendment that bars establishment of diplomatic relations with Angola while Cuban troops are there, unless the president certified to Congress that it was in the national interest.

Weyerhaeuser Grant Is Presented Med School

ECU News Bureau

Keith L. Lamb, Vice President of the North Carolina Region of the Weyerhaeuser Co., today presented a grant of $110,000 from the Weyerhaeuser Foundation to retiring East Carolina University Chancellor Leo W. Jenkins and to senior officials of the School of Medicine.

The grant of the Medical Foundation of East Carolina University will be designated the "Leo W. Jenkins Start-Up Fund" and according to Lamb, is designed to assist the School of Medicine in recruitment of full-time clinical faculty to provide highly specialized medical skills and consultative services to areas of eastern North Carolina now lacking these resources.

"The Weyerhaeuser Company has long supported the establishment of the ECU School of Medicine. We view the school as a tremendous asset to our region and to the state and want to help in every way possible," Lamb said.

Dr. William E. Laupus, Dean of the School of Medicine, and Dr. Edwin W. Monroe, Vice Chancellor for Health Affairs and president of the Medical Foundation, expressed their gratitude for the Weyerhaeuser gift. "This highly significant expression of support for the School of Medicine in honor of Chancellor Jenkins is warmly appreciated," Dr. Monroe said. "We look forward to continued partnership efforts with Mr. Lamb and the Weyerhaeuser Company."

Laupus stated that the new Start-Up Fund will help greatly as a catalyst to the school's efforts to extend its clinical faculty's expertise to the eastern region, and to assist in recruiting highly qualified new faculty.

Accepting the Weyerhaeuser grant, Chancellor Jenkins expressed his appreciation.

"The Weyerhaeuser Company is well-known throughout our area for its meaningful contributions to education and human services in our communities. It has been a great friend to East Carolina University. This evidence of support for our medical school is the first of many sure to follow in the immediate future. I am honored to have this pioneer fund established in my name," Jenkins said.

Jenkins is retiring on June 30 after a total of 31 years of University service.

Tereasa Windham Weds

Miss Tereasa Ann Windham and David George Manning were united in marriage Sunday at 4 p.m. in a garden ceremony at the home of Mrs. Katie Windham, great-grandmother of the bride. The Rev. Ted Reynolds performed the double-ring ceremony.

Mr. and Mrs. David Ray Windham of Rt. 6, Greenville, are the parents of the bride. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. George I. Manning of Greenville. He is employed by Carolina Leaf Tobacco Company.

The bride was given in marriage by her parents and escorted by her father. She wore a floor-length gown of organza and chantilly lace. The fitted bodice featured a scoop neckline, natural waist and bishop sleeves. Chantilly lace overlaid the bodice and trimmed the sleeves. The full length skirt was bordered at the hemline with matching chantilly lace. The bride chose a chapel mantilla of illusion bordered with matching chantilly lace attached to a face frame design headpiece. She carried a bouquet of silk pink roses and baby's breath tied with pink satin streamers.

Miss Helen Lemon of Greenville was maid of honor. She wore a gown of light blue dotted swiss and carried a nosegay of blue and white carnations.

Miss Gina Windham of Greenville, cousin of the bride, was flower girl. Her dress was a light pink dotted swiss. She carried a basket of daisies and rose petals. Bridal assistants were Miss Amy Windham and Miss Christie Windham, both of Greenville, cousins of the bride.

The father of the bridegroom was best man. Ushers were Ray Windham, brother of the bride, Terry Peaden, uncle of the bride, and Timothy Manning, brother of the bridegroom, all of Greenville.

The mother of the bride selected an ivory formal length gown. The mother of the bridegroom chose a formal length blue gown. Both mothers wore silk rose corsages.

MRS. DAVID GEORGE MANNING

Mrs. Katie Windham, great-grandmother of the bride, Mrs. Christina Windham and Mrs. Flossie Peaden, grandmothers of the bride, and Mrs. Christine Manning, grandmother of the bridegroom, were remembered with corsages. A reception was held at the home immediately following the ceremony. Cake was served by Mrs. Mary Stoneham, aunt of the bridegroom, and Miss Hope Strickland, cousin of the bride.

poured the punch. Miss Becky Heller, cousin of the bride, presided at the guest register. The wedding was directed by Mrs. Margaret Landen, great-aunt of the bride.

After a wedding trip to Williamsburg and Falls Church, Va., the couple will reside in Highland Trailer Park in Greenville. The bride was honored with a shower at the home of Mrs. Walter Peaden before the wedding.

Whistling Tea Kettle Isn't A Safe Alarm

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1978 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: My father dreamed up what I consider to be a very dangerous way to wake himself up in the morning.

First he sets the alarm clock for a certain time. When it goes off, he gets up, goes into the kitchen, fills the tea kettle with water, puts it on the gas range, turns it up to "high" and goes back to bed until the tea kettle whistles and wakes him up again.

Several times he has failed to get up and the tea kettle has burned all to blazes!

I've tried to tell him he is taking a terrible chance, but he doesn't listen. And, Abby, would you believe he is a lieutenant on a volunteer fire department? Maybe he'll listen to you.

MERRIMACPORT, MASS.

DEAR MERRI: Sound sleepers should NEVER go to sleep with the gas range burning. And for his sake, as well as his family's, I hope your father listens to me instead of to the whistling of that tea kettle.

(P.S. And if the chief of the Merrimacport volunteer fire department reads this, the lieutenant is likely to be busted to private).

DEAR ABBY: What do you do with a 17-year-old boy who refuses to clean his room?

BINGHAMTON MOM

DEAR MOM: You close the door to his room, but go in to rake it once a week. Sorry, Mom, but you must share in the blame for your son's sloppy habits. You should have trained him many years ago, when he was still trainable.

DEAR ABBY: My daughter, who is 15, is begging me to let her marry a boy of 16. I have tried to talk her into waiting until she finishes high school. (This is her first year.)

Recently she told her father and me that if we don't give her permission to marry, she will get herself in a fix like lots of girls do. Then we will have to let her get married or she will disgrace us.

I told her that was the wrong attitude to take, but she said she doesn't care, she loves the boy. (He quit school and has no job.)

Have you any advice to give her? She reads your articles every day. I hope you will print something to help us with this situation since she is about to drive her Pa and me nuts. Thank you.

W. VIRGINIA MOM

DEAR MOM: I could give your daughter plenty of advice, but she hasn't asked me for any. Tell her that even if she gets herself "in a fix," you may not consent to the marriage. And let her know that her threats to "disgrace" you do not frighten you. She can disgrace only herself.

Do you wish you had more friends? For the secret of popularity, get Abby's new booklet: "How To Be Popular; You're Never Too Young or Too Old." Send $1 with a long, self-addressed, stamped (28 cents) envelope to Abby, 132 Lasky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.

Researchers Say Quiet Women's Revolt Within Soviet Families

By SETH MYDANS
Associated Press Writer
MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet researchers say a women's revolt is under way in the Soviet family as overworked wives begin to stand up for their rights.

Sociologists say Russian women work longer hours than men, earn less money, and are getting fed up with their traditional role as the docile half of the household.

There is no organized women's liberation movement in the Soviet Union. Officially, women and men are already equal under the Soviet constitution and law, but it doesn't always work out that way.

"From a situation of equality, the young wife lands in a family in which her husband and her in-laws frequently expect her to voluntarily assume the duties of a servant and do all the housework," Victor Perevedentsev, Russia's best-known social researcher, wrote recently in the Literary Gazette.

He said Russian men average about a 50-hour work week, but the wife works about 80 hours on the job and at home.

"Today's young wife as a rule cannot put up with this," he said. "Women are rebelling. And of course they are correct in doing so."

"The husband and wife often determine domestic duties virtually in open combat with the wife taking the offensive and the husband defending himself, supported by traditions that say housework degrades a man."

A rising divorce rate, a falling birthrate and a heavy workload for married women have caused Soviet sociologists to search for the reasons for a breakdown in the traditional family structure.

The divorce rate has risen from 104 per 1,000 marriages in 1960 to 332 in 1976, or a rate of one divorce in three marriages, about the same as in the United States. Perevedentsev said women initiate 61 percent of the divorces and tend not to remarry.

Sociologist Yuri Rurikov wrote in the publication Questions of Philosophy Voprosi Filosofii that women make up 52 percent of the work force.

"Women on the average are engaged in less-qualified work than men and their overall social standing is lower than that of men," he said.

On the average, he says, women earn almost a third less than men and get retirement pensions about one-fourth smaller than those of men. He said the falling birthrate is "a spontaneous and unique reply by women to the growth of their burdens."

Writing in the monthly Zhurnalist, sociologist Alexander Meliksetyan cited a survey which he said showed that husbands have already surrendered to the women's revolt.

"Ninety of 100 wives surveyed claimed to be heads of their families, and their husbands agreed. Ten husbands claimed to be heads of their families, but the wife agreed only in the case of one man," he wrote. "When the pollsters offered this patriarch his choice of prizes, he turned to ask his wife which he should choose."

Lawyer Upset Town Citizens

BESSEMER CITY, N.C. (AP) — A Gaston County public defender and a superior court judge are in hot water with Bessemer City officials after off-hand remarks made in court about drinking being a prerequisite for living here.

The town fathers did not take kindly to the remarks by public defender Jesse Caldwell and Superior Court Judge William T. Grist of Charlotte. In fact they are taking pains to see that an apology is offered. But the judge doesn't think one is necessary.

Nonetheless, Mayor George Hook said he intends to call a special meeting to see if the town can get apologies from the two.

The furor erupted after folks in Bessemer City read a newspaper article in which Caldwell was quoted as saying, "I think a prerequisite to living in Bessemer City is that you have to drink."

To which Grist was quoted as saying, "I think you have to drink to stay there."

Caldwell said his remark was made in jest in an attempt to bring some comic relief to a long week of court when Judge Grist was about to sentence a Bessemer City man on an assault charge.

"I don't believe that at all," Caldwell said of his remark.

Bessemer City Councilman Tim Helms said his home phone, like Mayor Hook's, rang all weekend with complaints from citizens over the remarks. Hooks said the complaints came from "good, solid citizens who never complain unless they have a legitimate complaint."

"I think a prerequisite to ethical professional attorneys is that they must present facts," Hook said. "I think it beneath the dignity for a presiding judge to make derogatory blanket statements about any town and its people."

When contacted about the matter, Judge Grist at first did not remember making the remark. Upon recall he said, "Good, maybe those people will do something about it. An awful lot of cases come to court from Bessemer City."

When asked if he feels he owes the town an apology, Grist said, "Not particularly."

Bakke Ruling Portends Change

The U. S. Supreme Court decision in the Allan Bakke case, is at long last with us and, while no one can truly say how it will affect our society, it portends major changes in our ways of dealing with discrimination.

Bakke maintained that he was discriminated against because he was white in being turned down for admission to the University of California medical school at Davis. He cited the 16 of 100 openings which are reserved for "disadvantaged" students and contended they were a racial quota.

Strong feelings no doubt will be expressed by various groups about the ruling, and in fact, there was considerable disagreement among the justices, who ruled in Bakke's favor by a 5-4 vote. And, the court warned that legally race can be considered in college admissions programs. In this case, the court said, UC-Davis had gone too far.

The ruling is almost sure to bring litigation in any number of areas where it appears that a specific number of positions have been reserved for minorities. It will be years before we see the full impact of it on our society and the kind of effect it will have on minorities seeking jobs and admission to various programs.

It is clear that the court expects equal opportunity for all to stand.

Perhaps it is best to view the ruling optimistically by noting that minority quotas have been falling into disfavor over the years since the Bakke complaint was originally filed.

We can hope too, that our society is entering the more ideal situation whereby minorities will attain their goals based strictly on their abilities, rather than artificial quotas. That, after all, is the goal which we should have been seeking all along.

It is been almost a quarter of a century since the Supreme Court decision outlawing school segregation. In most areas of the south a whole generation has grown up in fully integrated schools. The Bakke decision may gradually tell all of us whether we now live in a society which willingly provides equal opportunity based solely on abilities.

THIS AFTERNOON

Activity Isn't All Public

By Bill Noblitt

RALEIGH—If you ever wondered what a candidate for a high state office means by "full-time campaigning," it doesn't mean that most of the work is done in public.

Certainly, the public sees enough of the candidate on the stump—at fund-raising pig-pickings, shopping center handshakings, and party conclaves.

But a speech here and a meeting there doesn't constitute full-time employment. Raising money and lining up the "local organization" does, however.

That is how most of the time is spent, in private meetings across the state talking with rich and/or powerful individuals.

A typical day would go this way:

Many Calls

The candidate has a civic club talk scheduled for 6 o'clock in a Piedmont town, but he doesn't stay around Raleigh until time to drive there.

Probably with sun, he hits the city limits for breakfast with his county chairman—generally a longtime friend who has agreed to be the local contact man, either out front or behind scenes.

A list of "local leaders" is provided the candidate, and he sets out on his rounds, much like any other visiting traveling salesman new in town—except the product is promises and the currency is votes.

Generally alone at this early stage of the game—although sometimes accompanied by his local organizer just to make the introductions—the candidate starts on his calls.

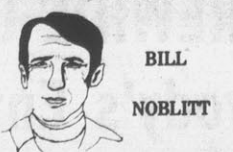

He has to do it himself. You can't send a staff aide to do this hard job. And like all business transactions, the talk must be plain and open.

First, the candidate himself must ask those on the local list for their individual votes. Not in hesitating or wondering terms, but straightout: "Will you or won't you vote for me?" Then, if the answer is positive, "Will you or won't you talk me up to your friends and associates?" Again, belted positively, the candidate will (indeed, must) get to the final straight question: "We can't win without money... how much will you put in?"

Around Town

So the day goes, with obligatory calls on the town's bankers, industrial and business leaders, newspaper, radio and TV stations, and other influential people. Often the calls are made on a schedule prepared ahead of time. But many candidates find it more effective to just "pop in." That impresses the local recipient of the call much more than a telephone call from an underling some days beforehand.

A successful day in the life of a candidate on the trail in North Carolina ends, then, not with resounding applause at the local hotel, but when he goes back over his list and prays out how many promises of votes, public support, and dollars he got.

Some races make the job easier—a candidate for U.S. Senate or House, governor or lieutenant governor represents the elite; his introductions and entry to local people is simple.

As you go down to legislative and local races, the scheduling gets harder. Few local citizens have a great deal of interest in, time for, or money to give to some races.

There is, after all, little that some candidates can offer in exchange—the public just doesn't have a big interest or commitment.

The hours are long, the work is hard, and most of it is not glamorous receptions or press conferences. There's little room for timidity or shyness—only commitments get results.

And that, typically, is how a candidate will spend a lot of days between now and next November.

Summer Over The Land

SCRABBLE, Va.—Now summer lies drowsy on our land, and yawns, and mops her forehead, and murmurs a prayer for rain. We are into the hot and stickies, the muggy days, but here in the Blue Ridge Mountains one finds compensations.

I have lately been counting these compensations, the assets that make up for such liabilities as gnats in the garden squirrels in an apple tree, and a blacksnake in the strawberry patch. The life of a countryman, I long ago concluded, largely a matter of too much or not enough—too many bugs and no rain when you need it—but now and then we hit some in-betweens.

The barn swallows make up for a good many drawbacks. Every summer a family of swallows nests in the garage, about four feet above the right front fender of my wife's Toyota. This is not the kind of proximity that breeds affection, but the swallows give such pleasure that the untidiness can be forgiven. The young hatched about three weeks ago—there were only three this year, one shy of the four of other years—and for the past week we have been watching their flying lessons.

They are a comical bunch of student pilots. In between solo excursions, the three of them sit nervously on the edge of the mud nest. They look more like big-band musi-

Concur Issues Remain

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP)—Civil rights groups huffed while conservatives praised, but people of nearly all persuasions in North Carolina agreed Wednesday that the Supreme Court's two-part decision in Allan Bakke's reverse discrimination case left many questions unanswered.

State Attorney General Rufus Edmisten said he wished the court had been "clearer" (in speaking to the notion of affirmative action and how far race could be a consideration.) He predicted the upshot of the case would be a flood of new litigation.

Edmisten said his initial interpretation of the ruling was that race could not be used as the "overriding criteria" in deciding admission to programs, but that it could be taken into account, "like we may take mental capacities and physical abilities into account."

"I think this was what the 1964 Civil Rights Act said. It said don't make race the determining factor in judging whether a person can do a job or receive benefit," the attorney general said.

Spokesmen with a conservative bent generally hailed the court's ruling that Bakke had been the victim of reverse discrimination, but criticized the justices for not barring racial quotas altogether.

On the other hand, civil rights groups took issue with the court's position that the California medical school had gone too far in considering race in denying Bakke admissions, while praising the court's lukewarm endorsement of affirmative action.

George Gardner, director of the state branch of the American Civil Liberties Union, said the decision "sounds as though the court really ducked responsibility."

"The decision will probably not solve the basic issue of achieving an integrated society," Gardner said. "After 300 years of segregation and slavery, a positive effort to recognize the ideal of equality for all must be made."

Meanwhile, conservative lawyer Joe Beard Jr. of Charlotte depicted the ruling as an "accident theory" of "sometimes you have that right, sometimes you don't."

THE INSIDE REPORT

Haig's Expanding Role

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

BRUSSELS—Early this month a top aide of French President Valerie Giscard d'Estaing slipped inconspicuously into the headquarters of Gen. Alexander Haig, the NATO commander, for several hours of quiet speculation on Soviet intentions and U.S. reactions, particularly in Africa.

One day earlier, the defense minister of Japan—a country beyond the reach of NATO—undertook a similar journey to Mons, Haig's headquarters. Other leaders of the world's democracies, including the prime minister of Australia, have detoured to Mons during European sojourns to confide their worries to Haig.

A common theme—concern over expanding Soviet power and confusion over the Carter administration's foreign policy—motivates these democratic leaders. Indeed by forfeit, Haig has become a Western symbol of will and determination, clearly justifying President Carter's decision last year to retain him as NATO commander.

But while justifying that decision, the parade of Western policymakers to Haig's headquarters suggests agonizing doubts about Mr. Carter's inner convictions over the Soviet question. The president's reactions are marked by too many ambiguities and divided counsels.

Haig's prestige among democratic leaders of U.S. allies tells more about this disarray in Washington (as perceived by these leaders) than it does about Haig. Once attacked as a "political general" in an effort to block his appointment to NATO by Gerald Ford, Haig has become a kind of anchor to windward for worried Western Europe. As one powerful politician in the alliance (a West German) told us: "Haig is the Linus blanket for all of us who cannot read the signals from Washington and need comfort." President Carter seems to understand the value of Haig as a security blanket. On his last visit here in early January, Mr. Carter bluntly confided to one NATO official that he had had "some doubts" about Haig when he became president. Now, however, a Carter-Haig alliance has formed around NATO, resulting in at least one singular achievement in the president's otherwise shifting course on meeting the Soviet threat: strengthening the alliance along lines first recommended by Haig before Mr. Carter took office.

The beginning of this strengthening effort against escalating Soviet power in Central Europe came with the report of NATO deficiencies by Sens. Sam Nunn and Dewey Bartlett in 1976. Their prescription, strongly promoted by Haig, began with the stuff that counts most and comes hardest: increased financial assessments on all NATO countries. Today the U.S., West Germany, Great Britain, Belgium and Holland are all meeting or exceeding higher levies agreed to with Mr. Carter in the spring of 1977.

By next fall, a new U.S. brigade for the central German front, termed essential in the Nunn-Bartlett report, will begin development. U.S. strength is now at its highest level—about 300,000. There is reason to believe the specialists here who claim that the NATO "tail" of support troops has been shortened, with a consequent increase in the NATO "tooth."

Jimmy Carter has accepted the most important NATO proposals for dealing with possible surprise attack—the Warsaw Pact "blitzkrieg" that Nunn and Bartlett warned against. Upgrading communications and detection technology, vastly expensive, is now going forward with a 1980 completion date.

In February, Haig informed

Other Editors Say Man Will Fly!

(The Raleigh Times)

Ever hear of a honeymoon trip lasting 15 days that touched down 14 airports? That's what one area couple had, and it's just one product of this year's air-fare revolution that has travel agents and airline reservations clerks thrashing in their sleep, when they get any.

Keeping up with the spinning kaleidoscope of fare changes and plans and packages the Civil Aeronautics Board has unleashed is almost impossible. But one new package has emerged through the confusion as a hot seller.

It's the unlimited-stop excursion many airlines now offer. For around $300 each, you and another can take wing at RDU for any number of anywhere your hearts desire, as long as the stops are served by the same airline. With Eastern, for example, this includes all of Mexico and the Caribbean as well as the U.S.

You must also make at least two 48-hour stops in the course of your airborne odyssey, and you can't hit the same one twice except to change planes. You must stay away at least seven days but not more than 21, and reserve and pay two weeks ahead.

But what slight restrictions these really are! What a bonanza of times and places! How inconceivable it would have been when today's senior citizens were young—to be able to mount your jet-propelled pogo-stick at just beyond-Morrisville and hop to Los Angeles to see what all the TV shows are about, to settle for seafood and a ride up Puget Sound, then wind up on the beach at St. Thomas to clear the Pacific mist from your lungs—all in a fortnight.

Disney buffs can hit Orlando and Anaheim in the same vacation—though no one but a Disney buff could stand that much "magic." Technology freaks can cover the Houston space complex, the Detroit assembly lines, Cape Canaveral and the Washington museums in one two-weeks-with-pay! A love for history could take you to Boston or Philadelphia and thence westward, leapfrogging the pioneer trails of Daniel Boone and Lewis and Clark.

If the airlines keep up this sort of thing and extend it worldwide, we'll all start lying awake nights with visions of strings of travel sugarplums dancing in our heads. Anyone for two days in Tibet and two in Timbuktu, with London and Delhi thrown in for contrast and a long layover on the beach at Rio on the way home?

Headaches In Hiring Of Spouses

By JOHN CUNIFF
NEW YORK (AP)

Husbands and wives working for the same company are producing legal and marital headaches that may force some concerns to renege on their commitments to equal employment opportunities.

Some companies already have decided to avoid hiring spouses because of patterns of dual absenteeism, scheduling conflicts, and damage to morale, said Professor Eugene Jennings, who has studied the phenomenon.

But, he says, the biggest current deterrent to hiring spouses, wives especially, is the web of legal tangles that only now are appearing, less than a decade after companies began affirmative action programs.

Companies often are accused of nepotism when they employ spouses, said Jennings, and accused when they don't of discrimination. It's a no-win situation fraught with unseen, perverse consequences, he said.

The professor's acquaintance with the problem is an offshoot of his role as confidential adviser to corporation chairmen and presidents, who increasingly find their concerns threatened by legal action.

"Many companies are pulling back," he said, "not formally, because that would be illegal, but quietly. They don't want a backlash against women, but they don't know how to avoid ethical and legal problems."

Jennings, management professor at Michigan State University and author of many volumes on personnel activities, cites these situations as helping to produce a negative attitude toward dual employment.

1. The wife, administrative assistant to a corporation president, convinces him to look favorably on her husband's candidacy for plant manager. The husband gets the job over more qualified applicants.

One of these applicants claims favoritism, quits and sues. Alarmed, the president removes the husband. The wife becomes angry, accuses the president of sexual advances, and quits.

The mess was settled out of court, but among other things, the company lost a qualified plant manager and an administrative assistant.

2. The wife manages a branch bank; her husband is loan officer at the central office. She turns down an applicant for a loan. He sues, claiming she could not argue effectively with her husband for the loan.

The company is advised by its lawyers to settle out of court, and to separate the couple in a business sense. When she is replaced by a male subordinate she sues, claiming discrimination. Publicity causes two other loan applicants to sue. All cases were settled out of court.

"Some companies would rather back off (from hiring spouses, especially wives), but they can't do that officially," says Jennings.

In discussing the situations with company presidents, Jennings says he too is caught in a no-win situation. Whatever advice is given, he says, may have perverse consequences. "I try to minimize the damage."

Mixed Opinions On Bakke Case Effect For UNC

Found Secret Cache Of Cash In Deposit Boxes

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — About $600,000 in small, used bills was found last week by federal agents who raided bank safety deposit boxes at a North-western Bank, and former Raleigh attorney John McConnell Jr. was listed as trustee for the money. The News and Observer of Raleigh reported in its Thursday editions.

The newspaper said it learned of the search by FBI and Internal Revenue Service agents of five safety deposit boxes at a Northwestern branch near the town of Advance in Davie County.

McConnell pleaded guilty last year to four charges of perjury for lying to juries in New York about depositing money in secret accounts for Frank Lucas and Leslie "Ike" Atkinson, both convicted on heroin charges. He served four months in a federal prison in Florida and has since been disbarred.

The newspaper quoted unidentified sources as saying the raid on the safety deposit boxes resulted from information gathered during a federal probe of Northwestern's banking activities.

The paper reported that state and federal sources said the agents obtained a search warrant on the basis of information supplied by a tipster with intimate knowledge of the bank's operations.

McConnell's attorney, Roger

W. Smith, and U.S. Attorney H.M. "Mickey" Michaux declined comment on the report.

The newspaper said that agents "put a freeze" on the money to prevent its removal from the bank but did not confiscate the cash.

Shortly after his release from prison, McConnell was indicted by a grand jury in Goldsboro on a state charge of conspiring to distribute heroin. Atkinson and 14 others also were indicted.

McConnell testified before a grand jury in Raleigh that he deposited between $400,000 and $600,000 in secret accounts in the Southern Bank in Grand Cayman Island for Lucas and Atkinson. The Winston-Salem Sentinel reported recently that GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Opinions are mixed as to whether the U.S. Supreme Court decision in the Allan Bakke reverse discrimination case will have any effect on the case filed by Patricia Bostick of Raleigh and Steven Rader of Charlotte against the University of North Carolina School of Law.

Like Bakke, Miss Bostick and Rader are charging reverse discrimination as the reason they were denied admission to the UNC law school. Their case was delayed in district court in Greensboro by Judge Eugene Gordon until one of three conditions was met. And one of those three was a court ruling in the Bakke case.

But the lawyer for the pair, Joe Beard Jr. of Charlotte, said he didn't think the Bakke decision would have any concrete effect on litigation against the UNC law school.

Wednesday, the Supreme Court ruled in favor of Bakke's claim that he was denied admission to a California medical school because he is white. But the court said whites can still be excluded from colleges under admission policies designed to give an advantage to minorities.

State Attorney General Rufus Edmisten, who officially represents the UNC law school, said the Bakke ruling could significantly affect the Bostick-Rader case, although he would have to review the text of the Supreme Court ruling before commenting on specifics.

The two cases are similar to Bakke in charging reverse discrimination. Edmisten and Beard said. But while both sides in the Bakke case agreed the California medical school maintained a special admissions quota for minorities, the UNC law school contends it has no such quotas.

Beard, however, argues the law school does operate with racial quotas.

In their case, Miss Bostick and Rader are seeking an injunction to stop the law school from using race as a criteria for admission, $25,000 in damages for the admission denials and $10,000 in punitive damages. The plaintiffs also ask for $25,000 for every person denied admission because of the special admissions policy.

The suit names as defendants UNC President William Friday, UNC law school Dean Robert Byrd, and UNC-Chapel Hill Chancellor Ferebee Taylor.

Byrd, in an interview Wednesday, acknowledged that the school had two special admissions policies which allow students with lesser academic qualifications to gain admissions.

One policy gives him the discretion to admit a small number of students who fall just short of the "minimum prediction index" for the incoming freshmen law school class, he said. But Byrd claimed the policy benefits whites as much as blacks.

The second policy applies to candidates "with disadvantaged cultural, economic, or educational backgrounds, or with physical handicaps."

While the persons selected have qualifications less than those required under regular admissions standards, he said they are still above the academic level, "which studies and experience indicate would be consistent with successful completion of law school."

Raleigh woman and a Charlotte man in a lawsuit accusing the University North Carolina Law School of reverse discrimination, said he was encouraged that the court ordered the California medical school to admit Bakke but disappointed it upheld affirmative action programs.

Similar sentiments were expressed by retired U.S. Sen. Sam Ervin, an acknowledged expert in constitutional law. Extolling the court's order that Bakke be admitted, Ervin said he was displeased with the portion of the ruling concerning affirmative action.

"That sounds like intellectual clap-net to me," the former senator said. "Sometimes I hate to say it, but you have to put some kind of sop into a decision to get some justices to agree with it...I think the Constitution and the Civil Rights Act require them to ignore matters of race when they pass judgments on admissions."

The North Carolina Association of Black Lawyers called the Bakke ruling "confusing, apparently inconsistent, and possibly pernicious."

"Such a ruling is a signal to initiate a retrograde action on the part of 'stand-patters' and 'go-slowers.' We feel the decision may have a pernicious influence on the small advances blacks have made in the field of education," the organization's statement said.

Considering the court issued six separate opinions, Andrew Vanore, senior deputy state attorney general, said state and federal courts may have a difficult time interpreting the decision.

"The nine justices themselves appear to disagree on whether so-called 'reverse discrimination' against whites is constitutional," he said.

But Vanore it would be "folly" for him to comment upon the decision's impact in North Carolina since he hadn't seen it.

Gov. Jim Hunt and UNC officials declined comment on the decision until they were able to read it.

salt—nothing will top them until the black-eyed peas come along in August. The tomatoes are crowded with tiny brass trumpets, the zucchini flourishes, the snap beans are climbing as if they were making ready for Jack the Giant Killer to ascend.

These are busy times for our farming neighbors. The first cuttings of hay were so good that the old timers, hanging around the Woodville Post Office, actually wore sociable smiles. Hereabouts they roll the hay into thousand-pound rolls; from the air our fields look like green pinball machines. The great rolls are clumsier to handle than the old-fashioned rectangular bales, but they require less labor and the cattle seem to like them just as well.

We have baby rabbits all over the place, and more chipmunks than usual. A big year for chipmunks ordinarily means a big year for blacksnakes too, and we seem to have plenty of these. My wife was picking strawberries early one morning. I heard her yelp and went for a garden hoe. The snake was maybe five feet long, but it has grown four inches in every telling of the story and now exceeds 21 feet. I have killed the biggest reptile in the history of herpetology, but I kind of wish I had just thrown the invader over the fence instead.

Bakke Ruling...

its commitment to true racial equality.

Powell was joined by Chief Justice Warren E. Burger and Justices John Paul Stevens, William H. Rehnquist and Potter Stewart in holding that strict racial quotas or goals — such as those used at the Davis medical school — violate the 1964 law.

Powell then joined Marshall and Justices William J. Brennan Jr., Byron R. White and Harry A. Blackmun in ruling that some affirmative action may be proper.

One clue to the court's view of what might be acceptable was contained in Powell's opinion, when he cited as a model the affirmative action program now used by Harvard University.

He said it was designed not only to insure racial and ethnic diversity in the student body but also to select students with a broad range of talents and geographic backgrounds.

The Carter administration, speaking in President Carter's behalf at the White House, said affirmative action had been enhanced by the court's ruling. "That's what I told the president, and he seemed to be pleased," Bell said, adding that "I gave him a copy of the opinion for his night reading."

The Carter administration, however, had urged the justices to strip Bakke of the victory he had won in state courts. The Justice Department had argued that affirmative action has a very definite place in education and other areas, and that the Bakke case should be returned to the California courts to decide whether the medical school's program was a valid form of affirmative action.

Of the nine justices, only Powell would have decided the case on constitutional grounds. Had Bakke won on those grounds, rather than on the narrower issue of the 1964 law forbidding discrimination by institutions receiving federal funds, the ruling would have been far more devastating for civil rights activists.

Home Safety Test On TV

A home safety test will be aired on WNCN-TV Saturday at 2:30 p.m.

The 30-minute production is titled "One Person Too Late." It shows five life-threatening situations that could occur in any home — choking, falling, drug overdose, fire and cardiac arrest. Red Cross volunteer first-aiders from the Pittsburgh Division perform the correct emergency techniques in each situation. Viewers are tested throughout the production on how to deal with each of the five incidents of danger.

The film was produced by the Gallery of Homes, an international network of independent real estate brokers, of which the Lily Richardson agency here is one. It was done in cooperation with the American National Red Cross. Local Red Cross Secretary Ruth Taylor urged area residents to participate in this self-help test.

Singer Perry Como was born in 1913.

Cars Collided At Intersection

Cars driven by Jennifer Henderson of Fayetteville, and Patricia Hassell Lupton of Little River, S.C., collided about 5:55 p.m. yesterday at the intersection of Tenth and Cotanche Streets.

Police, who reported both drivers and a passenger in each of the cars were injured, estimated damage at $2,000 to the Henderson car and $1,500 to the Lupton auto.

Investigators charged Mrs. Lupton with failing to stop for a stop light and failing to reduce her speed enough to avoid an accident.

Moving 500 Jobs To N.C.

ENDICOTT, N.Y. (AP) — International Business Machines Corp. plans to transfer 500 jobs from its Endicott Systems Division here to a new plant to be built in Charlotte, N.C.

The 500 employees affected — 5 percent of the division's 10,000 person work force — will be offered an opportunity to move to North Carolina as their jobs are phased out here, Martin W. McCann, the plant's general manager, said Wednesday.

The British Broadcasting Corporation was founded in 1922.

Bombardment Of Rocks For Street Residents

HAZLET, N.J. (AP) — In an atmosphere reminiscent of Britain during the Blitz, residents of Elm Street are being bombarded daily with rocks, police say, apparently hurled by juveniles using a powerful slingshot-type device.

George Tuschmann says he, his wife, 71-year-old mother and three sons lead precarious lives, worrying constantly whether they will be struck suddenly by a falling projectile.

The siege at Tuschmann's Elm Street neighborhood in suburban Monmouth County began June 9, and since then, Tuschmann says he has been unable to leave his house. "Every time we walk out of the house rocks are thrown at us," he says.

"I'm not even being terrorized," he said Wednesday. "I'm being held prisoner."

"We live in constant fear," said Charles Morgan, another Elm Street resident. "Someone is going to get killed and all hell is going to break loose."

Six to 10 juveniles "have been bombarding individual houses with rocks and pieces of asbestos" weighing up to five pounds, said Hazlet Township police Lt. John Fetherston.

Fetherston said authorities believe the missiles are being fired by a powerful slingshot-type device or catapult from some distance away.

"Police are working almost around the clock trying to locate the juveniles," he said.

adding that several youths had been questioned but no arrests had been made.

Fetherston theorized that someone in the area may have had words with the juveniles, prompting the vandalism, but Tuschmann denied that had happened.

"I've never had any problems before," he said. "In 18 years, this is the first problem I've ever had."

About 20 people who live in the neighborhood have demanded that state police be called in to assist local authorities in locating the vandals.

Mayor Gilbert Bennett declared there is "no doubt in my mind they are under siege," but said state police had not been asked for help because local police planned special tactics to capture the vandals. He declined to elaborate.

Police Commissioner William Haine and Anna McGovern, a friend of one of Tuschmann's sons, have been struck by rocks but not seriously injured. Tuschmann estimated damage to his and his neighbors' homes since the barrage began at $500. Canvas sheets cover windows in his home and a bathroom window bears the mark of four BB gun pellets. "There are a bunch of animals out there," Tuschmann said.

People Could Sue Federal Officials

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal officials may be sued for damages in civil cases if they deliberately and knowingly violate the Constitution, the Supreme Court ruled today.

In a 5-4 decision, the court said, "We see no substantial basis for holding... that executive officers generally may with impunity discharge their duties in a way that is known to them to violate the United States Constitution."

The precedent-setting decision limits immunity for federal officials in a way that parallels immunity granted to state officials.

The majority opinion by Justice Byron R. White said, however: "Federal officials will not be liable for mere mistakes in judgment, whether the mistake is one of fact or one of law."

The court rejected the Justice Department's argument that officials should be absolutely immune from civil suits for damages. Attorney General Griffin B. Bell has contended that the threat of civil suits is an unfair burden for federal officials in the exercise of their official responsibilities.

Today's ruling came in a case involving the Arthur N. Economou commodity futures trading company, which sued former Agriculture Secretary Earl Butz and officials in the Department of Agriculture and Commodity Exchange Authority for $32 million.

The suit charged the individuals with wrongful and malicious enforcement of commodity exchange laws.

The Supreme Court sent the case back to lower courts to set the ground rules for the trial of the claims against Butz and the others.

Secrecy Classification Changes Set

By H. JOSEF HEBERT
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter is preparing to announce sweeping changes in the way the government classifies documents, taking into account administration sources say, a balance between the public's right to know and national security.

The sources said Carter, who pledged during his campaign to revise the government's classification procedures, has given final approval to the new policy and a formal announcement was expected today.

The government has classified thousands of documents as "confidential," "secret" or "top secret." Critics of the system say documents often are classified arbitrarily with no serious consideration of their relationship to security, leading many documents to be overclassified.

Carter's executive order will sharply reduce the number of agencies with classification authority, cut the number of years for which a document is automatically classified and establish an agency of 10 persons to 20 persons to review the bureaucracy's compliance with the new procedures.

A key part of the new order, said one source, is a provision requiring that under certain circumstances the government must balance the public's interest in a disclosure with the requirements of national security.

The source, who declined to be identified, said the agency involved will make the "balance test" if there is "some reason to believe that there is a significant public interest in disclosure" such as a request for the document under the Freedom of Information Act.

The new procedures also would require that documents be classified section-by-section instead of as a whole because, under current procedures, lengthy documents are sometimes classified because of one or two sensitive paragraphs.

The new classification guidelines were prepared by an administration task force, which included members of the president's domestic policy staff and the National Security Council.

A source said administration officials consulted with a variety of groups from outside the administration, including congressional committees, the American Civil Liberties Union and the Center for National Security Studies.

Other changes under the new order, according to the sources, would be:

—The removal of classification authority from 11 federal agencies, including a number of regulatory bodies and the departments of Agriculture, Labor, and Health, Education and Welfare. Five additional agencies would have their classification authority cut back.

—Reduce the time in which documents are automatically declassified from 30 years to 20 years for more sensitive documents; and from six to 10 years to a flat six years for the rest. Now, more than half the classified documents are automatically declassified after 30 years.

—Restrict the government's ability to change classification on a document after a request is made for the document through the Freedom of Information Act.

—Require that damage to national security must be "identifiable" before a document can be classified so disclosure is restricted. Currently the government must show only that disclosure could reasonably be expected to damage national security.

Film-Maker Is Sentenced

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Former Columbia Pictures president David Begelman has been sentenced to three years probation and fined $5,000 for the theft of $40,000 from the film studio.

"I have been subjected to the judicial system and I found it fair," Begelman said Wednesday after being sentenced.

The 58-year-old Begelman, whose career successes include "Close Encounters of the Third Kind," also was ordered by Superior Court Judge Thomas C. Murphy to enter a community service program.

Begelman pleaded no contest to three counts of forgery and one of grand theft last month. The forgery counts were dropped Wednesday. He could have received up to 10 years in jail for the grand theft charge and up to 14 years for each forgery count.

Begelman was charged with stealing the $40,000 from Columbia by forging three checks written on a studio bank account.

Before passing sentence, Murphy said he would treat Begelman as any first offender, noting "there is nothing in his record to indicate any clue to this kind of conduct."

"We have a man, 58-years-old, successful, with a good record," the judge said. "I thought we would probably find some gambling in Las Vegas, or some women, but we didn't. It almost looks like a death wish."

Last fall, when Begelman admitted the misappropriations, he attributed his actions to personal problems.

Hitchhikers 'Gave' Trucker Baby Girl

UVALDE, Texas (AP) — A healthy 13-month-old child was being cared for in a hospital today after a truck driver reported a young woman hitchhiker and her male companion left the blond-haired, blue-eyed baby girl in his rig.

Curtis King of Memphis, Tenn., said he thought the young woman was kidding when she asked him if he would like to have the baby Wednesday.

"I told her sure, but kind of in a kidding way," he said from the police station, where he took the infant after he dropped off the young couple in Mountain Home.

"They were hitchhiking with a baby at Johnson City, and I was en route to Uvalde, and I picked them up," King said. "When they got out at Mountain Home, she left the baby and told her, 'That's your daddy — meaning me.'"

King, 26, said he and his wife would try to adopt the baby. "We have three children and have lost four, so you could say we like children," he said.

"About all we had to go on was what we thought to be the baby's birth certificate," Police Chief Vance Chisum said. "The mother left it with the baby."

The certificate shows the parents to be Thomas and Cynthia Engberson.

Chisum said the woman told King she was from Grant's Pass, Ore., but he had determined she was from Richmond, Calif.

"We're trying now to contact the woman's next of kin," he said.

King said the baby "looks like she's been taken good care of before" and showed no signs of any abuse. "She's a real friendly type," he said.

College Students' Idealism Changed

By ARNOLD DIBBLE
MINNEAPOLIS (UPI) — A Carleton College chaplain and professor of religion says college students of the 1970s shy from success as much as they fear failure.

Dr. David Maitland drew his conclusions after teaching a course called "Success and the American Dream" at the liberal arts college in Northfield, Minn.

Maitland is skeptical that the idealism of graduation day will linger forever in the realities of the outside world, but he finds idealism of the '70s different from that of the past two decades.

"The generation of the '50s was unabashed in its desire to get ahead," he said in an interview. "The kids of the '60s thumbed their noses, dropped their drawers and all of that."

"They were wildly moral. They believed any kind of moral conviction they held was reality itself. Whatever change they wanted, how could anybody argue against it?"

"The present generation has some ideals, but they have understanding of more than one side. They believe they can thread a course through idealism and the general conception of success."

Maitland thinks theirs is not a lasting idealism.

"Their ambition to be successful will make it easy for them to compromise when they are hit with hard decisions," he said. "They want all the good stuff. Cars. Gasoline. I would think it's pretty predictable when the choices come they will have to choose the success they believe in."

In a survey, Maitland found students put concern for others above financial gain. His survey was supported by findings of the Cooperative Institutional Research Program of California.

The CIRP findings showed 68.4 percent of the nation's college freshmen rate "helping others in difficulty" above financial success (55.6 percent).

"Students equate success with money, power, authority and luxuries which can be gained only by achievement in the work world and with little regard for others," Maitland said.

"The 18-20-year-olds in the class seem to totally and vehemently reject this concept of success as a goal; yet, when asked what they feared most, nearly all the students said failure."

"Students see the success-driven person as a self-centered extremist — usually a male — who is indifferent to personal relationship; who has little energy, time or imagination available for friends or children; who has little concern for community affairs or social responsibilities; who lacks an enriching well-rounded view of life and culture; and who is a threat to friendship or romance."

Maitland said students react so vehemently to success they are unable to make a distinction between success and fulfillment. He said success is defined by society; fulfillment, by the individual.

Carleton students also questioned the American Dream as a goal.

"Traditionally, the American Dream, or opportunity to be successful was limited to the white American male," Maitland said. "Women, laborers and minorities never had access to it. They see it as discriminating."

He said young peoples' goals today place primary emphasis on friendship and romance.

Insects Take Tobacco Toll

Tobacco insects have taken a heavy toll in many fields this spring, according to L. Gaylon Ambrose, associate agricultural extension agent.

The cutworm did the most damage before detected. Farmers need to survey tobacco fields weekly to decide whether or not to invest in treatment for infestation.

Infestation should be suppressed with chemical controls only when the costs for insecticides, fuel, labor and other application expenses are less than the loss caused by the pest, according to Ambrose.

The four major pests of tobacco are the tobacco budworm, tobacco hornworm, flea beetles and aphids (plant lice). Budworms should be treated only when five or more plants out of 50 are infested prior to buttoning. Budworms do not cause any major damage after the plants have buttoned.

Treatment for hornworms is justified when five or more worms without parasite cocoons are found per 50 plants. Since worms having white parasite cocoons eat much less, they should be counted as one fifth of a worm.

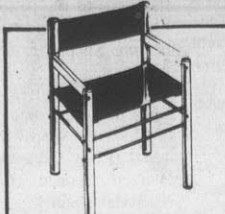

Plant lice have been found in a large number of Pitt County tobacco fields. They should be treated when 25 per cent of the plants show visible signs of infestation (honeydew, curling leaves) and aphids are present in large numbers, according to Ambrose.

Princess Caroline Wed Again In Chapel Of Palace

By MARCUS ELIASON
Associated Press Writer
MONTE CARLO (AP) — Princess Caroline of Monaco married commoner Philippe Junot in a chapel of the royal palace today and paraded through a blizzard of confetti and exuberant applause from the citizens of her tiny country. Exquisitely clothed in bridal white, Caroline took the arm of her handsome 38-year-old husband after the religious ceremony to make her first formal appearance since wedding celebrations began Tuesday night. The two were married in a civil ceremony Wednesday afternoon but begin living as man and wife only after today's Roman Catholic ceremony. As the pair emerged for the triumphal stroll from the palace gate, they were watched from a second-story window by Caroline's parents, Prince Rainier III and former Hollywood actress Grace Kelly, who was wearing a yellow dress, an elegant wide-brimmed hat and sunglasses. Policemen in blue and palace guards in white with red brocade escorted the bridal couple through the sun-washed lanes of Monaco as they walked to City Hall to sign the register and pay traditional respects at the 322-year-old Chapel of Mercy in City Hall Square. Just before the bride and groom appeared, a lone daredevil wafted off a nearby Alpine peak on a hang-glider painted like a Chinese dragon. The unknown flyer thus defied a princely ban on overflying the palace during the wedding. Hundreds of media people, frustrated at being barred from watching the wedding, cheered the feat. The nuptial Mass was to be celebrated by the French bishop of Frejus and Toulon, who married Caroline's parents, Prince Rainier III and American movie star Grace Kelly, 22 years ago. But the ceremony this time was to be in the small chapel of the royal palace with only 100 guests instead of the Cathedral of Monaco where 2,000 attended the 1956 wedding.

Caroline's parents opposed the match between their 21-year-old daughter and the 38-year-old Parisian financier because of the difference in ages and because they hoped she would marry one of Europe's more eligible royal princes. But they were unable to dissuade their determined daughter. Caroline smiled faintly and said "Oui" at the 15-minute civil ceremony Wednesday when Louis Roman, president of the Monaco state council, asked if she would "love, cherish and obey" her husband.

"Princess Caroline's hands shook a little as she signed the register," Roman told reporters afterward. The ceremony was held in the palace throne room with 35 members of the two families present. Reporters were barred, but the Monaco television service broadcast the ceremony. Afterward, the gates of the ochre-colored palace overlooking the Mediterranean were thrown open and about 3,000 of Monaco's 4,500 citizens filed into the courtyard for a reception at which they applauded the newlyweds and presented Caroline a pair of diamond earrings. The couple mingled with the guests along with her brother Albert, 20, the heir to the throne, and their 13-year-old sister, Stephanie. Prince Rainier, wearing a dark suit and tinted glasses, told the crowd: "I have always wanted you to share the intimate moments of my life." The Monegasques were last invited to the palace en masse two years ago, when the prince celebrated his 25th year as ruler of the 370-acre principality. The bridegroom's father, Michel Junot, gave a dinner Wednesday night at the Hotel de Paris. Then Caroline returned to the palace, and her husband spent the night at the villa where he has been staying. Although married in the eyes of the law, they slept apart until after the religious ceremony.

FORECAST

Until Friday

WEATHER FORECAST — Warm to hot weather is forecast for most of the nation today. Showers are expected for the Northwest. Showers and rain are due from the northern Plains to the Ohio Valley. (AP Laserphoto Map)

By The Associated Press

A slight break in the oppressive heat and humidity of the last several days was in prospect today as a weak cold front pushed southward across North Carolina.

The front edged into the state Wednesday and was still creeping southward this morning. Meanwhile, the state sweltered in advance of the front.

Temperatures rose steadily Wednesday, climbing into the 90s over much of the state. Wilmington was the exception, leveling off at 100 degrees, a record for the date in the port city. Cape Hatteras also set a new high for June 28 — 95 degrees.

The 95 was only two degrees below the all-time high for the 104 years the Cape Hatteras weather office has been keeping records.

Greensboro had a high of 97 and Raleigh's high was 98 degrees.

A few thunderstorms developed in the hot, humid air around mid-afternoon and drifted southeast across the state. Heavy rain and gusty winds accompanied some of the storms and a tornado was reported a mile and a half northeast of Swan Quarter.

Some temperatures in the 90s were expected again today but with lower humidity they should be more bearable. It should be even a little more comfortable Friday as winds turn from a northwest and north direction to more northeast and east. This will limit high readings Friday to the 80s to near 90 over the southern counties.

Only isolated thundershowers will develop today and Friday and be confined mainly to the southern portion of the state.

Two Killed By Market Bomb

JERUSALEM (AP) — A powerful bomb exploded today in a crowded open-air market in the Jewish sector of Jerusalem, killing two persons and wounding 42, authorities said.

Seven of the wounded were reported in serious condition. A police spokesman said several suspects were detained for investigation.

Mayor Teddy Kollek said he thought the bombing was linked to the arrival of Vice President Walter F. Mondale Friday for a four-day visit.

The blast destroyed a vegetable stand in the Mahane Yehuda market, near the Jaffa Road in West Jerusalem about three-quarters of a mile from the walls of the Arab Old City. The market was crowded with persons shopping for the Sabbath.

Several peddlers' sidewalk carts were also destroyed, and two nearby shops were damaged. Fruit, vegetables and charred wooden crates were scattered about.

The police closed the market and sealed the area. They refused to give any information about the construction of the bomb or how it was planted in the market.

"I heard a boom and then I was thrown back," one shopper told Radio Israel. "Everything I was carrying was blown out of my hands. I heard screams and shouts, and I got up and ran away."

It was the 14th bomb blast in Jerusalem this year, and raised the casualty total in the explosions to 11 dead and more than 100 wounded.

Move Afoot For Rep. Preyer To Become Subcommittee Chairman

By JANET STAIHAR
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Moves are afoot to make Rep. Richardson Preyer, D-N.C., a calm, well-respected former judge, the chairman next year of a House health subcommittee that could have life or death power over national health insurance.

The chairmanship will change hands next year as Rep. Paul G. Rogers, D-Fla., who has had the post for eight years, quits Congress to go into private business.

President Carter's campaign listed national health insurance as a primary goal, but burgeoning inflation has cast doubt on its prospects.

Carter said at his news conference Monday that "it might take many years" before economic conditions permit full implementation of national health insurance.

But the president said he will give his HEW secretary instructions within the next few days "to comply with principles that I outlined to him in the preparation of a national health proposal."

Next to Rogers in subcommittee seniority is Rep. David Satterfield, D-Va. But he is viewed by insiders as being only remotely in the running. Satterfield often votes with conservative Republicans on health matters.

Preyer, who has invested heavily in the pharmaceutical industry, is making it clear that if he is to take the chairmanship then drug issues would have to be removed from the jurisdiction of the health subcommittee.

Drug related matters could be transferred to another subcommittee, perhaps the consumer protection panel chaired by Rep. Bob Eckhardt, D-Tex.

"Yes, I would want the chairmanship under those circumstances," Preyer said in an interview.

Preyer has stock in Richardson-Merrell Inc., which acquired a family pharmaceutical business. Those financial interests have been in a trust since the Preyer came to Congress.

Because of his background, Preyer has refrained from voting on drug-related matters.

House rules dictate that a member cannot serve as chairman of more than one standing subcommittee.

Preyer, 59, indicated he would relinquish the chairmanship of the Government Operations subcommittee on government information and individual rights, if he were to head the health panel.

Preyer is now chairman of one select committee and one select subcommittee, both of which are scheduled to end later this year. He is chairman of the ethics committee framing new standards of congressional conduct, and of the assassinations subcommittee probing the death of President John F. Kennedy.

Preyer, who spent two years in North Carolina, was first elected to Congress in 1968.

Changing Hours During Summer

RALEIGH — Summer changes for several agencies under the auspices of the Dept. of Cultural Resources have been announced.

The N. C. Museum of History's second floor galleries and the "Evolution of Firearms Exhibit," which includes the Carbine Williams workshop are closed for construction and installation of a new major exhibit to open in September.

Other exhibits are open regular hours during the summer months (Tuesday through Saturday, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. and Sunday, 1 to 6 p.m.).

The N. C. Executive Mansion is closed to public visits until the fall, according to Mrs. Peg Fisher, director of the Capitol Area Visitor Center.

Charge 2 With Chair Thefts

Greenville Police have charged two Route 1, Ayden, men with larceny in connection with the theft of wicker chairs from a porch here.

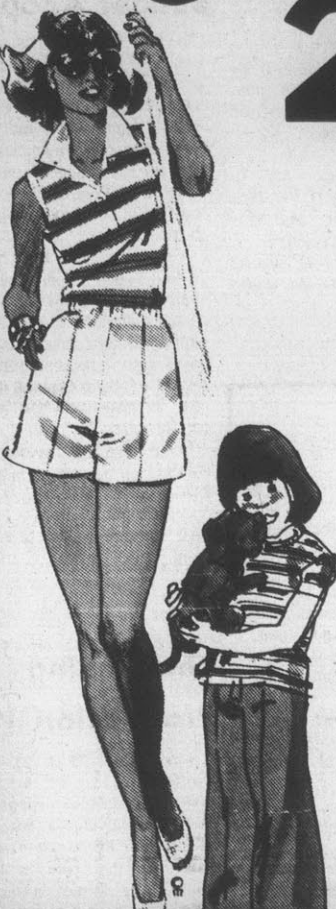

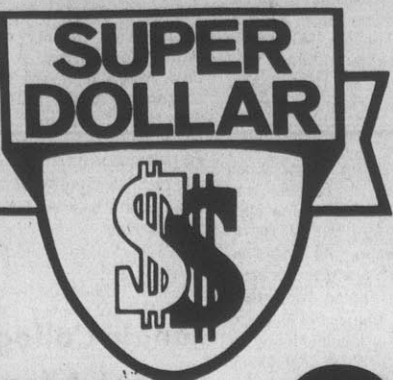

Chief Glenn Cannon said the furniture was taken from a porch at 102 Carlson St., sometime Tuesday night.

He identified the men charged as Eddie Harrell Moore, 25 and Edward Wilson, 34.

Cannon said Greenville officers charged the two after Ayden officers charged them with a similar incident in Ayden yesterday.

LANGUAGE BARRIER? — Robert Burchfield, chief editor of the Oxford English Dictionary, opens his dictionary in his Chicago room and says American and British English are diverging so fast that in another 200 years Britons and the colonists may need interpreters. (AP Laserphoto)

CORNER OF GREENVILLE AND ARLINGTON BOULEVARDS

THURSDAY AFTERNOON, JUNE 29, 1978

Borg, Navratilova, King, Wade On Court

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Defending champion Bjorn Borg of Sweden swings back into action at the All England Lawn Tennis Club today, but the day really belongs to the girls.

Second-seeded Martina Navratilova, former champion Billie Jean King and Virginia

Wade, the defending champion, all play at Wimbledon today. Navratilova takes on Pam Whytcross of Australia. King plays Marie Pinterova of Czechoslovakia and Wade meets Lesley Bowrey of Australia.

Borg, who had his difficult match in the first round Monday when the 6-foot-7 American Vic Amaya took him to five sets, was to have played Peter McNamara of Australia in his second round match Wednesday. But the match was scheduled last and never got on court.

While Borg had to wait a day, Jimmy Connors, the one-time "bad boy" of the world's tennis courts, is relaxed, happy and at ease with himself. He has under his belt what every aspiring Wimbledon winner craves — a really hard match in the early rounds.

Kim Warwick, a big Australian with a telescopic reach, took Connors to four sets in the second round of the men's singles here Wednesday before Connors won in four sets 6-3, 7-5, 2-6, 6-4. The match took just under 2½ hours, and not until the very last game could Connors relax.

"If I can play like that, I'll be more than satisfied," said Connors. "Everything was going good and I feel relaxed — the little ones are the toughest; the big ones I can handle."

Connors has a free day Thursday, and he'll be spending it away from Wimbledon.

"It's tiring to hang about when you're not playing," is his philosophy. "After practice I'll have some tea, then go home."

Connors is seeded second here this year, just behind Bjorn Borg, the Swede who is trying to emulate Fred Perry in the middle 1930's and win three Wimbledon titles in a row.

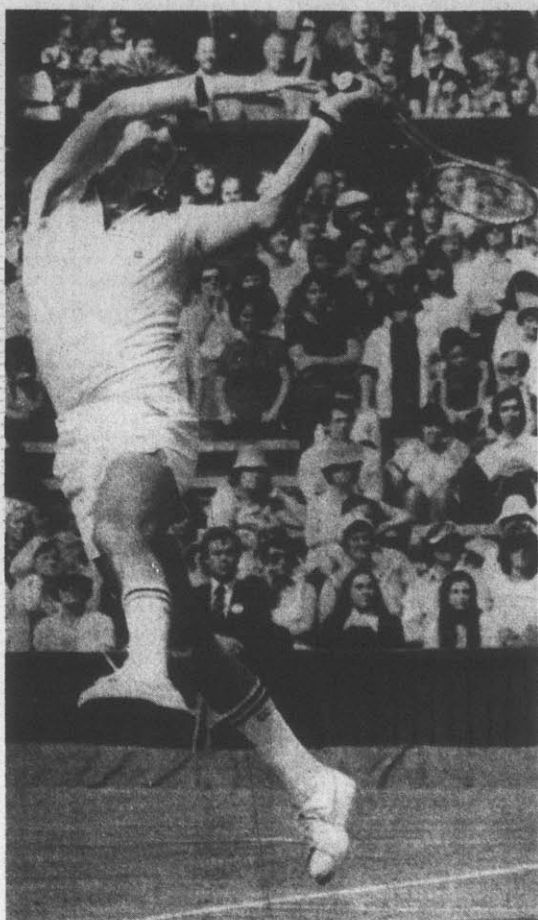

Connors was one of 10 men's seeds who played and won Wednesday. The others were Wojtek Fibak of Poland, Guillermo Vilas of Argentina, Ilie Nastase of Romania, Roscoe Tanner, Brian Gottfried and Vitas Gerulaitis of the United States, Raul Ramirez of Mexico and the Australian pair John Newcombe and John Alexander.

Alexander's match was a first rounder.

The only seed to lose Wednesday was Buster Motttram of Britain. He was beaten in three sets by Frew McMillan of South Africa and joins the U.S. trio of Dick Stockton, Arthur Ashe and John McEnroe — all of whom lost in the first round — on the sidelines.

In the women's singles, both top-seeded Chris Evert and third-seeded Evonne Goolagong had drawn first-round byes and played their opening matches in the second round Wednesday. And both won easily.

Evert beat Helena Anliot of Sweden 6-1, 6-0 — a score that didn't do full justice to the Swedish girl's efforts. She scarcely played a bad shot throughout the match, but Evert was always that much better.

Jumping Jim

Jimmy Connors of the United States leaps into the air to make a two-handed return to Australia's Kim Warwick during their Men's Singles match on the Centre Court at Wimbledon Wednesday. Connors beat Warwick, 6-3, 7-6, 2-6, 6-4. (AP Laserphoto)

Crowd Boosts Brewers

AL Roundup

By KEN RAPPOPORT

AP Sports Writer

Lung for lung, Milwaukee fans will match their long-yell power with any others in baseball.

"These fans are really fantastic," said Jerry Augustine after listening Wednesday night to some of the lustiest cheers ever to ring through venerable County Stadium.

One of the largest home crowds in Brewer history — 39,283 — showed its appreciation and enthusiasm for a double-header sweep over the New York Yankees. Augustine, especially, got an earful, since he pitched the 7-2 clincher after the 5-0 opening-game victory.

As Augustine wrapped up his neat seven-hitter, most of the fans stood and chanted, "Augie! Augie! Augie!" The

NANCY BEGAN YOUNG

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — Nancy Lopez, who has blossomed into stardom on the Ladies PGA tour this year, began to play golf when she was seven. Her father, Domingo, taught her and allowed her to accompany him when he played a round. She won a Pee Wee tournament in New Mexico when she was 9.

"When I first started to play seriously," Nancy recalled, "nobody knew my game like my father. He could tell me to do things that he couldn't do himself. Now, of course, I have the experience to make my own adjustments."

cheering and chanting continued until the last Brewer had walked off the field into the dugout.

Brewer fans certainly have had something to cheer about this season, with their team currently in second place in the American League East. 12 games over the .500 mark. Before this year, the best they could do was seven games over the break-even level. That was last year.

In other American League games, the Oakland A's edged the Texas Rangers 2-1 in 15 innings; the Detroit Tigers beat the Cleveland Indians 4-3 in the first game of a double-header before losing the nightcap 2-1; the Chicago White Sox stopped the Seattle Mariners 4-3; the Toronto Blue Jays beat the Baltimore Orioles 3-2 and the California Angels turned back the Kansas City Royals 9-5.

Ben Oglivie smashed a three-run homer in the seventh inning and Mike Caldwell hurled a six-hitter to lead Milwaukee's first-game victory. The Brewers won the nightcap as Sal Bando singled home the tie-breaking run in the seventh inning, helping the Brewers overtake the Yankees for second place in the AL East.

A's 2, Rangers 1

Mike Edwards' 15th-inning single scored pinch-runner Rob Picciolo from second base to lead Oakland over Texas. Wayne Gross opened the 15th by drawing a walk off losing pitcher Len Barker, 1-3.

Picciolo ran for him and advanced to second on a sacrifice. Barker then walked. Glenn Burke and got Joe Wallis on a fly ball before Edwards singled to left to end the 4-hour and 2-minute marathon.

Winning pitcher Pete Broberg, 8-6, held the Rangers scoreless on two hits over the final five innings.

Tigers 4-1, Indians 3-2

Ron LeFlore cracked a pair of RBI singles to lead Detroit over Cleveland in the first game of their doubleheader. Detroit took the lead for good with three runs in the third inning, when LeFlore had one of his run-scoring hits.

Andre Thornton drilled a tie-breaking RBI single in the sixth inning to give the Indians their second-game victory. Thornton's hit made a winner of Mike Paxton, 5-4.

White Sox 4, Mariners 2

Jorge Orta hit his 10th homer of the season, a three-run blast in the sixth, to lead Chicago over Seattle. Orta's homer wiped out a 2-0 Seattle lead, scoring Ralph Garr and Bob Molinaro ahead of him. Garr and Molinaro had singled with one out off Seattle loser Glenn Abbott, 3-5.

Blue Jays 3, Orioles 2

combined on a five-hitter and Rico Carty smashed a two-run homer to lead Toronto past Baltimore and a sweep of their four-game series. The loss was Baltimore's seventh in a row. The Orioles had won 18 of 20 games going into last Friday night's game in Boston, where they started their losing streak.

Toronto's four-game sweep, including a 24-10 victory Monday night, and a double-header sweep Tuesday night, represented the team's longest winning streak in its two-year history.

Angels 9, Royals 5

Dave Chalk collected four hits and drove in a pair of runs to lead California over Kansas City in a game delayed 40 minutes by a power failure.

Kansas City starter Paul Splittorff was knocked out in the second inning, when the Angels scored for four runs to hand the left-hander the loss.

Legion Playoffs Starting Friday

Pitt County, Snow Hill and Williamston's American Legion baseball teams will each be a host team in the first round of the Area I Eastern playoffs, scheduled to start Friday night.

Opponents for the three, however, are still uncertain in some cases.

Washington and Wilson, scheduled to play last night in their seasonal finale, were rained out and have rescheduled for tonight. The results of their game will decide sixth, seventh and eighth places.

Pitt County, the regular season winner at 11-3, will host the loser of the Wilson-Washington game at 8 p.m. Friday at Harrington Field. A second game will be played Saturday with Pitt on the road, and the third, if needed, will be played Sunday afternoon at Harrington.

Snow Hill, which finished second at 9-5, will play host to either Goldsboro or Washington. Wilson, whether it wins or loses tonight, cannot finish in seventh place. A two-way tie between Goldsboro and Wilson for sixth, would place Wilson in sixth, while a two-way tie between Goldsboro and Washington would seed Goldsboro sixth.

Rocky Mount has taken the third seeding with an 8-6 record, and will host either Goldsboro or Wilson, again depending on the outcome of tonight's game.

Williamston, also 8-6, takes the fourth spot due to having split with Rocky Mount, but scored less runs. They will face Edenton in the first round. Edenton finished with a 6-8 record.

The Pitt County series winner will face the winner of the Edenton-Williamston series, while the winners in the other two series will meet in the second round of the tournament.

Track Meet Is Friday

The local Hershey Chocolate track meet will be held Friday afternoon at the East Carolina University track.

Registration will be held from 9 a.m. until 12 noon at the track. It was incorrectly stated in yesterday's "Daily Reflector" that registration would be Saturday.

Ron Cey had just hit his second three-run homer in two nights, both of them game-winners for the Los Angeles Dodgers, but everyone was talking about his fielding.

Cey had a tough play to help keep Atlanta from scoring in the fourth inning and an even tougher play to get the final out of the game in the Dodgers' 3-2 victory over the Braves Wednesday night.

"That's why he's been an All-Star third baseman," said knuckleballer Phil Niekro, 8-9, who lost another tough one as he went the route for the Braves and gave up just three hits.

In the fourth, Cey fielded a grounder in foul territory behind third and forced Biff Pocoroba at second before Steve Garvey made an over-the-shoulder catch of a bases-loaded foul pop to end the inning.

And with two out in the ninth and the tying run on third, Cey charged a slow chopper by Gary Matthews and fired to Garvey to get the fleet outfielder for the final out.

Cey's homer, his 10th of the season, came in the third and was off a high knuckleball, one of Niekro's few mistakes of the game. The homer scored Bill Russell, who bounced a single up the middle, and Garvey, who walked. After the third, Niekro limited LA to Dave Lopes' single.

Cey has provided all the firepower in the Dodgers' two victories over Atlanta in this series. Tuesday night, the Dodgers beat Atlanta 3-0 on Cey's three-run blast.

In other National League games, St. Louis shaded Pittsburgh 7-5 in 11 innings, Chicago nipped New York 9-8 in 10, Philadelphia downed Montreal 7-5, Houston blanked Cincinnati

3-0 and San Francisco split a twinbill with San Diego, winning the opener 4-2 and losing the nightcap 4-1.

Dodger starter Burt Hooton, 7-6, went six innings and got the victory, and Terry Forster, the third Dodgers pitcher to work in the 100-degree heat, got his 10th save.

Cards 7, Pirates 5

St. Louis extended its winning streak to three games, matching its longest of the season, on Ken Reitz's two-run double in the 11th. The double drove in Ted Simmons and Keith Hernandez, who scored three runs for the Cards, including one on a solo homer in the second.

Roy Thomas, the fourth St. Louis pitcher, won his first major league decision, working two innings.

Cubs 9, Mets 8

Ray Burris, 5-5, normally a starter, quelled a ninth-inning rally by the Mets and got the victory in the 10th when Mike Kelleher's bases-loaded suicide squeeze scored Dave Kingman.

The Cubs had snapped a 5-5 tie with three runs in the eighth, including Kingman's two-run single, but the Mets knotted it again with three runs in the ninth. Elliott Maddox's two-run homer keyed that rally. Reliever Butch Metzger, 1-3, was the loser.

Phils 7, Expos 5

Garry Maddox drove in three runs, two with a homer, in Philadelphia's five-run seventh, to make Jim Lonborg, 7-5, a winner. Maddox also singled in a run in the eighth.

Lonborg gave up one run on four hits through six innings, and Tug McGraw, the third Phils pitcher, got his fourth save. Reliever Mike Garman, 0-3, was the victim in the seventh inning and took the loss.

Astros 3, Reds 0

Tom Dixon, 4-3, hurled a four-hitter and did not allow a Reds runner past second. Joe Morgan had two of the Reds' four hits, a pair of doubles. Bob Watson provided all of Houston's offense with a three-run homer in the seventh inning off Fred Norman, 8-5.

Giants 4-1, Padres 2-4

San Francisco made a loser of Randy Jones, 5-7, in the first game as Larry Herndon had four hits and scored two runs. Jim Barr, 4-4, gave up six hits in 7-23 innings and drove in a run with a bases-loaded sacrifice bunt in the second inning.

San Diego salvaged a split on Dave Winfield's two-run homer in the first and some strong relief pitching by former Giant John D'Aquisto, who got his fifth save. Jerry Turner also drove in two runs with a single in the sixth.

NBA Teams May Switch Owners

By DAN SEWELL
AP Sports Writer

Buffalo Braves managing partner John Y. Brown and Boston Celtics owner Irving Levin were to meet in Los Angeles today to begin drawing up papers for a deal to swap ownership of their basketball teams and move the Braves to San Diego, informed sources say.

Two well-placed National Basketball Association sources told The Associated Press that a "tentative agreement" was reached between the two owners Wednesday.

Brown confirmed late Wednesday that the two had discussed a possible shift, but had no further comment. A member of Levin's family said Levin would be unavailable for comment until sometime today.

Celtics Assistant General Manager Jeffrey Cohen denied the reports.

"Levin has met with Brown to help him expedite a move of the Braves to the (West) Coast. Levin says people have put two and two together to make incorrect assumptions about things. I don't believe there's anything to it," Cohen said.

However, Braves' co-owner Harry Mangurian of Fort Lauderdale, who owns a chain of furniture stores, confirmed late Wednesday night that the shift seemed likely to take place.

"This is a very complicated, complex transaction. There are any number of things that could cause the deal to fall through. But right now things are going very well," Mangurian said.

He added, "The deal makes sense from both sides. Levin would like a team near his home, and John and I are excited about rebuilding at Boston. The Celtics are a legend, and it would be very exciting to be part of it."

Andy North Not Ready To Go Wild

By HOWARD ULMAN
AP Sports Writer

OAK BROOK, Ill. (AP) — If you think Andy North is feeling ready to tear apart the professional golf tour now that he's won the U.S. Open, think again.

Despite the wealth of prestige and publicity attached to the event, North realizes that it is simply one tournament and that the winner is not in very good shape to excel in the immediate future.

"I haven't had a chance to practice at all," said North, meaning since his Open victory June 18 before today's first round of the $225,000 Western Open.

"I've just been running around with my head cut off, basically."

On the three days after his Open triumph he had a golf outing in Montreal, another in Detroit and a clinic in Florida, all separated by plane flights.

The next day he began play in the Canadian Open. He earned all of $556.16 for finishing in a tie for 53rd place.

"Needless to say, I wasn't prepared for Canada," he said. And, after shooting a three-over par 75 Wednesday in the pro-am event on the 7,083-yard Butler National course, North said he's not ready for the Western Open either.

"Physically, I'm not swinging very well right now," North said Wednesday after having spent the two previous days at a news conference and a golf outing. "And mentally I'm a little down because of all the excitement of the last few days."

North, the seventh leading money-winner on the 1978 tour, feels "the guys in the Top 10" on the earnings list are the favorites in the Western, won for the second time last year by Tom Watson, this year's top money-winner.

"I think the better players will play well here because it is a tough golf course," says North.

That was all too evident to him last year when he was tied for the Western lead after two rounds, but ballooned to a 76 and a 77 on the last two days to tie for 17th.

"I don't know what happened. Maybe I was trying too hard," he said. "It's the kind of golf course you can go out and play the same way and shoot a 70, 75 or 76."

Besides the pressure of being the U.S. Open champion, North's mind also is occupied by the impending birth of his second child. That, and promises to appear at golf outings, will keep him from playing in the British Open in two weeks.

"I'm going to catch heat if I go or if I don't go," he said. "My wife's due the first of August and it's a combination of her not feeling well and these commitments. She's been having some problems so I'd hate to be over there and have something happen. There are a lot of British Opens."

One of them, in 1976, was won by Johnny Miller who put on a late rush at last year's Western to tie Wally Armstrong for second, one stroke behind Watson. But he withdrew from the event Wednesday, citing back spasms.

Little League

Lions 9, Jaycees 1

The Lions closed out the regular season in the North State Little League with a 9-1 victory over the Jaycees yesterday.

The Lions finished with a 10-5 record, while the Jaycees ended up 5-10.

The Lions got all they needed in the first inning, scoring four times. Chris Evans walked and Kevin Pace singled. Both advanced on an error. Patrick Rand singled to score both of them. Marc Gatlin walked, and a passed ball advanced Rand, and another scored him. Gatlin scored on Ralph Harper's single.

The Lions added two more in the third and got three in the fourth.

The lone Jaycee run came in the second. Mike Garris walked and stole both second and third. He scored on a hit by David Lee.

Evans and Gatlin each had two hits for the Lions, while no one had more than one for the Jaycees.

Graniteers 9, Moose 4

The Graniteers upset the Moose by a 9-4 margin yesterday and awarded Pepsi-Cola with first place in the Tar Heel Little League.

Pepsi, which had earlier finished its season, ended up with a 10-5 record, while the Moose ended up in second place, 9-6. The Graniteers tied for fourth at 6-9.

The Graniteers jumped on the Moose for six runs in the first inning, all they were to need. Lark Wetherington led off with a double and Traye Fuqua slapped a two-run homer. Jimmy Bishop singled and moved to third on two wild pitches. Cedric Hines walked and Jon Whichard reached on an error, scoring Bishop. Both runners moved up on another wild pitch, and Russell Vines reached on an error, scoring both Hines and Whichard. Bruce Thompson reached on another error, allowing Vines to score.

The Graniteers added one in the third, one in the fourth and one more in the fifth.

The Moose got their first in the fourth. Darryl Perkins, walked and Charlie Littleton singled. Rob Dayton got a hit scoring Perkins.

Two more came over in the fifth as Nathan Notke hit a two-run homer. The other run scored in the sixth.

Notke had two hits to lead the Moose, while Wetherington and Fuqua each had two for the Graniteers.

Senior Babe Ruth

Last night's game between Winterville and the Kiwanis in the Senior Babe Ruth League was rained out. Winterville, needing only one victory, or a loss by Ayden-Griffon, to claim the championship, will make up the game if A-G wins tonight against the Kiwanis.

Babe Ruth

Play in the Babe Ruth League tournament was postponed last night due to rain.

It will be picked up this afternoon at 4 p.m. with four games scheduled.

Deacon Trip Meant A Lot

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — They may not have come back with all the victories, but Wake Forest basketball coach Carl Tacy said the Deacons' trip to the International Basketball Tournament in Venice meant more to the players than just about any trip they have taken.

"With the exception of our NCAA participation two years ago, I doubt there's been a trip taken at Wake Forest that has meant more to the players," said the Deacon coach. "Not only the games, but the travel and relating to the people. The manner in which we were received is an experience I'll never forget."

"The fans seemed to be more vocal for great plays our team made than for any other team," Tacy said. "They really reacted to the great defensive plays, the steals and the blocked shots. Those plays were more appreciated than the long jump shot which they (the Venetians) are more accustomed to."

The Deacons met Poland in the first round of the tournament. Rod Griffin and Frank Johnson each scored 17 points as Wake Forest scored a 100-86 victory.

In its second round game, Wake Forest met the Yugoslavs, still smarting from a nine-point loss to Italy.

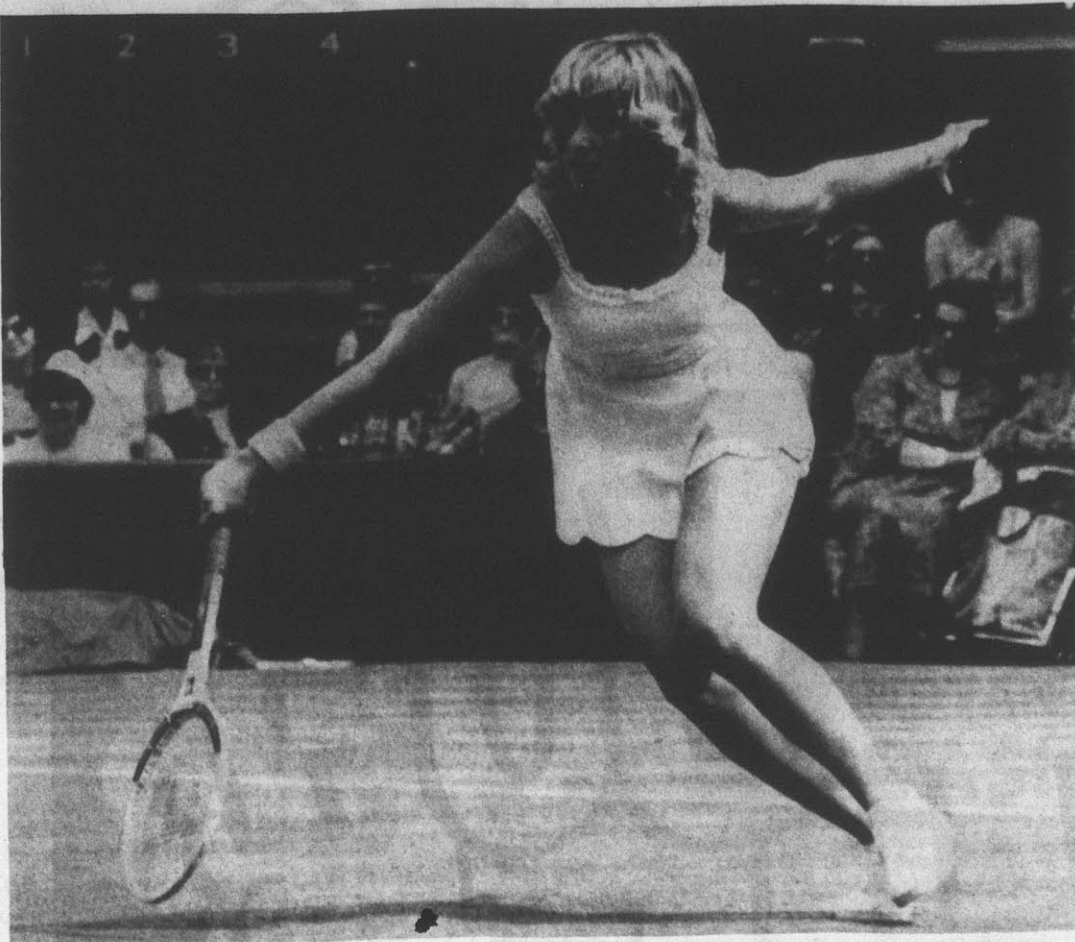

Participants In Jr. Games

A number of area people will be participating in the State Junior Olympics to be held at Raleigh on Saturday.

They include: Jennifer Newton, Scott Newton, Laura Newton, Stuart Mercer, Missy McLawhorn, Lyn Moore, Sandy Henson and Catherine Land, all from Pace Academy; Abner Clark, Chris McLawhorn, Robert Brown, Kenny Smith and Harry Williams from Aycock Junior High; Bill Cobb from Rose High; and Greg Thompson from St. Peter's.

The top three winners advance to the regionals at Columbia, S.C. on July 14-15.

The local team is coached by Tom Jamieson and Clem Williams.

Evert Reaches Third Round

LEAF LOVERS — In other parts of the country, people may be discouraging each other from smoking, but not in North Carolina, where the tobacco crop grossed $1 billion last year and politicians who know what's good for them don't talk much about the health hazards of cigarettes. This sign is in the cafeteria at the state Legislative Building in Raleigh. (AP Laserphoto)

Tobacco Still A Force In N.C. Politics

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The tobacco industry has lost some of its grip on North Carolina politics in recent years, but it is still a force to be reckoned with. State politicians from cities and farm districts alike still shy away from cigarette taxes and anti-smoking efforts that might hurt tobacco sales.

To prove the leaf's continued value in the state, officials gathered with R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co. Tuesday to unveil a new public relations campaign aimed at boosting the industry.

They feel the boost is needed in the face of the multi-million dollar anti-smoking campaign recently announced by the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

The author of that program, HEW Secretary Joseph Califano, is generally unpopular for his efforts which have done little to bolster support for the Carter Administration in North Carolina.

"President Carter is a southerner and he's still liked, but Mr. Califano is hurting him here," says Betty McCain, chairman of the state Democratic Party. "Tobacco is still king. Everybody here is running against Mr. Califano."

"Everybody" includes Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., who is seeking a second term and has frequently denounced Califano on tobacco. Helms is a former editorialist for the statewide Tobacco Radio Network.

His opponent, Democratic state Insurance Commissioner John Ingram, has blasted Califano himself, accusing the secretary of an "attack on our small tobacco farmers."

Tobacco is grown in 91 of the state's 100 counties. "Most of the politicians in the state, if they're successful at all, have to back tobacco," says Billy Yeargin, head of the Tobacco Growers Information Association.

North Carolina's tobacco crop sold for $1 billion last year, and 270,000 farmers and laborers worked at its harvest. Another $340 million was paid to 27,000 North Carolina workers who manufactured 52 percent of the country's cigarettes. Gov. Jim Hunt, from Wilson County in the heart of the tobacco-rich East, has been a public defender of tobacco and the right to smoke. And Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green owns tobacco warehouses.

Recognizing tobacco's role here, the North Carolina chapter of the American Cancer Society, has an official policy of opposition to anti-smoking campaigns as well as to the national organization's proposal to ban all cigarette advertising.

North Carolina's tobacco crop sold for $1 billion last year, and 270,000 farmers and laborers worked at its harvest. Another $340 million was paid to 27,000 North Carolina workers who manufactured 52 percent of the country's cigarettes.

If the HEW program is successful in reducing smoking by 30 percent, Yeargin contends, it will mean a $300 million loss for the state's farmers. A $75 million loss would be passed on to dealers of fertilizer, chemicals and gasoline, and merchants selling other goods to farmers would lose $210 million, the growers association predicts.

Boosters of tobacco dismiss suggestions that farmers should simply switch to other crops. Most tobacco farms are small family operations, of 15 to 30 acres, and a farmer can net $900 to $1,200 an acre per year, says Johnnie Hood, farm director for radio station WPTF in Raleigh. The next best crop, says Yeargin, would be peanuts, with a $160 yield per acre. Because of the industry's importance to the state's economy, lawmakers have generally been unwilling to tax the leaf in North Carolina. The state has the lowest cigarette tax in the nation — two cents a pack. Cigarettes can be bought for as little as 32 cents a pack in some roadside stores.

The political importance of the industry was evidenced by the damage done to former Gov. Bob Scott's career when he proposed a five-cent tax in 1969. He won the two-cent levy only after a bitter legislative struggle.

But even though he was successful in getting the levy, one statehouse politician says the general consensus is that Scott committed political suicide the day it was passed.

Will Feature Old Traditions

DURHAM — Traditional health care-personalities will be featured in "Crossroads" at the statewide Folklife Festival being held in Eno Park near Durham on Saturday, July 1.

Among those to be on hand to demonstrate and talk about traditional health practices will be Cherokee medicine man Hawk Littlejohn; herbal healers John and Hattie Lee; and former lay midwife Maude Bryant.

Johann Sebastian Bach On Prime Time 'Possible' Says Producer

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Johann Sebastian Bach a TV star? In prime time? On a network? It may happen, says producer Bob Lee, now making a 90-minute TV special, "The Joy of Bach."
He says he's gotten good reactions from network folk — he declines to say which networks — to clips from his film tribute to both the music of Bach and the German composer himself.
The show, financed by the Lutheran Church, has a few stars you may not usually find at Bach time over at the local philharmonic.
Sure, there are such classical delegates as flutist Jean-Pierre Rampal and harpsichordist Rosalyn Tureck. But there's also harmonica virtuoso Larry Adler. And a Trinidad steel band.

There's also organist Virgil Fox, whose Bach includes a rousing light show and in-tempo clapping from the audience.
For folks who dig bebop Bach, there's the Swingle Singers group that arranger Ward Swingle formed several years ago to do Bach in a lightly swinging jazz vein.
And there's even a Seattle-based flamenco dancer, Teodoro Morca, whom Lee says will flat blow your mind with his foot-and-castanet work during a Bach fugue in D minor.
The show's host, narrator and Bach portrayer is British actor Brian Blessed, recently sighted on public television as Augustus Caesar in the BBC's acclaimed Old Rome series. "I, Claudius."

"The idea of it is to get across the point that Bach isn't a stuffy old formidable longhair to be feared," Lee said by phone from his New York office.
"The aim is to show he has something for everybody. And we think that for TV today, it's not enough just to see musicians saving away on their fiddles or playing piano."
"You've got to find a way to visually tell the story."
Work on the show began 1½ years ago.
Why Bach and not another composer?
"It's because he, perhaps next to Martin Luther, was one of the most prominent Lutherans in the world and did most of his work in the context of the church," the producer explained.

"But he is a universal figure and certainly isn't limited to the field of religion."
Lee hopes to have the program aired during the holidays this winter on a commercial network, or PBS, or through syndication.
A network would give the show the greatest exposure. What is the chance it will land a prime-time network berth?
"I think the possibility is very good," Lee said. "I feel it's going to answer the needs of quality programming in this coming season."
"I think networks are looking for something refreshing, different, with quality to it. And I think they're really going to see 'The Joy of Bach' as the sort of thing they want on the air."

"Cut" is usually used to end a movie scene, but in bridge, it might start declarer on the way to making his contract. Consider this hand.
North-South were using weak two-bids—any two-bid other than clubs shows a hand of less than opening strength and a good six-card suit. North wasn't sure just what his partner could make, but he thought that there would be play for game so he bid it.

West did not want to lead away from one of his honor cards, so he chose a trump. East made a good play when he held up the ace of trumps, and declarer won the nine. He continued with the king of trumps, won by the ace. Now East made another fine defensive move when he shifted to his singleton club.

Declarer won the club in dummy with the ten, but he had no quick way to return to his hand to draw the last trump. He tried leading a low diamond, but East followed low and West won the king. He gave his partner a club ruff, and the defenders still had to score a spade trick for down one.

The contract wasn't really too difficult to make. All it required was for declarer to cut the communications between the defenders' hands.

Declarer was in too much of a hurry to lead a second round of trumps. See what a difference it would have made had declarer led a diamond at trick two.

Either defender can win the diamond and shift to a club. (No other return is any better.) Dummy wins, and declarer leads another trump to force out East's ace. But now there is no way for East to get to the West hand to secure a ruff.

If he shifts to a spade, declarer wins in dummy, crosses to his hand with a diamond ruff and draws the last trump. When East shows out on the second round of clubs, declarer concedes a spade, gets back to his hand with a spade ruff and now takes the marked finesse in clubs for his contract.

REMAKING "THE CHAMP" — Actor Jon Voight takes a break during filming in Los Angeles of the climactic boxing sequence in the remake of the 1931 film classic "The Champ", in which he stars. The story is of a former boxing champion who tries a comeback for the sake of his idolizing son. The 1931 movie starred Wallace Beery and introduced nine-year-old Jackie Cooper as his son. Beer won an Academy Award for his performance. (AP Laserphoto)

"The guests on this important TV special are outstanding...and the message is inspiring. Do plan to see it!"—Mark Hatfield

This special television presentation is "must" viewing for anyone who wants to know...to care...and to become involved in this planet's most pressing problems.

Everything you see will not be pleasant. You'll experience the devastating effects of poverty and hunger. You'll begin to understand why people are hungry—and what forces cause their plight. You'll feel joy and excitement as you share the rich experiences of men and women whose love-in-action is bringing hope to hungry people. And best of all, you'll be given a chance to feel good—to become involved—to make a difference in the life of one child...of one family.

Record Shows Public Input Can Influence Policies

May Debate Fate Of New Oil Refinery

PORTSMOUTH, Va. (AP) — It's possible that President Carter's cabinet could debate the fate of a proposed oil refinery here, even though the U. S. Army Corps of Engineers will decide by Nov. 1 whether to permit construction of the $550 million refinery.

The corps' deputy chief for civil works, Brig. Gen. Drake Wilson, said Wednesday that the earliest possible date for the decision will be Oct. 24, but promised it would be made no later than Nov. 1.

A task force of federal agencies concerned with the refinery has been established to review the proposal, and is scheduled to meet today to approve final guidelines for evaluating alternatives to it.

Wilson said the task force could make a decision almost immediately after a public comment period on the new proposals closes because the agencies will be familiar with the material.

Wilson's staff now is finishing a three-year evaluation of the application by the Hampton Roads Energy Co. (HREC) application to build the huge refinery in Portsmouth's West Norfolk industrial area.

In February, the Environmental Protection Agency gave the refinery developers permits to emit sulfur dioxide and suspended solid particles from the plant, but said unless construction begins by Dec. 1, the emissions would be reviewed under new, stickier standards.

It was noted that although the corps' decision will be ready by Nov. 1, that does not preclude a shift of the matter to Army Secretary Clifford Alexander.

It's at that point that Carter's cabinet could enter the picture.

But HREC Vice President Robert E. Porterfield said his firm still plans to proceed with the refinery project.

"There's a lot to be done once we get these permits," Porterfield said, including permanent financing for the project and working drawings for construction.

"We'll go ahead and get the permits and take this thing one step at a time," he added.

HREC first applied for construction and river-dredging permits for the refinery in March 1975.

Last August, the Corps of Engineers' Norfolk district office released a 1,000-page statement on the refinery's potential environmental impacts.

But last month, Wilson's superior, Chief of Engineers Lt. Gen. John W. Morrison, said the statement did not give him enough information about alternatives to location of the refinery here.

Although convinced of the need for another East Coast refinery, Morrison said, he's not convinced Portsmouth is the best site.

Construction of the refinery on the Elizabeth River has been opposed vigorously by local environmentalists, who say the operation could damage the area's water and air and that oil spills could harm the seafood industry.

Corps of Engineers district offices in Jacksonville, Savannah, Charleston, S.C., Wilmington, N.C., Norfolk, Baltimore, Philadelphia, New York and Waltham, Mass., are being told to report on possible sites for an oil refinery along the East Coast.

By RANDOLPH E. SCHMID
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — You can influence public policy. But most people don't take advantage of their right to do so.

Under the law, federal agencies are required to give the public a chance to comment on proposed rules and regulations. Only the most controversial plans draw more than a few dozen letters and, even then, the number is tiny by comparison with the overall population.

Officials generally say they believe they are getting more comments than they used to, but no one could provide any figures. The number of people interested depends on the subject — only five comments were received on a plan to set new standards for canned clingstone peaches; almost 5,000 came in when the Department of Agriculture proposed letting meat contain tiny pieces of ground bone.

The record shows that public participation CAN influence public policy.

When the Federal Highway Administration, for example, proposed converting road signs to metric measurements by Dec. 31, 1979, at a cost of $100 million, it got 5,000 comments, nearly all negative. The idea was shelved. A USDA proposal for grading ice cream also was dropped, when it became clear from the comments that people did not understand what the plan would mean.

The first indication that a rule is in the offing comes when the proposed regulation is published in the Federal Register, a daily newspaper issued by the government. The more controversial issues generate publicity in the news media and from consumer groups. That publicity pulls comments.

Clingstone peach standards were not controversial. Hence, five letters. Four of the comments were in favor; the fifth was from a letter writer who complained that peaches stored in the refrigerator after opening often spoil. The standards were approved.

Ground bone was controversial. The USDA's Food Safety and Quality Service got 4,532 comments on the plan to allow meat to be mechanically deboned — leaving some ground bone in the meat. There were 3,826 comments from individual consumers. Their major concerns were that the meat be clearly labeled and meet certain nutritional requirements. The USDA decided to okay the plan, but included labeling and nutritional requirements.

Here's a look at some other proposals, the number of comments received and the results:

—A Federal Trade Commission rule allowing price advertising in the eye care industry:

1,000 comments received, mainly in favor. Pending.

—A Treasury Department regulation allowing sale of wine in bottles larger than 3 liters: 89 comments, 95 percent in favor. Approved.

—A National Credit Union Administration rule letting credit unions make long-term mortgage loans: 70 comments, all consumer comments in favor, a few from banks, opposing. Approved.

—A Consumer Product Safety Commission plan to exempt some powdered aspirin products from child-resistant packaging: 36 comments, more than half in favor. Approved.

Sponsoring Activities

The Pitt County 4-H Office is sponsoring various activities in the Chicod and Wellcome Schools Districts this summer.

The activities are as follows:

CHICOD — Baby Sitter's Course, July 6, 9:30 a.m.-3:30 p.m.; Archery Clinic, July 11, 5 p.m. with shooting session to be held July 18, 5 p.m.; Bicycle Rodeo, July 15, 9-11 a.m. A crafts class is being planned. Dates and times will be announced later.

WELLCOME MIDDLE — Baby Sitter's Course, July 7, 9:30 a.m.-3:30 p.m.; Archery Clinic, July 19, 4 p.m. with shooting session to be held July 26, 4 p.m. A bicycle rodeo is being planned, but community help is needed for judging. Other activities will be announced later.

If interested in pre-registration for your children, more information or helping with any of the activities, please call the 4-H Office, 758-1196.

He Sells, Collects And Trades Just About Anything

SHEPHERDS, N.C. (AP) — Kilroy Baumgardner makes his living by running a service station in this Iredell County town. But his career is selling, collecting, and trading just about anything.

Take stock of the cluttered interior of his service station, for instance.

"Teeth," he says. "I got false teeth I bought off people. I've bought several and sold 'em. I ain't got but one set left over there. I never could find nobody they'd fit."

Or, take the steam cabinet he leans against in front of his service station. "I traded for it," says Baumgardner, who has been buying, selling and trading things most of his life. "Traded, I believe, a tar fer it. It works. I got in there. That steam started comin' out. I got out of there. Too hot."

In addition to pumping gas, Baumgardner sells groceries, penny candy, snuff, chewing tobacco, pickled pigs feet, old clocks, fiddles, cooking utensils — there's even a couple of artificial legs hanging amidst the array in the front window.

"They was a feller pawned them," he explains. "I 'spect that was 10, 12, maybe 15 year ago. Said he couldn't bum nothin' with his leg on. With it off, he could sell pocketbooks or anything," from unit to unit.

"They was a feller pawned them," he explains. "I 'spect that was 10, 12, maybe 15 year ago. Said he couldn't bum nothin' with his leg on. With it off, he could sell pocketbooks or anything," from unit to unit.

Baumgardner saw service with the Army in World War II in India and Burma. He was bad to gamble in those days, he said, and would go from unit to unit playing cards and shooting dice.

In almost any unit there would be some who would nod sadly and acknowledge that Kilroy had been there. Baumgardner liked the name so well he kept it.

After a stint at a mill in Mooresville, so opened a service station so he could be his own boss. He started buying, selling, trading anything.

"I just kept addin'," he says. Soon the station was bulging, so he began to look for new quarters. He bought an old two-story house, more than 100 years old, about a mile up the road and built himself a new station next to it.

What he couldn't cram into the new station, he put in the old house.

Local folks say the old house he bought is haunted, and Baumgardner agrees. He has never seen a ghost but he has heard the pounding, which legend says is the ghost of a coffin-maker who died there as he builds a new coffin for someone about to die.

Every time he's heard it, the dark prophecy has been borne out, he claims.

He keeps the house locked now and has almost quit adding to the store of antiques and junk inside.

His health varies and, besides, buying and trading isn't what it used to be. "Used to, you could buy anything that come along. People would tell you the truth. Now they don't. It's got where you're afraid to buy it, find out it's stolen. Used to, you wouldn't worry about it. Don't buy too much stuff now."

4-H Congress On July 10-12

Some 175 4-H members representing 84 North Carolina counties will gather in Charlotte July 10-12 for the State 4-H Electric Congress.

Delegates won the expense-paid trips through achievements in the 4-H electric project. The project places major emphasis of safety in electricity use and is one of the most popular among Tar Heel 4-H members.

Accompanied by some 50 adult leaders and extension agents, the delegates will sign in Monday at the University of North Carolina at Charlotte. The meeting will end Wednesday morning.

Electric demonstrations and project reports during the morning and an afternoon trip to Carowinds will be held Tuesday. Announcement of the state, territorial and runnerup winners will be made Wednesday.

The state winner will go to the National 4-H Congress in Chicago in November. The congress and the awards are sponsored by Carolina Power and Light Co., Duke Power Co., Nantahala Power and Light Co., Virginia Electric and Power Co. and the Westinghouse Educational Foundation, in cooperation with the state Agricultural Extension Service.

New Bonds For TV And Publishing

—By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The bonds between television and the book publishing industry are growing stronger.

Novels and nonfiction, which once automatically went to the movie people, are now being snatched up for the networks as soon as they come off the press — and sometimes before.

Best sellers like "Blood and Money," "Scrubbers," "Shogun," "Centennial" and "Friendly Fire" are headed for television in versions ranging from three to 25 hours.

Stretching the plots over several hours has allowed TV producers to offer big money — more than $500,000 for Thomas Thompson's "Blood and Money" — for film rights.

"Roots" was a perfect blending of the two media. TV rights were bought even before Alex Haley finished writing the history of his family from Africa to America. The book was published shortly before the 12-hour mini series arrived at ABC in January 1977 — and both became big hits.

Now, Haley is at work on "Search," about his 12-year quest for his ancestry. Parts of that book, about Haley's own life, are being incorporated in "Roots: The Next Generation," in production for release next year.

"Holocaust," an NBC mini series based on Gerald Green's screenplay, became a best-selling paperback before the first episode aired in April.

Following the trend set by motion pictures, other TV movies and series are being turned into books.

The newest twist is hiring authors to write books to be adapted for television. This follows in the footsteps of Robert Evans, who commissioned Mario Puzo to write "The Godfather."

Producer David Geisler of Columbia Pictures Television is deeply involved in this new development.

He flew to Little Rock, Ark., last year to persuade author Dee Brown to postpone retirement long enough to write one more book. He hired Brown, author of "Bury My Heart at Wounded Knee," to write a novel tracing an Indian family through four or five generations to about 1900.

"I was also looking for a book about a dynastic Texas ranching family from the turn of the century to the Nieman-Marcus society," he says. He came upon such a book, Matthew Braun's "Lord of the Land," but it ended in 1900. He purchased that book for television then commissioned Braun to write a sequel.

Gerber is negotiating for a third novel, a police drama to be made into a feature motion picture, and as considering a fourth, a spy thriller.

"You're betting on the future," says Gerber. "It has merchandising value. And it's a property that could become a best seller. It has that kind of value."

Gerber pays the authors out of his network advance funds. "It's enough money to get the author going," he says. "Then he can take the network deal to a publisher. It appeals to a paperback publisher to know there's a network deal. They'll put up the money and gamble — and it's a gamble."
